THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

DAVID BUTCHER DEPUTY TV EDITOR

'AC-12 has trumped House of Hanover'

DOCUMENTARY SERIES LOVE to describe themselves as epic. Anything involving a journey or a war will claim to be epic, even if it's no more than Julia Bradbury on a trip round Australia. But one series that genuinely does have epic sweep is A House through Time (Monday BBC2), which might seem odd when it explores ordinary lives unfolding at a house in Newcastle.

But what a house! This building had great currents of history flowing through it, although it takes the skill of historian David Olusoga (and, I imagine, a hive of researchers) to tease out its stories from old newspapers and court records. The series ends this week, having already taken in extraordinary highs and lows in the lives of soldiers and spiritualists, music hall acts and pioneering scientists: I can't recommend it enough.

It's hard to imagine two more different dramas competing for our attention on Sunday than Line of Duty on BBC1 and Victoria on ITV. So far, AC-12 has trumped the House of Hanover in the ratings – no surprise there. The Palace fights back this week with something Line of Duty can't hope to match: a fabulous costumed ball. Although I'm sure plenty of people would like to see Ted Hastings in a frock coat dancing a quadrille.

AS FOR THE real-life police force, an extraordinary new series brings us the nitty-and-very-gritty work of forensic scientists – the people who comb crime scenes, test bullets and measure knife wounds in dead bodies. Like the terrific Ambulance (Thursday BBC1), Forensics: the Real CSI (Wednesday BBC2) gives you fresh respect for our public services. It's eye-opening stuff, but you'll need a strong stomach: there will be blood.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

DRESSED TO EMPRESS

Helen Mirren was our guest at the recent Radio Times/BFI Festival in London (see page 22), winning a place (alongside Joanna Lumley) in our Hall of Fame, following in the footsteps of Sir David Attenborough and Michael Palin. As well as looking back on her career, Mirren also looked ahead to her starring role in Sky Atlantic's four-part drama Catherine the Great, which airs this autumn and follows the 18th-century empress of Russia towards the end of her reign. Mirren was keen to address Catherine's private life, including the oft-repeated story that she died while having sex with a horse. "That was a calumny thrown at her by history because history doesn't like very successful, very powerful women," Mirren said. "They have to drag them down and history tried to drag Catherine down. I hope we are going to reinstate her reputation as the incredible leader that she was."

WHEELS ON FIRE NEVER GO OUT

Joanna Lumley was also a lively guest at the festival, revealing on stage that her Absolutely Fabulous sister-in-arms, Jennifer Saunders, once considered the unthinkable concerning the show's fashion monsters, Patsy and Edina. "Shall we just kill them off and bury them?" Saunders wrote, prompting Lumley to write "the fastest email I've ever written back". Patsy and Eddy can "never die", Lumley proclaimed. Quite right.

CARRY ON AND ON, NURSE

Another actor who seems totally committed to her character is Helen George, who has played Call the Midwife's Nurse Trixie since the very first episode in 2012. Responding to a question at the festival about whether she planned to stay in the drama "until the end", George said, "Oh I do, till I'm dead." Three more series have been commissioned, so the show is guaranteed in the schedules until 2022 at least.

A RISING STAR – COUNT ON IT

Also at the festival, Mark Gatiss told RT that "three quarters" of the national population will end up fancying Danish actor Claes Bang who plays Dracula in the BBC/Netflix drama that Gatiss has developed with Steven Moffat. It's quite a claim.

But the pair did of course bring Benedict Cumberbatch into the national consciousness with Sherlock, so they probably know what they're talking about in the heart-throb, leading-man stakes.

BEN DOWELL

The Brit Packer

It may sound like the most unlikely premise in the history of television but former Brat Packer and The West Wing star Rob Lowe is playing a copper in an upcoming ITV drama series called Wild Bill that's set in the badlands of Lincolnshire.

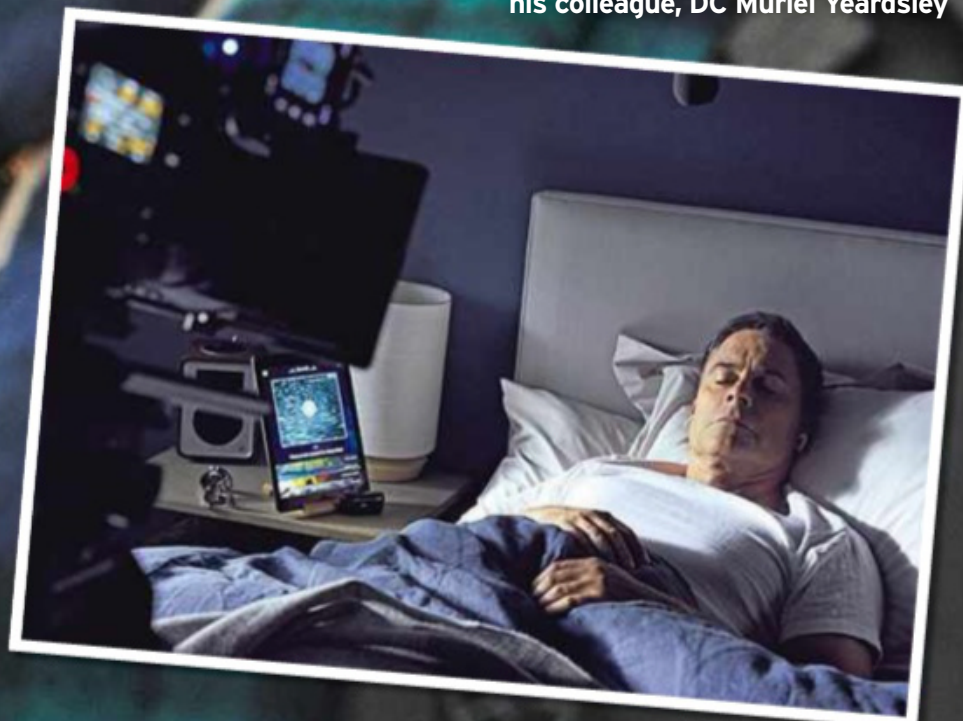

Lowe plays US cop Bill Hixon, a high-achieving go-getter who is appointed Chief Constable of the East Lincolnshire

Police Force. In fact, Hixon doesn't even know there is a Boston in that county before he arrives with his 14-year-old daughter Kelsey, hoping they can flee their "painful recent past".

"Wild Bill gives us a chance to write about modern Britain and modern crime through unique eyes," say Jim Keeble and Dudi Appleton, two of the creators and writers. BEN DOWELL

INTRIGUING CAREER MOVE

'Britbox is terribly late'

The BBC and ITV streaming service will struggle in a packed market

LATER THIS YEAR the BBC and ITV will launch Britbox, their "best of British" TV subscription streaming service. For perhaps £5.99 a month UK viewers will have access to the programme libraries of the BBC and ITV and the best of present and future shows. Think everything from Only Fools and Horses to Broadchurch, Inspector Morse and Line of Duty. What's not to like? Anyway it's something the broadcasters have to do because it's the way the world is going. Except that Britbox is terribly late into the highly competitive streaming market.

A decade ago, before Netflix came to the UK, Britain's broadcasters tried to launch an on-demand service, Project Kangaroo, but the Competition Commission deemed it represented too much of a threat to potential competitors in the nascent market. The Commission actually stopped anything happening at all and British broadcasters suffered as a result.

Now Britbox will arrive just as Apple TV launches in the UK with big-star offerings, to add to Amazon Prime and Netflix. The Disney+ subscription service is also on the way. ITV's chief executive Carolyn McCall does not, however, believe Britbox will face a life-or-death struggle with the California giants.

Britbox will be an all-British service, bringing together in one place the best of British programming. Except that programme deals have been done all over the place and not all the programmes will be available exclusively.

Despite Britbox, the BBC has recently done a deal with Sky for 700 hours of box sets – programmes like Only Fools and Horses, The Vicar of Dibley, McMafia and Spooks.

Earlier in April the BBC completed a multi-million-pound programme deal with Discovery, which is launching yet another global streaming service, although UK rights aren't included. Then there's the problem of when programmes become available after original transmission and catch-up. After a month on the ITV Hub, ITV's programmes will move to Britbox.

'It's complicated when historic rivals come together to co-operate'

The BBC has asked communications regulator Ofcom for permission to have programmes available for up to a year on the iPlayer, because it doesn't want to short-change licence-fee payers. Ofcom has ordered a public-interest test for such a significant change.

Yet if Ofcom finally agrees, it could mean that many BBC programmes might not be available to Britbox for 12 months.

There are talks with Channel 4 but it commissions its programmes from independent producers and has limited control of rights. There have also been conversations with Channel 5 but American owners Viacom International may have other fish to fry. As McCall recognises, it is a bit more complicated than it looks when historic rivals come together to co-operate.

Britbox has already launched in North America and moved into profit more quickly than expected. But that is a service specially tailored for upmarket American Anglophiles. Can the very different UK Britbox make it?

BRITISH VIEWERS WHO love television, even older viewers, appear willing to pay for more choice. Consultants Deloitte believe that, by 2023, the average household may be subscribing to three streaming services. But in the face of Netflix, Amazon Prime, Apple, Disney+ and perhaps Discovery to come, will they pay for Britbox as well as, or in preference to, the others?

It's very late and very difficult. All we can do is welcome Britbox and wish it the very best of British. It will need it.

WHAT WE WATCHED

Radio 1's breakfast show was re-creating the Thames boat trip made some 80 years before by Jerome K Jerome in his comic travelogue Three Men in a Boat. But instead of Jerome (and his friends, banker George Wingrave and publisher Carl Hentschel), the punters were Mike Read, Noel Edmonds and Paul Gambaccini, who were travelling on a motor cruiser The River Jester II and airing their musings all week. Edmonds had no intention of roughing it. "Dinner will be a black-tie affair," he told us. "I'm supplying a case of champagne and Mike Read is bringing the Fortnum's hamper." They were the days.

WHAT YOU SAID

Readers were very sad that Michael Parkinson's chat show was finishing on the BBC after 11 years. "On no other show could we see the remarkable range of talented and stimulating people, who seemed delighted to appear," said Barbara Salkeld from Rotherham. Parky did eventually return to the BBC in 1998, leaving for ITV in 2007. The great Arthur Lowe had died on 15 April and Mrs DE Lane of Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, wrote: "His wonderful sense of humour and timing made Arthur unique and he'll be greatly missed." BEN DOWELL

In this week's Victoria, the royal marriage reaches crisis point. Creator Daisy Goodwin explores how Victoria and Albert dealt with public scrutiny – and how little has changed...

HISTORY HAS BEEN kind to Victoria and Albert's marriage. Because of Albert's early death at the age of 42 in 1861 and Victoria's extreme widowhood for the rest of her life, their married life is usually portrayed as a time of untrammelled bliss. ALL DRESSED UP
Jenna Coleman and Tom Hughes dress up for an 18th-century ball (below) and (left) a Winterhalter painting of Victoria and Albert in costume in 1851

◁ in the Highlands, their union seems impossibly perfect – with Victoria breathlessly extolling the virtues of her “dearest angel”.

And, of course, after Albert’s death any suggestion that their relationship was anything other than perfect couldn’t even be contemplated; for Victoria in her overwhelming grief there was no question that they had had the perfect union.

But when I came to research the story of Victoria and Albert’s married life, I found that it was not the fairytale meeting of minds and bodies that Victoria mourned so publicly. The truth is far more complex and, for a dramatist, much more interesting.

ONE OF THE fundamental causes of discontent between Victoria and Albert was their increasing brood of children. Victoria was a famously reluctant mother, who resented being in what seemed like a state of perpetual pregnancy. In 1848, when the current series starts, Victoria is pregnant with her sixth child, Louise, in only eight years of marriage, and in this week’s episode she has just had her seventh (and favourite) child, Arthur. Judging by the pandemonium on the Victoria set every time all the children are assembled, it can’t have been easy being the mother of that many children.

Of course, Victoria had any amount of help, but while she might have been quite happy to leave her children to be brought up by their capable governess Lady Lyttelton, Albert was what we would now call a “helicopter parent” – he wanted to be involved in every aspect of his children’s upbringing.

Anyone who visits Osborne House, the royal hideaway on the Isle of Wight, will see the breadth of Albert’s vision for his offspring – the royal children had allotments, where Albert encouraged them to grow fruit and vegetables with each prince and princess having their own wheelbarrow labelled HRH Princess Alice etc.

Next door to the garden is the Swiss Cottage, an almost life-size replica of an alpine chalet, where the young princesses were encouraged to entertain their parents and courtiers to tea, while the princes did manly things with lathes, or staged mock battles in the miniature fort. There is even a small museum of the children’s treasures, with every object neatly labelled – Albert had a passion for order.

Unfortunately, as all parents know, children are born not made, and one of the great strains on Victoria and Albert’s marriage was the general unsatisfactory-ness of their eldest son, Bertie. Unlike his older sister, Vicky, who was precociously talented at everything from music to languages, Bertie was a slow learner with his mother’s quick temper.

Today, it seems likely that Bertie was dyslexic, but the Victorians had no such diagnosis. Instead Victoria and Albert consulted the phrenologist George Combe, whose book On the Constitution of Man Considered in Relation to External Objects was a bestseller, shifting 200,000 copies when it was republished in the 1850s, while Darwin’s On the Origin of Species only sold 50,000 copies. Combe was brought in to measure Bertie’s skull and found him to be “feeble and abnormal”.

FROM THE SHAPE of the boy’s head, Combe deduced that “the anterior lobe, devoted to intellect, was deficient in size, while the organs of ‘combative-ness, destructiveness and self-esteem’ were over-developed”. He told Bertie’s horrified parents that there was very little hope of improvement and that the only way to help him was not to punish him, but to treat him with kindness, as anger made the brain more feeble. Combe hinted that Bertie’s weakness might be hereditary, passed down through Victoria from her paternal grandfather George III.

One can only imagine how Victoria must have felt having had her son’s shortcomings apportioned to her side of the family, particularly as she had to struggle all her life with the shadow of madness. Whenever she did something that the men around her, including her husband, ▷ ◁ disapproved of, they were quick to decide that her behaviour stemmed from congenital mental weakness.

Albert, who prided himself on his calm demeanour, did not share his wife's appetite for drama and hated their rows, which she secretly rather enjoyed. When the going got tough, Albert would avoid his wife, instead communicating with her by note, saying that he couldn't deal with her until she calmed down. Albert's detachment infuriated Victoria even more, and during the middle years of their marriage there was a constant cycle of quarreling, sulking and reconciliation – quite often ending in yet another pregnancy.

PRIVATE AND PUBLIC

These glowing affirmations of marital harmony were endlessly reproduced in magazines and newspapers, much as official royal portraits are today.

But then, as now, the royals wanted to be in control of how the public saw them. Their own private

(and, it has to be said, very amateurish) etchings of each other were not for public consumption. One can see that same impulse to hide a part of themselves from the public in the recent decision by the Duke and Duchess of Sussex to announce the birth of their baby only when they choose to. Then, as now, there is a very thin line between the royal desire for privacy and the public's entitlement to know.

AT LEAST VICTORIA and Albert were spared the rumours, and indeed proof, of infidelity that have dogged many of their descendants. However stormy their marriage was, there is absolutely no evidence to suggest that either of them ever played away in the course of their 21-year union. In contrast to her wicked uncles, George IV and William IV, Victoria did not have a score of illegitimate children but managed to produce nine legitimate ones, creating a happy royal family image that successive generations have tried and failed to live up to.

Victoria and Albert pioneered the idea that the British royalty were not remote, Olympian beings, but idealised role models for hard-working Victorian families. They had perfected the Insta life, 150 years before Meghan Markle discovered Instagram.

‘Then, as now, the royals wanted to control their image’ royal tour, where every regal blink is covered in HD detail by the tabloids.

Writing this series of Victoria has been very strange at times, as I discovered many uncanny parallels between royalty past and present. I had rather imagined that paparazzi photographs were a modern phenomenon, but it turns out that Victoria and Albert were just as concerned with protecting their privacy as today's royals. Albert was horrified when a collection of private etchings that he and Victoria had made of their children, their pets and each other were copied by the printer and the images sold to the general public. He felt that these harmless domestic scenes were sacrosanct and their circulation a crime, and he sued the printer.

His reaction is interesting when, of course, he and Victoria never passed up an opportunity to record their domestic bliss in paintings such as the famous one by their favourite artist Winterhalter [reproduced on page ten and 11].

THE SCENE I'VE written in which Victoria throws a glass of wine over Albert was based on a contemporary account by a courtier, writing to his wife telling her about the royal shenanigans. The quarrels between the royal couple were such a feature of court life that they were nicknamed “Eliza and Joseph” as if they were unruly peasants. One can just picture the aristocratic courtiers, who thought that Albert wasn't royal enough for their Queen, sniggering behind their hands.

These tensions would come to a head at grand occasions like the great costume balls that Victoria and Albert held during this period. The ball dramatised in this week's episode was one where guests were asked to come in the fashion of a hundred years previously, during the reign of George II. It was an extraordinary sequence to film as the actors became unrecognisable under those white powdered wigs – I walked past Jenna [Coleman] about five times before realising it was her in 18th-century costume!

These balls must have been quite taxing for Victoria and Albert, because they were putting themselves very publicly on show to a ruling class who were only too happy to find fault. I suppose the modern equivalent would be a Line of Duty's Vicky McClure watched her grandmother struggle with dementia. Now she's formed a choir to prove the value of music as therapy

CENTRE STAGE

‘I’ll bring hope’

AS A LINE of dialogue it could have come straight from the mouth of Vicky McClure’s Line of Duty character Kate Fleming. “We’ve got each other’s back, so we’ll be fine,” she says with confident conviction. But McClure isn’t seeking solidarity with her mates in AC-12, nor is there any dramatic bravura attached to the sentiment.

Instead they are words of gentle encouragement to a 50-year-old woman with dementia trying to learn – and remember – the lines of a song the pair are preparing to duet on.

These days Julie can’t remember what she’s doing from one moment to the next. “I don’t know how long I have got to remember things, so I need to pack in as much as I can,” she says of her reasons for joining a choir made up of people with dementia, formed by McClure in her home city of Nottingham for a new two-part BBC documentary.

McClure’s reasons are also personal: she lost her grandmother Iris to dementia in 2015. Now, she wants to bang the drum about the benefits music can bring to people with dementia.

“I watched my nana being taken by dementia. I watched her personality slowly fade away – it’s one of the hardest things to watch a family member go through. But I also saw how music helped, changing her mood and, for a while, bringing us back the old Nana.”

The youngest member of the 20-strong choir is 31, the oldest 87 – what connects them is a desire to find new purpose in their lives and help science understand better how music can help reawaken dementia-affected brains.

McClure herself underwent a brain-imaging scan to illustrate how music affects neurological activity. As low-intensity sounds were played through her headset there was patchy acknowledgement of what she was hearing. But when her favourite Beatles song In My Life was played the sensory parts of her brain became stimulated, illuminating the scan with colour.

The song takes on an anthem-type status for the choir for obvious reasons. Just take a look at the lyrics:

*There are places I’ll remember
All my life, though some have changed
Some forever, not for better
Some have gone and some remain
All these places have their moments
With lovers and friends I still can recall
Some are dead and some are living
In my life, I’ve loved them all.*

John Lennon and Paul McCartney’s words had a tearful resonance for some of the 20-strong choir and their loved ones. “It’s too close to home,” sobbed the wife of one of the singers.

The choir will work with Professor Seb Crutch of University College London as part of a three-year research project into the benefits of singing for brain health. But even at this stage he’s in no doubt about its value. “We really do need to roll this out, because it is proven that it does have an effect on people’s lives.”

And if it isn’t too crass a cliché, those words are music to McClure’s ears. “I think raising awareness and just telling your story is hugely important,” she says. “When you know somebody’s going through this with you, you feel less alone, and that’s what happened with the choir.”

“Music to me is as powerful as a drug. There isn’t medication to stop dementia, there isn’t anything currently to cure it, it’s about trying to live well with dementia. You will see the benefits of music on your family with your own eyes – you only have to put on their type of music.”

THE CHOIR SPENT 12 weeks in rehearsal, preparing for a performance at Nottingham’s biggest venue, the Royal Concert Hall. Some found it daunting, others were exhilarated by the prospect.

McClure, 35, who radiates down-to-earth likeability, was there to comfort and gently cajole, and while she tried to remain emotionally detached, the tears flowed freely.

“At first I was doing all right, I wasn’t massively affected. Nobody seemed to me like they had dementia, they weren’t walking around saying they didn’t know who they were any more. And then one day I got back and I just lay on my bed and cried my eyes out.”

Though the film was finished last year, McClure has remained friends with many of the choir members. “I stay in touch with the choir all the time, we’ve got a very funny Facebook group that everyone’s very active on. I went to see Daniel and Jordan [a young couple with twins, see overleaf] in their house for a coffee a couple of weeks ago. We all live in Nottingham, so it’s easy, and they’re the same age as me so we formed an ordinary friendship.”

But the savage onslaught of dementia means that some of the connections she’s made have already been eroded. “Quite a few people are in homes now and some are deteriorating quite ▷ ◁ rapidly," she says. "They still meet and I went to a singing session two weeks ago and saw some of the members and it was quite frightening because I can tell when people recognise who I am, and I can tell when they're just being polite. It's horrible, it's really, really hard."

But her very personal understanding of dementia means her work continues beyond just making and publicising her film. "I want to keep going, I'm not going to make one two-part

'I want to keep going. There's loads more to be discovered' documentary and leave it there and say I've done my bit for dementia. There's loads more to be discovered. The music side is the core of the show, and those living with dementia will tell you in their own words that it's changed their lives, but the science side is crucial, too, because we don't know what we might find, and we said that from the start. We had to give it a go."

Giving it a go for McClure means lobbying for more research and more money. "The statistics for people doing music therapy in care homes is very low. That is something I would really push.

"It's clear that the Government don't put enough funding into research. I am passionate about looking into that. It's free to sing but to have a routine, to get people from A to B, providing tea and coffee, just the simple things, isn't free. It has got to happen now on a realistic scale all over the country. It can be cheap and manageable and we have to work out ways to do that. I can't do it, I need the backing of councils and government."

AT THE START of the film McClure asks her mum Carol whether she's fearful about getting dementia. Carol replies, "I do worry that I will get it. I just hope I get looked after."

Later, for this article, McClure is asked whether she, too, fears a familial link.

"Yes, I do. I think of it being like a cancer, I've lost too many friends to cancer who had healthy lives. I don't know what I'm going to die of, it could be dementia. But I can't live my life between now and whenever, worrying about it to that degree. We did discuss in the documentary whether I wanted a test that can give you an idea as to whether or not you have the possibility of getting dementia, but I would rather not know. I want to let life do what it's going to do."

And for the moment that means keeping the nation on the edge of its seat in Line of Duty and heaping praise on her dementia choir. "They're all extremely proud [of what they've achieved]. They don't realise it but they're going to inspire other people and give people a bit of hope."

THE SINGERS' STORIES

Meet some of the people affected by dementia who have joined Vicky McClure's choir

HIGH NOTES
McClure in rehearsal with choir member Julie

JULIE, aged 50 former county council deputy leader

Diagnosed with early onset dementia two years ago meant Julie had to retire from her job and step away from a busy social life. Her short-term memory is deteriorating and she struggles to perform even the most basic household tasks herself. Erina, 25, one of three daughters Julie raised alone, still lives at home to help care for her. Julie says of her dementia: "I've got it for a reason. I have been given it to do something with and that's what I'm going to do."

CHRIS, 67 former teacher

Chris was diagnosed with frontotemporal dementia in 2014.

It affects the area of his brain controlling personality, behaviour and language. It destroys inhibitions and can lead him to say inappropriate things. It's also affected his ability to organise and plan.

Chris says he hopes his life will end before he stops recognising his wife Jane and their two grown-up children. "It's like a long goodbye," says Jane. "It feels like every month, every week we are losing something of Chris."

DANIEL, 31 former engineer and musician

A father of two-year-old twins, Daniel was told he had a rare, genetic form of early onset Alzheimer's a year ago. He's been warned he may have as little as four years left to live and there's a 50 per cent chance the twins, Jasper and Lola, will also have the faulty gene.

Daniel can no longer play the drums, but his devoted wife Jordan says the choir has rejuvenated him. "Just because you have got dementia doesn't mean you can't learn something new," she says.

RAE, 53 former music teacher

Rae first realised something was wrong when she got "lost" in her local supermarket. Other warning signs came thick and fast: she began to forget to eat and would confuse words.

Early onset Alzheimer's was diagnosed last year and she describes it as a "brain fog" – she forgets which order to put on her clothes, and how to put her shoes on. Of her condition she says: "When you are diagnosed people stop asking you to do things, you stop being useful, and it would be nice to be useful again."

SPICE OF LIFE

Akram Khan (seated on the table) is creating a dance inspired by Britain's curry culture

The curry connection

Akram Khan is telling the story of his British-Bangladeshi heritage the way he knows best – through dance

AKRAM KHAN IS one of Britain's most accomplished dancers and choreographers. He's toured the world with his dance company, won numerous accolades – including an Olivier Award for recent solo show Xenos – and has featured as part of the 2012 London Olympics Opening Ceremony, with a dance tribute to the victims of the 7/7 bombings.

And yet, if his father had had his way, Akram Khan wouldn't be a top-class professional dancer. He'd be managing an Indian restaurant in Wimbledon, south London. This was where Khan grew up and would twirl while cleaning customers' plates. It was the family business that he turned his back on to follow his dream.

"The older I got, the more my father put pressure on me," he says. "It was the Bangladeshi thing: the girls are pushed to marry and I was supposed to take over the restaurant. My father was proud of my dancing but didn't want me to take it seriously because he felt, 'Oh, my son's going to fail.' He was frustrated when I didn't take over the business. And he took it out on my mum and me."

Now 44, Khan is revisiting his past for the Channel 4 documentary The Curry House Kid, which tasks him with creating a dance inspired not only by Britain's embrace of curry, the people who make it, and its history, but by his own traumatic memories of serving abusive customers. "It was tough. I grew up in a period when a lot of violent racist yobs just came to the restaurant to empower themselves by degrading us." A customer once smashed a pint glass over his head. "I hated my father because he'd still welcome them back next weekend. But he had to digest that abuse in order for us to be able to put food on our plate. That Catch 22 was frustrating for a teenager."

That frustration is a big part of The Curry House Kid. Khan even incorporates his father into his climactic dance – a mix between the classical Indian style of Kathak and contemporary – as a meek figure, expressed through Khan painting a smiling face on his shaved head and bowing low. But the intent of the documentary is not to portray his father as a bad man, he insists. "It's not that simple. That generation of immigrants had a huge responsibility. They had nothing here. They had to fight for every brick."

According to Khan, 90 per cent of so-called Indian restaurants are owned by Bangladeshis like his parents. Many migrated to Britain during the 1960s and 70s, bringing dishes like chicken tikka masala and vindaloo with them. Britain's taste buds haven't been the same since.

"It's so beautiful for this country to not only accept curry as a national cuisine but transform it, too," says Khan. "Because the curry that we know is not the same as the curry in Bangladesh. It was mixed with tomato soup at some point – and that came from the West."

But times are changing, and the modern curry house is under threat – with the industry estimating that half of Britain's Indian restaurants will close within the next ten years.

'I hated my father as he'd welcome back the racist yobs'

FAMILY TIME
Akram with his parents Anwara and Mosharaf in the 1970s

THE REASONS FOR this are multitude. During Khan's film, for example, he visits London's curry hot spot Brick Lane and finds that its restaurants – whose traditionalist owners are resistant to change – are being replaced by trendy bakeries. But it is also reflective of a bigger generational and political shift – of the children of immigrants, just like Khan, wanting to leave the family business behind. And a Conservative government immigration policy that has made it difficult for restaurants to fill their places. The curry-house industry even backed Leave in the 2016 Brexit referendum, in the hope that rules around immigration from outside the European Union would relax.

"And that was the biggest lie ever," says Khan. "The younger generation want to do other things, and there aren't enough of the skills that are needed. They're still in Bangladesh, India, Pakistan... Everything that Brexit is, curry is not." STEPHEN KELLY

JUSTICE

Forensic scientist Angela Gallop reveals the scientific breakthroughs that are now catching killers who have eluded the police for decades

IT WAS PURELY by chance that I became a forensic scientist. After graduating from Sheffield University with a degree in botany, I returned to my home city of Oxford, where I was just completing a DPhil (on the biochemistry of sea slugs) when a friend pointed out to me an advertisement for a job with the Forensic Science Service. Forty-five years after starting work as a forensic biologist at the FSS laboratory in Harrogate, North Yorkshire, I still enjoy the challenges. Or most of them, anyway.

The three main focuses of activity for a forensic scientist are the crime scene, the laboratory and the courtroom. As a trainee, you start in the middle, in the lab, learning how to carry out tests, interpret the results and report them in court. Only when you've mastered those skills are you allowed to go to crime scenes – as I did for the first time in February 1978, when the body of 18-year-old Helen Rytka, one of the victims of the Yorkshire Ripper, was found in a timber yard in Huddersfield.

GARLANDED
Dr Gallop was awarded an honorary degree at Nottingham Trent University in 2011

After 12 years of working mainly for the police, I was so concerned about the potential for scientific evidence to be misinterpreted that I left the FSS and set up my own company to provide forensic services for the defence.

CRIME SCENE?

Forensics officers examine a suspicious car outside Parliament in 2018

CLOSE EXAMINATION
A police team searches for evidence in a London street where a man died after a robbery in 2018

Ten years later, when it seemed to be getting too easy to expose flaws in prosecution cases, a couple of colleagues and I set up another company specifically to work for the police, and we ended up helping to solve several high-profile cold cases, including the killings of Rachel Nickell, Stephen Lawrence, Damilola Taylor, Lynette White and Peter and Gwenda Dixon.

One reason for our success with cold cases was the new approach we took, particularly in terms of what we examined, in what order, for what purpose, and how. Obviously, recent advances in scientific techniques and technology were also critical – the most significant of these being DNA profiling.

In the days when we relied on blood grouping, the best we could often say was that blood on a suspect's clothing could be the victim's, or from anyone else of, say, one in a thousand of the population with the same blood group. With the full DNA profiles we can identify these days, that figure is now accurate to one in a billion. And as techniques have become more sensitive, we can now obtain results from traces of blood, other body fluids and flakes of skin so small that you can't even see them with the naked eye.

But while DNA has transformed the field of forensic investigation, there are problems, too. For example, DNA can last for many years. So you have to be very careful not to misinterpret its presence as being related to the crime you're investigating, when actually it might have been deposited perfectly legitimately some time previously, or resulted from some sort of contamination afterwards.

The other major change in forensic science has been the emergence of digital forensics. The laptops, mobile phones and other digital devices through which we all now live our lives capture a vast amount of information about us, what we've been doing, who we've been doing it with, and where we were at the time – possibly with associated photographs. Again, though, the new technology has brought challenges, including difficulties in retrieving all the digital information available and analysing it without misinterpreting, or misrepresenting, its significance by only uncovering half a story.

Another challenge that any forensic scientist has to cope with is the emotional aspect of our job. My first boss at the FSS referred to it as “the wrong sort of job for a woman”. Fortunately, the upsetting side of what we do is counter-balanced to a large extent by focusing on the science, and the satisfaction of being able to help solve a baffling puzzle.

The two cases that have probably been most satisfying for me in that respect were both cold cases. When reinvestigating the murder of Lynette White in Cardiff in 1988, we unearthed forensic evidence showing that, even 13 years or so later, it's still possible to find the blood of a murderer at a crime scene. In this case the blood was on a section of skirting board and the front door, both of which had been repainted twice. Its discovery simultaneously helped to clear the names of the wrongly convicted Cardiff Three.

In the other case, our forensic investigation into the 1989 murders of Gwenda and Peter Dixon on the Pembrokeshire Coastal Path in Wales was hampered initially by the financial straitjacket imposed by the police, who only wanted us to look for DNA. When we persuaded them to let us broaden our investigation to include clothing fibres, we found the “golden nugget” of DNA they had been hoping for, and a lot more besides, which led to the conviction of the Dixons' killer, two decades on.

DURING MY CAREER, I've discovered that the principle formulated by French scientist Dr Edmond Locard in the early 1900s is absolutely correct: every contact really does leave a trace. If we don't find that trace, the reason is usually because the funding is insufficient for what's required for the scope of the investigation, which in turn is due to the slashing of police budgets. What really worries me is that forensic science has been reduced to a series of tests on a menu – selected, and increasingly performed, by the police. While that's understandable as a response to increasing pressure on their budgets, surely it can't be right for an organisation responsible for hunting down criminals also to be in charge of producing the kind of impartial, independent scientific evidence on which the court might depend.

This dumbing-down of forensic science is based on a misconception. Because when you compare the costs of even a long, complicated forensic investigation with those of the re-investigations and public inquiries that tend to follow if a case isn't resolved – not to mention the personal cost to those involved – forensic science is not only an extremely powerful tool, but also very cost-effective.

My fears for the future are that austerity will end up crippling forensic science, and that the de-skilling of forensic scientists that's already well under way will have serious consequences for the quality of our justice.

Children taking over a chocolate factory sounds fun. But what does it teach them, asks child psychologist Tanya Byron

WHEN I GROW UP is a new three-part Channel 4 series built around the current fascination with watching young children on television just being young children. Following C4's award-winning The Secret Life of Four and Five Year Olds, this series describes itself as a "dramatic new experiment in social mobility designed with experts in social mobility, child psychology and education-ists". In each episode, the boss of a well-known enterprise (Hello! magazine, Montezuma's chocolate factory and Hunters estate agents) allows a group of seven- to nine-year-old children from different backgrounds to take over a part of their company for a week.

So what do the programme-makers hope we might learn? Focusing on "Britain's shockingly low social mobility levels", I'm told it will look at how "some of the children will need more help than others" if they are to realise their potential as adults. And also how "in modern Britain, our children's ideas of where they sit in the social pecking order are already beginning to be shaped by the age of seven and how quickly these can be altered".

This is an important issue. Last year, Unicef's Office of Research produced a Report Card called "An Unfair Start: Inequality in Children's Education in Rich Countries" that examined the factors affecting children's ability to make the most of their education and achieve their potential. It revealed that the UK ranks only in the middle of 41 high- and middle-income countries – pointing to the starkly unfair advantages available to better-off families in the world's sixth-largest economy.

I WATCHED THE EPISODE of When We Grow Up filmed at Montezuma's chocolate factory (episode two, to be shown on C4 next week) and found myself smiling as I saw little children simply being little children. I was also amazed by the way these young ones attempt to engage with the adult world of work and try to do their best, while tackling the many tricky issues that come with working in a team. Funny, creative, mischievous, honest – they could teach us adults a lot.

A key theme in the chocolate factory episode is that of opportunity and privilege. We see the privately educated, eight-year-old son of a single mother working with a group of children from less privileged backgrounds. This young lad, called Constantin, has aspirations to be a lawyer and says his life plan includes Eton, Oxford, Cambridge, Yale or Harvard. He plays brain games with his mother, who describes him as "quite exceptional", but has never been on a train. He has private tutors and fencing lessons.

'It's no fun being the one no one wants, especially at eight'

We also hear from Callum, seven, who lives with his sister, four brothers and their unemployed father and mother. His declared ambition is to be the prime minister, so that everyone can be equal, the homeless can have houses and get their bills paid. Both boys are bright, articulate and engaging, but live very different lives.

So the scene is set, with this clear contrast, for the problem outlined by Unicef to be explored. And while I think this is done with good intentions, I couldn't help but feel that Constantin was being set up from the outset to be the child who learns a tough lesson. Perhaps it's felt to be more acceptable to teach a lesson to those who have more than to those who have less – the that he has “learnt a degree of humility that he didn’t have a few days ago”.

Is this the message of the programme? Kids who have advantages need to be taken down a peg or two, while those who have less have nothing to learn other than that they can be who they want to be? I felt sorry for Constantin. As with any experiment, it’s important to consider all the factors that might explain an outcome and, even better, to allow for them. In Constantin’s case, I wonder whether his behaviour reflected that of an only child trying to function in a group of children who have siblings, some with enormous extended families. Would his controlling behaviour have been less stark if he was in a group of other only children?

O THER CHILDREN ARE also featured. There’s Harriet, the level-headed, peace-making eight year old who also takes on the role of manager. She wants to “be friendly to get the work done” and “to do teamwork and earn trust”. She tries hard, but soon experiences taunting from the boys in the team who call her “a dumb manager”. Kids will be kids, but this experience does help Harriet to empathise with Constantin and see that “it wasn’t his fault”.

There is no doubt that social mobility is a significant issue that affects our life chances, and it’s true that early life experiences can be defining in terms of the adults we become. Shockingly, poverty affects more than one in four children in the UK today. There is no doubt that the education system is unequal. According to the OECD’s 2018 report “A Broken Social Elevator? How to promote Social Mobility”, disadvantaged children in the UK who are educated together are two years behind the pupils in schools with middle-class children.

It is completely unfair that some children have more while others have less, and those that have less are likely to do less well.

I’m not sure that When I Grow Up highlights these important issues specifically, but what the episode I saw does show is that, while there can be difficulties with having too little opportunity, there can also be difficulties with having too much; and that children who are given the opportunity to experience this have the ability to be inclusive, the capacity to learn and the courage to change. Such a shame that we can lose those qualities as we grow up.

has learned humility while the others are admired for showing their potential.

When the children are asked to run the chocolate shop for a day, Constantin is the first to be given the job of team leader. All the kids volunteer, but he is chosen, which already feels rather like a set-up. And it doesn’t go well. He’s shown to be bossy and controlling, gets into a scrap with Callum, who is running the till, and is sternly admonished by a customer – who tells him that his behaviour isn’t that of a manager and makes her feel uncomfortable.

In the end, Constantin leaves the group and goes home. When he tells the others he’s leaving and hears their reactions, he says: “Don’t act like you’re sorry.” It’s no fun being the one no one wants in the group, especially when you’re eight.

JOB FOR LIFE?
Archie and Callum make an enthusiastic sales team

To be fair to the programme, Constantin does return and shows greater teamworking abilities. Good for this little lad – it shows resilience and courage to walk back into a group that doesn’t seem to want him. I don’t know many adults who would do that. But still, while the other parents weep for their children who have made them so proud, Constantin’s mother notes

Two great masters of the marathon meet again in London

London Marathon Sunday 8.30am BBC2, 9.00am Radio 5 Live Sports Extra, 10.00am BBC1

SOMETIMES SPORT IS about seizing control of space and time: commanding the place for the duration of the event. This week two great masters of this ferocious aspect of the competitor's art come together in the streets of the capital to answer the question: who owns London?

Eliud Kipchoge of Kenya and Mo Farah of Britain will again contest the men's event at the London Marathon, as they did last year, but they are very different athletes. Time and again, Farah has stepped on to a running track and made it His Place, where those who questioned his control invariably came off second best.

He did this most memorably at the London Olympic Games of 2012, where he won the 5,000 and the 10,000 metres. He then repeated this feat, completing the double-double in Rio in 2016. Those who challenged him learnt to regret it: Farah's suave, confident, even regal style of running made subjects of them all.

Farah then stepped up to the marathon last year, winning the event in Chicago, setting a new European record (two hours, five minutes and 11 seconds) in order to do so. But if you think that level of performance, added to his withering dominance on the track, is enough to make him favourite in London, think again.

Kipchoge was less dominant than Farah on the track. His haul from two 5,000m races at the Olympic Games is one silver and one bronze, in 'To win the London Marathon would be life-changing for Farah'

2008 and 2004 respectively, not something to make Farah tremble. But when he stepped up to the marathon, he was, more or less at once, the master of every race he took part in.

He has run 12 marathons and won 11 of them. He has won three London Marathons, three in Berlin and the Olympic event in Rio. He is also the world record holder. World records in marathons are dodgy things, depending on the nature of the course and the prevailing weather conditions.

But in Berlin last year - which is known as a fast course - Kipchoge macerated the previous record, beating it by more than a minute, or by damn near a quarter of a mile. Let's savour that time: two hours, one minute and 39 seconds - three-and-a-half minutes faster than Farah's best.

In other words, if both men run their fastest, there will be only one winner. So what has Farah got in his favour? The first is that the marathon is very much an on-the-day event, for all that Kipchoge has done to change that. Every time you enter the last two or three miles of a marathon at racing pace, you are never quite sure what you will find.

The second is, of course, that Farah is running before his home crowd: look on it as an experiment to see if 26 miles of love can lend wings to a man's heels. And one more plus: if they are shoulder-to-shoulder as they enter the Mall, Farah is the one with the rocket fuel.

FARAH HAS BEEN making some regretful noises about leaving the track behind, and has even been talking about a comeback for the Olympic Games in Tokyo next year. Though I'm certain that his coach, Gary Lough - Paula Radcliffe's husband and former coach - will be pouncing on any hint of half-heartedness, it's still a worrying trend so far as the next race is concerned.

To win the London Marathon would be a life-changing event for Farah; after all, Kipchoge is probably the finest marathon runner in history. Trying yourself out against the very best is the only way to become the best, but it leaves you with nowhere to hide in defeat. So remember this: the race doesn't always go to the swift - but it's usually the right way to bet.

Genius or control freak? Andrew Collins profiles the enigmatic Stanley Kubrick

2001: a Space Odyssey, Paths of Glory/ Barry Lyndon Sat 8.30pm, 10.50pm BBC2/Sun 9.00pm BBC4

I WON'T BE ALONE in finding it impossible to think of the titanic figure of Stanley Kubrick without hearing Sunrise, the first part of Richard Strauss's Also sprach Zarathustra, composed some 70 years before it would become indelibly wedded to imagery from 2001: a Space Odyssey.

The same fanfare will resonate often this year, the 20th anniversary of Kubrick's death. The anniversary is being marked in grand style with a retrospective at the BFI Southbank in London; a cinema re-release of A Clockwork Orange and Dr Strangelove in 4K restorations; and the long-awaited arrival of Stanley Kubrick: the Exhibition at London's Design Museum, which runs from 26 April to 15 September, and has already been seen in 17 cities from Amsterdam to Seoul.

Closer to home, the BBC is airing a selection of his work this weekend: 2001 and Paths of Glory on BBC2; Barry Lyndon on BBC4.

Stanley Kubrick was profiled at inordinate length in The New Yorker in 1966, by which time the photographer-turned-film director (and New Yorker) had nailed himself to the movie map, commanding a sensation with his adaptation of Nabokov's Lolita. Despite being robbed of the novel's eroticism by the censorious Motion Picture Production Code, it was nevertheless advertised with the come-on, "How did they ever make a movie of Lolita?"

Dr Strangelove was Kubrick's attempt to reverse a blasé attitude to nuclear annihilation, which he felt had become "represented by a few newsreel shots of mushroom clouds". His response was a gloomy satirical chamber piece starring mainly Peter Sellers (whose dialogue ideas were welcomed) that builds... yes, comically... to a nuclear exchange.

The New Yorker piece trails Kubrick to Borehamwood in Hertfordshire, where he is obsessively building 2001: a Space Odyssey. It would be the film that bestowed immortality upon his bear-like frame. He and co-writer Arthur C Clarke's masterwork premiered in April 1968, depicting a base on the Moon a year before Neil Armstrong's first giant leap in July 1969.

Never happier, nor more hassled, than when he was in production, in Borehamwood Kubrick was surrounded by "an incredible disarray – papers, swatches of materials to be used for costumes, photographs of actors who might play astronauts, models of spaceships, drawings by his daughters, and the usual battery of cameras, radios and tape recorders". Such managed chaos might follow around any director working on a $12 million existential space epic, but Kubrick was a fabled perfectionist who exercised control over every aspect of the film-making process.

A recent article in Sight & Sound, focusing exclusively on his interest in the design of the posters for his movies, ran for six pages; it quoted designer Saul Bass, who recalled Kubrick's notes during the conception of the publicity for The Shining: "I don't like the dots for the logo... hard to read."

Kubrick's legend, sealed in 1999 when he died in his sleep aged 70, is also hard to read. He was mythologised as a genius and workaholic while also thumbnailed as an irascible control freak. My preferred account of the man came in the recent documentary Filmworker (Sunday Film4), a profile of Leon Vitali who was an actor in Kubrick's period drama Barry Lyndon, but who switched careers and filled the vacancy of assistant. He was Kubrick's eyes and ears for more than two decades. Vitali, with the careworn look of an ex-member of Guns N' Roses about him, lists his duties: "Dialogue coaching, casting, in charge of shipping, television, sales, licensing, layout, video transfer, DVD, laserdisc, timing sheets, checking prints, trailer translation, lab work, colour timing..."

The obsessive-compulsive of lore makes an appearance when Vitali recounts the incorrect print of 2001 being delivered to the BFI and Kubrick losing his rag ("One of the worst prints I have ever seen!"). Then we see a handwritten note to Vitali at Christmas 1975: "Thank you for your great talent, energy and kindness."

He was generous to writers, technicians and actors (albeit perhaps not Shelley Duvall, who had to redo a scene in The Shining 127 times),

Ghost in the Shell ★★★
Saturday 9.00pm C4

Look back in manga

We'll come to the pre-baked controversy presently. First, you need to know that Ghost in the Shell is a watershed Japanese manga, or graphic novel; originally anthologised from 1989, it ran to three volumes. To get into it from a standing start, you'll need a broader cultural appreciation and aesthetic penchant for the enormous wet eyes and idealised body shapes of the Japanese comic-book style, aimed at adolescent boys. Also: cyber-crime, robots, artificial intelligence and ghosts.

The comic became an animated movie, or anime, in 1995, praised to the heavens for its melding of old-school animation and CGI, which suited the cybernetic futurism of the text. Devoured on home video to the tune of $43m, the film inevitably spawned a sequel on page and screen.

It was only a matter of time before the live-action outing followed, which it did in 2017 with Scarlett Johansson filling the epidermal bodysuit of protagonist and orphaned terrorist-attack survivor Major Mira Killian. In a future where research and development have gone mad, brains are implanted into "shells" or factory-made bodies.

Directed with a keen eye by Rupert Sanders (Snow White and the Huntsman), Ghost in the Shell is suitably artificial and post-Blade Runner in style, with every bout of physical interaction slowed down to the pace of a snail in treacle and belchingly underscored by composers Clint Mansell and Lorne Balfe. Ironically, it's down to Johansson to provide personality, which she does, in a coolly remote way, often stripped back to nakedness that is nothing of the sort as she's merely solder and parts.

High-class casting (Juliette Binoche, Pilou Asbaek, "Beat" Takeshi Kitano) adds spice to the mix of a well-designed cyber-yarn. It's a shame it fell foul of "whitewashing" accusations – Johansson, not Asian, plays a character previously Asian. Boffo box office in China and Japan suggests this was less of an issue outside the States. Something to debate in slow motion.

MISSION CONTROL
Stanley Kubrick directing the seminal 2001: a Space Odyssey (1968)

PAST MASTERY
The 18th-century-set Barry Lyndon (1975) starred Ryan O'Neal

but less so to film composers, whose work he frequently ditched in favour of a temporary guide track assembled from existing classical music. Alex North, who'd scored Cleopatra, A Streetcar Named Desire and Kubrick's Spartacus, saw his entire commissioned score for 2001 scrapped. (The director told an interviewer in 1975, "However good our best film composers may be, they are not a Beethoven, a Mozart or a Brahms.")

HIS LACK OF squeamishness when it came to human resources may be traced back to taking over the reins of Spartacus after original director Anthony Mann was fired by star/producer Kirk Douglas a week into the shoot. For both men, the film was the thing. As a purist who only made 13 features in just under 46 years, if you don't like one of his films, there's only one chap to blame.

His mythologised reclusiveness seems to boil down to the fact that he liked to work close to home and refused to fly. But those who knew him confirm his tenderness. Full Metal Jacket co-writer Michael Herr described him as gregarious and convivial. A legend, yes, and an enigma occasionally, but a mere mortal. I love the posthumous interview given to Sight & Sound by his wife Christiane and daughters. His middle daughter Anya said, "His work was famous, but his face was not, so he could go into St Albans Waitrose and nobody would pay him any mind."

The Bridge on the River Kwai ★★★★★

WARTIME EPIC Few Second World War films are as enduring as this multi-Oscar-winning examination of the stiff upper lip from director David Lean. Alec Guinness plays Colonel Nicholson, the epitome of British dignity and resolve. After brutal treatment at the hands of his Japanese captors in Burma, he leads his men in the building of a strategically vital railway bridge for the enemy as an exercise in keeping up morale. The ironies of conflict are further illustrated by the subplot in which wily American escapee William Holden is dispatched back into the jungle to blow up said bridge. First-rate central performances abound, including Sessue Hayakawa as the Japanese commander. But it's Guinness who stands out, imbuing Nicholson with a brand of pride, patriotism and courage that speaks of a nother age – one that can be admired and honoured without necessarily wishing to go back there. SCI-FI This seminal work from Stanley Kubrick is considered by some to be less a supreme piece of cinema than an innovative product of the 1960s. But the memorable images still resonate, such as the giant Starchild floating through space and the apes putting two and two together following the appearance of a mysterious monolith. It is Kubrick's haunting, stylised combination of music (Strauss's Also sprach Zarathustra and The Blue Danube) and visuals that gives 2001 its eerie, mesmerising quality. As a slice of philosophy on how we began and where we will go, the film continues to intrigue and perplex. SH (UK/US 1968, HD) A film oddity, p32

WAR DRAMA The second in tonight's Stanley Kubrick double bill was championed by Winston Churchill, who said it came close to capturing the atmosphere of the First World War and the workings of the military mind. But this indictment of the futility of war can also be read as a lament for the decline of the once glorious French army. As the general who orders a hopeless attack on a German position, Adolphe Menjou is a villain not because he is an officer adhering to the letter of army law, but because he is an arrogant aristocrat, motivated more by fear of the lower classes than by hatred of the enemy. WESTERN Kevin Costner's skill with westerns was proven by his masterpiece Dances with Wolves. This doesn't aspire to the epic scope or profound themes of that movie, but it's still a beautifully crafted, well-acted example of the genre that only occasionally lurches towards cliché. Costner is impressive as the taciturn Charley, but it is Robert Duvall's restrained, dignified performance as Boss Spearman, the gruff de facto father to a "family" of travelling cowpokes, that is the movie's real treat. Gorgeously shot and solidly sentimental, this is a delight for those who like their westerns on the traditional side. AS (US/UK 2003, violence, some swearing, HD)

7.20-9.00pm E4 PG

SCI-FI While a sequel to the 1997 hit Men in Black was inevitable, its quality wasn't guaranteed. Director Barry Sonnenfeld returns with sharp-suited alien immigration agents Jay (Will Smith) and Kay (Tommy Lee Jones), who must save the planet from an evil alien queen (Lara Flynn Boyle). Sadly, despite Smith and Jones's witty bantering and bickering, you can't help feeling that this is the least that everyone involved could have done. SF (US 2002, edited for violence, language, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Captain Fantastic ★★★ 10.00-11.50pm BBC2 15

DRAMA Viggo Mortensen is, in all but name, Captain Fantastic in this thoughtful comedic drama. He's Ben, the practical hippy-ish patriarch who lives off-grid in the Washington State woods with his six kids. But Ben's dropout idealism is challenged after a tragedy drives the family in the direction of conformism and the big, bad world. Living the peripatetic good life was addressed in last year's Leave No Trace, but there are far more uproarious laughs here, thanks to director Matt Ross's screenplay. On a stopover with his cynical sister (Kathryn Hahn), Mortensen delivers a rousing speech about his brood ("They have the cardiovascular and muscular endurance levels of elite athletes") before the youngest recites the Bill of Rights. Among the kids, George MacKay shines, as do Hahn and Steve Zahn among the adults, but it's a group effort. You'll want to join these practical, nature-loving people where they're headed. (US 2016, swearing, HD)

Ever After: a Cinderella Story ★★★ 1.55-4.15pm E4 PG

FANTASY Director Andy Tennant brings new freshness and vitality to the Cinderella story in this delightful reworking that treats the age-old legend as if it were hard historical fact. All the pantomime sorcery and comical sidekicks have been jettisoned, and that means the romance between Drew Barrymore's feisty servant girl and Dougray Scott's handsome prince can shine even brighter. Anjelica Huston re-interprets the evil stepmother role with deft assurance, and Leonardo da Vinci (played by Patrick Godfrey) makes a surprising fairy godmother figure. It all adds up to a handsomely mounted epic with lashings of glamour. AJ (US 1998, edited for violence, language, HD)

Alvin and the Chipmunks: the Road Chip ★★ 2.50-4.40pm 5STAR U

ADVENTURE The flagging fourth film in the furry franchise has Alvin and co fearing that their hapless human "minder" Jason Lee is going to dump them for marriage to a single mum with an obnoxious teenage son. So they set out cross-country to scupper his proposal plans. And there's your plot. If as much thought was poured into the content as into the pun-heavy secondary titles of these films (The Squeakquel, Chipwrecked, The Road Chip), then they might entertain grown-ups as much as children. Still, they're huge hits with younger viewers who just can't seem to get enough of the can't-fail blend of funny voices, fart jokes and childish comedy. But, some cute moments aside, it's a formula that's wearing thin. Any further sequel should plump for They've Had Their Chips as its subtitle. DA (US 2015, HD)

For Your Eyes Only ★★★ 3.15-5.40pm ITV PG

ADVENTURE This 12th entry in the 007 series provides no real surprises, with the exception of Roger Moore getting to show a little more grit than usual. The plot revolves around the hunt for a device from a sunken spy ship, with French star (and Chanel model) Carole Bouquet providing class as the girl who may hold the key to the puzzle. If Julian Glover is rather subdued as the number one villain, there's a colourful turn from Fiddler on the Roof star Topol as a rogue with shifting loyalties, and the eagle-eyed will spot Charles Dance as a killer. Bond veteran John Glen ensures that the set pieces are spectacular enough and thankfully plays down the gadgetry. JF (UK 1981, may be edited for violence, HD)

Spring in Park Lane ★★★ 4.45-6.30pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Here's another of those fatuous fantasies about lords pretending to be servants, as wealthy Anna Neagle falls for footman Michael Wilding. Even though Herbert Wilcox's direction tends to be heavy-handed, there are many deft touches, mainly supplied by Nicholas Phipps's light-as-air screenplay. The two leads carry off the plot with some aplomb, and Wilding is especially effective, playing the role of charming wimp surprisingly well. One of a series of collaborations between Neagle, Wilding and Wilcox, Spring in Park Lane may not be to everyone's taste today, but it was a big hit in postwar Britain. TS (UK 1948, BW)

EVENING

Shadowlands ★★★★★ 6.15-9.00pm Paramount Network U

DRAMA After the sweeping scale of Gandhi and Cry Freedom, Richard Attenborough directed this intimate drama charting the tragic love affair between author CS Lewis and American poet Joy Gresham. Anthony Hopkins and Debra Winger give performances that you dream about but rarely see – in a word, perfection. The tone is set by Winger's entrance into Oxford's Randolph Hotel: "Anyone here named Loowis?" she rasps – upsetting the decorum of academe and rattling Hopkins's tea cup, and thereafter his life as an emotionally frigid bachelor. The film creates a totally convincing world and Attenborough gets beneath the skin of his characters like never before. AT (UK/US 1993, may be edited for language, HD)

Barry Lyndon ★★★★★ 9.00pm-12 midnight BBC4 PG

DRAMA Continuing this weekend's celebration of the work of Stanley Kubrick, this awesome work might be retitled 1789: a Georgian Odyssey, with the director attempting to do for the past what he had done for the future in 2001: a Space Odyssey. This is a period film like no other, a slow but hypnotic tale of an Irish youth whose life takes in the Seven Years' War, the gambling clubs of Europe and marriage into the English aristocracy. In Kubrick's world, character means less than context, so Ryan O'Neal may appear bloodless and Marisa Berenson vacant, but this is a strength, not a weakness. Anyway, there are fine turns by Leonard Rossiter, Hardy Kruger and, best of all, Leon Vitali (the subject of Filmworker, showing later tonight on Film4). Give it time, adjust to the pace and enjoy Kubrick's grandest gamble. AT (UK 1975, violence, brief nudity, HD)

Carlito's Way ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.50am ITV4 18

CRIME DRAMA Ten years after Scarface, Al Pacino and director Brian De Palma reunited here for another crime-doesn't-pay drama. Pacino plays

Puerto Rican hoodlum Carlito Brigante, who leaves jail with the aim of going straight. However, his lawyer Sean Penn has other ideas, and it's not long before his client is heading back into a world of trouble. De Palma's visual flair comes into its own in the seedy clubs and backstreet dives of New York, while Pacino's restrained performance as the leather-clad, gently lispng Carlito allows plenty of scope for the supporting cast to chew the scenery. AT (US 1993, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

LATE NIGHT

Goat ★★★ 12 midnight-1.45am C4 15

DRAMA When Ben Schnetzer makes his pledge to his brother's college fraternity, the brutality of "Hell Week" pushes him to the limit. Assault, humiliation and toxic masculinity ensue. Director Andrew Neel's film makes for horrific viewing at times – Animal House this most certainly isn't. But this isn't shock for shock's sake, as it shows the need to belong in all its ugly reality. Although it hammers its message home, Goat has some valid points to make – just make sure you don't eat before watching it. JL (US 2016, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

COMEDY DRAMA Charlie Kaufman is a precocious talent. The writer of Being John Malkovich and Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind took a leaf out of Wes Anderson's playbook to co-direct this feature-length stop-motion animation. A lyrical response to something more existential than loneliness, it concerns Michael (voiced by David Thewlis), a business author who checks into a Cincinnati convention hotel to give a talk. Michael's story is scored by Carter Burwell in melancholy mode, and you can almost hear the air-conditioning sucking the air dry. A romantic tryst with a woman called Lisa (Jennifer Jason Leigh) offers a glimpse of promise in a film that is bleak and insular, but never boring. (US 2015, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

ADVENTURE This was one Sean Connery's best outings as agent 007, despite the actor's desire to quit the franchise. This time, James Bond is sent to Japan to discover the cause of spaceships going missing, as World War Three looms. The film has one of the all-time great screen villains in Donald Pleasence's scarred, cat-stroking Blofeld, but surely this is production designer Ken Adam's triumph; built at a cost of $1 million, the secret volcanic base is a suitably impressive setting to stage the explosive climax. AC (UK 1967, may be edited for violence, HD)

COMEDY It shares the same title and basic premise as the cheesy 1980s TV show, but there's not much else linking this update to the series that rocketed Johnny Depp to stardom. Channing Tatum and Jonah Hill play the dimwit cops posing as high-school students in order to root out a drugs ring. While Hill is a lot of fun as the needy nerd, it's pin-up Tatum who really shines as the jock cop. The Lego Movie co-directors Phil Lord and Christopher Miller play things for broad laughs, and there are some well-taken jokes about how Tatum looks far too old to be in high school – not that it did any harm to Depp, who pays back the favour by appearing in a cameo. AS (US 2012, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

ACTION This blockbuster propelled Eddie Murphy to superstardom at a time when his brash, confident swagger still appeared fresh. In the first and best of the trilogy, Murphy plays the streetwise Detroit cop who causes a major upset in posh Beverly Hills when he turns up to investigate the murder of an old friend. Director Martin Brest orchestrates the senseless action with slick precision and British actor Steven Berkoff pops up as the villain of the piece. JF (US 1984, violence, swearing, HD)

DRAMA Writer/director David Ayer specialises in ride-around cop dramas – from Training Day (which he wrote) to End of Watch. The same macho politics apply in this heart-pounding drama about a tank crew, commanded by Brad Pitt, rolling through Germany in the dying days of the Second World War. Shia LaBeouf gives a studied turn as a bible-basher, Michael Peña is the loudmouth, and Jon Bernthal the cynic among the outfit. But it's through the eyes of Logan Lerman's replacement driver that the reality of conflict hits home. Ayer probes for what makes a man beneath the brutality and the bluster, resulting in a film that burns into the memory. SP (US 2014, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

ROMANCE As feature debuts go, they don't come much better than Minnie Driver's in this romantic drama. She holds together an amiable adaptation of Maeve Binchy's novel, lighting up the screen as the country girl who has to abandon her Dublin education (and rugby star Chris O'Donnell) to work in the family shop, while fending off the attentions of the smarmy Alan Cumming. Colin Firth is overly mannered as the Protestant landlord and director Pat O'Connor slips in too many emerald vistas, but the story is told with wit and charm. DP (US/Ire 1995, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

SPY DRAMA This well-cast dramatisation of John le Carré's novel hasn't been on TV for over 20 years. Ralph Richardson and Paul Rogers are the spymasters in a tale about a Polish refugee (Christopher Jones) who is persuaded to enter East Germany to verify Russian missile sites. COMEDY DRAMA The Grand Budapest Hotel acts as a perfect primer for Wes Anderson's prim, obsessively ordered style, where eccentric characters seem to exist in their own hermetically sealed worlds. This multistoried tale revolves around a hotel in a fictional European state across multiple time frames, and it's terrifically funny once it gets into its groove. Anderson gives small-to-medium parts to the usual suspects – Edward Norton, Adrien Brody and Bill Murray – but new recruit Ralph Fiennes has the most fun as the hotel's clownishly clever concierge, whose sudden mad dash through the foyer is one of the film's highlights. Alexandre Desplat's Oscar-winning, balalaika-infused score completes the feast. (US/Ger 2014, swearing, sexual references, brief nudity, HD)

COMEDY Robin Williams seems to relish a return to his stand-up roots in this movie that reunites him with his Good Morning, Vietnam director Barry Levinson. He plays a Jon Stewart-like talk-show host who puts himself up as a candidate for president, and actually wins the election. The plot then moves into conspiracy thriller territory, which is a shame, because the idea of a comedian in the White House is certainly ripe with comic potential. JF (US 2006, some swearing)

Billy Liar ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12 midnight
Talking Pictures TV PG

COMEDY DRAMA Adapted in 1963 from the novel by Keith Waterhouse and directed by John Schlesinger, Billy Liar sums up the social friction of life for a working-class undertaker's clerk in kitchen-sink Yorkshire. Played with impish vim by Tom Courtenay, Billy dreams of escape and fantasises about being the military leader of the fictional Ambrosia. In one of my favourite scenes, Billy acts out a resignation speech to his absent boss with the memorable refrain, "A man could lose himself in London. Lose himself. Lo-hoo-ho-hoo-ose himself! In Lon-don!" It's been many years since Billy appeared on Freeview, so go lose yourself in his fevered imagination. (UK 1963, BW)

MYSTERY This solid, entertaining take on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic mystery lands somewhere between the exceptional 1939 version (with Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes) and the execrable 1977 film (starring Peter Cook). With a performance that's head and shoulders above a cast of familiar British faces, Ian Richardson goes for the sardonic approach as Holmes, but there's nothing really new here. DP (UK 1983, edited for some of its language, violence)

The Man in the Iron Mask ★★★ 5.00-7.10pm Film4 PG

ADVENTURE In this sprightly adaptation of the classic Alexandre Dumas tale, Richard Chamberlain plays both Louis XIV and his unfortunate, imprisoned twin. Money was obviously thrown at the production and it stuck: it looks good and has something of the bravura of Richard Lester's The Three Musketeers, which it tries to emulate. There's a strong supporting cast, including Louis Jourdan, Jenny Agutter and Patrick McGoohan, plus zippy direction by Mike Newell, who would go on to make Four Weddings and a Funeral. Fool's Gold ★★
10.00pm-12.20am 5STAR 12

ADVENTURE Matthew McConaughey and Kate Hudson here add credence to the old adage "all that glitters is not gold". Shiny, happy, good-looking blondes the couple may be, but even they can't perk up this tired tale. The movie opens with the couple on the brink of divorce; Hudson has had enough of McConaughey's obsessive pursuit of a treasure called the Queen's Dowry and takes a job on a yacht.

Through numerous contrivances, McConaughey ends up on the same vessel and manages to lure her into a seafaring treasure hunt. What follows just feels like an excuse to have the pair strip off and bask in the Caribbean sunshine. SP (US 2008, edited for violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

The Signal ★★★

SCI-FI Although this sci-fi/horror hybrid never quite delivers a story as dazzling as its visuals, its ambitions set it apart from the average. Starting slowly in the guise of a road movie, it finds three students (Brenton Thwaites, Olivia Cooke and Beau Knapp) following a mysterious signal that they think will lead them to a computer genius who has been hacking into their college servers. But when they arrive at a decrepit shack in the desert wilderness, things turn sinister. This is more about the journey than the destination, a genre-mashing ride that uses shock and surprise to shift things up a gear. DW (US 2014, violence, swearing)

FILM OF THE DAY

Bridget Jones's Diary ★★★★★
10.45pm-12.30am ITV 15

ROMANTIC COMEDY It seemed at the time like historic miscasting when Texan Renée Zellweger won the prize of playing the English "singleton" from Helen Fielding's newspaper columns and subsequent novel. Actually – and the hit sequels underline it – Zellweger is ultimately rather charming as the hapless, accident-prone book publicist who has a doomed crush on Hugh Grant's caddish boss. Colin Firth sidesteps vanity to complete the love triangle as awkward suitor Mark Darcy – a delicious in-joke, having famously played Jane Austen's Mr Darcy – and there is further metatextuality in the fact that director Sharon Maguire was the model for one of Bridget's pals, Shazza. Written by Fielding with Richard Curtis and Andrew Davies, the film is all a bit smugly London-centric, but still hugely funny. And a little bit naughty. (UK/US 2001, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon ★★★★★
6.30-9.00pm Sony Movie Channel 12

ACTION Based on the novel by Wang Du Lu and exhibiting cinematic influences ranging from John Ford and Akira Kurosawa to The Matrix, this handsome period romance from director Ang Lee put the art back into martial arts. Chow Yun-Fat and Michelle Yeoh excel as the warriors seeking the stolen sword of Green Destiny, but the most electrifying performance is from Zhang Ziyi as a teenage thief. DP (US/Chi/Tai 2000, violence)

Casino Royale ★★★
9.00-11.50pm ITV2 12

ADVENTURE Daniel Craig effortlessly makes the role of James Bond his own as the 21st movie in the series goes back to basics. The plot is essentially an origins story, as a rough-around-the-edges Bond gains his two zeros (the two authorised kills he needs for his infamous licence) before tackling villain Le Chiffre (a splendid Mads Mikkelsen) in a game of high-stakes poker. GoldenEye director Martin Campbell injects some Bourne-style grit into the proceedings and strips Bond of much of the slightly camp humour, while Eva Green provides an alluring love interest. AS (UK/CzRep/Ger/US 2006, violence, col/BW, HD)

Operation Avalanche ★★★

as in his previous feature The Dirties for this freewheeling conspiracy tale. He and co-star Owen Williams once again use their own names to play a pair of rookie CIA agents in the 1960s who volunteer to go under cover at Nasa to flush out a suspected Soviet mole. But as the irreverent larks shift into more paranoid-thriller territory, the fanciful story becomes more engrossing, with an excitingly staged car chase looking convincingly like the real deal. Bumblebee ★★★

Digital download on Sky Store, iTunes, Amazon Instant Video, Google Play

SCI-FI ADVENTURE This Transformers origin story-cum-sequel mixes The Iron Giant with The Love Bug, as the massive but lovable robot of the title takes refuge in 1980s San Francisco, where he is befriended by a teenage girl (Hailee Steinfeld).

Battered and on the verge of collapse, Bumblebee encounters all manner of fun-filled high jinks while adapting to life on earth, but evil forces are closing in. Less dependent on the bangs and crashes of Michael Bay's earlier Transformers films, this is a much warmer, family-friendly affair, with director Travis Knight (Kubo and the Two Strings) delivering a succession of well-executed laughs and sight gags.

There is splendid human support from Steinfeld, John Cena and Pamela Adlon in a story that has the heart of a Steven Spielberg crowd-pleaser but enough mayhem to satisfy those with an appetite for destruction. Terry Staunton (UK 2018, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

Being Frank: the Chris Sievey Story ★★★ 15 29 April on DVD/Blu-ray/download

Musician Chris Sievey struggled for fame under his own name, but became a cult figure when he donned a papier-mâché head and began performing under the moniker Frank Sidebottom. This documentary chronicles the story of a man who yearned for more typical stardom, only to become imprisoned by the alter ego he created. Former members of Frank's group (including Jon Ronson), comedians Johnny Vegas and Ross Noble, as well as Sievey's own family, paint a vivid portrait of ambition beset by alcohol and drug issues, while celebrating one of the most curious comic creations of recent times. DVD extras include several featurettes. TeS RT Offer To order the DVD for £13.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting ref RT1720. A Duty to entertain

Story is everything in the AC-12 thriller, says David Butcher

OH, IT'S AWFUL," was how one disillusioned friend summed up the current series of Line of Duty to me. Which struck me as harsh.

It's not so bad, is it? You can argue that the formula has lost some of its edge after four series. Yes, the dialogue went a bit acronym-tastic at one point. And sure, the efforts to turn Ted Hastings into a shifty-eyed git ("Dick Dastardly," said my friend) with a whole series of Ted herrings – that feels overdone. But – awful?

No, I still feel I'm getting my money's worth. Most of all, I love the way, more than any other drama, it comes out swinging, and keeps swinging. There's no let-up. Most series hang their plotlines out between poles, like bunting or fairy lights, with droopy stretches and occasional peaks. Line of Duty is a high wire all the way – even when it's the grim tension of "document nine in your folders" in one of the doom-laden interview scenes – which I'm glad to say are back this week (Sunday BBC1).

It's pure plot; 100 per cent extra-virgin cold-pressed plot. It's plottier than Jeremy Corbyn's allotments, plottier than Westminster in a leadership crisis. And I love it for that. Writer Jed Mercurio just has a way of folding more intrigue and jeopardy into his story than other writers, like a baker fattening his pastry with more butter.

It's a rarity, this. We all know TV dramas that go big on mood, character, atmosphere or a sense of place – and that's fine. Given a decent director, you can always shoot scenes artily, so they look cool and your protagonist can frown in a tortured way and gaze out to sea, or whatever.

'It's plottier than Westminster in a leadership crisis'

But that's not Line of Duty. It's the most wilfully drab drama on television. It has all the visual richness of a stationery cupboard, and I love it for that, too. Then again, it's hardly character-driven, either. If you don't believe me, try describing DS Steve Arnott's character. What sort of bloke is he? Well, er... he's a straight arrow, conscientious, bit of a cold fish... Kate? Well, she's a straight arrow, too, conscientious, er... You see? They're basically ciphers.

I'm not saying they don't matter: Martin

Compston and Vicky McClure flesh them out and make us care. And Adrian Dunbar's Ted Hastings is a more complex soul, which is why he feels like the series' beating heart, fella – as well you know.

BUT WHAT MATTERS in this story is the story, its latest kinks and byways, in which any number of online discussions get lost and never see the light of day. One misspelling of "definitely" here, or a body part in a freezer there, fuels debates for days.

There's a reason most dramas don't go down this plot-aholic route. It's easy for massive ructions to become far-fetched. Lord knows, Line of Duty has its share of contrivances – including a couple this week that will stretch a few eyebrows. But the show's MO has always been OTT.

In the very first episode, Steve Arnott led an armed raid in which an innocent man was shot because a number 9 had worked loose on a front door and looked like a 6. I remember at that first press screening tutting to myself and thinking Jed Mercurio had gone too far this time, his new series wouldn't take off with plot-points that cheeky. Four series later, Thandie Newton's character was checking out of hospital with half an arm. Shows how much I know.

STOP PLAYING PLOTLINE PINBALL

While we're about it, there's another reason to love Line of Duty. In a bold piece of TV storytelling, it shows us events in the order they happen. So if the balaclava gang plans a raid and then while it's unfolding a top cop is shot, that's what we see – rather than starting with a blaze of gunfire followed by the caption "48 hours earlier". I'm fed up with captions. The Widow (Mon ITV) has so many "Three years earlier", "Present day", "Teatime tomorrow" captions, it becomes plotline pinball. Absurdly, seven episodes into the story, characters are still explaining to each other the past events we saw in episode one, and now can vaguely make sense of. But the timeline tinkering is there to hide something: the story, when you get down to it, is a bit dull.

1 DRAMA WITH HEART Chambers Netflix

A coming of age story combines powerfully with horror in a beguiling new drama. In shimmering, spooky Arizona, a teenager (Sivan Alyra Rose) has a heart transplant, bringing her into contact with the richer, somehow unsettling family of the dead donor girl. With Uma Thurman lending it star power as the grieving mother, it blends the mundane and the supernatural to mesmerising effect.

Available from 26 April

BACK TO BRAZIL 2 Samantha! Netflix

The bright and colourful Brazilian comedy about the stresses of C-list notoriety is back. Last year we met Samantha (Emmanuelle Araujo, right), a former child star trying to play the fame game again. That's consistently backfired, and the indignities continue this year when a movie based on her supposed diva antics in her youth goes into production. It's a smart blend of family comedy and spiky barbs about preening celebs.

REMEMBER THIS? 3 Hamish Macbeth Amazon Prime

Leave the chaos of 2019 and go back to a bucolic 1995 drama, starring Robert Carlyle as the cop on the west coast of Scotland for whom romance and an easy life are more important than putting away criminals.

ANOTHER CHANCE 4 Grandma's House

Amazon Prime

Simon Amstell's eco-fable Carnage is on iPlayer – and Amazon has his autobiographical 2010 sitcom. His neuroses give it a real-com edge but more importantly, a fab cast (Rebecca Front, Samantha Spiro, James Smith) enjoy a script full of spiky family ding-dongs. When it introduces classic, intricate sitcom plotting it gets even better.

FRESH FROM TURKEY 5 The Protector Netflix

The era of Marvel superheroes on Netflix is drawing to a close, so why not get your comic-book fix by venturing further afield? This original series, now back for a second run of episodes, follows an aspirational young Istanbul resident (Cagatay Ulusoy) who's stumbled into an endless battle between good and evil, acquiring invincibility in the process. The mystic elements are offset well by the vibrancy of the modern city. Available from 26 April

IN-YOUR-FACE COMEDY 6 Lunatics Netflix

Chris Lilley, master of the unsubtle mockumentary, delivers another gallery of grotesques. As usual he plays all the main characters himself, offering a mix of old-fashioned eccentrics – an estate agent with freakishly massive buttocks, for instance – and outliers who now express themselves via YouTube or Instagram. Beneath the cartoonish surface there's a celebration of outsiders staying true to themselves.

THRELFALL ON FORM 7 What Remains iPlayer

David Threlfall does the small things beautifully in this 2013 crime drama, as a detective who carries on after retirement, haunted by his final case: the body of a dead woman found in the shared attic of a townhouse split into flats. A ludicrous final 20 minutes undoes some of the fine work that comes before, but for three and a half episodes it's an unusually restrained, bleakly insightful portrait of dark secrets behind closed doors.

Irresistible. Available from 26 April

LE SATIRE

Netflix

Try this if you like your Hollywood satires low-key and cynical. French comedian Gad Elmaleh plays a version of himself who decamps to LA, mainly to visit a long-lost son who turns out not to be interested, but also to lord his success over the comedy fraternity... who turn out not to be interested, because nobody in America has ever heard of him. Everyone's deluded and awful but, as the series goes on, they're gently rounded out and humanised.

10

The Bay

ITV Hub

Morven Christie leads an excellent cast in a crime series that arrived looking like a Broadchurch knock-off – murder in a coastal town reveals the miserable residents' secrets – but evolved into a different beast, character-driven and with Christie's compromised detective at the heart of it.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

It's an all-star Wacky Races – with zombies

Sky 1 has carved out a niche for slightly offbeat dramas with big-star names in recent years. Now there's Curfew, in which the likes of Sean Bean, Adrian Lester, Miranda Richardson and Harriet Walter join a much younger but equally solid cast for a mash-up of zombie horror and Wacky Races.

It's set in the not-too-distant future, where a mysterious virus has turned a large swathe of the population into cannibalistic zombies who hide during the day but come out to hunt at night. As a result, Britain's under curfew, and the first episode does a great job of setting the scene of a capital under siege-like conditions.

But there is a way out: a mysterious American millionaire (The OC's Adam Brody) is offering an escape to his zombie-free island for anyone who can get out of London and up to the Highlands during an adrenaline-fuelled, potentially lethal night-time road race. Which nicely sets us up to meet the varying vehicles and their crews, all of whom have different but equally important reasons to want to win. At the same time, plentiful flashbacks take us back to the origin of the virus and the inevitable "big pharma" company at the heart of the problem.

While some characters seem not that unfamiliar – Bean's extremely trigger-happy gangster, Walter's conflicted scientist – what marks Curfew out is its originality of tone. There are some knockabout scenes of humour – a spaced-out Billy Zane (above) psychoanalysing a mother (Andi Osho) who thinks she's been infected is a highlight. There are moving scenes of family connection. And there are some genuinely scary bits as lead characters are dispatched frequently and often brutally.

Coupled with smart graphics, retro tunes and very cool opening credits, Curfew has – despite some stomach-churning scenes – a large amount of charm. GILL CRAWFORD

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Keeping old hardware alive

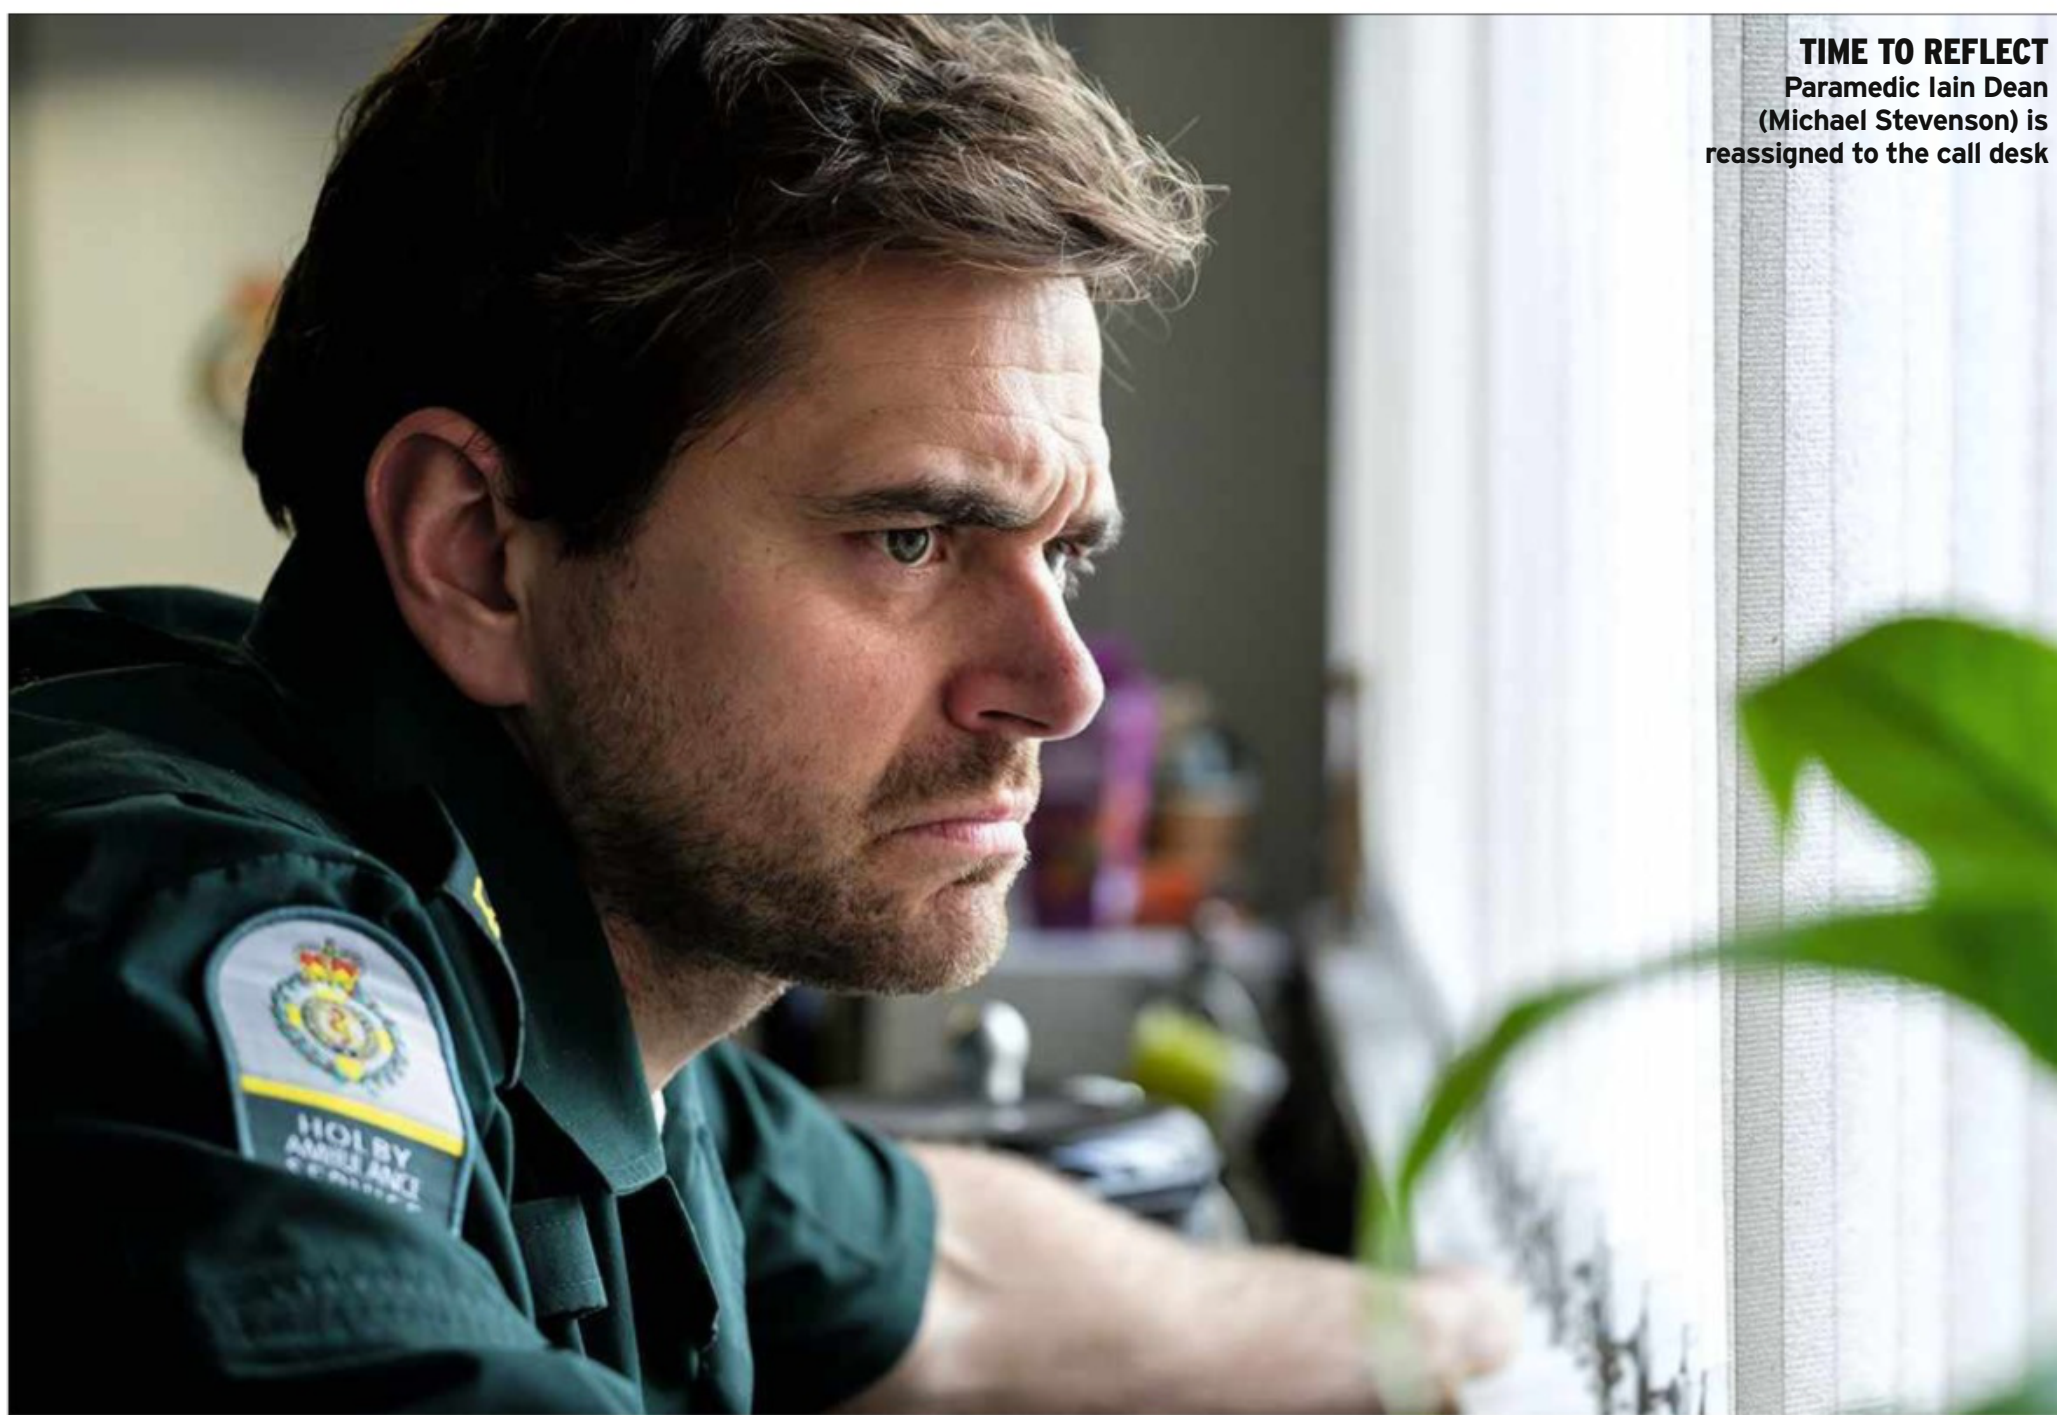

Doc Dig was recently asked how to connect an old TV, which doesn't have modern HDMI inputs on the back, to Netflix. It's a toughie. Buying old streaming boxes from eBay is possible, but the software may go out of date. The only real option is an HDMI to SCART converter (make sure it converts the correct way around) for around a tenner, but it will be ugly. If you have the necessary port, you might be tempted to use an HDMI to VGA adapter: that connection is designed for computers and is technically HD-capable. However, you should be aware VGA doesn't carry sound and, maddeningly, the latest streaming boxes have removed a separate audio output.

Connecting old equipment to new TVs is easier, with one exception: modern sets introduce a tiny, but immensely irritating, delay to old game consoles. Like classic cars, there's now a hobbyist industry dedicated to keeping old consoles HD-compatible. Doc Dig spent far too much money on the GCHD MK-II (£130) for the Gamecube, and weekends with a soldering iron modding his N64 (retrorgb.com/ultrahdmi.html). For easier nostalgia, try recent retro consoles like the Nintendo Classic Mini (£70) or upcoming Sega Mega Drive Mini (£70). Because tech may change, but memories are for ever.

JONATHAN HOLMES

TIME TO REFLECT
Paramedic Iain Dean (Michael Stevenson) is reassigned to the call desk

PICK OF THE DAY Casualty 8.20pm BBC1

DRAMA This is one of those break-from-the-norm episodes that take viewers out of the hospital to focus on one character's life. In this case, it's paramedic Iain (Michael Stevenson) who, following his recent suicide attempt, isn't yet allowed back out in the ambulance with his colleagues. Instead, he's behind a desk taking emergency calls from the public, some of which, as you'll see, have particular emotional resonance for him.

Now, at this point, you might be fretting that this temporary format change means you won't be getting your usual ED-based blood-and-guts mayhem. But, thankfully, writer Barbara Machin (who also wrote Robyn's video diary in 2017, as well as the 2018 episode that saw rape victim Alicia give her account to the police) ensures that the drama still contains its share of crises. And watch out for a smooth guest turn from silky voiced Frances Barber who, as Iain's therapist Claire, sheds light on why her patient was pushed so close to the edge in the first place. DAVID BROWN

Ninja Warrior UK

6.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT We're used to shirtless showboating from our wannabe male ninjas, but never before have I seen someone tackle the obstacles in skinny jeans and a polo shirt. Maybe Hamburg-born Henry Heinemann thought he was coming to film a Gap advert? Not that he puts in a bad performance – in fact, his skills rival competitors like Mike Snow, who, along with some other notable past finalists, is back to give the course another go. Some of them make it look like a day out at a soft-play centre.

As for the obligatory puns, we need look no further than the reaction to Legoland stunt performer Jessica. "She'll be bricking it," says the indefatigable Kammy. DAVID BROWN

Pointless Celebrities

7.30pm BBC1

QUIZ There's an appreciative murmur from the studio audience when Alexander Armstrong introduces Nicholas Briggs. It's because he provides the voices of Doctor Who's Daleks and Cybermen – although Xander manages a pretty fair Dalek impression himself.

This week's celebs may not look familiar but they make their living with their voices, so Xander and Richard Osman love the idea that we're sitting at home, not looking at the screen, when we suddenly hear the voice of Daddy Pig (from Peppa Pig) talking to David Archer. Among the subjects to bone up on are second novels and famous people with their cats (luckily you just have to identify the person). JANE RACKHAM

Follow the Money

9.00pm, 10.00pm BBC4

DRAMA Anna remains impressively cool when cops Alf and Moller turn up at the bank to investigate some of her dubious clients, though she needs to get tough with Nete, the branch manager who usurped her but can now barely manage a sentence. And Alf is under pressure from the police chief to ease off his investigation into Wasim and Nicky.

It's saying something when the most likeable character in this microcosm of moral bankruptcy is a drug smuggler. Nicky endearingly plays happy families with his son Milas and lover Sahar but soon reminds us of the violent streak he's kept at bay since the last series. And tonight we finally encounter the master criminal Marco. PATRICK MULKERN

By Royal Appointment: Shops Serving the Queen

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY It may not surprise you to learn that among the hundreds of companies that the royal family patronise are eight champagne houses. But also on the list of royal warrants, there's a scaffolding company, a sacks supplier, a broomstick maker and Weetabix (so now we know what the Queen has for breakfast). With the exception of new technology firms, they're all well established companies, many dating back to the 1800s and even the 1700s.

This documentary was still in production as RT went to press, but for those of us without blue blood, it may help us get a spot of royalty into our shopping basket. JR

FRANCES BARBER'S TV CV

It's hard to pin Frances Barber to one role, with the versatile performer enjoying a spectrum of diverse TV, film and theatre roles across a 40-year career. Tonight, the 61-year-old actor guest-stars in Casualty (8.20pm BBC1), but she began her TV career in the 1980s in Reilly: Ace of Spies and Behaving Badly opposite Judi Dench – after graduating from Bangor University in Wales with a degree in English literature and drama in 1978.

"I had three of the most wonderful years of my life there," she said. Barber's film roles have included The Escape, Prick Up Your Ears and Sammy and Rosie Get Laid, while she's appeared in stage productions of Camille and Uncle Vanya. She raised eyebrows in 1992 when she charmed Inspector Morse wearing a revealing dress, while in 2011, she donned an eye patch to play Madame Kovarian in seven episodes of Doctor Who. FRANCES TAYLOR

Torvill & Dean

9.00pm ITV3

DRAMA Gifted young figure skater Jayne Torvill yearns to blossom. She knows she can, she just needs the right male partner out there on the rink. "I want to express myself!" she tells her parents. "Why? What have you got to express?" wonders her kindly mum, being accidentally withering.

William Ivory's winning, rather sweet 2018 biographical drama watches Jayne and Chris (Poppy Lee Friar and Will Tudor, both terrific) take their first steps onto the municipal rink in their hometown of Nottingham and follows them to the 1984 Sarajevo Olympics.

We get some idea of that once-in-a-lifetime alchemy that brought two driven talents together to produce the gold-medal-winning Boléro routine.

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.10pm BBC1

CHAT SHOW There's even more innuendo than usual flying about Mrs Brown's this evening. It's because Take Me Out's Paddy McGuinness is one of the guests, meaning the floodgates are open for a string of "let the spotted see the dick's", "let the toad see the hole" and "let the pork see the pie's. Well, as Harry Hill would say, you get the idea with that.

Also on the sofa are Love Island winner Dani Dyer and her mum Jo. It's the final episode of the run, and although it's light on chaos, it bumbles along amiably enough. In the absence of any new episodes of Mrs Brown's Boys, this is always going to be the next best thing for fans of the mischievous mammy. FT

9.15pm ITV

CHAT SHOW What we're wondering is whether Alexander Armstrong and Ashley Banjo will have the, er, bottle to persuade Wossy to take part in a charity stripathon (the next All New Monty is due on your screens next week)? Or will they focus their attention on our favourite TV traveller, Michael Palin? They might do better there – he has, after all, been spotted naked several times during his Monty Python days.

Joining them on Jonathan's yellow sofa is Michael Sheen, who plays an uptight angel in the Amazon Prime/BBC2 version of Terry Pratchett and Neil Gaiman's Good Omens, while lightening things up is the astringent comic Katherine Ryan. JR

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT You never know who or what you're going to get emerging onto the Britain's Got Talent stage. It could be a moving rendition by a young singer, or it could be a chap performing musical flatulence with his hands (both of these acts sailed through when they auditioned in recent episodes).

The one thing you don't quite expect on BGT is seasoned variety acts. Escapologist Jonathan Goodwin – who set himself on fire while wearing a straitjacket – previously had his own TV programme and appeared on The Jonathan Ross Show, while Simon Cowell's Golden Buzzer, comedian Kojo Anim, hosted a breakfast radio show and has performed with Kevin Hart and Chris Rock. Doctor in waiting

The Golden Voyage of Sinbad ★★★

3.45pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW
Tom Baker says he was between jobs, "making the tea" on a building site, when the audition to be the fourth Doctor Who came up. The BBC's head of serials, Bill Slater, knew of Baker's work but the show's producer didn't, until Slater took him to see The Golden Voyage of Sinbad, in which Baker plays the evil Prince Koura. One eccentric, boggle-eyed performance later, and he was hired. Getting the role of the Doctor, Baker says, was "the best thing that ever happened to me as a professional actor". STEVE MORRISSEY

Unfriended: Dark Web ★★★

10.10pm Sky Premiere

Six friends meet up online for their regular "game night", but one of the players is using a stolen laptop and the original owner is desperate to get it back. That's because it's the gateway to their murder-for-hire snuff videos, and soon the chat-roomers are enmeshed in a lethal game of cat and mouse. A scarier techno-horror than its 2014 predecessor, this bleak stand-alone sequel drags the web-based thriller into unsettling new areas. ALAN JONES

Inside the church

Louis Theroux: My Scientology Movie ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Louis Theroux's exposé of Scientology uses the testimony of former high-ranking members of the church to poke fun at its leader, David Miscavige, and its best known disciple, Tom Cruise. If there are few fresh insights, Theroux does shine a light on the religion's more unsettling practices. DAVID PARKINSON

WHAT'S UP, FELLA?

PICK OF THE DAY Line of Duty 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Superintendent Edward Hastings is called to that room that feels like the headteacher's office, with the wood panelling and the awful carpet. Looking sheepish with his cap under his arm, Ted gets a bombshell from the top brass...

Oh lord, it's getting ugly now. After the juddering end of last week's episode – a real humdinger – it feels reasonable to be thinking, "Follow that." And for a while, to be fair, it feels as if the plot can't really follow it, as if we've taken a left turn into slightly fanciful territory where Ted is behaving in ways that fully justify Steve muttering, "God knows what the gaffer's playing at."

"Sir, is there something you're not telling us?" Kate asks. And yes, there are one or two things, including but not limited to that brown envelope of cash he's got back in his room at Heartbreak Hotel, courtesy of his retired cop friend. But as Ted himself might say, that isn't the half of it. DAVID BUTCHER

Countryfile

7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL The recent ITV crime drama The Bay didn't paint an especially attractive view of Morecambe, but in reality it's still a popular destination for holiday-makers and the increase in campers, Matt Baker discovers in this spring special, has had the knock-on effect of providing a vital income stream for hard-pressed farmers.

Meanwhile Ellie Harrison checks out the natural remedies offered on a floating apothecary and Adam Henson is in North Yorkshire, where he meets Michael Wignall, the chef who has revitalised the Angel in Hetton. Wignall reveals his favourite suppliers, including a Himalayan salt chamber that doesn't involve a trip to India. JANE RACKHAM

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Even after all these years, it's still fun to see owners' reactions to a valuation. At Halifax's recently restored Piece Hall a carved ceremonial stick (yes, another one) that cost £2.50 in the 1980s is worth a fair bit more now. So is a collection of Soviet posters bought for shillings in the early 70s. Their owners are gobsmacked.

But another item (I won't reveal what) that's valued at more than £15,000 merely gets an unsurprised smile and an "It doesn't matter, it's going to stay in the family". We also hear of the superstition surrounding a Wedgwood rose bowl once kept as a spare for the cruise ship Queen Mary. JR

Undiscovered Worlds with Steve Backshall

8.00pm BBC2

NATURE I knew full well that Steve Backshall survived his climb up a mountain in Greenland, because I could hear him providing the accompanying narration. But my heart was still fast rising up my throat as he made his ascent.

Maybe I was already on edge thanks to the quicksand and freezing meltwater he'd encountered before even attaching his crampons. Or perhaps it's the fact that every gram of weight counts, which means Backshall was only able to carry one tea bag in his rucksack. I can't leave the house in the morning without at least a couple of brews beforehand, so goodness knows how I'd have managed. DAVID BROWN

The Durrells

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Louisa is delighted with what she considers the "pot-pourri of guests" in her home, but the locals aren't keen. They think it's more of a bawdy house than a boarding house and they openly disapprove of decadent behaviour. Unsurprisingly, central to the gossip is the fact that Spiros is spending so much time chez Durrell. Ostensibly he's building Gerry's zoo but that seems to involve more flirting and giggling than hammering or sawing, and Leslie's matchmaking scheme only fuels the tongue-wagging.

Meanwhile a lovelorn Gerry's moping about, while in Blighty Margo finds a way to get through to "devil pupil" Maud. It doesn't involve conjugating verbs, or arithmetic. JR

MARATHON STORIES

More than 40,000 runners are scheduled to tackle the 26.2-mile course in today's London Marathon, including celebrities Chris Evans (pictured right last year), Helen Skelton and EastEnders stars Jake Wood and Adam Woodyatt. Joining them are a motley crew of runners attempting world records, including people hoping to run the fastest marathon dressed as an egg, Elvis, a shoe and, most baffling of all, a DNA double helix. Coverage begins on BBC2 at 8.30am, with the elite wheelchair race starting at 8.55am, the elite women's race at 9.15am and the elite men's race at 10am, when BBC1 takes over for coverage until 2.30pm. Gabby Logan will host, with reports from Radzi Chinyanganya, Jeanette Kwakye, Steve Brown and JJ Chalmers, while commentators include Tanni Grey-Thompson and Paula Radcliffe. Highlights from the race are on BBC2 at 6pm. FRANCES TAYLOR

Miriam's Dead Good Adventure

9.00pm BBC2
DOCUMENTARY Tracy has terminal cancer but has chosen not simply to survive for a long time but to live as much as possible. So she drinks G&T despite her doctor's advice because, as she says, "What's the worst that can happen? I die!" Tracy's positive attitude to her demise is "invigorating, wonderful!" concludes Miriam Margolyes. Certainly many people she's met in this pair of docs about confronting death have been keen to put it off as long as possible, and they've ranged from slightly eccentric to downright bonkers. Tracy, however, is serenely accepting of the inevitable, and her developing relationship with Miriam is incredibly moving. JR

American's Hidden Stories: the General Was Female?

9.00pm Smithsonian
DOCUMENTARY The title slightly punctures the big reveal of this documentary, which reopens the cold case surrounding Casimir Pulaski, the Polish-born nobleman who is known as the father of the US cavalry. Pulaski came to north America to join the revolutionary cause in 1777; he was killed in battle two years later. Two decades ago, what were assumed to be his remains were exhumed – except the bones looked female. Investigations stalled, until a new taskforce was set up in 2015; it's their discoveries that are profiled here, in bombastic fashion. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Hostile Planet

9.00pm National Geographic NATURE New series Could Bear Grylls be the next David Attenborough? This audition piece, from the makers of Planet Earth II, begins dramatically with a snow leopard leaping upon a blue sheep and hunter and prey tumbling 200ft down a ravine. Then Bear pops up – or rather clammers to a snowy summit – to tell us that life in the mountains is "brutal". Cue a sequence of beautifully shot scenes of wildlife jeopardy, which feels vaguely familiar – didn't those barnacle goose chicks throw themselves off that cliff in Life Story in 2014? The footage is stunning and Bear gives Attenborough-esque warnings about climate change, but the script is melodramatic and the soundtrack an irritation. DAVID CRAWFORD

Sex, murder and intrigue from the Netherlands, in a thriller about a defence lawyer (Fedja van Huet) who is irreversibly drawn to a photographer (Sylvia Hoeks). MAKE BELIEVE Can fancy dress relieve Victoria's (Jenna Coleman) worries?

Victoria

9.00pm ITV
DRAMA That Princess Feodora is a viper in the nest. Ever since she took up residence at the palace, there's been nothing but strife. Tonight that progresses from a tinkling in the tea cups to a full-on china-smashing row between the royal couple: "Victoria, I think your intellect is overtaxed," spits Alfred in one of those gloriously Germanic, patronising moments that drive the Queen (understandably) up the wall. But as always, the drama gets across with real poignancy how a monarch, and a queen in particular, must always feel embattled and, at the end of the day, alone. For light relief – huzzah! – there's a palace ball, with guests dressed up in Georgian wigs and costumes. It's a terrific production number that really dazzles, though poor Sophie, Duchess of Monmouth, is having a little difficulty with her bodice. Perhaps footman Joseph could help? DAVID BUTCHER

Pure Goldsmith

First Knight ★★★

3.40pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

Film composers are practical people, rarely too proud to take a job originally offered to someone else. Jerry Goldsmith, a titan after Planet of the Apes and Alien, got the call to write the music for Arthurian tale First Knight after fellow Oscar winner Maurice Jarre balked at the required four-week turnaround. Goldsmith took it to the wire, leaving just three and a half days for recording, but his score garnered better reviews than the film. Sean Connery loved it so much he gave the composer a bear hug at the premiere. ANDREW COLLINS

Watch it for free

Gosford Park ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

Maverick director Robert Altman takes the English country-house murder mystery and turns it on its head with this Oscar-winning drama, available on Channel 5's catch-up service all week. A huge cast of mostly British thespians – including Helen Mirren, Maggie Smith, Richard E Grant and Clive Owen – fleshes out the satire, which is part whodunnit, part Upstairs, Downstairs. The dramatic pace is maintained thanks to the sparkling script, written by Julian Fellowes prior to him creating TV's Downton Abbey. AC

Ann-Margret turns 78 today, and she stars in this overlooked western as a grieving widow who hires tough old-timer John Wayne to retrieve the gold stolen by her late husband. Ann-Margret is currently appearing in the latest season of US TV series Happy!, due to arrive on Netflix in the UK later this year. DAVID PARKINSON

HISTORY MAN
David Olusoga flips through the back story of 5 Ravensworth Terrace

PICK OF THE DAY A House through Time 9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY To somebody who has never seen this series, it would be hard to explain why it so often proves not just hugely interesting in all its personal histories but also quite moving. It's ridiculous, but we start to feel like we know these people. By the time you reach the end of tonight's final part, the extraordinary tale of 5 Ravensworth Terrace in Newcastle and its many residents has real emotional power.

We've met marine biologists and IRA men, trick cyclists and spiritualists, doctors and lawyers who spent parts of their lives in the Georgian terrace. Now in the 20th century we learn how two world wars "messed up people's lives and messed up their relationships", as David Olusoga puts it. There are tales of bigamy, divorce and a poor man who saw four of his children die before him. But it was also a house where a man who had lived through hell as a prisoner of war was able to start again.

Travel Man: 48 Hours in Tallinn

8.30pm C4

TRAVEL Richard Ayoade usually takes his celebrity guests to an extravagant, trendy hotel on these trips, so I imagine TV presenter Alice Levine was a bit disappointed when they rocked up at the compact Koda Stay apartments in Tallinn.

Despite this parsimonious choice, their Estonian weekend is enlivened by a "shank-ilicious" walking tour (it involves a story about a stabbed monk), marzipan painting and a meal at the stylish Noa restaurant. The trouble is, Ayoade points out later, after trying a less-than-successful Hammer and Sickle cocktail, you can't storm out of anywhere in a hurry because it takes so much time to layer up first. JANE RACKHAM

Not Going Out

9.00pm BBC1

SITCOM Lee and Lucy decamp to a cottage in the New Forest, without the kids but with their friends Toby and Anna, for a fraught weekend away. The setting prompts memories of the classic Frasier episode The Ski Lodge, but there's no door-slamming farce here: it's a more prosaic parade of passive-aggression, class resentment and bare-faced lying, set in motion by a grimly polite stand-off over which couple gets the bigger bedroom.

Although it's perhaps a bit too simple a set-up, it's diligently worked and, given that the focus is on childish point-scoring even more than it usually is, Lee Mack is in his comedy element.

JACK SEALE

The Widow

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA The Widow is one of those vexing dramas where there's so much going on, good and bad, that while it's hard to dismiss, it's also hard to love. Bear in mind, we're now at episode seven but still having to be filled in on what events in episode one meant, which gets frustrating.

I'm glad to say that tonight we get to the bottom of: how Georgia (Kate Beckinsale) came to glimpse her presumed-dead husband Will in news footage of Kinshasa; the sad story of flight 19 and how he escaped the crash; and the full extent of the coltan-smuggling ring headed by aid worker Judith (Alex Kingston). It's a lot for Georgia to take in – and it makes for a flurry of flashbacks.

Banged Up: Teens behind Bars

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series Brevard County Jail in Florida is, we're told, one of America's toughest prisons, home to 1,800 inmates and set among acres of swampland. In this three-parter, we follow eight British "tearaway teens", aged between 15 and 17, who are sent to Brevard in an attempt to steer them back onto the straight and narrow.

It's clear the youngsters are troubled, and that this could be the thing that shocks them out of their bad behaviour, but there's little depth of insight in this first episode. And it's uneasy to see how the adult inmates are gawped at, both by the teens and the cameras.

HANNAH SHADDOCK

It's always the same with whodunnits in soaps: a key suspect is arrested each week until the culprit is revealed to be a relatively minor player who won't be missed when they get sent down. At the moment in Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV), the finger of suspicion points at Nick Tilsley (Ben Price), but do we really believe he sabotaged the factory roof? Surely he's too much of a heritage Weatherfield figure to be unmasked as an out-and-out villain? And doing something as egregious as causing Rana's death is bound to put a best before date on your character. Trial by autumn. Jailed for Christmas. Recast in five years' time. We know the drill.

I think the evil-doer will turn out to be Bistro owner Robert. He's been looking shifty ever since the accident, has no family ties in the neighbourhood, does nothing except offer up menu choices ("Seared tuna is today's special" etc) and had an especially contrived motive for wanting to destroy Underworld. He's bound to be guilty. DAVID BROWN

Game of Thrones

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA The longest episode to date (over an hour and 20 minutes) is also set to be its biggest, revolving entirely around an epic battle between an army of undead warriors and Jon Snow's coalition of Westerosi allies as the two forces clash at Winterfell.

Filmed over 55 nights with up to 750 crew (plus cast), the schedule was so gruelling that one of the lead actors fainted during production, and the finished article looks set to dwarf previous high-watermark battle episodes (Blackwater, Battle of the Bastards, Watchers on the Wall) by scale if nothing else. And when the snow settles, don't be surprised to see a few fan-favourite characters finally meet their maker... HUW FULLERTON

Ghosts

9.30pm BBC1

SITCOM This haunted-house comedy isn't just knockabout fun, it has a beating heart, too. Scattered among the jokes are touching moments that suggest being dead – as most of the characters very much are – isn't a barrel of laughs. This week several revolve around Jim Howick as 1980s scout captain Pat. He's the ghost with an arrow through his neck and in the pre-titles scene we learn how it got there – and, later, enough about Pat's life to flesh out his character with deft little touches.

Meanwhile, as builders get to work on Button House, Robin the Caveman tries to be their friend, sweetly, and the Captain inadvertently gives away that tanks aren't his only love. DAVID BUTCHER

Back to Life

10.35pm BBC1 (Scotland: 11.35pm)

COMEDY DRAMA It's not just Miri who can't reveal her darkest secret: potential love interest Billy has something pretty major that he hasn't disclosed, while Oscar's routine check-up at the GPs throws up unwelcome suspicions about his marriage that are tough to voice (and if you've seen the sex scenes featuring Geraldine James, you'll understand why he's worried). In short, most people in the community seem to be an expert at concealment.

All except neighbour Anna, that is, who lets rip at Miri in the most foul-mouthed way. The voice of actor Souad Faress can occasionally be heard in The Archers (though I've never caught morally upright solicitor Usha using such words). DAVID BROWN

A TIME TO DANCE
Akram Khan tells a story of family tension and the immigrant experience

The Curry House Kid

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY If you're not drawn to documentaries that incorporate interpretative dance, fear not. Yes, choreographer Akram Khan's exploration of his British-Bangladeshi heritage is building towards a routine expressing what he learns. But before then he proves himself to be a terrific regular film-maker, bringing the grounded wisdom that a lot of artist-documentarists (Grayson Perry, Ryan Gander) have to his relationship with his own heritage.

The story of how Bangladeshis arrived in Britain, fought off racists and helped to invent the concept of the "Indian" restaurant, but must now adapt both to changing fashions and to a younger generation with different ideals, is so well told that, by the end, you'll be keen to see the performance Khan uses to sum it up.

It doesn't disappoint. JS

9.00 The Spy Who Went into the Cold: Kim Philby, Soviet Super Spy – Storyville

The story of notorious British spy Kim Philby, who evaded capture in 1963 and defected to the Soviet Union at the height of the Cold War. Visiting Beirut, London and Moscow, the programme reveals the blind spots in Britain's ruling class that made it so vulnerable to KGB infiltration.

Director George Carey Series editor Nick Fraser (R) (S) (HD)

10.10 Sincerely, F Scott Fitzgerald: a Culture Show Special

Novelist Jay McInerney explores the life of the writer whose work captured the party spirit of America in the Roaring Twenties. Although Fitzgerald, who died a largely forgotten alcoholic aged just 44, never wrote an autobiography, his letters reveal some of the inner workings of a man whose real life was reflected in his fiction.

Director Tim Niel; Series editor Janet Lee (R) (S) (HD)

11.10 Lucy Worsley's Reins of Power: the Art of Horse Dancing

Anomalisa ★★★★★ 11.10pm Film4 FREEVIEW
Animating the Barbie-sized puppets for this extraordinary stop-motion film (review, p36) was a real labour of love. The characters were sculpted out of clay by artist Carol Koch, before being brought to life using an incredibly time-consuming process called "replacement animation". Individual facial expressions were created using 3D printing, and these would be changed on the characters after each shot. It's no wonder the film took three years to make, but it was worth the effort. ELLIE PORTER

Minding the Gap ★★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies
This Oscar-nominated documentary offers a humane, infectious and moving portrait of childhood friendship and growing up. It follows three young skateboarders who race and trick-jump around the empty streets of Rockford, Illinois, escaping homes broken by absent or abusive fathers. One of the trio, Bing Liu, produced, directed, shot and co-edited the film over 12 years. As he interrogates both his friends and his mother on camera, secrets are revealed and harsh realities are faced. ANDREW COLLINS

Welcome back, Bill

Wild Bill ★★★★★
9.00pm TCM

GOT CAKE?

Tom Allen, Cherish Finden, Benoit Blin and Liam Charles are looking for baking's crème de la crème

PICK OF THE DAY Bake Off: the Professionals 8.00pm C4

FOOD Even more delicious than nibbling some fluffy, creamy confection are Benoit Blin's Gallic shrugs, lip-pursings and head-waggings when he's tasting some anxious chef's creation. Does it mean he's been transported to heaven or is deeply disappointed? Sometimes it's hard to tell.

He and fellow judge Cherish Finden give most of the first set of (very nervous) teams of patissiers a really hard time, reducing some competitors to devastated tears. But who can blame them when Cherish announces, "I did not enjoy eating that at all." To be fair, some of the chefs are alarmingly young – there's a 19-year-old and a 21-year old taking part this week.

For the miniatures challenge the six pairs must make Linzer tortes and reinvent the Bakewell tart, while the showstopper task (which should be renamed showdropper, because there's always one masterpiece that collapses into sugary rubble) involves a "big, bold and beautiful" red velvet cake. JANE RACKHAM

Champions League Football

7.00pm (k/o 8pm) BT Sport 2

Tottenham Hotspur v Ajax The real winner of this year's Champions League is surely the neutral football fan: both semi-finals are mouth-watering ties. Tomorrow two European veterans, Liverpool and Barcelona, are in action at the Camp Nou, but tonight's first-leg fixture sees Spurs welcome Ajax's young pretenders to the cauldron that is the new Tottenham Hotspur Stadium.

Both teams will be full of confidence after a Harry Kane-less Spurs knocked out Manchester City in that thrilling quarter-final goal-fest, while Ajax have already felled Real Madrid and Juventus with their beautiful but deadly free-flowing football. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Your Home Made Perfect

8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY If, like me, you've been fascinated by this series's use of virtual reality to show home renovators what architects' plans look like in 3D, have a hunt online for the 13 April edition of the BBC News channel's Click programme, which ran a piece about the technology behind the show. It'll make you look at VR in a whole new light.

This week, Bedfordshire couple Suzanne and Danny have run out of space in their boxy 60s bungalow. Architects Laura Jane Clark and Robert Jamison have radically different plans for them to explore in the virtual world. Robert says, "I'm confident they'll be surprised." He's not wrong. GILL CRAWFORD

Mystic Britain

8.00pm Smithsonian

DOCUMENTARY New series Clive Anderson provides the humour, anthropologist Mary-Ann Ochota the expertise in this grimly fascinating trot through superstitions in medieval Britain. It's a world of demons, curses, spells and cawing crows. Because there's nowt more medieval than a crow in a graveyard.

Surgeons: at the Edge of Life

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY All operations are stressful for the surgeon, but when there's a young child under the knife, it's even more pressured. "It needs resilience... and self-belief, because the risks are so high," explains paediatric cardiac surgeon David Barron, who we see creating a new pulmonary artery in a three-year-old.

In another Birmingham Children's Hospital operating theatre is two-year-old Isaac, who is getting a kidney transplant. As paediatric transplant surgeon Liam McCarthy explains, this op is especially tricky because there's so little space inside a child's body. Both men know how much trust is required when families hand over their precious child. JR

It's appropriate that Kian and Jac (right) both work on Darwin ward in Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm), seeing as they seem to be in big competition with each other. Jac rules by fear, but Kian has decided to win people over with doughnuts and flirting. "Shut up! You do what I say! I hold the reins!" yells Jac as she tries to put the newcomer in his place. And yet despite it looking like there could be all-out war, I wouldn't put it past them to be in bed together by the end of May.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Elsewhere, it's all looking a bit fraught for Dom and Ange. He's keen to play happy families with his mum and tell Chloe that he's actually her brother. But it doesn't seem as though Ange is in quite the same place – and her efforts to put some distance between them ends up jeopardising someone's welfare. Plus "Scary" Sue accidentally double-doses a frankly fearsome patient by the name of Marlene, who is apparently a baker, but comes across more like a terrifying debt collector. DAVID BROWN

In Sight of Home: the Iolaire

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Out of a population of 29,000, 6,000 men from the Isle of Lewis served in the First World War; more than a thousand never came home. But the islands' trauma didn't end when the war did – in the early hours of New Year's Day 1919, 201 returning sailors died when HMV Iolaire sank within sight of Stornoway harbour. Sixty-seven women were widowed, and 209 children were left without a father.

This sobering documentary – first shown on BBC2 in Scotland earlier this year – recalls the events of that night. What soon becomes clear is just how deep a wound the disaster opened, leaving a close-knit, deeply religious community tongue-tied by grief. HS

Don't Forget the Driver

10.00pm BBC2

COMEDY DRAMA We're used to living life in the slow lane on Don't Forget the Driver, but tonight's opening 20 minutes are almost showily sleepy. Rita goes into town to get her phone fixed. Peter (Toby Jones) takes some Japanese tourists to Hampton Court. Kayla does a shift at the food truck and we get shots of sausages sizzling on the grill. But there isn't much in the way of plot.

Mercifully, we get a belated injection of tension in the episode's last act as the people traffickers make their presence felt again, while Pete acts to keep Kayla and Rita safe. And there's a clever joke involving the coach tannoy that manages to be both funny and unsettling. DAVID BROWN

First Dates

10.00pm C4

REALITY The date is going swimmingly. They appear perfectly matched. They fancy each other. Then an inappropriate story about a previous relationship or an ill-judged joke and suddenly the air of romance has turned into something considerably chillier. Once again it's hard to guess who's going to hit it off and who's going to be taking a solo cab ride.

"Mad Lynda" is in the opening credits so we already know that she's up for a laugh, but perhaps there is something more behind the (hideous) mask that her kilt-wearing, 6ft 4in trucker date Tony will see. Meanwhile Damien is thrown to discover his date, Melissa, is still married... to herself. JR

iPlayer (expires today)

An eerie tale from the year 1600, about a 13-year-old child snatched from the street and forced to work... as a theatre performer. The phenomenon of impresarios acting on royal authority is laid out via contemporary accounts, neat animation and the hypnotic, murmured storytelling of author Katherine Rundell.

ON THE SHARP END
Jamie McCain (Alfred Enoch) is under threat

Trust Me

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA With one week to go in the medical thriller, we now know that the one thing the dead patients had in common was hypoglycaemia. So, are they being deliberately overdosed with insulin? My tip for an increasingly vulnerable Jamie: stockpile the Lucozade and Mars bars in case anyone launches a surprise attack. Though he actually goes one better and heads back to the family home on weekend leave. While this shows quick thinking on his part, it's odd for Trust Me to remove Jamie from the hospital, where a sense of claustrophobia had been carefully building.

But Jamie's reprieve is temporary, and he's soon back on the ward – and facing new threats. One showdown involving a syringe and a nerve ending won't encourage anyone to take a blood test. In fact, if you're at all queasy around sharp instruments, it's as nightmarish as it gets. DAVID BROWN

9.00 In Sight of Home: the Iolaire

RT On 1 January 1919, having survived the First World War, in excess of 250 naval men were returning home to celebrate their first new year of peace. But in a rising gale, HMY Iolaire sank within yards of the Lewis coast. Arguably the greatest disaster to befall the west coast of Scotland, it remains largely unknown to the rest of the UK. In the centenary year of the sinking, the people of Lewis tell the story. See p74.
Director/Producer Kath Pick
First shown on BBC2 Scotland (S) (HD)

10.00 The Secret History of Our Streets

2/3 Series 2. Duke Street, Glasgow
The history of three streets in Scottish cities continues with Duke Street, Britain's longest. Elegant Victorian tenement blocks line the road, yet just 40 years ago those tenements were under threat. This is the story of how some residents took on the Glasgow Corporation in a battle to save their homes.
Director/Producer Russell England (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

11.00 Hidden Killers of the Postwar Home

Dr Suzannah Lipscomb explores the era when British people embraced modern design for the first time after years of austerity. The look and feel of the postwar 1950s home had its roots in the materials discovered during the Second World War. Despite the social changes, Lipscomb discovers many dangers lurking in 1950s homes.
Director/Producer Suzanne Phillips (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

Leone remembered

The Good, the Bad and the Ugly ★★★★★ Netflix

Sergio Leone died on this day 30 years ago, aged 60. Despite being credited as director on only seven films, his legacy looms large, with Quentin Tarantino citing The Good, the Bad and the Ugly as his favourite film of all time. Violent, darkly funny and superbly stylish, this closing chapter in the Dollars trilogy remains the most enjoyable of all Leone's spaghetti westerns, with Clint Eastwood, Lee Van Cleef and Eli Wallach each trying to lay their hands on buried gold as the American Civil War rages around them. JAMIE HEALY

Shakespeare's early years

Bill ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Members of TV's Horrible Histories make a promising feature debut with this ribald period romp that follows "Bill" Shakespeare (Mathew Baynton) as he leaves Stratford to make his fortune penning plays in London. But this writing lark is harder than it seems, and our Bard-in-waiting finds himself drawn into a plot by Philip II of Spain to kill Good Queen Bess. Among the cast, Simon Farnaby stands out as the foppish Earl of Croydon, while Helen McCrory cameos as a hilariously grotesque Elizabeth I. JH

We are amused

Victoria & Abdul ★★★

6.00pm Sky Drama

A little-known episode from the final years of Queen Victoria's reign provides the inspiration for this odd-couple comedy drama. Ali Fazal plays the Indian clerk who captures the attention of Judi Dench's ageing monarch, but earns the enmity of the rest of the royal household. Daisy Goodwin writes about her TV series Victoria on page 10. TREVOR JOHNSTON

ALL IN THE DETAIL
Police forensics officers comb a London property after the terror attacks of June 2017

PICK OF THE DAY Forensics: the Real CSI 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series "The Real Silent Witness" would be a better title. If you've ever watched Emilia Fox pretend to do a postmortem or comb a crime scene and wondered what the real thing is like, watch this. Forensic pathologist Nigel Cooper examines the body of a man found dead at his flat and dictates: "Right side of neck, gaping incised wound, 100 by 25 millimetres..."

It's very much not a programme for the faint-hearted. It's bloody, troubling and full of grim details – tugging a dead body from a pool of blood under a desk, for instance. But it's also, for anyone interested in the nuts and bolts of police work, gripping. The fact that they call the first collection of evidence from a crime scene the "harvest"; the man who tests and compares shotgun cartridges; the technicalities of comparing different fragments of broken glass to see if they match: there's fascinating stuff all through the programme, though it is also, in the end, deeply, chillingly sad. DAVID BUTCHER

CONSUMER Over the decades this series has run some remarkably successful campaigns, from forcing manufacturers to supply electrical goods with fitted plugs (in the 80s) to playing a part in the downfall of the "Kitchen Gangster" (in the noughties). It's been going so long, it's easy to forget how powerful it is.

Matt Allwright, Steph McGovern and Nikki Fox return with more reports on safety issues as well as doorstep confrontations with wrongdoers, while the "Swab Mob" discover mucky habits in an unexpected place. The big story tonight, though, involves mobile phone services. The show's been inundated with billing complaints from viewers. JANE RACKHAM

PROPERTY Kirstie and Phil are off to the seaside. They're in a very breezy Brighton and Hove looking for new homes for recent divorcee Dani, who's looking to start afresh close to her grown-up children, and young couple Katy and Charlie. They love living with Katy's mum, but need a place of their own, along with their baby daughter Lola and dog Harper.

There are problems, of course. Dani has seen dozens of properties already, but is scared about making the wrong decision so needs Kirstie's reassurance, while Katy and Charlie simply can't afford their dream location. But is a village bungalow really the answer?

Earth from Space

9.00pm BBC1 (Scotland: 11.05pm)

DOCUMENTARY Remember when Google Earth launched, and everyone said how incredible it was, but then got bored with it after 20 minutes? That's a little like the problem with this series: the aerial shots are amazing, in theory, but the novelty soon wears off, so the cameras must return to the ground... and then we've got a standard nature/anthropology programme.

This week, a Chinese beekeeper, a Japanese squirrel and a pack of flamingos are all worth seeing, but what they add up to is hard to fathom. It's all handsomely done, of course, and the early sequence on phytoplankton reveals much about the rhythms of ocean ecosystems.

9.00pm C4

DRAMA There are interesting parts to this political thriller, but it's becoming hard to care whether or not photographer Lee can find the Tiananmen Square tank man living in New York. This week the mystery of his disappearance becomes more bound up with a campaign finance scandal from the 1990s and that deserted flower shop and the woman who was Maria Meng, but is now Senator Dubecki... you may find your attention starting to drift.

But the atmosphere around the 2016 US presidential election, playing out in the background, is powerfully done and old-school newspaperman Frank (F Murray Abraham) makes a fantastic speech about voting. DAVID BUTCHER

Ever since they lost the Duckworths, the writers on Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) have been casting around for Jack and Vera replacements. At one stage I had the impression that Tyrone and Fiz were being lined up as successors, but the pair don't really have the same light comedic touch. Then there are Chesney and Gemma, who, while suitably common, are only really bearable in small doses.

Perhaps the show need look no further than Tim and Sally? OK, with her

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

snobby social pretensions, Sal may be more Annie than Vera. But if you're looking for a henpecking wife and a feckless article of a husband, then the Metcalfes definitely fit the bill. Just look at the way Tim (who's supposedly recovering from a coronary) has a strip torn off him tonight after Sally discovers him with a bag full of heart-unhealthy treats. There's plenty of mileage to be had in their bickering and I hope Corrie keeps them together for a long time to come. DAVID BROWN

Urban Myths

9.00pm Sky Arts

COMEDY In 1990 American publishers Random House paid Joan Collins a $1.2 million advance on an as yet unwritten novel – and then, when they received the manuscript, deemed it to be unreadable. As one employee puts it in this series giving a comic spin to urban legends concerning the famous, "You can't polish... what this is."

Collins – played in this enjoyable romp by The Crown's Victoria Hamilton – was sued by the publishers for the return of the advance she had received, and the court case was broadcast on TV. There are nice nods to Dynasty in a script packed with punchy lines and drama, with a fabulous supporting cast including David Walliams, Haydn Gwynne and Mark Heap. FRANCES TAYLOR

Ms Fisher's Modern Murder Mysteries

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA The men are hilariously ineffectual in these 1960s-set whodunnits. Steed has as much life in him as a Ken doll, his boss Chief Inspector Sparrow is downright vile, while Eric exists just to be shot at. No, if you want a job done properly, you need to get the women – namely, the Adventuresses' Club.

The conclusion to the current case sees our heroes infiltrate the music show that was the scene of a murder. But first Peregrine sneaks around backstage (wearing an inconspicuous pink mini-dress and matching alice band). As she hunts for clues, the gimlet-eyed may spot some Beatles lookalikes and a homage to the Singing Nun. DAVID BROWN

Life after My Brother's Murder

10.35pm BBC1 (Scotland: 12.05am)

DOCUMENTARY The devastation that knife crime leaves behind is laid bare in this documentary, which was originally made for BBC3.

Chanell was 11 years old when her brother Daniel was stabbed in 2006. His killer received a life sentence, but is now up for parole. Today, aged 24, Chanell must write a new victim impact statement for the court. Revisiting what happened, her emotions are still very raw – as are those of her mother. "When these youths see this documentary, they need to see the damage they're doing to families," she says, straight to the camera. "What was so important for you to take my son's life? I'll never understand it until the day I die." FT

Planet Child

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY New series This is one of those series where a good deal of kerfuffle goes into making a seemingly straightforward point. But the point is worth making: today's children are in danger from a lack of danger. They're at risk of not enough risk, as parents keep them closely supervised, wrapped in cotton wool – and indoors.

Three-quarters of children, we're told, spend less time outdoors than prison inmates. Ninety-nine per cent of parents say they wouldn't put a child under the age of seven on public transport alone.

So Doctors Chris and Xand van Tulleken devise an experiment to take a group of under-sevens out of their comfort zone by getting them to navigate a stretch of central London on their own, partly by bus.

We also meet seven-year-old Michi, who commutes across Tokyo's crowded transport system on his own every day. Cool kid.

Happy birthday, Wes!

The Grand Budapest Hotel ★★★★★

11.10pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Film4 marks idiosyncratic Texan director Wes Anderson's 50th birthday with this Mittel-European saga (review, p37), which stands as the crowning glory of his storybook odyssey so far. Over on Sky Select, you can enjoy a double bill – canine stop-motion animation Isle of Dogs and The Darjeeling Limited, in which three brothers reconnect on a rail trip across India. Anderson's keenly anticipated next film, The French Dispatch, arrives in 2020. ANDREW COLLINS

The beautiful game

The Unbeatable ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

This computer-animated adventure is available for free on My5 all week. Rupert Grint lends his voice to Amadeo, a table-football expert whose pint-sized players come to life to help him take on an arrogant footballing superstar in an actual match to save his village. This English-language version of an Argentinian film benefits greatly from the comedy trio of Ralf Little, Peter Serafinowicz and Rob Brydon as the mini players, and their banter makes for some very funny moments. JAMES LUXFORD

Sky Monsters unleashed

If you're looking forward to the release of Godzilla: King of Monsters in cinemas, Sky has the pop-up channel for you. Taking over Sky Sci-Fi/Horror for the next month, Sky Monsters plays host to human-preying creatures of every fearful form. Today's highlights include the earth-shaking Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom and surf-churning classic Jaws. TOM FOLLEY

DIFFERENT DUTY
Vicky McClure helps form a choir of people with dementia

PICK OF THE DAY Our Dementia Choir with Vicky McClure 8.00pm BBC1 (Wales: Friday 8.30pm)

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK In one of the most moving, beautiful documentaries of 2019 so far, Line of Duty star Vicky McClure forms a choir made up of dementia sufferers in her hometown of Nottingham. Fascinated by the positive effects of music on her grandmother, who was diagnosed with the "horrific" disease and has since died, McClure gets a mix of people with dementia singing while also joining forces with scientists who chart the physical and emotional effects of music on their brains.

McClure, who is down-to-earth, sensitive and jovial, spends time with the singers and their families, preparing them to perform publicly – a challenge for any new choir, let alone one in which some of the members struggle to remember what they were singing ten minutes ago. The two-part film subverts some of our preconceptions about dementia; it's no exaggeration to say that it left a room full of hard-hearted journalists and critics sobbing into their notebooks. KASIA DELGADO See feature: page 16

Cycling: Tour de Yorkshire Live

1.00pm ITV4

SPORT Top riders will be pedalling up hill and down dale in the Tour de Yorkshire, hugely popular since its inception in 2015 and notable for its stunning scenery and the big crowds that line the less remote parts of the route.

The four-day men's race starts this afternoon and the two-day women's event begins tomorrow. Chris Froome is set to make his debut in the race as he accelerates towards his latest assault on the Tour de France, while Lizzie Deignan, born in Otley, West Yorkshire, should feel right at home. It's a big cycling year for proud Yorkshire, which will host the Road World Championships in September. STEVE WALL

When I Grow Up

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series A social experiment that brings a political edge to the "kids say the funniest things" reality format: each week, children aged eight or thereabouts do adult jobs, starting here with a secondment to Hello! magazine.

Yes, there's a lot that's amusingly absurd about primary-schoolers being left in charge of a feature about Charles and Camilla, and at first you might think these kids are also too young to illustrate the point about social mobility. But, startlingly, they're not: the ones from less privileged backgrounds, such as little Ryley from Blackpool, soon find that if they don't believe in themselves, a more confident colleague will ease past them. JACK SEALE See page 28

The Big Bang Theory/ Young Sheldon

8.00pm, 8.30pm E4

SITCOM The CalTech colleagues are now on the home straight with the final four episodes. Raj and Leonard help deflect us from the sadness of that thought – the cast themselves have admitted to crying on set – in tonight's tale of professional intrigue, with one fearing his space discovery is not being taken seriously, the other keen to head up a new study.

Paradoxically, there is a healthy future for the show's most interesting character, Sheldon Cooper, in the story of his past (tonight, he runs for class president). Week after week, Young Sheldon breezes in and out with an apparently effortless brew of zinger lines and poignant moments. MARK BRAXTON

Pose

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA The penultimate episode sees the Houses come tumbling down. In the House of Evangelista, Blanca kicks out Papi, the least appealing of her "children", for dealing drugs on the piers. Angel is now co-habiting with Stan, but just one night at the drag ball proves too much for her pusillanimous "straight" guy.

The House of Abundance is benighted too. Elektra has been "reborn as a complete woman" but her sugar daddy Dick reacts cruelly to her gender reassignment. Without funds, what are a mother and her children to do? After much gnashing and hissing, Elektra takes her lead from Tina Turner's Private Dancer. PATRICK MULKERN

Actor Dean Andrews is still best known for playing Life on Mars good guy Ray Carling, but fans of Emmerdale (7.00, 8.00pm ITV) are now having to adjust to seeing him portray the soap's new big baddie. As has recently been revealed on screen, Andrews's character is organised crime boss Will. Though with several villagers having had strong links to criminality in the past (most notably, Cain, but also Ross and even Charity), it's a wonder his name hasn't cropped up before.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Anyway, we now know that it's Will who's been stalking vicar Harriet and it seems he's not done with his campaign of intimidation just yet. His big issue, though, is whether daughter Dawn (Olivia Bromley) can be trusted.

When the pair meet in secret on a country road this evening, Dawn tries to convince Will that he can count on her. But daddy dearest isn't convinced and asks Dawn to prove her loyalty. Expect her jaw to hit the floor when he makes his shock request. DAVID BROWN

Leonardo Night

from 9.00pm BBC4

ARTS Two documentaries help mark the approaching 500th anniversary of the death of one of history's greatest polymaths, Leonardo da Vinci.

First, at 9pm, in 2011's Da Vinci: the Lost Treasure, Fiona Bruce puts on her Fake or Fortune? hat to explore Leonardo's Salvator Mundi, which was being carefully restored ahead of a major exhibition at the National Gallery. It went on to sell for $450 million in 2017 to a Saudi prince, but controversy about it still lingers.

Then at 10pm, from last year, a survey of how the multitasking "Renaissance Man" has been covered on the Beeb. Dr Janina Ramirez burrows through the archives to explore his genius and working methods. GILL CRAWFORD

Berlin Station

10.15pm More4

DRAMA After last week's sunny but deadly excursion to Andalusia, we're back in Berlin, as the CIA agents continue to collect intel on a right-wing politician ahead of German elections. There were tense scenes as Valerie and a young colleague managed - just - to plant a bug in the politician's home, but then her campaign manager turned up at Valerie's apartment, and now has an unexpected proposal. Can he be trusted? Not everyone's convinced.

Stephen, the former head of the station, is seriously considering the offer from the new US ambassador to spy on his ex-colleagues, while his replacement (Ashley Judd) and her deputy are taking their relationship beyond the professional. Tut tut. GC

Great Art

10.45pm ITV (not STV; Border Scotland and Wales: 11.15pm)

ART Pablo Picasso is a titan of 20th-century art, who continued his singular creative path well into his later years (he died in 1973 aged 91). The years of his greatest successes and greatest notoriety were mainly spent in Paris or the south of France, but what about his earliest career?

Phil Grabsky's colourful documentary focuses on Picasso's life in Málaga (where he was born in 1881), Barcelona and Paris, cities that inspired seminal works from the Blue Period, and masterpieces such as Les Femmes d'Alger. It's sometimes easy to forget what a supreme draughtsman and portraitist young Picasso was. This will remind you... GC

We find out more about paramedic Ellie tonight

Ambulance

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY An outstanding episode of an always excellent series, focusing on smaller problems that have a huge emotional impact. It opens with the consequences of a house fire, which stretches the North West Ambulance Service to the limit; after that, though, time is spent observing relatively routine house calls.

From a man with breathing difficulties who is more pained by missing his late wife, to another whose alcohol addiction does not stop him appreciating how supportive his daughter is, to twins who have looked after each other for decades but will soon be separated by cancer, these are tales of the heartbreak that comes one day to every loving family.

But they're all deeply sad, and more so as we gradually learn why steadfast paramedic Ellie finds them personally so affecting. JS

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

8.00 Our Dementia Choir with Vicky McClure
RT 1/2. The Line of Duty star, who cared for her late grandmother when she had Alzheimer's, joins forces with the University of Nottingham and a variety of specialists to bring together a band and choir to raise awareness of how music therapy can improve the lives of dementia patients. Tonight Vicky starts recruiting choir members, including woodwork teacher Chris, who has frontotemporal dementia which leads to increasingly disinhibited behaviour, and Dan, 31, who was diagnosed with a rare form of genetic Alzheimer's two years ago. See page 94.
 Producer Sophie Mohamed (S) (AD) (HD)

Billy Liar ★★★★★

10.00pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Many young British stars were forged in the crucible of the "kitchen-sink revolution". Julie Christie was spotted on the cover of a magazine by John Schlesinger while he was casting Billy Liar (review, p38). Christie auditioned for the role of Liz, but lost out to Topsy Jane. However, when Jane fell ill on set, Christie got the call. "It was a dream come true," she said. "I didn't know whether to jump up and down, whistle or shout." Her free-spirited performance earned her a Bafta nomination. ANDREW COLLINS

Gone Girl ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Whether or not you've read Gillian Flynn's bestseller, you're definitely in for a treat with this unsettling thriller directed by David Fincher (Se7en). The story revolves around the hunt for missing Rosamund Pike, the perfect blonde wife of perfect hunk Ben Affleck. He oozes easy prom-king charm, but soon finds himself the prime suspect in a possible murder case. Although it doesn't have many good things to say about the state of modern relationships, Gone Girl does make for an absorbing mystery. LUCY BARRICK

Rock around the clock

If you love charismatic wrestler-turned-action hero Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson as much as we do, get comfy in front of Sky Action and enjoy a whole day of his films to celebrate his 47th birthday. Among the offerings are Skyscraper, Doom and Fast & Furious 8, which should whet your appetite for the upcoming F&F spin-off Hobbs & Shaw. ELLIE PORTER

SPIRITUAL JOURNEY
John Bishop meets Father Richard outside the Knock Shrine

PICK OF THE DAY John Bishop's Ireland 8.00pm ITV (not STV or Border Scotland; N Ireland: 10.45pm)

DOCUMENTARY On one level this is a perfectly enjoyable celebrity travelogue about Ireland. John Bishop has an easy way about him when chatting to people and genuinely looks interested in everything he hears, whether it's the miracle(s) of Knock (there's the visitation by Our Lady, but also the remarkable fact that this tiny village has an international airport) or Lisdoonvarna's incredibly popular matchmaking festival.

But just as interesting are the snatches from his stand-up gigs that reveal how he stores up all those chats to use as material for his shows.

"I thought I was landing in Asda!" he tells the audience about his flight to Knock, while the suggestion that Willie Daly's "magic" matchmaking book could make him relive his honeymoon is turned into "two weeks of disappointment and arguing? No thanks!" JANE RACKHAM

Unreported World

7.30pm C4

CURRENT AFFAIRS Central America is not a good region generally for press freedom, and in Nicaragua the position is increasingly parlous. President Daniel Ortega has, in the past few years, used violence to shore up his power against angry opposition. The media is a key battleground and, as Unreported World correspondent Sahar Zand discovers on the ground in Nicaragua, independent journalism is a dangerous business amid civil disruption and economic chaos. This film visits the newsroom of the country's oldest newspaper, independent TV studios and a blogger's home, as well as reporters who have decided to flee the country. JACK SEALE

Gardeners' World

8.30pm BBC2 (not N Ireland)

GARDENING Monty Don is away this week so we're with Adam Frost in Cambridgeshire, where he's planting up his gravel garden with some spring colour.

Now the weather is improving, a lot of us are tackling our gardens with a vengeance, but we would do well to take a leaf out of legendary "landscape designer" John Brookes's book. He advocated making changes in a leisurely fashion – "Things grow, things die; the garden is a living entity". Mark Lane sees the results of Brookes's philosophy in the glorious grounds at Denmans in Hampshire, as well as learning about the next chapter in their history. JANE RACKHAM
Your RT Gardening; page 140

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM A Modern Family episode that doesn't feature Luke and Haley – the dim bulbs of the Dunphy clan – will never tick all the boxes for me. But by way of compensation, this has something we rarely see: Phil interacting with Pepper, the snooty friend of Mitch and Cam, for whom Phil is trying to find a house.

He's shown Pepper around 120 so far, but Pepper's requirements include a piano bar, his-and-his dining rooms and a bathroom with a koi pond. He rejected the last place because it wasn't zoned for his falcons. Is there something deeper going on? In other developments, Gloria reveals her excellently heartless attitude to pets, and Jay's dog in particular. DAVID BUTCHER

The Bletchley Circle: San Francisco

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA This is an improvement on last week's by-numbers opening part, thanks to revelations about an early gay activist organisation that make for a poignant subplot.

The drama is, of course, set at a time when homosexuality made you an enemy of the state in the eyes of the law. And as the women reel following Edward's arrest, they discover the lengths to which his friends have gone in order to keep themselves safe. For Hailey, this results in her opening up to Iris. Actors Chanelle Peloso and Crystal Balint make the most of their moment to shine and the characters' dialogue feels especially true to the period. DAVID BROWN

Soap comebacks haven't really lived up to the hype of late. Mandy reappeared in Emmerdale for all of five minutes, while Lofty and Mary's blink-and-you'll-miss-it return to Walford didn't really warrant the sizeable pre-publicity. EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) has, though, delivered with the Sean and Jean reunion (Robert Kazinsky and Gillian Wright, right) – this week's episodes having shown the pair heading off on a trip. Only now we've seen disaster strike and Sean is frantically calling for an ambulance...

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Old faces are also resurfacing on Coronation Street (7.30, 8.30pm, ITV) when Emily's niece Freda turns up and tells Mary that Norris asked her to put No 3 on the market. Mary is naturally angry that Norris hasn't contacted her, but then Freda gets out an urn and puts a photo of Norris next to it! Has he met his maker? Well, as Malcolm Hebden is reprising the role after a period of ill-health, I'm guessing not. But I'm looking forward to seeing why we're being led to believe that Norris is no more. DAVID BROWN

Cruising with Jane McDonald

9.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL We've journeyed around the globe in the company of various celebs, but I don't think any of them have let us see the inside of their travel bags. It may sound like a trifling detail, but Jane is all about giving helpful advice to the ordinary holidaymaker. So, she doesn't have any qualms about showing us the pouch filled with enough medication to last her four days. Or the collection of plugs that she says can charge her phone anywhere in the world.

But, of course, we get to witness more than just Jane's travel-sized toiletries. In fact, the sights in the second part of her India trip leave her lost for words. Expect plenty of tears at the Taj Mahal. DAVID BROWN

The Looming Tower

9.30pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

DRAMA The aftermath of the 1998 attack on the American embassy in Nairobi causes ripples across the CIA and the FBI in the second episode of the gripping drama about the lead-up to the 9/11 attacks.

While the CIA's slightly maniacal counterterrorism head (Peter Sarsgaard) thinks carpet-bombing training camps in Pakistan or paying locals to kidnap Osama Bin Laden is the answer, his counterpart in the FBI (Jeff Daniels) is being more practical, if more foul-mouthed. Determined to take charge of the investigation, he sends his old Kenya hand back to Nairobi to follow up there, while hot-shot young agent Soufan is sent to London, and the Finsbury Park mosque. GILL CRAWFORD

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 11.05pm)

CHAT SHOW As movies titles go, John Wick: Chapter 3 – Parabellum doesn't trip off the tongue. But then the eponymous assassin as played by Keanu Reeves is a man of few words, so perhaps director Chad Stahelski decided to balance the dialogue-light script with a lengthy title. Reeves is a veteran guest on the show and, while laid back, can be relied upon to tell a good story.

He's joined by Elton John and Bernie Taupin – or at least Taron Egerton and Jamie Bell, who are playing the songwriting pair in Elton biopic Rocketman – as well as Suranne Jones, star of upcoming BBC drama Gentleman Jack, and Norton favourite Kylie Minogue. JR

Walter Presents

Series two of the Brazilian drama about the porn industry under military dictatorship in the 1970s. If you're hoping for a smutfest you'll be mildly, if not totally, disappointed: it's about life under oppression, with the central story being one of a censor who comes alive when he moonlights as a film-maker. Mainly, though, it's notable for its tone, a heady brew of B-movie kitsch and Boogie Nights retro cool.

Jazz 625 Live: For One Night Only

9.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Jazz 625 was the place to watch the giants of jazz in the 1960s. Running from 1964 to 1966 it regularly featured the likes of Ella Fitzgerald, Art Blakey, Thelonious Monk and Bill Evans. Now it's back again for a one-off special that mixes archive (featuring Duke Ellington, Oscar Peterson and Cleo Laine) with live sets from this year's Cheltenham Jazz Festival, as well as a potted history of the show.

Performing today, with a house band led by pianist Robert Mitchell, are saxophonists Joshua Redman and Jean Toussaint, guitarist Shirley Tetteh and Gregory Porter. Plus Rolling Stones drummer Charlie Watts shows off his jazz chops on Ellington's Night Train. The contemporary footage is shot in black and white – a bit of an affectation – but the musicians' coloratura should paint a vivid enough picture. DAVID CRAWFORD

Here's to Yeoh

Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon

6.30pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW
Born (but, of course) in the year of the Tiger, Michelle Yeoh is one of a select club of Chinese faces who are also big in the West. Trained as a ballet dancer, this former Miss Malaysia isn't just one of the more convincingly physical Bond girls (in Tomorrow Never Dies); she also made a formidable matriarch in Crazy Rich Asians and holds her own in Star Trek: Discovery. She'll be back in martial arts mode in Master Z: Ip Man Legacy, directed by Yuen Woo-Ping, who choreographed the fights in Crouching Tiger (review, p38). STEVE MORRISSEY

The face of evil

Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil and Vile

8.00pm Sky Premiere
Zac Efron stars as serial killer Ted Bundy in this bland drama, which is in cinemas today as well as debuting on Sky. Neither insightful nor suspenseful, it adds little to our understanding of Bundy's crimes, and despite being based on the memoir of his girlfriend Elizabeth Kloepfer (played by Lily Collins), seems uninterested in presenting her perspective. With Bundy's courtroom showmanship the main focus, Efron has scant opportunity to explore his dark side. EMMA SIMMONDS

A rare showing

It's a Gift

6.15pm TCM
Grab this chance to see the inimitable WC Fields in his most perfectly formed movie. The sequence on the porch is one of the funniest sustained sketches in sound cinema, and the store scene with Charles Sellon as blind Mr Muckle has to be seen to be believed. Kumquats will never be the same again! TONY SLOMAN

Man on the edge

Good news: Ed Reardon is back!
Bad news: the hack writer is now living in a shed...

INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

Ed Reardon's Week
Tuesday 6.30pm Radio 4

CHRISTOPHER DOUGLAS BEGINS the interview with a startling revelation. "I've been sacked," he says when we meet at his north London home. "I'm no longer the voice of Elgar. They've found someone who does it better."

Douglas had been playing Ed Reardon's cat Elgar since Ed Reardon's Week began in 2005, but now a new producer has come along "with a better miaow", and that's that. Happily, Douglas is still the voice of Reardon himself, the down-on-his-luck, jobbing writer who rages against the idiocies of modern communication. And he also, alongside his friend Andrew Nickolds, still writes the show that has long been one of the funniest things on Radio 4.

Reardon is based in part, Douglas says, on "anecdotes I've heard about those old-school comedy writers who would turn up at BBC functions and wander along the buffet filling a carrier bag with bread rolls". So far, so Reardon. Douglas adds that he was told about another old-timer: "The story went that he'd been writing jokes for a TV show for £1.50 a gag and had slipped on a step in the rehearsal room, did his back in and ended up in court. The judge asked him what prospects he had coming up and he said he'd written a film for Madonna. The judge gave him this huge payout."

Reardon is yet to get a huge payout, but he soldiers on, enduring the vicissitudes of a literary life that has occasionally touched the heights, like the glorious moment when he was asked to ghost-write John Kettle's Big Book of Weather.

These triumphs are invariably followed by disappointments, leaving Reardon short of cash and stuck in Berkhamsted, a Hertfordshire commuter town that was picked purely, Douglas says, because it enables Reardon to use trains to comic effect. "He has to travel around. He has to have a phone and a laptop. He does sleep in a hedgerow occasionally, but he has to have somewhere he can function. He's got his Oyster 60+ London card that gets him about on the buses and Tubes, and a senior railcard if he's on the overground, but he usually hides in the train toilet anyway."

REARDON'S MISFORTUNES ARE all the funnier because he has the sense of entitlement that comes from having been educated at public school (Shrewsbury), and he sounds posh (though not as posh as his agent, Ping, who's played by the sublime Barunka O'Shaughnessy).

Douglas says Reardon's commanding voice is there was an afternoon show, Amser Te, where the clog dancer didn't turn up, so my stepfather – who, like my mother, didn't speak Welsh – took his cans off and went on and did a sort of clog dance because that was what the running order required. I watched that and thought, "This is great, I quite like this world."

Like Reardon, Douglas also went to public school, Clifton College in Bristol. "I'm a little bit dyslexic, and found it very difficult academically. So I just ran away when I was 15. I'm still rather amazed my parents let me."

He went on to appear in Crossroads, which, he claims, was mainly written by communists – "there were rickety sets but it was very left-wing" – and The Onedin Line. "I grew up in theatre and TV and, looking back now from the #MeToo point of view, obviously you were aware of things that were absolutely horrendous. Ed would have observed that and decided not to be a part of it. A lot of it's to do with money and power and he would never have had very much of either, so he wouldn't have been in a position to offend. But he is admirable in many ways. The main thing about Ed is his lack of self-pity. When things go wrong, he's still OK."

'The main thing about Ed is his lack of self-pity'

LACK OF SUCCESS means Reardon has spent much of his life in straitened financial circumstances. "We try to reflect what's happening in society," Douglas says. "This year, he's living in a shed, so he's got somewhere to be, but it's pretty grim. The shed is at the bottom of the garden of the house where he used to have a flat, so things have got significantly worse. I think in a sense that reflects what's happening."

Douglas is 64. Reardon is in his mid- to late-50s, but if he keeps blowing his top, he surely won't make his 60s. "He's had a heart attack, he drinks too much and he smokes," says Douglas. "The thing about Ed's anger is that it's essentially about whatever has annoyed Andrew or me. Andrew got an email the other day, saying they hoped he 'wasn't thinking of leaving the Flymo family'. It's quite cathartic because when that happens, rather than get furious, you just put it in the file and think, we can use that."

Does that mean that Ed is for ever trapped in late-middle age, fulminating against sloppy language and scratching around for Elgar's next tin of tuna? "But that's the whole point," Douglas points out. "That's why you get commissioned for another series, because the character is stuck as who he is. Trust me, character development is over-rated."

actually pinched from Harold Pinter. "There was a kind of writer's voice that emerged in the 1960s that sounded classless yet posh. Harold Pinter had it, and because I knew and admired Pinter, I wanted to get that voice.

"I used to play in Pinter's cricket team and he had this really intimidating presence. I often thought that if Pinter had been an absolutely dreadful writer, instead of one of the greatest who ever lived, he might have been a bit like Ed."

I feel obliged to ask what kind of cricket captain Harold Pinter was. "He was quite combative in club meetings," says Douglas. "He could get quite fiery sometimes, and on the pitch he was extremely competitive. I revered him."

Douglas has been in entertainment since he was a child in Bristol, where his stepfather and mother worked for HTV. "When I was eight, I used to operate the roller captions at the end of Welsh-language programmes. I remember

PICK OF THE WEEK

Ambler: The Battle of San Pietro
Saturday 2.30pm Radio 4

Eric Ambler (below) was a master of the spy thriller. In the 1930s he injected a new realism into the genre, typified by his subtle handling of the "innocent abroad" trope, acute depictions of international politics and a certain moral ambiguity. He was an influence on John le Carré, Alfred Hitchcock and Graham Greene (who called him "our greatest thriller writer") and ought to be better known.

Happily, someone at Radio 4 agrees. Two-part dramatisations of two of his best books start on Sunday with Journey into Fear (1940), followed in two weeks' time by Epitaph for a Spy (1952).

Both offer a glimpse into the murky geopolitics of the inter-war years, and feature at their heart an ordinary, slightly naive Englishman who is plunged into nightmarish plots where little is as it seems.

The season begins on Saturday with a biographical drama from writer Nick Perry (who has also adapted the two novels), re-creating the time Ambler himself was cast as the innocent abroad. During the Second World War he was conscripted to work with film director John Huston on a US Army propaganda film about the Italian campaign.

Ambler and Huston make an odd couple – the reserved, cautious British novelist and the gregarious American director – and this glimpse of their relationship helps to sketch out Ambler's own story and personality. The script zips along, with neat hints to Ambler's humble beginnings and playful lines such as, "Mr Huston, we have a problem."

It's a great introduction to Ambler and a good place to start on a journey into his world of suspense, thrills and intrigue.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Is there a thief in Ambridge? A shocked Clarrie certainly thinks so when she discovers some donations to the Lent fund in Nic's name have gone missing. As Susan turns detective, she thinks she has unmasked the light-fingered villager, but is she barking up the wrong tree?

Over at Lower Loxley, Freddie has some pep put into his step thanks to efforts made by a surprising source. With a new zest for life, Freddie pitches his plan, but is interrupted by an unexpected visitor from Lily's past. Will Elizabeth be mentally strong enough to cope when a startling truth is revealed?

Tom's strange behaviour leads to Helen asking questions. And a job with Tim leaves Ed feeling out of his depth. DAVID BROWN

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

What the beep?

Something in my kitchen is in distress...

THERE IS AN episode of Frasier in which our hero is perturbed by a cricket, somewhere in his well-appointed Seattle apartment. How did a cricket make it to the 19th floor of the Elliott Bay Towers? Frasier's dad, Martin, has returned from a hunting trip and somehow transported one back with him.

I say perturbed. Early in the episode in Café Nervosa: "I tell you, Roz, it was the worst night of my life. Just as I'd begin to doze off, the damned cricket would start stridulating again."

Later, we see Frasier in his apartment. The cricket is heard. The scene fades in as Frasier is battering the kitchen worktops with a fly swatter. Frasier: Damn it!

Martin enters, clearly used to Frasier's madness.

Martin: Oh, jeez, you still at it? Why don't you go to your room? You won't even hear the thing if you close the door.

Frasier: Close my door?! And just concede defeat? I know, here's a better idea: I'll just move out and let him have the run of the place! That's good, I'll have two apartments; one for me, one for my cricket! I tried closing my door, I can still hear it.

The cricket sounds again.

Frasier: Dear God, can't you make him shut up?!

'I stopped to listen... Was Alexa upset about something?'

I relay this comedy brilliance to you because it's been on my mind thanks to a real-life hi-tech update to Frasier's old-fashioned showdown with nature. There is something in my kitchen beeping at me, and I don't know what it is.

All of our homes make sounds. We're not always consciously aware of them, but there's something deeply personal and perhaps comforting about them: the familiar creaks and groans of a building we cherish.

At this moment in the 21st century, our homes are festooned with electronics to enhance our existence. It seems astonishing to us now that previous generations survived without ever hearing a microwave ping, or a washing machine chime to herald the completion of its economy cycle, but somehow they did. There is something familiar and reassuring about those noises, too.

Only your house has that particular combination of computerised racket.

I was just sashaying out of my kitchen the other day when I heard a single low-level "beep". It wasn't the microwave, which has a higher pitch. The dishwasher emits a breathless, exhausted beep when it's done; it wasn't that. I stopped to listen for the beep. It did not repeat.

And so a search began. Was Alexa upset about something? Did the temperature thing need a new battery? Was one of the special wi-fi plugs in distress?

IN TURN I visited every conceivable battery- or mains-powered device in the room. Smoke alarm - fine. The fridge light worked. The coffee machine did not require a rinse. I even checked the toastie machine, which was unplugged and in a cupboard - perhaps it had beeped out of loneliness and shame at only ever being used once for a slightly disappointing cheese and tomato affair? But it too seemed fine.

I was beginning to dismiss this as a condition scientists call "Brain full of nonsense" syndrome, in which a barn of a mind with not enough to occupy it can fill the void with imaginary noises.

But 20 minutes ago I heard it again. I was going to close the kitchen door and concede defeat, but...

Hits motto misses the mark

The slogan for Hits Radio, Bauer's imminent national pop station, is said to be "brilliant music, great banter". The English language has plenty of words for what radio presenters do. While "talk" summons a picture of somebody reading from a lectern, "conversation" suggests a two-way involving Melvyn Bragg and "chat" is now forever associated with the rictus grin of Alan Partridge, "banter" conjures two blokes - and they are usually blokes - trying to be funny about nothing in particular. I'm not sure banter can ever be great. In fact, when disgraced football pundits are caught saying something disobliging about female assistant referees, they always say, "It was only banter".

Now you're talking

While I have no time for banter as a commodity, I have no problem with the bantering tone, the gentle ribbing that is often a characteristic of two middle-aged men talking into a microphone. It would be a shame if, in the BBC's efforts to make sure that it has a gender balance everywhere, we were to no longer have male-presenting pairs such as 6 Music's Stuart Maconie and Mark Radcliffe. Or that Peter Curran and Patrick Marber couldn't continue the recumbent musings on everything from wigs to Bette Davis that make their Radio 4 Bunk Beds such a delight.

A war in words

Men are quite happy to talk about nothing in particular, but there is one subject they will inevitably come to in time. Comedian Al Murray (right) and historian James Holland have formed a duo for a new podcast called We Have Ways of Making You Talk, which sets out to prove that the Second World War really is an inexhaustible subject, and that there are a generation of men hardly old enough to have seen The Dambusters who know a surprising amount about it.

In fact, a lot of what they cover in each weekly episode is a valuable corrective to the misconceptions peddled in old war films. Thanks to just one episode I know that only ten per cent of the German divisions that overran France in 1940 were mechanised, Churchill did not sign an order guaranteeing Claridge's could keep serving lobster during the Blitz, Hitler came to power thanks to the fact that Germany had more radios per head than any other country, including the States, and pilots flying over the battlegrounds of Normandy could actually smell the bodies below. Banter me that.

Archive on 4: 1979: Democracy's Nightmares

8.00pm Radio 4
Anyone old enough to have been around for the 1979 general election and the so-called winter of discontent that preceded it might still be feeling the reverberations. More than most elections it seemed to be a battle for the nation's soul, and this is where the strength of Phil Tinline's fascinating documentary lies. The right and the left's fear of each other emerges as a key theme in a programme that is more about the 18 months preceding the election than the campaign itself and offers up archive as disparate as Lord Hailsham, Prince Philip, Anthony Burgess and Steel Pulse. David Edgar and Tom Robinson are among those looking back from the vantage point of 2019. Some would have you believe that Margaret Thatcher's victory (above) was virtually preordained. In truth it was never that simple. SIMON O'HAGAN

12.30pm This Classical Life
Saxophonist Jess Gillam is joined by fellow musicians to swap tracks and share musical discoveries. Today she's joined by pianist Isata Kanneh-Mason, sister of cellist Sheku Kanneh-Mason, and they share a Brahms intermezzo, film music by Michael Nyman, symphonies by Beethoven and Walton, and recordings by Beyoncé and Radiohead.
1.00 Inside Music
Double bassist Cecelia Bruggemeyer discusses a Shostakovich work that she describes as a "mini guide to orchestration", an orchestral song by Berlioz and a piece for prepared piano by Cage. She also delves into the mysteries of the Baroque continuo group, and describes what it's like to play a Beethoven bass line. Her Must Listen piece at 2.00 is a work that predates Strauss, Liszt and Cage by hundreds of years but which sowed the seeds for many of their musical ideas.
3.00 Sound of Dance
In February the Linbury Theatre at the Royal Opera House reopened with Blue Moon – a new ballet for seven female dancers, choreographed by Aletta Collins to a score by David Sawer. Katie Derham talks to those involved, following the process of the production at every stage.

Music Extra: A History of Music and Technology

8.05pm BBC World Service

Few bands have explored the technical possibilities of the studio quite like Pink Floyd. It is appropriate then that drummer Nick Mason (above), the only band member to feature on all their albums, presents this nine-part series on the evolution of music technology – from the gramophone through to the invention of Auto-Tune. He starts by charting the origins of sound recording in the late 19th century, when consumers first learnt to listen to music. It's hard to overstate the cultural significance of those first dusty phonographs: listening devices that not only changed the world but, more important, allow millions of us to enjoy Mason's drumming on Set The Controls For the Heart of the Sun over and over again. TOM GOULDING

Lucy Porter In the Family Way... Again

7.15pm Radio 4

The comedian pokes fun at familial quirks once more, laying bare the legacy of her dear departed parents. Having sorted through their lucrative effects, Porter claims her house has been turned into the Museum of Mum and Dad, containing "the world's largest collection of loose change, car keys, stamps and screws". Haha, we know exactly what you mean, Lucy! But that's the beauty of Porter's comedy; so many of us can relate to her canny observations. Add to this a large helping of self-effacement – she's the Sue Perkins you can afford to host award ceremonies – it's easy to understand why her audience are lapping it up. CHRIS GARDNER

5.00 The Listening Service
Ranked Amateurs. "Amateur" has become a byword for sloppiness and low standards. But for centuries, amateurs were the bedrock of musical life and an essential and vitalising force for composers, providing not only a cohort of highly accomplished performers but also a lucrative seam to be mined by music publishers. To explore how and why attitudes have changed, Tom Service is joined by writer and historian Katy Hamilton. Producer David Papp Repeated Friday 4.30pm

6.45 Sunday Feature: Haus Work – Women of the Bauhaus

In 1919, architect Walter Gropius founded the experimental Bauhaus school in the centre of Germany's new democracy, Weimar. He wanted to combine traditional craft with modern functionality. Despite his commitment to equality between men and women, the male masters who were running the school swiftly made it harder for women to get in. Olivia Horsfall Turner discovers how women such as Anni Albers, Gunta Stölzl and Marianne Brandt managed to fight their way into the male domains of textile design, photography, carpentry, architecture and metalwork. Producer Jo Wheeler

7.30 Drama on 3: The Two Noble Kinsmen

An adaptation by Sara Davies of Shakespeare's rarely performed 1634 tragicomedy based on a tale by Chaucer. On the day planned for his wedding to Hippolyta, Duke Theseus of Athens is petitioned by three queens to go to war against King Creon of Thebes, who has deprived their dead husbands of proper burial rites. In Thebes, two noble kinsmen, Palamon and Arcite, realise that their own hatred of Creon's tyranny must be put aside while their native city is in danger.

Today's Choices

The Full Works Concert

8.00pm Classic FM

Jane Jones presents the first of three evenings showcasing the best new releases of the year so far. Tonight's choices range from Vasily Petrenko and the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra performing Elgar's last work, the dreamily rhapsodic Mina (named after the composer's beloved dog), to the elite chamber choir Voces8 singing Samuel Barber's own arrangement of his Adagio for Strings. Featured soloists include violinist Anne-Sophie Mutter performing Beethoven's Romance No 1 live in Japan, 24-year-old Polish-Canadian pianist Jan Lisiecki directing the usually conductorless Orpheus Chamber Orchestra in Mendelssohn's Piano Concerto No 1 and 19-year-old Dutch recorder sensation Lucie Horsch (above) playing an arrangement of Bach's Oboe Concerto in D minor. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Machines like Me

12.04pm Radio 4

What would happen if artificial intelligence came to resemble our own so closely that we couldn't tell the difference? That's the question posed by Ian McEwan's new novel Machines like Me, which, while set in an alternative Falklands-era Britain, is very much concerned with the eerie possibilities of the future. Anton Lesser reads, with first-person narrator Charlie Friend bringing home Adam, one of the world's first "manufactured humans", and enlisting the help of his neighbour, Miranda, in parenting the new-born robot. Adam's consciousness develops, and so does the relationship between all three figures. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Drama: What's He Building in There?

2.15pm Radio 4

Kate's juggling a teaching career with the rigours of selling the family home, and to make matters worse her nerdy-but-needy younger brother Ryan refuses to vacate his bedroom as the sale approaches. Within those prosaic four walls his alter ego Tricky Milo has created an online gaming channel that's pulled in thousands of subscribers. His cockiness and self-satisfaction are equally irritating, but Ryan's increasing paranoia is much more of a concern. Rachel Smith's involving drama shows how mental illness touches so many lives and can be triggered by the untimely death of a loved one – in Ryan's case, his mother. With effective lead turns by Christine Bottomley and Mike Noble at its heart, What's He Building in There? also portrays how two dissimilar siblings can find new ways to relate to each other.

CHRIS GARDNER

We Do Do God

8.00pm Radio 4

Religious awareness is growing in the UK, according to We Do Do God producer Neil Rosser. More about strict observance than extremism, it's the subject here of a searching inquiry by Ed Kessler, the founder/director of the Cambridge-based Woolf Institute, which seeks to improve relations between religion and society. Representatives of Islam, Judaism and Christianity all contribute. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

Free Thinking

10.00pm Radio 3

How do writers evoke a sense of place so vivid that you feel you're inhabiting it? Alan Johnson did it beautifully in his 2013 memoir This Boy, in which the Labour politician described his poverty-ravaged childhood when he was growing up in pre-gentrified 1950s west London. The book won the Royal Society of Literature Ondaatje Prize, and in this edition of the Radio 3 discussion programme, Johnson comes together with three fellow winners of the prize – poet Pascale Petit, non-fiction writer Peter Pomerantsev and novelist Hisham Matar, with Eleanor Barraclough (above) chairing – to talk landscapes both personal and physical. The event was recorded in front of an audience at the British Library and marked the 15th anniversary of the Ondaatje Prize, named for its benefactor the philanthropist Christopher Ondaatje, older brother of the writer Michael Ondaatje.

8.00pm Radio 4

A very effective variation on The Moral Maze (and occupying the same Wednesday evening slot), Across the Red Line returns with an edition that pits former chair of the National Trust Simon Jenkins and historian Zareer Masani against each other. The question: should cultural artefacts be returned to their countries of origin? Anne McElvoy – a Moral Maze panellist – mediates, and for this series, conflict-resolution duties are split between Red Line regular Gabrielle Rifkind and an expert new to the programme, Louisa Weinstein. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

Open Country 3.00pm Radio 4

We're perhaps used to the idea that much of the apparently "natural" landscape around us has in fact been shaped by centuries upon centuries of human cultivation; but, whereas most of Britain's countryside owes its current appearance to the peaceable arts of agriculture, the Sussex Weald – that large expanse of lowland penned in between the parallel chalk escarpments of the North and the South Downs – stands witness, rather, to the deadly arts of war. Here, Ian Marchant takes a walk on the Weald side, exploring the once-remote region whose ancient and impenetrable forests were systematically cut down to provide timber for the Roman fleet and to create the charcoal that later helped smelt the local ironstone into cannon and shot for 17th-century armies.

MARK PAPPENHEIM

Crossing Continents

11.00am Radio 4

It's hard to arrest depopulation once it's started. But Linda Pressly finds the opposite in Spain. Initiatives to reverse the decline of the Spanish countryside include a movement of young people – they have a name, "neo-rurales" – who have begun to occupy abandoned villages. Pressly also uncovers a charming personal story. Maria Carvajal was one of a bus full of single women who arrived in a village north of Madrid to meet single men unable to find female partners. There was no preview available but I infer that she found love with lonely shepherd Antonio Cerrado. A caravan of love indeed.

Today's Choices

The Full Works Concert 8.00pm Classic FM

Last month, Queen Victoria's stunning sapphire and diamond coronet – a wedding gift to her from Prince Albert, who had also designed it – went on display at the V&A in London as part of the celebrations marking the joint bicentenary of the royal couple (above). That same night, Joby Talbot's new cantata, A Sheen of Dew on Flowers – inspired by the coronet's power to "encapsulate the story of a tempestuous, intense and ultimately tragic love affair" – was premiered at the Barbican. A setting of eight love poems by women from across the ages, it was paired with the "Scottish" Symphony by Victoria's favourite composer, Felix Mendelssohn, and is tonight followed by studio recordings of the waltz that Johann Strauss I wrote for Victoria's coronation and music from the ITV drama series Victoria. See also our feature on page 10. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Comedy Club at Machynlleth 2019 10.30pm Radio 4 Extra

11.00 Beyond Tara and George

Last year there were nearly 600 deaths on the streets of the UK. In this follow-up to last summer's Radio 4 series on east London rough sleepers Tara and George, presenter Audrey Gillan catches up with them to see how they're coping with the winter cold and asks what it would take to prevent the unnecessary deaths of homeless people. Producer Alan Hall (R)

11.30 Hugo Rifkind's Search for Power

New series. 1/3. Hugo Rifkind ought to know about power. Born into a political family, he attended Cambridge University and has spent 18 years writing for The Times. During that period, he has met prime ministers, royalty, Eurocrats, lawyers, judges, celebrities, billionaires and, of course, other members of the media elite – including his fellow regular panellists on The News Quiz. Yet in all that time, none of these people have seemed truly to be ruling the world. And if they aren't, who is? Rifkind tries to find out, starting with the power of MPs. Contributors include MPs Stella Creasy, Damian Collins and Andrew Mitchell. Co-written by James Kettle. The reader is Susan Rae. Producer Ed Morrish

Una Healy Country Hits Radio

Age 37

Current job Hosts the Saturday show (9.00am) on Country Hits Radio, the UK's first national country music station.

CV Brought up in County Tipperary, she played the guitar and sang in pubs and clubs around Ireland. Having represented Ireland in the Eurovision Song Contest in 2006, she moved to London the following year and became a member of girl band the Saturdays. Since the band took a break in 2014, Healy has written and recorded solo albums with more of a country influence, been a coach on TV's The Voice of Ireland, and recently became a radio presenter, joining the new Country Hits station.

Best moment "Being asked to present my own country music show and tell people how amazing the music is. I've grown up with country, it was in my blood, and I starting writing music when I was 12. The first song I ever learnt was Dolly Parton's I Will Always Love You."

Worst moment "None so far as a broadcaster, as I'm just starting out, but when I was singing last year on live

TV my in-ear monitors weren't plugged in – so all I could hear was the drum behind me and lots of external noise. I wanted the ground to swallow me up."

Off air "I live with my two children in Northampton and spend my spare time doing special things with them. I also love keeping fit – I find it's really important for my mental health."

First radio memory "As a child I'd record songs off the radio with an old tape recorder and then do fake radio shows, pretending I was a DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "I grew up with lots of Irish DJs and now I love a variety of broadcasters. I don't think radio will ever die – it's like someone talking to you in your own room."

Ambition "I'm so happy to have my Saturday show. I just want to introduce lots of new people to country music."

Secret skills "As a child I was a national champion swimmer. I stopped at 14 and music became my big passion. I swim now for fun and fitness, but the fast lane is still too slow for me!" KASIA DELGADO

Face behind the voice

Una Healy Country Hits Radio

Age 37

Current job Hosts the Saturday show (9.00am) on Country Hits Radio, the UK's first national country music station.

CV Brought up in County Tipperary, she played the guitar and sang in pubs and clubs around Ireland. Having represented Ireland in the Eurovision Song Contest in 2006, she moved to London the following year and became a member of girl band the Saturdays. Since the band took a break in 2014, Healy has written and recorded solo albums with more of a country influence, been a coach on TV's The Voice of Ireland, and recently became a radio presenter, joining the new Country Hits station.

Best moment "Being asked to present my own country music show and tell people how amazing the music is. I've grown up with country, it was in my blood, and I starting writing music when I was 12. The first song I ever learnt was Dolly Parton's I Will Always Love You."

Worst moment "None so far as a broadcaster, as I'm just starting out, but when I was singing last year on live

TV my in-ear monitors weren't plugged in – so all I could hear was the drum behind me and lots of external noise. I wanted the ground to swallow me up."

Off air "I live with my two children in Northampton and spend my spare time doing special things with them. I also love keeping fit – I find it's really important for my mental health."

First radio memory "As a child I'd record songs off the radio with an old tape recorder and then do fake radio shows, pretending I was a DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "I grew up with lots of Irish DJs and now I love a variety of broadcasters. I don't think radio will ever die – it's like someone talking to you in your own room."

Ambition "I'm so happy to have my Saturday show. I just want to introduce lots of new people to country music."

Secret skills "As a child I was a national champion swimmer. I stopped at 14 and music became my big passion. I swim now for fun and fitness, but the fast lane is still too slow for me!" KASIA DELGADO

Face behind the voice

Una Healy Country Hits Radio

Age 37

Current job Hosts the Saturday show (9.00am) on Country Hits Radio, the UK's first national country music station.

CV Brought up in County Tipperary, she played the guitar and sang in pubs and clubs around Ireland. Having represented Ireland in the Eurovision Song Contest in 2006, she moved to London the following year and became a member of girl band the Saturdays. Since the band took a break in 2014, Healy has written and recorded solo albums with more of a country influence, been a coach on TV's The Voice of Ireland, and recently became a radio presenter, joining the new Country Hits station.

Best moment "Being asked to present my own country music show and tell people how amazing the music is. I've grown up with country, it was in my blood, and I starting writing music when I was 12. The first song I ever learnt was Dolly Parton's I Will Always Love You."

Worst moment "None so far as a broadcaster, as I'm just starting out, but when I was singing last year on live

TV my in-ear monitors weren't plugged in – so all I could hear was the drum behind me and lots of external noise. I wanted the ground to swallow me up."

Off air "I live with my two children in Northampton and spend my spare time doing special things with them. I also love keeping fit – I find it's really important for my mental health."

First radio memory "As a child I'd record songs off the radio with an old tape recorder and then do fake radio shows, pretending I was a DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "I grew up with lots of Irish DJs and now I love a variety of broadcasters. I don't think radio will ever die – it's like someone talking to you in your own room."

Ambition "I'm so happy to have my Saturday show. I just want to introduce lots of new people to country music."

Secret skills "As a child I was a national champion swimmer. I stopped at 14 and music became my big passion. I swim now for fun and fitness, but the fast lane is still too slow for me!"

Face behind the voice

Una Healy Country Hits Radio

Age 37

Current job Hosts the Saturday show (9.00am) on Country Hits Radio, the UK's first national country music station.

CV Brought up in County Tipperary, she played the guitar and sang in pubs and clubs around Ireland. Having represented Ireland in the Eurovision Song Contest in 2006, she moved to London the following year and became a member of girl band the Saturdays. Since the band took a break in 2014, Healy has written and recorded solo albums with more of a country influence, been a coach on TV's The Voice of Ireland, and recently became a radio presenter, joining the new Country Hits station.

Best moment "Being asked to present my own country music show and tell people how amazing the music is. I've grown up with country, it was in my blood, and I starting writing music when I was 12. The first song I ever learnt was Dolly Parton's I Will Always Love You."

Worst moment "None so far as a broadcaster, as I'm just starting out, but when I was singing last year on live

TV my in-ear monitors weren't plugged in – so all I could hear was the drum behind me and lots of external noise. I wanted the ground to swallow me up."

Off air "I live with my two children in Northampton and spend my spare time doing special things with them. I also love keeping fit – I find it's really important for my mental health."

First radio memory "As a child I'd record songs off the radio with an old tape recorder and then do fake radio shows, pretending I was a DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "I grew up with lots of Irish DJs and now I love a variety of broadcasters. I don't think radio will ever die – it's like someone talking to you in your own room."

Ambition "I'm so happy to have my Saturday show. I just want to introduce lots of new people to country music."

Secret skills "As a child I was a national champion swimmer. I stopped at 14 and music became my big passion. I swim now for fun and fitness, but the fast lane is still too slow for me!"

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Una Healy Country Hits Radio

Age 37

Current job Hosts the Saturday show (9.00am) on Country Hits Radio, the UK's first national country music station.

CV Brought up in County Tipperary, she played the guitar and sang in pubs and clubs around Ireland. Having represented Ireland in the Eurovision Song Contest in 2006, she moved to London the following year and became a member of girl band the Saturdays. Since the band took a break in 2014, Healy has written and recorded solo albums with more of a country influence, been a coach on TV's The Voice of Ireland, and recently became a radio presenter, joining the new Country Hits station.

Best moment "Being asked to present my own country music show and tell people how amazing the music is. I've grown up with country, it was in my blood, and I starting writing music when I was 12. The first song I ever learnt was Dolly Parton's I Will Always Love You."

Worst moment "None so far as a broadcaster, as I'm just starting out, but when I was singing last year on live

TV my in-ear monitors weren't plugged in – so all I could hear was the drum behind me and lots of external noise. I wanted the ground to swallow me up."

Off air "I live with my two children in Northampton and spend my spare time doing special things with them. I also love keeping fit – I find it's really important for my mental health."

First radio memory "As a child I'd record songs off the radio with an old tape recorder and then do fake radio shows, pretending I was a DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "I grew up with lots of Irish DJs and now I love a variety of broadcasters. I don't think radio will ever die – it's like someone talking to you in your own room."

Ambition "I'm so happy to have my Saturday show. I just want to introduce lots of new people to country music."

Secret skills "As a child I was a national champion swimmer. I stopped at 14 and music became my big passion. I swim now for fun and fitness, but the fast lane is still too slow for me!" KASIA DELGADO

Face behind the voice

Una Healy Country Hits Radio

Age 37

Current job Hosts the Saturday show (9.00am) on Country Hits Radio, the UK's first national country music station.

CV Brought up in County Tipperary, she played the guitar and sang in pubs and clubs around Ireland. Having represented Ireland in the Eurovision Song Contest in 2006, she moved to London the following year and became a member of girl band the Saturdays. Since the band took a break in 2014, Healy has written and recorded solo albums with more of a country influence, been a coach on TV's The Voice of Ireland, and recently became a radio presenter, joining the new Country Hits station.

Best moment "Being asked to present my own country music show and tell people how amazing the music is. I've grown up with country, it was in my blood, and I starting writing music when I was 12. The first song I ever learnt was Dolly Parton's I Will Always Love You."

Worst moment "None so far as a broadcaster, as I'm just starting out, but when I was singing last year on live

TV my in-ear monitors weren't plugged in – so all I could hear was the drum behind me and lots of external noise. I wanted the ground to swallow me up."

Off air "I live with my two children in Northampton and spend my spare time doing special things with them. I also love keeping fit – I find it's really important for my mental health."

First radio memory "As a child I'd record songs off the radio with an old tape recorder and then do fake radio shows, pretending I was a DJ."

Favourite broadcasters "I grew up with lots of Irish DJs and now I love a variety of broadcasters. I don't think radio will ever die – it's like someone talking to you in your own room."

Ambition "I'm so happy to have my Saturday show. I just want to introduce lots of new people to country music."

Secret skills "As a child I was a national champion swimmer. I stopped at 14 and music became my big passion. I swim now for fun and fitness, but the fast lane is still too slow for me!" KASIA DELGADO

It's hard to take charge

Agreeing to act as the executor of a will comes with liabilities, says Paul Lewis

MANY PEOPLE AGREE to be an executor of a will, especially for a relative or friend who is leaving them something when they die. If there is no will, the nearest relative is usually appointed as the administrator of the estate, who has the same duties.

But the job of an executor or administrator can be more work – and responsibility – than people expect. After death, the executors are responsible for valuing all the deceased's assets, assessing any debts and, for many estates, delivering an account of the value of the estate to the Probate Registry (or the Sheriff Clerk in Scotland). When they do that they also have to pay probate fees and, if any Inheritance Tax is due, that as well.

If there is little in the estate, formal probate may not be required, especially if the will leaves the assets to a surviving spouse. If it is required – property, investments, or large amounts of savings mean it usually will be – then probate is granted. If there is no will it is called “Letters of Administration”. In Scotland it is all called “Confirmation”. Only then can the assets be released by banks and debts paid before the balance is distributed among the heirs.

Plans to raise probate fees in England and Wales from £215 for a personal application to as much as £6,000 for some large estates have been delayed and it is not clear when they will begin.

PAYING PROBATE FEES and Inheritance Tax before the estate is released can cause problems for executors. Some assets such as money in a bank account or National Savings products may be released without probate up to certain limits, but each bank sets their own. To do so they will need to see an original copy of the death certificate. Some banks may offer a bridging loan to pay the tax – the interest charged is a debt to the estate.

Although it's complicated, it's important to get things right as executors can be held personally liable for the cost of any errors. A solicitor will give advice.

For more information, visit citizensadvice.org.uk and search “probate”.

LASTING POWERS OF ATTORNEY ONLY £416* pp

There may come a time when you are unable to make decisions for yourself, maybe through illness or injury. If this were to happen, do you know who would make decisions about your care or manage your finances?

It's important you make your wishes clear in a legal document known as a Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA).

There are two types of LPA – one that covers your health and welfare and one that covers your property and financial affairs.

A health and welfare LPA deals with your medical care and can only be used once you become unable to make decisions for yourself.

A property and financial affairs LPA deals with financial matters, and can also be used while you still have full mental capacity, for example if you become frail or immobile.

If you're married and your partner becomes unable to make decisions, marriage does not give you the authority to make decisions on their behalf – you will only be able to do this if you're formerly appointed as an attorney.

READER OFFER – HALF-PRICE LPAS FOR £416* PER PERSON

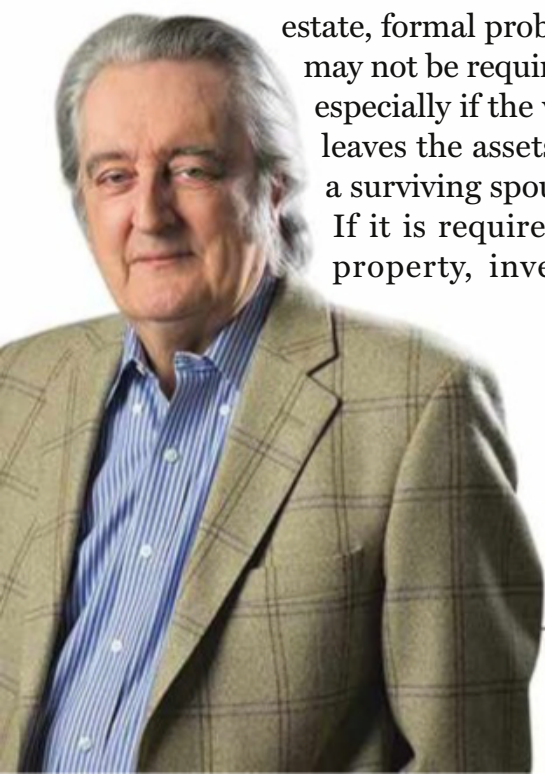

For a limited time, Key Estate Planning is offering to create both your property and financial affairs LPA and your health and welfare LPA for £416* (half price). Offer ends 13 May 2019.

Key has a team of estate-planning specialists who can explain and arrange these documents. Key can also offer you a free no-obligation consultation and recommendation on wills and trusts, based on your circumstances and legacy objectives.

To arrange your LPA review, call 0808 252 4559, or to download a free guide, visit radiotimes.com/lpa

Lines are open Monday–Thursday 9am–7.30pm, Friday 9am–5.30pm and Saturday 9am–1pm

*Normal price £832 (all prices include VAT). Excludes The Office of the Public Guardian registration fee. Products only available in England and Wales. Cannot be combined with any other offer. Any recommendations will be quoted and only charged for if you instruct Key to proceed. All prices quoted are for a telephone based service.

Who was Gentleman Jack?

This month's Radio Times Book Club choice tells the story of Anne Lister, the 19th-century Yorkshire landowner whose remarkable life is the subject of Sally Wainwright's latest drama

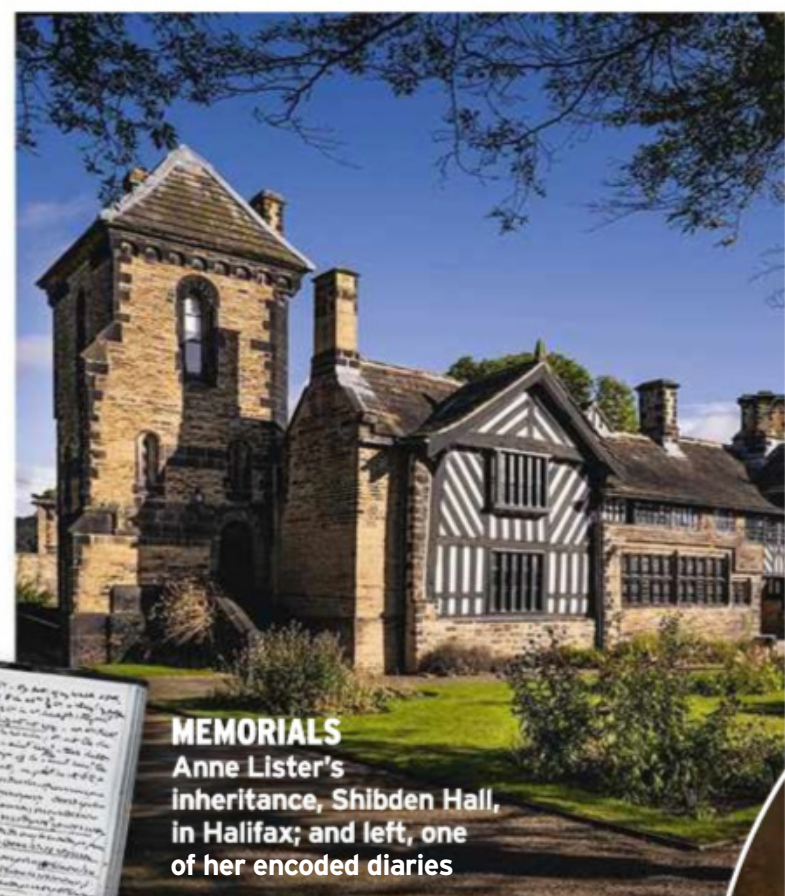

IN 1826, WHEN her uncle James died, Anne Lister inherited Shibden Hall in Halifax. As her aunt Anne and her father Jeremy still drew income from the estate, it meant that her access to money was restricted. For many years, she had to count the pennies and pounds, balance her books, and re-hem her old clothes. She recognised, though, that in a society which had very limited roles for women – usually as a wife, a mother, a governess, or an old maid – it was her fortuitous inheritance that enabled her to avoid what she called the narrow world of domestic life.

Capable, clever and with a natural gift for land and estate management, Anne had been the natural choice to take on the huge task of running Shibden. Not only had she impressed her uncle with her skill in dealing with the renewal of leases and misbehaving tenants, he also knew that she would never marry and therefore the estate would not be broken up. In their conversations together, Anne had left him under no illusion that her emotional and sexual feelings for other women precluded the possibility of her ever entering into a marriage with a man, in which she stood to lose all that was hers. It was another four decades, on the passing of the Married Women's Property Act in 1870 (30 years after Anne's death), before women would be able to keep hold of and inherit property following marriage. So, remarkable as it may seem now, it was Anne Lister's lesbian sexuality (then with no name or legal recognition), which played a crucial role in helping her to keep control of her wealth at a time when it was thought impossible for a woman to do so.

In becoming a landowner, Anne took on a powerful new identity, and it gave her greater visibility within the male-dominated Halifax business community. But she is most famous, of course, because of the journals she kept, which she wrote in tantalising and candid detail about her lesbian sexuality. Apart from a few loose diary pages written as a child, and two later smaller exercise books, they amount in total to 24 major volumes – 7,509 pages, spanning from 1816 until her death in 1840. Now recognised as a document of global significance by Unesco for being one of the longest social commentaries ever written, in 2011 the diaries were selected as one of only 20 unique items worthy of being added to the UK Memory Bank of the World Register.

These adult diaries, which Anne started in 1816 aged 25, became a vessel and repository for her thoughts and feelings. Each diary was a pseudo friend and confidante. Anne's consistent self-analysis reflects the cultural zeitgeist of the early 19th century – the search for an authentic identity explored through feeling, sensibility and a post-Enlightenment sense of individuality. She described the journals as being a private memorial to herself, and her writing style was influenced by reading the literature of some of the leading philosophers of the 17th and 18th century, including John Locke, Jean Jacques Rousseau and Emmanuel Kant. She wanted to write and tell her own story, but crucially only for herself. She hated the thought of being misrepresented by what she called “second hand” comments.

Anne employed two styles of writing in her diary – the first “plain hand” and the other what she called “crypt hand”, the latter comprising a secret code she made up from random Greek letters, numbers, symbols. In using the cryptic code to secrete information, hinting as it does as a means of self-censorship, Anne essentially presented a self that was separate and distinct from the one that flowed freely in her plain hand, a self that remains locked within a complex structure of esoteric symbols, numbers and letters. Anne said her plain hand would contain nothing of consequence. Descriptions of sex, money, bodily functions, scathing comments about people in both high society and in Halifax – in fact anything that she felt needed to be hidden – was written in code. The safe outlet provided by her crypt hand gave her an extra means of support in times of emotional need: “What a comfort my journal is,” she said. “How I can write in crypt all as it really is and throw it off my mind and console myself. Thank God for it” (29 April 1832).

HISTORY WOMAN

WHEN THE JOURNALS were decoded in the late 19th century by John Lister, the last surviving member of the family to inherit and live in the house, the shock of discovering the nature of Anne’s sexuality almost resulted in the diaries being lost for ever. His friend Arthur Burrell, a retired schoolmaster who had helped him to crack the crypt hand, urged him to burn them. Speaking of Anne’s relationships with women, Burrell said, “Hardly any one of them escaped her.” Lister, a learned man, recognised the historical value of his ancestor’s documented life and so refused his friend’s request. Instead, he decided to place the diaries back behind one of the oak panels in an upstairs bedroom. They remained there, untouched, with their secrets locked away, for another 40 years.

Anne Lister was at ease with her lesbianism. It was rooted in healthy self-esteem. She said that it was her “natural” inclination to love women. Her liberal interpretation of religious scripture also meant that her Anglican faith was never at odds with the desires of her body. She was at peace with her relationship to God and the Church. She said to friends that she “should never marry” and that she “could not like men”. She wanted to love women as a woman – and not as a woman dressed as a man. Her belief in traditional marriage in a Christian church at the altar before God was sacrosanct. And while she knew that she could not legally marry in church and exchange rings, she believed that she should still be able to stand before God, in front of a clergyman, take the sacrament with her intended wife, and thus solemnise their union.

Anne Lister said that she owed a good deal to her journal. She rejoiced in the power of language to help her at times of personal uncertainty and through heartbreak. She stood proud in a hostile world that could be cruel and unforgiving in its treatment of her. The future never really looked bleak for the woman known locally as “Gentleman Jack” of Halifax, and who had to face many challenges in her life – Non si male nunc et olim sic erit, she wrote poignantly, quoting from her beloved Horace, or, “If it is ill now, it will not also be so hereafter.”

HAVE YOU EVER considered having fake grass in your garden? I can hear many of you now: no, we love plants and real grass. The thing is, imitation grass has moved on considerably, with a wide choice of convincing finishes, colours and blade lengths, and although a contentious subject, it has become one worth debating.

First the environmental issue. Manicured lawns require nutrients (often chemical-based), mowing (sometimes using petrol-fuelled mowers) and regular watering (we should all be using less water, not more). Lawns are monocultural – so not great for biodiversity – although bees do like to burrow into them and worms keep the soil open, so it drains away heavy rain and copes with drought. As for artificial grass, it doesn't need mowing (occasional vacuum only) feeding or watering, but it is made up of a mix of plastics that are created using lots of fossil fuels. It will never biodegrade, either, which is a huge consideration. On the plus side, fake grass will drain if laid on a proper sub-base.

So, where would you think about laying it? Roof gardens and balconies are the most likely spaces – they can look good green. It wouldn't be a replacement for grass in such places, where there isn't anything growing in the first place – it would simply be acting as any other non-organic surface would (tiles/paving/gravel). Apply the same logic and perhaps small gardens with paved patios and terraces (which involve cement work, often imported stone and are sterile surfaces) could instead be imitation grass?

Then there are areas where it's difficult, even impossible, to grow grass, such as shady courtyards or atrium spaces. Artificial lawns are also becoming increasingly popular in family gardens where boisterous children can turn the grass into a compacted hard surface in summer and a mudbath in winter.

Have I convinced you yet? If so, follow these golden rules:

- Invest in good-quality imitation grass – it will look better and last longer – and ideally have it professionally installed.

- Integrate it into the garden, and make sure there are also plenty of nectar- and pollen-rich plants (in the ground or in containers). This will make it more beneficial for wildlife and will look like a garden rather than a children's play area.

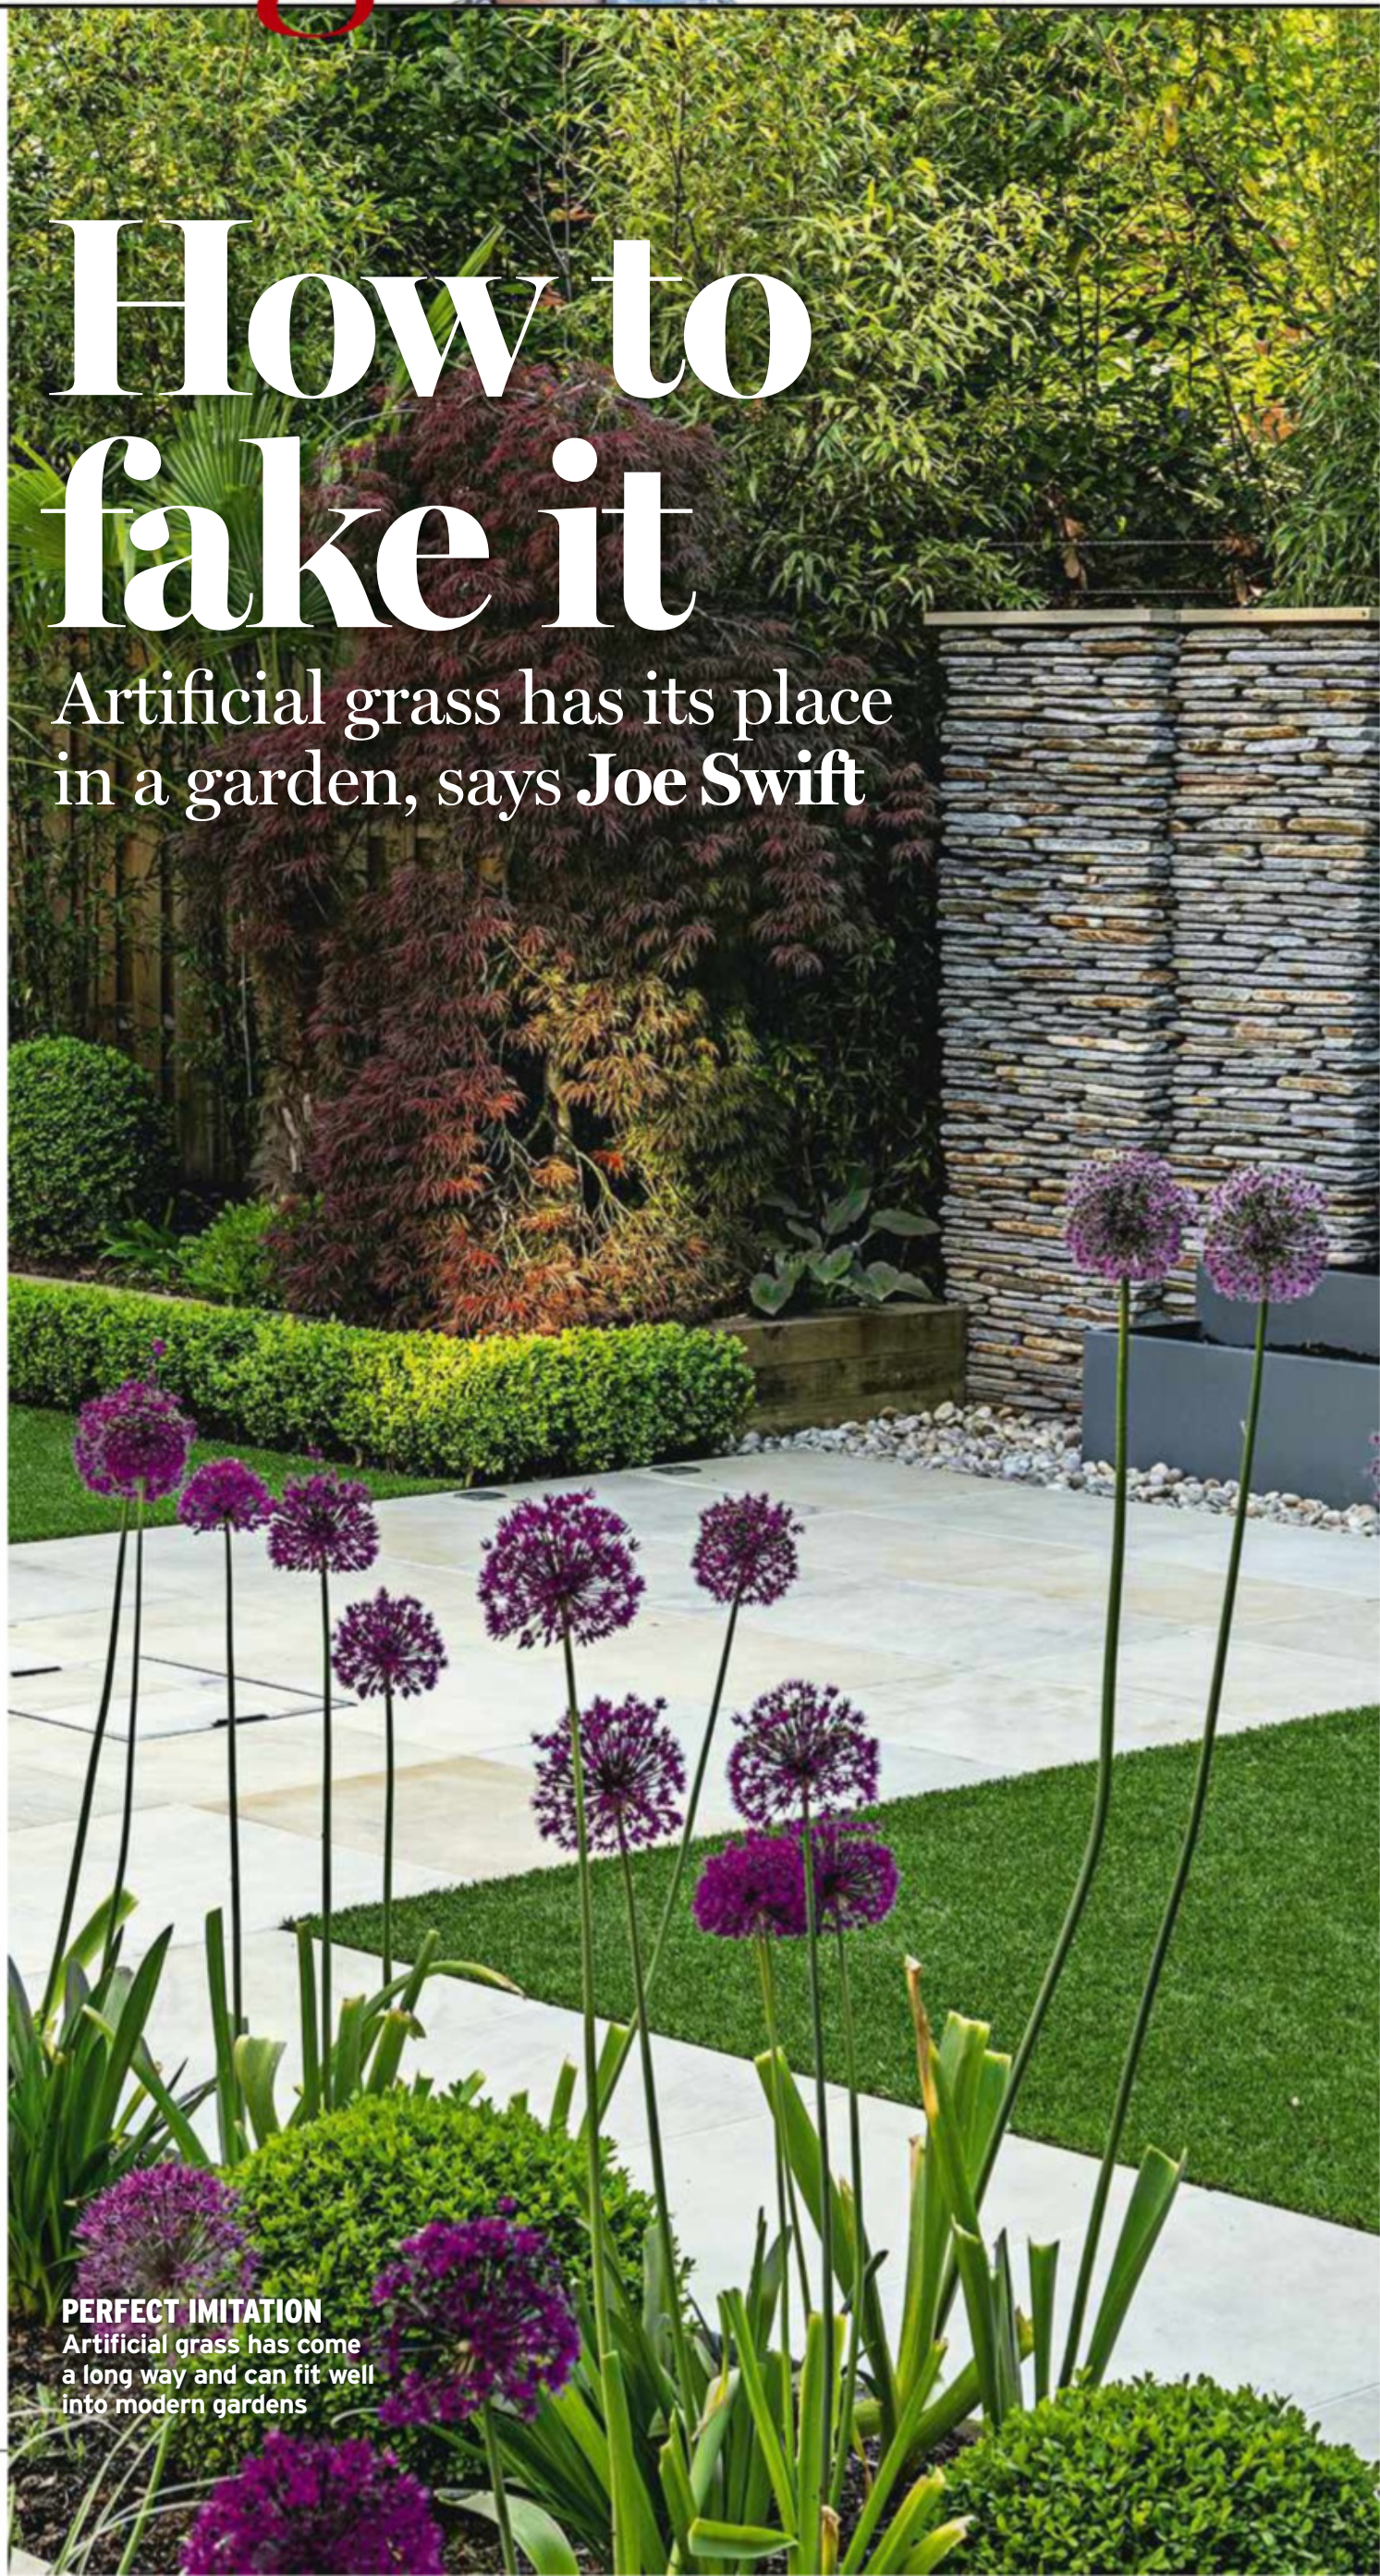

- Avoid laying it across an entire garden, from boundary to boundary. It looks unbalanced and too sterile. Good garden design has balance between surfaces and planting.

- Use it only in small areas of gardens, courtyards, roof gardens and balconies.

- In large gardens, to reduce maintenance and increase practicalities, consider an area of fake grass for children to play on and let the grass grow longer in other areas.

How to fake it

Artificial grass has its place in a garden, says Joe Swift

PERFECT IMITATION
Artificial grass has come a long way and can fit well into modern gardens

MAKE A GRAVEL GARDEN

Gravel gardens are a fine solution for those sun-baked areas where the soil is particularly free-draining, or smaller dry areas such as under the eaves of roofs, next to moisture-sapping brick walls or where the builders have put a bit of topsoil over a load of rubble. A gravel patch can be not only beautiful but also low-maintenance, as established plants won't need watering, feeding or much pruning.

UNDERCOVER OPERATION

Landscape fabric can be bought in wide rolls and laid over the ground to suppress weeds (while still letting rainfall through) before covering with a layer (ideally 40 to 50mm) of gravel or grit. Holes or slits can be cut into the fabric to plant through. The key with landscape fabric is to pin it down really well (make some strong U-pins with strong-gauge galvanised wire) so it doesn't pop up to ruin the effect.

If you want plants to self-seed in the gravel, as many like to do, as well as adding annuals and bulbs you may choose not to have any fabric at all. In this case, weed thoroughly first and make sure to remove diligently any pernicious weeds as soon as they pop up.

GET THE STONES DOWN

There are many types and colours of gravel and aggregates available. I like light natural colours as they set off most plants well. If you have regular cat visitors or pets, choose a larger size (20mm or greater).

ADD SOME PLANT LIFE

Drought-tolerant plants have adapted in different ways to cope with water shortage and will be perfect to fill your gravel garden. Look for clues. Hairy grey or silver leaves (Olive, Artemisia, Lavender, Santolina, Helianthemum, Stachys, Nepeta, Lychnis etc) reflect sun, whereas succulent fleshy leaves of plants like sedum, euphorbia and yuccas store moisture. Thin or fine leaves reduce evaporation, so plants like dwarf pines, rosemary, Olearia, Cytisus, Grevillea and many ornamental grasses work well. For added colour, throw some seed of annuals around, such as bright Californian poppies and daisy-like Mexican fleabane.

Game of Thrones

Sunday 2.00am, Monday 9.00pm Sky Atlantic

OVER THE PAST eight years, Game of Thrones has transported viewers around Europe and spawned a multi-million-pound tourist industry. HBO's lavish adaptations of George RR Martin's fantasy novels have been filmed in some spectacular locations, including Northern Ireland's dramatic Causeway Coast and Iceland's glaciers, lakes and lava fields, in Spain's imposing castles and Malta's fortress city Mdina. In this final series, the show returns to one of its most arresting settings, Dubrovnik's walled Old Town, which doubles as King's Landing, the capital of the show's fictional kingdom of Westeros.

Dubrovnik was the capital of the seafaring Republic of Ragusa in the Middle Ages. Nowadays the "Pearl of the Adriatic" is Croatia's biggest attraction and a popular port of call for cruise ships. Two other Unesco-listed towns on the Dalmatian coast have also enjoyed Game of Thrones cameos: the Roman city of Split (where dragons were held in the basement of an ancient palace) and the Venetian island-port Trogir (which doubled for the city of Qarth). All three are well worth a visit and are easily combined with a stay on one of Dalmatia's charming islands.

STEP BACK IN TIME IN DUBROVNIK

Accessed via stone bridges, the gleaming stone lanes within Dubrovnik's walled Old Town are dotted with palazzos, Baroque churches, smart restaurants serving fresh seafood, and quirky shops with handcrafted souvenirs. Walk the thick, mile-long medieval ramparts first thing, so you can savour the views of the sparkling Adriatic and terracotta rooftops without the crowds. Game of Thrones fans will recognise the pretty cove near the main entrance at Pile Gate, and views of the imposing Lovrijenac and Bokar fortresses.

Market scenes were shot in cobbled St Dominika Street, which leads to a 14th-century monastery stuffed with religious iconography and jewels. Stop by the open-air market on Gundulic Square to buy lavender oil, embroidered linens and punnets of figs and peaches. The seedy brothel that belonged to the show's Machiavellian schemer Littlefinger is really the exterior of the Ethnographic Museum, while the Rector's Palace, which stood in for the Spice King's home, is now the city's Cultural History Museum.

SAIL TO A LEGENDARY ISLE

The closest island to Dubrovnik is Lokrum, which also doubled as Qarth in the series. Home to botanical gardens and a crumbling monastery, this islet is only a 15-minute ferry from the old port and a tranquil spot to while away an afternoon, strolling among peacocks and fruit trees, or taking a dip in its clear waters. Legend has it that Richard the Lionheart took refuge here in the 12th century after his ship was battered by a ferocious storm.

The pine-scented Elaphiti Islands are also a short hop from Dubrovnik. Car-free Kolocep and Lopud are crisscrossed with shady walking trails, while larger Sipan used to be the summer getaway of Dubrovnik's elite and is famous for its full-bodied wine.

EXPLORE SPLIT'S ROMAN PALACE

Some 140 miles down the coast lies Split, Croatia's second-biggest city, which was originally a vast fortified palace – the home of Emperor Diocletian, who retired here at the turn of the fourth century. Later refugees found shelter in the palace and built a city within its watchtower-studded walls. Fragments of ancient history are scattered among its higgledy-piggledy alleys, including a Temple of Jupiter and an enormous black sphinx that Diocletian's army looted from the Egyptians. In the fifth series of Game of Thrones, queen Daenerys (Emilia Clarke) can be seen training her dragons in the perfectly preserved catacombs underneath the city, parts of which are now an eerie museum. Between the mountains that loom over the city huddles one of the show's most striking backdrops: Klis Fortress, a huge medieval fort that affords panoramic views.

VISIT A HISTORIC TREASURE

From May to October, a ferry runs between Dubrovnik and Split via some of Croatia's most popular islands: glamorous Hvar, laidback Brac and photogenic Korcula, a former citadel.

Although only half an hour's drive from Split (and 10 minutes from its airport), Trogir attracts a fraction of the footfall. Linked to the mainland by a bridge, this gorgeous little town has a soaring Romanesque cathedral, Venetian palazzos and a compact fortress that commands superb views. Thrones fans should look out for the bell tower of St Dominika, an atmospheric old monastery that also popped up in Qarth. The cafés on Trogir's palm- and yacht-lined seafront are a lovely place to linger, while the residents of Split flock to the beaches and resorts of neighbouring Ciovo Island in summer.

Thrones devotees should continue along the coast to Sibenik – shots of its exterior doubled as the city of Braavos. In its Old Town, steep alleys and staircases lead to delightful squares and a magnificent domed cathedral – another of Dalmatia's World Heritage sites. CLAIRE WEBB

COULD YOU SAVE MONEY ON ENERGY?

Radio Times has teamed up with energyhelpline to help you beat rising energy prices. Switch your energy provider with us and you could save up to £458*

The energy price cap was only introduced at the start of the year, but it's already going up. The Big Six energy providers have followed suit and all announced price hikes of 10%^ for 2019. If you're not on a fixed tariff with one of these providers then you could find yourself paying even more for energy.

Ofgem, the industry regulator, has already said that 54%^^ of consumers are on a default tariff, which are the ones affected by the price cap rise. Getting yourself on to a better deal could save you money, and mean your prices will be fixed for the year so you aren't affected. With plenty of options available, now is a great time to switch to something cheaper. It's a simple, fast and hassle-free process, with no interruption to your supply.

Why use our switching service

We want our readers to start enjoying cheaper energy so we've set up our Radio Times Switching Service. We compare over 70 providers, looking at the latest tariffs and trying our best to save you money. We're working with comparison specialists energyhelpline to bring you this service, and switchers have saved as much as £458* on their bill. There's absolutely no obligation, and the service is free, so it's just a great way of finding out whether you could save money on your energy.

You can visit us online or speak to one of our advisors, and we'll let you know whether you could be on a better energy deal. Our unbiased, impartial service is there to help you, and if you do decide to switch then we can handle it for you. Get in touch today, and see whether our free switching service could start saving you money.

Switch in minutes

It's easy and you don't need a bill to hand! To get started, call us or visit the website below. You can type in your postcode online, and answer a few simple questions about your current energy plan to calculate how much you can save by switching providers. We look after the switch and handle the paperwork for you with no interruption to your supply.

HOW IT WORKS

COMPARISONS CALCULATED

Our comparison calculator takes the current usage details that you enter and compares all UK suppliers to see who can offer you the best deals. The calculation takes into account a number of different factors including where you live, your energy usage, what type of meter you have, your preferred payment method and whether you are looking to switch both gas and electricity tariffs, or a single tariff.

Comparisons use the most up-to-date energy prices available and our website is updated often within hours of a price change being announced, meaning that the results you see are as accurate as possible at any given point.

In addition to showing you how much you could save, you can also see whether it's a fixed or variable tariff, the customer service ratings for the supplier, and an estimated annual cost and how long you would be tied in for.

To see how much you could save in 2019, call 0800 083 6528 or visit radiotimes.com/energy

Lines are open Monday–Friday 9am–8pm; Saturday and Sunday 9am–5pm

*10% of customers switching their gas and electricity bills with our partner energyhelpline between 1st Jan 2017 and 1st Nov 2018 saved £458 or more. Survey of over 100,000 switches. energyhelpline compares all publicly available energy tariffs under the OFGEM Confidence Code. ^British Gas, SSE, Scottish Power, npower, EDF and E.ON announced price rises of 10% in 2019. ^^54% of consumers are on a default tariff, not including prepayments meter tariffs - Ofgem report 2018. CHERRY BLOSSOM EXPLORER AND MOUNT FUJI DISCOVERY

of Mount Fuji

Discover the vibrant destinations of the Far East, awash with the beautiful cherry blossom of spring, on board the fabulous ms Westerdam.

Fly to Tokyo for a three-night hotel stay, a city that seamlessly blends the past and present. From the latest trends and technology, to pop culture icons and solemn shrines, you'll encounter a passionate city that remains faithful to its ancient roots. You'll be travelling as the nation turns a beautiful shade of pink as the iconic cherry blossom blooms. Not only is the cherry blossom a truly beautiful sight to behold, they are also a symbol of Japan's most deep-rooted cultural and philosophical beliefs.

The highlight of your stay is a fully escorted tour to the stunning Mount Fuji, a sacred site looped with walking trails and dotted with shrines. After a coach trip with numerous photo opportunities, you'll ride the Hakone Ropeway Cable Car, with views of the active sulphuric hot springs. Then it's on to Lake Ashi, where you'll take a boat across the still, peaceful water, enjoying the picturesque and serene natural beauty of the Crater Lake. The high-speed bullet train will whisk you back to Tokyo, before you embark ms Westerdam, a beautifully designed ship with modern facilities and entertainments to suit every taste.

Beginning in Kobe, you'll have an overnight stay on board the ship to explore this attractive city, sandwiched between the mountains and the sea and famed for its delicious regional beef. Other highlights of your cruise include Naha, from where you can visit the Peace Park; the white-sand beaches and turquoise waters of Ishigaki and Hososhima. Located on the Miyazaki Prefecture, in nearby Miyakonojo you'll find one of Japan's top cherry blossom viewing sites, Mochio-koen. Here you can walk through a two kilometre tunnel of 2,600 cherry trees.

Where does Bob's your uncle come from? John Cleveland by email

Bob's your uncle has been used since the 1930s to exclaim the ease with which something can be done, but who was Bob? One theory links the expression to Robert Cecil, Lord

Salisbury, who in 1887 gave the important post of Chief Secretary to Ireland to his nephew, Arthur Balfour. Balfour was only 39 and his appointment came as a surprise to many, particularly when other candidates were considered more eligible for the roles. The electorate is said to have decided that this was a classic case of nepotism (from the Latin nepos, "nephew"), and that if Bob was your uncle, you could have pretty much everything in life.

Alas, the dates to this story precede the first appearances of Bob's your uncle by many decades, and it may well be that Bob is simply being used here as a general nickname.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Drama uniting the nation

Line of Duty's Vicky McClure, Martin Compston, Adrian Dunbar and (inset) writer Jed Mercurio

Lovers of quality TV have a lot to thank Jed Mercurio for: writing top-class drama that holds us spellbound; creating complex, flawed characters; crediting viewers with the intelligence and tenacity to follow plotlines with multiple strands that weave through several series. But most of all, I'm grateful to him for reintroducing good old-fashioned serial viewing. No streaming, no leaked plot spoilers, no jumping ahead because you can't handle the wait. Thanks to Line of Duty (Sunday BBC1), the whole nation can sit down to watch at the same time, then count the hours till the next episode. Nice work, fella!

MARIACHI OF THE DAY

RT's article on the nation's top ten theme tunes (20 April) featured the Match of the Day theme, composed in 1970 by Barry Stoller. I believe the theme was initially written for the BBC coverage of the Fifa World Cup in Mexico, which is why it featured Mexican Banda music with its distinctive sound of brass instruments.

Norma Postin Rugby, Warwickshire

SPIRITED SITCOM

A huge thank you to the BBC for Ghosts (Monday BBC1). Episode one (15 April) had me laughing out loud the whole way through. I always loved Horrible Histories, which I watched with my son when he was a little boy – and still watch on my own if it's on!

This new series from that talented team was so well written and the visuals were very funny. I'm looking forward to the rest of this series and let's hope more will follow.

Georgina Ward Worthing, West Sussex

... The new series of Ghosts is laugh-out-loud funny, with touches of pathos, excellent special effects and production values. I'm absolutely loving it. I hope a second series is in the pipeline!

Kev Gimbert Normandy, France

It's too early yet for an announcement on that, but we'll keep you posted.

ART WORKS

Tucked away in the afternoon on BBC1, I found a brilliant programme called Home Is Where the Art Is. Nick Knowles made the perfect presenter, encouraging without being patronising. I loved seeing what the artists came up with.

Christine Darrington Norwich

SET AN EXAMPLE

I was disappointed with Tom Heap's cynical views on dealing with climate change (RT, 20 April). It is our children and grandchildren who are going to suffer the effects of global warming. Political attempts to limit global warming to 1.5°C are too little and too late. What is needed is a global mobilisation of parents to make the necessary sacrifices for our children. And Tom Heap needs to set an example by sacrificing his "gas guzzler".

John Hastings Whittlesey, Cambridgeshire

WHERE CREDIT'S DUE...

I adore Victoria (Sunday ITV), but episode four (14 April), which dealt with the cholera outbreak in London and the pioneering work of Dr John Snow, was far too kind to Florence Nightingale.

Yes, she did ensure that the sewers were flushed and that cleanliness became paramount, but when working in the Crimea she held to the "miasma" theory of the way cholera and other infections are spread, as did most of the medical

SCENE OF THE YEAR?

The Victim (8–11 April BBC1) was a sombre and sometimes gruelling watch – but what a pay-off. The final scene was magnificent: harrowing, mesmerising and ultimately redemptive. If there were an award for best single television scene of the year, this would deserve to win hands down. The acting by James Harkness and Kelly Macdonald was so raw and truthful and so full of heartfelt emotion that it moved me to tears.

Peter Gregg Carrickfergus, Antrim

...I have been left emotionally drained. What a magnificent performance by James Harkness in The Victim, especially in the closing scene with Kelly Macdonald as the grieving mother. The acting was so believable throughout, but particularly at the end, conveying Rob Williams's remarkable script under superb direction. Congratulations to all concerned for a truly excellent drama.

Rosina MacFarlane Sleaford, Lincolnshire

SHOW AND TELL

When Eric Knowles told Fiona Bruce in Antiques Roadshow (14 April BBC1) that she had guessed correctly, he called her "Fib". Is Fib her nickname at the BBC? "FI"ona "B"ruce...

Ronald Taylor Sawbridgeworth, Hertfordshire

Eric Knowles tells RT: "Not Fib – I actually said, 'Kid', which is a northern term of family affection."

...Daisy Goodwin is younger than me, but her assertion (RT, 13 April) that viewers of her excellent series Victoria are the great-great-great-grandchildren of the old queen's subjects made me feel every one of my 64 years.

My grandmother was born in 1879, so was very much a Victorian. She died in 1974. I should think many of us still around today were lucky enough to hear tales of Victorian England from someone who lived through it!

HEARTBREAKING

The 17 April episode of Doctors (BBC1) reduced me to tears. I would like to commend all involved in this excellent portrayal of the heart-rending problems surrounding the assessment of PIPs [Personal Independence Payments].

I am the carer for someone with mental health problems, who has recently had their payments stopped. I can empathise very strongly with the point made in the drama that the "one size fits all" questions asked in the assessment do not in fact fit anyone! Thank you, BBC, for bringing this to the public's attention.

A MIRROR TO SOCIETY

Having stumbled on the first episode of Don't Forget the Driver (9 April BBC2), I watched all six on iPlayer. It was described as a sitcom and, sure, there were many laugh-out-loud moments – but like all brilliant comedy, there was much underlying sadness: it was funny and moving in equal measure. There were so many themes reflecting problems today – migration, family separation, insecurity, dementia, loneliness – all presented with a rich mix of humour and pathos.

The production and the performances by Toby Jones and the cast were brilliant.

APRIL FOOL?

In University Challenge (1 April BBC2) Berthe Morisot (as painted by Edouard Manet) was wrongly identified as his sister. She was in fact the sister-in-law of Edouard Manet, having married his brother Eugène Manet. The mistake is particularly shocking as Berthe Morisot was a celebrated painter in her own right, exhibited as part of the Impressionist group and was a long-time friend and colleague of Edouard Manet.

I wonder if the mistake came from the fact that in French, sister-in-law is belle soeur, which can be confusing. However, a quick check would have made it clear. This was laziness on the part of the researchers and Jeremy Paxman did not spot the obvious mistake.

A ROUNDED PORTRAIT

Thank you to John Bridcut for his sensitive and revealing documentary, Janet Baker: in Her Own Words (14 April BBC4). It was a wonderful, rounded portrait of an outstanding artist and a remarkable human being.

It was so sympathetically filmed, with contributions from her fellow professionals, interspersed with recordings and reflections by Dame Janet.

It was clear that, through the suffering she had gone through as a child after the sad death of her younger brother, Dame Janet was able to bring a deeper emotional power to her singing.

The final twist was very moving as she sat with her husband Keith, now clearly fully dependent on her and a carer, voicing her wish to repay the many years of support she had received from him, with tears and humour. A lesson for us all.

YOU ASK US

How did they get Freddie into that trailer?

The trailer for BBC Sounds is brilliant. One of my favourite bits is with Freddie Mercury at the end. I'd love to know how that was done – it's really impressive.

Chloe Clark, Derby

For those who haven't yet seen it, the TV trailer advertising BBC Sounds, which is running again until the end of April, follows a listener throughout her day as she's joined by a range of personalities from music, radio and podcasts. Along with Freddie Mercury, other stars featured include singer Rita Ora, actor Jared Leto, Spurs footballer Son Heung-Min and presenter Professor Brian Cox.

Laurent Simon, executive director at BBC Creative, tells RT: "It was a technical challenge! But as this was the BBC's biggest product launch since iPlayer more than a decade ago, we knew we had to make a big statement with it. The trailer, Listen without Limits, was created by James Reynolds and Nick Robinson. The first job was to source the right archive footage – to show that music is a personal and intimate experience, we needed a song and performance that really deliver emotion. Freddie Mercury singing Who Wants to Live Forever live felt like it would really hit home.

A KIND OF MAGIC

"Once the footage was chosen, the next step was to match the live action to the archive – that meant using the same camera angles, heights, lighting and even similar camera lenses.

And finally we had to bed the archive into the live action – which is where post-production and special effects come in. You have two pieces of the puzzle, and the job is to mesh them together to create the final picture.

"Placing the figure of Freddie in the modern setting happens first. The last touch is to overlay both pictures with a colouring treatment, called grading. Treating them both in the same way means that the make-believe works as well as it's technically possible to achieve."

THE STORE REOPENS

What happened to the new series of Superstore on ITV2? We were treated to some new episodes, but after that it's just been repeats. Will I ever find out what happens next?

Melissa Bowart, Beaminstor, Dorset
Happily there's good news about the return of the American sitcom. An ITV spokesperson tells us: "We will be showing series four of Superstore in its entirety in the summer. Our break coincided with the US mid-season break."

THE LAST LAUGH...

How do you define a sitcom (The 20 Greatest Sitcoms, RT, 13 April)? The best TV comedy ever has to be Last of the Summer Wine. And Green Wing was absolutely brilliant.

Jan Mountford Malvern, Worcestershire

...Peter Kay's Phoenix Nights was by far the funniest thing on television since Fawlty Towers – and it still is...

J Sharples Accrington, Lancashire

... All great choices... but I was disappointed that the brilliant, ground-breaking Till Death Us Do Part didn't make the top 20.

This Johnny Speight production was topical, controversial but most of all, very funny.

Gerard Brennan

AN APB FOR AC-12

Jed Mercurio harked back to The Professionals when he gave Bodie and Doyle's call-sign numbers (three-seven and four-five) to DI Kate Fleming and DS Steve Arnott in Line of Duty (14 April BBC1). I'm sure he meant to do this!

David Brown Preston, Lancashire

You're spot on – a source for the show confirms that this was an intentional homage. (Jed actually got to work with Lewis Collins, who played Bodie, when he cast him as Brian Conley's dad in his comedy The Grimleys). David wins Still Game – the ninth and final series of the Glaswegian sitcom. It's available to buy for £14.99 with free p&P at radiotimes.com/dvds18.

ENJOY PEACE OF MIND WITH PRIVATE HEALTH INSURANCE

Find out how private health insurance can help you get quick access to the treatment you need

When it comes to cancer, there's no road map to follow. But that doesn't mean you have to find your way on your own. That's why we have specially selected AXA PPP healthcare to provide their award-winning Personal Health cover to our readers. You'll also be treated to a case of Virgin wines, or a healthier alternative, when you join*.

At AXA PPP healthcare, we know that being diagnosed with cancer can be a difficult and emotional time for you and for your family, that's why cancer care is part of the core cover we provide. If you are diagnosed with cancer our team of nurses are only a phone call away, ready to answer your questions, help you understand what treatments are available subject to your healthcare plan, or just provide a listening ear. They'll be there for your family too, to make things a little easier for the people you're closest to. Nothing's more important to us than getting you well again.

Our Personal Health plan covers you for any new medical conditions that arise after you take out your plan, and as with all private medical insurance plans, your eligibility for cover depends on your medical history. Occasionally we won't be able to offer you comprehensive care for cancer because of your medical history. If this happens, you can feel reassured that we'll still make sure you have access to the in-patient cancer drugs you need as part of your core plan.

WHY CHOOSE US AT AXA PPP HEALTHCARE?

We'll be there for you and your family when you need us

With our plan you can expect:

- Quick access to diagnosis when you choose an Out-patient option
- A dedicated Fast Track Appointments service
- Access to the latest licensed chemotherapy drugs on specialist referral
- Treatment from a consultant, rather than a junior doctor
- Ask us anything you like about your health, with nurses, midwives and pharmacists available at the end of the phone
- FREE case of Virgin wine or a healthier alternative when you take out our Personal Health plan!*

Terms and conditions *Choice of one of the following six offers available on purchase of a Personal Health plan only (excludes child only plans). Offers limited to customers who are not, and have not in the last three months, been a member of any individual or corporate plan, policy or trust scheme underwritten or administered by AXA PPP healthcare Limited or AXA PPP healthcare Administration Services Limited. Offer is non-transferable with no cash alternative. Offer cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer, apart from our 5% discount for paying annually. Offer limited to one per household and may be withdrawn at any time or substituted for an equivalent product. A one-time voucher code will be sent to the email address you provided on purchase of your Personal Health plan, within 28 days of receiving your payment if paying annually or, if paying monthly, within 28 days of receiving your second month's subscription (as long as you haven't cancelled your Personal Health plan). The voucher code will only be redeemable through the ActivePlus website against one of the following six items (T&Cs apply): 1. £100 M&S gift card, 2. £150 ActivePlus voucher, 3. Fitbit Charge 3 (subject to stock availability) one per Personal Health plan, 4. Nuffield Health Assessment, 5. Realise Health Assessment, 6. Virgin Wine box

LORRAINE KELLY

‘I was so beside myself’

The presenter is marking 35 years in TV – but what’s her highlight?

What’s the view from your sofa?

We live in an old, very narrow house in Buckinghamshire and the living room isn’t big, so our giant telly looms over us. We’ve got a view of the Thames, and artwork by my husband [cameraman Steve Smith] and Emmerdale actor Mathew Bose, who did a beautiful drawing of my dog, Angus.

Do you watch a lot of TV?

Television is very important to me. I’m totally addicted to Netflix. As somebody who grew up with three channels – and had to get off my bum to switch channels – we’ve now almost got too much choice. Part of the joy of my job is watching TV for work. I’ll be watching The Kominsky Method or Corrie and say to Steve: “It’s for work, I’ve got to keep up with it!”

What’s your TV guilty pleasure?

Four in a Bed on Channel 4. It’s so passive-aggressive! People are tipping the beds looking for weird hairs and then cry if their sausage gets slagged off. It’s the best thing on television because it’s all so repressed. I also love Frasier. The joy of finding an episode I haven’t seen is like finding a diamond.

Have you always loved telly?

Yes, ever since I watched the Moon landing with my dad. I’m a massive Star Trek fan, I’ve just rewatched them all. I love anything to do with space, sci-fi and astronomy. My dad bought me a telescope when I was five but living in the Gorbals [in Glasgow], where there was a lot of light pollution, I didn’t get to see very much.

You celebrate 35 years in TV this year – how has it changed?

Technology has changed massively. When I was first doing TV-am [in 1984], getting a live link from London to Glasgow was an achievement! We’d send a news package down the line but if it was a feature package, I’d get the tape, go to Glasgow Airport, find a pilot and ask them to take the tape to London.

What’s the key to your longevity?

You’ve got to do your homework, know what you’re talking about and listen. It could be an interview with Tom Hanks or a lady who’s campaigning to change the law because she’s lost her child. You’ve got to make them feel at ease.

Any bad interviews?

Once Ralph Fiennes was on to talk about his movie, but he was literally in the foetal position, rocking backwards and forwards. I said, “You’re hating this, aren’t you?” We had a really interesting conversation about how he loves his job but hates doing press. I can’t believe how intimidated

A-list actors get when they can’t hide behind a character.

Who was your best interviewee?

Buzz Aldrin in 2016. I think he quite enjoyed it because I was so beside myself.

Any regrets?

I look back at my fashion howlers on GMTV and think, “I couldn’t have had any friends, because somebody should have told me I looked ridiculous!”

Would you ever do reality TV?

Not in a million years. I love watching Strictly but if I was doing it, I would be crap – and not Ed Balls funny crap!

GEMMA CALVERT

Lorraine is on weekdays 8.30am ITV

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY WEB Honest Trailers on YouTube. It’s hilarious. It pricks that bubble of pomposity.
