THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'Only Connect is back and all is well'

SOME INTERVIEWEES CAN be really hard work. I remember one actor I spoke to, for an RT feature, during a visit to the set of his hit drama, droning on and on about his "journey" and his "craft". I did what I always do in these circumstances, and mentally drew up my shopping list. Inevitably, listening back to the tape, most of what he said was unusable twaddle.

But there are some interviewees who spark you up with their cleverness and sense of fun and Victoria Coren Mitchell is one of those people. I spoke to her a couple of years ago, on the day after the Brexit vote when the world felt giddy and adrift, but we had a high old time.

So I'm delighted she's back presenting my favourite of all quiz shows, Only Connect (Monday BBC2). Quiz Night is as it should be once again... although OC should really be on at 8.30pm, after University Challenge – the delightful dessert following a heavy meal. Come on, schedulers, change it, move OC from 8.00pm.

THE GERMAN IMPORT 54 Hours (Saturday BBC4) is a tremendous thriller that reminded me of director John Carpenter at his best (ie Assault on Precinct 13). It's based on the true story of a hostage crisis after a botched bank robbery in the town of Gladbeck in 1988. I speak a bit of German and was boasting about how I wouldn't need subtitles, but my German lets me order cakes in shops, it doesn't give me the vocabulary for hostage negotiations.

And it's The Great British Bake Off semi-final (Tuesday C4) and I'll be sorry to say goodbye to the contestants after next week's final. They are such a supportive bunch who eschew histrionics. So when one of them sounds so defeated by a brutal technical round this week, you know it's serious.

‘TV drama is a man’s world’

The woman behind Spooks says TV needs more women writers

IN THE MONTH that a woman who dared to speak in public about abuse she had suffered and was then mocked by the so-called leader of the free world, it’s clear that we still have a long way to go in truly hearing women’s voices. We’re not listening hard enough and we’re not giving women their share of the platform.

Television drama helps us to make sense of the world we live in. It follows that, in order to understand as much of the world around us as we can, we must hear from writers from all walks of life, irrespective of their gender, ethnicity, disability or background. But we don’t.

For a staggering 82 per cent of the time when watching TV, only one half of the population gets to tell their stories and thereby influence the creative agenda and daily cultural conversation, according to a recent report by the Writers’ Guild. Yes, we have some great women writers at the moment: Phoebe Waller-Bridge, Abi Morgan, Sally Wainwright, Nicole Taylor, Sharon Horgan, Gwyneth Hughes, Michaela Coel, Charlie Covell, Desiree Akhavan. But don’t let that fool you into thinking we’ve got the problem wrapped up.

Between 2001 and 2016, according to the Guild’s report, only 28 per cent of all TV episodes in the UK were predominantly female-written – and 18 per cent of all the UK’s television. “The likelihood of a writer of a given show being female negatively correlates with the expected advertising revenue for the episode timeslot,” it says, which to me is shocking. How can this be?

‘Only 28 per cent of all TV episodes were written by women’

Everyone wants a hit, but to find those hits, we fall back on familiar tastes, instinct and existing relationships. It’s time to provide a platform for new voices.

Men hire more men. It’s not just me saying that (although I am), it’s also a fact, as the report notes. But women also hire more women. Now more than ever we need to strive to get more women into positions of power, hiring, commissioning, producing. It’s our collective responsibility to challenge ourselves and counter this unconscious bias.

Thousands of years of history have taught us that male narratives have universal perceived value, whereas female narratives are seen as a soft, minority interest.

Do we really privately wonder if a dark thriller is meatier coming from a man, or whether a woman is truly able to get under the skin of a big political thriller? We need to question these fundamental assumptions. Men can write about relationships; women can write about gang warfare. Women and men can write in any genre if they choose to, if it interests them.

TO TRY TO redress this balance, we at TV production company Sister Pictures have our own Writer-in-Residence scheme, offering one new writer at an early stage in her career the salaried opportunity to write freely.

I also applaud RadioTimes.com for launching a campaign called Women’s Words [see below] to raise awareness of this subject. We are at a crossroads in history and we can only progress to true equality if the stories we tell are told by men and women, about each other, to each other and for each other. Because stories change people – and people can change history.

Jane Featherstone has executive produced a number of dramas including Spooks, Broadchurch and The Split

WHAT WE WATCHED

Listen very carefully, I will say this only once... Allo 'Allo! – the BBC’s saucy, not politically correct comedy set in Nazi-occupied France – was back for a second series and Gordon Kaye, who played café owner René Artois for a decade between 1982 and 1992, and in a reunion special in 2007, put his finger on why the show was such a hit. “Allo 'Allo!’s schoolboy humour appeals to young children,” he told RT. “They like silly Germans and pretty ladies and mentions of boobies, sausages and grannies.” In 1985 the sitcom had not yet been snapped up by German television. But that did eventually happen, in 2008...

WHAT YOU SAID

Another year, another round of BBC cuts, this time to Radio 4, which was being forced to axe narrative reading show Story Time, replacing it with a repeat of arts show Kaleidoscope. Cindy Thompson from Cumbria said she was “shocked, infuriated and incensed” by the decision, while MD Smith of London wondered: “Why replace Story Time with yesterday’s art gab? Authors are more important than critics.” Radio 4 controller David Hatch said the savings were necessary but unfortunate. “I’m sad about it too,” he said. BEN DOWELL

IT'S BEHIND YOU!

Last Sunday
Jodie Whittaker's Doctor found her newly redesigned Tardis – now RT goes on set to uncover its secrets...

TARDIS QUARTET

The 13th Doctor (Jodie Whittaker) with her companions Graham (Bradley Walsh), Ryan (Tosin Cole) and Yaz (Mandip Gill)

Doctor Who history – and this one’s all mine!’

JODIE WHITTAKER

Share pictures of you with this week’s cover on social media, using #RadioTimesDoctorWho – we’ll re-post our favourites!

IT'S SUPPOSED TO be a bit like the cupboard to Narnia" says Arwel Jones as RT steps through the doors of Doctor Who's brand-new Tardis for the first time. "We've added side walls to the entrance," the designer, who has previously worked on Sherlock and Keeping Faith, proudly explains.

Creating a mini-corridor leading into the Tardis might seem a minor detail, but it's emblematic of the care and attention that have gone into the first full redesign of the ship's interior since the 2012 version (designed by the late Michael Pickwood) used by Matt Smith and Peter Capaldi.

With its time-travel capabilities, the Tardis is the central driving force in the world of Doctor Who and provides a home for our heroes. "Being a part of this, you do appreciate what a big deal the Tardis is to so many people," says Jodie Whittaker. "It's a part of Doctor Who history – and this one's all mine!"

'After I first stepped inside, I had to go off and have a cry'

JODIE WHITTAKER

In Whittaker's Tardis, instead of the dusty bookshelves of the Capaldi years, the grunge-y dome of David Tennant's ship or even the lab-like white of the pre-millennium Doctors, the walls have disappeared. The new Tardis seems to shift, dissolve into the darkness and stretch on for ever.

"I wanted to play with the dimension part of the Time And Relative Dimensions In Space acronym," says Jones, "and not give it actual outer walls. It's infinite on the inside, which gives it a far more epic scale."

To help with this effect, the traditional "roundels" of the design have been replaced by glowing infinity mirrors, while some of the walls themselves are movable, creating an ever-evolving space from episode to episode.

The core of the new ship has also had a rethink. The entire Tardis is built around a powerful golden "time crystal" that protrudes through the central control console, and is actually threaded throughout the entire set.

When Doctor Who returned to TV in 2005, the set had coral-like pillars, and references were made to the time machine being "grown" – and while Jones loved the idea, he felt that its potential was never fully realised.

"To actually move through space and time you'd need an incredible amount of power," he explains, "so we're harnessing the power of this time crystal – it's what actually now drives the Tardis."

OVERALL, JONES SAYS he couldn't be happier with how the design came off the page. "It's very unusual on something of this scale – especially in TV, on our kind of budget – for the end product to be that close to your original idea.

"Although we're still adding more to the console – it's a state of flux, really," he adds, while his team fire up deafening power tools to attach a new microscope and some lights to the set. "Every story, every script tends to throw up something new."

In fact, look closely and you can spot a spinning, translucent Tardis attached to the console (see below). "The beauty of a 3D printer!" Jones says. "We tried it and it looked so cool that I got the guys to put it on a revolve in the Tardis. It's quite hologram-y when you're looking at it."

The one thing that hasn't changed too much is the blue-box exterior of the space/time machine, although it has had a bit of a facelift – including a new door sign and paint job. "There's something about the aspect of that box – doesn't matter where you put it, inside, outside, on a cliff edge, in the middle of a desert, anywhere – it just looks cool."

And when the new captain first took the helm of her new ship, she couldn't have agreed more.

In fact, the finished article was almost a bit too much for its new owner.

"Just walking into it the first time was amazing," Whittaker recalls. "It was just me, [executive producer] Matt Strevens and [showrunner] Chris Chibnall. They'd already seen it but after I stepped in, I immediately had to go off and have a little cry. I had a real moment. It was surprisingly emotional." HUW FULLERTON

JODIE WHITTAKER
The Doctor

"Honestly, the new Tardis is amazing. The first one I worked on was Peter Capaldi's, for the regeneration in last year's Christmas special and I knew there was going to be a change – and I knew everyone was working hard to get it right – but I was still blown away when I walked onto it. My favourite part is the pedal I can push and a custard cream falls out! It's an Arwel Jones special!"

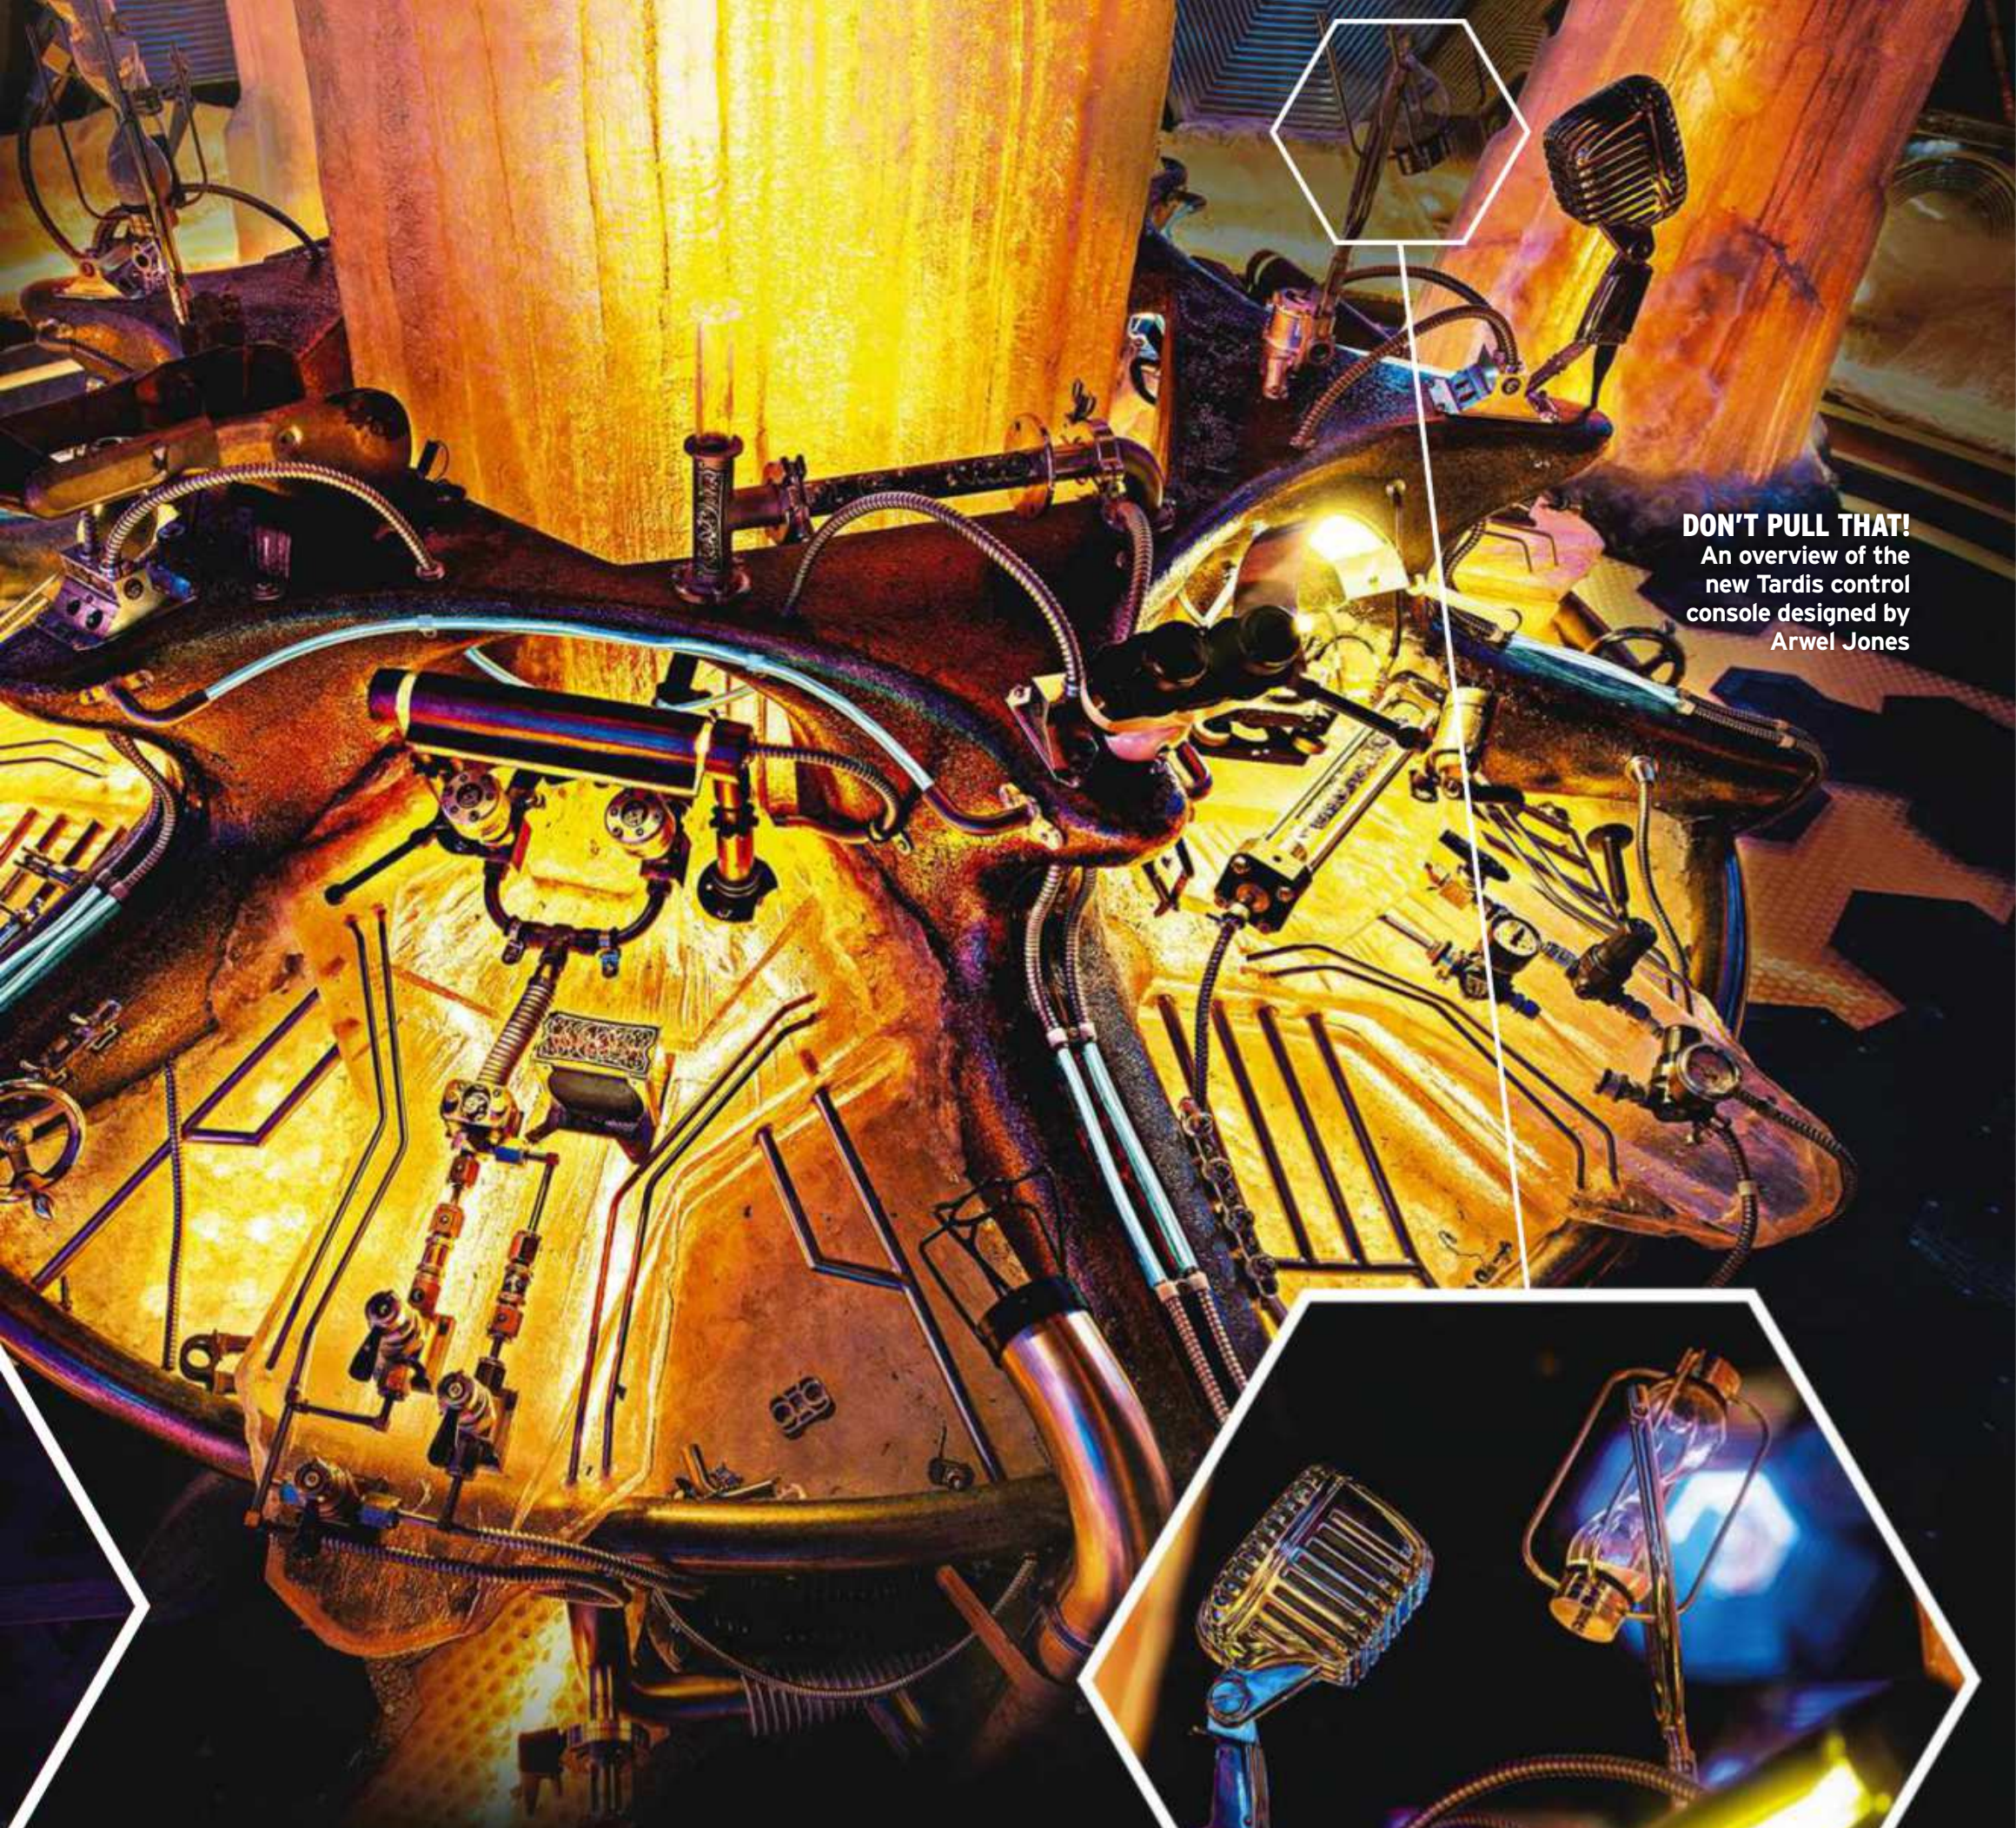

TOSIN COLE
Ryan Sinclair

"I felt like a little kid again, walking into the Tardis for the first time – so exciting! I wanted to try everything: 'What does this do? What does that do?'"

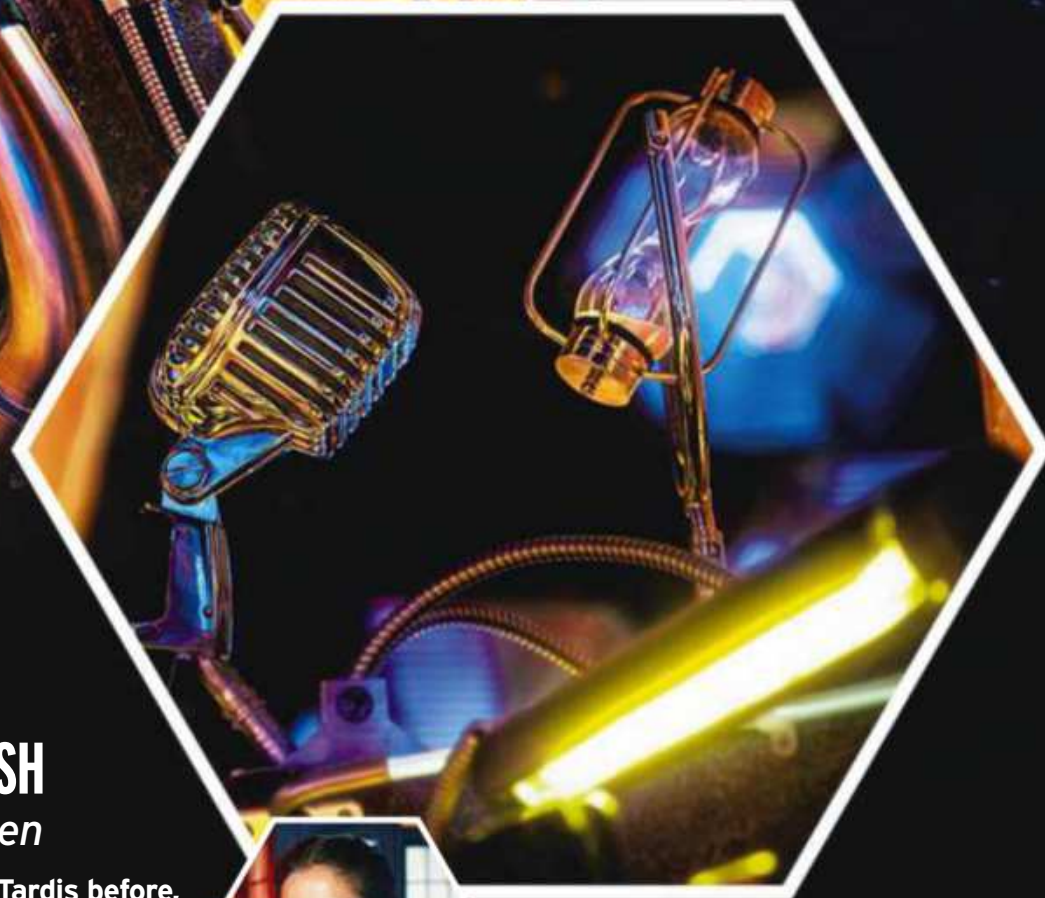

"My favourite thing about it is the movable walls and panels. They seem very futuristic and give it a feng shui sort of vibe. I don't know why they move, they just do! They're like computer screensavers, they keep changing, and I feel totally hypnotised by them."

BRADLEY WALSH
Graham O'Brien

"I'd never been in a TARDIS before, obviously, because I'm not a real time traveller. But this one is magnificent. Having watched Doctor Who as a child during the Bill Hartnell and Pat Troughton years, I'd say Arwel Jones and his team have done the most fantastic job.
"My favourite feature is the door and the little corridor you now go through to get into the TARDIS – walking through them was thrilling. And there it is – massive inside. It's just wonderful."

MANDIP GILL
Yasmin Khan

"The TARDIS is actually much smaller than I thought it would be – and then you get the cameras in and there's really no space! It's epic, though.
"I like the hourglasses on the console. You have all these buttons that look really mechanical and complicated and sci-fi, and then you've got a little sand timer. And they're not decoration – Jodie actually uses them to fly the ship!"

THE TARDIS WAS the shock reveal in the very first Doctor Who episode in 1963 when two London schoolteachers forced their way into a police box and found that its doors led into a vast hi-tech control room – the pride and joy of the first Doctor, William Hartnell. It was a jaw-dropping surprise for BBC viewers 55 years ago as they too struggled to grasp the concept of a vessel that was bigger on the inside and could traverse space and time. Ever since, the discovery of the Tardis has been a key moment for each new companion, while its evolving design has been a gift – and a challenge – for the cast and programme-makers...

The original Tardis design concept with a six-sided control console and walls with circular indentations, or roundels, was dazzling in its day, but Doctor Who's first director, Waris Hussein, tells RT: "It was actually created with a degree of indifference by the designer Peter Brachacki, who didn't have much enthusiasm for the project. It was also born out of a lack of finance and the result was very spartan, but in an odd way the simplicity worked in the long run. The hexagonal centrepiece has become a classic. What amuses me is that it's been elaborated upon over time into the incredible set we have today."

Peter Brachacki's concept was retained, with a few facelifts, for most of Doctor Who's original 26-year run. (Tom Baker's Doctor used a mahogany-panelled room briefly in the mid 70s.) When Peter Davison was the fifth Doctor in 1983, designer Mike Kelt gave the console "a more functional look with a lot more buttons and TV monitors. I was almost given carte blanche with it, although the producer John Nathan-Turner insisted we retain the big red-knobbed door button."

After seven years off air, Doctor Who came back as a feature-length, American-backed co-production starring Paul McGann (right). With a budget of $1 million at his disposal for a new Tardis interior, Canadian designer Richard Hudolin conceived spectacular, spacious chambers with a Jules Verne/Victorian vibe. The console retained its six panels but was now made of varnished oak. Alison Graham went on set in Vancouver and described the Tardis as "a cross between a gentlemen's club and a library, littered with the accumulated souvenirs of centuries of time travel".

THE TARDIS THROUGH TIME

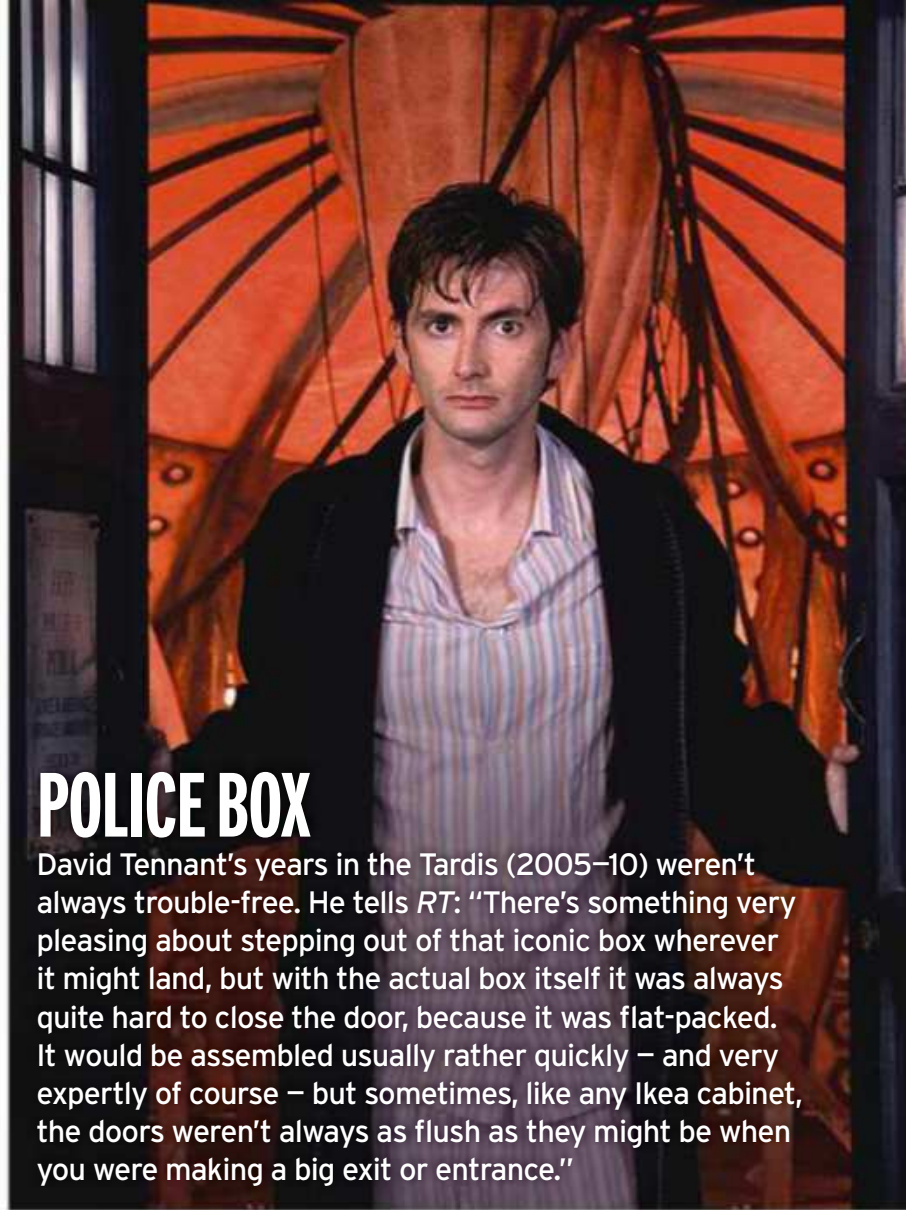

The police box exterior hasn't changed much in 55 years, but the inside has got bigger – and bolder

2005

Doctor Who finally blasted back onto our screens in 2005 with Christopher Eccleston and Billie Piper – and of course a totally new TARDIS, albeit retaining the central console and hexagonal motif. Designer Edward Thomas told RT: “It’s much more of an organic time machine than electrical. A vast cathedral of space. What made previous TARDISes look like sets was the flat floor, so I raised it up and gave the Doctor the chance to get down underneath and really work at the console.” Showrunner Russell T Davies added: “Inside, it used to be a bit like a laboratory, but Edward has turned it into this fantastic environment, with magical lighting and pillars like coral.”

POLICE BOX

David Tennant’s years in the TARDIS (2005–10) weren’t always trouble-free. He tells RT: “There’s something very pleasing about stepping out of that iconic box wherever it might land, but with the actual box itself it was always quite hard to close the door, because it was flat-packed. It would be assembled usually rather quickly – and very expertly of course – but sometimes, like any Ikea cabinet, the doors weren’t always as flush as they might be when you were making a big exit or entrance.”

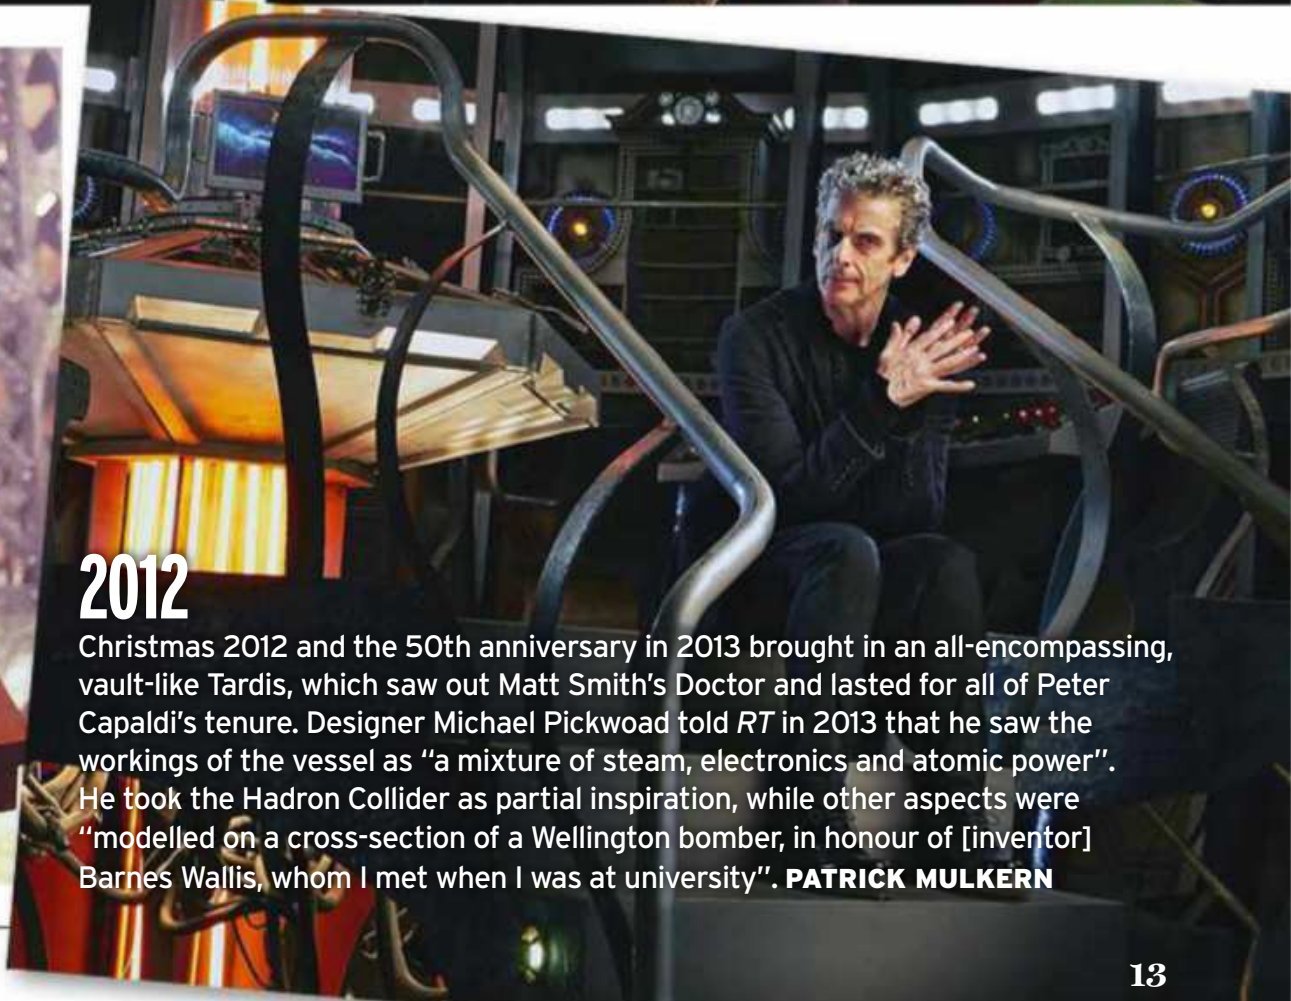

2010

Matt Smith’s Doctor debuted with a vibrant, multi-levelled new TARDIS that was also designed by Edward Thomas. Former showrunner Steven Moffat tells RT: “We had a madder, wackier Doctor, so I think we decided to let the set reflect that. Who has bathtaps on their console? How do you sum up Matt’s Doctor? BATHTAPS!”

2012

Christmas 2012 and the 50th anniversary in 2013 brought in an all-encompassing, vault-like TARDIS, which saw out Matt Smith’s Doctor and lasted for all of Peter Capaldi’s tenure. Designer Michael Pickwoad told RT in 2013 that he saw the workings of the vessel as “a mixture of steam, electronics and atomic power”. He took the Hadron Collider as partial inspiration, while other aspects were “modelled on a cross-section of a Wellington bomber, in honour of [inventor] Barnes Wallis, whom I met when I was at university”. PATRICK MULKERN

'I WAS A LOSER UNTIL I STARTED PLAYING LOSERS'

Michael Caine reflects on why he never played James Bond – and why the Harvey Weinstein scandal has killed off the casting couch for good

THE RT INTERVIEW BY JONATHAN ROSS

NEVER MEET YOUR heroes” is the saying, but I’ve always embraced the opportunity. Of course they’re never quite as you imagine them to be, not least because in your head they stay the same age as when you first fell in love with their work. For me David Bowie will always be Aladdin Sane. Sylvester Stallone is the young Rocky. And Michael Caine is trapped as Harry Palmer in The Ipcress File, a smart but cynical working-class hero equally at home in the kitchen and the bedroom. Michael is now 85, and reliant on a stick to walk while recovering from a broken ankle, but he’s still unmistakably the same man who battled against Zulus and masterminded The Italian Job.

We meet in the cosy, unflashy elegance of his Chelsea home to talk about his life and career, which have been shaped, in the main, by two people – his mum Ellen and his wife of 45 years, Shakira. Though Caine avows a dislike for wallowing in nostalgia – “If you keep looking back, you’ll fall over” – such reminiscence inevitably evokes the richest tales. Even if you’ve heard some before, they still bear repetition.

Caine’s prodigious output – he’s made more than 125 films – stems, he’ll tell you, from a recognition at an early age of the need to put food on the table and money in the meter. Despite being very comfortably off, it’s a work ethic that prevails, with two films and a TV series awaiting his return to full mobility. You can take the boy out of south London, etc... ▷

FAMILY FIRST
A 30-year-old Caine at home in south London with his mother, Ellen, in February 1964

◁ “When the war broke out, I remember my father getting into an Army bus to go away. I was six and my brother Stanley was three. We waved Dad goodbye. My mum, with tears in her eyes, looked at us and said: ‘Now your father’s gone, you’ve got to look after me.’ She made men of us both in that one sentence. And so I grew up forever looking after everybody. If any of my family is in trouble, I’ve taken care of it.”

OF COURSE IN later years it was Caine who needed a bit of looking after. High on the acclaim that Hollywood success brought him, but a bit low on the pressures that partnered that fame, Caine had developed a bottle-a-day (sometimes two) habit – the first vodka livener taken with breakfast. Enter Shakira, who cleaned him up and gave his life new purpose. “I fell in love with her in about eight minutes. It took her two hours to fall in love with me.” He laughs but then, a bit more earnestly, adds, “She saved my life, really.”

She’s rarely absent from his side – either here in their Chelsea flat, where they spend a couple of days a week, or at their country home in Surrey. They clearly still adore each other and are devoted to their grandchildren: twins, a boy and a girl, aged eight, and a grandson of nine.

“We don’t need anybody else except the family,” says Caine. “We’re very happy in our own company. And we all of us, no matter how nice and loving and lovely we are, all have a slightly bad side. Shakira is the only person I ever met who didn’t have a bad side. There’s no bad side. It’s all good.”

And then there’s a showbiz family, too, whose memory he cherishes. He shared a flat off the King’s Road with Terence Stamp; he also briefly lived with composer John Barry. “I was the first person to hear Goldfinger, because John spent all night writing it, and I thought, ‘Is he ever going to stop playing that bloody piano?’”

Plus there’s the Hollywood branch of that family; the likes of Frank Sinatra – whose daughter Nancy he once dated – Shirley MacLaine, Jack Nicholson, Sidney Poitier and of course John Wayne, whose “Talk low, talk slow and don’t say too fing much” advice to the rookie Caine was complemented by “Don’t wear suede shoes”.

When the impressionable Caine asked why, Wayne retorted, “Because you’re going to become famous. You’ll be in the gents’ toilet taking a p and the guy next door is going to recognise you and he’s going to turn and say: ‘You’re Michael Caine.’ And he’s going to p all over them. So don’t wear suede shoes.”

THESE DAYS CAINE enjoys spending time in his garden – he grows his own potatoes – and catching up on sport on TV, which he will watch while nibbling on oat biscuits and sliced apple; even at 85 he’s scrupulous about eating well. What he also did while incapacitated by his ankle break was write a new book, Blowing the Bloody Doors Off, which is part-life manual, part-Memory Lane tour.

Early on in the book he refers to the difficulties that “women and people of colour” have had in his industry. He writes: “It has taken me many decades to understand the battles – not just for the roles, but for dignity and basic decency – that women have been fighting in the movies and many other industries for years, and I’m still learning.”

PARTNERSHIP
With Shakira, his wife of 45 years

That bit of qualification is interesting, so I ask him about the #MeToo movement and what he witnessed while working in Hollywood.

“In Hollywood we were all aware of the casting couch. It was almost a joke. We knew it existed. But my view of the casting couch was that a young lady went to do an audition, the producer said, ‘Well, you’ve got the part if you do this,’ she said, ‘I’m not doing that,’ and he said, ‘Well, you haven’t got the part,’ and she left. I thought it was terribly unfair that a talented actress might not get a part because she wouldn’t do something sexual with the producer. But it happened, and there was nothing I could do about it. I was a nobody in Hollywood. I didn’t have the power of the big producers. But I never thought there were any actual physical attacks.”

‘I’d like to see Idris Elba play Bond – he would be great’

Did you ever work with Harvey Weinstein?

I did three pictures with him. Harvey was a single character in himself. But there is one great thing, if it can be described like that, about Harvey and his behaviour. It’s that actresses are safe now. No producer would dare to do anything sexually, because he knows he’s going to wind up in court, which is exactly where Harvey is.

You had a tough upbringing, yet you think many of today’s youngsters have it harder...

Oh yes, I think it’s much more difficult now. There seems to be a confusion among young people. “How are we supposed to do it? What are we supposed to do?” I watch interviews on television with young people, and I am stunned at the number of times someone who’s asked what they want to do with their life replies: “I want to be rich and famous.”

So you sense a kind of aimlessness?

Yes. There seems to be a slight aimlessness. One of the most important things I say in the book, for a youngster, is that I didn’t set out to become rich and famous. I was a cockney actor, I wasn’t good looking, I had a cockney accent, I’d never been to Rada, I’d never heard of Rada, and I set out not to become a movie star, not to become rich, not to become famous, because I knew that was impossible. You couldn’t do that. What I set out to do was to become the best possible actor I could become, ▷ ◁ believing that I would never make any money, that I would never be famous. And it didn't matter, because I did what I wanted to do.

You were the most iconic working-class star of your generation.

Is class an issue in acting now?

Yes. You can see from all the brilliant young actors – Damian Lewis, Benedict Cumberbatch, Eddie Redmayne. None of them are working-class people. But what I think has happened is that working-class actors have found a very good living in television. There are great parts with thousands of pounds, in TV, and I think they all wound up there instead of trying to go into movies.

In the book you talk about losing friends, which is inevitable as you get older...

Yes. They've started bowling in our lane.

You write movingly of the death in 2008 of your friend, tailor Doug Hayward, who had dementia. You famously take on pretty much any role but when, years later, you were offered the part of someone with dementia, you didn't accept it. Why was that?

I couldn't. I couldn't do it, no. As an actor, if I'm going to play someone with dementia, I have to keep thinking back to someone I know who had dementia. And the only person I knew was Dougie. I saw it every day, I saw it coming. Dementia is like watching someone disappearing over the horizon for two years. They get smaller every day. It finally happened when I went to Dougie's place on Mount Street. He was watching television. I said, "Hi, Doug. How are you today?" And he just looked at me and said, "Hello," and went on watching telly. And I realised he didn't know who I was. It was so sad to see. I mean, he was 61, 62.

But if you had accepted the role, you'd probably have done a great job of it.

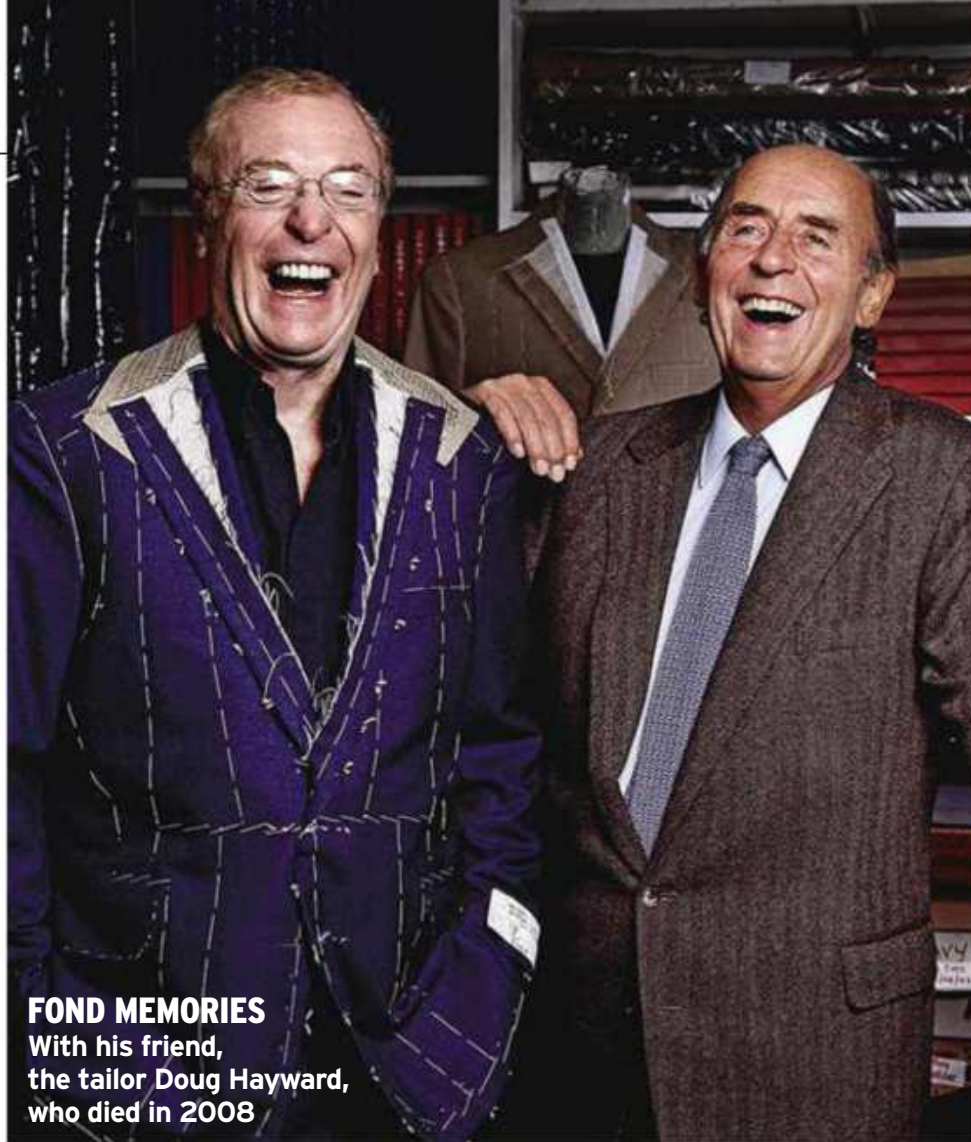

Well yes, I had become so knowledgeable about it. But I realised emotionally I couldn't do it. All day, for two months, thinking about the worst side of Doug, which killed him.

You were close friends with two of the great Bonds, Sean Connery and Roger Moore, but you never got a crack...

I was always much more ordinary. Bond was a glamorous, imaginative creation. I've always played real people.

Losers, to some extent.

Oh, yes. Because I was a loser. Until I started playing losers, I never became a success!

FOND MEMORIES
With his friend, the tailor Doug Hayward, who died in 2008

Alfie, of course, was a loser.

Oh, yes – a huge loser. I mean, the last line he says, "What's it all about?" He genuinely doesn't know what the story is. He's a real loser. But Sean and Roger were always larger than life.

So who should play Bond next?

I'd like to see Idris Elba play it. I'll tell you why. With the wedding of Harry and Meghan, it changed things slightly. Everybody seemed very happy and proud of it, and people of colour who I've talked to since about it are all rather happy that it happened.

You and your generation helped break down the class barrier, but there's still clearly a race barrier.

Yes. And this is one of the ways to do it, because a working-class boy like me, or Sean, or Roger, we became film stars, you know? And here you have this character, which has only ever been played by white men, if you give it to a black man, they'll say, "Oh, we've arrived." Idris would be great.

You made many great movies, but also many that weren't as well received...

I never turned any movie down – that's why I made so much crap! Where I was lucky was I would make three or four really crap pictures, and then suddenly I'd get a big hit, which saved my arse.

How do you avoid taking bad reviews personally?

Practice! [He laughs.]

You took your mum with you to Hollywood – did she like it there?

She was a bit of a Mrs Malaprop sometimes. When I first brought her to Hollywood it was in February. So it was freezing cold here, and it was like 80 degrees in Hollywood. And as we drove through Beverly Hills to my house, she was looking at all the houses – of course everything was in flower, roses and everything – and I said, "What do you think of Beverly Hills, Mum?" She said, "Oh, it's lovely," she said, "All that hysteria growing up the walls." And I thought, "That's absolutely true!" She nailed it.

With that, time's up – just the photographs to do in the basement car park. As Caine edges his way tentatively over to stand before the waiting photographer, something quite remarkable happens. He puts down his stick, and seems to gain a few inches in height, as his shoulders and back stiffen. He transforms himself from the sweet, thoughtful older gentleman he is in real life to the version we know on screen. He's older, wiser, but still every inch the movie star. Still one of my heroes.

THE WONDERFUL EVERYDAY

IT'S BEEN A bit of a year, to say the least. Twelve months ago, there I was, practising my almost non-existent culinary skills for a special fundraising edition of The Great British Bake Off. I spent two days in the tent, making friends with Sandi Toksvig, Noel Fielding, judges Prue Leith and Paul Hollywood and my fellow contestants. Having a laugh, and raising money for charity at the same time. Happy days.

It was all in aid of Stand Up to Cancer. How ironic, then, that while I was making a hash of my crêpes Suzette, I was unwittingly carrying advanced prostate cancer.

One year on, it's a very different life; trying to live normally, while dealing with the effects of this pernicious disease as well as the treatments employed to defeat it. So much has changed.

After the bombshell of the diagnosis, my family and I decided to keep it under wraps for several months while we came to terms with it, and faced up to my having fewer days on this earth than I'd expected. The estimates ranged from ten years (or less) to a rather more optimistic 18. Getting to 80 wouldn't be bad at all.

So when the Bake Off special we'd recorded last autumn went on air in March, it seemed like the best moment to reveal my condition. The cancer, the consultant told me, had spread to the bone – through my pelvis and hips, down into my legs, up my spine and across my ribs. No wonder I'd been unable to cross my legs! Now at least I knew what was causing the pain.

In 40 years of broadcasting, I don't think anything I've done has had quite the impact that this did. Radio Times broke the story on its front cover, with a beautiful article written by my old Breakfast sofa pal Sian Williams. The effect was extraordinary. [The day RT went on sale, Prostate Cancer UK took 205 calls – the busiest day in its history.] The Bake Off episode, with a rather weepy epilogue from me, gained an audience of nearly six million, and donations to Stand Up to Cancer afterwards exceeded expectation.

That was just the beginning. There followed a Twitter avalanche of support from friends, colleagues and people I'd never met, wishing me all the best. Hundreds emailed me at Classic ▷

Bill Turnbull has been praised for saving lives by talking about his cancer. Now, writing exclusively for RT, he reveals how family, friends and box sets are helping him to cope ◁ FM. Some sent cards and letters, even the occasional book; although the one entitled Talking about Death I thought was a touch premature. But if love could have cured me, I'd be a healthy man now.

The main reason I went public was to show men that it could happen to anyone. It's a disease that can creep up on you without any tell-tale symptoms. I'd had my prostate checked when I was 40, and again when I was 50. I thought that had put me in the clear, but it didn't. There were no early warning signs, and by the time I felt anything, it was too late.

FORTUNATELY, FOR MANY others it hasn't been. A lot of men got in touch to say they had gone to get checked. And a number of wives told me they'd made their husbands go. Some have written to let me know what happened next:

"Dear Bill, I thank you for my husband's life. After watching you on television a few months ago my husband reluctantly went for a PSA blood test. He was found to have prostate cancer and had his prostate removed. He has now had the all clear."

What can you say to that? It doesn't make everything worthwhile, but it certainly helps to know that someone will stay alive as a result of my experience. It's gratifying, then, to see the head of the NHS, Simon Stevens, confirming that more men are coming forward and being treated as a result of the experiences of Stephen Fry and me.

'I coped with the chemo by watching TV. Lots of it'

And yet, strangely, there has been a counter argument. I heard that a number of doctors were unhappy because they were being inundated with requests for prostate checks. Friends told me they'd been turned away. In the long run this surely doesn't make sense, as catching cancer in the early stages must surely be cheaper than treating someone whose disease has advanced. It's up to each individual GP to decide whether a test is necessary. But if you're a man and your waterworks aren't functioning as they should, and particularly if you experience back or bone pain, then in my view it's not unreasonable to make a fuss about it.

While all this was going on, I was wading through seven months of chemotherapy, an infusion of chemicals designed to destroy the cancer cells, administered every three weeks. Although it's improved a lot over the years, people will still tell you that having chemo is no fun. To begin with, I wondered what the fuss was about. Sure, you get a few bad days in the first week of each cycle, but it eases after that.

MY APIARY

What I hadn't realised was that the effect of the chemicals is cumulative.

Each round felt worse. I kept my hair, more or less, but lost my sense of taste. I had days when all I could do was lie down and wait for the feeling of crushing fatigue and nausea to pass. By the time I reached round six – supposedly the end of the treatment – I was more than ready to stop. But then, as we weren't making enough progress, the consultant asked me to do four more.

It felt as if the chemo was now taking on a character of its own, like some malevolent gremlin. It would take me on. Grind me down. During the bad phases, I wondered if I'd ever recover from feeling sick and tired and depressed. The three or four "dark days" seemed to last for ever. It seemed that only when it had me pinned down, completely at its mercy physically and mentally, would it release its grip.

I coped by watching TV. Lots of it. Thank heaven for box sets. I did all three series of Narcos, plus The Sopranos, Fargo, Suburra, Gomorra and all 67 episodes of Game of Thrones. You can tell I wasn't exactly having a laugh, but it helped to pass the time. Presenting my weekend radio programmes on Classic FM – where I've had tremendous support – was also good therapy, and something to focus on. And the music, naturally, helped me relax.

After the eighth round of chemo in July, I asked the consultant to release me from the treatment. I just couldn't bear it any longer. We ended up doing one more, and then called it a day. When I was first diagnosed, my PSA (prostate-specific antigen) level – the standard marker, determined by a blood test – was 583. It should have been less than five. We got it down to the 50s, so we've made some progress. The cancer has stopped spreading, but it hasn't been beaten back entirely. We're at a stalemate. If the chemo had worked completely, I'd get two years off treatment before the cancer reared its ugly head again. Instead I've been given a couple of months off. After that, we'll try something else.

TRUE COURAGE

The late Rachael Bland (above left), whose podcast with co-hosts Lauren Mahon and Deborah James, You, Me and the Big C, was a game-changer

Along the way, I've also had any number of tests, and scans, and too many examinations involving rubber-gloved fingers probing where one wouldn't normally want them to. Plus an operation to insert 25cm of plastic tubing, due to complications with my kidney – a procedure that has to be repeated every six months.

There have, of course, been plenty of drugs, too. My daily dose of steroids has slapped an extra stone and a half on my once godlike physique, and I'm experiencing the joy of hot flushes, thanks to a male menopause-inducing hormone treatment. If the temperature goes one degree above normal, I turn beetroot and sweat cascades down behind my ears. I spent much of our holiday in Italy this year with a damp tea towel on my head – more Compo than Lawrence of Arabia. It's all just too much fun.

That's not what bothers me most, though. It's the fact that having cancer is so relentlessly boring. You go to bed at night thinking about it, and it's still there when you wake up. It's there all day, every day – a fact of life you have to get used to. And it's a massive pain in the backside.

People in the cancer world talk about coming to terms with a "new normal", and that's still happening in the Turnbull household. In many ways not much has changed. I still work when I can, commentate on matches at the mighty Wycombe Wanderers, and tend my bees.

They've had a harder time of it than I have this year, fending off hordes of wasps, who invaded and destroyed two of the hives. That's what a hot summer does.

The cancer may have some influence on my life, but I try not to let it rule everything. We eat a lot less meat now, and generally our diet has become healthier. Who knows – every little thing can contribute to extending survival. And I'm still optimistic about hanging around for some time yet.

OF COURSE I wish I'd got myself tested earlier. But I didn't, and that's that. The people I feel for are the younger patients, children and teenagers, who have so much to live for and have every right to wonder why fate has picked on them.

People tell me it took courage to declare my illness. I can't agree. Sometimes it's easier to be open about difficulties than to hide them away, and one of the best things we can do about cancer is to talk about it. The more light we shine on it, the more we share our feelings – and our fears – the less power it has. And what I've done is nothing compared with the work of the wonderful Rachael Bland, a former BBC colleague. She died recently at the age of 40, only two years after she was diagnosed with breast cancer, and yet she managed to contribute so much to others through her podcasts and blogs. That, my friends, was courage indeed.

'My bees have had a harder time of it than I have this year'

I've been lucky. I've been blessed with wonderful support from friends and family. I'm getting the best possible treatment at the Royal Marsden Hospital in London. I have a fantastic GP, and my admiration for the nursing staff who've dealt with me knows no bounds. Along the way, I've encountered some fascinating people. One fellow chemo patient was a woman who managed to beat off multiple sclerosis, only to develop cancer. Twenty years on, she has to have treatment once a week, and yet she is the personification of dignity and calm.

But I'm not sure about "battling against" cancer. Can you really fight something that's inside you? All you can do is follow the treatment the doctors recommend, stay positive and hope for the best. I do believe, though, that we certainly should all stand up to cancer, acknowledge it, and say we'll do our utmost to defeat it. And that's what Stand Up to Cancer is all about.

The secrets of Only Connect

DON'T BE FOOLED by Victoria Coren Mitchell's benign smile and friendly air – Only Connect is the hardest quiz on television. She might look as relaxed as a pub know-all, but the quizzing queen knows all the answers – they're written on her cue cards. So, who are the fiends who concoct the devilishly difficult questions? I'd imagined studious Oxford don types locked in their senior common room, dusty encyclopedias strewn about, and hushed, library silence. But when RT arrives in the industrial estate just outside Cardiff where three episodes a day are recorded back to back, the contest-have intimidatingly good general knowledge, but also have to spot the patterns that link them together. I chat to the Durhamites, four men in their 20s who met at university and are finally having their turn after auditioning years ago. It seems they're far less thirsty to win than eager for the intellectual challenge. Everything is relaxed and supportive: for such a high-brow programme there's no snootiness, rivalry or insouciance. At lunch, crew and contestants all sit together on long tables to eat (and test each other from the official Only Connect book), like at school before an exam. This feels like a family, albeit a remarkably well-oiled and efficient family.

As the cameras roll, the teams wish each other luck. Coren Mitchell, whose baby and comedian husband David are with her for the recording, pops into the contestants' dressing room to impart some last-minute advice of her own: "Take part, be an active team, and don't take yourselves too seriously."

But how hard is it to pull the show together? RT went backstage to find out everything you ever wanted to know about Only Connect...

Studious silence, daggers-drawn rivalry? Not a bit of it. Sarah Carson goes behind the scenes of Britain's hardest quiz show

THE HOST VICTORIA COREN MITCHELL

"Only Connect is a quirky little show. The vibe is as if the contestants, the viewers and I are all in a small room of like-minded people. People are smarter than a lot of TV gives them credit for, and viewers like a challenge.

"I try not to interfere too much with the questions. When they've finished putting the questions together for the series, they send them to me and I 'play' all the programmes as if I were a team. But I'll flag up if a question seems too hard or too easy. I like and respect our contestants enormously. They're brilliant, interesting, and very much my kind of people. They're my collaborators and colleagues – the atmosphere at the studio is incredibly warm and friendly. Obviously they turn up a bit nervous about going on TV – and so am I, who wouldn't be? – but I think the quizzers have fun and relax quite quickly.

"The first series was feeling its way and still quite serious; over time the show has got more confident about its identity, and it's got sillier. But it hasn't changed very much. The joy of taking quizzing seriously, and the simultaneous daftness of that, runs through our show like a seam." >

The kids call it 'Granny's mountain'

Great Gable is the place that makes me feel alive.

I've grown up with this mountain, grown old with it too.

It's watched over me my whole life and when I recently became ill, it inspired my recovery.

So here I am today, at 81, still climbing a mountain I first fell in love with in 1959.

The kids call it 'Granny's mountain'.
Maybe you think that sounds silly?

But that's exactly how I feel about Great Gable.

Because it's always been there for me. And I know it always will be.

These are the places that make us

THE QUESTION EDITORS JACK WALEY-COHEN AND DAVID MCGAUGHEY

"There's no rule book for what our questions cover," says Jack Waley-Cohen, "other than every possible topic is fair game, from particle physics to Wagner to Pokémon to One Direction to Little Mix to Winnie the Pooh to roast dinners. There have been questions on all of those things. I think that's part of the joy of it. There's no embarrassment if you don't know, and there's total joy if you do."

"I was a contestant on the very first episode, and my team lost in the final. So I knew the show quite well from one side. David was a contestant in a pub quiz that I ran, and I was hiring – now we've been working together on quizzes for 12 years. Our main business was running quiz nights and corporate events, but we started writing questions when the original question editor stood down."

"As question editors, we take overall responsibility for the questions. Throughout the year, we're coming up with ideas. We write lots of them, and work on them quite collaboratively, and then there's a team of about 20 question writers. Some write quiz questions and crosswords professionally, some have normal, proper jobs, and just do this for fun. They send their questions in and we pick the ones we like. We edit them, beat them into shape, get them checked and assemble them into the show order, which then is what turns up on TV.

"The idea is, really, to cover as many different topics and question types as possible within a show, and even within a question. The best Only Connect questions would cover four completely different subjects or more – sometimes, you can combine maths and history, and so on. Sometimes we have to reject questions – if it's simply too difficult, or if we have too much of the same kind of thing.

"Only Connect is hard, of course, but one doesn't really want it to be impenetrable. There's a difference between simply not being able to do it, and not being able to understand it at all, even once all has been revealed."

JENNY HAWKER SERIES PRODUCER

"I love being surrounded by people who can outgun me intellectually at every point. It's incredible to be the stupidest person in the room – always!"

"To choose the teams we do a casting call targeting as many organisations as we can, a call goes out at the end of certain shows, and we do an auditions tour. Then the question editor and I create an application form and send that to the teams, and they send it back. From that, we select who we are going to audition – but they have to score pretty high.

"To avoid having seven family teams and an entire series made up of students, we categorise people. We say, for example, 'Your team is going to be young professionals. And then we're going to look at you versus everybody else who applied, but you'll have to beat the competition within your category.' What we often tell people is, 'You're good enough for the show, but you're not going to beat the competition this year. You should come back next year.'

"When we record the show, I try to keep everyone jolly. I want a chatty, lively show, and for the contestants to feel part of something. They're there to have a great time; my favourites are the ones who supplement answers with additional information. People answer questions better when they're relaxed, so I try to make sure they're not intimidated by the environment by telling stories about the crew, and talking to them between games.

'It's incredible to be the stupidest person in the room – always!'

"Lots of our quizzers know other quizzers; it's a real community. We organise a reunion for all our alumni. It's so fun! We all keep in touch – the series-eight champions have been round for dinner with my husband! When they're on the show, we put them in the same hotel, so by the time they meet on set they have often spent time together. Sometimes one of them will host a quiz in the hotel bar. Quizzers are the nicest people in the world."

THE PERSONAL TOUCH The crew make a point of connecting with the contestants

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER CHRIS STUART

"There is this strange thing about British television audiences: we like watching quizzes where we're not really up to answering many questions.

"I've been told that sort of quiz doesn't work very well in many, if any, other territories. But we like it. We like Mastermind. We like University Challenge. We like Only Connect.

We quite like being baffled and watching people who are good at it.

"We are a bit surprised by the viewing figures we get from week to week, but it's an entirely pleasant surprise, and long may it continue! In some ways it's also been a confirmation that there's an audience, a sort of constituency, for this kind of programme. But lots of us believed that from the word go."

Sleep? Forget it!

RT's Strictly columnist Dr Ranj Singh has never worked so hard – but his Aladdin's lamp didn't make his wish come true

WHEN PEOPLE ASK if I'm busy, I reply: I've never worked so hard in my life! I'm a massive Strictly fan, but even I totally underestimated the impact it would have on me. Let me give you a little insight...

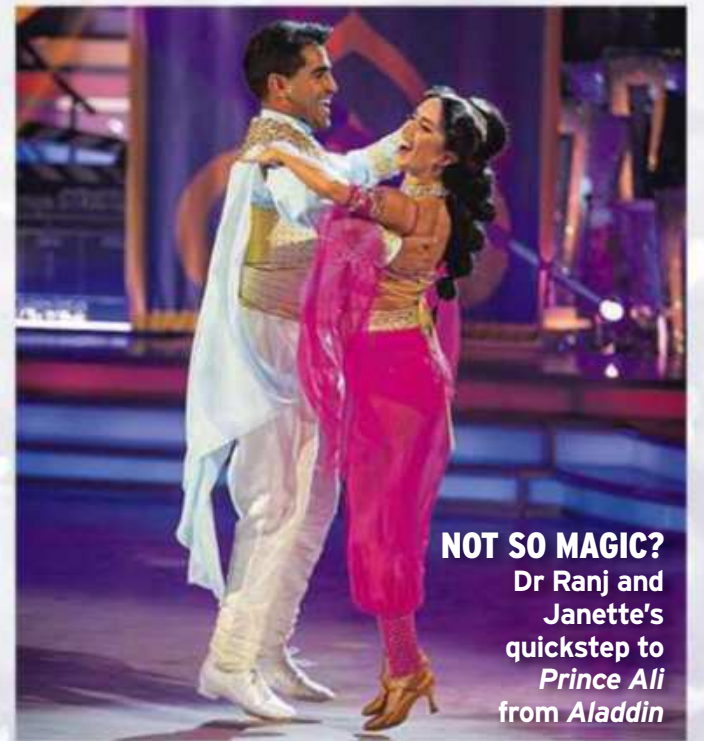

Before Movie Week, I did a full 13-hour shift in the A&E department of my hospital on Monday, finished at 9.30pm and then went on to a two-hour rehearsal. When the pressure's this high, every little counts. Tuesday was spent rehearsing all day and then doing a spot of writing in the evening. Wednesday too was taken up with rehearsing – and then I was booked to appear on BBC2's Strictly: It Takes Two. On Thursday I had my medical phone-in on ITV's This Morning, followed by rehearsals, and then on to the Attitude Awards in the evening. Sure, these glitzy events are fun, until you realise you have to be up at 6am!

We only have four days (Monday to Thursday) to learn and perfect each routine, ready to perform at the weekend. During this time, we also film various bits for the show (behind-the-scenes footage, interviews, montages of what we've been up to etc), which are enormous fun, but do cut into your rehearsal time.

On Friday, I headed down to Elstree to try on my amazing Aladdin costume for Movie Week, film more footage, do some press interviews and run through the entire thing ahead of Saturday. Show day is always incredibly frantic – we perform our routines twice with the live band and then once more as a full-dress rehearsal before the evening's live show. It's hectic but hugely enjoyable – you definitely use up all your energy stores on Saturdays!

I'm always proud of the routines we do, but in Movie Week I was extra proud that Janette and I signed the words "glitter ball" when we first came out. This was a little nod to all the people and children at home who have special commutation needs or hearing difficulties and rely on signing. I wanted them to feel part of the special Strictly experience, too. I don't know much sign language at all, but a Twitter user (called @signinschool) inspired me, and the response has been nothing short of amazing.

'Show day is frantic – you use up all your energy stores'

NOT SO MAGIC?
Dr Ranj and Janette's quickstep to Prince Ali from Aladdin

STILL, HAVING DONE relatively well in the first two weeks, I couldn't help but feel a bit disappointed in myself when I didn't get a similar reaction to my quickstep – especially as I'd worked so hard at it. Anything less than praise can affect you more than you expect. And saying goodbye to another of your friends feels like an extra jab in the side – bidding farewell to Lee wasn't easy.

Then, before you know it, it's Monday again and time to do it all over again. We hope!

The healing Games

Sport isn't warfare – but it can unlock the lives of the wounded

Invictus Games From Saturday 5.25pm BBC1, then daily BBC1/BBC red button/iPlayer

FLICK THROUGH THE sports pages of any newspaper: United were put to the sword, the winger left him for dead, City were given a life, they brought out the heavy artillery, they endured a sustained bombardment, but he's a warrior that one, the sort you'd like alongside you in the trenches...

Martial metaphors march unchecked through the peaceful frivolities of sport, but then sport itself is a kind of martial metaphor. You play sport – as sometimes we watch sport – as if it were a matter of life and death, but in the knowledge that it's nothing of the kind.

It follows that when sporting and military matters coincide, there's a curious tension in the air – and that lies at the heart of the Invictus Games, which this year are taking place in Sydney. The Games are an international, multi-sport event for wounded, injured and sick servicemen and women, or "Those of us who tion.' And then there was the social aspect of it: being part of a team with a goal, which is like the things I did in the military.

"Of course, it's also very different," says Chalmers. "I don't hold anyone's life in my hands as I did before. But sport can unlock somebody's life – and not just because you win something, but because you're involved in something."

The driving force of the Games is Prince Harry. "You can't put on a sporting event of that size without total commitment – and every decision of importance goes through him," says Chalmers. However, this isn't an entirely comfortable event, but perhaps it shouldn't be.

Alongside the stress on the military virtues of teamwork and sacrifice, there are the mutilated bodies of the survivors of warfare on view.

"I think the Games open the eyes of people – and give them a better understanding of the military," says Chalmers. "Everybody can take inspiration from this. And that's something Prince Harry cares about, and I'm incredibly grateful that he did this."

THE INVICTUS GAMES and the Paralympics haven't just brought disability sports before a wider public, they have helped to make disability something more like an ordinary aspect of everyday life; something we accept rather than something to avert our eyes from.

"I hate the word disabled," says Chalmers. "And I hate able-bodied just as much. Does it mean that an able-bodied person is perfect? Put me in Poland and I can't speak Polish, so I have a disability. Put me in a karaoke competition and I'm disabled because I can't sing. But put me on my bike..."

"I think at the Invictus Games we can all take what we need from them and go on and have a better day. Anyone can watch them and know that there is something there for you."

'I hate the word disabled. Is an able-bodied person perfect?'

have lost a few chunks of ourselves," as BBC presenter JJ Chalmers puts it. He had an unscheduled meeting with a bomb in Helmand province in Afghanistan while serving with the Royal Marines and suffered injuries to his face and limbs and lost a couple of fingers. As a result of the damage he had to learn to walk again.

At the inaugural Invictus Games in 2014, he won a gold medal and two bronzes in the cycling. Sport, he says, played a crucial part in his recovery. "It adds an excitement factor, and creates motivation. It's not: 'I need to do that in order to function.' It's: 'I want to do that because I want take it into competi-

40 years of fear

Forget all previous sequels – Halloween is back, with Jamie Lee Curtis in the role that made her a star

SCARILY, IT'S 40 years since "The Night He Came Home!" – to borrow Halloween's shrieking original poster tagline. This year, on Friday 19 October, everybody's favourite bogeyman is back in cinemas to stalk small-town America and our collective nightmares.

Released this month in 1978 in the States (in the UK, we had to wait until the following January), John Carpenter's horror rapidly became a pop culture phenomenon, made Jamie Lee Curtis a perennial Scream Queen, minted a gamut of new horror tropes and spawned countless imitators. It remains one of the most successful independent films of all time – it cost $325,000 yet grossed in excess of $70 million on its first release. The existing canon of ten films has made $366 million worldwide.

The latest arrives in the form not of a reboot, a remake or a reimagining but – wait for it! – a "recalibration" by Blumhouse Productions, the genre studio of the moment responsible for Insidious, The Purge and Paranormal Activity brands, and the Oscar-winning Get Out.

The concept of child minders under duress was horror currency well before Carpenter, a graduate of the USC School of Cinematic Arts, shook it up in 1978. I Saw What You Did (1965) and Fright (1971) are just two inspirations producer Irwin Yablans had in mind when he offered Carpenter the job of directing a project that was originally titled The Babysitter Murders. Yablans had been impressed by Carpenter's slick 1976 siege thriller Assault on Precinct 13, which had been shown at the London film festival through UK distributor Miracle Films, whose head honcho was called Michael Myers. Little did the boss realise that his name would soon enter the Horror Hall of Fame thanks to Carpenter using it for his marauding madman.

The plot is simplicity itself: incarcerated for stabbing his teenage sister to death in 1963, the fictional Michael Myers escapes from a lunatic asylum and returns home to terrify college girls on babysitting duty over Halloween.

An ardent B-movie fan, Carpenter took the spooky shadows of producer Val Lewton's 1942 classic Cat People and mixed them with Alfred Hitchcock's combination of humour and tension. In tribute to Psycho, which starred Janet Leigh, mother of leading lady Jamie

'The original cost $325,000, yet grossed $70 million'

Lee Curtis, the psychiatrist played by Donald Pleasence is named Sam Loomis, after Leigh's boyfriend in the 1960 film. Carpenter also shot in widescreen, rarely employed for horror in the 70s, which meant that he could use every corner of the frame for sudden sleight-of-hand jolts.

So what made Halloween such a massive crossover hit? Partly the believability of its

Claymation heroes

Victorian essayist Walter Bagehot's quote about the royal family – "We must not let in daylight upon magic" – rang in my ears on the grand day out last summer when I was given a guided tour around Aardman Animations in Bristol. There's danger in going behind the scenes but, if anything, the insight improved my appreciation. Whenever I watch Aardman now, I can smell the resin and the solder and the industry.

When they produced their first feature-length adventure for cheese-eating inventor Wallace and his polymath dog Gromit, the studio proved that "claymation" can hold the attention for 85 minutes, and win prizes – including an Oscar for best animated feature film. In The Curse of the Were-Rabbit, an industrial accident connected to the duo's pest-control business leaves the town's vegetables terrorised by a giant mutant rabbit, whom our heroes volunteer to catch. Priceless action set pieces ensue, including an unforgettable fairground biplane chase.

But all the technical, silicon-derived wizardry in the world wouldn't amount to a hill of clay without the story and the script (in this case written by co-directors Nick Park and Steve Box, with Bob Baker and Mark Burton). I sense I'm not alone in my fondness for the sequence in the van where Gromit is attached by strings to a monster-sized decoy bunny on the roof. "How could any hot-blooded rabbit resist?" exclaims Wallace. He directs Gromit to be "more alluring", at which the pooch starts doing a high-kick to the strains of The Stripper.

It may be produced in partnership with DreamWorks, but Were-Rabbit remains as English as the Ralph Fiennes-voiced tweedy aristo villain and Helena Bonham Carter's scatty Lady Totty... and, of course, a plot that hinges on a vegetable competition. Perfect half-term entertainment, it's quite scary in a harmless way, too.

female teenage characters and their easy-going interaction before being locked in resourceful combat with the masked killer. Halloween also helped formalise the recurrent horror themes "Have Sex and Die" (self-explanatory) and "Final Girl" (where a sole female is still standing after a high body count). But, for many, the beating heart of Halloween is its stunning mood music. Inspired by the prog rock band Goblin's timeless scores for Dario Argento's Deep Red (1975) and Suspiria (1977), Carpenter composed his music in two weeks, rewriting horror soundtrack history with that insistently prickly three-note piano theme.

AS JACK THE Ripper lives on in our imaginations because he was never caught or unmasked, Myers – often referred to as "The Shape" – similarly transcends death; with a quasi-supernatural presence of banal evil and shadowy myth, and that emblematic white face mask, he has become a mass entertainment icon of our times.

And now the icon returns... This 11th Halloween has been crafted by fanboy co-writer/director David Gordon Green and actor/writer Danny McBride. Once more, the plot focuses on Curtis's Laurie Strode and what hold that traumatic night 40 years ago might still have on her life. By ignoring every single sequel, Green and McBride have freed up the narrative without worrying about complex timelines or backstories. More importantly, they've axed Myers being Laurie's older brother, something that really only happened in Halloween II back in 1981 because Luke Skywalker's parentage was a big thing.

The very good news is that Curtis, back playing her signature role for the sixth time, also has an executive producer credit... a clue to this being a classier enterprise all round. They've even got the original "Shape" actor Nick Castle back, hopefully earning more than the $25 a day he was paid in 1978, while the late Donald Pleasence psychobabbles away in true Dr Loomis fashion courtesy of a soundalike.

Apparently, this really is the end of the road for the entire Halloween franchise, as no sequel has been developed or promised, beyond Green and McBride revealing that they'd intended to film two features back to back. "Let's not get ahead of ourselves," McBride warned.

They're kidding, right? 2018's new Halloween is bound to be a hit, because you really can't keep a good movie maniac down. ALAN JONES

Wind beneath My Wings was originally recorded by whistling folkie Roger Whittaker, but it was Midler who took it to the top of the US charts

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Beaches ★★★ 8.35-11.05pm C5 12

MELODRAMA In our fragmented culture of catch-up and box sets, what an old-fashioned treat it is to sit down on a Saturday evening and enjoy a superior, machine-tooled Hollywood rollercoaster of emotion when – as we used to say – it goes out. Beaches is a power-ballad weepie from the late Garry Marshall, starring Bette Midler and Barbara Hershey as two women whose friendship runs from the late 1950s to the 80s, lending the whole thing a feeling of life unfolding. Played in the early years by future Big Bang Theory star Mayim Bialik, "CC" grows up to be Midler's wannabe star, while rich kid Hillary becomes Hershey's human-rights lawyer. Cohabitation ensues, as well as a tussle over a man (John Heard), marriage, divorce, work/life imbalance, reconciliation and, inevitably, an unwelcome diagnosis. Wind beneath My Wings is the big song, and if it doesn't bring a tear to your eye, your TV's on the blink. (US 1988, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

DAYTIME

The Spiderwick Chronicles ★★★ 3.00-5.00pm Syfy PG

FANTASY Goblins, trolls and griffins populate this adaptation of the bestselling book series that plays like a horror movie for kids. Young British actor Freddie Highmore takes dual roles as twin brothers who move into a creepy old mansion in New England with their sister and recently separated mother, where they discover an ancient "field guide" that reveals a hidden world of fairies and monsters. Children who enjoy being scared will find the film's chases, magical spells and battles utterly gripping. JR (US 2008, some violence, HD)

Sister Act/Sister Act 2 ★★★★★/★★★★ 4.45-9.00pm Film4 PG

COMEDY Ghost may have won Whoopi Goldberg an Oscar, but it was Sister Act that turned her into a huge Hollywood star. She plays the Reno lounge singer who accepts a police offer of protection that entails hiding out in a convent after she witnesses lover Harvey Keitel killing a man. The remainder of the first movie follows our heroine as she tries to bring the nuns and Maggie Smith's strict Mother Superior into the 20th century. The "nuns just want to have fun" concept continues into the sequel, which sees Goldberg once more back in the habit and teaching music to a bad-attitude class at a run-down high school. The original film wins out, but the musical sequences are lively in both. JB/AJ (US 1992/1993, edited for language, HD)

Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 1 ★★★ 5.55-8.25pm ITV 12

FANTASY After an unbroken run of excellent family films, the Harry Potter franchise runs aground in its seventh instalment, which tackles the first half of the series' epic final volume. With Harry, Ron and Hermione on the run and the regular troupe of supporting actors reduced to the status of high-cost extras, it falls to Daniel Radcliffe, Emma Watson and Rupert Grint to carry the bulk of the action by themselves on an extended road trip. Some stunning set pieces and a beautiful animated segment lift proceedings considerably, but the film plays more like an extended prologue than a story in its own right. SM (UK/US 2010, may be edited for violence, HD)

EVENING

The Life of Riley ★★★ 7.10-9.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY In his lifetime, Riley B King – better known as BB King – more than earned his nickname "The King of the Blues". Born in Mississippi in 1925, he worked on a cotton plantation while singing with the local church choir and learning his first guitar chords. He began recording in 1949 and influenced a generation of rock royalty, including Mick Jagger, Ringo Starr, Eric Clapton and Bono, who all testify to his greatness. But this engrossing profile puts King front and centre, and director Jon Brewer not only captures his musical genius but also his tenacity in enduring decades of racial prejudice. DP (UK 2012, some swearing, violent images, HD)

300: Rise of an Empire ★★★★★ 9.00-11.10pm Universal 15

ACTION This worthy companion piece to Zack Snyder's 300 depicts events that run parallel to the Spartan massacre. General Themistocles (Sullivan Stapleton) rallies his fellow Grecians together against the massive Persian navy led by ruthless commander Artemisia (Eva Green). Like 300, the film is based on a Frank Miller graphic novel, and director Noam Murro skilfully sticks to what worked the first time in terms of raw, full-blooded violence and rugged, thunderous action – all stunningly designed and beautifully rendered with resplendent CGI augmentation. AJ (US 2013, violence, a sex scene, nudity)

LATE NIGHT

Insidious: Chapter 3 ★★★ 11.35pm-1.25am C4 15

HORROR Why did reclusive clairvoyant Elise Rainer step into the spooky spotlight and how did she meet that goofy ghostbusting duo? All is revealed in series writer-turned-first-time-director Leigh Whannell's prequel, which takes place a few years before the Lambert haunting of 2010's original Insidious. Here, Elise (once more played with ghoulish gusto by Lin Shaye) comes out of terrified retirement to save a grieving teen from an evil entity. It all adds up to a better than expected creep-fest, especially given the batting averages for the third instalment in any franchise. AJ (US/Can 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

A Severed Head ★★★ 11.35pm-1.40am Talking Pictures TV

BLACK COMEDY Though not a patch on Iris Murdoch's 1961 novel, nor its subsequent stage adaptation, this is still an amusing, sophisticated British sex comedy. Screenwriter Frederic Raphael was obviously writing about people he knew – academics and posh folk indulging in a mad charade of partner-swapping. In his first screen lead, Ian Holm is the wine merchant juggling a wife and mistresses. DM (UK 1970)

Half of a Yellow Sun ★★★ 12.35-2.20am BBC2 15

DRAMA Writer/director Biyi Bandele unpicks Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie's non-linear novel in this harrowing but superficial tale set during a tumultuous decade of Nigerian history. After being granted independence from Britain in 1960, the Igbo people rise up to establish the Republic of Biafra, with Thandie Newton and Anika Noni Rose as British-educated twins caught in the maelstrom. The tone lurches between highbrow and soap opera, but the film is elevated by its committed performances. DP (Nig/UK 2013, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

10 Rillington Place ★★★★★

11.30pm-1.20am BBC2 15

DRAMA Imagine if Fred West's house in Gloucester hadn't been bulldozed after the discovery of his appalling crimes but used as a verité location for a dramatised film. Such was – almost – the case with this 1970 British film about serial killer and fake backroom abortionist John Christie, who calculatingly strangled eight women in the 1940s and 50s in a terraced house in Notting Hill, west London. The grisly tale is precisely told by Boston Strangler director Richard Fleischer and writer Clive Exton without flinching. Cinema's "decent cove" Richard Attenborough is boldly cast against type as the unassuming psychopath, while a young, Bafta-nominated John Hurt convinces as framed tenant Timothy Evans – a notorious true-life miscarriage of justice. It remains uneasy viewing, with its desaturated colour palette and bomb-site milieu, but it's also worthwhile for its cautionary legal tale. Incredibly, 7 Rillington Place stood in for number 10, because the actual house was occupied. (UK 1970, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD) across the road from Om Puri's newly opened business. A game of one-upmanship ensues, as each tries to get punters through their door. But when the prodigious culinary talent of Om Puri's son (Manish Dayal) catches Madame's attention, a bridge starts to be built between the two. There are few insights into what really makes these characters tick, but the always-good-value Puri, best known for East Is East, delivers some wry laughs and it really helps that Dayal is a likeable presence. SP (US 2014)

The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel

★★★★ 6.35-9.00pm Film4 12

COMEDY DRAMA Masterfully directed by John Madden (Shakespeare in Love), this audaciously manipulative charmer sees a group of British pensioners relocate to India for their retirement, lured by the promise of cheap luxury at the establishment of the title. But the place, run by ever-optimistic manager Dev Patel (in a sweetly subtle performance), turns out to be a dump. However, the colourful location and the pensioners' shared experiences have a transformative effect, underlining the resilience of the human spirit. The film does become slightly predictable – Maggie Smith's xenophobia mellows, henpecked Bill Nighy finds himself and Judi Dench is faced with a romantic conundrum – yet it never once strays from satisfying, feel-good magic. The sequel is showing on Tuesday. AJ (US 2011, sexual references, edited for language, HD)

A Walk among the Tombstones ★★

9.00-11.20pm SSTAR 15

THRILLER Liam Neeson resumes his craggy hero guise in writer/director Scott Frank's moody, misjudged thriller based on Lawrence Sanders' crime novel, one of a series featuring world-weary gumshoe Matt Scudder. Neeson (looking more fed up and delivering less conviction than ever) plays the former police officer with a chequered, alcoholic past who becomes a reluctant player in a dangerous game. Investigating the abduction and murder of the wife of a wealthy drug dealer (a shifty Dan Stevens), Neeson finds out that she wasn't the first to die and she won't be the last. Frank crafts a grim world where the female characters are portrayed as victims, and the violence against them is all the more disconcerting for being so insensitively handled. EAS (US 2014, violence, swearing, brief nudity)

RoboCop ★★★★★

9.00-11.10pm ITV4 18

SCI-FI Hi-tech meets High Noon in this deft science-fiction masterpiece from Dutch director Paul Verhoeven, which delivers on both violent action and satirical fronts. Peter Weller gives a great mime performance as the Detroit cop of the near future, resurrected as a cyborg, who goes head-hunting the sadistic gang of lowlifes responsible for his plight as his human memory begins to return. But it's Verhoeven's scabrous dissection of American social issues, trashy sitcom culture and corporate greed that makes this comic-book opus such a subversive and thought-provoking edge-of-the-seat treat. AJ (US 1987, violence, swearing, drug abuse, brief nudity, HD)

R.I.P.D. ★★★

10.15pm-12.10am C4 12

FANTASY This odd couple buddy movie stars Ryan Reynolds as a recently slain policeman sent back to the mortal world by the Rest in Peace Department of the title. He's partnered by Jeff Bridges as the grizzled ghost of a Wild West sheriff, and together they're assigned to round up "deados", deceased villains who, through a cosmic loophole, have also returned to Earth to continue their wrongdoings. Director Robert Schwentke attempts to concoct a hybrid of Men in Black and Ghost Busters, but the script can't match either of those films in terms of gag-count or snappy performances. Instead, the whole affair takes on the feel of a 1960s Hanna-Barbera cartoon with lots of glossy visual effects. TeS (US 2013, violence, HD)

Arachnophobia ★★★★★

4.20-6.30pm Syfy PG

HORROR Steven Spielberg's longtime producer Frank Marshall turned director for this tongue-in-cheek, creepy-crawly tale about deadly tropical spiders invading the small California town where phobic doctor Jeff Daniels has just started up a practice. Marshall shows much of his mentor's touch, spinning a tension-laden web full of solid scares and well-timed wit in what is virtually a version of Alfred Hitchcock's The Birds, only with eight legs. John Goodman's exterminator provides some lovely moments but the shudder content may well be too much for those who can't stand spiders. AJ (US 1990, violence, edited for language)

Father of the Bride ★★★★★

4.50-6.55pm E4 PG

COMEDY The original 1950 marriage-go-round comedy starring Spencer Tracy is given an amiable 1990s work-out here by the husband-and-wife team of Charles Shyer and Nancy Meyers. Steve Martin shines as usual, playing the Tracy role of the anxious parent who can't find a single thing to like about his daughter's perfect fiancé, while continually counting the ceremony costs. Diane Keaton gives him sparkling back-up as the uncomplaining wife, but it's the unbridled Martin Short who steals the entire movie as a camp wedding organiser. AJ (US 1991, HD)

ADVENTURE Before making it big by directing Macaulay Culkin in Home Alone, Chris Columbus wrote the screenplay from a story by a certain Steven Spielberg for this good-natured romp, in which a gang of children tackles a family of crooks while searching for a hoard of missing pirate treasure. The tale rattles along like a juvenile Raiders of the Lost Ark and the young leads – including Martha Plimpton, Sean Astin and Josh Brolin – are a likeable bunch. There's also some nice hamming from villains Anne Ramsey, Joe Pantoliano and Robert Davi. JF (US 1985, edited for violence, language)

MYSTERY With the diminishing returns of the two sequels Angels & Demons and 2016's Inferno, the first Dan Brown adaptation is starting to look like a deftly constructed entertainment for people who enjoy European city breaks. Don't sneer at an author for being popular; Brown provides a decent tour guide to Paris and London in this first outing from director Ron Howard for Tom Hanks as intrepid symbologist Robert Langdon. Assisted by cryptographer Audrey Tautou, he's on the trail of an Opus Dei faction hell-bent on destroying the Holy Grail. Locations ranging from the Louvre to Shoreham Airport add globetrotting glamour to the head-scratching quest, and Paul Bettany turns it up to 11 as a mad monk. (US 2006, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

DID YOU KNOW? Jean Reno's character name, Bezu Fache, is a crude pun, roughly translated to "angry fer", which alludes to Fache's short fuse

COMEDY An Oscar winner for scripting The Seventh Veil, Muriel Box directs here but struggles to make something of a story short on credibility and atmosphere. Shelley Winters stars as a vengeful divorcee trying to keep her mitts on a fortune by preventing her successor from producing a male heir. Co-stars John Gregson and Peggy Cummins have more trouble coping with Winters's overplaying than her wacky schemes. DP (UK 1954, BW)

Star Trek ★★★
9.00-11.30pm Sky1 12

SCI-FI The 11th Star Trek motion picture is a prequel to the original TV series – a canny decision from director JJ Abrams, who was tasked with reviving the franchise. A big budget ($150 million) and top-flight digital effects combine with a scene-setting scenario and enough in-jokes to satisfy the old guard. An impulsive, young James T Kirk (Chris Pine), made cynical by a pre-credits tragedy, reluctantly attends Starfleet Academy and stows aboard the USS Enterprise. Here his frosty relationship with Vulcan first officer Spock (Zachary Quinto) thaws in the grip of an epic, time-travelling battle with Eric Bana's impressive Romulan foe, Nero. The Love Punch ★★★

9.00-10.55pm Paramount Network 12

COMEDY Emma Thompson reteams with British writer/director Joel Hopkins (Last Chance Harvey) and here co-stars with Pierce Brosnan in a screwball caper full of fizz and pop that tracks the bumbling efforts of a divorced couple to steal a diamond from the fat cat who's squandered their pension fund. Thompson and Brosnan are giddy as schoolkids on a mission that takes them to the French Riviera, where they scale cliff-faces, get into car chases, and, yes, fall in love with each other all over again. The chemistry is bang on, and Celia Imrie and Timothy Spall provide sterling back-up. SP (UK/Fr 2013, may be edited for language, sexual references)

The Ghost Writer ★★★
10.00pm-12.40am ITV4 15

THRILLER A hack writer charged with ghosting the memoirs of a British prime minister finds himself on dangerous ground in Roman Polanski's screen version of the Robert Harris novel. The mysterious demise of his predecessor sees Ewan McGregor's unnamed ghostwriter dispatched to the American hideaway of Adam Lang (Pierce Brosnan), who's keen to set the record straight on a premiership clouded by contentious policies on Iraq. But it's when McGregor uncovers more than he should, that the plot kicks into prime Polanski paranoid thriller gear. The parallels with the Blair years are mischievously upfront but it's the mastery of Hitchcockian unease that delivers. TJ (Fr/Ger/UK 2010, swearing, HD)

1.25-3.45am Film4 12

DRAMA Michael Caine stars as an American widower living in Paris whose cycle of grief is interrupted when he meets Clémence Poésy, a young woman with whom he has an instant connection. Many dinners, arguments and reminiscences follow. But, with little in the way of development, the mood turns maudlin. There are tender moments but they tend to make Poésy superfluous, the pair's burgeoning relationship serving only to underline what Caine had with his wife. JL (Ger/US/Bel/Fr 2013, swearing, HD)

DRAMA When Benedict Cumberbatch signed on to play WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange, the hacker turned freedom-of-information advocate was still regarded as a swashbuckler. Director Bill Condon keeps the story rattling along, while Josh Singer's screenplay sticks close to the facts. The meat of the drama is the fractious relationship between an arrogant, stubborn Assange and his German collaborator Daniel Domscheit-Bergg (Daniel Brühl). Though it's been overtaken by subsequent events, it still grips. (US 2013, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

this signalled an exciting new direction for Amicus, Hammer's nearest British rival, as they entered the horror-swamped 1970s. Terence Stamp is brought out of a 30-year coma by neurosurgeon Robert Vaughn and, following a crash course in the ways of society, is sent into the terrifying outside world. In one of his finest roles, Stamp is outstanding; his subtle character shadings ooze a captivating truth. Exploitation by the mass media is also broached in this intelligent thriller that is an overlooked classic. AJ (UK 1970)

The Fog ★★★★★

HORROR Spectral pirates terrorise a coastal town in this shocker from John Carpenter. The director isn't at the peak of his form here and loses dramatic focus by switching between two heroines who never meet. The first is disc jockey Adrienne Barbeau, then married to Carpenter, and the second Jamie Lee Curtis, who was starring with real-life mum Janet Leigh for the first time (she's currently playing Halloween's Laurie Strode again in cinemas – see page 36). Carpenter also relies heavily on cheap scare tactics rather than subtle suspense, but some sequences do turn the tension dial up. A restored version of The Fog is being re-released on Halloween. AJ (US 1980, may be edited for violence)

CRIME THRILLER This twisting thriller from director James Foley finds grifter Edward Burns co-opted by eccentric crime boss Dustin Hoffman into scamming a banker. Although stylishly packaged as a modern film noir, the characters fail to convince as rounded human beings, feeling more like ciphers designed to ignite plot fireworks. COMEDY This screwball masterclass takes Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur's stage play The Front Page, and injects fizzing dialogue from Charles Lederer. Rosalind Russell plays motormouthed star reporter Hildy, who is due to marry Ralph Bellamy's bore to the chagrin of her wound-licking ex, Cary Grant, who is also her former boss at the Morning Post. She mocks him as "a big fat lummo" for hiring an airplane to write, "Hildy, don't be hasty, remember my dimple!" She says, "Walter, it delayed our divorce 20 minutes while the judge went out to watch it." Grant seeks to derail the upcoming marriage by sending her on a juicy story. Events spiral at the courthouse, the jail and the newsroom, mostly verbally, with counterfeit cash, sirens, gunshots and phrases like "goo-goo eyes" and "bumble-headed baboon" flying. They don't make 'em like this anymore, but while we can still watch the marvellous originals, they have no need to. (US 1939, BW)

FANTASY Answering all questions about the early relationship between Professor Xavier (the superb James McAvoy) and Magneto (a top-notch Michael Fassbender) and the origins of their mutant factions, Kingsman director Matthew Vaughn's prequel was a terrific reboot of the then moribund Marvel series. Beginning in Nazi Germany and ending with the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis, this grandiose globetrotting fantasy boasts plentiful action spectacle and effective character-based drama set in an age of civil unrest and Cold War paranoia. AJ (US 2011, violence, swearing, HD)

The Conjuring ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm ITV2 15

HORROR In 1971, before they took on the notorious Amityville haunting, real-life demonologist Ed Warren and his clairvoyant wife helped the Perron family through a supernatural onslaught at their Rhode Island farmhouse. Here, the Warrens are played by Patrick Wilson and Vera Farmiga, opposite Lili Taylor and Ron Livingston as the new homeowners whose daughters are first to sense a hateful entity linking back to the Salem witch trials. Director James Wan gets double the impact by combining this "true" story with echoes of his own films, like a possessed puppet that recalls Saw and Dead Silence. AJ (US 2013, violence, HD)

Sunshine ★★★ 9.00-11.15pm Sony Movie Channel 15

SCI-FI Director Danny Boyle's first foray into pure science fiction starts out as a philosophical epic along the lines of 2001: a Space Odyssey before lurching inexplicably into the action horror territory previously charted by Alien and Event Horizon. Set in 2057, the film boasts crisp performances from Cillian Murphy, Chris Evans and Rose Byrne as the astronauts who are sent on a hazardous mission to rekindle the dying Sun by firing a giant bomb into its core. Boyle succeeds admirably in cranking up the tension as things go awry and the crew are subjected to unnerving phenomena. AS (US/UK 2007, violence, swearing)

Scream ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.20am W 18

HORROR Director Wes Craven's intelligent reinvention of the slasher genre sees a maniac on the loose in a small suburban town, murdering anyone who gets horror trivia questions wrong. Gleefully exploring the relationship between gore movies and their core audience, this terrific shocker exposes the genre's knee-jerk devices, while still offering gasps galore – and a genuinely surprising dénouement. The elaborate script subversively keeps things scary even when the sinister events are at their funniest, and pays clever homage to such key titles as Halloween and Friday the 13th. AJ (US 1996, violence, swearing)

A Dark Truth ★★ 10.45pm-1.00am Movies4Men 15

ACTION This would-be eco-thriller has a lot of potential, but it is not nearly as engaging as it could be. The cast, led by Andy Garcia and Forest Whitaker, is strong, while writer/director Damian Lee's story about the privatisation of water resources by global conglomerates remains a topical and relatively under-reported issue. The talent works hard, but the script suffers thanks to its hackneyed polemics on the nature of man and the value of truth. ReP (Can 2012)

Blair Witch ★★★ 10.50pm-12.45am Film4 15

HORROR Director Adam Wingard's belated but stylish second sequel is fundamentally a mainstream remake of the original landmark film, only with supernatural acrobatics added for extra suspense. Twenty years after his sister Heather went missing in Maryland's Black Hills Forest, James (James Allen McCune) and a bunch of sceptics venture into the same woods for answers and closure. Recording everything subjectively as per the "found footage" norm, they encounter endless night, epic time loss and a menacing presence as the legend of the backwoods sorceress exerts its terrifying grip once more. AJ (US 2016, swearing, HD)

The Bromley Boys ★★★

PG

From Monday Virgin Movies (also available on DVD)

COMEDY Based on Dave Roberts's novel about Bromley FC's disastrous 1969–70 Isthmian League season, this winning tale splendidly captures the plight of any supporter who's ever despaired of their beloved football team.

Teenage superfan Brenock O'Connor thinks he has the solution to the side's problems, but everything changes when he discovers secret files about the players in chairman Jamie Foreman's office. The nerdy O'Connor jumps to conclusions that could threaten the club's future as well as ruin a budding romance with the chairman's studious daughter, Savannah Baker.

A subplot involving O'Connor's relationship with parents Martine McCutcheon and Alan Davies (who also narrates) gets rather sidelined, but the attention to period detail – such as the Subbuteo players in O'Connor's bedroom – makes this a football nostalgic's dream. David Parkinson (UK 2018, some swearing, HD)

DRAMA This Second World War drama charts the story of Polish airmen who eventually earned grudging respect from fellow pilots when they enlisted in an RAF riven with racism and class snobbery. It's a great story but needs a better telling than here, where aerial sequences betray a modest budget and ground scenes are corny and clichéd. The movie's heart is in the right place but it's unlikely to be in the vanguard of any war-film revival. DA (UK, 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

Paying resplendent testament to the crazed life and astonishing haute couture career of maverick fashion designer Lee Alexander McQueen, co-directors Ian Bonhote and Peter Ettedgui's startling documentary is a thoughtful profile of its conflicted subject.

Interviews with family, co-workers, lovers and friends capture the joys and sorrows of the gifted East Ender turned Givenchy guru and Bond Street atelier who tragically committed suicide in 2010. With plenty of archive footage from his graduate days to his boundary-pushing catwalk shows, this dynamic portrait of tortured genius will engage even those without any interest in the fashion world. Alan Jones RT OFFER To order the DVD for £14.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting reference RT1669. TV history repeats itself

Give documentaries back to the experts, says Alison Graham

ONE DAY, I hope, the BBC will simply drop populist making-history-accessible documentaries and just do history properly. With historians talking about history. I can't bear the chippiness of social-history experiments like Back in Time for the Factory and, starting on Friday, Made in Great Britain (BBC2), which both feature non-historian members of the public. In the latter, Breakfast's Steph McGovern takes four contemporary craftsmen and women and places them in the Victorian era to make stuff the Victorian way. Though the catch is (sigh) that none of this even touches their areas of expertise.

It's just a bigger, bolder, longer and more historical crack at doing those "presenter tries his or her hand at something they know nothing about and makes a right old bodge of it" bits in Countryfile. Here the quartet must make a scythe before moving on to making cutlery the Victorian way.

'It's so patronising applying our views and lives to the Victorians'

Obviously they aren't very good at this stuff because it's so far removed from their experience. (Though I did warm to chef Charlton who had to operate industrial bellows during the forging process. "This is me at my butch pinnacle," he deadpans as he sweats buckets.)

But when the little group decamped to a factory to make Sheffield cutlery the Victorian way, dressing up as Victorians, of course, as they were given a rundown by Steph (right) of the Victorians' dreadful working conditions, I knew what was coming. Just give it a minute... give it a minute... and here we go. Take it away, Katie the blacksmith: "I would feel very bitter coming to work and working hard 16 hours a day to make things for the middle classes who had no idea of the environment I'd been in

HAMMERING IT OUT
Made in Great Britain beats us over the head with modern views on history all day long. I wouldn't even be able to afford the food that they were eating with this cutlery."

And there it is. No popular BBC social-history show is complete without a bit of middle-class bashing. Not to mention the required narcissistic view of history that encourages participants to think it's all about them and to feel outrage on behalf of people they can't possibly know because they've all been dead for years.

WELL GUESS WHAT, Katie? It isn't about you. What you've just described is capitalism, and it's here, still, whether you like it or not. And why take history so personally? Most family trees probably feature branches of farm labourers and factory, mill or steel workers. Mine certainly does, but I don't get angry on their behalf. It's so patronising, applying my views and my comfortable life to theirs. They did what they did and lived how they lived. They got on with it.

What's more, Katie, if there were no middle classes I doubt there'd be many 21st-century female blacksmiths. Or BBC documentaries about 21st-century blacksmiths trying to make things the Victorian way. Or audiences for BBC documentaries about 21st-century blacksmiths trying to make things the Victorian way.

There's one mercy about Made in Great Britain, though. At least no one cries with all of this overempathising, at least not in the first episode. When they were told to work in a pretend Second World War munitions factory making commando knives, I braced myself for "But war is bad. Why couldn't everybody just get along?" Mercifully, everyone stayed quiet.

So come on, give this a rest. It's boring. Hand history back to the historians.

HOW TO USE MUSIC

I'd like anyone who decides on soundtracks for TV dramas to watch the brilliant import 54 Hours: the Gladbeck Hostage Crisis (Saturday BBC4). It's the dramatisation of a true story that transfixed Germany in 1988, when bank robbers sparked a hostage crisis.

The music is great because – here's the thing – you hardly know it's there. And when it does make its presence felt it is used merely as punctuation or to bump up tension, rather than standing up and waving, "Over here! Over here! You need to watch this!" Sometimes it's good to be subtle.

1 HE'S BACK Daredevil Netflix

A third series of one of Marvel's more reliable TV properties sees Matt Murdock (Charlie Cox, right) face up to deadly marksman Bullseye, as the blind vigilante once again must choose between embracing his heroism or hiding from it – and again is at risk of being upstaged by a corking adversary in a violent, intense, thrilling show.
Available from 19 October

DERREN'S NEW STUNT 5 Derren Brown: Sacrifice Netflix

Brown's first special for Netflix sees him more political than we're used to: this is another experiment that attempts to convince a member of the public to do something shocking, but it's explicitly in relation to racial tensions in America. Brown picks on a white man with strong negative views on immigrants, but who might just be persuaded to find something better deeper inside him.
Available from 19 October

RICH HISTORY 6 Empire iPlayer (BBC1)

First shown in 2012, towards the end of Jeremy Paxman's stint on Newsnight, this five-parter on the British Empire doesn't form the grand narrative you might expect, and took its share of criticism for its handling of thorny issues. But it does utilise Paxman's gift for sniffing out and interrogating eccentricity and absurdity. Wry asides and surprising details are everywhere Paxo goes.
Ep 1 available until 26 October

ANOTHER CHANCE 7 The Indian Doctor Amazon Prime

Amazon subscribers can now relax in front of all three series of a BBC comedy drama that was deservedly popular among daytime viewers when it debuted in 2010. Sanjeev Bhaskar is the Delhi man who arrives in a Welsh mining village in 1963, with his poised, pregnant wife (Ayesha Dharker) almost as perplexed by the change as the local people are. The humour is gentle but smart, and the period trappings are spot-on.

GATHER ROUND...

2 Lore Amazon Prime

The horror anthology returns with more tales that are all the spookier for being real. That's real as in based on legends and beliefs that humans have sincerely been petrified by, which means frequent trips back to times when witches, quacks and occultists held terrible sway. It's got a nicely rich, bloody vibe.
Available from 19 October

NEW EPISODES

3 Dynasty Netflix

The shamelessly trashy, if slightly modernised, reboot of the glossy 1980s soap about warring tycoon families is back, and it's got big questions to answer. Who died in the conveniently massive fire at the end of series one? And how exactly is main character Cristal going to be played by a different actress this time? Don't worry, there's a perfectly logical explanation.

SEE THE WHOLE SERIES

4 Press iPlayer (BBC1)

Mike Bartlett's saga about rival newspapers – Ben Chaplin as the viperish chief of a nasty red-top tabloid; Charlotte Riley as the idealistic reporter at a crusading liberal broadsheet – is prone to political grandstanding and pantomime characterisation, but it's got sparkling dialogue and crackling plotlines. When Chaplin and Riley face off, it really takes flight.

An amnesiac, heavily tattooed woman (Jaimie Alexander, above) found nude in Times Square is the key to a pacy conspiracy/crime thriller that you'll gobble up if you like 24 or the Jason Bourne movies. All three seasons are available as a box set, ahead of the upcoming fourth one that – in a show that always rides right on the edge of absurd complexity and implausibility – promises to be something of a change of direction.

OUTSTANDING MUSIC DOC

9 Can You Feel It

iPlayer (BBC4)

An insightful documentary series about house music and club culture, charting how a samey four-to-the-floor beat grew to dominate the world, how clubs became a billion-dollar business (having gone through the phase of wild raves, such as those put on by promoter Wayne Anthony, above), and how DJs morphed from anonymous facilitators to revered megastars. The world of dance music is ably demystified. Ep 1 available until 21 October

YOUR NEXT BINGE

A comedy that makes middle age dead funny

In Amazon's refreshingly original dramedy Forever (and be warned, we're about to reveal something the streaming service was desperate to keep under wraps when the show launched, but it happens in episode two and you can hardly discuss the series without mentioning it) both its main characters die. For Oscar, a kind, routine-oriented dentist played by Fred Armisen, and his wife, Maya Rudolph's slightly more adventurous June, this is only the beginning. It's the best thing that could have happened to them.

Before crossing over to the great beyond, Fred and June – played surprisingly straight by the Saturday Night Live alumni – had settled into middle age and mind-numbing routine. They ate the same dinners, holidayed at the same lake house and bowled at the same alley ad nauseam. Could the afterlife be more stimulating?

Across eight episodes, the series develops into a striking meditation on death, love and commitment, from beginnings that initially seem, like the lives that the couple leave behind, rather boring. Showrunners Alan Yang and Matt Hubbard (both formerly of Parks and Recreation) pace things tremendously as we see June's existential angst rise slowly to the surface. She faces eternity in a surprisingly pedestrian heaven, a suburban neighbourhood populated by stagnant individuals.

Things really kick into gear when the rebellious Kase (Catherine Keener) arrives and makes a connection with June, offering her an alternative to endless days with Oscar. Rudolph and Armisen have excellent chemistry, but it's hard not to will June down the rabbit hole.

Forever forms a nihilistic alternative to Netflix's saccharine afterlife sitcom The Good Place. At under four hours, it's an easy binge with a satisfying conclusion – although if enough people watch it, you can expect it to be resurrected. BEN ALLEN

Noirish intrigue powers this fine-looking Australian drama that begins with a detective from the big city arriving in a remote outback community to help investigate the disappearance of two teenagers. DOCTOR DIGITAL

Broadband: the ups and downs

Streaming video accounts for more than half the traffic online, with Netflix alone reportedly making up 15%.

But video is just the beginning.

Microsoft recently announced it will trial Project xCloud next year. Instead of owning a console with games downloaded to a hard drive or carried on discs, games will be streamed to any screen you own, whether that's a TV or a mobile phone. Yet games require low "latency" – when you push a button, you want your character to react instantly. This relies on upload speeds – how quickly you can send something "up" to the cloud – rather than the download speeds we're used to focussing on.

Upload speed has long lagged behind downloads, and it can affect even non-gamers. Anyone who has ever had to send a big file will have noticed how gratingly slow it can be.

To try to get the most out of your connection, dive into the settings on your router (check your manual) and look for QoS (Quality of Service), which prioritises certain kinds of traffic. However, you are more likely to find success by turning off data hogs on your network: something like a wireless security camera might be clogging it. And be sure to pay attention to upload speed the next time you upgrade your broadband. It's only going to get increasingly important.

WE CAN BE HEROES
Medallists from last year's Invictus Games with Prince Harry and, inset, this year's presenters JJ Chalmers and Alex Jones

PICK OF THE DAY Invictus Games 5.25pm BBC1

SPORT The brainchild of Prince Harry goes from strength to strength. This is the fourth time the sporting event for wounded, sick or injured servicemen and women has been held. The Duke and Duchess of Sussex will inevitably be the star attractions, attending today's Opening Ceremony in Sydney as part of their first overseas tour together. But their presence should only help highlight the stories, skills and bravery of these incredible athletes. Competition for a spot on the GB team was fiercer than ever this year: 451 personnel and veterans were bidding for just 90 final places.

The One Show's Alex Jones will be leading the BBC's coverage along with JJ Chalmers, who competed at the 2014 Games before going on to cover the Paralympics for Channel 4. Former wheelchair rugby captain Steve Brown, who's been a revelation as a presenter on Countryfile, is also reporting from the Games. JAMES GILL

Strictly Come Dancing

6.45pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Never has the Strictly curse caused such a kerfuffle. At the time of writing Seann Walsh and Katya Jones were still scheduled to dance a charleston on last Saturday's show – a prudent change from the potentially sexy cha-cha-cha they were going to perform. But while the BBC didn't punish the pair for that kiss (well, it's unlikely to harm viewing figures), it's possible viewers will have expressed an opinion through their votes.

Time to focus on the dancing, the standard of which has improved enormously since movie week. No Bruno Tonioli tonight – Dancing with the Stars winner Alfonso Ribeiro is standing in for him. JANE RACKHAM

The X Factor

8.25pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT The X Factor going live means one thing: it's time to face the music. Although this year, that applies as much to the judges as it does to the 16 finalists. So far, there hasn't been an abundance of chemistry between the four judges, husband-and-wife duo Robbie and Ayda Williams, Louis Tomlinson and Simon Cowell. Has it been lost in the edit over the past seven weeks? Or have they simply not clicked?

Either way, they will now be as exposed as the contestants' vocals throughout a colossal live launch before tomorrow's results show. The "Prize Fight" has been dumped this series (phew) and the Sunday sing-off makes a welcome return.

Louise must rely heavily on her charm to keep her workmates on side. Ha ha, no of course not, she demands that tasks are performed "now!" and she even gives the inspector a kicking. When her colleagues rebel, Louise resorts to the sharpest weapons in her armoury: emotional blackmail and the promise of drinks in the pub later.

And it's yet another terrible day for Dylan as yo-yo patient Ciara turns up in the ED yet again, with her horrible, controlling, enabling husband.

Black Hollywood: "They've Gotta Have Us"

9.00pm BBC2

ARTS John Singleton, writer/director of Boyz n the Hood, pinpoints the "psychological disconnect of people who say they like black culture but don't like black people". It's a sharp start to part two of this excellent history of black cinema, which reminds us of the appeal of Eddie Murphy and Denzel Washington and the battles won by film-makers in recent decades.

Whoopi Goldberg reflects on the mixed fortunes of The Color Purple. Debbie Allen of Fame fame reveals it took 18 years to get her passion project Amistad made; and Laurence Fishburne says he was only offered Thug 1 or Thug 2 after his star turn in Apocalypse Now. PATRICK MULKERN

ETCHING A SKETCH

As well as writing for Radio Times, our very own David McGillivray also penned "Money Under the Car", a three-minute Dave Allen at Large sketch that is chosen by Sue Perkins on My Favourite Sketch (10pm Gold).

"It was 1973 and I had recently started as a comedy writer," explains RT radio critic McGillivray. "The idea came to me on the top of a bus going down the Edgware Road. I knew a researcher on Dave Allen's show and so I gave it to him. I was 26 and absolutely thrilled my stuff was going to be used on TV.

"I never met Dave [left], and that's a huge regret – but it's often the way with comedy writers. The sketch took me as long to write as it took to watch. I didn't think it was in any way special and I had no idea that 45 years later we'd still be talking about it. It was such a simple idea and I'm so delighted that it worked." FT

Killing Eve

9.25pm BBC1

DRAMA Implacable assassin Villanelle is placed by her handler in a desperately grim prison for women somewhere on the outskirts of Moscow. Her task is to kill Nadia, the fellow murderer-for-hire who's so far somehow managed to survive Villanelle's best efforts to snuff her out.

The episode is notable largely because it features a lot more of the completely splendid, icily cool British secret service boss Carolyn (Fiona Shaw) who accompanies Eve (Sandra Oh) on a trip to Russia. They must get to Nadia before anyone else does. "God, my bones come alive in this country," says Carolyn, with a pleasurable shudder. It's not long before we find out why. AG

My Favourite Sketch

10.00pm Gold

COMEDY "Comedy's about joy, I don't care where I get it from." A universal truth but then Sally Phillips's final and arguably best guest of the series, Sue Perkins, contributes many insightful nuggets. The Bake Off banterer turned empathetic documentary host has excellent, and perhaps less familiar, sketches in her faves cupboard, too. Such as Will Ferrell and Christopher Walken in a Blue Oyster Cult send-up on Saturday Night Live ("I gotta have more cowbell"). And a Time Trumpet skit from sultan of satire Armando Iannucci ("He wasn't reflecting the news, he was predicting it").

Perkins has a personal connection with all her choices – especially her breakthrough courtesy of French and Saunders... MARK BRAXTON

10.45pm BBC2 (Wales: 10.30pm)

DRAMA There are three main characters in this 80s LA saga and in different ways they're each caught up in the wrong business. Franklin the clean-cut teenager, Lucia the aspiring Mexican drug queen and Teddy the covert CIA agent are all up to their elbows in the cocaine trade, but despite that, you feel for them. Each is smart, calm and ambitious: they're trying to put the "organised" into organised crime, but they're forever having to deal with wackos and hot-heads.

Tonight, that means Franklin has to calm his crew down when they decide to take revenge for last week's killings, while Teddy and his pilot brother are held at gunpoint in a Colombian airstrip when a pick-up goes wrong. DAVID BUTCHER

HIGH PRESSURE
German detectives are thrust into a hostage crisis

54 Hours: the Gladbeck Hostage Crisis

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA On a swelteringly hot day in August 1988, armed masked robbers take two hostages at the Gladbeck branch of the Deutsche Bank. It's just the start of a chain of events that goes on to transfix Germany and throw up big questions about the role of the press in reporting unfolding crimes.

This two-part dramatisation is tremendous and taut with anguish (you'll be swept up in every one of the first episode's 90 minutes) as the police, who are hopelessly out of their depth, try their hardest to keep the hostages from harm while reporters crowd the crime scene.

But the captors become increasingly panicky and unstable, and the ripples of what starts off as a botched bank robbery in a small town become waves that spread across the country. The fear and horror escalate as police do little but flounder in incompetence. AG

9.00 Black Hollywood: "They've Gotta Have Us"

RT 2/3. Black Film Is Not a Genre. Inspired by Spike Lee's Do the Right Thing in 1989, a new generation of black film-makers burst onto the scene. But although films such as John Singleton's Boyz n the Hood also made an impact, it was still usually white directors such as Steven Spielberg who were telling the most prominent black stories. It would be a while before black movie-makers could take control of their own stories, culminating in the recent smash hit Black Panther. At least, in front of the camera, black performers, including Eddie Murphy, Will Smith and Denzel Washington, were now becoming superstars. See page 52. Director Simon Frederick; Executive producer Mike Connolly Repeated Friday 11.40pm (S) (AD) (HD)

8.25 The X Factor

RT The pressure really hots up for the remaining 16 acts with the start of the live shows. But will last weekend's mentoring at the judges' international abodes have prepared them for what to expect? Millions of viewers will join Robbie and Ayda Williams, Louis Tomlinson and Simon Cowell as they scrutinise the efforts of contestants wringing out every emotion in their performances. And when any dodgy note or false step could be enough to scupper their dreams of stardom, things can only get even more tear-jerking after the judges have their say. Luckily, Dermot O'Leary is on hand to steer the show through any temperamental turbulence. Continues tomorrow at 8pm. See p52. Series producers Ashley Whitehouse and James Lesell; Executive producers Lee McNicholas, Caroline Davies and Iona MacKenzie. A musical calling

Coco ★★★★★ 6.10pm Sky Premiere

Pixar's mariachi musical marvel is a rich tapestry of Mexican folklore, family heritage and charming creepiness. With his shoemaker kin banning him from becoming a musician, young Miguel steals a sacred guitar from a crypt and enters the Land of the Dead to find his true legacy. Kids will adore the psychedelic spirit creatures and other innovative spectral delights, while there are more sophisticated gags for adults. Joining in the cartoon fun, Sky Family becomes Sky Animation from today until 4 November. ALAN JONES

Sherlock's final case

Mr Holmes ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This mystery takes a sympathetic look at the agonies of old age, as it finds one of the great fictional minds failing. Set in 1947, it imagines Sherlock Holmes (Ian McKellen) as a frail 93-year-old retiree living with his housekeeper (Laura Linney) and her son (Milo Parker). Haunted by scattershot memories, Holmes pieces together the fragments of his final case. The ponderous pace will prove testing to some but this is a film that builds in power almost imperceptibly as it works its way deep under the skin. EMMA SIMMONDS

For love or money

The Great Gatsby ★★★ Amazon Prime

Baz Luhrmann's take on the F Scott Fitzgerald novel is back on Prime this weekend. Leonardo DiCaprio stars as the new-money millionaire throwing lavish parties in an attempt to win back old flame Daisy (Carey Mulligan). The sets are opulent and the score blends Gershwin and Jay-Z.

MONSTROUS MOTEL
The Doctor, Yasmin, Graham and Ryan land in the Deep South of the 50s

PICK OF THE DAY Doctor Who 6.55pm BBC1

DRAMA The Doctor and her friends land in Montgomery, Alabama, in 1955, hours before seamstress Rosa Parks lights a fire under the civil rights movement by refusing to give up her seat on the bus for a white person.

It is, of course, one of the great turning points in history, where the actions of just one person triggered a convulsive change for good. But someone wants to stop it, someone wants to alter time to keep things, bad things, just as they are. So the gang must play their part to ensure events remain exactly as they should be to allow Rosa (Vinette Robinson) her defining moment.

It's an odd episode, co-written by Malorie Blackman and Chris Chibnall, that's preachy and teachy, giving itself the hard task of explaining segregation, racism and the Montgomery bus boycott to a young audience. So it loses its way as a bit of teatime fun and becomes more of a lecture.

FACTUAL Otters and potters: they may not be the first items you'd think of for a special autumnal edition of the show, but both are thoroughly engaging.

Anita Rani is on the Ards peninsula in Down, a narrow finger of land that's rich in artists and craftspeople, to meet a woman who uses the seasons as inspiration for her work. Matt Baker is on the Isle of Skye, because autumn is the time when there is the best chance of spotting otter cubs.

The rest of the team are also getting into the season of mists and mellow fruitfulness, observing the changing colours of the leaves and learning about pumpkin farming and foraging. JANE RACKHAM

Mediterranean with Simon Reeve

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Libya isn't on many tourist itineraries these days: Western air strikes, civil war between warlords, armed factions and Daesh – or Islamic State – have destroyed whole towns and devastated families. What it does have, Simon Reeve discovers, is cheap oil, creating a thriving black market in selling cans of petrol to neighbouring Tunisia, which itself suffered terror attacks in 2015.

Much more accessible – and the final destination on this third leg of his journey – is Sicily, midway between the poor nations of Africa and wealthy Europe, which is where so many migrants dream of living. JR

SITCOM Creativity and invention are the order of the day, although this time we're not referring to Granville's less than decent, honest and truthful approach to marketing his wares. Gastric has adapted his Mini to drive itself (except he's a bit worried because it didn't come home last night), while Granville has bought a second-hand sausage machine and is planning to sell "free-form" sausages to valued customers. "I've always provided quality, now they're getting artistic as well," he explains to a confused Mavis.

Meanwhile, in a bedroom down the street, Eric and Cyril have decided to try rock climbing in the hope it will impress the womenfolk. It doesn't. JR

Last Chance Lawyer New York City

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Another strange, funny, unsettling visit to the New York criminal defence attorney who resembles a cross between Danny DeVito at his most garrulous and Doc Brown from Back to the Future. Howard Greenberg is a fascinating, force-of-nature character. Did he ever want to have children, the film-maker asks: "I didn't think it would serve the world well to perpetrate [sic] my gene pool," he replies, sadly.

This time, he has a major case at trial and a suspect the media have decided is guilty of stabbing two children in a lift. Howard's solution? Kiss the defendant on the head, very publicly, in court. DAVID BUTCHER

TV CV: EMMETT J SCANLAN

Hollyoaks fans will already know Emmett J Scanlan. The 39-year-old won numerous awards over three years playing bad boy Brendan Brady in the Channel 4 soap. Now Scanlan is in not one, but two new dramas – as Stephen in Butterfly (9pm ITV), with Anna Friel (right), and as Kieran in Sharon Horgan's Women on the Verge (Thursday 10pm W). You may also recognise him from the second series of BBC3's In the Flesh, BBC2 thriller The Fall or the Netflix series Safe.

The Irish star recently announced he's been cast in Krypton, landing the role of Lobo in the second series of the Superman prequel (series one ends this week on E4). And last month he posted a picture online from the set of Netflix's Medici – hinting he's joined the cast of the historical drama.

FRANCES TAYLOR.

Butterfly

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA There are some cruel moments in Tony Marchant's drama about an unhappy trans child, most of them courtesy of his, later her, horrible granny (Alison Steadman). Twelve-year-old Max is now Maxine and wears girls' clothes. And gran is furious: "You're no grandson of mine," she yells, after berating Maxine's mum Vicky (Anna Friel) for "spoiling him".

Butterfly is a generally harrowing drama that befits a tough subject. Maxine is desperately trying to please everyone, particularly her dad Steve, who's finding the loss of his son almost impossible to come to terms with. Harmony can surely never be restored after Vicky makes an enormous decision. AG

Agatha Christie's Poirot

9.00pm ITV3

DRAMA Though this is an ancient adaptation of Agatha Christie's novel The ABC Murders (first shown in 1992), it will be of interest to Christie fans who can't wait for the big, new version of it to hit our screens later this year: John Malkovich will star as Hercule Poirot in a script written by Sarah Phelps, who did such a brilliant job on And Then There Were None, Witness for the Prosecution and Ordeal by Innocence.

Here, Poirot is David Suchet, exercised by a series of taunting letters from a killer who uses a very labour-intensive way of choosing his victims and his crimes: alphabetically. The only clue is a copy of the ABC Railway Guide left at every crime scene. Hugh Fraser plays Hastings. AG

Arthur Miller: Writer

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

ARTS There's an immediately intimate feel to this engrossing documentary about the American playwright, who died in 2005 – because its director is his daughter, Rebecca Miller. Autobiographical detail and historical context are interwoven with home videos, photos and family conversations. These glimpses are irresistible: we see Arthur playing with his children, making furniture, singing show tunes.

It's not a rigorous survey of his work, or life, but instead a warm portrait of a man who wrote relentlessly, in an attempt, as he says, to "approach the unwritten, the unspoken, the unspeakable. The closer you get to it, the more life there seems to be." HANNAH SHADDOCK

MAROONED

Joanna (Jenna Coleman) is locked in her grief for her lost son Noah

The Cry

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Throughout The Cry, Stella Gonet has been a quiet, briefly seen presence in Australia as Alistair and Joanna crumble in the face of the media onslaught after the disappearance of their baby son.

But Gonet, as Alistair's mother Elizabeth, comes into her own in tonight's final episode with some very telling scenes where she says little. It's what she leaves unsaid that counts for so much.

Joanna (Jenna Coleman, who's done wonders with what at first seemed a thankless, chilly role) is wandering in a vacuum, wrenched apart by the loss of Noah. The pressure on both her and Alistair (Ewen Leslie) leaves their relationship buckling.

Alistair wants to move on, to start a new life with Joanna. But she's marooned in a past she can barely comprehend, grappling with the consequences of the enormous wrong that's been done to her. It's powerful stuff. AG

Conniving canines

Turner & Hooch ★★★ 2.45pm Film4 FREEVIEW
While cats are not natural thespians, dogs love acting, as long as they're showered with praise. Trouble is, they tend to outshine their human co-stars. In Turner & Hooch, Tom Hanks's cop is upstaged by a drooling French mastiff (played by Beasley). Will Smith is seemingly the last man on Earth in I Am Legend, but the duo playing his German shepherd (Abbey and Kona) get the best scenes. And the John Wick series is predicated on Keanu Reeves's puppy. Watch out for Viola Davis's Highland terrier in the upcoming Widows – he acts her off screen just sleeping on a bed. ANDREW COLLINS

Great Danes on demand

Department Q trilogy BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW
First seen in the UK in Lars Von Trier's The Idiots, Nikolaj Lie Kaas brings a weary humanity to author Jussi Adler-Olsen's crisis-hit detective Carl Morck in a trio of Danish thrillers available on iPlayer until 29 October. Morck and his rather more cheery assistant Assad (think a Nordic Morse/Lewis) probe three very different cold cases (politician's suicide... or is it?; dead cop's double-murder obsession; message in a bottle written in blood). The fourth in the series, The Purity of Vengeance, is now in cinemas in Denmark. SUE ROBINSON

You must remember this

Casablanca ★★★★★
4.55pm Sky Select

This timeless love story is wrapped inside a gripping wartime thriller and written with such wit and meaning that it's still quoted (and misquoted) decades later. Humphrey Bogart gives a career best performance as the cynical expat nightclub owner who becomes embroiled with Resistance leader Paul Henreid and old flame Ingrid Bergman. AC

QUIZ MASTER
Victoria Coren Mitchell returns for a 14th series of the fiendish quiz

PICK OF THE DAY Only Connect 8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ Only Connect returns (for its 14th series. Fourteenth!) and the world makes sense again. "I hope you've missed us while we were away," says host Victoria Coren Mitchell. Oh yes we have, Victoria.

The fun starts with the Hotpots, who love all things Lancastrian, and the Poptimists, who like pop and puns, among other things. After a slowish start, a tremendous contest develops, with lots of muttering and chin-stroking. Really, people do actually stroke their chins on Only Connect.

There's much to learn along the way, none of it any earthly use, which is what makes OC so much fun. We also discover which film Victoria Coren Mitchell saw 32 times while studying for her university finals. You'll be amazed.

There are some delightfully fiendish questions ("It's very annoying, in a beautiful way" says Coren Mitchell of one particular beast) and the walls prompt tuts, sighs and a cry of "Slow down!" ALISON GRAHAM

Food Unwrapped

8.30pm C4

FOOD Arsenic – yes, that lethal poison in Agatha Christie novels – can be found in rice. Only a trace, but if you're feeding it to a baby, that's surely a bit of a concern. Matt Tebbutt goes to Spain to learn whether rice products should have clearer labelling. Equally worrying is Kate Quilton's report on parasitic worms that can be found in raw fish, although it's not enough to put her off eating sushi.

Meanwhile, Jimmy Doherty is closer to home – his local branch of Marks & Spencer to be precise – examining the hi-tech way they can trace the origin of their beef burgers back through their supply chain, to the farm and the cow.

JANE RACKHAM

Black Earth Rising

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA This elaborate tale about the aftershocks of the Rwandan genocide is scattered with brilliant performances. I particularly like Lucian Msamati as burly political fixer David Runihura, who is like a brick wall that various plot McGuffins smash into.

Also great is Tamara Tunie as the takes-no-prisoners US diplomat who in tonight's episode intervenes in the attempt to bring "genocidaire" Patrice Ganimana to justice. But (always, there's a "but") we also get more lengthy speeches recounting past events. For stretches it feels less a drama and more a politics seminar on justice and reconciliation – and the problems when the two clash. DAVID BUTCHER

Old People's Home for Four-Year-Olds

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY We saw Dunkirk veteran Victor in the first episode, when he danced alone, such was his sadness at the loss of his wife and dance partner. He's even more out of sorts tonight as he begins to distance himself from the other participants in this experiment.

Victor is preoccupied by the looming results of medical tests and becomes a bit sad and withdrawn. But there's still a lot of happiness in the group as friendships are forged. Scarlett, whose mum died, and Beryl, a rather socially isolated member of the retirement community, have become best pals. And Scarlett is bold enough to tell Beryl a secret: "I have a heartache," she whispers. AG

Why Does Everyone Hate the English?

9.00pm History

DOCUMENTARY Al Murray's odyssey of odium takes him to Ireland and probably the best episode of the series so far. He's not short of material, and there's a lot of sober meditation on Oliver Cromwell, the potato famine and more recent Troubles. But there's fun to be had as well, and it helps that Al's comedy companion Andrew Maxwell is as charming as he is thoughtful about his own nation's story. Alongside battlefield visits there's some Irish dancing to cheers us up, plus an optimistic consideration of Ireland's new-found Celtic Tiger confidence and the two nations' steady move towards a more respectful and equal relationship. BEN DOWELL

Much as I love an evil psychopath like Pat Phelan or Richard Hillman, I can't help but be more drawn to an inadvertent soap villain. You know the type: they usually start out with good intentions but, through a mixture of ill fortune and fecklessness, become increasingly unhinged. Think John Stape, who began life as a likeable teacher, but by the end of his time on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) couldn't bend down to tie his shoelaces without accidentally knocking someone into the path of a car. And I'm now getting the same vibe from fantasist Jude Appleton (Paddy Wallace, left) – first he fibbed about being a marine biologist (he actually worked in the gift shop of a sea life centre), now he says he's training to be a paramedic (he actually passes out at the first sight of blood). The trouble for Jude is that mum Mary is now on to him, so could a confrontation be coming? And might Jude morph from liar to lunatic? DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

QI
10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

QUIZ While this week's episode might be themed around outdoor eating, it's no picnic, with the usual mix of impossibly misleading questions and obscure trivia causing headaches (and lost points) for the plucky contestants trying their luck against the series' question setters. Striving for success this week alongside regular Alan Davies are Richard Osman, The Mash Report's Rachel Parris and stand-up Romesh Ranganathan. But can they solve the mysteries of a regular ham sandwich, or which part of the country a Cornish pasty really comes from?

And perhaps more crucially, how long can host Sandi Toksvig talk about picnicking without someone cracking a soggy bottom Bake Off joke?

Celebrity Call Centre for Stand Up to Cancer

10.00pm C4
FUNDRAISING Eight celebs turn agony aunt, giving advice on the public's relationship and medical problems. A few calls are from people who sadly have or know someone who has cancer, but many aren't as serious – Louie Spence hears from a piles sufferer and Tyger Drew-Honey from a serial cheater.

It's an odd concept, but the celebs' responses are revealing. Kimberley Walsh is honest about parenthood, Kim Woodburn is stumped at the suggestion we'll all be bisexual in the future, while Joel Dommett and Georgia Toffolo come across as really nice human beings. They all seem genuine about helping people – or at least brightening their day. JR

Emma Willis: Delivering Babies

10.00pm W
DOCUMENTARY Emma Willis is, she says, "wasted in telly". The presenter reaches this conclusion after training to be a maternity care assistant at the Princess Alexandra Hospital in Essex, something she undertakes for no immediately obvious reason other than she loves babies – and that it makes a neat TV show.

Having a crash course in 13-hour shifts and medical terminology, she's immediately overwhelmed and, as expected, there's copious cooing over newborns and wide-eyed admiration for mothers. Seeing the job through the eyes of a novice shows just how emotionally charged working in neonatal care can be.

FRANCES TAYLOR

A Woman Captured: Storyville

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK
If you've ever wondered what modern slavery looks like, it's right here. Marish is 52 but looks older. She works 12-hour days in a factory in Hungary – hard enough in itself, but she has to hand her salary to a woman for whom she cooks and cleans, and by whom she is abused. Given only cigarettes and scraps, she endures appalling cruelty ("You're not worth anything") and regular beatings (her arm is in a cast). She's been here ten years and dreams of seeing her children, but is terrified of being caught if she tries to escape...

The miracle amid all the horror is that Marish can still smile. Her kindness and courtesy to film-maker Bernadett Tuza-Ritter, in the face of her living nightmare, will make you cry. She says, "Everyone deserves respect, even those who have lost everything."

This powerful portrait of domestic servitude is a tough watch but an important and moving one. If anyone deserves the happy ending, it's Marish.

MARK BRAXTON

SURVIVOR
How has Marish withstood so much cruelty?: "I'm strong, believe me"

Jamestown
NowTV/Sky Box Sets

Back to the Future trilogy Netflix

Great Scott! Christopher Lloyd turns 80 today, although only those who caught him on- and off-Broadway in the 1960s and 70s will have witnessed him as a young buck. His screen debut was in One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest in 1975, leading to five series of TV's Taxi as drug casualty "Reverend" Jim. He's since been seen as Uncle Fester in The Addams Family and recent indie curio I Am Not a Serial Killer, but will forever be known as "Doc" Brown in the Back to the Future trilogy. All three films are available on Netflix along with behind-the-scenes documentary Back in Time. ANDREW COLLINS

A Hedy combination

Experiment Perilous ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This clever but wordy suspense drama finds insane Paul Lukas and his glamorous wife Hedy Lamarr embroiled in a battle of wits. George Brent plays the psychiatrist trying to rescue Lamarr, while Albert Dekker and Carl Esmond are also along for the ride. Lamarr's incredible life, including her talent for scientific discovery, is revealed in Hollywood's Brightest Bombshell: the Hedy Lamarr Story, which is also available on iPlayer until Saturday. TONY SLOMAN

Don't fall asleep!

A Nightmare on Elm Street ★★★

9.00pm Sky Halloween

"One, two, Freddy's coming for you. Three, four, better lock your door." There's no escaping the razor-gloved dream demon tonight, with a double bill of the original Elm Street and it's 2010 reboot. The original Freddy actor, Robert Englund, is set to reprise his role this Halloween on US TV show The Goldbergs. JAMIE HEALY

JUST A SLICE...
Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith have reached the semi-final

PICK OF THE DAY The Great British Bake Off 8.00pm C4

FOOD Is that a catch in Sandi Toksvig's voice as she announces the name of the baker who won't be going through to next week's final? It's hardly surprising that emotions are coursing through the tent of dreams as we approach the end of a smashing series. As Toksvig says to judges Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith: "I don't want any of them to leave because I have become so fond of them."

The four remaining amateur bakers face an exhausting series of tasks in pâtisserie week, culminating in a five-hour nerve-shredding showstopper where they must create a Parisian window full of glorious cakes.

But it's the technical challenge that proves to be a step too far for one contestant, who sounds thoroughly defeated upon reading the recipe, then gets so tearfully upset presenter Noel Fielding has to step in with some gentle words. ALISON GRAHAM

Saving Lives at Sea

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This series has taken a break for the past few weeks but tonight sees another new episode and it's a corker. The first rescue it covers unfolds in the midst of Hurricane Ophelia, the biggest storm to hit Ireland in 50 years.

A "mayday" message reaches the Rosslare lifeboat station: a yacht is in trouble, being blown towards shore. "These are the call-outs you dread. Everybody's life's in danger," recalls harbour master David, who had the job of deciding which of the 17 volunteers should set off into the high seas and 80-knot winds. It's another riveting story of maritime rescue that makes you almost howl in admiration. DAVID BUTCHER

Landscape Artist of the Year

8.00pm Sky Arts

ARTS They like to cover a range of art styles in this series. For the second week running there's a fabric artist lugging a sewing machine and an ironing board; but also an abstract artist whose paintings bear no resemblance to what's in front of her. As the contestants get to work depicting Viking Bay in Broadstairs, Kent, there are some great words of encouragement from the judges – "It's fantastic how gloriously boring it is."

While all must face the changeable British weather, one also has to contend with a rather intense conversation with Joan Bakewell about end-of-life care. Paint it black, indeed. DAVID CRAWFORD

Martin Lewis: Ten Things Your Kids Need to Know

9.00pm ITV

MONEY The "kids" of the title refers to teenagers, at whom Martin Lewis is aiming his advice here. "There's a lot I wish someone had told me in my teens," he says, though clearly he didn't do badly, setting up MoneySavingExpert.com for £100 in 2003 and selling it for £87m in 2012.

But the point is that few schools (or parents) teach teenagers the skills they need to thrive financially and in the workplace, what Lewis calls "managing the path between pushing for success and coping with failure". Previews weren't available but we're told Lewis returns to his childhood home in Cheshire, and recalls life lessons that could help parents now. DB

Inside the Tower of London

9.15pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY New series Not that there's just one tower. There are several in William the Conqueror's fortress. This royal palace houses the Crown Jewels, but also used to be the Royal Mint and a prison. It also had a moat that was later drained to accommodate exotic animals including lions, polar bears and an elephant. The Tower's residents now use it to exercise their dogs.

In this workmanlike but enjoyable doc we meet those who live and work in the Tower, including Chief Yeoman Warder Chris Morton, who has a very dry sense of humour, and curator and historian Tracy Borman, who shares bloody stories of beheadings. JANE RACKHAM

Karen Taylor (right) now knows that her son Keanu is having an affair with Sharon and decides to confront her in tonight's EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1). As we've seen, though, the age gap is already a matter of concern to Sharon, who's left Keanu baffled by some 80s pop-culture references. I keep expecting her to say, "Ooh, Keanu, did you ever see me on Top of the Pops singing Something Outa Nothing with Kelvin Carpenter?" And for Keanu to reply, "What's Top of the Pops?"

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

On Holby City (8pm BBC1; Scotland: Wed 10.45pm), actor Charlie Clements (best known for his stint on EastEnders playing Bradley Branning, who fell to his death from the Queen Vic roof live in front of the nation) is patient-of-the-week Hughie, who's admitted to the wards with a blocked femoral artery. Only the situation soon gets significantly worse. Honestly, the guy can't catch a break. Fletch, meanwhile, is mooning over Jac – but gets the mother of all knock-backs. DAVID BROWN

Later Live... with Jools Holland

10.00pm BBC2

MUSIC In retrospect, Interpol's debut album Turn on the Bright Lights was among the best indie rock albums of the 2000s. And how ironic that a band so influenced by the 1970s now so strongly represents the post-millennial sound and style. The lads have never equalled their debut, despite not straying far from its formula. Will they be able to recapture its dark magic under the Later lights?

Tonight's other 70s influences are more unexpected. MC Bugzy Malone represents the more polished, less... grimy side of grime. His most popular track, Run, also features Rag'n'Bone Man, who's a fan of Steptoe and Son, it appears. I await the duo's cover of Fat Sam's Grand Slam... GARY ROSE

There She Goes

10.00pm BBC4

COMEDY DRAMA There is an uncomfortable moment in tonight's episode when Simon (David Tennant) makes fun of his disabled daughter Rosie and later jokes about landing a child "from the wonky box". But writer Shaun Pye, who has closely based this comedy drama on his own experiences, is nothing if not honest about this particular dad's failings – his laziness, and preference for the crossword (or indeed anything) over looking after a child so ebullient and uncooperative that even bathtime becomes a military exercise.

The worry and rage and fear feel wholly authentic – but so, too, are the moments of joy and hope and, above all, love. It is beautiful and uplifting to behold. BEN DOWELL

Imagine...

10.45pm BBC1 (Wales: 11.10pm; N Ireland: 12.20am)

ARTS Alan Yentob, the former TV executive who has now become BBC TV's Melvyn Bragg, spends a year following Tracey Emin, former tent-making, confessional Young British Artist, and not a woman knowingly afraid of talking about herself. And she's showing no signs of slowing down, even at 55 and in what she calls the "last stage" of her life.

The past 12 months have seen fresh commissions taking Emin from a neon sign in London's St Pancras Station to the streets of downtown Sydney.

She also reflects on her decision – following her beloved mother's death in 2016 – to return to her home town of Margate and convert a derelict printworks into a new studio. BD

Roger Bannister: Everest on the Track

iPlayer (expires today)

A documentary first shown in 2016, in which Roger Bannister – who died earlier this year – recalls the motivations behind his historic breaking of the four-minute-mile barrier in 1954. The comparison to Edmund Hillary's ascent of Everest the previous year is not at all glib: the film is very clear on what an immense challenge Bannister and his accomplices undertook.

Counter-terror cops
Gabe and Holly (Paddy Considine and Bel Powley)

Inform

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Gabe and Holly, the counter-terror police at the heart of this thriller, make a satisfyingly odd couple, in the fine tradition of mismatched cops. Holly likes things clear-cut, black and white: her bluntness has a touch of The Bridge's Saga Noren in it. Whereas Gabe is more a shades-of-grey man, with a secret past that clouds his life: he was under cover with a far-right group at one point – and has the tattoos to prove it.

Though rarely on the same wavelength, they're starting to put newly recruited "snout" Raza through his paces. "You don't just send a canary down the mine. You put a cage round him first," Gabe explains charmingly. Raza's first job is to get himself in with the low-level drug dealer he met in custody. That makes for some edgy scenes in a grimly drawn east London where every railway arch is graffitied and every estate hums with menace.

9.00 A Dangerous Dynasty: House of Assad

3/3. The final part of this history takes up the story a decade into Bashar al-Assad's presidency of Syria. His wife, Asma, enjoys her role as First Lady but as a profile of her appears in Vogue magazine, the Arab Spring protests reach Syria with demands for greater freedom. Faced with a choice of response, Bashar takes his father Hafez's famously hardline approach with a brutal crackdown – and the country descends into chaotic civil war. The emergence of the so-called Islamic State threatens to wrest the Assad family's control of Syria, until a political ally steps in to turn the war back in Assad's favour.

Caine gets the chop

Kingsman: the Secret Service ★★★★★

9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Not a lot of people know that Michael Caine had a scene cut from the original Kingsman film. According to director Matthew Vaughn, it was "a really fun sequence" featuring a 30-year-old Caine robbing a Russian bank. Nifty London effects house Jellyfish were responsible for the digital de-ageing (some images are available online), but Vaughn regretfully had to lose the sequence as it slowed down the narrative. Caine discusses his life, career and new book Blowing the Bloody Doors Off on page 14. ANDREW COLLINS

Salford on screen

Hobson's Choice ★★★★★ 1.30pm TCM

Mention of Salford may conjure C4's Educating Greater Manchester or Coronation Street. But the Dirty Old Town of Ewan MacColl's folk song has cinematic history. In the 1950s, David Lean shot Hobson's Choice there with John Mills and Charles Laughton, and in the early 60s its canals and cobbles were frozen in sooty black-and-white in the screen adaptation of Shelagh Delaney's play A Taste of Honey. An accent on Salford's Asian population came in the 90s with East Is East, followed by its 2010 sequel West Is West. AC

Time to play ball

To mark the start of baseball's World Series, Sky Select is fielding four big movie hitters. On first base, Billy Bob Thornton (pictured) plays boozy coach to the Bad News Bears; bringing up second is no-hoper Tom Guiry in The Sandlot; Brad Pitt steals third in Moneyball; and Johnny Simmons brings it home in Rage. And, no, Rounders isn't showing. JAMIE HEALY

NEW EVIDENCE
Trevor McDonald looks into the case of a notorious child killer

PICK OF THE DAY Trevor McDonald and the Killer Nurse 9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY There are difficult and tragic stories that remain with journalists, long after the reporting is over. For Trevor McDonald, it's the case of Beverley Allitt, a young nurse who killed four children in her care at Grantham Hospital in Lincolnshire.

It's 25 years since McDonald, who was in his first year reading ITV's News at Ten when Allitt was tried, reported on her conviction and he returns to the evidence. He also interviews her surviving victims, who are still haunted by the spectre of the woman who tried to end their lives in the children's ward.

The mother of Kayley Asher tells of how her daughter was just 15 months old when Allitt attacked her, injecting the little girl with air that led to the collapse of her lungs. "Kayley has... flashbacks to what happened. She looks under her bed and in drawers for Nurse Allitt, although she is told time and time again she's not there."

ALISON GRAHAM

Bad Move

8.00pm ITV

SITCOM Seann Walsh making a spectacle of himself, showing precious little sense of responsibility and less dignity: it's a stretch, but Walsh manages to inhabit the role in Jack Dee's sitcom, as rock star/neighbour Grizzo. This week Grizzo messes around with fireworks, and ropes in Steve (Dee) to help with the display at a local festival.

Steve is already a reluctant centre of attention as he's been nominated to be Keeper of the Lantern Man, an honour that involves spending the night in the woods with a straw bogeyman. The last episode of the series feels like a loose collation of plotlines roped together but, as always, the characters and setting prompt a few smiles. DAVID BUTCHER

The Apprentice

REALITY Of the 16 candidates who rolled their suitcases into this series, several we still barely know. That's often the case a few episodes in, as you spot some character who's been lurking in the background, and think "Who's that? What happened to his/her plan for global domination? Whatever it was, it hasn't worked so far."

Then again, playing a long game sometimes pays off... It's certainly time for a few of this year's crop to muscle their way into contention as Lord Sugar sends the candidates to sell gear at a body-building expo, spurring one to declare, as if appearing in an Apprentice parody sketch, "We have to put, like, 150 million per cent into this one." DB

Trust

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Last week we had a cameo from Tim Key; this week, comedian Rob Delaney appears as John Paul Getty's lawyer, reporting back to the billionaire as he blasts clay pigeons out of the sky over his country lawns. If you haven't seen the previous episode, don't read on, but things are looking good for an end to the wretched kidnap affair.

In their meeting at Hadrian's Villa, Getty and the Calabrian mob boss reached a deal. Unfortunately, there are no scenes tonight as good as that one. Instead we mainly loop back in time to follow the course of Getty's ragged relationship with his son – the kidnapped boy's father. It's a cool enough detour but there's been enough back story already. DB

Magic Numbers

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY The final episode is titled Weirder and Weirder – and it lives up to its billing. Even before the mind-boggling ideas of quantum mechanics, we've had to cope with Bertrand Russell's paradox and Kurt Gödel's theory of incompleteness. You know you're in trouble when Einstein's theory of general relativity seems, er, relatively simple. Yet Hannah Fry is an expert guide, explaining the concepts in easy, practical ways – though even she is bamboozled by the quantum realm.

By the end she's asking how quantum mechanics can ever be reconciled with general relativity – a challenge one of those enthusiastic mathematicians throws open to the viewer. Good luck. DAVID CRAWFORD

Are we all agreed that Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) should get Nick and Leanne back together as soon as possible? OK, so their first teenage marriage (back in The Adam Rickitt Years) ended in divorce. And the second marriage didn't go well, either, what with Nick having a one-night stand with his brother's wife on the day of the wedding. But they did eventually reunite – only for Nick to abandon Leanne when he had that midlife crisis after getting caught in quicksand. Still, despite the divorces, infidelity and that unfortunate day out at the seaside, Leanne and Nick obviously belong together.

Although... what's with all the calls from the mysterious "E" that Nick is now refusing to take since he returned to Weatherfield? Maybe it's entirely innocent and he's had an off-screen falling-out with Emily Bishop. But if you've been within sniffing distance of a tabloid lately, you'll know Nick could be keeping a whopping secret from his nearest and dearest. DAVID BROWN

Taskmaster

9.00pm Dave

COMEDY A mummified cat from Kettering; a video that Rhod Gilbert filmed of Greg Davies asleep; some Victorian Christmas cards: these are a few of the panel's creepiest things, brought in for the prize task. In order to win them, the panellists must endure creative indignities that include poking things out of a grotto and writing a piece of music on the spot.

Gilbert is on great form (his Ballad of a Toothless Goon is a strange little folk tale set to music), and we're reminded again that this is his natural game – tooling around for laughs – rather than the confines of The Apprentice: You're Fired. In that show he hardly ever gets to take other people's trousers down, which is a particular talent.

DAVID BUTCHER

Get Shorty

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

COMEDY DRAMA This freewheeling series is only loosely based on the novel and film of the same name, but it nicely bottles the flavour of that Elmore Leonard world. The criminals and sleazeballs aren't cartoons and they're certainly not harmless, but they're hardly grittily realistic, either. They're oddly relatable caricatures, not least because they mess up everything they touch.

This applies particularly to the thugs surrounding cartel boss Amara, who were not designed for the subtleties of the movie business. At the Santa Barbara Film Festival, everything is set for The Admiral's Mistress to be a red-carpet triumph. Holed up at a weird motel, Miles hits rock bottom. DAVID BUTCHER

Zapped

10.00pm Dave

SITCOM Tonight's enjoyable visit to the weird fantasy land of Munty sees another brilliant cameo from Sally Phillips as the formidable Slasher, a woman who is as psychotic and violent as her name suggests. She's so determined that her pig wins a pet show, she gets performance-enhancing drugs from Paul Kaye's wizard, Howell. But if you know the unscrupulous shaman (or whatever he is), you'll know Howell is dosing other creatures.

There's also a jolly subplot about Brian's determination to land a job in the Jug and the Other Jugs as a chef. But he has stiff competition from Herman's former brother-in-arms, the worryingly disturbed Sved (Clive Russell). BEN DOWELL

HOW DO, PET!

It's farewell for now to vet Noel Fitzpatrick and his adorable patients

The Supervet

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY It's waggly tails all round as the series comes to a happy end. It's Monday morning at Noel Fitzpatrick's practice and 56 patients have already come through the doors.

The 57th is French bulldog Otis who has a possible slipped disc, although the breed tends to have spinal problems so his mobility issues might be caused by something else. There's also Bailey, a cocker spaniel, who may have osteoarthritis... or it may be cancer.

As always, Noel is as warm and caring to the owners as he is to his four-legged patients, but he clearly has a soft spot for labrador Tom's elderly owner, Diane. She is a delightful character as is her sweet-natured dog, who loves everyone. "He's not the slightest bit faithful," Diane smiles indulgently, as he fawns over a complete stranger.

9.00 The Apprentice

RT 4/12. The candidates are summoned to the Royal Albert Hall, where Lord Sugar sets them the task of selling at one of the world's largest body-building exhibitions at the NEC in Birmingham. On day one, a clash over which team gets to sell top-notch weights leaves the losers strong-armed into selling saunas. On the services side, the spray-tan trio discover they may not have the golden ticket asked for by their project manager. While on the massage team, low costs mean the workers are hard pressed all day. Back in the boardroom, Lord Sugar flexes his muscles and another candidate is sent home. You're Fired is at 10pm on BBC2. See p92. Executive producers Paula Fasht and Paul Broadbent. The man, the myth

King Arthur ★★★

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

It's good to be king, even if you don't exist. Just ask any of cinema's folkloric Arthurs. He was first played in a talkie in 1931 by William Farnum in an adaptation of Mark Twain's A Connecticut Yankee, itself turned into a 1949 musical with Cedric Hardwicke. After Disney's Sword in the Stone, we enjoyed Richard Harris's charismatic Arthur in Camelot and Graham Chapman in Monty Python and the Holy Grail. Other incarnations include Sean Connery in First Knight and Clive Owen in this spin on the legend. ANDREW COLLINS

Milla's zombiethon

Resident Evil ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

A mutant virus accidentally turns the workers at a hi-tech research facility into flesh-eating zombies in this first film in the series based on the hit video games. Director Paul Anderson racks up the tension to claustrophobic levels, as Milla Jovovich and a team of commandos move through progressively more dangerous levels to wipe out the ravenous undead. All five of the sequels starring Jovovich are also showing in a throat-grabbing marathon of gore and action on Sky Halloween today. SLOAN FREER

The Wound ★★★

9.45pm Sky Premiere

South African John Trengove's first feature is a study of the customs and prejudices that have kept his country's rural regions in ignorance and poverty. The Xhosa circumcision rite of ukwaluka lies at the heart of a story that is also notable for its bold depiction and discussion of homosexuality.

THURSDAY Choices

The pick of today's TV

Television Thursday

SPY AT NIGHT
CIA agent Daniel Miller (Richard Armitage) is drawn into Berlin's dark side

PICK OF THE DAY Berlin Station 9.00pm More4

DRAMA New series Richard Armitage is back in Spooks territory, but he's changed nationality. In this surprisingly well-cast US drama created by spy novelist Olen Steinhauer, Armitage plays Daniel Miller, a CIA field agent posted under cover to Berlin to find out who's been leaking Agency secrets, Edward Snowden-style, to the German press. He's got some clues, so spends a lot of time following people through some of the city's scuzzier streets. And this being TV, there are lots of juicy potential suspects within the station itself. Like Rhys Ifans's world-weary veteran, who knows his way around the Berlin club scene, and Richard Jenkins's chief of station. Both men have indiscretions that could come back to haunt them, but could they be traitors?

It's pretty low-key, but the dialogue and fieldcraft of espionage rings true – Robert Baer, the CIA agent who was the inspiration for George Clooney's character in the film Syriana, is the film's technical consultant. And Bowie sings the theme song, so that's all good. GILL CRAWFORD

Canada: a Year in the Wild

8.00pm Channel 5

NATURE If you don't mind your natural history delivered in comforting, old-fashioned doses, this visit to the Canadian summer is very pleasurable. David Suchet narrates in the reassuring tones of a favourite uncle reading stories to a poorly child.

Even when he's describing grim stuff – like the way mosquito clouds torment caribou, or the woes of polar bears, "each one slowly starving" as they plod northwards – the warmth and polish of his voice convince you everything will be fine. And there are good sequences here, including mountain-goat kids struggling up a cliff and prairie dogs – always comical and sweet – doing a kind of prairie-dog yoga. DAVID BUTCHER

The Big Bang Theory

8.30pm E4

SITCOM Back from honeymoon, Sheldon and Amy hand out gifts to their friends of "I love NY" T-shirts, but are later baffled by Leonard and Penny's "perfect present" to them. It's not, as Sheldon had hoped, a dinosaur fossil or a pocket watch. But it does send the newlyweds on a heartwarming quest for clues: Sheldon is made up, of course, even though it's really a wild goose chase.

Meanwhile, Big Bang's answer to Comic Book Guy, Stuart, decides to ask out his assistant manager, Denise (Lauren Lapkus), on a date. With his friends in love or happily settled, Raj is tired of being single and takes action. Can Koothrappali finally ditch his "square peg" status? It's about time. MARK BRAXTON

Ambulance

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY A distraught mother screams down the phone at an ambulance dispatcher: "She's slashed herself up! My daughter... she needs sectioning." It's the start of another busy, busy night in Greater Manchester as the calls stack up and waiting times stretch to hours for exasperated patients.

But the young, self-harming woman is a priority and the crew arrives to find police officers in attendance and an 18-year-old bleeding profusely from a wound, self-inflicted with a bottle. The paramedics talk to her with the utmost tenderness, but once again woeful inadequacies in mental health provision are thrown into a sharp spotlight. ALISON GRAHAM

Vitamin Pills: Miracle or Myth?

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Nearly half of us in this (generally well-fed) country take a daily vitamin or mineral supplement but do we really need them? Dr Giles Yeo starts his investigations into this multimillion-pound business by looking at the packaging. The phrase "Contributes to normal..." often appears but most of us don't know what that means. "Antioxidant" has been a buzzword among the health conscious for some time but Yeo meets a Danish scientist whose research raises troubling questions about what they may be doing to us.

It's sounding like popping multi-vits is a waste of both time and money. JANE RACKHAM

The death of Chas and Paddy's baby probably left you in pieces, but Emmerdale (7pm, 8pm ITV) isn't allowing much time for fans to compose themselves: Grace's funeral features in tonight's double bill.

There will also no doubt be tears shed by some of the audience at the prospect of Ross Barton exiting the village after five years of mayhem and family tragedies. After all that's happened to him, he wants out – but who will do the thieving and bare-knuckle fighting if he really does go? And how will Rebecca react when he asks her to leave with him?

There's anguish on Hollyoaks (6.30pm C4), too, but of a different kind. Here, we're talking soapy melodrama and disaster as the production team preps the wind and rain machines. Yes, a storm is coming and we're promised a dramatic structural collapse that puts several lives in danger...

First Dates: Celebrity Special

9.00pm C4

REALITY You'd think that celebrities ooze self-confidence and have no trouble on a first date. But, as tonight's special for Stand Up to Cancer shows, they stumble over their words and feel nervous like the rest of us. Except Lady Colin Campbell, Joey Essex and Gogglebox's Sandra Martin aren't like the rest of us: the famously fierce Lady C finds date Matthew "charming and agreeable"; Joey orders half the menu then asks Lydia if she's had a boob job; while an overexcited Sandra bluntly asks John if he fancies her.

However, Melinda Messenger has an awkward moment when her date, a former celebrity snapper, mistakenly thinks she remembers him. One of the couples really hit it off though. JR

Sally4Ever

10.00pm Sky Atlantic

COMEDY New series No one creates comedies like Julia Davis. She was the brains behind Nighty Night, Hunderby and Camping, the kind of shows that make you flinch as much as they make you laugh (usually agonised laughter). Her latest creation is every bit as sick and strange as we've come to expect, but also savagely funny.

It opens with a barbershop quartet murdering Faith by George Michael – a way to establish David (Alex McQueen), hideously dull boyfriend of our heroine Sally (Catherine Shepherd). She reluctantly agrees to marry him, after an excruciating proposal scene, but then meets wild singer Emma (Davis herself) and they embark on an affair to the strains of T'Pau's China in Your Hand. DAVID BUTCHER

Women on the Verge

10.00pm W

COMEDY Journalist Laura is furious that the "influencer" who took her column features on billboards at bus stops "like a summer blockbuster". As Laura's seething jealousy spits and burns she prepares for a big awards night and her sure-fire triumph as Feature Writer of the Year. Sharon Horgan and Lorna Martin's comedy is ticking over nicely – no big laughs but enough neat set pieces to make women watching snort in recognition, particularly, it has to be said, if you're a journalist nominated for an award (a small demographic, I know).

But really, does Laura (Kerry Condon) have to be so irritating? She's so self-absorbed she doesn't realise that the nice paediatrician she met at the christening is keen on her. AG

THE FINAL PUSH
Relive the horrors of the last days of the "war to end all wars"

100 Days to Victory

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Starting in the summer of 1918, an Allied offensive on the Western Front threw everything at German lines – tanks, artillery, planes, infantry – in an operation that finally brought the First World War to an end. This two-part docudrama tackles the extraordinary story of the Hundred Days Offensive with reconstructions, archive footage, impressive CGI, a barrage of historians, extracts from soldiers' diaries and a crisp narration full of staggering facts.

It works well, showing how Allied generals put aside their differences to collaborate on "all arms warfare". There are insights into the commanders' characters – one had been caught embezzling regimental funds – and how they used new technology, such as microphones, to pinpoint enemy guns or spotters in planes with air-to-ground radio.

It also highlights how Scottish, Canadian and Australian units were pivotal in the victory. DB

9.00 Ambulance

RT Series 4. At the start of another challenging, busy 12-hour night shift for the North West Ambulance Service, a distressed mother calls in for help with her 19-year-old daughter who is self-harming. Paramedics April and Clare, one of 96 crews on duty across Greater Manchester for the night, are dispatched to the scene where they find the police in attendance, so they treat the patient and try to find her further treatment at a facility other than A&E. Advanced paramedic Luke uses his specialised training to stabilise a nine-year-old boy who is feared to be in cardiac arrest, and swiftly moves on to deal with his next patient – a five-year-old girl hit by a car. Back in control, call handler Debbie talks to the family of a patient in labour while paramedic duo Chris and Chris race to the patient's home. See page 102.

8.00 100 Days to Victory

RT 1/2. The Spring Offensive. How the Allies responded to devastating German advances in early 1918 with a military strategy that ultimately won the First World War and ushered in the modern era of warfare. The German onslaught triggered a leadership crisis for the British, Australian, Canadian and French and newly arriving American forces, with Britain's Field Marshal Haig and Marshal Foch of France tasking Australia's General Monash and Canada's General Currie with developing a response. Their solution was the "combined arms" co-ordination of artillery, tanks, aircraft and infantry on a massive scale. And their test of tactics came in August at the battle of Amiens. See p103.

9.00 Vitamin Pills: Miracle or Myth?

RT The vitamin industry is worth more than £400 million a year in the UK alone, but what are these pills actually doing for people's health? In this Horizon investigation, Dr Giles Yeo explores if vitamin and mineral supplements are what they appear to be, putting people's diets to the test to find out if they really need these supplements. Those he meets include a scientist in Copenhagen, whose ground-breaking research into antioxidants indicates they may not have the health-enhancing properties that are commonly assumed. See p102.

A twist of Lemmon

It Should Happen to You ★★★★★

6.00pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Before Jack Lemmon was given his first major screen credit in this romantic comedy (review, p46), he had to answer to Columbia's Harry Cohn. The studio boss feared critics would seize upon the name Lemmon to deride the movie, and suggested he change his name to "Lennon". Lemmon's response was that the alternative might be confused with "Lenin" at a time when communism was an even bigger fear than a bad review. He won his name back. TOM FOLLEY

New to Netflix

Den of Thieves ★★★ Netflix

In Los Angeles, the bank-robbery capital of the world, cunning thieves plan a daring heist while a maverick detective and his crew ("the Regulators") keep them under surveillance. It's a familiar tale, not least for fans of Michael Mann's much-admired Heat, and if Gerard Butler's bad-ass cop and Pablo Schreiber's ex-special forces crook don't quite carry the gravitas of Pacino and De Niro, they both contribute strongly to a worthwhile, if not startlingly original, genre offering. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Robert Redford directs this period piece set in Montana, which focuses on the relationship between clergyman Tom Skerritt and his sons, Craig Sheffer and Brad Pitt. What it lacks in dramatic bite it more than makes up for with Philippe Rousselot's exquisite photography.

YOUR HOSTS

will lead tonight's

PICK OF THE DAY Stand Up to Cancer 7.00pm C4

FUNDRAISING Michael Bublé doing Carpool Karaoke with James Corden. Now that's going to be fun, although emotional, too, as the Canadian crooner opens up about the heartache of his three-year-old son being diagnosed with cancer, and his joy now that the youngster is in remission.

The Bublé/Corden collab will be one of the highlights of this fundraising marathon of entertainment, as will Celebrity Gogglebox, even though there are no hints about which celebrities are taking part (it was Ed Sheeran, Jeremy Corbyn and Liam Gallagher last time). There's also an appearance from the bakers of Celebrity Bake Off, the Muppets, Rita Ora, Made in Chelsea's Jamie Laing and Spencer Matthews and a tribute to Aretha Franklin, who died from cancer in August. Among the sketches introduced by hosts Adam Hills, Alan Carr and Maya Jama, there are sobering moments, reminding us why Stand Up to Cancer is so important. Top tip is to donate early (and generously). JANE RACKHAM

The Great Model Railway Challenge

8.00pm Channel 5

ENTERTAINMENT There's no other show on Earth apart from this one that would rejoice in a re-creation of "old Great Western Railway sheds at a bleak postwar Didcot". And we must all be thankful, because it's great fun.

The theme of the fourth heat is "Fire and Ice", but the three competing teams pay scant attention to it, and each goes their own way. There is high drama and a bit of tension when Ray of the Diesel Dynamos is tardy with his viaduct (which is a thing of beauty). Meanwhile, the Railway Children take absolutely ages to get their track laid down, while the Fawley Flyers aren't very fiery or icy. ALISON GRAHAM

Blues and Beyond with Cerys Matthews and Val Wilmer

8.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Cerys Matthews chats on a sofa with Val Wilmer, a photographer who met many blues legends when they visited Britain from the 1950s onwards. She recalls sharing chicken and chips with John Lee Hooker and giving a lift to Jimi Hendrix; when Cerys brandishes a Best of Muddy Waters album, Val points out that was the record Keith Richards carried when he first met Mick Jagger.

There are great clips, too, including Sister Rosetta Tharpe performing her proto-rock-n-roll at a Manchester railway station, while fans clap along on the opposite platform.

DAVID BUTCHER

The Lakes with Paul Rose

8.30pm BBC2 (not Wales)

DOCUMENTARY You have to hand it to the indefatigable Paul Rose, he'll have a go at anything, anywhere. In the second of two visits to his beloved Lake District, Rose takes part in a penny farthing cycling event before doing a bit of mountain biking and climbing a savage-looking crag.

Of course, no television presenter can visit Coniston Water without remembering the death of Donald Campbell as he attempted to break the world water speed record. Rose meets Campbell's daughter Gina (and her dad's teddy bear mascot, which floated to the surface after the crash) and talks to a local man who was a member of the Bluebird's crew on that fateful day in 1967. AG

Made in Great Britain

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series A quartet of 21st-century craftspeople – a potter, a leather worker, a chef and a blacksmith – are led by Steph McGovern through time to look at Britain's steel-making history, rooted firmly in Sheffield. It's an odd premise and makes for a disjointed programme that involves watching people who are good at one thing being not very good at another thing.

The little group are asked to make a scythe using traditional methods (it's hard work – who knew?). They shift to cutlery-making and gasp at the dreadful conditions of Victorian workers. At least no one cries. They end up making forks the modern way. AG

Alison Graham: page 49

There's both good and bad news for Debbie (right) on Emmerdale (7pm ITV): first, she gets released on bail, then gets told that she could eventually face up to four years in prison. But despite her sinking into despair at the prospect, I can't help but be thrilled by the novelty of it all. A guilty person in soaps could actually be going to jail! Usually, only the innocent get incarcerated, so that fans can wear Free Gail/Deirdre/Sally/Fiz/Peter/Anna/Mick/Max T-shirts, and questions can be asked in Parliament by politicians who haven't watched an episode of a soap since Dolly Skilbeck was around.

And all right, maybe Debbie didn't carry out the acid attack that's landed her in trouble (she merely ordered the villainous Simon to assault Joe, only for Simon to then target Ross in a case of mistaken identity). But if Debbie does go down, at least it shows that soap juries aren't all a bunch of fools whose legal antennae are permanently on the blink. Lock her up, I say. DAVID BROWN

Walking Britain's Lost Railways

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY The railway that once ran from Ruabon near Wrexham to Barmouth in Snowdonia connected Victorian tourists to what was then the exotic, untamed wilderness of Wales. But despite being a busy route, it was closed in 1965.

Rob Bell starts his investigations by taking a breathtaking trip along the "Stream in the Sky" – as the Pontcysyllte Aqueduct is known – before coming back down to earth and boarding a steam train to travel along ten miles of restored track.

While Rob sometimes struggles to find physical clues to the old route, he – yet again – meets plenty of terrific characters with colourful stories about its glory days. JR

Would I Lie to You?

9.30pm BBC1

COMEDY One of the panellists tonight is Olivia Colman. You might think one of Britain's favourite actresses would have her hands full filming The Crown, but here she is, next to old friend David Mitchell because, she says, she has to return a parcel that has been in her hall for seven months to a neighbour called Justin – he has turned up for the "This is my..." round.

Other tenuous claims include the idea that Mitchell is a mean table tennis player and that Aston Merrygold once backflipped into a supermarket trolley. At one point, Jon Richardson berates Lee Mack for being indecisive: "You're on this every week! You don't get Gregg Wallace tasting a meal and going, 'I don't know – what do you think?'" DAVID BUTCHER

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

CHAT SHOW There'll be plenty of magical mischief Chez Graham tonight as Fantastic Beasts: The Crimes of Grindelwald stars Eddie Redmayne and Jude Law drop in to talk about the latest Harry Potter spin-off. Law takes on the role of a young Albus Dumbledore in the film, so Potterheads won't want to miss this interview. Joining them on the sofa are Melissa McCarthy and Academy Award winner Emma Stone.

And Rick Astley is on hand to perform his new single, Try. Perhaps Graham can cast a spell to try to convince him to belt out a few bars of Never Gonna Give You Up while he's at it... SARAH DORAN

Nominally a reboot of Sabrina the Teenage Witch, this is a much darker, classier take on the idea of a 16-year-old girl moving between the occult and ordinary teen life. David Bowie at Glastonbury 2000 10.55pm BBC4

MUSIC On Sunday 25 June 2000, David Bowie strolled out onto Glastonbury's Pyramid Stage to perform a mesmerising two-hour set that was, essentially, a greatest hits package. Resplendent in an Alexander McQueen frock coat and Hunky Dory-style hair, he launched into Wild Is the Wind, followed by China Girl and Changes. It was arguably one of the greatest Glastonbury performances ever, but the Thin White Duke apparently insisted that only the first five songs and the encore (Heroes, which Michael Eavis hailed as his "best Glastonbury moment of all time") were broadcast.

So well done to the cameraman who still filmed the entire set. If you were one of the thousands who didn't get tickets to this year's festival, seeing this gig now is a good consolation prize.

9.00 Queen: Rock the World

By 1977 punk was at its height, and while rockers Queen had become a major headlining act in the UK, they faced hostile reviews from the music press. Undeterred, Freddie Mercury, Brian May, Roger Taylor and John Deacon went on to record their sixth album. Lovingly restored archive footage reveals that, far from being the expected production extravaganza, News of the World showcased the musicians at their rawest, most simple and best.

Feel the fear on Film4

Film4 gets its ghoulish groove on in the lead-up to Halloween as the channel reverts to FilmFear when the sun goes down, starting with M Night Shyamalan's weirdly subversive The Visit and a return to Burkittsville in the premiere of Blair Witch (pictured; review, p46). Next week's diabolical offerings include first showings for the psycho-chillers Kaleidoscope and Pet and supernatural shockers The Other Side of the Door and The Witch, as well as nightmares from doyens of dread Dario Argento (Inferno), Clive Barker (Midnight Meat Train) and Stephen King (Creepshow). It promises to be a hell of a week. JEREMY ASPINALL

Sex after marriage

Fifty Shades Freed ★★ 9.00pm Sky Premiere
The lacklustre final dollop of EL James's softcore kinkfest sees Jamie Dornan and Dakota Johnson reprising their roles as still-pervy billionaire Christian Grey and ex-ingénue Anastasia. The couple are now married but finding wedded bliss threatened by Christian's possessiveness, Ana's psycho ex-boss, a bombshell revelation, and Christian's rendition of a Beatles song. Like the first two films, this is slick, glossy and rather silly stuff – and about as gripping as a pair of Christian's designer handcuffs. DAVE ALDRIDGE

An innocent abroad

Private's Progress ★★★★★ 1.30pm TCM
Ian Carmichael is superbly cast here as the hapless army conscript whose natural ineptitude is seen as a God-given gift by the roguish Dennis Price and Richard Attenborough. The Boulting brothers rather lose track of the plot once Carmichael goes after Nazi art treasures, but this is still richly entertaining. DAVID PARKINSON

‘I don’t feel guilty’

The BBC’s Lyse Doucet has witnessed the worst of war. But can she ever leave the horror behind?

Archive on 4: Witnessing the Worst
Saturday 8.00pm Radio 4

LYSE DOUCET REMEMBERS the last time she wept. “We went to the Palestinian refugee camp at Yarmouk on the out-skirts of Damascus. Even after several years covering the civil war, we’d never been in a place of such intensity, with so much desperation, so much devastation. A little boy was crying for bread. After we came out, myself and my Syrian colleagues, we collapsed in tears. It was so, so, so shocking.”

Today Doucet, the BBC’s chief international correspondent, isn’t in a combat zone but a tiny radio studio in south London, recording a special edition of Archive on 4. She’s interviewing women war correspondents over the phone, asking if their lot has changed since Lee Miller and Martha Gellhorn put female reporting on the front line during the Second World War.

Doucet doesn’t go back that far – she turns 60 this year – but she has seen three decades of conflict. She first flew to Afghanistan on Christmas Eve 1988 (“my birthday”), and has since reported from across the region and beyond, picking up an OBE, two Sony radio awards and many other accolades. When air strikes fall on the innocent and tanks crash through homes, we’ve come to expect Doucet to be there, telling us what’s happening in that distinctive is-it-Scottish-is-it-French? accent. “It’s Canadian,” she says firmly. “One hundred per cent Canadian.”

Doucet was born in Bathurst, a small town in the province of New Brunswick, and brought up a Roman Catholic. At school she was told her career prospects amounted to “a nun or none”. “The nuns were some of the best feminists I’d ever met,” she says. “They weren’t happy with the fact that there weren’t women priests. They weren’t happy with the corruption. They weren’t happy with the abuses. They were very strong women.”

We’ve come to take Doucet’s own strength and bravery for granted, but she’s very aware of what can go wrong. In 2012 her friend, the Sunday Times journalist Marie Colvin, was killed by Syrian government artillery fire in Homs. “I’ll never forget it,” says Doucet. “I was listening to Marie’s report on the BBC World Service at home in London. She was in an area under intense bombardment, talking about a baby whose tummy was going up and down and then it stopped because the baby died.

“The next morning, reports came in that Marie had been killed. Earlier that week Marie had told Lindsey Hilsum [Channel 4 News international editor] in Beirut that she was going into Homs. Lindsey had felt it was beyond the acceptable threshold of danger. Marie just looked at her and said, ‘Lindsey, it’s what we do.’ I often remember that. ‘It’s what we do.’”

One of the reporters she interviews says some of her female colleagues deliberately

‘There are times when I don’t want to look at ruined houses... I just need calm’

don't have children. Does Doucet regret not having a child? "Would you ask a man that question?" she replies sharply. "I've always said I want to live a life without any regrets. And I don't have any. Coming from small-town Canada to work for one of the biggest, best broadcasting organisations in the world is like winning the lottery. The BBC has been a passport for me. It lets me travel where I want to go and tell the stories that I want tell. Sometimes they happen to be the headline stories of our time. Sometimes they are the defining stories of our time."

HER ENCOUNTERS WITH tragedy naturally take a toll, and when Doucet returns from assignments she swaps her usual Radio 4 for Radio 3 – "I need classical music" – and the television stays off for a while. "There have been times when I don't want to look at images of ruined landscapes, gutted, darkened houses, children fleeing in anguish, people crying. I just need to be calm. I hope that's the normal response because if you were hard as stone, it means you're not touched. How could you not be touched by the enormity of what people are going through?"

She sketches that enormity out for me. "In Syria, women and children were targeted, traumatised and even tortured. We had to let them tell their stories."

Her flat is near Paddington Station and the Heathrow Express. "I live in a quiet area of London, which is quite soothing. I sense that some people think I'm a little weird, that I don't do normal ordinary things. Sometimes I laugh and think, 'Let them think I'm a weirdo.' But I'm not. I have coffee in my neighbourhood with friends, go to see classical music or Afghan music or African music. Go to Iranian restaurants."

Can she really leave behind what she sees? "People often say to me when I get back, 'Oh, you must feel guilty that you're going to a restaurant with your friends or that you're going to a café.'

"But no. I don't feel guilty. Most people who are living in conflict zones want to go to cafés and not worry about a bomb coming through the roof. They want to send their child off to school and know in their hearts that they will come back. We should celebrate and enjoy and embrace those things because that is life and in countries where people die they want to live those things, too. If we don't enjoy them, then what's the point?"

Keywords for Our Time

Mon–Fri 9.45am/12.30am Radio 4

Michael Rosen (above) could be described as radio's go-to man for anything to do with words and language, but that would be to invite a discussion around "go-to" and where would it end? The self-confessed language obsessive would have a field day. Field day, anyone?

Presenter for the past 20 years of Radio 4's Word of Mouth, Rosen is also the man behind Keywords for Our Time, an offshoot with a specifically contemporary slant, and a chance, he says, to home in on an idea in a way that Word of Mouth might not be able to do.

The speakers in this second series of Keywords for Our Time include Afua Hirsch on "Sovereignty", Isabel Hardman on "Safe Space", Natalie Haynes on "Patriarchy" and Stuart Maconie on "The Nanny State", with Rosen discussing their thoughts with them.

New coinages are nothing new, but Rosen thinks we are becoming more sensitised to them, and not necessarily because they are a bad thing. "Take '#MeToo'," he says, "which was a very powerful organising impulse – a reforming thing and surely an advance."

The title Keywords for Our Time echoes Raymond Williams's 1976 book Keywords: a Vocabulary of Culture and Society, which Word of Mouth discusses on Tuesday (4.00pm), the last programme in the current series.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Johnny is shocked to discover the truth about what's been going on under his nose and is concerned that his domestic set-up may never be the same again. After facing tough questioning from Elizabeth, will he betray a confidence to spare her feelings?

Emma offers Jazzer relationship advice, but is the luckless romantic set to get his heart broken again? Tom is on the receiving end of some stinging criticism, while Henry has something on his mind that leaves Helen unnerved – but is she overreacting? Jill, meanwhile, offers one of her children a lifeline.

Lynda secures a venue for her Christmas show. If only she could solve her perennial problem with casting... DAVID BROWN

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Attention please

...on a matter of some impotence

I ALMOST BECAME A drug dealer last week. I should stress it wasn't hard drugs. Bad choice of words. It was Viagra. Would you like to hear some Viagra jokes I got off of the internet?

Have you tried Starbucks' new hot beverage, Viagraccino? One cup and you're up all night.

What's the difference between Niagara and Viagra? Niagara Falls. Why has Viagra been a big boon to comedians? Because it helps them stand up. I'm here all week; don't try the veal.

My brush with pushing Viagra started, as drug dealing often does, innocently enough.

On the London Underground there have been adverts promising that someone called Eddie will deliver Viagra discreetly to your door. There is a drawing of a man in tracksuit bottoms and for some reason a cape. I concluded that the drawing was of Eddie and naturally assumed it was modelled on me because my name is Eddie and I'm never seen in public without a cape.

I took a photo of the ad and posted on Twitter that it might be a good sponsorship opportunity for LBC. What larks. Other tweeters piled in with frightfully witty remarks of the kind you can well imagine. How amusing for us all. And then I forgot all about it.

A few days later, an email arrived from the marketing company who created Eddie. They had seen the Twitter nonsense and were very much up (sorry) for exploring said sponsorship opportunities.

'My brush with Viagra started innocently enough'

We considered it, of course. "Eddie Mair on LBC: he's hard to listen to." "Eddie Mair on LBC: standing tall at drivetime." "Eddie Mair on LBC: he's purple and angry looking." It was generally agreed that the ads would work better on Nick Ferrari's breakfast show (a thousand variations on the word rise/get up/up with the lark etc).

In the end we passed on this invaluable opportunity. I have no connection with the company so I cannot advise you on where to get your blue pills. I suppose as with all medication you should seek medical advice before taking Viagra. And certainly buy it from somewhere proper. Not a hardened criminal.

I'M BEING WATCHED

There are cameras trained on us all the time in the LBC studio. They tell us this is to capture our sparkling conversations for the online audience who like nothing better than controversial clips on their phones among their Instagrams, Snapchats and ads for Viagra.

I suspect there may be other reasons.

I have it on good authority that before the cameras were installed, one presenter on the network was adept at making it out of the building with computer screens, keyboards, microphones and even a mixing desk somehow stuffed into a Tesco bag-for-life. Her house had more technical equipment in it than Cape Canaveral. The cameras have put a stop to all that.

Any hopes I had of utilising the cameras to get some backhanders have fallen by the wayside. I've been told in no uncertain terms that dressing myself head to toe in Prada in the hope of freebies is a no-no. And I can't proffer bottles of well-known drinks brands while I bletcher - all beverages must be in Global-branded mugs, supplied by Global Headquarters.

By the way, I know you're wondering about the name of my colleague with the light fingers, but wild horses would not drag her name from me. But it rhymes with Feela Yoghurty.

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

Sex in The Archers? It's a risqué business

In literature, they say, plot follows character whereas in soap opera character follows plot. That can be the only explanation for Hannah Riley, who recently reappeared in

The Archers following a ten-year absence to take up her duties as deputy manager in the Berrow Farm Pig Unit, having turned into such a vamp in her time away. So keen is she to have Tom Archer regularly washed and delivered to her tent that she even calls him from said pig unit while she's having her elevenses to suggest he gets out of the poly tunnels and meets her at lunchtime to deal with her carnal needs.

When these seem to be completed and Tom is looking for his pants, she says, "I haven't finished with you yet," which may be the most forward line uttered by a female character in the soap since Jolene took the loofah to Sid Perks in the Great Joint Shower Incident of 2000. Unfortunately, The Archers' experiments with physical love have a tendency to turn Whitehall farce with couples in flagrante being surprised by a sudden "Coo-ee" from one of the many unannounced callers who make Ambridge such a hazardous place to carry on an affair. This was no exception.

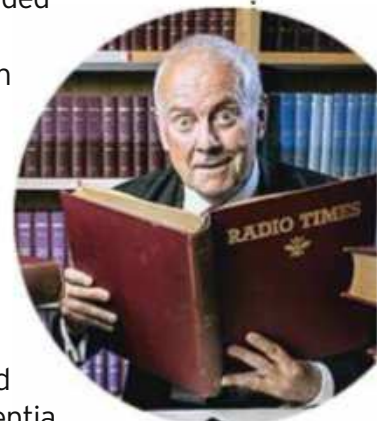

A poem a day keeps the doctor away

In Poetry by Heart (available on BBC iPlayer Radio), Gyles Brandreth reminded us that Dame Sybil Thorndike memorised a poem a day even when she was in her 90s. He also emphasised that since a 60-year-old produces as many new brain cells as a six-year-old there's no excuse for older people thinking they can no longer commit verses to memory, and that this could also be a way to combat dementia.

I was so impressed by his pitch I came away resolved to learn TS Eliot's Journey of the Magi by Christmas. I'll keep you posted.

Help us to remember

Intrigue: The Ratline, the ten-part podcast featuring barrister and author Philippe Sands, about the story of how prominent Nazi Otto Watcher evaded justice at the end of the Second World War, has been absorbing listening. However, by episode six it came up against one limitation of the podcast medium. In any historical podcast the listener can only take so much complexity and can only retain a certain number of characters in their head before they start reaching for a paper and pencil to make notes. The programme has its own web page, but irritatingly hasn't found room for a simple pictorial guide to the cast of characters. Multimedia projects need multimedia editing.

6.00pm Radio 3

The ancient Greek legend of Medea – the barbarian sorceress who helped Jason steal the Golden Fleece, then exacted terrible vengeance when he betrayed her for another woman – has inspired composers from Cavalli and Charpentier to Xenakis and Gavin Bryars. Premiered in Paris in 1797, Cherubini's version was revived in the 1950s for Maria Callas, who so embodied the title role that she was cast as Medea in Pasolini's 1969 film. Callas always sang the role in Italian, but the Berlin Staatsoper's new production (above), starring Bulgarian soprano Sonya Yoncheva as the child-murdering mother, is in the more dramatic French original. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Words and Music

5.30pm Radio 3

Words and Music is the Sunday evening strand that weaves literary readings and musical extracts into a seamless aural tapestry, sans any announcements, that can seem either deeply stimulating or intensely frustrating, depending upon how great one's need to know exactly what one is listening to at any given moment. That sense of being lost in a dense soundscape without clear signposts may, however, be especially appropriate for tonight's edition. Forming part of Radio 3's Into the Forest season, it focuses on wolves and foxes, with actors Alison Steadman and Tim Dutton reading from the writings of, among others, Aesop, Rudyard Kipling and Roald Dahl, interspersed with music ranging from Mozart, Prokofiev and Sondheim to Los Lobos and Jimi Hendrix. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Big Broadcast

7.15pm Radio 4

Composer Neil Brand has a great talent for bringing the past to life, and his zany musical comedy returns to Chicago radio station WKSD in 1932, where the Hour of Charm is the most successful broadcast in the Midwest. But a change in sponsor brings problems as the new manager from Chicago Beefsteak wants to ditch the skits, songs and drama for a money-making quiz. Samantha Spiro plays the sassy studio manager Myrna with verve, and the whole is an amusing confection, with snappy lines and Brand's evocative music – though the audience laughter breaks the spell somewhat. DAVID CRAWFORD

Today's Choices

Book at Bedtime: Melmoth

10.45pm Radio 4
From its opening lines, the layered new novel from Sarah Perry (above) is populated by echoes and ghosts. It follows Englishwoman Helen Franklin, a translator who lives in modern-day Prague and is "guilty of a crime for which she feels no proper recompense can ever be made... she is in exile". When her friend Karel, an academic, gives her a manuscript that he inherited from an old acquaintance, Helen's guilt takes on a shadowy, fearsome form: that of Melmoth, which, the text says, stalks those who have committed bad deeds. Like Perry's The Essex Serpent, which earned readers' and critics' plaudits alike when it was published in 2016, Melmoth is a gothic, visceral, finely wrought tale, read by Greta Scacchi and Anton Lesser.

The Essay: Telegraph Wires – Five Views of Ted Hughes

10.45pm Radio 3
It's the way Ted Hughes depicted the "otherness" of animals that Helen Mort says drew her to his poetry, in an essay – the first of five this week marking the 20th anniversary of the death of the brooding poet laureate – in which Mort's own fear of dogs is a striking element. The other four poets we hear from are Sean O'Brien, Karen McCarthy Woolf, Zaffar Kunial and Simon Armitage – all of them testifying to Hughes's lasting potency. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

Radio 3 In Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

As if conducting four consecutive cycles of Wagner's The Ring of the Nibelung – each comprising four full-length operas totalling around 15 hours of music – in just six weeks wasn't enough of a challenge, the Royal Opera's music director, Sir Antonio Pappano, takes a night off from Wagner, three-quarters of the way through his third Ring cycle, to conduct the greatest non-operatic work by the German master's major Italian rival: Giuseppe Verdi's roof-raising Messa da Requiem. With a solo line-up led by the Bulgarian soprano Krassimira Stoyanova (above) – in a part written for the Bohemian soprano Teresa Stolz, rumoured to be Verdi's mistress – tonight's gala performance marks the 50th anniversary of the Royal Charter that transformed the postwar Covent Garden Opera Company into the current Royal Opera. MARK PAPPENHEIM

The Life Scientific

9.00am Radio 4

Jacqueline McGlade is living proof that science certainly is not what you know, but how you use it. Her journey from university in Bangor to Kenya's Maasai Mara via research in Britain and Canada, and positions at the European Environment Agency and the UN, is a truly colourful one. She was in Silicon Valley just as computers began to talk to each other. She was in Nova Scotia as oceanographers began using satellite imaging. In today's conversation with Jim Al-Khalili (the first of a new series), she reveals how big-picture thinking allowed her to be ahead of her field in mapping changes to our planet's environment from space. SUE ROBINSON

Today's Choices

David Baddiel Tries to Understand

8.45pm Radio 4

David Baddiel (above) has found another niche, this time as an inquisitive everyman who wants to know how things work and who usually ends up... well, with more of an idea than before. The fourth series in which he investigates stuff suggested to him on Twitter – previously everything from cryptic crosswords to the Kardashians – begins today with wifi. Perfect. The show always works best when it deals with something we cannot live without (like electricity, which began the first series) and cannot begin to explain. Is wifi like radar? Is it a wave of some description? A professor and two blokes from Virgin Media patiently explain about the connection between microwave ovens, radio waves and why we can't get a phone signal in the toilet. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

6.30pm Radio 4

She's back. After establishing herself in the sketch show format on both TV (Little Miss Jocelyn) and radio (It's Jocelyn), Jocelyn Jee Esien tries sitcom. As with her earlier work, this pilot is not exactly groundbreaking. Jocelyn is a youth group leader with delusions of grandeur. She imagines hobnobbing with Michele Obama and Oprah Winfrey. She also has issues with her mum. Hmm. It's very reminiscent of Clare in the Community, which actually was groundbreaking in its satire of the would-be politically correct. But the audience reaction, possibly only partially canned, implies that Joy's dreadful prejudices remain hilariously pertinent. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Today's Choices

The Film Programme

4.00pm Radio 4

Francine Stock throws away the script when she interviews director Carol Morley (above) about her admiration for Jane Campion's quirky 1989 feature debut Sweetie, a movie about the relationship between two sisters that was both celebrated and savaged by critics. For Morley's hero is a surprise addition to the programme on the line from Germany, and reveals herself to be no less a fan of Morley's work. No surprise maybe, since both film-makers have shown themselves able to ruffle the feathers of a male-dominated industry simply by making movies with female protagonists who, as Campion says, "are not just madonnas". The programme fulfils its brief in making one want to go out and watch Sweetie – not to mention take a look at Morley's latest movie, offbeat noir thriller Out of Blue, if nothing else in order to try and spot homages to her muse. TOM FOLLEY

Assignment

1.30pm/10.05pm/2.30am

BBC World Service

In June 2017 a new law came into force in Serbia, intended to reduce the country's high rates of femicide and domestic violence, and meet the standards set out by a Council of Europe convention. But is it working? So far this year, some 20 women have been murdered by a husband or partner, with many more experiencing abuse. In this report, Nicola Kelly travels to Belgrade to speak to victims and families of women who have been killed, asking what more can be done to combat this endemic violence. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Live from the Royal Albert Hall: John Williams in Concert with the London Symphony Orchestra

7.00pm Classic FM

To hail him as Earth's most hummable living film composer is anything but faint praise. Age does not wither the 86-year-old John Williams (above), who returns to the UK for the first time in 20 years to conduct an all-killer-no-filler concert with the London Symphony Orchestra. I'm lucky enough to be co-hosting live from the Royal Albert Hall, with Classic FM's font of all knowledge Catherine Bott. We'll play some lesser-known JW themes in the run-up and hope to buttonhole the great man backstage. I'll put money on Jaws, Star Wars, the Raiders theme, Schindler's List and Harry Potter making the setlist, but perhaps not my personal fave, his louche theme from The Poseidon Adventure. Make the most of his imperial marches and fabulous fanfares while the force is still with him.

In Search of El Dorado

11.00am Radio 4

Will the search for the City of Gold ever end? Even though it has continued without real evidence for nearly 500 years, it appears that El Dorado still holds great symbolic value for us. Why else would the name be used for a 1990s TV soap opera about Brits seeking a better life in the sun? Here, the odyssey moves on with Jerry Brotton following in the footsteps of Sir Walter Raleigh, whose 1595 quest took him to Trinidad and present-day Guyana. Brotton meets descendants of the indigenous people Raleigh discovered. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jamz Supernova BBC Radio 1Xtra

Age 27
Real name Jamilla Walters
Current job Presents a Tuesday night show (11pm) and Saturday/Sunday shows (1pm) on BBC Radio 1Xtra. A new BBC iPlayer documentary about her Radio 1Xtra show DIY Generation will be released on 29 October. She is an international DJ. She also has her own record label, Future Bounce.

CV Born in Birmingham and brought up in south-east London, of Jamaican, Irish and Cuban heritage, she studied media at the Brit School and first broadcast for Sydenham Community Radio in 2007 and Rezz in 2009. Joined 1Xtra for work experience in 2009. She has also produced and presented for BBC Radio 1.

Best moment "After five years working in production but always wanting to present, I got my own 1Xtra show in 2015. I finally made the cut."

Worst moment "I got really carried away on air and told an enthusiastic listener 'to f go for it!' There were no complaints but I was mortified and burst into tears."

Off air "I live in a rented flat in south London with my boyfriend Sam, a record producer and DJ. I'm a Netflix box set junkie – everything from serious stuff to trash."

First radio memory "Recording the Dr Fox chart show."

Favourite broadcasters "Trevor Nelson, Mistajam, Target and Toddla T. They are always just themselves on air. Totally inspirational."

Ambition "To maintain and sustain a quality flagship show. And to go on for as many years as Annie Nightingale!"

Dream job "I'm very content with what I'm doing now. So I'm doing it."

Secret skills "I really enjoy Zumba dancing and do it every Tuesday before my show. I take it very seriously and love following the choreography. I'm pretty good at table tennis – I've got a super serve. From the age of ten to 16 I played football – centre back for Kent Magpies. And I make a mean cup of tea – the milk must always go in last!"

Face behind the voice

Jamz Supernova BBC Radio 1Xtra

Age 27

Real name Jamilla Walters

Current job Presents a Tuesday night show (11pm) and Saturday/Sunday

shows (1pm) on BBC Radio 1Xtra. A new BBC iPlayer documentary about her Radio 1Xtra show DIY Generation will be released on 29 October. She is an international DJ. She also has her own record label, Future Bounce.

CV Born in Birmingham and brought up in south-east London, of Jamaican, Irish and Cuban heritage, she studied media at the Brit School and first broadcast for Sydenham Community Radio in 2007 and Rezz in 2009. Joined 1Xtra for work experience in 2009. She has also produced and presented for BBC Radio 1.

Best moment "After five years working in production but always wanting to present, I got my own 1Xtra show in 2015. I finally made the cut."

Worst moment "I got really carried away on air and told an enthusiastic listener 'to f go for it!' There were no complaints but I was mortified and burst into tears."

Off air "I live in a rented flat in south London with my boyfriend Sam, a record producer and DJ. I'm a Netflix box set junkie – everything from serious stuff to trash."

First radio memory "Recording the Dr Fox chart show."

Favourite broadcasters "Trevor Nelson, Mistajam, Target and Toddla T. They are always just themselves on air. Totally inspirational."

Ambition "To maintain and sustain a quality flagship show. And to go on for as many years as Annie Nightingale!"

Dream job "I'm very content with what I'm doing now. So I'm doing it."

Secret skills "I really enjoy Zumba dancing and do it every Tuesday before my show. I take it very seriously and love following the choreography. I'm pretty good at table tennis – I've got a super serve. From the age of ten to 16 I played football – centre back for Kent Magpies. And I make a mean cup of tea – the milk must always go in last!"

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jamz Supernova BBC Radio 1Xtra

Age 27
Real name Jamilla Walters
Current job Presents a Tuesday night show (11pm) and Saturday/Sunday

shows (1pm) on BBC Radio 1Xtra. A new BBC iPlayer documentary about her Radio 1Xtra show DIY Generation will be released on 29 October. She is an international DJ. She also has her own record label, Future Bounce.

CV Born in Birmingham and brought up in south-east London, of Jamaican, Irish and Cuban heritage, she studied media at the Brit School and first broadcast for Sydenham Community Radio in 2007 and Rezz in 2009. Joined 1Xtra for work experience in 2009. She has also produced and presented for BBC Radio 1.

Best moment "After five years working in production but always wanting to present, I got my own 1Xtra show in 2015. I finally made the cut."

Worst moment "I got really carried away on air and told an enthusiastic listener 'to f go for it!' There were no complaints but I was mortified and burst into tears." Off air "I live in a rented flat in south London with my boyfriend Sam, a record producer and DJ. I'm a Netflix box set junkie – everything from serious stuff to trash."

First radio memory "Recording the Dr Fox chart show."

Favourite broadcasters "Trevor Nelson, Mistajam, Target and Toddla T. They are always just themselves on air. Totally inspirational."

Ambition "To maintain and sustain a quality flagship show. And to go on for as many years as Annie Nightingale!"

Dream job "I'm very content with what I'm doing now. So I'm doing it."

Secret skills "I really enjoy Zumba dancing and do it every Tuesday before my show. I take it very seriously and love following the choreography. I'm pretty good at table tennis – I've got a super serve. From the age of ten to 16 I played football – centre back for Kent Magpies. And I make a mean cup of tea – the milk must always go in last!"

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Jamz Supernova BBC Radio 1Xtra

Age 27

Real name Jamilla Walters

Current job Presents a Tuesday night show (11pm) and Saturday/Sunday

shows (1pm) on BBC Radio 1Xtra. A new BBC iPlayer documentary about her Radio 1Xtra show DIY Generation will be released on 29 October. She is an international DJ. She also has her own record label, Future Bounce.

CV Born in Birmingham and brought up in south-east London, of Jamaican, Irish and Cuban heritage, she studied media at the Brit School and first broadcast for Sydenham Community Radio in 2007 and Rezz in 2009. Joined 1Xtra for work experience in 2009. She has also produced and presented for BBC Radio 1.

Best moment "After five years working in production but always wanting to present, I got my own 1Xtra show in 2015. I finally made the cut."

Worst moment "I got really carried away on air and told an enthusiastic listener 'to f go for it!' There were no complaints but I was mortified and burst into tears."

Off air "I live in a rented flat in south London with my boyfriend Sam, a record producer and DJ. I'm a Netflix box set junkie – everything from serious stuff to trash."

First radio memory "Recording the Dr Fox chart show."

Favourite broadcasters "Trevor Nelson, Mistajam, Target and Toddla T. They are always just themselves on air. Totally inspirational."

Ambition "To maintain and sustain a quality flagship show. And to go on for as many years as Annie Nightingale!"

Dream job "I'm very content with what I'm doing now. So I'm doing it."

Secret skills "I really enjoy Zumba dancing and do it every Tuesday before my show. I take it very seriously and love following the choreography. I'm pretty good at table tennis – I've got a super serve. From the age of ten to 16 I played football – centre back for Kent Magpies. And I make a mean cup of tea – the milk must always go in last!"

Face behind the voice

Jamz Supernova BBC Radio 1Xtra

Age 27

Real name Jamilla Walters

Current job Presents a Tuesday night show (11pm) and Saturday/Sunday

shows (1pm) on BBC Radio 1Xtra. A new BBC iPlayer documentary about her Radio 1Xtra show DIY Generation will be released on 29 October. She is an international DJ. She also has her own record label, Future Bounce.

CV Born in Birmingham and brought up in south-east London, of Jamaican, Irish and Cuban heritage, she studied media at the Brit School and first broadcast for Sydenham Community Radio in 2007 and Rezz in 2009. Joined 1Xtra for work experience in 2009. She has also produced and presented for BBC Radio 1.

Best moment "After five years working in production but always wanting to present, I got my own 1Xtra show in 2015. I finally made the cut."

Worst moment "I got really carried away on air and told an enthusiastic listener 'to f go for it!' There were no complaints but I was mortified and burst into tears."

Off air "I live in a rented flat in south London with my boyfriend Sam, a record producer and DJ. I'm a Netflix box set junkie – everything from serious stuff to trash."

First radio memory "Recording the Dr Fox chart show."

Favourite broadcasters "Trevor Nelson, Mistajam, Target and Toddla T. They are always just themselves on air. Totally inspirational."

Ambition "To maintain and sustain a quality flagship show. And to go on for as many years as Annie Nightingale!"

Dream job "I'm very content with what I'm doing now. So I'm doing it."

Secret skills "I really enjoy Zumba dancing and do it every Tuesday before my show. I take it very seriously and love following the choreography. I'm pretty good at table tennis – I've got a super serve. From the age of ten to 16 I played football – centre back for Kent Magpies. And I make a mean cup of tea – the milk must always go in last!"

WHO ARE YOU?
The band in 1966: from left, Roger Daltrey, John Entwistle, Pete Townshend and Keith Moon

Rock of ages

Roger Daltrey owes his rock 'n' roll lifestyle to a big-nosed schoolmate, a manic drummer – and Hitler's bombs

ROGER DALTREY IS 74. The man who sang “I hope I die before I get old” got old. So did Pete Townshend. The man who wrote those famous lines on the Who's 1965 era-defining single, My Generation, is 73. But the Who, the band they first formed in 1964, aren't ready for sheltered accommodation just yet.

Last year they played live to more than 150,000 people at the Rock in Rio festival, “Only the Who!” laughs Daltrey, sipping tea in a posh and very un-rock 'n' roll private hotel in Mayfair. “We've been together for over 50 years and that's the first time we played South America. I looked out from the stage and the crowd just went on for ever. They knew all the words to every song. Crazy.”

The great rock partnerships invariably have near-legendary moments when the protagonists first come together. Lennon and McCartney met at a Liverpool church fête in

ALL GROWN UP
Pete Townshend and Roger Daltrey – still rocking

1957. For Jagger and Richards it was Dartford train station in 1961. For Daltrey and Townshend it was a 1962 audition to be in Daltrey's band the Detours. He'd seen Townshend at school but when the “boy with the big nose” turned up at rehearsal, brought along by bass player John Entwistle and with a guitar style developed playing banjo in skiffle groups, Daltrey knew he was the one. “There was something special with Pete,” he says. “It happened straight away.”

The air may be heavy with lapsang souchong, but despite his advanced years the still broad-chested Daltrey, wearing jeans and T-shirt, isn't that far away from the teenage west London sheet-metal worker we meet in a revealing, and occasionally astonishing, autobiography that details a journey from the (very) working-class milieu of late-50s Acton to his present status as the millionaire tenant of a country estate in East Sussex with his wife of 45 years, Heather Taylor (the “Foxy Lady” of the Jimi Hendrix song). “I’ve had a life of privilege since the 1970s,” Daltrey says. “I’m very aware of that.”

One thing that hasn’t changed about him is his legs, which are still not as long as he would like. “That was Hitler,” he says. “When you look at people that were born in my year, 1944, they’re generally stunted, and that’s because in our first year off mum’s boob getting real food, half the loaf was full of chalk.”

The war, or its aftermath in London, was actually a creative force for the Who. “I think we were shaped by the postwar devastation,” Daltrey says. “We could only build and we built with destruction. But it worked.”

‘The Who could only build and we built with destruction. But it worked’

That destruction manifested itself in Townshend smashing his guitar on stage, Keith Moon’s manic drumming and Daltrey’s whirling microphone. The only still point in the storm was bassist John Entwistle.

ENTWISTLE AND MOON didn’t get old. Moon died aged 32 in 1978, after an overdose of prescription drugs. Entwistle died of a cocaine-induced heart attack, aged 57, in 2002. “Keith was fearless,” says Daltrey. “He thought he would go on for ever, living that life. Some of the antics I watched!” These included Moon stepping out of a window in Manhattan. “We’re 20 storeys up on a New York skyscraper and Keith is outside the window standing on the air conditioner and you think, ‘Argh. Come in!’”

“When Keith actually did die it was a terrible shock. John’s death wasn’t the same shock, it was incredibly traumatic, but his health had been failing for years: he was totally deaf, he had a bad heart, high blood pressure. He probably was an alcoholic, and he lived the life he had visualised. He wanted to be that rock ‘n’ roll star in his mansion.”

The relationship between the survivors, self-consciously intellectual Townshend and proletarian power-pack Daltrey, has seldom been easy. As songwriter, Townshend always received more money; one album alone, Who’s Next from 1971, has sold 100 million copies. Daltrey, who didn’t take drugs, feared that if the Who messed up he would end up back at the sheet-metal workshop. One time in the mid-60s Daltrey flushed the band’s supply of amphetamine pills down the toilet. Outraged, Townshend attacked Daltrey with a guitar so Daltrey, always the physically tougher of the two, knocked him out.

TOWNSHEND’S HABIT OF giving press interviews casting doubt on Daltrey’s singing did nothing to ease his insecurity. How did Daltrey put up with it? “I understood Pete,” says Daltrey, who sees Townshend as a genius of rock: “one of the greatest pop writers of the 20th century, if not the greatest”. If so, it is a particularly British kind of genius that was given international appeal by Daltrey’s vocals. It was Daltrey who brought Tommy, the deaf, dumb and blind pinball wizard in Townshend’s 1969 rock opera, to life.

Today, Daltrey’s generation appear to be as relevant as ever. Paul McCartney has an album out and the Rolling Stones continue to tour. Why would 150,000 Brazilians pay to see septuagenarians who can hardly hear their own music? “We’re playing with more venom and more understanding of what life is. Look at Mick Jagger, he is an incredible specimen of a human being. He is the best frontman in any rock ‘n’ roll band, ever.”

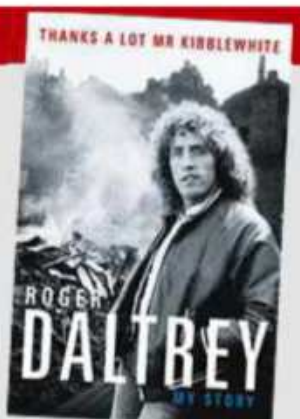

And not Daltrey? “I said rock ‘n’ roll,” Daltrey says. “The Who are a rock band.” And don’t you forget it. MICHAEL HODGES

Roger Daltrey is interviewed on Absolute Radio Classic Rock on Sunday and is on Steve Wright’s Radio 2 show on Thursday

Distillations of wisdom

THE LIFE SCIENTIFIC: EXPLORERS ANNA BUCKLEY

The Life Scientific Tuesday 9.00am Radio 4

Two million people listen to Radio 4’s The Life Scientific every week, in the hope, perhaps, of feeling that little bit smarter afterwards. Fronted by physicist Jim Al-Khalili, the sort of Desert Island Discs for figures from the world of science and technology sees guests recall their careers, their discoveries, and what led them to their specific field of interest in the first place. Now, producer Anna Buckley has collected the wisdom of some of those guests in The Life Scientific: Explorers (£17.50 incl p&p), from Helen Sharman, the first Brit in space, to Jocelyn Bell Burnell, who discovered a new kind of star.

MELMOTH SARAH PERRY

Book at Bedtime Mon–Fri 10.45pm Radio 4

For a modern publishing sensation, Sarah Perry’s The Essex Serpent – released in 2016 – was decidedly old-fashioned. Set in the late 19th century, it centred on a mythical beast that dwelt in the Essex marshes, and became a word-of-mouth hit, raking in both literary and readers’ awards. Perry’s follow-up, Melmoth (£16.99 incl p&p), a reworking of an 1820 gothic tale called Melmoth the Wanderer, has all the atmosphere and menace of her last novel: in contemporary Prague, Helen Franklin, a translator, lives a small, quiet life – until Melmoth, a shadowy figure who haunts those who do bad deeds, finally catches up with her.

ALWAYS LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE OF LIFE ERIC IDLE

Inevitably, Eric Idle’s memoir, Always Look on the Bright Side of Life (£18 incl p&p), is no ordinary celebrity autobiography – despite the inclusion of photos of Idle and his starry pals (sample caption: “With Pierce Brosnan in Yugoslavia”). Yes, there are showbiz anecdotes, but they’re told with incredulity – of a house party Idle threw with Harrison Ford and Carrie Fisher, he writes, “... if you can believe this, all of the Rolling Stones turned up”. That story and more are combined with frank, fresh insights into his five decades as part of Monty Python.

The Great British Bake Off

Tuesday 8.00pm C4

Fresh orange cake

This is a simple to make, all-in-one cake that takes minutes to mix up and get in the oven.

SERVES 12

- 200g self-raising flour
- 1 tsp baking powder
- 3 large eggs
- 200g unsalted butter, softened
- 200g golden caster sugar
- 2 tbsp whole milk
- grated zest of 1 large unwaxed orange
- 2 tsp Sicilian orange extract
- 12 mini orange jelly slices, to decorate

FOR THE FILLING/ICING

- 280g full-fat cream cheese
- 50g unsalted butter
- 500g icing sugar, sifted
- grated zest of 1 large unwaxed orange

YOU WILL NEED

- 20cm round cake tins x 2, greased, then base-lined with baking paper
- piping bag fitted with a 1cm round nozzle

1 Heat the oven to 180°C/160°C fan/gas 4. Sift the flour and baking powder together into a large bowl. Add the eggs, butter, sugar, milk, orange zest and orange extract and beat everything together until the mixture is smooth.

2 Spoon half the sponge mixture into each prepared tin and level the surface with a palette knife. Bake for 30–35 minutes, or until the cakes are firm to the touch and a skewer inserted into the centre comes out clean.

3 Remove from the oven and leave the cakes to cool in the tins for 5 minutes, then turn out onto a wire rack and peel off the paper. Leave to cool completely.

4 Meanwhile, make the filling. Beat the cream cheese and butter together in a bowl until just incorporated, then beat in the icing sugar and orange zest until thick and smooth.

5 Use half the filling mixture to sandwich the two sponges together, then spread half of the remaining filling over the top. Spoon the rest of the filling into a piping bag fitted with a 1cm round nozzle and pipe 12 evenly spaced blobs around the edge of the cake. Top each blob with an orange jelly slice.

Easy espresso tart

With no actual baking required, this decadent tart is super-easy to make and tastes as good as it looks.

SERVES 12

- 75g amaretti biscuits
- 125g digestive biscuits
- 100g unsalted butter, melted
- A little cocoa powder for dusting
- Raspberries or other berries to serve (optional)

FOR THE FILLING

- 100g 70% dark chocolate, broken into small pieces
- 100g milk chocolate, chopped
- 250ml double cream
- 1 tsp espresso powder
- 3 tbsp liquid glucose

YOU WILL NEED

- 36x12cm rectangular loose-bottomed tin, or 23cm round loose-bottomed tin

1 First, make the base. Place the biscuits in the bowl of a food processor and blitz until you have fine breadcrumbs. Add the melted butter and pulse until the mixture begins to form clumps. (Alternatively, place the biscuits in a food bag and bash with a rolling pin until they resemble fine crumbs, then stir through the melted butter.)

2 Press the crumb mixture into your prepared tin, evenly coating the base and sides. Place in the fridge to set for at least 1 hour.

3 Meanwhile, to make the filling, place all the chopped chocolate in a large bowl. Pour the cream into a small pan, add the espresso powder and glucose and heat over a medium heat, until the liquid just comes to the boil, about 2 minutes. Pour the hot cream mixture over the chocolate and stir to melt the chocolate.

4 Remove the chilled biscuit base from the fridge and pour in the chocolate mixture. Place the tart in the fridge for 4 hours to set, then dust with a little cocoa powder just before serving. Serve in slices with a few raspberries or other berries if you wish.

The perfect red for any occasion

JUST

TOP 12 REDS FROM AROUND THE WORLD

Order today for £59.88 (was £112.18) plus FREE delivery (usually £7.99)

Explore Laithwaite's range through our customers' favourite reds from around the world. With an average price of £9.34 a bottle, quality is high, and you can try them for just £4.99 each. Here are some of the stunning wines included in your case.

In pole position, you have a superb Argentinian malbec from trophy-winning specialist Opi Sadler. Beautifully rich and smooth, it's great with roast beef.

The surprise package is Danaris from Austria, a rich, cherry-fruited red with an attractive pepper tingle. Alongside are two textbook, cassis-scented cabernet sauvignons: one from Moldova, the former "vineyard to the Tsars", and the other from South Africa's Western Cape.

Australia's calling card is shiraz, and Andrew McPherson's is our buyer's pick of the bunch for its soft blackberry and liquorice character. California's most famous grape is zinfandel and Gold Star is a delicious example, thanks to its massive 15% volume and soft berry with black pepper character.

To read more about all 12 wines included in your case, or if you would prefer to order a top 12 white or mixed case, please visit the link below.

To order, please call 03330 148 188 or visit radiotimes.com/YMC1A

Offer valid for new customers only, and one case only per household while stocks last. No further discount or voucher can be applied. Free delivery (usually £7.99). Offer ends 31/01/19. You or anybody you buy wine for must be 18 years or over. All goods are subject to availability. Items are offered at the price and quantity stated here. If you wish to order different quantities, please call us for prices and availability. Delivery to UK addresses only (excluding Channel Islands and BFPO addresses). Standard delivery takes three working days (delivery to some areas may take longer). In the unlikely event of wines becoming unavailable, a substitute of similar style and of equal or greater value will be supplied. Gordon, Gino and Fred: Road Trip

Thursday 9.00pm ITV

For the final leg of your road trip with Gino D'Acampo, and Fred Sirieix from First Dates, you're exploring your Scottish homeland. You don't sound very Scottish – do you describe yourself as a Scotsman?

You've got to be very careful in today's oversensitive world. I'm British, but I'm proud to have been born in Scotland. I grew up in Stratford-upon-Avon and I'm always having the mickey taken out of me for not being Scottish. But every time I step into a kilt, it does take me back to my roots. Though competing in the Highland Games in a kilt was a nightmare...

Who fared best in the Games – you, Gino or Fred?

Both Gino and Fred could fit in the sporan of the other athletes, so it's a no-brainer who won. We weren't allowed to toss the caber because Gino's back might be put out, so I ended up tossing him over the caber and into the burn – the river.

Where did you start the Scottish road trip?

After getting bored as hell in that camper van in Italy and France with my two sous-chefs telling me constantly that France is the most beautiful place in the world and Italy's got the best wine in the world, we helicoptered in to Oban and it shut those two up like babies having a feed because they were lost for words. The weather was sublime, and I cannot tell you how spectacular the backdrop was – there's nowhere like it.

You love the west coast of Scotland...

It's littered with incredible ingredients – we even went diving for scallops. When I'm done with the industry, I'd like to buy a little castle on an island up there and just fish and write.

Are you a keen fisherman?

I learnt to fish on the River Tay, which still holds the British record for the largest salmon caught – by a woman in the 1920s. Fishing is a great release. Every year I take a group of young chefs to Iceland to catch and release the new salmon coming in from the Atlantic. Being in the water, wading through those rapids, landing the fly in front of the salmon's nose and watching them jump – it's incredible.

What was the highlight of the Road Trip?

Saying goodbye to Fred and Gino! Gino got upset because nobody recognised him in Italy and Fred got jealous because they knew me and didn't know him. Having to deal with their egos was a nightmare.

Who has the best food: the French, Italians or Scottish?

When I was a young cook working in Paris, the commis chefs were furious that the wild mushrooms, seabass, hand-dived scallops and venison arrived in boxes with tartan logos on the side. The first thing the French would do was rip those logos off because they couldn't believe these ingredients were from Scotland. I love France – it was my culinary bedrock – but when you've got the ingredients and the weather, there's nowhere in the world that beats Scotland.

Has the Scottish food scene changed a lot?

It's been a revolution – from Michelin-starred places to amazing local restaurants. Young chefs like Martin Wishart and Tom Kitchin have helped modernise Scottish cuisine.

And if you could have a porthole in your London home to anywhere in Scotland...

Inverloch Castle is so picturesque: snow-capped mountains in the background, a stunning loch.

Gordon Ramsay's Scotland

The fiery chef on diving for scallops off the West Coast, the beauty of Oban... and making up with Jamie Oliver

How do you like to spend family holidays?

This year we spent July and August in Cornwall. Every evening my eldest son Jack and I put our wetsuits on and swam before dinner from Polzeath to Rock and Daymer Bay. The kids had surfing lessons, we waterskiied, did amazing walks, sometimes sat on the beach under an umbrella in the rain. Great fun. Just the way holidays should be. And then funnily enough, in the last week, Jamie Oliver and his family rented next door to us, so we put on a barbecue together. I wish you were listening to that conversation!

Who manned the barbecue?

Jamie went to pick up the tongs and I said, “No, you’re my guest”. “No, allow me.” Once we’d had our domestic, it was over to me. CLAIRE WEBB

Flying with confidence

We may be quitting the EU, but flight delay claims can continue after Brexit, says Paul Lewis

WHEN YOU TRAVEL by plane you may have a right to compensation from the airline if your flight arrives more than three hours late. Compensation doesn't apply to flights landing in the UK on a non-EU airline; and the amount of compensation depends on distance.

For flights within the EU it's normally €250 or €400. The amounts are per passenger and can be far more than the fare paid.

'Make a claim and, if refused, appeal'

They are on top of any money or vouchers for hotels, travel, food, or replacement flights.

These rights are given to us under EU law and the Government says they will continue under UK law even if we leave the EU with no deal. However, interpretation of this law is currently decided by the European Court of Justice whose jurisdiction will end when the UK leaves. So there may be more scope for challenges by airlines in future.

The airline can avoid paying if the delay was due to what are called extraordinary circumstances. Over many years, UK and European courts have made it clear that this exception has to be outside the airline's control – such as a bird strike, extreme weather, or civil unrest. The European Court of Justice ruled earlier this year that a strike by the airline's own staff is not an extraordinary circumstance.

HOWEVER, RYANAIR CLAIMS it is obeying the law in refusing to pay compensation to the hundreds of thousands of passengers affected by a wave of strikes this summer by its own pilots. The Civil Aviation Authority disagrees and its website makes it clear that only strikes by people not employed by the airline are extraordinary circumstances. That dispute is likely to end up in the courts.

If your flight arrives three hours or more late – timed when the plane's door is opened – you should always claim. If refused, appeal and then consider pursuing the claim through the small claims court.

Get free assistance with claims at resolver.co.uk. The lawyers bottonline.co.uk work on a no win, no fee basis and only charge when the compensation they achieve on your behalf is more than three times their fee.

RT MONEY PARTNER

ARE YOU OVERLOOKING YOUR BIGGEST ASSET

Any retired homeowners are asset rich but cash poor. If you are worried that your finances in later life won't give you the lifestyle you hoped for, then your home could help.

Downsizing may be one option, but equity release is a way to unlock a tax-free cash lump sum from your home without having to move. A lifetime mortgage, which is the most popular type of plan, is secured against your home just like a traditional mortgage, and is available to homeowners aged 55–95.

WITH A LIFETIME MORTGAGE

- You can access tax-free cash
- You can spend the money as you wish
- You can secure a fixed interest rate
- There are typically no monthly payments to make as the loan, plus roll-up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end
- The value of your estate will be reduced and your entitlement to means-tested benefits may be affected

Radio Times has partnered with Key, to produce a FREE guide written by financial journalist Paul Lewis. The guide is a great starting point to finding out if you could unlock the cash in your home.

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is complete free of charge as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99% of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

To request your FREE Radio Times guide, written by Paul Lewis, or to book a free no-obligation consultation, please call FREE on 0808 156 2698 or visit radiotimes.com/equityrelease

Lines are open Monday–Thursday 9am–8pm, Friday 9am–5.30pm and Saturday 9am–5pm

Where does double whammy come from? Is there a single one?

Franklyn Bovey Stroud

In the USA in the 1940s a whammy was a hex or curse, especially one cast by an evil eye. The origin seems to be the idea of a knockout wham or blow.

It was used in sport, when losing teams were said to have had the whammy put upon them; a double whammy was particularly bad luck. A decade later, double whammy became popular thanks to Al Capp's Li'l Abner cartoon strip, in which it referred to a powerful stare. This extract from July 1951 sums it up: "'Evil-Eye Fleegle is th' name, an' th' 'whammy' is my game. Mudder Nature endowed me wit' eyes which can putrefy citizens t' th' spot!... Th' 'double whammy' [is] th' full power o' both eyes – which I hopes I never hafta use."

TALKING POINT

How did the new Doctor do?

RIP IT UP AND START AGAIN
Jodie Whittaker and team are refreshing Sunday evenings

LETTER OF THE WEEK

For children like me, whose supper stuck in their throats as they watched the first, thrilling episodes of Doctor Who back in 1963, we always approached a new series with trepidation. We remained loyal through adulthood, getting our children equally addicted until, in recent years, the show appeared to have lost its way, becoming too pleased with its own inventiveness and endless mind games. Reluctantly, we gave up.

Finally, out of curiosity, we gave the new series a chance (7 October BBC1). With warmth and wit Jodie Whittaker shook off the smugness and made the new Doctor a wonderful, high-voltage, funny, scatty northerner who uses her cunning, compassion and new friends to fix the world. Perfect for both older children and old fogeys like me who like to be reminded how we once let our imaginations rip.

BOSE

...At around 6.50ish on a humdrum Sunday, the dimly grey sky was shattered by a dazzlingly bright northern light! A northern light with dancing eyes, blonde hair and a most disarming smile. To borrow from the effervescent Time Lord herself, let the working week "get a shift on!" – Sundays are now the new Saturdays with the hugely welcome return of Doctor Who.

Paul Reynard Manchester

...I keep reading everywhere what a great success Doctor Who was and this is taken to mean that the first female Doctor was a big hit. I watched episode one and what I saw was a good sci-fi story, and Jodie Whittaker was great. But, while I will watch next week, this time-travelling sci-fi series was not Doctor Who.

Sara Norcott Bromsgrove, Worcestershire

...At last the wait is over and it was well worth it! The new Doctor, as portrayed brilliantly by Jodie Whittaker, and her apprehensive but willing new "family" – led by Bradley Walsh, who brings his own special talents to everything he's in – has me hooked already.

Not having watched this drama series for many years,

I decided to watch episode one mainly because of the new cast. I can see myself becoming enthralled.

Carol Grant Preston, Lancashire

...From the start I had no problems with a female Doctor and Jodie Whittaker proved she was well up to the task. Chris Chibnall gave her a good supporting cast whose introduction felt natural and not forced. Granted this was only episode one, but if the quality runs through it like this, and the new blood of writers and directors have a chance to show their talent, we should be in for a treat.

James Sloan Maidenhead, Berkshire

...I have a confession to make. At 48 years old, I hadn't watched Doctor Who since the era of the great Tom Baker. But my family all thoroughly enjoyed it and thought Jodie Whittaker made a very convincing Doctor.

Special mention must go to Bradley Walsh. What a talent he is! He can switch from comedy to pathos with ease.

Paul Perry Halesowen, West Midlands

MADE FOR MAYO

On 9 October I tuned in to Radio 2 to hear Liza Tarbuck paired with Simon Mayo – and oh my goodness, what a change. Within a minute I was struck by how happy they sounded. Radio 2 said Jo Whiley and Simon needed six months to bed in, yet Liza and Simon seemed to gel immediately. Surely the station must now realise their error? If they act in time, snap up Liza and give Jo back her own show, they might just hang onto Simon.

Paula Bargh Chesterfield, Derbyshire

WOMEN AT WORK

Congratulations to BBC2 on Back in Time for the Factory, and the women of Wales whose recollections made it possible.

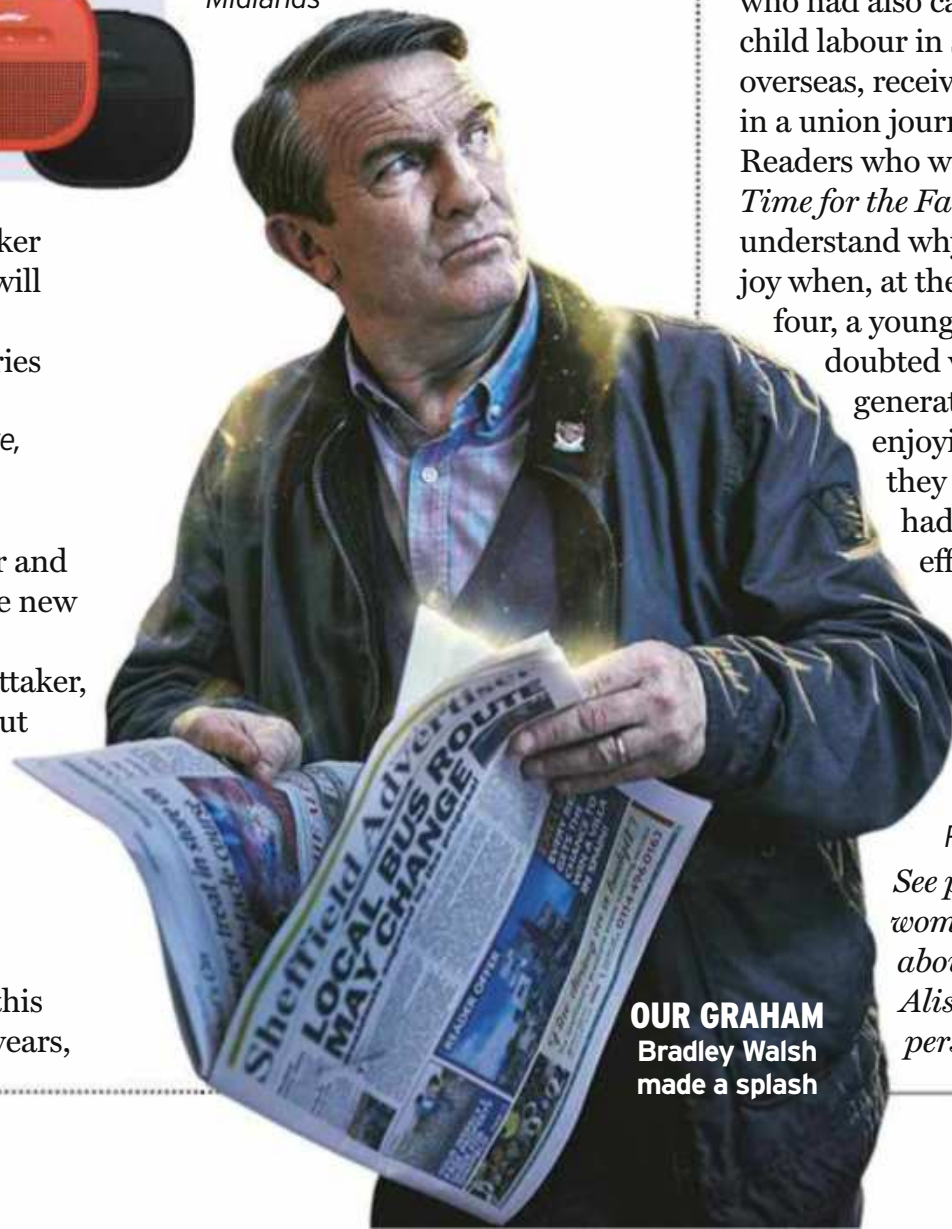

I became a garment worker on leaving school in 1975, a time when my home town offered limited opportunities to girls. My union, the National Union of Tailors and Garment Workers (NUTGW) had, uniquely, over 90 per cent female membership and we were at the forefront of the battles for workplace and social equality, as depicted so well in the series.

How it saddened me that our inspirational leader, Ann Spencer, who had also campaigned against child labour in sweatshops overseas, received only a few lines in a union journal when she died. Readers who watched Back in Time for the Factory will therefore understand why I shed a tear of joy when, at the end of episode four, a young woman said she doubted whether her generation would be enjoying the equalities they take for granted had it not been for the efforts of working women like us. We strove so hard to make a difference – and we did!

OUR GRAHAM
Bradley Walsh made a splash

'Ray and Alan had a perfect understanding'

Ray Galton, 1930–2018, co-creator of Hancock's Half Hour and Steptoe and Son, remembered by friend and Sherlock executive producer Beryl Vertue

Ray and my old schoolfriend Alan Simpson, who died last year, met as teenagers in a sanatorium where they were both being treated for TB, and teamed up to write sketches for the hospital radio. Later they formed a writers' company with Spike Milligan and Eric Sykes and they persuaded me to come to work with them – to begin with as a secretary and after a while as their agent. My first deal was when I rang the BBC and negotiated them a rise of five guineas a week! The office was highly unconventional, but we had a lot of laughs – and some very long lunches.

Ray and Alan would work side by side, with Alan bashing away on a funny old typewriter that I'd used to type up their scripts when they first started writing together. Now and again one of them would say a possible line of dialogue or a situation, and if the other one said nothing, the silence would continue. Then one of them would say, "That's good," and Alan would type up a storm. They never wrote drafts: once the nod of approval came, that was it. They had such a perfect understanding.

GENIUS
 co-created Steptoe and Son

After Hancock's Half Hour was a hit on both radio and television, they came up with Steptoe and Son, which really created the TV sitcom: it had an unforgettable blend of comedy and pathos. For the first time Ray was earning really good money, and he and his wife Tonia bought a huge old mansion near Hampton Court Palace in south-west London. We were all very impressed. He was a strong Labour supporter, and in the early days loved to have a good political debate with the others in the office.

My recollection of Ray is how kind and generous he was. He never minded people forever dropping in at his house and helping to drink all his lovely wines! He always looked so elegant and well dressed, too – he bought good-quality suits, complete with waistcoats, from a shop in Piccadilly. Even when he dressed more casually, he still looked elegant, especially when he grew a beard.

Ray didn't have a lot of hobbies that

I remember, but he did enjoy going to the theatre. He had simple tastes: one of his last pleasures, until the final two or three years, was his nightly walk to the local pub. Another pleasure was walking his dogs. He enjoyed good food, too – I don't remember that he ever cooked, but he relished the meals cooked by his daughters, Sara and Lisa, and he liked eating well when he travelled with Alan in France. The two of them stayed friends all their lives. I'll remember him with such great affection and feel lucky to have known and worked with him. He will be missed.

DRAMATIC HEIGHTS

We are enjoying a feast of dramas. Killing Eve (Saturday BBC1) is so innovative, and I've been enjoying Vanity Fair (ITV), as well as Trust (BBC2) and Press (BBC1). But in that list a gem has been missed.

Wanderlust had ranged from good to so-so, but episode five (2 October BBC1) was sensational. Two people in a counselling session has simply never been televised this well, or this accurately. Sophie Okonedo and Toni Collette deserve enormous praise. I was delighted that they were the only ones named in the credits at the end of the episode. Tremendous telly.

Pat Silver Oxford

...Why isn't everyone raving about Trust? It's been absolutely fantastic, with a heavyweight cast including Donald Sutherland and Hilary Swank, and it's kept me on the edge of my seat with tension. Period detail, brutal violence, a dysfunctional family and breathtaking scenery. It's the best thing I've seen this year.
Christine Wilson Newtownabbey, Antrim

YOU ASK US

I love Peter Bowker – what's he doing next?

I've loved the humane, moving dramas written by Peter Bowker ever since I saw Marvellous, starring Toby Jones as Neil Baldwin, and The A Word. I read he has a new series coming up. What can you tell us about it? Kathryn Shepherd, London N4

Peter Bowker has written a major seven-part series, hopefully for broadcast in 2019 – it's a Second World War drama called World on Fire, from the production company Mammoth Screen, who make Poldark. It was actually greenlit for production by BBC1 a year ago, but only recently has the first casting been announced. And Oscar-winner Helen Hunt (of the film As Good as It Gets) is the big Hollywood name they've signed up to star, alongside Lesley Manville, who was so affecting in Mum. Rising stars Jonah Hauer-King (Little Women) and Julia Brown (Shetland) also have key parts. World on Fire will be less an action drama than a tapestry of interweaving human stories "within the big historical events we think we know", says Bowker. The series will cover the first year of the war, from the siege of Warsaw to the fall of Paris and the Battle of Britain. Intriguingly, it will trace the connections between allies and enemies as it dramatises the impact of the war on people from Britain, Poland, France, Germany and the United States – from a factory worker to a war correspondent – who find themselves caught up in it. Filming is already underway in Prague, with other locations to include Manchester, London, Paris and Berlin.

LIGHTING UP DAYTIME
On the daytime upcycling show Money for Nothing (30 September BBC1), Sarah Moore rescued some demijohns, which she had made into the most wonderful lights. Can you tell me something about whoever made them? Susi Price, via email

There's more and more interest in using reclaimed items to create something new, from mirrors and furniture to lighting. Money for Nothing producer Rebecca Munro tells RT: "The demijohn lights were worked on by an artisan called Guy Trench. He specialises in industrial-style lighting and is based in Woodham Mortimer in Essex. His company is called Antiques By Design." You can see his work at antiquesbydesign.co.uk

◁ a terrible programme and the people are so absurd that it's compelling." Funnily enough, I watch The Apprentice (Wednesday BBC1) for exactly the same reason. Are we seriously expected to believe that these self-promoting nitwits represent the cream of British entrepreneurial talent? Or, as I'm starting to suspect, is it just one long audition for the next series of Love Island? Elaine Blatt Ilford, Essex

DON'T FLOG IT!
I was horrified to hear the BBC intends to terminate Flog It! It is reality TV at its best – real people, real stories, real results (joyful or disappointing), filmed in interesting places and best of all with a presenter, Paul

Martin, who doesn't think he's the star of the show. Please, please, BBC, reconsider. Frances Youel Killyclogher, Leitrim Episodes that have already been recorded will be shown next year, and Paul Martin will be appearing in two new BBC1 daytime antiques game shows. The BBC says that one of them, Make Me a Dealer, will feature in each show "two amateur enthusiasts who compete to buy anything they see at auction and sell it for the highest price".

STAY SHARPE
Was the Inspector Richard Marlott character in The Frankenstein Chronicles (ITV) actually Richard Sharpe from the series Sharpe under an alias? Both served in the 95th Rifles and fought at Waterloo – and both were played by Sean Bean (left). I think we should be told. Stephen Greenhill Tonbridge, Kent Stephen wins The Royal Collection, a collection of BBC programmes from the archive. It's available to buy.

PASSENGER ONE PAYS, PASSENGER TWO SAILS FREE*!

Welcome to the latest selection of tremendous value, ex-UK, no-flying cruises on board Columbus, Magellan and Marco Polo, a trio of beautiful British-operated ships, with sailings right through to the end of spring 2020. Enjoy a wide choice of ports and wonderful destinations, plus an amazing offer whereby one passenger pays and a second goes for FREE.

These great offer prices make it so much easier to join us for the cruise you've always wanted to take, to enjoy a longer voyage, or to treat yourself to a higher-category cabin. Alternatively, of course, you can use the saving to spend on board or ashore.

Marco Polo A beautiful ocean-liner in the classic tradition, Marco Polo offers her passengers high levels of comfort, sumptuous dining and a genuinely warm welcome from the crew. This ship will offer everything you'd expect of such a high-class vessel.

Columbus The biggest ship of the fleet, Columbus was launched by Audrey Hepburn in 1989, she was refitted in 2015 and now offers accommodation for 1,500 passengers with elegant communal areas arranged over 12 decks and a panoramic Dome Observatory.

Magellan With a passenger complement of around 1,100, Magellan retains a sense of traditional cruising and small-ship intimacy. Her welcoming crew and cruise staff, and a $50 million refit ensure her position as a modern, bright and comfortable floating home.

SIMON McCOY

'I'm a huge fan of the monarchy'

The BBC News presenter loves a laugh – and The Crown

We're used to seeing you on BBC News, or outside a hospital announcing a royal birth. Do you have time to watch TV?

It's on a lot. In the mornings, I get up and I put on the news and when I get home I'll watch again just to make sure I haven't missed anything in the last hour or two. And I'm a binge-watching fiend.

What's the view from your sofa?

I have quite a big telly with two large surround-sound speakers either side. When all the lights are off, it's the only thing I can see in the room. "Cinema experience" may be overstating it, but that's what I'm aiming for. I have an old leather sofa and for me the perfect evening would be sitting on this battered old thing with fish, chips and ketchup – and catch-up.

What's the last thing you really enjoyed on TV?

Jack Ryan on Amazon Prime is fantastic. If you're a Tom Clancy fan, it does it justice and doesn't disappoint. I also loved Killing Eve – it was just the best thing I've seen for ages. Jodie Comer is superb.

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK I've just read Jimmy Webb's autobiography – he wrote all the Glenn Campbell songs. It's a fantastic read.

MY RADIO I always catch up with The News Quiz, which I think is the funniest thing on radio.

MY BOX SET John le Carré's Smiley's People and Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy with Alec Guinness. It's the best thing ever.

Do you watch The Crown?

I do, yes! Everybody thinks I'm not a huge fan of the monarchy. I really am, there are just bits of it I think we don't necessarily need to know.

You've gained notoriety and gone viral on the internet plenty of times – notably for your very honest coverage of Prince George's birth, from outside St Mary's Hospital. Do you know if the royals saw it?

I do know they were watching in the hospital when the Duchess of Cambridge was giving birth to Prince George and I was outside. Someone told me the family thought I'd got it absolutely right. They were watching and wondering what on earth was going on outside. Nothing was happening, and I said as such – and it's much better than some of my rivals who were speculating on the level of dilation. I think once you get into that realm of commentating, you've lost the plot.

What did your bosses at the BBC say? Did you get a ticking off?

Not directly. There were perhaps a few raised eyebrows, but it's enough to say, "No, nothing's happened," rather than spending ten minutes saying why nothing's happened. I think that's what people want. They want to believe you, to trust you and they don't want you to fill for hours on end.

I'm not brilliant on birth. I was at the birth of my son and that's enough for me. And it was at the same hospital! But I wasn't going to say that on air, because they'd have asked me what cutlery they use in there and I didn't want to go into that sort of detail.

What did you make of being a viral sensation?

I'd rather that I was than I wasn't – I think it's great that people see there's more than one side to anybody who reads the news.

Is your subtle cynicism genuine – or are you actually quite happy-go-lucky?

I'm totally happy-go-lucky. It's not so much cynicism... I think it's more understanding what the viewer may be thinking. I don't want to pretend that we at the BBC think that dog surfing is a big news story, but we're as much about light as shade, and if we're seen to be able to do both, that's not a bad thing. There's so much grim stuff going on, I think it's important that every now and then we all have a bit of a laugh. FRANCES TAYLOR

Ozark

Netflix SERIES 1-2 AVAILABLE

Moody and addictive, this drama follows the story of financial adviser Marty Byrde (Jason Bateman, below), his PR advisor wife Wendy (Laura Linney) and their children as they're forced to move from Chicago to the shores of Lake Ozark in Missouri after a money laundering deal goes wrong. As they struggle to adjust, they're drawn into a world of spiralling crime, dangerous locals and political misdemeanours. Perfectly paced, with masterful cinematography, this sits comfortably alongside Breaking Bad among the best crime dramas of the modern era. TG

49

Bojack Horseman

Netflix SERIES 1-5 AVAILABLE

In a fantastical version of Hollywood, the eponymous Bojack is a struggling actor. Oh, and he just happens to be a horse. This animated comedy is wonderfully imaginative at every turn, with supporting characters including the excitable Labrador Mr Peanutbutter and governor of California, Woodchuck Coodchuck-Berkowitz. But this is no children's cartoon. Sharp and poignant, it has rightly been praised for its sensitive, funny and realistic portrayal of depression, rejection and substance abuse. MD

Downton Abbey

Amazon Prime SERIES 1-6 AVAILABLE

Just when you thought you'd seen the last of the Crawleys and their servants, they're coming to the big screen! Yes, a Downton movie is in the works, so it's the perfect time to revisit the period drama that was the jewel in ITV's Sunday-night crown. Lord Grantham gets to grips with his warring daughters upstairs while butler Carson holds court below. But Maggie Smith's Dowager Countess steals the show. SD

47

Monty Python's Flying Circus

Netflix SERIES 1-4 AVAILABLE

Can it really be nearly 50 years since we were introduced to the funniest joke in the world? There's no mistaking the wit, timing and curious animation of this classic sketch show. Some of the humour has dated, but their best sketches (and everyone can name at least one) mean that Messrs Cleave, Palin, Jones, Idle, Chapman and Gilliam have fully earned their place in the comic pantheon. KD

46

Absolutely Fabulous

Netflix SERIES 1-6 AVAILABLE

It's all very 1990s as odious fashion PR Edina Monsoon and the botox-pumped magazine editor Patsy Stone totter around London being so very high powered, darling – yet turning up to work at midday on a wave of "Bolly" and taking three-hour lunch breaks. Edie and Patsy may be terrified of going downhill, but 26 years later, Ab Fab is still on top form. KD

45

Jessica Jones

Netflix SERIES 1-3 AVAILABLE

Marvel superhero Jessica Jones is a revelation – a psychologically complex woman who is vulnerable but no damsel in distress. The overwhelmingly male Marvel universe was crying out for this. Jessica (Krysten Ritter) is haunted by David Tennant's mind-bending Killgrave, who imbues the show with a masterful menace. No knowledge of Marvel is required for you to fall in love with this darkly funny show about abuse, trauma and prejudice. KD

Peaky Blinders

Netflix SERIES 1-3 AVAILABLE It's easy to see how Steven Knight's period crime drama has become such a cult hit. The gangster antihero Tommy Shelby – a transfixing Cillian Murphy – swaggers around a highly stylised, post-First World War Midlands, plotting crime and revenge alongside his aunt Polly (a fierce Helen McCrory). This is cinematic, ambitious TV. KD

43

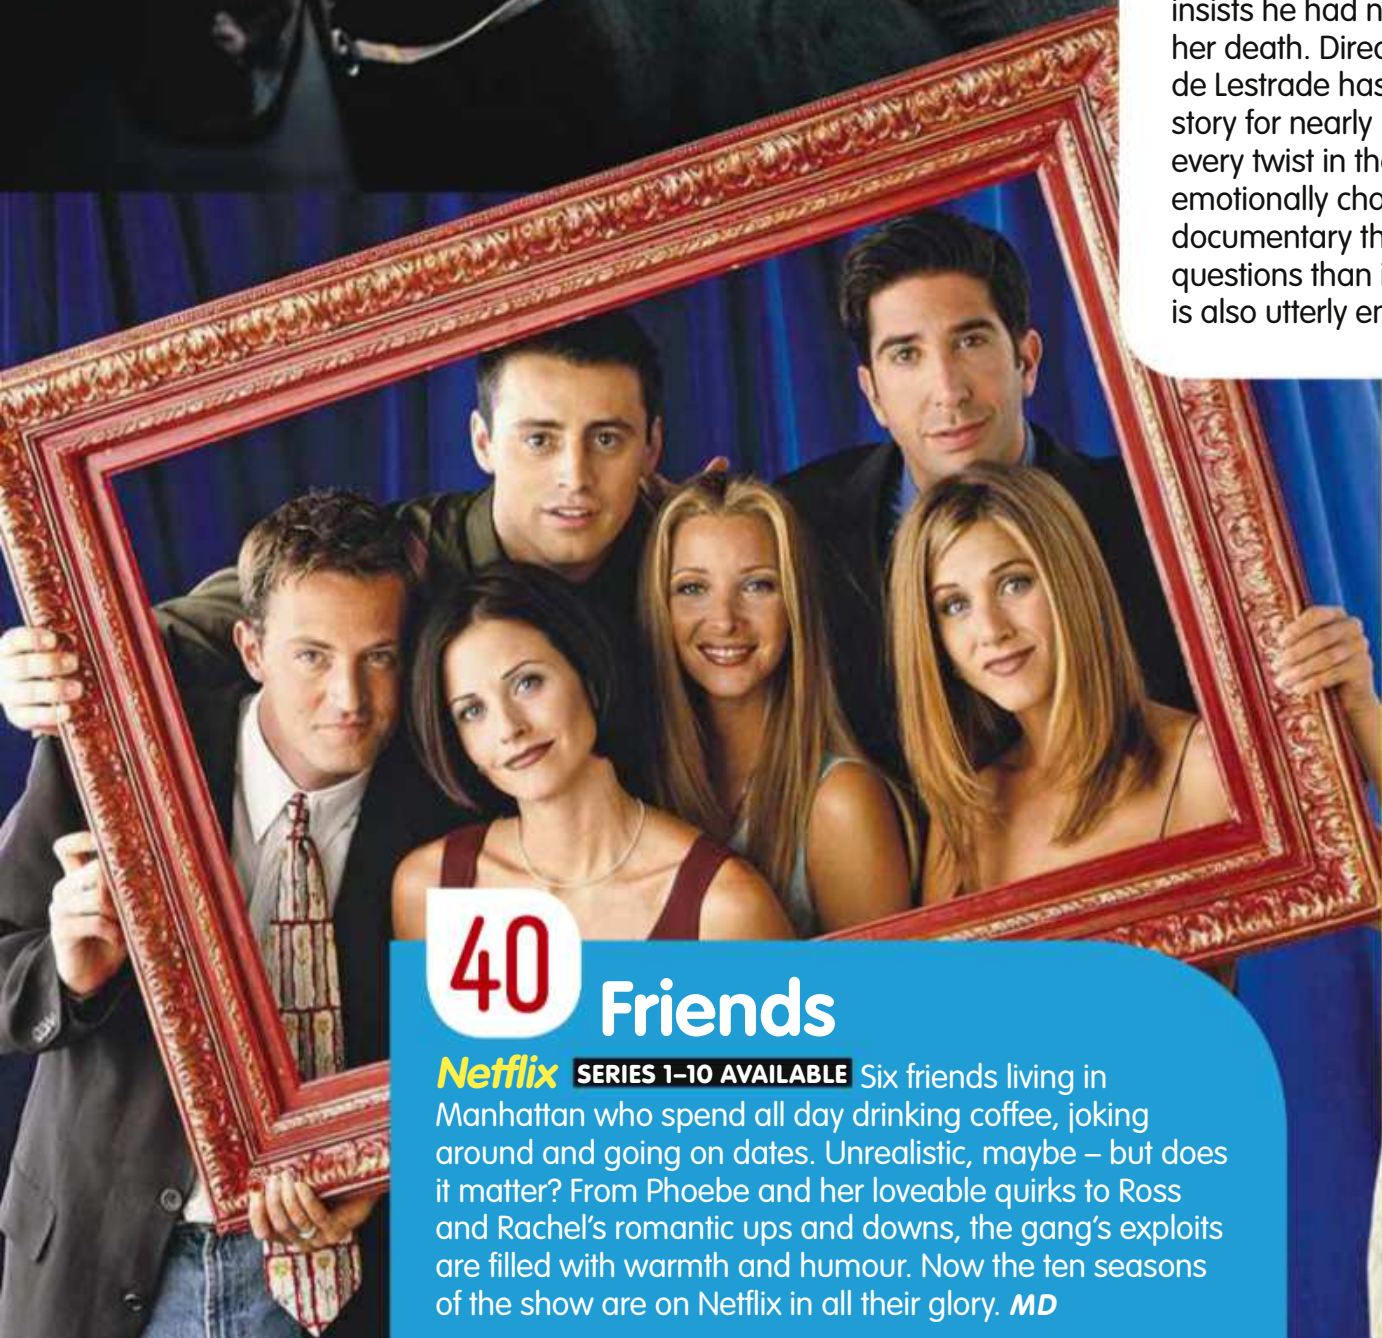

Detectorists

Netflix SERIES 1-3 AVAILABLE From the opening notes of Johnny Flynn's beguiling theme tune, you know you're onto something special. The BBC4 comedy follows metal detectorists Lance (Toby Jones) and Andy (Mackenzie Crook), in rural Essex – and though this may sound slight, in the hands of its stars (Crook also wrote and directed) it comes to vivid life, taking on a tenderness that, at times, is almost unbearable; fans were bereft when it ended last year. And of course it's funny, too: in September it won a prestigious Rose d'Or. HS

The Staircase

Netflix This is one of Netflix's most compelling true-crime series. In December 2001, Kathleen Peterson was found at the bottom of the stairs in her house. Her husband Michael was arrested for her murder, but insists he had no involvement in her death. Director Jean-Xavier de Lestrade has followed the story for nearly 20 years, filming every twist in the tale. It's an emotionally charged documentary that poses more questions than it answers – and is also utterly engrossing. FT

40

Friends

Netflix SERIES 1-10 AVAILABLE Six friends living in Manhattan who spend all day drinking coffee, joking around and going on dates. Unrealistic, maybe – but does it matter? From Phoebe and her loveable quirks to Ross and Rachel's romantic ups and downs, the gang's exploits are filled with warmth and humour. Now the ten seasons of the show are on Netflix in all their glory. MD

The Good Place

Netflix SERIES 1-3 AVAILABLE A sitcom about mortality might not sound very joyful, but this heavenly show from the creator of Parks and Recreation is spit-your-tea-out funny. When the recently deceased – and not very nice – Eleanor Shellstrop (Kristen Bell) finds herself in a celestial afterlife, it's clear there's been a mistake. She quickly realises paradise isn't what it seems, and what follows is a witty and philosophically poignant look at the meaning of life. Co-stars Ted Danson and Jameela Jamil also shine just as brightly. KD

Breaking Bad

Netflix SERIES 1-5 AVAILABLE This is the drama that made Netflix. Word-of-mouth rave reviews in the UK saw endless discussions about a thriller that played with your preconceptions of good and evil. Walter White is a chemistry teacher who, upon discovering he has cancer, teams up with former student Jesse Pinkman and starts cooking crystal meth in order to pay his hospital bills and keep his family financially secure. Impeccably written by Vince Gilligan, it was Bryan Cranston's turn as Walter that kept viewers gripped. Five series gave his character time to develop as he worked out how to live after being told he was dying. KB

38

Catastrophe

All 4 SERIES 1-3 AVAILABLE

Before Channel 4's Catastrophe, there were few honest portrayals of life's messy realities. But Sharon Horgan and Rob Delaney's brash and brilliant comedy turned that on its head in 2015. From dating to parenting to terse relationships between friends and family, Sharon and Rob (the creators/writers adopted their own names for their characters) muddle through while raising their kids and coping with their parents (the late Carrie Fisher stole every scene as Rob's mother, Mia). Depicting the highs, lows and banalities of modern living, the award-winning Catastrophe has struck a transatlantic comedy nerve. FT

37

Luther

Netflix SERIES 1-4 AVAILABLE

Is Idris Elba the coolest man in the world? Of course, there's no objective answer to this, but he must be in the running. He showed his acting talent in The Wire, and he's on top form again as a damaged cop in this compellingly dark BBC crime thriller. John Luther investigates the goriest crimes imaginable, and even when the plot gets grisly, Elba is a joy to watch – as is his chemistry with his unlikely confidante and nemesis Alice Morgan, played by Ruth Wilson. KD

34

Netflix SERIES 1-2 AVAILABLE

This endearing comedy follows aspiring actor Dev Shah, played charmingly by co-writer Aziz Ansari, as he stumbles through bad Tinder dates and relationship problems. The first season takes place in New York City, while series two sweeps us to Modena, Italy, where Dev embarks on a pasta-making course – and an ill-fated romance. The clash between Dev's heritage and his life in the West provides space for hilarity as well as astute social, religious and sexual commentary. MD

35

Transparent

Amazon Prime SERIES 1-4

AVAILABLE Jill Soloway's drama is why Amazon deserves to be taken seriously as a TV creator. It's about gender, identity, Jewishness and pain, following an LA family of parents and grown-up children who feel desperately, sometimes hilariously, lost. Jeffrey Tambor, as the transgender matriarch of the family, won't be returning for the fifth and final season after allegations of sexual misconduct, but the depth of feeling you develop for the other characters means the show will be able to survive just fine. KD

Godless

Netflix SERIES 1 AVAILABLE

This underrated, visually stunning western won two Emmy awards for its top-quality acting. It stars Downton Abbey's Michelle Dockery (left) as a widow named Alice Fletcher living in a frontier town of La Belle. After a shocking mining accident wiped out most of the townsmen, La Belle has become a colony of hard-as-nails, gun-wielding women trying to survive. Jeff Daniels plays Frank Griffin, a menacing outlaw on the rampage. The body count is high and the tension is palpable. KD

Mad Men

Netflix SERIES 1-7 AVAILABLE In the first few moments of Matthew Weiner's drama, you find yourself hurled into 1960s Manhattan, where the air is thick with cigarette smoke and the bars are amber-lit and seductive. Jon Hamm's Don Draper is an ad executive in Madison Avenue, the leader of a group of hungry young men vying for commercial glory. The show celebrates the romance of the era while not shying away from the homophobia, sexism, racism and adultery. Astonishingly dark and beautiful. KD

32

Red Riding

All 4 ALL THREE AVAILABLE

This 2009 trilogy of dramas set in Yorkshire is an unsettling and powerful look at police corruption and brutality in the 1970s and 80s. Based on the noir novels by David Peace, each of the films is named after a different year and follows the police as they hunt for the Yorkshire Ripper. With a stunningly good cast of Sean Bean, Andrew Garfield, Maxine Peake, David Morrissey, Paddy Considine and Rebecca Hall, Red Riding is a thrilling and often shocking piece of television. KD

Life on Mars

UKTV Play

EPS SERIES 1, SERIES 2 AVAILABLE

Featuring one of the best TV bromances, Life on Mars is a gritty buddy cop show with a time-travel twist. Sam Tyler (John Simm) is a present-day police detective, listening to David Bowie on his iPod when he is knocked down by a car and wakes up in 1970s Manchester. He then meets his new boss, the hot-headed, politically incorrect DCI Gene Hunt (Philip Glenister), who has a tendency to resort to dust-ups when interviewing. But as Tyler is continually haunted by his former life, he and the viewer are left to wonder: is he in a coma or losing his mind? FC

Outlander

Amazon Prime SERIES 1-3 AVAILABLE It's rare that dramas are renewed for two seasons at a time but time-travel drama Outlander (based on the novels by Diana Gabaldon) is just so popular that US TV network Starz keeps ordering more and more. Caitriona Balfe plays Claire, a Second World War nurse who stumbles through some standing stones in 1940s Scotland and ends up in the 1740s. Sam Heughan is hunky highlander Jamie, a complicated soul who falls head over heels for the woman from the future. SD

Chef's Table

Netflix SERIES 1-5 AVAILABLE

What really happens in restaurant kitchens? How do chefs' brains work? This mesmerising, cinematic documentary series delves into the lives and kitchens of world-famous chefs from every corner of the planet, from an off-grid chef in Patagonia to a Korean nun who cooks in a cloistered monastery. One of the series of Chef's Table focuses entirely on four very different pastry chefs, while the others look at savoury dishes. It's not really about the food – although it's best not to watch on an empty stomach. It's really about the humans who are making the food, the creative ego, and their obsessive drive for culinary perfection. KD

24 The Handmaid's Tale

NowTV SERIES 1 AVAILABLE

It's impossible to watch this dystopian thriller and not think about real world events in 2018. Adapted from Margaret Atwood's 1985 novel, this haunting series takes place in a near-future where women have been stripped of all rights and are ranked according to their fertility. Elisabeth Moss plays Offred – now a mere "vessel" for a high-ranking commander, but plagued by memories of being a free woman. It swept the board at awards ceremonies, lauded for its power to creep under your skin. Series two will be available on NowTV in 2019. KD

25 The Kominsky Method

Netflix Michael Douglas stars as once-famous actor Sandy Kominsky, now an acting coach, who, along with exasperated agent Norman (Alan Arkin), is finding it tricky to cope with the youth-obsessed culture of LA. Created by Chuck Lorre, the sitcom titan behind The Big Bang Theory, the eight-part first series is a funny look at the disorienting reality of ageing – a feeling that the modern world has left you behind. Lorre said recently that he didn't even consider pitching his sitcom to broadcast TV: "I wanted the opportunity to tell the story in the Netflix universe, with no commercial breaks and no time constraints." KD

26 Kiri

All 4 Sarah Lancashire plays the caring, if eccentric, social worker Miriam, who's responsible for nine-year-old Kiri, a black girl about to be adopted by a white foster family. When Kiri's abducted on a visit to her biological grandparents, Miriam is blamed by the press, her employers and the police. Written by Jack Thorne, who also made the Bafta-winning National Treasure, Kiri is a sharp meditation on the power of the press and the painful decisions social workers have to make every day. KD

Netflix SERIES 1-3 AVAILABLE

From Breaking Bad to Bloodline, there's no shortage of quality drug dramas. But Narcos, set in the Colombian drug trade of the late 20th century, is the best. The first three series explored the businesslike brutality of both Pablo Escobar and his cartels and the DEA agents trying to stop them. The action of series four – out in November – moves to Mexico, and there are two new cast members: Michael Peña, of Crash, and Rogue One star Diego Luna. Narcos has a heady mix of heart-pounding suspense and ruthless violence, tempered, just occasionally, by moments of tenderness. MD

Films to watch now

Star Wars Episode VIII: the Last Jedi ¹²

Sky Cinema/Now TV

Second of the Star Wars sequel trilogy, this is Luke's gig. Musing on the Jedi's extinction on rain-lashed Ahch-To, he's prodded into action by Rey, leading to a showdown with the First Order on the salt-sprinkled planet of Crait. Better than Episode VII, and – if that's your preference – funnier.

The Post ¹²

Amazon Prime

Forget "fake news". Steven Spielberg reminds us what reporters with notepads used to do: speak truth to power. Tom Hanks and Meryl Streep run The Washington Post in pre-Watergate 1971 and publish the Pentagon Papers during the Vietnam War. Stirring patriotic, it's like BBC's Press, without Twitter.

Black Panther

¹² Sky Cinema/Now TV

The Marvel film that changed the face of Marvel films with its powerful African-American mythology, cast and crew (director Ryan Coogler also made Creed). Black lives matter in Wakanda and T'Challa (Chadwick Boseman) must learn to wear the crown.

On the Beach

^{PG} Netflix

"Old films" are criminally hard to find on streaming sites but Netflix has a few hidden: Touch of Evil, Some Like It Hot, and this black-and-white 1959 post-apocalyptic drama that has no zombies, just melancholy sailors and drunks bemoaning their radioactive fate. A treat!

Paddington 1 and 2 ^{PG}

Amazon Prime

Why not watch both back to back? Enjoy the immigrant Paddington's induction into London life, follow him to the roof of the Natural History Museum, in chokey and aboard a runaway train. The humans, led by Hugh Bonneville, Sally Hawkins and Hugh Grant, steal the occasional scene from the CGI ursine.

The Girl on the Train ¹⁵

Netflix

A great post-Gone Girl mystery thriller (based on the debut novel by Paula Hawkins), this sleight-of-hand drama casts Emily Blunt as a suburban New York State alcoholic who may or may not witness something between blackouts. Best without knowing the twist.

Finding Your Feet ¹²

Amazon Prime

Yes, it's aimed at people in what I call the prime of their life, and owes it all to The Full Monty, The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel and other self-therapy feelgooders, but Imelda Staunton, Joanna Lumley and Celia Imrie give this dance-class cure maximum welly.

The Florida Project ¹⁵

Amazon Prime

Catch this year's outsider Oscar nominee, a slice of working-class life in a motel near Walt Disney World where kids run wild, knock-off perfume is hawked and strong parental bonds emerge from the melee of cursing and dreams.

19 War & Peace

iPlayer An all-star cast is a hallmark of a BBC period drama – and in the case of 2016's War & Peace, it's only got starrer: its Natasha (Lily James) has since played a young Meryl Streep in Mamma Mia 2, while Andrei (James Norton) was the Bondesque lead in McMafia. But the whole cast was shot through with quality, from those relative up-and-comers to bonafide stars such as Paul Dano, Jim Broadbent and Gillian Anderson. Andrew Davies, high priest of costume drama, carved a pacy script from Tolstoy's sprawling story, while lavish locations meant it was beautiful, too. HS

22

The Thick of It

Netflix, Amazon Prime

SEASONS 1-4 AVAILABLE Malcolm Tucker, how do I describe thee? Peter Capaldi is magnificent as the professional political schemer – the master of the unrepeatable torrent of expletives and wielder of a glare so icy he makes the real-life government fixer Alistair Campbell look like a kitten. The politicians and civil servants at the Department of Social Affairs and Citizenship live in fear of Tucker's wrath – as well they might, because their talents range from clueless to incompetent. Armando Iannucci's script delivers razor-sharp satire and characters so self-serving they'll take your breath away. MD

21

The Crown

Netflix SEASONS 1-2 AVAILABLE

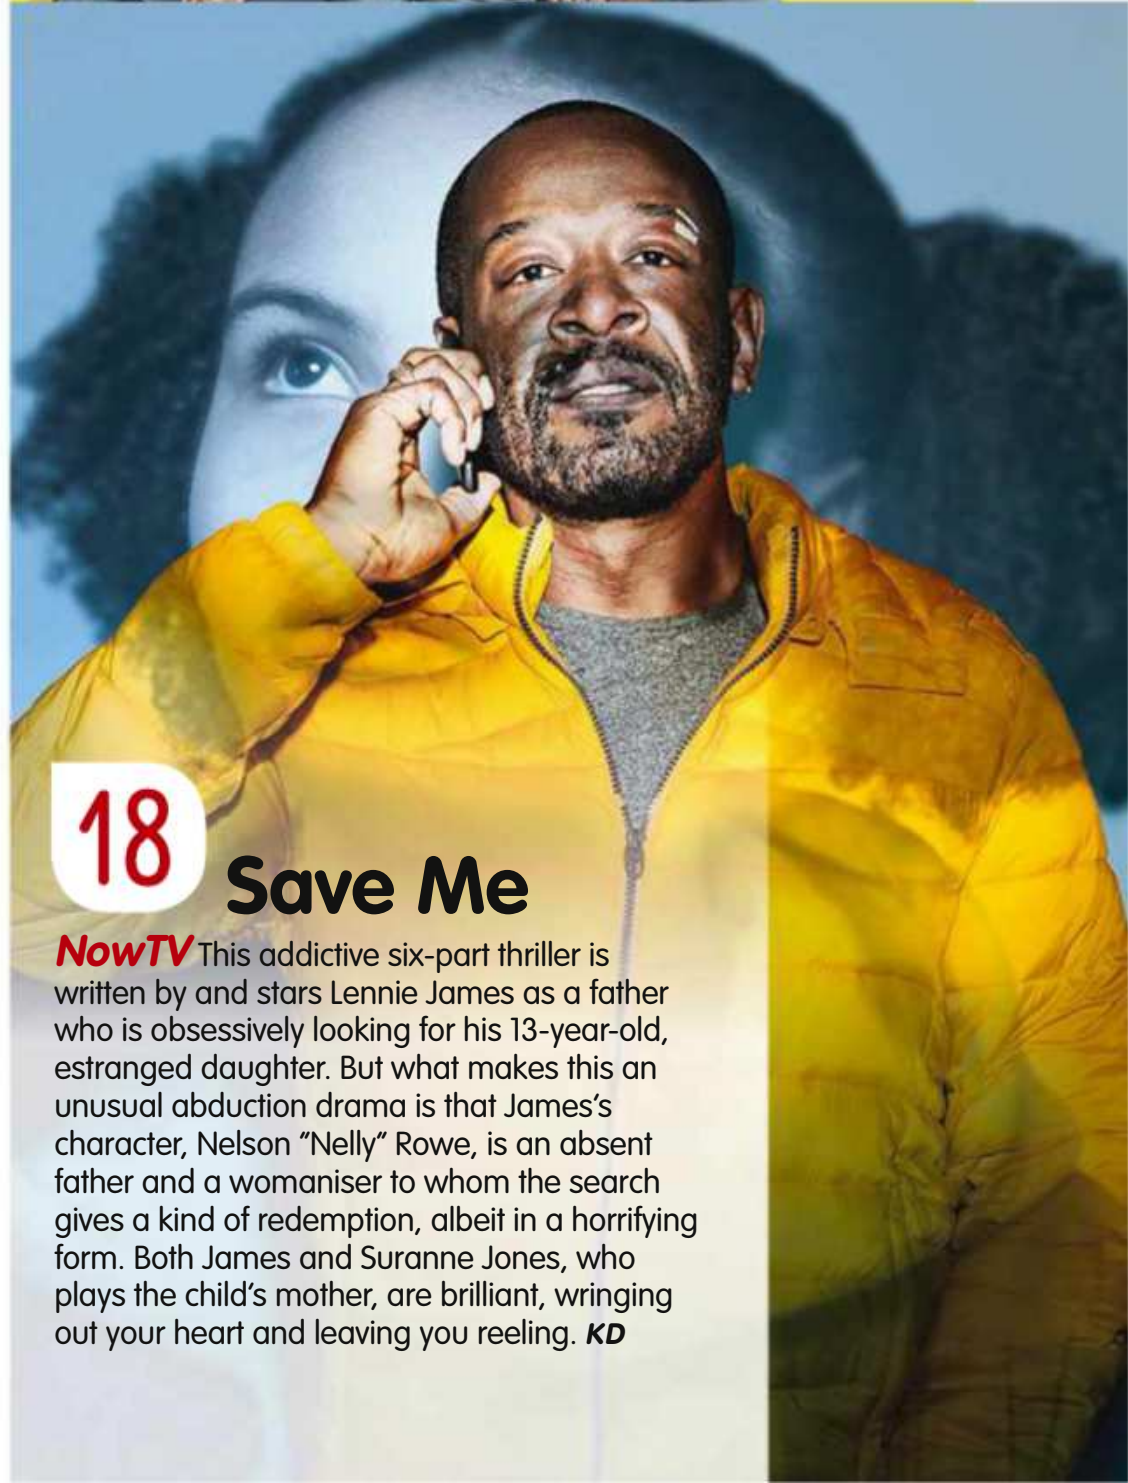

In 2019 Claire Foy passes her titular headpiece to Olivia Colman when The Crown changes hands (and its entire cast) for season three, so there's never been a better time to catch up on the story so far. Foy's Emmy and Golden Globe-winning portrayal is must-see TV, with season one described by Happy Valley star Sarah Lancashire as "the best ten hours" she'd ever spent under a duvet. The sensational supporting cast (including the brilliant Bafta-winning Vanessa Kirby as Princess Margaret) will be sadly missed. Transfixing, moving television. SD

This Country

iPlayer SEASON 1-2 PLUS

SPECIAL AVAILABLE This BBC3 comedy has already won over a legion of fans obsessed with the lives of ne'er-do-well cousins Kerry and Kurtan Mucklowe, who spend their days kicking around their Cotswold village and failing to stay out of trouble. Steam fairs and scarecrow festivals provide the backdrop to this multiple Bafta-winning mockumentary, written by and starring siblings Daisy May Cooper and Charlie Cooper. A comment on rural deprivation and the lack of opportunities facing young people today? Maybe. But far more importantly, it's just funny. FT

Save Me

NowTV This addictive six-part thriller is written by and stars Lennie James as a father who is obsessively looking for his 13-year-old, estranged daughter. But what makes this an unusual abduction drama is that James's character, Nelson "Nelly" Rowe, is an absent father and a womaniser to whom the search gives a kind of redemption, albeit in a horrifying form. Both James and Suranne Jones, who plays the child's mother, are brilliant, wringing out your heart and leaving you reeling. KD

Sharp Objects

NowTV There are dark dramas, and then there are extremely dark dramas. This is the latter, but it's worth the sense of fear it will give you. Adapted from Gone Girl writer Gillian Flynn's debut novel and directed by Jean-Marc Vallée who made the magnificent Big Little Lies, Sharp Objects stars Amy Adams as a journalist sent to cover the story of two girls – one murdered, and another missing – in her home town of Wind Gap, Missouri. It's a subtle yet gasp-inducingly twisty drama with a strong female voice at its centre. KD

17

Attenborough The Early Years

iPlayer 31 DOCUMENTARIES

AVAILABLE This collection of films from David Attenborough's first expeditions around the globe in the 50s and 60s are fascinating, not because they have any mind-alteringly beautiful Blue Planet-esque shots, but because of how old-fashioned they now seem. Of course, these documentaries were pioneering at the time, each half hour showing a young Attenborough walking topless through the Australian bush, meeting Elsa the lioness in Kenya and searching for rare Indonesian animals in Bali. It's a reminder – not that you need one – that Attenborough was king of the jungle long before we even had colour TV. KD

National Treasure

All4 In the wake of Operation Yewtree, the story of much-loved comedian Paul Finchley (a career-best Robbie Coltrane) facing historical accusations of sex abuse struck a chord when it first aired on Channel 4 in 2016 and today it feels arguably even more powerful in the wake of the #MeToo movement. Jack Thorne's drama poses difficult questions and wrong-foots you at every turn, and Julie Walters puts in a tremendous shift as Finchley's wife. KD

14

Amazon Prime SERIES 1-5

AVAILABLE A subtle, intriguing 1980s-set spy drama about two Russians called Elizabeth and Philip who work as Soviet spies embedded in the US. They're pretending to be a perfectly ordinary suburban American couple, while in reality, their nuptials were organised by the KGB. Keri Russell and Matthew Rhys are excellent as the spy couple, leaving you wondering whether your neighbours' lives are quite as ordinary as they seem. The sixth and final series has only just finished airing on TV in the US, but series 1-5 are available now in the UK. KD

Alex

Walter Presents It doesn't matter what anyone says, there is no such thing as too much Scandi noir in all its wintry beauty and inescapable sense of doom. This Swedish six-parter is the latest addition to Walter Presents' library of foreign drama, and it follows Alex Leko (Dragomir Mrsic), a family man and cop involved in cocaine and corruption who decides to abandon his criminal life after he accidentally kills his best friend. It turns out it's not that simple to disentangle himself from corruption, especially when he's plagued with the guilt of his friend's death. Enthralling and unpredictable. KD

12

NowTV SERIES 1-2 AVAILABLE

Maggie Gyllenhaal and James Franco star in this grimy, unpolished series about the emerging porn industry in 1970s New York. Written by the creator of The Wire, David Simon, The Deuce hurls us into the colourful, sprawling world of characters involved in the sale of sex. Gyllenhaal steals the show as Candy (right), a fierce sex worker who rejects the idea of having a pimp, while Franco plays gambler Frankie, and also – sometimes confusingly – his twin brother Vinnie. The second series skips forward five years, when the adult industry is thriving. A complex, brutal show examining the relationship between sex, money, politics and the law. KD

Netflix SERIES 1-2 AVAILABLE

The first series of Making a Murderer, which debuted on Netflix in 2015, was a decade in the making, and remains one of the best examples of the now-crowded true-crime genre. At its centre is the murder of Teresa Halbach in Wisconsin, for which Steven Avery (above) and his nephew Brendan Dassey were convicted in 2007. The show's extraordinary access led to viewers questioning the pair's guilt: were they framed by police, whom Avery was suing over a previous wrongful conviction? Now the second series contends with how the show has influenced the case: its high profile led to renewed legal appeals from both men. Expect new evidence to pore over, but don't expect a neat outcome – this is real life, which is exactly what makes it so fascinating. HS

Pride & Prejudice

iPlayer Colin Firth emerging, soaked, from a lake may be one of the most iconic moments in British television, but don't let it overshadow the rest of this sumptuous adaptation. Firth is Mr Darcy and Jennifer Ehle is Elizabeth Bennet (below), whose initial dislike for one another morphs into attraction. Their romance, played out through intense glances over pianofortes, is at the show's heart, but each episode teems with memorable supporting turns, from Julia Sawalha as Lydia, the youngest Bennet sister, to Alison Steadman as Mrs Bennet, whose scheming jeopardises her daughters' marriage prospects. FC

09

The Romanoffs

Amazon Prime SERIES 1 AVAILABLE

There is opulence and intrigue in abundance in Mad Men creator Matthew Weiner's new series, which follows a cast of characters who each believe they're descended from the eponymous Russian royal family (who were, of course, killed by the Bolsheviks in 1918). Each stand-alone episode introduces new protagonists – the first follows Greg (Aaron Eckhart) and his aunt Anushka (Marthe Keller), left – but all of the show's characters are linked by their certainty that while they might not be important, their bloodline is. The Romanoffs' loose structure is as unconventional as its characters, but it's relentlessly hypnotising in its portrayal of human folly. KD

07

The Marvelous Mrs Maisel

Amazon Prime SERIES 1 AVAILABLE

Miriam Maisel lives the perfect life with her perfect husband in the perfect part of Manhattan; her greatest concern is whether the rabbi will choose to attend her Yom Kippur breakfast over everyone else's Yom Kippur breakfasts. That is until her husband leaves her, she gets drunk and finds herself performing stand-up at a dingy club called the Gaslight in the wrong bit of New York. As it turns out, she's a natural-born comedian. Rachel Brosnahan has incredible comic timing in this hilarious and award-winning show as a woman breaking into the comedy scene in an era when the idea of a female stand-up was, well, laughable. The second series is due later this year. KD

Netflix SERIES 1-2 AVAILABLE

It's hard to believe that this time last year we lived in a world without the rebooted Queer Eye. Since it landed on Netflix in February, with a second series rushed out in June, it's become the default feel-good binge-watch, each episode a much-needed shot of serotonin. The formula is simple, and essentially the same as its noughties predecessor: the Fab Five (below) – experts in interior design (Bobby Berk), culture (Karamo Brown), food (Antoni Porowski), grooming (Jonathan Van Ness) and fashion (Tan France) – seek out a struggling subject (often a straight man, but not always) to help them revamp their lives. Alongside an external makeover, or "make better" – a new wardrobe, a fresh haircut, a redecorated home – the Fab Five also focus on personal challenges: a lack of ambition, poor self-esteem, relationship issues. It's those transformative moments that pack a genuine emotional punch, and keep us coming back for more: a third run is due in 2019. HS

Maniac

Netflix SERIES 1 AVAILABLE The new James Bond director Cary Fukunaga's left-field Netflix drama is a brave and adventurous piece of TV that'll leave your brain spinning. Based on a Norwegian series, Maniac stars Jonah Hill as Owen Milgrim, a schizophrenic who, desperate for money, volunteers for a drug trial that promises to end all sadness. At the trial he meets Annie Landbergh (Emma Stone, above), a drug addict plagued by her sister's death. The duo realise that the trial isn't going to eradicate their problems; instead they find themselves appearing in each other's alternate realities. This dazzling fantasy borrows some of the tropes from Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind – but somehow makes them even more mind-bending. KD iPlayer Line of Duty writer Jed Mercurio's latest creation had the nation hooked – a whopping 11 million people tuned into the finale. Richard Madden plays David Budd, a former soldier who now works as a specialist protection officer in the Metropolitan Police, who is tasked with protecting the controversial Home Secretary, Julia Montague (Keeley Hawes). You're never quite sure who you can trust as terrorism and political treachery collide. Is Budd caught in the crossfire or at the heart of a grand plan? Come for the superb 20-minute opening sequence and stay for an acting masterclass, conspiracy, collusion and incriminating "kompromat". This will be available to watch for five months. SD

Bodyguard

House of Cards

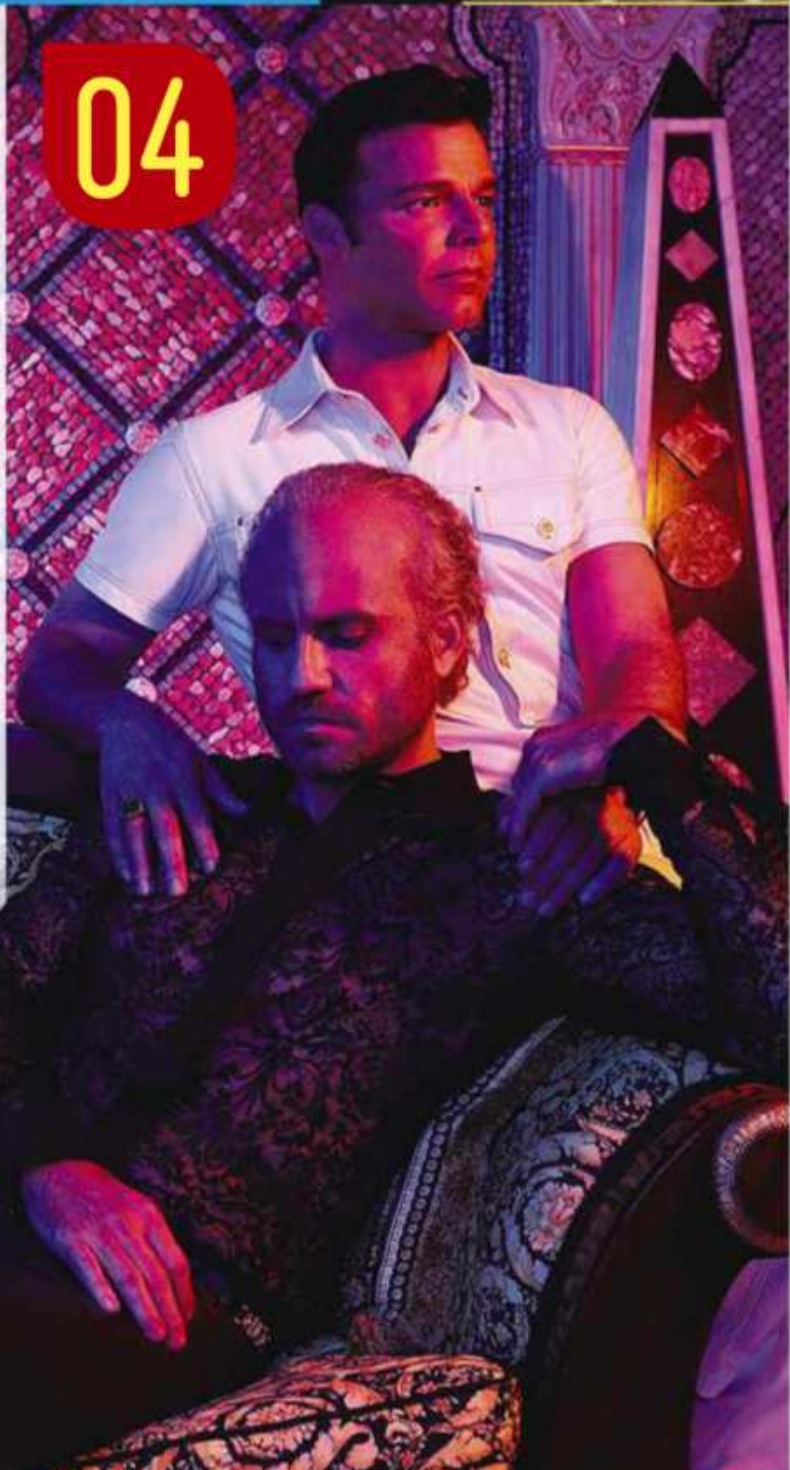

Netflix SERIES 1-5 AVAILABLE

This slick US reboot of the 1990 British drama was an instant hit for Netflix when it premiered in 2013 – and it soon begins its sixth and final series. Last autumn, Kevin Spacey – President Frank Underwood – left the show after allegations of sexual assault were made against him: a loss from which lesser dramas would struggle to recover. But House of Cards already had a ready-made replacement: Robin Wright as Claire Underwood who, serendipitously, had already replaced husband Frank in the White House at the end of series five. Wright has won a Golden Globe and had five consecutive Emmy nominations for the role. We now know Frank has been killed off, a twist entirely befitting the show's brand of melodrama. It's clear House of Cards isn't afraid to confront the #MeToo landscape head-on: what better way to prove a point than by making its final run, with Wright at the helm, its best yet. HS

The Assassination of Gianni Versace iPlayer This nine-part drama is the second instalment of the American Crime Story series, which began with the Emmy-scooping The People v OJ Simpson. Here's an entirely different, yet just as dark and complex, story about the fantasist who killed fashion designer Gianni Versace. Darren Criss stars as Andrew Cunanan, who murdered Versace (Edgar Ramirez, below) and four other men before killing himself in Miami in 1997. Criss is terrifyingly convincing as the narcissistic, sociopathic Cunanan, obsessed with fame and glamour. Versace's sister is played by a brilliant Penélope Cruz and his lover, Antonio D'Amico, by Ricky Martin (above right), who is a surprising joy. With a screenplay crafted by Tom Rob Smith (London Spy), this is a killer slice of TV. Available until 3 November. KD

Homecoming

Amazon Prime Julia Roberts stars in her first television role in this thriller about memory, the military and governmental abuse of power. The plot centres around a programme being run by the Department of Defense to help soldiers reintegrate into civilian life. Roberts plays Heidi Bergman, a therapist who in 2018 is working with the returning soldiers. The drama flashes forward to 2022, when Heidi is a waitress in a diner. So what on earth happened to Heidi between working for the military and serving burgers? And there lies the mystery. From its opening scene, this ten-part series sends your imagination wild and creates a sense of paranoia, where office hums, buzzes and clicks take on an eeriness in their normality. But it's soon clear that the Homecoming programme is anything but normal. KD iPlayer If there's one programme that proves the healthy state of TV drama, it's this brilliant eight-part thriller. Adapted by Fleabag creator Phoebe Waller-Bridge from Luke Jennings's novels, the series sees bored, desk-bound MI5 worker Eve (Sandra Oh) playing cat-and-mouse with a savage, stylish psychopathic assassin, played by the magnetic Jodie Comer. It's a wild plot, self-consciously preposterous, nodding to the spy thrillers of the 60s and 70s and breathing new life into them. The dialogue is witty and bold, laced with a very British sense of humour, particularly from David Haig as Eve's gloomy MI5 colleague. Yet perhaps most groundbreaking is that Killing Eve has two women at its heart, and it seems perfectly normal: they're not fighting sexism, and there's no overt feminism. An eccentric, subversive and riveting eight-part series with some of the best acting you'll see on TV for a long time. KD

Killing Eve
