THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

'At last! A TV show about books'

OVER THE YEARS in the pages of RT I've written a number of pained pieces wondering why there are no television shows about books and reading. I receive lots of very supportive reader reaction but... still no television shows about books and reading. Why ever not? Book sales are buoyant, book groups are thriving and people love to read.

So I'm delighted to welcome Novels That Shaped Our World (Saturday BBC2) and The Big Scottish Book Club (Sunday BBC Scotland and iPlayer). Television shows about books! At last. Whatever took you so long? This is all part of a year-long BBC celebration of literature – just a year? – so we'd better make the most of it before it all goes away.

My only gripe with the Novels That Shaped Our World is its use of actors being all actory and declaiming bits from various texts in odd places – Russell Tovey reciting passages from Mary Shelley's Frankenstein inexplicably at the wheel of a London cab, for instance.

This strikes me as part of that lingering institutionalised terror of shows about reading and books. Oh no, audiences will get bored so we must show them something. Shiny beads? Puppies? Actors doing acting?

THIS WEEK IS also about remembrance, of course, with documentaries including Gary Lineker: My Grandad's War (Monday BBC1). The BBC is also repeating Peter Jackson's stunning They Shall Not Grow Old (Sunday BBC2), while the poppy fall in the Royal Albert Hall during the Royal British Legion Festival of Remembrance (Saturday BBC1) and Remembrance Sunday: the Cenotaph (Sunday BBC1) never lose their power to move in the most profound way.

I hope no one ever decides that these beautiful ceremonies have outlived their time. They must be with us for ever.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

CRAIG REVEL HORWOOD

‘I love binge-watching box sets on Netflix when I get some time off – which isn’t often,’ says the Strictly judge. ‘I loved Russian Doll, a comedy drama about a New York games developer who keeps dying over and over again. That was fantastic. And I’ve just watched Glitch, which is an Australian drama about six people in an outback town who come back to life.’

SHEILA DILLON

‘I’m deep in the gritty twists and turns of Spiral,’ says the presenter of The Food Programme. ‘It shows Paris as a visitor doesn’t see it, and the lead female character, Laure Berthaud, tests the limits of what we expect from a woman. And, like everyone else: Seven Worlds, One Planet.’

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

SALISBURY SPY DRAMA

Here's an intriguing drama coming down the line – a BBC2 three-parter about the Salisbury Novichok poisonings of 2018. Focusing on the impact of the nerve agent attack that targeted former Russian spy Sergei Skripal and his daughter Yulia, the drama will star Anne-Marie Duff, Ron Cook and Rafe Spall (though the BBC won't say what roles they are playing). What writers Adam Patterson and Declan Lawn will say is: "It's a privilege to be able to tell the story of people who were deeply affected by the events in Salisbury. During our months of research we have been humbled to hear their stories, and to be able to tell them in this drama."

THE MEAT OF THE MATTER

Following on from the success of BBC1's Drowning in Plastic, Liz Bonnin is turning her attentions to another aspect of the environmental crisis. In Meat: a Threat to Planet Earth she explores the impact of meat-eating on our planet, whether through forest clearances in the Amazon or its effect on our health. For her plastics doc, Bonnin highlighted the plight of Shearwater chicks in the Tasman Sea whose stomachs were full of plastic; she told RT in an interview that she wanted a UK ban on plastic bottles and carrier bags. So expect some stern words for carnivores when this airs later this year.

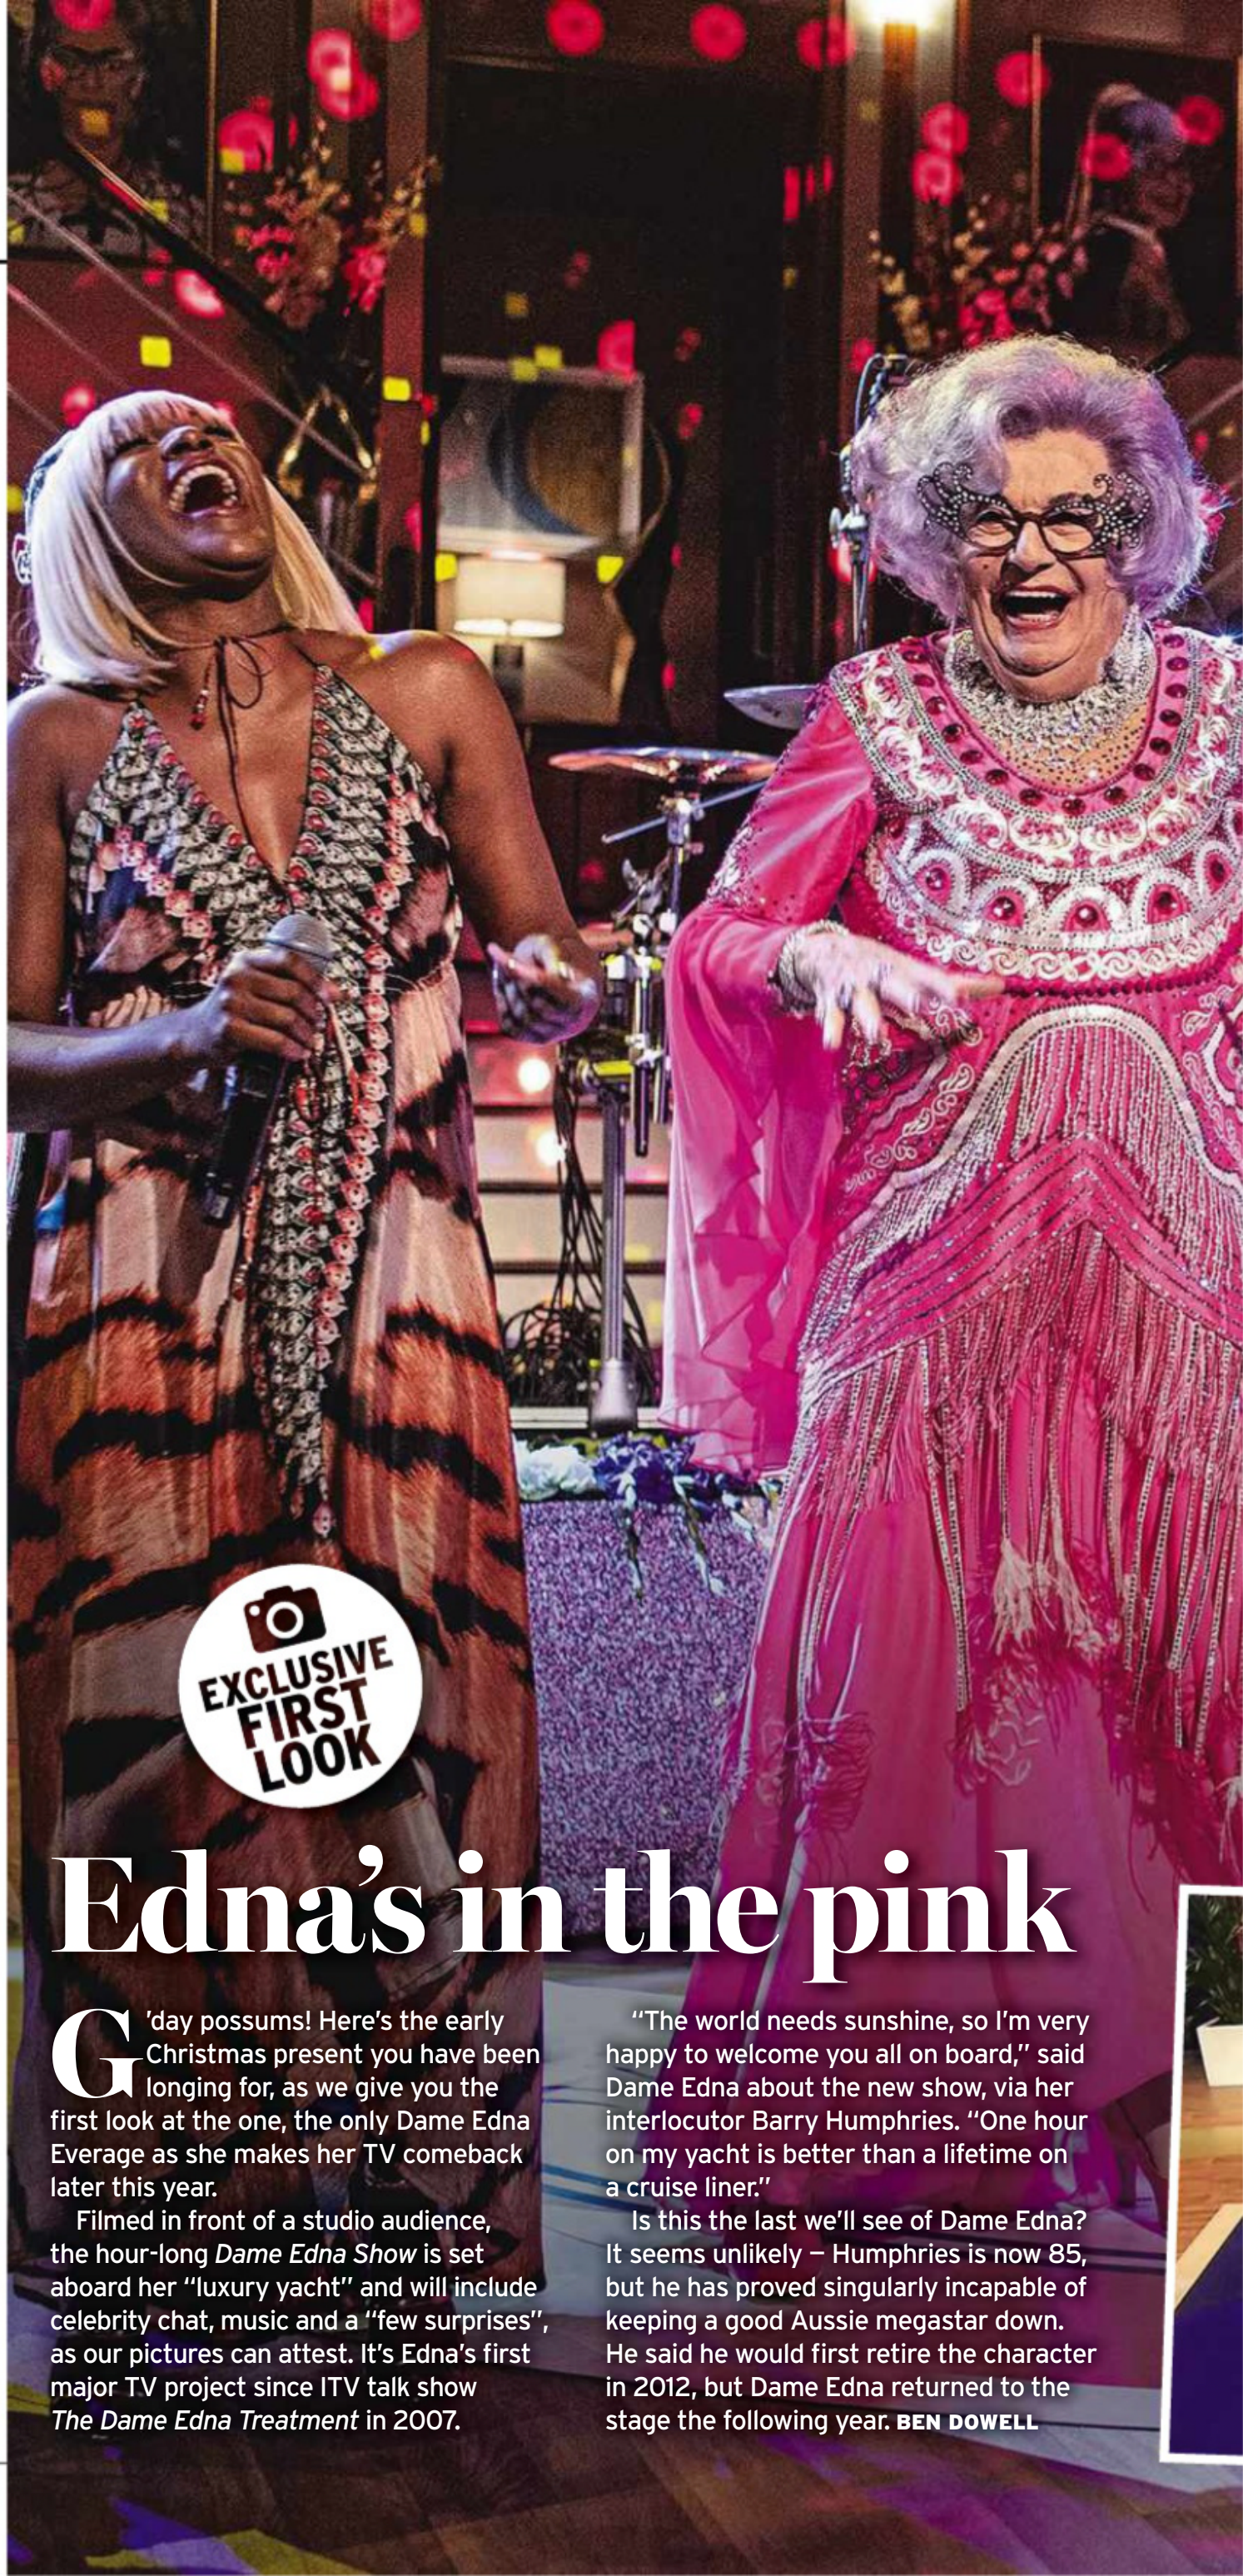

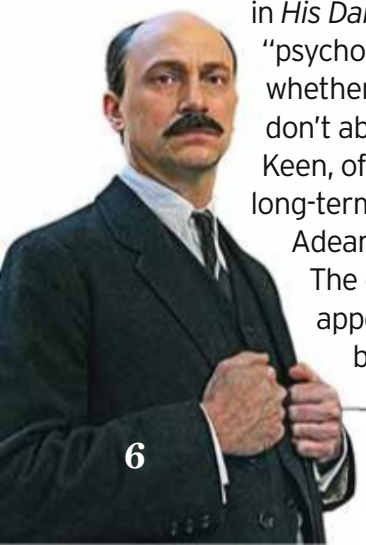

LITTLE BRITAIN RETURNS

It will be intriguing to see how Matt Lucas and David Walliams reprise Little Britain – or Little Brexit, as it will be called when it comes to Radio 4. When it was riding high at the start of this century, viewers lapped up its politically incorrect humour, featuring the likes of obese freeloader Bubbles De Vere, or disabled Andy and his carer, Lou. But what is Lucas and Walliams's response to today's more "woke" age? "Basically, I wouldn't make that show now," Lucas said in a 2017 interview. "It would upset people. We made a crueller kind of comedy than I'd do now. Society has moved on a lot since then, and my own views have evolved."

DAD'S MAD KEEN

With Dafne Keen recently saying that her actor dad, Will Keen (who she appears alongside in His Dark Materials), always plays "psychopaths", RT started to wonder whether Dafne knows something we don't about the new series of The Crown. Keen, of course, plays the Queen's long-term private secretary Michael Adeane (left) in the Netflix drama. The courtier, who died in 1984, always appeared anything but psychopathic, but let's see... BEN DOWELL

Edna's in the pink

G'day possums! Here's the early Christmas present you have been longing for, as we give you the first look at the one, the only Dame Edna Everage as she makes her TV comeback later this year.

Filmed in front of a studio audience, the hour-long Dame Edna Show is set aboard her "luxury yacht" and will include celebrity chat, music and a "few surprises", as our pictures can attest. It's Edna's first major TV project since ITV talk show The Dame Edna Treatment in 2007.

"The world needs sunshine, so I'm very happy to welcome you all on board," said Dame Edna about the new show, via her interlocutor Barry Humphries. "One hour on my yacht is better than a lifetime on a cruise liner."

Is this the last we'll see of Dame Edna? It seems unlikely – Humphries is now 85, but he has proved singularly incapable of keeping a good Aussie megastar down. He said he would first retire the character in 2012, but Dame Edna returned to the stage the following year. BEN DOWELL

I'VE JUST HAD the experience of a lifetime. For three days I travelled through remote Namibia with former Royal Marine commando Ant Middleton and we talked, and walked and talked some more. We slept outside under the stars, with lions prowling around nearby, although I was far wari-er of any snakes hiding in my sleeping bag – fortunately, they didn't rear their heads.

It was quite an awakening for me as Ant got me to talk frankly – and I think I made Ant open up about the things that matter to him as well. But it was the moments when we didn't speak that changed my life for ever, when I learnt the true power of conversation – and silence.

I know I was lucky to get this opportunity, even the moment when I took a leap of faith and jumped off a cliff (fortunately, with a safety harness). I realise that my life is different from many people's, and I'm not looking for any special sympathy – I enjoy many great experiences, even if there is a price to pay for fame with the attention you get, as I have with my incredible experiences on The X Factor and in the band One Direction.

I know people think that suddenly being thrust into fame and, in some cases, riches isn't deserving of sympathy but, like so many people, I inhabit a world dominated by the demands of social media. We live in a world of constant chatter.

The pressures of social media in Britain fill our lives with charts and numbers and figures. People are obsessed with how a page is doing, how a tweet has performed, which is stupid, really. Because none of it is real. My experience in Africa confirmed in my mind the idea that people, especially young people, don't get enough of these simpler things in life.

When I was in remote Africa, there was no phone signal and no clouds in the sky, so no light pollution. We were making fires, and chatting was our only entertainment.

And when you're able to sit in silence with somebody and not have to fill it, that's when you know you've got a true friend, a true relationship with somebody. I think I and a lot of people have kind of lost touch with that because we're so used to these little 30-second bites of information. We just need everything much quicker these days, everything is so uptight and fast-paced, which is hard and makes life difficult. But when you slow down and shut up, you finally notice the world around you.

'Young people are forgetting to just be themselves'

What struck me most in Namibia was how long the days were. And you weren't really that tired because nothing was really coming that quickly. We just slowly went through the motions of our day together, out in the desert.

It has taught me that with the way life is, especially with social media and with young people who are its biggest consumers, we're so much more interested in what everybody else is doing, we're forgetting to just be ourselves.

So, I recommend that everyone puts their phones down and stops for a few minutes every day. They'll find they're not spending their hours consumed by thinking about what everybody else is doing. Because if you get wrapped up in this manic merry-go-round and in everybody else's problems, you forget to deal with your own. And you fail to see the bigger picture.

Ant Middleton and Liam Payne: Straight Talking is on Sky 1 on Tuesday at 9pm.

Liam's debut album, LPI, is out on 6 December

WHAT WE WATCHED

Tomorrow's World, the BBC's magazine show taking a peek into the future, was just five years old in 1970 – and it had a long future ahead of it, before its eventual axing in 2003. Producer Brian Johnson took RT readers through the hazards of making the series, from sourcing early technical prototypes from manufacturers anxious about industrial espionage to the perils of demonstrating a portable bath. "We had a lady decently concealed with bubbles," recalled Johnson, adding that the team suddenly noticed "that the heat from the studio lights was melting the foam".

WHAT YOU SAID

A young Ian McKellen had just starred in Ross, BBC1's Play of the Month about TE Lawrence. Two RT readers who knew the soldier personally wrote in, with contrasting opinions. WJ Pearce from Didcot, Berkshire said the drama accurately captured the era and the man. However, Captain FW Randall took issue with the play's focus on "the most sordid details of a great man's experiences with much emphasis on brutality, particularly the dreadful floggings", which he said would "cause great pain to his friends and relatives". BEN DOWELL

JOHNSTON

MICHELLE VISAGE

GREATEST STRENGTH Michelle has surprised me, because I didn't think that she'd be as good as she is. She's got everything – the talent, the ability, the musicality. She's a driven woman and definitely the one forcing her pro partner Giovanni to rehearse for longer hours. She wants the dance to look just right and won't settle for anything less. She's out there to win, and she is getting stronger each week.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS She gets the technique right, but is she actually enjoying herself? My advice would be to start relishing it a bit more.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE She's working hard enough, but I'd like to see her come out and completely wow us.

HARD WORKER But Michelle Visage has also surprised Craig with her talent and musicality

DARK HORSE Kelvin Fletcher was a late entrant – but he has set Strictly alight

KELVIN FLETCHER

GREATEST STRENGTH He's very much in touch with himself, and his body, and the rhythm of it. His strengths lie in Latin – in hip action and telling stories. He possesses great musicality and rhythm and he blew everyone away with his first dance. If he reaches the final and dances the salsa, then I can definitely see him lifting the Glitterball trophy. Plus he's loved by the nation.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS He struggles with ballroom. And because he came in super-strong from the start, it's difficult to show the viewers a journey.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE His posture. If he can get some swing and sway into his ballroom, I think he'll definitely be up to getting to the final.

I'M LOVING STRICTLY this year. At the start of the series it felt a bit nervy, as the celebrities seemed a little more on edge than they have in previous years. I think that's largely due to the fact that they all want to win. It's quite competitive, and they're all applying themselves like you would not believe.

Although there have obviously been some celebrities with shortcomings, I haven't needed to get my "1" paddle out this year, because the standard has been higher. There hasn't been anyone I could give such a low score to!

As the series is going along, the dead wood is being kicked out – I think the viewers are now all quite knowledgeable about dance, and the die-hard fans are voting with a technical mind as well as their heart. It's interesting to see and it seems as if the people at home are judging along the same lines as we are.

Having said that, there have been some shocks – like Dev

Griffin being in the bottom two with Emma Weymouth. The audience put them there and, as judges, we can only judge on the dance-off – nothing that has run previous to it, and nothing that might come in the future. I say: if you want someone to stay in, then vote for them! And not enough people voted for Dev so he ended up in the dance-off. It wasn't his year.

Normally we'd have problems with people having to

EMMA WEYMOUTH

GREATEST STRENGTH Ballroom. She's doing very simple moves technically well in order to get high scores, which is intelligent because a lot of people just want to be showy.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS Latin. When she's out there on the floor dancing by herself, I think she has trouble. She also drops the ball. And by that I mean she lets herself down, generally in the last ten seconds of the routine. She drops the shoulders – she just loses it and runs out of steam. She needs to get over that and develop more stamina.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE Aljaz is really pushing her. I think she needs to trust him, and trust what he says. There can be no slacking off at this point in the competition.

KARIM ZEROUAL

GREATEST STRENGTHS His energy and his musicality. His sense of being able to work and lead a partnership is also great, and he's flying high in the technical department.

He's really good, and I love his dancing.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS He over-attacks and over-exaggerates his movements. We don't see that smooth, silky, oozy quality from him. He's very punchy so I'd like to see a softer side to him.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE I would say that he lacks fluidity and his dancing is over the top. Never would I think that I'd ask someone to tone things down! But he's sometimes a little bit too sharp and energetic.

SHARP ATTACK
Karim Zeroual has amazing energy – but can go over the top

SAFFRON BARKER

GREATEST STRENGTH She's one that we're seeing an improvement from, she's learning really, really fast, and she's clearly really enjoying it. You can see that in her face, and in her body, and in the partnership with AJ. To be able to do turns or spins like she does in such a clear, efficient manner isn't easy.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS Sometimes she lacks attack and extension, and even though we've seen an improvement up until this point, I'm just not sure she can get much better.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE I worry for her future. If she doesn't push that extra edge, or put in that extra little bit of effort, then she will plateau – and that's the worst thing.

ALEX SCOTT

GREATEST STRENGTH She's a former footballer so she doesn't settle for mediocrity – but she's also used to taking criticism. A lot of people might cry and whinge about it, but she is able to take it on board like a professional and use it to her advantage.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS I think it's mainly her posture and legs that are the problem. I feel like she's dancing in two halves and she needs to get both of them working together through her core. She needs to be as good as she was at the charleston in every other dance.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE She has to be really careful in the coming weeks to put as much effort, and as much confidence, as she can into both ballroom and Latin.

FAST LEARNER
Saffron Barker is achieving some highly proficient turns and spins

do their own job as well as Strictly – as Emma Barton is doing with EastEnders – meaning they have limited time to train. But not many of them are doing that this year. It means a lot more to them now to get through.

I think it's a good thing that there isn't as much talk of the "Strictly Curse", because it did detract from the show last year. It was all about that rather than the show being great family entertainment. Besides, I don't think of it as a curse –

I think of it as a blessing. There are a lot of loving relationships that have formed from the show. All I say is: if your relationship is on the rocks and you meet someone, how delightful is that?

Meanwhile, Motsi Mabuse has brought her verve to the judging panel. She's very down-to-earth and has had nine years of experience in Germany on Let's Dance, so she's no stranger to judging. She's very able – and she's not particularly guarded, which is good! I'm getting on with her really well and I like it that she tries to put me in my place! She tells it like it is, as I do. ▷

EMMA BARTON

GREATEST STRENGTH Her acting. She's fine at getting the story across, particularly in ballroom, and she's got a great partner in Anton.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS She can't just rely on her acting skills. She's got to really put the time in on the physical side and become a proper technician. It's surprising she's one of the favourites to win – I wouldn't put my money on her! I think: wait until we see a few more Latin dances as I think that's going to be her downfall.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE If she's going to get better marks then she will need to put in a lot more effort in the training room. She needs to improve her technique and to do that she will have to put in the hours. If she can't do that, then unfortunately she will be going home.

CHRIS RAMSEY

GREATEST STRENGTH His commitment, and the fact that he's not scared to go wrong or to look stupid. He will smile about it, and try to improve every week. Plus he's got a very good work ethic.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS Chris doesn't have a natural gift or ability in dance, so he has to overcome that and work ten times harder than anybody else. His technique is his weakest point, and that's something he can definitely improve with practice.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE His footwork is the main thing that lets him down. If he gets that sorted, the rest of it will follow, so that's something he really needs to work on.

MIKE BUSHELL

GREATEST STRENGTH He goes for it and his energy is magnificent, but he needs to control it. He's also strong, he doesn't care what he looks like and will commit to anything Katya gives him.

BIGGEST WEAKNESS He's not particularly musical. He looks very awkward doing all the steps and he has absolutely no hip action whatsoever.

NEEDS TO IMPROVE What he needs to do is to concentrate on the 50 per cent of things that he can't do and get those right. There is hope for him to improve. My advice to him is to master the technique behind each basic step. And if I see that, then I will be able to say that he's improving.

◁ I can still be surprised by Strictly – for example, I was surprised I didn't pick up that Anton's new teeth were real! And every year I'm astounded that the people I think at the start aren't going to be good end up exceeding my expectations. Suddenly something kicks in, and they fly. JAMES CRACKNELL

He was so wooden he was like an ironing board. There was no storytelling and he lacked musicality. He's said he'll never dance again – I think it's for the best!

ANNEKA RICE

She threw herself in and her energy was great. But I think she was nervous about what other people thought. That sometimes stopped her from dancing to her full potential.

DEV GRIFFIN

When it came to a very technical dance like the cha-cha-cha, a lot of the technique went out the door. Perhaps if he had concentrated on that more, he might have gone further.

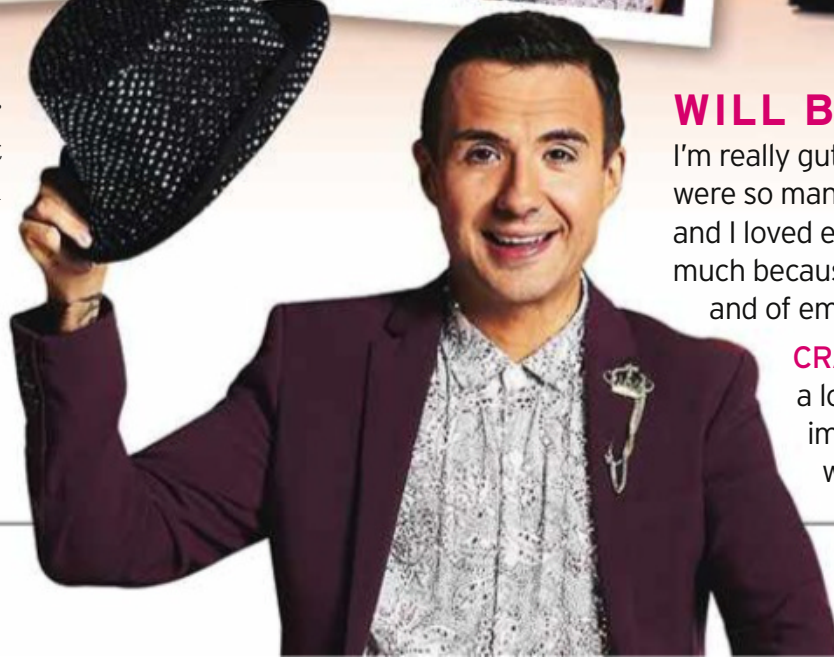

DAVID JAMES

It was so lovely seeing him come up the ranks, but David wasn't a natural. When he was up against everybody else, they were far superior. I think it was definitely his time to go.

CATHERINE TYLDESLEY

She has a great personality and could deliver the dances, but technically she wasn't very good.

WILL BAYLEY SAYS GOODBYE

I'm really gutted. I didn't want it to end like this, but there were so many positive things. It was an amazing journey and I loved every single second of it. I owe Janette so much because I came into this show so scared of dancing and of embarrassing myself – but she believed in me.

CRAIG SAYS I was really loving Will. He had a lot to contend with, but he made an incredible improvement. His contemporary dance was wonderful: full of magnificent storytelling.

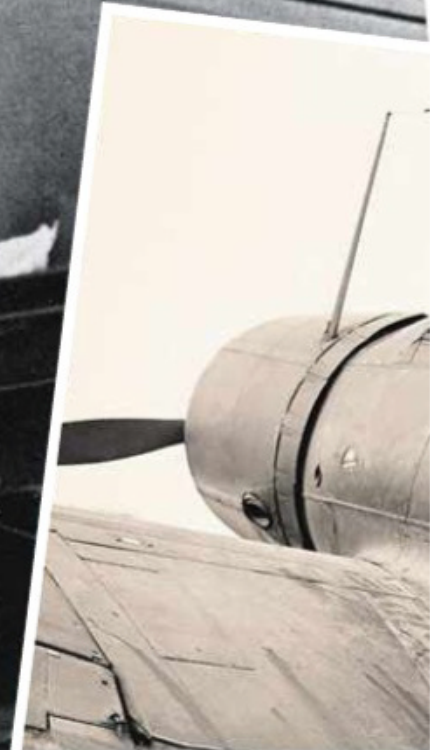

The number of people who remember the horrors of world war is diminishing, but the BBC is busy capturing their voices

Our war

"THIS COUNTRY IS AT WAR WITH GERMANY"
Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain announcing the declaration of war at the BBC in 1939

TIME TO SERVE
Conscription began on the outbreak of hostilities

IT'S A PROBLEM faced by all those trying to capture history for future generations: what do you do when those who have borne witness begin to near the end of their lives?

The challenge was all too evident for the BBC when marking the centenary of the end of the First World War last year, and has taken on an increasing urgency this year, the 80th anniversary of the start of the war that followed.

With many of those who were there now nearing, or over, 100, it became clear that there was a pressing need to capture for posterity their memories of this tumultuous period. And not just for future generations, but for youngsters today whose viewing habits aren't, perhaps, as conventional as those of their parents.

Hence WW2: I Was There – a series of 65 short films – will be launched on Remembrance Day, Monday 11 November, not on one of the BBC's TV channels, but on a dedicated BBC Documentary channel on YouTube. (The channel has previously only carried content available to overseas viewers, but has been "unlocked" to showcase this and future original content.)

"We hope it can help engage a younger audience in this most important part of our collective history," says Claire Popplewell, creative director at the BBC and the person who has overseen the project.

Running daily until 18 November and then weekly over the next 12 months, each episode shows us life during the war through a uniquely personal lens, whether it's military veterans sharing their experiences of everything from Dunkirk to D-Day, or civilian eyewitness accounts of the Blitz, blackouts and evacuations.

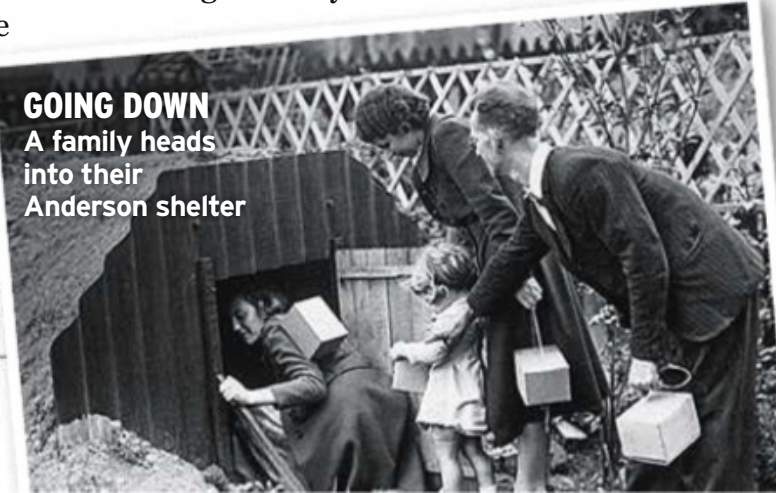

"We wanted to record the stories of anyone who was touched by the war – not just those on the front line, but those on the home front, from people affected by rationing to evacuees," says Popplewell. "It's a social history as much as a military one. So when we speak to the veterans, it's not just about how it felt to take part in D-Day, it's also about what made them sign up, what was going on in their lives at the time."

The first seven films will open with what series executive producer Sangeeta Bhaskar calls an "impact week". "We start in 1939, then some of the stories continue while some will stay in 1939," she says. "We are setting the scene for the events leading to the beginning of the war."

The very first contributor is centenarian Les Cherrington, from Shifnal, Shropshire, a conscript who had never left home before but was sent to fight in the Middle East.

"Les talks quite emotionally about the process of getting his papers and his mother crying when she said goodbye," says Bhaskar. "He had an amazing memory – he recalls his training, which at that time was still on horseback, and how he had to practise using a sword and a rifle. He also had a lovely memory for detail, like the bully-beef and dehydrated potato they were given in their ration packs.”

Eleanor Wadsworth is another remarkable character reliving her war for the project. Now 101, she is the last surviving female British Air Transport Auxiliary (ATA) pilot, after signing up while working in an architect’s office. “Eleanor ended up piloting 22 different types of aircraft, including Spitfires and Hurricanes – and as soon as the war was over never flew again,” says Bhaskar.

Former Wren Christian Lamb, meanwhile, provides colourful recollections of her nine-to-five days in the WRNS headquarters near Trafalgar Square – interspersed with going to tea dances – before nights watching dog fights in the skies above. “She also told us how one of her old schoolteachers was applying to become a senior Wren but trying to skip the training – so Christian would keep putting her application to the bottom of the pile.”

There are touching – and poignant – stories of those on the home front, among them that of a teenage factory worker who lost her leg during the Blitz in an air raid in which one of her friends was killed. “She had never spoken publicly before, so it was a very emotional experience. What we’ve found is that people really want to tell their stories – but at the same time they often don’t realise how important they are.”

THE TEAM ARE also set to film a former conscientious objector. “He refused to sign up and had to go a tribunal where he was officially given conscientious objector status,” says Bhaskar. “But he still wanted to contribute to the war effort, so he helped bombed-out civilians.”

Collecting testimony has involved research that casts the net wide, sourcing stories not just from traditional channels like military and veteran associations but also newspaper archives and word of mouth.

Both Bhaskar and Popplewell believe such intimate personal testimony can only enrich our collective understanding of this period in our nation’s history – and that of the wider world: while for now, the 65 episodes will focus on British stories, hopes that the project might extend beyond the scheduled year mean there could be opportunity to explore more international stories, too.

“Our hope is that this may become an even longer project,” says Popplewell. “In an ideal world it would run until 2025 to mark the entire duration of the war.” ISOBEL JAMES

The Candy Bomber

Armed with sweets, Gail Halvorsen became a children's hero

TWO AMERICANS WILL be in the spotlight at this year's Royal British Legion Festival of Remembrance at the Royal Albert Hall, each evoking a special memory of Berlin.

In the case of actor and pianist Jeff Goldblum (see page 20) it's the music of songwriter Irving Berlin that will resonate around the arena, a musical bookend to a special tribute marking the 75th anniversary of some of the key battles of the Second World War, including D-Day.

For 99-year-old former pilot Gail Halvorsen it's the city of Berlin that will feature in his own personal remembrance, as his efforts in providing life-saving supplies to two million people in the aftermath of the war are honoured.

Deep within Soviet-controlled East Germany, the city of Berlin remained divided after 1945; west Berlin was under Allied control with road, rail and air links from the newly formed West Germany keeping that half of the city supplied. But in 1948, in an attempt to seize control of the whole city, the Soviets blocked all land supplies and cut off power. They hoped that the Allies would simply abandon west Berlin.

Instead, the Berlin Airlift was mounted – a round-the-clock, seven-days-a-week operation that flew in basics such as flour, dried eggs, dried milk, dried potatoes and even coal. Where a few years earlier it was Allied bombs falling on the city, now some of those same air crew were delivering thousands of tons of food. Among them was First Lieutenant Halvorsen, a farmer from Salt Lake City who had trained as a fighter pilot with the RAF in 1943.

Though he piloted more than 100 mercy missions into west Berlin – often completing three return trips in a single day – he's remembered, even to this day by those in the city, for one other act of kindness: he dropped parcels of sweets to thousands of children, earning him the lifelong nickname "the Candy Bomber". Ahead of his appearance at Saturday's event, attended by the Queen, other members of the royal family, political and military leaders, Colonel Halvorsen explained to RT how it all happened.

"We'd flown into Tempelhof airport in west Berlin from our base near Frankfurt delivering flour," he says, "and as I waited for the plane to be unloaded I saw about 30 kids on the other side of the perimeter fence. I wandered over to see them and what struck me most was their gratitude for what we were doing. They understood that the provisions we were delivering represented their freedom. They said, 'If we lose our freedom now we will never get it back, so don't forget about us.'"

"They didn't ask me for anything, but I had two sticks of gum in my pocket that I broke ▷

◁ in half and passed through to them. Their reaction was incredible. They didn't fight over them, instead they just put the sticks to their noses and smelled them. I was so overwhelmed that I promised I would drop enough gum for each of them the next day as I came in to land."

But how would they recognise his plane from the dozens of others that were landing each day? "I said I would wiggle my wings as I came over the airport." And so was born another nickname – Uncle Wiggle Wings.

INITIALY, HALVORSEN PERSUADED his fellow air crew to donate their sweet rations, which he tied to handkerchief parachutes and launched from his plane as it flew over the city. Eventually, the military top brass saw both the PR and humanitarian value of what was happening and made available tons of sweets that continued to be dropped from the air during the 11-month long blockade.

The story could have ended there, but Halvorsen received hundreds of letters from grateful families. He's struck up friendships with many of them, making frequent visits back to Berlin – including a spell as commander of Tempelhof between 1970-74 – to stay with them and share in their gratitude for his simple act of kindness. On one such return visit in 1998 he

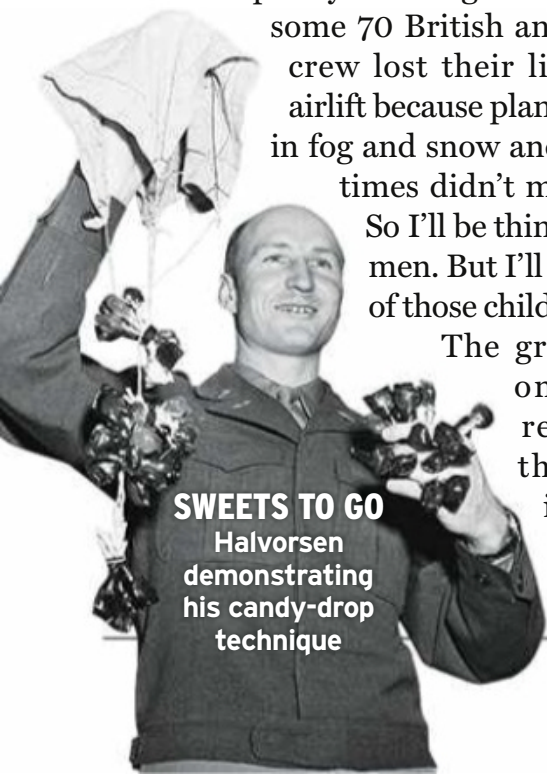

'I said I would wiggle my wings as I came over the airport' met a man who, as a child, had caught one of the chocolate bars as it drifted down on its handkerchief parachute. The man told Halvorsen: "It took me a week to eat it. I hid it day and night. But the chocolate wasn't the most important thing. The most important thing was that someone in America knew I was in trouble and someone cared. That meant hope."

So, as Halvorsen is honoured by the Festival of Remembrance audience on Saturday, what will he be thinking? Who will he be remembering?

"The airlift was extraordinary: it showed a capacity for forgiveness. Of course, some 70 British and American air crew lost their lives during the airlift because planes often took off in fog and snow and ice and sometimes didn't make it through. So I'll be thinking of all those men. But I'll also be thinking of those children at the fence. The gratitude etched on those faces revealed to me that fulfilment in life comes from service."

THE WAR Sunday from 8.00am PBS America
A marathon all-day showing of the award-winning series from Ken Burns that tells the story of the Second World War from an American viewpoint. Tom Hanks and Samuel L Jackson are among those giving voice to the stories of war, including letters from the front.

REMEMBRANCE SUNDAY: THE CENOTAPH Sunday 10.20am BBC1
David Dimbleby presents live coverage from the Cenotaph in Whitehall as the nation honours the contribution of British and Commonwealth military and civilian personnel. The Queen will watch proceedings from the balcony of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office as the Prince of Wales leads the wreath-laying. On Horse Guards, Sophie Raworth will talk to some of those taking part in the marchpast.

THE UNREMEMBERED Sunday 10.00pm C4
Throughout France and Belgium there are thousands of graves containing the bodies of soldiers who died during the First World War. But Labour MP David Lammy says no such individual memorials were allowed for black soldiers fighting for the British in Africa. He visits the sites of mass burials and asks whether it isn't time to properly recognise the sacrifice of those who fought, and fell, in Africa.

THEY SHALL NOT GROW OLD Sunday 10.10pm BBC2 (11.10pm in N Ireland)
A repeat of Peter Jackson's First World War documentary using original soldiers' testimonies matched with colourised footage. See page 35.

GARY LINEKER: MY GRANDAD'S WAR Monday 9.00pm BBC1 (10.35pm in N Ireland)
The Match of the Day presenter follows in the footsteps of his grandfather Stanley Abbs, who served with the Royal Army Medical Corps in Italy, from the landings at Salerno in 1943 to the battle of Monte Cassino in 1944. Lineker says some of what he discovered was "very upsetting" but is keen that Italian campaign veterans have their role properly acknowledged. "To go through Italy as they did, through these mountainous positions with the Germans firing at them is unimaginable. I don't want this to take anything away from the bravery that the soldiers showed on D-Day, but I want to give a little bit more respect for the people who lived and died in this battle."

Jeff Goldblum on becoming a dad at 62, why he'll work with Woody Allen again and the tragic early death of his brother

THE RT INTERVIEW BY CHRIS AYRES

MORTALITY KEEPS REVEALING itself to me in deeper and more interesting ways," sighs Jeff Goldblum, leaning in across our table at Hollywood's storied Chateau Marmont hotel. "Our time is fleeting, fragile, and could go at any moment – I got experience of that, early on. So you'd better grasp and appreciate it, and if there's anything that gives you cause for enjoyment and celebration, you should be grateful."

It's an unusually intense statement from the 67-year-old actor (he looks at least a decade younger) who's known for his improvisational wit and Quixotic career-turns, from Jurassic Park star to acting coach and, latterly, jazz pianist with the Mildred Snitzer Orchestra – he appeared with them at Glastonbury this summer and will perform the Irving Berlin classic Let's Face the Music and Dance at the Festival of Remembrance, which takes place at the Royal Albert Hall on Saturday. (Mildred Snitzer, incidentally, was a friend of the Goldblum family when the actor was a child. Her name always amused him.)

Typically, Goldblum flirts and purrs and free-associates his way through interviews at dizzying speed, his fingers tapping out the rhythm of his many digressions on whatever surface is close to hand, his big, fruity voice bending up and down like a trombone all the while. Indeed, not long after we've sat down to discuss his new album, I Shouldn't Be Telling You This – which he's been promoting on a tour of UK TV studios and breakfast show couches – I begin to wonder if it's all a ploy to fill the air between us with words while saying absolutely nothing at all.

But Goldblum, who is as tall (6ft 4in) and impeccably stylish as you'd expect – today's outfit includes a bowler hat, checkered polo and black glasses that are more frame than lens – becomes serious and sombre when we get to the usually off-limits topic of his brother, Rick, who died in 1971 while travelling in Morocco.

It was Rick, reveals Goldblum, who first turned him on to the cool, counter-cultural tones of jazz while they were growing up in late-1960s Pittsburgh. In fact, the actor – who has two other siblings, Pamela and Lee – says his musical reinvention, which took off following a 2017 appearance on The Graham Norton Show with US jazz singer Gregory Porter, can be traced back to his late brother.

"Rick was four years older and kind of a hero of mine," recalls Goldblum, whose father, a former US Army major, was chief of medicine at a Pittsburgh hospital, while his mother dabbled in radio broadcasting. "He had his own room and his own record player, he liked Stan Getz and Astrud Gilberto, and I remember him bringing home Sketches of Spain by Miles Davis. Then, when he was the first of us to get his own apartment, I went over there and smoked hash for the first time. From the start, he was a model and a teacher, and he was my best audience for trying new things on, including the piano. I mean, my parents thought I was cute and this and that, but he had a more nuanced eye."

Goldblum was 19 and living in New York – where he studied at the Neighborhood Playhouse School of the Theatre and made his Broadway debut in the rock musical Two Gentlemen of Verona – when Rick came to visit and announced he was going to travel the world. But in Morocco, he fell ill with dysentery and was unable to get medical help.

"He dehydrated, his muscles started to pour protein into his pee, and his kidneys couldn't handle it," recalls Goldblum. "It lasted one day, maybe two. Then we got a call. It was horrible." Given the expense of travel in those days, Rick's body was never returned to the US – and Goldblum says he has never visited his grave near Agadir. "It only served to make me more focused and heated," he says of the tragedy. "Because although Rick wanted to be a writer, he was never kind of as disciplined or forward-moving as I was. So it made me want to save myself and survive."

‘Rick’s death made me want to save myself and survive’

GOLDBLUM DID A lot more than survive, of course. He went on to catch the attention of several iconic film-makers at what he describes as "their high water marks". He had a line in Woody Allen's Annie Hall – he plays a party guest on the phone to his psychologist, complaining "I forgot my mantra" – and a cameo as a "psycho freak" in Robert Altman's Nashville. After that came Philip Kaufman's Invasion of the Body Snatchers, followed by arguably his breakthrough role, as a jaded People magazine journalist in The Big Chill, about baby boomers selling out as they reach their 30s. (Goldblum says that a remake featuring himself and other former cast members, now in their 60s, was in the works at one point, but petered out.)

Later, thanks to roles in David Cronenberg's The Fly and Steven Spielberg's Jurassic Park – which demonstrated Goldblum's rare ability to "make wild concepts understandable" as the ▷ ◁ screenwriter Dean Devlin once put it – he became Hollywood’s default sci-fi action star, even though he claims little interest in the genre. His commercial peak arrived in 1996, with the White House-exploding Independence Day, which took $820 million at the box office. Along the way, Goldblum married and divorced two of his co-stars: Patricia Gaul (The Big Chill) and Geena Davis (The Fly). He also got engaged, then unengaged, to yet another co-star, Laura Dern, from Jurassic Park. They remain on good terms – which is just as well, as they’re set to appear together in Jurassic World 3.

TODAY, GOLDBLUM IS married to the Canadian Olympic gymnast and contortionist Emilie Livingston – at 36, she is three decades his junior – whom he met at his gym on Sunset Boulevard in 2010. They have two children together, Charlie Ocean, four, and River Joe, two.

“I never thought that I was going to do it,” he says of his decision, in his 60s, to have children. “I had never been particularly passionate [about fatherhood] or envisioned it for myself – I don’t have any nieces or nephews, had never seen a birth before. In the couple of lovely previous marriages I had, there was some fantasy talk about it, but never any serious business. And I always thought it was a good thing that I didn’t have any drama with kids and breaking up.”

When Goldblum and his wife eventually decided to have a baby, they did so in the most Jeff Goldblum way possible. He recalls: “We thought about it for a year, talked about it with my therapist, went in together, and after a year of that, I said, ‘Yeah, this sounds kinda good, let’s get married and have kids’ – and I hope and imagine and feel that we’ll be together now [for ever]... but I mean, you never know what happens.”

Charlie Ocean, incidentally, was named after Goldblum’s uncle, Chuckie, who died in the Second World War – with Ocean a whimsical addition that “we kind of arrived at”. The Joe in River Joe’s name comes from Goldblum’s grandfather, a Jewish immigrant from Russia to the US, while River was intended as a play on Rick, in honour of the actor’s late brother.

His schooling of the boys in the arts will include his great literary love PG Wodehouse – “as soon as the kids are old enough I’ll be bothering them with that” – and already features some vintage comedy. “Tilda Swinton told me, ‘Just show them Buster Keaton and Charlie Chaplin films, because once they see modern things, they’re never going to wanna go back.’ They love Chaplin and I showed them a Laurel and Hardy which I’d never seen. It made me laugh out loud. It’s so contemporary and funny.”

If it was the appearance on Graham Norton’s BBC1 chat show two years ago that landed Goldblum with a Decca recording contract, it was his friend Woody Allen, also a jazz musician (he plays the clarinet), who was the first to suggest that he put together an ensemble and secure a weekly residency in LA – just like Allen’s weekly gig at New York’s Carlyle Hotel.

Many actors who have worked with Allen, including Michael Caine, Colin Firth and Rebecca Hall, have since said they will never again work with the Oscar-winning director following the re-emergence of an accusation that he molested Dylan Farrow, his adoptive daughter with his then-partner, actress Mia Farrow. Allen has denied any wrongdoing, and criminal charges were never brought. Nevertheless, merely admitting to enjoying Allen’s work is now beyond the pale in some circles.

Would Goldblum appear in another of his films? “Well, that’s a very publicly provocative and delicate question,” he replies, pausing to think. He resumes, carefully: “As we know, times have evolved, and even the movie Manhattan, which is about him and a 17-year-old girl, would be different now.”

But he adds that while Allen has “done things that are to some unsavoury, understandably” the case has been investigated and gone through the courts and, so far, come to nothing.

So is Goldblum saying that he would work

MULTI-TALENTED

with Allen again? He pauses once more. “I’d have to say yes. Yep. I’ve looked into some of it, and I’d look into it more, but the answer is yes.” He adds, for good measure, that he’s “deeply sympathetic” to anti-abuse causes and that “we must keep moving in the right direction of respect for and listening to women.”

The subject of Allen, meanwhile, brings into sharp focus just how free of scandal Goldblum’s own career has been – even his divorces have been remarkably amicable. How has he managed to avoid the messier fates of so many of his fellow Hollywood stars?

“Well, so far, knock on wood – good luck, I think!” he grins. “But I’m a very good boy, y’know. I was a straight-A student in school, but I needed an outlet, and I found a healthy vehicle with acting, and healthy guides who helped me explore all my mischievous instincts in a way that felt self-respecting and worthwhile.” He adds that during his several decades as an acting coach, he would say to his students, “If you remember anything, it’s that acting is a childlike endeavour, true enough, but that’s distinct from being childish.”

ALTHOUGH GOLDBLUM STILL lives in the same home that he bought in the late 1980s in the family-unfriendly Hollywood Hills, a short walk from our meeting place at Chateau Marmont – which is known for its long history of debauchery, and also happens to be where Goldblum and Emilie were married in 2014 – he lives more like a monk than a hedonist.

He’s up at five every morning to work out, then practise piano ahead of his forthcoming UK album-promotion tour – “maybe it’s a little bit of an addiction or something, but I feel unwell, or a little less ready to face the day, if I haven’t done my homework” – and he barely drinks, tries not to eat meat, and is often in bed before nine. All of which perhaps explains how a 67-year-old man is able to keep up with a wife who is three decades his junior. “It’s glorious and not really challenging yet,” he reports happily. “She’s a world-class athlete and I’m, y’know, as fit as a fiddle.”

His brother’s death, you sense, continues to keep him as focused and heated today as it did in 1971 – and yet he confesses it’s becoming a struggle to reconcile the counter-culture that so inspired him with this more uptight age. It’s a conflict he likens to the parenting of his two boys. “You don’t want to spoil their fierce wildness and beautiful savagery,” he says. “Yet at the same time, you don’t want them to kill each other or assault the girl in school.”

FAMILY MAN

GETTY; SHUTTERSTOCK

WITHIN ONE MINUTE of meeting Ben Barnes, our conversation has sailed past all the usual pleasantries into life, the universe and the secret of happiness. “It’s sort of what everything is really about, isn’t it?” says the 38-year-old star of the BBC’s new domestic noir, Gold Digger. The six-part series is about a relationship between a 60-year-old woman (played by Julia Ormond) and a much younger man (played by Barnes). “But it’s really about the human condition, isn’t it?” says Barnes. “I mean that’s what all these TV shows are about, right? I mean really about?”

It shouldn’t be surprising that there is a sensitive soul lurking within Barnes’s buff exterior. His mother Tricia is a relationship psychotherapist; his father Thomas is a psychiatrist, specialising in schizophrenia – one deals with the mind, the other with the brain, as he puts it. So as a teenager in Surrey in the 1990s, he became well-versed in concepts such as “mindfulness” and “emotional intelligence”, long before they entered mainstream conversation. He’s an avid listener of The Happiness Lab, a podcast by the Yale psychologist Dr Laurie Santor, about how to live a meaningful life. The secret being?

“The one I’m taking to heart at the moment is expectation being the mother of all misery,” he says. “Your highs are not going to be what you think they are, and they’re not going to last as long as you think they will. But the solace you can find in that is that actually the lows aren’t going to be as bad as you think they are either.”

One of his early “lows” involved an unsuccessful attempt to be the UK’s entry in the 2004 Eurovision Song Contest with his band Hyrise.

‘It took years before I made something I could feel proud of’

Thankfully, since then, while he hasn’t directly followed in his parents’ footsteps, he has at least chosen a career that allows him to explore the human psyche. It’s a very successful career, too, even if Barnes has risen almost without trace in his home country.

His first major role came in 2008, when he played Prince Caspian in The Chronicles of Narnia. He was 25, and can remember riding his horse through a castle on set, conscious of how much work had gone into the production. “I was trying to be mindful about what a big moment it was – but that’s not the same as being proud of your contribution,” he says. “It took years before I made something that I could feel personally proud of and confident in sharing.” ▷

◁ He has spent most of his time since in the US, most recently working on HBO's dystopian sci-fi series Westworld and Netflix's Marvel franchise, The Punisher, in which he plays supervillain Jigsaw. But his role in Gold Digger, written by relative newcomer Marnie Dickens, ought to win him a bigger fanbase in his home country.

The drama centres on Julia, a wealthy divorcee from Devon. In the first episode, she is treating herself to a weekend at a posh hotel in London for her 60th birthday. Her three difficult children appear to have ruined the trip for her – but things improve when Benjamin, a dashing man 25 years her junior, chats her up at the British Museum. As the relationship develops, Julia's children become suspicious. Is he sincere when he says Julia's age doesn't matter to him? Is he after the lifestyle she can provide him? And if he were – well, is that necessarily a problem? All of the questions remain tantalisingly open.

Barnes says he “wolfed down” all six episodes of the script during one plane journey, grateful to be able to see how his character developed. “I had spent five or six years working on big series where you don't see any episodes beyond the one you're working on. While that feels very clandestine and exciting, it can be... infuriating.”

He hopes that the drama will strike a chord with viewers. “As I was reading the first episode, I was thinking how unusual it was to be hearing about the full emotional and sexual life of this 60-year-old woman. But then I felt guilty for even having that thought: why should it be different? It did make me think a lot about the way we judge couples of different ages, and how an older man and a younger woman might be treated differently.”

THE CHALLENGE OF the role was to keep both elements of the character in play at all times. “So either Benjamin is totally out for himself and after her money; or he's open and free of heart and mind and he says, ‘Yeah, you're older – so what?’ She really feels seen by him. And that's all any of us really want, isn't it?”

The actors clearly had a lot of fun on set.

There's a scene in which Julia takes Benjamin shopping that echoes the famous Richard Gere and Julia Roberts spree in Pretty Woman. But they also took care to honour the reality of the age gap, particularly in the sex scenes. “People in films talk about ‘pretty crying’, but there's pretty orgasming, too. We didn't want the sex to be too glamorous. We wanted some of that awkwardness, to acknowledge that there would be giggling.”

They spent a day practising the intimate scenes, he says. “Obviously with a camera there!” he adds quickly. “But there were moments where we were shooting scenes in the shower and we wouldn't hear them say ‘cut’...”

JUST A NUMBER?

Julia (Julia Ormond) with younger lover Benjamin (Ben Barnes)

The role is something of a departure for Barnes, who is at a stage of his career where he wants to challenge himself. He admits to being a private person – he uses his Twitter and Instagram accounts almost wholly for business. He's clearly more used to answering questions about superpowers than, say, dating older women (the biggest age gap he's experienced is eight years).

However, he has recently begun to share videos of himself singing and playing piano on Instagram and I sense he's enjoyed the response. “That experience with the song contest-that-shall-not-be-named did burn me a little bit. It showed what happens if you try to do something that isn't authentically you.”

He stresses that he was only briefly in the running to be the UK's entry: “We sang the song three times and the next day I called up and said, ‘I'm embarrassed, I can't do it any more.’ It made me wary of putting music out there. But I'm warming up to it again.”

He had similar feelings about Gold Digger, which is the first programme he's made in Britain in a decade. It took him a while to readjust to his own accent. “I was worried I might not come across as British somehow, even though this was the character who sounded the most like me, dressed the most like me and looked the most like me. I had deliberately pushed myself to play different characters. But this one made me feel more exposed and vulnerable. No accent, no strange costume – and I was acting opposite Julia, who is the master of simple, beautiful, natural directness.”

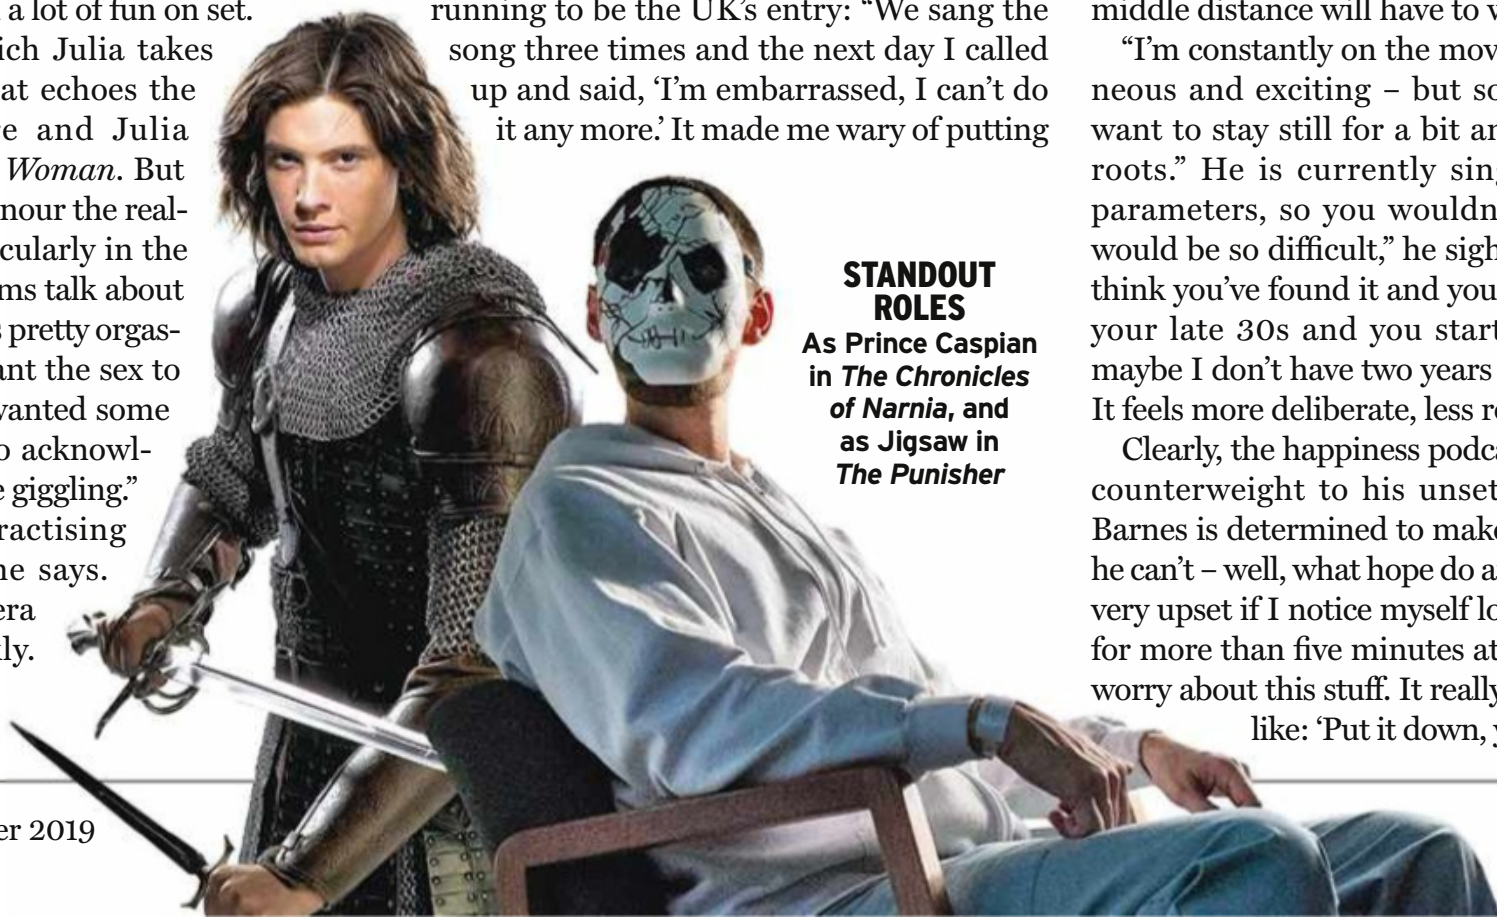

STILL, HE HAS no plans to move back to the UK – home is the Hollywood Hills. “I figured if you're going to live in LA, you might as well have a view. It encourages a different kind of conversation if you have a view. You have something to look out on when you're forming your thoughts.” However, he's used to spending most of his time on set – he's about to film Netflix fantasy series Shadow and Bone in Budapest – so gazing out into the middle distance will have to wait for now.

“I'm constantly on the move, which is spontaneous and exciting – but sometimes you just want to stay still for a bit and put down some roots.” He is currently single: “I have wide parameters, so you wouldn't have thought it would be so difficult,” he sighs. “Sometimes you think you've found it and you haven't. You get to your late 30s and you start to think, ‘Hmm, maybe I don't have two years to make this work.’ It feels more deliberate, less romantic.”

Clearly, the happiness podcasts are a necessary counterweight to his unsettled lifestyle. But Barnes is determined to make it all work. And if he can't – well, what hope do any of us have? “I get very upset if I notice myself looking at my phone for more than five minutes at a time,” he says. “I worry about this stuff. It really weighs on me. I'm like: ‘Put it down, you idiot. LIVE!’”

Karla's son Jacob was a victim of county lines drug trafficking in the Cotswolds. He was only 16 when he died

Losing Jacob

THE GARDEN ROSES might be just starting to fade, but for mum Karla they'll always pack a poignant vibrancy. "Jacob was born on Valentine's Day, so I always associate red roses with him," she says. "At his funeral, we all had roses and everybody wore something red. So I always call these Jacob's flowers."

The scene stands in stark contrast to the day six months ago when Karla found her son's lifeless body in his bedroom. An inquest has yet to rule on the cause of death, but she believes it was a cry for help that ended in tragedy. Jacob was just 16 years old, but deeply involved in so-called

"county lines" drugs trafficking – a new, pernicious trade in moving drugs around the country that's ensnaring children like Jacob. His story is just one of those told in this week's Channel 4 documentary, Britain's Child Drug Runners.

Study a map of the UK's county lines and, at first glance, it looks like a plan of national train routes. But these are actually organised crime networks that target children as young as 11 to operate as mules, delivering drugs in towns across the country. Lured initially by promises of branded clothing and money, the youngsters who have been groomed soon find it impossible to extricate themselves from the clutches of big-city gangs.

"The children who are asked to carry drugs, or undertake other tasks for the gang, can end up with debts when the money or drugs are taken from them," says Hannah Farncombe, Oxfordshire County Council's deputy director of children's social care. "They can be subject to threats or actual violence, towards themselves or loved ones, which forces them to continue working for the gang and maintains their silence. They are often terrified and unable to trust anyone who may be trying to help them."

The problem is big and growing and is drawing in children who have no previous associations with crime. "It's wrong to assume that this only happens to children who are already at hiding what was happening to him, but there were signs I didn't spot. I didn't know where he'd got some of the tracksuits he was wearing. And he always seemed to have money at the weekend. But then his behaviour became worse; he'd stay out all night or disappear for days."

Karla still doesn't know exactly how her son became embroiled in county lines drugs trafficking, but thinks that he was enticed by promises of a money-no-object lifestyle. "It's glamorised so much in music videos and kids think that it's cool. All the clothes, shoes and disposable income. It's not until they get into it that they realise it's the opposite."

As he became immersed, Jacob's attitude went from cocky to aggressive, with him regularly telling his mum that the police wouldn't be able to convict him until he was 18. But Karla believes the swagger masked a fast-growing fear that he was in too deep. "He turned into this horrible boy. He was verbally abusive and it was hell for two years. By the end, he wasn't even hiding it. One time, I saw him blatantly dealing outside the house and he just laughed it off and said, 'What are you going to do about it?'"

"I tried everything - I chased him down the street and grabbed the back of his hoodie, went knocking on the doors of dangerous people to try to find him, locked him in the house, but he'd always escape.

"He was completely blasé about it. Each time he got away with something, it gave him that little bit more confidence. But he was clearly worried about something. He'd be sleeping downstairs and there were knives hidden all around the house."

Feeling increasingly desperate, Karla told the authorities in October 2018 that Jacob would "end up killing somebody or be dead within the next 12 months". But events then escalated: Jacob's face was slashed in a stand-off, and all the while his debts were mounting. On 20 April this year, Jacob died.

Karla, who also has a daughter, Lauren, 26, is understandably pessimistic about the future, fearing that a generation of children risk becoming "lost". But is there really so little hope?

"It's very hard to drive out this problem altogether," admits Hannah Farncombe. "There's evidence that children from all different backgrounds have been targeted and it isn't just an inner-city issue. Smaller market towns are fresh territory for those from further afield to exploit. Plus, it means that the police have to start from scratch, because these are unknown areas."

AND CLASS, IT seems, is also no barrier to those who are intent on exploiting vulnerable teenagers. "Ordinary aspects of adolescence can expose children to dangerous contacts. Feelings of loneliness or loss, for instance, are push-points for groomers and exploiters," says Farncombe. "But I don't want to cause a panic. The best defence is for children to be well educated about this problem, so that they're ahead of the game. And for there to be a good network around them: parents and adults who are listening and encouraging children to develop emotional resilience."

'At his funeral we all had roses and wore something red'

For Karla, though, such lessons have come too late. "People still lay red roses outside the house," she says of what's happened in her community in the aftermath of Jacob's death. "Last weekend, there were lots of flowers there because it's six months since he passed. It's nice to know that people are still thinking about him."

"I keep in touch with his friends and try to talk some sense into them. Not that it does much good. But they know I'm available on the other end of the phone. I want to help them as much as I can. I don't want people to look at me and think, 'poor cow'. I'd much rather they were thinking, 'poor Jacob.'" DAVID BROWN involved in a gang," adds Farncombe. "There are examples of children being targeted in all kinds of locations."

IN KARLA'S CASE, that location is within the idyllic rolling hills on the edge of the rural Oxfordshire Cotswolds. She hasn't felt able to return to her own home since her son's death - until very recently it's remained a police crime scene - and has been staying with her father, from where she's speaking to RT.

Jacob was, by her own admission, no angel. "He was always a handful and strong-willed," she reveals, "but I never could have predicted that this would happen. Initially, he was good

On their last legs

Who will be the best of the best in men's tennis in 2019?

Tennis: ATP Finals

From Sun 1.50pm BBC2/2pm, 8pm Amazon Prime

IT'S THE ANNUAL Last Man Standing tournament: the final adventure in which a year's worth of bangs, niggles, aches, pains, victories, defeats, triumphs, comeuppances and, above all, sheer exhaustion come together to find the world's most enduring male tennis player, at the ATP Finals in London.

And, just as in a marathon, the knowledge that you're on the last stretch gives you strength and endurance that you didn't know you possessed, so this final challenge will at times bring the staggering, smarting best from the eight best men's players in the world.

They gather together at the O2 Arena knowing that they might just as well give everything – well, all they have left, anyway – because the end of term is almost upon them. Beyond that lie the brief holidays when there will be, at least for a while, no more balls to chase.

Last stretch. Last effort. Last detonation of power and skill before it's time to rest, take stock and start thinking about how great you're going to be next time around. No more Latin, no more French, no more sitting on the old school bench: just one final display of brilliance, in which you can burn up all that's left in the tank.

It's the most prestigious tournament of the year after the four grand slams. Those at the top settled their places in London ages ago; those lower down the list must spend the last days of the season scurrying for the final ranking points they need to make it. Even just playing here is a big deal – and not bad for the bank balance.

The eight players are divided into two groups of four, with each player playing the others in their group in a series of round-robin matches over three sets. The winner of each group then plays the runner-up of the other group in the semi-finals. The final nets more than £2 million for the undefeated champion. Nice work.

Roger Federer, who has won this event a record six times, decided to take a week off and swerve a tournament in Paris, because London matters more and, at 38, he's entitled to, if he's to make occasional forays back to his best.

But the bookies' favourite is Novak Djokovic, who is on top of the rankings again and won the event in 2008 and four times in a row from 2012 to 2015. Andy Murray, who won in 2016, is still recovering from that hip operation, but no doubt he'll be watching and wondering if he can get back to that level in 2020. And, of course, Rafael Nadal will be there: trying to pretend that he likes to play indoors.

The thing about this event is that the better a player you are, the more exhausted you are by the end of the season. Inevitably, those who go deepest into tournaments are more physically and mentally drained.

All the same, the levels of exhaustion will mean that any of the eight who make the finals could win the tournament.

The last two years have produced a mild surprise: Grigor Dimitrov in 2017 and, last year, Alexander Zverev. Both years, sports writers went into the winter break predicting the end of the dominance by the Big Three and the belated rise of the young guns: only for the old guns to reassert their dominance.

'The better a player you are, the more exhausted you are by the end of the season'

THE GREATEST
Six-time winner Roger Federer holds the record for triumphing at the end-of-season ATP Finals

BUT EARLY QUALIFIERS this year below the big three include Danil Medvedev, Dominic Thiem and Stefanos Tsitsipas: and, in a three-set format, any one of them could knock over one or more of the top players. It's a battle between ambition, exhaustion and the irresistible lure of the holidays. The bell sounds: the last lap begins.

It's all about chemistry... Andrew Collins reflects on Hollywood's quest to find the perfect double act

SOMETIMES THE STARS align. When, in 1941, Katharine Hepburn was introduced to Spencer Tracy on the lot of MGM's romantic comedy Woman of the Year, her fabled greeting was: "I fear I may be too tall for you, Mr Tracy." She was 5ft 9in in heels; he was a mere inch taller in loafers. Producer Joseph Mankiewicz, interjected, "Don't worry, Kate. He'll cut you down to size." It was the beginning of a beautiful, if not uncomplicated, friendship, on screen and off, that captivated millions through the nine films Tracy and Hepburn made together. Whether the dialogue of their first meeting really was as neatly screwball as the legend, the result was movie magic.

There was "no clap of thunder, no lightning bolt", when 19-year-old model Lauren Bacall was introduced to Humphrey Bogart by director Howard Hawks in 1943. Describing the damp-squib meeting to Vanity Fair in 2011, Bacall's main recollection was that the hangdog Casablanca star was "slighter than I imagined".

Hawks took a gamble and paired them for the Hemingway romance noir To Have and Have Not. Despite Bogart being married and almost twice Bacall's age, an affair blossomed in secret, and their smouldering on-screen chemistry sold the picture. Married in 1945, they fused overnight into one of the all-time great screen duos, making four films together, including Key Largo (Sun TCM) and The Big Sleep.

Whether Helen Mirren and Ian McKellen will join the ranks of great screen duos remains to be seen. They star in the new cat-and-mouse thriller The Good Liar, which is in cinemas from Friday 8 November. The teaming of a dame and a knight usually spells period drama, but Bill Condon's casting places them in a contemporary setting – he a conman, she a victim he falls for. It's McKellen and Condon's fourth outing, and possibly McKellen and Mirren's first of many.

To misquote George Orwell's Animal Farm in the service of Hollywood adage, "Two legs good, four legs better." The commercial potential of a pair in a visual medium is easy enough to grasp: instant symmetry, left-and-right, hot-and-cold, a partner to bounce off, the possibility of romantic union and – increasingly important in this enlightened age – diversity in action, be it male-female, black-white, small-tall, round-thin... or cop-dog. In Tracy and Hepburn's case, according to People magazine, it was "hard drinker and guilt-ridden Catholic" and "liberal Yankee blue-blood". Quite the cocktail.

When a random pair are shuffled to the top of the pack and prove a winning hand, studios see double. Which is why, in more contemporary terms, Jennifer Lawrence and Bradley Cooper have appeared in four films together, placing them close to Robert De Niro and Joe Pesci's seven, and Ben Stiller and Owen Wilson's dozen, which range from Night at the Museum: Secret of the Tomb (Sun C4) to The Cable Guy (Sun/Thu Sony Movies).

In certain cases a pair has history, such as Matt Damon and Ben Affleck, who met at high school and roomed together before co-writing and starring in Good Will Hunting (they've cameoed together since), and British duo Simon Pegg and Nick Frost, old pals who are rarely out of each other's comedies (The World's End, Sat/Fri ITV2; Shaun of the Dead and Hot Fuzz, Sat Sky Comedy).

They Shall Not Grow Old

Sunday 10.10pm BBC2 (11.10pm in N Ireland)

War's true colours

You'd be forgiven for wondering what New Zealand's greatest showman, Peter Jackson, would do for an encore after blasting himself into the most hallowed halls of movie legend with his vision of a vibrant, verdant, violent Middle-Earth in the Lord of the Rings and Hobbit trilogies.

The answer came with They Shall Not Grow Old, his first documentary as a director, shown on TV last year to mark the centenary of the cessation of Great War hostilities in 1918. Produced in conjunction with the Imperial War Museum, the film's painstaking re-creation of the prelude, horror and aftermath draws on technology nobody could have dreamed of a century ago. Silent footage is restored, colourised, converted without sensationalism to 3D and set to an apparently diegetic soundtrack of banter, forced marches and artillery, created in post-production. The staggering result is an immersive experience in the truest sense.

It's narrated in snatches using the words of unnamed soldiers (each formally credited with regiment and rank), the voices crackling with age and undimmed spirit. Early on, you get the sense of a national outing for young men: one volunteer compares the training to "a holiday camp"; lads cheerfully describe the dodgy methods by which they circumnavigated the 18-and-over requirement. Then Jackson conjures the cold, hard reality of mechanised warfare in living colour. Details such as the subtle clink of beer bottles during a singalong, or slates falling from a farm roof perfectly illustrate a little sound effect going a long way.

The testimony is humorously colloquial at first, with watered-down mess beer nicknamed "one pint and nine piddles", but noses soon fill "with fumes and death" as a dead comrade's perfectly bisected body provides "an excellent anatomy lesson".

Jackson's team of restorers has created a memorial that resonates like perhaps no other documentary. He now plans to remake The Dam Busters. Perhaps only he could.

Matthau weren't childhood buddies, so perfectly did each complement the other. Some Like It Hot writing duo Billy Wilder and IAL Diamond united Matthau with Lemmon for their 1966 comedy The Fortune Cookie, and a lifelong double act was born. The neurotic straight man and his lugubrious stooge reunited in Neil Simon's Broadway farce The Odd Couple, The Front Page, Buddy Buddy and Out to Sea, while simultaneously turning Grumpy Old Men into a brand and reprising The Odd Couple in a 1998 sequel. When Matthau died, Lemmon said, "I have lost someone I loved as a brother."

It may be that we never again see a male duo that twinkles like Paul Newman and Robert Redford. They only made two films together – four-time-Oscar-winning Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid and seven-Oscar-winning The Sting (both on Sky Five Star Movies) – but it felt like more. Redford wanted to re-team one last time, in Bill Bryson travelogue A Walk in the Woods, but Newman, in ill-health, declined.

NOT ALL DUOS prove so dynamic. For every display of instinctive symbiosis, there's Reese Witherspoon and Sofia Vergara as police desk jockey and wife of a witness in Hot Pursuit, while Arnold Schwarzenegger and Danny DeVito was a better idea on the back of a napkin than in Twins or Junior. Many casting coups lack the elusive x-factor that makes you fall in love with, say, Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan over and over again, who teamed up for Joe Versus the Volcano, Sleepless in Seattle (Fri Sky Christmas) and You've Got Mail, different characters in each but, let's be honest, always Tom and Meg.

Duos continue to appeal. Dwayne Johnson and Kevin Hart spar in Jumanji reboots Welcome to the Jungle (Sat/Sun Sky Hits) and The Next Level (out in December), and in Central Intelligence (Mon Film4). Law enforcement remains the perfect environment for buddy-buddy potential – the tradition goes back to Lethal Weapon (Mel Gibson and Danny Glover in four films), Bad Boys (Will Smith and Martin Lawrence in two, with a third due in 2020), Rush Hour (three for Jackie Chan and Chris Tucker), with two Ride Along vehicles thus far for Ice Cube and, again, Kevin Hart.

To really understand dual appeal, perhaps we should listen to Jerry Lewis. Calculating that Dean Martin's fans were "men, women, Italians", while his were "women, Jews, kids", he realised the key to capturing a huge and dedicated audience was simply in the demographics.

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Jane Eyre ★★★★★
2.40-4.15pm BBC2

PERIOD ROMANCE Mia Wasikowska, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Susannah York, Samantha Morton, Ruth Wilson... the queue of actresses to have played Charlotte Brontë's immortal heroine Jane Eyre is distinguished. But all had Joan Fontaine to beat as the self-propelled adult governess in the austere 1943 adaptation directed by Robert Stevenson for David O Selznick. Orson Welles, who plays the sternly domineering Mr Rochester, is also an uncredited producer and fills each scene with his resounding, Anglicised baritone ("Excuse my tone of command!"), while Fontaine adopts what he calls "the look of another world" – and the hairstyle of a future Princess Leia. The melodramatic Bernard Herrmann score defines noir – behold the long shadows that creep past the young orphan Jane forced to stand on a stool at her cruel charity school – and the overall effect of secrets and lies is eerily, playfully Gothic. Hitchcock fans may experience flashbacks of Fontaine in Rebecca. The film is preceded by Joan Fontaine Talking Pictures. (US 1943, BW)

FANTASY A strange light in the sky gives small-town mechanic John Travolta paranormal powers in this feel-good sci-fi fable from director Jon Turteltaub (National Treasure). As scientists probe his sudden escalation to genius, Travolta battles against an obvious script to focus all his energies on wooing single mum Kyra Sedgwick. Hidden amid the sentiment are some genuinely funny moments, but, for all its well-meaning tear-jerking, this tribute to human potential is less than phenomenal. AJ (US 1996, edited for language)

CRIME DRAMA One of the most sinister crime films ever made in Britain and, but for several cuts by the censor, it would also have been one of the most shocking. However, Graham Greene, scripting from his own novel, also drew some of the film's teeth by allowing gullible waitress Rose the faint hope that her malicious husband might love her after all – a contrivance given a glutinously spiritual slant by director John Boulting. A career-best Richard Attenborough (as Pinkie the gangster) is magnificently supported by William Hartnell and the underrated Carol Marsh as Rose. DP (UK 1947, some violence, BW)

The Huntsman: Winter's War ★★★★★ 8.00-10.10pm C4 12

FANTASY Chris Hemsworth is smooth as ever in this Snow White and the Huntsman spin-off, but that means losing some of the edge that Kristen Stewart brought to that film. Jessica Chastain and Emily Blunt must deliver it as warrior and Ice Queen, respectively, with Charlize Theron back as the evil Ravenna. Stewart's absence leaves a gaping hole in the plot and director Cedric Nicolas-Troyan needs to paper over the cracks, but he's a visual-effects master (Oscar-nominated for the first film) and again creates a cool, glittering spectacle, with mood-lightening comic turns by Rob Brydon, Nick Frost and Sheridan Smith as dwarfs. This is no classic, but an amusing twist on the tale. SP (US 2016, edited for violence, language, HD)

The Rock ★★★★★

ACTION THRILLER This hugely satisfying blockbuster deserves kudos for establishing Nicolas Cage as one of Hollywood's unlikeliest action heroes. Alcatraz has been taken over by disenchanted general Ed Harris and his marines, who are threatening to launch deadly poison-gas rockets at San Francisco. The FBI pairs chemical warfare expert Cage with jailed ex-SAS man Sean Connery, who, as the only man to have escaped from the island prison, is seen as their best option to break in. Director Michael Bay's boyish enthusiasm for outlandish stunts and carefree destruction is contagious and even the most cynical viewers will find it difficult not to feel rushes of adrenaline during the numerous set pieces. JF (US 1996, violence, sex scene edited for language, HD)

ACTION THRILLER Clint Eastwood's go-to camera operator Stephen S Campanelli makes his impressive directorial debut with this aptly titled thriller. From its attention-grabbing bank heist opening to the chase finale through Cape Town's byzantine airport, the breathless cat-and-mouse action never lets up as CIA assassin James Purefoy relentlessly tracks a glamorous jewel thief (a terrific Olga Kurylenko) who's stolen evidence implicating a corrupt senator (Morgan Freeman) in a terrorist plot. It's Bourne on a budget, but it has a strikingly mature sense of style, slick stunts, wit and suspense. AJ (SAfr/US 2015, swearing, violence, sex scenes, HD)

Why Him? ★★★

COMEDY Every father's nightmare is explored in this foul-mouthed comedy, starring Bryan Cranston as a strait-laced suit whose daughter (Zoey Deutch) falls for an eccentric tech millionaire (James Franco). A reversed Meet the Parents scenario (director John Hamburg was a writer on that film) unfolds with lots of physical gags, and a vague moral about accepting change. Cranston is perfectly deadpan and not afraid to make a fool of himself, while Franco is a charismatic, cranked-up gag machine. The film's finer moments, however, come from the support, notably Megan Mullally's wry mother. The film is awkward at times and the dialogue may offend, but like the title character, it has lots of innocent charm. JL (US 2016, swearing, sexual references, HD)

DRAMA Award-winning documentary-maker Jennifer Fox draws on her own childhood for her devastating feature debut. Laura Dern is wonderfully nuanced as Jennifer, a journalist whose life is shaken to the core when her mother (Ellen Burstyn) finds a story she penned as a teenager that obscures a shattering truth. Shockingly candid and intensely personal, the film contains no pat answers: just be prepared to be challenged. JA (US/Ger 2017, HD)

DRAMA The futility of war is explored from a female perspective in this moving British period drama based on Vera Brittain's memoir and directed by James Kent. While familiar in places, it's nicely shot with some affecting moments and a talented supporting cast, but the real reason to watch is Alicia Vikander as Brittain in an engaging, sympathetic performance elevating the worthy to the worthwhile. SC (UK/Den 2014, violence, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince ★★★★★
5.15-8.00pm ITV 12

FANTASY ADVENTURE JK Rowling's sixth Harry Potter book of seven has a lot of work to do in cinematic terms in order to deliver us fully armed to the climax, The Deathly Hallows, which runs to two films (David Yates directed the final four). Running on its own cottage-industry steam and a familiarity of personnel from cast to crew, the film left critics with little more to do than wave through the fans queuing at the gates. In the fastidiously worked-through fiction of the wizarding world, Harry and pals turn 16 and we follow him and Ron home for Christmas, then a love potion is accidentally swigged, Harry admits his love for Ginny, a kiss is snatched, then he fights Draco. Potter fans know all this off by heart and a mortality will surprise no one, but it's difficult not to get dragged back into its dark arts, again. (US/UK 2009, may be edited for violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
It's hard to imagine someone else playing Hermione, but Emma Watson considered not returning for this film to focus on her studies unique screen chemistry, and a gentle humour (that was noticeably absent from the shooting script) began to seep into the action. With director John Huston distracted by extracurricular safaris, the location work was clearly a strain – Bogie wouldn't have had to act too much to look distressed as he pulled the Queen through the leech-infested water. Yet the discord and discomfort resulted in a classic and a long overdue Academy Award for Bogart. DP (UK 1951, HD)

Night at the Museum: Secret of the Tomb ★★

FANTASY COMEDY In this uneven third instalment, Larry (Ben Stiller), night guard at New York's Natural History Museum, comes to the British Museum to refresh the ancient curse that brings exhibits to life at night. Rebel Wilson and Dan Stevens join the cast, with Robin Williams, Steve Coogan, Owen Wilson and Ricky Gervais as funny as ever and Rami Malek as Ahkmenrah acting his pharaoh dad Ben Kingsley off the screen. While the loss of the original writers shows, director Shawn Levy's film is worth watching for stellar cameos, a superb cast (including Williams and Mickey Rooney in their final film roles) and wonderful views of beloved museums. KK (US 2014, some violence, HD)

The Cable Guy ★★★
7.05-9.00pm Sony Movies 12

COMEDY Jim Carrey was afforded the opportunity to do something different in this jet-black satire on the power of television, and he responded with a performance that brings a dark edge to his wacky persona. Carrey is on top form as a manic cable-television engineer who takes a special interest in customer Matthew Broderick. Merely overfriendly at first, Carrey turns psycho-stalker and invades Broderick's life with both hilarious and sobering results. Director Ben Stiller effectively lines up his targets and Carrey effortlessly hits them, and, though it occasionally sags, it's much better than you may have heard. For Carrey, it proved a stepping stone on his way to acclaim in critical and box-office hit The Truman Show. AJ (US 1996, violence, swearing)

THRILLER This brash, misfiring thriller stars Noomi Rapace in full-on kick-ass mode as a CIA interrogator up to her armpits in espionage and intrigue in a London under threat from biological attack. But who can she trust among her superiors? John Malkovich? Michael Douglas? Toni Collette? Cue a parade of fisticuffs and gunfights papering over the cracks in a lazy script dispensing with logic. Rapace is fairly good as a distaff Jason Bourne, though why she chooses to hang out with Orlando

Bloom, fresh from the Dick Van Dyke school of cockney accents, is an even bigger puzzle than the plot. Director Michael Apted, usually a steady and reliable hand, offers little more than jaded spy-game platitudes, only occasionally enlivened by the action sequences. A pedestrian yarn that resembles a slightly above average episode of Spooks. TeS (UK 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

THRILLER Rebecca De Mornay plays the nanny from hell, wreaking havoc on the designer family life of Annabella Sciorra and Matt McCoy, in this nerve-racking psychological thriller. Director Curtis Hanson plugs into every deep-seated fear of middle-class parents, with De Mornay doing a neat turn in icy malevolence wrapped up in the guise of responsible carer. Hokum, of course, but extremely effective until the last 30 minutes, when the plot rapidly self-destructs. SH (US 1992, violence, nudity, edited for language, HD)

CRIME DRAMA After years of dodging the Hollywood blacklist, Joseph Losey was able to put his own name to this adaptation of Emlyn Williams's stage play Someone Waiting. Although the story of a father trying to save his son from the gallows is supposed to be a thriller, the social theme often swamps the suspense. Michael Redgrave is solid, however, as the alcoholic dad fighting against time, and Freddie Francis's photography enhances the sense of desperation. Muddled, perhaps, but undeniably provocative. DP (UK 1957, BW)

A Dog's Purpose ★★

FANTASY Imagine Look Who's Talking, but instead of a baby voiced by Bruce Willis, there's a pooch continually reincarnated as different breeds (and voiced by Beauty and the Beast's Josh Gad). Director Lasse Hallström cranks up the schmaltz at every opportunity, and while the canines are certainly adorable, there's little substance to the journey, the "purpose". Were it played for bigger laughs, it may have made a decent comedy, rather than a baffling existential weepie that ultimately ends up chasing its own tail. TeS (US/Ind 2017, HD)

ANIMATED FANTASY The first feature-length cartoon to be nominated for the best picture Oscar, this is one of the most ambitious films ever produced by Disney. Three and a half years in the making, it was one of the first animations to include computer-generated imagery – seen to best advantage during the ballroom and Be Our Guest sequences. The film also boasts the vocal talents of Angela Lansbury (who sings the Oscar-winning title song) as Mrs Potts, Paige O'Hara as Beauty and Robby Benson as Beast. FILM OF THE DAY

God's Own Country ★★★★★
11.10pm-1.20am Film4

DRAMA Director Francis Lee's 2017 feature debut is based on his own upbringing on a family sheep farm in Yorkshire (where the film is shot). Touching on isolation, prejudice and duty, its personal love story is built around an earthy affair between Romanian migrant Gheorghe (Alec Secareanu) who is hired to help self-medicating farmer's son Johnny (Josh O'Connor) after dad (Ian Hart) suffers a stroke. A small-scale story set against boundless fields and slate skies, its intimacy is tactile. Johnny isn't closeted – initiating hook-ups at the only pub for miles – but his father and grandmother feign ignorance. It's not a "gay" film with a capital "G", simply incredibly tender, exploring an initially awkward attraction, where, humorously, the pair subsist off Pot Noodles and beer in sleeping bags during lambing season. If you haven't seen it, prepare for a film DH Lawrence would have loved. (UK 2017, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

WAR DRAMA During the Second World War, a nervy Canadian officer (Bradford Dillman) is made a fall guy by British intelligence, who drop him in Normandy with false information, confident he'll be captured by the Germans and crack under pressure. ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

The Dark Knight ★★★★★

10.00pm-12.50am Sky1

ACTION Having gone back to basics with Batman Begins, director Christopher Nolan here takes that seriousness to the next level, recasting arch villain the Joker as a terrorist, played with jerky, sadistic unpredictability by the late Heath Ledger. He unleashes deadly dilemmas that make those in the Saw movies look avuncular in comparison, his scarred schemer setting a future template for Joaquin Phoenix. Meanwhile, Christian Bale's Batman passes his crime-fighting mantle to "white knight" District Attorney Harvey Dent (Aaron Eckhart). It's dark, full of violent menace and brilliantly handled set pieces, and the vertigo-inducing aerial shots across Gotham and Hong Kong are breathtaking. If Batman Begins was the classy hors d'oeuvre in Nolan's blockbuster trilogy, then this awesome follow-up is a main course that delivers on all levels. (US 2008, violence, HD)

COMEDY Having learned his craft under Alfred Hitchcock, Charles Frend later graduated to directing during the Second World War and shot three of the most interesting docudramas of the conflict. Made between The Big Blockade and San Demetrio, London, this engaging flag-waver was based on the true-life exploits of Melbourne Johns, who crossed the Channel to smuggle vital machine tools back to Blighty. Clifford Evans and Constance Cummings tackle the mission with suitable gravitas, while troopers Gordon Jackson and Tommy Trinder provide some welcome light relief. AJ (UK 1941, BW)

White Christmas ★★★★★ 4.35-6.55pm Film4 U

MUSICAL This partial remake of the 1942 film Holiday Inn – the Bing Crosby movie that gave the world Irving Berlin's White Christmas – provided Paramount with an opportunity to introduce its new screen process Vistavision. The story, as if you need reminding, is about a song-and-dance team who travel up to Vermont to help their former army commander save his inn from foreclosure. Danny Kaye is superb, and the direction rightly embraces the sentiment rather than keeping it at bay. We know it's November, but if you need to get in the mood for a bit of festive preparation, surely there's no better way. TS (US 1954, HD)

Just Go with It ★★ 6.40-9.00pm Sony Movies 12

ROMANTIC COMEDY A tried-and-tested pick-up line traps a randy plastic surgeon in a tangled web of deceit in this hit-and-miss Adam Sandler vehicle. Pretending to be unhappily married, Sandler's singleton uses a wedding ring as a magnet to draw sympathetic women into no-strings-attached sex. A ludicrously contrived series of events leads his assistant Jennifer Aniston to pose as his soon-to-be ex-wife on a Hawaiian holiday with his new girlfriend. Broad comic turns by Nicole Kidman and Nick Swardson only exacerbate the feeling that everyone is trying too hard for their own good. SP (US 2011, swearing, sexual references)

Collateral Damage ★★ 11.40pm-1.50am ITV4 15

THRILLER Arnold Schwarzenegger plays a vengeful firefighter hunting the Colombian terrorists who've blown up an embassy building, killing his wife and child. The film's start and finish are pure Arnie but the flabby middle section sees his one-man army protecting a woman and child, which muddles the revenge theme. ACTION THRILLER Bronx-born, Dublin-raised Saoirse Ronan went from child star in Joe Wright's Atonement to teen lead in globe-trotting espionage tale Hanna, for the same director, in just four years. As a 16-year-old assassin, trained by ex-CIA father Eric Bana, she easily carries this assuredly complex if slightly fidgety story, from Finland to Berlin via Morocco, Spain and France. The Agency wants Hanna neutralised and puts a chilly Cate Blanchett on the case; Tom Hollander enjoys playing a deliciously camp killer and Downton's Michelle Dockery is a baddie in her first big-screen role. The Chemical Brothers score adds a with-it sheen, and Ronan continues to shine in the likes of Brooklyn, Lady Bird and the upcoming Little Women. (US/UK/Ger 2011, violence, swearing)

WESTERN George Segal plays a Confederate soldier who returns from the war to find Union townspeople have seized his farm and hired a gunfighter to kill him. Written and directed by Richard Wilson, the film spends too much time in debate at the expense of action. Nevertheless, it's an engrossing effort, lifted by a knockout performance from Yul Brynner as the elegant, Creole gunfighter Jules Gaspard D'Estaing - a role he turned into an android for the sci-fi film Westworld. AT (US 1964, HD)

9.00-11.05pm ITV4 18

CRIME An Identikit collection of corrupt cops and crazed killers confronts Clint Eastwood's Harry Callahan in this third Dirty Harry outing but they're no match for the tough lawman. In a tiresome, violent tale about a kidnapping, San Francisco becomes a shooting gallery in which the characters are set up simply to be shot down. Only Harry's new partner (a spirited, pre-Cagney & Lacey Tyne Daly) has any depth, but this intriguing relationship is sadly wasted in a welter of sexist one-liners. DP (US 1976, may be edited for language, violence, nudity, HD)

Inferno ★★ 9.00-11.30pm 5STAR 12

THRILLER The hair of academic Dr Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) has become distinctly less floppy over three films based on novelist Dan Brown's stories, but the same can't be said of the franchise's dramatic tension. Inferno opens with evil genius Bertrand Zobrist (Ben Foster) taking his own life, leaving behind a deadly virus hidden in a public place and kicking off another pedestrian treasure hunt. While Hanks is always watchable, Langdon is incredibly dull and Felicity Jones is wasted as his sounding board. Director Ron Howard struggles to inject any urgency into proceedings, producing a Frankenstein's monster of a movie that's dead on its feet. SP (US 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

The 14 ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12 midnight
Talking Pictures TV 12

DRAMA Actor-turned-director David Hemmings received the Silver Bear at Berlin for this poignant tale based on the experiences of a Birmingham family. Roland Starke's screenplay relocates the action to a run-down west London, where June Brown is struggling to raise her 14 children in a Victorian terrace earmarked for demolition. When she dies suddenly, shiftless boyfriend Alun Armstrong scarpers and 17-year-old Jack Wild becomes the man of the house. This could easily have been schmaltzy or dogmatic, but Hemmings achieves a no-nonsense brand of street-level social realism. DP (UK 1973, some swearing)

We believe the new Gtech HyLite is the smallest, most compact, high performance vacuum cleaner in the world

'If you find modern vacuum cleaners bulky, heavy and over complicated then the new Gtech HyLite is for you. It's brimming with cleaning performance and, at just 1.5kg, extremely lightweight.*

'It's also versatile, simple to maintain and durable. You will never have experienced this much cleaning power in such an easy to use package.'

Nick Grey, inventor and owner of Gtech

- Lightweight at 1.5kg*
- Up to 20 minute runtime
- Recharges in just 2 hours
- Cordless

Straightforward cleaning

The secret to the HyLite's ease of use is in the design. A lot of vacuums suck dirt up through long hoses, which can block and clog. The HyLite collects dirt just 1cm from the floor, in the head of the unit, so there are no long tubes to get blocked up.

Luxuriously light

When you first experience the HyLite, it's hard to believe this incredibly lightweight product can deliver such high cleaning performance. Lifting and carrying the HyLite is virtually effortless. The handle extends at the touch of a button and instantly retracts to store away in a drawer. Cleaning your home has never been easier.

Why choose a bagged vacuum?

Bagged vacuums are highly compact and efficient because they don't have to house or power cyclones. There are no dirty filters to clean or replace – the bag is the filter, so each time you fit a new bag, you're fitting a brand new filter. Changing the bag is straightforward: lift the lid, take out the rip resistant bag and simply slide a new one into place – easy. You'll get 3 bags FREE and, after that, cheap replacement bags can be delivered to your home next working day.

There's more information about the facts and figures given in this advert at www.gtech.co.uk/hylite.html in the Performance Verification Data section.

'I am 76yrs old. I bought my Gtech Hylite because it is so light... I am absolutely delighted with it. It is so easy to extend and retract the handle and it's so light for me to use. I love the handle which for 'old' hands is so comfortable to grip. Thank you for designing such a brilliant cleaner! I put it together myself which was very easy because the instructions were brilliant. It arrived on time the very next day after ordering and was well packed. I am so happy with it and no longer dread the thought of hoovering!!!'

SCI-FI Benedict Cumberbatch is sensational as the rogue Starfleet officer in director JJ Abrams's thrill-a-minute blockbuster.

My Big Fat Greek Wedding 2 ★★★★★
10.00pm-12 midnight 5STAR 12

ROMANTIC COMEDY Fourteen years after My Big Fat Greek Wedding became the highest-grossing romantic comedy ever, writer/star Nia Vardalos revisits life on the street where Toula Portokalos's family live side-by-side. The jokes feel familiar, but Vardalos draws you back in with open arms and the same big heart, as Toula strives to put the spark back into her marriage with Ian (John Corbett) and keep their teenage daughter (Elena Kampouris) from leaving Chicago for NYU. SP (US 2016, sexual references, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Blue Note Records: Beyond the Notes ★★★★★ 9.30-11.00pm BBC4 15

DOCUMENTARY A recent boom for jazz documentaries has gifted aficionados with Chasing Trane (the story of saxophonist John Coltrane), the Oscar-nominated What Happened, Miss Simone (singer and activist Nina) and I Called Him Morgan (the foreshortened life of trumpeter Lee Morgan). It's tragic Morgan who crosses over into this exquisitely tuned-in documentary about the legendary Blue Note label, for whom he recorded 25 albums. Founded in 1939 by two childhood friends and German émigrés in New York, Alfred Lion and Francis Wolff, Blue Note flourished through a reputation for treating musicians with respect – and for designer Reid Miles's era-defining album covers, deftly animated for Swiss director Sophie Huber's testimony- and music-filled paean. Her clean, clearly captioned history is arranged around a hypnotic contemporary studio session overseen by the label's new boss, Don Was, typically a muso himself. Edited to the soundtrack's syncopated beat, it will thrill fans and recruit the casual browser. (Svi 2018, swearing, col/BW, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Before he took over Blue Note Records, Don Was worked with artists including The B-52s, Bob Dylan and The Rolling Stones

Table 19 ★★★
7.20-9.00pm Film4 12

COMEDY This lightweight affair occupies that small space between John Hughes nostalgia and My Big Fat Greek Wedding vitality. Giving yet another sparkling performance in a middling movie, Anna Kendrick plays the ex-maid of honour at her BFF's nuptials because the best man, the bride's brother, dumped her by text. Seated at table 19, the Siberia for other losers, Kendrick and a motley crew become a makeshift family as they share their desires and bond over reception adversity. Playing more like a sitcom pilot, the strong acting ensemble rise above their comic ciphers with fitful gags and one-liners. AJ (US 2017, swearing, drug abuse, sexual references, HD)

The World's End ★★★
9.00-11.15pm ITV2 15

SCI-FI Simon Pegg and Nick Frost anchor a very British alien takeover in director Edgar Wright's action comedy, as the pair are joined by three other old friends (Eddie Marsan, Paddy Considine, Martin Freeman) to complete a pub crawl started during their school days. The barmageddon scenario eventually treads familiar ground, but the surprise cameos, 1990s soundtrack and zany violence add to a self-aware, matey romp that slips down a treat. AJ (UK 2013, swearing, sexual references, HD)

From Mon Sky Store/Virgin Movies (also DVD, Blu-ray, 4K UHD and download)

FANTASY ADVENTURE Tom Holland is back in the red-and-blue lycra, and this time his friendly neighbourhood Spider-Man is spinning webs across Europe on a school trip, righting wrongs when he'd rather be romancing classmate MJ (Zendaya). Aided by newcomer Mysterio (Jake Gyllenhaal), he's called upon to neutralise threats from bizarre shape-shifting giants known as elementals.

A joke-filled script and jaw-dropping effects tick the Marvel Cinematic Universe boxes, although this solo sequel feels a little by-the-book when held up to the fresher fun of 2017's Spider-Man: Homecoming. The boyish Holland reasserts his claim to be the most satisfying actor to play the agile vanquisher of villainy, but this adventure has the feeling of a gap-year detour for a superhero who's better suited to his own back yard. Terry Staunton (US 2019, some violence, swearing, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

Diego Maradona ★★★ 12 Released 11 November on DVD, Blu-ray and download Considered one of the greatest ever football players, Diego Armando Maradona also had a career tarnished by scandal. This documentary from Oscar-winning director Asif Kapadia (Amy) celebrates Maradona's talent, but it doesn't shy away from the controversies. Focusing on his time with Napoli between 1984 and 1991, it documents the highs and the lows with archive footage and old home movies. Although Kapadia's portrait lacks variety and is too long, Maradona is a fascinating individual, even if he remains ultimately unknowable. The DVD includes a commentary and a featurette.

Why be so worthy?

Dramas that preach leave me cold, says Alison Graham

YOU KNOW HOW it goes, dramas come along and they are perfectly fine – good writers, good casts, all the pieces of the jigsaw are in place. You watch them and you think, yes, this is perfectly serviceable, there are even bits that pack a good punch.

in the war (including my dad) even had the time to weep about the wrongs of the world before they headed off on yet another mission from which they might not return? I doubt it.

Inevitably, we had to hear from a pacifist, played by Sean Bean, a man with passionate views about the wrongness of fighting. Fair enough, but there wasn't enough from anyone about the rightness of fighting, of conquering a ruthless, bitterly wicked foe that utilised death camps and euthanised children with disabilities. Oh, and which bombed British cities and killed people.

There was also a class war going on in World on Fire (you can't escape class in any BBC drama, of course). Harry was a bit of a toff, but he was brave and noble as he parachuted into enemy territory and expounded, again, his 21st-century views on race, mental health and refugees.

Harry's posh mother was brutally chilly and emotionally distant. Meanwhile, his working-

Yet you don't care about any of it. Once the drama is over, you know you will never think of it again. It left no impression on you and in your television diet it slipped down your gullet without even touching the sides.

I used to feel guilty about feeling this way, thinking maybe I'd missed something. But now I just think, nah, I didn't like it because it had glaring faults and it didn't work for me. So I won't be waving a tearful hanky at World on Fire or The Accident, which both finish this week.

I can absolutely see that I really should be much more impressed than I was by either of them, particularly World on Fire, because I'm a huge fan of its writer, Peter Bowker.

But... meh, as the young people say. Yes, the battle scenes in this Second World War drama were brilliantly done, particularly those featuring Dunkirk, which were terrifying and visceral.

Yet did the series as a whole have to be so worthy? So carefully aligned with 21st-century views and values? So preachy and didactic?

Did the hero, young posh soldier Harry (Jonah Hauer-King), have to be such a sappy sod? God, the tears. I wonder if anyone who fought class girlfriend was warm, plucky and direct. Her brother (the most objectionable character in this and possibly any drama this year) was a strutting oik, who was Brave When It Mattered. And Pacifist Dad, of course, was decent, salt of the earth, blah, blah.

I felt manipulated every step of the way, as I did with The Accident, though not nearly as skillfully. The Accident was the strangest, flattest, drama that, though dealing with high emotion – death, grief, blame, guilt – was empty.

Again, this was a class-war thing – the working class residents of a Welsh village were forced, after a catastrophic industrial accident, to take on the might of money, business and the woman who played the Danish prime minister in Borgen. This week's final episode is absurdly feel-good. I will never give it another thought.

OH NO! SPARE ME THE VOX POPS!

My head was in my hands at the announcement of the general election as I cried from the depths of my soul "Oh no! The vox pops! How can I bear it?!" Short of pitching a tent somewhere and refusing to come out until 13 December, I fear I must brace myself for John Pienaar (right) in a greatcoat ambushing shoppers clutching boxes of crackers. BBC Breakfast and Jon Kay handed people Christmas cards with GENERAL ELECTION! written inside as if it were the happiest of presents. I fear it's going to be a very long few weeks.

‘Did young posh soldier Harry have to be such a sappy sod? God, the tears.’

1 BINGE IT Britannia

NowTV/Sky Box Sets

It's refreshing to be reminded that, even in the cut-throat, multi-billion-pound world of modern TV, a major drama can still be as bonkers as Britannia. It's back for a second series of almost hallucinogenic violence and mystic campery – and once Sky Atlantic has shown the first episode on 7 November, you can watch all the rest on demand.

BRUTAL IN BRAZIL 5 Irmandade

Netflix

Netflix's Spanish- and Portuguese-language departments are keen on brutal prison dramas: here's another one, but it's a cut above most. A respectable Brazilian lawyer's difficult past bites her when she's pressured into informing on her brother (Seu Jorge), the leader of an inmate revolt inside a jail infested with corruption and staff sadism. As the heat rises in jail and bullets fly outside it, can she keep herself and her brother alive? It's not pleasant, but it's gripping.

ORDINARY, BUT FUNNY 6 The Middle

Amazon Prime

The title's a reference to the social class of the family in this US sitcom, and it's probably short for "lower middle": we follow the ordinary embarrassments and troubles of an Indiana clan with three contrasting but equally trying kids, the warm humour undercut by a lack of economic security. If that sounds dull or worthy, it isn't: it's a solidly funny comedy that's more relatable than most and ought to be better known over here.

IT WASN'T THE END, THEN

2 The End of the F*ing World

All 4

A word-of-mouth hit – on both sides of the Atlantic – when it debuted in 2017, this inky-dark comedy with a carelessly experimental edge returns, despite looking as if it might have wrapped up its story last time. It soon puts paid to that notion with another dose of imaginative, freewheeling misanthropy, led by Jessica Barden (right) as rebel teen Alyssa.

CONTINENTAL CRINGE

3 Toon

Netflix

A nicely quirky Dutch comedy about a scruffy introvert (Joep Vermolen) whose faint dreams of musical stardom suddenly come true when his sister, a failed talent manager, posts a clip of him to YouTube. His lack of social skills mean he's not equipped to navigate the music business, but he embarks on a low-key, pleasingly cringey odyssey anyway.

ANOTHER CHANCE

4 Death Comes to Pemberley

Amazon Prime

Anna Maxwell Martin and Matthew Rhys are a fine Mr and Mrs Darcy in this splendid 2013 dramatisation of PD James's Pride & Prejudice sequel, in which the couple's wedded bliss is spoiled by pesky relatives pitching them into a murder mystery: Jenna Coleman (above) and, as the caddish George Wickham, Matthew Goode offer strong supporting turns.

IT'S MY ORIGIN STORY, SIR

7 Pennyworth

Starzplay/Amazon Prime

An eccentric Batman prequel in which future butler Alfred (Jack Bannon) is a young ex-soldier trying to make his way in an alternate-reality 1950s London. Immediately he's enmeshed in a war between sinister fascist goons and the CIA, and a casting process that's determined to include as many familiar British faces in amusingly unexpected roles as possible. It's hammy and objectively not very good, but it's not dull.

SEE EVERY EPISODE 8 Great British Car Journeys

All 4

Peter Davison and Christopher Timothy's travelogues are unashamed nostalgia, as they revisit their own pasts as well as the country's. They've just completed a second short series – previous episodes are available too – of programmes where the vintage cars and gorgeous scenery are bolstered by the pair's gentle anecdotes and, beneath all the chummy whimsy, a keen eye for a social history story.

CREEPIER THAN MOST CRIME 9 Dublin Murders

iPlayer

Based on two popular Tana French novels, this crime drama looks at first glance like a lot of others: a girl is found dead, artfully arranged in the woods, sparking an investigation that disinters painful secrets for the pair of mismatched cops (Killian Scott and Sarah Greene) who are on the case. Try a couple of episodes, though, and you'll find Dublin Murders is a good deal denser, darker and creepier than your average police procedural.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

The original Frank is a very modern villain

The BBC's House of Cards is perhaps best remembered for Ian Richardson (right) as Francis Urquhart, uttering his slippery catchphrase, "You might well think that, I couldn't possibly comment". But, for me, it's the use of the word "daddy" that's most vivid. Once a simple term of endearment, it's now been tarnished for ever after featuring, first, in a scene of creepy seduction and then later in the audacious climactic showdown. I won't reveal what happens, but nearly three decades on, it's still one of TV's greatest ever shocks.

The rest of Michael Dobbs's dog-eat-dog Westminster drama also holds up well. Back when it was broadcast in late 1990, art was, in a way, mirroring life, with Mrs Thatcher's resignation having just sparked a real Tory leadership race. But Urquhart's backstairs scheming to become PM is still horribly fascinating, especially in this current political climate where democracy being manipulated and subverted is a hot topic for debate.

If anything dates House of Cards it's the newsroom scenes, with their bulky VDU monitors and microcassette Dictaphones. And at one point, the lack of an online resource becomes all too apparent when reporter Mattie Storin (Susannah Harker) seems to spend an age consulting an unwieldy gazetteer. But those key themes of immorality and corruption remain timeless, with Ian Richardson and screen wife Diane Fletcher both coolly cunning as Dobbs's version of Lord and Lady Macbeth.

This four-parter would go on to spawn two sequels (all adapted by Andrew Davies), as well as a glossy US adaptation in which chief whip Urquhart became congressman Frank Underwood. But this is a chance to see the original FU doing what he does best: plotting a path to power and, thanks to some sly asides to camera, making us feel uneasily complicit. DAVID BROWN

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Too much noise? Cancel it!

Doctor Digital's commute is so loud between certain stops, he has flashbacks to his dark past as a roughneck in the Australian outback. So he cranks up the volume on his headphones.

In doing so he's risking serious hearing damage. The NHS recommends never playing music at above 60 per cent the maximum volume, but this can be a struggle in noisy places.

Noise-cancelling headphones – which broadly work by listening to the environment around you, then playing the "opposite" sound to muffle it – allow you to hear your podcast or rock classics at much lower volumes. The NHS even recommends them.

The technology is having a renaissance, with the new Apple AirPods Pro including the feature for "only" £90 more than the standard pair (£249 vs £160). Meanwhile the Sony WF-1000XM3 (£220) bring stunning silencing tech to sleek in-ear headphones.

Many air passengers wear Bose's padded headphones – the last generation QuietComfort 25 can be found for a bargain £120, while even the lower-end Lindy BNX-60 (£75) will bring you peace and quiet.

If you don't invest, set a volume limit on your phone: Settings > Music > Volume Limit on iPhone. On Android: Settings > Sound > Volume. JONATHAN HOLMES

10 NAVY BLUES The Last Ship

Amazon Prime

A sturdy US drama in which a navy ship, on manoeuvres during a pandemic that kills 80 per cent of humanity, becomes central to the recovery. The need for every plotline to turn on military derring-do turns it into a Jack Ryan/Homeland thriller, without the nuance of the latter but with a dash of Designated Survivor as a new president fights for control. Eric Dane is the granite hero; Rhona Mitra co-stars as a suddenly important microbiologist.

THE LAST POST
A bugler presaging silent remembrance for those who gave their lives in battle

PICK OF THE DAY Royal British Legion Festival of Remembrance 9.00pm BBC1

EVENT Amid the sound and the fury of yet another tumultuous year and as we navigate the rapids of a rancorous General Election campaign, it's right that the nation stops, if only briefly, to remember those who died in the service of their country.

Tomorrow's two-minute silence at the Cenotaph is preceded by the Royal British Legion's Festival of Remembrance at the Royal Albert Hall, a cornerstone of a weekend marked by solemnity and gratitude. There is of course added poignancy this year, the 75th anniversary of D-Day.

Hollywood actor Jeff Goldblum, a surprising addition to the programme, will perform with his band, while singer/songwriter James Blunt and the magnificent Sir Willard White also take to the stage. The evening ends with the heart-wrenching flutter of thousands upon thousands of falling poppy petals as a bugler sounds the Last Post. ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Cycling: Track World Cup

2.30pm BBC1

SPORT Britain's track cyclists are already gearing up for the Tokyo Olympics as the World Cup series rolls into Glasgow. The three-day event offers a chance for nations to register Olympic qualifying points and, no doubt, for Team GB to identify those fabled "marginal gains".

The British squad is led by Jason Kenny, who'll be aiming for a seventh gold in Japan to make him Britain's outright greatest Olympian, ahead of Bradley Wiggins and Chris Hoy.

Meanwhile, the Glasgow crowd will be rooting for Scottish duo Neah Evans and Katie Archibald, who topped the podium at the Six Day London meet in October. (Live coverage on the red button from 6.25pm and 2.25pm tomorrow.) CHRIS HUGHES

Women's Football

5.15pm (kick-off 5.30pm) BBC2

England v Germany Automatic qualification to a tournament is meant to be a perk for the hosts, but in the case of England and Euro 2021, it feels like a disadvantage. Their last competitive match was the World Cup third-place play-off on 6 July; their next will be at the Euros in the summer of 2021. Though the 2020 Olympics will give many of England's stars big-tournament experience, it will be as part of a collective GB squad.

For now, there are endless friendlies, although today's match against World Cup quarter-finalists Germany should be a corker. Can the capacity Wembley crowd roar England on to victory against their old foes? HANNAH SHADDOCK

Pointless Celebrities

6.00pm BBC1

QUIZ There's a veritable library of celebrities this week because they're all writers – of children's books, thrillers, romantic novels or middle-of-the-road TV comedies. All are trying to find obscure answers to questions about Shakespearean plays, descriptions that rhyme with "kipper" and famous people in fancy dress.

There's some impressive scoring, although in the art round (and this isn't giving anything away) the flippant suggestion that Georgia O'Keeffe might have titled one of her paintings "Smelly" Flower Number One doesn't go down so well. Richard Osman is always good value but he's really on top form, firing off witty ripostes with machine-gun rapidity.

JANE RACKHAM

Strictly Come Dancing

6.50pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT We all know every step of the Strictly journey now. I'm not referring to the much-trumpeted weekly progress of the celebrities on the dance floor but what happens with metronomic regularity throughout every series. There's always uproar over judges' decisions (tick), disbelief at who's been sent home (tock), complaints over voting glitches, injuries (some particularly dramatic ones this year) and murmurings about romance and backstage spats. Tick tock, tick tock.

This week's well-worn milestone involves the B word. Blackpool is glittering away on the horizon so you can bet every celebrity will mention its importance to them at least once. JR See feature: page 10

CELEBRATING LITERATURE

Does the BBC want us to turn off our TVs? With its year-long celebration of literature, the broadcaster is hoping we'll all be cracking spines and turning pages, with tonight's Novels That Shaped Our World (9.45pm BBC2) spearheading this books-related bonanza. Other highlights include:

- David Olusoga (right) travels to the US, Uganda and his home city of Lagos to meet the writers who put African novels on the map.

- Mark Gatiss – co-writer of what appears to be a grisly new adaptation of Dracula on BBC1 – reveals the Gothic thrills that come with capturing the Count on TV.
- Helen Fielding looks back at the origins of her fictional comedy heroine, the v.v. funny Bridget Jones.
- And please pack your marmalade sandwiches and perfect those hard stares for a heart-warming profile of Paddington Bear creator Michael Bond. DAVID BROWN

Great Australian Railway Journeys

8.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 8.15pm)

DOCUMENTARY Michael Portillo checks in for his latest rail trip. "How long will it take?" he asks the assistant. "Thirty hours" is the cheery reply. It's epic, but Portillo is about to make a journey of a lifetime aboard the sumptuous Indian Pacific railway for a voyage of discovery from Adelaide to Perth that crosses the hellish, inhospitable Nullarbor Plain.

"If you left the train and were on there on your own," muses Portillo in front of a spectacular rolling view of scrubby brown nothingness, "you'd die." Naturally he makes himself useful on board, "helping" out in one of the train's three tiny galley kitchens and providing a bit of muscle at a re-watering stop. AG

Spiral

9.00pm, 10.00pm BBC4

DRAMA The grubby French cop drama has become mired in a protracted and complex money-laundering story, which is surely sapping the will of its audience. Money-laundering, like drug-dealing and anything to do with gangs, does not make for exciting telly.

There are still occasional flashes of the Spiral we love – a familiar face returns after a long absence and it's good to see Joséphine Karlsson back in her chic solicitor robes as she prepares to defend her erstwhile cell-mate, stropky blackmailer Lola. Joséphine even smuggles delectable macaron into the prison – how French! Sadly, though, detectives Laure and Gilou are unstoppable as they run headfirst into big trouble. AG

Pose

10.45pm, 11.25pm BBC2

DRAMA Pose is outrageous. When you've got Sandra Bernhard and Patti "Never underestimate a New Yorker" LuPone clamouring to be in your show, you say yes, immediately, give them fruity parts and even allow them to step out of character to sing show-stopping numbers – as both do tonight for an Aids charity cabaret. I'm not complaining. It's fabulous.

If you like early 90s dance music, you'll love tonight's first episode, as Vogue masters Damon and his ex Ricky vie to join Madonna's Blonde Ambition tour. Expect some dazzling choreography. But the night is Billy Porter's. He's superb as Pray Tell, the balls' snappy MC, who's now reacting with fear and fury to his toxic HIV medication. PATRICK MULKERN

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

New series Presumably on the assumption by the BBC that audiences will be scared to death of a series about books (oh no, reading!), there's a lot of trendy to-do with actors reciting chunks of well-known works in odd situations.

Thus, inexplicably, Russell Tovey is at the wheel of a London cab as he declaims lumps from Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, Lily Cole is on an old train as Virginia Woolf's transgender hero/heroine Orlando and a clutch of female actors wanders around a big greenhouse reading bits from Margaret Atwood's The Handmaid's Tale.

All of this gimmicky business detracts from a good, solid documentary series about the evolution of the novel, starting with works by women, with Samuel Richardson's Pamela as the jumping off point (Margaret Drabble isn't keen but Philippa Gregory adored it as a teen). There's some useful discussion, too, about the gothic novel, and the "misogyny" of George (Middlemarch) Eliot. AG

Greene on screen

Brighton Rock ★★★★★

7.25pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Novelist Graham Greene's list of screen credits is as long as Brighton Pier. With over 25 novels to his name – not to mention travel books, plays, memoirs and verse – his vivid thrillers (what he called his “entertainments”) often bore an undercurrent of Catholicism, and struck a chord with film-makers. His debut novel The Man Within was adapted in 1947 and was succeeded by Brighton Rock (review p37), one of his best-loved pictures. If you watch recent thriller Allied, you'll spy Brad Pitt reading a copy. ANDREW COLLINS

Miss Bala ★★ 9.45pm Sky Premiere

Make-up artist Gloria (Gina Rodriguez) is forced into working for the DEA and a Mexican drug gang when her friend, a beauty pageant contestant, is kidnapped. Plagued by too many action scenes, this is a vacuous interpretation of the much better 2011 Mexican film of the same name. But while Twilight director Catherine Hardwicke's remake rings hollow, it is rarely boring thanks to a great performance from Jane the Virgin star Rodriguez. JAMES LUXFORD

Braving the elements

Arctic ★★★★★ Netflix

There's no cold comfort in this minimalist survival adventure, which was recently added to the streaming service. In director Joe Penna's gruelling but gripping debut feature, Mads Mikkelsen delivers a majestic performance as a stranded pilot who braves subzero Arctic snowstorms and marauding polar bears. Brrr. JEREMY ASPINALL

MONKEY BUSINESS
What is Mrs Coulter (Ruth Wilson) plotting?

PICK OF THE DAY His Dark Materials 8.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Well, that Mrs Coulter seems nice, doesn't she? Having whisked Lyra to London, she has her to stay at her grand apartment, which is so lavishly art deco it looks like something Hercule Poirot would buy if he won the lottery.

Suddenly, Lyra is living the high life, in fancy new clothes and with a motherly Mrs Coulter (Ruth Wilson) assuring her over a bubble bath, "I think you could be extraordinary." But amid the echoing marble hallways, something isn't right. Mrs C carefully keeps the lift door locked. Lyra is effectively a prisoner.

But if there's one thing Dafne Keen gets across superbly, it's Lyra's bold restlessness, her sense of adventure. Being told to study books and be "sweet, charming, innocent and delightful" is never going to be her cup of tea, and as she chafes against her new life there's a sudden, awful outbreak of violence – shockingly staged – that tears the story apart. DAVID BUTCHER

ATP World Tour Finals

1.50pm BBC2

SPORT The world's best eight male players converge on Greenwich for the traditional encore to the tennis calendar. It sometimes feels as if time has stopped in the men's game as the ageless trio of Djokovic, Federer and Nadal continue to dominate the Grand Slams, but it's been three years since one of the three musketeers was victorious at the O2. Twelve months ago, Djokovic was defeated in straight sets in the final by Germany's Alexander Zverev.

British fans should make the most of the star-studded show while they can – the event moves from London to Turin in 2021. BBC2 has live coverage of the afternoon matches; Amazon Prime is streaming the whole event. CHRIS HUGHES Sport: page 30

Seven Worlds, One Planet

6.20pm BBC1

NATURE Have you ever seen a puma hunting? You won't have done, because nobody has caught it on film – until now. This week's chapter on South America follows a puma mother with three adolescent cubs in southern Chile. Her quarry are grazing guanaco, large relatives of the llama that are three times her weight. A scene where she tries to bring one down is heart-stopping, not least because it is such a clattering, ugly business, like a cartwheel display gone badly wrong.

As we move through the continent we take in crowd-surfing penguins, Andean bears and landscapes that look like CGI animations in a fantasy film. It's magical. DAVID BUTCHER

Britain's Biggest Warship Goes to Sea

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY For all its bristling digital technology, HMS Queen Elizabeth could end up relying on something very analogue: a sextant. The expectation is that in a future war, GPS satellites could be knocked out or jammed by an enemy. So, in a scene that could be straight out of a Patrick O'Brian novel, commanding officer Jerry Kyd gives his crew a lesson in traditional navigation – taking a sighting on the stars.

At the more cutting-edge end, a test pilot attempts something that has never been done before – a ship-borne rolling vertical landing. But when something goes awry in the engine, flights are cancelled and the ship is crippled. DAVID BUTCHER

Escape to the Château

8.00pm C4

PROPERTY In the normal course of events, the words "completing phase two of the basement project" to describe an episode of a television show wouldn't fill anyone's hearts with joy and expectation.

Yet for devotees of Escape to the Château, this is the very kind of mundane minutiae that we love. Though C4 didn't have a preview for us, it's safe to say that the plumbing-in of the "much needed utility and laundry room" in time for guests will be as gripping as Game of Thrones.

Of course, Angel Strawbridge's fine eye for decorative detail lead to her preserving the 150-year-old wallpaper, while Dick Strawbridge ponders installing a boat on the château's moat. ALISON GRAHAM

WE SHALL NOT FORGET

- The Queen will be accompanied by the Prince of Wales and other senior members of the royal family for today's national service of Remembrance at the Cenotaph.
- You can follow the ceremony live – Remembrance Sunday: the Cenotaph (10.20am BBC1) – or watch highlights later evening (6.45pm BBC2).
- David Dimbleby and Sophie Raworth will present the coverage as the prime minister, party leaders, representatives of the world's - religions, dignitaries from around the Commonwealth and military chiefs take part in the traditional wreath-laying at the foot of the Cenotaph.

- At 11 o'clock the country unites to observe a two-minute silence.
- After the formal ceremony, there follows the Royal British Legion's march past, where ten thousand veterans process past the Cenotaph to pay their respects to fallen comrades.

DRAMA Harry, stop crying, there's a war to be fought. Dry your eyes, there's a good lad. In the final episode of Peter Bowker's drama, weeping Harry (Jonah Hauer-King) prepares to be parachuted into enemy territory.

But first, an awkward farewell with his brittle mother (Lesley Manville), and we learn a little more about why she is so unbending and chilly (though it's worth remembering she's given little Jan a proper and even loving home after Harry dumped him on her).

Arena: Everything Is Connected

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY You don't come to Arena for straight-down-the-line arts docs. Focusing on George Eliot, this is a nicely oblique take on the usual great-novelist profile, but thoroughly absorbing and insightful nonetheless.

It's directed by artist Gillian Wearing, who revels in the unexpected, telling Eliot's remarkable life story in linear form but delivering visual surprises, sharing readings between actors and members of the public, or revealing views through drawn curtains.

Early on, we learn that Eliot's childhood home in Nuneaton is now a combined Beefeater and Premier Inn, and Wearing films it lovingly. A receptionist confides, "This place is definitely haunted." DAVID BUTCHER

Mafia Only Kills in Summer

11.00pm C4

COMEDY DRAMA New series Shelve your preconceptions of anything with "Mafia" in the title, because this is as far from gangster noir as you can get. It's a quirky Italian comedy-drama set in Palermo in 1979, where the lives of ten-year-old Salvatore and his family are shadowed by the Mafia in subtle – and later not-so-subtle – ways.

Salvatore's mother can't get a teaching job and the water in their apartment block doesn't work. Then his father witnesses a Mafia killing and is racked by indecision over whether to tell the police. The period setting is a treat and the sexism of the time is well captured in the way a series of men suggest the murder is "all to do with women". DAVID BUTCHER

House Share

from 10am BBC3, iPlayer

A reality series that throws six diverse young adults into a (rather nice) house in London, where they will aim to find employment if they don't have it already – with their earnings put into a shared pot for rent, food and bills. Can they flourish as a collective? The talking point about high living costs pricing young people out of certain careers is almost, if not entirely, obscured by the predictable personality clashes.

Ant and Dec embark on a journey of discovery

Ant & Dec's DNA Journey

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY You might not be aware of this TV anniversary, but it's now 30 years since the first episode of Byker Grove aired (on 8 November 1989), which means a whole generation feels that they have grown up with Anthony McPartlin and Declan Donnelly. But there are some out there who, unbeknown to them, have connections that run deeper.

This journey into the pair's bloodlines promises to be both "mind-blowing" (Ant) and "overwhelming" (Dec). ITV is clearly confident in the findings as they're being shown on two consecutive nights. The programmes were still being edited at the time of writing, but I'm told that Ant will unlock a tragic mystery surrounding his Nana Kitty, while Dec heads to America to meet some affluent cousins who own a palatial pad and a fleet of helicopters. DAVID BROWN

Ms Ronan's feeling for snow

Hanna ★★★★★ 9.00pm Sony Movies FREEVIEW
The Finnish shoot for Hanna (review p43) guaranteed fairy-tale landscapes and lots of snow. For the scenes shot in Bavaria, production shipped in 16 tons of the white stuff to complete the look. But the cast and crew had to deal with temperatures that reached 33 degrees below zero. "When the bamboo sticks hit your knuckles," said Saoirse Ronan, "you really feel it." When they weren't working, she and co-star Eric Bana were wrapped in blankets and capes. "I prefer Irish weather," said Ronan, "at least when it doesn't rain." TOM FOLLEY

The full Deckard

Blade Runner ★★★★★ 5.00pm Sky Sci-Fi/Horror
Now that Blade Runner has acquired its long-gestating sequel, Blade Runner 2049, it must be time to agree on the definitive version of the original. It has existed in seven forms, most notably the Director's Cut and the original 1982 release, to which producers added Harrison Ford's narration in order to spell things out. The fabled "workprint" shown to test audiences is on the Ultimate Edition DVD, but it's the 25th anniversary Final Cut that, ironically, comes approved by director Ridley Scott. ANDREW COLLINS

Remembrance Sunday

Battle of the Bulge ★★★★★ 5.45pm TCM
This war epic is based on the last German offensive in 1944, when thousands of tanks smashed their way through the forests of the Ardennes. Robert Ryan and Henry Fonda represent Uncle Sam, while Robert Shaw offers a riveting portrait of military genius infested with paranoia as a German colonel. ADRIAN TURNER

PICK OF THE DAY Gary Lineker: My Grandad's War 9.00pm BBC1 (N Ireland: 10.35pm)

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK In one sequence of this poignant film, Gary Lineker sits at an Italian café with William Earl, aged 104, who served in Italy during the Second World War at the same time as Gary's grandfather, Stanley. Afterwards, a visibly moved Lineker reflects, "You think you're doing all right in life, you've done a few things – and then you meet someone who has really made a difference."

It's a sobering journey of discovery for Lineker as he traces his grandfather's experiences treating casualties in the heat of battle, as the Allied forces fought through Italy in 1943 and 1944.

As well as being a tribute to the bravery of the Royal Army Medical Corps, the film gives a vivid account of the horrors of the Italian campaign, where troops fought in appalling winter conditions – only to be branded "D-Day dodgers" back at home. "What he went through was truly horrific," Lineker says of Stanley. "It's hardly surprising he never talked about it." DAVID BUTCHER

Dom Does America

9.15am BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE New series We're used to seeing Dominic Littlewood as a consumer rights champion, but in this daily series he's tackling a variety of very different roles. He's spending 24 hours learning some of the US's most dangerous and demanding jobs, such as paramedic, coastguard and US marshal.

He starts, however, by training to be a guard in Randall County Jail, Texas, where his mentor is an army veteran who has completed three tours of Iraq. "Wow, it's a tough job," Littlewood says in admiration of the men and women who work there.

But prison guard isn't his scariest role. On Wednesday he becomes a cattle rancher and faces his biggest fear... horses. JANE RACKHAM

Cash Trapped

5.00pm ITV

QUIZ Bradley Walsh is arguably one of the best (and most likeable) TV quiz show presenters at the moment. His banter with contestants on The Chase is relaxed, yet he can be super-sharp and funny, while his frequent fits of uncontrolled laughter are the stuff of legends. He's had less success, though, with this fast-paced quiz show – his own concept – which was initially criticised for the complexity of the format.

Some of those early wrinkles have been ironed out now, and essentially the idea is for players to sabotage their opponents by trapping them out of the game. It means that "nobody leaves until somebody wins". JR

Junior Bake Off

5.00pm C4

FOOD It's Biscuit Day in the tent, which for presenter Harry Hill brings back fond memories of the show-stopping creation he produced in 2018 for Stand Up to Cancer – a 3D scene showing the wonderful day he allegedly went on holiday with Camilla Parker Bowles. Today's youngsters aren't asked to replicate that (although tomorrow's batch must make biscuits representing the best day of their life).

Instead, they're making some spectacular illusion biscuits that look like their favourite foods. I'm guessing there'll be more imitation pizza and burgers than liver and cabbage – but you never know. It all helps fill the cake-shaped hole left by the end of grown-up Bake Off. JR

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ Sometimes teams can't answer their own questions, but are brilliant at winning bonuses when their opponents come up with nothing. It happens quite a lot here as the Electrophiles (lovers of 80s prog rock) and the Wickets (cricket lovers) wrestle unsuccessfully with their own clues, but jump in cleverly when their rivals are stumped.

There are some good moments, including a factette about writer Nora Ephron's autobiographical novel Heartburn, a head-shaker of a maths question ("I admire you more for not knowing," says presenter Victoria Coren Mitchell) and even an answer that isn't on her card, but which, miraculously, is correct. ALISON GRAHAM

You don't want to anger a fanbase, as I learnt to my cost recently when I wrote an article about LGBT pairings in soaps and neglected to mention Vanessa and Charity in Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV). The backlash on social media was instant: "How dare you! #Vanity is one of the only examples of a healthy, positive gay relationship!" being one of the more measured responses. Well, the Emmerdale writers might want to run for cover because Vanessa looks set to leave Charity devastated tonight.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Now, as we know, soap operas do like to torment a fan-favourite couple, if only temporarily. Robert and Aaron (#Robron) spent much more time on the rocks than in calm waters, but usually ended up reconciling. And perhaps #Vanity devotees can take solace in the words of actor Emma Atkins who, when asked about the break-up, replied: "Why fix what isn't broken?" But, in the short term at least, viewers should definitely be braced for the duo being apart. DAVID BROWN

Saving the Orangutan

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This Natural World documentary, first shown last year, is not one of those touchy-feely wildlife films: it's a tough watch. There are distressing scenes of orangutans – such handsome, relatable apes – chained up by wildlife traffickers or clinging to the very last tree in an area entirely flattened by loggers.

By way of contrast, we follow the efforts of International Animal Rescue, a Borneo charity that rescues and relocates orangutans to areas of virgin forest – a few of which remain, despite a football-field's-worth being destroyed, we are told, every 47 seconds. Vast plantations of oil palm trees are the problem, of course. But from cosmetics to foodstuffs, palm oil is everywhere. DAVID BUTCHER

Watchmen

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Like Heroes but with more wit and grit, HBO's dark fantasy unveils its grand design slowly. But the series is now branching out, and the best episode to date introduces us to a new character: mystery trillionaire Lady Trieu (Hong Chau).

Angela (a commanding Regina King) makes further inroads into her genealogy, and there are hints of a sisterly bond developing with FBI agent Laurie Blake, while Adrian Veidt (Jeremy Irons) uncovers more layers of his psychopathy.

It's playful and funny, with everyone from Dolly Parton to Irma Thomas on the soundtrack, but also startling and ideas-heavy. Watchmen's world is building impressively. MARK BRAXTON

Motherland

10.00pm BBC2

SITCOM As Motherland processes through the rituals of the primary-school year, we're gathered at sports day for an end-of-series flourish. A running gag features the forbidding Mrs Lamb making announcements through a megaphone that are impossible to decipher. "What's Goebbels saying now?" Julia wonders as she gears up for a showdown with both the stony-faced teacher and her (also often stony-faced) mother.

Kevin, meanwhile, is having to miss the whole thing to do a presentation at the soft play centre where he works. I love Kevin, and it's so beautifully typical of him that when he finally throws a strop and storms out, he can't quite stop himself washing his mug up first. DAVID BUTCHER

UNDERWHELMED

Ellie Taylor and Richard Ayoade have mixed feelings about Madrid

Travel Man: 48 Hours in Madrid

8.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY What's this... Richard Ayoade announcing that "this has been a superb experience"? There's a surprise. He and Ellie Taylor are in Madrid, where they quite enjoy the tour of Del Prada art gallery with an expert (although Ayoade reckons Dalí's The Great Masturbator is "a bit prog rock for me") and they don't mind visiting a shop specialising in violet sweets.

But, despite being "like the opening sequence to Casualty", it's a lesson in ham carving that makes them squeal with delight. Sadly, their brief introduction to pig slicing is nowhere near long enough to turn them into a maestro cortador de jamon (see page 4), so they drown their sorrows in a local vermoutheria where they're even more disappointed to find Madrileños' favourite tipple tastes like cold mulled wine – or maybe "something you might gargle with". JR

Kinky Boots ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Sharing a production credit (Harbour Pictures) and co-screenwriter (Tim Firth) with Calendar Girls, this comedy drama follows the same formula of fictionalising a true story. When Charlie Price (Joel Edgerton) inherits an ailing shoe factory, a chance meeting with Soho drag queen Lola (Chiwetel Ejiofor, prior to starring in 12 Years a Slave) prompts him to embark on a bold new business plan. While the outcome is as predictable as Charlie's romance with Sarah-Jane Potts, this is big-hearted stuff. ANDREW COLLINS

Titanic ★★★★★ 6.45pm Sky Hits

It's hard to believe Leonardo DiCaprio is 45 today. He may be fuller of frame these days but the star still retains those trademark baby-faced features, albeit with chin stubble. Sky's day of celebration charts his evolution from teen heart-throb (Romeo + Juliet, Titanic) to lead (Blood Diamond), and includes work with Scorsese (Shutter Island), Spielberg (Catch Me If You Can) and Tarantino (Django Unchained). The Revenant (for which he won his Oscar) may be missing, but for completists it's on Netflix. JEREMY ASPINALL

Surviving Christmas with the Relatives ★★ Virgin Movies

A family gathering brings comedic uproar in this seasonal offering from Fatal Attraction writer James Dearden. Julian Ovenden and Gemma Whelan are the hosts welcoming her actress sister Joely Richardson and clan, in what is ultimately a well-intentioned yet underwhelming catch-all of a movie. TREVOR JOHNSTON

WHIRLWIND ROMANCE
Things move fast for Julia (Julia Ormond) and Benjamin (Ben Barnes)

PICK OF THE DAY Gold Digger 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA New series Be still my fluttering heart, I have found a drama destined to be my New Favourite Thing. But for all the wrong reasons, because Gold Digger is so woeful, it will surely become a camp classic.

Where to begin? The script? The acting? The plot? OK, the plot, a sticky fondant fancy of middle-aged female wish-fulfilment that sees Julia Ormond as unhappy Julia, letting herself be picked up in the British Museum by a much younger man, Benjamin (Ben Barnes). She's upset because her husband ran off with her best friend and it's her 60th birthday but her family can't be bothered to turn up for her special dinner.

As they later look out across London from her expensive hotel room, Julia apologises, "It's not much of a view." But Benjamin gazes at her and murmurs, "I disagree." The dialogue is so bad you'll want to call the police.

I cannot wait for episode two. ALISON GRAHAM

MasterChef: the Professionals

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD One day, after hearing what the skills test is, a chef is going to whip off his apron and admit he or she hasn't a clue.

The six professionals taking part today don't do that, but nearly all of them have a disastrous round. By which I mean they serve raw quail and half-cooked beignets, so for maybe the first time ever the judges can't eat anything.

As ever, things perk up in the signature dish round with a sauce Robert (a previous skills test), an unusual minestrone, a take on coronation chicken and the happiest chef you've ever seen – he has a massive smile, even if things go wrong. JANE RACKHAM

Rick Stein's Secret France

9.00pm BBC2

FOOD The fact that Rick Stein likes his food is clearly a truism, but when did he become so impatient for his nosh? "What are we having for lunch?" he eagerly asks two of his hosts in the latest stage of his voyage around France, interrupting their wine chat. Hold your chevaux, Rick, all in good time. Lord knows where he puts it all. During one stop off at a fabulous rustic diner devoted to cheese, he orders eight (yes, eight) cheese-based dishes, one after the other. It's fromage heaven.

Wherever he goes, whether it's to small, family-run wineries or to tiny bars in the middle of nowhere, he's greeted with warmth and enthusiasm. And food and wine. Lucky thing. AG

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY If there's anyone you want to be stranded in the wilderness with, it's an inventor who can build robots. Jamie and family live off Panama's coast, in a concrete hut resembling something from Star Wars. Jamie's like a young Dr Emmett Brown from Back to the Future, whose inventions include a "fart machine" for producing methane and a clever underground telecoms system. He arrives to meet Ben in a home-made pedalo, wearing a hat constructed from bubble wrap.

Ben spends most of the episode looking totally baffled – and you get the impression he doesn't feel as relaxed here as he does with some of his hosts. GARY ROSE

Ant Middleton and Liam Payne: Straight Talking

9.00pm Sky 1

DOCUMENTARY You'd be forgiven for thinking that a road trip in remote Namibia involving a former Special Forces hardman and a boy-band star would be unlikely to yield much in the way of profound reflections on the world. But you'd be wrong. The pair pack a lot in, from train surfing, sleeping beside an open fire with lions nearby, to leaping off a cliff.

Their talks are revealing, too, with Payne reflecting on the perils of fame. And he's not a bad interrogator, as Middleton makes some dramatic disclosures of his own. An excellent format has been born. BEN DOWELL
Liam Payne's viewpoint: page 9

After an impressive debut shift, neurosurgeon Max McGerry (Jo Martin, right) returns as a permanent staff member in Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm). What she doesn't initially reveal is that her new role is as the hospital's CEO. It's a smart move because Max then goes on to learn who drinks wine by the bucketload, which nurse is light-fingered with the loo rolls and why everyone was so keen to cover for Ric when his behaviour was becoming increasingly erratic.

I suspect, though, that the bulk of her time will be spent dealing with Jac Naylor, whose grip on her own sanity appears to be slipping. Following the decision to give up custody of her daughter, we find Jac facing fresh anguish in her dealings with a cancer patient by the name of Sandra (former Corrie star Vicky Entwistle). Jac suggests risky surgery, but is opposed by both Kian and Elliot. When the action shifts to theatre, we see just how affected Jac is by her daughter's exit. DAVID BROWN

COMEDY If you're sitting down to enjoy a late dinner with your stand-up comedy tonight, then beware: tonight's host Sindhu Vee opens her act with a pretty lengthy riff on the perils of children vomiting, both in terms of their projectile capacity – according to Vee, her kids haven't quite worked out gravity yet – and their extreme reaction to what she sternly insists is a normal bodily process.

It's a bracing start to a very funny act that jumps around Vee's marriage, her distaste for using politics in her act and her reaction to Brexit, before stepping aside to welcome guest comics Lou Sanders and Alex Edelman to the stage.

COMEDY OF THE WEEK New series

There will be a stomach lurch of recognition here for anyone who's spent a long weekend under their in-laws' roof, getting used to family mores and peculiarities. (At this point, I should probably state that my own in-laws are lovely.) But pity poor Donna (Diane Morgan), who accompanies new boyfriend Simon (Joe Wilkinson) back to the Isle of Wight for his 40th birthday party and has to endure some frankly horrendous living-room toenail-clipping on her first night.

It's all painfully well observed (Sue Johnston is a stand-out as devoted mum Sue) and there are mentions for two mighty cultural institutions: Radio Times and Howards' Way. What's not to like? DAVID BROWN

The Hidden Story of English

10.15pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY In the 1570s, Anglo-Italian writer John Florio wrote that English was "a language that wyl do you good in England, but passe Dover, it is woorth nothing". So how did a local island tongue become a – perhaps the – global language?

A fascinating story fit for a three-part series, you'd think, but oddly, it only merits a half-hour one-off, as historian Dr John Gallagher focuses on Shakespeare and the way he blended immigrant languages – mainly French and Italian – that flowed through London into his work. Of course, Shakespeare also coined a few hundred words of his own but not, we're told firmly, the many thousands sometimes claimed. DAVID BUTCHER

WILL LOVE BLOOM?

Jonathan and Dottie hit it off

First Dates

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT The difference between young blind daters and older ones has never been more obvious than tonight. Tom, 18, awkwardly fumbles his way through the meal, clearly unnerved by the "well posh" setting and struggles to engage his date in conversation. Conversely Dottie, 71, and Jonathan, 69, seem very comfortable with each other, chatting amiably and thoughtfully about travel, hobbies and the aftermath of their partners' deaths. Their exchanges are considerably deeper than Tom's "So is a chicken a bird then?"

Across the restaurant are two sets of 20- and 30-somethings. Noisy Jessica and James Corden lookalike Liam are having a right laugh, but Keely and Ben are rather confusing. She isn't sure if she wants to see him again – mainly because she doesn't like his outfit – so she comes up with an unusual way of deciding. JR

Film4's world of fantasy

Prepare to be spellbound as Film4 today launches its annual Fantastica season. Over the next nine nights, it will celebrate the very best in sci-fi, fantasy and horror, kicking off with Jim Carrey in Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events and Taron Egerton's bombastic spy thriller Kingsman: the Secret Service. Tomorrow, there's Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children and The Mortal Instruments: City of Bones, while Thursday unleashes Star Trek into Darkness and Dawn of the Planet of the Apes. The week closes with Dredd and Dracula Untold. JOSH WINNING

Available to view until 20 November, this thoughtful but emotionally schematic drama is set in the aftermath of the banking meltdown of 2008. Andrew Garfield stars as a single father who lives with his mother (Laura Dern) in their Florida home. When she falls behind on the mortgage payments, a hard-nosed property developer (Michael Shannon) enters their lives. As moral sagas go, it's timely and sincere, but the reptilian Shannon often drags our attention away from the less interesting hero. DAMON WISE

This freewheeling romp brought together Paul Newman and Robert Redford as bickering western outlaws, and the bromance led to a reunion in The Sting and a lifelong friendship. Andrew Collins celebrates theirs and other great screen partnerships on page 34. JAMIE HEALY

JOIN THE GANG
The DIY SOS team have a new member as they set to work in Blackburn

PICK OF THE DAY DIY SOS for Children in Need 8.00pm BBC1

PROPERTY The usual mix of muscular kindness, esprit de corps, bad jokes and good intentions are the plaster holding together a DIY SOS Big Build for a homelessness charity in Lancashire. Nightsafe helps vulnerable young people in Blackburn and Darwen with help from Children in Need.

There are pressing demands on its accommodation, so a local church has offered its rundown church hall. Cue Nick Knowles and the gang, who arrive to turn a dispirited building into six self-contained flats providing temporary accommodation for young people as they are given help and support to sort out their lives.

It's a big build, as the title says, but the kind of tradespeople upon whom the show depends are at first thin on the ground and the timetable slips badly. A round of interviews for the local press sparks some brilliant results and everyone works their magic. ALISON GRAHAM

George Clarke's Old House, New Home

8.00pm C4

PROPERTY George Clarke got some Twitter flak in the last series of Old House, New Home over the budget-busting transformation of a Kentish couple's gloomy Georgian property.

Undeterred, he's tackling two more Georgian houses in this edition. One is a Peak District farmhouse with a pleasing exterior but a horrible interior: ghastly wallpaper, nasty shag pile carpets and a cramped bathroom. The other – a Yorkshire townhouse – has many glorious period features, including lofty ceilings and a grand staircase, but will a nearly 200-year-old building withstand the renovations needed to make it suitable for 21st-century living? JANE RACKHAM

The Apprentice

9.00pm BBC1

REALITY It's the advertising task, so the teams must develop a digital billboard to show at Piccadilly Circus in London and a short TV ad, all in aid of promoting tourism to Finland.

Simple enough – except that the sub-teams doing the ad and the team doing the billboard are split up with, as Jeremy Paxman would say, no conferring... Not to worry, this would-be director has a clear vision for the advert: "You know, something that says, like – ahh – I want to be there!" Right, that sort of tourism ad.

While one candidate flaunts his tattoos and another says "Bosh!" a lot in a way that suggests saying "Bosh!" settles all arguments, the people of Finland give silent thanks that it's only a game. DAVID BUTCHER

Guilt

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Solicitor Max's life is unravelling after he and his brother Jake covered up a fatal hit-and-run in a quiet Edinburgh suburb. He's in the debt of some very nasty men, including a criminal Mr Big played by Bill Paterson who arrives to spread his own very distinct menace over the proceedings.

Even Jake (Jamie Sives) has turned, and is now demanding access to his vinyl record shop's financial records, something Max (Mark Bonnar) has always taken care of for his own illegal purposes.

Neil Forsyth's blackly comic thriller takes its time, but the penultimate episode delivers some thumping surprises and a couple of "I didn't see that coming" moments. AG

Grand Designs: House of the Year

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY It must be so difficult picking a winner when the contenders are so wildly different. How do you choose between, say, the multi-layered geometry of a Sussex farmhouse and a subterranean London home squeezed into a tiny garden plot? It's like comparing chalk and cheese.

However, tonight Kevin McCloud reveals which of the glorious 20 shortlisted properties is the best, although not before we get a peek at another five homes in the running. Among them is a London house with an extraordinary copper roof and a timber-clad wedge of a building that appears to have moulded itself to the Devon countryside. JR

The Cropper family tree gets a new branch in Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) when Roy (David Neilson) meets his half-brother Richard.

The trouble is that Richard (Paul Bown) is suffering from pulmonary fibrosis and his teenage daughter Nina (Mollie Gallagher) seems less than impressed by Roy suddenly turning up on the scene. But give her time. After all, Roy does have a habit of rehabilitating all the Street's lost souls. Think Fiz, Becky, Kylie, Wayne, Shona, even

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Carla – all have benefited from Roy's paternal bond with them.

If Nina does end up losing her dad, I reckon she'll become the latest stray to find a new home at the café. And who doesn't love seeing Roy fumble with expressing his feelings as he fries eggs and serves sausages? It's always a winning formula to witness this oddball character, who'd much prefer to keep everyone at a distance, forced into having awkward interactions with the younger generation. DAVID BROWN

Britain's Lost Masterpieces

9.00pm BBC4

ARTS "I'm hearing choirs of angels..." sighs Bendor Grosvenor as he gazes lovingly at a Madonna and Child pulled from the stores of the National Museum of Wales. Grosvenor is always a tremendous guide on these canters through art history, oozing easy charm and connoisseurship. And this week he has an A-list subject, too – Sandro Botticelli, no less.

But why would a gallery keep a Botticelli in its store room? In this case, because the painting has been attributed to "a follower of Botticelli", but Bendor believes the picture, or at least parts of it, are by the master, and recruits Simon Gillespie and his cotton wool swabs to get at the truth beneath the dirt and varnish. DAVID BUTCHER

Britain's Child Drug Runners

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Karla talks frankly about her son Jacob, 16, whose story can't fail to move you. She was contacted by a friend who believed he was involved with drugs, and subsequently found a small weighing scales in his pocket. It turned out Jacob had been involved in a Banbury "county line" (a network running drugs to rural areas for organised crime) over several years.

One estimate suggests up to 50,000 British children are exploited this way. During Rebecca Coxon's film we learn more of Jacob's story, and many more like him. It's powerful reportage that paints a stark portrait of a troubling sub-culture.

Why Dad Killed Mum: My Family's Secret

from 10.35pm BBC1 (N Ireland and Wales: 11.05pm)

DOCUMENTARY When Tasnim Lowe was 16 months old her dad set fire to her Telford home, killing her teenage mum Lucy, her grandmother and aunt. After 18 years in jail for triple murder, he's eligible for release, so Tasnim is being asked how she feels about that. Unsurprisingly, she doesn't know, so in this three-parter she tries to find out why he did such a terrible thing. However, as she learns more about her parents, a newspaper investigation into child sexual abuse in Telford links her mother's death to local grooming gangs and reveals distressing details about her life.

The whole series is available on iPlayer from 10am today. JR

GETTING HITCHED

The sun's shining as Morwenna and Al prepare to tie the knot

Doc Martin

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA It's crunch time for Martin (Martin Clunes), who has to prove himself to the GMC by assisting in an operation performed by his mentor Dr Bernard Newton (a laconic Tom Conti). But I can't help but feel that the situation could have been avoided had Martin's psychiatrist aunt Ruth intervened at some point and given him some emotional literacy training. Perhaps he'd have been able to learn how not to annoy patients. But then, of course, we'd no longer have a show at all, never mind an end-of-season, make-or-break moment for Martin's career.

Amid this job-related jeopardy, we also get Morwenna and Al preparing to tie the knot, while Louisa's colleague Pippa manages to slice off her finger. It was only when she was yelling for help that I was able to place her voice: actress Buffy Davis also happens to play Jolene in The Archers.

Invitation to a Gunfighter ★★★★★

5.20pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Eagle-eyed viewers of this classic Yul Brynner western may suffer a case of déjà vu when Pat Hingle's home makes an appearance – it was also the house inhabited by Norman Bates in Psycho (1960). The abode was originally built for Alfred Hitchcock's film using pieces of old set lying around the Universal Studios backlot, and it was recycled not just for Invitation to a Gunfighter (made at Universal, review p43) but also in 1981 Chevy Chase comedy Modern Problems, when it was painted pink. The horror. JOSH WINNING

Horror on repeat

Triangle ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

Melissa George is trapped in a purgatorial Groundhog Day in this polished chiller on Channel 5's catch-up service. The former Home and Away star gives a haunting performance as a single mother who takes refuge on a deserted liner when her yachting party's vessel is overturned in a storm. However, all is not what it seems, as events play out in Twilight Zone style. Writer/director Christopher Smith effortlessly marries supernatural and slasher elements to create a consistently strange atmosphere. ALAN JONES

Last Year in Marienbad

★★★★★ MUBI

Subscriber service MUBI celebrates the career of French director Alain Resnais, beginning with the visually sumptuous and elliptical Last Year at Marienbad (1961). The more accessible Stavisky (1974) arrives tomorrow, with Private Fears in Public Spaces (2006) and his penultimate film You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet (2012) to follow later this month. JAMIE HEALY

ON THE BEAT
PCs Naomi Pearce and Mahad Abdalla strive to keep west London safe

PICK OF THE DAY The Met: Policing London 9.00pm BBC1 (not Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY The final sentient moments of 51-year-old Desmond O'Beirne are captured on CCTV; he can be seen approaching a group of men in busy Trafalgar Square before two of them chase him.

Desmond is punched to the ground by one man, then kicked hard by another, as he lies prone and unconscious. Desmond is taken to hospital in a critical condition with catastrophic brain injuries. Six months later he dies.

It's an appalling crime but, considering how many people were in the square, a tourist hot spot, it's surprising that there are no witnesses – until police launch a huge media appeal with help from Desmond's sister, Vivienne.

In the final episode of an excellent series, The Met also looks at the city's endemic knife crime, including the grooming by gangs of young children, and we follow PCs Naomi Pearce and Mahad Abdalla on patrol in west London.

Football: Euro 2020 Qualifier

7.00pm (kick-off 7.45pm) ITV

England v Montenegro The football was an afterthought in the post-match reports from England's last time out in Sofia, a game scarred by ugly scenes in the stands. Here's hoping returning to Wembley means Gareth Southgate's men can focus on the job in hand tonight.

England could lose and still secure their place at Euro 2020 come the final whistle, if the Czech Republic beat Kosovo, but the Three Lions will want another big victory to match the one they secured in Podgorica in March. There, again, England's players endured racist abuse, and responded emphatically: no doubt they'll feel they have a point to prove again tonight. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Inside the Supermarket

8.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY It's Easter, a holiday bathed in warm spring weather, ideal for happy family barbecues. Or not... It's a head-scratching time for Sainsbury's buyers, who have to decide whether families will opt for an indoor roast dinner or will prefer the joys of the outdoors. They use a huge amount of data for their predictions, including up-to-the-minute weather forecasts. The problem is, up-to-the-minute forecasts can change.

The chain must also grapple with the increasing ire of their customers over single use packaging. As Greenpeace stages a demonstration at HQ, Sainsbury's boffins must think of other ways to wrap their groceries. AG

Giri/Haji

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA Coincidences are tricky things in drama. Sometimes a plot demands it, so writers subtly work one in, but use a little sleight-of-hand script-magic to make it less glaring.

Not here. In tonight's Giri/Haji there's a coincidence in the pre-title scene you could see from space. It's a clanger, a real whopperoo. Still, we have no choice but to swallow it and move on, as the characters recover from last week's Soho shootout.

Of course, there was a shootout in Tokyo too, although the lines linking the two settings seem a little twisted these days. And in the most interesting subplot (which feels like a whole separate story) Rodney continues to broaden young Taki's horizons. DAVID BUTCHER

The Accident

9.00pm C4

DRAMA It's curious how some dramas simply come and go without leaving any impression. The Accident was heavily trailed and had a lot of pre-publicity, yet here we are at the final episode and... what? Big premise, good cast, yet it's hard to care about any of it.

There's been something lacking during the last four weeks and I wish I could put my finger on exactly what. How could the story of a tragedy with dreadful consequences, an explosion at a building site that kills and maims, feel so inconsequential?

In the final episode, there's a private prosecution against the owners and an angry court case with disabled Leona determined to give evidence. AG Alison Graham: p49

We've yet to reach the festive season, but Mel is determined to blow Sharon's big baby secret in EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1). Has she not watched the show before? That's a grenade to gift-wrap and leave under the Mitchells' tree with a "Do not open until Christmas Day" note attached. But no, because Mel (Tamzin Outhwaite, right) is currently racing against the clock to reach the airport before Sharon in order to reveal to Phil that Keanu is the father of Sharon's unborn child. Hopefully she'll get stuck in traffic until 25 December. I'm sure I wasn't alone in wondering how Hollyoaks (6.30pm C4) would be able to rehabilitate Ste, after he aligned himself with the far right. But now the penny has dropped and Ste has realised he's trapped within a group that's outwitting him at every turn, we're rooting for him to break free. Tonight, we can expect Ste to find an unlikely ally in Azim. But can he extricate himself before the extremists strike again? DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Climategate: Science of a Scandal

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY In 2009, the scientific world was rocked when the University of East Anglia's Climatic Research Unit was hacked. Thousands of emails went viral, appearing to cast doubt on its work, and giving grist to the mill of climate change deniers. Although the culprit was never found, the scientists affected, who speak in this fine documentary in frank detail, have little doubt about why it happened. One is blunt: "Climategate was a very organised misinformation campaign." But by whom?

It's followed at 10pm by Unlocking Nature's Secrets: the Serengeti Rules, the story of a group of ecologists who upended long-held ideas about why species succeed or fail. GILL CRAWFORD

Britannia

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Former Cantii prince Phelan (Julian Rhind-Tutt) is in North Britannia, living in a rather lovely little community under an assumed name, with a nice pregnant wife. It's a simple life of dancing round maypoles and selling his livestock at market. So far, there are no Romans in sight.

But Rolph, as he is now known, gets a heck of a shock one particular market day, and he does some very unwise shopping that alters the course of his life. He must fulfil his destiny! Which doesn't go down well with his wife's angry brothers.

There's possibly one too many severed heads in another barmy episode of this absorbingly bonkers slice of bloody early British history.

ALISON GRAHAM

Later... with Jools Holland

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

MUSIC Rollin' Ronnie Wood makes his Later debut with his Wild Five band, featuring guest vocals from Irish singer Imelda May. They're likely to play their version of Chuck Berry's Rock and Roll Music, a standard that's already been covered by every band and their dog over the past half a century. Will this stop Jools from tinkling along? Seems highly unlikely.

Lewis Capaldi and Foals also guest, but tonight's most interesting acts are Nilufer Yanya and Sudan Archives, the latter being the pseudonym of vocalist, violinist and loop-pedal pusher, Brittney Denise Parks. She fuses African-inspired melodies with hip-hop rhythms – and throws some mean shapes, too. GARY ROSE

OTTERLY ADORABLE

Short-clawed otters
Annie and Wallace

The Secret Life of the Zoo

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Annie and Wallace, parents to 13 Asian short-clawed otter pups, have a cushy life because their eldest daughter, Betsy, does everything for her siblings. She finds them food, teaches them to swim and generally looks out for them. All Mum and Dad have to do is lounge about nibbling fish and occasionally plopping into the pool for a refreshing dip. It must be like having an unpaid live-in nanny.

Many animals are stronger in groups, that's often how they thrive and survive. Flamingoes, for example, are easily spooked so being part of a massive flock gives more protection from predators.

Meanwhile, over in the elephant paddock, little Anjan – who you may remember from the previous series was a cheeky little chappie – has turned into a right thug and is annoying the rest of the herd.

A pregnant pause

Second Coming ★★★★★ A114 FREE TO VIEW

This home-grown drama charts the tensions in a suburban household, where a wife and mother (Nadine Marshall) is keeping her pregnancy secret, because sexual relations have long since cooled with husband Idris Elba. But who is the father? Playwright Debbie Tucker Green's first feature eschews a Christian interpretation of these events, and while Marshall's protagonist is less appealing than Elba's loving yet tormented hubby, overall this is a British film of rare ambition and imagination. TREVOR JOHNSON

Good as gold

The Treasure of the Sierra Madre ★★★★★

6.25pm TCM

Humphrey Bogart (see p34) turns in a memorable performance here as a drifter who, along with Tim Holt's young idealist, latches onto gnarled prospector Walter Huston in a search for gold in Mexico. Pitched as an updated biblical fable about greed and human despair, the movie has a superb opening, some portentous passages and a thunderous score by Max Steiner. Much imitated, it proved a historic success for writer/director John Huston. ADRIAN TURNER

Spoof positive

from 4.25pm Sky Comedy

A triple-bill of oh-so-British spy-jinks as Rowan Atkinson stars as the inept MI7 agent. He variously bumbles through a plot to steal the Crown Jewels, rescue the Chinese Premier, and short circuit cyber hackers, all of which, naturally, plays second fiddle to the enthusiastic Carry On-style slapstick. 007 who? JOSH WINNING

Television Friday

TONIGHT'S HOSTS Marvin and Rochelle Humes, Mel Giedroyc, Tom Allen, Graham Norton, Ade Adepitan and Tess Daly

PICK OF THE DAY Children in Need from 7.30pm BBC1

CHARITY Pudsey ears at the ready! Graham Norton, Mel Giedroyc, Ade Adepitan, Tess Daly, Tom Allen and Marvin and Rochelle Humes host tonight's live extravaganza of entertainment and fundraising. Opening the show will be a performance from Big the Musical, featuring Strictly 2015 winner Jay McGuiness, while staying on the theme, this year's Children in Need Strictly special will see EastEnders' stars Rudolph Walker, Ricky Champ, Louisa Lytton and Maisie Smith compete to lift the Pudsey Glitterball trophy.

Also on the bill are Doctor Who and Star Wars specials, a return for Crackerjack along with – perhaps ominously – the Countryfile presenters “as you’ve never seen them before”. Meanwhile, Graham Norton’s Red Chair is taken over by a host of young carers who have the power to flip the celebrities whose jokes fail to amuse; footballers Harry Kane, Marcus Rashford and Raheem Sterling surprise children from the England Amputee Football Association; and there’s a pop-star special of quiz show The Hit List starring the likes of Girls Aloud’s Nadine Coyle and Blue’s Antony Costa.

Music performances on the night come courtesy of smoothies Michael Ball and Alfie Boe, Westlife, and former One Direction star Louis Tomlinson.

Elsewhere, there’s a special of Bargain Hunt (12.15pm BBC1) featuring Debbie McGee, Joe Pasquale and Sooty and Sweep, while there’s a Dragons’ Den special of I’ll Get This (10pm BBC2) – the game show where someone has to pick up the bill in a restaurant – along with another chance to see Children in Need: Got It Covered at 12.30am on BBC1. FRANCES TAYLOR

Michelle has been uncharacteristically gullible throughout the saga of Robert's double life in Coronation Street (7.30, 8.30pm ITV). Why has she taken all that her other half says at face value? She knows he's weak-willed, what with his prior addiction to gambling and steroids. Plus Michelle spent years living with Steve McDonald, a man whose lies she regularly rumbled just by giving him a death stare. So why the sudden naivety?

Thankfully, the scales now seem to have fallen from her eyes and she's finally confronting Robert about his pregnant girlfriend Vicky. Though, having seemingly mislaid a few IQ points these last couple of months, Michelle will probably end up being convinced by a story about Vicky just having a cushion stuffed up her jumper.

Elsewhere, Peter tracks Daniel down and implores him to come home. With his run of bad luck since arriving in Weatherfield, surely poor Daniel should be holding on tight to baby Bertie and running for the hills? DAVID BROWN

Trust Morecambe and Wise

8.00pm Gold

COMEDY Lenny Henry convenes another misty-eyed look back at clips in front of an appreciative studio audience. Helping him revel in the old routines are Michael Grade and John Thomson, as well as Eric's son Gary, who recalls how much his father used to enjoy watching his own shows on TV. "He couldn't stop laughing. He was a huge Morecambe and Wise fan."

Not all the clips have aged equally well, but in a show themed around work and money one of the best involves the pair recalling a tour where Ernie had booked the accommodation. Eric remembers a landlady in Bradford who was particularly mean: "First time I've ever seen anybody deal Cornflakes." DAVID BUTCHER

The Name of the Rose

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA It's quite daft that the two young women have crossed paths in the forest, especially as noble huntress Anna was slashed in the midriff a great distance from the abbey. A valiant effort, though, by the adaptors to increase female roles in this drama. If you know Umberto Eco's book, you'll know Anna wasn't in it. The unnamed peasant did feature, and tonight novice monk Adso finally engages in "carnal relations" with her.

This enlivens a ponderous episode, as the conference debates whether the Church should shed its wealth – and the holy men come to blows. Hovering over all like a raven spying for worms is Inquisitor Bernard Gui (Rupert Everett in deliciously menacing mode). PATRICK MULKERN

The Team

9.00pm More4

DRAMA We now know the nub of the plot in this multinational Euro-thriller is the Garden of Ishtar, a four-part golden frieze dating from 2,000 BC that has great symbolic significance for Syrians. Malu and her boyfriend were hoping to smuggle the tablets to Belgium – until the massacre on the marsh farm that set the series rolling in bloody fashion. I keep hoping the stolen antiquities storyline will take flight, but for now we're more preoccupied with the progress of the cops investigating the murders, and their muted attempts at flirting.

Meanwhile, the British museum curator (Mark Heap) smuggles Malu's mother into Belgium in the back of his car – but what exactly is their relationship? DAVID BUTCHER

This grand alternate-universe drama, which started in a version of 1962 where the allies lost the war, releases its fourth and concluding series. It's worlds away now from the Philip K Dick novel – literally, in that the action takes place across more than one parallel reality. Expect, however, plenty of old-fashioned battles and momentous final decisions.

Will Ruby and Emmerson get the green light?

Flirty Dancing

8.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT Ashley Banjo takes a terrible risk with his choreography this time, incorporating a lift and a drop that require total trust between two people who've never met before. Still, as Ruby wants a Prince Charming crossed with Action Man and Emmerson is a soldier who's a romantic at heart, they seem perfectly matched before they even take a step. To enhance the rom-com mood, they're dancing in an old-fashioned railway station, but none of that will help if he drops her on her head.

Ashley gives Garry and Ryan some equally clever choreography: "For two minutes it felt like we really knew each other," says Ryan, but does Garry agree?

The only thing that's disappointing is when, having had such an extraordinary experience, someone isn't sufficiently intrigued by their dance partner to have a second date. JANE RACKHAM

Earthquake Bird ★★★ Netflix

A young woman (Riley Keough) is missing in Tokyo. What happened to her? The prime suspect is her friend (Alicia Vikander), a translator whose boyfriend (Naoki Kobayashi) may have had a tryst with the missing woman. Vikander is the focus of this slow-burn mystery thriller, which is set in 1989 and, while the story is a little confusing in places, it has a woozy, hypnotic quality that occasionally draws you in. The resulting story is atmospheric and intriguing, and should keep you guessing until the end. STEPHEN CARTY

A real gut-buster

Little Monsters ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

Firmly in the tradition of Shaun of the Dead but with a dash of School of Rock, this joyous horror comedy bursts with gags and gore. Our "hero" is Dave (Alexander England), who falls for ukulele-playing teacher Miss Caroline (a delightful Lupita Nyong'o) amid a zombie outbreak. There's plenty of tension and carnage – meek Miss Caroline transforming into a shovel-wielding dervish – but director Abe Forsythe's third feature is essentially a hilarious, rollercoaster ride with a sweet centre. JEREMY ASPINALL

Queen of food

Sheila Dillon is celebrating 40 years of The Food Programme, culinary campaigns – and pleasure...

INTERVIEW BY SIMON O'HAGAN

The Food Programme

Sunday 12.30pm Radio 4

THERE'S A STORY Sheila Dillon likes to tell about the birth of The Food Programme, the Radio 4 institution that she's been an integral part of for more than three decades and which is about to celebrate its 40th anniversary.

The story concerns the late Derek Cooper, her predecessor as presenter, and the man who, in 1979, launched the programme into a very different food world from today's.

"Derek loved good food," Dillon recalls. "He was first and foremost about the pleasure food can bring. And he believed that everybody has a right to it – that it shouldn't be a case of rubbish for the poor and the good stuff for the better-off. He persuaded Radio 4 to make a series of six programmes, and the story is that he then went to the commissioning editor and asked if he could make some more, and the answer came back, 'Really? Is there anything more to say about food after six weeks?'"

The fact that some 2,000 editions of The Food Programme have aired since then – with two 40th-anniversary celebration specials coming up – provides an emphatic answer to that question. And the programme is about so much more than food. As its editor, Dimitri Houtart, says, "it's a lens through which we can look at society".

"It's amazing," Dillon says of the programme's longevity when I sit down with her at her home in Highbury in north London, a box of organic veg having been delivered to her front door that morning. "Amazing and remarkable, especially considering how Derek struggled to get it made." And while the spirit of Cooper, who died in 2014, will always preside over The Food

Programme's top table, the role that Dillon has played in its history is no less glittering.

Since her first involvement in the programme, in 1987, she's travelled the world – "I've lost count of the number of countries I've visited" – and interviewed everybody from Jamie Oliver to Paul McCartney. She's been reporter, producer and, since 2001, the voice of the programme – and an instantly recognisable one.

The accent is an amalgam of Lancashire, where she grew up, and the US, where she lived for much of her 20s, but what really distinguishes Dillon is the ease and authority with which she balances the two main aspects of the programme – its celebratory side, and its investigative side.

A slight, diamond-bright figure, Dillon isn't fazed by the arrival in her home of a small delegation from Radio Times, taking care to get everybody's order right as she makes tea and coffee for us, and the photographer and his team set up.

'I worked on farms – fed hens, worked in the dairy...'

Dillon's route to The Food Programme was a circuitous one, her upbringing and the early part of her career providing experiences that she's been able to draw deeply on, whether she's been sitting down for a chat with a Michelin-starred chef or exposing a food-industry scandal.

Her Lancashire upbringing was rural. "We grew up among farms, and from when I was 13 I worked on one – weekends and school holidays. I washed milk bottles. I fed hens. I worked in the dairy." The big food influence on her life was her mother – "a real life-force", in Dillon's ▷

PICK OF THE WEEK

The Pallisers

Sunday 3.00pm Radio 4

For a witty take, and a healthy dose of perspective, on the nation's current travails, this sparkling new adaptation of what many people regard as Anthony Trollope's greatest achievement might be just what the politics-weary need. That would be all of us, right?

The Pallisers is the portmanteau title for six novels that Trollope published between 1864 and 1879, the story centring on the politician Plantagenet Palliser and his wife, Lady Glencora. The plot involves both British and Irish politics, but Trollope's interest really lies in human character and human foibles.

Back in 1974, The Pallisers was given the prestige BBC TV treatment in one of the defining period dramas of the time. Susan Hampshire was Lady Glencora – a role taken 45 years later by Jessica Raine, best known for playing Jenny Lee in Call the Midwife, and she invests the part with a delicious knowingness.

Lady Glencora's marriage is loveless. "He tried to explain the British constitution in bed last night. Call me frivolous but I want something more." Does the answer lie in the wastrel Burgo Fitzgerald? That's just one of many intrigues that keep us entertained.

◁ words. “She was a great cook and a tremendous food enthusiast. She picked mushrooms, and she’d go around the markets, and was very discriminating. I don’t mean that we had fancy food at all. We didn’t. But she cared. And because it was a village, food was delivered and there was a man who came round with fruit and vegetables, and my mother would go out to his van and she’d come back into the house and shout, ‘He’s got pomegranates!’ or ‘He’s got chestnuts!’; and she conveyed that food could be about pleasure.”

It wasn’t an idyllic upbringing by any means. Her parents’ marriage was unhappy, she says, and it affected her education, but in spite of failing the 11-plus, she made it to Leicester University to read English. Even then, she says, she “felt like a fake” and that “it was a miracle I actually finished my degree”.

AFTER GRADUATING, SHE embarked on what would be a peripatetic life. She worked for the British Council in Finland before going to study at the University of Indiana, and then getting a job as an editor at the University of Indiana Press. The next stop was New Zealand. Her boyfriend got a teaching job there, and Dillon gave up her life in the States to go with him – “terrible for a feminist!”. It wasn’t long before they broke up, and Dillon was on the move again. She had her green card so she returned to the US and found a job at the publishers Little, Brown in Boston.

It was here that Dillon’s capacity to challenge authority came to the fore. “I was a copy editor in the trade department, and it became obvious that women were being hired and being moved into copy editing, and men were being hired and put into trainee editorships – and they were being paid two and a half times more than the women. So six of us brought a class action, and we won.” The experience was “interesting”, she adds, with some understatement.

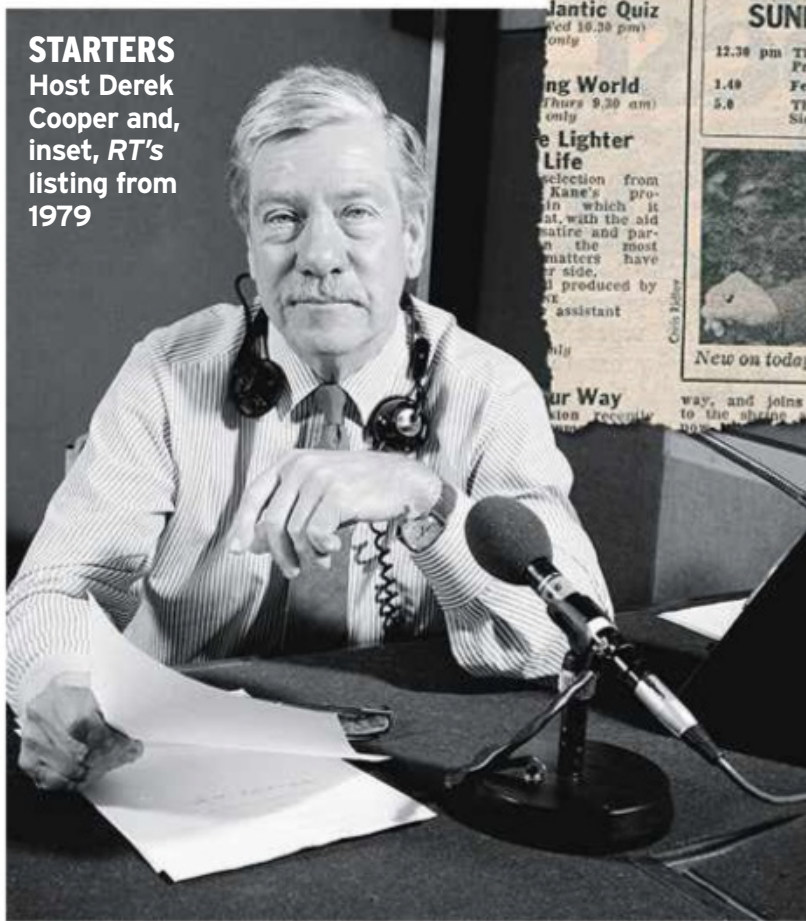

By now she had met the man who would become her husband – the investigative reporter Peter Koenig, who was from New Jersey – and the two of them moved to California, where Dillon got a job in magazines. She and Koenig decided they would alternate between basing themselves in the US and in the UK – three years in one country, three in the other.

That meant a move to Edinburgh, but Dillon’s involvement in food didn’t begin until she was back in the US, living in New York, when a scandal broke on Long Island after pesticides were found to have leaked into the water supply. Dillon was weaning her newborn son Tom, mashing up potatoes for him, and she realised she wanted to act. She got involved in a voluntary project in the Bronx, where fresh food was in short supply, and started working on a magazine called Food Monitor, rising to become its editor.

Then she and Koenig returned to the UK, for what would be the final time, and she decided to approach The Food Programme. A producer saw what an asset she could be. “She sent me on a training course to learn how to make radio features. And that’s when I first met Derek. I remember him coming into the office, and he was always very bouncy, you know? ‘It’s such a beautiful day!’ That’s what I remember.” The pair went on to work together for some 15 years.

Derek Cooper was already a TV and radio veteran – Tomorrow's World, Today – when he launched The Food Programme on Sunday 30 September 1979. Over the course of 40 years, its reports have ranged from exposing the role of the Russian mafia in the control of food, to how Ethiopia recovered from its famine, to the rise of robots that can cook your dinner.

I ask Dillon which of The Food Programme’s many achievements she’s proudest of, and her answer doesn’t come as a surprise. It’s the work she did exposing the scandal of BSE (or “mad cow disease”), when, in the 1990s, officialdom tried to cover up that meat entering butchers and supermarkets could be contaminated as a result of cattle being fed animal products.

“I’m very proud of the way we documented the lies and the obfuscation and the denials. I’d go to laboratories, and scientists wouldn’t let me record their answers when I asked them if they’d change their own diets, because of course they had but they were toeing the official line. You’re just a journalist, and the people in power – men in power – want to dismiss you, want to make you seem silly, and you start to doubt things yourself. Well, that’s what power does, doesn’t it?”

There’s another achievement to be noted, although Dillon would probably consider it self-indulgent to call it that, which is that since 2011 she has had cancer of the bone marrow and continues to work in spite of its effects and the chemotherapy treatment she is receiving. “But it’s under control,” she says.

So how health-conscious are you about your diet, I ask. “Well, it’s sort of embedded in me now. I’ve never eaten that much meat, but when I do, I believe in eating good meat. I don’t worry about fat. I never have. I’ve always eaten butter and I’ve always loved fatty meat.”

AND WHAT ABOUT the rise of veganism? “It’s an interesting development, but I think people should be more cynical about the way the food industry is likely to capitalise on it. You can make vegan junk food easily and you can charge a much higher margin. Look at margarine! It took us a long time to become aware of margarine and what an industrial product it is, and here it is on the rise again.”

She says she’s not sure it’s helpful to talk in terms of healthy food. “It’s like what Michael Pollan, the American food writer, says: eat food, not too much, mostly plants, and eat for pleasure.”

That word “pleasure” again. It’s why Nigel Slater is right up there in the Dillon pantheon. “He’s just major on pleasure, and I love that about him.” And then there’s the pleasure of The Food Programme itself. Happy 40th birthday, and let’s raise a glass to Sheila Dillon.

Telling it how it is

When did Donald Tusk become "Toosk"?

IBLAME EYJAFJALLAJOKULL. When the Icelandic volcano exploded in 2010, it spewed fire and brimstone into the air, grounding planes and millions of passengers. Worse still, it petrified radio people – how on earth should its name be spoken aloud? Newsreaders would take a run towards it – “Eyja-fjALL-AjoK-UUULLL!” Tea would burst from my mouth in an eruption to rival any sky-high ash-plume.

Right now a host of other names make the news each day but are spoken aloud in different ways. Take Donald Tusk, President of the European Council. For years he rhymed with husk, dusk or rusk. Suddenly, he was renamed “TOosk”. That’s how Tusk should be pronounced and how he’s said it all his life. It’s ignorant of English-speakers to get these things wrong. But how can it simply be changed overnight without millions of us being told what’s happened?

Had someone at the BBC called up Frank Spencer to borrow his “OOH, Betty!”? Had Frankie Howerd lent one of his titters: “OOOOO! No, don’t”? We radio listeners were left to pretend Tusk had always been “Toosk”. I want an announcement, something like: “Mr Toosk – who yesterday we pronounced Mr Tusk – has spoken to the Prime Minister by phone.”

Then there’s the Bulgarian capital So-FIA, with its sister SOF-ia. Take your pick! Are they the same place? Are they the eastern European equivalents of ShrEEwsbury/Shrowsbury, Newc-a-stle/Newc-AA-stle or Gl-a-sgow/Gl-AA-sgow? It’s not just place names. Privacy gets both the short “i” or the long “I”. That’s privacy as in “privet hedge”, or prIvacy as in private parking. It’s a constant word-wang.

I’m as guilty of it as the next man. I was once advised how to avoid all of this. Faced with a difficult ash-spewing mountain in the news, you’d simply say “the Icelandic volcano,” and move along. Don’t go for the full “Eyjafjallajokull,” go around it!

A famous man I worked with on TV would confidently cough difficult names, leaving them out altogether. Ambassadors, presidents, athletes, everyone with a few syllables he couldn’t cope with would be renamed. “The tennis ace, Martina [COUGH] has beaten her Andorran rival, Ernestine [COUGH AGAIN] in a thrilling tie-break.”

IT’S MUCH BETTER to learn how to say it correctly. Broadcasters can research online where a robot can say it for you, and the lucky BBC people can call a Pronunciation Unit. Were its staff born perfectly pronouncing their oohs and aahs? Where do they come from? I rang them recently for advice gladly given, but I remembered what happened once long ago.

“Hello,” I said, doing quite well so far, “is that the Pro-NOUN-ciation Unit?” “No!” came the reply. “It’s the Pro-NUN-ciation Unit. There’s no O in NUN!”

Paddy O'Connell hosts Broadcasting House on Sunday at 9am on Radio 4, and co-hosts the podcast Dogpod

PADDY'S RADIO HEROES! No 1

“This is my 1971 Grundig Yacht Boy and, like me, it’s still in good working condition,” says David Scarff of Winchmore Hill in north London, who sent us this picture of his pride and joy. “It receives medium wave, short wave, long wave and FM – none of this new-fangled DAB or internet lark – but I can still enjoy a handful of local BBC stations (Keith Skues’ Sunday-night show on the BBC Eastern regions is a must!) and even Radio Caroline. I’ve had it for nearly 50 years and it keeps on working.” Paddy says: “I like this trusty old Yacht Boy – and the radio’s not bad either!”

SHUTTERSTOCK

We’re told these days we’re in the middle of a culture war. If that’s true, you’d think people would want the occasional truce.

Apparently not. I was listening to an episode of the popular podcast Fortunately. On the face of it little more was going on than three women talking over a cup of coffee, swapping waspish one-liners about their experiences as presenters of radio programmes, the presence or otherwise of glass ceilings in their organisations and the advisability of wearing certain fashion knitwear without appropriate underpinning.

Who’s misjudging whom?

Because the two regulars Fi Glover and Jane Garvey are prominent BBC women and their guest was Julia Hartley-Brewer of Talkradio, this had to be framed as a confrontation in the culture war; but instead it shaped up as a genial meeting of professionals. However, quite a few listeners took umbrage on Twitter, saying: “What a thoroughly unpleasant listen” (which it wasn’t) and “Unforgivable” (which it isn’t) and “A serious misjudgement of your audience”. (How is that different from an audience’s serious misjudgement of its podcast?)

TALKING HEAD
Julia Hartley-Brewer

Attracting refugees from the BBC

Most podcasters set out aiming to please themselves, not to keep “an audience” happy. That’s what’s attractive about the medium. But one day they wake up and they’ve got an audience, some of whom are a lot less liberal than they pretend to be and aren’t prepared to listen to any interviewee they wouldn’t have booked themselves. The problem with people like this is they’re so absurdly easy to wind up.

Hartley-Brewer has made a career from doing the winding. She said many of the listeners to her morning show were refugees from BBC attitudes and were generally in favour of Brexit. She said they were sick of people banging on about diversity. She said she advised girls to marry money – a point of view rehearsed by fictional characters since the age of crinoline but suddenly has some people reaching for the smelling salts.

What all this indicates is that the old orthodoxy has flipped on its head. People who consider themselves progressive now no longer consider themselves liberal. “Disgusted of Tunbridge Wells” is now as likely to be “Disappointed of Stoke Newington”. These days, whether you’re podcasting or broadcasting, you’ve got to learn to ignore both of them.

Archive on 4: Build The Wall!

8.00pm Radio 4
The fall of the Berlin Wall 30 years ago encouraged many to believe in a new dawn for the peace movement. It didn't happen. "Build the wall!" is a Trump rallying cry, and dozens more walls have been built throughout the world since 1989. Katy Long, who specialises in immigration, borders and identity, examines the modern history of border walls, looks at other examples in Northern Ireland and Israel, and asks whether the need for concrete barriers is still about the fear of "them and us".

Festival of Remembrance from the Royal Albert Hall

8.00pm Radio 2
Paddy O'Connell is steeped in the history of the Second World War through his role as chairman of a charity based on his late father's fighting unit – 47 Royal Marine Commando. The RT radio columnist provides the commentary on tonight's highlights from the annual Festival of Remembrance at the Royal Albert Hall, saying that "when you spend time with veterans, it really lifts history from the page". Prominence will be given to the story of the Battle of Kohima, fought in India in 1944, and the epitaph it gave rise to: "When You Go Home, Tell Them Of Us And Say/For Your Tomorrow, We Gave Our Today." Sean's Last Show

10.00pm Radio 4 Extra

Sean Hughes's last radio show was recorded in Dublin for RTE in 2016. New to Radio 4 Extra, it shouldn't be missed by anyone who loved TV's Never Mind the Buzzcocks, which benefited from his droll observations from 1996 to 2002. Hughes (above) sounds both tired and indefatigable, but his maverick humour makes for such a happy/sad hour as he jokes defiantly about the drink that would kill him 18 months later.

Sunday Feature: Poles Apart

6.45pm Radio 3

How remarkable that in 1957, a year before the BBC Radiophonic Workshop began creating new electronic music and sound for radio and TV, the Polish Radio Experimental Studio (PRES) was set up in Warsaw to do the same thing. In defiance of Communist disapproval, PRES remained one of the only electronic music studios in the Eastern bloc until the dissolution of the Soviet Union more than 40 years later. Robert Worby tells its story.

Who Will Call Me Beloved?

4.00pm Radio 4

This is an affecting take on a subject that continues to baffle much of society: the deliberately single woman. Tania Hershman – who happily lives alone – has spent a year as writer-in-residence at the Southern Cemetery in Manchester (above). While wandering the 100-acre grounds, she noticed one word more than any other: beloved. It prompts her to consider her own death, and how she wants to be mourned and commemorated. These meditations include interviews with others and are intercut with the voices of the dead, who – Hershman imagines – watch on in fascination.

Could An Ancient Athenian Fix Britain?

1.45pm Radio 4

British politics, it has been said ad nauseam, is broken. But what would our situation look like to a time traveller from ancient Athens – that lauded cradle of democracy? That's the premise of this light-hearted history lesson from Jon Harvey, better known to the voting public as Lord Buckethead, a contender for Theresa May's Maidenhead seat at the 2017 election. There's a lot we can learn from our classical ancestors, but also a warning: their experiment lasted less than 200 years.

Today's Choices

Zoe Ball

6.30am Radio 2

Rylan Clark-Neal (above) has become something of a national treasure, popping up everywhere from Eurovision to the Strictly offshoot It Takes Two as well as hosting his own Radio 2 show. Back in 2012, Rylan was a contestant on The X Factor, and now he flexes his vocal cords by taking part in a 24-hour "Ka-RY-Oke Challenge" for Children In Need. Joined by special guests, he'll be warbling through from 9.15am today to 9.15am tomorrow. Such epic undertakings are all the rage. Back in March, Tess Daly and Claudia Winkleman completed a 24-hour danceathon as part of Comic Relief. So – sing, Rylan! And hopefully your voice will have recovered in time for your Radio 2 show on Saturday.

7.30pm Radio 3

In 2014 Judith Weir became the first female Master of the Queen's Music. A year later the BBC Singers cannily co-opted her as their Associate Composer. Tonight we can hear the final fruit of that collaboration: Blue Hills Beyond Blue Hills, an oratorio for choir and string quartet setting 55 short poems – mostly three-line haikus – by Scottish poet Alan Spence as a five-movement cycle of the seasons ending in a hymn to the New Year.

Today's Choices

Patrick Kielty

2.00pm Radio 2

Beyond Bob Harris's Country Show, there are few programmes dedicated to country music on national radio. So events like the CMA Awards in Tennessee are an important touchstone for fans to celebrate the latest trends in this intimate genre. In the run-up to tonight's event, hosted by Carrie Underwood (above), with highlights on Radio 2 tomorrow, Patrick Kielty will be live from Nashville, interviewing some of the stars of country. Expect live performances from its rising artists, such as Joshua Hedley (aka Mr Jukebox) and Ingrid Andress, whose collaborations with the likes of Alicia Keys and Charlie XCX prove the music's durability. TOM GOULDING

Afternoon Concert

2.00pm Radio 3

Eric Coates, master of British light music, had a knack of devising melodies that also doubled as signature tunes for BBC radio shows. We may no longer hear his Knightsbridge March introduce In Town Tonight or Calling All Workers preface Music While You Work, but By the Sleepy Lagoon still ushers in Desert Island Discs after more than 75 years. This afternoon, John Wilson conducts some lesser-known Coates works, including the serenade For Your Delight. MARK PAPPENHEIM

The Susurrations of Trees

11.30am Radio 4

"Almost every species of tree has its voice," wrote Thomas Hardy, "at the passing of the breeze, fir trees sob and moan no less distinctly than they rock. The holly whistles as it battles with itself. The ash hisses amid its quiverings. The beech rustles while it flat boughs rise and fall." Producer Julian May and writer and presenter Bob Gilbert agree with him and set about proving the case with the help of poetry, music, chatter and – most pleasingly – the stirring, soothing, sinister sounds of the trees themselves.

FIONA HUGHES

Drama: Isaac Newton: Nemesis

2.15pm Radio 4

Ever heard of the Great English Recoinage of 1696? No, me neither, and I'm sure I'm not the only one. In brief: with coins being increasingly altered and forged, the government decided to "recoin" all silver currency, ie to melt down old coins and mint new ones. The man charged with overseeing this was Isaac Newton, Warden of the Royal Mint. This game but slightly muddled two-parter by David Ashton dramatises a plot by Newton's opponents to thwart the scheme, and bring him down. Concludes tomorrow. HANNAH SHADDOCK

4/16. Helen Mark reports on community resilience in the Essex village of Toppesfield (population 300), where in 2012 the owners of the Green Man pub put it on the market. A steering group made up of local people came together with the purpose of securing the future of the pub as a community asset, and Toppesfield Community Pub Limited (TCP) was established. Since its acquisition by TCP, the Green Man has continued to be a cornerstone of village life, and the village now has its own brewery.

Today's Choices

Any Questions?

8.00pm Radio 4
Jonathan Dimbleby had made Any Questions? so much his own that whoever succeeded him had a hard act to follow. But Chris Mason (above) has stepped up with aplomb, presiding over panellists and audience with a nice light touch and, at 39, injecting new life into the programme without doing anything to alienate older listeners. His flair for political coverage is also evident in his role as one of the hosts of Brexitcast – the BBC's runaway podcast hit that for many of us is the only palatable way we can keep in touch with the issue.

Radio 3 in Concert/ J to Z Late: Live from the London Jazz Festival/Jazz All Night

7.30pm, 11.00pm, 1.00am Radio 3
Radio 3 goes jazz-crazy tonight. The opening of the London Jazz Festival provides the ideal opportunity, with the gala curtain-raiser coming live from the Royal Festival Hall. J to Z takes over at 11pm with more from the festival before the network really departs from the norm at 1am. Instead of the classical music of Through the Night, there's Jazz All Night, introduced by bandleader, trumpeter and broadcaster Al Ryan, with the likes of Herbie Hancock and Sonny Rollins to see you through the small hours.

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Michelle Babs Jordan BBC Radio Berkshire/Oxford

Current job The evening show on BBC Radio Berkshire (Mon-Thu 7pm) and weekend breakfast on BBC Radio Oxford (9am).

CV Born and raised in Sidcup, south-east London, and moved to Bedford at 11. "At school I was told, 'You'll never get a job, just mucking about and making people laugh!'" Worked in a Clarks shoe shop "because I loved the uniform!", then "lost the will to live" doing office jobs for 10 years. Did a degree in residential care, and worked with adults with learning disabilities for 12 years. Then applied to Chiltern radio – did promo work there, then the travel bulletins: "They only asked me because I could pronounce Flitwick!"

Took over the breakfast show after three years. In 2010, moved to Reading to do Heart breakfast, which ended in May this year. Did summer Saturdays on BBC Radio Wiltshire, then "I got calls from Oxford and Berkshire – suddenly, everyone wanted me!"

Best moment "I had to jump out of a plane – and I'm scared of heights! But I persuaded 12 listeners to do it with me and we raised £35,000."

Worst moment "Doing my first travel bulletin. Noone likes the sound of their own voice, do they? I felt sick – I've kept that clip and I sound terrified!"

Off air "I live in Reading and I've had two loves in my life – my partner, John, and my chocolate doberman Bilko, who died three years ago. Basically, if it's got four paws, it's furry and dog-shaped, I love it! On days off, I hang out with mates – talking to friends keeps me centred."

First radio memory "I listened to Tony Blackburn and Arnold on Radio 1 – and DLT. And I wrote to Gary Davies, and was sent a pair of his 'Bit in the Middle' boxer shorts. They fell apart in the first wash!"

Favourite broadcasters "I adore Lisa Tarbuck. If I was 1 per cent as entertaining as her, I'd be very happy. I also love Sarah Cox – I yelped in the car when it was announced she'd got the drive show! And Jeremy Vine – he can take a politician to task, tear a strip off them, then play some cheesy Abba and say 'Ooh, isn't that lovely!'"

Ambition "To retire at the BBC! If I keep my head down, noone will notice, and I can keep doing this..."

Dream job "The drivetime show. Or anything at the 'mother ship', Radio 2. Also I'm obsessed with Adidas Superstars, so my dream job is to design them."

Secret skills "Ooh, I don't have one! Other people have party pieces – but I'm as deep as a puddle, me... Oh, that's really boring, isn't it?!"

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Michelle Babs Jordan BBC Radio Berkshire/Oxford

Age 51

Current job The evening show on BBC Radio Berkshire (Mon-Thu 7pm) and weekend breakfast on BBC Radio Oxford (9am).

CV Born and raised in Sidcup, south-east London, and moved to Bedford at 11. "At school I was told, 'You'll never get a job, just mucking about and making people laugh!'" Worked in a Clarks shoe shop "because I loved the uniform!", then "lost the will to live" doing office jobs for 10 years. Did a degree in residential care, and worked with adults with learning disabilities for 12 years. Then applied to Chiltern radio – did promo work there, then the travel bulletins: "They only asked me because I could pronounce Flitwick!"

Took over the breakfast show after three years. In 2010, moved to Reading to do Heart breakfast, which ended in May this year. Did summer Saturdays on BBC Radio Wiltshire, then "I got calls from Oxford and Berkshire – suddenly, everyone wanted me!"

Best moment "I had to jump out of a plane – and I'm scared of heights! But I persuaded 12 listeners to do it with me and we raised £35,000."

Worst moment "Doing my first travel bulletin. Noone likes the sound of their own voice, do they? I felt sick – I've kept that clip and I sound terrified!"

Off air "I live in Reading and I've had two loves in my life – my partner, John, and my chocolate doberman Bilko, who died three years ago. Basically, if it's got four paws, it's furry and dog-shaped, I love it! On days off, I hang out with mates – talking to friends keeps me centred."

First radio memory "I listened to Tony Blackburn and Arnold on Radio 1 – and DLT. And I wrote to Gary Davies, and was sent a pair of his 'Bit in the Middle' boxer shorts. They fell apart in the first wash!"

Favourite broadcasters "I adore Lisa Tarbuck. If I was 1 per cent as entertaining as her, I'd be very happy. I also love Sarah Cox – I yelped in the car when it was announced she'd got the drive show! And Jeremy Vine – he can take a politician to task, tear a strip off them, then play some cheesy Abba and say 'Ooh, isn't that lovely!'"

Ambition "To retire at the BBC! If I keep my head down, noone will notice, and I can keep doing this..."

Dream job "The drivetime show. Or anything at the 'mother ship', Radio 2. Also I'm obsessed with Adidas Superstars, so my dream job is to design them."

Secret skills "Ooh, I don't have one! Other people have party pieces – but I'm as deep as a puddle, me... Oh, that's really boring, isn't it?!" CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Michelle Babs Jordan BBC Radio Berkshire/Oxford

Age 51

Current job The evening show on BBC Radio Berkshire (Mon-Thu 7pm) and weekend breakfast on BBC Radio Oxford (9am).

CV Born and raised in Sidcup, south-east London, and moved to Bedford at 11. "At school I was told, 'You'll never get a job, just mucking about and making people laugh!'" Worked in a Clarks shoe shop "because I loved the uniform!", then "lost the will to live" doing office jobs for 10 years. Did a degree in residential care, and worked with adults with learning disabilities for 12 years. Then applied to Chiltern radio – did promo work there, then the travel bulletins: "They only asked me because I could pronounce Flitwick!"

Took over the breakfast show after three years. In 2010, moved to Reading to do Heart breakfast, which ended in May this year. Did summer Saturdays on BBC Radio Wiltshire, then "I got calls from Oxford and Berkshire – suddenly, everyone wanted me!"

Best moment "I had to jump out of a plane – and I'm scared of heights! But I persuaded 12 listeners to do it with me and we raised £35,000."

Worst moment "Doing my first travel bulletin. Noone likes the sound of their own voice, do they? I felt sick – I've kept that clip and I sound terrified!"

Off air "I live in Reading and I've had two loves in my life – my partner, John, and my chocolate doberman Bilko, who died three years ago. Basically, if it's got four paws, it's furry and dog-shaped, I love it! On days off, I hang out with mates – talking to friends keeps me centred."

First radio memory "I listened to Tony Blackburn and Arnold on Radio 1 – and DLT. And I wrote to Gary Davies, and was sent a pair of his 'Bit in the Middle' boxer shorts. They fell apart in the first wash!"

Favourite broadcasters "I adore Lisa Tarbuck. If I was 1 per cent as entertaining as her, I'd be very happy. I also love Sarah Cox – I yelped in the car when it was announced she'd got the drive show! And Jeremy Vine – he can take a politician to task, tear a strip off them, then play some cheesy Abba and say 'Ooh, isn't that lovely!'"

Ambition "To retire at the BBC! If I keep my head down, noone will notice, and I can keep doing this..."

Dream job "The drivetime show. Or anything at the 'mother ship', Radio 2. Also I'm obsessed with Adidas Superstars, so my dream job is to design them."

Secret skills "Ooh, I don't have one! Other people have party pieces – but I'm as deep as a puddle, me... Oh, that's really boring, isn't it?!" CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Michelle Babs Jordan BBC Radio Berkshire/Oxford

Age 51

Current job The evening show on BBC Radio Berkshire (Mon-Thu 7pm) and weekend breakfast on BBC Radio Oxford (9am).

CV Born and raised in Sidcup, south-east London, and moved to Bedford at 11. "At school I was told, 'You'll never get a job, just mucking about and making people laugh!'" Worked in a Clarks shoe shop "because I loved the uniform!", then "lost the will to live" doing office jobs for 10 years. Did a degree in residential care, and worked with adults with learning disabilities for 12 years. Then applied to Chiltern radio – did promo work there, then the travel bulletins: "They only asked me because I could pronounce Flitwick!"

Took over the breakfast show after three years. In 2010, moved to Reading to do Heart breakfast, which ended in May this year. Did summer Saturdays on BBC Radio Wiltshire, then "I got calls from Oxford and Berkshire – suddenly, everyone wanted me!"

Best moment "I had to jump out of a plane – and I'm scared of heights! But I persuaded 12 listeners to do it with me and we raised £35,000."

Worst moment "Doing my first travel bulletin. Noone likes the sound of their own voice, do they? I felt sick – I've kept that clip and I sound terrified!"

Off air "I live in Reading and I've had two loves in my life – my partner, John, and my chocolate doberman Bilko, who died three years ago. Basically, if it's got four paws, it's furry and dog-shaped, I love it! On days off, I hang out with mates – talking to friends keeps me centred."

First radio memory "I listened to Tony Blackburn and Arnold on Radio 1 – and DLT. And I wrote to Gary Davies, and was sent a pair of his 'Bit in the Middle' boxer shorts. They fell apart in the first wash!"

Favourite broadcasters "I adore Lisa Tarbuck. If I was 1 per cent as entertaining as her, I'd be very happy. I also love Sarah Cox – I yelped in the car when it was announced she'd got the drive show! And Jeremy Vine – he can take a politician to task, tear a strip off them, then play some cheesy Abba and say 'Ooh, isn't that lovely!'"

Ambition "To retire at the BBC! If I keep my head down, noone will notice, and I can keep doing this..."

Dream job "The drivetime show. Or anything at the 'mother ship', Radio 2. Also I'm obsessed with Adidas Superstars, so my dream job is to design them."

Secret skills "Ooh, I don't have one! Other people have party pieces – but I'm as deep as a puddle, me... Oh, that's really boring, isn't it?!" CAROLINE MEYER

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Michelle Babs Jordan BBC Radio Berkshire/Oxford

Age 51

Current job The evening show on BBC Radio Berkshire (Mon-Thu 7pm) and weekend breakfast on BBC Radio Oxford (9am).

CV Born and raised in Sidcup, south-east London, and moved to Bedford at 11. "At school I was told, 'You'll never get a job, just mucking about and making people laugh!'" Worked in a Clarks shoe shop "because I loved the uniform!", then "lost the will to live" doing office jobs for 10 years. Did a degree in residential care, and worked with adults with learning disabilities for 12 years. Then applied to Chiltern radio – did promo work there, then the travel bulletins: "They only asked me because I could pronounce Flitwick!"

Took over the breakfast show after three years. In 2010, moved to Reading to do Heart breakfast, which ended in May this year. Did summer Saturdays on BBC Radio Wiltshire, then "I got calls from Oxford and Berkshire – suddenly, everyone wanted me!"

Best moment "I had to jump out of a plane – and I'm scared of heights! But I persuaded 12 listeners to do it with me and we raised £35,000."

Worst moment "Doing my first travel bulletin. No-one likes the sound of their own voice, do they? I felt sick – I've kept that clip and I sound terrified!"

Off air "I live in Reading and I've had two loves in my life – my partner, John, and my chocolate doberman Bilko, who died three years ago. Basically, if it's got four paws, it's furry and dog-shaped, I love it! On days off, I hang out with mates – talking to friends keeps me centred."

First radio memory "I listened to Tony Blackburn and Arnold on Radio 1 – and DLT. And I wrote to Gary Davies, and was sent a pair of his 'Bit in the Middle' boxer shorts. They fell apart in the first wash!"

Favourite broadcasters "I adore Liza Tarbuck. If I was 1 per cent as entertaining as her, I'd be very happy. I also love Sarah Cox – I yelped in the car when it was announced she'd got the drivetime show! And Jeremy Vine – he can take a politician to task, tear a strip off them, then play some cheesy Abba and say 'Ooh, isn't that lovely!'"

Ambition "To retire at the BBC! If I keep my head down, no-one will notice, and I can keep doing this..."

Dream job "The drivetime show. Or anything at the 'mothership', Radio 2. Also I'm obsessed with Adidas Superstars, so my dream job is to design them."

Secret skills "Ooh, I don't have one! Other people have party pieces – but I'm as deep as a puddle, me... Oh, that's really boring, isn't it?!" CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Michelle Babs Jordan BBC Radio Berkshire/Oxford

Age 51

Current job The evening show on BBC Radio Berkshire (Mon-Thu 7pm) and weekend breakfast on BBC Radio Oxford (9am).

CV Born and raised in Sidcup, south-east London, and moved to Bedford at 11. "At school I was told, 'You'll never get a job, just mucking about and making people laugh!'" Worked in a Clarks shoe shop "because I loved the uniform!", then "lost the will to live" doing office jobs for 10 years. Did a degree in residential care, and worked with adults with learning disabilities for 12 years. Then applied to Chiltern radio – did promo work there, then the travel bulletins: "They only asked me because I could pronounce Flitwick!"

Took over the breakfast show after three years. In 2010, moved to Reading to do Heart breakfast, which ended in May this year. Did summer Saturdays on BBC Radio Wiltshire, then "I got calls from Oxford and Berkshire – suddenly, everyone wanted me!"

Best moment "I had to jump out of a plane – and I'm scared of heights! But I persuaded 12 listeners to do it with me and we raised £35,000."

Worst moment "Doing my first travel bulletin. Noone likes the sound of their own voice, do they? I felt sick – I've kept that clip and I sound terrified!"

Off air "I live in Reading and I've had two loves in my life – my partner, John, and my chocolate doberman Bilko, who died three years ago. Basically, if it's got four paws, it's furry and dog-shaped, I love it! On days off, I hang out with mates – talking to friends keeps me centred."

First radio memory "I listened to Tony Blackburn and Arnold on Radio 1 – and DLT. And I wrote to Gary Davies, and was sent a pair of his 'Bit in the Middle' boxer shorts. They fell apart in the first wash!"

Favourite broadcasters "I adore Lisa Tarbuck. If I was 1 per cent as entertaining as her, I'd be very happy. I also love Sarah Cox – I yelped in the car when it was announced she'd got the drive show! And Jeremy Vine – he can take a politician to task, tear a strip off them, then play some cheesy Abba and say 'Ooh, isn't that lovely!'"

Ambition "To retire at the BBC! If I keep my head down, noone will notice, and I can keep doing this..."

Dream job "The drivetime show. Or anything at the 'mother ship', Radio 2. Also I'm obsessed with Adidas Superstars, so my dream job is to design them."

Secret skills "Ooh, I don't have one! Other people have party pieces – but I'm as deep as a puddle, me... Oh, that's really boring, isn't it?!" CAROLINE MEYER

In this month of Remembrance, SSAFA, the UK's oldest tri-service military charity continues to be there for our Armed Forces community. While the majority of service personnel, veterans and their families thrive both in military and civilian life, last year alone we were contacted by more than 82,000 people who needed our help.

Since 1885, SSAFA, the Armed Forces charity has supported those who have made huge sacrifices on our behalf, those who need additional care so they can lead independent lives with dignity.

A gift in your will to support SSAFA's work makes a huge difference to the lives of those in need from the Forces family. These 'Legacy Gifts' allow us to continue our vital work and ensuring their service to our Nation is not forgotten...

Please consider leaving us a gift in your will, as this will make a real difference to so many lives.

Don't fall for this card trick

A Thomas Cook Cash Passport is still valid – but it has a sting in the tail, warns Paul Lewis

IF YOU HAVE a Thomas Cook Cash Passport, the good news is that your money is safe. The bad news is that there may be less of it than you expected.

Cash Passport was a prepaid card to use abroad. It could hold either one currency, like euro or dollars, or several. Customers paid in sterling, which was converted into the foreign currency and loaded onto the card, which could then be used abroad.

Mary was surprised when she checked her Thomas Cook Cash

‘She'd been hit by a monthly fee of €3’

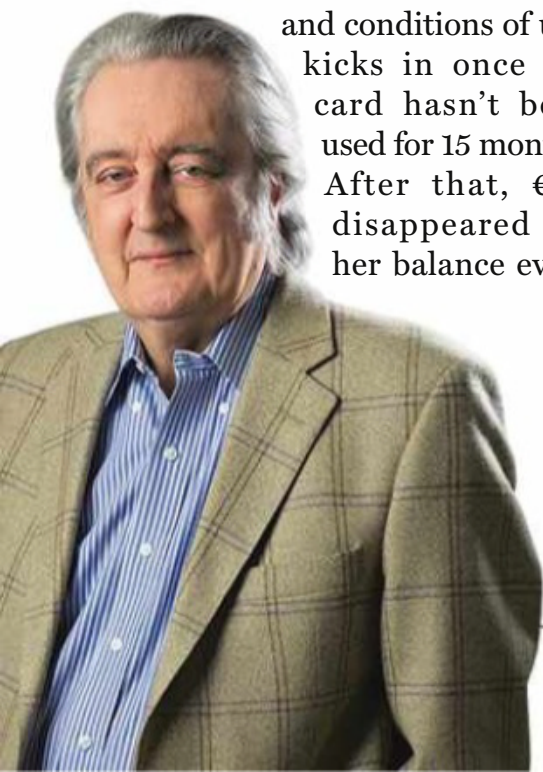

Passport. She hadn't used it since 2015, when it had a balance of €252. Now, however, the balance was €108. She'd been hit by a monthly “inactivity fee” of €3 that, under the card's terms and conditions of use, kicks in once the card hasn't been used for 15 months. After that, €36 disappeared off her balance every year she didn't use it. Another three years and all her money would have vanished. Although she was still able to use her Cash Passport, despite Thomas Cook's demise (it's run by Wirecard) Mary decided to take out her €108. That transaction would have been free to do at a branch of Thomas Cook, but now that they're closed a £6 “cashout” fee would be deducted from the final total.

PREPAID CARDS LIKE Cash Passport can be expensive to use. Customers pay in pounds to load them up, but the exchange rate into the foreign currency is normally not as good as the Visa or MasterCard standard rates. There can be a fee to get the card plus a monthly fee after that, as well as charges to top it up, use an ATM, or even spend with it. Inactivity fees are common, as are fees to replace a lost card and fees to stop the card and take the money out. Prepaid cards are not protected by the Financial Services Compensation Scheme and do not give Section 75 consumer protection on purchases.

The cheapest way to spend abroad is to use a credit or debit card with no foreign usage fees, such as a Halifax Clarity credit card or a Starling Bank debit card, and always pay in local currency not sterling, if offered the choice.

EQUITY RELEASE: THE FACTS

Looking to free up the cash in your home? Equity release could be an option – but first, the facts

Guided by over 20 years' experience, Key has helped over one million people decide whether equity release is right for them. Here the expert advisers at Key Partnerships answer the most common questions from customers:

WILL I STILL OWN MY HOME? With a lifetime mortgage you will still own your own home – and all ERC (Equity Release Council) approved plans come with a no negative equity guarantee, so you'll never owe more than your home's worth.

WILL I HAVE TO MAKE REPAYMENTS? A lifetime mortgage, the most popular form of equity release, is a loan secured against your home. There are typically no monthly repayments to make as the loan plus roll up interest is repaid when the plan comes to an end.

CAN I MOVE HOME? Yes. With ERC approved plans, you can move home after taking out equity release and take your plan with you, subject to lender's criteria.

WILL THERE BE ANY MONEY LEFT FOR MY CHILDREN? With inheritance protection, you can ring-fence a percentage of your home's future value to be passed on as a guaranteed inheritance. Remember that equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits.

Spice wars

William Dalrymple uncovers the extraordinary history of the world's first multinational – the East India Company

Book of the Week: The Anarchy
Monday-Friday 9.45am Radio 4 FM

ON 31 DECEMBER 1600, the last day of the first year of the new century, the “Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies”, a group of 218 men, received their royal charter.

This turned out to offer far wider powers than the petitioners had perhaps expected, or even hoped for. As well as freedom from all customs duties for their first six voyages, it gave them a British monopoly for 15 years over “trade to the East Indies”, a vaguely defined area that was soon taken to encompass all trade and traffic between the Cape of Good Hope and the Strait of Magellan, as well as granting semi-sovereign privileges to rule territories and raise armies.

There was one last hiccup. In February 1601, the presiding genius of the nascent Company, Auditor Smythe, was briefly incarcerated in the Tower of London on a charge of complicity in the rebellion of the hot-headed Earl of Essex. Nevertheless, less than two months after the formal granting of their charter, on 13 February 1601, the refitted Red Dragon slipped its Woolwich moorings and glided through the cold February Thames fog, followed by its three escorts, the Hector, the Susan and the Ascension.

In command again was the stern but now chastened figure of Sir James Lancaster [who had lost three of the four ships that sailed on his 1591 voyage to the Indian Ocean and had seen his crew ravaged by scurvy]. Lancaster had learned several lessons, so brought along lemon juice to prevent scurvy, and enough armament – no fewer than 38 guns – to take on any competition he might encounter en route.

The voyage got off to an almost comically bad start. As they were leaving the Thames estuary, the wind dropped and for two months the fleet stood humiliatingly becalmed, within sight of Dover. But the wind eventually picked up and by September the fleet had rounded the Cape, where it stopped for provisions.

Wishing to indicate to the waiting tribesmen that he wanted to buy meat, Lancaster, showing a linguistic aptitude that would come to distinguish English imperialism, “spake to them in cattel’s language ... moath [‘moo’] for kine and oxen, and baah for sheep”. They then headed on to Mauritius where, on the shore, they found a series of carvings on a rock. It was not good news: five Dutch ships had recorded their visit only five months earlier.

It was not until June 1602 that Lancaster’s fleet made it to Acheh and began to negotiate with the Sultan for his spices. Shortly afterwards, the crew spied a Portuguese carrack. Lancaster had been advised to conduct his men “in a merchantlike course”, but was also authorised to indulge in piracy against Spanish or Portuguese ships, should “an opportunity be offered without prejudice or hazard”. He did not hesitate.

A YEAR LATER, ON 1 JUNE 1603, rumours began to filter into London via France that the Company’s first fleet had returned safely into European waters. But it was not until 6 June that Lancaster finally anchored on the south coast at the Downs, “for which thanked be Almighty God who hath delivered us from infinite perils and dangers”. This time Lancaster had brought back all four of his vessels, intact and fully loaded.

It would be the first of 15 more East India Company expeditions that would set out over the next 15 years. But the truth was that this was small fry compared with what the Dutch were already achieving on the other side of the Channel. For in March 1602, while Lancaster was still in the Moluccas, the different Dutch East India Companies had all agreed to amalgamate and the Dutch East India Company, the VOC (Vereenigde Oostindische Compagnie), had received its state monopoly to trade with the East. When the Amsterdam accountants had totted up all the subscriptions, they found that the VOC had raised almost ten times the capital base of the English EIC, and was in a position to offer investors a 3,600 per cent dividend.

In October 1599, the Company records contain the first complaints about the “slacknes of many of the contributors who had sett down their names” but had “hitherto brought in noe moneys”. A few months later the directors began to threaten more severe sanctions against those who had failed to deliver on their promises at the Founders’ Hall.

On 11 January 1600, they “ordered that any brother of this fellowship who shall... have fallen into breach of any of ye ordinances... then such person shall be committed to prison there to remaine duringe ye pleasure of ye generalitie”. A warrant was then issued for four persons to be committed to Marshalsea unless they paid up in four days. The result of this inadequate funding was a small company with small fleets, and no permanent capital of its own, merely individual subscriptions for individual voyages. The English at this stage simply did not have the deep financial pockets of the Dutch.

After several more bruising encounters, the EIC directors decided they had little option but to leave the lucrative Spice Islands and their aromatic spice trade to the Dutch and focus instead on less competitive but potentially more promising sectors of the trade of Asia: fine cotton textiles, indigo and chintzes. The source of all three of these luxuries was India.

HAPPY BAKER
Rachel Khoo is in a celebratory mood

Rachel Khoo's St Lucia saffron buns

THESE BUNS ARE PART and parcel of the winter season in Sweden. Just like Easter eggs in the run-up to Easter, these buns start springing up in bakeries, supermarkets and even petrol stations as St Lucia's day approaches. On 13 December, when the darkness of winter is reaching its peak, you can find processions of children lighting up the night in long white gowns, holding candles and singing. The warm golden glow of the soft, enriched St Lucia buns, which are dotted with a couple of raisins, is a perfect pairing to the celebrations.

Truth be told, I've eaten far too many dry versions of these buns, so I decided to take some inspiration from Jewish babka and encase a thin layer of spiced raisin paste in the bun, adding a rich and sticky sweetness to this saffron-infused favourite.

MAKES 10
PREPARATION TIME: 1 HOUR RESTING TIME: 2½-3½ HOURS, OR OVERNIGHT
BAKING TIME: 20-25 MINUTES

FOR THE RAISIN PASTE

- 150ml whole milk
- 250g raisins
- 1 tsp ground cinnamon
- 1 tsp vanilla sugar
- 3 tbsp white breadcrumbs

FOR THE DOUGH

- 2g saffron threads
- 150ml whole milk
- 375g "00" (superfine) flour, plus extra for dusting
- 50g caster sugar
- ½ tsp fine sea salt
- 1 tsp vanilla sugar
- 16g fresh yeast
- 75g soft butter
- 1 medium egg
- 1 medium egg, beaten, for brushing

1 Heat the milk for the raisin paste to scalding point (not boiling), then add the raisins, cinnamon and vanilla sugar. Leave to soak for at least 1 hour and overnight if possible. After soaking, set about 20 raisins aside for the decoration. Add the breadcrumbs to the milk and raisin mixture and pulse to a rough paste, with some raisins left still whole.

2 To make the dough, soak the saffron threads in the milk for at least 30 minutes, then remove and discard the threads. Put the flour, caster sugar and salt into a large bowl. Place the milk and vanilla sugar in a small pan and bring to room temperature over a very low heat. Crumble the yeast into a small heatproof bowl and add 2 tbsp of the milk to the yeast to dissolve. Make a well in the centre of the dry ingredients and add the yeast, remaining milk, the butter and egg. Mix, then knead in a free-standing mixer with the dough hook attached for about 5–7 minutes, or by hand on a lightly floured surface, until the mixture doesn't stick and bounces back when touched.

3 Put the dough into a bowl, cover with cling film and leave to rise for about 2 hours or until doubled in volume.

4 Divide the dough into 10 equal balls. Dust your surface lightly with flour. Roll one of the balls out into a thin rectangle, about 20cm x 15cm. Spread a thin layer of raisin paste down the middle, leaving a margin of about 2cm. Roll up into a sausage, pinching the end of the rectangle together so it can't unroll. Lay the roll in front of you with the neat side on top, then slice the middle open to about 8cm, exposing the layers. Twist the middle and roll both ends in towards the centre to make an S shape. The ends have to be rolled in quite tightly, otherwise they uncurl. Press in 1 soaked raisin at each end. Repeat with the rest of the dough balls.

5 Preheat the oven to 240°C/fan 220°C/gas 9. Leave the buns to prove for 30 minutes, covered with a clean tea towel.

6 Brush the buns with egg wash, then bake for 5 minutes. Turn the oven temperature down to 200°C/fan 180°C/gas 6 and bake for another 15–20 minutes, until golden. Place on a wire rack to cool.

AMERICA'S FAVOURITE NATIONAL PARK

Dolly Parton once said in an interview that when she's writing an album, she takes herself off to a cabin in the mountains that belonged to her great-grandfather and fasts to unleash her creativity. These days there are plenty of luxurious cabins available to rent on the outskirts of Gatlinburg and Pigeon Forge.

But the best place to get back to nature is the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, which is named after the blue-tinged mist that fills the valleys on still summer days. The USA's most-visited national park straddles Tennessee and North Carolina and its soaring, forest-carpeted ridges can be explored by car or on foot.

The park looks especially stunning in October, when the sugar maples, scarlet oaks, sweetgums, red maples and hickories are clothed in their autumn colours.

Country Music Association Awards Wed 2pm (preview), Thu 9pm (highlights) Radio 2

THIS YEAR'S COUNTRY Music Association Awards in Nashville will be co-hosted by none other than country's grand dame, Dolly Parton. To truly appreciate the scale of Parton's rags-to-riches success, though, you need to head east to Tennessee's Great Smoky Mountains, where she grew up in a wooden cabin with no electricity or running water.

The Queen of the South has transformed the dirt-poor backwoods of her childhood into a theme park called Dollywood. While its kitsch entertainments aren't to everyone's taste, her beloved Smokies are one of the most spectacular, biodiverse corners of the Deep South.

DOLLY COUNTRY

Born to a sharecropper in 1946, Dolly Parton shared her parents' two-room cabin in the foothills of the Great Smokies with 11 siblings. "Life is as peaceful as a baby's sigh... Crickets sing in the fields near by," she sang in 1973's My Tennessee Mountain Home – a bittersweet tribute to a life she couldn't wait to escape. Aged seven, Dolly built herself a guitar.

The nearby neon-lit town of Pigeon Forge is now home to Dollywood, Parton's theme park, which attracts more than two million visitors a year. As well as rollercoasters, rides and live music, there's a replica of the cabin (old newspaper lines the walls) and a white clapboard chapel.

Parton also owns DreamMore Resort, and fans with cash to flash can book the Dolly Parton Suite – a sparkly penthouse with a gold-tiled shower. In the lobby, there's a padlocked box containing a song called My Place in History, which will be released on her 100th birthday.

MUSIC CITY USA

When she was 18, Parton packed her bags and moved to Nashville, where she still lives, having met her husband in a laundrette on her very first day in town.

Dolly devotees should begin at RCA Studio B, where Jolene was recorded and Elvis Presley, Jim Reeves and Roy Orbison, among many others, also recorded hits. Parton is also celebrated in the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Down river, there are nightly concerts at the Grand Ole Opry, which began as a radio show in 1925. Parton first sang on the show when she was ten, and at 13 she was introduced by no less than Johnny Cash. No visit to Nashville is complete without a night in the raucous honky-tonk bars of Lower Broadway.

ICONIC VENUE

MOUNTAIN MOONSHINE

Like many establishments in this conservative region, Parton's empire doesn't permit the drinking of alcohol. Ironically, the Smokies are famous for illicit stills. When Dolly was a child, many farmers supplemented their income by making moonshine – the unaged corn whiskey was distilled by the light of the moon (hence the name) or in caves, and mixed with fruit to make it palatable. Tennessee's best-known export, apart from music, is probably Jack Daniel's, yet liquor licences weren't issued in most of the state's counties until 2009. The first legal moonshine distillery, Ole Smoky Moonshine, which opened a year later, quickly became a tourist attraction.

Why do we talk about something insignificant as "small beer"?

Charlie Platt via email

The filth of medieval streets were notorious. Open gutters overflowed with household slops and rubbish, while cesspits were only occasionally cleaned by "gong-farmers" (gong being an old word for a privy), which meant streets were reservoirs of disease. Public latrines were also constructed over streams and rivers, rapidly contaminating the water supply. It's no wonder that many people avoided so-called drinking water and instead drank wine, ale and "small beer" – a weak beer that could be drunk relatively freely, even by children. Over time, the idea of the beer's strength shifted to suggest inferiority, which is where we remain today, with "small beer" suggesting something trivial.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

What about green houses?

TIME TO CHANGE
Do the Homes under the Hammer team (left) need to consider the environment?

Isn't it time that property shows such as Homes under the Hammer (BBC1) had a green makeover? When presenters see a front garden, too often they salivate over the prospect of off-street parking, seemingly unconcerned about concreting over flower beds and lawns. When owners put in decking or pave over the rear of their properties, presenters eulogise over low-maintenance gardens, ignoring the fact that they're bird-, bee- and butterfly-free zones.

Promoting the environment protects our wildlife, reduces flood risk and tackles global warming. A recent RHS report has shown that, in the summer, a well-chosen plant mix in the front garden can lower house temperatures. In this age of rising temperatures, enthusiastic gardening may even enhance property values.

TALE OF TWO DRAMAS

RT's TV editor selected The Accident (24 October C4) as the drama of the week. I put aside my expectations of a Sarah Lancashire vehicle being a wretched and wearisome tale of misery and tuned in, but a wafer-thin plot, dodgy regional accents and poor CGI made it unwatchable. The depressing despair of two-dimensional characters ensured that I won't be returning.

I'll watch Giri/Haji (Thursday, BBC1) on iPlayer – far more fun.

Chris Bangs Glossop, Derbyshire

...Giri/Haji is one of the most stylish dramas I have seen. The acting is superb, the drum beat throughout the snatches of anime, the characterisation, the photography... I could go on. Yes, it shows us a very seedy side of life, but that exists – and it's very interesting from a cultural point of view, with recent documentaries on Japan from Sue Perkins and Joanna Lumley, and the interest in the Rugby World Cup and next year's Olympics. I think it's unlikely that I will find another drama that I enjoy as much as this.

Wendy Brown St Peter Port, Guernsey

WRONG TURN

Simon King and Dave Myers no doubt enjoyed their trip in Hairy Bikers: Route 66 (BBC2); it's just a pity we viewers didn't. An endless succession of fast food – high in calories and saturated fats, coupled with tooth-rottingly sweet desserts – together with repeated close-ups of the front wheel of a Harley-

Davidson motorbike left me underwhelmed after programme two (19 September). Yes, there were one or two insightful vignettes of parts of American life, but they were rare. Route 66 ran out of road at an early stage.

Don Duncan Crieff, Perth and Kinross

REPEAT OFFENDER

I first saw Defending the Guilty (BBC2) as a pilot last year and very much hoped a series would follow. It did, and I wasn't disappointed. I loved the fact that it was more a serial drama, which allowed all the principal characters to shine through, than just a weekly sitcom.

Great writing by Kieron Quirke and full marks especially to Katherine Parkinson for her portrayal of the cynical, witty barrister Caroline and Will Sharpe as her idealistic, naive pupil (and pastry messenger), Will. But the whole cast – including the weekly "guests" with a miscellany of reasons to be involved with the law (Matthew Cottle's pervert was hilarious) – were terrific.

The show certainly deserves a second series.

Alex Wood Northampton

The BBC has confirmed that a second six-part series has been commissioned. Executive producer Saurabh Kakkar of the production company Big Talk says: "We're thrilled that the BBC is allowing us to spend more time with our talented gang as Kieron expertly ties their moral fibre in knots."

SUPER SIGN-OFF

Thank you to Radio 3 for the sonic journeys of Night Tracks (Monday–Thursday) – a lovely way to say goodbye to the fading day.

Michael Casey Newtowncashel, Longford

DUNKIRK BLOOPER

Applause all round to World on Fire (Sunday BBC1) for a brilliant story and outstanding sets. The stories entwined between the war and home front have worked very well. However, in episode five, Harry and assorted misfits trudged from Dunkirk onto the beaches – only to find gaily painted whalers waiting, manned by ratings. Confused? They should have been! The boats, HMS Keith and HMS Calcutta, were brightly coloured (when all battleships and their whalers were grey), and would have been easily spotted by the Germans!

Iain Williamson Leeds

THE DAY I MET BOB

I too remember Edge of Darkness (RT, 2 November), the superb Bob Peck and his sad early death aged 53. When my wife and I visited the magnificent Huntington Library and Art collection in California, Bob happened to be there too, admiring its sensational gardens and its collection of 400,000 books including early folios of Chaucer and Shakespeare.

I spotted Bob, told him how much we admired his work and asked him what he was there for.

"Oh, a bit of filming – a small part in some film about dinosaurs," he said. The small film was Jurassic Park!

THE MAESTRO
Dave Arch and his musicians are always on song on Strictly

UNSUNG HEROES

Forget the dancing on Strictly (Sat/Sun BBC1) for once. As an amateur musician, I find the ability of Dave Arch, his orchestra and singers to produce perfect renditions of multiple styles of music almost unbelievable. Just as skilful is the camerawork in the rehearsal rooms, which have multiple mirrors that are the bane of camera operators – yet on Strictly we never see any unfortunate reflections. Both the musicians and the cameramen/women get a 10 from me.

Philip Welsby Edinburgh

A LESSON IN LOSS

What a wonderful storyline for Daniel and Sinead Osbourne in Coronation Street (ITV). I felt it was good for young people to hear the end of life explained by the palliative care nurse: the in and out of consciousness and the rattle as breathing slows. All these things are terrifying if you haven't experienced them – and terrifying if you have.

Well done, ITV, for tackling this difficult subject with such sensitivity. But mostly well done to the two main actors, Rob Mallard and Katie McGlynn – how great were they? There should be an award for the best acting duo, as they were both exceptional.

Ann Daines Sheffield

found it necessary to add the kiss storyline with Bethany when the cancer story was so well written, researched and brilliantly acted. Nothing more was needed.

Working with cancer patients and being aware of grieving families, I really think Sinead's death should have been left alone and not ruined a little by Beth's anger and Daniel's guilt.

RED ALERT

In closing the red button text service, the BBC assumes that everyone has easy access to the internet and therefore the service is redundant. How wrong they are! I do not have a home computer of any description or a smartphone, and use the red button text service at least a dozen times a day, for sports stories, scores, weather updates, news and entertainment stories etc. Good as it is, the BBC News channel simply doesn't provide me with the information I want.

FINAL SCENES

The BBC says that by closing this service they can spend more on their online news service. What comfort is that to people like me who can't access it? I beg the BBC to reconsider their decision.

Robert Holder Dorking, Surrey

OUR BRIGHT IDEA

Seven Worlds, One Planet (Sunday BBC1) is a wonderful series. David Attenborough is as majestic as ever, and he doesn't pull any punches either.

We were really struck by the piece about the Southern Right whale [below] and how its natural curiosity about the whaling ships almost led to its extinction, compounded by the irony of the name the whalers gave it. Can we propose a campaign to rename it the "Bright" whale, in recognition of its obvious intelligence and capacity to forgive human abuses and ignorance?

Mark, Sue and Siân Gregory
Folkestone, Kent

...Another natural history programme was ruined by overloud and inappropriate music. The first episode of Seven Worlds, One Planet (27 October) would have been excellent if not for that. My wife left the room; I turned the sound off and watched with subtitles. But why should we be forced to do so? Surely we're not alone in preferring nature programmes not to have bursts of sound at high volume that some producer thinks will enhance the mood. It seldom does.

Eugene Myerson London N2

NO NEED FOR A CLOSE-UP

When police had cordoned off the area and erected screens around the lorry in Essex in which 39 people were found dead, can the BBC please explain why (on BBC Breakfast, 25 October BBC1) they chose to show footage from an overhead drone, effectively invading the space the police were trying to protect from prying eyes? True, no victims were shown, ▷

YOU ASK US

Where did Simon Reeve climb those trees?

In episode three of The Americas with Simon Reeve (27 October BBC2), in which state park or forest did he film the giant redwoods and climb up into the canopy with the scientists? I'm planning a road trip with friends and we love redwood forests.

Laura Segrott, Uckfield, East Sussex
Simon Reeve tells RT: "We started by filming redwood trees in the Redwood National Forest in northern California, which is home to the tallest trees in the world. But because the national parks won't allow anyone to climb their trees, I met up with scientists at a place called Trees of Mystery, a privately owned park near the coastal town of Klamath, and that's where I climbed up into the canopy. It was a breathtaking experience. Especially for someone with vertigo!" See treesofmystery.net

DEJA VIEW?

I seem to remember that Mark Bonnar, who plays Max in Guilt (Wed BBC2/Thu BBC Scotland), was in a similar drama plot in the past couple of years. I think he played a gay lawyer involved in covering up a road accident – or is my mind playing tricks on me? Sue Agnew, Rochdale, Lancashire
We think it may be – unless any RT reader knows better and can put us straight? The only vaguely similar role we can think of to the one you mention is the lawyer Bonnar played in series two of the ITV cold-case drama Unforgotten in 2017. His character, criminal barrister Colin Osborne, was blackmailed after he was seen damaging a car.

DIZZY HEIGHTS

TAKE TWO

Seeing Liza Goddard's picture in Feedback (26 October) reminded me of recognising her once when she was filming an episode of Take Three Girls. Who were the other two actresses, please? Ann O'Kane, Plymouth, Devon were the other flatsharers in the first series of this BBC comedy drama, which ran from 1969 to 1971 with music by Pentangle.

BROKENWOOD IS BACK

On the Drama channel I've seen several trailers for a new series of The Brokenwood Mysteries.

Can you shed any light on when it might start, please?

John Elcome, Wealdstone, north-west London

Very soon now: UKTV tell us the UK premiere of series six of The Brokenwood Mysteries is coming to Drama on Monday 18 November at 8pm.

Lisa Craig Newcastle upon Tyne
A BBC spokesperson responds: "Overhead footage was used to simply report from the location and give audiences a clear picture of the scene, which was central to the story. We stand by our coverage as fair and accurate."

TANTALISED

What a cracking start to Guilt (Wed BBC2; Thu BBC Scotland). Darkly funny, lies upon lies, a great cast sinking deeper into the mire. I can't wait for the next episode!

Catherine Kay Bathgate, West Lothian

TOP LESSON

I thoroughly enjoyed Chris Packham's explanation in Autumnwatch (29 October BBC2), using a light, an apple, a skewer and a cocktail stick, of why our seasons happen. I wish I'd had a science teacher like that.

It was great to sit with my 11-year-old son and both be able to learn new things. Well done, BBC, for providing enjoyable, educational viewing.

View from my sofa

JULIA BROWN

‘I want to be a badass detective’

The World on Fire star yearns to catch bad guys

What's the view from your sofa?

I share a house with a friend and we have a lovely big plush grey sofa in our living room and a matching TV cabinet. But the television isn't that big. So, for World on Fire [Julia plays Lois Bennett, right], we've been piling round to various friends' houses. When I'm alone, though, I'll watch in bed – I have a nice set-up on my laptop to devour box sets. I often watch them on my own because if you watch with someone else, they'll sometimes race ahead, which is so frustrating.

Any recent binges?

I'm in love with crime series, so I just devoured The Capture, which was brilliant. I watch anything by Shane Meadows, so I've just finished The Virtues. That was incredible. I watched Love Island in the summer, because it's a good character study. And I just saw The Great Hack, a documentary about the Cambridge Analytica scandal.

Who inspires you?

Olivia Colman is my hero. She's just so genuine and truthful in everything she does. Broadchurch is one of my favourite ever dramas and how she played that big reveal at the end of the first series was just gut-wrenching. The way she's able to bring humour into serious drama is something I aspire to in my work.

What did you watch growing up?

My granny Hazel from Belfast got me into Neighbours at a young age; I watched it when I got home from school. When I started to get more homework, my dad would put them onto DVDs for me, so I could watch a whole week's worth on a Saturday.

Who was your first TV crush – a Neighbours star?

No, it was Gareth Gates from Pop Idol. I was really little, probably about five or six, and I had – rather embarrassingly – a poster of him by my bed. I was absolutely heartbroken when Will Young beat him in the final.

Would you ever do a talent show? Thanks to World on Fire we know you can sing – and your CV says you can skate, too. Dancing on Ice, perhaps?

Ha! No, I don't think so. I did used to skate when I was little. Maybe later in my career, when I've established myself.

Is it a good time to be a young female actor?

Yes, definitely. There are more female writers, producers and directors, which means that there are more opportunities out there for actresses. It's really exciting to come into the business, knowing that it's only going to get better.

Is there a role you'd love to do?

I'd love a part like Holliday Grainger had in The Capture. A badass detective who figures it all out and catches the bad guy. A lot of my recent work has been period, which I love, but it'd be great to do a contemporary drama.

Where will we see you next?

I've got a couple of bits coming up on Netflix next year – I'm returning to The Last Kingdom and I'm doing the sequel to The Alienist, which is called The Angel of Darkness.

Will you do more World on Fire?

We don't know yet. I may be tied in to another one and there's scope to cover the six years of the war. It'd be lovely to do all six. DAVID BROWN

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK Educated by Tara Westover is an amazing memoir. For fiction, I love Sally Rooney's Conversations with Friends and Normal People.

MY FILM My favourite film of last year was If Beale Street Could Talk. And watching Love Actually at Christmas is my guilty pleasure – my dad and I can quote the entire movie.

MY PODCAST How to Fail with Elizabeth Day is inspirational.
