THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'Welcome back Vera, we've missed you'

At last 2019 TV has begun to stretch its muscles with the return of three blockbuster dramas, all in the same week. So let's pull those left-over-from-New-Year party poppers for the return of Cold Feet, Vera and our cover stars, Call the Midwife.

Vera (Sunday ITV) has always been a big favourite of mine, and of RT readers, who routinely make sure novelist Ann Cleeves's and actress Brenda Blethyn's gloriously shabby, brilliantly intuitive cop hovers somewhere near the top of any favourite TV detective poll.

I love Ann Cleeves's original novels and of course there aren't enough of those to feed into the giant maw of television drama, though the most recent Vera novel, The Seagull, is adapted for the final episode in the new series. But Blethyn has always stuck closely to the original Vera Stanhope as she was written in the books, while making the character very much her own. In the first meaty episode in the series (nearly two hours!), Vera and her team investigate the death of a promising forensic psychology trainee.

There's a potential clash of the Titans on Sunday which also sees the return of Call the Midwife, one of the most bankable of BBC1 hits. It's parked directly in Vera's path so doubtless there will be plenty of recording one or the other to watch later. As we go back to Poplar there are two new arrivals at Nonnatus House, and there's an angry story about the suffering of pregnant women with nowhere to turn, who were forced into the clutches of backstreet abortionists in the 1960s.

Finally, Cold Feet returns to ITV on Monday, with a cheeky opening sequence from writer Mike Bullen that features the gang getting ready for a wedding. But whose? Though there are hints of a darkness yet to come as one of the friends faces possibly life-changing news.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

JANE GARVEY

'The Long Song is the best drama I've seen for a while, I loved the sly humour," says our guest columnist. "On radio, I really enjoyed Amy Lamé's interview with music producer Tony Visconti on 6 Music. And my favourite podcast is For the Many with LBC's Iain Dale and former Home Secretary Jacqui Smith. It's basically politics and innuendo and it makes me laugh.'

JEREMY CLARKSON

'I love all quizzes, and Pointless the most, although I've never been on it," says the Grand Tour presenter. "I'd adore to be on it with my son. He can pick up all the things like sport I'm not very good on. I know a little bit about birds. I know a ptarmigan from an osprey, and a yellowhammer from a reed warbler, which most people don't know.'

June Whitfield

Remembered by Roy Hudd

When I first met June in the early 1980s I was scared to open my mouth. Everyone who worked with her for the first time was wary because of all the work she'd done, her talent and her professionalism. But she was perfect at putting people at ease and affectionate to those she worked with.

June was on my Radio 2 show The News Huddlines for 14 years and she'd pluck hilarious voices out of the air in the most inventive way. She was as lovely as June from Terry and June, but with a wicked sense of fun. She was good at making people think she was a nice lady who wouldn't make waves. Little did they know she couldn't half make waves when she wanted to. My aunt, who listened to our show, said, "Why do you keep making that lovely June Whitfield say all those terrible things?" I didn't want to tell her that June had thought of all of them! A writer would say to her, "Wouldn't it be better if you did it like that?" She'd say, "Yes dear, you're absolutely correct," then she'd do exactly what she'd done the first time. We knew she was going to do it but the more wet-behind-the-ears writers didn't.

One morning she came in and said she'd got a script for a new show called Absolutely Fabulous. She tried out some lines on us in a voice – the one she went on to use – and we screamed with laughter.

She was wonderful at playing it straight, too. We did a BBC1 series together called Common as Muck in which her character died. There wasn't a dry eye in the house, even from the tough old TV crew.

I'm speaking at her funeral, which is heartbreaking because she was the best ever. June had this veneer of being so ordinary – but in fact she was absolutely extraordinary.

‘Men are better? Twaddle’

Women deserve to be heard on daytime Radio 2

Stay calm, everyone, but with the grand arrival of Zoe Ball and Sara Cox in primetime (Monday to Friday), Radio 2 is tip-toeing tentatively into the New Age and finding some space for female voices in its daytime schedule.

A Queen as head of state? No problem. Female prime ministers? Tick. But a person of the female variety being companionable, politely probing and occasionally ever-so-slightly cheeky between 7am and 7pm on Britain’s most popular radio station? Gosh. Now. Very tricky. We’re not sure about that one…

And we get it: it’s hard to change a winning formula. Radio 2 was nowhere near broke. It’s a super-soaraway ratings juggernaut. You can call it male and pale (I did). You can say it’s too safe and the content is unchallenging. (People do, and they can thrill to the musical curveballs of BBC 6 Music.) But you can’t deny it works.

‘As we say on Woman’s Hour, you can’t be what you don’t see. Or hear’

Radio 1 was once the place to be: every adolescent bedroom broadcaster’s dream. But then everyone grew up, started to care about mortgages and descaling showerheads, and found a new audio home on Radio 2. Nothing to rock the boat here: just plenty of hummable tunes and great company: high energy with Chris Evans first thing, dry wit with the brilliant Ken Bruce, lunchtime current affairs to chew over with Jeremy Vine, Steve “Love the show, Steve” Wright in the afternoon, Simon Mayo taking you home. Every one a ratings winner. Every one a middle-aged white man. (The author, undeniably, is a middle-aged white woman.)

To be absolutely clear: this frothy, disposable Radio 2 thing isn’t easy. It’s much easier to present one of Radio 4’s hugely “clever” shows. Trust me: Radio 4’s allegedly big-brained hosts are helped and protected by erudite producers. Put it this way: I started on Woman’s Hour in 2007 and told a producer I’d ad lib an introduction rather than script one. “Yes,” she said, nervously, “but what are you going to say?”

It takes real skill to fill two or three hours of unscripted, free-flowing, seemingly effortless radio, making it both listenable and inoffensive. Try it. (I have, and wasn’t much cop.) The notion that it’s a lot of money for old rope is wrong. But it’s also wrong to suggest that men are better at it. A more natural fit. That’s utter twaddle.

DIFFERENT VOICES Sara Cox and Zoe Ball have broken into Radio 2 primetime

Men have certainly had more opportunities on Radio 2 recently. Vanessa Feltz has been an early-morning presence, of course, but it’s been 20 years since Debbie Thrower’s regular daily show. Perhaps it doesn’t really matter. But as we say on Woman’s Hour: you can’t be what you don’t see. Or hear, in this case. Women’s experiences are different. The world views us differently. We deserve to be heard, too.

How did Radio 2 end up as the home of the avuncular chap? Male bosses appointed in their own image, and perhaps female bosses followed their example and appointed men, too. Strange, though, that Radio 2 should be such an old-fashioned outlier: the other BBC radio networks don’t seem to have a problem finding women who can find and keep an audience. Just don’t get me started on what they pay them…

Ultimately, Ball and Cox aren’t “female broadcasters”. They’re great presenters. And be wary of anyone who makes the claim that women are “taking over”. They’re not: they’re taking their rightful place.

Jane Garvey is a presenter of Woman’s Hour on Radio 4.

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE… 15–21 JANUARY 1972

WHAT WE WATCHED

Joyce Grenfell, the brilliant observational comedian with the plummy voice and razor-sharp eye, was back for a new four-part series of monologues and songs on BBC2. She’d been away from the small screen for a year in order to recharge her batteries, she told RT, adding that her beloved husband Reginald’s fondness for watching Grandstand on Saturday afternoons meant that on one day at least she’d be writing new material from 1pm until midnight. “I never intend to retire,” she added. “But I may ration myself a little more.” She died seven years later, in 1979, with Reggie following in 1993.

WHAT YOU SAID

Princess Anne had been named Sports Personality of the Year after her 1971 European Three-day Horse Trial gold, and RT readers had a lot to say about it. Tony Vick from Felsted in Essex congratulated the Princess Royal for “having enough modesty to feel embarrassed” at the win “over the heads of many men and women who have done a great deal more for British sport”. MD Carr of Lancashire questioned the voting process, asking if Anne had been picked by “a majority of women merely interested in personalities”. BEN DOWELL

‘I love my bus pass!’

Jenny Agutter has spent a lifetime on screen, but she’s as feisty as ever – talking of bullies, sex pests and Brexiteers

INTERVIEW BY GINNY DOUGARY

Jenny Agutter walks across the floor of an atmospheric old house – all artful peeling walls – used for location work in south-east London, with the bearing of the dancer she trained to be long ago. At the age of eight, she was sent to board at Elmhurst Ballet School in Birmingham. She’s now 66 and looks close to it as wimpled Sister Julienne in Call the Midwife, but younger in person. In fact, with her hair pulled back in a bun, delicate features and natural grace, it’s easy to imagine her – the years rolling right back – tying the ribbons to her pumps, as one of Degas’s tutu’d “little ballerinas”.

She is a curious mixture of no-nonsense and skittishness. Sentences often don’t finish as she talks rapidly and at length, without pausing for breath, phrases giddily layering on top of one another, making it tricky sometimes to disentangle them. Being with her can make you feel like a pedestrian waiting at a railway crossing gazing patiently at a train that never ends.

For many of us, the actor was an indelible part of our growing up – as Bobbie in the 1970 film adaptation of the Edith Nesbit novel The Railway Children, crying “Daddy, my Daddy”, heart-wrenchingly, as she was reunited with her father. As the schoolgirl in the Australian Outback in Nic Roeg’s Walkabout; and as Fritha, with Richard Harris, in The Snow Goose (1971), for which she won an Emmy.

Her crisp enunciation is redolent of an earlier era – her voice has depth and fullness, with a slight catch in the breath. There is no trace of twang from her 17 years living in the hills of west Hollywood from her early 20s. Perhaps because of their itinerant life as an Army family – always on the move, never staying anywhere longer than three years – her parents didn’t make a fuss about their daughter taking off to live on her own, at the age of 21, in Tinseltown.

“My mother never said, ‘Do you really think you should?’ or anything to put me off going. It was just total and complete support for whatever I wanted to do,” she says. “And that made me really comfortable about going because I always knew I could come back.

“I remember one time getting terribly upset and my parents came over and picked me up – just like that,” she snaps her fingers. “So I’ve always had that support emotionally, which is why I’ve always wanted to work with charities for people who haven’t had that. I feel extremely lucky in that way. Families can fall apart for many, many reasons.”

I ask her what it was like, with such a close family, being sent off to boarding school when she was so young. “I remember being picked on because I went out to Cyprus for ▷

SUNDAY FAVOURITE
As Sister Julienne in Call the Midwife, she has won a whole new fanbase

◁ holidays, I had lovely things... It was exotic and I didn't want for anything – so it seemed like I was a spoilt little girl."

The chief bully was the daughter of a doctor and she and her gang sent Agutter to Coventry. "The interesting thing is I saw her do that to some girls and they would fall apart. But I couldn't have cared less. I think I was pretty tough and I was very good at seeing systems. So I saw the way things worked at the school.

"Basically, what you learn to do is to separate yourself – which isn't good, but it does set you up for a lot of things in life. It's not particularly healthy because I don't think one should create a barrier between oneself and the world. But that's how you learnt to deal with everything – to separate yourself from it and just go [she flicks invisible dirt from her fingers], 'Pah!' – and that's all right."

Agutter's father, Derek, died at the beginning of 2018 – which still chokes her up as she describes his funeral on the Lizard peninsula in Cornwall. Derek and her mother Catherine – who had met in Egypt, where he was in charge of entertainments for the forces – bought a place in Cornwall to be close to the holiday home of Jenny and her Swedish hotelier husband, Johan Tham, and moved there full-time about 20 years ago.

"Because of where it was, we actually got to carry my father's coffin, walking across the road from his flat to the graveyard and the church. The community – the people were very giving and it was good to feel part of something more than just being by ourselves."

TOUCHING ROLE
As Bobbie (near left) in The Railway Children, with Bernard Cribbins

Going through her father's things, she discovered an eight-page letter she had written to her parents decades earlier, which her father had kept in a box. It described everything she was experiencing, being fêted in the US as a 19-year-old, despatched to pick up her Emmy for best supporting actress in The Snow Goose. "I would never even have realised I did so much without finding that letter," she says, with her radiant smile. "I was über-excited!

"For the Emmy Awards, I wore Gina Fratini – and I still have it. The dress was very floaty, with feathers hanging off it. I did nothing with my hair, which was tied up on top of my head and my face looked completely free of make-up."

Her late mother, one of ten Irish Catholic children born in Liverpool, loved fashion and had a natural refinement: "Much more than me, she was very keen on dressing correctly – and rather surprised by me not showing much interest."

For the record, Agutter looks incredibly elegant when we meet, in a cream silk blouse, skinny trousers and sculptural, burnished gold earrings that wrap around her lobes in an intriguing way. There's no doubt that she has paid attention to her appearance.

"I was in the public eye, of course, and I remember someone sending me £5 in the post saying, 'Why don't you go to the hairdresser!'" A big laugh. "It was the period when one had one's hair long and rather fine, with your ears sticking through. I really didn't bother much."

'I was bullied at school, but I didn't care. I was tough'

While she finds it a relief that for her role as Sister Julienne there is no make-up or glamour involved – "it's liberating because you're not thinking all the time about the way you look" – that's not to say she isn't vain. She clears her throat. "I think as an actor there's always a certain amount of vanity because you want to present the best part of yourself physically. And it's partly expectation – I mean, no one wants you to look like a sack of potatoes all the time. I watch my weight and I keep fit, partly out of vanity and partly because as an actor I'm expected to – but I'm not overly vain.

"If I go out – and I don't always take the time to make myself look good – I realise I am vain because I don't want people to take photographs."

By 1975 she owned her own flat in Los Angeles, in Marmont Lane, where she lived for eight years. "I was about parallel with the sixth floor of Chateau Marmont [a luxury hotel on Sunset Boulevard]. When I bought my place, they pointed to that floor and said, 'Oh, that's where Andy Warhol paints when he's here'. I was 23... I know!" she grins, acknowledging how far-fetched it sounds.

When she moved to LA, Agutter was in a relationship with Patrick Garland, who had directed her in The Snow Goose; there was a 17-year age gap (he was 36 to her 19). Since she was so young and he was in a position of considerable power in the workplace, it's the kind of blurring of boundaries that would raise eyebrows today.

Agutter has no problem with it, then or now. When I ask her about it she says, pleasantly, "Yes, but he was a very nice person." Do you look back on it and think, 'Well, perhaps that was a bit odd'?

"No, not at all. It was a very important, very good relationship. He was very interesting and it went on for a good length of time for that age – a good couple of years."

As for the #MeToo movement, she says, "I can never fully understand the people who got themselves into problems. In the States, there were occasions when you might be asked to go to a private screening or someone's place and you just didn't do it – unless you found the person very attractive, in which case you did do it! But if they're not really attractive, there's nothing to be gained from it, because it's obvious what you're indicating by going."

This sounds to me too much like blaming ▷

◁ the women when, surely, it's the men who are abusing their power? "It's terrible that anyone would use their power in that way. That's wrong, wrong, wrong, wrong – no question about it. What is sad is to be in a situation where you have to negotiate it: you shouldn't have to do that. I was very lucky never to have to."

So you never had to deal with a Towelling Bathrobe situation?

"No, because apart from anything else, in the States I went out with someone who was actually in the studio system – a producer – and because of that I was a little bit protected. No one was going to hit on me, with him there! It was a bit like having the Mafia around you."

But if you had found yourself in a hotel room for what you thought was a business meeting and the man started his sleazy shenanigans, what would you have done? "Back out of the door rather fast! Because there isn't any part that's worth that – and I think there's an arrogance in me a little bit as well, which is, 'If you're not casting me because I'm right for the part, then why are we in this situation?'"

On to more pleasant subjects: the series that Agutter has been starring in since 2012 is now entering its eighth year. She is delighted to hear some feedback from actual midwives I know who say that Call the Midwife feels more emotionally authentic to them than documentaries that deal with birthing.

"Everything is really quiet when you have real babies on set." Her voice drops to a whisper. "Everything is very calm. The baby who played Shelagh's baby [in the finale of series six] turned out to be called Jonathan, like my own son, and I got terribly emotional about that! The little baby was somewhere between eight and ten days old and it took me back to the Christmas Day when my Jonathan arrived." Jonathan is now in his 20s and a doctor at St Thomas's Hospital in London.

The new series will be exploring social issues such as interracial adoption, as well as cot death and sickle-cell disease. Of the latter, Agutter says: "It's in the black community and the Jewish community and was something I came across in the States because I used to work in a school there at Watts."

The LA district of Watts, which attracted world attention in 1965 because of the riots there, remains one of the city's most impoverished and dangerous neighbourhoods. It's commendable that Agutter was prepared to leave her world of Hollywood privilege to venture into such a challenging environment to try to do something worthwhile. But in fact, this is a pattern of her life. Since 2012 the actor has been the patron of St Giles Trust, which supports former prisoners as well as other disadvantaged people. She is really enthusiastic about the work: "The thing about getting involved with anything like that is that it keeps one's feet very firmly on the ground and it introduces you to people that I have loved being around. There are other worlds, you know?"

Her preferred mode of transport is the bus "because I'm a people watcher and also I love having my Freedom Pass!" [It gives free travel to older people living in London.] Politically, she and her American friends are Democrats and she is very pro-Europe. Agutter didn't go on the

'I was shocked at being called a fascist for backing a People's Vote'

People's Vote march in London last October because she was abroad, but she did post about it on her Facebook page: "It's a kind of work Facebook page, but I wrote, 'Hurrah – excellent – does everyone know about the march and the People's Vote and here we are and we've got a chance to take hold of our future' and so on.

"I cannot tell you how many ghastly comments came in as a response to that. I was called a fascist and told 'You shouldn't get into politics – just get back behind the screen' and all the rest of it..." Was she surprised by the vitriol of the response? "Completely shocked."

During the time when she was living in the States, Agutter came back to the UK regularly and appeared on stage for the RSC and at the National Theatre. That, she says, is where she really learnt how to act. She still sometimes misses the Californian weather and the dear friends who don't travel, as well as a certain kind of openness that we Brits lack. But she says, "I knew I would never retire at the Golden Crest Retirement Centre on Sunset Boulevard, where all the old actors went." A gentle laugh. "I didn't quite see myself living that life. And I'm British, but what I really am is a European, actually."

And with that, Jenny Agutter – with her feet most definitely placed firmly on the ground – walks off into the rain.

MEET THE NEW NUNS

SISTER HILDA
FENELLA WOOLGAR

"Sister Hilda can certainly put her foot in it, but can't we all?" says Fenella Woolgar, 49. "She's a gung-go type of person who's excited about coming to Nonnatus. She was also in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force in the war, so although she's from a fairly privileged background, she has seen terrible things."

By a coincidence, Woolgar's great-aunt was a nun, called Sister Mary Hilda: "She was Irish and in an enclosed convent. I always found it really odd going to visit her as a child." Woolgar herself attended a convent school. "I used to pray not to have a vocation," she says. "I'd be terrible as a nun. I'm far too rebellious."

Woolgar has appeared in Victoria & Abdul, Quacks, Harlots, Home Fires, War and Peace, and played Agatha Christie in a 2008 episode of Doctor Who. Her big break came in Bright Young Things. "I'm so grateful to Stephen Fry," she says of the 2003 film he directed. "I adore him. I was a complete unknown, fresh out of drama school, and he took a real punt."

Her next projects include film Gareth Jones, starring James Norton and Vanessa Kirby, and Judy, the Judy Garland biopic. She plays Margaret Hamilton, the Wicked Witch in The Wizard of Oz, "with hilarious prosthetics"!

SISTER FRANCES
ELLA BRUCCOLERI

Bruccoleri had only been out of drama school six months when she got the role. "I had to audition using old scripts. There was a waiting room full of really pretty girls also auditioning and when I came home I said, 'I don't think I've got this.'"

But Ella secured the part – only her third TV role after leaving Oxford School of Drama. She had previously appeared in Genius: Picasso, starring Antonio Banderas, and in drama The Last Kingdom as, bizarrely, a nun – something she's making a habit of. At drama school, while again playing a nun in a play, her friend joked that she should be in Call the Midwife. "We just laughed. But it was quite soon after that I got this part," she recalls.

"Frances really struggles to fit in at Nonnatus," says Bruccoleri. "Initially, it's hard for her to bond with the midwives. And there's a harrowing moment she shares with Valerie in episode one that brings them together, but also makes their relationship more difficult."

It wasn't all plain sailing on set, either. "On the first day I was so nervous that I didn't even wait for the word 'action' – I just ran in. But learning from Jenny Agutter as your crash course in acting is amazing. I couldn't ask for a better teacher." FRANCES TAYLOR

Bless you my son

James Norton is handing over his parish to Tom Brittney with a heavy heart

INTERVIEWS BY MICHAEL HODGES

JAMES NORTON

"It's a wrench," says James Norton, agonising about his imminent departure from Grantchester, where he's played Reverend Sidney Chambers since 2014. "My head says it's time to move forward, but my heart is saying these are my friends – wonderful people that I've spent the last four years with, and had the most incredible time with. Grantchester is such a joy, I envy Tom."

Tom Brittney, playing Reverend Will Davenport, is about to take over from Norton. The odds on there being two sleuthing vicars in the Church of England in the 1950s, both remarkably handsome and both – one after the other – ministering to the same parish in Cambridgeshire are, possibly, beyond computation, but that is just what happens in series four of the crime series.

'I'm the grumpy old actor being usurped by beautiful Tom'

JAMES NORTON

Norton was 29 in 2014 when he first appeared as the vicar keen to assist police inspector Geordie Keating, played by Robson Green. He was known for playing rapist Tommy Lee Royce in Happy Valley but wasn't yet a leading man. "It sounds crass to say it," Norton says, "but Grantchester was the first time I was number one on the call sheet in the morning. That's when you're front and centre of the show. On Happy Valley it was Sarah Lancashire, so it was a massive moment for me."

Four years later Norton is now the star, acclaimed for his role as reluctant Anglo-Russian mobster Alex Godman in McMafia, and before that despairing Andrei Bolkonsky in War & Peace. "I've played so many tortured souls," he says. "I guess drama is about those people who live on the fringes of humanity."

Grantchester was never quite the cosy show its profile might have suggested. "Sidney is an extreme individual, and he's tortured and conflicted like all of us," says Norton. "But what's wonderful about returning to him for this series is his goodness. He always sees the best in people and wants the best for them. I've spent a long time in Sidney's head and he's become a kind of friend, an alter ego."

Did he offer Brittney much advice? "Mostly it was quite a p-take. On the one hand, I was trying to give him advice and on the other I'd pretend to spread horrible rumours about him. I was being the grumpy old actor who was being usurped by the beautiful young Tom Brittney with the most incredible pearly teeth."

Norton played a working-class Yorkshireman in Happy Valley; in real life he was born in London, the son of teachers who moved north when he was young and sent him to Yorkshire's top public school, Ampleforth. He's aware of the privilege it gifted him. "Of course, I'm going to be considered for some roles because of the way I speak, and my age and the way I look."

The way he looks – intense blue eyes and a muscle culture rarely found in holy orders – has attracted an enthusiastic fan base for Grantchester, but perhaps detracts from the seriousness of his reputation. Is it a drag, being this handsome? "A drag?" Norton says. "I've never really thought of myself as Orlando Bloom. Sidney is enigmatic and fascinating, so people are drawn to that. But I'd hate to be limited ▷

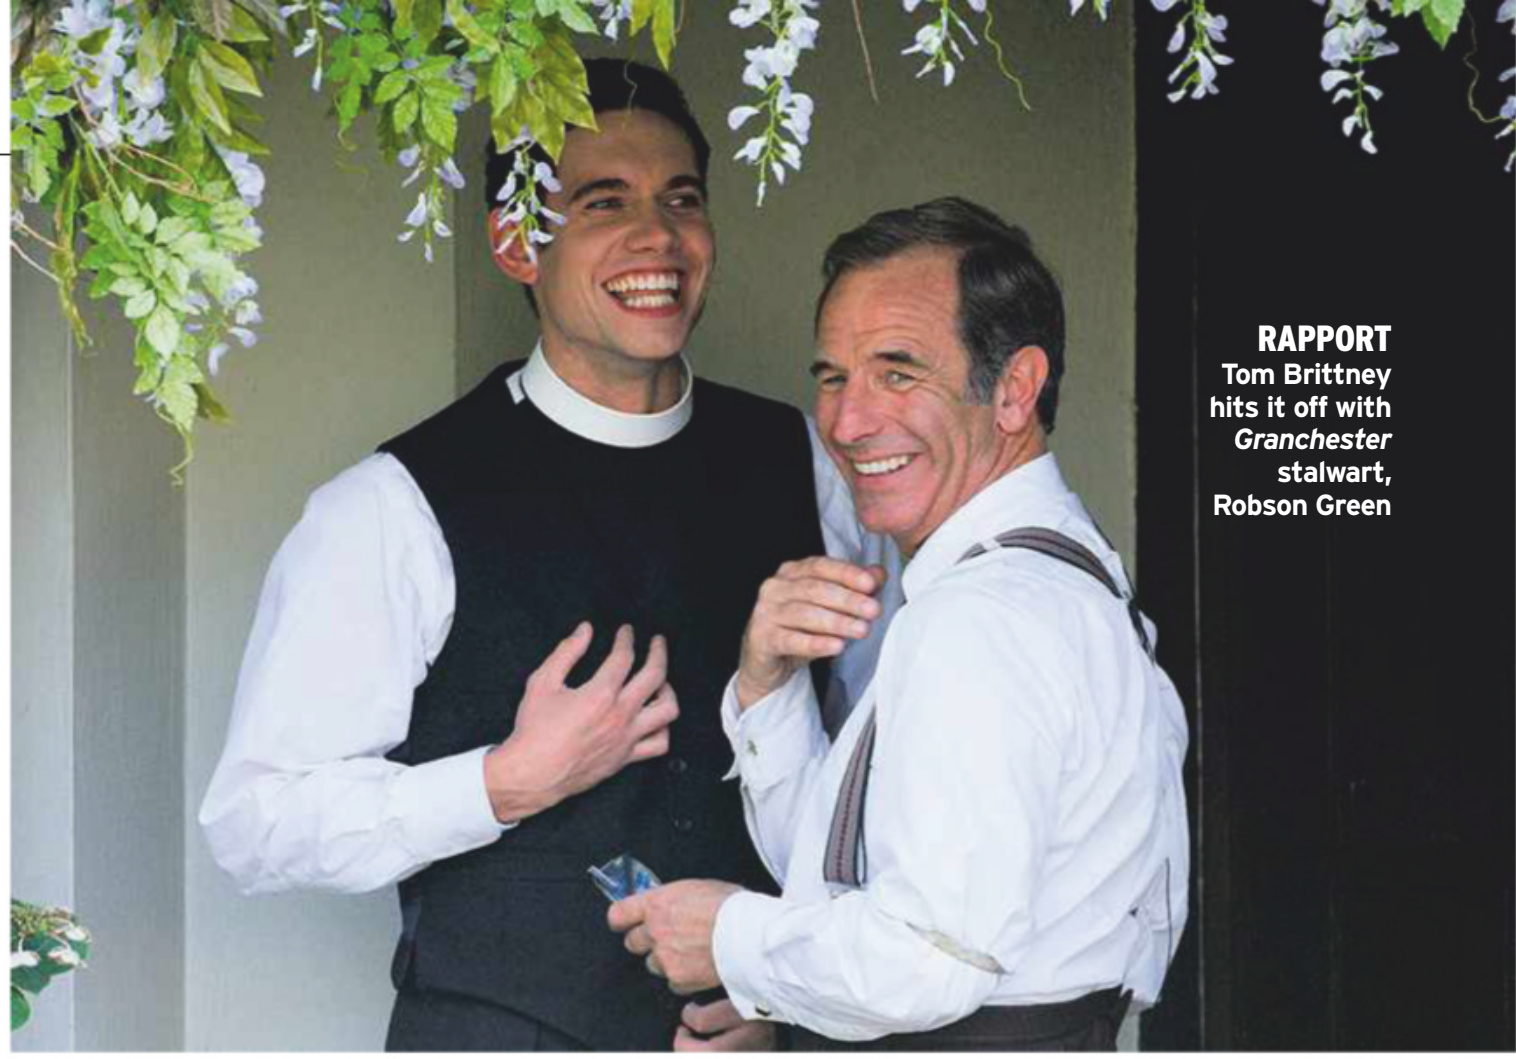
◁ and be playing just that sort of straight down-the-line romantic lead."

Grantchester was more of a double-act with Green than it was romantic lead territory for Norton. "The heart of it was my relationship with Robson. I will really feel bereft without those two months a year hanging out with him. When we were filming, he kept saying to me, 'Oh, it won't be the same, it's so sad you're going.'

"I was looking back through the photos before this interview, and there are so many of us looking forlornly at the camera pretending that our hearts are breaking and then about a month after I left, I saw a newspaper report and there were Tom and Robson, arm in arm and grinning, clearly just the best of friends. I sent it to Robson…" Any comment? "You traitor!"



RAPPORT
Tom Brittney hits it off with Granchester stalwart, Robson Green

NORTON GREW UP watching Green on television. The very first time Norton encountered Green he was "so charged" that instead of shaking his hand, he put his arms around him. "We collided in the middle of this socially agonising moment but rather than feel awkward, Robson gave me a huge bear-hug back. I think he immediately felt my nerves. In that moment, when I felt him hugging me, I was like, 'Yes, this guy's great.'

So, for all the advice I could give Tom, the truth is I know he'll be absolutely fine because he'll be standing alongside one of the best human beings that I've ever met."

TOM BRITTNEY

WHEN TOM BRITTNEY got the call confirming he'd be taking over from James Norton in Grantchester, he cried. "I knew that they liked me," he says when we meet in London. "But the wait to find out if I'd got the part felt like the longest two weeks of my life."

Norton's Sidney Chambers is a traumatised war veteran, with an interest in whisky, jazz and women. Brittney's Reverend Will Davenport is a social idealist determined to make the lives of ordinary people better. Just like his predecessor, he finds himself enlisted by Robson Green's Inspector Geordie Keating as he takes on the inordinately high crime rate in mid-1950s Cambridge. "Will never wanted to be a detective," says Brittney. "He falls into it but he has a dark past and that drives him."

Getting the part was not just a matter of passing the audition for Brittney. "I had to have a chemistry test with Robson Green," he explains. "The chemistry between Sidney and Geordie is at the core of the show, and they had to see if it would work with Robson and me. Luckily, we got along instantly. We knew it would work. I went out of the room afterwards and called my mum and said, 'I loved him! I thought he was brilliant. Oh, I loved him so much!'"

At 28, Brittney is five years younger than Norton. He first attracted attention as the Hanoverian-era British soldier Lieutenant Jeremy Foster in Outlander. Next year he appears with Tom Hanks in the Second World War naval drama, Greyhound. "When I saw Tom Hanks coming on set, I cried," says Brittney. "I was thinking, 'My God, I can't believe I am sharing a room with Tom Hanks, let alone a screen.'"

> 'I had to have a chemistry test with Robson Green'
> TOM BRITTNEY

Brittney, you'll have noticed, cries a lot. "We're an emotional family," says the Kent-born actor, who has three younger sisters. "My mum's a writer and my dad's in consultancy, but he can be very dramatic when he wants to be" – most notably, Brittney recalls, when watching his son's realistic death scene in Outlander, stabbed in the stomach by a burly Highlander at the Battle of Prestonpans. "It really affected Dad, he was upset. It was good that my performance was so realistic, but bad I made him feel that way."

MONTHS AFTER FILMING ON Grantchester finished he's still full of wonder at the experience. "The attention to detail, the posters on my character's wall, the costumes," he says. "You really do feel like you're back in the 50s."

On set Brittney also encountered the enthusiasm of Grantchester's fans. "There were people who had travelled from America just to see us filming. They come to a little village in Cambridgeshire because they adore the show. Their devotion is incredible."

Along with such devotion comes, inevitably, resistance to change. For many fans, James Norton's Chambers is the show. "I understand that," Brittney says. "But I'm not worried about it. People feel an ownership over a show and the people in it, in a really lovely way. I haven't had any hate mail yet! And I don't read any comments online."

So far the comments, online and across the press, have largely been welcoming – he is already being referred to as: "Grantchester hunk Tom Brittney". He blushes a little at this. "If I was sat at home preparing to become a sex symbol, that'd be a terrible way to live. I just take it in my stride."

DOES HE MIND the more lascivious attention that he and Norton receive? "It's been happening to women for years," says Brittney. "Maybe it's the guys' turn. It's funny, on set you can see all the guys trying to eat as much as they can, because they're all going to the gym and trying to get buffer." Not Robson Green, surely? "Robson looks after himself. We live in a very self-obsessed and image-conscious world and none more so than the TV and film industry.

"I've done a couple of jobs where I've gone to the gym and gone on a nutritional diet. It's tough. And I would hope that the industry pulls back from that in some way. I don't think that it should be about the way that people's bodies are. It's not realistic sometimes."

Possibly because there were not many gym-bunny vicars in the 1950s? "That was my excuse for eating all the biscuits on set."

Fans, both male and female, will be happy to learn that Brittney did manage to squeeze himself into clerical garb. "That was probably the most frightening bit for me – would I look good in a dog collar? I think I pulled it off. It definitely makes you feel like a vicar. I miss wearing it every day actually."

READY TO ROLL
Jeremy Clarkson says he has enough ideas for five more years of The Grand Tour

‘I’d run the BBC BETTER’!

Jeremy Clarkson says his old employer needs to make programmes for the masses – so why is he still broken-hearted at leaving?

THE RT INTERVIEW BY KATE BATTERSBY

Jeremy Clarkson has it all worked out. He’s going to die in just over 11 years’ time, right after his 70th birthday in April. “I think about dying every day,” he announces. “I’ve got an internal clock counting down, and I’ve got about 101,000 hours left.”

This is startling news. Has the serious pneumonia he contracted in the summer of 2017 somehow developed into a fatal illness?

“No, no,” he says, waving a hand. “You just think of an age you’ll live to and work out the hours. I did it and that’s how many hours I’ve got left. When I had pneumonia I didn’t think I was going to die, but now I think about it often.” He pauses and looks thoughtful. “Mind you, I can’t remember if the 101,000 hours include sleep or not.” Right. So if we allow for the optimum eight hours a night, he’s pinned his personal expiry date to age 75 rather than 70. Either way, he feels time is short.

“I recalculate it regularly when I’m faced with decisions about what I want to do next. How much time have I got left? I mustn’t waste any.”

Of all the things Jeremy Clarkson can be accused of, wasting time isn’t on the list. He is a stranger to mental repose. Life consumes him – what’s happening now, what happened yesterday, what he could make happen tomorrow. It’s why he can’t do anything with understatement – humour, discussion, work… especially work.

Meeting him has its own curiosity value. Everyone knows who he is – try to find anyone who hasn’t heard of him – and every last person has an opinion about him. Whatever else this interview might have turned out to be, dull wasn’t likely.

We meet on a day of promotion for the third series of The Grand Tour. It’s the last series that he, James May and Richard Hammond were contracted to make under the terms of their £160 million Amazon deal. Asked if there will be more, whether entire series or occasional specials, all three of them make non-committal noises throughout their group presentation to the media, a chorus repeated by Clarkson once he’s on his own.

“For the last month we’ve been talking to Amazon, who do love us and we love working with them, so I hope there’s something,” he offers vaguely, adding: “I don’t know the answer. It’s like Brexit. I don’t know the answer to that, either.”

Ah, Brexit. It always comes as a surprise to the previously unenlightened that Clarkson is a staunch Remainer. Has he ever berated his local Oxfordshire friend David Cameron for enabling the 2016 EU Referendum to take place? Clarkson becomes improbably prim.

“I wouldn’t betray private conversations with neighbours,” he says. “But the terrifying prospect of Brexit and Corbyn together fill me with such horror that leaving the country is a possibility. My friends are here, my family, my life. I was born here. Everyone you see living abroad has got a red nose and red wine on their cornflakes and they’re alcoholics three weeks after moving to their tax haven. I can’t conceive of moving abroad. And yet…”

Meanwhile, at least one of The Grand Tour’s presenters seems to be preparing for life after it’s over. Last March, May set up a new production company in tandem with Tom Whitter, the director he worked with, before Amazon, on several BBC projects including Toy Stories, Man Lab and Cars of the People. The implication that there is new work in the pipeline is neon-lit.

“I don’t know what James gets up to,” shrugs Clarkson. “He’s a man of mystery. I have no plans at all for after The Grand Tour. God, no. I never run out of ideas. Someone asked me, before this series, ‘What can you possibly do with a car that you haven’t already done?’ But my head’s filled with enough ideas for five years.” His expression suggests he has given something away. “I’m jumping the gun here.”

As it turns out, the gun is already cocked and loaded. Just a few days later, it’s announced that Grand Tour will return to the road for a fourth tour of duty – though it will, in reality, be a handful of elaborate but occasional specials.

The Amazon announcement also makes clear that the trio will be working on other new projects for the streaming service. Which means Clarkson can strike “pipe and slippers” from any future life plan.

His recent run hosting ITV’s Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? will be followed by another in the summer. His 22nd book, If You’d Just Let Me Finish – the seventh collection of his newspaper columns – was published in October. (“If you like Clarkson’s humour,” said one review, “this is a must-read.”) Newspaper colleagues say he’s ▷

GREAT RAIL JOURNEYS

SIMPLY LAKE GARDA

10 DAYS FROM £1,395

WINNER THE TRAVEL AWARDS 2018 | WINNER LARGE BRITISH TRAVEL AWARDS 2018 BEST RAIL HOLIDAY COMPANY | BRONZE LARGE BRITISH TRAVEL AWARDS 2018 BEST ESCORTED TOURS HOLIDAY COMPANY | The Telegraph TRAVEL AWARDS 2014 WINNER BEST RAIL OPERATOR

Picturesque, peaceful and perfectly placed for our visits to Verona and Venice, Lake Garda is a wonderful choice for a relaxing holiday and a great way to enjoy the surrounding region of Northern Italy.

ITINERARY

Day 1. London to Paris on the Eurostar. Our holiday begins at our St Pancras Departure Office. From here we board the Eurostar to Paris, and continue to Turin in Italy where we overnight.

Day 2. To Lake Garda. From Turin, we continue our journey to Milan. On arrival in Milan, we transfer to a coach for the journey through Alpine foothills to Desenzano, located on the shores of Lake Garda. We spend seven nights at the Hotel Desenzano run by Gigliola and her family. Gigliola is well known to Great Rail Journeys' customers for her warm Italian welcome.

Day 3. Sirmione. We take a short cruise across to picturesque Sirmione, one of Lake Garda's most delightful towns. There is free time here to explore the imposing Rocca Scaligera, a 13th century castle surrounded by a large water-filled moat that dominates the Old Quarter of town and offers beautiful views over Lake Garda from the ramparts.

Days 4-5. Desenzano & Venice. Today is free in Desenzano. On Day 5 we visit fabulous Venice. A private boat transports us along the Grand Canal to St Mark's Square, from where we take a walking tour of the city's main sights. Your afternoon is free.

Days 6-7. Excursion to Isola Del Garda. Today is at leisure in Desenzano. On Day 7 we take a wonderful boat cruise across Lake Garda to the wooded Isola del Garda. We enjoy a guided tour of the neo-Gothic villa here and explore the beautiful grounds and gardens. The island is still to this day home to the Cavazza family, and often the guided tours are run by the Countesses themselves.

Day 8. Exploring Verona. Our excursion today is to historic Verona which boasts UNESCO World Heritage status and was the setting for Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet.' We enjoy a guided tour of the city, including the Roman amphitheatre and Juliet's balcony. Your afternoon is at leisure in the city; you could discover the remarkable Gothic architecture of the Scaligeri tombs or visit the fashionable shops on Via Mazzini.

Days 9-10. The journey home. Our return journey begins with a transfer to Milan. From there, we continue to Strasbourg via Basel, where we overnight. On Day 10, we board the TGV to Paris, where we connect with the Eurostar to London where our tour comes to an end.

WHAT'S INCLUDED

- Fully escorted by a UK Tour Manager from start to finish
- Exclusive meeting point at our dedicated Departure Office in St Pancras ◁ far more modest than his public image suggests, a person who listens to other people and is fantastically hard-working.

"That's very pleasing to hear," he says gruffly. "I would hate to be called lazy, because I'm not."

At 58, cosy retirement holds no allure for Clarkson, although it's years since work was a financial imperative. He was a multimillionaire long before his Amazon wealth, thanks to Bedder 6, the company he founded with Top Gear producer, lifelong friend and fellow Grand Tour key player Andy Wilman to handle merchandise and international distribution for Top Gear. In 2012 alone, Clarkson received a £4.8 million dividend and an £8.4 million share buyout from BBC Worldwide for his stake in the company. He doesn't mind in the slightest that he will therefore earn nothing from Winter Blunderland, the umpteenth official Top Gear DVD compilation featuring himself, May and Hammond, which was released for the 2018 Christmas market.

On the other hand, he's not quite up to speed with the next Top Gear presenter line-up. Asked (without any mention of the programme) whether he has heard of Paddy McGuinness, Clarkson looks blank.

"No. The IRA guy? No idea." He's on safer ground with Freddie Flintoff, and then makes the connection between McGuinness and Top Gear with a smile. Nonetheless, almost four years after the well-documented fracas, when he abused a Top Gear producer verbally and physically, that led to the non-renewal of Clarkson's BBC contract, the self-inflicted loss is still visibly painful.

"I still care about Top Gear very much," he says, looking grief-stricken. "I dreamt it up, and everything on it is something I came up with. I haven't watched it [since his 2015 departure]. I can't bear to look. It would be like going to visit your baby after it's been adopted by someone else, and pressing your face up at the window. Anyway, The Grand Tour is the latest incarnation of what would have been Top Gear."

'Paddy McGuinness. Is he the IRA guy?'

There is no doubt that the presenting trio's move to Amazon was a game-changer. Is terrestrial TV old hat now?

"If I ran the BBC, it would be better," he says, instantly defining all terrestrial television by the corporation. "I'd make programmes for everybody, not just seven people in Islington. It's become so up itself, suffocating the life out of everything with its nonsense need to be politically correct. If they'd let everyone relax, and made a show that's entertaining or interesting or informative or any of the things that the BBC is supposed to be, then we'd be having a different debate about the future of television. I had a very happy time at the BBC and I care very much about it. I'd be sad if it got knackered by a few unwise Corbynites."

Is he sure they're unwise? Is he certain of ▷

SNAPPY DRESSERS
Clarkson, Richard Hammond and James May drove across Mongolia for series three... it took a week

SUPER-SUV
Clarkson in Sweden for series three of The Grand Tour with the new Lamborghini Urus

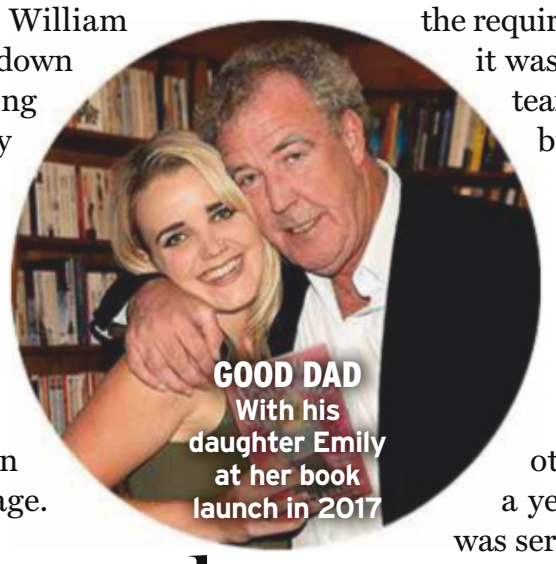
◁ his own wisdom? "I may be wrong," he concedes. "Maybe I'm just a big old dinosaur. Of course I am. The world isn't mine any more, it belongs to people my children's age [daughters Emily, 24, and Katya, 20, and son Finlo, 22]. They live in a secret world, on their phones and social media. I listen to them talking and think, 'This is an alien planet. I'm William Shatner and I've just beamed down somewhere.' But I love listening to my children. They're very funny. I think I make them laugh. Actually, I know I do, which is great. God knows if I was a cool figure to them when they were growing up. I imagine not."

Clarkson and the children's mother, Frances Cain, parted in 2014 after 21 years of marriage.



GOOD DAD
With his daughter Emily at her book launch in 2017

'Adrian understood me. We laughed all the time'

Does he think he's been a good dad? "I'm sure there are very few well-known people in the world whose children don't cop for it in some way," he says. "I've been as good a dad as I can be."

His reluctance to discuss his family is evident. He's far more relaxed with go-to subjects from his BBC/Brexit/Corbyn lexicon; but instinctive controversy sometimes masks his great skill. He can write with unbearable poignancy, as he did following the death of the critic AA Gill in December 2016.

"'Best friend' is a primary school expression," says Clarkson. "Adrian understood me better than most people. We were extremely close. I learnt of his death literally one minute before going on stage with The Grand Tour in the Middle East. James is made entirely of stone and wouldn't recognise somebody's distress, but Hammond was very good. I held it together for the required 90 minutes and as soon as it was finished, I lost it. Burst into tears. I watch all the shows back, but I can't watch that one.

"I feel selfishly about Adrian. We laughed all the time. It's not the same with Hammond and May."

Yet the trio endures. Do they get sick of one another?

"God, yes. We're in each other's company for 250 days a year or more, but it works. It was serendipity that we got together at all, and then we were on for years and nobody was really watching. It was only after Hammond's first big accident [in 2006] that viewing figures shot up, and by then we had the banter going.

"If I was in charge of Top Gear now, I'd send the new presenters away to a desert island for a year so they could get to know one another really, really well, to get the same dynamic we have."

I think if Clarkson really were in charge of Top Gear now, what he would actually do is instantly revert to the presenter line-up that made the programme a broadcasting phenomenon. For all the millions he has, for all the groundbreaking media history he and the others have created at Amazon, he still yearns for the place where he was happiest. And it's the one place he can't go.

BEST MATES
With his friend AA (Adrian) Gill, in 2015

THE ENGINES ARE REVVING...

So what's in store when the trio go back on tour?

ARE THERE ANY FORMAT CHANGES?

Richard Hammond "Viewer feedback was clear that people love the films, the adventures, going to different wild places."

Jeremy Clarkson "There are no more guests, because Amazon can track minute by minute what people actually watch and what they skip over. They were skipping someone who was once on I'm a Celebrity... or the runner-up on The X Factor."

SERIES HIGHLIGHTS?

MAGNET
Clarkson attracts the birds in Colombia

RH "We did a special in Colombia. The country has a lot more to it than Pablo Escobar [the drug lord shot dead in 1993], and we wanted to get that across."

JC "It's the most ecologically diverse place on Earth. Cartagena was my favourite place this series."

James May "We had to try to get from one side of Colombia to the other without being eaten by any animals. A bear attacked one of the cars."

JC "Then in Mongolia we drove for six days using nothing but a compass to guide us and we didn't see any evidence that man had ever existed – not a person, a jet trail, a wall, nothing. All of Mongolia is covered in what looks like grass, but it's actually rosemary, sage and thyme. As you drive, the smell is heavenly. The producers packed everything we would need for a week, without including any alcohol."

JM "A bit like sending us to a country with no oxygen in it."

RH "It was bloody cold and these two wouldn't let me drive, which was irritating. So I was bored, cold, frustrated, cross, uncomfortable and unhappy. I did love Mongolia, though."

FAVOURITE CAR IN SERIES THREE?

RH "Jim Clark's Lotus 25 – that was just electrifying."

JC "The new Lancia Stratos."

JM "It's a toss-up between the Porsche 917, which was very old and terrifying, and the new Alpine A110, which I liked so much that I bought one. I also drove a Porsche concept prototype worth £2 billion, which is why I drove it and not Richard Hammond." KB

"I was newly married, no children. I'd met my wife during a world tour of Hamlet so we'd been away for nearly a year and we'd settled down and bought a two-up two-down in south London. So I was pretty happy, working, loving life, getting commercials and odd bits like Boon and Lovejoy. And then I got the script for Cold Feet and I remember thinking, "This is the one."

I wasn't really prepared for that level of fame. It felt invasive. I survived a few things, there's a few regrets, but overall life has been good. If that young guy could see me now, he'd be disappointed I'm divorced, but I think he'd be happy with the relationship I have with my daughters and ex-wife [actress Sonia Forbes-Adam], and that I've had a really full and great life.

'I wasn't prepared for that level of fame. It felt invasive'

I've been able to look after friends and family and treat them to things because I've been so ridiculously well looked after myself, due to the lucky nature of my success. Now I think my younger self would say, "I hope you've slowed down a wee bit!" And I'd say, "Yes, I have." But I still really love working.

Regrets? There are a couple of roles I phoned in a bit. I think I was a bit arrogant at the time and maybe wasn't concentrating enough on the part. I wish Jekyll hadn't been cancelled. I loved that show. The BBC made a big mistake, ▷

GREAT VALUE HIGHLY INCLUSIVE

Welsh Highlands Railway

Railways of Wales

Explore the mountains and waterways of North Wales. From your base in Llandudno, enjoy scenic journeys aboard steam railways through Snowdonia National Park, explore medieval fortresses and admire beautiful scenery.

Day 1 — Llandudno

On arrival in Llandudno, on the north coast of Wales, you meet your Tour Manager at the Hotel and enjoy a welcome dinner. Llandudno is the perfect base for your adventure. Overlooked by the imposing Great Orme headland, Llandudno boasts long, sand and shingle beaches for those looking to relax by the sea, whilst the countryside of the peninsula on which the town sits is perfect for walkers and hikers.

Day 2 — Portmeirion

Today, enjoy an excursion on the Ffestiniog Railway* through the glorious scenery of Snowdonia National Park to coastal Porthmadog. From here it's on to Portmeirion, famous for its lovely location and Italianate architectural influences. You may wish to visit the picturesque central piazza or the charming Battery Square, resplendent with its quaint souvenir shops.

Day 3 — Llangollen

Board the Llangollen Steam Railway* travelling through some of the most beautiful scenery in the UK and along the banks of the River Dee to the town of Corwen, on the banks of the river. After some free time for lunch, enjoy a wonderful horse-drawn boat trip along the Llangollen canal.

Day 4 — Llandudno

Your day is free, perhaps to explore Llandudno or take the Great Orme cable-hauled tramway for breathtaking views of Snowdonia and Anglesey. Modern Llandudno retains its Victorian splendour and natural beauty but also offers a host of entertainments for visitors including both a tramway and a cable car to the summit of Great Orme as well as museums, public gardens and traditional seaside amusements.

Day 5 — Caernarfon

A full-day excursion by coach takes you through some of the most dramatic mountain scenery in Britain to Caernarfon for a guided tour of Caenarfon Castle. Continue with a journey on the Welsh Highland Railway*, a narrow-gauge line running along the foothills of the Snowdonia Mountain range, to Beddgelert where there is time to explore this pretty village before returning to Llandudno.

Day 6 — Llandudno

After breakfast, your tour concludes and you are free to depart at your leisure. Alternatively, why not explore a little more of this wonderful area before heading home?

*Journeys are steam-hauled wherever possible.

The itinerary order may differ dependent on departure. Please call for more details.

EARLY WORK
In 1991, James Nesbitt played Martin Mulholland, a slippery missing witness in ITV's hit crime series Boon

A PINT OF BEST
John Thomson played pub landlord Ken in seven episodes of BBC sitcom Men Behaving Badly between 1996 and 1998

◁ sanitising it and putting it out on a Saturday night. That really got to me because it was Steven Moffat at his best. I should just let it go, but I've always had a real gripe about that.

There's loads I still want to do. I want to work with Liam Neeson again because we did a film together years ago [2009's Five Minutes of Heaven]. And I'd love to do something with Jamie Dornan.

I want to get my golf handicap down and I want time to go slower. I'd like to spend more of it with my kids – I regret some of that. I had an amazing time with them, but I wish I'd been with them more. There are many decisions I'd make differently, but you just have to move on and I'm in a happy place.

Fay Ripley, 52
Jenny Gifford

I WAS SINGLE, CHILDLESS and a little worried. I thought I was on the shelf. I was looking for a husband, a baby and a career. And very quickly all of them appeared like magic, and I'm grateful for every element of that. Looking back now, it was silly. I was only 32 and going, "Oh my God, I can't believe I haven't got twins and a bay window." Cold Feet did change my life, but I think it's even more of a privilege to do it now. It's quite easy to take life for granted in your 30s.

I actually left Cold Feet [in 2001] because I wanted to get married [to Australian actor Daniel Lapaine, with whom she now has two children] and have a baby and there were other jobs I was excited by. I wouldn't make that decision now. I wake up at 50 and go, "Thank you, thank you for the job and the nice taxi that's picking me up, and thank you for the birds and green grass!" It was a real bonus when we came back in 2016 and my plan is to do this for another ten years.

I don't think there's anything I regret, although I did turn down a record contract once with Simon Cowell's record company. What an idiot! They'd seen me play a singer in a thing called I Saw You and wanted me to make an album. I didn't want to be like Robson and Jerome and I'm not that good a singer so I said no. But what I wouldn't do now to have a little singalong.

If I could go back to my younger self, I'd say yes to that and I'd say, "Stop thinking you're fat, because when you're 50 you'll really know what fat is." I spent a stupid amount of time thinking I was overweight, but now I'd eat my own leg off for that body. What a waste of energy that was.

There's the odd job I wish I'd done better. There was one where my accent changed in the middle of filming – I went from northern to the Midlands and down to Wimbledon in one scene. That wasn't the best. But hey, shoot me!

My dad recently died and that makes you work out a lot of life stuff. You think, "Wait, that means all these other people are going to die, and so am I, and I hadn't planned for that."

But I'm a glass-half-full person, and I know that from now on I have to be very careful about how I spend the rest of the time I'm on this planet, what I do with it and who I spend it with.

BREAK-OUT
One of Fay Ripley's earliest screen roles was in the 1995 horror film, Mute Witness – filmed in Russia

I'D DONE The Fast Show and Men Behaving Badly, which was the biggest sitcom on TV, but I was still enjoying anonymity. Then we did the pilot for this and I thought it was great fun, and the cast were good, but I definitely didn't foresee what it would become.

I've never been ambitious. If you're ruthless and act like Godzilla throughout your career, you can fast-track quickly, but you'll have very ▷

I used to make excuses not to go out – what if I had an accident?? So I'd stay in and watch telly. NON-STOP!! Then I tried Staydry pants. They pull on just like normal pants, you don't even notice they're on, and they keep you so dry and comfortable. Now I'm a proper social butterfly – you think my telly misses me?

Sue,

Give them a call,
they really can help ☺

◁ few friends. It's better to be quietly ambitious and have an inner plan. I've worked steadily, but you're only as good as your last job.

I was tabloid fodder for a few years. I was selling red tops, and if people recognised me, I wasn't sure if it was for my rock'n'roll lifestyle, or my work, and it made me paranoid. It actually really worries me when my eldest daughter [he has two with actress Samantha Sharp] watches Love Island or the Kardashians. Celebrity may open doors, but it can make your life hell.

You know what? I've had a life. I'm not Keith Richards, but it's better to live a life full than half-lived. Now that I'm a reinvention, I can look back and smile. I wouldn't do much differently. When it's lean, that's tough. That hurts because you think, "I have so much to offer. I don't know why I'm not working!" For me, 2012–13 were tough years, but I'm back. No matter how difficult or challenging it's been, I have to accept that's the path I chose.

'I really wanted to do Shrek – but they got Mike Myers'

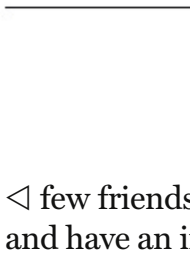
I didn't go into this job for fame and recognition, but the recent storyline I had on Cold Feet about Pete having depression was powerful. The number of men who've stopped me and said, "I went to the doctor because of you." It's so special.

I did test for a big American film once and got excited – I really wanted to do it. It was Shrek, but they got Mike Myers in the end. In hindsight, they were never going to say, "Featuring Cameron Diaz, Eddie Murphy, and introducing John Thomson." I didn't have the profile. I can do any accent – my gift is voices – so it's annoying when they go with profile over ability in voicework. That's the one that got away.



Hermione Norris, 51

I WOULD HAVE BEEN happy doing theatre for the rest of my life. I left drama school with a 10x8 photograph and went to every rep theatre in the country. I can't imagine what it would be like leaving drama school now with an agent and an ambition to go to Hollywood. That wasn't a consideration for us.

I took a shot in the dark and it worked out but it might not have been the case. My mum wanted me to have a Plan B but I never did! Even through the hard times, all I wanted was to act. I trained as a ballet dancer, which gave me some commitment and discipline.

If I could go back to that young Hermione, I'd tell her not to worry so much, but I still worry about my children now. If you're a worrier, you're a worrier.

Having children [she has two with husband, screenwriter Simon Wheeler] is a profound life shift and now I don't feel like I can go away for a long time. I have to earn money. It's difficult to be in London and do a small play just for my own satisfaction: I have to think of them. In the future, I'd like to just "be". I'm looking forward to going, "That's it, I'm done," and not worrying any more.

I'd like to travel more. It broadens your mind and soul and keeps you alive. I'd like to go to Japan and Tibet. I want to see the cherry blossom. And in the meantime, I hope we keep bringing warmth and good stories into people's homes for as long as we can. It's wonderful to be part of a show that people love so much.

WHEN I AUDITIONED for Cold Feet, I was straggly and bearded and doing theatre in Salisbury. I got a recall but turned it down because it clashed with a technical run-through. I thought, "I'm doing theatre, it's terribly important, I can't possibly spend a day begging for a TV job." They gave me the job anyway!

One of the great joys of this show has been how unexpected it's been. ITV initially weren't that keen. They said it wasn't an "ironing show", which is what they were looking for. Then the executive producer Andy Harries entered the pilot in the Golden Rose awards at the Montreux TV Festival and we won. Without that, it may never have survived.

The industry has changed hugely since I started. TV controllers take their job description too literally now. They're not from a comedy background but get in the way of people who are and should be making decisions. I think they're frightened of getting it wrong and that makes them less risky.

My least favourite word is "meets". If something is described as "this show meets that show", it means there's not an ounce of creative nous in it. Cold Feet was originally described as "the new Friends", but it only took two episodes for people to realise we weren't. We're not in the same room, we're not a tight-knit group of friends, we're not perky. We're original, and keeping that spirit of originality is important – just because people have watched it over the past 20 years, doesn't mean they'll still tune in.

Seven nights from £649pp
Departures available from Jan to Oct 2019

Madeira is a magnificent island that should be on everyone's bucket list. The island has been the proud winner of the World's Leading Island Destination for four consecutive years, and it definitely lives up to its title. With its famous levada walks, botanical gardens, Madeiran wine and toboggan rides, there is something for everyone.

The Quinta da Bela Vista is one of many award-winning Madeira hotels, with the title Portugal's Leading Boutique Hotel 2018 recently added to its collection. The hotel has been nominated for awards each year from 1996, for its impeccable service and attention to detail. This boutique hotel offers remarkable views of Funchal, the Bay and the botanical gardens.

Learn more about this outstanding island through three carefully planned trips, consisting of two full-day and one half-day excursions. The shared tours include a visit to Cabo Girao which is the second highest sea cliff in the world, two traditional fishing villages, and a remote village called Monte, which is famed for its beautiful church, public gardens and infamous Toboggan ride (cost of toboggan ride not included). You can even upgrade to a full eight-day private tour package that includes three full days of excursions including a visit to Pico dos Barcelos which has an observation point on the edge of Funchal and a visit to some of the spectacular peaks and waterfalls on the island. Private tour packages can be added on from £150pp.

Just my cup of tea

Vintage sport doesn't have to be a premier cru brew

Snooker: the Masters Daily from Sunday 1pm BBC2, BBC red button; 6.45pm Eurosport 2

David Attenborough isn't just the greatest broadcaster there has ever been, he's also the greatest ever TV administrator. When he was controller of BBC2, and then BBC director of programming, from 1965 to 1972, he brought us – among many other things – Monty Python's Flying Circus, Civilisation, floodlit rugby league, The Ascent of Man, Call My Bluff, The Old Grey Whistle Test and... snooker.

BBC2 was the first colour television channel in Europe and it brought us the gorgeous gavotte of colours that is top-level snooker. It began with Pot Black in 1969, a single-frame tournament shown once a week: and what had been a minority sport went mainstream.

Snooker on television went on to become a national craze, a fascination that peaked in April 1985 when 18 million people stayed up past midnight to watch the climax of the World Championship: Dennis Taylor beat Steve Davis on the final black ball, winning 18 frames to 17. Three years later, Davis was voted BBC Sports Personality of the Year.

In this multichannel age, the Masters is still on the BBC: hours of hypnotic click-clack-click... a close-up of a man chalking his cue, looking worried; a shot; then a close-up of a man in a chair, looking even more worried.

The crowd-pleasers in snooker are flamboyant players such as Ronnie O'Sullivan – winner of last month's UK Championship, below – and Judd Trump, who are dynamic, engaged, full of the most obvious kind of talent. But snooker isn't by nature spectacular. It's seldom explosive, like football; it lacks the dramatic nature of the confrontations in cricket; it doesn't even have the pretty scenery of golf. It's a rarefied thing: a sporting competition in which physical action has been reduced to the minimum.

Perhaps that's part of its attraction. The frequent close-ups give you a good idea of who's about to crack and who's been re-inspired. But there's more to televised snooker than drama. There is, for example, the very opposite of drama.

It's not something that the sport would ever dare to promote, but televised snooker has a quality of soothing inevitability: the dance of the colours, the improbable gymnastics of the cue ball, the still faces above the waistcoats, the good manners. You don't always look for peak experiences when you watch television: you don't want the Olympic 100m final every night.

Snooker offers a sporting experience in which the occasional slow-motion replay looks like deliberate mockery. It's not the mavericks who dominate the game: rather it's the meticulous and the nerveless. Fine players such as Mark Selby and Mark Williams don't make you want to leap from your chair: no, they make you wish to snuggle a little deeper as you wonder how it is that, time after time, they select the right shot to play.

That doesn't sound like very much, I know, but it's the heart of the game: when to attack, when to defend, how to calculate all the percentages in your head, to know both your limitations and your strengths and to make your decisions accordingly. It's all about the moment in the long safety exchange when it's right to go for the isolated red and so take the frame – and when it's better to leave it well alone.

Top-level snooker is tense almost beyond bearing for the players, but for the viewers it's almost the complete opposite. Sport can deliver champagne and it can deliver the most fiery of spirits – and it can also deliver a nice cup of tea.

As Mary, Queen of Scots and Elizabeth I lock horns once again, Amy Raphael looks back at the long history of celluloid royalty

ROYAL BLOOD
Saoirse Ronan as Mary in new release Mary Queen of Scots

Hidden behind closed doors, often ambitious and frequently betrayed, screen queens are always inscrutable. They balance politics and religion, start wars and pursue inappropriate lovers. Who can blame the succession of actresses queueing up to play these proto-feminist icons in complicated clothes?

With the latest incarnation of Mary Queen of Scots in cinemas from Friday 18 January, director Josie Rourke spins Mary and her cousin Elizabeth I's story into a thriller, building to a meeting of the old rivals that historians are pretty sure never took place. But this is Hollywood, not history, and regal reconstruction has long captivated ruff-ready film-makers.

The role of Mary appealed to tomboy and Hollywood legend Katharine Hepburn in 1936. She was unfairly criticised for humanising the Scottish queen in Mary of Scotland while, years later, Vanessa Redgrave and Glenda Jackson played Mary and Elizabeth as much tougher monarchs in 1971's Mary, Queen of Scots (Thu Film4). These films take the essence of a historical figure and paint a vivid picture of what their life might have been like. Who cares about mild revisionism? Saoirse Ronan is riveting as the latest Mary and Margot Robbie's Elizabeth is the perfect match.

Rewatching The Queen (2006), I was transported back to Princess Diana's death and HRH's initial inability to emote publicly. Was writer Peter Morgan privy to conversations with her husband? Of course not, but Helen Mirren's portrayal of our monarch was tender and funny, and gave us a real sense of how damn lonely it must be to be Queen. Mirren won a Bafta and an Oscar, confirming that fascination with our monarchy is as much an American as a British phenomenon.

In a career spanning 60 years, Dame Judi Dench has been nominated for an Oscar seven times and won once, for an eight-minute turn in Shakespeare in Love (1998) as the first Elizabeth. Dench is, of course, our queen of queens, whether as a heartbroken Victoria in Mrs Brown (1997) or, two decades later, a more optimistic monarch in 2017's cross-cultural Victoria & Abdul (Fri Sky Drama). Just don't suggest that her career has been defined by playing monarchs, because she likes to point out that playing three queens in 60 years is no big deal.

There has always been something alluring about watching famous actresses playing famous historical figures. Bette Davis went for the double as Elizabeth I in The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex (1939) – a film released on the eve of the Second World War to show off Davis's ability to be both strong and vulnerable – and The Virgin Queen (1955). Perhaps the most left-field Elizabeth was played by Quentin Crisp in Sally Potter's Orlando (1992): an old woman portrayed by a gay man fixated on a young man who is in fact a woman (Tilda Swinton effortlessly shapeshifting).

The first Liz has been made flesh by everyone from Jean Simmons in Young Bess (1953) via Cate Blanchett in 1998's Elizabeth (Mon Film4) to Helen McCrory in Horrible Histories spin-off Bill (2014). Victoria exerts a similar pull to actors of a certain temperament: Emily Blunt as The Young Victoria (2008), Anna Neagle in Victoria the Great and Sixty Glorious Years (1937/8)... and Peter Sellers in Victorian drag in The Great McGonagall (1974)!

Truth be told, I've always preferred to see royalty treated with a healthy dose of irreverence on screen. Although very much still with us, the Queen has been constantly parodied, recently by Penelope Wilton in Spielberg's The BFG (2016), where she had to cope with a farting giant in her banqueting hall. The actress Jeannette Charles made a career out of impersonating Her Majesty in the likes of 1988's The Naked Gun (Sat/Mon Sky Feel Good, Fri Sky Greats) and 2002's Austin Powers 3 (Wed Comedy Central), while Jennifer Saunders haughtily voiced her in Minions (2015). And, quite the sport, she appeared "as herself" alongside Daniel Craig in a short film for the 2012 Olympics Opening Ceremony, the only sitting monarch with her own stunt double.

So, what of non-Elizabeths? A real queen-thusiast might fantasy-cast all six of Henry's wives, cherry-picking Irene Papas as Catherine of Aragon (Anne of the Thousand Days, 1969), Charlotte Rampling as Anne Boleyn and Jane Asher as Jane Seymour (Henry VIII and His Six Wives, 1972), Game of Thrones's Gemma Whelan as Anne of Cleves (CBBC's Horrible Histories), Angela Pleasence as Catherine Howard (BBC's The Six Wives of Henry VIII, 1970) and Joely Richardson as Catherine Parr (The Tudors, 2010).

One doubts that Helena Bonham Carter, playing Princess Margaret in upcoming episodes of The Crown, will be given the free rein she had as the spiteful Red Queen in Tim Burton's Alice in Wonderland (2010). I was one of the few to enjoy Sofia Coppola's Marie Antoinette (2005), with the 14-year-old Austrian princess (Kirsten Dunst) sent to Paris to marry an uninterested Louis XVI (Jason Schwartzman).

'Regal reconstruction captivates ruff-ready film-makers'

Greek director Yorgos Lanthimos has excelled himself with The Favourite (now in cinemas), in which Olivia Colman plays the wildly unpredictable Queen Anne, last of the Stuart monarchs. The film blurs comedy and pathos, but the women are never passive.

In series three of The Crown, Colman will replace Claire Foy as the Queen, making her the only person to have played both our current queen and the Queen Mother (in 2012's Hyde Park on Hudson). If Colman keeps up the regal roles, she may be a potential threat to Dame Judi's throne.

MY MOVIES

P Manchester by the Sea ★★★★
Saturday 9.45pm BBC2 (10.30pm Wales)

Out of the shadows

Fans of the luminous Michelle Williams may have noticed her coasting somewhat of late, in roles that fail either to challenge her or showcase her talents. I'm thinking specifically of All the Money in the World, the Getty family kidnap drama in which, as John Paul Jr's wife, she seemed literally to occupy the shadows while Christopher Plummer's patriarch and Mark Wahlberg's ex-CIA adviser seemed to get all the big speeches. And The Greatest Showman may have been one of her biggest paydays, but the musical did little to show her off (she can sing), while Hugh Jackman got all the big numbers.

It may be her downfall, but she's so believable as spouses, lovers and best friends that she fades like a Cheshire cat into the warp and weft of a movie. What a relief, then, to consider Manchester by the Sea, a tough-centred, melancholy Massachusetts-set melodrama from the assiduous Kenneth Lonergan, which gives Williams a meaningful space in which to ply her craft.

Casey Affleck brings life to his role of a laconic handyman/lost soul who masochistically starts bar fights as he's thrust into responsibility after the delayed funeral of his brother strands him in the sleepy coastal town of the title. He's named in the will as the legal guardian of his nephew, Lucas Hedges (who's a revelation, subsequently seen in Three Billboards and Lady Bird), and their awkward relationship precipitates deeper disclosures, shown in carefully staged flashbacks. It perhaps goes without saying that Williams, emerging as Affleck's ex-wife without fanfare from the blue-grey, salt-flecked hinterland, steals the show.

The film earned Williams her fourth Oscar nomination (she'd previously been shortlisted for Brokeback Mountain, Blue Valentine and My Week with Marilyn). But the silverware generally went to Lonergan for his deftly democratic screenplay, in which even walk-on characters are given memorable things to say, or to Affleck. Yet Williams (right) owns every scene she's in.

COMEDY Kept off the top of the US box-office charts in the summer of 2016 by Finding Dory (predecessor Finding Nemo is our film of the day tomorrow, see page 38), knockabout romp Central Intelligence may have discouraged some with its sniggering tagline: "Saving the world takes a little Hart and a big Johnson." Hart is Kevin, the stand-up who followed Eddie Murphy and Chris Rock to movie legitimacy by amassing a loyal African-American audience; Johnson is a mixed-race former WWF/WWE wrestler-turned-top grossing movie star whose self-effacing charm is as developed as his biceps. The set pieces may be signposted in big letters by Skyscraper director Rawson Marshall Thurber, but the backstory is sweet. A once-bullied obese kid grows up to be Johnson, an apparent rogue CIA agent who enlists childhood ally Hart, now an accountant, to expose an auction of state secrets. Hart squeals, Johnson beams, stuff gets smashed up and, if you can overlook Hart's recent troubles, the duo's combined energy is impressive and fun. (US 2016, some violence, swearing, HD)

FANTASY Too busy at Christmas? Here it is again, the charming festive classic starring Natalie Wood as a jaded youngster who knows there's no such thing as Father Christmas. Then along comes Kris Kringle (Edmund Gwenn) to work some Christmas magic. The film was rightly awarded an Oscar for best screenplay, while Gwenn became so identified with this role that every holiday he was hired to hand out gifts for such Hollywood notables as Louis B Mayer. Children may prefer the newer, more obvious version (starring Richard Attenborough, see tomorrow), but parents will warm to this utterly beguiling original. TS (US 1947, BW, HD)

COMEDY Carol Reed's adaptation of HG Wells's novel follows a draper's clerk who discovers that, when it comes to social climbing, he has no head for heights. While Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat's script meanders and the supporting players overact, the film is stuffed with sly Wellsian satire, expertly staged set pieces and top-class acting from Michael Redgrave in the title role. There is much to enjoy here, but be prepared for some interminable stretches, especially towards the end. DP (UK 1941, BW)

POTTY ABOUT POTTER? You can watch the whole series this week...

Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone/ Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets
★★★★ 2.55-9.00pm ITV2 PG

Having shown the first four *Harry Potter*s one per day last week, ITV2 tidies up its offering and presents the magical saga in its entirety. Today, you can enjoy the first two instalments, with The Philosopher's Stone introducing our unassuming orphan hero in his muggle surroundings at 4 Privet Drive, where he's forced to live under the stairs by his monstrous relatives.

Like many a fairy-tale creation before him, Harry is transported to a world of wonders – and greater dangers – where "the boy who lived" must prove himself against dark wizarding powers led by Lord Voldemort.

You all know the story by now, but this cauldron of fantasy and adventure bubbles away thrillingly, with each new year at Hogwarts bringing increased peril. By the time we reach final film The Deathly Hallows Part 2, all bets are off as to who will survive.

Another double dose of Potter follows tomorrow, with the rest of the series showing over the following four days. In that time, the young stars of the epic saga – Daniel Radcliffe, Emma Watson and Rupert Grint – do a lot of growing up, and very quickly. With Fantastic Beasts expanding the Wizarding World as we speak, these original eight films could soon feel like an appetiser. But not to true Potterheads... for them, this series will always be the original and the best. AC

FILM OF THE DAY

Finding Nemo ★★★★★

3.40-5.35pm ITV U

COMEDY It seems improbable that there was a time when cutting-edge computer animators found it a bit challenging to create water on screen. Finding Nemo wasn't the first to meaningfully mimic the distorting effects and fluid movement of saline H20, but it led a new technological wave. None of which was why this undersea-quest saga was such a smash, its $940 million worldwide gross generating a sequel, shorts, videogames and theme-park attractions. The key to its appeal is director Andrew Stanton's story and the personalities of his aquatic father and son heroes: Marlin (voiced by Albert Brooks) is the barrier reef-residing clownfish, left a widower with just one egg to raise after a barracuda attack. When Nemo (Alexander Gould) is caught by a human diver and placed in a dentist's waiting room fish tank, Marlin and memory-impaired Dory (Ellen DeGeneres) battle to spring him to freedom. Ambiently scored by Thomas Newman, it should have been impossible to beat, but sequel Finding Dory arguably did just that in 2016. (US 2003, HD)

DAYTIME

The Pirates! In an Adventure with Scientists! ★★★★

10.00-11.20am CBBC U

ADVENTURE The rousing good humour of Aardman Animations (home of Wallace & Gromit) catches fire with this tale of derring-do – and don't – on the high seas. Hugh Grant voices Pirate Captain, who sets out to win the Pirate of the Year award. His quest takes him and his crew back to the shores of England, where they face Queen Victoria (Imelda Staunton) and the dubious assistance of a youthful Charles Darwin (David Tennant). The stop-frame animation work is simply marvellous, and the voice work from an ensemble cast cannot be faulted. This wonderfully imaginative movie succeeds in being that rare thing: a family film that the whole family will enjoy. KK (UK/US 2012)

Puss in Boots ★★★★

3.20-4.40pm BBC1 U

ADVENTURE That suave, scene-stealing cat from Shrek 2 gets his own swashbuckling adventure and it couldn't be a more colourful fairy tale. Here the Puss (voiced by Antonio Banderas) finds romance with slinky Kitty Softpaws (Salma Hayek) as they team up with Puss's former partner-in-crime Humpty Dumpty (Zach Galifianakis) on a quest for a golden goose. This lively romp from Shrek the Third director Chris Miller veers delightfully between Mother Goose, Zorro and a Sergio Leone western, and is lovely to look at, cleverly written and beautifully visualised. Every scene – from the hilarious dance fights to the swooping chases up beanstalks and over bridges – is superbly choreographed and consistently exciting. The cat puns are rife yet always amusing and, while that cute big eyes gag is used quite a few times, it never gets old. AJ (US 2011, HD)

Saraband for Dead Lovers ★★★

4.00-6.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

ROMANTIC DRAMA Audiences wanted colour, upholstery and royalty in the postwar era, and this sumptuous British movie about a claim to the Hanoverian throne of England has all the ingredients. English actress Joan Greenwood (a husky seductress of so many British actors) plays the king's wife, but she fancies Stewart Granger, a Swedish count of indifferent pedigree and accent, previously involved with Flora Robson who goes into a fit of jealous rage. It's a shame that Basil Dearden and Michael Relph directed the film with straight faces, but no one, thankfully, could suppress Greenwood in full flounce and, later on, mourning glory. AT (UK 1948)

8.10-10.00pm ITV4 12

ACTION FANTASY Calling to mind Italian sword-and-sandal flicks starring Steve Reeves, this spin-off from The Mummy Returns director Chuck Russell is entertaining, escapist hokum. An evil warlord (Steven Brand), who has conquered and enslaved half the tribes in the desert, is opposed by a lone warrior (wrestler Dwayne Johnson, in an imposing, star-making performance), who unites the remaining warring factions and leads them against the common oppressor. There might not be much sense or depth amid the noisy, not terribly gory violence, but the spirited nonstop action makes for an unpretentious, enjoyable adventure. AJ (US/Ger 2002, may be edited for violence, HD)

P The Eyes of Orson Welles

★★★★★ 9.00-10.40pm BBC4 12

DOCUMENTARY Orson Welles died in 1985 but his reputation as one of the great film-makers of the last century is undeniable, if only because of his scintillating 1941 debut, Citizen Kane. However, this rich documentary from director Mark Cousins breathes fresh life into a 20th-century icon by way of a unique box of delights: Welles's unseen sketches, drawings and paintings. Familiar tales of his Wisconsin childhood, youthful foreign travels, 1930s activism, championing of African-American theatre and love life take on a brighter hue after Cousins eschews voiceover for an imagined conversation with his subject that's affectionate and inspiring. "Who were you?" he asks at the outset. This wonderful portrait offers fascinating answers. JA (UK 2018, nudity, col/BW, HD)

Horrible Bosses ★★

10.00pm-12.05am C5 15

COMEDY Three exploited workers agree to kill each other's bosses in this supposedly black comedy. In practice, Jason Bateman, Jason Sudeikis and Charlie Day are too drippy to credibly entertain such a plan. The funnier scenes happen early on when the three are subjected to indignities by bosses Kevin Spacey, Colin Farrell and Jennifer Aniston. Farrell gets cheap laughs with a comb-over, while Spacey phones it in as a power-hungry bigwig. Conversely, Aniston tries too hard as a sex-crazed dentist. At least our bumbling would-be murderers enjoy an easy rapport, which may provide some distraction. Repeated on Thursday. SP (US 2011, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

LATE NIGHT

When in Rome ★★

12.10-1.35am BBC1 PG

COMEDY Newly dumped New York museum curator Beth (Kristen Bell) travels to Rome for her sister's wedding and takes some coins from a magical fountain. As a consequence, she finds herself hotly pursued by the spellbound men who threw them in. True love seems to lie with sports journalist Nick (Josh Duhamel) – or does it? When in Rome is watchable enough, albeit in a cheesily inept way, but is far less magical than its storyline. Even the title is a misnomer – the film is largely set in New York and, like guest stars Danny DeVito and Anjelica Huston, the Eternal City only cameos. DA (US 2009, HD)

Inside Llewyn Davis ★★★★★

1.00-2.40am C4 15

COMEDY DRAMA The New York folk scene of Bob Dylan's 1965 put-down anthem Positively 4th Street is the setting for one of the Coen brothers' most soulful films, about a singer (Oscar Isaac) trying to find a balance between artistic integrity and mainstream success. He abuses everyone's trust – notably Justin Timberlake, whose wife (Carey Mulligan) he has been seeing behind his back – until an audition brings the promise of a new beginning. Inside Llewyn Davis finds the Coens as deadpan as ever, but it hides a rich seam of sadness that comes to the fore whenever Isaac sings. DW (US 2013, swearing, sexual references, some violence, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Mission: Impossible ★★★★

9.00-11.10pm Sky1 PG

ACTION I'm warming to the notion that last year's Mission: Impossible – Fallout, the sixth in the TV-incubated action brand, is actually the best in the series. How often do you get to say that about a multi-million dollar franchise? Tonight, you can rekindle the raw excitement of seeing the first big-screen outing for Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) and the rest of the rubber-mask-indebted Impossible Missions Force, under the direction of Brian De Palma. With Cruise and Ving Rhames the only team members who make it as far as Fallout, it's fun to see them alongside Emmanuelle Béart, Jon Voight and Henry Czerny (who?), amid exploding fish tanks, a chopper in the Channel tunnel and the first reworking of that theme tune by Danny Elfman. (US 1996, violence, swearing, HD)

Beach Red ★★★★

2.55-5.00pm 5Spike 12

WAR Former beefcake star Cornel Wilde, best remembered for The Greatest Show on Earth and his role as Chopin in A Song to Remember, became a maverick director to reckon with in later life. This ferocious Pacific war opus is one of his better efforts, an uncompromising movie with minimal narrative, adapted from a 1945 wartime novel. The film's editing, by Bullitt's Frank P Keller, is stunning, and the depiction of war's savagery is truly remarkable: no one who has seen this film will forget the shot of the soldier leaving behind his arm on the beach. TS (US 1967, edited for violence, swearing, HD)

Layer Cake ★★★

9.00-11.10pm 5STAR 15

CRIME Marking the directorial debut of Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels producer Matthew Vaughn, this decent British crime thriller is done few favours by its nondescript title. Daniel Craig plays a drug dealer determined to make some quick money and then retire. His plans – involving a massive shipment of ecstasy – are complicated by drugs lord Kenneth Cranham, who asks him to find the wayward daughter of an associate (dodgy businessman Michael Gambon). While there's an over-familiarity about the subject matter, the performances are good, and Vaughn directs with aplomb. DA (UK/US 2004, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

Casualties of War ★★★★

9.00-11.20pm Paramount Network 18

WAR Directed by Brian De Palma, this disturbing tale in the vein of The Deer Hunter tells the fact-based story of a Vietnamese woman who is kidnapped and brutally raped by four GIs. While Sean Penn leads the assault, new recruit Michael J Fox stands back but doesn't help her. The film's compassion for the woman hits us directly and, filmed with all of De Palma's technical bravura, it heads towards an epilogue that reaches an emotional precipice and then leaps confidently over it. AT (US 1989, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

The Krays ★★★★

10.05pm-12.40am ITV4 18

BIOPIC This is an intelligent depiction of Britain's most infamous gangsters, the twins who made life safe for East Enders when they weren't targeting rival mobsters. To be fair, writer Philip Ridley and director Peter Medak largely avoid glamorising the violent world of Reggie and Ronnie, and are more interested in unravelling the complex personalities of the brothers. They are helped by convincing lead performances from Martin and Gary Kemp, but Billie Whitelaw rises above everybody else as the boys' best friend, their mum. JF (UK 1990, may be edited for language, violence, nudity, HD)

Elizabeth ★★★★

11.05pm-1.30am Film4 15

DRAMA Charting the turbulent life and times of the "Virgin Queen", this biopic is given a vivid contemporary focus by Indian director Shekhar Kapur. A far cry from the usual costume drama, it is a dramatic triumph, and Cate Blanchett is a revelation as the strong-willed monarch who nimbly transforms from naive girlhood to true majesty. Richard Attenborough, Joseph Fiennes, Angus Deayton and ex-footballer Eric Cantona flesh out an interesting cast as "Bollywood" meets The Godfather. AJ (UK 1998, violence, sex scenes)

ADVENTURE This visually scrumptious musical from DreamWorks is too cute and cloying for older kids, but will be lapped up by youngsters. COME FROM AWAY
Phoenix Theatre London – Tickets from £11.60
Performances begin 30 January

This joyous new musical shares the incredible real-life story of the 7,000 air passengers from all over the world who were grounded in Canada in the wake of the 9/11 terrorist attacks, and the small Newfoundland community that invited these "come from aways" into their lives. As uneasiness turned into trust, new friendships were formed, and the stories shared became a celebration of hope, humanity and unity.

FILM OF THE DAY

The Heat ★★★★ 9.00-11.20pm E4 15

DID YOU KNOW? Melissa McCarthy trained with an officer at a shooting range to ensure she looked capable when using a firearm in the film

COMEDY Melissa McCarthy returns to our screens in February in Can You Ever Forgive Me?, based on the memoir of an author who forged letters from dead writers. But if it's her trademark, smart-mouthed wit and physical dexterity you yearn for, I would recommend The Heat. Directed by Paul Feig (Bridesmaids), it sees her Boston cop buddy up with Sandra Bullock's prissy, by-the-book FBI agent with hilarious consequences. A drug underworld plot is credibly worked up by screenwriter Katie Dippold (TV's Parks and Recreation), but the funniest dialogue is improvised by the two stars, displaying a chemistry that's hard to put a price on. It's slapstick funny, but ultimately sweet and, were the pair both not so busy, their antics would make a terrific TV series. (US/UK/Aus 2013, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

The Final Test ★★★
11.10am-1.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Inspired by Don Bradman's famous second-ball dismissal in his final Test match, this charming film was adapted by Terence Rattigan from his own TV play. Jack Warner gives a no-nonsense performance as the old pro, only to be totally outplayed by Robert Morley as the poet who'd give anything to be a cricketer. Anthony Asquith directs with a straight bat, producing a picture that is as English as Test Match Special. DP (UK 1953, BW)

The Second Best Exotic Marigold Hotel ★★★★ 6.35-9.00pm Film4 PG

COMEDY DRAMA Another irresistible swirl of valentines and intoxicating local Indian colour, this captivating sequel is not second best at all, more a worthy companion piece to the 2011 crowd-pleaser. Here, co-manager Dev Patel's dreams of expansion get in the way of his marriage plans, while the cream of British acting aristocracy (Bill Nighy, Maggie Smith, Judi Dench) navigate their own romantic complications. AJ (US/UK 2015, swearing, sexual references, HD)

Rumble in the Bronx ★★★
9.00-10.50pm 5Spike 15

ACTION It may be clumsily dubbed, but this Jackie Chan outing is still very entertaining. He stars as a Hong Kong policeman visiting the Big Apple, where he joins his uncle in seeing off a gang of doltish villains. As ever, there's plenty of thrilling action, but Chan always manages to invest his set pieces with an element of balletic humour, so that you feel you are watching violent slapstick rather than expertly executed martial arts. DP (HK/US 1996, violence, swearing, HD)

Green Zone ★★★★
11.30pm-1.40am ITV4 15

THRILLER The search for Weapons of Mass Destruction following the 2003 Iraq invasion leaves one dogged US Army officer questioning his own side in this blend of military action and conspiracy thriller. Reteaming director Paul Greengrass and star Matt Damon, Green Zone delivers high-octane, Bourne-style entertainment, and is exciting and thought-provoking. TJ (US/UK/Fr/Sp 2010, violence, swearing, HD)

URGENT APPEAL: help Syrian families like Khitam's survive the winter.

Khitam lives with her four young children, husband Abdelsalam, and his elderly parents in a single, damp room of a half-built apartment block near Tripoli, Lebanon.

There are holes in the walls and ceiling and, right now, Khitam is terrified by the prospect of another winter where her family will feel every blast of icy wind. Another winter where every time their children cough or sneeze she will fear they have a lethal respiratory condition like pneumonia or tuberculosis.

UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, needs your support to help parents protect their children this winter.

Please will you give £75 to provide a refugee family like Khitam's with a winter survival kit to protect against the freezing weather?

TEMPERATURE FACED BY SYRIAN REFUGEES IN LEBANON. WINTER 2017.

The kit contains essentials such as a heating stove, thermal blankets and a tarpaulin for insulation. It could mean survival for a family like Khitam's.

Across Lebanon and Jordan, six of the last seven winters have brought heavy snowfall and temperatures regularly drop below 0°C.

This winter, the lives of the most vulnerable refugees: young children, pregnant women and the elderly, are at grave risk from hypothermia, frostbite and diseases like pneumonia.

With a gift of £75 you can provide a winter survival kit containing a stove, blankets, jerry can and a tarpaulin to help a family insulate and heat their home. Please give today.

DRAMA This splendid costume drama lays out the great Tudor power play like a richly embroidered carpet with, in the blue corner, Glenda Jackson as Elizabeth I and, in the red corner, Vanessa Redgrave as her cousin Mary Stuart. DRAMA In this modest but touching drama set in the Scilly Isles at the start of the First World War, Paul Scofield plays an elderly loner, hiding away from the world, who is befriended by two curious children. The story is slight, but it is attractively directed by Clive Rees, who draws natural performances from Helen Pearce and Max Rennie. A galaxy of familiar British faces (including Helen Mirren, John Hallam and David Suchet) lends solid support. JF (UK 1989)

SCI-FI EPIC As a slice of philosophy on how we all got started and where we may ultimately go, Stanley Kubrick's seminal work continues to intrigue and perplex in equal measure. It is Kubrick's haunting, stylised combination of music (Strauss's Also Sprach Zarathustra and The Blue Danube) and visuals (such as the giant Starchild floating through space) that gives 2001 its mesmerising quality. It's a must-see, even though its visual impact is seriously hampered by the small screen. SH (UK/US 1968)

FILM OF THE DAY

Armageddon ★★★
9.00pm-12 midnight 5STAR 15

SCI-FI I don't literally think you should do this, but to fully appreciate the net worth of this megabucks popcorn-spiller from producer Jerry Bruckheimer and director Michael Bay about the end of the world, try viewing it after the same team's risible Pearl Harbor. Armageddon will be miraculously revealed to be a witty, postmodern exercise – by comparison, anyway. There's a meteor "the size of Texas" heading for Earth – as indeed there was in the sombre Deep Impact, released the same year – and it's up to Bruce Willis and his motley oil-drilling gang (who have "the Wrong Stuff") to blast off and save us all. In hallmark Bruckheimer style, it's flashy, overwrought and excessive, but there's a knowing irony in the script and in the performances of Willis, Billy Bob Thornton and Steve Buscemi. The loved-up subplot featuring Ben Affleck and Liv Tyler is a low point but, within such an expert thrill ride, it's not the end of the world. (US 1998, violence, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW? Michael Bay was given rare permission to shoot scenes at Nasa; other films shot there include Apollo 13 and Space Cowboys

It Always Rains on Sunday ★★★★
12.10-2.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

CRIME DRAMA One of Ealing's more successful non-comedies, this saga of interconnecting lives brilliantly re-creates the drab city locale of Arthur La Bern's source novel. Googie Withers is outstanding as the ex-lover of convict John McCallum, while Sydney Tafler and John Slater are the embodiment of East Enders, and the film marked a breakthrough for its portrayal of the English working class on screen. Much of the credit should go to director/co-writer Robert Hamer, who's perhaps better known for directing Ealing's one undisputed masterpiece, Kind Hearts and Coronets. TS (UK 1947, BW)

Wrath of the Titans ★★
6.55-9.00pm ITV2 12

FANTASY This routine sequel to the 2010 Clash of the Titans is more about looking epic than telling an interesting story, as director Jonathan Liebesman (Battle Los Angeles) piles on the empty spectacle. The Cyclops, the Minotaur and the prison abyss of Tartarus are among the Greek myths plundered, as Perseus (Sam Worthington) races to the Underworld to save his father, Zeus (Liam Neeson), from the monster Kronos. It's up to Bill Nighy to bring some fun to the proceedings as the fallen god Hephaestus, but despite some excitement – vertiginous falls; battles with two-headed demons – this adventure is strictly off the Hollywood assembly line. AJ (US 2012, some violence, swearing, HD)

Ride Along ★★ 9.00-11.00pm E4 12

COMEDY Stand-up comic Kevin Hart plays a wimpish high-school security guard and wannabe police detective. His other big ambition is to marry Tika Sumpter, but first he has to get the blessing of her brother (Ice Cube), a hardcase Atlanta cop. Ice insists that Hart ride along with him on a nightmare 24-hour patrol where their main focus is hunting down a criminal (Laurence Fishburne). Much fairly obvious slapstick action ensues, often with violence as a substitute for a decent punch-line, but Ride Along is watchable enough, efficient rather than inspired. DA (US 2014, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

Dorian Gray ★★★
9.00-11.20pm Sony Movie Channel 15

HORROR Hesitantly falling between chintzy Hammer horror and cosy costume drama, director Oliver Parker's third Oscar Wilde adaptation (after The Importance of Being Earnest and An Ideal Husband) is a sumptuous but bland affair. Ben Barnes stars as the socialite of the title who's lured by mentor Henry Wotton (Colin Firth) into wanton ways, while his portrait bears the scars of his misdeeds. Dissolves from jam scones to (tamely depicted) orgies perfectly sum up the awkwardness of this chocolate-box confection. AJ (UK/Cay/Can 2009, violence, sex scenes, nudity, drug abuse)

Wilde with a Jagger edge, p116

Face/Off ★★★★
9.00pm-12 midnight Universal 18

ACTION In director John Woo's over-the-top blockbuster, Nicolas Cage plays a lunatic terrorist who, having planted a bomb somewhere in LA, is put into a coma by his FBI agent nemesis (John Travolta). So, of course, the latter uses plastic surgery to swap faces with Cage's villain to dupe his associates. The mix of bizarre plotting, high-octane thrills and sentimental drama doesn't always gel, but there are some nice moments, especially when Cage begins to revive Travolta's stale marriage to Joan Allen, and Woo more than delivers in the overblown action stakes. AT (US 1997, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

The Double ★★
11.50pm-1.20am BBC1 12

THRILLER Retired CIA agent Richard Gere and young rookie Topher Grace team up to track down a Soviet assassin, in a spy thriller that's as dated and clichéd as it sounds. It's perfectly serviceable, and Grace brings the charm that made him so watchable in That '70s Show, but there's nothing in here we haven't seen before, and done better, too. Gere looks tough and bored at the same time, but he and Grace, with a bit of help from Martin Sheen's CIA director, drag the movie over the finish line. DnM (US 2011, some violence, HD)

The book thieves

P American Animals ★★★★★ 15

From Mon Sky Store and Virgin Movies (also on DVD, Blu-ray and download)

DRAMA Bart Layton's first narrative feature is an outrageously entertaining, tremendously inventive true-crime dazzler, which strikes a miraculous balance between documentary grit and classic comedy heist thriller.

In 2004, four bored Kentucky college kids, inspired by Michael Mann and Quentin Tarantino movies, decided to rob their university library of its collection of rare books. What could possibly go wrong? The cleverest move in this outstanding blurring of fact, fiction and celluloid dreaming has the conflicting accounts of the four amateur crooks blended with their real-life convicted adult counterparts, speaking in the present-day with sobering hindsight.

This is a truly unique, constantly amusing and engrossing entry in the criminal caper Hall of Fame. Alan Jones (US/UK 2018, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

P The Nun ★★★ 15

*From Mon Sky Store and Virgin Movies

HORROR An exorcist (Demián Bichir) and novitiate (Taissa Farmiga) are sent by the Vatican to investigate a suicide at a mysterious Romanian abbey in this origin story that expands horror franchise The Conjuring further. Director Corin Hardy has a great eye for demonic detail and this precision shock horror spectacle neatly ties together all the movies in the series. AJ (US 2018, violence. HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

The Little Stranger ★★★ 12 Released 10 January on DVD and download

In director Lenny Abrahamson's slow-burning but rather beguiling period tale, things are going bump in the night at the home of scarred war veteran Roderick Ayres (Will Poulter) and his reclusive sister (Ruth Wilson). A ghost? A housemaid channeling her inner poltergeist? Or the machinations of the creepy doctor (Domhnall Gleeson) who's treating Roderick, but has eyes for the sister and a house he's been oddly bonded to since boyhood. This adaptation doesn't quite deliver on either the mystery or the shudders, but it's decently acted and keeps you guessing. The DVD includes a director's commentary and making-of featurette. Dave Aldridge RT Offer To order the DVD for £13.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting reference RT1691. PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

The real people's vote

Voting for the National Television Awards really matters, says Alison Graham

I CAN HEAR YOU all sighing from the depths of your hearts… "You want us to vote? Again? What about? Will you actually listen to what we think?" Yes, I know we are all jaded, battered and seasick from the Brexit maelstrom (as I write this I have half a mind on stockpiling tins of baked beans) and the very idea of voting for anything at all has taken a battering.

But, please, lift your faces to the sun, soften your souls and prepare yourselves for the People's Vote. No, not THAT People's Vote, but the National Television Awards, run by men and women who really do want to know what you think. Because if you don't vote there won't be a show and everyone will just be sitting in the O2 in London on 22 January, eating crisps and moaning about how on earth they are going to get home because public transport is so bad.

So here's the deal: go through the shortlist on the opposite page, pick your favourite from each category and then vote online or by phone (all the details are at the bottom of the opposite page). As the NTAs aren't the Baftas, you won't find anything too niche and obscure, anything that was watched by just six people and a dog called Alan. This is big, blockbusting stuff and there's something for everyone.

OF COURSE, THE biggest drama of the year is here, Bodyguard, in the brand-new category of New Drama, where it shares airspace with Killing Eve, The Cry, A Discovery of Witches and, for reasons that I can't fathom, the awful Girlfriends. I assume Bodyguard writer Jed Mercurio will coast into the O2 in a diamond-covered Bentley while making plans for where he'll put a swimming pool.

But we can't discount Killing Eve, the wacky, strange, thoroughly splendid, blackly comic drama with Jodie Comer as the disturbingly coquettish, unhinged assassin Villanelle. Both Bodyguard and Killing Eve have the distinction of being the two most downloaded iPlayer shows of 2018.

The drama category is dominated by the BBC with Call the Midwife, Casualty, Doctor Who (its first year with Jodie Whittaker, who's also nominated in best drama performance), Peaky Blinders and the soppy Our Girl. (Why? Surely its place could have gone to ITV's brilliant but overlooked Unforgotten?)

In the TV Presenter category both Ant and Dec make the list, but will they win yet again in a year where Ant McPartlin has largely been absent from our screens? And why isn't the great Claudia Winkleman nominated? She's off-beat, wildly clever and a little bit unpredictable. Get her on this list next year, please.

And is someone having a little joke with the TV Judge shortlist? David Walliams, Louis Tomlinson, Robbie Williams, Simon Cowell and… Robert Rinder? Ho ho, he's an actual judge. See what they did there?

1 LET'S TALK ABOUT...

Sex Education

Netflix

A rude, cheeky mess of a comedy, set in a British sixth-form college styled to resemble a US high school. Asa Butterfield is a virginal nerd who, thanks to his frank sex-therapist mother (Gillian Anderson), knows what to do even if he never does it. He forms an unlikely team with a hot rebel (tremendous newcomer Emma Mackey, right), selling his wisdom to randy classmates. Give it an episode to, er, bed in.
Available from 11 January

THEY'RE BACK!

5 Friends from College

Netflix

A second series of the comedy drama about a gang of snarky New Yorkers who have known each other for ever and are now having to cope with each others' midlife crises. Critics who said it was unoriginal and not very believable weren't wrong exactly, but it has an addictive combination of broad comic set pieces and daringly honest takes on middle-aged malaise. Last year's final-episode bombshell increases the stakes this time round.
Available from 11 January

SEE THE SERIES

2 The ABC Murders

iPlayer (BBC1)

Purists hated it, but if you prefer the classic Poirots with David Suchet, they do still exist – happily we now also have this bold reimagining with John Malkovich as a hurting, fading detective trying to assert himself on one more case amid the rising tensions of the mid-1930s. Once again, writer Sarah Phelps finds new dark corners and adds plenty of her own to an old Agatha Christie story.

FRENCH FANCY

3 Call My Agent!

Netflix

Series three of the sly farce set in a Parisian talent agency, where the feckless staff exacerbate problems caused by diva clients. Guest-starring this year: Monica Bellucci, Jean Dujardin and Isabelle Huppert.

NEW SUPERHEROES

Netflix

Netflix's working relationship with Marvel might be faltering, so here's a new gang from the DC stable: or rather, it's a more serious take on the characters featured in the popular kids' cartoon Teen Titans Go!, who first appeared in print in 1964. It's solid rather than revolutionary, but genre fans will enjoy deconstructing it.
Available from 11 January

MAKE A RESERVATION

6 Raw

Amazon Prime

Fans of Derry Girls might want to check out this previous series by writer Lisa McGee, although it's a different beast. Set in a Dublin restaurant, it's more soap than sitcom, with a lot of the workplace tribulations you'd expect, although McGee's way with an acid one-liner often burns through. If you like it there's a lot to feast on: Amazon has all five series, which ran on RTE in 2006–2013. Lots of familiar British faces pop up.

SITCOM CLASSIC

7 30 Rock

All 4

A chance to go back to the opening episodes, originally shown in 2006, of Tina Fey's awesome sitcom based on her experiences working for Saturday Night Live. Casting herself as smart, brittle comedy writer Liz Lemon and Alec Baldwin as an impossible channel executive, Fey perfected a mix of sharp cultural references and plain silliness that she's not topped since. All 4 has the first two series, with the rest to come later this month.

NEW FROM ISRAEL

8 When Heroes Fly

Netflix

A ratings-buster in its native Israel, this thriller concerns a band of brothers who served as commandos in Lebanon. It looks at the lasting trauma of war, starting with a fantastically tense battle scene from which the four friends never recover. Years later, news that a loved one thought to be dead might be alive in Colombia reunites them for one last mission, in a show with strong themes of loss and complex male friendship.
Available from 10 January

HAVE YOU TRIED IT YET?

9 Black Mirror: Bandersnatch

Netflix

There's a longer than expected wait for the full fifth series of Charlie Brooker's dystopian sci-fi, but Bandersnatch, the single episode dropped without warning just after Christmas, has caused enough of a stir to make up for that. Fionn Whitehead (Dunkirk) plays a computer programmer in the 1980s who faces a series of tough choices... which you have to make for him. It feels like a glimpse of the future.

10 Bros: After the Screaming Stops

UNMISSABLE DOC

iPlayer (BBC4)

The unexpected highlight of Christmas TV was this unbelievable profile of Matt and Luke Goss, filmed in the run-up to a Bros reunion gig last year. A trove of pure Partridge/Spinal Tap comedy gold ("Rome wasn't built in a day... but we don't have the time that Rome had") gives way to a rather moving portrait of the subtle imbalances in the twins' relationship.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Julia Roberts, a superstar who doesn't act like one

George Clooney is on his way to TV with Catch-22. Sean Penn is already there with The First. There aren't many proper Hollywood A-listers left who haven't transitioned to the small screen, and now Julia Roberts has made the leap with Homecoming.

What's remarkable about Roberts's foray into TV drama is that she's not the star. Well, she is, in that she's the lead character: Heidi Bergman, who works as a therapist in a Florida institution. The exact nature of her employer is unclear, but Heidi's work involves counselling war veterans while dodging the volatile demands of her manager, played by a wonderfully swaggering but angrily vulnerable Bobby Cannavale.

The person whose work you notice, however, is the director Sam Esmail. He announced himself as a searingly innovative wrangler of odd camera angles and ambitious mise en scène with Mr Robot, and he uses all his tricks to make Homecoming a woozy, enveloping thriller that's powered by atmosphere rather than action.

Esmail's boldest move is to black out two thirds of the screen in the show's second timeline, which flips forward to find Heidi working as a waitress having apparently put her previous life behind her. Those scenes are in an extreme aspect ratio that's like a smartphone in portrait mode. It makes every shot a claustrophobic close-up, which is just one way in which Esmail enhances a slow-motion paranoid conspiracy thriller with a story about memory, the human spirit and, ultimately, love at its heart.

While we let Esmail dizzy us with his bravura film-making, Roberts stands calm at the centre, only gradually letting Heidi's secrets out but bringing fearsome emotional muscle when required. Some of her Tinseltown buddies seem only to have agreed to do TV if they can dominate it; Roberts has taken a more interesting path. JACK SEALE

Amazon Prime

DOCTOR DIGITAL

How to buy a new television

Looking for a new TV, but bewildered by all the jargon?

First, decide on the size. Compared to HD, a higher-resolution 4K screen will allow you to sit closer to larger screens for a more immersive viewing experience, but do the maths first – multiply the distance between couch and screen by 0.625. So if you want a 70-inch TV, the ideal place for your sofa is 9ft away.

The industry is already touting 8K, which ups the resolution even further. However, there is not much content available. Instead, look for the "4K HDR Ultra HD" logo. This shows the set is compatible with High Dynamic Range, which displays a more lifelike image, and is already used by games consoles and Netflix.

Beyond that, OLED and QLED are two competing but comparable improvements over standard LED screens, with OLED edging it in terms of absolute quality. Many screens advertise the special feature "motion smoothing", but it tends to make movies look terrible and a lot of people end up switching that setting off

See the thing in a shop before buying. But be aware that most display models run colourful footage and have their brightness and saturation boosted to an absurd degree. For a true test, take a familiar Blu-ray and ask to try it out. JONATHAN HOLMES

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

DARK SECRETS
Uno (Andre Eriksen, far right) is putting his group to the test

PICK OF THE DAY Black Lake 9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA The Black Lake island looks so lovely – wildly beautiful, with glorious woodland and chic accommodation. What a pity the place is so full of ghosts and narcissists and the ridiculous, insufferable Uno, leader of the world's worst personal development course.

Uno's idea of persuading everyone to "face up to their demons" is to sleep with the most vulnerable female participants and make fatuous speeches. His latest wheeze is to get the little group – diminished after one of them went missing – to spend time in a creaking, dark, dilapidated, isolated former cholera hospital. That's just what they need.

In the penultimate double bill of the enjoyably creepy Scandi thriller, the remaining "volunteers" grow increasingly restless and question what really happened to the woman, Josefine, and her daughter, who disappeared the previous year. Surely Uno knows more than he's letting on?

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Champions Cup Rugby

12.30pm C4/BT Sport 2

SPORT Toulouse visit Leinster in a match (kick-off 1pm) that will decide Pool One, since the two English clubs in the group are way off the pace. Both teams here posted more than 40 points last time out in easy home wins, with Toulouse dispatching Wasps, and Leinster seeing off Bath.

It's the French club who go into this game with the advantage, at least on a cold reading of the league table. They beat Leinster in the reverse fixture in October. But that was a 28–27 squeaker. Leinster's performances have been the more impressive since, and the defending champions are on home Irish turf.

Earlier, at 10.30am, The Big Tackle includes highlights of Gloucester v Munster from last night. JACK SEALE

Princess Diana's "Wicked" Stepmother

7.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Downton Abbey creator Julian Fellowes notes wryly of his friend Raine Spencer, Princess Diana's stepmother, in this enjoyable documentary from 2017, "Nobody is a countess three times by accident."

The daughter of Barbara Cartland, Raine was a formidable local politician and even a recording star. With an astounding bouffant hairdo and a cut-glass accent, she launched herself on London society, and eventually bagged the dour Johnnie Spencer. But his children, including Diana, despised her, and would sing, "Raine, Raine, go away." Yet a surprisingly close friendship grew between Raine and Diana after the royal marriage collapsed. AG

Henry VIII's Lost Palace: Digging Up Britain

7.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Elsyng Palace in Enfield, north London, was one of nearly 60 of Henry's residences, but until the 1960s its exact location was unknown. Helen Skelton and Alex Langlands visit a new dig unearthing more clues about Tudor life.

Among the finds are the remnants of an oven used for banquets and a groat bearing the King's portrait. But why did he stay there at all? It was at least half a day's ride from his Thames-side residences. It turns out he was terrified of the diseases sweeping London and wanted to keep his ailing son Edward free of infection. JANE RACKHAM

Michael McIntyre's Big Show

7.10pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT In the last of this jape-a-minute series, it's Alan Carr who gamely hands over his mobile to Michael McIntyre in Send to All. By now, surely, every celebrity in the land must know that if they receive an odd-sounding text, it's probably from McIntyre. Dawn French certainly did when he sent her one purportedly from Anton Du Beke offering a plastic surgery deal.

But for some reason most of Carr's friends fall for it completely when "he" texts that his dogs are getting married – and respond with some terrific canine jokes. Only one guesses correctly that it's a prank... because "you haven't texted me since 2013!" JR

KNOW YOUR BANJO BROTHERS

■ Since winning Britain's Got Talent ten years ago (beating Susan Boyle, no less), Diversity street dancers Ashley and Jordan Banjo have both carved out successful TV careers. The siblings are on screen in force this January, with Jordan, 26 (near right), presenting The Greatest Dancer (8.10pm BBC1) alongside Alesha Dixon, and 30-year-old Ashley returning to the judging panel of ITV's Dancing on Ice (Sunday 6pm).

■ Ashley is arguably the better known of the brothers, appearing as a judge on ITV's Dance Dance Dance and Sky 1's Got to Dance, as well as fronting Ashley Banjo's Secret Street Crew (also Sky 1) and he can also be seen hosting Flirty Dancing (Thursdays C4).

■ Jordan, meanwhile, has joined his brother as a backstage presenter on both Dancing on Ice and Got to Dance. He also took part in I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here! in 2016. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Voice UK

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT One big way in which The Voice UK has differed from The X Factor or Britain's Got Talent (apart from inviting only genuinely talented singers to audition, of course) is that, up until now, the show has only been open to soloists and duos. But this year, there's been a slight tweak to the format that means trios may also now enter the competition.

This should mean a wider range of acts auditioning, while giving Tom Jones, Jennifer Hudson, will.i.am and Olly Murs an even tougher time trying to work out how many singers are standing behind them in the Blind Auditions, which continue tonight. As ever, Emma Willis will be on standby with hugs of encouragement. FT

Midsomer Murders

9.00pm ITV3

DRAMA A better-than-average edition from 2017 set in Bleakridge, Midsomer's "most remote village". Not so remote that it doesn't have its own pub, café, butcher's shop and hardware store – the kind of bustling centre many villages would kill for. Sorry, that's the wrong figure of speech in the circumstances: a member of the local vigilante group, who rule the village "like a rural Stasi", has been murdered.

Midsomer always threatens to collapse under its own web of hatreds, but this case rises above the usual countryside Cluedo with help from Frances Barber, Neil Morrissey and Vicki Pepperdine in guest roles and a denouement that makes some psychological sense. DAVD BUTCHER

Casualty

9.10pm BBC1

DRAMA Alicia and Ethan have been getting along so nicely. She appears to have completely recovered from the attack on her by that creepy doctor, and Ethan is all smiley and understanding.

But the pair have one of those "I'm your boyfriend, but don't forget that at work I'm much more important than you" spats after they disagree over the treatment of a patient. Alicia wants to start a risky procedure, but Ethan is hidebound, insisting: "I'm a different sort of doctor. I stick to the rules."

Ah, the "rules" that say it's OK to kill a patient then sleep with his partner, and to carry out an illegal operation on a colleague? You mean those rules, Ethan? AG

YOUNG STAR
Fionn, aged nine, from Dublin, takes to the stage

The Greatest Dancer

8.10pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT What with Strictly Come Dancing being the BBC's biggest entertainment show, it's no surprise that plenty of Glitterball magic has been peppered throughout The Greatest Dancer. Not only is it presented by a former Strictly winner and judge in Alesha Dixon, it also stars a current professional with "dance captain" Oti Mabuse and even offers the winner the chance to perform on the next series of Strictly, along with a cash prize of £50,000.

New entertainment formats that not only flourish but go on to become even half as successful as Strictly are as rare as hen's teeth. It'll be telling to see how many viewers return for tonight's second episode after they tuned in last Saturday to see what all the fuss was about. FT

The call of the wild

The Revenant ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

If you missed the Freeview premiere of this triple Oscar winner on New Year's Day, you still have until the end of the month to catch up on iPlayer. Directed by Alejandro González Iñárritu (Birdman), it stars Leonardo DiCaprio as a man who's mauled by a grizzly while on a scouting expedition, then left for dead by a treacherous Tom Hardy. It's an astonishing piece of film-making where the elements ooze from every shot, with DiCaprio giving a performance of agonising honesty and intensity. JEREMY ASPINALL

Lucas behind the scenes

9.50pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

During filming in Arizona, the ritzy cast of this western (among them Gregory Peck and Omar Sharif) welcomed a young film student by the name of George Lucas. Securing an internship thanks to his lecturer, High Noon writer Carl Foreman, Lucas shot an expressionist short documentary about the locations, much to his mentor's irritation: "Carl had a fit," Lucas remembered. "He said, 'You're supposed to do it about the movie.' We kind of butted heads." JOSH WINNING

Sky's mega upgrade

Sky Cinema knows a thing or two about hit movies; after all, it has a whole channel devoted to them. But some blockbusters are invariably bigger than others, and it's these monster money-makers that are celebrated over the next four weeks, as Sky Hits becomes Sky Megahits. Don't miss Avatar, which, ten years after its release, still tops the worldwide box office with takings of $2.7 billion. JAMIE HEALY

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

DIRTY BUSINESS Vera (Brenda Blethyn), Aiden (Kenny Doughty) and Kenny (Jon Morrison) dig into a new case

PICK OF THE DAY Vera 8.00pm ITV

DRAMA OF THE WEEK The body of a young woman who's been stabbed to death is discovered on a reeking landfill site at the start of a meaty new investigation for the peerless DCI Vera Stanhope in her Flowerpot Men hat and scruffy sludge-coloured mac.

It's always good to see Vera again, with those eyes that miss nothing and those gimlet gazes that burn through the souls of the guilty. And the innocent too, it must be said. It turns out that the victim, Joanne, was an idealistic forensic psychology trainee. She managed to rise above a troubled domestic background, the furious arguments of her warring parents and the faithlessness of her dad, to become a very capable and promising student who was popular with her colleagues.

But Vera (Brenda Blethyn) and her little team discover that Joanne had got her teeth into an old case where she scented injustice, and someone decided to shut her up. ALISON GRAHAM

Snooker: the Masters

*From 1.00pm BBC2, Euro2

SPORT With £200,000 awaiting the eventual winner, this is one of snooker's three most prestigious tournaments, alongside the UK and World Championships. Certainly you could see what a "Triple Crown" title meant to champion Mark Allen and tearful runner-up Kyren Wilson after a tense final 12 months ago.

As usual, the holder is this year's number one seed, so it's Allen who breaks the first balls in London this afternoon as he takes on Belgium's Luca Brecel, who can claim to be continental Europe's best ever player. Tonight it's John Higgins v Ryan Day (6.45pm Euro2, highlights 11.30pm BBC2), with Ronnie O'Sullivan cueing tomorrow. JACK SEALE

Sport: page 33

Dancing on Ice

*6.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Heading into this series, reality television's Gemma Collins declared: "Torvill and Dean, take a step to the left, because I'm about to win the Bolero Cup." But Torvill and Dean probably don't have much to worry about. A sizzle reel of the celebrities in training showed Gemma falling over. A lot.

Conversely, Corrie's Jane Danson and former Westlife singer Brian McFadden were shaping up to be rather competent on the ice, while former Strictly professional James Jordan revealed he was finding skating harder than dancing. But, as ever, surviving each week on Dancing on Ice is as much about winning over viewers as it is trying not to fall on your face. FRANCES TAYLOR

Antiques Roadshow

*7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL It was a boiling hot July day when the Antiques Roadshow team arrived in Erddig, Wrexham, last year, where some of the treasures that were brought in raised temperatures, too.

Among them was a leather jacket worn by 007 Daniel Craig during the filming of a Bond movie, a couple of sketches by famous Welsh landscape artist Sir John "Kyffin" Williams and an emerald and diamond ring with a Titanic history. However, the most excitement was created by presenter Fiona Bruce, who bravely (foolishly?) hopped on to a penny farthing cycle and managed to ride it – with hardly any wobbling – much to the crowd's delight. JANE RACKHAM

Chocolate Dreams: Inside Hotel Chocolat

*8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Even if, post-Christmas, you've sworn off chocolate this is a very tasty morsel (and a great ad for the brand). We join Hotel Chocolat founder Angus Thirlwell as he opens a new branch in Sunderland, taste-tests one of his chocolatiers' latest creations and visits his cocoa plantation in St Lucia. His company makes a million chocolates every day, but Thirlwell seems to be a hands-on kind of boss who is passionate about his product.

And if you fancy staying in an actual Hotel Chocolat, you can. It's situated in the Rabot cocoa plantation on St Lucia and the restaurant's menu involves all things cacao. JR

PLANET EARTH ON VIEW

Cities: Nature's New Wild may be ending this evening (9pm BBC2) but there are plenty more natural history series to look forward to this year. David Attenborough (right) comes to Netflix in April with the eight-part Our Planet, from the makers of the original Blue Planet, filmed in 50 countries across all continents. "Our Planet will take viewers on a spectacular journey of discovery showcasing the beauty and fragility of our natural world," said Attenborough, who narrates the series.

Additionally, Blue Planet Live is coming to BBC1 for a week in March, broadcasting live from the US East Coast, the Bahamas and the Great Barrier Reef. There's also BBC1's Seven Worlds and Earth from Space – a four-part series that will look at animal migrations and disappearing forests from space cameras. Meanwhile Chris Packham, Michaela Strachan and Gillian Burke return to BBC2 later this month with Winterwatch. FRANCES TAYLOR

Les Misérables

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA The story's hero, reformed thief Jean Valjean (Dominic West), is in an impossible position. He knows a man is about to be charged in court for his past crimes. So either he lets an innocent man be condemned or he throws off his own disguise – and is sent back to prison himself. It's a sharp moral trap that picks up the running theme of how to do the right thing in a rotten system, and West plays noble, honourable Valjean beautifully.

But elsewhere doomed mother Fantine is terribly sick, and the Thénardiers treat her young daughter Cosette like a slave, whipping and abusing her: it's not often Olivia Colman gets to play out-and-out wicked characters but of course, she's brilliant. DAVID BUTCHER

Cities: Nature's New Wild

9.00pm BBC2

NATURE The final episode of an engaging series that just about manages to stay on the right side of twee looks at the outcasts of the natural world – animals and insects displaced from their homes by human communities.

Sometimes the two can get along quite well, like the alligators who share territory with golfers in a luxury Florida resort. But life isn't quite so smooth for elephants in a Sri Lankan forest, who are chased away nightly with firecrackers and flares by villagers. It can lead to deaths, among both people and elephants. And white-faced capuchin monkeys are in trouble in Costa Rica as they pinch food from tourists. AG

Unlocking the Truth

10.00pm W

DOCUMENTARY New series Aimed at fans of Serial or Making a Murderer, this US series investigates possible wrong convictions. Its presenter, Ryan Ferguson, is well qualified – he was exonerated after serving ten years in jail for the murder of a sports journalist. Now he is teaming up with legal investigator Eva Nagao to see if they can help other prisoners whose convictions are open to question.

Their first case is that of Michael Politte, serving life for the murder of his mother when he was 14. The series originated on MTV, so there's a hint of reality TV about it all (Ferguson and Nagao share a cocktail moment at one point), but they're engaging enough. Who knows what they'll discover? GILL CRAWFORD

NUNS THE WISER
Sisters Frances (Ella Bruccoleri), Mildred (Miriam Margolyes) and Hilda (Fenella Woolgar)

Call the Midwife

8.00pm BBC1

DRAMA There are two uncharacteristically low-key arrivals at Nonnatus House when Sisters Frances and Hilda are dispatched from the mother home to do good works in Poplar as the eighth series starts. We know very little about either of them, apart from the fact that calf-eyed Sister Frances is "as green as grass" according to the waspish Phyllis (Linda Bassett) while Sister Hilda (Fenella Woolgar) used to live in the East End and has seen some of what life can be like in the raw.

As you'd expect, there are heart-tugging challenges and moral dilemmas, with plenty of righteous indignation on behalf of women who were so badly treated by the system in the early 1960s. Specifically women who had to seek an illegal abortion. One such unfortunate can't face her guilt and shame – and the possibility of prosecution – when she suffers a botched op. AG

Is This Sexual Harassment?

from 10am BBC3

Ben Zand is your host for a factual format that's produced good results in the past for BBC3 when dealing with difficult issues. A group of people aged 18–30 watch a specially produced workplace drama, stopping at various stages to give their view on whether the male character is guilty of sexually harassing his colleague. The debate draws out challengingly diverse views.

9.00 Cities: Nature's New Wild
RT 3/3. Outcasts. As our cities get bigger, many animals have found themselves fighting for a place in a land that once belonged to them. In Sri Lanka, competition between elephants and humans has resulted in deadly territorial conflicts. On the coast of Costa Rica, a troop of capuchin monkeys is under threat from man. However, some creatures have befriended their neighbours, like a heron called Kiri who's visited the same Amsterdam house twice a day for the past 17 years. And beneath the famous skyline of New York, humpback whales are colonising Hudson Bay. See page 59.

Wright's many wrongs

Pride & Prejudice ★★★★ 4.25pm Film4 FREEVIEW

It was daring enough of director Joe Wright to make Pride & Prejudice with anyone but the industry-standard Colin Firth in the role of Mr Darcy. (He cast Matthew Macfadyen, who has barely been seen without a tunic and stick ever since.) But the smoochy, just-married ending added specifically to appease US audiences proved even more controversial. British fans demanded to see Macfadyen and Keira Knightley in soft focus, too, and the mushier version was released here in selected cinemas. If it doesn't offend your sensibilities too much, you can find it as an extra on the DVD. ANDREW COLLINS

Curse of the Kennedys

P The Senator ★★★ 6.10pm Sky Premiere

Jason Clarke certainly looks the part here as Senator Edward Kennedy, whose involvement in the death of a campaigner (Kate Mara) on Chappaquiddick Island thwarted his presidential ambitions in 1969. Director John Curran offers no definitive answers as to what happened and uses a multi-flashback device to depict the accident when Ted's car plunged off a bridge on that fateful night. This sturdy drama completes an unofficial trilogy of films about the Kennedy brothers, following JFK (1991) and Bobby (2006). JEREMY ASPINALL

Back on Netflix today

The Fault in Our Stars ★★★ Netflix

This bittersweet tear-jerker alternates between mawkish melodrama and heartfelt sincerity. Shailene Woodley is utterly disarming as the teenager with thyroid cancer who strikes up a relationship with Ansel Elgort, a patient in remission. Be sure to keep some tissues on hand for this one. STEPHEN CARTY

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

FRIENDS, REUNITED
Pete, Karen, Adam, Jenny and David get together for a wedding...

PICK OF THE DAY

Cold Feet 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Writer Mike Bullen teases us in the opening few minutes when Pete, Jen, Adam, Karen and David dress for a wedding. But whose? It's a deliciously light start to a new series of his beloved comic drama that looks at the minefields of middle-class middle age without ever being patronising or preachy.

It's not all fun, though: there's a suggestion of dark times ahead when one of the little group of long-standing, long-suffering pals hears something that doesn't augur well.

As we return to Manchester, Adam (James Nesbitt) continues to embarrass himself by hitting on much, much younger women. In the past, this might have been thought twinkly and charming, but times have moved on in so many ways, and Adam must take a long, literal, look in the mirror.

Pete and Jen, meanwhile, fear facing up to a major life change, while Karen and David try to support their unhappy son. ALISON GRAHAM

Great Canadian Railroad Journeys

6.30pm BBC2

TRAVEL To be honest there's not a lot of railway travel in this episode. Once Michael Portillo has arrived in the Nova Scotian city of Halifax, he stays put to explore the area on foot or on water.

There's the obligatory dressing-Michael-up sequence involving a kilt, and a plucky-Michael-has-a-go sequence where he joins a war canoe racing team. But he uncovers nuggets of interest, too, including Africville – an African/North American community that was demolished by 1970 – and the short-lived "marine railway", a water-driven pulley system on the Shubenacadie Canal that lifted boats over the hills. JANE RACKHAM

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Silent Witness specialises in presenting us with a seemingly endless variety of Dumb Cops of the Week, but tonight we have a first – a female detective who has the temerity to sexually harass forensic pathologist Jack. She even kisses him, unbidden, at a crime scene. Cheeky. Meanwhile, her partner is a knuckle-headed moron who is rude to bereaved families and who thinks drug addicts have no one to blame but themselves when they overdose and die. He is particularly vocal about this.

This pair are shackled to a story that tackles the twin evils of the street opioid epidemic and knife crime. Concludes tomorrow. AG

9.00pm BBC2 (Scotland: 11.15pm)

DOCUMENTARY Over the past century, says Chris Packham, scientists have doubled life expectancy, developed new technology and cracked the code of life itself. This is the basis of his argument that you should vote for Marie Curie, Alan Turing, Albert Einstein or Tu Youyou as the greatest person of the 20th century.

It's hard to resist voting for Curie when you think about how her discoveries helped fight cancer... but then there are the remarkable legacies of the other three. It's preposterous picking just one person, but as a history lesson, this is engrossing. JR

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Soapland loves to put its hard men through the wringer – think Phil Mitchell on EastEnders getting hooked on crack, Trevor Royle on Hollyoaks losing his son and now Cain Dingle suffering with extreme guilt following the death of Joe in Emmerdale (7pm ITV). As we saw over Christmas, Cain can't even throw a punch any more. So it's no wonder he's shaken – a don't-mess-with-me stare followed by an uppercut having been his stock-in-trade for the past 20 years.

Now it looks as though things are going to get a whole lot worse when Cain reveals to Debbie that he killed Joe. Except that we, as viewers, know that it was Graham who actually appeared to secretly finish him off. If Joe is dead at all, that is. Expect further teases this evening when a body is finally found, only for it not to be the missing Mr Tate at all. I wouldn't put it past the show to bring him back at some point should the Hollywood plans of actor Ned Porteous come to nought.

DAVID BROWN

Prison

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Paddy Wivell's series about Durham Prison returns after a break and its portrait of daily life behind bars is as terrifying, funny and chaotic as ever. Wivell has a way of filming and interviewing the prisoners that gets right into their world in a way few prison docs manage. His theme this time is the violence that hovers over daily exchanges among prisoners and the tiny sparks that set off sudden, vicious brawls.

As we meet inmate Troi and his friend Kurtis they are discussing natural history ("Blue Planet was mad still! You see the blue shark, bro?") but the tale of Troi, as he tries to reform himself and escape his violent past, has heartbreaking ups and downs.

Chris Tarrant: Extreme Railway Journeys

9.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL The highlight of Chris Tarrant's journey across Spain's railways is a visit to the bizarre station of Canfranc in the Pyrenees. It's a vast, beautiful 1920s building but its marble booking halls and once elegant bars are now "the greatest white elephant in the history of railways".

Tarrant explains how the place came to be defunct and, like several elements of the show, it's bound up with Spain's decision to have a wider gauge of track than anywhere else in Europe. I grant you, only a special sort of person gets excited about gauge issues, but when you see the amazing device that can widen a train's wheels while it's moving, you may become one of them. DB

Two Doors Down

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

SITCOM This week our nettlesome neighbours gather after the funeral of Colin's dad. I love the way sour grandmother Christine is as dismissive about the service ("Very disappointing") as she always is about everything else: "That wee minister couldn't lead a tango, let alone a prayer." There's also a running joke that is typical of the surreal touches that writers Simon Carlyle and Gregor Sharp sprinkle through the show, as Christine keeps dwelling not on the man they're there to mourn but on the passing of... Seve Ballesteros.

Hostess Cathy (Doon MacKichan) is too busy bullying people to notice, while indulging her obsession with kissing (gay) Gordon on the lips whenever possible. DB

A MACABRE CASE
Wayne Hays (Mahershala Ali) and Roland West (Stephen Dorff) lead the investigation

True Detective

9.00pm, 10.10pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA After a disjointed second series in 2015, a child abduction case in dirt-poor Arkansas represents a welcome return to form (and basics) for Nic Pizzolatto's time-layered anthology crime saga.

We first encounter our hero Wayne Hays (Mahershala Ali) in 1980 as a boozy cop roused to action by the disappearance of a young brother and sister from a broken home in the beautiful Ozarks countryside. In cleverly overlapping scenes he and partner Roland West (Stephen Dorff) revisit the case in 1990 and then in 2015 (yes, the prosthetics are that good) when Hays's mind is going but the story's mysteries still haunt him.

Our leads (Oscar-winner Ali in particular) are first rate; it's also sublimely written, rewardingly slow and vividly evocative of a world where the nature of racial tension may alter slightly over the years, but the poverty, gloom and menace never can. BEN DOWELL

iPlayer (expires today)

A leisurely documentary, first shown in 2014. Archaeologist Dr Jago Cooper looks at new evidence regarding the end of the civilisation that once thrived on Easter Island: the common wisdom is that the people burnt through the land's resources too fast, but Cooper wonders if there's a different parable to be told.

Happy birthday, Jason!

Hancock ★★★ 7.15pm Sky Megahits

As he's still so boyishly handsome, it's hard to credit that Jason Bateman turns 50 today. The New York-born actor started out on TV in 1981 in Little House on the Prairie, subsequently winning the hirsute lead in Teen Wolf Too (1987). Fox's family drama Arrested Development made him a household name, earning him roles in Starsky & Hutch, The Break-Up and as the PR of Will Smith's drunken superhero in Hancock. He's since taken the lead in the Horrible Bosses movies and Netflix's Ozark, while a move into directing films has added another string to his bow. ANDREW COLLINS

Minnie makes her mark

Circle of Friends ★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

Feature debuts don't come much better than Minnie Driver's in this adaptation of Maeve Binchy's novel, available on Channel 5's catch-up service until Wednesday. Driver lights up the screen as the country girl who has to abandon her Dublin education to work in the family shop, where she must fight off the attentions of smarmy Alan Cumming. Colin Firth is overly mannered as the Protestant landlord and director Pat O'Connor slips in too many emerald vistas, but the story is told with wit and charm. DAVID PARKINSON

Mad Max 2 ★★★★

11.10pm TCM

After the low-budget nihilism of the original film, director George Miller moved up a gear for this violent and exhilarating sequel. This time, Mel Gibson's road warrior comes to the aid of a peace-loving group being threatened by voracious highway gangs. Mel returns on Friday in Beyond Thunderdome.

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

HIGHER PLANE
Sharon gets worried as depressed Rob gets religion

PICK OF THE DAY Catastrophe 10.00pm C4

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Carrie Fisher, who played Rob's mom Mia, is sadly no longer with us. But her character lives on off-screen, bossily sending over Rob's sister Sydney (Michaela Watkins) to check on his drinking and take her place as the show's trying transatlantic interloper. It's another beautifully written, thematically tight episode, where everyone seems to be either measuring their happiness levels against others' or seeking quick fixes.

Rob Delaney's (clearly quite lost and depressed) Rob finds himself drawn to Sydney's Quakerism, while teacher Sharon (Sharon Horgan) worries both about his new-found religiosity and the fact that one of her pupils seems scared of her. Their friend Fran (Ashley Jensen) is also forced to confront her ex Chris's sexy new girlfriend in one of this show's many deliciously rude set-pieces. And if being as moving, smart, witty and authentic as ever isn't enough, we also get a neat subplot involving some Tupperware full of chopped vegetables. BEN DOWELL

Love Your Home and Garden

8.00pm ITV

PROPERTY Looking after two young children is challenging when you're both wheelchair users, but Nina and Steve Parry from Swindon also have to contend with a poorly laid-out home and a garden they can't see from inside. So their kids can't play outside safely. A radical new lay-out for their boring bungalow – linking to a dazzling and accessible outdoor space – is what's required. And Alan Titchmarsh's team are just the people to do it for them.

Although there was no preview available, we're told the results stun the family. In any case, you'd need a heart of stone to be unmoved when these make-overs are revealed. JANE RACKHAM

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA The gormless cop who judges drug addicts sneers after a particularly nasty death from a street opioid: "Is there a crime here other than terminal stupidity?" His boss (played by Samantha Womack) meanwhile keeps trying to get off with an unwilling Jack. Considering that this pair are the only police officers in Silent Witness's London, I feel they really should be making better use of their time.

The script throws everything at us – multiple deaths, a lesson on the evils of illegal drug manufacturing, knife crime, stop and search, the horrors of sink estates and an inspirational little speech about hope for the future, or something. ALISON GRAHAM

Icons

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Another curious move from the BBC's already pretty curious search for the overall best person of the 20th century: most of the series' presenters are your regular British TV types such as Trevor McDonald, Clare Balding or, last night, Chris Packham, but this guide to the greatest entertainers of the century is fronted by none other than Kathleen Turner. She brings her acting acumen to appraisals of Charlie Chaplin and Marilyn Monroe, while also making the case for Billie Holiday and David Bowie.

As Turner flits from Hollywood to Harlem and across the Atlantic to London, interviewees include Simon Callow, Dave Stewart and historian Sarah Churchwell. JACK SEALE

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Shooting rifles, spot-welding and operating log-cutting machinery at the age of ten tends to be frowned upon in urban society. But in remotest north-west Canada it seems kind of normal. Essential, even.

Ben's forewarned, but not sure what to expect: you get the feeling he's anticipating seven Yosemite Sam lookalikes wrapped up in bullet belts. But he's surprised at the warm welcome he gets from Jeff, Rose and their five daughters. Ben soon builds a rapport with the kids, who seem happy with their hardworking lives. But is there anything missing? "Hot running water would be delightful," says one, when pressed. GARY ROSE

Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.45pm) promises that its 20th-anniversary year will feature 12 months of treats for fans. And after Tom Campbell-Gore's comeback earlier this month, we now have the return of Ric Griffin's ex-wife Lola (Sharon D Clarke, right), who's been drafted in for a locum shift and soon charms both the patients and Serena. While it's terrific to see her, you'll end up wishing she was making more than just this one-episode guest appearance, such is the appeal of her chemistry with co-star Hugh Quarshie.

So, after this, I wonder which familiar face will be turning up next? Surely Patsy Kensit has to be dusting down her ward sister uniform? Tina Hobley getting ready to reapply her lip gloss? Though, in my eyes, no birthday celebration will be complete without the double whammy of Anton Meyer (George Irving) and Nick Jordan (Michael French) turning up for at least a month-long story arc. I expect nothing less, Holby writers. DAVID BROWN

Living the Dream

9.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA Well, who'd have thought that living the American Dream could be such a nightmare? Certainly not Mal Pemberton (Philip Glenister wearing a permanently dazed expression) who has just discovered his RV park's thriving Tornado Tearoom must be staffed by an American rather than his wife Jen (Lesley Sharp) if he's to comply with the terms of his visa.

Meanwhile his impressively Machiavellian daughter Tina connives to get rid of intense boyfriend Conan while son Freddie mysteriously keeps skipping off school. At times Living the Dream is reminiscent of Terry and June (hapless husband, long-suffering wife)... except set in sun-drenched Florida, not grey old Purley. JR

Escape at Dannemora

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Finally: some action. We don't really need it, now we're used to the slow pace and low-budget 1980s vibe. But it doesn't hurt in a prison-break drama to have a bit of old-fashioned filing away with hacksaws. The blades have been smuggled in by tragic Tilly (Patricia Arquette), though she's so dim she thinks they're for Matt (Benicio del Toro) to cut picture frames with. Tilly is a sad, sharp portrait of a working woman caught in a fantasy: her need for escape (from her husband and dreary routine) is as great as the inmates', whose work she oversees.

Arquette is brilliantly believable: her attempt in the opening scene to connect with two younger, cooler women at her nail bar is as sad as it is doomed. DAVID BUTCHER

The Passage

9.00pm Fox

DRAMA New series This new sci-fi/horror/fantasy hybrid, loosely based on the acclaimed trilogy of novels by Justin Cronin, could be just another load of Walking Dead wannabe hokum, were it not for a riveting central performance by Saniyya Sidney as ten-year-old orphan Amy Bellafonte.

Amy has somehow been selected as the next test subject for a creepy medical facility where vampires are being used to help develop immunity to all diseases. But the trained killer sent to collect Amy is really a big softy and he goes on the run with her. There's a lot thrown at you, but Sidney grabs your attention whenever she's on screen and it's worth watching for her alone. DAVID CRAWFORD

CURRYING FAVOUR
Fred Sirieix gets his tastebuds tickled

My Million Pound Menu

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD The days when every Asian restaurant on the high street had interchangeable menus are long gone. Now customers are interested in the different flavours of regional cuisine rather than an anglicised curry like a chicken tikka masala.

Understandably, the profit margins of any rice- or noodle-based cuisine are astronomically good but these three fledgeling restaurant operations – Baba G, XXVI and Krapow Thai Street Food – must demonstrate something extra if the investors are to part with their money.

One pair make Fred Sirieix gasp with their spicy curry sauce, another confuse everyone with their brand name, while the third serve up a messy-looking dish. It's fascinating learning the thought process behind launching a new eating concept, although you may find some of the profit-making ploys unpalatable. JR

9.00 Rome Unpacked
2/2. Andrew Graham-Dixon and Giorgio Locatelli go in search of Rome's papal, Baroque and Renaissance history. After marvelling at the mosaics in the 12th-century Basilica di San Clemente, the duo head to the vast Testaccio slaughterhouse, where workers were once paid in offal. Then Andrew shows Giorgio a 16th-century painting, The Bean Eater by Carracci, a Baroque masterpiece that makes an everyday subject look extraordinary.
Series producer Silvia Sacco; Exec producer Jeremy Dear

P The Hatton Garden Job ★★★
9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

London's Hatton Garden safe-deposit heist of April 2015, pulled off by "career criminals" (ie largely pensioners), was a gift to film-makers. To prove it, three films have already jostled for our attention: the low-wattage Hatton Garden: the Heist; The Hatton Garden Job (review, p40), undermined by the casting of nice guy Matthew Goode; and King of Thieves with Sir Michael Caine, out on DVD next week. ITV's four-part Hatton Garden has mysteriously never been shown, locked, we hope, in a safer deposit box than the jewels. ANDREW COLLINS

Exposing a cover-up

P The Last Witness ★★★ 10.25pm Sky Premiere

The massacre of 22,000 Polish officers and civilians by Soviet forces in 1940 was previously dramatised by Andrzej Wajda in Katyn (2007). Piotr Szkopiak, whose grandfather was killed in the massacre, relates this fictional story set in 1947, in which a Bristol journalist (Alex Pettyfer) investigates a spate of Polish suicides that lead to a potential cover-up. Robert Wieckiewicz, playing an expat Polish farmworker, is the standout in a film that relies too much on exposition but makes the most of its limited locations. AC

New on Prime this week

The latest film from The Queen of Versailles documentarian Lauren Greenfield explores attitudes to the pursuit of money, celebrity and fame. Featuring everyone from loadsamoney teens to the man who owns the world's longest limo, this is a sensitive and intelligent chronicle of our times. JEREMY ASPINALL

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Magnum P.I. 9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA New series I remember the mum of a schoolfriend once getting twitchy about the tightness of Tom Selleck's denim. "Magnum's jeans are OBSCENE," she complained, before asking, "What time is it on again?" And that was the thing about the 1980s' Magnum: he was so irresistibly macho. He drove a Ferrari, fired a gun, sported a moustache, had mates with moustaches and experienced Vietnam flashbacks. What a guy!

This new reboot, directed by Fast & Furious's Justin Lin, only makes surface tweaks to the formula: Magnum (Jay Hernandez) has lost the lip tickler, while major-domo Higgins (Perdita Weeks) is now a woman. So it's still basically the same fun, escapist mix of action and mystery as the Hawaii-based security-consultant-cum-detective divides his time between hanging out at the luxury pad of elusive novelist Robin Masters, getting on the wrong side of his dobermans and zipping around the islands solving crimes. I didn't, however, spot any stonewashed spray-ons, but it's early days. DAVID BROWN

Tom Kerridge's Fresh Start

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD Lots of TV cookery shows at this time of year guilt-trip us about our expanded waistlines, so it's refreshing to watch one that simply encourages us to cook from scratch. No low-fat, sugar-free, tasteless recipes. Instead, on Tom Kerridge's menu are giant sausage rolls and filo-pastry triangles stuffed with feta.

He ramps up his plan to get everyone in his eight volunteer families cooking by pushing the reluctant cooks (mostly the dads) to make basic dishes and involving the kids in seasoning and stirring. Then Tom announces he wants them to cook healthier food and do more exercise. Knew it couldn't last. JANE RACKHAM Your RT Books: page 144

Bradley Walsh and Son: Breaking Dad

8.00pm ITV

TRAVEL It's time for a Walsh to go where no Walsh has been before, narrator Alexander Armstrong tells us. Bradley and son Barney might be in Texas but they're also crossing the final frontier – space. Barney's plan (which he worries may be a step too far) is for them to experience G-forces like astronauts do during their training. "I don't even like the waltzer at the fairground," mutters Walsh Sr, before gamely giving it a go. A shame he'd just eaten a Texan-sized pancake breakfast, really.

While their experiences are fun to watch, the reason this is really enjoyable is their lovely relationship. It just makes you smile. JR

The Twinstitute

8.30pm BBC2

HEALTH So, you're about a week into that new year fitness kick, but are you doing it as efficiently as you could? Chris and Xand van Tulleken's fun science series continues by putting one half of two sets of twins on a moderate exercise programme, and the identical siblings on short, high-intensity workouts. A nation crosses its fingers, gently flexes its knees and hopes the slower exertions will yield better results, but of course the more important message is that either option is better than nothing.

That's not necessarily true of the other two experiments tonight: ginger v acupuncture bracelets to combat motion sickness, and energy drinks v electro-pulse headbands to quicken cognition. JACK SEALE

Cleaning Up

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Impecunious Sam has already proved she's an awful mother and an awful employee; now she demonstrates she's an awful friend, too. But Sam has no sense of shame as she moves a total stranger into her house, kicking her oldest daughter out of her room, pinches trading tips from the City firm she cleans for and does the dirty on her mate, Jess.

But it's her addiction to online gambling that's led Sam (Sheridan Smith) down a dead end. She can't stop, and the debts keep spiralling. She owes so much that a shady moneylender (Neil Maskell) is breathing down her neck. Cleaning Up is so laboured and unbelievable, it's hard to care. ALISON GRAHAM

Sally Metcalfe's continuing jail saga in Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) appears to have been crafted by writers who snuck out of bed in their teens to watch Prisoner: Cell Block H illicitly when it had a late-night showing on Granada. Tonight, for instance, we get top dog Marcia (near right) pulling out a knife and lunging at a clearly terrified Sal. So how can Corrie top that? Sally has her hand trapped under a steam press? Vinegar Tits gets a transfer to the north west of England?

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Back on the Street, Tracy is trying to put a libidinous Steve off sex (after all, he only has to smile at a woman for her to get pregnant). And we have a nice nod to the past when Daniel and Sinead name their baby son Bertie (after famous Corrie curmudgeon Uncle Albert Tatlock). In 65 years' time, you can fully expect to see Bertie working as a lollipop man, tending his allotment and getting drunk on stout in the Rovers with caustic-tongued OAP Amy Barlow. DAVID BROWN

£4m Restoration: Historic House Rescue

9.00pm More 4

PROPERTY In 2007 when the Landmark Trust was approached to take on Llwyn Celyn, a medieval farmstead built on a Welsh hillside, it was "in a perilous state of disrepair and on the brink of collapse". But the derelict property is historically important as a textbook example of the development of a manor house. So a massive restoration project began to take it back to how it looked in the more prosperous 17th century.

This two-part documentary follows the work, uncovering Llwyn Celyn's fascinating history and revealing the painstaking process of transforming an endangered structure into a restored – and habitable – masterpiece. JR

Valley of the Boom

9.00pm National Geographic

DRAMA DOCUMENTARY New series 1994 doesn't exactly feel like ancient history – until you watch some of the old clips in this unusual documentary, set during the days when the internet was a new-fangled novelty.

A postmodern glimpse back to the birth of the net, the whole thing buzzes along at the pace of a Mark Zuckerberg monologue, making it potentially baffling for those not versed in the history of online entrepreneurship. A mix of drama, interviews and archive illustrate how early browser Netscape and proto social network theglobe.com struggled to thrive in Silicon Valley. Stylistically it's pretty odd, and some of the reconstructions are plain surreal. GARY ROSE

Just Another Immigrant

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY New series Romesh Ranganathan's agent must be like Clint Eastwood's character in A Fistful of Dollars, playing the BBC and Sky off against each other for the highest reward. After a number of BBC shows over Christmas, Ranganathan is back plying his trade on Sky for the new year. Here we follow him as he takes his family to Los Angeles, trying to make it Stateside.

This is billed as a "mostly true" comedy, and with his argumentative Sri Lankan mother and eccentric uncle (whom you may remember from his BBC travelogues) in tow as well, there will be plenty of opportunity for Ranganathan's exasperated humour to shine. DAVID CRAWFORD

CHAMPION OF THE POOR
Hugo Chávez won four presidential elections in Venezuela

Revolution in Ruins: the Hugo Chávez Story

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY The late Hugo Chávez is talked about far more than the leader of a middle-sized South American nation who died in 2013 would ordinarily be – because Venezuela's former president is many things to many people.

Chávez's detractors tend to dismiss him with the pejorative term "populist" and think his redistribution of the country's oil wealth, providing cheap food and public services to the masses, and his bypassing of the corporate media illustrate the dangers of socialism. This documentary asks why Venezuela is now in a crisis that the press notes call "the tragic legacy of his idealism". Chávez's defenders point to the entrenched power of the country's rich and the malign influence of the USA.

Either way, Chávez is fascinating, and some who knew him closely are interviewed here. JS

FA Cup Football

The third-round replay at the King Power Stadium last season was already remarkable for the fact that League One side Fleetwood Town had held 2015/16 Premier League champions Leicester City to a 0–0 draw in their first meeting. But then the Foxes' Kelechi Iheanacho had a goal disallowed for offside, only for the video assistant referee to overrule – the first time in English football a goal was awarded thanks to VAR.

The BFG ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

A girl (Ruby Barnhill) is kidnapped by a benevolent giant (a motion-captured Mark Rylance) in Steven Spielberg's visually dazzling adaptation of the Roald Dahl classic. A sluggish first half finally turns full-throttle fun fantasy when the BFG joins forces with the Queen (Penelope Wilton – see feature, p34) to halt the threat of his even larger flesh-eating brethren. ET scriptwriter Melissa Mathison (who sadly died of cancer before the film's release) happily keeps Dahl's gibberish dialogue intact. ALAN JONES

P Jeune Femme ★★★★ 10.25pm Sky Premiere

Noah Baumbach's Frances Ha (2012) and the spirit of Agnès Varda's work reverberate through Léonor Serraille's effervescent account of a young Parisian woman's bid to establish her own identity. Laetitia Dosch's Paula doesn't always cut a sympathetic figure, as she takes advantage of those she befriends. Yet it's hard not to feel pity when her own mother treats her so shabbily. Serraille thoroughly merited the Caméra d'Or at Cannes for this stylistically bold and thematically trenchant study. DAVID PARKINSON

Brief Encounter
★★★★★ ITV Player

Co-adapted by Noël Coward from his play Still Life, this is one of the finest films ever made in Britain. What makes the illicit love between Trevor Howard and Celia Johnson so memorable is their sheer ordinariness – they really could be anybody sitting in the dark of the cinema or the comfort of their armchair. DP

PICK OF THE DAY

Hospital

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Sophie, 22, was at home when she developed what she thought was just a cold. But it was a vicious viral infection that attacked her brain stem, leaving her unable to breathe, swallow and speak.

She's been in the intensive care unit of the specialist Walton Centre in Liverpool for a year; she's lively, engaged and desperate to return home. But her care requirements are too great: at any time she could stop breathing and need to be resuscitated.

Tom, 18, looks, on the face of it, perfectly fine as he roams the unit's corridors, bored and restless. But after a catastrophic car accident that left him with serious brain injuries, he can't retain information – he has to be constantly reminded that he's in hospital in Liverpool.

It's yet another moving, heartening glimpse into the NHS and the extraordinary dedication of its staff as they juggle beds and budgets. ALISON GRAHAM

DIY SOS: the Big Build

8.00pm BBC1

PROPERTY In March 2015, football fan Simon Dobbin was set upon after a game by a gang and viciously beaten; he suffered a massive stroke and bleed on the brain. Simon was left brain-damaged and needing round-the-clock care. This is mainly delivered by his wife Nicole in their home in Mildenhall, Suffolk, but it's just not suitable for their needs.

So it's up to Nick Knowles (who spent his teen years in Mildenhall) and the regular gang, plus Laurence Llewelyn-Bowen, to work their magic. There's help, too, from the local RAF base, and we're promised a "unique and hilarious addition" to the kitchen (hopefully not a framed pair of Knowles's I'm a Celeb swimming trunks...) GILL CRAWFORD

Back in Time for School

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY In the bright new era after the Second World War, the revolutionary plan was to educate every child according to their potential. So they'd receive either an academic education or a vocational one. Grammar-school pupils (the brightest 25 per cent) were expected to become the next generation of leaders, despite the dreary teaching style of "chalk and talk" (or "shut up and copy" as Sara Cox calls it).

When the youngsters are asked about their grammar-school experience, it sometimes feels like they're having words put into their mouths, but what's illuminating is hearing Joan Bakewell describe how passing the 11-plus had a divisive effect on her family. JANE RACKHAM

The Secret Life of Four-Year-Olds

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Five new children join the group and for a while it "all gets a bit Neanderthal", because Jackson is a physical kind of boy who isn't used to playing with girls. But it's his impulsiveness that gets him into trouble.

Iris has no problems relating to boys. She's constantly kissing and cuddling her boyfriend Arthur (who doesn't mind in the slightest) until she inexplicably switches allegiances to Frankie. Poor Arthur is bereft, but determined to get her back.

By the time they team up to concoct a sandwich for teacher Simon (gherkins, sprinkles, honey and cheese, anyone?), you'll be howling with laughter. JR

The Directors

8.00pm Sky Arts

ARTS Series one of The Directors ran the gamut of world cinema history, profiling ten of the medium's most illustrious heavyweights, from Hitchcock to Kurosawa. However, Stanley Kubrick was conspicuous by his absence from the list.

Hailed as a maverick genius alongside the likes of Orson Welles (who wasn't featured in the first series either), Kubrick straddled the genres, from sci-fi (2001: a Space Odyssey) to period drama (Barry Lyndon) to horror. He apparently turned down The Exorcist, despite once expressing a desire to make "the world's scariest movie". Many would argue he achieved that feat several years later anyway, with The Shining. GARY ROSE

Mick Carter's months in jail away from EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) have been largely shrouded in mystery. OK, so we spent that week behind bars where Mick got on the wrong side of the prison top dog, who seemed to be doing an impression of Noël Coward in The Italian Job. But apart from that, nothing. Well, that is set to change as Mick (Danny Dyer, right) finally opens up to Linda about what happened to him. I'm hoping that the Mr Bridger-a-like ends up following Mick back to the Square.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

And speaking of life at Her Majesty's Pleasure, we have a guest appearance on Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) from Jack Ellis, who's still best known for his role as villainous screw Jim Fenner on Bad Girls. Here, he's playing the rich and influential David, whose wife Suzanne is accusing copper Rob Hollins of manhandling her at the time of her arrest. With bruises evident on Suzanne's arm, it looks as though Rob could end up losing his job... DAVID BROWN

The Paras: Men of War

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY You might think if you've seen one of these Army training series, you've seen them all, but the levels of aggression and general hardness in the admission course for the Parachute Regiment are something else. "What makes the grass grow?" a corporal screams at the recruits. "Blood! Blood! Blood!" they scream back, as they prepare for a poetry-reading exercise. Sorry, I meant to say an exercise where they have to charge at a dummy and "bayonet him in the face".

The way the staff call all the recruits "Joe" as a way to de-personalise them is also disturbing. Matt (17, but he looks younger) is having a crisis: "It is quite mentally and emotionally battering." I'll say. DAVID BUTCHER

American History's Biggest Fibs with Lucy Worsley

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY New series Following on from 2017's British History's Biggest Fibs, Lucy Worsley looks across the Atlantic to challenge America's fondly held historical beliefs. She's at Fourth of July celebrations in Philadelphia before moving to Boston where, supposedly, the American Revolution began with the so-called tea party. Worsley has other ideas: it wasn't called a "tea party", for starters – that's a name it acquired when it was reinvented 50 years later. Worsley goes on to unpick the accepted version of events, of plucky underdogs taking on the might of a distant ruling power. AG

Flirty Dancing

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT James, 32, a classroom leader, is no stranger to rhythm: drumming is one of his hobbies. So where better for him to bust out some moves to woo children's home manager Jess, 27, than at a gig? Neither are, erm, natural dancers, but they give it a good go – and deserve extra points for performing in front of a crowd. The second couple – Stephanie, 29, an occupational therapist, and graphic designer Baz, 27 – get a beautiful seafront setting that seems more conducive to romance.

Any jeopardy comes not from whether the participants will decide to meet again, but from the possibility (hope?) that a routine might go pear-shaped... HANNAH SHADDOCK

NEWCOMER Ruby (Shyko Amos) makes an impression on colleague JP (Tobi Bakare)

Death in Paradise

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA The series used to load its broader comedy moments onto the shoulders of Danny John-Jules as Dwayne, but Dwayne is on indefinite leave, sailing the seas with his father, so who will take his place?

A replacement arrives in the shape of Officer Ruby Patterson – the commissioner's niece. This shameless piece of nepotism is skated over in the flurry that Ruby instantly creates: she is a former hairdresser and something of a human firework, fizzing in all directions, or as a weary JP puts it, "She's just so extra."

Meanwhile, the team investigates a murder at Saint Marie Zoo, where the victim's wife (Shelley Conn), brother (Jonas Armstrong) and sister (Charlotte Ritchie) are all suspects. But a distraction for Jack (Ardal O'Hanlon) is the fact he has been entered – for some reason – into a big sponsored swim: "I'd struggle to swim a length of the bath." DAVID BUTCHER

A thoroughly charming pootle down memory lane, or perhaps the memory B359. First shown on BBC4 in 2017, it uses almost unbearably evocative archive footage, and the enthusiastic testimony of owners, to chart the history of the British family car. The focus is on classics such as the Morris Minor and Ford Cortina.

The Isles of Scilly provide the backdrop for this period drama (review, p42), which is based on a book by Michael Morpurgo – one of five novels the author set on the Cornish archipelago. Cast member David Suchet particularly enjoyed the peace of the small island of Bryher, taking the time to research and finesse his next role, that of TV's Poirot. Despite the islands' natural beauty, 1961's Four Winds Island and 2010's Archipelago are among the only other films to have been shot here. JAMIE HEALY

Born on the same day

Jim & Andy: the Great Beyond ★★★★ Netflix

This revelatory documentary offers a unique insight into the mind of Jim Carrey during the making of the biopic Man on the Moon. Director Chris Smith balances unseen footage from the set – in which Carrey lived the role of the late comedian Andy Kaufman 24/7 – with a disarmingly honest interview with the star today. You're left with the feeling that both he and Kaufman were cut from similar cloth. Eerily, the two men were both born on 17 January, with Carrey celebrating his 57th birthday today. ANDREW COLLINS

Emily Blunt achieved her birthright as one of cinema's screen queens with this biopic of Queen Victoria. In playing the monarch, she joins Anna Neagle (Victoria the Great; Sixty Glorious Years), Peter Sellers (The Great McGonagall), Judi Dench (Mrs Brown; Victoria & Abdul) and, most recently, Pam Ferris (Holmes and Watson) – see feature, p34. AC

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

CRISIS OF FAITH
Rev Sidney Chambers (James Norton) is struggling

PICK OF THE DAY

Grantchester 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA There's no doubting James Norton as Rev Sidney Chambers cuts a noble figure (see above), all square jaw and piercing gaze. But if anything, he's even better at looking soulfully sad while nursing a whisky glass, something this series has him do a lot.

That's how Sidney starts this episode, on another bender that leaves him drunk on the streets of Cambridge, where a young woman offers a light...

It's the start of a painful journey for him. "Do you ever feel not right in your own skin?" he asks Geordie (Robson Green), who has seen it all before and tells him, "This is your life. It's an endless merry-go-round: sin, feel bad, drink." But what if Sidney stepped off the merry-go-round?

As always, writer Daisy Coulam deftly sketches Sidney's moral maze, while wrapping it around a murder case and producing moments of real sadness. And Simona Brown is excellent as Sidney's American love interest, Violet. DAVID BUTCHER

Jeremy Wade's Mighty Rivers

8.00pm ITV (N Ireland: 10.45pm; not Border Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY The River Ganges, especially its massive delta region, is overwhelmed by pollution and disease. Upstream in Kanpur the owner of a tea stall won't use local pipe water because, he says, it causes stomach upsets and even blindness. When you realise that every day 50 million gallons of industrial waste are illegally dumped in the Ganges, that's less surprising but no less horrifying.

Jeremy Wade first went fishing in India in 1982, where he caught a predatory big fish called a mahseer. He returns to see whether he can catch another, which would prove there's hope for the health of the Ganges yet. JANE RACKHAM

Would I Lie to You?

*9.00pm BBC1

COMEDY The One Show's Alex Jones is always good value on this show, even managing to top Lee Mack with her quick responses on occasion. However, it's her sudden and lengthy silence as she reconsiders what she was about to say during a Stacey Dooley story (that she once shivered her mini skirt off) that cracks up the guests on both panels.

As always, Henning Wehn gets a lot of mileage from his German-ness (and it's very effective that his eyes water when he recalls how he used to hunt onions rather than chocolate eggs at Easter) while host Rob Brydon has an absolute field day doing different accents. JR

The Victorian House of Arts and Crafts

*9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY There are tears of anger and self-doubt from two members of the Arts and Crafts artisan commune as personalities clash, pressure mounts and tempers fray. Once again Ilsa is at the eye of the storm as she has a skirmish with Rod and Abdollah who are building a bed, one of the week's projects. "I'm feeling fed up, I'm feeling like I don't want to be here," she wails.

Meanwhile, Niamh, who suffers from imposter syndrome, has the other big task, embroidering a bedspread. But she's not happy with the outcome – "I just didn't believe in it". Considering this is such a gentle experiment, it's all rather intense. ALISON GRAHAM

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Ever since Barlow's Bookies closed its doors back in 2013, Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) has been missing a location where the male characters can congregate. But there's good news – David and his brother Nick are going to open a barbers' shop in empty premises on Victoria Street. Does this mean manscaping will be coming to Weatherfield once Trim Up North makes its mark? Is Ken set to launch a collection of anti-ageing day-and-night moisturisers? Will Roy be sporting a chinstrap beard? How is Kevin going to get on with a gentleman's sheet mask? I think you'll agree that there are so many plotline possibilities.

Unlikely as it sounds, EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) appears to be modelling perennially shirtless hunk Keanu Taylor on the late Conservative MP Alan Clark. Having already had an affair with Phil's wife Sharon, he's now getting increasingly close to his daughter Louise. At this rate, he'll be a bestselling diarist and privy counsellor by Easter. DAVID BROWN

Delicious

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA As Sheila Hancock's Mimi heads to hospital in a motorbike sidecar (naturally enough) for a cancer operation, Teresa, Sam and Gina stand outside the Penrose to see her off. Yes, the menfolk may come and go in this soapy and sometimes very silly world of bed-hopping hotel hospitality, but (go, zeitgeist) at the end of the day it's essentially all about the women.

Tonight the narrative decisions and crises proceed at quite a lick, with one hefty time-jump. The food remains mouth-watering, though, the sun-dappled Cornish scenery just as fabulous and our formidable ladies, however much they row, will still not be able to get enough of each other. BEN DOWELL

QI

10.00pm BBC2

QUIZ A potpourri of pertinent points tonight, according to Sandi Toksvig, although she takes the alliteration considerably further. Peter Piper and your pickled peppers, eat your heart out. But it's a set of cardboard periscopes that threatens to derail the show with Alan Davies and Phill Jupitus behaving like over-excited five-year-olds – until Phill gets stuck underneath the desk – while Sandi gets her revenge on Rhod Gilbert for a derogatory remark he made about Scandinavia two years earlier.

Sandi's on fire, telling terrific stories about seeing Tom Jones in his dressing gown, taking the ice bucket challenge and the fun of doing Chinese Fire Drill (it's not what it sounds like). JR

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Graham's sofa is positively heaving with talent tonight. The terrific Saoirse Ronan (only 24, but already Oscar-nominated for Lady Bird and Brooklyn) will be talking about playing Mary, Queen of Scots, while rising star Timothée Chalamet (also in Lady Bird and outstanding in Call Me by Your Name) chats about his affecting performance as a drug addict in Beautiful Boy. They might also mention another project they're both involved in – Greta Gerwig's adaptation of Little Women.

Joining them is triple Oscar-nominated Laura Linney, whose performance in the acclaimed play My Name Is Lucy Barton has been hailed as "beautifully nuanced". JR

TALKING HEAD
Tina Weymouth and (inset) unsung Motown hero James Jamerson

On Bass... Tina Weymouth!

9.00pm BBC4

MUSIC This is fabulous. Whether or not you think you're interested in the story of the bass, watch Talking Heads bassist Tina Weymouth's film and you'll find, in fact, you are.

Weymouth's "joyride through the deepest register in music" goes deep, certainly, but it also goes wide. We meet the man who sang "Ga dinga-dong ding blue moooon" on the doo-wop hit and learn the debt that New Order's Blue Monday owes to Ennio Morricone.

Best of all, the film celebrates often invisible players like Motown's James Jamerson: at one point a graphic charts his extraordinary playing on Ain't No Mountain High Enough.

Meanwhile, Herbie Flowers demonstrates how the dual bass line he contributed to Lou Reed's Walk on the Wild Side maybe deserved a little more than his £12 session fee. DAVID BUTCHER

Sky's BIG premiere

P Solo: a Star Wars Story ★★★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

Cosmic chancer Han Solo gets his own origins story in director Ron Howard's engagingly propulsive and fun space western. Stepping effortlessly into Harrison Ford's shoes, Alden Ehrenreich captivates as the arrogant flyboy who escapes his grungy home planet and joins Woody Harrelson's gang. The film's gritty, dirtied-down look is totally in keeping with the rough-and-ready lead character, while Solo's first encounter and subsequent bromance with Chewbacca (Joonas Suotamo) is delightfully played. ALAN JONES

Wilde with a Jagger edge

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

For their adaptation of Oscar Wilde's cautionary classic (review, p42), producer Barnaby Thompson and director Oliver Parker decided to spike the Victorian setting with some contemporary energy. Their chief inspiration for the look and feel of the film was the strutting swordsmanship of Mick Jagger, while costume designer Ruth Myers added Rudolf Nureyev and Jane Birkin-like style to the mash-up to further bring "fresh light to a period film". ANDREW COLLINS

The Old Dark House

★★★★ BFI Player+

Mark Kermode introduces this seldom shown classic from Frankenstein director James Whale, which set the template for all "things that go bump in the night" tales that followed. Charles Laughton is among the travellers stranded in a creaky old mansion inhabited by a family of eccentrics and their butler, Boris Karloff. TONY SLOMAN

‘I’m not the Zoe that I was 20 years ago’

INTERVIEW BY TOM LOXLEY

Zoe Ball
Weekdays 6.30am Radio 2

When Zoe Ball finished her final Radio 1 breakfast show in 2000, after two-and-a-half years of burning the candle at both ends, Greg Dyke, then director-general of the BBC, presented her with a bottle of Jack Daniel’s and packed her off for a champagne breakfast.

The woman whose reputation for partying had given the tabloids reason enough – as if one were needed during the 90s heyday of lads-mag Britain – to coin the noun “ladette”, told the world she was off to have a family. No more would her driver John “have to literally bash the door in to get me up”, as she later confessed to her Radio 1 successor Sara Cox. Nor would she be late again: “The worst thing was being in the car and hearing someone else do your show. Three records in, ‘She’s still not here.’ Four records in, ‘She’s still not here.’ I did get told off a couple of times.” How things change.

Nineteen years on and it won’t be her BBC driver tasked with making sure Ball makes it out of bed – it’ll be her eight-year-old daughter Nelly. “I hope getting up will be much easier this time round,” she tells me, speaking before she takes over from Chris Evans on the Radio 2 breakfast show this Monday. “It’s going to be just like my old school days, especially on a Sunday night. You remember when the Songs of Praise music came on and you’d feel forlorn because it was nearly time to go to bed? I was telling my daughter how our roles will be reversed at bedtime. She will have to read me a story and make sure I’m not going on the telephone or reading a book sneakily under the duvet. I am, in fact, going to sleep at nine o’clock in the evening. Nelly is well up for that!”

Zoe, 48, and Nelly live in Sussex, in a small village in the South Downs near Brighton, where Ball and her family – she also has an 18-year-old son, Woody – lived for many years, before she split up with her husband, the DJ Norman Cook, in 2016. Which begs the question: what time will she actually get out of bed to be in the Radio 2 studio – a good 50 miles away in central London – in time for the show’s 6.30am start? “Well, it depends,” she says tentatively, her voice betraying more than a little trepidation. “If I’m coming from Sussex then it will be half-past three…” She laughs nervously and protests, “I’ve done things when you get up early before!”

Indeed, she has. She may not have an unblemished record of starting work bang on time at Radio 1, but in 1997 she became the first woman to host the station’s breakfast show, and she made it her own, attracting seven million listeners a day. Her impact in the studio was matched only by her presence in the newspapers, where her rising stardom and reputation for a rock ’n’ roll lifestyle guaranteed column inches. On one occasion she said she’d been “high” during a live broadcast from Ibiza. On another, according to the Mail on Sunday, school bus drivers in Shropshire banned the ▷

‘I’ve got my work cut out. But I’m ready’

◁ show after she let slip a swear word on air. "I may be in denial about the hours, but the good thing is that I'm not the Zoe that I was 20 years ago, when I was at Radio 1," she says. "I don't really go out much now. It's a miracle for me to still be up at 10pm, to be honest with you."

She says that years of negotiating the organised chaos of the Ball family breakfast has been the perfect preparation for her new gig. "I think the first hour of the radio show might be easier than trying to get two children out of the house before 7.30 in the morning. I had to get up earlier and earlier to get myself organised: pets fed, homework packed, kids out. That was a military operation. It's the perfect training for this."

'Chris Evans is my hero... he has always championed me'

Will she be approaching her new morning routine with the same precision, as well as a clear head? "The key is the minute the alarm goes off, leap out of bed. Have your clothes ready at the side of the bed and your favourite little mug ready for a cuppa, and off you go. The worst bit is if you lie there thinking, 'I'll wait for another alarm.' That's when things start to go wrong."

THINGS HAVE BEEN going right for Ball in recent months, after a difficult couple of years. Following her split from Cook, she had a relationship with a BBC cameraman, Billy Yates, that ended traumatically when he took his own life. Ball was devastated. When we last met in March last year, she was about to embark on a 350-mile Sport Relief bike ride from Blackpool to Brighton in his memory, cycling into the teeth of the Siberian blast that was the Beast from the East. "I knew when I lost Billy that I wanted to do something," she told me at the time. "The horror and the heartbreak never leaves you."

A week later she triumphantly completed her ride, despite not having ridden a bike since she was a girl, raising £1,198,012 along the way. It was an emotional journey, in more ways than one, and it saw Ball splashed across the pages of the nation's newspapers for all the right reasons. Then, in the autumn, came the shock news that Evans was quitting the breakfast show, and that Ball was to be his replacement.

The first woman to have her own daytime show on Radio 2 since Debbie Thrower departed the station in 1998, Ball beat her friend Sara Cox to the most coveted gig on radio. "We spoke a lot during the whole process," Ball says. "We're old buddies and we've always been really supportive of each other. Sometimes she gets jobs I've wanted. We always talk. It worked out."

HIGHS AND LOWS
Ball in 1997, during her Radio 1 days, with Robbie Williams, and, right, covering RT last year as she took on a Sport Relief cycling challenge in honour of her late boyfriend, Billy Yates

It must have been tricky, though, finding herself pitched into a head-to-head race with Cox for the top job. "We don't see each other a huge amount any more," she says. Cox, of course, has now landed Radio 2's other plum job – the drivetime show – in the slot recently vacated as a result of bringing the ill-fated pairing of Simon Mayo and Jo Whiley to an end. "Lots of people have said to me, 'I bet you wished you had waited a couple of months,'" Ball laughs. "You could have had the later show!"

Together Ball and Cox are spearheading a brand-new, female-led schedule that rips up the old Radio 2 daytime line-up that was very publicly dismissed by Woman's Hour presenter Jane Garvey as "extraordinarily male and entirely pale" (see page nine).

How have Ball and Cox been approaching their new roles? "We were reminiscing about the first time round, when sometimes we didn't sleep at all. It's so different now. We need eight hours or we're really grumpy. Or seven with an afternoon nap. But you know, she's up there [Cox lives in London], I'm down here in Sussex. We don't have a social life any more. But professionally, work-wise, we've always supported each other. We start on the same day, which is wonderful. We are going to ring each other before to try to keep calm. She's an amazing broadcaster. She cracks me up. She has so much energy. It's all turned out rather nice."

And what of her other old friend, Evans? She may be moving into his still-warm seat on the breakfast show, just as she did in 1997 when he quit Radio 1 in an equally surprising move, but he will be turning up again as a rival attraction on Virgin Radio in a matter of weeks, in a show he has announced will be ad-free. Is she worried?

"He's my hero. I worked on The Big Breakfast when he was presenting and I was a lowly researcher. He has always championed me and given me great advice. When we were up against each other last time he told me, 'Come on Zo, it's all good fun!' He gave me more confidence in myself. I'm inheriting the biggest radio show in the land. I'm hoping we can keep it that way. I've got my work cut out. But I'm ready for it."

IN MANY WAYS, she's getting back on her bike – except she hasn't ridden her bicycle since she completed her Sport Relief challenge. "My bike was auctioned off. The guys who made it made me another, my tangerine dream, but it's been sitting in my house ever since. I watch cyclists go past in the village and I look at them longingly. I've dug out all my stuff. But I'm not a fair weather cyclist," she jokes. "I only ride in hail and rain."

There will, of course, be plenty of time for an afternoon ride, now she will be finishing work just as the rest of the nation makes it into the office. "My plan is to finish the show, go to the gym, go home, get food for the kids, then pick my daughter up from school. She's excited about having me home because we haven't had that for a while. Come Friday morning, 10am, my weekend starts!"

Cue 48 hours of mother-daughter quality time. At least, until Nelly has to tell Mummy that it's nearly time for bed.

IT'S ALL CHANGE AT RADIO 2

SARA COX Weekdays, 5–7pm

How close was Sara Cox to landing the breakfast show? We may never know, but drivetime is a major consolation prize, and with a triumverate of Ball, Cox and Jo Whiley occupying three key weekday slots, Radio 2's gender balance has a very welcome new look. It's hard to believe that it's 20 years since Cox – once the epitome of the ladette – joined Radio 1, moving to Radio 2 in 2011 and launching her Sounds of the 80s show in 2013. "I'm beyond chuffed," she says of the new show. "To directly quote my mum on hearing the good news, it is indeed 'fandabbyruddydozy'."

TREVOR NELSON

Mon–Thu, 10pm–midnight

The Sony gold lifetime achievement award that Trevor Nelson won in 2010 is a measure of his status in the radio pantheon. A pioneer of R&B, Nelson joined Radio 1 in 1996, presenting The Rhythm Nation for 17 years. In 2016, after various roles on Radio 1Xtra, Nelson launched Rhythm Nation on Radio 2 on Saturday evenings; now the show moves to four nights a week. "I'll be introducing tracks from some soul stars of the future," he says, "and playing my favourite songs from the past 50 years of dance music. Bring it on!"

JO WHILEY Monday–Thursday, 7–9pm

Now released from her ill-fated partnership with Simon Mayo, Whiley returns to the solo evening slot (an hour earlier than her last one) over which she presides with such aplomb. "Dream show. Can't wait!" was her reaction to the switch, and Whiley fans can look forward to a show that will give prominence to guests and live sessions. This year marks the tenth anniversary of Whiley's debut on Radio 2, and this couldn't be a better way for her to celebrate it. Whiley will continue to present the Radio 2 In Concert series and will also be standing in for Ken Bruce in 2019 when he is away.

RYLAN CLARK-NEAL

Saturday, 3–6pm

Since coming fifth on The X Factor in 2012, then winning Celebrity Big Brother in 2013, Rylan Clark-Neal has established himself as a TV and radio presenter. He launched podcast Step Back in Time in November, in which he and a showbiz friend re-live great pop-culture moments; now he takes over Radio 2's Saturday afternoon slot, from 19 January. "Expect a mix of fun and Rylan's inimitable style," says the head of Radio 2, Lewis Carnie.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama on 3: Ropewalk House

Sunday 7.30pm Radio 3

Playwright Anita Sullivan (below) has a track record in scaring us – she was behind several of Radio 4's Fright Night specials for Halloween including the terrifying Ring in 2015. "You'd think 'waiting' on radio would be dull, as there's nothing to see", says Sullivan, "but suspense is about listening, holding you in that moment of stillness before everything changes. Radio does that 'must-be-silent' journey through the cellar, attic or creaking house so well. And it isn't the character listening, trying not to breathe, it's you: waiting for flight or fight, or for everything to be all right. (It won't be, trust me.)"

This is certainly the case in her new drama, Ropewalk House, recorded on location at the Fish Factory Studios in London and getting the cast to part-improvise as they walk through the semi-industrial setting of what is meant to be a derelict rope factory.

In theory they are part of a radical theatre group working on a new play loosely connected to the minotaur myth. In practice they are subject to the dark desires of the building itself.

While you won't be jumping out of your skin, this is definitely one to listen to in the dark and soak up the outstanding use of sound effects to create a totally chilling atmosphere of unease. Enter the ropewalk at your peril...

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Alice has picked up on news that Pryce Bauman plans to develop a strawberry-picking robot and is now keen to trial the technology at Home Farm. I hope the rest of the Aldridges go for it – if only to generate an "Artificial Intelligence Takes Over Ambridge" storyline. The Archers does Westworld – just imagine!

Could booze be coming back to Lower Loxley? Elizabeth is obviously hoping so, as the date for the review of the alcohol licence approaches – but will her dry January end up running into February?

Susan, meanwhile, spots one resident behaving in a suspicious manner and voices concerns to Emma, who believes her mum is barking up the wrong tree. DAVID BROWN

Sound and fury

Why do people impose their tech on us?

Victoria Wood nailed the British attitude to manners when she told a joke about a couple making love in a railway carriage. No one said anything to them till they were having a post-match cigarette and someone pointed out they were in a no-smoking compartment.

Technology has changed the ambience of public transport. The introduction of mobile phones heralded journeys full of people bellowing that they were "on the train". This provoked a tremendous amount of tut-tutting from behind newspapers. Over time, train companies' solution has been to provide "quiet" carriages where noise is seldom is heard, apart from the incessant announcements about the problems with the buffet trolley and the 32-minute delay to the service for which they would like to apologise.

Now there is a new technological twist that's driving me round the twist. Have you encountered it yet? It's quite simple. People now think it's OK to let us all hear their music/video/TV show/film at full volume.

I don't know when this started but there's now barely a journey that is not contaminated.

Sometimes it's two people watching a video together, cackling over something hilarious on screen. More often than not it's a lone traveller, with their phone or tablet inches from their face, and the sound up full blast for us all to enjoy.

'I've tried tutting, of course, the British person's first resort'

I've tried tutting, of course, the British person's first resort, but such is the volume, they're oblivious. Ditto head-shaking. Then I look round the carriage or bus to see if anyone else is likely to have a word. They're tutting and head-shaking, too.

In my imagination, I stand up, approach the thoughtless traveller, ask them politely but firmly to turn off the sound, and return to my seat to a ripple of appreciative applause. But in my imagination I also see myself in an escalating row with a non-compliant person who then stabs me. It doesn't seem worth it.

There may be reasons for this change. Apple have stopped putting headphone sockets in some of their devices and perhaps some of their customers are unaware how Bluetooth functions. Or perhaps our constant use of phones and tablets makes us feel like they are extensions of our selves: more oblivious than ever to the rest of humanity.

REX

Or maybe people are just selfish.

I have on a couple of occasions said something and have not been stabbed. People do seem put out at being asked to turn off the volume, as if somehow they're doing me a favour. But I'm not brave enough to challenge the menacing hooded figure at the back of the bus who's giving us all grime. Busloads of passengers just endure it.

It's not just in Britain, either. On a train in Italy there was a young man who boarded and promptly whacked on some tunes at full volume. Everyone looked over but no one said anything. I googled the Italian for "I'm terribly sorry, would you mind awfully turning that down a smidge," but before I could act, an older woman took the Italian bull by the horns and in a tone of voice that indicated she was taking no prisoners, got him to turn it off altogether.

I feel if we don't all do something now at this early stage of 2019, by the time the 2020s arrive there will be no sanctuary from everyone else's racket. Something really must be done. But not by me, obviously.

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

When tweeting is not sporting

Jonathan Agnew, the unfailingly polite commentator on Test Match Special, tweets that Gary Lineker should keep his views on Brexit to himself, what with him being the face of BBC Sport. The usually polite Lineker shoots back that he'll say what he wants, thank you, and he bets Agnew wouldn't be complaining if he had voted the same way as Gary. Inevitably it turns out Jonathan did vote the same way. Gary has been caught succumbing to the worst temptation of social media, which is the acid sign-off, which does nothing but weaken your position. Let's try thinking the best of each other for a while, shall we? It's got to be worth a try.

Has she got news for us

Moira Stuart (right) appears to be enjoying more than one Indian summer. It's more than ten years since she was let go by BBC Television, only to be promptly snapped up by Chris Evans – a man who knows the value of the tried and tested – to read the news on his Radio 2 show. Now that he's off to Virgin, Moira's been snapped up by Classic FM, this time to read the news in the mornings during the week as well as presenting her own music show on Saturday afternoons. It used to be only my good manners that prevented me pointing out how old a lady will be next birthday. These days it's the law as well.

We play the songs no one else will

The pre-Christmas tizz about whether the song Baby, It's Cold Outside was a thinly disguised invitation to rape had me thinking once more that there surely has to be a future in a radio station that plays the records nobody else will. Back in the 1980s I don't recall any records being banned on the grounds that they espoused old-fashioned attitudes with which we were no longer comfortable. Now it seems to be a growth industry, with the annals of popular music being combed for titles that could plainly give offence (we don't hear much of Ray Stevens's Ahab the Arab these days) and also songs such as Baby, It's Cold Outside, which are only "problematic" when held in a certain disapproving light. A station playing nothing but banned records would have an ever-expanding playlist with Jimi Hendrix's Hey Joe segueing into David Bowie's China Girl, Don't Stand So Close to Me by the Police, the Rolling Stones' Brown Sugar, and even Go Away Little Girl by Donny Osmond, for goodness' sake. Who's in?

Today's Choices

Drama: Riot Girls: Riot Days 2.30pm Radio 4

Launched to acknowledge the centenary of women's suffrage, the Riot Girls season of dramas and readings is back and taking no prisoners along the way (see listings across the week). Today's two-part drama, which concludes tomorrow at 3.00pm, is based upon the writings of the co-founder of Russian punk band Pussy Riot, Maria Alyokhina (above). While it might be hard to swallow her incredulity at why the band's planned performance at a cathedral caused such offence, her subsequent sentence and experiences in jail demonstrate her indefatigable desire to confront injustice, no matter what. It's not the most thrilling of radio dramas but then nor is Maria's story. What it does do is make us question, as she did, whether we can really rely upon the state to be fair.

JANE ANDERSON RADIO EDITOR

Opera on 3: from the Met 6.30pm Radio 3

A younger contemporary of Puccini, Italian composer Francesco Cilea is remembered today for just two operas (both, as it happens, set in France): L'Arlesiana, a Provençal love tragedy from which Federico's Lament has long been a recital staple of lyric tenors; and Adriana Lecouvreur, a romantic melodrama set in the world of the 18th-century French theatre, with a title-role whose histrionic possibilities have particularly appealed to dramatic sopranos. In tonight's Met relay, Russian diva Anna Netrebko stars as the historical French tragédienne killed by a poisoned bouquet of violets sent by a rival in love.

5.00 J to Z
Jumoké Fashola presents a session from Norma Winstone, one of the UK's finest vocalists, known for developing a highly influential style of wordless vocal improvisation, once described by the Los Angeles Times as "state-of-the-art, imaginative, virtually beyond-definition singing". Backed by her quartet, she performs music from her latest album, Descansado: Songs for Films. Also on the programme, New York pianist Fred Hersch breaks down tracks that have inspired him and shaped his sound – including a poetic recording by Joni Mitchell and a piece by trad jazz innovator Earl Hines. Plus, classic tracks and new releases.
Producers Miranda Hinkley and Dominic Tyerman

6.30 Opera on 3: from the Met
RT In Francesco Cilea's Adriana Lecouvreur, Anna Netrebko plays the title role of the real-life French actress who dazzled 18th-century audiences with both her onstage and her offstage passion. The rivalry between Adriana and the Princess of Bouillon for the love of Maurizio ends in high drama and a bouquet of poisoned violets. Presented by Mary Jo Heath and Ira Siff, recorded today at the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

Today's Choices

David Mellor
7.00pm Classic FM

Every year since 1996, Classic FM has invited its listeners to nominate their three favourite pieces of music, collating the results into the biggest annual survey of the nation's changing classical musical tastes. With voting for this year's Classic FM Hall of Fame due to open tomorrow, David Mellor (above) makes the case for a few personal favourites that he feels deserve inclusion in the Top 300 for 2019. But can even his advocacy help Glazunov's ballet The Seasons, Richard Strauss's opera Der Rosenkavalier or Beethoven's Piano Concerto No 2 – none of them currently featured in the list – to topple Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture from the number one spot? MARK PAPPENHEIM

On Your Farm
6.35am Radio 4

Moss, nature's very own duvet. But it also provides valuable assets when it comes to environmental sustainability. Ruth Sanderson visits a farm in Leicester that is mass-producing moss to help restore damaged landscapes, primarily where peat has been dug up. This remarkable coating not only absorbs so much moisture that it helps prevent flooding but also stops dangerous carbon emissions from exposed peat. During the First World War it was issued to troops as an equivalent to cotton wool, thanks to its texture and antiseptic properties. A truly wonderful example of going "green". JANE ANDERSON

Hymn: In Our Darkness Light Has Shone (Upton Cheyney). Voluntary: Annunciation IV: Meine Seel Erhebt den Herren (Judith Bingham). Director of music Sarah MacDonald. Organist Michael Stephens-Jones. Repeated from Wednesday
4.00 Choir and Organ
Presented by Sara Mohr-Pietsch.
Producer Martin Williams
5.00 The Listening Service
How to Sing Classical – Vibrato! Tom Service goes to the heart of the matter of vibrato in singing, asking why it can induce such visceral reactions in listeners. Is it a case of classical-singing artifice, or a welcome and naturally occurring phenomenon in the physicality of our vocal chords?
5.30 Words and Music
Fame. Imogen Stubbs and Michael Maloney read writings on the theme of fame and celebrity, including works by Rita Dove, Boris Pasternak, John Clare, Geoffrey Hill, Charles Simic and Emily Dickinson, and accompanied by the music of Handel, Tavener, Stephen Sondheim and Michael Jackson. Producer Lisa Davis (R)
6.45 Sunday Feature: Afterwords
First of three programmes exploring great writers' ideas as expressed in their own words. Archive recordings of the figure in question are interwoven with the thoughts of modern-day writers, academics and activists. Today's instalment focuses on the words of Martha Gellhorn (1908–98), one of the most prescient and insightful journalists of the 20th century. During her 60-year career her reporting often focused on the "sufferers of history". Patrick Cockburn, Rosie Boycott, John Pilger, Lindsey Hilsum and others explore how her approach might inform the way we document the world today.
Producers Eleanor McDowall and Arlie Adlington
7.30 Drama on 3: Ropewalk House
RT Anita Sullivan's story of the making of a daring new site-specific play set in a derelict rope factory. Director Jarek is known for creating bold, immersive theatre productions, and the cast arrives to begin devising the work, based loosely around the minotaur myth. The warehouse once boasted the world's longest "ropewalk", the narrow corridor stretching the length of the building, and supplied rope to the Royal Navy. As they explore the venue they discover it has unpredictable physical properties, with disturbing consequences. Recorded on location at the Fish Factory, London, and featuring members of the Shunt collective.

Today's Choices

Short Works: A Season of Murder, Mystery and Suspense 2.45pm/2.45am Radio 4 Extra

Radio 4 Extra tends to be the go-to place for beloved repeats, but this is brand spanking new and well worth the money. Miles Jupp reads the first of some short stories – today's tale concluding tomorrow – by Ruth Rendell (above). And while we know the author for her crime-writing, this work has a decidedly supernatural theme, set in a supposedly haunted former rectory that has driven out former residents with its ghostly appearances. When a sceptical American woman buys it, surely this nonsense will come to an end? Don't be so certain... JANE ANDERSON

Riot Girls: How to Be a Woman

Former Wunderkind journo Caitlin Moran's 2011 memoir was something of a literary sensation. Not everyone – Germaine Greer for one – appreciated Moran's new-age feminism. But the majority enjoyed the book's candour and self-deprecating humour. The book became an award-laden million-seller. Moran became a media darling. She shared writing duties with Claudine Toutoungi on this five-part 15-Minute Drama, and Moran narrates it too. But she is played – as an overweight teenager, youngest ever Melody Maker reporter, and career columnist – by Louise Brealey, Sherlock's Molly Hooper. Part of Radio 4's Riot Girls season. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

12.00 Composer of the Week: Jean-Philippe Rameau (1683–1764)
1/5. The Theatre Man. By the time of his death in 1764, Rameau had more than 30 stage works to his credit – despite producing his first opera only in 1733, at the age of 50. That was Hippolyte et Aricie – which was daring, with original rhythms and harmonies, and which both outraged and delighted audiences. Donald Macleod spends the week exploring Rameau's operas.

Today's Choices

The Documentary: Solving Alzheimer's

1.30pm/11.05pm/2.30am BBC World Service

According to Alzheimer's Research UK, few of us will escape the impacts of dementia. One million people will have the condition by 2025 (2018's figure was 850,000) and that's due to double by 2050. So we will either have dementia or look after someone who does – or both. It's already the leading cause of death for women in the UK, but what of the global picture? This three-part series attempts a wider look at how a demographic disaster of epic proportions is brewing thanks to longer lifespans and falling birth rates, and this week features contributions from Lisa Genova, author of heartbreakingly accurate Alzheimer's-themed novel Still Alice, and a Nigerian campaigner trying to reduce the stigma of Alzheimer's disease – the most common cause of dementia – in her own country. SUE ROBINSON

One to One

9.30am Radio 4

"Fear of failure", says Kate Silverton, "has reached epidemic proportions." But the cases she cites in this two-parter, first heard in 2012, are reassuring because they sound so commonplace. Kate Hardcastle had her clothes ridiculed at school but, inspired by Anita Roddick, she pulled herself up by her bootstraps and is now an internationally renowned business consultant. Raymond Yiu did what his parents wanted and took an engineering degree but composer Lukas Foss knew that Yiu had musical talent. His work is now widely heard. If Silverton's aim is to show we're all the same, she succeeds.

2/4. A new figure on the world stage with enormous influence, is creating confusion. Heralded as a reformer, he is also responsible for extreme intolerance towards those who exhibit disloyalty or threaten to cross him. That was the story in the 11th century with Pope Gregory VII, and it's also the story today with the Saudi Prince Mohammed bin Salman. Jonathan Freedland compares then with now.
Producer Tom Alban Repeated 9.30pm

3.30 Making History
3/8. Tom Holland and Iszi Lawrence follow history's lines and linkages to discover how Britain's borders have been used to separate communities. Tom travels to Offa's Dyke to discover how the 176-mile-long, 8th-century earthwork separated the Anglian kingdom of Mercia from Powys. And in Belfast, the so-called peace lines are walls that often cut across streets separating nationalists from unionists. Now a new scheme is under way to neutralise the effect of the barriers. Plus, how passports formalised frontier control.

The bittersweet love theme from Charlie Chaplin's classic 1936 film Modern Times (above) has no words. Yet the song based on that theme, Smile, has words which resonate strongly with many people who, like Chaplin's character the Tramp, are struggling to stay buoyant in the face of adversity. So while we do learn much about the genesis of the lyrics – first recorded almost two decades after the film – what is most affecting are the tales of grief, sadness, resilience and hope that members of the public relate to the song. You must try to keep on smiling when the classmates of a young terminal cancer patient sing a special version dedicated to him, even though your heart will be breaking. DAVID CRAWFORD

We Need to Talk about Death 8.00pm Radio 4
Even the cheapest of cremations is going to cost over £3,000 if you want a service. So what happens when there is no estate to draw upon or relatives willing or able to fund it? Joan Bakewell is joined by experts to discuss the unregulated price of saying goodbye to our nearest and dearest, and discovers that while the NHS still fulfils its promise of health assistance from the cradle to the grave this does not include social care or burials/cremations. There is a painful story from a man whose partner's body remained in a hospital morgue while he battled with mindless bureaucracy and a more uplifting insight from a charity that deals with what we used to call "paupers' funerals". The solution? Plan ahead while we are still alive. JANE ANDERSON

Mark Steel's in Town
6.30pm Radio 4

Mark Steel (above) cannot help but notice that the town of Hastings in East Sussex relies rather heavily on its association with the year 1066, with everything from a butcher's to a male waxing studio trading on its famous historical connections. He also picks up on the determined separatism of St Leonards-on-Sea, which has been part of Hastings since the late 19th century, whether its residents want to acknowledge this or not. And then there's the drinking, lots of it, which his live audience seems exceptionally proud of. As always, Steel has really done his research before launching into a comic tirade that could just as easily see him stoned to death as being welcomed with knowing laughter. This is one of my all-time favourite series and the opening episode does not disappoint. JANE ANDERSON

The Forum: Goya
BBC World Service

"Provocative" or "disturbed" are words rarely associated with the royal court painters of 18th-century Spain. Yet looks can be deceptive: despite a career spent adorning palace walls with pastoral Rococo imagery, Francisco Goya's view of the world was anything but idyllic. In this edition of The Forum, Bridget Kendall and her panel of experts discuss what led this most prodigious of artists to earn his radical reputation. Today, Goya's legacy lies in his unflinching depiction of war rather than portraits of Spanish kings. His infamous Saturn Devouring His Child can still make the blood run cold. TOM GOULDING

Opera Matinée. The Wexford Festival production of Mercadante's opera Il Bravo (The Assassin). First performed at La Scala, Milan, in 1839, its melodramatic plot is taken from a play by little-known but prolific French dramatist Anicet-Bourgeois, itself based on a novel by James Fennimore Cooper. The assassin is a tormented character forced to work for the Venetian state, and his story is intertwined with the fate of Pisani – a young hero facing banishment – and his search for his beloved Violetta. Presented by Tom McKinney.

Stonewall founder Lisa Power recalls how it was only after male homosexual acts were partly decriminalised in 1967 that the movement for gay liberation took off – and how, after the failure to stop Section 28, the late 1980s saw the birth of a new approach, prompting a mainstream political struggle to win the freedoms enjoyed today. Today's Choices

Annalisa Is Awkward
11.00am Radio 4

I will always remember interviewing a blind man who couldn't understand why, when he was in a social situation, people would talk to his guide dog but not to him. The horrible thought struck me that I may have been guilty of similar awkwardness. But the charity Scope found that most able-bodied people feel the same when speaking to a disabled person for the first time. Annalisa Dinnella (above), who is registered blind, has assembled a motley crew to help those of us who need to embrace awkwardness. Jess Thom uses her Tourette's in her performance pieces. Cariad Lloyd's podcast Griefcast is about the difficulty of dealing with death and grief. Dr Raj Persaud, former presenter of Radio 4's All in the Mind, reminds us of the importance of speaking openly.

DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Crowd Science
8.30pm BBC World Service

I've never been able to remember what happened in the seconds that elapsed in between jumping out of a plane and then looking upwards to see that my parachute had, indeed, opened. Similarly, listener Grady can't remember the seconds before his motorcycle crash. Where in our brains are these memories stored and can they ever be recovered? As always, Crowd Science reveals something remarkable: during a near-death experience the brain is flooded with chemicals that disrupt its ability to remember. The only word to describe why this process is kick-started is mind-boggling.

Face behind the voice

Adam Crowther BBC Radio Bristol

Age 31
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Upload (weekdays 7.00pm), which gives listeners the opportunity to showcase their talents by uploading any kind of content – audio, video, text and images, comedy, poetry, drama and music.
CV Born and brought up in Birmingham, he studied Drama and Media at Aberystwyth University, starting his broadcasting career as a traffic and travel presenter for Trafficlink. Then BBC WM, BBC Radio Northampton and BBC Radio Shropshire, joining Radio Bristol in 2015 and winning a Gillard award for digital innovation in 2016.
Best moment "The Magnificent Seven – seven live sessions for BBC Introducing in 2016, taking seven brilliant artists to seven stunning locations along the River Severn."
Worst moment "Introducing a Test Match from Edgbaston for BBC WM, I couldn't think of a way of saying a cricket match was about to start. After some hesitation I went for 'They're about to bowl off', and got rather ridiculed for it."
Off air "I flat-share in Redland, a suburb of Bristol. Spare time is spent going to live gigs and, in summer, drinking cider on the harbour side."
First radio memory "Phil Upton on BRMB. That was when I first got hooked on radio."
Favourite broadcasters "Two great champions of new music – Zane Lowe and Huw Stephens."
Ambition "To help uncover brilliant new talent and say: 'We played them first, here on Radio Bristol.'"
Dream job "This is it!"
Secret skills "I'm good at filming things on my iPhone – I filmed my best friends' wedding in Greece last year and made them a surprise wedding video. I'm in love with tea and I make a good cuppa: bag in for at least three minutes and milk in last. And I used to sing with the Bournville Big Band in Birmingham and performed twice for Tony Blair when he was prime minister." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

Adam Crowther BBC Radio Bristol

Age 31
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Upload (weekdays 7.00pm), which gives listeners the opportunity to showcase their talents by uploading any kind of content – audio, video, text and images, comedy, poetry, drama and music.
CV Born and brought up in Birmingham, he studied Drama and Media at Aberystwyth University, starting his broadcasting career as a traffic and travel presenter for Trafficlink. Then BBC WM, BBC Radio Northampton and BBC Radio Shropshire, joining Radio Bristol in 2015 and winning a Gillard award for digital innovation in 2016.
Best moment "The Magnificent Seven – seven live sessions for BBC Introducing in 2016, taking seven brilliant artists to seven stunning locations along the River Severn."
Worst moment "Introducing a Test Match from Edgbaston for BBC WM, I couldn't think of a way of saying a cricket match was about to start. After some hesitation I went for 'They're about to bowl off', and got rather ridiculed for it."
Off air "I flat-share in Redland, a suburb of Bristol. Spare time is spent going to live gigs and, in summer, drinking cider on the harbour side."
First radio memory "Phil Upton on BRMB. That was when I first got hooked on radio."
Favourite broadcasters "Two great champions of new music – Zane Lowe and Huw Stephens."
Ambition "To help uncover brilliant new talent and say: 'We played them first, here on Radio Bristol.'"
Dream job "This is it!"
Secret skills "I'm good at filming things on my iPhone – I filmed my best friends' wedding in Greece last year and made them a surprise wedding video. I'm in love with tea and I make a good cuppa: bag in for at least three minutes and milk in last. And I used to sing with the Bournville Big Band in Birmingham and performed twice for Tony Blair when he was prime minister." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

Adam Crowther BBC Radio Bristol

Age 31
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Upload (weekdays 7.00pm), which gives listeners the opportunity to showcase their talents by uploading any kind of content – audio, video, text and images, comedy, poetry, drama and music.
CV Born and brought up in Birmingham, he studied Drama and Media at Aberystwyth University, starting his broadcasting career as a traffic and travel presenter for Trafficlink. Then BBC WM, BBC Radio Northampton and BBC Radio Shropshire, joining Radio Bristol in 2015 and winning a Gillard award for digital innovation in 2016.
Best moment "The Magnificent Seven – seven live sessions for BBC Introducing in 2016, taking seven brilliant artists to seven stunning locations along the River Severn."
Worst moment "Introducing a Test Match from Edgbaston for BBC WM, I couldn't think of a way of saying a cricket match was about to start. After some hesitation I went for 'They're about to bowl off', and got rather ridiculed for it."
Off air "I flat-share in Redland, a suburb of Bristol. Spare time is spent going to live gigs and, in summer, drinking cider on the harbour side."
First radio memory "Phil Upton on BRMB. That was when I first got hooked on radio."
Favourite broadcasters "Two great champions of new music – Zane Lowe and Huw Stephens."
Ambition "To help uncover brilliant new talent and say: 'We played them first, here on Radio Bristol.'"
Dream job "This is it!"
Secret skills "I'm good at filming things on my iPhone – I filmed my best friends' wedding in Greece last year and made them a surprise wedding video. I'm in love with tea and I make a good cuppa: bag in for at least three minutes and milk in last. And I used to sing with the Bournville Big Band in Birmingham and performed twice for Tony Blair when he was prime minister." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

Adam Crowther BBC Radio Bristol

Age 31
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Upload (weekdays 7.00pm), which gives listeners the opportunity to showcase their talents by uploading any kind of content – audio, video, text and images, comedy, poetry, drama and music.
CV Born and brought up in Birmingham, he studied Drama and Media at Aberystwyth University, starting his broadcasting career as a traffic and travel presenter for Trafficlink. Then BBC WM, BBC Radio Northampton and BBC Radio Shropshire, joining Radio Bristol in 2015 and winning a Gillard award for digital innovation in 2016.
Best moment "The Magnificent Seven – seven live sessions for BBC Introducing in 2016, taking seven brilliant artists to seven stunning locations along the River Severn."
Worst moment "Introducing a Test Match from Edgbaston for BBC WM, I couldn't think of a way of saying a cricket match was about to start. After some hesitation I went for 'They're about to bowl off', and got rather ridiculed for it."
Off air "I flat-share in Redland, a suburb of Bristol. Spare time is spent going to live gigs and, in summer, drinking cider on the harbour side."
First radio memory "Phil Upton on BRMB. That was when I first got hooked on radio."
Favourite broadcasters "Two great champions of new music – Zane Lowe and Huw Stephens."
Ambition "To help uncover brilliant new talent and say: 'We played them first, here on Radio Bristol.'"
Dream job "This is it!"
Secret skills "I'm good at filming things on my iPhone – I filmed my best friends' wedding in Greece last year and made them a surprise wedding video. I'm in love with tea and I make a good cuppa: bag in for at least three minutes and milk in last. And I used to sing with the Bournville Big Band in Birmingham and performed twice for Tony Blair when he was prime minister." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

Adam Crowther BBC Radio Bristol

Age 31
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Upload (weekdays 7.00pm), which gives listeners the opportunity to showcase their talents by uploading any kind of content – audio, video, text and images, comedy, poetry, drama and music.
CV Born and brought up in Birmingham, he studied Drama and Media at Aberystwyth University, starting his broadcasting career as a traffic and travel presenter for Trafficlink. Then BBC WM, BBC Radio Northampton and BBC Radio Shropshire, joining Radio Bristol in 2015 and winning a Gillard award for digital innovation in 2016.
Best moment "The Magnificent Seven – seven live sessions for BBC Introducing in 2016, taking seven brilliant artists to seven stunning locations along the River Severn."
Worst moment "Introducing a Test Match from Edgbaston for BBC WM, I couldn't think of a way of saying a cricket match was about to start. After some hesitation I went for 'They're about to bowl off', and got rather ridiculed for it."
Off air "I flat-share in Redland, a suburb of Bristol. Spare time is spent going to live gigs and, in summer, drinking cider on the harbour side."
First radio memory "Phil Upton on BRMB. That was when I first got hooked on radio."
Favourite broadcasters "Two great champions of new music – Zane Lowe and Huw Stephens."
Ambition "To help uncover brilliant new talent and say: 'We played them first, here on Radio Bristol.'"
Dream job "This is it!"
Secret skills "I'm good at filming things on my iPhone – I filmed my best friends' wedding in Greece last year and made them a surprise wedding video. I'm in love with tea and I make a good cuppa: bag in for at least three minutes and milk in last. And I used to sing with the Bournville Big Band in Birmingham and performed twice for Tony Blair when he was prime minister." DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Adam Crowther BBC Radio Bristol

Age 31
Current job Presenter of BBC Radio Bristol's Upload (weekdays 7.00pm), which gives listeners the opportunity to showcase their talents by uploading any kind of content – audio, video, text and images, comedy, poetry, drama and music.
CV Born and brought up in Birmingham, he studied Drama and Media at Aberystwyth University, starting his broadcasting career as a traffic and travel presenter for Trafficlink. Then BBC WM, BBC Radio Northampton and BBC Radio Shropshire, joining Radio Bristol in 2015 and winning a Gillard award for digital innovation in 2016.
Best moment "The Magnificent Seven – seven live sessions for BBC Introducing in 2016, taking seven brilliant artists to seven stunning locations along the River Severn."
Worst moment "Introducing a Test Match from Edgbaston for BBC WM, I couldn't think of a way of saying a cricket match was about to start. After some hesitation I went for 'They're about to bowl off', and got rather ridiculed for it."
Off air "I flat-share in Redland, a suburb of Bristol. Spare time is spent going to live gigs and, in summer, drinking cider on the harbour side."
First radio memory "Phil Upton on BRMB. That was when I first got hooked on radio."
Favourite broadcasters "Two great champions of new music – Zane Lowe and Huw Stephens."
Ambition "To help uncover brilliant new talent and say: 'We played them first, here on Radio Bristol.'"
Dream job "This is it!"
Secret skills "I'm good at filming things on my iPhone – I filmed my best friends' wedding in Greece last year and made them a surprise wedding video. I'm in love with tea and I make a good cuppa: bag in for at least three minutes and milk in last. And I used to sing with the Bournville Big Band in Birmingham and performed twice for Tony Blair when he was prime minister." DAVID GILLARD

New year, new you

Get your kitchen organised and healthier mealtimes will surely follow, promises Tom Kerridge

Tom Kerridge's Fresh Start
Wednesday 8.00pm BBC2

WE ALL KNOW we should be eating less processed food and yet more of us than ever are regularly turning to ready meals and takeaways instead of cooking from scratch. I get why: we're busy, and convenience food is exactly that – convenient. But relying on it isn't good for us and cooking your own food isn't as difficult as you think. Putting together a good store cupboard will really save you time and money.

STORE CUPBOARD ESSENTIALS

■ Pasta, rice, lentils, noodles or quinoa are convenient bases for quick midweek meals. Ready-cooked pouches of rice and lentils can be brilliant, too – a neat little crossover convenience food.

■ Tins of tomatoes, coconut milk, beans (such as kidney, borlotti and butterbeans), chickpeas, sweetcorn and tuna are great standbys. I use them regularly in pasta sauces, curries, stews and salads, and for making fish cakes. Jars of passata are also useful for quick sauces.

■ Dried herbs and spices lift many dishes, so keep a nice range on the shelf. The dried herbs I use most often are thyme, oregano and bay leaves. Dried herbs are strongly flavoured so you won't need to use as much as fresh herbs.

■ When it comes to spices, my favourites are fennel, cumin and coriander seeds, chilli flakes, ground turmeric, cumin and coriander, and hot and sweet smoked paprika. I also like cardamom pods, cinnamon and nutmeg, which all bring an exotic warmth to puddings and cakes, as well as savoury dishes. Ready-made spice blends are really great to have in the cupboard, too. I like garam masala, Madras curry powder, ras el hanout and Chinese five-spice powder.

■ Flaky sea salt and black peppercorns for grinding are essentials, of course – it's so important to properly season your food. Always taste it before you season it, though, so you don't overdo it, especially when preparing food for children. I also use fragrant Szechuan peppercorns in stir-fries.

■ Onions, garlic and fresh ginger are always in my cupboard at home. They are versatile and add huge amounts of flavour.

■ Olive oil is a must. I suggest keeping a mild olive oil for general cooking and frying, and a good-quality extra-virgin olive oil for making salad dressings. For cooking at high temperatures and for Asian-style dishes, I prefer a flavourless oil, like groundnut or vegetable oil. I also keep sesame oil and chilli oil to add a powerful punch to dressings and for drizzling on finished dishes.

■ Vinegar, including red and white wine vinegar and sherry vinegar, can provide the much-needed acidity to help balance the overall flavour of a dish. It will enhance other flavours, too. I generally use rice wine vinegar in Asian-style dishes like stir-fries.

■ Other high-impact extras that I like to keep around are liquid aminos* (a gluten-free soy sauce alternative, which you can find online and in some supermarkets), soy sauce, fish sauce, Worcestershire sauce and Sriracha hot sauce. You don't need a lot of these powerhouse ingredients to make meals taste exciting.

■ Honey and maple syrup are great natural sweeteners that I use in both sweet and savoury dishes, from cakes and ice cream to stir-fry sauces.

■ Vanilla extract is wonderful for enhancing all sorts of puddings, and also for adding extra flavour to your morning pancakes. Make sure you buy the real thing, not synthetic vanilla flavouring.

■ A selection of nuts and seeds add a healthy crunch to lots of recipes, from pasta bakes to salads and from porridge to loaf cakes. Pistachios, peanuts, coconut flakes, sunflower seeds, black sesame seeds and pumpkin seeds are the ones I use the most.

KEEP THESE IN THE FRIDGE

■ Have jars of anchovies, olives, capers, peppercorns and sun-dried tomatoes to add pockets of intense flavour to savoury dishes.

■ Mustard provides a great flavour kick. I often stir a spoonful through stews to add extra depth, use it in salad dressings or combine some with mayonnaise to spread in a wrap or a sandwich.

Mustards vary quite a lot in heat and taste. To cover all needs, keep a Dijon mustard, a hot English mustard and a sweeter, milder one, like American or German.

■ Tomato purée and tahini, harissa, curry, chipotle and tamarind pastes are easy ways to add complex layers of flavour to a recipe. These are each used in slightly different ways but achieve the same result of elevating simple ingredients to a rich and exotic finished dish.

GROW YOUR OWN HERBS

■ Grow pots of your favourite herbs on your counter top or windowsill so you can snip some off whenever a recipe calls for them.

Herbs are great for adding really fresh flavours: flat-leaf parsley, coriander, mint, basil, thyme and oregano are particularly useful. If you buy bunches or bags of fresh herbs instead, keep them in the fridge or in a jug of water.

FILL UP YOUR FREEZER

■ Bags of frozen peas and prawns are endlessly versatile – I use them in everything from stir-fries and pasta dishes to risottos and curries, as well as simple salads and wraps.

■ Frozen mixed berries can be blitzed to make smoothies, an effortless compote or an instant ice cream.

■ Frozen fish keeps really well and it can often be fresher than the fish that you buy at the fish counter, as that will have been frozen at sea. Salmon, cod or haddock steaks are so easy to cook – just wrap them in foil and cook in the oven, or use them in a one-tray bake.

Tom's creamy butternut squash pasta bake

Rich and creamy, this could easily become a new favourite at home. It's also a great way of getting a big portion of veg into your family without them even noticing! It's all about the toppings: crunchy seeds and breadcrumbs, sweet chunks of butternut squash and nuggets of acidity from the sun-blushed tomatoes.

SERVES 6

575 CALORIES PER SERVING

- 1kg butternut squash, cut into chunks (about 2cm)
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 500g macaroni
- Sea salt and freshly ground black pepper

FOR THE CHEESE SAUCE

- 60g butter
- 60g plain flour
- 1 litre whole milk
- 1 tbsp liquid aminos* (see left)
- 60g parmesan, finely grated
- 1/4 tsp freshly grated nutmeg

FOR THE TOPPING

- A handful of sage leaves
- 40g sun-blushed tomatoes, roughly chopped
- 50g fresh breadcrumbs
- 2 tbsp pumpkin oil (or use olive oil)
- 2 tbsp pumpkin seeds

1 Preheat the oven to 220°C/fan 200°C/gas 7. Line a large roasting tray with baking parchment.

2 Place the squash in the roasting tray. Drizzle with the olive oil, season with salt and pepper and toss to coat. Cook on the top shelf of the oven for 25 minutes or until the squash is tender and browned at the edges. Remove from the oven and let cool slightly for a couple of minutes. (Keep the oven on.)

3 Tip three-quarters of the roasted squash into a blender and blitz to a purée; set the rest aside.

4 Bring a large pan of salted water to the boil. Add the macaroni and cook until almost al dente (2–3 minutes less than the time suggested on the packet).

5 Meanwhile, for the sauce, melt the butter in a large saucepan over a medium heat. Add the flour and cook, stirring, for 1 minute, then whisk in the milk and cook, whisking, until the sauce thickens slightly. Lower the heat and add the liquid aminos, parmesan and nutmeg. Stir until the cheese has melted, then stir through the squash purée to make a rich, smooth sauce. Take off the heat and season with salt and pepper to taste.

6 Drain the macaroni, add to the sauce and stir well. Tip into a large, deep baking dish, about 25 x 30cm. Scatter over the rest of the roasted squash, the sage, sun-blushed tomatoes and breadcrumbs. Drizzle with the oil. Place on the middle shelf of the oven, turning on the oven grill at the same time. Bake for 10 minutes.

7 Take out the dish, scatter the pumpkin seeds evenly over the surface and return to the oven for 5 minutes or until the topping is golden. Serve at once, with a green salad.

TO FREEZE

Cool and pack in a lidded foil tray (or several trays). Defrost fully in the fridge, then remove the lid and reheat in an oven preheated to 200°C/fan 180°C/gas 6 for 30 minutes, until hot all the way through. If the surface appears to be browning too quickly, cover loosely with foil.

DID YOU RESOLVE TO SAVE MONEY IN 2019?

Start the year off right by saving an easy £225* on energy!

Not only is January the coldest month of the year, it can also be one of the most expensive, with the cost of keeping your home warm biting into your finances just as much as those dreaded December bills.

But if you want to start the year off on the right financial foot, how does saving £225* sound? It's easy to do – you just need to bring down the cost of your energy bill the easy way, by switching to a cheaper tariff – for free! We've set up our Radio Times Switching Service to make it even easier for you. All you have to do is visit the website below, or call us on the number below, and we'll have you set up in no time. After that, all that's left to do is think about how much you will enjoy any extra cash!

WHY THE PRICE CAP IS NOT ENOUGH

You may have heard that an energy price cap has been announced for 1 January 2019. Although it may lower bills for some households, the savings that can be achieved will be limited – on average, three times less than what you could do on your own, in just minutes. Only homes on the dearest tariffs will see their prices drop by an average of £76, which is less than a third of the £225 average savings readers have been making recently.

And that's not all – the price cap is due to be reviewed in April, with many predicting a rise, which means you will save even less if you rely on it. If you were instead to take a few minutes to switch suppliers, you could be rewarded with cheap energy bills that could last years into the future – with savings that could really add up over time.

To see how much you could save in 2019, visit radiotimes.com/energy or call 0800 083 6528

Lines are open Monday–Thursday 9am–8pm; Saturday and Sunday 9am–5pm

*Average savings of £225 were achieved 12 September – 10 October 2018 by RadioTimes switchers, based on average usage dual fuel household paying by monthly D/D. Average usage defined by Ofgem is 12,000 kWh PA gas and 3100 kWh PA electricity. Includes publicly available tariffs available in at least 12 of the 14 regions of UK. Excludes exclusive, collective and staff tariffs not generally available. Source: energyhelpline.

Think big when you energy-switch

Make sure your new energy supplier is not about to go out of business, says Paul Lewis

New Year is the time when many people get round to finding a cheaper energy supplier, ready for the cold days ahead. But it's not as easy as just picking the cheapest. In the past 12 months, half a dozen small energy suppliers have gone bust. It's a tough world out there and all they can offer to attract attention is rock-bottom prices. That can be difficult to sustain, especially for smaller firms.

'Between five and ten small suppliers may go bust this winter'

There are now around 60 energy suppliers, as well as the big six, and some are very tiny. They do not have the financial resources to cope with fluctuating fuel prices, especially when they rise. The big six firms "hedge" the price by buying in advance at fixed prices. That protects them against the wilder swings, and makes them less likely to raise prices the moment the wholesale price of electricity and gas rises significantly. But many small suppliers do not have the resources to do that.

Energy analyst Baringa has said that it expects between five and ten small suppliers to go out of business over the winter period.

If your supplier does go bust, the regulator Ofgem finds you a new one and transfers your account. It will also ensure that any credit balance on your account will be repaid to you. However, if your new supplier is one you don't like – it may well be more expensive than the one that collapsed – moving before your credit is repaid could delay the refund.

If you are on a low income, there is another disadvantage in switching to a small firm. The Warm Home Discount is £140 off one winter electricity bill. It's available to most pensioners on Pension Credit, to some less well-off families with young children, and some people with disabilities. Out of more than 70 suppliers, only 37 are part of the discount scheme, so switching to one of them could leave you worse off, even if the tariffs are cheaper.

When you use a price comparison website you won't see the size of the company, but if you haven't heard of it, the chances are it is small.

For more information, visit the website gov.uk and search "warm home discount".

HOW LONG DOES A STUDENT LOAN LAST?

Chris writes that his daughter graduated in 2016 and is struggling to earn more than £25,000, which is the level at which her nine per cent graduate tax (as I call it) kicks in. He says, "If she marries and has children, breaks in employment may see her never able to pay back the loan."

Which is fine – after 30 years the loan will be written off. She is in good company. An estimated 80 per cent of students with these new loans will never pay them off. But Chris has another fear. He is thinking of helping her buy a home, and asks: "Would any assets she owns at the end of the 30-year term attach to any debt remaining?"

No. At the end of 30 years, any outstanding loan disappears. That rule applies to loans taken out from 1 September 2012 in England and Wales. Other loans taken out at different times in different countries of the UK are written off at age 50, 60 or 65, or after 25, 30 or 35 years, as long as you are not in arrears.

But wherever or whenever it was taken out, once it's gone, it's gone, no matter how rich you are then. For more information visit studentloanrepayment.co.uk

LASTING POWERS OF ATTORNEY ONLY £416*pp

There may come a time when you are unable to make decisions for yourself, maybe through illness or injury. If this was to happen, do you know who would make decisions about your care or manage your finances?

It's important to make your wishes clear in a legal document known as a lasting power of attorney (LPA).

There are two types of LPA – one that covers your health and welfare and one that covers your property and financial affairs.

A health and welfare LPA deals with your medical care and can only be used once you become unable to make decisions for yourself.

A property and financial affairs LPA deals with financial matters, and can also be used while you still have full mental capacity, for example if you become frail or immobile.

If you're married and your partner becomes unable to make decisions, marriage does not give you the authority to make decisions on their behalf – you will only be able to do this if you're formally appointed as an attorney.

READER OFFER £416* pp

For a limited time, Key Estate Planning is offering to create both your property and financial affairs LPA and your health and welfare LPA for £416 (half price). Offer ends 31 January 2019.

Key has a team of estate-planning specialists who can explain and arrange these documents. It can also offer you a free no-obligation consultation, and recommendation on wills and trusts based on your circumstances and legacy objectives.

That Rocky Mountain high

Michael Portillo's journey through Canada takes him on one of the world's most exciting train routes

Great Canadian Railroad Journeys
Monday–Friday 6.30pm BBC2

Michael Portillo fulfils a lifelong ambition and rides the Rocky Mountaineer in his latest series, Great Canadian Railroad Journeys. The train threads its way through the 3,000m-plus peaks that divide east and west Canada, and it didn't disappoint. "The Canadian Rockies are sublime," says Portillo, "and the line clings to the sides of gorges, burrows through mountains in tunnels, crosses wiry little bridges over immensely high chasms and it passes lakes that reflect the snowfall on the mountains. The weather adds to the drama of it all – the rain comes in, the cloud comes in, the sun comes out again."

As for the train itself, Portillo likens it to a cruise ship. "It's not really for transport, it's for enjoyment, so there's luxury on board: very high standards of service, beautiful food, lots of good wines, organised excursions."

Portillo begins his journey in Vancouver, which is wedged between forested mountains and the sea on British Columbia's west coast, and finishes in Canada's oil capital, Calgary – which is famous for its enormous annual rodeo. The Rocky Mountaineer runs as far as Banff – a resort hemmed in by looming, snow-sprinkled peaks – on tracks that traverse the great Continental Divide of the Americas and played a key part in the country's history.

"The line was vitally important to the unification of Canada," Portillo explains. "British Columbia was only lured into the Canadian confederation by the promise of a railway. Before there was a railway, British Columbia in the west was weeks of travel away from Toronto and Ontario in the east. And so British Columbia looked like it was destined to link up to the western states of the United States, which of course the British didn't want. The railway is what enabled Canada to be unified east to west.

> 'The train goes where nothing else goes...'

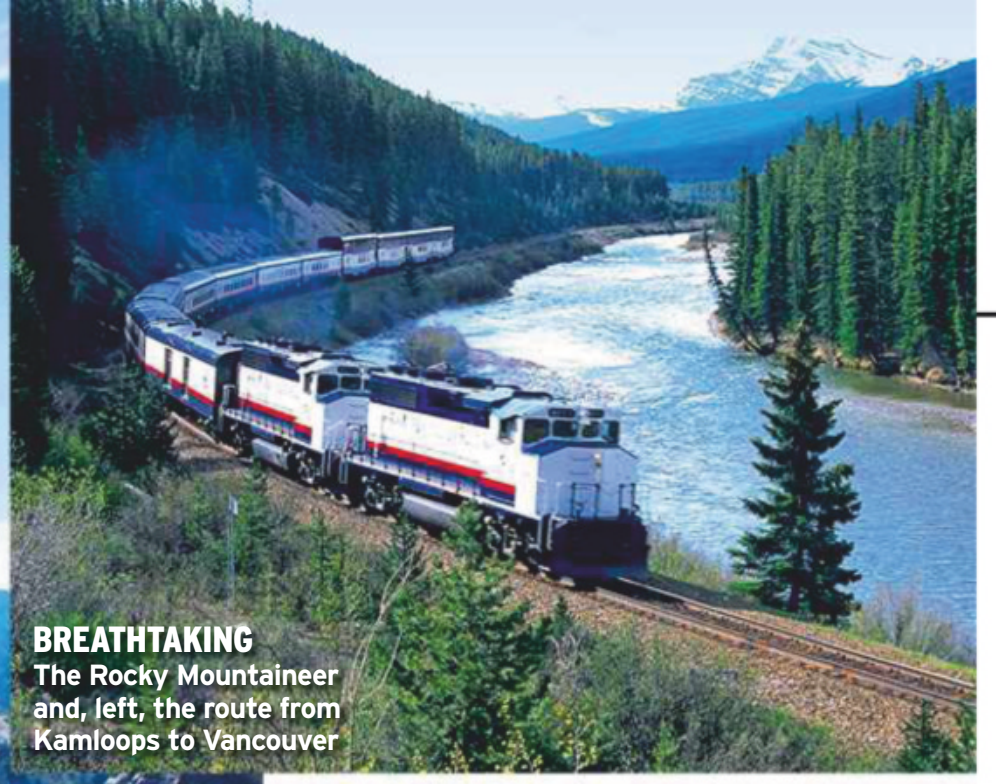
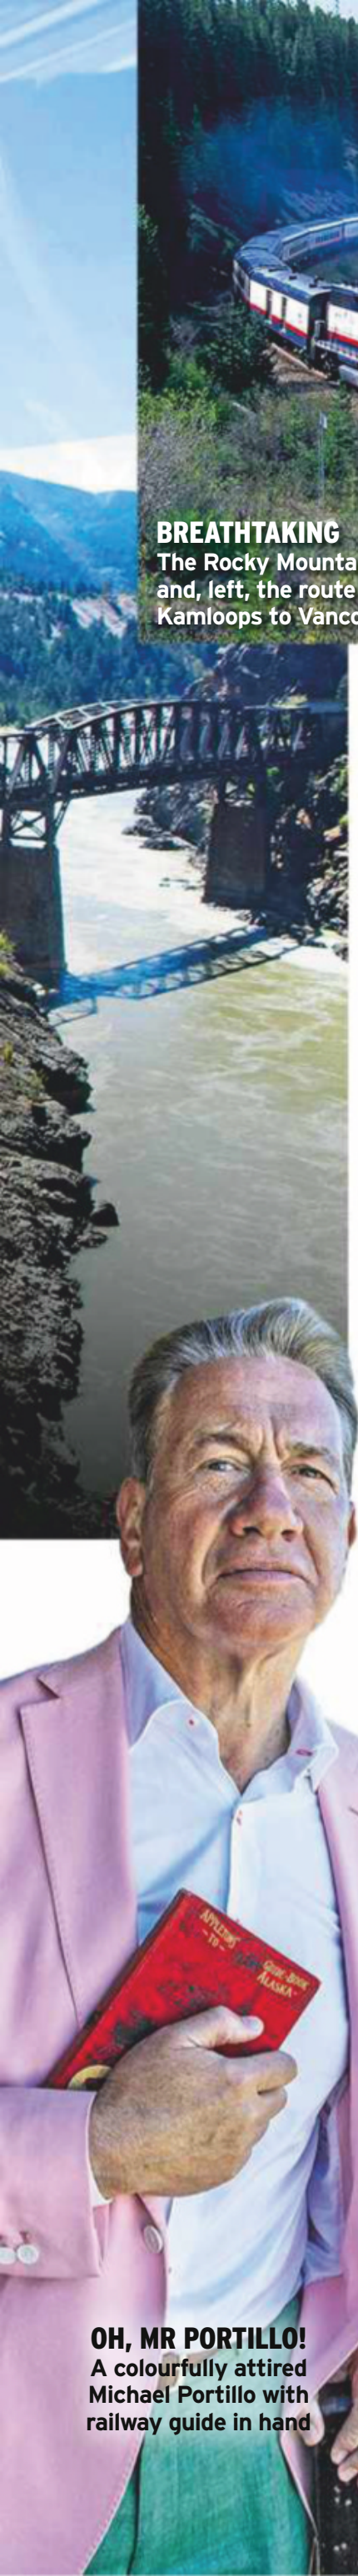
"It was, of course, an extraordinarily difficult engineering feat. They tried to build it extremely quickly because they needed the revenue from opening the line to finance it. Thousands of people worked on the railway at any one time and many of them succumbed to accidents and cholera and all the other hazards of the day. Human life was considered rather cheap in those days. So when you're on the train, you're not only thinking about the engineering feat, you're also thinking about the political importance."

The line was constructed in just five years in the 1880s, allowing easy access to untouched summits that soon attracted British and American alpinists. In 1896, a fatal climbing accident led the Canadian Pacific Railway to start hiring Swiss mountain guides. They continued to do so for the next 50 years and there were no more deaths.

ALAMY



BREATHTAKING
The Rocky Mountaineer and, left, the route from Kamloops to Vancouver



In Banff, Portillo meets a Swiss guide, who explains the allure for mountaineers from the Alps. "It's interesting because we might think Switzerland is very beautiful and very remote, but this Swiss guide says that he left Switzerland because he regards it as very overcrowded and populated. It was always the Swiss habit to build villages and towns in the mountains, but there never were populations in the mountains in Canada. Indigenous people – First Nations people – moved through the mountains but they didn't live in them, and therefore the greatest wildernesses to be found, possibly on Earth, are around Banff.

"Banff is a highly developed resort, but the guide told me that if I went walking with him for a few hours, I would be in pristine territory: places where hardly any human being ever sets foot, even today. It's an extraordinary opportunity for people who really are bold and know what they're doing."

As for Portillo, he describes himself as "a fairly urban creature"; he's not averse to a good walk but thinks camping is "going a bit far". And that, of course, is the appeal of the Rocky Mountaineer: you can experience the wilds of Canada in comfort. "The train goes where nothing else goes. For most of the time, you don't set eyes on a building or a road, so you are enjoying pristine nature."

CLAIRE WEBB

A RIDE THROUGH CANADA

LA GRANDE RIVIÈRE Portillo's second journey takes him from the maritime province of Nova Scotia to Quebec. The most picturesque stretch is along the Saint Lawrence River, where French settlers established New France in the 16th century. "In places you could mistake it for the sea, and the railway runs alongside the bank, so you're looking down at river beaches, rocky shorelines and dramatic rock formations."

THE WILD SOUTH Portillo's final journey is from Winnipeg to Jasper via vast plains. "We never talk about the Wild West when we're talking about Canada, but of course there were Indians, who we now call First Nations, cowboys, outlaws, lawlessness, and the attempt to impose law through the Royal Canadian Mounted Police." CW

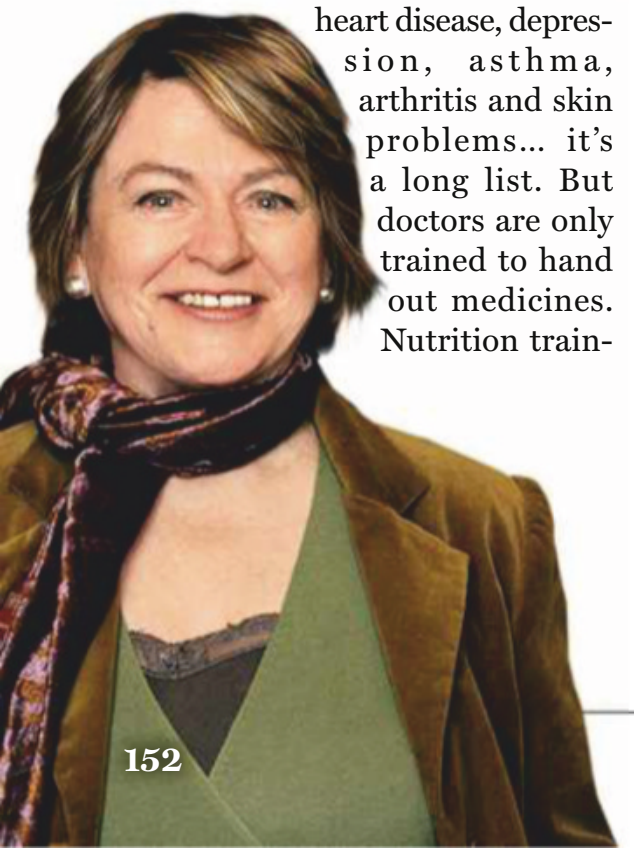
Sheila Dillon on the GP who is leading a food revolution

Dr Rupy Aujla is an NHS GP, but every few weeks you can find him wearing a hairnet, helping to run a most unusual cooking class where young doctors are taught to cook by professional chefs. Why?

Some estimates show that between 60 and 70 per cent of patients who walk through a GP's door every day are suffering from a condition that has its roots in how they live, particularly in what and how they eat. Conditions that are not going to be cured by a pill.

You've seen the numbers: 10 per cent of the NHS budget in England and Wales is now spent on treating diabetes – almost all of it on type 2 diabetes (which used to be call adult-onset diabetes, until children started developing it). Then there's heart disease, depression, asthma, arthritis and skin problems... it's a long list. But doctors are only trained to hand out medicines. Nutrition training in almost all UK medical schools is an add-on option for just a few hours, concentrating on micro-nutrients, not on how your daily diet influences the way your body works. Which is why, all over the UK right now, there's a bit of a revolution going on. And Dr Aujla is playing a key role.

'Diet affects the way your body works'



Those cooking classes are part of the Culinary Medicine programme set up in the UK by Dr Aujla and approved by the Royal College of General Practitioners. It's based on a programme at Tulane Medical School in New Orleans (now copied in 49 other US medical schools), where culinary medicine has been a compulsory part of the medical curriculum since 2012.

But why the need to get doctors cooking? Can't they just learn about food? No, says Dr Aujla. Real cooking, combined with studying, helps to "elevate the conversation doctors can have with their patients about food. Instead of recommending a low-calorie diet, or 'balanced eating', doctors, once they know how to cook, are able to suggest specific foods for patients to try. It enables doctors to talk confidently with people about healthy eating changes that can have huge positive impacts on their overall health."

As we've always said on Radio 4's The Food Programme, food matters. The way you eat changes the world – and changes you.

For more information, visit culinarymedicineuk.org and you can listen to Dr Aujla's podcasts at thedoctorskitchen.com/podcasts

New healthy meals service makes fridge and freezer obsolete

IT'S the storecupboard recipe for the future, home-cooked ready meals that combine the traditional taste of fresh-picked goodness with cutting-edge cooking techniques. Parsley Box meals are ready to pop in the oven or microwave straight from their box. They're delivered to your home and then you pop them in the pantry – not the freezer or even the fridge, unlike other meal services, because this is high-tech cuisine.

The dishes, slow-cooked to perfection, can be stored for long periods because of the innovative steam fresh packaging system that's taken a year to perfect. It's based on something used in Michelin-star restaurants called sous-vide (French for under vacuum) and gives six months' storage without using preservatives.

Parsley Box is perfect for those who are getting older and who don't want the trouble of cooking (or even defrosting), and yet it is just as handy for those short of time, whether singles or those with fast-moving families.

MOTHER OF INVENTION

It's the brainchild of Adrienne and Gordon MacAulay who were looking for easy, nutritious food for Adrienne's mother after the couple and their children (who used to love coming up with desserts for gran) moved away.

The result is a compendium of Adrienne's favourite recipes reborn into a 21st-century library of dishes for the home.

"They take just 1-2 minutes in the microwave and taste delicious," says Adrienne. "We have just started on our journey as a family business, so expect lots of new recipes to make the way out of our kitchen."

NUTRITIONAL BALANCE

Already there are more than 30 dishes on offer, all wholesome and nutritionally balanced, from comforting favourites such as cottage pie to the sophistication of a coq au vin or the curry house charm of a rogan josh. There are also pasta dishes, Mediterranean rice and plenty more curries. Starters too, such as the rich tomato and red pepper soup, as well as side dishes and a number of sponge pudding desserts.

What's far from modern are the prices. Soups are £1.99, main courses £2.99 and puddings only £1.25 – and a special launch bundle serves up to 10 main courses for £19.99, only £1.99 each. As a bonus there are two puddings and, like all orders, it comes with free next day delivery.

This is the taste of things to come and it couldn't be easier to enjoy.

Dictionary corner Susie Dent

Felicity Webster by email

This phrase, first recorded in the 19th century, is North American in origin. Although now we use it to imply that someone has a grudge or grievance, it was originally all about fisticuffs. An article in the Long Island Telegraph explains: "When two boys were determined to fight, a chip would be placed on the shoulder of one, and the other demanded to knock it off at his peril." It was the equivalent of a knight throwing down his gauntlet: if the opponent knocked the wood off the challenger's shoulder, the fight was on. It was only later that the meaning moved to refer to any display of defiance or bad temper, and then to a sense of inferiority characterised by a quickness to take offence.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Christmas cracker

ENTHRALLING DUO
Torvill & Dean's Poppy Lee Friar and Will Tudor

Of all the good things on offer on TV over Christmas, I was enthralled by Torvill & Dean (Christmas Day ITV). Will Tudor conveyed Christopher Dean's hurt and anger so powerfully, and Poppy Lee Friar also excelled in not over-playing the more grounded Jayne Torvill. The tension around the competitions came over splendidly, and (like RT reviewer Alison Graham) I cried at the end.

What will remain with me the longest is that there wasn't one bit of violence or even one swear word – how rare is that?

Jennifer Stewkesbury Weymouth, Dorset

Go to itv.com to see Torvill & Dean via the ITV Hub until 24 January.

Jennifer Stewkesbury wins a Bose SoundLink Micro Bluetooth speaker, in either orange or black. This small but powerful speaker delivers unmatched sound for its size. With up to six hours' battery life, a silicone rubber exterior and a tear-resistant strap, it's portable, rugged and waterproof. RRP £99.95. bose.co.uk

BOSE

FESTIVE REFLECTION

What delight I unexpectedly found in Sunday Worship (23 December Radio 4). The choristers were magnificent, as was organist Dr Joe McKee. This joyful service proved to be one of the highlights of my Christmas listening.

Well done, the Methodist College Belfast – for me, it was more than equal to the Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols on Christmas Eve.

Valerie Howells Swansea

GOODBYE JUNE

I was sorry to hear of the loss of June Whitfield, who died on 28 December aged 93 – she was a wonderful actress who had years of great roles, including of course in Absolutely Fabulous. She will be missed.

Paul Redman Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire

OPEN VERDICT?

I thought The ABC Murders (26–28 December BBC1) was very stylish, dark and beautifully acted: John Malkovich was fantastic. So what if he didn't get the accent completely right – he was mesmerising, and it was good to see a vulnerable side to the strutting peacock Poirot.

Although I thought Rupert Grint seemed just a little too young for the role of Inspector Crome, he was nevertheless convincing.

Then we had a brilliant performance by Eamon Farren as Cust, the salesman with peculiar tastes, while Shirley Henderson – as Mrs Marbury – and Tara Fitzgerald – as Lady Clarke – never disappoint. It was nice, too, to see Andrew Buchan in a devilishly evil role! All in all, very entertaining.

Sally Brown Chapel-en-le-Frith, Derbyshire

...BBC1 presented us with an outsize Christmas turkey in The ABC Murders. Granted, the producers wanted to do something different from ITV's Poirot and comfy David Suchet, but this version was loaded down with intrusive speculations about Poirot's character, flashbacks implying post-First World War guilt, and a lot of John Malkovich staring vacantly and expensively into the camera.

In the book anti-foreigner references occur only in ABC's offensive letters to Poirot, but they were amplified in this film. Much of the action was in semi-darkness or filmed through muddy sepia or yellowish filters, and the dialogue was so poorly spoken as to be often unintelligible.

To my family's disgust I stuck it out to the end, but by then I too had no idea what was going on!

Michael Johnson London N6

... Another wrecking ball to a gem from the Queen of Crime. Ordeal by Innocence was bad enough, but this travesty of The ABC Murders from Sarah Phelps and her cohorts is running a close second – it may be a photo finish!

Wendy Hardy Uffculme, Devon

...Thank you, BBC1, for a high-class production. The atmosphere, acting, drama and even the music were spot on. John Malkovich's Poirot will stay with me for some time, and Rupert Grint was most unexpected – in a good way.

Kay Duggan Inverurie, Aberdeenshire

...Initially I felt that John Malkovich's Poirot was interesting, but he soon started to grate. He seemed devoid of emotion, delivering his lines in a monotone. Sacré bleu!

Unfortunately, writer Sarah Phelps's propensity for distasteful scenes was evident all too quickly: Cust was involved in an extraordinary act of sado-masochism.

Linda McLay Weston Colville, Cambridgeshire

...I really enjoyed the different interpretation of Poirot. However, partway through the first episode I noted the heavy-handed racism/refugee message. The invented backstory for Poirot seemed to have been inserted to preach to the viewers. This constant bombarding of political correctness is probably the reason why I don't watch as much TV drama as I used to.

Susan Ellis Ripon, North Yorkshire

CONVINCING
Rupert Grint in The ABC Murders

WALFORD WOES

I wonder how many more people like myself felt annoyed at EastEnders (Christmas Day BBC1) when Alfie Moon was pushed down the stairs.

For one thing, no one checked to see if Alfie was actually dead: no pulse check, no CPR, nothing! It was laughable.

On top of its long-drawn-out Mick and Stuart story, EastEnders is struggling. Please, do better in 2019.

Sue Edwards Turriff, Aberdeenshire ▷

SNOW TV

What a wonderful journey I made across the Norwegian tundra in All Aboard! The Great Reindeer Migration (Christmas Eve BBC4). Stunning landscapes, close-up shots of these handsome animals, fascinating glimpses of the Sami way of life, with only cowbells and the occasional folk song to break the spell. The perfect antidote to the festivities.
Jane Baker Woking, Surrey

WINTER WONDERLAND

DANCE DELIGHT

What a treat it was to see Royal Ballet: Swan Lake (Christmas Day BBC4), with Marianela Nuñez as Odette [below]. We lost ourselves in the beauty of the music and dancing. A full-length ballet is so rare on TV these days that as a ballet enthusiast I often feel part of an endangered species, but no longer!

Please don't let us wait too long for the next. With the Royal Opera House's cinema season screening about 12 ballet and opera performances every year, there are plenty to broadcast. Television makes these truly magical productions accessible to everyone.
Joan Hopton Preston, Lancashire

STILL SCARY...

Cometh the new year, cometh the Dalek! And what a vicious denizen of Skaro it was! Both within and without its metal skin, this Dalek was a force to be reckoned with. To hear the bone-scraping "Exterminate!" in Doctor Who (New Year's Day BBC1) caused a shiver of feverish delight to creep up my spine. This is the totally inhuman creature that made Doctor Who the phenomenon it was, is and will continue to be.

Let's hope that, when the good Doctor returns in 2020, she can draw fully upon her whirligig of knowledge to understand, battle and vanquish these nightmarish beings!
Paul Reynard Manchester

...OR A PC PORTAL?

I was dismayed at Doctor Who degenerating yet again into a portal for social issues. Whatever happened to just having some scares, hiding behind the sofa and watching through your fingers? If this was a Party Political Broadcast it wouldn't be allowed, never mind a drama aimed at juniors.
Steve Barnett via email

DONKEY WORK

A star is born: the donkey in Call the Midwife (Christmas Day BBC1) cleverly delivered all its lines – even if only "hee-haw" – when none of the other actors was speaking. And the way it kept a stiff upper lip, seemingly not moving its mouth at all, made one feel proud to be British. A shoo-in for the Baftas, surely?
Richard Weeks Felixstowe, Suffolk

The midwives are back – don't miss our Jenny Agutter interview on page 10.

WHY A FUNERAL PLAN IS WORTH TAKING OUT!

There's never been a better time to get the right funeral plan for you

It's no secret that the cost of funerals have been rising year on year, with the average cost in 2017 at £4,086, up from £2,971 in 2011 and projected to rise to almost £6,000 by 2024†. That's an increase of 45% in just seven years†.

For this reason, many people are looking to plan ahead now, putting some money aside to shield their loved ones from a financial burden at the worst time.

There are things to consider when choosing a funeral plan, of course. Not all plans offer the same benefits and certainly not all providers are the same, so make sure you check before you buy.

FACTORS YOU SHOULD CONSIDER WHEN CHOOSING THE RIGHT FUNERAL PLAN

- Check that the plan provider is registered with a professional body like the Funeral Planning Authority (FPA), who monitor the conduct of their registered providers. Check the list of registered FPA providers at: funeralplanningauthority.co.uk
- Check all guarantees. Find out what's covered – and what's not. When little is guaranteed, there is a real chance your loved ones might have to pay for a significant shortfall
- Ask them specifically whether third party costs such as the cremation fee and the minister's fee are guaranteed, or if there is a contribution paid towards this, how much it is and whether it rises with inflation
- Ask the provider where your money will be invested and find out the financial health of any trust fund. Make sure if anything happens to your funeral plan provider, your money will be protected

RT has partnered with Dignity to bring you a funeral plan that you can trust. A Funeral Plan from Dignity can make all the difference to the way you and your loved ones are looked after when the times comes.

WHY DIGNITY?

There's never been a better time to get your funeral plan from Dignity, as you can save up to £340 off* plan prices.

† 2011-2017: Matter Communications Independent Research. 2024 forecast is based on the average annual compounded growth rate of 5.45% each year between 2011 and 2017. *£340 saving is based on the difference between the discounted Diamond plan price of £3,795 and the 2018 plan price of £4,135. Discount is valid until 30 April 2019.

BRENDA BLETHYN

The Vera star loves a TV quiz, a potter… and her cockapoo

Do you live the high life in London, surrounded by the trappings of your success?
I have got a Golden Globe but if you walked into my front room you’d just see photographs and posters from different productions that my husband [art director Michael Mayhew] and I have been involved in. I did also win at Cannes. Apparently, you get a little statuette, but I never did – someone’s got it! The thing I’m pretty proud of is three London Marathon medals.

When was the last time you ran a marathon?
2004 – I did later train for the Great North Run but about a fortnight before it was due to happen, I found I wasn’t allowed to because of insurance for Vera. It was a relief. Have you seen that long hill up the last bit? That’s a long way. I thought, “Result!”

Do you still go running?
No, I should do. But I tend to lie down. Vera keeps me fit, it’s full on. They have me running here and running there in all those clothes. If it’s a hot day, I’m sweltering!

Do you still go back to Ramsgate?
Oh yes, I love it! That’s where I’m from. People meet me and go, “Oh, you’re so ordinary.” And I am. What’s wrong with ordinary?

Life was pretty tough growing up there, though…
Yes, but we’d always have something on the table. My mum would make rice pudding or bread pudding: fag ash and everything went in that.

But no television in the house?
No! We didn’t get a telly until I was about 14. The people next door had one and I would hang from our railings and try to look in their window, especially if it was Sunday Night at the London Palladium. Then the curtain would be drawn back, the neighbour’s door would open and they’d say, “Go on then, ask your mum if you can come in.”

What do you watch now?
I like quizzes. The Chase, Tipping Point and, if I’m not working, Tenable. It’s so frustrating when they lose, I feel so upset for them! I think it’s because my dad used to set us problems and riddles to solve when we were kids. And Fifteen to One is a favourite. Sandi Toksvig is great, isn’t she?

Has working with director Mike Leigh spoilt ordinary TV drama for you?
No! I watch tons. I like a good thriller, getting lost in things when I’m watching them. I enjoyed Chris Lang’s Dark Heart and Unforgotten.

They’re quite gloomy. Is Brenda Blethyn secretly glum?
I’m not glum. I’ll find something funny at a funeral! And Jack, our cockapoo, keeps me happy.

Is that Jack the cockapoo who was frisky with your leg on This Morning last January?
Yes. It can be embarrassing. He also did it at the switching on of Ramsgate Christmas lights recently, when I was on the podium. I had to pick him up to stop his antics. But it’s not what you think. Jack has a control thing when he thinks I’m going to leave him. As soon as I say cheerio to someone he starts. When I’m going away to Northumberland to film Vera, he sees me packing a case and saying goodbye to Michael, and then he’ll pounce.

What do you miss most when you’re away?
I like to potter when I’m at home.

Not your husband?
Well, I asked him recently, “What is the one thing you couldn’t live without?” [flutters eyelashes] and he said, “Music.” MICHAEL HODGES

Vera is on Sunday at 8pm on ITV

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY CD I picked John Tams singing Lay Me Low for Desert Island Discs. It’s beautiful and haunting, but I might want something merrier for a party!

MY BOOK William Boyd’s A Good Man in Africa. I lent it to a friend and he said it was the funniest book he’d read in his life.

Posture.

The importance of good seated posture cannot be overestimated. Over time, poor posture can place a huge amount of strain on your muscles and soft tissues, leading to life-style issues such as back, neck and shoulder pain, as well as increased stress and fatigue. Designed with CleverComfort™, HSL's range of chairs and sofas are ergonomically designed to ensure key areas of your body are fully supported to improve your overall posture and well-being.

Julie Jennings Dip COT, HCPC, independent Occupational Therapist at HSL, is an expert when it comes to posture, and the detrimental effects that poor posture can have on our general health and well-being. From bad circulation, poor digestion and fatigue, to a loss of movement and independence, many people won't be aware of the effects of poor posture until they suffer health complications as a result.
