THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'One of the best shows this year..'

I RAVED ON THIS page last week about the terrific German thriller 54 Hours: the Gladbeck Hostage Crisis, which is based on the true story of a 1988 event that spiralled disastrously out of control and into tragedy. I compared it to the work of director John Carpenter but having watched the concluding episode (Saturday BBC4), I'd say it's more like Paul Greengrass (United 93, 22 July).

54 Hours has the same feel of visceral reportage and edge-of-chaos that Greengrass brings to his true-life movies. I think it's one of the best things I've seen all year and if you missed it last week, I would thoroughly recommend you catch up on iPlayer.

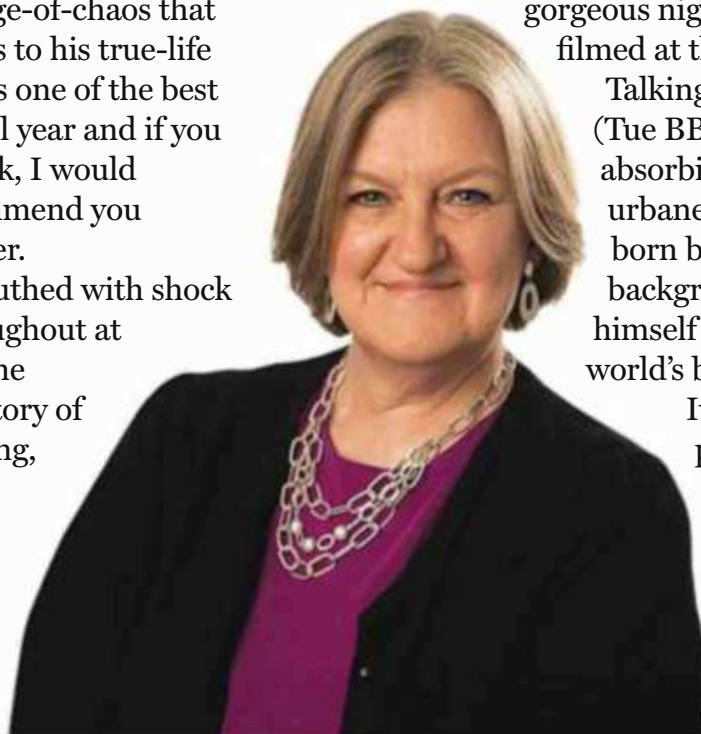

I was open-mouthed with shock and distress throughout at the unfurling of the most incredible story of police buck-passing, grotesquely provocative reporting and a series of badly planned rescue attempts.

There's none of that sort of immediacy in The Little Drummer Girl (Sunday BBC1), an adaptation of John le Carré's novel that really takes its time to get going. But fingers crossed it will be worth the wait, and its star, Florence Pugh, is mesmerising in the title role. She's Charlie, a young actress who's recruited by a shadowy intelligence agent into doing... well, who knows what?

It's nowhere near as glossy as The Night Manager (it's set in the 70s, so everything is varying shades of brown) but there's a gorgeous night-time sequence filmed at the Parthenon.

Talking of gorgeous, Imagine... (Tue BBC2) presents us with an absorbing film about the sleek, urbane Cary Grant, a Bristol-born boy from an unhappy background who reinvented himself to become one of the world's biggest movie stars.

It's a bit heavy on the psychoanalysis (Grant underwent "therapy" by taking LSD to unlock his subconscious). But never mind, just look at those eyes... and that smile...

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

SO LONG, SOUTH BANK

Another piece of TV history is disappearing. ITV is selling its famous South Bank headquarters in London, home to a heap of favourite shows including This Morning, Saturday Night Takeaway and Upstairs Downstairs. The broadcaster had been based on the banks of the Thames for more than 40 years and had planned to move back to the studios following a five-year refurbishment (during which time shows like Good Morning Britain would be filmed in the former BBC studios at White City). But now ITV has decided to abandon the refurbishment plans, continue with the current arrangement and instead sell the building for around £245 million.

A TREASONABLE OFFENCE?

With Harry and Meghan announcing the arrival of a baby next spring, you'd think the time would be ripe for another special of The Windsors, Channel 4's cheeky takedown of the royal family. But while there was talk of a Christmas special this year (following the brilliant wedding edition this summer), Channel 4 assures me there are "no plans" for this. Orf with their heads, I say.

PAUL'S GETTING ON

As we revealed recently, comedian and fisherman Paul Whitehouse is playing the grandad in Only Fools and Horses: the Musical. And while he's played a lot of old men in his time – drunk gentleman's clubber Rowley Birkin in The Fast Show, the Old Git alongside Harry Enfield – "I don't need as much make-up as I used to," he tells me. "There's less of a need for fake liver spots, shall we say?"

THEY'LL BE BACK...

Killing Eve, the acclaimed, ebony-dark thriller starring Sandra Oh and Jodie Comer and based on the book Codename Villanelle (written by Observer dance critic Luke Jennings), is coming back for a second series on the BBC. Jennings has a new Villanelle novel coming out, but the second series (overseen by Emerald Fennell, who takes over from Phoebe Waller-Bridge) will go its own way and not be an adaptation of the new book. I can disclose that Jennings is planning a third novel, after which he'll finish the story. How that impacts the TV show is open to question, but no spoilers here – Killing Eve (available as a full box set on iPlayer) still hasn't finished its scheduled broadcasting on BBC1 yet.

Poirot returns...

Here's John Malkovich in the famous role of Agatha Christie's Belgian detective Hercule Poirot for BBC1's Christmas mystery The ABC Murders – and with a neat goatee beard rather than the legendary detective's luxuriant waxed moustache.

The scripts for The ABC Murders have been written by Sarah Phelps, who is nothing if not bold in her adaptations of Christie – last Easter's Ordeal by Innocence, starring Bill Nighy, changed the identity of the book's killer.

Also starring in the new thriller are Rupert Grint, Tara FitzGerald, Andrew Buchan and Jack Farthing – taking a break from playing Poldark's ghastly George Warleggan.

The story is set in the 1930s, at a time "when the nation is dangerously divided and suspicion and hatred are on the rise," according to the BBC. It sees Poirot forced to track down a serial killer, his only clue being a copy of The ABC Railway Guide left at each crime scene...

‘Do we still need Newsnight?’

Flagship show must change to survive, says former editor

IT'S 1980. NEWSNIGHT'S first year. Imagine you are the editor, thinking about your running order for tonight's programme. You have an easy job – because you have, literally, no competition. Amazingly, there is no other daily programme on British TV covering serious news (including the arts and sciences) in depth, and with probing interviews.

But imagine you are the editor right now. There's hot competition everywhere. Today has hoovered up the day's key news-makers. Twenty-four-hour news has covered, live, the big events of the day. Channel 4 has done its usual sparkily left-field round-up of stories and big interviews at 7pm. The BBC's News at Ten has fielded its roster of heavyweight editors. At 10.30pm, what's left that won't feel like a re-tread?

This is Newsnight's real problem – not who will replace Evan Davis. When the programme began, it filled a huge gap. Today, that gap has shrunk. The question has to be asked: is there still a need for Newsnight?

Some editors try to disguise the gap by sprinkling Newsnight with the wild and wacky (a live cow in the studio, Kirsty Wark dancing to Thriller). Others try to develop big investigations (sometimes brilliantly – think Grenfell; sometimes disastrously – think Jimmy Savile).

Others experiment with different presenter styles – I hired Jeremy Paxman to bring more bite; recently we've seen the gentler, more forensic style of Evan Davis. All editors commission a new set, tinker with the sig tune, shuffle the desks a bit. But the gap keeps on shrinking.

OLD HANDS
Newsnight presenters
Jeremy Paxman and Kirsty
Wark in the early 1990s

‘Newsnight made Paxman, not the other way round’

Every now and again BBC News tries to think of a replacement. But because no BBC boss wants to be remembered for killing Newsnight, it trundles on – but with its cash steadily slashed. In real terms the budget is now well under half what it was 30 years ago. The plan seems to be: starve Newsnight of resources and eventually it will just fade away.

This would be a tragedy. Newsnight is still a terrific brand and still has a real job to do, especially in the age of social media and nonstop news.

That job is to take a breath at the end of a another hectic news cycle, to add real depth to the daily news coverage, break stories worth breaking (and not just exclusives no other editor would run), bring us tomorrow morning's news tonight, run probing interviews with real news-makers, and, yes, add a bit of wit and flair to the late-night mix.

MY SKETCH OF a viable Newsnight: first, stop obsessing about the gender of the new lead presenter. Newsnight is bigger than its presenters. Newsnight made Jeremy Paxman, not the other way round. You could clone the best bits of Kirsty Wark, Emily Maitlis and Julie Etchingham into one uber presenter and on its own it wouldn't be enough.

Two, appoint a single editor of the BBC News at Ten and Newsnight. These two keys bits of BBC News should stop competing and start collaborating.

Third. Cut Newsnight's running time from 45 to 30 minutes, but maintain its budget.

Fourth, seriously beef up the interview booking desk to deliver tomorrow's news-makers tonight. Give Today a run for its money.

Also: drop the cheapo cut-downs of other programmes' commissions – instead get Panorama to produce short original Newsnight investigations. And each night ring-fence space to do a really thorough/witty preview of tomorrow's newspapers.

Do this, or something like it, and I think you have the makings of something brilliant. Do nothing and its future is a slow fade to black.

WHAT WE WATCHED

Ah, those BBC Sunday teatime dramas of yesteryear, how we miss you. This week Little Women was starting, a mainly studio-set re-creation of Louisa May Alcott's story of the March sisters surviving Civil War America with Daddy (played by former Time Lord Patrick Troughton in this adaptation) largely absent. Angela Down, who played spirited aspiring writer Jo, was glad to take on the role, but admitted she took some convincing. "I wasn't desperately keen to start with because, as I remembered it, there seemed to be a lot of sugary Victorian sentimentality in the novel," she told us, not without candour.

WHAT YOU SAID

There was an ongoing and very lively debate in the letters pages about Jack de Manio, the formidable Today presenter whom many of our correspondents believed had right-of-centre views that were seeping into his broadcasting. "A blatant abuse of the ideals of public service broadcasting," said Ian Gates of Newcastle. "Facts are one thing, views are another," agreed James Broad of Tonbridge. But De Manio was defended by ME Wilkinson of Dover, who said the journalist always "brightened my day". BEN DOWELL

‘I’m not going to be a SEX symbol’

Florence Pugh, the glamorous star of the BBC’s new John le Carré spy drama, takes on Hollywood, nudity and American prudes

INTERVIEW BY RICHARD GODWIN

IDON’T THINK I’m going to be an international sex symbol,” says Florence Pugh. “I mean, I know I’m not going to be an international sex symbol. But there is a big potential that when this series comes out, life will be very different...”

The Oxford-born actress, 22, is sipping tea in a Bloomsbury courtyard, contemplating what her starring role in BBC1’s star-studded John le Carré adaptation, The Little Drummer Girl, will do for her profile. You may remember what 2016’s The Night Manager did for Tom Hiddleston’s? A daring rescue here, a flash of buttock there and suddenly he was everywhere.

Pugh is careful not to be presumptuous, ungracious or falsely modest. “I mean, what if it doesn’t go that way?” But she’s aware that committing high-level acts of espionage in a succession of glamorous locations alongside Swedish heart-throb Alexander Skarsgard could fast-track her career. Instead of being described as the “next Kate Winslet” – as she has been, ever since her screen debut in creepy boarding school drama The Falling in 2014 – she might finally just be Florence Pugh.

“I remember the news going around that they were going to do this series,” she says. “It was like forbidden fruit. Everyone knew that they weren’t going to get it, but everyone knew it was going to be amazing. Even when I was filming The Little

‘My character learns how to shoot, wrestle and blow up things’

Drummer Girl in Greece, I found it hard to believe. This doesn’t happen usually.”

She didn’t think she stood much of a chance of winning the part of Charlie Ross – a rare le Carré heroine – until her agent passed on a felicitous piece of news. The cult South Korean film-maker, Park Chan-Wook, had been announced as the director of the BBC/AMC co-production; and it so happened that Park had been an admirer of Pugh ever since their respective movies, The Handmaiden and Lady Macbeth, were shown at the London Film Festival in 2016.

DIRECTOR PARK (AS Pugh diligently refers to him) had called her in for a breakfast meeting back then, with his right-hand man and translator, Cheong Won-Jo. “It was very surreal,” she recalls. “There he was, this master of cinema, eating eggs with soldiers. And he told me, ‘I want to direct you in something and I don’t know what it is, but when I do I will find you.’” She assumed it wouldn’t come to anything, but then a year later he told her he wanted her to be his Charlie Ross. She didn’t even have to audition.

Park has described The Little Drummer Girl as his favourite le Carré – “At the core of this story is an extremely painful, but thrilling, romance” – and Pugh as the ideal actor to bring it to life. “To ▷ ◁ adapt such a great work without losing its integrity, it needs the time and depth of a television series, and I am excited at the prospect of seeing how the drumbeats of Florence Pugh, the most energetic young female actor I have seen recently, will resonate with the audience.”

If you've seen Lady Macbeth, you'll know what he means – and if you haven't, you're in for a treat. It's based on Nikolai Leskov's 19th-century melodrama Lady Macbeth of Mtsensk, only with the action transferred from provincial Russia to the moody Northumbrian moors. Pugh plays a taciturn saucy named Katherine, who is married off to a weird landowner and put under the watch of his sadistic father. It unfolds a little like Wuthering Heights meets Park's own 2003 cult revenge drama, Oldboy, with a delicious performance from Pugh as a watchful, lustful, ruthless woman who refuses to submit to her fate.

“It's a cheeky film, isn't it?” she says. “It gives in to all your secret hopes about what you want stories to turn into. You're like: ‘OK! Cool! Kill EVERYONE!’ Love it.”

We've recently seen a less murderous side of Pugh as Cordelia (the good daughter) in Richard Eyre's BBC adaptation of King Lear, alongside Anthony Hopkins, Emily Watson, Jim Broadbent and her childhood idol, Emma Thompson. Pugh professes herself amazed to have found herself in such company, but actually, she fitted right in.

She comes from a large, boisterous family where you had to be loud to be heard; her father Clinton runs a number of restaurants in Oxford; her mother Deborah was a dancer. “We're all drawn to the stage like a magnet,” she says. Her older brother, Sebastian (stage name Toby Sebastian), is a musician who has lately appeared in Game of Thrones; her two sisters, Arabella and Rafaela, both have acting ambitions.

Florence herself was still at school, St Edward's in Oxford, when she was cast by director Carol Morley in The Falling and it's not hard to imagine her as a grande dame in years to come. (“I'm getting old! I'm in my 20s!” she bemoans at one point). It's partly because she has such a rich panna cotta of a voice: close your eyes and you could imagine her doing Hedda Gabler or Dervla Kirwan's M&S advert. But it's offset by a filthy laugh and an infectious sense of mischief.

What particularly appealed to her about her character Charlie in The Little Drummer Girl is that she's an ordinary woman, as opposed to some seasoned spy. Or at least, she's an actor, with a virtuoso's ability to lie. “We meet her on stage,” she says. “She's being watched from afar by this mysterious golden man” – she means Skarsgard's character, Israeli intelligence officer Gadi Becker – “and so she gets caught up in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, as you do. It's a little bit heartbreaking. But six episodes later, you end up in more or less the same place, with lots of people hurt.”

PARK HAS RETAINED the novel's late-1970s setting, so there are lots of “wonderful clothes and dodgy haircuts” and Pugh seems determinedly downbeat about her glamour in the role. “I tried to look as mousey as possible and blend into the background,” she says. “It would be ridiculous to wear a red dress and red lipstick as a spy.”

Still, she doesn't hold back when it comes to her “gorgeous” co-star Skarsgard. “He's so tall and he's so golden,” she says. “Like, he's golden everywhere,” she adds meaningfully, before emitting one of those hiccuppy giggles. “His character is so cool with everything and Alexander is like that anyway. Everything he had to do in a scene would simply be effortless. Meanwhile, I'm clanking around, stubbing my toe, pushing over a chair. Even when I was supposed to be all effortless and sexy in a scene, I'd cock it up.”

I'm sure she's being modest. Her character does receive some training. “She learns how to shoot a gun, and wrestle, and blow up things, which I love.” Director Park noted that she had played a WWE wrestler in Stephen Merchant's forthcoming comedy feature film, Fighting with My Family, and inserted a wrestling scene especially for her.

The Little Drummer Girl, however, has no equivalent to the famous Hiddleston bare-bottom scene – which she assures me has nothing to do with director Park (“who is notorious for his naked bodies”) or her, and more to do with the fact that bums don't go down well in the US. “America is quite scared of bums,” she says. “And nipples. We had to make sure there were no bums and nipples out. I don't know why. Such strange people.”

It made filming sex scenes challenging. “There was one scene we did where Alex and I were under the duvet and supposedly naked. I was wriggling down one end and Alex is wriggling down the other. Halfway through, I hear: ‘CUT! CUT!’ Director Park says: ‘Florence, you've got to hide your nipples more!’ I'm like: ‘OK!’ So we do it again, and again I hear: ‘CUT! CUT! Florence! It looks like you're hiding your nipples.’ I'm like: ‘Arrrrgh! Just let me get my breasts out, I don't care!’ But America does care.”

She has complained before that Hollywood imposes ridiculous expectations on what a female body is supposed to look like – she is happy to put her own curves on the line to challenge those expectations.

SCREEN DEBUT

“My parents were very cool and made sure we watched lots of European films when we grew up, so nudity has never been a problem for me, as long as it’s done beautifully,” she says. “When I came into the industry, I never had a problem with it. There’s a reason why there’s a problem with bodies and it’s because you never actually get to see any normal versions of them.”

We agree that this is one area where Hollywood’s values seem a little warped: the mere glimpse of a breast in the US is enough to get a film an R-rating (meaning “restricted” – under-17s need an accompanying adult), but you can depict graphic scenes of violence and get away with a PG-13. She reckons that’s testament to the power of the human body. “Our show is about a war, so there’s lots of violence and there are lots of guns. You see that violence throughout. But it’s still scarier to see someone naked. Isn’t that weird?”

The weirdness of Hollywood seems to prey on her mind – I sense she won’t be moving to Los Angeles any time soon. But she’s excited to be entering the film business post #MeToo when, finally, gender expectations are changing. “It’s funny, it’s not like any of that was news to me when all of that happened last year,” she says, referring to the Harvey Weinstein revelations.

“Even at the age of 20 I knew there was something up and it had needed fixing for a long time and I was very lucky not to be affected by it.

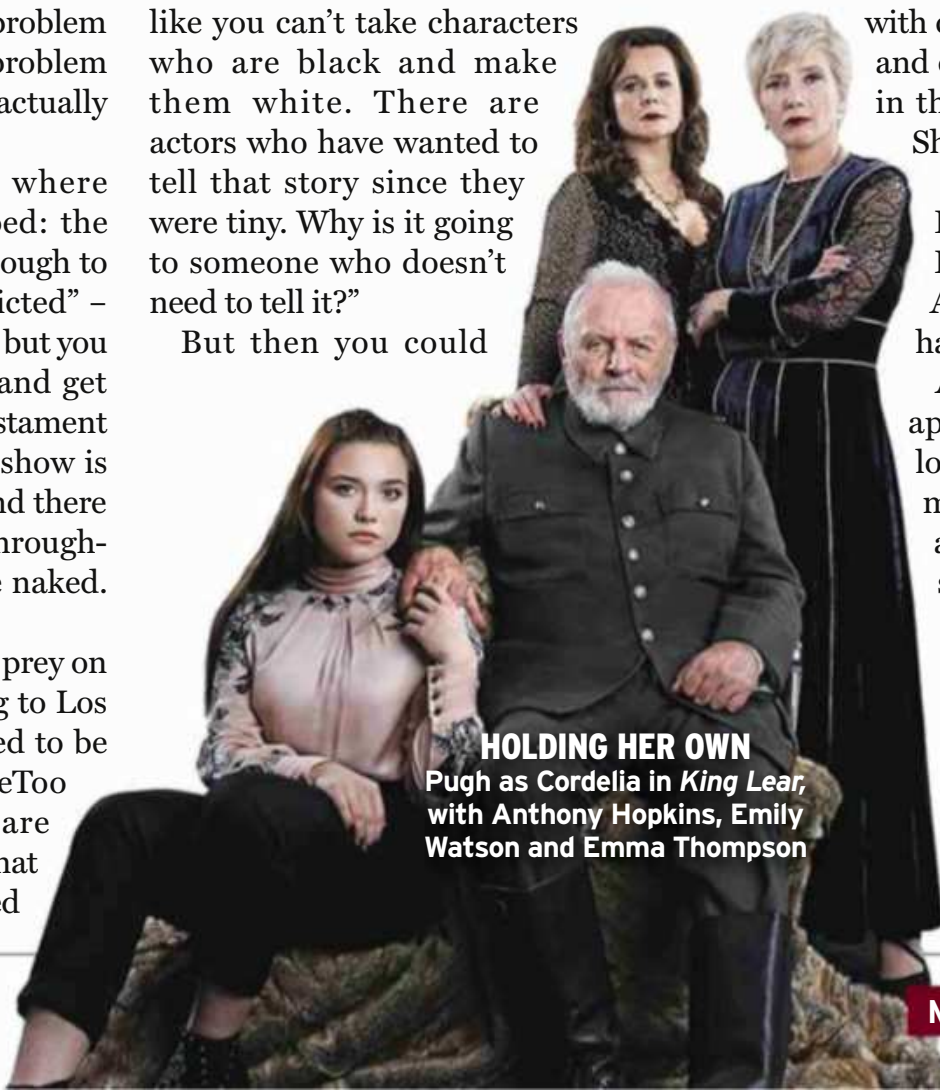

But what an amazing time – this is the beginning of my career, so many things have changed and I get to say I was there from that point.”

The recent discussions around gender and power have strengthened her resolve to seek out female-centric projects. “I remember when I did The Falling, I didn’t understand that it was a big deal that almost all the people on set were women. It’s only as I’ve done more jobs that I’ve gone, ‘Wow. There are no women anywhere, except in make-up and costume!’ So, I’d like to do more female-oriented stories and work with female directors and producers.

“I’ve never got on well with scripts that don’t give me anything to do. I can’t stand it when a character is introduced into a scene and they just leech on the male. Whenever I say something, I want to be saying something. That’s been my priority ever since I was tiny. I have too big a gob for that.”

There, is however, an added pressure on actors to choose their roles carefully. She admits a little sympathy with Scarlett Johansson after she was pressured to quit the movie Rub & Tug, in which she’d been cast to play a transgender woman. “Everyone understands why you’d want to play such a great part,” she says. “But we are coming into a time where even though you have a complete right to tell whatever story you want to tell, if there’s a person who can come at that from an honest corner, it’s theirs to tell. Just like you can’t take characters who are black and make them white. There are actors who have wanted to tell that story since they were tiny. Why is it going to someone who doesn’t need to tell it?”

But then you could

HOLDING HER OWN
Pugh as Cordelia in King Lear, with Anthony Hopkins, Emily Watson and Emma Thompson

say: shouldn’t a northern actor have played Katherine in Lady Macbeth? “Yes,” she concedes. “It could go on and on and on. It’s not my argument until I’m in it, ha-ha!”

I remark that the pressures on her generation are immense. She agrees. “I think we’re misunderstood... Misguided. I always felt growing up that I’d like to learn more about the world and there’s an expectation when you leave school that you’re supposed to just know.”

Unlike a lot of her friends, she was forbidden from using social media until she was 14, and says she learnt more about the world through face-to-face conversations – and it shows. I sense a lot of her self-possession comes from her close-knit family. She has a place in London, but returns home to Oxford regularly.

‘I like a face that hasn’t been tampered with’

“My little sister is still there. I get desperate calls when I’m back: ‘Come back home! The parents are killing me!’ So I do my best to keep her from going insane. But I’ve been really lucky to have been filming and travelling a lot.” She is circumspect on her romantic life. “I don’t really like discussing that. Just because... you never know what’s going to happen next.”

AT THE VERY least, she hopes The Little Drummer Girl will put paid to those Kate Winslet comparisons. “It’s actually embarrassing now,” she sighs. “I really hope she hasn’t ever read any of them. But she is one of the reasons I wanted to act. I re-enacted Titanic over and over again. I love her because she has a normal, beautiful face with creases on her forehead and proper cheeks and everything. I love that her face is how it is in that moment, there’s nothing funny in it. She’s not hiding. She’s just raw.

“I love watching faces as they grow up. It’s the difference between so many strong British actresses compared to what America does to women. I like a face that hasn’t been tampered with.”

As for her own ambitions, she’d like to appear on stage at some point. And she’d love another role like Lady Macbeth. “Give me some more confused, dazed women who are locked up in mental homes on an island somewhere,” she says. “I’d love a Hannibal Lecter. The Silence of the Lambs is my favourite book, favourite film. He’s a great guy.”

Hannibal Lecter? “Yes!” she shrieks. “I could be his daughter. Who is also completely insane and happens to enjoy eating flesh off people’s faces. ‘Daddy!’” she calls in a terrifying cutesy voice. “Gross. Let’s make it happen!”

Sensitive kind of spy

Alexander Skarsgard couldn't be more different from the tough guy he plays...

LIKE 2016's The Night Manager – which gave Tom Hiddleston his, well, cheekiest role yet – John le Carré's The Little Drummer Girl is a tightly plotted, globe-trotting affair of spies, terrorists and radical politics.

Swedish actor Alexander Skarsgard, 42 – who was in True Blood and scooped multiple awards for his portrayal of Perry, Nicole Kidman's abusive husband, in Big Little Lies – plays Gadi Becker, a Mossad agent preparing to infiltrate a terrorist cell. He entices Charlie (Florence Pugh's character), his feisty British girlfriend, into plotting a perilous honey trap.

Becker seems to be a character of few words?

We wanted him to be very enigmatic in the beginning, so he is introduced to the viewers and Charlie simultaneously on a beautiful Greek island. So he doesn't have too much back story – as she gets more intrigued, hopefully the audience will as well.

Did you screen-test for chemistry with Florence Pugh?

It was sheer luck because I didn't meet Flo until a week before we started shooting. But I'd seen her in Lady Macbeth and thought she was sensational. We hit it off, and now we're very, very close. Hopefully that comes across.

What was the appeal of this project: the BBC, le Carré, director Park Chan-Wook...

All of those! I was dying to work with Park – I loved the Oldboy trilogy and The Handmaiden. I was shooting Big Little Lies when I read the script and Nicole [Kidman, who starred in Park's film Stoker] said, "Don't even think about it – you have to do this. He's amazing amazing amazing..." And the fact that it was a John le Carré story, and a character like Becker... I couldn't have been more excited.

What does playing a monstrous character like Perry do to you?

I have to leave it on set. It would be very difficult to function otherwise. I did Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? on stage in Sweden 15 years ago. It's a very dark play and it was one of the first things I did as an actor, and I was having a hard time – it was 140 performances over five months. You can't go home 140 times from the theatre feeling that depressed and having that weight on you. So that's where I learnt to leave the character behind. It was important for me to be able to have a normal life and go out and have fun.

It was the same on Big Little Lies. We shot in LA

VERSATILE

and I stayed with friends. That helped a lot. They have kids, and it's a loving, warm, family atmosphere. It was nice that I didn't come home to an empty hotel room.

It was a show full of great female actors [Kidman, Reece Witherspoon, Shailene Woodley, Laura Dern]. Was there a different energy than on a set dominated by men?

Not only are they extraordinarily talented women, they're so supportive of each other. I've been on sets with men where it gets very competitive, especially alpha dudes who want to make sure they're the silverback gorilla in the room. That can hurt the creative process, because egos and insecurities come in. So it was wonderful to be in a situation where people cared about the project more than their character.

You studied English at Leeds, so the UK must feel very familiar. Or does that feel like a lifetime ago?

It does and it doesn't. It was an interesting time in my life. I didn't know what I wanted to do and it was actually while at Leeds Metropolitan University that I decided to apply to theatre school. It was in the library that I picked out a book of monologues – it definitely wasn't Shakespeare! – and my buddy filmed me on a VHS camera, and I sent it to Marymount Theatre School in New York. I got in, and two months later I moved to New York.

Now you're back, how many times have you been asked about Tom Hiddleston's bum?

Quite a few! And I've never seen it. I'd love to, though... I definitely can't live up to Tom's gorgeous bum! SAM PETERS

...but Reece Shearsmith and Steve Pemberton are suffering first-night nerves as they prepare to go live

THEY ARE PUPPETEERS of fear. From The League of Gentlemen to Psychoville and most recently Inside No 9, Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith have been coaxing humour from the darkest recesses of comedy for 20 years. They may be used to pulling the strings, but this week they have reason to be afraid. It’s Halloween, and their brilliantly twisted anthology is going live.

Surprisingly, the notion of doing a live episode of No 9 didn’t come from the writers and actors themselves, but was a proposition from the BBC.

“We thought about it, and then dismissed it,” notes Shearsmith, 49, at Abney Park cemetery in east London, the location of today’s photoshoot. Why? “It’s a big headache, just for people to watch and think, ‘Oh, right. It’s live.’ We had to get the story right, to feel it was worth it. We’ve incorporated some deliberate challenges to help show off the fact that it’s live. If we can achieve it, it’ll be good. If not, it’ll crumble around us.”

Pemberton adds they “don’t want this episode to be easy” – but No 9 never is. Since its inception, the show’s calling card has been to push the envelope, be it with narrative (Once Removed used reverse chronology) or script (Zanzibar was written in iambic pentameter and Quiet Night In was almost devoid of dialogue) in episodes about everything from witch trials and seances to call centres and karaoke booths.

“You don’t want to just keep doing the same performances and writing the same material, as it could become very safe,” says Pemberton, 51. Though even by their ambitious standards, a live episode is bold. “It’s all about preparation. We’ve kept the action mainly between us. We have Stephanie Cole, but we’ve put the pressure on us rather than on other people.”

They haven’t yet spoken to the Open All Hours and Doc Martin actress (“We just know she’s said yes,” smiles Shearsmith), although when producer Adam Tandy speaks to RT later in the week he’s fresh from “a delightful cup of coffee” with 77-year-old Cole. “She’s in great form,” he says, “and looking forward to the show. It being live was one of the things that made her go, ‘Oh, yes please, I’ll have some of that.’”

The tale begins with Pemberton’s character Arthur walking home on Halloween. In a graveyard, he finds a mobile phone and tries to find out who it belongs to. Shearsmith plays the church’s vicar, while Cole is parishioner Moira.

“It was commissioned as a Halloween piece, but because of the BBC2 schedules we’re going out on Sunday,” explains Tandy. “We’ll be rewriting the show to reflect that.” Additionally, rehearsals for the episode will take place the week before broadcast, and they’ll only be doing two full run-throughs before going live.

In terms of logistics, Tandy says there’ll be “extra safeguards” in place to ensure things don’t go wrong. “And I can’t confirm exactly where we’re filming it. We’re still trying to sort out the contracts and haven’t paid for it yet. Also, we don’t want people turning up on the night.”

Pemberton and Shearsmith liken the trepidation they're feeling now to the opening night of a play, while they've also recently finished a live League of Gentlemen tour. With Mark Gatiss and writer Jeremy Dyson, they won Edinburgh's Perrier Award in 1997 for League, which graduated from stage to radio and then TV. It was revived last year for three anniversary specials, although if it was coming fresh to the BBC today, neither are certain it would get made.

"You might have a tough time," notes Shearsmith. "It's a sketch show, and they don't do them any more. Or it doesn't seem they do."

"Which is a great shame, because that's how we got started," adds Pemberton. "A comedy has to fight a lot harder now to get made in the first place, and to get noticed."

During their recent tour, Pemberton says they "didn't grind to a halt very often" performing live. Both seasoned West End actors, they candidly admit to having gone blank on stage. Rather worryingly, Pemberton says he's had one such moment in every play he's been in. "And it's the scariest... the absolute scariest thing."

HE RECOLLECTS ART in 2002 in which he appeared alongside Shearsmith and Gatiss: "It's full of big, long speeches about why this piece of art is either worth something or worthless. They're very detailed arguments. Mark made his pitch about why the painting was valuable, and I had a two-page speech back. But instead I just went, 'So what?' and I batted it straight back to him. I didn't have a clue what to say."

Shearsmith's horror story is even worse. "I did Alan Ayckbourn's play Absent Friends and I had a big speech. In one of the previews, I completely forgot it. I had to say to the side, 'Sorry, what's the line?', which I'd never done. That was the worst – actually to be out of the character completely."

These ghastly tales strike as much fear as any of their macabre creations, from the residents of Royston Vasey to Psychoville's tortured souls – the darkly comic series they brought to the BBC in 2009. "Writing Psychoville was really hard," says Shearsmith. "It wasn't as fun as writing the No 9s. We've got more relaxed about how we achieve the end result. It takes the pressure off."

"Apart from this one," chips in Pemberton, returning to the live episode. "We've been doing this for 20 years now in some form or another, and it's hard to find things that do make you scared and challenge you in that way. This is certainly one of them." FRANCES TAYLOR

4 YOU CAN'T BE A PUSHOVER IN THIS INDUSTRY 7

THE RT INTERVIEW BY SALI HUGHES

PEOPLE THINK ALEX Jones is too nice, and she knows it. The co-presenter of The One Show is known for her warm style and sunny disposition, but as she drinks her tea (she declined my offer of champagne as she's on air in a few hours and "once I start, I won't stop!"), she assures me that her cheerfulness is a finite resource.

"It's good that people think I'm nice, and I am nice, but everybody has to have that side to them where they are able to stand up for themselves and not be a pushover. My husband will tell you, don't mess, because I'm laid-back, only to a point."

How does the improbable Dark Side of Alex Jones manifest? "I'm like my mother: things stress me out. Small things like when the house is a tip and I can't think straight and I lose my rag. At work I'm pretty laid-back but at the same time the team knows that you can push Al quite far and then no more. And I think that's all right. You can't be a pushover in this industry anyway."

It's oddly easy to think of Alex Jones as a showbiz newcomer. It only seems like five minutes since she first fronted The One Show in 2010, but even though she was new to most of Britain, Jones was an established and popular presenter in her native Wales, and like many of the best things, The One Show gig came along when she was perfectly content with her lot.

Living happily in Cardiff, she was never out of work, presenting kids' TV, sports and light entertainment on S4C and BBC Wales. The One Show team was unexpectedly looking for replacement hosts (launch presenters Adrian Chiles and Christine Bleakley had, in something of a media storm, just defected to ITV) and had spotted Jones on YouTube. She was excited but bemused, she says. "Of course, as a presenter I had ambitions to work on a network show but I was equally satisfied working hard where I was. The One Show said, 'Can you come in next week?' and I said, 'I can't, I've got commitments.'"

She loves The One Show deeply, and can't imagine leaving her BBC family. "The show is eccentric, it's a mixed bag. But I think that's what people have come to expect. We have loads of comedians who relentlessly, in a lovely and loving way, take the p out of the show. They're like, 'Where are we going now - is it badgers?' ▷

◁ But the viewership over the years has stayed with us, which is amazing with the way things are these days. I think it's having Hollywood celebs or rock stars talking about the everyday." She laughs. "With us, you might get Jon Bon Jovi talking about bird feed. I suppose that's the appeal, the bonkers-ness of it."

THE CHEMISTRY BETWEEN CO-presenter Matt Baker and Jones is familial, often funny, and arguably what turned The One Show from early-evening filler TV to much-loved schedule fixture. Jones understands its importance to the audience. "The warmth of our show is its driving force, and so there needs to be a friendship. It's making people across the country, who've had a variety of different days, come together in conversation. To us, it feels like an extension of our own families and like sitting in our own lounge."

Inevitably, there was some speculation around the nature of her closeness with Baker. "At the beginning people were asking if Matt and I had chemistry and I thought, 'Oh God, well if you mean in the way that we fancy each other, no we don't!'" Jones, who is happily married to insurance broker Charlie Thomson, a New Zealander, and mother to 18-month-old son Ted, eventually found that tiresome. "It was annoying – you can be friends with a boy! It's a different chemistry, we're just really good mates."

Speculation over their mutual attraction wasn't the only shock to Jones's system. Going from a relative unknown to a teatime telly treasure, she also wasn't prepared for the scrutiny of her appearance. "I watch things back and say to Tess, the show's stylist, what the hell were we thinking? We'll laugh about it now. You can't get obsessed with it. Who cares? It's such a tiny thing – the content is key."

Besides, she says, she's not one for thousand-pound designer dresses. "I've got three expensive handbags and a couple of coats but other than that I'm a high-street girl, it's how I've always been." Today she wears jeans and a jumper, and admits she's more a trackie bottoms and ponytail girl when off duty. "Honestly, if you saw the state of me at home... Mum asked the other day when I last coloured my hair and when I said April, she said, 'You do realise you're on telly, don't you?' I mean, to this day I'm thrilled to do the job, but the rest, I can take it or leave it. It's how I was brought up."

Jones's upbringing was simple, happy, quiet. Raised in the small, predominantly Welsh-speaking town of Ammanford in mid-Wales, Jones was socially awkward. "Going through school I was incredibly shy, it was awful. Mum and Dad still can't believe I do the job I do," she says, in apparent disbelief herself. Aged four, she watched the live broadcast of the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer, as well as children's shows like Play School and Blue Peter, and decided she wanted to be a television presenter.

"I harboured this quiet ambition that I didn't really tell anybody about because it just sounded... Well, it's just I've got no family who've worked in telly. It's just not what we do." A Year 10 drama teacher at her comprehensive school nonetheless saw potential and Jones feels indebted. "If it wasn't for her we wouldn't be having this conversation now. She could see I was really paralysed by shyness but she knew there was something. By the time I was ready for uni I was a completely different person."

Still, she began from the safety of backstage. After graduating from Aberystwyth University, she began working as a runner then a researcher on regional television, thinking she might ultimately move into production. At just 21, she was asked by her boss if she felt like screen testing for an upcoming children's programme. She did, was asked to present it, and her new career began. Over the next 15 years, she worked almost nonstop. "I covered live stuff, some commentary, a holiday show, dating and fashion programmes... so I felt I was ready."

HER EXPERIENCE AND route to flagship telly was not dissimilar to former children's presenter Matt Baker's, and despite the controversy over the reported gender pay gap at the BBC, this is reflected in their One Show salaries. "Matt and I get paid the same. Our editor is a feminist – he's got a very strong-willed wife and lots of daughters and he's an amazing man. He'd find it disgusting that we were paid differently." Any disparity, she assures, is misreported.

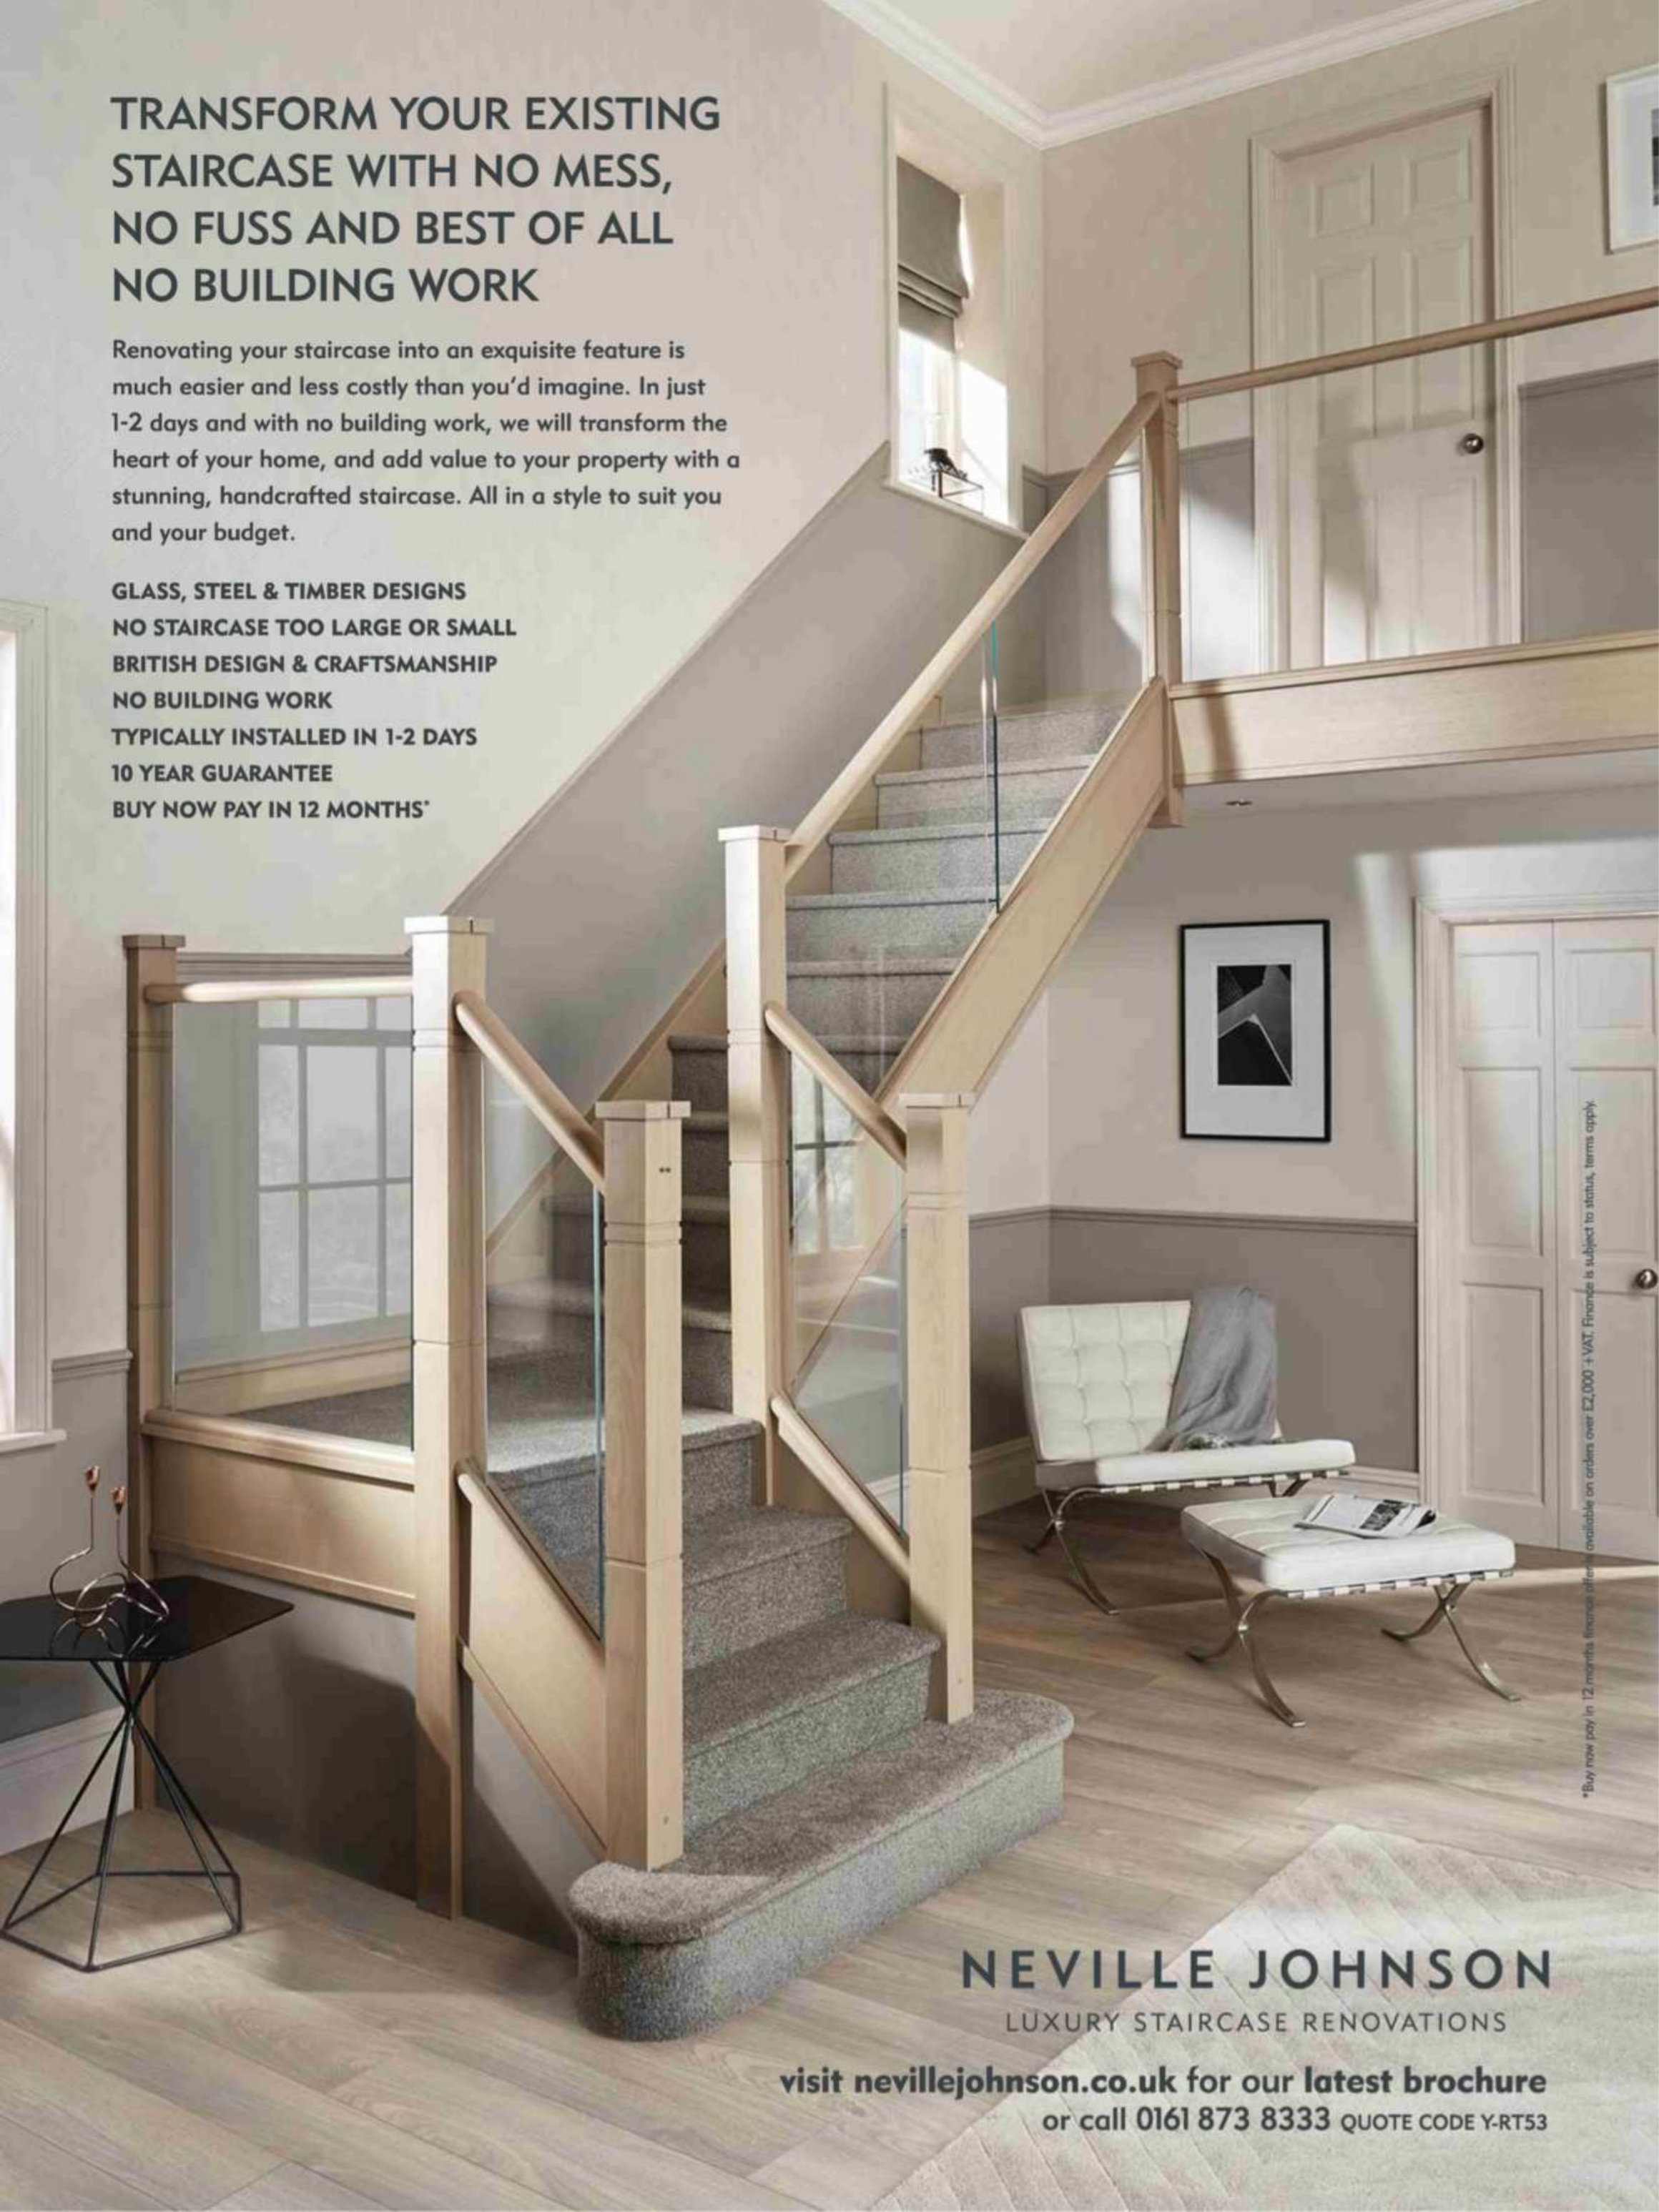

"Matt and I do a lot of separate projects outside of The One Show. Matt does Countryfile and a lot of sport whereas in the same year [that the BBC wages were disclosed], I'd had Ted. The One Show was all I could manage at the time. But on The One Show, certainly there is parity. The BBC has been transparent, more than a lot of other companies, and that did open up a can of worms somewhat – but it needed opening."

She acknowledges that in the fight for equality, we've come far – yet still not far enough. "I've just done a series called Back in Time for the Factory, which is about modern girls going back to work in a factory setting of the 60s, 70s and 80s, charting the track of equal pay. It came in in 1970 but actually nobody put it into practice ▷

ROYAL APPOINTMENT

what they've seen, how they've come through it, how the Invictus Games are helping them."

How would she react to Ted one day joining the armed forces? "I'd be absolutely petrified," she says visibly flinching. "I'll be honest, I'd rather he didn't. But that's some people's destiny and what they want to do, isn't it?" She says her visceral reaction to the thought of seeing Ted go into combat makes the men and women of the armed forces, and their families, seem all the more heroic. "The parents who have had to be there and witness them signing up and going away on these tours, and not hearing from them for days or weeks on end. It's horrific. The stories are going to be full-on. The biggest challenge will be keeping my s together, really." Hearing lovely Alex Jones swear – even mildly – is more shocking than it reasonably should be.

Invictus won't be the first time she's worked with Prince Harry.

Even before the wedding, she'd interviewed him several times for The One Show. "He's hysterical – he's everything you hope for when you meet him," she says. "Very charming, very tall. He's got this lovely presence and a charisma. He literally swears within the first sentence!"

SHE FEELS SIMILARLY about his wife, brother and sister-in-law. "I think Harry and William have really endeared themselves to the British public. They're the type of boys you want to be friends with." She acknowledges that their late mother's celebrated communication skills have rubbed off on the princes. Nodding emphatically, she says, "They're solid and I think they've got good morals. They're obviously privileged in a lot of different ways but people still feel like they're on their level, which I think is a very clever thing to be able to do."

She does this very thing on The One Show, I say, but she gently dismisses it. I wonder if she ever allows herself to feel proud instead of underplaying her considerable achievements.

"Well it's funny because I think that's also part of the Welsh psyche; as a nation I think we are quite apologetic and quite modest. But really, lucky is what I am. I hope I'm good at my job but I'm lucky as well to be in the position I'm in."

She also has a great ability to just be herself. Sitting on this sofa in a London hotel tearoom must feel, I imagine, like sitting on the couch of The One Show. "Yeah," she finally concedes. "I'm no different on telly. I mean, you couldn't be different and keep it up every day, and I think that's key to being a presenter. Being able to share yourself."

'Prince Harry is hysterical – he swears in the first sentence!'

◁ until 1975, and still companies were finding ways around it. The sad truth is that we've not really moved on that much, we're still not where we should be, considering we're 40 years on from then."

She may be on equal pay, but sees that as only one piece of the jigsaw. Earlier this year, at a literary festival, she spoke about the lack of breastfeeding and childcare facilities at the BBC, and the difficulty in returning to work. "My husband is fantastic, but sometimes our little boy, because of the age he's at, just wants his mother and there's nothing you can do about that."

"Mother nature has made it so that the mother has this connection with the child and it doesn't matter how brilliant your partner, or child-minder, or nursery is, I feel the responsibility falls on me. I am lucky because of the job I have: I get to be at home with Ted in the morning but it's no easier leaving later. Some days it's brilliant and I can walk out and feel OK with it all, and some days not. There are some days where I feel like I've been run over by a bus, having not slept. That just comes with the territory."

As her recent parenting book Winging It! (Lagom, 2018) suggests, she is, like most parents, having to make up an imperfect life as she goes along. But despite the juggle, she's delighted to see her workload increase temporarily as she covers the BBC-broadcast Invictus Games from Australia, the international sporting event in which injured, wounded or sick armed services personnel compete against one another. The games were founded by Prince Harry, Duke of Sussex, whose wedding to Meghan Markle was covered by Jones in April (she was also chosen to present the live broadcast of William and Kate's nuptials in 2011, and considers both weddings to be life highlights).

For the Games, Jones is focusing on the human-interest stories behind the events.

"Invictus stands for a lot more than sport and our aim this year is to focus a bit more on the contestants and how what's happened to them, be it physical or mental, has affected their entire family.

"It's about the viewers having an understanding of what they've been through,

HAPPY COUPLE
 Alex Jones and Charlie Thompson married in 2015

TWO THINGS DISTINGUISH Dark Heart, ITV's new thriller, from television's many other gritty police procedurals. The first is the writing of Chris Lang, creator of Unforgotten – three series, three deftly plotted and compelling cases for the brilliant Nicola Walker and Sanjeev Bhaskar. Lang has now adapted Adam Creed's novels featuring troubled DI Will "Staffe" Wagstaffe and there's crime and punishment aplenty, but also a stillness and confidence about the drama. No working overtime to be flash and fancy.

"That's definitely what we were going for," says Tom Riley, who plays Wagstaffe, and is the second reason Dark Heart is a compelling watch. "I'd been very used to characters that were, I suppose, flashy and show-off. This guy is more contained... until he's not," the actor says, teasing a complexity to the Metropolitan Police officer haunted by the murder of his parents.

The six-parter (the first two parts, this week, were shown as a feature-length pilot on ITV Encore in 2016) is a noir-ish, London-set, edge-of-the-seat ride that might give Idris Elba's Luther cause to look nervously over his over-coated-shoulder. And it could finally make Riley a proper star at home, a few years after much of the rest of the world cottoned on to his talents.

The Kent-born 37-year-old is far from a household name here. That's despite having under his belt at least two lead roles in big-budget TV series: American network Starz's Da Vinci's Demons and Amazon Prime's postwar, Paris-set fashion melodrama, The Collection.

"I am in a strange place," agrees Riley, who's also put in Brit actor due diligence with parts in Casualty, Lewis and James Nesbitt medical drama Monroe. "It never occurred to me that this is my first time as a network terrestrial lead.

"I've been number one on the call-sheet on shows for five years before this – but I guess they didn't really broadcast in the UK," he concedes jovially. "And if I had thought about that [while filming Dark Heart], there might have been sheer panic!" Now, though, his family can say of Dark Heart: "Our Tom's in that, and it's going to be on ITV after Corrie." "Yes!" he nods with a laugh. "That hadn't occurred to me. It's a change from saying to people: 'Do you have Fox? Do you have Amazon Prime on your telly?'"

Up till now, the only time he's seen his mum react emotionally to his work was when, shortly after graduating from the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art (Lamda) in 2005, he was in a play at the city's Royal Court theatre, "and my picture was outside the venue. And my mum saw it and cried."

SHOWING OFF
As Leonardo da Vinci

Nonetheless, he's hesitant to get ready for his moment in the limelight. "And that's because there have been many, many times previously when I've been in movies advertised on the side of buses," he says, referring to the likes of music-industry satire Kill Your Friends (2015) and sepsis tearjerker Starfish (2016), "with people saying, 'This is it! Your life's about to change!' And it really, resolutely hasn't."

Well, he says that... I'm talking to Riley over Sunday brunch in a diner in Culver City, Los Angeles. He lives here half the year with his wife,

'I'm used to flashy characters. This guy is more contained... until he's not'

American actress Lizzy Caplan, who has starred in True Blood, and Masters of Sex alongside Michael Sheen. They spend the rest of the year in north London, where they met in 2015 while she was filming Now You See Me 2. They were engaged the following year and married on Italy's Amalfi Coast in September 2017.

ACCORDING TO PRESS reports, the Riley-Caplan nuptials were a star-studded affair, attended by the likes of Woody Harrelson, Dianna Agron, Dave Franco and a bevy of their A-list actor pals. Except it wasn't.

"Maybe one of those was right – but no Chris Hemsworth, no Tom Hiddleston, no Octavia Spencer," rebuts Riley, amused rather than narked. "It was either wilful fabrication, or an excited Italian maid mistook my friend from childhood for Lily Collins. Although there were people there they might have got excited by," he adds coquettishly, "but they didn't spot any of them."

While his wife was born and raised in Hollywood, Riley grew up in Maidstone. None of his family have anything to do with acting. So, despite an early enthusiasm for performing, it always seemed like a pipe dream.

Moving house recently, he found an old book entitled Thirteen, bought for him by his parents as he became a teenager. Young Tom had to fill in the blanks: name, age, "Who's your crush at school, that kind of thing. And one was: 'Where do you see yourself in 20 years?'"

Riley grins and shakes his head. "I'd written: 'I'd love to be a successful actor, but more than likely I'll still be in this town, maybe working in a shoe shop.' This incredibly pessimistic answer!"

Leaving school, he went to university in Birmingham to study English literature, "but then when I was there, I put everything into writing and producing a radio show, and joining the theatre company."

Inspired, approaching graduation Riley applied to various drama schools. He was accepted by a few, but then reality bit.

"My mum had to call round them and say, 'We can't afford these fees – is there anything we can do?' And it was only Lamda who told her about a scholarship from the Genesis Foundation. I auditioned, they chose me, and they paid for me to get through. I couldn't have done it without them."

HE'S WORKED STEADILY in the 13 years since leaving Lamda, on screen and stage, in the West End and on Broadway, but acknowledges that things are now stepping up a gear. Alongside Dark Heart, Riley has just directed his first short, Toll Road, written by a university friend. It's about an "eccentric little couple who have to deal with an aggressive adversary", was shot in an abandoned asylum in Pomona, California, and stars Caplan.

It sounds like a better experience than their only previous time working together on last year's BBC iPlayer cancer black comedy Ill Behaviour, which was written by Peep Show/Fresh Meat co-creator Sam Bain.

"The honest truth of it?" he begins, shifting in his seat either through discomfort or because of the baking LA sunshine streaming through the diner window. "It wasn't the best circumstances because, one: Lizzy was not used to working on a BBC show," he says with a knowing smile. "We were in Bristol, it was freezing and they hadn't heated the studio..."

"And two: I was playing a guy with cancer. I had to lose weight over the course of the series by just drinking juice, shave my head to the bone with a Bic razor every morning, and sit in a basement, so I was just hungry, grumpy and tired.

"But I did love the experience of working with her," he concludes, grinning again. "I just don't know if either of us were the best versions of ourselves on that job!"

Still, beats working in a shoe shop, right?

Strictly united

As the competition hots up and the pressure mounts, you need to lean on your partner, says RT columnist Dr Ranj Singh

I'M STARTING TO realise that dancing is about so much more than just doing the moves. Anyone can learn a routine and do a set of steps, but making it look like a show is a real skill. Perfecting it in a few days, ready to perform to an audience of more than ten million people... well, that's nothing short of bonkers.

The paso doble was my comeback dance after a less-than-amazing movie week that left the judges unimpressed. I came in on an elephant, for crying out loud, what more do they want! Well, a lot. They're looking at the concept, technique, timing, characterisation and showmanship. I fell short and it really lit a fire under me. I needed to prove I deserved to stay in.

BAD WEEK
But Seann and Katya bounced back

Fortunately, the paso is all about passion and power. Contrary to popular belief, it's not a dance about a matador and a bull – the woman is actually the cape. The dance is a dramatic demonstration of that relationship, and you have to take on a character... and a serious one at that. That's not something people expected from me – I'm usually the cheery, smiley, camp one. I'm not a trained actor, and have no stage experience at all. The only theatre I've really been involved in is the operating theatre! But it was a challenge I was ready to take on.

Surprisingly, I loved playing that role. I got to explore a darker, more serious and, dare I say it, sexy side of my character. Janette's cries of "Lead with your pelvis", "Laser eyes!" and "You're strong like a bull" definitely helped. It was the perfect dance to show Craig that we didn't deserve another four, and in the end he even cracked a smile! We also managed to get in a little more sign language as we came down the stairs at the beginning of the show. This time it was the words "Let's dance!", and dance we did! In one week, we went from third from bottom of the leaderboard back into the top five.

It was a good week for many of the other couples, too. Stacey and Kevin smashed it and got the top score. She's one of the celebrities who has really inspired me – her sheer tenacity and drive are amazing. She also has one of the best senses of humour.

SPeAKING OF COMEDY, Seann and Katya also did really well, and that was wonderful to see given the week they'd had in the press. But talk backstage wasn't about that. It was back to everyone doing their best, working hard for the show and supporting each other – and that's what Strictly is all about. Being on the biggest show in the country means being under an immense amount of pressure, and any faltering will be amplified massively. Being able to carry on and still deliver a great charleston wasn't easy, and they did a cracking job.

Sadly, saying goodbye to Katie was the low point of the week. I spoke to her just before the Saturday live show and she said how pleased she was to get to week four, given she wasn't a natural dancer. But she shouldn't just be pleased – she should be proud, and the rest of us were just as proud of her, too.

Thomas the Tank Engine is getting up to speed – with gender equality and world peace

GIRL POWER
African female engine
Nia can do anything
Thomas can do

THINK OF A rail franchise these days and it's unlikely to prompt a fond smile, with perhaps one exception: the Island of Sodor's North Western Railway. The island network, with its engines Thomas, Gordon and Percy, was created by the Rev Wilbert Awdry to entertain his son Christopher. Those stories were first published in 1945, and turned into an animated series in 1984, narrated by Ringo Starr.

A remarkable collaborator has since climbed on board – the United Nations. And with the world body's involvement has come, for the first time, a black and female engine. The ambition – and it sounds a grand one – is to introduce gender equality to the series and turn Thomas and his friends into a global force for good.

They have the blessing of the Rev Awdry's family: "We're delighted," says his granddaughter, Clare Chambers. "Grandpuff would be both stunned and thrilled by the impact on kids – how many little ones are still interested in steam trains. My children learnt their numbers and colours from the engines."

Thomas and co have been adopted by the UN as part of an education project to introduce pre-schoolers to its aim of building a sustainable world. Tolulope Lewis-Tamoka, the UN Women's Africa Programme Adviser, assisted with the storylines. "At the UN we often use language that is technical," she says. "Sitting around a table in a brainstorming session, I was wondering: how would we do leadership or economic empowerment in a kids' series?"

The breakthrough came with the creation of Nia, a new female Kenyan engine, to join international characters such as Ashima from India and Shane from Australia, who were introduced for an animated film in 2016.

"We wanted to move away from stereotypical ideas that girls can't do what boys can do or that Africa is one uniform continent," says Lewis-Tamoka. "Kenya has displaced populations and receives refugees as well."

"We see that Nia doesn't have a home, so she has to stay in Sodor, where Thomas works side by side with her to get jobs done. We're able to bring the idea of a refugee into the mind of a young person without calling them a refugee: someone who looks different to you might end up being your neighbour and very good friend."

Clare Chambers and her family acknowledge that even – or perhaps especially – beloved children's series must evolve. "We're always a bit possessive about Grandpuff's creation, but we understand the need to change things around a bit. Both genders have loved it, but if the gender-balanced steam team encourages more girls to maintain an interest, that's great. What we care about most is that the series continues to reach people."

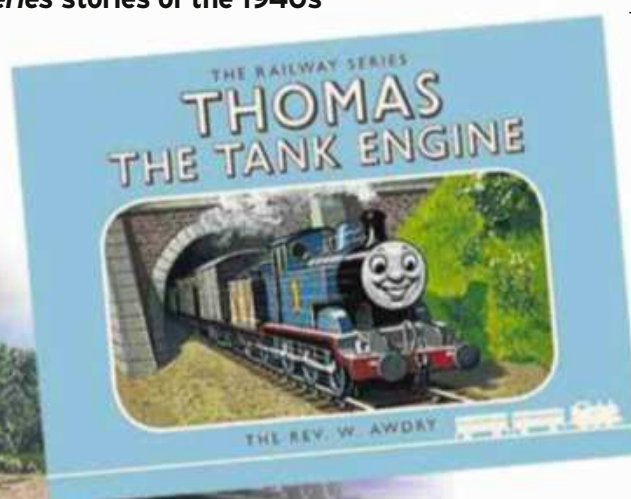

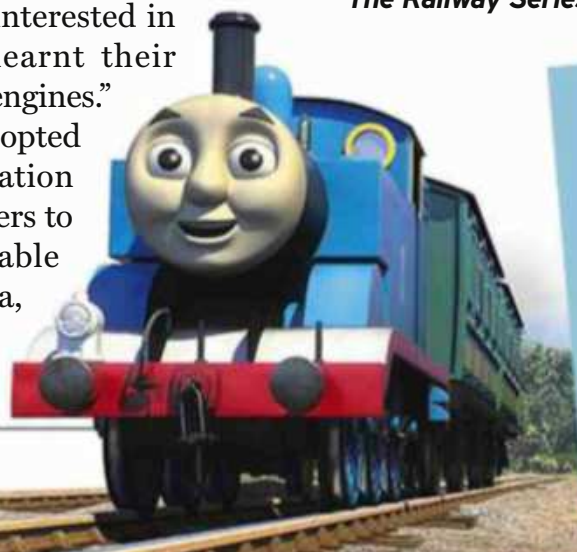

DOES IT SEEM odd to her that these cosy postwar fables are reaching out to the world? "When I've travelled I've found that people don't necessarily think Thomas is British," she says. "Sodor could be anywhere, and Thomas any nationality you want him to be."

The series will air in 33 languages across more than 110 countries, but Lewis-Tamoka's ambitions are only gathering steam. "The possibilities are endless," she says. "There are so many other issues to talk about, from violence against girls and boys to cyberbullying. The series could be an awesome platform for equal pay, girls' education... If they've done this, they can definitely do more."

ROMESH RANGANATHAN

Are you being served?

When Romesh Ranganathan's dad died seven years ago, he inherited his pub – and a great idea for a sitcom...

IN A WINDOWLESS cell in the central London offices of the publicist for his new TV show, Romesh Ranganathan and I are discussing beards. Specifically, their significance in The Reluctant Landlord, the stand-up's first sitcom.

Ranganathan's facial hair, as viewers of multiple panel shows (QI, Have I Got News for You) and travelogue series (Asian Provocateur, The Misadventures of Romesh Ranganathan) will know, is full and luxurious.

But in The Reluctant Landlord, his titular character is out-bearded by a rival publican. Ranganathan's hostelry is traditional and, shall we say, unfussy. His rival runs a gastropub, as telegraphed by the finely sculpted, would-be trendy fuzz lurking on his chin.

"He's just that dude who tries to pull off a look – let's call it hipster try-hard – and the beard is part of that," offers the cheerful 40-year-old, who's co-written and stars in the show. "It's a decision beard rather than a relaxed beard. My beard is just an ongoing effort to hide my face as much as possible.

"But I have just trimmed it – it was down here," he says, indicating a point not far north of his sternum. "When my wife and my mum start saying, 'You look unacceptable, like you've been found [in the street],' I have to take action."

The Reluctant Landlord is personal in other, more meaningful ways, too. Its creator plays a hip-hop-obsessed would-be DJ/producer called Romesh, grumpily running a pub in small-town Sussex, inherited from his recently deceased father. That, exactly, is the 40-year-old, Crawley-based father-of-three's own story.

"The show reflects the struggle my dad had when he was running his pub," says frustrated rapper Ranganathan, whose father died seven years ago. "He wanted to improve it, but he had resistance from the locals."

This comedy late bloomer gives the example of the period when he was trying to escape a job teaching secondary-school maths by getting into stand-up comedy. It was a move that eventually proved successful when Ranganathan was nominated for Best Newcomer at the 2013 Edinburgh Comedy Awards, kick-starting a rapid rise on stage, radio and TV.

"At the beginning, I was desperate for more stage time, so my dad said I could do it in his pub. I started running a monthly comedy night, and I would book really good headliners – but all the regulars are going: 'What the hell are you doing comedy for? I just want a quiet drink. I tell you what, if they're rubbish, I'll tell 'em!'" he relates, laughing.

"So my dad was constantly battling with his desire to improve the pub but also not upset the regulars. But my character doesn't want to improve the pub – he's essentially running it because, one, his wife thinks it'll be good for him, and two, it's his dad's pub, and his mum thinks it's a way of maintaining his dad's legacy."

THAT, HE ADDS, was his own mother's view: that he and his equally unqualified brother taking over the running of the Prince of Wales in East Grinstead, in the teeth of a nationwide crisis in the pub industry, "would be the right thing to do by Dad".

So, driving yourself mad and into debt: it's what he would have wanted...

"Exactly!" he laughs. "It's funny you say that because that's exactly how it turned out. The truth is, running a pub is a very personality-driven thing, and dad was very life and soul. ▷

◁ But, also, he just wasn't making any money. So when we took over, you no longer had Dad bringing in customers. People would keep drinking for a bit in solidarity with him... then they'd drift off elsewhere."

After months of the Ranganathans paying money "hand over fist to the brewery", his mum had an epiphany: "You know what? We'll remember Dad another way."

The pub trade's loss was situation comedy's gain. The Reluctant Landlord – already renewed by Sky for a second series – plays to Ranganathan's strengths as a comic who writes about what he knows.

The on-screen Romesh – who lives above the pub with his wife (Car Share's Sian Gibson), young son, record collection and turntables – describes himself as "nominally Hindu". Is that how this Brit of Sri Lankan parentage sees himself?

"I've had a Hindu upbringing. There's a lot about it I think is cool. Temples are amazing. It's a nice vibe when people are praying. And there's lots about it where I understand why they believe those things. But I'm not practising. My mum's very spiritual, and I think she just tells everyone that I'm spiritual, too."

RANGANATHAN'S MUM, SHANTHI, was one of the best things about Asian Provocateur, in which she sent him to Sri Lanka to learn about his heritage; in the second series she joined him on his travels, and stole every scene. "It's an odd duality being essentially an English dude, but then you have all this Hindu stuff in your life."

But his three young sons (aged eight, six and three) aren't yet as conflicted. "They know they're half Sri Lankan, but they think that we're all brown and my wife's white. They don't see themselves as a mix – they're just a lighter brown than Daddy. But they just don't see the cultural side of it. And that's what p*s off my mum."

'We decided to remember Dad another way'

"That's where Asian Provocateur came from," he adds of the globetrotting Bafta-nominated BBC series. "My mum said: 'You've got kids now, and they've no idea about their culture because you've no idea about your culture. Then what's going to happen when they have kids? It's gone, or it's on its way out.'"

Cue an enquiring, exploratory comedy career that has energetically roamed a long way from the usual Live at the Apollo/Mock the Week staples. Still, having filmed far and wide, made The Reluctant Landlord and, more recently, joined the

'You're funnier at everything else if you keep doing stand-up'

FROM STAGE TO SCREEN
Ranganathan performing in 2016; below, as the eponymous publican in his new sitcom; and bottom, with mum Shanthi line-up of Sky's long-running A League of Their Own, Ranganathan admits he's craving the loneliness of the single-mic spotlight.

"I've missed stand-up, I have to say," he nods, acknowledging plans for a nationwide tour next year. "It is the thing I enjoy the most. The thing is, you're funnier at everything else if you keep doing stand-up. That pressure of performing live really helps."

That aside, he's been working so hard this year that he's promised his family a quiet autumn – although he manages to forget to mention to me that he's just published an autobiography, Straight Outta Crawley: Memoirs of a Distinctly Average Human Being.

It all adds up to a broad-based appeal that draws in both parents and kids. Ranganathan is that skilled thing, a comic who's sharply hilarious enough to appeal to teenagers but also offers deadpan socio-cultural observations that resonate with older fans.

"It's not a conscious thing," he insists of his pan-generational appeal, "you just write what you like. When I talked to Sky about the sitcom, I just thought it was quite nice that it was in a pub, and you've got the family aspect as well. I think it would be dangerous to try to second-guess what people are looking for."

"I just write what I think is funny, or interesting, and hopefully everything else will take care of itself. There's no strategy to anything."

As strategies go, it's paying off quite nicely. From pulling pints to pulling in punters, I imagine that Ranganathan's dad would surely approve. CRAIG McLEAN

Defying gravity

The Brits are reaching great heights in world gymnastics

Monday–Friday 1.00pm BBC2

WHEN WE HUMANS wage war on gravity, we tend to come second. Usually it's a pretty straightforward victory – gravity first, humanity nowhere. But when it comes to gymnastics, it's a whole lot closer. Gymnastics is the sport that gives gravity a run for its money.

At one time British gymnasts were tied more closely to the earth than other nations, but slowly, bit by bit and with many hesitations and disappointments along the way, Britain is now among the elite. The Brits don't exactly see medals as a national right, but they are no longer utterly amazed when they get one.

‘We are no longer utterly amazed when we win a medal’

The World Championships take place in Doha, Qatar, this week. They will provide a great feast of flight and defiance of gravity and if all goes well, the British gymnasts will be in the thick of it. The sport is beginning to wind up for the Olympic Games, which take place in Tokyo in 2020. The British men's and women's teams could secure Olympic qualification if they finish in the top three, so the stakes are high.

The sport of artistic gymnastics offers ten different ways of attacking gravity: four in the women's events and six in the men's, with vault and floor common to both. Of them all, the pommel horse – a men's event – is the most baffling, the least spectacular and perhaps the hardest. Is that why British gymnasts have made something of a speciality of this piece? It's as if each gymnast tries to turn himself into a machine – like the movement of a Swiss watch, but perhaps a little more precise.

As you observe a routine, it seems that the legs of the gymnast and the substance of the horse are the unlike poles of a magnet, and so incapable of touching: the gymnast rotating as if buoyed up by this invisible and incomprehensible force. The greatest of these British masters of swivel and grip is Max Whitlock, who at 25 is at his peak – or maybe just past it.

He won gold on the pommel horse at the 2016 Olympics in Rio. He also won gold on the floor, and, perhaps a greater achievement, bronze in the all-around competition – that is to say, over all six pieces. He is one of those athletes who reminds you that gymnastics is not just about the creation of beauty: it's also about winning. He has the champion's knack of raising his level when the situation demands it.

This is a tough, difficult and dangerous sport, as Ellie Downie can tell you. She went to Rio with soaring hopes and landed on her head in qualifying. She carried on, but her results, 13th in the all-around, were not what she had come for. Earlier this year she had a second surgery on her ankle, and in a sport that requires you to spot your landings again and again, this is a challenging injury to recover from.

BUT SHE'S BACK and hoping to find her best – or perhaps something better – in Doha. She seems to have lived a sporting lifetime already, with highs like victory in the all-around in the European Championships in 2017, but she's still only 19.

We can look forward to a week-long feast of flying, with the subtleties of the pommel, the wild release-and-catch of the men's horizontal bar and the women's impossible somersaults on the beam. The Brits will be aiming to make their mark, the world will seek and find some great champions – and gravity itself can expect some serious challenges.

Ellie Downie, above, and Max Whitlock are two of Britain's title hopes

GETTY

IN A CENTRAL London hotel room, an American-Egyptian who can't sing to save his life explaining how he was the right man to play one of the all-time great British rock stars: Freddie Mercury.

"I identified with his story," begins Rami Malek, who won an Emmy for TV series Mr Robot and who now stars in the long-in-the-making Bohemian Rhapsody, the big-screen biopic of the flamboyant Queen frontman (in cinemas from Wednesday 24 October). He could see parallels between his own background and that of the son of empire, born Farrokh Bulsara in Zanzibar, Tanzania, to Indian parents.

The affable Malek – who drawls like Jack Nicholson and has Peter Lorre's bug-eyed intensity – recalls an early meeting with producer Graham King. The LA-based Londoner, who's overseen countless Hollywood projects in collaboration with the Scorseses and DiCaprios of this world, is the dauntless fixer who's shepherded Bohemian Rhapsody to the screen.

"One thing I would say to Graham is: this isn't the heart of the story, but let's look at Freddie's identity, and what makes this man," continues the 37-year-old. "Here's a guy with a Parsi background, born in Zanzibar, gets shipped off to Bombay for school. Then when he returns from school, the country is in the midst of a revolution, and his family flees to England. Farrokh Bulsara has to become Freddie Mercury, with an affected accent and everything, come hell or high water! That's a very unique upbringing."

'I'm not a singer, I'm not a dancer... but I do have a jawline'

Indeed, the backstory of Bohemian Rhapsody is as epic as the canonical prog-rock anthem that gives the film its title.

Malek, expressive and animated, spreads his hands in wonder. "So, my family: Coptic Christian, a minority among Muslims in Egypt, who went to Los Angeles seeking a better life. I don't know that either of our parents, Freddie's or mine, would have wanted us to get involved in this type of career," he grins. "But they just had a couple of kids who were hellbent on doing what they wanted.

"Yeah, I could identify with that majorly. So, I walked into Graham's office and said: 'Listen, I'm not a singer. I don't play piano. I'm not a dancer – I mean, I got rhythm, maybe. And I'm not British! But what I do have is a jawline. Hire me now!' he laughs.

In some regards, King had nothing to lose, given that he'd already seen numerous mooted lead actors come and go. Announcing the project in 2010, Queen guitarist Brian May said Sacha Baron Cohen would be playing Mercury. The comedian reportedly brought in first David Fincher (Gone Girl) then Tom Hooper (Les Misérables) to direct.

Three years later, after creative differences with the surviving members of the band, Cohen was out and Ben Wishaw was in, and so was actor-turned-director Dexter Fletcher. But by early 2016 those two had also abdicated the project. Cue a new script (by Theory of Everything writer Anthony McCarten, from an early draft by The Crown's Peter Morgan), a new director (X-Men supremo Bryan Singer) and a new Freddie: Malek.

Production finally got under way in the UK last year, only for Singer to leave the project two-thirds of the way into filming. Enter, again, Dexter Fletcher, to finish shooting.

What, then, could possibly go right with a film about a hugely loved British What's in a name?

If you ever wondered why Hollywood studios form such an unseemly scrum in the prelude to awards season, consider the film with the ungainliest name amid last year's bun-fight. Three Billboards outside Ebbing, Missouri was very much an outlier, from diffident London-Irish playwright/screenwriter/director Martin McDonagh. It broke three rules straight out of the trap with its five-word title containing an obscure, made-up place name and a comma. It also happened to be quite brilliant, a barnstormingly confident tale of grief, defiance and vengeance that was viscerally violent, blackly comic and unrelentingly dour, and expected us to empathise with an unreconstructed, flyover-state racist.

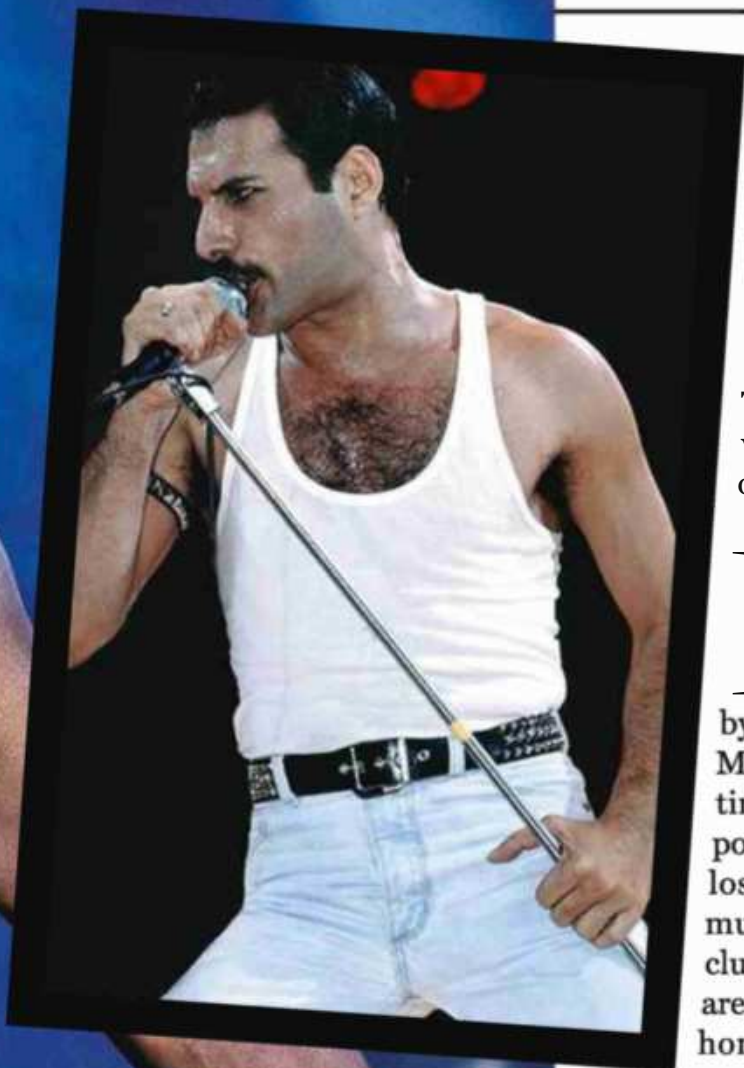

However, by gaining interest at all the right festivals, building word-of-mouth and staging a limited cinema release in November, its producers allowed it to build its own head of steam. In North America it came in fourth in its limited first week of release, which was fine; it marked the Film4 co-production out as the connoisseur's choice as it loitered in the box-office top ten and made enough to cover its modest production budget of $15 million. Once the awards nominations started trickling in, income snowballed – its four Golden Globe wins triggered a 226 per cent bounce. Come the Oscars in March, it was unstoppable, winning best actress for Frances McDormand, her second, and best supporting actor for Sam Rockwell, who used all his skills to create a vicious, booze-addled, straight-up white supremacist cop who defied expectation.

Draged into the righteous McDormand's billboard campaign to embarrass law enforcement into properly investigating the rape and murder of her daughter, Rockwell shows his basest instincts. He's not even articulate in his bigotry ("My mamma is against persons-of-colour-torturing"), which makes his fate all the more interesting.

McDormand accepted her gong with the two-word phrase "inclusion rider", a clause in contracts that ensures gender and racial equality. And a fitting finale.

MALEK AS MERCURY

The film re-creates Queen's Live Aid performance in 1985, above rock legend with a complicated private life and remote emotional hinterland, whose legacy is fiercely controlled by his bandmates?

Remarkably, lots, even if the refusal of May and drummer Roger Taylor to support the film's release with press interviews sends the opposite signals.

BOHEMIAN RHAPSODY IS a rollickingly entertaining film about a rollickingly entertaining band fronted by a magnetically compelling singer. Malek, prosthetic teeth working overtime, is brilliant at walking, talking, pouting and strutting – not to mention losing the plot – like Mercury. The musical portions are excellent, from club shows to Top of the Pops to global arenas, the actors and the performances honed by movement coaches, "hand doubles" for the guitarists and the vocals of Marc Martel, a Canadian singer who's an uncanny soundalike for Mercury.

Yes, Bohemian Rhapsody begins and ends with Queen's legendary performance at Live Aid in 1985, so it doesn't dwell on Mercury's decline and death, in 1991, at the age of 45, of Aids-related illness. But his drug and alcohol abuse, homosexuality and promiscuity, while not foregrounded, are certainly not airbrushed from the story. What could have been a sanitised karaoke jukebox musical, well, just isn't. "He's a very, very naughty boy at times," says Malek. "And you'd be doing a disservice to him if you didn't portray that. But I don't think we're saying: 'Here's our debauchery documentary.'"

The Live Aid performance was faithfully re-created, right down to the stadium itself (albeit tricked out with CGI), at Bovington Airfield in Hertfordshire. No spine should go untingled as you watch Malek lead the watching "thousands" in Radio Ga Ga. "Look," he says, "those guys were one of the only bands on that day, one, to rehearse, multiple times, and two, as Brian May said, 'Play the hits, stupid.' They knew how to play to a stadium. And Freddie could find anyone in the audience – I felt he could really see all the way to the back and lock eyes with them."

Bohemian Rhapsody, then: an audacious and bonkers song begets, 43 years later, a bonkers production of an audacious biopic. And both, improbably and against the odds, are hits. The ever-fabulous Freddie, wherever he is, should be laughing his teeth off. CRAIG McLEAN

FILM OF THE DAY

Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 ★★★★★ 6.20-8.35pm ITV 12

FANTASY After ten years, four directors, four composers, two screenwriters and 12 Oscar nominations, the eight Harry Potters had created 1,179 minutes of screen magic, taking a truly spellbinding $7.7 billion at the box office. It rather goes without saying that the casual bystander should not attempt to pick up the series here. To fully appreciate its existential majesty and emotional portent (there's a long-awaited kiss) you need context. (Heaven help you if you need Horcruxes explaining at this late stage.) Suitably buoyed by JK Rowling's intricate backstory, director David Yates's CGI-heavy realisation of the novel's titanic clash will both thrill and, yes, move you. Part 1 left Harry, Hermione and Ron on a chilly beach, all sad. Part 2 opens with Voldemort making the Warner Bros logo appear in the sky. Cue: an apocalyptic maelstrom of duels and revelations about the boy wizard's past. Totally satisfying all round. (UK/US 2011, may be edited for language, violence, HD) apocalyptic novel, but it means death, too, when hordes of zombies literally rain from the sky. Brad Pitt plays the former UN troubleshooter who must scour the globe to find a cure for the pandemic that's turning the population into the undead. Pitt oozes (a bit too much) serenity in the face of numerous deadly encounters, particularly as the safety of his family depends on his return. Zombie flicks are ten-a-penny, so it's hard to stand out from the putrid pack. Nevertheless, there are jump-out-of-your-skin moments and the epic dimension of the tale (including ghoulish masses scaling the walled city of Jerusalem like ants) is jaw-dropping. JA (US/Malta 2013, violence, some swearing, HD)

Bram Stoker's Dracula **★★★★
10.00pm-12.35am Drama 18

HORROR Eerie, romantic and operatic, this exquisitely mounted revamp of the undead legend is a supreme artistic achievement. Francis Ford Coppola's film is grandiose in visual approach and uses every cinematic trick – from the basic atmospheric lighting of the silent era to today's more sophisticated techniques – to accentuate the poetic sensuality of Bram Stoker's novel rather than the more exploitative bloodsucking elements. As the tired count who has overdosed on immortality, Gary Oldman's towering performance holds centre stage and burns itself into the memory. AJ (US 1992, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity)

Carrie ★★★ 10.30pm-12.25am C5 15

HORROR Director Kimberly Peirce claimed her adaptation of Stephen King's book would go back to the basics of the novel, but this pale imitation is more of a homage to Brian De Palma's 1976 horror classic. The core scary fairy tale remains – teenage Carrie (Chloë Grace Moretz) is picked on by classmates until she unleashes telekinetic revenge – except there's a prologue to ramp up the tortured religious conflict of her mother (Julianne Moore), updated social media frills (Carrie's shower humiliation is put on YouTube), silly visual nods to The Exorcist and excessive comeuppance for her persecutors. The performances are fine, just not in the class of iconic Sissy Spacek. AJ (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

The Mortal Instruments: City of Bones ★★★ 11.35pm-1.45am BST C4 12

FANTASY Covering familiar Twilight territory, this sprawling action tale is packed with supernatural creatures, humour that blunts its more horrific edges and leather-clad actors from goth-lite central casting. The plot-heavy story boils down to Brooklyn teen Lily Collins learning she's a powerful Shadowhunter, part of a secret society veiled from reality by magic and tasked with protecting humanity from demonic forces. Director Harald Zwart keeps things interesting among the impressive CGI swirls of werewolves, vampires and runic spells. AJ (US/Ger 2013, some violence, HD)

Cosmopolis **★★
12.35am BST-1.15am GMT BBC2 15

DRAMA Don DeLillo's novel dissecting the American Dream comes to the screen in a highbrow intellectual exercise, too faithfully adapted by director David Cronenberg. Robert Pattinson plays the financial whizzkid who must watch his empire crumble over the course of one day, finding distraction in various sexual encounters. Most of the drama happens in the back of a cruising limousine, with each interaction highlighting a "universal truth" about today's computer society. It's a good-looking film, but the immersion in the psychosis of cyber-capitalism soon becomes boring. AJ (Fr/Can/Por/It 2012, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

THRILLER Alec Guinness brings the sermonising sleuth to vigorous life in this enjoyable yarn from Kind Hearts and Coronets director Robert Hamer. Fans of GK Chesterton's stories may be aggrieved by the shift of period (from Edwardian to contemporary Britain) and the reduction in religious undertones, but Peter Finch is a languidly villainous Flambeau and Joan Greenwood a huskily seductive Lady Warren. DP (UK 1954, BW)

Transformers: Dark of the Moon ★★★★ 7.00-10.00pm C4 12

SCI-FI It's far too long and Megan Fox substitute Rosie Huntington-Whiteley sucks the life from every scene – but on the awesome-spectacle front, director Michael Bay raises the action bar to a completely new level. The story opens by recounting how the 1960s space race was initiated in response to an alien vessel landing on the Moon, and how that proves to be all part of an elaborate Decepticon plan to enslave humankind. Naturally, it's left to Shia LaBeouf and the Autobots to save the world again. From the creepy Apollo 11 lunar restaging to an astonishing sequence in a tipping skyscraper, Bay overwhelms the senses with the technically sublime mother of all battle sequences lasting 60 minutes. AJ (US 2011, edited for language, violence, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Deepwater Horizon ★★★★★

DISASTER MOVIE Atoning, perhaps, for Battleship, director Peter Berg has turned his knack for wobbly social-realism – as seen in the film-to-TV success of Friday Night Lights – to a trio of true-life disasters: Lone Survivor, based on an actual military misadventure in Afghanistan; Patriots Day, re-creating the Boston marathon bomb; and Deepwater Horizon, a sort of Towering Inferno in the Gulf of Mexico. The other factor that links these films is Mark Wahlberg... a more relateable Dwayne Johnson. The villain – as so often in disaster movies – is capitalism itself. John Malkovich's slippery BP manager puts profit before safety and a blowout results, leaving Wahlberg, Kurt Russell and other working-class heroes to minimise the body count, while wives and kids fret in a hotel. An explicit memorial to those who died, its coda reveals the extent of the oil-spill devastation (210 million gallons gushed into the ocean) and reminds us that no one was prosecuted, leaving a bitter aftertaste. (US 2016, violence, some swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

An oil rig was built just for the film in Chalmette, Louisiana. Berg has claimed it was one of the biggest practical sets ever built matching of voices to visuals. Hermione Baddeley is the aristo-owner of elegant feline Duchess (Eva Gabor) who, with her three kittens, is befriended by Phil Harris's alley cat after the butler (Roddy Maude-Roxby) has tried to do away with them because the old lady has left everything to the cats in her will. The Sherman brothers' songs are out of the top drawer and Wolfgang Reitherman proves that his direction of The Jungle Book was no fluke. TH (US 1970, HD)

The Princess Bride ★★★★★

6.55-9.00pm Film4 PG

FANTASY Rob Reiner has always been careful to avoid typecasting as a director, so following the warm nostalgia of Stand by Me he opted for this curious but ultimately charming fable. The film opens with Peter Falk reading the story to grandson Fred Savage (from TV's The Wonder Years), and this ironic distancing continues throughout the movie. Although the requisite monsters, giants and swordfights are present and correct for the children, Reiner also ensures there are plenty of quiet chuckles for adults. That's largely thanks to the efforts of an eclectic cast, which includes Mandy Patinkin, Wallace Shawn, Billy Crystal, This Is Spinal Tap's Christopher Guest, Mel Smith and Peter Cook. An unexpected delight for all the family. JF (US 1987, some violence, HD)

"Crocodile" Dundee ★★★★★

7.00-9.00pm E4 15

COMEDY This is the first, and best, of the tales about the Australian outback's living legend, who can wrestle crocodiles with his bare hands and subdue ladies with his naked charisma. Paul Hogan took his lager-commercial he-man into the big time with this New York-set "fish-out-of-water" tale, and the result is as agreeable as if it were Tarzan himself coping in the concrete jungle. Director Peter Faiman's languid pace gives us time to appreciate this particular Wizard from Oz as he survives sophisticates' taunts and outwits the Big Apple's street villains. The sequel is on Tuesday. TH (Aus/US 1986, edited for language, violence, HD)

LATE NIGHT

The Ring ★★★

11.00pm-12.45am BBC2 15

HORROR The words "Hollywood remake" may fill foreign film fans with dread but this version of Hideo Nakata's Japanese classic is a surprisingly good effort that retains much of the unnerving, creepy atmosphere of the 1997 original. An unlabelled videotape is in circulation, bringing death after seven days to anyone who watches it. One of its victims is the niece of journalist Naomi Watts, who decides to uncover the source of the tape and find out whether this "curse" is real, a quest that's given added urgency after she views the video herself. There are a couple of inventive additions – a horse going berserk on a car ferry is a brilliantly surreal innovation – and although the spine-chilling terror of the superior original is muted by the overuse of CGI, this is still a worthy substitute. AS (US/Jpn 2002, violence, swearing, HD)

Little Men ★★★★★

1.15-2.45am C4 PG

DRAMA Booming property prices drive this indie drama from director Ira Sachs. When jobbing actor Greg Kinnear moves his family into his late father's apartment in Brooklyn, he also becomes landlord of the ground floor retail unit occupied by a Chilean dressmaker (Paulina García). Her gregarious teenage son (Michael Barbieri) soon strikes up an unlikely friendship with Kinnear's boy, an arty outsider (Theo Taplitz), yet souring negotiations over a new lease causes the lads to take common cause against their bickering parents. What sounds like a small-scale affair is actually filled with insights about the economic pressures that divide households and how the world-weary attitudes of older generations impinge on their children's crucial formative years. Thoughtful and affecting, this is quality film-making. TJ (Gr/US 2016, some violence, swearing, HD)

FANTASY How did charlatan magician Oscar Diggs end up as the Wizard in the Land of Oz? And what caused the Wicked Witch of the West to become so evil? All that and more is skilfully answered in director Sam Raimi's vibrantly colourful flight of fairy-tale fantasy. Following the established yellow brick road pattern, it sees the engaging James Franco whisked from Kansas to Oz by tornado (a particular highlight), where he gains some unusual travelling companions (a flying monkey and china girl). The film tries hard to be an original adventure as well as paying tribute to The Wizard of Oz, but it lacks the emotional resonance of the 1939 classic. It's good-looking and fun to watch, but it's certainly no Wicked. AJ (US 2013, col/BW, HD)

COMEDY HORROR This spooky adventure based on RL Stine's popular series of children's books stars Dylan Minnette as city boy Zach, whose relocation to a small town brings him down, that is until he falls for Hannah (Odeya Rush), who lives next door with her overprotective father (Jack Black). However, when Zach's curiosity about her dad's mysterious bookcase gets the better of him, all manner of deadly monsters such as a vengeful ventriloquist's dummy (voiced by Black), a mob of homicidal lawn gnomes, an abominable snowman and a giant mantis burst forth and overrun the town. None is particularly scary, but the film is pleasantly enjoyable, combining likeable characters with knowing gags and lively set pieces. Maverick ★★★
9.00-11.30pm Paramount Network PG

WESTERN All the best westerns have a comedic touch – usually someone toothless falling into a water trough. However, this one's written by William Goldman, who scripted Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, and it peeps above many costumed larks from the dead zone of Hollywood's mid-1990s. Mel Gibson stars as gambler Bret Maverick, while James Garner, who played him in the original hit TV series, is generously cast as a marshal for old times' sake. Like all gambling yarns, the poker revolves around a sting, but it plays out like a sports movie when the big tournament kicks off on a riverboat. Though Jodie Foster is miscast, it's handsome enough in the safe hands of director Richard Donner. (US 1994, violence, edited for language)

THRILLER South African film-maker Gavin Hood confronts the hot topic of drone strikes in a manner that's fittingly clear-eyed. Helen Mirren's steely colonel is the remote commander of a joint UK/US mission aiming to capture key terror targets. However, as the situation evolves, a military strike becomes inevitable. Screenwriter Guy Hibbert considers the legal restrictions, political implications, tactical arguments and moral quandaries relating to remote warfare and fashions them into a narrative of nail-biting suspense. And there's humour from Alan Rickman, in his final on-screen role, as a general-cum-exasperated intermediary. EAS (UK 2015, violence, swearing, HD) Rickman's final bow, p80

The Italian Job ★★★

THRILLER Taking this intrinsically British caper movie to Hollywood sounds like car-crash cinema in the worst possible sense. Yet, with a cast that glistens just as brightly, F Gary Gray's direction and a script that's smarter than it first appears, this is just as enjoyable a ride. Mark Wahlberg carries plenty of easy-going charm in the Michael Caine role, heading a criminal gang that's revved up for revenge after an associate double-crosses them. JC (US 2003, violence, swearing, HD)

Pet ★★★
11.05pm-12.55am Film4 18

THRILLER In this intriguing psychodrama, Dominic Monaghan plays awkward nobody Seth, whose chance encounter with an old acquaintance (Ksenia Solo) swiftly moves from stalking to abduction and incarceration in a DIY prison located in the bowels of the dog pound where he works. This taut chiller is firmly in the mould, if not the class, of William Wyler's The Collector, in which a battle of wills between captor and captive takes centre stage. However, by the time Seth realises he may have bitten off more than he can chew, their power game has taken a grisly turn. JA (US/Sp 2016, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

DOCUMENTARY As history is usually written by male victors, the "female Lawrence of Arabia" has largely been airbrushed out of the record of Britain's attempts to create an Arab state in the Middle East in the aftermath of the Great War. First-time directors Sabin Krayenbühl and Zeva Oelbaum spent years amassing archive footage in a bid to do justice to the legacy of Gertrude Bell. As an Oxford-educated explorer, cartographer, archaeologist and political attaché, her correspondence is fascinating, and is thoughtfully read by Tilda Swinton in an enlightening overview of the origins of Iraq. DP (US/UK/Fr 2016, BW/col, HD)

DRAMA Overlapping stories of ordinary folk excluded from China's economic transformation build to a blood-splattered portrait of a nation from director Jia Zhang Ke, acclaimed for films tracing his homeland's recent social changes. Here Jia turns up the heat, unleashing gunfire and violent psychosis in four micro-dramas drawn from newspaper stories. A sort of daisy-chain structure holds the disparate elements together, and the cumulative effect is a fierce, angry statement about modern China that, unsurprisingly, fell foul of the authorities. TJ (Chi 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

COMEDY The creators of Napoleon Dynamite here team up with Jack Black for another endearing slice of comic eccentricity. Ignacio (Black) is an orphan who has been raised by friars at a Mexican monastery, but leads a double life as the masked wrestler Nacho to raise cash for his monastery orphans and (hopefully) impress a lovely nun. Black, with his stretchy outfits, insane fighting flair and outrageous accent, makes a sweetly goofy underdog in this Rocky in multi-coloured spandex. Alan Jones (US/Ger 2006, violence, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Witch ★★★★★
9.00-10.50pm Film4 15

HORROR Horror films about paganism, fertility and witchcraft are in vogue, with Gareth Evans's gruesome frightener Apostle recently added to Netflix, and backpackers getting spooked in the woods in The Ritual, available on Amazon Prime. But all must bow down before tonight's Film4 Halloween presentation The Witch, a 2015 breakout for debuting American director Robert Eggers, in which British thespians Kate Dickie and Ralph Ineson (Finchy from The Office), plus mesmerising newcomer Anya Taylor-Joy, play a cursed family of English Puritans in 1630s New England. A mysterious red-cloaked figure, a disappearing baby, a talking goat and failed crops conspire to turn this optimistic act of resettlement into something very unsettling indeed. It's scary, and the ending will blow you away. (US/UK/Can/Bra 2015, violence, nudity, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Charlie the goat rammed Ineson in the chest, dislodging ribs: "Everything hurt – I spent the rest of the shoot on painkillers."

Unearthly Stranger ★★★
6.20-8.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

SCI-FI This underrated British chiller is from the same school of cinematic paranoia as Invasion of the Body Snatchers. John Neville stars as a scientist working on a secret space project who discovers his wife (Gabriella Licudi) is an alien – after all, she does sleep with her eyes open and lift hot dishes out of the oven with her bare hands! John Krish directs with the kind of pace and imagination that's sadly lacking in so many of today's blockbusters, and the film includes the unforgettable image of Licudi's tears burning marks down her face like acid. RS (UK 1963)

Saw ★★★★★ 9.00-11.10pm ITV4 18

HORROR It was perhaps inevitable that this unsettling debut from director James Wan would be compared with Se7en. Not only do they share similarly skewed serial-killing themes, but their style, tension and sheer viciousness put them in the same genre pigeonhole. Told from the point of view of the victims, this well-acted chiller questions how far an individual will go to stay alive. Leigh Whannell (who also wrote the script) and Cary Elwes become the latest playthings of a game-obsessed psycho, finding themselves chained to opposite walls in a subterranean bathroom, with no memory of how they got there. However, just when you think you've got it sussed, the movie throws in audacious twists. SF (US 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

Halloween H20: 20 Years Later ★★★ 10.00pm-11.45pm W 18

HORROR John Carpenter's classic 1978 chiller gets a 1990s makeover, although in the hands of director Steve Miner the emphasis here is still firmly on frights rather than in-jokes. Jamie Lee Curtis, back in the role that made her name, is now a recovering alcoholic and head of an exclusive boarding school. The problem is her seemingly indestructible brother is keen to celebrate the 20th anniversary of his original massacre. The older and wiser Curtis steals the show, but the direction lacks Carpenter's assured touch. JF (US 1998, violence, swearing)

Scream ★★★★★
10.35pm-12.50am Dave 18

HORROR Director Wes Craven's intelligent reinvention of the slasher genre sees a maniac on the loose in a small suburban town, murdering anyone who gets horror trivia questions wrong. Gleefully exploring the relationship between gore movies and their core audience, this terrific shocker exposes the genre's knee-jerk devices, while still offering gasps galore. Kevin Williamson's elaborate script subversively keeps things scary even when the sinister events are at their funniest, and pays clever homage to such key titles as Halloween and Friday the 13th. AJ (US 1996, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

12 Years a Slave ★★★★★

10.45pm-1.30am Film4 15

DRAMA There have been few films about slavery told from the point of view of the oppressed, but Steve McQueen's film helps correct the imbalance. Chiwetel Ejiofor gives a fine, Bafta-winning performance as the freeborn man kidnapped and sold into bondage. Leslie Felperin (US 2013, violence, racist language, sex scenes, nudity, HD) Lupita's progress, p110

Pale Rider ★★★

9.00-11.25pm ITV4 15

WESTERN This handsome-looking western, virtually a reworking of Shane by way of High Plains Drifter, is one of director/star Clint Eastwood's more sombre offerings. He plays the enigmatic "Preacher", who comes to the aid of a small group of prospectors under threat from a nefarious strip-mining company. We are in classic "man with no name" territory here, only with added religious symbolism, but it all takes itself a bit too seriously. TS (US 1985, violence, swearing, HD)

The Yards ★★★

9.00-11.15pm AMC (Sky 192, BT 332) 15

CRIME New York's mass transit train yards provide the backdrop for this brooding tale of murder and union corruption. The cast includes Mark Wahlberg as a newly sprung con, Joaquin Phoenix as his hair-trigger buddy and James Caan as his grafting uncle. But director James Gray wastes what could have been the film's greatest asset – the atmospheric marshalling yards, with their sparks, smoke and snaking rails. The end result is a tough, workmanlike drama, but it lacks pace and personality. DP (US 2000, violence, swearing, brief nudity)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Charade ★★★★★

11.40am-2.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

THRILLER Perhaps the most Hitchcockian non-Hitchcock thriller of all time, Charade casts Cary Grant – star of North by Northwest and three others for Hitch – as a stranger on a ski slope dragged into the life of Audrey Hepburn's glamorous translator after a mysterious murder. The action moves to Paris, multiple passports are found, the CIA gets involved, the war is invoked (via gold stolen by the French Resistance) and James Coburn, George Kennedy and Ned Glass are the henchmen in waiting. It's effectively one long chase soundtracked by Henry Mancini's funky bongo-driven score, with director Stanley Donen – a nifty choreographer of action as well as dancing – keeping it all jangling along. I shall never forget the beautifully caricatured comic-book spoof of Charade in Mad magazine. The final frame showed Hitchcock tearing off a Donen mask: it was him all along. (US 1963) See Imagine... Cary Grant choice, p83

DID YOU KNOW?

Cary Grant's character Peter Joshua was named after the two sons Stanley Donen had with his second wife, Marion Marshall

Hotel Transylvania 2 ★★★

4.30-6.30pm CITV U

COMEDY This animated sequel re-joins Count Dracula (Adam Sandler) as he desperately tries to prove his new, half-human grandson is a vampire at heart. Aside from a vague message about parenthood, the film is an excuse for some more impressive animation and a whole lot of slapstick. The story moves at breakneck speed, and it doesn't particularly matter where "Drac" and his buddies are going, as long as it's funny. Hotel Transylvania 3: a Monster Vacation arrives on DVD in December. JL (US 2015)

Pirates of the Caribbean: the Curse of the Black Pearl ★★★★★

8.00-11.00pm Comedy Central 12

ADVENTURE Based on one of Disney's most famous theme-park attractions, this movie spawned a franchise with worldwide box-office takings in excess of $4.5 billion. Orlando Bloom plays the blacksmith and Keira Knightley the governor's daughter who fall foul of buccaneers. Geoffrey Rush milks his role to the hilt as an archetypal pirate captain, but the real treasure comes courtesy of Johnny Depp as the swaggering, slurring, mascara-wearing Jack Sparrow. Complementing the action are some superb special effects, with the skeletal curse of the Black Pearl's crew under moonlight a particularly well-staged showpiece. JC (US 2003, edited for violence, language, HD)

Cell ★★★ 9.00-10.55pm Film4 15

HORROR Based on the Stephen King novel, Cell starts out like a different sort of zombie movie, with its mindless mayhem triggered not by the usual global pandemic, but by a mysterious cellphone signal. John Cusack's graphic novelist is caught up in the mayhem as he tries to get to his family with the help of train operator Samuel L Jackson. During a duller, more difficult second half, it's easy not to care. There's nothing wrong with a film that makes your brain hurt a bit, but Cell is maybe a touch too enigmatic for its own good at times. DA (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

Fast & Furious 6 ★★

9.00-11.35pm E4 12

ACTION Franchise fatigue is beginning to show in this entry in the street-racing series. This time, the cars and cast are transported to a traffic-free London for more tyre-squealing action. Ex-con Vin Diesel and ex-cop and new father Paul Walker are tempted to bring their gang out of retirement for "one last job" when Dwayne Johnson's federal agent promises them a pardon. Between the deafening set pieces (a highlight being a preposterously inventive tank chase on a Spanish motorway), the larky pit-stop banter falls clangingly flat, while Luke Evans's baddie lacks the requisite boohiss villainy. AC (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

Ghost ★★★

9.00-11.30pm Universal 15

ROMANCE This mix of the sentimental and the supernatural reaps higher rewards than Patrick Swayze's acting ability deserves. He plays the murdered banker trying to warn girlfriend Demi Moore she's in mortal danger via psychic Whoopi Goldberg, who provides the comic moments so necessary to lighten the potentially maudlin atmosphere. The special effects are a real treat, the love-beyond-the-grave theme is very touching and the ending is a wonderful piece of schmaltz. Who says sweetness and light were, erm, dead? TH (US 1990, violence, swearing)

Panic Room ★★★

10.00pm-12.20am SSTAR 15

THRILLER David Fincher's visually ambitious if overly fidgety follow-up to Fight Club exploits modern society's home-security paranoia. A bunker-like safe room becomes a source of escalating horror for a mother (Jodie Foster) and daughter (a pre-Twilight young Kristen Stewart) when they become trapped by thieves in their New York brownstone. Though the plot is formulaic, it's ruthlessly executed, with the tension building to claustrophobic levels. Foster is particularly fine as the gutsy heroine, while Forest Whitaker gives a poignant performance as one of the intruders. SF (US 2002, violence, swearing)

Swimming with Men ★★★

From 26 Oct Sky Store and Virgin Movies (also available to download)

COMEDY DRAMA The Full Monty in Speedos? Not exactly. But director Oliver Parker's agreeable film explores enough of the same territory to be acknowledged in similar feel-good terms, albeit in a far lighter way.

Suffering from a self-made midlife crisis, bored number-cruncher Eric (Rob Brydon) joins an all-male, amateur synchronised swimming team and rediscovers his romantic mojo through the value of group therapy. Whipped into shape by swim instructor Susan (Charlotte Riley), the ragtag bunch head to Rome to take part in an unofficial world championship.

While Brydon's navel-gazing does feel slightly bogus, Aschlin Ditta's smart and nuanced script is wonderfully performed by a fine ensemble of British stalwarts: bereaved Jim Carter, wide boy Daniel Mays, lothario Rupert Graves and rogue Thomas Turgoose. Alan Jones (UK/Swe/Bel 2018, swearing, sexual references, HD)

PICK OF THE REST

15

From Monday Virgin Movies/iTunes

DOCUMENTARY Kevin Macdonald's film about Whitney Houston was made with the full co-operation of the late singer's family. And while those who were close to her offer enlightening contributions, with the tragedy of her decline and death inescapable, some darker aspects are swept under the carpet in favour of glorification. Ultimately, this feels a rather sanitised portrait. TS (UK/US 2018, swearing, drug references, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

Sicario 2: Soldado ★★★ 15 29 Oct on DVD, Blu-ray, 4K UHD, download

Following 2015's acclaimed thriller, this second instalment finds ruthless government agent Josh Brolin and his freelance sidekick Benicio Del Toro once again battling drug cartels along the US-Mexican border. However, the focus has switched from cocaine to people trafficking, with crime lords using their crossing routes to help ferry terrorists into America, as a plot is hatched to start an internal war by kidnapping a kingpin's teenage daughter. Director Stefano Sollima delivers as gripping a story as the first film, with violent set pieces that are more audacious, making this a thought-provoking chapter of a high-octane saga that looks set to run and run. Terry Staunton RT Offer To order the DVD for £14.99, call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply), quoting reference RT1671. A man out of time

Dark Heart's DI belongs in a museum, says Alison Graham

I WATCHED DARK HEART in 2016 when it first went out on that anomalous, now-defunct channel Encore, where ITV put dramas it wasn't sure what to do with (Harlots, The Frankenstein Chronicles).

But the "pilot" has been taken out of the cupboard, dusted, cut in half and turned into two opening episodes (Wednesday and Thursday ITV) before two brand-new stories from Unforgotten's Chris Lang, based on maverick cop Will Wagstaffe (Tom Riley). And boy, is it a museum piece.

Those two years might as well have been a century. I didn't realise how much has changed until I watched the first story again. Particularly when it comes to women characters and their relationship to male protagonists with ragged holes in their souls. Time, and women, have moved on.

These first two (old) episodes really are all about the man at its centre (it will be very interesting to see how the new stories pan out later in the series). Wagstaffe is the kind of male cop you don't see any more, the one who wears a personal, terrible pain like a high-vis jacket.

'He's the kind of male cop who wears pain like a high-vis jacket'

But lordy, just look at the female characters, ciphers who exist solely and exclusively to drive Will Wagstaffe (who is brilliant and intuitive, of course) through the story. They have no lives of their own, they breathe plot-oxygen only when they are by his side. So, he has an ex-girlfriend (Miranda Raison) with whom he gets in touch for a quickie solely to make him feel better about himself. She must hug Will post-coitally as he stares empty-eyed into the abyss. "I hardly even know my own name at the moment," he moans. Oh, get lost. We never learn anything of her life. I don't even know what her job is, though clearly it pays enough for a lovely flat.

Will has a sister (played by the superb Charlotte Riley, also wasted here) who is used as a physical punchbag by her boyfriend and as an emotional punchbag by her brother, who anoints himself her protector. She has no direction or agency of her own. Will also has the nerve to have a go at her because he doesn't think she feels the pain of their parents' deaths as keenly as he does. What a git.

SECONDARY CHARACTER
Sylvie (Miranda Raison) has little to do except prop up Will (Tom Riley)

WAGSTAFFE HAS A female sidekick who wordlessly adores him. Just look at her, gazing at him with mute love. She is there not just to shine with joy whenever he walks into the room, but also to be the woman who must be the buzzkill, who must rein in his wayward genius. Because that's what women do, isn't it? She even says, "Woah there!" when he gets all amazing and goes off on a maverick tangent.

(She's played by Anjali Mohindra, who was so terrifying as that ultimate perversion of female empowerment, Nadia, the would-be suicide bomber in Bodyguard.)

My, my, in those two short years how times have changed for women characters in dramas (think of Lang's brilliant Unforgotten, with Nicola Walker being the calm and un-mavericky boss) that have had to run to catch up with a real world where women are fighting back with new purpose against prejudice and inequality.

I respect Chris Lang hugely, a writer with a finely tuned ear who can pick out the notes being played in this new movement. So I hope the rest of Dark Heart sounds like the world as it is now, not as it was then.

GOING ONCE, GOING TWICE...

Oh, so there will be no more series of Flog It!, the BBC's cheerful daytime show where people try to make a few bob at auction from stuff they can't stand. It's hardly cataclysmic news; there must be thousands of episodes out there that live on via endless repeats on satellite channels.

But still, it feels like a bit of a shame. Flog It! is one of those delightfully British, well-mannered shows that offends no one and its host, Paul Martin (above), is the epitome of good grace and kindness. And at least it isn't a flipping quiz show. We have more than enough of those, surely?

1 NEW EPISODES Great News Netflix

A second and sadly, final series of the light but sharp sitcom set in a TV newsroom. The way the show's silly exterior hides a lot of brilliant jokes and naughty references tells you Tina Fey is involved: now, the executive producer arrives on screen as new station boss Diana, joining a strong ensemble led by Nicole Richie (above left) and Briga Heelan (right).
Available from 25 October

GOING VIRAL 5 The Flu That Killed 50 Million iPlayer (BBC2)

An unpleasant but, in the pace of how the tale unfolds, oddly thrilling account of how an unbelievable number of people died when flu blazed around the globe just as the First World War ended. Christopher Eccleston's narration, some high-quality dramatic reconstructions, and clever touches such as blue ink spots proliferating across a map bring home the full horror.
Available until 31 October

25 YEARS ON 6 The Shankill Bomb iPlayer (BBC1 N Ireland)

Stephen Nolan investigates one of the worst days of the Troubles: on 23 October 1998, an IRA bomb exploded suddenly in Frizzell's fish shop on Shankill Road, Belfast, killing nine and leaving scores injured in the rubble. The attack is put into its political context but in the main this is a reminder of the human cost of such violence. Those who were first on the scene give harrowing testimony.

WEIRD FOOD

2 The Curious Creations of Christine McConnell Netflix

Bake Off meets The Munsters in this bizarre Halloween-y series: a spookily inclined confectioner (right) resides in a creepy mansion where, in between flirty comic dialogue with animatronic critters, she whips up highly advanced works of art from sugar and cake. Kooky.

TRICEPS AND TEARS

3 Strong Netflix

The questionable TV genre that is the weight-loss contest is improved by a US series in which women who hate their bodies are paired with hunky male training gurus and put through muscle-building challenges. You expect inspirational speeches and tearful self-affirmation: the surprise is, a lot of that comes from the male pros.

SEE THE WHOLE SERIES

4 Informer iPlayer (BBC1)

There's a fresh authenticity about this thriller, starring Nabhaan Rizwan (above) as a man corralled into being an informant for counter-terror cops. The agile, earthy storytelling makes the subtext – British Asians being prey to the whims of law enforcement – credible and powerful. The whole series is on iPlayer.

RELIABLE DRAMA

7 Moving On Amazon Prime

Add this to your watchlist – Amazon has the first four series – and you'll always have an hour of solid drama to call on when nothing else fits the bill. First shown in the afternoons on BBC1 in 2009, they're self-contained stories in the vein of Afternoon Play, with a theme of people at a life crossroads. In practice that means small-scale but effective domestic dramas. Stars of the early episodes include Dervla Kirwan and Lesley Sharp.

WHAT'S NEW ON iPLAYER, NETFLIX AND BEYOND

MUST-SEE DOCUMENTARY

8 Drowning in Plastic

iPlayer (BBC1) until 2 November

Liz Bonnin's documentary is an epic wake-up call. The problem of discarded plastic in the ocean is likely much worse than you thought, as shown by heartbreaking evidence of its effect on wildlife, and stunning demonstrations of just how much plastic is in the sea. Bonnin offers hope in the form of inventions that might ameliorate the disaster, but her message is clear: after seeing this, your efforts to cut your plastic consumption will surely double.

COMEDY ODDITY

iPlayer (BBC2 Wales)

A well-meaning youth leader (Noel Sullivan, once of Hear'Say, above) takes five reluctant teens with behavioural and mental health issues on an outdoorsy day trip, in a comedy one-off that's by several new writers via BBC Writersroom. Consequently it's rough-edged, but the full-hearted empathy for its characters glosses over the odd weak gag, it benefits from being unpredictable and the decision to make it a musical is a flash of genius.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

In 1956, being the Queen is harder than ever

In its second series, The Crown – out now on DVD, if you don't do Netflix – is as sumptuous as ever. What elevates the royal drama is its honest portrayal of complex relationships, so it gets down to business before Hans Zimmer's opening theme music has even died away: we jump back into 1956 as Queen Elizabeth (Claire Foy) and Prince Philip (Matt Smith) approach their tenth anniversary.

All is not well in the marriage. Prince Philip's rumoured infidelities rear their ugly head, the Queen seethes with humiliation, and the old-school "moustaches" at Buckingham Palace fight off public scandal. But for every blazing row and every quiet moment of deep pain, there is another scene that's tender or funny. The love is still there and, in many ways, it's stronger than ever.

Princess Margaret also bursts into life in this series, as Vanessa Kirby brings her vulnerability and anger out. She's amusing but difficult, lovable but loathsome, drinking too much, winding up her sister and falling for photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones.

Then there's little Prince Charles, who gets a storyline with the power to reduce hardened republicans to tears as the chasm between him and his dad becomes clear. Here's a father who fails to love his child for the boy he is, and a son who will never live up to his expectations. This would be powerful emotional drama in any family.

In The Crown, of course, personal pain is set against national disaster. In series two the country races through three prime ministers and lurches from crisis to crisis: Suez, Profumo and everything in between. Attitudes towards the monarchy are changing and the royal family must adapt.

Next time The Crown returns we'll be a decade further on, with Olivia Colman as Queen Elizabeth and Tobias Menzies and Helena Bonham Carter joining her at the Palace. But for now, Foy and Smith rule. ELEANOR BLEY GRIFFITHS

INCREDIBLE JOURNEY

Joanna Lumley's Silk Road Adventure

ITV Hub until 2 November

Celebrity travelogues can be a dreadful bore, but this one's a corker. Lumley, often on fizzy comic form but displaying a real gift for conversing easily with people from any background, zips through a carnival of wonders in countries to which telly rarely ventures: Georgia, Azerbaijan and Uzbekistan all contain gems, from gleaming skyscrapers to artisans in the remotest villages. The standout episode, though, is an intoxicating tour of Iran.

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Desktop power, on a tablet

Many of us now prefer reaching for a tablet or phone rather than firing up the laptop or desktop PC, and many companies are increasingly focusing on specialised apps rather than websites or computer programs. For instance, the latest update to the Sonos desktop program removes certain features, such as the ability to add new hardware. This is fine when the mobile apps work, but that isn't always the case. (I'm looking at you, the app for a major British airline, although I really wish I wasn't.)

The situation is improving. Apple's power apps like iMovie

(for video editing) and GarageBand (for making music) are almost as fully featured as the desktop versions. The mobile version of Microsoft Office has been steadily improving and is now included in Office 365, the service that bundles up Word, Excel et al (office.com, £80/year).

But it's Adobe, maker of huge software like Photoshop, that's taking big strides. As well as mobile versions of its illustration programs, it's just released Adobe Premiere Rush CC (from £10/month). Rather than simply paring down the popular video editing platform, it's built it specifically for YouTubers and others who want professional results without a massive desktop computer. JONATHAN HOLMES

ROUTE MASTERS
Degowski (Alexander Scheer) and Rösner (Sascha Alexander Gersak) hijack a bus

PICK OF THE DAY 54 Hours: the Gladbeck Hostage Crisis 9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA After last week's botched bank robbery, the inept, unravelling gang of three hijack a bus and take more hostages. But once again the police are mired in a mess of buck-passing and backstabbing as this excellent, biting good German drama, based on real events, unfolds.

The ineptitude of the cops is extraordinary, as is the behaviour of the German media, who chat amiably to the kidnappers and take pictures of terrified hostages with guns held to their throats.

The tension is remorseless as the situation goes from bad to much worse, while the cops prevaricate and procrastinate, each senior officer desperately hoping someone will come and take the whole thing off his hands.

Soon, though, it becomes clear why we were introduced to those two seemingly random young people last week, as events take on a dreadful energy and spin to an inevitable outcome.

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Rugby League

2.00pm (kick-off 2.30pm) BBC1

SPORT No rest for the wicked in rugby league: two weeks after the Super League Grand Final, England's best reconvene for the first of a three-match series against New Zealand. England defeated the Kiwis in June this year in a match played in the US; now they have the chance to back up that performance, and blood a few debutants in the process.

Head coach Wayne Bennett gave international caps to eight new players during their warm-up match against France on 17 October, including Wakefield Trinity sensation Tom Johnstone. The winger scored 24 tries in 23 Super League matches this season, and with key players injured, this could be the international breakthrough he needs. JAMES GILL

Pointless Celebrities

6.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT There's sci-fi and fantasy royalty taking part this week according to Richard Osman (or "Chewbacca after a good shave and wax" as Alexander Armstrong introduces him). There are actors from Blake's 7, Doctor Who, Red Dwarf, Harry Potter and Star Wars so, generously, the first round involves questions about Star Trek. Even so there are disastrously high scores and impressively low ones.

Among the subjects you may wish to bone up on is Greek words, but avid RT readers will find the head-to-head round a doddle. It's based on our list of 50 of the greatest British inventions that we published in 2013. Now where is that back copy? JANE RACKHAM

Strictly Come Dancing

6.50pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Time for the 11 remaining celebrities to get into the spirit of things for Halloween week. It's a godsend for those whose showmanship outweighs technical ability: remember Ed Balls's frightfully entertaining mad scientist routine in 2016? Or Russell Grant's devilishly camp rumba in 2011? And if all else fails, the swirling dry ice can mask dodgy footwork.

At the time of writing there are three, maybe four, stand-out dancers, while the rest of the celebs are lindy-hopping around the leaderboard, all within a point or two of each other. So it's anyone's guess who has a ghost of a chance of avoiding the Dreaded Dance-Off tomorrow. JR See page 27

Casualty

8.35pm BBC1

DRAMA It's time we petitioned the Department of Health and Social Care to insist it funds more paramedics for Holby City Hospital, so Iain can stop taking risks in his quest to atone for the death of that young addict and take a bit of time off.

He does it again this week, hurtling into a burning meth lab to rescue Base, the half-wit who's constantly putting himself – and Iain – in harm's way. By the end of the episode Iain is crumbling with guilt and distress.

So, bizarrely, is Duffy who is suddenly at the centre of a deeply unlikely story involving her waking up in an unfamiliar bed, her clothes strewn across the floor. Duffy? Yes, really. AG

THE BEST OF HALLOWEEN

■ Strictly Come Dancing (6.50pm BBC1) starts a riot of spooky-themed TV shows and films to sink your teeth into this week.
 ■ Later at 10.30pm Channel 5 is airing the 2013 remake of Carrie. If that's a bit strong, C5 has the more family-friendly Goosebumps at 4.05pm tomorrow.
 ■ As well as a live Inside No 9 tomorrow on BBC2, Monday sees Gold rerunning the BBC scare-com from 11pm. Also that day, Channel 4 has an episode of True Horror, the series dramatising people's real testimonials of terrifying events.

 ■ On the big night, BBC4 is repeating psychodrama The Thirteenth Tale with Olivia Colman (left), followed by Fear Itself, a documentary about the techniques film-makers use to scare us in cinema.
 ■ Film4 becomes FilmFear with a night of scary movies, while Ben Hanlin tries to escape an underwater chamber live on ITV2.
 ■ Really is showing Demon House, a doc about a possessed house in Indiana – and Most Haunted with Yvette Fielding. FT

The X Factor

8.35pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT It wouldn't be The X Factor without at least a smattering of controversy, and already this year fans have been crying "fix". For once, it's got nothing to do with the live shows. Instead, it transpired that despite the contestants being shown flying en route to the Judges' Houses sipping champagne in business class, when the cameras stopped rolling they were bumped down to economy for the rest of the flight. Whoops.

Hopefully, the remainder of the headlines this series will be about the singing, as frontrunners and bookies favourites including Brendan Murray and Misunderstood perform to win viewers' votes and evade the dreaded bottom two in tomorrow's results show. FRANCES TAYLOR

Black Hollywood: "They've Gotta Have Us"

9.00pm BBC2

ARTS The final edition turns the focus onto British stars who've travelled to the US seeking greater opportunities. We hear from David Oyelowo on the struggle to get Selma made, and from his American counterparts grumbling that he, a Brit, was cast as Martin Luther King. The delightful John Boyega recalls with joy his casting as a lead in Star Wars – and his dismay at being minimised on posters in Asia.

The story rounds off with the exquisite 2016 movie Moonlight, and American writer/director Barry Jenkins's account of the shambles on Oscar night when it almost didn't win Best Film. This series makes you want to seek out many great films again – or for the first time. PATRICK MULKERN

Snowfall

10.45pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 10.30pm)

DRAMA It may be set among the drug dealers of LA but Snowfall has a thoroughly 1980s theme: it's about business. And in particular, it's about how the up-and-coming entrepreneur – whether black, Hispanic or a white guy going rogue for the CIA – can build a successful start-up, recruit trustworthy associates and scale the business up without losing control.

OK, so Franklin's main problem is finding people to cook crack, but the principle is the same as if he were running a call centre. As Teddy tells him, "What you have to decide is how big you want your business to become and how much control you are willing to cede to get there." Straight out of the business studies manual.

DAVID BUTCHER

Killing Eve

9.25pm BBC1

DRAMA For the first time we see implacable assassin Villanelle (Jodie Comer) trapped and at a disadvantage – she's been double-crossed and left to rot in an oppressively grim Russian prison. Though she's so innately stylish, she knows how to rock that institutional look of grey headscarf and dungarees.

As the prison authorities try to break her down, with a conspicuous lack of success, back in the city Eve and Carolyn (Sandra Oh and Fiona Shaw) insist that they want to see the unfortunate Nadia, who they think is in the same prison.

But the agents have to get through the shifty and dangerous Konstantin (Kim Bodnia), whose presence becomes considerably more significant when he's placed front and centre of the action in this chic thriller.

Though, of course, yet again Fiona Shaw, with the merest twitch of an eyebrow, steals every single scene. AG

9.00 Black Hollywood: "They've Gotta Have Us"

RT 3/3. With Black Panther a blockbuster at the global box office and films such as Moonlight and Get Out winning Oscars, it would seem that we are now in an era when "black" movies are not seen as a genre and black film-makers have proved their commercial worth. Among those who have made their mark are a generation of British artists who have found success across the Atlantic. Steve McQueen's 12 Years a Slave was another Academy Award winner, while performers such as David Oyelowo and John Boyega have led the invasion of bankable black British stars to Hollywood. See p53. Director Simon Frederick; Executive producer Mike Connolly

8.35 The X Factor

With November just around the corner, the big finale is getting ever closer as the live shows enter their second week. Judges Robbie and Ayda Williams, Louis Tomlinson and Simon Cowell will have their ears cocked to see whether the contestants have improved since their mentoring efforts, while viewers are sure to be quick off the mark to spot performers who show off that undeniable star quality. But if any nerves translate into wavering performances, the budding stars will risk having their dreams of fame shattered. Dermot O'Leary will be on hand to offer comforting words to those who reach the end of their "journey" – for this year. Results tomorrow at 8pm. See page 53.

He had a dream

Selma ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

British actor David Oyelowo gives a career-defining turn as Dr Martin Luther King in this biopic that's available until mid-November. Focussing on the three civil rights marches he led through Alabama in 1965, there's an epic feel to the massed scenes on Edmund Pettus Bridge. But the majority of the action takes place indoors, with director Ava DuVernay (A Wrinkle in Time) getting the most out of a huge cast in smaller parts, including producer Oprah Winfrey, rapper Common and an uncredited Martin Sheen. ANDREW COLLINS

Tad the Explorer and the Secret of King Midas ★★★★★ 5.50pm Sky Premiere

This Indiana Jones-style animated riff on the legend of King Midas is fast-paced enough to amuse (and occasionally slightly scare) even the most easily distracted youngster. The plot has amateur archaeologist Tad battling baddies to find the magic collar that was the secret to Midas's famed golden touch. He's helped along the way by a cock-eyed dog, an "angry bird" and a camp Peruvian mummy with a predilection for cross-dressing. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Happy birthday, Joaquin

Don't Worry, He Won't Get Far on Foot ★★★★★

Amazon Prime

Joaquin Phoenix turns 44 tomorrow, and you can celebrate his singular talent with this offbeat and ribald biopic, which has just landed on Prime. He plays cartoonist John Callahan, imbuing the alcoholic quadriplegic with a winning blend of gallows humour and uncomplicated joy. AC

PICK OF THE DAY The Little Drummer Girl 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series This John le Carré adaptation is from the team behind The Night Manager. But – a quick note of warning to avoid disappointment later – this has none of the sheen and glamour of that drama. There are no speed boats or evil men in fortified lairs of glass and marble... Little Drummer Girl is darker, denser and more complex. The first episode is at times achingly languid, but that's no bad thing in a slow-burning story of loyalty, conflict and terrorism with a terrific central performance from the gifted Florence Pugh (Lady Macbeth) as Charlie, a lefty actress who gets caught up in a spy plot.

Charlie and her little gang stage Saint Joan in a dingy venue in London. It's 1979 so everything is varying degrees of brown and taupe (the production design is fabulous). But there's a surprise trip to Greece for the troupe, a gift from a mysterious benefactor. Then things get weird...

Doctor Who

7.00pm BBC1

DRAMA In an episode titled Arachnids in the UK (see what they did there?) Sex and the City's Mr Big, Chris Noth, plays a hotel mogul with a spider problem. It's a sturdy, fun episode full of 1950s horror B-movie hokum, miles away from the crushing sanctimony of last week, with Noth (via writer Chris Chibnall) having a few sly digs at his global fame.

The Doctor and her little band are back in Sheffield, where Yaz (Mandip Gill), Ryan (Tosin Cole) and Graham (Bradley Walsh) return home. But after all they've been through together, life can't be the same again in South Yorkshire, and there are big decisions for everyone. First – a creepy infestation... AG

Inside Harrods: the World's Most Famous Department Store

7.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Don't expect this to be an access-all-areas ob-doc: instead it's a potted history and luxury-trivia round-up – and perfectly interesting for all that, because Harrods trivia is stranger than most.

The store's sheer scale – five acres of retail over seven floors – takes some swallowing: it has its own generators and its own wells. One section explores the supplies that Scott's Antarctic expedition ordered there (jugged hare, foie gras, roast pheasant, etc) and another covers the role the store played in selling the original Winnie the Pooh to Daphne Milne. DAVID BUTCHER

Mediterranean with Simon Reeve

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY One thing's clear from Simon Reeve's series: mankind is making a right mess of the world. He's in Morocco meeting African migrants who risk their lives getting to Europe (and, as he discovers in the intensely farmed Almería region, have just as squalid and miserable a life in Spain). He learns how using giant polytunnels to grow our fruit and veg now means Spanish trawlers catch more plastic waste than fish. "I'm going from sadness to anger," he says.

But there are high points on this final leg, including spotting a whale swimming in the Med. JANE RACKHAM

The Ghan: Australia's Greatest Train Journey

8.00pm BBC4

TRAVEL You may never get the chance to ride the Ghan, from Adelaide via Alice Springs to Darwin through 2,979 kilometres of outback, but this certainly gives you a flavour of the journey.

There's no narration, just occasional captions giving relevant facts or stats, so the effect is of staring out of a train window while a knowledgeable (but silent) guide enhances your trip by sharing points of interest about the scenery, wildlife or history. You don't even have to engage with fellow passengers, just be lulled by the rhythmic chug of the train. At three hours this is definitely slow TV, although the real journey takes 54 hours. JR

THE COUNTRYFILE RAMBLE

The Countryfile Ramble for Children in Need is back for a fourth year, with presenters leading walks across the UK with members of the public and children whose lives have been changed by the money raised over the years.

This evening's special edition of Countryfile (5.45pm BBC1) will feature footage from sponsored walks that took place earlier this month, including Ellie Harrison (right) in Ely, Cambridgeshire, John Craven's north Wales stroll at Padarn Country Park and Anita Rani's mountain hike in County Down's Mourne Mountains, in Northern Ireland.

There is still time to plan your own ramble and raise money. Visit ramble.bbcchildreninneed.co.uk where you can find a local ramble, or create a fundraising page and organise your own.

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA After Vicky made such a precipitous decision last week, she returns home and faces consequences that are potentially catastrophic for a family that's already tearing itself to pieces.

Soon a whole lot of strangers are looking very closely at Vicky, her husband Steve and, particularly, her 12-year-old daughter Maxine, who was once very unhappy and called Max.

There's a touch of the crusader about Vicky (Anna Friel) as she insists she did what she did entirely for the sake of Maxine. "It's my baby's only chance. I'm going to do whatever it takes," she moans. As Tony Marchant's underwhelming drama ends, it's up to Maxine to try to bring everyone together. AG

Hitler's Holocaust Railways with Chris Tarrant

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Railways played a vital part in Hitler's masterplan, transporting soldiers and weapons to the front – and ferrying millions of Jews to concentration camps.

Chris Tarrant starts his exploration in Nuremberg, where masses of Nazi supporters would arrive by train to attend Hitler's rallies; it became a blueprint for moving large numbers of people. As Tarrant crosses Germany, Poland and the Czech Republic he is appalled at the stories he hears from those who made the same journey in the 1940s. He ends up in Auschwitz, where Arek Hersh – unlike his family – evaded death several times. JR

I Was a Yazidi Slave: Storyville

11.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY In August 2014, Islamic State forces arrived in Sinjar in northern Iraq, the heartland of the religious Yazidi minority. Many Yazidi women and girls were raped, then sold into sexual slavery. It's integral to Yazidism to marry within the community, so IS's strategy seemed designed to destabilise the Yazidi altogether, as raped women would often be rejected by their families – effectively, genocide.

This film follows Shirin and Lewiza, who escaped to live in Germany, and whose stories are heartbreaking. "I have to get justice for myself, and Yazidi women and children," says Shirin, as lawyers argue over bringing IS to account. GILL CRAWFORD

Inside No 9 Live Special

10.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith are indefatigable. It's only a month since they were zipping up and down the UK for 47 performances of The League of Gentlemen Live Again!, their sublime stage reunion with old mucker Mark Gatiss, and yet somehow they've found the wherewithal to dream up this Halloween special of Inside No 9, which will go out properly live.

You can never be sure where this anthology will take you. They don't always aim for comedy. Across four series, they've demonstrated there are many shades of black, and we should expect something doubly macabre for Halloween.

This 25th episode is called Dead Line and tells of Arthur Flitwick (Pemberton), a chap who stumbles upon a discarded mobile phone in a graveyard. His first mistake is to try to contact its owner. As Halloween approaches, Arthur faces a nightmarish situation and the realisation that no good deed goes unpunished.

Good luck on the night. I just hope no one gets hurt. PATRICK MULKERN

The Ghan: Australia's Greatest Train Journey 8.00pm
A slow trip across the outback

7.00pm Locomotion: Dan Snow's History of Railways 2/3. Dan Snow examines the impact the railway had on London in the late 1830s, linking the capital to Birmingham, Liverpool and Manchester. This was one of the greatest civil engineering projects in history, allowing tycoons including Samuel Morton Peto and George Hudson to make fortunes as the stock markets boomed. However, the bubble burst in 1847 and shares plummeted, leaving thousands of people facing bankruptcy courts. Director/Producer Helen Nixon (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

8.00 The Ghan: Australia's Greatest Train Journey RT An immersive view from the famous passenger train known as "the Ghan" as it traverses Australia on a 2,979-kilometre journey from Adelaide in the south to its terminus in the town of Darwin on the country's north-western tip, which takes over 54 hours to complete. This three-hour film also explores the building of the transcontinental railway, which took 127 years to construct, with the work carried out by local Aboriginal surveyors and early immigrants, including the famous Afghan camel drivers, after whom the train is named. See page 62. (S) (HD)

11.00 I Was a Yazidi Slave: Storyville RT The personal stories of two women forced into slavery by Isis, who were helped by German doctor Jan Kizilhan, an expert in trauma who has provided sanctuary for 1,000 refugees at his clinic in the Black Forest. Dr Kizilhan also assists lawyer Philippe Sands in pursuing a genocide trial against Islamic State on the basis that the systematic rape of Yazidi women would lead to a dying out of the people, as they believe that anyone who's had sex with a non-Yazidi can no longer be considered Yazidi. See page 63. (S) (HD)

Fire over England ★★★★★

1.55pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Like Richard Burton and Liz Taylor after them, Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh bestrode the world as if acting colossi. Married in 1940 and divorced in 1960, the pair had first acted together in Fire over England in 1937, by which time their union had blossomed. Described in the poster for 1940's 21 Days as "Excitingly together!", the power couple went on to play Lord Nelson and his mistress in 1941's That Hamilton Woman, by which time cracks linked to her mental fragility and his infidelity were already forming. ANDREW COLLINS

Tailor-made viewing

Phantom Thread ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

Writer/director Paul Thomas Anderson's divine melodrama examines the impact of emotional upheaval on the fragile mind of a finely tuned creative. Daniel Day-Lewis plays a renowned dressmaker in 1950s London, whose fastidious approach to his craft has left him intolerant of the messiness of human beings. The film draws out the flaws and vulnerability of the artist as he enters into a relationship with a new muse (Vicky Krieps), and we see the difficulty of such a person trying to maintain a normal life. EMMA SIMMONDS

Carry On Regardless ★★★★★ 11.00am Film4

This weekend marks 30 years since the passing of Charles Hawtrey, the comic actor whose screen persona rarely deviated from the campy carefree, delivering his "Oh, hello!" catchphrase with a wicked raspy cackle. In this, the fifth of his 23 Carry Ons, our scrawny hero enters the boxing ring, with predictably daffy results. JAMIE HEALY

END OF THE ROAD

PICK OF THE DAY Black Earth Rising 9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA "Is everyone in my world ill?" wondered Michael (John Goodman) in last week's episode. It's a thread that has run through this series, and writer/director Hugo Blick isn't above spelling out his themes when it suits him: "Call it a symptom of collective guilt," Michael's friend Eunice (who, like him, has cancer) replied.

Collective guilt for the horrors of Rwanda is the cloud that hangs over the final episode too: guilt not just for the Rwandan genocide but – crucially for Kate, now she knows her own story – the reprisals that saw Hutu refugees massacred in camps across the border. There, Kate searches for mass graves, near the end of the long and rocky road into her own past.

The other strands of the story are knitted together – and a key villain exposed. For the half-million hardy BBC2 viewers who have stuck with the beautifully filmed tale, it has been unique TV. Blick pulls off dramatic coups nobody else would attempt. And it's worth noting that this has been a story where a wealth of black characters – and black women especially – have been front and centre. DAVID BUTCHER

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ There are some magnificent questions tonight. When the OC wizards are on their game, nobody does it better. We see several of those mind-grinding sequences of clues that look opaque – then childishly obvious once you know the link. Among the elements as the Durhamites take on the LARPer are Bernie Winters and Nikola Tesla – the latter setting off a sequence that the LARPer's captain ("an administrative assistant who has beaten a Russian chess Grandmaster at a popular video game") dispatches for a brilliant three-pointer.

Victoria Coren Mitchell also drops in a titbit about actor John Cazale: he was only in five films, but each was nominated for Best Picture. DB

Old People's Home for Four-Year-Olds

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY As we get older, we get less mobile but some of the Lark Hill residents are sedentary for up to 14 hours of their waking day, which isn't healthy. So the four-year-olds have been getting them out of their chairs and increasing their activity levels.

The real test is on sports day, although seeing Lilian discard her walking stick during the egg-and-spoon race and Sylvia's joyous expression when she throws a ball through a hoop makes them a winner in anyone's books. The little 'uns are helping in other ways too. "Mason makes me feel treasured..." says Lilian, "I don't get that from anywhere else." JANE RACKHAM

Why Does Everyone Hate the English?

9.00pm History

DOCUMENTARY You'd think a trip north across the Tweed would yield some rather vinegary answers to this question, but tonight's Scots' grudge list (the outlawing of tartan and the siting of nuclear weapons at Falsane) feels a trifle tame and toothless and seems to ignore perhaps testier bones of contention like North Sea Oil and Brexit.

Things gets a bit spikier when Al Murray and the witty Fred MacAulay discuss the loss of the Glasgow shipbuilding industry. But all of the UK has suffered from the decline of heavy industry, notes the likable Englishman, whose quest is essentially a warm-hearted and reconciliatory one. BEN DOWELL

Condor

9.00pm, 10.00pm Universal TV

DRAMA New series The idea of turning Sydney Pollack's 1975 film Three Days of the Condor into long-form TV sends a paranoid shiver down the spine. Sure, that's what the conspiracy-thriller genre is all about, but the film with its masterly opening sequence and ice-cool performances (Robert Redford and Faye Dunaway) is like a great painting you don't want to see xeroxed. Luckily it isn't here; it's reinterpreted, with Max Irons as Joe, a CIA tech bod stumbling into a hall of deep-state mirrors.

Joe learns that an algorithm he created is being used to spy on US citizens, and has unearthed a major terrorist plot. With William Hurt and Brendan Fraser in supporting roles, there's plenty to enjoy. DB

As Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) fans know, pregnant Sinead has been keeping her cancer diagnosis secret from Daniel because the last time he got over-emotional, he ended up throwing Ken down the staircase at No 1. The trouble is, she's decided to confide in Ken, who is set to reveal the news to Daniel after Sinead is rushed to hospital. Now, I'm thinking the plot might now go in one of two directions: either Daniel pushes Ken down the stairs again for keeping him in the dark, or Sinead pushes Ken down the stairs for breaking her trust. Either way, Ken could be getting a mouthful of shag pile by the time this evening is through.

On Doctors (1.45pm BBC1), actress Eileen Davies makes a guest appearance in her third dotty OAP soap role of the year. We've already seen her as Moany Joany on EastEnders, as Flora on Corrie and now here she is as elderly Ruth, a patient with uncontrolled diabetes. Get her in the Woolpack by Christmas, I say. DAVID BROWN

QI

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: Wed 9.15pm)

COMEDY A particularly green-fingered QI sees Jason Manford, Sara Pascoe and Stephen K Amos join Alan Davies and Sandi Toksvig to potter around the subject of Plants, with enormously entertaining consequences.

Featuring some truly petrifying potatoes, the dangers of poppy-seeds on bagels, a slightly risqué use for chilli peppers and a mysterious pair of pants buried in Sandi's garden, it's certainly a more offbeat look at the topic than you'll find on Gardeners' World. Though to be fair, if you were coming to QI for genuine tips on how to improve your allotment, you're guilty of more than the usual General Ignorance... HUW FULLERTON

First Dates

10.00pm C4

REALITY "When we are looking for love, we should be open, experimental..." Fred Sirieix states. But party animal Lee's date Abbi – who's dressed a bit like Frozen's Elsa – is a tea-drinking homebody. Can he let it go? Carrying on the Disney theme, Cameron is sporting a Cruella de Vil haircut, for his date with conventionally dressed law student Joe. Bianca and Teza make a lovely-looking couple, but she bravely reveals a secret that makes you hold your breath in anticipation of his reaction.

And your heart goes out to 75-year-old Deanna, who totters into the restaurant lugging a shopping trolley loaded with snacks... and then has a disappointing time. JR

Selling Children: Storyville

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY All across India children are being taken, sold or hoodwinked into slavery. Promised decent wages, they're exploited in factories or homes working 20 hours a day for little reward – or, if young and pretty, as a prostitute.

Poverty and corruption are the breeding ground for child trafficking: as one charity worker says, "Who cares for social minorities? Nobody. We all [including police and courts] pass by." It's a complex problem fed by desperation, ignorance and greed. Film-maker Pankaj Rajinder Johar is scandalised by what he finds, especially when he sees in a minerals mine that even three-year-olds must work if they want to eat. JR

Little Prankers

from 10am BBC3

Kayvan Novak of Fonejacker and Britain Today, Tonight fame is a veteran of the prank show, a maligned genre that might be revitalised by this new take on it: Novak is the expert guide for a team of precocious child performers, who are put in costume as various unlikely characters and then unleashed on a vulnerable public. WITCHING HOUR
Vanessa (Michelle Ryan) may have moved into the wrong house...

True Horror: The Witches' Prison

11.05pm C4

DRAMA Buying a house called The Cage that was once a barbarous medieval prison for women accused of witchcraft is probably asking for trouble, but nevertheless Vanessa Mitchell made it her home.

Inevitably, as this dramatisation reveals, Vanessa was tormented by the ghosts of her cottage's past to the point where she had to flee in terror. OK, so it sounds like every horror movie you've seen, but come on, it's Halloween and everyone needs a vicarious scare.

Michelle Ryan plays Vanessa, though she has little to do apart from look terrified, and there are contributions from the real Vanessa and her friends in the Essex village of St Osyth, who all felt that there was something very bad going on in The Cage. The shocks are perfunctory, but even if you tell yourself you know what to expect, you might still jump. Just a bit. AG

Rickman's final bow

Eye in the Sky ★★★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW
It was a shock for all but his family and closest friends when Alan Rickman died of pancreatic cancer in January 2016. His final live-action film, Eye in the Sky (review, p43), was dedicated to his memory and drew an outpouring of love, not least from the film's cast and crew. At the New York premiere director Gavin Hood said his death "hit me hard... he was a good man". Helen Mirren (who knew him "very, very well") hymned his "wit, urbanity, sophistication, intelligence, humanity". Co-star Aaron Paul added, "We lost one of the most brilliant people in this profession." ANDREW COLLINS

Boys will be boys

Kevin & Perry Go Large ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW
Harry Enfield takes his finest comic creations – the hormonally charged teenage boys Kevin and Perry (played by Enfield and Kathy Burke) – and successfully expands them from a TV sketch into a feature-length movie. Here the spotty twosome descend on an unsuspecting Ibiza, where they hope to become top DJs and, in doing so, attract loads of ladies. Ed Bye's film zips along nicely and is filled with disgusting adventures that make There's Something about Mary look like Mary Poppins. JOANNA BERRY

New this week to rent

Mandy ★★★
Sky Store/Virgin Movies
Nicolas Cage struts his manic stuff here as a lumberjack on the vendetta trail of the religious cult who killed his beloved Mandy (Andrea Riseborough). The dizzyingly stylised visuals are designed for maximum disorientation, making this frenzied mash-up of demonic cult chiller and psychedelic psycho-exploiter a bit of an acquired taste. ALAN JONES

Saving Lives at Sea

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY A grab-bag of heartening RNLI rescues rounds off the series. Among the relieved casualties tonight is 61-year-old Glynis, whose bucket list of things she wants to do before she gets too old includes coasteering – climbing, swimming and jumping your way around a rocky coastline. But for Glynis, one jump has gone wrong, leaving her injured, in a small Cornish cove with the tide racing in.

Meanwhile, in Portishead, RNLI volunteers Kath and Jake are celebrating their wedding anniversary in a restaurant, when a call comes through on their pagers... DAVID BUTCHER DRAMA He might be a newcomer to being a "snout", but Raza (Nabhaan Rizwan) is a natural. The trouble is, real life keeps complicating things. When Raza has to infiltrate a funeral, his drunkard father turns up and muddies the waters. And Raza's younger brother is on his case, too, following him across east London and taking pictures with that stolen Leica...

That's the theme tonight, as this intricate thriller probes the mess going under cover makes of your life. Or as Raza's handler Gabe (Paddy Considine) puts it bitterly, as his own past lurches out of the background to catch up with him, "When you're the lie, it's hard to know which part of you is the truth. That's the burden." DB

Later Live... with Jools Holland

10.00pm BBC2

MUSIC There aren't many groups whose name is also a genre. It's a bold move, especially if you sound nothing like the genre in question. Smooth soul/funk collective Jungle's mid-tempo rhythms are quite the antithesis of jungle music's frenzied breakbeat assault. They're doing well, though, with two Top Ten albums under their belts.

The Good, the Bad and the Queen are also best described as a collective. They feature members of the Clash, Blur, the Verve and... Afrobeat legend Tony Allen: the man described by Brian Eno as "perhaps the greatest drummer who has ever lived". Now there's a billing to live up to. GARY ROSE

PICK OF THE DAY The Great British Bake Off: the Final 8.00pm C4

FOOD And then there were three... it's the final, on yet another frazzlingly hot day in the tent. The whole team is sad to say goodbye, wrenching apart the closeness that has built up. When the showstopper challenge is complete, there are tears from Sandi Toksvig and Noel Fielding, who chips in with: "They're leaving home. Shall we convert their rooms into offices?"

But first the finalists throw themselves into everything with gusto. "You have to push yourself – what's the point of coming to the final and just coasting?" insists one. The signature round involves making doughnuts, there's a very strange, labour-intensive technical and for the showstopper they must create a "landscape dessert".

Before the winner is crowned, there's a shattering crisis and an SOS call to the production team. ALISON GRAHAM
Your RT Food: page 148

Pregnant Hayley Slater in EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1), whose life makes Nil by Mouth look like a feel-good romcom, is in for more trauma tonight. Already this past month we've seen her bleeding in the street, hitting the bottle and contemplating suicide on the ledge of a tower block balcony – now she's forced to seek refuge and give birth on her own. It's a good job actress Katie Jarvis isn't paid by the smile because she hasn't been allowed to crack one since she joined the show in February.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

The lifts are on the blink in Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: Wed 10.45pm) so, of course, some characters are going to get trapped inside. Cue Lofty, Meena and Leah finding themselves stuck and having to confront their problems. If you're a medical drama junkie, you'll have seen the "dodgy elevator" storyline in everything from Grey's Anatomy to ER by way of Holby City's sister show Casualty. My advice: if you're ever visiting a fictional TV hospital, take the stairs. DAVID BROWN

There She Goes

10.00pm BBC4

COMEDY DRAMA This week in Shaun Pye's moving and very funny comedy, parents Simon and Emily are looking for answers. In the 2006 timeline, Emily (Jessica Hynes) is desperate to find out what is wrong with baby Rosie, while Simon (David Tennant) is locked in beer- and wine-fuelled denial. In the 2015 action, this much happier unit is desperate to find what Rosie means by a phrase she keeps typing into her specially adapted iPad.

But as their daughter grows up, it's not all a bed of Rosies – she still bites quite viciously and a trip to the swimming pool attracts a lot of stares when Rosie embarks on something the family have their own word for – "snargling". BEN DOWELL

The Reluctant Landlord

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY OF THE WEEK New series Romesh Ranganathan has made a decent career plumbing his life for material, and with this semi-autobiographical sitcom he takes over running his dead dad's pub. If you're at all familiar with Romesh's work, it will be no surprise that he's a lazy, feckless landlord who struggles to control the odd bunch of regulars who litter the pub – including Phil Davis as a menacing ex-con.

Sian Gibson is great as Romesh's social media-obsessed, food-faddy wife, but the main draws are Romesh's sardonic wit and wisdom – whether arguing with his son about Spider-Man's powers or declaring, "Eating badly is a long, enjoyable suicide." DAVID CRAWFORD See p30

Imagine...

10.45pm BBC1 (Wales and N Ireland: 11.10pm)

DOCUMENTARY At a restless stage in his life, Cary Grant, the Bristol boy born into an unhappy home who reinvented himself to become a huge star, decided to do something radical. He underwent a curious kind of therapy by taking LSD to unlock his subconscious, recording the results in an unpublished autobiography, extracts from which are read here by Jonathan Pryce. If you're a Grant fan, this is a must, even if the endless self-analysis and navel-gazing get a bit tiresome. There are interviews with his daughter Jennifer and the last of his five wives, Barbara Jaynes, home movies and lots of clips from films showing him at his unforgettable, urbane best. AG

FATAL CLADDING

The initial death toll (below) was to rise after the Summerland blaze on the Isle of Man in 1973

The Fires That Foretold Grenfell

9.00pm BBC2 (Scotland: 11.15pm)

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK In 1973, a fire at the Summerland holiday park on the Isle of Man killed 50 people. News footage shows the flames sweeping across the outside of the building as its highly flammable cladding catches light.

It looks distressingly familiar, more than a year after the Grenfell Tower disaster, and this harrowing Open University documentary looks at four other fires in high-rises that bear striking similarities. But lessons were not learnt. Survivors of Summerland talk of a "waterfall of flames" and the fact that there were no sprinklers. It became the deadliest fire since the Blitz.

The sisters of Catherine Hickman, who died in the Lakanal House fire in London in 2009, are distraught recalling how they learnt that she'd spent more than 30 minutes on the phone to the fire brigade, who told her to "stay put" in her flat. AG

RT 10/10. The three remaining bakers return for a final tilt at the crown. Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith's last three challenges will require a full range of baking skills. The signature calls for doughnuts and flawless decoration, while the deceptively simple technical is performed outside the tent. On the final day, with their families and friends in attendance, the bakers must make a title-winning showstopper that's an intricate, multi-layered edible landscape. Presented by Noel Fielding and Sandi Toksvig. An Extra Slice is on Friday 8pm. See p82.

Those Jones boys

Kaleidoscope ★★★ 11.20pm Film4 FREEVIEW

This claustrophobic thriller (review, p43) marked the feature debut of writer/director Rupert Jones, who was able to call upon the services of older brother Toby to take the lead role. The pair previously collaborated on the 1998 video for Whippin' Piccadilly by indie band Gomez and the 2006 short film Sickie. A third brother, Casper, is also in the acting game, and all follow in the footsteps of their father, Freddie Jones, the veteran performer who, following a career on TV and film stretching back to the 1960s, up to this year played Sandy Thomas on Emmerdale. JAMIE HEALY

Catching Escobar

The Infiltrator ★★★ Amazon Prime

This taut, 1980s-set thriller is new to Prime this week. It's based on US Customs agent Bob Mazur's account of the operation to smash Colombian drug lord Pablo Escobar's crime empire. Bryan Cranston plays the family man forced to lead a double life, posing as a flash, crooked financier with a trophy fiancée (Diane Kruger), while coming home to his loyal wife (Juliet Aubrey). The action moves credibly from Tampa to London and Paris, but anticlimax dogs the presumably factually accurate final act. ANDREW COLLINS

Dead funny

Beetle Juice ★★★★★

9.00pm Sky Spooky
Currently enjoying a return to cinemas for its 30th anniversary, Tim Burton's kooky creep-fest stars Michael Keaton as the unhinged exorcist whom dead couple Alec Baldwin and Geena Davis hire to spirit away the living from their home. Burton's Corpse Bride is showing earlier this evening to get you in the macabre mood. JH

CITY SINS
DI Will Wagstaffe (Tom Riley) is hunting a killer in the heart of London

PICK OF THE DAY Dark Heart 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA New series Don't worry, you're not going mad if you think you've seen Dark Heart before; you have, it was shown on the now defunct ITV Encore channel two years ago. But ITV has dusted it off, chopped in half a 120-minute self-contained "pilot" episode, and added them to two new stories, to be shown in two weekly hour-long chunks on consecutive nights.

Chris Lang (who wrote the fab Unforgotten) adapted this first story from Adam Creed's books, with Tom Riley as a terrifically old-fashioned, demon-haunted TV maverick cop, Will Wagstaffe. He's the kind of man who stares moodily over bodies of water and who harbours a corrosive secret pain after a family tragedy.

Of course he can't leave his own feelings behind when he investigates the torture and murder (brace yourselves for some icky scenes) of alleged paedophiles let loose by the criminal justice system. AG

The Secret Life of the Zoo

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Performing ultrasound on a pregnant elephant. Coaxing anteaters into the mating game. All part of the nine-to-five for keepers at Chester Zoo, who are back to tell us about what goes on backstage at their enclosures.

Some of the best scenes tonight revolve around the gangling physical comedy of "relentless" male giraffe Meru and his attempts to mate with hard-to-get female Orla. But the giant anteaters are no more romantic: an arranged first date pretty much ends in a fist fight.

The main story involves elephant matriarch Thi, who's pregnant with her ninth calf, but is eight weeks overdue. DAVID BUTCHER

The Apprentice

9.00pm BBC1

REALITY The teams have to design shoes this week. How hard can that be? They've just a few hours to come up with the the design, the brand name and the marketing bumf, but what could go wrong?

In fact, they don't make quite the hash of it that the task deserves, though there's an awkward scene where one nitwit claims, "The last thing I want to do is spread negative energy," while spreading it like pebbledash on all he touches.

Meanwhile, some slang terms need spelling out: "The urban community describes things as being on fleek," a candidate explains to Karren Brady, while Lord Sugar cries in the boardroom, "Hip hop? What is hip hop?!" DB

Trust

9.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

DRAMA Tonight the 1970s kidnap saga gets its mojo back. As the weeks have gone by, the drama has grown more interested in the Mafia kidnapers of John Paul Getty III than in his billionaire grandfather. That pays off now with an episode that feels like an homage to the Godfather films – and sure enough, features the local Mafia don acting as godfather at the confirmation of one of the kidnapers' sons.

It becomes a story of how the Calabrian mob (shot through with that creepy mix of menace and respectability) stains a poor rural community and how it poisons relations between men and women. There are awful, chilling moments and a powerful sting in the tail. DB

The Secret Story of Stuff: Materials of the Modern Age

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY You may have seen engaging engineer and designer Zoe Laughlin plying her trade on BBC2's The Big Life Fix. Here, she tours the country to explore the latest innovations in the science of materials.

On her travels, she finds everlasting dental crowns being 3D-printed in Loughborough and vets repairing broken bones with porous metals in Chester. And in London, fungus – yes, fungus – is being used to make a self-extinguishing insulation that could transform the construction industry. DB

Coronation Street's (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) Tracy Barlow (right) has had a new lease of life in recent years. No longer defined by her hatred for Carla, she's now a more nuanced nutcase – and often the character given the best lines (“I've always fancied Morocco. Must be the kidney getting homesick” being a recent favourite). Now, though, trips overseas are far from Tracy's mind as she heads to the police station to reveal all about her sabotaging of Michelle's car. Will she get banged up again?

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

And speaking of unhinged heroines, Sienna on Hollyoaks (6.30pm C4) is trying to persuade Sally to give her another chance, but ends up breaking into a classroom to teach. As she's the daughter of demon headmaster Patrick Blake and has past form herself when it comes to going off the rails, it should be a treat to see how this all pans out. What is she going to do if a pupil misbehaves? Lock them in a basement for six months?

DAVID BROWN

Taskmaster

9.00pm Dave

COMEDY The key to this panel show is Greg Davies cracking a comedy whip over contestants while marking their efforts like the world's most scathing schoolmaster. Now, though, they fight back.

“This is demeaning!” cries James Acaster at one point, getting what appears to be genuinely worked up by the frustrations of serving the Taskmaster's whim, “Give me eight weeks of my life back! How does that sound?”

But it's Rhod Gilbert who, via his friendship with Davies, has the key to really unsettling him. One sight gag involving a picture of Davies's mother in the bath produces what may be the best and funniest moment of the series so far. DAVID BUTCHER

Get Shorty

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Who knows what life in the upper echelons of the movie business is really like, but this show's caricature manages to be as convincing as it is mad.

There's a scene tonight where studio exec April meets her new Hollywood boss. He is calmly conducting several meetings at once while on the phone via his headset and greets April with a bowl of something odd-looking: “Prune?” he offers, then tells her to read a 600-page book in two hours.

Meanwhile, Miles (Chris O'Dowd) has a new project, a post-apocalyptic drama: “It's about being tough on the outside while you try not to lose yourself” – something he knows plenty about. DAVID BUTCHER

Zapped

10.00pm Dave

COMEDY Brian (James Buckley) is starting a business selling an exciting new foodstuff that Munty has never seen before – you may know it as popcorn – while Barbara (Sharon Rooney) has become a Tarot reader/servant to Sadie, a spoilt dancer desperate for fame. Most deliciously, there's also an unlikely romantic entanglement between Sally Phillips's not unfairly named Slasher and Paul Kaye's unscrupulous wizard Howell.

The satisfyingly silly fantasy caper has worked particularly well this series because of much tighter plotting. This episode is no exception – all the strands come together beautifully when the mighty Protector (played, with fab aplomb, by Sylvester McCoy) finally visits. BEN DOWELL

GOTTA LOVE A LITTER
Paul O'Grady's got his arms full with a cute set of dachshund puppies

Paul O'Grady: for the Love of Dogs

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Cute puppy alert. Actually, not just one but a whole litter of adorable little dachshunds. No wonder Paul has to brace himself before meeting the four-week-old pups. Even so he finds it almost impossible not to pop one in his pocket and take it home.

However, some of the dogs brought into Battersea are more difficult to rehome. Sophie, for instance, is an intimidating Italian mastiff with cruelly clipped ears and docked tail to make her seem even scarier. She does look as though she might rip your throat out, but looks are deceptive as Paul discovers, because she has the sweetest nature imaginable.

Meanwhile 14-year-old yorkie Felicity, found wandering the streets, needs a mature owner who shares her interests – which are watching TV and knitting, apparently. JANE RACKHAM

For the horror hardcore

The Exorcist ★★★★★ 10.45pm Sky Halloween

Sky Halloween approaches its terrifying climax tonight with an Oscar-winning horror that still sets the bar when it comes to supernatural scares. The film's overall impact may have been lessened by various spoofs and copycat productions, but the macabre demonstrations of manifest evil still retain their power to startle and nauseate – not least Linda Blair's "head-turning" antics as a possessed child. With its revolutionary special effects and eerie sound design, this is sure to have you sleeping with the lights on. ALAN JONES

Monster laughs

Wallace & Gromit in the Curse of the Were-Rabbit ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

If The Exorcist is just too frightening for you, here's some Halloween viewing that will have you howling with laughter. Our claymation heroes Wallace and Gromit are now working as humane pest-controllers, but their business is jeopardised when a monster goes on the rampage destroying vegetable patches. There are some great references to old horror movies along the way, but, as usual, Gromit steals the show, causing hilarity without uttering a single word. SLOAN FREER

Ghostbusters II **★★★

6.50pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

Musician Ray Parker Jr will forever be known for one thing: composing the theme to Ghost Busters and its sequel. However, the US number one would come to haunt him when he was successfully sued by Huey Lewis, who claimed his song I Want a New Drug had been plagiarised. The similarity is indeed spooky. JAMIE HEALY

UP AND AWAY

The great mission to Mars begins, but why did Tom (Sean Penn, inset) stay at home?

PICK OF THE DAY The First 9.00pm C4

DRAMA New series Sean Penn plays the lead in this glossy near-future drama about a mission to Mars. Despite the similar title and similar subject matter to the recent film First Man, there's a very different feel to this, as scripted by House of Cards maestro Beau Willimon.

Here, the space programme is run by a commercial corporation called Vista, headed by glassy-eyed CEO Laz (Natascha McElhone). It seems Tom (Penn) was in line to command the mission but was replaced – for reasons yet to be revealed – so he watches on TV at home as the rocket prepares to launch.

That's after some shirtless running scenes that make the most of Penn's pumped-up physique: his arm veins alone generate more tension than the rest of the plot – so far. Still, if you like watching Penn brood and swagger, then the shockwave that strikes the story halfway through this opener suggests how the series could achieve lift-off in coming weeks. DAVID BUTCHER

Ariana Grande at the BBC

8.00pm BBC1

MUSIC Ariana Grande has become something of a BBC – and British – darling since her One Love Manchester concert last year. The fund-raising event, shown on BBC1, movingly honoured the 22 people killed in the Manchester Arena terrorist attack two weeks before. And now the singer is back with this hour-long special in which she performs material from her recent album Sweetener, as well as some of her biggest hits, accompanied by an all-female orchestra.

Hosted by Davina McCall, the event will also feature Grande talking about her life, music – and no doubt the moving night in Manchester too.

100 Days to Victory

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY The second part of this revealing look at how the First World War was brought to an end makes clear how far tactics had been revolutionised. As one historian puts it, neatly, "The tactics of 1914 would have been recognisable to Napoleon, [whereas] the tactics of 1918 would be recognisable to a modern soldier."

The trouble was, in their haste to forget the horrors of the Great War, the Allies forgot the lessons of victory, while the next generation of German commanders learnt all too well from the strategy that had defeated them: "If the tanks succeed, then victory follows," wrote the general who devised Blitzkrieg 20 years later. DB

Ambulance

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY The ambulance service is there for emergencies but often the job of crews is more, as the voiceover puts it, "catching people who have fallen through the gaps".

Paramedics Scott and Ana are called to attend a known alcoholic who is threatening suicide. Fifty-seven-year-old David lives on a canal barge with his beloved Siberian husky Dray, but the dog is missing and David – once a successful engineer – is spiralling ever lower. "I know I need help," he says, his floating home littered with bottles of cider. But what help can an ambulance crew give?

Also tonight, 14-month-old Thomas pulls a cup of hot tea onto himself and a woman is bitten by a snake. ALISON GRAHAM

Diagnosis on Demand? The Computer Will See You Now

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Hannah Fry starts this excellent look at the race to transform healthcare with a sobering fact: the NHS is the biggest purchaser in the world of... fax machines. That suggests where it stands in terms of IT innovation, but perhaps not for much longer.

Private tech firms have developed algorithms to take over some of the brainwork normally done by doctors, notably with a smartphone-based app in London called "GP at Hand", which is drawing many patients away from traditional surgeries. As Fry notes, "A seismic disruption of the NHS is on the cards." DB

EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) has done some cracking Halloween episodes in the past. Do you recall Abi stalking her sister Lauren in a Weeping Angel Mask? Mick Carter getting dressed up as Herman Munster for the party at the Queen Vic? Paul Nicholas turning up to scare Kathy while viewers across the land were saying, "Oh, I loved him in Just Good Friends. Do you remember? 'Awright, Pen.' Where's all his hair gone?" By comparison, 2018 has been a bit lacklustre, despite all of this week's episodes having been set on 31 October. OK, so we've had Hayley's birth crisis and Keegan turning vigilante, but the only bit of Halloween-related drama comes when luckless Billy Mitchell (Perry Fenwick) ends up fainting while apple bobbing after self-medicating with alcohol and painkillers to ease his dental pain. Not exactly A Nightmare on Elm Street, is it? Unless Freddy Krueger invades Billy's dreams and causes mayhem after he passes out. Now that I'd really like to see. DAVID BROWN

Dark Heart

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Another alleged paedophile falls through the cracks in the legal system, and he's out on the streets, easy prey for the crazy avenger who's disposing of such men in horrible ways. It's up to brilliant, tormented cop Will Wagstaffe (Tom Riley) to apply his amazing mind to what looks like a concerted campaign of retribution. But do the flashbacks to his own trauma blur his incisive vision? What he needs is a quickie with his lovely, remarkably understanding ex-girlfriend (a criminally wasted Miranda Raison).

As TV Crime Drama Rain makes the streets slick with fear, you won't lose any money betting that it will all end in a Derelict TV Crime Drama Warehouse. AG

Berlin Station

9.00pm More4

DRAMA You may find you need a notebook for this episode of the espionage drama: there's not much violence (that was last week) but there are lots of clandestine meetings, bugging sessions, dead drops and other essential tools of spy craft.

It's all quite confusing, but then that's partly the point. While old-hand agent Hector (Rhys Ifans) frets over his essential Saudi asset Faisal, who's not answering his phone, undercover man Daniel (Richard Armitage) is still on the trail of whoever's leaking the CIA's secrets to the German press. But someone has got their eyes on him, too. And the screws are being tightened on the Berlin office to get results. GILL CRAWFORD

Women on the Verge

10.00pm W

COMEDY Quacks' Tom Basden guests as Laura's "first love", an ex-musician who isn't the man Laura remembers when they bump into one another by chance. They later have a deliciously uncomfortable "date" where he has a few things to get off his chest.

Sharon Horgan and Lorna Martin's comedy has turned into an enormously likeable, considerably more funny and realistic version of Sex and the City. Laura, who can be hyper-annoying, actually starts to stand up for herself rather than being a welcome mat for unsuitable men. Her mates Katie (Nina Sosanya) and Alison (Eileen Walsh) aren't simply plot ballast either, as the former deals with an over-eager boyfriend and the latter with her overbearing in-laws. AG

This two-part film about the royals and their relationship with the Commonwealth has close enough access to make it a treat for monarchists. The Big Bang Theory

8.30pm E4

SITCOM Tonight's episode – almost like an entire series compressed into 20 minutes – is the best in some time. Not the funniest, necessarily, but the most engaging. When the end wasn't in sight, the show floundered. But knowing this is the last series has sharpened the writers' appetites, and accelerated the action. It's the raison d'être the show needed.

Tonight, Raj gets ready to meet his potential bride Anu (Rati Gupta), Stuart takes his new date home, and Penny's flippant remark on the subject of children ("If I saw one, I wouldn't throw a rock at it") leads to some heartfelt discussions with Leonard. So instead of just making gags about grown-up concerns, the gang and their chat are now evolving more realistically.

Perhaps the best moment – proof that wit can be wordless – comes when Howard and Bernie realise silently and simultaneously how sad their lives have become. The pay-off is a beauty, too. MARK BRAXTON

Lupita's progress

12 Years a Slave ★★★★★ 10.45pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Lupita Nyong'o is a stirring example of a contemporary Hollywood star. She was born in Mexico to Kenyan parents, but the family later returned to Nairobi, where Nyong'o made her stage debut, aged 14. Her education took her to the US, and she graduated from Hampshire College with a degree in film and theatre. After completing her master's at Yale, she made her film debut in 12 Years a Slave (review, p46), beating 1,000 others to the role. On seeing herself for the first time, she said, "I was a wreck," but her performance won her the supporting actress Oscar. ANDREW COLLINS

An icon in his prime

Rebel without a Cause ★★★★★ 5.05pm TCM

The theme of the teenager as alienated victim of family and society has never been done better than in this classic film. James Dean is superb as the frustrated youth from a well-to-do family, who rebels against his weak father and shrewish mother with such delinquent behaviour as boozing, knife-fighting and racing hot rods in hazardous games of "chicken". Natalie Wood and Sal Mineo also stand out in an excellent, youthful cast that's wonderfully controlled by director Nicholas Ray. TOM HUTCHINSON

FilmStruck in November

New additions to the subscriber service this month include two early works from Roman Polanski (Cul-de-Sac and Repulsion) as well as more recent offerings including Foxcatcher and Maps to the Stars. There's also a focus on the work of director Mike Leigh, with Happy-Go-Lucky, Another Year and the Bafta-winning Vera Drake (pictured). Leigh's latest, Peterloo, is in cinemas tomorrow. JAMIE HEALY

GETTING BETTER
Michael Portillo with students acting as First World War casualties

PICK OF THE DAY Portillo's Hidden History of Britain 9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Michael Portillo strolls through snowy Aldershot in a smart Russian hat for the first in a new run of this useful and absorbing social history series. He visits the beautiful, forbidding and now abandoned military hospital in the garrison town to uncover the pioneering work of reconstructive surgeons.

It's a sad building, deserted 20 years ago, now on the brink of refurbishment, and Portillo takes a quick tour of its enormous corridors and huge wards, which are now just shells of peeling paint and crumbling plasterwork.

But the hospital is merely a backdrop for Portillo's examination of the work of Harold Gillies, who helped to repair appalling wounds inflicted on British soldiers during the First World War, and Archibald McIndoe, who carried on his work during the Second.

And he meets the daughter of the first man to undergo gender re-assignment surgery to become a woman. ALISON GRAHAM

Unreported World

7.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The excellent current affairs strand returns to its unique niche on TV, set between the in-depth foreign dispatches on news programmes and fully fledged documentaries. At half an hour it is long enough to deliver the human detail of shocking stories – in tonight's case, of refugees from Venezuela who are pouring over the border into Colombia, currently the largest migration in the world.

Krishnan Guru-Murthy reports from the backwoods paths that were smugglers' routes but are now crowded with families escaping starvation in Venezuela where, as one philosophical 17-year-old says, "everything is worthless. You can be killed for anything." DAVID BUTCHER

The Great Model Railway Challenge

8.00pm Channel 5

ENTERTAINMENT The Wakefield Railway Modellers' Society was founded in 1958. To celebrate 60 years of modelling, they have sent a team to compete in Channel 5's challenge – and it's not going well. As time runs out, they have yet to test their track. It's up to stony-faced judge Steve Flint to intervene "one modeller to another" and appeal to the Wakefield captain. But his appeal falls on deaf – or very stubborn – ears. Will their trains run when they switch on?

It's a tense moment in an episode that mainly focuses on the subtleties of water effects – including a rather magnificent (though tiny, obviously) log flume. DB

The Lakes with Paul Rose

8.30pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 7pm)

DOCUMENTARY Is there anything that Paul Rose doesn't enjoy? He's in Eskdale, one of the remotest parts of the Lake District, where he throws himself into a spot of sheep washing, birds of prey training, steam train polishing and the seemingly chaotic sport of Cumberland wrestling.

In between he treks his way from Ravenglass on the Cumbrian coast to the highest point in England – Scafell Pike. Rose has boundless energy but even he is impressed by ultra-distance athlete John Fleetwood, who created the Lakeland Pilgrimage – a 175-mile run visiting seven "natural cathedrals" of rock that imbue a sense of serenity and stillness. JANE RACKHAM

Made in Great Britain

9.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

DOCUMENTARY Unlike its neighbours, York wasn't built on steel, wool or cotton. Its wealth came from chocolate. So, of our four contemporary craftworkers, you'd think that chef Charlton would be best placed to work with chocolate. Except he's never tried adding plaster of Paris or crushed seashells to his drinking chocolate, which unscrupulous Victorian grocers did.

The craftworkers' attempts to become skilled chocolatiers are not as interesting as hearing about the history of chocolate, from its origins as a luxury item through the invention of Kit Kat as a lunchbox snack in the 30s to the current trend for handmade, quality chocolates with exotic fillings. JR

Usually, Ross Barton (right) on Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) can't make it through until lunchtime without beating someone half to death or digging his bespoke armed-robbery balaclava out of his sock drawer. So it's a real surprise to see him get such a low-key, upbeat exit after five years of stretching the resources of the West Yorkshire police force to breaking point. Surely the writers should have done a Carlito's Way and have Ross die after being shot by an enemy while trying to board a train at

Hotten Station? A close-up on his eyes as he imagines the life he could have had in a tropical idyll with Rebecca and his son Moses?

Instead, we get the village bad boy saying his emotional goodbyes and preparing to head off on his own, now that Rebecca has decided to stay behind. But hopefully, Emmerdale is holding something back and the car that Ross departs in will be sent careering over the edge of a 100ft Pennine cliff just as the credits roll. DAVID BROWN

Would I Lie to You?

9.30pm BBC1

COMEDY Rapper and TV host Big Narstie lands in the studio and tilts the show off its axis. At one point he tells a story about how a fish slapped him in the face in Brixton market: it's not on a challenge card, he just volunteers the story while Scarlett Moffatt is being questioned over whether she once kept a goldfish in Ribena.

Narstie also shares a game called Ukabong he claims to have played with his family, which involved, he says, hitting each other with socks in the dark, and at one point he starts doodling during one of Lee Mack's stories – "No offence, he's boring the life out of me." For a show that tends to follow set patterns it's mad, unpredictable – and very funny.

Paul Weller: Radio 2 in Concert

10.00pm BBC4

MUSIC It's never easy for rock legends to grow old gracefully but Paul Weller manages it better than most. Resisting the temptation to lean on a beloved back catalogue from the Jam and Style Council days, he keeps tweaking his approach with new albums that chart fresh musical ground while remaining unmistakably Weller-ish.

For his latest, True Meanings, the ever-changing mod (now 60) has slipped into more of a lyrical, folk-rock style – and he'll air the best of the new stuff, and some classic older tracks, at this performance recorded yesterday at the BBC's Radio Theatre.

It's followed by a repeat of Guitar Heroes at the BBC. DAVID BUTCHER

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

CHAT SHOW Pray silence on Graham's sofa for Claire Foy! The Crown star trades Queen Elizabeth II's tiara and clipped English tones for Lisbeth Salander's dragon tattoo and Swedish accent in thriller The Girl in the Spider's Web. It's worlds away from Kurt Russell's latest project. He's playing Santa Claus in Netflix's The Christmas Chronicles and will surely have to put Graham on the naughty list.

Speaking of Christmas (in early November – really?), David Walliams is in to discuss his new children's book, The Ice Monster. We have a feeling that it'll be at the top of many a wish list in December.

Indie and Beyond with Shaun Ryder and Alan McGee

8.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Shaun Ryder and Alan McGee sharing a sofa? That would have been some party a quarter of a century ago. But, as Shaun once said, "It's great when you're straight... yeah" and this is much more tea and biscuits than pills and thrills, as the Happy Mondays singer and Creation Records boss amble chronologically across their favourite tracks.

Both have flawless taste, but a lot of their choices here are a bit too... TOTP 2. T-Rex, Bowie, the Pistols, the Specials: all the staples of BBC4's nostalgia shows.

As you'd expect, Shaun spits out some choice lines. "They all look like they've just gone shopping in Burtons," he says while watching Buzzcocks. This coming from a man wearing a hooded anorak and shorts. GARY ROSE

RT 4/4. Eskdale. Paul heads for one of the Lake District's less frequented corners, albeit the one which boasts England's highest mountain. Before taking on the ascent of Scafell Pike, Paul meets the people running one of the country's most scenic railways, has a close encounter with a vulture and grapples with the locals in a Cumberland wrestling interlude. See p112. Series producer Paul Greenan; Executive producer Nicola Addyman First shown on BBC1 North (S)

9.00 Made in Great Britain

RT 2/6. Chocolate. Steph McGovern is in York this week where she's joined by chocolatier Paul A Young, to show how chocolate went from being a luxury drink for the rich to the nation's favourite treat. Four enlisted makers start out by emulating the Georgians – roasting, shelling and grinding the beans from scratch; but to copy the early Victorians and create a more affordable drink, they are shocked to have to add plaster, brick dust and sea shells. By the 1930s, the makers are developing Kit Kats – which were invented in York – but it's only when they reach the present day that the four chocolatiers get to enjoy full creative leeway. See page 112. Director Kim Maddever; Series producer Dunk Barnes (S) (AD) (HD)

Visit Ebbing, virtually

Three Billboards outside Ebbing, Missouri

8.00pm Sky Premiere

Movie sets are usually closed affairs, shrouded in secrecy. Not so the shoot of this Bafta-winning drama (see My Movies, p37). By sheer luck, Google Street View cameras were rolling through Skyla, North Carolina, in May 2016, precisely when it was doubling for the fictional town of Ebbing. Now anyone can visit Skyla virtually and, clicking on Main Street, check out locations including Ebbing Police Station (above) and the Herald newspaper. North Carolina tourism also offers a three-day tour of the sites at www.visitnc.com. JAMIE HEALY

Willis cuts a deal

The Sixth Sense

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

Remember Bruce Willis in Broadway Brawler? You won't. The film notoriously didn't get made owing to a fall-out between Willis and director Lee Grant. As star/producer, Willis fired her and Disney pulled the plug. "On the hook" for $17.5 million, Disney chairman Joe Roth suggested Willis sign a three-picture deal. Armageddon and The Kid more than cleared the debt, while The Sixth Sense was a huge hit that also brought critical acclaim. Good call. ANDREW COLLINS

Fright at the museum

iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Director Peter Hyams pulls out all the stops in this super-slick horror about an ancient Amazonian beast creeping around Chicago's Field Museum of natural history. Can feisty scientist Penelope Ann Miller and detective Tom Sizemore overcome their fears to battle the blood-lusting demon of superstition?

Drama: The Road

Saturday 2.30pm Radio 4

TO NEIGHBOURS IT must have looked like an ordinary Victorian villa in the prosperous London suburb of Barnes. But to those in the know the Kneales’ house was the birthplace of television sci-fi – and a clutch of modern children’s classics.

“He was always thinking of stories, all the time,” says Judith Kerr, the celebrated children’s author, recalling the life and home she shared with Nigel Kneale, creator of the classic television series Quatermass. “He used to tell me the stories of things he was planning to write. He’d tell me the plot and it was always very exciting. Somebody would ring up in the middle and I’d get terribly cross because I wanted to know what happened next.”

But he wasn’t the only prolific, and influential, storyteller to inhabit the top floor of their three-storey home. Because in an adjoining room to where Kneale wrote his BBC scripts and novels, Kerr wrote her best-sellers The Tiger Who Came to Tea, the Mog books and When Hitler Stole Pink Rabbit, her semi-autobiographical novel about a Jewish girl escaping the Nazis.

“I was mostly drawing and he was writing. When one of us got to the end of something, we’d go and say, ‘Shall we stop now and have a break?’ Sometimes we had something to eat at home, sometimes we felt we had to get out, so we’d go to a very good Italian place near us and we’d have some pasta. We’d meet all the other people in Barnes who also should have been working at home. It was lovely.”

Today, we are not in Barnes, where Kerr, a sprightly 95, still lives and works, but a few miles away in the BBC's Maida Vale Studios, where she's observing actors record a play for Radio 4. It's not one of her own stories being transformed for the airwaves, but a story called The Road, written by Kneale (his pen-name was Nigel but to his wife he was always Tom), who died in 2006. This spooky 1963 drama – originally written for television – is about a philosopher and an inventor investigating reports of a haunting in a wood in the late 19th century.

In the 1950s, Kneale was renowned for creating the most spine-tingling stories of the time. In 1953, The Quatermass Experiment was one of the first national television events, airing just weeks after the nation had gathered around hastily acquired television sets for Elizabeth II's coronation. In science-fiction circles, Kneale is seen as so influential that without him we might not have Doctor Who, The X-Files or Black Mirror.

One of the stars of Toby Hadoke's adaptation of The Road is writer/actor Mark Gatiss, who says Kneale has had "an immense influence" on him: "Kneale's work seems to impinge on everything I do. He could always see slightly ahead and predict the future in all its dystopian horror. He still makes my hair stand on end."

Yet for someone so beloved in sci-fi circles, Kerr says, "Tom hated the term sci-fi, he hated the term horror, he just liked the word 'stories'. He liked imagining the future in an unnerving way." In his 1968 drama The Year of the Sex Olympics, a pre-Love Island satire on television, a family is stranded on an island and observed 24 hours a day by millions while being terrorised by a psychopath.

In 1954, Kneale caused huge controversy with his live BBC adaptation of George Orwell's Nineteen Eighty-Four, with Peter Cushing as Winston Smith. Live rats were used in Room 101, and questions were asked in Parliament about how anything so horrible could have been shown.

"Tom loved stories where something scary happened in ordinary situations," says Kerr, "and that's what I love about his work. They're very down to earth, which makes them, I suppose, more frightening, because if something extraordinary happens just as you're having your tea, it's very scary. Whereas if you're already in a strange place and something even stranger happens, well, it was a strange place to begin with."

WHILE CREATING HIS tales of catastrophe, Kneale helped Kerr with her Mog books over bowls of pasta: "Tom always had very good ideas for my books. I didn't discuss The Tiger Who Came to Tea with him – I made that up for my daughter after we'd seen the tigers in the zoo – but he had funny ideas for my other stories.

"In Mog and the Baby, everything goes wrong because the baby is crazy about the cat but the cat doesn't like the baby. The cat is too upset to eat its fish and the baby won't eat its dinner, so Tom said, 'Why don't you have the baby try to eat the fish?'" She laughs. "And that's the best thing in the book. Just by being with such a good writer, you can't help picking things up."

The Road was written in the year of the Cuban Missile Crisis and it's a response to living in terrifying times. "You imagine people want comfort," says Gatiss, "but they also want to find meaning by gazing into the darkness and facing up to what is genuinely frightening."

Adrian Scarborough and Susie Wokoma star alongside Gatiss, as does The Bletchley Circle's Hattie Morahan, whose father Christopher directed the original TV version in 1963. "It was amazing to hear my father had directed this originally," Morahan says. "He died last spring and so this felt like an opportunity not to miss. It's such a nice way of reconnecting with him."

As the actors take a break for lunch, I ask Kerr how she feels seeing her husband's play made for Radio 4, 55 years after it was first aired. "It's so lovely to see this happen," she says. "I wish Tom were here to see it, too." KASIA DELGADO

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama on 3: The Shadow of a Doubt Sunday 7.30pm Radio 3

You wait 55 years for a long-lost drama to come along (see The Road, left) and then two arrive in the same week.

In the case of Edith Wharton's The Shadow of a Doubt, however, the sole complete surviving manuscript of any of her plays was not unearthed until 2016. Written in 1901, it was abandoned before it reached the stage and this is, therefore, its world premiere.

Wharton (below) was keen to be acknowledged as a playwright but never achieved success, gaining acclaim instead for her novels.

This is quite astonishing, for the drama reflects so many of the themes in her fiction: the mores of society, exquisitely witty one-liners and the way in which women's hopes, dreams and ambitions were held hostage to fortune by men.

Set in Victorian London, the plot revolves around a woman from a lowly background who has married above her class, having nursed her husband's first wife after a serious riding accident.

This is no spoiler: it soon becomes evident that the nurse aided and abetted the assisted suicide of her mistress – perhaps the reason why the play was never staged. But the story is so much more complex than this and performed to perfection. I can easily see this in the 9pm BBC1 drama slot in the future.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Halloween night at Lower Loxley will end in horror (but for all the wrong reasons) when Elizabeth makes a costly error after getting distracted by Freddie's latest crisis. Meanwhile, teen tearaways Ben and Ruairi make their mark on Ambridge, but their behaviour quickly lands them in hot water. Will Brian discover the truth about what his son has been up to?

Neil is forced to take it easy following a mishap at Berrow Farm – leaving Hannah in charge. And Lynda makes her presence felt as the first rehearsals for the Christmas show commence. But surely nobody should be surprised by this? It happens every year...

SOUND BITES

Strictly with a twist

My big idea for a Saturday-night TV hit

I BUMPED INTO BBC director-general Lord Hall the other day. What he was doing on the dodgems I've no idea, but he was surprised when I rear-ended him. To apologise, I took him for coffee at a hot-dog stand. We had a friendly, wide-ranging conversation: from his plans for more Shakespeare on TV to the quality of my hot-dog sausage. We really did go from Bard to wurst.

Things got a little heated when I asked tentatively about who his successor might be. He looked a little crestfallen, stared down at his dodgem-scuffed Bruno Maglis and said he didn't want to leave but whoever got the job, Amol Rajan will have turned it down first.

I told him I had a brilliant idea for a programme. "That'll be a first," he quipped. In retaliation I shoved the remainder of my sausage-filled bun in his mouth, but as he turned purple I realised I'd gone too far. I got behind him and treated him to a Heimlich manoeuvre that undoubtedly saved his life, although it startled an elderly man 100 yards away who thought it was suddenly raining Frankfurter.

'Lord Hall peered at me. 'Eric,' he said, 'you're fired'

Recovering over another coffee, he thanked me and said he hadn't felt that close to death since the last Woman's Hour Christmas party.

LORD HALL ASKED me about my programme idea and I began to sketch it out on a mustard-stained napkin. "I thought you said it was a programme idea, not the annual accounts," he said, bafflingly.

I ploughed on. "What I have in mind is a big new Saturday-night show. You pair men and women together, and follow them during the week as they kiss and snog each other. Then, on Saturday night, in front of a live studio audience and millions of people, they make out on stage, with musical accompaniment. But here's the clever part. During the week we arrange for the couples to get photographed by the paparazzi in their time off - DOING BALLROOM DANCING! It's genius. Think of the headlines. The coverage. The ratings."

Lord Hall peered at me over the top of his

Dame Hilda Bracket half-moons. "Eric," he said, "that idea is so terrible, you're fired." I told him I had already left. He re-hired me, and then fired me. He said he hated the proposal but, trust me, if BBC1 ends up airing a Saturday-night show that's really all about couples doing it, you know I thought of it first.

THROUGH A GLASS, DARKLY

Ageing makes the passage of time more elastic. Those endless school summer holidays of our memories? Now a year seems to pass in the blink of an eye. Or so I reassured myself the other day when I noticed my windows at home were so filthy it could have been dark outside.

I texted my window cleaner to arrange a much-needed clean. In my mind it had been three or maybe four months since his previous visit. When he arrived I apologised for it having taken so long. "It must be three months!" I observed, optimistically.

He checked back in his phone messages and it turns out my windows were last cleaned 18 months ago. Ageing? Appalling standards? Cheapness? Too lazy to clean them myself? Possibly all of the above. Now, when was my last six-monthly dental check-up?

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

When in doubt, reach for the Lark

The launch of Our Classical Century, BBC television and radio's upcoming celebration of 100 years of classical music broadcasting, began with a lone violinist perched on a metal staircase above a re-purposed industrial space playing the cadenza from The Lark Ascending. This same piece is likely to figure early on in Radio 3's contribution to the season as Essential Classics counts down its top 100 moments between 1918 and the present day, one of which will be the first public performance of Vaughan Williams's composition, which took place in 1920. That association has become more explicit over the years. In Sebastian Faulks's war novel Birdsong the hero climbs out of his trench on Armistice Day to hear the lark singing "in the unharmed air above him".

You're my Wonderwall

The Lark Ascending is scientifically proven in test after test to be the nation's favourite piece of classical music. I assume classical music radio stations have a special button on the presenter's desk that they can simply push to summon The Lark. I measure the self-belief of classical music radio in terms of their readiness to reach for The Lark. On Classic FM it seems I hear it every hour, but that surely can't be the case. For a radio programmer The Lark Ascending has much to recommend it. It's self-contained. In terms of a title it does what it says on the tin, which is an immense advantage. It's British. It's a rare island of familiarity in the great ocean of the unknown, which is classical music for most people. It's the Wonderwall of the genre.

Cowan's class act

The tricky thing about programming classical music is to provide a selection of music that has substance enough for those who wish to listen, while dispensing pleasant background music for those who simply want to hear. One programme that does this very well is Cowan's Classics on Saturday evening on Classic FM. It's presented by Rob Cowan (pictured), who used to front Radio 3's Essential Classics. Cowan paces it like a pop show, providing enough information to enhance your enjoyment of what he's about to play, balancing his selections from his artist of the week with the guarantee of hearing something from the Classic FM Hall of Fame, and always providing the reassurance that he's listening to the music with the same enjoyment as you are. It's exemplary music broadcasting.

Today's Choices

6.30pm Radio 3

Love or power - which would you choose? That's the dilemma at the core of Wagner's Der Ring des Nibelungen (The Nibelung's Ring), the four-opera saga that Radio 3 is broadcasting over the next few weeks in recordings of the Royal Opera's current revival (above, with Johannes Martin Kränzle as Alberich), conducted by Antonio Pappano. Beginning in the depths of the Rhine and ending with a stately march along a rainbow bridge to the mountain-top fortress Valhalla, The Ring's opening episode, Das Rheingold (The Rhine Gold), encompasses a mythic cast of gods, giants, dwarves and river nymphs, all vying for possession of the golden ring that bestows supreme power but also now carries a fatal curse.

Archive on 4: The Good Old Days - the Politics of Nostalgia

8.00pm Radio 4

Harking back to the good old days has always had a role in politics but seasoned commentator David Aaronovitch has never known it so strong in his lifetime - and it worries him. Think Trump and his promise of a "return to happier times" or the growth of far-right parties in Europe with nationalist nostalgia at their core. Using archive ranging from playwright Dennis Potter to the League of Empire Loyalists in 1958, this pertinent piece proves things are never what they used to be.

Today's Choices

Slow Sunday

All day 6 Music

6 Music have decided to reflect the nights getting longer by holding a Slow Sunday of music, which started in the early hours of Saturday night. Highlights feature a spellbinding session on Mary Anne Hobbs (7.00am) from Radiohead's Thom Yorke, including the score he wrote for the new horror film Suspiria; at 4.00pm Amy Lamé shines a light on some of the more soporific releases of recent weeks including tracks from Spiritualized, Christine and the Queens and Chilly Gonzales; and Stuart Maconie's Freak Zone (8.00pm) asks listeners to put something unusual on the TV, mute it, then sit back and listen to this slow-motion soundtrack instead. But the absolute coup is Russell Crowe's Slow Sunday (1.00pm) – yes, that Russell Crowe (above). The Hollywood behemoth plays his favourite mellow tracks, including Tom Waits and Johnny Cash.

JANE ANDERSON

Open Book

4.00pm Radio 4

Until 2007, Minette Walters was a prolific writer of crime fiction, releasing 14 bestselling thrillers in almost as many years. But it was a schedule, she said in an interview a decade later, that left her "stressed out... I needed a break. I felt that I needed a life." In 2017 she returned with her first historical novel, The Last Hours; as the follow-up is published this month, she talks to Mariella Frostrup about her hiatus, and her change of literary direction. Today's Choices

Book of the Week: Mad, Bad, Dangerous to Know

9.45am FM/12.30am Radio 4

A father battling against hopelessness, to quote James Joyce's alter-ego Stephen Dedalus in Ulysses, is a necessary evil. It's an observation that naturally reflects Joyce's turbulent relationship with his own pappie, a contradictory man whose passions included storytelling, singing and the bottle. If it's somewhat clichéd to suggest a bad father makes for a good writer, Colm Tóibín (above) makes a refreshing case for it in this Book of the Week, which explores the lives of three literary fathers: John Stanislaus Joyce, William Wilde and John Butler Yeats. The output of their progeny is daunting, and yet through the eyes of these three fathers Tóibín – who is himself the reader – reveals the links and parallel lives that would come to shape the 19th and early 20th-century Dublin as depicted by its most famous writers. TOM GOULDING

Ghosts in the Machine

11.00pm Radio 4

Admirers of the venerable Laurie Taylor know him for his Thinking Allowed series but they might not realise that he is also president of the Rationalist Association – not a man to accept stories of the supernatural with ease. And so it is with due respect to Laurie that he delivers a fair and exhaustive examination here on EVP: electronic voice phenomenon. There are some fascinating examples to test our ears and a hilarious (although it really shouldn't be) version of Jingle Bells. JANE ANDERSON

1/5. Obsession. Donald Macleod examines five of Bruckner's personality traits, beginning with the composer's obsessive nature, from bar-counting to full-blown numeromania. Not long after the completion of his First Symphony, and with escalating stress levels, Bruckner had a nervous breakdown and spent three months in a sanatorium. He was diagnosed with numeromania, which now would probably be recognised as a form of OCD. Locus iste Polyphony, conductor Stephen Layton Symphony No 1 in C minor (1877 version, ed Haas) (1st mvt) Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra, conductor Bernard Haitink Mass No 3 in F minor (Kyrie) Ingela Bohlin (soprano), Ingeborg Danz (mezzo), Hans Jörg Mammel (tenor), Alfred Reiter (baritone), RIAS Chamber Choir, Orchestre des Champs-Élysées, conductor Philippe Herreweghe Symphony No 5 in B flat (3rd mvt: Trio) Dresden Staatskapelle, conductor Giuseppe Sinopoli The Germanic Host Brian Clickner and Jack Richardson (tenors), Jeffrey Stell (baritone), Allan Mosher (bass), Roberts Wesleyan College Chorale, Brass Ensemble, conductor Robert Shewan See also 2.00pm

Britain in Bits with Ross Noble

11.00pm Radio 4

As is the wont of the modern-day celebrity, an appearance on a show has to include the opportunity for them to promote their latest film/play/book/shopping list. And so, this permits Fern Britton the chance to plug her current tour in Calendar Girls. What is more surprising, though, is the vivacity with which she talks about her forthcoming BBC2 series where she wrestles animals to the ground, from deer to Highland cattle. Welcome to the surreal world of Ross Noble (above) and his new "magazine show", in which he is joined by guests to look at the oddities of life in modern Britain. As well as Fern's unique animal-felling skills, we get extracts from the prequel of Les Mis, featuring a comical star turn from Summer Strallen. As delightfully bizarre as one would expect. JANE ANDERSON

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

As we approach the centenary of the end of the First World War, tonight's concert pairs music by Ivor Gurney and Arthur Bliss, two British composers who fought in the conflict – the one losing his mind, the other a beloved brother – with a rarity by Benjamin Britten. Written to welcome home the last British volunteers from the Spanish Civil War, and premiered just months before the start of the Second World War, his Ballad of Heroes underscores his lifelong pacifism by acknowledging the debt we owe to those who fight for peace and liberty: "Your life is yours, for which they died."

The Full Works Concert

8.00pm Classic FM
Blow out that jack-o'-lantern, draw the curtains tight, barricade the door against marauding trick-or-treaters and settle down to a spooky evening in, as Jane Jones devotes the first section of tonight's record show to a special Halloween mix of haunting classics. With that stalwart of horror-film soundtracks, Bach's Tocatta and Fugue in D minor, to set the scene and Beethoven's "Moonlight" Sonata to add the mood lighting, Jones's selection of scary scores ranges from the cack-handed spell-casting of Dukas's The Sorcerer's Apprentice to the wild witches' sabbath of Mussorgsky's A Night on the Bare Mountain and the bone-rattling frenzy of Saint-Saëns's Danse Macabre, in which the Devil himself makes a midnight appearance, rousing the dead from their graves with his fiddle and forcing them to dance until dawn. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Nurse

11.00pm Radio 4
New listeners start here: Paul Whitehouse's observational comedy, which begins its third series tonight, sends community mental health nurse Elizabeth (Esther Coles) to the homes of her patients, several of whom are played by Whitehouse. His skill is to use old-school comic characters to address the issues of today. Annoying neighbour Maurice is revealed to be a Brexiteer while old lag Billy regrets the closure of pubs because it's harder for him to sell stolen goods. Meanwhile cat lady April (Rosie Cavaliero) has decided to become a witch. Classy humour from a genre master. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Today's Choices

Drama: Tracks: Chimera 2.15pm Radio 4

Matthew Broughton's dark conspiracy thriller Tracks returns for a third series, along with its central character Dr Helen Ash (played this time round by Hattie Morahan, above). From the start it's an absorbing and intriguing listen, the Doctor Who-esque soundtrack adding to a feeling of chill and foreboding. Even if you're unfamiliar with the previous stories, you'll still want to keep listening and listening – if only to pull together the multiple strands of this complex tale. So what links an unexpected pregnancy, a mysterious phone message, and a man on the roof of a high-rise office building?

CAROLINE MEYER

The Sympathy of Things 11.30am Radio 4

Imagine the pride on the face of a successful Bake Off contestant or one of the artisan craftspeople who create new from old on recycling show Money for Nothing. Well, that's what you hear in this programme (the first of two) from Turner Prize-winning architects and first-time radio presenters Amica Dall and Giles Smith. They talk to the unlikeliest of subjects – staff on the production line at the Armitage Shanks factory, the departing head of design at Ikea – and each has a tale to tell of how modern manufacturing is not as hands-off as we might imagine. In examining our complex emotional relationship with the everyday products that surround us, from toasters to toilets, they ask if modern life would be improved by a return to more traditional creative techniques – or if everything would just become a lot more expensive. Today's Choices

Would You Go to Bed with Me?

11.00am Radio 4

Between 1978 and 1982, two American academics conducted an investigation into the gender differences in receptivity to sexual offers. They asked men and women of "average attractiveness" to approach people they liked the look of and ask them one of the three following questions: "Would you go out tonight?"; "Will you come over to my apartment?"; and "Would you go to bed with me?" Not one woman agreed to sleep with her interrogator, whereas a large number of the men were quite happy to have sex with the women who approached them. The Times's science editor Tom Whipple reflects upon this infamous experiment and asks if, 40 years on, gender sex drives have witnessed any changes. He draws on contributions from feminists, socio-biologists, philosophers and psychologists to reach an answer. JANE ANDERSON

10.00pm Radio 3

Jonathan Coe's 2001 novel The Rotters' Club was to some extent a hymn to Birmingham, and with its sequels – The Closed Circle (2004) and the just published (to great acclaim) Middle England – he has come up with a state-of-the-nation trilogy that is an excellent jumping-off point for tonight's edition of The Verb. The Midlands is its focus, with decidedly non-metropolitan host Ian McMillan joined by Coe, Birmingham-based poet Liz Berry, and spoken word artist Polarbear (real name Steven Camden), whose work has been performed at the Birmingham Rep theatre. SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jodie Halford BBC Essex

Age 30

Current job Presenter of BBC Essex's new weeknight show Your Essex, focusing on local villages, towns and cities (Monday–Thursday, 7.00pm).

CV Born and brought up in Chelmsford, Essex, she studied modern languages at Durham University and broadcast journalism at the London College of Communication. Joined Southend Radio in 2011, then BBC Essex 2012-14, BBC News Online 2014-18 (winning a Digital England Award 2017), rejoining BBC Essex as a newsreader this year.

Best moment "My new show. Bringing Essex voices and Essex stories to radio is a pleasure and a privilege."

Worst moment "Standing in on the Saturday lunchtime show. Desperate to make an impression, I managed to confuse 60s soul singer Wilson Pickett with 90s girl band Wilson Phillips. So much for my pop knowledge. Oh dear!"

Off air "I live in a modern house in a village near Chelmsford with my husband Jez, a software consultant, and our tabby cat, Beast. I watch a lot of movies – at home and in the cinema – and enjoy swimming and cycling."

First radio memory "Peter Holmes and Gavin McCoy on the old Essex Radio (now Heart Essex). I now work with Peter at BBC Essex."

Favourite broadcasters "Jane Garvey for her wit, warmth and integrity – I love Fortunately, her podcast with Fi Glover. Sara Cox, properly funny and so natural. And Ken Bruce – I'm a big PopMaster fan."

Ambition "To create radio that people can really feel part of. Come and relax with me!"

Dream job "My new one. And one day I'd like to write a book, though I still need an idea for my first novel."

Secret skills "I enjoy baking and I'm told my carrot cake is top-notch. I did karate when I was younger but broke an opponent's collar bone, which rather put me off. And I'm double jointed, so I can do freaky things with my shoulder blades and my thumb."

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jodie Halford BBC Essex

Age 30

Current job Presenter of BBC Essex's new weeknight show Your Essex, focusing on local villages, towns and cities (Monday–Thursday, 7.00pm).

CV Born and brought up in Chelmsford, Essex, she studied modern languages at Durham University and broadcast journalism at the London College of Communication. Joined Southend Radio in 2011, then BBC Essex 2012-14, BBC News Online 2014-18 (winning a Digital England Award 2017), rejoining BBC Essex as a newsreader this year.

Best moment "My new show. Bringing Essex voices and Essex stories to radio is a pleasure and a privilege."

Worst moment "Standing in on the Saturday lunchtime show. Desperate to make an impression, I managed to confuse 60s soul singer Wilson Pickett with 90s girl band Wilson Phillips. So much for my pop knowledge. Oh dear!"

Off air "I live in a modern house in a village near Chelmsford with my husband Jez, a software consultant, and our tabby cat, Beast. I watch a lot of movies – at home and in the cinema – and enjoy swimming and cycling."

First radio memory "Peter Holmes and Gavin McCoy on the old Essex Radio (now Heart Essex). I now work with Peter at BBC Essex."

Favourite broadcasters "Jane Garvey for her wit, warmth and integrity – I love Fortunately, her podcast with Fi Glover. Sara Cox, properly funny and so natural. And Ken Bruce – I'm a big PopMaster fan."

Ambition "To create radio that people can really feel part of. Come and relax with me!"

Dream job "My new one. And one day I'd like to write a book, though I still need an idea for my first novel."

Secret skills "I enjoy baking and I'm told my carrot cake is top-notch. I did karate when I was younger but broke an opponent's collar bone, which rather put me off. And I'm double jointed, so I can do freaky things with my shoulder blades and my thumb."

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jodie Halford BBC Essex

Age 30
Current job Presenter of BBC Essex's new weeknight show Your Essex, focusing on local villages, towns and cities (Monday–Thursday, 7.00pm).

CV Born and brought up in Chelmsford, Essex, she studied modern languages at Durham University and broadcast journalism at the London College of Communication. Joined Southend Radio in 2011, then BBC Essex 2012-14, BBC News Online 2014-18 (winning a Digital England Award 2017), rejoining BBC Essex as a newsreader this year.

Best moment "My new show. Bringing Essex voices and Essex stories to radio is a pleasure and a privilege."

Worst moment "Standing in on the Saturday lunchtime show. Desperate to make an impression, I managed to confuse 60s soul singer Wilson Pickett with 90s girl band Wilson Phillips. So much for my pop knowledge. Oh dear!"

Off air "I live in a modern house in a village near Chelmsford with my husband Jez, a software consultant, and our tabby cat, Beast. I watch a lot of movies – at home and in the cinema – and enjoy swimming and cycling."

First radio memory "Peter Holmes and Gavin McCoy on the old Essex Radio (now Heart Essex). I now work with Peter at BBC Essex."

Favourite broadcasters "Jane Garvey for her wit, warmth and integrity – I love Fortunately, her podcast with Fi Glover. Sara Cox, properly funny and so natural. And Ken Bruce – I'm a big PopMaster fan."

Ambition "To create radio that people can really feel part of. Come and relax with me!"

Dream job "My new one. And one day I'd like to write a book, though I still need an idea for my first novel."

Secret skills "I enjoy baking and I'm told my carrot cake is top-notch. I did karate when I was younger but broke an opponent's collar bone, which rather put me off. And I'm double jointed, so I can do freaky things with my shoulder blades and my thumb."

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Jodie Halford BBC Essex

Age 30

Current job Presenter of BBC Essex's new weeknight show Your Essex, focusing on local villages, towns and cities (Monday–Thursday, 7.00pm).

CV Born and brought up in Chelmsford, Essex, she studied modern languages at Durham University and broadcast journalism at the London College of Communication. Joined Southend Radio in 2011, then BBC Essex 2012-14, BBC News Online 2014-18 (winning a Digital England Award 2017), rejoining BBC Essex as a newsreader this year.

Best moment "My new show. Bringing Essex voices and Essex stories to radio is a pleasure and a privilege."

Worst moment "Standing in on the Saturday lunchtime show. Desperate to make an impression, I managed to confuse 60s soul singer Wilson Pickett with 90s girl band Wilson Phillips. So much for my pop knowledge. Oh dear!"

Off air "I live in a modern house in a village near Chelmsford with my husband Jez, a software consultant, and our tabby cat, Beast. I watch a lot of movies – at home and in the cinema – and enjoy swimming and cycling."

First radio memory "Peter Holmes and Gavin McCoy on the old Essex Radio (now Heart Essex). I now work with Peter at BBC Essex."

Favourite broadcasters "Jane Garvey for her wit, warmth and integrity – I love Fortunately, her podcast with Fi Glover. Sara Cox, properly funny and so natural. And Ken Bruce – I'm a big PopMaster fan."

Ambition "To create radio that people can really feel part of. Come and relax with me!"

Dream job "My new one. And one day I'd like to write a book, though I still need an idea for my first novel."

Secret skills "I enjoy baking and I'm told my carrot cake is top-notch. I did karate when I was younger but broke an opponent's collar bone, which rather put me off. And I'm double jointed, so I can do freaky things with my shoulder blades and my thumb."

Face behind the voice

Jodie Halford BBC Essex

Age 30

Current job Presenter of BBC Essex's new weeknight show Your Essex, focusing on local villages, towns and cities (Monday–Thursday, 7.00pm).

CV Born and brought up in Chelmsford, Essex, she studied modern languages at Durham University and broadcast journalism at the London College of Communication. Joined Southend Radio in 2011, then BBC Essex 2012-14, BBC News Online 2014-18 (winning a Digital England Award 2017), rejoining BBC Essex as a newsreader this year.

Best moment "My new show. Bringing Essex voices and Essex stories to radio is a pleasure and a privilege."

Worst moment "Standing in on the Saturday lunchtime show. Desperate to make an impression, I managed to confuse 60s soul singer Wilson Pickett with 90s girl band Wilson Phillips. So much for my pop knowledge. Oh dear!"

Off air "I live in a modern house in a village near Chelmsford with my husband Jez, a software consultant, and our tabby cat, Beast. I watch a lot of movies – at home and in the cinema – and enjoy swimming and cycling."

First radio memory "Peter Holmes and Gavin McCoy on the old Essex Radio (now Heart Essex). I now work with Peter at BBC Essex."

Favourite broadcasters "Jane Garvey for her wit, warmth and integrity – I love Fortunately, her podcast with Fi Glover. Sara Cox, properly funny and so natural. And Ken Bruce – I'm a big PopMaster fan."

Ambition "To create radio that people can really feel part of. Come and relax with me!"

Dream job "My new one. And one day I'd like to write a book, though I still need an idea for my first novel."

Secret skills "I enjoy baking and I'm told my carrot cake is top-notch. I did karate when I was younger but broke an opponent's collar bone, which rather put me off. And I'm double jointed, so I can do freaky things with my shoulder blades and my thumb."

Extending civil partnerships to everyone is a game-changer for millions, says Paul Lewis

IN FUTURE, IN England and Wales, a man and a woman who live together will be able to form a civil partnership as an alternative to getting married. There are more than three million such cohabiting couples, but under the law as it now stands they have none of the rights of married couples, no matter how long they have been together and even if they have children. There is no such thing as a “common law” marriage as many still believe.

A civil partnership will give a couple the same rights as if they were married, but without the patriarchal baggage that many see in the tradition of marriage. The financial advantages last throughout their relationship. If one pays tax and the other does not, then the marriage allowance is worth up to £238 a year for the tax-paying partner.

In England and Wales, when an unmarried couple split up they have no rights to each other’s property. A married couple who divorce normally split their property, money and pensions equally. Forming a civil partnership will bring those same rights.

On death, a married or civil partnered person can leave their entire estate to their spouse or partner without incurring inheritance tax. That is particularly important if they share a home that’s worth more than the current inheritance tax allowance (called the “nil rate band”) of £325,000.

THE SURVIVOR IN an unmarried couple may have to sell their home to pay the tax, so forming a civil partnership would avoid that problem. If the survivor is below state pension age they will normally get a bereavement support payment, worth a total of £4,300 – or £9,800 if there are dependent children. It is not paid to a bereaved partner who just lived with the deceased person.

Equalities Minister Penny Mordaunt said the law will be changed soon, but there will first be a consultation to sort out the legal issues. The Scottish government is already consulting on change. In Northern Ireland there is currently no government so a change cannot be considered until the political impasse there is resolved.

RT MONEY PARTNER

WILLS FROM £99

FREE PROFESSIONAL ADVICE ON WILLS AND TRUSTS

While we all know how important it is to have a will, around 60 per cent* of people in Britain are currently without one. In this situation, your loved ones have little or no control over how your estate will be distributed.

When someone dies without a will (this is known as dying intestate), the Government has rules that set out how your estate is to be distributed, and unmarried partners are not automatically entitled to your estate. Contesting these outcomes can be costly, time-consuming and emotionally fraught.

A professionally written will allows you to have control over who receives your assets and, if necessary, when. Also, depending on your circumstances, you may want to consider adding some form of trust into your will. A trust will assist in:

- Protecting your share of the family home against possible means-testing or disinheritance by remarriage in the future
- Helping you to leave some of your estate to a vulnerable or disabled beneficiary
- Ensuring your estate is protected in complex family circumstances, such as divorce or bankruptcy

It’s also important that you fully understand inheritance tax allowances and how trusts can be utilised to reduce this liability.

To make sure you get things right, it’s vital to get professional estate planning advice. A will is one of the most important legal documents you will make and it is crucial you get the correct planning in place to ensure your wishes are carried out.

READER OFFER FREE no-obligation consultation and recommendation on your will and any trusts you should consider, based on your circumstances and legacy objectives. After this, if you’d like to proceed, Key offers to write or rewrite your will for £99, or both of your wills for £172 excluding trusts. Offer ends 30 November 2018.

To arrange your will, or find out more about trusts, call free on 0808 208 5411
To download a free guide please visit radiotimes.com/wills

*Source: Unbiased – October 2018. Usual price £172 for a single will, £344 for both of your wills including VAT. Excludes writing trusts into a new will or adding trusts not already included in an existing will, the cost of which will be quoted and only charged for if you instruct Key to proceed. Products only available in England and Wales. Cannot be combined with any other offer.

REPORTING HAS NEVER been a safe profession, but what's changed is that nowadays journalists are regarded as targets, as fair game, as an extension of Western governments. Correspondents and aid workers are slaughtered on camera by barbaric Islamic State fighters who see the reporters as no different from enemy soldiers. It is a perilous job; more perilous than ever before. And one reason is that modern technology in TV news allows us to broadcast, live if we choose to, closer to conflict zones than ever before.

In the world of 24/7 breaking news, it is all about being live as it happens, at the scene, up to the minute. Exciting, breathless and edgy reporting from the front line as the bullets and the rocket-propelled grenades fly. Get that sound. Get that picture. Get it all. Because if we don't, the opposition will.

But wait, stop a moment, let's pause and think. Just because you can doesn't always mean you should. Covering any conflict is dangerous, but as we've witnessed recently, covering conflicts and uprisings can be particularly difficult when there are no clear front lines and certainly no rules.

The bravery of many journalists goes without saying, but it is perhaps important that the expectations placed upon them, or which they place upon themselves, do not expose them to an unnecessary level of danger.

And I see other reasons to worry. Rigorous cost-cutting within the media means there are fewer overseas-based correspondents who build up real experience on their patch. Instead, there is an increasing tendency to use so-called parachute correspondents, who are less able to assess dangerous situations in conflict-affected areas. I know, because I was one for several years. They do not have the same connections or contacts or knowledge, and will be more inclined to make errors of judgement. These are serious issues.

'I can see a future with less and less proper journalism'

For me, the great sadness of television news at the moment is that just as we reach a golden age in terms of technology, allowing news to be delivered much more quickly and in so many different ways, the budgets for covering news are contracting. I can see a future with less and less foreign reporting, proper journalism, eyewitness reporting across the world. Getting into where

ALAMY/GETTY

Why we need to pay for news on locally, but they also offer real democratic value. The presence of a journalist at a local council meeting, for example, makes local politicians more accountable and keeps tabs on their behaviour.

And the same is happening to local newspapers in the United States. David Simon, the creator of the crime series The Wire and a former reporter on the Baltimore Sun, put his fears very clearly: "The the story is, establishing for yourself what is going on and producing original pictures and script to inform the viewer.

Blank-canvas journalism is being there, finding out and discovering, and reporting what you find. No bias, no slant, no preconceptions, no agenda, no prejudice. It is pure journalism – the hardest sort of journalism, because often it is in parts of the world that are difficult, expensive and dangerous to reach.

It is the kind of journalism practised by the John Simpsons, John Irvines, Bill Neelys, Lyse Doucets, Lindsey Hilsums, Jeremy Bowens and Alex Crawfords of this world. They are among the great exponents of blank-canvas journalism still on our screens. But for how long?

THE BALANCE OF power is already shifting towards the news presenter as a personality. It is sometimes almost as if the person delivering the news is more important than the news itself. Some clearly think they are. The best news anchors are journalists first and celebrities second, if at all.

It really is ironic that it is so much easier to get your journalism out there, and yet smaller budgets mean there is less journalism being done. And if broadcast news is facing unprecedented challenges, then technological changes and cost-cutting are leaving many newspapers staring at extinction.

More than 170 local titles have closed in the UK in the past ten years, as readership is eroded by other sources of news and local media groups face declining advertising revenue and sales. It is immensely sad. The local newspaper where I began my career, the Bournemouth Echo (as it is now known), still survives, but in a radically altered environment – and for how long?

Local newspapers are an essential part of the journalistic food chain, with reporters in local communities playing a crucial role. They not only allow communities to know what is going next ten or 15 years in this country are going to be a halcyon era for state and local political corruption," he said. "It's going to be one of the great times to be a corrupt politician. I really envy them."

His point, of course, being that as the number of journalists scrutinising a politician's every move declines, so the opportunity to misbehave increases.

The British satirist on US TV, John Oliver, was even more colourful: "Not having reporters at government meetings is like a teacher leaving her room of seventh graders to supervise themselves. Best-case scenario, Britney gets gum in her hair. Worst-case scenario, you no longer have a school."

MANY NEWSPAPERS ARE slowly moving to an online presence to try to make money. But as Oliver points out, there's the danger of "the temptation to graduate to what gets the most clicks. News organisations badly need to have leaders who appreciate that what's popular is not always what's most important." Precisely.

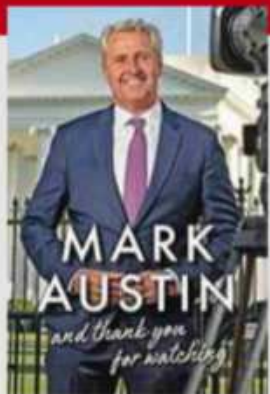

The fact is, people are going to have to get used to paying for reliable news. Or, as John Oliver says, "we are all going to pay for it".

Levison of Arabia

The TV adventurer is off on his travels again

ARABIA: A JOURNEY THROUGH THE HEART OF THE MIDDLE EAST LEVISON WOOD

Days after his last TV adventure – Russia to Iran: Crossing the Wild Frontier – aired on Channel 4, Levison Wood was embarking on another, even greater, journey: travelling 5,000 miles across Arabia. Over four and a half months, he visited 13 countries. In Arabia: a Journey through the Heart of the Middle East (£21.50, incl p&p), his fifth book, he recounts his trek in typically vivid detail, recalling the highs – such as celebrating Christmas in Bethlehem – as well as the lows: seeing the destruction wrought on war-torn Syria.

A SPARK OF LIGHT JODI PICOULT Graham Norton Saturday 10am Radio 2

Jodi Picoult is nothing if not consistent. In 26 years, the American author has written 24 novels, each combining topical issues and ethical dilemmas with twist-packed storylines that leave readers hooked. It's a winning formula: she's sold more than 14 million copies. Now her latest, A Spark of Light (£16.99, incl p&p), is earning critical plaudits, too: set in a Mississippi abortion clinic where a gunman is holding staff and patrons hostage, it tells its story in reverse, unfolding to offer a riveting, timely take on the debate surrounding women's rights and gun control.

THE TURN OF MIDNIGHT MINETTE WALTERS Open Book Sunday 4pm Radio 4

The Last Hours, published last year, was the 18th book from the queen of crime fiction, Minette Walters – except it wasn't a crime novel. Her first full-length book in a decade marked a change of direction for the award-winning writer, whose works have been translated into 35 languages. It was a historical tale, set in the 14th-century Dorsetshire community of Develish, which is quarantined after an outbreak of plague. The Turn of Midnight (£17.50, incl p&p) picks up the story as the people of Develish, led by the bold young widow Lady Anne, explore what's left of the outside world.

To order for £18 including p&p, call 03330 160 730, quoting RTBKS.

1 To make the biscuits, tip the flour, salt and butter into a bowl. Rub the butter into the flour until the mixture resembles fine crumbs. Stir in the sugar and vanilla paste, then add the egg yolk. Using your hands, bring the dough together. Wrap in clingfilm and chill for 30 minutes.

2 For the marshmallow, pour 100ml of water into a small bowl, then sprinkle the gelatine over the top to soften. Set aside. Tip the sugar into a pan, add the glucose and 100ml of water and cook over a low heat to dissolve. Increase the heat and bring to the boil. Cook until the syrup reaches 120°C/248°F on a sugar thermometer.

3 While the syrup is cooking, whisk the egg white in the bowl of a stand mixer until firm but not dry. As soon as the syrup reaches 120°C/248°F, remove from the heat and stir in the gelatine.

4 With the mixer on full speed, pour the sugar syrup over the egg white in a steady stream. Whisk for 5-8 minutes until the mixture is thick and glossy. Whisk in the vanilla extract, then spoon the mixture into a medium piping bag fitted with a 1cm round nozzle.

5 Leave to cool to a perfect piping consistency - cool, but not completely set.

6 Heat the oven to 180°C/160°C fan/gas 4. On a floured worktop, roll out the dough to 3mm thick. Cut out 16 circles with the 8cm cutter and place on the baking sheets. Freeze for 10 minutes, then bake for 10–12 minutes, until just golden. Remove from the oven, cool on the tray for 3–5 minutes, then transfer to a wire rack to cool completely.

7 To assemble, spread some of the melted chocolate over the bases of 8 biscuits. Leave to set. Pipe a layer of marshmallow over the remaining 8 biscuits.

8 Turn the chocolate-coated biscuits chocolate-side down. Spread the upper side with a layer of jam, then place a marshmallow-coated biscuit on top, marshmallow-side facing downwards.

9 Place the biscuits on a wire rack over a tray and pour the remaining melted chocolate over the top. Spread with a palette knife to create a smooth layer, spreading the chocolate around the edges until the biscuits are covered. Leave to set before serving.

DID YOU KNOW...?

■ The great British public got their first taste of the Wagon Wheel in 1948 at London's Olympia Food Fair. It was 22-year-old Garry Weston who came up with the idea of the chocolate-covered treat for his father's bakery business in Australia. That makes the mallow-centred biscuit sandwich (originally without jam) 70 years old this year.

■ They were marketed as Weston Wagon Wheels to take full advantage of the 1940s fascination with all things Wild West, and sold in Canada as well as Australia and the UK. Today we still consume 90 million of them a year.

■ Some people say that they're smaller today but makers Burton's insist it's just that our hands have got bigger. For the record, the current size is 75mm in diameter.

■ So how do you eat a Wagon Wheel? Some like to take it apart and lick off the mallow before scoffing the biscuits. Whatever you do, don't stuff it into your face in one go, as in the classic French and Saunders sketch... FIONA HUGHES

City of spies

Discover the dark side of Berlin that Rhys Ifans fell in love with while filming his latest role as a CIA agent

Berlin Station

Thursday 9.00pm More4

LIKE SO MANY secret agent dramas before it, from Alfred Hitchcock's 1966 thriller Torn Curtain and Charlize Theron's 2017 hit Atomic Blonde to TV's Homeland, More4's new thriller is set in Europe's capital of spies.

It doesn't completely stick to the rulebook of on-screen espionage, though: Berlin Station eschews the Cold War for the present day.

Richard Armitage plays a CIA agent who is sent to the intelligence agency's German outpost to track down a mole.

Nevertheless, you could be forgiven for thinking that little has changed since the Berlin Wall came down. The American agents spend much of their time skulking around grimy apartments and dilapidated buildings – much to the enjoyment of Armitage's co-star Rhys Ifans. “The interesting locations for me have been not the tourist spots, not the traditional iconography of Berlin,” he says, “but the scenes in what appear to be old bomb sites or buildings that have been taken down and there's a train in the distance... It evokes a dystopic metropolis.”

‘Dark, undiscovered corners give Berlin its own magic’

The city's dark history isn't the only reason writers and directors are drawn to it, Ifans says. “When the sun does shine here it shines lazy, low and long. That has its own flavour. And the night in Berlin! It's not a uniform blanket light; it's lit in pools of light, seemingly. City planning hasn't taken hold like in London or Paris. There are still dark, undiscovered corners that give it its own magic.”

VISITORS ON THE trail of Berlin's spy history needn't brave its shadowy corners. Berlin has a wealth of fascinating museums and tours documenting its years as the frontier of the Cold War, and the cunning devices used by both sides.

Founded shortly after the Berlin Wall was built, the Mauermuseum (mauermuseum.de) in the central Mitte district tells the story of the East Germans who escaped to the West. Their ingenious escape methods include hot-air balloons and mini-submarines. Next door is the Black Box, a Cold War exhibition with unsettling eyewitness accounts and artefacts including a photo gun used for military surveillance.

Berlin's most famous border crossing point is nearby: Checkpoint Charlie was for non-Germans and had cameos in Octopussy and The Spy Who Came in from the Cold. During the 1961 Berlin Crisis, which ended in the erection of the Wall, Soviet T-55 and US M48 tanks faced each other here; the barrier and checkpoint are still here and it's a popular spot for photos.

strip”, the no man’s land between the inner and outer perimeter of the Wall, on what is now Leipziger Platz. It charts the history of spying, beginning with the ancient Egyptians. Original tools of the trade include a lipstick pistol, an Enigma cipher machine and James Bond props, while kids will like the interactive exhibits and laser labyrinth.

In the 1950s, US and British agents used to interrogate the East Germans who absconded. The construction of the Wall stopped the flow of refugees, so they had to develop a more scientific approach to intelligence gathering. The most visible example is the Field Station Berlin on the Teufelsberg (teufelsberg-berlin.de), a man-made hill constructed out of Second World War rubbish and the highest point in West Berlin.

Enjoy the view on a guided tour of the graffiti-covered complex, which you might spot in More4’s Berlin Station.

Also offering some fascinating guided tours is the Society for the Exploration and Documentation of Subterranean Architecture.

Choose between an air-raid shelter, the remains of a fortress built by Hitler or “Tour M”, which is about the underground game of Cold War cat and mouse as East Germans fled through sewers and tunnels that they dug themselves (berliner-unterwelten.de).

The former East Berlin district of Friedrichshain also has a few cameos in Berlin Station. It’s the home of the East Side Gallery, the longest surviving stretch of the Berlin Wall; and the former Stasi headquarters, now a sobering museum where you’ll marvel at surveillance devices in buttons, ties and watering cans (stasimuseum.dr).

Friedrichshain is also crammed with quirky bars. Try the Train Cocktailbar, which serves gin slings in an old commuter wagon (traincocktailbar.de), or a pilsner in Café Soylent, decked out in graffiti, vintage furniture and a psychedelic mural (cafesoylent.eu).

"Gaslighting" seems, recently, to have entered common use. Is it a new word? Where has it come from? Hilary Franklin Norwich

It seems odd that a term more evocative of Victorian London should have such resonance today, but it has moved from being a literal term to a psychological one, used to describe the manipulation of a person's mind to the point that they start to question their own sanity. Gaslighting has been a hot topic in the political sphere, where critics of Donald Trump suggest the President wants the nation to reject its direct experience of reality because, as he puts it, that reality is "fake news". The use of gaslight in this context was popularised by 1944 film Gaslight, based on a play by Patrick Hamilton, in which a man manipulates his wife into believing she is going insane by changing aspects of her environment.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

A sorry state of affairs

I've been appalled by the hullabaloo surrounding Seann Walsh and Katya Jones in Strictly Come Dancing (Sat/Sun BBC1), who have done far less than some previous dance partners on the show who have been caught up in the so-called Strictly curse and had affairs (even leading to marriage break-ups). None of this behaviour led to a public shaming by journalists, who are hardly best placed to take the moral high ground.

Seann and Katya should have reserved any apologies for their respective partners, privately, for these are the only people truly hurt by their behaviour. I hope they continue to perform well for as long as they remain in the competition.

I have always enjoyed Strictly, but must confess to feeling a little jaded by all this nonsense.

Linda McLay Weston Colville, Cambridgeshire

Linda McLay wins a Bose SoundLink Micro Bluetooth speaker, in either orange or black. This small but powerful speaker delivers unmatched sound for its size. With up to six hours' battery life, a silicone rubber exterior and a tear-resistant strap, it's portable, rugged and waterproof. RRP £99.95. bose.co.uk

IT'S NO SHOCK

With the Strictly judges constantly asking contestants to "tell a story", "show emotion" etc, it's no surprise this can spill over into after-show shenanigans – especially given the intimate nature of some of the dances. Seann and Katya's charleston (13 October BBC1) was by no stretch of the imagination intimate, but I wonder how they will cope with one of the sexier dances? It could prove to be an embarrassing watch, but no doubt will be good for viewing figures.

Hilary Willson Stepside, Pembrokeshire
Seann and Katya are still in as RT goes to press. Turn to page 27 for Dr Ranj's Strictly diary.

DAYTIME DILEMMA

I have a complaint about daytime TV – it stops me getting on with my day! Rip Off Britain: relevant to us all, giving useful, important tips and advice about safeguarding our money and lifestyles. Armchair Britain: a delightful gem with historical footage of British cities and people, narrated by Miriam Margolyes in her infectious style.

Homes under the Hammer, This Morning, Politics Live... the list goes on. Daytime TV is well produced and very watchable. We're so lucky to have such choice and variety in what we can watch during the day – but when do we take the dog for a walk, do our chores or go out for lunch?
Anne Adams Southampton

HEAR, HEAR!

I'd like to add my praise for This Country (BBC3), and the recent special on iPlayer. Particular mention should be given to the absence of title and background music, and the handling of the sound generally. Just how carefully this was done is shown by the way different "soundscapes" track scene changes in the closing credits sequence. Excellent!

Tim Dennis Colchester, Essex

BRAVO BUTTERFLY

With a title like Butterfly (Sunday ITV) I was expecting a light comedy, but this series has been a very complicated social-issue drama that brings home to us the problems that many families are now having to come to understand. Of course, these issues have always been there, but the older generation was quick to label and box the problem, and that was it.

Butterfly has been a brilliant, much-needed production to teach us that, as a civilised society, we can become more tolerant in understanding that it's us with the problem, not the person struggling with their gender.

Syd Vaughan Birmingham

AWARD-WORTHY COMEDY

One episode in, watching There She Goes (Tuesday BBC4), and I'm not sure I can cope with any more. But I can't miss the outstanding performances of David Tennant and Jessica Hynes as parents of a child with a disability, worthy of Baftas for this half-hour alone. Their grief and humour were heartbreaking. Oh, and one for writer Shaun Pye as well.

Barry Hyman Bushey Heath, Hertfordshire

BRING BACK FLOG IT!

I support Frances Youel (Feedback, 20 October) regarding the cancellation of Flog It! (BBC1). The strength of Flog It! is that it is not a "game show", but an entertaining look at people having their items valued and sold at auction. It's simple and well presented with a changing rota of experts, and a bonus in the form of Paul Martin's interesting mini-documentaries halfway through. I gather Martin will be hosting a show where two people will compete to get the best price at auction: an unoriginal format that will detract, like others, from the interest in the antique items.

Peter Brooker Fareham, Hampshire

TWISTS AND STAR TURNS

I thoroughly enjoyed The Cry (BBC1) with its terrific plot twists, riveting performances by Jenna Coleman and the cast and strong characterisation. I'm not normally a great fan of programmes that flip back and forth in time, but this technique is used to great effect here, opening up different perspectives to advance the narrative.

One thing did strike me, however – I wonder if the original novelist, Helen FitzGerald, had anyone in mind when she gave the name of Alistair to the male lead (here played by Ewen Leslie), who is a ruthless political spin doctor...

GOLD STANDARD
Autumnwatch enjoyed the glorious colour of New Hampshire

BRING IT HOME

What a shame – Autumnwatch (15–18 October BBC2) was no longer in our back gardens! Are we so bereft of autumn here this year that the BBC had to go to New England to find it? It was all beautiful, and the colours were wonderful, but it was just another travel-cum-nature programme.

The joy of the old format was in being shown things that you could then go and find in the countryside around you. And, out of interest, how much did all this cost the BBC?

Rose Hogan Tewkesbury, Gloucestershire
RT understands that Autumnwatch New England was a co-production and therefore filming costs were shared between the BBC and the American broadcaster, PBS.

EYE-OPENING TV

I enjoyed the brilliant recent documentaries from the BBC's intrepid young explorers, Stacey Dooley Investigates: Fashion's Dirty Secrets (8 October BBC1) and Mediterranean with Simon Reeve (Sunday BBC2). There's a huge gap between the world as it's shown here and the world as it's portrayed in the travel supplements. It's the world as the people who actually live in these places experience it: people who live where the Aral Sea used to be, Turks who live in northern Cyprus, Christians in Lebanon and Palestinians in the Gaza Strip. Not comforting viewing, but revealing in a way that little else is.

Martin Down Witney, Oxfordshire

...I didn't anticipate the huge impact Fashion's Dirty Secrets would have on me. I don't buy many clothes, and always favour cotton, for what I felt were its natural qualities. Seeing what damage is being done to our world, and the people and animals in it, I was shocked and appalled.

My ignorance has truly been challenged and I have a new respect for Stacey Dooley for bringing this needless destruction to our attention.

MY COMEDY HEROES

I loved Beryl Vertue's tribute to Ray Galton (Feedback, 20 October). I had the honour of interviewing some of the great BBC comedy writers years ago when I was a journalist: Johnny Speight, Spike Milligan and, my heroes, Galton and Simpson. I was honoured when, the week after interviewing the duo in 1994 (pictured below with me in Ray's garden), I received a call from Ray asking if I would pop back one evening for a glass of wine. It was one of the most magical moments of my life. Just me and the legendary Ray and a very good bottle of red that he warmed by the glass over his open fire.

He spoke of Hattie, Sid and Kenneth as if they were just normal people, not comedy legends. It's so sad that Galton and Simpson are no longer with us, but at least we have their incredible body of work to enjoy for all time.

CHANGING MY MIND

I've watched Mastermind since the 1970s and, although the basic format has never altered, I've watched with interest the various occasional subtle changes over the years. I always thought John Humphrys's chat with contestants before answering their general knowledge questions was to alleviate the tension. Although still a feature of the grand finals, this has now been abolished – I suspect in order to maintain the tension!

In the new series (Friday BBC2), the contestants don't know what their opponents have scored in the specialised round until they all come on set together through a tunnel, and are called in ascending order. Is knowing the other scores perceived to be an advantage or disadvantage?

YOU ASK US

Help, no TMS! How do I hear the cricket?

I'm disappointed that there's no Test Match Special on Radio 4 to listen to England's overseas matches this winter. We were told Talksport would have commentary, but I can't find it on my radio.

Mark Drukker,
Reading, Berkshire

The live commentary on England's one-day matches against Sri Lanka has not in fact been on the main Talksport radio station, but on Talksport 2, which is available on digital (DAB) radios and also via the Talksport app and online (at talksport.com). To avoid disrupting regular schedules on Talksport, Talksport 2 will be the home for Saturday's Twenty20 (on TV at 2pm on Sky Sports Cricket), the three Tests in November in Sri Lanka and also January's tour of the West Indies.

If you're having difficulty accessing Talksport 2 on your digital radio at home or in the car, it may be necessary to do a retune. It should only take a few minutes to find new stations that you can scroll through to find Talksport 2.

To retune your DAB radio, simply press the auto-tune or auto-scan button or, if you can't find one, press the menu button and then scroll through until you find it. Then select that option.

NEW HOME
Above: Talksport's Mark Nicholas and Darren Gough; and (right) England captain Eoin Morgan in the third ODI in Sri Lanka

If none of this works, or Talksport 2 isn't found, a full scan may be necessary. Either press and hold down the auto-tune or auto-scan button until a full scan begins, or press the menu button and go through the options until you find full scan or something similar.

On match days, die-hard TMS fans can watch Aggers and guests chatting online in The Cricket Social – go to bbc.co.uk/sport/live/cricket and click on the Cricket Social link.

JUST OUT – IN MMXVI!
Why do film and TV programme credits use Roman numerals for the year of creation?

Simon Warner, Halifax
Dick Fiddy of the British Film Institute tells RT: "It's thought TV followed the lead of cinema here. Films would take a long time – even years – to roll out across the US and beyond. Early film producers were required to record the year of manufacture, but used Roman numerals so as not to alert viewers they were watching 'old' product. Plus – some sources say – they thought it looked classier."

◁ A BBC spokesperson replies: "Format changes are occasionally made to keep long-running programmes fresh. This is the same Mastermind that fans know and love, but with additional elements that build more tension across each episode and hopefully the series."

WHAT'S IN A GAME?

Simon Barnes seems keen to stress the class divide in rugby league and rugby union (RT, 13 October). There is one, but most people just accept they are two different versions of the game.

Barnes forgets that the scrum is part of union's DNA. Rugby union also provides a line-out in which teams can compete for possession, involving skill by the thrower and the main leapers. Barnes also calls for a new law in rugby union allowing the tackled player to retain possession. My answer to that would be that if the player who is about to be tackled is in a team that has support, possession need not be lost. I doubt whether players from both rugby codes are as hung up on class as Barnes is.

THE JOY OF BLUE PETER

When my daughter, Joy – who is six years younger than Blue Peter, who have just celebrated their 60th in Blue Peter: Big 60th Birthday (below, 16 October CBBC/iPlayer) – was small, my mother gave her a doll, which was quite obviously female. When asked what she was going to call her doll, my daughter said, without hesitation, "Blue Peter". Despite her Nana's protests, Blue Peter she remained!

SIMON REEVE

Do you watch TV while travelling?

I lack self-control, so I have to be careful about turning on TV when abroad as I can end up wasting hours flicking through 323 channels. Some places it can be entertainingly bad, some foreign game shows are ludicrous. There's a mild moment of humour in trying to work out what the hell is going on. I've not even worked out the rules of Deal or No Deal or even The Chase in Britain, so foreign quiz shows hold many mysteries for me.

I remember being in Tajikistan and every Saturday night the main TV channel showed a dodgy copy of Titanic. They weren't bothered that the words "For Academy Award voters only" and "For your consideration" rolled across the screen each time. They had one voice doing the dubbing for both Leo and Kate, the most monotone Russian voice you've ever heard.

What do you watch when at home in Devon?

Our TV is only tuned to CBBC. My son, Jake, erupts in indignant fury if I dare to see what's on another channel. We definitely don't switch to the news. He's only seven so he finds the world a bit traumatic at the moment. I loved Bodyguard.

I kept seeing flaws and would tut at those, but Keeley Hawes and Richard Madden were so good I was happy to ignore them. I've been watching Fouda, about an Israeli elite tactical squad and their cat-and-mouse battles with the other side. The only family viewing on TV we can all agree on is You've Been Framed! I find my son shouting "Plonkers!" at the screen. He learnt that from me.

Do you watch other people's travel shows?

Not very often, largely because I turned on the TV recently and saw Michael Portillo getting into a rose-petal bath in a hotel overlooking the Taj Mahal. I thought, "I am in the wrong gig here." That was a bit of an upsetting professional moment for me...

What's your TV like?

I managed to get a bigger TV by clever subterfuge, which I recommend to anyone in the same situation. My wife Anya wasn't keen on a big TV - I think she'd have been happy with a 12-inch black-and-white. So I said, "Ah, there's this 58-inch TV. This is the one I want," and then I was argued back down to the one I secretly wanted, which was a 48-inch TV.

Bartered like a seasoned traveller.

Exactly. Go high, and be happy with lower... There is a problem, though - the channels have got all mixed up so we get lots of obscure foreign ones but can't even find Channel 4.

Where do you watch TV?

We have two sofas - a wide one for the maximum indulgence for lying down, another more conventional one for TV dinners. I realised I was middle-aged when my father-in-law told me to put protectors under the sofas so I could then nudge them together without scratching the floor and have outrageously indulgent movie nights with my wife, son, dog and cat.

Who'd be your ideal travel companion?

I'd love to travel with Bill Bryson. I think he has a realistic and amusing take on travel. A lot of people when they start talking about travel can sound a bit pretentious. Bill would also be really good at researching everything beforehand, and I could just look up the best restaurant.

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY DVD David Attenborough's Natural History Museum Alive. My son must have watched that documentary 42 times. He can do the narration.

MY RADIO Radio 4, Radio 2 and the World Service.

MY BOOK Wilding by Isabella Tree. How to create a slightly better planet by letting nature take its course but managing it carefully.
