'Happy Easter from Radio Times!'

EASTER HAS ALWAYS been a real treat for me. Four days when work stops and you can indulge in doing not very much apart from spending time with family and friends – and of course enjoying great television and radio.

I know from the deluge of emails that we received after last year's Easter issue that it's an important time of the year for many of you, too. So, because it's a special time we feel it's only right we create this special issue. We hope you enjoy it.

This year we've called on the services of celebrated illustrator Robin Shaw to create our cover. Robin has created several of our Christmas covers in recent years and has now turned his attention to Easter.

Inside this issue we have 164 pages highlighting the best television and radio programmes and film across dozens of TV and radio stations. Whether it's Miriam Margolyes's thought-provoking programme on life and death (Miriam's Dead Good Adventure is on Easter Day BBC2, see page 16), religious programming or a great movie (our film guide begins on page 34), we have everything you need. Our round-up of the best catch-up and streaming shows on page 50 will give you lots of ideas, too.

THIS EDITION ALSO officially kickstarts the spring TV season. Coming up in Radio Times in the next few weeks you can read all about the finale of the current run of Line of Duty, series two of Killing Eve, plus exciting new dramas from Sally Wainwright (Gentleman Jack) and Russell T Davies (Years & Years). Has there ever been a better time to take out a subscription? See the card attached to this page for details. Happy Easter!

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

TOM HEAP

‘I’ve been watching Fleabag (hasn’t everyone?) and Queer Eye, which is surprisingly sensitive reality TV,’ says the Countryfile presenter and this week’s columnist. ‘Midsomer Murders is a hilarious distraction for a rural current affairs presenter. As for radio, I still love the serendipity of Radio 4 and football commentary on Radio 5 Live.’

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

JUST WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERED

Martin Clunes has just started filming the ninth series of Doc Martin and it looks as if it will be just the tonic for the show's fans. Clunes tells me that the drama, which has begun filming in Port Isaac (which doubles as Portwenn) and the surrounding areas of the north Cornwall coast where they've based the series since 2004, attracts a warm response from viewers. "People write to me, which I find quite touching, telling me they go through their chemotherapy by binge-watching Doc Martin," he says. "I think you get a triple hit of nice countryside, gentle humour and a bossy man in a posh suit fixing everyone. And I guess that might be quite comforting."

INTIMIDATION OF THE PRESS

The term press freedom is often bandied about, the BBC's World Affairs editor John Simpson tells me, but nowhere is it more important than in the case of the 100 or so staff of the BBC's Persian service, who are being subjected to harassment and intimidation on a horrific scale. The staff, many of whom are based in London, are having their assets in Iran targeted, the passports of families confiscated and some relatives have been thrown into jail. Simpson outlined the abuses at a recent seminar event at Broadcasting House and called on the world to act against what he called these "despicable" and "disgusting" events. Still more frighteningly, some of Simpson's BBC colleagues even fear that one day there might be an assassination of a London-based journalist.

NAILING THE NAMES

Line of Duty (Sunday BBC1) has made household names of its heroes and villains. In anti-corruption unit AC-12 there's Ted Hastings (Adrian Dunbar), Steve Arnott (Martin Compston) and Kate Fleming (Vicky McClure), and the suspects and villains have been just as memorable, from Keeley Hawes's unstable Lindsay Denton to Craig Parkinson's venal Matthew "Dot" Cottan. But one thing links them all – none of them has a real-life equivalent in the modern British police, at least not in terms of their name. Great care is taken to ensure that no real coppers could sue for defamation, and as a result the names chosen for the characters in early drafts of Jed Mercurio's scripts have had to be changed – with one exception. Roz Huntley, the dodgy copper played in series four by Thandie Newton, started out as Roz Huntley and stayed that way through to the final script... BEN DOWELL

PERIOD PIECE

Kathleen Shaw (Keeley Hawes) and hearing-aid manufacturer Samuel Petrukhin (Toby Stephens) become friends in the febrile 50s

Listening brief

Stephen Poliakoff will take us back to 1958 in his new BBC2 drama, Summer of Rockets, centred on Russian Jewish émigré, inventor and hearing-aid manufacturer Samuel Petrukhin (Toby Stephens). He and his wife Miriam (Lucy Cohu) are drawn into the world of spying when they meet MP Richard Shaw (Linus Roache) and his wife Kathleen (Keeley Hawes).

The character of Petrukhin is partly based on Poliakoff's own father, who produced hearing aids during that period – even supplying Winston Churchill and coming under suspicion that, as a Russian, he might be bugging the PM via his earpieces.

"1958 was a very interesting summer," says Poliakoff. "It was the last season when debutantes were presented to the Queen and bookending it were the Notting Hill riots and the first whiff of the 60s. Plus there were all these rockets and satellites being launched and the modern world of communications coming into being." BEN DOWELL

'If it hurts, it won't work'

Individual sacrifice isn't going to save us from climate change

IHAVE NO DOUBT that climate change threatens the survival of human civilisation, yet I own a gas guzzler that hastens our demise. Why? Because it's fun. I enjoy the power, the acceleration, the anticipation of speed. Given my decades of environmental reporting and current presenting on Radio 4's Costing the Earth or TV's Countryfile, does this make me an especially infantile hypocrite? Judge for yourself. But I'm sure of one thing: it makes me similar to the vast bulk of the population who struggle to give up what they like for what the planet needs.

Half a century of the environmental movement spouting denial has been a failure. We now drive more, fly more, eat more, heat more, waste more, cool more. Yet some campaigners still believe the present harm and future threat from climate change will achieve some mass conversion. It won't. Consider this: we don't even willingly give up things that we know shorten our own lives, like excess sugar, fat or salt. We don't take up things that would make us healthier, like walking or swapping the lift for the stairs. Would that we were good, but we are not.

And worse, constantly modelling the hair-shirt in the environmental shop window is a gift to opponents, delivering a grain of truth to the slur that Greenies want to kill our joy and return us to the Stone Age. Preaching sacrifice merely sacrifices your own support.

Many people most concerned with the challenge of actually cutting global carbon emissions know this to be true. Urging individual behavioural change is virtually absent from reports by the UN's Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. Christiana Figueres, who negotiated international consensus on climate change by delivering the historic UN-backed 2015 Paris Agreement, told me why: "I don't think we are going to get very far if people think the only way to decarbonise is through sacrifice," she says. "I really don't think that's helpful. Sacrifice is not an enabling thought or force of change."

'We struggle to give up what we like for what the planet needs'

So what is? Proven success comes from technology, politics and financial pressure, preferably combined. In this country we have achieved a remarkable and under-celebrated success. Half of our electricity now comes from low-carbon sources, and that percentage is rising. It's all thanks to science and politics. Engineers have delivered better, cheaper solar panels and wind turbines, while regulations devised in Brussels and London set renewable energy and carbon targets that forced the closure of coal power stations. Our behaviour hasn't changed a fraction and in our homes we suffer nought, we still flick switches and forget.

I've mimicked this move in my own home, having recently fitted more solar panels (now affordable without subsidy), a battery and some electric radiators. I hope to burn virtually no gas this year, without discomfort.

IN TRANSPORT, STEADILY ratcheting European emission regulations drive manufacturers to produce greener vehicles. Another techno/political success. But in recent years this has been undermined by the public desire for bigger cars – the SUV craze. Proof once again that we can't curb our appetites.

Environmental NGOs and campaigners are still vital, as they help change the political climate to enable lawmakers to impose regulations or green taxes and create markets for less polluting products. But wagging their finger at the public is pointless, and being prickly about innovation is worse. Many in the Green movement refer sniffily to the "technological fix", suggesting that "if it isn't hurting, it isn't worthy".

I would argue the opposite: if it hurts, it probably won't work.

SUNNY OUTLOOK
Solar panels are helping us lower our reliance on high-carbon energy sources

WHAT WE WATCHED

David Attenborough was going fossil hunting for BBC2 with his new series Lost Worlds, Vanished Lives. In the new Sunday-night treat, he examined what life on Earth was like 80 (or so) million years ago. But the programme had strict rules, including a refusal to provide animated reconstructions of our animal forebears.

"Each of us cherishes our own mental picture of what dinosaurs were like when they were alive," Attenborough wrote in RT. "Animations would damage that. We will, instead, provide as much as possible of the factual evidence on which such imaginings can be based."

WHAT YOU SAID

RT columnist Miles Kington had just suggested that dogs should be banned from UK cities because of the blight of dog mess. "Maybe we should also consider banning the humans who secrete waste for others to endure," complained Thea Forster from Ilford, Essex. However, Dawn Foster from Biggleswade in Bedfordshire was supportive of Kington's argument. "When I collected my granddaughter from school last week I can honestly say as I walked along the pavement, every few feet there sat a pile of dog excrement." BEN DOWELL

THE REV KATE
BOTTLEY

You'd better believe it!

The Rev Kate Bottley drinks, dances and has a refreshingly bouncy normality – but at her heart is a strong Christian faith

INTERVIEW BY CATHERINE PEPINSTER

KATE BOTTLEY HAS been counting the days until the end of Lent. As she totters into the room where we're meeting in very high heels and a bright yellow cardigan, then wolfs down a box of sushi, the Rev Kate lists all the things she's given up this year for the 40-day traditional Christian season of fasting, penance and almsgiving. "Cheese, chocolate, alcohol – and plastic because my husband's given up plastic so we all have."

And yes, she says, it feels like a long time. Now the end is in sight with Easter imminent and she'll celebrate by hosting her regular Radio 2 show, Good Morning Sunday.

"I can't wait for Easter. I absolutely love it," she says. "I'll be taking in Easter eggs for everyone. Me, I'm like the Easter bunny in a dog collar."

It's this humour and enthusiasm that have made her a TV and radio star. First came Gogglebox, the Channel 4 show where viewers watch others viewing telly, and after that, appearances in Celebrity MasterChef, documentaries, contributing to Radio 2's Pause for Thought on first Chris Evans's and now Zoe Ball's breakfast show, and, since last year, co-hosting Good Morning Sunday with Jason Mohammad.

In all of them the Rev Kate, 45, is cheerful, down-to-earth, and unapologetically a Christian priest. Her success is down to what her Pause for Thought producer Jonathan Mayo calls her ▷ ◁ “ability to be relatable to”. Only one programme has showed a different side to her: when she appeared on Pilgrimage last year she came across as decidedly grumpy as she walked to Santiago de Compostela with six others, including Debbie McGee and Heather Small.

“It’s because I don’t like walking,” she says. “Give me wild swimming or a horse any day, but sorry, middle-class Anglicans who go hiking,

‘I don’t like walking. You don’t grow spiritually through hardship’

I don’t like walking. I’m not one of those Christians who think you grow spiritually through hardship. I don’t.”

The Rev Kate has been finding ways to grow spiritually and communicate God to other people for years – first as a schoolteacher, then as an Anglican priest and, since 2012, through TV and radio. She first started going to church as a teenager because she liked the church-goers she’d met and fancied the son of a vicar. It was a decision that set the course of her life: she married the fanciable vicar’s son, Graham Bottley, and studied religious education at university. After teaching RE, she was ordained in 2008 at the age of 34.

GROWING UP IN Sheffield and becoming a church-goer also brought her into contact in the 1990s with the now notorious Nine o’Clock Service, whose organisers devised groundbreaking alternative church services involving dramatic light effects and rock concert-style music mixed with prayer. In 1995 the Service was closed down after the founder priest, Chris Brain, was accused of sexually abusing 20 women church members.

She seems embarrassed now about her connection with the Nine o’Clock Service, but also defends it: “I was part of the Nine o’Clock Service, but on the fringes of it. It did important things. It showed me that not every person who goes to church does flower arranging. It was innovative and that was a good thing. But you can’t separate that from what else happened, which wasn’t good.”

Being called to the priesthood wasn’t a sudden thing, she recalls. “By that time I’d had my son, I was at home and I got more and more involved in the church. People were saying I should be a priest.”

Her ordination took place 14 years

TV NATURAL
The Rev Kate was a hit with C4’s Gogglebox viewers, along with husband Graham, their dog and the tea-cosy collection after the Church of England first ordained women priests. Had attitudes changed by the time she took holy orders?

“You get misogyny with every profession but with the priesthood it was often because people hadn’t met a woman priest before. I have had people say they don’t want me officiating at their dad’s funeral. I say, ‘Can I come and see you for a cup of tea?’ Often after we’ve met they change their minds. Then there are times when people want a woman. I get funeral directors who say, ‘We’ve got a bereaved mum and they want a woman priest.’”

The service that led to a media career was a wedding. One couple wanted something to make their day memorable and the Rev Kate suggested a dance. She joined the couple rocking in front of the altar and down the aisle to Kool and the Gang’s Celebration. A video of the boogieing vicar, cassock swaying to the beat, went viral on YouTube, was spotted by Gogglebox and a TV career was launched.

Viewers loved the woman in a dog collar stretched out on the sofa alongside her dog and husband Graham, a teapot adorned with a different, and often wacky, cosy each week. The Rev Kate was the kind of approachable, opinionated person you might meet at a bus stop. It was not how vicars were supposed to be, although Dawn French had already changed some minds with her portrayal of the Rev Geraldine Granger in The Vicar of Dibley.

The Rev Kate appreciates Dibley’s impact, but her favourite TV vicar is Adam Smallbone (played by Tom Hollander) in the BBC2 comedy Rev. “It’s how it is,” she says of Smallbone’s tough but poignant life. For the same reason, she admires Sean Bean’s Catholic Father Kerrigan in Jimmy McGovern’s drama Broken. And Fleabag’s priest is “hot, hot, hot”.

STAR PERFORMER
The Rev Kate made it to the semi-finals of 2017's Celebrity MasterChef

RELUCTANT PILGRIM
In BBC2's Pilgrimage last year, with Neil Morrissey, JJ Chalmers, Debbie McGee and Raphael Rowe

‘We haven’t lost faith. People have just stopped wanting to sit in rows’

But TV exposure can be tough for a real-life vicar and in the early days of Gogglebox, her fellow media vicar Richard Coles – the former member of the Communards who swapped pop for the priesthood and co-hosts Radio 4's Saturday Live – got in touch to offer support. The pair, along with a third media vicar – newspaper columnist Giles Fraser, a regular panellist on Radio 4's The Moral Maze – now form a mutual-support network.

“It is hard being in the public eye,” the Rev Kate says, “but I wanted people to see that vicars are normal.”

She only joined Gogglebox after consulting her bishop – seeing it as an opportunity because “the gap between church and culture is now so wide that we have to find ways to plug it”.

Deciding to leave her parish in order to become a freelance media performer was a risk. She left behind a regular income, a tied house and a pension. But she still helps out, at St Saviour's at Retford in Nottinghamshire.

Being in the media confirmed for her that many people are prejudiced about religion often through ignorance. “They know very little, they stop learning about religion at primary school and they think we believe in a God who sits on a cloud,” she says.

The audience for Good Morning Sunday is as mixed as its content of middle-of-the-road music, hymns and spiritual chit-chat: people getting ready to go to church, but also people coming off night shifts, working early shifts in hotels and hospitals, parents making breakfast. Kate describes it as “a mix, as life is. There's religion in there, but it's not a God slot.”

SHE'D LIKE TO see more programmes that include faith as part of the conversation: “I don't think we have lost faith as a nation. People have just stopped wanting to sit in a building in rows.”

She understands why people are alienated by the Church, particularly over its attitude to issues such as gay marriage. The revelation last month that same-sex partners of bishops would not be welcome at the Anglican Communion's 2020 Lambeth Conference was, she says, damaging to the Church's integrity. “It's unjust and ridiculous. It's wrong.”

When it comes to traditional Christian teaching, though, she has no doubts. On Easter Day, when she welcomes listeners to Good Morning Sunday, she will be deliriously happy that it is Easter, when Christ rose from the dead. “I believe in the Resurrection, that death is defeated, that everybody I have buried can know that. I'm so happy about it, it makes me cry.”

THE THINKER
St Edmund Hall's Freddy Leo has emerged as a divisive figure

This series of University Challenge has thrown up a fresh controversy

NEXT TO SOME of the more explosive programmes airing this April, from the return of bloody and barbaric Game of Thrones to the nail-biting tension of Line of Duty, University Challenge hardly seems like stimulating and provocative stuff. It's a dry, mild, traditional affair, the ultimate preserve of middle-class, middle-aged Middle England.

And yet there I am, at the end of every Monday throughout the autumn, winter and spring, digging my nails into the arm of the sofa, moved to inexplicable extremes of excitement and frustration. In my house we watch it with the volume turned up obscenely high and the subtitles on, so we don't miss a moment of dialogue beneath our pathetic guesses and indignant running commentary. An episode is never missed.

I simply love it: the drama of a fluffed answer, the tension of a close race, the quirks of the contestants, who begin to feel like celebrities (or at least weird cousins you know and love). And then there's the outrage: of a flagrant rule-break, or a boorish, overenthusiastic celebration after a win.

This is a world in which sweet little nerds find genuine joy in testing and sharing their knowledge about art, science, literature, geography and music, in contests that can sometimes feel like a Game of Thrones battle scene. Despite its dry exterior, controversies abound, and heroes and villains appear.

The heroes of this year's series have been

smiley, high-fiving New Yorker Jason Galfinos, the captain of Darwin College, Cambridge, who answered so many questions in a row that Jeremy Paxman wondered aloud, "What do you spend your time doing?". There's also Galfinos's team-mate, the handsomely moustached Christopher Davis. I was a huge fan of this year's Durham team, particularly their shy, sweet-faced captain Matthew Toynbee, and I loved Dani Cugini, of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, who was sometimes so enthusiastic she struggled to actually get her answers out.

'You shouldn't be allowed to buzz like a bandit'

I also had a soft spot for Bristol's Anne Le Maistre, who for some reason told us every week that she "now lives in Bristol" (we know, Anne, it's written right there in front of your seat), and who, after she gave an incorrect answer and was consoled by a team-mate who told her not to worry, said matter-of-factly, "I'm not worried."

But avid viewers will know that controversy surrounding the etiquette of buzzing has shaken this year's tournament. Its central villain is the unstoppable intellectual force that is Freddy Leo, captain of St Edmund's Hall, Oxford.

Leo impressed audiences from his very first appearance on the show thanks to his ferociously fast buzzing. He was quickly dubbed the Cristiano Ronaldo of University Challenge and "the quickest on the buzzer ever", with some audiences speculating that he was plugged into Wikipedia. A fiercely intelligent and presumably perfectly pleasant chap, in one episode, the history undergraduate answered all of his side's 11 "starter for ten" questions correctly and scored his highest personal tally – 143 points.

I know no one likes a frontrunner, but Leo makes my blood roil with the vengeful rage of a Greek god of war.

BEING QUICK ON the buzzer has always been a high-risk strategy: you want to get in there early enough to beat your opponents to the point, but you lose five points if you interrupt Paxman with a wrong answer. As a result, "Answer as soon as your name is called" is one of the golden rules of the show: you shouldn't be allowed to buzz like a bandit without answering immediately. "That... is... Sidney Poitier", Leo said in one match against Emmanuel, later being more brazen, interrupting Paxman only to pause: "Hmm. Let's go for... Saxony and Bavaria."

QUIZ QUARRELS

This isn't the first time University Challenge has come in for criticism

RULE BREAKERS

In 2009, Corpus Christi College, Oxford – captained by the incredible “intellectual blitzkrieg” Gail Trimble – were stripped of their title after one of the team turned out not to actually be a student. In an investigation conducted by the BBC and programme producer Granada, it was found that Trimble's Corpus Christi team-mate Sam Kay had graduated in June 2008 and was working at accountancy firm PricewaterhouseCoopers while he took part in the latter stages of the competition. To retain the integrity of the programme, the 2009 trophy was handed to the runners-up, Manchester University.

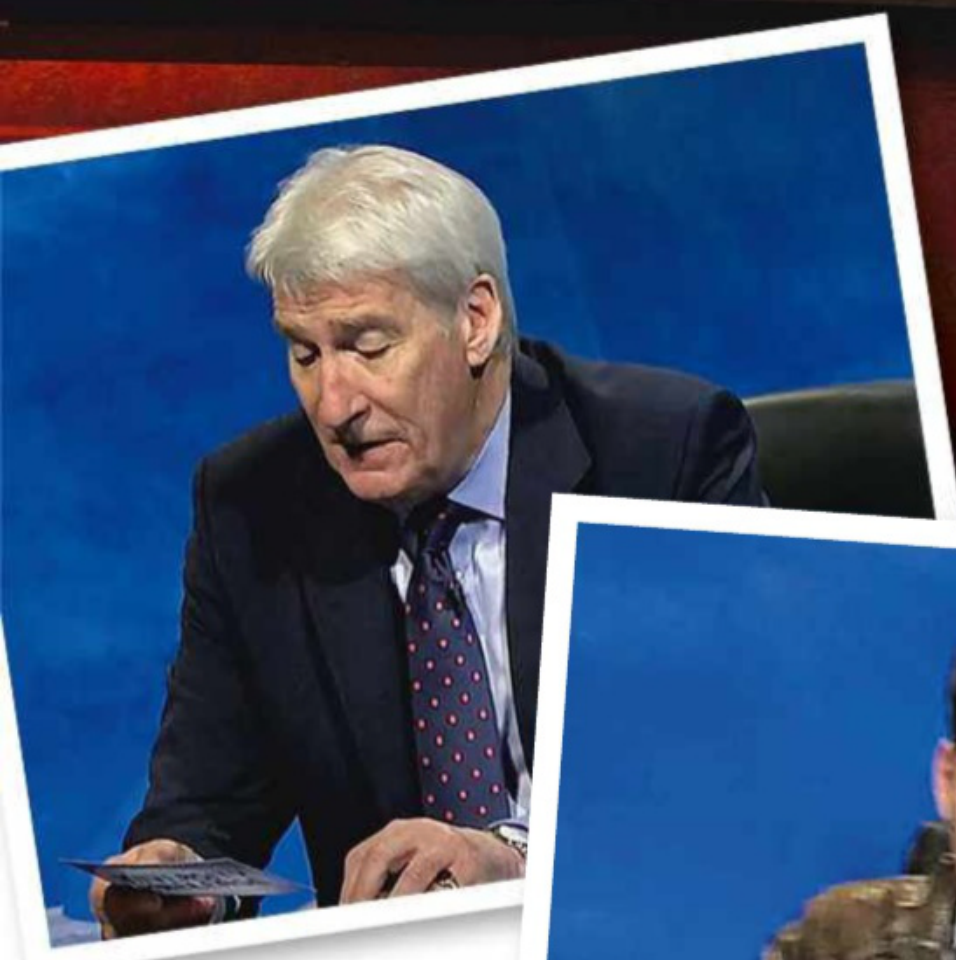

Kay apologised, but said he believed he was still eligible for the contest as he had been a student when filming had begun. It was the first time this had happened in the quiz show's history, and a surprising end for Trimble, who had scored more points than her three team-mates combined in the run-up to the final.

GENDER ROW

In 2016 the University of Reading student union voted to boycott University Challenge following complaints over “misogynistic and sexist remarks” they say were made by host Jeremy Paxman to members of their team. It wasn't the first time the programme had courted controversy over alleged sexism: all-male teams and finals have faced criticism, with producers appealing to universities for more diverse teams, while female contestants have spoken of online abuse and objectification after being on the show.

Former contestants have also suggested that young women think twice about applying because of concerns that stories about them might eclipse their professional accomplishments. Hannah Rose Woods (right), captain of the Peterhouse College, Cambridge, team that won the 2016 series, told Radio Times: “I worried about how taking part in the programme might impact my career when Google searches started returning hundreds of articles about my appearance, and random marriage proposals I'd received from strangers, instead of my academic research.”

This was enough to make my cold heart harden to Leo, the quick-wristed, fist-pumping, encyclopaedia-swallowing, leather jacket-wearing PUNK. But his most frustrating bout of buzzing came in the quarter-final match against Bristol.

Having trailed for most of the game, they took a sudden lead after Leo buzzed early and answered late not once but twice. Despite being warned by Paxman after the first offence (a two-second pause), Leo went on to leave a borderline unprecedented gap of five full seconds after his next buzz. (Which is plenty of time, it turns out, for a sofa-full of people to scream “UGH, PAXMAN!” and “OH, COME ON”.) Inexplicably, Leo was awarded the full points both times: Paxman, who referred chum-mily to the team as “Teddy Hall”, was accused of favouritism (especially as he penalised Bristol for mispronouncing an otherwise correct answer). Those two delayed answers won St Edmund Hall the game, and a place in the semi-final.

Leo knows his stuff, but his technique is infuriating. His fastest finger formula might win the trophy, but woe betide the contestant who disrespects University Challenge etiquette. Victory may never taste less sweet.

I've carved a Miriam-shaped niche in showbusiness

THE RT INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

Miriam Margolyes on life, death and her bitter fallout with Maureen Lipman

MIRIAM MARGOLYES LIVES in a big house in south London. Her terraced back garden looks like a theatre and I suggest, on arriving, that she could put on an al fresco Midsummer's Night Dream if she were minded. "Well, I'm not minded," she snaps, establishing early in proceedings just who is in charge. "Now," she softens, "would you like some cake?"

Margolyes is still not unpacked from her annual winter visit to Australia (she's held dual citizenship since 2013) and then a trip to the Hebrides where she has been filming Call the Midwife, "hidden under a wimple playing Mother Superior". She is having one those busy periods that come at the end of long careers, when people realise that you have been wonderful all along. As well as Mother Mildred in Call the Midwife there has been The Real Marigold Hotel, and she's an increasingly popular talking head. "Yesterday, somebody phoned me and said, 'You're on television talking about sex.' I said, 'What? How dare you?' I'd completely forgotten that I had, in fact, done a programme called Let's Talk about Sex on Channel 4. It goes out at ten o'clock, when people should either be doing ▷

◁ it or reading. I didn't watch, of course."

I've come here to talk about Miriam's Dead Good Adventure, a daft name for a great two-part documentary that confronts the most important question any of us must face in our life, the end of it. "I'll be 78 in May," she says. "So it's something I've been thinking about."

Initially Margolyes travels to America, where she interviews a man who stands neck-high in a freezer unit to arrest the ageing process. She also joins a group who use orgasmic energy to stave off mortality, but finds she's not able to go all the way. "I haven't had an orgasm since the Second World War," she says. "If I do I'd prefer to be on my own or with someone I know, rather than a class full of people I've never met before. Though I don't believe they had orgasms. I think they just wiggled their bottoms and hoped for the best."

SHE ENCOUNTERS OTHER "bonkers people", including attendees at the Revolution against Ageing and Death festival in California. "They think they're not going to die," Margolyes laughs. "Hello! Show me somebody who never died and I might believe you. They're crackers." How did she keep a straight face? "I have a very strong tendency to scepticism but on television it isn't helpful to say, 'What a load of bs!'"

If the occasionally knockabout first episode is about avoiding death, the second is about facing it. She joins Tyreese, an 18-year-old who lives in the Midlands, raps and has bowel and liver cancer. Margolyes goes to the barber's with him and talks to his pals. "Going into a room of young, cynical men is a very difficult thing to do," she says. "In comes this un-sexually attractive old lady who suddenly starts talking to them. They probably thought, 'What does she want?' But I managed to get them to talk and they were reflective and serious. People write off working-class youth but they were not jobs. They had depth, and I thought I brought that out. I'm proud of that."

Margolyes also meets Tracy, a 60-year-old with advanced ovarian cancer who has moved to the Isle of Bute to live out her remaining time. "An exceptional woman," says Margolyes. "Tracy had thought about her death, and the aftermath of it, with focus, which people don't often have the strength to bring. Seeing somebody like her face death with such incredible grace and power is very moving. And I wanted to be able to communicate that to people who would be watching. Because so much of what we do these days is crap. And I don't want to do any more crap."

It's rare for a popular documentary to achieve genuine insight. Louis Theroux pulls it off by being quiet; Margolyes does it the way she seems to do everything else, by speaking out and asking questions. "Many people would regard me as a trivial loudmouth, pushing a rather disgusting personality," she says. "I've had letters to that effect." Really? "Yes, and I'm told that certain remarks have been made about me on Twitter which show that people think that I'm a bad thing. I'm sad, because I don't want to be a bad thing. I think that my love of life and my love of connection should allow people to see that it's not done out of nastiness. It's done out of exuberance. But some people don't see that and just say, 'For God's sake, shut her up.'"

In the programme, as Tracy nears the end of her life, Margolyes asks her if she were to offer her a pill that would end it all now, very gently, would she take it? I ask Margolyes the same thing now. "I'm not sure if I would ever have the courage," she says. "I hope I would, because one doesn't want to be a burden. Maybe all my friends will be saying, 'Take the pill, take the pill!' But I love life. I want to know what's going to happen. And when you take the pill, you know you'll never know."

TRACY SAYS SHE can't take the pill because it would be unfair to her two daughters. Margolyes doesn't have children. "But I don't feel excluded," she says. "My circumstances are just different." She does have a remarkably long-lasting relationship with the Australian academic Heather Sutherland. "We've been together since 1968," she says. "That's the central pillar of my life, and it is an enormous blessing. One of the things that is worrying about dying is it means that I lose her. I understand why people make suicide pacts, though she's not up for that. I've asked her. Without her, I cannot imagine my life. I just don't know how I would cope. I would completely cut in half." Would she rather go first, then? "I would, except that it would be very selfish because I am much more outgoing than she is. She is not like that. She is a scholar, and her world is her books. And I think she would not find it easy to make friends. She's a solitary person, and I'm a social person."

◁ into a middle-class Jewish family. She read English at Cambridge, where she appeared in the 1962 revue with John Cleese and Bill Oddie, directed by Trevor Nunn, and was part of the 1963 Newnham College University Challenge team. Famously, on The Graham Norton Show in November 2011, she recalled pulling up at traffic lights up on her bicycle in Cambridge during her student days and suggesting, on a whim, to an American man in the car alongside, that they engage in a sex act. “Do you think

‘I’ve developed into a most remarkable person’

I shouldn’t have told that story?” she asks now. “Do you think it’s made people think of me in a different way?”

Possibly. Her long CV includes Blackadder, Harry Potter and a Bafta for best supporting actress in Martin Scorsese’s 1993 film The Age of Innocence, but there remains the sense that she has never quite been credited her full due. “The professional estimate of me is not as high as it might be,” she admits. “But they’re wrong. I am a rather rude conversationalist but they should allow me to have the potential to be a great actress. It is possible for the two to coexist.”

I ASK HER IF she regrets anything. “That I’m still fat,” she says immediately. “It’s making life more difficult for me now. It’s not good for me and it’s not nice to look at. It’s appalling and it’s a waste. I’ve been given so much energy and intelligence and good humour. And it could be ruined by just being overweight.”

And professionally? “Michael, I’ve been in Harry Potter, Wicked, Romeo and Juliet with Leonardo DiCaprio, and I won a Bafta. Somehow, from very unpromising material, I’ve managed to carve myself a Miriam-shaped niche in showbusiness. I think that’s pretty darn good.”

In case she forgets how good, there is a poster-sized reproduction of a Daily Mail review in the hallway that reads: “The innate wit, the perfect timing, the shining clarity with which she delivers a comic line... One of the most respected comedy actresses in the land.”

Otherwise the walls of her home are covered with shelves of books and hung with naive art and an Edwardian-era advertisement for the South East

In the documentary Margolyes refers to her Jewishness several times but she says God will not be helping her cross over to the other side when the time comes. “I’m a little Jew, and once a Jew, always a Jew. I don’t believe in God, but the cultural heritage, the food, the jokes, the sense of belonging to a club, yes.”

A Labour Party member, she has firm opinions about anti-Semitism accusations directed at the party. “Jeremy Corbyn, who is an excellent constituency representative, a serious person, is not an anti-Semite. I don’t think there is the extent of anti-Semitism in the Labour Party that people seem to imply,” she says. “I think it’s to do with trying to stop Corbyn from being prime minister.” She is also critical of Israel’s treatment of the Palestinians. “It’s just a fact that the Israelis have behaved appallingly, they continue to do so, and people are dying. I am ashamed, as a Jew, of what’s been done in my name. I can’t bear it. And for that I’m vilified and people won’t come to see the plays I’m in. I’ve become, as it were, a kind of minuscule Vanessa Redgrave when she was vilified for her political position. But I am right. I have no doubt about that whatever.”

I wonder how it feels to be separated from your own community. “It hurts me,” she says. “I’m so Jewish, and so happy to be Jewish. And the schism between me and Maureen Lipman, which is the manifestation of this chasm, causes me pain.”

Lipman is a very public supporter of Israel. In 2015 she demonstrated with pro-Israeli groups outside a production of a pro-Palestinian play in London. “She feels that I am a wicked traitor to my people,” says Margolyes. “And I feel that she’s a fool.” The two appeared together in a 1989 British Telecom commercial spoofing Jewish domestic life, now Margolyes admits it would be difficult if they met in the street. “I hope I would be civil. I’m sad because I admire Maureen, and I have known her for a long time. She’s been a friend, and now it’s not possible any more. I expect she might be sad, too. But she said don’t communicate with me again and I haven’t.”

S HE SAYS SHE feels compelled to stand against injustice in the world. “For me, it’s the same sort of cause as apartheid. I was marching on South Africa House when I was young and, unfortunately, it’s now my own people I’ve got to march against. That’s painful, but I won’t pretend. If you can’t tell the truth when you’re 77, when are you going to tell it?”

Margolyes may be overweight and prone, perhaps, to oversharing, but she is the most combative and alive 77-year-old you could wish to meet. “If I had full bodily control and mobility, then this would be the best time of my life,” she says. “Because I really like myself now. I think I’ve developed into a most remarkable person. I’m very honest, very kind, very open, and I think I’m nice. It doesn’t mean I haven’t got room for improvement; there’s vast room for improvement. But I think I’ve arrived at who I am. This is Miriam Margolyes.”

The nation's Top 10 theme tunes

We recognise these punchy TV scores instantly – but what makes them great, asks RT's Andrew Collins

THE BFI & Radio Times Television Festival may have been the talk of the broadcasting world last weekend, but only one event was music to the ears of keen students of the medium: the result of our search for the Nation's Favourite TV Theme Tune. Thousands of you voted from an advisory shortlist and when the results were announced before a live audience at the BFI Southbank in London, one thing became clear: if there was a theme, it's that the best intros take on a life of their own.

The music of Doctor Who is so intertwined with its universe, it's rearranged for new eras but not rewritten or replaced, and Match of the Day was named the most recognisable on TV after a PRS survey. Title sequences we learn to love at an impressionable age (Thunderbirds, Black Beauty; for more seasoned viewers, Dr Finlay's Casebook or Dixon of Dock Green) resonate with us for life. As Poldark maestro Anne Dudley says, "So much to convey in 40 seconds!"

Here's the Top 10 in reverse order.

10 MATCH OF THE DAY 1970 BARRY STOLLER

Musician Barry Stoller was 29 when a scorched-earth revamp of the BBC's football show required a new theme to replace the old-fashioned military band tune, Drum Majorette. He took to his basement studio to face this "formidable task", playing the guitar parts himself and a clavichord keyboard, drafting in a drummer and trumpeter for the fanfare bits (Stoller's aimed-for "gladiator feel"). The 2014 documentary Match of the Day at 50 reminded us that when, in the mid-70s, Stoller's tune was rearranged as if by a bored robot, the reaction was overwhelming. Des Lynam (above left with Jimmy Hill) remembered that disgruntled viewers "nearly burned Television Centre down".

9 THE ADVENTURES OF BLACK BEAUTY 1972 DENIS KING

Galloping Home, the gorgeously evocative theme to the ITV

children's drama series, still provides a Proustian rush to anyone from the approximate generation who thrilled to the country air, doffed caps and equine snorts of this continuation

7 THE AVENGERS 1965 LAURIE JOHNSON

This camp, proto-feminist take on the funky world of British espionage enjoyed a number of distinct epochs on ITV. Many agree that the 1965–67 run was its

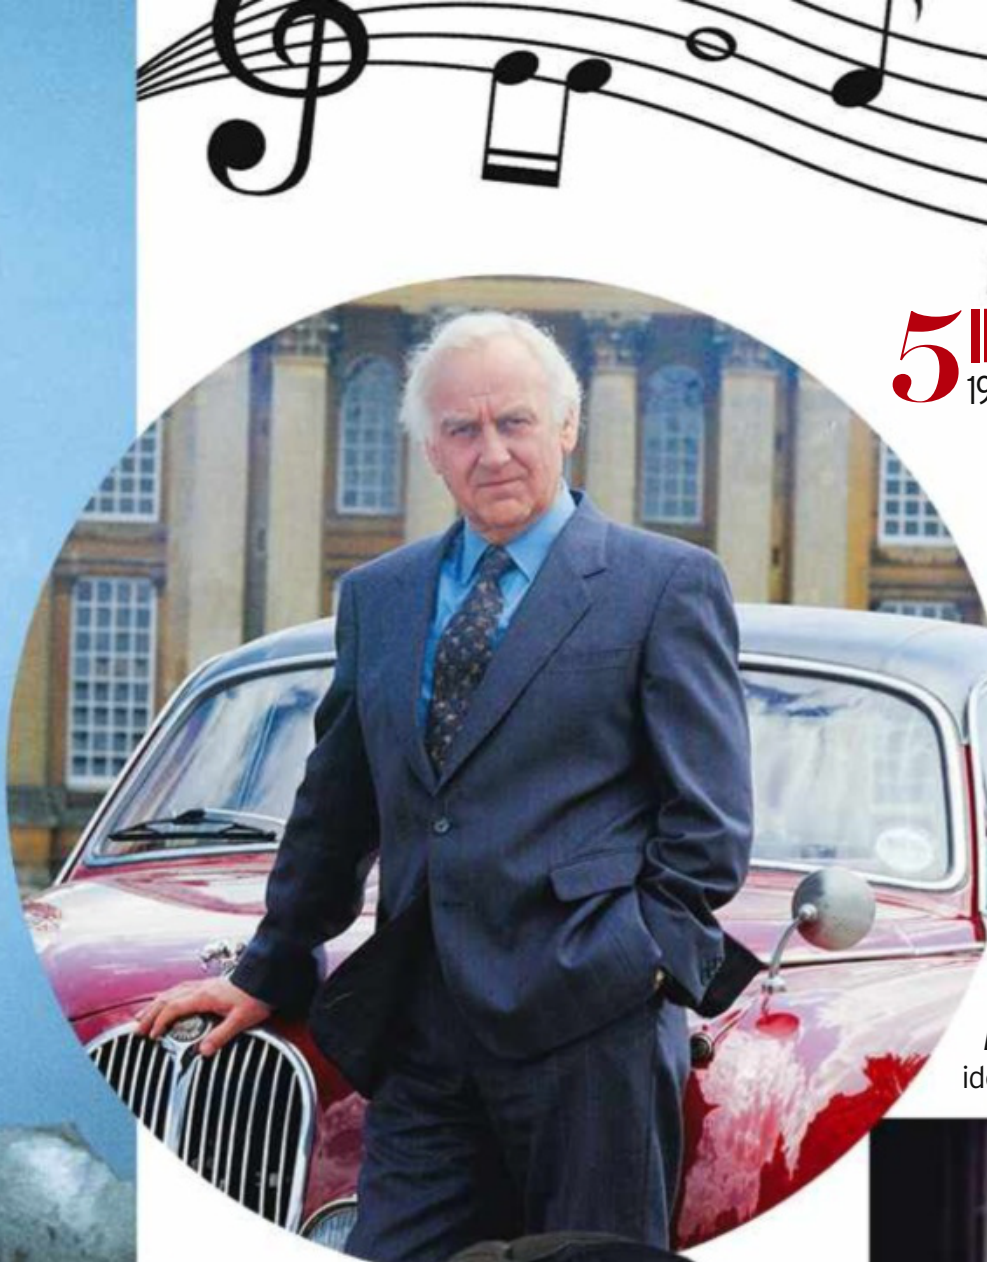

8 THUNDERBIRDS 1965 BARRY GRAY

In-house maestro for Gerry Anderson, who with wife Sylvia produced groundbreaking puppet shows and live-action series for TV, Barry Gray from Blackburn provided the rousing, often militaristically percussive music for the Andersons' "Supermarionation" productions. Definitive property Thunderbirds, a futuristic, hardware-driven soap opera about a secret service staffed by an ex-astronaut, his five sons and Lady Penelope, provided Gray with a platform to write the swinging decade's hippest march. In a Wagnerian touch, each vehicle had its own leitmotif. Gray had his own orchestra.

of Anna Sewell's 19th-century animal welfare-promoting novel. Having been in "Britain's first ever boy band" the chart-topping King Brothers, Denis King's big break was Black Beauty, which won him an Ivor Novello award. He's also scored Lovejoy, Dick Turpin and Privates on Parade.

5 INSPECTOR MORSE

1987 BARRINGTON PHELOUNG

Australian composer and classical guitarist Pheloung spoke to Soundtrack magazine about the thinking behind the music for one of British TV's best-loved detectives: "Morse is a melancholic character, so the music had to be melancholic." It also had to be orchestral, as Endeavour's a lover of classical music. Famously, to reference Morse's crossword-solving, the theme folds in a Morse code signal that spells out his name "in triple compound time".

Pheloung, who also scored for ITV's Lewis and Endeavour, calls it "an obvious idea". Maybe, but also one of the best.

1971 JOHN BARRY

"The first man to make soundtracks sexy," according to GQ, demobbed Army trumpeter

John Barry was king of cool in the 1960s, scoring several Bond films, co-habiting with Michael Caine and arranging Adam Faith hits.

Augmenting a big band with struck stringed instrument the cimbalom (as heard in The Ipcress File) and a Moog synth, he created the chiming, grinding theme to The Persuaders! – Roger Moore and Tony Curtis as an Anglo-American playboy crime-solving duo, whose biographies play out over the alluring tune.

It, and they, earned the permanent exclamation mark. ▷ baroque peak, with Patrick Macnee playing up to the umbrella-wielding English gent and cat-suited Diana Rigg kick-ass as Emma Peel. John Dankworth had written the original jazzy theme, but bandleader and swing king Laurie Johnson adapted The Shake, a dance craze, as The Avengers' new theme in 1965. It'll have you twisting to this day. He also composed This Is Your Life, The Professionals and Animal Magic (later revived for WIA).

2015 ANNE DUDLEY

It's not in any way to demote composer Kenyon Emrys-Roberts, whose music helped propel the BBC's original Poldark to the nation's bosom in the 1970s, but something in Anne Dudley's sweeping, swirling theme for the remake swooningly melds cliff-top vertigo and tin-pricing economics with just-saucy-enough intrigue into one irresistible, string-driven suite. Awards-laden Dudley, co-founder of the Art of Noise and Oscar winner in 1997 for The Full Monty, hoped her music would combine "Englishness, romanticism and history", the folky violin representing Ross "fighting against his upbringing and class". Job done.

3 ROBIN OF SHERWOOD

1984 CLANNAD

The Brennans and Duggans from County Donegal, aka Celtic folk family Clannad, had a 1982 hit with their theme for Troubles-set ITV drama Harry's Game. This led to scoring all 26 episodes of Robin of Sherwood, a pin-up-friendly take on the legend (Michael Praed, below, and successor Jason Connery broke a few hearts at teatime among Look-In readers). Released on the LP Legend, its theme showcased the clan's ethereal vocals, led by Máire Brennan, adding mystical, new-age promise to the squelchy 80s-synth bed. The sole lyric goes, "Ro-bin, the hooded man." The album won a Bafta for best original TV music.

2 DOCTOR WHO

1963 RON GRAINER, DELIA DERBYSHIRE

The only instance of an iconic TV theme being "realised" – that is, put through the electronic rinse cycle of the groundbreaking BBC Radiophonic Workshop under Delia Derbyshire – Australian composer Ron Grainer's enduring, oscillating whoosh of temporal travel has, happily, stood the test of time. Proven by experts to send viewers of all ages instantaneously behind the sofa, its "woo-ooo-oooh" refrain and fractal visuals never date. Even current composer Segun Akinola obeys the original key, E minor, paying homage to Who heritage. Likewise, Murray Gold, stalwart of the 2005 revival, who sampled bits of the original.

2010 DAVID ARNOLD, MICHAEL PRICE

The theme's afoot! It comes as no surprise that the Cumberbatch bloc ensured a loyal turnout for the hugely popular Steven Moffat/Mark Gatiss BBC1 upgrade of Sherlock Holmes, propelling its dashing music to the top of our pops. David Arnold and Michael Price have scored four albums of what is inaccurately called incidental music isolated from the funky visuals and labyrinthine plots. They agree that Sherlock's theme is in fact two run together: the epic, drum-thumping Opening Titles and the more playfully Victorian-tinged Pursuit. "I'd play both or join one to the other to represent the theme," Arnold explains. "It's like Brexit... no one knows which one is which."

Price, also responsible for Unforgotten, adds, "Being a part of a TV show like Sherlock which has reached so many people is a genuinely humbling experience. Thanks hugely to all the Radio Times readers who voted for it – I can only apologise to everyone else who wanted their favourite to win. I voted for Some Mothers Do 'Ave 'Em."

Arnold, whose personal faves include Black Beauty, The Sweeney and Steptoe and Son, also composed Little Britain and five Bond films. As for their Sherlock music: "I think the success of the show has a lot to do with it." Of their fruitful collaboration, Price says, "I'm never sure, on any given day, which one of us is Holmes and which is Watson... I do know who has the hat, though."

Their next job together is the Moffat/Gatiss Dracula, "So we feel we're home again."

'Old people are overlooked'

Still working, smoking – and making friends with Lady Gaga. June Brown is proof that age is not a barrier to a good life

'I'm lucky I've still got my work. That's what keeps me alive'

JUNE BROWN

FORGET YOGA, MINDFULNESS and endless lengths of the pool. It turns out the secret to a long life, brilliant memory and a lively and inquiring mind is Guinness, chocolate, red wine and smoking like the proverbial chimney.

At the grand age of 92, June Brown is vibrant testimony to the benefits of the “doing exactly as you damn well please” diet. “I’m going to die of something fairly soon so why not enjoy myself,” laughs Brown, best known as EastEnders’ Dot Branning. “I love red wine and also dark chocolate, even though I’m allergic to it and it makes me sneeze. And the Guinness helps me keep a bit of weight on. So I don’t need to be careful about what I eat or drink.”

Or, for that matter, smoke. “Exactly. What’s the point of counting how many cigarettes I smoke a day? I’ve been on them for over 70 years. I did try one of those new electronic cigarettes but it was so heavy it kept falling out of my mouth, so that went in the bin.”

Suffice to say, Brown and technology are not comfortable bedfellows, which makes her perfect for ITV’s Hard to Please OAPs, in which she and six other celebrity pensioners test state-of-the-art gadgets. “All the machines were pretty useless,” she says, testily. “You can have the best gadget in the world, but if you can’t read the instructions, what’s the point?”

“I’ve got an iPhone but it’s too much like a computer. All this technology is supposed to bring people together, but because so many elderly people can’t get to grips with it, they feel even more isolated. They’ve no one to talk to and nothing to bring them to life. I’m lucky I’ve still got my work. That’s what keeps me alive.”

Brown joined EastEnders 34 years ago as chain-smoking curtain-twitcher Dot. Remarkably, despite failing eyesight and hearing, she continues to work relentlessly. A pioneering operation a couple of years ago helped treat her age-related macular degeneration. “It’s improved my peripheral sight; luckily I’ve always had good visual memory so I can learn my scripts as they’re printed in chunks on large slides. I’ve got no central vision, so I recognise the people on set by their shape, otherwise I’d have to get two inches from their face. You can’t go around peering into men’s faces like that, can you? They’d think I was chatting them up!”

SHE STILL LIVES in her Surrey home aided by her two daughters, but lost the hearing in her right ear after lightning struck her house at Christmas. “It caused a plug point to explode in the lounge with an almighty bang,” she recalls with a grim laugh. “I was lucky the flying shards didn’t blind me, but my right ear was facing it and so the bang did for my hearing. I’ve been very lucky with my health, but things always seem to happen to me.”

Indeed, overly punctuated by accident and tragedy, Brown’s life reads like a soap opera. Her wealthy father went bust after investing money in German banks before the Second World War, and her childhood was scarred by the death of two siblings. She began acting while serving with the Wrens and studied at the Old Vic, where she met her first husband, actor John Garley. After seven years of marriage she came home to find he’d taken his own life. She later married actor Robert Arnold, and they had ▷ ◁ six children, one of whom died in infancy. The couple were together for 45 years, until Arnold died in 2003 of pneumonia.

“I’ve had tragedy in my life, but I think that gives me a depth that I can bring to my work,” she says softly. “I’d like to see more older women on TV because they can bring that life experience and emotion to a performance. You simply don’t have that as a young woman. Sadly, women are written off far too early in this industry.

“It’s also true of society in general. The elderly in Britain aren’t really given enough respect. Grandparents are ignored or packed off to care homes. Old people are considered worthless fuddy-duddies and often overlooked, which makes them sink into loneliness. I noticed it as soon as I started to age.” Brown takes a breath: “I’m not bragging but I used to be rather beautiful, with lovely legs, and people would always ask me to dance. But suddenly people didn’t take any notice of me any more. I was at a party in my 50s and was forced to dance with a chair because nobody wanted to dance with me. I’m serious. I just really wanted to dance so I took the chair and danced with it. I didn’t care a jot what people thought of me. Didn’t even look at them. I was just happy dancing.”

‘I’ve had tragedy in my life, but that gives me depth’

THE CURRENT STATE of politics and world affairs also depresses her. “I don’t like what’s happening to society,” she sighs. “So I try and avoid the details. I watch News at Ten and Loose Women and that gives me all I need to know.”

So what does she watch for pleasure? “I like documentaries, but they often have an agenda so I tend to stick with nature programmes – anything with David Attenborough is always very good.”

She also admits to an admiration for the Queen – and Lady Gaga. “The Queen has dedicated her life to serving the country so you have to admire that,” she says, brightening. “I met her at her 60th birthday party at the Palace and she didn’t have a clue who I was. Her aides weren’t there to introduce me, so she gave me a look and just walked off, which made me fall about laughing. I met her again when she presented me with an MBE [in 2008], but when I was called I tripped on the step in front of her and almost fell over. She said something about enjoying EastEnders and for some reason I replied, ‘I didn’t think you’d see it because it clashes with your dinner.’ I didn’t even call her Ma’am or Your Majesty, so later I thought about writing to her to apologise. But I suppose at least I made her laugh.”

Brown sparked an even unlikelier friendship with actress and singer Lady Gaga when they appeared on The Graham Norton Show together. “Now there’s a girl who knows how to play the celebrity game without losing any of her humanity and kindness,” she gushes. “She was so funny, intelligent and down to earth, but afterwards, when she went in front of the press, you could see her put the Gaga persona on. She saw me sitting on my own and came back, dropped the whole Gaga thing and invited me out to a nightclub before saying goodbye. Sadly I couldn’t make it, but I thought what a charming and talented girl.

“A few days later I was in a restaurant and a huge hen party came over. I thought they’d mistaken me for Gaga but they just wanted to talk about her and have their picture taken with me. It used to be autographs but now it’s always these selfies.”

Does that annoy you? “Oh goodness no!” she exclaims. “These people are fans and viewers, they put us up where we are and allow us to make a living so I’m always grateful and never refuse. As someone once wisely said to me, ‘No matter how long you’ve been in this business, don’t ever get up yourself, dear.’” GRAHAM WRAY

The magic of Moomins

Will Self was first enchanted by Tove Jansson's Moomin stories as a child. Now he's lending his voice to the Muskrat...

MY MOTHER READ to me every day as a child and I recall many of the books she read with great affection, but the Moomin books are different. It isn't so much that they were my absolute favourites as a child; it's more that the world author Tove Jansson conjures up has always stayed with me. When I was old enough to read by myself, I started in on the Moomin books, and when I grew to be a man, they were not among the childish things I put away.

I reread them myself – and then read them to each of my four children in turn. There are 11 years between my oldest and my youngest, a gap possibly explained by my desire to always have one under six or seven who'd let me read the Moomin stories to them. Not, I hasten to add, that I feared being considered some sort of awful kidult if I didn't have a child auditor – I'm not like those people who created a demand for alternative "adult" jackets for the Harry Potter books. No, I'm proud to be a grown-up reader of Jansson's books, which I consider of such a high quality that they raise younger readers up into emotional and even intellectual maturity, rather than infantilising grown-up fans.

For those unfamiliar with the series, the Moomins are a species of Finnish troll, resembling a sort of small white hippo. They live in an isolated and bucolic valley, surrounded by hills, have a tall tower-style house, and consist in the nuclear family of Moominpappa, Moomin-mamma and Moomintroll, together with a variety of hangers-on and distal family members. Written and illustrated by Jansson, nine Moomin stories and five picture books appeared between 1945 and 1993. There was also a long-running cartoon strip.

The Moomin world quite obviously melds the

CREATIVE GENIUS
Finnish illustrator and author Tove Jansson fantastical and the real: while these trolls scoff a big meal of pine needles before hibernating, they also eat jam and pancakes off crockery and wear at least some clothes.

THERE ARE ALSO interactions with the wider world – such as the perennial battle with all officialdom waged by Moomintroll's best friend, Snufkin, a free-spirited tramp – that imply the Moomins' valley is a sort of magical enclave, away from a more recognisably ordinary world. But there are others of the tales that pivot on strange occurrences, such as the arrival of a Hobgoblin, or the Moomins' encounters with the Hattifatteners, frond-like creatures that swarm together and generate static electricity when they get angry.

This melding of the mythic and the real seems to me utterly convincing, because as with all great writing it grows out of a profound understanding of human nature. The Moomins and their associates may have snouts and paws, but they love and hate, dream and fear.

The stories dramatise universal dilemmas:

am I liked for myself, or purely because of who I am socially? Do I desire things for their intrinsic value, or because they give me status? And once again, it's Jansson's skill as a writer that makes the morals of these stories emerge convincingly from her characters' experiences, rather than being imposed upon them by some author-cum-moralist.

Moreover, a heterodox person herself – being a gay woman in the middle years of the 20th century – Jansson understood all about the conflicts that can arise between one's inner being and an external social ethic. Perhaps this is also why she writes so brilliantly about what we might think of as the more negative emotions

MEET THE FAMILY
Jansson in a self-portrait with her Moomin characters

– specifically melancholy and depression. In Moominland Midwinter and Moominvalley in November she creates characters who cope with isolation and depression in creative ways, thereby demonstrating that it's possible to endure such feelings without recourse to self-harm – a crucial lesson we would do well to remember in our own stressful era.

The Muskrat, the character I voice in Moominvalley, Sky 1's new adaptation of the Moomin books, is a sort of grumpy philosopher – a Diogenes manqué, if you will – who finds it hard to rise either from the bath or his hammock, so mired is he in rather vapid speculations. But for me the Muskrat was always a fount of at least this wisdom: don't just do something, sit there. Even as a child I understood that this hairy beast was in possession of a valuable insight, which is that to doubt things can itself be a kind of luxury.

I realise I've been speaking rather more about the books than I have about either this adaptation, or previous ones – but how could it be otherwise? I'm an irredeemably literary person, and although I did watch the stop-motion television series that aired on ITV in the early 1980s and the Japanese-Dutch anime version that was on CBBC in the early 1990s, for me these were to be judged only in so far as they either cleaved to, or deviated from, Jansson's original conception.

By "conception", I mean the unique vision of a writer who illustrates her own stories. Because that's what any Moomin adaptor has to get past: the fact that Jansson herself created such beautiful visualisations of her own imagined world. I liked both previous series, although neither of them as much as the books.

With the new series, obviously things are different. Don't get me wrong: if I'd been asked to voice the Muskrat character for a duff television adaptation I'd still have leapt at the opportunity with all four paws, such is my love both for him and the fantastical ecosystem he finds his niche in. But it just so happens that the team behind Moominvalley are some of the best at work in animation today, and when I saw what they'd done with the characters and their mise en scène, I realised that Jansson's works would have their truest televisual expression yet.

It's been an honour to voice the Muskrat – and hardly onerous. True, recording in a booth with just the engineer, script assistant and the director, Steve Box, was a little bit of a disappointment – I'd have liked to do some scenes with Rosamund Pike (Moominmamma) and Kate Winslet (Mrs Fillyjonk). But then who wouldn't – and besides, not being a professional actor, they might have been compelled to upstage me.

THIS BEING NOTED, I don't think Steve had to give me too much direction, because I knew exactly the right voice to assume for the Muskrat. A little deeper even than my own, and yet more lugubrious (if that's possible), it's a voice I heard from the very moment I gained consciousness as a small child – namely that of my late father, who shared many of the Muskrat's characteristics, from philosophising, to being hirsute, to almost compulsive bathing. I think his mournful tones repurpose brilliantly as the Muskrat's – but ultimately, it's up to you and your little captive co-viewers to decide on that.

World Championship Snooker

Daily from Saturday 10am BBC2, Eurosport 1; Sat 1pm BBC1; BBC red button

CARL JUNG SAID that it was his duty as a psychologist to allow people of genius to keep their neuroses. He was fascinated by the phenomenon of the driven artist: van Gogh creating a masterpiece every day he woke up in Arles; Proust writing furiously in his cork-lined room; Beethoven creating his greatest works from the torment of deafness.

What would he have made of Ronnie O'Sullivan, a sometimes troubled genius who expresses his creativity in the kinetic art of snooker? As the World Championship swings round once again at the Crucible Theatre in Sheffield, O'Sullivan as ever compels the attention. He has often reached something very close to perfection on a snooker table and last month he became the only player to have achieved 1,000 century breaks. Think of that: 100,000 points without missing a single ball.

Sometimes a falling-off from perfection has caused him dismay: he has retired from the game almost as many times as he has scored century breaks. Sometimes this frustration seems to be his greatest enemy, but, talking or playing, O'Sullivan is always ready to surprise.

"It's not always a bad thing to feel frustrated," he says. "Frustration used in the right way can be a very powerful emotion. For me, I see it as a positive. I see it as a driving force to push yourself further, push yourself to the next level."

JAMES HEADLE/EUROSPORT

He has famously found equanimity by working with the sports psychiatrist Steve Peters. This has made him somewhat introspective and – perhaps crucially – more inclined to self-forgiveness. These days, neither failure nor success seems to cause him too much dismay.

There was a truly odd moment when he completed that 1,000th century. He got down on the ball – and then stood back up and switched the cue to his left hand, before potting the red for 100 points. He's always been ambidextrous, but his reason for swapping hands, at this moment of all moments, was even more bizarre than the spectacle.

'I owe a lot to my left hand and I didn't want it to feel forgotten'

"Playing left-handed was a way of freeing myself up in many ways. I owe a lot to my left hand because it helped me stay in the sport, helped me have optimism, helped me feel like I can compete. Most of my snooker has been played with my right hand... I just didn't want my left hand to feel like it had been forgotten. Potting the 1,000th century break with my left hand was a sort of thank you to my left hand, to say, 'I haven't forgotten you, I know I haven't used you that much, but you are still an important part of my life and this is your moment to pot the final ball.'"

Pot it he – or it – did, and O'Sullivan goes into the World Championship as the favourite to win a sixth world title, with the bookmakers and the crowd. He can change a match with a few minutes of brilliance – something he has always been able to do. These days he can also play long tactical frames, keeping his concentration through the safety exchanges that are so often the difference between victory and defeat.

O'SULLIVAN SCORED HIS first century at the age of 16, became a pro in 1992 aged 17 and first played at the World Championship in 1993. At times he looked a prime candidate to burn out, but he's now been at the top of the game for 27 years. Such endurance is remarkable even in snooker: that he should find this robustness among his more delicate qualities is his great achievement.

"It's not about the winning or the losing," he says. "It's about how you performed and how you mentally felt during the games. I have had some great games which I have lost, but you feel happy to be involved in such a great game, and you think, 'This time the result didn't go your way, but the experience and the memory of that match is still here.'"

He seeks perfection as fiercely as ever – but he now accepts that it is ultimately elusive.

SAVING MR BANKS

WILLY WONKA
Gene Wilder led us into a world of pure imagination

Film adaptations add a new dimension to classic children's books, says Andrew Collins

Just imagine...

Saving Mr Banks

Easter Day 3.40pm BBC1 (not Wales)

I FEEL INCREDIBLY LUCKY that many of my formative books were read to me. My first experience of Roald Dahl's Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, for instance, was read – with the voices! – by Bernard Cribbins on BBC1's storybook slot Jackanory over five consecutive teatimes in 1968 before I went to school full-time. I didn't see the film version until 1977, when it premiered on BBC1. That gave me nine glorious years in which the uproarious, cautionary wish-fulfilment yarn and all its wacky contraptions existed only in my head.

In this sense, motion pictures ruin books, especially children's books, by obviating the need for what Gene Wilder's Willy Wonka rhapsodised in song as "a world of pure imagination".

As both a keen reader and a junior cineaste, I grew up with an appreciation of both media. With films like Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory (Saturday C5) taking years to arrive on television, movies were treats, while books could be borrowed from the local library and re-read decades before their technological offspring could be rewound or paused. Though I'm of an age where I'm convinced it was better in my day, I'm not making a Luddite value judgement, but access to everything can overwhelm. Who doesn't like the idea of shutting down and curling up with a good book?

Harry Potter is a fabulous example of a series of books that seemed almost to awaken a screen-programmed population from slumber, uniting

'In a sense, motion pictures ruin children's books'

some 500 million parents, non-parents, children and adults in any of the 70-plus languages JK Rowling's series of fantasy novels can be read in. The first, Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone, was published in 1997, followed by three more before the multimillion-dollar film franchise kicked in. This allowed a four-year oasis, during which readers visualised their own Voldemort and Hagrid and Snape.

Illustrator Thomas Taylor's pencil rendition of Harry on the cover of the first book may have been the template for the casting of the boy wizard. But however spectacular and faithful the films were, they still succeeded in driving fans back to the books. Costumed midnight bookshop openings resembled movie premieres, and an article on the Pottermore website asked, "Remember when you first got Order of the Phoenix home with you, how quickly you needed to inhale that story?"

Some beloved literary properties have been slow to reach the screen because their authors felt so attached to their original works. BBC1's big afternoon film on Easter Day, Saving Mr Banks, recounts the reluctance of Mary Poppins author

PL Travers to give up her governess and risk a rather uncouth account of her book series – four of which would be gobbled up to create one motion picture.

After succumbing to Walt Disney and the bottom line, she regretted it and put a clause in her will banning any further American adaptations of her library. She died in 1996, and the recent hit sequel Mary Poppins Returns (Sky Store/Virgin Movies) is a beneficiary of the Travers estate relaxing the late author's rules.

Similarly, CS Lewis, unconvinced that the fantasy elements of his Narnia stories could be faithfully adapted, sat on the film rights until his death in 1963. The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe came to TV in 1967 (and in the late 80s) and was animated in 1979. Literary executor Douglas Gresham approved the first film in 2001, convinced by improving CGI. Having had the first three books read to me, I'd had my imagination co-opted numerous times already, so was able to relax into the new ones.

JUST AS NEWBORN ducklings naturally "imprint" on the first potential parent they clap eyes on, so the young Homo sapiens sticks to the first imagery it sees. With some books for younger readers already illustrated, this imagery is imposed at a malleable age. You get the feeling Rudyard Kipling would have had a similar reaction to PL Travers if Disney's The Jungle Book had been made in his lifetime. But I discovered Kipling's stories after seeing the film and so found the occasional line illustrations alarmingly realistic compared with the bright, anthropomorphised characters I'd met on screen.

After we'd had The Hobbit read to us by Mrs Carter at Abington Vale Primary, we were encouraged to paint a picture of what we thought Gollum looked like. Such a fanciful notion has now been extinguished for ever by the motion-capture acumen of a team of programmers, not to mention Andy Serkis's physical performance. When I painted my Gollum, he existed only on the fertile blank canvas of my six-year-old brain; he didn't look like the emaciated, snivelling wretch whose Imax visualisation was then four decades into the future. It's not without a hint of irony that I admit the image I reproduced from memory was the Tasmanian Devil, inspired by the Bugs Bunny cartoons.

If children's books have effectively become paper souvenirs of the films they're turned into, you have to hope that the analogue nature of the printed page will continue to carry a meaningful novelty value. And that some children will stick with Willy Wonka this Easter, who advised in song: "If you want to see magic lands/Close your eyes and you will see one."

Stop-motion emotion

If I were to tell you that this resplendent, colourful, intelligently family-friendly animated adventure is set in feudal Japan between the 12th and 14th centuries, and revolves around a 12-year-old boy with one eye whose stringed instrument brings origami figures to life and whose Samurai father has disappeared, immobilising his mother with grief, you'd assume it was the product of Studio Ghibli, Gainax, Toei or another Japanese anime house. Especially when we get to the cursed warrior who has been turned into a stag beetle. But in fact it's all-American.

Laika Entertainment, headquartered in Portland, Oregon, and admirably devoted to stop-frame animation in a digital world, made its name in 2009 with Coraline (director Henry Selick was on the staff at the time).

Chalking up the studio's fourth and fifth Oscar nominations, 2016's Kubo and the Two Strings was its fourth feature, a mythic tale of curses, quests, giant skeletons, family secrets and an undersea Garden of Eyes. Travis Knight (son of co-founder Phil, chairman of Nike) worked as an animator on ParaNorman and The Boxtrolls, and makes his directorial debut here.

The film looks both spectacular and intimate. Like me, you may assume it's ingeniously made to look like stop-motion using CGI. But no, it's the most complex puppet show on earth, shot against green screen with huge mechanical models and, for instance, a storm-lashed ocean created using paper, copper wire and shower curtains. This lends the saga a tactility that is achieved in, say, Kung Fu Panda by computer sorcery. I'm not against technology, but there can be nobility in the real thing, proven once again by Laika's fifth picture Missing Link, in cinemas now.

The lively voice cast boasts Art Parkinson (Rickon Stark in Game of Thrones), Matthew McConaughey, Charlize Theron (as a snow monkey whose fur looks like string because it is), Ralph Fiennes, Rooney Mara and George Takei, and the score by Dario Marianelli – vital to the narrative as Kubo summons the spirits of the dead with his ancient banjo – provides a momentum all of its own.

3 ways with Yorkshire puddings

Aunt Bessie's Yorkshire puddings are perfect for all your Easter entertaining, from your family roast to a lazy brunch – here are some tasty ideas for you to try

Aunt Bessie's much-loved Yorkshire puddings come in all shapes, sizes and styles. From perfectly fluffy Bake at Home Yorkshires to Golden Yorkshires, a timeless take on the classic, there's a quick and simple oven-cook variety that your family will adore.

Of course, they're ideal with any roast, but Yorkshire puddings are actually great in a wide variety of dishes, whether it's a special occasion, a Sunday roast or just a midweek meal. Give these clever ideas a try and discover how versatile Aunt Bessie's Yorkshire puddings really are.

MAKES 8 • PREP 15 mins • COOK 4 mins • Easy
Heat oven to 200°C/180°C fan/gas 6. Put 1 tsp chilli or tomato chutney in each of 8 Aunt Bessie's Golden Yorkshires then drape 1 slice of Parma ham over each one and cook for 4 mins. When done, add half a boiled egg and sprinkle over chopped fresh chives and a few chilli flakes, if you like.

MAKES 8 • PREP 10 mins • COOK 26–29 mins • Easy
Heat oven to 200°C/180°C fan/gas 6. Mix together fresh finely chopped rosemary and mint leaves, then set side. Season a 400g lamb loin fillet with salt. Heat 1 tbsp olive oil in a large frying pan, and when hot, seal the lamb all over for about 10 mins. Put the lamb on a baking tray and pat the chopped herbs all over it, then cook for 12–15 mins. Meanwhile, in a frying pan, heat a knob of butter. When melted, add 4 sliced spring onions and a few savoy cabbage leaves. Fry until softened then add 200g frozen petit pois and 50ml water. Bubble away until the peas are cooked through, then season. Remove the lamb from the oven and leave to rest while you cook 8 Aunt Bessie's Bake at Home Yorkshires for 4 mins. Thinly slice the lamb, then when the Yorkshires are ready, fill with the pea mixture, top with a slice of lamb, and sprinkle over a little chopped mint.

The Shallows ★★★

THRILLER This California-set (but Australia-shot) aquatic survival thriller is less shallow than at first it appeared in the Jaws-referencing permutations of its poster, which perhaps understandably revolved around toned star Blake Lively either in a bikini or a wetsuit. But hey, it's a film with a principal cast of one, with a few supporting human snacks and a charming seagull. Lively is medical student Nancy, who seeks out the Baja beach her recently deceased mother visited when she was pregnant with her. An independent type, Nancy goes for one last surf before dusk. Cue a great white shark, which strands her on a rock, with a board and her ingenuity – a vital asset. Directed by Jaume Collet-Serra, the Spaniard usually forcing Liam Neeson into tight corners in high-concept fare like Non-Stop and The Commuter, The Shallows is pretty original for a genre picture and Lively lives up to her name. (US 2016, violence, HD)

FANTASY In this fabulous 1971 musical adaptation of Roald Dahl's evergreen story, Gene Wilder parks his buffoonish comic persona to bring a pinch of the macabre to the title role. Dahl wrote the script and though he had misgivings about the finished article, this vibrant fantasy still reveals a layer of grimness beneath the confection. Peter Ostrum is a convincing Charlie Bucket, desperate to find a golden ticket to gain entrance to Wonka's phantasmagoric factory, and when you add singalong ditties like Pure Imagination, it all adds up to wonderful, timeless entertainment. JA (US 1971, HD)

FANTASY Tim Burton tackling the nonsense prose of Lewis Carroll should be something the visionary director could do in his sleep – which is what this oddly conventional and ponderous “re-imagined” offering often induces. As the now teenage Alice (Mia Wasikowska) returns to “Underworld”, Burton's trademark quirkiness is in full evidence, but the tone is as wobbly as Alice's decision-making. AJ (US 2010, HD)

THRILLER Ira Levin's ingenious novel about the cloning of Hitler's body tissue is given the epic treatment by director Franklin J Schaffner. Behind the plot are Dr Mengele (a convincing Gregory Peck) and his accomplice (James Mason), with Laurence Olivier the Nazi-hunter on their trail. This accomplished thriller is more plausible now than on its 1970s release, with the added appeal of Peck, Mason and Olivier scoring points off each other. AT (US 1978, violence, some swearing)

COMEDY DRAMA The future queen has her first and last hedonistic hurrah in this fanciful concoction from director Julian Jarrold, as princesses Elizabeth (Sarah Gadon) and Margaret (Bel Powley) celebrate VE Day with the masses in London. The script is full of hollow sentiments and the concept feels stretched, yet there's great fun to be had. Grounded by its cast and performances, it's a sugary shot of pure fantasy. EAS (UK 2015, swearing, sexual references, HD)

A WORLD GONE WILDE... Andrew Collins on the best of Oscar on film

The Importance of Being Earnest ★★★

10.25-11.55pm BBC2

Were Oscar Wilde around today, his withering adage might be: “There is only one thing worse than being on TV, and that is not being on TV.” Happily, Oscar has just resurfaced on Netflix in The Happy Prince (a passion project written and directed by Rupert Everett, in which he also stars as the ailing wit).

Wilde's most famous works have been richly filmed by Oliver Parker: An Ideal Husband in 1999 and The Importance of Being Earnest (preceded today by documentary The Importance of Being Oscar, see p52) in 2002, both of which made their modest budgets back with big-name casts. Everett, Julianne Moore and Jeremy Northam starred in the former, and Everett and Colin Firth in the latter. (A lifelong Wilde-ophile, Everett also played the doomed scribe in the play The Judas Kiss.)

Parker's all-out Gothic take on Dorian Gray in 2009 was harder to love and more like a rock video. Oscar-nominated 1945 noir The Picture of Dorian Gray with Hurd Hatfield, Angela Lansbury and Peter Lawford is a better bet – and with a more disturbing portrait, by American painter Ivan Le Lorraine Albright.

Beating all comers, though, is Anthony Asquith's Earnest from 1952, in which Dame Edith Evans gave cinema's finest “A handbag!”

FILM OF THE DAY

Jurassic Park ★★★★★
7.20-10.00pm ITV2 PG

SCI-FI With Alan Partridge back on our TVs, I find it impossible not to exclaim, "Jurassic Park!" at apposite moments of deluded success. I saw Steven Spielberg's crowd-pleasing dinosaur tale on the big screen with a friend who, on emerging into the evening, concluded: "Well, the puppets were good." The irony of this remark is that Spielberg had intended to animate the velociraptors and others running amok in author Michael Crichton's theme park via traditional animatronics. But after some arm-twisting, Hollywood's most persuasive argument for CGI resulted. It's still packed with spectacle, and what makes it so durable after all the sequels (the first of which is on tomorrow) is the offbeat cast: a pre-Pulp Fiction Samuel L Jackson, the idiosyncratic Jeff Goldblum, Seinfeld's Wayne Knight as the sneaky Nedry and the late Bob Peck as a game warden. The puppets are still pretty good, too. Jurassic Park! (US 1993, includes scenes that may be disturbing for children, may be edited for language, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

Recordings of an angry goose, mating tortoises and a Jack Russell playing with a toy were all used to help create the dinosaur noises

COMEDY ADVENTURE The scene-stealing cat (impeccably voiced by Antonio Banderas) from Shrek 2 finally gets his own swashbuckling romp, finding love with slinky Kitty Softpaws (Salma Hayek) as they join Humpty Dumpty (Zach Galifianakis) to track down a golden goose. Shrek the Third director Chris Miller's lively caper veers delightfully between Mother Goose, Zorro and a Sergio Leone western – and while that cute big eyes gag is used a fair few times, it never gets old. AJ (US 2011, HD)

Dances with Wolves ★★★★★
2.45-6.15pm Paramount Network 15

WESTERN Kevin Costner's directorial debut, the first western to win the best picture Oscar for 60 years, is a heartfelt attempt to create a frontier epic and to atone for Hollywood's shameful depiction of native American life. Costner is battle weary Union officer John Dunbar, a Civil War hero who takes a remote posting in South Dakota to see the frontier before it vanishes. Costner directs his pet project with clear passion, presenting a poignant look at a way of life and a people that have all but disappeared. A marvel from beginning to end. DP (US 1990, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Saving Mr Banks ★★★★★
3.40-5.45pm BBC1 PG

DRAMA How did Walt Disney (Tom Hanks) convince author PL Travers (Emma Thompson) that her Mary Poppins character was safe in his hands after 20 years of stubborn refusal? This entertaining and ultimately moving film reveals that the cantankerous Travers hated cartoons, musicals and Dick Van Dyke, and had no intention of signing over the rights... until she faced bankruptcy. The clash between Travers and Disney is sharply witty and poignant under John Lee Hancock's direction. It's a superlative confection, dominated by Thompson's stunningly eccentric performance, and lovers of the 1964 family classic will find it irresistible. AJ (US/UK/Aus 2013, HD)

ROMANTIC COMEDY Of all the classics produced by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, this may be the most unsung, but it's undoubtedly the most entrancing. As the headstrong young woman and the laird who distracts her from her stuffy fiancé, Wendy Hiller and Roger Livesey are superb, with knowing support from Pamela Brown, John Laurie and Finlay

Currie. Alongside Alfred Junge's clever sets and Erwin Hillier's atmospheric photography are a compelling mix of romance and comedy, an arresting use of landscape and a respectful fascination with local culture. DP (UK 1945, BW)

WAR EPIC Few Second World War films are as enduring as this multi-Oscar-winning examination of the stiff upper lip from director David Lean. Alec Guinness plays Colonel Nicholson, the epitome of British dignity and resolve who, after brutal treatment from his Japanese captors in Burma, leads his men in the building of a strategically vital railway bridge for the enemy. The central performances are all first rate, including Sessue Hayakawa as the Japanese commander, but it's Guinness who stands out, imbuing Nicholson with a brand of patriotism and courage that speaks of another age. AC (UK 1957, HD)

Prince of Persia: the Sands of Time ★★★
6.15-8.00pm BBC2 12

ADVENTURE After scoring a huge hit with the Pirates of the Caribbean films, based on a theme-park ride, producer Jerry Bruckheimer obviously hoped to work the same magic with this video game-inspired offering – but it doesn't quite gel. Street urchin Jake Gyllenhaal, adopted by a king, must clear his name when framed as a traitor, and teams up with a princess (Gemma Arterton) to protect a magical knife from power-mad Nizam (Ben Kingsley). It coasts by on charm and the leads' chemistry, but the action scenes fall surprisingly flat. JR (US 2010, edited for violence, HD)

The Wolverine ★★★
9.00-11.25pm Film4 12

ACTION The second solo outing for Hugh Jackman's clawed maunder begins with our hero in despair after the events of X-Men – the Last Stand. Persuaded to leave his mountain retreat, he travels to Tokyo to see an old friend, who promises to relieve his burden of immortality – but it's not long before a clan turf war erupts. Director James Mangold makes great play of the fish-out-of-water idea, while a beefed-up Jackman rises to the occasion with a powerful but restrained performance. Unfortunately, extended romantic interludes and the need to include standard blockbuster action hinder Mangold's valiant attempt to deliver a film to match the game-changing X-Men: First Class and Avengers Assemble. JA (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

The King's Speech ★★★★★
9.00-11.30pm Sony Movie Channel 12

DRAMA In the first of a double bill (with A Single Man) of Bafta-winning turns from Colin Firth, this hugely moving tale gives Firth room to impress as George VI, the British monarch with the terrible stammer. Director Tom Hooper deftly captures a man in limbo amid the scandal of his brother Edward's abdication and the run-up to the Second World War, while Firth expresses George's crippling fear with dignity. This is the type of thing the British film industry does so well – a bit of history, a bit of social comedy, a few factual liberties and a flag-waving finale. SP (UK/Aus/US 2010, swearing) You wait ages for a Bafta..., p70

Gone Girl ★★★★★
10.00pm-1.00am W 18

THRILLER Whether or not you've read Gillian Flynn's bestseller, you're in for a treat here. David Fincher directs this unsettling adaptation, which revolves around the hunt for missing Amy (Rosamund Pike, exceptional), the perfect wife of perfect hunk Nick (Ben Affleck, oozing prom king charm). Although it doesn't have many good things to say about modern relationships, it is an absorbing mystery in which anyone could be – and probably is – a monster. LB (US 2014, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Notting Hill ★★★★★
10.20pm-12.35am ITV 15

ROMANTIC COMEDY In its time, the demographically schizophrenic West London enclave Notting Hill has come to be known for its carnival, its race riots and the symbol of its division, Grenfell Tower. It also provides the setting for a civic and romantic fantasy from Richard Curtis, which cleaves to the chi-chi Portobello Road market, where Hugh Grant's bookshop owner meets film star Julia Roberts. It whisks in a soufflé of comfortably off, supportive family and friends, played by the likes of Gina McKee, Hugh Bonneville and the late Emma Chambers. Even Grant's unhygienic Welsh lodger (Rhys Ifans) and a tabloid scandal cannot meaningfully block the path of true love. Directed with a light touch by Roger Michell, Notting Hill now feels rather as if it were cast in a pre-diversity age and seems, albeit not unpleasantly, very much like one of those antiques in the still-charming Portobello Road. (US/UK 1999, some swearing, sexual situations, HD)

DAYTIME

Thunderbirds ★★
10.00-11.50am Sky1 PG

ADVENTURE Fans of the original 1960s TV series may well feel short-changed by this pedestrian live-action version. The focus is on sulky adolescent Alan Tracy (Brady Corbet) who resents studying at boarding school while his dad (Bill Paxton) and brothers are saving the world. Cue a wannabe SPYkids plot in which Alan and his two cutesy pals are left to defeat the Hood (Ben Kingsley). With the exception of the frothy kitsch of Sophia Myles's Lady Penelope and her multi-talented chauffeur, Parker (Ron Cook), there's just no substance or vitality to this obviously expensive production. The retro-futuristic designs and scenery look great, but style alone can't save a weak script or make flat dialogue sparkle. SF (UK/US/Fr 2004, edited for violence, language, HD)

Dante's Peak ★★★★★

ACTION Pierce Brosnan's volcanologist sees the warning signs for major lava problems in a small mountainside town, but no one will believe him in this typically FX-orientated 1990s disaster flick. Like the same year's larger-scale Volcano, it has some corking digital magma and a lot of cardboard in its path. Director Roger Donaldson handles things in the same way he did in Species, papering over dialogue and character deficiencies with some exciting set pieces, as buildings crumble and roads receive a molten overcoat. Brosnan and romantic interest Linda Hamilton offer serviceable performances, but they're battling against more than just the elements. JC (US 1997, edited for violence, language, HD)

Clash of the Titans ★★★★★
1.15-3.35pm C5 12

FANTASY This star-studded fantasy adventure is almost a rerun of Jason and the Argonauts (which follows in today's double bill), only this time it's Perseus, Andromeda and assorted giant livestock who go through their mythological paces. Harry Hamlin certainly has the physique to play the heroic Perseus, but when it comes to the touchy-feely stuff, he and Judi Bowker make anaemic lovers. Thankfully, Ray Harryhausen's stop-motion special effects are as wonderfully wobblesome as ever and he comes up with some memorable monsters, notably the petrifying Gorgon Medusa. Dressed in a white bathrobe and a Santa Claus beard, Laurence Olivier overacts dreadfully as Zeus, but fans of the genre will still find plenty here to enjoy. AT (US/UK 1981, edited for violence, nudity, HD)

Khartoum ★★★★★
1.45-4.25pm ITV4 PG

DRAMA Charlton Heston stars in this big-budget epic about General Gordon's last stand, when Sudanese warriors, led by the Mahdi, gave the British Empire a serious jolt. Heston's portrayal of Gordon is finely studied, suggesting a complexity that the script never quite comes to terms with. His performance contrasts with that of Laurence Olivier, whose Mahdi is all eye-rolling, lip-quivering fanaticism, like a refugee from a Carry On film. Intended as a rival to Lawrence of Arabia, this boasts a fine supporting cast, including Michael Hordern and Ralph Richardson, and is often spectacular to watch, but Basil Dearden's direction is on the stodgy side. AT (UK 1966, edited for some of its violence, HD)

Jason and the Argonauts ★★★★★
3.35-5.45pm C5 U

ADVENTURE Stolid Todd Armstrong stars as the intrepid leader of Greece's greatest heroes whose quest for the Golden Fleece provides special-effects maestro Ray Harryhausen with the opportunity to conjure a bonanza of monster mayhem. The Avengers of their day must defeat ghoulish harpies, a giant man of bronze and a sword-wielding skeleton army to make off with their booty. Any sword-and-sandal cheesiness is mercifully kept at bay thanks to a menacing but marvellous score from Bernard Herrmann, while a cast of British cinema's best (including Nigel Green as Hercules and Niall MacGinnis and Honor Blackman as king and queen of the gods) adds gravitas and ensures there's wit and humanity among the derring-do. JA (UK 1963, HD)

6.20-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

ADVENTURE This cracking yarn is directed with great pace and precision by J Lee Thompson, and proves that an old-fashioned, all-action drama can still keep you on the edge of your seat without the benefit of flashy special effects. It could almost be called an "eastern", transplanting the old western plot of a railroad journey through hostile territory to early-20th-century India. Kenneth More gives an assured performance as the soldier entrusted with the safety of a Hindu prince, and he is given able support by Lauren Bacall (as the boy's no-nonsense nurse), the ever-reliable Wilfrid Hyde White and Herbert Lom. DP (UK 1959)

The Social Network ★★★★★

DRAMA The foundation of online phenomenon Facebook comes in for scrutiny in this fact-based drama. Mark Zuckerberg (Jesse Eisenberg) is an unloved outsider at Harvard in 2003, but finds a way of circumventing the university's traditional elite by creating the networking technology that eventually makes him one of the world's youngest billionaires. Along the way, there's camaraderie, betrayal, class tension and much litigation. The dazzling wordplay from Aaron Sorkin and David Fincher's intensely focused direction work in concert to create one of the truly defining films of the era. TJ (US 2010, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

The Finest Hours ★★★★★

ACTION A daring real-life sea rescue off Cape Cod in 1952 inspired this gripping disaster movie, with Chris Pine as the square-jawed Coast Guard sailor who leads his men into the mountainous surf. In its early stages, director Craig Gillespie makes slow headway trying to get us to share would-be fiancée Holliday Grainger's anxiety for her man's well-being; because Pine is so stoically determined, it seems unlikely any harm will come to him. That changes once the wind and waves get up and he's piloting a tiny boat out to rescue Casey Affleck and his fellow crew members trapped on board the stricken tanker. TJ (US 2015, HD)

FANTASY In this enthralling offering from M Night Shyamalan (The Sixth Sense), Bruce Willis survives a train crash only to be told by comic-art gallery owner Samuel L Jackson that he has special powers. Thought-provoking and unfolding at a measured pace, this builds to a surprise ending.

The Smallest Show on Earth ★★★★★

3.50-5.30pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Deftly directed by Basil Dearden, this charming comedy stars Bill Travers and Virginia McKenna as a couple who inherit a crumbling cinema. The cast alone makes it a must-see, and a sequence in which projectionist Peter Sellers, pianist Margaret Rutherford and doorman Bernard Miles relive the silent era's glories is adorable. DP (UK 1957, BW)

Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit ★★★★★
9.00-11.10pm Film4 12

ACTION This reboot for novelist Tom Clancy's CIA agent sees Chris Pine step into the shoes previously worn by Alec Baldwin, Harrison Ford and Ben Affleck, and presents Ryan as a fresh-faced rookie facing post-9/11 global terror threats. Director Kenneth Branagh (who co-stars as a scenery-chewing Russian oligarch) eschews the books' cerebral elements in favour of high-octane thrills and spills, while Pine is good value as the government penpusher thrust into the front lines of espionage. TeS (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Book Thief ★★★★★

6.25-9.00pm Film4 12

WAR DRAMA Director Brian Percival's thoughtful drama set on the eve of the Second World War carefully builds a convincing picture of prejudice's rising tide in Germany. Starring Sophie Nélisse as the orphan of the title, it could have been more dramatically powerful, but it evokes this troubled period in a way that will intrigue and inform younger viewers. Trevor Johnston (US 2014, HD)
Sophie's passion project, p100

Unfinished Business ★★

10.00-11.55pm 5STAR 15

COMEDY This wild comic tale sees Vince Vaughn, Dave Franco and Tom Wilkinson play three businessmen who go to extreme lengths to land the contract of their dreams. Taking the outline of almost every Vaughn comedy (an underachiever risks everything to prove himself), the story just fills in the time between visual gags. The trio have a certain bumbling charm and the odd juvenile chuckle may sustain you, but in terms of originality and heart this business trip fails to seal the deal. JL (US 2015, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

Gambit ★★★★★ 1.55-3.45am C4 U

COMEDY In this entertaining caper, Michael Caine and Shirley MaLaine bring their natural frivolity and nimble comic timing to the roles of a cockney cat burglar and a Eurasian showgirl who becomes his accomplice. The object of their scam is a tycoon's priceless statue uncannily resembling MaLaine. The lead actors certainly have chemistry, while director Ronald Neame skilfully keeps the twists and turns coming, accompanied by a typically lush score from Maurice Jarre. Herbert Lom is also good fun as the hapless target of the couple's machinations. JM (US 1966, HD)

The Woman in Black ★★★

Horror Channel 12

HORROR A classy if cliché-ridden Hammer ghost story, recalling the studio's heyday, this follows grieving solicitor Daniel Radcliffe as he uncovers the dark secret of a remote community. Creaky melodrama indeed, but the grim resolution adds an unexpectedly uplifting twist.

Harvey ★★★★★
1.05-3.15pm Film4 U

FANTASY James Stewart gives a knockout performance in this classic comic fantasy about tipsy Elwood P Dowd and his friendship with invisible six-foot white rabbit Harvey, deftly directed by Henry Koster. Alongside the satiric misunderstandings, character mix-ups and revitalised clichés come poignant comments about humanity's lack of communication, which touch both the funny bone and the heart. Guaranteed to leave a smile on your face for a long time. AJ (US 1950, BW, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Carve Her Name with Pride ★★★★★

6.40-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

WAR DRAMA The inspiring, if moderately sanitised, true story of Violette Szabo (played in a Bafta-winning performance by Virginia McKenna) is briskly told in Lewis Gilbert's 1958 film about the French/British Special Operations Executive agent. She was recruited as much for her bilingualism as her bravery, and undertook two missions in occupied France, where she proved a dab hand with a machine gun. McKenna portrays her as afraid of very little, and, in one memorable scene, spits out the cigarette put in her mouth by a German officer. William Alwyn's score gives it all a patriotic spin, even when Szabo's pluck and cunning lead to her being interned in a concentration camp. The latter scenes, which I won't spoil, are hard to watch if you don't already know the outcome, but McKenna is stunning throughout. In a particularly restrained and effective shot, Gilbert's camera pans up past the barbed wire fence. Stirring stuff. (UK 1958, BW)

DID YOU KNOW?

In 2000, Violette Szabo's aunt opened a museum in her niece's honour, and Virginia McKenna attended its first fundraising event

Talladega Nights: the Ballad of Ricky Bobby ★★ 9.00-11.15pm Dave 15

COMEDY There's the odd laugh as Nascar champion Will Ferrell faces his nemesis, a gay French driver (Sacha Baron Cohen). But the writing is sloppy, and the film, from Anchorman: the Legend of Ron Burgundy director Adam McKay, is undermined by a homophobic undertone. AS (US 2006, violence, swearing, HD)

A Good Day to Die Hard ★★ 9.00-10.55pm E4 12

ACTION The rule of diminishing returns bites hard in Bruce Willis's fifth outing as resourceful New York cop John McClane, in Moscow with his estranged CIA operative son (Jai Courtney) to thwart Russian terrorists. Director John Moore lazily stitches together shoot-outs, car chases and explosions with a confusing plot, and Willis's character is lost without the verbal sparring partners of earlier films. TeS (US 2013, swearing, violence, HD)

Stand by Me ★★★★★
9.00-10.50pm Sony Movie Channel 15

DRAMA Rob Reiner's likeable but hard-centred picaresque, set in 1950s Oregon, blends the themes of childhood friendship, parental pressure and the loss of innocence into a Boy Scout-style adventure, as bookish Wil Wheaton

(played by Richard Dreyfuss as an adult) leads a gang of friends on an odyssey to find the fabled body of a missing boy. AC (US 1986, edited for violence, language)

Everybody Wants Some!! ★★★★★ 11.20pm-1.40am Film4 15

COMEDY The spiritual sequel to Richard Linklater's 1970s-set classic Dazed and Confused, this seems at first merely to be a wholesome examination of sexual freedom at college – but behind the 1980s details you'll see Linklater using a team of baseball players to examine the meaning of life. As main man Jake (Blake Jenner) grows up before our eyes, echoing Linklater's Oscar-winning Boyhood, he reveals his true personality through practice, pranking and partying. Nostalgic for the beauty and confusion of youth, the film is a delicious, feel-good romp. Pacey and entertaining. KK (US 2016, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

What a tangled web they weave

From Mon Sky Store/Virgin Movies (also DVD, Blu-ray, 4K UHD and download)

ANIMATED ADVENTURE A twist on Spider-Man movies that focuses on Miles Morales (voiced by Shameik Moore), a mixed-race teenager who is bitten by an unusual-looking spider. As he develops his arachnid abilities, Miles meets spider people from different dimensions, including a jaded Peter Parker (Jake Johnson).

There are some joyous moments, although characters like Spider-Gwen (Hailee Steinfeld) and anime-inspired Peni Parker (Kimiko Glen) are a little underused as they unite to stop the nefarious plans of the Kingpin (Liev Schreiber). But Nicolas Cage gets laughs as Spider-Man Noir, a 1930s gumshoe take on the character.

The animation is gorgeous – as you would expect from an Oscar and Bafta best animated feature winner – and there are plenty of in-jokes for fans. It might not appeal to those who prefer serious-minded superhero movies. Crucially, though, kids and Marvel fans will love it. Stephen Carty (US 2018, HD)

CRIME DRAMA Writer/director Simon Rumley attempts to invoke the spirit of mob films like Brighton Rock here, as he charts the real-life rivalry between London kingpins Jack "Spot" Comer and Billy Hill. As several outfits muscle in on their manors, it's tricky to follow who's who, but with solid performances, slick visuals and a pastiche score that's catchily effective, he almost succeeds. DP (UK 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

Mortal Engines ★★★ 12 22 April on DVD, Blu-ray, 4K UHD and download

This adaptation of Philip Reeve's bestseller charts the aftermath of an apocalyptic war that has devastated the planet and left survivors divided between fixed settlements and predatory cities mounted on huge moving platforms. The feature debut from director Christian Rivers (protégé of co-writer/co-producer Peter Jackson) is visually stunning: Hugo Weaving's mobile London (an unholy hybrid of St Paul's Cathedral and Big Ben) chug-chugging across a Channel land bridge in its constant search for food and fuel. The script and the performances are fine but it's the film's visuals that will stay in the memory. The DVD includes a featurette. Dave Aldridge

Stop the (bad) press!

Why are TV journalists such a hopeless lot, asks David Butcher

I'M ALWAYS AMAZED at the shabby way TV dramas portray journalists. As in, they portray journalists as a shabby bunch, but also, they're usually way off the mark. If I were as inaccurate writing about TV dramas as they are about journalists I'd be out of a job faster than you can say "The press will have a field day!" (as fictional coppers still do, regularly).

It's a steady drumbeat of misrepresentation wherever you look, though I realise this is a niche concern. Nobody cares about how journalists are portrayed because nobody cares greatly about journalists – fair enough. I'm sure police officers, doctors and lawyers feel caricatured by TV dramas as well, but at least they're usually the good guys. Not us. Remember those pigs wearing hats on Spitting Image?

A lot of the inaccuracy is at the doesn't-ring-true sort of level. In MotherFatherSon (Wednesday BBC2) for instance, we were expected to believe that Caden (Billy Howle) edited a national newspaper despite being an angsty introvert with a pained conscience. That's like creating a TV detective who thinks the best of people and doesn't like asking questions because it's rude. At least the editor played by Ben Chaplin in Press last year was a plausible personality, even if a dozen other things were way off.

Recently, there's been Ricky Gervais as Tony in After Life (Netflix), working at an English local newspaper so lavishly staffed it must have been purchased recently by Jeff Bezos. At one point, Tony's editor says to him mildly: "Are you going to do that story, by the way?" and that's about as stressful as it gets.

You might remember the newspaper reporter played by Amy Adams in the HBO drama Sharp Objects, who spent the whole series drunk and/or sleeping in her car (she looked good, considering). At the other extreme, there's F Murray Abraham as a New York editor in Chimerica (Wednesday Channel 4), who seems stranded in the braces-wearing 1980s and delivers an angry speech out of nowhere about how much he hates

HARD PRESSED
DS Lisa Armstrong (Morven Christie) at the centre of a media scrum

comment threads: "You think I enjoy using the word multiplatform!" he rants.

Most laughably this week, also in MotherFatherSon, there's a scene where Max, the newspaper proprietor played by Richard Gere, lays out the front page of his eve-of-election edition by himself on a draughtsman's desk, literally cutting and pasting the old-school way because it's a tradition he has – and not at all because the scriptwriter decided that having Gere crouched over a computer keyboard wouldn't look as cool.

But these are mostly niggles, large and small. My main gripe is an aspect of the portrayal of journalists that never goes away, one that writers of crime dramas include religiously, as if it were an ancient folk custom of theirs.

You'll have watched the scene a dozen times: the detective and either another cop or a relative of the victim will be leaving the crime scene or the police station when they'll spot a group of reporters gathered in an unruly scrum.

"Looks like that lot are here already," one of the cops will say bitterly, or "Who let that lot through?" Then, as they run the gauntlet of the press pack, reporters will crowd around, barking questions and jostling, while flashguns fire with a loud pop, as they last did in about 1947.

In a version of this scene I saw recently, the reporters were described by our hero as "jackals". The contempt isn't always that spelt out, but it is always there in the tone: the press covering a murder case are the lowest of the low, intrusive parasites who pander to a ghoulish fascination with – ah, hold on a tick...

ISN'T A GHOULISH fascination with murder exactly why we're all watching this crime drama right now? We wouldn't be nearly as keen to watch Shoplifting, She Wrote or Affray in Paradise or Midsomer Thefts of Agricultural Machinery. Any writer of crime dramas is drawn to them partly by the grisliness of murder. He or she knows we, the public, are fascinated too, and exploits that fascination for profit, whether the case is imaginary or a true story – as it was in the recent Martin Clunes drama Manhunt, for example.

Fair enough, but for some reason, they portray the crime reporters who serve the same public fascination as scum. And that's a bit rich. Maybe it's time to stop writing scenes along these lines just to take an easy pop at journalists. But then, why break the habit of a lifetime?

1 SUPER-SMART DRAMA The Good Fight

Amazon Prime

Christine Baranski (centre) continues to make her character Diane Lockhart one of TV's most engaging heroines, in a spin-off from The Good Wife that takes the razor-sharp intelligence of its parent show and refines it. More4 is currently showing series three, but Amazon now has the first two series.

SEE THE SERIES

All 4 (C4)

Sturdy, classy and pleasingly somewhat old-fashioned, this espionage saga stars Keeley Hawes and the less familiar but also excellent Emma Appleton (right) in a tale of double-crossing double agents plying their trade in febrile 1940s London. Torn loyalties and shocking violence create memorable drama. Ep1 available until 24 April

VINTAGE MERCURIO

3 Bodies

iPlayer

Jed Line of Duty Mercurio made his name in 2004 with this drama based on his experiences as an NHS doctor. Brutal, blackly funny and powered by monstrous characters, in contrast to his plot-driven later work, its graphic surgery scenes and even more disturbing portrayal of corruption and incompetence are no less shocking now than they were 15 years ago. Horribly gripping.

COMEDY BOX SET

4 Back to Life

iPlayer (BBC3)

Daisy Haggard's mystery-dramedy has big laughs, caused by a woman called Miri moving back in with her eccentric parents in a grey Kent coastal town after 18 years away, melded with intrigue and sadness over the reason for her absence – she was in prison. As we learn Miri's story, the show balances character comedy, wistful yearning and a good shot of inky darkness.

AN EASTER TREAT

NowTV/Sky Box Sets

Tove Jansson's lovable creations, a favourite on ITV in the 1980s, are back to life in a brand-new animated series, looking utterly fantastic and backed by a ludicrously starry voice cast that includes Matt Berry, Bel Powley, Rosamund Pike, Jennifer Saunders, Kate Winslet and many more. It's likely to captivate viewers of all ages and, if that's you, the full series will be available on demand once Sky1 has premiered the opening episode on Good Friday.

FURRY FRIENDS

Amazon Prime

"Dance your cares away, worries for another day..." Remember this? The mid-80s Muppets offshoot is among a load of old Jim Henson creations recently added to Amazon Prime, along with the likes of Pajanimals and the humans-plus-puppets anthology series The Storyteller, introduced by John Hurt and featuring a slightly hilarious number of future British stars in the cast and behind the camera.

ANOTHER CHANCE

Netflix

A clever variation on the reality genre in which members of the public apply to join an elite military unit: the selection process mirrors that of the one used to recruit agents who would be capable of surviving behind enemy lines during the Second World War. So as well as the participants exploring their mental and physical limitations, there's a history lesson with every task. First shown on BBC2 last year.

POLITICAL THRILLER

8 Chimerica

All 4 (C4)

A sprawling, murky thriller about an American photojournalist, famous for having snapped "Tank Man" during the 1989 uprising in Tiananmen Square. His career's on the slide, buffeted by the rise of Trump and the death of old-school reporting – but a tip-off about the mysterious figure who made world news 30 years ago might be a shot at redemption. It's a curious concoction with nuanced political points to make. All eps available from 17 April

WILL YOU SURVIVE?

9 You Vs Wild

Netflix

Following on from the groundbreaking Black Mirror one-off Bandersnatch, here's another less sophisticated but still diverting attempt at interactive TV. You're on a survival mission with Bear Grylls, making his decisions for him, with what happens next determined by the option you take. Gather the family and argue over the best way forward, then try again when it goes wrong: it's a bit silly but you can lose yourself in it for a good hour or two.

10 FINE COMEDY

All 4 (C4)

It's been a golden year for TV comedy already – but don't overlook this quietly excellent sitcom about a Surrey family who take in a Syrian refugee by mistake. Sometimes overtly political but often subtly so, its pleas for tolerance come couched in finely drawn human complexities. Rebekah Staton and Youssef Kerkour star.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

In sport, the losers have the best stories

When it comes down to it, isn't failure so much more compelling as a subject than victory? Tales of sporting heroes who fought their way to the top are boring and overdone; it's far more interesting to turn the spotlight on the many people who have suffered the agony of defeat, which – let's face it – is all of us at some point in our lives. Failure sure is relatable.

And so Netflix's superb documentary series Losers tells eight half-hour stories of sport's so-called "losers", turning the camera on the people involved so they can tell their stories with the aid of interviews and archive footage and some brilliant animation.

You absolutely do not have to be a sports fan to appreciate the human drama of French golfer Jean van de Velde's catastrophic loss at the 1999 Open Championship, as he snatched defeat from the jaws of victory – the defining moment of his career descending into farce as the whole world watched. Another episode introduces us to unhappy boxing world champion Michael Bentt, who came back from a knockout loss and a worrying brain injury by completely changing the direction of his life.

Even Torquay United gets its time in the limelight: we see the lower-league football team's tragicomic 1986/87 relegation battle play out, with the help of an overenthusiastic police dog.

Thankfully, Losers gives us no cheesy lessons about how "defeat makes you stronger" or any of that. It does not tell the viewer what "moral" they should take from each story. Instead, this gem of a documentary series is a quiet exploration of how we – as individuals and as a society – handle failure. Defiance, frustration, acceptance, determination, humour... they're all there.

Escape from online subs

Sony, Microsoft and Nintendo are being investigated by the Competition and Markets Authority over "roll-over" contracts, which renew automatically. This raises the issue of how you escape from online subscriptions.

For any email newsletter or advert, you should find an "unsubscribe" button at the end (or next to the sender's address in Gmail), but things get more complex when money is involved. Xbox Live can be cancelled online (account.microsoft.com/services), Playstation Network is found under Account Management in the console's settings, while Nintendo Online can be cancelled in the Switch eShop. All subscriptions bought through iTunes can be found by clicking your Apple ID at the top of your iOS settings; in the Google Play Store, click on Subscriptions. Check the usage log on an iPhone (Settings > Screen Time) to see which apps you rarely use and could economise on.

A standard trick is to offer a free trial in the hope you'll forget to cancel. Whenever Doc Dig receives a confirmation email at the start of a trial, he uses Boomerang (boomeranggmail.com) to schedule it to float back to the top of his Gmail inbox just before the trial ends. Or do it the old-fashioned way: set a reminder on your smartphone. JONATHAN HOLMES

Oscar Wilde and (below)

PICK OF THE DAY The Importance of Being Oscar 9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA DOCUMENTARY One of many interesting sidelines in this account of Oscar Wilde's career is the tale of a fateful dinner in August 1889. An American magazine bigwig took Wilde and Arthur Conan Doyle for a meal at Langham's Hotel and commissioned Conan Doyle to write a second Sherlock Holmes story and Wilde to write his only novel, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Not a bad night's work for any publisher.

The feature-length drama-doc is generous with such details and anecdotes – probably not new to serious Wilde buffs but with a gloss of insights from top contributors including Stephen Fry, Dominic Dromgoole and biographer Jerusha McCormack, the latter arguing that Wilde mounted “an extravagant Celtic campaign against Anglo-Saxon stupidity”.

The meat of the programme is dramatised extracts from the plays. Some feel underpowered but some, like a scene from A Woman of No Importance with Claire Skinner and Ed Stoppard, are excellent. DAVID BUTCHER

Saracens v Munster Two two-time champions collide in the first of this weekend's Champions Cup rugby semi-finals (kick-off 3pm). Saracens reached their sixth European semi-final in seven years with a crushing 56–27 win over Glasgow.

Munster smothered Scottish rivals Edinburgh in the quarter-finals, but injury to their fly-half Joey Carbery in that game makes him unlikely to be fit this afternoon. The two sides last met at this stage in 2017, with Saracens emerging the victors on the way to their second European crown. Tomorrow, both BT Sport and Channel 4 will have live coverage of the other semi-final, Leinster v Toulouse (k/o 3.15pm). JG

Easter from King's

5.35pm BBC2

RELIGION Over the years the name of King's College, Cambridge, has become inextricably entwined with the celebration of Christmas. However, the 21st century has seen the inception and growth of a festival of services, concerts and talks for Holy Week.

The college's world-famous choir, under Stephen Cleobury, sing choral music including Lotti's Crucifixus and Handel's Hallelujah chorus. Mezzo Jennifer Johnston joins the choir for a glorious performance of the Easter Hymn from Cavalleria Rusticana.

The story of Jesus's death and resurrection is taken from the Gospel of Matthew and is reflected upon in poems by Ruth Etchells and ee cummings. JANE RACKHAM

DRAMA What's the best way to tame a jack-the-lad TV doctor? Answer: have him become emotionally invested in the welfare of a sick youngster. The best example will always be George Clooney with the kid in the storm drain on ER, but Will's efforts to aid a dying teen tonight do have an emotional pull of their own. And by “emotional pull”, I mean that I was sobbing into my journalist's notepad by the end.

OK, so Will doesn't attempt any alpha-male heroics, but it's all rather moving and actor Jack Nolan is shaping up to be a welcome addition to the cast. The only troubling aspect is that I've now reached the stage where I'm crying at Casualty. How has this happened? DAVID BROWN

WILDE ON SCREEN

■ As Nicholas Rowe takes on the role of Oscar Wilde (see left), he follows in the footsteps of Stephen Fry (right, with Jennifer Ehle) who starred in the eponymous 1997 film, and Michael Gambon, who portrayed the playwright in a 1985 BBC mini-series.

■ Wilde's work has been transferred from page to screen multiple times. The Importance of Being Earnest with Edith Evans was released in 1952, while Colin Firth and Judi Dench appeared in a version directed by Oliver Parker in 2002. An Ideal Husband (1999) and A Good Woman (based on Lady Windermere's Fan, 2004) starred Cate Blanchett and Scarlett Johansson respectively, while 2009 saw Ben Barnes appear in the film Dorian Gray.

■ Last year it was reported that US TV network The CW was developing a version of Dorian Gray, described as "a comedic spin on the classic story". FRANCES TAYLOR

Follow the Money

9.00pm, 10.00pm BBC4

DRAMA The first episode of the Danish thriller series tonight is particularly strong, as the Copenhagen police squad closes in on Nicky and his henchmen. Alf treats his well-meaning colleague Stine appallingly, and his ploy to shake up the hash-smuggling gang goes hideously awry.

There's the rare sight of Anna being appreciated by her husband, but that doesn't last long, and once she's revealed her nefarious activities to the ghastly chump, she asks Nicky to get tough with him.

She also moves fast when there's an internal audit at her bank, which might just catch her out. But Anna's too calculating for that, surely?

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.10pm BBC1

CHAT SHOW Only one minute into this episode, host Brendan O'Carroll fluffs his lines, drops the f-word and has to start over. It proves to be something of an omen.

This week's guests are EastEnders actor Jake Wood and Olympic boxer Nicola Adams, neither of whom have much to say, and any hopes of Jake's mum injecting some laughter are quickly dashed. Quizzed on her son by Mrs Brown, she has little to contribute about him. So much so that Agnes flashes her a "Do you remember Jake? He's your son?" Credit to O'Carroll for his persistence.

There's a game cameo from Lorraine Kelly in a filmed skit, while Westlife provide the music, but it's an undeniably flabby episode. FT

The Jonathan Ross Show

9.20pm ITV

CHAT SHOW She was recently announced as the leader of an all-female presenting team on Newsnight, but tonight Emily Maitlis will be facing Ross's questions – let's hope none of the answers she supplies earn the same kind of weary eye-roll she recently gave Labour's Barry Gardiner.

Joining her will be Canadian model Winnie Harlow and Kiefer Sutherland, the later currently taking a break from his duties as Commander in Chief on political thriller Designated Survivor (a third season is now on its way after the show was revived by Netflix) with a tour of the UK playing his acoustic country music. Maybe there will be some tips from fellow guest and Voice UK coach Olly Murs? DAVID BROWN

Britain's Got Talent

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT As an example of how to kick off a variety series like this, Britain's Got Talent's series opener was a masterclass. As well as marking the on-screen reunion of Ant McPartlin and Declan Donnelly, it ticked all the boxes: a toe-curlingly dangerous act, a genuinely spine-chilling one, a cute one involving children that made David Walliams (and the rest of the country) tear up, a teenage knock-your-socks-off opera singer... the list went on.

Yes, it's cleverly edited, the juxtaposition of acts is very shrewd and it takes audience manipulation to extremes, but it took us through the range of emotions and then back again. No wonder more than eight million of us watched on the night.

There are never advance previews available but hopefully we'll get another golden buzzer act that's as deserving and heart-warming as that first one. JR

CRISIS OF CONSCIENCE
Steve Arnott (Martin Compston) catches up with John Corbett (Stephen Graham)

PICK OF THE DAY Line of Duty 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK So how about capping off Easter Day with a brutal crime drama? It'll be just the thing. Who knows, maybe the gang at AC-12 will end with a song-and-dance number and send us to bed smiling? Or maybe not.

Maybe instead the tale of police corruption and an undercover officer gone rogue will tense up further as the tentacles of the plot reach ever darker places. We should start with Ted and his poor wife, last seen at the door of her flat as John (Stephen Graham) tried to gain entry. The aftermath of what follows leaves Ted as rattled and tormented as we've seen him – Adrian Dunbar on top form.

But it also leaves Steve facing a dilemma: with the taint of suspicion still on Ted, where should Steve's loyalty lie? "What kind of copper are you?" John demands of him. "One who cares about orders or one who cares about justice?" DAVID BUTCHER

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT In a return visit to Buckfast Abbey, the Benedictine monastery on the edge of Dartmoor in Devon, the experts see some wonderful items. There's a charming selection of children's illustrations, an 18th-century apple corer, an incense burner that Lars Sharp openly covets, some exquisitely made miniature furniture that impresses expert Christopher Payne and a soft toy that makes Bunny Campione squeal with excitement and its owner nearly cry.

Plus, there's a Chinese vase that nearly ended up in a charity shop because it didn't go with the owner's colour scheme. When she hears what it's worth, she's rather pleased she didn't give it away. JANE RACKHAM

Undiscovered Worlds with Steve Backshall

8.00pm BBC2

NATURE New series Steve Backshall begins a run of world-first expeditions in the magnificently named Greenland settlement of Ittoqqortoormiit. He and his fellow explorers are planning to kayak up a fjord, which shouldn't be possible as it should be entirely frozen over. Instead it's littered with drifting pack ice, which at any moment could trap them or sweep them out to sea.

There is a genuine sense of peril watching their difficult progress, and seeing a dicey encounter with a polar bear. There are other beautiful creatures too (musk oxen and eider ducks) in a vivid profile of a place where the pace of climate change feels tangible. DAVID BUTCHER

Miriam's Dead Good Adventure

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Miriam Margolyes confronts mortality in this two-parter, and, of course, is searingly candid about dying, especially what she perceives as the crackpot ideas espoused by "death activists", who tell her they intend to live for ever.

In the USA she talks to radical life-extension enthusiasts (some religious, some not). Her response to their beliefs is not printable in a family magazine but her expression at an orgasmic energy workshop will make you laugh out loud (and laughter is "better than Jesus" for longevity, she reckons). In a UK care home she's moved to tears, though, by a couple's love. JR
The RT Interview: page 16

Victoria

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA To begin with, I was sceptical about Laurence Fox and his dry turn as Lord Palmerston, but I've come round. He's now in danger of stealing the show. The role is made for Fox's ability to mix haughty and louche, drawing out his lines like a sort of Victorian Fonz, and in control of every scene and conversation.

This week, he's on home ground for a change as Victoria and Albert visit Ireland and stay at Lord P's estate, scandalised by his open marriage arrangements. Meanwhile, the other actor in danger of stealing the show, Laurie Shepherd (nine) shines too, as Prince Bertie gets a new tutor. And things are hotting up between the duchess and the footman. DAVID BUTCHER

STEVE BACKSHALL'S TV CV

The host of Undiscovered Worlds (8pm BBC2) had an unusual route into naturalism, first gaining a degree in English and theatre at Exeter University before going on to study biology with the Open University. Steve Backshall produced and presented for National Geographic but gained prominence in 2003 after landing a job on the BBC children's series The Really Wild Show. He went on to host Deadly 60 and joined the BBC's Natural History Unit, making Lost Land of the Jaguar and Nature's Microworlds and reporting on The One Show and Springwatch.

The father-of-one, married to Olympic champion rower Helen Glover, took on an altogether different challenge in 2014 on Strictly Come Dancing, where he finished eighth. Something of an adrenaline junkie, he also has a black belt in martial arts and is an accomplished rock climber. Backshall turns 46 today. Happy birthday, Steve! FRANCES TAYLOR

Jesus: His Life

9.00pm History

DRAMA New series Claims don't come much bolder than this: "Now, for the first time, Jesus's story is told through the eyes of those who knew him best." Following this movie-trailer-style opening narration, we get a cast montage, each player appearing moodily on screen one at a time (Mary! Judas! Pilate!) like they're in the intro to a biblical Beverly Hills 90210.

So if, for some reason, you crave a soapy retelling of Christ's impact, then this is for you. We "learn" that Mary told Joseph: "I'm pregnant, you're not the father." And that he lost it big time, trashing his workplace. Coincidentally, Ramin Karimloo, who plays Joseph, also joins Holby City this week. Jesus: His Life will have been an invaluable training ground. DAVID BROWN

The League of Gentlemen: Live Again!

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.30pm)

COMEDY OF THE WEEK It was a happy day for "local people" when the League went on tour last year with a 20th-anniversary reunion. This BBC version has, oddly, lopped the first half of the stage show entirely (it took the trio back to their roots, sparring in bowties and tuxes). No matter. There's plenty to sink your fangs into in the fully costumed second half, as Steve Pemberton, Reece Shearsmith and Mark Gatiss quick-change into an impressive roster of Royston Vasey's weirdest. As a devotee from day one, it's hit and miss for me, but I adore seeing monstrous Pauline brought back from the dead and outrageously mucky Herr Lipp teasing audience members. PATRICK MULKERN

10.00pm ITV

MUSIC As an alternative to diving headfirst into your collection of chocolate eggs, but just as silky smooth and satisfying, indulge yourself in this concert from our favourite Canadian crooner.

Following his son's cancer diagnosis, Bublé took time out from recording and touring, but has recently returned to "joyful" and "triumphant" reviews for his show performed with a 36-piece orchestra. All the Bublé favourites are here – I Just Haven't Met You Yet, Cry Me a River etc – as well as a few evergreens and some songs from his latest album.

As always there are cheesy moments and dreadful jokes, but the charismatic Bublé always leaves his audience Feelin' Good. JR

Louisa (Keeley Hawes) bumps into Spiros's wife

The Durrells

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Out shopping for picnic food, Louisa comes face-to-face with Spiros and his wife Dimitra. Awkward doesn't begin to describe that meeting. But do we detect some tension between the married couple? You bet we do.

This is a strangely disjointed episode that chucks in all sorts of characters (new ones such as eccentric house guest Countess De Torro and familiar ones such as Captain Creech), while whisking us around the island of Corfu as well as to Paris and Dorset.

There are aggressive fishermen, frisky lemurs, hungry goats and explosions to boot. Plus, there's a wonderful line from xenophobic Uncle Geoffrey (Jeff Rawle). "Why have you left Greece?" he asks Margo when she turns up unexpectedly on his doorstep. "Is it because it's abroad?" he adds sympathetically.

8.00 Undiscovered Worlds with Steve Backshall

RT New series. Ep 1. Adventurer and naturalist Steve Backshall embarks on a mission to visit parts of the world that have yet to be explored. He begins in the Arctic, where he and his team attempt to kayak through the world's largest fjord. It will be a tough journey, only made possible since the sea ice broke up early following the warmest winter on record. Steve and the team must be on alert for sea ice that could crush their boats – and the threat from ravenous polar bears. See page 62.

TIME TRAVELLER
David Olusoga uncovers more fascinating chapters in the history of Number 5

PICK OF THE DAY A House through Time 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY You couldn't make it up. Watching David Olusoga's extraordinary history of 5 Ravensworth Terrace, Newcastle, it strikes you that if a scriptwriter devised the storylines that unfold here, you'd seriously doubt that one house could witness so much drama. But it did, and we get fascinating glimpses of complex lives that Olusoga draws out from documents and photographs.

In 1910 the Eagle family are using the property as a theatrical boarding house. There is a nice interlude on Edwardian music hall acts who stayed there, but the mood turns dark as the First World War breaks out and a xenophobic "spymania" grips Newcastle, with grim consequences for the family.

One resident was widowed twice by the age of 31, both in cruel circumstances. Then the 1920s bring further turmoil as the house is caught up in the struggle for Irish independence. It's a heck of a story. DAVID BUTCHER

University Challenge

8.30pm BBC2

QUIZ This tournament began in mid-July last year. Now two teams remain, levelling their cerebral firepower at each other for a duel to the general-knowledge death.

Although the knowledge in this series is anything but general, that's the beauty of it. University Challenge is surely the only TV quiz – perhaps anywhere in the world – where a question is liable to start, "Answer in English or Latin..." as happened in the first of the semi-finals.

Edinburgh won that one, beating Durham, but I won't reveal their opponents tonight in case you have yet to see the second semi-final. Let's hope Jeremy Paxman chairs a fair fight. DAVID BUTCHER

Travel Man: 48 Hours in Porto

8.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Nish Kumar joins Richard Ayoade for a pootle round Porto that involves few of the traditional sights, but does include a wobbly scooter ride that they reckon looks like a deleted sequence from Quadrophenia, and a visit to a 5D cinema that's punctuated by screams. "Labour can't be worse than that!" concludes Ayoade.

They bounce one-liners off each other and have a laugh, although that may be the result of drinking the local port. It may also explain why Kumar devours the oozing Portuguese version of a croque monsieur "created by someone who's ideologically opposed to portion control". JANE RACKHAM

Not Going Out

9.00pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 10.55pm)

SITCOM After last week's masterclass, the comedy comes down to earth this week, and promptly dips below the belt. Lee is outraged that his twins have started sex education at primary school. "I should be the one telling them the facts of life," he huffs, though in practice he's so embarrassed, he only succeeds in confusing them.

To make matters worse, the children's teacher calls Lee and Lucy in for stern chats on account of ideas the twins have been sharing in class. When Lucy delivers the final blow to Lee's pride, it's time for a musical montage involving a sex shop and a Kama Sutra pop-up book that feels a little too rooted in cartoon sitcom-world. DAVID BUTCHER

The Widow

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA If you thought this drama was cruising a bit, you're in luck. Tonight the story of Georgia (Kate Beckinsale) and her search for her husband in the jungles of the Congo takes a nicely unexpected left turn.

Alex Kingston plays Georgia's aid worker friend Judith, and until now I was thinking the role seemed on the small side for her: but not any more. We dive into Judith's past for a whole new angle on her life involving a typically sharp and believable cameo from Siobhan Finneran.

Look out, because there are full-on, very nasty shocks along the way, too, as the plot creases and folds in unlikely places, setting us up for the next episode tomorrow night. DAVID BUTCHER

Bravo to EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) for remembering that Phil Mitchell is a human being. For the past couple of years, he's seemed to have special powers. Let's consider those abilities for a minute: a bottomless back pocket that always contains a wad of banknotes, a magic liver that can regenerate whenever he falls off the wagon and a steel outer shell that allows him to survive any car crash or shooting. But, all of a sudden, Phil is vulnerable – and it makes him a much more believable

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

character. He's being massively hoodwinked by his son Ben, his abducted daughter Louise is being held in a shipping container (the plotlines may not be as believable as Phil's new character) and he's now forced to rely on the younger Keanu for help. Obviously, he's still Top Dog of Walford – no one will take that crown until actor Steve McFadden decides to call it a day. But a frayed Phil is a far more credible figure than the superhero/villain he'd been morphing into. DAVID BROWN

Ghosts

9.30pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.25pm)
SITCOM Mike tries to convince Alison that the ghosts she sees in the country house they've inherited are merely a side-effect of her fall from the window. As Alison, Charlotte Ritchie is at the heart of this likeable sitcom and she shines in an all-star ensemble – though tonight her role mainly involves becoming increasingly desperate.

There's a nice scene where she tells the infatuated (dead) poet played by Mathew Baynton, "You're in my head!" (because she's trying to convince herself of that), to which he replies, "And you in mine, my sweet!"

Meanwhile, the (dead) Second World War captain played by Ben Willbond is also smitten, in his case by a tank doc on the History channel: "Hello to you!" DAVID BUTCHER

Sara Pascoe Live: LadsLadsLads

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 10.30pm)
COMEDY While most of us divulge our heartbreaks only to our closest friends (or perhaps a pet), comedian Sara Pascoe stood up on stage in 2017 in a sparkly outfit and spilled her break-up pain at the Edinburgh Festival – and then toured Britain with it. The 37-year-old had just split up with fellow comic John Robins and out of her new single life she created a very funny show – of which this was the London Palladium finale.

Prepare to hear her overshare about her sex life, her attempts to conceive, and the experience of spending Valentine's Day alone in Paris and realising that, "if you are not kissing someone, the Eiffel Tower is just a high-up cage". KASIA DELGADO

10.30pm BBC1
COMEDY DRAMA When somebody says, "This has to go well" in a comedy, it's a given that it won't. So, it's no surprise that former prisoner Miri Matteson's first shift at Nathan's fish and chip shop fails to go to plan after her boss tells her how much is riding on it.

But the way the day unravels is, at times, startling. In fact, at one point, I jumped so suddenly that I spilled tea into my lap. That's nothing compared with Miri, though, who is left both bloodied and traumatised.

But she isn't the only one with secrets – as writer and star Daisy Haggard starts cracking the carapace of the community, we learn more about what others are hiding, too. DAVID BROWN

iPlayer (expires today)

He's as well known now for his books as he is for his sketch comedy, but bedroom genius Brian Limond is still a master of off-kilter skits. Last year he returned with this one-off half-hour, self-filmed and with nobody else in the cast. Those restrictions free his already expansive imagination still further: there are more good ideas here than in most people's six-part series.

Mark Kermode shares the secrets of some of his favourite disaster films

Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema

9.00pm BBC4
ARTS Big-name casts, big budgets and CGI: yes, disaster movies often involve such things, but cinematic maestro Mark Kermode skilfully takes us through the not-so-obvious examples, too.

That said, as a young lad in the 70s he saw The Towering Inferno three times in one week. That, and The Poseidon Adventure, gets a good outing here.

Clever editing, Kermode shows us, can be as effective as special effects, while recurring story devices maintain the viewers' sense of jeopardy.

And, as always, he has a neat turn of phrase. 1998's Armageddon is "brash, noisy and bombastic... the Donald Trump of disaster flicks".

He concludes by pondering what disaster movies can teach us. Don't live in New York is the answer – it's been destroyed at least 69 times on screen. JR

A couple all at sea

Adrift ★★★ Netflix

Shailene Woodley delivers a passionate performance in this gripping tale about a woman and her fiancé (Sam Claflin) who become stranded at sea. The flashback sequences are a little jarring, preventing the tension from building as much as it could. However, the stars display a wonderful chemistry that adds an emotional charge to their predicament. Skilfully directed by Baltasar Kormakur (The Deep, Everest), Adrift takes you on a powerful journey that manages to overcome the deficiencies of its script. JAMES LUXFORD

A tale as old as time

Alpha ★★★ 6.15pm Sky Premiere

Young warrior Keda (Kodi Smit-McPhee) forms an unlikely friendship with a wolf in this prehistoric survival story. What starts out as a standard rites-of-passage tale from director Albert Hughes (The Book of Eli) develops into something more refined as it explores the themes of friendship and resilience. Smit-McPhee is terrific in a role that relies more on movement than dialogue, while his four-legged co-star is simply adorable. The cinematography is also stunning, with the environment a supporting character in itself. JL

Water carry-on!

Flushed Away ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This computer-animated feature from Aardman is available on catch-up until Friday. Hugh Jackman voices a pet mouse who is flushed down the toilet into a rodent metropolis, where he helps a smart rat (Kate Winslet) foil the plans of an evil toad (Ian McKellen). Kids will revel in the fun, while grown-ups will enjoy the humour. ALAN JONES

SECRET SLEUTHS
Are Jamie (Alfred Enoch) and Zoe (Katie Clarkson-Hill) starting to piece together the evidence?

PICK OF THE DAY Trust Me 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA It's starting to feel significant that Corporal Jamie McCain is a patient on the James Stewart Spinal Unit. Like Stewart's Jeff, the hero in Rear Window, Jamie has become a kind-of incapacitated detective. He seems to have found his Grace Kelly in the form of Dr Zoe Wade, who's sneaking around gathering evidence, while Jamie lies in bed at the mercy of the medics. But are the pair in danger of adding themselves to the growing tally of unexplained deaths? Episode two of Trust Me keeps the tension simmering nicely, though I do wish someone would turn the lights on. I'm all for a bit of film-noir shadow, but surely no hospital can possibly be as gloomy as this? It's now reached the stage where I'm thinking that the murkiness may be a plot point. Are patients dying because no one can read the correct dosages on the medications? Perhaps doctors are tripping over in the dark and pulling out vital life-support cables? Is this the first crime drama in history where low-watt bulbs are actually to blame? DAVID BROWN

Your Home Made Perfect

8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY Vicky and James want to update their gloomy Kent home, but, as host Angela Scanlon puts it, they struggle to agree what to have for dinner, let alone what they want in a house. James is obsessed by food (the hall is filled with shelves of cookery books and a giant fridge-freezer), while Vicky and her record collection are relegated upstairs. He wants chunky industrial, she prefers light and airy. Competing architects Robert Jamison and Laura Jane Clark face a real challenge as they try to fulfil the couple's diametrically opposed wishes. It's illuminating to see the architect/client process, and there are some neat ideas for home renovators, too. GILL CRAWFORD

Hard to Please OAPs

8.30pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY You have to give June Brown credit as she's certainly earning her appearance fee. At 92, she's managing to step onto one of those vibrating exercise plates and hold down a conversation while oscillating. What a marvel.

If only Michael Whitehall had the same levels of enthusiasm: he doesn't seem to like anything, be it camping, the gym or selfie sticks. So it's no wonder he's on the receiving end of the snarkiest barbs from narrator Jennifer Saunders. Her commentary seems to channel a sarcastic grandchild in the back seat of a car on a day trip. If I was one of the OAPs, I'd be withholding her pocket money. DAVID BROWN

Surgeons: at the Edge of Life

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Some people's quality of life is so poor that they're prepared to risk lengthy, invasive surgery in the hope of a slight improvement. For Chris, 63, who endures constant back pain, there's a 70 per cent chance something will go wrong during or after the operation on his spine.

Elsewhere in Birmingham's Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Judy is having an enormous "apron" of fat and tissue, the result of extreme lymphoedema, removed. The team have a sweepstake on its weight (they're not being disrespectful, explains surgeon Sunil Thomas, it helps to diffuse the stress). It's a mind-blowing amount. JANE RACKHAM

Looking for Rembrandt

9.00pm BBC4

ART We rejoin Rembrandt van Rijn in the mid-1650s with his life and career on the slide. The contributors explore how his debts forced him into bankruptcy, and the various financial schemes he devised to help his son.

But the most interesting parts of the programme are when a curator or critic stands in front of one of the paintings and simply talks us through it – how the broad brushstrokes prefigure impressionism, or how, in a self-portrait from 1658, Rembrandt portrays himself, for all his troubles, as "the prince of painters", with his artist's stick as a kind of sceptre. And they're all agreed that for capturing what age does to a face, there is nobody better. DAVID BUTCHER

West End and Broadway star Ramin Karimloo (right) joins Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm), though I feel he must have got lost. Surely he was trying to find his way onto the set of Grey's Anatomy? The jawline, the stubble, the knack for getting separated from his shirt within minutes of appearing – it's all pointing to a career at super-glam Seattle Grace, not Holby. Though, it has to be said, everyone (well, almost) appears very charmed by newcomer Kian, with Essie and Nicky especially smitten. I obviously hate his guts. Well, maybe just his abs. But come on! Nobody on a UK soap has the right to be this handsome! These are programmes that are supposed to be about regular-looking people. I want to see pasty middle-aged guys like Sacha Levy saving lives. Not Wolverine in scrubs swaggering around thinking he's god's gift. I admit, some viewers will enjoy seeing Ramin in action. But fellas, if you come away feeling inferior, don't say I didn't warn you. DAVID BROWN

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY "All I've been told is I have to meet Karen in a village somewhere out here," says Ben. Sounds like a tall order, seeing as he's driving through the middle of the Sahara desert. Like many of Ben's new-lifers, Karen has a serene air about her. She runs an artists' retreat in Morocco, where the amber sunlight must have been manna from heaven for the cameraperson – cascading through slits in the windows, and illuminating the dunes outside.

It's not all about sipping tea and admiring the view for Karen, though: the work's hard, but the rewards are huge. "It's so beautiful to watch the transformation people go through," she says of her guests. GARY ROSE

Don't Forget the Driver

10.00pm BBC2

SITCOM There's a real punctured beauty to Toby Jones's face, which we see in close-up during one memorable scene tonight as anguish and happiness vie for supremacy. The tensions are mounting for Peter, who's allowed stowaway Rita to spend the night under his roof. Daughter Kayla is initially annoyed by her dad's actions, but it's she who ends up being the one to make a communication breakthrough with their new houseguest.

The trouble is, though, that there are people who want to track Rita down and they look like the kind of men who wouldn't think twice about giving Peter some cuts and bruises to wear alongside his frown lines. DAVID BROWN

Run for Your Life

10.45pm ITV (not STV; Border Scotland: 11.15pm)

DOCUMENTARY As knife crime stats surge, talk continues about the cause. Is the spike due to cuts in police numbers? Austerity? Toxic home environments? Former triple jumper Connie Henry puts forward her argument here. She wants to see a qualified PE teacher in every primary school, so that children are involved in sport from an early age. Can harnessing athletic potential combat the rise in youth violence? The work of Henry's charity Track Academy suggests it can play a part. "Kids do like to be in gangs," says Henry's supporter Daley Thompson, before looking around at the young athletes training on the track. "This is another kind of gang." DAVID BROWN

WILL LOVE BLOOM?
Graphic designer Chris and tennis coach Natalie

First Dates

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT If you like guessing who's going to hit it off before they've even read the menu, you might struggle tonight. Some couples seem a perfect match but aren't, while one unlikely pairing suddenly blossoms.

Graphic designer and beekeeper Chris admits he's a bit wacky and hasn't got a conversational filter (hence his story about the mating habits of bees) so it's hard to imagine he'll have anything in common with the more reserved Natalie, a tennis coach.

Elsewhere posh Calum clearly likes what he sees across the table – he keeps staring at his date Lucy's boobs – while well-groomed Jacques and entertainer Safina look great together, although his laddish chat won't be to everyone's taste.

Plus there's a tragic back story that comes out of nowhere.

Diamond's solo act

6.10pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

"Love on the rocks, ain't no surprise..." We knew Neil Diamond could sing but when the hit-maker took the lead role in a remake of The Jazz Singer, he found himself acting opposite Laurence Olivier. The film earned him $3.5 million (then the highest fee paid for a debut actor), a hit album... and a Razzie award. The experience convinced Diamond to stick to what he was best at, saying, "I decided I'd rather be a really good singer than a mediocre actor." He later told Larry King, "I never did get a real taste for the movies." ANDREW COLLINS

All week on catch-up

The Fits ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW
In this very unusual drama, a young tomboy joins a competitive dance team to make friends, just as an unexplained sickness starts to spread across her school. At barely over an hour, this is a brief but truly unique film from director Anna Rose Holmer, making her feature debut. In a story set almost entirely within the school walls, the young cast members interact with each other in a way that feels totally natural. And anchoring it all is a brilliant performance from 11-year-old lead Royalty Hightower. JAMES LUXFORD

Buñuel bows out

That Obscure Object of Desire ★★★★★ MUBI
MUBI brings its recent Luis Buñuel retrospective to a fitting conclusion today with his final film added to the service. A witty, ironic and barbed morality tale, it follows the increasingly desperate attempts of wealthy businessman Fernando Rey to seduce his maid, unaware that his world is collapsing around his ears. DAVID PARKINSON

FAMILY MATTERS
Lisa (Morven Christie) is back on track with her kids Abbie (Imogen King) and Rob (Art Parkinson)

PICK OF THE DAY The Bay 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA That dreamily beautiful title song wafts us in over the opening credits and into Morecambe Bay one last time. Well, I say "last", but The Bay has the feel of a world we would gladly return to for future series.

As the plot swirls around a knotty mess of mistakes and misery, there's good chemistry throughout the cast, particularly between Morven Christie as Lisa and Daniel Ryan as her stolid DI. Sometimes the performances feel more nuanced than the plot deserves, but there are worse things, and we care about the characters, even semi-scumbags like Sean (Jonas Armstrong): exactly how much of a wrong 'un he may be is one of the open questions.

But mainly: who moved dead teenager Dylan's body? Because whoever it was is probably the same person who got Dylan's twin sister Holly pregnant, and she's not saying. Meanwhile that county lines drug dealer is also due a reckoning, and Lisa has him in her sights. DAVID BUTCHER

The Customer Is Always Right

11.00am BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE New series The stars of this consumer series (which started on Monday) are the product-testers, who are brutally honest. It's a bit like Gogglebox, but with inventions. Some don't read the instructions properly and some even modify the product themselves.

Today they check out a GPS pet-tracking device that shows one couple just how lazy their cat is. The other entrepreneurs hoping to get top marks have come up with a reusable bamboo spork and sticky pads to stop your ill-fitting shoes slipping off your feet. The winner gets a trophy but, unlike Dragons' Den, not a financial investment.

PROPERTY Another advantage of long, warm summers: they make Phil and Kirstie's house-hunting that much easier, with sunlight flooding into even the darkest houses and gardens looking their best. For Phil's clients, Yorkshire retirees Tom and Sue, this is vital. They've sold their home and will shortly be moving into a camper van unless Mr Spencer can find them "a garden, with a house attached" in rural East Anglia. Sue's got a very precise vision of her dream house, but does it exist?

Kirstie is helping first-time buyer Beccy. She's nervous about how far her limited budget can get her, but will she go for an easy flat, or a house to put her mark on? GILL CRAWFORD

MotherFatherSon

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Eight episodes in and every scene and every conversation in this drama still feels a bit wrong. But the surfaces are so beautiful and the performances so intense, they make us want to believe it all.

Horrible anti-hero Max (Richard Gere) has offered his ex-wife Kathryn (Helen McCrory) a job, and although she turned him down she is now having second thoughts.

Meanwhile Angela, the glassy-eyed fascist, is on course to win the general election, though in this world there are no political parties, and press magnates lay out their own front pages, alone. Lord knows how much the series cost but it's a curious, glorious failure. DAVID BUTCHER

9.00pm C4

DRAMA Lee is on a mission to find "Tank Man" – the protestor he photographed in 1989 in Tiananmen Square, and whom Lee thinks is now living in secret in New York. As we follow his quest, we flip back and forth to the story of Lee's friend in Beijing, Zhang Lin, and his nascent relationship with a young lawyer who may be at odds with the authorities.

To be honest, the portrait of life in Beijing, all smog and surveillance, feels more fleshed out and interesting than the New York stuff. But it's F Murray Abraham as Lee's ex-editor who gets the maddest speech, bemoaning how user comments mean his paper's website has become a "national circle jerk for imbeciles". DAVID BUTCHER

The writers of Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) need to be careful with the character of Gemma (Dolly-Rose Campbell, right) as she's in danger of becoming a bit of a caricature. I know Chesney isn't running department classes at No 5, but the show is overdoing the whole "Gemma is uncouth" shtick. First, she was talking with her mouth full of food, then she inadvertently taught young Joseph to swear and recently she licked her dinner plate clean at the sink instead of washing it up. Really, Corrie? Do you expect us to believe that Gemma also did that when she was living with Rita?

Speaking of Rita (Barbara Knox, left), it's actually the Queen of the Kabin who questions whether Gemma's current bout of sickness might be due to something other than a virus. And, as you've probably guessed, once the suggestion of a pregnancy test is made, it isn't long before Gemma gets a positive result. One word about what I hear is to follow: quads. DAVID BROWN

Old Wife, New Wife

DOCUMENTARY New series

"Professional support is on hand if required," we're told at the start of this relationship doc. But the concept still left me troubled. As Cyren and new partner Meaghan move in with his ex Laura for seven days, I couldn't help but worry about three-year-old Leo. Does he really understand that his dad is just home for a week as part of some dubious TV experiment?

I mean, he seems happy enough, but as the adults recriminate and pour salt in old wounds, just how much is he subliminally processing? There was, for me, a telling moment, when Leo smacks his Nintendo Switch and Cyren says, "Aw, you're just like Daddy." To which Meaghan smiles and replies, "Same temper." DAVID BROWN

Urban Myths

9.00pm Sky Arts

COMEDY The truth about what caused Charles Dickens and Hans Christian Andersen's friendship to be damaged irrevocably may never be known, but Urban Myths imagines a scenario in which Dickens experiences the worst of times when the Danish author thoroughly overstays his welcome on an unexpected visit to his Kent home in 1857.

It's a farcical caper in which Andersen (Ian Hart) reveals himself to Dickens (Stephen Mangan) as an irksome, underpants-averse houseguest who revels in reading vulgar stories to the children and is, in the words of Dickens's wife Catherine (Monica Dolan), a "Nordic cuckoo". Silly and jolly, with a good few laughs. FRANCES TAYLOR

Ms Fisher's Modern Murder Mysteries

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA We're getting close to Scooby-Doo territory tonight and I'm not just talking about the mini dresses. At one point, a security guard says, "There's been a few strange goings-on of late." Which, as far as I'm concerned, should always be followed by the line, "OK gang, let's split up and look for clues." We also get a chase scene, though sadly it doesn't involve Peregrine dressing up as a French waiter to confuse a monster, who then gets caught in an oversized net.

Instead, we're at the studio of a Ready Steady Go!-style TV show, where heartthrob Duane Gordon has just been electrocuted. Plenty of people wanted to end both his career and his life... DAVID BROWN

iPlayer (expires today)

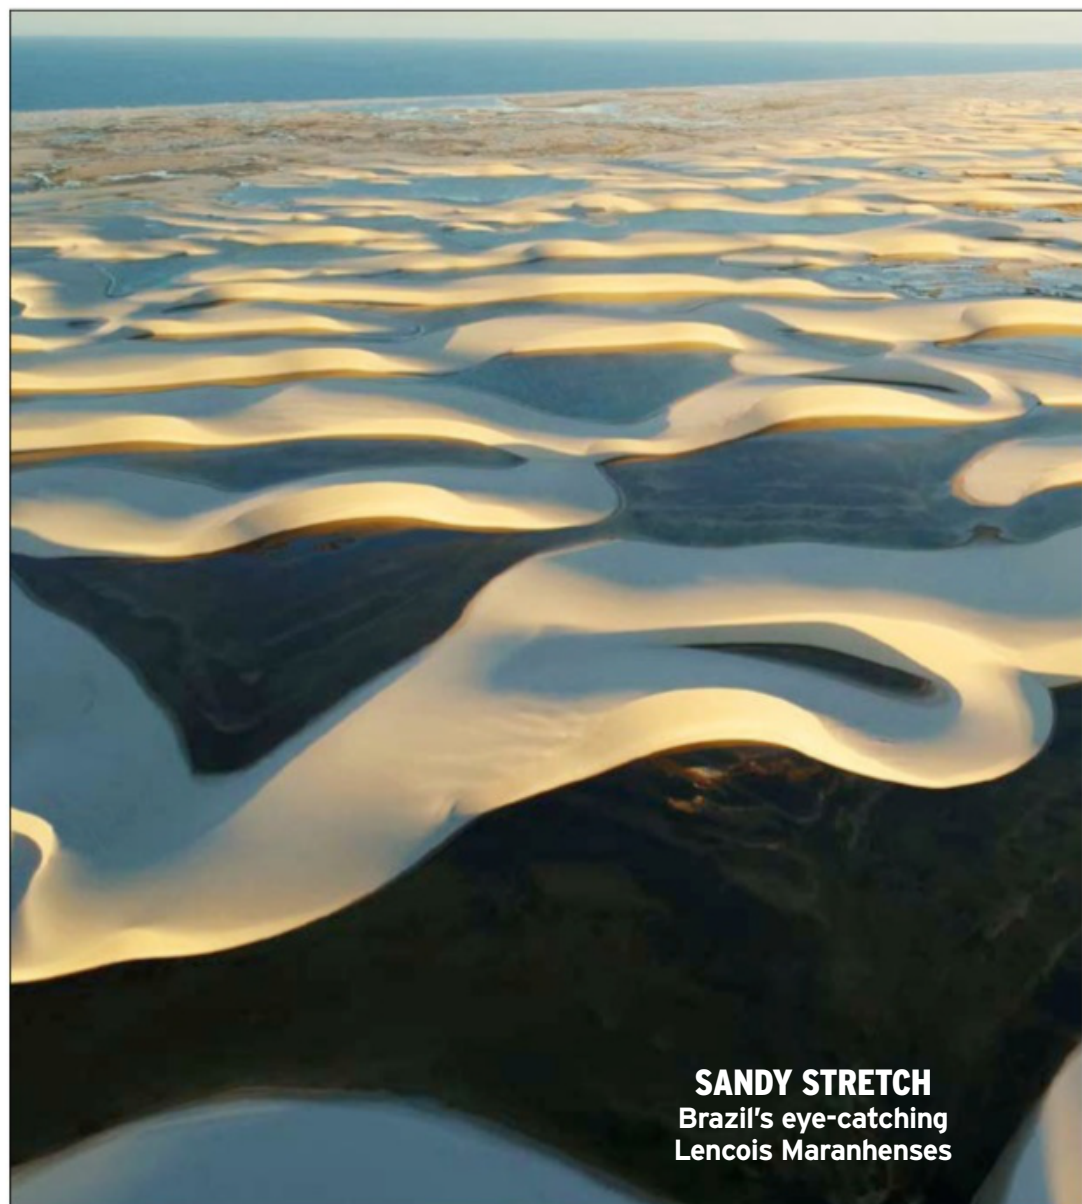

A captivating, French-made 2018 documentary about the rise to global prominence of Chanel No 5 perfume, and the commercial wrangling that flowed from its creator, Coco Chanel, recklessly signing away most of its future profits. If that sounds like a scenario where you'll sympathise with a naive artist, there's a dark tale of ruthless backstabbing on the way that gets an awful lot darker when the Nazis invade.

SANDY STRETCH
Brazil's eye-catching Lencois Maranhenses

Earth from Space

9.00pm BBC1 (Scotland: 11.05pm)

DOCUMENTARY This series drifts along pleasantly like a long, lazy stretch of the Amazon. Which is exactly the sort of thing it shows us, looking ribbony and magical when seen from space. Satellite cameras reveal a pattern of oxbow lakes, or the halos around a coral reef. Then we explore them close up and learn how they got there.

You could reasonably complain that there's not much drama here but there are some interesting surprises, such as a man in Bengal who keeps ten otters on leads. He uses them to help him catch fish in the mangrove forests of the Sundarbans – they herd them into his nets, and get a share themselves. And in Brazil a vast area of sand dunes called the Lencois Maranhenses looks extraordinary. When seasonal rains come, the valleys between them turn into a network of beautiful lagoons. DAVID BUTCHER

Sophie's passion project

The Book Thief ★★★ 6.25pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Sophie Nélisse impressed critics as young Liesel in this war drama (review, p43), but we almost didn't get to see her in the role. The Canadian actress is also a keen gymnast, and was in training for the 2016 Rio Olympics when she decided to audition for director Brian Percival "just for fun". Sophie won the part just as Liesel won her heart – and it was goodbye Rio, hello wartime Berlin. "I loved the script and my character so much," explained Nélisse. And her efforts did earn her a gold in the form of a Hollywood Film Award. ELLIE PORTER

Another Scottish tale

Lady Macbeth ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This isn't Shakespeare's Lady Macbeth but debut director William Oldroyd's stark depiction of a young woman taking control in rural Scotland at the turn of the last century. Based on a Russian novella, the film casts Florence Pugh in her first leading role as a woman trapped in an abusive arranged marriage. We will her to escape, and – spoiler alert! – she does, but via some unthinkable acts. This is daring cinema that will chill you to the bone and leave you rooting for its understandably immoral heroine. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

The Terminator/ Terminator 2 from 3.35pm Sky Action

The first two Terminator films are still the best, thanks to not only Arnold Schwarzenegger as the killer cyborg but also Linda Hamilton as gutsy survivor Sarah Connor. Hamilton recently called the other sequels "forgettable" as she and Arnie prepare to reteam for Terminator: Dark Fate. JAMIE HEALY

LIFE-SAVER

Paramedic Pragna and her colleagues at the North West Ambulance Service are back on call

PICK OF THE DAY Ambulance 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK "This is the story behind the sirens," Christopher Eccleston says on the voiceover. And what a story it always is. Once again, this series pulls together some tough, moving television with a selection of cases from the North West Ambulance Service that leave us dumbfounded, slack-jawed and very glad not to be involved.

Tonight's opening case, for instance, involves a cocktail of drugs that sounds like it could fell an elephant – methadone, crack and spice are involved, plus an energy drink for good measure – as paramedics are diverted from another call to treat an overdose in Manchester city centre.

But the main case features 25-year-old Stacey, whose friend calls from a hotel bedroom. If you've ever felt sceptical about fictional storylines where someone doesn't realise they're pregnant and then is taken by surprise when the baby comes, watch this. Over the phone line we hear Stacey's friend tell her, a little dismissively, "You've got a ginger." DAVID BUTCHER

Celebrity Painting Challenge

8.00pm BBC1 (Wales: Friday 8.30pm BBC2)

ART I'll be coy about who makes it to tonight's final for the sake of anyone who hasn't seen last week's episode, but three celebrity painters with very different styles set about creating a work on a subject of their choosing in the Natural History Museum.

One produces a spray of joyous butterflies, while another shows a giraffe emerging from its own skeleton. As always, there's a reluctance to show us how a painting evolves or to let us really take in the finished work. We see plenty of the contestants' banter, and the judges and mentors, but the thing whoever edits this seems least interested in is... painting. DAVID BUTCHER

Pose

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Pose is all for creating opportunities and this sixth episode is the first time a transwoman of colour has been credited as writer, producer and director on a TV series. Janet Mock is a leading light in the trans sphere, but here delivers the most tonally uneven instalment so far. Several key scenes fall flat, while others sing – literally. Venting his vast experience on Broadway, Billy Porter is outstanding as Pray Tell, who puts on a cabaret for the dying, but this only leaves Mj Rodriguez as Blanca looking blander than ever.

Stay alert for a muted cameo from the fabulous Sandra Bernhard as a not-quite-Nurse-Ratched struggling on an underfunded Aids ward.

PATRICK MULKERN

Jill Dando: the 20 Year Mystery

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY BBC1's recent Jill Dando documentary did not feature an interview with Barry George, the man who had his conviction for her murder overturned after spending eight years in prison. The BBC argued that he wasn't needed in order to tell the story, but ITV's take on the unsolved crime certainly benefits from having him present.

"I knew I hadn't done it," he says here. "My conscience was clear." His sister Michelle also appears, saying that the siblings, like Dando's family, want to see the gunman caught. The programme follows the evidence trail to Serbia and the theory that Dando may have been the victim of a revenge killing. DAVID BROWN

Grand Designs: the Street

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY Most of us can just about assemble a bit of flatpack furniture, but Chris and Roxie, the youngest self-builders on the Bicester project, are making a whole house out of 380 plywood boxes screwed together.

It's a bold, experimental plan: the system has never been used like this before, and progress is stressful. Once again, the pressure on a relationship that seemed concrete causes cracks to show.

Meanwhile, Peter and Anita, currently living in a cramped semi, hope to build a home more suited to their family's needs – and become mortgage-free in the process. Both homes look terrific in the end.

JANE RACKHAM

Linear plotlines have fallen out of fashion on TV. These days, it's all "three months earlier" or "six minutes later".

Flashforwards, flashbacks, jumps sideways, the same scene from the viewpoint of another character... Such narrative trickery can add depth to a drama. Sometimes, though, it's as if the director dropped the script on the floor, panicked, gathered up the pages in a random order and then shot it.

So it's with some trepidation that I greet the prospect of Emmerdale

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

(7.00pm, 8.00pm ITV) telling a tale in two parts, a fortnight apart. Part one unfolds tonight as a group heads to Hotten for a big night out that results in one of the revellers catching groomer Maya (played by Louisa Clein, pictured) with Jacob. But for the full story, you'll have to wait two weeks, when the soap will spool back to reveal the details about what happened on this fateful trip into town. Here's hoping the pay-off is worth the wait and not merely a gimmicky stunt. DAVID BROWN

David Jason: Planes, Trains and Automobiles

9.00pm Gold

DOCUMENTARY Who would ever imagine that Del Boy would make it to Hollywood? Well, at least David Jason does. On the final leg of his American journey he attends stunt-car driving school. And to his evident delight, it turns out that he's pretty good at it, doing 180-degree spins and smoking-wheel getaways with a huge grin on his face throughout.

The smile stays put when he gets a taste of luxury executive jet travel, too. The plane may not take off, but his PR host has the wonderful name of Julie Necessary.

Jason has clearly had a ball on this trip and isn't even fazed when he learns he's only known in the States as the voice of Danger Mouse. JR

Lee and Dean

10.00pm C4

SITCOM The complex nature of Lee and Dean's relationship comes to the fore this week as the pair attend an awards ceremony and trade show for the Home Counties. Builder Greg takes a shine to Dean at his "Construction Solution's" stall, setting in motion misunderstandings and petty jealousies between him and Lee. As ever in this show, it's as much about what's not said as what is.

When Lee gives Dean an exquisite bark-rubbing kit, there's a tender moment as Dean tells him: "I'm really enjoying this. I'm really having a nice time..." And although you want them to run off into the woods for their happy ever after, it doesn't happen, of course. That would spoil the tension – and the magic. FRANCES TAYLOR

Berlin Station

10.05pm More4

DRAMA You realise how grey and oppressive Berlin can be when the action in this classy Euro spy drama switches to a glorious and sunny finca in Andalusia.

This country house is where "retired" CIA agent Hector DeJean (Rhys Ifans) has disappeared to, and where, like Michael Corleone in The Godfather Part III, he thought he was out, but is about to be pulled back in to service by his former colleague Daniel Miller (Richard Armitage).

Daniel's trying to get close to a far-right German bully boy, and needs Hector's help. So over copious bottles of wine – and a very tense fruit salad – can the pair lure in their prey? It all looks gorgeous, and Ifans is on fabulous form. GILL CRAWFORD

DOCUMENTARY A whole generation caught the outrageously dressed lecturers of the OU pointing at dizzyingly complex equations and the like on BBC2. When the tutorials were first filmed, the presenters thought they'd be broadcast for a maximum of three years, but the prohibitive cost of re-shooting them meant that we paid repeat visits long after the tutors' wide ties went out of fashion.

Not that this was a problem for the millions of students who benefited from Harold Wilson's idea of a "University of the Air". One of those to graduate was Sir Lenny Henry, who's on hand here to cheerily trace the evolution of the OU from those rudimentary dead-of-night original transmissions through to more recent landmark series such as Blue Planet II. DAVID BROWN

Going the distance

The Fighter ★★★★★

9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW
Many people know that Robert De Niro readied for Raging Bull by sparring with the film's subject, boxing champ Jake La Motta. But Mark Wahlberg took his prep one step further to play "Irish" Micky Ward in The Fighter. The project took four-and-a-half years to reach the screen, during which time Wahlberg stuck to a strict training regimen. As well as training with the real Ward and his former coach Dicky Eklund (played in the film by Christian Bale), Wahlberg also insisted on facing real fighters on screen. ELLIE PORTER

New to Netflix today

Baywatch ★★★ Netflix

The bodies hit the beach in this self-aware action comedy that sees devoted lifeguard Dwayne Johnson and his cocky new recruit Zac Efron put aside their differences to uncover a murderous plot. Slow running, swimsuits, melodrama... this feature update of the wildly popular 1990s TV show knows exactly where the strengths, and weaknesses, of its source material lie. It's not the height of sophistication, but then neither was its predecessor, and everything is done with tongue planted firmly in cheek. JAMES LUXFORD

Ghoul to the rescue

The Dark ★★★

10.00pm Sky Premiere
In this undead tweak to Let the Right One In, a unique odd-couple relationship develops between kidnap victim Alex (Toby Nichols) and snarling ghoulish Mina (Nadia Alexander). But Justin P Lange's debut feature is no mere "monster in the woods" gorefest: it's a tale of two damaged souls regaining their humanity. JEREMY ASPINALL

BISHOP'S MOVE
John enjoys a pint with Gaelic footballer Lee Keegan

PICK OF THE DAY John Bishop's Ireland 8.00pm ITV (not N Ireland; not STV or Border Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY New series "I just feel better when I'm in Ireland," says John Bishop as he tries to explain why he loves the country so much. An enjoyable hybrid of celebrity travelogue and stand-up comedy, this series follows him as he visits various Irish towns, talks to some local characters and then does a gig in pubs and stadiums for a generally appreciative audience.

He starts in Dublin last August on "the day that all Ireland comes to a standstill", the final of the All-Ireland Senior Football Championship in Gaelic football, a sport he describes as "a mixture of football, rugby and GBH".

Then it's off to the rebel city of Cork, where he learns about faeries and meets an American comedian with the same surname (I'm not sure what the point of this encounter was other than to demonstrate that Gaelic is a tricky tongue to master) and a fishmonger who made the Queen laugh. This is nowhere near as thrilling as Bishop's 2014 BBC series about Australia, but his easy-going, slightly blokey humour will raise a few smiles. JANE RACKHAM

The Bletchley Circle: San Francisco

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA If it wasn't for the hidden stash of heroin, I'd readily believe that this was a hitherto undiscovered story written by Enid Blyton. The Clever Code-Breakers, perhaps? It's full of cyphers, messages scrawled in lipstick on mirrors and a secret location given away by the sound of seagulls on a telephone line.

Tonight's set-up will be one familiar to crime drama fans: a bloodied stranger collapses on Millie and Jean's doorstep. The problem is that the subsequent mystery feels overly familiar too. In fact, most of the clues land with all the subtlety of an Enigma machine dropped from the second-storey window of a San Fran townhouse. DAVID BROWN

Cruising with Jane McDonald

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY I'm pretty sure this must be the first time the names Mick McManus and Giant Haystacks have been dropped in Kolkata. But then this is Jane McDonald and she is watching kushti wrestlers grappling in minuscule loincloths.

It's one of the early sights she gets in the first of a two-part India special that sees her taking a cruise along the Ganges. McDonald is in a more contemplative mood later, as she witnesses a candlelit ceremony and discovers a religion that's close to her heart. Oh, and the henna tattoos she gets on the ship offer a clue when it comes to the song she sings at the end. DAVID BROWN

Jamestown

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA Once again Hungary stands in for 17th-century Virginia as Bill Gallagher's melodrama of colonial life returns. Handsome Silas Sharrow (Stuart Martin) has now deserted the settlement to live with the nearby Pamunkey tribe of native Americans, which means he now goes bare-chested in every scene, if you please.

"An Englishman made painted beast!" scoffs the town marshal. "I see such a danger that we might all be swallowed by such darkling savagery." That's typical of the poetic dialogue that Gallagher gives his characters, but he piles the plot on, too, often based on the reliable equation that the men are gits and the women are smart, beautiful and hard done by. DAVID BUTCHER

The Looming Tower

9.30pm BBC2

DRAMA New series Could the events of 11 September 2001 have been avoided if the CIA and the FBI had worked together on al-Qaeda activity in the years beforehand? Based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning book by Lawrence Wright, this drama series looks at how opportunities were missed both on the ground and in Washington.

Peter Sarsgaard and a foul-mouthed Jeff Daniels play grouchy counterterrorism opposite numbers, with Tahar Rahim as the Lebanese-American FBI agent who spilled the beans about their failures in 2004. But we start in 1998, as an al-Qaeda computer drive is picked up by the CIA. It all makes for horribly gripping television. GILL CRAWFORD

I remember a male star of EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) once saying to me about people who leave the show: "Oh, they all want to go to Hollywood. But most of them end up back here at Borehamwood." And while this may be true of actor Robert Kazinsky (pictured), he's certainly racked up the screen credits while working in Los Angeles: True Blood, Brothers and Sisters, Pacific Rim – oh, and some small indie movie by the name of Captain Marvel. It's probably passed you by.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Yet despite making a success of things stateside, Kazinsky has still found time to revisit Walford, his character Sean Slater having been summoned by sister Stacey because their mum Jean is currently ill with cancer. He exited a decade ago, so this comeback has been long awaited by fans. And while this reappearance is only temporary, I'm hoping there's time enough for some touching scenes that explore the mother-son bond between Jean and Sean. DAVID BROWN

Sex Tape

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series This is billed as an innovative social experiment and invites couples suffering with relationship problems to rig their homes with cameras with the aim of uncovering uncomfortable truths and getting practical help.

However, there's no discernible process at play. Instead, three couples sit in a circle, assess each other's videos (with copious infrared footage of copulation) while a relationship expert chips in the odd helpful comment before they go on their merry way. An update at the end seems to suggest that the participants found the process helpful, but whether this is something that really needs to be televised is another matter.

Word Is Bond

10.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Hyperbole is not unusual in a documentary about rappers, but there are some truly astounding examples in this paean to the transformative effects of rap lyrics, including "MCs have spoken a new world into reality" and "I thought my way onto the Forbes list".

It has interesting things to say about the craft of rapping, the possible reasons it's not more highly regarded (beside the sometimes violent, misogynistic and homophobic lyrics), and why it's a great outlet for disadvantaged children who love language. It's all told in effusive style, plus there's a chance to hear highly respected rapper Rakim's first ever rhyme. It's about Mickey Mouse.

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

CHAT SHOW Comedian Seth Rogen is always good value so we're hopeful he'll have some good stories to tell about his latest movie, Long Shot, a romantic comedy with a political edge, when he shares the red sofa with co-star Charlize Theron tonight.

They're joined by Zac Efron, who will be talking about Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil and Vile, the controversial film about serial killer Ted Bundy. Certain audience members tend to squeal when Efron's on the show, but that might take the edge off their adoration. Lightning the mood a little is Matthew Broderick, who is making his West End debut next month in the bittersweet comedy drama The Starry Messenger. JR

from 10.00am BBC3; 11.25pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.55pm)

It's rivalling C4's Sex Tape for the most eyebrow-raising relationship show on the box tonight, but there's no gratuitous smut here. Couples attend counselling sessions to tackle sexual problems and they do frankly discuss what they are, yet the show's therapists are skilled at seeing through to the emotional issues underneath. That process is compelling.

BLUES LEGEND

John Lee Hooker's singular guitar style changed rock for ever

John Lee Hooker: the Boogie Man

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY All you really need for a half-decent John Lee Hooker documentary is plenty of the bluesman's incredible voice on the soundtrack and a few wheezing laughs from Keith Richards in between, singing the praises of his idol. This has plenty of both and charts Hooker's story with the help of biographer Charles Shaar Murray. Hooker was born in 1917 (or thereabouts – nobody knows) in Mississippi to a sharecropper family and only found fame, though not riches, in his 30s with his distinctive one-chord boogie style. It was, Richards observes, "relentless and very primal. But then, what ain't?" (cue wheezy laugh).

Other contributors include Van Morrison and Bonnie Raitt, who gives a great description of Hooker's biggest hit, Boom Boom: "That's testosterone really, through an amplifier." DAVID BUTCHER

Hannibal Linklater?

Everybody Wants Some!! ★★★★★

11.20pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Before production began on his feel-good 1980s-set college movie (review, p45), Richard Linklater gathered the dozen main cast together at his ranch for three weeks of bonding and rehearsal. They ended up calling him “Rick-apedia” because he knew everything about the culture of the period. “He’s intelligent in every way,” said Temple Baker (who plays Plummer). “He gets everyone,” agreed Blake Jenner (Jake). “He’s like the intellectual Hannibal Lecter.” TOM FOLLEY

Vigilante on wheels

The Equalizer 2 ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

Denzel Washington’s do-gooding ex-government spook Robert McCall returns, and is now working as a cab driver – the perfect way to overhear people’s problems. However, McCall’s past returns to haunt him after a friend falls victim to ruthless mystery men. Director Antoine Fuqua marshals the mayhem with aplomb, but it’s Washington’s cool class and charisma that adds dramatic heft to the violent action, whether it’s felling pursuers during a hurricane or saving a young neighbour from the gangsta life. JEREMY ASPINALL

Danse macabre

Suspiria ★★

Amazon Prime

Director Luca Guadagnino follows his acclaimed Call Me by Your Name with this remake of Dario Argento’s 1976 horror. Dakota Johnson (right) stars as the dance ingenue whose new school turns out to be the cover for a witches coven. It’s as confused as it is confusing, but look out for Tilda Swinton in multiple roles. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Something to believe in

It's the end of an era for Something Understood, but presenter Mark Tully is still asking life's biggest questions

Something Understood

Easter Day 6.05am, 11.30pm Radio 4

ONE MORNING SOME years ago Mark Tully was attending a church service in Edinburgh when a woman in the congregation came up and spoke to him. It was the first time she'd felt able to attend a church service since her husband had died, she told him. What had made the difference was the edition of Radio 4's Something Understood – Tully's Sunday-morning exploration of spiritual ideas – that she'd just listened to.

"That meant a lot to me," Tully says. "What I hope people take from the programme is both an interest in the questions we raise and also that it might help them in their lives."

The woman was lucky with her timing. Tully is one of the true greats of the BBC, a voice people have been listening to since the 1960s, but he has been based in India almost his entire career and only makes periodic visits to the UK. For decades he was the BBC's India correspondent. He quit the job in 1994, launching Something Understood a year later. Now 83, he has remained in New Delhi throughout.

Something Understood is Tully in his element. He studied theology at Cambridge and nearly entered the priesthood, and the programme satisfies his yearning to ask the biggest questions of all. Why are we here? What's it all about?

Readings and passages of music embellish the half-hour, and lovers of the programme find it a huge source of both consolation and stimulation. But, Tully is keen to stress, "I try not to take the programme too seriously, or myself too seriously. I'm not a latter-day Billy Graham."

Right now, however, is a time of sadness for Tully. The edition of Something Understood that goes out on Easter Day will be the last that Tully or anyone else will ever record. Repeats of the show will continue to be broadcast, but after 24 years, cost-cutting has put paid to any more original programmes.

"I feel sad for myself," Tully says, "I feel sad for everyone behind the programme, and I feel sad because I know a lot of listeners like it. They say two things to me about it: that there is nothing else like it on the radio, and that this is what radio should be all about. And I think that's true. I think the BBC is underestimating the asset that it has."

India has had a huge influence on Tully's thinking. "I still cling to Christianity and identify myself as a Christian, but living here with so many religions all around me I no longer believe that Christianity is the only way to God. I've learnt the concept of balance, of not taking anything too far, of recognising that there are very few things that are absolutely certain in this life. So one must not behave as if one is always right – as if one has found the answer. One should always be open to dialogue and discussion and learning."

The world isn't really going that way though, is it? "No, it isn't. I think that the world is going through a very tumultuous, dangerous period. We're getting leaders who are very certain they have the answer, who forget that the world is made up of a few very privileged people and very many people who are very underprivileged.

"We've been swept off our feet by consumerism and it's inspired by greed. If it weren't for being greedy we wouldn't be consumerists. There is no religion I know that teaches that greed is good."

But aren't we still concerned with how we live? Aren't we still looking for meaning in our lives? "There are things like mindfulness, that's true. And over the years we've explored the mindfulness movement in the programme. At the same time, I do find it strange even with my own children and grandchildren that the big questions of life that religion attempts to answer don't seem to be as uppermost in their minds as they were in mine and my friends' minds when I was young. They don't spend time like we did in the 1960s arguing about the existence of God."

IASK ONE OF the longtime producers of Something Understood, Frank Stirling, about Tully, with whom he has worked from the beginning. "The thing about Mark is that he's a very good listener," is Stirling's verdict. "He is open to ideas he hasn't come across before. He wears his own religious beliefs very lightly."

Stirling discovered what a big figure Tully is in India when he spent time with him there two years ago making a radio documentary marking the 70th anniversary of Partition. "Mark loves to travel, but we couldn't walk down the street without people coming up to him, wanting to talk to him."

Stirling and Tully have worked together on the last new Something Understood. It takes as its theme the final line of East Coker, from TS Eliot's Four Quartets: "In my end is my beginning". The readings will be typically diverse, ranging from Vera Brittain to the Bengali poet Rabindranath Tagore; likewise the music, which ranges from Berlioz to the New York-born Puerto Rican trumpeter Willie Colon.

Meanwhile, Tully is applying Eliot's idea to his own life. "Eliot talks about the need for old men to explore, so I suppose I will have to explore, and see what this end could be the beginning of."

PICK OF THE WEEK

All in the Mind

Tuesday 9.00pm Radio 4

Many people think of professional footballers as living the dream – the fame, the glory, the money, all of it the result of doing something they love. But to hear the ex-player Clarke Carlisle (right) describing his experiences is to have that illusion shattered.

In 2017, the public got to know about Carlisle's mental-health problems when – suicidal – he went missing. Now he campaigns for greater awareness of what can befall people – not just professional sportsmen and women – and in this opening edition of a new series of All in the Mind, he talks with candour and eloquence about the depths to which he sank and how he turned his life around.

The interviewer is All in the Mind presenter Claudia Hammond and the recording takes place in front of a live audience of BBC staff in Salford. It's a riveting half-hour, not least for the contribution made by Carlisle's wife Carrie, who is a really amazing-sounding person.

"My whole identity was tied up with football," Carlisle explains. "Football managed to mask a lot of ills because it gave me huge highs on a regular basis – the endorphin rush of just walking out on to the pitch to the roar of 30,000 people."

Carlisle got a taste of what it was like to lose that identity when he was only 21 and suffered a career-threatening injury. He recovered, but when he retired – after 16 years in the game in which he made 470 league appearances for clubs including Queens Park Rangers, Leeds United and Watford – it happened again.

This is football – and life – as it is rarely seen.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Has the Lower Loxley curse been lifted? Things are definitely looking up, what with the Easter event and Elizabeth's birthday tea. But uh-oh, what's this? An unfortunate fate looks set to befall the Easter bunny – who will step into the breach, and how will Elizabeth react?

Natasha is concerned to find herself suddenly related to half of Ambridge, and makes a friend in Emma. But tension continues to brew between the newlyweds as Natasha is summoned to an uncomfortable encounter with Peggy, while Tom ends up putting his foot in it, with disastrous consequences.

Elsewhere, Shula opens up about her crisis of faith and an old mystery rears its head when there's a shocking discovery. DAVID BROWN

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Hell is other people ...especially when they're watching films

THERE ARE CERTAIN things people in showbusiness must never do. Say anything bad about Oprah. Disagree with Dame Helen Mirren. Criticise either of the Lorraine Kellys. I hope we're both clutching our pearls at this moment because I'm about to breach one of those sacred rules.

Don't worry, I'm not about to diss Scotland's finest. Mainly because I'm full of admiration for the Lorraines but also because I once saw her win a bar fight without looking up from her Racing Post or spilling her pint.

However – brace yourself – I am, respectfully, graciously and with all due deference, going to take issue with something Dame Helen has said. I hope she's not a friend of the Lorraines or I'm going to be eating through a straw.

As showbiz bible Variety reported: "Esteemed actress Helen Mirren knows how to get a crowd of movie theatre owners going – by hurling obscenities at their streaming competitors. 'I love Netflix, but f— Netflix!' Mirren cheered onstage at CinemaCon, the annual convention of movie exhibitors... She was met with thunderous applause... Mirren continued to preach to the choir, saying, 'There's nothing like sitting in the cinema.'

I'd love to agree with Dame Helen about the cinema experience, not least because cinemas have raised their game. Faced with competition from streamers, the internet, phone screens, tablet screens and laptop screens, the biggest screens of all are bigger and sharper than ever. The sound is clearer; the seats more luxurious. There are some splendid settings to luxuriate in the artistic endeavours of film-makers. Why they still sell noisy sweets in the foyer continues to be a bugbear, but I could let that pass.

No, for me, the biggest obstacle to enjoying the cinema experience is other people.

I went to see the Netflix-funded film Roma at a cinema at the time of its simultaneous release on the small screen. The director, Alfonso Cuarón, advised that "the complete experience of Roma is unquestionably in a movie theatre". It was a stunning cinema experience... or it would have been were it not for the middle-class, middle-aged couples who whispered to each other throughout the film. All around me, there was "Alice went there on holiday!"; "Oh my God, I can't believe she did that" and "Who is that balding git who keeps telling us to shush?"

These were supposed film-lovers, paying to see an art-house release, but they could not stop blabbing. I had a similar experience in the Regent Street Cinema in London – a shrine for film-lovers – where a man next to me was tapping on his phone screen. When I asked him to stop, he advised me this was his personal space and he had urgent business to do online. I'm told it took the doctors five hours to remove the device from his oesophagus.

FOR MORE THAN 100 years, the financial success of the movie business has been tied to getting bums on seats. Complex film distribution deals are a vital factor in every movie's bottom line. You couldn't make money in films without cinemas. Now it seems, maybe you can. I wonder whether giant cinema complexes will go the same way as giant shopping malls: temples built for a now outmoded way of doing business. I'd hate to see them go.

A real page-turner of a podcast

There are lots of book programmes on the radio. There are plenty of book podcasts out there as well. The one I like best is Backlisted – a labour of love, as opposed to a commission from BBC Sounds. It's done by people who would probably be talking about the same books with the same people had podcasting never been invented. The people are John Mitchinson and Andy Miller, two old salts of the publishing world, the kind who don't so much read as re-read, and probably smell like libraries.

The art of reading

Every week they invite a mate to choose a book that was once popular and is no longer fashionable. This might be a former bestseller like To Serve Them All My Days by RF Delderfield, a tangential read like The Fatal Englishman by Sebastian Faulks or, recently, Imogen by Jilly Cooper (right). I thought I was quite the reader until I listened to Backlisted. Now I have to ration myself to listening to Backlisted only occasionally because I find exposure to even one episode makes me determined to read the book they're talking about. In fact it's not so much about books as about reading, which is more interesting. How do serious readers do all that reading? Do they make marks in the margins? Do they ever give up? How come they don't have to wait until once a year when they're on a sunbed to start a book? Which bits make them laugh out loud?

You're among friends

The other thing Backlisted has in common with my other favourite podcasts, such as The Football Ramble and Pod Save America, is you're so clearly among friends. They haven't been assembled by a producer looking to fill a quota. They're amateurish in the original spirit of the word. They do it for love. Long may they flourish.

A salutary reminder

Radio 4's PM and reporter Andrew Bomford are to be congratulated on Anatomy of a Stabbing, which ran in 15-minute episodes within PM over a week and is still worth catching up with online. It's an attempt to understand what led to the fatal stabbing of JJ McPhillips, one of hundreds of young Londoners who went out one night and didn't come back. It's also a salutary reminder that people from outside London who make airy remarks about what people in Islington are thinking really don't know which Islington they're talking about.

Today's Choices

Opera on 3 from the Met

6.30pm Radio 3
Mozart's penultimate opera, La clemenza di Tito was long dismissed as a stylistic throwback and a piece of hackwork hurriedly composed to grace a royal occasion – the Holy Roman Emperor Leopold II's coronation as King of Bohemia. But it's now enjoying a comeback, increasingly admired as a radical experiment in reforming the old opera seria and also, in its celebration of an enlightened monarch who dispenses mercy rather than revenge, as a bold example of an artist daring to speak truth to power. In tonight's Met broadcast, the magnanimous Roman emperor Titus is sung by tenor Matthew Polenzani, while the role of Sextus – the best friend who betrays him out of sexual enslavement to the ruthlessly ambitious Vitellia – is taken by star American mezzo Joyce DiDonato (above).

7.05pm BBC World Service
Produced in collaboration with the Wellcome Collection, The Evidence arrived last year to discuss major topics about health and the way we live today. The second series kicks off with a visit to Hong Kong to discover what might be done to prevent epidemics. Plague swept the city in the 19th century and Sars was devastating here in 2003. Those appearing include Malik Peiris, who discovered the Sars virus, and Vivian Taam Wong, who ran hospitals during the outbreak. Presenter Claudia Hammond addresses a particularly worrying threat to public health: are we losing faith in so-called experts?

EASTER DAY

Today's Choices

Good Morning Sunday

6.00am Radio 2
Co-presenters Kate Bottley (see feature, page 10) and Jason Mohammad will be pulling more than one Easter Bunny out of the Good Morning Sunday hat today, what with a live appearance by Justin Welby, the Archbishop of Canterbury, to offer his thoughts upon the meaning of Easter; some specially recorded songs from the award-winning Soweto Gospel Choir (above); a trayful of tasty Easter treats courtesy of Great British Bake Off contestant Martha Collison; and the official launch of Radio 2's Young Choristers of the Year Competition.

MARK PAPPENHEIM

Cameron Mackintosh on Sunday

1.00pm Radio 2
The website Theatre Monkey pulled a corker of an April Fool this year when it "revealed" that Cameron Mackintosh was to open a Les Misérables-themed restaurant in London. Given his ubiquity in theatreland over nearly 50 years (uber producer, venue owner), it was all very believable. What Mackintosh is now genuinely adding to his CV is radio presenter as he sits in for Elaine Paige, playing songs from shows that inspired him – among them Salad Days, Oklahoma!, The Music Man and Oliver! – and giving an insight into the creative process behind his West End hits such as Mary Poppins. That show returns later this year with Cameron playing the role of Bert (no, not really!). TONY PETERS

7.30 Drama on 3: The Two Gentlemen of Verona

Adaptation by Sara Davies of Shakespeare's comedy, paired next week with a production of The Two Noble Kinsmen. Director Celia De Wolff was keen to present the two plays together as they share common themes of men and women falling for the same lover, cunning disguises and betrayal within friendships. She has recorded both productions entirely on location in the Sussex countryside with the same band of actors giving a sense that they are being presented by a group of strolling players.

Today's Choices

The Classic FM Hall of Fame 2019

9.00am Classic FM

Voting opened on Monday 14 January and closed at one second to midnight on Sunday 24 March. Since then, Classic FM has compiled its listeners' personal choices of their three favourite pieces of music into what constitutes the biggest annual survey of the nation's classical musical tastes. From 9am to 9pm each day of this Easter long weekend, a four-strong team of presenters has been counting down through the 300 pieces that make up this year's Classic FM Hall of Fame, and today it falls to John Suchet (above) to announce the number one just before 9pm. Will Tchaikovsky's triumphant 1812 Overture defend its 2018 title or will Vaughan Williams's high-flying The Lark Ascending perhaps swoop up to seize the top spot? MARK PAPPENHEIM

Mastertapes on Tour: Richard Hawley at the Crucible

11.00pm Radio 4

Richard Hawley is a musician's musician; from Elbow to Arctic Monkeys his rich, Scott Walker-infused baritone has influenced some of the best British bands of the past 20 years. The one-time Pulp guitarist's solo work is packed with allusions to his native Sheffield, and this Mastertapes special finds host John Wilson taking a stroll to the city's Crucible Theatre, where Hawley reminisces and plays a selection of songs from a 33-year career that ranges from Britpop to his first musical, Standing at the Sky's Edge. Tonight the streets of Sheffield are his and the pleasure is ours. TOM GOULDING

In 1741 Handel left London for Dublin, where he spent nearly nine months writing and performing in the city. The main work that he premiered there was a new oratorio, which proved to be one of the landmarks of his career. Across the week the whole of Handel's Messiah is played, uncovering the secrets of its origins and dispelling the myths that still surround it. This first programme paints a picture of Handel's life in London as he prepared to leave for Ireland. Hallelujah Chorus (Messiah) Huddersfield Choral Society, Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra, conductor Malcolm Sargent

activists, scientists and politicians worked tirelessly to safeguard the environment, but to no avail; the world came tantalisingly close to signing binding treaties that could have made a difference. Abridged by Richard

Today's Choices

The Bubble

11.00am Radio 4

My goodness, we need more radio like this. Lydia Thomas's social experiment obliges journalist Joanna Fuertes (Labour) and parliamentary researcher Cameron Bradbury (Conservative) to spend two weeks reading each other's Twitter timelines. "We're unwilling to hear other people's views and opinions," declares Thomas. Is she right? Both guinea pigs record daily audio diaries that regularly express amazement at the reactions of people with whom they would normally have no interaction. After two weeks, Fuertes and Bradbury meet for the first time. Obviously I won't reveal what happens. Suffice it to say that my own preconceptions were challenged by both participants. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Word of Mouth

4.00pm Radio 4

At a moment when the future of Britain is in doubt, we can cling to one certainty; our strong and stable relationship with tea and biscuits. In this joyful half-hour, Michael Rosen and linguist Laura Wright munch and dunk their way through a variety of biscuits whose names have interesting origins, and they are joined by Anastasia Edwards, author of Biscuits and Cookies, a Global History. We used to spell our favourite snack "bisket" but in the 1800s, in order to seem sophisticated, we began to use a French spelling. "Poncey spelling shifts goods," says Edwards. I guess that's just the way the cookie crumbles. KASIA DELGADO

Shimmer and Dazzle: Seeing What Bridget Riley Sees

6.30am/8.30pm/1.30am
Radio 4 Extra

Now 87 and still working after a 70-year career, Bridget Riley (above, in 1979) is generally regarded as Britain's greatest living abstract artist. Inspired by Seurat and Pollock, she burst on to the art scene in the 1960s as a leading innovator of Op Art – black-and-white patterns that sometimes created optical illusions and appealed to the psychedelic generation. Her work was so influential that her designs were being used without her permission for clothes, even while her first pieces were being shown in New York. At the Venice Biennale in 1968 she became the first Brit to be awarded the International Prize for painting. First heard in 2010, this programme anticipates a major Riley retrospective at London's Hayward Gallery this autumn.

Free Thinking

10.00pm Radio 3

Joy, as we learn from tonight's discussion from this year's Free Thinking Festival, is not what we might have thought. Spinoza pointed out in the 17th century that joy derives largely from the unexpected. Today it's seen as an antiquated emotion, associated with religious or sporting gatherings, but it can have a menacing quality. The debate ranges widely, and the smiley-face emoji pops up to represent changing attitudes. But surely joy also derives from art and entertainment? It's never mentioned and despite presenter Rana Mitter's jokes, this programme is somewhat joyless. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

3/5. To the Hibernian Shore. Today, Donald Macleod and his guest Ruth Smith follow Handel as his packet boat docks in Dublin, and he sets about organising his much anticipated concert series. His organ was shipped over with him, and such was demand and curiosity that Handel conceded to hold open rehearsals. The programme looks at the crowd-pulling singers he "formed" and the other scores in his suitcase that would whet the public's appetite before the Messiah's great unveiling.

Drama: My Friend, Marie Antoinette

2.15pm Radio 4

Carine Adler's period drama immerses us in the febrile atmosphere of France in 1793, a time of revolutionary vigour and the horror of the guillotine. The king is dead, while his doomed queen, Marie Antoinette (above), languishes in a filthy prison cell. Her only solace is 19-year-old attendant Rosalie, with whom she begins to bond. As Rosalie's preconceived ideas are challenged – should she feel sorry for such a despised figure? – we too may be persuaded to care. After all, the queen is frail yet friendly, charming even, without a glimpse of hauteur. But her time is running out... In this affecting, well-told piece, the theme of crossing a rigid class divide is writ large, but the crux of the story is the unfolding scenario of two disparate women spurring each other on to face life's iniquities. CHRIS GARDNER

The Full Works Concert

8.00pm Classic FM

Following the unveiling of the new Classic FM Hall of Fame over the Easter weekend, Catherine Bott presents the first of two Full Works concerts surveying the new chart and showcasing some of the all-time favourites such as Mozart's Marriage of Figaro overture and Tchaikovsky's Pathétique Symphony – alongside some perhaps surprising new entries, including Beethoven's early Serenade in D major for string trio, the suite from the Chopin-based ballet Les Sylphides and a medley from Ramin Djawadi's soundtrack for TV's Game of Thrones.

4/5. The Sublime, the Grand and the Tender
Donald Macleod and Ruth Smith continue an exploration of the origins of Handel's Messiah with its triumphant premiere in April 1742 in Dublin, revealing how the audiences were encouraged to come without swords and skirt hoops in order to fit in the vast crowds that were expected. By the second day, panes of glass were removed to cool the hordes of concertgoers. Such performances were tied to charity, and Handel was a prolific benefactor. But his Messiah would be more coolly received in London.

Friday Night Is Music Night

8.00pm Radio 2
In a big-band edition of FNIMN from Billingham, Co Durham, Joe Stilgoe and his Big Band Bonanza! showcase arrangements of classic hits by the likes of Buddy Rich, Nelson Riddle, Count Basie and Glenn Miller; the BBC Big Band and conductor Chris Egan are joined by septuagenarian jazz singing legend Madeline Bell (above); and up-and-coming young British singer-pianist Anthony Strong, with Joe and Anthony battling it out on two keyboards in a big-band medley for duelling pianos. In amongst the music, which includes such classics as Too Close for Comfort, Mack the Knife, Ain't Misbehavin' and Something's Gotta Give, Joe also pays tribute to great British singer-songwriter-pianist Peter Skellern, who died last year.

11.00am Radio 4
In a febrile political age, fuelled by social media, the BBC has felt the heat as possibly never before – guilty, in its accusers' eyes, of failing to reflect the full spectrum of opinion over not just Brexit but such culture-wars issues as transgenderism. With the BBC due to publish a new set of editorial guidelines in June (the first since 2010), Jonathan Coffey explores the idea of impartiality and whether any sort of consensus around it is possible. Contributors include the Spectator columnist Rod Liddle, the BBC's director of editorial and policy standards David Jordan, and Kerry-Anne Mendoza, the editor of online media outlet The Canary.

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Kyle Walker BBC Radio Manchester

Age 26

Current job Presenter since last September of the Thursday evening edition of The Dead Good Show (7.00–10.00pm) on

BBC Radio Manchester, with a panel of three local voices each week, discussing everything from Brexit to Love Island, plus guests from the Manchester cultural scene.

CV Grew up in the Fallowfield area of Manchester. He did theatre studies at the Academy of Live and Recorded Arts (ALRA) in Wigan, joining BBC Radio Manchester after work as a presenter at Manchester City FC events.

Best moment "My first BBC Radio Manchester show. Just the whole experience – the demos, the practice and then the moment of going live on air. And my mum texting me to tell me it was really good."

Worst moment "Introducing an ex-player at Manchester City in front of 8,000 people and reading out the wrong name. The guest order on the cue card had been changed. It was the longest ten seconds of my life..."

Off air "I house-share with two friends from ALRA, quite close to MediaCityUK where Radio Manchester broadcasts from. I'm a season-ticket holder at Man City and a massive fan."

First radio memory "Radio 1 as I was getting ready to go to school. And listening to Simon "Nicksy" Nicks, a DJ on Galaxy Radio. The radio was always on when I was growing up."

Favourite broadcasters "My colleague Mike Sweeney – he's a proper Manc, and he's really encouraged me. And Reggie Yates. He speaks for the people. He's just so human."

Ambition "It sounds simple but it's just to keep working. I'd like to get on to national radio – Radio 1 or 1Xtra."

Dream job "The kid in me still thinks I'm going to play for Manchester City. I'd also like to be the first black actor to play James Bond but I think Idris Elba might get there before me!"

Secret skills "I'm a good trampolinist. It wasn't the coolest thing to learn but I stuck at it." SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Kyle Walker BBC Radio Manchester

Age 26
Current job Presenter since last September of the Thursday evening edition of The Dead Good Show (7.00–10.00pm) on BBC Radio Manchester, with a panel of three local voices each week, discussing everything from Brexit to Love Island, plus guests from the Manchester cultural scene.

CV Grew up in the Fallowfield area of Manchester. He did theatre studies at the Academy of Live and Recorded Arts (ALRA) in Wigan, joining BBC Radio Manchester after work as a presenter at Manchester City FC events.

Best moment "My first BBC Radio Manchester show. Just the whole experience – the demos, the practice and then the moment of going live on air. And my mum texting me to tell me it was really good."

Worst moment "Introducing an ex-player at Manchester City in front of 8,000 people and reading out the wrong name. The guest order on the cue card had been changed. It was the longest ten seconds of my life..."

Off air "I house-share with two friends from ALRA, quite close to MediaCityUK where Radio Manchester broadcasts from. I'm a season-ticket holder at Man City and a massive fan."

First radio memory "Radio 1 as I was getting ready to go to school. And listening to Simon "Nicksy" Nicks, a DJ on Galaxy Radio. The radio was always on when I was growing up."

Favourite broadcasters "My colleague Mike Sweeney – he's a proper Manc, and he's really encouraged me. And Reggie Yates. He speaks for the people. He's just so human."

Ambition "It sounds simple but it's just to keep working. I'd like to get on to national radio – Radio 1 or 1Xtra."

Dream job "The kid in me still thinks I'm going to play for Manchester City. I'd also like to be the first black actor to play James Bond but I think Idris Elba might get there before me!"

Secret skills "I'm a good trampolinist. It wasn't the coolest thing to learn but I stuck at it." SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Kyle Walker BBC Radio Manchester

Age 26

Current job Presenter since last September of the Thursday evening edition of The Dead Good Show (7.00–10.00pm) on

BBC Radio Manchester, with a panel of three local voices each week, discussing everything from Brexit to Love Island, plus guests from the Manchester cultural scene.

CV Grew up in the Fallowfield area of Manchester. He did theatre studies at the Academy of Live and Recorded Arts (ALRA) in Wigan, joining BBC Radio Manchester after work as a presenter at Manchester City FC events.

Best moment "My first BBC Radio Manchester show. Just the whole experience – the demos, the practice and then the moment of going live on air. And my mum texting me to tell me it was really good."

Worst moment "Introducing an ex-player at Manchester City in front of 8,000 people and reading out the wrong name. The guest order on the cue card had been changed. It was the longest ten seconds of my life..."

Off air "I house-share with two friends from ALRA, quite close to MediaCityUK where Radio Manchester broadcasts from. I'm a season-ticket holder at Man City and a massive fan."
First radio memory "Radio 1 as I was getting ready to go to school. And listening to Simon "Nicksy" Nicks, a DJ on Galaxy Radio. The radio was always on when I was growing up."

Favourite broadcasters "My colleague Mike Sweeney – he's a proper Manc, and he's really encouraged me. And Reggie Yates. He speaks for the people. He's just so human."

Ambition "It sounds simple but it's just to keep working. I'd like to get on to national radio – Radio 1 or 1Xtra."

Dream job "The kid in me still thinks I'm going to play for Manchester City. I'd also like to be the first black actor to play James Bond but I think Idris Elba might get there before me!"

Secret skills "I'm a good trampolinist. It wasn't the coolest thing to learn but I stuck at it." SIMON O'HAGAN

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Kyle Walker BBC Radio Manchester

Age 26

Current job Presenter since last September of the Thursday evening edition of The Dead Good Show (7.00–10.00pm) on

BBC Radio Manchester, with a panel of three local voices each week, discussing everything from Brexit to Love Island, plus guests from the Manchester cultural scene.

CV Grew up in the Fallowfield area of Manchester. He did theatre studies at the Academy of Live and Recorded Arts (ALRA) in Wigan, joining BBC Radio Manchester after work as a presenter at Manchester City FC events.

Best moment "My first BBC Radio Manchester show. Just the whole experience – the demos, the practice and then the moment of going live on air. And my mum texting me to tell me it was really good."

Worst moment "Introducing an ex-player at Manchester City in front of 8,000 people and reading out the wrong name. The guest order on the cue card had been changed. It was the longest ten seconds of my life..."

Off air "I house-share with two friends from ALRA, quite close to MediaCityUK where Radio Manchester broadcasts from. I'm a season-ticket holder at Man City and a massive fan."

First radio memory "Radio 1 as I was getting ready to go to school. And listening to Simon "Nicksy" Nicks, a DJ on Galaxy Radio. The radio was always on when I was growing up."

Favourite broadcasters "My colleague Mike Sweeney – he's a proper Manc, and he's really encouraged me. And Reggie Yates. He speaks for the people. He's just so human."

Ambition "It sounds simple but it's just to keep working. I'd like to get on to national radio – Radio 1 or 1Xtra."

Dream job "The kid in me still thinks I'm going to play for Manchester City. I'd also like to be the first black actor to play James Bond but I think Idris Elba might get there before me!"

Secret skills "I'm a good trampolinist. It wasn't the coolest thing to learn but I stuck at it." SIMON O'HAGAN

Face behind the voice

Kyle Walker BBC Radio Manchester

Age 26

Current job Presenter since last September of the Thursday evening edition of The Dead Good Show (7.00–10.00pm) on

BBC Radio Manchester, with a panel of three local voices each week, discussing everything from Brexit to Love Island, plus guests from the Manchester cultural scene.

CV Grew up in the Fallowfield area of Manchester. He did theatre studies at the Academy of Live and Recorded Arts (ALRA) in Wigan, joining BBC Radio Manchester after work as a presenter at Manchester City FC events.

Best moment “My first BBC Radio Manchester show. Just the whole experience – the demos, the practice and then the moment of going live on air. And my mum texting me to tell me it was really good.”

Worst moment “Introducing an ex-player at Manchester City in front of 8,000 people and reading out the wrong name. The guest order on the cue card had been changed. It was the longest ten seconds of my life...”

Off air “I house-share with two friends from ALRA, quite close to MediaCityUK where Radio Manchester broadcasts from. I’m a season-ticket holder at Man City and a massive fan.”

First radio memory “Radio 1 as I was getting ready to go to school. And listening to Simon “Nicksy” Nicks, a DJ on Galaxy Radio. The radio was always on when I was growing up.”

Favourite broadcasters “My colleague Mike Sweeney – he’s a proper Manc, and he’s really encouraged me. And Reggie Yates. He speaks for the people. He’s just so human.”

Ambition “It sounds simple but it’s just to keep working. I’d like to get on to national radio – Radio 1 or 1Xtra.”

Face behind the voice

Kyle Walker BBC Radio Manchester

Age 26

Current job Presenter since last September of the Thursday evening edition of The Dead Good Show (7.00–10.00pm) on

BBC Radio Manchester, with a panel of three local voices each week, discussing everything from Brexit to Love Island, plus guests from the Manchester cultural scene.

CV Grew up in the Fallowfield area of Manchester. He did theatre studies at the Academy of Live and Recorded Arts (ALRA) in Wigan, joining BBC Radio Manchester after work as a presenter at Manchester City FC events.

Best moment "My first BBC Radio Manchester show. Just the whole experience – the demos, the practice and then the moment of going live on air. And my mum texting me to tell me it was really good."

Worst moment "Introducing an ex-player at Manchester City in front of 8,000 people and reading out the wrong name. The guest order on the cue card had been changed. It was the longest ten seconds of my life..."

Off air "I house-share with two friends from ALRA, quite close to MediaCityUK where Radio Manchester broadcasts from. I'm a season-ticket holder at Man City and a massive fan."

First radio memory "Radio 1 as I was getting ready to go to school. And listening to Simon "Nicksy" Nicks, a DJ on Galaxy Radio. The radio was always on when I was growing up."

Favourite broadcasters "My colleague Mike Sweeney – he's a proper Manc, and he's really encouraged me. And Reggie Yates. He speaks for the people. He's just so human."

Ambition "It sounds simple but it's just to keep working. I'd like to get on to national radio – Radio 1 or 1Xtra."

Dream job "The kid in me still thinks I'm going to play for Manchester City. I'd also like to be the first black actor to play James Bond but I think Idris Elba might get there before me!"

Secret skills "I'm a good trampolinist. It wasn't the coolest thing to learn but I stuck at it." SIMON O'HAGAN

URGENT: EMERGENCY ORANGUTAN APPEAL

Driven from their home in the forest by encroaching palm oil plantations, Peni and her mother entered a village in a desperate search for food.

Instead they were viciously attacked by an angry mob.

As Peni's mother fought to protect her baby, she was beaten, bound and held down in a pool of water.

Every year thousands of orangutans die when their forest home is cut down and set on fire.

And every day International Animal Rescue is fighting to save them before their time runs out.

Please help us save stranded and starving orangutans and protect the precious Bornean rainforest that is vital to their survival.

RENTING IN RETIREMENT

Following a growth in demand for flexible retirement living, Renaissance Retirement is pleased to offer a rental service to prospective owners. As well as offering flexibility, renting can also benefit people who want a hassle-free route to right-sizing and prevents the need to sell an asset, such as the family home.

Renting also gives owners a great chance to try before they buy. With Renaissance Retirement's Rent to Buy, renters have the option to move in and experience all the benefits and lifestyle the development has to offer. If they choose to buy their apartment within the initial six months of your tenancy agreement, Renaissance will refund your rental fees, minus the service charge and any rental payment fees paid during this time.

Security is most important to Renaissance' owners, but we only offer assured tenancies. These give the legal right to live in the accommodation for a period of time - so you will have strong tenancy rights. Tenancies can also be for a set period, such as twelve months, providing you with a flexible but secure route to retirement living.

A new book argues that we knew all about climate change 40 years ago – and still did nothing

Book of the Week: Losing Earth
Monday-Friday 9.45am, 12.30am Radio 4

THE OPENING SENTENCES of Nathaniel Rich's sobering book are blunt: "Nearly everything we understand about global warming was understood in 1979. It was, if anything, better understood." Scientists knew then that the world had warmed by one degree since the industrial revolution, and that the projected further degree of warming within the next century risked a catastrophic rise in sea levels and desertification leading to starvation, migration and war. What's more, the technology existed to get the global warming under control within ten years.

Over 200 terse pages Rich shows how, in the four decades since, governments and complacent populations have gone from wringing their hands to crossing their fingers to covering their ears and, finally, to outright denial, actively parroting the disinformation of the fossil fuel lobby. The world now faces a potential rise of up to six degrees, and Rich writes that "beyond an increase of five degrees we face the prospect of civilizational death. It is difficult to look at this fact squarely and not flinch."

'We are all complicit and we are all connected to this'

Rich, a novelist and writer at large for the New York Times magazine, tells the US side of the story, because America was not only the biggest per capita emitter of carbon dioxide among the major nations in 1979, but arguably the only one that had the technological and political clout to take a lead on the issue. He frames his story – originally published across an entire issue – as a dramatic narrative, having become irritated with the knee-jerk cycle of outrage followed by apathy whenever a new environmental atrocity was reported: "I felt there was frankly a need to grapple with this issue in a more profound and moral way."

Rich's protagonists are Rafe Pomerance, a Friends of the Earth activist, and Jim Hansen, a down-to-earth Nasa climate scientist, leaders of a small group that in his words "pushed the issue from the obscure reaches of academia and federal science institutions, ultimately to the highest levels of global international diplomacy". The book has a three-act structure. First, Pomerance, Hansen and their fellows "become aware of the problem and terrified of it, and think that communicating it to people in power in Washington will be enough". This period begins under an open-minded Jimmy Carter and ends in 1983 when Ronald Reagan's coal-set internationally binding carbon targets, but it was never submitted to Congress for ratification. Indeed, the Senate voted on a presumptive resolution declaring its opposition to the Kyoto treaty, which passed 95-0.

But Rich says it's no use crying out that Obama, Clinton, the Bushes or Reagan knew that they were setting fire to the future, that Exxon and the other oil companies knew. His point is that we ALL knew, and we all know. "We are all complicit and we have to understand that we are all connected to this," he says, "which is not to let the Republican party or the [fossil fuel] industry – which is sociopathic, or psychopathic perhaps – off the hook."

HEATED DEBATE
Heavy industry has contributed to global warming and the changing levels of ozone over the Antarctic (above)

WHAT GIVES HIM hope is the new generation of activists, embodied by the 16-year-old Swedish pioneer of school strikes against climate change Greta Thunberg, who are using moral and emotional arguments rather than logical ones. He is heartened by Democrat firebrand Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez's proposed Green New Deal, and by the pronouncements of the Pope on the issue. If we deny our place in the warming equation, we erode our humanity and our claims to morality as surely as we erode the glaciers, he writes.

Rich is not an outright pessimist: he and his wife live in Louisiana, where water levels are rising, and they have a two-year-old son with another baby due in July. He doubts there will be a sudden mobilisation towards renewable and nuclear energy that will keep warming below two per cent, but also doubts we will just let the earth burn. "I think it is very human to alternate between mindless dread and mindless hope," he says. "I work through these issues by reading and by writing, and I think there needs to be more introspection all round. Until we can have honest conversations with ourselves, I don't think we can have honest political conversations about it." NICK CURTIS friendly government decides global warming isn't an "immediate" problem.

Phase two sees Pomerance, Hansen and co try to bring the issue to public attention: their efforts get a huge boost in 1986/7 when British scientists discover a "hole" in the ozone layer. In 1988, during the hottest summer ever in America, Hansen testifies before Congress that global warming has already begun, and the need for a global emissions treaty is mooted. Grassroots movements demand action and governments worldwide promise it. George HW Bush makes leadership on climate change an issue in his successful presidential bid.

But in office, Bush appoints as his Chief of Staff John H Sununu, a former engineer and climate change sceptic. In 1989, Sununu is behind efforts to censor and in some cases change Hansen's testimony to a government subcommittee, leading a young senator called Al Gore to accuse the White House of "science fraud". At the 1989 Noordwijk summit in the Netherlands, Sununu, "with the acquiescence of Britain, Japan and the Soviet Union" forces the conference to abandon a commitment to freeze carbon emissions.

Lest liberals and Brits feel too smug, Rich believes Sununu was sincere in his doubts about climate science, that other nations including the UK had no intention of meeting their promised targets, and that Al Gore is not entirely a hero. But by the late 1980s the oil industry had already moved from investigation and mitigation of its culpability to the "moustache-twirling depravity" of outright disinformation, rendering the logical arguments of the increasingly dispirited Pomerance and Hansen ineffectual.

This, Rich sees as "the birth of this cancer that we now have, metastasised into fantastic dimensions, taking over the entire national dialogue". The polluters' propaganda is now the official policy of the Republican Party and the Trump White House. The intervening years, even those under Democrat presidents, have been a study in bad faith. Rich points out that the American delegation endorsed the 1997 Kyoto protocol to

MANY GARDENS HAVE permanently wet areas, boggy even, while others have clay-based soils that dry out in the summer and stay wet and claggy all winter long. In a sloping garden, areas set at the bottom may be permanently wet. Without spending lots of money, there's only so much you can do to increase drainage, such as adding grit/sharp sand and plenty of organic matter.

If you want to plant with confidence into a soil that is permanently wet, go for plants that positively thrive with moisture at their roots. There are plenty to choose from to make a lush, verdant and colourful garden – and once established, many can cope with both dry summers and wet winters.

Lawns grown on permanently wet soil will often end up more moss than grass, too, so it may be time to lose the high-maintenance grass and plant accordingly.

Let's start with dramatic foliage to get the ball rolling. Rheum palmatum (Chinese rhubarb) has large, deeply divided leaves and can grow to a height of 2m so is ideal for the back of a border. Ligularia "The Rocket" is another architectural beauty, with large, deeply toothed, heart-shaped leaves and the bonus of tall spires of yellow flowers on black stems in summer. They both do well with a little shade. My favourite fern for damp soils is the shuttlecock fern (Matteuccia struthiopteris), which has a graceful upright habit and fresh green fronds that unfurl to signify spring. They look best in drifts and reach an airy 1.5m.

FOR EARLY SUMMER colour, go for Iris sibirica. They'll grow to around 90cm, and delightful blooms hover above the slender foliage; choose from a range of colours, from intense blues and purples to lighter pastels. Come mid-summer, astringias are a must. They are clump-forming perennials for sun or semi-shade, with pincushion flowers and deeply lobed foliage. "Claret" (above) is my favourite – deep red flowers held on near-black stems. Hemerocallis (day lilies) love wet conditions – their flowers may only last a day but they keep coming all summer, making them good value. I like the spicy oranges and burgundies.

For late summer colour, Crocsmia (montbretia) has it all. Sprays of flowers burst out above slender, sword-like leaves. "Lucifer" is flaming red, while "Emily McKenzie" has large orange flowers with distinctive red blotches. Why not try some of each?

Wet, wet, wet

Embrace your boggy soil and grow beautiful plants that thrive in the damp, says Joe Swift

SOW SOME HERBS

Fresh herbs can make an average meal taste great and picking your home-grown is more rewarding than buying them from a supermarket. Rosemary, sage, thyme and mint are hardy perennials that can be left in the garden all year round. There are also lots of tender annuals that need sowing every year – and now is a good time.

SPRINKLE SOME SEED

Basil, chives and parsley are best started off indoors on a windowsill, but chervil, coriander and dill can be sown directly outside now. Chervil and coriander like a little shade, the others prefer plenty of sun and they all like a well-drained soil.

When sowing indoors, sow into a tray or individual pots of seed compost. Sprinkle the seed thinly on the top of the compost (about ten seeds per 9cm pot) then cover the seed with a fine layer of compost (a kitchen sieve would work). Water lightly and place on a warm windowsill. Cover the tray or pots with cling film and puncture a few holes to create a mini greenhouse.

GET SOME POTS OUT

After a few weeks your seeds should have germinated and seedlings can be transferred into individual pots. Some people leave them in one pot (that's how supermarket plants are grown). For individual, more robust final plants, pot on individually after carefully teasing each seedling out by holding their small leaves. – a chopstick is a good tool for this delicate work. They can stay indoors all summer but if you want to grow outside (perhaps planted into a pot, raised beds or directly in the ground), harden them for around a fortnight by taking outside during the day and bringing inside at night. Once the fear of frosts has gone (at the end of May) they can be planted outside for good. Feed regularly with a weak organic liquid seaweed or similar.

TRY SOMETHING NEW

Choose different cultivars (there are lots of types of basil, such as sweet basil, purple basil or lime basil) to keep it interesting. They will also have different maturing times, so stagger cropping. Sow a little seed every two weeks or so from now onwards to help avoid gluts.

Glorious Ganges

For Jane McDonald, cruising India is a spiritual experience

Cruising with Jane McDonald
Friday 9.00pm Channel 5

JANE McDONALD'S LATEST TV voyage is a trip down the tributaries of India's sacred River Ganges. Her most adventurous river cruise yet, it takes her to some of West Bengal's lesser-known cities, where locals are as curious about tourists as vice versa. "I've really taken to river cruising – I'm a convert because you go straight into the cities, whereas on ocean cruises you just go to the port," she says. "Even on board, you get to see so much because you're close to the land."

The standard seven-night Ganges itinerary begins and ends in Kolkata (formerly Calcutta), where Colonial-era clubs jostle with Mughal monuments, gaudy temples and slums. "It was a culture shock. Every single sense is assaulted. The noise is unbelievably loud – drivers sit on their horns – and the smell of food and flowers follows you round. Flowers are so important in India. I visited Asia's biggest flower market and there were thousands of garlands. Lots of households have their own shrine and put flowers on it every day. Every hotel greets you with garlands."

McDonald's ship called at the temple city of Kalna, at Mayapur, the sacred centre for the Hare Krishna movement, and at the erstwhile capital of Bengal and silk trade centre, Murshidabad. There she learned about a religion called Jainism, whose followers believe that every living thing in the universe, whether plant, human or animal, should be treated with respect. "I thought, 'That sounds right up my street!' So it was fascinating to learn a bit about that." Another highlight was a midnight candlelit ceremony on the river itself. "There were hundreds of candles on the water, floating past us. It was quite a sight."

'Hundreds of candles were floating on the water'

Like most Ganges cruises, hers included a land tour of India's famous Golden Triangle: Delhi, Jaipur and Agra, the home of the Taj Mahal. "We've all seen the Taj Mahal, but when you walk through that archway and see it for yourself... Wow." But most memorable of all was an afternoon spent flying kites in the "Pink City" of Jaipur. The story goes that the city's historic buildings were originally painted pink for a royal visit by Queen Victoria's eldest son, Prince Albert Edward, the future Edward VII, because it's an inviting colour.

McDonald received a warm welcome when she signed up to meet a local family who were celebrating a Hindu harvest festival, in which Jaipur's sky fills with colourful kites. "We went up on the roof of their block of flats and all the other families had come out, and they all knew each other. Everybody was sharing food, all the kids were learning how to fly kites and playing together, and people were waving to us from every single block. It was just wonderful." CLAIRE WEBB

JANE'S TOP 5 CRUISES

1 THE (TROPICAL) INNER HEBRIDES

"It was a heatwave when I did my trip round Mull and I couldn't believe that Scotland looked like the Caribbean. The scenery was absolutely stunning – we saw puffins on the Treshnish Isles, and Fingal's Cave, which was the inspiration for Mendelssohn's Hebrides Overture. It resembles the pipes of a massive organ and the acoustics are amazing."

2 HOME FROM HOME IN NEW ZEALAND

"I've never seen a country like New Zealand. When I sailed there from Australia, we visited the Milford Sound fjord, which is breathtaking. I'll never forget the views in Dunedin: it was like stepping into the film Avatar. A lot of Scottish people emigrated there and I visited a castle where a bagpiper was dressed in Ferguson tartan – my mother's tartan – and I thought, 'I've come home.'"

3 DANCING THE NIGHT AWAY IN GREECE

"The Italian coast is beautiful, but my favourite Mediterranean cruise has to be the Greek Islands. A lot of ships now do overnights. I stayed on dreamy Santorini, which is famous for its beautiful sunsets, and partied until the small hours on Mykonos. I danced so much, I had to walk back to my hotel barefoot, carrying my shoes."

4 CHRISTMAS MARKETS ON THE RHINE

"The Rhine is even more spectacular at Christmas. The craft markets are fantastic, and then there's the hot chocolate, the Glühwein, the eggnog, the moreish brandy coffee! You often get snow as well, which makes it even more Christmassy. It really got me into the festive spirit."

5 BEAUTIFULLY BALTIC

"The Baltic cities have gorgeous architecture, good food, great shops. I remember having a coffee in Helsinki, watching people go by and thinking this is a world I'd like to be part of. Iceland is amazing and Reykjavik is one of my favourite places in the world... I could go on and on!" CW

Spend the house

Equity release could be the way to a better old age, says Paul Lewis

EQUITY RELEASE IS something I'm asked about often – and it surprises me how many don't really understand it.

Do you own your home? Write down roughly what it's worth. Would you like to be able to spend some of that money now?

That is the tempting offer from firms that want to sell you what are called equity release products. That just means you take, or "release", some of the value of the "equity" in your home. It is done by the firm lending you money secured against the value of your home. You don't pay them back until you (and your partner if you have one) either die or move permanently into long-term care. It's called a lifetime mortgage and for the right people in the right circumstances, equity release can provide them with cash when they need it. But there are some warnings, too.

'It can provide people with cash when they need it..?'

With a lifetime mortgage you borrow part of the value of your home – perhaps a third at age 65 – and every month, interest is charged. You do not pay that interest at the time. Instead, it is added to the loan. So every year the debt – and the interest charged on it – grows. If you live a long time or if house prices fall, there is a danger the debt will get bigger than the value of your home. That is why you should only ever use an equity release firm that is a member of the Equity Release Council. They all give a guarantee that you can never end up owing more than the value of your property.

The other warning is for people who get means-tested pension credit to boost their income or get their council tax reduced or paid by the local council. If you take out an equity release loan, the cash will count as capital and will probably stop all your means-tested benefits.

THE POSITIVES ARE that you can release cash that you can spend to make your retirement easier, better, or just more fun. You can renew the kitchen or bathroom, improve your garden, buy a new car, go on a cruise, pay off your debts or help a child buy their first home. It is your money to do what you want with. Why not use it before it is too late? For more information, visit equityreleasecouncil.com

I will try to reflect your questions in the subjects I cover in this column

ARE YOU LOOKING

Get your NEW 2019 free guide to unlocking the cash in your home, written by Radio Times money expert Paul Lewis.

After years of paying into your home, many around retirement age can find themselves cash poor, but asset rich. Whether you've paid off your existing mortgage or not, though, equity release is one way you can use your home to boost your finances, although some or all of the funds must be used to repay your outstanding mortgage.

COULD I UNLOCK CASH FROM MY HOME? If you're a homeowner aged 55-95, you could free up some of the tax-free cash from your home either as a lump sum or one initial amount followed by smaller ones, without having to sell up and move, subject to lenders criteria.

WHAT CAN I SPEND THE MONEY ON? Popular reasons for releasing cash include making home improvements, clearing credit card debts or paying off an outstanding mortgage, going on holiday and gifting money to loved ones. The money is yours to spend however you wish. You should always think carefully before securing a loan against your property.

FIND OUT HOW, WITH A LIFETIME MORTGAGE

- You could release £10k-£100k of tax-free cash or more to spend (subject to criteria)
- With a lifetime mortgage, the most popular type of equity release plan, you still own your own home and can live in it as long as you like
- You can guarantee an inheritance for your family with some plans (lender criteria applies)
- You will never owe more than the value of your home with Equity Release Council-approved plans
- Typically, no monthly payments to make as the loan, plus roll-up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end
- A lifetime mortgage is a loan secured against your home, like a traditional mortgage
- Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits

CASE STUDY

Like many couples, Edward and Margaret Ashton from Warrington found they had less money than they'd have liked after retiring. After a long and successful career in the construction industry, Mr Ashton suffered with neck problems, so decided to retire early.

"I was offered a pension in a lump sum and decided to retire, paying off our existing mortgage with the money," he says. However, the couple realised their pension pot was quickly running out and left them with little money to enjoy retirement.

"My wife was a little reluctant at first, but realised how much equity release would benefit us. We have installed new UPVC doubled glazed windows and doors throughout, replaced the guttering, downspouts, fascias and soffits, which has reduced the maintenance required on our home.

"The money released has made a huge difference to our lives. It has enabled us to have an easier life especially with Margaret's bad knee purchasing a new wet room with walk-in shower, which has improved accessibility.

Your money is in your bricks and mortar, it's your biggest asset and should be enjoyed."

Mr and Mrs Ashton were pleased to discover their property has also risen in value quite significantly. They bought the house 22 years ago for £46,000 and it is now valued at £180,000.

Why do we go on a "whistle-stop" tour? Bill Lord, by email

In the slang of 1930s America, a whistle-stop was a remote town that trains would pass through unless prompted to stop by a signal from a conductor's whistle. Such places often featured on the campaign trail of presidential candidates, who would stop briefly before moving on to the next. This sense of a series of rapid visits nudged whistle-stop into the more general meaning of something fleeting and superficial.

Another word taken from US railroad history is the insult jerk, a shortening of jerkwater, once applied to remote areas that supplied early railway engines with water via locals who dipped a bucket into a stream and jerked it out with a rope. Those who lived in such towns were generally seen as unsophisticated hicks.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Heard The One about..?

MERRIMENT
Matt Baker and Alex Jones have a laugh on The One Show

Isn't The One Show (weekdays BBC1) meant to be a magazine programme – that is, not only entertaining, but also interesting and informative? If so, why has it been dumbed down? The items and guests used to be more varied, but these days they're too often show people, pop stars and actors.

The whole tone of the show is merriment, with presenters Alex Jones and Matt Baker seeming to laugh at everything uncontrollably. Perhaps the idea is that in a depressing world we need more fun; if so, the thinking is misguided. Too much inane laughter can leave us cold. I hope The One Show will return to its original concept before viewers are lost.

IT COSTS NOTHING

Something happens to BBC presenters when they interview a politician: behaviour that in everyday conversation would be seen as rudeness becomes routine. Yes, evasive politicians need to be grilled, but in an age when social media abound with rage, our public discussions should still be polite. I heard a pleasing moment on the Today programme (Radio 4) when Jacob Rees-Mogg said to Mishal Husain, "It would be kind if you'd listen, just for a moment."

It might help if all presenters studied the interviews of the late, lamented Nick Clarke: courteous, skewering inconsistency, highly effective – and rarely interrupting.

...Why no mention of Yes Minister/Yes Prime Minister?

The performances by Nigel Hawthorne, Paul Eddington and Derek Fowlds were pitch-perfect and the writing by Antony Jay and Jonathan Lynn was superlative. The programme is also still highly relevant in these troubled political times.

Perhaps we could have a re-run of the poll?

DURRELL DELIGHT

Oh what a joy! Our Sunday-evening viewing is complete.

The Durrells (ITV) is back on joyous, hilarious form.

We laughed out loud virtually the whole way through the first episode (7 April). The cast obviously love their roles and it shows. Absolutely brilliant!

FAREWELL FLEABAG

Many people have rightly praised Fleabag (BBC3/BBC1) as a modern classic.

The final episode devastated me, in a good way. I sobbed my way through the bus stop scene, not because I was sad at the ending, but more as a reflection of the quality of the acting and the writing, full of perfect lines and subtleties. Phoebe Waller-Bridge is a genius. I certainly have never been so moved by a fictional programme.

Nina Gray Edinburgh
Turn the page, Nina, for more on Phoebe Waller-Bridge.

SEXING UP THE ARCHERS

I'm enjoying octogenarian Jill Archer's blossoming romance with the dapper Leonard Berry in The Archers (Radio 4). They dance and laugh, she's learning about old buildings and he now understands about warming newborn lambs in the oven. So far so sweet – and predictable.

Wouldn't it be refreshing if the writers moved on from the stereotypical portrayal of love in later life to explore the reality – and stigma – for many older couples who have a sexual relationship? I'd love to see this explored in The Archers to highlight the importance of physically intimate relationships for many people in later life.

Samantha Schneider (age 38) London N18

HOUSE PROUD

What a wonderful first part of David Olusoga's enthralling new series of A House through Time (8 April BBC2), this time exploring a house in Newcastle. It was a beautifully measured,

POST-VICTORIAN

Nice to see that, despite no longer being a passenger in the Tardis, Jenna Coleman hasn't entirely lost the ability to travel in time. In Victoria (31 March ITV), the train in which the Queen escaped from London during the Chartist uprising of 1848 consisted of a locomotive and coaches that

ADVICE TO A REPAIRER

We love The Repair Shop (weekdays BBC1), but we need to have a word with the expert Brenton West. My old teacher Mr Shirtcliff would be horrified at how he went about restoring D-Day survivor Thomas's swagger stick.

First we saw Brenton trying to remove the silver badge – holding the workpiece in his hand and going at it with a screwdriver! “Fasten down the workpiece, and use the right tool for the job,” Mr Shirtcliff would say. Then we saw him glue the knob to the stick with epoxy adhesive: how is the next restorer going to get that off?

Laurie Wedd Tonbridge, Kent
Brenton West of The Repair Shop replies: “This was a very delicate and special item that required handling with great care. The metal around the ball was paper-thin, so to fasten it down or clamp it in a vice would have risked causing further damage – the last thing I wanted! As for the epoxy adhesive, this is standard practice when dealing with delicate metals, and is easily dissolved in acetone solvent.”

A LAUGH-FREE DRIVE

I was looking forward to Don't Forget the Driver (9 April BBC2), especially as RT billed it Comedy of the Week. What a disappointment! Silly situations, shabby acting but, worst of all, where was the comedy? You needed a detectorist to find it.

A VERY HUMAN RACE

Race across the World (BBC2) was an uplifting and exhilarating programme. It took us on a wonderful journey, alongside the contestants, to places most of us can only dream of and tapped into the inherent explorer in all of us. It also evoked an underlying theme of our common humanity across culture, language and ethnicity.

I'm hoping there will be a second series, going across the other side of the world.

Laura Macleod Witney, Oxfordshire

...I watched it avidly from start to finish. What colour, what adventure, what a geography lesson! I was sorry anyone had to come anything other than first, as the participants were all such interesting and likeable characters.

Patricia Ainsworth Bangor, Down

...For me the stars of the show were father and son Darron and Alex. It was a joy to watch them retrieve and develop their relationship but also to hear their different viewpoints, a generation apart. If only they could be given their own show.

MORE FROM BARRY

I did enjoy the Sunday-evening show Barry Humphries: Forgotten Musical Masterpieces (Radio 2). His gentle humour and musical choices are great. I hope there'll be more series of this in the future.

Frank Fenton Swindon, Wiltshire
Lewis Carnie, head of Radio 2, tells RT: “Radio 2 is delighted to announce that Barry Humphries: Forgotten Musical Masterpieces will return early next year for another brilliant series.”

THE WIT OF RADIO 3

I wonder if David Hepworth (RT, 6 April) has been listening to the same Radio 3 as I have. His criticism that the presenters are over-serious seems aimed at a channel that existed 40 years ago. What is refreshing today is the genial presentation by enthusiastic experts who wear their learning lightly. They talk about the music, and not the neighbour's cat, and ▷

YOU ASK US

What's Phoebe Waller-Bridge doing next?

Is Phoebe Waller-Bridge, of the brilliant series Fleabag (BBC1), developing any other material? I hope the BBC snap it up. She's such an intuitive writer and actor.

Amanda Hurd, Halifax, West Yorks
Wouldn't we all love to know! Waller-Bridge has just completed a short run performing Fleabag on stage in New York (it was originally a play, directed by her longtime collaborator Vicky Jones, before it was a BBC3 series). But her future plans are unclear, apart from executive-producing series two and three of Killing Eve – which she created from Luke Jennings's books Codename Villanelle.

Announced in the US is a romantic comedy thriller series for HBO called Run, which she will executive-produce. The show, to be written by Jones, is about a woman who gets a text from an old flame that shakes up her life. There are intriguing reports that Waller-Bridge will play a recurring role herself. Watch this space.

THE FUTURE...
We all want to know what the Fleabag star is planning.

DRESS LIKE DAPHNE

The fashions in The Durrells (Sunday ITV) are a delight.

Maralyn Levett, Camberley, Surrey
The majority of the costumes worn in the series are either specially made for the actors or found in vintage shops, so unfortunately that dress is one of a kind. Time to get sewing, perhaps? Michelle Grady of Simply Sewing magazine tells us: "Sew Over It's Isla Dress pattern is a close match – this feminine, vintage-inspired style has a similar yoke detail, button fastening, short sleeves and floaty skirt, and it comes in UK sizes 8 to 20. It wouldn't be too tricky to adapt the pattern to give it a round neckline just like Daphne's, too." Go to: sewoverit.co.uk/product/isla-dress-sewing-pattern/

◁ their passion shines through. As for Hepworth's jibe, "Are they allowed jokes on Radio 3?", I suggest he listens to Ian Skelly or Sean Rafferty for examples of fine wit.

Richard Sellwood Ewhurst, Surrey

WISHING JEREMY WELL

Jeremy Bowen was in my thoughts as I hadn't seen him on TV for a while. Then I read he was having treatment for bowel cancer. One of the best reporters – often in dangerous locations – he's able to report the issues calmly, from all sides, to enable me to have some understanding of the complexities surrounding these conflicts. I wish him well in the battle he now faces to return to good health.

SARA COX

What's your sofa like, Sara?

We've got two sofas, which I know is pretty fancy. We've got a green one from Ikea and an L-shaped grey one, which has had so much spilt on it I'm just working out when is the right time to change it. At the moment I'm putting throws on when we have guests to cover up the various stains made by my kids, so hopefully next time we get one it'll stay nice for a bit longer!

Which of your two sofas do you sit on to watch TV?

I like getting into bed and watching something on my iPad. Fleabag's amazing – it's one that you want to savour so I make sure I watch it when I've got time to concentrate. And I was obsessed with After Life, Ricky Gervais's show on Netflix. It was wonderful, and it had me craunching – which is my phrase for crying and laughing.

Was television a big part of your life growing up?

The biggest memories when I was little was Saturday-morning TV, like Swap Shop and Going Live. I would lie on the floor with my feet up on the couch, just lolling around in my jamas. That for was the biggest luxury on a Saturday morning, not having to get dressed.

And now you're presenting your own weekend morning shows...

It's all about the guests and the live music. We want to make people laugh on a weekend morning while they're having a crumpet and slopping about!

You're a few months into presenting the drivetime show on Radio 2. How's it going?

I love it – it's amazing. I keep trying to do other nice things in my life to pay back the universe for my good fortune! On a Monday I have to reel it in because I'm so excited after having not been on air all weekend. I see it as my duty to make people laugh, and nothing makes my day more than when I get a tweet going, "I had a rubbish day but your show really helped."

Do you still have any unfulfilled ambitions?

Not really. It would have been a very different answer if you'd asked me three years ago – I would have said, "Please get me a job." Now I've got all the jobs! I mean, I've always worked; for 20 years I've worked so it's gone all right. But there's definitely been ebbs and flows – at the moment I'm almost flooding with the flow!

How did you feel three years ago?

I was just unfulfilled creatively and self-esteem wise. It's hard if you've not got much work, you're constantly reminded by people who have, even though you wish them well. But it doesn't do you any harm to have time that's a little bit quieter. It makes you grateful when you do get some good work.

Are you doing more Back in Time for... and Love in the Countryside?

Yes, both! We're filming Love in the Countryside now. The only problem with visiting people who have my ideal parallel life is that I come home wanting a big dog and a horse again. If I wasn't on the radio or telly then I'd be an equine dentist living in the middle of nowhere in Somerset! FRANCES TAYLOR

The Sara Cox Show is on Saturday and Sunday on ITV; her Radio 2 show is on weekdays at 5.00pm weekdays Radio 2

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY AUDIOBOOK Tom Hanks's short stories, Uncommon Type. Tom reading you a story while you're stuffing a chicken, lovely!

MY RADIO I have Radio 2 on in the morning, and I love Woman's Hour on Radio 4.

MY FILM A Star Is Born. I think Lady Gaga's incredible.
