1 THEY'RE BACK... The Grand Tour Amazon Prime

James May, Richard Hammond and Jeremy Clarkson return with a third series of the motoring show (sort of) that, this year, promises even sillier stunts in even more spectacular locations, accompanied by the usual joshing and roaring.
Available from 18 January

INCREDIBLE DOCUMENTARY 5 Fyre: The Greatest Party That Never Happened

Netflix

The story of the Fyre Festival in 2017, a supposed luxury music event in the Bahamas that publicly disintegrated when ticket-holders arrived to find a shambles, not a paradise. It's a salutary story of lies, bravado, fraud and the dangerous allure of social media: the only thing the organisers got right was hiring supermodels to publicise Fyre on Instagram.
Available from 18 January

FRESH SCANDI NOIR

6 The River Walter Presents

Scandi-detective fans will get plenty of comfort from a Norwegian eight-parter inspired by real events. Near the Russian border, a small town next to a Nato military training ground is, you've guessed it, rocked by a series of horrific crimes that force the community to disinter painful secrets. Not a game-changer, but it's well made and the scenery is predictably terrific.

CULT CLASSIC SITCOM

Netflix

With this indie sitcom now into an astonishing 13th series, there are a few signs of change amid the gang running a bar in south Philly: as the new episodes begin they've got a new leader in the form of Cindy (Mindy Kaling), and by the end the show is nudging towards a rare display of sincere emotion. In between, though, it's the usual blitz of rude, talky, topical misadventures.

NEW EPISODES

2 Grace and Frankie Netflix

Where to now for the new best friends, kicked out of their shared home at the end of series four? Whatever happens in the new, fifth run of this mischievous sitcom, nothing's likely to dent the delicious comic chemistry between Jane Fonda (right) and Lily Tomlin as two previously very different women who, having been united by their shared dismissal of ageing, have become a fearsome team.

ADDICTIVE DRAMA

8 Timeless

Netflix

Like all the best time-travel shows, this American effort is ludicrous but irresistibly fun. Abigail Spencer (above right) stars as a historian tasked with joining a team who must travel back in time to stop bad people from altering history to malign ends, with the twist that the baddies can also time travel. In practice that's a romp through a new period drama setting every week, resetting to zero neatly at the end. Netflix now has series one and two.

DON'T MISS

iPlayer

Murder in Successville star Tom Davis is on rollicking form in this one-off sitcom that must surely become a full series. Boisterously funny with a sweet heart underneath, it follows a suburban man's effort (aided by his faithful wife, played by the equally excellent Laura Checkley) to host the biggest barbecue his cul-de-sac neighbours have ever seen – but a rival event and Gary's own hysterical flaws guarantee chaos. Available until 22 January

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Great Shakes: this sitcom is the soul of wit

If you still miss Blackadder, you should catch up with Upstart Crow, BBC2's comedy take on the life of William Shakespeare. It adheres to the formula of the Rowan Atkinson classic pretty closely. It's not a rip-off, mind you: Blackadder co-writer Ben Elton is on scribing duties, and finds plenty new to say with this familiar style.

Upstart Crow follows a witty, well-spoken sort (the Bard himself) who gets into all sorts of scrapes with his friends, and it's shot in an old-fashioned multi-camera style with an emphasis on puns, wordplay and starry guest actors.

Where Upstart Crow brings something fresh, though, is in Elton's skewering of Shakespeare's work, with a play informing the story of most episodes while quotes, literary criticisms and knowing winks to the audience about the future are scattered throughout.

In this version, David Mitchell's Will is a likeable hack affectionately derided by his friends and family as he churns out his masterpieces, to the chagrin of enemy Robert Greene (Mark Heap) – the real Greene coined the epithet for Shakespeare that forms the show's title.

In his London gaff, Shakespeare has a gang to jibe with as well as a flowery troupe of actors, with whom Elton delights in parodying modern-day thespis. In Stratford, meanwhile, Shakespeare has his unruly extended family to contend with, led warmly by Liza Tarbuck as the stern but loving Anne.

It's within that tranquil home life that the most recent run found a haunting bit of drama to rival Blackadder Goes Forth's famous conclusion, with the real-life death of Shakespeare's son Hamnet closing the series in a surprisingly moving piece of television.

As in Shakespeare's real work, plenty of Upstart Crow is borrowed from other places – but when it's all put together this well, it hardly matters. HUW FULLERTON

10 ANOTHER CHANCE Broken

Netflix

Jimmy McGovern's 2017 drama series is as angry, tender and shamefully realistic as any of the writer's best work. Its portrait of people for whom poverty means living half a step from devastating tragedy is tough viewing, but Sean Bean's performance in particular, as a local priest who invests too much of himself in trying to share his flock's burdens, is one to savour.

DOCTOR DIGITAL

The slow evolution of TV

This month's Consumer Electronics Show saw tech companies showing off new products, including the inevitable massive televisions.

Samsung took the prize for biggest, with the 219-inch Wall. It's made up of smaller, modular displays that can be clipped together into different shapes. It's an example of the industry rethinking the basics of the telly. For instance, soundbars only exist because the speakers in flat screens are awful: little bleating things pointed backwards at the wall. LG demonstrated a solution that embeds the sound system within the screen.

Our screens are smarter too, with many integrating digital assistants such as Alexa. Whether talking to your TV is easier than using a remote is debateable, but what is welcome is a ceasefire between streaming services and hardware manufacturers. Samsung, Vizio and LG announced their smart TVs will support previously exclusive Apple products like iTunes and AirPlay 2.

Was there anything to make you hold off on upgrading your TV? Frankly, no. In fact we're entering a sweet spot where technologies like 4K, HDMI and HDR are stable, affordable and unlikely to be replaced in the near future. That will change eventually, but we'll climb that wall when we come to it.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

COLLINS IN COURT

Sky's Urban Myths series has offered a delightfully surreal spin on celebrity stories over two series – with episodes involving Agatha Christie, Marilyn Monroe and Michael Jackson (though the last one, starring Joseph Fiennes, so antagonised the Jackson family it was pulled). An upcoming subject for the next series will be The Trial of Joan Collins, with Victoria Hamilton (right, star of The Crown and Doctor Foster) playing Collins. The comedy covers her real-life 1996 court case with publishers Random House, who had paid her a whopping advance for a novel, but claimed her manuscript was “unreadable”. Haydn Gwynne plays the Dynasty star's editor, Mark Heap her lawyer and David Walliams her fictional boyfriend. “It's the most amazing story,” says a source.

STATH IS STILL FOR SALE

Joining the new roster of promising comedy this year (including a BBC comeback for Alan Partridge next month) is a return to Channel 4 for Stath Lets Flats. The hapless Anglo-Greek lettings agent played by Jamie Demetriou in series one will be putting up his For Sale sign for six more episodes.

THE TRIP THAT KEEPS ON GIVING

And if that's not enough, Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon are set to sharpen up their Michael Caine impressions and reunite for a fourth series of The Trip on Sky Atlantic in 2019 – this time travelling around Greece, following journeys around the Lake District, Italy and Spain in previous series.

WHAT A LIBERTY!

One comedian who has been off the airwaves of late is Catherine Tate, but her stage show is currently running at London's Wyndham's Theatre. On the night I saw it she showcased all her favourite characters, like foul-mouthed Nan, and offered a new spin on her stropky schoolgirl Lauren. “All right, it's been a while,” Tate's Lauren told the audience. “Apparently in the meantime I have won Strictly Come Dancing.” We're not sure what Stacey Dooley will think. THE HARDWICK CAPERS

As Val Pollard, Emmerdale star Charlie Hardwick had a fabulously grisly soap death – impaled by a falling shard of glass after a helicopter landed on a funfair in 2015. She'll be hoping for a classier rather than glassier stint as a new regular in Channel 4's school soap Ackley Bridge, playing Sue Carp, the school's director of behaviour. BEN DOWELL

REX; NICKY JOHNSTON

Helen the great

She has played Queen Elizabeth I and Elizabeth II... now Helen Mirren is donning the Russian crown for the Sky Atlantic mini-series Catherine the Great, which will air later this year. But given the fact that Mirren's father hailed from Russian aristocracy – the family name was changed from Mironova – it's also something of a homecoming for the 73-year-old star.

The four-part drama follows the Empress towards the end of Catherine's reign in the late 18th century. One focus is her affair with statesman Grigory Potemkin (Australian actor Jason Clarke) and the strong union forged by the pair that helped her deal with the machinations of court.

Also starring in the drama, which is made by HBO, are Gina McKee as Countess Bruce, Catherine's friend and confidante; Rory Kinnear as her adviser Minister Panin; and Kevin McNally (Inspector Japp in BBC1's The ABC Murders) as another key ally – Grigory's brother Alexei Orlov.

“She rewrote the rules of governance by a woman, and succeeded to the extent of having the word ‘Great’ attached to her name,” says Mirren. I wouldn't bet against the same being said of this new drama... BEN DOWELL

'The over-75s should pay'

Free TV licences could cost the BBC £1 billion a year

THE BBC IS in a terrible mess over free TV licence fees for the over-75s. It faces alienating some of its most loyal viewers and supporters if it starts charging them the full fee of more than £150 from 2020. If it doesn't, an axe will have to be taken to many top-quality dramas and other BBC services. It's the broadcasting equivalent of a killer situation in chess, called zugzwang, where any move you can make causes harm.

Gordon Brown's Labour government introduced free TV licences for the over-75s in 2000, to a warm welcome. David Cameron's Tories tried to get the BBC to take over immediate responsibility for paying in 2015.

After a furious row, the Government backed down – but only until 2020, when Theresa May's administration says it "wants and expects" the BBC to continue "this important concession".

The serious dilemma for the poor BBC is that the corporation has been landed with the freedom to decide whether or not to reintroduce the full licence fee for all viewers, whatever their age. More than 4.64 million households would be affected. That "choice" means that the BBC, rather than the Government, will get the blame, whatever happens.

The BBC can end the concession, become a New Year Scrooge and face the public anger of the elderly, amid inevitable vitriol from the Daily Mail. Take the free licences on board and the BBC faces a £745 million-a-year hit, increasing to £1 billion a year by 2030 as the average age of the population continues to rise.

The impact of the arrival of a new £745m bill at New Broadcasting House could hardly be more serious. It's the equivalent of the entire cost of BBC2, BBC3, BBC4, BBC News, CBBC and dear CBeebies, so beloved of grandparents.

Such a bill is too large to be met by cost savings. The BBC would have to close services that the public value.

This is a crazy position for the UK's national broadcaster to find itself in. From both a social and national point of view the BBC should have more money, not less, to fight the good fight against Netflix, Amazon and Apple – before we even get to countering fake news.

'The BBC would have to close services that the public value'

A BBC consultation (open until 12 February) has suggested various options, including a 50 per cent discount for the over-75s, or lifting the threshold for free licences to the age of either 77 or even 80. Another is to introduce means testing, by limiting the concession of free licences to the 900,000 households receiving pension credits. In that circumstance, those who most need free TV licences would get them, though it would still cost the BBC £135 million a year.

The best solution would be to return this thorny issue to Parliament, from whence it came. Former Prime Minister Gordon Brown is supporting a campaign that insists the BBC should not have to face such a self-damaging dilemma.

"Quite simply, the BBC should not be making judgements about the distribution of income between social groups," is how Brown puts it. He is right. But given the present Government's fixation with the implications of Brexit, don't hold your breath about the likelihood of the Government adding another £745m to £1bn to public spending.

With no good options on the table, the least bad one for the BBC is to bite the bullet and make the majority of over-75s pay a full contribution to funding an essential UK institution.

Not all over-75s are poor. Those that are – those receiving pension credits – should be protected. The biggest disaster of all would be to financially hobble the BBC as a national broadcaster – pain that would get worse every year.

Raymond Snoddy is a journalist and media commentator. For more on this, and how to contribute to the BBC consultation, see Paul Lewis, page 148.

WHAT WE WATCHED

Les Dawson, the rubber-faced comic specialising in mother-in-law jokes, had signed up to judge the Radio Times Radio Comedy Awards. He advised aspiring writers to pick a comedian to write for and stick with them. "I've had scripts sent to me in the past with three or four names rubbed off and mine put in," he told us. "That just doesn't work." He also spoke of his "serious" side and his passionate sideline as a novelist – revealing that his alien conspiracy thriller A Time before Genesis was to be published the next year. Sadly this was just seven years before he was to die from a heart attack, in 1993.

WHAT YOU SAID

The third series of PoW drama Tenko had come to an end and (most of) you were keen for more. Miss CM Vines from Berkshire praised the "moving" depiction of "real women in real situations", while Mrs ME McLellan from Cornwall wondered if "it would be too much to expect that we could eavesdrop on the reunion that Kate [Claire Oberman] urged them to keep in five years' time." Her wish was granted: a feature-length special, Tenko the Reunion, did air on Boxing Day 1985, allowing the sun finally to set on the show. BEN DOWELL

TS ELIOT'S THWARTED, disappointed J Alfred Prufrock famously measured out his life in coffee spoons. Think yourself lucky, Alf, that you looked upon the world through a gauze of Nescafé; consider those of us who measure out our lives in series of Silent Witness.

This week, we're halfway through the 22nd outing for the warhorse forensic pathologist crime drama that shows no signs of ever swabbing down the postmortem table at the Lyell laboratory for the very last time. Despite cast changes, Silent Witness (famously and brilliantly spoofed by French and Saunders as Witless Silence) just keeps rolling along.

And look at Midsomer Murders. It began in 1997 and I swear it feels like much, much longer. Again, though, it trundles through series after series, knee-deep in gore, like the bloodiest of pantomimes. No death is too baroque – remember Martine McCutcheon's character, who joined the choir invisible after being bludgeoned with a wheel of cheese?

But no one minds when Midsomer and Silent Witness brush the fringes of the ridiculous (repeat after me: “Forensic scientists don’t investigate crimes and they don’t interview suspects”). They call to something deep within many millions of television viewers.

SO TOO DO the other stars of our splendid photoshoot – Brenda Blethyn as Vera, Grantchester newbie Tom Brittney, Ardal O’Hanlon as Death in Paradise’s DI Jack Mooney and Mark Williams as the brilliant, deceptively meek Father Brown. All gather big audiences (Father Brown is a massive BBC daytime hit) and all deal with the bad business of murder.

Real-life murder is hideous, and its after-effects can reverberate for a lifetime for a victim’s loved ones. But our favourite detective shows don’t deal with the banality of real evil; they examine puzzles that we are all invited to work out. The clues are there; we just have to think like a Vera Stanhope or a 1950s Cotswolds priest or a genial Irish cop on a Caribbean beach.

Crucially, we are never in any danger, no one comes to real harm, it’s all just a bit of fun. We can pride ourselves on putting our unshakeably brilliant knowledge of human nature to the test. That’s why crime dramas will never pall... ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR ►

SILENT WITNESS

EMILIA FOX

as Miss Scarlet in the billiards room with the lead piping

What makes a good crime drama?

The most important thing is the character of the detective, because if the audience can invest in them, then whatever the crime or the plot, they'll be carried through. It's also about human behaviour. Humans are fascinating – why they do the things they do. Getting a little insight into that dark world is so interesting. And watching from the comfort of your own sitting room and not having to be involved in it, you can enjoy it a little more. It's also the puzzle-solving element that I really enjoy.

Did any fictional detectives inspire you?

I loved Agatha Christie and Sherlock Holmes when I was little, that's why Silent Witness was the dream job for me. But becoming Miss Scarlet might be the highlight of my crime-solving career.

Silent Witness has been running since 1996.

Why does it have such enduring appeal?

People say, "How can they still find different crimes to solve?" Well, there are always different crimes going on in the world.

What's the weirdest way someone has been killed on the show since you joined in 2004?

There have been a lot of odd deaths in 14 years. I've taken out breast implants, I've drilled in extraordinary places, I've taken people's faces off. I've definitely handled more naked bodies as my fictional character than I have done in my real life.

If you were going to try to get away with murder, how would you do it?

The blood wouldn't show up...

I'd speak to all of the real crime-solving people in my life and ask them how to get away with it. Although I'm a terrible liar because I blush, so if I was being questioned by a detective, I'd be appalling.

Would you make a good detective?

I would really, really love it. And I'm not saying that because I do "solving crime" on the telly! I don't consider myself qualified, but having lived it in a fantastical world, I've become so interested in how crimes are solved and what goes on behind the scenes. I think that's what has held my interest in the series for this long. FRANCES TAYLOR

as Professor Plum in the library with the candlestick

Why do we love crime drama so much?

Everyone's got an in-built morbid curiosity – we love a good twist, being led down a dark path and following red herrings. A really good crime drama makes the audience feel clever and lets them try to work things out themselves. It's satisfying at the end if you got it right. That moment when you say, "I knew it was them."

Grantchester has been running since 2014.

Why does it have such enduring appeal?

It has brilliant writing and the show satisfies our urge to solve a crime, hunt down a terrible, evil person, and find justice for the victim.

What makes a good detective?

They have to be intuitive, hungry for the truth. I also like a detective who's a bit grumpy, with a back story that drives him or her forward.

Is the Rev Will Davenport a good detective?

He is. He didn't plan to do it or ever think he would, he just sort of discovers that the skills that make him a good vicar can also make him a good detective.

Are you inquisitive? Would you make a good detective?

I think I'd be pretty good. That would have been my plan B, if I wasn't an actor. We're all nosy, love a good story and gossip, but I also like trying to work things out and looking at different sides. And I'm suspicious of people and whether they're telling the true story.

Ever been in trouble with the police?

I had a couple of slaps on the wrist as a teenager. You've got to make mistakes to learn from them, and I did.

Would you get away with murder?

Are you a good liar?

No! I'm not a very good liar at all, so I think I'd be a terrible murderer. I'd be caught instantly.

What's the weirdest way someone has been killed on the show?

I don't want to give anything away about the rest of the series, but there are some very mysterious, weird and dark ways.

I once did a show called The Five [Sky 1, 2016], which was all about a murder and it was the first time I'd ever been on set and seen a fake brain and brain matter all over the wall. TV brain is banana mixed with pink food dye, and after you've been filming in a hot room for seven hours it doesn't smell too good.

How would you murder someone?

Well, from the killings on Grantchester I've learnt that you never actually get away with it. But I'd say poison, probably in someone's cup of tea – although as they went to drink it, I'd go, "Oh, no, no, no, don't! I was just angry. I'm so sorry." MICHAEL HODGES

ARDAL O'HANLON

as Mr White in the conservatory with the spanner

Death in Paradise has been going since 2011. Why does it have such enduring appeal? Every murder is conclusively resolved but a lot of contemporary police shows don't do that. Fans will go along with the sheer number of murders on Saint Marie because they know it will all be tied up in the end.

What makes Jack Mooney a good detective? He is genuinely very nosy. That's an Irish characteristic. He's curious and wants to know what makes people tick.

Did you take inspiration from any other detectives?

The obvious point for me was Columbo, just in the way he got on with people and his persistence. The other is Jim Rockford from The Rockford Files. He had an easy-going, laconic way about him, that twinkle in his eye.

Would you make a good detective?

I'd be thorough. I don't think I'd let it go until I'd exhausted every possible avenue. I'm good at looking at things from many different sides. When there's a murder on TV, I can usually guess who did it.

Ever been in trouble with the police?

I was stopped for speeding in London, on Park Lane, years ago when I was a youngish stand-up. The officer said, "So, where have you come from?" I said, "I've just been to Birmingham. I'm a stand-up comedian and I was doing a gig with Nookie Bear. During the gig, Nookie Bear's head fell off." The policeman thought it was hilarious and let me go without a ticket.

Would you get away with murder?

No, I'm such a bad liar. I was asked to be Santa at the school fair. I made up an excuse on the spot and said, "I can't. I'm going to be away that weekend." When I was home that night, I thought it was a really terrible lie, so I actually booked a weekend away.

How would you murder someone?

I had a bucket list, like most people, but I had to tear it up because it was just a list of people I wanted to kill. I thought it was a bit too negative. An awful lot of people fall off balconies in our show, but it would have to be some sort of poison. MH

MIDSOMER MURDERS

as Colonel Mustard in the kitchen with the dagger

Why do we all love crime drama so much?

I think it's like turning over a stone and all the little insects underneath running around in a panic.

Midsomer Murders has been running since 1997. What's its enduring appeal?

People love the humour and eccentricity and, without being snobby, there's something more sordid about working-class people drinking, getting violent and killing each other in a terraced house. For the working classes it's a desperate act of necessity; with the upper classes murder is more of a leisure activity. The majority of ordinary people like to see posh folk behaving badly. They are terribly polite and reserved and all those things, but one of them is going around garrotting people or slashing them to bits.

What makes a good detective?

Everybody thinks they can spot a murderer, but they look just like us; they don't go around with blood dripping from their mouths. A good detective sees further than that.

What makes DCI Barnaby a particularly good detective?

He has a fascination with people and why they lie. Somewhere in Barnaby's background is a criminal psychology degree, so he has a psychological approach to suspects. He likes to get close to them, put them at ease and then they lower their guards.

Would you say that you're an inquisitive or suspicious person?

I'm naturally inquisitive. Actors are interested in people, how they behave and why they behave the way they do.

Would you make a good detective?

If it was the Midsomer model, perhaps; you don't have the entire population of the country to pick the murderer from. In one week we might have 11 guests. One of them dead already, two others are going to die before the end of the show and three of them are national treasures. So, we can narrow it down to about four suspects and then it's a bit more like shooting fish in a barrel. That said, I have never been able to tell from reading the script who the murderer is before it is revealed.

What is the weirdest way someone has been killed on Midsomer Murders?

It's a crowded field, but I very much like the one when the police found a man tied to a tree. His shirt was torn open and he'd been smeared with truffle oil, then eaten alive by a wild boar.

If you were going to kill someone, how would you do it?

I'd find out where you worked, follow you and learn your habits – "So, on Wednesday nights he likes to go to the gym, has a few pints and walks down that alleyway on the way home in the dark with a few drinks in him. That's when I can kill him!"

'People like to see posh folk behaving badly'

Could you get away with murder?

I don't think that I'd get away with it for very long. An awful lot of murders are committed by someone who has had too much to drink, lost their temper and, for instance, picked up a knife and stabbed, say, a journalist, in the chest.

Ever been involved with the police?

When I was young they came to my nan's house and they seemed to fill the room. They bring that air of the criminal underworld with them and everybody, when they are confronted by a policeman, feels rather guilty.

Would you be able to lie to the police?

I have too strong a guilty conscience. I'd crack under the least amount of pressure. "Would like a cup of tea, Mr Dudgeon?" "All right, all right! I confess, I did it – stop hounding me!" MH

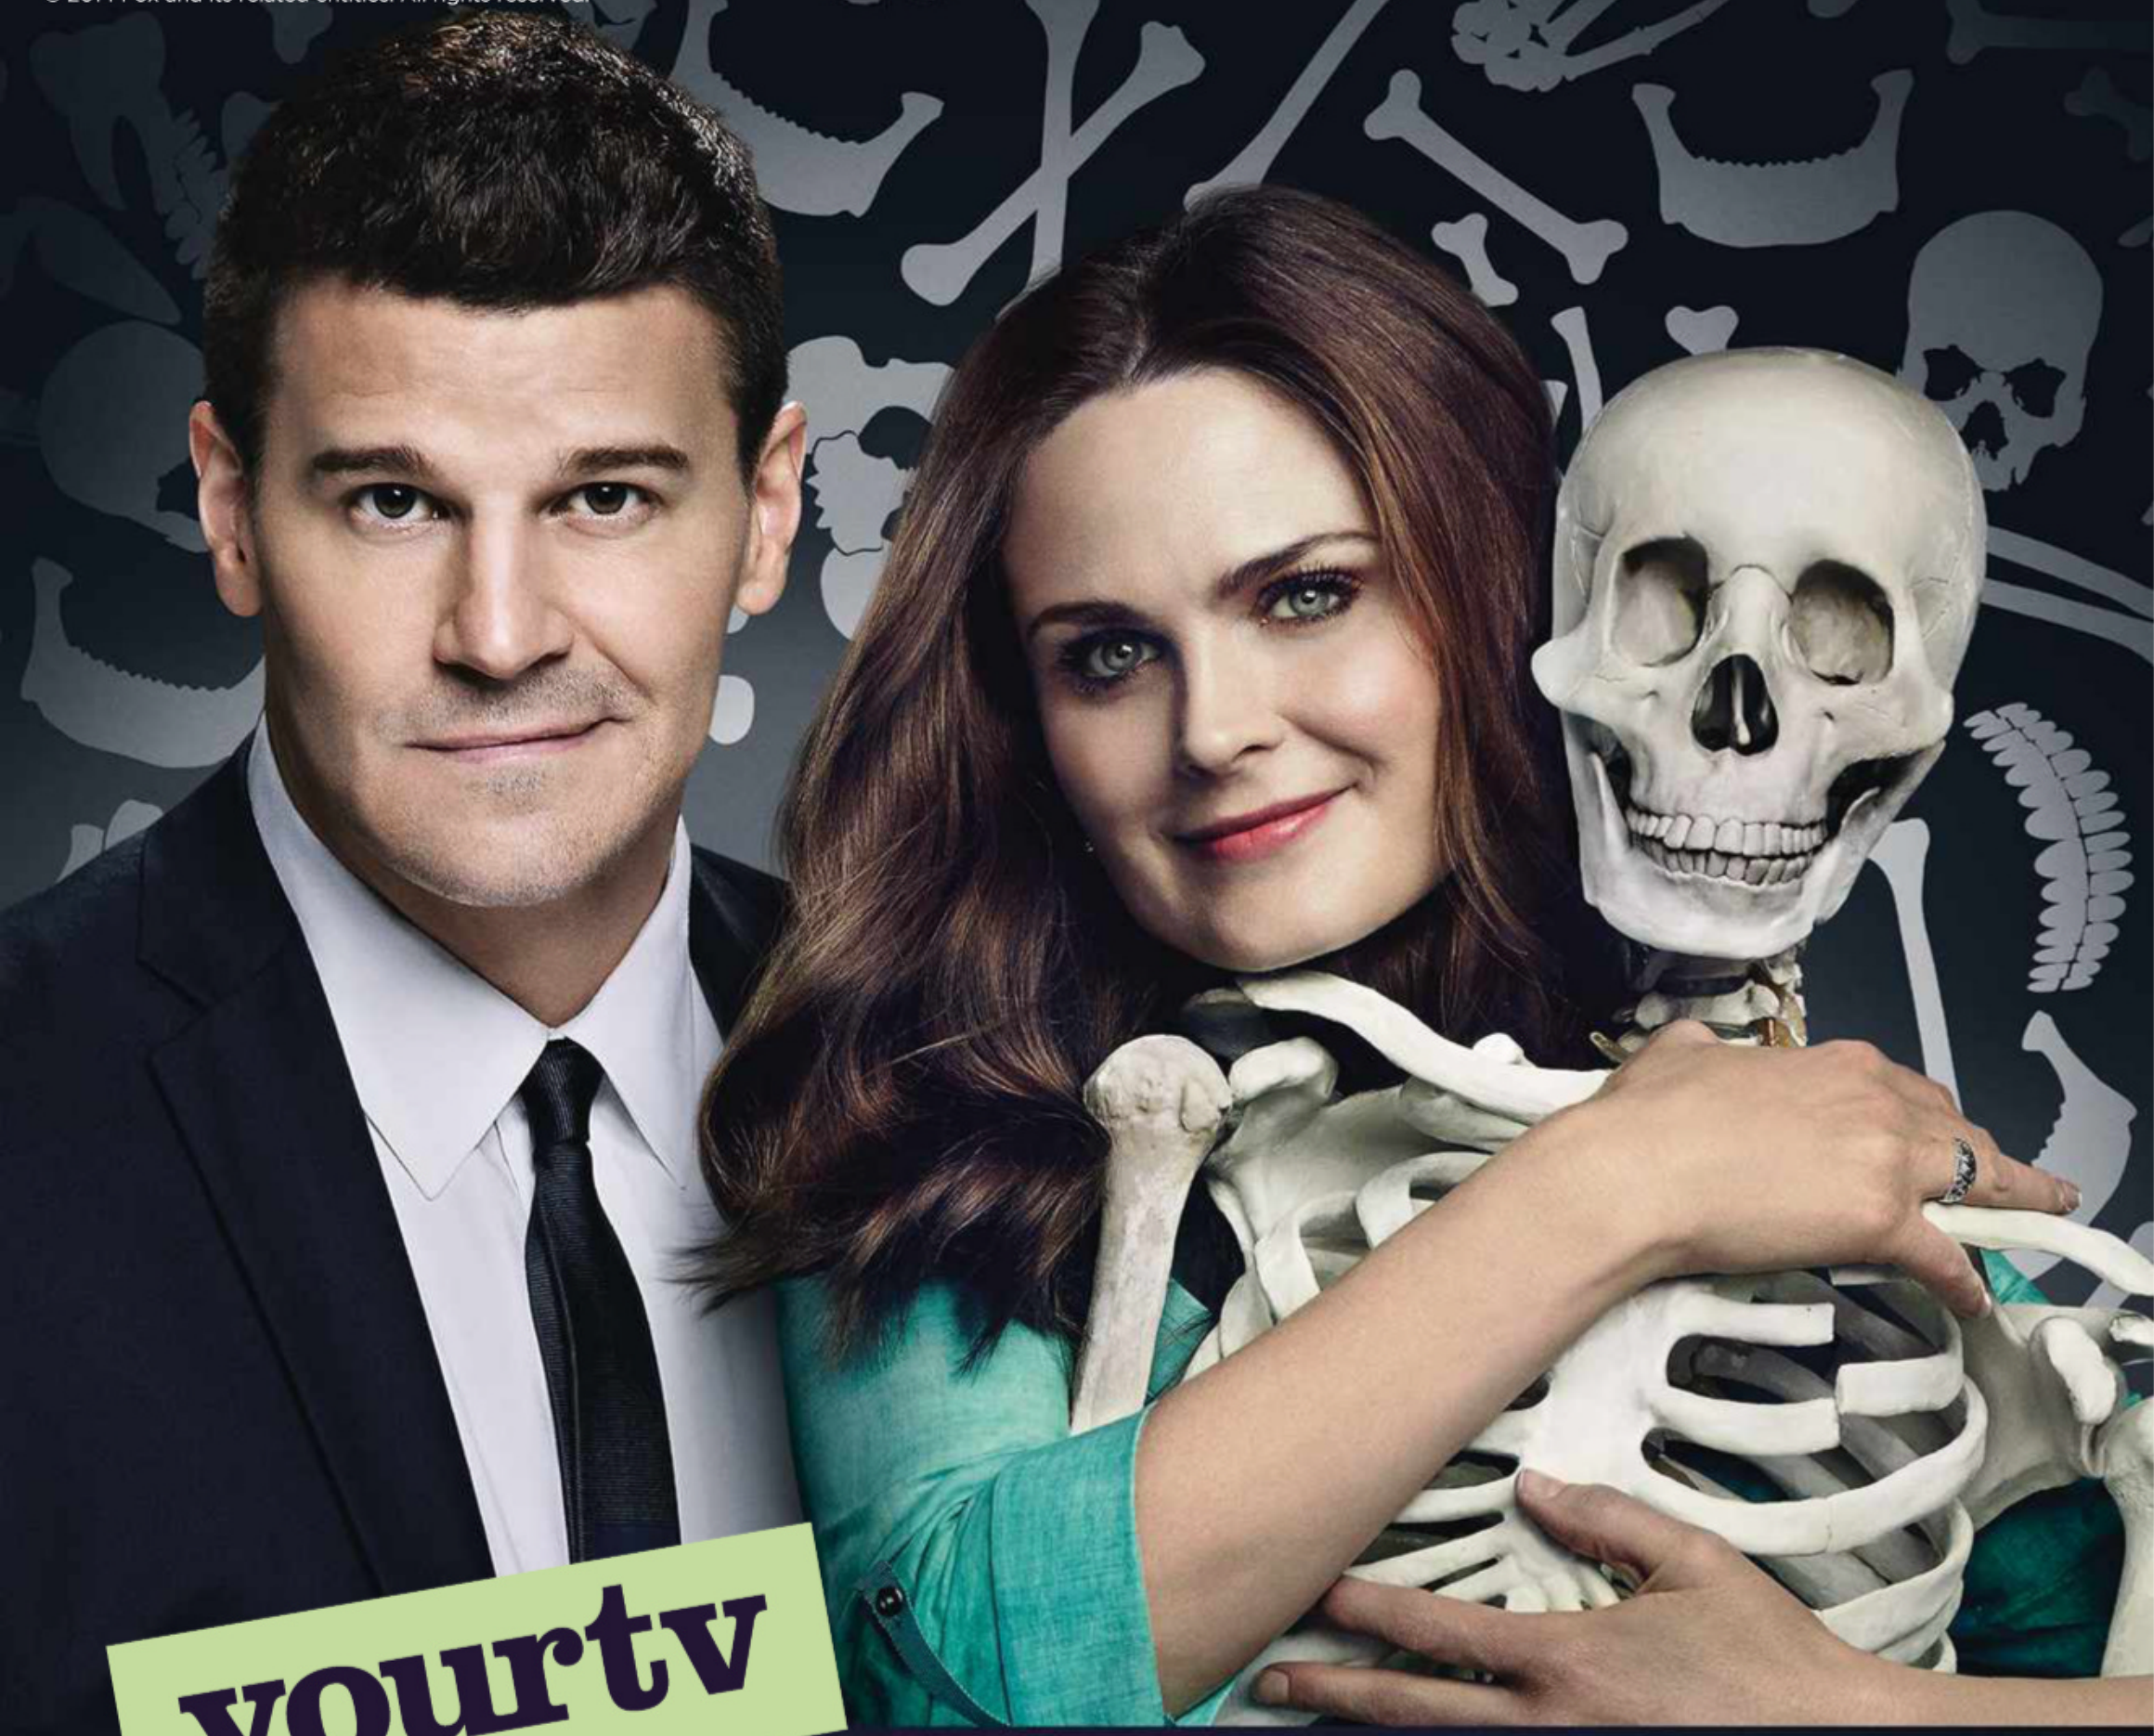

Midsomer Murders returns soon

VERA

as Mrs Peacock in the lounge with the revolver

What makes a good detective?

You have to be diligent and explore every avenue. Check everything.

What makes Vera a particularly good detective?

She just loves her job with a passion but also I think it's because she's not a normal, run-of-the-mill character. She doesn't try to woo you and she doesn't ask you to like her. If you don't like Vera, you don't like her. She won't hold it against you at all.

Did you take inspiration from any other detectives when creating the character?

Not really, though I brought part of myself to Vera, little things and expressions that weren't in the script, like "Hang onto your eyebrows", and "Three days dead and we're more in the dark than he is". They are mainly things I've said on the spur of the moment. There was a scene where we came across two lots of prints, from a big foot and a little foot. And the sidekick said, "Oh, maybe there were two of them, ma'am?" So I replied, "Possible. Possible, of course. Two wooden-legged intruders." And they left it in.

Are you an inquisitive or suspicious person?

I do like to work things out. I'm also someone a lot of other people share things with. No matter what the problem is, they just tell me because they need to unload it. I can't help it.

Would you make a good detective?

I'd leave no stone unturned. I'd want to solve the case but whether I would reveal it at the end, like Vera would, is another matter.

Ever been involved in a crime?

Oh God, my mum would give me a clip round the earhole! I'd be too scared to be a crook. A crook must have a stomach of steel. I couldn't do it.

What's the weirdest way someone has been killed in nine series of your show?

In the latest series of Vera somebody is found in an abattoir kiln, which is pretty awful. We filmed that in an actual abattoir. It was a dreadful situation, and very thought-provoking. I wondered, "How many people have gone in there in real life?" We also find someone on a landfill site and I couldn't help thinking, "If we started digging, how many people would be in there?" It makes you think how easy it would be to get rid of somebody. It probably happens all the time.

If you were going to kill someone, how would you do it?

It would have to be cleverer than poisoning or bludgeoning someone. I think I'd probably bore them to death. MH

MARK WILLIAMS

as Reverend Green
in the dining room with the rope

Why do we love a crime drama?

Because it has a resolution. When I was a kid, I remember watching an episode of Softly, Softly when they knew who it was, but they couldn't charge anyone, and I was incredibly frustrated. An unresolved crime is an affront. It can make you leave the television in a very dissatisfied frame of mind.

What makes Father Brown in particular such a good detective?

He doesn't quite conform, and I think a degree of nonconformism is vital when it comes to the great detectives. Everybody you think of – Poirot, Miss Marple, Sherlock, Maigret, Sam Spade – they're all nonconformists. And they have to be successful at solving crimes. One of the other facets that GK Chesterton built into this brilliant character is that he can disappear, be anonymous and observe. And that's crucial.

What's the weirdest way someone's been killed in seven series of Father Brown?

I don't really have a favourite, but I've been killed a few times. I was in Miss Marple and I got poisoned by an orchid. That was quite good. We used egg white in the mouth to simulate the effects of poisoning. It was the last shot we did on the day; I was twitching and dying and they kept saying, "More egg white! More egg white!"

Would you make a good detective?

I've learnt quite a lot. I suddenly realise when people say things and they're not telling the truth. Or I can see what their ulterior motive is.

Are you instinctively an inquisitive person?

"Nosey" is the word that I'd use. Father Brown is interested in everything and, to a degree, so am I.

Have you been involved in a crime?

During my gap year I worked in the employment exchange in Bromsgrove when the police came in. The manager called me into the office and said someone had been arrested robbing a post office and another man had got away. The person arrested was asked who they were and they said, "Mark Williams. He lives in Bromsgrove." It was established quite quickly that I had been at work at the time and there was no chance I was involved. But I nearly got fitted up... FT

CHARLIE BROOKER'S LATEST episode of Black Mirror on Netflix puts you in charge of life-or-death decisions. Choose to go one way and people will die. Go another and who knows? "Hopefully you'll feel slightly unsettled," Brooker says, mischievously.

Bandersnatch is a stand-alone Black Mirror film – it was so complicated to make that a new series was put on hold – and it's effectively a choose-your-own-adventure TV show with a dark, Black Mirror-style twist. Every now and then, the show stops and gives you two choices, everything from the mundane – which breakfast cereal should the hero have? – to the terrifying – should you kill yourself by leaping from a tower block or get someone else to jump instead? You can't rewind to make a different choice if you don't like the outcome, but you can sometimes loop back to the last choice and pick a different path.

Set in 1984, it follows Stefan Butler, played by Dunkirk's Fionn Whitehead, who is trying to develop a computer game inspired by a choose-your-own-adventure book that his dead mother left him. He takes the idea to Tuckersoft, a big games company run by Mohan Thakur (Asim Chaudhry), where he meets hugely successful game designer Colin Ritman (Will Poulter).

"All the choices are character-based," Brooker explains when I talk to him and Annabel Jones, his producing partner of 18 years. "Early on there's a decision about where Stefan will work on his new game – at home on his own or in an office. Almost everyone gets it wrong. The correct decision is based on Stefan as paranoid and insular. We deliberately made it so that you would fail early, just so it would pull the rug out and make you lean in."

It being what exactly? Is Bandersnatch an interactive film, or is it a game? "No one quite knows how to describe it," says Whitehead cheerfully. "It's a subtle and complex thing to get your head around. There were times when I was having to be on top of the character but also thinking about different story arcs because there are some scenes we filmed three or four times with subtle differences each time."

"In the back of my mind always was that this is the story of a man having a psychological breakdown. With all these interactive crazy things going on, ironically it was playing Stefan's breakdown that kept me sane."

The idea began, perhaps inevitably, with technology. Netflix has been using interactive stories in kids' TV shows since 2017 – with the animated films Puss in Book: Trapped in an Epic Tale and Buddy Thunderstruck – but this is the first time the streaming service has used interactivity on a live-action show. The company had been looking for the ideal programme to try this out on and pitched it to Brooker and Jones in May 2017 for a Black Mirror episode – thinking a show about the complicated effects of technology would be a perfect fit.

A year earlier, Brooker and Jones had been thinking about coming up with alternative endings for the game-themed episode of Black Mirror called Playtest. But when Netflix approached them, the answer was a firm no.

“We did pretty much walk out of the room,” Jones recalls. “We didn’t know what the story would be and worried it would just be a gimmick. But several weeks later, we were throwing story ideas around and Charlie had an idea that would only work as an interactive. It was a daunting prospect.”

Although Brooker has always played computer games – he wrote his graduate dissertation on video games and spent the mid-90s reviewing games for PC Zone magazine – he was worried about an interactive scripted show. The element that made it work for him, he explains, is that as you watch/play and guide Stefan through everything from his choice of music to a violent confrontation with his father, the character gradually becomes aware that his actions are being dictated.

“That means Stefan is up against one constant problem – something is making him do things,”

Brooker says. “So the viewer becomes a character in the show and Stefan has a single antagonist. You have to come up with a conceit like that [to make it work] unless you’re doing an action movie, with simple choices.”

WHETHER BROOKER DOES another film with an interactive element or not, entertainment is set to become increasingly interactive. In April 2018, Twentieth Century Fox announced it was developing an app that will allow movie audiences to control the storyline in the upcoming film Choose Your Own Adventure.

Technically, interactive movies have been around since 1961 when low-budget horror ▷

AN INTERACTIVE ROLE

Early reaction to Bandersnatch has proved problematic for Will Poulter, who plays Colin Ritman – to the point where he announced he was taking a break from Twitter (right)

◁ B-movie director William Castle released a gothic thriller, Mr Sardonicus, which invited audiences to raise glow-in-the-dark cards with either a thumbs up or a thumbs down to decide if Sardonicus would receive punishment or mercy.

It's taken the arrival of streaming services and smartphones to make it a reality, however – mainly because the technology is so complicated. With five possible endings and various routes to them, the shortest way through Bandersnatch will take 40 minutes, and the longest can take over two hours.

EVEN THE ACT of writing was a challenge. “I had to learn a coding language called Twine, which is similar to HTML, to write the script,” Brooker elaborates. Netflix worked with Brooker to develop software called Branch Manager, as previous interactive story maps look like simple flow charts while Brooker's is far more complex.

Another key player in Bandersnatch is Colin Ritman, played by Will Poulter. “Unnervingly, I was watching an episode of Black Mirror the night before my agent called and said they wanted to meet me,” grins Poulter. “I didn't really understand it until I saw the Twine version of the script. At that point my mind was blown. What's positive about this is that it forces your attention. You have to have your snacks on the table, phone on silent and remote in your hand. It's teaching us about the dangers of our relationship with technology if we don't pay attention. That's the strength of this anthology.”

Poulter has become all too familiar with “the dangers of our relationship with technology” as, after Bandersnatch was released last month, he was trolled on Twitter so relentlessly that he announced he was taking a social-media hiatus for the sake of his mental health.

“I recognised that personally engaging over social media wasn't always a positive thing,” he says now. “But it can be beneficial if what you're putting out is going to help others. I've always used Twitter as a platform for organisations I support, like Anti-Bullying Pro – a charity I've been involved with since 2007 that does a lot of good work on cyber-bullying and how people engage online.”

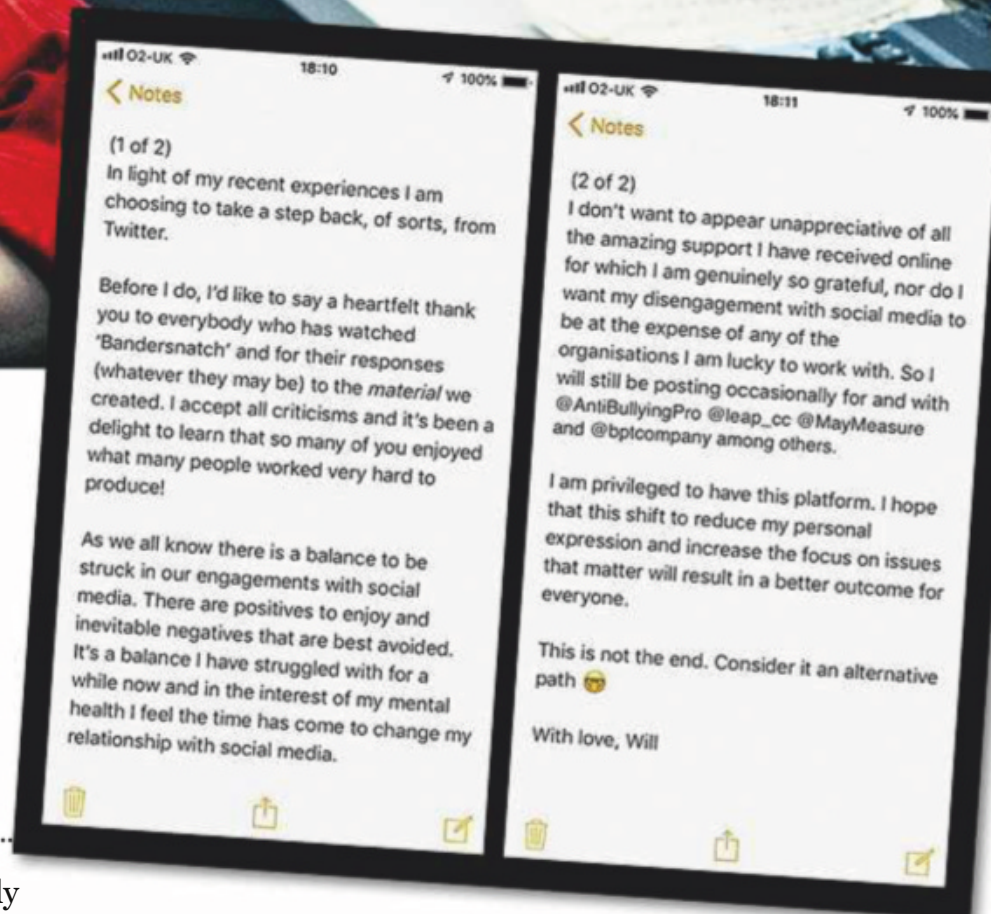

As for the show's opportunity to replay key choices in your life, the team is uncertain. “My choices were quite limited after I got my A-level results,” Poulter says ruefully. “I was like, ‘I've got to be an actor because I don't have anything else to go on.’” Fionn Whitehead says he wishes he'd learnt to read music. “I rebelled against it – I could have easily, as my dad is a musician. If we'd sat down for five minutes a week I'd be fluent, but I didn't and I regret that.”

For Brooker and Jones, the key choice is still to come: is this the future of entertainment and will they do this again? “It's fair to say there were more debates on this than any other thing we've done before and several points where we didn't see eye to eye,” says Jones, with a grin to Brooker. “We didn't even agree what an ending actually was,” Brooker chips in. “It was incredibly hard, but I'd do it again if the story was right.”

IRONICALLY, THE TEAM may be sitting on a brand-new technological fear. Every way you play Bandersnatch is monitored by Netflix to understand what you want from its content as well as understand real-world decisions like product preference, musical taste and engagement with human behaviour.

The breakfast cereal scene, viewers have pointed out, could be a rehearsal for product placement, while choices of music could pave the way to deals with Spotify or Apple Music. Some industry observers have imagined Netflix designing entire shows around a lucrative contract to determine teenagers' preferences. Now that definitely sounds like a disturbing episode of Black Mirror. STEPHEN ARMSTRONG

Sisters in arms

INTERVIEW BY LAURA CRAIK

IN THE HISTORY books, they are cast as bitter rivals. How infinitely more interesting, though, to see Mary, Queen of Scots and her cousin, Elizabeth I, portrayed as wary friends; divided by religion but bound by blood, duty, burden and endless communications delivered on scrolls, because WhatsApp didn't exist in the 1580s.

Directed by Josie Rourke and adapted by Beau "House of Cards" Willimon, the new film Mary Queen of Scots is based on John Guy's biography Queen of Scots: the True Life of Mary Stuart, and will be catnip to anyone who loves period costume dramas, rugged Scottish scenery, political machinations and tales of sexual betrayal.

In a stellar cast that includes David Tennant as John Knox, Martin Compston as the Earl of Bothwell and Adrian Lester as Lord Randolph, the film belongs wholeheartedly to the queens, played beautifully by Saoirse Ronan (Mary) and Margot Robbie, whose fragile, pock-marked Elizabeth makes you weep for how long the 28-year-old beauty must have spent in hair and make-up to be thus transformed.

Although Ronan and Robbie dominate the film, they only share one scene together – a wonderful one, but let's not spoil its impact here. So what was it like working together? Corsets at dawn? Bitter rivalry, because they're super-talented 20-something women who were both nominated for best actress at the 2018 Oscars, ergo that's the expected narrative?

"It was awful," says Robbie.

"It was hideous," says Ronan. "I hate her."

"I can't bear to look at her any longer," laughs Robbie. "No... it was honestly the main reason I signed on, so I could work with Saoirse. Seriously."

"I knew you were brilliant," says Ronan. "We had met each other briefly a year and a half before, and she was just sound. And that's the most important thing. What I find most admirable about Margot is that the characters that we know her for are so different to her, whether it's Elizabeth, who's really reserved, or Tonya [Harding, the US figure skater], or her character in Wolf of Wall Street. Anyone who has that courage is wonderful to watch." She looks over at Robbie with one eyebrow raised. "What are you going to say about me now?"

"Honestly, that's so nice, I don't know how to ▷

The woman on the right has blonde hair pulled back and is wearing a light blue, button-up, short-sleeved top with a peplum hem and light blue jeans. She has her arm around the woman on the left. The lighting is soft, highlighting their faces and the textures of their clothing and the surrounding flowers.

‘How dare an old guy dictate what I can and can’t do with my own body’

MARGOT ROBBIE

◁ top it,” smiles Robbie, looking bashful.

“Yes, she’s really ni-ice,” mocks Ronan.

“No, but she is,” laughs Robbie. “And more than that, she is all the things that Mary is; charismatic and warm and generous of spirit and brave and fierce and funny and intelligent. All those things that Mary hasn’t been presented as throughout history, we finally get to see in this film, and that’s Saoirse. When she enters a room, you want to gravitate that way, because she is magnetic. There is a sense of authenticity when you see Saoirse play Mary. She has a presence.”

THAT PRESENCE HAS been felt in Ronan’s previous films, such as Lady Bird (Sat/Wed Sky Select), for which she was nominated for an Oscar and won a Golden Globe, and Brooklyn, the adaptation of Colm Toibin’s novel about a young Irish woman emigrating to the United States, which reflected the actor’s own family life: her Irish parents moved to New York in the 1980s, where she was born, before returning to Ireland to raise her. That presence was there even in her breakthrough role in Atonement (Sat Sky Drama) in 2007, which also garnered Ronan, then 13, an Oscar nomination.

Robbie took Hollywood by storm in 2013 when she co-starred in The Wolf of Wall Street with Leonardo DiCaprio with only a couple of film credits to her name, having begun her career in her native Australia in Neighbours. Since then she’s played Harley Quinn in superhero film Suicide Squad and co-founded a production company, which made 2017’s I, Tonya.

Both actors are equally effusive about working with first-time director Josie Rourke, who has been artistic director of London’s Donmar Warehouse since 2012, though her tenure will end in March this year. “She’s amazing,” says Robbie. “And it was such an incredible decision on [production company] Working Title’s part to really put their money where their mouth is. They didn’t just say: ‘I want to support women in film’ and then give her a tiny budget indie film, which is what female directors tend to get given. They said: ‘Here’s a big period piece.’”

“She’s obviously an incredibly accomplished director in the theatre world, and brought all that experience with her. She also has a way of making everything relatable. The themes explored in this film are so relevant today.”

Indeed they are, for it’s a rare period drama indeed that shows a female character having her period. The reality of women’s bodies is fully explored, with Rourke’s eye trained on such indignities as being laced in and out of corsets, giving birth and menstruating in a pre-tampon age. Whether a male director would have focused quite so unsparingly on the deceit, slut-shaming and abhorrent sexism Mary experienced (“We have a scourge upon our land. It is a woman with a crown,” says John Knox, neatly summing up the mood of the era) is open to debate.

PRODIGY
Saoirse Ronan in Lady Bird, which gave her a second Oscar nod; her first came ten years earlier for Atonement, below right

“Exploring the notion of a woman in power with a woman who is in power had a different meaning with Josie,” says Robbie. “A character who sacrificed certain things in their life in order to have a certain career is interesting to explore with another woman who has an incredible career. ‘What do you think you gave up in order to be here?’ is a conversation I couldn’t have really had with a male director.”

ITELL THEM I’m notorious within my incredulous family for hating history, but found myself loving the film because of the female gaze through which Mary’s story was told. “I don’t know if I’ve ever met someone who hates history,” says Ronan.

But that’s the thing, I explain: I don’t think I would have hated it, had it been more about women. All I remember from my history lessons are Picts, Celts, feuds and battles, with a brief appearance by Boudicca, who was painted as some kind of skittish psychopath.

Ronan nods. “I did love history, but even with Irish history, I’m only starting to learn now about Cumann na mBan, a group of women who supported the 1916 Rising. They’re these unsung heroes who literally went out and fought with the men and probably then cooked the dinner at night as well. Do you know what I mean? We were never taught about that at all.”

“I’m only really finding out the most fascinating things about history now that we have a production company,” agrees Robbie. “We’re finding these projects and I’m learning all these things. It’s like, ‘So why is this not in the history books?’ The things women did in the Second World War were incredible. We have a TV project [in development] about female codebreakers who shaved two years off the war. Never heard of any of them, or the women of the SOE [Special Operations Executive]. I would have loved to hear about that in class.”

The scenes with Mary’s courtiers are another of the film’s joys, shining a spotlight on the importance of female friendship in a male-dominated world. “It says an awful lot about who Mary was as a person, that she was like, ‘No, I want to just be with my mates and I want to be like everyone else,’” says Ronan. “She liked to have the craic, and she wanted to do it with her mates. They were with her for her whole life – to the very, very end.”

“My female friendship groups are honestly the best thing in my entire life,” echoes Robbie. “I’ve got my group of 16 girlfriends in Australia; we’ve been friends since we were five years old. Then I have my London girls, too.”

“I always feel bad for anyone who says they don’t have any female friends,” says Ronan.

Did they learn anything about themselves in playing queens? “Yes, I did,” says Ronan. “I think Mary and I are quite similar. One of the things that playing her really helped me with was getting to that stage as a person in their early 20s who was working a bit and having to make decisions that maybe aren’t going to make everyone around me happy, as an inherent people-pleaser. Being able to shake that off through playing her was really helpful; tapping into that vein of, ‘OK, I need to make a decision that’s right for me and it’s not going to keep all these people happy, but I have to follow through with it.’ That was a very new thing for me.”

‘The idea that women have to be “pure” drives me insane’

“I actually really struggled to find things in common with Elizabeth,” says Robbie, who’s been nominated for a Bafta for the role. “I definitely found empathy [for her], but I react in very different ways. Probably I’m more like Mary, to be honest.”

One of the hardest things to watch was Elizabeth’s struggles in the face of the court pressuring her to produce an heir. “It made me really angry,” says Robbie. “How dare some old guy dictate what I can and can’t do when it comes to motherhood or my own body? Unfortunately, it’s a conversation we’re still having. I got married [to assistant director Tom Ackerley, in 2016], and the first question in almost every interview is, ‘Babies? When are you having one?’ I’m so angry that there’s this social contract. You’re married, now have a baby. Don’t presume. I’ll do what I’m going to do.”

“Only women get asked that when they get married,” adds Ronan. “Men don’t.”

That the film explores the idea of sex as enjoyable for women, rather than something to be endured in order to produce an heir, is another refreshing change.

“What Mary enjoyed during her reign,” says Ronan, “was exactly the kind of thing that a man would be expected to enjoy: lovers, drink and music. Yet she needed to retain this sort of pure image. I think that’s still a notion that a lot of men have now, where women have to be this pure thing. That drives me insane. I love that you see Mary just go, ‘Yes, all right – give me what I want.’”

RONAN (NOW 24) started acting at the age of nine; Robbie (now 28), at 17. Has there been a positive change in the scripts they’ve been offered since starting out? “In the last few years, it’s been getting better,” says Ronan. “But there’s been a great deal of luck. When you get to 18, it’s harder to find roles, because people don’t know what to do with you. You’re not a grown woman, but you’re not a child either, and there are no roles being written for you. So I found it very tough around that age, when I’d been so used to getting these great, well-written child roles. Even Lady Bird is written as a 17-year-old girl. There were no Lady Birds around when I was 17.”

It’s this dearth of strong female roles that led Robbie to set up her own production company. “I wasn’t seeing many scripts where I wanted to play the female role – I always wanted to play the male role. The female roles are always a catalyst for the male story, and that’s unsatisfying. So I was like, ‘Well, we’ll start making our own films, because we can’t just sit around for ever and wait for them to come along.’”

That the second film she made was I, Tonya only bodes well for Robbie’s future as a producer. “No one was going to give me that role,” she says. “I don’t even know if anyone was going to make that script. So you have to start a production company and do it.”

It was just announced that the next project she is taking on with her company LuckyChap Entertainment is a live-action film about Barbie.

“Are you doing Barbie?” exclaims Ronan. “F yes! Maybe I can be your weird friend...”

Oh yes, I say. You have to work together again. “We need to be in more than one scene together next time,” says Ronan.

“I’m going to make it my life’s mission,” says Robbie.

HAPPY DAYS
John Peel and David "Kid" Jensen presenting TOTP in 1983. Below:
Peel with Janice Long on Christmas Day 1985

Pop went Peel

As BBC4 airs John Peel's final 1980s' Top of the Pops
Lee Thompson meets his two presenting cohorts

DAVID JENSEN

WE HAD A lot of fun doing Top of the Pops together. Happy days indeed. John Peel was naturally very shy, but doing TOTP brought him out of his shell a bit. As it did me. I remember having a conversation with producer Michael Hurll, who wanted to start doubling up DJs on the programme. He asked me if I'd like to work with John. I said I'd love to, but Michael wasn't sure that John would be keen on doing it. People often forget he was a big pop fan. He didn't talk about it much on the radio because he'd carved a niche for himself as the bearer of new music, new sounds, cultures

'We went on live TV wearing just a sheet, naked underneath' and all sorts of stuff. He used to love Eurovision, for example. And he particularly loved Sheena Easton and Clare Grogan from Altered Images.

Working with John at TOTP was never contrived – it was just a lot of laughs. He had a great sense of humour, sometimes to devastating effect. Coming into that studio was like entering a New Year's Eve party every week. We decided we'd start dressing up for every programme. One time we were the Blues Brothers, another we were cowboys. The make-up department thought they'd got their own back one week when Peel wanted to be a gladiator or some such Roman character. We went to our shared dressing room, and up on the hooks on the wall was one sheet each, enough to create a toga. The girls were giggling outside as we tried them on, but were aghast when we went on live TV wearing just that sheet and naked underneath.

I don't think Michael was always happy about Peel being irreverent. We were given scripts only to show us the actual chart numbers. The rest of the links were entirely up to us. One time when Queen were on the chart in 1985, Peel referred to them as "the Sun City boys", as they'd controversially played the famous "whites-only" resort in South Africa. Another time he introduced David Grant, who was wearing an odd costume, with, "And now, wearing a lovely fire hydrant..." Or Toto as "those singing accountants". He was a bit of a rascal, and could be very sarcastic.

JANICE LONG

JOHN LOVED POP. He always said that one of the first records he'd play at a party was Don't Leave Me This Way by the Communards. The whole thing about doing TOTP was that some weeks you'd get dodgy bands you weren't interested in, but in others you'd be there with the Smiths, Echo and the Bunnymen, the Cult... whoever. When it was those, we'd be really excited. Quite often, we'd get our mates into the show. Peel would always put the Wedding Present lead singer Dave Gedge on the guest list. And he'd often turn up.

We used to arrive at 11am – they were really long days. But we especially loved it when the shows were going out live. We generally didn't do retakes anyway, but the live shows really got the adrenaline flowing. We felt like we were the presenters who were constantly on the naughty step, but Michael Hurll didn't mind if the BBC switchboard got complaints. He secretly rather

'I still miss working with John. We filled the day giggling' liked that, having us push things. When Pete Dinklage was on once, John said, "If that doesn't make number one, I'll come round and break wind in your kitchen," and the apparent viewer complaint was that Peel was disgusting and I was irresponsible for falling about laughing.

I still miss working with John. The day was always filled with us giggling and chatting. I remember him saying to me, "Do you know what, if I ran Radio 1 I'd get rid of everybody. Apart from you and me, of course. And Bruno Brookes. I'd put him on reception."

Netball is booming – and it's one sport that's all about women

Netball: Quad Series Sat 4.15pm, 6.30pm, Sun 3.15pm, 5.45pm Sky Sports Arena/Mix

MOST OF THE sports that women play were invented by men, to be played by men, and are predominantly run by men. In many of them, women had a long, hard struggle just to take part. And in most of them, the women's version of the game has been regarded as secondary to the men's.

Times are a-changing: the evidence is all around us. Nonetheless, the men's football World Cup remains a bigger deal than the women's football World Cup. But netball is different. It was invented in the 1890s by Martina Bergman Osterberg, who adapted a new-fangled American game called basketball for her London college. The rules were drafted to make the sport acceptable for female participation. It represented not an old form of restraint, but a new kind of freedom.

'Once a way of filling airtime, netball has become a crowd-pleaser'

And now, as England, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa complete their international Quad Series in London, netball has never been bigger, having made explosive advances in the UK last year when England scored an unforgettable underdog victory over Australia to win the gold medal at the Commonwealth Games in April. The last few seconds of the match became an instant national treasure: Helen Housby, the goal shooter, missed the shot for victory but won a penalty. With one second to go, she scored – England won 52–51, and scenes of madness and joy ensued.

This victory was voted Greatest Sporting Moment of the Year at the BBC Sports Personality of the Year awards in December – against some seriously stiff competition, including the England men's football team finally winning a penalty shootout at the World Cup. So yes, it's correct to assume that this netball victory took the sport far beyond the notice of the sport's insiders.

There's a boom in participation, too. Netball England claim that more than a million women play netball every week. There is big funding from Sport England. The Netball Superleague is packing them in: crowds of 7,000 are not exceptional. The sport has become a staple of satellite television. What was perhaps seen at first as a way of filling up hours of airtime has become a serious crowd-pleaser.

The sport is even beginning to get some coverage in the sports pages of national newspapers, where it has lagged way behind the number of reports on men's (and women's) football, rugby and cricket, largely because men don't play netball, but men (mostly) decide what goes into the sports pages.

Netball is good to

watch, too. I covered an international at London's Wembley Arena back in the 1980s and wondered then if the sport would ever break out of its niche. Sure, it was fast and athletic and the rhythm of the action was pleasing on the eye – but who knew, apart from netballers themselves?

NOW, WITH THE ever-increasing demand for live sporting action on television, everyone knows. As England international Serena Guthrie said recently, "It's really a cool time to be a netballer in this country."

And perhaps the heart of the matter is that netball remains a women's sport through and through. Sure, men play, and there are mixed teams at the recreational level – but the sport is mainly about women, and women run it as well as play it. Elite netball is all about women.

The sport is played by 20 million women in 80 countries and there is fancy talk about it becoming an Olympic sport, which remains a fair way off yet – not least because there are few men pushing the cause.

But netball is growing at a pace faster than it has known in its history. It has always been a sport about athleticism – and perhaps even more than that, freedom.

Life's about what you can do, not what you can't Even during a tough couple of years, Debbie McGee has always thrived on pushing herself to the limit – and at 60, she's only just getting started...

My motto is use it or lose it," laughs Debbie McGee when asked how she maintains her active lifestyle. "Mum and Dad always told me that life is about what you can do, not what you can't."

Enjoying a busier schedule than ever following her 2017 stint on Strictly Come Dancing (she and Giovanni Pernice were finalists), she has come to place a real importance on recovering the right way.

It's clear that age really is just a number to Debbie: "Even with the cardio and all the lifts in Strictly I never once thought, 'I'm too old to do this.'"

The TV, stage and radio performer will, for many of us, be forever known as "the lovely Debbie McGee", thanks to her on-screen partnership with her husband of 28 years, the magician Paul Daniels. However, following Paul's death in March 2016, Debbie admits she had to rethink her priorities.

"I'm just very aware that life is short," says Debbie when discussing her life and her recent experience with Meritene Strength & Vitality shakes and soups. "I'm still probably working too much though, because I love it!"

Here Debbie discusses recovering from the strains of showbiz, spending time with her mum Lillian, 81, and how she really felt about her Giovanni dancing with Faye Tozer in last year's Strictly...

Congratulations on turning 60, Debbie.

Do you feel as young as you look?

Thank you. I've come from parents who never gave in to age. Even now Mum has a little bit of arthritis, but it doesn't stop her. She still goes jiving every Saturday! When I started on Strictly Come Dancing I was fit, but by the time I had finished the show I was incredibly fit.

Did you enjoy the most recent series?

I thought the standard was incredible – the Blackpool show was the most impressive I've seen. I felt sorry for those contestants with no experience in performing or dancing.

Was it hard watching Giovanni dance with Faye?

No, I loved watching them. Faye was so good. Before I finished Strictly, all the pros told me I'd feel jealous of Giovanni's next partner. If I wasn't still in touch with Giovanni I might be feeling a bit left out, but we're still good mates.

'By the end of Strictly I was exhausted. I wish I'd known about Meritene'

You credited Strictly with helping you after Paul's death. How has your outlook on life changed since losing your husband?

I don't think my outlook has changed since I lost Paul, in that I'm still a very positive person. But I do think my priorities have changed a little. I'm making more time to see my mum, things like that.

The whole Strictly process must have been tiring. Were there times when you felt run-down?

Definitely. During the show we'd be doing 16-hour days and I often didn't get time to eat. I'd be doing interviews before rehearsals and filming It Takes Two in the evening. By the end of the series I was completely exhausted. I wish I'd known about Meritene shakes and soups then as they are great when you don't feel like getting up and dancing!

Speaking of which, how have you been using Meritene Strength & Vitality's shakes?

In the mornings when I'm in a rush I'll have one as part of my breakfast, or I'll have one if I feel tired or hungry late in the afternoon. It's good to know it's helping me to get the best possible recovery with the right vitamins and nutrients, like iron, without taking pills. They're convenient and tasty, too.

How did you enjoy throwing yourself into panto, with the role of the Fairy Godmother in Sleeping Beauty?

Pantomime was so exciting and I had an amazing time. Yes it was tiring, but I'd tried Meritene while I was on holiday, before rehearsals started. I'd been feeling a bit run-down beforehand, but when I came back I couldn't wait to get started.

You also appeared on Celebrity MasterChef in 2017. Do you use Meritene Strength & Vitality when cooking?

Definitely. The soup gives you a great basic flavour with lots of good nutritious things in it. The other night when I got back from holiday, I was tired and didn't feel like cooking. I did a Meritene soup with loads of extra veg in it and then I added some noodles, which was delicious and it made me feel so much better.

It's now a year on from Strictly – have you kept dancing?

Well, I've bobbed in and out of Giovanni's tour. I did some tap-dancing in the panto, and I hadn't tapped since I can't remember when! I just love it. This year, I think I'm going to find some more ballroom-based classes in my area, because I do miss doing it. It would be a shame to lose what I've learnt.

Steve Carell on drugs, parenting and swapping laughs for drama

PARENTING IS TOUGH, and while put-upon patriarchs feature in countless fun-filled comedies, dramas that focus on the serious struggles many face are thinner on the ground.

Steve Carell's dad roles are few and far between. There's reformed supervillain Gru adopting three orphans in the Despicable Me animations, a widower finding love in Dan in Real Life and a satellite parent to a wannabe pageant princess in Little Miss Sunshine.

But Belgian director Felix van Groeningen's Beautiful Boy (in cinemas from Friday 18 January) finds Carell navigating harder terrain, as a father whose son is addicted to methamphetamine. Based on the books by New York Times writer David Sheff and his son Nic (played here by Bafta-nominated Timothée Chalamet), it's a bleak journey littered with false hope and broken promises, but with redemption still in reach.

For Carell, 56, the script appealed because it helped open up a dialogue between himself and his wife – writer and comedian Nancy Walls – and his own teenagers, Annie (born in 2001) and Johnny (2004).

"I was very moved by what both David and Nic went through," he says when we meet in London. He's bespectacled, grey-haired and bearded, wearing a suit of a strikingly similar grey. "The week before we started shooting, my son – who was around 12 at the time – asked me a question about whether marijuana was a gateway drug. I wasn't expecting to have 'that talk' with him while he was so young.

"It pleased me, though, to hear that his school was addressing those things, and actually using words like 'gateway'. It certainly wasn't on any curriculum when I was his age. That made it all the more relevant for me, and I was thrilled when both my kids asked to go to the premiere of the movie, the first they'd ever gone to that wasn't animation and had more adult content."

Elevated to A-list status following his starring role as Michael Scott in the American version of The Office, which ran for 149 episodes between 2005 and 2013, Carell has come face to face with addiction while climbing the showbiz ladder. Be it with fellow comics on the stand-up circuit knocked back by rejection, or as a coping mechanism once fame comes calling, he stresses that drug issues are by no means only the domain of the entertainment industry.

"I've definitely been witness to the problems they cause. I think most people have, and that's part of why I wanted to do this film. It's how a lot of people choose to deal with the pressure, but it's everywhere. Showbusiness by no means has a monopoly on drugs problems. They're in every walk of life. It's an epidemic.

"I know it's a story that's been told before many times, but I think this telling of it is very honest, very intimate, and totally without sensation."

There's nothing sensational in the scene where David takes drugs himself, snorting meth from his desk at home in an attempt to understand its allure for his son. It's perhaps the most underplayed "trip" in cinema history. "Life is mundane in so many ways, even during the highs and lows, so it would have been disingenuous to overdramatise it," argues Carell. "Yes, David took drugs, but all he ended up doing was pacing the room and tidying his desk. That's how it is for a lot of people. It can eat away at you from the inside. It doubles back on you... Just when you think it's going to be OK, you realise it's not going to be OK."

BEAUTIFUL BOY IS one of three films Carell has opening this month in the UK. The other two are amnesiac drama Welcome to Marwen, directed by Robert Zemeckis (out now), and the political satire Vice, in which he's re-teamed with Anchorman director Adam McKay to play former US Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld opposite Christian Bale's (Golden Globe-winning)

Dick Cheney (25 January). Has he turned his back on comedy? Not the case, he stresses.

"I love doing comedy – I get a real kick out of it, but for one reason or another I haven't done one for a while. The best offers I've had lately have been serious roles; Foxcatcher [about a murderous sports coach] was a complete surprise... I honestly thought [director] Bennett Miller had sent me the script by mistake."

Does he subscribe to the theory that comedians often excel in serious roles because part of their make-up is the ability to play funny scenes "straight"?

"I'm really not sure about that, but I think what a lot of comedians have is discipline, a determination to put across what can be a truly outlandish situation without ruining the take by laughing! I've never really looked into it any deeper than that. What I try to do, whether it's a comic role or a serious role, is base it in some sort of humanity, to convince the viewer that the person exists in one world or another... that what you see on the screen is, for want of a better word, believable.

"But I haven't forsaken comedy, far from it. For one thing, I'm waiting on a script for the next Despicable Me. I've got teenage kids, and Gru's helping me put them through college."

The future of film

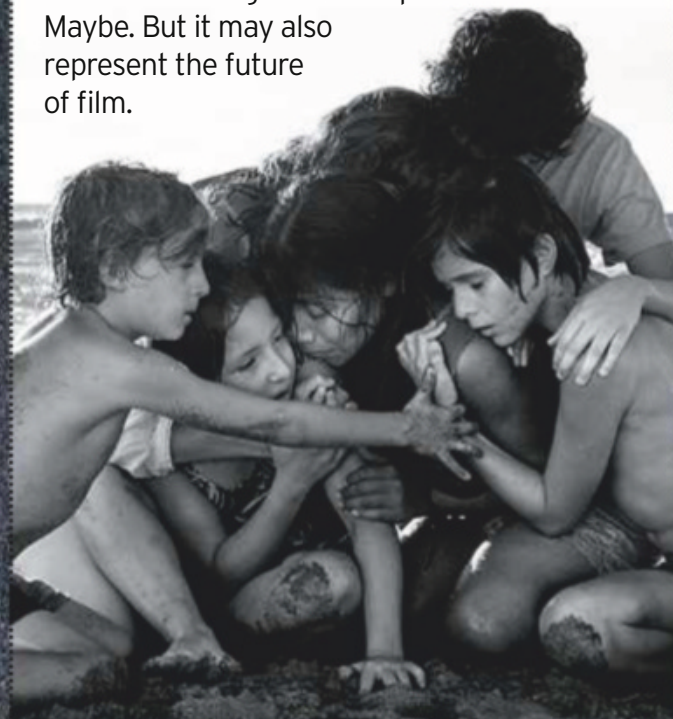

This awards season, something potentially seismic is happening. It isn't just that a film "not in the English language" is being considered for prizes other than in the best foreign-language film category. That's not unprecedented. What's different about Roma – an elegant, moving, personal homage to early-70s Mexico City from writer/director Alfonso Cuarón – is more prosaic: its delivery method.

After an August premiere in Venice and a bank of other festival screenings, Roma received a limited cinema run and on 14 December started streaming on Netflix. With the subscription service increasingly modelling itself after a Hollywood studio of the golden age, the revolution starts here.

Given a prevailing wind come the Oscar nominations on 22 January (see page 90), it's feasible, even likely, that a film that is already on TV could win best picture. If it does, then Hollywood's house of cards may wobble, and who knows what will happen thereafter? What might once have been marginalised as an arthouse film is on Netflix right now (you pay from £5.99 a month for the wonderful pleasure of seeing it, and hundreds of others).

These are interesting times for old-fashioned armchair cineastes and IT junkies alike. Access to the movies is changing, and fast. 2008 Oscars host Jon Stewart's gag about watching Lawrence of Arabia on his iPhone is no longer funny.

Roma won two Golden Globes at the first big awards of the new year and has clocked up seven nominations at the Baftas. Whatever the format, it's a truly stunning piece of work, shot in rich black and white. Its focus is diligent but fallible housekeeper Cleo (Yalitza Aparicio), always in the frame as Cuarón's camera glides through the events of her charges' lives: a forest fire, a tumultuous beach excursion (below) and a department store during a near-riot. A high-class soap? Maybe. But it may also represent the future of film.

DID YOU KNOW?

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit ★★★
9.00-11.00pm C4 12

ACTION THRILLER I don't mind admitting that I get Jack Ryan and Jack Reacher mixed up: both are tough men written by novelists who can thank God for airport bookshops. Ryan, a CIA analyst, was invented by Tom Clancy; Reacher, an ex-military cop, is the creation of Lee Child. While the latter has been played solely by Tom Cruise, Chris Pine became the fourth to star as Ryan on screen (preceded by Alec Baldwin, Harrison Ford and Ben Affleck, and followed by John Krasinski in the Amazon TV series). Shadow Recruit is directed by Kenneth Branagh, who co-stars as a Russian oligarch alongside Keira Knightley, playing an American medical student. Ten years after an accident in Afghanistan, Ryan is working under cover for the CIA as a Wall Street trader. Uncovering a "very scary scenario" involving terrorists, Ryan finds time to propose to Knightley, lie to her and save the world from a base in Moscow. CIA chief Kevin Costner concludes, "This is geopolitics, not couples therapy." It's dark and glamorous and Pine is fine, but it's no Jack Reacher. I think... (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

DAYTIME

Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix/Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince ★★★
3.15-9.00pm ITV2 12

FANTASY If you didn't finish the saga last week, here's your chance to catch the final four films, with a double bill today and tomorrow. The magic is still there but the mood becomes increasingly dark in the fifth and sixth episodes, as Harry (Daniel Radcliffe) tries to convince the wizarding community of the re-emergence of Lord Voldemort (Ralph Fiennes). The series continues to gorge itself on British acting talent, with Imelda Staunton's prim but poisonous Dolores Umbridge stealing the show in The Order of the Phoenix, while the Half-Blood Prince introduces Jim Broadbent as dithering potions professor Horace Slughorn. JH (US/UK 2007 violence, HD)

No Highway in the Sky ★★★
4.00-5.55pm Talking Pictures TV PG

THRILLER James Stewart is in his best absent-minded professor mode as a scientist whose obstinacy prevents a series of flying disasters in this watchable thriller. Stewart might not be able to find his own front door, but he can confidently predict metal fatigue in a new type of British aircraft. Naturally, he's branded a loon. Marlene Dietrich has an inflated part as a film star who believes in him, along with Glynis Johns as a friendly stewardess. AE (UK 1951, BW)

EVENING

The Huntsman: Winter's War ★★★
9.00-11.15pm Film4 12

FANTASY Chris Hemsworth is smooth as ever in this Snow White and the Huntsman spin-off. Owing to Kristen Stewart's absence, it's left to Jessica Chastain and Emily Blunt to deliver as a warrior and Ice Queen, respectively, while Charlize Theron also returns as the fabulously evil Ravenna. Director Cedric Nicolas-Troyan leads us on a slightly uneven ramble and needs to paper over the cracks. Fortunately, he's a master of visual effects (Oscar-nominated for the first film) and again produces a cool, glittering spectacle. He lightens the gloom further with comic turns from Rob Brydon, Nick Frost and Sheridan Smith as some of the dwarfs. SP (US 2016, violence, some swearing, HD)

Rob Roy ★★★★★
9.00-11.50pm Sony Movie Channel 15

ADVENTURE Mel Gibson may have grabbed the Oscar glory for Braveheart, but this rip-snorting early-18th-century tartan romp is a lot more fun. Liam Neeson plays the principled Robert MacGregor, who becomes reluctant rebel Rob Roy when his money is stolen and his wife, Jessica Lange, is raped by evil English aristocrat Tim Roth. Neeson is suitably heroic, but Roth is a diabolical delight, stealing every scene in which he appears. Scottish-born director Michael Caton-Jones makes striking use of the rugged locations and stages the action with robust glee – the duel between Neeson and Roth is a highlight. JF (US 1995, violence, swearing, a sex scene)

Philadelphia ★★★★★
9.00-11.35pm Paramount Network 12

DRAMA This was the first major Hollywood movie about Aids, and it won Tom Hanks his first best actor Oscar. He plays gay lawyer Andrew Beckett, who takes his powerful employers to court for sacking him after they discover he is suffering from an Aids-related illness. The company bigwigs (including Jason Robards in a reptilian portrayal of intolerance) claim he was dismissed for incompetence. Beckett's counsel is Joe Miller (Denzel Washington), whose homophobia is counter-balanced by his nose for a good case and essential sense of fair play. In a tour-de-force performance, Hanks portrays the ravaged, dying Beckett as a disabled everyman whose life has lessons for all of us. TH (US 1993, some swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Stockholm My Love ★★★
11.00pm-12.25am BBC2 PG

DRAMA Following homages to Tirana (Here Be Dragons) and Belfast (I Am Belfast), Mark Cousins descends on Stockholm for this experimental melding of drama and documentary. Singer Neneh Cherry takes centre stage as the architect bunking off from a lecture in order to commune with the spirit of her African immigrant father while wandering around favourite haunts in the Swedish capital (Cherry's actual birthplace). Christopher Doyle's camerawork brings the city to beguiling life, while Cousins makes intriguing use of music by composer Franz Berwald, Abba's Benny Andersson and Cherry herself to capture its shifting moods. DP (UK/Swe 2016, HD)

Identity Thief ★★
11.00pm-1.05am C4 15

COMEDY Mild-mannered accountant Jason Bateman heads to Florida to confront the woman who's been running up huge bills after stealing his identity in this raucous road movie. However, when Bateman attempts to drag loud-mouthed party girl Melissa McCarthy back to face justice, the subsequent trip leads to all manner of high jinks. Bateman is, to all intents and purposes, the straight man here, but McCarthy's larger-than-life felon often veers towards the overbearing. TeS (US/Jpn 2013, swearing, some violence, HD)

Ill Manors ★★★★★
12.20-2.15am BBC1 18

DRAMA Ben Drew, otherwise known as rapper Plan B, turned writer/director for this shocking and gritty urban drama that focuses on the criminal underclass in east London. Riz Ahmed stars as a young man trying to find his biological mother and escape his brutal and brutalising environment. Punctuating the film with songs that act as both backstories and narration, Drew delivers a bleak but thought-provoking depiction of "broken Britain", with outstanding performances across the board. TeS (UK 2012, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Laura ★★★★★ 6.20-7.45am BBC2 PG

FILM NOIR You'll have to forgive me if I confess that when I first came across Otto Preminger's classic 1944 noir on TV as a boy, I surmised from the credits that Gene Tierney was the male lead and Dana Andrews the femme fatale. (I'm sure those of you who have braved the early dawn to watch this will know it's the other way around.) I've no doubt that I found the story (based on Vera Caspary's novel) just as confusing, with Tierney's Laura, a career woman with "innate breeding", already dead at the start of the film. Andrews is the square-jawed, trench-coated detective assigned to the case who goes all obsessive on us, and he's never far away from a venetian blind or a plume of cigarette smoke, or indeed Laura's serpentine playboy fiancé, played by Vincent Price.

The Bad and the Beautiful composer David Raksin provides a torrid score, whose theme became a hit record and a jazz standard. The film earned cinematographer Joseph LaShelle his only Oscar, while Preminger picked up a nomination. (US 1944, BW, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

The painting of Laura that bewitches Dana Andrews also pops up in the films On the Riviera (1951) and Woman's World (1954)

DAYTIME

Snoopy and Charlie Brown: the Peanuts Movie ★★★★★ 2.50-4.30pm C4 U

COMEDY Sixty-five years after American cartoonist Charles M Schulz first created Charlie Brown and the rest of the Peanuts pack, and 35 years since the most recent feature release, they returned to our screens with this cute and charmingly computer-generated outing. There's a plot of sorts, which has Charlie Brown bidding to woo the town's new "red-haired girl". But it's really just a framework for some classic and beautifully rendered Peanuts scenarios, with determined but luckless Charlie as the "face of failure", Lucy as the queen of crabbiness, and Snoopy as the supreme fantasist, imagining he's a World War One flying ace. DA (US 2015, HD)

Tangled ★★★★★ 4.30-6.30pm C4 PG

ADVENTURE Disney's deft spin on the fairy tale Rapunzel is a resounding success. Mandy Moore plays the girl who was kidnapped from her royal parents as a baby and trapped in a tower by Mother Gothel (Donna Murphy) so that she could use the princess's long, golden magical hair to stay forever young. Flynn Rider (Zachary Levi) is a handsome and cocksure thief who provides the sassy royal with a possible escape route. Their ensuing adventures are great fun, Rapunzel's multitasking flowing tresses are used to great effect in lively action sequences, and there are some beautifully uplifting moments, such as a spectacular scene of floating lanterns. With its polished storytelling, witty scripting and relateable emotions, this is a smart, snappy and sparkling tale that will appeal to adults as well as children. AJ (US 2010, HD)

EVENING

Edward Scissorhands ★★★★★ 6.50-9.00pm E4 PG

FANTASY This bewitchingly oddball "Beauty and the Beast" fairy tale from director Tim Burton is a superlative masterpiece and one of the best fantasy films ever made. Its haunting power, exquisite charm and dark romance are a match for the spellbinding work of Hans Christian Andersen, while Johnny Depp's sensitive performance as scientist Vincent Price's "Punkenstein" creation is a revelation. Humanoid Edward's inability to touch the things he loves because of his razor-sharp fingers makes for potent symbolism of the highest mythic order. The finale packs an unforgettable emotional wallop, assisted by Danny Elfman's magical score. AJ (US 1990, edited for violence, language, HD)

Horrible Bosses 2 ★★★

9.00-11.10pm C5 15

COMEDY Jason Bateman, Jason Sudeikis and Charlie Day decide to be their own bosses in this workmanlike sequel to the 2011 comedy. The story sees the trio forced into bankruptcy by greedy businessman Christoph Waltz, and then decide to kidnap his son (Chris Pine). The laughs come off the conveyor belt at a steady rate, but they're of varying quality. Director/co-writer Sean Anders lets the leading trio pull up the slack with their improvised bickering, and occasionally gifts them a decent gag. If the comedy isn't as dark as the first film aspired to be, it's at least more even in tone. SP (US 2014, swearing, some violence, a sex scene, brief nudity, HD)

I Am Heath Ledger ★★★★★

9.00-11.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Growing up in Perth, Australia, in the early 1980s, Heath Ledger stuck stars on his bedroom ceiling to remind him where he was headed. This hagiographic but frank biography of the doomed actor presents him as a force of nature who, friends and family attest, "had this light around him". Having oversimplified his early career, the film patiently plots Ledger's transformation from teen star to mature, award-winning actor. As with the similarly home-movie-filled Amy, the imminence of an early death (from "combined drug intoxication" at the age of 28) renders even the positive energy tragic. It's a sad story, but well told by those that knew him. AC (Can 2017, HD)

The Commune ★★★★★

10.00-11.45pm BBC4 15

DRAMA Set in the 1970s, this intimate drama from director Thomas Vinterberg (Far from the Madding Crowd) offers a poignant study of a marriage in decline. To share the costs of his inherited mansion, lecturer Erik (Ulrich Thomsen) and his TV presenter wife Anna (Trine Dyrholm) invite other people to come and live with them. The idea is Anna's, hoping to bring some excitement into her life, but it backfires when Erik falls in love with one of his female students and brings her home. In other hands, it could easily be a pious period piece, but this isn't the story of a social experiment gone wrong. On the contrary, the commune itself seems to thrive, serving as a Greek chorus of sorts as Erik and Anna wilfully sabotage their suburban utopia. DW (Den 2016, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Defiance ★★ 11.30pm-1.35am BBC2 15

WAR DRAMA Daniel Craig leads a Jewish resistance movement against the Nazis in this worthy wartime tale. Set in Belarus in 1941, the story follows the Bielski brothers – played by Craig, Liev Schreiber and Jamie Bell – as they flee the German invaders and local collaborators following the murder of their parents. Their forest hideout soon attracts more refugees and eventually becomes a launch pad for attacks on the enemy. Although based on real-life exploits, Edward Zwick's self-important film fails to rise above its clichéd sentimentality and overfamiliar battle images. AJ (US 2008, violence, swearing, HD)

Like Crazy ★★ 11.55pm-1.30am C4 12

ROMANCE This movie tries a little too hard to persuade the audience that they too should fall in love with its star-crossed protagonists. Felicity Jones plays Anna, a young English woman studying in LA. She fancies fellow student Jacob (Anton Yelchin) and before long they are in love. Their passion proves so all-consuming that she cannot bear to be parted from him and stays on in the US when her visa runs out. The problems this throws up should come as no surprise to someone of Anna's intelligence, and viewers may regard her actions as charming or simply stupid. BP (US 2011, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Mission: Impossible 2 ★★★★★
9.00-11.20pm Sky1 15

ACTION Funkily shortened to M:I-2 for marketing heft, the second Mission: Impossible saw original director Brian De Palma replaced with fashionable Hong Kong stylist John Woo. Highlights include a shaggy-haired Tom Cruise majestically emerging from a fireball on a motorbike and climbing up a vertical rock in Utah without a safety net. To aid your memory, it's the bioweapons one in Australia, with Dougray Scott as a somewhat approachable rogue agent and Thandie Newton as the bait to catch him. Boasting balletic action, a thundersome Hans Zimmer score and firefights aplenty, it also allowed turn-of-the-century Florida rock rappers Limp Bizkit to re-record Lalo Schiffrin's theme tune – a very year 2000 thing to do. (US 2000, violence, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
When shooting overran, Dougray Scott had to pull out of playing Wolverine in X-Men, leaving Hugh Jackman to cop the iconic role

Safe ★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Syfy 15

ACTION When it comes to his movie choices, Jason Statham clearly adheres to the old adage, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." So anyone hoping for a costume drama or weepie will be disappointed, but those who enjoy slick martial arts movies will be in their element. This time out, Statham plays a cage fighter who saves the life of 12-year-old maths genius Catherine Chan and finds himself pitted against the Russians, the Chinese and corrupt New York cops. It won't win any prizes for originality, but Safe plays to its star's considerable strengths and is a perfectly entertaining piece of action. LB (US 2011, violence, swearing, HD)

Royal Flash ★★
9.00-11.05pm Talking Pictures TV 15

ADVENTURE George MacDonald Fraser's series of novels featuring a grown-up Harry Flashman, the bully from Tom Brown's Schooldays, were fun, but the character didn't survive the transition to film. As Flashman, Malcolm McDowell lacks the necessary public school veneer and, despite effective support from the likes of Alan Bates and Oliver Reed, it's really hard to care what happens to him in this Prisoner of Zenda retread. Still, the women (Florinda Bolkan and Britt Ekland) are fun, the pace is relentless, and the period re-created with gusto; it just feels so disjointed and interminable. TS (UK 1975)

Unknown ★★★
10.05pm-12.25am ITV4 12

THRILLER American botanist Liam Neeson awakens after a Berlin car accident to find no one recognises him in this, the first of four movies the star has made with director Jaume Collet-Serra. Shifting between identity-theft mystery, geo-political intrigue and assassination conspiracy, this remains suspenseful even through some preposterous moments. Neeson is a likeable hero, January Jones is ice-cool as his Hitchcock-blond wife and Diane Kruger plays his taxi-driver saviour, while Bruno Ganz engages as the investigator trying to learn the truth behind the deception. AJ (Can/Fr/US/UK/Ger/Jpn 2011, violence, HD)

Gangster No 1 ★★★
11.25pm-1.30am Film4 18

THRILLER Bringing Film4's Capital of Crime season to a close, this gangster movie offers a very convincing portrait of pure evil. Malcolm McDowell is certainly more suited to his second role of the day, playing a London crime lord who, concerned that a rival is about to be released from prison, looks back on the 1960s antics of his gang. Flashbacks show him played by the impressive Paul Bettany, whose vicious behaviour leads to much blood-letting. This central section is stylistically superb, but the gratuitous violence and profanity also leave a very nasty taste in the mouth. LH (UK 2000, violence, swearing, drug abuse, brief nudity, HD)

Chaos ★★ 12.05-2.00am C5 15

ACTION A second helping of Jason Statham tonight, but here his usual frenzied athleticism takes a back seat. Instead, it's a weak American accent that dominates his nonchalant performance as a Seattle detective sent to negotiate following a botched bank raid. With hammy head criminal Wesley Snipes deliberately engineering chaos to hide his true aims, events become increasingly convoluted, leaving rookie Ryan Phillippe to do most of the puzzling over the case. Writer/director Tony Giglio is clearly striving for "clever and edgy", but achieves neither. SF (US/UK/Can 2006, violence, swearing, nudity)

The Butterfly Effect ★★★
9.00-11.30pm Syfy 15

SCI-FI This ambitious thriller is based on the concept that the smallest of events can have the hugest of consequences. Modesty Blaise ★★
9.00-11.20pm Talking Pictures TV 12

SPY SPOOF With its dizzy set designs and flamboyant costumes, Joseph Losey's misguided screen adaptation of Peter O'Donnell's seminal cartoon strip is a paean to the excesses of the 1960s. In a plot that makes virtually no sense, Monica Vitti is miscast as the female spy out to thwart effete arch fiend Dirk Bogarde. The latter has a ball in his silver wig and sunglasses, while Terence Stamp turns up somewhere as Modesty's bed-hopping accomplice. RS (UK 1966)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Don't Breathe ★★★★★
9.00-10.45pm Film4

HORROR Like all the best horrors, the taut, violent Don't Breathe is economic in length and bereft of stars – unless you count Avatar's Stephen Lang. Fede Alvarez (director of the 2013 Evil Dead remake and The Girl in the Spider's Web) constructs a solid chamber-piece scenario: three petty criminals case the Detroit joint of a blind Gulf War veteran with a view to robbing him, well, blind. Once inside, they are thwarted by the military-trained owner and an internal siege ensues, with a million dollars in cash the prize. Barred windows, a guard dog and creaky floorboards also combine to frustrate the thieves' getaway. It was a surprise hit and a sequel is already in the works. (US 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

ADVENTURE This winning tale from director/star Clint Eastwood is a fantasy set in the ultra-realistic world of Nasa. With an irresistible premise – elderly astronauts finally get the chance to go into orbit 40 years after being sidelined – this feel-good pleasure may be a slice of gung-ho wish-fulfilment, but Eastwood and his co-stars (Tommy Lee Jones, Donald Sutherland, James Garner) shine as the ageing spacemen, wheezing through basic training and navigating past feuds to prevent disaster. AJ (US/Aus 2000, nudity, edited for language, HD)

THRILLER Admirers of the BBC's 1979 TV series might think it foolish to make a film of John le Carré's novel in the first place, let alone give it to the Swedish director of cult horror Let the Right One In. But this adaptation features great performances and terrific Cold War detail, as retired spy George Smiley (Gary Oldman) is brought back to the secret service after the death of a colleague, who claimed to have evidence of a Russian mole. But who is it? Guessing the identity of the traitor from the suspects (Colin Firth and Toby Jones among them) remains a suitably gripping experience. DW (UK 2011, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Young Adult ★★★★★ 1.50-3.30am C4

COMEDY Mavis (Charlize Theron) returns to her Minnesota home town, intent on luring away her now happily married ex-beau (Patrick Wilson), in this caustic and quirky satire. There are daringly no redeeming qualities to Theron's odious former prom queen. Instead, razor-sharp put-downs and her fearlessly unrestrained performance provide car-crash entertainment. However, the film's heart is provided by Mavis's ex-classmate (a scene-stealing Patton Oswalt), who shows her a warmth and kindness she doesn't deserve. SF (US 2011, swearing, HD)

DRAMA Jack O'Connell gives a lion-hearted performance as Louis Zamperini, who competed in the 1936 Berlin Olympics and was later interned by the Japanese during the war. Doctor Zhivago ★★★★★
9.00pm-12.35am Sky Arts PG

EPIC This adaptation of Boris Pasternak's classic novel has all the sweep and stateliness that characterised David Lean's mastery of the epic. At its centre is the star-crossed romance between married physician and poet Omar Sharif and dressmaker's daughter Julie Christie, whose passionate encounters are played out against the backdrop of the Great War and the Russian Revolution. The ever-meticulous Lean succeeds in retaining the intimacy of the love story within the sweep of momentous historical events. DP (US 1965, edited for language, HD)

The Longest Week ★★
9.00-10.40pm AMC (Sky 192, BT 332) 15

COMEDY Writer/director Peter Glanz clearly set out to ape the sort of smart comedy that Woody Allen made in the 1970s, but he misses by a Manhattan mile. The stars provide its only salvation, with Jason Bateman as a rich dilettante, Olivia Wilde as the beauty-with-brains who injects meaning into his life, and Billy Crudup as the man who comes between the pair. If it were better written, it would be an admirable homage. But as it is, this can only be considered a misfiring curio. SvM (US 2014, sexual references)

The Rocky Horror Picture Show
★★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Talking Pictures TV 15

CULT MUSICAL The original stage musical, The Rocky Horror Show, has been touring somewhere in the world for the most part since its 1973 debut (its currently doing the rounds in Manchester). A bawdily, presciently bisexual paean to the B-movies of creator Richard O'Brien's youth, its colourful 1975 film incarnation – co-written by O'Brien and director Jim Sharman – continues to attract a parallel cult following. Midnight showings of the film, shot at Hammer's Bray studios, encourage audience participation and dressing up. But even in isolation, on TV, it makes for energetic, toe-tappingly timeless and enduringly wicked entertainment. A spicy cast includes Tim Curry's outrageous transvestite Dr Frank N Furter, sexually prim couple Susan Sarandon and Barry Bostwick, O'Brien's hunchbacked butler, Meat Loaf's cryogenic biker and model Peter Hinwood as the Aryan mute "monster", Rocky. Only the pathologically prudish will be able to resist. If you don't know how to do the Timewarp, don't worry, they'll walk you through the steps. (UK 1975, violence, swearing, nudity)

DID YOU KNOW?
The movie is regarded as the longest-running in the world – studio 20th Century Fox hasn't pulled it from cinemas since its release in 1975

Anne of the Indies ★★★★★
2.35-4.15pm Talking Pictures TV U

ADVENTURE Jean Peters stars here as the swashbuckling scourge of the Caribbean, surrounded by old reliables James Robertson-Justice, as the first mate, Herbert Marshall as the rummy doc, and Thomas Gomez as Blackbeard himself. Louis Jourdan plays the dashing Frenchman who is forced to lure the pirate queen into a treasure-baited trap. Director Jacques Tourneur is best known for horror classics such as Cat People, but he seems equally comfortable with this splendid seafaring tale. TS (US 1951)

Edge of Tomorrow ★★★★★
9.00-11.15pm SSTAR 12

SCI-FI Although it looks every inch the gung-ho alien-invasion blockbuster – a hardware trolley-dash through Starship Troopers, Battle Los Angeles and Pacific Rim – Edge of Tomorrow has a secret weapon: a time-loop device. Tom Cruise plays against type as a cowardly global PR for the Allies who's packed off to the front and is instantly killed, only to awake 24 hours previously to relive this apocalyptic Groundhog Day again and again. Director Doug Liman spins the reincarnation trope with thrilling momentum, while Emily Blunt channels her inner action hero as a special forces poster girl. AC (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

What Lies Beneath ★★★★★
9.00-11.35pm Paramount Network 15

THRILLER Harrison Ford and Michelle Pfeiffer star in this formulaic but highly enjoyable supernatural thriller from director Robert Zemeckis. Scientist Ford (in distinctly non-heroic mode) and his wife Pfeiffer have renovated their idyllic lakeside house, but their domestic bliss is disturbed when she starts seeing and hearing ghostly apparitions. A creaking cocktail of light suspense and implausible plotting that pushes every tried-and-tested scare button, this shocker is illuminated by Pfeiffer's believable performance as the traumatised wife. AJ (US 2000, violence, swearing, HD)

One More Time with Feeling
★★★★ 10.10pm-12.15am Sky Arts 15

DOCUMENTARY This portrait of an artist trying to articulate his grief goes against the grain of the average music documentary. In 2015, Nick Cave's domestic idyll was shattered and his creative muse crushed after one of his teenage sons fell to his death from cliffs near the family home in Brighton. This film is dedicated to Arthur Cave and his loss looms large over what is ostensibly a showcase for Skeleton Tree, Cave's 16th album with his band the Bad Seeds. But to call this simply a pop promo is to do it a disservice. Cave's ruminations on the trauma he and his family continue to experience are devastatingly raw, but there are moments of tenderness and levity to be had. For all its visual beauty and poeticism, this remains an aching sad eulogy. JH (UK/Fr 2016, swearing, BW/col, HD)

Shanghai Noon ★★★★★
11.50pm-1.35am BBC1 12

COMEDY Visually authentic yet with a deliciously anachronistic script, this is a hugely enjoyable combination of buddy comedy and adventure. Sent to the States to rescue a kidnapped princess, Jackie Chan's Imperial Palace guard hooks up with laconic outlaw Owen Wilson. Whether using antlers, sheriff's badges or horseshoes to prise himself out of a tight corner, Chan is pure slapstick poetry in motion. This fast-moving caper gently sends up a well-loved genre and provides a couple of hours of unrestrained entertainment. DP (US 2000, violence, swearing, HD)

American Ultra ★★★★★
12.40-2.15am C4 15

ACTION The stoner comedy gets a new, violent twist, as slacker Jesse Eisenberg is thrown headfirst into a battle with the government when he discovers he is an assassin whose memory has been wiped. Eisenberg wanders around in a haze of bewilderment, with an innocence it's hard not to like and capitalises on his great chemistry with Kristen Stewart. It may lose its thread towards the blood-spattered finale, but the two leads spearhead a fast, amiable comedy that never outstays its welcome. JL (US 2015, violence, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

MUSICAL DELIGHTS OF THE DANUBE WITH RUSSELL WATSON

Eight days from £1,699pp departing April 15, 2019

Once described as a performer who "sings like Pavarotti and entertains the audience like Sinatra," Russell Watson began his career making nuts and bolts before winning a local radio talent show that propelled him to stardom.

You can discover Russell's story and enjoy an exclusive performance from the man himself on this wonderful river cruise. Sailing from Budapest, you will cruise to Esztergom, Bratislava, Dürnstein, Melk and Salzburg before joining Russell in Vienna, a city steeped in musical history.

Making a fasterpiece

You can't create art against the clock, says Alison Graham

I THOUGHT AS I started watching The Victorian House of Arts and Crafts (Friday BBC2), this should be rather lovely. I like a bit of Arts and Crafts, a pinch of William De Morgan here, a smattering of William Morris there, along with a soupçon of John Ruskin.

The premise is interesting enough – a handful of 21st-century artisans (I hate that word, I really do, particularly when applied to coffee and bread) move into a lovely Arts and Crafts house on the Welsh border and do it up, room by room in the A & C style.

Each week members of the group make objects inspired by Arts and Crafts movement originals and the judges, potter Keith Brymer Jones (you'll remember he blubbed all the way through The Great Pottery Throw Down), Patch Rogers and presenter Anita Rani, choose their favourite. As I said, rather lovely.

So why, then, throw in an entirely specious jeopardy element where the crafters must make their objects (this week it's firedogs, pots and curtains) in just a week? I know this is an essential element of The Great British Bake Off and its ilk, but does it have to be applied to a series featuring highly professional, proficient crafts-people making objects of some intricacy that demand time and attention to detail?

Can't we just watch them make stuff? Give them the time they need and let us see them work properly. It could be slow TV and we all love that, don't we? Instead we have Keith Brymer Jones making a big deal of looking worried that potter/sculptor Stephen will struggle with time-management issues and not complete his allotted task, to make a set of tondino plates in the De Morgan style.

Stephen, a gentle soul who knows his stuff, has a run of ill luck with these blasted pots, including leaving his clay out in the rain. Bad, bad, bad. It drops to bits. But really, so what, they are only pots, the jaws of hell don't open up and swallow him. He's smiley and philosophical. Brymer Jones, though, in that Cassandra style pioneered to such great effect by Kevin McCloud in Grand Designs, shakes his head: "I don't know what to say... he's really up against it now."

WHY MUST JUDGES be so po-faced and gloomy as if they were about to ward off catastrophe using only a teaspoon? They were like this on the lovely Lego Masters on Channel 4, all doomy and miserable and head-shaking as the contestants simply got on with enjoying themselves.

Is this the Arts and Crafts ethos? I can't imagine John Ruskin badgering William Morris to get a move on with his wallpaper. Though I'd like to imagine Morris telling him, "Why don't you get lost, weirdo, and leave me alone to paint strawberries?"

There's enough harrying in the world, must we have it in shows like this? Can't we all have a bit of a rest and be allowed to pause and smell the roses while taking the time to appreciate someone else's skills? To be fair, the little group makes some beautiful objects, even in the silly time frame. But what's the point of asking craftspeople to make lovely things not quite as well as they could be done if they'd had the time? Don't we all need a break from being rushed?

THE WORST OF THE BEST

What is the point of Icons (Mon, Tue BBC2)?

I wondered this as Dermot O'Leary explained Ernest Shackleton to me. I don't need Dermot O'Leary explaining Ernest Shackleton, or anyone, to me. Similarly, I don't need Lily Cole (below left) explaining Alfred Hitchcock. O'Leary and Cole are "advocates" for Explorers, and Artists & Writers. Other famous people present the remaining five categories before we are asked to vote for the 20th century's greatest icon.

Why? It's so facile. How can Andy Warhol (Artists & Writers) and Martin Luther King Jr (Activists) even be compared? It's fatuous, BBC2, that's what it is. Fatuous.

The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY The Greatest Dancer 8.00pm BBC1 The Voice UK 8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Perhaps The Greatest Dancer should be renamed The Greatest Crowd-Pleaser? The main factor in whether an act progresses in the competition seems to hang not on how technically proficient a performance is, but on whether it is high-octane enough, or set against a suitably emotive or feel-good song (Tina Turner's Proud Mary will never fail to get the audience hitting their buttons).

This format quirk might be bold and innovative, but it has caused much of the sense of frustration and confusion that's been levelled at the programme. Viewers are left wondering, reasonably enough, why an uninformed audience is given such power.

Conversely, over on The Voice UK, coaches Will.i.am, Tom Jones, Jennifer Hudson and Olly Murs tune their expert ears to those stepping up for the blind auditions. Tonight, these include a boy band and a singer who auditioned last series and is returning for another shot. FRANCES TAYLOR

Australian Open Tennis

6.00am Eurosport 1 and 2

SPORT The heat is on at the halfway stage – although hopefully not as searing as last year. A new extreme weather policy has been introduced after temperatures tipped past 39°C at Melbourne Park in 2018. The third-round matches continue today, with records up for grabs everywhere. In the men's draw, Novak Djokovic and Roger Federer are both bidding for a record seventh Australian Open title, having won 12 of the past 15 tournaments between them.

Serena Williams, meanwhile, if she reaches this stage, will be considering even greater glory as she aims for a 24th grand slam title victory, equalling the all-time record set by Margaret Court in 1973.

JAMES GILL

Champions Cup Rugby

12.30pm BT Sport 2, 12.45pm BT Sport 3, 5.05pm C4

SPORT This is the final round of rugby's premier European contest before the knockout stages. It's really come into its own in recent years, a tantalising mix of styles that echoes its international big brother the Six Nations. And, after Channel 4 entered the arena this season, the action is now at least partly available free to air. The broadcaster will show Munster v Exeter Chiefs (kick-off 5.30pm – also BT2), a decisive Pool Two match between the current top sides in Ireland and England.

BT Sport, meanwhile, covers every match, beginning with a probable winner-takes-all tie, Saracens v Glasgow (k/o 1pm, BT2) and Cardiff Blues v Lyon (k/o 1pm BT3). JG

Pointless Celebrities

6.10pm BBC1

QUIZ There are quite a few old hands among the writing celebrities on tonight's show, including Richard Stilgoe (a former finalist) and fellow songwriter Don Black (a former jackpot winner). They've got to be a hard team to beat but, as Richard Osman points out, comedy writer John O'Farrell may have answered only one question on his last outing but it was a pointless answer.

The word round gets a lot of appreciative murmurs from the studio audience because there are some astoundingly low scores: to put that in context, the total score for all three teams is only 16! Other subjects include roses, pop songs and fashion designers.

JANE RACKHAM

Michael McIntyre's Big Surprises

7.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT If you've not been watching the Big Show for the past eight weeks, this compilation gives you the chance to see why more than six million regularly do. It was also a surprise Christmas Day hit, beating Call the Midwife and Mrs Brown's Boys in early figures.

Here the "surprises" in the title refer to Michael's favourite moments from all four series. He clearly enjoys turning members of the public into unexpected West End stars, so there are reminders of those (including 92-year-old David), but he's also keen on his Midnight Gameshow – amazing that nobody has called the police when they find him in their bedroom. JR

WHAT'S COOKING?

The secret to the long-running success of Saturday Kitchen Live (10am BBC1) is, "to change things before viewers think they need to be changed," says the series' executive producer Amanda Ross. "Although it looks like Saturday Kitchen is the same as it was 13 years ago, it isn't," she says of the show, hosted this week by Michel Roux Jr (right). "There's lots of things we tweak all the time. Off camera, we've tried out loads of other games but nothing works as well as the Omelette Challenge. It's deceptively simple."

A lot of planning and preparation goes on, with recipes run through on Thursday and Friday as well as a full rehearsal for the show on Saturday morning. The food fixture also has fans in high places. Ross adds, "Princess Anne was at a food event and she asked to be introduced to me. I said, 'You don't watch Saturday Kitchen, do you?' and she replied, 'Of course I do!'" FT

Stonehenge: Digging Up Britain's Past

8.00pm Channel 5

HISTORY The archaeology series visits Stonehenge to sift through the subsoil of new research. As so often with programmes about the monument, the overall effect is tantalising. Clearly something extraordinary was happening in southern Britain 4,000 years ago: evidence points to a trading culture and Salisbury plain as a gathering point for people from across Europe. But how that society worked is more than you can glean from the odd arrowhead.

Still, there are intriguing titbits as we learn about the magic of bluestone and the importance of flint mines – the latter at an amazing site in Norfolk where the shafts were dug with antlers. DAVID BUTCHER

Drake's Royal Voyager

9.00pm Channel 5

HISTORY If you've ever walked along the Thames in London and seen the replica of Sir Francis Drake's ship, The Golden Hinde, one thing may have struck you: it's tiny. To imagine this trim little vessel – around 100ft long by 20ft wide – circumnavigating the world with 80 souls on board is extraordinary.

Rob Bell tells the story here, tracing the hardships of crossing the Atlantic in 1577 on the way to raiding Spanish treasure ships in the Americas. It's a grisly tale, but with a crucial postscript: Drake's piracy managed to secure so much treasure that Queen Elizabeth could pay off the national debt and lay the groundwork for the British Empire. DB

Casualty

9.10pm BBC1

DRAMA It's a big week for Alicia, with exciting career news that she hugs to herself for a few precious moments. Meanwhile, her boyfriend Ethan, who is blissfully unaware of her good fortune, knows how to show a girl a good time. He's "booked a table at Ernesto's" because he wants to ask Alicia Something Important. Run, Alicia, run fast and run far. Don't be persuaded to stay in Holby by this passive-aggressive weeping wimp.

As Alicia (Chelsea Halfpenny) mulls over her options, she deals with an overprotective mother who brings in her sickly son. As Ethan hovers, damp-eyed, there's a Richard Curtis moment at the end.

Table for two at Ernesto's, anyone? ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Black Lake

9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA A music box that tinkles into life all by itself (in the manner of Most Haunted), doors that open unaided, winds that seem to sigh, flickering lights... Black Lake has them all. Tonight, it adds a sinister doll and a torrential thunderstorm to the mix as the multiple murderer running amok on the beautiful island is unmasked.

While the series has been far too slow (come on, we wanted more scares), it's still a good lump of hammy hokum and it manages to stick to all the accepted tropes in the horror/crime genres.

Naturally, someone cuts off hope of communication and rescue in the final instalment, leaving the remaining members of that dreadful self-improvement course turning on each other as they don't know who to trust.

But one member of the little group, who is routinely shut in dark rooms by an unseen hand, gets to grips with a killer. AG

No bugs were harmed

Men in Black ★★★★★ 7.05pm Film4 FREEVIEW
If, like me, you're a passionate opponent of animal cruelty in the name of art, you might be pleased to find out how well acting cockroaches are treated. The makers of the first Men in Black went out of their way for approval from the American Humane Society, with a representative on set to ensure the hated exoskeletal insects were well looked after. Each day, 200 of the bugs were counted out and counted back in again. If one had to be squished on camera, it was replaced by a model filled with mustard. Perhaps the producers of I'm a Celebrity should follow the film's lead. ANDREW COLLINS

For the love of Bathsheba

Far from the Madding Crowd ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Carey Mulligan gives a compelling performance as Bathsheba Everdene in Thomas Vinterberg's atmospheric adaptation of Thomas Hardy's classic romantic novel, available on iPlayer till Tuesday night. The outcome of Bathsheba's dalliances with three men (played by Michael Sheen, Matthias Schoenaerts and Tom Sturridge) may be clear from the start, but the story remains gripping, with Mulligan a less tortured Hardy heroine than usual. EMMA SIMMONDS

Enter Sky's Spider-verse

Of all Marvel's superhero properties, none has been rebooted as often as Spider-Man. Since the millennium, we've seen Tobey Maguire, Andrew Garfield and Tom Holland (pictured) each putting their own spin on the web-slinging wonder. You can compare their moves all this week, as Sky Greats brings you wall-to-wall arachnid action as Sky Spider-Man. JAMIE HEALY

LIFE IN PIECES
Annette Crosbie is Clarice Milgrove, a woman with a remarkable past

PICK OF THE DAY Call the Midwife 8.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Annette Crosbie guest-stars as the proud, redoubtable Clarice Milgrove, a lady slowly being subsumed by the hoarded contents of her filthy house. But when nice nurse Lucille (Leonie Elliott) steps in to help, she discovers that Clarice has the most extraordinary, remarkable history.

It's one of those Call the Midwife plots that comes complete with an open box of tissues and a pillow to cry into, because cry you jolly well will, helped along by the soupy orchestral soundtrack forever swooping in the background. Or maybe that should be foreground.

Crosbie is so moving as a woman who has done much for others, but who must face the end alone and struggling. Prepare to be in a heap by the end credits.

The episode's other medical story involves a Ghanaian immigrant family suffering from a mysterious disease that sends Dr Turner to his textbooks for answers. ALISON GRAHAM

Parveen's Indian Kitchen/Ainsley's Caribbean Kitchen

9.30am/11.30am (not Wales) ITV

FOOD New series Take your pick of cuisine with two new cookery shows starting today. First, food writer Parveen Ashraf has taken inspiration from recipes she's learnt from her mother and grandmother to delve into authentic Indian cooking both in the UK and India. Lamb bhuna and the traditional breakfast dishes she tries in Delhi are on her menu.

Then Ainsley Harriott rediscovers West Indian food when he visits Jamaica. As well as getting a taste of tropical weather he tries ackee-stuffed ravioli and takes a tour of Ian Fleming's home – with a martini in hand, of course. JANE RACKHAM

Countryfile

6.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL You may not have heard about the work of care farms, but they provide health, social or specialist educational services for vulnerable people through the therapeutic use of farming practices. Matt Baker visits one in Wiltshire that's helping children in all sorts of ways. Meanwhile Anita Rani discovers a local cheese with a long heritage (and that doesn't mean it's been tucked away at the back of the fridge for too long).

Traditionally many gamekeepers come to the job later in life having been interested in rural pursuits for a number of years. But Paralympian Hannah Cockroft meets a young Highland gamekeeper to find out what the job involves. JR

Dancing on Ice

6.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Dancing on Ice has seen a few revelations this series – some more surprising than others. James Jordan's prowess on skates was rather predictable, but no one expected to see Gemma Collins doing the splits on show one. Still, Phillip Schofield and Holly Willoughby introducing this as "the greatest show on ice" always raises a wry smile. Isn't this the only show on ice?

Though Dancing on Ice might not be as glossy or captivating as, say, Strictly Come Dancing, it serves well as a bit of Sunday-night fluff. Tonight, the remaining 11 "skating stars" will perform in the first themed week – Musicals – before another contestant faces elimination. FRANCES TAYLOR

Antiques Roadshow

7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL It was an unusually hot day when Fiona Bruce and team returned to Crathes Castle in Aberdeenshire for the first time in more than ten years. The first of two visits last summer had a distinctly Scottish air because among the heirlooms and junk-shop finds were a collection of signed Harry Potter books and some Celtic silver. Plus one visitor scored a home run with a Brooklyn Dodgers baseball that has a remarkable story.

However, Fiona, whose ancestors hailed from nearby Moray, says there is no chance of finding anything as exciting as that in her attic: "My grandparents were Hopeman fishing folk – we don't have any treasures." JR

MORE OF THIS MORNING

Starting today, ITV's This Morning is getting its own weekend compilation show. Presented by Eamonn Holmes and Ruth Langsford (right), This Morning – on Sunday (10.30am) will run for ten weeks, and is billed as a sneak peek at the upcoming week's programmes alongside "a selection of the funniest, most moving and entertaining moments from the [past] week... as well as some new and exclusive content".

This isn't the first time the show has given this format a go. In 2010, ITV bumped This Morning up from five days a week to seven. Then, it was Phillip Schofield and Holly Willoughby who brought viewers a highlights show that ran for two hours on both Saturday and Sunday. But it was rather short-lived: by the end of the following year the show had been cut to Saturdays only, and by March 2012 it had been axed. FRANCES TAYLOR

Les Misérables

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA "Lies, violence, cruelty! That is the world," explains Jean Valjean (Dominic West) as he tries to keep his "niece" Cosette (Ellie Bamber) protected from it, behind closed doors. The souring relationship between them is at the heart of tonight's instalment, which may be the best yet, though we're required politely to avert our gaze from contrivances that probably sit better in a 1,200-page novel than a six-part drama.

There are more of the enjoyably ripe performances in minor roles, including David Bradley glowering for France as nasty old royalist Gillenormand and Adeel Akhtar back as poisonous liar Thénardier: fate is determined to bring him and Valjean together. DAVID BUTCHER

Nolan: Australia's Maverick Artist

9.00pm BBC4

ARTS Sidney (or Sid to his family) Nolan was one of Australia's most famous 20th-century painters. Inspired by the French and British modern artists whose work he saw in Melbourne in the late 1930s, he became a highly productive painter, specialising in vividly colourful landscapes and the people who inhabited them, including his celebrated Ned Kelly series of the late 1940s. This profile makes him out to be a bit of a charming rogue. No one doubts his versatility, talent and skill (he was taken up by Kenneth Clark, and spent the last 40 years of his life in Britain), but he had an unorthodox private life, and (shame on him) dared to be ambitious... GILL CRAWFORD

Unlocking the Truth

10.00pm W

DOCUMENTARY While the reality-show aspects of this unsolved-crime series can jar with the seriousness of the cases it profiles, it's still gripping television. Presenters Ryan Ferguson and Eva Nagao are following up on the case of Michael Politte, who's serving time for his mother Rita's murder. They get access to two people who might have vital information – one of them has real questions to answer.

We also learn about Calvin Smith, who is serving 29 years for a vicious assault on a shop employee in North Carolina. Why was he convicted when there seems to be evidence pointing in quite another direction? The case really gets to Ryan, who's still processing the ten years he wrongly spent behind bars himself. GC

ALL AT SEA

A grim case brings Vera (Brenda Blethyn) and Malcolm (Paul Kaye) to the coast

Vera

8.10pm ITV

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Vera's temper is volcanic when she comes up against a case that really gets underneath her skin; a teenage boy is found stabbed to death in the boatyard of a quiet seaside town. He'd travelled there from Newcastle after bolting from his care home, and she must find out why.

The answer leads Vera (Brenda Blethyn) and her little team into a desperately dark and seedy underworld full of lost souls and vulnerable young men and women. For the squeamish among you (and I mean me) there are a number of Trainspotting-type shots of fetid toilets, so prepare to look away.

It's an unusual case for Vera, who doesn't tend to collide with raw and very current horrors – like the practice of "cuckooing" where a drugs gang takes over the home of a vulnerable addict, and "county lines" drug dealing. AG See feature: page 21

from 10am BBC3

Television's got plenty of programmes advising parents on how to bring up their kids, but not too many where the children bite back about what mistakes have been made. Enter this startling reality format that eavesdrops on a therapy session between a young adult and their parent: Dammy, 23, confronts her mother about the issues from her childhood. But Mum has some demons of her own.

When female spies ruled

Fathom ★★★/Modesty Blaise ★★

from 6.55pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Back in the 1960s, 007 mania resulted in a raft of cash-in imitations, giving rise to the "Bondsploitation" genre. Among the surfeit of gentlemen secret agents, Modesty Blaise (review, p44) and Fathom showed that women could also play the spy game. Female operatives also infiltrated our TV screens in the form of The Girl from Uncle, Honey West and Agent 99 from Get Smart. But by the end of the decade, even The Avengers' Mrs Peel had hung up her catsuit and women were again relegated to the sidelines. JAMIE HEALY

Unsane ★★★ 10.20pm Sky Premiere

Claire Foy stars here as a fragile data analyst who seeks counselling at a behavioural facility, only to be conned into committing herself. Once inside, her sanity crumbles and she is plagued by what seem to be delusions. But are they? Steven Soderbergh's film has a horribly compelling premise and its depiction of a shady institution is quirky and credible. Sadly, the satirical skew and psychological probing give way to a schlocky, far-fetched thriller. The tonal shift is jarring, but Foy is still spectacularly good. EMMA SIMMONDS

New to Netflix today

Lion ★★★★★ Netflix

This affecting true-life tale stars Dev Patel as a man raised by an Australian couple (Nicole Kidman and David Wenham), who is haunted by memories of the family he lost back in India. The set-up, which is reminiscent of Slumdog Millionaire, is exhilaratingly handled, but the pay-off (all web research and train timetables) is far less cinematic. DAMON WISE

ALL CHANGE
Nikki Alexander (Emilia Fox) has plenty to think about now...

PICK OF THE DAY Silent Witness 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA You might have forgotten about Matt, the clean-cut American politico with whom Nikki formed her own Special Relationship in the last series. The two of them are still an item, although keeping things going between continents and while Matt runs for Congress isn't plain sailing. More to the point, as we rejoin Nikki, she is sitting in her bathroom gazing at a pregnancy test...

But that's all in the background as the Lyell Centre team is seconded to Brighton, where severed – and lavishly tattooed – limbs are turning up at a landfill site. The fact that we've heard snippets of vaguely oriental flute on the soundtrack signals there will turn out to be a Japanese connection, and as luck would have it, superhumanly knowledgeable Clarissa speaks Japanese.

By the way, if you're wondering why that Brighton detective looks so familiar, the actor also played the evil minicab driver in Broadchurch. And yes, his detective sergeant really is played by Downton Abbey's Samantha Bond.

Great Canadian Railway Journeys

6.30pm BBC2

TRAVEL Michael Portillo, in a fetching fruit-salad combo of lime-coloured jacket and tangerine trousers, is in lovely Vancouver, routinely ranked in the top of "best places to live" polls. He doesn't ride too many railways, apart from the city's elevated SkyTrain suburban service, but never mind, there's still the required Michael Dresses Up and Looks Silly bit: this time he dons full ice hockey gear to make a fool of himself on the rink.

On a visit to the pretty Gastown tourist destination he has a drink at a microbrewery and learns the origin of the name Gastown, which has nothing to do with actual gas, but with the nickname of its Hull-born founder.

MasterChef USA

7.00pm W

FOOD "This season of MasterChef, everything has changed," bellows Gordon Ramsay at the start of the ninth US series of this enduring cookery show. The variation is that all three judges – Ramsay alongside restaurateurs Joe Bastianich and Aarón Sánchez – battle each other, with eight aprons each to bestow on the amateurs they see potential in. They will mentor these chosen few to try to reach the final, where the winner takes home $250,000.

With all its whooping and hollering, this bears just a trifling resemblance to our own MasterChef. But with the new UK series a little way off yet, this provides something of an aperitif – albeit one that assaults the senses like a vindaloo. FRANCES TAYLOR

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ "You are so close! You are dancing around it!" Victoria Coren Mitchell assures a struggling team at one point, and later, "You knew it [but] it slithered through your fingers!" She's dishing out sympathy because both teams are dropping points like dandruff. Are the questions especially beastly or are the Pyromaniacs and the Time Ladies being obtuse?

Your view will depend on whether you can make the connections they don't. To do so you'll need a working knowledge of German classical music and prime numbers: I'd say if you have both and you can work out what comes next in the sequence Booker / Torv / Deng... it's time you got a team together. DB

A Year of British Murder

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK This extraordinary documentary, filmed over the course of a year, focuses on a handful of the 768 people who were killed in Britain in 2017. With harrowing testimony from bereaved families and friends, it builds a picture of the loneliness, anger and bafflement felt by those left behind.

The pain of 15-year-old Quamari Barnes's parents is palpable as they recall their boy, stabbed to death outside his London school by a child his own age. The two grown-up sons of a woman trapped in an abusive, controlling relationship with the man who went on to kill her seem so lost. As does the father of a man stabbed to death while he was celebrating his 21st birthday. AG

When I received this week's press info for Emmerdale (7pm ITV), I thought I'd accidentally been sent a document from 2016. Or 2013, for that matter. Because, yes, Cain (right) is set to shock Charity with a surprise kiss. Now, soaps do love a yo-yoing couple (see Max and Stacey on EastEnders, who are now seemingly obliged to share a moment every Christmas Day), but this really is starting to strain credulity. For a reminder of simpler times, fans should check out ITV3 at 1.45pm when classic episodes from 1989 start being reshown. This Friday's double bill will see that villainous vamp Kim Tate arrive in the village for the first time...

Having a bay-windowed semi on Grasmere Drive may give Audrey a higher status than the residents of Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV), but that doesn't stop her calling on the Platts for help when her floor collapses with dry rot. As Gran moves in, Sarah and Gary are set to be left on lilos in the living room. DAVID BROWN

Chris Tarrant: Extreme Railway Journeys

9.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL Ukraine has got miles and miles of railway. Probably, Chris Tarrant surmises, because the roads are so dreadful. After a short ride on the narrow-gauge Carpathian Tram, which he likens to a park bench on wheels, he confides, "I've got a feeling this is going to be an odd trip."

It's certainly weird seeing a train trundling through a romantic tunnel of trees that were actually planted to hide a secret Soviet army base. But it's downright alarming when he presses the red button at a missile silo before visiting Chernobyl's radiation exclusion zone, where thousands of people are still clearing up the nuclear disaster of 1986. JANE RACKHAM

True Detective

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA In the 1980 sections of Nic Pizzolatto's Southern gothic thriller, Detectives Hays and West (excellent Mahershala Ali and Stephen Dorff) are convinced they are missing something obvious lurking deep within the beautiful Arkansas countryside. But from what we learn in the 1990 and 2015 scenes, the mysteries of the double abduction remain as elusive as ever, despite the recent discovery that one of the missing kids could have survived.

Tensions in Hays's marriage to schoolteacher Amelia Reardon (Carmen Ejogo) over her book on the case are also evident. But as convincing as these scenes are, you can't help thinking he would be wise to read her tome properly. BEN DOWELL

Two Doors Down

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

SITCOM This show gets its momentum from the cast grinding like gears on each other and it's never good when one of the ensemble goes missing. Tonight, Doon MacKichan's Cathy makes only the most fleeting appearance and the comedy horsepower is lower as a result.

On the plus side, we get the full focus on equally monstrous Christine (Elaine C Smith), who has had to go into hospital for a minor operation. At visiting hours, she does her usual trick of having people serve her every whim, while Colin puts the fear of superbugs into her. "I don't like to speak ill of folk," Christine lies, before summarising Colin sharply as a "selfish wee dick". DAVID BUTCHER

BEST FOOT FORWARD

Adam (James Nesbitt) begins his journey of self-discovery

Cold Feet

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Writer Mike Bullen has the lightest of touches with even the darkest of subjects. But he's never sentimental, a trap he could so easily drop right into as Adam finally opens up about his beloved, long-dead Rachel to their son Matt, and Jen faces bad news.

There's always so much going on in Cold Feet that we never have time to become maudlin or to paddle in sadness. So Adam's awakening comes after he attends an initially excruciating session of drama therapy as a means of getting to grips with why he dates only age-inappropriate women.

And Jen's natural bounce and her unwillingness to confide her deepest fears in those she loves the most keeps her mask of pragmatic cheerfulness from slipping. For now.

There are a smattering of brief but funny fantasy sequences... I particularly like the financially emasculated David bridling at being a kept man. AG

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.00 A Year of British Murder

RT Between 1 January and 31 December 2017, more than 750 people died as a result of murder or manslaughter in Britain. This film looks at the repercussions of some of those cases, following families and friends of the victims, from the immediate shock of the crimes through the legal process and the most difficult task of all, trying to rebuild their lives. There is also a look at how statistical analysis of figures since the millennium reveals that the pattern of homicides has remained similar in terms of the profiles of victims and the circumstances of the killings this century. But what do these murders say about the state of Britain today? See p72. Director Ben Anthony; Producer Harriet Bird Rptd tomorrow 11.5am 4seven and Wednesday 12 midnight C4 (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Art of America

2/3. Modern Dreams. Andrew Graham-Dixon explores the role of artists and architects in the development of American cities and culture, as the country sought to step out of Europe's shadow. He travels to Massachusetts, Manhattan and Chicago to examine the work of Norman Rockwell, John Sloan, George Bellows and Louis Sullivan, before charting the links between the Great Depression of the 1920s and 30s and the rise of abstract expressionism. Director/Producer Paul Tilzey Signed repeat 3am (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

10.00 Russia's Lost Princesses

2/2. The World Turned Upside Down The story of Olga, Tatiana, Maria and Anastasia – the daughters of Tsar Nicholas II – concludes with the final four years of their lives. In 1914 Olga and Tatiana, now 18 and 16, briefly escaped from their strange and isolated life in the Alexander Palace when they volunteered as Red Cross nurses. But in 1917 a dramatic end came to Romanov rule and exile in Siberia awaited the sisters. Director/Producer Eleanor Scoones (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

The gang's all here

Bugsy Malone ★★★★★ ITV Player FREE TO VIEW
Alan Parker's debut feature was a deliberate attempt to get noticed. And, by casting children as American gangsters, he achieved his ambition. Using techniques borrowed from old Hollywood movies, Parker creates a vibrant pastiche that hovers on the brink of cuteness. The children have an edge to their performances that cuts through sentiment – most notably Jodie Foster, whose slinky speakeasy number My Name Is Tallulah is the highlight. The film leaves ITV Player tomorrow, so catch it while you can. ADRIAN TURNER

Remember him this way

The Last Movie Star ★★★★★ 6.10pm Sky Premiere
This indie comedy may not have been the late Burt Reynolds's final film, but it acts as a worthy and poignant swansong. He plays a frail and lonely former movie star who receives an invitation to Nashville where he is to be honoured at a film festival. However, the event turns out to be a shoestring affair and the crotchety veteran soon goes AWOL. More than just a misty-eyed meditation on ageing, this is also a celebration of Reynolds's own career, with scenes from his classic films ingeniously woven into the story. JAMIE HEALY

Superfly ★★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies
In this update of the 1972 blaxploitation classic, Trevor Jackson strides into the role of Youngblood Priest, a criminal looking to get out of the game. With its flashy cars and thumping beats, this may lack the cultural commentary that defined the original, but there's enough intrigue to make the outcome worth sticking around for. JAMES LUXFORD

SAFE HANDS
Dermot O'Leary hosts tonight's proceedings

POPULAR PAIR

PICK OF THE DAY The National Television Awards 7.30pm ITV

AWARDS The NTAs aren't usually the place you go to for controversy, but the nomination of Ant alongside Dec in the best presenter category has raised eyebrows, particularly the ones belonging to Piers Morgan, who argued that McPartlin has been "sitting on his backside for the entire year". Morgan soon moved on to a Twitter spat with actress Sophie Turner, but it'll be interesting to see if the voting public will halt Ant and Dec's winning streak, especially seeing as I'm a Celeb stand-in host Holly Willoughby is also in the running.

As has now become tradition, Dermot O'Leary is the host with the most at London's O₂. He's always a safe pair of hands, which is more than can usually be said for ITV's daytime stars on the morning after the night before. Susanna Reid has already said she'll be "hammered" on breakfast telly should Good Morning Britain take home a trophy. Well, that'd be one way of coping with a triumphant Morgan at 6am. DAVID BROWN

2.15pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE Katherine Corven (Kate O'Flynn), convicted of her husband's murder as a result of Father Brown's clever detective work, is facing the hangman's noose. She utters her final words: "Tell Father Brown I forgive him."

It's a dramatic opening for this episode, first shown last year, which sees the reputation of our priestly hero (Mark Williams) in tatters and the poor man badgered by an overeager female reporter convinced he is evil incarnate. Fortunately a jackdaw, fluttering in the roof of his church, provides him with divine inspiration so he can solve a case that is at times worthy of Jonathan Creek. JANE RACKHAM

Pubs, Ponds and Power: the Story of the Village

7.30pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY New series The quintessential English village: an ancient church; a pub lunch; cricket on the green. That scene may be the case now, but archaeologist Ben Robinson is here to dig beneath the rural idyll and lay bare the turbulent past of the quaint village.

He starts in bosky Warkworth in Northumberland, where regimented garden plots tell of its Norman origins. That and the castle looming over the village. The Northumbrians may have defied Norman rule for 100 years, but Robinson still finds a French influence, going into raptures about the ribbed vaulting in the village church. Tomorrow he's in Lavenham, Suffolk. DAVID CRAWFORD

My Million Pound Menu

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD Many modern diners are looking for adventurous flavours, and this week's three cuisines offer just that. One duo's idea is high-end Nordic food using foraged ingredients that one potential investor says is unlike anything he's eaten before; then there's poutine, a chip 'n' gravy fast food idea that's massive in Canada; and finally a regional Spanish concept inspired by the Camino de Santiago pilgrimage. They each ask for very different amounts of investment, too.

The team that gets to test their vision at a Manchester pop-up restaurant is a slight surprise, even though their food looks fabulous. But of course it takes more than that to secure an investment. JR

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA While Thomas is piecing together chopped-up limbs, the script is very slowly slotting into place the story of how the murders happened. That's the Silent Witness way and the fact the story unfolds in sunny Brighton doesn't hurt – luckily we've left behind the municipal dump where several grisly scenes were set last night.

So we're trying to work out what connects the following: the gay estate agent, the tradesman with a newborn daughter, the woman in hospital with sepsis and the guy tied up on a yacht in the marina. We're also hoping that Nikki's handsome American boyfriend doesn't turn out to be a wrong 'un. DAVID BUTCHER
See feature: page 12

Frieda (Olga Fedori, right) has long been one of Holby City's (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.45pm) most interesting characters. As the Morticia Addams of medicine, nobody is usually more deadpan with a bedpan than Frieda. But here we get one of those rare glimpses behind the goth make-up when her ex-boyfriend Roman reappears on the scene. Expect heartache and tears to replace cynicism and putdowns by the end of the hour. Elsewhere, Ange is trying to sell her vision for her Young Adult Unit. Mainly, as far as I could tell, by moving lots of boxes around. And Zav looks after Donna's daughter Mia, who's obsessed with her phone and gets really annoyed when Zav confiscates it. Personally, I was more irritated by Zav telling Donna that she was going to "smash" her quarterly review. Can we have a moratorium on people "smashing it" on both dramas and entertainment shows, please? Let's just go back to people "doing well". It's far more refined. DAVID BROWN

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY The series takes an austere turn in wildest north-west Ireland, as Ben is welcomed with a battering from the elements on the coast of Donegal. Judith, 80, has been living here, off-grid and alone, since the 90s. In contrast to the sunnier climes Ben's used to visiting, the light here has the desaturated quality of a 1970s cookbook. And it's clear Judith's been cooking up more than stew when she breaks out the poteen. "Is it illegal?" asks Ben. "Of course it is," says the plain-speaking octogenarian.

Ben's clearly affected by his time here, and his closing monologue is one of his wisest yet. "Eccentricity, in some ways, is just being really confident in who you are," he muses. GARY ROSE

Escape at Dannemora

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA This is the true story of how two inmates at a prison in upstate New York lured a female employee into helping them escape. The three leads, childish Tilly (Patricia Arquette), quietly desperate Sweat (Paul Dano) and manipulative Matt (Benicio del Toro) are mesmerising. But another key role almost gets overshadowed: Tilly's clueless lunk of a husband Lyle (Eric Lange), forever hoping to win over his bully of a wife, unaware she plans to desert him.

Tonight his hopes for their anniversary go awry, while in the bowels of the prison, Sweat chips patiently away at a concrete wall, longing to get to the part where they actually escape. We know how he feels. DAVID BUTCHER

The Passage

9.00pm Fox

DRAMA This intriguing sci-fi/horror series, based on the novels by Justin Cronin, continues with a flashback to the hubris that led to the establishment of the sinister medical lab where the quest to develop human disease immunity has left ethics far behind. Turning death-row prisoners into bloodsucking superhumans is surely not a good idea.

While patient zero, Dr Tim Fanning, exerts his malevolence throughout the facility, real enjoyment comes elsewhere, from the spiky/sweet relationship between two fugitives trying to escape his fate, orphan Amy (Saniyya Sidney) and federal agent Brad (Mark-Paul Gosselaar). But it seems doomed, as the bad guys in black cars close in. DAVID CRAWFORD

SHAPING UP
Sharon (Sharon Horgan) and Rob (Rob Delaney) go on a fitness kick

Catastrophe

10.00pm C4

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Rob's neck brace is finally off and he celebrates with a fitness drive – with a lycra-laden Sharon lolloping in his wake after discovering she has too much fat round her internal organs.

Rob Delaney and Sharon Horgan have always been adept at burrowing inside the hidden anxieties of middle-class metropolitan professionals and tonight they deliver what the Waitrose classes would call a smorgasbord: mortality, step-mums, mooted moves to the country and moped thugs. Plus there's a deliciously shocking grab at youthful abandon between Fran and her narcissistic plastic surgeon ex-lover (a brilliant Douglas Hodge making a welcome return to the fray) that Sharon suggests could be "all a bit Apple Tree Yard". Warm, rude, sharp-witted and tightly plotted as always, it's a show you don't so much watch as luxuriate in. BEN DOWELL

June's comedy quartet

Carry On Nurse ★★★ 4.45pm Film4 FREEVIEW

The loss of June Whitfield in December was a sad one, but she left us with a lot of reasons to be merry. An early comic role came in 1959, way down the cast in Carry On Nurse, her first of four appearances in the series. In 1972, she played Kenneth Connor's sex-averse wife in Carry On Abroad, and a year later was promoted to a bra-burning feminist councillor in Carry On Girls (both available on ITV Player). We'll gloss over the ill-fated 1992 revival, Carry On Columbus, which even a comedy icon as august as the future Dame couldn't save. ANDREW COLLINS

New this week on Prime

Show Dogs ★★★ Amazon Prime

A gruff NYPD rottweiler and his handler must infiltrate the primed and preening world of a Las Vegas dog show in this effects-assisted combination of goofy comedy and canine cop movie. Detective Will Arnett plays straight man to a macho rottweiler voiced by Chris "Ludacris" Bridges, and the pair learn to appreciate the show dogs' particular skill set in the course of the case. As you'd expect, the film has its fair share of juvenile gags, but also enough smart dialogue to deliver a decent laughter quotient. TREVOR JOHNSTON

The road to the Oscars

The nominees for the 91st Academy Awards are announced today. Nine of the categories have already been issued, but the biggies – including actor, actress, film and director – will be revealed at 1pm GMT. British hopes rest with Christian Bale for Vice and Olivia Colman for The Favourite, while Andrew Collins rates Roma's chances on p39. To watch live, visit the website Oscars.org. JAMIE HEALY

DAN'S THE MAN
Danny Dyer re-creates the lives of his royal forebears

Tom Kerridge's Fresh Start

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD There are several "vegetable dodgers" lurking in Tom Kerridge's volunteer families. His ultimate challenge is to get one resolute carnivore to give up meat for a week, but he starts closer to home with his brother Sam, who won't eat anything green.

For Kerry, healthy, nutritious eating is especially important because she's having treatment for cancer. As her husband Chris can barely slice a potato in half, he needs guidance and some very simple recipes. Spicy beef stir fry (packed with veg), gremolata-topped fish with tartare sauce, tuna wraps and banana choc ices all fit the bill. JANE RACKHAM

The Twinstitute

8.30pm BBC2

HEALTH Hold everything. Chris and Xand van Tulleken this week test a theory that you can lose weight by – and I hesitate to get anyone's hopes up – watching television. This is obviously very exciting science, though I have to say if the theory holds, I must be a statistical outlier.

Using their identical twin trials Chris and Xand test whether watching comedy or horror is better for burning calories – both laughter and adrenaline raise the metabolic rate, apparently. But tonight's main experiment is a fascinating test of which is better for brain health: eating a special diet or learning new creative skills like painting. It turns out one of these really can expand your mind. DAVID BUTCHER

Cleaning Up

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Cleaners Sam and Jess have been remarkably fortunate in their rookie insider trader dealings as the huge City firm they work for doesn't appear to have any password-protected computers. Thus, as the pair empty bins in the dead of night, all of the unattended screens are alive with priceless info.

There's another stroke of luck with a similarly vulnerable mobile phone containing bombshell information (written, oddly, in Sentences In Which Every Word Is Capitalised).

As she spirals into yet more debt thanks to her gambling addiction in this deeply unconvincing thriller, Sam (Sheridan Smith) decides on a risky strategy. ALISON GRAHAM

PICK OF THE DAY Danny Dyer's Right Royal Family 9.00pm BBC1 (Scotland: 10.45pm)

DOCUMENTARY The discovery by the EastEnders star that he had blue blood in his veins made for one of the most uplifting editions of Who Do You Think You Are?, so it's no surprise that the BBC wants to recapture its feel-good factor. The trouble is, of course, that Dyer is now fully aware of his royal lineage, so there can never be that same element of surprise. The production team's solution here is to go Total Lucy Worsley and chuck every tunic, crown and sword they can get hold of in the direction of a game Dyer.

As with WDYTUA, though, the highlights of this ancestry exploration remain Dyer's turns of phrase. After receiving a more detailed family tree, he says, "I've got scrolls coming out of me earholes." On his quest, he adds, "We're going to get regal-ed out of our brains". And those are only the ones I could write without asterisks... DAVID BROWN

Has anyone got the number for Ofsted in Weatherfield? Because I'm starting to suspect that the local comprehensive isn't running sex and relationship education classes. At the very least there should be a surprise inspection. I mean, what other explanation can there be for all the teen pregnancies on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV)? First we had Sarah Lou Platt, then there was Faye Windass and now it's Amy Barlow who's discovering, thanks to an ultrasound, that she's expecting a baby.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Pretty soon, mum Tracy is accusing Simon of being the daddy. But I'd just like to know why all these kids are sleeping together in the first place? Perhaps a radical approach is needed and the Corrie parents should be saying to their adolescent offspring: "Spend more time on your phone. I bought it for you, but you never use it. Why won't you look at that screen more often? Have you tried using social media? Let me download Fortnite for you – I hear it's really addictive." DAVID BROWN

Magnum P.I.

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA On the surface, Magnum P.I. appears to be about the bromance between ex-Navy Seals Thomas, Rick and TC. But, when it comes down to it, Higgins (Perdita Weeks) is able to out-fight the three of them. Just witness her impressive scissor hold in tonight's big showdown – the boys would do themselves a mischief if they attempted it.

The scrap comes about thanks to the theft of a valuable 300lb bluefin tuna that's been stolen from Magnum's fisherman pal Dan. And, as with last week's opener, the case makes for a breezy hour of TV. Basically, if you enjoy Hawaii Five-O (and look out for a character crossover from that very show), you'll be at home here. DAVID BROWN

ENTERTAINMENT The point of a panel show is not the game they're playing. As this series shows beautifully, a panel show is just a pretext for getting funny people together and giving them excuses to be funny.

Insert Name Here is a slightly rickety structure for that but the personnel involved are top drawer: any half-hour that collates Richard Osman, Sue Perkins, Josh Widdicombe and Jon Richardson is going to sail by on a comedy breeze, and this episode does just that, with a few fascinating dabs of trivia involving One Direction's original name (which was New Direction but, well, say it out loud...) and what John Lennon did to a Matisse painting. DAVID BUTCHER

Just Another Immigrant

10.00pm, 10.35pm Sky 1

SITCOM Romesh Ranganathan's bid to break America has not started well. He's booked the 4,000-seater Greek Theatre in Los Angeles, but has only sold around 30 tickets. So far he's been a bit fancy-free, larking around L.A. Now, though, his wife and kids are coming to join him and he's having to deal with their expectations, too.

The series can be summed up by one shot, Romesh staring deadpan, face covered with sand, as the director asks him about the three-hour beach workout his wife had signed him up for.

His misadventures are so involving, you have to stop and remember this is scripted comedy. No one can be this hapless. DAVID CRAWFORD Shown at Christmas in homage to classic festive ghost stories, this one-off half-hour by Mark Gatiss works for any dark winter evening. Starring Simon Callow as a fading radio actor reading a ghost story but haunted by a malign presence in the lonely, soundproofed studio, it's a slight thing, nimbly written and smartly performed by Callow and Anjali Mohindra.

Dr Kevin Fong explores how we can have a more meaningful death

We Need to Talk about Death

9.00pm BBC2

SCIENCE Most of us aren't afraid of being dead, a doctor suggests here; what we're afraid of is the process of dying. Presenter Dr Kevin Fong looks at different ways of handling that medically, talking to patients and clinicians in hospices and palliative care.

There's a lot of wisdom in the programme, though it's not an easy watch, as we meet people with advanced cancers and see the kind of choices they face. Professor Rob George, medical director of St Christopher's Hospice in south London, knows a thing or two about honouring people's wishes: "It's morally wrong to waste a dying person's time," he says – something extended interventions can do. What matters is having a "meaningful" death, and finding resolution. "Dying's not about dying from a disease," he says. "It's about dying from a life." DAVID BUTCHER

9.00 Danny Dyer's Right Royal Family
RT 1/2. After discovering on Who Do You Think You Are? that he is descended from King Edward III, the actor delves further into his aristocratic bloodline as he travels through 800 years of British history. He finds out how his ancestors lived and ate, rifling through the dressing up box as he immerses himself in some of the pursuits and passions of the past. Danny kicks off with a dish of sheep's tongue which should hopefully help fortify him to fight like his Viking 35-times great-grandfather Rollo. Stepping into the footsteps of his ancestor William the Conqueror, Danny then tries his hand at hunting on horse and foot, Norman-style. At Dover Castle, Danny is happy to be treated like a king in his own royal residence. However, in Paris his piety is put to the test when he lives for a day like French king Louis IX. See page 92. Series producer Anna Kirkwood; Exec producer Colette Flight (S) (AD) (HD)

Keen to encourage the families to eat more fruit and vegetables, Tom helps a sporty clan to become just as healthy on the inside, and tries to convince Tim Loveday, whose fondness for meat has a negative impact on his family's diet, to go veggie for a whole week. Tom also comes up with a way to boost fruit intake by using bananas in his own alternative to choc-ices. See page 92. Director Sarah Myland; Series producer Hannah Corneck (S) (AD) (HD)

8.30 The Twinstute
RT 4/6. Three sets of identical twins put their brains on the line as Chris and Xand van Tulleken investigate whether the best way to keep our minds sharp is extra creativity or eating "brain food". The doctors also find out if the most effective method for repelling the pesky mosquito is a high-pitched noise or eating a curry. And they test a new theory that we can shed pounds by watching TV, but which is most effective – a comedy or a horror? See p92. Director Andy Hall; Series producer Helga Berry (S) (HD)

9.00 We Need to Talk about Death
RT Modern medicine is focused on saving lives, as science increases doctors' ability to treat life-threatening diseases. 9.00 Andrew Marr's History of Modern Britain
2/5. The Land of Lost Content. For many in Britain, the 1950s represented a golden age of order and affluence, but such prosperity belied the growing number of frustrated people who were hungry for change. The working classes didn't want to "know their place" any longer and nuclear protesters became ever more vocal. Andrew Marr recalls a time when the old establishment was in constant collision with the cocky new Britain that would directly influence the 1960s spirit of change.

Don't Breathe ★★★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

The name may not ring bells, but you've seen the versatile Stephen Lang plenty of times before, most visibly as the militaristic bad guy in Avatar. Born in New York in 1952, Lang won praise on stage and went on to play top brass in Gettysburg and Gods and Generals. More recent roles include The Girl on the Train and Hostiles. In Don't Breathe (Film of the Day, p45), he plays the blind victim of a house invasion, describing his character as "this wonderful and interesting combination of real strength and absolute vulnerability". Next? Four Avatar sequels for James Cameron. ANDREW COLLINS

Jimi: All Is by My Side ★★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This biopic from 12 Years a Slave writer John Ridley is a thoughtful meditation on the key year that transformed Jimi Hendrix from session guitarist to superstar. OutKast's André Benjamin plays Hendrix as a quiet, even simple man, but once in London he becomes much more complex. Rights issues mean we never hear Hendrix's most famous songs, but a thunderous rendition of Sgt Pepper gives a woozy approximation of his talent. DAMON WISE

A Waiting for Godot sense of tragicomedy pervades this critique of colonialism from director Lucrecia Martel, about an officer of the Spanish court languishing in a far-flung South American colony. It's ravishingly beautiful and fruitfully surreal, and Martel finds plenty of cinematic meat in one man's misery. EMMA SIMMONDS

SOUTHERN BELLE
Lucy Worsley dresses the part to explore the Deep South's troubled past

PICK OF THE DAY American History's Biggest Fibs with Lucy Worsley 9.00pm BBC4

HISTORY Of course Lucy Worsley can't resist the temptation to dress up like Gone with the Wind's Scarlett O'Hara. So here she is in a gigantic hooped skirt and pink frou-frou frock on the veranda of a Southern villa. "You look darlin', darlin'," says the cheerful tour guide who straps Worsley into a corset and sends her on her way.

But there is a serious purpose behind this, as Worsley examines the myths surrounding the American Civil War and the role of Abraham Lincoln.

Was he more a pragmatist than a great campaigner against slavery?

Racial tensions still burn in the Deep South and she visits Charlottesville, Virginia where a 2017 demonstration, organised by the Unite the Right group against the removal of a statue commemorating Confederate hero Robert E Lee from a public park, exploded into violence. A white supremacist drove his car into counter-protestors, killing Heather Heyer and injuring scores more. ALISON GRAHAM

Rip-Off Britain: Holidays

9.15am BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE The consumer champions have waged war on many holiday issues from time shares and airport parking to visa problems and holiday camps since this series started two weeks ago. Today they report on the infuriating variation in airline baggage rules. How many of us have arrived at the airport with a case we've often taken on board only to find that this particular airline considers it too big and insists we pay for it to be stowed in the hold?

The rules concerning hold luggage are just as random: some have no size restriction, others do; while weight limits vary from 15kg to 32kg. The team are on the case.

JANE RACKHAM

Top of the Pops: 1987

7.30pm BBC4

MUSIC Heads up for the last regular hosting spot for John Peel, the much-loved, sardonic DJ and columnist (his weekly Family Album ran in RT from 1993 to 2001). He once reminded readers that long ago he'd branded Top of the Pops a "national disgrace" and that "anyone who appears on the thing should be ashamed of themselves". He came to embrace the show and loved dressing up and goofing around in front of millions.

Here, alongside Janice Long, he corrals acts including the Smiths and the Blow Monkeys. Of George Michael duetting with Aretha Franklin, he remarks: "She can make any old rubbish sound good, and I think she just has!" PATRICK MULKERN

Would I Lie to You? The Unseen Bits

8.00pm BBC1

COMEDY The out-takes of this show are so good they warrant their own edition. In, I think, a first, Olivia Colman finds Jon Richardson's story about slippers so plausible she doesn't even wait for his explanation but immediately decides it's true.

More challenging is Henning Wehn's tale about an inappropriate gift because it involves a lengthy explanation of his job as a golf club "bundler", while the awkward moment Shaun Williamson questions Emma Bunton about her toilet habits is deflected neatly by David Mitchell's meanderings about excrement. No other show can touch this for surrealism – even when the stories are true. JR

Back in Time for School

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY If you failed the 11-plus in the 1960s, you went to a secondary modern school where education was tailored to serve industry. Forty per cent of the curriculum was devoted to practical lessons such as bricklaying, typing and farm work, but while there was a move towards pupil-centred learning, horizons were limited for the girls. "We haven't done anything for ourselves," grumbles one girl, after cooking for her male teacher.

Even though the young volunteers generally enjoy this semi-vocational style of teaching, they're shocked how one exam totally shaped pupils' lives and expectations. Only one in 22,000 secondary modern students went on to university. JR

EastEnders (7.30pm, 8.30pm BBC1) aired some scenes of a disturbing nature over the new year that I'm surprised didn't come accompanied by a helpline number. No, not the shooting and burial of Ray Kelly in woodland, but the graphic sight of Big Mo (near right) on the toilet. Honestly, what a way to start 2019. I'm astonished that the tabloids didn't run "Bog Mo" headlines. Well, viewers who want more from Mo get their wish tonight when she berates the bailiffs who turn up to take more possessions away from the house. But matters soon get even worse when the police arrive with some shocking news.

Hollyoaks (6.30pm C4) drip-feeds its radicalisation storyline as bullying Terry leaves stepson Ste feeling lower than ever. Will this make him more vulnerable to horrible Johnny's secret far-right agenda? Alfie, meanwhile, is accepted for an internship in Washington DC. Hollyoaks meets The West Wing? Now, that's a spin-off I'd like to see. DAVID BROWN

The Secret Life of Five-Year-Olds

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Harlo is from California. "Boys are strong and girls are weak," he says, flatly. He has decided to ban girls from the treehouse in the playground, where he pretends to shoot passing animals with a pretend assault rifle. ("Unicorn! Trtrtrtrtrtr!") The editing encourages us to pass judgement on Harlo's gun obsession ("I got my AK47!") early on, then soften to him as he gets in touch with a warmer side.

Sometimes these arcs feel forced, but who cares when the programme throws up such great material? Which tonight includes a sort of bush tucker trial and a dancing contest – so I'm a Celeb and Strictly, but with kids.

DAVID BUTCHER

Hospital

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY At just 36 hours old, baby Violet must have a life-saving operation. She's so heartbreakingly tiny and her parents sit beside her cot, whey-faced and bent with worry. The staff have tried to persuade mum Amber to take a nap, but she can't. "You daren't close your eyes, in case you don't see her again..."

In another excellent episode about a health service that trundles along saving lives despite underfunding and lack of staff, we're at Liverpool Women's, the last remaining hospital trust in the UK that cares for women and babies. The hospital is two consultants down, with just four instead of six, and the fear that this will cause delays in diagnosis and treatment is omnipresent. AG

Tin Star

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Beautiful locations. Full-on performances. Dashes of weird horror. Tin Star has plenty going for it, if you like Tarantino-ish revenge drama, not least Tim Roth in the lead, as Jim, a former British cop who becomes police chief in a remote Canadian town, but has a vicious, alcoholic alter ego.

In the first series Jim's young son was shot dead, part of a dizzying cycle of violence that – via nutty plotting – ended high up on a snowy mountain with Jim's teenage daughter shooting him. He survived, we gather tonight, though the outlook isn't great. Provided you approach this in the right spirit – ie as bubbling melodrama that makes no human sense – it's a blast. DB

Torvill & Dean

ITV Hub (expires today)

Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean's journey from a municipal rink in Nottingham to Olympic immortality at Sarajevo 1984 is perfect for a cheesy but deeply enjoyable bio-drama. This charming effort glories in the story's pleasing themes of humble beginnings overcome and naysayers made to eat their words. Poppy Lee Friar and Will Tudor are both tremendous in the title roles.

WISH YOU WERE HERE...?

Bill (Ron Cook) sees his travel show interrupted by murder

Death in Paradise

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Death in Paradise isn't quite the relaxed, easy-going affair it looks. It clamps rigidly onto the same story structure each week, like a Swiss train driver sticks to his timetable: nothing messes with the formula. Which is reassuring, but also daft. Because the formula demands only four (or at a push five) people be in the frame for each murder. Why? So they can be gathered together at the end while we at home think, "It must be her. No wait, it must be him".

This week, the presenter of a TV travel show (Kimberley Nixon) dies during a late-night swim and really, anyone on Saint Marie could be the killer. But no, Jack is convinced it's one of her film crew, so they're the only suspects.

Meanwhile, Florence takes a romantic break with her boyfriend, and Jack adopts a mongoose. Or is it a polecat? No one seems entirely sure. DB

My Week with Marilyn ★★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

If you missed this true-story drama on Christmas Day, this is your last chance to catch it on iPlayer. It's set in 1956, when Marilyn Monroe was paired with Laurence Olivier to star in British movie The Prince and the Showgirl. Eddie Redmayne plays Colin Clark, a runner on the film who becomes a companion to the screen siren during her stay. Michelle Williams captivates as Marilyn, while Kenneth Branagh makes for a hilariously scathing Olivier. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL

A celebration of Sundance

Today sees the launch of the Sundance film festival in Utah, a winter diary date for fans and industry types since 1985. Sky Select marks the launch with four previous nominees and winners. First up, there's futuristic tale Marjorie Prime, which is followed by hip-hop drama Hustle & Flow (pictured), hip black comedy Ingrid Goes West and Arab Spring thriller The Nile Hilton Incident. Movies generating a buzz at this year's festival include Gavin Hood's Official Secrets, Dan Gilroy's Velvet Buzzsaw and Joanna Hogg's The Souvenir. Oh, and do pack some thick socks. ANDREW COLLINS

Taking the plunge

Swimming with Men ★★★★★ Netflix

You may have overlooked this comedy drama when it arrived on Netflix over the festive period, but it's worth seeking out. Among a fine ensemble of British stalwarts, Rob Brydon stars as a bored number-cruncher who joins a male amateur synchronised swimming team and rediscovers his romantic mojo. ALAN JONES

TROUBLED SOUL
Curate Leonard Finch (Al Weaver) has lost a friend now Sidney's gone

PICK OF THE DAY Grantchester 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA "Every end is a new beginning," suggests Leonard tentatively from the pulpit. Well yes, kind of, but it can also mean missing the thing that has ended – in this case, James Norton's time on Grantchester. With Sidney out of the picture, the drama feels cut adrift: what is the show about if not a soul-searching vicar and his bromance with a grumpy copper?

We're still waiting to discover, and talking of bromance, this week's crime – which Geordie tackles with eager help from Leonard – involves very close male friendships at the university, the sort of thing that gets Geordie using the word "proclivities" and muttering about "when men were men". Although in all this, the DI seems strangely unconcerned that (at the time Grantchester is set) homosexuality is against the law.

Meanwhile, the prospective new vicar, the Rev Will Davenport (Tom Brittney), arrives on a motorbike. His first challenge – win over purse-lipped terror Mrs Chapman. DAVID BUTCHER See feature: page 15

FA Cup Match of the Day Live

SPORT Arsenal v Manchester United

The most successful teams in FA Cup history go head to head in the opening game of the fourth-round weekend. In the third round the BBC gambled on Cup upsets and came up trumps as Newport County and Wolves provided the shocks. Now they'll be hoping that two Premier League giants can deliver a classic.

United's caretaker manager Ole Gunnar Solskjaer is up for the task: he remembers how beating Arsenal in the semi-final replay 20 years ago was the "catalyst" for winning the treble that season. "We need these games. These players need the big games to be challenged," he said after the draw. JAMES GILL

Jeremy Wade's Mighty Rivers

8.00pm ITV (N Ireland: 10.45pm; not STV or Border Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY "A healthy river can look after itself," Jeremy Wade reckons, but even the Mississippi is under threat from invasive species, increased shipping and destruction of the habitat. He therefore goes in search of three giant and pretty monstrous predatory fish – the lake sturgeon, the paddle fish and the alligator gar – whose presence (or absence) is a good indication of the river's state. First, he sees how Asian carp, introduced to control algae in the 70s, have destroyed fish stocks. The sight of hundreds of them leaping from the water is extraordinary – no wonder there's no room for native species. JANE RACKHAM

Jamie and Jimmy's Friday Night Feast

8.00pm C4

FOOD The guests this show pulls in are extraordinary. The cachet of Jamie Oliver and Jimmy Doherty somehow persuades big stars to travel a couple of hours out of London for what must be the best part of a day's filming at the Southend Pier "café" (just a set really: it has no life outside the series). And then the guests have to work for their keep, too, cooking dishes for the "customers".

This week their obliging sous-chef is Hollywood actor Jessica Chastain, of Zero Dark Thirty and Molly's Game. As Chastain is a vegan, Jamie and Jimmy come up with a menu of plant-based food, including Jamie's pea falafel fritter wrap. DB

The Victorian House of Arts and Crafts

9.00pm BBC2 (not N Ireland or Scotland)

HISTORY The artisans in that beautiful Welsh country house seem to have ironed out their differences – Ilsa and Rod have had a heart to heart. Everyone is now such good friends that they gamely complete one of their requested tasks, a group performance of what turns out to be an excruciating live-action version of Edward Lear's The Owl and the Pussycat.

As for the actual making-stuff parts of the show, some things of real beauty are produced. Rod must make a set of firedogs, while two of the women who have never before designed curtains must... design curtains. ALISON GRAHAM

Legal eagle Iohario Adam Barlow in Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) really needs a decent storyline.

All he does is try to sleep with female characters whose relationships are on the rocks. Tonight, it's Sarah (right), who's so keen to avoid Gary that she ends up back at Adam's love pad for a nightcap.

Back in 2016, Adam was reintroduced as this suave solicitor who, underneath the surface charm, was definitely more Better Call Saul than Perry Mason. But he's now spending more time chasing women than ambulances. He and his lawyer partner Imran (who slept with both Battersby sisters) should get involved in something nefarious soon so that Adam can get his edge back.

It looks as if Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) stalwart Mrs Tembe is set on a change of vocation. After visiting Gordon at church, she tells him she's decided to become a vicar. But has she really thought about how long the training will take? It's going to require more than the power of prayer. DAVID BROWN

On Guitar... Lenny Kaye!

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Lenny Kaye seems a left-field choice to present a history of rock guitar, since his name won't mean much to people who aren't fans of the Patti Smith Group. He does a fair job of riffing us from Les Paul to Ed Sheeran, but there are none of the inspiring insights of previous editions on drums and bass.

Kaye is mostly interested in how the guitar evolved via effects pedals – the fuzz box on Satisfaction or the Jimi Hendrix wah-wah on Voodoo Chile. We're told that the first tremolo pedal had an actual vial of liquid mercury in it – which is nicely bizarre – and there are clips of some of the worst "shredding" (widdly-widdly heavy metal solos) you'll ever see or hear. DAVID BUTCHER

QI

10.00pm BBC2

QUIZ Procrastination is this week's theme – except, we're told, the QI Elves took their time in coming up with anything so the initial questions involve crying babies (apparently an American paediatrician in the 60s recommended ignoring them or they would grow up to be socialists), pronunciation and the bizarre use of a specially designed hat, as modelled by Alan Davies.

When Sandi Toksvig is finally given a set of procrastination questions, there's a brilliantly apt post-klaxon caption to go with them. Unusually there are three female bantermeisters this week: Nikki Bedi, Aisling Bea and Holly Walsh. Clearly it's no longer such a struggle to entice women to join TV panel shows. JR

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The last time Dame Judi Dench and Sir Kenneth Branagh shared Graham's red sofa, we learnt that she almost went on stage without her skirt when they were performing together in The Winter's Tale. "I had the briefest of looks and can confirm," he said, "there's nothing like a dame!"

Hopefully she'll be fully dressed for tonight's show when they'll be talking about their new collaboration, All Is True. The film, exploring the final years of William Shakespeare, "tiptoes between fact and fiction" and has received mixed reviews, but if there was an Oscar for chat-show appearances, Dench and Branagh would share it. JR

Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt

Netflix

Netflix's first ever original comedy has gradually faded in the public's minds over four series, and these new episodes are to be the last. Even if they'll come and go without much fanfare, the adventures of a naive young woman in New York still bring a hit of goofy sweetness and a handful of zingers per episode. It might not be goodbye, either: there's talk of a movie.

JAMAICAN LARKS
Usain Bolt is put through his paces by Romesh Ranganathan and Rob Beckett

Rob and Romesh vs Usain Bolt

9.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY New series Here's the latest addition to Sky 1's roster of programmes featuring Brits complaining sarcastically in foreign countries, as comedians Romesh Ranganathan and Rob Beckett jet around the globe meeting their sporting idols. And it's clear from the off that Romesh has been cast as the grumpy Tommy Cannon to Rob's ebullient Bobby Ball.

Their interview "preparation" ahead of meeting Usain Bolt in Jamaica consists of a series of laddish larks, including an attempt to join a local dance troupe on a TV talent show. The prospect of dancing live terrifies the pair so much that, just for an instant, their jokey façades begin to crack.

Usain Bolt only pops up in the last ten minutes. And when Beckett finally meets the star, he opens with a humdinger: "When did you first realise you were fast?" GARY ROSE

7.30 FA Cup Match of the Day Live

RT Arsenal v Manchester United

Coverage of the standout tie in the fourth round from the Emirates Stadium (kick-off 7.55). Both teams have an impeccable record in the FA Cup, with Arsenal having won a record 13 times while Manchester United are only one win away from equalling them. The Gunners came out on top the last time the two sides met in the competition, in the 2014/15 season, with former United star Danny Welbeck scoring the winning goal at Old Trafford in the sixth round as Arsène Wenger's side went on to win the trophy. Yet when they met in the Premier League in December, there was nothing to decide between the sides as they played out an exciting 2-2 draw at Old Trafford. Expect similar thrills here. See page 112. Producer Andrew Clement; Editor Steve Rudge (S) (HD)

Screaming in silence

A Quiet Place ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere
This sensational shocker written and directed by, and starring John Krasinski is an instant sci-fi horror classic. In the very near future, blind insectoid monsters with super-sensitive hearing have wiped out most of humanity. The few survivors must tiptoe around the dangerous environment, including a family comprising Krasinski, Emily Blunt and their children. Krasinski's brilliantly economic storytelling is a masterclass in evoking tension, while the stalking creatures really are the stuff of nightmares. ALAN JONES

Costner's west

Open Range ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW
This beautifully crafted and well-acted western from Kevin Costner leaves Channel 5's catch-up service at the end of this weekend. It's set in a fascinating period of frontier history, when the traditional free-ranging cattlemen and their herds were harassed and attacked by settled ranchers. While Costner is impressive as the taciturn Charley, it's Robert Duvall's restrained performance as the de facto father to the "family" of travelling cowpokes that is the movie's real powerhouse. ADAM SMITH

Fables to savour

The Big Bad Fox and Other Tales ★★★★ Sky Store
Hand-drawn, retro-styled and very cute, this cartoon compendium is the perfect antidote to all that fast and frantic CGI fare. The three tales are pure animal magic, brought to life by a voice cast that includes Celia Imrie, Ade Edmondson, Bill Bailey and Phill Jupitus. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Hidden depths

What happened when Alex Preston went in search of the author whose book changed his life?

Searching for Swimming Pools

Monday 8.00pm Radio 4

SOMETIMES, YOU COME upon a book that speaks to you so directly, so personally, that there's something almost indecent about it, as if the author has read your diary. In the late 1990s, I was given a copy of Charles Sprawson's swimming memoir Haunts of the Black Masseur by a friend at university. It was a book that came plastered with praise from the likes of Iris Murdoch and JG Ballard; it had been a bestseller a few years earlier.

Haunts was a luminous, erudite record of the author's waterborne life, interlaced with meditations on a host of other literary swimmers. I read it in a single, feverish sitting, and then immediately rushed out to Blackwell's to see what else they had by this prodigiously gifted author.

There was nothing then, and there has been nothing since. For years it seemed as if Sprawson had left his book and then disappeared into one of the deep, ruin-haunted pools about which he wrote so beautifully. Then, by chance, I got word of him through a friend of a friend.

In his late 60s, Sprawson was ill, down on his luck, but, thrillingly, had embarked on a second book about swimming. By this time, wild swimming was all the rage, with writers such as Roger Deakin and Jenny Landreth using the template that Sprawson had established with Haunts (which was by now out of print) to fashion their own enormously successful swimming memoirs.

Then I got more news about Sprawson: his condition had deteriorated. He'd had a fall and was in a west London hospital, diagnosed with vascular dementia. I went to visit Charles, who was still sprightly, still writing, often remarkably coherent. He expected to be out very soon, he told me, and was looking forward to returning to his book-lined flat where he'd be able to concentrate more fully on the work-in-progress.

Over the course of 2017, it became my habit to visit Charles every few weeks, taking him books and news of the literary world. It felt like a kind of payback, I suppose, for the huge impact Haunts had had on my own life, a way of conveying to him how much that book had meant to me. Also, he was usually excellent company.

Occasionally he'd take a while to recognise me, and a few times I found him fuddled and frustrated, pacing the corridors of the hospital looking for the swimming pool that he assured me was shimmering behind a door somewhere.

Mostly, though, he was the same urbane, elegant, slightly louche figure that I'd seen in the superb 2004 film that was made of Haunts by Canadian director Jeffrey McKay.

Charles's illness progressed – he became confused more easily; every time I went to see him he'd greet me with the same bemused half-smile. He was moved from one hospital to another, then to a nursing home in Barnes. I spoke about Haunts on Backlisted, a podcast in which authors champion books they believe to have been unjustly forgotten, and was delighted with the messages I received from dozens of listeners who'd loved the book and, like me, had wondered what had happened to its author. One of those who contacted me was a radio producer called Paul Smith. Paul said he'd like to make a programme about Charles and, with some initial scepticism, I agreed. Searching for Swimming Pools is the result.

OVER THE COURSE of 2018, Paul came to sit with me in Charles's room at the care home. When summer arrived, we'd take ourselves outside and drink tea in the courtyard. Often, Charles would glower in silence, or mumble incoherently, and Paul would pack away his recording equipment and head home with no useable material. On other days, though, and particularly when we spoke about swimming, it was as if Charles were rising up from somewhere very deep, or as if thick clouds had suddenly parted.

During those moments of lucidity, which could last minutes or hours, Charles would speak with the old familiar warmth and wit. He told us of swimming the Tagus estuary in Lisbon, of diving into flooded Roman ruins in Libya; above all, he spoke to us of crossing the Hellespont – the stretch of the Turkish Dardanelles that separates Europe from Asia.

There was good news, too. In the rush of benevolence that followed the Backlisted podcast, Vintage decided to republish Haunts in a beautiful new edition. We threw Charles a launch party at Lutyens & Rubinstein bookshop in Notting Hill. The room was packed with family, friends and fans. I remember the sight of Charles at the end of the evening, standing outside the shop in the fading light, holding the hand of one of his grandchildren, beaming.

In making my Radio 4 programme about Charles, what continued to strike me was how rich and complex a life he led. It would have been easy for this to be a mournful, melancholic piece of radio, but it isn't – it's a celebration. Charles, now 77, isn't going to get better, and yet this isn't a tragedy, isn't just a story of decline. We still have Charles's book, and with the Vintage edition on the shelves of bookshops a whole new generation will fall in love with it and its eccentric, studious author.

Last summer I decided, in an act that was half-homage, half-fundraiser, to swim the Hellespont myself. Like Charles (and Byron before him), I swam breaststroke, and managed the crossing in a little over an hour. The passages about Charles's Hellespont swim in the book – his daughter, Clare, swam alongside him – are joyful, hilarious, horrifying. It's clear that part of Charles's swimming obsession was driven by the fact that he was terrified of deep water. Now, as he wrestles with challenges deeper, darker and more frightening than any ocean, I'm delighted that we've been given the chance to pay tribute to this wonderful writer, this lovely man.

Archive on 4: Fake News

Saturday 8.00pm Radio 4

This column could be my opinion on this programme. On the other hand, I may have been held hostage in a small, dark basement room at Broadcasting House until I crafted these words (or, more preferably, been sent a lifetime's supply of Marmite to write it).*

That's the thing these days, who can you trust, as the man in the White House Trump is so keen on reminding us (when it suits him, of course)?

Thankfully, satirist Gareth Gwynn (who writes for The Now Show and The News Quiz) has been granted unprecedented access to the BBC's archive so that he can remind us of how Margaret Thatcher's (below) firm stance against climate change prevented Britain from becoming waterlogged. And then there is the mind-boggling evidence that the first man to land on the moon was actually from Russia.

How easy it is to forget that, after stepping down as leader of the Labour Party, Tony Blair went on to become the European President.

And will we ever be able to forgive the strike by the Writers Guild of America for the events that lead to the election of Donald Trump?

Settle down for an hour of factual and fictional news on how very different our world might have been if any of these stories were possibly true.

*I have not actually listened to this show. Or have I?

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Lower Loxley could be the scene of an intervention after Kenton finds the place in uproar. As Elizabeth makes a shocking confession, Kenton is so concerned that he rallies Shula and David – but will they be able to get through to their troubled sister?

Tempers flare for the Aldridges when Jennifer calls an emergency partnership meeting. As one member of the clan digs their heels in, another one gives a life-changing ultimatum. Helen's behaviour continues to arouse suspicion as she and Lee grow closer. Plus Ed has money on his mind as he fears that he and Emma will struggle to pay the mortgage and house deposit. But could there soon be hope on the horizon? DAVID BROWN

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

From hell to heal

At last, a solution to the Brexit debate...

IT'S ONE OF the most important moments in living memory and yet the media hardly ever talks about it. Why is that? Is it the famous elite? Is it the slightly less famous elite who mainly do reality shows? (By the way, did you see the other week that a man who went on a TV reality show to find love, but didn't, has found love with a woman who went on a different TV reality show to find love, but didn't. I'm not sure what it means but surely there's a TV reality show in it? Can people who came fourth on I'm a Celebrity put insects in the mouths of people who fell over first on Dancing on Ice? Simon Cowell, if you're reading this, call me.)

Where was I? Yes, I'm going to smash the conspiracy of silence over Brexit with my baseball bat of truth. Sorry for the violent imagery but I feel so enraged that so few people are discussing it.

The only brave souls who seem prepared to give frank and honest answers to Brexit questions are Theresa May and Jeremy Corbyn. Thank goodness we can rely on them for candid lucidity. Where would we be, I wonder, if instead of their clear-eyed veracity, we were subjected to mealy-mouthed self-serving humbug?

'Is a UK without the EU a Nitd Kingdom ...like the Clangers?'

I particularly admire the way neither politician shirks direct questions like: "Is Brexit better for the economy than remaining?" "Would you carry out anything the people voted for even if you thought it was bonkers?" "Have you ever offered Jean-Claude Juncker a breath mint?" "What's your favourite thing about Tony Blair and Sir John Redwood and who would win in a mud-wrestling contest?"

We'd be badly served indeed if we got only meaningless parroted soundbites from our leaders at a time like this. Can you imagine how history would judge us if we meekly accepted such nonsense?

There are people on both sides of the debate who would be genuinely distraught if they lost. But in the middle – and it's a middle bigger than a post-Christmas belly – there are vast swathes of people for whom the whole process is traumatic.

I've taken calls on my LBC show from people who no longer talk to their relatives because of Brexit. There's quite a generational divide: older people thrilled at the prospect of finally being free of the EU are furious at their children and grandchildren who want to stand in their way. Some of those younger voters consider their elders to be blitheringly out of touch: creating an EU-less future the grandparents won't live to see. They believe a United Kingdom without the EU is a Nitd Kingdom... like the Clangers.

ONE REMAIN CALLER described how his husband had fibbed about how he'd voted in the referendum: when the remainder realised he was sharing his life with a leaver... well, he thought about leaving, ironically enough.

The other day I asked listeners how the divisions might be healed once this whole thing reaches a definitive conclusion. Many felt they could not accept it if the other side prevailed. A few called for more moderate language and less hysteria, to try to calm the national soul.

I've suggested we just put James O'Brien and Nigel Farage in a mud-filled room wearing loin-cloths and whoever emerges victorious gets to decide. But only one of them seems keen. I will keep you posted.

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

On the occasion of his recent 90th birthday Bernard Cribbins spoke to BBC Local Radio about his favourite comedy records.

Bernard Cribbins' Comedy Classics

can be accessed via BBC Sounds. This is a good thing, not least because masterpieces of the comedy record genre such as Right Said Fred and Hole in the Ground played an important part in his illustrious career. The latter, which a friend of mine regards as the pinnacle of class consciousness in music, was one of Noël Coward's choices when he guested on Desert Island Discs. Cribbins repays the compliment by playing the Master's similarly resonant Mad Dogs and Englishmen on his programme.

Bottling a good laugh

This show, which features such jewels as The Biggest Aspidistra in the World and The Laughing Policeman, reminds us what we've lost now that we seem to have decided we can get by without comedy records. All comedy records are, if you think about it, weird.

This holds whether you're dealing with something broad like Benny Hill's song about Ernie the milkman or something as refined as Michael Flanders and Donald Swann performing The Gnu Song.

The very idea of repeating a joke until you have internalised a record's every nuance is deeply strange.

A master craftsman

Luckily a lot of the great comedy records were worth it. Long before he was devising soundscapes for the Beatles, producer George Martin was shaping tiny masterpieces like Peter Sellers and Irene Handl's Shadows on the Grass and My Boomerang Won't Come Back by Charlie Drake. Comedy and the gramophone record were made for each other. Before the advent of first the home VCR and then YouTube, you couldn't repeat favourite entertainment experiences. The only way that you could repeat a favourite laugh was by either investing in a copy of an LP by Bob Newhart or Tony Hancock or by asking a request show like Three-Way Family Favourites to play it for you.

The vinyl countdown

The comedy record now belongs to the past. Its lifespan turned out to be about the same as physical products. Particularly at the end of the year, we are reminded that the decline of comedy records, which used to make ideal gifts, has been just another factor in the decline of the high street. You can't put a download under the tree.

Saturday Night at the Movies

5.00pm Classic FM

Awards season is upon us like glittery flu and now that the Golden Globes and Baftas have been added to honours bestowed by assorted critics' circles, resistance to the climactic welly of the Oscars is futile. To honour the unbearable anticipation, I'll be playing orchestral music from the contenders, including Terence Blanchard's semi-pastoral score for BlackKkKlansman, a tender love theme from Crazy Rich Asians by Brian Tyler, and from First Man by La La Land's Justin Hurwitz, astonishingly deep, dark and meaningful. Prediction is a fool's errand, but we'll play something from Mary Poppins Returns (above) and Nicholas Britell's unlikely conjurings for Dick Cheney biopic Vice.

Opera on 3: from the Met

6.30pm Radio 3

Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande is as much a celebration of the beauties of the French language as an evocation of the story's ambiguous emotions. In tonight's broadcast, the Met's dynamic new music director, Yannick Nézet-Séguin, should lend it a distinctively French-Canadian accent, while the all-American trio of Isabel Leonard, Paul Appleby and Kyle Ketelsen inhabit the roles of the increasingly passionate Pelléas and Mélisande and the jealously fratricidal Golaud.

The Hurricane Tapes

10.30pm BBC World Service

This is one of America's most celebrated boxers – Rubin "Hurricane" Carter whose career was brought to a premature end when, in 1966, he was convicted of walking into a bar in New Jersey, with another young black man, and shooting four white people, three of whom died. Carter went to jail for 18 years, spending his entire incarceration insisting he'd been framed by a corrupt and racist police force. Bob Dylan took up Carter's cause with his 1975 song Hurricane and a judge eventually overturned the guilty verdicts. Carter died in 2014 but two BBC journalists have gained access to 40 hours of recordings that he made. The revelations in these tapes have never been heard before and, in the context of the civil rights events of the time, make for a fascinating if rather bleak listen in this new 12-part series. Let the truth be told. JANE ANDERSON RADIO EDITOR

Heart and Soul: Raven

9.30am/12.05pm/11.30pm
BBC World Service

That beautiful bird, the raven, was almost brought to extinction in the UK because of false associations it had with the spread of the Black Death. In other cultures it has been held in higher esteem, from its position on the shoulders of Norse god Odin to its role in the story of Noah and the Ark. The writer Joe Shute is a fan and travels to the islands of Haida Gwaii off Canada's north-west coast, where one of two tribes is devoted to the bird. The recordings of the raven's calls and the respect in which they are held is like something from another world. JANE ANDERSON

7.30 Drama on 3: Arden of Faversham
In 1551 in Tudor England, Alice and her lover Mosby conspire with hired killers to murder Alice's husband Arden. This anonymous play, adapted by Alison Hindell, is the first example of a brutal true crime story on the English stage and resonates with our contemporary fascination with all things noir. Based closely on Raphael Holinshed's account of the murder, the work was first published in 1592.

Great Lives

4.30pm Radio 4

"Who wants to live for ever?" Freddie Mercury (above) famously crooned on Queen's 1986 album A Kind Of Magic. The question may be rhetorical, but Mercury's star still shines bright nearly three decades after his death. Here, comedian Matt Lucas nominates the Queen frontman, born Farrokh Bulsara, as his great life. It's easy to see why Lucas, known for his own larger-than-life comic personas, would be drawn to the rock legend's sense of mischief, though inevitably there's the darker side to the Freddie Mercury story too; one that tends to overshadow the singer's many feats. Helping to fill in the blanks is Lesley-Ann Jones, author of the Mercury biography Bohemian Rhapsody. With the film of the same name having defied box office expectations and earned Mercury legions of new fans, the timing of this could not be better. TOM GOULDING

The Romanian Wave

11.00am Radio 4

Romanians are now Britain's second largest nationality, for the first time overtaking the number of Indian and Irish nationals that call the UK home. For some, this community is welcome – a population whose workforce props up Britain's institutions and industries. Others are less impressed. Discussions surrounding immigration in Britain are so often drowned out or distorted; here Tessa Dunlop attempts to paint a clearer picture of what it is to be Romanian in Britain in 2019. And she asks a pertinent question: why are so many people leaving Romania in the first place? TOM GOULDING

Drama: Hello Caller 2.15pm Radio 4

Annette Badland (above) heads up a strong ensemble cast in this brilliant idea for a drama. As is made clear in the brief introduction, so many old telephone kiosks have now been decommissioned in the age of the mobile phone, but what would happen if voices from the past had become "trapped" in the decades' worth of circuitry? This leads to an unconnected sequence of calls and voices from different call boxes around the country. Some are comic: two women who have both been sleeping with the same married man discussing his predictable peccadillos. Others are distinctly chilling, such as the young man who strikes up a conversation with a fellow sixth-former and realises that she is set to fly upon a plane that crashes, killing all its passengers. A smart piece of writing from Jonathan Holloway. JANE ANDERSON

Foul Play

Radio 4 Extra

I really hope that writer Simon Brett (creator of the wonderful Charles Paris mysteries) got some kind of credit when BBC1 launched the daytime TV sleuthing series Armchair Detectives in 2017. The premise was almost exactly the same as his Foul Play radio series, which first went out in 1996: actors perform scenes from a crime, typically a murder, and guests are asked to work out the culprit, with a few clues thrown in along the way. Brett's guests, however, are not amateurs: they are crime writers. Surely this gives them a huge advantage? As you'll hear, not necessarily. JANE ANDERSON

11.00 Millennials in the Workplace
Beanbags are what millennials supposedly want from a job – along with free food and the lofty idea of "making an impact". That's what academic Simon Sinek's video about "millennials in the workplace" – with its 10 million views – would have you believe. But how true is the idea of a "snowflake" generation? Why has the millennial generation become the most mocked and derided in the workplace? India Rakusen investigates. Producer Elizabeth Duffy

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Stephanie (Steph) Newenhouse BBC Radio Solent

Age 31

Current job Producer and presenter of BBC Radio Solent's weekday evening show The Early Late Show (Mon-Fri 7.00pm) and BBC Music Introducing (Saturday 8.00pm). She is also the voice of Superdrug Radio.

CV Born in Surrey and brought up in Hampshire, she studied English Literature and Media at the University of Sussex, first broadcasting for student radio. Worked for Southern FM while a student, then in PR and sales for Virgin Radio, while also presenting for Shoreditch Radio. Then Breeze Radio and Express FM in Portsmouth, joining Radio Solent in 2016.

Best moment "I have a passion for promoting unsigned and new talent, so it was great to take the wonderful Southampton band Wild Front to the BBC Introducing stage at Glastonbury in 2017."

Worst moment "Dressing up as a banana for a wacky outside broadcast for Southern FM – I got a lot of attention along the Hastings seafront!"

Off air "I'm currently living with my family in a village near Basingstoke, Hampshire, while I save up for a deposit on a flat. In my spare time I enjoy spin classes at the gym – and I signed up for the Rickshaw Challenge for Children in Need."

First radio memory "Inspired by Radio 1, I interviewed my little sister and recorded her – with a jingle!"

Favourite broadcasters "Annie Mac for her dedication and for being an inspirational female role model. And Scott Mills and Greg James for constantly re-inventing their programmes."

Ambition "BBC Music Introducing is really in my head, so I want to continue to give new bands and artists a platform."

Dream job "Presenting the Glastonbury Festival for Radio 1 would be pretty cool."

Secret skills "I learnt to play the guitar and keyboards for a while. I've done two half marathons. And I love Italian food – I do a rather good spaghetti carbonara." DAVID GILLARD

The price of good food

Hunting out bargains is a false economy, says Sheila Dillon

MY MUM (a full-time cotton weaver during my childhood) wasn't a despiser of people, but she was opinionated, and one of her most strongly held opinions was that people who economised on food to fancy their houses or upgrade their cars were, well, despicable. We had a limited income and probably spent up to 20 per cent of it on food for a family of five. Now the average spend is about ten per cent... higher if you earn very little.

But trying to talk about the problems caused by cheap food – of cheapness being the key value that food must have in the UK – isn't easy. The conversation is quickly shut down with accusations that you're a member of the chattering middle classes who doesn't understand how the poor need cheap food. Which stops all discussion of why the poor are poor (and getting poorer), but also ignores the several million people who have middle-class incomes but choose to spend as little as they can on food. So, a factory-farmed chicken not a free-range, "bargain" milk, the cheapest fruit and veg from anywhere, even when English apples or Scottish potatoes or Lincolnshire carrots and broccoli are sparkling fresh and often just pennies more.

Unless you're at a street market, or keep your eyes open for seasonal gluts, when you buy the cheapest you're usually buying into the big corporations, operating on a global scale. They're in the business of serving their shareholders, and that means – usually – cutting the bottom line as fine as they can. That's one of the drivers of factory farming, with the increase in antibiotic use that entails. It also drives more pesticide use, to ensure cosmetically perfect crops.

IF YOU CAN afford to, it pays to buy quality food – for your own health, the health of the planet, as well as our national and local economies. Since 2000 the BBC Food and Farming Awards have been celebrating the companies, shops and cooks who not only produce great food but transform those economies... creating jobs, buying their ingredients locally, being part of a sustaining circle where money stays local rather than being sucked away to who knows where.

We need to talk about inequality, but we also need to talk about why millions of us care so little about food.

Sheila Dillon presents The Food Programme on Radio 4

Walking the poverty

Stephanie Land gives a unique insight into the fight to survive in a low-paid job in the USA – and what that taught her about her country...

Book of the Week: Maid

Monday–Friday 9.45am/12.30am Radio 4

I STILL HAVE NIGHTMARES about being in areas where I don't have cellphone service," says Stephanie Land. "In those dreams I cross the threshold back in range of service and look down at my phone and just see all of these missed calls and find out that something has happened to my daughter and no one could reach me."

The author of Maid: Hard Work, Low Pay and a Mother's Will to Survive is explaining down the phone from the north-western American state of Montana how she struggled on the tightrope of poverty for four years. In the attempt to make enough money for her and Mia, then under five, she'd have to drive up to 100 miles a day to clean remote houses that put her out of contact with the daycare centre where her daughter was.

She wasn't paid for the travelling time between the two or three houses she cleaned each day to give her a 20- to 25-hour working week. "When I factored in how much money I had to spend on gas, I figured out I was making $5 or $6 an hour most days."

Of course, that wasn't enough to pay her bills and she couldn't take on more hours because she had to work around

Mia's daycare. So she had to apply for government assistance. At one time, she received or participated in seven different grants and programmes, including Medicaid for her daughter's healthcare, a grant for their electricity, childcare vouchers and food stamps for everyday groceries.

Even with such help, life was hard. "I didn't realise how hard until I started writing this book. I couldn't stop to think about it before. I wouldn't have been able to continue." She tells of a contemporary America where low-paid jobs don't provide enough to live on – especially for a single mother – and government support that puts the onus on the claimant to work a number of hours a week but not so many as to lose essential assistance.

Land is now 40 and looking back on the struggles that began to ease six years ago. Hers is a voice that is too rarely heard and one that gains confidence as the pages go on. Asking for help in such circumstances comes at a price and she is clear-sighted about the lack of understanding and stigma that poverty attracts. In the supermarket, she recalls the tutting cashiers and disapproving shoppers who were held up when she'd need to use her Electronic Benefit

Card (the credit card loaded with food stamps).

“You could get medium-sized eggs but not large eggs,” she tells me, “and there were so many times when they’d have to send the bagger at the till to run back and get a different-sized egg or cereal box. You could only get the amounts the government allowed. But sometimes there wasn’t the right thing in the store.”

SHE REPORTS MORE than one shopper grumbling aloud about their tax going on her food stamps, especially when she enquires about organic milk as she is concerned about overuse of antibiotics. But she heaped even harsher judgement upon herself.

“In America it’s drilled into you from childhood that if you work hard enough then you can live the American Dream. So for people who are failing at that the response is, ‘I must not be working hard enough.’ There was always a hole of shame within me that I wasn’t able to provide Mia with the childhood that I wanted.”

Despite her obvious awareness and desire for healthy eating for herself and her daughter, the one treat she describes buying Mia after an unexpected tax rebate is a trip to McDonald’s. “The Happy Meal was a huge treat for her. You get your own little box, with the toy in and the chocolate milk. I know that McDonald’s is not the best food, but it was more about all the things it represents. I couldn’t give her her own room with matching furniture and sheets but at least I could give her this little $5 meal that for an hour she would be tickled pink with, completely overjoyed. You look for little things like that that you can give your child.”

As much as Maid is about the low-paid, it’s also about the middle-class America that Land witnesses through the big houses she cleans.

“I started the job thinking, ‘As soon as I have a house like this I’m going to be happy and nothing can go wrong. I will be living my best life.’ But I was cleaning a lot of spaces that weren’t getting used and I didn’t understand why people would work such long hours to have spaces in their house like that. I saw houses where the people who lived in them didn’t spend much time together – they had their separate parts that they’d go to when they were home. So there was a sort of disenchantment that happened.”

Most of what Land writes about happened under Obama’s presidency. Her own circumstances are now improved (she finished a degree and works successfully as a journalist and teacher), but she definitely thinks life for those balanced on the poverty line is more difficult under President Trump. So is that making people more politicised? “I’m not sure how much that population really notices,” she says. “Once you’re in that lifestyle of an impoverished situation, you focus on immediate needs. And your stress level is so high, it actually depletes your IQ! Your brain isn’t functioning the way that it should.”

By way of hope, Land reports the welcome compassion of some of the owners of the homes she cleans. One woman left her gifts, ‘Once you are impoverished you focus on immediate needs’ including a scented candle, with kind notes.

“I loved that candle. It was like a ‘You deserve something nice’ just when I didn’t feel like I did. Look at where I was – I felt like a complete failure all the time. But I do thank her and the other clients who tried to treat me like a human being and who tried to connect with me instead of mistrusting me because I was a stranger on a low income coming into their house and they didn’t know if I was going to steal anything or not.”

Land’s book is an education – and there’s a lesson in there for us all. FIONA HUGHES

WASHINGTON BLACK
ESI EDUGYAN
Book at Bedtime
10.45pm Mon–Fri Radio 4

Forget Richard and Judy, or Oprah – since 2015, when Barack Obama first shared his summer reading list, a namecheck from the former US president has become one of the literary world’s highest accolades. Earlier this month he shared his favourite books of 2018 – among them was the Man Booker-shortlisted Washington Black (£14.99, incl p&p) by Canadian novelist Esi Edugyan. Its eponymous protagonist is a young field slave on a Barbados plantation whose life’s trajectory is changed when he is taken under the wing of his master’s brother, Titch. Through him he receives a scientific and artistic education – and a chance to escape.

BILLY CONNOLLY

In December, Billy Connolly told RT that he would never go on tour again, after being diagnosed with Parkinson’s disease in 2013. But the 76-year-old comedian has as much to say as ever, and in Made in Scotland: My Grand Adventures in a Wee Country (£18, incl p&p) he expands on some of the tales he told in BBC2’s recent two-part documentary Billy Connolly: Made in Scotland, from his time working on the Clyde shipyards and his days in folk band the Humblebums to becoming a comedy superstar.

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS
JOHN GUY

On page 24, Saoirse Ronan discusses her latest big-screen role, as Mary Queen of Scots in the new film of the same name. Director Josie Rourke has attracted criticism for putting an invented meeting between Mary and her cousin Elizabeth I at the heart of the drama, but in fact it’s otherwise closely aligned to historical events; it’s based on John Guy’s award-winning 2004 biography (£8.99, plus £1.50 p&p), which added new dimensions to the queen often remembered more for her untimely end than her tenacity, resilience and leadership. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Should free TV licences stay or go?

Time is running out to make your views known on free TV for the elderly, says Paul Lewis

THE BBC WANTS to hear from you about its plans to cut the number of people who get free television licences. At the moment, a household where someone aged 75 or more lives doesn't have to pay for a TV licence – currently £150.50 a year, rising, it's thought, by around £3 in April.

income by around £745 million in 2021/22 – about 15 per cent of its £5 billion total. That is more than the £656m that the BBC currently spends on all its radio services and almost as much as it spends on all its TV channels, excluding BBC1. Having to find £745m would be a huge blow and, the BBC says, would reduce the quality of the

‘From 2020 the full cost of the concession to over-75s falls on the BBC’

Free TV licences for people over the age of 75 were introduced by then Chancellor Gordon Brown in 2000. They were paid for by the Department for Work and Pensions. Then, as part of the licence fee settlement with the BBC in 2015, the Government agreed that the fee could rise with inflation, but transferred the cost of providing free licences to the BBC.

From June 2020, the full cost of this concession to the over-75s will fall on the BBC, reducing its programming and services it can provide. It suggests three options for reducing the cost:

- A Raise the age limit (to 77 or 80).
- B Raise the amount older people pay from zero to, for example, 50 per cent of the TV licence fee – the reduced rate paid by blind people.
- C Only give a free TV licence where the person aged over 75 has a low enough income to qualify for the means-tested pension credit.

It doesn't include the option of taking free licences from households where the person over 75 is not the householder and wouldn't pay the licence fee anyway.

Age UK has already launched a campaign to preserve the free TV licence in its current form. Director Caroline Abrahams says TV is a lifeline for older people and "there are still significant numbers of older people living on very low incomes who would genuinely struggle to pay the licence fee".

CAN YOU LEAVE A PAY-AS-YOU-GO PHONE UNUSED?

"Is it true that if a dumb mobile phone isn't used for some time, then it won't work when it's needed?" writes Christina.

Unfortunately, that is true. Many people buy a cheap pay-as-you-go mobile for an older relative for them to use in an emergency. They put £20 of credit on the phone, believing that if their elderly parent or grandparent has a problem, they will be able to make a call. But if a pay-as-you-go phone goes unused for six months the number will be deregistered by the network. If that happens, the phone can't be used – perhaps just when it's needed. And any credit on the phone will normally be lost – taken by the network and not refunded.

So it's important that you call any emergency pay-as-you-go mobile belonging to an elderly relative from time to time, and ask them to call you back or send a text. Make sure you keep it topped up with credit – and, of course, remind them to keep it charged.

THERE'S NEVER BEEN A BETTER TIME TO PLAN YOUR SEND-OFF

End-of-life planning is a taboo subject. Many people don't want to talk about it or even accept that it might happen, but it's better to prepare for it, for the sake of your loved ones.

The importance of planning for your funeral lies in the rising cost of dying – which might sound blunt, but it's true. Nowadays, commemorating a loved one is getting more and more expensive.

The average cost of a funeral in 2018 was £4,045*. If prices continue to rise, the cost of a funeral could reach more than £5,700 by 2026.

There are many different factors to consider when assessing the price of a funeral, including Funeral Directors' Costs and Disbursements (such as doctors' fees and clergy fees). There are also significant regional differences, with the most expensive place to die in the UK being London, at an average funeral cost of £5,880†. The south west of England is the next most expensive place for a basic funeral, at £4,685†.

So, what can you do? The answer is to make plans now and choose a funeral provider that you can trust and who respects your wishes.

RT has teamed up with Dignity to offer you the Prepaid Funeral Plan. Dignity have already helped more than 824,000 people to plan for their funeral and pride themselves on being there at one of the most difficult moments of families' lives.

There's no better time than now to get your Funeral Plan from Dignity. Get in touch today and SAVE UP TO £340 off plan prices[‡].

Walter Presents: The River

Available on All4

THE LATEST SCANDI import is set in a village in Arctic Norway, where snow-shrouded peaks and lonely woods are the backdrop to spine-chilling goings-on. When a little girl vanishes after finding a severed hand in a river, the investigation is impeded by the tight-knit Sami community and neighbouring military base, which both harbour dark secrets.

The River was filmed in the region of Malselv, named after a mighty river famous for its salmon and thunderous Malselvossen, one of Norway's finest waterfalls. Some of Europe's last wildernesses are found here: the endless forests are presided over by wild moose, while wolverines and lynx roam the peaks. In summer, you can hike for days without seeing a soul and the sun doesn't set for two months. In winter, you can ski, tackle the trails in snow shoes or hurtle across mountain plateaus on a sleigh pulled by huskies.

The sun disappears completely from the end of November to 12 January, and the only light is a blue-tinged twilight for a few hours a day – unless the northern lights dance across the night sky.

“The nature was amazing. It felt quite exotic to get the chance to live and work in this environment,” says Ingeborg Raustol, who plays The River's ambitious commander in the intelligence corps – one of those no-nonsense female protagonists that Nordic noir so brilliantly celebrates. “I really appreciated the fact that we were so isolated from everyone else. We had a tight schedule and to be able to stay in this world both on and off set was great. We went north in November and the shoot ended just before Christmas. Mostly it was around minus 15 to 20, but some days it was 30 degrees below zero. The other challenge was the lack of light.”

The drama is set even further north in Norwegian Lapland: Finnmark, a county that's bigger than Denmark and borders Russia to the east, Finland to the south and the Atlantic and Arctic oceans to the north. In this sparsely populated region, decades-old political tensions run as deep as the fjords that furrow its coastline.

“During the Second World War, the relationship between Norway and Russia was good and Russia liberated Finnmark,” explains Raustol. “But during the Cold War, the relationship became complicated. Norway participated in Nato and Finland was Soviet, and the fear was that the Soviets would come across the border. Even today, the atmosphere at the borders is tense and we have an ongoing spy case where a Norwegian citizen is accused of spying on Russia.”

Norway is home to around half of the Sami people, who roamed northernmost Europe for thousands of years, herding reindeer and fishing on the coast. They were discriminated against for centuries (“Laplander” is derogatory in Scandinavia) and Finnmark came under suspicion for being more East than West-facing, especially after Russia came to their rescue. “In the postwar years, communists were persecuted in Norway and today there is still paranoia in northern Norway. Most people in the north will probably say that the Cold War is far from over.”

While The River might not cast Arctic Norway in the most flattering light, Raustol hopes it won't put viewers off exploring its wilds. In fact, she thinks everybody should visit twice: in winter and in summer. Which is her favourite? "I can't choose! Norwegian summers are the best. The midnight sun is absolutely wonderful and Norwegians are so cute: it's like they've never experienced summers before and everyone is so happy all the time. And the winters – I love going up to the mountains to my family's cabin and spending my days cross-country skiing."

HER FAVOURITE PLACE to enjoy the midnight sun is Bodo, an arty coastal city encircled by rugged peaks. "Go to the beautiful beach called Mjelle. Bring sleeping bags and everything you need to stay out all night, drinking cava, enjoying the spectacular light in those beautiful northern summer nights."

For those keen to experience an Arctic winter and learn more about Sami culture, she recommends visiting their winter base, Kautokeino, during the Easter festival, when they traditionally gathered before moving their herds to the coast to calve. These days the programme includes reindeer-racing, lasso contests, exhibitions, music concerts and theatre. "Go on a snow scooter safari, join the Sami while they feed their reindeer, go to a Sami party. There's so much going on, a good chance of seeing the northern lights and nice people all over." CLAIRE WEBB

Is it true that London's Pall Mall and the expression "pell mell" are related? Danny Trenter via email

Samuel Pepys's diary for 2 April 1661 records a venture "into St James's Park, where I saw the Duke of York playing at Pelemele". The sport was also known as "paille maille" and "pall mall". It was similar to croquet, requiring players to use a mallet to drive a boxwood ball through an iron ring suspended at the end of a long alley, itself called a "pall-mall". The name comes from the Italian pallamaglio, literally "ball mallet", and was the inspiration for London's Pall Mall, once a popular alleyway for the sport. Despite its similarity, "pell mell", meaning "headlong" or "disorderly", is unrelated. The second element is a form of the French mesler, "to mix", with "pell" probably added for rhyme.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Honouring Amélie

GENTLE PORTRAYAL
Martin Clunes as DCI Sutton in Manhunt

Manhunt (ITV) was one of the most moving factual dramas we've seen, played brilliantly by all those in it. Martin Clunes's soft voice and gentle portrayal of DCI Colin Sutton in pursuing the endless detail that finally nailed the perpetrator of these awful murders were awe-inspiring – as was the dignity shown by those playing Amélie Delagrangé's parents (Stephane Cornicard and Michèle Belgrand, inset above). It was a really fantastic drama that left one in tears, and with admiration and gratitude for police such as those portrayed, while also showing the dreadful toll such work takes on their personal lives.

disappointing. For example, in Les Misérables Jean Valjean was released from prison after 19 years and the make-up was excellent – until he smiled or spoke and showed his perfect white teeth. Surely, it wouldn't have taken much effort to blacken them?
Eileen Poyner via email

AND...IT'S A WRAP!

Nick Smith asked (Feedback, 5 January): "Will the BBC let the Film programme die?" Yet the BBC has been inflicting death by a thousand cuts on it for years. They moved it around the schedules, it was always on late and often cancelled to make way for other programmes, but many film fans remained loyal, following it from the halcyon days of Barry Norman to Jonathan Ross and Claudia Winkleman. But when Claudia left, a mishmash of hosts, some good, some not so good, took over and it was the beginning of the end.

Now a BBC spokesperson tells us they'll be "creating an enhanced offer for lovers of film", whatever that means, with a "more consistent approach" – well, that would make a change.

Whatever became of "if it ain't broke, don't fix it"?

Neil Bailey Folkestone, Kent

GREATEST TRIUMPH...

I have no idea how The Greatest Dancer (Saturday BBC1) will pan out further down the line and I was a bit worried about a show that gave the audience all the power but, oh my goodness, what an emotional rollercoaster the first episode (5 January) was!

To see such a lovely response to the dancers, whatever their background, was amazing and it must have been such a confidence boost for so many people. I can completely understand why Cheryl cried after Andrew's performance because I was crying with her.

Thank you, BBC, for making this such an inclusive show.
Adele Clarke Warrington, Cheshire

...OR GREATEST LETDOWN?

I was looking forward to another dance contest after the end of Strictly Come Dancing, but The Greatest Dancer left me feeling angry and disappointed. How many dance experts were there in that howling mob (that is, the audience) who are supposed to judge the competitors?

None, by the evidence of the first programme, where a talented young ballet dancer was greeted with indifference and not voted through, whereas the "Dad dancer" was cheered on to the next round.

Greatest dancer? As the great Len Goodman might put it: if this is a fair competition, I'll pickle me walnuts...

LUTHER DISAPPOINTS

I had looked forward to watching Luther (BBC1), having previously enjoyed the psychological depth of the characters and the complexity of the plots. However, the recent series appeared to mix scenes of gratuitous violence with an implausible storyline. Sorry, but this viewer won't be returning.

Christine Gates Southport

...A brilliant murder storyline, complex, horrific and absorbing, was lost in the competing story of Luther and Alice. I watched it all, but felt annoyed as the final episode unwound.

Anne Cooper Farnham, Surrey

A FAN OF FANTINE

After watching the harrowing second episode of Les Misérables (6 January BBC1), I think I've already watched the best performance on TV this year: Lily Collins's beautifully tragic portrayal of Fantine. Her fall from grace was unrelenting and brutal, and Collins portrayed that pain, fragility and anguish exceptionally well, making us care for her awful plight. Her big powerhouse scene with Monsieur le Maire and Javert, especially, left me speechless as she held her own against the heavyweight likes of actors Dominic West and David Oyelowo.

Fantine may have fallen, but the magnificent Lily Collins stands tall.

Ryan Pollard Marsden,

THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT

The very best programme throughout the entire holiday season was An American in Paris: the Musical (Christmas Day/New Year's Day BBC2), featuring the music of George and Ira Gershwin. It was thoughtful, enthralling, entertaining and wonderfully constructed and performed.

Congratulations to all involved. Ethne Bailey High Peak, Derbyshire
A treat not to be missed – catch it at bbc.co.uk/programmes/b0bwdcvy

HASTY PAXO

When the final buzzer goes on University Challenge (Monday BBC2) and Jeremy Paxman has just read out part or all of a question, can he please, please, please give us the answer? There is nothing more frustrating than him just winding up the show, as he did on 7 January.

Polly Williams Wells, Somerset
On this occasion the answer – which island group has the extremities of Brough Ness and Point of Sinsoss – was “the Orkneys”. Producer Irene Daniels replies: “Jeremy Paxman occasionally accidentally omits to give the answer to the last question, particularly if there is an exciting end to a match. He is aware that it is very important to viewers to give the answer and is always apologetic if this happens. Where possible, we will try to avoid it happening again.”

SCIENCE FRICTION

I struggle to understand recent complaints about Doctor Who being “a portal for social issues” (Feedback, 12 January). Surely, it's a well-established tradition in science fiction to address social and political issues under the cloak of allegory? For example, HG Wells's 1897 novella The War of the Worlds, to the various incarnations of Star Trek.

Granted, the issues in the latest series of Doctor Who were often thinly veiled. But is that such a bad thing, particularly for younger viewers, when it brilliantly addressed topics like bullying and bigotry? Doctor Who serves a valuable function beyond entertainment.

DUO FOR A REPEAT

With the Bafta-nominated film Stan & Ollie in the cinemas, will the BBC now dig out from its archives the 1974 Omnibus edition on the duo's lives and careers called Cuckoo: a Celebration of Mr Laurel and Mr Hardy, narrated by Eric Morecambe and Ernie Wise [below]? I remember seeing it years ago and to my knowledge it has only ever been shown twice. That is, if it still is in the archives and hasn't been erased...

Michael Rayner Borehamwood, Hertfordshire

You're right, it hasn't been aired since a repeat in 1976. The BFI confirms that the programme does still exist – but whether it's been digitised is another matter. At least another screening is theoretically possible.

COUNTRY IDYLL

Countryside on 6 January (BBC1) was a joy... a whole episode purely about rural vets, farming and the countryside, with Adam Henson at the helm. He's a natural presenter. We had none of the “novelty” items often in this show, presented by those who frankly shouldn't.

David Hunt Occold, Suffolk

STONE-COLD CLASSIC

Stone, now in its eighth series (7–11 January Radio 4), is a terrific police drama. Martin Jameson's scripts (based on Danny Brocklehurst's characters) are superb: fast-paced, engaging, character-driven and relevant to today.

The cast, led by Hugo Speer and Deborah McAndrew, is excellent, and the series would be more than worthy of a transfer to TV. I enjoyed noting that the actor ▷

YOU ASK US

Doc Martin – the story will continue

I read that there will never be any more series of Doc Martin, one of my all-time favourite programmes. Am I alone in missing this lovely drama?

Anthea Booth, Ditchling, East Sussex

No need to despair, Anthea. As Martin Clunes told RT's Ben Dowell in December, there will be another Doc Martin – and we now learn from an ITV spokesperson that scripts for the ninth series are being worked on right at this minute, ready for filming in Cornwall in March.

The new series is likely to air later in the year – possibly this autumn, although there's no confirmation of that yet. And it isn't necessarily the last ever – no one at ITV has said it will be. How popular the next series proves to be in the ratings may be the deciding factor on whether they commission more, so loyal fans like you will need to tune in!

In the meantime, fans of Doc Martin star Martin Clunes will still be well served. Recently he took on the grimly serious role of a real-life murder detective in ITV's serial killer drama Manhunt (still available on the ITV Hub; see p158). But those of you who enjoy his talent for curmudgeonly comedy have a treat in store later this winter with the BBC1 sitcom Warren, in which he stars as grumpy and pedantic driving instructor Warren Thompson.

Obligated to move from the south of England to Preston in Lancashire when his partner's father falls ill, Warren finds himself in an area he dislikes, doing a job he doesn't enjoy, and parenting two teenage boys. The sitcom promises well, for Clunes himself has said, "The script is just so funny that I didn't want anyone else to do it."

This spring we can also see him back on the road in a four-part documentary series for ITV called Islands of America (following Islands of Britain in 2009 and Islands of Australia in 2016). Taking a 10,000-mile journey across the US, starting in Hawaii and ending in the east off the coast of Maine, he will, he says, "look beyond corporate America to discover the other United States, out past the mainland margins, and what life is like on these islands. I met men and women who have lived through nature's worst extremes. And it seems one thing they all share is a profound wisdom about these challenges."

◁ Sacha Parkinson played "Sophie Webster", surely a little in-joke for fans of Coronation Street?

My only complaint is that, with the drama being stripped across one week, it's over all too soon. More, please!

John Hughes Glasgow

Good news – Radio 4 tells us there will be future series of Stone.

A REFUGE ON RADIO

Radio 3 provides me with a serene refuge from strife, in particular the countless media hours devoted to arguing over Brexit. The music or drama may not always be to my taste, but I can listen and learn or (rarely) turn off, secure in the knowledge that there will be many delightful interludes to come, offered with knowledgeable friendliness by a diverse team of presenters. Raphaella Summers Hebden Bridge, West Yorkshire

HOW TO FUND A BETTER RETIREMENT WHILE LOOKING AFTER LOVED ONES

Radio Times has partnered with Key to produce a free guide by Paul Lewis. Our free guide provides information to start you on your equity release journey.

Often, when you're facing the question of how to afford your own retirement, there's an ageing parent whose care needs paying for, a child that needs help getting a foot onto the property ladder, or grandchildren you want to support and spend time with. It means an added set of financial pressures and responsibilities at a time you should be looking forward to the next chapter of life.

Nowadays, more and more over-55s are finding themselves caring for ageing parents as well as helping adult children. With the young struggling to save for deposits and the elderly needing care, this leaves those in the middle – the sandwich generation – left in a unique situation.

Faced with this juggling act, a solution many are turning to is equity release. Freeing some of the cash tied up in your home means you could benefit from the value of your property while helping loved ones too.

EQUITY RELEASE AND HOW IT WORKS

Equity release allows you to access some of the cash from your home, leaving you to enjoy the boost to your finances. A lifetime mortgage, the most popular form of equity release, is a loan secured against your home. It will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits. There are typically no monthly repayments to make as the loan, plus roll up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end.

There is a great deal of flexibility and range of features available in plans. You may wish to take one lump sum, or an initial amount with the option to withdraw more funds when you need to.

Thanks to these options, it's easier to find a plan to meet your unique needs.

GOOD ADVICE IS KEY

If you're considering releasing cash from your home, Key can guide you through your options. There's no obligation to go ahead if you book an appointment. Our job is to give the expert advice and information you need to make the decision that meets your individual needs, with:

- Qualified independent advisers
we are not tied to any lenders
- Face-to-face appointments in the comfort of your own home, so you can invite your family members to be part of the process
- Whole of market comparison
we consider ALL providers

After talking you through all your options, we will make a personalised recommendation for the product that best fits your individual needs and, if equity release isn't right for you, we'll tell you. Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge, as our usual advice fee of 1.99% of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

To request your FREE Radio Times guide, written by RT's Paul Lewis, or to book a no-obligation consultation, call FREE on 0800 138 2696 or visit radiotimes.com/equityrelease

Lines open Monday to Thursday 9am–8pm; Friday 9am–5.30pm; Saturday 9am–5pm.

DERMOT O'LEARY

'I was never a Blue Peter fan'

The National Television Awards' host likes a bit of anarchy in his life

What do you watch, Dermot?

The only things I watch live are Question Time, the news and big entertainment shows like Britain's Got Talent. People ask me, "Did you see X Factor last night?" No, I didn't because I was on it. I did have a great view, though.

You're married to costume designer Dee Koppang – do you enjoy the same TV shows?

We have the Koppang-O'Leary pact from 2012. When one of us goes away, the other isn't allowed to watch the shows we're watching together. I've been away a lot doing The X Factor's Judges' Houses and then making a documentary for the BBC, and Dee's been off doing The Crown so we haven't seen each other for a long time. So, knowing this, we smugly started watching Killing Eve early on, before the hype. But before we knew it, I was away again and we still have two episodes to go.

You're hosting the NTAs – what was the best drama of 2018?

It's very difficult to look beyond Killing Eve because I love how unconventional it is and how it's serious because of people dying all the time, but it's absurdly funny. Jodie Comer is extraordinary. Richard Madden also did such a good job on Bodyguard and

I didn't buy into the last two episodes being ridiculous. It's a crime drama – if we're in, we're in!

As a former Big Brother presenter, how do you feel about reality TV nowadays?

I watched Love Island for the first time last year and as soon as it started I thought I'd hate it. Within ten minutes, I was enjoying it and thought, "Oh, it's Big Brother!" I expected it to be all about sex but it wasn't; it was about pride, relationships, friendship, a generation – and I liked the people in it more than I thought.

Do you ever watch anything sad?

Long Lost Family makes me cry. Dee was out one night and it came on, and it was three minutes in so it was too late to turn off. Ten minutes in I was crying into my dinner, going, "Oh my God, she didn't know she was adopted!" I'm the same with Paul O'Grady: for the Love of Dogs.

Where do you do all this crying?

On our grey L-shaped sofa. Dee always gets the best spot. I never used to worry about it until she went away one weekend and I sat where she usually sits and I realised it was much nicer than where I sit! I'm not a fan of a big TV, aesthetically, so we have a projector that plays films on a big white wall.

Was TV a big part of your childhood?

Yes! My mum was pretty strict, which only made the desire to watch greater. I was allowed an hour when in from school before homework. On Saturday nights we had an indoor picnic, where my mum would put a cloth out and the whole family would sit and watch The Generation Game. It was so lovely. I loved the stuff you knew was also for adults. Although I think Blue Peter is great, I was never a massive fan because I liked the anarchy of Tiswas and Crackerjack. Just like The Simpsons works so well because you know adults and kids are getting it, and there's a lovely message about family at the end.

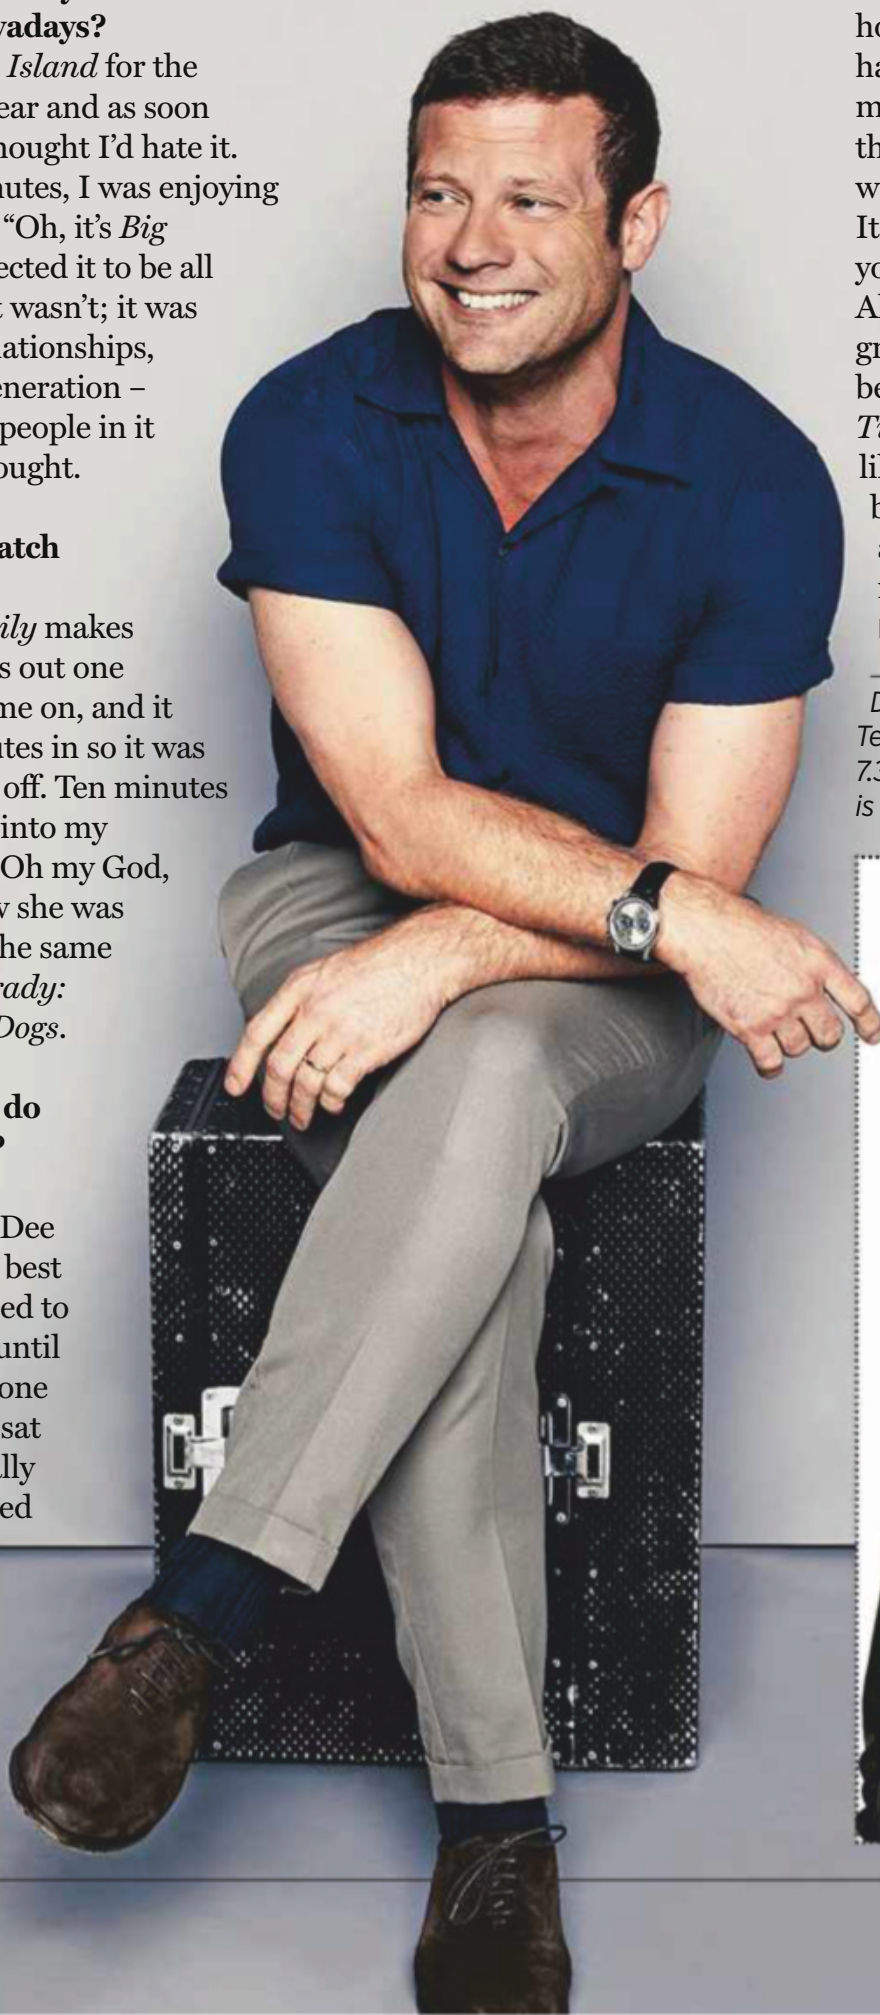

KASIA DELGADO

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK Stig Abell's How Britain Really Works. Absolutely brilliant. He and I have breakfast now and again and it should be on the syllabus for A-level politics.

MY RADIO I listen to 5 Live and Radio 2. Jamie Cullum's show [Tue 9pm R2] is probably my favourite. Cerys Matthews's show [Mon 9pm R2] is glorious, too.
