WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

John Lewis PLC's partnership scheme for its employees wasn't created by its founder but by his son, John Spedan Lewis (right), who discovered that the firm's yearly profit was exactly the same as the 300 Oxford Street staff took home. His father was so against sharing profits, Spedan ran two sets of accounts to hide the scheme.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

HERE'S THE LOWE DOWN

The latest scene-stealing heart-throb to hit our screens is a rather unexpected one: Wild Bill, a new drama coming to ITV later this year, features former Brat Pack member and The West Wing star Rob Lowe (left) as "high-flying US cop Bill Hixon, who is appointed Chief Constable of the East Lincolnshire Police Force". Yes, you read that right. That's the plotline. And the incongruity of the casting was not lost on ITV's director of television Kevin Lygo, who said to RT of his leading man: "He's so handsome and tanned, he looks so weird."

LEE AND DEAN ARE LOVESICK

Talking of handsome leading men, last week saw the start of the second series of Lee and Dean, Channel 4's tender and funny saga of unrequited love between two Stevenage builders. Series one ended on a bit of a bombshell with a kiss between Lee and Dean, which caused a lot of plot mayhem. But it was also tricky for the show's stars and co-writers, Miles Chapman and Mark O'Sullivan, who are best friends in real life and who watch the show with their families. "I saw it as something to get through, like flu," laughs Chapman. However, O'Sullivan, who plays the much more lovelorn Dean, noted that the scene required them to deploy all their acting skills because of when it was shot. "We filmed at 8.30 on a Tuesday morning, which is about the most unromantic time you could think of," he says.

PARTRIDGE IS NO BUERK

This Time with Alan Partridge may have just ended, but it already looks like it will be coming back. So maybe the creators will find space in series two for a joke in which Partridge (Steve Coogan, below) pioneers his version of Radio 4's discussion show The Moral Maze on the This Time sofa. Being Alan, he called his version "Quadrangle" – "a quandary in a rectangle" – and hosts the show in an actual rectangle. Sadly, there wasn't room for this scene in the final cut of the last series – which was a relief for Michael Buerk, The Moral Maze's presenter. "I feel a bit threatened by this," Buerk tells RT. "Alan's a towering intellect among the legions of halfwits, with a brain like a rat trap. Having a young successor in the wings is a very uncomfortable feeling..." That will be music to Alan's ears. BEN DOWELL

Bear's amazing animal stories

Bear Grylls has proven himself capable of keeping body and soul together in some of the world's most inhospitable places. But in his new show Hostile Planet he showcases the extraordinary tenacity of animals in six brutal environments – mountains, oceans, grasslands, jungles, deserts and the poles.

The six-part National Geographic series involved 1,300 days of filming, with input from director Guillermo Navarro, who won an Oscar for cinematography for Pan's Labyrinth in 2007. The opening episode focuses on mountains, in which producer/director Mateo Willis used his experience of filming for the BBC's Planet Earth II to capture an extraordinary sequence. "We see a snow leopard run off a cliff ledge, fall 200 feet and get up and run away," he tells RT. "It's almost like it has super powers. It's by a country mile the most spectacular thing I have ever shot." BEN DOWELL

‘I love a dainty morsel of TV’

Streaming can be fun, but scheduled TV leaves you wanting more…

A FEW WEEKS AGO the first episode of the third series of Victoria went out on ITV. Normally, the run-up to a new series is extremely tense, as you wait to see whether the audience is interested in the world you’ve spent the last year or so putting together. But in this case I was a little more relaxed, as the whole series had already been shown in the USA, where it seemed to slip down very nicely indeed.

However, the fact that the Americans have been able to see Victoria before the great-great-great-grandchildren of her subjects did has gone down badly with the sort of viewers who care about these things. There were harsh words on Twitter, and a reporter from The Sun asked me, “Don’t you think British shows about British queens should be shown in Britain first?”

On the face of it, it does seem a bit analogue in today’s digital world, where streamers “drop” around the world the same day, to put out the same show at different times in two major English-speaking countries. But the truth is that while millennials may be “Netfix and chillin’”, there’s still a huge audience who actually watch terrestrial TV.

And attracting their attention is the raison-d’être of channel controllers and their consiglieri, otherwise known as schedulers. These Machiavellian types don’t care about the patriotic right of British Victoria fans to see their heroine first; all that concerns them is whether their channel will maintain its share. It’s a dark art, scheduling, and it can be very demoralising for people who have dedicated themselves to making something special to realise that for the scheduler your carefully honed drama is nothing more than a line of sandbags against Bodyguard 2 or, in Victoria’s case, Line of Duty.

Of course, the die-hard fans of Victoria will no doubt have watched the entire series already on the internet in ways that are quite possibly illegal but clearly easy to master. And if they do, they will be in for a treat – the American version, because there are no breaks for adverts, is five minutes longer. (Trade secret: every writer wishes their show was five minutes longer, and no producer ever does.)

‘I hope some people will watch Victoria the old-fashioned way’

But I hope some people will watch Victoria in the old-fashioned way. In these days of the box-set binge, where you can emerge bleary-eyed, wondering where the last six hours went, I rather love a dainty morsel of television that leaves you wanting more. I want to feel tantalised rather than sated. And when something dramatic happens – the sort of thing that makes you gasp or cry (and this series of Victoria has a few of those), I like the feeling that the world is watching too.

I’m currently working on the next series of Victoria, which will be the darkest yet. I’m not giving the plot away; anyone can look up the cataclysm to come on Wikipedia. But I hope that the gods of scheduling look favourably upon it and decide to put it out simultaneously with the US broadcast so that it can be a truly global shared experience.

TELEVISION IS ONLY entertainment, but it has the potential to bring people together. The Empire has, thank goodness, long gone, but, in this Brexit turmoil that’s made us a global laughing stock, it is modestly reassuring to know that a British show about a British queen is watched and I hope enjoyed in 146 countries around the world.

Daisy Goodwin is an author and producer, and the writer of ITV’s Victoria (Sunday 9pm)

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE… 13–19 APRIL 1989

WHAT WE WATCHED

BBC2’s Theatre Night, weekly filmed versions of acclaimed stage productions, was kicking off with George Bernard Shaw’s satire of militarism, Arms and the Man, starring Helena Bonham Carter as the heroine, Raina. The 23-year-old, already famous for playing Lucy Honeychurch in the hit Merchant Ivory film A Room with a View, admitted she often got the giggles filming Arms and the Man and gave RT an insight into the punk behind the English Rose (as she was constantly called) by wearing Doc Marten boots for the cover shoot. “They give me a bit of height and a sense of purpose.”

WHAT YOU SAID

Radio Times had just been redesigned after a landmark decision to separate the radio and TV listings and introduce a different typeface. We had a lot of letters on the subject, mostly positive. “I’m delighted with the new format,” said Richard Parry from Edinburgh, though VG Curtis from Epsom, Surrey was a rare voice of dissent. “To plan my viewing and listening I now have to turn to at least four different pages, look for the right day, and register the start and finish times of two TV and three radio programmes.” Sorry about that… BEN DOWELL

SATURDAY tv

The 20 greatest sitcoms ever!

To pay homage to brilliant British sitcoms, RT asked a panel of actors, scriptwriters, producers and comics to tell us their all-time greats. RT's TV editor Alison Graham starts the countdown...

Oooh, comedies, they are so divisive, much more so than dramas and documentaries. I think it's because viewers issue a direct challenge to comedies: make us laugh, preferably immediately, otherwise we'll switch off. After all, what's the point of a comedy that isn't funny? It's just a haddock without gills, a flat and flapping thing that's of no use to anyone.

It's why people are so vocal in expressing their disappointment if they think a comedy doesn't come up to the mark. If that initial, instinctive reaction isn't there – the laugh, the giggle, the smile – then we are done and we feel our time has been wasted. Go away, rubbish comedies, and don't bother us again.

But it's also why, when we find a comedy that does make us laugh, that brings a quick hit of joy into our lives, and we treasure it for ever. In our memories, great comedies are pearls that become more burnished and beautiful through the years. Absence really does make the heart grow fonder.

So which comedy do you love? Which is a lifelong companion (pretty much all of them have second lives now on box sets, either physical DVDs or on streaming services)? Difficult, isn't it?

I've tried to narrow down my list of favourites. Where would life be without Father Ted? Or Hancock's Half-Hour (showing my age there, though I was a child when I first fell in love with the Man Himself)?

The Young Ones and Blackadder will always have a piece of my heart... I'll never forget watching the first ever episode of The League of Gentlemen, which I'd loved on Radio 4. "You've got to watch this," I told everyone who stood still long enough to listen. Then there was Spaced... Green Wing... Peep Show.

More recently, my heart's been lifted by the quietly brilliant Detectorists, a love letter to the English countryside, and This Country, which so pitch-perfectly nails the boredom of growing up in a small town. In this case a small town in the Cotswolds, home to cousins Kerry and Kurtan Mucklowe (creators/writers Daisy May Cooper and Charlie Cooper).

This Country is so sharply observed, with its ears attuned to the little details like the urban myths/folklore of tiny communities (the fox twins who live in the woods!) and its oddballs (Big Mand and her collection of soft-toy meerkats "from a non-smoking home").

But on with the show. Here is the Radio Times list of the 20 greatest sitcoms ever – let the debate begin....

DON SMITH/RADIO TIMES

20 Whatever Happened to the Likely Lads?

1973–74, BBC1 TV revivals are currently ten-a-penny, but back in 1973, it was a real novelty when Geordie friends Bob (Rodney Bewes) and Terry (James Bolam) got back together after seven years apart. In a mature and melancholy sequel filled with pathos, class differences are spotlighted, as an unreconstructed Terry pricks the pretensions of the aspiring Bob, who is desperate to cling on to the bourgeois life he now has with fiancée Thelma (Brigit Forsyth). It was a set-up that spoke to Red Dwarf co-creator Doug Naylor: "It heralded a new kind of sitcom and felt real in a way that nothing quite had until this came along." DB

19 Detectorists

2014–17, BBC4 Is there a more beautiful-looking sitcom on the list? Three small but perfectly formed series followed nerdy-but-nice mates Andy (writer Mackenzie Crook) and Lance (Toby Jones) as they waved their metal detectors over the fields of Essex in search of gold. Such a niche furrow proved surprisingly rich and relatable, while their friends and family helped mine sparkling comic gems and heart-rending pathos. Gerard Horan as upright club president Terry and Sophie Thompson as his deceptively ditsy wife Sheila could easily have had a spin-off. And the subsurface message about what constitutes the real treasure of life was clarity itself. MB

18 The Good Life

17 Gavin & Stacey

2007–10, BBC3, BBC1 James Corden and Ruth Jones's beloved sitcom had scene-stealing turns from Jones's Nessa and her oblique references to all the celebs she'd been sexually involved with: "I just can't believe I'm pregnant by Smithy, out of all the people I've slept with, not Nigel Havers, John Prescott, not any of Goldie Lookin Chain!" Then there was Rob Brydon's heart-wrenching Bryn, Julia Davis's vicious Dawn and Alison Steadman as overly dramatic Pam. Kerry Howard, who starred in BBC3 hit Him & Her, says, "My whole family would watch and then we would talk about it the next day." KD

16 The Young Ones

1982–4, BBC2 The one true punk – or, technically, post-punk – sitcom, which ran for 12 episodes, was a surreal, politically charged student flatshare borne out of the early 80s "Alternative Comedy" boom and not aimed at your parents. "It was one of a kind and totally anarchic," say Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais. One episode even featured the Good Life credits sequence being torn up by mohican nihilist Vyvyan (Adrian Edmondson). With cool bands, philosophical references and DIY puppetry, it made household names of all involved, most notably co-writers Ben Elton and Rik Mayall. AC

15 The Fall and Rise of Reginald Perrin

14 The Vicar of Dibley

1994–2007, BBC1 The church had provided fuel for laughs before, but this particular comedy of clerical errors came vibrantly alive in the hands of Richard Curtis and Paul Mayhew-Archer. Written for Dawn French as maverick minister Geraldine Granger, it celebrated the eccentricity of both village life and the parochial mindset. Fans had their favourites, but Trevor Peacock's hilariously wayward Jim "no no" Trott and the much-missed Emma Chambers's kooky, big-hearted Alice the Verger stood out. Our panellist Kerry Howard says, "It was filled with a mad selection of oddball characters who made you laugh every week." MB

13 Peep Show

2003–15 C4 Peep Show achieved cult status with its perfect encapsulation of two mismatched, dysfunctional flatmates. The calamitous lives of repressed, uptight Mark (David Mitchell) and "work-shy freeloader" Jeremy (Robert Webb) were brought into focus like no British sitcom before it, due to the innovative use of point-of-view cameras and the insight viewers got into Mark and Jez's internalised thoughts – thoughts that were too self-destructive, awful, or hilarious and painfully true, to be spoken out loud. Also starring Olivia Colman, the very modern classic was written mostly by Jesse Armstrong and Sam Bain and ran for nine series that fans joyfully quote verbatim. FT

12 The Office

2001–3, BBC2, BBC1 David Brent's agonising attempts to be "a friend first, boss second, probably entertainer third" at a Slough paper company delivered pin-sharp lines and pathos aplenty throughout its 14 episodes. With beautifully crafted storylines and characters, it made global stars of its creators and stars. Richard Curtis cites the finale of Ricky Gervais and Stephen Merchant's mockumentary as the reason it's his favourite British sitcom of all time. "This just pips the others because of the remarkable love story – the return of Dawn to the party is such a wonderful, wonderful thing." FT

11 The Thick of It

2005–12 BBC4, BBC2 This sabre-toothed Armando Iannucci satire predicted endless Westminster omnishambles and will go down in TV history as one of British TV's finest offerings. Peter Capaldi's political schemer and master of the four-letter word Malcolm Tucker brutally hurled out abuse like, "I'd love to stop and chat but I'd rather have type 2 diabetes" and "Who was it that did your media training, Myra Hindley?" The politicians and civil servants working at the fictional Department of Social Affairs and Citizenship made for shockingly funny, sometimes surprisingly moving TV. KD

9 Absolutely Fabulous

1992–2012, BBC2, BBC1 The chain-smoking, champagne-guzzling Eddy (Jennifer Saunders) and Patsy (Joanna Lumley) made it OK for on-screen women to be outlandish, absurd and light years away from the clichéd long-suffering wife. In Saunders's pastiche of the fashion PR world the duo flailed around London being terribly important, sweetie, while also taking five-hour lunch breaks. Dick Clement cites this as one of his favourites, for being "completely original and unafraid to be un-PC", while producer/executive producer Jon Plowman says, "It had a great cast, great scripts and was played beautifully. The world of fashion and PR has only just recovered." KD

10 dinnerladies

1998–2000, BBC1 Everything about dinnerladies appears modest, from the lower-case "d" to the fact that all the action is confined to a factory canteen. But this being from the pen of Victoria Wood, the joke rate is phenomenally high. And, as we discover, all of human life can be found in this stringent setting. Over two series, we follow the hesitant courtship of Bren (Wood) and her world-weary boss Tony (Andrew Dunn), but each employee gets their moment to shine. "Wood's ability to deliver gags, tight plots and iconic characters make it a British classic," says Two Doors Down writer Simon Carlyle. DB

8 The Royle Family

1998–2012, BBC1 Sitcom gets a new lease of life thanks to Caroline Aherne and Craig Cash, who banished the traditional laughter track as well as slapstick plot contrivances and instead homed in on the intimacy of the Royles' front room. "It's a quintessential look at British family life with all its perfect imperfections," says actor and writer Vicki Pepperdine. "Brilliantly funny and totally believable, it's not afraid to make us cry as well as laugh." In the peerless Queen of Sheba episode, that marrying of comedy and tragedy comes to the fore as Barbara (Sue Johnston) styles the hair of her dying mam Norma (Liz Smith). Love, disappointment, respect, missed opportunity – it's all there. DB

7 Porridge

1973–8, BBC1 The ultimate confinement scenario could have been horribly depressing. It's the ultimate tribute to the show's writers, Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais, not only that it wasn't, but also that it was triumphantly funny. The daily trials of wily recidivist Norman Stanley Fletcher, his prickly rapport with cellmate Lennie Godber and their "little victories" against belt-and-braces warder Mr Mackay were peerlessly played by Ronnie Barker, Richard Beckinsale and Fulton Mackay over 21 tightly structured episodes. As Doug Naylor says, "Great scripts, massive laughs and Barker at the peak of his powers." MB

6 Only Fools and Horses

5 Dad's Army

1968–77, BBC1 It's a measure of the durability of Jimmy Perry and David Croft's sitcom that BBC2 repeats still attract one to two million viewers. And who hasn't heard the catchphrases "You stupid boy" or "Don't panic!"? The escapades of Walmington-on-Sea's wheezing Home Guard make for irresistible laughs, although more serious outings concerning conscientious objection and life-or-death predicaments are among the most memorable. As Stefan Golaszewski, writer of Mum says, "It's kind, humane and truthful." It ran for 80 episodes, spawned two films and has had three lost stories re-created by Gold – to air later this year. MB

4 Blackadder

1983–9, BBC1 The most successful historical sitcom to date, with its desert-dry British sense of humour and star turns from Rowan Atkinson and Tony Robinson, is "the gold standard for the number of jokes per minute," say Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais. For writer Caitlin Moran it was "a nuclear explosion of unhinged genius. It's got thousands of kids through history GCSE. Also: Queenie! Melchett! Nursie! Darling! Speckled Jim! And then the heartbreaking conclusion to Blackadder Goes Forth: a field of poppies, punching you right in the heart. Nothing can touch it." KD

3 I'm Alan Partridge

1997–2002, BBC2 It's not hard to see why BBC comedy controller Shane Allen dubs Partridge "the all-time greatest British comedy character creation". Whether ranting about local farmers or the pedestrianisation of Norwich city centre, his "small-minded pomposity and lack of self-awareness make for eternal comedy gold", notes Allen. Despite bouncing back this year on This Time, it's the two series of I'm Alan Partridge, written by Steve Coogan, Armando Iannucci and Peter Baynham, that was voted into third place by our panel. Men Behaving Badly writer Simon Nye calls the comedy "ground-breaking, consistently hilarious and even a little poignant". FT

2 Father Ted

1995–8, C4 The hilarious jams that Fathers Ted, Dougal and Jack got tangled up in – from a disastrous caravan holiday to getting trapped in very dark caves, all under the steam of copious cups of tea from housekeeper Mrs Doyle – created nothing short of sitcom magic. Writer/actor Mathew Baynton says the sitcom "has it all – broad and accessible, but also surreal and utterly bonkers", while Declan Lowney, who directed 17 episodes of Father Ted, adds: "Even if I hadn't directed it, this would be one of my favourite TV shows of all time. Graham Linehan and Arthur Mathews created something so special and beautiful." FT

A TOWERING ACHIEVEMENT

1 Fawlty Towers

1975–9, BBC2 With only 12 episodes but a lasting legacy, Fawlty Towers has been voted best ever British sitcom by our panel of 42 experts (see right). One comedian told RT that it was the only sitcom that had ever given him an asthma attack, another said John Cleese's Basil was the funniest depiction of failure they'd seen, while Barry Cryer feels that co-writer Connie Booth deserves more credit.

When RT revealed to Cleese and Booth that Fawlty Towers had topped the poll, here's what they said...

John Cleese "When Jimmy Gilbert, who'd directed me and the two Ronnies in The Frost Report, asked me if I'd write a pilot for a series, I called him back within two hours to say I'd discussed it with Connie and we wanted to base it on a hotel we'd both stayed at in Torquay. I was very lucky to be working at the BBC when decisions were taken by people who had actually made programmes. So Jimmy put John Howard Davies in charge. He'd directed the first six Monty Pythons. He suggested Prunella Scales for Sybil. I installed Andrew Sachs as Manuel. What a cast!

"It took Connie and me six weeks to write each episode – three weeks to construct the plot and three weeks to write the dialogue. Consequently, the scripts were much longer than the usual BBC sitcoms: 140 pages instead of the standard 65 pages. This meant that we played the scenes much faster than normal in BBC TV. We achieved this by rehearsing scenes many, many times and by not letting the audience's laughter slow us down. Stage actors have to wait for a laugh to subside before speaking more dialogue. I told newcomers not to wait that long, because there was a microphone over their heads which meant the audience at home would hear everything. A TV audience consists of one or two people and requires a faster pace than the theatre does.

"We were always writing against time, as we only had five days' rehearsal, then one day in the studio actually recording in front of an audience. So the recorded tape included lots of small mistakes, both acting and technical, but we were able to clean all this up afterwards, by spending up to 20 hours in the editing suite. It was pretty exhausting, but I'm proud we are up there with Porridge and Only Fools and Ab Fab and Blackadder and The Office and Reggie Perrin and The Thick of It."

Connie Booth "Fawlty Towers succeeds, I think, because it allows infantile rage and aggression a field day in a buttoned-down, well-mannered English society. It's unique in being a farce, with all the plot surprises and precision that the style requires. And it doesn't hurt that the star of the show is a six-foot-five comic genius; if he was shorter I can't imagine how it would have worked. Also, all the main characters are outsiders in their own way, which lends them a vulnerability that appeals to audiences and gets to their hearts."

Picture of protest

Lucy Kirkwood explains why the story told in Chimerica, based on her award-winning play, is more relevant than ever – and we meet the drama's star, Alessandro Nivola

CHIMERICA IS A thriller set against a backdrop of the watershed 2016 US presidential elections, and the human rights abuses of Xi Jinping's China.

But most of all it's a story about a photograph. A photograph of a man, standing in front of a tank, in the wake of three days of horrific bloodshed.

For six weeks in 1989, hundreds of thousands of Chinese citizens gathered in Tiananmen Square to demand freedom of the press, freedom of speech and democracy. The protest spread to over 400 cities, and at its highest point there were over a million people gathered in Beijing. The Party tried many methods to dissolve the protest, before sending troops into the square on the night of 3 June. In the ensuing atrocity, many thousands of people were killed by their own government.

In the years since, it has been erased from the history books, and though China has made the most extraordinary leap forward in economic terms, the freedoms those students were calling for have not arrived. It is, to some extent, as if those extraordinary months 30 years ago never even happened.

To be part of a modern protest movement is to know a small glimmer of that cycle of giddy optimism and disillusioned defeat. Over the course of the past century we have seen the protest march go from a meaningful lever of change to something easily dismissed by Western governments. If you care about climate change, austerity, Brexit, the question is not how to protest these things, but how to keep protesting when you are repeatedly ignored.

But this is what I find most meaningful about the Tank Man image: not that he stepped in front of that tank, but that he did it at the darkest hour. In the wake of the most brutal suppression, he stood up again. I find this a moving, stern reminder that the only meaningful political position, even in the face of despair, is hope.

BEHIND THE LENS
Alessandro Nivola plays photojournalist Lee Berger

'IT DOESN'T GET MORE RELEVANT'

THE STAR OF Channel 4's four-part adaptation of Chimerica is Alessandro Nivola, who plays photojournalist Lee Berger. For the purposes of the plot, Berger is the man who took the iconic "Tank Man" picture in Tiananmen Square in 1989, the day after the protest was brutally quashed by the Cinese authorities.

In an update to the play, which was set in

FAMOUS FIGURE
Chimerica imagines the life of a fictional photographer best known for his "Tank Man" picture, actually taken by Jeff Widener in Beijing's Tiananmen Square in June 1989

2012, the TV drama starts two weeks prior to Donald Trump's election in 2016, with Berger working in Syria but frustrated at the lack of attention the war there is receiving back home. To get the story on the front page he doctors one of his photographs, is caught out and quickly finds his career in ruins. But when he is tipped off that the tank man might still be alive and living in New York City, Berger embarks on an increasingly blinkered crusade to find him and salvage his reputation.

Chimerica is shot through with obvious topical relevance, including implicit criticism of Donald Trump and the forces that propelled him to power. But Nivola says that even though his own character is a "radical leftie", the four-part thriller is much more than just a polemic.

"You want things to have relevance and you want to be telling stories that feel like they're of the moment. But if something is set up purely as a one-sided argument, then more than anything I just find that pretty annoying."

'I used to get panic attacks; I couldn't handle auditions'

It does raise questions, however, about the moral ambiguities surrounding journalism in the current age, the dreaded "fake news", and the similarities and differences between the two big superpowers, China and America. Nivola takes out his phone and flicks to a screengrab. It's a story about China. "That's two days ago – front page of The New York Times. It doesn't get any more contemporary or relevant than that."

Chimerica's Berger is just the latest in a run of remarkable roles for 46-year-old Nivola: in the past five years he's appeared in acclaimed films such as American Hustle, Selma and A Most Violent Year. Most recently he starred in Disobedience opposite Rachel Weisz, for which he won a British Independent Film Award last year. ▷

REX/SHUTTERSTOCK

◁ His success is all the more remarkable for the fact that just a few years ago, his career was in danger of stalling altogether. "I became so terrified of auditioning that I stopped for about five years," he explains. "I only took work that was offered to me. I used to get panic attacks; I couldn't handle it. I would get so sweaty and my throat would seize up."

This could have been terminal for a career reliant on public performance. But digital technology offered Nivola a compromise: he started to film his own auditions at home – usually with his wife, Emily Mortimer, reading with him – and then send the results to casting directors.

"It enabled me to actually work on the scenes without the pressure of the situation tainting the whole process – all of the biggest jobs that I've got in the past five years have been from great auditions that I did on my own."

'You want to be telling stories that are of the moment'

PEOPLE POWER
A scene from Chimerica re-creating the 1989 protests in Beijing

THE IRONY IS that Chimerica marks the first time in a long while that Nivola has got to play a character from his home city of New York. He lives in Brooklyn with Mortimer and their two children. He's an affable, softly spoken man who blends in to the crowded bar in which we meet rather than turning heads.

Because of his name, you'd be forgiven for thinking he's Italian (his father's side of the family are Italian, but he was born in Boston, Massachusetts). Because of his career, or possibly his marriage, many people who've seen him on screen think he's British.

"It started with Michael Winterbottom, who brought me over to Britain in 1998 to do this movie called I Want You, which, like Disobedience, was with Rachel Weisz." Winterbottom cast Nivola to play an ex-convict who returns to Hastings – and his ex-girlfriend, played by Weisz – after a stint in Brixton prison.

"It was the most preposterous thing you could imagine – I'd only been to England for a week on holiday with my family when I was a kid – but it resulted in me being offered more and more work over here."

He next appeared in a 1999 film adaptation of Mansfield Park among an almost entirely British cast. And then Kenneth Branagh cast him in his version of Love's Labour's Lost, where he met Mortimer. With Shakespeare and Austen under his belt, the New Yorker was practically living the Eng Lit canon.

FILM-STAR FAMILY
Nivola with his wife, fellow actor Emily Mortimer

REX/SHUTTERSTOCK

"All the actors here who I knew at that time, like Jude Law and Damian Lewis, were going, 'What are you doing? We want to be working in Hollywood. Why are you coming here?'"

But the British work kept coming. He says winning a British Independent Film Award last year, therefore, had a particular significance: "It's the first time that the British film community has in some way acknowledged the fact that I have dedicated half of my career to playing English roles in English movies and not even necessarily in big, high-profile movies. I'm so grateful that by accident my career went that way because it opened up a wealth of roles."

He says that his wife – with whom he has a production company, which made the comedy Doll & Em, starring Mortimer and Dolly Wells, and which has been commissioned to make a series based on the Rumpole of the Bailey stories, written by Mortimer's father, John – would happily return to Britain. "She would love it if I would just bite the bullet and move here.

'I've dedicated half of my career to English roles'

My reluctance to actually live here full time has always been a bone of contention between us because really, in a perfect world, she would be living back home."

But Nivola won't be moving to England just yet – he has just landed a role in David Chase's Sopranos prequel, The Many Saints of Newark, playing Dickie Moltisanti, father of Christopher, who was played by Michael Imperioli in the original TV series.

"I have this career-defining role coming up and I'm just trying to appreciate it. I'm at an age now where I've clawed my way to being able to enjoy this moment. All this confusion about my name, where I am from and all this st is going to be put to rest – because finally I'm going to play a fricking Italian American!" BENJI WILSON

All four episodes of Chimerica will be available on All 4 after the first episode airs

IT'S ALL TO PLAY FOR

Game of Thrones is the biggest show on television. It's so big that nobody knows quite how many people are watching it – in 2017, the last series's opening episode was pirated an estimated 90 million times, on top of the 30 million American viewers who watched it legally. Add an extra 4.7 million in the UK and throw in viewership in an astonishing 184 other countries, and this is by far the biggest game in town.

Perhaps it should come as no surprise, therefore, that according to one of its stars, Emilia Clarke, the final, eighth series will be bigger still. "Bigger than anything we've ever done. Ten times bigger. It's like everything is on steroids," she says. For a show with larger budgets, a higher body count and more brazen spectacle than any other, the prospect of a steroid-fuelled rampage to the finish is something to savour.

There are six episodes left (four will be feature-length) and the writers insist that viewers who have invested eight years in the show's complex plotlines and multiple characters "won't feel cheated. We think it will end on a great foot," says writer and producer Dave Hill.

At its heart, Game of Thrones is a brutally simple show, best summarised by Cersei Lannister's (Lena Headey) line from the first series: "You win or you die. There is no middle ground." In six episodes' time someone will end up on the vaunted Iron Throne. It could be a Lannister, Cersei or her brother (and lover) Jaime (Nikolaj Coster-Waldau) or their brother Tyrion (Peter Dinklage). It could be Daenerys Targaryen (Emilia Clarke) or her new lover Jon Snow (Kit Harington). Or it might be a Stark, Sansa (Sophie Turner), Arya (Maisie Williams) or Bran (Isaac Hempstead Wright). Their enemies, most likely, will end up dead.

First, however, those grappling for power have a greater concern: at the end of the last series, the seventh in this epic retelling of George RR Martin's fantasy novels, the icy Night King and his army of undead (plus a dragon) breached the Wall that had been built to keep them out. They were last seen marauding southwards. It all leads towards what the producers have called the most epic spectacle the series has yet contrived. This battle to end all battles took 55 consecutive nights to film and cost $15 million.

"It's completely unprecedented on TV or film," says Bryan Cogman, co-executive producer and writer. "It's going to blow people away."

By the time the undead arrive at the Stark family's castle at Winterfell, Gwendoline Christie's Brienne of Tarth, along with Tyrion Lannister, Jon Snow and all of the Starks, will be assembled there to meet them.

"Brienne experiences real fear for the first time," says Christie. "This might be her last moment on earth. But then she's always been about the greater good: 'Better to die in good battle than bad death', as the saying goes."

And then on to the finish, with one goal above all others. "The overarching theme in the entire show, but especially in season eight, is power,"

'It's about what power does to people, and who deserves it'

EMILIA CLARKE

says Clarke, who is just one of the British actors whose careers were launched on the back of the bestselling franchise. "It's about what it does to people, what it actually is, who deserves it, what are the decisions that you have to make when you have it, what are the sacrifices that you have to make? I find it fascinating in the real world, too, looking at politicians. The amount of times that I read newspapers or shout at the TV, and then I think, 'I wonder... behind those closed doors, I wonder what deals you had to cut to get where you are?'"

LOVE HURTS
What will happen when Daenerys (Emilia Clarke) and Jon (Kit Harington) find out an uncomfortable secret?

Global blockbuster drama Game of Thrones is coming to an end – but who will triumph, and who will die?

For many of the Thrones cast, this is the end of the show that has made them famous. Maisie Williams was 12, a schoolgirl from Somerset, when she was cast as Arya; Isaac Hempstead Wright was ten, a schoolboy from Kent.

"This show has been half of my actual existence," says Hempstead Wright, who is now 20 and whose character, Bran, was pushed out of a window by Jaime Lannister in Game of Thrones's very first episode.

"The people on this show are like friends that have been there since the very beginning of us being actors," says Williams. "It's just really lovely knowing that they have watched you grow into the woman that you are now."

Set in a fantasy world, Game of Thrones has offered its cast experiences – and latterly great prosperity (the core cast are rumoured to be now earning more than $500,000 per episode) – that other shows could never provide.

"Getting to stand in front of 400 extras," says Clarke, "and speaking this fake language. Getting to walk through a fire, and getting to work alongside some incredible actors, and even getting to have opinions on how the show that you're in has a cultural relevance is ridiculous."

And the cast have acquired other skills. Williams, who is right-handed, has had to train so much using a sword in her left hand (her character Arya is left-handed) that she found herself drawing with her left hand the other day. "It was so weird! Game of Thrones has made me ambidextrous!"

Christie, who took up boxing in order to prepare for the role of the battle-hardened Brienne, wells up as she contemplates her character's end. "I do feel emotional about it – it's everything that the character has said to me and meant to me. I feel like she has been a part of a cultural movement that's demanded that women are seen in a different way."

There are some things, of course, that the cast won't miss. "While the show might have looked glamorous from the outside, it ain't all glamour on the inside!" says Clarke. "I won't miss the corset. The last couple of seasons, I felt like, 'Is this getting tighter or is it just me?'"

Joe Dempsie, who plays Gendry, also a possible contender for the Iron Throne ("Technically he's the last surviving blood Baratheon [another ruling family]: he's got to have a pretty strong claim") says that the tons of fake snow that were fired at the cast as they ventured into blizzards while filming "north of the Wall" in Northern Ireland and Iceland were his personal bugbear.

"I hated that stuff. You'd have snow coming out of your nose for days afterwards, in your throat... It got everywhere."

But then he also recognises how the hardships, such as they were, contributed to the end result. "You think back to the atmosphere that it created when you were shooting that scene," he says. "It all helps you get where you need to be as an actor."

As for the ending itself, the cast remain tight-lipped: one thing they've all learnt over the years is how to talk about Game of Thrones without revealing anything. But Christie does have one piece of advice for fans.

"You're going to need therapy. The show ending is going to send all of the world into [seeking] professional help." BENJI WILSON

THEY’RE BEHIND YOU! Mike (Kiell Smith-Bynoe) and Alison (Charlotte Ritchie) and the spooks of Button House

First it was Horrible Histories, the CBBC sketch show that launched in 2009 and made its name by being enjoyed just as much by adults as kids. Then it was Sky 1’s 2013 teatime fantasy sitcom Yonderland – fun for the whole family. But Ghosts, a new BBC1 haunted-house comedy from Pythonesque sextet Mathew Baynton, Martha Howe-Douglas, Jim Howick, Simon Farnaby, Laurence Rickard and Ben Willbond, is the troupe’s first foray past the watershed. There are creepy scares. There are risqué jokes. There’s a Tory MP who died in a sex scandal and now has to spend eternity with no trousers on. Should kids stay up to watch it anyway?

“I’d love them to,” says Rickard. “I’ve got a vivid memory of watching Life of Brian through the ripple glass in my parents’ very 80s living room doors because I knew I wasn’t supposed to be watching. I’d like it to feel a little bit edgy.”

“But also,” adds Baynton, “the kids who were watching Horrible Histories the first time around when it began with us in it are in their 20s now…”

“They have mortgages,” cuts in Howe-Douglas.

“Kids of their own,” laughs Howick.

Willbond: “Grand-kids!”

“…So hopefully we’re making something that will allow them to continue to watch us.”

‘It feels like we’re sticking our heads above the parapet’

LAURENCE RICKARD

Ghosts is, essentially, a house-share sitcom – the twist being that the flatmates can never leave. They are instead anchored to the crumbling country pile of Button House, home to a community of restless spirits who have died there over the centuries. It’s an idea the troupe initially gave up on. After all, they thought, where’s the jeopardy if they can’t die? Where’s the drama, the stakes?

“But then we realised that was the point,” explains Baynton. “It’s about the boredom of forever. It’s about stories that are really domestic and petty.”

“My favourite scenes are those where we’re arguing over ridiculously tiny things that have become so important because it’s all we’ve got,” says Farnaby, whom you may recognise as Philip (aka Art) from BBC4 comedy Detectorists. “There’s something a bit Waiting for Godot about it.”

The ghosts themselves are each absurd products of their time. Rickard’s Robin, for example, is a caveman who’s been there since the beginning (and thus is a “wise old sage who speaks through the filter of a dog”). While others include a terrible Victorian poet called Thomas (Baynton); Lady Button (Howe-Douglas), an Edwardian matriarch in the hyper-haughty mould of Violet Crawley; a bossy Second World War captain (Willbond); a cheery 80s scout leader called Pat with an arrow stuck through his neck (Howick); and Julian, the aforementioned trouser-less MP, a relic from the “get on your bike” age, played by Farnaby. “I got the part because I’ve got the best legs,” he says.

The ghosts mainly spend their time squabbling (Julian, for instance, sees poet Thomas as a “work-shy layabout”), reminiscing about being alive (they hold a Food Club, where they talk about what it was like to eat an egg), and showing off their special powers. Robin can make lights flicker. Julian has the remarkable ability to push a cup off a table.

But all of that is disrupted with the arrival of a young (alive) couple: Mike, played by the relatively unknown Kiell Smith-Bynoe, and Alison, played by Charlotte Ritchie, who left Call the Midwife last year to pursue projects exactly like this. “I watched the series [of Midwife] that just finished and I felt a bit like a ghost myself,” she says, laughing, “just watching my friends live on, wishing I could walk among them again. But there’s something comforting in missing something like that, because it means you did actually love it… I just never wanted to stand still for too long.”

Mike and Alison’s plan to turn Button House into a hotel sends the ghosts into panic mode. They pool their supernatural resources and embark on a woeful campaign to scare the invaders away. On screen, this translates to hilarious scenes where the ghosts’ efforts are juxtaposed with Mike and Alison nonchalantly going about their business. But in reality this required scenes to be shot several times over, both with and without ghosts, and for Smith-Bynoe and Ritchie to get used to acting as if their co-stars weren’t there.

“Looking through people and not reacting to things you can hear was a challenge,” says Ritchie. “But thankfully I didn’t have to do that for long. By the end of the first episode something happens that means that Alison can suddenly see them. And her reaction is pure terror.”

Even scarier than that though – at least for the central sextet – is the prospect of airing on primetime BBC1, of taking their surreal sense of silliness, the spirit of Horrible Histories, and plonking it in front of their largest audience yet.

“It does feel like we’re sticking our heads above the parapet,” says Rickard. “But there’s this idea in comedy that to be taken seriously you have to air at 10pm on BBC2, and that BBC1 is too big and broad. But this is the tone of what we do and this is what we want to be doing.”

“There hasn’t been any pressure at any point to make it any less distinctive,” agrees Baynton. “So many times while filming this we’ve stopped to look at each other and say, ‘BBC1 are letting us do this!’” STEPHEN KELLY

The Massacre That Shook the Empire

The 1919 Amritsar massacre is a pivotal moment in history. So why does no one know about it, asks Sathnam Sanghera

I KNOW I WASN'T selected by Channel 4 to present a documentary to mark the centenary of the Jallianwala Bagh Massacre of 1919 for my historical expertise, because I discovered, while making it, that I don't have any. I may have had a conventionally "good" British education, attending a grammar school and Cambridge University, and I may, as a British Punjabi, have a story that connects me to Amritsar, the city where it happened, but it all left me knowing as much about the British Empire as I do about palaeontology.

Looking back, it's astonishing that even when we examined events with a distinct Empire dimension at school, it wasn't mentioned. Meanwhile, my Sikh parents, who emigrated to Wolverhampton in 1968, rarely mentioned the Empire, beyond telling me vaguely that Sikhs fought both for and against the British. Most of my knowledge of what happened on 13 April

'Even with an event as brutal, the real history is complex'

1919, when Brigadier General Reginald Dyer ordered his troops to open fire on thousands of unarmed Indians, killing at least 379 of them, came from watching the film Gandhi.

It transpires I'm not alone in my ignorance. The other day I met a journalist who studied history at Oxford who didn't know the most basic facts about what happened at Jallianwala Bagh, when Britain began to lose its grasp on the biggest empire in history and India took a step towards becoming an independent democracy. When I mention the massacre to fellow British Sikhs, they often confuse it with the Indian government's actions against Sikhs during Operation Blue Star in 1984.

Then, in the course of making the documentary, I met a great-granddaughter of Brig-Gen Dyer, whose sentimental familial attachment led to her painting a picture of the "Butcher of Amritsar" as a misunderstood individual who loved Indians and who was only doing what his commanders told him (even though Dyer repeatedly admitted he chose to do it himself); who claimed that the crowd in the Jallianwala Bagh were looting and armed (for which there is no evidence at all); and insisted that the victims didn't include women or children (the official list of victims included more than 40 children, 15 of them aged 15 or younger, some as young as one year old, and women, too).

I also met two of the grandchildren of Ronald Beckett (the assistant commissioner in Amritsar in 1919), who claimed the organisers of the meeting in Jallianwala Bagh deliberately locked the gates (not true); that soldiers shot above the heads of the crowd (bullet holes in the Bagh, still visible today, prove otherwise); that most people weren't killed by bullets but by being crushed trying to escape (no evidence); and that if I had been there I would, as a Sikh, have been cheering Dyer (definitely not true: I would have been at risk of being shot).

THE MISINFORMATION EXTENDS to India, too. The area of scrubland where at least 102 Sikhs, 217 Hindus and 57 Muslims were killed and thousands others were injured is now a highly cultivated memorial park, but it has also become a nationalist monument. A sign at a well informs the public that "about 120 dead bodies were recovered from it", a claim for which there is no real evidence, according to Dr Kim A Wagner, senior lecturer in British imperial history at Queen Mary University of London, who has investigated the events for his searing new book Amritsar 1919. Elsewhere, a sign says that "about 2,000 patriots were martyred", when the official figure is 379, and Wagner estimates the death toll at "between 500 and 600".

Does any of this matter? Yes. You only need to look at America and its failure to confront what happened with slavery to see that if a nation doesn't face up to the brutal facts of its history, you get dysfunction. And our failure to face up to the damaging legacy of Empire is responsible for the shaping of all sorts of strange attitudes in contemporary Britain. The other month Winston Churchill was making headlines from beyond the grave as Green MSP Ross Greer insisted the statesman was a "white supremacist" and a "mass murderer" in response to a Conservative Party tweet describing him as the "greatest Briton to have ever lived" (as if it isn't possible for historical figures to be complicated).

On university campuses, efforts to "decolonise" are leading to campaigns to tear down statues and portraits of Imperial figures, seemingly not realising that if you remove all traces of these people, you also help wipe out the memories of their victims. Much better to follow the example of the guerrilla artist in Bristol who recently depicted 100 human figures lying in front of the statue of slave-trader merchant Edward Colston, representing the 80,000 men, women and children he is believed to have transported from Africa to the Americas.

With Brexit, you regularly get people pointing at the Empire as an example of what Britain has achieved and could achieve again (oblivious to the violence and institutional racism involved). There remains a widespread view, as a result of the national focus on the Second World War, that Britons have always been the good guys. (What about the concentration camps of South Africa? The Mau Mau?)

I GUESS EMPIRE HAS become another aspect of tribal identity politics, but even with an event as brutal as Jallianwala Bagh, the real history is complex. I was floored to discover there were probably Sikhs among the troops who shot into the crowd. Also, it was heartbreaking to discover that the people targeted by Dyer, and those who had rioted in Amritsar beforehand, were not even particularly anti-British. As Dr Wagner describes in his book, at one point a part of the Indian mob assembled by a statue of Queen Victoria. People were beating the statue when some volunteers intervened, saying that "we had suffered no taklif [misery] during the Queen's raj". Apart from a finger broken off, the statue remained undamaged. Or, to put it another way, history is not always black and white.

THE BUTCHER
Brig-Gen Dyer issued the order to fire; a later inquiry, reported in The Times (below), described his actions as "a grave error"

United's manager Ole Gunnar Solskjaer has nerves of steel

Champions League: Barcelona v Manchester Utd Tue 7pm (k/o 8pm) BT Sport 2, 8pm 5 Live

Ole Gunnar Solskjaer never did anything remarkable on a football pitch. It was the result of what he did that was remarkable. He was technically adept all right, and could hit a football pretty straight, but quite a lot of footballers can do that. What he could do – something very few players can – was hit the ball straight when the target was the goal.

That's what takes some doing, and it's why the top strikers get paid big money. Solskjaer, with a contract to manage Manchester United for the next three years, now has the perfect opportunity to exercise the same sort of skills in a slightly different context: to do a very simple job in the coolest possible fashion when the stakes are quite dizzyingly high.

This week, his team have two matches of pretty dizzying importance: on Saturday they are at home at Old Trafford, playing West Ham in the league – a game they need to win to keep their top-four ambitions on track – and then on Tuesday they are at the Camp Nou taking on Barcelona in the second leg of their quarter-final in the Champions League, United's one hope of a trophy this season.

'Solskjaer has shown that United are again a team to be feared'

Barcelona! In the Champions League final of 1999 at Camp Nou, Solskjaer was brought on as a late substitute for Manchester United against Bayern Munich. More than two minutes into stoppage time, with the scores level, United won a corner and the Norwegian volleyed a sharp downward header from Teddy Sheringham into the roof of the net and United won the game, completing a treble after victories in the Premier League and the FA Cup. How many people could score like that when they knew that the entire world – or so it seemed – depended on it?

I came up with an image for big-time sport and what it's like for the people who play it. It's been much borrowed (but you're very welcome) and goes like this: you're walking along the kerb, with the gutter about three inches below. We can most of us do that all right, yes? But what if the distance between kerb and gutter was, say, a mile? How would you manage your very best walking skills then?

That day in Barcelona, almost ten years ago, Solskjaer performed the trick of kerb-walking to perfection. And so far, as manager of Manchester United, he has done exactly the same thing.

How hard can it be to get some of the best players in the world to play decent football? Solskjaer came in to manage a world-class squad, but one that had been sulky, miserable and depressed under the previous manager, Jose Mourinho. All Solskjaer had to do was release them from their chains.

He got them on the rebound, and he made the most of it. But his run of success – albeit with one or two blips – has gone beyond the traditional bounce under a new manager. He has shown that Manchester United are once again a team to be feared.

The tests get tougher, and playing Barça in Barcelona is about as tough as it gets: a match in which the distance between kerb and gutter makes you dizzy. The decisions Solskjaer makes will be revealing, and they'll show us if he really is a manager for the long term.

So far Solskjaer seems to be a man immune to the troubles of vertigo. He sees the comfortable width of the kerbstone, not the abyss below his toes, and carries on putting one foot after another. It's a method that has worked for him in Barcelona before now.

The next big thing

Jessie Buckley has come a long way from her debut on a TV talent show – but Wild Rose will make her a star

ALLSTAR

This is how it normally goes when you interview a film star. You're taken into a plush hotel room with no bed and an armchair placed slightly too far from the sofa. The star sits on the sofa sipping room-temperature water and tries not to look bored. Sometimes a publicist sits nearby. It can be unsatisfying and uncomfortable.

Though on the cusp of a glittering film career, this is not how Jessie Buckley does things. As soon as I walk into the room, she jumps up and suggests we leave the hotel and go for a walk. Then she remembers she has a day of interviews ahead and has to stay inside while the sun shines brightly outside. Still, her spirit is indefatigable. She is open, funny, smart and emotionally intelligent, with the kind of megawatt smile that could warm even the gloomiest of spaces.

She talks about acting with a feverish enthusiasm that mirrors her screen presence, explaining she only responds to scripts that make her "really feel something. What I look for is the chance to let the wolves inside me run."

In 2017 Buckley was named one of Bafta's 20 Breakthrough Brits and this year she was nominated for the Bafta EE Rising Star award. At 29, she hasn't been an overnight success, however. When she was just 17, she left Killarney in County Kerry, south-west Ireland, to take part in Andrew Lloyd Webber's 2008 BBC1 talent show I'd Do Anything.

"It was a pretty awesome experience," she says, almost overfilling a glass with fizzy water. "But I was very young. I had no training or technique. I was just trying not to look like a complete tit from the country alongside all these people who had already been in the West End."

As runner-up, Buckley's prize was to understudy the winner in the role of Nancy in a West End revival of the musical Oliver! But she turned it down in favour of a part in Trevor Nunn's 2008 production of the Sondheim musical A Little Night Music. After graduating from Rada, she played Miranda in The Tempest at Shakespeare's Globe (2013) and hasn't stopped working since. Perdita in Kenneth Branagh's production of The Winter's Tale was followed by three BBC series – War and Peace (as the isolated Marya Bolkonskaya), The Last Post and The Woman in White – and also the acclaimed indie thriller Beast, as the quasi-feral Moll.

But it's the comedy drama Wild Rose (in cinemas from Friday 12 April) that will surely make her name. Her character Rose-Lynn Harlan is a single mum fresh out of jail in Glasgow, who's hell-bent on becoming a country music star, even, it appears, at the expense of her young kids.

Much like a country song, her bittersweet story is about tragedy, comedy, sacrifice and redemption. It's a perfect vehicle for Buckley, who co-wrote some of the songs as well as singing them all. Her acting is so naturalistic, so without strings, that she makes it look easy while sharing the screen with titans Julie Walters and Sophie Okonedo.

She shakes her head. "It was a struggle for me. I got scared. I had panic attacks throughout the entire film. I was exhausted. My skin got really bad. There was a lot of risk – with the Glasgow accent and I'd never sung country before – and I had to be prepared to fail lots."

Was she a cool kid? "No! I was overweight and had massive gappy teeth and went to 'harp camp' in my spare time. I'm the oldest of five. My mum was a singer and my dad ran a guesthouse. There is a huge respect for artistry in my family. My parents put no value on materialism. It was – and still is – a loud, mad house."

STAR QUALITY
Jessie Buckley in Wild Rose; and (left) the BBC's Woman in White

Buckley went to convent school and says the nuns were "excellent", but elsewhere she has said she was pushed too hard. "Straight after school I applied to the Guildford School of Acting and was rejected. In hindsight, I'm glad I didn't get in because I was suffering from depression at the time and I just needed to stay home for six months and do life for a while. I felt I was in danger of losing something of myself if I didn't and I couldn't take that risk."

Buckley certainly gives something of herself away every time she performs – she's a hugely generous actor. It's no wonder then that she has so many projects coming up. They include Chernobyl, a Sky/HBO mini-series; the film Misbehaviour, starring Keira Knightley, about the women who disrupted the 1970 Miss World beauty contest ("You don't often get the platform to be irreverent as a woman; it was really fun"); and Judy, about Judy Garland's sold-out 1968 London concerts ("Renée Zellweger gives the most amazing performance as Judy").

So, is superstardom just around the corner for Buckley? She shakes her head. "I only want to think about the work. I want to take risks. That's why I go to the edge of the cliff and try to kiss someone." She laughs. "I want maximum intensity in my life at all times."

Is she a risk-taker? She pauses and then bursts out laughing. "What do you think?"

It's not a rhetorical question; she wants an answer. OK. There is the moment she's referring to in Beast, where Moll stands precariously close to the edge of a cliff and kisses her boyfriend Pascal (Johnny Flynn) for the first time. I think that's how she acts: fearless yet warm-hearted.

Buckley screams with delight. "That is the best thing anyone has ever said to me. Well done. Let's ditch the interview and go for a walk instead. I'd love that." AMY RAPHAEL

Marvel of science

Martial arts is usually enough of a fighting skill for a Marvel Comics hero, who is generally superhuman rather than supernatural. But not for Dr Stephen Strange, introduced to the page in 1963 as the Emperor Ming-like "master of black magic... never have you known his like!" Let's scroll past the two TV movies bearing his name in 1978 and 2007 and offer a round of applause for his big, marquee entrance in 2016.

Made flesh by Benedict Cumberbatch (pictured below), who'd earned his fantasy stripes playing the dragon Smaug in The Hobbit and Khan in Star Trek into Darkness, Dr Strange is first seen as Stephen, a rich, flash, self-worshipping neurosurgeon who loses the use of his hands in a car crash and, running out of conventional procedures, turns to Eastern spirituality. He learns mystical powers from his mentor Mordo (Chiwetel Ejiofor) and cueball-headed healer the Ancient One (Tilda Swinton) – who blows Strange's mind with her talk of "reorienting the spirit".

Duly instructed in the arts of mind over matter, and handily given access to instant portals, a levitation cloak and the ability to bend time, Dr Strange turns full superhero. His first target is Mads Mikkelsen's rogue mystic, earlier seen stealing pages from a book in Kathmandu while buildings fold in around him like the ones in Inception. When the action hots up, another city sees the same spectacle – all of it (notably the nuanced special effects) a credit to fast-learning horror director Scott Derrickson, here commanding a $200 million production pot, when his biggest budget so far (for The Day the Earth Stood Still) had been $80 million.

For all the conceptual mumbo-jumbo – Dr Strange was popular with hippies in his early comics days – there's plenty of wry humour. "What's in that tea?" Cumberbatch demands of Swinton after his first cosmic experience, in a rasping voice that must have required a lot of Strepsils. This doctor is just what the Marvel Cinematic Universe ordered.

FILM OF THE DAY

DID YOU KNOW? Jennifer Lawrence did her own singing on rebel anthem The Hanging Tree, which became a huge hit on iTunes and Spotify

The Hunger Games: Mockingjay Part 1 ★★★★ 9.00-11.20pm E4 12

ADVENTURE Here's my refrain when faced with the Hunger Games films: "They're not aimed at me." I find it hard to empathise with today's young adults, who seem uniquely preoccupied with overturning the dystopian futures of tomorrow in novel-adapted trilogies. That said, I've mostly enjoyed the saga. Its industry-standard two-part finale allows in-house director Francis Lawrence to deliver plenty of jeopardy and revelation, with the decorously bloodless violence toned down to a 12 certificate. Jennifer Lawrence grows with the series as Katniss, and in this penultimate outing is literally underground, plotting a lock-and-load rebellion under is-she-or-isn't-she-a-goodie Julianne Moore, with poor old Peeta (Josh Hutcherson) coerced into broadcasting propaganda from the Capitol. There's a drop-off in action – unless you count endless training sequences – but a mass suicide attack on a dam is impressive, and as long as you can get into the politics, you'll survive until the higher-stakes Part 2. (US 2014, some violence, HD)

DAYTIME

Planes ★★★ 10.05-11.30am BBC2 U

ADVENTURE DisneyToon Studios picks up the Pixar baton with this familiar underdog tale that is, essentially, an airborne Cars. The story centres on crop duster Dusty (voiced by Dane Cook), who enters a "Wings around the Globe" race despite being scared of heights. Will he conquer his fears and let his ambition take flight? The fast-paced action is sure to thrill youngsters and older viewers will enjoy in-jokes and one-liners, while the excitement builds from an unpromising start. AJ (US 2013, HD)

Shark Tale ★★★ 11.00am-12.50pm Film4 U

ADVENTURE Owing to the huge success of Pixar movies such as Toy Story and Monsters, Inc, a computer-animated feature must be extra special to impress, so this DreamWorks comedy disappoints a little with the story of a fish (voiced by Will Smith) posing as a shark-killing hero with the aid of a vegetarian great white (Jack Black). It's kept buoyant by cheeky humour and adult-friendly skits, but the aquatic world has a humanised slant that renders it rather charmless. The voice casting is more imaginative, with Robert De Niro's Mafioso shark and Martin Scorsese's crooked puffer fish delightfully memorable. SF (US 2004, HD)

EVENING

For Those in Peril ★★★ 8.05-9.25pm Talking Pictures TV U

WAR DRAMA Documentarist Harry Watt and future Ealing comedy scribe TEB Clarke unite for this flag-waver with a uniquely realist edge. Charles Crichton made his directorial debut with the bullish tale of the rivalry between David Farrar's air-sea rescue unit and a bigger patrol boat. The action does sag as pilot Ralph Michael learns the importance of teamwork, but scenes in which he races to rescue survivors before the Nazis get to them have an exciting, pseudo-newsreel feel thanks to Douglas Slocombe's fine photography. DP (UK 1943, BW)

Wakefield ★★★ 9.00-11.05pm AMC (Sky 192, BT 332) 15

DRAMA What if a dutiful husband and father chose not to return home one evening, and found he preferred his new life? This modern-day parable sees Bryan Cranston bring brittle geniality – and a hint of madness – to suburban New York lawyer Howard Wakefield. After an altercation with a racoon, he ends up sleeping above his own garage, prompting his wife (Jennifer Garner) to report him as missing. Adapted from EL Doctorow's New Yorker short story, it's thought-provoking but easier to buy into on the page than on screen, with Wakefield himself coming across as borderline creepy. AC (US 2016, swearing)

Red ★★ 10.00pm-12.10am C4 12

ACTION COMEDY This tongue-in-cheek espionage affair stars Bruce Willis as an ex-CIA operative whose peace is disturbed by gun-toting assailants. It's time to get the old gang back together as Robert Schwentke's film plays its trump card, a stellar cast: Helen Mirren, Brian Cox, John Malkovich and Morgan Freeman. All seems set for a jaunty spy caper, but the film simply runs out of steam. While there's the occasional twinkle from distinguished performers not taking it too seriously, the film is by and large a waste of their talents. TJ (US 2010, violence, swearing, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Zero Dark Thirty ★★★★ 10.35pm-1.30am ITV 15

THRILLER The hunt for Osama Bin Laden is catalogued in forensic detail in this wordy but well-paced thriller from the makers of The Hurt Locker. Driven CIA operative Maya (Jessica Chastain) chases leads across the globe, often clashing with her bosses in the United States. Director Kathryn Bigelow skilfully presents a cohesive narrative out of potentially confusing material, with torture scenes that have provoked much controversy. Chastain's Oscar-nominated performance occasionally veers towards the histrionic, but her character (inspired by a real agent) gives the film a strong human core as it leads up to a thrilling assault on Bin Laden's hideout. TeS (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

John Carter ★★★ 12 midnight-2.00am BBC2 12

FANTASY A commercial bomb, this sci-fi fantasy is not the disaster its reputation suggests. Based on Edgar Rice Burroughs's A Princess of Mars, it sees Civil War veteran Carter (Taylor Kitsch) sent to Mars, where he discovers superhuman strength and the hero inside himself. Its earnest Boys' Own approach means harmless, family-friendly fun – more Jason and the Argonauts than Avatar. Its plot is thin, and director Andrew Stanton (WALL-E) seems out of sorts with live actors, but there is action aplenty and a very funny CGI creature. AC (US 2012, violence, HD)

Lay the Favorite ★★★ 12.15-1.45am BBC1 15

COMEDY Rebecca Hall shows off her comic chops in a giddy fact-based romp set in the world of professional betting, playing a ditzy former dancer with a gift for numbers who ends up as the good-luck charm for a fretful gambler (Bruce Willis). Until it all goes wrong and Hall is driven into the arms of journalist Joshua Jackson and Willis's rival New York bookie, Vince Vaughn. It's a little uneven but director Stephen Frears's comedic touch is fantastically feel-good, and Catherine Zeta-Jones is laugh-out-loud funny as Willis's wife. KK (US 2012, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Ides of March ★★★★

11.30pm-1.00am BBC1 15

DRAMA I'm a sucker for high-wire dramas set in the world of US politics – although whether the Trump administration will ever be enshrined in anything but black comedy is moot. Not everything George Clooney touches turns to gold, but he's had a good few terms on top and shines as director, co-writer and star of this fast-talking tale of electioneering. He plays a super-smooth Democratic candidate, while his campaign staff are idealistic Ryan Gosling and old-school Philip Seymour Hoffman, with serpentine Paul Giamatti working for the rival team (and limbering up to play a US attorney five years later in TV series Billions). It's based on a play by Beau Willimon (House of Cards), so what could possibly go wrong? Not much. When Clooney's candidate is mired in scandal, the fallout plays out in bars and hotel rooms, in the verbose style of Aaron Sorkin. But it never quite reaches the heights of The West Wing. (US 2011, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW? When Barack Obama asked George Clooney if the film should be shown at the White House, Clooney replied: "Absolutely not!"

DAYTIME

The Love Punch ★★★★

2.15-4.05pm C5 12

CAPER Emma Thompson reteams with Last Chance Harvey writer/director Joel Hopkins, this time opposite Pierce Brosnan in a screwball caper about a divorced couple trying to steal a gem from the fat cat (Laurent Lafitte) who spent their pension fund. Thompson and Brosnan are giddy as schoolkids on a mission that takes them to the French Riviera, where they scale cliffs, get into car chases, and, yes, fall in love again. If the plot is a bit clumsy, it's more than made up for by sheer exuberance. SP (UK/Fr 2013, swearing, sexual references)

Titanic ★★★★ 2.30-6.10pm E4 12

DISASTER On the anniversary of the date on which the tragic Titanic hit an iceberg, here are two love stories in one epic film: the first between James Cameron and a ship; the second between society girl Kate Winslet and third-class passenger Leonardo DiCaprio. It's a sumptuous assault on the emotions, with a final act that fully captures the paralysing fear of the moment. One of the most expensive movies ever made, it grossed nearly two billion dollars at the box office and won 11 Oscars, sharing the record haul of Academy Awards. AT (US 1997, nudity, edited for language, violence, HD)

EVENING

The Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King ★★★★★

6.40-10.30pm ITV2 12

FANTASY Peter Jackson deservedly won the best director Oscar for this powerful and enchanting conclusion to his hugely ambitious adaptation of JRR Tolkien's trilogy. It was the first fantasy film to receive the best picture Oscar, and won awards in all the categories it was nominated for, matching Titanic's record haul. One staggeringly beautiful sight follows another as the brilliant ensemble cast brings Tolkien's classic to life, with the action picking up from The Two Towers as Frodo crawls to Mount Doom to finally destroy the ring. Jackson's loyalty to Tolkien's text means certain characters get little screen time, and the ending does drag on. But these are minor gripes considering his towering achievement in creating a timeless, literate and passionate masterpiece. AJ (NZ/US/Ger 2003, violence, HD)

Strictly Ballroom ★★★★★

7.00-9.00pm Paramount Network PG

ROMANTIC COMEDY Feel-good movies don't come any better than this Australian smash hit, which is an exuberant joy from sequined start to feathered finish. Come Dancing meets Footloose when rebel ballroom star Paul Mercurio hesitantly teams up with ugly duckling novice Tara Morice for an important contest. Will love be in the air? What do you think! Kitsch and corny, this hilarious and heart-warming romantic comedy drama is the ideal pick-me-up. AJ (Aus 1992, swearing, HD)

Sahara ★★★

9.00-11.25pm Film4 12

ADVENTURE With its treasure hunters and American Civil War backstory, Sahara prompts obvious comparison with 2004's National Treasure. But this also belongs to a long literary and cinematic tradition that includes Allan Quatermain, Indiana Jones and the stories of Kipling. Here the hero is author Clive Cussler's creation Dirk Pitt (Matthew McConaughey), an adventurer and salvage expert who finds evidence that a long-lost Civil War battleship may have ended up in the desert in West Africa. Along for the ride are Steve Zahn as Pitt's sidekick, and Penélope Cruz as a doctor investigating a possible plague outbreak. Throw in a local dictator, Tuareg tribesmen and the odd camel, and you have the convoluted and at times incomprehensible plot. However, the action sequences are impressive, the locations and villains suitably exotic, and it's good fun when taken with a large pinch of salt. BP (US/Sp/Ger 2005, some violence, HD)

Where did the money go?, p62

Transsiberian ★★★

9.00-11.15pm Sony Movie Channel 15

THRILLER Ben Kingsley's Russian narcotics detective investigates an apparent gang killing in Vladivostok, while an American couple Roy (Woody Harrelson) and Jessie (Emily Mortimer) embark on a long train journey across Siberia. They share a compartment with a worldly Spaniard and his taciturn, young American girlfriend. But needless to say all is not as it seems... Director Brad Anderson's thriller has as many twists and turns as a theme-park train ride. With numerous nods to Hitchcock, it is in turn intriguing, clever, implausible and scary. Though it does perhaps go off the rails towards the end, what is truly original and unsettling is the way the film combines the claustrophobic confines of the train with the vast, chilly nothingness of the landscape. BP (Ger/Sp/UK/Lith 2008, violence, swearing)

The Hangover: Part II ★★★

10.00pm-12.05am C5 15

COMEDY Following the wildly successful 2009 comedy, this sequel takes us on another trip to even more "far out" realms. Bangkok is a menacing backdrop compared to glitzy Las Vegas, but the scene is otherwise the same with Phil, Alan and Stu (Bradley Cooper, Zach Galifianakis and Ed Helms) waking up minus one of their stag party – Teddy (Mason Lee), the brother of Stu's bride-to-be, whose severed finger offers the only clue as to what happened the night before. Director/co-writer Todd Phillips essentially retraces steps from the first film and refreshes old jokes, such as Stu falling foul of another stripper. Galifianakis is just as goofy and Cooper as nonchalant, but it's the less flashy Helms who unites the team. The trio's sheer haplessness is still funny, even when they're sober. SP (US 2011, drug abuse, nudity edited for language, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Top Five ★★★

11.55pm-1.40am C4 15

COMEDY Chris Rock shows maturity in his third film as writer/director by courageously offering up his neuroses and dubious career choices for consideration and ridicule. He plays a successful but critically maligned actor who decides to reinvent himself, and the result is a loose, talky comedy that delivers on and subverts expectations. Outrageously enjoyable cameos (most memorably from Jerry Seinfeld and DMX) bolster its entertainment value, but the broad humour and delicate introspection don't always gel, and it could have done with a stronger hand behind the camera. EAS (US 2014, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, sexual references, HD)

Root for wildlife

Become a member of the Woodland Trust to help give the UK's wildlife a future

Many people will have spent their childhoods playing in the woods, whether spending long summer days picking blackberries, climbing the branches of vast old oak trees or gathering sticks and brush for a secret den. Meanwhile, creatures such as tiny dormice, spiky hedgehogs and even glorious red squirrels would have also called the woods home.

Such special times may not be possible for your grandchildren, though. Threats like tree disease and climate change are putting the UK's woodland at risk, along with all the wildlife that depends on it for survival. And that's not all: over the past 100 years, England and Wales have lost 90 per cent of coppiced woodland, while 774 ancient woodland sites are known to have suffered loss or damage since 1999. More than 800 are under threat right now.

The good news is that the Woodland Trust has the right tools, expertise and knowledge to help save the UK's woodland. With your support, the charity can continue its vital work and ensure the woods, trees and wildlife you grew up with aren't lost forever.

FILM OF THE DAY

The Book of Life ★★★★

12.50-2.45pm Film4 U

COMEDY A feast for the Easter hols, this Golden Globe nominee was directed and co-written by Mexican animator Jorge Gutierrez for Reel FX Studios. Made in the US but enriched with Mexican spirit, it spins a wildly imaginative Day of the Dead fantasy (three years before Pixar's Coco), with a love triangle developing between general's daughter Maria (voiced by Zoë Saldana), toreador Manolo (Diego Luna) and supernaturally enhanced "town hero" Joaquin (Channing Tatum). It's of a stylistic piece with the work of Laika Studios (whose Missing Link is in cinemas), and the CGI wooden puppets have a believable tactility. The story gets occasionally lost under the madcap mayhem, but it's a visual triumph and Gustavo Santaolalla's score swells and zings. (US 2014, HD)

Stranger on Horseback ★★★

11.50am-1.15pm Movies4Men PG

WESTERN Joel McCrea brings his calm authority to this strong western, playing the circuit judge who dares to arrest the spoiled killer son of the local land baron and then has to coax witnesses to testify. The film was shot on location in Sedona, Arizona, using an unsatisfactory colour process. However, Night of the Demon director Jacques Tourneur draws effective performances from the cast, which also includes young Czech-born Miroslava, a star of Mexican cinema who killed herself just as the film was released. AE (US 1955, some violence)

James and the Giant Peach ★★★★

1.00-2.40pm Sony Movie Channel U

ADVENTURE For a writer of children's stories, Roald Dahl undoubtedly had a dark imagination. Here, though, there will only be squeals of delight as James and his insect allies escape from a killer shark, skeleton pirates and a couple of awful aunts as they ride a giant peach to the city where dreams come true. It took three years to combine the live-action sequences with model animation, and the latter is greatly assisted by the personality-packed voices of Susan Sarandon, Simon Callow and David Thewlis. However, it's Joanna Lumley and Miriam Margolyes as the ghastly Spiker and Sponge who steal this wonderfully pantomimic show. DP (US 1996)

Me before You ★★★

9.00-11.20pm 5STAR

ROMANCE Emilia Clarke is the chirpiest of romantic leads in this story about a young woman who falls for the person she is employed to care for, a paralysed and wealthy young man (played by Sam Claflin). This all-out weepie may annoy some with its relentless attempts to put lumps in throats. However, Clarke is disarmingly bubbly as she stumbles and grins her way into the heart of Claflin, himself easy to fall for thanks to no small amount of charisma. As cynical as the attack on our tear ducts might be, Me before You has sincerity under the schmaltz. JL (US 2016, sexual references, HD)

The Day of the Triffids ★★

10.00pm-12 midnight
Talking Pictures TV 15

SCI-FI A meteor shower blinds all but a few Earthlings, leaving society in a state of hysteria and at the mercy of carnivorous plants from outer space in this should-have-been-better version of John Wyndham's classic novel. While the Triffids themselves are bizarre and menacing, kudos should go to uncredited Freddie Francis, director of the lighthouse scenes added later in a bravura effort to beef up the chills and thrills. AJ (UK 1962)
Fear-inducing flora, p72

Flightplan ★★★

11.20pm-1.20am ITV4 12

THRILLER Demented with grief after her husband's death in Berlin, aeronautical engineer Kyle Pratt (Jodie Foster) boards a plane bound for the US with her daughter Julia and her late husband's coffin. When Kyle awakes from a nap, Julia has vanished. No one remembers the little girl and there's no record of her boarding the plane. With the help of an air marshal (Peter Sarsgaard), Kyle then tries to get to the bottom of the mystery. Although stylishly filmed and finely acted, the script's Lady Vanishes-like premise dissolves in a flurry of improbable revelations. Nevertheless, Foster further perfects her strong-jawed woman-in-peril schtick to fine effect. LF (US 2005, some violence, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Easy A ★★★★

9.00-11.00pm Comedy Central 15

COMEDY Emma Stone displays star-making charisma in this teen comedy, playing a high-school girl who fibs about her sexual exploits and gets into all sorts of trouble. What unfolds is a witty, sympathetic tale of adolescent confusions that has surprising cross-generational appeal. Trevor Johnston (US 2010, sexual references, HD)

Gladiator ★★★★★

11.15pm-2.20am Film4 15

EPIC Ridley Scott and the boys from DreamWorks produced the first genuine Roman epic since 1964's The Fall of the Roman Empire with this virtual remake that deals with the transition of power from the sage-like Marcus Aurelius to his monstrous son, Commodus. Russell Crowe is utterly convincing as the Conan/Spartacus-like hero, who is turned into an exile, becomes a gladiator and fights to avenge his loved ones and save the soul of Rome. AT (US 2000, violence, swearing, HD)

Eddie the Eagle ★★★★★

9.00-11.10pm Film4 PG

DRAMA This quintessential underdog fable relates the trials and tribulations of heroic failure Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards (Taron Egerton) who became a ski-jumping icon at the Winter Olympics. ### Elysium ★★★

10.00pm-12.15am 5STAR 15

SCI-FI Director Neill Blomkamp followed up District 9 with another sci-fi yarn about a two-tier society challenged by a mechanised everyman, only here he has star names and a budget. In 2154, the super-rich have decamped to a man-made paradise in space, and Matt Damon's irradiated worker is determined to get there, despite attempts to stop him from Jodie Foster's chillingly evil politician. It's a stirring fable about social inequality but is lost under textbook lock-and-load sci-fi bluster. AC (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

A Kind of Loving ★★★★

11.00pm-1.15am Talking Pictures TV 12

DRAMA Unlike many of the "grim up North" dramas that found critical favour during the "kitchen sink" phase of British film-making, John Schlesinger's debut feature is about making the most of life rather than carping on about the grass on the other side of the fence. Crisply adapted from Stan Barstow's novel, the film is like a scrapbook of typical human experience, with Alan Bates and June Ritchie both excellent. However, Thora Hird is exceptional. DP (UK 1962, nudity, BW)

The Age of Stupid ★★★

10.00-11.25pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY It's 2055 and the last man alive (Pete Postlethwaite) is recording a farewell message, in which he laments the arrogance of humanity for continuing to accelerate global warming and consume itself out of existence. Director Franny Armstrong deserves credit for making such bold use of this doomsday gambit. The message is consistent throughout and Postlethwaite's tone of weary fury is hard to ignore. David Parkinson (UK 2008)

Encounters at the End of the World ★★★

3.00-5.00pm Discovery Science (Sky 167, Virgin 259, BT 336) U

DOCUMENTARY After a career spent shooting movies in Earth's most inhospitable places, it's unsurprising that iconoclastic film-maker Werner Herzog (Fitzcarraldo) chose to explore the harsh terrain of Antarctica. While the resulting Oscar-nominated travelogue is too scattershot to stand among his finest work, its freewheeling portrait of the frozen continent's scientific community is eccentric yet engrossing. SF (US/Can 2007)

The Shawshank Redemption ★★★★★

9.00-11.55pm ITV4 15

DRAMA The inspiring Stephen King adaptation that's now regarded as a classic has Tim Robbins as the banker who's sent to the brutal Shawshank State Prison for murder, and is befriended by a fellow lifer (Morgan Freeman). Both stars are truly adept at portraying world-weary dignity against the odds. AJ (US 1994, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Robe ★★★ 2.35-4.45pm BBC2 U

DID YOU KNOW? There's an error on the film's poster: between Burton and Mature is original star Jean Peters, not Jean Simmons

RELIGIOUS EPIC An Alfred Newman fanfare! A red velvet curtain pulled back to reveal an arena full of gladiators saluting Emperor Tiberius circa 32 AD! That's how you started a picture in 1953, when the proliferating convenience of TV had Hollywood on a war footing. The Robe remains a definitive biblical epic, promising wider screens filled with vistas unimaginable before CinemaScope. Richard Burton's military tribune narrates: "Our legions stand guard on the boundaries of civilisation, from the foggy coasts of the northern seas, to the ancient rivers of Babylon." Then he's posted to Jerusalem, separated from true love Jean Simmons (who's betrothed to Caligula – boo!) and wins Jesus's robe in a dice game. A Christian convert, he is called an enemy of Rome. Enjoy Victor Mature's slave and Richard Boone's Pilate, too, in a compulsively grand showboat for any bank holiday. (US 1953, HD)

DAYTIME

The Parent Trap ★★★
11.45am-2.10pm C4 PG

COMEDY DRAMA Freckle-faced Lindsay Lohan is the American youngster who steps into Hayley Mills's shoes for this update of the 1961 original. Lohan plays twins separated not long after birth, one growing up with British wedding-gown designer Natasha Richardson, the other with her ex-husband, American vineyard owner Dennis Quaid. Meeting by chance at a summer camp, the twins plot to bring their parents back together. Despite its loose grasp of London's geography and lifestyles, this unashamedly sentimental comedy hits all the right buttons and will delight its target audience of young girls. SR (US 1998, HD)

Mr Bean's Holiday ★★★
3.20-5.00pm C5 PG

COMEDY This second film outing for Rowan Atkinson's slightly creepy comic creation is, for the first hour at least, really rather good. Bean, who has won a Côte d'Azur holiday in a church raffle, heads off to Paris by train and proceeds to bumble his way across France. If the film-makers had stopped there, we'd have had an amusing series of vaguely connected slapstick sketches. Instead, they introduce a daft plot involving a young boy (Max Baldry), a pretty actress (Emma de Caunes) and a somewhat lost-looking Willem Dafoe as a pretentious film director. In this case, a little less of a good thing would have been rather more. DA (UK 2007, HD)

The Adventures of Tintin: the Secret of the Unicorn ★★★
4.25-6.35pm Film4 PG

ADVENTURE Director Steven Spielberg employed the motion-capture process for the first time with this animated yarn featuring Hergé's intrepid boy reporter. But despite Jamie Bell's valiant voice contribution, it becomes increasingly difficult to care about our shiny-faced hero. Only Andy Serkis's boozy Captain Haddock and Snowy the hyper-intelligent mutt triumph over the deadening effect of the technology. There's enough to delight the undemanding youngster here and it's passable entertainment for the rest, but how much better this film would have been had Spielberg not buried it under layers of digital jiggery-pokery. AS (US/NZ/Bel 2011, some violence, HD)

EVENING

Hop ★★★
5.10-7.15pm ITV2 U

COMEDY This seasonal children's yarn finds young rabbit EB (voiced by Russell Brand) reluctant to succeed his father (Hugh Laurie) as the Easter bunny. So he runs away from the family home (on Easter Island, naturally) and heads for Hollywood with dreams of becoming a rock drummer. Once there, he bounds into the life of a slacker human, James Marsden, himself at a crossroads, causing mayhem at every turn. It's all good fun for the very young, but unlike in most modern animations the film is light on pop culture references to keep grown-ups interested – apart from a questionable running gag about Hugh Hefner and an altogether different kind of bunny. TeS (US 2011, HD)

Liar Liar ★★★★
7.15-9.00pm ITV2 12

COMEDY Jim Carrey stars here as a ruthless lawyer and compulsive liar who misses his son's birthday party and is "cursed" to tell the truth for 24 hours. Carrey's frenzied physical and vocal contortions provide lots of amusing comic moments, as well as a few riotous ones, and the role is not only tailor-made for his rubber-faced antics but also gives him an opportunity to show a more human side. His performance is reminiscent of Steve Martin's body battle in All of Me, as he hurls inadvertent insults and digs himself into an abyss in the middle of a big divorce case. JC (US 1997, may be edited for violence, language, HD)

P Doctor Strange ★★★★★
8.30-10.40pm ITV 12

Andrew Collins My Movies, page 29.
(US 2016, violence, HD)

Step Brothers ★★★
9.00-11.15pm Sky1 15

COMEDY Even at their most obnoxious, Will Ferrell and John C Reilly are strangely adorable together. Their brotherly bond was key to the success of Talladega Nights and in this equally zany comedy (also from director Adam McKay), they take the relationship to its natural conclusion. All the gags rest on these burly, 40-year-old men acting like children when their parents get hitched. They draw battle lines in the room they're forced to share, staring each other down at bedtime and trading peculiar insults. It's these exchanges that get the biggest laughs. Things do get a little too weird, and the joke is overstretched, but that is, after all, the point. SP (US 2008, swearing, sexual references, HD)

LATE NIGHT

P Fallen ★★ 10.30-11.55pm BBC2 12

ROMANTIC FANTASY Shine director Scott Hicks delves into Young Adult fantasy with this bonkers romance about a troubled young woman who finds herself in a love triangle at a school attended by fallen angels. Taking particular inspiration from Twilight, the story is a shallow teenage romance that will please only fans of the original novel by Lauren Kate. Jeremy Irvine's Daniel dresses and acts like a Robert Pattinson proxy, with Harrison Gilbertson as his rebellious love rival. In the middle is Addison Timlin, who does little except swoon over her suitors. Fallen's devotion to the YA formula leads it down a hopeless, distracting road of clichés that puts it at the bottom of the genre pile. JL (UK/Hun 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

Robot & Frank ★★★★
12.05-1.25am BBC1 12

COMEDY DRAMA This futuristic buddy movie is an irresistible charmer and a real pleasure to watch. Frank Langella gives a magnificent performance as the retired burglar slipping into dementia whose grown-up children give him a robot carer to improve his quality of life. But the wily jewel thief soon convinces the droid to become his partner in crime and commit one last heist for old time's sake. Springing poignant twists en route to its bittersweet ending, this engaging character study accents compassion and humour above any major use of special effects. AJ (US 2012, swearing)

Films worth paying for...

An element of fun

P Mary Poppins Returns ★★★ U

From Mon Sky Store/Virgin Movies (also DVD, Blu-ray, 4K UHD and download)

MUSICAL FANTASY Emily Blunt brandishes the brolly of the famous nanny in this fun sequel to Disney's 1964 classic, as Mary Poppins flies in to help the grown-up Banks children (Ben Whishaw and Emily Mortimer) who have fallen on hard times.

Director Rob Marshall displays an affection for the original, recapturing the warmth, mirth and magic, albeit with less memorable songs. Blunt is pitch perfect throughout – her Poppins arguably more street smart and blessed with sharper comic timing than Julie Andrews – and Dick Van Dyke's cameo is complemented by joyful supporting turns from Julie Walters, Angela Lansbury and Meryl Streep.

The animation and special effects are used comparatively sparingly to retain the simplicity of the first film, and while by no means a classic, this is a captivating new chapter for a much-loved family favourite. Terry Staunton (US 2018, HD)

PICK OF THE REST

P White Boy Rick ★★ 15

*From Mon Sky Store/Virgin Movies

DRAMA In the urban wasteland of 1980s Detroit, a young boy's drift into crime makes him a target for the FBI in this fact-based drama. On one level, it's a shocking indictment of the skewed values of US law enforcement that they'd seek to exploit a vulnerable adolescent as a paid informer, yet at the same time the film never convinces us that protagonist Richard Wershe Jr (Richie Merrit) was a wronged innocent. TJ (US 2018, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

Sorry to Bother You ★★★ 15 Released 15 April on DVD and download

An absurdist gagfest set in a parallel universe, making observations about racial disparity and blue collar struggle may look like a hard sell, but director Boots Riley has fashioned an intriguing film with a message as well as mirth. Lakeith Stanfield stars as a young black man persuaded to adopt a "white" voice while working at a call centre, and soon finds himself as the figurehead of a radical group facing off to big business. It occasionally risks losing sight of its intentions, but Stanfield's bumbling charm helps maintain a disciplined narrative. The DVD includes a director's commentary and a featurette. Terry Staunton RT Offer To order the DVD for £16.99, phone 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting ref RT1715. # Uncomfortable truths

But David Attenborough is right to speak out, says David Butcher

If I'm honest, Our Planet, David Attenborough's new series for Netflix, is a hard one to enjoy. I was watching the episode about jungles and admiring a family of gorillas in the lush, green forests of the Congo. Then Attenborough pointed out in the commentary that gorilla numbers there have halved because of poaching.

So that took the shine off things. Next up, he showed us the unfathomable riches of New Guinea, with birds of paradise like caped tango dancers, and then more marvels in Borneo, where little bats roost very sweetly inside pitcher plants.

MAN ON A MISSION
David Attenborough focuses on the plight of wildlife under threat of extinction, from gorillas to birds of paradise

But just as I was losing myself in all this, Attenborough announced that in the past 50 years Borneo has lost half its jungle. A time-lapse image drove the point home, as areas of dark green on a satellite image shrank and shrank and shrank. In the Philippines it's worse: there, he told us, 90 per cent of primary rainforest has gone, leaving the amazing young eagle we saw with nowhere to hunt.

It's hopeless. I mean, how are we meant to enjoy the wonders of nature if the great man keeps hitting us with painful truths? The BBC traditionally takes a more polite approach to this sort of thing, but Netflix seems to think it's fine for

'Comforting, cosy natural history needs to become extinct now'

Attenborough to put the "It's all going down the Swanee" message front and centre.

The result is like having a wise old uncle rise from his armchair, grab you by the lapels and start slapping you in the face while telling you in no uncertain terms to get real. It's not what you expect. And it's bracing.

Which is why Attenborough has done it, of course. It does genuinely make it harder to lose yourself in the show, but that's the point. Comforting, cosy natural history probably needs to become extinct now. It has done its job of engaging us with incredible wildlife, soothing us after a hard day with gorgeous footage of polar bears or lemurs or lion cubs.

We may well love those sublime TV moments, but if we carry on as we are, nice film clips will be all we'll have left. BBC1's recent Blue Planet Live series was full of enchanting sights, but it attracted justified criticism for implying that the work of conservationists and the nice people who volunteer to clean beaches might be enough to save our marine life, without mentioning that we also need to tackle the big stuff – overfishing and fossil fuels and the global plastics industry and so on.

The tricky thing is, how much of a political axe can nature programmes grind before they lose the audience? It's a tough call for the BBC with its requirement to be impartial, but there are signs it is prepared to take a bolder tack. This week's Climate Change: the Facts (Thu BBC1) marks a departure from the old "On the one hand... but on the other..." line. Which is just as well, when on the one hand there was the entirety of respected scientific opinion, and on the other a few denialist blogs and Nigel Lawson.

Climate Change: the Facts is powerful television. But let's keep in mind that it's hardly fair for us to expect TV to take on the world's biggest problems. How could it? One of the medium's myths is that TV magic can descend on the real world and fix things, but this isn't a DIY SOS makeover or a broken clock on The Repair Shop. TV's job, according to the old litany, is to inform, educate and entertain. For now, when it comes to natural history, we might have to make do with the first two.

STYLE OVER SUBSTANCE?

If you're still watching MotherFatherSon (Wed BBC2), well done. Fewer than a million viewers are still hooked on the saga that revolves around Richard Gere blinking meaningfully and Helen McCrory as the best-dressed divorcee ever. Even when the scenes grind on like an engine with an oil leak, McCrory's character's outfits are astounding.

In this week's episode she wears a striped jumper that should win the Sarah Lund memorial award for TV knitwear. And later she wows a lesbian wedding with a sort of gold foil dress that makes her look like a sexy astronaut. I suppose, ideally, my attention wouldn't be drifting off from the story all the time to admire the wardrobe but, on this show, you take your pleasures where you find them.

BOX SET

1 Pose

iPlayer (BBC2)

Showrunner Ryan Murphy, who once created Glee and has since delivered American Horror Story and two superb series of American Crime Story, is back to his dazzling roots with a drama set around the drag balls of 1980s New York. It boasts TV's biggest ever transgender cast (including Indya Moore, above), depicting lives so rarely seen on screen as the fabulous melodrama's offset by the harsh social mores of the Reagan era.

LET IT SINK IN...

5 The Victim

iPlayer (BBC1)

The iPlayer box set might give you more time to digest Rob Williams's serious, heavy drama about grief and justice, led by Kelly Macdonald as the mother of a murdered boy who thinks she's found his killer: its airing on consecutive nights on BBC1 might have been too intensive a task for some viewers. The moral and legal questions it raises, and the performances of the cast in a plethora of difficult roles, are well worth extended consideration.

PLAYS FOR TODAY

6 Accused

Amazon Prime

One of many high-points in Jimmy McGovern's TV back catalogue, this BBC1 drama is suited to an era in which streaming services have a vast range of old telly you can dip in and out of: it's almost entirely self-contained stories, about people whose life crises have landed them in the dock. Two series are available: try Mackenzie Crook against type as a brutal army corporal in series one, or Olivia Colman as a grieving mum in series two.

WAS IT REALLY LIKE THIS?

2 Urban Myths

NowTV/Sky Box Sets

A third run of the anthology comedy that brings to the screen moments in celebrities' lives that might have happened, but probably didn't happen precisely as shown. It's strong on period atmosphere, the odd moment of powerful drama and, most of all, on cast members cutting loose: the attention-grabbing opener casts Sophie Rundle (right) as Princess Diana and a tremendous Mathew Baynton as Kenny Everett.

Available from 10 April

LAST CHANCE

3 Shetland

iPlayer (BBC1)

Series five of the windswept drama in which Douglas Henshall, by TV detective standards, refreshingly underplays his role. Move more quickly than the storylines do and you can still catch it all.

Available until 18 April

THE DAILY GRIND

4 Dead Pixels

All 4 (E4)

Raised by Wolves star Alexa Davies leads the cast of a lo-fi flatshare sitcom with a difference: two of the three co-habitants are keen gamers, and animation takes us inside the virtual world that gives them a second life. At heart it's a conventional comedy, but the authentic portrayal of the gamer lifestyle makes it fresh. Will Merrick (Skins) and Charlotte Ritchie (Call the Midwife) co-star.

ROMANTIC HEROES

7 Cloak and Dagger

Amazon Prime

An underrated Marvel comic-book series, which neatly melds the superhero exploits of its teen protagonists – he can use darkness as a weapon, while she can smite foes with light – with a romance drama, fuelled by the pair's feelings for each other and their increased powers when they work together. Now the premise is established, series two's set to go deeper into that tension. There's a new episode every Friday.

FOLLOWING THE MONEY

8 Bad Banks

Walter Presents

A crisp, taut German drama introduces us to Jana (Paula Beer), a financier who, having been eased out of her job by a coke-snorting, entitled superior, finds a new role with an extremely dynamic Frankfurt investment bank. Beer is excellent as an apparently humane and vulnerable woman in a ruthless world – a house of cards that the opening flashforward tells us Jana will bring down. The whole thing's deliciously cynical and sharply filmed.

FRIENDS REUNITED

9 The Bold Type

Amazon Prime

Re-apply your lipgloss, order a skinny latte to go and enjoy series three of a snappy US fantasy about three young women making their way in New York publishing, fashion and politics. A new episode arrives every Wednesday, continuing to follow the dilemmas and triumphs of three impeccably well turned-out characters who have a neat speech for every occasion and who always have their friends' back.

Available from 10 April

10 The Americans

Amazon Prime

Amazon now has the final series of this truly outstanding US drama about a pair of Russian spies (Matthew Rhys and Keri Russell) posing as a married American couple in Washington, DC in the 1980s. The last run elegantly nailed a final episode that fans had been anticipating for years – if you've never experienced the show's delicately judged blend of family strife, political intrigue and old-fashioned espionage thrills, treat yourself now.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

Back in the zone with a cast-iron sci-fi classic

If something spooky, chilling or unexplained crops up in a conversation, chances are that someone will sing, "Doo-dee-doo-doo". You know, that four-note motif that signifies "weird". Even children trot it out, without having the faintest idea of its provenance.

It is, of course, the Bernard Herrmann theme for The Twilight Zone, the grandaddy of all anthology shows, which marks its 60th anniversary with a Complete Collection DVD/Blu-ray release.

From 1959, creator/doomsayer Rod Serling introduced five series of grabby set-ups and haunting pay-offs packed with mordant wit, often with a whiff of "just deserts" about them. Serling, who wrote or adapted two-thirds of the 156 episodes, would top and tail the stories with a few tart observations, often appearing with a lit ciggie.

Well remembered outings include a pre-Kirk William Shatner as a plane passenger who sees a gremlin on the wing causing sabotage. Then there's It's a Good Life, in which a six-year-old can read thoughts – and woe betide you if they're bad ones. And The Monsters Are Due on Maple Street, in which neighbour turns against neighbour, could almost be a parable for our own times. But then, "the world is full of Maple Streets".

The stress of having to outthink his audience took its toll on Serling, but scripts were farmed out to the likes of Ray Bradbury (The Martian Chronicles) and George Clayton Johnson (Logan's Run), so the bar remained frighteningly high.

Themes of love, war, prejudice and social tension run deep, and there's no soft-soaping or hand-holding – moral lessons stay learnt, with images that can't be unseen. its influence on TV today is vast, as evidenced by the current US remake presented by Jordan "Get Out" Peele. So yes, as a kind of shorthand, "Doo-dee-doo-doo" is fine – but there's so much more to The Twilight Zone. MARK BRAXTON

Available on DVD and Blu-ray

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Keep your gadgets clean

You spend all day stroking and spitting on gadgets, making them dirty, even if you don't take your phone into the bathroom. (Please don't do this.) A study by the University of Arizona found mobile phones harboured ten times more bacteria than most toilet seats.

The problem is how to clean gadgets without ruining their delicate components, which hate water. Doc Dig regularly disassembles remote controls and games console controllers (check ifixit.com for instructions): plastic shells and rubber membranes can be cleaned with washing-up liquid, just like a plate, then left to dry thoroughly. But make sure there are no stickers on the devices – they'll lift off.

For components that can't be dissembled, use high-proof isopropyl alcohol (99% pure, as opposed to rubbing alcohol's 70%) and cotton buds. This will even lift permanent marker, so again be careful not to ruin useful stickers or labels.

It's not always your icky fingers' fault. From 2015, the MacBook has featured a slimline "Butterfly" keyboard that jams at the thought of dust, repeating keystrrokes or mising thm entirely. Apple Support can service those, and recent models have rectified the issue. Just in case, keep a compressed-gas airduster (from £2.99) to hand. And keep your hands clean. JONATHAN HOLMES

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

LAST CHANCE
Geri Horner and Rob Beckett preside over the final show

PICK OF THE DAY

All Together Now 7.05pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT It's the finale of the feelgood singing contest and it opens with one of those big ensemble numbers sung by all ten of the finalists. That can be a recipe for each singer to showboat but they pull off a fabulous version of Make Your Own Kind of Music (by Mama Cass Elliot), which feels as if it should be this show's theme song.

After that the finalists have their moment to get Geri Horner and the 100 on their feet. One makes a disastrous song choice, though. If a £50,000 prize hung on your performance, would you opt to sing the weird Meat Loaf power ballad I'd Do Anything for Love (but I Won't Do That)? Not if you had any sense.

But the great thing about this show is, whether or not the performances are top drawer, the judging will be, notably from hard-to-please Paulus, who tells one act, sagely, "The riffs took over from the storytelling." Very true.

DAVID BUTCHER

Ninja Warrior UK

6.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Even if you love Ninja Warrior, it's doubtful you adore it as much as Chris Kamara. His terrible puns and shrieking laugh have reached the manic levels of a 1960s Batman villain, but the show wouldn't be the same without him. This year, there are additions to the format: new obstacle the Flying Squirrel puts some hopefuls in the water and you can now only reach the semis if you scale the wall.

Apart from that, we get the regular mix of athletic feats and pathetic defeats. Lee Latchford-Evans gives it a go (get your jokes in now about him knowing the Steps), while wheelchair basketballer Tyler Saunders wows the crowd, tackling the course on one leg. DAVID BROWN

In for a Penny

7.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT New series Stephen Mulhern has to be the happiest man on TV. In fact, he might even be the happiest man alive. It's like someone smeared his face with baby oil, made him eat a vanload of sherbet dip dabs and then put him in front of a camera. Still, at least his ebullience carries you through this cheap-and-cheerful Saturday Night Takeaway spin-off that sees him take to the streets of a different city each week in the hope that people can turn their pennies into pounds by taking part in some silly games.

Bobbing for marshmallows in a bowl of flour? Eating a pasty from the end of a fishing line? Bring it on, say the shoppers of Cardiff. DAVID BROWN

Britain's Got Talent

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT When this year's show launched, Simon Cowell told reporters that it was getting "harder now to find original talent", adding that "if we find two great acts per season, we're doing above average". A bit worrying, that.

Details of which auditions we'll be seeing each week are always kept under wraps until broadcast. However, David Walliams has revealed there are lots of spooky acts (appropriate, as it's the 13th series), which Amanda Holden backs up, admitting they've "gone to the dark side". Cowell is thrilled there are more danger acts, but Alesha Dixon reckons it's time for a traditional singer to win after five years of variety champs. JANE RACKHAM

Casualty

8.25pm BBC1

DRAMA Charlie acts in a very out-of-character fashion tonight when he chucks David under a bus in order to protect Duffy. A metaphorical bus, not an actual one, obviously. Mind you, that would be a stunt and a half, wouldn't it? But seeing Charlie watch on and remain silent while David is suspended in the aftermath of last week's fracas doesn't quite ring true. Would he really sacrifice a colleague's career to keep Duffy's secret?

What's more believable is Connie's increasing paranoia. Which is not to say she's wrong in thinking someone is out to get her. In fact, there are big developments where her attacker is concerned – and they end up coming from left field. DAVID BROWN

CHRIS KAMARA'S BIG BREAK

■ Before starring in Ninja Warrior UK (6.30pm ITV), former footballer Chris Kamara began his TV career as a pundit in 1996 when, as Bradford manager, he took a call asking him to be on Sky Sports.

■ "I did the game, but there was another match afterwards that Gerry Francis, who was manager of Bristol Rovers, was meant to be a pundit for. But he got stuck in traffic and they asked me if I'd stay on. I must've made an impression!"

■ He went from pundit to presenter for Sky's Goals on Sunday. "I did it with Rob McCaffrey, and he pulled me over after the second show and said, 'You're trying to be like Kate Adie – the best thing that you've got going for you is being yourself, so just relax.' And it was the best advice I could have ever had and has stayed with me."

■ In 2010, he went viral after Jeff Stelling asked which player had received a red card during a match, and Kamara's response was "I don't know Jeff". He laughs. "It was the defining moment in my TV career." FT

The Massacre That Shook the Empire

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Exactly 100 years ago British troops opened fire on a crowd of men, women and children who were gathered in a public park in Amritsar, India, to protest against colonial rule. Facts about the Jallianwala Bagh massacre – how many were killed or injured, whether they did have weapons, whether the park gates were locked or not – are confused but it was undeniably a turning point (and tragically dark moment) in our colonial history.

British Sikh Sathnam Sanghera (author of The Boy with the Topknot) reflects on the implications of the massacre and what the legacy of Empire means for Britain today. JR

See feature: page 24

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.10pm BBC1

CHAT SHOW Even if you're not a fan of Mrs Brown, this episode is a complete hoot. Praise be to the producer who wrangled Johnny Vegas's mum onto the sofa; Patricia is a gem. She doesn't hold back (giving Johnny's stand-up a dressing-down she says, "I can't stand it – it's filthy") and her comic timing and dry humour are riotous. "He said to me he was really worried it would be the end of his career," notes fellow guest Clare Balding, citing Johnny's fears about his mum appearing on the show. "I think it's the start of a new one." She's right – comedians with their parents may now be a well-trampled TV genre, but someone should commission this mother-and-son pair for some telly gold. FRANCES TAYLOR

The Jonathan Ross Show

9.25pm ITV

CHAT SHOW Jeremy Clarkson is no stranger to chat. In fact, it would be fair to say he's a bit of a motormouth. But he's usually the one in the driving seat so he might find it a little strange to be letting Wossy choose the direction their conversation goes tonight.

Also on the show is Emma Bunton, who is joining her fellow Spice Girls (well, all except for Victoria Beckham, that is) on a reunion tour this year. Mel B's recent claims that she and Geri Horner were more than just bandmates should certainly spice up their life while they're on the road.

Folk fusion band Mumford and Sons, who are also touring the UK this summer, are performing tonight. JR

ILL-GOTTEN GAINS
Nicky (Esben Smed) is counting his kroner

Follow the Money

9.00pm, 9.55pm BBC4

DRAMA Nicky, the drug-smuggling dark angel, struggles to put on a good show to regain custody of his five-year-old son, and fails to fit in at a Palestinian wedding. Middle-aged Anna, who's been neglected in the bank and the bedroom, impresses some shady Danes as she hones her skills in money laundering. And Alf, the cop with PTSD and sleep deprivation, is further vexed by his bungling squad and his obsession with frosty Isa, as he doggedly pursues TV's most unconvincing workplace fling in living memory.

The storylines of these troubled and damaged central figures start to converge in the third and fourth episodes as, with slow but remorseless precision, the drama shows all three braving murkier waters than they seem emotionally equipped to cope with. Nothing edge-of-the-seat yet in series three but it holds your attention.

The Crusades

iPlayer (ep 1 expires today)

A 2012 three-parter in which Dr Thomas Asbridge attacks the sometimes tricky task of explaining the motivations behind centuries of holy wars. It's most difficult in the first instalment, which covers events almost an entire millennium ago and is thus short on first-hand accounts and surviving artefacts. But Asbridge spans that gap with dramatic presentation and an eye for an important detail.

The best of Sky, iPlayer, Netflix and beyond

Keep the kids happy

Trolls ★★★★ *BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Available on catch-up until Monday, this visually scrumptious and upbeat musical from DreamWorks is a quality confection guaranteed to entertain little ones. Justin Timberlake and Anna Kendrick voice bickering trolls who, armed only with their magical hair and a poppy mix of songs (including the Oscar-nominated Can't Stop the Feeling), must face off against the troll-munching giants who have kidnapped their kinfolk. Trolls is a bright and breezy affair that shamelessly pushes the positive power of happiness. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Sky's in a musical mood

Sky Select is often viewed as the sensible, serious member of the Sky Cinema family of channels, so it's good to see it has a song in its heart and a spring in its step (albeit temporarily) as it's transformed into Sky Musicals. For the next two weeks, you can enjoy vintage classics such as Singin' in the Rain and The Sound of Music as well as recent smashes including Mamma Mia! and Pitch Perfect. And for those with sympathetic family members and neighbours, there's the opportunity to join in with special sing-along versions of Grease and The Greatest Showman (pictured). JAMIE HEALY

New on Prime today

Fist Fight ★★★

Amazon Prime

This comic twist on school bullies sees Ice Cube's angry (and recently fired) history teacher challenge his mild-mannered colleague Charlie Day to a playground scrap, blaming him for his dismissal. Day's precision comic timing and the sharp gags help keep the story rattling along. TERRY STAUNTON

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

CRACKS ARE SHOWING
The AC-12 anti-corruption cops face a test of their loyalties

PICK OF THE DAY Line of Duty 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA We like to think of our AC-12 trio as the three amigos who fight the good fight and stick together no matter what. So when cracks start to appear in their united front, it's never easy to watch. But that's the point we've reached as Steve (Martin Compston) and Kate's (Vicky McClure) relationship comes under strain, even as the script and editing do their damnedest to make us think Ted (Adrian Dunbar) might, just might, be the baddest of bad apples – the corrupt top cop known as H.

Of course, other theories are available, and as we mull them over the organised crime gang plots its next move. They're planning another big armed raid – this time on a police depot, where they hope to steal cash and bullion being kept as evidence.

Say what you like about undercover-officer-gone-rogue John Corbett, he doesn't sit on his hands. And nobody can spit out the words "bent coppaz" quite like Stephen Graham does. DAVID BUTCHER

Women's FA Cup Football

3.15pm (k/o 3.30pm) BBC2

Manchester City v Chelsea The second of today's Women's FA Cup semi-finals – the first, Reading v West Ham (k/o 12.30pm) is live on iPlayer and BBC red button – involves two of the Women's Super League's highest fliers. It's a repeat of February's League Cup semi, which City won on their way to lifting the trophy; if they do the same here, they'll keep the hope of the treble alive. Current FA Cup holders Chelsea, though, will be encouraged by the fact that it's also a rerun of last year's semi-final, from which they emerged victorious. Look out for City hot shot – and all-time WSL top scorer – Nikita Parris, whose two goals sank Chelsea in that League Cup tie. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Golf: the Masters

6.30pm BBC2*, 7.00pm* Sky Sports Golf/Main Event

SPORT Whether it's the barrel-aged gravitas of the BBC's Peter Alliss or the gentle concision of Sky's Ewen Murray, there's something about the whispered delivery of golf commentary that lulls you, even if you've never picked up a club in your life. Andrew Cotter, too, is the BBC's leading light these days, popping up everywhere from Twickenham to Augusta via the Boat Race.

At its best, golf commentary is more like incantation than reportage. One minute you'll be admiring the flora lining Amen Corner, but then the commentator's voice will drop. You'll breathe in, lean in to the screen... and fall under their spell. JAMES GILL

Countryfile

7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL You might look at a photo of a Clun Forest sheep and wonder what's so special about it. It looks much like every other sheep, but while the Shropshire breed is a multipurpose animal, its wool is prized because it's free of undesirable black fibres and kemp (coarse hairs). Ellie Harrison finds out how Clun Forest fleeces are hand-spun into a yarn that's great for knitting.

Also in Shropshire is Matt Baker, who's talking to a crop farmer with a new way to improve soil quality. Meanwhile Adam Henson hears why farmers are pinning their hopes on one of our favourite snacks. It's got to be crisps of some sort, hasn't it? JANE RACKHAM

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The 18th-century Erddig Hall outside Wrexham is stuffed with collectables: everything from tapestries to taxidermy, candelabra to crockery. But there are some equally fine treasures brought in to the Roadshow there on a searingly hot day last summer. Among them is a creepy-looking metal snakehead that makes Ronnie Archer Morgan's heart stop (in a good way), a Chinese ceramic toad that might be a vase (or a chamber pot) and a guitar that was once played at Liverpool's Cavern in the 1960s.

But the most exciting piece is a fairly plain mourning ring with an engraving that reveals its astonishing significance. JR

EASTER PROGRAMMES

The BBC has a raft of Easter programming this Holy Week. On BBC1 this afternoon is the first of two episodes of Songs of Praise from the Holy Land (1.15pm BBC1). Aled Jones (right) and a Christian choir visit the Garden of Gethsemane and the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and he will be in Jerusalem for Easter Day's edition.

On Good Friday, as well as the conclusion of Pilgrimage: the Road to Rome on BBC2, BBC1 are airing the first episode of a two-part programme, Britain's Easter Story. Concluding on Easter Day, it sees choirmaster Gareth Malone travelling the UK and exploring the stories behind our Easter traditions.

Easter Day will also see Easter Carols at King's, a live Easter service from St Mary's in Warwick and Pope Francis's Easter Day Message and Blessing – Urbi et Orbi – on BBC1 with Martin Bashir. FRANCES TAYLOR

Victoria

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA An outbreak of cholera is haunting London, which brings one John Snow into the story. No relation to Jon Snow, obviously, this is Dr Snow, a mild, stuttering fellow whose theories about cholera don't impress the medical establishment.

Which, by the laws of period drama, means he must be right, but the question is, will he be right in time to save Skerrett and Francatelli's new venture from getting caught up in the outbreak?

Back at the palace, the royal couple spurn each other and communicate via terse notes. No such froideur for the porcelain duchess: she and footman Joseph are getting on better and better... DAVID BUTCHER

Daisy Goodwin's viewpoint: page 9

Janet Baker: In Her Own Words

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Top-notch film-maker John Bridcut gets to the heart of Britain's finest classical singer of the 20th century. Dame Janet Baker, now 85, speaks frankly about the opera career she retired from without warning 30 years ago, her fears and triumphs, and reveals whether, if ever, she still sings now.

Beguiling performances (an overwhelming Dido's Lament from 1965) are intercut with notes from pals and colleagues such as Dames Felicity Lott and Patricia Routledge, and the late André Previn. Most powerful is the film's final act, where she lets the cameras into her private world today. PATRICK MULKERN

JRR Tolkien: Designer of Worlds

9.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Those who wend their way to Middle Earth often find an inviting home there, be they the hippies who embraced Tolkien's books, the film fans who loved the epic scale of the movies or those – like me – who first discovered The Lord of the Rings through the atmospheric Radio 4 adaptation starring Michael Hordern and Ian Holm.

So as Game of Thrones begins its final series, here's a timely reminder that George RR Martin doesn't quite have the monopoly on fantasy worlds. Though academics do wonder whether the success of Tolkien's stories means that their literary merits have been lost on that journey from page to screen. DAVID BROWN

The Durrells

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Louisa (Keeley Hawes) is feeling outnumbered. Her "dotty kitten" daughter Margo has run off to be independent (although she hasn't exactly gone far) and housemaid Lugaretzia is laid up with a bad back, while a blustering Colonel Ribbindane (Alex Macqueen) doubles the numbers of male house guests. "I hear you're a gun wallah," he booms at Leslie, who's looking after his ex Daphne's baby. "Let's go hunting." Gerry's determined they won't.

You can see the dramatic ducks being set up in a row from mainland Greece, but so what? The sun shines, the Corfu scenery is gorgeous, the characters are charming, and how can you not warm to a drama that has Miles Jupp's bumbling Basil deliver the line, "Sorry to penetrate your bolt hole" without a hint of archness or sauciness? JR

Life after My Brother's Murder

from 10am BBC3

A documentary that's arrived in the wake of headlines about knife crime, but which could air at any time thanks to its examination of the role of the victim's family in the justice system, as well as the pure horror of grief. It meets 24-year-old Chanell, who is tasked with writing a statement responding to the potential parole of the man who murdered her brother.

3.15pm Women's Football

RT Manchester City v Chelsea
City will have home advantage on their side at the Academy Stadium as they face holders Chelsea in the Women's FA Cup semi-final (kick-off 3.30).

It's the fourth time in five seasons that the two sides have met in the last four of the competition. Last season, it was the Londoners who emerged victorious, with England forward Fran Kirby finding the net twice in a 2–0 victory. The bitter memories of that defeat should ensure the Sky Blues, led by England skipper Steph Houghton, will be fired up to exact their revenge today. Reshmin Chowdhury presents, with analysis from Alex Scott, Rachel Brown-Finnis and Casey Stoney. See page 54.

6.30 Golf: the Masters

RT Live coverage of the final day's play at the Augusta National, as the opening Major of the year reaches its conclusion on the famously lush fairways of the prestigious Georgia club. Even if the sun is starting to set by the time the next owner of the Green Jacket has taken his final swing, the thousands of passionate fans who will be following every move are guaranteed a day to remember.

At this stage last year, it was Patrick Reed who kept his nerve to protect his overnight lead and hold off his rivals. Two years ago, Sergio García and Justin Rose contested a thrilling all-European play-off before the Spaniard secured an extremely popular first Major title. Eilidh Barbour presents, with commentary from Andrew Cotter, Peter Alliss, Paul Azinger and Ken Brown. See page 54.

The best of Sky, iPlayer, Netflix and beyond

Where did the money go?

Sahara ★★★ 9.00pm Film4

Thanks to spiralling costs, this sandy action jaunt starring Matthew McConaughey and Penélope Cruz (review, p32) remains one of cinema's most expensive flops, despite its decent box-office return. On top of handing McConaughey an $8 million payslip, the film-makers also dished out $237,000 in "local bribes" to speed up filming in Morocco. Meanwhile, an elaborate plane crash was cut entirely. "In the context of the movie, it didn't work," said director Breck Eisner. The price of the scene? A cool $2 million. JOSH WINNING

Look on the bright side

Monty Python's Life of Brian ★★★★ Netflix

This inspired send-up of religious epics was surrounded by controversy on its release, but it remains the Pythons' most satisfying cinematic work. Graham Chapman ("He's not the Messiah. He's a very naughty boy") is the Judaean whose life bears some resemblance to that of a certain carpenter around the same time. The film gets a 40th anniversary "we-welease" in cinemas on Thursday, and its making is featured in a new documentary, An Accidental Studio: the Story of HandMade Films, out in the UK at the end of the month. JOHN FERGUSON

Time is running out

Avengers: Infinity War ★★★★

8.00pm Sky Superhero

Marvel's roster of heroes tackles Thanos (Josh Brolin) in this, the first part of their galaxy-spanning showdown. With its shocking twists and turns, this is an all-star Marvel extravaganza to savour, and essential viewing before Avengers: Endgame arrives in cinemas on 22 April. JEREMY ASPINALL

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

NOW IS THE WINTER Kit Harington and Emilia Clarke head up the final onslaught of Game of Thrones

PICK OF THE DAY Game of Thrones 10.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA OF THE WEEK After eight years, 67 episodes and thousands of grisly deaths, it all comes down to this: six extra-long final episodes where we'll find out whether the remaining characters can fight off the undead army marching from the North, or whether we'll be saying goodbye to them like we did Sean Bean, Richard Madden and countless other cast members before.

Before all that, though, there's plenty of interpersonal drama to keep the high and mighty of Westeros busy as Jon Snow (Kit Harington) and Daenerys Targaryen (Emilia Clarke) receive a slightly frosty welcome at Winterfell, and Sam (John Bradley) struggles with the gobsmacking secret he has to reveal to his best friend.

Don't expect too much big-budget action in this episode – apparently, the series' feature-length third episode will feature Thrones' biggest and most impressive battle yet – but with the end in sight, there probably won't be much wasted time, either, as the Starks gather their allies for the final battle. Winter is here, at last. (If you just can't wait, the episode's first airing is on Sunday at 2am). HUW FULLERTON See feature: page 20

Home Is Where the Art Is

3.45pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE Another three artists with very different styles are challenged by presenter Nick Knowles to make a piece of work for a mystery buyer. This couple want a "legacy piece" that's joyous, slightly wild, incorporates natural shapes, isn't beige and (slightly random this) isn't a picture of a dog.

The only guidance the artists get to the buyers' taste comes from snooping round their home, Through the Keyhole-style. Of course, it's interesting seeing how each artist interprets the brief and the process of creating an item. But it's equally fascinating watching the buyers' deliberation as they agonise over a metalwork sculpture, a textile-based abstract or a painting. JANE RACKHAM

Mary Berry's Quick Cooking

8.30pm BBC2

FOOD I can't think why Mary agreed to put herself through the gruelling ordeal of a day behind the scenes at Heathrow. Getting to experience the £3,000 VIP butler service. Heading out on a training exercise with the fire crew and operating the water cannon. Using a flight simulator to pilot a plane. As I say, baffling. What hell it must be being Mary Berry.

Thankfully, there's still time to sample the airport food – and we're not talking a snatched bag from Upper Crust en route to the departure gate. The cod caught in Cornwall that very morning and served up with chips and mushy peas looks particularly good. DAVID BROWN
Your RT Books: page 138

Travel Man: 48 Hours in Athens

8.30pm C4

TRAVEL Dawn French's enthusiasm is a perfect counterpoint to Richard Ayoade's glumness on this "mythically minute trip" around the Greek capital. "I honestly couldn't be happier," she beams as she tucks into mini doughnuts smothered in honey and cinnamon. He thinks it's too much.

They do agree that having fish nibble the dead skin on their feet at Lake Vouliagmeni is too weird. But after a 14-course gastro-extravaganza that includes lamb's brain (he won't try it; she eats the lot), she pulls him up on his moaning.

"I bet you're going to complain that the glass of Madeira wine is too wet!" she says. He does. JR

Not Going Out

9.00pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

SITCOM In an issue of RT that celebrates classic sitcoms, this fits right in. The tenth series starts with a set-piece episode of the kind Lee Mack and Daniel Peak are skilled at constructing, gag by gag. The whole cast are on a plane waiting to take a parachute jump for charity, sparring and bickering as they always do, when there's a development...

What follows is a sitcom plot of the old school, a Rubik's cube of cowardice that exposes each of the characters and puts a welcome spotlight on Lee's bitterly acerbic father-in-law, the only one of the group with any parachute experience. "Here's a rich display of humbuggery," he glowers, as only Geoffrey Whitehead can. DAVID BUTCHER

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

I hate to say it, but death has really become Imran on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV). For months, his one job appeared to be to turn his solicitors' office into a sex den. He only ever seemed interested in dropping his briefs rather than reading briefs. But since the tragic demise of his sister Rana under a ton of rubble and basques at the underwear factory, Imran has had a new lease of life. Suddenly, he's Erin Brockovich, doing his damnedest to get hold of the health and safety report – and finding himself hauled off by the police for questioning (left).

Over at the cab office, Tim is still refusing to take his recent heart attack seriously as he messes around with a blood pressure monitor in the company of Dev and Steve. But thank goodness someone at Corrie finally realised that the typical diet of its characters (belly-buster breakfast at Roy's, hot pot lunch, chippie tea, pints in the Rovers and post-pub kebab) isn't going to work out well in the long term. DAVID BROWN

A House through Time

9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY For our Victorian forebears, life was precarious. It hits you again and again in David Olusoga's splendidly insightful series, how one mistake or stroke of bad luck could mean disgrace or the loss of a fortune or a family scattered to the winds – or all three.

Number 5 Ravensworth Terrace had its share of disasters in the period from 1861 to 1901 and Olusoga charts them all – from the scandal and bankruptcy that overtook a bottle manufacturer who lived there to the child who witnessed her alcoholic mother burnt to death. "It reads like a Victorian melodrama," says Olusoga. But amid the tragedy, there's a fascinating digression on spiritualism and why it appealed to death-obsessed Victorians. DAVID BUTCHER

The Widow

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA The Widow is the kind of story where Europeans travel deep into the dark heart of Africa to confront evil and secrets and pain. Georgia is trying to find out what happened to her husband: she thought he had died on an internal flight in the Congo but he now appears to be alive – somewhere.

There's an attack of the killer subplots as we learn about the bearded man from Iceland, Ariel, and see what happened on that aeroplane three years ago. (Don't watch if you have a fear of flying: this won't help.) But I'm also fascinated by the story of the child soldiers caught up with a murderous militia. Their plight seems more real and interesting than a woman on a quest for "answers". DAVID BUTCHER

Your RT Travel: page 142

Back to Life

10.35pm BBC1

COMEDY DRAMA New series Here's a premise designed to hook you in: Miri Matteson (co-creator and star Daisy Haggard) is released from prison after 18 years and tries to find her way in a society she no longer recognises. But only the characters – and not the viewers – initially know what her crime was.

What we start to glean is that it must have been something grave (Miri is called "a sick bitch" over the phone and her mum hides the kitchen knives away in a cupboard). However, in the early stages, Haggard is busy building up our sympathies for Miri, which she does rather neatly in an opening episode shot through with off-kilter humour and compassion. DAVID BROWN

OVER THE THRESHOLD
A cash-strapped couple (Charlotte Ritchie and Kiell Smith-Bynoe) inherit a country house

Ghosts

9.30pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.35pm)

COMEDY OF THE WEEK New series

The brilliant team behind Horrible Histories and Yonderland reconvene to plough their talents into a primetime sitcom (at last). They play the restless spirits of Button House, a country pile where they spent their lives – and now spend their afterlives, grumbling as they play best-of-20 games of chess or try to recall what food was like.

But the spooks are spooked when young couple Alison and Mike move in from the city, with plans to turn the place into – agonised shriek – a hotel. "We'll be overrun with people, taunting us with their life!" a ghost wails. So they set about haunting the humans into submission – and prove endearingly inept.

As you'd hope, the ensemble is, once it gets going, a well-oiled machine with standout turns from Mathew Baynton as an overwrought Victorian poet and Simon Farnaby as a randy MP doomed to spend eternity trouserless. In short: dead funny. DAVID BUTCHER

Pilgrimage: the Road to Santiago

iPlayer (ep1 expires today)

The Camino de Santiago, from the Pyrenees to the north-west corner of Spain, has been a Christian pilgrimage route for centuries, but in 2018 its spiritual significance faced a profound new test: a fun reality show starring seven mid-range celebrities. An emphasis on faith sets it apart from similar series.

Thompson turns 60

Those who fall into the overlap in the Venn diagram of Emma Thompson fans and Netflix subscribers can curate their own mini-festival of her work to mark her 60th birthday. She was schooled in fringe comedy, appearing in Cambridge Footlights in the early 1980s, but her film career took off with Howards End, earning her an Oscar. She's since played an omnipotent author in Stranger than Fiction, resisted the rise of Hitler in Alone in Berlin and had her heart broken in Love Actually. And she provided the voice of Mrs Potts in the live-action/CGI version of Beauty and the Beast. ANDREW COLLINS

Fear-inducing flora

10.00pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

The plants bite back in this influential creature feature with a vegetarian twist (review, p35). John Wyndham's original novel was inspired by HG Wells's The War of the Worlds, and the story – in particular its opening hospital sequence introducing a temporarily blind hero – would in turn inspire Alex Garland to write 28 Days Later... Rumour also has it that a Triffid was to appear in the alien mothership in Steven Spielberg's ET, but the scene was cut. STEVE MORRISSEY

Oceans of fun

P Lu over the Wall ★★★★

6.00pm Sky Premiere

A shy Japanese high-school student befriends a music-loving mermaid in this anime fantasy, showing here in its English dubbed version. It's at times mystifying and slightly bonkers, but irrepressibly entertaining all the same. And those mer-doggies are just the darnedest thing! TREVOR JOHNSTON

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

NOT MUCH TLC
Can Debbie (Ashley Jensen) and Dr Watson (John Hannah) be trusted?

PICK OF THE DAY Trust Me 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA The first series of Trust Me, which saw Jodie Whittaker play a nurse impersonating a doctor, drew comparisons with fake-medic shocker Paper Mask. This follow-up (set in a different hospital and featuring a new cast) is more like one of those hospital conspiracy thrillers you'd get in the 1970s written by Robin Cook. It's all shadows, body bags and professional healers who you worry might actually be killers.

Once again, we're on a ward, but here events play out through the eyes of Corporal Jamie McCain (Alfred Enoch), who's been left with paraplegia after being injured in the line of duty. Pretty soon, he starts to realise that mortality rates are much higher than they should be. Could there be an angel of death picking off victims? At this stage, furtive glances and loaded dialogue are making everyone appear suspicious. Though clinical lead Dr Archie Watson and physio Debbie Dorrell are far too chirpy – what's the betting they're up to no good? DAVID BROWN View from John Hannah's sofa: page 154

Your Home Made Perfect
8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY New series Here's a fresh take on the home renovation format. We're used to seeing an animated rendition of the plans that turn a cramped family house into a dream home, all open-plan living, but here participants wear virtual reality headsets to step into two architects' visions of their future home.

First to take part are Stirling couple Esther and Andy, whose box-like home is proving impractical for them, their children and their busy social life. But which design will they go for? A radical remodelling on different levels? Or one that reflects the way they live and makes the most of the space? There's a lot of "Wow" and "Amazing". And the final reveal is a delight. GILL CRAWFORD

Portrait Artist of the Year
8.00pm Sky Arts

ART After ten weeks, and 72 artists, the grand final presents us with three brilliant but nervous competitors. Their subject is Hollywood actor Laura Linney, currently to be seen as a money-laundering mum in the Netflix drama Ozark, but happy to sit quietly and run through some lines in her head. The finalists' contrasting game plans ("There's got to be inaccuracy"; "Painting for me is an investigation"), and the fact that they can each bring an extra portrait to the table, add spice and intrigue.

As ever, the competition is like a dance of light and you watch with a smile. The worthy winner's prize – the chance to paint Sir Tom Jones – can be seen at 9pm. MARK BRAXTON

Surgeons: at the Edge of Life
9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Inevitably, even the most experienced surgeon is faced with a complex procedure they've never done before. Maxillofacial surgeon Tim Martin undertakes a 12-hour operation on Loretta, 49, to remove a rare disease destroying her cheek bone and eye socket from the inside. Norah, 64, has an aggressive tumour situated between her brain and spine, which makes it almost impossible for neurosurgeon Alex Paluzzi to remove without leaving her disabled. Or worse.

Both ops push the boundaries – Norah's is carried out through her nose, while Loretta's cheek bone is replaced by a bone graft from her hip. Incredible. JANE RACKHAM

The Great British School Swap
9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series "Now is not the time to be building fences, now is the time to be knocking them down," says the head teacher of Tamworth Enterprise College, Staffordshire, whose 95 per cent white secondary school embarks on an exchange with Saltley Academy, Birmingham, which is less than one per cent white British. A group of 14-year-olds are exposed to each other's communities and air any suspicions of one another.

It's a revealing series, which shows that children have open minds. Exposure is key, as shown by the moment a white teenager is asked what Mecca is. His answer: "Is he a YouTuber?" KASIA DELGADO

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Here's a line of dialogue that you never get in Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm) when characters are having an argument: "Maybe we should talk about this in my office? In private?" Instead, people seem to prefer just screaming at each other in corridors and on the wards, usually in full view of patients and staff. There's a prime example here when Jac has a right go at a pregnant Zosia (far right) about her "poxy little affair". Cue Zosia then storming off, falling down a flight of stairs and swearing Nicky (right) to secrecy, even when it looks like the health of her baby could be at risk.

Elsewhere, Dom delivers a red-hot burn to the woman-formerly-known-as-his-mother when he calls her "Carole" rather than "Mum". And Xav has family problems too when his mum Nanette arrives in a distressed state. As her behaviour gets increasingly erratic, she ends up slapping him across the face. In full view of patients and staff. DAVID BROWN

Looking for Rembrandt

9.00pm BBC4

ART There's something haunting about the way Toby Jones voices Rembrandt, telling his life story from the Dutch master's perspective, from beyond his 350-year-old unmarked grave. This episode focuses on The Night Watch, his most famous, colossal 1642 painting, and its huge cultural significance to the Dutch people.

Art experts reveal why its unveiling marked the beginning of Rembrandt's downfall, as he started to produce fewer works and his personal life became blighted with tragedy and marital betrayal. Fourteen years later he was forced to apply for bankruptcy and sell his prized collection of art, part of Rembrandt's life that this programme shows to be fascinating in its way. KD

Don't Forget the Driver

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

SITCOM Toby Jones's woebegone coach driver Peter continues to be racked with guilt after ignoring the body of the dead migrant he found washed up on Bognor beach. But can he make amends with the young Eritrean woman Rita, who stowed away in his coach and fell into the clutches of a particularly nasty people trafficker?

His solution is to smuggle Rita into a party of smug Christians (led by a woman who sounds like Mrs Thatcher), which he's driving to a sanctuary for poor, abandoned donkeys. The ironies are obvious, and a little heavy-handed, but they don't seriously detract from an otherwise moving, witty and beautifully observed whole. BEN DOWELL

First Dates

10.00pm C4

REALITY Beautician Georgia wants a football-playing Cara Delevingne. Her date Georga absolutely fits that bill, but their meeting is so awkward you can almost see the tumbleweed rolling through the restaurant.

It's a very different situation at the table where excitable owl sanctuary volunteer Krystal meets James, a perfect gentleman... who'd like to be a penguin. There's not a silent moment.

Also hoping to find love is part-time rock musician Josh (who admits his love life is in dire straits) and "pocket rocket" Jo – not that they're paired up together. That really wouldn't work. Actually, there's a part of Jo's date that doesn't work too well either. JR

IN PERU
Ben Fogle checks out a makeshift home

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY That's it, I've decided to up sticks and become a kite-surfing instructor in darkest Peru, like the couple in this laid-back series nine opener. Softly spoken former soldier Scott and tough Northamptonshire woman Casey went from backpackers to business owners after falling for the water sport's meditative pleasures.

It looks like a rewarding lifestyle, but it's not all plain... surfing, and Ben's paternal instinct kicks in when he visits their makeshift home, in a settlement that was devastated by a tsunami in 2007. Despite their ramshackle habitat, returning to the UK isn't an option for either of them. "The idea makes me feel horrible inside," says Casey.

It's a welcome return for the adventurer, although you suspect he (perhaps wisely) only scratches the surface of a potentially dark backstory here. GARY ROSE

The Misadventures of Romesh Ranganathan

iPlayer (ep1 expires today)

Every semi-comical travel series claims to go "off the beaten track", but this one – first shown last year – does. Ranganathan displays a talent for thoughtful exploration, as well as weary one-liners, as he shows us new facets of three unpopular holiday destinations: Ethiopia, Albania and, in the opening episode, Haiti.

8.00 Blue Planet II
3/10. Coral Reefs. Coral reefs occupy less than 0.1 per cent of the ocean floor, yet they are home to a quarter of all known marine species. Time-lapse photography illuminates the life cycles of the tiny reef polyps that lay the foundations for structures so large they can be seen from space. There's also a spawning spectacle as corals, fish and invertebrates release a snowstorm of eggs in the hope of generating new reefs.
Producer Jonathan Smith; Series producer Mark Brownlow Repeated 2am (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Looking for Rembrandt
RT 2/3. As Rembrandt paints The Night Watch and is at the height of his fame, his wife lies dying. Her death begins a decline in Rembrandt's output of paintings, as he pours himself into etching erotically charged pictures. He also begins an affair with his son's nursemaid, which ends in her being committed to a house of correction – a punishment Rembrandt himself took part in. Further shame comes in 1656 when he declares bankruptcy. Toby Jones narrates the sorry tale. See p75.
Director Tim Niel; Executive producer Ross Wilson
Signed repeat 3am (S) (AD) (HD)

10.00 Bloody Queens: Elizabeth and Mary
The explosive relationship between Elizabeth I and Mary, Queen of Scots is explored in this drama documentary, using reconstructions and expert opinion to bring to life intimate letters between the two. Of all the dangers the Tudor monarch had to survive, none was so personally intense as the perilous rivalry with her cousin Mary.

Legacy of a lodger

Man in the Attic ★★★

10.00pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

The source novel (The Lodger) for this film was written by Marie Belloc Lowndes (pictured), the sister of Hilaire Belloc (author of Cautionary Tales for Children) and great-great grandaughter of chemist, political theorist and theologian Joseph Priestley – the man who discovered oxygen. Everyone from Ivor Novello (in Hitch's 1926 version) to Simon Baker (in 2009) has starred in adaptations of her story about a mystery house guest suspected of being Jack the Ripper, with this 1953 film featuring Jack Palance in the lead. ELLIE PORTER

Remembering Agnès

Faces Places ★★★★ Netflix

Fond obituaries poured in for French artist/photographer/film-maker Agnès Varda, who died last month aged 90. She was credited with presaging the French New Wave with her 1955 film La Pointe Courte, and the work has flowed at a constant, playful lick ever since. Her documentaries are particularly enjoyable, with The Gleaners and I inspired by those living on the margins of society, while her final film, the Oscar-nominated Faces Places (2017), follows her on a road trip with Banksy-like enigma JR. ANDREW COLLINS

Their first case

Bad Boys ★★★★

9.30pm Sky Action

Martin Lawrence and Will Smith are set to reteam in Bad Boys for Lif3 next year, 25 years after this movie introduced them as wise-cracking cops. A huge hit in its day, the film also set director Michael Bay on his career of city-trashing excess (The Rock, Transformers). You can also see the 2003 sequel later tonight. JAMIE HEALY

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

IN THE RIGHT PLACE
Photojournalist Lee Berger (Alessandro Nivola) is looking for the perfect shot

PICK OF THE DAY

Chimerica 9.00pm C4

DRAMA New series "Chimerica" is the term coined by historian Niall Ferguson to suggest the two-headed beast of the Chinese and American economies. Playwright Lucy Kirkwood then used it as the title of her acclaimed stage play about a US photojournalist, which some found televisual in its approach. Well, now it has become television – a four-parter – and the good news is, it doesn't feel stagey.

It also doesn't feel like your average TV drama. It's a loosely wrapped, wide-ranging story that revolves around Lee (Alessandro Nivola), a photographer whose career is fading. Thirty years ago he was responsible for the famous image from Tiananmen Square of a protestor blocking a column of tanks. These days his paper sends him to Beijing to shoot video at a business fair. Then a chance comment from a local friend makes him wonder if "Tank Man" might still be alive and sparks a quest that could give his career new meaning. DAVID BUTCHER See feature: page 16

Location, Location, Location

8.00pm C4

PROPERTY The world might be in turmoil, but somehow it's reassuring to see Kirstie Allsopp (in her lovely frocks) and Phil Spencer back and joking around, finishing each other's sentences and helping people find a new home.

Their first hunt in the new series takes them to Surrey. Their clients are two couples at the same stage in their lives, renting with a toddler and a baby on the way. They have different budgets and very detailed wish lists; one pair has looked at dozens of houses, the other none at all. "They're trying to find a needle in a haystack," says Phil, groaning slightly. "I think they should just find a haystack." GILL CRAWFORD

MotherFatherSon

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Over the course of the series, about two thirds of this drama's initial audience has melted away, and it's hard to blame them, really. I'm impressed by those who have stuck around, because the story never makes it easy on us. I don't mean it's gruelling – although that's true at times – it's just oddly drifting and unfocused.

At one stage tonight, a key plot point, to do with the investigator we saw murdered in episode one, is resolved in throwaway style. Then it's back to watching the super-rich snap at each other in nice rooms. Let's hope next week's final instalment delivers a denouement that justifies the journey we've been on. Well, some of us. DAVID BUTCHER

The Bay

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA The central mystery of this Morecambe crime drama isn't what happened to troubled teenage twins Holly and Dylan and who is behind it. The real mystery is why DS Lisa Armstrong (Morven Christie) didn't own up to her boss from the start about her drunken fling with the prime suspect on the night in question. A quick "Can I have a word, boss?" would have done it, but no.

And in tonight's episode that mistake catches up with Lisa – as we knew it would. There are strong performances all over the story, including Adam Long as a drug kingpin and Imogen King as his latest courier (and Lisa's daughter). When will Lisa rumble what her own kids have been up to? DAVID BUTCHER

Inside John Lewis: Profits and Problems

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY The department store that the eponymous businessman set up in 1864 has become part of the fabric of Britain. Renowned initially for its drapery (London's Oxford Street shop originally sold only silks), it's now equally famous for its partnership scheme, Christmas ads and "never knowingly undersold" principle.

However, this cracking little documentary is more than a puff for the company or a glimpse of "life on the shop floor". It takes us through the company's history and ethos, discusses its efforts to keep up to date and reminds us why we all – including the royals – have come to trust it so much. JANE RACKHAM

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Actor Greg Wood, who has recently returned to Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm, ITV) as horrible loan shark Rick Neelan, has a face that seems tailor-made for on-screen villainy. I mean this as a compliment because he's very good at what he does, but with that stare and sneer, he does look like a Crimewatch photofit come to life. Harsh? But can you honestly imagine him in a Pride and Prejudice-style lake scene? Didn't think so.

Tonight, Rick is making more trouble for poor old Gary Windass (Mikey North, left), who, at the moment, seems to end each day with his head in his hands, ruing both his bad luck and the terrible choices he's made in life. Day one working as Rick's collector sees him discover that his first client is Vicky, who, in case you've forgotten, is the mum of teen menace Tyler Jefferies. But how will Gary react to the sight of Rick's merciless cohort Sharon ransacking Vicky's possessions and knocking her about? DAVID BROWN

Salvage Hunters: the Restorers

9.00pm Quest

FACTUAL Antiques expert Drew Pritchard spends his time finding and transforming junk into things you might actually want in your house. In this spin-off of his Salvage Hunters series, the focus is on the skilled craftspeople who do the physical work of reviving faded but precious objects.

"Anything can be restored, if you find the right person," says Pritchard, eyeing up a stuffed heron in north Wales that is "in a bit of a state" before calling on one of the UK's lead taxidermists to help out. The restorers also tackle a piece of furniture that looks like a torture instrument, and turns out to be almost the same thing – a Victorian dentist's chair. KASIA DELGADO

Urban Myths

9.00pm Sky Arts

COMEDY It would be easy to dismiss this particular encounter as "fake news", but in the 1980s Donald Trump and Andy Warhol met on multiple occasions – once when Trump was holding cheerleader auditions at Trump Tower for his newly acquired American football team. He invited a celebrity panel, and Warhol took up his offer largely, it seems, for the opportunity to challenge Trump over failing to pay for artwork he'd commissioned. This episode captures that farcical encounter.

Anthony Atamanuik – a comedian known for his impressions of Trump – has him absolutely down pat, delivering Trumpian lines with a believability that's beyond parody. FRANCES TAYLOR

Veep

10.10pm Sky Atlantic

SITCOM Dark, vicious and sweary, Veep gets more unpleasant with each passing series, and this final run pushes the profanity envelope. It's still shockingly funny, though, with one memorable scene tonight involving a candidates' debate where buffoon Jonah is confused by a question about the African country of Niger. ("You can't say that! It doesn't matter how you pronounce it... But for the record, I think the United States should send troops into countries like N-word.")

Meanwhile, Selina is troubled by a digitally savvy opponent and asks her staffers if her campaign has an app yet. "Of course we do, ma'am. The current version only asks for donations. And for some reason deletes your address book." DAVID BUTCHER

WHAT A VIEW
Our unique home

Earth from Space

9.00pm BBC1 (Scotland: 11.05pm)

DOCUMENTARY New series "This is our home as we've never seen it before," says narrator Chiwetel Ejiofor. Unless, that is, you have one of those glossy books full of aerial photographs that find beauty in the patterns of the Earth's surface seen from high above.

That's the deal here, and the perspective from very high above (400km) is often dreamily beautiful. But the trick the series plays is to zoom in on different habitats – the Okavango delta in Botswana or the ice-scapes of Lake Baikal in Siberia – and see what lives there. The overall effect is pleasantly sedate (maybe too sedate) until one sequence leaps out – an aerial view of Chinese students on a vast parade ground doing kung fu movements in sync: it's mesmerising. DAVID BUTCHER

Me, My Selfie and I with Ryan Gander

iPlayer (expires today)

Conceptual artist Ryan Gander is a fantastic documentarist: curious, honest, sharp and imaginative. This film bills itself as an exploration of the craze for selfies, but broadens out to question how our sense of self generally is shaped by the internet. It looks at the quest for likes, the rise of super-popular YouTubers, and the heavily curated second selves we post on dating sites.

What shall it prophet a man?

Exodus: Gods and Kings ★★★
6.10pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Christian Bale plays Moses – revered in Islam, Judaism and Christianity – in Ridley Scott's surprisingly rationalist retelling of the prophet's life. A stark contrast to the more supernatural Moses of Theodore Roberts, in Cecil B DeMille's 1923 silent epic The Ten Commandments. Or Charlton Heston in DeMille's lavish 1956 remake of his own film. Burt Lancaster, Val Kilmer, Dougray Scott, Ben Kingsley and even Mel Brooks (in History of the World Part 1) have also all had a crack at playing the biblical hero. STEVE MORRISSEY

Classic Hitchcock

The 39 Steps ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Available to stream and download all week from iPlayer, this adaptation of John Buchan's novel brims with Alfred Hitchcock's characteristic wit and verve. Utilising the director's familiar innocent-man-on-the-run plot, the story sees Robert Donat's visiting Canadian get dragged into a conspiracy after an outing to a London music hall. The chemistry between him and Madeleine Carroll's icy blonde is a rare treat – particularly when they are forced to share a room – quite shocking in 1935! ANDREW COLLINS

An in-tents experience

P The Festival ★★★
Amazon Prime

This comedy of misfortune sees Joe Thomas trying to get over his recent heartbreak by attending a music festival. The Inbetweeners star doesn't deviate too far from his TV persona as a likeable nitwit, but elicits sympathy as he enters a world of chaos, intoxication and painful-looking piercings.

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

FACE THE FACTS
David Attenborough presents a no-holds-barred exploration of global warming

PICK OF THE DAY Climate Change: the Facts 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Speaking about the more forthright tone of this one-off, David Attenborough recently said that the time had come for the BBC to "make firm statements about what until five or ten years ago were matters of opinion... It's about what the facts are. And the facts are the facts are the facts." So he and a procession of distinguished scientists give those facts to us straight, revealing the changes already happening around the world and the prospects if major reductions in $CO_2$ emissions are not made in the next decade and global warming exceeds 1.5 degrees Celsius.

A preview was unavailable as RT went to press, but we're promised that the programme will also include reasons for optimism, looking at the work of grassroots campaigners including Greta Thunberg – the teenage activist in Sweden who organised school strikes on climate change that were echoed around the globe. DAVID BUTCHER

The David Butcher column: page 41

Celebrity Painting Challenge

8.00pm BBC1 (Wales: Fri 9pm BBC2)

ART Capturing movement on canvas is hugely difficult, explains judge Lachlan Goudie, before revealing that the first task is to paint a brood of constantly fluttering and flapping chickens. "Smells a bit fowl in here," jokes Mariella Frostrup.

It's such a nightmarish challenge that one of the painters starts from scratch with only 15 minutes to go. "This is just a mess!" we hear several times from different quarters, while a cackling Phil Tufnell keeps nipping across the studio to ask his new best mate "Lol" (Laurence Llewelyn-Bowen) for guidance... or just a hug. With only three spaces left on the gallery wall, there's no time for larking about, Phil. JANE RACKHAM

Bangers and Cash

8.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY New series The car restoration programme is a popuar genre on channels nestled far down the electronic programme guide. Yet while this new series has plenty of blokes cooing over engine blocks, it's really more of a gentle observational documentary about the Mathewsons classic car auctioneers in Thornton le Dale, North Yorkshire. Headed by patriarch Derek, the firm is staffed by family members all the way down to 11-year-old Charlie.

Film of their work is interspersed with typical family grumbles, which is hardly riveting – but then Derek finds a rare, dilapidated 1960s Mini Cooper S crumbling in a garage and the excitement builds to an astonishing auction. DAVID CRAWFORD

Pose

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Mother's Day Ball, 1989, is the backdrop for a fast-moving episode showing Blanca's humiliating debut on the scene seven years earlier, how she first came under Elektra's wing, and what motherhood and womanhood really mean now to these two trans women – especially as Elektra finally undergoes her op and Blanca attends her real momma's funeral.

Pose has mechanical plotting, iffy acting and cups of American corn, but it's soapily entertaining and can surprise with touching moments as it tells stories of trans and gay lives that are rarely heard. It only dies when it stops for the spats of those straight dudes toiling in Trump Tower. PATRICK MULKERN

Joanne Dennehy: Serial Killer

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY It may sound ghoulish, but there's something horribly fascinating about the CCTV footage of Joanne Dennehy openly flirting with the police officers who arrested her following a 2013 violent killing spree in Cambridgeshire. There she is, teasing her hair, laughing and complimenting them.

As presenter Susanna Reid discovers, it's the kind of superficial charm you can expect to see from a psychopath – and, as it turns out, the type of manipulative tactics employed by Dennehy even during her teenage years. Hers is a truly monstrous, if riveting, story, but one that could leave you feeling pretty wretched by its end. DAVID BROWN

Death Threat Thursday strikes again! Emmerdale (7pm, 8pm ITV) loves to make you think that a character is going to die just before 7.30pm on a Thursday evening because it wants you to return at 8pm for the cliffhanger's resolution. This time, the writers have Matty (Ash Palmisciano, right) in their sights. He's struggling to hide his nerves as he waits to have his operation. And with good reason, it seems: in a later scene we see nurses rushing towards the theatre as mum Moira watches on frantically.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Over on Doctors (1.45pm BBC1), there's the most unexpected soap guest appearance of the week. Murray Head, singer of chart hit One Night in Bangkok and older brother to Merlin star Anthony Head, turns up playing ageing rock drummer Brian "Sticky" Burns. Valerie is making a home call to visit Sticky, but why on earth is his carer Geraldine hurrying downstairs while buttoning up her blouse? All will be revealed. Or not, if Geraldine's quick enough. DAVID BROWN

Grand Designs: the Street

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY Your home is probably made of bricks and mortar. Or maybe cutting-edge cement and glass. Paul and Blanka are building theirs using "hempcrete" – "non-hallucinogenic cannabis" mixed with water and lime to form a kind of eco concrete with "the texture of horse poo". It's highly insulating and structurally sound, according to Kevin McCloud.

However, although the materials are cheap, their eco home is costing a lot more in labour than Paul and Blanka had anticipated. So, despite slogging away at the project, they eventually have to ask for help from their prospective neighbours. "It's a house built from friendship really," says McCloud. JR

Lee and Dean

10.00pm C4

SITCOM Last week the death of Dean's dad appeared to open the way for a reconciliation with erstwhile workmate Lee and the object of his undying love. But Lee's unwitting, casual cruelties to those close to him and the reading of the dearly departed's will open up more fissures in their relationship.

Once again the razor-sharp script by Miles Chapman, Mark O'Sullivan and Sam Underwood is replete with light, shade, heart, wit, fizzing banter and underlying homoeroticism. It's also blessed with the power to surprise, something that's best exemplified by the sight of Dean in bed reading Simon de Beauvoir's The Second Sex with new girlfriend (and feminist) Dani... Honest. BEN DOWELL

Berlin Station

10.05pm More4

DRAMA It's taken a while for the second series of this slightly sleazy political thriller to get here. It's set in 2017, and there's a post-Trump election feel in the air, and the writing. Paranoia is everywhere – the CIA's Berlin office is not trusted in the aftermath of the leaking affair, with the former head of station being asked by the new US ambassador to spy on his former colleagues.

Undercover operative Daniel Miller (Richard Armitage) has recovered from being shot and is now back in action, infiltrating a far-right German organisation, and demonstrating some impressive resourcefulness. But where's the show's star player, Rhys Ifans? It's not the same without him. GILL CRAWFORD

ANIMAL LOVER
Martin Clunes gets affectionate with a wolf in north Devon

Martin Clunes: My Travels and Other Animals

8.30pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY New series
Over the past decade Martin Clunes has filmed with snakes, elephants, monkeys and, of course, dogs. He loves all creatures – well, maybe not snakes – and is fascinated by our relationship with them.

These snippets compiled from all those documentaries reminds us of the time he nervously let a wolf nuzzle his face in Devon, helped release a pack of African dogs into the wild in Tanzania and met a modern-day Robinson Crusoe who, apart from his dingo Polly, lived in splendid isolation on Australia's Restoration Island.

They're all magical encounters, but most delightful is seeing Clunes – under the tutelage of horse whisperer Monty Roberts – have a "conversation" with his beloved horse Chester. Poignantly, we learn, Chester died a few years ago. JR

DISCOVER TV

The Internet's Dirtiest Cleaners

iPlayer (expires today)

When content on social media and internet video networks is "moderated", what does that mean? A disturbing Storyville documentary goes to Manila, where low-paid workers sift through thousands of awful images every day, weeding out the worst of humanity's online urges. The psychological impact on those people isn't the only troubling consequence of extreme web content.

DISCOVER TV KIDS

More cast Good Friday (S) (AD) (HD)

8.00 Celebrity Painting Challenge
RT 3/4. It's the semi-final and judges Daphne Todd and Lachlan Goudie want the contestants to show how well they handle movement. The studio resembles a farmyard in the warm-up exercise as the celebs capture fleeting feathered subjects on canvas. The main challenge is to depict the puppet Joey from the stage play War Horse in all its fluent articulation. While Jane Seymour struggles to keep things fluid, Josie d'Arby and Laurence Llewelyn-Bowen go head to head painting a triptych. After the last three spaces on the gallery wall are taken, the three finalists are announced. Mariella Frostrup presents. See p94.
Director Justin Lennox-Bradley; Series producer Louisa Gray (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Climate Change: the Facts
RT Sir David Attenborough explores the science of climate change and potential solutions to its global threat. Scientists, including climatologists Dr James Hansen and Dr Michael Mann, and Professor of Energy Policy Catherine Mitchell, detail the processes by which global warming led to the extreme weather of recent years and the accelerating rate at which the world's ice is melting and raising sea levels. They also explain how deforestation is exacerbating the problem by adding to $CO_2$ in the atmosphere. See page 94.
Producer Serena Davies; Exec producer Sacha Baveystock (S) (AD) (HD)

The best of Sky, iPlayer, Netflix and beyond

Beating the blacklist

Trumbo ★★★ *BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

The paranoia-fuelled blacklisting of film-makers in the 1940s and 50s provides the backdrop for this portrait of screenwriter Dalton Trumbo. Bryan Cranston brings stature and eccentricity to the role, while director Jay Roach relishes the Tinseltown milieu, cleverly blending newsreel of the HUAC hearings into the unfolding drama. However, the film busies itself too much with karaoke star-spotting to reach any deeper understanding of a shameful period of American history. ANDREW COLLINS

Adventure on demand

P Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Men Tell No Tales ★★★ *Netflix

The pirate's life continues for Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp), as he helps Henry Turner (Brenton Thwaites), the son of his former shipmate Will (Orlando Bloom), find the Trident of Poseidon. On their tails is Captain Salazar (Javier Bardem), an undead sailor with a score to settle. Although it's not the best in the series, this fifth film (also known as Salazar's Revenge in the UK) reminds us once again why Depp's creation is such an enduring cinema icon. JAMES LUXFORD

Big John stands tall

Rio Bravo ★★★★★

6.15pm TCM

A sheriff and a motley group of helpers stand firm against a ruthless land baron in this western from Howard Hawks. Particularly affecting is the wordless opening sequence, as John Wayne attempts to preserve the drunken Dean Martin's dignity. Underrated in its day, it's now regarded as a classic. TONY SLOMAN

GOOD FRIDAY

PILGRIM'S REST
There's a treat in store as the tired travellers finally reach Rome

PICK OF THE DAY

Pilgrimage: the Road to Rome 9.00pm BBC2 (Wales: 10pm)

DOCUMENTARY Whatever Good Friday means to you, this series conclusion will offer food for reflection. You may reasonably feel that a group of over-ebullient B-listers are not who you go to for spiritual uplift, but hold on.

Because at the end of their walking pilgrimage along the traditional Via Francigena, something extraordinary happens. After they've been blown away, to varying degrees, by the baroque glories of St Peter's Basilica, the celebs get the news that they have been granted a private audience: the next day they will meet the Pope. "This is obviously a massive, massive deal," says Mehreen Baig though, to be fair, she has earlier found walking through woods for the first time a revelation ("I've seen places like this on Google.")

But as the group puts their individual reservations to one side, the meeting with Pope Francis proves surprising, moving and pretty extraordinary. Even one of the group's least religious members says tearfully, "That is what I've been waiting for for a long time." DAVID BUTCHER

Britain's Easter Story

9.00am BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE Choirmaster Gareth Malone and "godmother of gospel" conductor Karen Gibson are on a mission to find out how we celebrate Easter – in the past and today – with a special focus on song and music.

Gareth's quest to learn about both surviving and long-forgotten Easter traditions takes him from Holy Island in Northumberland to the Holy Mountain in the Brecon Beacons, where Jesus's death is said to have "split the rocks" on Good Friday. Meanwhile Karen uncovers some of the stories behind traditional Easter hymns and sees the efforts of one famous cathedral to remind visitors of the meaning of this important Christian festival. JANE RACKHAM

Moominvalley

5.30pm, 6.00pm Sky 1

ANIMATION If you have fond memories of the 1980s stop-motion series The Moomins, you may approach this new, CGI version of Tove Jansson's beloved stories with some trepidation. As with many modern adaptations of treasured children's books, it groans under the weight of a starry cast, including Rosamund Pike, Matt Berry, Bel Powley, Jennifer Saunders, Alison Steadman, Warwick Davis, Richard Ayoade and Kate Winslet. It's in a safe pair of hands – Wallace & Gromit: the Curse of the Were-Rabbit director Steve Box – looks gorgeous, and, as a crowdfunded project, I suspect the charm of the original tales will not be disregarded. DAVID CRAWFORD

BBC Young Dancer 2019

8.00pm BBC4

ARTS After a nine-month search for the UK's most gifted dancers aged 16–21, the first ever BBC Young Dancer final was held at London's Sadler's Wells Theatre in 2015. The winner was Connor Scott, a mesmerising 17-year-old ballet dancer from Northumberland who had hated ballet when he first tried it.

This third contest is presented by Anita Rani and Ore Oduba, kicking off this week by focusing on five finalists in the South Asian dance category. Upcoming episodes will follow the finalists in the other three categories – contemporary dance, street dance and ballet – before the winners of those categories compete for the ultimate title of Young Dancer. KASIA DELGADO

British Made with John Prescott

8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY New series Prezza in a factory hairnet doesn't half put me in mind of Ena Sharples. He has a slightly cheerier disposition than the Corrie battleaxe, though his banter with the workers at the Lea & Perrins Worcestershire Sauce HQ can seem a touch vinegary. "I bet it's easier than driving a Jag," he says, operating some machinery, to which master maker Bill replies, "I wouldn't know."

Back at the Prescott residence, you can tell wife Pauline is grateful John's off on his little expeditions. She's got her copy of Vogue and her glass of Baileys and looks very relaxed. I wouldn't be surprised if she was the one who got this series commissioned. DAVID BROWN

I'm starting to fret about the fate of Louise Mitchell (Tilly Keeper) on EastEnders (8.30pm, BBC1). I seem to remember when Dominic Treadwell-Collins took over as executive producer in 2013, his first major storyline was to have Lucy Beale bumped off. Now, with new boss Kate Oates's plotlines having finally kicked in, I'm wondering whether the life of another blonde teenager could be put on the line. Certainly, this Midge geezer who's arrived on the scene appears to have ill intent and, judging by the recently released spring 2019 trailer, it looks as though Louise is about to be thrown into the back of a Land Rover and driven away at speed. No wonder Keanu is starting to fear that she could be in danger.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

For comedy, we have the new salon opening, but the sound of footfall isn't exactly deafening. I'm just happy, though, that the writers have remembered that Diane Parish can be just as funny as her screen sister Tameka Empson. DAVID BROWN

Cruising with Jane McDonald

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY I expect a certain amount of holiday camp from Jane McDonald, but it's got to the point where I've begun to think that everything she says is a double entendre. "I love proper shag pile," she purrs about her cabin's carpet. "It's a very proud cockerel," she comments after doing some tile painting. "I'm in tart heaven," she announces when visiting a bakery.

But I'll forgive her all that because she makes for a terrifically enthusiastic travelling companion on this trip down the river Douro in Portugal. And I can't get enough of the way she says "crrrruise". She rolls her "r"s beautifully. See! Now even I'm at it! DAVID BROWN

The Comedy Years

9.00pm ITV3

DOCUMENTARY New series It may not be the most original idea to chart societal changes through comedy, but when the material is as good as it is here, then who am I to argue? The year under scrutiny is 1979 and it doesn't come much more polarising than this: in politics, it was trade unions v Margaret Thatcher, while on TV, the satirical Not the Nine o'Clock News took on the bow-tied traditional stand-ups found in The Comedians.

Some of those who were there at the time (Janet Street-Porter, Clive Anderson) offer entertaining recollections, but it's the clips that are the most surprising, such as Canned Laughter, an early ITV vehicle for Rowan Atkinson in which he played a kind of proto Mr Bean. DAVID BROWN

The Graham Norton Show

10.30pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11pm)

CHAT SHOW Anne Hathaway, Rebel Wilson and Daniel Radcliffe are seasoned guests on Graham's sofa. They probably get asked back so often because they're such good sports, whether they're asked to put on accents, sing or pretend to fly, and they each have a nice line in self-deprecating humour.

However, for some of us, they will be eclipsed by the presence of Jodie Comer, Bafta-nominated for her role as mesmerising psychopathic assassin Villanelle in Killing Eve. The second series has just started in the US, and is due to air here later this year – but in the meantime, you can re-live the first run with Friday-night repeats on BBC1. JR

EARLY INFLUENCER
Woody Guthrie's folk songs are as resonant as ever

Woody Guthrie: Three Chords and the Truth

9.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Despite scant mainstream success in his prime, "Dust Bowl Balladeer" Woody Guthrie is nowadays widely renowned as Bob Dylan's inspiration. His songs feel like a scratchy, sepia snapshot of a bygone America, vividly illuminating how much society has changed over the space of just one lifetime.

Of course, Guthrie's three-chord odes to the oppressed and downtrodden are still relevant today – it's especially interesting to see some lyrics he penned about "Old Man Trump", Donald's dad. Let's just say he wasn't a fan.

Surely only suffering can produce this much soul, and there are some heartbreaking moments in this touching and inspirational film. Guthrie historian Will Kaufman puts it well when he says, "He wrote lightly about dark things."

Amazon Prime

Streaming services have become as ruthless as normal TV channels, killing off lots of dramas after one or two series. This Los Angeles-set crime show, however, marches on into a new, fifth run. Sky-high user ratings and the sense that the drama has only recently come into its own have kept it alive, along with the programme's rock-solid storytelling and a superb ensemble cast.

Discover film

The best of Sky, iPlayer, Netflix and beyond

Fun-size superheroes

P Ant-Man and the Wasp ★★★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

Director Peyton Reed's superhero sequel ramps up the quirkiness, self-deprecating humour and winningly goofy lack of pretension. Ant-Man (Paul Rudd) breaks house arrest with the help of the Wasp (Evangeline Lilly), as she and her dad, Dr Hank Pym (MIchael Douglas), try to rescue her mother from the Quantum Realm. Rudd engagingly deadpans his way through a fun adventure that plays every which way with the comedic possibilities of scale. ALAN JONES

Travolta the mimic

Face/Off ★★★★

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

There was fun to be had for both stars of 1997's Face/Off, although John Travolta seemed to relish mimicking Nicolas Cage the most. In an interview for Total Film, he said he'd "absorbed a lot of Nic over the years. The way he slows down and enunciates... he's almost poetic." Travolta credits his mimicry skills to his Irish mother: "We all grew up with this fine art of how well you could get someone down." The following year saw him doing a pretty good impersonation of US president Bill Clinton in Primary Colors. ANDREW COLLINS

Hail the common people

Pulp: a Film about Life, Death and Supermarkets ★★★ *NowTV

Pulp's final show of their 2012 reunion tour is given an unorthodox spin in this film, which features interviews with Jarvis Cocker and the band alongside everyday folk from their home city of Sheffield. There are some amusing moments, although having a group of pensioners singing Help the Aged is no substitute for the real thing. JAMIE HEALY

The night manager

For 25 years, Radio 5 Live presenter Rhod Sharp has been helping the sleepless to make it through the night

INTERVIEW BY NICHOLAS LEZARD

Up All Night
Daily 1.00am Radio 5 Live

It's half-past two in the morning. The country is asleep, and I am not. But then I remember that not everything has closed down. Inside the radio there is still a living world…

Late-night radio has its own rhythms, its own cadences, its own feel. Being something of a night owl, I've always enjoyed the special, hushed mood of radio after midnight. There's something more intimate about it, perhaps because the still watches of the night are, for those awake, almost always lonely times.

One craves company, but nothing too energetic. I make an exception for the World Service, which takes over from Radio 4 after 1am. It starts with Business Matters, which has a rather nerve-jangling theme tune and isn't really my cup of tea, but at least World Service's international brief means you can imagine its programmes being broadcast during normal working hours, but from around the globe.

The greatest kind of late-night radio used to be the phone-in. This would be when fellow insomniacs or gentle cranks would be patiently indulged by the host. Peter Cook, in the last years of his too-brief life, would call up Clive Bull's LBC show in the persona of Sven, a melancholic Norwegian fisherman stranded, for some reason, in London's Swiss Cottage. "In Norway, the phone-in show is mainly devoted to subjects, you know, like… fish." I remember listening to this before Cook's cover was blown, and marvelling at a culture that could indulge such surreal ramblings.

There is a chill to the night, too: I will never forget the small hours of one night in 1997, keeping sleepless vigil at the kitchen table, when I heard the announcement that Princess Diana had been seriously injured in a car crash in Paris.

For some reason, though, I have gone off the idea of late-night phone-ins. One wants mild eccentricity, shepherded by a tactful presenter, and not – how best to put this? – strong political opinions that aren't conducive to relaxation. It's bad enough during the day.

Which is where Rhod Sharp, one of the hosts of 5 Live's Up All Night show, comes in. He has guests on his show, but they tend to be experts in their fields, and so don't sound as though they're calling from a bedsit in Swiss Cottage haunted by the smell of herring. And the remarkable thing about his show is that he has been hosting it for 25 years.

'Rhod Sharp's courtesy is a quality to be cherished'

If you haven't listened to it before, it's worth doing so: especially as a masterclass in civil discourse, in keeping things ticking over nicely. "Well, this is all very exciting," I recently heard him say, in tones that didn't themselves generate excitement; in fact, they soothed. Considering that he was, at the time (if memory serves), talking to a pro-Trump political analyst, this was quite an achievement.

Another interesting fact about the show: Sharp broadcasts from a studio at his home in Massachusetts. When I first discovered this, I wondered if it wasn't, in some way, cheating.

JANE ANDERSON

One likes to think of the presenters being as isolated from human contact as the listener. If it's still light outside when he starts broadcasting, can he feel the same as we do?

"I just wrapped up a fascinating discussion with an Australian researcher into circadian rhythms," Sharp told me. "Over the years I've become an observer of the capacity of some people to do night shifts better than others. I realised I was one of the former, but we are increasingly aware of the amount of research that now shows the consequences of night work for both heart and mental health.

"I have been blessed with robust health, but given that I had been doing nights for at least 15 years by 2005, I noted increasing signs of memory, mood and other impairment. I love the gig, but I wasn't going to die for it, so I moved my microphone across five time zones." But, he adds, "I always use the programme clock, and I am completely in the moment. When I say it's half-past four, I really mean it and indeed feel it."

THE OTHER GREAT thing about his show is its international slant; and once one knows he's broadcasting from the US, the show begins to actually sound American, despite his mellifluous Perthshire accent. This is both deliberate and a by-product of circumstance. "It was always the way we built the programme [when he presented it in the UK]. Our first thought was, where do we get live guests at 2am? Oh. New York. And so on. There are people still awake in the US who might just pick up the phone to us, and they did."

Sharp's delivery is measured, slow and suggestive of closeness: he broadcasts, he has said, with his mouth just an inch from the microphone. Somehow, you can tell this. He lets his guests talk at length; I don't think I've ever heard him interrupt. This is very good for listeners who, for the most part, are either trying to stay awake or to go to sleep, and it also suggests a reason for his longevity. Sharp is 65, and sounds as if he could keep going for decades longer.

This willingness to let people have their say is also a kind of politeness, and courtesy is a quality that, in these troubled times, should be cherished. "I'm a naturally polite person – perhaps too polite," he says. "My mother wouldn't have it any other way. On the other hand, you don't catch a cat without a bowl of milk. I'm sure that's a Chinese proverb – or if it isn't, it should be."

You can, of course, thanks to the magic of BBC Sounds, listen to this parade of sane, intelligent discourse on important matters at any time you want. But it isn't quite the same as catching it live. He makes the night less threatening. Long may he continue.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Patient Undone
Tuesday 11.00am Radio 4

On a sunny autumn day in 2017 Dr Deborah Bowman (below), a professor in medical ethics and law, was diagnosed with breast cancer that had spread into her lymph nodes. She elected to have a double mastectomy.

This devastating news didn't just affect her personal life, but also how she approached her lectures to students: should consultants tell the "whole truth" to patients or hold things back to spare them from any terrifying possibilities?

In a sequence of life-affirming and surprisingly jovial discussions with her doctor at London's Royal Marsden Hospital, Bowman offers an insight into how not just her body, but her mindset changed after her diagnosis and subsequent operation – from telling her children without scaring them through to her key issue, which was a sense of losing autonomy over her own life.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Freddie is struggling to find a job and has little to do with his time except aggravate Russ. But when an emergency strikes, leaving Freddie in jeopardy, will his enemy be willing to help?

Ed tries to solve his cash-flow crisis by accepting an offer he can't refuse, but it may be the beginning of a dangerous game. The pressure's also on Tom, who's dealing with his move and a staff shortage at Bridge Farm.

And Alan and Shula have a Good Friday heart-to-heart. But will it be enough to pull her out of her despair? Or do Shula's problems lie deeper than even the vicar can reach?

Call me Auntie

High hopes for the BBC's digital assistant

Millions of us have welcomed into our homes listening devices ultimately controlled by giant corporations. Google, Amazon and Apple are at the forefront of this astonishing technology that allows a computerised voice to tell us the time. Amazing. They can even turn on the lights, help you buy washing powder and, yes, listen to what are still called radio stations.

Have you heard, though, about the BBC's plans? Carrying on its fine traditions of arriving a bit late at the party with something not quite as good (eg BBC Sounds, Britbox, The Robert Peston Interview Show (with Eddie Mair)), the corporation has, I understand, for five years been secretly working on a device that it hopes to call "Auntie".

Since its inception, the idea has been to use well-loved BBC stars to announce themselves in our homes, and they've already signed up Chris Evans, Simon Mayo and John Humphrys. Engineers have managed to avoid having the presenters record every conceivable phrase in the English language, though I understand John did have to specially tape the words, "No, do go on, we have bags of time".

'If you ask about the weather, it will also spell Schafernaker'

Auntie will have another BBC twist over its better-established rivals. When it tells you the time it will add, for example, "That's just five minutes until Line of Duty starts". If you ask about the weather, it will also helpfully spell Schafernaker, and if you say goodnight to it, you will hear either Sailing By, the national anthem, or a farewell from the Two Ronnies.

And splendidly, while at the moment you can wake devices by calling out, "Alexa", "Hey Siri" or "Hey Google", the BBC plan is for Auntie to be awakened with the words "Hey Tony".

Theo's pulled it off

The star of the show on LBC in recent weeks has been our political editor Theo Usherwood. From his appearances on Nick Ferrari's breakfast show through to Tom Swarbrick at 10pm, Theo has been on the air explaining Brexit legislation and amendments, while fitting in the occasional dash to Brussels or Strasbourg where he has no time even to buy a souvenir chocolate.

Listeners are greatly appreciative of his efforts. This week, Theo found himself on air on my programme and I spontaneously offered him to listeners as a sort of "ask me anything" Brexit expert. The phone lines lit up. For all the sound and fury about Brexit, there is an even greater hunger for information. The same thing happened when we invited travel expert Simon Calder on to the show to field Brexit-related travel queries. For many people it was not a question of extending article 50 but what paperwork would they need to drive in Portugal?

Needless to say, Theo – like Simon – rose to the challenge. With no warning he was deep in the weeds of detailed questioning about the 15,000 possible Brexit scenarios. Unflinching, he dealt with them all.

Callers have suggested he deserves an award, or possibly a knighthood. Naturally, I think the first call on official honours should go to the presenter, but I don't want to make an issue of it.

Once this whole thing is settled, whenever that might be, Theo may even get to see his family again.

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Books do furnish a broadcaster

The recent story that Radio 4 was instructing its producers to stop buying books and, if necessary, restrict themselves to reading the blurbs on the backs of volumes by authors they were planning to interview was greeted with derision from within the BBC, and justifiably so. Book publishers are so desperate for publicity, particularly on the big shows, that they will race round to Broadcasting House with free copies on the off-chance of getting one of their authors on the airwaves. There's no reason to go out buying anything if you're in the position of being able to pick up the phone and have it sent. That's one of the last places the BBC needs to be looking for economies.

Seizing the advantage

Of course, most broadcasters interviewing people on radio haven't read the book, haven't heard the record and may not know more about the film than they could glean from squinting at the trailer on YouTube. A broadcaster working for one of the better-funded services may be given some pointers by a producer who has had that privilege. Most likely nowadays somebody will have printed off a page from Wikipedia or a press release and thrust it in front of them just as they're doing the intro. The wise interviewee will take advantage of this lack of curiosity by simply answering the questions they would have put if only they had been better prepared.

Plug points

Back in 1992 I did a couple of weeks on the morning show at GLR, then the BBC's station in London. The producer said to me, "If you want loads of guests I can get them." Our guests in that short couple of weeks included Julie Burchill, Anthony Burgess, Roy Jenkins, Michael Palin (right), Brian Eno, General Sir Peter de la Billière and many other names I can't recall, all united in their need to sell their books. This was just an average week in the life of GLR, but for me it was one of the best experiences of my working life. Being a journalist rather than a broadcaster by trade I probably did more homework than most would have done in my position. This rather threw some people. I remember the tour-hardened author Misha Glenny, who was on the programme to plug his newly published book about Yugoslavia, saying to me when I broke off the conversation to play a record, "Sorry if I've been a bit slow. I wasn't expecting you to have read it!"

Today's Choices

Drama: Luke, Acts
2.30pm Radio 4

Luke the Evangelist is credited with writing more of the New Testament than any other author. As we approach Easter, the poet Michael Symmons Roberts – once a determined atheist, now a Roman Catholic – takes a fresh view of Luke (played by David Schofield, above), as he prepares a defence for fellow apostle Paul. For listeners without any faith, it is a rollicking adventure, with plenty of modern nuances – why were there no written records or even passed-down oral accounts of Christ's female followers, other than the two Marys? And for those who believe in miracles, prepare to be spellbound, as the dead come back to life, the lame walk again and angels drop by at key moments. Much as I enjoyed this as a solid piece of great radio drama, I found it hard to dismiss memories of Monty Python's Life of Brian.

Opera on 3 6.30pm Radio 3

Few scenes in opera rival the moment of hallucinatory horror in The Queen of Spades in which the ghost of the old Countess appears to the penniless officer Gherman and finally reveals the secret of the three cards that will, he hopes, win him both a fortune and the hand of her granddaughter. Recorded during its recent run at Covent Garden, tonight's broadcast of Tchaikovsky's darkly obsessive masterpiece features Latvian tenor Aleksandrs Antonenko as Gherman and veteran British mezzo Felicity Palmer as the Countess. And the winning cards? Three, seven, ace, apparently – though I wouldn't bet on it. MARK PAPPENHEIM

SUNDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Definitively Dusty
9.00pm Radio 2

Just when you thought you didn't know what to do with yourself because Radio 2 seemed to have abandoned documentaries on the music of your formative years, along comes a three-parter on Dusty Springfield (above). And in the expert hands of producer Sue Clark, what a glorious thing it is – a fan's feast of music and interviews, from seldom-heard A-list insiders to golden archive Dusty, with no shortness of grace, irreverence or tell-all detail, whether discussing beehives, Bobby Vee or catching the tour coach at Baker Street. She also sings along to some of the early-1960s American records that really got her going. It's so rich and intimate (with previously unaired jewels from a 1995 interview), akin to being given VIP access. Yes, she wanted to be more of a belter ("buxom"-sounding), but she soared, and above all the rest. A self-confessed drama queen, she died at 59. Now what did we do to deserve that? DAVID OPPEDISANO

Music Extra: New York City's Pirates of the Air
8.05pm BBC World Service

Pirate stations have been symbols of defiance for as long as there has been radio. But the function of pirates in 2019 New York is a long way from Radio Caroline; here, unlicensed DJs dodge the regulators, to flood the airwaves with a cacophony of sounds relevant to their own ethnic communities. This naturalistic documentary provides compelling evidence of just how disenfranchised neighbourhoods including Brooklyn and the Bronx have become with the US as represented by commercial radio. TOM GOULDING

Today's Choices

The Conversation
11.30am/10.30pm BBC World Service

Winnie Li (above) is a successful author and activist, but when she was 29 she was raped twice and beaten in a forest in Belfast. Her attacker, a stranger, was 15. After a period of PTSD, anxiety and depression, she was forced to give up her promising career as a film producer. Brisa de Angulo was raped by a member of her extended family over a period of months from the age of 15. When she went to the authorities in her home country, Bolivia, she was met with resistance to take her case any further, which resulted in Brisa setting up A Breeze of Hope, a charity that provides medical, social and legal services to young rape survivors, both male and female. Winnie and Brisa join host Kim Chakanetsa to discuss their experiences and how they have turned such gross acts into something positive. JANE ANDERSON

Peach Fuzz
11.00am Radio 4

Journalist and presenter Mona Chalabi has been keeping a secret, like many other women: "It's not a crime we have committed, it's a curse: facial hair." While trendy, modern, metropolitan men proudly sport their beards, their female counterparts appear to have gone into reverse gear, getting rid of as much bodily hair (not just on the face) as possible. Mona asks why female facial hair remains a "source of shame" and is perceived as "freakish". JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

The Documentary
1.30pm/10.05pm/2.30am
BBC World Service

Remember Pot Black? Watching in colour-deprived frustration on our 1970s black-and-white TV ("Was that the pink, Dad?"), it was impossible to imagine just how popular snooker would become. In recent years the game born out of traditional British pubs has gone stratospheric in China. It's on the school sports curriculum, there are pop songs in its honour, and the nation's biggest snooker star, Ding Junhui, is mobbed wherever he goes. Seven-time world champion Stephen Hendry (above) has long been fascinated by China and often tours the country playing exhibition matches. From Beijing to Hong Kong via the Crucible in Sheffield, Hendry looks at why snooker is rapidly becoming young, cool – and Chinese. CHRIS GARDNER

Free Thinking
10.00pm Radio 3

Imagine going to see your GP or consultant and them crying in front of you. We all take it for granted that the medical professionals we see conduct themselves without displaying anything but a pragmatic, fact-based approach. In this fascinating debate, host Anne McElvoy asks a panel of experts in the field if doctor/patient relationships might actually be improved if more emotion (the core subject of this year's festival) was on display. Do we want our doctors to cry – or to take all their emotional baggage home? JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

New Ways of Seeing

9.00am/9.30pm Radio 4

John Berger's landmark 1972 BBC series Ways of Seeing, which questioned the prisms through which we perceive great works of European art, is sometimes seen as a direct challenge to Kenneth Clark's 1969 TV series Civilisation. But even so pre-eminent a post-modernist as Berger – who died in January 2017 aged 90 – begins to feel outdated when viewed in the context of 2019. Here, writer and artist James Bridle (above, an example of his work) attempts to update Berger's theories and deconstruct the invisible elements that make up our digital age. It's thought-provoking and highly abstract stuff: does the internet have a physical form in the shape of smartphones and data centres? Or is it something more elusive? The answer, it would seem, is in the eye of the beholder.

TOM GOULDING

Free Thinking

10.00pm Radio 3

I don't care who knows it. At the end of a film called Fruitvale Station tears were streaming down my face. Why do we pay money to upset ourselves in this manner? Matthew Sweet knows because, as part of this year's Free Thinking festival on the theme of emotion, he asked several experts why we need film and TV "weepies". EastEnders executive John Yorke explains why Grant Mitchell's greyhounds were killed, and film historian Melanie Williams enthuses about Celia Johnson and Trevor Howard in Brief Encounter. Oh yes, and the death of Bambi's mother is discussed again. I'm welling up already. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Today's Choices

In Our Time
9.00am/9.30pm Radio 4

The magic of A Midsummer Night's Dream casts its spell even over some of those who claim to be immune to Shakespeare. Year in, year out, the play is performed throughout the world, often in the open air, and very few who have seen one of these al fresco performances have remained unmoved by its climax, set at midnight, when darkness has fallen around the theatre. The play is also invaluable for its scenes showing how plays may have been rehearsed in the 16th century. And only a real dunderhead of a director could fail to make the play within a play, Pyramus and Thisbe, funny. Melvyn Bragg's guests include Alison Findlay, director of the Shakespeare Programme at Lancaster University, and University College London's Helen Hackett, whose speciality is the Dream. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Answered Prayers
11.15am/9.15pm Radio 4 Extra

You don't have to be a believer of any faith to find Stephen Wakelam's play incredibly moving. Kenneth Cranham turns in a stunning performance as the priest/monk who offers a homeless man the chance to work on his project turning an old barn into a chapel. The vagrant turns out to be a skilled carpenter... and a deserter from the First World War. Although the figure he carves for the chapel is never finished, it's a triple-hanky moment when we realise that the sculpture could just as easily be a squaddie in the trenches as it could be Christ. This remarkable drama first went out on Radio 4 in April 2004 and has long been due a repeat. JANE ANDERSON

4/5. A Small Monument to a Great Love
Donald Macleod tells the story of Berg's enduring love affair with Hanna Fuchs-Robettin, which began when he was 40 and inspired his compositions for the ten years until his death. When Berg came to compose his Lyric Suite, he wrote a document of their love affair. But this detail was hidden within musical riddles and codes and it wasn't until the 1970s that the true meaning of the work was discovered.

GOOD FRIDAY

Today's Choices

At the Foot of the Cross
8.00pm Radio 2

Just as people of other faiths, and even outright unbelievers, can share the universal message of hope arising from despair that is symbolised by the Christian story of Jesus's crucifixion, death and resurrection, so that story needs not to be the exclusive preserve of high art and organised religion. For tonight's At the Foot of the Cross, Radio 2's annual musical reflection on the meaning of Good Friday, the stories of those close to Jesus in his final hours are explored through popular songs from stage and screen. Over on Radio 3 at 7.30, meanwhile, Verdi's Requiem – once snobbishly dismissed as "an opera in ecclesiastical garb" – proves that, with profound human sympathies and dramatic instincts, even an avowed atheist can compose one of the greatest religious works in the repertoire.

MARK PAPPENHEIM

A Star Is Re-Born
12 noon Radio 2

Very few films can be re-made again and again with equal success. But one that comes to mind is A Star Is Born, whose theme – a relationship that can't work because her career is going up and his is going down – has captured audience imaginations in the 1930s, the 1950s, the 1970s and, most recently, in the 2018 version starring Lady Gaga and Bradley Cooper as the star-crossed lovers, with Cooper directing. All four movies have made waves at the Oscars. Here, Matthew Morrison – one of the stars of the TV series Glee – dissects the lasting appeal of this showbiz tragedy.

RT In the wake of Bradley Cooper's remake of A Star Is Born, former Glee star Matthew Morrison tells the story behind it and the three versions that predate it: William A Wellman's 1937 hit (with Janet Gaynor and Fredric March); the 1954 version directed by George Cukor and starring Judy Garland and James Mason; and Frank Pierson's 1976 blockbuster with Barbra Streisand and Kris Kristofferson. With contributions from Cooper and Lady Gaga (stars of the 2018 version) as well as Paul Williams, who with Streisand co-wrote the theme to the 1976 film. Plus Garland's daughter Lorna Luft. ## BBC Local Radio — South East, Midlands, Anglia

Face behind the voice

Sam Meah BBC WM

Age 54
Current job Co-host with Daz Hale of BBC WM's weekday Sam and Daz in the breakfast slot (6.00–9.00am).
CV Brought up in the Lozells area of Birmingham, she was singing in a band that was supporting Fine Young Cannibals when, in 1987, she was spotted by a TV producer and successfully auditioned to present BBC1's Look East. She moved into radio, presenting Samantha's Sunday Night Party on WM, also contributing to Alan Titchmarsh's Radio 2 show. She left the BBC after five years to move to the fledgling TalkRadio, but quit after six weeks ("It was a disaster"), and gave up her broadcasting career. Sam returned to BBC WM last year.
Best moment "Doing the Samantha's Sunday Night Party reunion last year. All the old team got back together. It was wonderful."
Worst moment "Collapsing with sepsis live on air four days into the new BBC WM breakfast show. Paramedics rushed to the studio and I spent three weeks in hospital. I thought I was going to die."
Off air "Weeknights I live in Kings Norton in Birmingham with my sister and brother-in-law. At weekends, my home is Harlesden in north-west London, where I live with three cats and enjoy going to gigs and exhibitions."
First radio memory "Taping the chart show in the late 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "My co-host Daz – he's so smart and so generous. And Nicky Campbell and Rachel Burden on BBC Radio 5 Live."
Ambition "To be back behind the mic doing what I'm doing is beyond my wildest dreams."
Dream job "Paleontologist. I read John Fowles's The French Lieutenant's Woman at an impressionable age. I like the idea of chipping away at rocks."
Secret skills "I'm very good at putting up Ikea furniture. And I like seeing people's reactions when they discover it. The secret is to follow the instructions!" SIMON O'HAGAN

Face behind the voice

Sam Meah BBC WM

Age 54
Current job Co-host with Daz Hale of BBC WM's weekday Sam and Daz in the breakfast slot (6.00–9.00am).
CV Brought up in the Lozells area of Birmingham, she was singing in a band that was supporting Fine Young Cannibals when, in 1987, she was spotted by a TV producer and successfully auditioned to present BBC1's Look East. She moved into radio, presenting Samantha's Sunday Night Party on WM, also contributing to Alan Titchmarsh's Radio 2 show. She left the BBC after five years to move to the fledgling TalkRadio, but quit after six weeks ("It was a disaster"), and gave up her broadcasting career. Sam returned to BBC WM last year.
Best moment "Doing the Samantha's Sunday Night Party reunion last year. All the old team got back together. It was wonderful."
Worst moment "Collapsing with sepsis live on air four days into the new BBC WM breakfast show. Paramedics rushed to the studio and I spent three weeks in hospital. I thought I was going to die."
Off air "Weeknights I live in Kings Norton in Birmingham with my sister and brother-in-law. At weekends, my home is Harlesden in north-west London, where I live with three cats and enjoy going to gigs and exhibitions."
First radio memory "Taping the chart show in the late 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "My co-host Daz – he's so smart and so generous. And Nicky Campbell and Rachel Burden on BBC Radio 5 Live."
Ambition "To be back behind the mic doing what I'm doing is beyond my wildest dreams."
Dream job "Paleontologist. I read John Fowles's The French Lieutenant's Woman at an impressionable age. I like the idea of chipping away at rocks."
Secret skills "I'm very good at putting up Ikea furniture. And I like seeing people's reactions when they discover it. The secret is to follow the instructions!" SIMON O'HAGAN

Face behind the voice

Sam Meah BBC WM

Age 54
Current job Co-host with Daz Hale of BBC WM's weekday Sam and Daz in the breakfast slot (6.00–9.00am).
CV Brought up in the Lozells area of Birmingham, she was singing in a band that was supporting Fine Young Cannibals when, in 1987, she was spotted by a TV producer and successfully auditioned to present BBC1's Look East. She moved into radio, presenting Samantha's Sunday Night Party on WM, also contributing to Alan Titchmarsh's Radio 2 show. She left the BBC after five years to move to the fledgling TalkRadio, but quit after six weeks ("It was a disaster"), and gave up her broadcasting career. Sam returned to BBC WM last year.
Best moment "Doing the Samantha's Sunday Night Party reunion last year. All the old team got back together. It was wonderful."
Worst moment "Collapsing with sepsis live on air four days into the new BBC WM breakfast show. Paramedics rushed to the studio and I spent three weeks in hospital. I thought I was going to die."
Off air "Weeknights I live in Kings Norton in Birmingham with my sister and brother-in-law. At weekends, my home is Harlesden in north-west London, where I live with three cats and enjoy going to gigs and exhibitions."
First radio memory "Taping the chart show in the late 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "My co-host Daz – he's so smart and so generous. And Nicky Campbell and Rachel Burden on BBC Radio 5 Live."
Ambition "To be back behind the mic doing what I'm doing is beyond my wildest dreams."
Dream job "Paleontologist. I read John Fowles's The French Lieutenant's Woman at an impressionable age. I like the idea of chipping away at rocks."
Secret skills "I'm very good at putting up Ikea furniture. And I like seeing people's reactions when they discover it. The secret is to follow the instructions!" SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Sam Meah BBC WM

Age 54
Current job Co-host with Daz Hale of BBC WM's weekday Sam and Daz in the breakfast slot (6.00–9.00am).
CV Brought up in the Lozells area of Birmingham, she was singing in a band that was supporting Fine Young Cannibals when, in 1987, she was spotted by a TV producer and successfully auditioned to present BBC1's Look East. She moved into radio, presenting Samantha's Sunday Night Party on WM, also contributing to Alan Titchmarsh's Radio 2 show. She left the BBC after five years to move to the fledgling TalkRadio, but quit after six weeks ("It was a disaster"), and gave up her broadcasting career. Sam returned to BBC WM last year.
Best moment "Doing the Samantha's Sunday Night Party reunion last year. All the old team got back together. It was wonderful."
Worst moment "Collapsing with sepsis live on air four days into the new BBC WM breakfast show. Paramedics rushed to the studio and I spent three weeks in hospital. I thought I was going to die."
Off air "Weeknights I live in Kings Norton in Birmingham with my sister and brother-in-law. At weekends, my home is Harlesden in north-west London, where I live with three cats and enjoy going to gigs and exhibitions."
First radio memory "Taping the chart show in the late 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "My co-host Daz – he's so smart and so generous. And Nicky Campbell and Rachel Burden on BBC Radio 5 Live."
Ambition "To be back behind the mic doing what I'm doing is beyond my wildest dreams."
Dream job "Paleontologist. I read John Fowles's The French Lieutenant's Woman at an impressionable age. I like the idea of chipping away at rocks."
Secret skills "I'm very good at putting up Ikea furniture. And I like seeing people's reactions when they discover it. The secret is to follow the instructions!" SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Sam Meah BBC WM

Age 54
Current job Co-host with Daz Hale of BBC WM's weekday Sam and Daz in the breakfast slot (6.00–9.00am).
CV Brought up in the Lozells area of Birmingham, she was singing in a band that was supporting Fine Young Cannibals when, in 1987, she was spotted by a TV producer and successfully auditioned to present BBC1's Look East. She moved into radio, presenting Samantha's Sunday Night Party on WM, also contributing to Alan Titchmarsh's Radio 2 show. She left the BBC after five years to move to the fledgling TalkRadio, but quit after six weeks ("It was a disaster"), and gave up her broadcasting career. Sam returned to BBC WM last year.
Best moment "Doing the Samantha's Sunday Night Party reunion last year. All the old team got back together. It was wonderful."
Worst moment "Collapsing with sepsis live on air four days into the new BBC WM breakfast show. Paramedics rushed to the studio and I spent three weeks in hospital. I thought I was going to die."
Off air "Weeknights I live in Kings Norton in Birmingham with my sister and brother-in-law. At weekends, my home is Harlesden in north-west London, where I live with three cats and enjoy going to gigs and exhibitions."
First radio memory "Taping the chart show in the late 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "My co-host Daz – he's so smart and so generous. And Nicky Campbell and Rachel Burden on BBC Radio 5 Live."
Ambition "To be back behind the mic doing what I'm doing is beyond my wildest dreams."
Dream job "Paleontologist. I read John Fowles's The French Lieutenant's Woman at an impressionable age. I like the idea of chipping away at rocks."
Secret skills "I'm very good at putting up Ikea furniture. And I like seeing people's reactions when they discover it. The secret is to follow the instructions!" SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Sam Meah BBC WM

Age 54
Current job Co-host with Daz Hale of BBC WM's weekday Sam and Daz in the breakfast slot (6.00–9.00am).
CV Brought up in the Lozells area of Birmingham, she was singing in a band that was supporting Fine Young Cannibals when, in 1987, she was spotted by a TV producer and successfully auditioned to present BBC1's Look East. She moved into radio, presenting Samantha's Sunday Night Party on WM, also contributing to Alan Titchmarsh's Radio 2 show. She left the BBC after five years to move to the fledgling TalkRadio, but quit after six weeks ("It was a disaster"), and gave up her broadcasting career. Sam returned to BBC WM last year.
Best moment "Doing the Samantha's Sunday Night Party reunion last year. All the old team got back together. It was wonderful."
Worst moment "Collapsing with sepsis live on air four days into the new BBC WM breakfast show. Paramedics rushed to the studio and I spent three weeks in hospital. I thought I was going to die."
Off air "Weeknights I live in Kings Norton in Birmingham with my sister and brother-in-law. At weekends, my home is Harlesden in north-west London, where I live with three cats and enjoy going to gigs and exhibitions."
First radio memory "Taping the chart show in the late 1970s."
Favourite broadcasters "My co-host Daz – he's so smart and so generous. And Nicky Campbell and Rachel Burden on BBC Radio 5 Live."
Ambition "To be back behind the mic doing what I'm doing is beyond my wildest dreams."
Dream job "Paleontologist. I read John Fowles's The French Lieutenant's Woman at an impressionable age. I like the idea of chipping away at rocks."
Secret skills "I'm very good at putting up Ikea furniture. And I like seeing people's reactions when they discover it. The secret is to follow the instructions!" SIMON O'HAGAN

Who's feeling the benefit?

State pensions and allowances have risen – but not for everyone, as Paul Lewis points out

In the week beginning 8 April, the benefits and state pensions paid to millions of people rose. But not for everyone. Most working-age people have seen no increase in their benefits for four years – they have been frozen at the rates first paid in 2015/16.

Jobseeker's Allowance or Universal Credit for singles over 25 will remain at £73.10 a week – as it has been since April 2015. If it had risen with inflation it would be £78.60 a week. In real terms it is worth £5.50 a week less, a cut of around 7.5 per cent. The same freeze has applied to tax credits that boost low pay and to Housing Benefit, which helps with rent.

'Most have seen no increase in their benefits for four years'

Bereavement Support Payment is for spouses and civil partners bereaved under pension age, for a death since 6 April 2017. It will remain frozen at £2,500 plus £100 a month for 18 months for those without dependent children and £3,500 and £350 a month for those with.

By contrast the state pension rises in line with earnings or prices or 2.5 per cent, whichever is the highest – the so-called triple lock. This year the rise in earnings was the highest of the three at 2.6 per cent. So the new state pension has just risen by £4.25 to £168.60 a week and the old basic state pension, paid to people who reached state pension age before 6 April 2016, by £3.25 to £129.20 a week.

Many people get more or less than those standard amounts. Women claiming on their husband's contributions will get a £1.95 a week rise to £77.45. Extras added to the pension rise by 2.4 per cent, which was the inflation rate last September.

Disability benefits also rise by 2.4 per cent. There will be another £2.05 a week on the higher rate of Attendance Allowance for people over 65 and younger people on Personal Independence Payment, which will both be £87.65. The standard rates will be £58.70 a week, a rise of £1.40. Carer's Allowance will increase by £1.55 to £66.15 a week. For that the carer has to look after a disabled person for at least 35 hours a week – an hourly rate of £1.89.

A FUNERAL PLAN CAN HELP YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES

A funeral plan is a promise to deliver a funeral in the future – and when choosing a plan provider, you want one that you can trust

Although your funeral is likely to be a long way off, discussing your wishes now can make the future easier for everyone involved. Arranging a funeral for a loved one can be difficult, especially given the emotional stress many people are under when someone sadly passes away.

A funeral plan can make this time that little bit easier. Furthermore, it will give you peace of mind knowing that your family won't be struggling to find all the funds needed to cover the services in the plan.

Radio Times has teamed up with Dignity to offer you the Prepaid Funeral Plan. Dignity have already helped more than 824,000† people to plan for their funeral and pride themselves on being there at one of the most difficult moments of families' lives.

Why pay more for your funeral?

With a Funeral Plan from Dignity, once paid for, you will never pay more for the services included in the plan. The Prepaid Funeral Plan from Dignity is a simple, practical way of taking control of your affairs, protecting against future increases in funeral costs and gaining peace of mind for everyone concerned.

There's never been a better time to plan your funeral. You can now save money when you take out a Dignity Funeral Plan before 1 May 2019^.

To request your FREE guide to the Funeral Plan visit radiotimes.com/funerals or call Dignity on 0800 033 4716, quoting RAD90ND

Chocolate cappuccino tart

AN INDULGENT, rich chocolate tart – quick to make and even quicker to devour, with a creamy topping and scattering of chocolate shavings.

SERVES 8-10 • PREP TIME 15 MINUTES, PLUS CHILLING • COOK TIME 5 MINUTES

FOR THE BASE
- 50g dark chocolate, broken into pieces
- 75g butter
- 15 digestive biscuits, finely crushed

FOR THE FILLING
- 350g dark chocolate, broken into pieces
- 100g butter
- 1 heaped tsp instant coffee granules dissolved in 1 tsp boiling water
- 250ml double cream
- 200g full-fat crème fraîche (see Cook's note)

TO DECORATE
- 150ml double cream, lightly whipped
- chocolate shavings or coarsely grated chocolate

You will need a 23cm round, loose-bottomed, fluted tart tin with deep sides and a piping bag with a plain nozzle (optional).

1 To make the base, melt the chocolate and butter in a wide-based pan over a medium heat (see Cook's note). Remove the pan from the heat, add the crushed biscuits and stir to combine. Press into the base of the tart tin and chill in the fridge while you make the filling.

2 To make the filling, place the chocolate and butter in a large heatproof bowl and add the coffee and double cream. Set the bowl over a pan of just simmering water and heat until runny, stirring gently until smooth. Remove from the heat and allow to cool down a little, then mix in the crème fraîche by hand.

3 Carefully pour the mixture into the tin on top of the biscuit base and chill for a minimum of 2 hours, or ideally overnight, until set.

4 Remove from the tin and place on a cake stand or plate. Serve straight from the fridge.

5 To decorate, spoon the whipped cream into a piping bag (if using) and pipe or dollop five large blobs of the cream into the middle of the tart. Sprinkle over the chocolate shavings or grated chocolate and serve in thin slices.

COOK'S NOTE Be sure not to overheat the chocolate and butter mixture – heat it until it is just warm enough to melt. You'll need full-fat crème fraîche for this recipe to help the filling set.
FREEZE Not suitable for freezing.

Easy Easter treats

You can't go wrong with Mary Berry's no-bake chocolate delights

Cherry, almond and chocolate ten-minute squares

ALSO KNOWN as fridge biscuits, these make a lovely sweet treat. They are cut up into small squares as they are quite rich – just a mouthful is plenty. Swap the almonds for another type of chopped nut, if you prefer.

MAKES 25 • PREP TIME 10 MINUTES • CHILL TIME 1 HOUR

FOR THE BASE
- 75g digestive biscuits
- 40g butter

FOR THE TOPPING
- 50g butter
- 50ml milk
- 30g cocoa powder, sifted
- 300g icing sugar, sifted
- 50g dark chocolate, broken into pieces
- 50g blanched almonds, roughly chopped
- 50g glacé cherries, chopped

You will need a 15cm square cake tin. Grease the tin and line with baking paper.

1 First make the biscuit base. Crumble the biscuits using a rolling pin to crush into fine crumbs. Melt the butter in a small saucepan, then stir in the crushed biscuits and mix until combined. Spoon into the prepared tin and press down using the back of a spoon until level. Put in the fridge to chill and firm up while you are making the topping.

2 Melt the butter in a medium saucepan over a medium heat. Add the milk, stir in the cocoa powder and icing sugar and stir until well combined and the mixture is smooth.

3 Remove from the heat, add the chocolate and stir until melted, then mix in the almonds and cherries (see Cook's note). The mixture will start to thicken as it cools. Spoon into the tin and spread out to cover the biscuit base.

4 Chill in the fridge for 1 hour before slicing into 25 squares.

COOK'S NOTE It's important to add the chocolate to the hot sugar mixture so it melts immediately. It's lovely and glossy at this stage, so add the nuts and cherries, and smooth it over the biscuit base before it cools too much.
FREEZE These freeze well.

JOE SWIFT OFFERS

An open invitation

The National Garden Scheme is your gateway to inspirational gardens great and small, says Joe Swift

PICTURE PERFECT
Great Dixter in East Sussex is a member of the National Garden Scheme

THE BEST WAY to experience a garden is first-hand: seeing it, smelling it, being drawn through it to take in its unique atmosphere. A successful garden can be powerful, enchanting, breathtakingly beautiful and extremely inspiring, leaving the visitor with lifelong memories.

When I first started gardening, I visited as many gardens as possible, and still see plenty every year. I'm always learning. Naturally, there are sometimes elements that aren't quite my cup of tea, but it's all part of the process.

The good news is that the UK is not only a nation of gardeners but of garden openers, too. The National Garden Scheme (NGS) is a fabulous charity that publishes the famous Yellow Book (also online at ngs.org.uk) featuring over 3,500 gardens in England and Wales that are open to visitors a couple of times a year, starting as early as March, and most also do a sideline in teas – I was proud president for six years before passing the baton to Mary Berry in 2016. Scotland has its own scheme; you can find details at scotlandsgardens.org.

THE RANGE OF gardens the NGS lists is phenomenal, from large estates such as Trentham in Stoke-on-Trent (pictured above) to fabulous country gardens like Great Dixter in East Sussex (main picture) and Beth Chatto's Essex garden, to name a few. I was so inspired by my last visit to Trentham that I incorporated a similar style of its Dutch garden designer Piet Oudolf's naturalistically knitted-together grasses and perennials in my own garden, albeit on a different scale.

There are also many fine suburban and town spaces in the scheme. Besides the joy of the visit, you can enjoy knowing that you are also contributing to an essential charity (Marie Curie, Macmillan etc). It's a win-win.

Some splendid domestic gardens can be visited, too, as part of the NGS scheme or on a more local basis – look out for any near you, as they'll be an indicator of what grows well in your area. Then there are the National Trust gardens (around 200) and the four Royal Horticultural Society gardens (Wisley in Surrey, Harlow Carr in Harrogate, Hyde Hall in Chelmsford and Rosemoor in Devon), all open to the public, packed with plants and ideas, and displaying top-notch gardening. In fact, there's a lifetime of garden visiting and inspiration out there for us all. What's keeping you? Get on with it!

IF YOU DO ONE THING THIS WEEK

PLANT POTATOES

Digging and cooking home-grown potatoes is one of life's great pleasures. Children love to unearth the treasure, making growing potatoes a fine introduction to gardening. You don't need an allotment or garden – they will do well in containers placed outside in a sunny spot.

CHOOSE YOUR VARIETY

Go for the small, waxy pink or purple-skin salad or new potato varieties. They're delicious and mature quickly, taking between ten and 14 weeks from planting to harvest. Good choices include Red Duke of York (pink skin and yellow flesh, a good all-rounder); Swift (no, not named after me, but a fast grower and tasty); Anya (like Pink Fir Apple but less knobbly and with a good nutty flavour); and Charlotte (white skin and yellow flesh, perfect for potato salads).

SELECT YOUR CONTAINER

There are ready-made potato planters available to buy, some of which pop up and can be stacked away for winter, but large containers, hessian sacks, growbags placed upright on end or even old dustbins with holes in the bottom will all work. Basically, you're looking for anything with depth that can hold a decent quantity of compost.

GET COVERING

Make sure there are plenty of drainage holes and add a drainage layer of gravel or old polystyrene chunks (don't worry with growbags), followed by a 10cm-thick layer of growing multipurpose compost mixed with a little garden soil. Place the seed potatoes evenly (around three to a 45cm pot and five to a dustbin, starting just in from the edges) and then cover with 15cm of compost mix.

KEEP AN EYE ON THINGS

As the shoots grow, keep "earthing up" regularly (adding in more compost so only the top leaves are showing) until they get close to the top of the container. Potatoes like being fed, so apply an organic potato fertiliser or seaweed foliage spray every two weeks. Water regularly, especially as the flowers start to develop, as it will help swell the tubers.

DIG UP AND ENJOY!

When they've finished flowering and their foliage starts turning yellow, they're ready to dig up and eat or store.

The Widow
Monday, Tuesday 9.00pm ITV

Cape wow!

Spectacular scenery, gorgeous beaches, great food and wine… Cape Town has it all

When the cast of The Widow landed in Cape Town to begin shooting last year, the city was in the midst of its worst drought in history. "You were advised to only shower every other day and for no longer than two minutes," recalls Alex Kingston, who plays charity worker Judith Gray in the ITV drama. "So I did my bit. I found a champagne bucket in the apartment I was staying in, and every other day I'd straddle the bucket while showering and try to catch as much water as I could and then use it to flush the toilet." Happily, Cape Town is no longer at risk of running out of water, but the authorities are still encouraging tourists to do everything they can to conserve it.

LOCATION, LOCATION
Alex Kingston enjoyed filming The Widow in Cape Town

'It got under my skin… everybody was just so nice'

While Cape Town has become a popular location for film and TV productions in the last decade, standing in for the Democratic Republic of Congo in the case of The Widow, this was the first time Kingston had worked there. Shower gymnastics aside, she adored it: "It got under my skin. The people, the crew, everybody in production were just so nice and really hard-working."

The things that attract film and TV to Cape Town also make it one of the world's most captivating cities for tourists: gorgeous beaches, towering mountains and vine-carpeted valleys on its doorstep, a vibrant art scene and laidback lifestyle, wonderful food and wine, great shopping and a favourable exchange rate. But where to start?

TAKE A HIKE

South Africa's most famous landmark is Table Mountain, the craggy, 1,000-metre mound that looms over Cape Town. The most popular route to the top is the Plattekip Gorge trail, a staircase of rocky steps that zigzags up to a ravine. If you don't mind queuing, an easier option is the cable car. The neighbouring Lion's Head affords spectacular 360-degree views and can be tackled in less than an hour. To admire South Africa's rich flora, head to Kirstenbosch National Botanic Garden. Its manicured lawns sprawl over Table Mountain's lower slopes and contain more than 7,000 plant species.

DINE IN STYLE

Like the city itself, Cape Town's world-class restaurants are proudly cosmopolitan, and you can enjoy fine dining and superb wines for a fraction of the price in London or New York. To try Capetonian flavours, book a table at Upper Bloem (upperbloemrestaurant.co.za), where exquisite sharing dishes are inspired by the head chef's childhood in Bo-Kaap, a suburb that originally housed Malaysian and Indonesian slaves. You can find handcrafted souvenirs and fashionable cafés at the Old Biscuit Mill, a mall in an old factory. Book early to try the tasting menu at The Test Kitchen (thetestkitchen.co.za), crowned the best restaurant in Africa last year.

HOP ON A WINE TRAM

As European settlers soon discovered, the Western Cape's balmy Mediterranean climate is ideal for vine cultivation. If you'd like to explore its scenic vineyards and quaff their wares, you can book a transfer to Franschhoek and then hop on the wine tram, a Victorian-style tram and vintage truck that shuttles between historic wineries offering full-bodied reds, light whites and cap classiques (South Africa's premium bubbly). Encircled by blue-tinged peaks, the boho town was founded 300 years ago by French Huguenot refugees and established its gastronomic reputation long before Cape Town's. Several of the valley's gabled farmsteads are now boutique hotels.

VISIT MANDELA'S ISLAND PRISON

Nelson Mandela spent 18 years on Robben Island, the maximum-security jail where high-profile political prisoners were incarcerated during apartheid. This notorious islet five miles off shore is now a museum and World Heritage Site. The tours, led by former prisoners, include Mandela's eight-foot-by-seven-foot cell and the limestone quarry where he chiselled away every day under a blinding sun. Several ferries a day leave from the V&A Waterfront and it's best to pre-book (robben-island.org.za). District Six Museum in East City (districtsix.co.za) also paints a moving picture of a multiracial neighbourhood that was declared a whites-only area in the 1960s. Some 60,000 residents were forcibly removed, including many of the museum's staff.

NATURAL SPLENDOUR
Nearby beaches include Boulders, home to thousands of African penguins, and Camps Bay

PICK UP A PENGUIN

The city is flanked by miles of pristine beaches such as the powder-soft Camps Bay Beach, where you can take a chilly dip in tidal pools. The Cape Peninsula also boasts what might just be the country's most beautiful road – Chapman's Peak Drive, a 9km toll road carved into terracotta cliffs, high above the crashing waves of the deep-blue Atlantic. From there, the ocean road snakes south to the towering bluffs of Cape Point and the wind-whipped Cape of Good Hope, where baboons roam. As it winds back towards the city, you reach Boulders Beach, which is home to thousands of rare and dinky African penguins.

NO-FLY VENICE SIMPLON-ORIENT-EXPRESS AND MEDITERRANEAN EXPLORER

15 nights from £3,999pp
Departing 1 July 2020 on board
Enchanted Princess

All aboard!

Cruise the Mediterranean on board the brand new Enchanted Princess, enjoy stays in Lake Garda and Florence and then travel home in ultimate luxury on board the Venice Simplon-Orient-Express

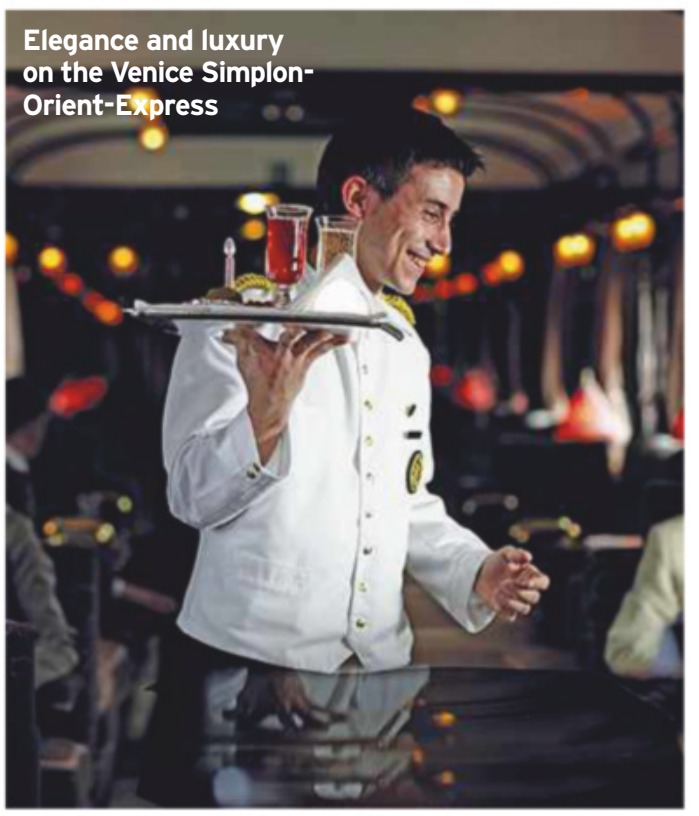
Your holiday begins with the convenience of sailing from Southampton as you embark the brand new Enchanted Princess. You'll arrive first in Le Havre, from where you could visit the romantic city of Paris; followed by the colourful buildings and cobbled alleyways of Lisbon's Amalfa district and the British quirks and iconic rock of Gibraltar. Discover Gaudi's incredible Sagrada Familia in Barcelona, the charming city of Toulon in the south of France and Pisa's famous leaning tower from Livorno, before arriving in Rome where you'll disembark and be transferred to Florence for an overnight hotel stay.

The capital of the Tuscany region is an achingly romantic city of rivers, bridges and Renaissance art and architecture often described as an open-air museum. Next, you'll travel to Lake Garda for a three night hotel stay. With majestic mountains around its edges and colourful villages wedged among sprawling vineyards, Lake Garda is a compelling destination that offers so much to do and see.

Travelling home need not be a chore during this special holiday, in fact it's an experience to be treasured forever as you board the Venice Simplon-Orient-Express. Take in the staggering views of the jagged Dolomites and the snow-peaked Swiss Alps as you journey towards London. The magic unfolding through your window is matched by the service you'll experience on board, as you enjoy fine wines and refreshing cocktails, delicious dining with locally sourced ingredients and the panache of this legendary train akin with the glamourous 1920s. A sequence of unforgettable moments, barely changed by time, make this voyage one of the world's finest travel experiences, admired by many but enjoyed by few.



Elegance and luxury on the Venice Simplon-Orient-Express

Dictionary corner Susie Dent

Why do we talk about giving something 'the whole nine yards'?

E Boston by email

The number nine features in several English expressions. 'Dressed to the nines', associated with smart dress, is said to be linked to the 99th Wiltshire Regiment, aka 'The Nines', famous for its smart appearance. The 'whole nine yards' has similarly inspired many myths. The most popular involves the length of ammunition belts in World War II aircraft – if a target was shot at with the full belt of ammunition, it was said to have got 'the whole nine yards'.

In fact, recent evidence suggests that nine here is simply a random number, as newly discovered records from earlier decades speak of such things as 'the whole six yards of a story', in which the phrase is simply a metaphor for everything.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

They'll make it better...

MEET THE EXPERTS
Jay Blades (above) with the Bear Ladies Amanda Middleditch and Julie Tatchell

The Repair Shop (weekdays BBC1) is one of my favourite programmes, and I'm constantly amazed at the skills and patience of the team. Steve the horologist is always impressive – is there anything mechanical that man can't repair? There was also a hilarious moment in episode one (1 April, inset above) when Julie and Amanda were wrestling on the floor with Big Ted, finishing off the job of stuffing him.

Other programmes could take a leaf out of The Repair Shop's book – no idiot comedians trying to hog the limelight, no have-a-go presenters messing up the experts' work, just a skilled and dedicated team getting on with their tasks and performing them brilliantly.
Angela McAllister Ayr

Angela McAllister wins a Bose SoundLink Micro Bluetooth speaker, in either orange or black. This small but powerful speaker delivers unmatched sound for its size. With up to six hours' battery life, a silicone rubber exterior and a tear-resistant strip, it's portable, rugged and waterproof. RRP £99.95. bose.co.uk

DUTY CALLS...

Brilliant, brilliant, brilliant! I need not have worried about the new series of Line of Duty: episode one (31 March BBC1) had an explosive opening, betrayal, intrigue and shock, a trademark AC-12 interview and Ted Hastings's despairing and condemnatory stare. There were enough twists and conundrums to set the mind alight: perhaps the greatest one, fired by DI Kate Fleming, is whether "H" is truly eradicated...

We shall see; but what is guaranteed is a rollercoaster of a ride. I can't wait!
Peter Woodroffe Lutterworth, Leicestershire

GOOD DOC...

When I watched a trailer for The Murder of Jill Dando (2 April BBC1), I swithered over whether or not to watch it, as this sort of programme can lapse into voyeurism. How very glad I was that I did. It was sympathetically handled and not sensationalised in the slightest. Were the police placed under great pressure to "get a result"? I think so. Was Barry George a scapegoat? Well, the decision to release and pardon him, albeit several years later, was largely achieved through advances in forensics that were not available at the time.

The BBC has produced one of the best, most unbiased documentaries for a good while (Blue Planet series excepted). Let's have more of these quality films.
Harry Wright Letchworth Garden City, Hertfordshire

...OR BAD DOC?

The media have always had the most interest in stories involving one of their own. But The Murder of Jill Dando was far from a fitting tribute on the 20th anniversary of her death.

The fulsome assessment of her character and career seemed contrived, and the account of the circumstances of her death perfunctory. Then followed the account of the arrest and prosecution of a sad fantasist.

The conflicting urges to mark the anniversary but not upset Jill's friends and family – by including a proper account of her death and a sensible investigation of the likely motive of her killer – made this mixture of hagiography and recycled reporting an unworthy effort.
Chris Bangs Glossop, Derbyshire

A NEAT FINISH

Thank you, BBC2, for The Great British Sewing Bee. It had everything: drama, suspense and comedy (I love Joe Lycett). In addition we had the joy and beauty of the fabrics and the creations and of observing the warmth and fellowship among the contestants. Balm to the soul.
Pauline Closier Thornton le Dale, North Yorkshire

SEW GOOD
Great British Sewing Bee's Juliet Uzor

...My husband and I love The Great British Sewing Bee – it would be wonderful to have an equivalent programme to Bake Off: an Extra Slice. We could meet the sewers and hear their reflections on each programme, why they chose the fabrics, what they felt was too difficult and so on. We always wonder what they're chatting about in the shots of them during their tea breaks!
Juliet and Rich Jervis Salisbury, Wiltshire

MAKING A DATE

What a joyous Brexit diversion Radio 4's Date Night, starring Marc Wootton, Catherine Tate, Katherine Parkinson and Monica Dolan, has been. I came across it by accident and have been laughing out loud ever since. I've played episode four (26 March) several times just to hear Jamali with his elderly partner Fiona (Hammed Animashaun and Wootton). "I'm gonna split his wig" has now entered the annals of funny quotes in our household.

Brilliant writing and improvisation, brilliant performances – and radio at its best. It really wouldn't work on television.
Pat Mathewson Exeter, Devon

SO LONG, iPM

I can't believe I have just listened to the last edition of iPM (30 March Radio 4). It was a brilliant little programme of listeners' stories. I appreciate that the BBC has to manage its budget carefully, but was iPM so ludicrously expensive that it had to be cut?
Gill Beach Dudley, West Midlands

A BBC spokesperson says: "BBC Radio has to find savings to contribute to the overall £800m of efficiencies the BBC needs to make by 2021/22, and the difficult decision to discontinue iPM was made with these savings in mind. We take a number of factors into account when making such decisions, including ensuring that the station's range of programming remains wide and distinctive."

THE BIG BLUE

Blue Planet Live (BBC1) was very enjoyable and informative and the photography was amazing. My only grumble was watching Steve Backshall feed sharks (24 March).

Just like any animal, sharks could think all divers have food on them and the outcome could be dangerous. We don't feed animals on safari! All the good Steve is doing helping people to overcome their fears could mean a future of nightmares for some poor soul.
Karen Clarke Essex

… Congratulations to everyone involved in the wonderful daytime series Blue Planet UK (BBC1), both on and behind the camera. It proves that there are worthy presenters other than David Attenborough. Special praise to the fantastic Steve Brown – his enthusiasm is infectious!
David Arneil Glasgow

LET'S ALL DANCE

What a wonderful treat for Mother's Day to have Akram Khan's wonderful reimagining of Giselle (31 March BBC4). A huge thanks to the BBC for broadcasting this – and a heartfelt plea for more such screenings and ballet programmes.

We're not all into the latest crime drama – and there are so many of those. Ballet and theatre fans are paying the same licence fee, so please cater for us as well.
Carol Quentin-Hicks Lowestoft, Suffolk

SUPREME BEING

I loved the picture of God on the front cover of RT (30 March), with his benevolent smile, holding the whole world in his hands, and surrounded by a halo of unearthly light. Oh no, silly me, I see it's not God, it's David Attenborough.
Martin Down Witney, Oxfordshire

CAN IT!

May I suggest that the producers of Inside the Factory (BBC2) take a look at Channel 5's Secrets of the Heinz Factory (28 March)? They might then realise that you don't need a gurning, hysterical and annoying presenter. Secrets of the

ON THE LINE
The Heinz factory in action

Factory takes exactly the right approach, with a voiceover and staff who are allowed to talk without constant, inane interruptions.
Andy Thompson Cardiff

NEXT STOP… STARDOM

We thoroughly enjoyed The Beatles: Made in Merseyside (29 March BBC4). It reminded us of a family friend, Muriel Peers. Now in her 90s, she can still vividly remember the day when she watched John Lennon and Paul McCartney audition George Harrison on the top deck of the bus where she was working as a clippie (bus conductor) in the heady musical culture of 1960s Liverpool.
Tessa Buckley Leigh-on-Sea, Essex

SO WHERE'S SALVO?

Only two episodes of Inspector Montalbano appear to have been aired on BBC4 in 2018. I waited patiently for more, to no avail. Were any ever shown? Or were I and my recording box temporarily disconnected ?
John Dugan Coalville, Leicestershire
Sorry to disappoint you, John. As you say, last year there were just two, feature-length episodes, as listed in RT on 19 May and 2 June. Two new episodes, which translate as The Other End of the Thread and A Diary of '43, were shown on Italy's Rai 1 in February this year, but the BBC hasn't yet announced a date to show them on BBC4 – hopefully it will be in the next few months.

FORGET SOMETHING?

Perhaps the title of Australia with Julia Bradbury (ITV) should have been "White Australia with Julia Bradbury". How can you make a programme about Alice Springs and the sacred site of Uluru (28 March) without including a single Aboriginal Australian?

I had been enjoying Bradbury's antics and the shots of the spectacular landscape, but came to the conclusion that the series is another example of spending huge amounts of money on providing a fantastic experience for a TV personality.

This series comes in a poor ▷

Morse, my feminist mother and me, by Abigail Thaw

Endeavour’s male stars Shaun Evans, Roger Allam and Anton Lesser draw a big response from RT readers, but perhaps one of the less celebrated actors in the cast is Abigail Thaw, who plays newspaper editor Dorothea Frazil. We asked her about the role, her late father John – star of Inspector Morse – and her soon-to-be-famous mother: historian and feminist activist Sally Alexander.

ON AND OFF DUTY
Abigail Thaw as Dorothea in Endeavour, and with her mother, Sally Alexander

“I love Dorothea, she’s the complete antithesis to me! She seems incredibly self-sufficient, stoic and unemotional. And she’s a loner. She doesn’t have family. So she and Morse kind of know each other. They just have an innate understanding of each other’s loneliness.”

Abigail was thrilled to be offered the role in 2011, as Endeavour focuses on the early career of the detective made famous by her father, who died in 2002. “It feels extremely honourable to do, and as the years have gone by I still feel that. I’m immensely proud that the character of Morse still holds an interest for people. I feel incredibly lucky to be part of that. But am I wandering around thinking of my father all the time? No, because I wouldn’t be doing my job if I did. As an actor you take each job as a job. My father would be the first to say that.

“He was a well-known actor, but I was brought up by my mother and stepfather [Gareth Stedman Jones], who were academics.” In fact, Abigail was dissuaded from acting by both her parents: “My father wanted me to be a journalist!”

Describing her childhood with Sally, she says, “I was brought up in a house full of friends of hers, and colleagues, mainly women. It was a very progressive house of socialists, feminists, and it was great fun. There were a lot of meetings, activities and protests. They’re making a film about my mother and Keira Knightley is playing her!” The film, called Misbehaviour, is about the women, led by Sally Alexander, who plotted to disrupt 1970’s Miss World contest.

Abigail lives in north London with her husband, actor Nigel Whitmey, and daughters Molly-Mae, 21, and Talia, 15. “We brought them up to believe that they can do anything they want, providing they work at it, regardless of gender or sexual orientation or anything, and to fight for what they believe in.”

So with filming starting soon on series seven of Endeavour and a film about her mum in the pipeline, these are exciting times. “I know. It’s bizarre,” she laughs. “But it’s a great story. I’m very proud of my mother. It’s always been about my dad. Now it’s a bit more about her.”

JOHN HANNAH

‘I’ll always be Scottish’

You can take the actor out of East Kilbride, but…

What are you watching on television, John?
I like travelogues. I’ve been watching Levison Wood trek across the Himalayas. And last year I saw a lot of Second World War documentaries.

They sound like solitary male pleasures…
Well, if nobody else is in, I do like having everything within a kind of semi-circle of where I’m sitting. I make an arc of stuff: a magazine, my book, mobile phone, a cup of tea and some biscuits. If it’s night-time, a beer or something.

What’s on the walls?
It’s quite minimalist. Before I had kids, when I had disposable income, I used to buy 20th-century photography. But not film posters.

Not even a poster for Four Weddings and a Funeral?
No.

Would you rather forget it?
I had thought of myself as going down the Ken Loach/Mike Leigh route, but I’ll always have time for Four Weddings. It gave me a lot of opportunities. Yes, it could be accused of being a tad saccharine, but I don’t think Hugh Grant has ever been better. When I met Simon Callow [who played his character’s partner] for the first time I was thinking, “Really? I know he’s a big actor but me and Simon… together?” But I realised he’s not a big actor, he’s a big man. I really did love him to death.

You play a detective in The Victim and a surgeon in Trust Me…
I’ve always tried to avoid being typecast. If you’re doing the same thing you get bored and end up being one of the less interesting instruments in an orchestra, like the triangle.

You live in Richmond, a very thespian bit of London.
Yes, I’ve been down here for 34 years. Richard E Grant is nearby and David Attenborough is at the top of the hill.

You still sound very Scottish…
I’ll always be Scottish. I’m from East Kilbride, so I absolutely loved Nae Pasaran!, [the BBC Scotland documentary about Rolls-Royce workers who refused to work on aircraft engines for General Pinochet]. I don’t deny my Scottishness, but I don’t go around waving flags or put my kilt on when we’re playing rugby.

Is there a kilt in the house?
Actually, there is: nice dark-greens and blues. I picked it up 20 years ago at a secondhand shop.

Did The Mummy make you rich?
Financially it was good for me, but I never really got any other work out of it. But the night before I went to do it, something came on TV with the Universal logo going round, and I thought, “F! I’m going off to do a Universal movie!” I was really excited.
MICHAEL HODGES

Trust Me is on Tuesday BBC1; The Victim is available on iPlayer

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY AUDIOBOOK Stephen King, lately. I got Doctor Sleep recently, the follow-up to The Shining, and the first I read was The Stand. It’s an absolutely amazing book.

MY WORKOUT A lot of cycling.

MY CD I’m a huge fan of Wu-Tang Clan. My daughter likes Leonard Cohen, which I’m very proud of.
