THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'Billy Monger is my new hero'

I WATCH SO MANY documentaries that leave me harrowed and unhappy, that make me feel helpless in the face of injustice and cruelty, or cataclysmic world events I can do absolutely nothing to change.

So I cannot tell you how wonderful it was to watch Driven: The Billy Monger Story (Monday BBC2) a story with a shocking, horrifying beginning but with an ending filled with joy and optimism.

Billy, a 19-year-old Formula 4 racing driver, had both legs amputated after a dreadful crash during a race at Donington last year. But he is indomitable, cheerful, determined and pragmatic (read our feature on page 26). Billy has a long, long road ahead of him as he continues his rehabilitation, but his absolute, matter-of-fact insistence that he will race again (and he does!) is life affirming.

I've never thought of myself as a fan of country music, but having watched Country and Beyond (Friday BBC4) the empirical evidence is stacked high – I really am a fan of country music. It's not a groundbreaking programme by any means, just the British country duo the Shires sitting on a sofa, choosing their favourite songs. But when their list includes Dolly Parton's Jolene and, oh be still my beating heart, Glen Campbell singing Wichita Lineman, then I'm in.

IT'S A BIG WEEK for Saturday-night telly. Strictly reaches its Nirvana and spiritual home, the Tower Ballroom in Blackpool, and Michael McIntyre's Big Show returns (both BBC1). I was a bit resistant to this at first because, though I like McIntyre, I have a very low tolerance of anything approaching a "variety" show (that's what comes of growing up watching Saturday-night telly in the 60s. The horror! The horror!)

But Big Show is great fun, a proper "family show" that isn't as stuffily old-fashioned as that particular description suggests.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

JAMES BURKE

‘Elizabeth I's Secret Agents, the BBC2 documentary series shown in January this year, was a jewel,’ says the broadcaster and author. ‘It was packed with complex information, clearly written and was beautifully shot, with contributing experts perfectly interwoven with the narrative. This is what historical documentaries ought to be.’

MARK TULLY

‘I love radio drama. It's a great form of storytelling,’ says the broadcaster and this week's columnist. ‘On catch-up I have enjoyed the marvellous mix of murder and comedy in A Decent Interval – A Charles Paris

Mystery, starring Bill Nighy. At the other end of the scale, I've learned a great deal about Shakespeare's history plays from discussions in In Our Time.’

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

Assisted suicide – or ‘medical aid in dying’ – has become a hot issue in the USA, and seven States now offer people who are terminally ill the option of ending their lives by using a prescribed cocktail of drugs (with a number of provisos and legal safeguards). In a programme with shades of Terry Pratchett's landmark film Choosing to Die, Louis Theroux discovers how assisted dying works in the US and explores tough emotional issues surrounding it.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

GETTING THE GREEN LIGHT

Could we be seeing Sir Philip Green – the TV drama? RT can reveal that Poldark and Victoria producers Mammoth Screen have optioned Damaged Goods, the book by Sunday Times journalist Oliver Shah about Green and the collapse of BHS, with a view to developing it into a TV series about big business. Sources at the company say that this is “a story that stretches far and wide and couldn’t be more necessary”. Mammoth boss Damien Timmer knows who he wants to play Green, but won’t be drawn. But RT gathers names being touted among casting agents include Gary Oldman and Mark Rylance.

BRING OUT THE BRANSON

Another prominent businessman who could find himself immortalised in TV fiction is Sir Richard Branson.

Harry Enfield is set to play the owner of Necker Island in a BBC2 comedy pilot called Island of Dreams.

It’s being written by Bert Tyler-Moore and George Jeffrie, who specialise in broad comedies involving real-life characters, like the brilliant C4 royal caper The Windsors. The BBC says the comedy sees Branson “solving the problems of our most-loved and messed-up celebrities while they’re enjoying some well-deserved island luxury... but does Sir Richard have a more important masterplan – a dark secret involving interplanetary travel?”

DRAGON LADY

There will be a female doctor on BBC1 this Christmas – not Jodie Whittaker’s Time Lord (who looks like she won’t be appearing on 25 December this year) but the heroine of Zog, Julia Donaldson and Axel Scheffler’s delightful storybook about a dragon called Zog and a princess called Pearl, who would rather be a doctor. BBC director of content Charlotte Moore tells RT that the story has strong feminist elements – and she’s right.

SECOND CHANCE SALOON

Moore also says that there is still hope for two dramas that didn’t exactly bowl over the critics or audiences first time round. She tells RT she’s meeting Mike Bartlett (writer of newspaper drama Press) and Debbie Horsfield (writer of Manchester drama Age before Beauty) in a few weeks... and says both shows could still return. BEN DOWELL

GETTY

Lenny’s new role

Here’s the first image of Lenny Henry as an elderly slave called Godfrey in the new BBC1 drama The Long Song. The three-part series is adapted from Andrea Levy’s 2010 novel and stars Hayley Atwell as the odious Caroline Mortimer, owner of an 1830s Jamaican sugarcane plantation. Into this world comes Robert Goodwin (War and Peace’s Jack Lowden), the new overseer, who has revolutionary ideas about improving conditions for its slaves.

Filmed in the Dominican Republic, the drama’s narrative is told principally from the perspective of Mortimer’s maid, a strong-willed young woman called July, played by up-and-coming Tamara Lawrance. Lawrance says the “subversive” role was a “blessing”, adding, “I believe stories like these illuminate the legacy of slavery in relation to where we are today.” It is due to air next month. BEN DOWELL

‘We need it more than ever’

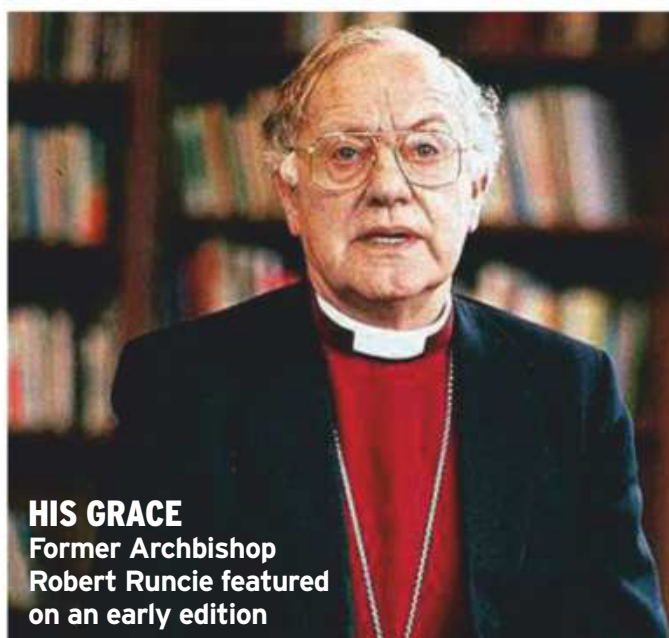

Now is not the time for the BBC to cancel Something Understood

THE TITLE of the Radio 4 programme Something Understood is taken from George Herbert’s poem Prayer, “Church-bells beyond the stars heard, the souls blood. The land of spices; something understood.” Last Sunday, listeners heard the bells of St Dunstan’s Church, Mayfield, marking the 100th anniversary of the First World War Armistice. During the recording, the bells were first muffled to commemorate the dead and then the mufflers were taken off to celebrate the peace.

Remembrance Sunday’s Something Understood was one of the last new programmes to be recorded in a series that’s run almost every Sunday for nearly 24 years. As I’ve had the enormous privilege of presenting some editions from the beginning, it will be the sadness of the muffled bells I’ll hear, knowing that the BBC has decided it can no longer afford to make any new Something Understood. I’ve always understood the series to be about avoiding extremes – extreme emotions and extreme views – so it’s sorrow I must feel, not anger.

Something Understood implies that it’s not possible to understand the great questions of life fully. In one of our first programmes, I talked to the Anglican monk Harry Williams, one of the most influential spiritual writers of my young days, who’d been through the wilderness of shedding his religious certainties to emerge with a faith that could live with uncertainties.

I also talked to Robert Runcie, who, as Archbishop of Canterbury, refused to split the Church by coming down on either side in the

HIS GRACE
Former Archbishop
Robert Runcie featured on an early edition

‘Robert Runcie told me it can take courage to sit on the fence’ controversy over women’s ordination – realising, as he himself said, “It can take courage to sit on the fence.”

The diversity of religions in India, where I’ve lived for many years, has taught me to be prepared to question the certainties of Christianity and accept that there are many ways to God. Something Understood has always been open to believers in all faiths and to non-believers, too. We’ve covered a vast range of subjects. One of our last programmes will be about the spirituality of accounting – normally considered an entirely materialistic activity.

I’m saddened by the disappointment that the BBC’s decision will cause all the listeners I’ve met who love Something Understood. I think in particular of a listener who told me that one programme had enabled her to go to church for the first time since her husband died. I’m sad, too, there’ll be no more brain-storming over scripts with my producers. Something Understood has always been a partnership with producers like Eley McAinsh, who pulled the series together after a shaky start; Frank Stirling, who’s been on the programme as long as I have; and Nigel Acheson, who died far too young.

SOMETHING UNDERSTOOD, QUIETLY questioning certainties, will survive in the repeats the BBC is going to broadcast in the foreseeable future and this gives me hope that they may still want to keep it alive. I hope the BBC remembers it designated 2019 a Year of Beliefs, when it will renew its commitment to covering religions today.

I hope it will also realise that in so many ways we need a series like this more than ever. Surely in the midst of the cacophony of clashing political certainties, and particularly now in the cacophony of Brexit, there is a place on radio for a programme that provides space for those who question their certainties, who realise that compromise is not necessarily a dirty word.

Formerly the BBC’s India correspondent, Mark Tully has been a regular host of Radio 4’s Something Understood since 1995

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 15-21 NOVEMBER 1986

WHAT WE WATCHED

Viewers got the first taste of Dennis Potter’s extraordinary masterpiece The Singing Detective – the troubling story of Michael Gambon’s Philip Marlow, a thriller writer hospitalised by crippling psoriasis who reflects on an elusive past and present. Hugely experimental, packed with music and mystery, this game-changing series fiercely resisted easy categorisation. “When you are telling a story, you don’t necessarily have to follow form A or form B,” Potter told RT. “We should have reached a point where you can rip some of the labels off. But why label it at all?”

WHAT YOU SAID

A controversial episode of Casualty (called Professionals) had just featured fairly casual sex between Baz and nurse Charlie – and references to rape and sexual abuse. “My ten-year-old son was watching and I feel he was subjected to things he need not be burdened with at his age,” said Mrs H Casey from Cambridgeshire. The Rev Tom Johnson from Birkenhead asked: “Would John Craven or Esther Rantzen... allow their children to be exposed to these issues without question?”

Class of 2018

Craig Revel Horwood awards gold stars to the best in the class – and reveals the celebrities who need to pull up their socks...

IT'S BLACKPOOL WEEK! The Tower Ballroom is the home of ballroom dancing and it has such an exciting atmosphere – we judges love going up there. But also, we've reached the halfway mark and that makes everyone focus.

There have been some big revelations with the celebrities this year, including Stacey Dooley and Joe Sugg. I thought it was brilliant of the BBC to ask an internet star like Joe to take part. We'd never done that before. I didn't know who he was to begin with – but it's brought a whole new audience to Strictly, which is just wonderful.

The introduction of the Couples' Choice as a new dance category was also a genius idea. As we saw, it gives someone like Charles Venn an opportunity to do something he's really good at. I'm absolutely championing it and I think it should be part of the show from now on.

There have been a lot of headlines this series, but it hasn't detracted from the dancing. I just think there's either a lack of news, darling, or people are so loving the show they can't get enough of it! Seann Walsh came back after that week with flying colours, and it probably helped push him a bit harder. Like any professional, you have to leave whatever's going on behind that door and just perform.

When it comes to who will win, I just can't predict it. I'm always wrong and I can never second-guess the audience at home – they always surprise me. ▷

Craig's half-term report

So who's an A-star student and who must try harder?

Ashley Roberts A

GREATEST STRENGTH Ashley is consistent. Not only does she have great technical ability, she also performs each dance very, very well.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS She's at the top of the leader board all the time! That might discourage people from voting for her – she really needs to canvass the votes because that can change everything.

ROOM TO IMPROVE She's having to unravel everything she's learnt as a pop star. Ballroom and Latin are completely different disciplines, and muscle memory – unfortunately – can be your enemy.

VERDICT She's one of the best dancers I think we've ever seen on the show.

Danny John-Jules B

GREATEST STRENGTH The jive was the perfect dance for him – he was absolutely magnificent. He's a man of a certain age, and – despite his nerves in the quickstep – it's just unbelievable what he's achieving. He needs to keep that up.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS He's normally a little bit stiff and unfocused, or dancing ahead of the beat. And he can't seem to control his arms as much as I think he should – or could.

ROOM TO IMPROVE When he's in hold, he needs to work on smoothing out his dancing a little more.

VERDICT Danny is very capable, but he has so much energy. He just needs to take a deep breath and calm down, then hopefully he'll achieve a more technical performance.

Joe Sugg B

GREATEST STRENGTH He's applying himself, learning the dances properly and really trying to perform them technically. He also has a lot of followers who will be voting for him!

BIGGEST WEAKNESS The acting side lets him down.

ROOM TO IMPROVE Although he's got a great frame for ballroom dancing, it can also be a weakness in dances where he needs to be super-strong, like the tango. He needs to learn to be less wooden, and to dominate the dance.

VERDICT I think he ticks a lot of boxes. He's not only entertaining and very enjoyable to watch, but he's also getting to grips with the technical side of the dancing, too.

Stacey Dooley B

GREATEST STRENGTH She's not afraid to go out there and give it her all. She just gets on with it, and I think that's one of her biggest strengths. Also Stacey seems able to pick up routines very quickly. She's been quite a bombshell.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS Technically, she's a little bit behind the other leading dancers, like Faye and Ashley, who are very good technicians.

ROOM TO IMPROVE If she polishes up her technique, she'll go a lot further.

VERDICT I can see her winning. She has a lot of the audience on her side, she's very popular and so far she's getting through this with flying colours.

Charles Venn B-

GREATEST STRENGTH When Charles did Street for his Couples' Choice performance, that was fantastic. He has an inner funk, and he's really great at isolation – moving one part of the body while keeping the rest still.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS I'm not sure he'll be able to find enough hours in the day to get his ballroom and Latin sorted!

ROOM TO IMPROVE If he maintains that isolation throughout all the other dance genres, I think he could definitely have a chance of going further – if he's still there as you read this.

VERDICT He's got the hardest job out of all the celebrities because he's hit an almighty high. And generally, after a high, comes a low...

Faye Tozer A

GREATEST STRENGTH I think Faye is fantastic. She's learning a lot on the way and is a great performer. She really commits to every routine, and brings every dance to life.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS She needs to throw more of herself into it. She's very good at putting on the act, but I think it's really important that the people at home can see a little bit of vulnerability when you're dancing.

ROOM TO IMPROVE If she promotes her acting, and brings more of her life experience, I think she'll do very, very well.

VERDICT Faye's a really solid performer and is most definitely a serious contender.

'I think Faye is fantastic - she's most definitely a serious contender'

Kate Silverton

C+

GREATEST STRENGTH Her focus. She really wants to do well and puts in a lot of hours. She never thought of herself as sexy, but she's proved that she can be.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS Kate doesn't express everything through her body. Her mind is working and she thinks she's doing it, but it's not actually happening.

ROOM TO IMPROVE It's about being efficient on the dancefloor – having a tone to her body. If she can achieve that, I think she'll go further, but she really needs to buck up her ideas because there's a lot of celebrities who have already learnt that.

VERDICT When she does something like a paso doble, she comes into her element. She's not a naturally gifted dancer, but when she gets a dance that suits her, she can be really good.

'Kate never thought she was sexy, but she's proved she can be'

Lauren Steadman

GREATEST STRENGTH Lauren is a fighter. As an athlete, she's used to competition and taking criticism – plus she's also super-fit, which obviously helps in dance.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS Her energy is sometimes misplaced and she needs to be aware of putting the focus of each dance into her body.

ROOM TO IMPROVE She needs to feel a more vibrant energy.

VERDICT Lauren has shown some improvement, but perhaps not enough at this stage of the competition.

Graeme Swann

C+

GREATEST STRENGTH Graeme has a huge amount of energy – he's great at doing all the boisterous and high-octane dances, and what he brings to the table is full-on characterisation. The charleston worked really well for him.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS He lacks elegance, and there needs to be more quality than quantity.

ROOM TO IMPROVE On occasion, he floats around the dancefloor and looks like he's losing control of his limbs here and there.

VERDICT I think it would be great for him to get to the semi-finals, but he's been landing in the middle of the leaderboard so he needs to pull his socks up a bit more. At the moment, he's not one of the best dancers.

'Graeme's great at the high-octane dances, but he lacks elegance'

EXPELLED

Susannah Constantine

I think the Strictly audience are well informed nowadays, so they've become quite good at judging. This year I think they just decided to remove the weakest link first, and that was Susannah.

Lee Ryan

Lee was really determined to get through the competition. I know that he was bitterly disappointed when he was voted out, but he just got the wrong dance on the night.

Katie Piper

When you see who Katie was up against, she was one of the weaker dancers. She had some style and did a fantastic job – but not good enough, I'm afraid.

Vick Hope

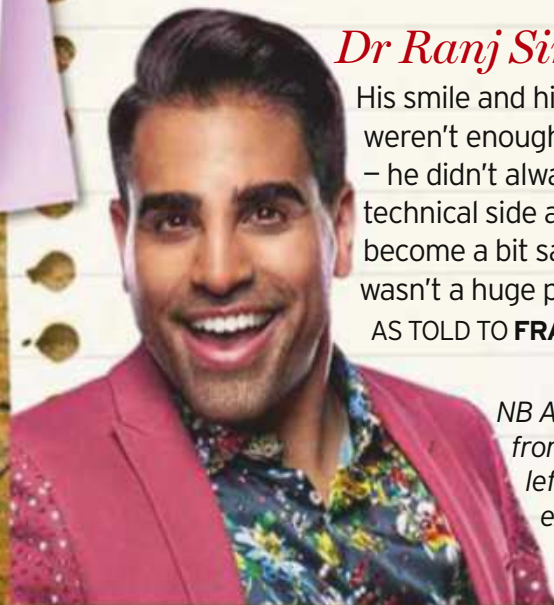

Her scores were up and down and though some people blamed Graziano's choreography for her exit, I don't think that's fair. She did what was asked of her really well.

Seann Walsh

He always committed to the dance and put a lot of energy into it – he didn't want to look foolish. But ultimately, his natural ability let him down. He turned a Viennese waltz into a hoedown.

Dr Ranj Singh

His smile and his personality weren't enough to save him – he didn't always get the technical side and he'd become a bit same-y. There wasn't a huge progression.

'I'll keep dancing!'

I may be out, but I've got the Strictly bug, says Dr Ranj Singh

SADLY, MY FIREWORK-THEMED samba wasn't enough to ignite the judges' passions, and I was the sixth dancer to be eliminated from Strictly.

We'd had a pretty rough run with our Halloween Monster Mash, so there was a lot of pressure to come back fighting – and we certainly came back with a bang, scoring seven more points than the week before. I didn't realise I had that kind of fight in me, to be honest, but it's something I now know I can call on. There's nothing quite like the thought that you might lose your dream to wake you up.

I was happy with our performance, especially since we'd had a really busy week. With attending the Pride of Britain Awards, an event for the Chelsea Pensioners for Remembrance Day and my medical commitments, the diary was full. It meant we had to snatch rehearsal time when we could, so the days were long and tiring.

There were times when I started to feel the pressure. The competition was heating up, the judges were expecting to see improvement each week, and the standard was going up and up. At my lowest points, I asked myself whether I'd be able to keep it up. But something clicked: I connected with the song and the dance, and I went into Saturday night's programme ready to show the judges what I could do.

'I had to say goodbye to my dream and my Strictly family'

And I did. Their comments were a welcome affirmation of how I'd felt, but the scores were lower than I'd hoped. That meant we were dancing for survival against Charles and Karen.

Out!

It was dreadful to be going up against friends: Karen and Janette are very close, and I've got to know Charles well. But everything was resting on that performance, so I gave it all I had.

It was the best I'd ever danced that routine. I put my heart and soul into it, and for once I didn't make a single mistake. For the first time, I was proud of myself for digging deep and finding a strength I never knew I had – something Janette had been coaching me on so much during our time together. I finally found it!

BUT THEN MY heart broke when Shirley cast the deciding vote to save Charles and Karen. Don't get me wrong, I was over the moon for them, but it meant I had to say goodbye to my dream. I was gutted to be saying goodbye to my Strictly family, and, above all, to the best dance partner and friend I could have hoped for.

Just like that, the dream was over. But I feel so lucky to have shared this experience. And I've come such a long way that I don't want to waste all the hard work Janette and I have put in – so I've just booked some dance classes. I won't know the others there and my wonderful expert partner will be missing, but this dancing doctor isn't ready to give it all up yet!

REMEMBER THOSE LENGTHY cross-examination scenes in Line of Duty that went against every rule of television-making and yet were so jaw-clenchingly tense they redefined good drama? Well, Channel 4's The Interrogation of Tony Martin takes those scenes one step further, in a one-off hour-long episode. And unlike Line of Duty, this isn't fiction. The Interrogation isn't just "based on a true story", it is "exactly what happened".

On 20 August 1999, two burglars, Fred Barras and Brendon Fearon, broke in to Tony Martin's Norfolk farmhouse. Martin went for his gun and shot them both, killing Barras, who was 16. At his trial, Martin argued he had used reasonable force to defend himself and his property. His subsequent conviction for murder and life-sentence provoked a public outcry and the case became a lightning rod for a national debate on a homeowner's right to self-defence.

People think they know the Tony Martin story; The Interrogation attempts to provide them with something they don't know. It goes back to the time after Martin was arrested and his questioning by police over the course of three days, using the words uttered by Martin and his two interrogators.

The idea came from Dave Nath, who's the man behind the Bafta-winning drama The Murder

Detectives and the 2016 thriller The Watchman, about an obsessive CCTV operator.

"Years ago I'd seen extracts from the transcripts of a police interview on the internet," says Nath. "It was for the case of the boxer Terry Marsh, who'd been arrested for the attempted murder of Frank Warren, and I thought, 'This reads like a film script.' So for years I've been wanting to do something that was based around the actual transcripts of a police interview."

Picking the right interrogation was crucial, however – using one, verbatim, is one thing, but if the suspect chooses to offer "no comment" (as is their right) then the interview transcripts aren't going to be the stuff of drama. But Nath alighted on the Tony Martin case because Martin was a talker.

In order to get hold of the actual transcripts, Nath and his colleagues at Story Pictures first had to go to Tony Martin himself – who was released on licence in 2003 after spending three years in prison, his murder conviction having been reduced on appeal to manslaughter.

'Martin liked to talk. He didn't need prompting'

STEVE PEMBERTON

"The advice we were given was that you really need the suspect's consent, whether they've been found guilty or not," Nath explains. Norfolk police didn't want to take part in the film. Martin's former lawyers couldn't help. Martin had a copy [of the transcripts], but he'd lent it to someone and never got it back. So, in the end Martin applied again to Norfolk Constabulary under a Freedom of Information request.

The Interrogation of Tony Martin announces itself as a verbatim drama, but it's not entirely unfiltered – Nath edited 600 pages of transcripts down to a taut one hour. Nonetheless, it is a bold undertaking. It's intense, playing out in acts like a 60s Play for Today. The camera rarely leaves the interview room and the standard tools of crime drama and true crime – re-enactments, multiple points of view and different locations – stay firmly in the bag.

When Tony Martin killed a burglar he became infamous – now his police interrogation is an intense new drama

“I thought it was a really bold decision just to stay in the interrogation room,” says Steve Pemberton, who plays Martin. “To try and re-create the action would have been a mistake – it’s not about that, it’s about what he [Tony Martin] said and the insight into his character.”

“What’s interesting is he does a lot of the talking. He likes to talk and, living on his own as he does, he doesn’t need a lot of prompting. So he comes out with an awful lot of stuff about his past, his childhood, and really just how vulnerable and emotional he is.”

PLAYING THE DETECTIVES are Daniel Mays and Stuart Graham. Mays, of course, has previous in interrogation rooms, albeit fictional ones: he was the copper under investigation in the third series of Line of Duty.

“I’ve done Line of Duty... but it’s not really like that,” says Mays. “I’ve played so many policemen but the fact that this is verbatim – I don’t think I’ve ever done anything like this before. When you begin this piece the police are incredibly reasonable. At the beginning there’s this very wounded, vulnerable figure. Then all of a sudden things start to shift. You start to learn his back story and things that have happened to him as a child. The way Steve plays it, sometimes I feel incredibly sorry for him and then the next minute I’m thinking, ‘You could be a killer.’”

Has going through the process given him any thoughts on what happened that night? “It’s always so hard when you haven’t got witnesses to convict someone beyond reasonable doubt. Having studied it, learnt it, filmed it, I feel none the wiser.”

Watching Martin so intently will definitely reignite the debate sparked when the case grabbed the headlines back in 1999: what would you do if someone came into your house?

“People will have two conversations,” says Pemberton. “Was what he did right? Well, according to the law it’s reasonable force. Although he shouldn’t have had that gun in there. But there’s the court of public opinion as well, and that’s what will be interesting about people’s reaction to this.”

People will also react to the programme as a piece of television: Dave Nath admits that it’s an experiment that crime fans might not like. “It might turn out that all of the things we haven’t done, we should have done; that they are what makes good drama. But I wanted to do something bold and see if it can work. I get bored watching things that are the same all the time.”

Nath sees The Interrogation of Tony Martin not just as a new approach to crime drama on TV, but as a whole new way of storytelling. He wants to take verbatim drama, “worlds you can’t get to” as he puts it, and apply it to tribunals, disciplinary and parole hearings.

“The potential for verbatim drama is taking you to places that you’re locked out of in documentary. Is there a way of bringing them to life by having the authenticity of the original material and then dramatising it?” BENJI WILSON

The shape of things to come

As Tomorrow's World returns for one night only, James Burke recalls the show's heyday when it forecast a future of mobile phones, personal PCs – and paper pants

WHEN TOMORROW'S WORLD began, in the early 1960s, Britain was a different place. In most major cities and, above all, in industrial towns, pollution hung in the air like smoke. You could taste it and it made your eyes smart. Economically the country was just beginning fully to recover from the Second World War. Most people didn't own a car. Most had never flown. Only one in three had a telephone. Many still had no indoor toilet. The educational system either selected you for a grammar school, in the 11-plus exam, or dumped you.

But then, in 1963, things started to change. The Beatles proved that you didn't have to be born with a silver spoon to be successful and rich. And in a way, socially, they turned the country upside down. Suddenly there were flares, long hair, miniskirts, Carnaby Street, kipper ties and a feeling that nothing was impossible. Into this churning social mix came a new television show (still in black and white), riding on the coat-tails of the new optimism and looking ahead to a time of new opportunities.

Tomorrow's World was an example of the old adage: pessimists jump out of the window and are no longer involved. The mantra was onwards and upwards to a future like all futures are meant to look: that is, the same as today, only better, faster, cheaper and available to everybody.

I say this to try to set the context in which TW did what it did – show and tell technology (and sometimes science) to a largely uninformed general public, who were often watching the programme so as not to miss the show that followed – Top of the Pops. But soon enough, TW got its own faithful followers (at times as many as 11.3 million of them). Considering the fact that schools gave no preparation for this material, of course it had to be bite-size and pre-digested. So each programme lasted half an hour and consisted of five or (at most) six items, either performed live in the studio or filmed with a reporter on location. The show moved fast (to hold interest, and because you didn't have time to grapple with complex content). Essentially this was a technology shop window. And it was live, because back then TV was live. Live was cutting edge. Besides, videotape was new and expensive.

THE BASIC TW message was: here's a new gizmo, and if I press this button you'll see it in action. Sometimes, of course, action didn't happen. In the live studio, things frequently went egg-on-face (notorious front-runners were robots and voice recognition, which, in the experience of all presenters, never worked), and we had to fumble our way out of it. But it endeared the baffled TW frontpersons to their audience. What better fun that seeing somebody famous come a cropper.

It's easy to look back and criticise the cheap

'TW was the first to say we'd all have a computer' and cheerful approach to technology of those early TW days. But that would be to forget the context. And context is all. Then and now.

Back then, the technology that we thought would shape your immediate future included hi-tech tin openers, hover-trains, mobile phones with dials, robotic everything, tidal power, self-drive cars (but before GPS, so most of the car was computer), paper clothes, and a pop-up egg boiler. But over 38 years, the series showcased more than 7,000 items, including the likes of CDs, heart transplants, genetic engineering, a rabies vaccine, the pocket calculator and the breathalyser. And, above all, developments in computers. TW was the first to say that one day we'd all have one.

And here's another aspect of contextual constraint. As far as I recall, we never really joined up the dots. Not just to show the potential social effects of a hi-tech tin opener, but also that of personal computers, mobile phones or (above all) the internet. We didn't suggest, for instance, that mobile phones would become mini-PCs that might allow us to monitor what we have in our fridge, so that we could automatically keep it stocked with fresh food and never actually need a hi-tech tin opener. We just didn't think like that. But then, no one did.

THE TOMORROW PEOPLE

First of all, no one had the technology to join any dots. There was no Google to search for connections and interactions and new ways of behaving with new technology. By the time you got to a library (for weeks of research, if indeed there were any dusty monographs written on the subject), the moment for social prophecy would have gone.

Mind you, at least well into the 80s the audience was still in shop-window mode. Still not equipped to handle demanding issues such as social media or robot job-takers, or even simply how to handle masses of information on the day when it would become instantly available.

In that old, one-way world of passive, one-thing-at-a-time TV learners, what would viewers have made of the fact ▷

◁ that today, 30-odd years later, the least important thing a mobile phone can do is make phone calls? So perhaps when the computer avalanche really struck, starting in 2000 or so, the old TW (still chugging along, but now down to only two or three million viewers) was no longer what was required.

I know that in today's hectic world, a TW primer for the future might seem essential. Well, I'm trapped in my own context, but my guess would be that the technology is itself now joining the dots. In the internet of things, tens of millions of objects already interact to create new ways of living. And soon, big data and predictive analytics will analyse the immense amount of data-exhaust we each leave behind us, online, every day, to identify our preferences and arrange for the future to be what we all want it to be. So perhaps it would be a pointless exercise for us to learn to join the dots. It would be too little, too late and, above all, too slow. Anyway, in today's world of instant access, we no longer feel we need to know stuff, because by the time we know it, it'll already be obsolete.

'Today, by the time we know something, it's already obsolete'

So the message seems to be, "Go with the flow." A scary thought? They said much the same thing about what the printing press would do.

A HEADSET OF ITS TIME

Howard Stableford samples virtual reality in 1990

1990 Virtual reality

Presenter Howard Stableford excitedly demonstrated a headset that, in the not too distant future, could make you feel you were in a 3D world, throw you into the middle of all kinds of computer-generated adventures. Programmers call this virtual reality, he told viewers: "It's quite convincing."

1969 Chip and pin

Tomorrow's World showed us how we'd be paying for our shopping in the future: computerised credit-card machines that would transfer funds directly from our accounts to that of the shop, while computerised banks would see fewer queues and there'd be less fear about missing bank opening times at the weekends. There was concern, though, that there may be job losses if computers took over bank jobs.

The mobile phone

The nation was introduced to a British prototype for a cordless telephone that would allow users to make calls from anywhere. This first mobile was far from thin and sleek, but it carved out a path for the multibillion-pound mobile-phone industry – and if science is to be believed, future generations with huge thumbs for obsessive texting.

MISSES

Paper pants

Raymond Baxter, launch presenter of Tomorrow's World, confidently declared that paper pants would replace conventional underwear within three years. Paper suits, dresses and even wedding gowns were on the way and would replace polyester and cotton, he said with confidence.

Mechanical cows

The nation was informed that we would one day have a "marvellous mechanical cow which grazes upon assorted green-stuffs at one end while the other delivers milk, meat extract, and fragrantly-scented manure". Last time we checked, the cows in the British countryside were real from nose to tail.

The robot snooker player

The Hissing Sid, named after the title track from an album of musical poems with lyrics by Jeremy Lloyd and music by Jim Parker, was a robot on Tomorrow's World who went up against presenter Kieran Prendiville in a game of snooker. No need to have any friends to play snooker with; this robot would be the ultimate competitor. Things went awry, however, when Sid experienced live TV nerves. "Our champion is, in fact, not yet switched on," whispered commentator Ted Lowe in 1981 after introducing Sid as the world Snooker Champion of the Year 2000.

LOUIS THEROUX STANDS at the foot of Gus Thomasson's bed and thanks the sleeping man for letting him into his life. That life is about to end, as Thomasson, 74 and suffering from advanced pancreatic cancer, has recently taken the drugs that will first tranquillise then, after seven-and-a-half hours, kill him. Thomasson has exercised his right to die under a California law that allows a terminally ill adult to end his or her life with prescribed medication.

Now unconscious, he has already said his goodbyes, and it's left to his two daughters, his wife and friends gathered round the bed to tell Thomasson they love him.

Theroux slips away before the end, past Thomasson's infant grandson, who plays in the corridor. "I've seen quite a few upsetting situations," Theroux says of this scene in his new documentary Choosing Death. "And I think sometimes I may lack a certain level of emotional self-knowledge. Occasionally I get surprised when emotions come at me unexpectedly. But, for the most part, I'm unscathed. It doesn't traumatise me. I see something extraordinary, I'm part of a very powerful, upsetting scene in which someone is dying, or expressing a deep sense of mental anguish, and then I go home, put my kids to bed and kiss my wife."

Theroux is married to the television director Nancy Strang and has three sons: Albert, 12, Frederick, eight, and Walter, four. To make this new three-part series Altered States, he moved them all to the US for a year. "We'd lived there in 2013 and 2014 when I made LA Stories, and then My Scientology Movie," he says. "The kids love the beach, and the weather, the desert and trips up into the mountains." When the boys were at the beach, Theroux was being welcomed into other people's lives, often at their most testing moments.

Still, at 48, a boyishly curious figure, Theroux contrives to be both quizzical and yet

'I SEE SOMEONE DYING... THEN I GO HOME, PUT MY KIDS TO BED AND KISS MY WIFE'

From weird weekends to matters of life and death, Louis Theroux has been making documentaries for two decades – but has he emerged unscathed?

THE RT INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

somehow separate from the dramas around him. "I think the idea of someone coming from the UK and the BBC has a certain appeal for Americans," he says. "It's that feeling of, 'Oh, it's just some random British guy with glasses.' And that somehow creates a sense of security."

He's a journalist, not an actor, so how real is that British guy with glasses? "Clearly, I'm trying to be a bit more polite and ingratiating, as friendly and solicitous as possible. So, you're not going to go around throwing tantrums, you don't want viewers to think you're a complete dobber. Earlier today, I caught myself being a little bit curt with someone and I thought, 'Oh, wow. Maybe that's a bit off.' But whether it's a persona or just someone in a professional mode, I'm not sure. Probably in my normal life I'm a bit more crotchety. A bit more facetious."

His reputation is built squarely on the 30-plus specials he has done for the BBC, starting in 2003 with Louis and the Brothel, after his When Louis Met... series, which began in 1998, ended. Sex appeared again in the first episode of Altered States, an investigation into polyamory, which saw Theroux stripping to his underpants and having his nipples tweaked by a trio of live-in lovers. "It was nice to flex some of those old comedy muscles again," he says.

AT PEACE
Gus, 74, was suffering from pancreatic cancer when he chose to end his life

HE'S NOW, OF COURSE, taken very seriously, though he admits it's been a long haul. "It's like turning around an aircraft carrier. It took about ten years, after finishing the When Louis Met... series, for people to finally stop asking, 'When are you going to do another Keith Harris and Orville profile?' Or they'd say, 'Oh yes, you do all that weird stuff.' But now I think people understand that it doesn't always have to be about oddballs, or strange stories."

Theroux says that he has been thinking about more When Louis Met... encounters. "Tommy Robinson is too much on the front burner for me right now. I'm interested in stories about people who maybe are not riding as high as they once were – maybe Nigel Farage or Julian Assange. Farage seems to be more in the wings, more in the margins. I also like stories about people who have been somehow defrocked, or have fallen from grace. Roseanne Barr, the American actor and comedian, would be a good person to make a documentary about."

◁ perplexed. At her home in Oregon, 65-year-old Debra doesn't have access to the end-of-life drugs available to Thomasson under California's 2016, AB-15 act. She is visited by Lowrey and Brian, advisors from the Final Exit Network, who demonstrate how she might kill herself; Theroux has been advised, for legal reasons, not to reveal the process in detail. He need say nothing – it is deeply uncomfortable.

In other scenes, we see Theroux's deceptively casual interventions at their best. He lies down on the carpet to talk to 11-year-old Braden, whose mother, Lori, has a terminal illness and is planning to end her life. The conversation is delicate and perfectly pitched – but is it right for Theroux to benefit from the boy's situation? "Of all the people we feature," he says, "the one that I thought most about was Braden. An 11-year-old boy is a sponge for what's going on around him. But it might be years, or even decades, before it's clear how he's been shaped by what he's gone through. I made a point of being aware that he was around, that he was hearing everything, and of asking, sometimes repetitively, if he was OK. You absolutely have a duty of care towards a child involved in a situation like that. It's just horrendous to think about a young person losing his mum, isn't it?"

THEROUX WENT INTO the film thinking, "it's probably a pretty good idea to afford people who are terminally ill the option of ending their life". He has not changed his mind. "But it has made me more sensitive to the questions involved," he says. "If you are having conversations about quality of life, that raises the question, 'Well, what is quality of life?' And what about people with dementia, who don't have capacity? Those people don't fall under the California legislation, but they are increasingly part of the conversation."

Doctors have told Lori, Braden's mother, that her cancer is terminal, and she wants to take control of her own death. But Debra in Oregon uses a wheelchair after a car crash, and suffers "dementia-like" episodes. She is clearly depressed after the recent death of her husband and lacks the money to stay at a specialised facility. Should we really be aiding her suicide?

Theroux says, "Brian, who is part of the Final Exit Network, expresses the view that no one would want to live with dementia, they'd rather be dead than live with dementia. That's a short step from saying, 'Let's help anyone with dementia on their way to a sort of merciful release.'"

"That, to me, seems like a very troubling scenario. You can decide you don't want to live with dementia, but what about if you then get dementia and you forget that you expressed that wish, and to all intents and purposes you seem

TOUGH CHOICE
In the final episode of Altered States, Theroux meets Brandon and Jessica, who give up their child for adoption quite happy? It seems to me that the now demented person has a reasonable claim to being allowed to change their mind and decide that they're quite happy doing what they do, living in dementia."

'I'm 48, I've got three children... death seems quite far off'

I ask if he has spoken about these things to his own parents, writer Paul Theroux and former BBC World Service producer Anne Castle, who are separated but still alive. "They're getting on a bit," Theroux says. "Dad's 77 and Mum's 76, but I haven't talked to them about it. They've both been lucky, to still have 99 per cent of their marbles. Perhaps I should be thinking about that." And what about Theroux? Does he have a living will so his family knows what to do if he becomes ill? "I don't. And I should. I feel, maybe naively, that I'm 48, and I've got three children, the youngest is four, so that all seems quite far off."

Theroux says he missed England when the family was in the US. "It became a bit much, not being able to walk anywhere, the car culture. And just not really bumping into people," he says. "When we're living there, the boys pick up the accent when they're at school or with friends. It's almost like being, well, bilingual, but only in English. When they're at home with us, they use their English accents. They return!"

Has that been a danger for Theroux, spending so much time in the US that he stops speaking the English English that is part of his appeal? "Well, I see some old Weird Weekends episodes where I hear a little bit of an American twang," he says. "It all goes a bit Loyd Grossman."

IHAD PRESUMED THAT this would be a bad time for a film-maker like Theroux to leave the States. Isn't Trump's America going to get weirder and weirder and throw up even more stories? It turns out the opposite is true. "My older programmes about survivalists, neo-Nazis and religious cults worked because they were always alleviated by a sense that these were figures in the margins, lonely and embattled. Which somehow makes it a little easier to stomach. Whereas the kind of ideology that Trump has embodied is now in the ascendancy. If I went and interviewed, say, ethno-nationalist Trump supporters, I'd have to retool. In essence, we've got an ideology that has been viewed as radical, and deeply questionable, before, and now somehow that's become dominant. It has captured the White House and elements of the Republican Party, and that means we're in different times now."

Which means we will be seeing more of Theroux in Britain, perhaps attempting to bumble his way through the door of the Ecuadorian embassy, trying to get that Assange interview. Successful or not, he has an approach that should see him through. "For want of a better term," he says, "it's really just a case of trying to be a decent human being."

POWER PAIR
Theroux with his wife Nancy Strang, a TV director

I THINK YOU'VE CRASHED," says Billy Monger and it can't be denied. The steering wheel has twisted out of my hands and the front of the car is embedded in the track safety fence. Monger, a 19-year-old Formula Three racing driver with the Surrey-based Carlin team, balances on his prosthetic legs, leans into the cockpit of the racing car simulator and holds the wheel steady as I extricate myself.

Monger knows all about crashes. On 16 April 2017, he was racing at a rainy Donington Park in the British Formula Four championship when he smashed into the back of Finnish driver Patrik Pasma's car at 120 miles per hour. Pasma walked away from the crash. Monger, who was still 17, lost both his legs: the right leg below the knee, the left above the knee.

Monger had been racing since the age of six when, like his hero Lewis Hamilton before him, he joined the karting circuit. "When you're that age and you're able to drive at 50mph it feels like you're flying," he says. Monger rose through the ranks to F4, earning the nickname Billy Whizz for his daring and speed. Those attributes are apparent if you watch video footage taken from Monger's cockpit camera in the moments leading up to the Donington Park crash.

He prowls behind other drivers, awaiting his chance. Then, in a horrifying moment, Pasma's apparently stationary car is suddenly revealed directly in front of Monger's. "I was coming through traffic," Monger says. "I overtook someone at the corner then came up the hill trying to get past other people. He [Pasma] had spun and stalled but there were two cars in front of me, blocking my view. Everyone else could see him but I couldn't. He was actually rolling back slightly, because it's uphill there."

The front of Monger's car crumpled into the back of Pasma's. It took an hour and a half to get Monger out of the wreckage. "At first, I didn't feel any pain because of the adrenaline," Monger says. "Gradually I came out of shock, realised what my injuries were and started to panic. I remember people giving me injections and my sister Bonnie being there. That was reassuring – a voice I knew rather than a load of strangers looking at me in a bit of a horrified way, because they knew how bad it was, but I didn't."

His parents, Rob and Amanda, were back at the paddock. "At first, they told Mum and Dad that they thought I'd broken my legs," he says. Knowing Bonnie was by Billy's side, Rob stayed with Amanda at the paddock. In the documentary, Driven, Amanda reveals that she and the other drivers' mothers at the track on race days would constantly fear the worst. Now something very like the worst had happened.

Monger was evacuated by air ambulance and put in a coma by doctors at the Queen's Medical Centre in Nottingham. The severity of his injuries was immediately apparent to the team treating him. "The doctors made the call for me," Monger says. "If I'd been conscious and they'd said, 'OK, this is what we're going to have to do,' for anyone to hear that sort of news, they would just panic and say, 'No, I don't want you to amputate my legs.' My parents were given that news at hospital. They were going through all the emotions; it was a lot more stressful for them. I was just asleep."

A horror crash nearly ended Billy Monger's dreams of being the next Lewis Hamilton. But he's not giving up

As he slept, something remarkable happened: the F1 community gathered round. Drivers like Lewis Hamilton who had come up the same way as Monger, through karting and Formula Three, knew it could have been their younger selves my right leg at all.”

Carlin adapted a car for Monger. The clutch, gear-change and accelerator are all on the steering wheel (this requires him to do exercises to keep his hands and fingers strong) and the brake pedal was moved from the floor of the cockpit closer to the driver so he can reach it with a specialist prosthetic he wears for driving.

Talking to Monger, it's easy to forget how young he is. Not yet 20 and he's been through a life-changing trauma, yet he has the emotional balance and determination of one twice his age. Looking back, he feels he rushed into his recovery and underestimated how tough it would be. “You think, ‘OK, I'm going to do this. I'm going to walk again and drive.’ You're just going to tick these things off. But other things get thrown in your way that you've got to overcome. I was being a bit overambitious, but I would rather be like that than a bit underambitious.”

HE SEEMS TO have gained his biggest boost from the involvement of Hamilton who, to Monger's delight, wins Formula One's World Championship the day before we meet. “Lewis has been my idol since I was eight,” he says. “When I was first racing go-karts, he was winning his first World Championship in F1 and I was looking at that as my inspiration. He's a really nice guy and invited me to spend the weekend with him at the British Grand Prix. Lewis told me a lot about his F1 car, how it worked.”

At the mention of Formula One, there's a flicker in his eyes. Is it possible he could drive an F1 car one day? “I don't want this to be an excuse, I don't want to think, ‘I could have been an F1 driver if I hadn't had my accident.’ I think most people when faced with adversity discover they can't cope with it, or they find that extra little bit. It was a brutal situation and, thankfully, I found that extra little bit of strength.”

lying in intensive care. Hamilton, who has 5.41 million Twitter followers, tweeted his support for Monger, and former Formula One world champion Jenson Button posted an appeal on Instagram. Within 24 hours, £500,000 had been raised towards his recovery.

Now, only 18 months after the crash, Monger is back at the wheel regularly. Not just of the room-sized simulator with a racing car in the middle in which Monger has been tutoring me (we agree that I'm not a natural), but also a Formula Three car, one stage up from F4 and adapted to allow him to compete in the British championships. In his first season of F3, which ended in October, Monger gained four podium finishes and finished sixth over all. He's now looking for £350,000 sponsorship for next season. “I don't see myself as being a disabled person,” he says. “That's what people label people with my injuries, but there is so much stuff I have managed to achieve in the past 18 months. I don't really know how to describe it.”

After the crash, when Monger was still in a wheelchair but determined to continue his racing career, he was invited by childhood friend and team Carlin driver Jamie Caroline to come to the Carlin HQ and try out the simulator. Almost immediately, Monger started posting better times than the able-bodied drivers using it. “At that point, I was doing everything with my hands because my leg injuries were still healing,” he says. “I didn't know whether I could use

Still the men to beat

Write off Roger Federer and Novak Djokovic at your peril

ATP Finals Saturday (singles semi-finals) 1.45pm, 7.45pm Sky Sports Arena, 2pm BBC2; Sunday (final) 6pm BBC2, Sky Sports Arena/Mix

FINAL STRUGGLE. LAST big push. One more supreme effort and it's all over... a thought that inspires some, and leads others into demob-happy defeatism. Tennis's ATP Finals are like that: the world's top eight male singles players – at least, the best eight still capable of standing – gather for one last crash-bang-wallop before tennis breaks up for the hols.

Every time they are injured we are tempted to write off Roger Federer, Novak Djokovic and Rafael Nadal, individually and collectively, and yet, like the wobbly-man in the nursery, they keep standing up again. Who is doomed this time? Nadal was determined to play, even though he'd missed every tournament since the US Open, but in the end he was forced to pull out with a muscle problem that wouldn't go away.

The Spaniard wanted to be at the ATP Finals because, if results had gone his way, he would have ended the year as world number one. How they love being number one, these three. This year, Nadal was number one for most of it, Federer for three brief stretches, and now Djokovic – last number one in 2016 – has it back again. Federer has won the ATP's premier cup four times, Djokovic five – but for Nadal, never at his best indoors, it remains a gap on his CV.

Andy Murray won it in 2016, but he won't be at the O2 in London either. We British like to see the past tennis decade as a four-way rivalry: but if there is indeed a fab four, Murray is Ringo... who was a damn fine drummer, if not a terribly flashy one (listen to Rain again if you doubt me).

How many grand slam titles would Murray have won had he been around at any other time in history? Twice, maybe even three times, as many as the three he has managed? But perhaps his greatest gift to the nation is not just those two wonderful Wimbledon victories, but the notion that tennis goes beyond a single summer fortnight on south-west London.

Tennis is an 11-month event, and the thrilling shifts in these endless rivalries are at the heart of the sport. Now that Britain is more tuned into this, the ATP Finals are held in London and there is increasing competition for the UK rights to the big events. This year the US Open was only available on Amazon Prime, but the ATP Finals, on BBC2, are easier to watch.

THE YEAR-END NUMBER ONE will be Djokovic, but he's far from guaranteed victory in London. At the Paris Masters, the Serbian was unexpectedly beaten in the final by 22-year-old Karen Khachanov from Russia. Khachanov isn't high enough ranked, at 11, to make the ATP Finals, but Alexander Zverev, Marin Cilic, Kevin Anderson, Kei Nishikori, Dominic Thiem and John Isner are ready to give Federer and Djokovic a hard time.

There will come a day when Federer, Djokovic, Nadal and Murray will retire, rather than withdraw temporarily through injury; and while they're wondering what to do next, the young shavers will be picking up the big titles.

But right now, the next event is still about Federer and Djokovic. Winning or losing, or even dropping out, they still make the going and the headlines.

Lisbeth the third

Stieg Larsson's favourite no-nonsense, tattooed computer hacker heroine is back – in the guise of The Crown's Claire Foy

PIPPI LONGSTOCKING MIGHT seem a curious inspiration for one of the most talked-about movie heroines of the 21st century, but the nine-year-old star of the innocent postwar children's books was a touchstone when Swedish journalist Stieg Larsson sketched out the character of Lisbeth Salander.

Like millions of other children in his homeland and across the world, Larsson grew up reading the adventures of the pigtailed girl whose unconventional behaviour exasperated adults. He kept her in mind when writing The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo, the first volume in his Millennium series of novels that kickstarted a publishing phenomenon.

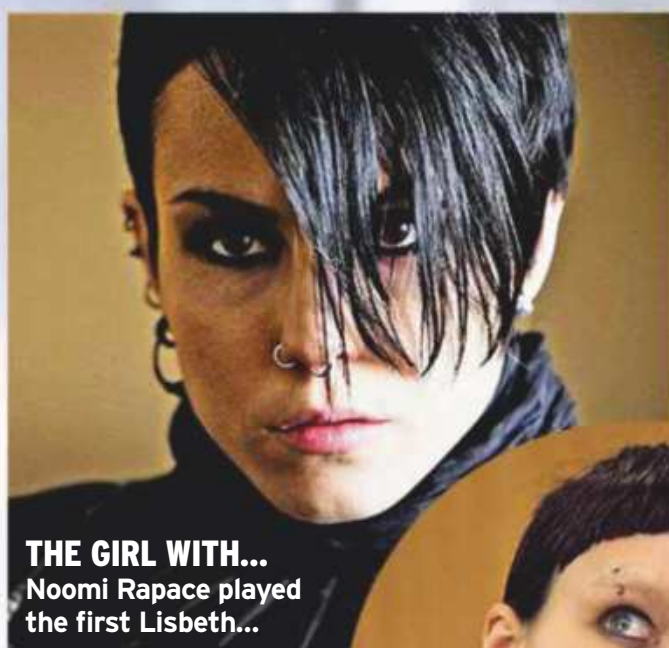

"My point of departure was what Pippi Longstocking would be like as an adult," he revealed. "Would she be called a sociopath because she looked upon society in a different way and has no social competence?"

In purely visual terms, Lisbeth arguably belongs in a timeline that would include Jamie Hewlett's Tank Girl and Lara Croft, although the world she inhabits is bleaker than any comic book or computer game. To label her a vigilante is to overlook the backstory of her harrowing upbringing, and the political landscape of the far right on the rise in northern Europe.

As an investigative reporter, Larsson worked tirelessly to expose neo-Nazi groups in society (not unlike the Millennium books' male protagonist, Mikael Blomkvist), so it stands to reason they would never be far from the surface in his fiction writing. More significantly, perhaps, his Lisbeth is a brilliantly constructed conduit to examine the aggression and cruelty of a male-dominated society; the original Swedish title of Dragon Tattoo is Men Who Hate Women.

The author died of a heart attack in 2004, before the first book was even published, but he had completed three of what he'd envisaged as a ten-volume series. It was enough to take the publishing world by storm, with combined global sales nudging towards 100 million, leading inevitably to big-screen adaptations.

Lisbeth's arrival in cinemas in 2009 was an integral component in the emergence of what's become known as Scandi noir, book-ended by the 2007 Danish TV crime thriller The Killing and Danish-Swedish co-production The Bridge (2011). All are heavy on realism and graphic violence, but whereas the small-screen offerings by and large follow the route of typical police-procedural drama, Dragon Tattoo and its sequels (The Girl Who Played with Fire, The Girl Who Kicked the Hornet's Nest) present more visceral, less regulated portrayals of wrongdoing.

THE GIRL WITH...

IT WAS IMPORTANT, therefore, that the screen version of Lisbeth would not be sanitised, an edgy vehicle for an otherwise glamorous "name" actress looking to take a walk on the wild side. In casting Noomi Rapace as the victimised goth computer hacker with nerves of the coldest steel, the producers of the original Swedish trilogy found a brilliant performer who, given comparatively little dialogue across the three films, perfectly conveys a hybrid sense of vulnerability, empathy and defiance.

Considering the same genuinely shocking rape scene is a key component in all three films, Rapace is to be applauded for not letting it become the defining characteristic of Lisbeth.

It's a much deeper, more nuanced woman that appears on screen, albeit one created to represent the evil that men do.

Fans of the source novels took Rapace to their hearts, but were concerned how the character would fare come the inevitable Hollywood treatment. Many breathed a sigh of relief when David Fincher was announced as the director of the US Dragon Tattoo, confident he would imbue the film with the same dark atmosphere he'd brought to Se7en, Fight Club and Zodiac.

Thankfully, the core of Larsson's troubled misfit remained intact with Rooney Mara, whose underplayed reading of Lisbeth brought her Oscar and Golden Globe nominations (following on from Rapace's Bafta nod for the original film). Naysayers may point towards the occasional oversimplification in Fincher's film, but there was more than enough evidence to suggest Lisbeth would live to fight her way through another day.

That day arrives this week with the release of The Girl in the Spider's Web (in cinemas from Wednesday 21 November), based on the first post-Larsson Millennium novel, written with his estate's blessing by fellow Swede David Lagercrantz.

Mara hands the baton to Claire Foy, adding another remarkable role to a CV that already includes a Golden Globe and an Emmy for The Crown and early Oscar buzz for her portrayal of Neil Armstrong's wife in First Man.

Tellingly, Lagercrantz's two series books thus far (The Girl Who Takes an Eye for an Eye was published last year) are more streamlined affairs, 150 pages or so shorter than Larsson's, suggesting he's writing with one eye closely on film adaptations. Let's hope that's the case because, while often hard to look at without flinching, Lisbeth Salander is a tough, triumphant woman who speaks to a certain stripe of moviegoer in a voice that refuses to be silenced. TERRY STAUNTON

Back to the Future ★★★★★

Truly timeless

The default "what if...?" of time travel is: if you could go back to 1930s Germany between the Reichstag fire and the declaration of war, would you kill Hitler? How you might practically go about this is a moot point; your action would certainly change the course of history.

Much less imbued with tragedy is the idea Bob Gale and Robert Zemeckis had in 1980. They imagined a skateboarding teen going back 30 years by automotive accident; in his efforts to reset the clock, he risks snuffing out his own future existence by interfering with the courtship of his parents, who got together at high school in 1955. If it sounds cutesy on paper, bear in mind that when Marty McFly (rising TV star Michael J Fox, inset below) attempts to get his dorky future dad, George (Crispin Glover), together with his shy future mom, Lorraine (Lea Thompson), she becomes infatuated not with George, but with their future son. Paging Dr Freud!

It took writer/producer Gale and producer/director Zemeckis five years to steer their wittily intricate sci-fi fantasy to fruition in 1985. Exec producer Steven Spielberg saw its potential and it was such a smash, it spawned a $970 million-grossing franchise.

Fox's cheeky vivacity was matched by the eccentric manic vroom of Christopher Lloyd, also hot from TV (in his case playing damaged Reverend Jim in Taxi), and the surrogate father-son partnership never got old. As for his parents, how could it get any worse for Glover and Thompson? In the establishing modern-day scenario, George is bullied in adulthood at work, Lorraine's a miserable alcoholic. If you haven't seen it for a while, you'll still love the way they turn out. The film is full of grace notes amid the zippy mayhem: Marty orders a "Pepsi Free" (the '80s decaffeinated cola) at a diner and the server growls, "If you wanna Pepsi, pal, you're gonna pay for it!"

What if... in a future Back to the Future, Marty went back and sorted out Hitler. If only life were that simple.

Too old to fight, too proud to ask

In the mountains of poverty-stricken Nepal, thousands of Gurkha ex-servicemen who live with the constant threat of earthquakes and monsoons, depend on us for their survival. They are veterans of numerous UK military campaigns stretching back to World War I.

With your help, The Gurkha Welfare Trust can pay these proud men, or their widows, a pension - allowing them to purchase basics like food.

Will you give £29 today which could pay for nearly two weeks' pension? Your gift will help repay our debt of honour and allow these courageous veterans to live in the dignity with which they served.

100 years since World War One, remember our Gurkha veterans

The Gurkhas have fought by our side for two centuries, including in World War One (where 19,000 Gurkhas lost their lives). As we commemorate the 100th anniversary of the end of the war, now is the time to stand by Gurkha ex-servicemen; gallant veterans, many in their eighties and nineties, who want nothing more than to live in their Nepali homeland with security and dignity.

FILM OF THE DAY

David Brent: Life on the Road

★★★ 10.20-11.55pm BBC1 15

COMEDY At just over 90 minutes, this latest outing for former Wernham Hogg manager David Brent ("You probably know me as the star of the BBC2 documentary The Office"), written, directed and co-scored by Ricky Gervais, provides the franchise's longest sustained cringe. Brent embarks on a loss-making UK rock tour with hired backing band Foregone Conclusion, performing songs with such meaningful lyrics as: "Then to Gloucester, I get a Costa, hard shoulder, coffee holder." The franchise's naturalistic mockumentary style is second nature to supporting players like Tom Basden, Tom Bennett and Diane Morgan (TV's Philomena Cunk), but the funniest moments come from Brent's needy interactions with rapper Ben Bailey Smith (at one tipsy juncture involving the N-word). It coasts somewhat on our familiarity with Brent's ticks – the incontinent giggle, the guilty look to camera, the bitten-lip grin – but, as the tragedy unfolds, you'll find that even a monster can earn your sympathy. DAYTIME

The Devil-Ship Pirates ★★★

2.15-4.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

SWASHBUCKLER Christopher Lee received top-billing for the first time in this agreeable Hammer excursion into costume drama. He's the Spanish captain looting the English coast during the Armada era, who hits on a daring plan to save his crew when his ship runs aground – seal off the area and convince the locals Spain has conquered England. Hammer delivers its usual top-notch production values and Lee indulges in some splendid swordfighting. AJ (UK 1964)

The man from Hammer, p52

Star Wars Episode I: the Phantom Menace ★★★

5.50-8.10pm ITV U

SCI-FI That vital sense of wonder is sadly missing from writer/director George Lucas's first prequel to his original Star Wars films. Forget the overworked plot about Queen Amidala (Natalie Portman) trying to stop the Trade Federation invading her peaceful planet with help from Jedi Knights Qui-Gon Jinn (Liam Neeson) and Obi-Wan Kenobi (Ewan McGregor). Marvel instead at the CGI wizardry and fizzing action that's just enough to keep nostalgic wistfulness at bay. AJ (US 1999, some violence, HD)

EVENING

A Beautiful Mind ★★★

6.15-9.00pm Film4 12

BIOPIC The true story of maths genius John Forbes Nash Jr, who won the Nobel Prize for economics while battling paranoid schizophrenia, is tailor-made Oscar fare (it won four). It has the triumph-over-tragedy theme going for it, plus a powerhouse performance from Russell Crowe in the lead. Nash is presented as a difficult man with a complex psychological condition who has devoted his life to an almost insurmountably dry subject, namely advanced mathematics theory. Sadly, the film's desire to be taken seriously gets in the way of the story. AC (US 2001, some violence, HD)

Dracula ★★★★★

9.00-10.35pm Horror Channel 15

HORROR Bram Stoker's creation becomes a modern classic in the hands of the House of Hammer. The film was epoch-making in its impact, thanks to the fabulous gothic atmosphere, Terence Fisher's stylish direction and the fact that the undead tale was shot in gory colour for the first time. Christopher Lee's interpretation of Dracula is astonishingly fresh, heroic and powerful, while Peter Cushing makes an ideal Van Helsing. The pair's climactic battle is justly acclaimed as a magic movie moment in the history and development of the horror genre. AJ (UK 1958, violence)

Anger Management ★★★

9.00-11.10pm W 15

COMEDY Adam Sandler gives a relatively restrained performance here as a mild-mannered businessman who is ordered into anger management under the counsel of spirited shrink Jack Nicholson. The doctor's methods are unusual, to say the least – he moves in with Sandler while making a move on his girlfriend Marisa Tomei – but director Peter Segal never really mines the comedy that this pairing and premise deserve. However, this gets by on sheer star power, Nicholson being one of the very few Hollywood actors who can out-shout Sandler. IF (US 2003, violence, swearing)

Bad Neighbours 2 ★★★★★

9.15-11.05pm C4 15

COMEDY This sequel winningly subverts the traditional college comedy while remaining authentically ribald. Scripted by five men, including star Seth Rogen and returning director Nicholas Stoller, it's a surprisingly feminist film that takes on sexism and has a ball doing so. With 30 days before the sale of their house can go through, Rogen and Rose Byrne are once again at the mercy of teenage neighbours, this time in the shape of a rule-breaking sorority led by Chloë Grace Moretz. Moving at a fair old lick, Bad Neighbours 2 feels fresh and even incendiary as it frantically tackles taboos head on. EAS (US 2016, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Shaun of the Dead ★★★★★

11.05pm-12.50am ITV 15

COMEDY HORROR Just as Londoner Shaun (Simon Pegg) decides to get his life back on track, the capital becomes Zombie Central. Pegg and director Edgar Wright first hit their stride with cult Channel 4 series Spaced, and this opening instalment of their Cornetto trilogy once again showcases their talent for offbeat humour. Shaun's mates are played by familiar TV faces including Spaced's Nick Frost, The Office's Lucy Davis and Black Books's Dylan Moran. But the real stars are his mum, the wonderful Penelope Wilton, and stepdad, Bill Nighy, who move the splatter farce into more resonant areas. AJ (UK/US/Fr 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Survivor ★★ 11.05pm-12.50am C4 12

ACTION Milla Jovovich stars in this standard thriller, playing a US government officer in London who must prove her innocence and evade a terrorist assassin (Pierce Brosnan) after being framed for a bombing in the British capital. Slick action unfolds in various London and New York locations, but production values are just window-dressing for what is quite a straightforward "woman on the run" story. JL (US 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

PICK OF THE REST...

DISASTER MOVIE Fans of wrestler-turned-actor Dwayne Johnson – and I am one of them – will appreciate a triple bill that also includes the Arnie-apeing Hercules and low-key crime thriller Snitch. But this is the main event, an adrenaline-assisted blockbuster employing state-of-the-art digital artistry to wedge us amid the collapsing buildings of what boffin Paul Giamatti notes is “the largest magnitude quake in recorded history”. With the geological stakes high, a pulverised Hoover Dam is little more than an appetiser; the vast thrill ride’s emotional focus is Johnson’s LA fire-department helicopter pilot, who’s intent on saving estranged wife Carla Gugino and daughter Alexandra Daddario. A committee-written script veers between sincere and ironic, but San Andreas is whipped to visual crescendo by relatively inexperienced director Brad Peyton (who teamed up with Johnson again for this year’s behemoths-run-amok spectacular Rampage). Nothing is subtle, and Ioan Gruffudd’s cowardly tycoon is a copy of Richard Chamberlain’s engineer from The Towering Inferno, but Johnson, a human edifice, is more than equal to the preposterous destruction. And if even three films on the trot isn’t enough Johnson for your tastes, you can find Skyscraper coming to OnDemand this week on page 39. (US 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
The 1906 quake that wrecked San Francisco, killing 3,000, is the biggest yet and was re-created in 1936 movie epic San Francisco brings a refreshing period realism to the tale of two sisters that allows Emma Thompson’s respectful Oscar-winning script to flourish. Kate Winslet’s spirited Marianne is the stand-out performance in a solid display of ensemble acting, but the mystery remains why Lee, who is the first director to win Berlin’s Golden Bear twice, was not among the film’s seven Oscar nominations. DP (US 1995)

Pleasantville ★★★★★
6.20-9.00pm Syfy 12

FANTASY This movie has more special effects than Jurassic Park, but many are so subtle you barely notice them. Tobey Maguire and Reese Witherspoon play sparring siblings who, while fighting over the TV remote, get zapped inside Maguire’s favourite soap, a re-run of a 1950s series called “Pleasantville”. How the youngsters’ modern attitudes induce unfamiliar feelings in the show’s two-dimensional characters is the basis of this affectionate comedy. And how these emotions are depicted by the encroachment of colour into their monochrome lives is where the film’s brilliance lies. It’s a clever concept, beautifully acted by a top-notch cast. DA (US 1998, swearing, col/BW)

A Northern Soul ★★★★★
10.00-11.15pm BBC2 15

DOCUMENTARY Shame on the BBFC for taking offence at a few F-bombs and slapping a 15 certificate on Sean McAllister’s compelling snapshot of Hull during its 2017 stint as the UK City of Culture. This should be essential viewing for everyone, including kids of the age that warehouse worker Steve Arnott is striving to inspire aboard the Beats Bus, bringing hip hop music to primary schools in some of the most deprived parts of Humberside. However, this isn’t all quaint and cosy as McAllister explores Arnott’s marital difficulties and his mounting debts, as well as his concerns for his own ageing parents. The camerawork is jittery, the editing jagged, but this reinforces the energy of the people forever having to defy the odds just to survive. DP (UK 2018, swearing, HD)

Hercules ★★★
10.10-11.50pm C5 12

ADVENTURE The third Hercules movie of 2014 was by far the most successful as director Brett Ratner here finds the right balance between self-deprecating humour, heart and epic action. Having completed the mythical 12 labours, Hercules (an imposing Dwayne Johnson) struggles to live up to his demigod reputation so turns mercenary with a five-man army of loyal followers. Ratner papers over the cracks with exciting battle scenes filmed on huge studio and backlot constructs, enhanced by key CGI, that send the adrenaline racing. AJ (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

The Danish Girl ★★★★★
11.00pm-1.20am ITV3 15

DRAMA The story of how Danish landscape painter Einar Wegener became a woman named Lili Elbe is the focus of this tasteful, no doubt sanitised yet emotionally powerful biopic. Eddie Redmayne gets top billing as Wegener, but Tom Hooper’s follow-up to Les Misérables is actually focused on his artist wife Gerda (Alicia Vikander). It begins in 1920s Copenhagen, with Gerda asking her husband to pose in women’s stockings to enable her to finish a painting. Wegener is intrigued and begins to experiment with cross-dressing, giving his female alter ego a whole new name and identity. Vikander is sensational in that rarest of things: a love story about a woman who finds her inner strength while letting go. DW (US 2015, sex scenes, HD)

DAYTIME

The Day the Earth Stood Still ★★★★★ 10.15am-12.05pm More4 U

SCI-FI Director Robert Wise’s sci-fi classic has had an incalculable influence on big-screen science-fiction. Aided by Bernard Herrmann’s otherworldly score and Lyle Wheeler and Addison Ehr’s deceptively simple designs, Edmund H North’s script deftly pokes fun at the Red-baiters who had done so much to foster the Cold War nuclear scare. His notion that children accept what grown-ups are too cynical to see has continued to resurface, notably in those Spielberg landmarks Close Encounters of the Third Kind and ET. Michael Rennie is a revelation as Klaatu, exuding dignity, sympathy and authority in a role that was originally intended for Spencer Tracy. DP (US 1951, BW, HD)

The Battle of the River Plate ★★★ 12.30-2.30pm BBC2 U

WAR DRAMA Though this true-life Second World War drama hardly rates alongside A Matter of Life and Death and The Red Shoes on the CV of writing/producing/directing duo Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, it is a tale well told and features some impressive location work – not least at sea in the Mediterranean. Peter Finch pulls off a noble German officer (no mean feat in a British war film, even in the 1950s), captain of pocket battleship Graf Spee, the pursuit of which forms the basis of the action. Despite a surfeit of naval detail and some rather obvious shipboard sets, the climax in Montevideo makes it worthwhile viewing. AC (UK 1956)

The Emperor’s New Groove ★★★★★ 2.55-4.30pm C4 U

COMEDY In director Mark Dindal’s refreshingly hip take on the mismatched buddy genre, David Spade voices Emperor Kuzco, the arrogant young South American ruler who is transformed into a llama by his power-hungry adviser, Yzma (Eartha Kitt). Kuzco’s only chance to reclaim his throne rests with affable peasant Pacha (John Goodman). Just as Aladdin was built around the quick-fire personality of Robin Williams, Spade brings his rapier-like sarcasm, vocal dexterity and brilliant timing to the proceedings, making it a colourful, stylish and rather more adult endeavour. AJ (US 2000, HD)

★★★★ 10.45pm-12.55am BBC1 12

ACTION In light of the devastation wrought in Infinity War, there's something rather quaint now about the second Captain America film, directed by the Russo brothers in 2014. Flashing forward 70 years from its wartime origins story, we find a cryogenically youthful Steve Rogers (Chris Evans) now working for SHIELD. Meanwhile, his one-time best buddy (Sebastian Stan) breaks bad as the assassin of the title. Our man is air-assisted by Falcon (Anthony Mackie), while conspiracies, terrorists, satellites and a helping of gravitas from Robert Redford enhance the escalating action. The Masque of the Red Death ★★★★★
11.00am-12.50pm Horror Channel 15

HORROR This is the best of director Roger Corman's Edgar Allan Poe adaptations, with Vincent Price as the devil-worshipper trying to keep the plague at bay in 12th-century Italy by indulging in degenerate revels. There are touches of wicked humour, but the aura of terror comes from the doom-laden tone Corman creates by reaching as much into sombre Ingmar Bergman territory (the poignant tableaux showing crimson-cloaked Death stalking through fog-shrouded woods) as atmospheric Hammer shock. AJ (UK/US 1964, violence)

Paper Towns ★★★
6.50-9.00pm Film4 12

ROAD MOVIE The consequences of a nerdy Florida teen's infatuation with the free-spirited girl across the street shape this adaptation of the bestseller by John Green. Nat Wolff's protagonist is far too uptight to hang out with Cara Delevingne's independent night-owl, but the one evening when she does call on his help proves a pivotal moment in his deepening affections – and the catalyst for her sudden subsequent disappearance. Credibility isn't the movie's strongest suit, but there are some useful insights into the downside of youthful romantic obsession. TJ (US 2015, some swearing, sexual references, HD)

No Place for Jennifer ★★
9.00-10.45pm Talking Pictures TV PG

DRAMA It's hard to believe that this tosh was one of the biggest box-office hits of 1949. Eleven-year-old Janette Scott (daughter of Thora Hird) plays the tormented girl whose vanishing act brings about a change of heart in divorcing parents Leo Genn and Rosamund John. Scriptwriter J Lee

Thompson (the future director of the startling Cape Fear) obviously had little enthusiasm for the task of adapting Phyllis Hambledon's penny-dreadful No Difference to Me, while director Henry Cass fails to inject any sense of agony or urgency into the search. DP (UK 1949, BW)

Enigma ★★★ 11.35pm-1.55am
Paramount Network 15

THRILLER Before The Imitation Game uncovered the life of mathematician Alan Turing, this romantic thriller offered a fictionalised account of the work of the codebreakers at Bletchley Park. Dougray Scott is the man racing against time to crack the latest German cipher. He also suspects that Saffron Burrows, with whom he is infatuated, is a spy. This well-acted wartime intrigue is commendable for the intelligence it assumes on the part of the audience, but the effect is spoiled by a superfluous, high-adventure ending. AC (UK/US/Neth/Ger 2001, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo ★★★★★
9.00pm-12.10am Sony Movie Channel 18

THRILLER Purists will prefer the Swedish-made adaptations of novelist Stieg Larsson's Millennium trilogy, which cemented his bankability and made an international star of Noomi Rapace. But if an English-language version must exist, let Se7en's David Fincher be at the helm. Steve Zaillian (American Gangster) adapts and Rooney Mara gives abused hacker Lisbeth Salander a new set of tics, with Daniel Craig suitably Scandi-looking as journalist Mikael Blomkvist. The pair investigate historic murders of women with biblical names, linked to a wealthy industrialist's family, in a chilly, dark tale authentically shot in Sweden and discordantly scored by Trent Reznor and Atticus Ross. The Crown's Claire Foy goes from toff to goth to play Salander in a new adventure The Girl in the Spider's Web, out in cinemas from tomorrow (see feature, page 30). (US/Swe/UK/Ger 2011, violence, sex scenes, nudity)

COMEDY DRAMA Michael Relph directed his father in this sentimental affair that gave Harry Secombe an opportunity to prove there was life outside The Goon Show. Here he has to decide whether to stick with the family's struggling music-hall act or audition for opera supremo Alexander Knox at Covent Garden. The end-of-an-era atmosphere is splendidly established and the supporting cast is full of familiar faces, but this lacks the social realist relevance of Tony Richardson's The Entertainer (1960). DP (UK 1958)

Jack Reacher: Never Go Back ★★★★★ 9.00-11.20pm Film4 12

THRILLER Tom Cruise is back as Jack Reacher, who is made a fugitive after being wrongly accused of murder, which also means breaking a date with Major Turner (Cobie Smulders). That's OK, though, because she's on the run, too. They must prove their innocence and, in another cliché, a feisty teenager (Danika Yarosh) is thrown into the mix. Director Edward Zwick (Blood Diamond) makes sure the Cruise isn't upstaged in some slickly staged punch-ups. SP (US 2016, violence, HD)

Straight Outta Compton ★★★★★

BIOPIC Gangsta rap pioneers NWA brought the everyday struggles of black youth in LA to international audiences, attracting controversy and acclaim in equal measure. Director F Gary Gray's stroke of genius is to take a rags-to-riches tale and shoot it in the style of an action movie, complete with sex, drugs and violence. The young actors playing the rappers are uniformly charismatic, particularly Jason Mitchell as reformed real-life gangster Eazy-E, while the visceral impact of the music is lovingly (and loudly) re-created. LB (US 2015, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

WARTIME ROMANCE This skilful adaptation of Michael Ondaatje's novel is at heart two love stories, one in the present, the other told in flashback. Ralph Fiennes plays the hideously burned "English patient" tended to by Juliette Binoche's nurse at the end of the Second World War. His torrid story is pieced together, while Binoche falls in love with bomb disposal officer Naveen Andrews. It's an ambitious film and director Anthony Minghella's skill lies equally in his screenplay, which delivers explanation in fragments and keeps us involved for an epic running time. AC (US 1996, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Stalag 17 ★★★★★ 4.20-6.40pm Film4 PG

WAR DRAMA Composer Franz Waxman's military march gets you in the mood for what the New York Times described in 1953 as a "cracker jack movie entertainment". Stalag 17 was rewritten by director Billy Wilder and Edwin Blum from the Broadway play by former PoWs Donald Bevan and Edmund Trzcinski. It won William Holden an Oscar in the role of a self-serving wheeler-dealer and made good comic use of Laura director Otto Preminger as the commandant. The film's defiant attitude reminds us of less muddy Allied prison-camp capers The Great Escape (with which this shares a moonshine subplot) and The Wooden Horse. There is a Bilko-like spirit to the prisoners, too, but Wilder makes the most of corrosive suspicion about an informant to add dramatic depth. (US 1953, BW, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Donald Bevan was also a cartoonist and after the war he drew comic portraits of the stars for Sardi's restaurant in New York

Total Recall ★★

6.40-9.00pm Sony Movie Channel 12

SCI-FI This remake of Arnie's 1990 hit stars Colin Farrell as a factory worker who, in search of excitement, visits a company that implants false memories. After the procedure goes awry, he learns he's really a spy, his loving wife (Kate Beckinsale) is not who she seems, and his dream woman (Jessica Biel) is real. There's much to enjoy here, but what was once an inventive concept now feels routine, with director Len Wiseman focusing on overblown effects at the expense of plot or credibility. AJ (US 2012, violence, swearing, nudity)

The Numbers Station ★★

9.00-10.55pm Movies4Men 15

THRILLER John Cusack stars in this low-key effort as an undercover agent who's assigned to guard a programmer (Malin Akerman) at an isolated US base in the English countryside. However, their survival is soon paramount when the duo comes under attack. Cue lots of running around dimly lit corridors with little excitement to show for it. Cusack does tortured and morose as well as anyone, but when the film starts to harvest elements of the Bourne saga, the game is up for this by-the-numbers washout. JA (UK/US/Bel 2013, violence, swearing)

The Village ★★

9.00-11.10pm Syfy 12

HORROR M Night Shyamalan's reputation has been built on his way with a twist ending, and this continues the tradition set by The Sixth Sense and Signs. Set in an unspecified time and place, this beautifully photographed tale concerns an isolated rural community that seems idyllic – except for the creatures that inhabit the surrounding woods. The villagers respect the territory of these rarely seen beings, but the uneasy truce is challenged when Joaquin Phoenix steps across the boundary line. Shyamalan uses just about every trick in the book to create a sense of unease, incorporating spooky woods, creepy music and things that go bump in the night. However, in trying to top his previous films, he piles on the twists until the story buckles. BP (US 2004, violence)

The Hangover Part III ★★

11.05pm-1.10am C5 15

COMEDY The final instalment of the initially hilarious franchise ends up in Las Vegas where the whole saga began. This time, the Wolfpack of Bradley Cooper, Ed Helms and Zach Galifianakis are forced to find nutty Ken Jeong and a cache of stolen gold because, you guessed it, they've "lost" buddy Justin Bartha again. But with much of the running time devoted to plot and exposition, this disappointing blockbuster can only anticipate rather than offer any genuine comic moments. KK (US 2013, swearing, sexual references, brief nudity, HD)

Air Force One ★★★★★
10.00pm-12.25am C5 15

THRILLER When Harrison Ford took on the role of a fictional, fit President of the USA in 1997, he managed to ascend the steps to Air Force One without a piece of tissue paper stuck to his shoe like today's incumbent. Had that happened, the film, directed by action specialist Wolfgang Petersen, may not have grossed $315 million at the box office, ending the year as the fifth-highest grossing film worldwide. Ford's Potus is a decorated Vietnam War veteran, which comes in handy when his plane is hijacked by Gary Oldman's Eastern European separatist after take-off from Moscow and the First Lady and First Daughter are taken hostage. It's expertly plotted by screenwriter Andrew W Marlowe (creator of ABC's Castle), scored by Jerry Goldsmith and directed by Petersen, and the constant thrum of flight heightens the tension. Meanwhile, Glenn Close brings order as the Veep in the situation room. Ironically, it's the current incumbent's favourite Ford film. (US 1997, violence, swearing, HD)

COMEDY This sequel sees Will (Simon Bird), Simon (Joe Thomas) and Neil (Blake Harrison) head down under to reunite with Jay (James Buckley), who boasts of his new life in Oz. Motivated by romantic entanglements, the boys head off on a backpacking adventure that will see them flirt with disaster once again. Creator/directors Damon Beesley and Iain Morris stick with a familiar approach in terms of humour, but mix in enough freshness to guarantee this is no mere retread. JL (UK 2014, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

ROMANTIC THRILLER In this hugely entertaining slice of escapism, Kevin Costner and Whitney Houston fall in love amid a highly charged atmosphere of jealousy and death threats. Director Mick Jackson created a wildly successful film, much to several critics' snooty chagrin, teaming the megastars with a daft but jaunty script, a rock soundtrack and a few well-staged exciting moments. Costner is a trifle stern, but Houston makes a very creditable acting debut, and the result is great fun. SH (US 1992, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

BIOPIC The 1995 Rugby World Cup in South Africa forms the basis of director Clint Eastwood's heart-warming drama, which shows how newly elected President Mandela used the tournament as a catalyst to bring his divided nation together following the end of apartheid. As Mandela, Morgan Freeman is suitably statesman-like, while Matt Damon is less convincing but still serviceable as rugby captain Francois Pienaar. CP (US/Safr 2009, swearing, HD)

ACTION "This is stupid", says disabled hero Dwayne Johnson during outlandish action in this Die Hard meets The Towering Inferno in Hong Kong disaster piece.

It's hard to disagree while still thrilling to the laughably melodramatic mayhem dispensed by director Rawson Marshall Thurber, who uses his star's charisma to elevate silly escapism. Johnson plays a security assessor who has cleared the world's tallest building as safe for residential use. But when the 96th floor is set ablaze by terrorists searching for an incriminating hard drive, Johnson is framed for the deed while trying to rescue his family trapped above the fire line.

It's harebrained and hair-raising – with vertigo inducing aerial stunts – and loaded with cardboard villains and daft dialogue, while the hi-tech tribute to The Lady from Shanghai is a great finale surprise. Alan Jones (US 2018, some violence, swearing, HD)

Sherlock Gnomes ★★

U

Released 19 November on DVD, Blu-ray and download

Although the voice cast is a stellar one (James McAvoy, Emily Blunt, Johnny Depp, Chiwetel Ejiofor), this second slice of "gnome-grown" animation after Gnomeo & Juliet (2011) is a tad disappointing.

Turns out gnomes across London are being kidnapped. But Sherlock Gnomes (Depp) and Dr Watson (Ejiofor), sworn protectors of the city's garden folk, are on the case. The adventure is efficient enough, with many chucklesome moments. But it lacks the simple, pun-packed fun of Gnomeo & Juliet, and many of the Holmesian allusions will be lost on kids unfamiliar with the character. The DVD includes making-of featurettes. Dave Aldridge RT Offer To order the DVD for £15.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting reference RT1677. I've got Box Set Guilt

But who has time to watch everything, asks Alison Graham

OH I NEED help. I have a very modern malaise. I have Box Set Guilt. There's so much to see, but I can't watch it all and I feel bad. What if I'm missing out? What if I watch eight episodes of some rubbish while neglecting something that in five years everyone will tell me was one of the great classics of the age? (I hate it when people do that.)

Sometimes (only sometimes) I long for the olden days when you watched something or you missed it. If you missed it, hey-ho, it might turn up next year as a dusty repeat if you're lucky. But at least you knew where you were. Once it was gone, it was gone. You might feel a brief prickle of pain, but the wound never ran deep.

Now with catch-up services, streaming and so on, we are not only encouraged to watch entire series of new shows, we are also expected to watch again something we've already seen. In an interview as the final Black Earth Rising approached, its auteur, Hugo Blick, suggested that viewers should watch the whole thing again to discover its every detail and nuance.

'Going back to a series seems like an indecent frittering away of time'

Oh Hugo, what are you doing to me? I don't have time to watch everything once, let alone repeatedly. It's too much of a luxury. Besides, what's wrong with making everything clear in just one go? I wouldn't expect anyone to read this column more than once (really, I wouldn't), so why should television be any different?

DON'T GET ME WRONG. I loved Black Earth Rising, but I ended up simply staring at it, lost in its artistry and beauty and the mesmerising performance of a fierce Michaela Coel. As for what the hell was going on... Well, I had only a limp grasp. But watch all eight hours again? Somehow that seems like an almost indecent frittering away of precious time.

But does this mean that once The Little Drummer Girl is finished I'm supposed to watch that again, too? Because it's so deep and complex and nuanced and it's up to me to watch it to bits to drag out every atom of meaning? Can I really bear to watch again six episodes of Alexander Skarsgard as taciturn Israeli agent Gadi being moodily distant? Or, to put it more bluntly, arsey? Nope, don't think I can.

This is where Box Set Guilt presses so hard that it leaves a mark. I have to watch everything again and I have to watch all of the new stuff. "Have you seen Succession?... Have you seen The Exorcist?... Have you seen The Marvelous Mrs Maisel?" Gawd, I'm getting flashbacks to when everyone wanted to know, "Have you watched The Wire?... Have you watched The West Wing?... The Sopranos?"

Where will it all end? Probably with me dithering myself into stasis, leaving me so mutely stricken by Box Set Guilt that I can bring myself to watch nothing. I will live out my days doing little except looking for patterns in the wallpaper while someone feeds me tiny squares of toast.

THE LEGACY OF LINE OF DUTY

The Interrogation of Tony Martin (Sunday, C4) is a so-called "verbatim drama" based on police interviews with Norfolk farmer Tony Martin, who became a cause célèbre in 1999 after he shot two burglars at his isolated farmhouse. One, 16-year-old Fred Barras, later died. Yet I wonder if it would ever have been made had the public's appetite for closely filmed and lengthy police interrogation scenes (albeit entirely fictional ones) not been tweaked by Line of Duty.

It's a highly effective way of presenting a real-crime drama/doc, given added piquancy by the fact that Daniel Mays, who was on the other side of the table as a bent cop in Line of Duty, plays the police sergeant who questions Martin (The League of Gentleman's Steve Pemberton).

1 ACTING UP The Kominsky Method Netflix

Michael Douglas is a washed-up actor, teaching his craft to naive wannabes, in a new comedy from the creator of Two and Half Men that's got just enough self-deprecating charm to get away with being, at time, unapologetically unreconstructed. The highlights come when Douglas spars with Alan Arkin (above left) as a spiky but vulnerable talent agent.
Available from 16 November

SEE EVERY EPISODE 5 Bad Move ITV Hub

Essentially a rural remake of Jack Dee and co-writer Pete Sinclair's fantastic Lead Balloon, this less sophisticated ITV sitcom has the same satisfying formula of a grump whose schemes forever go awry. Kerry Godliman is faultless as Dee's wife, while Philip Jackson and Miles Jupp are among the scene-stealers in a fine supporting cast. It's bedded down and improved in series two. Series 2 ep 1 on ITV Hub until 23 Nov; series 1 available on Netflix

CATCH UP 6 Old People's Home for Four-Year-Olds All 4 (C4)

Another devastatingly lovely series of the social experiment – it's moved to Nottingham for this longer, second run – in which freewheeling tots invade a retirement home where the residents are losing their joie de vivre, to see if friendships can form and scars can heal. They absolutely can, even if it's not always easy or immediate, and it's enormously rewarding to watch it happen.

ESSENTIAL DOCUMENTARY

2 Ambulance iPlayer (BBC1)

Greater Manchester is now the location as the Bafta-winning documentary moves into its fourth series, but the overall picture is the same. As well as attending regular medical emergencies, overstretched paramedics try their best to swoop in when people with mental health issues fall through cracks in society that are only getting wider. It's an essential frontline report, filled with humanity as well as pain.
Ep1 available until 23 Nov

3 Home Front Heroes iPlayer (BBC1)

FRESH DRAMA FROM INDIA

4 Mirzapur Amazon Prime

A gangster saga that tracks the criminals who run the northern Indian city of Mirzapur, and the teenagers (and their girlfriends) who see organised violence as the way to rise above the crowd. The show certainly glamorises that violence, but its attempt to ape the operatic mischief of a Scorsese or Tarantino film often comes off.
Available from 16 November

OUTSTANDING DOCUMENTARY

7 Quest: Surviving in America iPlayer (BBC4)

This Storyville film must have been a labour of love for director Jonathan Olshefski, who spent eight years returning to a single family in a poor black Philadelphia neighbourhood. As the Rainey's undergo a series of setbacks against a background of poverty and violence, their resilience and quiet optimism soon leave us heavily invested, hoping that things might turn out OK for them.

The Berlin techno scene backdrops a crime/conspiracy thriller that paints an authentic picture of the dark rush of clubbing, then uses it as a convincing setting for corruption and horrible violence happening just out of ordinary people's eyeline. European secret services identify an indefatigably hedonistic, well-connected club promoter as their man on the inside of the city's underground. It's overblown but undeniably exciting.

SEE THE ORIGINAL

Widows

Amazon Prime

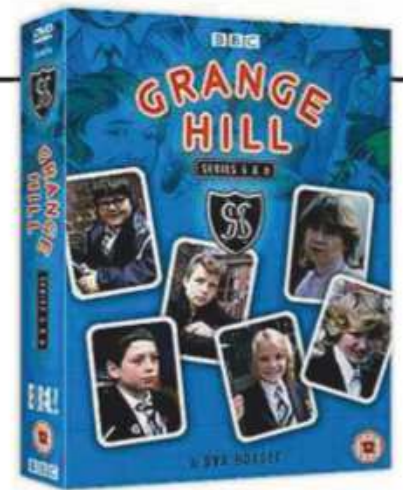

Cannily, Amazon's picked up both series of a cracking Lynda La Plante drama that aired on ITV in the 1980s – because, improbably, it's been remade as a film by 12 Years a Slave director Steve McQueen. Fiona Hendley, Eva Mottley, Ann Mitchell and Maureen O'Farrell are the original gangsters' wives who, when a robbery goes wrong for their husbands, take on the job themselves.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Flipping 'eck, Tucker, we're back!

In some ways Grange Hill was a disastrous idea for a TV drama: making young viewers who'd just spent a day in school go right back there again at teatime. But by presenting them with much worse scenarios than most would ever experience, the real thing didn't seem so terrible after all. Besides, creator Phil Redmond knew exactly what he was doing when he launched the show in 1978. And by series five in 1982, he had the felicitous formula of pranks and grit down pat, largely handing over scripting duties to others while he devised Brookside – and later Hollyoaks.

The front line of Tucker, Alan, Benny, Trisha and Cathy were now veterans, but were boosted by a battalion of catchy freshers, among them artful dodgers Jonah and Zammo, ever-hungry Roland and frizzy-haired argument-starter Annette. But a cheeky scamp is only as good as a gruff grown-up, and Michael Cronin's firm-but-firm Bullet Baxter remains one of TV's most memorable teachers.

Grange Hill usually turned out a terrifying villain, too, and in the snarling, bequipped Gripper Stebson (Mark Savage), the writers had Semtex. He kicked off with a little light extortion, but by series six his bullying had turned nasty. Redmond was never afraid to grab big issues by the scruff of the neck as if they were unruly pupils, and after racism came drug addiction, teenage pregnancy and Aids.

So although the early days had a Billy Bunter-esque naivety to them, Grange Hill was always much more than stinkbombs, flying sausages and kids saying "schewpid". This set of adventures may begin with tiffs at the tuck shop, but sex education, stranger danger, a teacher's suspension and a tragic accident are added to the mix.

Here was a children's show that never talked down... even if the children were forever talking back.

DOCTOR DIGITAL

The new sound of the BBC

Doctor Digital has never understood the draw of podcasts. As far as he's concerned, the main benefit of headphones is blocking out people talking on his commute.

But the BBC certainly thinks podcasts are the future. It noted that only three per cent of under-35s used the BBC iPlayer Radio app, and so has dumped it for BBC Sounds (bbc.co.uk/sounds), which combines live radio and catch-up programming with podcasts and featured tracks.

Programmes can be downloaded for listening offline, and it retains the iPlayer Radio app's pleasing interface, based around a big rotating dial. Yet like most post-Netflix apps, it's focused less on the radio schedule than personalised recommendations based on algorithms and curated playlists. It's certainly a streamlined way of listening to the BBC's ever-expanding output. However, some may find this limiting.

Apple remains the name to beat, with a vast collection that includes the BBC among many other creators, although the iPhone app, Podcasts, feels increasingly out of date. It's under pressure from Spotify, which has started featuring podcasts alongside music, while Overcast allows you to speed up whatever podcasted conversation you're listening to without distorting the audio. JONATHAN HOLMES

BLACKPOOL ROCKS
Tess Daly and Claudia Winkleman hold court in the hallowed Tower Ballroom

PICK OF THE DAY Strictly Come Dancing 6.45pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Apart from winning the entire competition, the celebrities have several goals to aim for. One is to join the Over-30s Club, Lauren Steadman's term for recipients of more than 30 points by the judges. Another is getting to Blackpool, and tonight eight of them have done just that. Traditionally this is when viewers start voting for the really good dancers rather than those with pleasing personalities but less than twinkly toes. I'll stick my neck out (although not much) and predict that Faye Tozer and Ashley Roberts will be performing on the Tower Ballroom's sparkly dancefloor, almost certainly joined by Joe Sugg and Stacey Dooley. But it's too dangerous to guess who else will have got this far. Even Craig Revel-Horwood seems to be hedging his bets in his half-term report (page 10).

One thing you can be sure of is that "iconic" will be the word of the night. Strictly is incapable of uttering the words Tower Ballroom without prefacing them with "iconic". JANE RACKHAM

International Rugby

2pm BBC1/2.30pm Sky Action, Main Event/5pm BBC2, BT Sport 2/6.10pm C4

SPORT Sandwiched between matches against Australia and South Africa, Wales v Tonga (k/o 2.30pm BBC1) is ostensibly a chance for Welsh head coach Warren Gatland to blood future stars. England v Japan (k/o 3pm Sky) could be a similar story, although next year's World Cup hosts looked lively against the All Blacks.

Scotland v South Africa follows (k/o 5.20pm BBC2/BT Sport 2); the Scots will take heart from the Boks misfiring display against England.

The night ends with arguably the match of the autumn, with Grand Slam winners Ireland taking on Rugby Championship victors New Zealand (k/o 7pm C4). JAMES GILL

Holst and Vaughan Williams: Making Music English

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY In a delightful film exploring the friendship and music of Gustav Holst and Ralph Vaughan Williams, Amanda Vickery and Tom Service retrace the steps of the two composers as they roamed the Cotswolds and Malverns, determined to foster a "national music" for England, influenced by vanishing folk song and rediscovering Renaissance masters such as Tallis.

The hosts sift through photos and letters and visit old haunts, but it's all about the music, played in irresistible snatches by the BBC Concert Orchestra. PATRICK MULKERN

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA There's a new boss at Stockholm nick: Alex, formerly of Interpol. She talks quietly and takes her glasses on and off a lot, so you know that she is A Serious Woman Doing an Important Job. Steinar the Nordic god, however, has not taken so well to being supplanted when he considered that the job was his, until Beck torpedoed his chances.

But everyone must try to work together (although Steinar almost derails the inquiry by being hotheaded) when a woman is found dead at the foot of her stairs by her young daughter. It wasn't an accident and, when the cops dig deeply into the victim's background, they find all manner of troubles.

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Casualty

9.10pm BBC1

DRAMA The love of Dylan's life, Ciara, is once more wheeled into the emergency department, a picture of defeated misery, after she's attacked by her brutal, enabling husband, Joel.

Dylan polishes his armour and mounts his charger ready to ride into battle to rescue her, but surely he's just one more overbearing bloke who thinks he knows what's best for a damaged woman robbed of all control over her life.

Connie tries to persuade Ciara (Belinda Stewart-Wilson – see top of page 45) that she needs help, well away from her toxic marriage, but in a surprisingly effective and quite moving episode, it's up to Ciara to take that crucial first step. But Joel is determined not to let go... AG

DOCTOR IN DISTRESS

When will Casualty's (9.10pm BBC1) Dylan catch a break? It was just a few months ago that his estranged wife, paramedic Sam Nicholls, died in a dramatic motorway pile-up, and now he finds himself at the centre of yet more heartbreak.

After striking up a relationship with Ciara (Belinda Stewart-Wilson, right), he had to deal with the devastating news of her ectopic pregnancy. Just as he discovered he was going to be a father, it was snatched away when she miscarried. William Beck, who plays Dylan, states that the storyline was "not very hard to act. You just have sympathy for everyone concerned."

This week, Dylan describes their relationship as "an absolute disaster waiting to happen", as Ciara returns to the ED after suffering again at the hands of her nasty husband. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Kinks: Echoes of a World

10.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY It's a big month for musical half-centuries. The White Album and Astral Weeks turn 50, as does the Kinks' evocative Village Green Preservation Society. It's an album that didn't quite fit the psychedelic landscape of the time, containing (as Suggs puts it here), "a dangerous precipice of novelty".

But it enjoyed a renaissance in the 90s, being namechecked by Oasis, Paul Weller and, in particular, Blur. You could argue it was the first "Britpop" album. The aforementioned all contribute, as do the Davies brothers, although a lack of footage from the time means quotes come in the form of dramatic reconstructions, which take getting used to. GARY ROSE

Snowfall

10.45pm BBC2

DRAMA Suddenly it's dog-eat-dog in this fable of the 1980s drug business (with a heavy subtext that, you know, it's really about American business in general). All the main characters are slowly, bit by bit, selling their souls for money, but now we learn how far they'll go, and who they're willing to betray. All standard drug-saga stuff but Snowfall does it with a classy, slow-burn approach that pays dividends now and then.

This week, hothead Kevin is on the point of betraying Franklin, so he can take revenge on the mobster he wants to kill, while Latina entrepreneur Lucia confronts cousin/rival Pedro. Did he know his nice, helpful fiancée was an undercover DEA cop? DAVID BUTCHER

Ed Sheeran: Radio 2 in Concert

11.30pm BBC2

DRAMA Names don't come much bigger in pop at the moment. Singles from Ed Sheeran's third album dominated commercial radio last year, with Shape of You the biggest-selling 45 of 2017 both here and in the USA, and the LP itself ending up as the most popular of the year worldwide. His latest tour began in Turin in March 2017, ended its most recent leg in Atlanta this month, resumes in Sao Paulo in February and has so far earned around £250 million in ticket sales.

Ed Sheeran is huge. Yet here he is, probably armed mostly with just an acoustic guitar, bashing out the hits in a special performance recorded two nights ago in the little old BBC Radio Theatre. JACK SEALE

BIC MAC'S BACK

Michael McIntyre's Big Show

8.10pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The format's been the same for three series but you can never be sure what you're going to get with this likeable entertainment show. Other than the frenetic Michael McIntyre, who is effortlessly slick at this kind of thing.

There was no preview available, but you know he's going to have a lot of fun hijacking Holly Willoughby's mobile in the irresistible Send to All segment. In the surreal Midnight Gameshow (in which McIntyre creeps into someone's bedroom during the night to surprise them, yet amazingly is always warmly welcomed – I'm not sure I'd be so accommodating), a woman from the Wirral gets the shock of her life.

Also, prepare to get a little misty-eyed because the Unexpected Star of the Show features the oldest star yet – 91-year-old David. JR

The man from Hammer

The Devil-Ship Pirates ★★★

2.15pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Jimmy Sangster was a key figure in the spattered history of British Gothic. An assistant director and production manager at Hammer, he was tasked with penning Quatermass follow-up X the Unknown in 1956, despite protesting, "I'm not a writer." He subsequently found himself the scribe of horrors The Curse of Frankenstein, Dracula (review, p33) and The Mummy, while 1964's The Devil-Ship Pirates (review, p33) showed he could knock out a good adventure yarn, too. He passed away in 2011, aged 83. ANDREW COLLINS

Parents behaving badly

☑ Mom and Dad ★★★ 9.45pm Sky Premiere

This slick, pitch-black horror satire sees midlife crisis turn into midlife mania when parents inexplicably feel compelled to slay their offspring. Nicolas Cage harnesses the ham to hilarious effect as the brooding dad and, together with Selma Blair as his wife, delivers some sharply observed musings on life ("Stay single or live long enough to become clichéd"). Tense and unnerving rather than sloshing in gore, Brian Taylor's film delivers real chills, including a nerve-frazzling sequence in a maternity ward. JEREMY ASPINALL

Coldplay: a Head Full of Dreams ★★★★★

Amazon Prime

Having only just hit cinemas, this portrait of world-conquering band Coldplay is now available on Prime. Mat Whitecross's film may not be as sensational as Supersonic, his feature about Oasis, but it's refreshingly free of rock clichés and brims with archival footage going back 20 years. JAMIE HEALY

JUNGLE RUMBLE
Holly Willoughby and Declan Donnelly wait for the new batch of celebs

Uefa Nations League

1.00pm, 4.30pm Sky Football/ Main Event

SPORT After last month's eerie encounter behind closed doors, England welcome Croatia for the reverse fixture in the Nations League (kick-off 2pm). That match was surreal for anyone who tuned in, but just think of fullback Ben Chilwell, who made his international debut that day. At least if he gets another call-up he won't have to worry about his singing voice being heard during the national anthem. Highlights on ITV at 11.10pm Northern Ireland have still failed to pick up a point in the inaugural Nations League ahead of their final match against Austria (k/o 5pm). The results leave the side on the brink of relegation from League B.

JAMES GILL

Doctor Who

6.30pm BBC1

DRAMA Another Broadchurch alumna joins the Doctor Who universe this week alongside Jodie Whittaker and series boss Chris Chibnall – Julie Hesmondhalgh, probably still best known for her role as Hayley Cropper in Corrie.

Here, though, she's a long way from Weatherfield or Dorset, as a woman working for a moon-based intergalactic delivery company, who may be involved with a mysterious conspiracy the Doctor and her chums are trying to uncover.

Lee Mack also guest stars in the Pete McTighe-scripted episode and, if you listen carefully, you might notice another of Whittaker's old murder mystery co-stars in a subtle voice cameo... HUW FULLERTON

Dynasties

8.00pm BBC1

NATURE "Emperor penguins are beautifully designed for many things," narrates David Attenborough, "but mating is not one of them." And in a hilarious sequence we see what he means.

But while penguins are often funny, much of this stunning doc is distressing, because the Antarctic is such a cruel place. Chicks often freeze to death, but the sight of a tiny chick, abandoned in a deep crevasse and struggling to climb to safety, is especially heartbreaking.

This species already endures terrible hardships including six weeks without sunlight, starvation and blizzards, but global warming may be the death of them. JR

PICK OF THE DAY I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here! 9.00pm ITV

REALITY For the first time in I'm a Celeb's 16-year history, the buzz is less about who is going into the jungle and more about how Holly Willoughby is going to be able to fill that Ant McPartlin-shaped hole beside Dec Donnelly. Inevitably there will be a different vibe with this pairing but come on... we all coped with Dec's solo hosting of Saturday Night Takeaway, so surely we can manage this?

As for the rumours, the names of Harry Redknapp, Frankie Bridge, Kate Garraway, Brendan Cole, Nick Knowles, Rita Simons, Danny Dyer, Fleur East and Malique Thompson-Dwyer have all been mentioned in the tabloids.

It's anyone's guess which of them – if any – are off for several weeks of hell in a hammock, although Cole and Dyer would be fun. Whatever the line-up, tonight's introductory show sees the squeaky clean and neatly pressed celebs meeting their camp-mates before Holly and Dec (sounding like a Christmas carol) wave them off to jungle purgatory. JANE RACKHAM

MAKING A MONSTER

Described by the BBC as “a giant graphic novel bursting into life”, and after wowing in the West End, stage show Golem (10.30pm BBC4) is being televised. A mesh of animation, clay stop-motion, live performance and musical accompaniment, it is loosely based on Gustav Meyrink’s 1915 novel The Golem and tells a cautionary tale of mass consumption in a world where we want for nothing.

Drab office worker Robert has his very ordinary life turned around when he invests in a Golem – a curious clay creature who obeys his every command, gets him a promotion and on the surface, appears to greatly improve his life. That is, until his Golem takes on a life of its own and everything appears to unravel.

It’s the third production from Margate-based theatre company 1927, who are currently working on a new show called Roots, which will premiere in the US in May and the UK next summer. FRANCES TAYLOR

Discovering... Rhapsody in Blue: George Gershwin

8.00pm BBC4

MUSIC There aren’t many pieces of classical music that knock you sideways the first time you hear them. But George Gershwin’s Rhapsody in Blue is one of them – and is still in a class of its own when it comes to taking popular music and giving it the full orchestral kitchen sink.

This is the first of an occasional series taking great 20th-century classical works and dissecting what makes them tick – in this case the rhythms of 1920s New York jazz. Previews weren’t available but it’ll be interesting to hear what conductor Thomas Dausgaard and the musicians of the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra – who also perform the piece in full – have to say. DAVID BUTCHER

The Little Drummer Girl

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA In a slow but absorbing episode, actress and supposed terrorist moll Charlie crosses a big line. The role she’s been rehearsing since she was abducted by Israeli spy master Martin Kurtz blossoms and becomes tremendously real.

Florence Pugh is magnificent as Charlie as the gears of her new life shift and slot into place and she faces a series of tests. But the dangers are immense and her puppetmasters, Kurtz and Gadi, wonder if she’s ready.

There are some good scenes between Pugh and Alexander Skarsgard’s Gadi, her “handler” (ahem), as they circle around their own strong feelings for one another. Oh, and the music is lovely... AG

Louis Theroux’s Altered States

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Should death ever be a choice? In one of his best and saddest films yet, Louis Theroux meets people in America taking control of the end of their lives, hoping to die on their own terms. Seven states now offer the terminally ill the right to take lethal medication – provided they can self-administer.

In California, Louis meets Gus, who was enjoying retirement until he was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and given a few months to live. With his extended family around him, Gus seems still to have a full life: watching him play with his baby grandson is a joy. But Gus has made a drastic choice and watching how that plays out is extraordinary. DAVID BUTCHER

The Interrogation of Tony Martin

This is, of course, a true story, one that in 1999 convulsed the nation, and the entire episode is described as a “verbatim drama”, with every uttered word taken from police transcripts and witness statements. Daniel Mays and Stuart Graham are impressive, too, as the detectives who deconstruct Martin’s account of what happened.

At the end, the real Tony Martin returns to his boarded-up, derelict farmhouse, named entirely appositely Bleak House, for the first time since the night of the shootings. He is fiercely unapologetic and unrepentant. AG

Drillbit Taylor ★★★ 4.30pm Sky Comedy
Owen Wilson, star of Drillbit Taylor, Meet the Parents (also showing today on Sky Comedy) and Father Figures (Friday Sky Premiere), has been defying the ravages of time for years with his boyish blond thatch and clear blue eyes. But today he hits 50. Earlier this year he admitted it felt "weird" to be reaching such a milestone, recalling when his buddy Woody Harrelson hit his own half century, and thinking to himself, "That does not feel right. How can golden boy be 50?" Now it's your turn, Owen; you may be six years behind Woody, but you're still a haircut ahead. TOM FOLLEY

Simply Syms

The Moonraker ★★★
7.20pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW
Sylvia Syms found stardom in her early-20s as a delinquent in My Teenage Daughter (1956) and a nurse in war drama Ice Cold in Alex (1958). At 84, she still narrates BBC2's Talking Pictures series and recently starred opposite Peter Bowles in the British film Together. Today, she stars in The Moonraker opposite George Baker, her second film with the future Inspector Wexford after No Time for Tears in which she played... another nurse. ANDREW COLLINS

Mickey's historic journey

Steamboat Willie DisneyLife
It's 90 years today since Mickey Mouse chugged his way into cinemas as the star of the first fully synchronised sound cartoon. Walt Disney himself provided the voice for the cheeky rodent, and the scene with Mickey whistling is now familiar as the logo for all films from Walt Disney Animation Studios. JAMIE HEALY

SUSPICION
Cat (Carolina Main) doesn't trust her dad Jim (Adrian Dunbar)

PICK OF THE DAY Blood 9.00pm Channel 5

DRAMA New series Line of Duty's Adrian Dunbar stars as a well-regarded doctor in a small Irish town and the head of a family torn by suspicion and grief. These fault lines crack wide open when his daughter Cat becomes convinced that he murdered her mum, his wife, and passed it off as a tragic accident.

Blood is a bit of a novelty, as it's an original Channel 5 drama and is stripped nightly across the week until Friday. The opening, feature-length episode is effective and absorbing, even though there are a couple of superfluous horror-movie shock moments.

Carolina Main (Unforgotten) is Cat, who long ago left the tiny community and her family, including two siblings, to live a bigger life in Dublin. Inevitably being back home is the catalyst for an explosion of secrets as, incrementally, she becomes sure of her dad's guilt.

A Matter of Life and Debt

11.00am BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE Seeing the word "debt" in the title may make your heart sink because there are so many shows about this depressing subject. But this is a pleasantly uplifting and informative series about community banks that aren't out purely to make a profit from their borrowers.

People with low incomes or poor credit history often don't qualify for high-street borrowing, making them vulnerable to illegal loan sharks and pay-day loans. But today we hear the positive stories of two small ventures helped by ethical loans: a car saleswoman who opened a dog-grooming business and a chef wanting £3,000 to expand her restaurant business in the Peak District. JANE RACKHAM

QUIZ Victoria Coren Mitchell drops a delightful fact-nugget about her mum Dr Anne Coren in another tip-top contest, this time between the Birdwatchers and the Dicers (they like board games). To say any more would give too much away to anyone who's playing along at home.

The two teams are strong, though one has a run of bad luck as they almost but not quite hit on the correct answers, making Coren Mitchell wince in sympathy: "This is breaking my heart, but I can't give it to you." There are some regretful, exasperated cries from team members of "Oh yes!" at what seem like obvious answers once they are revealed, and some superb Wall-quizzing. AG

Fantasy Homes by the Sea

8.00pm Really

PROPERTY Former Watchdog co-host Michelle Ackerley has found a tidy niche for her breezy presenting style, playing up-market estate agent to people seeking coastal solace. Her debut mission is to help London absconder Sally scour the Hastings area for a home featuring the three "S"s: station, social life and sea. They have an acronym for the likes of Sally in these parts: Filth – Failed in London Try Hastings. Charming.

Still, her budget of £300,000 for a two-bed place should be enough. She falls for a quaint cottage up a twitten. But, as all house-hunters know, there's always a catch. Here, the loo comes off the kitchen. Will Sally's dreams be flushed away? GARY ROSE

Poisoning America: the Devil We Know

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY So many of us have Teflon-coated pans in our kitchens, but have you ever thought about its manufacture? Watch this Storyville, and your blood will boil.

It's an Erin Brockovich-style story about the poisoning of a town in West Virginia, home to a DuPont plant that made Teflon, one ingredient of which, C8, has been proved to be toxic. Yet DuPont knowingly dumped C8 into the Parkersburg water supply for years, causing a range of appalling ailments. Their reasoning? It was cheaper than reformulating Teflon. We follow the citizens and lawyers seeking restitution in a huge class-action suit that involved some 70,000 people. GILL CRAWFORD

The mystery of who "E" can possibly be has now been solved on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV), with the contact on Nick's phone revealed as his secret wife Elsa. (Not, as I'd thought, Emily Bishop or even new EastEnders boss Kate Oates trying to poach actor Ben Price.)

Of course, this revelation has gone down particularly badly with Leanne, who you always know is getting indignant when she starts folding her arms, rolling her eyes and talking as fast as Ena Sharples in high dudgeon. Elsewhere, tormented, off-kilter GP Ali Neeson, who has spent most of his time in Weatherfield thus far up to his wrists in other people's blood, is in danger of spilling some of his own when he gets on the wrong side of two burly bikers after going on a reckless bender.

You can expect luckless mum Michelle (who's now permanently got gauze, plasters and steri-strips to hand) to be left horrified by the state of her son's injuries. DAVID BROWN

My Brilliant Friend

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA New series This is HBO's first foreign language series, co-produced with Italian network RAI, based on the four Neapolitan novels by Elena Ferrante. It opens as a middle-aged Elena Greco discovers that her old friend Lila is missing; we then return to the scruffy neighbourhood in 1950s Naples where the pair first meet.

Ferrante fans will know what to expect: a darkly atmospheric, claustrophobic world, punctuated by blows and brawls. There is style, though, in its bleak naturalism, and its young stars – Ludovica Nasti in particular as the mercurial Lila – are brilliant. If you find yourself drawn in, be warned: this is set to be a four-series, 32-episode epic. It continues tomorrow. HANNAH SHADDOCK

People Just Do Nothing

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

SITCOM Krupt FM is relaunching online with tens of global listeners (occasionally) tuning in. Sadly, some of their less than complimentary comment posts test the patience of that master of deluded narcissism that is MC Grindah. Things are also looking pretty bleak for Grindah's girlfriend, Miche, who still hasn't told her other half about their imminent eviction and forced move from Brentford to Essex.

The most painful scenes come when Beats drops beloved, indolent stepson Craig at university and gets openly excited by the promise of "weed and chicks". Now in its fifth and final series, this comedy continues to be excruciating, oddly moving and sublimely funny. BEN DOWELL

First Dates

10.00pm C4

REALITY At over six foot, Danni is a tall woman. So, perhaps not surprisingly, she wants a big man (who also smells nice). Laid-back giant Aiden immediately ticks all her boxes but, like so many First Daters, she has something important to reveal about her past. His response surprises even her.

At another table a couple realise they've crossed paths at a previous dating event, while danger-loving George, 64, and 62-year-old Les both tell Fred Sirieix they're looking for someone with a bit of "get up and go".

Meanwhile, nervy property developer Daniel returns to the restaurant bearing a gift that clearly doesn't impress Fred – or his date – much. JR

TREMENDOUS

Driven: the Billy Monger Story 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Billy Monger was a highly promising, conspicuously talented F4 British racing driver when, shortly before his 18th birthday last year, he was involved in a high-speed crash at Donington. He suffered catastrophic injuries, was in a coma for three days, and both of his legs were amputated. But, as this marvellous film reveals, Billy (nicknamed Billy the Whizz) refused to be defeated after such a devastating accident (the footage is harrowing, Billy hit a stationary car at 120mph).

He's endlessly cheerful, affable and determined, jollying along everyone around him, including his supportive mum, dad and sister, as he strives to race once again. First, though, he must persuade racing authorities to drop a rule preventing disabled people from driving single-seater racing cars. With morale boosts from his hero Lewis Hamilton, Billy focuses his energies and he's such a tremendous young man, you'll want to cheer him on. AG See feature: page 26

A star upstaged

3.00pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

The Birth of a Nation and Night of the Hunter star Lillian Gish had nothing to prove by 1958, when she took the role of leading man Paul Massie's mother in this tense wartime drama. But director Anthony Asquith had to apologise after her part was cut to almost a cameo in the edit, making her star billing look redundant. And there was another sting in the tail for Gish, when sixth-billed Irene Worth was rewarded with a Bafta for her performance. TOM FOLLEY

New to Netflix today

The Man Who Knew Infinity ★★★★★ Netflix

Dev Patel has few blessings to count in this earnest portrait of genius mathematician Srinivasa Ramanujan, whose pioneering research didn't protect him from racist treatment at Cambridge University. On the eve of the First World War, Ramanujan is brought from India to England, where Professor GH Hardy (Jeremy Irons) is keen to work with him. Patel has a natural warmth that tempers his character's slight egotism and ultimately brings home the tragedy of Ramanujan's short life. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL

Murphy's law

48 HRS ★★★★★

9.00pm TCM

Eddie Murphy has never been better than in his exhilarating debut, back on TCM this week. It's still one of the best "buddy" cop thrillers ever made, with Murphy as the wisecracking con who is sprung from prison by gruff, racist cop Nick Nolte in an attempt to track down a pair of fugitives.

HITTING THE WALL
Can Raza (Nabhaan Rizwan) survive the undercover life?

PICK OF THE DAY Informer 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA At one point earlier in this series, the dialogue featured one of those chess-game metaphors that thrillers are so fond of, as the bearded Albanian crime boss tried to mess with our hero Raza's head. But the strength of Informer is that, on the whole, it hasn't drawn its story in black and white terms or relied on gambits we've seen before.

Instead it has steered its own quirky course through the streets and estates of east London, and continues that approach for tonight's concluding episode, with a handful of plot contortions that might wrong-foot loyal fans who have stuck with the show but definitely pack a punch.

If there's a downside, it's that Raza spends too long on the sidelines. As subtly played by Nabhaan Rizwan, he has been the soul of the story and, along with messed-up handler Gabe (Paddy Considine), feels like a character who could run and run.

DAVID BUTCHER

International Football

7.00pm Sky Sports Main Event;
7.40pm Sky Sports Football

SPORT Could Scotland v Israel (kick-off 7.45pm Sky Main Event) be the first Nations League encounter that genuinely feels it has something riding on it? The final match in League C could potentially lead to a wildcard spot at Euro 2020, a gift for Alex McLeish's side. The inclusion of veteran Steven Fletcher in the squad is a sign of Scotland's need for cool heads at this late stage.

Meanwhile, Gareth Bale is back in the squad for Wales v Albania (k/o 7.45pm Sky Football). But it's James Lawrence who could be the centre of attention in this friendly. The 26-year-old Anderlecht defender is the latest surprise call-up to Ryan Giggs's squad. JAMES GILL

MasterChef: the Professionals

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD There can be little worse for a professional chef than seeing Marcus Wareing spit out the food you've cooked for him and say, "There's not one bit of what you've done that has impressed me."

But while one poor soul is on the receiving end of that humiliation for his skills test, another does brilliantly at it. His signature dish gets plaudits, too, with Wareing unable to find fault in anything he has cooked, so he's clearly one to watch.

One thing for future contestants to note is that Wareing, Monica Galetti and Gregg Wallace are not great fans of "deconstructed" anything.

Lego Masters

8.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT Tonight, on this marvellously inclusive celebration of ingenuity and imagination, the six remaining teams are asked to do one of the things that bricksmiths enjoy most. Lego freaks love designing and building either creatures or vehicles, and on this occasion it's a land-and-sea hybrid animal. Then it's time to leave the Build Room for a second challenge where sheer scale is the theme as well as invention: on a golf course, the teams must demonstrate their working, life-sized crazy golf holes.

This week's guest judge is Chris Ramsey, a stand-up comedian whose childlike sense of fun and obsession with Lego should make him perfect for the show. JACK SEALE

Saluting Dad's Army

8.00pm Gold

DOCUMENTARY Tonight's delightful wander through Walmington-on-Sea draws out the personalities of Dad's Army's front line, both in the cast and crew. Many attest to Arthur Lowe being like Mainwaring and vice versa. Even his son Stephen Lowe says, "He thought he was the captain of the ship... they teased him rotten about it."

Radio Times photographer Don Smith, however, hints at a softer side with a sweet story about being on set in 1973. The programme upholds the "opposites attract" theory in relation to the writers: extrovert Jimmy Perry and quietly calm David Croft. And tribute is paid to unsung heroes including set designer Paul Joel, who had to rustle up a working clock-tower interior. MARK BRAXTON

There are three possible reasons as to why Linda (right) on EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) is now siding with the deranged Stuart. She could be suffering from amnesia and has forgotten the last six months' worth of storylines. Or maybe this isn't Linda at all and Stuart has replaced her with an android substitute (the big Christmas Day storyline will see RoboLinda's circuitry and glowing red eye revealed to viewers).

Or – and this is what I seriously hope is going on – Linda is playing a long con where she's duping Stuart into believing she's ended things with Mick in a bid to get the horrible Mr Highway to admit his guilt. I mean, why else would she have turned her back on her husband so quickly? And let's face it, nobody would want to get on the wrong side of Shirley without good reason. When ShirI starts raging (as she does tonight when she chucks Linda and Stuart out), you'll still be able to hear her even if you switch over to ITV. DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

I'll Get This

10.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT Back to that London restaurant's cosy private room for another round of stilted parlour games. Adil Ray, Angela Scanlon, Scarlett Moffatt and Griff Rhys Jones all end up as foils to Janet Street-Porter, whose answers to why she would make both a good Bond villain and a good flatmate are just the sort of loose-tongued banter this show grasps for and mostly misses.

The energy levels do rise once the main courses and accompanying wine have been consumed – Scanlon in particular livens up – and it's all harmless, if negligible, fun. Who will lose and have to pick up the bill, which is hefty but presumably less than their appearance fee? It really doesn't matter. JS

The Reluctant Landlord

10.00pm Sky 1

SITCOM A range of different issues is giving Romesh headaches this week, including caring for a borrowed French bulldog, sitting next to a Michael Bubl  obsessive at a dinner, and a mystery customer from the brewery.

He does everything he can to avoid all of them, going as far as taking cocktail umbrellas with him while walking the dog, so he can mark where it poos, for his exasperated wife Natasha (Sian Gibson) to pick up later. In a tighter-plotted sitcom, all three strands would converge in a neat pay-off, but here each situation is such exquisite agony for Romesh that his hilariously petulant responses pile up one after the other in a mighty tower of sarcasm.

DAVID CRAWFORD

Car Crash: Who's Lying?

10.45pm BBC1 (Wales: 11.10pm; N Ireland: 11.40pm; Scotland: 12.30am)

DOCUMENTARY An immersive documentary that follows every step of the investigation into a road accident near Portsmouth in January 2016. A group of lads veered off a country road at night, killing 19-year-old Luke Fletcher and seriously injuring his friend. A third man emerged unscathed and immediately admitted to being the driver. As charges were about to be brought, however, new information came in and, agonisingly for Luke's family, it was months before the truth was confirmed.

Police interview and bodycam footage wrings all the natural drama out of the hunt for clues, but the programme never forgets what's important: a young life cut short. JS

The Final Table

Netflix

A cookery contest that's a sort of large-scale, international version of MasterChef: the Professionals. Twenty-four top chefs – we're talking Michelin-star level – from around the globe compete, in pairs at first, to cook the national dishes of nine different countries. Filmed on a vast black-and-neon set and with plenty of earnest mission statements from the contestants, it's one to try if you take your food seriously.

BOYS WILL BE BOYS

Marlwood School students David, Louis and Ross

9.00pm BBC2 (Scotland: 11.15pm)

DOCUMENTARY It's hard to watch this series without a background throb of sadness and anger. Which are, we gather, pretty much the emotions Marlwood School's teachers endure daily. "It's just the unfairness. Cut after cut after cut. The toll it takes on people is unbelievable," says assistant head Julie Thomas, fighting back tears.

What's so powerful about the crafting of the programme is the way it builds up a complex human picture of the life of a school in crisis, with teachers desperate to ensure the students get the best chances and embattled head James Pope reduced to insisting to staff, "The money is just... not... there!"

With the school in Special Measures and Ofsted inspectors due any day to check on progress (or the lack of it), the pressures on Pope are extraordinary. "Ultimately," he sighs, "like football managers, you're judged by results." DAVID BUTCHER

8.00 The Story of Wales
3/6. England and Wales. Huw Edwards picks up his narrative in 1485 as a young nobleman sails to the land of his fathers from exile in France on a mission to capture the English crown. His success unites England and Wales and for every generation of Welsh people to come, the consequences are huge. But exactly what it means – for the next 250 years, at least – depends on whether you're a landowner or one of the ordinary people. Director/Producer John Geraint First shown on BBC1 Wales (S) (HD)

9.00 The Quest for Bannockburn
1/2. Robert the Bruce's victory over the English at the Battle of Bannockburn helped to seal Scotland's future as an independent kingdom – but the actual location remains a mystery. Locke ★★★★★ 11.20pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Writer/director Steven Knight planned for Locke to be filmed as though it was a play, and he wanted the phone calls Tom Hardy's character receives in his car to be performed live. In order to achieve this, he assembled actors Olivia Colman, Ruth Wilson and Andrew Scott together in a room, leaving them with their scripts as well as some red wine and biscuits. Issuing them with the instruction, "Do what you would do on stage," Knight then set off with Hardy and the crew in the car. "Apparently, they had a great time while we were out in the cold," Knight said. TOM FOLLEY

Feather-brained fun

Storks ★★★★★ Amazon Prime

Parents may have to field some awkward questions after this animated caper. It's predicated on the notion that storks, who once delivered babies, now serve the online marketplace for consumer goodies. If writer/director Nicholas Stoller (Bad Neighbours) never really gets a handle on the plot, the visuals are spectacular and there are some nice running gags (the multitasking wolf-pack is a hoot). It's bright and breezy enough to divert little ones – even if they won't quite know what's going on. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Catch it while you can

Tower Block ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

The residents of a tower block come under attack from a sniper in this riveting thriller, leaving catch-up tomorrow. With the lifts booby-trapped and the exits obstructed, the killer has his targets in a corner. Sheridan Smith stands out as the heroine, while Jack O'Connell ably sends up his hardman persona. ALAN JONES

PATRON
A virtual Lord Sugar looms over the candidates in Glasgow's Kelvingrove Art Gallery

PICK OF THE DAY The Apprentice 9.00pm BBC1

REALITY Four-thirty in the morning: the phone rings and the candidates are told to pack their bags. They're off to Glasgow, and a briefing in the impressive Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum. It's one of those bizarre virtual meetings where Lord Sugar appears by video link on a plasma screen rather than in person, though I'm sure it's because, as he says, "I've been called away on some very urgent business," and not at all because he couldn't be bothered to make the trip.

The good news is, it's the art task, where we can always look forward to masterpieces of sales hokum as the candidates morph into cut-price Simon Schamas. "It's almost a journey, which for me, just continually moves and tracks through a kind of emotional kind of place," blusters one candidate as he (yes there are still men left in "the process") tries to sell a painting. What Lord Sugar likes to call "talkin' a load of Jackson Pollocks".

Paul O'Grady: for the Love of Dogs

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY It's not often that golden retrievers turn up at Battersea Dogs & Cats Home – they're a popular breed – but the staff find a healthy youngster tied to the railings outside. Surely Buddy's owners haven't disowned him?

Meanwhile, in the Windsor branch, Paul meets Humphrey, an 11-week-old terrier that belonged to a homeless person. Humphrey has every skin condition under the sun, so he's smelly and red raw from his constant scratching. Paul's smitten with the scruffy little mutt. He also learns about an extraordinary free vets' service that helps homeless people on the streets of London to care for their pets. JANE RACKHAM

The Secret Life of the Zoo

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Tonight's episode is all about the trials of parenthood. Or, put another way, it's about meme-worthy levels of cuteness from animal babies. Meerkats Huskie and Beagle become first-time parents and a fabulous mob of pups starts bundling around in comedy fashion. (Meerkat pups: the money shot of any zoo doc.)

Young spider monkey Laura is also hard to resist – black arms shooting out like an animated inkblot. The trouble is, her first-time mum is overprotective... And if you remember the excellent painted dogs K'mana and Ville from last year, their seven puppies are now a gang of teenagers, and quite a handful. DB

Grand Designs: House of the Year

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY So many of these architectural marvels are airy spaces furnished with maximum style and minimum clutter. But, whisper it, they can seem a bit same-y. You can't say that about one of tonight's shortlisted properties, which was built on a London site previously used for fly-tipping. The curvaceous three-storey structure looks as though it's made from rolls of corrugated cardboard balanced on top of each other. Extraordinary.

Kevin McCloud also visits a home in Northern Ireland designed around a wedge shape; a crisp, clean design using cantilevered boxes; and a magical loch-side crofter's cottage for the 21st century. JR

Trans Kids: It's Time to Talk

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Psychotherapist Stella O'Malley puts her head above the parapet of trans issues to present a humane and troubling film. As a child, O'Malley insisted she was a boy and made people treat her as such. "If I'd been a child today, I'm certain I would have transitioned," she says.

Here she talks to parents, trans people and academics to discuss the rapid rise in children being referred to NHS gender services. Discussion of the risks for children of taking hormones to change their bodies is rare – and hard. In a disturbing scene, O'Malley attends an event to debate trans issues where enraged protesters try to shut it down. DB

Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm, ITV) continues to get a heck of a lot of use out of its courtroom set, with the trial of Sally Metcalfe (Sally Dynevor) beginning in tonight's double bill (right). In fact, robes, wigs, gavels and judicial-looking half-moon specs are such a staple part of Corrie these days that I'm starting to think the costume department must have found a couple of crates labelled Crown Court in a dusty Granada store cupboard and decided the contents needed an airing.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

As for the actual legal proceedings, the highlight of day one proves to be slippery Duncan Radfield (Boo! Hiss!), who takes the stand and paints himself as an innocent victim who fell in love with Sally and was coerced into defrauding the council. I can't see the jury being taken in, if only because Duncan is played by actor Nicholas Gleaves, who's well known across the land for guest-starring as conniving, lubricious swines in every TV drama that's ever been made. DAVID BROWN

Zapped

10.00pm Dave

COMEDY Deadly demon Uta-Rhamen stalks Munty and our friends obviously don't have a clue what to do in the jolly fantasy caper's series-three finale. Steg has taken up dragon-spotting in the hope of finally having sex with the lovely Esme (Isy Suttie), while Brian joins the demon-defying local militia in the hope of making easy money.

There are some deliciously funny moments, especially from Mark Heap's cameo as bitter dragon enthusiast Florian. But the key to this show has always been its amiability, aided by some whip-smart plotting, which here brings everything together for a final scene that proves utterly joyous... not least because of its promise of another series.

BEN DOWELL

The South Bank Show

10.00pm Sky Arts

ARTS "Park and bark" is the term for what Danielle de Niese doesn't do. Picture an operatic soprano and you're probably imagining a woman in a colossal frock, standing stock still on the lip of the stage. But de Niese, an Australian-American of Sri Lankan heritage who was winning singing contests before she was ten, fully acts her roles and incorporates complex choreography, while soaring perfectly through the most challenging arias.

Hearing her explain her process to Melvyn Bragg, it's clear we're in the company of one of those very rare talents who redefines the limits of their discipline. She's good company as well: very razzle-dazzle showbiz, but reflective and analytical, too.

JACK SEALE

Get Shorty

10.10pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA We may have reached peak Get Shorty. The writers are like kids who keep spotting new things they can mess with. Look – monkey bars! We can have Miles meet Brian De Palma at a party. Hey – a tunnel slide! Let's spiral Rick's subplot into a thing with Heather Graham and bananas.

Characters corkscrew off in unforeseen directions that are nicely nuts – but plausible. Even shady corners of the story get comedy business, like the hardened FBI agents who suddenly develop into cineastes and decide Miles's movie definitely needs the Iranian cinematographer who's stuck on the no-fly list. All this and a revelation about studio boss Lawrence that could ruin everything.

SAFE SEX?

Dr Zoe Williams examines the pros and cons of the Pill

The Contraceptive Pill: How Safe Is It?

9.00pm BBC2

SCIENCE Trust Me, I'm a Doctor's Dr Zoe Williams presents an admirably clear, unhysterical assessment of the Pill, which has been at the centre of typhoons of scare stories and controversies since its introduction in 1961.

Three million women in the UK currently take the Pill, and Williams and the Horizon team survey 1,000 of them (aged between 18 and 45) to try to establish their views and fears.

The alarm over the Pill and its possible side-effects has rung frequently down the years. But, as ever, the statistics, at least without context, don't tell the entire story. Williams examines women's fears that the Pill can increase a woman's chances of developing breast cancer, blood clots and depression.

And will there ever be an effective male Pill? She looks at a current clinical trial. ALISON GRAHAM

The candidates head north to Scotland, assembling at the Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum in Glasgow, where Lord Sugar tasks them with becoming art dealers, including choosing a contemporary artist's work, selling it at a gallery event as well as selling merchandise adorned by the artwork in question. On day one, while schmoozing an artist works well for one team, their rivals' failure to gel leads to a tense atmosphere. The next day, at the gallery event, ignoring a corporate client creates a bad impression, while one of the candidates involved in the merchandising goes AWOL. It all leads to tension in the boardroom as both teams fight to avoid hearing the dreaded words. You're Fired is at 10pm on BBC2. See page 84.

Tootsie ★★★★★ 6.40pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Amazingly, Tootsie was not only Geena Davis's first movie, but was also her first audition. She was a catwalk model at the time she tried out for the part of Dustin Hoffman's dressing-roommate, which required acting in her underwear. When director Sydney Pollack reviewed her audition tape, he asked for a bikini shot of her, but she was working abroad, so could only send the Victoria's Secret catalogue that she had modelled in, "with those perfectly lit, airbrushed, wind-in-your-hair photos," Davis recalls. She got the part, admitting, "It was a ridiculous, ridiculous break to get!" TOM FOLLEY

Wonder Boys ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This quirky comedy drama from director Curtis Hanson (LA Confidential) stars Michael Douglas as an ageing professor whose life is on shaky ground: his wife has left him; he's having an affair with the college chancellor (and she's pregnant); he's struggling with his second novel; and he also has to deal with oddball student Tobey Maguire. Hanson weaves all of these threads into a mesmerising and often moving drama, complete with fascinating characters and a wicked sense of humour. JOANNA BERRY

Now on Netflix

Passengers ★★ Netflix

This romantic adventure is set on a spaceship bound for a new planet, where Chris Pratt awakens prematurely from hibernation and fixates on a sleeping stranger, played by Jennifer Lawrence. Sadly, the pair is set an impossible challenge of keeping a love story alive long past the point of no return. EMMA SIMMONDS

PICK OF THE DAY Tomorrow's World Live: for One Night Only 9.00pm BBC4

SCIENCE To think the BBC's flagship science show might have been called "To Be Announced". Creator Glyn Jones only came up with the title the night before RT went to press back in July 1965. But then there was always something excitingly seat-of-the-pants about Tomorrow's World.

The influential series ran for 38 years, fronted by a conveyor belt of hosts from the old-school (blazer-sporting Spitfire pilot Raymond Baxter) and the smooth (Michael Rodd) to the long-running (Judith Hann, for 20 years).

It soon became known for things going awry on live TV – Baxter later gamely spoofed both himself and the programme on The Goodies ("This entire studio is held together with string." Crash!). But the fact is that this was the first chance the public had to see new tech in action: the home computer, artificial grass, the digital watch, personal stereos and so on.

So in this one-off special, ex-Tomorrow people Maggie Philbin and Howard Stableford take a fond look back and a peek into the future. Though I won't consider the project complete without Johnny Dankworth's jaunty jazz theme and the show spelt out in cake, nails and fried egg. MARK BRAXTON See p18

Esther Rantzen's House Trap

CONSUMER AFFAIRS New series

Almost 400 older people fall victim to doorstep scammers every day. It's shockingly easy to persuade them to pay over the odds for shoddy or unnecessary work on their home, or trick them into parting with their savings. Consumer champion Esther Rantzen rigs a house with cameras to spy on rogue tradesmen as they attempt to fleece the vulnerable elderly residents – who are actually OAPs playing a part.

First to be investigated is a TV repair company that's making a fortune charging extortionate prices to fit new aerials. What will the sprightly Betty, 86, make of these fiddlers on the roof? JANE RACKHAM

Salisbury Nerve Agent Attack: the Inside Story

8.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Jane Corbin explores one of the year's biggest news stories, using new access to the official investigation into the Salisbury poisonings to paint a picture of how and why Russia might have tried to kill former double agent Sergei Skripal, years after he'd been released from prison over there.

She also travels to Russia to meet Skripal's family and friends, and to the USA to hear from the scientist who helped to develop deadly nerve agent Novichok – which didn't kill Skripal or his daughter, but did claim the life of local resident Dawn Sturgess. JACK SEALE

Gino's Italian Coastal Escape

8.30pm ITV (Wales: 11.20pm)

TRAVEL The Tremiti islands, an archipelago of bite-sized islands off the east coast of Italy, are known as the Pearls of the Adriatic for good reason. They're stunning. So although Gino D'Acampo arrives in pouring rain after a bumpy helicopter ride, you'll still envy him.

Having done some snorkelling (wading out of the sea like Daniel Craig's 007), he barbecues fish kebabs and makes a tagliata of rib-eye steak with a delicious salad. He also visits a former prison. "I can't believe they used to send people here as a punishment. This is paradise!" he gushes. Maybe not if you were incarcerated, Gino. JR Your RT Travel: page 142

Young Sheldon

8.30pm E4

SITCOM When Mary (Zoe Perry) has religious doubts after a teenage member of her congregation dies in a car accident, help comes from an unlikely source – one who tries to engage Pastor Jeff in conversation about octopus aliens. It's a thoughtful episode that rewards Perry and her screen mom Annie Potts with a lovely bar-room heart-to-heart.

The standout moment in a Halloween episode of Big Bang at 8pm, meanwhile, sees Howard (Simon Helberg, an excellent mimic) dress up and impersonate Sheldon. Johnny Galecki (Leonard) and Kunal Nayyar's (Raj) very natural-looking reaction to this in Caltech's cafeteria suggests Helberg kept the full effect from them at rehearsal. MB

Lucy Pargeter has been doing great work on Emmerdale (7pm, 8pm ITV) this year, but blimey, she must now be craving a storyline that sees Chas – I don't know – buy a new winter coat or make a mercy dash to the shops after running out of bourbon creams. Virtually every scene she's in ends with crying, an Alice Cooper mascara streak and the double nostril snot spillage (first perfected – trivia fans – by Corrie's Anne Kirkbride in 1979 when Deirdre thought Tracy had been killed in the lorry crash at the Rovers).

The catalyst for Chas's latest emotional crisis turns out to be a surprise meal that partner Paddy has prepared, all of which descends into a huge row that travels from the back room of the pub into the bar where, of course, it's witnessed by all the regulars. Prepare for decorations to be ripped down and Chas to be left sinking to the floor in tears as the Woolpack becomes the first boozer in Britain to launch Unhappy Hour. DAVID BROWN

Ambulance

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY We're back with the West Midlands Ambulance Service, when the winter NHS crisis was at its keenest and biting deeply. Crew after crew is sent on emergency calls during a busy weekend and at one point there are simply no ambulances left to dispatch.

But patients admitted to the Royal Stoke University Hospital face delays of many hours on trolleys in corridors, as pressure on beds becomes unsustainable.

Meanwhile, the Merit trauma unit – a doctor and a paramedic in a rapid response vehicle – are called out to a series of stabbings, and a crew dashes to the aid of a four-day-old baby who has stopped breathing.

ALISON GRAHAM

The First

9.00pm C4

DRAMA Oxygen levels have reached critical in this airless, listless space drama. It's set in the early 2030s, when not much has changed for wealthy Americans in terms of fashion or decor, but wit and humour appear to have gone out of fashion. Everyone carries themselves with a sort of sombre intensity and acts like a haunted poet. (These are scientists and astronauts, remember.)

There were lighter threads in last week's drinking scenes, but now we're back to sombre, as we explore tensions among the crew preparing for the journey to Mars, and hangdog mission commander Tom (Sean Penn) takes a small step in moving on from the grief that haunts him.

DAVID BUTCHER

Live at the Apollo

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

COMEDY Dara O Briain is your host in Hammersmith this week, performing with his usual flair: fast, smart and not bothering with the last few words of every other sentence. He's keen to get to the next joke and trusts you to keep up. An opening bit about gigging in Dubai as part of an international tour might hint at a comic who's too successful to write relatable material, but a good way round that is just to invent it. His story illustrating why virtual-reality pornography will never catch on is a belter.

The other acts are decent but unspectacular: Felicity Ward chats about Instagram faux pas and yoga, while Mo Gilligan's observations about family stereotypes feel like they need a polish. JS

Inside the Foreign Office

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This excellent series keeps returning to the "Sir Humphrey" of the Foreign Office, permanent under-secretary Sir Simon McDonald. He does his best to play the questions fired at him with a straight bat, but it's a bat that is well oiled with diplomatic charm.

It's hard to imagine such a sleek, careful character seeing eye to eye with a shoot-from-the-hip buccaneer like his political boss (at the time) Boris Johnson. One of the pleasures of tonight's programme is watching McDonald's top European official accompany Boris on a trip around Europe, as the latter pauses only to update his Twitter feed with videos and parade his French.

And in Ulan Bator, her majesty's ambassador to Mongolia promotes British trade, schmoozing the president at a one-to-one meeting – under a giant statue of Genghis Khan. DAVID BUTCHER

8.00 Salisbury Nerve Agent Attack: the Inside Story

RT Reporter Jane Corbin revisits the assassination attempt on former Russian spy Sergei Skripal and his daughter Yulia – the first nerve agent attack in Europe on record. In this Panorama special, Corbin gains exclusive access to the Salisbury investigation, hearing for the first time from frontline police officers, the Government's chemical weapons scientist, soldiers drafted in to decontaminate the city, diplomats and intelligence insiders. In Russia she talks to friends and family of Skripal, and in America she meets the scientist who helped develop the deadly nerve agent used in the brazen attack that led to the death of a UK citizen, Dawn Sturgess. See page 94.

The Killing of Sister George ★★★

12 midnight Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

The British Board of Film Classification's original notes on this adaptation of risqué play The Killing of Sister George runs to three folders. Banned by some local authorities, this portrait of a same-sex relationship between Beryl Reid and Susannah York includes the forced consumption of a cigar, language we would no longer consider rude and a "detailed lesbian scene". Then-boss John Trevelyan said the BBFC was "not prepared as yet to accept lesbian sex". Fifty years on, the film remains an 18 certificate. ANDREW COLLINS

Love and death

Truly Madly Deeply ★★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

It was dubbed the British Ghost, but this romantic drama is a far more witty and incisive affair. It's distinguished by the glorious performances of Alan Rickman as the dearly departed who returns and Juliet Stevenson as his grief-stricken partner struggling to come to terms with her loss. The film's emotional integrity shines through in every scene and director Anthony Minghella injects the pathos with some well-aimed humour. SUE HEAL

So long, FilmStruck

Subscribers to FilmStruck have just one more week to enjoy the service before it closes on 29 November. For the past two years, the online platform has hosted Hollywood classics as well as world cinema and art house favourites (including Magnolia, right). FilmStruck was also the exclusive streaming partner for Criterion titles; movie buffs can only hope they surface elsewhere. JAMIE HEALY

BOATING FOR...
Michael Buerk and John Sergeant, whose voyage gets off to a choppy start

PICK OF THE DAY Britain by Boat 8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY New series There's disaster right from the start of Michael Buerk and John Sergeant's salty adventure when their boat breaks down within minutes of leaving Lowestoft harbour.

So the lads, spreading their banter very thinly, make much of going off to find a pub. Buerk and Sergeant are old pals from their BBC journalist days and there's a lot of chat as their trip around Britain's coastline stalls before it's even begun.

Britain by Boat is an old-fashioned kind of show featuring two old-ish blokes joshing each other as they embark on a series of not very adventurous adventures. They slurp oysters during a trip ashore, take a look around a refitted boat that took part in the D-Day rescue and make jokes about finding the nearest source of booze.

You might feel sorry for the legally required crew of two professional sailors, Mungo and Stella, who seem to do all the hard work. ALISON GRAHAM

Unreported World

7.30pm C4

CURRENT AFFAIRS The idea most of us have of a gold rush is based on the start of a gold rush. Here, reporter Seyi Rhodes travels to South Africa to experience the lawless latter stages – with dwindling gold but increasing desperation.

In Johannesburg, he meets former university students from Zimbabwe who risk their lives to descend deep underground in abandoned gold mines, hoping to scrape a living from whatever ore remains.

With the mines controlled by violent gangs and surrounded by settlements where violence is common, the crew use miniature cameras to capture the working lives of the young illegal miners known as zama zamas. DAVID BUTCHER

The Live Lounge Show

8.00pm BBC4

MUSIC New series November has been Live Lounge Month on Radio 1, a series of intimate live showcases where stars of the station's playlist play stripped-down versions of their hits, plus a surprising cover.

Type "Live Lounge" into iPlayer and you can still watch most of them in full, including interviews conducted by Clara Amfo. Alternatively, there's this three-part series. Jess Glynne, Hozier and Rita Ora are among the artists taking up the challenge of leaving studio production and auto-tune behind, although not everyone journeys to the sacred BBC studios: Twenty One Pilots' Tyler Joseph is at the piano in a picturesquely empty venue in his home town of Columbus, Ohio. JACK SEALE

David Cassidy: the Last Session

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY This is all rather sad: former teen heart-throb David Cassidy didn't live to see the completion of a film about his life and music. Which is perhaps just as well, as it's so painful, particularly for anyone who remembers the fresh-faced, grinning David from the Partridge Family and his hit solo songs.

Cassidy, who died a year ago, looks and sounds frail and fragile, wincing in agony and coughing harshly as he records his last session, singing songs made famous by his dad, the actor and Broadway star Jack Cassidy, killed in a fire in 1976. He also ponders the nature of celebrity and his efforts to escape the clean-cut Partridge Family image. AG

Shades of Guilt

9.00pm More4

DRAMA New series A man gazes from a hotel window, clutching a bloodied marble ashtray as his victim lies in the bathroom. It's an arresting start to a by-the-numbers German crime drama with dashes of light porn centred on a defence solicitor and his cases. The accused refuses to say anything and is very anxious that his wife should decide what comes out in public about the assault. It turns out the pair have been spicing up their dormant sex life in a very unorthodox way.

It doesn't add up to much and the solicitor is a tangential figure. But he makes a pompous little speech at the end of the episode, something about how justice separates us from chaos. AG

What a sight could be greeting Phil on EastEnders (8pm BBC1) now that he's turned up back at the Mitchells' house! Honestly, can't a man suddenly decide to go to Spain for months at a time with little or no explanation without his home turning into the set of Eyes Wide Shut? With Sharon (right) and Keanu in bed upstairs, while Louise and Keegan get it on downstairs, Phil is going to need to wear a mask and say a secret password at the door before he gains admittance.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Now, EastEnders isn't yet revealing who exactly Phil is going to catch in the act, but I'm really hoping that the audio recording of Sharon in the throes of passion gets another broadcast at some point. It was one of the most startling noises I've ever heard and I need to find a way of getting it as the ringtone on my phone.

If you didn't catch it at the time, it sounded less like sex and more like somebody had trodden on Yoda.

Would I Lie to You?

9.30pm BBC1

COMEDY If there's any doubt that Richard Osman has the biggest, most creative brain on TV, listen to his innovative version of the children's game Rock-Paper-Scissors. It's genius. An initially sceptical Lee Mack enjoys playing it so much that David Mitchell doubts there'll be any time left to play Would I Lie to You?

Luckily there is, so we can try to work out whether Jamie is Top Gear presenter Rory Reid's tattoo buddy, This Country actor/writer Daisy May Cooper's ex-boyfriend, whom she used to sneak into her parents' home, or an intruder that Lee Mack attacked with a whisk. And what do you make of Mack's assertion that he was invited to Harry and Meghan's wedding?

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

TALK SHOW Three of tonight's guests are very familiar with Graham's red sofa: Nicole Kidman, Stephen Fry and Ruth Wilson have graced it before. Comedian Joe Lycett and Tour de France champion Geraint Thomas, however, are making their debuts.

Kidman will talk about her latest films, Destroyer (a crime noir in which she is unrecognisable as an LAPD cop) and Boy Erased (about gay conversion therapy). Fry, always a chat-show delight, will be plugging his "rollicking good read" of a book retelling Greek myths, while Wilson stars in the forthcoming BBC drama Mrs Wilson and has hinted at a return to Luther. Alongside such heavyweights, Thomas may find it hard to be heard. JR

Roots

11.40pm BBC2 (Scotland: 12.10am)

DRAMA When this 2017 update of the 1970s slavery saga was announced, some doubted that such a landmark piece of television was worth trying to remake. It proved them wrong, with a powerful, lavishly mounted four-parter that now gets a repeat in a bizarrely late timeslot. (It's worth recording or catching on iPlayer.)

The story opens with Kunta Kinte as a teenager in 1767 in the West African town of Juffure, where his father has a feud with a clan that trades slaves to the British. Kunta goes through his training as a Mandinka warrior but is then abducted and shipped across the Atlantic in horrific conditions. The anguish and pain of this are portrayed so sharply that some scenes are almost unwatchable. DAVID BUTCHER

Series three of a drama that will satisfy if you like hirsute men in voluminous animal skins being beastly to each other. It's set in North America in the 18th century, when the fur trade was a magnet both for supercilious capitalists and vicious outlaws. Jason Momoa (above) plays the mightiest and the hairiest of the outlaws; Zoe Boyle (Downton Abbey, Witless) lends it some class as a savvy entrepreneur.

BACK IN THEIR HAIR-DAY
Dolly Parton, a favourite of the Shires, here with Kenny Rogers in 1986

Country and Beyond with the Shires

11.25pm BBC4

MUSIC Prepare to spend a jolly hour with British country music duo the Shires, Ben Earle and Crissie Rhodes, as they sit on a sofa and watch videos featuring their favourite songs and biggest influences.

It's good fun; they are an affable pair with eclectic tastes, from Dolly Parton's Jolene, with Parton wearing the most gigantic wig, through Patsy "Crazy" Cline sporting the most pointless and unflattering headband, to Miranda Lambert with the perfect country song, The House That Built Me (featuring broken hearts and a dead dog), and Glen Campbell singing the gorgeous Wichita Lineman.

The Shires are youngsters, so you can forgive them being a little hazy about the genesis of Fleetwood Mac. And don't most people know by now that Sheryl Crow was Michael Jackson's backing singer?

First, at 10.25pm, there are highlights of the Country Music Awards. AG

8.00 Alone at Home

3/4. Eleanor, a marketing consultant who lives in an affluent south London suburb, wants to see if leaving her four boys, whose ages range from eight to 13, in complete freedom for a long weekend will improve how they get along with each other. Eleanor feels she has had to run the boys like "a pack of dogs" and hopes the exercise will see them grow in confidence.

Hatari! ★★★★★ 11.00am Film4 FREEVIEW

A film without a script usually spells trouble. But director Howard Hawks wanted it that way when he shipped John Wayne, Hardy Kruger, Elsa Martinelli and some new, jeep-mounted cameras to Tanzania to join real-life animal hunters for Hatari! in 1962. Sad to say, animals were inevitably harmed in the making of this film (lassoed giraffes will make it unwatchable for many), but so were humans, not least Wayne, who had to wrestle a rhino. If it's any consolation, his voice was dubbed to mask the swearing. ANDREW COLLINS

The Escape ★★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies

Domestic bliss is a poor substitute for true happiness in this even-handed yet devastating drama about marital decay. Gemma Arterton plays the downtrodden housewife who longs for freedom, with Dominic Cooper as her successful but overworked husband who is oblivious to her needs. Delicately scored, heavily improvised and shot with fluidity and fly-on-the-wall intimacy by Laurie Rose, the film pays great attention to Arterton's often wordless agony as she considers taking flight from her family. EMMA SIMMONDS

Brothers on the road

Father Figures ★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

In this serio-comic affair, two chalk-and-cheese siblings find themselves thrown together on a road trip to meet the father they never knew. Ed Helms repeats his uptight schtick from the Hangover series, while Owen Wilson is his usual smiley surfer-dude self, but neither of them can do much with the hackneyed script. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Music for the people

When Gustav Holst and Ralph Vaughan Williams took to the road, they sparked a revolution, says Tom Service

HOW DID THEY do it? The omens didn't look good. Ralph Vaughan Williams and Gustav Holst were two young composers at the Royal College of Music at the end of the 19th century, students in a country that was characterised as having no musical culture of its own by a pernicky German traveller: "Das Land ohne Musik" ("the country without music").

Yet these two friends spearheaded the start of a grass-roots musical revolution that we're all indebted to. They made music British, and they made British musical culture.

It's thanks to them that the music we call "classical" has made its way into every pore of our culture over the past hundred years, and it's why we're celebrating Our Classical Century across the BBC over the next year. I know I'm biased, given that I'm presenting shows on radio and TV for it, but I'm going to convince you over the next few paragraphs that classical music belongs to everyone; that you're a huge fan of classical music, even if you don't think you are – and, especially, that you're a massive Vaughan Williams nut and a gigantic Holst fanatic.

Because that's exactly what you are if you've ever sung I Vow to Thee My Country and loved the tune: it's one of the greatest of Holst's melodies, from the Jupiter movement of his Planets Suite. And you're a Vaughan Williams convert if

PICK OF THE WEEK

Book of the Week: Becoming
Mon–Fri 9.45am/12.30pm Radio 4

Deep within the basement of Broadcasting House is the digital equivalent of a ten-ton safe, where encrypted audio files are stored away from prying ears.

In what must be the most closely guarded book launch in decades, this is where the excerpts from Michelle Obama's much anticipated biography Becoming have been squirreled away. The publicity team behind the event have worked like an MI6 covert team from the offset and not just in the UK: the global release is on Tuesday 13 November, which will be followed by an international tour by the former First Lady (below), including an appearance at London's Royal Festival Hall on 3 December. Don't bother trying for tickets – they sold out minutes after going on sale.

I feel for Duncan Minshull, the producer of this Book of the Week. Getting access to the audio version of Becoming sounds akin to going undercover for the secret services: if he told me about anything that he had heard he would have had to kill me, then himself.

And so, I can offer you nothing other than from the publicity blurb that's available to everyone: "With unerring honesty and lively wit, she describes her triumphs and her disappointments, both public and private, telling her full story as she has lived it."

Will it be warts and all? I doubt it. Michelle is too media savvy and canny for that. Will it top the bestsellers list? Of course. Is this an absolute stonker of a coup for Duncan Minshull and Radio 4? Undoubtedly.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Lower Loxley continues to be the nucleus of catastrophe as Lily gets increasingly overwhelmed with various crises. By the week's end, she is forced to admit the outcome of the investigation into her affair with Russ, Elizabeth has taken a turn for the worse, while the future of the Hunt Ball is also in jeopardy.

Tempers are fraying at the Canterbury Tales rehearsals as the arctic conditions prove too much for some. Will Lynda be able to keep her cast in order and focused? The Home Farm shoot looks set to end in disaster for Will. And Oliver begins his new role, only for a bitter Joe to start planning his revenge for pipping him to the post. DAVID BROWN you've ever switched on a radio or got stuck into BBC Sounds and heard A Lark Ascending through the medium of a seraphic solo violinist in music of heart-breaking simplicity and gossamer gorgeousness, or the radiant halo of string sound that is the Tallis Fantasia.

Those are just two of the massive hits of Vaughan Williams, works that have proba-

WALK AND TALK
Holst and Vaughan Williams on one of their country strolls blown away by those Martian rhythms in one of BBC4's Our Classical Century films (Thursday 15 November): being up close and personal with the BBC Symphony Orchestra thumping out that shattering rhythm was a life-changing moment for him.

Vaughan Williams's war-time epiphany was his Pastoral Symphony, one of the most haunting laments to the war ever composed. Its gentle surfaces hover above a reservoir of pain, which the voice of a solo soprano vividly expresses at the end of the piece. Her voice is suspended above the battlefield at the end of the symphony, a wordless lament for the infinite losses of the war.

And that's just the start of Our Classical Century. Because as well as their music, the real legacy of Holst and Vaughan Williams was that they inspired future generations of British composers to be as concerned for the music-making of their communities as their concert halls. That's why Michael Tippett and Benjamin Britten turned social change into reality through their music with and for children, and with their protests against the Second World War and every future war, in Tippett's A Child of Our Time and Britten's War Requiem.

It's why the luminously brilliant composer Judith Weir, Master of the Queen's Music, has music for children and amateurs at the heart of her mission. And it's why, in the face of the challenges for music education in schools today, one of the best answers is found in the groups of musicians who meet and who play and sing for the sheer love of it, every week, in every part of the country. Those choirs, those orchestras, those music-makers of all ages are the life-blood of the legacy of Vaughan Williams and Holst. As are we listeners to Our Classical Century.

ably occupied more time in the highest echelons of lists of the nation's favourite classical pieces than any others. Every time you've participated in communal music-making, from a church to a football ground to a folk session in a pub, you're involved in a project that Holst and Vaughan Williams inspired through their mission to democratise the musical life of the country.

NOT CONVINCED YET about the essential incursion of the classical into your life? You will be, I promise, but let's go back to their friendship, and how Holst and Vaughan Williams turned a country without its own classical music traditions into a place that teems with music-making. In the film that Amanda Vickery and I have made, we retraced the epic walks that Vaughan Williams and Holst took, travelling from London to Gloucestershire: the tall, gangling Vaughan Williams and the diminutive, bespectacled Holst with his trombone in tow, afflicted by asthma yet driven by a ferocious energy.

It was a friendship forged in creative collaboration and criticism. Both were each other's closest musical confidantes, and between them, in the differences and diversity of their music, they inspired a very British musical revolution. It was grounded in tunes they heard in pubs and fields – Vaughan Williams was an avid collector of folk tunes – and in the attempt to transcend and reflect the landscapes around them into music.

This was new and distinctive, not only for British music, but for music anywhere. The pieces they wrote at the end of the First World War and in its aftermath prove the point. Holst's The Planets makes cosmic sounds from the orchestra, yet they're rooted in the riotous responses of audiences to its combination of visionary violence and Big Tunes.

The range of The Planets is jaw-dropping, from the destructive war-bringer of Mars, to the strange dreams of Saturn. Sir Lenny Henry is

AS YOU'LL DISCOVER, the repertoires of classical music are ever-expanding, since its reach now takes in video-game soundtracks as well as film scores, it's sampled and recycled throughout pop music, as well as being quickened into new life by today's composers for concert halls, opera houses and albums, like Anna Meredith and Daniel Kidane, Thomas Adès and Tansy Davies.

Throughout the year, across radio and TV, you'll go on a journey of exploration. But I can already tell you where you'll end up. The destination is in the title. Classical music is ours, and it's yours: we are all classical now.

Tom Service and Amanda Vickery present Holst and Vaughan Williams: Making Music English (Saturday 9pm BBC2), part of the year-long Our Classical Century season, available on BBC TV and Radio 3 from mid-November. Tom Service also presents The Listening Service (Sunday 5pm Radio 3).

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

My number's up

Listening figures are the lifeblood of radio

AS I ARRIVED at the Empire cinema in London's Leicester Square last week, there was a big sign above the entrance advertising Jamie Lee Curtis's return in Halloween.

I'm not a fan of the horror genre. I mean, I sat through the way the BBC handled presenter pay and tax affairs and it was so terrifying I hid behind the sofa, an area already crowded with BBC executives counting their bonuses.

No, this visit to the giant screen was to witness something I'd never seen before but which people have murmured about since I arrived at LBC. Although it's possible they were not really murmuring and my hearing is getting worse.

It's odd going to the cinema at 10.15am. It's even more odd when you've been summoned. Everyone at Global's stations (Heart, Capital, Smooth, Classic FM, Gold, Radio X and my new home, LBC) got a friendly email inviting them to attend. We were told to wear our security IDs or we wouldn't be admitted, and we were advised that late arrivals would be shot on sight. It took me back to my early days as a Scientologist when they'd have strictly administered whist drives.

Unfashionably prompt, I was ushered into the cavernous hall and was asked to start filling the rows from the front. Never has a front-row seat been so unwelcome. I had to crane my neck to see the top of the IMAX screen. I haven't looked up so much since my LBC job interview.

'The BBC guard the info like toddlers guarding Play-Doh'

We were handed a goodie bag from Pret a Manger – which we took as a mixed message – and presently the presentation was presented.

This was the Global Company Report. It happens four times a year when the radio listening figures – the RAJARs – are published. They make a big thing of it.

By contrast, at the BBC, these audience figures are treated like a state secret. As a presenter, if you knew the right people and were prepared to meet them on the back stairs, you could be handed your own programme's audience figures in exchange for smokes, untraceable mobiles or scented candles. I'm not joking when I say most of the programme-makers I worked with had little or no clear knowledge of how many people were listening to their work: their age, gender, social group or star sign. PM always had a lot of elderly Libras for reasons no one could fathom.

All of this information is comprehensively collected by the RAJAR people, but the BBC powers that be seemed to guard the information like toddlers guarding their Play-Doh.

NOT SO AT GLOBAL. Two senior executives guided us through the latest company news and what the folk in marketing have been up to, and then radio legend Richard Park (this was how he was introduced and I am not here to disagree) bounded on with an energetic assessment of how the listening figures were looking. Any disappointing stats were not glossed over, but the picture was upbeat and enthusiastic. He's passionate and enthusiastic and with a track record that has earned him the right to be listened to.

LBC has more than two million listeners a week. While some speech stations are shedding younger listeners, LBC is attracting them. And I can say that without personal boasting because none of this success is anything to do with me. These RAJARs didn't really cover my time at LBC.

In three months at the next cinema gathering, that's when my performance will be on the giant screen. I'm planning to sit at the back.

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

What's in a name? Actually, a lot

The biggest brand names on the internet are the likes of Amazon, Google, Facebook, Expedia, eBay, ASOS and Trip Advisor. With the possible exception of the last one, these names don't explain what the companies do. When they originally launched, most of their competitors probably thought, "What kind of insane name is that?" and assumed they would soon go away. What they didn't understand is that it's more important that a name differentiates you from the competition than that it should explain what you do.

Podcast provocateur

Similarly, some of the most popular podcasts on the web go under names like Pod Save America, My Dad Wrote a Porno, My Favourite Murder, Hip Hop Saved My Life (hosted by Romesh Ranganathan, right) and Athletico Mince. What these names have in common is they don't sound like anybody else's. They hint at an unconventional attitude and no broadcaster, particularly the BBC, would ever have the nerve or imagination to give such a title to any of their programmes. They're deliberately provocative. If you don't like what it says on their tins you probably won't enjoy what's inside.

A good story is one that lasts

I'd like to say I don't know what the BBC was thinking when it decided to saddle its allegedly innovative daily news podcast with the name Beyond Today, but I'm pretty sure I can guess. They didn't want to put the BBC brand too high in the mix in case it came over as too Establishment. They wanted to reassure listeners that the stories being covered by the programme's young journalists – stories such as middle-class cocaine use and Instagram murders if the first week is any guide – weren't going to go off by the end of the day and could as easily be listened to tomorrow.

Beyond Today – holy inappropriate

But honestly, had Beyond Today been proposed as a title for the God-slot back in 1968 it would have been laughed out of the place. It's the kind of name that might be ideally suited to picking its way past the Corporation's many internal obstacles but hopeless when it comes to exciting a single human being. If the BBC is serious about giving journalists their head to cover stories that might get younger people interested in news, they really should start by putting somebody on the project who would at least give it a name that would take some living up to. Honestly, what have they got to lose?

Archive on 4: The Black Footballer's Dilemma

8.00pm Radio 4

Forty years ago this month, Viv Anderson became the first black player to represent England. But while that was a watershed moment, it was a time when black footballers would often play against a backdrop of racist abuse, which often followed them into the team dressing room, too. Former player and ambassador of the PFA's Kick It Out equality scheme Clark Carlisle (above) looks back to a time when black players had to decide whether to just concentrate on the job and answer the racists by excelling on the pitch, or to use their position to speak out. He talks to former players Garth Crooks, Paul Davis, Paul Mortimer and Paul Canoville about how they dealt with that dilemma, and asks whether racism in football is a thing of the past. DAVID CRAWFORD

5.00pm Radio 3

Radio 3 listeners have had to wait two weeks between the second and third instalments of the Royal Opera's Ring cycle. But that's nothing compared to the 12-year break Wagner himself took between writing Acts 2 and 3 of tonight's episode, Siegfried – during which time he composed both Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg – nor to the lifetime (Siegfried's lifetime, that is) during which the enchanted Brünnhilde has been asleep on her fire-girt rock, awaiting a hero who doesn't yet know the meaning of fear... Antonio Pappano conducts and introduces the music. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Drama on 3: The Cherry Orchard 7.30pm Radio 3

Writer-and-composer duo Katherine Tozer and John Chambers have worked together several times before and, as they explain in their introduction, were both delighted to be given the opportunity to fashion a new version of Chekhov's drama for radio, particularly as the playwright makes such conscious use of sound in his stage directions. Whether it is the music at a party or the links between acts and scenes, Chambers has created pieces that truly evoke a Russia that is building up to the Revolution – part traditional, part challenging. There are moments of dark humour but this is ultimately a family on the verge of collapse, just like the society it stems from and, as Tozer points out, the prescient undertones are inescapable.

JANE ANDERSON RADIO EDITOR

The Michael Ball Show 11.00am Radio 2

It feels like Michael Ball has been around for ever. And I mean that in a decidedly positive way. His distinctive melodious voice first came to the fore in 1985, in the West End production of Les Misérables, and since then Ball has never looked back. In a live edition of his show for Children in Need at the sumptuous Savoy Theatre in London, the line-up is truly high calibre (thanks, in no small part, to Ball's pulling power), with Tom Jones, Sheridan Smith, Boyzone and Alfie Boe set to perform. Throw in the host's velvety vocals and you have a marvellous musical treat befitting a terrific charitable cause. CHRIS GARDNER

15-Minute Drama: Incredible Women

10.45am/7.45pm Radio 4
Jessica Kennedy is one incredible woman. She's been a foreign attaché, headed up a prestigious international art school and been appointed to front an orchestra in the Far East in her time. Now she is the top dog at a Cambridge college and predicted to be the front-runner for the next director-general of the BBC. So, when Jeremy Front goes to interview her for a programme he is making for Radio 4 he's expecting a detail-rich insight into the rise and rise of Jessica Kennedy. Only he doesn't get it. Instead, he is left befuddled and discombobulated by her amazing ability not to answer a single question with a straight or comprehensible reply. Is this estimable woman nothing but a fraud – her college is the Zinoviev School of International Relations after all (cue reference to the infamous fake Zinoviev letter). Written by Jeremy Front and starring his sister Rebecca (above), this is smart, funny and brilliantly left-field. JANE ANDERSON

Book at Bedtime: Middle England

12.04pm/10.45pm Radio 4
Jonathan Coe's new novel is an enlightening examination of the state of the nation, spanning eight years and with a cast of interlinked characters whose personal lives are just as affected by politics as they are their own courses of action. Don't let the lightness of touch in Coe's writing style fool you into thinking that this is just a comic piece. As author Sathnam Sanghera says, this is "the first great Brexit novel". Too damn right. See p138. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

Sir Walter Raleigh – a Devon Man

10.00am/3.00pm/3.00am
Radio 4 Extra

Say the name John Nettles to most people and they'll come back with either Bergerac or Midsomer Murders. But he is also a keen historian and proud resident of north Devon, hence his interest in fellow Devonian Walter Raleigh (above). After extensive research, Nettles penned this play, which got its premiere, quite rightly, on BBC Radio Devon earlier this year. Now we can all hear the exquisitely crafted tale of the meteoric rise and devastating fall of one of Queen Elizabeth I's favourites. Accompanied by authentic music, Nettles's writing skills are to be heartily congratulated – the plot flows across a huge span of years without ever losing its impetus or impact. JANE ANDERSON

The Documentary

1.30pm/11.05pm/2.30am
BBC World Service

The dance of love hasn't always been as romantic as we like to believe. On the contrary, some tango songs denigrated women suffering what we would now call domestic abuse. But today they're rarely heard. This new awareness is indicative of what's described as a female-led revolution in Argentina. BBC South America correspondent Katy Watson speaks to some of the activists fighting for women's rights, among them a 92-year-old veteran of protests in Buenos Aires during the former military dictatorship, and a "reformed macho man." Part of the BBC's 100 Women season, returning for the sixth year to highlight women's experiences around the world. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

A leading light in the rebirth of post-war music in his native Poland, Andrzej Panufnik defected to the UK in 1954, eluding Polish secret police in a night-time taxi chase through the Zurich streets that could have come from a John le Carré novel. In the late 1950s he spent two years as principal conductor of the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, before resigning to concentrate on composition. Tonight, in a neat turn of events, the CBSO marks the centenary of Polish independence with the UK premiere of Faithful Journey: a Mass for Poland, a new oratorio by Panufnik's British-born daughter Roxanna (above) who is also the guest all this week on Essential Classics. Described as "a soulful and meaningful tribute to my Anglo-Polish roots", the oratorio interweaves settings of Polish poetry with the text of the Latin Mass.

From Rossini's The Barber of Seville (laughed off stage when a stray cat wandered in from the wings) to Stravinsky's The Rite of Spring (drowned out by a riot of boos and hisses) many of the greatest works in the classical canon were initially greeted with derision, hostility or just plain incomprehension – not least from the critics: the conductor/composer Nicolas Slonimsky compiled a whole Lexicon of Musical Invective from all the worst reviews that the best composers had ever received. Tonight, Jane Jones presents pieces that survived fiascos to become popular favourites. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Radio 2 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 2

Cast your mind back to summer 2012: those halcyon days when London hosted the Olympics, the Queen celebrated her Diamond Jubilee and Emeli Sandé (above) dominated the airwaves. The hype surrounding the Sunderland-born soul singer has abated in recent years; her second album, 2016's Long Live the Angels, won plaudits and sold well in the UK but failed to produce the chart-topping singles that marked her phenomenally successful debut. Tonight, Sandé will aim to redress the balance and give her sophomore record the audience it deserves at BBC Radio Theatre as part of Radio 2's In Concert series. While there appears to be little in the way of new material on the horizon, listeners can still expect some of the carefully crafted hits that have made the solo artist a household name. TOM GOULDING

Crossing Continents

Bringing a new life into the world should be a joyful experience but for teenage mother Chiamaka Ogbodo it was the start of a nightmare that lasted for 16 months. She, like 95 per cent of the Nigerian population, had no private insurance and medical care has to be paid for. Chiamaka and her baby, Kosi, were held until a human rights lawyer arrived at the Divine Grace Hospital in Enugu with the police to free them both. Linda Pressly reports on this and other stories of the abuse of hundreds of patients who are held for days, weeks and even months. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

Friday Night Is Music Night 8.00pm Radio 2

If Ed Balls (above) still coveted the top job at the Treasury one might be forgiven for thinking his interest in musicals was the millions that British theatre contributes to the government coffers each year. But since the move into showbiz via Strictly Come Dancing revealed his previously unknown jazz hands credentials (because politics isn't showbiz at all, of course), one can safely assume he has a genuine passion for the genre that's more backstage than box office. Ed takes a brief look at how musical theatre has interpreted political stories via shows like all-conquering Hamilton and Andrew Lloyd Weber's Stephen Ward, which focused on 1960s sex scandal the Profumo affair. Apart from that digression, this is an unashamed celebration of musical theatre featuring a list of guests that is worthy of any West End front bench.

TONY PETERS

The Cold Swedish Winter 11.30am Radio 4

Listeners have taken a liking to the lugubrious humour (do Brits and Swedes have anything in common?) of Danny Robins's sitcom, first heard in 2014. This fourth series is indubitably the same mix as before. Comedian Geoff's Swedish in-laws are preoccupied with death, and Geoff's mate Ian (played by Robins himself) is convinced there's a Pippi Longstocking-inspired conspiracy in Sweden to encourage kids to survive without their parents. There are also Ikea and Abba references. But, it has to be said, the jokes are plentiful and often very funny. Series one to three will be released for download in January. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Face behind the voice

Jasmine Takhar BBC Asian Network

Age 27

Current job Presenter of BBC Asian Network's weekend breakfast show (6.00am). Also a club and events DJ.

CV Brought up in Nottingham, she studied media with creative industries at Nottingham Trent University, first broadcasting for Nottingham's Kemet FM in 2010. Then BBC Radio Nottingham and London's Westside Radio, joining the BBC's Asian Network in 2016. She has also broadcast in America for Miami's 99 Jamz. Shortlisted for Outstanding Young Journalist of the Year in the 2016 Asian Media Awards.

Best moment "Having my Asian Network show also broadcast on Radio 1 and 1Xtra for three weeks last year."

Worst moment "A very late night after Asian Network Live from the Birmingham Arena meant I ended up going straight on air for my 6.00am show. A show with no sleep is fun – but not that much fun!"

Off air "I'm based in Nottinghamshire – I still love the music scene there. I'm a huge movie buff – and a gym freak!"

First radio memory "I was a huge fan of Trevor Nelson on Radio 1. Inspirational."

Favourite broadcaster "Trevor Nelson. He really connects with his audience, and his music knowledge is impeccable. I met him at our Christmas party last year – great moment!"

Ambition "To do more broadcasting and deejaying abroad, particularly in America, would be a huge step for me. And, of course, to present on Radio 1."

Dream job "When I was younger, I wanted to be a dancer in the pop world, but two left feet put paid to that! I wouldn't mind being a judge on The X Factor and sitting next to Simon Cowell (who I'm sure is a softie...)"

Secret skills "I played the drums when I was a teenager. I can lift really heavy weights on the leg press in the gym – I'm a part-time body builder! I practise a bit of yoga and I'm currently learning to be a 'scratch' DJ – making scratching noises over the record you're playing." DAVID GILLARD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jasmine Takhar BBC Asian Network

Age 27

Current job Presenter of BBC Asian Network's weekend breakfast show (6.00am). Also a club and events DJ.

CV Brought up in Nottingham, she studied media with creative industries at Nottingham Trent University, first broadcasting for Nottingham's Kemet FM in 2010. Then BBC Radio Nottingham and London's Westside Radio, joining the BBC's Asian Network in 2016.

She has also broadcast in America for Miami's 99 Jamz. Shortlisted for Outstanding Young Journalist of the Year in the 2016 Asian Media Awards.

Best moment "Having my Asian Network show also broadcast on Radio 1 and 1Xtra for three weeks last year."

Worst moment "A very late night after Asian Network Live from the Birmingham Arena meant I ended up going straight on air for my 6.00am show. A show with no sleep is fun – but not that much fun!"

Off air "I'm based in Nottinghamshire – I still love the music scene there. I'm a huge movie buff – and a gym freak!"

First radio memory "I was a huge fan of Trevor Nelson on Radio 1. Inspirational!"

Favourite broadcaster "Trevor Nelson. He really connects with his audience, and his music knowledge is impeccable. I met him at our Christmas party last year – great moment!"

Ambition "To do more broadcasting and deejaying abroad, particularly in America, would be a huge step for me. And, of course, to present on Radio 1."

Dream job "When I was younger, I wanted to be a dancer in the pop world, but two left feet put paid to that! I wouldn't mind being a judge on The X Factor and sitting next to Simon Cowell (who I'm sure is a softie...)"

Secret skills "I played the drums when I was a teenager. I can lift really heavy weights on the leg press in the gym – I'm a part-time body builder! I practise a bit of yoga and I'm currently learning to be a 'scratch' DJ – making scratching noises over the record you're playing." DAVID GILLARD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Jasmine Takhar BBC Asian Network

Age 27

Current job Presenter of BBC Asian Network's weekend breakfast show (6.00am). Also a club and events DJ.

CV Brought up in Nottingham, she studied media with creative industries at Nottingham Trent University, first broadcasting for Nottingham's Kemet FM in 2010. Then BBC Radio Nottingham and London's Westside Radio, joining the BBC's Asian Network in 2016. She has also broadcast in America for Miami's 99 Jamz. Shortlisted for Outstanding Young Journalist of the Year in the 2016 Asian Media Awards.

Best moment "Having my Asian Network show also broadcast on Radio 1 and 1Xtra for three weeks last year."

Worst moment "A very late night after Asian Network Live from the Birmingham Arena meant I ended up going straight on air for my 6.00am show. A show with no sleep is fun – but not that much fun!"

Off air "I'm based in Nottinghamshire – I still love the music scene there. I'm a huge movie buff – and a gym freak!"

First radio memory "I was a huge fan of Trevor Nelson on Radio 1. Inspirational."

Favourite broadcaster "Trevor Nelson. He really connects with his audience, and his music knowledge is impeccable. I met him at our Christmas party last year – great moment!"

Ambition "To do more broadcasting and deejaying abroad, particularly in America, would be a huge step for me. And, of course, to present on Radio 1."

Dream job "When I was younger, I wanted to be a dancer in the pop world, but two left feet put paid to that! I wouldn't mind being a judge on The X Factor and sitting next to Simon Cowell (who I'm sure is a softie...)"

Secret skills "I played the drums when I was a teenager. I can lift really heavy weights on the leg press in the gym – I'm a part-time body builder! I practise a bit of yoga and I'm currently learning to be a 'scratch' DJ – making scratching noises over the record you're playing." DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Jasmine Takhar BBC Asian Network

Age 27

Current job Presenter of BBC Asian Network's weekend breakfast show (6.00am). Also a club and events DJ.

CV Brought up in Nottingham, she studied media with creative industries at Nottingham Trent University, first broadcasting for Nottingham's Kemet FM in 2010. Then BBC Radio Nottingham and London's Westside Radio, joining the BBC's Asian Network in 2016. She has also broadcast in America for Miami's 99 Jamz. Shortlisted for Outstanding Young Journalist of the Year in the 2016 Asian Media Awards.

Best moment "Having my Asian Network show also broadcast on Radio 1 and 1Xtra for three weeks last year."

Worst moment "A very late night after Asian Network Live from the Birmingham Arena meant I ended up going straight on air for my 6.00am show. A show with no sleep is fun – but not that much fun!"

Off air "I'm based in Nottinghamshire – I still love the music scene there. I'm a huge movie buff – and a gym freak!"

First radio memory "I was a huge fan of Trevor Nelson on Radio 1. Inspirational."

Favourite broadcaster "Trevor Nelson. He really connects with his audience, and his music knowledge is impeccable. I met him at our Christmas party last year – great moment!"

Ambition "To do more broadcasting and deejaying abroad, particularly in America, would be a huge step for me. And, of course, to present on Radio 1."

Dream job "When I was younger, I wanted to be a dancer in the pop world, but two left feet put paid to that! I wouldn't mind being a judge on The X Factor and sitting next to Simon Cowell (who I'm sure is a softie...)"

Secret skills "I played the drums when I was a teenager. I can lift really heavy weights on the leg press in the gym – I'm a part-time body builder! I practise a bit of yoga and I'm currently learning to be a 'scratch' DJ – making scratching noises over the record you're playing." DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Jasmine Takhar BBC Asian Network

Age 27

Current job Presenter of BBC Asian Network's weekend breakfast show (6.00am). Also a club and events DJ.

CV Brought up in Nottingham, she studied media with creative industries at Nottingham Trent University, first broadcasting for Nottingham's Kemet FM in 2010. Then BBC Radio Nottingham and London's Westside Radio, joining the BBC's Asian Network in 2016. She has also broadcast in America for Miami's 99 Jamz. Shortlisted for Outstanding Young Journalist of the Year in the 2016 Asian Media Awards.

Best moment "Having my Asian Network show also broadcast on Radio 1 and 1Xtra for three weeks last year."

Worst moment "A very late night after Asian Network Live from the Birmingham Arena meant I ended up going straight on air for my 6.00am show. A show with no sleep is fun – but not that much fun!"

Off air "I'm based in Nottinghamshire – I still love the music scene there. I'm a huge movie buff – and a gym freak!"

First radio memory "I was a huge fan of Trevor Nelson on Radio 1. Inspirational!"

Favourite broadcaster "Trevor Nelson. He really connects with his audience, and his music knowledge is impeccable. I met him at our Christmas party last year – great moment!"

Ambition "To do more broadcasting and deejaying abroad, particularly in America, would be a huge step for me. And, of course, to present on Radio 1."

Dream job "When I was younger, I wanted to be a dancer in the pop world, but two left feet put paid to that! I wouldn't mind being a judge on The X Factor and sitting next to Simon Cowell (who I'm sure is a softie...)"

Secret skills "I played the drums when I was a teenager. I can lift really heavy weights on the leg press in the gym – I'm a part-time body builder! I practise a bit of yoga and I'm currently learning to be a 'scratch' DJ – making scratching noises over the record you're playing." DAVID GILLARD

Jasmine Takhar BBC Asian Network

Age 27

Current job Presenter of BBC Asian Network's weekend breakfast show (6.00am). Also a club and events DJ.

CV Brought up in Nottingham, she studied media with creative industries at Nottingham Trent University, first broadcasting for Nottingham's Kemet FM in 2010. Then BBC Radio Nottingham and London's Westside Radio, joining the BBC's Asian Network in 2016. She has also broadcast in America for Miami's 99 Jamz. Shortlisted for Outstanding Young Journalist of the Year in the 2016 Asian Media Awards.

Best moment "Having my Asian Network show also broadcast on Radio 1 and 1Xtra for three weeks last year."

Worst moment "A very late night after Asian Network Live from the Birmingham Arena meant I ended up going straight on air for my 6.00am show. A show with no sleep is fun – but not that much fun!"

Off air "I'm based in Nottinghamshire – I still love the music scene there. I'm a huge movie buff – and a gym freak!"

First radio memory "I was a huge fan of Trevor Nelson on Radio 1. Inspirational."

Favourite broadcaster "Trevor Nelson. He really connects with his audience, and his music knowledge is impeccable. I met him at our Christmas party last year – great moment!"

Ambition "To do more broadcasting and deejaying abroad, particularly in America, would be a huge step for me. And, of course, to present on Radio 1."

Dream job "When I was younger, I wanted to be a dancer in the pop world, but two left feet put paid to that! I wouldn't mind being a judge on The X Factor and sitting next to Simon Cowell (who I'm sure is a softie...)"

Secret skills "I played the drums when I was a teenager. I can lift really heavy weights on the leg press in the gym – I'm a part-time body builder! I practise a bit of yoga and I'm currently learning to be a 'scratch' DJ – making scratching noises over the record you're playing." DAVID GILLARD

Your guide to the Budget

There will be income tax savings for most of us – but no change to Inheritance Tax, says Paul Lewis TRAPPED BETWEEN BREXIT and the promised ending of austerity, Chancellor Philip Hammond did not significantly raise taxes in his Budget and paid for increased spending with more borrowing.

He brought forward a rise in the personal tax allowance from April 2020 to 2019. From April next year we can earn £12,500 before income tax is due, up from £11,850. That will save income taxpayers £130 a year. People who pay higher-rate tax of 40 per cent will save a lot more. The threshold where that begins – outside Scotland – will rise from £46,350 to £50,000, adding another £730 to the tax savings for those on incomes above £50,000, giving them a total tax cut of £860.

People under pension age who work will find that their National Insurance contributions will change, too. Those will go down for people paying basic-rate tax of 20 per cent, giving them a total gain of £155 a year. Those on incomes above £50,000 will pay more in National Insurance contributions, reducing their £860 tax saving to a net gain of £523 in the year. (In Scotland, rates and thresholds, apart from the personal allowance, are different and 2019–20 rates will be announced later this year. There may also be some smaller differences in Wales.)

MARRIED COUPLES WHO have claimed the marriage allowance will normally save £250 off their tax, up from £238. There was no major change to pension tax relief in the Budget, and not even a hint of a consultation on changing Inheritance Tax. The ISA limit remains at £20,000, with a slight rise for Junior ISAs to £4,368 in 2019–20. The minimum wage for those aged 25 or more will rise by 4.9 per cent, from £7.83 an hour to £8.21, with above-inflation rises for younger people.

The long-promised ban on cold calling about pensions will begin in 2019. The new rules won't cover texts, emails or social media messages, calls about investments or calls from firms based outside the UK. Firms you have a relationship with can still call you. So even when the rules come in, if you get a cold call, just say “no” and hang up.

FREEDOM FROM FINANCIAL WORRIES

There are many options to consider to ensure you're getting the equity release plan that's most suitable for your individual needs. If you're considering equity release to help fund a better retirement, we can guide you through your options. There is no obligation or pressure to go ahead if you book a no-obligation consultation with Key; our job is to give the expert advice and information you need to make the decision that best meets your individual needs.

Features:

- Accredited Independent Advisers: we are not tied to any lenders
- Face-to-face appointments: in the comfort of your own home
- Whole of market comparison: we consider all equity release providers.

GOOD ADVICE IS KEY

Equity release could involve a lifetime mortgage, which is a loan secured against your home. It will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits.

There are typically no monthly repayments to make, as the loan plus compound interest is repaid when the plan comes to an end.

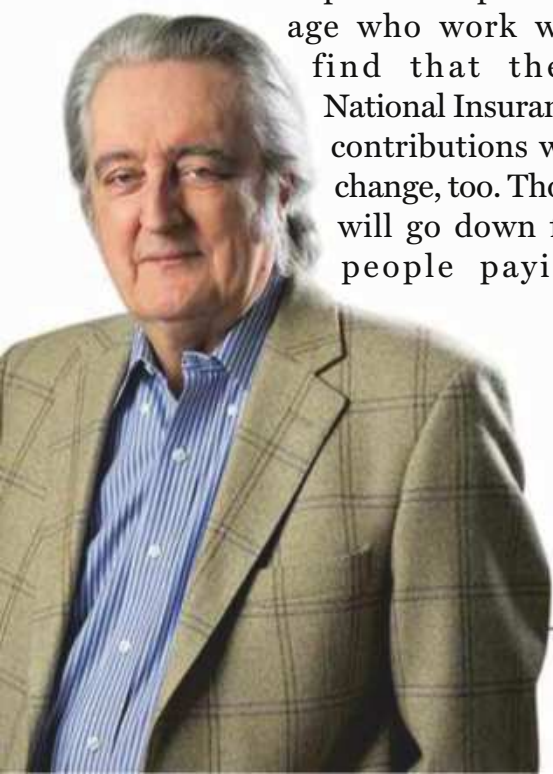

FREE CHRISTMAS HAMPER WORTH £30

Book and attend a free no-obligation consultation with an accredited equity release adviser from Key, between 5 November and 15 December 2018, to receive your free Christmas hamper. For full terms and conditions visit radiotimes.com/keyhamper

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge, as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99 per cent of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

To request a guide, or book a no-obligation consultation, call 0808 156 7171 or visit radiotimes.com/equityrelease

The way we live now

Jonathan Coe tells Mark Lawson why he had to bring his state-of-the-nation Rotters' Club story bang up to date with a Brexit twist

Middle England Monday–Friday 12 noon
(also Book at Bedtime 10.45pm) Radio 4

SOME OF THE most popular books of recent years have come in threes. Examples include Robert Harris's Cicero trilogy and the Stieg Larsson thrillers that began with The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo, while the third of Hilary Mantel's Thomas Cromwell books, The Mirror and the Light, is excitedly anticipated.

Jonathan Coe, though, is surprised to find himself joining in the literary threesomes. The Rotters' Club (2001), an autobiographical story of Birmingham schoolboys in the 1970s, which became a praised BBC2 serial in 2005, was followed by The Closed Circle (2004), tracking the characters to adulthood in Blairite Britain. But, after that, Coe says, "I swore on my life that I would never write another volume."

However, perhaps fittingly for a sequence that closely follows British politics, the pledge has been broken. His latest novel, Middle England, which is being read this week on Radio 4, revisits writer Benjamin Trotter, whom Coe admits to being "basically me", between the 2010 election and the approach to Brexit.

Coe's earlier resistance to triplication resulted from his own dissatisfaction with The Closed Circle: "I wrote it too quickly, in a spirit of slight cockiness off the back of The Rotters' Club," he admits. "That book had a very warm reception, and a good sale. I think I thought: I can write anything I want here because people are gagging for a sequel. And it turned out that they weren't, very much."

Recently, though, the writer came to the conclusion that "the recent story of Britain is so dramatic and full of plot twists that a novelist who writes state-of-the-nation novels would be silly not to deal with it."

Coe created a timeline weaving the fictional professional and personal lives of Benjamin and his friends around various key dates: the 2011 anti-capitalist riots in UK cities including London and Birmingham; the 2012 Olympics; and the general elections of 2015 and 2017,

'If you think Brexit is dumb then you have to write about it' which in turn caused, and were caused by, the 2016 EU Referendum, which started the so far obstacle-strewn path towards Brexit. "There had been big political disagreements in Britain before but none that so touched on issues of identity, belonging and nostalgia," Coe says.

PUBLISHERS OFTEN WARN writers that politically committed fiction risks losing sales to voters on the other side. Middle England is explicitly an anti-Brexit novel, so did Coe worry about alienating Leavers? "I only know one Leave voter who's read the book so far, and she was nice about it but had problems with the thesis. I certainly don't think that all Leavers are stupid or racist, or any of that stuff. But if you are convinced, as

Jonathan Coe
and (above) 70s' Birmingham in the TV version of The Rotters' Club

I am, that Brexit is a dumb thing to do then you have to write about the reality you see. But, yes, there is a danger of 51.9% of the population taking against the book."

Most attempts by journalists to predict the political narrative – whether the progress of the Brexit talks or Theresa May's departure as prime minister – have proved wrong. Coe had the advantage of being able to stick to past events, but threw away his safety harness. The book was finished in April, and pre-reading copies were sent out in mid-summer, but it has a final chapter clearly dated "September, 2018".

For narrative reasons, he needed the final scene to take place at the start of the new academic year in 2018, but admits, "Yes, it was a gamble. There was a contingency plan to tinker with the last chapter before publication if something truly dramatic happened, such as Brexit being abandoned. I suppose I'd have had one of the characters saying, 'My word, we had a narrow escape!'"

Appropriately for an interview with this magazine, a major influence on Coe's fiction has been television. "My earliest childhood memory of enjoying culture is of sitting with my family watching Morecambe and Wise. It was my first love. Initially, I thought I'd be a comedian and then, when it turned out I had no performing skills, I thought I'd write jokes for comedians."

He also attributes "anything I know about writing dialogue" to watching 70s sitcoms Whatever Happened to the Likely Lads? and Porridge, written by Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais, and was thrilled when the pair wrote the adaptation of The Rotters' Club, and says he was very pleased with the TV series – "It affected how I saw some of the characters when I came to write about them again". But he's sad that it has never been repeated, released on DVD or streamed in the UK. This is apparently because the 1970s soundtrack is a key part of the piece and "the music rights make it too expensive to show again. They only got them for one screening."

HE HAS HOPES, though, for a future TV version of his 1994 anti-Thatcher novel What a Carve Up!, which is currently being adapted by Will Sharpe, who wrote the Channel 4 show Flowers. Coe's own next project, which he can't yet discuss, also has a TV sitcom connection, and he has become interested as well in stage comedy, admitting that Richard Cameron's 2016 stage adaptation of The Rotters' Club was another encouragement to continuing the story in Middle England.

In the new book, Benjamin Trotter writes a novel that is listed for the Man Booker Prize, an honour that has to date eluded Coe. Is the sub-plot an avenging recognition that Coe feels overlooked by Britain's leading literary prize? "I think I used to feel that. But I've gone past it now. The roll call of people who've never been Bookered is quite distinguished: Sebastian Faulks, Kate Atkinson, William Boyd not since 1982. So I'm in quite good company."

The First Lady speaks

Michelle Obama takes centre stage

BECOMING MICHELLE OBAMA
Book of the Week Mon-Fri 9.45am
Radio 4

In January 2009, Barack and Michelle Obama made history, when he became the first black US President, and Michelle the first black First Lady. Their eight-year tenure in the White House has been minutely documented by journalists and commentators; now, in Becoming (£21.50, incl p&p), Michelle takes centre stage, revealing what it was like to be in the eye of that storm. The memoir traces her path from Chicago's South Side to Harvard Law School, to meeting Barack and the resulting struggle to balance her own legal career with her husband's ambitions.

UNSHELTERED
BARBARA KINGSOLVER
Open Book Sunday 4pm Radio 4

For most of us, political and social turmoil is anything but inspiring – but not Barbara Kingsolver. The Poisonwood Bible author's 15th novel Unsheltered (£18, incl p&p) is, on the surface, a family drama, but, as ever, Kingsolver's scope is much broader. Unsheltered centres on one New Jersey house and its inhabitants over two timelines as they contend with knowledge that upends their convictions. In 2016, the Knox family's physical foundations crumble along with their economic ones, while in the 1870s, the Greenwoods' belief in science threatens their social and professional lives.

MY BRILLIANT FRIEND
ELENA FERRANTE
My Brilliant Friend Monday 9pm
Sky Atlantic

How do you make a TV show with a person you can never meet, and whose name you don't even know? That was the challenge facing Saverio Constanzo, the director of My Brilliant Friend, a new HBO series based on the first book (£12.99, incl p&p) in Elena Ferrante's hugely popular Neapolitan novel series about the lifelong bond between two childhood friends. Ferrante is a pseudonym, and although attempts have been made to unmask the author, the mystery lingers, even for Constanzo – he told The New York Times that making My Brilliant Friend with Ferrante was "like working with a ghost". HANNAH SHADDOCK

FOR THE FILLING

- 3 eggs
- 100g soft light brown sugar
- 1 tsp ground cinnamon
- 1 tsp mixed spice
- 200ml double cream
- 425g can processed pumpkin, or 400g roasted and puréed pumpkin
- demerara sugar, to serve

FOR THE SAUCE

- 25g butter
- 100g dark soft brown sugar
- 2 tbsp kicap manis
- 1 tbsp vanilla extract
- 200ml double cream

1 First, make the sweet shortcrust pastry (see right). Wrap in cling film and chill for 1 hour.

2 Preheat the oven to 180°C/fan 160°C/gas mark 4. Roll out the pastry on a floured surface to a thickness of 3mm. If it crumbles, knead it together gently. Line a 23cm loose-bottomed tart tin with the pastry, leaving an overhang of at least 2cm. Prick the base all over with a fork, then blind bake for 20 minutes (see right). Remove the beans and paper; if the centre looks damp or raw, return it to the oven for 5 minutes.

3 Meanwhile, make the filling. In a large bowl, whisk the eggs, sugar, spices and cream together until well blended, then beat in the pumpkin until smooth.

4 Partially pull out an oven rack from the centre of the oven. Set the pastry case (still in its tin) on the rack. Pour the filling into the case and slide the rack back into the oven. Bake for 45–50 minutes until set, and bubbles begin to form around the edge. Trim the pastry edge with a sharp knife while still warm, then leave the pie to cool completely.

5 For the sauce, melt the butter and sugar together in a pan, then whisk in the remaining ingredients. Bring to the boil, then remove from the heat and leave to cool slightly.

6 Remove the pie from the tin, divide into slices, and transfer to plates. Dust the top of each slice with a layer of demerara sugar and use a blowtorch to caramelize it.

STEP BY STEP

Sweet shortcrust pastry

1 Sift the plain flour onto a work surface. Make a well in the centre and add the butter, sugar and egg yolk.

2 Using your fingertips, work the flour into the butter and egg mixture.

3 When rough crumbs have formed, gather the dough into a ball and knead lightly until it is pliable. Wrap in cling film and chill for at least 30 minutes before using.

BLIND BAKE

4 Cut a circle of baking parchment slightly larger than the tart tin that you are using. Fold the disc in half several times, then clip the outer edge with scissors. Place the pastry in the tin and prick it all over with a fork.

5 Cover the base and sides of the pastry with the parchment, taking the paper above the sides of the tin. Fill with baking beans and bake according to your recipe. Remove the paper and beans and return to the oven to bake again if required.

Gino's Italian Coastal Escapes

Thursday 8.30pm ITV (11.20pm in Wales)

WHEN HE'S NOT cooking on This Morning, Gino D'Acampo returns to Italy – but not to his hometown of Naples. Ever since he discovered Sardinia a decade ago, he spends half his time on the island. “I'd been travelling all over the world, going to the most amazing places ever: the Maldives, Barbados, Thailand,” he says. “Then one day I ended up on the island of Sardinia, and I find out they have the same amazing beaches with white sand and crystal-clear water, if not better, but it's only two-and-a-half hours away from London.”

“I just fell in love with it: Sardinian people are incredibly kind and helpful, the food is excellent, amazing wine. A lot of people go to Sardinia for walking and cycling because the mountains are beautiful, so you get the best of both worlds.”

Sardinia is about the same size as Wales and sits immediately south of Corsica. Its 1,150 miles of coastline include some of the Mediterranean's loveliest beaches: powder-soft bays hemmed in by wind-sculpted boulders and wild dunes, coves framed by pink-granite cliffs and lapped by translucent sea. The interior is lush and rugged; hills scored by sheep tracks loom over ancient cork forests and scrub fragrant with wild herbs.

Thanks to its strategic position – Tunisia is a closer neighbour than Rome – Sardinia has also been shaped by three millennia of invaders. The Phoenicians used it as a trading post and planted vines; the Carthaginians and the Romans built cities; the Tuscan Pisans and Spanish Aragonese constructed splendid churches. Its oldest landmarks have baffled archaeologists: the hills are dotted with more than 8,000 Bronze Age towers and burial chambers that locals call “giants' tombs”.

D'Acampo says there's plenty of history to be found in the sea, too. “If you go scuba-diving,

‘I fell in love with it... it's the best of both worlds’

you can very easily find something that's been there for two or three hundred years. I've found old coins or archaeological pieces many times. When I get back to shore, I hand them in and they put them in museums.”

For around six months a year, he swaps his home in Hoddesdon, Hertfordshire for a villa on the Costa Smeralda – the Emerald Coast – in the north east of the island. But he's not one for sunbathing; his favourite days are when he takes his wife Jessica and three children, Luciano, Rocco and Mia, out on his boat. “We go to beautiful coves that you can only reach by boat. We anchor, have something to eat, go fishing, then sleep on the boat, and spend a couple of days at sea.”

He isn't the first celebrity to fall for its white-sand beaches and hidden coves. This 34-mile stretch is the Saint-Tropez of Italy, attracting the glitterati and their mega-yachts. If your budget doesn't run to chartering a boat or a suite in one of the five-star hotels, settle instead for a cappuccino and a spot of window-shopping in its pretty, impeccably manicured towns. “Everybody should see Porto Cervo, Porto Rotondo, Poltu Quatu, because they are magical: very well cared for, the food is incredible, and there's loads of shopping,” D'Acampo says.

When it comes to food, Sardinia also offers the best of both worlds. “As an island, it's very seafood and fish-orientated. Calamari is their speciality: fried, grilled, stuffed, in breadcrumbs... The fishermen go out in the morning or early evening to catch it and it's incredible.”

“But then if you travel for half an hour inland, it's all about the pork. Their most famous dish is suckling pig that is cooked very slowly over an open fire for six hours. The other thing Sardinia is famous for is goat – they do a lot of stews, or barbecued goat.”

D'Acampo makes his own wine, which isn't unusual. Traditionally, almost every family would have owned a small plot of vines for their own consumption. What would he recommend? “They have two very famous wines. A beautiful fresh, crisp white wine called Vermentino. And then they have my favourite wine ever: Cannonau is a grape that only grows in Sardinia – a very strong, full-bodied red wine.”

As Gordon Ramsay grudgingly admitted when he visited Villa D'Acampo on their recent road trip around Italy, it's an idyllic setup. No wonder he escapes to his own little corner of paradise as often as work allows. CLAIRE WEBB

SEDUCTIVE SARDINIA

FIND THE ISLAND'S SPANISH SIDE

Catalan is still spoken in Alghero on the north-west coast, which locals call Barceloneta. Walk the city walls at sunset, admire its splendid 16th-century cathedral, get lost in the labyrinth of medieval lanes and lunch on aragosta alla catalana – Catalan-style lobster. Hop on a boat to see its most popular attraction: Neptune's Grotto, a cave with illuminated rock formations.

STROLL THROUGH HISTORY

Discover the centuries-old palazzi, churches and museums stuffed with antiquities in Il Castello, the hilltop citadel that crowns the elegant capital Cagliari. Its Sardinia's most Italian city, with plenty of lively cafés to enjoy an aperitivo and spot of people-watching.

TAKE THE TRAIN

The most relaxing way to see the island's wild interior is on the narrow-gauge Little Green Train from the port of Arbatax, which trundles past vineyards, gorges and vertiginous villages. DH Lawrence was a passenger in 1921 and described the experience in his rather tetchy travel book Sea and Sardinia. CW

Why do we describe those who live in the country as "bumpkins"?

Frances Butcher Ealing, west London

Country-dwellers have never had a particularly good time, linguistically speaking. For the most part they've been viewed as slow-witted rustics, as opposed to their "urbane" (ie urban) city neighbours. "Bumpkin" is just one example of this prejudice. It seems to have been a borrowing from the Dutch bommekijn, "small barrel", used to describe someone short, squat, and slightly comical. In 16th-century English, the term was applied to someone socially awkward and who therefore probably lived "in the sticks".

Other terms on the same theme include "yokel", a dialect word for a green woodpecker (hence someone 'green' or naïve) and "hick" (a nickname for Richard).

GET MOVING
Why are there no TV exercise classes?

Terrestrial TV provides endless hours of medical, nutrition and wellbeing programmes to encourage us to live more healthily, but no one in my recent memory has commissioned a series of exercise classes – like those run by Green Goddess Diana Moran [right] in the 1980s!

I can think of no better time to show such programmes than in daytime, before busy mums have to collect their children, or when we couch potatoes are beginning to feel a little restless. I would rejoice in joining a daily TV class with a properly trained instructor. This would motivate me to exercise at home, without fear of looking ridiculous. Yoga, pilates, Zumba, aerobics, cardio, muscle building, bone strength etc... the scope is endless. Does this idea have legs?

Alex Renton, series editor of Top Gear, replies: "Top Gear has always been first and foremost a car show, but when the opportunity arises to include bikes in a race or a challenge, we're more than happy to. Tractors, boats and planes often get a look-in, too! Chris Harris is a big fan of motorbikes and no doubt if he's given a chance to include one in the next series, he will."

"In the last two series we have featured motorbikes. There was Matt LeBlanc on a Ducati versus Chris Harris in a Bugatti – and the duo duelled again in series 25 when they enjoyed a race through the forests of California on electric dirt bikes hunting Big Foot. Thanks for watching."

SOOTHING SOUNDS

Amazing! My dog, who always barks at fireworks, listened to the soothing Pet Sounds with Bill Turnbull (3 November Classic FM), put her head down and slept peacefully all evening. Thank you so much, Bill, for a brilliant idea and a restful couple of hours.

OUR LIFE ON SCREEN

I want to say how much There She Goes (BBC4) meant to me. Our daughter has high-functioning autism – unlike Rosie, she can talk, dance and go to school. But she also has behavioural issues, and I have seen our life reflected in the series. Thank you, Shaun Pye, for dramatising this life, with its contradictions, compromises and improvised strategies, and not sentimentalising or sensationalising it. It's also painfully, brilliantly funny. These wonderful characters give me strength – and help us celebrate our own "Rosie".

HOW YOU CAN HELP

Some programmes are hard to watch because, although they're well made, the subject leaves us feeling sad and helpless.

However, I believe dramas like Doing Money (5 November BBC2) are an excellent way to reach people who are turned off by news or documentaries, and to inform them of issues such as human trafficking and modern slavery.

It is easy to feel, like Alison Graham (RT, 3 November) overwhelmed by the myriad injustices and exploitation in the world all brought to our attention by the ease of modern communication.

But the good news is that there are many charities fighting modern slavery. Just two examples are Snowdrop in my local area and Unseen UK, which has set up a modern slavery helpline. If anyone is worried about someone they can call free on 08000 121700.

A small action by many can make a big difference.

HEIRS TO MILLIGAN

The Inside No 9 Live Special (28 October BBC2) didn't just stretch the envelope, it deformed it out of all proportions.

Reece Shearsmith and Steve Pemberton are writing some of the best comedy programmes I've seen. They don't always get it right, but when they do... I was reminded of Spike Milligan's Q in the mid-70s, when he wanted to stretch TV comedy beyond making the viewing unsettling, which he did spectacularly. How do they possibly top this?

Richard Matthews Wolverhampton

ON YOUR BIKE!

I have always enjoyed Top Gear (BBC2), though in the era of Jeremy Clarkson, James May and Richard Hammond, I felt it was a disgrace that Clarkson was allowed to share his anti-motorcycle prejudices. Having failed to regularly include motorcycles in the past few series, even though some of the recent presenters were sympathetic to two wheels, it's time that the BBC gives us bikers a reason to watch the new incarnation of Top Gear with Paddy McGuinness and Andrew Flintoff.

The motorcycle industry is a great success in this country – we make some of the best bikes in the world and many of our motorcycle sportsmen are world-class. Please recognise this and watch the ratings soar!

GOING BACK IN TIME

We really enjoyed Inside the Tower of London (Channel 5). It was interesting, informative and fun. But early in the second episode (30 October) there was a shot in which we could clearly see visitors to the tower walking backwards down the stairs. How unusual!

Louise Herrick Newark, Nottinghamshire

SPREAD THE WORD

With regard to the pre-packed sandwich debate (Feedback, 3/10 November), I can remember in the 1950s going behind the scenes with my father, a food technologist, at Marks & Spencer's Pantheon store in London's Oxford Street, where girls were packing sandwiches and sealing them on a warm steel plate.

RADIO 2 GOES GREEN

Clare Teal on Radio 2 on Sunday evenings, presenting two hours of big band music, jazz and swing, is a must-listen for me! But sitting in for her on 28 October was Leo Green, and he was a pleasure to listen to – like his father, the late, great Benny Green. Can we look forward to hearing more of the delightful Leo Green?

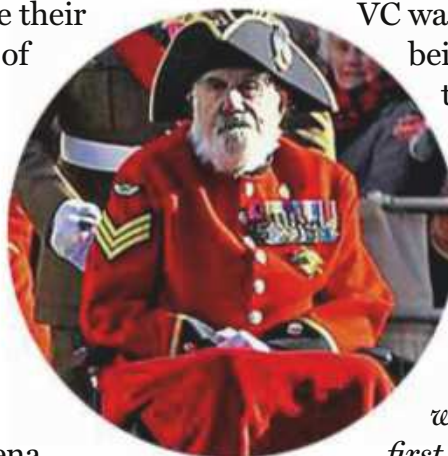

Mac Crook Coventry
Good news – a spokesperson for Radio 2 tells us Leo will be presenting a live show on Christmas Eve, from 10pm to midnight, called The Green Room.

WE WILL REMEMBER THEM

TV coverage of the First World War Armistice centenary has been excellent and very moving, telling the stories of people from across the world who gave their lives in the service of their country, with courage and fortitude. It is a great shame, though, that the focus has been solely on the Western Front, albeit the carnage wrought in this arena of war was beyond imagination. My own grandfather perished in Damascus, Syria, on 2 November 1918, in the closing days of the war. It would have been very interesting for descendants of those who lost their lives in the other theatres of war to have seen some programmes covering these campaigns, too.

However, we will remember them, with gratitude, whenever and wherever they served.

Yvonne Mulvaney Leeds

...In the caption to the photograph of the Annual Procession on Remembrance Sunday (RT, 10 November), the Chelsea Pensioner being pushed by Johnson Beharry VC was not identified as also being a recipient of the Victoria Cross, namely the late Bill Speakman [left].

Di Paice via email

We're pleased to put this omission right.

Mr Speakman died in June this year and was, incidentally, the first person to receive such an honour from the Queen.

HOUSEHOLD NOBODIES

I loved the game show Letterbox (BBC2) and Mel Giedroyc is an excellent host. However, next time can we not have so many so-called celebrities in the "famous person" category? Or at least explain who the heck they are!

Jenny Hogan Wetley Rocks, Staffordshire

MADE'S MIX-UP

I'm enjoying Made in Great Britain (Fridays BBC2) and it was great to see my home city of Sheffield in the first episode.

However, I was surprised to see some panoramic shots of Sheffield featured in the second episode (2 November) – which was all about York! It could have been worse – at least they didn't mix up Sheffield with Leeds...

Andrew Speight Sheffield ▷

RT ROYAL QUIZ

Win a fabulous box set of The Crown!

The acclaimed drama The Crown, created by Peter Morgan, has won Baftas, Emmy Awards and Golden Globes – and a huge number of fans, thanks to the superb cast led by Claire Foy as the young Queen and Matt Smith as the Duke of Edinburgh. Now is your chance to catch up with the Netflix drama everyone's been talking about. Follow Elizabeth from the carefree princess that she was in the 1940s to the shock of her father's death that propelled her to the throne in the early 50s and her struggles to preserve the traditions of the monarchy in the changing world of the 60s – all while saving her marriage.

Five winners of our royal-themed competition will receive the newly released box set of The Crown series one and two, on Blu-ray or DVD (depending on their equipment). It's a treat not to be missed!

Answer the questions below correctly and you'll be in with a chance – or if you really can't wait to revel in the passions and politics, lavish production values, grand staterooms, period cars and clothes, order the box set now on DVD (see offer below).

1 Princess Elizabeth was on a tour of the Commonwealth when her father, George VI, died. Name the country she was in when she received the news.

2 What is the name of the divorcé Princess Margaret was not allowed to marry?

3 Which boarding school did Prince Philip send Prince Charles to?

4 In which year was the Queen's Christmas message to the nation first televised?

IN PRAISE OF THE PROS

It was very touching to see Aljaz Skorjanec comforting his wife, Janette Manrara, after her last dance with Dr Ranj on Strictly (4 November BBC1). It is easy to overlook the professional dancers' emotions – they must also want to do well in the competition, and will feel just as disappointed to be voted out as the celebrity.

Jan Brown Weybridge, Surrey
Turn to page 10 for the Strictly Half-term Report, and to page 15 for Dr Ranj's farewell diary.

I CAN'T CONNECT!

I've tried to make the connection. I have attempted to predict the final item. I am vaguely successful with the Walls and the Missing Vowels round. What I completely fail to do is to record Only Connect on my digital recorder. None of the last series recorded; and now, despite Victoria Coren Mitchell's [left] pithy quips, my recorder still won't record the program. It has no problems with University Challenge. Is my recorder too highbrow?

View from my sofa

JOE LYCETT

‘I fell in love with the sewers’

The comedian has turned his hand to presenting – and sewing

Joe, tell us about the view from your sofa...

It depends where I am. If I'm in London I stay with my friend Jenny Beavan [the award-winning costume designer]. She has a lot of trinkets in the living room. Although if I was her, I'd put the Oscars she's won on display. Instead, they are hidden away in a little corner.

When you stay with Jenny, who rules the remote control?

She always wins. She loves a property programme – she is all about Location, Location, Location and anything with Kirstie and Phil. So whenever she's there, that's what's on and I would never challenge her to watch anything else – it's her house!

When you're not staying with Jenny, where do you live?

In Birmingham. I only moved in last year and I had no furniture or anything because I'd lived with mum and dad this whole time. So I have a grey fabric sofa, the telly in front, a log burner – that was one of my extravagant purchases – and a coffee table that Dad gave me, which I don't like. He said, “Have a think about the coffee table...” and then he just brought it round. So it looks like I have his coffee table now.

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK Ma'am Darling by Craig Brown. It's about Princess Margaret and it's so good – what a character.

MY RADIO I love Greg James on Radio 1 breakfast, but I listen to a lot of Radio 5 Live in the day and Classic FM in the car.

MY BOX SET Will & Grace. I've watched quite a few of the new ones as well – and it's still brilliant.

Tell us how you came to have your portrait painted by Paul from the Chuckle Brothers?

I've really got into painting but I'm not very good at it, and one of the people that I painted was Paul Chuckle. I didn't know him, but I put a picture of it on Twitter and he got in touch and said, “I love that painting you've done, do you mind sending it to me? If you do, I'll do one of you.” A few weeks later I received a painting from Paul Chuckle in the post and it's signed “Chuckle”. It's so sweet and it hangs on the wall next to the sofa. Now I'm friends with Paul and I think he's genuinely a lovely man – one of the nicest in showbusiness and such a hard worker.

What do you watch on TV?

I'm really enjoying the HBO series Succession. Matthew Macfadyen is in it, and I always loved him in Spooks – that was one of my all-time faves. He was so cool in that, and yet he plays this absolute goon in Succession. Taskmaster is also a staple of mine and I try to catch The Graham Norton Show.

How have you found the adjustment from stand-up comedian to game-show presenter?

It came easier than I thought it would. And that's what I loved about the format for The Time It Takes – that I could be silly. You have to be very careful in telly as a comedian that you don't get seen as a presenter too much because then you stop getting comedy bookings, but this show absolutely ticked both of those boxes. It allowed me to get a lot more experience and practice in hosting a show while also being, hopefully, funny. I have a good feeling about the show, but it's so hard to know because the Saturday tea-time slot is very difficult to get right. Lots of people have tried it before. I think it's a good sign that both Alison Hammond [his co-presenter] and I, as well as all the contestants, had a really good time. If that comes across to the people at home, then we'll be fine.

You've recently finished filming The Great British Sewing Bee after taking over from Claudia Winkleman as host. Did she give you any advice?

She didn't – but she was very lovely about it and said how gentle the show is. And that was absolutely my experience of presenting it. I added some sillier aspects, but I fell in love with all the sewers. I'm still in touch with them all via a WhatsApp group. I knew nothing about sewing before I went in there... and I still don't really know anything. I just want to have added to the show and not ruined it for anyone. That's my only hope.

FRANCES TAYLOR

Joe Lycett presents The Time It Takes on Saturday 5.20pm on BBC1.

The new series of The Great British Sewing Bee will be shown next year.
