WHAT GETS US TALKING...

CRUNCH TIME FOR APPLE

The time is coming for Apple TV. The US tech giant has been planning the launch for months now, with former Channel 4 programmes supremo Jay Hunt overseeing its European operation. At the time of writing, the rumour is that this is the week it would unveil its plans. There are now some 1.4 billion active Apple devices worldwide, 900 million of which are iPhones, and being worth nearly $1 trillion enables the company to make some spectacular commissions. It's clear from speaking to leading British TV producers that they're in talks with Apple and are developing programmes. Yet there's a total wall of silence about it. "We just can't talk about what we're doing," one producer tells me. "We're not allowed to even say we're talking to them, but it's going to be a game changer." Exciting.

A PARSONS KNOWS

Nicholas Parsons has presented the Radio 4 show Just a Minute since 1967, and at the age of 95 he's still going strong. So it was lovely to see the broadcasting legend pick up the Harvey Lee Award for lifetime achievement at the recent Broadcasting Press Guild Awards. Collecting his award, he insisted that he still loves the jokes about his age, and remembered his favourite. Years ago, Derek Nimmo joked that Parsons's last romantic liaison was with a suffragette. Fellow panellist Peter Jones then added, "And that's only because she was tied to railings at the time."

DIVINE INTERVENTION?

Another Radio 4 favourite, Something Understood, has been axed by the network. But could the early-morning show about spiritual reflection be saved? I'm told that Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby has made an informal approach to the BBC, suggesting it be given a new lease of life. Lambeth Palace won't comment and the BBC insists it hasn't been sent a letter, but also won't comment on whether it has had an informal approach. Maybe the overtures will work. In a mysterious way, of course.

DREAM JOB FOR LAUREN

Lauren Laverne won best radio broadcaster at the Broadcasting Press Guild Awards, and said that one of the last things she was able to say to her dad, who died last year, was that she had been chosen to stand in for Kirsty Young as host of Desert Island Discs. Almost as moving was her description of what makes a good radio presenter, explaining that the medium is a "natural home for people like me, people who like to show off but in private". BEN DOWELL

Getting into the groove

It's 1982 and darling of the New York art scene Jean-Michel Basquiat has just had a row with his girlfriend in a nightclub after she finds out that he has been seeing another woman. That girlfriend happens to be Madonna and we now find them travelling home on the subway, trying to patch things up.

This snapshot is one of the stories of the third series of Sky Arts' Urban Myths, which reimagine fabled celebrity stories. "Madonna hasn't yet found fame while Basquiat had just had an exhibition with Andy Warhol," says producer Adam Morane-Griffiths. "In our film he's encouraging her to make something of her talent, which she does."

Thanks to her boyfriend's promptings, Madonna visited music mogul Seymour Stein in hospital and was signed on the spot – another true story. Basquiat, on the other hand, died in 1988 following a heroin overdose, aged just 27. BEN DOWELL

'The BBC's not representative'

People from ordinary backgrounds are being squeezed out

RADIO 4 IS THE elephants' graveyard for superannuated broadcasters, which is what makes it special in my, not totally impartial, view. But its biggest beasts are on the way out, sending a chill down the spines of those of us (a lot younger, you understand) left trumpeting in its clearings.

Jonathan Dimbleby, 74, who's said he is to quit Any Questions? this summer after more than 30 years, is broadcasting aristocracy, of course; his family have ruled the current-affairs airwaves for more than half a century.

But John Humphrys, 75, who's announced he will stop doing the Today programme in the autumn, is nobody's nob. His departure is not just another oldie shuffling off into the sunset, it's the end of an era when people from ordinary backgrounds could make their way into, and make a big success of, the media.

John was born in inner-city Cardiff, Splott to be precise, which looks like it sounds. His mother was a hairdresser, his father a freelance french polisher often out of work. He left school at 15 to join the weekly Penarth Times and clawed his way out of provincial journalism and regional television to become first a foreign correspondent, then a presenter, and now a curmudgeonly national treasure.

When he and I were BBC TV News reporters together in the 70s, hardly any of our colleagues had a degree. They were mostly tough men from Fleet Street, belligerent alpha males whose stag-like rivalries were the stuff of legend. They were sharp, if not especially clever, but they had the smell of the street about them and an empathy with those in the underprivileged sticks from which most had hailed.

When John goes, all four of the Today programme's regular presenters will have been privately educated, like a quite remarkable proportion of other people working for the BBC, on both sides of the microphone. The same is true across the media as a whole. Even tabloid newspaper hacks have been to Westminster and Cambridge, these days.

'Journalism's a fashionable career for our gilded youth'

There are lots of reasons for this. Journalism's a dying industry, broadcasting's fragmenting and desperately insecure, but they're still fashionable careers for our gilded youth.

The few traineeships are ludicrously oversubscribed. Often the only way to get a foot in the door now is to work for nothing, sometimes for years, as an intern. That means you have to have wealthy parents with contacts to support you, preferably living close to central London.

The end result is that while we've been worrying about the lack of diverse faces on the screen, or whether women are paid less fabulously than the men, the BBC, and the media generally, have become much less representative of those they serve – in a more serious way.

MANY OF TODAY'S generation are brilliant, Today's presenters particularly so, in my view. But there are serious implications here. The BBC itself now seems a smaller tent. In my experience, it is not deliberately biased – indeed it struggles painfully for impartiality. But its world view is bound to reflect the collective set of assumptions of those who work for it.

These are more uniformly middle-class, well-educated, young, urban and bright, with little experience of – and sometimes little sympathy for – business, industry, the countryside, localness, traditions and politicians.

Maybe the BBC recognises this. It's just advertised a rare and highly prized traineeship with radio current affairs that is "only open to BAME (black and minority ethnic) or lower socio-economic background" applicants.

The Daily Mail is, predictably, incensed. It won't change much. The BBC's journos will still mostly be as privileged as, well, those on the Daily Mail.

WHAT WE WATCHED

We were gearing up for a second series of Hamish Macbeth, the Heartbeat of the Highlands, starring Robert Carlyle as the languid titular cop. At the end of the last series our hero learned that the show's leading ladies, journalist Isobel (Shirley Henderson) and posh novelist Alex (Valerie Gogan), were both in love with him.

Such was the speculation on who Hamish would choose that the cast and crew had to sign gagging clauses. The drama ran for one more series after this one, with Hamish eventually plumping for Isobel, while poor Alex ended up dying after falling down a cliff.

WHAT YOU SAID

The first series of another rural drama hit, Ballykissangel, had just ended and you were in raptures. "What an original idea Ballykissangel is!" cheered Andrew Mathison from London, while the Rev Dr Jack Lawson of Kent enjoyed the fact that Stephen Tompkinson's priest Father Peter was "a clergyman who isn't portrayed as a complete idiot or buffoon".

It ran for five more series, with Tompkinson and Dervla Kirwan (who played Peter's on-off love interest Assumpta) leaving in series three. Assumpta also died. BEN DOWELL

‘Never in history have we been so divorced from nature’

LILY COLE

In a wide-ranging interview, actress and environmentalist Lily Cole talks to Sir David Attenborough about the fate of the planet, his carbon footprint – and why he has joined Netflix

PHOTOGRAPHED
FOR RADIO TIMES BY RAY BURMISTON

Sir David, you're narrating Our Planet, an eight-part natural history series starting on Netflix – why did you want to be part of it?

I did it because it's a worthwhile series and I've been working with the people behind it for most of my life. I've known [executive producers] Alastair Fothergill and Keith Scholey for 20 to 30 years, from our time at the BBC Natural History Unit. They have been friends ever since and we share the same ideals, so it's been a joy.

The environmental message presented in Our Planet feels more overt than anything that you've worked on before. Was that a conscious decision?

The Natural History Unit is an admirable unit, something the BBC should be very proud of, and it gave me all sorts of opportunities to go to all sorts of places and say all sorts of things. But 40 years ago the notion that we would exterminate an animal or a species was fairly far out. There were examples of course, like the dodo, but by and large it was regarded as being exceptional.

So I couldn't really come out with a great message. At the time I'm talking about, the BBC was a monopoly, and if you have control over a source of information you have to be responsible – and quite right too.

You can't allow people to start belting out propaganda just because they happen to feel a certain way. You have to be responsible, and the BBC, I think, thought, "Maybe it's important, we'll let them say little bits at the end." But the idea that the basis of an entire series should be predicated on the proposition that you were actually axe-grinding was not acceptable.

So, has that now changed?

It's now become perfectly clear to all who respect responsible scientific opinion that the Earth is in trouble, that humanity is having a major effect upon the Earth, and that this is a major issue. It has gone past being controversial. We now recognise that the whole future of the planet is in question. And the fact that I was asked to speak at COP24 [the UN climate change conference last December] and at the World Economic Forum in Davos is indicative of the fact that the community of nations has accepted this and is doing something about it. That gives you more authority to be able to say what you want to say.

The imagery in Our Planet is so positive and beautiful. Do you feel that enabling people to fall in love with nature is an important part of encouraging people to care?

It's a truism and a cliché but the fact is people won't care for something they don't love or don't know anything about. There is a paradox at the moment. Never before in our history have so many people been divorced from nature; the United Nations says that more than 50 per cent of people are urbanised. That means that over half the human population is cut off from the planet to a greater or lesser degree. And yet, they are better informed than they ever were.

Television has brought the natural world into everybody's living rooms. We have a universal language that everybody understands, which is visual images, and this picture of our planet will, because of Netflix's global reach, be broadcast on one date simultaneously, all around the world. There's obviously something very important about that.

Do you think it's important to reflect the more sinister side of life as well as its beauty?

We probably haven't shown enough. The thing about the natural world is its interdependence. It's a complex organism with many, many parts and you have to understand how it works to understand why we have a responsibility towards every tiny part of it. Every species is interdependent and relies on the food chain above and below it – but we have profound reactions to seeing pain. How can you, unless you're mentally unbalanced, get pleasure from seeing pain? Of course you can't.

People say to me, "I saw that little rabbit being attacked by a carnivore. Why weren't you concerned?" The answer is, of course you're concerned, that's what you're programmed to do – evolution depends upon you caring for small things with big eyes and snub noses. But that doesn't mean that you aren't sufficiently aware to realise that the carnivore has to eat to survive.

I watched Our Planet with my three-and-a-half-year old daughter and it was really interesting to see her reaction: there was a scene where a jaguar kills a crocodile, and she was on the jaguar's side. I was worried she might be upset by it, but she seemed to understand it was hungry...

Yes, we do project our own reactions on to our children all too easily. We're all born with this fascination for the natural world and, as we get older, we become fascinated with other things. But if you lose your wonder in the natural world, you've lost a huge source of contentment and joy.

Now that we are becoming more aware of the destruction we are causing to the planet, do you have any recommendations of what we as individuals can do to help solve the problem?

Above all, we have to bear one thing in mind – every single mouthful of food and every breath of air we take is dependent on a healthy planet. And the one thing we can all do is to stop waste. Don't waste food. Don't waste power. They are precious and we can't live without them. We are all consumers of these things and we must act responsibly. And perhaps by doing that, we can undo the damage that we're doing.

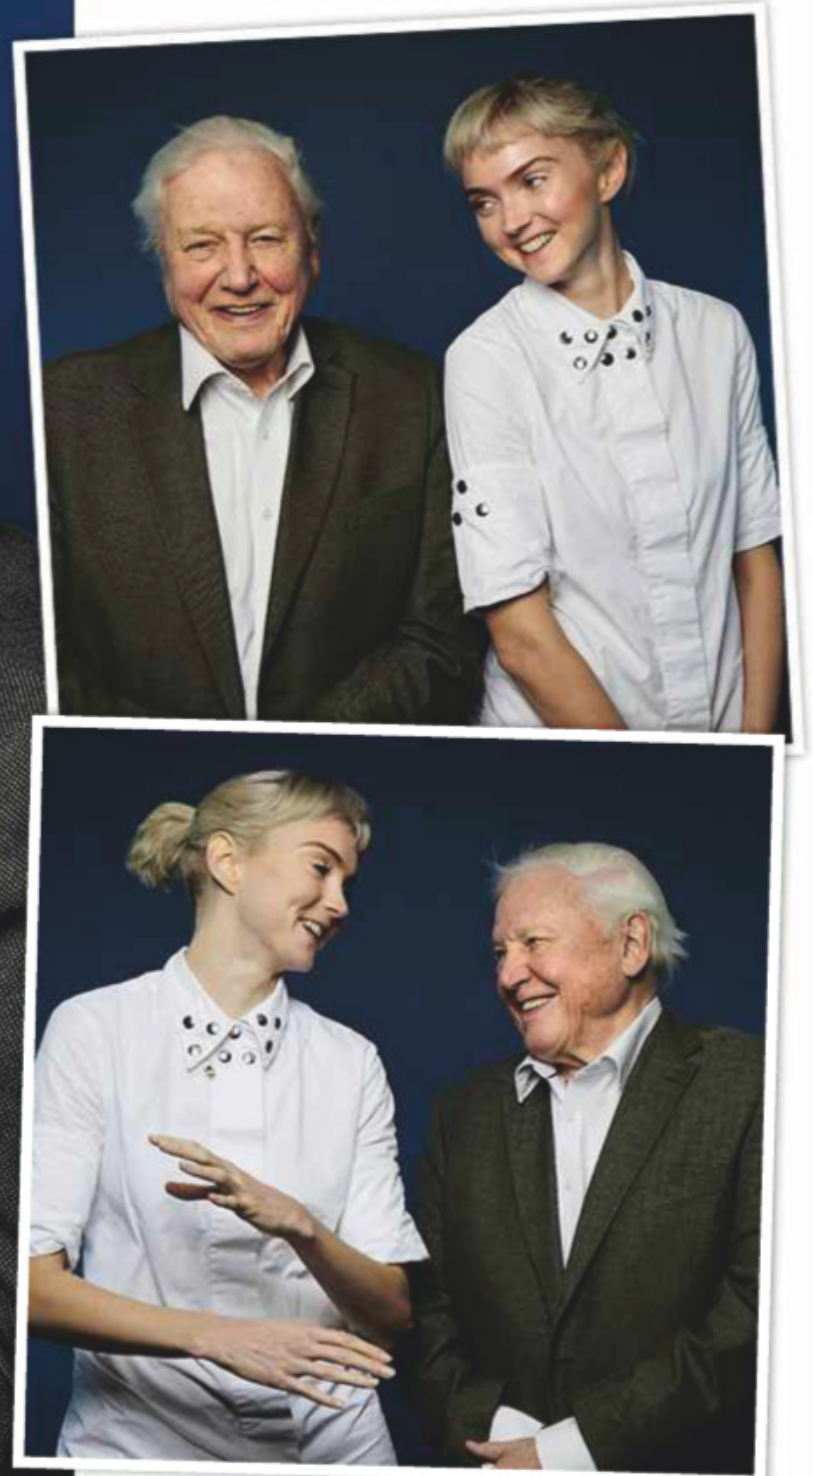

‘The one thing we can all do is to stop wasting food and power’

DAVID ATTENBOROUGH

ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER...
In an animated conversation, the pair consider the practical measures people can take to make a difference

What do you think about the rise of veganism and the argument that people should reduce their meat consumption?

Well, we can't go on eating meat at the rate we have been. I haven't been a doctrinaire vegetarian or vegan, but I no longer have the same appetite for meat. Why? I'm not sure. I think subconsciously maybe it's because of the state of the planet. Although, I've never really been one for eating enormous meals and I'm not particularly a gourmet either, so I can't pretend that I'm feeling deprived in any way or that it's cost me all that much.

If I was a guest somewhere and meat was put in front of me, I'd eat it, just as on trips to foreign places and cultures, I've drunk the most appalling drinks I wouldn't have wished to! But you do it because there's a certain courtesy in human relationships. Overall though, I suppose, I've been more conscious of not being overindulgent with food and not wasting energy – turning off the heat.

Do you think there's a paradox with travel? It helps us experience nature, but there's also the carbon footprint you're leaving, especially in the making of shows like Our Planet. How do you square that?

There's a carbon impact, of course, in everything we do. I have already expelled carbon dioxide just by breathing and talking. The mere fact that we're alive means that we're making demands on the ecosystems of the world, but that's part of the deal and that in itself isn't evil. What is evil is squandering it.

Population growth is also a big concern – do you believe that can be addressed through the education of women around the world?

The only really positive comment I can make on this is, as you have said, the emancipation of women – politically, financially, medically and culturally. Wherever that is a reality, the birth rate falls. The birth rate is not the same as the population growth however. There's quite a number of factors that feed into that, one of which is that we're all living longer – including people like me!

If we all live until we're 92, as I'm doing, then the population is going to grow. But that effect will diminish because we're not immortal, not yet. So, that will level out. The fact is though, the population is growing very fast in places like Africa and Asia. The decision has to be taken by the people living there to do something about that problem.

What is the role of politics in finding a solution in that case?

The reality is that the problems we're facing won't be solved by people using paper bags instead of plastic ones. That all helps, but the really important things can only be hit by those who wield great power, which in most countries is politicians. They have to be convinced that this is a serious problem. And while it's easy enough for me to grind my axe, they've also got to worry about their votes – at least in a democracy. So, you have to convince not only politicians, but the electorate too. ▷

◁ Are there any particular policies that you hope politicians will put into place?

There has been one very significant advance, and that was the Paris climate change conference in 2015, which I was at. There, they adopted a policy – the Paris Agreement – on what could be tolerated in terms of global temperature rise. And they took the steps to do something about it. Not, I dare say, as much as one would've wished, and maybe not even as much as they promised, but afterwards Sir David King [the UK's special representative for climate change] was walking on air. He was less delighted, of course, as people started retracting... But nonetheless, gradus ad Parnassum. You can't hope for everything, but it's moving in the right direction and that's something.

Are you worried that the USA subsequently pulled out of the Paris Agreement?

Yes, of course. How could you say it doesn't matter? Of course it matters. It is a hugely powerful nation, and certainly other less advanced nations will be saying, "Well, if the United States doesn't then why should we?" So, it's a blow. We just have to hope that it won't last for ever.

I read the agreement and it was the most utopian document...

Yes – we were in effect saying that we must get energy which does not cost a great deal, if anything, in terms of carbon. And we must stop using fossil fuel. We must depend upon renewables. But to achieve that you have to change not only the source, you have to change the way you store it and the way you transmit it. We can get all our energy from the Sahara if we actually solve those problems. That would change the economics of the whole world.

As we came out from the conference though, I couldn't help thinking, "Yes, this is wonderful, we've got this mammoth agreement, and we're going to coordinate our scientific research internationally to try and tackle the remaining problems," but supposing you have unlimited power at negligible cost, do we have the wisdom to handle it? How would we deal with all that power in our hands? Could we not squander it or use it in ways that knock down still more of the Amazon rainforest? Of course, you can't know the answer to that question until it happens, so for now I just need to be grateful that we've taken the first step.

Do you like the human species?

Of course I like the human race. People always ask me, "What is your favourite animal?" And I nearly always reply, with total honesty, a two-and-a-half-year-old human child. They are the most astounding and wonderful little organism of all. The rate at which they learn, the rate at which they invent things – it's enough to bring tears

Humpback whales feast on krill off the Atlantic coast of South Africa

HUMPBACK WHALES

Last century relentless whaling devastated the humpback whale population – just a few thousand individuals survived. But following massive worldwide public pressure commercial whaling was banned in 1986. The number of humpbacks has steadily increased and populations have almost recovered to their pre-whaling numbers with 80,000 now roaming our oceans.

They are beginning to re-colonise their ancestral feeding grounds, such as these off the Atlantic coast of South Africa. These scenes of super groups, hundreds strong, have not been witnessed for centuries. The recovery of these great whales is one of the great global conservation success stories and shows just how quickly our oceans can recover when given the chance. HUGH PEARSON

GLACIERS

The huge wall of ice that is the leading edge of the Store Glacier in Greenland is never silent. Mighty bangs and rumbles provide an almost constant soundtrack as the glacier imperceptibly moves forward into the sea. We had come here in the hope of filming the birth of a gigantic iceberg, formed when a section of the glacier breaks free. When it did happen, after many days waiting, it was a huge event. The helicopter skimming along at water level was dwarfed by the immense wall of ice that had broken free.

For the next 20 minutes huge blocks of ice twisted and turned, collapsing as their own incredible weight tore them apart.

We had succeeded in filming the most spectacular of natural events but the team's elation was tempered by the knowledge that such calving events are the most ominous symptom of changes in the world's climate, changes that so threaten the natural world on which we all rely.

The Siberian tiger proved elusive but well worth the effort

SIBERIAN TIGER

Our team always knew that launching an expedition to film the world's largest cat was going to be tough. In practice, four camera people spent two winters in the forests of the Amur peninsula – the heart of Siberian tiger territory. Some lived alone for weeks at a time, in specially built hides the length of a bed, enduring temperatures that frequently dropped below -20°C .

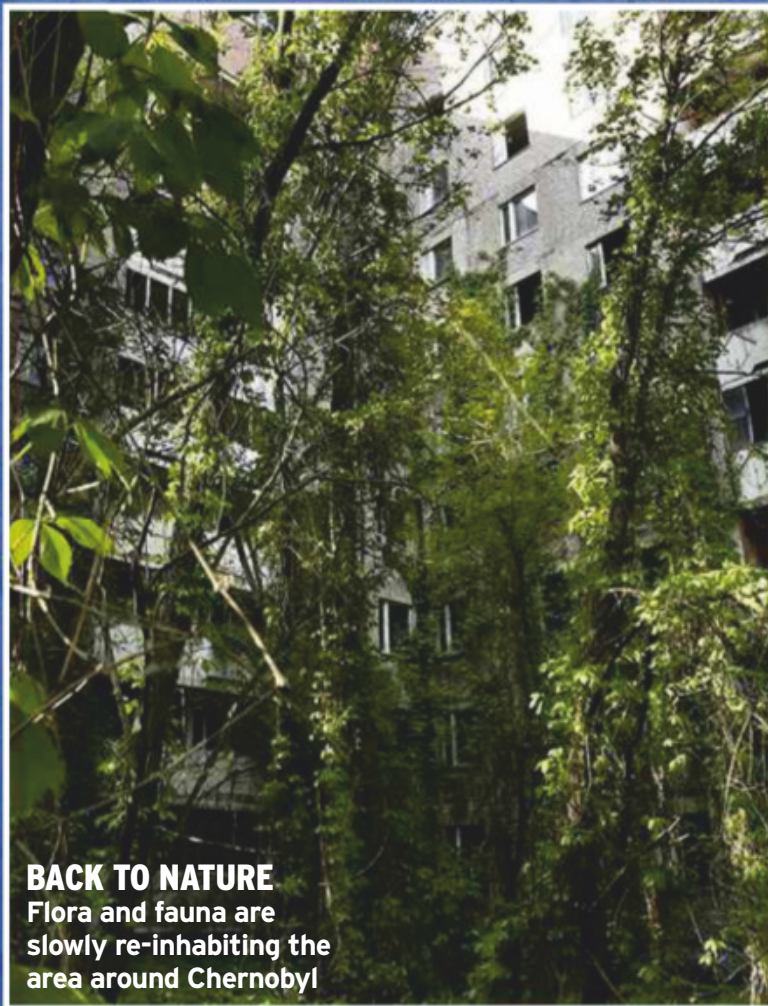

Others trekked through the forest laying out a network of camera traps. All that effort in the end resulted in only 37 images. But when you see a wild Siberian tiger approach the camera over a ridge with the rising sun on its back, you'll understand why it was worth it. JEFF WILSON

CHERNOBYL

We know that forests worldwide have an almost supernatural ability to bounce back from disaster – and we discovered the most remarkable story of that resilience in the shadow of one of humankind's greatest disasters, Chernobyl.

Because of the radiation still present, we knew that there was no possible way we could leave a camera person on the ground for the period of time needed to accumulate images of animals returning to the area, so instead we resorted to a system of camera traps to capture footage of the wolves, lynx, moose and deer that are beginning to re-inhabit this recovering forest.

There is no question that Chernobyl was an unprecedented human tragedy, but mother nature's gradual return to this site of Armageddon has some profound implications as to the future of our planet. JEFF WILSON to the eyes. And, of course, human beings are capable of immense lunacy and selfishness but they're also capable of great things.

Flora and fauna are slowly re-inhabiting the area around Chernobyl

Do you feel optimistic about the future of the planet and that of your grandchildren and future generations?

We'll survive, but I don't think we'll survive with the natural splendours that I saw when I was 12. I saw a healthy countryside. I grew up in Leicestershire, where the hedgerows were full of life. People were still living in villages, they weren't all in great conurbations. As far as I know, crime was not very high.

Of course, when you're 12 you have a limited vision, and I wasn't aware of what was going on elsewhere in the world, and can't pretend I was. But it seemed to me that the world was by and large generously disposed towards one another and towards the natural world. Mind you, we didn't have the power in our hands to do the things that we did by the time we got into the 1950s...

After all you've seen and done, do you still find wonder in the world?

If I didn't then I wouldn't bother making any more programmes. Last year I worked on a documentary for a friend of mine, another natural history producer, who was born in India and put together a film about a particular state in India to show a picture of its wildlife. I wrote the commentary and there was a sequence with peacocks. Now, we all know peacocks, we've seen them on lawns in country houses. But how many people have seen peacocks in flight? How many people have actually seen a lek of competing males? I've never seen it on film. And yet there it was and it was absolutely mind-blowing.

What do you hope that people will take from watching the series?

A sense of responsibility for our planet and an appreciation of the complexity and the interdependence of everything living on it. We share the world. Human history has always been about war, about battles, arguments, power, conquests, rape and pillage. But the time for that is now passed. History has got to take a new turn. Our history has got to be about collaboration, for the first time ever.

Are you optimistic that that can happen?

I think it's going to be very difficult, but one hopes that there is enough sense of reality and clear-sightedness to see what the damage is and what needs to be done, to bring us together and make us sink our differences. The scientific community talks the same language and is now in agreement, but to actually get Tibetan lamas agreeing with Californian millionaires – that's the challenge.

Red alert for the Sumatran tiger. Fauna & Flora International seeks action

This Critically Endangered tiger has been pushed to the edge of extinction – 350 or fewer remain. Give to stop the poachers at www.FFIsumatrantiger.org

One of the Sumatran tiger's final strongholds is under threat from poachers.

Without action now, this extremely rare big cat faces imminent extinction. Latest figures confirm there are only 350 Sumatran tigers left. We must act now to save them.

- £83,131 is needed immediately to help us fund more rangers and step up action against the poachers in Kerinci Seblat National Park.
- This is one of the final strongholds of the incredibly rare Sumatran tiger.
- FFI's work here could be all that stands between the Sumatran tiger and extinction.

The ongoing threat to the Sumatran tiger has put FFI's anti poaching team on red alert. Habitat loss has already pushed the species to the brink of extinction but to make matters worse, the international demand for tiger skins and bones is rising, intensifying the pressure on these magnificent cats.

Fauna & Flora International (FFI) has put out an urgent call to the global community to save the last Sumatran tigers currently existing in the wild – and specifically to employ more rangers. There are now only around 350 Sumatran tigers left.

FFI is urgently seeking funds to step up their crucial conservation programme in Kerinci Seblat National Park, Sumatra, Indonesia. In order to safeguard the future existence of these magnificent creatures, it is imperative that more rangers are employed.

The fact is that, right now, the Sumatran tiger faces a number of very serious threats, which are putting their very survival in jeopardy. And, sadly, they are all man-made.

Poaching is a constant danger for the elusive Sumatran tiger. Hunters make good money from the tiger's beautiful skin, which remains in great demand as a status symbol across Indonesia and beyond. Also, its bones are illegally exported to use as ingredients in traditional Asian medicines. FFI investigations indicate that the black market prices make this grisly trade all too profitable.

"If you value the natural world – if you think it should be protected for its own sake as well as humanity's – then please support Fauna & Flora International."

These grave threats have been exacerbated by a very serious loss of habitat. In the last 10 to 15 years, natural forest cover in Sumatra has been slashed by almost a staggering 40%.

With such a dramatic loss of habitat, these majestic forest dwellers are struggling to survive and have been designated as Critically Endangered on the IUCN Red List, making the Sumatran tiger one of the most endangered tiger subspecies on the planet.

This is a rating reserved for animals that face an extremely high risk of extinction in the wild.

Latest surveys have indicated that there may now be as few as 350 Sumatran tigers remaining in the wild. Thanks to the vital work of FFI's Tiger Protection and Conservation Programme, the numbers have stabilised in the Kerinci Seblat National Park, but the species is still under severe threat.

The illegal poaching syndicates are ruthless and will stop at nothing to supply the market. Other poachers are also in the area, sabotaging FFI's conservation work. In 2016, bird poachers vandalised 16 camera traps set by the tiger conservation team, which meant vital evidence was lost.

This is an ongoing battle, but it is one we must win. Debbie Martyr, FFI Team in response to severe threat from poachers. 15 April Deadline.

Leader of the Kerinci Tiger Project in Sumatra, says: "Ranger teams walked almost 1100 miles on forest patrols in and bordering the national park and destroyed more than 16 active tiger snares. That is why we need to step up patrol regimes".

Tiger populations are dreadfully fragile.

The signs suggest that FFI's approach is working, as patrols are reporting more evidence of tigers. FFI's work has also led to the arrest and prosecution of two poachers, including a key figure in the international poaching syndicate. Yet if FFI cannot recruit more rangers to protect the tigers against the increased efforts of the poachers then all our good work could be undone.

That's why it's absolutely vital that we keep up our patrols to protect tigers from poachers – and work towards greater protection for their delicate habitat.

If we're going to save the Critically Endangered Sumatran tiger from complete extinction, it's crucial that we have the means to take action now.

FFI must raise £83,131. To do that, the charity is calling on you to make an urgent contribution today.

Please send a gift by no later than 15 April to help safeguard the future survival of the last few remaining wild Sumatran tigers.

Together, we can save the Sumatran tiger from extinction – but only if we take action immediately.

To take action for the Sumatran tiger please go to

Beyond the call of duty

As Stephen Graham and Rochenda Sandall are unmasked as guest stars of Line of Duty, what can Mark Lawson prise out of them about the new, eagerly awaited series?

A TRADITION IN LINE of Duty is the introduction each season of guest-star actors alongside the lead trio of Adrian Dunbar, Martin Compston and Vicky McClure. And, on past form, the storylines of these supporting performers tend to go in either of two extreme directions – sensationally written out after one episode (Jason Watkins, Daniel Mays, Jessica Raine) or, in the season finale, subjected to a climactic interrogation (Thandie Newton, Lennie James) by police corruption investigation unit AC-12.

So, in talking to Stephen Graham and Rochenda Sandall, the new recruits for season five, the questioning has to be carefully handled to avoid giving away whether showrunner

‘It was like joining a family as a new in-law, really’

Jed Mercurio is sending them down the Watkins-Mays-Raine or Newton-James route.

Graham is cast as John Corbett who, from the trailer, seems to be the head of the Balaclava Men, an organised crime outfit whose robberies and shootings have punctuated previous series. Sandall plays Lisa McQueen who, though her wardrobe also includes black woollen headgear, is, typically of Mercurio’s twisty plots, something more complicated than a Balaclava Woman.

A relatively safe area of interrogation, though, is the experience of signing up to a series so successful that latecomers face the acting equivalent of arriving at midnight at a party that everyone else is already enjoying.

“It was great for me personally,” says Graham,

“because I’ve known Vicky for 20 years, since This Is England. I’ve known Martin for maybe 16 years, since I worked with him. And one of my first jobs out of drama school was with Adrian. They are all very close friends now. I was at Vicky’s wedding. So it was kind of like going to my auntie’s house, putting on some slippers, and settling in.”

Sandall, with no prior acquaintances, was more nervous – “There’s a slight insecurity about being found out as a fraud when you get involved in something like this” – but, like Graham, she has a warm domestic metaphor for the experience: “I was mainly working alongside Stephen, and he already knew Vicky and Martin. So it was like joining a family as a new in-law, really.”

Reflecting the different stages of their careers, Graham, with credits from Band of Brothers to Taboo, was directly offered the part, while Sandall, a young actor whose career has included Broken and Love, Lies and Records, auditioned.

Graham acknowledges the luxury of the production coming to you: “I’m in a position for that to happen these days, which is obviously a very nice position to be in. I believe Jed even said that he was thinking of me when he wrote the ▷ ◁ role, which is a major compliment. I just did Martin Scorsese's The Irishman, and he asked me if I wanted to be in that, which was a similar feeling. I still have that maybe slightly working-class mentality of: 'What? They actually think I'm any good. Are you sure?' Know what I mean?"

Sandall took the more common casting route of auditions and callbacks: "I did the first round of auditions with the director, John Strickland, and the casting director. Then I was told I was down to the last five and did the second round with the same people, plus Jed. So, at that point, you know it's getting serious."

PRESUMABLY WHEN GRAHAM accepted the contract, he texted Vicky and Martin to say something along the lines of: 'WTF! I've been offered LOD5!' "Yeah," the actor says. "But it was old news. Apparently Jed had mentioned it to Martin. And, when I phoned Vicky, she said, 'I know! I'm made up!', as she'd heard the rumours as well."

With the offer of his part, Graham was sent the first two scripts. That means, I suggest, that he's already doing better in Line of Duty than Daniel Mays and Jason Watkins? "Ha! I can't tell you."

Mercurio's reputation as a serial killer of TV characters – having also notoriously dispatched Keeley Hawes halfway through Bodyguard and in series three of Line of Duty – has changed the game for viewers. We can no longer assume that the star of a six-parter will make it to the end.

"That's part of the genius of Jed's writing," says Graham. "Even now, nobody really expects a lead to be killed off early, but Jed has created suspense. Are they going to get killed in this episode?"

While the true nature of Sandall's character Lisa McQueen keeps viewers guessing, it's clear she can look after herself in nasty situations. Killing Eve writer Phoebe Waller-Bridge recently raised a debate by saying that it is "empowering" to have violent female characters on screen. Does Sandall agree? "I think Phoebe's bang on. Characters like Lisa don't really exist much. And her being a woman is important. Almost all her scenes are with men – either gangsters or police officers."

During filming in Belfast, Dunbar, McClure and Compston lived in adjoining apartments in a Belfast block. Graham was billeted in a building next door. McClure told RT last week that hers was the line-learning flat, Adrian's the cooking and eating one, and Martin's "Party Central". Graham comments: "That's fair. I swerved the parties, because I had too much work to do to risk it. I'm too old for parties now. I did the breakfasts and line-learning."

BREAKTHROUGH

Sandall admits, "I definitely went in the party flat!" She has a dog, Lolly, at home, so went back most weekends, staying in a Belfast hotel during the week: "I prefer that to flats because you don't have to make your bed in the morning."

Having been cagey about how many episodes they survive, the guest stars are even more reticent about discussing the trademark interrogation scenes. However, most viewers will surely expect Graham's Corbett to spend a while opposite Hastings, Arnott, and Fleming at some point?

'Jed has created suspense. Are they going to get killed off this episode?'

"I know exactly what you mean," says Graham. "Those are long scenes. When you look at them on the script, your heart does skip a beat for a minute. There are a lot of lines."

Sandall dead-bats: "I can't say whether Lisa is involved in one or not. But, from talking to the other actors, you are aware of what a big deal they are. Most of my scenes are dialogue with Stephen

Graham, which is shorter. And our big luck is that we don't have to learn all the police jargon, which is the big problem for Adrian, Vicky and Martin because they are having to learn jargon that they wouldn't naturally know."

Graham has played both sides of the law, having been a detective in Little Boy Blue and The Secret Agent and, before Corbett, portrayed gangster Al Capone in Boardwalk Empire. In earlier interviews, he's told me he spoke to real cops before playing them, so, ahead of Line of Duty, did he seek out real Corbetts?

The actor's response is pure AC-12 interviewee: "Um. Look. Um. No comment. Yeah, no comment is the only way I can get out of that." But it might be useful for an actor to talk to a villain? "Oooh. Er. No. Yeah. It depends what you mean by a villain? I know of people from certain walks of life. I'm not saying I've sat down with the Kray brothers. But I know real people who have done certain things, and I have had conversations with them about what it was like to do those things. But, in the end, actors use their imaginations. We just dress up and pretend, but it's nice to have some insight into the reality."

I'D LIKE TO say I had talked to real people," adds Sandall, "but, if they were as good as Lisa, you wouldn't be able to find them."

A standard part of pre-production for actors is costume fittings. I wonder if there was one for the balaclavas, which, it turns out, there was. "I had to have a special, girlie-shaped one, because it's mainly guys who wear them," says Sandall. All the headgear had to be bought in and brought out from London, as there are restrictions on the sale and wearing of balaclavas in Belfast due to the history of their use by terrorists.

Do they get very hot? "They probably would if it was the middle of August," says Sandall. "But we were filming in winter, a lot of it at night, so I was often glad of the balaclava."

INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

Parliament has been Laura Kuenssberg's second home during the Brexit crisis. Now she tells the inside story...

I DIDN'T REALLY WANT to do politics at all," says Laura Kuenssberg, putting her mobile on the table, where it will bleep, flash and tremble for the next hour. "I started off on health and crime." It's too late to change now – another extraordinary Brexit day is under way and the BBC's political editor will be at the heart of events. It's not even lunchtime and once again the Prime Minister is being publicly contradicted by her own cabinet, the Opposition is mired in confusion and the pound is falling. "What we are absolutely seeing," says Kuenssberg, "is a loss of control from the top."

The 42-year-old was appointed in 2015. Shortly afterwards, David Cameron made his decision to call the EU referendum, and everything changed for ever. Brexit has twisted the fabric of our political life; it has also made Kuenssberg one of the best-known journalists in Britain and beyond, referred to as "the BBC's star political reporter" by The New York Times. "I can't say it's been bad for me," she admits. "Quite the opposite."

The confusion caused by Brexit has been quite bad for the rest of us and we've come to depend on Kuenssberg's calm, sceptical Scottish voice telling us exactly what's going on – although, she admits, no one is really sure. "It's not funny," she says when I laugh. "It's an extraordinary period in politics. It's sort of like a soap opera, but it's not a soap opera." Now she has made a documentary that attempts to explain just what has been happening. "It's the story of characters, plots, subplots and the different factions in all the different political parties," she says. "A story of the cabinet, of Parliament, of the country."

I meet the normally interview-shy journalist in a café below the BBC's Millbank Studios, a two-minute dash from Parliament. She is swathed from neck to knees in a wraparound cardigan that bears the evidence – strands of cotton wool, a crumb or two – of a domestic life she has little time to live. As well as reporting for BBC radio, television and news websites, she records Brexitcast – she calls the podcast's jaunty approach to political crisis "gallows humour" – and is a prolific tweeter. "I work long hours," she says. "I work very, very hard. I haven't had time for ▷

‘The referendum is difficult to deal with... It’s like taking an egg out of an omelette’

MAY DAY
Kuenssberg hears from Prime Minister Theresa May

◁ a haircut in four months. That’s where we are at the moment, I’m like Rapunzel.” Her efforts earn her an annual salary somewhere between £220,000 and £229,000. “I’m well rewarded for a job I massively enjoy doing,” she says. “I think I’m paid very fairly.”

ON SCREEN SHE favours brightly coloured jackets buttoned to the neck, a look she wears like armour against the vitriolic criticism that comes her way. “It’s an era of very strong feelings about politics,” she says. “It’s not surprising that from time to time, there’s an effort to shoot the messenger.” The BBC gave her protection during the 2017 Labour and Conservative conferences, though the level of that threat was never made public. “No,” she says. “I never talk about that.” Oh, come on, what was it like to have a bodyguard? “It’s certainly not like the TV series.”

In 2016 an online petition accusing her of bias against Jeremy Corbyn and calling for her to be sacked attracted 35,000 signatures. “It’s not what I would choose,” she says. “But it’s not that surprising.” Her troubled relationship with the Labour Party goes back to 2015 and an edited BBC interview with Jeremy Corbyn, following terrorist attacks in Paris, from which it could be inferred he wouldn’t back lethal force being used against gunmen. The BBC Trust found against

BBC News for breaching rules on “accuracy and impartiality”, and Kuenssberg is still peeved. “I would still reject that very strongly,” she says. “I’ve been doing this job for three-and-a-half years – have I got every single line 100 per cent right, every single day? Of course not. But I stand by what I said on that, absolutely.”

She likes to take charge and on several occasions tells me how to interview her, saying, “Actually, it’s not something you’d want to write about”, and “This is not to be used”. And we are not, she says, to talk about her. The film is all about her, I complain. “The film is not all about me, thank goodness!” But, as we see, she has been present at most of the key Brexit moments.

Some are remarkably intimate. In one scene she comforts a despondent Boris Johnson as if she were his mum. “He’s quite shy and wants to be loved,” she says in the film. “You have conversations with people at moments, for them, of great stress and pressure. People really care about Brexit, but if you’re Boris Johnson everybody thinks that’s because you’ve got your eye on the top job.”

I wonder if she likes Johnson? “I’m not friends with politicians, I’m not people’s mate,” she says. “But those in Westminster are feeling this moment very profoundly. We think all they’re about is their own dastardly machinations. There is a bit of that; this place runs on ambition and loyalty and power and rivalry and gossip and speculation and all those things. But the referendum is very, very difficult to deal with. It’s like trying to take an egg out of an omelette, you can’t do it very easily.”

Does she ever worry about becoming part of the story herself? “Nice try,” she says, as if I’m trying to play a lawyer’s trick on her.

KUENSBERG HAS THE COURTROOM in her blood: her maternal grandfather was a High Court judge, and the rest of the family can hold their own in public. Her sister Joanna was, until last year, British High Commissioner to Mozambique; her brother David is director of finance and resources at Brighton and Hove City Council. Her mother, active in the juvenile justice system, has a CBE, and her father is a business executive whose work took him around the world, which is why she was born in Italy.

She went to one of the top independent schools in Glasgow and, when pushed, she admits to some unease about the predominance of privately educated journalists at the BBC. “The BBC should mirror the country,” she says. “But we’re taking this stuff seriously now. A few years ago, we weren’t.”

She studied history at Edinburgh University and completed a postgraduate journalism ▷ course in Washington before coming back to the UK and a first television job as home affairs reporter for BBC North East, where, in 2001, she won the Royal Television Society's most promising newcomer award.

Now she's the BBC's most senior political journalist and still, she admits, surprised by it: "If, when I started out, someone had told me the political editor would be a) Scottish, b) a woman, and c) got the job when they were my age, I'm not sure I'd have thought that very likely."

Kuenssberg made the journey from current affairs to politics by what she calls serendipity. "It was not my burning ambition to work in Westminster, to spend all my time hanging out with people who work in politics. They wanted to bring people in who weren't politics obsessives, who didn't already have a whole network of friends and contacts in politics, which I didn't."

Is she really claiming to be an outsider? "Totally!" I must look dumbfounded. "OK, I get that it's ludicrous for me to suggest that I'm an outsider, but I'm not hanging out at the weekends with members of the shadow cabinet or having dinner with the chair of some select committee."

WHAT IS SHE doing then? "I read a lot of brilliantly awful fiction, 99p on iBooks fiction. I'm a fan of the kind of fiction that turns your head to candyfloss at the end of the day. If it's 1am and you've had a 15-hour day, you could think, 'I'll just catch up on The Economist' or I could read Jilly Cooper." Anything else? "I love watching telly for telly's sake." Favourite channel? "Obviously BBC1, or BBC2 on a really crazy day. Or BBC News." Impressively loyal, but doesn't she watch the odd DVD? "The Philadelphia Story, it's a classic." I expected something more political – is she romantic behind that sombre surface? "You'll have to ask my husband that," she says. "And he isn't going to be mentioned."

Actually, I hadn't mentioned him, but since she brought it up, she's married to the City consultant James Kelly, whom she never discusses in interviews. She says it would be "hideous" to have the press reporting on her private life, but I suspect she doesn't like to talk about her family in case it distracts from her hard-edged professional demeanour.

When I ask if she ever feels sorry for Theresa May, she looks horrified. "I'm not going to go, 'Yeah, I feel sorry for Theresa.' I think there are lots and lots of different kinds of politicians and some enjoy the company of journalists and some don't. It's not exactly a state secret to say Theresa May is not someone who enjoys the company of journalists much. It's a bruising old world for politicians, but they put themselves forward for it. They choose it."

Unlike May, Kuenssberg seems unaffected by the unforgiving demands of Brexit. How does she do it? "I don't have any crazy routine of being on vitamin drinks. I have a lot of energy and stamina, that's just how I am, but there's nothing special about that, I don't have any secret. I don't run marathons. I occasionally go to the gym and I try to go running in the park quite a lot. People come up and ask what's going on, which is a perfectly fair question."

Does she cut loose when she's not on screen, do something unlikely, like going to thrash-

'It's a bruising world for politicians, but they choose it' metal gigs? "I don't think I've ever been to a thrash-metal gig," she says. "I was occasionally made to go to the opera, but that was a long time ago." Booze, then? "I don't drink a bottle of wine every night. It's a very busy job, but you take holidays. You have to try to pace yourself, but if a massive story breaks, you have to go and do it." Which is why you're careful with the drink? "Stop! I should never even have said that."

She first reported from the Commons in 2003, long before #MeToo caused self-entitled men with wandering hands to pause for thought. "Everybody makes their own decisions," she says when I ask her what it was like then for a young woman. "Everyone has their own line. Wherever you work, there is a different culture. For a long time, Westminster has had a culture where lines can get blurred. It is much more between politicians and their staff and other politicians than it is between politicians and journalists. There have been moments where I've not been comfortable, but have I ever found myself in a position where I'm not able to handle what's going on?" She shakes her head.

With just days to go until the original 29 March exit date, we are, at the time of going to press, no nearer to securing an orderly exit from Europe.

I ask if Brexit can still surprise her. She laughs. "The first rule of journalism is never assume anything. I was surprised by the scale of the first defeat. It was unprecedented, and it seems kind of beyond anybody's reasonable expectation that a government would have found itself in this position, going ahead with a vote that they were going to lose by such a huge margin. But that's what this whole saga has taught us. Never assume anything again."

JULIE TATCHELL AND Amanda Middleditch see a lot of tears. Known to their many fans as the Bear Ladies, they are the soft toy experts on The Repair Shop, the BBC series that nominally fixes up bashed-about family heirlooms but, in reality, operates as a repair service for faded childhood memories and, every so often, patches up broken hearts in the process.

“Sometimes people haven’t been apart from their toys for 70 years or more,” says Middleditch. “For them to hand it over to somebody else and say, ‘I’m trusting you to repair this for me, to put it right,’ is a huge thing. We understand just how huge because we see it all the time.”

We’re talking in an ancient stone and timber barn at Weald and Downland Living Museum in West Sussex, where The Repair Shop experts are filmed restoring viewer treasures. Inside there is a clutter of lights, digital recording equipment and TV cameras, but also the tools of older crafts. Steve Fletcher, the show’s horologist, is oiling a jammed watch mechanism. Brenton West, the silversmith and antique photography expert, is gently cleaning an antique plaque. As they beaver away, furniture restorer and company foreman Jay Blades walks between the benches, equal parts curious and encouraging. It’s partly this camaraderie that makes The Repair Shop so appealing – ratings for the last series in the early evening rose to almost two million, and last week the show won a coveted Royal Television Society award. “It’s a mutual-appreciation club,” says Middleditch. “We’re all in awe of everyone else’s abilities.”

“We also do any needlework that needs doing on other projects,” adds Tatchell. Sometimes, though, a request from the other experts can be very specific: “This week we made a skirt for a duck,” she chuckles.

SOME 28 EXPERTS have featured in all three series since the show began in 2017, from the pinball machine obsessive Geoff “Pinball” Harvey to Rachael South, who specialises in cane furniture. But soft toys are the only area where two experts work together full-time. “We come as a team,” says Tatchell. “We always have done.”

The reason for this becomes apparent as we talk. Fixing soft toys is a taxing occupation: you require high-level sewing skills, of course, but you also need emotional support. “It can be really heart-wrenching hearing what people have been through,” admits Middleditch. “You’ve got to be there to help each other. Some days we Can they fix it?

Yes, they can! RT visits The Repair Shop and finds out how its experts offer an antidote to today’s throwaway culture do go home thinking, ‘Oh, gosh, that was a hard one.’ We have to pick ourselves up.”

“It’s a real tear-jerker,” says Tatchell. “We see teddy bears that were the last link between a child and their parent before they were adopted. Or they were terribly ill when they were young and that toy was with them every time they went into hospital. We’ve had people who remember taking their teddy bears into air-raid shelters during the war. There are others who need them because they have problems actually talking to other people, but with that bear in their hand they can.”

Tatchell and Middleditch have been working together since 2006, when Tatchell opened a collectable teddy bear shop and craft studio in the New Forest and Middleditch joined her. Rather than restoring the much-loved – for which, read threadbare – toys that come their way, Middleditch calls what they do preserving.

"We don't want to change them," she says. "We strengthen what is there. If we're going to get back the toy that they love, we have to be very, very careful and we can tell by their faces straightaway if we've got it right."

For the Bear Ladies, this is the show's emotional heart, the moment when a born-again floppy-eared rabbit or goggle-eyed panda is brought out of the box and the 80-year-old on the other side of the bench suddenly becomes eight again. "When we're standing at that table waiting for the person we've just done the job for to come in, it's nerve-racking," says Tatchell. "If it wasn't it would mean we didn't care, and we do care very much. We've done the best we can do. We genuinely do get a bit worked up."

At times it can be overwhelming. "We've actually broken down," says Middleditch. "After the cameras have finished rolling and the person's gone out, we go, 'Oh.' And then we have a cry. It's such a huge responsibility. But I wouldn't do anything else. I love it."

I wonder if there's been one object on the show that has been particularly moving? "I think it might be a stuffed toy called Wheelie Ted that we have done for the new series," says Middleditch. "It belongs to a lady in her 70s who has cerebral palsy. When she was a child her parents thought she'd never walk. Then her dad's employer gave her a toy bear on wheels ▷

◁ that she could push, and it worked. The bear got her up on her feet and moving. She was older than most people when she learnt to walk, so she remembers this momentous thing. The bear started to get worn out, so her mum covered it with new material – she wanted to stop it deteriorating because it was their daughter’s prop. We were able to take it back to how it had been before that, to her memory of seeing Wheelie Ted when she first got him.”

They have encountered other teddy bears that are more than 100 years old, but the toys that come their way are unlikely to bother the valuers at Sotheby’s. “What we do is about the emotional value,” says Middleditch. “If the emphasis is on the financial value of something, you’ll lose a lot of people because they’ll automatically think, ‘Well, that’s not for me then. I’ll never be able to afford it.’ These are down-to-earth, real things that most people can relate to.”

Over the show’s two years, social attitudes to waste have changed dramatically and there is a new mood for conservation. Now, rather than simply being pleasant viewing, The Repair Shop is an outrider for a social revolution. If we want to save the world, we must start fixing things rather than throwing them away.

But for Tatchell, the show’s popularity is less about the zeitgeist than some simpler truths. “It’s not just about repairing and restoring,” she says. “It’s about Amanda and I being able to engage with people and be a part of their healing process. It’s an honour for us to be trusted with something that’s so special to somebody. Really, it’s just lovely.” MICHAEL HODGES

‘THAT IS ABSOLUTELY ASTONISHING’

How one RT reader’s treasure was transformed

Christine Edmondson grips the edge of the wooden bench, determined not to lose control of her emotions. Will Kirk, The Repair Shop’s cabinet maker and woodwork specialist, is about to reveal the results of his painstaking restoration work on a very precious family heirloom, a model wooden galleon in full sail that was given to her mother at the outbreak of the Second World War in 1939.

Last year, Christine, 63, from Abergavenny in Monmouthshire, won a Radio Times Feedback competition to find a suitable project for The Repair Shop’s experts to bring back to life. We were looking for a piece with a special meaning and the galleon, which originally belonged to her mother’s next-door neighbour, Albert Armitage, more than qualified. “Armitage

“For 11 years he wouldn’t allow anyone to touch it, so it wasn’t dusted,” she says. “I brought it home with me after he died and when I looked inside I discovered that my mother had left a hand-written message telling me the ship’s history. I think my mum knew that she was dying and felt she had dementia coming on. She was frightened that she was going to forget, so she left me that message.”

‘It looks just like the ship I knew when I was tiny’ was second in command to Captain Scott on the Discovery expedition to the Antarctic in 1901,” explains Christine. “He ran into financial problems and my grandmother bought it for ten shillings, a lot of money then, to help him out. She gave it as a gift to my mum, who was 13 and had just lost her dad. It was special to my mum. She kept it for all her life and when I was a child it was always around, usually on top of a bookshelf.”

One of thousands mass-produced in the Far East in the early 20th century for export to the western market, the ship is not a rarity, says Kirk, but it is unique because of the family story it tells for Christine. Her mother died in 2000, but her father lived on his own until 2011.

At first, Christine attempted to clean the galleon herself. “It was very, very dusty and the rigging was broken in quite a lot of places,” she recalls. “The paint on the little shields was crinkly and looked as though it might start to come off. I tried to clean it with a paint brush and water. But I have no idea what it’s going to look like after Will has finished.”

Finally, Kirk lifts the blanket... “Oh, that is absolutely astonishing,” says Christine. “I don’t know how you got it to look so old and so new again at the same time. I said I wasn’t going to cry, but it looks just like the ship I knew when I was tiny. I know a chap who is a very skilled carpenter, and I’ll get him to make me a glass case with a light in and put it high up on the wall, so your work will always be on display.” Job done. MH

Gtech's first bagged vacuum cleaner

Some bagless vacuum cleaners can accumulate dust, requiring additional maintenance and frequent filter washing. The Gtech Pro's hygienic bags contain the dirt and debris for easy disposal, straight into the bin. The Gtech Pro comes with 2 hygienic bags but with this offer you'll receive an extra 10 free bags.

Impressive performance & easy to use

The Gtech Pro has proven performance and is low maintenance and cordless. Specially designed for floor to ceiling cleaning, the Pro vacuum features a full set of attachments, with the flexibility to glide effortlessly from carpet to hard floors without having to change settings.

Why choose a bagged vacuum cleaner?

Bagged vacuum cleaners are designed for convenient cleaning. Disposing of the dust and debris collected from around your home is effortless and hygienic; bags can be easily removed and replaced without handling the dust. What's more, bagged vacuum cleaners usually hold more dirt compared to their similarly sized bagless counterparts, so they don't need to be changed as often.

Enhanced dirt capacity

If you're tired of constantly emptying your vacuum, you'll be amazed at how much mess you can fit into the bag. When you use the Gtech Pro, the layers of dust that accumulate inside the bag are continually pushed down by the air flowing through vacuum, compressing the dirt into a reduced volume.

Your sport needs you!

Racing: Grand National Festival

Thursday, Friday 2.00pm ITV, 5 Live Sports Extra

THERE ARE MANY reasons for going to the races. You can go because you love horses, because you love a bet, because you love the colour and the spectacle, because the skills of the jockeys enthral you, because you love to be part of the pageantry, because the ancient traditions give you a warm glow.

Or you can go because you like going out in a gang while wearing your best frock and seeing if you can make prosecco come out of your ears. That's the theory behind Ladies Day at Aintree, which is held on the Friday before the Grand National – though the racecourse organisers don't put it quite like that.

Ladies Day might sound like a genteel anachronism, but it's alive and kicking in the world of racing. At Ascot in June, Ladies Day is posh. But Ladies Day at Aintree has no such pretensions. If the Liver Birds had ever gone to the races, this is how they would have done it: loud, flamboyant, dressy, boozy and distinctly wobbly on their four-inch heels by the last race.

Newspaper photographers will snap female spectators losing their cohesion, along with a thousand variations of tottering, giggling, help-me-up helplessness. I remember a picture of two survivors at the end of the day, still upright, fascinators a little askew, but marching away boldly in their flip-flops, heeled shoes in hands.

On the day before the National, the audience upstages the performers. The horses and jockeys – and the racing is of seriously high quality – take second best to a parade of spectators. One of the prizes available on the day is the “big car” awarded to the winner of the “Style Award”.

And it reminds us all of the importance of the paying customer to television coverage of sporting events. It has become a sporting tradition to cut from the action to the crowd: complexions in the pavilion as red as the stripes on MCC ties, top hats in the parade ring, face paint in the stands, shirtless football fans with flamingo skin, I-love-Roger T-shirts; people in tears, people in incomparable ecstasies, people madly hi-Mumming at the camera.

More important than the faces and the costumes is the noise. If you're watching a football match on TV and you miss five minutes, when you get back you can tell at once, and by ear, exactly what's happening: the score's the same, there's been an equaliser, someone's going to be sent off. The sound of the crowd is your main emotional contact with the action. You have your eyes, you have information from the commentator – but sport is about emotion as well as facts, and that comes direct from the punters.

Big-time sport tends to take the paying audience for granted. Football and other sports are routinely scheduled at times when travelling fans must suffer untold trouble to attend – yet without their groans and cheers, the spectacle would be far less compelling.

TEST MATCHES OUTSIDE England and Australia are frequently played in front of empty seats: what sound does a six make when it lands in a deserted stadium? The more corporate sport gets, the less involved the paying audience becomes: we lose something when the audience is dominated by the people who, following a remark from the then Manchester United captain Roy Keane, are known as the prawn sandwich brigade.

The glorious marriage between sport and television needs real fans to make it work. They are the link between the sitting room and the action, allowing us on our sofas to become participants rather than viewers as we relish the glorious spectacle of great sport. All those who watch sport on television have a debt to the audience who are actually there. So on Friday we should all raise a glass to the women on Ladies Day, take pleasure in their pleasure – and hope they remembered their flip-flops.

The elephant in th

Dumbo stars Colin Farrell, Danny DeVito and Eva Green on capturing the magic of the original

DID YOU EVER see an elephant fly? I've seen a horse fly, a dragon fly and a house fly... I've also seen Eva Green soar through the air on a trapeze, Colin Farrell's one-armed stuntman perform dramatic tricks with a lasso, and Danny DeVito's circus impresario bark orders at clowns, dancers, acrobats and four Mongolian contortionists.

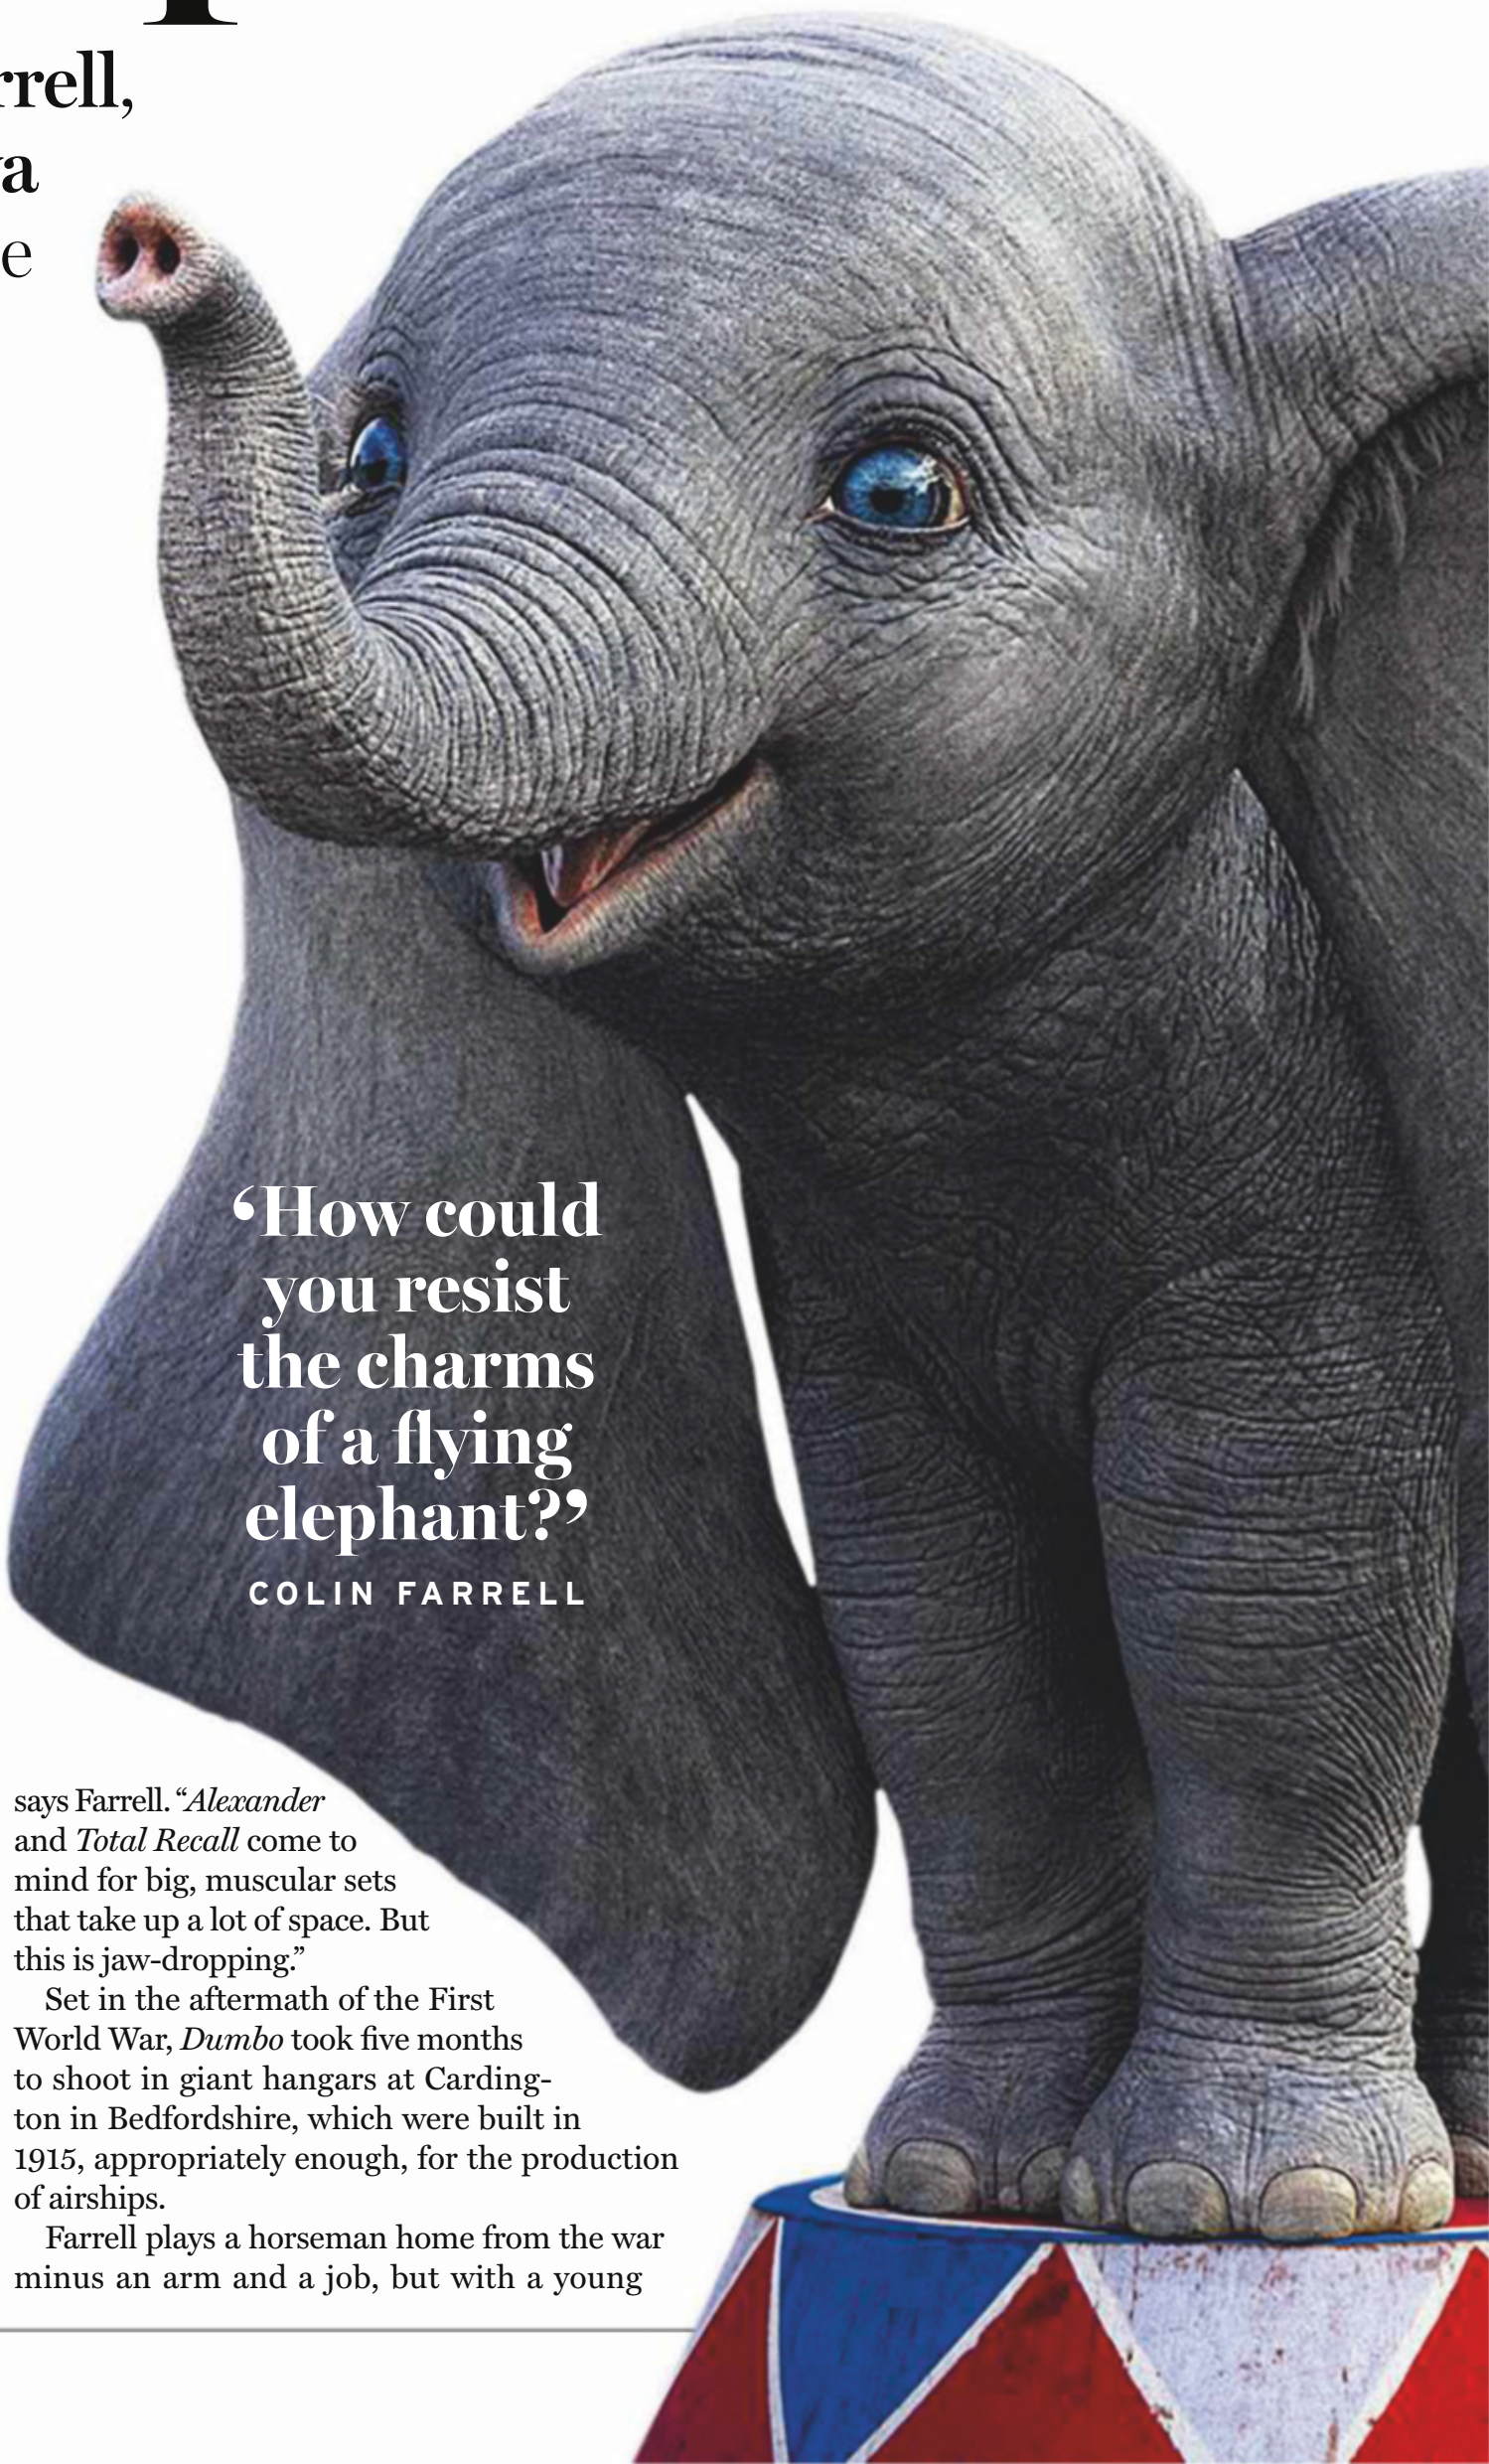

This is director Tim Burton's live-action reimaging of the classic 1941 Disney animation. And the only thing missing on the giant, big-top-shaped stage is an airborne pachyderm.

"There's never an elephant-shaped thing flying about," says producer Derek Frey, as we stand outside the 70-foot-high circus tent within the amusement park set, which has a footprint larger than the O2 Arena in London. "They want to keep it clean so they can animate afterwards."

Instead, a crew member wields a ten-foot pole with a small green ball on the end, waved and swooped around our heads as a crowd of seated extras coo and gasp. And there's actor Edd Osmond, described in his Twitter profile as a "creature performer of a smaller proportion... tiny in fact". He's dressed in an all-over, face-concealing green bodysuit fitted with extended arms, and scurries and leaps about the floor on all fours while onlookers dressed in the garb of 1919 day-trippers look on, mouths agape.

Burton's team of special effects wizards will knit those together in post-production, just as they did for the likes of Charlie and the Chocolate Factory and the $1 billion-grossing Alice in Wonderland. At the other end of the process, when the film hits cinemas on Friday 29 March, audiences will believe an elephant can fly.

Back on set, is it a problem that his human co-stars can't see the big-eared hero of the movie? "How could you be resistant to the charms of a flying elephant? You'd have to be some kind of cynic," Farrell says with a smile. There's magic, too, in the production design, headed by Oscar-winning Rick Heinrichs; he came to Dumbo from Star Wars Episode VIII: the Last Jedi. "I've worked on some big sets," says Farrell. "Alexander and Total Recall come to mind for big, muscular sets that take up a lot of space. But this is jaw-dropping."

'How could you resist the charms of a flying elephant?'

COLIN FARRELL

Set in the aftermath of the First World War, Dumbo took five months to shoot in giant hangars at Cardington in Bedfordshire, which were built in 1915, appropriately enough, for the production of airships.

Farrell plays a horseman home from the war minus an arm and a job, but with a young last-ditch attempt to beef up the circus's attractions, is pregnant with a calf that might turn the operation back into the greatest show on earth. Farrell identifies a core message unchanged from the 1941 original: "Dumbo provides an opportunity for all the human characters in the film to have their own inner awakenings. It literally brings magic into everyone's life."

THE GRAVITY-DEFYING ELEPHANT – who, as in the first film, doesn't talk – also saves lives: in one of the scenes shot while I am on set, Dumbo swoops in to catch Eva Green's trapeze artist when she plummets towards the ground during a routine. Burton, dressed entirely in black, orchestrates the action with encouraging shouts, boundless enthusiasm and a swagger stick.

"I surprised myself by playing the trapeze lady," says Green, 38. "I'm so scared of heights, I didn't know if I could do it. But wonderful circus people taught me. It's very physical: you need strong arms and abs."

Green is a repeat Burton collaborator, having worked with him on Dark Shadows (2012) and Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children (2016). So, too, is DeVito. The 74-year-old former Taxi star describes Dumbo as the third in their "circus trilogy", after Batman Returns (1992) and Big Fish (2003). In the former, DeVito was the Penguin to Michael Keaton's Batman. In Dumbo, he's cacklingly pleased to report, the pointy shoe is on the other foot.

"Michael and I do switch milieus. Now he's the villain and I'm the good guy. I said to him one day: 'You thought you were so smart that you were Batman and I was the Penguin... but now look how the tables have turned!'"

The original Dumbo (above) abides as 64 minutes of animation perfection, as moving and impactful today as it was nearly eight decades ago. With a slight detour down a narrative, er, trunk road, and a more than doubled running time of 130 minutes, will Tim Burton's new version stand up to the original? Or is that too tough a task? DeVito thinks not.

"This elephant has so much soul and purity and innocence, and that speaks to everybody. And he's an odd character, and we should be embracing the odd characters in life. This film has got a lotta heart, it really does. And," he concludes, in a very DeVito way, "you gotta love this little guy." CRAIG McLEAN

MY MOVIES

Trumbo ★★★

Friday 11.05pm BBC2

Hollywood sees red

Forgive my childlike glee, but I'm happy to announce that for the first time the two films featured in this section actually rhyme! To the left: Dumbo; to the right: Trumbo.

The latter, first name Dalton, is the subject of Jay Roach's 2015 biopic of the screenwriter blacklisted during the reds-under-the-bed witch-hunts of the 1940s and 50s. Dalton Trumbo was anything but on the right. A card-carrying communist, in 1947 he refused to testify to the House Un-American Activities Committee and found himself blacklisted, serving 11 months in prison and only able to ply his craft under assumed names.

There is certainly dark humour in the period when viewed from a distance.

With that in view, Bryan Cranston is the right man for the plum part. Giving an Oscar-nominated account as the clubbable eccentric – who's fabled to have written in the bath with a typewriter balanced on the soap rack – Cranston puts some clear blue sky between himself and the career-making Breaking Bad. Meanwhile, director Roach relishes re-creating scenes from key movies and the postwar Tinseltown milieu, blending newsreel of hearings with dramatisation.

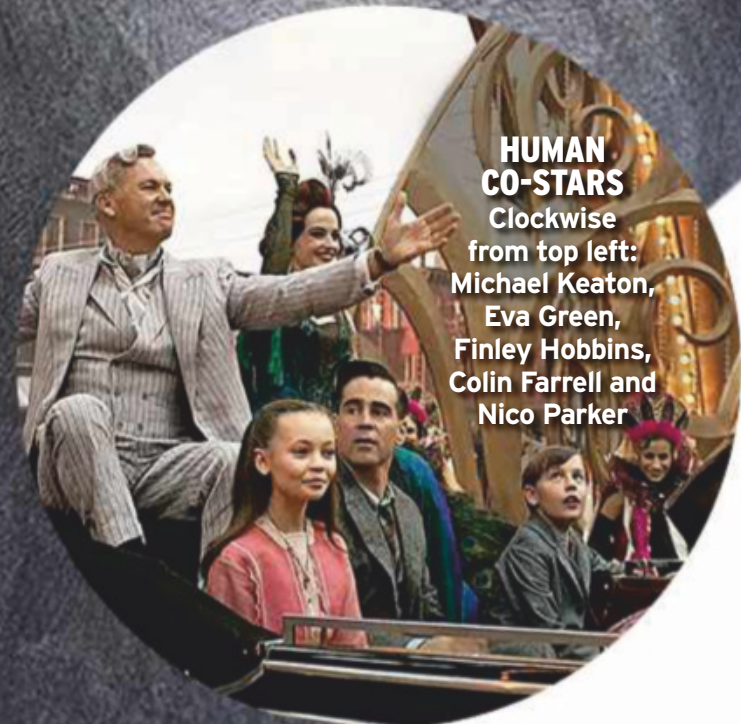

TYPE CASTING
Bryan Cranston
as Dalton Trumbo

Film fans should look out for caricatures of John Wayne (David James Elliott) and two of Trumbo's saviours: Kirk Douglas (Dean O'Gorman), who was determined to use Trumbo's real name when he wrote Spartacus, and director Otto Preminger (Christian Berkel), who put Trumbo to work on Exodus in 1960. Helen Mirren's antisemitic columnist Hedda Hopper is a panto villain, but Michael Stuhlbarg brings humanity to a stoic Edward G Robinson and John Goodman injects uncouth energy into B-movie producer Frank King.

John McNamara's script sometimes oversimplifies, leaving characters spouting rhetoric. But it was a regrettable period in American political and entertainment history; an animators' strike over unionisation – blamed by Walt Disney on commie agitation – even affected the original 1941 production of Dumbo.

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

P The Secret Life of Pets ★★★
 5.00-6.35pm ITV U

COMEDY The director/producer of Despicable Me and its sequels, Chris Renaud moved in to the domestic space for The Secret Life of Pets, with its inbuilt audience of millions of cat and dog owners. Renaud and his writing team struck catnip with the Toy Story-inspired set-up, in which various pets – including a tabby, a pug, a budgie and a guinea pig – in a smart Manhattan apartment block lead parallel lives during their owners' working hours. Forget it's disgraced comic Louis CK providing the voice of the Jack Russell, who is wrongfully impounded along with a shaggy rescue mongrel (Modern Family's Eric Stonestreet), leaving a Pomeranian (Jenny Slate) to organise their rescue. A cavalcade of voices abound, from Kevin Hart's white rabbit to Steve Coogan's cockney Sphynx cat to Albert Brooks's hawk. It's bright, urban and detailed, and features a pig and a lizard driving a van. A sequel is due in May. (US 2016, HD)

DAYTIME

The Wooden Horse ★★★
 1.50-3.30pm BBC2 U

WAR DRAMA This is one of the most famous escape stories of the Second World War, in which PoWs use a vaulting horse to hide their tunnel. Scripted by Eric Williams (from his own bestseller) and directed by ex-documentary-maker Jack Lee (A Town like Alice), it has a ring of authenticity that is reinforced by a splendid cast led by Leo Genn and David Tomlinson. However, the action only really becomes compelling outside Stalag Luft III as the escapees make for the coast. Preceded by Talking Pictures: War Films. DP (UK 1950, BW, HD)

From Russia with Love ★★★★★
 4.00-6.20pm ITV4 PG

ADVENTURE Ian Fleming received a boost to his sales when President Kennedy listed From Russia with Love as one of his ten favourite books. It is also one of the most popular Bond movies and a terrific thriller in its own right. Superbly shot on location in a pre-touristy Istanbul, the film has Sean Connery's spy duped into smuggling a communist decoding machine, plus Russian diplomat Daniela Bianchi, from Turkey via the Orient Express. Lotte Lenya is unforgettable as lesbian villain Rosa Klebb, and Robert Shaw is an impressive hitman who commits a terrible faux pas in front of 007 by ordering red wine with fish. AT (UK 1963, may be edited for violence, sex scenes, HD)

The Man Upstairs ★★★
 4.55-6.40pm Talking Pictures TV PG

DRAMA Le Jour Se Lève was a 1939 French classic and starred Jean Gabin as a killer who barricades himself in his flat. It was remade in 1947 as The Long Night with Henry Fonda, and this, too, is a remake, with Richard Attenborough going bonkers upstairs. The motivation has changed, but the dramatic set-up is identical and makes for some agreeable tension. Attenborough's ability to play pathetic, psychological wrecks is unmatched and flies in the face of his cuddly public persona. AT (UK 1958)

EVENING

P The Unknown Girl ★★★
 9.00-10.40pm BBC4 15

DRAMA In their early films, Jean-Pierre and Luc Dardenne presented stark neorealist snapshots of life in the run-down Seraing region of Liège. But this account of a doctor trying to salve her conscience after a professional misjudgement feels conventionally melodramatic. As the doctor, Adèle Haenel delivers a studied performance as assured as the imagery. But, while the Dardennes cast a noir-like pall over events, the procedural aspect lacks nuance and the dénouement raises some disconcerting questions about Haenel's cosy redemption. DP (Bel/Fr 2016, sexual references, HD)

Mechanic: Resurrection ★★
 9.30-11.25pm GMT C4 15

ACTION THRILLER Jason Statham returns for more after the 2011 remake, looking meaner than ever, but stuck in a movie that's not as sharp as he is. For one thing, it makes little sense for this paranoid character to make himself vulnerable by falling for charity worker Jessica Alba, thus landing himself in the grip of nemesis Sam Hazeldine. As "the Stath" is forced into a series of kills to keep her alive, the movie's soon stretching credibility in the name of spectacle. For the most part, this plodding, far-fetched bubblegum fare loses sight of what the ever-impeccable Statham does best. That is, playing a recognisably human individual with super-refined close-combat skills. TJ (US/Fr 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

The 40 Year Old Virgin ★★★
 10.55pm GMT-2.00am BST ITV 15

COMEDY Before he found fame as an Oscar-nominated actor of considerable comic and dramatic skill, Steve Carell took on his first leading role in this sweet breakout comedy hit. He plays a middle-aged salesman who unwittingly betrays his lack of sexual experience to his colleagues (among them Paul Rudd), who decide to help him lose his virginity. Thanks to its sharp script, co-written by director Judd Apatow and Carell, the film transcends the mundane and – inevitably – raunchier aspects of the plot, and Carell is hugely appealing and committed – his excruciating chest-waxing scene was done for real. DA (US 2005, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

 11.25pm GMT-2.20am BST C4 15

disjointed third entry in his high-flying franchise. As moody driver Frank, he's forced to drive a kidnapped "package" (Natalya Rudakova) around Europe until her father, the Ukrainian environmental minister, signs a crooked agreement. The plot merely serves to showcase the outrageous stunts and provide excuses for Statham to get his kit off. But while the flash, bang, wallop stuff once used to be fun, this is rather more brainless and boring. AJ (Fr/US 2008, violence, HD)

Phoenix ★★★
 2.30-4.05am BST BBC2 12

DRAMA Postwar Germany is the setting for a tale of betrayal in this melancholy Holocaust drama. At the centre of director Christian Petzold's tale is a concentration camp survivor (Nina Hoss) who returns to Berlin after having facial reconstruction surgery. She decides to track down her husband (Ronald Zehrfeld), who persuades her to pose as his dead spouse so they can gain access to a large family inheritance. This is restrained and understated to a fault, but Hoss is quietly devastating. SC (Ger/Pol 2014, brief swearing)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Look Back in Anger ★★★★★

12 midnight-1.40am BBC2 PG

DRAMA One of the crown jewels of British kitchen-sink drama, Look Back in Anger scrubbed up nicely for the BFI's recent Woodfall Film Productions DVD box set. John Osborne's 1956 play changed the way working-class males were presented, and Osborne also had a hand in the screenplay for this trad jazz-scored film adaptation, retaining the torridly domestic dialogue: "I can't stop my sweat breaking out when I see you lean over an ironing board." Richard Burton is Jimmy Porter, existentially adrift in industrial Derby, sharing an attic with wife Mary Ure and lodger Gary Raymond, with whom he runs a sweet stall – a bromance 50 years before the term was coined. Directed with pressure-cooker emotion by Tony Richardson, the story presses buttons on race, infidelity, abortion and social immobility (Claire Bloom's aspiring actress seems to embody aspiration). You've never seen so many doors slammed in one film. It's essential viewing. (UK 1959, BW, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Like most people, co-star Gary Raymond was dazzled by Burton: "He was just so handsome... he had a halo, an aura."

DAYTIME

1.30-3.25pm BBC2 PG

WARTIME DRAMA There is an inescapable predictability about movies that feature wartime exploits, even though there is no denying the magnitude of the achievements of people such as Odette Churchill, who endured Nazi torture while working for the French Resistance. Director Herbert Wilcox has little new to offer in this depiction of underground activities, and pulls his punches during Odette's interrogation by suitably sadistic Gestapo types. Playing with more reverence than she accorded either Queen Victoria or Florence Nightingale, Anna Neagle suggests a certain stiffness in the upper lip region, but she is not at her best. DP (UK 1950, BW, HD)

Brave ★★★★★

3.20-4.45pm BBC1 PG

ADVENTURE Pixar's 13th full-length film is the studio's first to feature a female as its central character, and a memorable creation she is, too. Merida (voiced by Kelly Macdonald) is a Scottish princess whose head of unruly red hair conveys her fiery spirit. When Merida learns that her mother (Emma Thompson) plans for her to marry to preserve peace in the kingdom, the princess takes off. She winds up in a forest, where she meets a witch and begs for a spell that will change her mother's mind. In terms of story, Brave seems old-fashioned alongside Pixar films such as Up and WALL-E, but there is plenty to admire. It looks stunning, from the re-creation of the Scottish countryside to Merida's live-wire hair. Also, while Merida matures during the film, hers is not the romantic fate of spirited princesses past. That said, Brave serves up some lazy clichés in its depiction of the kingdom's menfolk and, while the film is very entertaining, it lacks the audacious spirit of the studio's earlier offerings. BP (US 2012, HD)

ET the Extra-Terrestrial

4.45-7.00pm 5STAR U

SCI-FI Steven Spielberg's ode to aliens could also be seen as a tribute to all the world's loners, as little ET, abandoned by his pot-bellied pals, has to cope on Earth until they can come back for him. Luckily, he's befriended by an equally lonely little boy named Elliott, played by Henry Thomas, who proceeds to teach his alien chum how to talk, dress up in women's clothes and guzzle beer. This is a special, delightful adventure, in which Spielberg manages not only to entertain young children, but also reach out to the child in all of us. JB (US 1982, HD)

EVENING

Mother's Day ★★
6.45-9.00pm Film4 12

COMEDY The third part of a star-studded series following Valentine's Day (2010) and New Year's Eve (2011), this tells the story of several overwrought mothers (including Jennifer Aniston, Kate Hudson and Julia Roberts) as they negotiate family traumas leading up to Mother's Day. Like the previous films, this is an unengaging mix of romantic comedy conventions, and single parent Aniston is the most empathetic of the cast. All fall foul of a clumsy script that avoids the true hardships of motherhood and, in the end, this unbearably sentimental film offers a rare chance to see several romantic comedy queens share the screen, but very little else. JL (US 2016, sexual references edited for language, HD) Keeping mum? The Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring
★★★★★ 7.00-10.35pm ITV2 PG

FANTASY In the first chapter of director Peter Jackson's $300-million adaptation of JRR Tolkien's classic trilogy, Middle-earth is the fictional setting, but it's no backdrop; it's a living, breathing universe, in which hobbit Frodo Baggins (Elijah Wood) turns hero when he inherits the ring of power. Assisted by wizard Gandalf (a perfectly cast Ian McKellen) and a group of warriors and friends, he journeys to return the talisman to its source. The computer-generated images transform the New Zealand locations into views that will take your breath away, and only someone with a pathological aversion to fantasy could fail to be absorbed and transported by this stunning film. AC (NZ/US 2001, may be edited for violence, HD)

Raw Deal ★★★
9.00-11.05pm 5Spike 18

ACTION This entertaining exercise in crash-bang policing comes from John Irvin, whose only previous action credit was the less-than-inspiring Dogs of War. Fresh from the panned Red Sonja, Arnold Schwarzenegger was probably keen to get back to the old routine, and here stars as an ex-FBI agent who goes under cover to nail a Chicago mobster (Sam Wanamaker). The film is populated with stereotypes and Arnie dispatches a great many bad guys with his usual lack of expression and a seemingly inexhaustible supply of bullets, but if you can suspend your disbelief, you'll have a ball. DP (US 1986, violence, swearing, HD)

10.00pm-12 midnight Universal 15

THRILLER Following his understated role in Insomnia, Robin Williams put in another exquisitely straight performance in this thriller. Almost unrecognisable behind a receding hairline and glasses, he is hauntingly moving as a supermarket photo processor who becomes obsessed by a local family. A simple yet effective reflection on modern society's fixation with so-called flawless lifestyles, the film is meticulously composed and tautly executed by director Mark Romanek. He draws on his music video background by applying varying degrees of colour and contrast to reflect the positive and negative emotions on display, and the result is a startling film, made all the more powerful by its unexpected climax. SF (US 2001, swearing, nudity)

LATE NIGHT
Mustang ★★★
11.30pm-1.00am BBC4 15

DRAMA Part social-realist slice of rural Turkish life, part fairy tale, this striking debut from co-writer/director Deniz Gamze Erguven has a close cousin in Sofia Coppola's The Virgin Suicides. In both, five sisters are grounded by overprotective families with pressure-cooker results. Erguven continually arranges the girls into sensual tableaux, whether in sisterly scrum at a football match, or at peace in their home prison. This formal beauty masks a cruel repression, and, while Mustang never quite conforms to expectation, it's a confident, illuminating debut. AC (Fr/Ger/Tur/Qatar 2015, swearing, sexual references, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Snowden ★★★★★
9.00-11.40pm Film4 15

THRILLER Edward Snowden is the National Security Agency whistleblower who, in 2013, leaked classified intel about surveillance. In this biopic, he is played by Joseph Gordon-Levitt, who is a pretty good physical fit for the willowy traitor. With its David and Goliath clash between geek and government, Oliver Stone's film is a serviceable thriller, and one that was shot in thriller-like circumstances. However, its narrative is somewhat diluted by Snowden's on/off romance with Lindsay Mills (Shailene Woodley). Snowden is a more likeable hero than Julian Assange (even when played by Benedict Cumberbatch in The Fifth Estate) and the film flatters Guardian journalists by getting more charismatic actors to play them. (Ger/US 2016, swearing, sex scenes, sexual references, HD)

The Hound of the Baskervilles ★★★★★
1.00-3.00pm True Entertainment 15

MYSTERY Before this solid take on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic mystery, there had already been one exceptional version (with Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes), an admirable one (with Peter Cushing), a negligible one (featuring Stewart Granger) and a quite execrable one (starring Peter Cook). Yet director Douglas Hickox still deemed it necessary to trek across Dartmoor for a further encounter with the Baskervilles and their pooch. In a cast of familiar British faces, Ian Richardson goes for the sardonic approach as Holmes, but there's nothing really new here. DP (UK 1983, edited for some of its language, violence)

The Goonies ★★★★★
7.00-9.00pm 5STAR 12

ADVENTURE Chris Columbus made it big when he directed Macaulay Culkin in Home Alone but, before that, he wrote the screenplay from a story by a certain Steven Spielberg for this good-natured romp, in which a gang of children tackles crooks while searching for a hoard of missing pirate treasure. The tale rattles along like a juvenile Raiders of the Lost Ark and the leads – including Martha Plimpton, Sean Astin and Corey Feldman – are a likeable bunch. There's also some nice hamming from villains Anne Ramsey, Joe Pantoliano and Robert Davi. JF (US 1985, violence, swearing)

Meet the Fockers ★★★★★
9.00-11.10pm Sky1 12

COMEDY The job of a commercially driven sequel is to give the audience more of what they liked the first time – in this case, Robert De Niro's uptight ex-CIA man sparring with soon-to-be son-in-law Ben Stiller, as they did in Meet the Parents. There's plenty of that here, as De Niro's family travel to Florida to meet Stiller's mother and father. It's a testament to the cracking performances of Dustin Hoffman and Barbra Streisand as Stiller's parents that they steal the film from De Niro. The least successful parts of the film are those that reuse the same jokes (if you've heard one gag based on the word "Focker", then you've heard 'em all), but this is still an enjoyable romp with a top-drawer cast. AC (US 2004, some swearing, HD)

Scent of a Woman ★★★★★
9.00pm-12.10am Paramount Network 15

DRAMA This lengthy melodrama is kept alive and out of the clutches of sentimentality by a towering, Oscar-winning performance from Al Pacino. He plays the blind ex-soldier who heads for New York to sample life's luxuries over the Thanksgiving weekend. As his unworldly teenage escort, Chris O'Donnell is quietly impressive, but it's Pacino's picture, whether tangoing with Gabrielle Anwar, berating O'Donnell's cowardly schoolmates or barking out his famous "hoo-ha" cough. It's loosely based on Dino Risi's 1974 Italian film of the same name. DP (US 1992, swearing, HD)

Payroll ★★ 11.40pm-1.50am
Talking Pictures TV PG

CRIME Sidney Hayers is one of the forgotten journeymen of 1960s British cinema. Coming between his chillers Circus of Horrors and Night of the Eagle, this is a solid crime story in which the perfect blag begins to unravel as the gang lies low. Michael Craig is on fine form as the gang leader, but it's Billie Whitelaw, as the widow of a murdered guard, who commands centre stage as she tries to snare the culprits. While it could stand some tightening up, the action is robust and brisk. DP (UK 1961, BW)

COMEDY DRAMA

This Oscar-winning film from director Jason Reitman and screenwriter Diablo Cody takes the teen movie genre in a more grown-up direction as Juno (Ellen Page) discovers she is "with child", and this witty, warm film smartly reveals that she is just as anxious as any girl in that situation would be. Adam Smith (US 2007, swearing, sexual references)

Nebraska ★★★★★
11.40pm-1.55am Film4 15

Although dubious, his son (Will Forte) drives him to collect his "winnings", which is where this lovely and poignant comedy finds its feet as a delicate examination of past lives and roots. DW (US 2013, BW, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

I Am Heath Ledger ★★★★★

11.00pm-1.00am Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Growing up in Perth, Australia, in the 1980s, Heath Ledger stuck stars on his bedroom ceiling to remind him where he was headed. This frank hagiography of the doomed actor presents him as a force of nature who, close friends and family adoringly attest, "had this light around him", but also "too much energy, too much creativity". Directors Adrian Buitenhuis and Derik Murray shuffle self-taken footage of Ledger whirling around with a camcorder into besotted testimony from his pals. The film oversimplifies Ledger's early career but patiently plots his transformation from teen star to mature, award-winning talent. His grieving family lament that when Ledger died in 2008, "The world found out before we did." As a poignant footnote, he would have turned 40 tomorrow. (Can 2017, HD)

The Purge: Election Year ★★

15

THRILLER The third film in writer/director James DeMonaco's violent franchise sees the annual free-for-all killing spree come under threat from US presidential candidate Charlie Roan (Elizabeth Mitchell). When a hit squad comes a-calling, Frank Grillo (The Purge: Anarchy) steps in as bodyguard. The concept is wearing thin with this threequel, and the law of diminishing returns dictates it's time for the Purge to go. JA (US/Fr 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

Unforgiven ★★★★★

9.00-11.40pm ITV4

15

WESTERN Quite simply one of the finest films ever made in the genre. Director Clint Eastwood depicts the west as an unforgiving place where tragedy strikes every time somebody draws a gun, and his own world-weary performance – as a retired gunslinger forced to strap on the six-shooters one last time to feed his children – is exemplary, cleverly drawing on our familiarity with his "Man with No Name" persona. DP (US 1992, violence, swearing, HD)

Phone Booth ★★★

10.40pm-12.40am Syfy

15

THRILLER Colin Farrell plays an arrogant publicist trapped in a New York phone booth by an unseen sniper. The psychological warfare waged on him by "The Caller" (voiced by Kiefer Sutherland) carries a suspenseful charge, aided by Joel Schumacher's use of split screen. And while Larry Cohen's script eventually resorts to melodrama, resulting in a less than satisfying final act, this still pushes plenty of the right buttons. JC (US 2002, violence, swearing)

The Tamarind Seed ★★

11.00pm-1.30am Talking Pictures TV

ROMANTIC THRILLER Omar Sharif is the most gorgeous spy in the Soviet bloc and Julie Andrews is the prettiest Foreign Office employee, so why shouldn't the Iron Curtain melt? There are occasional hints that director Blake Edwards saw this as a satire on all those spy melodramas, but mostly it's tosh of a laughable order. AT (UK 1974, some violence)

FILM OF THE DAY

The King's Speech ★★★★★
9.00-11.30pm Sony Movie Channel 12

DRAMA In this moving tale, Colin Firth is impressive as King George VI, the British monarch who suffered from a terrible nervous stammer. It's wife Elizabeth (the future Queen Mother, played by Helena Bonham Carter) who engages the services of speech therapist Lionel Logue (Geoffrey Rush), who is a breath of fresh air in a world of stifling formality. This is the type of thing the British film industry does so well – a bit of history, a bit of social comedy, a few liberties with the truth, and a flag-waving finale. Stella Papamichael (UK/Aus/US 2010, swearing)

7.45-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

MURDER MYSTERY Dennis Price endured mixed fortunes between Kind Hearts and Coronets (1949) and I'm All Right Jack (1959). This quickie thriller is a case in point, as he plays a Scotland Yard inspector investigating a spate of killings. Director Francis Searle paces the case reasonably well, but he's not helped by some histrionic supporting turns (most notably from Leonard Sharp as an old seadog) and a hackneyed twist. But cinematographer SD Onions makes noirishly effective use of the Thames. DP (UK 1953, BW)

ROMANCE A young writer (Anton Yelchin) finds a new perspective on life when he begins an affair with a married woman (Bérénice Marlohe) who is only free from 5 to 7pm. Sitting somewhere between a soppy romantic comedy and a Woody Allen drama, the film's story is far from realistic – which is exactly what makes it so enjoyable. Wrapped in soft focus and a swooning soundtrack, 5 to 7 is a glorious Manhattan fairy tale, possessing enough charm to gloss over any flaw. JL (US 2014, swearing, sexual references)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Rain Man ★★★★★
11.25pm-1.35am BBC1 15

DRAMA Understanding of autism is thankfully a good deal higher now than it was in 1989 when Dustin Hoffman won an Oscar for his performance as Raymond Babbitt. In this bold comedic drama penned by Barry Morrow and Ronald Bass, and intelligently handled by director Barry Levinson (who also won an Oscar), slick car dealer Charlie (Tom Cruise) learns he has an older brother when his father dies and leaves his estate to the institutionalised Raymond. Everyone remembers Hoffman's triumph, but it is equally Cruise's, whose '80s dream is parked while the pair drive across America. Raymond, a mass of baseball and airline disaster statistics, but prone to frustrated hysterics, is one of modern cinema's great square pegs: believable, unsentimental and often hilarious. But without Cruise, there is no film. The film also took Best Picture and eyes were opened thanks to some toothpicks and maple syrup. (US 1988, swearing)

Loophole ★★
6.45-9.00pm Movies4Men PG

CRIME Albert Finney and Susannah York, together for the first time since Tom Jones, star in this lacklustre heist caper. Martin Sheen is the obligatory American import, whose in-depth knowledge of bank security systems and hefty overdraft make him the ideal partner for Finney's mastermind. The blag itself is pretty routine, although the action picks up slightly when the gang's escape through the London sewers is hindered by a torrential downpour. Sadly, it's drably directed by John Quedstedt, and not even Lalo Schifrin's score can enliven the proceedings. DP (UK 1980)

Cell ★★★★★
9.00-10.55pm Film4 15

SCI-FI HORROR Based on the Stephen King novel, Cell doesn't manage to cover all of the scars of its troubled production in director Tod Williams's finished article, but it's slickly made and worth the watch. It starts out like a different sort of zombie movie, with its mindless mayhem triggered by a mysterious cellphone signal. A cautionary tale of phone dependency mutates into something even weirder, as stricken humans start migrating like birds on some avian pilgrimage. John Cusack's graphic novelist is caught up in the mayhem as he tries to get to his family in New Hampshire with the help of train operator Samuel L Jackson. During a duller, more difficult second half, it's easy not to care. There's nothing wrong with a film that makes your brain hurt a bit, but Cell is maybe a touch too enigmatic for its own good at times. DA (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

The Hunger Games ★★★★★
9.00-11.45pm E4 12

FUTURISTIC THRILLER Faithfully adapted from the first book in Suzanne Collins's bestselling trilogy, this is set in a future America where, as penance for a rebel uprising, every year two young people from each district are drafted to fight to the death in televised combat. Pitted against far stronger rivals, heroine Katniss Everdeen (Jennifer Lawrence) fans the flames of working-class unrest. Despite its well-worn ideas culled from the likes of The Running Man (1987) and Battle Royale (2000), director Gary Ross (Pleasantville) keeps the sci-fi themes vivid and relevant, while Lawrence delivers a magnetic performance. AJ (US 2012, violence, HD)

THRILLER Sam Worthington may have been the star of box-office champ Avatar, but the Aussie actor is yet to crack Hollywood's A-list. This killer-with-a-conscience action yarn probably won't change that, though director Jonathan Mostow delivers plenty of slick gunplay and crunching combat, as Worthington's junkie assassin Lucas drags his teenage target (Odeya Rush) across Europe with a gaggle of hitmen in hot pursuit. It all feels vaguely sub-Bourne, but a fierce finale in the bowels of an English country house, and Worthington's surprisingly nuanced performance as the troubled torpedo, make this above average fare. JA (US/Sp/Ger 2017, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

DRAMA Showcasing some fine acting from Sean Penn, Naomi Watts and Benicio Del Toro, this film from Mexican director Alejandro González Iñárritu is an astonishing account of faith and redemption. Watts's husband and two daughters have been killed by Benicio Del Toro's drunk-turned-Jesus freak, while Penn's professor receives the husband's heart and is drawn into an affair with his widow. Their fates are bound as the aftermath of the central tragedy unravels, and Iñárritu again uses a non-linear technique to lure us into a maze of contradictions, delivering an extraordinary vision. TH (US/Ger 2003, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, nudity)

The Old Man & the Gun ★★★★★ 12
From Mon Sky Store and Virgin Movies (also on DVD, Blu-ray and download)

COMEDY DRAMA Not only was Robert Redford the face of Hollywood in the 1970s, but as founder of the Sundance film festival he is also godfather to the modern independent movie scene. Both factors figure heavily in The Old Man & the Gun, a "mostly" true story that showcases the octogenarian actor.

Redford stars as Forrest Tucker, an elderly criminal making his way across the USA in the early 1980s with a small but effective back-up crew (Tom Waits and Danny Glover) – a bunch of reprobates known as The Over-the-Hill Gang. The plot, such as it is, is almost negligible. Instead, this is a character piece that offsets moments of romance and poignant introspection with thrilling action featuring old-school zooms and whip-pans.

Movie buffs will love it, but, at a crisp 93 minutes, Sundance alumnus David Lowery's film has a life and energy of its own. Damon Wise (UK 2018, swearing, HD)

COMEDY HORROR It's a heady brew of gratuitous mayhem from the start of writer/director Sam Levinson's 21st-century twist on the Salem witch trials. DVD OF THE WEEK

Ralph Breaks the Internet ★★★★★ PG 1 April on DVD, Blu-ray and download

Video-game hero Wreck-It Ralph (John C Reilly) is back, and heading online in a quest to save the game of his friend Vanellope von Schweetz (Sarah Silverman) after it's unplugged. There's plenty to chuckle at during this bright, energetic sequel, which boasts satirical nods to the ways we lead our lives online. Meanwhile, the much-hyped scene featuring every single ever Disney princess is as clever as expected. By broadening their characters' horizons, returning director Rich Moore and new co-director Phil Johnston allow them to grow beyond normal sequel trajectory. Despite new elements, though, the film-makers never stray far from the bond our heroes share, and Ralph Breaks the Internet consistently finds new places to go with its rich and hilarious universe of characters. James Luxford

The genre we hate to love

But maybe it's time to celebrate "fact-ent", says David Butcher

LAST WEEK I went to a well-lubricated TV awards do (it's a tough job, this) and was sitting on the table of one of the winners – never a bad place to be on these occasions.

As we chewed on our lamb, the programme-makers told me how delighted they were to win the Best Entertainment award, not least because they had beaten stiff competition, including Michael McIntyre's Big Show and Strictly Come Dancing. So, you ask, what entertainment behemoth could pull off a feat like that?

Answer: a BBC2 series about middle-aged men with fishing rods. Mortimer and Whitehouse: Gone Fishing was absolutely a worthy winner and I bow to nobody in my admiration for how quietly brilliant that show is. But come on, the fact that it was competing with Strictly at all is clearly daft.

So what should it compete with? The trouble is, Gone Fishing belongs to a stealth genre, an orphan breed of programmes that gets forgotten. TV execs call it factual entertainment (or "fact-ent"). Most of us rarely give it a thought, despite the fact it includes some of our best-loved series. Stuff like The Repair Shop (back this week on Monday BBC1, I'm happy to say), The Great British Bake Off and all those pleasant celebby travelogues where Joanna Lumley or Martin Clunes explore sunny places and chat up the locals.

'This is TV designed to tickle our tummies as much as feed them'

It's everything from Top Gear to The Great British Sewing Bee; Inside the Factory to Gogglebox. In other words, it's huge. So huge, it's about time it had an awards category to itself. Instead, at the Bafta TV awards last year, we had the apples-and-pears absurdity of Old People's Home for Four-Year-Olds (a cast-iron piece of fact-ent) competing against Love Island – and, of course, losing.

Sometimes this stuff gets labelled "formatted popular factual" or "constructed factual". But mostly it's the genre that dare not speak its name, because there are so many names and they're all rubbish.

It doesn't help that, at its worst, this vein of programming can be, as we all know, pretty vacuous, the sort of lightweight shows that Channel 5 sometimes scatters across the schedules, programmes with names like Britain's Favourite Royal Biscuit or Police Dog Puppies Make You Laugh Out Loud.

WHEN ALAN PARTRIDGE was paying tribute after the death of John Baskell, the (fictional) presenter he replaced on the (spoon) BBC teatime show This Time, we saw a montage of John's previous shows, "a roll call of Britain's best-loved telly" that included Scotland's Strongest Man, Britain by Balloon and Britain's Holiest Hymn – titles that could fit so comfortably into any channel's fact-ent roster, it wouldn't surprise me if they've since been rushed into production.

So yes, it's an easy kind of programme to mock, but we should celebrate it now and then, too. Think of it as the spork of TV genres, a multi-function tool that can slice, spoon and spear chunks of celebrity and real life. There's often high nutritional content, some informative roughage that does the viewer good, but this is television designed to tickle our tummies as much as feed them.

As it happens, one of the giants of the category – Grand Designs – makes a return this week with a new twist (Thursday C4). The Big Painting Challenge also comes back, but now with celebs at the easels (Thursday BBC1). And of course, if you missed it the first time, repeats of Gone Fishing are running on Thursday on BBC2. They're worth catching, and officially better than Strictly Come Dancing, you know.

I LIKED IT WAY BACK WHEN

Do you remember that feeling when you used to be into some obscure, little-known band and then they became famous and you never quite forgave them? I feel like that – in a tragic way, admittedly – about Line of Duty. I can remember when it was a plucky little BBC2 show playing small venues around the North East with sticky floors. Now it's a stadium band doing world tours and everyone raves about it.

What's worse, Line of Duty is trailed on BBC1 as "from the makers of Bodyguard". No! Bodyguard was from the makers of Line of Duty, I think you'll find. Or, going back further, if you want to be really purist about it, from the guy – Jed Mercurio – who gave us the peerlessly dark medical drama Bodies on BBC3, which for my money still beats any of his recent albums. No, really, you should go back and listen to it on vinyl...

1 NEW EPISODES The OA Netflix

One of TV's most divisive dramas returns after a long hiatus: when the first series arrived in 2016, fans felt a deep connection with its supernatural gubbins about dreams, near-death experiences and interpretative dance. Series two sees the OA (Brit Marling) solving a mystery in a parallel universe... it's nonsense, but it's nonsense made with absolute conviction and strong production values.

A NEW TERM 5 On My Block Netflix

A fine antidote to white, heavily glossed teen sagas, this coming-of-age comedy drama set in a rough part of inner-city LA is brilliant at confronting the real dangers and hardships its kids face, without losing the bright hi-jinks of high-schoolers finding their way in the world. Following on from last year's shock finale, the second series settles down into a caper surrounding the discovery of a cache of dirty money. Available from 29 March

ANOTHER CHANCE 2 Bodyguard Netflix

In case you've just emerged from a year in a cave, or have been living with a remote Amazonian tribe... 2018's biggest drama has dropped off iPlayer but it's moved to Netflix. Keeley Hawes (right) is the authoritarian Home Secretary caught up in a conspiracy that grips from the first scene of the first episode and never lets go.

REMEMBER THIS? 3 Prisoners' Wives

Amazon Prime

Polly Walker, Pippa Haywood and Emma Rigby lead a strong female ensemble in a BBC1 drama, first shown in 2012, that's packed with plot but isn't nearly as soapy as the title suggests. The interlocking lives of women whose husbands are inside offer up finely observed humour and heartbreak.

I SPY... 4 Hanna Amazon Prime

A star-making performance from Esmé Creed-Miles (above left), the daughter of Samantha Morton, anchors this cool take on spy thrillers: she's an unstoppable fighting machine, but she's also a teenage girl trying to find out who she is, in more ways than one. Available from 29 March

MAXIMUM NESBITT 6 Murphy's Law Amazon Prime

Amazon hasn't picked up the rights to the first two series of this tough-maverick cop drama, which began on BBC1 in 2001, but that's fine: a vehicle for an extravagantly moustachioed James Nesbitt, it only really got going in series three. Nesbitt is on abrasive, menacing form as a detective who carries the memory of a horrific trauma with him. Allan Cubitt (The Fall) and Russell Lewis (Endeavour) are on the writing team.

LOST CLASSIC 7 Tutti Frutti iPlayer (BBC Scotland)

A repeat on the revamped BBC Scotland means this award-winning comedy drama, first shown in 1987 and often unavailable on any format since, is on iPlayer. Featuring turns that helped make the careers of Robbie Coltrane and Emma Thompson, its portrait of a fading rock band is darkly hilarious and finely attuned to the delusions of men who cling to dreams of stardom. Ep1 available until 1 April

WHAT'S NEW ON IPLAYER, NETFLIX AND BEYOND

THE FUTURE OF TV DRAMA?

8 Love, Death + Robots Netflix

David Fincher is the executive producer of a set of 16 short dramas, almost all of them entirely rendered in computer animation. The stunning visuals are the strongest part of a show that's hard to love, on account of its cold dystopian vibe and gratuitous nastiness, but which contains several diamonds. Try the hauntingly sparse space horror Helping Hand, or (a digitised) Orange Is the New Black star Samira Wiley (above) in war fable Lucky 13.

CATCH UP, QUICK

9 Barry NowTV/Sky Atlantic

Series two of this superb, surprising dramedy is here, but don't start there: the first series, in which co-creator Bill Hader plays a disaffected hitman who accidentally joins an acting workshop, is available for catch-up. One of the freshest US comedies in years, its opening episodes boldly present what seems to be an awkward premise, before gradually filling it in with scene-stealing supporting characters and unexpectedly deep emotions.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Welcome to The Great British Gardening Off!

Do you have a small garden but a big idea?" asks Monty Don, strolling along in his practical shirt, braces and oversized jacket like the amateur gardener's version of the fairy godmother. That is, in fact, the role he plays in Big Dreams Small Spaces, although any pumpkins featured in this show stubbornly remain as vegetables rather than princess carriages.

Big Dreams Small Spaces originally aired on BBC2, running for three series and attracting a small, dedicated following before coming to an abrupt halt a couple of years ago. But the show's gained a global fanbase since Netflix picked up the back catalogue.

In each episode, "Britain's favourite gardener" introduces us to two sets of "dreamers" with grand ambitions. Jan and John want to create a Portuguese garden paradise in a patch of sodden English clay! Alex in Blackpool wants to transform her teeny back yard into an enchanted fairy forest! Ross from Bristol is going to create a flourishing allotment with £100 and a shovel!

And why not? What these amateurs lack in know-how they make up for in enthusiasm, and while it takes more than a wave of the magic wand to make their dreams a reality, Monty is on hand to provide sage advice and gently guide them in the right direction.

It doesn't always go smoothly. One episode involves the unearthing of a live Second World War hand grenade and a speedy visit from a bomb disposal squad. But the amateurishness is all part of the charm. This is The Great British Bake Off of the gardening world, minus the tent and the competition. The "dreamers" are always dead proud of themselves by the time they pour out the prosecco and present their newly minted garden to Monty. When the music kicks in for the before-and-after shots, you'll feel surprisingly proud of them, too.

Sharing your streaming

Entire university campuses used to run on one Netflix account, but now companies are getting better at detecting shared logins. That goes for households too: why let you share a login, when they can charge families for the privilege?

Netflix doesn't have an explicit family plan, but you can stream to more than one screen by upgrading your account (two screens for £7.99, four for £9.99), and several users can run their own profiles with their own watchlists. The Spotify family plan (£14.99/month) covers up to six family members, each with their accounts and playlists.

Everyone using the account has to be at the same address (which would seem to cover roommates better than many modern families) and if you sign up now, you get a free Google Home Mini speaker that claims to be able to differentiate between voices. (NB at press time this offer was still running, but with the proviso "while supplies last".)

Meanwhile, Amazon offers a surprisingly traditional approach to families, allowing two adults to share Prime benefits like speedy deliveries and television shows, then dole out access to up to four teens and children. So, kids can only watch kid-friendly content, while teens will need all their purchases confirmed by a text from the parents. JONATHAN HOLMES

10 MEATY COMEDY Santa Clarita Diet Netflix

Timothy Olyphant and Drew Barrymore are back for a third run of the breezy knockabout comedy about two mild-mannered estate agents, one of whom (Barrymore) is a voracious, immortal cannibal. This year: if you could spend eternity with your bloodthirsty undead wife, would you? The more outrageous the mix of perky silliness, gore and mild satire gets, the funnier it is. Available from 29 March

HE SCRUBS UP WELL
Will (Jack Nolan) meets fellow new recruit Archie (Genesis Lynea)

PICK OF THE DAY Casualty 8.25pm BBC1

DRAMA Another week, another new arrival – this time, it's emergency locum Dr Will Noble (played by Red Rock actor Jack Nolan). He's unflappable, borderline glib and has a live-in-the-moment attitude, but underneath it all, I suspect he cares more for the patients than he'd like to admit. There are a couple of occasions when a full-time consultant's job gets mentioned in his presence and, while Will claims this wouldn't suit his lifestyle, I doubt they'd devote this much screen time to a here-today-gone-tomorrow character.

Someone who's definitely not keeping his cool is Charlie. That trademark grandfatherly concern has vanished. In its place: rag-losing rage. While this is all down to his concerns about Duffy's health, his staff just think he's having a Falling Down moment when he vents his spleen at Jade after she gives him some mild workplace cheek. "You are one of the most mediocre, lazy nurses that I've ever had the misfortune to work with," he snarls. In 33 years of Casualty, has Charlie ever been so barbed? DAVID BROWN

European Rugby Champions Cup

12 noon BT Sport 3, 12.15pm C4
SPORT Rugby union's premiere European competition reaches the quarter-finals stage this weekend. As things stand, Edinburgh v Munster (k/o 12.45pm) is scheduled to be live on both C4 and BT Sport 3. Edinburgh head coach Richard Cockerill has urged his side to take heart from Scotland's Six Nations comeback against England and challenge the two-time European champions. Saracens v Glasgow Warriors (k/o 3.15pm, BT Sport 3) features the only English club left in the competition; Saracens defeated the Warriors twice during the pool stages this season. Today's final fixture is Leinster v Ulster (k/o 5.45pm BT Sport 3). JAMES GILL

Catchpoint

6.50pm BBC1
GAME SHOW You'd have thought this show would have it all, seeing as it tests general knowledge, reflexes and agility. But, when it comes down to it, watching people trying to catch for 30 minutes is quite repetitive. I think the problem is that the balls come in two similar sizes. Surely the way to liven things up would be to introduce balls of different varieties? A cricket ball, perhaps? Thrown at speed? That way, the contestants could potentially be trying to work out, say, when Barack Obama became American president, but while enduring the pain of either a black eye or mild concussion. Too cruel? Perhaps it's a good job I'm not in charge of Saturday-night light entertainment. DAVID BROWN

The Voice UK

8.00pm ITV
ENTERTAINMENT After what feels like an eternity, The Voice UK's going live. It's taken 13 weeks to whittle the singers down, and now only nine remain. They've had to jump through endless vocal hoops to get this far, which makes it all the more galling that there is such mass culling across only a handful of live shows. After singing tonight, five – yes, five – acts will be given the boot, leaving four to go through to next week's final. Jimmy Balito wowed in the Knockouts and secured a place in tonight's show, yet failed to make it past the Blinds when he auditioned last year. It just goes to show that the coaches aren't spouting guff when they tell singers to come back – and never give up. FRANCES TAYLOR

Mission Ignition

8.30pm C4
DOCUMENTARY New series Two teams race to rebuild classic cars from scratch and the winners get to keep the car. A good, solid premise for a show designed to appeal to petrolheads, yes, but the big news here is that Howard Donald of Take That is one of the presenters. Donald can probably take his pick of media opportunities, which makes you wonder why he chose this. It wasn't because he can deliver lines like "Coming up in part two, find out if my team need to remove the engine and start again" with the sort of passion he brings to mid-paced love songs. But if the drama of a giant jigsaw puzzle appeals, you'll enjoy seeing a Porsche 944 and a Lotus Elan S2 reborn. DAVID BUTCHER

MRS BROWN'S FAMILY AFFAIR

Brendan O'Carroll has certainly kept it in the family with Mrs Brown's Boys and All Round to Mrs Brown's (9.10pm BBC1).

But it doesn't end there: Danny's wife Amanda Woods plays Betty Brown (making her Brendan's real-life and fictional daughter-in-law), and Fiona's husband Martin Delany stars as Mrs Brown's son Trevor.

"The fact that it's a family within a family, I think people do respond to that," O'Carroll previously noted. "We're working together so long that they see a chemistry and warmth there." FT

The Royal Family at War

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Money can't buy happiness – an adage writ large by the royal rucks and feuds reported down the decades, tales that are soapy, salacious and come served with a massive helping of schadenfreude.

Here we get a greatest hits rundown of the alleged stand-offs, from the stymieing of Princess Margaret's plan to marry Peter Townsend to Sarah Ferguson's butting of heads with Prince Philip. No previews were available, but you can expect biographer Penny Junor to recount the rumoured conflict between the Queen and the Duchess of Cornwall: "If the Queen could have opened up a large hole and put Camilla into it, it would have been perfect as far as she was concerned." DAVID BROWN

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.10pm BBC1

CHAT SHOW Poor Olly Murs. The singer and Voice UK coach can't have known what he was signing up for when he agreed to be a guest of Mrs Brown: one moment he's subjected to Agnes thrusting against him, the next he is goaded into performing impressions. It's little wonder he spends most of the episode with his head in his hands.

Also joining Mammy are Spandau Ballet's Martin Kemp and doyenne of the cruise Jane McDonald, along with I'm a Celebrity contestant Emily Atack and her mother, Kate Robbins, who dishes the dirt on her daughter. It's a raucous night once you slice through the superfluous material and jarring saccharine moments. FT

The Jonathan Ross Show

9.45pm ITV

CHAT SHOW If you're hoping that Vicky McClure and Adrian Dunbar will spill the beans about the eagerly anticipated fifth series of Line of Duty, we suspect that you're going to be disappointed.

While their characters, DS Kate Fleming and Superintendent Ted Hastings, are more used to doing the questioning in the drama's famously tense interview scenes, the actors are notoriously adept at avoiding giving away any spoilers. Somehow we doubt that Wossy will trick them into revealing the identity of H, or why the series trailer appears to show the AC-12 chief in a police cell. Also joining them for a chat on the sofa are Westlife, who have reunited after a six-year break. JANE RACKHAM

Miles Jupp playfully narrates a clip-driven history of British males and their love of pigeons, first shown in 2017. Once it was discovered that these birds had a phenomenal sense of direction and could be trained to return home from miles away, this power was immediately put to great use: offering men a chance to spend hours away from their wives.

HAPPY CLAPPER
Who will impress Geri this week?

All Together Now

7.20pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT At one point tonight, chief judge Geri Horner turns to her neighbour in the 100-strong judging panel and starts chatting about how she picked plums from a tree in her garden and made them into a crumble. It's a valuable insight into the lifestyle of a Spice Girl and typical of the kind of tangent this show loves to fly off at.

Tangents are all the more welcome this week because – given the show's usual ability to unearth people who, at the very least, can pick a note and stick to it – the singers are the weakest batch we've seen. Also, the wisdom-of-crowds principle, which suggests 100 people should make more reliable judgments than four, goes out the window as promising auditions fall by the wayside and dodgy ones go down a storm. Along the way, one of the judges suggests a hopeful's performance sounds "a bit like classical yodelling". It's meant as a compliment. DAVID BUTCHER

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

This Oscar-winning drama (review, p46) didn't have to rely solely on a scriptwriter to imagine the encounters between speech therapist Lionel Logue and King George VI. Director Tom Hooper was fortunate to be given exclusive access to Logue's diaries just nine weeks before production began. "They had never been read by any historian, any biographer, any member of the royal family," Hooper told Vanity Fair. A hasty rewrite worked in the "treasure trove" of material that highlighted the king's natural dry wit, and the film went on to become a word-perfect hit. ANDREW COLLINS

Dumbo ★★★★★ 2.10pm Sky Disney

Although it was directed by Ben Sharpsteen, every frame of this Disney tale about the little elephant with huge ears was approved by Uncle Walt himself. The film won an Oscar for its score, with songs such as When I See an Elephant Fly and Baby of Mine lingering long in the memory. This may be one of the studio's shortest films, but it's also among the best, with the parade of pink elephants one of many highlights. Tim Burton's remake is in cinemas this weekend, and the cast talks to RT on page 36. DAVID PARKINSON

Spall plays 'em all

Stanley: a Man of Variety ★★★★★ iTunes

Timothy Spall stars in this quirkily unsettling comedy as a man living in a psychiatric facility who examines his troubled past with the help of the stars with whom he is obsessed. In a bravura turn, Spall channels everyone from George Formby to Margaret Rutherford. DAVID PARKINSON

STOPPING THE ROT
DS Fleming (Vicky McClure), DS Arnott (Martin Compston), and Superintendent Hastings (Adrian Dunbar) are back

PICK OF THE DAY Line of Duty 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Welcome back AC-12, we've been expecting you. For too long, frankly. We've waited two long years since the last series ended, leaving us in a troubling limbo as a wisp of suspicion swirled around one of our heroes, the AC-12 boss himself, Ted Hastings (Adrian Dunbar).

For now, I'll be clinging to my faith in Ted as long as I can, if only to enjoy Ted-isms like "Now listen, I didn't float up the lagoon on a bubble". And in the meantime, this opener rams us back into the action as a police convoy transporting seized heroin is ambushed by – you guessed it – men in black balaclavas. From there we get more of the pure, ruthless storytelling that has an uncomfortable way of grabbing our entrails and twisting... then twisting again. There's a sense of people who are very evil indeed, including a grim-faced gangster played by Stephen Graham.

But of course, there's the prosaic business of police work, too, with its talk of AFOs and OCGs and UCOs and Reg 15s and "Document nine in your folders". It's good to have them back. DAVID BUTCHER

John and Lisa's Weekend Kitchen

11.30am ITV

FOOD New series John Torode and Lisa Faulkner clearly don't agree with that saying about too many cooks. The recently engaged couple are sharing kitchen space – as well as their favourite recipes – in a series that promises "the ultimate in food inspiration". No previews, but the press release says their "natural talent and chemistry together will ensure a feast for the eyes and the taste buds". So no grimaces over the grill-pan, arguments over the Aga or tears over the spilt milk, then.

On their menu today is a spring roast chicken, a fruity curry, a simple victoria sponge, cheat's raspberry jam, easy cheese scones and a soufflé. Sounds tasty. JANE RACKHAM

Antiques Roadshow

7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL On the first of its visits to Crathes Castle in Aberdeenshire (shown in January this year), the Roadshow experts were shown several treasures with "a distinctly Scottish flavour" such as a collection of Harry Potter books and some exquisitely ornate silver from Iona.

There's a whiff of Scottish heritage during their second visit with an item belonging to Scottish singer and music-hall comedian Harry Lauder: his distinctive, crooked walking stick, or cromach.

Keeping the showbiz theme going, somebody brings in a hat once given to Hollywood actor Ronald Reagan. And proving that size isn't always everything, a tiny bowl gets a whopping valuation. JR

Akram Khan's Giselle

7.00pm BBC4

ARTS There's not a tutu or a flowery headdress to be seen in this intriguingly reinterpreted version of the romantic classic performed by the English National Ballet. Although the story – of love, betrayal and redemption – is still recognisable, the peasants are now migrant workers dispossessed of their jobs by the closure of a clothes factory.

Tamara Rojo takes the lead while the sets and costumes have been designed by Tim Yip (an Oscar winner for Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon), but it's Akram Khan's choreography, much influenced by the classical Indian dance form Kathak, that has caused such a stir, with reviewers calling it "epic", "a masterpiece" and "an electrifying triumph". JR

Blue Planet Live

8.00pm BBC1

NATURE The series ends with a look to the future as Steve Backshall (never a man to shy away from danger) goes on a dive with scientists to understand more about hammerhead sharks. Chris Packham, meanwhile, appears to be channelling Mr Spock in Star Trek IV when he uses a cutting-edge listening device to uncover the secret success of humpback whales.

Liz Bonnin, though, gets arguably the most stunning sight of the night when she witnesses an underwater dawn chorus in Australia, complete with fluorescent corals that light up the reef. We're also promised some "never-before-seen discoveries" brought up from the deep.

MY TV BREAK LISA FAULKNER

Lisa Faulkner was a model before getting her big break as an actress. "I was spotted by a director on the cover of a magazine and he asked to meet me for a film called The Lover," she recalls. "When you think about it, it is quite mad!"

Faulkner, who's presenting John and Lisa's Weekend Kitchen (11.30am ITV) with her fiancé John Torode, says appearing in the 1992 film was "one of the most incredible experiences of my life. It made my heart beat like never before and I knew what I wanted to do." Her next big role was in Dangerfield alongside Amanda Redman, who "was and still is a real mentor who I went on to do a Teaching Speech and Drama degree with."

On how the industry has changed in 20 years, the Celebrity MasterChef winner says, "It's harder now, for one – the days are longer, lunches shorter and perhaps it's not as fun. Having said that, people behave a lot better now!" FRANCES TAYLOR

Secrets of Egypt's Valley of the Kings

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Archaeology is presented as a bit of a lark in this entertaining documentary: a chance to live on a swish boat on the Nile, whoop it up as you pull treasures out of the ground and play dress-up – check out Dr Colleen Darnell's proud collection of vintage linens.

Yet there's no denying the painstaking, dusty work, a lifetime's vocation for those striving to unearth the magnificent monuments of pharaoh queen Hatshepsut, and its contemporary resonance.

One Egyptologist displays evidence that female genital mutilation probably wasn't an ancient tradition, as today's practitioners claim.

DAVID CRAWFORD

Tasmania: Weird and Wonderful

9.00pm (N Ireland: 10pm) BBC2

NATURE The "weird and wonderful" tag of the title is absolutely right. Of course, we're immediately shown the eccentric, designed-by-committee platypus and those vicious jaws-on-legs scavengers, Tasmanian devils (who make the most alarming noises). Then there are prickly echidnas, albino wallabies and jack jumper ants (poisonous but with a flair for architecture) – all have evolved as the result of Tasmania's isolation.

Perhaps strangest of all is that our first sight of Tasmania (which, remember, is only 150 miles south of Australia) is of a land covered in a blanket of snow. As narrator David Attenborough says, "Tasmania is full of surprises." JR

6 Music Festival Highlights Show

10.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Even the most casual 6 Music listeners must be aware by now that this year's festival comes from Liverpool. It's a shame though, that the city isn't more heavily represented in the line-up – presumably Echo and the Bunnymen are busy back-combing their hair that weekend. The Coral and Julian Cope (who surely qualifies as an honorary scouser) are the most notable local names, although I'm not sure how much of them we'll be seeing on this highlights show.

At least there's a Liverpoolian host: Craig Charles joins Lauren Laverne to introduce the Good the Bad and the Queen, Anna Calvi and Hot Chip, whose headline set is live on the red button from 9.55pm. GARY ROSE

Series two of this terrific sketch show arrives as a box set, with all four episodes available now. Its quickfire satires and running characters have a high hit rate, whether they're making a topical point (a slave objects to the slogan "Slave Lives Matter" on the grounds that it might alienate innocent slave owners) or just a vehicle for silliness, such as the Midsomer Murders spoof featuring a Shaft-like cop.

FILM OF THE DAY

Look Back in Anger

12 midnight BBC2

Searing drama based on the play by John Osborne, starring Richard Burton and Claire Bloom. See page 40

TROUBLED TIMES
Can the Queen (Jenna Coleman) escape her domestic worries?

Victoria

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Once again, the Queen is an island of calm and good sense while around her the blustering men get things wrong. Palmerston (Laurence Fox), Wellington (Peter Bowles) and Russell (John Sessions) want to meet the threat of insurrection from the Chartists by putting troops on the streets, but Victoria refuses, musing at one point about her people, "I want them to love me. Otherwise, what is the point?"

Talking of love, or something similar, the plot veers into Mills & Boon mode as Palmerston rescues Sophie, Duchess of Monmouth, from an angry mob: "I like nothing more than ministering to a duchess in distress," he smarms, sadly lacking a moustache to twirl.

Meanwhile, the story's best double act, royal children Vicky and Bertie, are pleased to have a new little sister, but if there's one thing Bertie knows, it's that he definitely doesn't want to be king. Time for a chat from Mama... DAVID BUTCHER

Keeping mum? No way

Mother's Day ★★ 6.45pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Director Garry Marshall's film is an airy celebration of all things maternal (see review, p41). Not that Anna Jarvis would have approved. She originally got Mother's Day going in the US back in 1905 to commemorate her dear departed mum, but soon grew to hate its commercialisation. In fact, she was so vocal in her protests against cardmakers, florists, confectioners and the like that, at a sale of flowers in support of the day by the American War Mothers, she got herself arrested for disturbing the peace. STEVE MORRISSEY

A tribute to Lee

McQueen ★★★★★ Netflix

This documentary pays visually resplendent testament to the life and astonishing haute couture career of maverick fashion designer Lee Alexander McQueen. Interviews with his family, co-workers, lovers and friends (doomed socialite Isabella Blow makes a massive impact) capture the joys and sorrows of the East Ender-turned-Givenchy guru and Bond Street atelier who took his own life in 2010. This dynamic portrait of tortured genius will move and engage even those without an interest in the fashion world. ALAN JONES

Russell Crowe gives a powerfully charismatic performance here as the man charged by God to mount a rescue mission before floods consume the Earth. Darren Aronofsky's blockbuster version of the Old Testament tale makes for a fine spectacle, even if it is prone to bouts of existential navel-gazing. TERRY STAUNTON

DREAM JOB
Jay Blades helps mend hearts as well as treasures

PICK OF THE DAY The Repair Shop 4.30pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY The nicest thing about this show (and there's a lot that's very likeable) is that there's never any mention of an item's monetary value, only its sentimental worth. Nobody looks at someone's much-loved but battered portable radio and whistles, "Wow, that's worth a bob or two."

Instead, as we see today, Jay Blades and his team of highly skilled craftspeople listen to customers like Albert, who tearfully describes how said radio reminds him of his beloved wife, but it suddenly stopped working two years after she died. They then gently take it from him and lovingly restore it. When they return it, all pristine and in good working order, you'll be in pieces – just as Albert is.

There are almost as many tears when Big Ted gets successfully stuffed for the first time, after spending 15 years shoved into a bin bag, and a skeleton clock with an interesting provenance that hasn't worked for 20 years starts to tick again. JANE RACKHAM

Curiosity

2.15pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE New series This is one for those of us who like to shout out valuations during Antiques Roadshow. An ebullient Paul Martin tests two teams' knowledge of vintage and collectable items.

The pairs of contestants must answer questions (such as where Steiff toys originated), price and date items, or choose the odd one out in a group of memorabilia in order to pick the antique items they hope will be valuable enough to win them the whole competition.

The participants are a little too excitable for this to be a relaxing watch, but it's very entertaining and will definitely stimulate your (antiquated) brain cells. Baxter the basset hound is a bit of a star, too. JR

Mary Berry's Quick Cooking

8.30pm BBC2

FOOD Mary Berry has had it easy this series, playing the drums with Rick Astley at Bestival and swanning around Marrakesh. So, by way of a contrast, it's now time for her to do some hard graft below decks on HMS Defender.

It may not exactly be The Cruel Sea, but Mary is cooking pizza against the clock for a crew of 240. And, at one point, someone does shout, "Let's get a move on!" But, as ever, she keeps her cool and styles it out in some lovely nautical knitwear.

Once she escapes the galley, she gets to sit in the captain's chair ("it's frightfully grand") and charms the sailors in the mess by signing books for their mums. DAVID BROWN

Devon and Cornwall

9.00pm More4

DOCUMENTARY New series

Having seen what it's like to live in the Yorkshire Dales and Lakes, we're now pointed towards the south west. It's another charming series, as local people let us peek into their lives. Although less factual than the hugely popular Countryfile, it'll probably appeal to the same audience. We start in picturesque Clovelly, where harbour master/dustman Stephen enthuses about cliffside living. He – like the other residents featured – is quite a character, and they all share a passion for their home and their traditional ways. "People say you have no ambition," says Lynn, who keeps the open-air Minack Theatre in Porthcurno in good repair. "Actually no, this is just contentment." JR

The Case Against Adnan Syed

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DOCUMENTARY New series If you're one of the millions of people who listened to Serial, then you'll be familiar with the name Adnan Syed. Podcaster Sarah Koenig ended up bringing the story of his conviction for the murder of ex-girlfriend Hae Min Lee to a massive audience.

Aware that she has to cover different ground, director Amy Berg tries to resurrect victim Lee with narrated extracts from her diary, all accompanied by striking animated sequences. Unfortunately, the whole thing misses Koenig, who, thanks to her mellifluous vocal delivery, became as big a character in this case as the still-incarcerated Syed. Continues on Tuesday. DAVID BROWN

No need to ask what Ben Mitchell's been up to in his year away from EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) as he's obviously been recovering from yet another facelift. But despite looking completely different and no longer even wearing glasses, he is immediately recognised by his dad Phil. If you're keeping track, then former Waterloo Road star Max Bowden is the sixth screen Ben (if you count the baby and toddler Bens), so he's fast catching up with Coronation Street's Chris Gascoyne, who's the seventh actor to play Peter Barlow, a character I suspect must be part Time Lord. Returning along with Ben will be his daughter Lexi and her mum Lola, the latter of whom is thankfully still being portrayed by Danielle Harold. She was terrific during her original 2011–15 stint on the show (remember when she had to do that live birth scene in McKlunky's during the Olympic torch run episode?) and I never really understood why Lola had to be written out in the first place. DAVID BROWN

This Time with Alan Partridge

9.30pm BBC1

COMEDY What would be the worst development for this show? I'd say removing Alan's chillingly plausible co-host Jennie (Susannah Fielding) from the plot would be near the top of that list, but that's what happens tonight. Jennie falls out with Alan over a comment he made that was picked up by a rogue microphone – and walks off the show, leaving him to muddle through an item on women's fashion.

That part works – particularly Alan's attempts to critique skirts ("It's like a stripey bell with her legs as the hammer..."), but the rest of the final episode feels a bit unmoored. Still, we must hope a doom-laden ending doesn't mean this Partridge vehicle goes off the road. DAVID BUTCHER

The Trial of Ratko Mladic

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY "Is it justice?" a reporter asks a victim after the verdict in the war crimes trial of the former Bosnian Serb military commander Ratko Mladic. That question will trouble you for some time when you've watched this look at the trial process and the original, horrific crimes in 1990s Bosnia-Herzegovina.

For all the mountains of evidence (592 witnesses, 10,000 exhibits, warehouses full of bodies) and exhaustive legal procedures, Mladic maintained his innocence and is still revered by many. Reconciliation is a long way off. As the international criminal justice system struggles for credibility, you wonder if in future it will manage to tackle such historic crimes at all. DAVID BUTCHER

Fleabag

10.35pm BBC1

COMEDY OF THE WEEK It's hard to tell whether Fleabag's biggest mistake is sleeping with the priest who is meant to be marrying her dad and godmother, or sleeping with the sleazy lawyer who is representing her against her brother-in law.

Yet fancying the priest, who is brilliantly played by Andrew Scott, isn't just a self-destructive move for Fleabag. She actually has feelings for him, and while he's resolute on keeping his feelings focused on God, he's having a difficult time staying away from her. This is one of the best episodes so far, as Godmother unleashes her fury on the family, and Hugh Dennis – the broken bank manager from series one – turns up at Fleabag's café, full of the warmth she needs. KASIA DELGADO

BBC political editor Laura Kuenssberg charts the stormy Brexit story

The Brexit Storm: Laura Kuenssberg's Inside Story

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

When, sometime in the next millennia, historians review the turbulent Brexodus period, this documentary will be an invaluable bluffer's guide. A whistle-stop romp up and down the Brexit cul-de-sac, it views the unfolding crisis through the perspective of the BBC's political editor Laura Kuenssberg.

Starting at Chequers in July 2018, Kuenssberg attempts to stay ahead of – or at least keep pace with – this fast-moving story. There's a fair bit of running and many fascinating insights, such as an intimate tête-a-tête with Boris Johnson plus a revealing glimpse of the pressure of political interviewing. As she prepares to sit down with Prime Minister May, she says, "She is going to hate it, I am not going to enjoy it – it's going to be painful all round." Prophetic. TERRY PAYNE

Snowden ★★★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW
The making of this biopic of whistleblower Edward Snowden (review, p43) was like something out of a spy novel itself. Director Oliver Stone met his subject in an undisclosed location in Moscow in 2014, and from there, revealed producer Moritz Borman, "it was all handwritten notes and long walks in the park." In order to keep the screenplay away from prying eyes, computers were "air-gapped" (ie never connected to the internet) and drafts were mailed in multiple packages to different addresses. Stone described the production as a "horrible experience". ANDREW COLLINS

New to Prime this week

The House with a Clock in Its Walls ★★★ Amazon Prime Goremeister Eli Roth turns child-friendly with this lively if lightweight adaptation of the fantasy novel by John Bellairs. Orphaned Lewis Barnavelt (Owen Vaccaro) moves into the Victorian mansion of his eccentric uncle (Jack Black) only to discover he's a warlock and is best friends with a wayward witch (Cate Blanchett). Roth crafts the monster moments with enchanting aplomb, with the sight of Black's head on a baby's body an unforgettably creepy sight. ALAN JONES

Only fools and heroes

Sky is making a laughing stock of itself today, as Sky April Fools takes over Sky Comedy, with Dumb and Dumber, Zoolander and Bean (pictured) among the dafter propositions. There's more pop-up action over on Sky Greats, which becomes Sky Superhero until 6 May to celebrate the release in cinemas of Shazam!, Hellboy and Avengers: Endgame over the coming weeks. JAMIE HEALY

MURDER MOST FOUL
Twenty years after Jill Dando's murder, the case remains unsolved

PICK OF THE DAY The Murder of Jill Dando 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Two decades on, the sight of BBC 1's Six O'Clock News team covering the killing of one of its presenters remains one of TV's most horribly surreal moments. "It's rare that a reporter can say that a murder victim was the kind of woman who had no enemies. I can say that about Jill Dando," Kate Adie is seen commenting. The trouble is that someone in possession of a gun did wish Dando harm and, 20 years later, their identity remains unknown.

With no previews available, the findings of this new reappraisal are also currently a mystery. But we're promised interviews with Hamish Campbell, the senior investigating officer, as well as Dando's brother Nigel and her former colleagues Martyn Lewis and Jennie Bond. At the time of her untimely death, Dando was, of course, a staple part of the schedules, not only as a newsreader, but also for her work on Crimewatch and Holiday. And one of the big questions asked here is whether that celebrity status hinders the chances of the case ever being solved. DAVID BROWN

The Martin Lewis Money Show Live: Brexit Special

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY At a time of uncertainty, as the nation looks for good sense and leadership – who do we turn to? Well, we could do worse than money saving expert Martin Lewis. Before the EU referendum, a poll found that 71 percent of people would trust what Lewis said when making up their minds over Europe – ahead of any other public figure.

That may be relevant tonight as a special live programme looks at the impact that Brexit could have on our wallets. Lewis travels to the Midlands with co-host Angellica Bell to take questions from the audience and viewers at home. DAVID BUTCHER

The Great Celebrity Bake Off for Stand Up to Cancer

8.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT The recipient of a Hollywood handshake this week is totally unaware of its significance (and probably oblivious to the other bakers' envy). While this person is remarkably confident ("a domestic goddess" the others say), it's not giving much away to reveal Krishnan Guru-Murthy is more of a domestic disaster. Even with Sandi Toksvig's help, his drizzle cake ends up in crumbs all over the worktop. His biscuit selfie-sculpture's not the worst though. Amid the hijinks we hear some truly distressing personal stories reminding us what Stand Up to Cancer is all about. JANE RACKHAM

Blue Planet II

8.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY If you just can't wait until Friday to see the latest David Attenborough-voiced offering, Our Planet, popping up on Netflix, there's a chance to get your fix of top-notch wildlife footage courtesy of this timely rerun.

The first edition features stunning images of playful dolphins surfing gigantic waves for the sheer fun of it, mobula rays dining on glowing plankton in the deep, the giant trevally fish hoovering up birds with its massive mouth, and the extraordinary sight of bottlenose dolphins apparently fleeing false killer whales before everyone stops for a chat and a play. They are, it seems, old friends. ALISON GRAHAM

Portrait Artist of the Year

8.00pm Sky Arts

ART There's a deeper truth to this series than competitive painting suggests, about how people view the world. As one sitter says at the big reveal, "It's the same face thinking three different things." Differences abound in approach, technique and anxieties. "I'm most worried about ears," says one artist. "They tend to look like prawns when I do them." Perhaps that's why, as a viewer, you can end up arguing with the judges.

The painters have every reason to feel unnerved, facing Killing Eve star Jodie Comer ("I can give you the crazy eye," she laughs) and stylist Daniel Lismore, who lives up to his billing as "England's most eccentric dresser". MARK BRAXTON

I'm not taken in by Evan's aura of calm on Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm). He looks like the type of person who'd shake your hand while secretly planning to violently grind your face into the dirt. So, if I were Chloe (Amy Lennox, pictured with Jack Ryder, who plays Evan), I'd be very suspicious of him suddenly turning up the hospital with his whole "I'll stay out of your life from now on" routine, even if he has got his poorly sister Phoebe in tow. I get the impression Evan would do asks. I'm guessing the truthful answer should have been, "Because the writers hadn't thought of all this back when it looked like I was dying, sweetheart." DAVID BROWN anything to get Chloe back – so pity anyone who he considers to be standing in his way.

Elsewhere, Dom is upset with his mum Carole after she suddenly drops life-changing bombshell news on him. "Even when you thought you were going to die, you were prepared to go to your grave having never mentioned this. Why?" he

Inside Britain's Storms

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Erik, Freya and Gareth: innocent enough sounding names, except they were attached to three massive storms that have caused the UK a huge amount of disruption and damage this year.

There was no preview available of this film that documents "the worst that Mother Nature can throw at us" but you can guarantee there'll be jaw-dropping footage of roofs being ripped off by gale force winds, flooded homes and overturned cars half-buried in snow.

We Brits are obsessed with the weather anyway, but for some reason watching the devastation that can be caused by extreme weather from the cosy comfort of our sofa really gives us a thrill. JR

Derry Girls

9.15pm C4

SITCOM There's a new girl at school called Mae and, thrillingly for the teenagers, she's not white. The gang is enthralled by this "exoticism" and set about making her their new friend. "How class would it be to have a Chinese friend?" says Clare, dreamily. Disappointingly for them, she speaks not a word of Cantonese and is actually from Donegal, which Sister Michael points out wryly is a very different culture from Derry too.

When you least expect it, Derry Girls throws you with a moving, momentous scene. This week the TV is broken and Ma Mary is furious that she's missed London's Burning. What she's actually missed is that John Major has issued the Downing Street Declaration in the hope of peace. KASIA DELGADO

Home

9.45pm C4

SITCOM When it gets the wind in its comedy sails, Home has a feeling to it that's not quite like any other sitcom. There's a distinctive vibe that is nicely summed up in a speech Katie (the excellent Rebekah Staton) gives near the end of tonight's episode as a dinner party goes deliciously wrong.

I won't spoil it because it's a peach, and slightly veers against the show's usual liberal-remainder perspective. The set-up for this is that Sami, the Syrian refugee living in Katie's house, doesn't want to join his wife and son in Germany; so their hosts, a magnificently sleek German couple, decide to drop into Dorking on a visit to the UK. Katie does her best to humour the Germans, but in the end, it's all too much. DAVID BUTCHER

ALL SEWN UP

It's a tense final for presenter Joe Lycett and judges Esme Young and Patrick Grant

The Great British Sewing Bee

9.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT There's a palpable air of hysteria as the three finalists tackle their last challenges. One person doesn't read the instructions properly before cutting out the pattern and has to start the piece all over again – impressively there are no tears or tantrums.

Patrick Grant tells one of them he'd wear their "perfect" double-breasted waistcoat "in a heartbeat", but the transformation task, involving net curtains, makes them all hyperventilate.

Key to success, for Esme Young at least, is attaching a huge bow to whatever the outfit is. She absolutely loves a floppy bow, that woman. But what's really striking (as well as the beautiful made-to-measure evening gowns) is that even though they're in competition with each other, all three amateurs still help their rivals. Frankly, they're all winners. JR

RT Almost 20 years after Jill Dando, one of Britain's most popular television presenters, was shot and killed on the doorstep of her home in broad daylight, the crime remains unsolved. This documentary revisits the case with access to never-before-seen material from the Metropolitan Police's murder inquiry and hears from Hamish Campbell, the senior investigating officer on the case, and close friends, colleagues and family including her brother Nigel, Martyn Lewis, Jennie Bond and Tony Hall, director of BBC News at the time. Alec Guinness was born on this day in 1914 and this comedy classic finds him playing all eight members of the D'Ascoyne family. For the ballooning scene, Guinness wouldn't go higher than 15ft up in the air after the producers refused to stump up the £50,000 insurance the star demanded. So instead it is a famous Belgian balloonist we see dressed as Lady Agatha, being whisked skywards. What we don't see is the balloonist speeding out of sight. He wound up 50 miles away, ditched in the Thames. STEVE MORRISSEY

Bang on target

John Wick: Chapter 2 ★★★★★ Amazon Prime

Keanu Reeves's vengeful assassin returns in this gruesome and graceful action sequel, which is new to Prime this week. The amazing fight sequences are again the jewel in the film's crown, but between so many flying bullets there are some well-written verbal exchanges. Reeves is still fascinating to watch as the reticent antihero, magnificently cool even when dispatching bad guys with a pencil, while Ian McShane is on top form as his superior. Episode three, Parabellum, arrives in cinemas in May. JAMES LUXFORD

9.00pm TCM

Clint Eastwood plays a quizzical, slightly bemused cowboy in this enjoyable caper, saving nun Shirley MacLaine from a fate worse than death in the Mexican desert. The two leads are perfectly paired, with MacLaine turning in a great comic performance as her ill-fitting habit begins to slip. SUE HEAL

ONE GOOD DEED
Nick Knowles and the team help a former DIY SOS volunteer

PICK OF THE DAY DIY SOS: the Big Build 9.00pm BBC1

PROPERTY After undergoing multiple surgeries on his back over several years, in 2018 roofer Darren, 46, developed complications and lost the use of his legs. Having to adapt to a wheelchair is challenging enough for most families, but to compound matters one of Darren's sons, 17-year-old Oliver, is severely disabled too.

Then, almost inconceivably, a few days after Darren returned home from three months of rehab, things got even worse. Darren's wife Sarah suddenly died, leaving Darren and his three boys in emotional trauma – and living in a house that was totally unsuitable for their needs. Darren couldn't get upstairs, but he also struggled to provide care for Ollie. And of course all three of his sons were trying to deal with what happened to their parents.

Nick Knowles and hundreds of volunteers transform the home – despite heavy rain in the last 24 hours. But what's especially poignant is hearing that Darren helped on other DIY SOS projects before his paralysis. JANE RACKHAM

The Suprvet: Noel Fitzpatrick

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY When a dog's owner is an orthopedic surgeon, you'd assume they'd be pretty pragmatic about their pet's joint disorder. But although Graham talks very knowledgeably to Noel about Bertie's osteochondritis dissecans (a condition that also occurs in humans), he surprises the vet by getting emotional about his boisterous young fox red labrador. What Graham finds particularly hard to cope with is Bertie's mournful post-op expression and whimpers.

Also in Noel's surgery is Sophie, a springer spaniel who's already had several procedures on her slipping kneecap, and rescue cat Jade, who has a deformed back leg. JR

Auction: George Michael Special

8.30pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Two years after his death, George Michael's collection of contemporary artworks – including pieces by Tracey Emin and Damien Hirst – sold at auction for more than £11 million. He bought much of his art between 2004 and 2009, including many works by the Young British Art movement; Christie's attribute the fact that every lot sold to Michael's "eye for contemporary art" and "the depth of feeling" the 53-year-old singer continues to generate.

If you didn't happen to have an odd £900,000 lying about (which is what Hirst's The Incomplete Truth sold for on the night), you can enjoy the auction vicariously here – and get a YBA education into the bargain. JR

MotherFatherSon

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA It's flashback time! As the eponymous Kathryn, Max and Caden meet for a clear-the-air summit, we spin back to the 1960s to learn about Max's relationship with his father. Played by Ciaran Hinds, the latter is a domineering businessman obsessed with becoming a man. So he makes the young Max fire one of his factory workers and on his 17th birthday lays on a sexual treat, and so on.

He's a bully, basically, just as Max is, and the "man hands on misery to man" theme is laid on thick. "I hated my father, he was a monster. But he was right," says Max to justify his tough-love approach (ie spying on his loved ones) but it feels as if a reckoning for this warped family is coming soon. DAVID BUTCHER

The Bay

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA For a family liaison officer – ie a police sergeant who has to communicate in delicate situations – Lisa (Morven Christie) is hopeless with her own kids. She tries to have a quiet chat over tea with her teenage son and daughter tonight, but makes a right hash of it.

Of course, she has the handicap of not knowing that between them they've started a mini-crime wave around Morecambe: daughter Abbie is ferrying drugs around town and son Rob is shoplifting. What with Lisa's own, er, oversights in dealing with the parents of the murder victim, at this rate the whole family could end up being collared by stolid DI Manning (Daniel Ryan). They'd be bang to rights. DAVID BUTCHER

Carla in Coronation Street (7.30, 8.30pm ITV) has it tough, especially when you compare her with previous factory bosses. The worst it got for Mike Baldwin was when his staff went on strike after he refused to buy Hilda Ogden a new brush. But Carla (Alison King, right) considers her working week a success if she doesn't burn to death in a fire or run someone over. And tonight she hits a new low when she's arrested on suspicion of gross negligence manslaughter following the recent death on the premises. It's no wonder she's often seen swigging red wine despite being a self-confessed alcoholic.

To cheer fans up, there's the prospect of Gemma and Brian cheating on a radio phone-in quiz. ITV's Director of Television Kevin Lygo recently said that Corrie was the broadcaster's flagship sitcom and this kind of B-plot gives you an idea of what he was talking about. Perhaps some viewers even prefer the comedy to the current factory melodrama? DAVID BROWN

Border Country: When Ireland Was Divided

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY The troubled history of the Irish border is laid bare in this evocative mix of archive footage and personal reminiscences. An American documentary strives for poetry, describing the border as "like a scar across the face of a beautiful woman", but it's the interviewees who paint the better picture, including Paddy Gillespie, who, at 102, is older than the border itself.

There's a tragicomic air as we hear jovial stories of smuggling wedding dresses and livestock scams, before attention turns to the bitter sectarian violence. And while the Good Friday Agreement brought hope, there are pointed pleas for no return to the hard border of the past. DAVID CRAWFORD

Billions

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA The first three seasons of this New York saga were driven by one giant feud. Prosecutor Chuck (Paul Giamatti) was determined to bring down rampaging hedge fund boss Axe (Damian Lewis), whatever it took. Through any number of reversals, ploys and lovingly crafted insults, they fought each other to a standstill. Or rather, to the point where, in a plot-flip at the end of the last series, they became allies. Now Chuck hopes to become attorney general while Axe's cross-hairs are trained on the gender-non-binary trading genius who betrayed him. Tonight he develops a new plan (he's had several) to derail Taylor's business, while Chuck faces a fresh threat to his career plans. DAVID BUTCHER

Veep

10.05pm Sky Atlantic

SITCOM For Veep's (very, very few) UK fans, this is a bittersweet day. It's the start of the final season for the sitcom that took all the political chaos and swearing of The Thick of It, flew it to Washington DC and won a hatful of Emmys. This seventh run had to be delayed following Julia Louis-Dreyfus's cancer diagnosis in September 2017. With her cancer now in remission she returns to playing the role for which she won outstanding lead actress in a comedy series for an incredible six years running.

Given the nature of real-life DC politics, it's hard for the parody to bite as it once did, but here's hoping the farce can hit new lows, as Selina Meyer prepares for another tilt at the presidency. DAVID BUTCHER

COOL HEAD
Emergency medicine consultant
Dr Richard Hall

Critical Condition

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY This incredible documentary, filmed in an NHS emergency unit in Stoke, is simultaneously arduous and compelling: you don't know whether to close your eyes during the horrible bits, or rewind to watch the amazing scenes of sharp-end medical care a second time.

The series concludes tonight, with more extraordinary cases: one is a young man who's taken a machete to the neck, leaving a wound that provokes the same grimace from the generally unflappable trauma team leader that you'll be making throughout the programme.

You're rewarded for hanging in there, though, by the immense coolness of a doctor who's a dab hand at testing intracranial pressure – by manually drilling into the skull – and by footage of a miraculous procedure performed on a conscious patient who's having a heart attack. JACK SEALE

What a day for Doris

Send Me No Flowers ★★★★★

11.00am Film4 FREEVIEW

Que será, será! Whatever will be, will be... Doris Day's 97th birthday. The darling of romantic comedies, Day enjoyed a movie career that lasted a neat 20 years, from her 1948 debut Romance on the High Seas to her 1968 swansong With Six You Get Eggroll. She had a natural funny bone, as flexed in today's Send Me No Flowers, her third film with Rock Hudson, and my favourite That Touch of Mink (Sky Select). Since quitting showbiz, she devotes her time to charitable work with the Doris Day Animal Foundation. ANDREW COLLINS

Exclusive to Netflix

The Dirt ★★★★★ Netflix

Rock band Mötley Crüe were not exactly known for their subtlety, and this excess-all-areas biopic of LA's kings of spandex tells their debauched story in fittingly over-the-top 1980s style. Machine Gun Kelly (credited here as Colson Baker) has the most fun as Tommy Lee, playing the drummer with a puppyish enthusiasm, and his "day in the life" scene rivals Spinal Tap in terms of bonehead brilliance. Crude and cartoonish but plenty of fun when dialling up the mayhem to 11, The Dirt is a grubby guilty pleasure. JAMIE HEALY

The Ciambra ★★★★★

11.30pm Sky Premiere

Young star Pio Amato is wonderful in this drama about a teenager from a Romani family in a small Italian community who's out to prove himself on the streets in his brother's absence. Filmed in documentary style, this snapshot of a lesser-known corner of the world offers a convincing look at a journey into crime. JAMES LUXFORD

COLOURFUL BUNCH

PICK OF THE DAY Celebrity Painting Challenge 8.00pm (Wales: Friday 8.30pm BBC2) BBC1

ART New series Be warned. This programme includes footage of a naked Keith Allen. Pixellation comes to his (and our) rescue but there's still quite a lot of Allen on display, as he acts as model in the life-drawing class that kicks off the celebrity art contest.

Capturing Allen's curves are some well-cast celebs including Jane Seymour, Laurence Llewelyn-Bowen, Josie d'Arby and Phil Tufnell. "Knees are difficult, en't they?" frets Phil, while Laurence, who is more used to painting from his own imagination, groans, "I'd forgotten how hard this is."

The results are a mixed bag, but when the artists turn to a subject they know and love – themselves – the self-portraits they paint are fascinating. Phil does a kind of Picasso pastiche, while Laurence makes himself into a dashing "21st-century musketeer". Mariella Frostrup hosts a show that – so far – has a fun and energy that the "civilian" version never quite managed.

DAVID BUTCHER

Jack the Ripper: the Case Reopened

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY It's not hard to see why Emilia Fox was picked to present this exploration of the Whitechapel murders, as it plays out like a cold-case documentary version of Silent Witness. At all times, Fox is flanked by mostly male criminologists (such as Professor David Wilson) and she also stages a crime-scene reconstruction.

Of course, there are autopsies to attend. "But how is this possible?" you may ask. After all, these killings date back to 1888. Well, just wait until you see the Anatomage, the world's first virtual dissection table. Imagine Minority Report meets Quincy, M.E. and you get some idea as to what this amazing tech can do. DAVID BROWN

Pose

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA The show strikes a different pose tonight as it dials the camp way down and presents a sombre Christmas for the House of Evangelista. The gay and trans characters have all suffered cruel yules in the past and 1987 isn't much kinder, but at least now in their alternative family under "Mother" Blanca they support each other.

Incidental figures come to the fore as Damon's dance tutor Helena and the balls' braying MC Pray Tell (Billy Porter, who was up for a Golden Globe for this part) visit friends with Aids in a lamentably maintained ward at the Roosevelt Hospital. And Elektra drops her hissing viper shtick as she checks in for sexual re-assignment surgery. PATRICK MULKERN

Code Blue: Murder

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY "People are very trusting. Unfortunately," says one officer investigating the killing of Katherine Smith. The mother-of-one from Cardiff didn't know that the man she'd let into her life had previously appeared in court for 142 offences, some involving violence against women. But Anthony Lowe's impact on Smith's family will now be felt for ever: he ended up stabbing her 33 times. Here, we see how the South Wales Police Specialist Crime Unit caught and convicted Lowe, with ITV given first-rate access to the case.

One complaint: the distracting mood-setting camerawork isn't so much fly-on-the-wall as fly on the shoe, steering wheel and half-eaten sandwich. DAVID BROWN

Brooklyn Nine-Nine

9.00pm E4

SITCOM Useless slob Hitchcock and Scully finally take centre stage in this entertaining episode, which flashes back to their 1980s heyday as New York's buffest, toughest and most radical detectives. Watching their young, handsome versions take down bad guys Lethal Weapon-style is a treat (as is the fact that somehow they found actors resembling Joel McKinnon Miller and Dirk Blocker).

Their antics may hide a darker side in the present, where Jake is convinced that missing evidence implicates them in corruption. Boyle, though, is less sure – but when he's being taken in by an obvious internet scam artist, why should Jake listen to his judgement anyway?

HUW FULLERTON

I have mixed feelings about the Paddy and Bear Wolf paternity saga in Emmerdale (7.00, 8.00pm ITV). That recent trip to Ireland felt very much like one of those "made for DVD" specials the soaps used to put out in the 1990s. Do you remember them? The Dingles go off on holiday for a wacky adventure – in stores this Christmas (and in the bargain bin by New Year). In fact, Emmerdale has had a very 90s air all round lately, what with Mandy making a cameo and Kim resurfacing with her "I'm going to go ruin your life" business-blah threats. That said, I found the scenes between Paddy (Dominic Brunt) and Bear (Joshua Richards, left) unexpectedly touching. Even though it's too daft for words that Paddy's dad has now turned out to be some kind of Poundland Giant Haystacks. So I'm looking forward to seeing the past-his-prime grappler turning up again this evening, when he tears through Gracie's memorial garden on his motorbike, leaving Paddy aghast. DAVID BROWN

David Jason: Planes, Trains and Automobiles

9.00pm Gold

DOCUMENTARY "Pretty impressive!" is David Jason's go-to response for most of the machines he sees on this leg of his journey down the west coast of America. A breathtaking helicopter flight over Mount St Helen, the adrenalin rush of drag racing (admittedly from the passenger seat), a vintage car rally and a tentative go at driving a classic monster truck – he finds them all awesome.

Interestingly, when Jason's discussing potential "handles" – the name truck drivers use to refer to each other over the radio – with one driver, we learn that his nickname during the filming for A Touch of Frost was "La-di" short for la-di-dah, which, he says, is rhyming slang for star. JR

Dead Pixels

9.30pm E4

SITCOM Tonight Meg (Alexa Davies) and her gaming gang are sorely tested by the shock news that Vince Vaughn has been cast as the lead in the film version of their beloved video game, Kingdom Scrolls. It's about the worst news imaginable and writer Jon Brown has a lot of fun at their expense, particularly the way they blithely ignore real-life ups and downs for something so obviously ephemeral.

But there's more to this show than just laughing at geeks. The methods deployed in their anti-Vince campaign are also slightly troubling, suggesting that the appalling violence on screen can have its parallels in the real flesh-and-blood world.

DRAMA New series If you enjoy shows like Billions and Succession, which combine business with melodrama – high finance plus low morals, basically – then this is the Euro-drama for you. The German-Luxembourgian production starts with a banking crisis in Frankfurt. Cashpoints are running out of cash, rioting has broken out and the government is appealing for calm. A young bond whizz called Jana is central to the events unfolding, but we don't know how...

Then we jump back eight weeks to a turning point in her career, as she escapes from an obnoxious boss and joins a barnstorming new one who yells, "Be hungry! Be aggressive!" at his staff. But she may be a pawn in a bigger game. DAVID BUTCHER

DIFFICULT PLOT

Kevin McCloud surveys tensions on old Ministry of Defence land

Grand Designs: The Street

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY New series This is self-build on a grand scale. In a ground-breaking scheme, hundreds of plots of former MOD land in Oxfordshire have been bought by ambitious (foolhardy?) people wishing to build their own homes. Despite being past retirement age, Lynn and her neighbours Terry and Olwen take on adjoining plots.

Kevin McCloud's not that surprised to see tensions set in almost before the foundations are down because while Terry's proficient at DIY, friend Lynn isn't and requires his help. A lot of help. There are tears, expletives, fallings-out, structural disasters and health problems caused by all the physical work.

Both houses get finished – and while different designs, they're both interesting architecturally – but you wonder how long it'll take to rebuild their friendship. JANE RACKHAM

A little charmer of a documentary, following Hasidic Jews as, priced out of their north London homes, they contemplate moving their community to Canvey Island, Essex. But it's full of flag-waving Brexiteers! Surely an influx of Orthodox Jews won't be welcomed? Stereotypes are gently dismantled as the locals and the newcomers reveal their attitude to change.

She went of her own accord

Jamaica Inn ★★ 6.55pm Movies4Men FREEVIEW
One day in 1930, Daphne du Maurier and a friend went riding on Bodmin Moor and became hopelessly lost in thick fog. In last-ditch despair, they got off their horses, hoping their steeds might guide them to safety. They did, and soon du Maurier was snug in Jamaica Inn, being entertained by the locals with tales of smuggling. These stories gave her the ideas for the bestseller that inspired the Hitchcock film. Guests can stay in the room where du Maurier slept from £130 a night, including full English breakfast. STEVE MORRISSEY

How they won the war

Enigma ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW
This romantic thriller focuses on the quiet, bookish pluck of our own codebreakers at Bletchley Park. Dougray Scott plays the fragile but brilliant Tom Jericho, who is drawn into a race against time to crack the latest German cipher. He also suspects that the girl with whom he has become infatuated (Saffron Burrows) is a spy. This well-acted tale of wartime intrigue has Kate Winslet looking suitably dowdy in a supporting role, while Jeremy Northam steals the show as a pompous secret serviceman. ANDREW COLLINS

STAR TREK

PICK OF THE DAY Pilgrimage: the Road to Rome 9.00pm (Wales: 9.30pm; not N Ireland) BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This is the series that sends eight celebrities on a journey to find what Neil Morrissey on the last trip called "walking enlightenment". It's a useful phrase that suggests what, all being well, an eclectic bunch of famous folk hope for as they trek on foot along a historic pilgrim route – in this case, across the Alps.

The strength of the format is that those taking part are all interested in a journey of self-discovery but are coming at it from different points.

Greg Rutherford is a former Jehovah's Witness; Lesley Joseph grew up in an observant Jewish family; Mehreen Baig is a Muslim; Les Dennis believes "in something, I don't know what"; Brendan Cole is firmly atheist; and they all very much put their faith in slightly-too-loud celebrity bonhomie.

As the series goes on, I'm sure we'll get used to Cole's habit of ending sentences with "Baby!" and Joseph's need to overshare. Meanwhile, there's glorious Alpine scenery and some grand St Bernard dogs. DAVID BUTCHER

Women's International Football

7.00pm BBC4

England v Canada After their triumph in the US-based SheBelieves Cup, England's women are on the road again, though this time they're staying on home turf: they're playing a string of friendlies across the country as part of their World Cup run-up. Tonight they're at Manchester City's Academy Stadium to take on Canada (kick-off 7.15pm), their first test. England coach Phil Neville made eight changes to his starting 11 for the final match of the SheBelieves tournament, so he's not afraid to mix things up; expect more of the same over the coming weeks, as he searches for that winning formula ahead of the big one this summer. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Unreported World

7.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The foreign affairs strand returns for a new series of sharp, short-form reports. There are no frills with this show, just raw reportage that gets at the darker underside of news stories. The first film comes from Brazil, where the election of the country's unpredictable populist president, Jair Bolsonaro, has prompted alarm in the international community. But what of his own population?

Reporter Seyi Rhodes visits Sao Paulo – which holds the world record for the largest ever gay pride parade – as the locals prepare for Carnival. But under Bolsonaro, Rhodes discovers that Brazil is becoming one of the most dangerous places in the world to be LGBT. DAVID BUTCHER

Jamie's Quick and Easy Food

8.00pm C4

FOOD It's only a few weeks since Jamie Oliver closed the doors on his pier-end caff, but now he's back in the kitchen making proper fast food. It's a clever idea to use only five ingredients (although it does depend on whether your store cupboard is stuffed with "essentials" such as polenta and 00 flour). And Jamie's bish-bash enthusiasm never fails to inspire an "I could do that" feeling in the most reluctant cook.

He kicks off with a gloriously spicy and sticky harissa chicken traybake, a ridiculously simple meringue pud that can be put together in moments and an "easy-peasy" dish of peas, chilli and mint.

Joe Lycett's Got Your Back

8.30pm C4

CONSUMER New series Before winning a new legion of fans as the host of Sewing Bee, Joe Lycett was best known for his pedantic comedy, firing off pernicky emails to big corporations and creatively wasting the time of email scammers. This series, pitched as a Watchdog for millennials, sees Lycett joined by a celebrity panellist (this week it's Kathy Burke on top form) and comedian Mark Silcox as he takes on genuine consumer issues.

One woman who lost £8,000 at the hands of a fraudster seeks his help, which manifests in daft antics like Lycett impersonating RBS's boss on Twitter. He gets results as well as raising a smile. FRANCES TAYLOR

It's taken a while, but EastEnders (8.30pm BBC1) has finally turned recent returnee Ruby (Louisa Lytton, right) into a proper character again. It's like the writers suddenly realised, "Oh yeah, she's gangster Johnny Allen's daughter – that could give her an edge. And didn't she once have a big grievance with Phil? We should definitely re-explore that..." So as Ruby heads to court and learns that the verdict at her trial may be coming sooner than she thought, we as viewers now thankfully feel properly invested in what happens to her. Back on the Square, there's the answer to a long-standing question: what has happened to Ted Murray? We, of course, know that actor Christopher Timothy been pootling around the country with Peter Davison for Channel 4's Great British Car Journeys. But he's now parked that 1936 Morgan 4/4 and is back in Walford. But will Bernadette (Clair Norris) summon up the courage to tell Ted about what went on in his flat while he was away? DAVID BROWN

Have I Got News for You

9.00pm BBC1

COMEDY This should be interesting. I can't think that any of the previous 56 series of this show launched with this much grist to their satirical mill. Who knows where the Westminster turmoil will have reached by the time they record it, but let's assume Brexit won't have been put to bed in a calm and orderly fashion, in which case a few lacerating gags from Ian Hislop and Paul Merton could be just the therapy we need.

The guest host tonight is David Dimbleby, letting his presenting hair down for his first BBC role since leaving Question Time. Reporter Stacey Dooley is a guest panellist while comedian Henning Wehn brings a valuable German perspective.

Deutschland 86

9.00pm More4

DRAMA I know there's talk of Idris Elba playing the next Bond, but if that falls through, the franchise could do a lot worse than hire Jonas Nay. The East German agent he plays here, Martin, delivers an excellent Bond-style punch-up-in-a-dinner-jacket scene tonight. He also disposes of a pistol by slipping it into a champagne ice bucket – a move 007 himself would be proud of.

There's real tension as western spy agencies get wind of the planned Libyan terror attack – thanks to Martin's legwork in the desert. As he and Brigitte take their affair to the next level, there's also real emotion, cranked up by devastating use of Ladysmith Black Mambazo on the soundtrack. DAVID BUTCHER

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm (N Ireland: 11.05pm) BBC1

CHAT A pair of proper Hollywood actors are gracing Graham's red sofa for the first show of the series: Sally Field and Bill Pullman. They're starring in an Old Vic production of Arthur Miller's blistering drama All My Sons (which is also being broadcast live to numerous cinemas in May) and will doubtless chat about the experience of working together again on stage.

However, on previous GNS outings Field has been famously candid about her relationship with Burt Reynolds, her views on Chris Pine's on-screen nudity and forgettable films she made with Michael Caine, so it's quite likely there'll be some memorable and revealing exchanges. JR

MAN OF THE WORLD

David Attenborough narrates a powerful new perspective

Our Planet Whole series available from today Netflix

NATURE New series Say what you like about Netflix, but they don't do things by halves. This exquisite nature series is very much the equal of something the BBC's Natural History Unit might produce – but with a difference. Here, there's no hesitation about hitting us hard from the start with the threat facing nature: as we take in gorgeous shots of whales, polar bears and tigers, David Attenborough tells us starkly, "In the last 50 years, wildlife populations have on average declined by 60 per cent."

Having Attenborough's voice delivering this kind of message gives it real power, as he traces the long chains of causation that connect, say, desert sands with feeding dolphins. The beauty of the filming is unbelievable – and there's room for comedy, too, in the extraordinary mating dance of the red-capped manakin bird. It's a magnificent piece of TV. We're used to saying of series like Blue Planet that "only the BBC" could do them. Well, not any more. DAVID BUTCHER

Presented by Reshmin Chowdhury, with analysis from former England defender Alex Scott. See page 112. (S) (HD)

Featuring new interviews with Mick Jagger and Keith Richards, as well as sidemen for Prince, John Lennon and Beyoncé, the film uncovers the qualities required to be a good sideman: loyalty, humility and the ability to learn an entire set list in days.

Caring for criminals

Hotel Artemis ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere
An underworld hospital for criminals becomes the flashpoint for the settling of scores in this zesty thriller. As Los Angeles burns during the biggest riot in its history, Jodie Foster's straight-talking nurse flits between two brothers shot after a botched heist, a loudmouth arms dealer, a femme fatale and a shady kingpin. Writer and first-time director Drew Pearce juggles the protagonists' stories with a deft touch and a script full of killer lines, aided by an ensemble cast including Sofia Boutella and Jeff Goldblum. TERRY STAUNTON

Stage fright or flight

Birdman ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW
The midlife crisis of a fading Hollywood star fuels this Oscar-winning satire, available until 15 April on iPlayer. Michael Keaton (one of the stars of Dumbo, see p36) plays a former superhero actor who is about to debut his first play on Broadway. But as woes pile on in the lead-up to opening night, he begins to hear the persuasive voice of his one-time alter ego. Director Alejandro González Iñárritu delivers an excellent drama about a man on the edge, with Keaton outstanding in the lead. DAMON WISE

It was 25 years ago

Cobain: Montage of Heck ★★★★★ Netflix
On this day in 1994, Nirvana singer and reluctant figurehead for a generation Kurt Cobain took his own life, aged 27. This film draws upon Cobain's journals, home movies and recordings to tell his story, with contributions from his family and friends. Nick Broomfield's more provocative 1997 film Kurt & Courtney is also available on Netflix. JAMIE HEALY

Ripe for comedy

There are few topics David Sedaris won't mine for humour – so what subject is causing him angst?

Meet David Sedaris

Thursday 6.30pm Radio 4

DAVID SEDARIS IS KNOWN for his drily witty, heavily autobiographical reflections on his life, his family and the world at large in books with wonderfully surreal titles such as Let's Talk Diabetes with Owls and Dress Your Family in Corduroy and Denim. His books have been translated into 25 languages and have sold more than ten million copies.

The American humorist is equally well known for his talks and radio shows, and this week's seventh series of Meet David Sedaris on Radio 4 is hotly anticipated. Only Sedaris himself is angsty about it.

What's troubling him is whether to include a potentially controversial story inspired by Ralph Northam, the white Governor of Virginia, and the discovery of historical pictures from his school yearbook of two men, one with his face painted black and another in a Ku Klux Klan hood.

On the face of it, Sedaris's approach to the story seems typical – a sideways take on an uncomfortable subject, using the Northam story to reflect on how sensitivities and tastes change over time. And, in a manner typical of the style that has made him so popular, Sedaris speaks from the heart, focusing on the controversy with a personal illustration. "I thought for people my age, while we're all decrying the blackface pictures of the governor and saying how terrible it is, in the back of minds we're thinking, 'What pictures of me are out there?'"

"There are pictures of my sister dressed as a witch for Halloween... Are people going to say,

'Every time my dad told me I was a loser, I was like: I'll show you'

'How nice of you to steal the identity of women who were tortured and burned for their beliefs. Did you get a lot of candy?' I used to dress as a hobo for parties. Would this now be seen as appropriating the life of a person experiencing homelessness? In 100 years' time, African American will be thought of as a racist word, Native American, too. Everything will have moved on... except those pictures."

He tells me that his take on the so-called blackface subject has already been turned down by two prestige magazines, including The New Yorker, which he notes employs a "sensitivity reader" to flag supposedly problematic content in advance. At the age of 62 he seems genuinely worried he could be falling foul of the zeitgeist.

"Everyone's editing now with fear of Twitter. Everyone's terrified that someone's going to take something you wrote out of context and form a Twitter mob and go after you. Most people reach a point where you think you're so out of touch. Is that where I'm at? Or did no one want to print it because I'm the last person who should [write about it]." And then he remembers that he at least has something that "generation woke" can't take away. "Thank God I'm gay," he chortles.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama: Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead Saturday 2.30pm Radio 4

This was the play that made the reputation of Tom Stoppard (below). It was first staged at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in 1966, but its transfer to London's Old Vic was what really got audiences and critics excited. This is the fourth time it's been adapted for radio: twice for Radio 3, once for the World Service and now for Radio 4, concluding on Sunday at 3pm.

I have never seen the stage play, nor have I read the text but, without wishing to sound like a heathen, I really struggled with this and am not convinced, unlike the BBC Radio Drama commissioners, that it can ever work as well in audio form. It requires full-on attention or one is baffled, lost and confused within minutes.

Part of this is down to Stoppard's deliberate use of "metatheatre", where the cast are actors performing in their own "reality" and the characters they're playing are secondary.

So why is this my Pick of the Week? Radio should be challenging, not safe. Then there are the mind-blowing displays of grand thespians at work from Mathew Baynton, Andrew Buchan and Toby Jones.

But for me the greatest joy is the music. Listen out for a very unusual version of Je t'aime... moi non plus, specially arranged by members of the Society of Strange and Ancient Instruments.

YOUNGER DAYS
David Sedaris (in dark top) with his family of him hitch-hiking around America, working as an apple picker on farms, painting New York apartments, his experiences with hard drugs and also his time working as a Christmas elf at Macy's department store.

He still travels but is now more settled. After a sojourn in rural France he and Hugh have been settled in West Sussex since 2013. Here Sedaris embarks on huge walks every day (thanks to his recent obsession with his Fitbit activity tracker), while continuing to obsessively retrieve litter dropped by strangers, another favourite subject in his writing.

RACONTEUR
Sedaris tours the world with his highly amusing readings

HIS FORAYS BACK to his native US are more frequent now that Lou is 96 and in failing health (Sharon died in 1991). David and Lou's battles over the years are a big part of Sedaris's writing, like the story of how young David kept deliberately blocking the family toilet simply to annoy his father. The Republican-supporting older man often told his son that he was a "big fat zero" who'd amount to nothing. In less generous, hands Sedaris could have written miserably about the impact of this. Did it ever wound him?

"In some deep place maybe it did... But there are certain people you meet in life who are good people, but they are not good characters. My dad is a good character. He works well on paper and is a good sport. I wouldn't have traded my father for any other father. I needed someone to tell me I was a loser or a zero and wouldn't amount to anything. Every time he said it, I was like, 'I'll show you.' But my big fear is that my father will die and Donald Trump will go down the next day and I will never get to gloat."

Sedaris himself also has slight medical worries – he requires a "procedure" that may curtail his usual routine of bringing out a new book followed by around six months of global promotional readings (which includes lots of shopping, another passion of his). He riffs hilariously about a recent "trans rectal ultrasound probe". "As you get older they find more holes," he guffaws. But he seems to show no sign of slowing down.

"I don't want to ever be done moving. I love everything about moving," he says. And he's also half-thinking about writing something bigger than his usual crisp vignettes of life.

"I'd love to write a novel called The Sensitivity Reader," he says, finally laughing about his anxieties with his current story. "But how? I'd love if you could do it in a week. I seem to have a 12-page attention span..." But what 12 pages of brilliance they are. BEN DOWELL

Sedaris's sexuality will not be news to his millions of fans who have followed his stories recounting his early days growing up in the small southern town of Raleigh, North Carolina with his warm but heavy-drinking mum Sharon and grouchy dad, Lou. His work has allowed millions to feel as if they know each member of his large and colourful Greek American family, as well as following his many attempts at finding romantic love before he found happiness with Hugh Hamrick, his partner of many years.

Sedaris's many stories and recently published diaries are full of honest and fearlessly told tales

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Jill hosts the Archer clan at Brookfield on Mother's Day with a newly released Freddie as the guest of honour. But with Lily creating tension and Ben asking awkward questions, will the day go without a hitch? I somehow doubt it... As for Freddie himself – well, he's struggling to settle back into village life, but is determined to make the most of his freedom. His actions, however, will have immediate consequences for another family member.

Meanwhile, over at Bridge Farm, sparks fly over the electric fences and Helen is feeling the pressure, while Johnny finds himself up to his neck in it when the cows start calving. Will he ultimately be able to prove his worth as a farmer? DAVID BROWN

SOUND BITES

Ungrateful prat

I nearly missed a night to remember

HAVE YOU EVER sat through an awards show on TV? The whole thing? Start to finish, without ever looking away, checking your phone, going to the loo or praying for a power cut? Of course you haven't. You're a sane person. No one has ever sat through an entire awards show unless they were forced to be at the venue. I hate them.

A month ago, the very best and brightest people in Hollywood – the entertainment capital of the world – put all their might into bringing in the 91st Academy Awards show at under three hours. Hosts were dropped, songs cancelled, categories reshuffled. Surely creatives who specialise in knocking out stupefying blockbusters in 88 minutes could honour the outstanding and broadcast the departed stars montage in under three hours?

No. Three hours and 23 minutes passed between the opening and closing titles. Better luck next year. Maybe if they introduce a category at the Emmys for Shortest Awards Show we could make some progress.

This was on my mind when an invitation arrived at Global's Global HQ for the Global 'Experience told me that I'd have more fun washing the cat'

Awards. LBC is part of Global – a brand that includes Classic FM, Capital, Heart, Gold, Smooth, outdoor advertisers, digital advertisers and, for all I know, ice-cream vans. Every year Global listeners vote for their favourites in categories ranging from best song, rising star, best classical artist and best Strawberry Mivvi.

I had an exclusive VIP invitation to a prestigious event, yet all my experience of awards shows told me that I'd have more fun washing the cat. I asked my boss if there was any way I could politely decline the kind invitation without seeming like... well, like an ungrateful prat, turning up his overprivileged nose at a free dinner and a chance to celebrate the company that had taken me in.

He told me to stop behaving like an ungrateful prat etc. And he revealed that Steve Allen, the host of LBC's Sunday 5am and weekday 4am shows, was to be surprised at the event with a special award to mark his 40 years at the station. Sold. I wouldn't miss that even for a dirty cat.

I arrived at the venue in west London to find the place abuzz with youthful noisy excitement. What on earth was I doing here? How long would the event last? How bored would I be?

I'M HERE TO report that, once again, Eddie was wrong. Whisper it: I really enjoyed the whole thing. The hosts were fun and never shillyshallied. The musical acts were wildly entertaining, despite the sad fact that, being 53, I hadn't really heard of many of them. Glancing across our table I could tell Shelagh Fogarty was equally out of her musical comfort zone. But now Dua Lipa, Blossoms and Little Mix are on my Spotify playlist.

When the hosts announced it was time for the last award, I was genuinely sad. This had never happened before. And I hadn't been drinking.

Steve Allen was as surprised as we could have hoped for. You'd be hard pushed to find a presenter more loved by listeners and admired by fellow professionals. He was physically shaking when it dawned on him what was happening, but he pulled it together to make a speech worthy of a host who's never lost for words.

Now all we need is for Global to do the Oscars.

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

Important lessons from history

There are three things I like about Misha Glenny's Radio 4 series The Invention of..., in which he explains how the nation states that we now regard as hard and fast came to be. The first is the way he manages to use contemporary reference points without seeming desperate for our approval. An example of this in his recent series about Britain (still available on BBC Sounds) came when he pointed out that, to a Welshman in the 14th century, Caernarfon Castle must have looked like the Death Star. The second is that he and his various overlapping voices aren't afraid to conclude that occasionally our ancestors did things that were raving mad. The third is that his series reminds us that the history we were taught at school often left us with the wrong impression because that must have seemed preferable to our teachers to leaving no impression at all.

Reality by-pass

You realise to what extent we have made up the gaps in our knowledge with historical films whenever you drop in on Your Call with Nicky Campbell (weekdays 9am Radio 5 Live).

For an hour, Campbell (right) is forced to maintain the pretence that the BBC honestly wants to know what we, the listeners, think about Brexit – when in truth he's already heard everything we had to say two years ago.

He has to indulge people like the bloke the other day who argued we could survive a no-deal Brexit because we could hunt rabbits; people, in some cases, whose sense of Britishness seems to owe more to their exposure to the archive film and TV channel Talking Pictures than to their own direct experience. You can guarantee that at some stage in the conversation a bloke will refer to our glorious island past, in the course of which he will let slip his belief that Hitler was stopped not by 20 million Russian dead but by John Mills and Vera Lynn.

Whatever you do, don't ask me

Britain seems to have been so vox popped in the past couple of years that I'm starting to feel slighted that I haven't once been stopped in the street and asked for my opinion.

However, that doesn't mean I'm unprepared. If this were ever to happen, I have decided to say, "My feelings are complicated." This has the virtue of being true. It would also ensure that the interviewer would immediately move on in search of somebody who thinks it's all perfectly simple. If you listen to Misha Glenny, you realise that has never been the case.

Toby Stephens (above) returns as James Bond once more, in this dramatisation that first aired on Radio 4 in May 2014. He headlines an impressive cast that includes former Bond girl Joanna Lumley, who appeared in the 1969 film version of this Ian Fleming novel. Meanwhile, esteemed actor Alfred Molina imparts to Blofeld every square inch of audio evil that he deserves. Director Martin Jarvis narrates sections in the guise of Fleming to provide clarity, and he's not been afraid to take on action scenes – Bond's downhill ski escape is deftly handled. And do listen out for the knowing reference to Ursula Andress.

Fifty More Things That Made the Modern Economy

9.50pm BBC World Service
Tim Harford's initial run of 50 Things That Made the Modern Economy, which launched in 2016, became both a worldwide podcast hit and a book. Harford – a Financial Times columnist who also hosts Radio 4's More or Less – is a smart, engaging host, and the ideas that crop up in Fifty Things, and now Fifty More Things, invite us to think about the world in a way we probably never have. The contraceptive pill, the horse collar and the spreadsheet were just three of the stories in series one. Series two kicks off with another surprise: the industrialisation of the honey bee. "It's a sign of just how far the modern market economy has penetrated that it now reaches deep into the heart of the beehive," Harford says. SIMON O'HAGAN

6 Music Festival with Mark Radcliffe and Stuart Maconie

12 noon BBC 6 Music
As this year's festival from Liverpool reaches its final day, one highlight will be extracts from Mark Radcliffe's chat with Julian Cope, erstwhile singer/songwriter with the city's very own post-punk band the Teardrop Explodes, but now renowned as the author of an acclaimed guide to Neolithic culture and sites. For oldies like me, there's the thrill of hearing Gang of Four again at 5pm, when Shaun Keaveny takes over. And if modern music is more to your taste, don't miss headline acts Hot Chip and Charlotte Gainsbourg, in Tom Robinson's show at 8pm. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

A Job for the Boys

11.00am Radio 4

In 2017, an internal (but widely-leaked) memo from a Google software engineer led to him being fired. Why? Despite his protests that he was asking for an open discussion on gender bias in the company, the memo declared that the reason behind the low number of female employees was down to "biological differences". Google's women, understandably, took umbrage and walked out. But as journalist Mary Ann Sieghart explores in this revelatory documentary, there is something going wrong in Silicon Valley and, indeed, our own country. In the early days of the computer industry, 80 per cent of its employees were female. This figure has now dropped to just 20 per cent. Sieghart meets some of the campaigners trying to regulate gender bias, starting with small changes in classrooms. JANE ANDERSON

Who can forget the guest appearance by a certain "Andrew Preview" on Morecambe and Wise's 1971 Christmas show, with the bemused conductor forced to endure Eric performing Grieg's Piano Concerto with "all the right notes, but not necessarily in the right order"? But André Previn, who died in February, was of course far more than a foil to Britain's funniest comedy duo: a versatile composer, pianist and conductor, equally adept in the classical, film and jazz fields. To mark what would have been his 90th birthday this Saturday, Classic FM showcases his finest recordings all week. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Free Thinking

10.00pm Radio 3

The theme of this year's Free Thinking festival, from Sage Gateshead in Tyne and Wear, is emotion. And an emotive, if not necessarily emotional, debate is guaranteed this evening as journalist and presenter Anne McElvoy (above) invites a distinguished panel of guests to discuss anxiety and the young mind. The number of teenage suicides in England and Wales increased by 67 per cent between 2010–17. Can this devastating rise be laid so simply at the feet of peer pressure and social media, the panel asks, or is there a more sinister, less obvious layer of anxiety-inducing cultural influences at work? Among the guests is Ceyda Uzun, a 20-year-old reporter, and I suspect her contributions may be the most enlightening of all... JANE ANDERSON

The Documentary: Not #MeToo – I'm French

BBC World Service

Perhaps it's because of conflicts long in the past but, when it comes to ways of thinking, we tend to regard the French as somewhat contrary. This became apparent again when the #MeToo movement gained support around the world in 2017. In France, however, there was a backlash, with Catherine Deneuve among many high-profile women who signed a letter complaining of Anglo-American "puritanism". (She subsequently apologised). French journalist Helene Daouphars asks what's happening in France. Is there real resistance to change or is it simply that something's been lost in translation? DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Last year Lee Ridley (aka Lost Voice Guy, above) won Britain's Got Talent and so made a massive impact. But, as R4 comedy fans will know, he was already an audio star. As his semi-autobiographical sitcom returns for a second series (co-written by Ridley and Katherine Jakeways), I hope that his BGT win will ensure a larger audience. He plays Matt, a man with cerebral palsy who shares a flat with a woman he is in love with (unrequited thus far). In this opening episode he introduces himself as a bloke who suffers from "a terrible affliction – I'm a Geordie". The jokes come thick and fast, without a smidgeon of self-pity. On meeting his PIP assessor he declares: "I am as disabled as you can get... I am Mr Disabled." This may not sound funny in my dry prose but, believe me, it is not to be missed. JANE ANDERSON

Cities around the world are already bursting at the seams with, well, us. By 2050 it's predicted they'll be home to 6.4 billion. But are they in a strong position to respond to our most pressing challenges? Fi Glover returns with two new panellists – Dr Ellie Cosgrave and Professor Greg Clark – to analyse global cities' most progressive policies. San Francisco's mandatory recycling scheme and sustainable public transport come under the spotlight today. If you think Frisco is at the green cutting edge, consider the town of Kamikatsu in Japan, which aims to be 100 per cent zero-waste by next year. Could this become a reality? CHRIS GARDNER

Can Hip-Hop Save Ballet?

11.30am Radio 4
Even in this day and age there's tacit acceptance that the corps de ballet is the same height, the same shape and the same colour – white. There isn't a black female principal dancer in any British ballet company. The right man to address this is Eric Underwood, former soloist with the Royal Ballet, who describes himself as "more MC Hammer than Baryshnikov". Among those he meets are Michaela DePrince (above), soloist at the Dutch National Ballet; Cassa Pancho, who has headed the British company Ballet Black since 2001; and Homer Hans Bryant, inventor of a hip-hop/ballet hybrid – "Hipler" – in which entrechats and pliés are performed to James Brown. I'd pay to see that. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Jill McGivering's report from the Nepalese capital Kathmandu begins in a startling manner: police round up street boys, some as young as six, and take them to a prison-like shelter for protection. Western men, attracted by Nepal's open-border policy, are accused of sexually abusing underage boys and filming them for the dark web. McGivering gained access not only to police and victims but to two men jailed for sex offences. Both claim they were set up. "It's all about money," says one. You're likely to be both disturbed and conflicted. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Out of Office

11.00am Radio 4

Is it a sign of Radio 4's push for younger listeners that this quasi-philosophical exploration of the changing world of work is heralded by Dizzee Rascal's 2005 single Off 2 Work? Perhaps, but don't let that put you off; there's enough depth to interest listeners of all ages. Presenter Ruth Barnes may be talking about huge societal shifts – the number of self-employed workers in the UK has increased by over a third since 2001, while there are shocking statistics about employees' disengagement – but she makes it personal, talking to people who quit the 9-to-5 to go it alone, both successes and failures. There's also a gentle swipe at inspirational aphorisms from the likes of Steve Jobs (above), exhorting you to follow your dreams, no matter what. Nice work. DAVID CRAWFORD

I Have No Mouth, and I Must Scream

6.00pm/12 midnight

Radio 4 Extra

David Soul, famed for his role as Hutch in TV's Starsky and Hutch, has been a British citizen since 2004 and has appeared in many BBC radio dramas and readings since the 1990s. I Have No Mouth, and I Must Scream was first broadcast on R4 in 2002. In Harlan Ellison's disturbing dystopian vision, there are just five surviving human beings after a global genocide orchestrated by a rogue computer and a Third World War. Soul stars as a paranoid would-be escapee from the psychotic robot. But pity the poor woman, Ellen, who is on a reproduction "rota" with the four surviving men.

Face behind the voice

Sanchez Payne BBC Radio Leeds

Age 25

Current job One of the presenters of MixTape on BBC Radio Leeds (Monday 7.00pm), his show features music

rooted in black culture. He is also a vehicle-purchasing executive and a semi-professional footballer.

CV Born and brought up in Leeds, he won a scholarship to the Leeds United Academy at the age of 14, later playing for Leeds United. His community charity work has won him both a Leeds Black Achievement award (2015) and a Media Legacy award (2018). He joined BBC Radio Leeds last year.

Best moment "The first time I heard my show on BBC Radio Leeds – sitting round the radio at home with my family. A terrific moment."

Worst moment "When I first started to drive a desk at BBC Radio Leeds I went to save a full programme that I'd just finished – and it disappeared! Of course I panicked but, happily, it had been saved."

Off air "I live with my family in Chapelton, Leeds. I do football training twice a week but in my spare time I'm usually in the gym or with my partner, Cherise, who is at university studying to be a child nurse."

First radio memory "Hirsty, Danny and JoJo on Galaxy. Stephanie Hirst (Mon–Fri 9.00am) is now one of the stars of BBC Radio Leeds."

Favourite broadcasters "All the above and former Radio 1/Xtra DJ Charlie Sloth, who played the music I love, has great energy and is very funny, as well."

Dream job and ambition "To get back into professional football, alongside an amazing radio and DJ career. I'm within touching distance..."

Secret skills "I have a great sense of rhythm and I think I'm a terrific dancer – freestyle to ballroom. I reckon I'd smash Strictly! And I fancy myself as a bit of a cook. My speciality is cooking from my soul, something I can add my own twist to – any cuisine with a bit of charisma: the Sanchez swagger! So maybe MasterChef, too!"

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Sanchez Payne BBC Radio Leeds

Current job One of the presenters of MixTape on BBC Radio Leeds (Monday 7.00pm), his show features music rooted in black culture. He is also a vehicle-purchasing executive and a semi-professional footballer.

CV Born and brought up in Leeds, he won a scholarship to the Leeds United Academy at the age of 14, later playing for Leeds United. His community charity work has won him both a Leeds Black Achievement award (2015) and a Media Legacy award (2018). He joined BBC Radio Leeds last year.

Best moment "The first time I heard my show on BBC Radio Leeds – sitting round the radio at home with my family. A terrific moment."

Worst moment "When I first started to drive a desk at BBC Radio Leeds I went to save a full programme that I'd just finished – and it disappeared! Of course I panicked but, happily, it had been saved."

Off air "I live with my family in Chapeltown, Leeds. I do football training twice a week but in my spare time I'm usually in the gym or with my partner, Cherise, who is at university studying to be a child nurse."

First radio memory "Hirsty, Danny and JoJo on Galaxy. Stephanie Hirst (Mon-Fri 9.00am) is now one of the stars of BBC Radio Leeds."

Favourite broadcasters "All the above and former Radio 1/Xtra DJ Charlie Sloth, who played the music I love, has great energy and is very funny, as well."

Dream job and ambition "To get back into professional football, alongside an amazing radio and DJ career. I'm within touching distance..."

Secret skills "I have a great sense of rhythm and I think I'm a terrific dancer – freestyle to ballroom. I reckon I'd smash Strictly! And I fancy myself as a bit of a cook. My speciality is cooking from my soul, something I can add my own twist to – any cuisine with a bit of charisma: the Sanchez swagger! So maybe MasterChef, too!"

Face behind the voice

Sanchez Payne BBC Radio Leeds

Current job One of the presenters of MixTape on BBC Radio Leeds (Monday 7.00pm), his show features music rooted in black culture. He is also a vehicle-purchasing executive and a semi-professional footballer.

CV Born and brought up in Leeds, he won a scholarship to the Leeds United Academy at the age of 14, later playing for Leeds United. His community charity work has won him both a Leeds Black Achievement award (2015) and a Media Legacy award (2018). He joined BBC Radio Leeds last year.

Best moment "The first time I heard my show on BBC Radio Leeds – sitting round the radio at home with my family. A terrific moment."

Worst moment "When I first started to drive a desk at BBC Radio Leeds I went to save a full programme that I'd just finished – and it disappeared! Of course I panicked but, happily, it had been saved."

Off air "I live with my family in Chapelton, Leeds. I do football training twice a week but in my spare time I'm usually in the gym or with my partner, Cherise, who is at university studying to be a child nurse."

First radio memory "Hirsty, Danny and JoJo on Galaxy. Stephanie Hirst (Mon-Fri 9.00am) is now one of the stars of BBC Radio Leeds."

Favourite broadcasters "All the above and former Radio 1/Xtra DJ Charlie Sloth, who played the music I love, has great energy and is very funny, as well."

Dream job and ambition "To get back into professional football, alongside an amazing radio and DJ career. I'm within touching distance..."

Secret skills "I have a great sense of rhythm and I think I'm a terrific dancer – freestyle to ballroom. I reckon I'd smash Strictly! And I fancy myself as a bit of a cook. My speciality is cooking from my soul, something I can add my own twist to – any cuisine with a bit of charisma: the Sanchez swagger! So maybe MasterChef, too!"

Face behind the voice

Sanchez Payne BBC Radio Leeds

Current job One of the presenters of MixTape on BBC Radio Leeds (Monday 7.00pm), his show features music rooted in black culture. He is also a vehicle-purchasing executive and a semi-professional footballer.

CV Born and brought up in Leeds, he won a scholarship to the Leeds United Academy at the age of 14, later playing for Leeds United. His community charity work has won him both a Leeds Black Achievement award (2015) and a Media Legacy award (2018). He joined BBC Radio Leeds last year.

Best moment "The first time I heard my show on BBC Radio Leeds – sitting round the radio at home with my family. A terrific moment."

Worst moment "When I first started to drive a desk at BBC Radio Leeds I went to save a full programme that I'd just finished – and it disappeared! Of course I panicked but, happily, it had been saved."

Off air "I live with my family in Chapelton, Leeds. I do football training twice a week but in my spare time I'm usually in the gym or with my partner, Cherise, who is at university studying to be a child nurse."

First radio memory "Hirsty, Danny and JoJo on Galaxy. Stephanie Hirst (Mon-Fri 9.00am) is now one of the stars of BBC Radio Leeds."

Favourite broadcasters "All the above and former Radio 1/Xtra DJ Charlie Sloth, who played the music I love, has great energy and is very funny, as well."

Dream job and ambition "To get back into professional football, alongside an amazing radio and DJ career. I'm within touching distance..."

Secret skills "I have a great sense of rhythm and I think I'm a terrific dancer – freestyle to ballroom. I reckon I'd smash Strictly! And I fancy myself as a bit of a cook. My speciality is cooking from my soul, something I can add my own twist to – any cuisine with a bit of charisma: the Sanchez swagger! So maybe MasterChef, too!"

Face behind the voice

Sanchez Payne BBC Radio Leeds

Current job One of the presenters of MixTape on BBC Radio Leeds (Monday 7.00pm), his show features music rooted in black culture. He is also a vehicle-purchasing executive and a semi-professional footballer.

CV Born and brought up in Leeds, he won a scholarship to the Leeds United Academy at the age of 14, later playing for Leeds United. His community charity work has won him both a Leeds Black Achievement award (2015) and a Media Legacy award (2018). He joined BBC Radio Leeds last year.

Best moment "The first time I heard my show on BBC Radio Leeds – sitting round the radio at home with my family. A terrific moment."

Worst moment "When I first started to drive a desk at BBC Radio Leeds I went to save a full programme that I'd just finished – and it disappeared! Of course I panicked but, happily, it had been saved."

Off air "I live with my family in Chapelton, Leeds. I do football training twice a week but in my spare time I'm usually in the gym or with my partner, Cherise, who is at university studying to be a child nurse."

First radio memory "Hirsty, Danny and JoJo on Galaxy. Stephanie Hirst (Mon-Fri 9.00am) is now one of the stars of BBC Radio Leeds."

Favourite broadcasters "All the above and former Radio 1/Xtra DJ Charlie Sloth, who played the music I love, has great energy and is very funny, as well."

Dream job and ambition "To get back into professional football, alongside an amazing radio and DJ career. I'm within touching distance..."

Secret skills "I have a great sense of rhythm and I think I'm a terrific dancer – freestyle to ballroom. I reckon I'd smash Strictly! And I fancy myself as a bit of a cook. My speciality is cooking from my soul, something I can add my own twist to – any cuisine with a bit of charisma: the Sanchez swagger! So maybe MasterChef, too!"

Face behind the voice

Sanchez Payne BBC Radio Leeds

Current job One of the presenters of MixTape on BBC Radio Leeds (Monday 7.00pm), his show features music rooted in black culture. He is also a vehicle-purchasing executive and a semi-professional footballer.

CV Born and brought up in Leeds, he won a scholarship to the Leeds United Academy at the age of 14, later playing for Leeds United. His community charity work has won him both a Leeds Black Achievement award (2015) and a Media Legacy award (2018). He joined BBC Radio Leeds last year.

Best moment "The first time I heard my show on BBC Radio Leeds – sitting round the radio at home with my family. A terrific moment."

Worst moment "When I first started to drive a desk at BBC Radio Leeds I went to save a full programme that I'd just finished – and it disappeared! Of course I panicked but, happily, it had been saved."

Off air "I live with my family in Chapeltown, Leeds. I do football training twice a week but in my spare time I'm usually in the gym or with my partner, Cherise, who is at university studying to be a child nurse."

First radio memory "Hirsty, Danny and JoJo on Galaxy. Stephanie Hirst (Mon-Fri 9.00am) is now one of the stars of BBC Radio Leeds."

Favourite broadcasters "All the above and former Radio 1/Xtra DJ Charlie Sloth, who played the music I love, has great energy and is very funny, as well."

Dream job and ambition "To get back into professional football, alongside an amazing radio and DJ career. I'm within touching distance..."

Secret skills "I have a great sense of rhythm and I think I'm a terrific dancer – freestyle to ballroom. I reckon I'd smash Strictly! And I fancy myself as a bit of a cook. My speciality is cooking from my soul, something I can add my own twist to – any cuisine with a bit of charisma: the Sanchez swagger! So maybe MasterChef, too!"

THERE ARE PLENTY of ways to get ahead of the game when planting for a riotous summer. Last week I wrote about planting lilies in pots, but there are many summer-flowering bulbs, tubers and corms that can be planted or potted up now.

Dahlias come in a kaleidoscope of colours and forms. Plant tubers in pots and then place them on the windowsill or in a greenhouse. Keep the soil moist and they should quickly burst into life and be ready to plant out come late May.

Dahlias are undeniably fashionable, but the jury may still be out on gladioli, what with their connotations with Dame Edna Everage and 1970s suburbia. If you're worried what the neighbours will think, here are a

envious. Gladiolus communis subsp. byzantinus is a classy-looking perennial, growing to 90cm tall with magenta-purple flower spikes from May to July. It can stay in the ground and should come back every year if drainage is sharp. Gladiolus murieliae

(aka Abyssinian gladiolus or Acidanthera) has deliciously fragrant white flowers stamped with a distinctive dark maroon blotch from late summer into autumn. This one grows to about 1m tall and adds impact in a border. It's not fully hardy but pretty cheap, so don't worry about lifting and saving for another year – just plant directly in the ground now or pack into pots for a one-season wonder. With all gladioli, plant the corms quite deeply to avoid staking later.

If you want some spice in your summer garden, go for some crocosmia. Their red and orange arching sprays float above their sword-like foliage and they look particularly good woven between ornamental grasses. They're easily grown from corms planted around 10cm apart and will clump up nicely over the years.

Two other exotic looking summer bulbs are Eucomis (pineapple flower) and Tigridia (peacock flower). The former has purple-edged green flowers the shape and size of a small pineapple. Plant one bulb per 15cm (6 inch) pot in a 50:50 mixture of John Innes No.3 and multi-purpose compost. Place on a windowsill, water sparingly and then place outdoors from June onwards. The peacock flower is particularly fun, producing showy triangular blooms in late summer in a rainbow of bright colours. Plant them in the ground in the sunniest, well-drained spot or in pots in the same 50:50 mix.

It's all about the planning. So think now about brightening up your summer.

Bring me sunshine

Plant some bulbs to be sure of a blazing summer display, says Joe Swift

PLANT A CLEMATIS

Climbing clematis flower for ages and take up little ground space. Now's the ideal time to plant one. There are hundreds to choose from in a rainbow of colours. The dainty early-flowering Clematis alpina and macropetala varieties put on a show in spring, followed by the rampant trellis-covering C. montanas in early summer. By high summer the large blousy hybrids are unmissable and, hot on their heels, the C. texensis and C. tanguticas take the garden from late summer into autumn.

OFF TO A GOOD START

Soak the pot with the plant in a bucket of water for around half an hour before planting. Dig a decent hole approximately 45cm square and deep. Fork over the bottom and dig in some garden compost with a handful of bonemeal. Place the plant leaning a little in the direction you want it to grow and make sure it's deep, to a depth that means the top of its compost will end up being around 12-15cm below the surrounding soil level. This reduces drying out and helps avoid clematis wilt. To refill the planting hole, use around 50 per cent good garden soil mixed with 50 per cent multi-purpose compost and then water well. Leave the cane in for support until the clematis gets going.

SHADE THE ROOTS

Most clematis like their roots kept cool with their heads in the sun. Cover the planted area roots with pieces of woodchips, slate or stone, or grow something in front to create shade.

POTTED VERSION

Clematis can also be grown in pots if you give them the same treatment they would get in the ground (put them in deep and don't let them dry out). Any container should be at least 50cm by 50cm, using a 50:50 mixture of John Innes No.3 and multi-purpose compost. Feed monthly with liquid tomato feed during the growing season.

FREE GUIDE WRITTEN BY RT'S PAUL LEWIS

COULD £86,000* HELP YOU IN RETIREMENT?

It's easier than ever to take tax-free cash from your home – and in a way that suits your unique needs

Increasingly retirees are looking at their homes in a new light – as a way to boost their finances. If you're a homeowner aged between 55 and 95, you could free up some of the tax-free cash from your home with a lifetime mortgage, spending it however you wish while staying in the home you love...

EQUITY RELEASE – THE FACTS

- Cash released is tax-free and yours to spend however you like
- With a lifetime mortgage, the most popular type of equity release plan, you still own your own home
- You can guarantee an inheritance for your

- family with some plans
- In 2018, Key customers had access to an average of £86,000 tax-free cash from their homes
- You will never owe more than the value of your home with Equity Release Council-approved plans
- Typically no monthly payments to make as the loan, plus roll-up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end
- A lifetime mortgage is a loan secured against your home, just like a traditional mortgage.
- Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99 per cent of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan. Subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499. Key is a member of the Equity Release Council (ERC) and recommends ERC-approved plans.

Radio Times has teamed up with Key to produce a free guide by Paul Lewis to give you the information you need to start on your equity release journey

REAL STORY

Retirees Mr and Mrs Turner have lived in their Hampshire home for the past 25 years, in which time they've built up a considerable amount of equity.

Lily explained: "We just thought it was a waste of money having all that equity in our home. We thought, if we could access it, we might as well."

"We didn't want to downsize – we like where we live. We did look into moving house but thought we could just visit all the places we might like to live."

"When we started making enquiries about equity release, Key followed through properly. They answered all our questions and were very professional. Our adviser was excellent. It was an extremely easy process to follow."

"As we spend a lot of time at dog shows, we've invested in some special fencing that goes round the car and caravan to keep the dogs safe while giving them a bit more freedom."

The couple have also made some home improvements including replacing the back door and the fencing around the house.

WHY NOT CALCULATE HOW MUCH YOU COULD RELEASE FROM YOUR HOME?

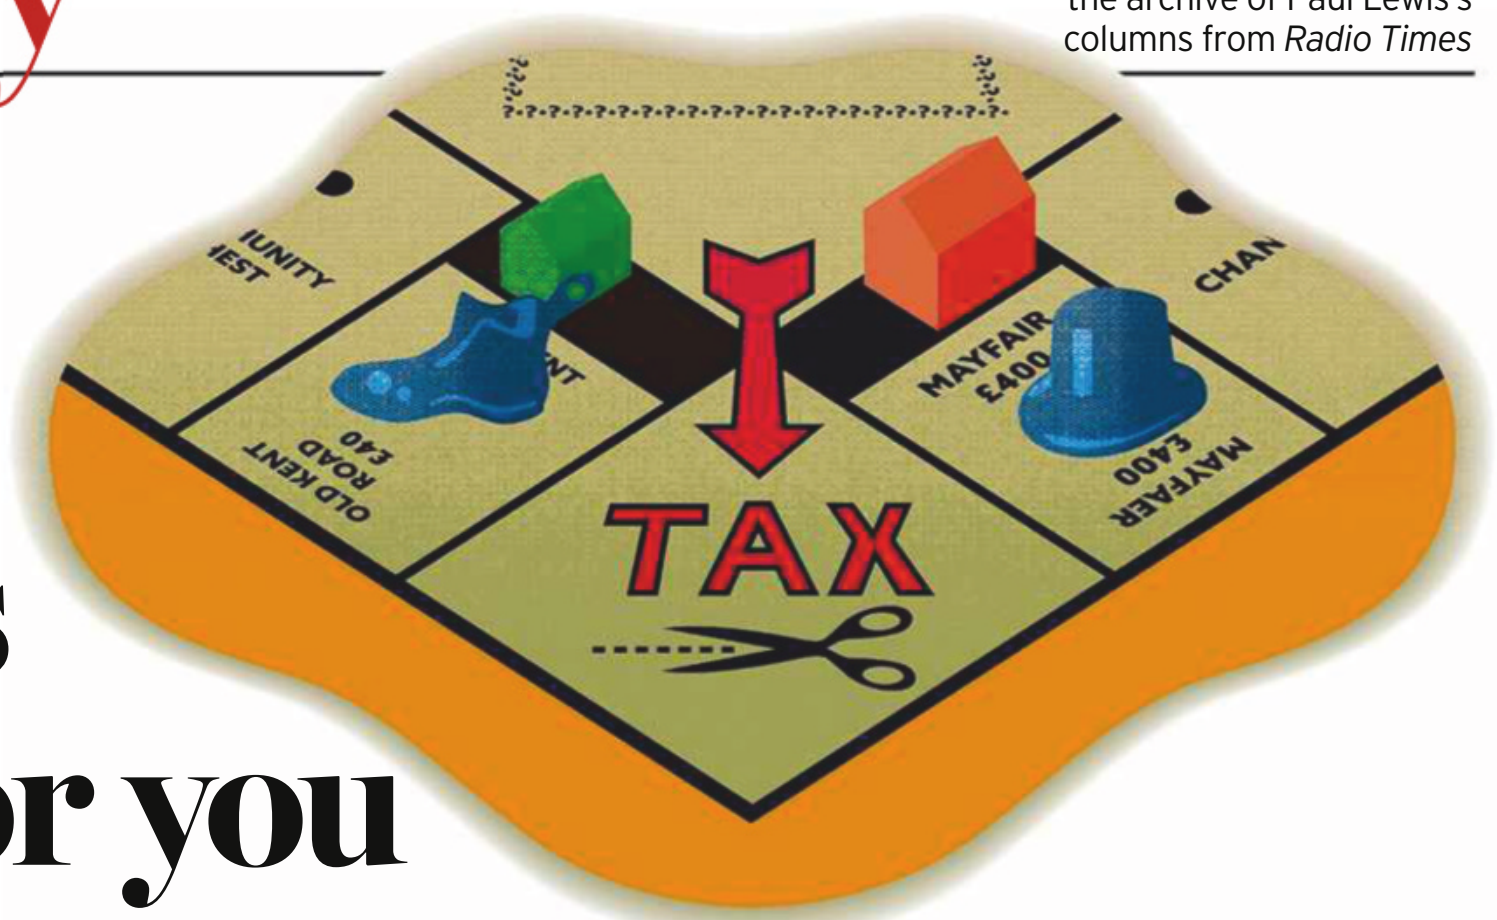

Use our free online calculator to find out how much you could release from your home. With the average amount available to release at £86,000*, your home could help fund the retirement you always dreamt of.

What the tax changes mean for you

Most working people will be a little better off in the new tax year, says Paul Lewis

EVERYONE WILL BE paying less tax on their income from 6 April. In the new tax year, 2019–20, you can earn £12,500 before income tax is due. That increase in the personal allowance to £12,500 (up from £11,850 in 2018–19) will mean you'll pay £130 a year less in income tax – and nearly £140 in higher-rate tax will pay up to £860 less tax in 2019–20. In Scotland the higher-rate threshold will remain at £43,430 so people taxed at the higher rate there, 41%, will pay just £140 less income tax.

But in both jurisdictions, higher-rate taxpayers who pay NI contributions will see them go up by nearly £340 a year. Outside Scotland you'll still be more than £520 better off – but nearly £200 worse off if you live in Scotland.

IN SCOTLAND, THE tax changes favour people who are lower earners – if you earn up to £27,000 a year, you'll pay less tax there than if you lived in the rest of the UK. But above that income, you will pay more tax in Scotland.

Tax allowances for savings and dividends will be unchanged.

If you're married or a civil partner and one of you has an income below £12,500 while the other pays basic-rate tax, then be sure to claim the marriage allowance. It's worth £250 off the tax paid by whoever is the basic-rate taxpayer. You can go back four years, so you could get a cheque for £900 if you fulfilled the conditions back to 2015–16.

If either of you was born before 6 April 1935, claim the married couple's allowance instead, which is worth up to £891.50 off one partner's tax bill, and applies even if you both pay tax.

'The increase in the personal allowance will mean we'll all pay less tax'

Scotland, where tax is structured differently, even though the personal allowance is the same.

Due to a change in the National Insurance threshold, people of under pension age who work and pay NI contributions will see another £25 off what they pay, leaving them £155 better off overall – or £165 in Scotland.

Higher-rate taxpayers do rather better. The threshold where the basic tax rate of 20% rises to the higher rate of 40% (everywhere but in Scotland) rises from £46,350 to £50,000, so people who currently pay

CAN THE PRICE RISE ON A FIXED-RATE CONTRACT?

John is annoyed: "In August 2018 I received a price increase notification from my telecoms provider that I ignored, because in May I'd negotiated a new 18-month contract. But our November bill included the higher prices! Can they do this?"

Sadly, John, many telecoms firms take the view that they can increase the price of a fixed-term, fixed-price contract as long as the rise is in line with inflation. They do it because you're trapped. You can only end your agreement early without paying a penalty if the supplier changes the price by enough to cause you "material detriment". They define that as rising by more than inflation. So if they increase it by inflation, no material detriment has been done. If you flounce off in a huff, you will have to pay for the whole cost until the end of the contract. Which could be very expensive.

To many of us that is nonsensical. The firms do it because they can, and we can't stop them. So when you negotiate a new cheaper phone or broadband contract fixed over two years, remember that the price may not be fixed at all.

Race across the World
Sunday 8.00pm BBC2

BBC2's RACE ACROSS the World is a reminder that the journey can be as rewarding as the destination. The series challenges five duos to get to Singapore without taking a single flight. They've had their cards and phones confiscated, and only have the equivalent price of the usual 12-hour flight to fund their overland odyssey.

There are easier ways to slow down: how about stopping over next time you change planes? Over 65 million people fly into Singapore every year, but most don't get beyond the airport. That's a huge shame because it's a fascinating place: an English-speaking city-state that's a cultural melting pot (the population is 75 per cent ethnic Chinese, 13 per cent Malay and nine per cent Indian). This year marks 200 years since Sir Stamford Raffles, the East India Company administrator who is considered the founder of modern Singapore, landed on this tiny island off the southern tip of the Malay peninsula.

Singapore is also a straightforward stop-over thanks to efficient, spotless public transport. You can explore the city's colonial history, wonderful food and lush parks in a day, and squeeze in some shopping, too. Here's how the contestants could end their epic journey, before they hop on a plane home...

HOW TO SPEND A DAY IN SINGAPORE STRETCH YOUR LEGS

The city's Unesco-listed botanic gardens are a downtown oasis where you'll find the world's biggest orchid garden. Join the joggers, dog-walkers and tai-chi practitioners and take a stroll first thing, when it's cooler.

TEMPLE TIME

With its quaint shophouses and ornate terraces, trendy restaurants and tacky market, Chinatown is a colourful contrast to the skyscrapers that surround it. On South Bridge Road, there are three places of worship on one street: a towering Hindu temple, a gleaming red Buddhist temple and a mint-green mosque.

EAT LIKE A LOCAL

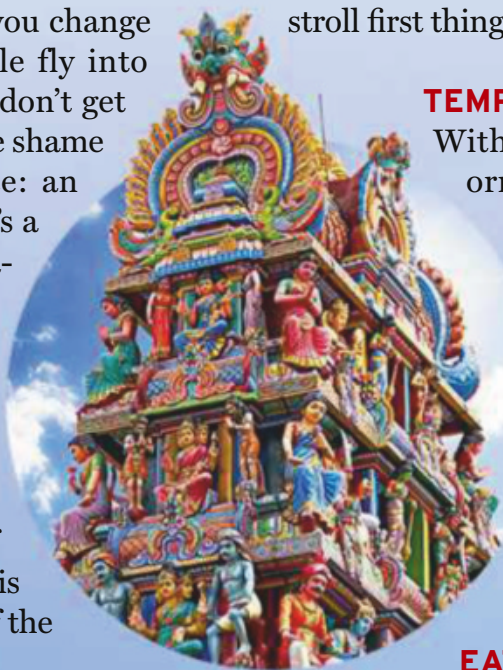

The easiest way to savour this island's diverse culture is to eat in one of its enormous food courts. Like neighbouring Malaysia, Singapore is a streetfood paradise, but hawkers are no longer allowed to clutter up the streets. Chinatown's Maxwell Road Hawker Centre has over a hundred stalls dishing up local favourites. Try Hainanese chicken rice (poached chicken on fragrant rice) or char kway teow (noodles stir-fried with cockles and pork).

SHOP AROUND

Lined with department stores and over 20 malls, Orchard Road is a one-stop shop, whether you're after designer goods or cut-price electronics. It's easy to while away a few hours in ION Orchard, where Louis Vuitton sits alongside H&M, and the top levels afford panoramic views. If independent shops, quirky cafés and funky murals are more your thing, head to Haji Lane in Kampong Glam.

SUNDOWNER WITH A VIEW

Singapore's most famous landmark is the Marina Bay Sands hotel, which has a boat-shaped infinity pool perched atop its three sloping towers. The SkyBar is better value than the observation deck: the sweeping views are the same, but you can redeem the £11 entry fee on drinks.

Afterwards, take a stroll through neighbouring Gardens by the Bay, a huge park with a flower dome and cloud forest conservatories. Best of all are the giant "supertrees" – steel structures laced with ferns, vines and orchids. They collect solar energy that powers a free nightly light show.

SPLASH OUT

Singaporeans are obsessed with food and you can find fantastic restaurants that cater to every budget, serving everything from European to West Sumatran, simple noodle dishes to molecular gastronomy. If you want to push the boat out, book at table at Michelin-starred Candlenut, which draws on the Straits-Chinese chef's family recipes. Or, if you're prepared to queue, you can get Michelin-garlanded street food for around £3 from Tai Hwa Pork Noodle, at the food court at 466 Crawford Lane; it's one of two Michelin-starred hawker stalls in Singapore. CLAIRE WEBB

WHAT NOT TO DO IN SINGAPORE

Singapore's squeaky-clean pavements and public facilities are the result of draconian laws that travellers should be aware of.

- Don't litter. Spitting or littering can land you a fine of up to $2,000 Singapore dollars (SGP), around £1,100.
- Don't drop chewing gum. Tourists are allowed to bring in two packs per person, but you could face a hefty fine should you spit it out.
- Don't drink or snack on the metro, or you could be fined up to $500 SGP (£280). Even water is not permitted.
- Don't smoke unless you're in a designated area – it's a $200 SGP offence (£110).
- Don't forget to flush. You can be fined $150 SGP (£80) if you fail to flush a public toilet.
- Don't connect to someone else's wifi – it's considered hacking, and could land you a $10,000 SGP fine (£5,500) or up to three years in jail.
- Don't walk around naked in public – or in your hotel room with the curtains open. The penalty is $2,000 SGP (£1,100).

This Mother's Day make sure you get a book to savour – from gardening to criminals on the lam

DOWN TO EARTH BY MONTY DON

The gardening guru's bestseller is just out in paperback (DK, £9.99, plus £1.50 p&p; or hardback for £17, incl p&p). Full of wisdom gathered from Monty's 50 years of getting his hands dirty, it meanders through the jobs and joys involved in creating and maintaining a garden through the seasons. The index is useful for looking up particulars, but a random dip-in will turn up an inspiring read too.

WILD FIRE BY ANN CLEEVES

For a romp of a read, and a virtual visit to the windswept Shetland Islands, look no further than Ann Cleeves's latest crime thriller featuring DI Jimmy Perez (Pan Books, £7.99, plus £1.50 p&p; or hardback £16, incl p&p). Although he will live on in BBC1's Shetland series, this is the eighth and final literary outing for the guarded Scotsman, in which he is called upon to investigate a troubled English family who have moved to the islands.

REWILD YOURSELF – 23 SPELLBINDING WAYS TO MAKE NATURE MORE VISIBLE

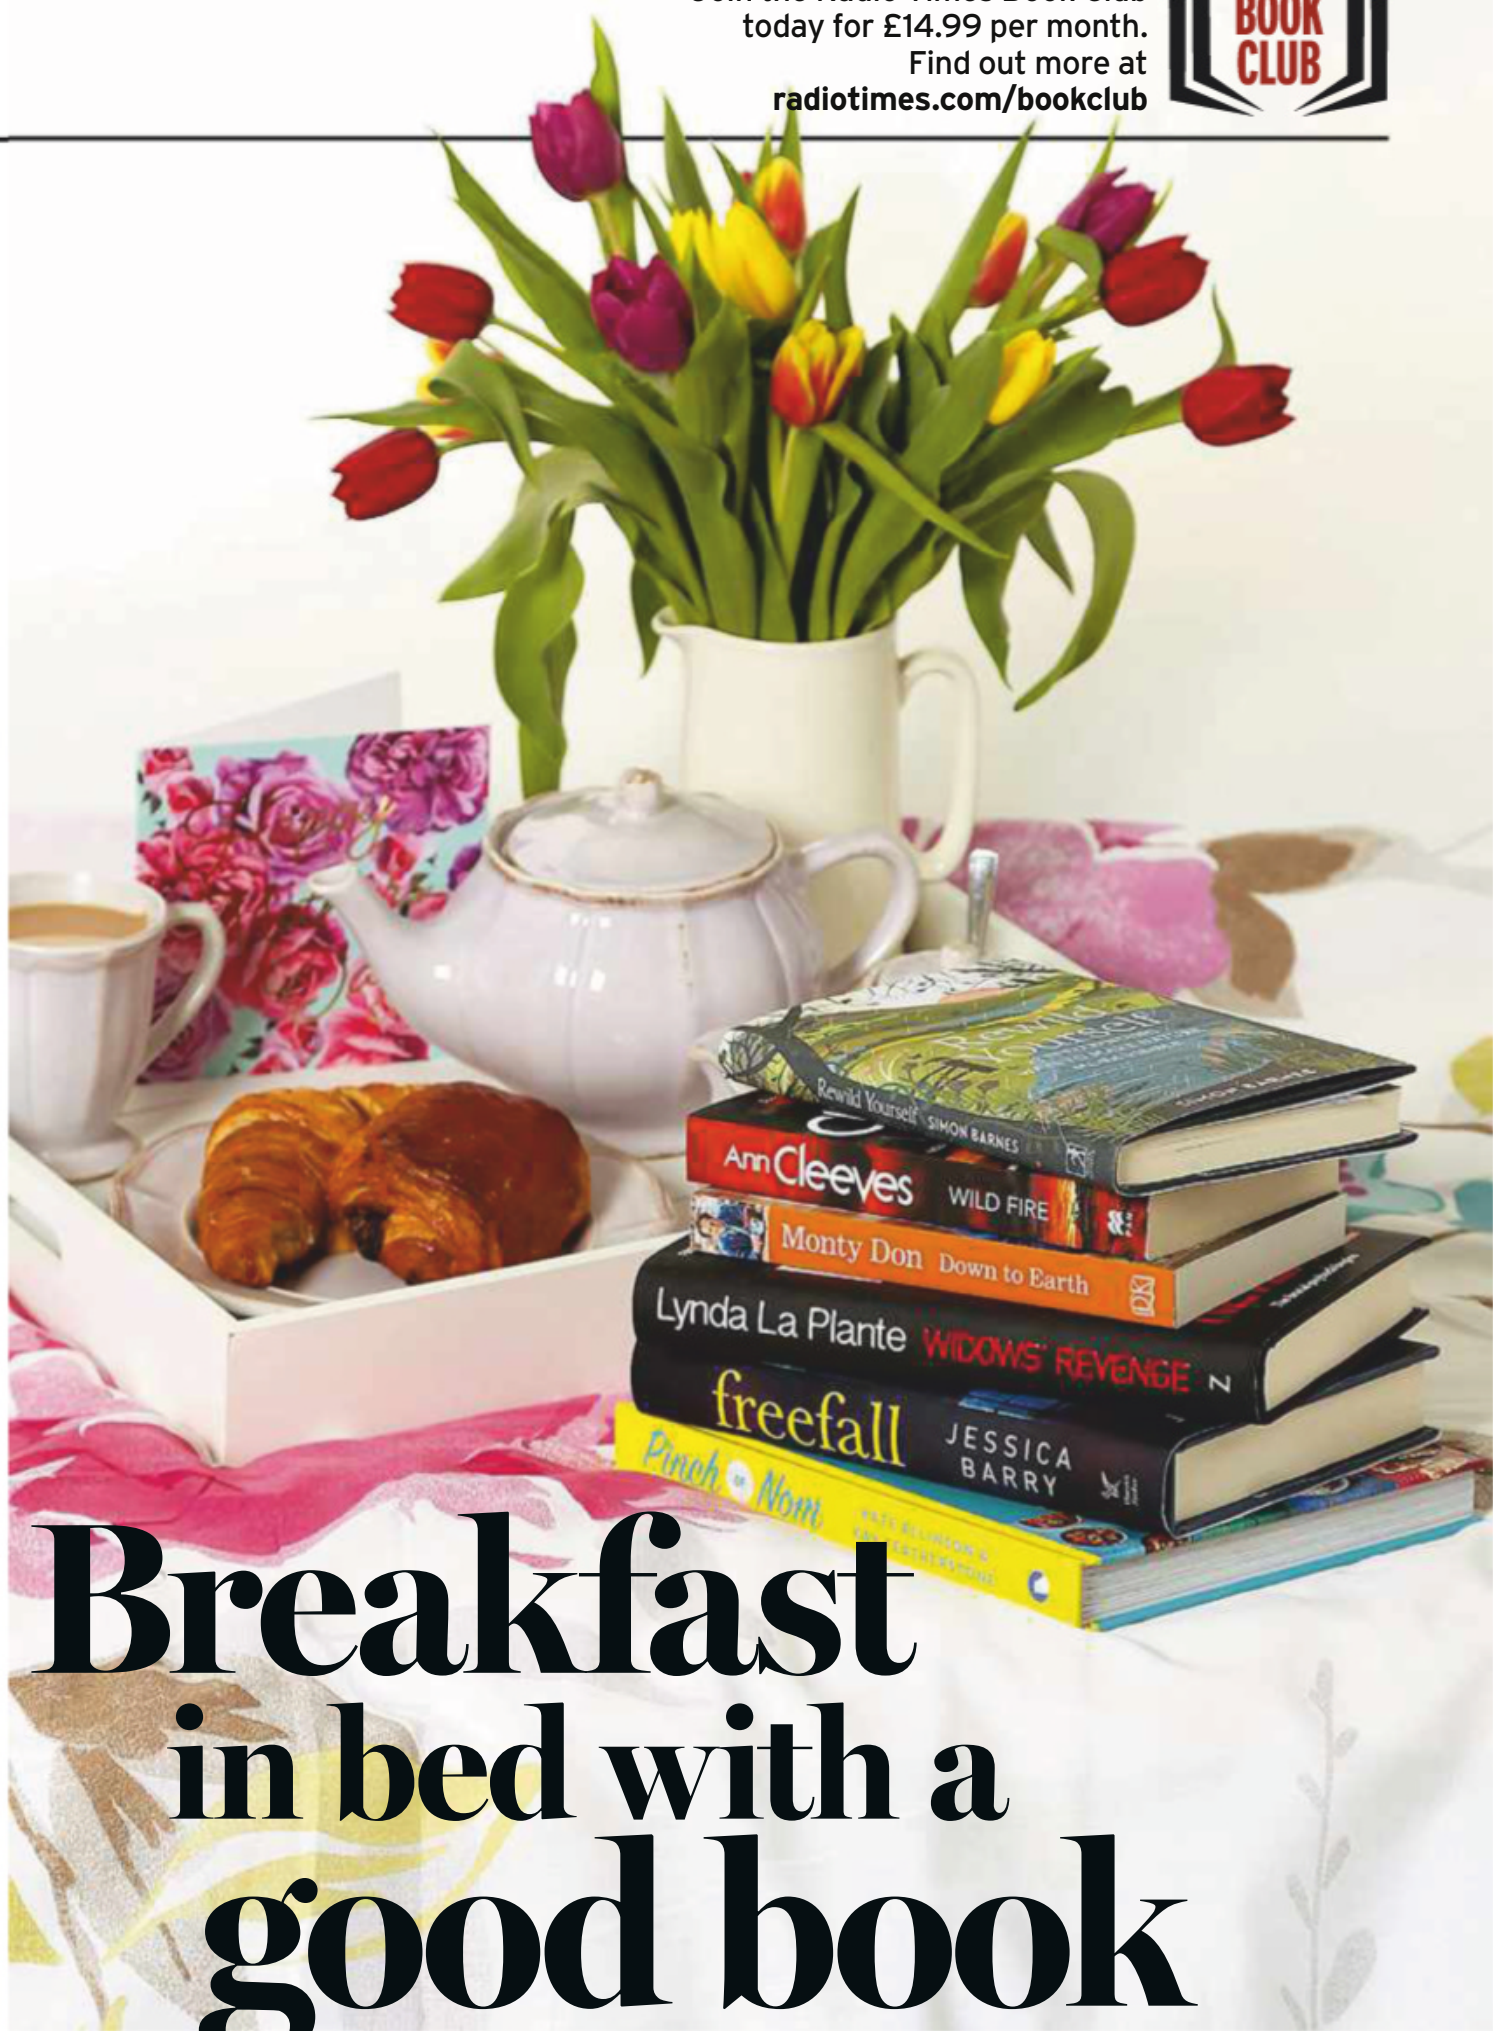

BY SIMON BARNES

Simon Barnes is Radio Times's sport columnist, but he's also a noted author of books on wildlife. Here he argues that we're so out of touch with nature that there is much that we just don't notice any more. A pair of binoculars and an open mind will set you on the right path, according to his amusing and magical book, which also instructs readers on where and what to look and listen for, from butterflies to birdsong (Simon & Schuster, £14.99, incl p&p).

PINCH OF NOM – 100 SLIMMING, HOME-STYLE RECIPES

BY KATE ALLINSON & KAY FEATHERSTONE

The website pinchofnom.com started as a blog between foodie friends, testing and posting what they call Weight Watchers- and Slimming World-friendly recipes, along with other healthy eating tips. A million and a half people now engage with the website, which could be viewed as a kind of superdiet resource. Judging by the accompanying book (Bluebird, £18, incl p&p) of mostly new dishes, this is a less uptight, more realistic way to try to shed some pounds – and, insist its authors, it works.

Breakfast in bed with a good book

FREEFALL BY JESSICA BARRY

The publishers say this is a debut, but Jessica Barry is a pseudonym for Melissa Pimentel, author of 2016's The One That Got Away, her reimagining of Jane Austen's Persuasion. The new name comes with a shift in genre – Freefall (out this month, Harvill Secker, £12.99, incl p&p) is a long way from Austen, and has already gone down well in the US. Allison survives a plane crash but is lost in the Rockies and has to survive on her wits while her mother agonises about her daughter's whereabouts.

WIDOWS' REVENGE

BY LYNDA LA PLANTE

For those who prefer more gritty thrills, there is Lynda La Plante's follow up to Widows, the celebrated writer's hit TV series from the 1980s about the gang of women who pick up where their criminal husbands left off. In Revenge (Zaffre, £14.99, incl p&p), Dolly Rawlins and the other wives have fled from London to Rio, where they are living it large – and in constant fear of being found.

Dictionary corner

Susie Dent

I have often wondered if the word "news" originates from the initials north, east, west and south? Irene Hale by email.

Neat as the theory is, it's completely wrong, as is the suggestion that the word is an acronym for "notable events, weather and sports".

The real origin is simpler.

It is the plural of "new", a word with ancient roots that is the sibling of the Latin novus – itself the source of "innovate",

"novice" and "novel" (something interestingly new or unusual, including in book form). Nova, "new things", passed from Latin into French – as nouvelles – and, at the beginning of the 15th century, into English as news.

A hundred years later the initial meaning of simple novelties had shifted to include the weightier reports of events that were brought to people as new information.

TALKING POINT

Why have they ruined Bargain Hunt?

NET LOSS
Contestants now watch the auction (left) on a tablet

LETTER OF THE WEEK

What on earth is going on at Bargain Hunt (weekdays BBC1)? The new format of the programme, with the contestants being asked to close their eyes while the “bonus buys” are introduced and then having to huddle around a tablet to watch them being auctioned, is a shambles.

The programme has been a success since 2000: if it's not baroque, don't fix it.

Dr John Burscough Brigg, Lincolnshire

Dr Burscough wins a Bose SoundLink Micro Bluetooth speaker, in either orange or black. This small but powerful speaker delivers unmatched sound for its size. With up to six hours' battery life, a silicone rubber exterior and a tear-resistant strap, it's portable, rugged and waterproof. RRP £99.95. bose.co.uk

BARGAIN BASEMENT

We are, or rather were, avid watchers of Bargain Hunt and enjoyed its quiet, laid-back format. But all that has now changed and the programme has become an ill-conceived patchwork, darting about from one scene to the next with the dreaded words “We'll return to that later”. It was a very pleasant programme, but now it's ruined.

Ann Arger Whitchurch, Shropshire

A MIXED LOT

The new format of Bargain Hunt has both good and bad changes. Improvements are the minimum price for one item and the specific type of item challenge.

But asking how much time is left is bad, and the separation of the bonus buy to the end of the auction is very bad and makes the programme disjointed and clunky. Please adapt the format, BBC, to keep the programme comfortable to watch.

Steve Willimott Doncaster

THE ONE THAT GOT AWAY...

What on earth has happened to Bargain Hunt? On 15 March it was disorganised throughout and ended in a gigantic muddle with the bonus buys. If this is a new format, they will have lost me as a viewer after many years.

Frances Youel Kiltyclogher, County Leitrim

BACK TO SCHOOL
“Teacher” Eric Knowles explains the new rules

...OR IS IT TWO?

What a mess! The contestants now effectively lose two thirds of their free choices. They have to wait until the auction has been completed, then cover their eyes as the experts reveal their choices. Shades of Blue Peter. We also have the timekeepers coming into shot. Why? To crown it all, we have to endure the almost constant background music. Thank you, Bargain Hunt, for many years of pleasure – and goodbye.

John Smith Isle of Sheppey, Kent

WHERE IT WENT WRONG

To introduce some control over what the contestants buy takes away their choice; the inclusion of production staff to tell us how much time is left would be better done by a voiceover; the whole thing is disjointed; and having to wait to find out how the bonus buy went just adds to my dislike.

Sue Williams Havant, Hampshire

A HAPPY PUNTER!

Well done for keeping the content the same, but presenting Bargain Hunt in a more agreeable format. It worked for me.

Chris Jones Cardiff

A BBC spokesperson responds: “As one of BBC Daytime’s most successful and much-loved programmes, now approaching its 20th-anniversary year, Bargain Hunt has evolved over time with occasional format tweaks to ensure it remains fresh and relevant for our audiences.”

TARDY BUT TASTY

It's a testament to Mary Berry that, after watching her demonstrate a recipe on Mary Berry's Quick Cooking (11 March BBC2), I could find none of the main ingredients in any of my local supermarkets.

I did finally manage to obtain what I needed to make her Romano pepper and herb penne (recipe in RT, 9 March), which was delicious and worth the wait.

REQUIRED VIEWING

After reading Stephen Butcher's recommendation in Feedback (16 March), I watched Soft Border Patrol on iPlayer and found it very funny – even more so after the week we'd had in Parliament. It should be shown to all MPs and the BBC should show it nationally. It has a very similar format to Scot Squad on BBC Scotland, which is also very funny.

Rona Barbour Aberdeen

DOUBLING UP

If the BBC is so hard up, can someone explain why it's necessary to have one reporter reporting live for the 6pm BBC1 news on the story of the four climbers hit by an avalanche on Ben Nevis and then another reporter also reporting live on the same story 15 minutes later for BBC Scotland. Surely one could do both jobs?

Alfred Small Dundee

A BBC spokesperson replies: “We work hard to maintain value for money at all times. Occasionally, for a number of reasons including time and editing constraints, it is not possible to use the same correspondent across our output, so in those circumstances we will use a different reporter for the same story.”

CHEAT WAS A TREAT

The ITV thriller Cheat was a treat with its glimpse into the genteel, privileged and beautiful world of Cambridge. The plot, too, intrigued after a gratuitous start in the ladies' toilet.

The menacing Rose (Molly Windsor) and the two men who played her fathers were well cast, as were Leah (Katherine Kelly) and Adam (Tom Goodman-Hill).

The end, however, was a disappointment, lapsing as it did into the stereotype of the wronged woman triumphing, while Jezebel behind bars plotted her next outrage. All too neat and predictable, really.

A BRIGHT FUTURE

RT named the concluding part of The Choir: Our School by the Tower (18 March BBC2) the documentary of the week, but for me it was the documentary of the year so far. It was heart-warming and heart-wrenching at the same time.

When we hear so much that is negative about young people, those in this documentary were outstanding. They confronted issues that the adults were tentative about. They were insightful and courageous and the work they produced made my heart swell. Moving and remarkable.

A JAUNDICED VIEW

Was I the only one horrified by the cast of Emmerdale's recent visit to Belfast (7 March ITV)? First we had the battleaxe of a landlady charging extortionate prices for rooms, then a crowd baying for blood at a wrestling venue.

Next came a kerb-crawler and finally an abusive partner threatening all sorts.

and friendly people? And why show the worst parts of the city?

CLOTHES SHOW

Could you find out for me the make of the dress worn by Kathryn, played by Helen McCrory (right), in the restaurant scene with her son in MotherFatherSon (6 March BBC2)? It's beautiful.

THREE WHEELS GOOD

In Michael Buerk's article on David Jason (23 March) he mentions Del Boy's "Robin Reliant" from Only Fools and Horses. This is a common mistake – the vehicle is a Reliant Robin (after all, you wouldn't say Escort Ford). But more importantly, Del Boy's car was a Reliant Regal Supervan.

Ann Edwards Edinburgh

GREAT DETECTIVE WORK

I agree with all the praise that has been given to Endeavour (ITV). I have noticed that writer Russell Lewis enjoys slipping in the names of characters from popular fiction.

We've had Mr Pugh, the blind piano tuner, a landlady called Mrs Cravat and, most subtle of all, DI Thursday said his favourite crime writer was Holly Martins – the name of the crime writer who came from America to find his friend Harry Lime in The Third Man!

David Donohoe Oldham, Lancashire

TAKE A BOW

What a delight it was to watch the stars perform in All Star Musicals (17 March ITV). Television is starved of great musicals and it gave us the feel-good factor just to listen to the music, all beautifully performed. More, please.

POST-BREXIT TV

Is it true that when the UK leaves the EU, programmes from the remaining 27 EU countries will be withdrawn from both Netflix and Amazon Prime Video?

Garry Simpson New Milton, Hampshire

A Netflix spokesperson tells us: "Members will still be able to use their Netflix accounts when travelling abroad and continue to access all our original content. The only thing that may change is access to some of the shows we have licensed, depending on the agreements we have in place for each country."

Amazon Prime Video tells us: "As with all content subscription services, if there were a hard Brexit the portability regulation that was brought in by the EU, which allowed EU customers to stream content from their 'home' catalogue while in the EU, would no longer apply to the UK. This will not affect some shows; however, there will be content that will not be accessible due to contractual restrictions."▷

CALL THE MIDWIFE SPECIAL

'My mum cries when she watches Call the Midwife'

Call the Midwife is always an RT readers' favourite on Feedback so, to celebrate Mother's Day, we asked Jennifer Kirby, aka Nurse Valerie Dyer, about her own mum.

"I'm very close to my mum," she tells us. "When I'm worried about something I'll always ring her and she'll calm me down. I've never known anyone who's such a born mother – children just love her.

"She had me when she was almost 30 – girls run in our family! I was born in Milton Keynes, where Mum was head of religious education and taught history at a big comprehensive school. When we moved to a village in Worcestershire when I was nine, it was quite a change for her. She was a stay-at-home mum for a few years.

"Like any teenage daughter and her mum, we had a few blazing rows! But never now. I do go home a lot, and I'll probably take Mum out to lunch on Mother's Day.

"She was named Shirley after Shirley Bassey – she doesn't sing like her, but she does love music. And she's really, really clever.

A SPECIAL MUM

When I was younger we'd have days out at museums, cathedrals or old houses and that's still what we like to do. We also share a love of books.

"My mum cries when she's watching

Call the Midwife. When a baby's born, it's very moving – I have a bit of a cry myself sometimes!

"I love the show – it's hard-hitting and brave. And I've relished being able to develop my character.

In one of my first scripts

I remember reading that Sister Monica had actually delivered her – and now Nurse Dyer's back at Nonnatus House and it's all come full circle. I thought that was a lovely touch.

"Being in Call the Midwife has made me think a bit more about the act of giving birth, I suppose... Living your everyday life and at the same time growing a whole new one: it's such a miracle. The bond that a mother feels for her child appears to me, at its best, unlike any other love."

Filming on series nine is under way, but if you're missing your visits to Poplar, the DVD of series eight is now on sale – see below. We also have three copies to give away: to enter, visit radiotimes.com/midwifecomp

View from my sofa

SAMANTHA MORTON

‘My TV has a blanket over it’

The Walking Dead actress likes to ration her viewing

What is the view from your sofa?

It depends on where I am. I often don't watch anything when I'm working – I read instead. Then, when I finish filming something, I'll binge. I remember the first time I watched The Wire – I didn't leave the room for three days. I was like a heroin addict.

Any current telly addictions?

Call My Agent!, a French series on Netflix. I'm watching it going, "Oh my God, that is so true!" It is just genius and hilarious. I'm also a huge Line of Duty fan. I can't wait for the new series. Jed Mercurio's attention to detail is just awesome.

Is it true that until recently you hadn't owned a TV set for seven years?

Yeah, because I lived where I lived [on a farm in the Peak District], and I didn't want one. It's also because I had young children. You don't want them to turn the telly on and just be constantly bombarded with stuff. I'm not a huge fan of that when you're raising children.

What changed?

Well, when I got the part in The Walking Dead, I said to my partner, "Listen, I think we need to sort out a telly so I can watch it." So we got a television like a normal family. But it has a big blanket over it. At a certain time, the television goes to sleep: "Oh, the TV's tired!"

Your role in The Walking Dead as Alpha, the leader of the show's new villains with her distinctive shaved head, is quite a change of direction for you...

It was definitely something

I'd never really acted before. So, when the possibility of me talking to the producers [about a part] on the show came up, I was over the moon... Then, when I arrived on set in Georgia, everybody was unbelievably kind and welcomed me to "the family".

You've also recently shot a film with Bafta-winning writer/director Dominic Savage about a single mum who is forced into becoming a sex worker. What was that like?

It's called I Am Kirsty, and it's one of three films – Vicky McClure and Gemma Chan have done the other two – with female narratives but different stories. Dominic met with us and asked if there was anything we felt, as actresses, that we wanted to say. Then he went away and wrote the scripts, and we talked some more. Then he wrote more... It went back and forth until he got the story he wanted to shoot. It was very collaborative and, for me, very personal.

Your daughter Esmé is starring in a new series on Amazon called Hanna – have you seen it?

I've seen the first one and thought it was incredible, and I love the fact they've got all of these hours to tell a story that was originally crammed into a movie. And obviously I loved the central performance...

How was it seeing your 19-year-old doing action sequences?

Well, like any mum, you just worry and hope that she's being looked after. You hear stories of some young people getting into the business and it's great, but some find it tough at times. I was very young when I was acting in Boon and Soldier, Soldier. But I had lots of very, very small bit parts to give me a taster. I did a lot of extras work. Acting is actually a lot of waiting around.

Do you think Esmé has a future in the industry?

I'd say so! If she wants it.

CRAIG McLEAN

The Walking Dead is on Mondays at 9pm on Fox. I Am Kirsty will feature at the BFI & Radio Times Television Festival. For details go to bfi.org.uk/TVfest
