THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'A time for tributes and quiet reflection'

IT'S A SOMBRE week as the nation marks the centenary of the end of the First World War. One of the keystones is Peter Jackson's extraordinary project, a real labour of love, They Shall Not Grow Old (Sunday BBC2). The film director and his team cleaned up grainy, crackling archive footage filmed during the Great War and added colour and a soundtrack. The result is eerily beautiful and immensely moving. Says Jackson: "I wanted to reach through the fog of time to pull these men into the modern world, so they can regain their humanity once more."

As it does every year, the nation will stand in mute tribute to the fallen of all wars with the Royal British Legion Festival of Remembrance on Saturday and World War One Remembered: the Cenotaph on Sunday, both of which are live on BBC1.

Sunday's Doctor Who (BBC1) also gives a small nod of respect to the fallen as poppies are glimpsed billowing in the fields of the Punjab during a harrowing, history-based story centred on the Partition of India. Yas wants to go back in time to visit her beloved granny on her wedding day, but it's far from the happy occasion everyone was looking forward to.

IT'S MAINLY, THOUGH, a week for documentaries, including Stacey Dooley: the Young and Homeless (Tuesday BBC1) a film the Strictly star and journalist made for Children in Need.

And David Attenborough returns with Dynasties (Sunday BBC1), a series following the lives of chimps, emperor penguins, hunting dogs, lions and tigers.

For light relief, you could do a lot worse than Only Connect (Monday BBC2), a brilliant episode with two supremely well matched teams.

And maybe catch up with W's Women on the Verge, which ends on Thursday. It's a winning comedy that could be brittle, but which is actually quite big hearted.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

DAN SNOW

'I'm drowning in podcasts about American politics,' says the historian and TV presenter. 'These

SOPHIE RAWORTH

'I can't wait for the new David Attenborough series Dynasties,' says the presenter. 'My ten-year-old son is obsessed with his programmes and has watched everything he has done over and over again. I'm looking forward to something new! I've also been watching A Dangerous Dynasty: House of Assad, the BBC2 documentary looking at how a fairly shy, awkward doctor turned into the man he is today.'

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

NEW DAD GETS COLD FEET

No one knows the perils of filming a natural history documentary better than cameraman Lindsay McCrae. He filmed episode two of BBC1's new David Attenborough series Dynasties (see page 20) which meant spending 11 months in the Antarctic, eight of them in the field filming penguins during the winter when temperatures plummeted to minus 50°C. The only thing was, he'd just got married before he was offered the job and his wife was pregnant when he left the UK. "It was an opportunity I couldn't turn down," McCrae said at a special screening of the show, "even though for eight months the weather was so bad we couldn't leave." His son was seven months old by the time McCrae returned home and met him for the first time. Still, a production source assures RT that McCrae got to see his son's first moments thanks to Skype, albeit from the other end of the world...

WHO IS TOP DOG AT THE BBC?

Dynasties teaches us a lot about the hierarchy of various animal groupings, be they chimps, lions or penguins. And the natural hierarchy among humans was also uppermost in the mind of the man who introduced David Attenborough to the audience at the premiere screening. "I'm Tony Hall, director-general of the BBC – but I'm just a warm-up act, I know my place," said the Beeb's top executive. Quite right.

SMILEY'S PEOPLE

If you're enjoying The Little Drummer Girl (with Florence Pugh, left as Charlie Ross) you'll be pleased to learn that the BBC is on course to make a new series based on John le Carré's novel The Spy Who Came in from the Cold, which charts the fictional adventures of spymaster George Smiley in 1962, just after the Berlin Wall was built. And that may just be the start. "We hope it will launch a Smiley journey," says Simon Cornwell, Le Carré's son and the executive producer of Drummer Girl. Well, there are loads more Smiley novels after all...

A NEW HOME FOR CHANNEL 4

Channel 4 is moving to Leeds – sort of. The city will become home to around 300 of Channel 4's 820-strong workforce, but the majority of the broadcaster's posts will stay in London. Channel 4 has long opposed the move, which it was forced into pursuing by the Government. And some feel it has got away with it...

Tell ya what, Gromit lad, it's no use prevaricating around the bush – it's time to celebrate Prince Charles's birthday! Yes, Wallace and Gromit are back on the box this Tuesday (13 November) as part of ITV's celebration of the Prince's 70th birthday. They will be showcasing a new sketch for We Are Most Amused and Amazed, a gala event at the London Palladium – and wishing HRH many happy returns via Skype. And here's an exclusive look at the making of the special moment.

And that's not the only reunion of the night. Comedians Armstrong & Miller, who last fronted their BBC comedy sketch show nearly a decade ago, will re-form as the hosts of an evening that will feature comedians including Bill Bailey, Rowan Atkinson, Sandi Toksvig, Omid Djalili and Alistair McGowan, magicians Penn & Teller and Kylie Minogue. BEN DOWELL

‘Let’s cherish Panorama’

As it hits retirement age, there’s still life in the old dinosaur yet

TIME TO KILL the old monster off, surely? Panorama is a dinosaur past its extinction date, growling to itself in Jurassic shrubbery, a cardboard cut-out T rex from 1953. But even after BBC budget cuts it happens to be 65 years old this week and still lurches at you, red eyes flashing, like Arnie in the last reel of Terminator whatever.

Let’s cherish the show that gave us, for the very first time, the authentic voice of Princess Diana, a clever, funny, real woman bewildered and broken-hearted. And protect the platform that aired John Ware’s extraordinarily brave forensic reporting on the Omagh bomb that named the prime suspects for this atrocity. Not long afterwards the Real IRA bombed the BBC’s then HQ in White City. One felt so proud.

Lots of people have cause to hate Panorama because, on form, it finds powerful evidence and then goes for it. Obviously, I will never, ever quite recover my reputation for considered, even stodgy, journalism after roaring my head off at a senior member of the Church of Scientology – I apologised then, I apologise now – but so be it. As a warning to young people in particular about the nature of that space alien cult, I stand by it. All credit, too, to producer Sarah Mole and camera operator Bill Brown, who didn’t bat an eyelid when I lost it; then laughed like drains when we had safely got out of there.

As the redtops stuck the boot into Panorama shortly before transmission of Andrew Jennings’s masterclass in punchy journalism, BBC Fifa’s Dirty Secrets, I remember goading then editor Tom Giles and current affairs head Clive Edwards about their perceived lack of patriotism. The show went out, showing Fifa and its dodgy boss, Sepp Blatter, at their worst. Fifa was a racket under Blatter and Panorama was absolutely right – and very British – to call it out.

Don’t touch Big Pharma? Panorama reporter Shelley Jofre made not one but four programmes about the anti-depressant Seroxat – extraordinary journalism over time.

‘I will never, ever recover from roaring my head off’

It’s continued to do some extraordinary work, asking grave questions about the “fake sheikh” Mazher Mahmood, and fantasist “expert” witnesses. Panorama Northern Ireland, run by Andrew Head, blew the whistle on tax cheats in the Panama Papers and the Paradise Papers. My old chum Richard Bilton ended up pursuing billionaire tax-fluid entity Lord Ashcroft to just outside the gents’ at the Conservative Party conference. Producer Joe Plonim is the king of the undercover sting, casting fear into bullies in the elderly care, prison and immigration detention systems. Under current editor Rachel Jupp, it’s in good hands.

ON SONG, PANORAMA is a force of nature. This year Tom Mangold did a pretty good impression of a zombie coming back from the undead to deliver an unseen nearly 40-year-old Panorama on the Jeremy Thorpe affair. It was a spellbinding piece of investigative journalism on a crooked politician who managed to escape an attempted murder rap. Rightly, it got extraordinary ratings for BBC4.

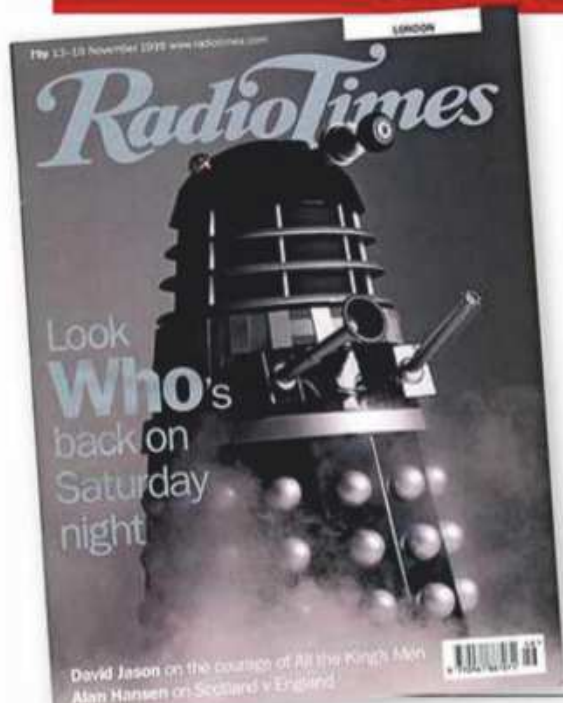

The surge of digital diversity, computer games and social media taken together is threatening the end of the water-cooler moment, when friends in the office gather round and go “ooh” and “aah” at what was on the telly last night. But that’s what Panorama exists to do, not just to inform, but to kick power in the goolies, hard.

Panorama is rather like a steam-roller traction engine, ancient, messy, expensive to maintain, in the right light extraordinarily beautiful, and, when pointed in the right direction, a remorseless engine that flattens anything that gets in the way of the proper scrutiny of power.

BBC: please make sure the old monster outlives us all.

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 13-19 NOVEMBER 1999

WHAT WE WATCHED

Doctor Who hadn’t been on air as a series for ten years (we’re discounting the Paul McGann movie in 1996). But the Tardis managed to “vworp vworp!” into action this week for a Doctor Who Night on BBC2 and the start of a rerun of Jon Pertwee episodes from 1970. RT caught up with another former Time Lord, Tom Baker, then a mere 65 in human years, and he didn’t disappoint, breaking off mid-flow to rail against Huw Edwards, of all people. “I don’t know why he’s on the BBC,” Baker thundered. “He negates the news. What’s the point of a fellow having a haircut which gets in the way of the news?”

WHAT YOU SAID

BBC2 documentary Lost on Everest: the Search for Mallory and Irvine, about the 1922 mountaineering disaster headed by the flamboyant George Mallory, drew a pretty enthusiastic response from our readers. It “enthralled” John Williams of Swindon – and he wasn’t alone. But while Hayden McAllister loved the programme, it was spoiled for him by an all-too-familiar bugbear as the credits rolled – a “crude trailer” for new drama The Cops, which Mr McAllister called an “assault on the senses”. BEN DOWELL

FOR SOME REASON the sun always seems to shine on the Cenotaph on Remembrance Sunday. At least it has done without fail since I first began broadcasting from the middle of the vast sea of faces nine years ago. I still remember vividly walking out onto Whitehall through the gates of the BBC compound, pushing my way (with the help of a policeman) through the crowds that were already standing 20 deep on the pavement.

It was the first time a reporter had been allowed to broadcast from the middle of the march past. And so I found myself standing with my camera crew by the Monument to the Women of the Second World War, a few hundred metres north of the Cenotaph, surrounded by veterans, young and old, from conflicts past and present. I rarely get nervous when broadcasting nowadays, but I was on that day. It felt like such an enormous responsibility to be allowed in there, among so many men and women with extraordinary stories to tell. It was emotional, too.

I’d just discovered my own family link to the dead of the First World War. My great-great-uncle, Charles Mott, was a well-known singer. He was Elgar’s favourite baritone. In the summer of 1917, as war raged on the Western Front, he was performing Elgar’s newest work, The Fringes of the Fleet, twice a day at London’s Coliseum. Conducted by Elgar himself, it was hugely popular. ▷

17th Royal Fusiliers

"We'd been in the front line a few weeks and the boys were saying how quiet it was. Then all of a sudden high explosives and gas shells were raining down and the trenches were blown to pieces. We were told to put our gas masks on but by this time it was too late. The longer we stayed out in the air, the worse it got, until we couldn't open our eyes at all.

"There were dead bodies in the trenches and we had to feel our way around. I was only a lad but to hear these men crying out with pain, crying out like children, not so much from the wounds but from the flesh burnt by mustard gas on the skin, was awful. The gas used to attack the warmest part of the body and would take the skin off as if you'd scalded yourself, so you can imagine what it was like under the armpits, the crotch, that sort of area.

"They loaded us on trucks, then trains, onto ships and over to England. In hospital the nurses saved my life, but looking back I wonder how I put up with the whole ordeal. I suppose it was the stiff upper lip."

IN MEMORIAM

The stone Cenotaph, designed by Edwin Lutyens, has been a focus for national remembrance since it was unveiled in 1920

◁ Thousands went to watch him. But he was called up later that year at the age of 37. He died just a few months afterwards on the Somme in May 1918. I was taken there to see his grave at Bagneux Military Cemetery and left a poppy and a photograph of him by his cross, a face to one of the many thousands of names on gravestones that cover that land.

And so it was that when Big Ben rang out at 11am on Remembrance Sunday, and that extraordinary hush fell over Whitehall, I stared at the ground and thought of Charles Mott, an extraordinary talent wiped out in his prime. Elgar later wrote that he'd been overwhelmed by the death of this simple, honest, good soul. That was the year Remembrance Sunday changed for me. For the first time I had a direct link with the war dead. I could see a face, a life cut short, one of my family.

On Sunday, when thousands of people line Whitehall exactly 100 years after the Armistice was signed, exactly a century after he died, I will think of him again.

BUT I'LL ALSO remember many others who went to war and came back. The men who saw the horror, survived it but never spoke of it again. Like my grandfather, Captain Edwin Raworth, who lied about his age and joined the Royal Flying Corps at 17, becoming one of the Royal Air Force's first pilots when it was formed the following year in April 1918. I knew little about his war effort until just a few years ago.

My interest was sparked when I was asked to present the BBC's coverage from St Symphorien Cemetery in Belgium in 2014 to mark 100 years since the start of the Great War. That's where the men who are believed to be the first and last Commonwealth soldiers killed in action during the First World War are buried. My grandfather may well have flown over the battlefields near Mons, a teenage reconnaissance pilot, so vulnerable in the skies in his biplane made of wood. He was one of the lucky ones. He returned home in November 1918, but whatever he saw there "On 17 September 1916 all hell broke loose. We attacked Delville and High Woods, two German strongpoints. Inside the tank the atmosphere was sickening, a haze of petrol and gas fumes. Your nerves got worn, the noise was deafening. I'd just get set on the target and ready to fire, then bang. All feelings of humanity leave you when you're firing. You say to yourself, 'It's either him or me, so I've got to get in there first.' There was no choice but to drive over the dead lying about. You couldn't pick your way through.

"I couldn't believe what had happened to me at the time. I thought my nerves would carry me, but no, the shelling broke my nerve. Later, when the shells stopped, the shock seemed to go and I was ordinary, just like before, but the memories of it haunted me throughout my life."

I also now think of the injured, the men who returned from the front in 1918 with missing limbs, bomb-blasted faces; men who wore tin masks to hide horrific injuries. One hundred years later I'm struck by the difference that modern medicine has made to the lives of so many injured veterans.

ONE OF THE most moving moments I've had at the Cenotaph was the year I interviewed the Afghanistan veteran Dave Henson, a double amputee who'd stood on an IED in 2011. "After the attack at Beaumont Hamel in 1916 I was told to collect the newly killed and I took stretcher-bearers, quite a lot of whom were related to the ones who were dead – brothers, cousins – and they were of course very upset. We dug a long trench and put the dead in there, wrapped in an Army blanket, neatly packed like sardines. It was a horrible thing to have to bury your own cousin or brother.

"Afterwards, I was told to go back and bury the old dead killed [earlier] on 1 July 1916. The flesh had gone mainly from the face, but the hair had still grown into a beard to some extent. They looked very ragged and the rats were running out of their chests. To a rat it was just a nest, but to think that a human being provided a nest for a rat was a pretty dreadful feeling."

11th Border Regiment, 'The Lonsdales'

"On 1 July 1916 the Lonsdale Battalion was slaughtered, wiped out. The Germans mowed us down like grass in a hay field, enfilading fire. Anyone who was not hit on that day had angels on their back. I'd only gone a little way and I had a bullet through my water bottle and my hip. I dropped on my face. I said to myself, 'This is the last of the battalion, there'll be no battalion after this.' And there wasn't. They were lying dead and wounded all over.

"I lay out there all day and all night. I seemed like a lone bird. I kept shouting, 'Will anyone come and get me in?' Eventually, I was taken back to a first aid post. I had a blood clot in my right leg where my foot was hanging off. It was a year before they'd got me patched up so that I could go home."

walked back together along Whitehall, its pavements still lined with people.

Suddenly, the crowds saw him and a ripple of applause moved like a wave towards the Cenotaph where we were heading. I hung back and let him walk on alone. The sun was in front of us. It cast his long shadow on the road. It was an extraordinary moment that had me wiping away tears.

This year, sadly, I won't be among the veterans when Big Ben rings out at 11am. Instead, I'll be getting ready to present the coverage from Westminster Abbey later that day. The service will be attended by the Queen and members of the royal family, Prime Minister Theresa May and other leading politicians, including the German President, Frank-Walter Steinmeier.

I will miss being on Whitehall. But as always I'll be watching and thinking not just of my family ghosts from the past, but also of those still with us – the injured, the survivors – the people who have given so much for their country.

Lord of the Rings director Peter Jackson has used ingenious technology to restore and colourise 100-year-old footage – with extraordinary results, says Michael Buerk

The past comes alive

WILLIAM JACKSON WAS BORN at the wrong time. He joined a peacetime army to see the world and ended up in a dozen kinds of hell. His South Wales Borderers had not long swapped their red coats for khaki when he signed up in 1910. Then the world went mad and pitched William and what the German Kaiser had scornfully called “that contemptible little army” of British regulars into the industrialised butchery of the Great War.

Within three months, the professional peacetime army had been all but wiped out. Their formidable musketry – 15 well-aimed rounds a minute meant that the enemy thought they were facing machine guns – had helped stop a swift German victory. They’d blown away the flower of German youth in the first battle of Ypres in 1914 (to this day it’s known there as the Kindermort, the slaughter of the innocents), but few of the “Old Contemptibles” themselves were left when it was over.

William survived, though. He survived

Gallipoli, too, and won a Distinguished Conduct Medal there. He was wounded on the first day of the Somme and recovered just in time to fight at Passchendaele. Against the odds, he survived the war. But it took its toll. He died at 50, broken by his wartime injuries; one more forgotten hero of the “war to end all wars” – forgotten if it wasn’t for the grandson he never met.

Peter Jackson, director and producer of blockbuster films like The Lord of the Rings trilogy, was raised on stories about his grandfather. “I grew up with the war in my household. Dad [who’d emigrated to New Zealand at the end of the Second World War] used to buy every book that came out about it, particularly those about places his father had been to. I read them cover to cover, and I’ve been fascinated ever since.”

He’s turned that fascination into the most extraordinary and moving tribute to his grandfather and the generation that fought and died in their hundreds of thousands in Flanders Fields. He’s used 21st-century technology to take us back a hundred years to see them as they saw themselves. Not flickering, jerky, anonymous victims of a war lost in history, but living, breathing young men, matter-of-fact amid all the mayhem, larky, even, on the edge of doom. We hold their gaze from beyond the grave and a century disappears. We are there.

IT WASN’T JACKSON’S idea, but he leapt at it when the Imperial War Museum asked him to make a documentary to mark the centenary of the war’s ending. “They didn’t have any concept of it, other than wanting to use their archive, hundreds of hours of footage, in a different way.” Jackson turned to the special effects company he has in New Zealand. “I thought: how well can we restore it with the computer power we use for film visual effects today? We experimented and the results were far beyond anything I’d imagined.”

Jackson talks in military terms of “throwing a lot of firepower at it”. He was able to bring to bear the equivalent of 7,000 computers and 15,000 people to the threadbare footage. “I was

UNFLINCHING
Frames from the wartime footage that Jackson's team has restored

‘We’ve made it close to what you’d shoot on your iPhone’

they used computers to create artificial frames between the existing footage, making it 24 frames a second, smooth, modern and lifelike.

Restoring the black-and-white footage was the main job, he says. Colour and 3D “was the icing on the cake”. It was done carefully by hand, using the most advanced computer technology. “It feels like you’re watching the Gulf War,” he says. “We’ve tried to make it close to what you could shoot on a video camera or your iPhone.”

There was no sound on the original footage, but Jackson’s team have created a convincing soundscape that brings the film to life. You hear footsteps, tiles falling off a roof after a bombardment, as well as feel the shuddering impact of the shelling. They used lip readers to work out what the soldiers were saying and got actors to perform it “in a very real, natural way”.

“The end result,” says Jackson, “is that we see that war the way they saw it.”

To match the resurrected pictures, Jackson has overlaid interviews from more than 120 surviving veterans that were recorded in the 1960s and 70s by the BBC and the Imperial War Museum. “They weren’t young then, but they weren’t ancient either,” he says, “and they were able to recount things incredibly well and talk with a great deal of honesty.”

The film starts with the original flickering black-and-white inset in the centre of the ▷ GETTY amazed at how you can take shaky, jerky black-and-white film and make it look as though it was shot now.”

It was certainly a formidably complex and painstaking operation. First, they had to get rid of all the scratches and the graininess of century-old film. Over the years the film itself had shrunk, the sprocket holes were all over the place so that it jumped around when it was put through the machine. Stabilising it was a work of art in itself.

Jackson used techniques honed on his fantasy movies to sharpen the images and make them look crisp. But the crucial difference came when they started to work on the speeded-up jerkiness, the “Charlie Chaplin effect” as he calls it, of the old film. It was shot, often on hand-cranked cameras, at speeds between 13 and 15 frames a second. His team didn’t just slow the film down, ◁ screen, the chattering of a projector, and the veterans cheerfully signing up to fight. “I’ve never been so excited in my life,” one says. “Such a relief from the boring jobs at home, you see,” says another. A lot were under age, 15 or 16.

We see them smoking and joking about ill-fitting uniforms, boots that they’d urinated on to soften the leather. We watch them brewing up tea from water that had boiled in the cooling sleeve of their machine guns.

When the action shifts to the front in Flanders, the mood darkens and, in a moment of filmic genius that brings a lump to your throat, the picture fills the screen, is suffused with colour, amplified with sound. In an instant, it’s real. We’re in the trenches with the rats and lice. The ground shudders with explosions. “They say your past comes up in front of your eyes,” a veteran says. “I was only 19. I hadn’t had any past.”

We see the soldiers in and out of the line, joking about queuing for the open-air lavatories and the everlasting bully beef and plum duff at one moment, quaking among the corpses under German bombardment the next. The film doesn’t blink when it comes to the horrors. Fly-blown corpses, a gangrenous foot, young flesh blown to pieces by high explosive. But nothing we see matches the veterans’ phlegmatic descriptions of what they saw.

And all the time these ghosts brought back to life make lingering eye contact. Human again. Like us, only much more stoical and with worse teeth. Their stoicism impressed Jackson most. “The thing that amazed me was their lack of self-pity. They didn’t feel sorry for themselves and the majority of them didn’t feel sorry they’d experienced it.”

War’s end seems as much an anti-climax as a relief. Most seemed to find it difficult to relate to those who hadn’t shared what they had been through. “We were a race apart,” said one.

Jackson thinks it will surprise those with our preconceptions of the First World War. “I didn’t want a modern spin on it. I wanted them simply to say it as they saw it.” At the end, the film reverts to flickering black-and-white as the war is symbolically returned to the past.

He’s left thinking about what happened to the men he’s cinematically brought back to life. “I wonder about these guys all the time. You see their characters and personalities; some make me smile and laugh. I always wonder if they survived or not. Hopefully, their descendants might now recognise them and come forward with their stories.”

And the impact making the film has had on him? “I’ve been looking at documentaries and First World War films for as long as I can recall, and I’ve never seen anything that has affected me as much as what I’ve seen in the last year or so while we’ve been restoring this. Because the one thing this restoration does is make the faces of these men come alive.”

It is, as it’s intended to be, a brilliantly realised impression of what it was like to be a Tommy ▷

Copies are being sent to every secondary school in the country. It will certainly promote empathy with that lost generation, but I wonder how much it will add to their understanding?

We've come to see the First World War as a pointless waste and our soldiers as sacrificial victims who gave their lives for nothing in a futile conflict. But that's not how they saw it, most of them, anyway, including, I would guess, Sergeant William Jackson. All war is a tragic waste, but the Kaiser's territorial ambitions were not that very different from Hitler's, and if Germany had triumphed, Europe would be very different today. They did not die totally in vain.

We will remember them, and William's grandson, with this haunting film, has made sure of it.

DAVID ATTENBOROUGH IS a wise observer of human behaviour. But there must be times when Homo sapiens (or, at least, the fourth estate) leaves him scratching his head in bewilderment. During a morning of interviews to promote his latest series, the five-part Dynasties, Attenborough is invited to ponder a disparate range of questions. Will he be donating his brain to science; is a dramatic scene of primate politics featuring David the chimp (opposite) a metaphor for Brexit; and what is he hoping to get for Christmas?

Though aged 92, Attenborough is still agile enough to spot a headline masquerading as a question – and nimbly sidestep it.

How, then, would we fare encouraging him to invoke his inner feminist?

It's an approach that demands an explanation. If Dynasties underlines anything, it's that in the animal kingdom females are generally, though not exclusively, much more useful than males. So, would he agree there are parallels in this regard between animal kind and humankind?

"Yes, but you could also find the opposite. There are female-dominant societies both in human beings and in animals. I agree, though, they're a minority."

'Bull elephants dash around, trumpeting and copulating'

There's some anecdotal evidence that with lions, for instance, female cubs learn from their mothers, whereas boisterous young males learn from their mistakes. Any helpful clues there?

"If you restrict it to mammals, then by and large it is true. Bull elephants, for example, don't stick with the family. The females have all the wisdom. They bring up all the kids, they deal with the problems of drought and so on. The males dash around, trumpeting and copulating whenever they get the chance."

With girl power a mostly positive fact of life in the wild, might our society be a better place if more women had positions of influence?

"Yes, I guess so, but we do have a female prime minister, and you have some women in Fleet Street who are fairly powerful. I think it depends on all kinds of things. One of the reasons society is changing so much is the development of the Pill. The huge dominant fact among mammals is how you rear the young. Now we have ways of dealing with that – one of which is not to have children until quite late in life [or not ▷

🎬 FILMING 309 DAYS

Meet David. An alpha male chimp who's clinging on to power and all the benefits that being leader of the pack bestows. "He gets the best access to the food and the females," says producer Rosie Thomas, who was part of a crew that filmed him and his group over two years in the border area of Senegal and Guinea.

But David's three-year grip on power is under threat. Other males want a piece of his action and this episode follows them as the struggle for supremacy unfolds.

"They are quite a unique group, in that there are many more males than females, so there's a lot of aggression," says Thomas.

Observing the plotting and the treachery involved following the chimps on foot, sometimes up to 15 miles a day in temperatures of above 40° Celsius.

"The physical demands were huge, but the rewards immense," says Thomas. "You have to be careful not to anthropomorphise too much, but it was just like being in Number Ten watching them play all their games."

Some might say... Actually, no, let's not go there.

◁ at all]. The responsibility of producing the next generation is now optional.”

If Attenborough were an animal, he'd be a fox – and a particularly canny one.

One question on which he's not at all evasive is about this new series he's narrating. Dynasties does pretty much what it says on the label; it follows the fortunes of five groups of animals – indeed, bar the Emperor penguin, one specific family group – over the course of two years.

“I don't think anyone has dared to do this before,” says Attenborough. “When Mike [Gunton, the executive producer] first told me,

‘I thought it was barmy to devote two years to one group’

I thought he was barmy – to devote two years to filming one group within one species and say ‘we will show exactly what happens’ is either very brave or very foolish, because supposing nothing happens? And in lots of instances in the natural world, nothing does happen.”

EXCEPT IN THIS case Gunton and his team had a hunch what might happen. Each of the featured groups were selected – or, as Gunton says, “cast” – because of what researchers on the ground had discovered. In the case of the tigers, mum Raj Bhera was due to give birth. With the lions, the dominant males had abandoned the group, leaving the two older females to act as protectors and providers. And, with the chimps, the ageing alpha male David – named not after the presenter, but by local scientists in Senegal – was thought to be facing a threat to his rule.

In David's case, the tracking of the group by the film team produces one particularly memorable sequence. The adult chimp is the subject of a brutal coup attempt that leaves him grievously injured. The females tend his body before deserting him to move off in search of water.

“They couldn't stay, they had to abandon him and go to water,” says Attenborough. “They had no alternative and that happens to human beings, too – some of the northern tribes on migration do leave the old people behind.”

Bingo. A chance to get Attenborough back to humankind and mortality, but Gunton senses the danger and intervenes. “What is fascinating is not the abandonment, it's that the females initially didn't abandon him – they wanted him to live.”

And then, as we wrap up – and Attenborough unwraps his fourth or fifth Kit Kat of the morning – he mischievously, and I suspect very knowingly, throws out a teasing titbit.

“Next time, let me tell you why female hyenas have male genitalia...”

EPISODE TWO

SUBJECT THE EMPEROR PENGUIN
LOCATION ATKA BAY, ANTARCTICA
FILMING ELEVEN MONTHS ON THE ICE SHELF, SIX MONTHS FILMING

Take three intrepid BBC film-makers, maroon them in Antarctica for the best part of a year and challenge them to bring back penguin footage that will blow our socks off.

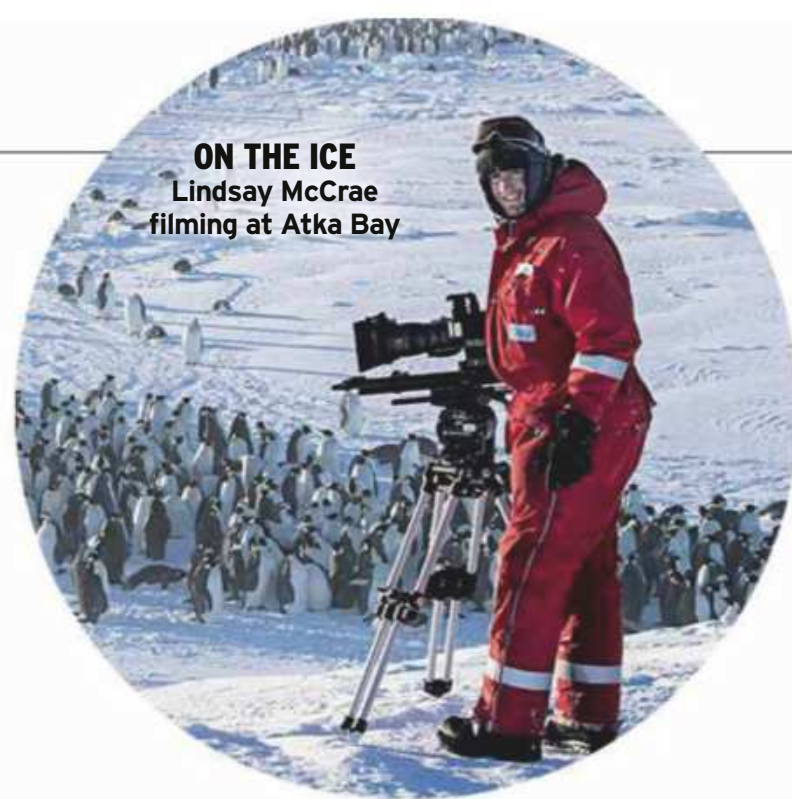

Will Lawson, Lindsay McCrae and Stefan Christmann flew into German research station Neumayer Station III in December 2016. When the last plane left ahead of the southern winter in February, they knew they and the nine German researchers stationed there were on their own until flights resumed nine months later.

“We were told that the likelihood of us being evacuated [in the event of an emergency] was well below ten per cent,” says Lawson. “So, yes, that massive level of isolation was something that was very apparent.”

The team spent the first few months getting used to their surroundings and equipment. Then, in April, the sea ice started to freeze and the penguins began to return to breed. But there was frustration. “In the first few weeks they came in long lines, hundreds and hundreds of them, all going back to the exact location where they had previously bred,” says Lawson. “But at that point the ice wasn't thick enough for us to go on it.”

When test drilling revealed the ice to be about 30cm thick, they were confident it was strong enough to support the team and their equipment.

Descending the face of the ice shelf, using techniques they'd learnt on glaciers in Austria, they set off on skidoos on the one-kilometre trek to the penguin colony.

By this time temperatures had plummeted, so two shipping containers – one holding a small kitchen and the other a toilet – were used for respite from the cold. “It was a great safety net, because when the temperatures got extremely low – and for three or four months they hovered around the minus 30 mark – you had to take a break just to warm up again. It was the wind and visibility that were the big limiting factors. If there was a white-out, we just couldn't go out.”

They did, however, have one piece of specific penguin behaviour they wanted to film – the penguin huddle – and that's only observed in the most extreme of conditions. When freezing winds rage, the male penguins pack tightly together in order to incubate the eggs (the females have gone to sea to feed). And Lawson and co needed to be at the heart of that impending storm.

"It took a lot of planning, because we had to wait for a developing storm, find the colony, film them and then get back to base before the wind speeds got too high and before it got too dark," he says.

But no amount of planning can eliminate all risk – and in Lawson's case, it nearly proved catastrophic. A tiny gap in the padding of his goggles meant that every time he exhaled a breath into his face mask, the moisture crept into the goggles and froze.

"The only way that you can deal with that is to take your goggles off and literally scratch the ice out. So we would all stop and I would scratch the ice out and we'd carry on. But the wind picked up and we couldn't really speak over the sound of it. At one point Lindsay turned around, thought I'd scraped the ice out of my goggles and carried on. But I hadn't cleared my goggles and within a couple of seconds he vanished into the white-out.

"We were happy that Lindsay was safe, because he had the GPS operating and knew the way back. But when Stefan and I took a GPS out, which we'd switched off to reserve power, it wouldn't turn on again. We always kept a battery in an inside pocket, but for a very short period of time there was a bit of a scramble for Stefan to get that spare battery out, replace it in minus 60 degrees and wind speeds that were rapidly increasing, in order to get the GPS working again.

"As he got it going, Lindsay suddenly reappeared out of the white-out – he'd managed to find us.

We made the rest of the way back without any problem, but the visibility was so poor that we only knew we were back at the station when the GPS told us we were. It was a very welcome sight."

Charm by name, fearsome by nature. This 14-year-old lioness proves that on the plains of east Africa, the term "king of the jungle" is a misnomer. For it's females like Charm who are the force to be reckoned with.

"They seem to be born with a lot more sense than the males, so the female lions grow up mimicking their mothers, whereas the males just sort of find their own way," says Simon Blakeney, the producer who followed the pride over the course of two years.

In Charm's case she's the perfect single-mum role model. Abandoned by the adult males of the group, she and her cousin Sienna both feed and fend for the ten-strong group.

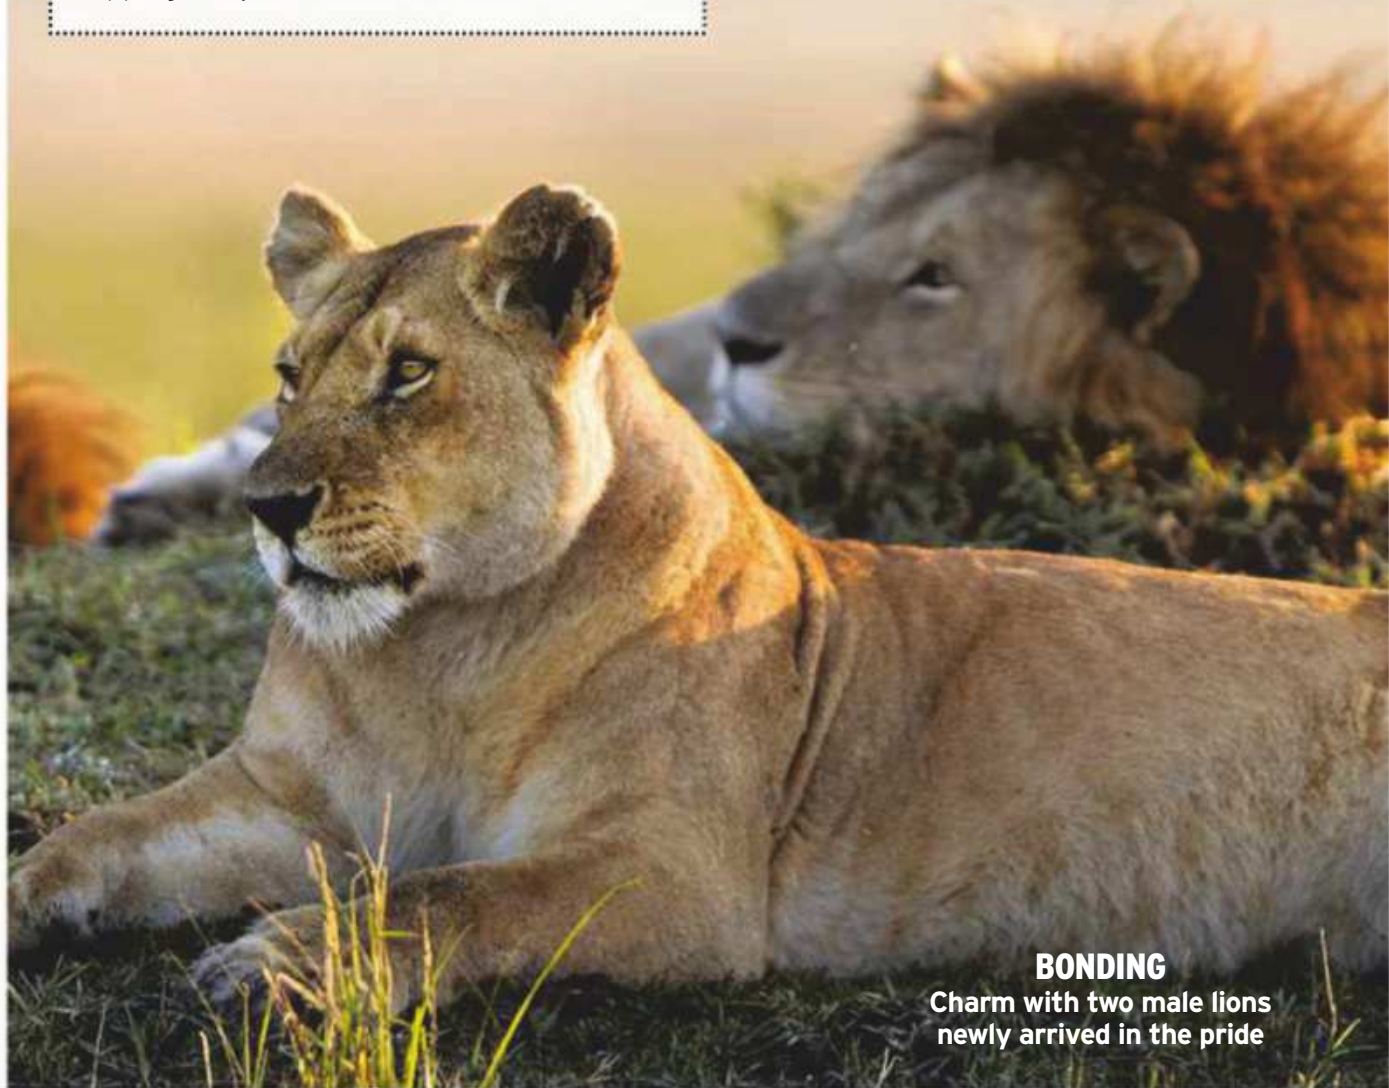

"The two of them had to care for the pride as well as hunt for them, so they had to do all the protecting and the muscle work as well," says Blakeney.

Despite the lions' position at the top of the food chain, one scene in the film reveals just how vulnerable they are. Local herdsmen, frustrated by attacks on cattle, deliberately poison a carcass, with terrible consequences.

"It was something we were aware could be a problem, but really it massively shocked us," says Blakeney. "It really brings home the scale of the challenges facing lions today. They're almost silently slipping away, literally slipping away." >

-  LOCATION MANA POOLS NATIONAL PARK, ZIMBABWE
-  FILMING 669 DAYS

These pack predators have the reputation of being ferocious killing machines, but Nick Lyon hopes they will be viewed more sympathetically after people see his film. For a start, they've had bit of an image rebranding – they're referred to as painted wolves rather than the more commonly used African wild dog.

"I want the audience not to think of them just as predators," says Lyon. "Yes, we show them hunting, and those sequences don't pull any punches, but we really hope people will warm to them when they see that actually they're something of an underdog. Crocodiles, lions and hyena are all threats – so you see how tough their lives really are."

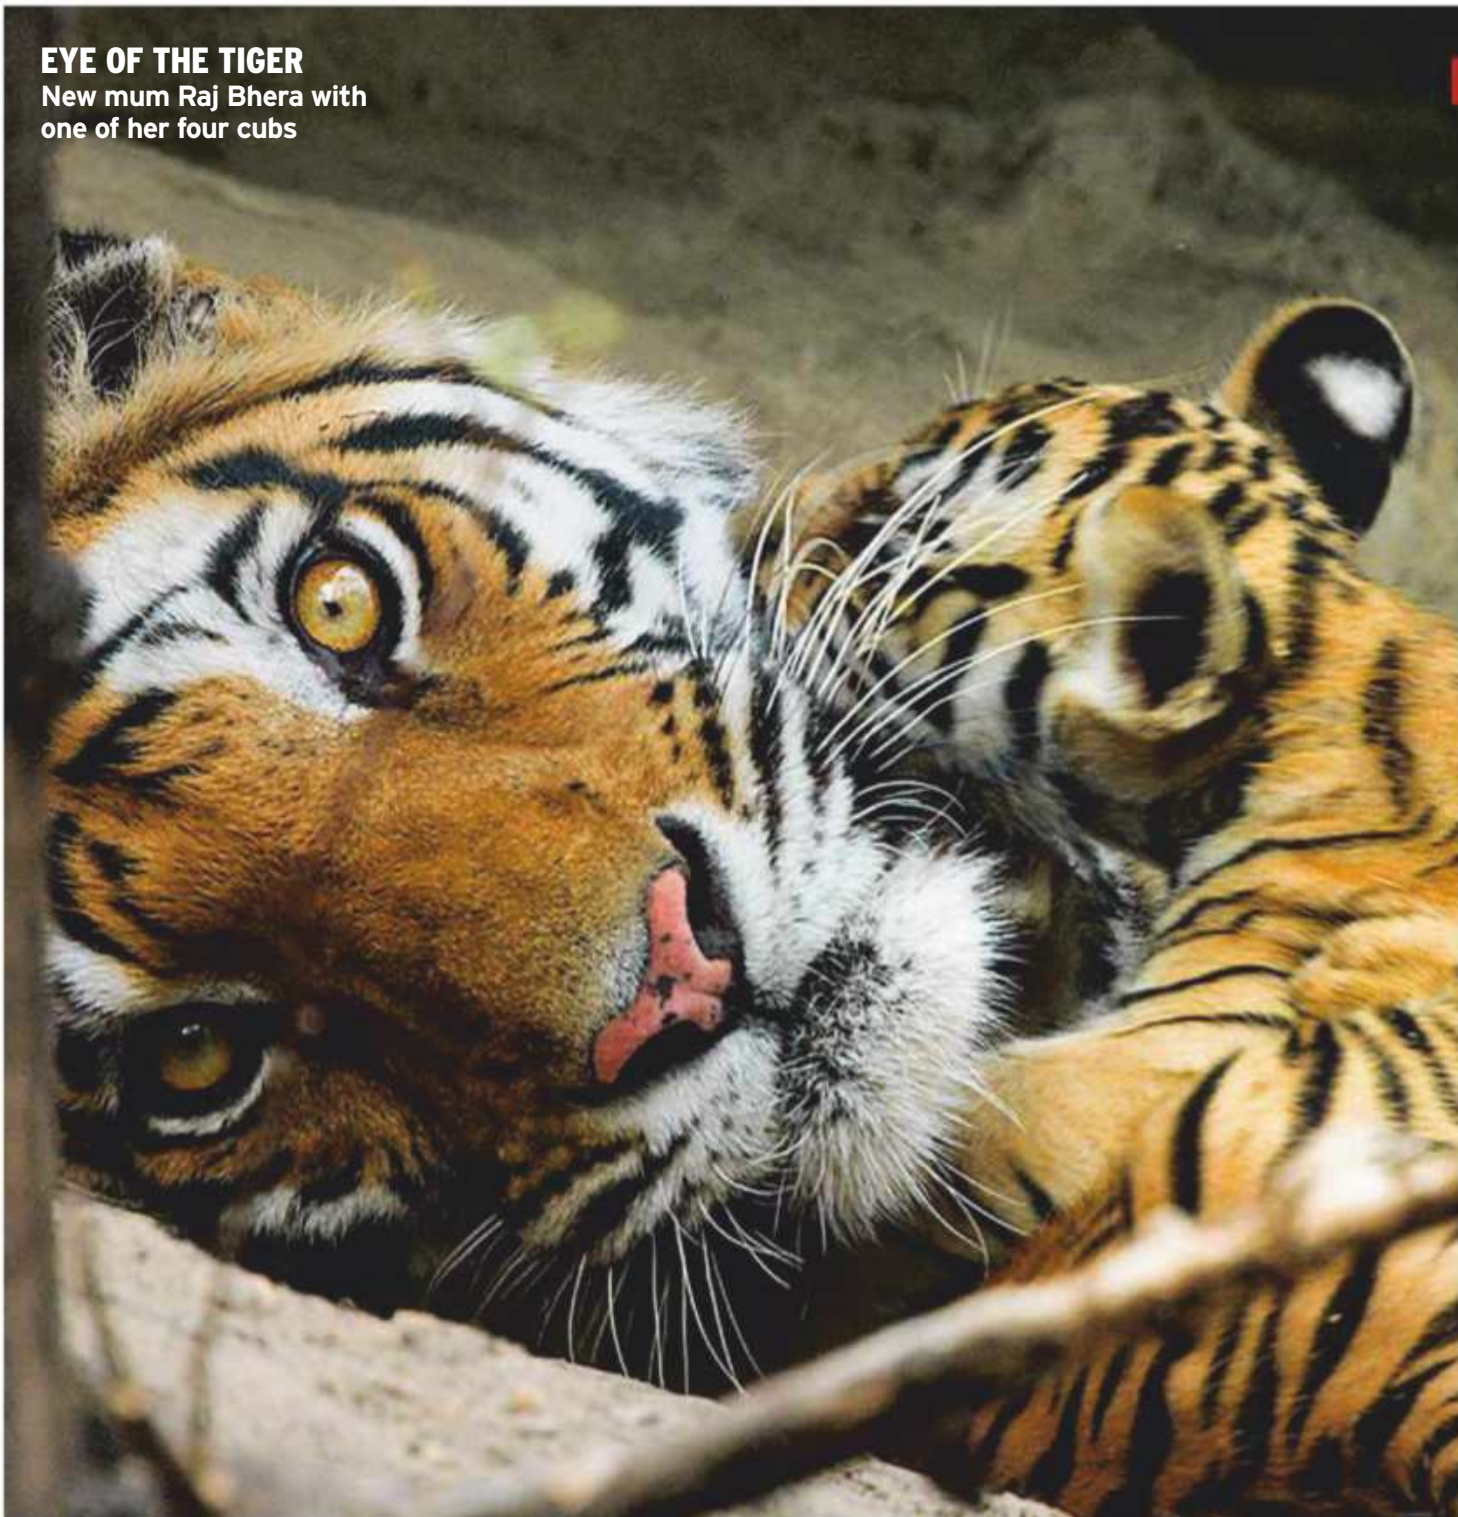

The film follows a family pack led by an ailing matriarch, Tait. But her days seem numbered when daughter Blacktip ousts her from both den and hunting grounds. "The greatest challenge was just finding them, because they can cover such huge distances," says Lyon. Yet there were moments of breathtaking closeness.

"One day I walked into the water and they played all around me. It was an amazing, intimate, perspective. I hope people fall in love with them."

EYE OF THE TIGER

New mum Raj Bhera with one of her four cubs

EPISODE FIVE

-  SUBJECT THE TIGER
-  LOCATION BANDHAVGARH NATIONAL PARK, INDIA
-  FILMING 220 DAYS

Loss of habitat is one of the key reasons why wild animals are under threat. But the tigers in this reserve in India face a bittersweet predicament – their numbers are booming, but there's not enough space for them.

"There are so many tigers that they have to move outside the park, and that's when the problems begin," says Theo Webb, whose film follows Raj Bhera as she gives birth to and raises four cubs. A remote-controlled camera on five-metre-high scaffolding peers into the birthing den on a rocky hilltop, operated by joystick in a hide 30 metres away.

Problems start to arise when a daughter from a previous litter, named Solo, returns to try to seize control of her mother's territory.

"The park is surrounded by villages so there's nowhere for Raj Bhera to go. She runs into humans, and that is a real moment." So the jeopardy is very real, but so too is the joy.

"It's hard to make people love tigers more than they already do, but seeing the cubs play is incredibly joyful."

* CALLS CHARGED PER MINUTE AT NO MORE THAN NATIONAL RATE

OF THE THREE great offices of state, the Foreign Office remains the one with the greatest mystique. For all the efforts it has made over the years to cast off its opaque and fusty image, the stereotype persists of a mostly male club with a rather exclusive and somewhat leisured membership. You can blame the Ferrero Rocher adverts, if you like – and many a modern diplomat will do just that – but the idea that UK foreign policy is run by a cartel of the super-bright and the super-privileged has proved very hard to shift.

Inside the Foreign Office, a three-part documentary charting a year in the life of the UK's foreign service, can be seen not only as the latest attempt of the media to probe the inner workings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, but the latest effort by the overlords at King Charles Street to show how outdated the stereotypes have become. In showing a range of the work UK diplomats do all day, it's also as much "bottom-up" in its approach as "top down", suggesting some hard bargaining about how far cameras and microphones would be allowed to intrude.

Trying to dispel popular preconceptions about the Foreign Office is not new; nor is the desire to give UK diplomacy a human face. Way back in the 1980s, the BBC treated its audience to Caviar and Cornflakes, following Donald MacLaren, then first secretary and press attaché at the Moscow embassy, on his daily round – from the family breakfast table, in his flat in the guarded all-foreigners' block, to the stiff formality of Soviet-era diplomatic receptions.

The master of the political documentary, Michael Cockerell, has also trained his lens on the Foreign Office. For BBC2's How to Be Foreign Secretary in 1998, he interviewed all eight living holders of the post, including the then incumbent, Robin Cook. A decade or so later, in 2010, he made The Great Offices of State for BBC4, which included a critical look at the Foreign Office and the making of foreign policy.

More recently, the BBC changed tack, with 2013's The Ambassadors, a rambunctious comedy drama about the goings-on in and around the British Embassy in the fictional state of Tazbekistan. The next year the French got in on the act, trying a Yes, Minister-style satire in the film Quai d'Orsay – featuring a diplomat modelled, it was believed, on the country's former foreign minister, Dominique de Villepin.

But timing with such programmes is all, and generally film-makers seeking to explain the real

Who's backing Britain?

As Brexit looms, the BBC follows a turbulent year in the life of the Foreign Office

Foreign Office have struck lucky. Caviar and Cornflakes was filmed as the seeds of the USSR's collapse were being sown with the Chernobyl disaster and the start of what became Mikhail Gorbachev's policies of glasnost and perestroika.

Cockerell's 2010 take on the Foreign Office tapped into a strong sense that, first at Suez and then in Iraq, UK diplomats' experience and advice had been sidelined by politicians, leading to debacles that would have repercussions for generations. The filming took place sufficiently soon after the events for memories to be intact, but long enough afterwards for many of the main players to speak freely.

For Inside the Foreign Office, the timing is fortunate – or prescient – once again. Starring as foreign secretary is Boris Johnson (how long ago that now seems) and the year in question encompasses Theresa May and Donald Trump performing their respective turns at the UN

General Assembly; the brutal expulsion of the Rohingya from Burma; and the Salisbury poisonings that plunge relations with Russia into the deep freeze – the worst they could be, it's observed, short of severing diplomatic relations. Ever audible in the background is the drumbeat of Brexit.

BRINGING THE DISPARATE strands together – for the documentary and, it must be hoped, in the real world – is the top civil servant at the Foreign Office, the hyper-smooth Sir Simon McDonald, whose job title – PUS (Permanent Under Secretary) – does its holder no favours and should surely have been rethought long ago.

It's here, though, that some questions might kick in. If Sir Simon – grammar school, Cambridge, married to the daughter of a diplomat who once held the post he now holds – is the standard-bearer for the new Foreign Office, how much has the FO adapted to changing times? And how well equipped is it to shift from the European focus that has defined much of UK foreign policy for the past 40, if not 60, years, to something more diffuse termed “Global Britain”?

On the plus side, it’s true that there are fewer public-school accents, less Oxbridge, and a lot more women than in the past. We also meet a woman ambassador (to Ukraine), who is gay and shares her residence with her partner and young son. Until 1973, female diplomats had to leave the service to marry. As an employer, the

DIPLOMATIC GLAMOUR

Foreign Office has come a very long way. And yet... the cameras positively feast on the opulence of the Foreign Office interiors and the interviews highlight the awe they inspire in foreign visitors and novice diplomats, not to speak of newly appointed foreign secretaries.

At the United Nations, Amal Clooney, human rights lawyer and helpful celeb, wafts briefly into the UK’s diplomatic entourage before a key vote. It might be worth recalling Angelina Jolie’s cameo role at the Foreign Office during William (now Lord) Hague’s tenure, campaigning against rape in wartime. We are not told what professional diplomats make of these celebrity interventions.

And when it comes to the serious business of negotiation, it still seems largely the men who hold sway. At the UN, we see the women diplomats organising schedules and seating plans, while the men are railing against Russia.

THERE ARE MANY more female British ambassadors than there once were – 12, at the last count, in Europe alone – and the UK now has a female ambassador to the UN. But more than 20 years since Dame Pauline, now Baroness, Neville-Jones resigned after – it was said – being passed over for Paris, no woman has yet held either of the two top diplomatic jobs (France and the US). Nor has there been a woman PUS. Is it progress that Deborah Bronnert has responsibility for “Global Britain” as part of her job as Director-General, Economic and Global Issues, or have the men handed her a poisoned chalice?

The difficulty of changing policy direction should not be underestimated. While “Global Britain” might sound like a new slogan, today’s Foreign Office staff have mostly made their careers on the presumption that the EU would always be central to UK diplomacy. How prepared are they to make an about-turn?

A remedy in the past might have been to lean more on that other longstanding pillar of UK foreign policy: the “special relationship”. But with Donald Trump in the White House and no clue as to whether the mood-change in the US is temporary or permanent, the options look limited. Inside the Foreign Office at least offers the consolation that some of the country’s best minds are now trained on the theory and practice of “Global Britain”, and the silver-tongued PUS will be there to express it in suitably magisterial language. MARY DEJEVSKY

THE WONDERFUL EVERYDAY

'Strictly the best'

Dr Ranj Singh says he made a monster mess of his Halloween jive – but his young fans are keeping him going

BEING ON THE nation's most-loved show means that you get lots of reaction from the public. The vast majority of it has been positive, which is such a lovely thing to experience. Having so many people rooting for you, especially when things don't always go to plan, means a great deal. And I came to realise just how much it meant in Halloween Week.

I'd had an amazing time preparing for our Monster Mash jive routine. Somehow, I seemed to have a natural affinity for the dance and managed to pick up the routine in six hours – that's a miracle for someone who took three days to learn his very first routine in week one! It was still hard work, though. The jive is pretty full-on and I'd done a night shift on Sunday and gone straight into rehearsals afterwards on Monday, which was physically and mentally quite demanding.

'Patients and staff at the hospital stop me to wish me luck'

That Sunday night I'd been in charge of looking after children on a number of wards in the hospital where I work, and one of them was the cancer ward. I'd been asked to check on a little girl who had come in with a temperature. That normally wouldn't be a major issue for a child, but running a temperature while being on chemotherapy could signal a potentially serious infection.

I popped into the side-room where she was sleeping alongside her mum and introduced myself. The little girl was a little weary as I woke her (it was 1am, after all!), but immediately she recognised me and whispered something to her mum. It turned out that she had seen me on children's TV and had been watching me on Strictly, too. When I left the room, her mum wished me luck for the week ahead and then thanked me for giving her daughter something to smile about – an encouragement I hadn't at all expected. I must confess, it definitely gave me a lift and helped me to get through my long shift.

SUPPORT
Dr Ranj and Janette Manrara at the hospital; and some of the children's letters that he's had

LITTLE GESTURES OF support like that really do make a difference to all of us dancers. Sometimes I get stopped in the corridors of the hospital by patients and members of staff who just want to wish me luck. When I got to the studio at the end of the week, the show's amazing runner, Chloe, handed me a bundle of post. I looked through them and found they were cards and letters with pictures inside drawn by young fans, and wonderful messages. All of this evidence of support reminds you just what being on the show means to the audience, and the responsibility you're under to do your best.

When our Halloween jive didn't quite go to plan, the same messages of support helped me to pick myself up. I had been so confident, given the successful week of rehearsals I'd had, but for some reason the live performance just didn't work out on the night. I couldn't help but feel disappointed with myself for making some really silly mistakes (mistakes that I hadn't made before), but it was the public votes that got us through from the bottom of the leader board, and that's something I'll never take for granted.

As I go into the next dance, I'll remind myself that I'm not just doing this for myself, but for all the many other people who also want to see me do my best.

Pirates on the high rise

How did People Just Do Nothing, the sitcom about a tiny pirate radio station, become a Bafta hit – and a movie in the making?

ON 1 MARCH 2010, a new micro-documentary series debuted on YouTube. The first episode, entitled Studio Time and running to less than five minutes, was credited to People Just Do Nothing. It followed a bunch of sportswear-clad street “youth” – in their mid-20s – as they tried to make music in a grotty DIY recording studio, ie a council flat.

Getting in the way of this was their obvious lack of talent and self-awareness, and their herculean ingestion of cannabis.

The most drug-addled character, Steves (purposefully plural), was asked by the camera crew: “Where do you see yourself in five years?”

“In five years?” he replied, near horizontal on a mattress. “Dunno, probably some squat rave or

Last year, the young writers/actors/comedians/musicians behind what was actually a mockumentary did find themselves at the TV industry’s version of a sick squat rave in the future: the Baftas.

People Just Do Nothing – think The Office, if it was centred on the business of pirate radio and garage music rather than stationery – won the award for best scripted comedy. Also in 2017, the team triumphed in the same category at the Royal Television Society Awards.

People Just Do Nothing is a spoof show about a bunch of ne’er-do-wells trying to broadcast illegal station Kurupt FM from a west London tower block. It has graduated from viral webisodes to four critically acclaimed series on BBC3 – and, now, with series five, a promotion to BBC2. In terms of his prediction, Steves was two years out. But, well, to be fair, he was utterly stoned at the time.

“Our first Bafta nomination was for series two, which was quite early, and that was just insane,” recalls Asim Chaudhry, who plays Chabuddy G, serially failing entrepreneur and Kurupt FM’s inept manager. “Peep Show was nominated!” he marvels of such “proper” comedy shows alongside which the four college friends now found themselves ranked.

“I don’t think we were knowledgeable enough to understand how important those nominations were,” admits Hugo Chegwin, who plays music producer Beats. “But when we got the Bafta I was like, wow, that’s a big accomplishment.”

“We’re not a polished show in the way that certain other shows have well-known actors and

big budgets,” adds creator and co-writer Steve Stamp, who plays Steves. “So it feels like a privilege to be put up against people you’d grown up with. I think Peter Kay beat us to the first Bafta – he’s Peter Kay, he’s meant to win. You’re up against your heroes.”

ULTIMATELY, THOUGH, IN the words of Allan “Seapa” Mustafa, who plays nominal leader of the gang, the witlessly deluded MC Grindah: “We all believe in each other’s opinion more than anyone else’s. We didn’t create this with an end-goal in mind. We just wanted to do something that we found really funny. But we’re just idiots.”

Idiots or not, the success of their show has seen the team guest on a Dragons’ Den spoof, bring added comedy to Charlie Sloth’s Radio 1 hip-hop show and star in a Comic Relief sketch with Ed Sheeran. The foursome, all aged 32 and 33, have also landed a record deal, released songs and performed live, booked for multiple club and festival gigs to play the credible garage tunes for which Chegwin is largely responsible.

But as they tell it, they’ve always been motivated by laughs rather than ambition.

“The first time we got paid,” recalls Chegwin, “was when [dance music bible] Mixmag gave us 500 quid to do a ‘How to...’ guide to DJ-ing.”

Mustafa chips in: “We were like, ‘Paid to do something we love? They’re idiots! We’d have done this for free!’”

Their success means that having the four principals in one place is a rarity, in this case enjoying an audience with Radio Times in a deeply trendy restaurant in east London.

People Just Do Nothing is beloved of millennials, music fans and students of comedy, which means they’re in big demand for other projects. Chaudhry, most notably and quirkily, is the gormless face of British Airways’ current in-flight safety films.

All of which goes some way to explaining why the imminent fifth series is the last. “Every series has got bigger,” reflects Stamp. “We’ve gone from us trying to write pirate radio stories, to stories about family and people dying, people getting married. There are only so many big life events you can do. You either start toning it down again and taking it back to the smaller stories. Or you keep it big and go out with a clear, high message about what the show has been about.”

As Chegwin notes, “You don’t have to like weed or garage or be from London to enjoy the show.” Those may be the top notes on the affably geezer-ish People Just Do Nothing, but at heart it’s a comedy about modern urban family life.

Grindah lives with long-suffering Miche (as in Michelle) and a daughter, Angel, who isn’t his, not that he’s noticed. Beats is partner to “Roche” (as in Rochelle), a security guard who very much wears the trousers in the house, and is stepdad to her slothful, computer-game-playing man-mountain of a son, Craig. In the previous series poor lost soul Steves was haunted by the death of his nan – literally haunted, he thought.

And what of Chabuddy G?

“His story is quite dark in this series. He’s got a glimmer of hope in that he’s moved out of his van and in with Carol,” Chaudhry says of Miche’s rapacious cougar of a mum. “But he’s become her personal sex slave. It’s a case of be careful what you wish for: he likes sex, and his older ladies, but it’s too much for him. Now he’s got it all the time and he’s literally her prisoner. But he does also go back to his old scamming ways.”

LIKE ALAN PARTRIDGE, The Office’s David Brent or Kurtan from This Country (the BBC’s hit Costwolds-set mockumentary that’s the most obvious heir to People Just Do Nothing), it’s a comedy about men with delusions of grandeur who refuse to grow up. Lovable losers, basically.

But now, as Grindah turns 33 in the upcoming series, much to his chagrin, it’s time for everyone to move on. Can a bloke in his early 30s still maintain the fiction that he’s a hotshot musician and pirate radio mogul – especially when their tower block is facing demolition? It might finally be time to put away childish things and accept adulthood, which in Grindah’s case could mean leaving his “manor” and moving to Essex.

“The show’s about friendships and relationships,” says Mustafa, “and the issues they go through could be translated to any world. It’s essentially about these best friends who want to follow their dreams but it’s so late in life, and they didn’t go about it the right way. They don’t want to grow up.” They are, again, “a bunch of idiots having to go through a huge life change.”

As on screen, so in real life: Stamp confirms that he’s halfway through writing a script for a People Just Do Nothing film. Obviously all concerned have their eyes on an Inbetweeners-level box-office prize.

Will the small-screen team’s big-screen adventures, true to comedic form, take them abroad?

“We’re going somewhat with them,” confirms Stamp, rebutting too-obvious suggestions of a Mediterranean party island. “We’re going to take them out of their comfort zone.”

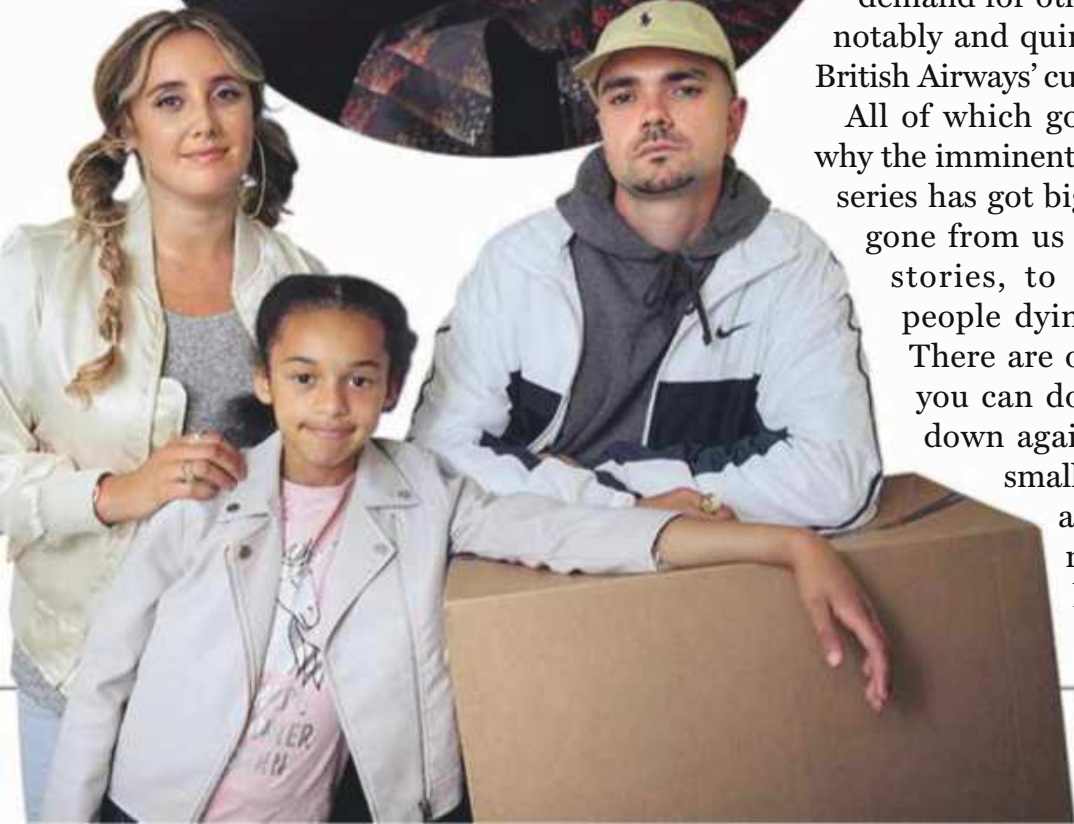

And after that?

“We’ll be back working in the call centre!” hoots Mustafa. CRAIG McLEAN

Changing of the guard

Manchester City v Manchester United
 Sunday 4.15pm (k/o 4.30pm) Sky Premier League/Main Event, 4.30pm 5 Live

THERE'S A SCENE in the western Tombstone in which lawman Doc Holliday confronts outlaw Johnny Ringo. "Should I hate him?... but there's something about him... reminds me of... me. No. I'm sure of it, I hate him." Perhaps that's what Manchester United feel about Manchester City. That there's some kind of identity theft going on.

It was all so easy in the 1990s. United were the natural champions of England, City were the eternal underdogs, and it seemed as if it would be that way for ever. City didn't beat United once in the course of that decade, while United continued their grand series of transitions, as one great team seamlessly became the next great team.

The Manchester derby was like the great local rivalry between Liverpool and Tranmere Rovers: amusing enough but never one that was going to cause many surprises.

City were raffish and cheerful and utterly overwhelmed, while United acquired their enviable and hateful swagger. They knew they were good, they knew they were part of something great – and any envy and hatred that came their way only made them even better. Whenever and wherever they played in England, they played as if they had a right to win.

Many fans resented their long period of hegemony, but everyone admired it, no matter how much they gritted their teeth. United won with style: with swashbuckling self-certainty. They attacked with speed and skill and discipline. Every time you thought they were in decline, they re-invented themselves and started playing even better.

But sport never stays still. Rock-solid certainties become bogs and quagmires of doubt. For years we expected a Manchester club to lord it over the Premier League as of right – but few of us thought it would be City. The takeover of the club by Sheikh Mansour of Abu Dhabi was set in motion in the 2008–09 season, and his money changed the balance of power in Manchester and in England.

Then, in 2013, Sir Alex Ferguson stepped down as manager of United and the long-dreaded time of transition began. This was when they started losing their identity; this was when City started to change. City acquired Pep Guardiola in 2016, the most sought-after manager in the world, and in a panicky response, United signed his old rival, Jose Mourinho.

By then City were the club with style and swagger and attacking glory. Everything that United once were, City became. They are now the team you watch to remind yourself how football should be played, and United are struggling to catch up. Mourinho's United tend to lack spark, dislike risks and are fearful of mistakes. Above all, they are fearful of losing to City.

THE TWO MANAGERS have faced each other in four Manchester derbies so far. In each of the last two seasons, City won 2–1 at United. At City's ground there was a 0–0 draw in the first season – and then last season, when a home victory in the derby would have given City the Premier League title, they led 2–0 – and ended up losing 3–2. They won the title the following week.

Last season was a tour de force: the year when City did what United once did, only better – leaving themselves with the stirring challenge of trying to do it again. United's job is to stop them, then set about reclaiming the old certainties. City look like the old United; there are times when United have looked like the old City.

A new stage

Sergei Polunin was once the bad boy of ballet – now he wants to bring dance to the masses

MOVIES, WHETHER YOU like it or not, are a kind of propaganda. If I want to bring ballet to a big audience, then it's the best platform," says Sergei Polunin, smiling his quiet, lopsided smile, and spreading his hands thoughtfully.

He's talking about his part in The Nutcracker and the Four Realms, Disney's new live-action fantasy film, released on 2 November, which takes ETA Hoffmann's classic Nutcracker story and gives it a twist. Keira Knightley stars as the Sugar Plum Fairy and Helen Mirren is playing wicked Mother Ginger, but Polunin has his moment in the spotlight in a dance sequence, partnered with American prima ballerina Misty Copeland.

He's pleased with the results. "I'd like to see the whole movie as a dance, but this is a real confirmation that it can work. I have some plans, some projects I want to do; I see a big potential in dance movies."

Film is the latest chapter in the engrossing saga of Polunin's life. He was a boy from Ukraine, who came to the UK at the age of 13 to train at the Royal Ballet School.

With his good looks, light, easy jump and apparently effortless ability to throw off complicated variations with style, he looked like a star from the moment he stepped onto the stage and won countless fans with his

The White Crow, about Russian ballet star Rudolf Nureyev, in which Polunin plays Nureyev's rival, Yuri Soloviev.

Previously, Polunin admits, he has been disappointed about how much dance has made it onto the screen – particularly in Red Sparrow where, despite filming long ballet sequences, the end result was very short. “I guess it’s not as important for the story,” he says, ruefully. “So they cut what felt essential to you. That’s painful to see. That’s why I want to do an actual dance movie, so I know that the dance is not cut.

“I see a big potential in that combination of acting and dance together, like in Bollywood films, or La La Land, or the movies of Fred Astaire. Dancing has been eliminated from film for too many years. But film is entertainment; it has to make people happy. I think it will soon come back.”

Today Polunin looks fit and happy, sleek in a beard and black leather, with a small new dove tattoo next to his eye. (“I had it done in Red Square,” he explains. “It’s about bringing countries together.”) In the past, the strain has been visible on his features. “When I left the Royal Ballet, everything went a bit weird and wrong,” he says, smiling sadly. “I left because I wanted to do more, to experience things.

“It was not because I was angry, but then it somehow turned upside down, and I started to think maybe I was angry and to dig things out. And, of course, we can always find something good and bad.” He says now that he exaggerated the “bad boy” lifestyle. “I played it up. I just thought it was very silly and I thought, ‘OK, you want me to be bad, I’ll be the worst.’

“Also, I felt guilty leaving, so I thought I would take the punishment on myself rather than to say what was wrong.

“I took a bit of a wrong turn, I took the wrong position rather than staying strong. I stopped believing in who I was, what I needed. Stopped being true to myself. Because I always had a vision about where I was going, what I was doing, but it got a bit messy.”

He never blames the Royal Ballet for what happened. “I was very thankful to them because they gave me

RED FOR DANGER
With Jennifer Lawrence in Red Sparrow, from which some of his dance scenes were cut everything that they could have offered.” Instead, he talks about “the ballet industry” as the problem. “It’s so old, it doesn’t function. Dancers work so hard and it doesn’t reward you for the work you put in.” He says this in the context of what he admits is a renewed hunger to dance; when we meet, he is performing with Munich’s Bayerisches Staatsballett in a production of Raymonda.

HE SAYS, WITH a slightly embarrassed grin, “I wanted to do classical, wear tights, you know. Dancing itself is so nice, so easy because I was trained in it and I can just relax into it. But the bubble around it...” He makes a noise like a balloon deflating. “I feel sorry for it. It has not moved forward. It hasn’t got enough resources, not enough money, not enough freedom. It’s not run properly.”

But with renewed passion, Polunin is trying to combat that, not only by bringing it to the big screen but also by using his undoubted charisma to help it appeal to young audiences. To this end, he performed at 2am at a music festival in Amsterdam. “It was amazing.

Everybody turned up and there were people who couldn’t get in.” He plans to do more. “When I was a kid in Ukraine, I loved discos and actually dancing. In my memory, it is one of my best times. You had it in the streets, people put music on and just danced, young and old. It wasn’t dark or heavy. It was light.

performances. But he only made the front pages in 2012 when, at the age of 22, he suddenly walked out of the company that had nurtured him, haunted by stories of partying, drug-taking, dancing while on cocaine, and an obsession with the tattoos that were beginning to cover his body. His tortured relationship with his own blazing talent seemed to be about to bring him down.

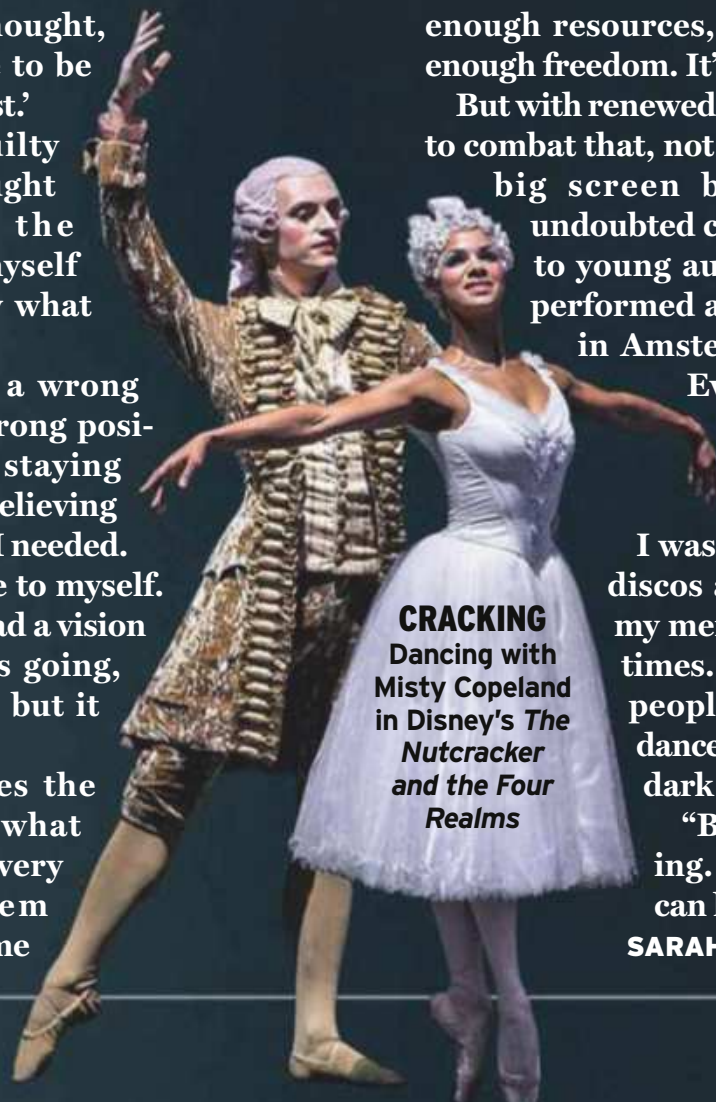

Three years later he found worldwide fame when he made what he planned as his farewell to dance, a film shot by the photographer David LaChapelle to Hozier’s Take Me to Church, in which he flings himself through the air with a despairing, exposed beauty.

‘I thought, “OK, you want me to be bad, I’ll be the worst”’

Posted on YouTube, it has now attracted well over 24 million views, turning him into a poster boy for doing dance differently, a rebel with a cause.

Ironically, its effect made him decide to keep performing and it’s now the thing he looks back on with most pride. “I wasn’t happy in the beginning,” he says, laughing. “I looked at it and was like, ‘ugh’. But it has become a very nice thing and I like how it has influenced people in a really good way. It brought a lot of light into my life.”

It also precipitated a second career in films, as a small part in Kenneth Branagh’s Murder on the Orient Express (Monday Sky Thriller) was followed by another in the Jennifer Lawrence spy story Red Sparrow. Still to be released is his role in Ralph Fiennes’s

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Paddington ★★★★★
12.45-2.30pm Film4 PG

ADVENTURE Roobarb, Jackanory, Blue Peter, John Craven's Newsround, Bewitched, Paddington... this was children's television as rationed by BBC1 in the austere, pre-digital days of the mid-1970s. My memories of Paddington, adapted by Michael Bond from his own books, are bittersweet. Gently animated using a stop-motion bear and cardboard cut-outs, it had a jaunty end-credits tune that signalled a specific feeling of existential dread: the end of our telly and the start of the adults-only urgency of the 5.45pm news.

Nostalgia for those far-off days has, I think, been the turbine behind Paddington's Bafta-nominated revival as a viable big-screen CGI franchise, which has seen the first two films gross $500 million between them. Producer David Heyman, in his mid-50s and thus a first-hand witness to the power of the BBC originals, hired Hamish McColl and Mighty Boosh director Paul King to revive the brand with wistful love for a more innocent time.

The ursine stowaway of the title arrives by boat after an unforeseen life change in his native Peru, and rocks up in a London recognisable to residents of the capital in the same tidied-up way Paris was to Parisian watchers of Amélie. The robustly middle-class Brown family who take in this illegal immigrant (Bond originally pictured him as a wartime evacuee) live in a multicultural crescent, and while Dad (Hugh Bonneville) takes some warming up, Peter Capaldi's curtain-twitching neighbour is downright hostile.

Jeopardy kicks in when a homesick Paddington (voiced with a purring lack of guile by Ben Whishaw) is targeted by wicked taxidermist (and new addition) Nicole Kidman.

The Brown adolescents (Samuel Joslin and Madeleine Harris) provide a way in for kids, while Bonneville, Sally Hawkins

(as Mrs Brown), improbable housekeeper Julie Walters and German-accented antiquarian Jim Broadbent satisfy the parent and grandparent demographics. After producing the Harry Potter saga, Heyman understands the capital of familiar faces, and you'll struggle to spot a supporting player you can't name.

Sly humour, literal song choices – I Got You (I Feel Good), Born to Be Wild – and storybook environments are lathered in marmalade... and, thank goodness, this Paddington doesn't have to be a signal to see off younger viewers. (UK/Fr 2014, HD)

RT OFFER To order the set of Paddington 1 & 2 on two DVDs for £12.99 incl p&p (RRP £24.99), call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply), quoting ref RT1675. Your contract for supply of goods is with Simply Media.

The Red Shoes ★★★★★
1.00-3.10pm BBC2 U

ROMANTIC DRAMA In her film debut, Moira Shearer stars as the ballerina torn between an impresario and a composer (Marius Goring). Based on the story of Sergei Diaghilev and Waslaw Nijinsky, this is arguably the best-loved dance film of all time, enabling the team of Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger to ponder the power and nature of the subject matter with some exuberant dance sequences and a riot of Oscar-winning designs. AT (UK 1948, HD)

Hope and Glory ★★★★★
4.45-7.00pm Drama 15

WAR DRAMA War may be hell if you're a grown-up, but it's a wheeze if you're a nine-year-old living during the Blitz. Anyway, that's how it looks to the hero of director John Boorman's funny memoir of family life in the Second World War. Sebastian Rice-Edwards gives an extraordinary performance in the lead role, and while the film is on the episodic side – and Ian Bannen as the grandfather might have toned down his eccentric portrayal a notch – these are minor quibbles about a delightful movie. PF (UK 1987, swearing)

Iron Man 2 ★★★★★
6.20-8.30pm ITV 12

ACTION ADVENTURE There's plenty going on in director Jon Favreau's sequel to the hit original, though it does feel like rather overfamiliar territory. As Tony Stark (Robert Downey Jr) struggles with fame, Russian inventor Ivan Vanko (Mickey Rourke) creates his own deadly suit. The film lacks the fresh irreverence of the first adventure, but there are great set pieces, including Vanko making a dramatic appearance at the Monaco Grand Prix. AJ (US 2010, may be edited for violence, language, HD)

Once upon a Time in Mexico ★★★★★
9.00pm-12 midnight Dave 15

ACTION Director Robert Rodriguez essentially remakes his 1992 ultra-low-budget debut El Mariachi as Desperado (1995) in this third outing for Antonio Banderas's wandering minstrel with an arsenal in his guitar case. The action is certainly spectacular and inventive – Rodriguez is one of the best editors of mayhem around – and Salma Hayek is suitably sultry, but you can't escape the feeling that you've seen it all before. AS (US 2003, violence, edited for language, HD)

The Curse of Frankenstein ★★★★★
9.00-10.40pm Horror Channel 12

HORROR This was the classic that revived traditional British Gothic and firmly placed the "Hammer House of Horror" on the map. Peter Cushing is the demented Baron who yearns to resurrect the dead, while Christopher Lee plays the hideous creature who proves his mad theories correct. With its gruesome atmosphere, unflinching direction and outstanding design, this set a standard Hammer found it hard to live up to. AJ (UK 1957, violence)

I, Robot ★★★★★
10.15pm-12.15am C4 12

SCI-FI When a scientist turns up dead, Detective Del Spooner (Will Smith) suspects the involvement of a prototype robot, in a blockbuster that succeeds because of its seamless use of CGI. Smith lends charisma and, while this meditation on whether robots are capable of emotion doesn't delve as deeply as Blade Runner, director Alex Proyas keeps the action racing along. TH (US/Ger 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

Headhunters ★★★★★
11.30pm-1.05am BBC2 15

THRILLER Aksel Hennie plays an art thief who plans to steal a painting from a former special forces soldier (Nikolaj Coster-Waldau), not realising that he will be the prey in the ensuing game of cat and mouse. This film's violence and lavatorial humour won't suit everyone, but Hennie's anti-hero makes this an entertaining ride. DW (Nor/Den/Ger 2011, violence, swearing, sex scenes, brief nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Testament of Youth ★★★★★

DRAMA Scheduled after astounding First World War documentary They Shall Not Grow Old, this vividly dramatised account of pacifist Vera Brittain's first memoir (covering the years 1900-1925), adds dramatic reconstruction to Armistice Day, and casts a strikingly female gaze at the slaughter from the perspective of a voluntary nurse, dragged away from her studies in Oxford. Swedish actress Alicia Vikander cracks the cut-glass accent as the bookish Vera, who eventually travels to the trenches where she must also tend to injured Germans, the experience sowing the seeds of her lifelong pacifism. Taron Egerton, best known as the geezerish Eggsy in the Kingsman films, delivers an excellent, crisp portrayal as Vera's brother Edward, while Kit Harington is considerably less hairy than in Game of Thrones. Juggling breakdowns, gas attacks and emergency surgery, as well as bucolic images of the middle-class home front, director James Kent always manages to hit the right notes in this moving BBC Film, as does composer Max Richter. (UK/Den 2014, violence, HD)

5.25-7.15pm Talking Pictures TV PG

COMEDY Oh, dear... This is a watered-down Carry On Nurse set (tastefully) in a male tuberculosis ward, with nurse Juliet Mills running the show. The Carry On producer/director team of Peter Rogers and Gerald Thomas would occasionally make these forays away from their popular series, but would invariably use a similar cast. Here's Joan Sims and Kenneth Williams again, plus those students from Doctor in the House (made by Gerald Thomas's brother Ralph), Donalds Sinden and Houston, chasing nurses Jill Ireland and Nanette Newman. This obsession with nurses continued in Nurse on Wheels (also with Mills and the excellent Ronald Lewis). TS (UK 1962, BW)

Rio ★★★★★

6.40-8.30pm E4

U

ADVENTURE As irresistible as the samba and bossa nova rhythms that pulsate throughout, this sunny animation from the Ice Age team is a colourful and enjoyable eye-catcher. Jesse Eisenberg voices Blu, a macaw taken back to Rio from Minnesota to mate with the last female of his species, Jewel (Anne Hathaway), but feathers are ruffled when they're kidnapped by smugglers. Brazilian director Carlos Saldanha ensures his flock of engaging characters soar, from Busby Berkeley-style beginning to spectacular carnival finale. There are the usual life lessons to be learned but, under Saldanha's light touch, they seamlessly blend with the airborne action. AJ (US 2011, HD)

The Hobbit: the Battle of the Five Armies ★★★★★

FANTASY An epic but uneven journey comes to an end at the Lonely Mountain with director Peter Jackson at the peak of his powers. He marshals elves, dwarves, orcs and men in awesomely staged conflict after Thorin (Richard Armitage) hunkers down at Erebor to protect the dunes of gold that Smaug (voiced by Benedict Cumberbatch) has left behind. Spectacular opening scenes find the dragon breathing fiery havoc on Lake-town, but Jackson lavishes too much time on minor characters. The one-on-one battles generate more intensity, and even if Jackson doesn't match the gravitas of Tolkien's writing, he leaves Middle-earth on a high. SP (US/NZ 2014, violence, HD)

ACTION This sequel to 2013 White House siege thriller Olympus Has Fallen relocates to London for a state funeral that is plunged into chaos by a terrorist attack. Our empathy is supposed to be with Gerard Butler's violent, foul-mouthed Secret Service agent and Aaron Eckhart's US President as they improvise an escape, but there's something nasty about this orgy of below-par CGI destruction. Director Babak Nafaji extracts some comedy from the pyrotechnics, although calling the PM Clarkson is an unintentional gag. AC (US/UK 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Love Is Strange ★★★★★

12.45-2.25am C4

ROMANTIC COMEDY Love is never easy, as a devoted single-sex couple discovers in this poignant film from Ira Sachs. After 39 years together, artist Ben (John Lithgow) and teacher George (Alfred Molina) decide to get married, but news of their union brings about unemployment and then homelessness. The story wanders a bit, but Lithgow and Molina turn in nuanced and realistic performances. Heart-warming and heartbreaking, Love Is Strange is a road trip through a durable, fascinating romance. KK (US/Fr 2014, swearing, HD)

U

WAR DRAMA One of seemingly dozens of PoW dramas made in the early to mid-1950s (The Wooden Horse, Albert RN), this is set in the infamous German fortress of the title. The story about the daring escapes undertaken by Allied prisoners has little time for the psychology of imprisonment (unlike the popular BBC TV series of the 1970s), but the action is well played. John Mills is perfectly cast as Pat Reid, on whose first-hand account the film is based, and Eric Portman, Ian Carmichael, Lionel Jeffries and Bryan Forbes are the other inmates of heroic hue. Director Guy Hamilton would go on to gain greater acclaim with a different kind of escapism when he directed Goldfinger in 1964. AT (UK 1954, BW, HD)

Oh! What a Lovely War ★★★★★

PG

MUSICAL SATIRE Based on Joan Littlewood's stage production, this stylised, satirical and ultimately moving tribute to the soldiers who answered their country's call and fought in the Great War was Richard Attenborough's first film as a director. An all-star cast performs the original's jingoistic music hall songs, which Attenborough cleverly stages in Brighton's Royal Pavilion and on the old West Pier. While there was animosity behind the scenes – Len Deighton refused screen credit as the film's writer – this remains a distinctive piece of work and by far the most audacious film Attenborough has ever made. It also tapped into the post-Sergeant Pepper style that was all the rage in the late 1960s. AT (UK 1969, HD)

EVENING

Madagascar ★★★★★

U

ADVENTURE While not in the same league as Shrek, this offering from DreamWorks Animation is serviceable family entertainment. Chris Rock and Ben Stiller voice Marty the zebra and Alex, a preening lion, who enjoy a comfortable existence in Manhattan's Central Park Zoo until Marty expresses a desire to return to the wild. What follows is a predictable but engaging series of mishaps that land the pair in Africa, along with anxious giraffe Melman (David Schwimmer) and hippo Gloria (Jada Pinkett Smith). The pace drags a bit in the last third of the movie and the attempts to infuse Marty and Alex's relationship with pathos are uninvolved, but the film is always marvellous to look at and the sight gags come thick and fast. GM (US 2005, HD)

CLASSIC COMEDY With the biopic Stan & Ollie in cinemas in the New Year, starring Steve Coogan and John C Reilly, here is the duo in perhaps the best-loved of all the Laurel and Hardy shorts. Made in the vintage year of 1932 between seven others, The Music Box is a classic, Oscar-winning outing in which they must deliver a piano at the top of a vast flight of steps. They certainly deliver the comedy, with variations on the theme of the instrument jangling down the slope. Even when they get it inside the house of Professor von Schwarzenhoffen (Billy Gilbert), the trouble isn't over... (US 1932, BW)

Kill Bill Vol 2 ★★★
10.00pm-12.40am 5STAR 18

DRAMA Quentin Tarantino's bloated wrap-up of his bloody revenge saga is something of an anticlimax. Detailing how the Bride (Uma Thurman) tracks down the Deadly Viper assassin squad before facing Bill (David Carradine), it's the same mix as before except less visually dynamic and with a lot more unnecessary exposition. Yet the borrowed style, music, props and obscure genre references still make this into a buff treat. The martial arts action packs a less gory punch than Vol 1, but there's still plenty here to shock. One single condensed movie would doubtless have sufficed, but then we wouldn't have had the earlier gem to this minor companion piece. AJ (US 2004, violence, swearing, drug abuse, col/BW)

Blade ★★★
10.00pm-12.35am ITV4 18

FANTASY Wesley Snipes plays the half-mortal, half-vampire who hunts creatures of the night in this flashy and violent action adventure based on the popular Marvel Comics character. He sets out to thwart vampire Stephen Dorff, whose plans include running a nightclub that will supply humans for his pals to feed on. This is far-fetched stuff, but Snipes looks great in leather, and it's snappily paced. It spawned a fabulous sequel helmed by The Shape of Water director Guillermo del Toro, though the less said about the third instalment, Blade: Trinity, the better. JB (US 1998, violence, swearing, HD)

The Hangover: Part II ★★★
11.00pm-1.05am C5 15

COMEDY Following the wildly successful 2009 comedy, this sequel takes us on a trip to Bangkok, where Phil, Alan and Stu (Bradley Cooper, Zach Galifianakis and Ed Helms) wake up minus one of their stag party, whose severed finger offers the only clue as to what happened the night before. Again, the lads trawl the mean streets to find him, but the mystery is less compelling, with director/co-writer Todd Phillips retracing steps from the first film. SP (US 2011, drug abuse, nudity, edited for language, HD)

Heal the Living ★★★★★
11.25pm-1.30am Film4 12

DRAMA Television has diminished much of the mystique of the hospital, but Katell Quillévéré restores its lustre in this sensitive but gripping adaptation of Maylis de Kerangal's bestseller. Emmanuelle Seigner and Kool Shen excel as the parents of a teenager in a coma, and Quillévéré skilfully keeps the focus on the everyday details, making this medical melodrama at its best. DP (Fr/US/Bel 2016, sexual references, HD)

Please will you give £75 to provide a refugee family like Khitam's with a winter survival kit to protect against the freezing weather?

The kit contains essentials such as a heating stove, thermal blankets and a tarpaulin for insulation. It could mean survival for a family like Khitam's.

Across Lebanon and Jordan, six of the last seven winters have brought heavy snowfall and temperatures regularly drop below 0°C.

This winter, the lives of the most vulnerable refugees: young children, pregnant women and the elderly, are at grave risk from hypothermia, frostbite and diseases like pneumonia.

With a gift of £75 you can provide a winter survival kit containing a stove, blankets, jerry can and a tarpaulin to help a family insulate and heat their home. Please give today.

This offer from Laithwaite's Wine is a one-off wine case purchase

SAVE £60 ON SENSATIONAL NEW ZEALAND SAUVIGNON BLANC!

A 12-bottle case of New Zealand sauvignon blanc for £71.88 (was £131.88).
That's just £5.99 a bottle, saving you £60, plus FREE delivery (usually £7.99)

New Zealand sauvignon is the UK's favourite wine, and this dozen features the very best-loved in our range. They all come from tiny, boutique wineries, which means they pack in much more intense, refreshing flavour than the mass-produced brands – but right now they're only £5.99 a bottle. You'll save £60!

It really is an all-star lineup – no wonder they're usually up to £12.99 each! All are from Marlborough, the epicentre of New Zealand sauvignon quality. With three of each variety, you can fully savour the range of Marlborough's best.

Leading the pack is ultra-zesty Tikohi, from a pioneering family estate, brimming with lime and gooseberry flavour. Mount Richmond was the special project of New Zealand legends the Rose family, offering brilliant citrus on the nose and a ripe passionfruit flavour. Kora is bright, crisp and alive with cut grass, crisp green fruits and citrus freshness. And finally, Waitui Bay, from a miniscule family cellar, brings huge delicate floral and stone fruit aromas and lip-smacking punchy peach and guava flavour, with a bright mineral quality.

At £5.99 a bottle they're too good to miss. And we'll even throw in FREE delivery (normally £7.99). Get your fridge in tip top shape for Christmas!

GoodFellas ★★★★★
10.05pm-1.00am ITV4

CRIME DRAMA There are some films you catch partway through and still have to watch until the end. GoodFellas is a definitive example. Co-adapted from Wiseguy, Nicholas Pileggi's 1985 non-fiction account covering 20 years in the life of mafioso Henry Hill (Ray Liotta), the film opens with a violent prologue, and then takes confident strides from juvenile delinquency to witness protection. All the while, Scorsese finds grace and brutality within the New York Mob, typified by Robert De Niro and a terrifying, Oscar-winning Joe Pesci. Warning: once will not be enough. THRILLER Domsday movies were everywhere in the early 1950s as the Cold War chill began to bite. This is the finest British contribution to that subgenre; indeed, a pretty convincing case could be made for its nomination as one of this country's best-ever cinematic thrillers. Although the considerable threat of an atomic explosion in London makes for compelling viewing, the true power of the picture comes from a magnificent performance by Barry Jones as the professor driven to suicidal despair by the misappropriation of his work. Thanks to Jones and cinematographer Gilbert Taylor's eerie images, this Boulting brothers film maintains an unbearable tension. DP (UK 1950, BW)

The Perks of Being a Wallflower ★★★★★ 6.55-9.00pm Film4 12

ROMANTIC DRAMA "Welcome to the island of misfit toys," says high-school senior Sam (Emma Watson), as she introduces Charlie (Logan Lerman) into her social circle. Sam is the stepsister of Patrick (Ezra Miller) and, as the trio's friendship blossoms, Charlie falls for her, despite struggling with a secret trauma from his youth. Writer/director Stephen Chbosky adapts his own 1990s-set young adult novel here, but he walks a wobbly line between schmaltz and sincerity. Thankfully the superb cast, including Paul Rudd as a teacher, make this potentially queasy teen drama watchable. KK (US 2012, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Black Hawk Down ★★★★★
9.00pm-12.10am Syfy 15

WAR DRAMA The fact that this film is based on the disastrous 1993 "Battle of Mogadishu" in Somalia does not temper its flag-waving, pro-American militarism. To his credit, Ridley Scott has cast many non-Americans in prominent roles - Ewan McGregor, Jason Isaacs and Eric Bana - and his film is sensitive for a Jerry Bruckheimer movie. But for all of Scott's technical skill, the battle scenes lack identifiable characters and there is scant insight into the Somali conflict. AC (US 2001, violence, swearing)

Mojave ★★★★★ 11.35pm-1.30am
Sony Movie Channel 15

THRILLER William Monahan (Oscar-winning writer of The Departed) directs for the second time with this good-looking psycho-thriller. Garrett Hedlund stars as a film director who goes into the desert to find himself, but he also finds Oscar Isaac's drifter. The ensuing game of cat and mouse involves great locations, and Isaac confirms why he's one of the most watchable actors around. JA (US 2014, violence, swearing)

DRAMA This deeply humane portrait of a marriage confirmed writer/director Andrew Haigh as a gifted miniaturist of everyday life, in which Tom Courtenay and Charlotte Rampling play childless, physically affectionate retirees Kate and Geoff, content in a remote but cosy house in Norfolk. His heart bypass postponed their 40th celebration, so they plan to compensate five years on, until a chapter from Geoff's past rears its ill-timed head. Their wedding song Smoke Gets in Your Eyes rings ominous, as the two leads give full body to escalating events and bliss curdles at the turn of a phrase. Haigh's command is exquisite but it's the duo's wordless expressions that bring the house down. (UK 2015, swearing, a sex scene, HD) this inventive thriller from Christopher Nolan. DiCaprio stars as a corporate spy who steals secrets from other people's dreams, but begins to lose his grip when tasked with implanting an idea in the mind of the heir to an energy empire (Cillian Murphy). Their thoughts are in conflict, producing incredible, ethereal action scenes akin to The Matrix. DiCaprio is aided by a team of specialists, Tom Hardy included. The basic buddy-buddy situation is a familiar one, but Mel Gibson, as the loose-cannon detective whose disregard for danger reaches new heights when he investigates a drugs ring, and Danny Glover, as his play-by-the-rules partner, bring a great deal of spirit and fun to the mayhem. JM (US 1987, edited for violence, swearing, nudity)

pin down the narrative of the novel never quite succeeds, because it's just too reverent. Michael York and Simon MacCorkindale are the yachtsmen who discover a strike against England by the Germans ahead of the First World War. Tony Maylam's direction strives to make the most of locations, but there's a glossiness to the production that launches a pre-emptive strike at our suspension of disbelief. TH (UK 1978)

COMEDY Remember when Seth Rogen, Paul Rudd, Leslie Mann, Jason Segel and Jonah Hill didn't have their names above the title? Good-value support players was all they were in writer/director Judd Apatow's breakthrough The 40 Year Old Virgin, but his follow-through, Knocked Up, really raised their stock. If anything, the prospects of the latter rested with female lead Katherine Heigl – best known from Grey's Anatomy on TV – as the media career-woman impregnated by Rogen's schlub during a drunken one-night stand. But it was he and his geek chorus (Segel, Hill, third fiddle Jay Baruchel), who benefited, along with future stars in marginal roles Kristen Wiig, Bill Hader and Adam Scott. Hilarious rather than schmaltzy, Apatow's script also empowered Rudd and Mann as happily-ish older marrieds. Add to this cavalcade of warmly postmodern talent some winning, near-the-knuckle repartee and watching it again feels like a new chapter in film comedy has just been opened. ### It's a family affair

From Monday Sky Store and Virgin Movies

COMEDY ADVENTURE Fourteen years after they first burst onto the scene, Pixar's superhero family is back for a new animated tale.

This sequel picks up where the first film left off. Hence, those "supers" are still deemed illegal, and must live clandestinely, keeping their extraordinary abilities under wraps. An approach from a tech magnate determined to change this state of affairs gets Helen (brilliantly voiced by Holly Hunter) back in her stretchy Elastigirl suit to take on a terrifying new foe, but she can only do so while hubby Bob, aka Mr Incredible (Craig T Nelson), holds the fort and minds the kids at home – something he soon discovers is a superhuman task.

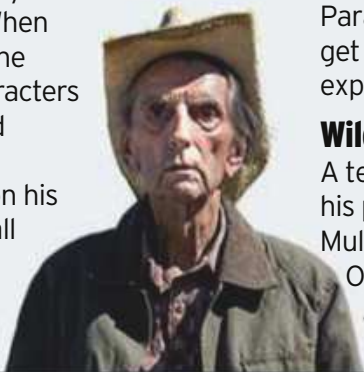

The combination of whizz-bang spectacle and insightful laughter about family life is very entertaining. And while it might be just an enhanced version of the original, it proves nigh-on irresistible all the same. Trevor Johnston (US 2018, HD)

PICK OF THE REST

PG Lucky ★★★

From Mon Sky Store/Virgin Movies

COMEDY DRAMA In some ways, nothing really happens in John Carroll Lynch's low-key tale that follows the daily routine of 90-year-old Lucky (Harry Dean Stanton) in a small desert town. Nevertheless, the film is quietly moving and insightful, and it features a captivating turn from Stanton, who passed away in 2017 at the age of 91. When Lucky speaks, the supporting characters (including David Lynch and Tom Skerritt) hang on his every word. In all likelihood, you will, too. SC (US 2017, swearing, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

The Man Who Invented Christmas ★★★★★ PG Netflix. DVD, Blu-ray 12 Nov

With a dwindling reputation and rising financial responsibilities, Charles Dickens (Dan Stevens) draws on Victorian London and his own painful past to write his most famous novel. There have been countless film adaptations of A Christmas Carol, but this funny and heart-warming comedy drama unearths the creation of the beloved festive story. We get a fascinating insight into Dickens himself, particularly his fear of poverty. But rather than a dry biopic, it's a comic fantasy of sorts, as Dickens interacts with Scrooge (a perfectly cast Christopher Plummer) and other characters who help him finish his story. The DVD includes a making-of featurette. James Luxford RT Offer To order the DVD for £16.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply) quoting reference RT1675. ## REMEMBRANCE DAY APPEAL 2018 - FOR BRAVE GURKHA VETERANS

Too old to fight, too proud to ask

In the mountains of poverty-stricken Nepal, thousands of Gurkha ex-servicemen who live with the constant threat of earthquakes and monsoons, depend on us for their survival. They are veterans of numerous UK military campaigns stretching back to World War I.

With your help, The Gurkha Welfare Trust can pay these proud men, or their widows, a pension – allowing them to purchase basics like food.

Will you give £29 today which could pay for nearly two weeks' pension? Your gift will help repay our debt of honour and allow these courageous veterans to live in the dignity with which they served.

Darker nights? No problem.

Mrs Watkins London

- Up to TEN TIMES more light on your page than a traditional 60w filament bulb
- Words are crisp and clear
- Delivered fully assembled
  - Reading is easier, faster and more enjoyable
- Recommended by over 500 independent qualified opticians
  - 5 year guarantee

Serious Readers is a British company totally dedicated to the purity of light and as our name implies we take it rather seriously. So much so, we design and build our reading and task lights like no other. Whilst other lights rely on aesthetics for their appeal rather than light output, our primary focus is on performance.

TVs aren't the only technology to use high definition

A Serious Readers Light offers incredible clarity and brightness. In fact, our lights are used by surgeons, forensic scientists and fine art restorers – basically anyone who needs to see clearly and accurately.

The smaller the text the greater the clarity

Small text is a test for both light and eye and with a Serious Readers Light this is where you'll really notice the difference. Everything looks sharper, clearer and easier to read. Fine detail is more defined and colour has a new vibrancy and richness. If you're an avid reader or have a hobby that requires close work, a Serious Readers Light will completely transform your enjoyment in a way you never thought possible.

Punch the clock!

Drop the artificial deadlines – they’re fake, says Alison Graham

THERE ARE MANY things to worry about in this veil of tears... a no-deal Brexit... paralysing Russian cyber-attacks on our infrastructures... a crumbling National Health Service... a second series of The Split (please, no!).

See, that’s more than enough to occupy any sane person, so I won’t waste even an atom’s worth of my thought processes on fretting about whether someone will complete a glamping area with art deco paving.

Maybe if I were making this glamping area with art deco paving, I’d be a bit preoccupied, largely about the kind of people who would actually go “glamping”, who are for me up there with people who like to “pamper” themselves with spa treatments and use hot tubs. But hey-ho, I’d happily potter on.

But this is a big deal in Escape to the Château (Sunday C4), where Dick Strawbridge and his wife Angel plan to expand their wedding venue and hotel business by tarding up an outside space.

This all sounds relatively straightforward, but of course there must be a wholly superfluous deadline attached to the entire ruddy project. Just six weeks before the first glamping guests arrive! And there’s a three-day wedding to get through in between!

Well you know what: I don’t care. You set the deadline, you deal with it. This kind of specious nonsense crops up absolutely everywhere. In Family Cooking Showdown, judges were always banging on about how contestants had given themselves too much to do. Similarly in The Great British Bake Off, there were beetled brows about whether this contestant or that contestant would finish on time, such was their self-imposed workload.

MasterChef (and MasterChef: the Professionals, which returns to BBC2 on Tuesday) does it all the time. In Grand Designs Kevin “Cassandra” McCloud is always leaning on a dry-stone wall, shaking his head at over-ambitious projects. Yet everything works out, I can’t recall ever seeing anyone still cooking as the final call rings out

FAKE JEOPARDY
Escape to the Château,
The Great British Bake Off,
MasterChef: the Professionals;

and even if a Grand Design isn’t finished, it’s hardly ever that far off. Honestly, as a nation you’d think that our time management had gone entirely to pot.

Of course, I can appreciate that a bit of tension adds a certain amount of bite to soft shows like this, but does it have to be so over-used? Even nature programmes do it... will a penguin reach its young, will the jaguar catch that impala... I don’t know, but they are animals, it’s what they do. They aren’t counting down on their iPhones.

ICAN’T SEE A polar bear balancing on a melting iceberg giving himself a deadline to catch a seal. (“Ooooh, the ice is melting beneath my feet, I can’t have more than five minutes, have I given myself too much to do?”)

Escape to the Château has added another element, too: according to the narration, this whole glamping thing is an “enormous risk”. No, it isn’t, it’s not stem-cell surgery. No one will die if it goes wrong. Juggling with Semtex is an enormous risk, playing chicken at a level crossing is an enormous risk. Putting up a big tent to a pointless deadline is not an enormous risk. But then the whole thing is wildly inconsequential... we watch Angel making “personalised place settings for a family lunch” and “putting on a display of spring flowers in vintage crockery”. This is all fine, of course, there’s room in everyone’s viewing life for a bit of nonsense. But drop the nail-biting.

NO FAKING A BAKE-OFF TALENT

Liam Charles (below) didn’t win last year’s Great British Bake Off – he didn’t even reach the final – but he became a hugely popular contestant. So it’s good to see him fronting his own show, Liam Bakes (Monday C4).

I wonder which of this year’s amateur bakers will go on to flourishing television careers. I can’t imagine painfully self-effacing winner Rahul Mandal chatting amiably to camera as he makes eclairs (though I could be wrong – who knows what the win will do for his confidence?).

But surely it’s Ruby Bhogal who’s a television natural. Fun, clever, chatty and hugely talented... someone, somewhere, should sign her up. And fast.

1 NEW EPISODES The Sinner Netflix

Series two of this surprise drama hit copes well with losing half of its original duo: with no Jessica Biel to fire off, Bill Pullman takes the strain as his troubled cop Harry investigates another case where we know whodunnit, but not why. Delving deeper into Harry's past means the show retains the unsettling quality that made it so beguiling.
Available from 9 November

SEE THE WHOLE SERIES 5 The Heist NowTV/Sky Box Sets

If you're a fan of the contrived but exciting Hunted, you'll like this game show by the same producers: in episode one, a group of ordinary folk from Thirsk steal a quarter of a million pounds in cash. The robbery's a set-up, but after that they're on their own as they hide from a team of professional detectives who use all the hi-tech surveillance they would in real life. If the thieves keep their cool, they keep the money.
Available from 9 November

UNDERRATED COMEDY

6 The Jim Gaffigan Show Amazon Prime

Fans of performer-led meta-sitcoms such as Louie or Curb Your Enthusiasm might be drawn to US stand-up Gaffigan's fictionalised version of his own life as a dad of five. Despite a parade of fashionable comedians making guest appearances, though, it's got a warm underbelly: Gaffigan casts himself as an overweight schlub, struggling manfully with the benign chaos of Manhattan family life.

ONE-MAN PHENOMENON

7 John Leguizamo's Latin History for Morons Netflix

The Colombian-American movie star received a Tony nomination for this one-man stage show in which he casts himself as a whirling, energetic teacher, complete with donnish jacket and chalkboard. His mission is to educate us about the history of indigenous American peoples from the Mayans to the present day, and it's by turns self-deprecatingly silly and coldly furious.

NEW COMEDY

2 Hounslow Diaries iPlayer (BBC3)

Three west London teenagers – creator/star Ambreen Razia (right), Mandeep Dhillon and Robyn Cara – dream of just one night out in a hip central London club. The only thing standing in their way, in a promising one-off comedy that channels a classic uncool-gang sitcom vibe, is a lack of money. And their disapproving families. And their own tendency to self-destruct.

ANOTHER CHANCE

3 The Killing Amazon Prime

Amazon now has all four series (they used to be on Netflix) of the American version of the Scandi-noir classic. After steering close to the original in the beginning, the show finds its voice and soon develops into a finely acted, thoughtful crime drama in its own right.

UNIQUELY THRILLING

4 Patriot Amazon Prime

A spy drama that's so offbeat, it's playing a completely unfamiliar song: Michael Dorman (above) is a US spy in Europe whose lethal missions jar with his depressive vulnerability and uncontrollable eccentricity. Stuffed with ludicrous villains, jet-black comedy and moments of sudden profundity, you never quite know where you are with it, in the best way.
Season 2 available from 9 November

8 New Girl

Amazon Prime

When this US sitcom launched in 2011, it was notable for attracting movie star Zooey Deschanel to a lead television role, as a young woman sharing a flat with three men. That she's now best known for New Girl is testament to the impact of a show that sets its quirky, emotionally open stall out strongly from the first episode. Over seven seasons, ending in the States this year, it's been a reliable source of big-hearted, "simply adorkable" fun.

INCREDIBLE REALITY

9 Last Chance Lawyer NYC

iPlayer (BBC2)

With his wild grey hair, unusual phone manner and gift for comic malapropism, Howard Greenberg could be an irascible supporting character from a 1970s sitcom. But not only is he real, he's a New York defence attorney handling some incredibly serious cases. This often funny, sometimes worrying documentary series captures Howard in full flow. Episode 1 available until 10 November

YOUR NEXT BINGE

This comedy is super-rich in dark laughs

In Succession, The Thick of It writer Jesse Armstrong has conjured up a black comedy with overtones of King Lear. But this is a tragedy that likes a party.

Each episode of the ten-part first series is centred around a knees-up – a wedding here, a birthday party there – that brings together Murdoch-like media mogul Logan Roy (Brian Cox) and his despicable offspring. They're some of the most exquisitely drawn comic characters in recent memory: detestable individuals made endearing and complex with razor-sharp writing.

Logan, a poisonous old codger, has really done a number on his children. Kendall (Jeremy Strong) is a recovering addict and divorcé who, drastically overestimating his own business acumen, is vying for his father's seat at the table. Then there's Roman (Kieran Culkin), whose wit papers over his emotional issues, and Connor (Alan Ruck), a pretentious layabout who's plotting "a podcast about Napoleonic history" one minute and a presidential run the next. Only Shiv (Sarah Snook, above) is happy to go against her father's wishes to work on the PR team of a Bernie Sanders-a-like politician, but ultimately she refuses to relinquish the power her name bequeaths her.

The main thrust of the narrative is the season-long sparring match between Kendall and Logan, as the son tries to wrestle control of the family business from the father, whose deteriorating health causes him to make some iffy decisions. But each member of the brilliant cast has a compelling storyline – none more so than the double act of cousin Greg (Nicholas Braun), a lanky, awkward stoner and Tom (Matthew Macfadyen), Shiv's cuckolded, status-hungry fiancé.

It's the best argument for the ensemble piece since Arrested Development, and it's comedic and dramatic in equal measure – until the finale takes a dark, seemingly irrevocable turn. BEN ALLEN

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Keep hold of film classics

So farewell then, FilmStruck, which closes down at the end of November. You're forgiven if you don't know what FilmStruck is. The streaming service has run since 2016 in the US, but only launched here in February. American film buffs raved about its collection of classic movies, all carefully curated and explained by experts.

Why mourn something you didn't know existed? Because FilmStruck tried to solve a big problem with modern streaming. The libraries of Netflix et al are constantly changing, and are focused on movies and TV shows they made themselves, so independent and "golden-age" movies are terribly underserved.

There are options. BFI Player has an impressive subscription service for £4.99/month, while Mubi leans more towards indie gems for £7.99. Curzon Home Cinema is curated with love, and rents titles for around £3 each. However, they're all as changeable as any streaming service.

The Criterion Collection is the last word for film buffs, with its catalogue of beautifully restored films on DVD and Blu-ray. At around £15 per movie, it's expensive, but you can buy movies on DVD far more cheaply than that, and investing in a format you can touch is the only way to build a collection that lasts. JONATHAN HOLMES

10 DRAMA BOX SET

The Slap

All 4

There's quality through the cast in the US remake of the drama about a faux pas that unravels a gang of middle-aged friends: Melissa George, Thandie Newton, Zachary Quinto and Peter Sarsgaard star, alongside Uma Thurman (above). Like the Australian original, it's an unsubtle but uncomfortably effective dissection of people with all too recognisable flaws.

NEVER FORGET
Remembering the fallen

significance this year

PICK OF THE DAY Royal British Legion Festival of Remembrance 8.30pm BBC1

EVENT The most solemn of ceremonies, with its unbearably moving gentle fall of poppy petals, takes on an added poignancy as the nation marks 100 years since the signing of the Armistice. Huw Edwards presents from the Royal Albert Hall as the Queen and other members of the royal family take their seats to watch performances from Sir Tom Jones, Sir Bryn Terfel, Tom Fletcher and Danny Jones, Sheridan Smith and the Kingdom Choir. Michael Palin will be among actors leading the tributes and a special citation written by Sir Michael Morpurgo will be read out.

Tomorrow at 10am, David Dimbleby leads live coverage from the Cenotaph in Whitehall, where the royal family and politicians take part in the traditional wreath-laying. After the two minutes' silence at 11am, there will be a march past by the Royal British Legion and, for the first time, a procession of 10,000 members of the public in "A Nation's Thank You". ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Pointless Celebrities

6.10pm BBC1

QUIZ Some of tonight's celebrities are returning to defend their titles; others are trying to right wrongs. Joe Pasquale is hoping to add to his Pointless trophy cabinet, while Rick Edwards's sole aim is not to crash out embarrassingly early – again. If nothing else, Rick's day is brightened by Richard Osman revealing that both he and Alexander Armstrong watch Impossible between breaks in filming Pointless. It's a BBC quiz show love-in.

Meanwhile, a round on pop music trips up even the most confident celebs, who also include Sally Phillips, John Barnes and Jenny Powell, while the final round features Armstrong's "favourite question ever". The two finalists, however, aren't quite so enthusiastic. FRANCES TAYLOR

Strictly Come Dancing

7.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Among the  twinkle and the tans, things in the ballroom are getting serious. We're now just one week from that mass decamp from Borehamwood to Blackpool and there's a tussle at the top, with frontrunners pulling away from the pack: Ashley Roberts and Faye Tozer seem the most evenly matched when it comes to the scores, but Joe Sugg has been steadily improving and Stacey Dooley is currently the bookies' favourite.

However, anything can turn on a sixpence in Strictly; Dooley sustained an injury that landed her in hospital (although she assured fans nothing was broken), and there's always the threat of a shock elimination... FT
See page 29

The X Factor

8.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT When Simon Cowell declares: "I don't even know what was happening earlier," during The X Factor, you have to wonder what hope there is for the viewers. His confusion was sparked by changes brought about in the results show, and while the series is known for mixing things up and rejigging its format, it's unusual to do so mid-run.

But out of nowhere, vote freezing appears and entire categories are announced as being safe – while two acts are being simultaneously read out during the results as going through to next week. At times, even consummate professional Dermot O'Leary seems to be struggling to know what is about to happen. Come on, producers, stop messing about. FT

Egon Schiele: Dangerous Desires

9.00pm BBC2

ART Viennese painter Egon Schiele died 100 years ago at the age of 28, having created over 3,000 works in a short, shocking career. His explicit nude portraits still look edgy and challenging a century later: "He is always breaking the distinction between art and pornography down," is how one expert puts it in this beautifully made profile, though there is a debate about the sexual politics of Schiele's work: was he exploiting his models or empowering them?

Iggy Pop and Lily Cole are among the contributors and the life story is told in a suitably artful, angular way with animations, dance sequences (which work better than you'd think) and wonderful stills. DAVID BUTCHER

ARTS AT THE BBC

There are many arts programmes in the pipeline following Egon Schiele: Dangerous Desires (9pm BBC2, right). Coming soon to BBC2 are Darcey: Dancing to Happiness, where the Strictly judge explores the positive impact dance has on mental health, and The Men Who Made Music English, the story of Gustav Holst and Ralph Vaughan Williams's friendship. There's also Performance Live: LOVE, written and directed by National Theatre

Artist in Residence Alexander Zeldin. Meanwhile, BBC4 has the Young Jazz Musician of the Year, Jazzology with saxophonist Soweto Kinch and Pappano's Greatest Arias – a look at the work of the acclaimed conductor and pianist. Josie d'Arby fronts Discovering: Rhapsody in Blue, about Gershwin's masterpiece, and later this year on BBC4, Simon Callow brings his one-man adaptation of A Christmas Carol from the theatre to TV. FT

Beck

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA It's a crime series called Beck, but there's not much Beck in Beck these days. Dear old Martin moves a bit slower since he returned from retirement to take up a senior post overseeing a team of detectives with the police in Stockholm, and doesn't have much to contribute.

Most of the detecting is done by red-haired, hot-blooded Steinar, a routine maverick cop who breaks all the rules to get the right result (yawn). He and the little gang investigate the murder of a beloved ice hockey instructor who's faced flak for coaching young immigrant boys for free.

Feelings are running high, particularly among other hockey players and a very angry competitive dad. AG

The Damned: Don't You Wish That We Were Dead

9.00pm Sky Arts

ARTS In a rare case of bandwagon overtaking, the Damned were the first British punks to release a single (being able to actually play their instruments surely helped with that). Their debut album was a bit of a classic, too, despite its scratchy, lo-fi sound.

"It says 'produced by Nick Lowe' on there. But all he did was buy us a bottle of scrumpy cider," says guitarist Captain Sensible about its production.

This documentary is over three years old now (Lemmy's appearance gives that away), and both Sensible and singer Dave Vanian still look oddly fresh-faced for 60-something rock veterans. It's almost as if some kind of diabolical deal was struck... GARY ROSE

Snowfall

10.45pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 10.30pm)

DRAMA More tension is creeping into Snowfall. Not before time, either. It's all very well having richly drawn characters and a cool setting, but nothing beats a bit of jeopardy – some conflict to get our teeth into. Now, at last, there's a major threat to the whole 1980s Los Angeles crack supply chain whose links we know so well.

Pedro's girlfriend is, we learnt last week, a (brilliantly convincing) undercover cop and she's hoping to catch not just the Villanueva operation but their ultimate supplier, Teddy. She is not to know that Teddy is actually a CIA man funding arms shipments to Nicaragua – how could she? With other links in the chain getting twisted, things are heating up. DB

Under-pressure boss Eddie Jones has tried to downplay these matches ahead of next year's World Cup, calling the autumn internationals simply "practice rounds". We'll believe it when we see it, Eddie. For any international, facing New Zealand is a rare treat; beating them, doubly so.

Wales v Australia (k/o 5.20pm BBC2) is a fascinating tie: the hosts have not beaten the tourists in a decade, but after 13 straight defeats and so many near misses, a win here would set Warren Gatland up beautifully for 2019. Ireland v Argentina rounds off the day (k/o 6.30pm C4). JAMES GILL

8.30 The X Factor

With a potential spot in the final getting ever nearer, the remaining acts are sure to be feeling the heat as the live shows continue. The pressure on the fame-hungry performers to achieve their ultimate dreams must now be bubbling up close to boiling point. Judges Robbie and Ayda Williams, Louis Tomlinson and Simon Cowell should be able to keep cool heads as they scrutinise whether the contenders are continuing to improve and shrewdly assess whether they have what it takes to make it to the top in the ruthless world of show business. However, if the singers can successfully woo the viewers to vote for them, it will once again fan the flames under their flickering dreams of glory. As always, host Dermot O'Leary is on hand to gently dampen down the inevitable emotions that will ensue. The best of Sky, iPlayer, Netflix and beyond

Some like it Scot

Outlaw King ★★★★★ Netflix

This stirring historical drama (new to Netflix this weekend) begins with a memorable shot of a gigantic catapult launching a fireball at Stirling Castle. During the scene, Robert the Bruce (Chris Pine, solid accent) and other Scottish nobles surrender to King Edward I of England (Stephen Dillane), before a renewed rebellion. Filled with realistic battles and grisly violence, Outlaw King is a rousing experience, and also contains a few surprisingly funny moments. Highly recommended, even if you aren't Scottish. STEPHEN CARTY

Murder most pleasant

Gosford Park ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

Maverick director Robert Altman takes the English country-house murder mystery and turns it on its head with this Oscar-winning drama, available on My5 until tomorrow. A huge cast of mostly British thespians – including Helen Mirren, Maggie Smith, Richard E Grant and Clive Owen – fleshes out the satire, which is part whodunnit, part Upstairs, Downstairs. The dramatic pace is maintained thanks to the sparkling script, written by Julian Fellowes prior to him creating TV's Downton Abbey. ANDREW COLLINS

Jingle hell

Better Watch Out ★★

10.10pm Sky Premiere

A 12-year-old boy (Levi Miller) and his teenage babysitter (Olivia DeJonge) are terrorised in a suburban house shortly before Christmas in this tiresome and nasty chiller. Director Chris Peckover piles on the horror set pieces, but the escalation of violence is too crass to deliver any tangible frights.

Doctor Who

DRAMA OF THE WEEK

An episode from Vinay Patel (Murdered by My Father) combines elements of Back to the Future and Who Do You Think You Are? as the Doctor takes Yaz to see her gran.

Granny is on the verge of marrying, in the Punjab of 1947, on the day that Lord Mountbatten declares Partition – the catalyst for tumult, the displacement of millions of people and violent struggles that would last for years.

It's a deeply sombre and tragic story that takes on big issues – the notion of homeland and of loss – as the Doctor (Jodie Whittaker) and her friends become burdened with a dreadful foreknowledge. There are monsters – demons – who might not be what they seem.

ALISON GRAHAM

Tennis: ATP Finals

12 noon Sky Arena/8pm BBC4

SPORT This is meant to be the final hurrah of the men's tennis year, the decisive down-the-line backhand to end the epic rally that is the ATP season. But for the world's top players, perhaps it's one attritional tournament too many.

Andy Murray won't be at the end-of-year event in London (which continues tomorrow on BBC2 at 2pm), while Rafael Nadal may be missing, too, after he withdrew from the Paris Masters with a muscle injury. Novak Djokovic, however, is back at world number one for the first time since 2016, having come through his own injury hell. His astounding comeback is proof that this golden generation just doesn't know when it's beaten. JAMES GILL

Dragons' Den

8.30pm BBC2

BUSINESS The lack of a potential million-seller aside, everything you want from this series is here tonight: a couple of satisfying yeses, some painful nos, and a terrific comic moment when Jenny Campbell is gratuitously rude to Touker Suleyman, and gets his best Widow Twankey stare in return. On occasion it's difficult to identify what the weakness is in a pitch, but once a Dragon nails it, doubt spreads and everyone's out.

The fascinating grand finale is two cocky young chaps whose business is "online reputation management". They want a crazy amount of money, but they're taken seriously. JACK SEALE

PICK OF THE DAY Dynasties 8.30pm BBC1

NATURE New series Just the preamble to this big new natural history series is enough to make your eyes mist over, as David Attenborough tells us, over gorgeous images, that "family is one of the most powerful forces in nature" and that family life – in the animal kingdom, anyway – is "full of wonder, beauty and drama".

Each programme will focus on a different family group, starting tonight with the shifting alliances and conflicts in a chimpanzee troop in Senegal. We're used to series like

Blue Planet II that sew together a patchwork of different species' behaviour, but Dynasties has a tighter focus and we become fully involved in the struggles of one, majestic alpha male chimp called (suitably enough) David. He really is a prime primate, with expressive eyes that sometimes appear calculating, sometimes weary and, in one scene, wince in pain. The story that unfolds of a challenge to his dominance is extraordinary. DAVID BUTCHER

LEST WE FORGET...

BBC1's Remembrance Day coverage begins at 10am, with David Dimbleby, Dan Snow and Tina Daheley reporting live from The Cenotaph (highlights 7pm BBC2). Then, at 1.45pm (Wales: 2.20pm, Scotland: 2.25pm), Katherine Jenkins presents a Songs of Praise special from Southampton, followed at 2.20pm by a compilation from Home Front Heroes (replaced by WWI Remembered: Llandaff Cathedral at 2.55pm in Wales, and WWI Remembered: Glasgow Cathedral, 4pm, in Scotland). At 5.10pm, Sophie Raworth presents coverage of a service at Westminster Abbey.

On ITV is Britain's Poppies: the First World War Remembered at 9.30pm – a documentary narrated by Sean Bean about the ceramic poppies at the Tower of London in 2014. FRANCES TAYLOR
See feature: page 10

Escape to the Château

8.30pm C4

PROPERTY This very nice advert for Dick and Angel Strawbridge's wedding and hotel business at their beautiful French château returns with the couple planning to create a "glamping" area. The narration, with absurd overstatement, claims this will be an "enormous risk", but really it isn't, it's just a campsite, lives don't depend on it. But there's the usual stuff and nonsense about time pressures and the superfluous sense of jeopardy that comes with it... six weeks until the first guests arrive and will it be finished on time?

Meanwhile, Angel busies herself with "personalised place settings for a big family Easter lunch" when Dick's mum and sisters arrive for the holiday. AG
Alison Graham: p49

The Little Drummer Girl

9.30pm BBC1

DRAMA The only thing drumming at the moment is the sound of impatient fingers as we wait for something, anything, to happen, in a drama full of infuriatingly enigmatic, low-talking men.

Puppeteer and Israeli spymaster Martin Kurtz and his operative Gadi Becker (Michael Shannon and Alexander Skarsgard) growl at one another wearing almost identical granite-hewn expressions of barely suppressed fury, while their protégée Charlie (Florence Pugh) is sent on her first mission.

Everything uncurls glacially... yet The Little Drummer Girl remains oddly captivating – if only because anyone who remembers the 1970s will be lost in nostalgia triggered by its orange and brown colour palette. AG

Extreme Everest with Ant Middleton

9.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Former Marine Ant Middleton is a tough guy. You'll have seen him as chief instructor on SAS: Who Dares Wins, but now he takes on a challenge that really puts him through his paces.

We're not given much background on why he's climbing Everest, although there are hints of a hard childhood that gave him a yen for wild places. But this is no big commercial expedition; just Ant, film-maker Ed Wardle and a couple of Sherpas. He's confident at the start: "There's no way in my mind I'm not summiting," he says. But Everest has its own way of reminding Ant who's boss.

Shaun Dooley positively growls his voiceover. GILL CRAWFORD

They Shall Not Grow Old

9.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

Peter Jackson's painstaking re-creation of the First World War draws on technology nobody dreamt of a century ago. Silent footage has been subtly colourised, with a soundtrack of banter, forced marches and artillery created in post-production. The result, narrated in collaged snatches by unnamed soldiers (each credited at the end), is staggering.

Once in the trenches, he opens out to widescreen and living colour. Sound effects drop the viewer into the reality of war, complete with unapologetic close-ups of trench foot and mangled bodies.

The troops who at the start of the war in 1914 believed it would all be over by Christmas ended it mentally and physically scarred. With this film, Jackson ensures their voices will inspire conversations about war and peace for generations.

9.30 Britain's Poppies: the First World War Remembered

This documentary marks the centenary of the end of the First World War by following the four-year journey of ceramic poppies first installed at the Tower of London in 2014. Called The Blood Swept Lands and Seas of Red, this tribute to the British and colonial lives lost during the conflict captured the public's imagination as more than 800,000 poppies formed a "moat" around the Tower and became a visitor attraction. The film, narrated by Sean Bean, follows the journey of the poppies as the "Wave" and "Weeping Window" segments toured around Britain, and also uses archive footage and new interviews with those whose relatives went to war. Tennis 8.00pm

Can the Serb hang on to his number one spot as the season draws to a close?

7.00pm A History of Christianity

1/6. The First Christianity. Professor Diarmaid MacCulloch explores the forgotten origins of Christianity on a journey that eschews the familiar starting point of St Paul's journey from Jerusalem to Rome, instead heading east. He discovers how, at one point, Christianity was poised to triumph in Asia and that its headquarters could easily have been Baghdad rather than Rome, profoundly affecting the shape taken by Christianity in the West.

Rogue One ★★★★★ Netflix
A new group of insurgents do battle against the Empire in this "standalone" chapter of the saga, new to Netflix. Fitting neatly into the story timeline between 2005's Revenge of the Sith and the original 1977 Star Wars, it sees Felicity Jones's Jyn Erso attempting to steal the plans for the Death Star. Director Gareth Edwards delivers a fast-paced and thrilling film that, while filled with various motifs alluding to previous episodes of the franchise, emerges with its own strong identity and sense of purpose. TERRY STAUNTON

Happy birthday, Leo!

William Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Select Celebrating his 44th birthday today, Leonardo DiCaprio invades Sky Select with four of his finest films: as well as this vibrant Baz Luhrmann adaptation, there's Body of Lies, Blood Diamond and the brutal Django Unchained. JOSH WINNING

OFF THE COURT
Roger Federer joins Bear Grylls for a gentle hike...

PICK OF THE DAY Running Wild with Bear Grylls: Roger Federer 9.00pm ITV

REALITY Yes, that is tennis god Roger Federer in the picture with Bear. The two of them took a hike through an Alpine gorge (about 18 months ago) and the result offers the chance to see a magnificent athlete thrown out of his comfort zone and almost very slightly off balance, as he abseils and crawls and treks and climbs and shares a snack of fish eyeballs with Bear.

Federer is mildly anxious in advance of his wilderness experience. When you think about it, it was extraordinary he agreed to put his recently repaired knee at risk. It's mid-season and if he so much as twists an ankle or sprains a wrist, it'll be a big deal, but, as he says philosophically, "I need to do more than play tennis all the time."

Not that he gets away from rackets altogether: Bear has brought some to use as snow shoes at one point, and he also gets the champ to wallop a tennis ball with a line attached around a tree – which Roger proves gratifyingly rubbish at. DAVID BUTCHER

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ Being back in its rightful home on the sunlit uplands of Monday nights on BBC2 is doing wonders for Only Connect, which is beating its serious, whiskery cousin University Challenge in the ratings.

Such success isn't a mystery to its two million or so devotees, particularly when contests are as good as this one, between the Motorheads (they love Formula One) and the Time Ladies (Doctor Who fans). It starts fairly quietly but there are fireworks throughout and some excellent quizzing.

Host Victoria Coren Mitchell even does the unheard-of, and allows two answers that aren't on her cards.

War's Secret Shame: Shell Shock

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY In an often moving programme, Dan Snow explores how the armed forces (and society at large) have struggled to manage the psychological damage inflicted in battle in the 100 years since "shell shock" was first identified.

"As British troops continue to be involved in conflicts around the world, figures for PTSD in the military keep rising," he notes. "War inflicts terrible psychological damage on those swept up in it: we have failed generations of our veterans." He also meets an eminent psychologist who, interestingly, explains how symptoms have changed over the decades. DB

Deep Ocean: Lights in the Abyss

9.00pm BBC4

NATURE This is one of those staggering films that take us way into the ocean depths. It is narrated by David Attenborough and follows an expedition in California to explore the Monterey trench – a deep underwater canyon in the Pacific. Here, cameras reveal astonishing creatures that seem to have sprung from the dreams of a stoned Dr Seuss.

The barreleye fish has a see-through dome on its head and green eyes facing directly upwards: nobody knows how it feeds. Siphonophores are wispy chains of smaller creatures that can be longer than a blue whale. It's all very magical and strange. DB

The Max/Rainie/Cora/Abi custody fight on EastEnders (8pm BBC1, right) has been very strangely plotted, in that it keeps on being dropped without reason for weeks at a time. As soon as we get a cliffhanger (Max has a huge bust-up with Rainie! Rainie then sleeps with Jack!), the storyline disappears and we have to wait a while for another flurry of activity. At the moment, there is a sense of momentum as Max discovers all about Jack and Rainie's one-night stand and decides to confront the cheating pair, but I can't help but worry that they'll all be vanishing again soon with no explanation.

Thankfully, there is some good old-fashioned soapy melodrama on Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) in the aftermath of last week's car crash. Now, I am allowed to say that there's a death, but must keep quiet about who exactly will be meeting their maker. But let's just say that one member of staff might not be seeing many patients following this afternoon's events... DAVID BROWN

People Just Do Nothing

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: Wed 12.35am)

COMEDY OF THE WEEK It's the start of the fifth and final series and Kurupt FM's super-confident idiots Steves, Grindah, Chabuddy G and co are not going quietly. A police raid seemed to spell the end of Brentford's finest pirate radio grime broadcaster, but they got off lightly. Technically they weren't a radio station, the judge concluded, more kids "messing around in a bedroom". There are plenty of other laugh-out-loud lines tonight, but the sublime skill of this series is its razor-sharp portrayal of human delusion. And also, particularly in the form of Grindah's loving other half Miche, genuinely touching moments of longing and pathos.

BEN DOWELL See feature: page 30

First Dates

10.00pm C4

REALITY Many of the singles at the First Dates restaurant may appear sanguine but, as can be revealed in their pre-date interview, scratch just below the surface and there's often an intense fragility. Aisleyne, a former Big Brother star and mildly famous TV personality, is outwardly confident and has a lot of bravado, yet confesses to chasing money in her life rather than love. It's surprisingly moving.

Then there's pub landlord John, who is hoping his date Warren is as fanatical about Star Wars as he is, and Nathan, who goes to mop his sweating brow with a napkin only to leave rice stuck to his face – much to his date's amusement.

FRANCES TAYLOR

A Scottish Soldier: a Lost Diary of WWI

10.00pm BBC4

ARTS One of the biggest events during Hull's tenure as European City of Culture in 2017 was the BBC Contains Strong Language festival of poetry and performance. This short film by Clara Glynn was commissioned for the 2018 festival, and features Scottish Makar (poet laureate) Jackie Kay, telling the story of Arthur Roberts, a black soldier from Glasgow who fought in the First World War.

Kay, who reads her own work, breathes new life into the war poetry genre, using Roberts's wartime diary entries as a starting point into meditations on loss, fear and identity. It's very affecting, and Paul Adefaya plays Roberts in flashback with passion and dignity. GILL CRAWFORD

CHEEKY CHAP
Bake Off favourite Liam Charles is back to impress

Liam Bakes

8.00pm C4

FOOD New series Liam Charles is an amazing, freestyle, intuitive baker who became a hugely popular contestant on The Great British Bake Off last year. He's been given a frantic new series where he has room to breathe and create, and where he's much more comfortable than he ever was on the stuffy and boring Bake Off: the Professionals.

Liam Bakes owes a lot to Jamie Oliver's very first Naked Chef series – the choppy editing, the music, the furious pace – and although Liam doesn't slide down a banister, he does run down a staircase...

The series is clearly aimed at getting young people cooking and, particularly, baking, and everything is approached at a head-first run. Dish names and key ingredients flash up on the screen as Liam strolls around groovy east London before he makes a chocolate cake for a party, cola eclairs, chocolate cupcakes and salmon quiche patties.

From 1997, it's a classic Classic Albums: Paul Simon, guitar on knee, explains how Graceland revived his solo career in 1986, and how a chance hearing of South African township music gave the singer/songwriter his new sound. Who's responsible for Ron Howard's success? His wife, of course. His better half for more than 40 years, and mother of his four children (including daughter Bryce Dallas), Cheryl Howard can count herself as his lucky charm. She has been in most of his movies, including the Super 8 efforts from his youth and, if box-office takings are anything to go by, she's done him proud. Here, Cheryl plays a Harvard administrator and, although her character's look was not to her liking, Ron needed her to keep the lucky streak going. TOM FOLLEY

Winter's Bone director Debra Granik again reflects upon the place of outsiders in American society with this understated, sensitive drama, which is available to rent from today. A beautifully shot, coming-of-age road movie, Granik's third feature follows an ex-soldier (Ben Foster) and his daughter (Thomasin Harcourt McKenzie) as their idyllic isolation living in the woodlands of Oregon is upset by a chance encounter. Anchored by excellent performances, this film lingers long in the memory. JEREMY ASPINALL

Jim Carrey plays it serious in this messy thriller shot in Poland. Well out of his comedy comfort zone, the star is barely recognisable as a cop who investigates a writer who could hold the key to a cold case. Carrey has had form in dramas like The Truman Show, but sadly he's an emotional black hole in this murky misfire. JA

SLEEPING ROUGH
Stacey Dooley meets homeless youngsters in Blackpool, including 18-year-old Josh

PICK OF THE DAY Stacey Dooley: the Young and Homeless 10.45pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.40pm; Scotland: 11.45pm)

DOCUMENTARY Streetlife, a youth homeless charity in Blackpool funded by Children in Need, has eight beds – but there are ten young people waiting outside. Josh, the 18-year-old hero of this enraging documentary, explains that this means he'll probably end up in a sleeping bag on the doorstep; a few days later, when Stacey Dooley meets him again, he's definitely kipping outside because his shift at a pizza takeaway has made him miss his place in the queue.

Another circumstance in which Josh sleeps rough is when a girl needs the bed: he refuses to subject young women to the ordeal. The desperately vulnerable teen girls Dooley meets when she moves on to Manchester prove Josh's point. Most of these blameless kids have been booted out by their families. Then when they hit 18, the welfare safety net disappears. Dooley's film offers hope in the form of organisations that try to help, but it's a shamefully bleak picture. JACK SEALE

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD Peeling quails' eggs might not appear the most taxing challenge for a professional chef, but when stared down by Monica Galetti and Marcus Wareing, even the simplest tasks leave head chefs and sous-chefs alike growing moist-eyed at the stress of it all.

The skills tests for the pros include creating a scotch egg from scratch in just 15 minutes, which reduces one chef to stopping entirely mid-cook to confess they've gone blank, while during judging Gregg Wallace admits he isn't brave enough to eat one undercooked specimen. Bold flavour combinations stand out in the signature, with mixed results.

FRANCES TAYLOR

Lego Masters

8.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT This programme is a blast in many ways. Last week we got the feeling that what the makers of the show enjoy most is watching the bricks fly when a carefully constructed model is destroyed. Sure enough, tonight's first challenge for the seven teams of modellers is to make something explosive: whatever they make will be dropped from a height, and the most spectacular smash wins. Lord it looks like fun... Solutions include a Lego grenade, a bird's nest and a picnic basket with built-in piston.

But that's nothing compared to the creativity on display when they are told to "go brick in time". The model that re-creates ancient Rome is a thing of beauty. DAVID BUTCHER

Saluting Dad's Army

8.00pm Gold

DOCUMENTARY The history of British sitcom's reliable old warhorse moves into 1969 when, after three series, director David Croft told reporters the series would end. Happily, he and his co-writer Jimmy Perry changed their minds, and here we see clips and location footage from Dad's Army's glory years. They include Croft, off camera, looking like he's enjoying rather too much the task of squirting Bill "Hodges" Pertwee in the face with a fire hose.

Radio Times's own Don Smith, now 86, recalls photographing the cast, while their extracurricular activities – a song-and-dance on a Noël Coward revue, Clive Dunn as Jones on Dutch TV – are documented in rare and fabulous footage. MARK BRAXTON

Informer

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Each week we learn a little more about the mass shooting at Café 66. But because that's in the future – in the flash-forward prologue that kicks things off – we don't know how the main storyline of counter-terror "asset" Raza will feed into it. But we do know five people will die, and tonight we learn with a jolt of sadness that one of them is a character we've taken to heart...

In the meantime, other plotlines come to the boil. Gabe and the cops are closing in on the gym owner called Big Shot, who they think connects to the terror cell, but first Gabe gets a nasty shock when the past doesn't so much catch up with him as overtake and ram him off the road. DB

Graham on Emmerdale (7pm ITV) is an intriguing character: one minute, he's kicking butt with skills honed during years spent in the British Army, the next he's shambling around in an inebriated state. It's like seeing Jason Bourne played by Oliver Reed. As we know, the drunkenness is mainly down to the guilt he feels in the wake of Joe's death – and the fear that his actions could be exposed. Hence him evicting Debbie tonight and getting into a new confrontation with Cain (right).

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Speaking of showdowns, we have a whopper on Holby City (8pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.45pm) as Gaskell's crimes are finally exposed. About time, too. It's a wonder his colleagues can diagnose anything, seeing as they haven't been able to spot the psychopath in their midst. The big question, though, is whether he will kill again before getting his comeuppance? Expect test tubes to be smashed, lives put on the line and a series regular getting poisoned.

DAVID BROWN

School

9.00pm BBC2 (Scotland: 11.15pm)

DOCUMENTARY This doesn't have the upbeat vibe of Channel 4's Educating series but in its way it's every bit as compelling to watch. The programme-makers do a brutally good job of showing tough, day-to-day issues of how a secondary school works – or doesn't. It's heartbreaking to see Marlwood School headteacher James Pope as he struggles to control wayward kids and attract new parents to a school that Ofsted has declared "inadequate". If pupil numbers drop, he'll get even less funding. Resources are already stretched, with kids happy to run riot on camera.

As the school janitor paints over graffiti, he reckons he knows the root of the problem: "It's this generation, they're spoilt." DAVID BUTCHER

I'll Get This

10.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT If they'd called this Celebrity Drinking Games, it might have sparked the wrath of BBC-bashers... but that's essentially what it is. This week's gathering at a posh restaurant includes such unlikely companions as Tom Davis and Rachel Johnson, Julian Clary and Chris Kamara, all of whom get steadily lairier as the programme goes on and the stakes get higher.

This bunch are less luvvie-matey than last week, which helps: it's hard to imagine other circumstances in which ex-scaffolder Davis would be high-fiving Johnson (he's definitely flirting in the water-or-vodka game). Meanwhile, the gargle-a-song round has Clary wondering, "Is this what my career has come to?" DAVID BUTCHER

There She Goes

10.00pm BBC4

COMEDY DRAMA A birthday lunch for young Ben demonstrates once again how even the simplest family occasion can be hijacked by his young learning-disabled sister Rosie in the final part of Shaun Pye's brilliant comedy. And the flashback 2007 timeline, shot in darker monochrome and showing Simon (David Tennant) still drinking heavily and alienated from wife Emily (Jessica Hynes), isn't much cheerier, either.

But just when you think that there are rather too many disasters, you are lifted by moments of happiness and hope in a show where the final message seems to be that simple acts of kindness, tolerance and understanding really can bring a family together. BEN DOWELL

Dan Cruickshank's Monuments of Remembrance

9.00pm BBC4

HISTORY We've had plenty of recent programmes marking the centenary of the end of the First World War: this might sound like a dry postscript, but in fact it's a moving look at how the war cemeteries we take for granted came to exist – and to be such beautifully designed spaces.

They only exist because one man – Fabian Ware – saw the need and managed to fend off opposition from people who, reasonably enough, wanted their relatives' remains sent home, or demanded crosses over the graves rather than ranks of white headstones. Ware and his architects pressed on – and we get a sense of the scale of the task they faced: hundreds of thousands of bodies needing to be reburied, and further thousands with no remains. The resulting cemeteries, says Cruickshank, "give a sense of order to the bloody chaos they memorialise". DAVID BUTCHER

Out of this world

Arrival ★★★★★ Netflix

In this chilly sci-fi drama, now streaming on Netflix, Amy Adams's linguistics professor is recruited by the American military to decipher the strange language used by aliens whose spacecraft have appeared in countries around the world. Directed by Denis Villeneuve, this is an impressively crafted film that makes you feel as though you are right there with the characters. It's no action-drenched Independence Day, but if you like smart sci-fi movies that are driven by ideas, you're in for a treat. STEPHEN CARTY

A harsh verdict

12 Angry Men ★★★★★ 2.40pm Film4 FREEVIEW

It's arguably the most famous role of Henry Fonda's career: the upstanding, moral Juror No 8, who fights to acquit a young man accused of murder. But viewers may not realise how selfless Fonda was really being. Despite the acclaim, he never earned any money from the film. Fonda took a deferred salary, which meant that when the film flopped at the box office, his pay cheque fell through. Still, it wasn't all bad, as he earned a best actor Bafta for the role, and went on to praise 12 Angry Men as one of his best films. TIM BATES

Warren peace

Watership Down ★★★★★ My5

FREE TO VIEW

If you've never been down the rabbit hole, now's your chance, as this adaptation of Richard Adams's novel is available on My5 until the end of the month. Despite its U classification, it's a bleak and nightmarish tale about the end of their world that, yes, stars cute little rabbits. JOSH WINNING

POWER OF THREE
Karren Brady, Lord Sugar and Claude Littner look happy – for now

PICK OF THE DAY The Apprentice 9.00pm BBC1

REALITY Lord Sugar gives the impression of a man who gets paid by the Dad-joke. This week he spots the bad-pun potential of a gardening task and goes flat out. "You lot were more like Interpol than Interflora!" he teases. "Did you throw in the trowel?" he chuckles. "You invested the smallest hedge fund in history!" he quips. Ah, how the candidates laugh as their best efforts to spruce up roof terraces and back yards are trashed by a man who doesn't look like he gets dirt under his fingernails much.

It's a good episode, though, with moments of welcome slapstick as, say, an unwieldy roll of artificial turf wreaks havoc in a wine bar ("Mind the flamingo!") or a sub-team decides to use a leaf blower to jet-wash a yard... and effectively blow-dry some mud.

As usual, if the project managers spend too much money, they'll get a rollicking in the boardroom; but if they don't spend enough, ditto.

DAVID BUTCHER

Paul O'Grady: for the Love of Dogs

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Such is Paul O'Grady's affinity with dogs, it's a wonder that every episode of this endearing show doesn't end with him taking a pup home. Tonight, he coos over hyperactive ten-month-old bulldog Spike and nine-week-old spaniel George, who instantly wins over Jennifer Saunders, when she joins Paul in seeing first-hand the work of Battersea.

More fraught is the story of Florence – a ten-year-old pug-terrier cross who's been the victim of a hit-and-run. She's clearly in a lot of pain and an x-ray reveals both her shoulder and hip are dislocated. It's touch and go whether she'll pull through. FRANCES TAYLOR

of the Zoo

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Many of the animals at Chester are critically endangered, so breeding them in captivity is one of the zoo's main aims. Unfortunately, the animals don't appear to have got the memo. Reunited after a year apart, rare Malayan tapirs Margery and Betong show little interest in one another, while hornbills Harriet and Harvey have failed to lay a single egg in ten years.

Then there's dead leaf mantises Minnie and Mickey. The latter is "a big scaredy-cat" who needs to become braver. As is nature's way, matching these two could end up in a one-way trip for the male mouse-named mantis. FT

Dark Heart

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA A woman is found dead, kneeling in front of the altar of a Catholic church. She's been stabbed and it's yet another two-part case for tormented DI Will Wagstaffe. Pausing to note a nearby tower block being torn down by a bulldozer (that will win you points when you play another game of Dark Heart Urban Alienation Bingo), Wagstaffe learns that the victim was a porn star.

Having seen a shocking example of her recent "work", Wagstaffe (Tom Riley) wonders aloud: "Why do women make films like that?" Well, why do you think, bozo – for men and their money. Meanwhile, his unfortunate sister (Charlotte Riley) looks upset in a hoodie after her horrible boyfriend "disappears". ALISON GRAHAM

Grand Designs: House of the Year

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY Channel 4 for some reason is keeping preview copies of this and the remaining episodes to itself, so there was nothing for us to see. But the latest batch of properties sounds intriguing enough.

The latest category in the Riba House of the Year contest is houses with a past that have been turned into fabulous contemporary homes. So a Victorian gin distillery in east London, a turn-of-the-century farmhouse in Devon, a Grade-II-listed home in Bath built in 1790 and a once derelict farmhouse from 1613 have all been given a new lease of life. Kevin McCloud, architect Damion Burrows and design expert Michelle Ogundehin present. AG

Simon Barlow in Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) announces he wants to follow in his dad's footsteps and join the Royal Navy, but adoptive mum Leanne is dead against the idea. Frankly, Leanne should count her blessings because, at the rate he was going, Simon could easily have ended up in a young offenders' institution rather than the armed forces. And I, for one, would quite like to see Simon at sea – just so the next extension to the current Corrie set can be a full-sized frigate on the banks of the Manchester Ship Canal. Elsewhere, Sinead seeks alternatives to chemotherapy. (By the way, hasn't Katie McGlynn been playing an absolute blinder this last month or so?) Also, Maria breaks the news to Claudia that she's pulling out of their salon deal and going into partnership with Audrey. Now, this is surely a plotline crying out for some hairdryers-at-dawn publicity photos featuring Rula Lenska and Sue Nicholls standing back to back, armed with a couple of no-nonsense Babylisses? DAVID BROWN

James Bulger: the New Revelations

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Twenty-five years ago the torture and murder of toddler James Bulger by two ten-year-old boys convulsed the nation. The subsequent trial as adults of his killers, Robert Thompson and Jon Venables, led to questions about the fairness of Britain's criminal justice system.

This clumsily titled documentary was still being edited as we went to press, but Channel 5 claims it contains "new interviews and testimony from those directly involved in the case", which gives a fuller picture than ever as to why Thompson and Venables became murderers. At their trial, neither boy gave evidence and their lawyers offered no defence, so their motivation was unknown. AG

Zapped

10.00pm Dave

COMEDY Barbara's flighty mum Cassandra (the always brilliant Tracy-Ann Oberman) takes a fancy to Herman, the amiable pub landlord. Brian has to visit a library, which, you won't be surprised to hear, is a very strange and threatening place indeed. And Steg gets turned into a goblin by mistake. So a pretty average Munty day, all in all.

This bonkers fantasy caper continues to be chucklesome rather than laugh-out-loud. But with the ensemble now comfortably settled in, it's the fabulous plotting that has improved so much this (third) series and tonight it allows the stories to come together cleverly at the close when Howell's bravery potions all kick in... BEN DOWELL

Get Shorty

10.10pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Ray Romano is great value in this comedy thriller. He plays slippery film producer Rick, who has somehow ended up working under cover for the FBI while dating a cartel boss – the terrifying Amara. After last week's fireworks, Rick is in hospital, talking to his FBI minders and assuming "the jig's up, it's all over", so surely now they can arrest everyone and he can go back to a normal life? It's not that easy.

Getting characters way out of their depth is this series' speciality: there's a nice scene tonight where hopeless try-hard gangster Yago has a meeting with the slick lawyers at the all-powerful LA syndicate, to set up a Limited Liability Corporation. Yago's disappointed: "Why's it got to be limited?" DAVID BUTCHER

ON CALL

The underused Brendan Fraser as fixer Chase

Trust

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA The final episode of this sprawling kidnap saga returns to the black humour we saw flashes of early on, before things got bogged down. We start with a great speech to camera from John Paul Getty's fixer, Chase (Brendan Fraser). It makes you wish he'd been used more through the series, because hovering on the edge of scenes here like a Greek chorus, explaining what the fallout of the tale will be for everyone, he's terrific.

Just deserts are doled out and each character has a tying-up-of-ends – though for the kidnapped teenager John Paul Getty III (Harris Dickinson), there's merely a hint of things to come before Chase tells us archly, "Google it." Fans of repressed butler Bullimore will like the way his story pans out, while at the other end of the scale, we learn what the Calabrian mafia did with their ransom money: they built a new port... in the shape of an ear.

9.00 The Apprentice

RT 7/12 The candidates assemble in Crossrail's leafy roof garden situated above the new Elizabeth line station at Canary Wharf, where Lord Sugar tells them that if they want to put down strong roots in the contest they must create a pair of urban gardening businesses capable of carrying out commercial and domestic jobs across London. On the first day, one team is to be found rummaging through the "reduced to clear" stock at a garden centre, while the other finds the cost of artificial turf sows seeds of doubt. The next day the competition flags when two candidates are unable to attach a hose to a tap. Back in the boardroom, Lord Sugar wastes no time in rooting out the dead wood and throwing it on the bonfire. You're Fired is at 10pm on BBC2. See page 92. ### The right to ramble

45 Years ★★★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

British director Andrew Haigh (Weekend, Lean on Pete) has earned high praise for his ability to draw naturalistic performances out of his actors. And according to Tom Courtenay – who here stars opposite Charlotte Rampling in a portrait of a marriage in crisis – that’s partly because Haigh gives his actors freedom to improvise. “He had no objection to us putting extra words in,” Courtenay said of making 45 Years. “Some directors will say, ‘Oh, I’ll have to ask the writer.’ But he was the writer!” JOSH WINNING

Pardon your French

Let the Sunshine In **★★★

10.35pm Sky Premiere

Claire Denis is incapable of making bad films. But this isn’t among her best, as Parisian artist Juliette Binoche suffers a midlife crisis that sees her lurch between unsuitable lovers (Xavier Beauvois, Nicolas Duvauchelle). For all the eloquence and wit of the performances, and the mournful intimacy of Agnès Godard’s camerawork, Denis has few insights to share about Binoche, her situation or her milieu. This is accomplished but unremarkable. DAVID PARKINSON

Fighting to survive

You Were Never Really Here **★★★

Amazon Prime

Avoiding cliché at every turn, Lynne Ramsay’s brutal, unconventional thriller follows a suicidal killer (Joaquin Phoenix) who is hired to rescue a girl (Ekaterina Samsonov) from an upscale brothel. This leads to violence in an intense film that defies convention.

INSIDE TRACK

Go behind the scenes of Boris Johnson's time as Foreign Secretary

PICK OF THE DAY Inside the Foreign Office 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series It's hard for a series focused on the workings of British diplomacy in the past few years not to get sidetracked by a one-word fascination: Boris. Whatever your sentiments on our former Foreign Secretary, it's revealing when cameras sneak into the anteroom where aides are urgently briefing him on the Rohingya crisis in Burma, while the man himself looks like a cornered schoolboy being grilled on irregular Latin verbs. Johnson switches tack: "Are we going to do sanctions?" he wonders aloud, then answers his own question in undiplomatic terms. "I mean the poor country's just bloody well emerging from the dark ages..."

There are other good vignettes – including seeing Her Majesty's Ambassador to Burma playing Wonderwall on the guitar, and a discussion among UN staffers about how to pressurise Russia in the aftermath of the Salisbury poisoning. Steered by waspish reporter/producer Michael Waldman, it's a fascinating watch. DAVID BUTCHER See feature: page 26

International Football

7.00pm (k/o 8pm) Sky 1/Main Event

SPORT Amid the unfamiliar excitement of the Uefa Nations League, international breaks do still contain traditional, meaningless friendlies. This one's potentially even less important, arriving only three days before England's final Nations League match against Croatia. So don't expect Gareth Southgate to field the side that beat Spain a month ago: time perhaps to try out young challengers like Jadon Sancho or Nathaniel Chalobah.

As for the opposition, the USA instigated a scorched-earth policy after their 2017 loss to Trinidad and Tobago cost them a World Cup place. Even an experimental England ought to swat this team of inexperienced youngsters aside. JACK SEALE

Children in Need Rocks

8.30pm BBC1

MUSIC Pudsey and friends return to Wembley Arena in London for another night of live music, interspersed with stories of how funds raised have helped disadvantaged children and young people across the country. Jess Glynne, Olly Murs and Rita Ora are on this year's bill, along with George Ezra and, for the benefit of slightly older viewers, Rod Stewart.

Effortlessly pleasing viewers of any age is tireless disco god Nile Rodgers, whose presence with his band Chic guarantees several moments of transcendent pop mastery. There'll be more acts announced by the time you read this, too. Your hosts for the evening are Clara Amfo and Fearne Cotton. JS

Young Sheldon

8.30pm E4

SITCOM In tonight's chapter of this wunderkind Wonder Years, Sheldon arrives at his advanced college course and finds Paige, another ten-year-old, in his seat. The expected anger intensifies when his mother Mary invites Paige and her parents over to their house, so he takes tips from Mr Spock to quell his emotions. Not helped by Mary calling him Dr Spock.

A straightforward tale of childhood jealousy deepens when Mary (Zoe Perry) admits the arrangement isn't just for Shelly to make friends but for her to as well. Again Young Sheldon manages to be almost casually wise while dispensing zingers like a Pez. Meanwhile, the older Sheldon is also fuming in Big Bang at 8pm – this time with his wife. MARK BRAXTON

Dark Heart

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA DI Will Wagstaffe isn't feeling very collaborative; he's there to tell his team what to do, and they should just get on and do it. When one of them has a suggestion, "Staffe", as he likes to be known, shoots her down: "I don't have the emotional bandwidth for hunches! Stay on task!" Yes, Staffe's maverick soul is in torment as he hunts the killer of a porn star. He must also deal with his sister Jules (Charlotte Riley), who is spinning out of control and neglecting her son.

Never mind, Staffe can still patronise his sometime girlfriend (Miranda Raison), behaving with outrageous presumptuousness when he turns up, uninvited, at her flat. ALISON GRAHAM

There are many unresolved questions about Kat and Alfie's relationship on EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1). Why is Alfie blaming her for accidentally scalding their son, when he once burnt down the family home and left Kat (Jessie Wallace, right) with facial scars (that have now miraculously healed)? What happened to Kat's secret grown-up son Dermott, who tried to murder her in ill-fated spin-off Redwater after turning out to be a closet killer? What made Alfie morph from cheery family man to a sleazy guy who gets women half his age pregnant? And why did Kat ditch her bohemian clothes and start modelling herself on late-era Pete Burns? Fingers crossed we get some answers when Alfie makes a surprise video call to Kat and asks for a favour...

In other news, Abi has been taken by social services. Of course she has – "the social" are so feared in Soapland they may as well turn up in a sinister horse-drawn carriage like Chitty Chitty Bang Bang's Child Catcher. DAVID BROWN

The First

9.00pm C4

DRAMA This New Orleans-set drama about a mission to Mars has one great quality: it avoids the obvious. The narrative keeps firing off at oblique angles and finding new characters to explore: this week it's Tom's number two on the mission, a woman who has overcome any number of obstacles to get to where she is – but not Tom.

And that's the problem: every time another character threatens to get interesting we circle back to big old, sleepy-eyed Tom, and as played by Sean Penn he is, so far at least, a not terribly likeable hero, as remote and cold as a space station. But there are some brilliant, arty touches, including, this week, a motif of cicadas that gives things a poetic jolt.

DAVID BUTCHER

Live at the Apollo

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

COMEDY Ellie Taylor, star of The Mash Report, is the compere as the stand-up comedy showcase returns for a 14th series.

Both the acts she introduces follow the modern template of wrapping political barbs in exaggerated stage personae: Fin Taylor, for example, couches progressive takes on difficult issues – transphobia and the #MeToo movement – within a lot of aggressive, funny jokes at his own and other men's expense, while Tez Ilyas is brilliant at subverting audience expectations of what they'll hear from a British Muslim.

Taylor herself has armfuls of disarmingly crude lines about sex and pregnancy. It's a sharp show. JS

Women on the Verge

10.00pm W

SITCOM In the final episode of this sharp, funny, grubbily real version of Sex and the City, the three friends – Alison, Laura and Katie – are each staring into their own abyss.

Alison (Eileen Walsh) wonders whether she and Martin will ever have children, while Laura (Kerry Condon) seems surprised that her world has imploded after she put her name to her incendiary newspaper column about her psychotherapy sessions.

There's an even more pressing concern for Katie (Nina Sosanya), who reluctantly meets again the creepy, oppressive bloke with whom she had a brief fling. Chances are you've become quite fond and a bit protective of the trio, so let's hope we see them again. ALISON GRAHAM

Car Crash: Who's Lying?

from 10am BBC3

Access to interview tapes and footage from police dashboard and body cameras make this an immediate, immersive documentary about a disturbing event. One dark night in Hampshire, a car full of young people careers fatally off a country road. The survivors insist on their version of what happened, but the police aren't sure it's the whole truth.

MUSIC MATTERS

Suzy Klein and Lenny Henry explore works such as Rhapsody in Blue, which made its UK premiere in 1925 (as billed in RT, left)

Our Classical Century

9.00pm BBC4

MUSIC New series The BBC is launching a major initiative looking at classical music in Britain over the past century – so pretty much since the dawn of broadcasting – and how, more than any other musical genre, it has cemented a national identity in times of strife and joy.

Tonight's edition spans the period from the Great War until 1936 and is fronted by Radio 3's Suzy Klein and Sir Lenny Henry. An odd pairing on the face of it but he helps make the subject accessible. He's long been enthralled by Holst's The Planets and gets a private performance.

Vaughan Williams's The Lark Ascending and Parry's Jerusalem are vital touchstones, but Henry is thrilled by the almost forgotten story of black composer Samuel Coleridge-Taylor's Hiawatha (an annual hit for 30 years at the Albert Hall). And we hear of the mixed reception for Rhapsody in Blue, when Gershwin was himself at the piano for its UK premiere on BBC radio in 1925. (Part two will follow in the new year.) PATRICK MULKERN

Hard to swallow

Pygmalion ★★★★★

4.50pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

The story of a cockney girl's transformation into a high society lady began life as a successful play, but one of its best gags only came about thanks to this film. During the scene where Eliza has to speak with marbles in her mouth, actress Wendy Hiller spat them out, crying, "I've swallowed one!" To that, director Leslie Howard replied, "Never mind, I've got plenty more." The exchange amused the crew so much, the scene was rewritten, and has been in every version since, including 1964's My Fair Lady. TIM BATES

A new breed of horror

The Girl with All the Gifts ★★★★★ Amazon Instant

Mike Carey's adaptation of his own dystopian novel sees a fungal spore infecting the planet, turning most people into "hungries" who crave human flesh. But contaminated youngster Melanie (the extraordinary Sennia Nanua) is somehow able to control her cannibalistic urges, so could provide the cure. Paddy Considine, Glenn Close and Gemma Arterton co-star in a movie – directed by Peaky Blinders regular Colm McCarthy – that is the best and most unusual zombie movie since 28 Days Later. ALAN JONES

Out of the shadows

FREE TO VIEW

Producer Val Lewton's 1942 Cat People – and mercenary sequel The Curse of the Cat People, both now on iPlayer – is revered for Jacques Tourneur's effective shadowplay; both films deliver the kind of horror where what you don't see is as unnerving as what you do. ANDREW COLLINS

Television Friday

COUGH UP!

PICK OF THE DAY Children in Need 7.30pm, 10.40pm BBC1

CHARITY Since it launched in 1980, Children in Need has raised more than £970 million and this year's entertainment extravaganza aims to raise plenty more. Throughout the evening, the show will be presented by Mel Giedroyc, Graham Norton, Tess Daly, Ade Adepitan, Marvin and Rochelle Humes and Rob Beckett.

Prepare to be moved as a young girl, who is supported by a Children in Need charity, gets a chance to visit the Doctor Who set, enter the Tardis and – the ultimate surprise – meet the Doctor herself, Jodie Whittaker.

In another feel-good item, several Children in Need charity workers are asked to film a special music video but, unbeknown to them, Sheridan Smith, Alfie Boe and Little Mix will turn up and help them out.

WALFORD TREAT
What do Danny Dyer and the EastEnders
their sleeves?

Elsewhere in the musical universe, the EastEnders cast will perform a number – who knows what exactly, but in Albert Square it's bound to be dramatic – and a scene from the forthcoming Call the Midwife Christmas special will be shown for those eager for a festive glimpse into Nonnatus House. And if you happen to be a fan of 1990s floppy-haired boy band Boyzone, watch them pair up with the Strictly professional dancers and waltz to win the Pudsey Glitterball. We predict low marks but high jinks.

Earlier today on BBC1 there are Children in Need specials of Bargain Hunt (12.15pm) and The One Show (7pm), and on BBC2 at 10pm there's a Mastermind hosted by Stephen Mangan. KASIA DELGADO

Is there a woman on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) who hasn't done time? There are so many former jailbirds on those cobbles, it's a wonder they've not taken to walking around in denim dungarees singing, "On the inside, the sun still shines," each night in the Rovers. (Obscure reference to Prisoner: Cell Block H klaxon! Apologies to anyone under 40.) Seriously, though, I'm surprised any law-abiding resident can get home insurance because, with neighbours like these, the monthly payments must be crippling. Joining the rogues' gallery of crims this evening is Abi, who gets sent down for 16 weeks. Although, of course, the real wrongdoer, Tracy, has once again managed to Keyser Soze herself out of trouble.

There's no EastEnders tonight due to Children in Need (an hour-long episode aired yesterday), but fans can expect a routine from Walford's stars. For me, the 2014 performance of Grease with Danny Dyer as Danny Zuko is still the one to beat. DAVID BROWN

Unreported World

7.30pm C4

CURRENT AFFAIRS Increasingly, North Korea isn't completely unreported – Michael Palin was there for Channel 5 not too long ago. This dispatch can still honestly claim to have scored "rare access" to the secretive, repressive dictatorship. Marcel Theroux's report centres on the Mass Games, an event celebrating the country's 70th anniversary.

It's the planned high point of a trip that, we're reminded, is controlled by the journalist's government minders. On his way there, Theroux has a go on Pyongyang's metro system, books himself in for a state-sanctioned haircut, visits the country's first ski resort, and witnesses the emergence of something like capitalism.

JACK SEALE

Music Night

From 8.00pm BBC4

MUSIC There's an eclectic selection for music lovers on BBC4. First up, singers Beverley Knight and James Morrison sit down to watch clips of the vocalists who have inspired them. Then a heartfelt doc about Primal Scream recording their follow-up album to the smash hit Screamadelica in Memphis, and why that version has not been released until this year. Surviving Scream members Bobby Gillespie and Andrew Innes talk movingly about the transformative effect of working with their heroes.

Finally, an affectionate tribute to BBC radio DJ David Rodigan, one of the most influential people in British reggae music for the past 40 years, full of excellent anecdotes.

DAVID CRAWFORD

100 Years of the RAF

8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Martyn Lewis narrates an exhaustive, feature-length history of our airborne forces, marking a century since the fleet was officially inaugurated by George V.

Inevitably the first half-hour, which deals with the Second World War, is the strongest: you can forgive the film's weakness for incessant stirring muzak, generously edited interviews and the use of "iconic" to describe any and all British aeroplanes when the topic is Hurricanes and Spitfires taking on the Nazis.

Once the war's been won, the heart goes out of the enterprise a little and it becomes a programme for staunch patriots and aviation enthusiasts only, as Lewis applauds the RAF's more recent interventions. JS

Portillo's Hidden History of Britain

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Michael Portillo tiptoes into Most Haunted territory as he explores a Cold War bunker in Cambridge in the pitch dark aided only by a tiny torch. But he's not looking for ghosts; the only spectre here is the real fear of nuclear annihilation that hovered over Britain. It's a fascinating slice of recent history, packed with testimony from proud military men, including two Soviet submarine commanders, who were ready to launch missiles at a moment's notice.

One old gentleman is reduced to tears when he recalls telling his wife, after he received his orders, to pack the kids into the car and head for Skye, because he knew the end could be approaching fast.

Portillo, a former defence secretary, is appalled at Britain's lack of readiness for nuclear attack and the haphazard plans for what happened after, which included civil servants handing out biscuits. ALISON GRAHAM

Narcos: Mexico

Netflix

You needn't have seen the original Narcos, which told the story of Pablo Escobar, to enjoy what's more or less a prequel. We're in Mexico, obviously, at the start of the war on drugs: while producers and traffickers work to form their chaotic criminal enterprise into a streamlined business, dedicated law enforcement operations evolve in tandem. Both sides provide rich characters, explored in nuanced detail.

RT Tess Daly and Ade Adepitan kick off the night of entertainment in aid of the charity with a performance from the cast of the West End musical School of Rock. The Children's Choir sing the hit song A Million Dreams from The Greatest Showman, live in unison across the nation, and there's a performance from the cast of Everybody's Talking about Jamie.

There'll be jubilation as The One Show Rickshaw Challenge riders, comprising Matt Baker and six youngsters helped by Children in Need, pedal across the finish line in Salford after their gruelling eight-day journey from Calais.

Graham Norton and Mel Giedroyc host more fun and fundraising and surprise guests, including the cast of EastEnders putting on a show-stopping spectacle in Albert Square, and Little Mix, Sheridan Smith and Alfie Boe giving some Children in Need project workers a special surprise.

Meanwhile, a young girl who's been supported by the charity visits the Doctor Who set, enters the Tardis and gets to meet the Doctor herself, Jodie Whittaker. There will also be a visit to the ballroom in the Strictly Come Dancing Children in Need special as Boyzone join forces with the professional dancers to see who will lift this year's Pudsey Glitterball trophy, as well as an exclusive first look at the Call the Midwife Christmas episode. A Mastermind Children in Need special is on BBC2 at 10pm. See p112. Director John L. Spencer; Executive producer Leanne Witcoop (S) (HD)

A safe bet

Game Night ★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

The regular parlour games of three suburban couples take a turn for the bizarre when one of their number raises the stakes in this brash comedy. Jason Bateman and Rachel McAdams are the couple caught up in a murder mystery that snowballs towards outlandishly violent set pieces and cartoon-like slapstick. It's good fun, with each increasingly unlikely scenario punctuated by nifty one-liners from the talented cast, although the sheer volume of twists and turns threatens to become wearisome. TERRY STAUNTON

From screen to screenplay

Hell or High Water ★★★★★

9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Some actors are born to be writers. One is Texan Taylor Sheridan (Veronica Mars, Sons of Anarchy). A self-taught scribe, his first effort, Sicario, didn't initially sell ("Nobody wanted a movie about cartels"), but went on to be an indie hit with three Oscar nominations. Ditto Hell or High Water, which racked up four, including best screenplay. Yellowstone, which Sheridan created, writes and directs for Paramount Network, was recently renewed for a second season. ANDREW COLLINS

Guitar heroes

The Song Remains the Same ★★★

A rare showing of this rock documentary will delight Led Zeppelin fans. Footage of a 1973 New York concert is interspersed with behind-the-scenes mishaps, trippy effects and ultra-weird sequences from the heads of Robert Plant, Jimmy Page and others. JASON CARO

How to Be a (Muslim) Woman

Friday 11.00am Radio 4

SAYEEDA HUSSAIN WARSI – Baroness Warsi – is an impressive woman. One of five daughters, born in Dewsbury, West Yorkshire, to immigrant parents from Pakistan, she practised as a solicitor before working her way up through the ranks of the Conservative Party, all the way to the House of Lords.

In her life she has achieved a number of firsts. She was the first Muslim woman to be selected to stand for Parliament by the Conservatives, unsuccessfully contesting Dewsbury in 2005. She was the first Muslim woman to enter Cabinet, appointed by David Cameron as minister without portfolio. When she was raised to the Lords, in 2007, she became its youngest member. She's not yet 50 years old.

She is also the first Muslim woman to resign from the Government – in 2014, over Conservative policy on Israel-Palestine, and particularly attacks on Gaza. Warsi is also a familiar figure in the media. She's a busy, focused woman, and she has fitted me in, at a café near the Palace of Westminster, to talk about her Radio 4 programme How to Be a (Muslim) Woman. Warsi, beautifully groomed, exquisitely friendly, leaps to the task of filling me in on what it's all about.

"I spoke ages ago to producers who wanted to do something and I said, 'I'm a Muslim and female and I just feel that the narrative around my skin is so one-dimensional.' When we started this programme, Bodyguard hadn't come out. Then it did, and everybody said: 'Oh, it was such an amazing series.' I thought, 'Well, it was, except for the Muslim woman, who's painted in exactly the same stereotypical way that we always paint Muslim women – either she's downtrodden and needs to be saved, or she's a terrorist and we need to be saved from her. In Bodyguard, we think she's one and she turns out to be the other.'"

Warsi's programme is an attempt to move beyond that stereotype. She expresses regret that it's just one programme, not a series, but adds that "there's still time". She would like to create a series of podcasts, in which all of the programme's interviews with the women can be heard in full. "I come across so many amazing women – complex, funny, emotional, intelligent women," she says. "I ended up speaking to some wonderful, wonderful women, you know – an army cadet, a grandmother who's campaigning to build a women-led mosque..."

POWERHOUSE
Warsi was raised to the House of Lords in 2007

'Let us speak for ourselves'

DEBORAH ORR

Baroness Warsi has a lot to say about life as a Muslim woman – but there's one question she won't answer

"Every day I'm reminded that the real powerhouses in this community are all women. They're the ones who are setting the agenda, and yet this narrative of 'We're so downtrodden' prevails."

There are challenges, she says. "All women face challenges. Two women are killed in this country every single week at the hands of their partners. But it's women who are pushing back against those challenges. So, stop speaking for us. Let us speak for ourselves. Stop trying to save us, or be saved from us. Just let us be."

Does she think that Islam has proved better at protecting women from violence than western Christianity has?

Warsi makes various points, describing how the Prophet himself married a wealthier older woman, 1,400 years ago in Saudi Arabia; she says that Islam "didn't need to invent feminism, because it was built into it from the start". But she does concede that "like most religions over time, Islam has been interpreted by men to their advantage. But that's no different from any other religion, really. Men will always find a way to use the scriptures to make it look like they need to be seen as superior."

"The fact that I go to is that women and men are different – different but equal. For Muslim women there are additional rights, which I have always felt that I had. I have the right to go out and get a job. But if I choose not to, I have a right to be kept. The other big message that I heard was: 'Don't just listen to me only when I fit your narrative of empowerment and feminism,' you know? Don't just listen to me when I'm talking about forced marriages or the misogynist men in my community."

Since Warsi is from Dewsbury, stood for Parliament in Dewsbury, and since Muslim men from Dewsbury have indeed been convicted of

TRAILBLAZER
Conservative peer Baroness Warsi's political career has involved a number of firsts the grooming and sexual abuse of girls, as have Muslim men in a number of other northern towns, and since Warsi brought up the matter of misogynist men in her community, I say to her that I haven't actually heard many of these vibrant, outspoken Muslim women saying a great deal about such men. Why is that?

'Stop trying to save us, or be saved from us'

Her response is forthright, and the interview takes a very different turn. "You can't ask me that question," she says. "Why would you ask me that question? You think that you can, because they happen to belong to the faith I belong to?"

I stand my ground. These crimes seemed systematic and continued for a long time. It would be strange, to me, for strong women not to have strong views on them. After all, what's left of feminism if it doesn't challenge abusive patriarchy?

"If we're going to have an interview about a positive programme, I'm happy to do that," Warsi says. "But I find it appalling that you would even ask me the question the way you framed it, as if somehow these amazing women should have known or should somehow be held to account for it. I'm really sorry, but I'm going to have to leave the interview at that." She leaves.

I like Warsi, and I'd have thought that – not as a Muslim woman, but as a Muslim woman politician who comes from Dewsbury – she might have had lots of interesting points to make about what has gone on in these communities. But no. Which is a shame, because her programme – still being put together at the time RT went to press – sounds like a breath of fresh air.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama: Home Front: a Fragile Peace
Saturday 2.30pm Radio 4

When Radio 4 launched Home Front on 4 August 2014 I wrote, "Do not be alarmed. This is the start of a 600-part series and it lasts for four years. If there's ever been a longer radio project then I can't think of it – fitting because this is the central core of the BBC's comprehensive coverage of the First World War."

I have certainly not listened to every episode and have missed weeks on the trot at times, but I have never been disappointed when I made my reacquaintance. Each short episode has been a fictionalised account of the events of the day exactly 100 years ago, the majority based in Folkestone but also moving to Tynemouth, Sandgate and Devon, all based upon meticulously researched material taken from local papers and parish records.

The series drew to a close on Friday of last week but this special production catches up with the residents of Folkestone on 10 November 1919 as they prepare for the nation's first Remembrance Day.

People have gathered for the funeral of Florrie Wilson (Claire Rushbrook, right), but her death from Spanish flu triggers memories of other losses close to home.

The drama is subversive, questioning and, most of all, packed full of heartbreaking humanity.

My free coffee left a bitter aftertaste

WE LIVE IN a world where “cut-price offer for new customers only” means that in 12 months’ time the same generous company will fleece you for your loyalty; and where corporations encourage one-click purchasing but refunds are available only if you apply in writing to an address that you’ll find if you have five full days to devote to forensically searching their website.

Such is modern life. It’s against that backdrop that I was offered something completely free of charge the other day and was overwhelmed with guilt as a result.

It was early on a Sunday morning, and on a near-deserted London Underground station platform I stood behind a woman at a cute coffee concession: quaintly, quietly queuing. Barely awake and in dire need of the caffeine on offer, I was vaguely aware that the woman in front was trying to pay for her gooey cake. In due course she departed and I ordered my drug of choice, hovering my plastic over the card machine in transactional exchange.

‘Being British, I felt something unfair had happened’

“It’s free,” said the woman behind the counter. “It’s so early we haven’t got the till or anything up and running, so it’s free.”

Without the benefit of the caffeine hit, I struggled to comprehend this logic. How long would she stay in business if cakes and coffee were being distributed like a UN relief mission?

“I can leave some coins, I think,” I offered, searching my pockets for change amid the folded-up invitations to the leaving parties for Chris Evans and Simon Mayo.

“No, it’s fine,” she smiled. “It really is free.”

The coffee tasted particularly good. And then there was an aftertaste that could not be blamed on acidic Colombian soil. Guilt.

Two days later I returned to the coffee concession and quietly queued for a quick quench.

“A double espresso, please, but can I pay for two double espressos?”, I asked the bemused barista. I explained what had happened on the Sunday morning. He looked at me aghast, as if

I’d invited him to a leaving party for Ken Bruce. “It’s only a coffee,” he said. “It’s fine.”

I should have been thrilled. A little freebie from corporate Britain: tiny payback. But being British, I felt that something unfair had happened. And sure enough, just before I caught the train, a giant 20-ton cartoon weight landed on my head, causing little birds to tweet around my head while my eyes swivelled uncontrollably. Or was that just the caffeine?

THAT FROZEN FEELING

Talking of little birds tweeting, I saw this on Twitter the other day: “Nothing worse than a forced defrosting of freezer, I find.”

This was my wise LBC colleague Shelagh Fogarty, as she endured the gruelling chore. She proceeded to challenge me to do the honours with my own freezer, the drawers of which could only be opened by brute force, thanks to the large ice collection I planned to donate to Al Gore. She taunted me on air and online. I gave in and did it.

After I’d completed the rigmarole, soaked towels et al, I wondered, does anyone, anywhere, ever defrost their freezer before they absolutely have to?

Eddie Mair’s show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

Why the BBC isn’t down with the kids

A recent Ofcom report confirmed that young people neither listen to nor watch much BBC output. One in eight don’t use the BBC at all.

This won’t have been news to anyone who shares a house with teenagers. Media is about habits, and these have been changed by social media, which takes the forming of habits to a whole new level. These changes continue into adult life, with serious consequences for the future of the licence fee. My grown-up son had to submit to an inspection of his flat by a representative of the licensing authorities who simply wouldn’t believe he had no TV. “What are you going to do when Game of Thrones comes back?” this man pleaded, as if this alone was bound to make him see sense. “Not watch it,” he said.

The Love Island dilemma

The problem for the BBC, apart from the fact that it now has to compete with all the addiction experts of Silicon Valley, is that so many of the programmes that used to make it strong with the youth audience, shows like Top of the Pops and The Young Ones, are the kinds of things it can no longer be seen to do, either because they’re too nakedly commercial or they could attract the attentions of the morality police. The BBC simply can’t do Love Island, Fortnite or the daily round of Kim Kardashian, the very kind of things that might attract a young audience.

The Charlie Sloth affair

Furthermore, with Ofcom adding to the pack trying to make sure it doesn’t fall down on its social responsibilities, the Beeb’s got a tendency to turn tail when it really should stand and fight. This was driven home by the recent Charlie Sloth incident. Sloth (below), a leading presenter on Radio 1Xtra, was already set to leave when he blotted his copybook with a misfiring piece of comedy at an awards do. It was taken so badly by his bosses that he was forced to leave immediately, amid the kind of statements usually heard from government ministers who’ve been caught with their trousers down. There’s your problem with trying to be edgy and youthful in today’s climate of disapproval. How do you spend all day playing records that celebrate bad behaviour while also pretending you’re a boy scout? How do you identify with the rebellious kids at the back of the class when everybody knows you teach Sunday school?

Today's Choices

Festival of Remembrance from the Royal Albert Hall

8.00pm Radio 2
 "In Flanders fields the poppies blow / Between the crosses, row on row..." Founded three years after the end of "the war to end war", the Royal British Legion has held its Festival of Remembrance at the Royal Albert Hall, London, on the eve of Remembrance Sunday annually since 1927. Commemorating all those who have lost their lives in conflicts – lives symbolised by thousands of poppy petals floating down from the roof of the hall – today's festival coincides with the centenary of the Armistice. Highlights are followed by a special edition of The Ballads of the Great War, turning first-hand accounts of the First World War into folk music. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Opera on 3

7.00pm Radio 3
 Premiered by English National Opera in 2000, and revived by the BBC Symphony Orchestra tonight as the climax of the Barbican Hall's In Remembrance World War I (a "total immersion" day also featuring music by composers from both sides of the First World War conflict), Mark-Anthony Turnage's The Silver Tassie is an opera that confronts the human cost of war through the tragic tale of a talented young footballer. Harry Heegan – sung by baritone Ashley Riches – goes off to the trenches to be a hero and comes back in a wheelchair. An all-British cast also features John Tomlinson and Sally Matthews. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Remembrance Sunday

Various times

Various channels

Remembrance Day is meant to be a time for contemplation as we reflect upon the thousands who died defending their country. But this year it is particularly poignant as it falls upon the centenary of the Armistice that brought the First World War to a close. Most networks mark the occasion. Spiritual broadcasts include Good Morning Sunday (6am R2); Sunday Worship (8.10am R4) from the chapel of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea; Ceremony of Remembrance from the Cenotaph (10.30am R4); and A Service to Mark the Centenary of the End of the First World War (5.55pm R4), live from Westminster Abbey, to commemorate the signing of the Armistice. Radio 3 offers something a little different with its Remembrance Day Sonic Memorials throughout the day – contemporary sounds recorded at notable battlefields across the world. And Classic FM premieres a new war requiem in David Mellor (7.00pm).

Heart and Soul

9.30am/11.30pm

BBC World Service

In the hope of saving his family, Ruth Winkelmann's Jewish father divorced her Aryan mother. It made little difference – the women had to go into hiding to escape the Holocaust that claimed his life. Brought up as a Jew, Ruth converted to Christianity out of gratitude to the man who saved her and her mother. Now aged 90, she shares vivid memories of Nazi terror, as well as the comfort she gets from experiencing and loving two faiths. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue

6.30pm Radio 4
I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue returns to Radio 4 this week for its 70th series, a major milestone that is summarily ignored by Jack Dee (above) and the team as they quickly get stuck into the usual silly games at the Lighthouse Concert Hall in Poole, Dorset. Highlights of the episode include a particularly stellar round of One Song to the Tune of Another (who knew Pulp's Common People would scan so well with If You're Happy and You Know It?) and a new spin on the Uxbridge English Dictionary that includes familiar turns of phrase. Tim Brooke-Taylor and Barry Cryer are joined on the panel by Tony Hawks and John Finnemore, a local boy who quickly gets the crowd behind him – even when things get surprisingly political about halfway through.

15-Minute Drama: Children in Need: D for Dexter

Mon–Fri 10.45am/7.45pm
Radio 4

The return of the multi-award-winning drama series that appears at this time each year to flag up the work done for vulnerable children with funds raised by Children in Need. Skye is now 15, her little brother Dexter, with special needs, is six and they are living full-time with their mum. She has not touched a drop of drink for months, but Skye is still the primary carer in the family. Will this overly responsible teenager finally get a chance to take a break on a residential school trip? Ironically, Skye's greatest obstacle turns out not to be her mother. JANE ANDERSON

BBC World Hacks: How to Build for an Ageing Population

3.05pm/8.05pm
BBC World Service

In healthcare, the workplace and our day-to-day lives, ageing is the elephant in the room. Demographics show that people in most developed nations are living longer; at the last count in the UK, 18 per cent of the population were aged 65 and over. Nowhere is this more pronounced than in Japan, where the elderly are outstripping the available workforce and creating a headache for politicians. But a pilot scheme launched in 2010 to tackle this looming care crisis appears to be gaining traction. In this programme, BBC World Hacks reporter Harriet Noble travels to Kashiwa (above), a dormitory town near Tokyo, which during the last decade has been transformed into a community for the elderly. Ambitious but costly, could the Kashiwa model prove to be a breakthrough for other countries grappling with old age? TOM GOULDING

One to One 9.30am Radio 4

Lynne Truss has visited international destinations galore but, while she has enjoyed her foreign forays, she has hated getting there and back. Over the next three weeks she asks her guests if the expectation is greater than the realisation when it comes to hopping on a plane – starting with travel writer Geoff Dyer. He makes the point that in our 20s we can go out partying all night long; but in our 50s we'd rather go for a nice meal. He no longer has the urge to be Scott of the Antarctic – getting asked to give a lecture overseas is quite enough. JANE ANDERSON

In Youth We Trust: Celebrating the Prince's Trust

9.00pm Radio 2

To mark Prince Charles's 70th birthday, here is a tribute to what is possibly the heir's crowning achievement – the Prince's Trust. His passion project was launched in 1976, funded by his £7,000 severance pay from the Royal Navy, and fuelled by his belief that young people deserve our trust, and the opportunity and help necessary to realise their potential. In a shade over 40 years, the Trust, now a multimillion pound organisation, has helped 900,000 people aged 11–30 to improve their prospects through training, confidence-building and mentoring projects, as well as financial help. The numbers are as impressive as the warmth and poignancy of the success stories you will hear – all helped along by the testimonies of stars who have offered their fame muscles to the cause. RON HEWIT

Prisoner Soul

6.30am/1.30pm/ 8.30pm/
1.30am Radio 4 Extra

Rock 'n' roll has long flirted with outlaw chic – epitomised by Johnny Cash's prison concert albums – but rarely have any musicians served jail time. In this documentary, first broadcast in 2013, the journalist Gary Younge hears about a scheme run by some American prisons in the 1960s and 70s in which inmates could form bands and release records – these have become collectors' items, and at least one of the bands is still performing. Younge talks to some inmate musicians and the scheme's producers, and his most vital question is whether the scheme proves that rehabilitation works better than punishment. DAVID CRAWFORD

THURSDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Radio 2 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 2

Ed Sheeran (above) has a lot to be proud of. When his first extended release was issued back in 2011 it immediately caught the attention of Elton John and Jamie Foxx. As well as achieving international success with his own recordings, he has also written hit songs for the likes of Justin Bieber, Taylor Swift, One Direction and Jessie Ware. Last month, it was announced that he is second only to Adele on the nation's list of the wealthiest names under 30, with a fortune allegedly worth £94 million. The boy done well. And, from what I have seen of him at last year's Glastonbury and in his work with Comic Relief, he seems to be a darned pleasant fellow, to boot. None of this makes me want to go out and buy his music, however, but I suspect that the lucky gaggle of fans who have secured tickets for this exclusive concert in the intimate setting of the BBC Radio Theatre are not going to give a hoot what a hardened, middle-aged radio critic thinks... JANE ANDERSON

Tez Talks

11.00pm Radio 4

Two series of Tez Talks have dealt, very broadly speaking, with comedian Tez Ilyas's experiences as a British Muslim. But the third series is more broad-ranging. Tonight he asks his audience what they would change if they could go back in time. Then, out of the blue, he veers off into Doctor Who-style fantasy. (He has joked for a while that he wants to be "the first Asian Doctor".) Ilyas seems to be developing a very creative feel for radio comedy and I am now looking forward to the next episode. Try it. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

11.30 Pursuit of Beauty: in Stitches

Embroidery is experiencing a boom – and with it an astonishing image overhaul. Traditionally viewed as a simple domestic task or maligned as a humdrum craft, a new generation of embroiderers are challenging this with complex, political, dynamic artwork. Dress historian Amber Butchart meets some of the artists at the forefront of liberating embroidery from its past, helping it flourish into a radical form of progressive art. Producers Louise Morris and Andrew McGibbon

Today's Choices

Children in Need

From 5.00am Radio 2

Whatever you make of the man, there is no denying the gargantuan amount of time and effort Chris Evans has devoted to Children in Need over the years. While the CIN Takeover will be in full flow, where shows hand their playlists over to individuals from projects around the UK that are supported by Pudsey's piggy bank, it will be odd to start the day without Evans's unbounded enthusiasm. One of the highlights comes after 11.00am in Ken Bruce's show, when fellow R2 presenter Jamie Cullum performs the official CIN single, Love Is in the Picture. He wrote it after visiting two projects, "both of which work tirelessly to bring smiles and a sense of normalcy to children and young people". And that is what today is all about. BBC1's coverage starts at 7.30pm. JANE ANDERSON

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Jazz Voice – the glittering gala concert that traditionally opens the London Jazz Festival – offers a star-studded showcase for individual jazz vocalists. Hosted by Jumoké Fashola, presenter of Radio 3's J to Z, and with Guy Barker conducting a 42-piece orchestra, tonight's feast of song features, among others, Mariza, the Mozambique-born queen of the Portuguese fado, and Lea DeLaria – US singer, stand-up, star of Orange Is the New Black and self-styled "Lord of the Lesbians". MARK PAPPENHEIM

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Mark Cummings BBC Radio Gloucestershire

Age 52

Current job Presents BBC Radio Gloucestershire's weekday breakfast show (6.00am). Also writes a column for Cotswold Life.

CV Brought up in Yorkshire, first broadcast on Pennine Radio, Bradford, at 16. Studied film, TV and drama at Leeds University. Then BBC Radios York, Nottingham, Bristol, joining Radio Gloucestershire in 1995. Winner of three local radio Gillard Awards. Has contributed to BBC1's Points West.

Best moment "For the past year I've been honoured with the historic title of Mock Mayor of Barton, a multicultural area of Gloucester. I recently spent a week linking the Barton I know with all the other Bartons in Gloucestershire, connecting communities and celebrating what we have in common."

Worst moment "As a sports reporter/commentator in the 1980s, I once tested the microphone level before a football match by talking about a pink elephant flying over the ground and the centre forward doing a strip on the pitch... but I was live on air!"

Off air "I live in an Edwardian cottage in a Cotswolds village with my wife Jo, a school administrator, and our daughters – Kate, 21, and Ali, 18. I'm a massive Gloucester rugby fan, and supporting Leeds United is a curse from birth! I'm an enthusiastic cyclist and once cycled up all of Gloucestershire's major hills – 29,000 feet, the equivalent of peddling up Everest."

First radio memory "Brian Redhead and John Timpson on Today."

Favourite broadcasters "The late Brian Redhead – calm, natural, composed. I now see Jane Garvey in a similar light. Steve Wright was an early inspiration – fresh and different."

Ambition "The constant evolution of my breakfast show. I've been doing it for 13 years, so I need to keep it fresh."

Dream job "Travel writer – I love having adventures."

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Mark Cummings BBC Radio Gloucestershire

Age 52

Current job Presents BBC Radio Gloucestershire's weekday breakfast show (6.00am). Also writes a column for Cotswold Life.

CV Brought up in Yorkshire, first broadcast on Pennine Radio, Bradford, at 16. Studied film, TV and drama at Leeds University. Then BBC Radios York, Nottingham, Bristol, joining Radio Gloucestershire in 1995. Winner of three local radio Gillard Awards. Has contributed to BBC1's Points West.

Best moment "For the past year I've been honoured with the historic title of Mock Mayor of Barton, a multicultural area of Gloucester. I recently spent a week linking the Barton I know with all the other Bartons in Gloucestershire, connecting communities and celebrating what we have in common."

Worst moment "As a sports reporter/commentator in the 1980s, I once tested the microphone level before a football match by talking about a pink elephant flying over the ground and the centre forward doing a strip on the pitch... but I was live on air!"

Off air "I live in an Edwardian cottage in a Cotswolds village with my wife Jo, a school administrator, and our daughters – Kate, 21, and Ali, 18. I'm a massive Gloucester rugby fan, and supporting Leeds United is a curse from birth! I'm an enthusiastic cyclist and once cycled up all of Gloucestershire's major hills – 29,000 feet, the equivalent of peddling up Everest."

First radio memory "Brian Redhead and John Timpson on Today."

Favourite broadcasters "The late Brian Redhead – calm, natural, composed. I now see Jane Garvey in a similar light. Steve Wright was an early inspiration – fresh and different."

Ambition "The constant evolution of my breakfast show. I've been doing it for 13 years, so I need to keep it fresh."

Dream job "Travel writer – I love having adventures."

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Mark Cummings BBC Radio Gloucestershire

Age 52

Current job Presents BBC Radio Gloucestershire's weekday breakfast show (6.00am). Also writes a column for Cotswold Life.

CV Brought up in Yorkshire, first broadcast on Pennine Radio, Bradford, at 16. Studied film, TV and drama at Leeds University. Then BBC Radios York, Nottingham, Bristol, joining Radio Gloucestershire in 1995. Winner of three local radio Gillard Awards. Has contributed to BBC1's Points West.

Best moment "For the past year I've been honoured with the historic title of Mock Mayor of Barton, a multicultural area of Gloucester. I recently spent a week linking the Barton I know with all the other Bartons in Gloucestershire, connecting communities and celebrating what we have in common."

Worst moment "As a sports reporter/commentator in the 1980s, I once tested the microphone level before a football match by talking about a pink elephant flying over the ground and the centre forward doing a strip on the pitch... but I was live on air!"

Off air "I live in an Edwardian cottage in a Cotswolds village with my wife Jo, a school administrator, and our daughters – Kate, 21, and Ali, 18. I'm a massive Gloucester rugby fan, and supporting Leeds United is a curse from birth! I'm an enthusiastic cyclist and once cycled up all of Gloucestershire's major hills – 29,000 feet, the equivalent of peddling up Everest."

First radio memory "Brian Redhead and John Timpson on Today."

Favourite broadcasters "The late Brian Redhead – calm, natural, composed. I now see Jane Garvey in a similar light. Steve Wright was an early inspiration – fresh and different."

Ambition "The constant evolution of my breakfast show. I've been doing it for 13 years, so I need to keep it fresh."

Dream job "Travel writer – I love having adventures."

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Mark Cummings BBC Radio Gloucestershire

Age 52

Current job Presents BBC Radio Gloucestershire's weekday breakfast show (6.00am). Also writes a column for Cotswold Life.

CV Brought up in Yorkshire, first broadcast on Pennine Radio, Bradford, at 16. Studied film, TV and drama at Leeds University. Then BBC Radios York, Nottingham, Bristol, joining Radio Gloucestershire in 1995. Winner of three local radio Gillard Awards. Has contributed to BBC1's Points West.

Best moment "For the past year I've been honoured with the historic title of Mock Mayor of Barton, a multicultural area of Gloucester. I recently spent a week linking the Barton I know with all the other Bartons in Gloucestershire, connecting communities and celebrating what we have in common."

Worst moment "As a sports reporter/commentator in the 1980s, I once tested the microphone level before a football match by talking about a pink elephant flying over the ground and the centre forward doing a strip on the pitch... but I was live on air!"

Off air "I live in an Edwardian cottage in a Cotswolds village with my wife Jo, a school administrator, and our daughters – Kate, 21, and Ali, 18. I'm a massive Gloucester rugby fan, and supporting Leeds United is a curse from birth! I'm an enthusiastic cyclist and once cycled up all of Gloucestershire's major hills – 29,000 feet, the equivalent of peddling up Everest."

First radio memory "Brian Redhead and John Timpson on Today."

Favourite broadcasters "The late Brian Redhead – calm, natural, composed. I now see Jane Garvey in a similar light. Steve Wright was an early inspiration – fresh and different."

Ambition "The constant evolution of my breakfast show. I've been doing it for 13 years, so I need to keep it fresh."

Dream job "Travel writer – I love having adventures."

Secret skills "I'm passionate about wild flowers. I'm home in the afternoons, so I do the cooking – coconut prawns is my signature dish." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

Mark Cummings BBC Radio Gloucestershire

Age 52

Current job Presents BBC Radio Gloucestershire's weekday breakfast show (6.00am). Also writes a column for Cotswold Life.

CV Brought up in Yorkshire, first broadcast on Pennine Radio, Bradford, at 16. Studied film, TV and drama at Leeds University. Then BBC Radios York, Nottingham, Bristol, joining Radio Gloucestershire in 1995. Winner of three local radio Gillard Awards. Has contributed to BBC1's Points West.

Best moment "For the past year I've been honoured with the historic title of Mock Mayor of Barton, a multicultural area of Gloucester. I recently spent a week linking the Barton I know with all the other Bartons in Gloucestershire, connecting communities and celebrating what we have in common."

Worst moment "As a sports reporter/commentator in the 1980s, I once tested the microphone level before a football match by talking about a pink elephant flying over the ground and the centre forward doing a strip on the pitch... but I was live on air!"

Off air "I live in an Edwardian cottage in a Cotswolds village with my wife Jo, a school administrator, and our daughters – Kate, 21, and Ali, 18. I'm a massive Gloucester rugby fan, and supporting Leeds United is a curse from birth! I'm an enthusiastic cyclist and once cycled up all of Gloucestershire's major hills – 29,000 feet, the equivalent of peddling up Everest."

First radio memory "Brian Redhead and John Timpson on Today."

Favourite broadcasters "The late Brian Redhead – calm, natural, composed. I now see Jane Garvey in a similar light. Steve Wright was an early inspiration – fresh and different."

Ambition "The constant evolution of my breakfast show. I've been doing it for 13 years, so I need to keep it fresh."

Dream job "Travel writer – I love having adventures."

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Mark Cummings BBC Radio Gloucestershire

Age 52

Current job Presents BBC Radio Gloucestershire's weekday breakfast show (6.00am). Also writes a column for Cotswold Life.

CV Brought up in Yorkshire, first broadcast on Pennine Radio, Bradford, at 16. Studied film, TV and drama at Leeds University. Then BBC Radios York, Nottingham, Bristol, joining Radio Gloucestershire in 1995. Winner of three local radio Gillard Awards. Has contributed to BBC1's Points West.

Best moment "For the past year I've been honoured with the historic title of Mock Mayor of Barton, a multicultural area of Gloucester. I recently spent a week linking the Barton I know with all the other Bartons in Gloucestershire, connecting communities and celebrating what we have in common."

Worst moment "As a sports reporter/commentator in the 1980s, I once tested the microphone level before a football match by talking about a pink elephant flying over the ground and the centre forward doing a strip on the pitch... but I was live on air!"

Off air "I live in an Edwardian cottage in a Cotswolds village with my wife Jo, a school administrator, and our daughters – Kate, 21, and Ali, 18. I'm a massive Gloucester rugby fan, and supporting Leeds United is a curse from birth! I'm an enthusiastic cyclist and once cycled up all of Gloucestershire's major hills – 29,000 feet, the equivalent of peddling up Everest."

First radio memory "Brian Redhead and John Timpson on Today."

Favourite broadcasters "The late Brian Redhead – calm, natural, composed. I now see Jane Garvey in a similar light. Steve Wright was an early inspiration – fresh and different."

Ambition "The constant evolution of my breakfast show. I've been doing it for 13 years, so I need to keep it fresh."

Dream job "Travel writer – I love having adventures."

Secret skills "I'm passionate about wild flowers. I'm home in the afternoons, so I do the cooking – coconut prawns is my signature dish." DAVID GILLARD

Give a child a smile today

In 45 minutes, Ngan's life changed forever. She was born with a cleft lip and had little hope of ever being healed. Now she can eat, drink, breathe and smile just like any two-year-old.

Please help now

Thousands of children are wishing for a new smile that will change their lives forever. We have medical volunteers ready to heal children in the world's poorest countries. Repairing a cleft lip can take just 45 minutes and costs as little as £150. Sadly, without donations from people like you, many children will never have surgery, remaining isolated and too afraid to go to school. Please change a life and give a child like Ngan a smile today.

Whether you donate online, over the phone or by filling in this form, the few minutes you spend now will change a child's life forever.

Yes, I want to give a child a smile today. Here's my gift of...

- £150 provides life-changing cleft surgery for a child
- £15 pays for antibiotics for 10 children
- £50 pays for medical supplies for one surgery

Call Stannah today.

British, family-owned business.

Many struggle with the stairs for long periods of time before finally admitting they need help. Some even consider moving home before deciding to give us a call.

Over the past 40 years we have installed more than 600,000 stairlifts. But during that time, we've heard the same thing; customers wishing they had contacted us sooner. So when it's time for a stairlift, why wait?

We are a British, family-owned business. With over 150 years of lift expertise, our company is run by fifth generation family members, who uphold our values and ethos of putting the customer first.

We are a company you can rely on. We make all of our stairlifts right here in the UK and rigorously test them to make sure they meet the highest standards of quality, comfort and safety.

include a wide choice of fabrics, colours and trims to blend in perfectly with your home.

We give superior support and servicing. We provide nationwide aftercare 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. And when you call Stannah, you will speak to an advisor based in our head office in Hampshire.

We provide peace of mind. New stairlifts come with a 2 year warranty and 2 free services as standard. Rent or buy, new or reconditioned, all stairlifts come with a 14 day money back guarantee.

Dates with destiny

Dan Snow's new book is a whistle-stop tour through history, proving that every day has its significance

1871
Henry Morton Stanley greets Dr David Livingstone

10 NOVEMBER

A man was seated on a mat in his small mud hut in the small town of Ujiji, on the shores of Lake Tanganyika in Tanzania, when he was lured outside by an unusual commotion. Crowds of people had gathered around a new white visitor to Ujiji, who was carrying, among other things, an American flag. The man pushed through the crowd and walked towards the visitor "with a firm and heavy tread". The newcomer was tall, tanned, covered in dust but had a well-polished hat. He made his way forward and said, "Dr Livingstone, I presume?" On this day in 1871, the explorer Henry Morton Stanley found the missing explorer Dr David Livingstone, the only white man for miles, pale, confused and evidently unwell, after he had vanished for five years, lost in Africa. Two years before, in 1869, The New York Herald had sent Morton Stanley to find Livingstone.

Since the mid-century, Dr Livingstone, a missionary explorer, had sought routes to spread Christianity into the heart of Africa. During his exploration, he pushed east along the Zambezi river, in a fleet of canoes, led by guides from the Makololo tribe. On the modern border between Zimbabwe and Zambia, Livingstone found an astonishing waterfall, which he renamed in honour of the queen, the Victoria Falls. It was on the shores of Lake Tanganyika, as he pushed north, that he had lost contact with the outside

11 NOVEMBER

It was still dark when the men met to sign the Armistice. There were British admirals, two senior French generals and a German delegation led by a politician who would soon pay with his life for what he was about to do.

By 5.20am, today in 1918, they had all signed it. The Germans submitted to the harsh terms of the Armistice. They were in no position to negotiate, their government had collapsed, their nation teetered on the brink of violent revolution.

Within minutes, news of the ceasefire was telegraphed around the world. But it would not come into effect for nearly another six hours, at 11am. In a pointless epilogue to one of the bloodiest wars in history, around 11,000 men would be killed or wounded that day, a higher casualty rate than D-Day. Generals even continued to order attacks.

12 NOVEMBER

Another monarch, another religious settlement. Today in 1555 Parliament passed the Second Statute of Repeal, a sweeping law that abolished all religious legislation passed in the previous 25 years, since Henry VIII had begun disman-ling the Catholic Church in England. Henry's zealous daughter Mary and her husband, King Philip of Spain, now also King of England jure uxoris, "by right of his wife", regarded this as the most important task of their reign.

Catholicism was restored on this day and Mary actively began to persecute Protestants. She revived former heresy laws and started to burn Protestants at the stake, beginning with Thomas Cranmer, the Archbishop of Canterbury. During her reign, almost 300 Protestants were declared heretics and burned to death.

'Unfairly, only Mary is remembered as "Bloody"'

Many more died in prison and her persecution led to an exodus of Protestant refugees fleeing to the continent. The Catholic restoration under Mary lasted only as long as she did; her heir was her Protestant half-sister Elizabeth who, in turn, introduced her own settlement, also enforced by torture and execution.

However, it was Elizabeth's model that endured, and so, somewhat unfairly, given the brutal proclivities of all her royal relatives, Mary alone is remembered as "Bloody".

The future looks frightening

Go behind-the-scenes of Black Mirror

INSIDE BLACK MIRROR: THE ILLUSTRATED ORAL HISTORY CHARLIE BROOKER AND ANNABEL JONES

Sci-fi anthology series Black Mirror – which originated on Channel 4 before moving to Netflix – has become notorious for the way episodes anticipate real-life events. But did its creator Charlie Brooker foresee how popular his cult drama would become? In Inside Black Mirror: the Illustrated Oral History (£18 incl p&p), Brooker and producer Annabel Jones reflect on how they turned their risky concept into a hugely successful reality. They and various cast and crew also dissect each episode, while in the final chapter they ruminate on the show's bright (or should that be dark?) future...

NOTHING IS REAL: THE BEATLES WERE UNDERRATED AND OTHER SWEEPING STATEMENTS ABOUT POP DAVID HEPWORTH

Drivetime Thu 5.00pm Radio 2

The latest book from RT columnist David Hepworth (see page 125) is the third in a trilogy, of sorts: his previous works looked at the apex of rock – which was, Hepworth posits, in 1971 – and then its slow decline, tracing the rise and fall of the rock star from 1955 to 1995. In Nothing Is Real (£14.99, incl p&p), he takes the even longer view, with essays reflecting on the past half-century of pop – from the perspective not of its stars, but of us mere music mortals.

STRAIGHT OUTTA CRAWLEY ROMESH RANGANATHAN
The Reluctant Landlord
Tuesday 10.00pm Sky 1

Though only 40, Romesh Ranganathan has lived many lives.

The comedian went from aspiring rapper to maths teacher to pub landlord (a brief diversion he turned into his new Sky 1 sitcom) and now he's a Bafta-nominated travelogue presenter, as well as the host of podcast Hip Hop Saved My Life – which explains the title of his memoir, Straight Outta Crawley (£18, incl p&p). From his forays into rap to why he thinks it's important to talk about race in comedy, Ranganathan tells the story of his career(s) with idiosyncratic humour and often touching honesty. HANNAH SHADDOCK

14 NOVEMBER

On this day, in 1666, an experiment took place at Gresham College, in Holborn, London. The experiment was a blood transfusion between two dogs; one of the first successful transfusions that took place in the 17th century. This was recorded by an onlooker, as he watched medical history being made from the corner of the room. His name was Samuel Pepys.

Pepys was a naval administrator, MP and Londoner, who kept a detailed diary of life and society. He began his diary on 1 January 1660, after purchasing a fat notebook from a stationer's shop in Cornhill. He filled its pages with colourful descriptions of everyday life, noting key events of the time, such as the Great Plague in 1665, where he gave a chilling account of the reality of death in the city: "I saw a dead corpse in a coffin lie in the close unburied – and a watch is constantly kept there, night and day, to keep the people in." In 1666, during the Great Fire of London, Pepys describes chaos, "everybody endeavouring to remove their goods, and flinging into the river".

15 NOVEMBER

On this day in 1492 Christopher Columbus made the first reference by a European to the plant that we know as tobacco, and which has had such a momentous, and damaging, impact upon the modern world. Columbus had sent men to investigate the island we now know as Cuba. When they came back they reported, with bemusement, seeing men with burning sticks clamped in their mouths.

All over the Americas, during the decades afterwards, European explorers reported the Indian habit of "drinking" tobacco (or chewing it) in the belief that this would protect them from various diseases. One told in amazement of the custom of stuffing leaves into a pipe, lighting them, then sucking "so long that they fill their bodies with smoke until it comes out of their mouth and nostrils as from a chimney". "Drinking" the smoke, they were told, kept the Indians warm and in good health. European doctors worried – needlessly, it has turned out – that the habit would put them out of business.

Devil's food cake

THIS IS SIMPLY the best chocolate cake I've ever eaten," says Great British Bake Off judge Prue Leith. "It was given to me by Rebecca, who works behind the scenes for Bake Off. She is a brilliant baker. She says the recipe is her mum's. So thank you, Rebecca's mum. It's so lovely that recipes get passed along, spreading joy to the world."

SERVES 12-16

FOR THE CHOCOLATE FROSTING

- 200ml double cream
- 350g butter
- 450g dark chocolate, finely chopped

FOR THE SPONGES

- 75g cocoa powder, sifted
- 150g light brown sugar
- 2 tsp vanilla paste
- 335g plain flour
- 1 tsp baking powder
- 1 tsp bicarbonate of soda
- 200g butter plus extra for greasing
- 225g caster sugar
- 3 large eggs

FOR THE DECORATION

- 150g dark chocolate (70% cocoa solids)

1 For the chocolate frosting, pour the cream into a saucepan, add the butter and heat, stirring occasionally, until the butter has melted. Bring to just below boiling point, then remove from the heat. Add the chocolate and whisk until smooth and glossy. Pour into a bowl and leave to set at room temperature, whisking occasionally.

2 Heat the oven to 180°C/fan 160°C/gas mark 4 and grease and line three 20cm loose-bottomed sandwich tins with baking parchment.

3 For the sponges, put the cocoa powder, light brown sugar, vanilla paste and 375ml boiling water in a bowl and whisk together until the sugar has dissolved. Set aside. Sieve the flour, baking powder and bicarbonate of soda together into another bowl.

4 Cream the butter and caster sugar together in a separate bowl until pale and fluffy, then beat in the eggs, one at a time, mixing in a tablespoon of the flour mix after each egg. Add the rest of the flour, a third at a time, folding well to disperse any flour pockets.

5 Fold in the cooled cocoa mixture, then divide between the three tins and bake for 25–30 minutes, until risen and a skewer inserted into the centre comes out clean.

Judge Prue Leith has some baking know-how of her own to share

6 Remove from the oven, leave to cool in the tins for 5 minutes, then turn out onto wire racks to cool.

7 For the decoration, melt the chocolate in a bowl set over a pan of gently simmering water. Meanwhile, grease the underside of a baking tray with oil and pour the melted chocolate onto it. Leave to set, then drag a cheese plane over the surface to create curls (above). Keep these cool.

8 Place a cooled sponge on a cake stand and spread with about a quarter of the frosting. Place another sponge on top and spread with another quarter of the frosting. Place the remaining sponge on top, then spread the remaining frosting over the top and sides of the cake, swirling with a palette knife. Arrange the chocolate curls on top of the cake.

Chocolate and macadamia biscotti

BISCOTTI IN A packet from Italy are delicious – but not cheap, so I think it's worth making your own. They keep well in an airtight tin and are delicious with ice creams and other creamy puds in need of a contrasting crunch.

The classic twice-baked biscotti are often dunked in the sweet after-dinner wine called vin santo. This chocolate version is good dunked in coffee or coffee liqueur. Or, if you are too posh to dunk, eaten alongside.

MAKES 30

- 200g plain flour
- 50g cocoa powder
- 1½ tsp baking powder
- A pinch of salt
- 150g caster sugar
- 100g macadamias, roughly chopped
- 2 large eggs, beaten

1 Heat the oven to 190°C/fan 170°C/gas mark 5. Line a baking sheet with baking parchment.

2 Combine everything except the eggs in a big bowl. Gradually add the beaten eggs to the mixture and combine to make a fairly stiff dough.

3 Divide the dough into three and form into sausage-shaped logs about 20cm x 4cm. Put on the baking sheet, spacing them roughly 6cm apart, and bake for 20 minutes.

4 Wait until just cool enough to handle, then gently cut the logs on the diagonal to form 1cm slices (a serrated bread knife works best). Return the biscotti to the baking sheet (you may now need a second one) and bake for a further 10 minutes, turning them over after 5 minutes.

The magic of Nashville

Take a tour of the capital of country music with DJ Bob Harris

Bob Harris: Country Music Awards

Thursday (highlights) 9.00pm Radio 2

RADIO 2'S "WHISPERING" Bob Harris vividly recalls his first trip to the home of country music. "I went out in the spring of 1999 and, almost from the moment I touched down, I realised I'd arrived in the place that I'd always wanted to be," he says. "The first interview I did was with Emmylou Harris – in her house, with her cats on my knee, and it was a fantastic experience. I've been going to Nashville at least twice a year ever since."

Tennessee's churches were partly to thank for the birth of its vibrant music scene. "Printing presses existed there for church music," explains Harris. "Before the advent of discs, the way of distributing records was via sheet music, so some publishers set up there and the record labels followed. As musicians began to spend more and more time in town, honky-tonk bars sprang up, along with cheap housing, equipment for hire, everything you need to build a burgeoning industry. By the early 1950s, Nashville became known as 'Music City USA'.

'There are buskers and music spills out of all the bars'

Country fans have been making the pilgrimage to Nashville ever since, but is today's scene as exciting as it was back then? "Probably even more so. I'd love to be able to put a turf-cut around the edge of the British music scene, pick it all up and take it to Nashville for a couple of weeks, so they could see the way it works. There is an incredible community – the session musicians live in town, the songwriters are there, new artists come into town and established artists get behind them. It's a place where you sense anything can happen."

HIT HONKY-TONK HIGHWAY

"Lower Broadway is your first stop because it's Nashville's West End. It's only a couple of blocks, but there's a cacophony of sound as you walk down the street because there are buskers and music spills out of all the bars. There are two honky-tonk bars that you have to visit. One is Tootsie's, which has live music the whole time and is kind of wild (tootsies.net). A couple of doors down there's Robert's, which is a bar, boot shop and music venue (robertswesternworld.com). The level

MUSIC CITY USA

of musicianship in these bars is beyond belief, so you've got a fantastic musical experience, but also a crazy night out on the town.

"Just off Lower Broadway, you've got the Country Music Hall of Fame (countrymusicchalloffame.org) and the Ryman Auditorium, which is the most famous venue in Nashville (ryman.com). It's known as the mother church of country music because it was originally a church and the audience still sit on wooden pews. It's an incredible building and it's soaked in the history of all the people who played on that stage: Hank Williams, Johnny Cash, Patsy Cline. You can also do backstage tours.

"I also like a venue called the Mercy Lounge, which is just a little way from the centre. It only holds about 400 people so it packs an atmosphere, and from the terrace outside you can see across Nashville (mercylounge.com). It's a really great place to hear music and hang out – very social, and there are soft chairs! Then there's a bluegrass venue for acoustic music called the Station Inn (stationinn.com). It's small, inexpensive, and you can have burgers while you're watching. Last but not least, you must go to Bluebird Café, because it's where so many of the stars began, including Taylor Swift. They have songwriters performing rounds and it's a magical experience (bluebirdcafe.com)."

TAKE A BOAT TO OPRYLAND

"Lower Broadway is only a few hundred yards from the Cumberland River, and you can catch a riverboat from the quayside and chug down to Opryland and the Grand Ole Opry, which began as a radio show in 1925 and is now an institution. There's also a huge shopping mall and an incredible hotel called Gaylord Opryland Resort, which is a bit like the Eden Project in Cornwall, in that it's a completely encased environment kept above 20 degrees. It's got waterfalls, fish, birds and butterflies, with restaurants in among it all. It's spectacular (marriott.com).

GO FOR GRITS

"The Loveless Café is a rite of passage (lovelesscafe.com). The menu is described as "down-home dishes and a country vibe" and it's typical Tennessee – grits, biscuits, bacon. When I'm in Nashville with Radio 2, we stay in Vanderbilt and eat in Chuy's. It's a chain, but it's such fun – really good Tex-Mex, and fabulous cocktails. I always have a margarita or two when I'm in Nashville (chuys.com)."

Uniform tax relief

The tax man could owe you £100 for your laundry bill, says Paul Lewis

IF YOU HAVE to wear a uniform or branded clothing to work then you may be able to get your tax bill cut this year – and for the past four years. The total saving could be £100 or more.

A uniform does not have to be a full set of clothes such as that worn by a nurse or a security guard. A branded T-shirt or blouse with the company logo on it also counts, as does safety clothing or boots. However, it does not include plain clothing in a particular colour – for example if you are expected to wear a white blouse or dark blue trousers. A suit will not count even if you never wear it except for work.

‘Even if you wear branded clothing, you may be eligible’

In order to qualify you have to be responsible for keeping your uniform clean and neat. If you do that, then you could save between £12 and £28 off this year’s tax bill – and you can go back four years to 2014/15 if you qualified then. So you could get a cheque for at least £60, and in some jobs more than double that. If you pay higher-rate tax then the amount you get back will be twice as much.

THE AMOUNTS ARE flat-rate and have not changed for many years. It doesn’t matter how much you actually spend on washing and ironing, even if you do it at home. You get the flat-rate amount of tax relief set down for your particular job. In some cases it is better to claim the actual amounts you spend – but to do that you will need to keep receipts.

Members of the armed forces do not need to apply – they have a set amount added to their pay to cover the costs.

For more information visit gov.uk and search “tax relief job expenses”. That shows the amount of tax relief you can claim and also covers other things you may be able to get tax relief for as an employee, with a link to the claim forms.

CORRECTION

In “The gift that doesn’t give” (Radio Times, 22 September), I wrongly wrote that £900 million on gift cards was never spent. The correct figure is £90 million. Apologies.

THERE’S NEVER BEEN A BETTER TIME TO PLAN YOUR FUNERAL

End-of-life planning is a taboo subject. Many people don’t want to talk about death or even accept that it might happen, but it’s better to prepare for it, especially for the sake of your loved ones.

The issue with planning your funeral is the rising cost of dying, which might sound blunt, but it’s true. Nowadays, passing away is getting more and more expensive.

To put it in perspective, in the past year, the average cost has risen from £8,905 to an all-time high of £9,204 (up 3.4 per cent).*

There are many different factors to consider when assessing the price of a funeral, such as funeral directors’ costs and disbursements (such as doctors’ fees and clergy or officiate fees). In addition, there are also significant regional differences in costs, with the most expensive place to die in the UK being London, at an average funeral cost of £5,880.*

So, what could you do? Plan in advance and choose a funeral provider that you can trust and that respects your wishes.

RT has teamed up with Dignity to offer you the Prepaid Funeral Plan. Dignity has already helped more than 824,000 people plan their funerals in advance, and prides itself on being there at one of the most difficult times of families’ lives.

This is in fact the perfect time to get your Funeral Plan from Dignity, as you can save up to £340 off 2018 prices^. Even better, if you purchase by 20 December you will be entered into the Dignity Free Prize Draw, with a chance to win £10,000†.

Dictionary corner

 Susie Dent

How has the word "buff" come to apply to experts, polishing and fitness? John Philpott-Howard London SE7

Buff leather was strong leather made from the hide of a buffalo, and it was the similarity between the pale colour of the leather and that of a white person's skin that led to the expression "in the buff", meaning "naked". The slang sense of "fit" or "attractive" emerged in 1980s' California, based on the idea of something "buffed" or polished.

That same leather was also used to make uniforms, and soldiers would be described as "wearing buff" or "in buff". This gave rise to the expert "buff" – one who is knowledgeable about a particular subject. This is because the original buffs, back in the early 1900s, were volunteer firemen in New York who wore buff uniforms and were highly conscientious.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Be kind to bakers

FINAL STRETCH
Were Bake Off finalists Kim-Joy, Rahul and Ruby pushed too hard?

The production team who make The Great British Bake Off (C4) should remember that this programme is primarily escapist, following a group of nice people making cakes. Some do better than others, and there is the occasional cock-up; it is a perfect metaphor for life. And it's heart-warming.

In this recent series, however, it has started to morph into some sort of endurance contest. The participants were given unnecessarily arduous briefs within impossible time-frames (French pâtisserie! Cooking outdoors on open fires!). We don't want to see these lovely people in tears. Give them a sensible task, sufficient time and the opportunity to make some excellent bakes. Then judge them. There is enough heartache in life, and we don't want it in Bake Off, too.

Peter Norrie Leicester

See Alison Graham: page 49

Peter Norrie wins a Bose SoundLink Micro Bluetooth speaker, in either orange or black. This small but powerful speaker delivers unmatched sound for its size. With up to six hours' battery life, a silicone rubber exterior and a tear-resistant strap, it's portable, rugged and waterproof. RRP £99.95. bose.co.uk

A WINNER TO WEEP OVER

I couldn't help but cry tears of joy for Rahul when he was finally declared the winner (30 October C4). Despite his anxiety throughout the competition, he produced some wonderful bakes, and I could only sit there, in awe, wishing I had a fraction of his talents!

I have been appalled, however, by the vitriol expressed on many social media platforms against Rahul's well-deserved success. We don't want to hear (or read) all this unbridled bitterness against a gentle young man who entered the competition simply because he loves baking.

Michele Platman Birmingham

HOW TO FIX NEWSNIGHT

As an addict of Newsnight (weekdays BBC2), I agree with John Morrison (RT, 3 November) that a budget boost would be entirely justified; but to cut the programme to 30 minutes would make it even more sketchy and superficial than it already is. Also, they should eliminate – not expand – the final breathless survey of the press and the occasional irrelevant music slot. Lastly, the departure of Evan Davis – rivalled only by Eddie Mair – is a serious loss.

Alan Knight Oxford

THE FUTURE FOR RADIO 2

A big thank you to Mark Lawson (RT, 3 November) for attempting to explain the mess at Radio 2. I feel desperately sad for Jo Whiley and Simon Mayo, and wish them both the best of luck.

To the managers contemplating the wreckage of Drivetime, I would make a plea. First, please don't dumb it down – think of us as Radio 4 listeners who've had a hard day in the office and just want something easy but not condescending. Secondly, ditch the diversity targets and sort out the music. Thirdly, innuendo is good – let's have something for the grown-ups. Oh, and please, please bring back Dr Mosh!

Martin Smith Salisbury, Wiltshire

...Mark Lawson's article proves my suspicions that the decisions in the past year or two to scrap or tamper with perfectly good and popular shows was no accident, but a deliberate decision by managers, just to tick boxes. If they carry on ignoring their core audience, Radio 2 could be in real trouble.

Steve Lustig London NW2

I'M A SPIDER-MAN

It took until episode four to get me interested in Doctor Who (Sunday BBC1): Arachnids in the UK (I liked the wordplay on punk hit Anarchy in the UK) was proper old-school scary, and I loved it!

We did have fun afterwards with our son, who watched the programme alone in his student flat at Sheffield University and doesn't like spiders...

Alan Hemmins Exmouth, Devon

FOR THE CHOP

In The Lakes with Paul Rose (26 October BBC2), what was the justification for chopping down a perfectly healthy 80-year-old oak tree for "wood sculpture"?

Quite apart from the environmental value of all trees, the oak in particular is host to a huge variety of flora and fauna that is beneficial to the ecosystem. Then there's the energy that went into steaming the planks so they could be bent to drape over surrounding trees to dubious artistic effect. I could have wept at the sheer stupidity of it all.

Juliet Evans
Farnham, Surrey
Paul Rose tweeted to fellow tree lovers: "This from Grizedale Sculpture: 'The artist was given timber from a tree already selected to be felled as part of a planned thinning programme, which is part of our ongoing management of the forest.'"

THE JOY OF MATHS

I just had to write to say how much I enjoyed Magic Numbers: Hannah Fry's Mysterious World of Maths (BBC4). Her presentation struck a delicate balance between enthusiasm and erudition, explaining in understandable language the paradox lying at the heart of mathematics.

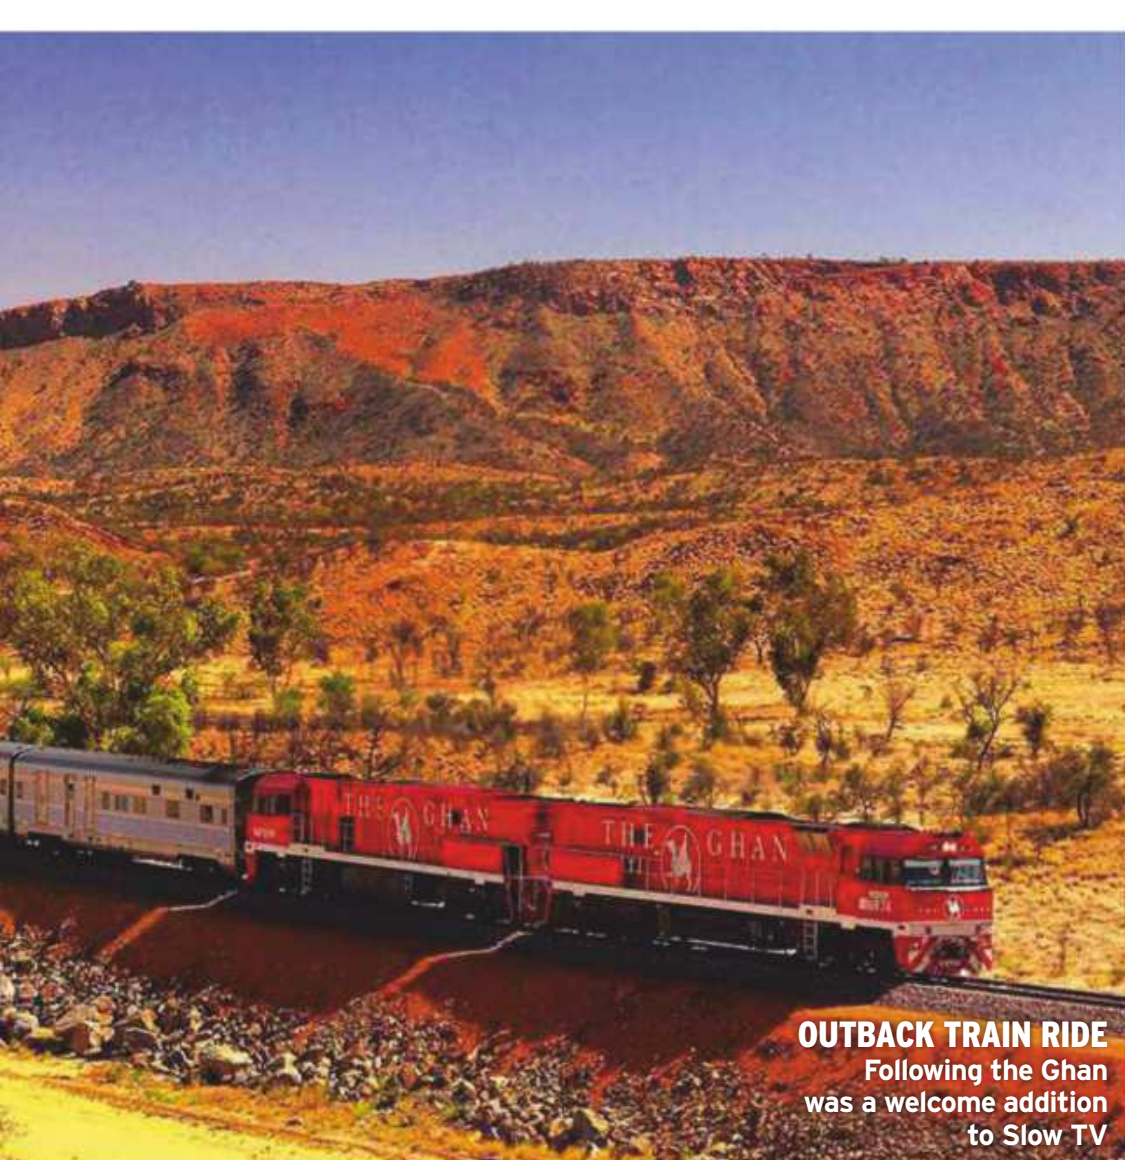

Unlike many similar programmes that spiral into the esoteric, this series remained compulsive and comprehensible. The other contributors supplied contrasting perspectives that expanded the arguments, without unnecessary confusion. Well done to all concerned.

Christine Peel Milton Keynes

A CLEAR VIEW
Hannah Fry made sense of maths

OUTBACK TRAIN RIDE
Following the Ghan was a welcome addition to Slow TV

A GHAN DAY OUT

I so enjoyed The Ghan: Australia's Greatest Train Journey (28 October BBC4). It was one of the best railway journey films I've ever seen. The location of the trackside cameras and the aerial shots were really brilliant, as were the camera fixtures on the locomotive and carriages, giving us spectacular views. This three-hour film journey left me feeling I had learnt a lot about the history of the line as well as a sense that I'd seen the true outback.

Gerry Bubb Broadmayne, Dorset

...This piece of Slow TV was as good as (or better) than The Country Bus ride to Whitby last year. More, more!

Alan Ross St Neots, Cambridgeshire

...A delight: no celebs, just the right amount of information in the captions and, wonder of wonders, no music. What heaven!

INSPIRING YOUTH

Thank you to the Countryfile Ramble for BBC Children in Need programme (28 October BBC1). The children with their different disabilities were amazing and inspiring. And a special thank you to Josh, whose courage and determination were both heartbreaking and joyful.

He showed us that, no matter how difficult life can be, if you aspire to something you can achieve it.

Presenter Matt Baker treated Josh (right) with affection and respect – the banter between them was delightful. Josh is only one of many children who face huge challenges in their lives, and they make me feel very humble.

Elisabeth Hirons Rochester, Kent

Ruth Spencer Swanage, Dorset

INTO THE DARK

I enjoyed everything about the brilliant Black Earth Rising (BBC2) and just wondered, as Hugo Blick wrote, produced and directed it and gave himself a wonderful cameo, if he also wrote and sang the haunting theme tune!

Alison Buck Norwich

Nice idea! But Hugo Blick recently told RT: "Every episode I write tends to have a theme song. I often don't end up using it in the show, but it helps me through the writing. In Black Earth Rising there are a couple – and the main theme song is You Want It Darker by Leonard Cohen. It's an interesting one because it seems like the author speaking to the audience, but in fact it was the story speaking to me – the further I looked, the further I had to go, and the darker it got."

WHERE'S RADIO 3?

I have three DAB/FM radios, but no DAB coverage, so I rely on FM. On 24 October Radio Wales took over my Radio 3 frequency and the suggested new frequencies produce a lot of hissing but not much else. I live in England; I don't want Radio Wales. I want Radio 3 back and I want it through my radios. The lifestyle change created by the loss of Radio 3 is an unlooked-for disaster. Will the BBC please find another frequency where I can receive Radio 3?

Hilary Woolner Llanyblodwel, Shropshire

A BBC spokesperson says: "The BBC has been working to bring Radio Wales's availability on FM in line with other national and network stations in Wales. The change has been achieved by using a small number of FM frequencies allocated to Radio 3 on transmitters in Wales. While Radio 3 is still available on FM in over 92 per cent of households in Wales, some listeners, in parts ▷

YOU ASK US

Where's Miriam Margolyes off to next?

Miriam Margolyes was wonderful narrating daytime travel series Armchair Britain (BBC1). But when will we see her again?

Lucy Harris, Southampton
The Harry Potter star is returning to acting with a guest role in the Call the Midwife Christmas special and also the first episode of series eight in the new year. Margolyes will play the redoubtable Sister Mildred, who turns up at Nonnatus House with four orphans – refugees from China who have been abandoned in Hong Kong. Joyful chaos naturally ensues... Margolyes is next off to Australia to star on stage as the eccentric Mary Shepherd in Alan Bennett's moving play The Lady in the Van.

POPULAR IN POPLAR
Miriam Margolyes at the Chelsea Flower Show in May – but she's heading for the East End...

THE END OF FREE TV?
Has the decision already been taken to discontinue free TV licences to over-75s? Our latest renewal is for one year only, not three, and the small print says the conditions may change.

Richard Joyce, Icklesham, East Sussex
It seems not. With regard to the future of free TV licences for the over-75s, the BBC has said: "The Government scheme and funding for it ends in 2020. No decision has been taken on the future. We will do nothing without consulting with the public, where we will set out a range of options. Everyone who wants to contribute will be able to do so once the consultation is published."

And a spokesperson for TV Licensing tells RT: "TV Licensing is increasing the frequency of our communications for those with an over-75 licence, so this year the renewal and licence are for one year. The provision in the terms and conditions that conditions might change is a standard provision across all licences, not just over-75 licences."

GOOD CAUSE CALENDAR

A lot of readers have been asking RT how they can get hold of the 2019 Countryfile Calendar (below). of Shropshire, Cheshire and Wales, will need to retune. This website may be able to suggest an alternative frequency for better FM reception: bbc.co.uk/receptionsearch. However, we acknowledge that, unfortunately, there will be a small number of listeners who can no longer receive Radio 3 on FM. We're sorry if you are affected in this way. Listeners who have no DAB or FM coverage can consider listening to Radio 3 via the new BBC Sounds app on computers and mobile devices, internet radios and digital television."

SANDWICH MATTERS

I need to put the record straight on the sandwich debate (Sandi Toksvig v Keith Woonton: RT, 3 November). In the 1950s, the manager of M&S Brighton made sandwiches in store for his own and other South Coast stores. Then when he was at the Pantheon Oxford Street store in the mid-60s, he repeated this initiative, after which manufacturers took over to professionalise the business.

First pre-packed sandwich in 1980? QI's Sandi was misinformed by her elves.

Barry Hyman (former M&S archivist) Bushey Heath, Hertfordshire

TAKE ANOTHER LOOK

Has anyone else been struck by the Budget logo on BBC television (below left)? It's the white pound sign on a red background, and yet, if you look at it another way, it suggests a person leaning forward, reading a book. It has always amused me, for it conjures up the idea that the politicians aren't quite sure what to make of the figures and are still cooking them up. I mean, looking them up.

Elizabeth Stone Bristol

HOME IS WHERE THE HEART IS

If retirement is not the dream you hoped it would be, you're not alone. Whether it's home improvements, holidays, helping out loved ones, or simply making ends meet, many have found their pension is not providing the right level of income to enjoy the freedom they hoped for.

Equity release has become an increasingly popular solution to help provide financial stability in retirement. Whilst it may seem like a daunting prospect, unlocking tax-free cash from property is now a common form of strategic financial planning that has proved life-changing for thousands of people in later life.

Lower interest rates and increasingly flexible products have made equity release much more desirable, offering a stress-free alternative to downsizing. New features include inheritance protection, which provides peace of mind that there will still be money left for loved ones when you pass away.

Equity release is a complex subject, so the most important thing is to seek good, honest advice. At Key, we understand that taking cash out of your home is a big decision, so we take time to explain the options available to you, taking care to find out what's important to you - both now and in the future. Book an appointment with Key and we will search the whole market to find a plan that best suits your individual needs, with no pressure or obligation to proceed. If you do decide to go ahead, your dedicated adviser will support you throughout the process, answering any queries you have along the way. Rest assured you will be in safe hands with Key.

READER OFFER

Radio Times has partnered with Key to produce a free guide written by Paul Lewis. Our free guide provides information to start you on your equity release journey.

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge, as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99 per cent of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

FREE CHRISTMAS HAMPER WORTH £30*

Simply book and attend a free no-obligation consultation with an accredited adviser from Key, the equity release experts, by 15 December 2018 to receive your free Christmas hamper. For full terms and conditions visit www.keyadvice.co.uk/hamper

GOOD ADVICE IS KEY

If you're considering equity release to help fund a better retirement, we can guide you through the options, and if it isn't right for you, we'll tell you.

Features:

- Accredited Independent Equity Release Advisers we are not tied to any lenders
- Face-to-face appointments in the comfort of your own home or over the phone
- Whole of market comparison we consider all equity release providers

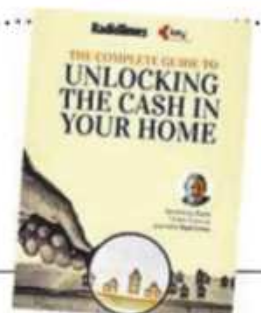

After discussing the options, we will make a personal recommendation, and if equity release isn't right for you, we'll tell you.

Equity release may involve a lifetime mortgage, which is a loan secured against your home. Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means tested benefits.

To request your free Radio Times guide, or to book a no-obligation consultation call 0808 208 3174 or visit radiotimes.com/equityrelease

Lines open Monday to Thursday 9am-8pm; Friday 9am-5.30pm; Saturday 9am-5pm.

View from my sofa

RACHEL RILEY

'Strictly makes me nervous'

Where do you watch TV, Rachel?

Everything in our living room is quite neutral, but the sofa's bright purple with pink cushions. I bought the sofa and Pasha [Kovalev, Riley's partner, whom she met while competing on Strictly Come Dancing in 2013] bought the TV. It's about 55 inches and it takes up most of the room.

Did you have a say in the telly, or did Pasha just come home with this 55-inch monstrosity?

I had one a quarter of the size that I thought was perfectly fine. But he said, "We need a bigger one," and then he said, "Now we've got a TV, we need speakers." But we love watching nature documentaries, with the colours that you can see and the detail on the animals. It's great.

Do you watch a lot of TV together?

With something like Bake Off, we'll wait until we're both around and then watch it. Often I work Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in Manchester for Countdown, so lately we've been watching

Bake Off on Wednesday evening. I'll come home and it's the first thing on. We're both vegan so we loved Vegan Week, and they had some Russian stuff this series, too. Pasha knew what all the breads were, and was telling me all about marriage breads and things like that.

Ah! So you've been talking about marriage. Just in food!

Are you able to watch Strictly Come Dancing while Pasha's still taking part – or does it feel a bit weird?

It's kind of left its mark. It just makes me feel nervous – so I make myself busy when it's on. I leave Pasha to it!

Are there any shows you and Pasha disagree on?

I like American late-night shows, like Trevor Noah, John Oliver and Bill Maher – I've got them all on series link. Pasha finds them funny, but I guess because he's from Russia, where they've had such bad politics in their time and couldn't do anything about it, he's kind of switched off to all the politics, so I tend to watch them by myself.

Do you enjoy other quiz shows?

If you're home and Countdown's on, do you watch it?

Occasionally. I like to see how the clothes come over on screen, because they look completely different. And I do still like watching the numbers game.

Do you try to solve the puzzles from your sofa?

Sometimes the "TV me" beats the "home me". Then it's like, "All right, well done." But if I've missed something while filming, it's, "Oh, you idiot. How did you miss that?"

Tell us a secret about Countdown.

Susie [Dent] keeps a box of dog treats under her table. We have some regular audience members, and one of them, a guy called Craig, brings his guide dog, Bruce. Susie keeps treats under the table for him. Bruce totally ignores me now. He's just after Susie.

Subtract 2009 from 2018 and what do you get?

Nine! But I know what you're getting at. We've just filmed my ten-year anniversary, which will be broadcast next year. Like a lot of things, it feels as though I've been there for no time at all and forever at the same time – my first day feels like a really long time ago. But I still enjoy it and it's a lot of fun. FRANCES TAYLOR

Countdown, Monday-Friday 2.10pm C4

NOTHING ON TV?

MY BOX SET Friends – classic. I watched it when I was a kid, and it's still funny now.

MY FILM Bohemian Rhapsody. It's really good to see on a big screen. The rock music shakes the whole cinema.

MY AUDIOBOOK Trevor Noah's Born a Crime. You get a taste of apartheid South Africa, but because it's Trevor Noah, it's funny.
