THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'Comedy, tears and a wonderful thriller'

THERE ARE TIMES when it's easy to forget that This Country (Saturday BBC1) is a comedy. Your heart probably broke into fragments at the end of the last series when gullible, bovine Kerry Mucklowe took the rap for her dreadful father and faced prison after a stolen vacuum cleaner scam.

In a 45-minute special (a new series is due) Kurtan, her cousin and best friend in that small Cotswold town, is a lost soul. Because of his tangential involvement in the conspiracy he's lost his job at the bowls club and he roams the streets in torment. "I'll always do what's best for that club," he tells the "documentary" cameras with a kind of sombre passion. Oh, Kurtan!

It's a testament to the brilliance of writers/creators/stars Daisy May and Charlie Cooper that they can wound your soul one minute, and make you splutter the next in a masterly examination of everything that's dull and wonderful about living in a tiny town. (They wouldn't be out of place in The Mighty Redcar, apart from the West Country accents, of course).

EVERY WEEK I sniffle at Old People's Home for Four-Year-Olds (Monday C4) because it's just so darn lovely. The participants in this joyous experiment, where ten little 'uns make friends with a group of residents in a retirement village, are so winning. And surely everyone has fallen in love with best pals Ken (87) and Lily (four). This week Ken visits Lily's home to meet her mum and dad and to celebrate his new friend's birthday. It's just so touching, and Lily is a treasure.

The Cry continues to be a worthy successor in BBC1's Sunday-night Bodyguard time slot with an inky mystery that becomes more complex and more shocking in this week's penultimate episode. Expect to be wrong-footed...

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

ONLY FOOLS – THE MUSICAL!

Stick a pony in your pocket, fetch the suitcase from the van... and head to the West End next February where BBC comedy Only Fools and Horses is becoming a musical. Fast Show legend

Paul Whitehouse (left) has written the stage version and will play the grandad in the revival, with Tom Bennett as Del Trotter and Ryan Hutton as Rodney. Most of the supporting characters will be in the musical, including Raquel, Cassandra, Boycie, Marlene, Trigger, Denzil, Mickey Pearce, Mike and the Driscoll Brothers. And there will be 20 new songs, written by Whitehouse and Jim Sullivan (son of Only Fools creator John Sullivan), with additional music by John Sullivan and the late Chas Hodges of Chas 'n' Dave fame.

BEEB SAY NO TO DEL BOY REVIVAL

The Only Fools musical was the final project that John Sullivan was working on before his death in 2011. I understand the BBC thought long and hard about reviving the show as a sitcom but eventually passed. Close, but no Del Boy cigar...

No 9 GOES LIVE

Fans of Inside No 9, Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith's darkly comic anthology, will be delighted to learn that a live Halloween special is planned. Unfortunately, Halloween this year is on a Wednesday and the special is scheduled for the rather unspooky date of 28 October – a Sunday. Producer Jon Plowman says it's because BBC2 want as big an audience as possible delivered at the weekend. "That's not my call – that's down to the channel, who have a good reason for that," he says, chuckling. "Or so they tell me."

WHO'S NEXT FOR QUESTION TIME?

As we went to press, Question Time producers were holding auditions at a girls' private school in south London for prospective candidates to replace David Dimbleby. The smart money continues to be on Emily Maitlis, but if instead she lands the job of lead presenter on Newsnight, Kirsty Wark is next favourite. But with auditions you never know who will impress... BEN DOWELL

The devil's work

Are you ready for the "biggest, scariest, darkest, most thrilling series of Luther there's ever been"? That's what writer Neil Cross is promising, as Idris Elba dons his trademark winter overcoat for his fifth outing as the unconventional, uncompromising London detective with a penchant for tackling the very worst in human depravity.

And he has a new sidekick – Wunmi Mosaku (Kiri) is joining as DS Catherine Halliday (replacing Rose Leslie's DS Emma Lane). Dermot Crowley (DSU Martin Schenk), Michael Smiley (Benny Silver) and Patrick Malahide (George Cornelius) will also be back, with a promised cameo for Ruth Wilson's beguiling psycho, Alice.

Our story finds Luther "confounded by a tangle of leads and misdirection that seems designed to protect an unspeakable horror... a new nightmare," according to the BBC. Brace yourselves, is all I can say... BEN DOWELL

‘Women don’t run the world’

Dramas full of wishful thinking lull us into a false sense of equality

WHEN HISTORIANS COME to unravel the teen years of the 21st century they will have a hard time deciphering fact from fiction when it comes to equality between the sexes. On screen, we now have a female Doctor Who, an almost entirely female secret service in Killing Eve and in Bodyguard women were very clearly on top.

A huge hit, Bodyguard was watched by more than 14 million people. But if you were to arrive from another planet and imagine the drama accurately reflected the balance of power between the sexes, you’d be sadly mistaken.

‘Dramas about women struggling against the odds are seen as passé’

When Sergeant David Budd finds a woman in a suicide vest in a train lavatory, he’s told to get out of the way by an aggressive female officer so that a female sniper can get a clear shot at the target. Budd’s police bosses are women, and he is assigned to guard a female Home Secretary, who promptly seduces him. It’s a woman’s world in Bodyguard, and to some extent that bears out the facts: a woman is currently in charge of the Metropolitan Police (Cressida Dick) and until recently Amber Rudd was Home Secretary.

But splendid as the notion is that women are now seamlessly integrated into every aspect of authority, it is at best wishful thinking – and at worst undermines the fight for equality.

I wonder what Carol Howard thought when she saw Bodyguard’s female officers of the Met’s Counter Terrorism Command, SO15, taking control of the train that was about to be bombed. Howard was the poster girl, literally, for female armed policing, but that came to an end in 2014 when she took the Met to an employment tribunal for sexual and racial discrimination – and won.

I completely understand the impulse of Bodyguard’s writer, Jed Mercurio, to make the world more equal than it really is. I fully admit that when I write about Queen Victoria, I’m always looking for ways to make her sympathetic to a modern audience. But the problem with wishful thinking is that it lulls us all into a false sense of equality. If the millions of people who watched Bodyguard think a world without gender friction is real, then it makes the plight of women like Carol Howard that much harder.

It also makes it less likely that anyone would make a drama about a woman battling discrimination in a specialist police unit. Could anyone make Prime Suspect today? I suspect that commissioning editors think that stories about women struggling against the institutional odds are a bit passé – Prime Suspect is 30 years old, after all – but the BBC’s own travails over equal pay prove that, in real life, the fight for equality goes on.

Of course, I recognise that TV viewers are quite capable of distinguishing fact from fiction. I particularly enjoyed the moment when David Budd gave the Home Secretary his shirt because hers was covered with coffee. This is drama, after all – it’s a world where Home Secretaries don’t have bags under their eyes and Principal Protection Officers look like Richard Madden.

WHO’S EQUAL?
A female Doctor (Jodie Whittaker) is now saving the universe

WE ACCEPT THAT shows like Bodyguard and Killing Eve, in which women tote guns and carry authority, are fantasies, a world seen through a gender- and race-blind lens. It’s possible that teenage girls watching them will aspire to be armed police officers instead of nurses, like Budd’s wife. But I fear it’s more likely that dramas like these are soothing us into thinking that all the battles have been won. Where are the dramas reflecting the world of #MeToo? Surely somewhere in the drama universe we should reflect the world as it is, not as we would like it to be.

Daisy Goodwin is an author and scriptwriter. The next series of Victoria will air on ITV in 2019

WHAT WE WATCHED

The golden couple of British acting, Kenneth Branagh and Emma Thompson, were the stars of Fortunes of War, the BBC’s Sunday-night dramatisation of Olivia Manning’s semi-autobiographical wartime saga. Branagh, then aged 26, played bookish lecturer Guy Pringle, and admitted that he wasn’t “enamoured” of the character at first, wondering why someone so “intelligent and sensitive about so many things... could at the same time be so crassly insensitive to his wife”. Thompson, who played the wistful and introspective Harriet Pringle, admitted that she was “infuriated” by Guy.

WHAT YOU SAID

Zany new Time Lord Sylvester McCoy replaced Colin Baker in the Tardis – and our readers were impressed. Michael Proctor from Hertfordshire said the actor was an “inspired choice” and warned the BBC: “This programme must not be allowed to die.” Many others agreed, but Doreen Edwards from Swansea was a lone dissenting voice. “I find it sad to see the great age of the Doctor beginning to show itself. Second childhood, call it what you will... I wasn’t sure whether I was watching Doctor Who or Play School.” BEN DOWELL

Mum's the word

INTERVIEW BY E JANE DICKSON

WHAT HAPPENED TO baby Noah? It's the new question tormenting viewers on a Sunday night. Filling the still-crackling space left by Bodyguard, BBC1's adaptation of Helen FitzGerald's 2013 novel The Cry stars Jenna Coleman (Victoria, Doctor Who) as Joanna, the traumatised mother of a missing baby in a series that skids expertly between cliffhangers.

Perhaps surprisingly, FitzGerald is as gripped as the rest of us. "I've basically been hyperventilating since I saw the first episode," she says, admitting she's yet to watch the drama to its end. "It feels like they took my book, chopped it up and threw the pieces in the air. Obviously it has come back down and settled in a completely different way, but for me it really works, because it shows the fragmenting of Joanna's mind. And Jenna is just brilliant in the role. Watching her in those opening scenes on the plane was genuinely like seeing my own life."

FitzGerald, 52, grew up in a "fairly scabby" town outside Melbourne, the twelfth of 13 children. She came to Britain as a student, met her husband, Scots-Italian screenwriter Sergio Casci, and settled in Glasgow. A frank, fast-talking Australian, she has spent much of her working life as a social worker in Scotland's criminal justice system. She has dealt with serial sex-offenders and worked in high-security units with convicted murderers. But she is absolutely clear that, for her, few experiences have been as stressful as new motherhood.

"When we married we both wanted to be writers, and had this great plan that we'd spend six months here and six months in Australia. Of course, as soon as I got pregnant, those plans went out the window. But we did travel home every single year, and the original idea for The Cry came straight from those memories of 30-hour flights with two small children."

The long-haul ordeal was painfully and accurately conjured on screen in the first episode, from the aggrieved tutting of other passengers as Joanna failed to soothe her screaming son, to the passive aggressive "help" offered by other mums.

"My daughter, Anna, was only ten weeks old when we first took her on a plane, and I was already stressed before we left the house. I'd had a pretty awful birth, followed by a womb infection. I was very lonely and we lived in a top-floor tenement flat – it was a struggle just to get ▷

DID THIS MOTHER KILL THE DINGO CASE BABY?

THE wife of a Seventh Day Adventist pastor cut her baby's throat, a jury was told yesterday.

She has claimed that a dingo carried off her baby during a camping trip in the Australian outback.

Lindy Chamberlain, 34, is now seven months pregnant, and she wore a maternity smock when she appeared before the Australian Supreme Court in Darwin to face a murder hearing which has caused a sensation in Australia.

She is accused of murdering her nine-week-old girl, Azaria, two years ago.

Her husband, Michael, 38, is accused of being an accessory. Both have pleaded not guilty. Pro-

Mystery of the outback

BY MIRROR REPORTER

senioring QC Ian Barker told the jury of nine men and three women they had only two possibilities to consider.

One was the mother's story. She claimed that her baby was taken by a dingo from the family's tent at their camping site near Ayers Rock.

The other was that the baby had been deliberately killed and the body hidden. It has hid the body and told the police the dingo story.

There was said Mr. Barker, far more blood in the car than in the tent.

"It is preposterous to suggest," he said, "that the dingo took the baby from the tent to the vehicle."

The star witness for the prosecution will be Dr. James Cameron, forensic adviser to Scotland Yard and the Home Office.

He examined the baby's clothing—found some time after the baby disappeared—and presented a report which led to the decision to prosecute.

The hearing was adjourned.

NO, SHE DIDN'T... The notorious Australian case that saw Lindy Chamberlain wrongly convicted of murder

tained that a dingo had taken her baby and was considered “unsympathetic”. Eventually, in 2012, it was finally confirmed that the child had in fact been carried away by a native dog.

“I was a teenager at the time of the Lindy Chamberlain case, and there was no internet then, but the story was massive – at bus stops, at school, round the watercooler, it was all people talked about. It’s kind of amazing what people feel they can say about parents in this situation,” says FitzGerald. “The sheer detail in the vitriol poured onto mothers for the way they look or the way they sound – can you believe it?”

It’s little surprise, then, that dramas about missing children become just as consuming.

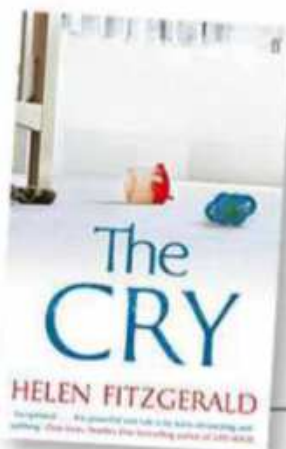

“Losing a child is absolutely the worst thing most people can imagine,” explains FitzGerald. “It’s the ultimate ‘Thank God that’s not happening to me’ scenario. And from the writer’s point of view, the parents are suspects, victims and investigators – it’s an extraordinary opportunity to look at characters from all these different points of view.”

The author of 12 crime fiction titles, loosely labelled “domestic noir”, FitzGerald believes strongly in telling stories from the ◁ dressed and bump the buggy down the stairs.

“I’d also been having problems with breastfeeding, and once we were on the plane, Anna cried and cried because she wasn’t getting any milk from me. Then, just when I decided to give her the bottle of baby milk my mother-in-law had given me ‘just in case’, I was surrounded by all these other mums saying: ‘No, you can’t give up breastfeeding! Keep at it, you must keep at it!’ It was absolutely nightmarish.”

The pressure on young mums to “cope” is, says FitzGerald, cruel and pointless. “When you’re starting off, everybody wants to give the impression that they are doing everything right, that they’re on top of every situation. It’s funny how that changes as your kids get older. Mine are 21 and 18 now, and it’s been great watching other kids grow up and become teenagers. Up to that point their parents have been those really annoying, perfect parents, then suddenly they’re, like, ‘You know what? My kid’s an a***hole!’”

FOR BRITISH AUDIENCES, The Cry, a Scottish-Australian co-production, holds uncomfortable echoes of the Madeleine McCann case, as Joanna and her Australian husband, Alistair (Ewen Leslie), are alternately pitied, blamed and judged by the media.

FitzGerald’s view, however, was less coloured by society’s treatment of the McCanns than by the case of Lindy Chamberlain, who was convicted of killing her daughter in the Australian outback in 1980. Chamberlain main-perspective of the people most affected – she has no time for detectives steaming in with their god’s-eye-view to “solve” the case. Her books, she says, are less whodunnit than “Why’d they do it?”

“The social worker in me doesn’t like to accept that someone will end up doing something criminal without a big, big ‘Why?’. I’d never use clients’ stories in my novels, but the job has had a massive impact on my fiction. In fact, I don’t really see a huge difference between what I do as a social worker and what I do as a writer. In both cases you’re empathising with people who have done bad things – you’re meeting them at the point of crisis, trying to understand them, so that the bad things don’t happen again.

“I came quite late to writing – I was pregnant with my son, bored out of my brain on maternity leave, and I’ve tended to go in five-year stints – five years writing, five years back on the job. Every time I go to Australia on a trip – and yes, I’ll admit I get annoyed by crying babies on the plane – I struggle over what to put under ‘occupation’ on the arrival form. Do I write ‘writer’ or ‘social worker’? Because I’m both those things.”

GIVEN THAT WOMEN make up the vast majority of crime fiction readers and crime drama viewers, FitzGerald is surprised, and a little impatient, at the tolerance of two-dimensional female characters on page and on screen. And while there are now more complex female leads, the recent vogue for TV dramas showing women in unassailable positions of authority gets a muted cheer.

“Shows where women are basically just men, doing their jobs as if it’s the only thing going on in their lives,” are not, she argues, representative of most women’s lives. “When a crisis is happening in my kids’ lives, they don’t care if I’m in the middle of a child protection investigation, they need me to react as their mum. And every working woman I know brings bits of her ‘home’ self to the job – you can’t leave that stuff at the door.”

For now, though, with both her children at university and a two-book contract to fulfil, FitzGerald has a rare opportunity to concentrate on writing. Her next novel, Worst Case Scenario, features an ex-criminal who becomes a poster-boy for men’s rights (at last count seven production companies were bidding to bring it to the screen). But she’s keeping her head, and is having none of that nonsense about how bringing a project to fruition on page or screen is “a bit like giving birth”. FitzGerald has done both and she knows the difference. For one thing, she points out, “People are unlikely to say your new baby isn’t as good as your last one.”

As the Autumnwatch team heads to the USA, Chris Packham says look out for racoons and rattlesnakes – but don't forget Britain's hedgehogs

IF YOU GO down to – or tune into – the woods this week, you’re sure of a big surprise. Yes, the Often-Spotted Chris Packham, Michaela Strachan and Gillian Burke are there, in their trusty log cabin, presenting the annual Autumnwatch wildlife spectacular.

But 13 years since we first tuned into Autumnwatch to get our fix of rural Britain, and after two years based in Sherborne Park in Gloucestershire, the team has upped sticks and headed over the pond – to Squam Lake in New Hampshire, which was the setting for the Oscar-winning 1981 film, On Golden Pond.

“It was great to be at Sherborne for four series because we achieved our mission to follow one place through all four seasons,” says Packham. “This is a big one-off adventure.”

Autumnwatch New England will give the trio, and viewers, a glimpse of one of the planet’s greatest seasonal spectacles: the explosion of autumn leaf colour as the region’s forests glow with reds, oranges and golds.

When they’re not gazing upwards in wonder, Packham, Strachan and Burke will, as usual, be digging into the local flora and fauna: moose, skunk, porcupines, rattlesnakes, what Burke describes as a “glorious juvenile newt called a red eft”, and what Strachan equally delightedly describes as “a tornado of tree swallows”. Do black bears defecate in the woods? Of course they do, and Team Autumnwatch will be having a poke about to study the mammals’ diets.

For Packham, it’s an opportunity “to look at parallels between what’s happening in New England at this time of year as opposed to Britain.

And some contrasts as well.

Obviously the themes will be the same, like migration. But migration in that part of the world is down through a continent. Whereas in Europe, what we see, being a set of islands off a continent, is animals moving here because it’s warmer.”

Then there’s species comparison. “We’ve got grey squirrels, which we shouldn’t have. They’ve got grey squirrels, which they should have... But it does cut both ways – we gave them starlings and house sparrows! We tend to forget this – we’ve got invasive species here, but they’ve got invasive species that we exported there.”

The threesome are talking at BBC HQ in central London just before packing their “leaf-peeper” selfie sticks and tick repellent and heading out for the pre-filmed segments. Packham has sorted out his travel essentials: a box set to watch in the scant downtime from filming (Killing Eve, recommended by yours truly), and dogsitters for Scratchy, who’ll be staying behind at Packham’s woodland cottage in the New Forest. The presenter lost his beloved black poodle’s brother Itchy almost two years ago. Has he considered getting a new puppy?

‘You can’t just shoot a moose or a bear... it’s monitored’

“No,” he replies firmly but softly. “If you’d seen Scratchy last night, it was like this,” he says, miming a hug. “It’s just us. And after we lost his brother, it’s just got tighter and tighter. And he’s got a bit grouchy as he’s got older... he doesn’t like being surprised by other dogs. And he’s so bonded with me now, it just wouldn’t be fair. So, no, unfortunately not. It would be a good idea, selfishly, but not for him. I want to celebrate every last bit of his life. I want to devote myself entirely to him; I don’t want to spread it.”

Before flying out to America, Packham also made time to get involved with last month’s People’s Walk for Wildlife in London – a gathering of interested parties, families and kids to highlight the huge decline in certain species’ numbers. In the past 50 years we’ve lost 44 million birds and half our hedgehogs.

“It was designed to get RSPB, National Trust and Wildlife Trust members but also hunt saboteurs, wildlife gardeners, farmers, all of them, standing shoulder to shoulder, and saying to each other: we don’t agree with everything you do or employ the same methods. But we’ve got the same direct purpose.”

TRUE TO FORM, Packham has already engaged with the social and political issues surrounding Autumnwatch New England. He’s no fan of killing things for fun, but he understands the “frontier spirit” that means hunting remains hugely popular in the US. “Our hunting and shooting is among the least regulated in the world. Whereas over there, everything is very strictly regulated. You can’t just go out and shoot a moose or bear. Everything is monitored. You have to apply for licences, and the number of those is restricted. I’ve just got back from Cyprus – anything that flies, boom,” he adds, shaking his head in disgust. “So Europe, I would argue, probably has a lot more problems than the United States.”

And on the subject of controls he’s concerned what will happen to flora and fauna post Brexit. “European legislation has been enormously valuable to us in terms of things like the Birds ▷

The kids call it 'Granny's mountain'

Great Gable is the place that makes me feel alive.

I've grown up with this mountain, grown old with it too.

It's watched over me my whole life and when I recently became ill, it inspired my recovery.

So here I am today, at 81, still climbing a mountain I first fell in love with in 1959.

The kids call it 'Granny's mountain'. Maybe you think that sounds silly?

But that's exactly how I feel about Great Gable.

Because it's always been there for me. And I know it always will be.

NEW ENGLAND'S FAMOUS FIVE

1 Moose

CHRIS PACKHAM "We're looking at a story where the moose are suffering because of an enormous increase in ticks."

Also, moose spend quite a bit of time feeding on plants that are under water. So they have the capacity to close their nostrils like a seal. I didn't know that till recently."

◁ Directive and Habitats Directive [that] protect habitat and species in the UK. Secondly, we talk about the missing millions in terms of birds in our countryside – we're about to entertain the missing millions in terms of funding. NGOs like the RSPB are going to be millions of pounds short of funding they would have got from Europe. So from the conservationist and environmentalist point of view, Brexit is a headache, whether you're pro-leaving or pro-staying."

THE SITUATION IS no less dire in Trump's America, even though the country's National Park system is the envy of the environmentalist world: huge tracts of land, ringfenced since the 1800s. "In terms of protecting habitats and species, they had a head start," says Packham. "But in the last couple of years, the legislation to protect them has been undermined and disassembled. When you go to America now, there's an enormous worry within the conservation fraternity. And it's really depressing."

Hence the "soft-power" eco-politicking that the admirably agitating Packham will be seeding throughout both the BBC broadcast and a companion show being aired in the US on PBS.

"The message we're going to give out is developing an affinity for this amazing ecosystem that we're visiting – which we're basically in a position to not only protect but enhance. And the American people must resist anything that's going to undermine that being achieved."

Lest any BBC/PBS mandarins choke on their flat whites, Packham reassures that "we won't be that direct". But the tactics will be the same as on Springwatch: presenting the "value" of wildlife, "so that people go: 'Yeah, you know what? Trees are important. Robins are important. Badgers, foxes, otters, they're important.' And they care. And if they care enough, they'll help us look after them. That's what it's all about. That's the vocational mission we always have in the background of our programmes."

Just don't call it Fallwatch. CRAIG McLEAN

2 The red eft

GILLIAN BURKE "I've been swotting up on them. This is the juvenile phase, when they come to land and disperse. This [red] colour alerts predators that they have a neurotoxin, the same as you find in the blue-ringed octopus and pufferfish. So there's lots of fun stuff to talk about."

have raccoons throughout Europe – there's a story that they were introduced by Goering in the Second World War. And there is an element of truth in that..."

3 Bobcats

MICHAELA STRACHAN "I'm looking at the bobcat population, which has grown since they've been protected – they used to be persecuted and their numbers dropped dramatically. So we're seeing how they integrate in a built-up area and compare that with how they are in a rural area."

5 Rattlesnakes

CHRIS PACKHAM "The timber rattlesnake has gone through a critical decline. So they're very much now conservation icons in that part of the world. They've been tracking them... by injecting [coloured] ink into their hollow rattles in sequence – red, blue, red... So you can identify them non-intrusively through your binoculars by the colours in their rattle."

4 Raccoons

CHRIS PACKHAM "We in the UK can celebrate our foxes – they're the most successful small carnivore on Earth, actually. But out there they have raccoons, which go into gardens and do exactly the same thing [as foxes]. We do

New kid on the block

Nabhaan Rizwan is making his screen debut in a gritty new BBC thriller that takes a fresh look at the “war on terror”

INTERVIEW BY KATE BATTERSBY

IF NABHAAN RIZWAN is a name you're already aware of, then you're ahead of the curve. The 21-year-old from Ilford in east London has never appeared on television before now and barely acted on stage, yet he's about to be seen in the title role in Informer, the most nuanced and original BBC drama in an autumn season already notable for outstanding quality. “As a first role – pretty cool, huh?” he grins.

Cool indeed. Informer centres around the need to identify a terror cell thought to be operating in London, with Rizwan playing Raza Shar, an east London British Asian who is coerced into becoming an informer for Paddy Considine's anti-terror policeman Gabe Waters.

So far, so normal. But Informer's writers Rory Haines and Sohrab Noshirvani were not interested in revisiting the familiar tropes of terror thrillers – scenes in shadowy Whitehall corridors, backdrops of iconic tourist landmarks, and so on. “We don't have guys running around with guns,” says Noshirvani, a New Yorker born in Iran. “That feels dated and isn't true. So nobody is ever running towards a ticking bomb.”

Yorkshireman Haines elaborates: “We didn't want to write an English version of Homeland or 24. Informer is more about identity and duplicity among a tapestry of characters colliding against one another, while this steamroller that is the ‘war on terror’ moves through.”

Unusually, Informer steers clear of worthiness by deploying straightforward humour among the huge range of authentic voices. Above all, no character behaves as if they know they're in a thriller – and at the heart of it all is Rizwan, with zero screen know-how to call on.

Sitting down in a London hotel, he acknowledges he can count his previous interview experience to date on the fingers of one hand. It turns out this makes him the odd one out in his immediate family. His mother Shahnaz was a child actor and has just finished a five-year stint on Bollywood soap Yeh Hai Mohabbatein (This Is Love), while his brother Mawaan is a stand-up comic, writer and actor whose YouTube channel has 87,000 subscribers. His father Siddiqi is now an accountant, but he and Shahnaz first met at a casting for a play he co-wrote. So when Rizwan told his parents that, despite his straight A grades at A-level, he wanted to act, they were entirely supportive.

With just a few theatre workshop groups under his belt at the Almeida and Royal Court, in June last year he acquired an agent and weeks later he arrived at the first of four auditions for Informer. “I did two scenes and I thought it went really well,” he says unselfconsciously. “I really connected with the character. My agent rang one morning when I was having a lie-in to say I'd got the job. I was all calm on the phone, but then I was jubilant – called all my friends and family. Then I went back to bed.”

The week before filming began last October, the director, Jonny Campbell, arranged a pre-shoot to help Rizwan get accustomed to acting for the camera – and to having the lens just two feet away. “It was just me walking around the Brick Lane area [of Whitechapel in east London] with the camera crew in my face. I was really nervous, and it was a lot harder than I thought to walk without any dialogue. Everyone who happened to be in Brick Lane was just staring at this weird shoot.”

Screen dramas referencing Islamic terror can swiftly descend into lazy stereotyping. With the Muslim Public Affairs Council involved at script level, Informer sets out to avoid such traps.

“It looks at the story from the ground up, with a guy leading a regular life in east London,” explains Rizwan. “I was born into a Muslim family but I'm not a practising Muslim, although I keep a couple of rules – like eating halal meat, for example.

“I'm against all stereotyping, whether it's about religion or women or gay people or whatever. Stereotypes propagate untruth, and often they're simply boring, which is the last thing you want as a storyteller. So I was very happy and relieved that the writers told the story so sensitively.”

Rizwan is still not quite familiar with the sight of himself on television. “I first saw myself on screen when they made a promotional trailer. I kept noticing superficial things, which had nothing to do with good acting – I had a tuft of hair sticking out. But now when I watch each whole episode, it's quite overwhelming to think I was a part of all that. I think people will like it.”

SINCE SHOOTING FINISHED he's done more theatre and a supporting role in an upcoming drama for FX. He's also recorded music, started writing a play “about a guy in Moscow who steals fine art”, and working through new scripts he's being offered.

“Becoming well known is not of itself something I want,” he says, before adding seriously: “I'd like to be a recording artist, an actor in films and theatre, write plays and a novel, and get into fashion designing. I want to make great work.”

What if it turned out that, while he was able to make a living in acting, doing great work wasn't within his command? “It would defeat the whole purpose,” answers Rizwan. “But I've started off well, and it gives me hope for the future.”

The interview is over. He shakes my hand and says: “Thanks so much, Kate.” Such a small thing. He had heard my name only once. That he recalled it and used it may seem an ordinary courtesy but is so unusual in an interview that I'm not sure it's ever happened before in 30 years of doing the job.

I would suggest that you in turn remember the name Nabhaan Rizwan, but having seen his stand-out work in Informer, I've a feeling all of us will.

“WHO DO YOU THINK YOU ARE?”

As David Tennant plays the father of a child with a disability in a new comedy drama, he recalls the lessons he learnt growing up

INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

DAVID TENNANT HAS done strange and wonderful things for our entertainment. As the tenth incarnation of Doctor Who he saved Queen Victoria from a werewolf attack and stopped Madame de Pompadour's brain being stolen by aliens. He has voiced Scrooge McDuck in Disney's DuckTales and played shape-shifting villain Barty Crouch Jr in Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire. But his latest role, as the father in Shaun Pye's autobiographical There She Goes, a comedy drama about parenting a daughter with learning disabilities, is perhaps his bravest.

"No, not me," the 47-year-old insists, when we discuss the BBC4 series. "If anyone's been brave it's Shaun in writing it. He's so honest about his journey with his daughter, how he's come to terms with that, and his very understandable shortcomings."

A couple having a daughter with a disability is not natural comedy material – Tennant's co-star Jessica Hynes calls it a series about "parents going through dark nights" – but Tennant says he wanted to do it from the moment he read the script. "The writing was so real, so touching and so unexpected," he says of the screenplay by Pye, whose daughter was born with a rare chromosomal disease in 2006. "It was unlike anything

‘Why are there not more dramas about just being a parent?’

I'd read before. It's such raw, human stuff, I felt a huge responsibility, especially with Shaun in the room when we did the read-through."

If that sounds a little heavy, then Pye points out, "The central message is that although getting this news about your daughter is on that list of things you never want to hear in your entire life, for this particular family, it's going to be all right."

Tennant and Hynes play parents Simon and Emily, and the series unfolds over two timelines: in 2006, as the couple respond to the news that their unborn daughter has a potential brain abnormality; and in 2015, when that daughter, Rosie, is nine.

Rosie is played by Miley Locke, who has previously starred in The Royals and Grantchester. She doesn't have a disability, but Tennant says: "I think children can rather innocently and beautifully portray

THE DOCTOR IS IN...
David Tennant as the tenth incarnation of the Time Lord that without it being self-conscious. Miley really captured the essence of Rosie in a very true and very real sense. Which was something really quite remarkable to witness and not easy to do."

Rosie's disability disrupts family life profoundly; she is given to throwing herself to the ground and going ominously stiff. Pye, who has written for Would I Lie to You? and Never Mind the Buzzcocks, finds humour not so much in Rosie's condition and quirks but in the way Simon falls short of the parenting mark. He is inclined to avoid his responsibilities, reaches for the bottle when under stress and sulks when he doesn't get his own way. Emily tends to soldier on. It works partly because there is such a strong rapport between Tennant and Hynes, who worked together on Doctor Who in 2007. "I know David so well," Hynes says. "That makes it very easy for us to slip into the back-and-forth that Shaun sets up between us."

Tennant, who is married to the actor Georgia Moffett, says the series has affected the way he feels about fatherhood. "I defy anyone with children not to see moments of what it's like to be a parent within the series. It makes you wonder how you'd react in that particular set of circumstances, of course, but it also makes you wonder about the ways you might have reacted in your own life as a parent, about the times you got it wrong and the times you got it right."

The couple have three children, Olive, Wilfred and Doris, and Tennant adopted Tyler, Moffett's son from a previous relationship. "It's only since

I've become a parent that I've thought, 'Why are there not more dramas about just being a parent?'" Tennant says. "The ups and downs, the contradictions... that sense of being sent home from a ▷ ◁ hospital with a child that you're then expected to know what to do with."

Tennant met Moffett on the set of Doctor Who in 2008. Moffett – who, to confuse things, is the real-life daughter of Doctor number five, Peter Davison – played Tennant's daughter Jenny. It's just one way in which Doctor Who is woven into Tennant's life. When Jodie Whittaker was announced as the new Doctor, Tennant, who starred alongside her in Broadchurch, told her, "This is one of the most amazing things that can happen to you. There are only a few of us who know how it feels."

Whittaker says her response to this advice was, "Oh, wow! Cool, cool, cool, cool, cool," but Tennant doesn't sound like a man with a strong emotional attachment to a series that took him from playing Casanova to national stardom. "I've got nothing to do with the show now," he says. "Obviously, I'm aware of it, like everyone else in the country, but I don't feel any..." and then he stops and, unusually for an actor in mid-interview, changes his mind.

"No, that's not true, I do feel a personal connection to Doctor Who. It's just that I'm not living it every day like all the people who have been ramping up for the big launch right now. For them, I'm sure it must be slightly overwhelming right now as the series begins."

I'm curious about what order of precedence he gives his past successes, from playing the Doctor to his 2009 screen Hamlet and, from 2013 until last year,

DI Alec Hardy in Broadchurch. "You want me to list my past successes!" He scoffs. "I think I'm far too much of a Scottish Presbyterian to think of myself like that." Tennant was born in West Lothian, the son of a Church of Scotland minister, with Ulster Orangemen ancestry. He stars alongside Saoirse Ronan in Josie Rourke's upcoming Mary Queen of Scots – Tennant plays the ultimate Presbyterian, John Knox, the Scottish cleric who started the Reformation north of the border and supported the execution of the Catholic Mary, Queen of Scots.

"I think there's a definite west-of-Scotland upbringing that I had and I think many people

'I'm too much of a Scottish Presbyterian to list my successes'

WORTHY SUCCESSOR
New Doctor Jodie Whittaker as Beth Latimer and David Tennant as DI Alec Hardy in Broadchurch

of my generation and social circumstances will recognise," Tennant says. "There's often the sense of 'who do you think you are-ness' that I find useful. It's grounding and a good reminder sometimes that you're not as fancy as you like to think you are. I think I cherish that part of my upbringing, and I certainly can't shake it off."

IT ALSO, PERHAPS, makes a pretty good mask to hide your feelings behind when you're waiting for the birth of a child. "Yes, that's a very vivid concern," Tennant says. "The fear that you won't be able to cope if your child is anything less than 'perfect'. But Shaun and his family now have a life that they cherish. And Shaun's journey, and his wife's journey, from fearing that they wouldn't know how to love this daughter, to actually being passionately in love with this little girl and finding an unexpected life, in an unexpected direction – I think we can all identify with the humanity of that."

It's rare that an actor has a genuinely profound experience when he's making a comedy. Will it make him a better dad? "I think it's hard to know," he says. "It's one of the constant questions about acting, or when you spend a bit of time in someone else's shoes. Does it rub off on you, does it make you a different human being? We evolve as parents, as our own children grow older, and as we experience and witness other people's families. I hugely admire and respect Shaun and his family. And as a parent I can only aspire to that."

Sound familiar?

There's more to voiceovers than you think. Three stars reveal what it takes to narrate your favourite shows...

CRAIG CASH Narrator of Gogglebox

I always used to watch Gogglebox when Caroline Aherne narrated it, partly because we were great friends, but also because I loved the programme. In November 2013, when she was gravely ill with cancer, Caroline asked if I'd narrate Gogglebox when she wasn't up to it. Of course, I said yes; it was a very sad time and I wanted to do right by her and by the programme. Caroline was well and then unwell, well and unwell, so I filled in whenever she needed me to.

When Caroline died in July 2016, I took over narrating duties. She will of course forever be in my life, but it was heartbreaking going into the small studio in Manchester at 8am on a Friday morning to record the narration for the show, knowing that Caroline used to sit in the same room. Now that time has passed, going into the studio is a lovely little moment because Caroline is with me again. And I know she'll be watching Gogglebox in heaven with 20 Bensons and a bottle of champagne.

Before Gogglebox, I'd done lots of voiceovers but I'd never actually narrated anything. When Gogglebox is on air, I get sent the script quite late on a Thursday evening because they're still working on it. I read through it, but I don't really know what it relates to because at that point I haven't seen any clips.

At 8am the next morning when I'm in the Manchester studio, the Gogglebox team talk me through the show from their studio in London. There isn't time for me to see the show in its entirety, so I watch about two seconds of each segment.

I've never met any of the cast of Gogglebox because the parties are always in London and I'm in Manchester. I can't choose a favourite character – it'd be like asking me to choose between my children! Everyone bangs on about "Broken Britain", but Gogglebox is such a great cross section of people from different cultures, backgrounds and classes. It can make you cry – I've cried loads of times and builders are always telling it makes them cry, too – but it's also really uplifting and warm. I wouldn't be interested in narrating it if it was cynical.

After I've done my narration, I watch the show on telly like everybody else. I can enjoy the show as a fan and forget about my part in it. My mates think I'm weird for watching it. "What are you doing, staying in for Gogglebox? Get over yourself!" But I'm not watching it to listen to my narration, I'm watching it as a fan.

Gogglebox is on Friday 9pm C4

PHIL DAVIS Narrator of Who Do You Think You Are?

I took over the narration of Who Do You Think You Are? last year, following on from Cherie Lunghi, Mark Strong and David Morrissey. I think that every so often Wall to Wall, who produce the series, decide they want a change. It's a lovely gig, very easy and great fun.

At first, I was sent the script the day before I went into the studio to record the narration, but it got tricky because there were always a few last-minute changes and they didn't want to send the script to me before it was finally ready.

Now I just bowl up and record it. I don't even know who the subject is until I arrive at the studio. And, like other narrators, I never see the whole programme: I just see the clips that I'm narrating.

Usually for voiceovers they're after something neutral – not too cockney, not too posh. I knew that for this, they wanted a warm and friendly voice. Sometimes I'm told to watch out for glottle-stopping and I have to put a lid on the Essex!

In the end, you really don't want to notice the voice when you're watching the programme. As narrator, you just want to trigger the right emotions without being intrusive or imbuing the words with a particular point of view.

Who Do You Think You Are? returns next year to BBC1

REBECCA FRONT

Narrator of The Supervet

I've been narrating The Supervet since 2014 and although it's basically the same as any acting job, it's very technical. Some actors are just in the job for the creative and artistic side, but being a narrator is different. You have to do it exactly the way the show's producers want it. It has to fill a pre-existing gap. And it's not up to you to decide, for example, how long a pause you are going to leave. I get a real thrill when I'm told, "That's great, but we need it 0.4 seconds faster." I sit in the studio thinking, "I'm going to do it exactly 0.4 seconds faster. I don't know how, but I'm going to do it!"

I narrate a lot of documentaries, but The Supervet is my main series. You arrive in the studio, there's a screen in front of you and you put headphones on. The producers are paying for the studio so you can't watch the whole programme but, if there's a particularly emotional or funny section, then I have to watch it to ensure my tone is sympathetic.

I was narrating The Supervet the other day and there was a line like "Susan has a tricky decision to make". My first take was very light and the producer apologised and told me, "You should watch the footage: the vet was telling Susan that an amputation might be necessary."

The Supervet scripts are incredibly well crafted, but there are sometimes unavoidable emotional pitfalls, which you rely on the producer to alert you to.

Our family recently got a dog and it has slightly changed the way I narrate The Supervet. There have been a number of times when the green light has come on in the studio and I've had to ask for a minute to compose myself. My kids love the show. We had to take our dog to the vet about a month ago and, as we were going in, my daughter said, "I dare you to talk to the vet in your Supervet voice: 'Bailey is an eight-month-old cockapoo...'" But I couldn't quite bring myself to carry it off.

I spent a number of years trying to get into documentary voiceovers because I watch documentaries all the time. I'm quite envious of Phil Davis narrating Who Do You Think You Are? because it's one of my favourite documentary series. Phil is the perfect choice, but I might just trip him up next time I see him!

The Supervet is on Wednesday 8pm C4

REBECCA FRONT

Stillbirth is rarely talked about – but for Chris and Kezia, sharing the story of their daughter Grace helps ease the pain

LIKE ANY 14-MONTH old who has just taken his first steps, Joshua is eager to explore the outside world. “He’s a little adventurer,” says his mum, Kezia Kerr. A sunny, “chilled-out” baby, Joshua has brought his parents incomparable joy. Yet it’s a joy that has – and will always – come tinged with immense sadness. Because Joshua is a twin, albeit a twin who will never get to grow up alongside his sibling.

His sister Grace died in the womb, one of the many hundreds of babies who are stillborn each year in the UK. Every day around nine babies are born with no signs of life after the 24th week of pregnancy, making the rate one of the worst in the developed world. Yet stillbirth remains largely a private grief shrouded in silence. Now a groundbreaking documentary aims to change that by following the journeys of three couples facing this most tragic of ordeals.

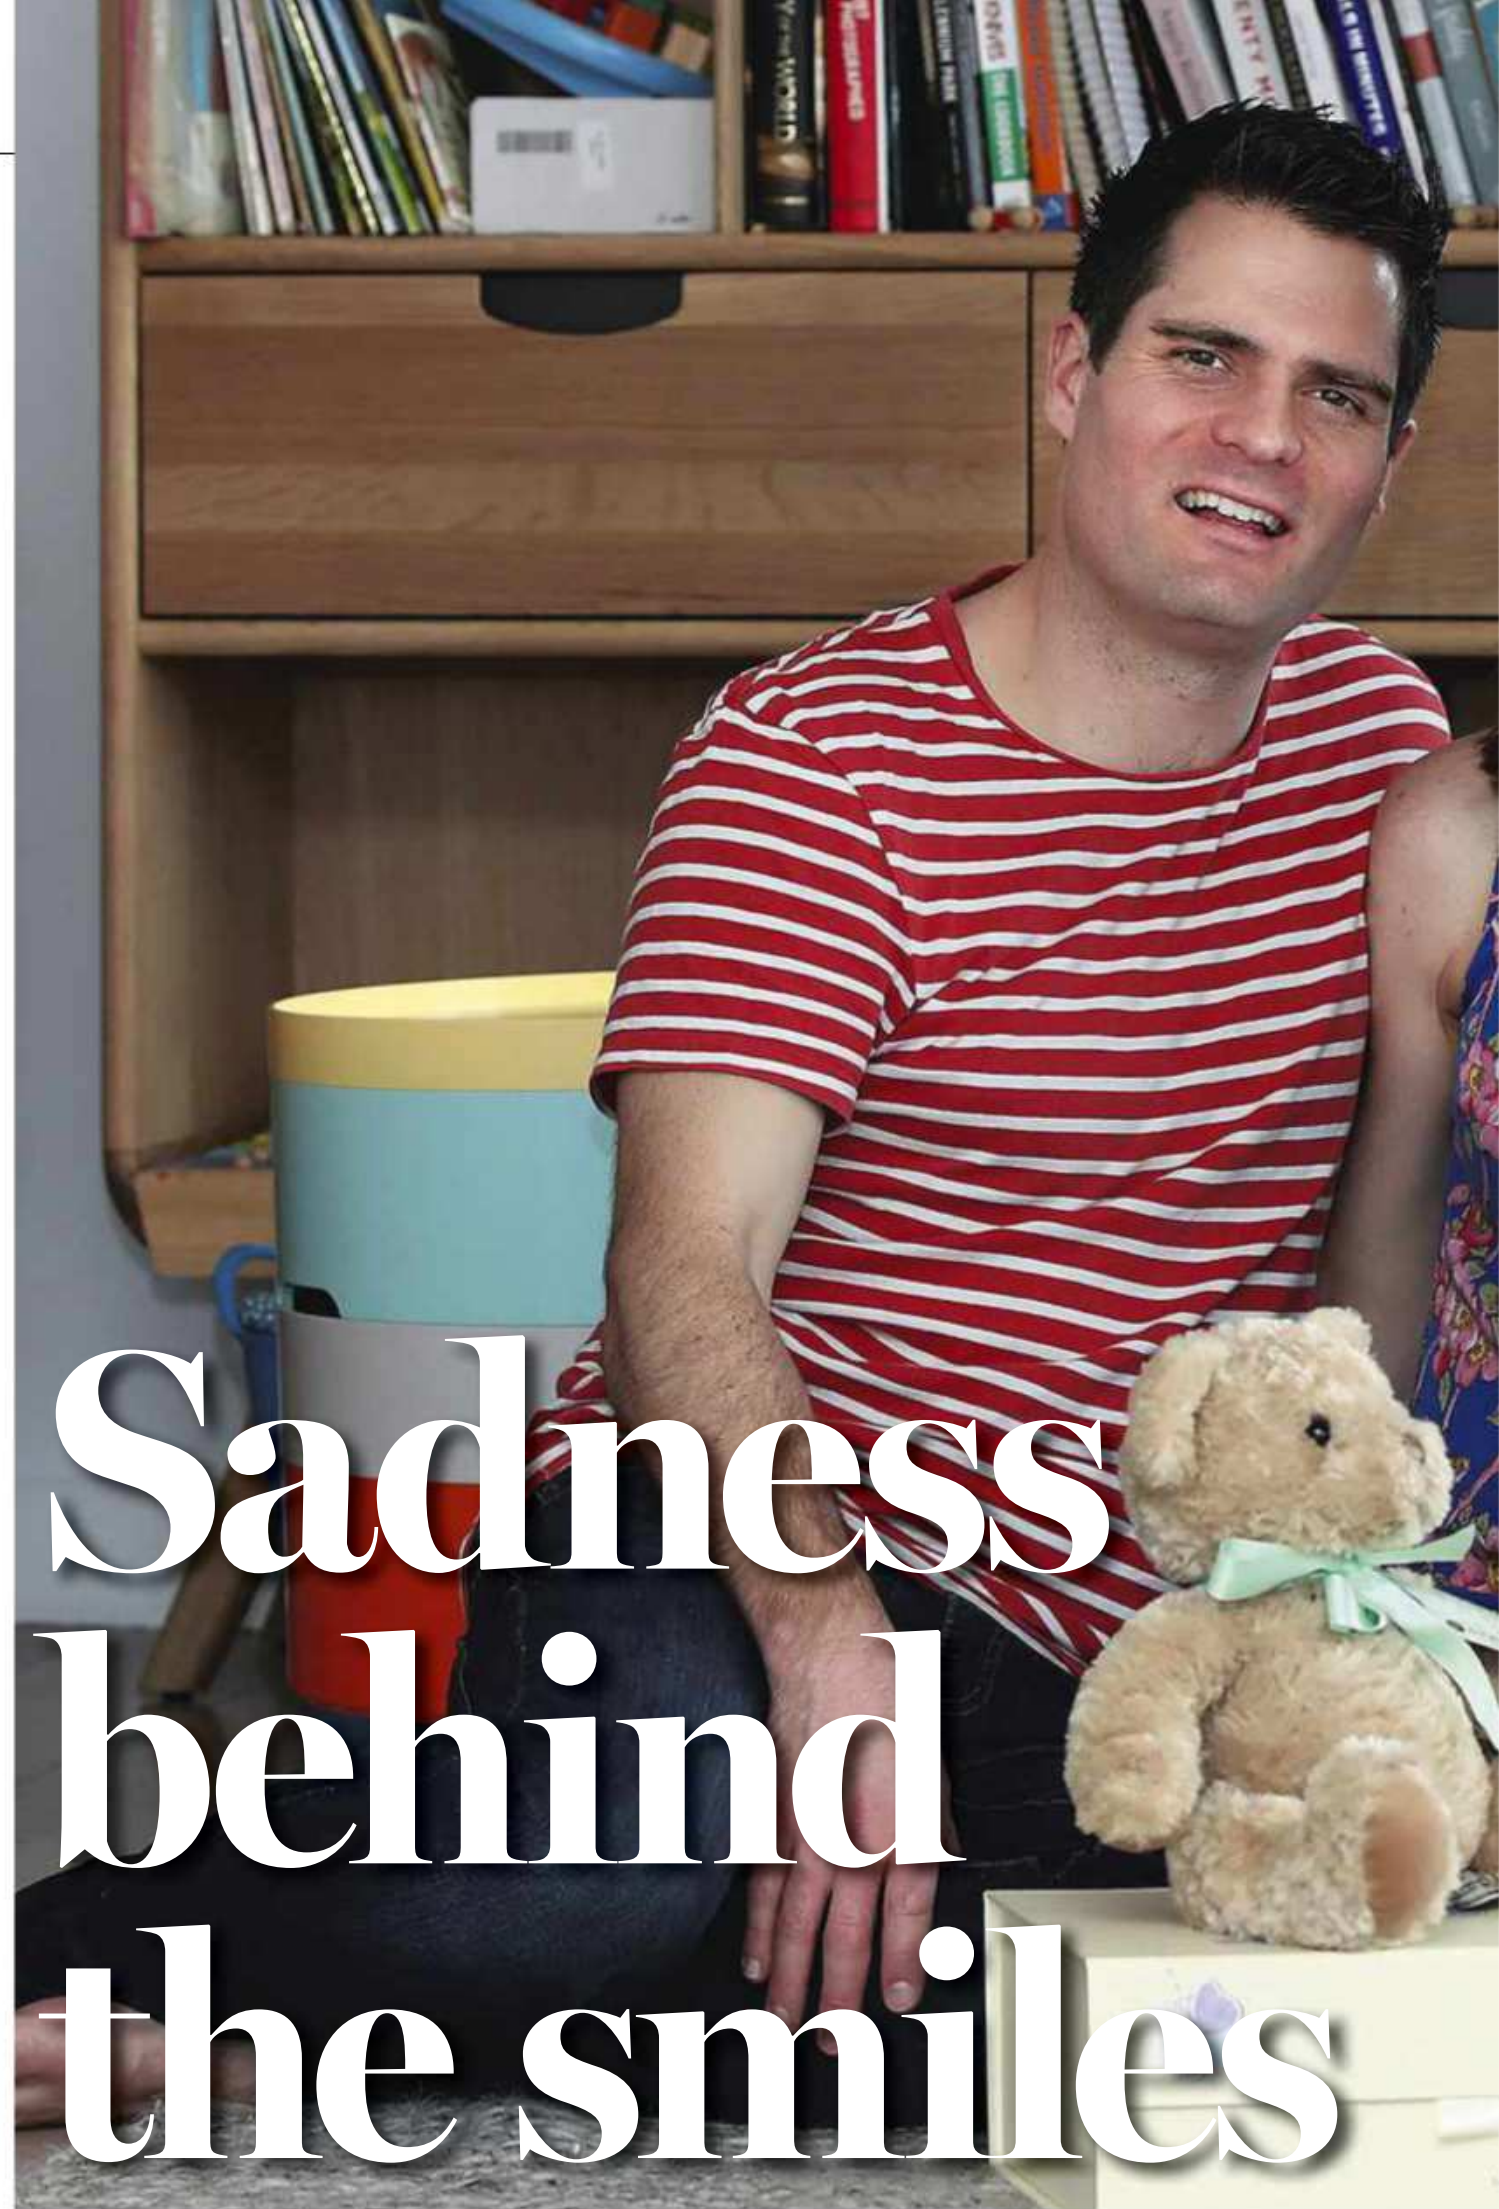

First-time parents Vicky and Bruce arrive at hospital when Vicky is 26 weeks pregnant, concerned that she has felt no movement, only to learn the heartbreaking news that their baby’s heart has stopped.

For another couple, Niall and Fiona, a second pregnancy is deemed high risk following the previous loss of their daughter Mathilda at full term. Then there’s Kezia and her husband Chris, who learnt during the course of filming that one of their babies had died in utero.

All of them feature in extraordinarily intimate and moving footage, including, in two instances, the moment of delivery of their stillborn child – a first on British television.

That the documentary could happen at all is the result of many months of painstaking work by the filming team, who shadowed a number of high-risk pregnancy units, building relationships with staff and expectant parents.

That included Kezia and Chris, who were first approached at London’s University College Hospital when it seemed that one of their twins was not developing as it should. “At first we really weren’t interested, but as time went on we did allow the director to sit in on a scan and when she asked us again if we might consider it, we looked at each other and thought that if it’s going to help someone then let’s do it,” recalls Kezia. “At the same time we didn’t know what was going to happen. We were still hoping Grace might be the miracle story.”

In some ways she already was: Kezia and Chris, both 37, had taken years to conceive and had undergone IVF when, in late 2016, they learnt that Kezia was pregnant with twins. “We had really expected only one embryo to survive, so it was a shock,” says Kezia. “You start thinking, ‘That’s two cots, two car seats.’ We were excited.”

The risk of stillbirth is increased in twin pregnancy, as both fetuses compete for precious resources in the womb, yet while the 12-week scan showed that one twin was slightly smaller, no one seemed unduly concerned.

“We thought, ‘No worries, that little guy will speed up,’” says Chris. That changed at the 20-week scan shortly before Easter last year, when it was clear the baby wasn’t thriving. “Josh was all good, then when the sonographer started to scan Grace – the atmosphere just changed. Everything went quiet and eerie,” says Kezia. “She said she had to talk to one of the doctors. You just feel this horrible dread.”

With Easter looming, the couple were told they would have to return after the holiday for further investigation. “We had to leave not knowing what was wrong, which was tough,” says Kezia. Fortnightly scans at a specialist fetal medicine unit followed, at which point

I would never have, which I occasionally struggled with.”

Kezia was also facing the particularly difficult prospect of giving birth to both babies. “I knew that when I delivered Grace she was no longer going to be part of me, that that would be that,” says Kezia. “I tried not to dwell on it as it was just so hard and sad.”

Joshua’s birth, nonetheless, was “beautiful”, his arrival coming naturally after Kezia’s waters broke at 37 weeks. “I remember he was put on my chest and I just cannot describe the joy and love for this little being in my arms,” she recalls.

Then came Grace. “I remember the midwife saying now there would be the hard bit. They told me it wouldn’t look like a baby and when she came she looked like a little bird that had fallen out of a tree.”

AT FIRST, KEZIA was unsure whether she could hold her baby daughter, but the following day, a bereavement midwife brought her wrapped in blankets, and Chris and Kezia held both their babies in their arms for family photographs. “I’m so glad we did that,” says Kezia. “It was something beautiful before we said goodbye.”

Grace was cremated following a funeral provided by the hospital. Fourteen months on Kezia admits that the grief remains raw. “I do sometimes find it hard looking at twins – it brings up that pain,” she says. “At the same time I choose not to think she could be here, as it’s just too hard and not helpful.”

Both Kezia and Chris agree that, for all the pain, the process of filming proved both cathartic and healing. “We found talking about it really helpful from the start,” says Chris. “By sharing our story a lot of barriers have already come down with other people.”

It’s a process they hope will continue via the documentary. “I think it’s so important that still-birth becomes a conversation people are not afraid of having,” says Kezia. “Even a generation ago it just wasn’t talked about it at all. But Grace will always be part of our family and our story.”

the couple were approached once more by the documentary team. “They started filming around a month before we got the bad news, although we were still hoping for the best outcome,” she says.

IT MEANT THAT cameras were present for the moment when, around 29 weeks, the sonographer confirmed that Grace no longer had a heartbeat. “It was just horrible,” says Kezia, quietly. “Words can’t really describe how I felt in that moment.”

“It’s like a nightmare you want to wake up from and it will all be different,” adds Chris. “We’d spent a long time thinking about what the twins would be like – you picture them growing up. Then that vision comes crashing down.”

‘I find it hard seeing twins – it brings back that pain’

KEZIA KERR

The reality of the situation meant that while Kezia was nurturing one life the couple were also grieving for the loss of another. “It was particularly hard for Kezia being the one carrying the babies, so in some ways it was easier for me to process the loss,” says Chris. “At the same time she was the only person who had experienced Grace alive, so she had a connection

Now it's serious

DR RANJ SINGH

THE COMPETITION is hotting up now that the public vote is open and there's a real threat of going home, so there's huge performance pressure.

I certainly felt it, after week one. It really played on my mind that I had to do as well, if not better, in week two. Janette could tell something was up during training for our salsa. She's developed an uncanny sixth sense for how I'm feeling.

We now have only four days to learn each routine – we train from Monday to Thursday and need to be studio-ready by Friday! So if, like me, you're trying to fit rehearsals around another job (or jobs), it all gets a bit tricky. Luckily, having a partner who is not only a great teacher but also great fun really helps you cope with the stress of it all.

'Susannah was the mum – and gave the best hugs'

We contestants have become a support group, so losing Susannah was heartbreaking. She was the mum of the group (and gave the best hugs). The fun ride we're on has started to get very serious.

Throwing yourself fully into the experience helps to keep the magic going: embrace the sequins and enjoy being fitter than you've ever been. I've even had a spray tan! I did feel a bit silly walking into the tanning room and asking if it was worth me getting one. But 15 minutes later, I was ready to take on another new dance style... ballroom!

SUSANNAH CONSTANTINE

WHEN I AGREED to take part in Strictly, I said over and over again, "Just so long as I don't go out first." None of us wants that humiliation, let alone in front of ten million people. Well, I was not only the first to leave, but I also hold the record for the lowest ever score for a foxtrot in the history of this glorious show!

But no one deserved to go out before me. Even the popularity of Anton Du Beke wasn't enough to save us from my inability to grasp the art of ballroom dancing. I might as well have been sitting an A-level in Mandarin without knowing its alphabet.

Watching Strictly on TV will never be the same. I've been there and know that Craig's bark is far worse than his bite and his critiques are honest. Darcy and Shirley both speak with the wisdom of experience. The backstage team is the best in their field, and the crews work like demons, but always with cheery words of encouragement.

While I was often immobilised by terror and frustrated by my clumsiness, Strictly is an experience I'll never forget. Anton is a diamond and will, I hope, continue to be an ally. I'm sad to say goodbye, but I know I'll be finding sequins and glitter in unusual places for a long time to come.

Born this way

New drama Butterfly explores the question of gender identity in children. RT talks to two mothers about their real-life experiences...

→ Claire Tine, 55, supported her 12-year-old daughter Poppy through the transition from male to female

POPPY WAS ASSIGNED male at birth, but as soon as she could express herself we knew there was something very different about her. When she started nursery aged four she played with girls' toys and raided her friends' dressing-up boxes for princess dresses. She'd cry her eyes out when we tried to cut her hair. We have a well in our garden and she used to drop coins down there and say, "I wish I was a girl."

This went on for a while and I suppose we didn't take it that seriously. To be honest, we just assumed we had a child who was going to be a gay boy. But then she started saying she wanted to cut her willy off and it became obvious that this was something else.

MODERN FAMILY
Anna Friel plays mum Vicky and Callum Booth-Ford is Maxine in the three-part ITV drama Butterfly

My husband, Saliou, doted on her from day one, but he found it hard. While other boys were kicking a football around with their dads, Poppy was prancing around the garden with her fairy wings and her Barbie.

Then one day I was introduced to a 70-year-old who called herself an “unresolved woman”, who had transition surgery in her 60s. She in turn introduced me to a charity called Mermaids who helped me realise that this was gender dysphoria and that Poppy was a girl.

IT WAS A relief, really, because she was always so sad. So we went to her school and told them Poppy needed to transition. She chose her own name: she obviously had a boy’s name before but she calls that her “dead name” and says it’s irrelevant now.

At Christmas the school wrote to all the parents and when the children came back for the new term they were invited to a special assembly where they were given some information about Poppy’s journey.

There were no issues. Previously, some of the girls had refused to play with her, but once she was “Poppy” I think it gave her peers clarity and took away the confusion. People ask, “Did you grieve for your son?” but I didn’t because I never really had a son. When she transitioned she didn’t want pictures of herself in the house so we put them all away in a memory box and packed away her boys’ clothes.

‘What gives us the right not to allow our child to be herself’

CLAIRE, POPPY’S MOTHER

She started going to the Tavistock Clinic [in north London, which specialises in gender identity problems in children] and has been going ever since. They monitor her and she will go on hormone blockers when she needs to, which will stop her puberty. That’s standard practice in this country, to give children longer to question who they are, so that if she gets to 16 and says, “This is a mistake,” she can revert back to who she was before puberty.

There are statistics about children changing their mind about being trans. For Poppy, I know there were no other options. She couldn’t go on the way she was. If she did feel she had made a mistake, she would be able to tell us because she knows we love her unconditionally. Although I’m a million per cent sure that Poppy’s Poppy and that will never change.

People say to me, “When did she decide she wanted to be a girl?”, but she didn’t ever make that decision. It’s like saying, “When did your child decide she was left-handed?”. People ask why we let our child do this at such a young age, but what would give us the right not to allow our child to be herself? People think it’s a trend. But who would choose that life, putting yourself through bullying and ridicule and hate crimes?

There’s not a day that goes by where we don’t worry. It’s not a journey anybody would choose for their child. But we’re so proud of our daughter’s determination and persistence in telling us she wanted to transition. Poppy is a different person now. She felt ashamed before, but now she’s one of the happiest and most confident girls you could ever meet.

➔ Lily Maynard, 48, did not allow her daughter Jessie to transition from female to male when she was 15 years old

JESSIE WASN’T A “girly” girl. She liked climbing trees and didn’t like wearing dresses, but she never said she was a boy and never asked for her long hair to be cut. She was a happy child.

I wasn’t keen on gendered clothes for either of my girls so they both got mistaken for boys sometimes when they were wearing jeans and dinosaur T-shirts.

When she was 14 she came out as gay, which didn’t surprise me at all, and of course was absolutely fine – I’m bisexual myself. But then she became obsessed with lesbian YouTube videos, which led to her watching transitioning videos.

These videos show glamorised and highly stylised pictures of girls taking hormones to make them look like boys, and vice versa. To Jessie and other teenagers, these YouTube stars were “brave” and “special” and that was a huge part of the appeal, I think.

There are no prominent lesbians who are cool and make-up free for someone like Jessie to look up to. So instead of saying it’s OK to be a slightly geeky lesbian who doesn’t want to wear lipstick, these YouTube people were saying, “Actually you must be a trans boy who was born in the wrong body.”

Jessie cut her hair short then asked me to help her to transition, but I said I wouldn’t support her in doing that. I wanted her to be happy but I don’t believe it’s physically possible to be born in the wrong body. We don’t have gendered brains: even top scientists can’t tell the difference between a man’s brain and a woman’s brain. Gender is entirely a social construct.

I do think people genuinely suffer from gender dysphoria and believe they are in the wrong body. As an adult you can do what you like, but I think transitioning a child is abuse. You are telling them there’s something wrong with their body – in which other circumstances would we think that was OK? We don’t tell a bulimic,

‘Now she’s glad I didn’t let her transition’

LILY, JESSIE’S MOTHER

Wouldn’t it be better if we worked with children and found out why they feel like that, and spent time breaking down gender stereotypes about what it means to be a boy and a girl?

I don’t doubt for a second that these parents love their children and want the best for them but there’s a whole industry now and they are quickly beguiled by these organisations offering help.

The operations are really extreme. A nine-year-old can’t begin to conceive what that they might entail. And children are now given hormone blockers to stop them going through puberty, but that’s further distancing them from their peers, and stopping them from going through the psychological development they need to go through. Teenagers often feel uncomfortable in their bodies. I didn’t wear trousers for a year because I thought I had a big bum even though I was a size eight. The way to get through that is to go through puberty and grow up, not to stunt those changes.

THAT WAS THREE years ago. Jessie is now 18, at a very good university, has a girlfriend, and is very happy. She’s said to me several times that she’s glad I didn’t let her transition. She says it’s hard to explain how she felt at the time and although it felt real to her then, she no longer feels that way. I strongly believe that we need to stop pumping hormones into children and operating on young people and start talking to them instead.

Although Jessie has moved on, I know there are other families out there going through what we went through and I want them to know that there are other options available.

By the way, Lily and Jessie are not our real names. I’m using pseudonyms to protect Jessie’s identity because there are trans activists who would bully and harass my family if our identities were known. Controversial as it has become to say, it’s possible to love and support your child without enabling their transition.

A class apart

Why does an old grudge still divide rugby league and rugby union?

Super League Grand Final Saturday 5.00pm (k/o 6pm) Sky Main Event/Arena, 5 Live

MAYHEM AND GRACE lie at the heart of rugby. That dizzy combination of violence and speed, of crunching tackles and dancing feet, of hands as sharp as grapples and soft as cobwebs: the sport where artistry meets brutality and no one can ever decide which is the true winner.

We're likely to find all of that at rugby league's annual showpiece, the Super League Grand Final, the winner-takes-all finale to the season – delicate skills performed at extreme pace under the constant threat of physical assault.

How many great things in British life began in the pub? Rugby league was invented at the George Hotel in Huddersfield in 1895 when the Northern Rugby Football Union broke away from the Rugby Football Union down south and set up its own show, deciding that the game was about running and tackling, and that anything that got in the way of that should be banned.

They tweaked the laws in the ensuing years and came up with a game that lacked both frills and longeurs, one in which all the players were involved all the time. A lot of these ideas were very good, but, of course, the people who run the RFU could never dream of adopt-can't drop the scrum, even though the setting and resetting of scrums is both tedious and incomprehensible. They have to stick with the business of fighting for the ball on the ground at what's called "the breakdown", while everyone waits until the whistle is blown for an offence only the referee understands. Or does he?

It seems obvious: do away with the scrums, allow the tackled player to retain possession and stop the overcrowding on the pitch by getting rid of a couple of players on each side. That way you'll get a better spectacle, and a more comprehensible one. But I can't see that happening. Not in rugby union, anyway – but they've taken other things from rugby league.

IN 2003 THE England rugby union team won the World Cup, Jonny Wilkinson scoring the winning drop goal a few seconds before the final whistle. But the victory owed much to rugby league – England's superlative defence was coached by Phil Larder, a former rugby league man, while decisive contributions in the quarter-final against Wales, and in the final against Australia, came from Jason Robinson, a former rugby league player. Better together?

Is there any possibility of the codes getting closer? I am inclined to doubt it: the arguments are so old and so deep, based on ancient snobberies and historical resentments rather than the dream of sporting excellence.

Both codes can produce great sport. Both play roughly the same game, but they are still divided by something close to a religious schism. It's not actually religion at the heart of it all, of course – it's social class, but that seems to cut still deeper. This is, after all, England.

FAST AND FURIOUS

ing a single one of them – because whatever else they do, they must always be different from rugby league.

I sometimes wonder if rugby union people ever look at an occasion like the Grand Final and sigh... wishing perhaps they could go back to 1895, travel up to the George and say to their northern colleagues: "Come on, let's stick together! We can work this out! After all, we all play and love the same game, don't we?"

But alas they can't, and as a result, rugby union is stuck with its points of difference. They

007 with gags

BEN MILLER SEEMS partial to double acts. He's most famous for his TV sketch shows with Alexander Armstrong. But in the early 1990s, before they were famous, I remember seeing them at the Gate Theatre in London's Notting Hill, squeezed together on a postage stamp-sized stage. In more recent years, Miller has been seeing another comedian. He's about to return as Angus Bough, loyal sidekick to Rowan Atkinson's title spy in Johnny English Strikes Again (in cinemas now), the third film in the series.

The movie feels like a bona fide Bond film with laughs. There are glamorous French locations, fast cars and a villain who cyber-attacks MI7 so that the only operative left is the hapless English. Less Skyfall, more Pratfall.

Bough was absent from 2011's Johnny English Reborn, so this was a surprise reinstatement. I've interviewed Miller a number of times, but usually to discuss his TV, rather than his film, work, and he says he was delighted to get the recall. "Producer Chris Clark phoned me when I was holidaying in Morocco. We had a friendly chat and at the end he said, 'How would you feel about us bringing Bough back?' I said, 'Why didn't you say that first?'"

Miller leapt at the chance of reuniting with Atkinson. "Rowan gets to do what he does best. He's so clever. It's like a magic trick done before you even see the top hat, let alone the rabbit."

English is an analogue agent in a digital world. His main weapons are adapted sweets from the 1970s, including a killer Sherbet Fountain and exploding Jelly Babies. "It's already funny before you know what they are," enthuses Miller.

He's also a Bond fan: "When Xander [Armstrong] and I made The Armstrong and Miller Show we loved the idea of being comedy characters in a Bond movie, but nothing came of it. Bond has now become more serious. In Roger Moore's day, it was more action comedy."

Part-Q, part-Moneypenny, Bough is vital to every mission's success. "Someone must be sorting the traveller's cheques. There's an awful lot of corner-cutting in Bond. Mostly in the admin. I'd like to see Daniel Craig arrive at an airport with the car hire voucher he's printed off the internet."

AMID THE PINK Pantherish slapstick there's a whiff of politics, too, with Emma Thompson channelling Theresa May as a crisis-hit PM. "It doesn't hurt that during this turmoil with the EU we've got a character in the south of France," says Miller. "It gives it a rich context. I imagine Johnny might be in favour of Brexit. There are resonances you can't plan for..."

Miller, 52, and Atkinson, 63, are from different generations, but both are that relatively rare thing in entertainment, scientists. Miller read physics at Cambridge, Atkinson studied electrical engineering. They are unapologetic comedy boffins. "Rowan is maybe more obsessive," he

Reliving history

We heard a lot from privileged white men during the Senate hearing for Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh. Amid the Republican scramble to deflect back onto accusing women, privileged white man Donald Trump Jr told a reporter that, in the current climate, he was more scared for his sons than his daughters. Draining all of his reserves of irony, tireless CNN pundit Jeffrey Toobin commented, "Every night I cry myself to sleep over the fate of white men in America."

You can't help but bring to mind such recent events as you lose yourself in the slice of history portrayed in Ava DuVernay's sweepingly staged Selma. Based around the three "equal voting rights for blacks" protest marches in March 1965 from Selma, Alabama, to the state capital, Montgomery, led by civil rights beacon Dr Martin Luther King (David Oyelowo, below), the story gains hugely from the context in which it's now seen. The battle for the basic rights of every individual is clearly not yet over.

DuVernay was soon to become the first African-American woman to direct a Hollywood fantasy with a $100 million budget (A Wrinkle in Time). But here it's her vivid re-creations of the police violence on the actual Edmund Pettus Bridge – forcing President Lyndon B Johnson (Tom Wilkinson) to push the Voting Rights Act through Congress and into law – that you remember. In 2014, Selma arrived against a backdrop of African-Americans being shot dead by white law-enforcers: Trayvon Martin, Michael Brown, Eric Garner. Who would have guessed that a film set 50 years before would play out against fresh racial unrest.

Oyelowo gives a career-defining performance as Dr King, stirring and full-blooded in public oratory, fallible in private. That he was missed off the best actor Oscar nominations slate ignited further indignation... the film won only best song.

DuVernay gets the most out of actors in smaller parts, including co-producer Oprah Winfrey as activist Anne Lee Cooper and Tim Roth as Republican governor George Wallace. If Roth tips into panto and the concluding montage of news photos risks over-egging the message, the righteous anger is palpable. After seeing this, you certainly won't cry yourself to sleep over the fate of white men in America.

RT Offer To order Selma on DVD for £8.99 incl p&p (RRP £19.99), call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply), quoting ref RT1667. Your contract for supply of goods is with Simply Media.

CODE CHUMPS
Ben Miller as sidekick Angus Bough in Johnny English Strikes Again, with Emma Thompson as the PM and Rowan Atkinson as the bungling secret agent says of Atkinson, who owns the red Aston Martin he drives in the film. "But he's not a snob. Sometimes he'd turn up in an electric BMW because he loves the engineering."

Legend has it that the famously perfectionist Atkinson can be exacting on set and Miller's experience suggests that hasn't changed: "When you're on the 40th take, some people do lose the will to live, but not me. I love refining things... even if there's not much difference between the first take and the last."

'On the 40th take, some people do lose the will to live'

Miller lives in the Cotswolds with his second wife, TV producer Jessica Parker, and their two young children, Harrison and Lana [he also has an older child, Sonny, from his first marriage]. His only problem is keeping up with them: "In my mid-40s I made the awful discovery that you have to do some exercise." His vice is cycling. "I've become one of those annoying middle-aged men in Lycra. When you're on a nice drive in the country, it's probably my arse you'll see in front of you."

HE'S ALSO WRITTEN his first children's novel, The Night I Met Father Christmas, to be published in November. Comedians writing children's books feels like a UK growth industry. Do they share a childlike sensibility or do they just envy David Walliams's sales figures? "My children love Walliams," he chuckles. "But this book harks back to AA Milne. It's about a boy whose dad tells him Father Christmas doesn't exist, but then he meets him."

He's now filming a serious ITV drama, The Man by Doctor Foster and Press writer Mike Bartlett, about workplace bullying. But as he and Alexander Armstrong are to host the Prince of Wales's 70th-birthday party at the Palladium next Monday (22 October), I can't be alone in hoping the pair will reunite. The good news is that it isn't impossible. "I'm sure we'll do something soon, we're knocking a few ideas around. We're waiting for a good wave to come along."

Miller does still see Armstrong, though... on Pointless. He's a big fan of the BBC1 quiz even though, as a guest on the celebrity version, the questions scuppered him. "I've been on twice. Knocked out in the first round."

GLASSES NOT INCLUDED

Six stunning proseccos for £37.74 (was £61.94) just £6.29 a bottle, saving you over £24, plus FREE delivery (usually £7.99)

All three "frizzante" styles are fresh, fruity and gently fizzy, so they're lovely on their own or with canapés.

The multi medal-winning Ca' Bolani is made entirely from premium estate-grown grapes and one of the most stylish you'll ever taste. Made in Friuli, Italy's top white wine producing region, this prosecco sings with citrus notes and a hint of apricot and pear.

Next, there is Le Calleselle, from Giorgio and Gerardo Serena's 130-year-old estate in Treviso. Now on their fifth generation of winemakers, this family combines traditional procedures with new innovations to make some of the best Italy has to offer. With stone fruit and lemon aromas, their prosecco sets a benchmark of excellence.

To round off we offer the gorgeous Il Cavallino, a real top-table fizz from our friend Paolo Sacchetto, who follows in his father's and grandfather's footsteps, working hard to produce delicious products. It's the style locals love to drink, with soft apple, pear and citrus fruit, and more of a gentle fizz... and the bottle comes with an authentic string tie on the cork!

Order this delicious prosecco half dozen today for just £37.74 – SAVE £24 – and we'll deliver it to your door, free.

Order today to get this exclusive offer!

Saturday 13

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Frozen ★★★★★
4.00-5.30pm BBC1 PG

FAIRY TALE It was released in America on Thanksgiving in 2013, and the Walt Disney Company has been giving thanks to Frozen ever since. This captivating, visually bejewelled, family-friendly musical spin on Hans Christian Andersen's The Snow Queen remains the highest-grossing animated film of all time. It's also a franchise that runs to two spin-off shorts, video games, carnival floats, books, a stage musical and Elsa outfits. You probably know the story: a young princess is cursed by a sub-zero weather-thing that plunges her generic Euro-kingdom into an eternal winter after a sibling tiff. Her frozen heart must then be thawed by an "act of true love". Its eternal appeal lies in a bold combination of having no dastardly villain but buckets of old-fashioned wisecrack Disney charm in the shape of Olaf the snowman ("I like warm hugs!") and Sven the wordless reindeer. Oh, and the Oscar-winning song Let It Go, of course. Frozen 2 is set to thaw more hearts in 2019. (US 2013, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

The character names reference the Snow Queen's author: "Hans, Kristoff, Anna, Sven" is derived from "Hans Christian Andersen"

DAYTIME

The Shaggy Dog ★★★
2.05-4.10pm C5 U

COMEDY Workaholic dad Tim Allen finds himself turning into a dog in this sprightly slapstick fantasy. Allen is hilarious as the pooch-hating lawyer who becomes genetically mutated by a bite from a 300-year-old mutt. Only the grumpiest of viewers will fail to chuckle as he begins his canine metamorphosis. It's this physical comedy that keeps the tale afloat, particularly when the plotline descends into slushy moralising about family values. SF (US 2006, HD)

Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince ★★★★★
5.40-8.35pm ITV 12

FANTASY In the outstanding sixth adaptation of JK Rowling's series, Dumbledore (Michael Gambon) lures potions professor Horace Slughorn (an entertainingly eccentric Jim Broadbent) back to Hogwarts. Harry (Daniel Radcliffe) is then charged with trying to dislodge a clue regarding Slughorn's former pupil, the future Lord Voldemort, from the teacher's memory. This is a difficult book to adapt because it is mostly concerned with setting up the two-part finale, but screenwriter Steve Kloves does an admirable job of condensing the plot without losing the emotional depth of the surprisingly adult narrative. AJ (US/UK 2009, may be edited for violence, HD)

EVENING

The Day the Earth Caught Fire ★★★
7.00-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

SCI-FI Atomic explosions at the two poles put the Earth on a collision course with the Sun in this bleak British doomsday vision. With the emphasis on the reactions of some London journalists (Leo McKern, Edward Judd) to the impending catastrophe rather than elaborate special effects, this tautly intelligent sci-fi thriller hits all the right buttons, helped by a script full of fatalistic quips and apocalyptic cynicism. It's engrossing viewing, with a memorable fade-out on two possible newspaper headlines. AJ (UK 1961, BW)

Red 2 ★★★ 9.00-11.15pm C4 12

COMEDY More globetrotting nonsense fuels this OAP espionage caper, though it is slightly better than the original. This time, Bruce Willis calls on his ageing spy buddies (including John Malkovich) to track down a nuclear device invented by a weapons genius (Anthony Hopkins) whose mental instability poses a threat to world peace. As before, the winning rapport between the stars is the film's best asset. Apart from that, Galaxy Quest director Dean Parisot takes one joke – the elderly in action mode – and mines it to death. That said, the sight of Helen Mirren in a slow-motion shoot-out still hits the spot. AJ (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

Goldstone ★★★
9.00-10.45pm BBC4 15

THRILLER Ivan Sen writes, directs, photographs, edits and scores this seething sequel to his own Mystery Road (2013). This time, Aboriginal detective Jay Swan (Aaron Pedersen) fetches up in the gold mining town of Goldstone in search of a missing Chinese woman. He's helped and hindered in his investigation by a fine ensemble that includes Alex Russell as a doughty local cop, Jacki Weaver as the bristlingly blowsy mayor and David Wenham as the boss of the sinister Furnace Creek company. Sen deserves credit for not only capturing the atmosphere of the sun-scorched outpost, but also for juxtaposing the racism inherent in Australian society with the debased pragmatism of the indigenous population. (Aus 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

The Last Samurai ★★★★★
9.50pm-12.45am Sky1 15

LATE NIGHT

The Expendables ★★
11.10pm-1.00am ITV 18

ACTION Assembling a who's-who line-up of action hero pals, writer and director Sylvester Stallone would appear to fancy himself as the head of a modern-day, musclebound Rat Pack in this over-the-top shoot-'em-up. The impressive cast (Jason Statham, Jet Li, Mickey Rourke, Eric Roberts, with cameos from Bruce Willis and Arnold Schwarzenegger) only temporarily distracts from a plot riddled with holes, clichéd dialogue and fight sequences too reliant on quick edits. TeS (US 2010, violence, swearing, HD)

Department Q: A Conspiracy of Faith ★★★★★ 12.35-2.20am BBC2

THRILLER The third film in Denmark's Department Q series of films sees cold-case detectives Morck and Assad on the trail of a missing boy, having found a message in a bottle written by the child eight years previously. The traditional detective thriller gets a darker, existential twist in a movie that takes its time unraveling the mystery. A great addition to a fine series, the most cinematic Department Q case yet strikes the perfect balance between philosophy and excitement. JL (Den/Ger/Swe/Nor 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

PICK OF THE REST...

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Now You See Me 2 ★★
9.00-11.35pm C4

CAPER The original Now You See Me was a super-slick, neon-lit introduction to the Four Horsemen (Jesse Eisenberg, Woody Harrelson, Dave Franco, Isla Fisher), street magicians with a Robin Hood vibe and a hi-tech Vegas show that draws the attention of the FBI. The sequel tweaks the booming blockbuster sleight-of-hand in new locations (New York, Macau, London) under new director Jon M Chu (Crazy Rich Asians), as the cast reunite minus Fisher, who's replaced by the sassier Lizzy Caplan. Mark Ruffalo's FBI defector puts them to work exposing software that steals data (imagine that), which brings in Daniel Radcliffe's hyperactive tech genius and reintroduces us to another old friend.

I won't reveal too much, as it's wearily all about the element of surprise, but even die-hard fans of the original may agree that it struggles in its attempts to startle, and steals liberally from Mission: Impossible. My advice? Expect the unexpected. A third part (again with Chu) is threatened. (US/UK/Chi/Can 2016, some violence, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Radcliffe's character admits that he dabbled in magic when he was at school – no one who has seen or read Harry Potter can doubt that

DAYTIME

The Tin Star ★★★★★
10.10am-12.05pm More4

WESTERN Here's a real western, a sturdy, finely wrought work from masters of the genre in their prime, with lawman-turned-bounty hunter Henry Fonda helping young sheriff Anthony Perkins to hold down his job in a town ravaged by outlaws. Written by Dudley Nichols (Stagecoach) and Oscar-nominated for best story and screenplay, it's directed by maestro Anthony Mann, who takes a linear, classic and deliberately under-emphatic approach, allowing the setting and characters to tell the story. The support cast includes faces that belong out west – Lee Van Cleef, John McIntire and the superb Neville Brand. This is an underrated must-see experience. TS (US 1957, BW)

Pal Joey ★★★
1.00-2.45pm BBC2

MUSICAL Frank Sinatra's expert delivery of some great Richard Rodgers/Lorenz Hart songs, which include The Lady Is a Tramp and My Funny Valentine, more than makes up for the whitewash here of the black-hearted hero from the stage version. Joey is now a crooner, not a hooper as on stage, and his lust for bed and bright lights has been toned down for an out-of-kilter happy ending.

Here, he's on the make for fading star Rita Hayworth – the film is showing to celebrate the centenary of Hayworth's birth – but really loves Kim Novak (in a rather pallid turn) as the heel proves to have a soul. All rather a pity, as novelist John O'Hara's original Broadway exposé deserves a more sarcastic treatment. TH (US 1957, HD)

Antz ★★★★★
1.30-3.10pm C4

ADVENTURE This charming and witty animated adventure will enchant adults and children alike. Woody Allen is the perfect choice for the voice of Z, an ant who feels insignificant among millions. He sets out to achieve something in his life by winning the heart of the colony's Princess Bala (sexily voiced by Sharon Stone). Helping him in his quest for fulfilment is Weaver, a butch soldier ant voiced by Sylvester Stallone, while Gene Hackman and Christopher Walken provide the sinister tones of villains General Mandible and his sidekick Cutter. JB (US 1998, HD)

Rio 2 ★★★
4.40-6.40pm E4

COMEDY ADVENTURE In a more-is-less sequel overflowing with songs and slapstick, macaw Jewel (voiced by Anne Hathaway) convinces her city slicker beau Blu (Jesse Eisenberg) to rediscover their rainforest roots when a flock of blue macaws is discovered deep in the Amazon. Pushing its ecological message harder than before – the birds must defend their habitat against illegal loggers – it's the same mix of colourfully frantic action, sharp sight gags and catchy musical numbers. Jemaine Clement, returning as spiteful cockatoo Nigel, brings hilarious verve to a samba rap version of I Will Survive and many will enjoy The X Factor-style jungle auditions. AJ (US 2014, HD)

EVENING

Turner & Hooch ★★★
7.00-9.00pm Film4

COMEDY In this enjoyable comedy, Tom Hanks stars as dapper California detective Scott Turner, who teams up with slobbering dog Hooch to solve a drug-related murder. The script is sometimes short on laughs, but British director Roger Spottiswoode keeps the action jogging along, and gives Hanks room to display the kind of comic timing that established his Hollywood reputation in films such as Splash! and The Money Pit. Hanks is well served by his characterful canine co-star, but Mare Winningham is wasted as the love interest. DP (US 1989, edited for violence, language, HD)

Safe House ★★★
9.00-11.20pm ITV4

THRILLER In this taut thriller, CIA rookie Ryan Reynolds sees his world turned upside down when enigmatic rogue former agent Denzel Washington is delivered to the safe house he mans in Cape Town. However, before Washington can be interrogated, the bolt hole is attacked, forcing the pair on the run. Reynolds plays the initially out-of-his-depth younger operative with a mixture of fear and feistiness, while Washington is the epitome of detached cool. Director Daniel Espinosa occasionally gets bogged down in the complexities of the plot, but is on more confident footing with a series of white-knuckle chase scenes and shoot-outs. TeS (US/SAfr 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Ray ★★★★★
9.00-11.45pm Sky Arts

MUSICAL BIOPIC Sex and drugs and rock 'n' roll (or, in Ray Charles's case, soul, gospel, blues and even a little bit of country) are the basic ingredients for a music biopic. Throw in childhood poverty, tragedy, racial prejudice and blindness and you are in danger of producing an indigestible mixture of cliché and sentimentality. Taylor Hackford's movie avoids that trap, with Charles emerging as a hugely original talent (his recordings are used throughout the film) and a sympathetic human being, despite his heroin addiction and serial adultery. This is thanks to the assured script and direction, and to star Jamie Foxx – his Ray is not just an uncanny impersonation, but a great performance for which he received the best actor Oscar. BP (US 2004, may be edited for language, violence, drug abuse, HD)

Selma ★★★
11.15pm-1.15am BBC2

LATE NIGHT

The Fault in Our Stars ★★★
11.35pm-1.45am C4

ROMANCE Adapted from John Green's young adult novel, this bittersweet tear-jerker alternates between mawkish melodrama and heartfelt sincerity. Shailene Woodley is utterly disarming as Hazel, a precocious teenager who is living a restricted lifestyle due to thyroid cancer. Reluctantly attending a local support group, Hazel is approached by an optimistic charmer named Gus (Ansel Elgort), who is in remission after losing one of his legs to bone cancer. Woodley has a smile that lights up the screen, while Elgort remains endearing despite being burdened with some mushy dialogue. Sentimental viewers will be reaching for the tissues. SC (US/Can/UK 2014, swearing, HD)

PICK OF THE REST...

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Sister Act ★★★★★
6.55-9.00pm Film4 PG

COMEDY Bear in mind that when this harmonious Whoopi Goldberg vehicle was released to raptures-high praise in 1992, the Catholic Church was still perceived as a benign, churchly institution. Like the stage musical it belatedly inspired, the film can be enjoyed in a more innocent context, as Goldberg's lounge singer is forced into witness protection and relocated to a rundown San Francisco convent where only Maggie Smith's Mother Superior knows her real situation. Dirty Dancing director Emile Ardolino, who died of Aids complications a year later, leaves a legacy of irresistible, gospel-driven energy. (US 1992, edited for language, HD)

Carrie makes Whoopi, p80

DID YOU KNOW?
The post office in Reno was used as the police station because the real thing didn't look enough like a police station for director Emile Ardolino

Pandora and the Flying Dutchman ★★★★★

3.00-5.30pm Talking Pictures TV PG

FANTASY Albert Lewin was in some ways Hollywood's answer to Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, as a purveyor of weird, exotic and often slightly barmy Technicolor fantasies. This bizarre British-made effort stars the ravishing Ava Gardner, as a woman incapable of returning the love of her men, and James Mason, as the sailor of legend condemned to roam the seas for eternity until he meets a woman willing to give up her life for him. It's an acquired taste, perhaps, but Lewin was a genuine maverick talent. AT (UK 1950)

The Rock ★★★★★

9.00pm-12 midnight Universal 15

ACTION This rousing blockbuster is set on Alcatraz, which has been taken over by disenchanted general Ed Harris and his marines, who are threatening San Francisco with poison-gas rockets. The FBI pairs chemical warfare expert Nicolas Cage with former SAS man Sean Connery, who – as the only man to escape from the island prison – is seen as their best option to break in. Director Michael Bay's boyish enthusiasm for carefree destruction is contagious and even the most cynical of viewers will find it difficult not to feel rushes of adrenaline. JF (US 1996, violence, swearing, sex scene)

Tower Block ★★★★★

THRILLER The top-floor residents of a derelict East End tower block come under attack from a psycho sniper in this riveting splatter thriller from debuting directors James Nunn and Ronnie Thompson. Aiding the nerve-jangling cause enormously are Sheridan Smith's accidental heroine and Jack O'Connell (Money Monster, Unbroken), who genially sends up his hardman persona. The stretched budget sometimes shows, but it still makes for a high-tension ride full of smart twists and turns. AJ (UK 2012, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

Total Recall ★★★★★

10.00pm-12.20am ITV4 18

SCI-FI This rip-roaring slice of sci-fi excess remains Arnold Schwarzenegger's most satisfying film since breakthrough hit The Terminator. Director Paul Verhoeven, armed with a smart script from Ronald Shusett, Gary Goldman and Dan O'Bannon (itself loosely based on a short story by cult novelist Philip K Dick), cuts loose with a gloriously over-the-top mix of black humour, ultra-violence and spectacular effects. Arnie plays the dull construction worker who is drawn into a conspiracy on Mars when a virtual reality holiday awakens long-dormant memories. JF (US 1990, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

PICK OF THE REST...

ANDREW COLLINS
FILM OF THE DAY

Jagged Edge ★★★★★ 12.10-1.55am BBC1 18

THRILLER Early Oscar speculation punts Glenn Close for a long overdue best actress award for The Wife. She was already three nominations into her career when she made Jagged Edge, an enjoyable slice of 1980s courtroom intrigue, written by Joe Eszterhas (Basic Instinct). Close is the authoritative but fallible lawyer hired to defend wealthy suspected wife-murderer Jeff Bridges. Return of the Jedi director Richard Marquand's decent, deceptive film doesn't shy away from throwing in thunder, lightning, gloved hands, torn dressing gowns, an ill-advised tryst and hair solid enough to impress Donald Trump. With luck, you may have even forgotten the twist. (US 1985, violence, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Richard Marquand directed only one more film, Hearts of Fire, released posthumously in 1987 after he died from a stroke, aged 49

The Woman on the Beach ★★★★★
6.00-7.25am Movies4Men

FILM NOIR Famed French auteur Jean Renoir regarded his seven-year sojourn in America as wasted time. Yet, in spite of the harmful cuts ordered by studio bosses at RKO, there is no denying the quality of his parting shot to Hollywood. By focusing on femme fatale Joan Bennett's highly charged interaction with blind husband Charles Bickford and shell-shocked lifeguard Robert Ryan, Renoir produced a smouldering melodrama that never relaxes its grip. DP (US 1947, BW)

Home Alone ★★★★★
8.00-10.00pm E4 PG

COMEDY This modest Christmas comedy became a phenomenal money-making machine, one of the highest grossing pictures of all time. Macaulay Culkin, then ten years old and already in his fifth picture, plays the youngster left stranded by his parents who fly to Paris for the holiday. He pigs out on junk food, watches videos and then copes heroically with two bungling burglars (Joe Pesci and Daniel Stern). Surprisingly violent in a cartoon-like way, it's a celebration of enterprise that captured the heart and wickedness of every child in the world. AT (US 1990, violence, swearing, HD)

Jack Reacher ★★★
9.00-11.25pm Sky1 15

THRILLER This brash action yarn finds military cop-gone-maverick Jack Reacher (Tom Cruise) teaming up with a hotshot lawyer (Rosamund Pike) after a sniper guns down five random victims. The police are convinced they have the culprit in custody, but Reacher suspects a cover-up. Cruise's steely-eyed and straight-faced portrayal of author Lee

Child's hero borders on self-parody, and there's more than a hint of panto villain about Werner Herzog's shady Russian crime lord, resulting in a workmanlike caper that makes for an underwhelming start to a potential franchise. TeS (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Cast a Dark Shadow ★★★
9.00-10.40pm Talking Pictures TV PG

MELODRAMA After murdering his wife (Mona Washbourne) for her money, Dirk Bogarde marries a canny former barmaid (Margaret Lockwood) who proves less easy to dispose of. When he meets Kay Walsh, however, murder is back on the agenda... This is a modest but entertaining melodrama, directed by Lewis Gilbert with a stylish and proficient cast. Lockwood, who would return to the screen only once more two decades later, is particularly effective. RK (UK 1957, BW)

Serious Readers is a British company totally dedicated to the purity of light. Whilst other lights rely on looks for their appeal rather than light output, our primary focus is on performance. A Serious Readers Light offers incredible clarity and brightness, in fact our lights are used by surgeons, forensic scientists and fine art restorers – basically anyone who needs to see clearly and accurately.

the greater the clarity

Small text is a test for both light and eye and with a Serious Readers Light this is where you'll really notice the difference. Everything looks sharper, clearer and easier to read. Fine detail is more defined and colour has a new vibrancy and richness.

ANDREW COLLINS
FILM OF THE DAY

Outbreak ★★★★★
9.00-11.30pm Syfy

THRILLER Discovering Elia Kazan's 1950 noir Panic in the Streets in the Talking Pictures TV list today, I'm reminded how infectious the contagion thriller can be. A more interconnected world feeds 1995's Outbreak, with a plot that follows the lines of a disaster movie: early portent; hysteria; the search for an antidote. As the Ebola-like virus is imported by the contractual monkey and "spreads like a brush fire", Dustin Hoffman is the grumpy virologist, assisted by Cuba Gooding Jr and the now-toxic Kevin Spacey, fighting to contain the plague amid oxygen tents, hazmat suits, hawkish military man Donald Sutherland, and, in Hoffman's case, reconciliation with scientist ex Rene Russo. (US 1995, violence, edited for some of its language)

DID YOU KNOW?
Hoffmann knew that action stars had passed on the movie, but says he wanted to play his character as an "ordinary guy", not a superman

The Guardian ★★★
6.15-9.00pm Sony Movie Channel 12

ADVENTURE This corny but thrilling action adventure is further proof that Kevin Costner is getting better with age. He plays Ben Randall, an ace US Coast Guard Rescue swimmer who's transferred to a training facility after being involved in a tragedy at sea. Among the students he's assigned is cocky Jake Fischer (Ashton Kutcher). Sure, the film is a tad too long, and the quasi-mythic elements are a bit silly, but the storm-rescue sequences are outstanding and Costner demonstrates how an action hero can age gracefully. DA (US 2006, swearing, some violence)

Fast & Furious ★★
9.00-11.15pm ITV2 12

ACTION Running on empty when not on autopilot, the fourth film in the fast-car franchise sidelines its illegal street-racing base for an exhausted drug-running plot. The tragic death of someone he loves brings Vin Diesel out of exile and back to LA, where he is forced to join up with his former enemy, FBI agent Paul Walker, if he is to nail the killer. Ignoring the prior two episodes, this weak sequel to the first film re-teams original stars Diesel, Walker, Michelle Rodriguez and Jordana Brewster in a barely credible story punctuated by scantily clad babes, macho posturing and extreme drag racing AJ (US 2009, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Scream of Fear ★★★★★
9.00-10.40pm Talking Pictures TV 12

THRILLER Hammer's first Psycho-inspired thriller is the best the House of Horror ever made. Squeezing maximum shocks from a clichéd story – a plot to drive someone insane – Seth Holt dazzles with his direction and gives Susan Strasberg her greatest role as a disabled woman haunted by her father's corpse at his French villa. Just when you think you know what's going on, Jimmy Sangster's marvellous script takes another twist into the unknown. It's shot in moody black and white, and the creepy swimming pool scene is justifiably famous. AJ (UK 1961, BW)

The Gorgon ★★★
11.05pm-12.45am Horror Channel 12

HORROR The snake-tressed, petrifying spirit of the Greek mythological creature haunts a German village by possessing one of its inhabitants in director Terence Fisher's most poetic and underrated fearful fairy tale. One of Hammer's outings that is totally unclassifiable, it relies less on its absurd story and more on provocative imagery. But, while it may fall short of the monstrous mark, the period atmosphere is powerfully evoked, made headier by the peerless Peter Cushing and Christopher Lee at the height of their dramatic authority, and Hammer's best ever femme fatale Barbara Shelley. AJ (UK 1964, violence)

Locke ★★★★★
1.30-2.55am C4 15

DRAMA Tom Hardy (currently in cinemas in Venom) gives the performance of a lifetime in this self-contained tour de force. Shot almost completely inside a car on the motorway, this slice of real-time drama is an unexpectedly thrilling treat. Hardy plays against type as construction foreman Ivan Locke, who fields a stretch of angst-filled phone calls (performed by a cast that includes Ruth Wilson, Andrew Scott and Olivia Colman). Locke is a rare hero in modern cinema, a moral action man and beacon of heroic normalcy. As well as that, he's a paean to calm – despite the pressure, he always keeps to the speed limit. KK (US/UK 2014, swearing, HD)

Nerve ★★★
9.00-10.55pm Film4 15

THRILLER This neon-bathed teen thriller is something of a mixed bag, combining exhilarating sequences with an increasingly improbable plot. Set in New York, it follows Vee (Emma Roberts), who signs up for a smart-phone game called Nerve. In order to win, players complete a series of risky dares, all of which must be live-streamed via their phone. Roberts is a likeable lead, and she has easy chemistry with co-star Dave Franco, which is key to the film's appeal. Stephen Carty (US 2016, swearing, sexual references, HD)
Niece work if you can get it, p110

The Captive ★★
9.00-11.10pm AMC (Sky 192, BT 332) 15

THRILLER When evidence emerges that a young girl (Alexia Fast) kidnapped eight years ago by a paedophile (Kevin Durand) may still be alive, a curious chain of events is set in motion. As special task force cops Rosario Dawson and Scott Speedman investigate, the girl's parents (Ryan Reynolds and Mireille Enos) suffer the trauma anew in very different ways. Cult Canadian director Atom Egoyan customises the thriller chassis with his own preoccupations, but it feels like he's torn between trying to go mainstream and repeating old tricks. LF (Can 2014, swearing)

FILM OF THE DAY

Gumshoe ★★★★★
9.00-10.40pm Talking Pictures TV 12

CRIME COMEDY The maverick detective and self-regarding private eye have been regularly spoofed, in everything from The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother to Inspector Clouseau. Gumshoe, an impressive 1971 directorial debut for Stephen Frears (Dangerous Liaisons), prefigures

Steve Martin in Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid by a decade, although instead of incorporating noir clips, it casts a likeable Albert Finney as trench-coated wannabe investigator Eddie Ginley who puts an ad for his services in the Liverpool Echo ("no divorce work") and narrates the case as if he's Sam Spade. Though essentially comic, it's shot on location in Liverpool and London in seedy cafés and dark alleys that lend the film a social-realist air, so you start to believe in Eddie when he delivers writer Neville Smith's hard-boiled dialogue, "Everybody knows you don't give no lip to big Ed." US import Janice Rule, a snarling Frank Finlay and a rare score by Andrew Lloyd Webber further augment a pretty workable gag. (UK 1971, violence, drug abuse)
Frears on film, p120

DID YOU KNOW?
The film's score was the first from Andrew Lloyd Webber and included the song Baby, You're Good for Me with lyrics by Tim Rice

Fast & Furious 7 ★★★★★
9.00-11.40pm ITV2 12

ACTION Horror director James Wan adds extra high-style brilliance to this globe-trotting instalment, which sees Vin Diesel's crew in the crosshairs of vengeful former assassin Jason Statham. The perfunctory plot exists solely to showcase the absurd but astounding daredevil action, including a parachuting car free-fall drop and a jump between the Etihad Towers in Abu Dhabi. AJ (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

Rush ★★★★★
9.35pm-12 midnight More4 15

DRAMA There's a real Cavalier-versus-Roundhead thrust to Ron Howard's zippy biopic about the rivalry between Formula One drivers James Hunt and Niki Lauda, abetted greatly by the performances from a swaggering Chris Hemsworth as Hunt and a scowling Daniel Brühl playing Lauda. The action pivots on the 1976 German Grand Prix, when Lauda crashed and burned, forcing a lay-off while he was brought back from the dead. SvM (US/Ger/UK 2013, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Assault on Precinct 13 ★★★★★
10.45pm-12.35am Film4 15

THRILLER This terrific cult gem from director John Carpenter is a model of low-budget film-making. Set in LA, it follows the siege of a nearly abandoned police station by a gang out to slay the catatonic killer of their leader, who's taken refuge inside, and forcing the occupants – death-row criminals, cops – to team up. AJ (US 1976, violence, some swearing, HD)

Ocean's 8 ★★★★★ 12
Available to own from 15 Oct or rent from 22 Oct iTunes/Sky Store

CRIME CAPER A gang of women goes after a legendary diamond necklace at the Met Gala in this all-female spin-off from Steven Soderbergh's Ocean's trilogy.

The film emerges sufficiently from its predecessors' shadow by virtue of the inspired casting. An edgy Sandra Bullock plays the sister of George Clooney's Danny, who reunites with her super-cool right-hand woman (Cate Blanchett) on release from prison so they can assemble a crew for a spectacular heist. Anne Hathaway, Rihanna, Helena Bonham Carter and Sarah Paulson all feature.

The antics are as ingenious as they are preposterous and the film strikes many of the right feminist notes. Perhaps it coasts too heavily on the novelty of women banding together to steal stuff and the script could have done with a touch more sass, but the cast are divine and the overall effect is entertainingly empowered. Emma Simmonds (US 2017, some swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

DRAMA In this literary tale set in late 1950s England, Emily Mortimer faces opposition from local "nasty" Patricia Clarkson when she sets up a radical bookshop in a backward-looking coastal town. Her only support coming from reclusive widower Bill Nighy. Sadly the film struggles to escape the constraints of Penelope Fitzgerald's source novel and ends up uninvolved and lacking its own identity. DA (Sp/UK/Ger, 2017, HD)

Writer/director, Rupert Everett also takes the role of Oscar Wilde in a revealing biographical drama that focuses on the playwright's last years after his release from jail on gross indecency charges. It's a bustling portrait of a Victorian icon coming to terms with his fate and Everett's ambitious film tries to deliver a bit of everything – it's particularly strong on the horrifying homophobic prejudice which was fuelled by Wilde's downfall. However, the film's mazy progress becomes lost in the detail, and the emotive tragedy of the man dissipates somewhere between Oscar the gay martyr and Oscar the self-destructive cynic. The DVD includes a making-of featurette. Trevor Johnston RT Offer To order the DVD for £15.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting reference RT1667. # When I'm feeling Blue

A Blue Peter badge changed my life, says Alison Graham

WHEN I WAS six or seven I wrote a poem about a deer and sent it to Blue Peter. It was terrible, of course, just a load of sentences featuring a lot of clanking doggerel, but as I say I was six or seven and I was no Carol Ann Duffy.

Besides, I'd never seen a deer in real life as I was growing up in a heavily industrialised area of the country. Which makes me wonder why I didn't write a poem about the steelworks' blast furnace I could see from my bedroom window. But I wasn't Ted Hughes, either...

Anyway, I wanted to be a poet and my mum and dad were kind enough not to tell me that (a) I would never make a living from poetry and (b) the chances are that I'd be flipping awful at it and people would run away from me and possibly call the police if I ever told them that I wrote poetry.

But I won a Blue Peter badge! It arrived in a brown envelope accompanied by a lovely letter that came all the way from London. Great big London! And from the telly, too! I was thrilled beyond words. A Blue Peter badge. Can you imagine?

Growing up in the 1960s, Blue Peter was simply the world and I looked at my Blue Peter badge the way I look at Tiffany Diamonds by the Yard now.

Thinking about it closely all these years later, that Blue Peter badge was probably the very first affirmation of what would be my career and life choice, to be a writer. My six-year-old self loved stories and made "magazines" with "free gifts" from bits of paper and I'd write all of the content myself. My mum and sister had the good grace to look impressed whenever I "sold" them the latest edition.

'Total strangers in Big London rewarded me for my writing'

I knew I wanted to be some kind of a writer, even at that age, hence the poet dream. And total strangers down in Big London, on my favourite show, rewarded me for my writing. And I'm writing about it now, in Britain's top magazine, decades later. Ah, the circle of life.

DREAM TEAM

Blue Peter is 60 years old and BBC4 marks the birthday with a night of repeats on Tuesday. I'm not sure I'll be able to watch, as Blue Peter meant so much and I think I might get a bit weepy. Too many memories. We viewed as a family, and I would hover round my mum, begging her to finish the washing-up liquid so I could use the empty bottle to build whatever it was Val Singleton had made that week.

WE LOVED THE fearless John Noakes and at school we threw ourselves into the annual Blue Peter Appeal, collecting milk-bottle tops and used stamps. And when Val, or Peter Purves or John lit the first candle on what now looks like an almighty fire hazard, the Blue Peter Advent Crown, we knew Christmas wasn't very far away.

The Blue Peter of my childhood was routinely denounced as "middle class" (this is always used as an insult in the way "working class" never is) and "cosy". But who wouldn't want their child to watch something that never induced anxiety and was a beacon of kindness?

Blue Peter is still going, of course, but I bet it doesn't resonate so deeply and so widely with kids now as it did when I was growing up. Which is a shame.

ALL IN THE WORST POSSIBLE TASTE

Oh no, I sound like the worst Victorian prude, clutching her pearls as she exclaims in horror, "For Facts Sake [Monday BBC1] is not a suitable title for a primetime BBC1 quiz show."

But it isn't, is it? It's hosted by mucky-mouthed Mrs Brown's alter ego Brendan O'Carroll (left), so people might expect a bit of ribaldry, but I don't like it. It's a nudging, smutty play on words and I will now go for a lie down because I can't believe things like this bother me so much.

1 DON'T MISS IT! Vanity Fair ITV Hub

Bodyguard is one of the top five most popular TV shows of the decade – pity the poor costume drama that was flattened by it in the ratings. This version of the Thackeray novel is worth rediscovering: Olivia Cooke (right) is tremendous as fierce anti-heroine Becky Sharp, and the whole piece is shot through with clean wit and astringent wisdom.

NEW COMEDY

5 Tourist Trap iPlayer (BBC1 Wales)

Sally Phillips is the Englishwoman brought in to revamp Wales's tourist board, in a comedy that does nothing at all new with the mockumentary format, but does it well. Among the characters are a fervently patriotic IT manager, a creepily matey marketing supremo, an information-desk warrior, and a husband-and-wife corporate liaison team who, in episode one's funniest scene, make quite a bad mistake when ordering a shipment of promotional gifts.

ANOTHER CHANCE

6 The Silent War iPlayer (BBC2)

Oodles of terrific Cold War stories here, in a documentary two-parter first shown in 2013. Talking in excitable hushed tones, former submariners reveal how the Soviet Union and the West tracked each other's movements beneath the waves, often leading to breath-holding tension and punishing feats of endurance.
Ep 1 available until 18 October

NEW SERIES, OLD TIMES

2 Armchair Britain iPlayer (BBC1)

A marvellous daytime series that should really be called Archive Britain. We visit a different part of Britain in each episode, but the joy of it – aside from Miriam Margolyes's typically spunky narration – is that we travel in time. Terrific old clips of BBC documentaries revive fascinating people and customs long since passed.

LAST CHANCE

3 Rites of Passage All 4 (C4)

Be very quick and catch up with Grayson Perry's latest thoughtful series. His re-imaginings of birth, death, marriage and coming of age are always provocative and often deeply emotional.
Available until 13 October

NEW CHILLS

4 The Haunting of Hill House

Netflix

It's a slow build of foreboding rather than a torrent of scares, but this series about a family with shared trauma creates a fine, ghostly ambience.
Available from 12 October

THEN AND NOW

7 Feminists: What Were They Thinking?

Netflix

A film that flips through Cynthia MacAdams's 1977 photography book Emergence, recalling how it captured the "second wave" of feminism by picturing women such as Gloria Steinem, Lily Tomlin and Jane Fonda as they freely expressed their identities. Talking to them now leads to strong words on what's changed and what still needs to change.

WHAT'S NEW ON iPLAYER, NETFLIX AND BEYOND

THE KIDS IN AMERICA...

8 Riverdale

Netflix

What next for this febrile teen saga, based on the Archie comics but now sprawling out in all kinds of dark and naughty directions? The chaotic second series majored on gangs, prangs and, in the cliffhanger ending, dodgy murder charges. This time around you can expect a creepy cult to add yet more intrigue to an already addictive mix. There's a new episode every Thursday.

Available from 11 October

... AND SPAIN

9 Elite

Netflix

Teen thrills from Spain, and a drama about a posh high school full of perfectly styled rich kids, who are simply aghast when three poor (but still very well-groomed) kids turn up on a scholarship programme. From the start we know this disruption will lead to someone being on the wrong end of a beating: how and why is a tangled web of romance, betrayal, blackmail and full-scale class war. Glossy, melodramatic entertainment.

10 SEE IT ALL, NOW The Bisexual

All 4 (C4)

No need to be put off by how modish and London-centric this comedy drama sounds, and to some extent is: Desiree Akhavan plays an app designer who wonders if she's bisexual, not lesbian, in trendy, literary east London. Beneath the splintered taboos and cultural references is a cracking comedy about sex, dating and the lies people tell while trying to find happiness. The whole series is up on All 4 once episode one's aired on C4 on Wednesday 10 October.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Click "like" on this perfect YouTube satire

Mockumentary-maker Liam Williams describes himself – or at least the version of himself he plays in BBC3's Pls Like – as "a man who mainly uses YouTube to watch cricket videos from the 2005 Ashes", so he seems an unlikely candidate to unravel the mysteries of the internet video giant. But this outsider's fictional foray into the world of YouTube is a work of comedic genius, delivered in delightful 15-minute doses.

In series one, Liam attempts to establish himself as a superstar vlogger, meeting new friends like lifestyle goddess Millipede and her prankster boyfriend Charlie South along the way. The characters are pulled straight from a teenager's YouTube subscription feed and a whole host of talented young comedians put a superb satirical spin on well-known vloggers.

If you're familiar with the likes of Zoella and Strictly star Joe Sugg, you won't have to guess who's lampooning whom. Don't worry if you haven't the foggiest when it comes to these self-styled "influencers", though. Pls Like is YouTube for Dummies and you may find its astute observations even funnier as a newcomer.

In the new series two, the "battle for the soul of YouTube" begins. Manager James Wirm (Tim Key) tries to undo the damage caused by several scandals by creating The Likeys, an awards show that celebrates the positive side of social media. Unfortunately, the ceremony's co-host Dump Ghost (Siblings star Tom Stourton, who steals the show) proves problematic and there's a self-styled "Millennial Conservative" encouraging a revolt online.

It tackles everything from lifestyle vlogger scams to real-life YouTube star Logan Paul's controversial decision to film a dead body. It's witty, gritty and perfectly pitched. Don't forget to like and subscribe. SARAH DORAN

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Whither the DVD extra?

Doctor Digital was settling in to watch Deadpool 2 when the description on his Amazon Fire box told him that to see the extended cut, he'd have to fast forward through the entire original version of the movie first. I was transported back to the 90s, when deleted scenes would be on the end of VHS tapes.

DVDs made extended cuts, director's commentaries and other extras part of the home movie experience – all accessible through attractive menus. But these have fallen away with the rise of streaming. While Netflix and Amazon Prime have sporadic pieces of additional content (deleted scenes from Bojack Horseman, director's commentaries on House of Cards), they're hard to find. Other than "special edition" Blu-rays, iTunes is the best DVD-like experience.

Fans are stepping up, with re-edits and other creative ventures. Audio commentaries have new life online, with Rifftrax (rifftrax.com) and Red Letter Media (redlettermedia.com) cracking jokes in time with the action. Podcasts have also taken up some slack: The West Wing Weekly (thewestwingweekly.com) goes through the show episode by episode, interviewing the stars.

But be careful what you wish for: it turned out that Deadpool 2 didn't need to be any longer than it was. JONATHAN HOLMES

ESCAPE FROM THE COUNTRY

Will worries never end for Kerry and her cousin Kurtan (Daisy May and Charlie Cooper)?

PICK OF THE DAY This Country: the Aftermath 10.30pm BBC1

COMEDY OF THE WEEK There's a huge hole in the centre of Kurtan Mucklowe's life – after the stolen vacuum cleaners debacle, he's lost his job as the bowls club's bar manager. And his replacement is photographed on the club's Facebook page "posing with my food hygiene certificate". Ah, This Country, it's so good to have you back.

But this is just a one-off 45-minute special that examines the aftermath of the criminal conspiracy involving Kurtan's cousin Kerry (co-creators and writers Charlie and Daisy May Cooper) and her monstrous dad Martin. A new series will follow, but not for a while. Kerry is behaving badly after Martin is jailed despite all of the kindly vicar's efforts to keep her on the straight and narrow. And Kurtan can't let the bowls club go...

The episode has everything we've come to expect – acute observations on the minute boredoms of small-town life, big laughs and heaps of pathos.

Rugby Union/League

12.30pm C4, BT Sport/

5.00pm Sky Sports Main Event

SPORT Rugby union's Champions Cup really gets going now, with five matches in total played today. BT Sport will have full coverage, but for the first time ever a Champions Cup match will also be shown free to air, with Channel 4 securing the rights to show one match from each round.

Bath v Toulouse (kick-off 1pm C4/BT Sport 2) is their pick of the day.

All that union action is nothing compared to the channelled ferocity expected in the Super League Grand Final (k/o 6pm Sky Main Event). 21 regular season games, seven Super 8s matches, plus a semi-final, all just to reach this point – it deserves a barnstorming ending. JAMES GILL Sport: page 33

Strictly Come Dancing

6.40pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Even  Susannah Constantine wasn't surprised that she was the first to leave the Strictly dancefloor, graciously telling the judges that they'd made the right choice. But the fact that Lee Ryan ended up in the Dreaded Dance-Off with her, despite being slap-bang in the middle of the leader board for his not-bad jive, was a shock.

It goes to show that there are all sorts of reasons why viewers vote (or not) for a celebrity and it's not simply to do with their footwork.

Let us remember, though, that Ore Oduba was in the bottom two for his foxtrot and still went on to win last year's competition. JANE RACKHAM RT's columnists: page 29

Casualty

8.35pm BBC1

DRAMA Holby Hospital is galvanised when none other than Christine Cagney, of Cagney and Lacey, strides into the emergency department and gives Connie both barrels with: "Are you the resident idiot here?"

Of course, she's Sharon Gless and she's not Christine Cagney any more, she's super-brilliant brain surgeon Zsa Zsa Harper Jenkinson, whom we've met before. She's Dylan's mentor and great friend and, tipped off by David, she's come to find her missing protégé.

Dylan, though, is lying in his houseboat, covered in vomit (there's a lot of vomiting, be warned), before he begins a strange, maundering and thus quite dull drunken odyssey with his horrible dad. AG

The X Factor

8.35pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT This year, "Judges' Houses" has been dragged out for well over three hours – that's a good two hours too many. But that's the least of its problems. The guest judges are the motliest of crews, with Ayda Williams arguably landing the best stars in Adam Lambert and Leona Lewis, while Louis Tomlinson has welcomed One Direction comrade Liam Payne and – definitely nothing to do with the fact he has a new album out – Nile Rodgers.

Simon Cowell has regressed to a reality show of old by roping in former American Idol colleagues including Paula Abdul and, because at this point why not, Robbie Williams is joined by BGT judge and singing novice David Walliams. FRANCES TAYLOR

DEATH OF THE SKETCH SHOW?

My Favourite Sketch (10pm Gold) celebrates some all-time best comedy skits, but there have been noticeably fewer sketch shows in recent years. Les Keen, who has written for The 11 O'Clock Show and The Kevin Bishop Show and is a producer on My Favourite Sketch, says there's a simple reason: money. "A sitcom can have one set and you can do the whole show there. A sketch – whether ten seconds or seven minutes – needs props, costume, locations and a set." So is sketch comedy, of the kind made popular by Enfield and Whitehouse, left, dying out? "In terrestrial TV, it probably is," says Keen, "but bizarrely, sketches are perfect for YouTube and the modern way of consuming. And the fact that they're going to be watched on small, handheld devices means you don't need to dress the space as elaborately. If anything's going to keep sketches alive, it's the internet." FT

Black Hollywood: "They've Gotta Have Us"

9.00pm BBC2

ARTS New series With Moonlight bagging an Oscar and Black Panther smashing the box office, black movie-makers are finally approaching the recognition they deserve. But it's been a hard-won struggle, as Simon Frederick's powerful series records.

This first film points to milestones along the way from Hattie McDaniel winning an Oscar for Gone with the Wind in 1940 to the rise of Sidney Poitier in the 50s. Oddly, Paul Robeson is omitted, in haste to race on to the works of Spike Lee. He, sadly, is not among the impressive contributors, but we do hear from Harry Belafonte, Diahann Carroll, and British stars John Boyega and grand dude Earl Cameron, now 101. PATRICK MULKERN

My Favourite Sketch

10.00pm Gold

COMEDY Tonight's guest, Johnny Vegas, says the only reason he's avoided sketches himself is: "It's got to be concise; it's a skill to tell a story in such a short space of time." But it's clear from his choices – The League of Gentlemen, Snuff Box, a typically surreal Vic and Bob send-up of MasterChef – that he enjoys the darker side of comedy. Some of his chat with host Sally Phillips even borders on the confessional – apt when you consider the young Vegas began training for the priesthood.

Aficionados will nod in appreciation, however, at the likes of Big Train and The Armando Iannucci Shows, and his re-enactment with Phillips (of an Alas Smith and Jones funeral sketch) is the best so far this series. MARK BRAXTON

Snowfall

10.45pm BBC2

DRAMA Young British actor Damson Idris is phenomenal in this 80s-set drama. As the clean-cut ghetto kid with big dreams, we're always on his side, even as we watch him do terrible things, up to and including lighting the fuse on the crack epidemic that will spread across America.

This may be his and the series' most effective episode yet as Franklin finally comes face to face with the story's other main protagonist, rogue CIA man and cocaine importer Teddy (Carter Hudson). It's a shame Teddy is holding a cattle prod to the younger man's throat at the time, but in the space of a day he takes Franklin from the deepest low to the highest natural high – and a glimpse of heaven. DB

The fourth and final series begins of a musical comedy, created by and starring the previously little-known Rachel Bloom, that has never coasted on success. Last year it plunged from sharp but essentially amiable romantic shenanigans into a full-strength appraisal of fragile lawyer Rebecca's mental health. Now she's on her way to prison! But she's going to sing when she gets there.

EXPELLIARMUS! Eve (Sandra Oh) fends off the assassin Villanelle (Jodie Comer) with a loo brush

Killing Eve 9.25pm BBC1

DRAMA Villanelle is at her most remorselessly ruthless as she stalks her nemesis, Eve. The two women, though they haven't met yet, properly, are developing a curious kind of co-dependency with a dash of homoeroticism.

Certainly Villanelle (the brilliant Jodie Comer) gets a strange satisfaction out of her arm's-length dealings with Eve (Sandra Oh), though that's all about to change when the pair meet at last. Villanelle has a seemingly supernatural ability to appear anywhere. But her moods can turn on a sixpence: she can be coquettish and sweet one minute, the Terminator the next, meting out eye-popping violence.

Phoebe Waller-Bridge is back on writing duties so there are some humming scenes and the most uncomfortable, dangerous shepherd's pie kitchen supper you will ever see. (The whole series is available on iPlayer.) AG

Tom's water-cooler moment

Thor ★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

When Kenneth Branagh was announced as the director of this Marvel blockbuster, he was performing in the Chekhov play Ivanov in the West End opposite Tom Hiddleston. Then little known to cinema-goers, Hiddleston revealed at Empire's 2010 Movie-Con that in order to put himself forward, he burst into Branagh's dressing room wielding a water-cooler container in imitation of Thor's hammer, shouting, "Come on, Ken, what do you think?" Branagh replied, "Darling, stranger things have happened." He ended up being cast as Thor's villainous brother, Loki. ANDREW COLLINS

First on Netflix

Apostle ★★★ Netflix

Dan Stevens is plunged into Wicker Man territory for this creepy horror thriller, new to Netflix this weekend. Set in the early 1900s, it sees him play the broody, moody prodigal son who infiltrates the island home of a religious cult with the intention of rescuing his sister. Better known as the director of martial arts thriller The Raid and its sequel, Gareth Evans jangles the nerves with oppressive dread, jump-scares and eye-watering scenes of torture straight out of the Spanish Inquisition slaybook. JEREMY ASPINALL

A WORLD AWAY

PICK OF THE DAY Doctor Who 6.55pm BBC1

DRAMA Jodie Whittaker is the Doctor, of course, but she's also like an endearingly bossy sister (older/younger, it doesn't matter), the one who will always help you out, who will always be ready with good advice, who will always be there to cheer you up with a laugh. And, of course, who will always be there to save your life.

of the opening episode, but they are quickly rescued by a couple of cynical pilots (Susan Lynch and Shaun Dooley) in ropey spaceships.

After crash-landing on a desolate planet with three suns, the little group meets a lofty potentate in a tent (Art Malik) and everyone is hurled into an allegorical adventure about catastrophe and mass-murder and ethnic cleansing. But there's a punch-the-air moment at the end. ALISON GRAHAM

International Football

4.30pm Sky Sports Football

SPORT Scotland return to Hampden Park following their long haul to Israel in the Nations League. Portugal are a far more formidable prospect, but the Sunday evening match should if nothing else entice the fans: remember that just 17,455 turned up to watch Scotland's 2-0 win over Albania in September.

Tonight they face European champions Portugal in a friendly (kick-off 5pm) – but is sparring with football's heavyweights helpful? Scotland lost 4-0 to Belgium here just over a month ago, Alex McLeish's fourth defeat in five games and the side's biggest home loss since 1973. "Harsh lessons," was how McLeish phrased that defeat. What will he learn tonight? JAMES GILL

Mediterranean with Simon Reeve

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY As Simon Reeve travels around the eastern Mediterranean, his focus is on borders: the 40-year division of north and south Cyprus by a "green zone" patrolled by the UN; the "blue line" between Lebanon and Israel that cannot be crossed; and the foreboding caged border route between Israel and the Gaza Strip.

Depressingly, nobody Reeve speaks to, whatever country he's in, is hopeful that anything will change in the future. The Arab-Israeli situation shocks him: "The two sides seem to be moving further apart," he says grimly, "and so many opportunities for real lasting peace have been lost." JANE RACKHAM

Great Canal Journeys

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY When Prunella Scales and Timothy West took to the canals in Venice in 2016, it was rush hour, and proved a hair-raising experience for the ageing thespians. They're returning to Italy but this time are pootling along some larger expanses of water, so hopefully won't get stuck under a bridge again.

They travel from Lake Maggiore along the ancient Naviglio Grande (literally "big canal"), built at the turn of the tenth century and used to transport marble and stone for the construction of the spectacular Duomo in Milan. Of course, they visit the cathedral, as well as the gardens of Isola Bella, fortified by the occasional glass of wine and much affection. JR

Still Open All Hours

8.30pm BBC1

SITCOM Kalamistan is clearly Granville's go-to place for bargains. Last week it was cheap spectacles. This week it's baked beans. He's bought up a truckload of tinned Manky Beans, so has to think up a cunning marketing ploy to shift them. Mrs Machin's (Emma Amos) revelation that her husband thinks he's abducted by aliens "every night except for Tuesday, when we go to bingo" gives him an idea.

Meanwhile, a new customer sidles into the corner shop: Mrs Rossi (Only Fools' Sue Holderness, underneath an oversized pair of sunglasses) wants to spice up her life now her Italian husband has gone. The obvious answer, says Granville, is a tin of "delizioso" beans. JR

EWEN LESLIE'S TV CV

British viewers are only just getting acquainted with Ewen Leslie (right) on The Cry (9pm BBC1), but the actor has been appearing on Australian screens for 25 years.

Unlike many actors from Down Under who find global success, he didn't come from the Home and Away or Neighbours stable. His first role was at the age of 12 in kids' show Ship to Shore – from there, he had a series of TV and theatre roles, starring opposite Cate Blanchett in a stage production of The Wars of the Roses in 2009.

Now the 38-year-old from Fremantle is starting to gain attention worldwide: as well as appearing with Jenna Coleman in the BBC1 drama, Leslie played Pyke in season two of Top of the Lake. He can also be heard in the Peter Rabbit movie and as the Police Voice in the first run of cult Aussie comedy No Activity. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Cry

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Oooh, this is turning into a very chilly and bleak psychological/crime thriller, as the world's gaze bores through bereft parents Alistair and Jo (Ewen Leslie, above, and Jenna Coleman). It's too much for the young mother, still expressing milk for a baby that isn't there, as she turns inwards and tries to escape into sleep. Jo's nightmares are frequent and vivid, but being awake is so much worse.

As the story winds back to the couple's arrival in Australia, pieces of the jigsaw start to fall into place. Later, they make a tearful television appeal for the return of their son that does nothing to dampen the suspicions of strangers: "Alistair, did you kill your son?" shouts a reporter. AG

Last Chance Lawyer New York City

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Whatever you like or dislike about this ride-along with an eccentric New York lawyer, you have to enjoy his catastrophic phone manner: "This is poor-excuse-for-a-defence-attorney Howard Greenberg – how ya doin'!" is how he starts one phone call (to the police). He opens another, "What kinda piece of s**t are you?" He also yells at cyclists ("Yuppie douchebags"), other drivers (unprintable) and his wife. But you'd rather he was on your side than not.

The jokey style – and the sense that some scenes are being played up for the camera's benefit – is at odds with the serious subject matter: tonight, a young woman accused of shooting her husband. DAVID BUTCHER

No Activity

10.15pm, 10.45pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.45pm, 12.15am)

SITCOM The two final dispatches from the Australian crime comedy go out on a high. As always, it takes the niggles that flare up between two people stuck together for hours on end – whether detectives on stake-out, bored criminals or a rich couple held captive – and turns them into bracing shots of beautifully observed comedy. In the penultimate episode, people-pleaser Stokes tries to charm a granite-faced new detective partner whose moustache he admires ("Do you mind if I touch it?"), while his usual oppo Hendy is on a stakeout with his not-so-secret crush, April. If only this cracking show had run to more than two series. As it is, it's a hilariously polished gem. DB

In My Skin

from 10am BBC3

A comedy drama written by Kayleigh Llewellyn, about a 16-year-old girl who projects the image of a perfect, happy life at school, but who is dealing with all the usual insecurities and anxieties – and is coping with an unusual and difficult domestic set-up to boot. Can she keep up the pretence? Aiming to provide a piercingly realistic portrayal of modern Welsh adolescence, the series isn't afraid to go to some dark places.

ACTING UP

Max (Callum Booth-Ford) worries his parents, Vicky (Anna Friel) and Steve (Emmett J Scanlan)

Butterfly

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA New series Eleven-year-old Max (Callum Booth-Ford) is a fragile-looking, sensitive boy who's teased and bullied at school. He can't bear to use the boys' loos and consequently wets himself. At home, he dresses as a girl and swishes around his bedroom.

But he's a deeply unhappy child who is desperate to be part of a normal family again after his dad walks out. Max's distress becomes so acute that his parents, Vicky and Steve (Anna Friel and Emmett J Scanlan), are forced to sublimate their unhappiness to very different degrees for the sake of their boy.

Writer Tony Marchant treads through the minefield of gender identity in children in a drama that will doubtless both polarise and infuriate. Is Max using his confusion to manipulate his parents? Or is he unbearably unhappy, not being the girl he wants to be? AG

Leaving catch-up

This Beautiful Fantastic ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Downton's Jessica Brown Findlay stars here as a would-be writer whose junkyard garden unwittingly leads to a friendship with her grumpy neighbour (Tom Wilkinson). Brown Findlay is difficult to swallow as a quirky misfit, but Wilkinson is decidedly believable as a spiky old widower and adds zest to their chalk-and-cheese friendship. With its sumptuous cinematography and gentle pacing, this is the cinematic equivalent of a pleasant stroll. JAMES LUXFORD

For the love of Marty

The Family ★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

This black farce is worth watching if only for the postmodern sight of Robert De Niro – playing a fictional Mafia don relocated with his family to rural Normandy – discussing the veracity of GoodFellas at a local film society event. Fanboy producer/director/co-writer Luc Besson describes his film as “a love letter to Scorsese”, which is only right when the French book the film is based on is titled Malavita, which translates as Badfellas. Marty himself gave it his blessing, signing on as executive producer. ANDREW COLLINS

Batty about Batman

The Dark Knight trilogy from 3.00pm Sky Superheroes

Comic-book adaptations took on a darker hue with Christopher Nolan's Batman trilogy, paving the way for the likes of Gotham. Christian Bale plays the crimefighter with more unresolved issues than Arkham's nuttier inmates, and that character conflict makes his crusade all the more compelling. JAMIE HEALY

PICK OF THE DAY Autumnwatch New England 8.00pm BBC2

NATURE For the past decade or so we've sat at home comfortably watching Britain's native wildlife as brought to us by the Autumnwatch team. We may never have seen an otter or an osprey in real life, but through Autumnwatch they've become as familiar as a robin to us.

As it's perhaps time for something a bit more exotic, Chris Packham, Michaela Strachan and Gillian Burke are in New England to witness the spectacular explosion of intense colour as the leaves change from green to gold, scarlet, purple and orange. Americans often brag that everything is "bigger and better" in the US but in this case it's true. It's breathtaking.

These forests are also home to moose sporting massive antlers, black bears on a feeding frenzy before winter, and the elusive bobcat. The team report every night until Thursday, when they learn about gangs of turkeys roaming the streets. That's something else we don't get at home. JANE RACKHAM
See feature: page 14

Wartime Farm

2.45pm BBC2

DAYTIME CHOICE "Guns, tanks and men in uniform," is how Ruth Goodman reckons most of us think of the Second World War, but it was when the British countryside came into its own. With merchant shipping being torpedoed, farmers had to double food production.

In this living history series first shown in 2012, Alex Langlands and Peter Ginn join Ruth on a Hampshire farmhouse to re-create the experience of rural life during this period, rolling up their sleeves (and getting an odd, pre-rationing, bacon and banana dinner in return). They clearly respect the fortitude of those who lived on Churchill's "frontline of freedom", although Henry the sheepdog isn't doing his bit. JR

Uefa Nations League

7.00pm Sky Sports Main Event/
7.30pm Sky Sports Football

SPORT This is easily England's biggest challenge since the World Cup. Spain ran out 2-1 winners at Wembley, and now welcome the Russia 2018 semi-finalists to Seville for the Nations League reverse fixture (k/o 7.45pm Sky Main Event). You could argue there is no better test for Gareth Southgate, who needs to evaluate how his still-developing squad can go about challenging the elite sides in world football.

Northern Ireland, too, head into an away tie having lost at home (k/o 7.45pm Sky Football). Bosnia and Herzegovina were 2-1 winners despite being pressed back for much of the match at Windsor Park.

JAMES GILL

Food Unwrapped

8.30pm C4

FOOD Food allergies have been in the headlines recently following the death of Natasha Ednan-Laperouse after she went into anaphylactic shock from eating sesame seeds in a baguette. Kate Quilton discovers even food that appears totally harmless might be lethal because of contamination during manufacture.

Meanwhile, Matt Tebbutt investigates why it is so difficult to find fresh blackcurrants in your local supermarket – a short shelf life and a certain soft-drink manufacturer provide the answer. And Jimmy Doherty is in Turkey, where most of the world's oregano is grown, to find out why the country harvests 9,000 tons of dry oregano leaves but exports 15,000 tons of it. Eh? JR

Black Earth Rising

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA "I'm bound to wonder what it is, exactly, this is really about," says a character at one point tonight, echoing the thoughts of viewers everywhere. The way Hugo Blick's absorbing drama about the legacy of the Rwandan genocide keeps shifting and re-focusing feels like a test of our powers of concentration.

The best analogy I can think of is that it's like jazz plotting, full of brilliant improvisation – tonight there's a great car chase across Hertfordshire – but it's hard to tell what the tune is meant to be. The best thing is probably just to sit back and enjoy the cool scenes and lines and characters. And the fact that, finally, Kate (Michaela Coel) goes back to Rwanda. DAVID BUTCHER

Nick (far right) is in the dog house on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV), with Peter, Toyah and David (right) all annoyed to see him back in town. Even Gail – who always had a borderline Norma Bates-style fascination with her own son's love life – is berating him for neglecting his family. Any more of this and Nick will be wanting to head somewhere more peaceful and relaxing. The killer quicksand that he once almost found himself buried in, perhaps. I swear that every other week on

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Emmerdale (7pm ITV), Sarah is getting wheeled out for her heart transplant only for something unexpected to happen that stymies the operation (the heart is unsuitable, Faith Dingle kidnaps her etc). Tonight, Sarah is on the move yet again and mum Debbie is in tears, but I think that the writers should now go for broke and have Sarah be taken on an impromptu tour of the local streets in her hospital bed, like in the opening titles to The Monkees. DAVID BROWN

Old People's Home for Four-Year-Olds

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY You'll have read in RT about the friendship forged between 87-year-old Ken and Lily, four, during this life-affirming experiment. We see their burgeoning delight in each other's company tonight when Lily celebrates her birthday and Ken is invited to meet her mum and dad for a family tea party.

"Lily has somehow got attached to me," says Ken, a lovely, kind man, as he sits down to birthday cake. "You've no idea how proud this makes me, it's really special."

Back at Lark Hill, the OAPs and their new young friends are tested on memory in a maze. And friendships between the older residents blossom with the arrival of chickens. AG

Barneys, Books and Bust Ups

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY In 1980, Anthony Burgess and William Golding were both shortlisted for the Booker Prize. Burgess refused to attend unless he was told beforehand if he'd won. Organisers refused and Burgess sulked in a hotel room, later giving a peevish television interview: "This is a rather small parochial prize suitable for small parochial novels." (Golding triumphed with Rites of Passage.)

A terrific documentary is packed with great stories like this from writers, critics and the people who run the Man Booker Prize, as it is now. The judging and the ceremony itself are routinely hot-beds of gossip and intrigue. This year's winner will be revealed tomorrow. AG

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: Wed 11.45pm)

QUIZ This picture-themed episode opens with one of the show's best visual gags in years, with each panellist – this week it's Noel Fielding, Joe Lycett and Australian comedian Hannah Gadsby alongside Alan Davies – dressed as a famous work of art, down to some hilarious details.

To say much more would deny the pleasure of being surprised by each contestant's reveal, but suffice it to say Noel Fielding pulls off his disguise incredibly well, and you'll never look at Joe Lycett in the same way again. Still, once the fun is over and the costumes are shed, it's down to business with a non-controversial question – what did Picasso get so wrong? HUW FULLERTON

Family Cooking Showdown 7.00pm BBC2

FOOD The Showdown returns after an overhaul: judges Rosemary Shrager and Georgio Locatelli and presenters Zoe Ball and Nadiya Hussein have all gone, to be replaced by Michelin-starred Yorkshire chef Tommy Banks and Celebrity MasterChef winner Angellica Bell.

There are no visits to the competing families as they dine at home, which was always a pointless meander, but the basic challenges remain the same, as does the premise of the show – watching competent home cooks cooking, well, competently. It's not the Bake Off.

In another innovation, the Showdown runs nightly in the 7pm slot with families falling by the wayside if they don't measure up. In the first episode four teams try to rise to the £10 challenge with a brunch and a pasta bake with a twist. There is much talk of "passion", as always on cooking series. ALISON GRAHAM Angellica Bell: page 162

A rockumentary that fully delivers on its promise of explosive anecdotes and archive interviews crackling with awkward tension, as it remembers the worst fallouts in pop history, from Simon and Garfunkel to Fleetwood Mac (above), and from the Police to the Beatles. ### Carrie makes Whoopi

Sister Act ★★★★★ 6.55pm Film4 FREEVIEW
We're all familiar with this comedy (see Film of the Day, p40), but did you know that the late Carrie Fisher worked as a "script doctor" on it? Star Whoopi Goldberg brought her in to "Whoopify" her lines. Having polished her own dialogue in the Star Wars films and earned praise for her novels, Fisher was brought in to work on Hook, Lethal Weapon 3, Outbreak (Film of the Day, p43) and The Wedding Singer. As an actor, she said she relished the "different kind of respect" her writing gave her, and, according to Drew Barrymore, was often hired to "write the girl's part". ANDREW COLLINS

New to Netflix

Contagion ★★★★★ Netflix
A mystery virus triggers a global pandemic in this taut and intelligent thriller, which arrives on Netflix today. Director Steven Soderbergh's subplot-hopping ensemble piece features an exemplary cast that includes Marion Cotillard, Jude Law, Laurence Fishburne and Kate Winslet. But it's Matt Damon who stands out as the seemingly immune husband of Gwyneth Paltrow, whose business trip to Hong Kong appears to be the key to understanding a virus that threatens to infect millions. TERRY STAUNTON

Picking up the pieces

Shattered ★★★★★ My5
FREE TO VIEW

Tom Berenger wakes up after a horrific car accident with amnesia and attempts to put his life back together again with the help of private detective Bob Hoskins. Greta Scacchi co-stars as the femme fatale who may or may not be trying to kill him, in a film brimming with bluffs and double bluffs. JOHN FERGUSON

HE'S A LONDONER
One mistake sends Raza (Nabhaan Rizwan) down a dangerous path

PICK OF THE DAY Informer 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series At one point in this new thriller, grizzled cop Gabe (Paddy Considine) says wryly to another cop, "We all have to make sacrifices to win the war on terror, John." And that's the nub of the story, set in a fast-changing east London where young British-Pakistani man Raza (Nabhaan Rizwan) falls into Gabe's clutches following an arrest for possession.

Gabe runs a web of informers for a counter-terror unit, hoping to trace an Islamist cell with links to a recent bombing. The first episode ducks and dives, but we know it is leading to the point where Gabe will recruit Raza to his cause, with the help of his sharp-witted new detective constable (Bel Powley).

Around that spine, the story fleshes out in an enjoyably complicated way, with intriguing minor characters and tangy dialogue ("I'm not trying to bleed the Matrix, blud, just get me out," Raza tells his lawyer), but it's clear, things will soon get ugly. DAVID BUTCHER

Love Your Home and Garden

8.00pm ITV (N Ireland: 12.10am)

PROPERTY Husband and wife Mike and Anne have been virtual prisoners in their Hemel Hempstead home ever since Mike was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease and then dementia. Now 76, he has serious mobility issues, needing Anne's help with the simplest of tasks, and getting to their garden via perilously steep steps is no longer possible.

All Anne wants is to be able to lead a more normal life, but Alan Titchmarsh and his team find some clever ways to restructure their home and garden so that she and Mike get a lot more than that. The reveal brings tears to her – and our – eyes. It gets Mike's approval, too.

JANE RACKHAM

The Great British Bake Off

8.00pm C4

FOOD In another Bake Off first, it's Danish week, and Sandi Toksvig is delighted. But the five remaining contestants aren't so thrilled, as the pressures of the quarter-final start to bite, hard.

There are a lot of tears in yet another stiflingly hot summer day in the tent, as Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith make some real gloves-off comments. "They are really harsh today," says one damp-eyed amateur baker.

The "hugely difficult" (Prue) technical challenge involves a specific piece of kit, while the showstopper is an endless nightmare of rolling, folding and chilling to make a celebration cake. ALISON GRAHAM

Landscape Artist of the Year

8.00pm Sky Arts

ARTS Bill without Ben, Richard without Judy, Bonnie without Clyde – how will Joan get on without Frank? For the latest series, Joan Bakewell is joined by new co-host Stephen Mangan at Fountains Abbey in North Yorkshire, where they open with a deluge of divine puns.

Mangan quickly establishes himself as affable, funny and as reverent towards art as his predecessor Frank Skinner. And the charm of the series remains, watching the slow emergence of finished pictures, the judges' insights and the artists themselves – including one whose initial submission took three months to complete. Today he has four hours.

DAVID CRAWFORD

Celebrity Hunted

9.15pm C4

REALITY To raise money for Stand Up to Cancer, eight celebrities are going on the run. But this isn't a 5k jog in the park – this is the run. Being chased by the fearsome crack team of Hunted investigators, the aim is to avoid detection for 14 days. Dom Joly, AJ Pritchard and Louis Smith are among the celebs being traced – although there are some names you'd be happy not to get found (Sky News anchor Kay Burley is also among the fugitives).

Meanwhile, starting tomorrow is a nightly series of five-minute shorts featuring people's real-life stories about cancer: Friday's sees Mark Gatiss open up about losing both his sister and mother to the disease.

FRANCES TAYLOR

Sharon and Keanu on EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1, right) are trying to work out who knows about their illicit relationship, which unfortunately takes the emphasis away from plans for the minicab business. It's a shame, as I had a whole scenario mapped out: Keanu starts up Keanuber with Sharon getting saucy on the switch (cue Frankie Howerd eye roll: "Ooh yes, darling, we always go all the way"), only for the Slaters to set up the rival Kat Kabs with an angry Big Mo in the office ("You wanna go where in Soho? You dirty ol' perv, don't call again!"). It'd be like Carry On Cabby for millennials.

Holby City's (8pm BBC1; Scotland: Wed 10.45pm) resident murderer Professor Gaskell is being plagued by memories of his victim Roxanna – and in a neat parallel, his latest patient just happens to be a notorious killer who needs to know whether visions of the family he killed are down to his conscience or a brain tumour. What are the chances, eh? DAVID BROWN

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.15pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Adventurer Randi was the first Norwegian woman to climb Everest. She's also among a select few solo female subjects in New Lives. Ben joins her within the Arctic Circle, on her 8.5-acre island set in the fjords. Her house is like a pioneer's cabin – so that means no heating, and balaclavas at bedtime. "I love the cold," she says, which is just as well.

Ben soon reveals he's planning to scale Everest himself. But instead of the programme segueing into a Rocky-style training montage, his hostess gives him some straightforward advice: "just be happy". And Randi lives by her own words: she rarely stops beaming. Frozen isolation, it seems, is severely underrated. GARY ROSE

Later Live... with Jools Holland

10.00pm BBC2

MUSIC You get the feeling the only way is up for electro-pop singer Sigrid. She's got "star" written all over her (baby) face. Last year on Later, she did a stripped-back version of her debut track Don't Kill My Vibe, but it was the later single Strangers that really shot into orbit, with its killer pneumatic bassline – and more than 38 million YouTube views.

Paul Weller made his Later debut three years before Sigrid was born (sorry Paul), and is the show's most frequently featured artist. Tonight he's appearing with a string quartet. He might be putting a mod spin on a few Mozart tunes. But more likely he'll be playing tracks from his "pastoral" recent album True Meanings. GR

Imagine...

10.45pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.10pm; Wales: 11.45pm)

ARTS You don't have to be a great fan of contemporary opera or George Benjamin's work to find this Imagine interesting. Benjamin is a major figure: he has been knighted for services to music and his operas are performed around the world, but he remains far from a household name.

Here, cameras sit in on rehearsals for his latest opera, Lessons in Love and Violence, and we hear how Benjamin was "consumed by music" as a child: we see his colourful lettering on the score of the first opera he wrote, aged eight. "Bedtime was six o'clock and I remember saying to my mother, 'Can I have five more minutes to make up another tune in my head?'" DAVID BUTCHER

IT'S TOUGH TO CARE

Challenged parents Emily and Simon (Jessica Hynes and David Tennant)

There She Goes

COMEDY DRAMA New series

Bathtime, bedtime and eating up are familiar battlegrounds for any parent. But for Simon (David Tennant) and Emily (Jessica Hynes), even the simplest routines are hugely difficult: their nine-year-old daughter Rosie can't form sentences and they have the scars to show how uncooperative she can be. But what makes this so authentic is the searing honesty of Shaun Pye's scripts, based on his own experiences, which intercut between 2015 and flashbacks to 2006, when all seemed OK and you could still smoke in pubs.

Emily's bonding difficulties, Simon's coping-mechanism jokes and the familiar domestic rows such things generate are shown in the raw. But so are the moments of breakthrough and love that have woven their way into the rich tapestry of this believable family unit. BEN DOWELL

Ghost Rider ★★

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW
Hollywood loves an Australian import – ask Hugh Jackman, Nicole Kidman or anyone called Hemsworth – and since emigrating to the States, force of nature Rebel Wilson has built up some great anecdotes. For her US debut Ghost Rider (playing “girl in alley”), she was told not to look star Nic Cage in the eye. “He came up to me and I said, ‘Wow, you look really good,’ and touched his hair and realised it was a wig,” she told Graham Norton. “He was really angry! That was my first Hollywood experience.” ANDREW COLLINS

Prime viewing

Crowhurst ★★★★★ Amazon Prime

The strange tale of tragic round-the-world sailor Donald Crowhurst has all the elements of a gripping movie. Indeed, it has already been told in cinemas earlier this year, with Colin Firth in The Mercy. Shooting on a tiny budget, director Simon Rumley’s version of events creates a claustrophobic and disturbing portrait of a man driven to madness. As portrayed by Justin Salinger, Donald is a broke and broken man, but we don’t know how broken until he leaves dock, in a boat he can’t sail, in a race he can’t win. DAMON WISE

Happy birthday, Angela!

Bedknobs and Broomsticks ★★★★★

12.45pm Sky Disney
Angela Lansbury turns 93 today, and she enchants as an apprentice witch in this family favourite. The grande dame of Disney would go on to voice Mrs Potts in the studio’s 1991 Beauty and the Beast as well as appear in Fantasia 2000. She will next be seen in Mary Poppins Returns, in cinemas at Christmas. JAMIE HEALY

PICK OF THE DAY The Apprentice 9.00pm BBC1

REALITY This week, the two teams are christened, finally. I've missed the traditional brainstorming scene where candidates earnestly chew over names that sound like rejected baddies from a sci-fi franchise, but it arrives, in slimmed-down form, tonight, as the teams – now with genders mixed – settle on Typhoon and, er, Collaborative. Yes, they've named their Apprentice team after the one thing Apprentice teams never are.

That's not the last odd decision, either. Still, in their defence, the candidates have been woken up at 4.30am on the first day of the task ("The cars will be outside in 20 minutes") and 2am the following morning, in order to design and bake a range of high-end doughnuts to sell around London. "They're artisan!" cries one project manager, to explain why her team's products look, if you're being kind, like ashtrays. Still, it beats the doughnut with chilli sauce squirted on it, which one bright spark suggests they market as "Fire in the Hole". DAVID BUTCHER

Bad Move

8.00pm ITV

SITCOM Regulars to this rural sitcom won't be surprised that the prospect of a charity dine-off with Matt and Meena, to raise money for a village defibrillator, thrills Steve to bits. "I can't wait to have an intimate evening with those two quinoa-eating tosspots," is how he puts it.

Judging by Matt's critique of Nicky's meal, he's clearly watched too many Great British Menu-style TV shows. "Just one word..." he says authoritatively: "seasoning." There's a gloriously awkward, if obvious, scene where Steve gets his own back and an unexpectedly neat sight gag involving Grizzo, but once again Philip Jackson steals the show with his portrayal of Steve's grumpy father-in-law. JANE RACKHAM

The Supervet

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY We're used to seeing pets limp into Noel Fitzpatrick's practice needing bionic surgery on their legs or spine, but Bow, the seven-month-old labrador, has a different medical problem. She dribbles urine everywhere. Specialist Gerard McLauchlan suggests laser surgery might cure it, but there's only a 50 per cent chance of success.

Elsewhere, while waiting for surgery on his elbow joints, springer spaniel Luka has an accident and the elderly newfoundland Iver is brought in, having collapsed in his garden. His owners really hope Noel won't advise putting him to sleep. "The older the patient, the more passionate and caring the families are towards that animal," says one of the staff. JR

Trust

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA One of the minor characters in this tale of the 1970s super-rich is Bullimore, John Paul Getty's poisoned manservant. It's a lovely performance from Silas Carson, who has hinted at Bullimore's emotional hinterland in his growing friendship with the gardener. Tonight, that goes further: watching the way the starchy Bullimore dances off duty is a joy.

But that's just a minor, well-sketched subplot. In the main story, Getty (Donald Sutherland) is being measured up for a waxwork by the man from Madame Tussauds when he hears that his grandson's body has been found on an Italian beach. For once, he is shaken. "This can't be! This is not how you negotiate!" DB

The Parachute Murder Plot

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Victoria Cilliers was fortunate to escape with her life on a skydive when she jumped out of a plane at 4,000 feet, but crashed to the ground after both her main and reserve parachutes failed to open.

Victoria Cilliers's husband, Emile, was subsequently convicted of attempted murder – Fiona Bruce hears police tapes from the months-long inquiry. Cilliers's attempt to kill his wife was hard to prove, says the senior investigating officer, and the prosecution barrister agrees: "There was no direct evidence, which is quite different from a case where you've got direct DNA evidence; it's pretty straightforward. This wasn't." ALISON GRAHAM

Victoria (Isabel Hodgins, right) on Emmerdale (7pm ITV) has hired a private investigator to find Adam, who hasn't been seen since he went on the run after coming third on I'm a Celebrity...Get Me Out of Here! Presumably, the PI has crossed the Australian jungle off his list of possible locations? Seeing as Adam Thomas hasn't been headlining many 9pm ITV dramas since his exit, I'm keeping my fingers crossed for a Christmas return. Just imagine: Victoria puts past grievances to one side and opts to marry Matty, only for Adam to burst in at the last minute, aghast that his estranged wife is marrying his brother (who he's only known as his sister).

Ryan and Ali on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) took a while to bed in, but they've finally found their feet, now that mum Michelle has become their protector. Could Corrie be going for a Peggy/Grant/Phil dynamic? It looks that way – if Michelle can stop Ali from leaving tonight. DAVID BROWN

Grand Designs

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY Kevin McCloud sees double this week when he meets identical twins Nik and Jon Daughtry, who run a graphic design company together.

But that's not all – they also drive the same type of car and own identical dogs. And now they want to build two near-identical houses next door to each other in Sheffield.

It's a highly ambitious build, of course, on a tight budget (again, of course), and proves a testing project for the close siblings.

They want to build houses raised up on steel stilts, on the site of an old corn mill. There will be huge steel frames and exposed blockwork and materials and the finish must be perfect... AG

Magic Numbers: Hannah Fry's Mysterious World of Maths

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Hannah Fry certainly puts herself through it in this series. Here she braves the world's fastest zip wire to explain Newton's laws of force and motion, though she says that the director came up with the idea in a meeting without her. "I should have been at that meeting," she laments before plummeting headfirst down the wire at 75mph.

Elsewhere she's on safer ground, literally if not conceptually, as she considers infinity – and the strange idea that some infinities are bigger than others. Through it all she carves a straight line showing how maths has changed our lives. DAVID CRAWFORD

Taskmaster

9.00pm Dave

COMEDY Once again we get a set of fairly hopeless tasks (throwing things over a fence into a bin marks a new low) and half-baked responses to them, but it's still one of the funniest episodes this series has produced.

A high point is James Acaster's furious rant at Rhod Gilbert after they've fallen out on a challenge that involved building an extension to the Taskmaster House. "I don't know how you've been friends with him for so long!" Acaster raves at Greg Davies.

The comic energy is at such a pitch that at one stage a panellist briefly risks life and limb (well, limb anyway) in what could have been a series-ending accident. All this, guacamole, a trouserless Steve Austin and "a gravel-voiced gimp". DAVID BUTCHER

SCENE STEALING

Zapped

10.00pm Dave

COMEDY The woes of Brian Weaver (James Buckley) continue into a third series as his befuddled Earthling is now trapped in a "travelling Amazematorium" in the mad fantasy land of Muntz, doing the bidding of a cruel ringmaster played by Steve Coogan. That it's such a sharp return to form for this underrated, beguilingly inventive comedy is partly down to the decision by the writers to plonk perhaps its best character – Paul Kaye's wizard Howell – at Brian's David Brent-style workplace in suburban London.

Howell's amoral mischief-making is always extremely funny, but his temporary transfer offers a useful corrective, a welcome handle on our own familiar world and a respite from potential weirdness weariness. Buckley is a brilliant foil for the mayhem – but as this show has gone on, his character is fast becoming part of the Muntz furniture. BEN DOWELL

Educating Rita ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

This film is a joy from start to finish, thanks to Willy Russell's crisp adaptation of his stage play and the lead actors' divine suitability for their roles. Julie Walters is great as the sassy working-class heroine who's eager for higher learning but smart enough to spot the foibles of her tutor at a hundred paces. Michael Caine also enjoys one of his best roles as the drink-sodden lecturer on his own road to enlightenment. Walters brings genuine warmth to her part and, like Caine, deservedly received a Bafta for her performance. SUE HEAL

Two tales in one

Nocturnal Animals ★★★ Netflix

Tom Ford followed up his 2009 debut A Single Man with this brutal and intelligent thriller, new this week on Netflix. Effectively two films in one, it begins with art gallery owner Amy Adams taking delivery of the debut novel by her ex, Jake Gyllenhaal. As she reads, Ford takes us into her mind, imagining Gyllenhaal as the story's mild-mannered hero, who turns avenging vigilante after his wife and daughter are kidnapped. Unusually for a film with two timelines, both are gripping, but in very different ways. DAMON WISE

Strangeways Here We Come ★★★ Sky Store

A raggle-taggle bunch of Manchester high-risers band together to bump off and bury a vicious local loan shark in this black comedy. It's a bit of a hit-and-miss affair, and hardly the best of British, but is lifted by a quality cast of TV faces (including Michelle Keegan) and its slick production values.

ON CALL
Paramedics Glynn and Andrea have a busy weekend in Manchester

PICK OF THE DAY Ambulance 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Marion, who's 95, fell in her home and has spent two hours on the floor on one of the hottest days of summer. But she's endlessly cheerful and is fascinated by paramedic Glynn's many tattoos as she chats away amiably. "Who wants the honour of picking me up?" she chirrup, before thinking about having a cigarette. "I've smoked from being 19, I'm not going to give it up now."

It's the start of another excellent series with an episode that's full of these little vignettes, small illustrations of lives lived happily despite great age and lives lived not so happily, like the young man found unconscious in the street after he's taken an unspecified substance.

This time we're with the North West Ambulance Service in Greater Manchester but, though the geographical location has changed, things are very much the same for hard-pressed crews and dispatchers as the calls pile up. ALISON GRAHAM

Eat Well for Less?

8.00pm BBC1

FOOD The Venters are a real Jack Sprat family. They never all eat the same meal so it's chaos in the kitchen. Mum Kim doesn't eat meat and admits her cooking is bland; she and lorry driver husband Martin don't eat carbs at night (but he sneaks unhealthy service station food on a daily basis); while their teenage sons insist on meaty dinners with tons of pasta or potatoes.

This confusion of meals generates a massive shopping bill. While Gregg Wallace and Chris Bavin want to reduce that, for once they're less concerned about unhealthy eating habits and more interested in getting the family to eat the same – hopefully tasty – meals.

JANE RACKHAM

Avalanche: Making a Deadly Snowstorm

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY For people interested in documentaries about large quantities of snow on the move, this is just the job. Professor Danielle George promises that the experiment she and a group of scientists are rigging on a mountain in Canada will, if it works, "revolutionise" our understanding and be "a milestone" in avalanche science.

While the rigging goes on, the professor, who has a long-standing dread of being buried alive, does an experiment where snow is piled on top of her. When she hyperventilates and has to be dug out, weeping and traumatised, you feel for her, but you also wonder if she was the best person for that job. DAVID BUTCHER

Gordon, Gino and Fred: Road Trip

9.00pm ITV

FOOD You need a strong stomach to watch this edition about the bickering trio co-hosting an oyster festival in France. Nothing to do with the seafood, though. It's the sight of Fred Sirieix and a very embarrassed Gordon Ramsay prancing about a nudist beach wearing teeny tiny Speedos – while Gino D'Acampo is wearing nothing at all.

The tomfoolery continues with Gordon chilling his pants in the icebox (what is it with these guys and underwear?) and Gino stealing Fred's special roquefort cheese.

It's all very silly but it's hard not to giggle as Fred tries to make a cocktail while the others bob up and down on bar stools. JR

No Offence

9.00pm C4

DRAMA Joanna Scanlan as DI Viv Deering is the heart of Paul Abbott's police drama, but there's quality all over the cast. Tonight, series three ends with the usual box-of-frogs plotting and a chance for minor characters to shine. Viv is activating a plan to entrap the crooked mayor by convincing her that the gunman who helped her win the election (by pretending to try to assassinate her – keep up) is still alive.

Meanwhile, we know that forensics guy Miller's faking of evidence will come home to roost at some point – and that point arrives with maximum jeopardy. And Abbott writes a plotline for the DCI involving a gents' toilet stall that sums up the series in one mad moment. DB

Whenever I talk to someone who hasn't watched EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) in 25 years, the joke they usually make is: "Is Doctor Legg still in it?" He's up there with Ozcabs, Sharon's pink fluffy jumper and Ethel's little Willy when it comes to things that instantly evoke the soap's brown-wallpapered, Dirty-Den-vaulting-the-bar early years. Well, now when I'm asked that very question, I can answer with a resounding "yes" since actor Leonard Fenton (now aged 92) is back to be reunited with co-star June Brown

(a mere 91) as Dot seeks a second opinion on her health worries. No word yet on whether Mary the Punk and Kelvin Carpenter will be following in his wake, but I'll keep you posted.

Meanwhile, on Doctors (1.45pm BBC1), Rhuma makes an error that puts a baby at risk. And Heston tries to help an unfaithful husband win back his wife with a vasectomy. Presumably the garage was out of prosecco and those resealable bags of Maltesers?

DAVID BROWN

Get Shorty

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Former hitman Miles (Chris O'Dowd) has done an on-the-job apprenticeship in most aspects of Hollywood film-making by now, but not the very specific hell of editing. Or in this case, re-editing The Admiral's Mistress after the mess the European art-house director made of it.

So Miles is stuck in the edit suite, taking Adderall to stay focused, with a day to produce something watchable. "Turns out you can only watch something three or four thousand times before you lose all perspective," he growls, miserably.

Meanwhile, cartel goon Yago has a neat idea to raise the funds their operation needs – rob a Hollywood mansion! If only he appreciated the value of what he finds. DAVID BUTCHER

Child of Mine

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

It seems strange to say it, but this superb film about stillbirth – as well as being very sad – is positive, too, in a way. We follow couples dealing with the pain of having a baby stillborn (the bravery of what the couples are prepared to go through on camera is extraordinary) and we learn some of the medical dilemmas involved.

Watching Cambridge couple Vicky and her partner Bruce in the aftermath of delivering their stillborn baby Ruby – Vicky remarkably calm, Bruce in pieces – is very moving. Later, Vicky is devastated: "I physically ache for her," she says. "The rest of the world keeps turning but... My world has stopped turning." DAVID BUTCHER

Women on the Verge

10.00pm W

COMEDY DRAMA Journalist Laura, furious when the column she craved was taken from her by her married boyfriend/boss and given to an "influencer", is becoming a little bit wearing. Certainly, therapist Dr Fitzgerald (Sharon Horgan, co-creator of this brittle sitcom) can barely keep her head out of her hands as self-absorbed Laura (Kerry Condon) rambles on and on about her problems after last week's disappointment, when her brother refused to let her be godmother to her new nephew.

But as Laura becomes more whiny and annoying, her friends Alison and Katie (Eileen Walsh and Nina Sosanya) hit their stride and step out of her shadow. So all is not lost, not yet. AG

NUCLEAR FAMILY

Friends Raj, Sheldon, Leonard, Penny and Howard are moving on

The Big Bang Theory

8.30pm E4

SITCOM Growing up, settling down and having kids all resulted in Friends being put out to pasture. And with our nerd-friends at a similar stage in life, The Big Bang Theory now embarks on its own last series.

On Sheldon's honeymoon with Amy (after they were married by Luke Skywalker, let's not forget), he is quickly removing the romance by diarising their intimacy the way a CEO would schedule a conference call.

Back in the flats, Leonard and Penny find Amy's quiet dad Larry hiding from his bossy wife (Kathy Bates), and Penny is upset by Leonard's comparison of their marriages.

In traditional Big Bang order, that just leaves Howard and Bernadette (the former upsets the latter), and Raj (his TV appearance backfires).

It's fun to have the gang back. We can only hope the writers concoct more engaging storylines than those that afflicted the final days of Friends. MARK BRAXTON

9.00 Avalanche: Making a Deadly Snowstorm

RT Eight months ago a team of scientists gathered in a remote valley in the Canadian Rockies with the express intention of triggering a massive avalanche. Each year these lethal occurrences kill hundreds of people, and climate change seems to be making them even less predictable. Horizon watches as experts, including presenter Professor Danielle George, prepare a series of cutting-edge tests in the hopes of understanding more about why and how they happen. Alongside the main experiment, the programme interviews survivors such as Johno Verity, a snowboarder, who was being filmed when an avalanche started right beneath his feet. The climax, though, is what happens when the explosions are detonated and over 1,000 metric tons of snow rushes down the mountainside. See page 102.

Niece work if you can get it

Nerve ★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

It's not uncommon for Hollywood award recipients to thank God in their speeches. But few thank their auntie. In Emma Roberts's case, she owes it all to her paternal aunt, Julia Roberts (sister of dad Eric), who helped swing her ten-year-old niece some "extra" work in America's Sweethearts in 2001. Nickelodeon's Unfabulous brought her teen fame on her own merits, leading to Wild Child, Valentine's Day (starring her aunt), We're the Millers and recurring roles in American Horror Story and Scream Queens. The 27-year-old heads the cast in thriller Nerve tonight – see review, p43. ANDREW COLLINS

Beautiful in any language

Is Mise Courgette (My Life as a Courgette) ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Originally a French-language production, this stop-motion animation can be found among the BBC Alba content on iPlayer, showing in Gaelic with optional English subtitles. First appearances suggest it to be another quirky children's film, but it reveals itself to be a heartbreaking story about a boy who becomes an orphan after a tragic accident. With its eye-catching design, this is a beautiful movie that's not afraid to deal with tough topics. STEPHEN CARTY

Still looking sharp

Halloween ★★★★★

9.00pm Sky Halloween

John Carpenter practically patented the slasher genre with this simple but horribly effective suburban horror. The film builds to a series of bloody crescendos, as Jamie Lee Curtis tries to avoid a masked killer's attentions. And Curtis returns to the role in a new Halloween, in cinemas tomorrow. ALAN JONES

ROOM AT THE TOP
Paul Rose climbs the Lakeland hills that have been his home for 20 years

PICK OF THE DAY The Lakes with Paul Rose 8.30pm BBC2 (Wales: Sat 20 Oct)

DOCUMENTARY New series The ever-cheerful, irrepressible TV explorer Paul Rose strides into home territory as he starts a four-part series on his beloved Lake District, where he's lived for 20 years.

Rose accomplishes all of the things a television presenter does in jolly shows like these – he has a go at something (in this case steering one of the pleasure cruisers that takes up to 1.6 million tourist passengers a year on a tour of Lake Windermere); he gets involved in a beloved local tradition

(he has a flutter on hound-trailing, an event that dates back more than two centuries); and he chats to someone who has an unusual hobby (a formidable wild swimmer).

But there's a brief look at a dark part of recent world history as Rose talks to a gentleman who survived the Holocaust and was one of 300 Jewish orphans brought to the Lakes to start a new life in Britain in 1945.

The Great Model Railway Challenge

8.00pm Channel 5

ENTERTAINMENT Due to C5 supplying us with the wrong material, we previewed this episode last week. So tonight really is the globetrotting challenge as new teams stroll into the modelling shed for the second heat, and it's hard going.

"I've pushed myself to the limit, mentally and physically," says one competitor after he's decorated a series of teeny-tiny beach huts.

Walking Britain's Lost Railways

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY The route from Burnham-on-Sea to Bath was a challenge even for those clever Victorian engineers. The tracks had to cross the marshy Somerset Levels (a very costly business) and then the rocky hills of the Mendips, which required the construction of four tunnels and seven viaducts. That 26-mile stretch alone cost the equivalent of £35 million today, so no wonder the company building the Somerset and Dorset line went bust.

There's an air of "lost worlds" on Rob Bell's picturesque walk (and cycle ride), but it's when he can match the shape of the countryside to what he sees on his map that he gets most excited. JANE RACKHAM

Grantchester

9.00pm, 10.00pm ITV3

DRAMA These repeats are from the start of series three last year when, for my money, Grantchester hit its stride, with several melancholy storylines dovetailing sadly in 1950s Cambridgeshire.

Dashing vicar Sidney (James Norton) is in love with the ill-used Amanda (Morven Christie), but spends the series wrestling with the dilemma put to him by purse-lipped housekeeper Mrs Maguire (Tessa Peake-Jones): "You can't be a vicar and be with her. You can't marry a divorced woman... Sooner or later you'll have to make a choice."

In the meantime, there are cases to solve: the first involves a spate of murders, the second a poisoning at a cricket match. DAVID BUTCHER

A Discovery of Witches

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA The course of true love never did run smooth, but the romance between American witch Diana Bishop and very old French vampire Matthew Clairmont has reached a perilous stage. Matthew, who has returned from England, where he learnt something critical about Diana's DNA, has been around long enough to look after himself (as his brother points out, they did fight together at the Siege of Acre during the Crusades). But are Diana's own powers strong enough to protect her from the other witches and vampires who are after her secrets?

Long gone is the honeyed stone of Oxford. Now there's a chill, grey look to things, and the pair's lives can never be the same. GILL CRAWFORD

Little more than 12 months ago, Ken Barlow was being really mean to Sinead Tinker in Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV), blaming her for ruining his son Daniel's life and effectively pressuring her into having a termination. Fast-forward a year and Ken will now become Sinead's confidant as she reveals all to him about her cancer diagnosis. What next? Tracy and Leanne going off for a pamper treat for two at the local spa? Peter and Nick belting out a Righteous Brothers duet on karaoke night at the Rovers? EastEnders (8pm BBC1) finds Dot and Doctor Legg at the Queen Vic fondly reminiscing about all those good times on the Square, all of which must have happened off screen. As far as I can recall, the Walford GP spent most of his time in the mid- to late-1980s dealing with Arthur Fowler's breakdown, the death of Sue Osman's baby and Dot's spiralling hypochondria. But those were the days, eh? Pass the sherry bottle. DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

The Life and Death of Sam Cooke

9.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY A lot of us know Sam Cooke's songs (You Send Me, Another Saturday Night and A Change Is Gonna Come, among others) and maybe even that he was shot dead in a Los Angeles motel in 1964, but perhaps not so many of us know his full story. This engrossing, feature-length documentary delves into the conspiracy theories about that night, his Chicago roots, his dealings with the shady manager Allen Klein and his involvement in the civil rights movement, as well as his musical legacy.

Listening again to his silky-smooth voice, it's obvious why this charismatic young singer was known as "the man who invented soul". JR

Would I Lie to You?

9.30pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT It must be a good sign that whenever the klaxon goes to signal the end of another episode of WILTY?, there's always a stab of disappointment. It's usually towards the end of a show that the comedy crossfire is hotting up, the mockery is in full flow and the guests have got the measure of each other.

Tonight, there are barbed moments along the way, including Sara Pascoe referring to David Mitchell as a "minor celebrity" and Lee Mack's reaction to the sheer tightness of Rylan Clark-Neal's jeans. With a couple of philosophical digressions from Mitchell and some crazy claims (was Rylan once mugged by a fox?), it's a good all-rounder of an episode. And then the klaxon goes. DAVID BUTCHER

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1

CHAT SHOW We're a few episodes into the latest series of The Graham Norton Show now and the Hollywood heavyweights just keep on coming. The always entertaining Sir Michael Caine and engaging and witty double Oscar winner Sally Field bring the star power this evening as they both drop in to promote their new books.

They're joined on the sofa by Outlaw King actor Chris Pine and Rami Malek, the man tasked with stepping into the shoes of the late, great Freddie Mercury in the new Queen biopic Bohemian Rhapsody. And there's music with a regal theme from Christine and the Queens. SARAH DORAN

Synth and Beyond with Stephen Morris and Gillian Gilbert

8.00pm BBC4

MUSIC In tonight's specially curated clipshow, New Order's drummer and keyboardist – and married couple – banter on a sofa about their, and their band's, musical influences. Some are obvious: Kraftwerk ("Playing drums with knitting needles: that was the future," asserts Stephen); Soft Cell in their Bedsitter days ("You can't not like this," says Gillian); and Magazine. Others, not so much: Candi Staton and Captain Beefheart, anyone?

The time Stephen got mistaken for Stevie Wonder and Gillian's punk journey are great anecdotes, while New Order's angry performance of Age of Consent for Radio 1 in 1984 is given context ("We turned up late").

It's low-key Friday-night fun, with plenty of self-deprecatory laughs, not too much "wincing" at the past and a rather neat Bowie-to-Bowie symmetry. MARK BRAXTON

BEDSITTER HEROES Soft Cell's Marc Almond and Dave Ball are among our curators' favourites

Making a Murderer

Netflix

True-crime fans love to receive updates on where the subjects of their favourite documentaries are now, or what effect new scrutiny of their cases has had. Here's a revisit of the show that started the current craze: convicted murderers Steven Avery and Brendan Dassey are followed, over ten new episodes, in their renewed efforts to clear their names. Will a fresh injustice be done if they fail?

Frears on film

Gumshoe ★★★★★

9.00pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Of all the grumpy British directors I've met, only Alan Parker and Mike Leigh topped Stephen Frears. I remain a fan of all three. The Frears brand guarantees a certain eminence – recent triumphs include Victoria & Abdul and A Very English Scandal – but who remembers his debut Gumshoe (Film of the Day, p44)? A spoofy pulp fiction with Albert Finney as a bingo caller turned private eye, it has a moody atmosphere and is incredibly faithful to the Bogart thrillers its hero admires. The director would go far, albeit irascibly. ANDREW COLLINS

Heroism on replay

The 15:17 to Paris ★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

The story of a thwarted terrorist attack on a European passenger train in 2015 is retold in bizarre fashion here, with director Clint Eastwood interpreting a real-life example of American heroism as a right-wing fantasy. The trio of soldiers who saved the day by overpowering a Daesh operative play themselves, but their lack of acting talent grates throughout. The end result is misfiring propaganda-lite that would arguably have struggled to secure a release were it not for Eastwood's star power. TERRY STAUNTON

A seaside Scarface

Brighton Rock ★★★★★ 5.30pm TCM

This adaptation of Graham Greene's novel is one of the most sinister crime films ever made in Britain. Richard Attenborough turns in the best performance of his career as Pinkie the teenage gangster, and he is magnificently supported by the underrated Carol Marsh as gullible waitress Rose. DAVID PARKINSON

Any Questions? Is 70
Saturday 8.00pm Radio 4

WHEN I FIRST started on the programme in 1987," says Jonathan Dimbleby, host of Radio 4's Any Questions?, "it would be inconceivable that a bottle of wine wouldn't be consumed and shared before we went on air. Maybe more." The drinks would be served with the pre-show "light supper" Dimbleby still enjoys with panellists, often very well-known politicians, before they spend 50 minutes answering the public's questions on the week's main political issues.

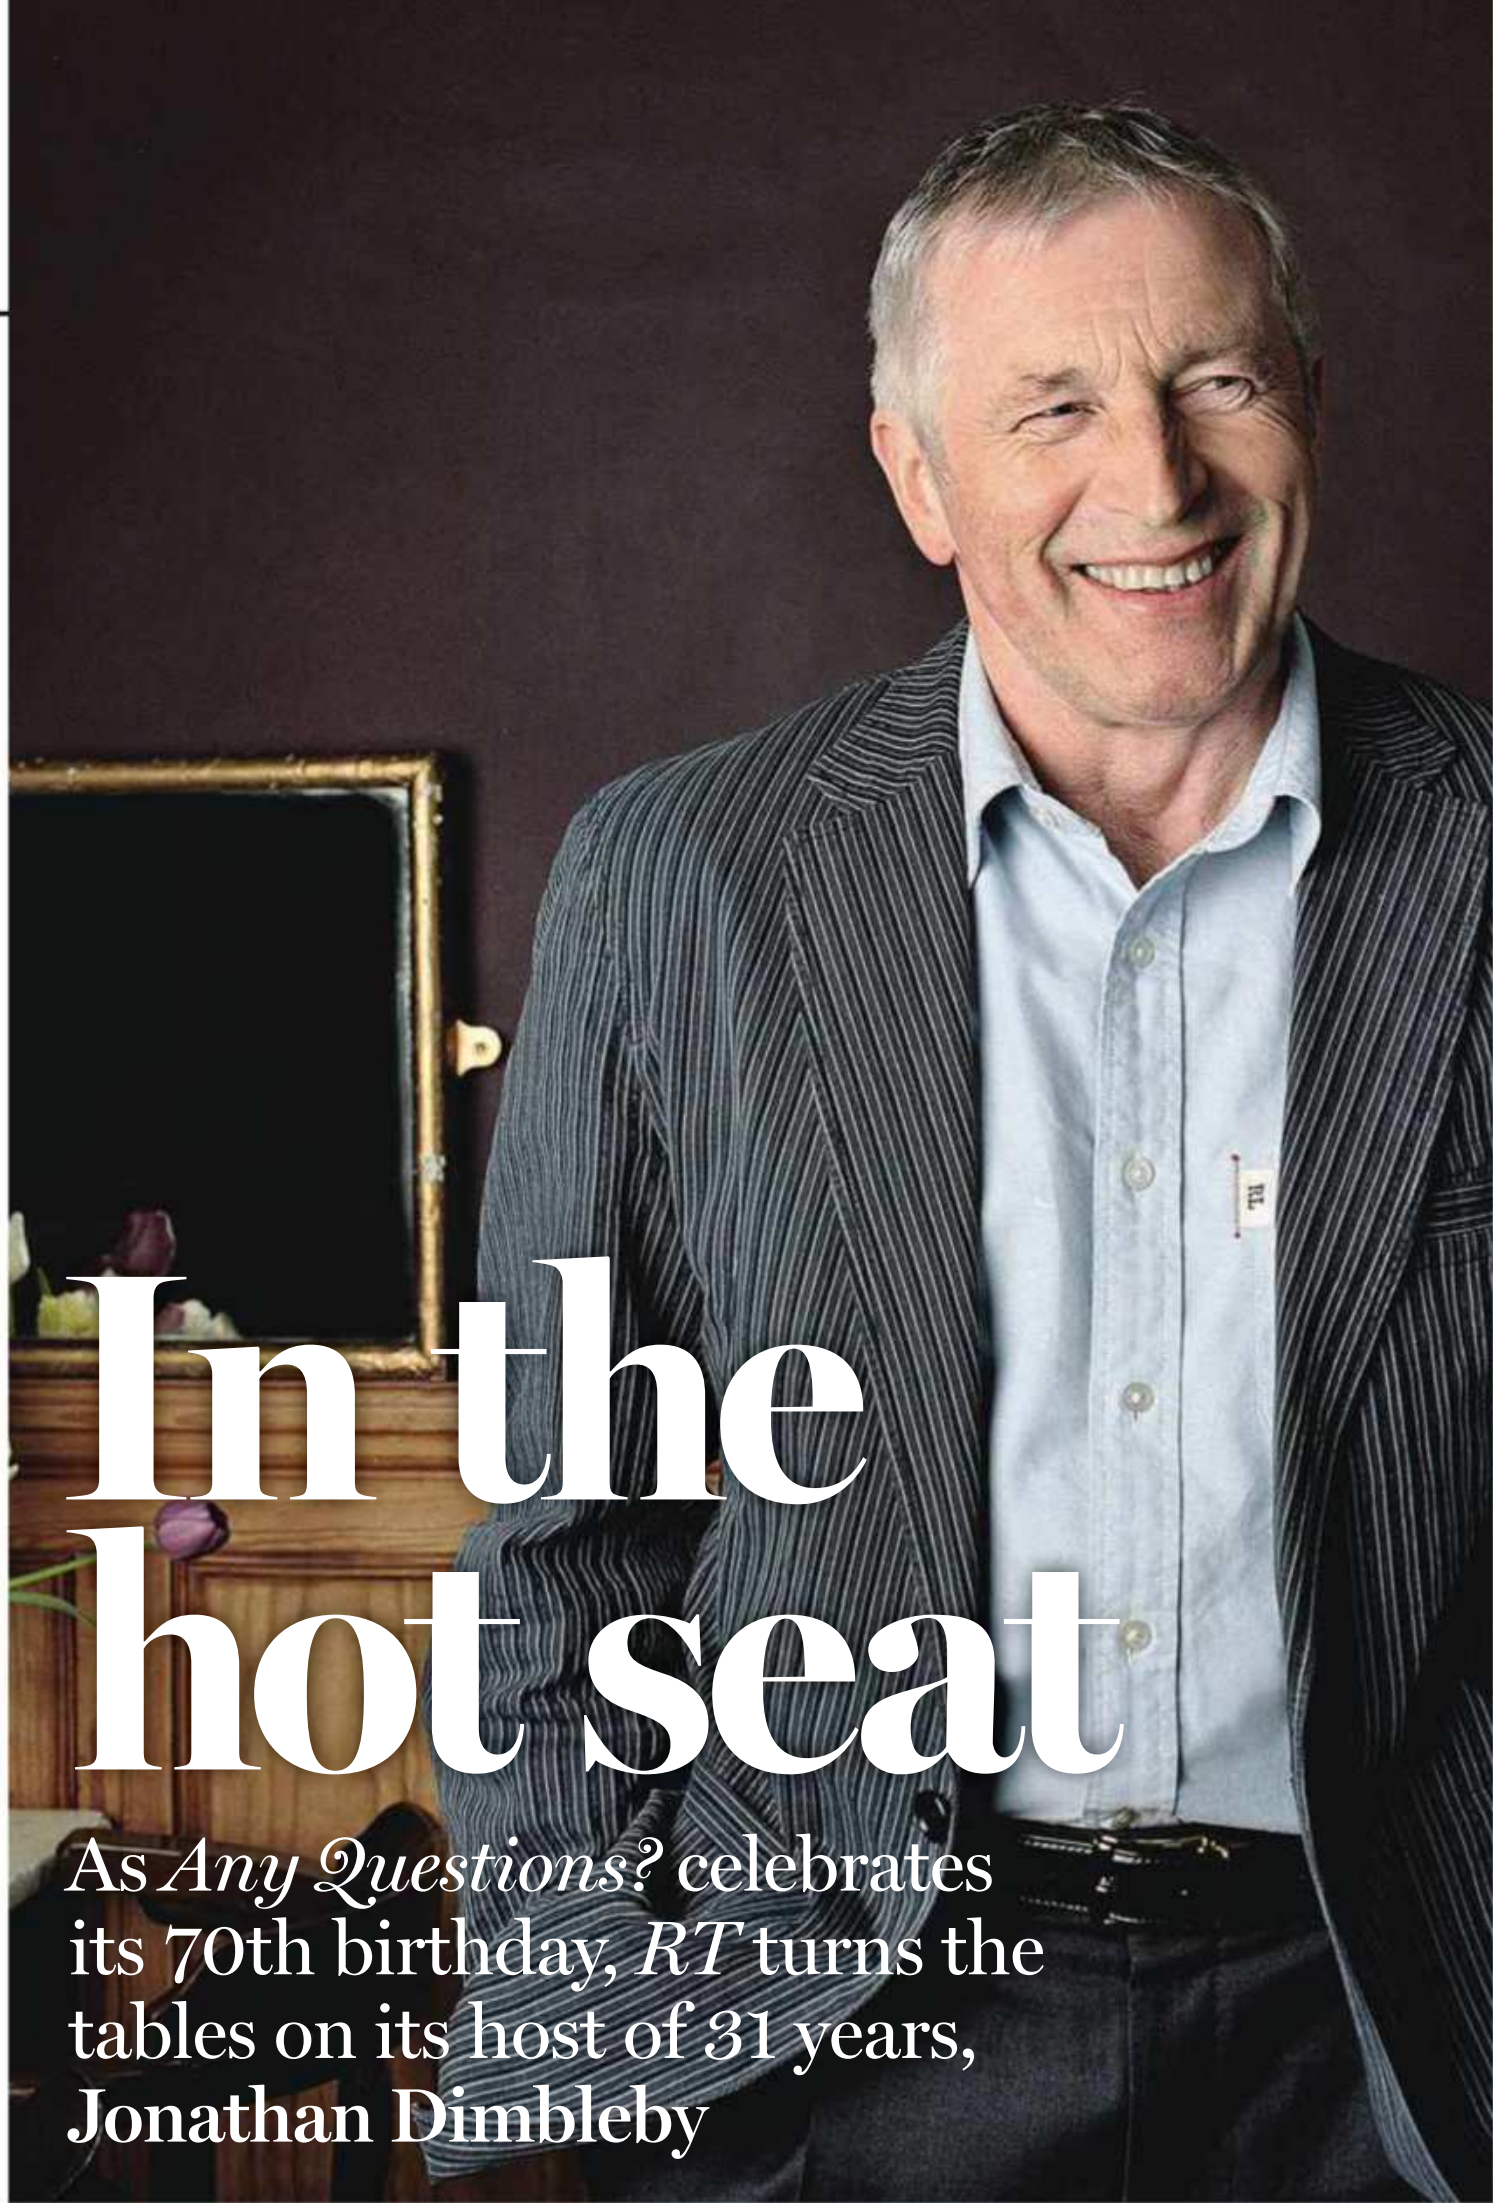

Today, as the venerable programme celebrates its 70th year, things are no longer quite so convivial. "Now, a drink is very rare indeed," Dimbleby says. "Recently we did have one young man on, who was very ideologically committed, and who asked for a glass of 'fizzy wine' – and good for him! But that culture has shifted." It's not the only thing that has shifted, says Dimbleby, son of broadcaster Richard Dimbleby, as we meet in the Bristol home he shares with his second wife, Jessica, and their two young daughters.

The quality of discourse has also suffered since he took the Any Questions? seat, cheapened by, among other things, the effects of social media. "Social media is so often deeply anti-social," says Dimbleby, who at 74 is wiry and animated. "It has a corrosive effect on political debate. In the old days, telegrams used to cause a great deal of mutual aggro, because you were brief, terse. Likewise, today, when you start tweeting, you use language that is fit for that purpose, but it's not fit for political discourse. Debate generally has deteriorated in almost direct proportion to the amount of stuff that is uttered. We get more and more words and fewer and fewer thoughts."

'I would be delighted if a woman replaced me'

I presume he's talking about Any Questions? audiences, but in fact he means politicians. "The language of politics has deteriorated sharply," he says. "The courtesies, that dryness when people express disagreement, has been replaced by a coarseness of language." Dimbleby won't hear a word against the audiences. "They are far less deferential than they used to be," he says. "Yorkshire audiences especially are incredibly direct. I find that East Anglian audiences are quieter." He admits it can be "unsettling" when they mix after a show. "Occasionally people get very cross, and you have to be very careful, if your adrenaline's inflamed, not to say, 'For God's sake, don't you understand?'"

As Any Questions? celebrates its 70th birthday, RT turns the tables on its host of 31 years, Jonathan Dimbleby

So, which politicians have lowered the tone of the national debate? Boris Johnson? "It's hard not to have sympathy with those in the Conservative Party who say that it's inappropriate for a former foreign secretary to use the language he has used. You have the same ferocity within the Labour Party. It degrades public discourse."

It wasn't always thus. Dimbleby cites the Conservative veteran Kenneth Clarke as an exemplar of more civilised times. "When he was a minister he'd come on and say things that weren't government policy. I'd question him and he'd say, 'Jonathan, you don't have me on the programme to defend government policy, do you?' I love that independence of mind. There

Whether it's Hunstanton or Halifax, every Friday Dimbleby and a producer go through the audience's submitted questions by hand, looking, says the self-proclaimed "upper-middle-class, professional, white Anglo-Saxon" for diversity and, especially, for women. "We want to make sure not all our questions come from one gender," he says. "We've evolved. We're not stuck in an 80s time warp."

Dimbleby is now one of the corporation's most senior broadcasters. His older brother David, 79, is leaving Question Time after 25 years, with the shortlist of possible replacements thought to be mostly women. Should the same happen to Jonathan? "I've no plans to go but I would be delighted if it was a woman who eventually

PICK OF THE WEEK

The Changing Sound of Radio
Saturday 9.00am Radio 4 Extra

Chris Watson (below) is a true radio pioneer – a sound recordist whose work has adorned Radio 4 for many years. Specialising in location recording, his skills shine through on the series Natural Histories, but he has turned his attention to such diverse subjects as the walks taken by Benjamin Britten, Newcastle railway station and the landscape of Iceland.

If there is art for art's sake, then surely there is sound for sound's sake, and that's the lesson one might take from this three-hour sonic extravaganza, over which Watson presides. It's a history that takes us from Watson's childhood recordings in the late 1960s right through to the podcast era of today.

Archive treats include a 1996 documentary Orchestra under the Waves, a chilling 2010 drama The Ditch, and, from 2004, a celebration of quarter-inch magnetic tape, Fifteen Inches per Second. With his death earlier this month, it's poignant to hear Beatles recording engineer Geoff Emerick describe the process by which he achieved the effects on the Sgt Pepper track Being for the Benefit of Mr Kite.

Watson, we learn, has his own footnote in pop history. He was a member of the experimental Sheffield band Cabaret Voltaire, and fondly recalls the time John Peel played them. With this show, Watson has another hit on his hands.

LONG RUNNING

Jonathan Dimpleby has hosted Any Questions? since 1987. Below: the cover of RT in October 1958, with host Freddie Grisewood, marking the tenth anniversary of the show programme sometimes, I think that interviews are cut to the quick." Does he tell the high-ups at the BBC? "I bang on about it all the time. The response is very sympathetic: 'You're quite right, Jonathan.' And you know that it's going to go into the discard tray. But I don't spend my life writing in green ink to them."

The first ever Any Questions? came from Winchester on 12 October 1948. In 1956, at the height of the Suez Crisis, Any Questions? was listened to by many millions of people every week. Now it's just 1.8 million. "But still," Dimpleby points out, "one of the biggest audiences in radio, week after week."

HE TAKES ACCUSATIONS of bias to heart. A few days before we meet, the right-wing radio host Iain Dale, appearing on Any Questions?, suggests that the BBC is biased because the programme doesn't have enough Brexiteers on the panel. "Iain was being mischievous," Dimpleby says. "But I don't like that. There are lots of grounds, from time to time, for criticising the BBC, but sometimes people seek to undermine it or damage that important commitment to public service broadcasting. If we didn't have the BBC, where would we be? Answer: lost. It gets my goat when people come on and say, 'Oh, this is the perpetually biased BBC.' It's b*****s."

Although I can guess, I don't know for sure if

'I feel frustrated by Today... interviews are cut to the quick'

Dimpleby is a Brexiteer or Remainer. Which is how he likes it. "I'm an impartialist. I strive to be impartial." Occasionally he has to "self-censor". Recent arguments about the right to criticise Israel without being called antisemitic have troubled him. "My father's most famous broadcast was at the liberation of Belsen concentration camp. It's compellingly and unspeakably powerful. I gave a speech at Holocaust Memorial Day and said that the reason why we have to remember these things is so it should never happen again. But the war was also fought for democracy and freedom, and that means freedom to criticise. And it is very dangerous to conflate criticism of the state of Israel in its actions with antisemitism."

I wonder what his father would have made of modern broadcasting. "I think he would have adapted very, very easily to modern journalism. As for the moral temper of broadcasting, I don't know. I think he would be very disappointed horse racing wasn't on BBC1. But he would have loved Bodyguard." MICHAEL HODGES replaced me, so long as the woman is judged, by men and women, to be good," he says. "It would be embarrassing for any good female broadcaster to have a crap broadcaster who happens to be a woman."

Dimpleby praises the BBC at every opportunity, but worries about the time the broadcaster gives to interviews. "The forensic long-form interview has virtually disappeared. Now it's rarely more than 15 minutes. I find that frustrating; I think we're short-changing the listener and the viewer. I do feel frustrated by the Today

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Not just for locals

You don't have to be in London to hear me

AS PREVIOUSLY DETAILED ON this page, one of the misconceptions about LBC is that it's a local radio station in London. It started out that way, but now you can hear it all over the world online, and across the UK on DAB, gismos, aortic valve replacements and by standing close to grain silos.

Don't feel embarrassed if you're not up to speed. The other day Conservative MP Kenneth Clarke joined us in the LBC studio for a chinwag about something to do with Europe (I forget what. It was quite urgent. Damn my memory) and he told me he didn't normally do local radio. I embarked on my spiel about us being nationwide (see above) and he was terribly impressed, or at least gamely gave that impression.

While he eschewed local stations, in common with many constituency MPs he made an exception for his own local outfit – BBC Radio Nottingham – for which he had the highest praise. As I'm sure you know, local radio produces some of the best radio but it's often unsung. The famed connection between broadcaster and listener is often stronger when they're nearer to each other.

Brilliantly, having managed to tempt Mr Clarke onto our local/national airwaves, thanks to a car mix-up that even the worst local radio station would be ashamed of, we managed to leave the Father of the House waiting in Charing Cross Road for a considerable length of time post-chat. Every time we glanced out of the window he was there, scanning the traffic for his taxi. I fear he might still be there. I bet Radio Nottingham never leaves him stranded.

'YOU'RE NOT AS GOOD AS EDDIE'

In the gushy world of showbusiness you can be sure that insincerity is the most sincere form of sincerity. And I mean that most sincerely. People arriving in new jobs are never described as being good, they're fantastic. Greats become icons and titans become gods. Especially enjoyable is when you know for a fact that two people loathe each other but in an official statement they're obliged to heap praise on each other's fabulousness.

It's against that background that I want to say a word about Evan Davis's appointment to PM on Radio 4. Evan's comment, "Having survived several years of people saying, 'You're not as good as Jeremy Paxman,' I now look forward to people saying, 'You're not as good as Eddie Mair,'” was typically self-effacing and funny.

If I can be candid, and as ungushy as possible, I happen to think Evan has a broader and deeper range of talents than I can offer. He can also balance his chequebook, whereas I struggle to explain exchange rates. And as a listener, I very much missed him when he left Radio 4's Today.

So it's a win-win-win as he gets to join the fine

'Evan has a broader range of talents than I can offer'

PM production team and they get someone of Evan's abilities. The third win is the listeners.

The only downside is – I don't know if you've heard on the grapevine already – that Radio 4 is now a local radio station and no longer available in your area. Something to do with transmitter changes and digital download destruction. And by the time the BBC paid for the BBC2 redesign, there was no cash left for radio. Plus ça change.

Anyway, I hope you can find some alternative to your usual Radio 4 listening. Let me check the listings to see if there's a lively speech station you might enjoy...

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

Alistair Cooke – a tough act to follow

On 2,869 occasions between 1946 and his death in 2004, Alistair Cooke sat down in the BBC's New York studios to record his Letter from America. Its running time was 14 minutes. Cooke read each letter as though 14 minutes was all the time in the world. The first time I was asked to do a "write and read" piece for the BBC, the producer told me to follow the pace of Cooke's delivery. I could never quite manage it. To read like Cooke, you had to be confident that listeners were hanging on your every word.

Hollywood Babylon

It's rare now to hear a speaker on the radio taking their time as Cooke did. Podcasting, on the other hand, has provided a new home for the deliberate or long-winded. People listening while walking the dog or tethered to an exercise bike don't mind content that goes on a bit, as long as it does so in an interesting and elegant fashion. Karina Longworth has made her name with You Must Remember This, which delves into "the secret and/or forgotten histories of Hollywood's first century". She unhurriedly recounts the details of Mia Farrow's 1960s love life or Joan Crawford's child-rearing practices with the air of someone who knows that it's the details that make these stories so gripping.

A new brand of Nordic noir

Thomas Wiborg-Thune is a Norwegian podcaster whose The Serial Killer Podcast is popular far beyond his native shores. He also takes the long way around when recounting his subjects' grisly deeds (right). The first of his Jack the Ripper series had been going for 20 minutes, sketching in the socio-economic conditions of Victorian London and providing frank description of the services provided by sex workers, before the first body was found. His Norwegian-accented English adds to the spookiness of the experience.

They make it in their bedroom

They Walk among Us is a home-grown podcast which focuses on this country's rich history of blood-curdling and occasionally unsolved crimes, not all of which took place in a gas-lit past. These stories are written by husband-and-wife team Benjamin and Rosie, narrated by Benjamin in an even, deliberate tone and recorded in their bedroom. The decline in newspapers has deprived us of the frisson that comes from reading about terrible things that happen just down the road. Podcasts like this are only too happy to step into the breach.

Today's Choices

Opera on 3

6.00pm Radio 3

Prokofiev was already turning Tolstoy's War and Peace into an opera when Germany invaded Russia in 1941. The historical parallels between Napoleon's invasion and Hitler's proved a spur to the work's completion, but also provoked a level of political interference that forced Prokofiev to produce five versions of his score, none of which he ever heard performed complete. Welsh National Opera's new production essentially follows the composer's compact, original intentions, and it stars US soprano Lauren Michelle (above) and British baritone Jonathan McGovern as Natasha and Andrei.

National Album Day: Mastertapes

National Album Day is new for 2018, inspired by the rediscovery of the joy of the album in an age of pick 'n' mix. Radio 4 joins the party with a special Mastertapes, the John Wilson-hosted programme in which, in front of a live audience, a leading musician talks through a key work from their back catalogue. Today's guest is Elvis Costello, who, in two half-hours, performs, answers audience questions, and ranges across a career that started in 1977 with the brilliant My Aim Is True. SIMON O'HAGAN

Plus Mark Wigglesworth's new book The Silent Musician, in which he discusses the role of the conductor. And artist and composer Heiner Goebbels on his multifaceted stage work Everything That Happened and Would Happen, which explores Europe's history over the past hundred years and is currently being given a number of performances at Manchester's Mayfield railway depot. Producer Juan Carlos Jaramillo. Repeated Monday 10pm

1.00 Inside Music Conductor Alpesh Chauhan talks about the piece that converted him from Bollywood to classical music, how Bruckner can be likened to the Orient Express and how one work by Prokofiev perfectly captures the essence of young love. He also recalls the impact of pianist Grigory Sokolov and, for his Must Listen piece at 2.00, chooses an English work so full of heartache and emotion that he simply had to introduce it to Italian audiences.

3.00 Sound of Cinema Matthew Sweet presents highlights of scores from movies that feature hotels, from Wendy Carlos and Rachel Elking (The Shining) to Alexandre Desplat (The Grand Budapest Hotel), coinciding with the release of Drew Goddard's film Bad Times at the El Royale, featuring music by Michael Giacchino.

Today's Choices

Turbulence

7.45pm Radio 4

In the first of 12 linked stories – all set around plane journeys – Sara Kestelman (above) reads the tale of a mother who flies from London to Madrid, leaving behind her 50-something son, who she has been caring for while he is treated for cancer. The writer is David Szalay, whose All That Man Is – likewise an anthology of related tales – was shortlisted for the 2016 Man Booker Prize, and his mastery of the form is evident: with deft touches he builds a tangible world, and gestures at an unease – a turbulence – between mother and son that long predates his illness. Future stories pick up the thread, but with new protagonists: the second one follows a businessman as he arrives in Dakar after a long flight from Madrid. HANNAH SHADDOCK

6 Music Celebrates the White Album

2.00pm 6 Music

How to follow Sgt Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band? The Beatles found the answer in a sprawling double album of variable quality with no hint of a "concept", and packaged so plainly as to distance it from their psychedelic masterpiece. The Beatles was its title but everyone called it the "White Album", and it contained such classics as Blackbird, Dear Prudence and While My Guitar Gently Weeps alongside more forgettable fare like Don't Pass Me By. As its 50th anniversary approaches (it was released in November 1968), Martin Freeman looks back with Giles Martin (son of the album's lead producer George Martin), Bill Nighy, David Quantick and Nile Rodgers. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

Book of the Week: The Golden Thread

9.45am/12.30am Radio 4
Among the many factors contributing to human civilisation, fabrics are often overlooked. Yet the story of how we dress has ancient roots; the earliest known flax fibres are more than 30,000 years old. Kassia St Clair's new book, an alternative history of civilisation told through the story of fabrics, starts a little closer to our own time, with the linens used to wrap the bodies of Egyptian pharaohs. The dense yet lyrical descriptions of the cloth are brought to life by Francesca Dymond, who across four more episodes this week weaves a thread – from the mummified pharaohs to mass rayon production in Nazi Germany, and on, finally, to the silver space suits that took man to the moon. TOM GOULDING

Right Click: the New Online Culture Wars

Several pages previously in this august journal of the mainstream media, Jonathan Dimbleby decries the quality of today's political discourse. You can almost imagine he is talking directly to the subjects of this documentary – leading online activists whose crudely expressed views on feminism, race and identity are like hand grenades lobbed into the midst of horrified "liberal elites". Gavin Haynes, editor-at-large of Vice UK, looks at how the likes of InfoWars' Paul Joseph Watson and YouTuber Carl Benjamin, aka Sargon of Akkad, have built up sizeable followings with their controversial approaches, and asks if complacency within traditional media is to blame. DAVID CRAWFORD

1.00pm Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert

Sarah Mohr-Pietsch presents today's recital

Bach Sinfonia (Easter Oratorio)

Haas Suite

Julian Anderson The Bearded Lady

Stravinsky Russian Maiden's Song

Bowen Sonata, Op 85 Repeated Sunday 21st October 1pm

2.00 Afternoon Concert

With Kate Molleson.

As the days shorten and shadows lengthen, Afternoon Concert goes Into the Forest to explore how the dark, mythical forest has touched composers' imaginations. Today, a Sibelius tone poem about a forest spirit and Bartok's ballet in which a forest is awakened by a mischievous fairy.

Sibelius Tapiola

Jon Leifs Organ Concerto

Anders Hillborg Beast

Today's Choices

Happy Birthday Blue Peter

9.00pm Radio 2

Sixty years old today, Blue Peter is the world's longest-running children's television programme by a long chalk. (The runner-up, Sesame Street, is nine years younger). Almost everyone reading this will have a vivid memory of the Blue Peter presenters of their childhood. I am so old that mine are the very first – Christopher Trace and Leila Williams (above) – and I'm thrilled that Williams, now 81, is included in this anniversary show. Was she really the first to make things with what later became known as sticky-back plastic? That's her claim. Sadly none of her live episodes was recorded. Around a dozen more presenters take part, and the programme's host is Barney Harwood. Younger readers will know he worked on the series, now on CBBC, from 2011 until last year. See Alison Graham on page 49.

DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Drama: With My Little Eye

2.15pm Radio 4

This seems awfully prescient – the story of an operation to protect a Russian dissident preparing to pass state secrets to MI6, while murderous FSB agents close in. Yet this is an old-fashioned spy story as veteran spook Bob Trench (a coolly authoritative Pip Torrens) is questioned over his handling of the affair. Written by Richard Stoneman, who comes with a seal of quality from his scripts for Radio 4's Rumpole of the Bailey, the labyrinthine plot delves into the murky world of international espionage and comes with a dark morality at its heart.

music topped and tailed with pieces linked to Radio 3's Into the Forest season, exploring how the darkness and mystery of the woods has inspired composers. Today, a symphonic poem by Schoenberg tells the story of a doomed love affair that starts atmospherically in a forest, and

concerto, German composer Matthias Pintscher searches for the meaning of the Hebrew word

"mar'eh", which means face, aura, or a beautiful

Today's Choices

Oliver Burkeman: Why Are We So Angry?

9.30am Radio 4

Oliver Burkeman is at pains to make clear that he is not a psychologist, but rather a journalist who has made a specialism of psychology. And as readers of his Guardian magazine column This Column Will Change Your Life know, he does it extremely well. For this five-part series he turns his attention to the explosion of anger that has torn apart public life in recent years, asking not just the question of the title but also whether all anger is necessarily a bad thing. "There are various movements where anger seems to be useful and leads to positive change," he says. But then there is the "anger economy" – the forces that fuel anger because it's good for business. That's enough to make your blood boil. Keep calm and tune in. SIMON O'HAGAN

Radio 3 In Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Clarinetist and bandleader Benny Goodman was already famed as America's "King of Swing" when he began not just performing classical pieces but commissioning works from such living composers as Bartok, Hindemith and Poulenc. Judging by the number of times he recorded it (four in all), perhaps his favourite was the 1948 Clarinet Concerto by Aaron Copland, whose seamless 16-minute span, ranging from serene calm to jaunty syncopations and wild rhythmic riffs, pivots around an extended central cadenza for the soloist alone. In tonight's BBC Symphony Orchestra performance, the spotlight falls on virtuoso Swedish clarinetist Martin Frost. MARK PAPPENHEIM

1/5. Anticipating the 100th anniversary of the end of the First World War in November, Radio 2 offers another chance to hear the first four programmes in a five-year five-part series of powerful, lyrical documentaries about life and death on the Western Front, told in words and music, each a year in the making. This first instalment, first broadcast in November 2014, covers the outbreak of the war in 1914 and the early battles, with troops taken to the front in London buses and taxis. Plus the Battle of Mons, trench warfare, the bombardment by German battleships of Scarborough, Whitby and Hartlepool, and the Christmas truce. Continues next week. The new fifth and final part is broadcast on 14 November. (R)

Today's Choices

Class Act

11.30am Radio 4

There's a great clip of Julie Walters at the start of Class Act saying how working-class actors like herself were "fashionable" back in the 1980s. Did that trend continue? Not really, given that the acting profession in the UK today includes precious few people from working-class backgrounds or ethnic minorities. But having listened to this excellent documentary, presented by Lenny Henry in serious mode – not what we're used to, perhaps, but entirely apt – I'm happy to report that there's change afoot thanks to new initiatives geared towards nurturing talent from across the social and cultural spectrum. We hear from a former Glaswegian binman who got the chance to study at drama school, poet Jade Anouka (above) who's branched out into acting (and soon to star alongside Sheridan Smith, no less), and writer/actor Johnny Harris, who drew on his working-class roots to create boxing drama Jawbone. Class acts indeed. CHRIS GARDNER

Ramblings

3.00pm Radio 4

A few weeks ago Clare Balding walked with a woman for whom the endeavour was intimately tied to the memory of her late husband. A similar absence is central to today's walk – that of a Newcastle University agriculture student called Rob, run over and killed by a car shortly before he was due to sit his finals. A group of eight of his friends decide to honour him by tackling a tough walk along the river Spey in Scotland, where they find that life lessons abound. Balding mingles with the group, capturing the mood beautifully. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

Trump's Evangelicals 11.00am Radio 4

Is Donald Trump's presidency a case of divine intervention? This seems to be the theory of The Trump Prophecy, a new film that purports to chart God's belief in Trump in the years leading up to the 2016 election. On the surface, this straight-faced movie is a reflection of Trump's popularity in America's evangelical heartland; the billionaire whose conservative values and choice of Mike Pence as his vice-president more than make up for his history of dubious behaviour. But is this relationship as harmonious as it appears? Here, White House reporter Tara McKelvey (above) asks what has driven fundamentalist Christians into Trump's camp and, with the mid-terms fast approaching, what it would take for those same voters to see the light.

8.30pm BBC World Service
Originating from three different continents, the Japanese monks of Enryaku Temple, the bushmen of the Kalahari and the Mexican Tarahumara tribe have one thing in common – running. And the remarkable fact of which they will all be aware is that, thanks to our ability to sweat and conserve energy, humans can outrun over long distances any mammal on the planet. In a pain-filled exploration of the limits of human endurance, the team follows in the footsteps of Greek messenger Pheidippides, whose 150-mile run from Marathon to Athens to deliver a message of victory over the Persians is the origin of our modern usage of the word marathon. SUE ROBINSON

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Gul Nawaz Hussain QC BBC Radio Sheffield

Age 42

Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Sheffield's Eastern Air, bringing news and debate from the Asian community (Sundays 6.00pm). He is a barrister and joint head of a Sheffield chambers. Appointed Queen's Counsel earlier this year, he is the first British-Pakistani QC in South Yorkshire.

CV Born and brought up in Sheffield, the son of a steelworker, he studied Law at the University of Northampton, became a barrister in 2000, and now works as a high-profile criminal defence lawyer. He joined Radio Sheffield in 2014.

Best moment "First and foremost being a father. After that, it was taking silk (becoming a QC) and walking into the Palace of Westminster in full regalia with my mum and dad and family."

Worst moment "Many years ago I went for a job interview that went horribly wrong. It was almost an existential experience, watching myself go down in flames."

Off air "I live in a large family house in Sheffield with my wife, Hiba, our son Salahudeen, 13, (a budding thespian who played Hamlet at the age of 12 and really nailed it) and our daughters, Noor, five, and one-year-old Arya. There's nothing better than being at home with my family."

First radio memory "Trying to record the Radio 1 Top 40 while cutting out the DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "The biggest skill an interviewer can have is knowing when to keep quiet – Eddie Mair is the master."

Ambition "I strive to be a good father."
Dream job "I have it. To go into court and make a difference to people's lives is a real honour. And to be Batman – a real superhero!"

Secret skills "I've done Thai boxing since I was 12 (it's helped to shape me physically, mentally and spiritually) and I once taught martial arts. And I'm the king of the dishwasher – nobody loads it like me!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Gul Nawaz Hussain QC BBC Radio Sheffield

Age 42

Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Sheffield's Eastern Air, bringing news and debate from the Asian community (Sundays 6.00pm). He is a barrister and joint head of a Sheffield chambers. Appointed Queen's Counsel earlier this year, he is the first British-Pakistani QC in South Yorkshire.

CV Born and brought up in Sheffield, the son of a steelworker, he studied Law at the University of Northampton, became a barrister in 2000, and now works as a high-profile criminal defence lawyer. He joined Radio Sheffield in 2014.

Best moment "First and foremost being a father. After that, it was taking silk (becoming a QC) and walking into the Palace of Westminster in full regalia with my mum and dad and family."

Worst moment "Many years ago I went for a job interview that went horribly wrong. It was almost an existential experience, watching myself go down in flames."

Off air "I live in a large family house in Sheffield with my wife, Hiba, our son Salahudeen, 13, (a budding thespian who played Hamlet at the age of 12 and really nailed it) and our daughters, Noor, five, and one-year-old Arya. There's nothing better than being at home with my family."

First radio memory "Trying to record the Radio 1 Top 40 while cutting out the DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "The biggest skill an interviewer can have is knowing when to keep quiet – Eddie Mair is the master."

Ambition "I strive to be a good father."

Dream job "I have it. To go into court and make a difference to people's lives is a real honour. And to be Batman – a real superhero!"

Secret skills "I've done Thai boxing since I was 12 (it's helped to shape me physically, mentally and spiritually) and I once taught martial arts. And I'm the king of the dishwasher – nobody loads it like me!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Gul Nawaz Hussain QC BBC Radio Sheffield

Age 42

Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Sheffield's Eastern Air, bringing news and debate from the Asian community (Sundays 6.00pm). He is a barrister and joint head of a Sheffield chambers. Appointed Queen's Counsel earlier this year, he is the first British-Pakistani QC in South Yorkshire.

CV Born and brought up in Sheffield, the son of a steelworker, he studied Law at the University of Northampton, became a barrister in 2000, and now works as a high-profile criminal defence lawyer. He joined Radio Sheffield in 2014.

Best moment "First and foremost being a father. After that, it was taking silk (becoming a QC) and walking into the Palace of Westminster in full regalia with my mum and dad and family."

Worst moment "Many years ago I went for a job interview that went horribly wrong. It was almost an existential experience, watching myself go down in flames."

Off air "I live in a large family house in Sheffield with my wife, Hiba, our son Salahudeen, 13, (a budding thespian who played Hamlet at the age of 12 and really nailed it) and our daughters, Noor, five, and one-year-old Arya. There's nothing better than being at home with my family."

First radio memory "Trying to record the Radio 1 Top 40 while cutting out the DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "The biggest skill an interviewer can have is knowing when to keep quiet – Eddie Mair is the master."

Ambition "I strive to be a good father."
Dream job "I have it. To go into court and make a difference to people's lives is a real honour. And to be Batman – a real superhero!"

Secret skills "I've done Thai boxing since I was 12 (it's helped to shape me physically, mentally and spiritually) and I once taught martial arts. And I'm the king of the dishwasher – nobody loads it like me!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Gul Nawaz Hussain QC BBC Radio Sheffield

Age 42

Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Sheffield's Eastern Air, bringing news and debate from the Asian community (Sundays 6.00pm). He is a barrister and joint head of a Sheffield chambers. Appointed Queen's Counsel earlier this year, he is the first British-Pakistani QC in South Yorkshire.

CV Born and brought up in Sheffield, the son of a steelworker, he studied Law at the University of Northampton, became a barrister in 2000, and now works as a high-profile criminal defence lawyer. He joined Radio Sheffield in 2014.

Best moment "First and foremost being a father. After that, it was taking silk (becoming a QC) and walking into the Palace of Westminster in full regalia with my mum and dad and family."

Worst moment "Many years ago I went for a job interview that went horribly wrong. It was almost an existential experience, watching myself go down in flames."

Off air "I live in a large family house in Sheffield with my wife, Hiba, our son Salahudeen, 13, (a budding thespian who played Hamlet at the age of 12 and really nailed it) and our daughters, Noor, five, and one-year-old Arya. There's nothing better than being at home with my family."

First radio memory "Trying to record the Radio 1 Top 40 while cutting out the DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "The biggest skill an interviewer can have is knowing when to keep quiet – Eddie Mair is the master."

Ambition "I strive to be a good father."
Dream job "I have it. To go into court and make a difference to people's lives is a real honour. And to be Batman – a real superhero!"

Secret skills "I've done Thai boxing since I was 12 (it's helped to shape me physically, mentally and spiritually) and I once taught martial arts. And I'm the king of the dishwasher – nobody loads it like me!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Gul Nawaz Hussain QC BBC Radio Sheffield

Age 42

Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Sheffield's Eastern Air, bringing news and debate from the Asian community (Sundays 6.00pm). He is a barrister and joint head of a Sheffield chambers. Appointed Queen's Counsel earlier this year, he is the first British-Pakistani QC in South Yorkshire.

CV Born and brought up in Sheffield, the son of a steelworker, he studied Law at the University of Northampton, became a barrister in 2000, and now works as a high-profile criminal defence lawyer. He joined Radio Sheffield in 2014.

Best moment "First and foremost being a father. After that, it was taking silk (becoming a QC) and walking into the Palace of Westminster in full regalia with my mum and dad and family."

Worst moment "Many years ago I went for a job interview that went horribly wrong. It was almost an existential experience, watching myself go down in flames."

Off air "I live in a large family house in Sheffield with my wife, Hiba, our son Salahudeen, 13, (a budding thespian who played Hamlet at the age of 12 and really nailed it) and our daughters, Noor, five, and one-year-old Arya. There's nothing better than being at home with my family."

First radio memory "Trying to record the Radio 1 Top 40 while cutting out the DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "The biggest skill an interviewer can have is knowing when to keep quiet – Eddie Mair is the master."

Ambition "I strive to be a good father."
Dream job "I have it. To go into court and make a difference to people's lives is a real honour. And to be Batman – a real superhero!"

Secret skills "I've done Thai boxing since I was 12 (it's helped to shape me physically, mentally and spiritually) and I once taught martial arts. And I'm the king of the dishwasher – nobody loads it like me!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Gul Nawaz Hussain QC BBC Radio Sheffield

Age 42

Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Sheffield's Eastern Air, bringing news and debate from the Asian community (Sundays 6.00pm). He is a barrister and joint head of a Sheffield chambers. Appointed Queen's Counsel earlier this year, he is the first British-Pakistani QC in South Yorkshire.

CV Born and brought up in Sheffield, the son of a steelworker, he studied Law at the University of Northampton, became a barrister in 2000, and now works as a high-profile criminal defence lawyer. He joined Radio Sheffield in 2014.

Best moment "First and foremost being a father. After that, it was taking silk (becoming a QC) and walking into the Palace of Westminster in full regalia with my mum and dad and family."

Worst moment "Many years ago I went for a job interview that went horribly wrong. It was almost an existential experience, watching myself go down in flames."

Off air "I live in a large family house in Sheffield with my wife, Hiba, our son Salahudeen, 13, (a budding thespian who played Hamlet at the age of 12 and really nailed it) and our daughters, Noor, five, and one-year-old Arya. There's nothing better than being at home with my family."

First radio memory "Trying to record the Radio 1 Top 40 while cutting out the DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "The biggest skill an interviewer can have is knowing when to keep quiet – Eddie Mair is the master."

Ambition "I strive to be a good father."

Dream job "I have it. To go into court and make a difference to people's lives is a real honour. And to be Batman – a real superhero!"

Secret skills "I've done Thai boxing since I was 12 (it's helped to shape me physically, mentally and spiritually) and I once taught martial arts. And I'm the king of the dishwasher – nobody loads it like me!" DAVID GILLARD

Book at Bedtime: Nine Perfect Strangers
Monday–Friday 10.45pm Radio 4

A YEAR AGO LAST September, Australian novelist Liane Moriarty found herself in Hollywood, at the Emmy awards, tottering down the red carpet with Nicole Kidman and Reese Witherspoon. “I’m still having post-traumatic stress from having to get the dress,” she says. “That was horrendous and took up far too much time.”

She had been invited because the HBO adaptation of her bestselling book, Big Little Lies, was up for a slew of awards and took home most of them, including best actress for Kidman.

Moriarty, 51, has sold 2.5 million copies of her books worldwide and is the only Australian to have had three books on the New York Times bestseller list at the same time. She’s an anomaly in the publishing world: a bestselling author who sits on the chick-lit shelf but isn’t afraid to be morally challenging or delve into the dark side of suburban life.

Big Little Lies follows a posse of fiercely competitive suburban mums who become suspects in a murder investigation. One is a rape survivor, while Kidman’s character, Celeste, finds it hard to leave her abusive husband (her quietly devastating performance also saw her crowned best actress in a limited series at the Golden Globes a few months later).

Moriarty recalls how one reviewer took issue with Celeste’s story when the book was first published in 2014, saying she shouldn’t have addressed a subject as serious as domestic violence in a commercial book. “That upset me,” she says. “As if domestic violence should only be covered in literary fiction. So I was really proud every time I got an email from a reader saying it gave them the courage to leave a relationship, or gave them an insight into a friend that they’ve never understood before. I’ve had people coming up to me, saying, “That’s me, I’m Celeste.”

Her latest novel, Nine Perfect Strangers, in its second week as Radio 4’s Book at Bedtime, is about a group of stressed city dwellers who check into an isolated health resort for a ten-day detox. They hope to transform their lives, but haven’t bargained for the sinister methods adopted by the megalomaniac director of the resort.

As usual, Moriarty doesn’t spare her characters, whose struggles include broken marriages and bereavement. The lead character, Frances, is a menopausal author with a broken heart and tanking career.

“I remember Angelina Jolie saying, ‘We should talk about menopause more,’” says Moriarty, “and thinking, ‘She’s right, we should.’ And of course, I’m at the age where my girlfriends and I are all talking about it. I never deliberately say: ‘I’m going to write a book about this.’ It just seems to come into my writing. I’m sure in my later years I’ll have a book set in a retirement village.”

Like all Moriarty’s novels, Nine Perfect Strangers is also very funny. Her characters’ internal monologues fizz with mischievous observations, especially the chapters that are narrated by Frances, who rails against a literary establishment that snubs her romance novels. Does the author

“I find it interesting that as a woman I think, ‘Oh, I’m just writing women’s fiction and therefore it is lesser.’ I do remember that clearly when my first book came out: somebody made a comment about it being women’s fiction, and I felt slightly disappointed that I’d written a girls’ book. Women read 80 per cent of fiction, so it’s very peculiar that we are the subcategory. Men should be the subcategory.”

So what description would Moriarty choose to give her own books? “I really struggle with that. I like it when they call it ‘domestic noir’. That sounds cool, doesn’t it?”

THE AUTHOR LIVES in Sydney with her husband, a stay-at-home father, and their two children. She credits sibling rivalry with kickstarting her own career; she worked as an advertising copywriter until her little sister, Jaclyn, had a novel accepted for publication. “When she called me up with that news, I was happy for her but also very, very envious because she’d gone ahead and achieved our childhood dream, and I hadn’t even tried. If it wasn’t for her, I don’t know if I would have finally had the push to finish my first book.”

Unlike Frances in Nine Perfect Strangers, her creator is in little danger of being dropped by her publisher any time soon. Kidman has already snapped up the rights to Nine Perfect Strangers (and cast herself as the health resort’s terrifying boss), as well as Moriarty’s 2016 novel Truly Madly Guilty. 2013’s The Husband’s Secret is being made into a film and a second series of Big Little Lies will air next year, introducing Meryl Streep as Celeste’s mother. If anything, Liane Moriarty should steel herself for more dress-shopping. CLAIRE WEBB

Ben Fogle’s Everest tribute to his son

UP: MY LIFE’S JOURNEY TO THE TOP OF EVEREST BEN FOGLE

In August ITV aired Our Everest Challenge with Ben Fogle and Victoria Pendleton, which followed the efforts of the TV adventurer and former Olympic cyclist to scale Earth’s highest mountain. For Fogle, it was the culmination of a lifelong dream – and a tribute to his son Willem, who was stillborn in 2014. Up: My Life’s Journey to the Top of Everest (published 18 Oct, preorder for £18, incl p&p), his account of the trek, ranges from the practical to the philosophical. He also recounts the night Pendleton became dangerously ill with altitude sickness, and the decision to continue the attempt without her.

Colour was the subject of Kassia St Clair’s debut book, specifically 75 different shades, which St Clair followed through history; The Secret Lives of Colours has since been translated into 11 different languages. Her follow-up, The Golden Thread (£18, incl p&p), tells 13 stories that illustrate the significance of textiles throughout history, from the very first weavers, tens of thousands of years ago, to the pioneers who create fabrics in which to go into space, or break world records.

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF A VERY BRITISH MAN KAMAL AHMED

Kamal Ahmed became the BBC’s economics editor in 2015. In The Life and Times of a Very British Man (published 18 Oct, preorder for £16.99, incl p&p), he reflects on his experience of Britishness, which, as the child of a Sudanese father and a white mother, he posits is an atypical one. As he writes, “I am as British as they come, like hot buttered toast and bacon sarnies. And still something of an alien in my own country.” In a cogent, engaging account of what it is to be mixed race – which began as a newspaper article he wrote after Barack Obama became US President in 2008 – Ahmed considers whether the progress he hoped for then has come to pass. HANNAH SHADDOCK

ICAN'T BELIEVE THIS is my last column of the year. It has flown by. Weather-wise, we've had a strange year – the Beast from the East followed by the hottest, driest summer since I was 11 years old. It has made gardening tricky, that's for sure, but on the plus side the glorious Indian summer gave us an exceptionally long season.

I don't know what we have in store this winter, but there are some autumnal gardening tasks that are the same whatever happens: the timing will depend on your local weather conditions, but the window is large, so my advice is to do them when you have the time.

After raking up the autumn leaves, it's an ideal time to mulch over the borders with organic matter (well-rotted manure, or home-made compost). Make it nice and deep (around 5cm/2 inches), but avoid building it up against woody stems of shrubs. Mulching in the autumn gives the worms the winter to take the material down into the soil. If you have any virgin areas of heavy soil that you want to plant next year, now's the perfect time to dig – winter frost will break it up for you.

Autumnal lawn care (scarifying, spiking etc) makes a huge difference if done every year.

It's best to prune and tie in climbing roses while the strong new growth is pliable. Cut non-productive old and woody stems to the ground. Deciduous shrubs and roses (above) can be pruned in the autumn and winter, but evergreens are best left until spring.

Gardeners used to cut back perennials at the first sign of frost, but the new way of thinking is to leave them for as long as possible, ideally till late winter. Embrace the beauty of plants in decay, as some look beautiful when frosted and back-lit by a low winter sun, especially when placed alongside ornamental grasses. Wildlife benefits hugely from this approach, too.

When it comes to tender and exotic plants, move any grown in pots into a frost-free area, or the most protected spot in your garden, such as a side alley, under a tree or against a wall. Keep an eye on the weather and have some garden fleece handy to cover any tender plants outside, in pots or in the ground, if it looks like frost is on its way. Any bulbs you have already in or have planted this year will be fine – they'll stay dormant and pop up when the weather warms up. If we have a lot of snow, the main job is to shake it off any shrubs and hedges, as it can get heavy and break the odd branch. See you in spring!

A RAKE'S PROGRESS

Put your garden to bed

In his final column of the year, Joe Swift says get the autumn jobs done and make plans for spring

3 SENSATIONAL SHRUBS FOR AUTUMN COLOUR

In autumn, well-selected deciduous shrubs really earn their keep in the garden. Most will have flowered earlier and now their seasonal foliage colour, if they possess such a thing, makes them the stars of the show once again. Leaves in purples, fiery reds and intense oranges pop out alongside the more muted coppers and golden yellows. I find plants with striking autumn colour rarely clash, but when planting think about balancing them, with some on either side of the garden. Don't be too hasty to tidy them up, either, as fallen leaves can contribute to an arty composition. Although some shrubs require dappled shade to thrive, most colour up better with plenty of sun, as it increases the sugar content in the leaves, which then intensifies their autumn colour.

1 SHADES OF GOLD

There are many fine Japanese maple varieties with striking foliage colour. The coral-bark maple (Acer palmatum "Sango-kaku", right) pips it for me, with its soft shades of golden yellow foliage. It looks breathtaking against a clear blue sky and this acer (6m tall by 5m spread) has the added interest of pinky-red stems right through the winter.

2 RED ALERT

As well as producing delicious fruit, blueberry plants (Vaccinium corymbosum) turn a deep crimson in the autumn, so make a fine ornamental choice, too. They require an acidic soil, but can grow well in a large container for many years (to 1.5m tall by 1m). Water with rainwater.

3 TANGERINE DREAM

The Euonymus europaeus "Red Cascade" (below) is a deciduous shrub with fabulous scarlet-red autumn foliage, and then wonderful fruit that combines small tangerine-orange berries with pink-winged capsules. It may sound a little crazy, but it works beautifully (grows to 3m by 2.5m).

WHEN VANISHED BY the Lake was broadcast in France in 2015, hotel bookings at Lac de Sainte-Croix soared. Never mind the fact that it was a crime drama about a missing teenager and a claustrophobic village awash with secrets, the titular lake stole the show: a sparkling expanse hugged by rugged woods in Provence. The show's dishevelled detective even floated over it in a paraglider in the opening episode, which fans of foreign drama will remember was broadcast in Britain last year.

The second series of this Gallic Broadchurch is coming to Channel 4 next month with a new title – Killer by the Lake. Detective Lise Stocker finds herself on the trail of a serial killer in her home town, which just happens to be beside another gorgeous lake – Annecy in the Alps.

Detective Lise Stocker is now married to nicely grizzled cop Clovis and the mum of a ten-month-old, and lives near her mother, who has Alzheimer's. There's been a cast swap, too: Stocker is now played by Julie de Bona. "Lise moved to change her life and flee her past, but above all prove to herself that she is psychologically healed," explains De Bona. "She is looking for balance."

Inevitably, balance isn't what she finds, but there's lots of lovely scenery to compensate. Tucked away in south-eastern France, close to the Swiss and Italian borders, Lake Annecy is overlooked by towering peaks and is famous for its clear blue waters. The charming old town of Annecy (below) has canals populated by swans and lined with brightly painted houses, and is known as "the Venice of the Alps". De Bona's favourite spots along the lake are the verdant villages of Talloires and Menthon-Saint-Bernard. Both are on the well-heeled eastern shore, which is dotted with palatial chalets and dubbed le Rive Plein Soleil, as it gets the afternoon sun.

'Annecy's canals make it the Venice of the Alps'

When Walt Disney holidayed in the Alps, he was so struck by Menthon's fairytale medieval château, he used it as the inspiration for Sleeping Beauty's castle. It's perched on a rock above the village (right) and is the birthplace of 11th-century Saint Bernard of Menthon, who established a hospice for travellers and also gave his name to the breed of dog.

Talloires' bay is popular for sailing and waterskiing, while its harbour is blessed with the most beautiful view on Earth – or so Winston Churchill is reported to have said when he visited. If watersports aren't your thing, you can linger over lunch at L'Abbaye, a hotel built around a Benedictine abbey that has hosted Mark Twain, Paul Cezanne and actor Jean Reno.

The Queen, Charlie Chaplin and Brigitte Bardot favoured nearby L'Auberge du Père Bise, which was the first restaurant in France to be awarded a Michelin star. As De Bona discovered, Talloires is also the best place to see paragliders swooping from Col de la Forclaz – "I loved watching them take flight."

On her days off, the actor preferred to keep her feet on the ground. "There are fantastic routes on foot or by bike to Menthon-Saint-Bernard and Talloires. I really love to relax in the sea or countryside, but I get bored quickly. I adored Lake Annecy because there was so much to explore.”

It's possible to cycle around the lake on an old, 30-mile railway track, while hikers can choose between gentle waterfront walks or tackling serious treks in the mountains – the most popular summit near Annecy town is the 4,200ft Mont Veyrier, which looms over the eastern shore.

ANNECY'S WATERS ARE warmed by thermal springs and reach 24 degrees in summer, but you won't see Detective Stocker taking a dip in Killer by the Lake because it was filmed during the quieter winter months, when the town becomes a ski resort.

“We often shot at dawn for the beautiful morning light and the mist on the lake,” says De Bona. It was gorgeous, but freezing. I would wear a parka on top of the parka on set, and sometimes I'd even slip a hot-water bottle inside!” CLAIRE WEBB

FRANCE'S ALPINE LAKES

LAKE BOURGET Only 40 minutes' drive from Lake Annecy, Bourget is France's largest natural lake and has sandy beaches, while the nearby Grand Revard peaks are great for cross-country skiing.

LAKE SERRE-PONCON The biggest man-made lake is in the southern Alps is a watersports mecca in summer. It's also great for secluded swimming, with one of the longest stretches of wild lakeshore. The medieval towns of Chorges and cliff-top Embrun are close by.

LAKE GENEVA While Geneva is a Swiss diplomatic hub, the French shore of Geneva has Évian-les-Bains, an upmarket spa town that marries belle époque elegance with state-of-the-art treatments. In December, it's home to “the fabulous village of the flottins”, 500 driftwood sculptures in the main square. CW

Boost your state pension

Even if you contracted out of Serps, there's a way to increase your pension, says Paul Lewis

THE NEW STATE pension is very complex. It should be a standard £164.35 a week for everyone who has paid at least 35 years of National Insurance contributions, but there is a fly called Serps in the ointment.

Serps (the State Earnings-Related Pension Scheme) was introduced in 1978 by Barbara Castle and gave extra state pension to people based on their pay over the best 20 years of their working life. However, it didn't cover the millions of people in the public sector and in big private companies who already paid into a good earnings-related pension at work. They didn't pay the extra National Insurance contributions for Serps and were said to be "contracted out" of it. In the 1980s and 90s some people also contracted out of Serps into a personal pension and paid lower National Insurance contributions.

When the new state pension began in April 2016, people who had paid these lower National Insurance contributions had a deduction made from their new state pension that took account of the extra private pension they had earned. So their new state pension is less than the full £164.35 a week, even if they have paid 35 years of contributions. The reduction can be big, but no one with at least 35 years' contributions can end up with less than £125.95 a week.

HOWEVER, THAT REDUCTION can itself be reduced. Every full year of National Insurance contributions paid from 2016/17 will reduce the deduction by £4.70 a week. These contributions can only be paid for full tax years before state pension age. For example, if you're due to reach state pension age next tax year, 2019/20, you can pay three whole years of contributions for 2016/17, 2017/18, and 2018/19. That will boost your pension by £14.10 a week. Those contributions could be paid at work or in some cases credited. Otherwise you can buy them for £761.80 a year, which is a way to increase your state pension for life.

PASSENGER ONE PAYS, PASSENGER TWO SAILS FREE*!

Welcome to the latest selection of tremendous value, ex-UK, no-flying cruises on board Columbus, Magellan and Marco Polo, a trio of beautiful British-operated ships, with sailings right through to the end of spring 2020. Enjoy a wide choice of ports and wonderful destinations, plus an amazing offer whereby one passenger pays and a second goes for FREE. These great offer prices make it so much easier to join us for the cruise you've always wanted to take, to enjoy a longer voyage, or to treat yourself to a higher-category cabin. Alternatively, of course, you can use the saving to spend on board or ashore.

Marco Polo A beautiful ocean-liner in the classic tradition, Marco Polo offers her passengers high levels of comfort, sumptuous dining and a genuinely warm welcome from the crew. This ship will offer everything you'd expect of such a high-class vessel.

Columbus The biggest ship of the fleet, Columbus was launched by Audrey Hepburn in 1989, she was refitted in 2015 and now offers accommodation for 1,500 passengers with elegant communal areas arranged over 12 decks and a panoramic Dome Observatory.

Dictionary corner

Susie Dent

Why are a performer's backstage requirements known as a rider?

Helen Thomas Cardiff

The first meaning of rider was one we still use today – a mounted person or specifically, in Anglo-Saxon times, a warrior or knight on horseback. "Ride" relates to both "road" and

"raid", as horses were the means of transport for travelling and plundering.

It then took on more figurative meanings, describing things sitting on top of something else: in mining, a rider is a thin seam of ore overlying a principal vein, while in printing it is a secondary roller that rests on the drum of a press to ensure an even application of ink.

In the 17th century "rider" began to be used as a legal term, meaning any codicil added to a document after its first drafting. The showbusiness use is exactly that – an additional clause in a contract specifying particular requirements.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Sharing his pain

CANDID
George Shelley opened up about the death of his sister Harriet last year

It was a relief to see George Shelley: Learning to Grieve (2 October BBC1/BBC3). Ever since the death of my beloved brother, three years older than me and my oldest friend, I've felt rather alone in my bereavement. Unlike the others in the support group I go to, I'm single with no children. The others can hope to find a new partner (though never replace the lost one, of course), but I cannot find a new older brother, who would share all those memories of when we were kids, with our hopes and fears and fantasies... and correct me when I remember something wrongly.

Many thanks to the programme-makers for their sensitivity, and to [X Factor star, actor and broadcaster] George and all the others in the film for their honesty. It's remarkable how little we speak of the effects of the death of a sibling.

29 September). When he was doing Zoo Quest in the 1950s and I was a ten-year-old, I wrote to him asking how I could get a career with animals. I received an incredibly helpful two-page personal reply – and from subsequent experience I know how many such letters he must have received.

Some years later, when I was working for London Zoo, I met him several times and never forgot his perfect manners. I've since written to him a couple of times and received a handwritten reply. If only our so called "celebrities" would learn from him.

Maggie Hughes Gnosall, Staffordshire

SCROLLING THE PAST

In Oceans Apart: Art and the Pacific with James Fox (24 September BBC4), an art installation was featured depicting encounters between the first Europeans and indigenous people in the Pacific. The work was in the form of a scrolling video on a narrow strip, a bit like the Bayeux Tapestry, featuring live actors in vignettes of different encounters. Can you tell me something about it, please?

Ruth Coffey Leeds

Good news – you can see this for yourself. A spokesperson for the production company tells RT: "The piece your reader is referring to is a video installation called In Pursuit of Venus by New Zealand artist Lisa Reihana. It's currently on display in London at the Royal Academy's Oceania exhibition, opened recently by the Duchess of Sussex. The exhibition runs until 10 December."

WORTH AN AWARD

Seeing the short video from Africa Eye, "Cameroon atrocity: Finding the soldiers who killed this woman", come up on my phone (24 September BBC News), I really didn't want to watch an execution and very nearly moved on. However, I did watch and I want to congratulate reporters Aliaume Leroy and Ben Strick, and producer Daniel Adamson. It was a fascinating piece of detective work, which must have taken them many hours. I hope that the callous men responsible for this atrocity face justice.

This news team should be put forward for an award – they deserve it for their persistence, their sense of justice and their success in avenging these poor women and innocent children.

EVERYONE'S A WINNER?

Could the BBC instruct the judges on Strictly Come Dancing (Sat/Sun BBC1) to praise every contestant and tell them how well they're doing? High marks awarded to every couple, no constructive criticisms, and everyone to go through to the final and win a trophy. Or the programme-makers could just tell the audience to BE QUIET!

Clifford Chambers Blackpool
See page 29 for Susannah Constantine's last bow.

LETHAL

POOR BREAKFAST

Once again Radio 2 hasn't listened to its listeners. The negative comments on social media regarding Zoe Ball's appointment as Chris Evans's successor on the breakfast show in January vastly outnumber the positive ones, with most wishing Sara Cox had been appointed.

Heather Godwin Pett, East Sussex

...Zoe Ball? You've got to be kidding! Please tell her not to talk so much, and so manically! What a disappointment. They've most probably lost a listener here. To have bypassed the lovely, funny, warm Sara Cox is so disappointing.

Penny Mitchell Stareton, Warwickshire

THRILLING EVE

Like most people, I was hooked on Bodyguard for its high-octane drama and storyline, but what an absolute gem Killing Eve (BBC1/iPlayer) has been so far. This series has rescued us from the usual dull-fest on Saturday nights.

Sandra Oh is a delight and a breath of fresh air as Eve, and Jodie Comer deserves special mention for her portrayal of the complex Villanelle (indeed, the whole cast is great). I'm enjoying it to the core, so thank you BBC for giving us something good to watch that has a great cast, breathtaking locations across Europe and a cool soundtrack.

Pip Hurley Edinburgh

SIR DAVID'S KINDNESS

How absolutely spot-on the article about Sir David Attenborough was (RT,

SCIENCE WITH HEART
Liz Bonnin tackled the nightmare of plastic pollution

HOW TO TURN THE TIDE

Drowning in Plastic (1 October BBC1) was horrifying, depressing and yet uplifting. To see so many individuals and groups working round the clock to try to hold back a seemingly unstoppable tide of plastic showed a truly indomitable spirit. If programmes like this can force environmental issues to the top of the agenda, then perhaps future generations and all other species will have a planet fit to live on.

Helen Grant
Taunton, Somerset

...What a wonderful documentary. Liz Bonnin is the ideal person to continue telling the story of this global problem, following its introduction by David Attenborough in Blue Planet II. Liz is a scientist with a heart: she deals in facts, but we can relate to her emotions.

This programme should be shown in schools, as even young children can understand its message. And it gives hope, too: as Liz says, we can save our seas, but we must act fast.

Fiona Roat Thetford, Norfolk

A CHANGE OF IDENTITY

Did the creators of the new BBC2 idents do their research with people who suffer from epilepsy? As attractive as some of the idents are, surely some are bad for people with epilepsy, especially the ones with twisting and turning lines?

Gill Fuller Sheffield

...Please, BBC, issue a DVD of the old BBC2 idents! There have been so many imaginative, inventive and amusing ones over the years, and I shall be bereft if I never see them again. The new curvaceous ones look pretty, and no doubt will gain their own place in our hearts in time, but the old ones must not be consigned to some dusty archive, never to be seen again.

Chris Wood Haddenham, Buckinghamshire

DUDLEY'S FINEST HOURS

The late Dudley Sutton, who died recently, was a fantastic actor, from playing a memorable lag in Porridge to Tinker Dill in Lovejoy – and more recently a marvellous priest in Father Brown.

Actor Dudley Sutton in Lovejoy

Lovejoy, with an acerbic aside or well-observed truism making me laugh every time. This was his finest achievement, but he was wonderful in all his roles. I'll savour all the more each time that he pops up on screen in repeats. I'd love to see a night dedicated to some of his best performances.

Paul Jaffrey Peterborough

TIME FOR AN ENCORE

I really enjoyed the wacky approach to a musical quiz afforded by Gareth Malone's All Star Music Quiz (27 September BBC2). Naming a tune from just four notes, or from the melody played backwards, or from each backing track being built up gradually? Inspired – I loved it!

Any chance of a series?

Lydia Tallis Bournemouth, Dorset
James Stirling, Head of Content Commissioning for BBC Music, replies: "Gareth Malone's All Star Music Quiz was a one-off special for BBC Music Day, but we're so pleased you enjoyed it."

EXPERTS TALKING

The BBC commentary team for the recent World Road Cycling Championships did a fantastic job that the commercial sports channels could learn from. The excellent Simon Brotherton was supported brilliantly by "the thinking cyclist's ex-professional", Chris Boardman, whose knowledge is encyclopedic and fascinating.

YOU ASK US

Why is sunshine such bad news for football?

I enjoy Match of the Day (BBC1), but dread sunny weekends when parts of the pitch are in sunlight and part in shade. Can't the camera operators change the lens aperture to follow the play? This used not to be a problem.

Frank Ravlen, Stockport

A BBC spokesperson tells RT: "The camera operators don't set the exposure – they're responsible for framing the shot while a team of vision operators in a truck outside the ground expose the cameras to their optimum levels and ensure the colours of each camera match. Ideally, the vision operator aims to make the transition from shadow to sunlight seamless, as sudden changes in exposure would be distracting.

"Most grandstands are much bigger than they were 20 or 30 years ago, casting larger shadows across more central areas of the pitch. All areas need to be seen, so vision operators seek a balance between the perfect exposure in both sunlight and shadow.

"The good news is that future developments in television will improve the situation: newer cameras have a greater dynamic range and can show detail in dark and bright areas simultaneously."

YOU ASK THE QUESTIONS

What do you think of the BBC's factual programmes? What would you like to see more of, and what should have a little less screen time? Too much cooking, not enough science? Cut back on social history and feature more actual history? Has BBC founder Lord Reith's mission to inform and educate been sidelined in favour of his third aim, entertainment?

Next in the Radio Times hot seat is Alison Kirkham, the BBC's head of factual commissioning, responsible for everything from Antiques Roadshow and Countryfile to the latest David Attenborough blockbuster. Send your questions for Alison to us at the addresses above and we'll put them to her. Please put "Alison Kirkham" in the subject line of emails and ensure they reach us by Friday 26 October. We'll print a selection of your questions in a future issue.

FABULOUS CAST

Australian drama series Mystery Road (BBC4) certainly had a great cast, especially when it was joined by Kris McQuade and Deborah Mailman, who covered miles for her screen debut in 2002's Rabbit-Proof Fence. It's been good to see them both again. Philip Brannon London SE25

GOOD HONEST COOKING

It's been a pleasure to watch the three finalists in Celebrity MasterChef (28 September BBC1). They all produced some amazing and inventive cookery throughout this series. Most of all, I appreciated their honesty and openness about their personal struggles, and how cooking has helped them to feel better.

I actually cried when former EastEnders star John Partridge spoke about what his potato pie means to him (I'm fully aware of how surreal that sounds).

I'd like to thank him for sharing the heartache of caring for a loved one with dementia, and his issues with drugs and alcohol. A worthy winner and a thoroughly decent bloke!

ANY RELATION?

Watching ITV4's Football Genius (2 October), hosted by Tim Vine, may have triggered a distant memory for those of us of a certain age. It looks remarkably similar to the format of the BBC's Quiz Ball from the 1960s, hosted by another Vine – David! Just a coincidence?

RELEASE CASH FROM YOUR HOME FOR A BETTER RETIREMENT

Request your free guide to unlocking the cash from your home, written by Radio Times money expert Paul Lewis

Whether it's existing debt, day-to-day living expenses, or needing a lump sum for home improvements, holidays or helping the family, many find their pension is not providing the income they hoped to have in retirement.

Lower interest rates and increasingly flexible products have made equity release much more desirable. It offers a stress-free alternative to downsizing, allowing you to stay in your own home near family and friends, while freeing up a tax-free sum from your property to give you financial stability – and even the chance to do some of the things you've always dreamt of.

Meanwhile, product features such as inheritance protection will provide you with peace of mind that, should you wish, you can still leave money to loved ones when you pass away and the plan comes to an end.

Freedom from financial worries

While the key to financial stability could well be unlocking the cash in your home, knowing where to start can seem daunting and complicated, so it's vital to take good, independent, advice.

Equity Release could involve a lifetime mortgage, which is a loan secured against your home. It will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits. You should always think carefully before securing a loan against your home.

There are typically no monthly repayments to make, as the loan plus compound interest is repaid when the plan comes to an end. This leaves you free to relax in retirement, without worrying about having to make monthly repayments.

There are many options to consider to ensure you're getting the plan that's most beneficial for your individual needs, and the one that allows you to take control of your finances – and life. That's where Key comes in.

READER OFFER

Radio Times has partnered with Key to produce a free guide written by Paul Lewis. Our free guide provides information to start you on your equity release journey.

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge, as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99 per cent of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

GOOD ADVICE IS KEY

If you're considering equity release to fund a better retirement, we can guide you through your options. There is no obligation or pressure to go ahead if you book an appointment with Key; our job is to give the expert advice and information you need to make the decision that meets your individual needs.

Features:

- Accredited Independent Advisers – we are not tied to any lenders
- Face-to-face appointments – in the comfort of your own home
- Whole of market comparison – we consider all equity release providers

After talking through the options with you, we will make a personal recommendation, and if equity release isn't right for you, we'll tell you.

View from my sofa

ANGELICA BELL

‘My sofa belonged to Alan Carr’

The Celebrity MasterChef winner wants to repay him with dinner

What’s the view from your sofa, Angelica?

Our TV situation is a bit sad. The telly is 46 inches – my husband [TV presenter Michael Underwood] says it’s small but I think that’s big enough – but there’s a damaged pixel in it from when one of the children threw their toy at it when they were little. But we’re not getting a new one until this one conks out. Michael moans about that – he says it’s so annoying – but I can’t really tell.

What do you watch?

I like true crime, things like Serial Killer with Piers Morgan. Michael and I watch Grand Designs together, and also Long Lost Family. We both cry, properly cry. Also we love RuPaul’s Drag Race.

Does it inspire you to do your own drag catwalks up and down the living room?

As a former CBBC presenter, is there any kids’ TV you like your children to watch?

I’m loyal: CBBC is what they watch. I’ve been on some bedtime

CBeebies, but I don’t say, “Hey, come on let’s watch this because Mummy is on it!” I did let them watch the final of Celebrity MasterChef [Bell won in 2017] and now they just think I’m a professional cook. They don’t even know I work in telly; they think my job is making food.

What kind of sofa do you watch CBBC on?

It’s a nice grey sofa – but not too nice for kids to clamber over. We eat on it sometimes, but nothing tomato-based. The sofa’s actually a hand-me-down from Alan Carr...

What! How did you get Alan Carr’s old sofa?

My husband went to school with him and they’re friends.

Since you and Michael have both cooked on Celebrity MasterChef, ### is dinner a fine-dining experience in your house?

It’s not MasterChef standard on a day-to-day basis – it might be a bit rich to eat that every day! We love having people round, cooking for our friends. I do the starter and dessert and Michael focuses on the main. I love the way cooking brings people together.

What would be your dream dinner party?

I’d have Alan Carr, the Obamas and Stephen Fry. I love Barack and Michelle’s relationship, and her hair always looks good, so I could get some hair tips.

What would you make as your last meal on earth?

To start with I’d have mussels with home-made bread, and a creamy sauce. For the main I’d have lamb stuffed with apricots and pine nuts, dauphinoise potatoes and carrot and swede mash with lovely gravy. Dessert would be the baked alaska I made on MasterChef.

Angelica Bell co-hosts Family Cooking Showdown (Mon–Fri 7pm BBC2)

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY DVD Jerry Maguire. I really like that film.

MY RADIO I love radio: we always have Classic FM on in the house and in the car it’s Radio 2 or Kisstory. The kids get a nice overview of classical music and 90s R&B.

MY BOOK Wonder, by RJ Palacio. It’s amazing on the adversity of being different.
