THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'Jo's brand of comedy just keeps on giving'

Stand by for a bit of name-dropping and humblebragging. I've met Jo Brand a few times across the years and to this day I preen myself quietly when I remember her telling me she was a big fan of my now long-gone soap column in Radio Times. (I couldn't face another episode of EastEnders.)

But then I've always liked her, right from the 80s when she ambled on to various stages with an eye-watering stand-up act that blew a bracing breeze right through a profession that was at that time the kingdom of wheezy old blokes telling sexist gags.

Brand has never faded away, in fact she's settled into a very comfortable second life as the go-to host of Have I Got News for You (remember that telling-off she gave a chastened Ian Hislop when he seemed to belittle claims of sexual harassment in the House of Commons?) and holding court at GBBO: an Extra Slice.

She's written a book, too, which is a handy peg for this week's jolly edition of the arts documentary Imagine (Monday BBC1).

The most chilling, sobering documentary of this week, and possibly any other week, is Sunday's The Last Survivors (BBC2), marking Holocaust Memorial Day with 90 minutes of testimony from the elderly Jewish men and women who were children when they were sent with their families to Nazi concentration camps.

Of course, so much of what they have to tell is so harrowing it's simply too big to take in (see my column on page 47). But it's the details that reverberate, like the woman whose entire family was wiped out in the gas chambers who talks of the bottomless loneliness of her life without them.

Meanwhile, there's a dearth of new drama, so it's good to know that both Cold Feet and Vera (ITV Monday and Sunday) are on top form.

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

When Martin Luther King Jr gave his "I have a dream" speech at the 1963 march on Washington no women spoke at the event, including Rosa Parks, who arguably kick-started the civil rights movement. And when King later went to the White House to meet President John F Kennedy, he left his wife and fellow campaigner Coretta Scott King outside.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

SEE THE FUTURE

So you think there are more than enough TV shows to choose from? Well there's more to come. US tech giant Apple has long been readying itself for a foray into the content market – it has a potential 1.4 billion global subscribers because everyone who has an Apple device now has the TV icon on their phones. And it's preparing some big shows, with Channel 4's former creative chief Jay Hunt overseeing their European operation. One of the big new dramas has been written by Steven Knight of Peaky Blinders fame. It's called See and is set in a future where humanity has lost its sight – until a set of twins is born with the power to see. Its cast includes Dexter star Christian Camargo and Jason Momoa (Aquaman and Game of Thrones).

STONES AT THE FESTIVAL

This week's Cold Feet sees the gang at a music festival, coping with mud, creaking limbs and the usual emotional ups and downs. The shoot at Cheshire's Delamere Forest had to withstand a heatwave, then torrential rain, but it was worse for John Thomson, who plays Pete. He got a kidney stone in the middle of filming. His ailment didn't meet the "force majeure" conditions for insurers to allow filming to stop so he was treated and returned after six days, only for a nurse to say he needed three weeks off. After another procedure, he returned a week later. "I had to carry on," he says. "There are some scenes where I look a bit pallid. But festivals are quite useful: there were a lot of trees if I got caught short."

RETURN OF THE SALESMEN

Remember when the BBC had to replace Ed Westwick (left) in the Agatha Christie drama Ordeal by Innocence after allegations were made about the star? The BBC also suspended filming of White Gold, the comedy in which he plays a double-glazing salesman in 1980s Essex (with James Buckley and Joe Thomas). But after LA County Prosecutors confirmed in July that they would not be filing charges against Westwick, production on series two of the sitcom started again and it's due to air on BBC2 in the coming weeks.

WESTMINSTER PRESS

You may have had enough of Brexit. But have you ever wondered what it's been like for the journalists tasked with explaining what a Facilitated Customs Arrangement is while standing outside a freezing House of Commons? A BBC2 documentary crew has been following BBC political editor Laura Kuenssberg for months as she covers the story and the special is expected to be shown late in February. EXCLUSIVE FIRST LOOK Nice Morse-tache!

It's Morse... with a moustache. Shaun Evans is soon to return to ITV as the young sleuth for the sixth series of Endeavour – and with a rather fetching piece of facial furniture.

The new series starts in 1969, when the murder of DC George Fancy at the end of series five hangs over the characters with the case still unresolved. They also have to deal with a new station following the dissolution of Oxford City Police to form Thames Valley Constabulary.

Evans also directs the second story in the series. BEN DOWELL

LIBBY PURVES

‘Within your reach for £20’

There should be far more coverage of local and touring theatre on R4

THE AVERAGE AGE of the Radio 4 audience is 56, a healthy quarter being between 35 and 54. Not bad really, given that the population’s average of age 40 includes infants and teens. Nor are listeners huddled in the South East, though the least enthusiastic are in the North (which furrows many senior BBC brows, and causes them to order panel show participants onto trains to Harrogate).

But note that three-quarters of those faithful listeners are what researchers call ABC1s. So if you drew a Venn diagram showing R4 listeners and people who go to the theatre, the circles would widely overlap. So why is theatre so lightly covered on the network, sharing Front Row and Saturday Review with exhibitions, films, music, books and star interviews? And why, given BBC anxiety not to seem poshly London-centric, does R4 rarely bother with stuff its far-flung loyalists might actually see? And which, to be brutal, the “lower” social classifications might afford?

The London temptation is obvious: the 2016 Arts Council report admits the capital has 47% of the nation’s shows: the National Theatre, Old and Young Vics, West End, classy fringe. They need covering: they’re landmarks in the great dramatic ecosystem that connects to Broadway and Europe and the capital’s own racial rainbow of diversity. But if you live at the far end of a railway line, you can feel left out. I can travel, and review the capital’s offerings on my website (theatrecat.com), but a lot of people contact me with a wistful “Nice to read about what’s going on, but…” So I keep a sharp eye on tours that turn up at a quarter of the ticket price in local theatres.

ROBLING PHOTOGRAPHY

NORTHERN SOUL
Pauline McLynn and Bea Webster in a Leeds revival of Mother Courage and Her Children

‘A lot of fun is missed by staid and static arts journalists on air’

NT and RSC tours get mentions on R4 – especially if they have TV celebrity casts – but other shows that may not reach the capital are often fantastic. Leicester, Northampton, York, Leeds, Birmingham, Newbury, Manchester, Bolton, Oldham and Colchester turn out fine shows: English Touring Theatre, partnered with various houses, roves widely, as do Northern Broadsides and good shoestring companies. There is a lot of fun being missed by our staid and static arts journalists on air, in their mean time slots.

R4 did trial a monthly half-hour on Saturdays for a couple of years in a gesture to the wider theatre nation: three were from national regions and the English ones were not about actual entertainments travelling the land but about issues: “Exploring the role of women/Race and gender identity/Local voices”. Fine, but not the same as gleefully, frivolously, signposting some cracking professional show on a ten-town tour, which might swoop within your reach for £20 a ticket and free parking. And which you may have helped pay for through the Arts Council.

THE OTHER MISSING link – despite the quality of many regulars on Radio 4 shows – is spirited argument. Depending who you side with, that could help listeners work out whether it’s worth the ticket. Online is an engaging snakepit of disagreement, from conventional minds to excitably gonzo student bloggers enthusing or shouting, “Boring!” I want to hear them argue; it makes Brexit sound tame.

When mainstream programmes like Today nod to the theatre, it just means a catchy tune, a tug of the forelock, a celebrity voice or a newsy issue. But the seething, stroppy, elevating, inspiring arguments, the tug at the heart and bark of rage and laughter I find every week in the theatre-nation? It finds no echo.

WHAT WE WATCHED

Desert Island Discs was celebrating its 50th anniversary with a special featuring then Prime Minister John Major (whose choices included Diana Ross and whose luxury was a full-scale replica of the Oval cricket ground). Host Sue Lawley revealed that she frequently disagreed with the producers over the guests: “I have bees in my bonnet about encouraging certain people to think more of themselves than they do already.” She also said she tended to “argue for more downmarket people being included... Popular soap opera stars, for instance, have got just as much place as men of wisdom and academe.”

WHAT YOU SAID

Our postbag was still reflecting on the Christmas TV offerings, with Mrs J Firth from Bradford, West Yorkshire, complaining that the Royal Institution Christmas Lectures featured atheist Richard Dawkins and suggesting the series “ought to have coincided with a pagan festival”. Dawkins himself responded with typical brio, insisting that the tradition of holding the lectures at Christmas “goes back a long way” and “are not obviously more unChristian than reindeer, presents and mistletoe”.

PHOTOGRAPHED EXCLUSIVELY FOR RT BY NICKY JOHNSTON

FLING

Winterwatch is back and Michaela Strachan, Chris Packham and Gillian Burke are heading for the Cairngorms…

INTERVIEW BY EMMA COX

CHRIS PACKHAM IS holding a plastic cup with a look of disgust. Artificial snow is swishing around his feet and for this single moment the atmosphere is distinctly icy. The very nice staff at the east London photographic studios have delivered his requested water in a glass jug – accompanied by a stack of the offending cups. It's particularly bad timing as we are in the middle of talking about conservationism.

"We are making progress generally," says Packham. "But not here, not this morning. You and I both looked at this plastic cup and thought, 'Urgh!' – didn't we? At some point today I'll mention to them that they ought to think about replacing these with something more sustainable. I always say something." He tells me how just last week he and his sister (the royal fashion designer Jenny Packham) went out for brunch ▷

◁ and were served with plastic straws. "I took them out of all the glasses, handed them back and said, 'We don't need these and it would be better if you weren't using them.' I wasn't rude. But you do have to say something. We have to take the lead because our decision-makers aren't listening to us."

Given that Packham will soon be accepting a CBE at Buckingham Palace after being named in the New Year's Honours list, is it possible that he might have a few words there, too? Perhaps about the royal family's penchant for shooting game, which he deplores?

"There will be lots of cheeky little words, I assure you," he grins. "Nobody ever gets off the hook around me. You don't get many opportunities in life, and sometimes people are a little bit shy, but if I meet someone of influence I will use that opportunity. I don't care if it's a bit clumsy, I don't care if it can

'If I don't exercise my voice for change, I'm not doing my duty' be deemed inappropriate: it's important to say something. I don't know anything about the ceremony or what happens, but I presume at some point someone's going to hand me a medal. And whether that's the opportunity, or another one is – don't worry, I'll do it."

Did he have to think twice about whether or not to accept his CBE when it was offered? "I had a think about it and took some advice," he admits. "If it had been for broadcasting, I don't know what I would have done. But it's for services to nature conservation, and that's what I'm all about. I've been given a small voice, and if I don't exercise that voice for change then I'm not doing my duty and I couldn't live with myself.

"One of the positives of the royal family is that they have been talking openly and honestly about their mental health issues, such as Prince William and Prince Harry dealing with their mother's tragic death. That's just the sort of bravery that I'm talking about: having the courage to come out and talk about things that will change us. So I'm very flattered by the offer of a CBE and I hope to use it to open more doors and have more conversations."

Conversations are what Packham is good at, and together with Michaela Strachan and Gillian Burke he'll be in full flow again this week as Winterwatch arrives on our screens. And as the fake snow in the studio suggests, the four programmes are coming from a new location, the Cairngorms in Scotland. It will also be the setting for this year's Springwatch and Autumnwatch, but while the backdrop changes, the focus on the country's wildlife remains both vivid and unfiltered.

"We're not Disney," says Strachan. "Last Springwatch we had a little owl and a blackbird in the same barn. When the blackbird's eggs hatched, the little owl got them all. It's heart-wrenching watching it, but that's life."

Most viewers of the Watches are hardy souls, but there are occasional complaints about scenes that are regarded as a bit too grisly. "The worst example," says Strachan, "was when we had a big nest of baby rabbits in a pile of straw and we thought, 'Great, let's get some live cameras on them!' But they were all eaten – and viciously – by crows, blackbirds, magpies. We had complaints. So we've decided that if we have anything as horrific as that again we will say, 'This is difficult to watch, so turn away if you don't want to see it.' But it's like watching a really dramatic film and the main character dies, and you cry, and it's awful, but you come out of the cinema and say, 'That was brilliant.' You want to feel something, don't you?"

WHAT'S TO

Eagles, otters, wildcats & red

The Winterwatch presenters on what's in store in the Highlands...

WHAT ANIMAL LIFE ARE YOU HOPING TO SEE?

CHRIS PACKHAM People are always drawn to the biggest, the fastest, the most exotic, and it's the same with natural history. Rest assured that we'll be looking at pine martens, wildcats, golden eagles, ospreys, crested tits, Slavonian grebes... I could go on. But behind the scenes I'm going to be arguing for every last snail, spider and fly that I can find. Last summer I met a tree slug and a bog sun jumper – a tiny spider that, under the microscope, is exquisitely beautiful.

MICHAELA STRACHAN The great thing about the Cairngorms is that it's home to a lot of sexy A-list animals: golden eagles, red squirrels, pine martens, ptarmigan, mountain hares, red deer – the sort of British wildlife that grabs attention. But what I love about the Watches is that we draw the audience in with the A-listers and then do a piece on something like a snow flea or a wood ant, and so often these little guys that go unnoticed are way more fascinating than the A-list show-offs! Not that I don't appreciate a show-off!

'We should grab the opportunity of reintroducing our lost wildlife'

MICHAELA STRACHAN

I love mountains and dramatic scenery, and the Cairngorms certainly has that.

GILLIAN BURKE I've already made a pre-recorded film about winter moths. Because it's so cold, the females have only enough energy to make eggs, they don't have the energy to fly as well. They are on the margins of surviving in winter. I've also made a film about spawning salmon in the Ness river.

Once we go live, we hope to see coal tits and pine martens, squirrels…

crested tits. Otters would be great, and mountain hares. But I'm also a real fan of invertebrates. It's important that we highlight some of the creatures that people find scary or disgusting. We can't just connect with the feathered and the furry. We need to value all these animals in order to keep the ecological system running well.

WHAT ARE YOU LIKE WITH THE COLD?
MICHAELA Absolutely hopeless! My home is in Cape Town, South Africa, so I do feel it – but the crew are so sweet and they give me little hot-water bottles. The crew are the ones out in the cold: we're mollycoddled in comparison. Chris feels the cold more than I do. Have you seen how many layers he wears? Sometimes you can hardly see his head!
CHRIS I do wear a lot of layers, but as long as I'm wrapped up, I'm happy.

TELL US MORE ABOUT THE LOCATION
CHRIS Abernethy, where we'll be based, is home to a number of really inventive conservation schemes. I'm hoping we'll get the chance to celebrate the work that's been done there. And going north gives us an opportunity to talk about climate change. If species are retreating up the hills faster than we can cool the climate down, maybe we should concentrate on spending money on species that have a more secure future. We are going to have to take some hard and pragmatic decisions about where we spend our money. Compare it with rising sea levels: should we keep spending billions of pounds putting concrete in the way of the sea, like King Canute? It can be economically fallacious to keep trying to stop the inevitable.
GILLIAN It's probably one of the wildest habitats on mainland Britain. It's going to be an amazing contrast to where we were last year, in Sherborne, Gloucestershire. The landscape was shaped in the Ice Age, but a lot of it has been altered by farming and deforestation over time. So that gives it a rich story.

WHAT'S YOUR TAKE ON THE PROPOSED REWILDING IN THE CAIRNGORMS?

How will you #BigGardenBirdWatch?

26–28 January 2019

Enjoy an hour counting the birds you see and help us monitor our wildlife.

Thank you for taking part

1. Watch the birds in your garden or local park for one hour.
2. Only count the birds that land in your garden or on your feeders, or local park, not those flying over.
3. The same birds may land more than once. To avoid counting them twice, please submit the highest number you see of each bird species at any one time in the hour – not the total number you count over the hour.
4. Tell us what you've seen in your hour, even if you saw nothing – it help us understand change so is still really useful.
5. Submitting your results online is quick, easy and saves on postage, so we can spend more on conservation. Please visit: rspb.org.uk/birdwatch using code BH13. Alternatively, fill in and return this form to us.

◁ martens, and the reintroduction of lynx to the habitat is another exciting thing that's happening in Scotland. I think there's enormous value in exploring what can done, although unfortunately beavers and lynx are blighted by controversy, so it's not as simple as having the technology to do it. We need to win over the people who live and work in the area too.

MICHAELA I wish we could just get on with rewilding. There's been so much talk and not enough action. Of course, you have to do studies to make sure it's viable – but does it really have to take so long? If I had my way, we'd have beavers, pine martens, lynx and 'This is nuts! We don't know what's going to happen!'

GILLIAN BURKE

wolves in every possible wild location that could sustain a population. I find the concept of rewildling extremely exciting. We have lost so much of our wildlife – if we can reintroduce some, we should grab that opportunity.

DO YOU EVER GET UNUSUAL FEEDBACK FROM VIEWERS?

CHRIS I get a hard time from vegans. I'm currently doing Veganuary, so I'll be preparing vegan snacks to take up with me. I want to learn all about it because if we ever got rid of all meat farming and suddenly went all arable, it would be catastrophic. It's not a simple subject. I think we want to move people to eating better-quality, home-produced meat, less often. But I don't preach. I offer information for consideration.

MICHAELA They always want to know where my hats are from. Particularly when Martin Hughes-Games was on the team, the others would get the wildlife questions, and I'd get asked, "Where'd you get that hat?" It drives us mad.

GILLIAN People always say, "British wildlife can't be that exciting compared with Kenya where you grew up." I find that baffling. The birdlife in East Africa is flamboyant and colourful; and here there are more browns and greys – you have to work harder to see them. But that's just as exciting.

IT'S A LIVE SHOW, SO DO YOU GET NERVOUS?

CHRIS This first Watch is important because we have to really bed in, find the lay of the land, and make it work for the rest of the year. Everybody works very hard. It's not a recce – we're on air. But no, I don't get nervous.

GILLIAN Yes! Every single day! There's a lot of prepping and logistics and planning, but there's always an hour before we go live when I step back and think, "This is nuts! We don't know what's going to happen!" But that's such a buzz, that fly-by-the-seat-of-your-pants feeling.

INEVITABLY, STUFF MUST GO WRONG...

MICHAELA Chris and I have got to the stage where we flick through Twitter after the show and say, "Oh, come on... Where are the complaints?" I got the wrong name for a kingfisher once. Of course I know what a kingfisher is! But sometimes the wrong word just comes out of your mouth. And if nobody picks you up on it you think, "Is anybody listening?" So we're always happy for people to correct us.

CHRIS I get stick for saying "metres" and "kilometres"... But if Mrs so-and-so tells me I got something wrong I'll always hold my hands up. I hate being seen as a know-it-all, because I'm not. I only know a little bit about a few things. I don't think there's been a series where I haven't apologised for something. EC

Antony Gormley: How Art Began
Saturday 9.00pm BBC2

UP TO THE MARK
Antony Gormley with a re-created handprint at the Pech Merle cave, France

BRING ON THE DANCING HORSES
Paleolithic horse and hand paintings in Pech Merle cave

The art of

SIR ANTONY GORMLEY makes art to be seen under big skies. His giant, winged figure, the Angel of the North, broods over the Tyneside horizon. Another Place, a series of lonely iron men created from casts of his own body, spreads across the tidal flats of Crosby Beach on Merseyside.

So it's a surprise to see Gormley deep below the ground in the south of France's Font-de-Gaume caverns, but when the world-famous sculptor lifts an electric torch to the walls in his new film How Art Began, it becomes clear why. Astonishing images flicker out of the gloom: a stag, incised into the limestone with sharpened flint, bends tenderly towards its mate, rendered in vivid red ochre. This heart-stopping scene is more than 12,000 years old. "These deer are absolutely amazing," says Gormley today, clearly still mesmerised by the experience long after filming finished last summer.

The 1994 Turner Prize winner, knighted for services to art in 2014, first encountered the French caves in 1980 when he took his new wife, the artist Vicken Parsons, on honeymoon. "As well as Font-de-Gaume, there are also the wonderful horses at the Pech Merle cave [right]," he says. "These works hit you with the same immediacy as something that was made by Banksy yesterday."

'They hit you with the same immediacy as a Banksy'

Now, at 68, Gormley has returned, making a visually stunning and often deeply moving film that reaffirms his deepest conviction: humans, above all, are creative creatures. "Look at these caves and you see that art has been vital to being human, to our sense of what it means to be alive, right from the very beginning. The exercise of forming and shaping has been with us for a very, very long time."

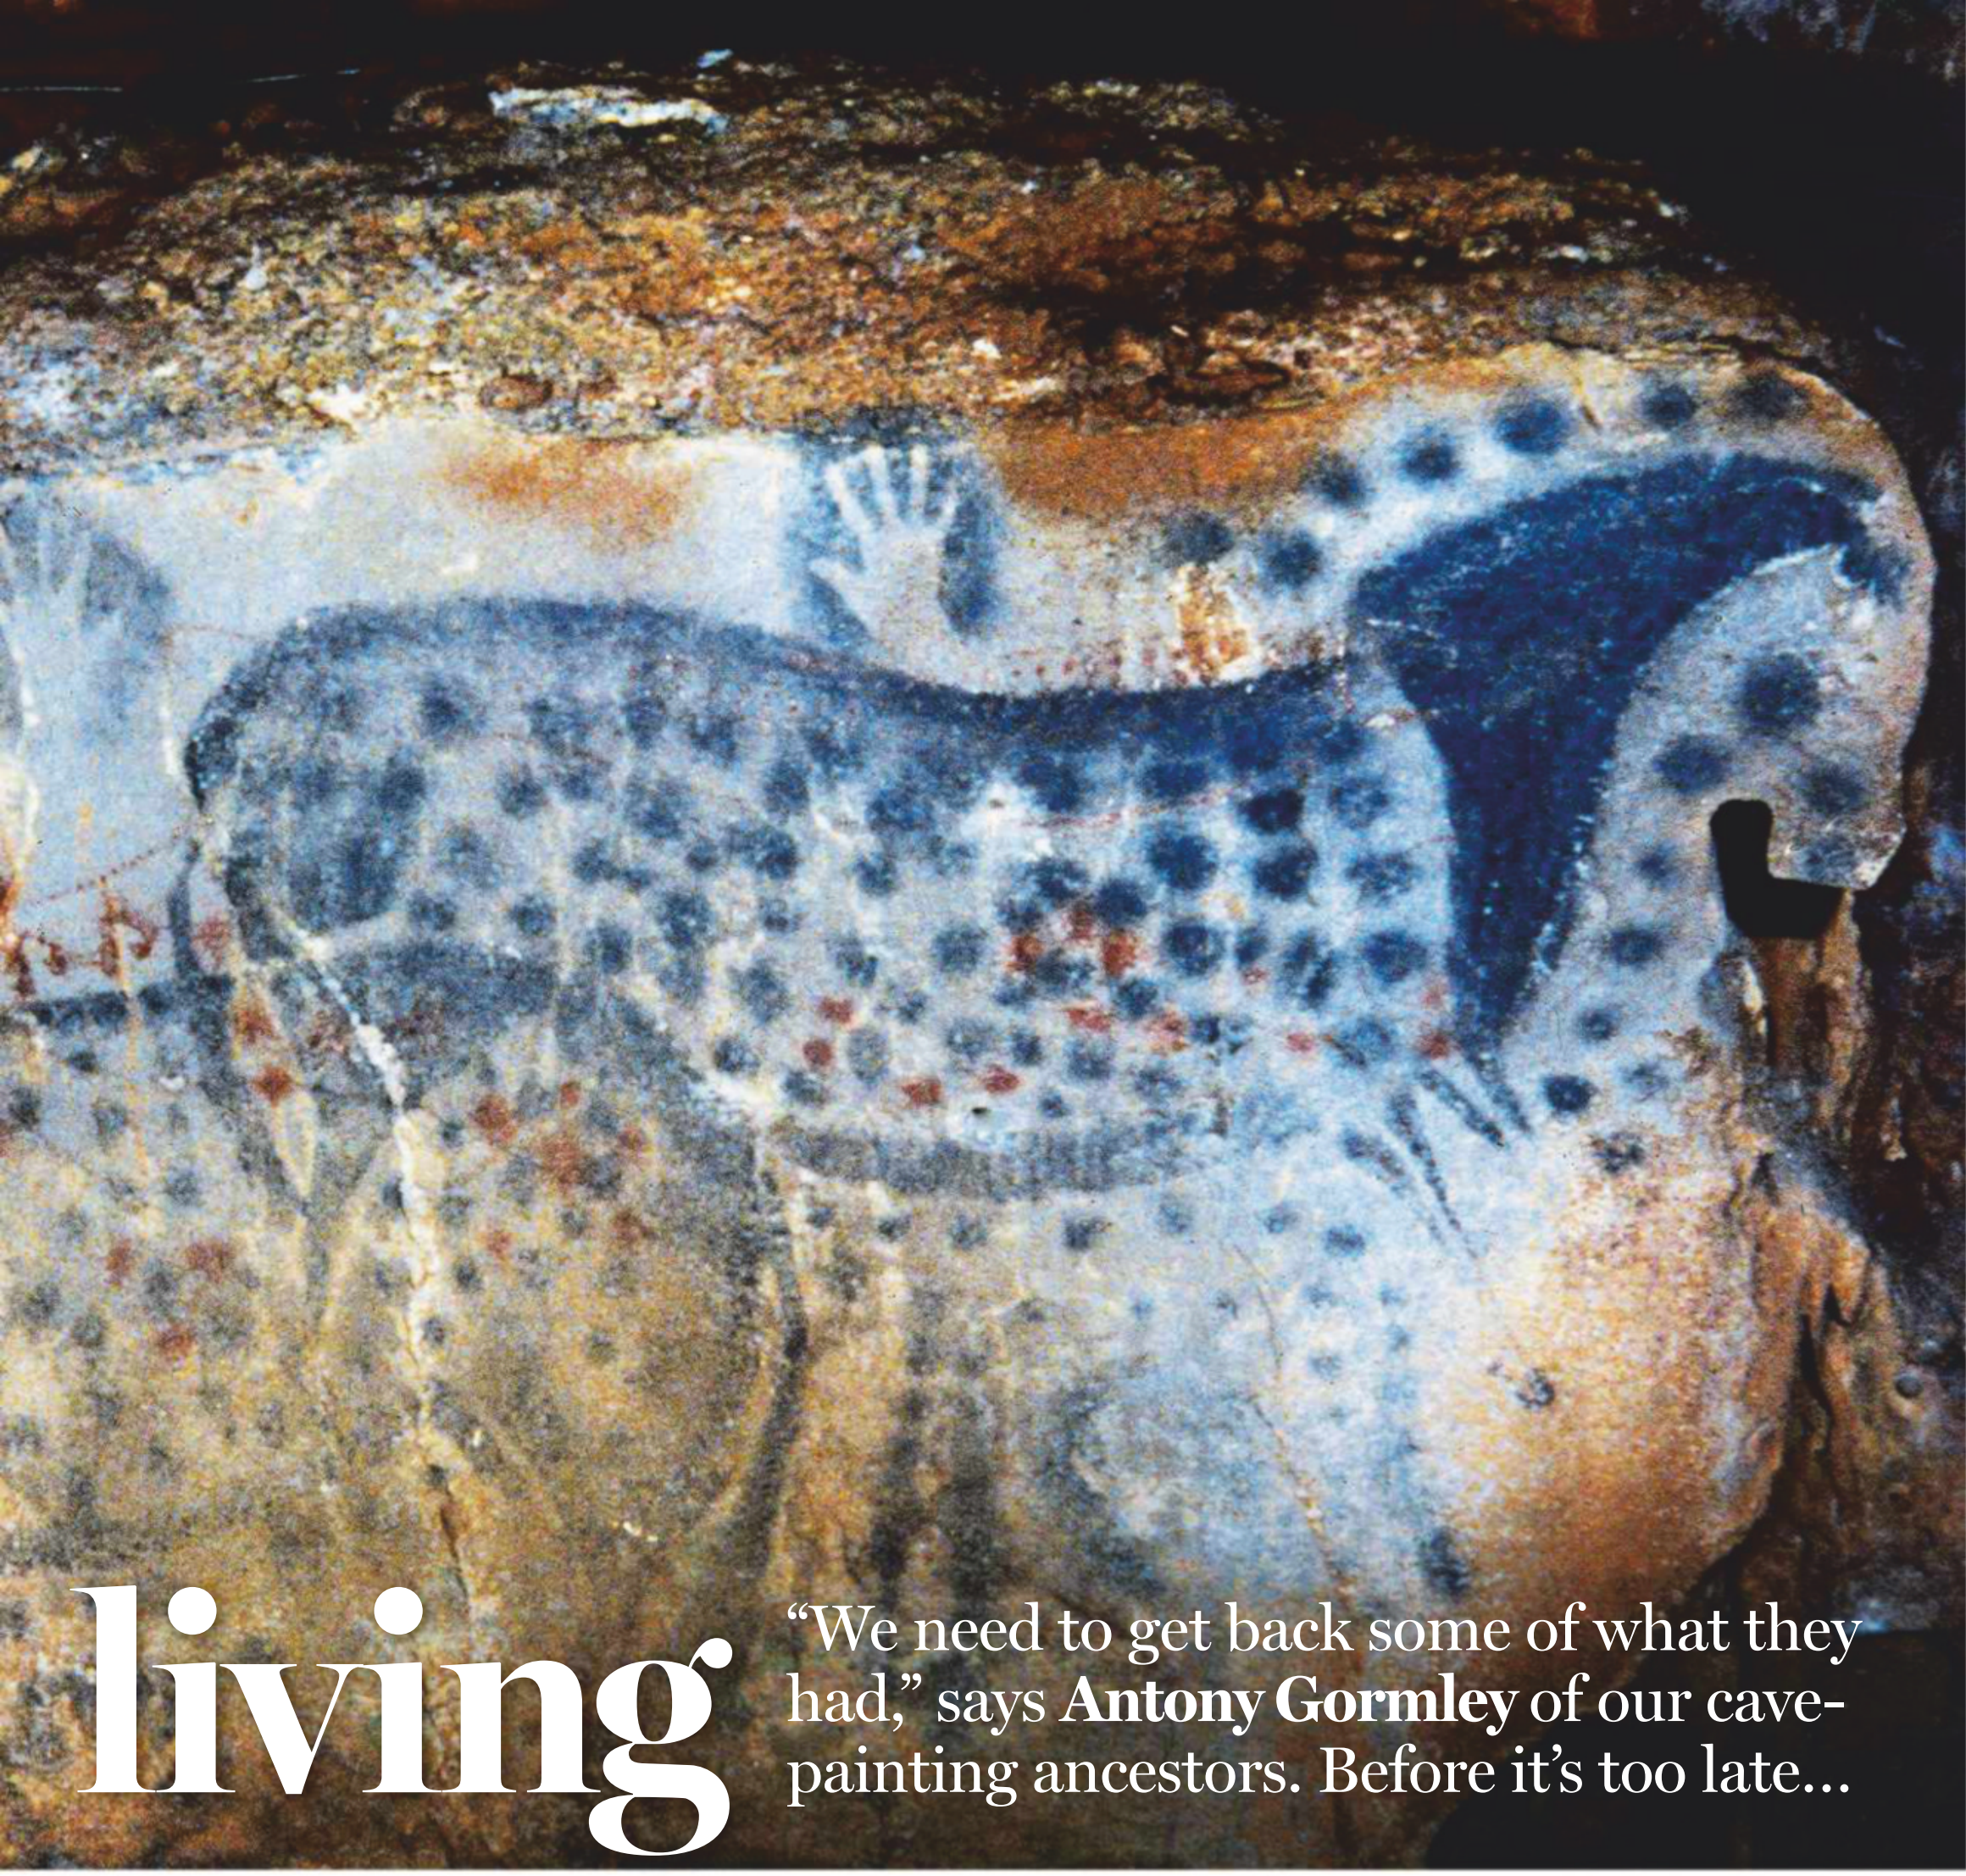

ANOTHER PLACE...
Gormley's art installation at Crosby Beach near Liverpool

Our ancestors may have had occasionally barbaric practices – "I'm sure they ate each other, that's a natural part of our story" – but they were striving to explain and record their place in the world. "Life in the interglacial period, between 40 and 10,000 years ago, was a real struggle," Gormley says. "They were living off herds of wild animals, responding to the receding ice by going up the river valleys in the mountain areas and yet, at the same time, they were making this art and it was an important part of their survival tool kit."

Gormley's own work also considers our place in the world. "They are not portraits," he says of the figures he creates. "They are saying: here is a human space in space at large. What is a human being and what is space?" He finds the same ambition in the repeated motifs of the hand seen in caves across the world, created by blowing mouthfuls of charcoal onto an outstretched palm. "The handprints are so amazing because obviously they are all made by individuals at a particular time in a particular moment, yet they are universal. They talk about being now. Here is this vessel that contains consciousness, that can reflect on its own existence."

Thirty-eight years ago sites like Font-de-living

"We need to get back some of what they had," says Antony Gormley of our cave-painting ancestors. Before it's too late...

Gaume were thought to be the earliest examples of human art. They weren't; in Indonesia, Gormley is shown a painting of a pig that is over 40,000 years old. But age "is just a numbers game," says Gormley: what really matters is what we can learn from ancestors who lived and worked within rather than against nature. "We need to get back some of what they had, that feeling of how much humans belong to all life forms. Digitalised urban life means we have lost the excitement of the sting of driving rain on our skin. We have lost the experience of being alive."

Something like that way of living still exists in the Kimberley wilderness of Western Australia, where Gormley found Aboriginal people who use cave and wall art to locate their place within nature. "It is a culture that understands time, space and human interactivity with the elemental better than any other. It has a respect for and understanding of the landscape, and also the stars of the heavens, in a way that is both scientific and mythical and imaginative."

For Gormley, talking to the dispossessed and marginalised Aboriginals was the hardest part of making the film. "Australia is among the most racist countries in the world," he believes. "The attitude of many white Australians to the indigenous population is simply appalling and it's particularly painful at a time when, actually, they have much to teach us. If we can't protect them or the unbelievably light-footed inhabitants of the Amazon basin, who are our brothers and sisters, if we can't protect our own kind, what chance have we to protect nature?"

Despite that, Gormley claims to be an optimist. "I believe in life. Maybe our species won't last that long. But if we do become the agents of the destruction of all living things on this planet, there are forms of life that we can't even imagine at the moment."

What might those new species think when they discover, like Gormley with his torch in the caves of Font-de-Gaume, a rusting Angel of the North beside a long-grassed over A1?

"I think they might ask what the hell was this strange civilisation that made industrial fossils?" says Gormley, "and was it aware of its own demise before it happened?"

My top dogs

Sara Cox, Alan Carr and Jilly Cooper tell us what their pooches mean to them

SARA COX

ON HER MALTESE, BEANO AND DOLLY

I don't really trust people who don't like dogs. We always had dogs on the farm I grew up on near Bolton. One of my favourites was a gorgeous Lakeland terrier called Benji, who loved chasing ice-cream vans and fighting, so by the time he died he had one ear and one goolie.

My family had lots of rescue dogs. My mum was good friends with the lady at the local RSPCA. Every time our family dog died, my mum would get a phone call saying, "Oh Jackie, we've got a dog being put down first thing if it doesn't get a home" and she'd go and get it. We always wanted a puppy, of course, but we also got another middle-aged grey mongrel. We loved them all.

Dogs were new to my husband Ben [Cyzer], but he's got used to them now as we've got two Maltese called Beano and Dolly. I needed dogs that would be small, not shed too much and that I can take with me into the office. They're the family dogs, but they're really mine.

'Dogs are good for teaching children the circle of life'

We got Beano from a fantastic breeder in Yorkshire who competes at Crufts, so we knew we could get a healthy pup. We went back three years later to get Dolly from another litter. Our kids [Lola, Renee and Isaac] think they picked the dogs' names, but they don't know they were steered away from idiotic ones.

WHEN THE CHILDREN were tiny, we had a big Basset Hound called Snoop, who loved nothing more than lying in the drop zone of the highchair, waiting for scraps. We lost him in 2005 at the age of 13. He was put down as he lay in the sunshine under the trees, being cuddled by me and my husband. It absolutely broke our hearts. His ashes are now in a box in the front room – he used to be in the pantry, but I was a bit worried he'd end up in some granola, so bless him, he's on the fireplace now. Animals are good for teaching children about the circle of life.

Life is enhanced so much by dogs. When your kids get to an age where they don't want to cuddle you as much and you have to force them into a judo hold to get affection, you've got dogs for that! Also, British people are so stiff-upper-lip, so to "coochie-coo" your dog is a real outlet for that, to be able to pour all that love and affection into your dog.

ON HIS IRISH SETTERS, BEV AND JOYCE

I know you shouldn't give dogs as presents, but Bev was a birthday present and Joyce was a Christmas present. They're the best presents I've ever had. My partner Paul [Drayton, now his husband] gave me Bev after we'd only been going out for a year. I was like, "Oh, OK! This is pretty serious, then..." So it's a good job we're still together or it would have been like Kramer versus Kramer. He told me to close my eyes and I heard the pitter patter of puppy feet.

Bev got her name because she looked a bit like a friend we have called Bev, who has lovely flowing ginger hair. Bev the dog is beautiful, with eyes to die for, so it's a compliment. She's getting lazier and doesn't want to go for her second walk of the day. I hate seeing her like that.

Before Bev and Joyce, I could be hungover and in bed all day ordering pizza and watching movies, but Setters need so much exercise that now I'm out and about, and I've joined the National Trust. You know when people who have children move house because they want to live near the best schools? I'm like that with dogs – I know where the nearest field is, when the park is open, the best National Trust property. But in winter I do give them evil looks when it's hailing and raining and I've got a bag of dog poo in my hand because I can't find a bin.

It's all worth it, though. Setters have this bad reputation for being stupid and dizzy – and they can be, a little bit – but they have this emotional intelligence. A few years back my agent died and I was in absolute bits in the morning, but not once did they bother me for a walk. They knew I was upset and they gave me my space.

THE DOGS HAVE such different personalities. Joyce is introverted, and if there's a party going on then she'll be in the corner, whereas Bev's very boisterous and greedy. At one party we had, Bev ended up nicking Catherine Tate's tuna steak.

We don't have any rules about where they sleep. Along with my rescue dog, Tuppence, they're all on the bed. We had some friends for Christmas and on Christmas morning their child came into our bedroom and said, "Father Christmas has been! And Alan, why have you got three dogs on top of you?" I can't get them off the bed, and I'm not sure I really want to.

JILLY COOPER

ON HER GREYHOUNDS, BLUEBELL AND FEATHER

The first time I saw my mother cry was one day when I came home from school and she said, "Jamie's had to be put down, darling." This was our divine Scottie, and I was so shocked by the crying. Then we had a gorgeous golden retriever called Simmy, and he was incredibly naughty. He used to disappear for about three days. One day I was walking down the high street and there was Simmy on a blue lead being led along by a little boy who had adopted him.

Dogs have provided levity, joy and comfort in my life. When my darling husband Leo died after he'd had Parkinson's for 13 years – an absolute horror – our two greyhounds were so wonderful, and Bluebell moved into my bed. She takes up nine-tenths of it and I'm on the edge.

My dog Feather, who died in 2014, was an ex-racing greyhound who was rescued after being abandoned with a muzzle on for three weeks. When he came to live with me it was love at first sight and he was the most darling dog, he didn't bear any grudges against humans at all. On his grave I wrote, "Darling Feather, whose noble heart only failed because he gave so much of his away". Bluebell is a greyhound, too, but not as noble. She's absolutely charming, but a complete applause-junkie and a strokaholic, so if anyone comes to the house they have to stroke her and stroke her.

Greyhounds are heavenly, everyone should have one. For a geriatric like me they're wonderful, as they never knock you over, they slide past me like silk, and for a writer they're bliss because they'll happily sleep for hours and don't interrupt. They're very kind and so beautiful when they run.

'I talk to Bluebell... Living on my own is terribly lonely'
JILLY COOPER

I talk to Bluebell all the time and people say, "Who are you talking to?" I'm lucky because my children are nearby, but living on my own is terribly lonely and having my dog immediately cheers me up. Instead of getting married again, one ought to get a dog. If you're lonely and you go out walking dogs, you meet like-minded people. It's also lovely that at quite a lot of funerals I've been to recently, the dog has come into the church and sat there being comforting. There's that lovely JR Ackerly quote, "The dog only has one aim in life... to bestow its heart".

I do feel a bit sorry for people who don't like dogs. I don't like people who don't like them. It's awfully shaming to say that, I try not to feel that way – but I do.

Fred and Rose West: the Real Story with Trevor McDonald Thursday 9.00pm ITV

Journalist Howard Sounes reflects on covering the Fred and Rose West murders, 25 years on

HOUSE OF HORRORS
Main picture: Police remove evidence from 25 Cromwell Street during their 1994 search. Left: Fred and Rose West

On a slow news day 25 years ago, when I was a 20-something reporter on the Daily Mirror, I received the sort of tip-off call that journalists dream of. The phone call changed my life.

The caller reminded me of a murder investigation in Gloucester. The police were looking for 16-year-old Heather West, missing since 1987. Her remains had just been found in the garden of her parents’ house, her father had been charged with the killing and in recent days more human remains had been discovered, making this more than a domestic murder, if not yet a national sensation.

I was told that the story was far bigger. Odd-job man Fred West had confessed to murdering not only his daughter but a very large number of women and girls, and 25 Cromwell Street was a veritable charnel house. There were five victims in the cellar, one under the extension and three in the garden, more elsewhere. The final total would be 12. I scribbled down this information, amazed by what I heard.

In that instant West became one of the worst serial killers in British criminal history. And there was another dimension that made this story highly unusual, if not unique – the police believed that his wife was involved, although she was denying it. Amazingly, Fred and Rose West had been murdering in the middle of an English city since the 1970s: abducting, raping and torturing young women and girls, whom they then killed, dismembered and buried in their house, all under the cover of family life.

We ran the story on the front of the Sunday Mirror that weekend, giving the case the name it would come to be known by: the House of Horrors. I then drove from London to Gloucester to find Cromwell Street thronged with press and public, so many people that the police had erected crowd barriers. From that day I worked on the case constantly, covering Fred West’s suicide while on remand in prison on New Year’s Day 1995, and Rose West’s trial that autumn, ending in her conviction on ten counts of murder.

To mark the 25th anniversary of the start of the police investigation (police began searching the house on 24 February 1994) I have worked on a new documentary with Trevor McDonald.

One of his interviewees is Jayne Hamer, who lodged at 25 Cromwell Street as a teenager in 1976–77. Unknown to her at the time, the Wests were killing girls her age, including lodgers, so she was in peril. Jayne’s time at number 25 was disturbing, as she describes: “I heard screaming in the middle of the night, ‘Stop it, Daddy. Stop it, Daddy. Please stop it, Daddy’. It sounded like one of the children.”

‘The human cost of the Wests’ crimes is immense and lasting’
HOWARD SOUNES

These screams seemed to emanate from the cellar. On another occasion Fred West took Jayne down into the cellar. “I sometimes think that being shown the cellar meant maybe I was going to be next…” Luckily Jayne left soon afterwards. The following year a fellow lodger was murdered and buried in the cellar. “I got away at the right time,” she says now.

The human cost of the Wests’ crimes is immense and lasting. The sister of one girl says she has tried to forgive Mrs West, so she isn’t herself destroyed by rage; others remain understandably angry.

Today, I find the story darker and more disturbing than ever; I realise that significant mysteries remain.

How much was Rose West involved, for example? That is a central question in our film. Many people may assume that Fred was in charge. Rose was only 15 when they met; Fred was 27 and had already killed. Yet we show that in fact Rose was often the dominant partner. It was Rose who violently beat the children, and it was Rose who seems to have taken the lead in sexual assaults. Was she the driving force in the murders? To this day she denies it all.

I’m sure that there are more victims, too – girls like 15-year-old Mary Bastholm, who went missing from a Gloucester bus stop in 1968. Fred West knew Mary, and her family believe he probably killed her. Wherever Fred buried Mary, her remains have still not been found. One day they might be, and I fear that there may be other victims with her.

Twenty-five years on, the West case remains one of the most disturbing and mysterious murder stories in the annals of British crime.

THE PARKERS

Our hidden heartache

Gogglebox stars Steph and Dom Parker have a son with severe epilepsy – but now cannabis oil has given them hope

As fans of Gogglebox know, Dom and Steph Parker are more than familiar with the premise of inviting television cameras into their home. Over the years, viewers have seen no shortage of intimate footage of the husband-and-wife duo, a charismatic pair whose larger-than-life personalities give the clear impression that, in Steph's words, they "live a very privileged life without a care in the world".

Their latest TV venture shows that assumption to be far from the truth: this time, the cameras reveal a different slice of family life.

The focus is on the couple's 18-year-old son, Max, who from infancy has had a severe form of epilepsy that can see him experiencing up to 130 seizures a day. The effect on his developing brain has left him with a mental age of five, and alongside the daily distress the couple endure in witnessing their son's regular fits, they must cope with the knowledge that these seizures bring with them a much higher risk of sudden death, particularly as he gets older.

To date, Max's condition is managed by a cocktail of powerful drugs – but those drugs come with equally powerful side effects. The couple's discomfort with what Dom calls these "mind-altering, powerful chemicals" has led them to contemplate giving their son cannabidiol (CBD) oil, a non-intoxicating marijuana extract credited with helping treat a host of medical problems from seizures to anxiety.

Last year, the Government announced that specialist doctors in the UK will legally be able to prescribe cannabis-derived medicinal products, and the documentary follows Steph and Dom as they explore whether medical marijuana will help alleviate their son's symptoms and give him a better quality of life.

The decision to open this journey to the documentary cameras wasn't easy, however. "It was a tough call," says Dom now. "We've spent many years trying to keep our private lives private for our kids, but the timing felt right. We felt that, hopefully, we could move this whole debate a little further, and based on that it would probably be wrong not to do it. But in some ways scratching old wounds was really quite harsh – we were reliving all the horrid, nasty bits of the last 18 years."

It's clear that it's not easy for either of them, particularly Steph, whose emotions sit close to the surface and who is frequently close to tears as she talks of the couple's battle to give their son the best quality of life they can. "We've had great sadness for a very long time, and great pain, and we carry that pain daily," she says. "We just hide it very well and hide it through laughter." Yet both firmly believe that exposing that pain is worth it to show the reality of what it's like living with severe epilepsy.

Says Dom: "When it comes to Max's quality of life, on the one hand it's fabulous because he's very loved, but on the other hand it's s and we don't shy away from showing that."

The life captured by the documentary is indeed sobering: the electrical activity in Max's head is so ferocious that he gets only around six or seven minutes an hour of respite. "He's pretty much seizing nonstop," says Dom. "It doesn't get much worse than this."

Now married for 20 years, the couple were relative newlyweds when Max came along and until he was four months old they had little reason to suspect anything was amiss with their first-born child.

Then, one evening, Dom noticed a funny movement as he changed his four-month-old son's nappy. "I thought, 'That's a bit odd,' then I saw the same thing again as I was undressing him the following evening," he recalls.

Concerned, he and Steph took Max to the doctor, who, after a series of tests, confirmed ▷

◁ that he was suffering from infantile spasms. Over time, these progressed into frequent and violent seizures that had a catastrophic effect on Max's growing brain: as well as the distress of observing the fits, the couple also had to confront the reality that his development would be severely stunted.

"You go through a period of mourning," Dom reflects. "That was probably the hardest time – you know you've lost the child that all your hopes and dreams were invested in, the son you were going to play football with, have that first pint with. All that goes straight out of the window." His wife puts it more bluntly when she says, "It feels like the death of the future of your child."

OVER THE YEARS the couple and their 15-year-old daughter, Honor, have become accustomed to the vast emotional ups and downs that Max's condition brings with it.

"It can change plans, end plans, ruin plans. It can change everything in a heartbeat," says Dom. Running parallel to that, meanwhile, has been the frustrating, on-going quest to find the best drugs to manage their son's condition: at the moment Max, who attends a special boarding school in term time, takes four different drugs. Yet none has completely managed to control his violent seizures.

"Every time you try a new drug, there's always a bit of hope that comes with it," says Dom. "We've been going through trying new drugs, dumping them, trying them again. Each time you hope that this is the one that will make a real difference."

'You've lost the child that all your dreams were invested in'

DOM PARKER

It's a quest that has taken on heightened urgency, for the risk of sudden death from epilepsy increases as Max approaches adulthood. "It means they have a big seizure and they never wake up," Dom explains. "We don't dwell on it, otherwise I'd end up blowing my head off or crying my eyes out. We've had to sort of mentally box it off. Our focus is on improving his quality of life."

And, after speaking to others in their position, they've encountered plenty of evidence that this is possible. One of the most moving parts of the documentary comes when the couple talk via Skype to Charlotte Caldwell, mother of 12-year-old Billy Caldwell, who was given the first ever NHS prescription for medical marijuana to help control his epilepsy. She tells the Parkers that while it's far from a cure, it helps to manage his condition. But it's not just her message but her interaction with Billy, who comes to hug his mother while she's chatting, that moves Steph to tears. "We've never had that from Max," she says.

Their meetings with other parents in their position and with medical specialists left them convinced that pharmaceutical-grade cannabis oil could help manage Max's condition. Yet despite new legislation allowing specialists to prescribe to suitable candidates, actually obtaining properly licensed CBD oil has proved impossible so far.

"Along with everyone else we assumed we could run along to the GP, say, 'Can we please have medical cannabis for our son?' and it would be a case of 'Here's your prescription. Nip along to the chemist and there you go,' " says Dom.

"But of course there have to be protocols – who can prescribe it and supply it, who is going to monitor it, who's going to pay for it – and setting up those protocols could take months, possibly years. It has to be done properly. It has to be prescribed with the supervision of a specialist in epilepsy and it has to be a proper, regulated pharmaceutical-grade product. So it's going to take time."

NONETHELESS, HE ADMITS the delay is frustrating. "Max has just gone back to school and we know we could get a call any day to say he died in the night," says Dom. "So knowing there is something out there that could improve his chances... it's hard. You have four pretty grim chemical drugs and you think a little pot of herb can't be worse than that horror show. So if one or two drops of oil could take these things out of his body – well then, that would make me the happiest man alive."

MEDICAL CANNABIS

In November, the Home Office changed the rules on cannabis-based medicines, allowing their use to treat some medical conditions.

- The exemptions include the treatment of children and adults like Max with severe forms of epilepsy, and adults with vomiting and nausea caused by chemotherapy.
- It was stressed that the prescriptions will only be issued by specialist hospital doctors (ie not GPs) and only when all other treatment options have failed. The NHS went on to say the changes would benefit only a "very small number of patients".
- In terms of epilepsy, one of the drugs available is Epidiolex. It has passed drug trials, and is in use, in America and is expected to be licensed in the UK very soon. However, hospital doctors have been told it can be prescribed while that official clearance is pending.
- Epidiolex, which has been developed by the British company GW Pharmaceuticals, uses a chemical substance known as CBD (cannabidiol) that is found in cannabis.
- The NHS says that online products professing to contain CBD oil risk being unsafe to use and would also be illegal to possess or supply.

‘I was raging to stop playing quiet wives’

Her storming performance as Cleopatra is bagging theatre awards, but Sophie Okonedo hates the limelight

THE RT INTERVIEW BY LIBBY PURVES

Sophie Okonedo breezes into the National Theatre in London, bright-eyed and lively from cycling in the cold from her temporary base. (Home is deep Sussex, but on a show day she stays close.) She is gathering her considerable energy for another three-and-a-half-hour marathon: her vivid, passionate interpretation of Shakespeare’s Cleopatra opposite Ralph Fiennes’s Antony, which has been lauded by critics, won her an Evening Standard Theatre Award and is sure to see her nominated for an Olivier.

Unlike some actors, she doesn’t have a set ritual before the show. “It changes. Sometimes I do loads of exercises, sometimes I’m all chatty. Depends on the mood. The only thing I do every time is a vocal warm-up holding the snake…”

Ah, the snakes. Simon Godwin’s production scorns the prudent use of a rubber one for the great queen’s suicide, and has enrolled four brightly coloured milk snakes called Pork Pie, Hondo, Larry and Little J (he replaced Mr Jangles, who proved “too self-willed”). Sophie adores them and before the show gently handles whichever is on duty. She hasn’t yet accidentally released one into the stalls. Which is a nice metaphor, since she also has a firm grip on the wriggling, unpredictable, complicated, gruelling and famously difficult role of Cleopatra.

She is mesmerising in Antony & Cleopatra: constantly changing, laughingly seductive, petulant, comic then violently furious. She embraces, rages, and chucks a messenger into the glimmering pool in her palace, then finally rises to stubborn proud queenliness as she puts the poisonous snake to her breast rather than be captured and mocked in Rome by some “squeaking boy”.

FORMIDABLE Sophie Okonedo and Anna Paquin star in Flack, coming soon to W

NATASJA FOURIE/ KINTZING

It may well win her that Olivier in April, to go with her Tony, Golden Globe and Drama Desk awards, the Oscar nomination for Hotel Rwanda (2004) and a string of Bafta nominations. Then there’s the OBE for services to drama nine years ago, now overtaken by a CBE in the New Year Honours. In a few weeks she’ll be back at the Palace to receive it: “You’re allowed to take three people, so my husband, daughter and my mother.”

She is the only child of a Jewish mother and a Nigerian father, who left when she was small. Her mother and grandparents were born here but the grandfather’s side came from Russia, driven out in the pogroms. “I didn’t know my father very well. My grandmother did go to synagogue, but my mother was just culturally Jewish, not religious at all – well, she married a black man in the 1960s! She’s brilliant, was a hairdresser, and is now a Pilates teacher.”

There wasn’t much money but plenty of books. “She didn’t tell me how to live my life. She was very free.” As for acting: “I can’t remember not wanting it. I saw a Royal Variety Show on TV and in a clip of Annie there was a black girl! That was it.”

Forty years ago, that glimpse of a black face in showbusiness was rare: a salutary reminder of how a visible diversity on stage and screen can unlock the talent in children of all ethnicities. After O-levels she took odd jobs “cleaning, markets, bits and pieces”, but joined the Royal Court youth groups at a lively time, with writers like Hanif Kureishi emerging, toppling old taboos. She made it to Rada, but “I hardly remember, it’s so long ago. But it was exciting. Different.”

She only became well known in her 30s with Hotel Rwanda. “But I’d been working for ten or 12 years, lots of theatre. I’ve never had to take another job.” And she’s become familiar to TV audiences with memorable turns as Nancy in Oliver Twist (2007) and Mrs Mandela (2010). She giggles when I list her awards, but brushes them aside.

The real highlight, she says, was in 2014 when she starred in A Raisin in the Sun on Broadway and Barack and Michelle Obama came to the dressing room in the interval. “I leapt when I saw her! Just wow! I got her book for Christmas, and when my daughter was growing up I played her a clip of that speech she made to a girls’ school. She’s wonderful, isn’t she?”

We enthuse a bit about the dignity, humour ▷

‘I don’t read reviews – why torture yourself?’

◁ and sense of the former First Lady, and I say what a beacon she is for women of colour. "Huh, for ALL women!" says Okonedo, with a Cleopatra flash of the eyes. Indeed.

At 50 years old, she has a challenging intelligence of her own, and a physically fit, barely suppressed energy. Thinking about Cleopatra, it was that violent energy that she tuned in to. "I watched a documentary on Nina Simone – how she goes from 0 to 60 and back again. I thought about women who do that switch. It's in the language, in the text, I'm not making it up. Cleopatra actually draws a knife! As it's modern dress I made a sort of storyboard of costumes... I was really allowed to contribute." I mention the wildest outfit of all, when Cleopatra is furiously drunk and hurtles around in a chaotic bright orange flamenco flouncy number. It was Sophie's idea.

"I gave the designer [Evie Gurney] a picture of Beyoncé from the Lemonade album, swinging a baseball bat. Just as an idea, but Evie made me the exact dress!" The fascination of Cleopatra, though, is that she is not only an irresistible mistress, but a queen who orders navies into battle, a dazzling figure in a barge whose beaten gold "burned on the water". She has royal dignity. "Yes. But I didn't want to make her western.

'This queen can roll around – she's not British!'

She's in the East. Their version of royalty isn't going to be ours, all proper. This queen can roll around! She's not British!"

Her ability to dial up furious energy has marked other parts. In 2017, she electrified West End audiences in Edward Albee's The Goat, as the wife of a man who suddenly declares he is emotionally and physically in love with a goat. It was the most electrically charged confrontation on any London stage for years. As the self-satisfied husband "explains", Okonedo rises to glorious rage and immaculately timed smashing of objects in their middle-class living room.

"I've had to play lots of quiet reliable wives, so of course I was raging to get out. Bust out! I loved doing that part! Such fun, plate-smashing every night." But that was a 90-minute show and Cleopatra is a marathon. "I am completely exhausted afterwards. It's finishing soon [19 January] and I have mixed feelings. In one way I'll be utterly bereft, but honestly I don't know if I could do it a week longer. Tomorrow's a two-show day, seven hours on stage. And it's emotionally all-encompassing."

She's glad now it was filmed for NT Live (Encore showings in February across the country) but found the stage cameras unnerving. Many actors do, though it's becoming unavoidable for big plays. "Really scary. If I did it again, I'd approach it in a different way, but I lost my bottle. Those cameras are right in your face. Usually on stage I have such a relationship with the audience, an energy you share with them and with the words, and the other actors. So you suddenly think what are those THINGS? I felt I froze. Maybe people won't notice, but I did."

On the other hand, living in Sussex, she understands that not everyone can travel, expensively, to London theatres so NT Live is a boon. "For my friends in Cornwall, too..."

For all the crackling energy of her performances, she comes across as deeply grounded, happy in country life with a husband from outside the business ("He's a builder"), and two stepchildren, one doing GCSEs and one planning travels. Her 21-year-old daughter is a personal trainer. She likes to retreat and gives few interviews.

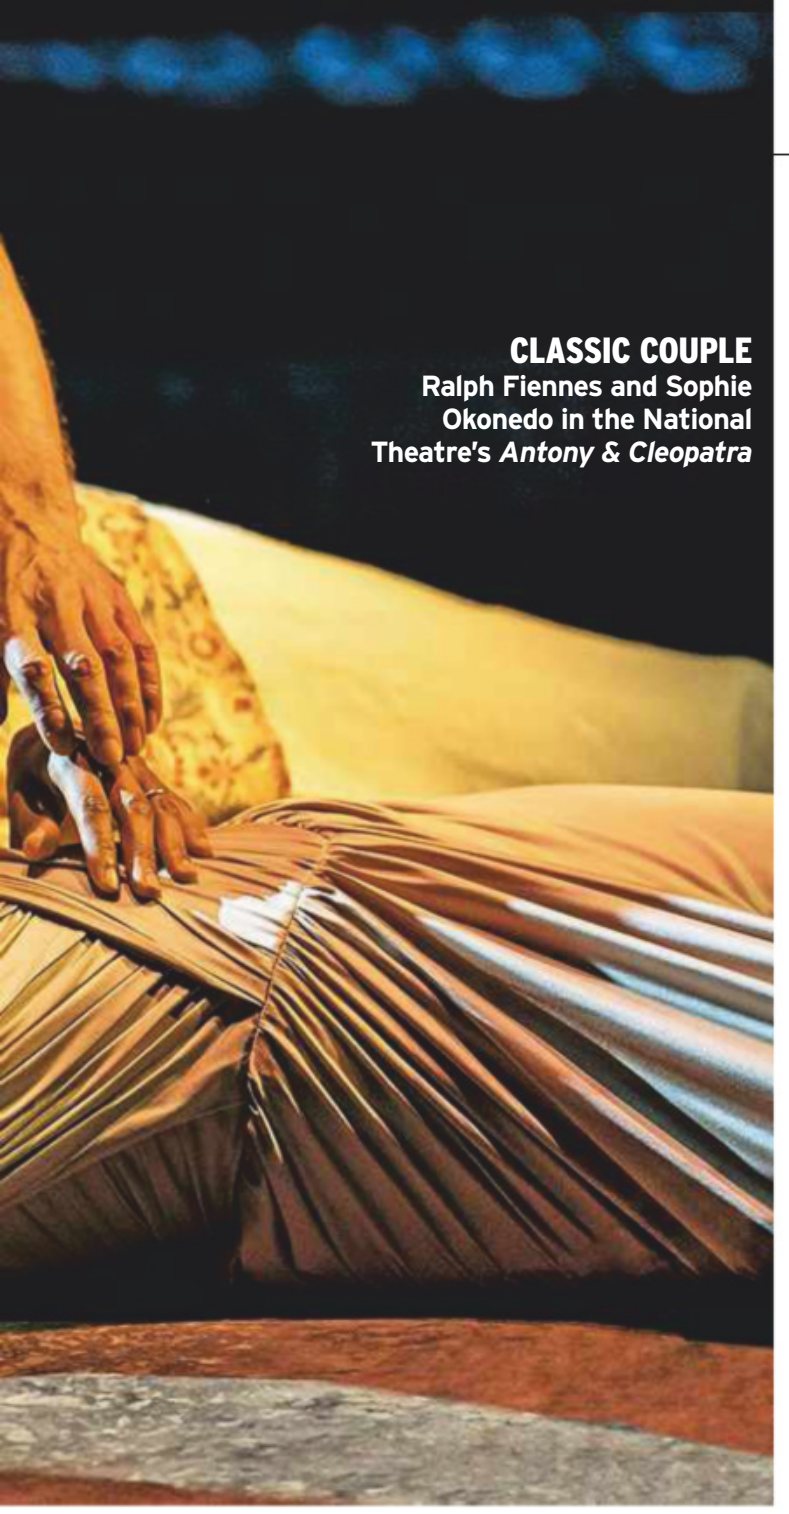

"I don't read reviews, even the good things, just not worth it. I have no skin on half the time, so why torture yourself? I am an older generation, so I don't engage in social media. Some of the young cast seem to be more thick-skinned. It's part of their upbringing. I don't have that. I'm just no good at it. And I don't really feel like after-parties. Maybe for 20 minutes, then home."

Certainly for all the successes, hers is not a name you find thrown around in tabloids, snapped at glitzy parties or speaking out on everything from Brexit to the state of modern theatre. She laughs. "Oh dear, I don't know how long I can keep that up, now that I'm better known. But I prefer to do the work, let that speak. I love going to the theatre but I don't like first nights, it's never the best show and I'm sort of at work, have to talk to people and say what I think. I'd rather sneak out. I often just come up to a matinee and go home for the evening."

After Cleopatra, her longing is for more Shakespeare. "In Troilus and Cressida at the National [in 1999] I suppose I was fine, but 20 years ago I didn't really get how much can happen within one line in Shakespeare. But for The Hollow Crown on TV [2016] I was Queen Margaret, and worked with the voice coach Jeannette Nelson. She unlocked the language. Oh…" Her deep breath is a gale of wonder. "It's so compacted, it's a revelation. There's something almost shamanistic about doing Shakespeare, which is why actors love it."

I MENTION THAT THERE'S now a far freer attitude to colour-blind casting, ever since Adrian Lester played Henry V. "Oh, Dominic Cooke at the Royal Court was doing colour-blind casting years ago. It wasn't something you even had to talk about. And in Shakespeare, who minds? There are ghosts, witches, spells, magic, mystery!"

In the age of gender-blind casting, might she unleash that lean chiselled energy on male roles – Macbeth, Othello, Lear? "Oh yes! I'm not as well-read in Shakespeare as I should be. I keep asking Ralph [Fiennes] what to read next. I want a lifetime doing it. I love him so much."

Meanwhile, there is TV: this year an updated version of Lucy Kirkwood's global-political play Chimerica and a first series of Flack, a rather marvellous new comedy drama on W about the PR and reputation-management industry that hides scandals and creates feel-good stories for celebrities. All the deadly Okonedo savagery is called up to play Caroline the merciless amoral boss. "I loved it! Absolutely would do another series." Much to hope for, then. Good.

Flack starts on Thursday 21 February on W. The nominations for the Olivier Awards will be announced on 5 March. Read Libby Purves's Viewpoint: page 9

WIN A YEAR AT THE THEATRE

Your chance to judge the Olivier Awards 2020

EPIC THEATRE
Kyle Soller, Vanessa Redgrave and Samuel H Levine in The Inheritance

■ One RT reader can win a year's worth of free tickets to West End and other London theatres and be part of the theatre panel that decides the winners of the 2020 Olivier Awards.

■ Starting from mid-February 2019, the winner will join the awards judging panel and receive two free tickets (the best available) and a programme to all new West End productions in the running for an award (excludes opera or dance).

HOW TO ENTER

■ Write a 150-word review of a theatre production you've seen in the past year. Send it to us along with a piece of no more than 200 words telling us a little about yourself and why you deserve to be on the panel, plus a list of all the shows you've seen in the past 12 months. NB: The closing date is 8 February 2019.

■ Four readers will be shortlisted by RT and invited to London on 18 or 19 February 2019 for a brief interview at the Society of London Theatre (Solt). One winner will then be selected by Solt to join the theatre panel. The winner will be expected to commit to watching all proposed productions (about 100 over the year) and be invited to attend the awards ceremony at a central London venue in April 2020. Apart from tickets and programmes, the winner will not be reimbursed by Solt or RT for any expenses incurred. Competition rules are on page 157.

■ Looking for inspiration? Why not Get Into London Theatre by booking tickets for top West End shows at £10, £20, £30 or £40, via Official London Theatre's New Year Sale. Tickets available at officiallondontheatre.com/new-year-sale for performances up to 15 February 2019.

■ Post your entry, name, address, email and phone number to Oliviers Competition, Radio Times, Vineyard House, 44 Brook Green, London W6 7BT; or email it to feedback@radiotimes.com with "Oliviers Competition" in the subject line.

OUR YEAR IN THE FRONT ROW

Last year's entries were so strong that two RT winners were selected – Robert Lowe, a retired drama teacher, and Tracy Turner Jones, a short story writer and foster carer.

Robert Lowe "It has been an honour to see everything, and a joy to watch productions that I might not have chosen to go to and being blown away – like The Wider Earth at the Natural History Museum. What a range of emotions there has been, too. I laughed at Nine Night and sobbed at The Inheritance. The latter was probably the highlight due to its incredible cast and writing. It has been fascinating to see a wide range of subjects being explored and to see a real diversity in directors, actors and writers."

Tracy Turner Jones "The Inheritance wasn't the only show I loved, but it did set the bar very high early on and I was grateful to see it again at the end of the year. In between, there have been many wonderful plays, musicals and individual performances. I loved Nine Night, Hadestown, Humans and The Convert, to mention but a few. And it was a privilege to see Patsy Ferran's intense performance in Summer and Smoke, the fabulous Sharon D Clarke in Caroline, or Change and Ian McKellen's brilliant King Lear."

Rise of the nearly men

The Dragons and les Bleus have every incentive to aim high

Six Nations Rugby Union: France v Wales
Friday 7.25pm (kick-off 8pm) BBC1*, 7pm* 5 Live

It's not about the World Cup. Of course it's not. But then again, it's all about the World Cup. As rugby union's Six Nations Championship begins, all that matters is beating your next opponent and making the best possible show at European rugby's top tournament… knowing all the time that your team and your career will be judged by what happens in Japan at the other end of the year.

The Six Nations isn't a preparatory competition for the World Cup, perish the thought. But on the other hand, it just happens to be the most searching possible preparation for the Big One.

The Championship opens with a match between two teams that have consistently fallen short on the big stage: never quite climbing the trunk to reach the topmost fruit. France have been beaten finalists at the World Cup three times; Wales have been beaten semi-finalists twice.

'With awful injuries routine, strength in depth is everything'

But Wales are starting from a better place this year, having won their past nine matches. Warren Gatland, who has coached Wales since 2007 – leading them to the Six Nations title and the grand slam in both 2008 and 2012 – will be leaving his post to go home to New Zealand after the World Cup and wants, above all things, Wales to make a serious mark in his final tournament.

His team is in the middle of a horrendous injury crisis – his number 8, Taulupe Faletau, fractured his arm in October and then broke it again this month in his first game back. But that's modern rugby. Awful injuries are now a matter of routine. The brutal truth of this brutal game is that you can no longer build your team around individuals. Strength in depth is everything.

Do France have that? They have injuries, too, of course, and also a pretty dire recent record. Jacques Brunel, aged 65, was appointed coach in December 2017, after a string of disappointing results, but having come only fourth in 2018's Six Nations, France lost to Fiji for the first time in the autumn – at the Stade de France.

Brunel's squad has five newcomers: sometimes a drastic restart – chuck out the old, bring in the new – is the best tactic for a team in decline. It worked for Gareth Southgate and England at the football World Cup last year, after all. Perhaps Paul Willemse, 26, the South African-born lock qualifying for France by residency, can make a difference: he's 6ft 7in and 21 stone. And then there's 19-year-old fly half Romain Ntamack, the son of former French international Emile.

The thing about the French team is that you never know: despite their recent troubles, they have a tradition of inspiration. The most thrilling rugby match ever played was when France, written off by everybody, beat New Zealand at Twickenham in the 1999 World Cup semi-final.

These days Wales no longer believe that any season is a good one as long as it includes a victory over England. And with every four-year World Cup cycle, they're ready to take a really big step. It hasn't quite happened yet. But a win against France in Paris would be important, perhaps even essential, to taking that step and supplying the perfect finale for Gatland.

Each match starts anew and everything is possible; and yet each team is burdened by the past. Both France and Wales have been nearly-but-not-quiters since the World Cup was first played, in 1987. Is this the year to change all that?

A breath of fresh air

Melissa McCarthy defied Hollywood's idea of perfection and made her name playing "messy" women – but who's laughing now?

Long before Melissa McCarthy was collecting $12 million a year as the ninth highest-paid actress in the world – down from third place in 2015, when she earned $25 million, but still not too shabby – she was a boggle-eyed child in Plainfield, Illinois. Sitting too close to the television, she would marvel at comedy idols such as Madeline Kahn (a regular co-star in the films of Mel Brooks) and Gilda Radner (a star of Saturday Night Live). "They were these strange, flawed birds with this weirdness coming out of them," she says, her eyes positively twinkling. "They weren't coiffed and perfect. They could be a bit of a wreck. They were the butt of the joke… they made asses of themselves and you loved them for it."

Much the same could be said about McCarthy. The 48-year-old sitting before me in a London hotel suite, wearing a red-and-black leopard-print blouse and a warm smile, is a worthy successor to the women she admired. She has taken elements that are perceived by society as shortcomings – ungainliness and the sort of body shape that is entirely normal but rarely seen on the red carpet – and found in them some juicy comic capital. "What I've always been lucky enough to do" – she leans forward and says "knock on particle board" as she taps the coffee table – "is to play women who are complete messes."

Her latest character is one of the messiest yet. As the real-life literary forger Lee Israel in the comedy drama Can You Ever Forgive Me? (in cinemas from Friday 1 February), McCarthy is a half-sloshed, scowling misanthrope with a shaggy pageboy hairdo whose only friends are a cat and a homeless barfly (played by Richard E Grant).

When Israel's career as a biographer flounders, she begins mocking up letters from legendary wits such as Dorothy Parker and Noël Coward, selling them to New York book dealers for hundreds of dollars. As McCarthy points out, these fakes were actually works of skill and sensitivity. "Even Dorothy Parker, I feel, would have been, like, 'Keep my name on that! I wish I'd written it.'"

That wasn't the only thing that impressed McCarthy. "What I loved about Lee was that she was exactly who she was and she didn't care if you liked her. She had no flexibility about playing the game. There is a great lesson in that. Why isn't it enough just to be a good writer? Why do you have to be the show pony?"

Though Israel, who died in 2014, penned a brief memoir from which the film takes its title, there was very little material available to McCarthy about this prickly, private writer. What she found was an unexpected kinship.

"When I'm playing a character, I know how they take a drink of water or what they do with their hands. Whereas if you ask me to be myself, I can't even walk into a room. You should see me having my picture taken. The photographer is always like, 'Um, you're doing something weird with your feet.' I'm much more assured in character. It's like Lee: she lived vicariously through these people she imitated. We can both only do what we do if we stand behind someone else."

The film has brought McCarthy great reviews and a clutch of awards nominations – she is at last being treated as a performer of range and dexterity rather than merely a clown. But those who draw a distinction between Can You Ever Forgive Me? and star vehicles such as Identity Thief and Life of the Party are missing an important point: far from being a radical departure, Lee Israel is the latest in a long line of underestimated women McCarthy has played. "If I have a theme, it's only continued by her," she agrees.

McCarthy has been known to US television audiences for nearly 20 years: she was a perfectionist chef in Gilmore Girls, then one half of a couple who meet at Overeaters Anonymous in sitcom Mike & Molly. But it was her Oscar-nominated, scene-stealing turn in the 2011 hit Bridesmaids that transformed McCarthy from fun to phenomenon. A run of hits followed, the best of which – cop comedy The Heat, secret agent romp Spy and the underrated Ghostbusters remake – were made by Paul Feig, who announced after directing her in Bridesmaids: "I want to make Melissa McCarthy a star. That's where my focus is now." Job done, I'd say.

NOT BY THE BOOK
As biographer-turned-forger Lee Israel in Can You Ever Forgive Me?

Her arguably less successful films, such as The Boss and Tammy, have tended to be those directed by her husband, Ben Falcone, with whom she has two young daughters. (Falcone, an actor who pops up in all his wife's films, plays an unscrupulous book dealer in Can You Ever Forgive Me?) But whatever her role – even when she switched gender as the former White House press secretary Sean Spicer on Saturday Night Live – McCarthy is on a one-woman mission to make audiences rejoice in every human foible.

'If you ask me to be myself, I can't even walk into a room'

"I want all the mess and all the flaws. I'm not skilled enough to do anything else. When you read a script, the guy is always described in strong terms: 'compulsive, driven, agitated'. Then the woman is 'pleasant and blonde'. I can't play that." Tilting her head and clasping her hands, she slips into Supportive Wife mode: "'Oh, Tom! Oh, Jack! Oh, Tim!' That stuff's just not in my skill set. I don't know how to disappointedly recite men's names." RYAN GILBEY

P Son of Saul ★★★★★
Saturday 9.00pm BBC4

War, like never before

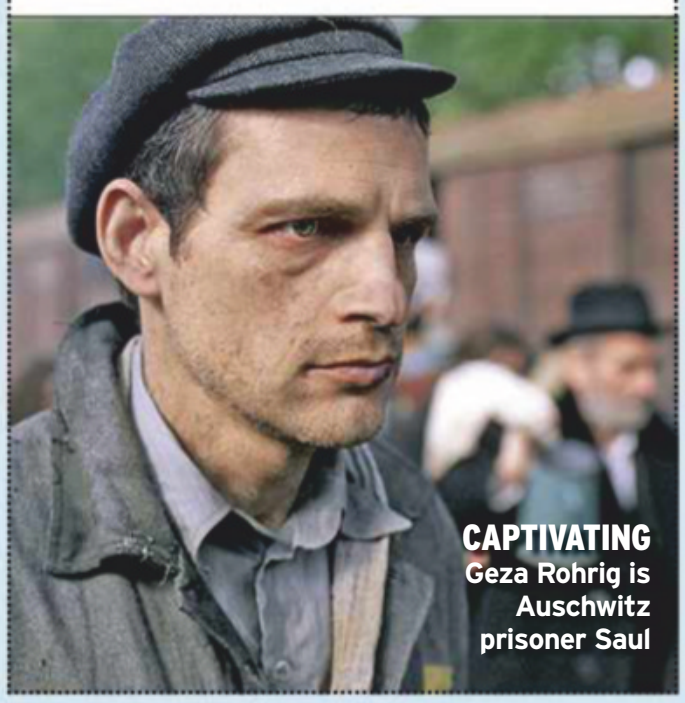

Laughs are historically thin on the ground come the Oscar category of best foreign-language film. Presenting at the 88th Academy Awards in 2016, South Korean actor Lee Byung-hun did his best not to betray levity when assuring the patrons of the Dolby Theatre that "all of this year's films take place on battlefields: an outpost in Afghanistan, a Nazi concentration camp, a conservative Turkish village, the Amazon rainforest and the Middle East during World War I".

The worthy winner was the Hungarian entry Son of Saul, the astonishing feature debut of young director Laszlo Nemes, set over a day-and-a-half in the life – if you can call it living – of a prisoner at Auschwitz, spared death as a forced member of the Sonderkommando (special work unit) and identified by a red cross painted on the back of his jacket. Played with darting eyes and a heavy heart by poet and actor Geza Rohrig in a feat of total immersion, Saul must divest less privileged prisoners of valuables and then haul their corpses out of the gas chambers before scrubbing them, ready for the next intake.

As the hunched, emaciated Saul grasps at hope by making it his quest to give a gassed boy a Jewish burial (difficult when the only Rabbi has lost his faith), he also plays go-between in an uprising attempt.

The carefully created mood exists on a knife edge, but we find ourselves sucked into the grim routines and risks. This is a film that begs to be seen, if you're of stout heart. As the director's camera cleaves to Saul's head and shoulders – occasionally pulling back to a wider shot, especially at the river where human ashes are dumped – you feel instinctively scared for your own soul.

While a triumph for Hungary, this is a truly international film: the voices you hear are German, Hungarian, Polish, Yiddish, Russian, Slovak, Czech and Greek. Confusion reigns. But Saul's goal is universal: to bring decency to a world gone mad.

FILM OF THE DAY

Close Encounters of the Third Kind ★★★★★
11.45am-2.30pm C5 PG

SCI-FI Held to the bosom of the generation who first saw it in the late 1970s (as I did), and as thrilling and momentous today as it felt then, Steven Spielberg's wide-eyed, open-minded upward gaze into the starlit sky is so much more than a flying-saucer film with a Pinocchio complex. Richard Dreyfuss, so essential to the warmth of Jaws for Spielberg, takes top billing as the Indiana electrician who scares the life out of his family when he witnesses a UFO and has visions of a mysterious, mountainous shape. Spielberg movingly portrays the unfolding domestic disintegration, and my heart still aches thinking about the frightened children's faces when Dreyfuss re-creates the strange shape in mashed potato. They watch in silent bafflement and concern, before he suddenly snaps out of his reverie. The Devil's Tower climax, with all the lights, musical notes and skinny visitors, feels like only part of a modern masterpiece. (US 1977/1998, edited for language, HD)

EVENING

Out of Africa ★★★★
5.50-9.00pm Paramount Network PG

DRAMA Or "Afreeka" as Meryl Streep would have it, using a bizarre Danish accent to portray awkward, free-spirited writer and farmer Karen Blixen. This is a beautifully filmed movie, with director Sydney Pollack propelling the camera across a lush Kenyan landscape that teems with all manner of exotic beasts. The other exotic beasts – Streep, Klaus Maria Brandauer as her husband and Robert Redford as her adventurer lover – overact on a level to match the magnificence of the backdrop, but with this cast it is still eminently watchable stuff. What the movie loses in emotional realism, it gains in sheer epic audacity. SH (US 1985, may be edited for violence)

The Young Mr Pitt ★★★★
6.20-8.20pm Talking Pictures TV U

BIOPIC This underrated film was designed to show how Britain would always triumph over tyranny providing there was a born war leader at the helm. Yet director Carol Reed's account of how Pitt the Younger simultaneously resisted domestic disquiet and tamed Napoleon rises far above its flag-waving objectives. Leading a fine cast, Robert Donat is a model of embattled dignity, while Robert Morley is suitably flamboyant as Charles James Fox. DP (UK 1942, BW)

P xXx: Return of Xander Cage ★
9.00-11.05pm C4 12

ACTION After his debut in 2002, Vin Diesel's high-flying government agent returns after years in hiding to find a device that is turning satellites into deadly weapons. Macho exploitation is the order of the day in a film that is breathtakingly bad. Diesel glares through proceedings, while talented performers such as Toni Collette and Donnie Yen are reduced to clichés. These types of films are engineered for sequels, but it's hard to think of anyone who would want to see more of this tosh. JL (US 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

Night Will Fall ★★★★
9.00-10.20pm More4 15

DOCUMENTARY Once Allied troops uncovered the ghastly secrets of the concentration camps at the end of the Second World War, the Supreme Allied Command was keen to make a record of the atrocities to ensure that such inhumanity was never repeated. André Singer reveals in this compelling documentary (showing on the eve of Holocaust Memorial Day) that diplomatic concerns soon impinged upon the production and the project was abandoned. But the survivors and liberators interviewed here have never forgotten their experiences, and this account of a dark episode in history stands as a chillingly eloquent tribute. DP (UK/Ger/Fr/US/Is 2014, violence, BW/col, HD)

P The Childhood of a Leader ★★★
9.00-11.15pm AMC (Sky 192, BT 332) 12

THRILLER Set at the end of the First World War, this challenging psychodrama chronicles the childhood experiences of a future dictator. The father (Liam Cunningham) is always busy with work as a political aide, leaving his wife (Bérénice Bejo) to discipline their seven-year-old son (Tom Sweet). But, as time passes, the boy becomes increasingly wilful and defiant. This is where the film is most effective, with Sweet providing a disquieting performance as the little sociopath at the centre of the story. Actor-turned-director Brady Corbet sets a pace that may be too deliberate for some viewers, but his bold film still draws the viewer in. SC (US/Can/Fr/Swe/Bel/UK 2015, sexual references)

LATE NIGHT

Bros: After the Screaming Stops
★★★ 10.45pm-12.15am BBC2 15

DOCUMENTARY The world of rock and pop music is stuffed with tales of broken dreams and stunted careers, but this revealing, hilarious and touching film about late-80s British boy band Bros has more going for it than just raking over the coals. We are reacquainted with the Goss twins, drummer Luke and singer Matt, as they attempt to put aside their differences to perform a reunion concert at London's O2. The heady days of Brosmania are covered, but co-directors Joe Pearlman and David Soutar are more interested in the human beings behind the tabloid headlines. The journey to restore their relationship is the soul of the film, leaving the climactic concert as a rousing coda. JA (UK 2017, swearing, HD)

Rocky ★★★★
10.45pm-1.00am ITV PG

DRAMA Dusting down the classic Hollywood story of the little man winning big, this triple-Oscar-winning boxing tale is shot through with genuine impassioned commitment. Sly Stallone is highly convincing in a star-making turn as the mumbling Philadelphia no-hoper who is given a crack at the heavyweight champion of the world, Apollo Creed (Carl Weathers, by way of Muhammad Ali). Sly also wrote the script and was rewarded with Oscar nominations for both acting and writing. JM (US 1976, edited for violence, language, HD)

All Good Things ★★
12.10-1.45am BBC1 15

MYSTERY After the success of his documentary Capturing the Friedmans, director Andrew Jarecki came unstuck with this adaptation of the real-life case of Robert Durst, who was suspected of causing his wife's disappearance. The story chronicles the twisted tale of a New Yorker who appears to find consolation in a cosy marriage after a tormented childhood. Ryan Gosling gives his all as the damaged antihero, but this was a troubled shoot and that's reflected in the movie's muddled structure. DP (US 2010, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

P Me before You ★★★

9.00--11.10pm C5 12

ROMANTIC DRAMA With the final season of Game of Thrones burning up the TV schedules in April, its "Mother of Dragons" (the irrepressible Emilia Clarke) will have more time on her hands to pick and choose film roles. After Terminator Genisys and before Solo: a Star Wars Story, she tried her hand at a sort-of weepie. Me before You, based on the novel by Jojo Moyes, casts Clarke as a bubbly, working-class Eliza Doolittle who applies for the job of providing "care and companionship" to a depressed quadriplegic ex-banker (Sam Claflin) with an attitude. After a chilly start, the ill-matched couple bond over subtitled films and Mozart, and Moyes teases warm humour from the situation, over which a shadow unexpectedly descends. Theatre director Thea Sharrock enjoys the wide-open spaces of locations in Pembroke, Bucks and Mallorca, and not a single emotional beat is left wanting by Craig Armstrong's score. Mushy in places but leavened by mordant wit.

DAYTIME

Gentlemen Prefer Blondes ★★★★

9.35-11.25am More4 U

MUSICAL Marilyn Monroe's star was well and truly rising when she portrayed author Anita Loos's gold-digging Lorelei Lee in this scintillating musical. It's directed by Howard Hawks, who had a clever understanding of how to exploit Monroe's star power – he'd previously directed her in Monkey Business. Monroe shines in the superbly photographed and choreographed production numbers, most notably Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend. The movie opens with a scene that uses the sparkling Technicolor to best effect, as Monroe and co-star Jane Russell announce that they're just Two Little Girls from Little Rock, and it simply takes off from there. The men are underused – but who cares? This is the movie that consolidated Monroe's stardom and showcased her special talent to the full. TS (US 1953, HD)

From Russia with Love ★★★★★

2.15-4.30pm ITV PG

ADVENTURE Ian Fleming received a useful boost to his sales when President Kennedy listed From Russia with Love as one of his ten favourite books. It is also one of the most popular Bond movies and a terrific thriller in its own right, owing much to Alfred Hitchcock and Carol Reed's The Third Man in its marvellous atmosphere of foreign intrigue. Superbly shot on location in a pre-touristy Istanbul, and closely following Fleming's original story, the film has Sean Connery's spy duped into smuggling a top-secret communist decoding machine, plus blonde Russian diplomat Daniela Bianchi, from Turkey to the West via the Orient Express. Lotte Lenya is unforgettable as lesbian villain Rosa Klebb, and Robert Shaw is an impressive hitman. AT (UK 1963, may be edited for violence, sex scenes, HD)

EVENING

As Young as You Feel ★★★

6.00-7.40pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY This 20th Century-Fox movie is still relevant today and provides a marvellous vehicle for The Man Who Came to Dinner's Monty Woolley, here playing a 65-year-old print worker who refuses to go quietly when he is asked to retire. The acerbic tale is an early work by writer Paddy Chayefsky, who earned great acclaim in TV drama and went on to win Oscars for Marty, The Hospital and Network. The supporting cast is particularly fine, most notably Thelma Ritter and Constance Bennett, but pay attention to that scene-stealing contract blonde: a certain Marilyn Monroe in an early role. TS (US 1951, BW)

Mission: Impossible – Rogue Nation ★★★★

9.00-11.40pm Film4 12

ADVENTURE Dismantled by the CIA, the IMF (Impossible Missions Force) struggles to neutralise insidious global threat The Syndicate, in the fifth solidly satisfying episode of the spy franchise. Director Christopher McQuarrie balances the knowing sophistication and tongue-in-cheek fun with a keen eye and visual flair to keep the action pulse-pounding. Tom Cruise is once more the master of all he surveys whether agilely putting himself in harm's way or sending himself up as "the living manifestation of destiny". With ace support from villain Sean Harris, ersatz Bond girl Rebecca Ferguson and the usual IMF suspects, this sleek machine is a fast and furious delight. AJ (US 2015, some violence, HD)

The Boy in the Striped Pyjamas ★★★

10.30pm-12 midnight BBC2 12

DRAMA Childish innocence provides stark contrast to the darkest depravities of Nazism in this affecting adaptation of John Boyne's bestselling novel. The film follows Bruno (Asa Butterfield), an eight-year-old boy living in Berlin, who is uprooted with his family to the countryside when his Nazi officer father (David Thewlis) is promoted. Bruno mistakes the nearby concentration camp for a farm and, through the barbed wire, befriends another little boy (Jack Scanlon) wearing striped pyjamas. For both grown-ups and children, it's a morality tale that prompts more questions than answers. That's fine, as long as audiences are open to having the conversation. SP (UK/US 2008, violence, HD)

LATE NIGHT

P Timbuktu ★★★★

11.00pm-12.30am BBC4 12

DRAMA Set in 2012 when jihadists occupied the Malian city of the title, Timbuktu criss-crosses between different characters to expose the cruelty and absurdity of fundamentalist regimes. We meet a family of goat and cattle herders, local musicians, fishmongers and imams who are suddenly compelled to obey sharia laws that prohibit music, the playing of football, or being in a room with anyone of the opposite sex if he or she is not part of your family. But director Abderrahmane Sissako manages also to show a warm, surprisingly humorous touch. Seldom has a film about a subject as grim as this been so generous in its sympathy for both sides of the system. LF (Fr/Mauritania 2014, some violence, swearing, HD)

Dream House ★★★

11.35pm-1.00am BBC1 15

MYSTERY A great deal of negative energy swirled around this haunted-house horror on release in 2011, when talented Irish director, Jim Sheridan (In the Name of the Father, In America), tried to have his name removed after rows with the studio. But strip that away and you're left with an entertaining enough yuppie nightmare. Daniel Craig and Rachel Weisz escape New York with their adorable daughters to a rural idyll where he intends to write. Inevitably, a mysterious figure skulks outside and they find something in the attic. There's quality support from Naomi Watts and Elias Koteas, and enough jumps and surprises to keep you interested. And, hey, it's got Daniel Craig in it! AC (US 2011, violence, swearing, HD)

P Promised Land ★★★

12.15-2.10am C4 15

DRAMA This even-handed fictional tale about an energy corporation buying up farmland is as gently paced as the David-and-Goliath fable Local Hero. Matt Damon and Frances McDormand are the slick company reps who arrive in a rural Pennsylvania community to harvest signatures allowing fracking for natural gas. Difficult questions about its ecological impact come from local retired engineer Hal Holbrook, before eco-warrior John Krasinski whips up the townsfolk into a threatened revolt. The material is deftly handled by director Gus Van Sant, who unashamedly hymns the rolling American landscape. AC (US/UAE 2012, swearing, HD)

GREAT RAIL JOURNEYS

VIETNAM, CAMBODIA & THE MEKONG DELTA
18 DAYS FROM £2,995

From the modern metropolis of Ho Chi Minh City to the ancient kingdom of Angkor Wat, the spectacular natural beauty of Halong Bay, to the vibrant waterways of the Mekong Delta, there are many contrasts on our rail adventure of Vietnam and Cambodia.

ITINERARY

Days 1-2. To Hanoi. We depart London on an overnight flight direct to Hanoi, Vietnam's bustling capital, arriving on Day 2. In the afternoon we begin our sightseeing tour of the city, with a traditional cyclo ride to Hanoi's Old Quarter.

Days 3-4. Halong Bay and Hue. We continue exploring Hanoi before we transfer to the iconic Halong Bay. Here we begin one of the highlights of the tour as we board our luxury junk for an overnight cruise. On Day 4, we visit the fascinating Cua Van floating fishing village before returning to Hanoi and boarding an overnight sleeper service to Hue.

Days 5-6. Hue and Hoi An. We explore Hue, including a cruise along the 'Perfume River' to the magnificent Thien Mu Pagoda. After a morning visit to Dong Ba market on Day 6, we travel south to Hoi An, via Danang.

Days 7-9. Hoi An and Nha Trang. Today we explore the market town of Hoi An on a guided walking tour, enjoying the pretty buildings and bustling streets as we pass under paper lamps and the Vietnamese sun. On Day 8 we head on to the coastal resort of Nha Trang, where we are at leisure on Day 9. You may wish to explore this marvellous bay, or simply kick back on a deck chair in our hotel.

Days 10-12. Ho Chi Minh City and the Mekong Delta. We continue to Ho Chi Minh City, best known by its former name of Saigon, and enjoy a guided tour. On Day 11, we visit the iconic Cu Chi Tunnels, used by the Viet Cong, and enjoy a talk on Vietnam's railways. On Day 12, we travel by boat along the Mekong River, from Cai Be Market to Vinh Long, before continuing by coach to Can Tho.

Days 13-15. Cambodia and Phnom Penh. We continue along the Mekong River into Cambodia, passing through some exceptional scenery on our way to the capital city. On Day 14, we visit ornate Phnom Penh, before a visit to Tuol Sleng, the sobering museum dedicated to the history of the Khmer Rouge regime. On Day 15, we continue to historic Siem Reap.

Day 16. Angkor Wat and Angkor Thom. We visit the famous Angkor Wat temple today, travelling via tuk-tuk. This 12th-century building is the world's largest religious structure. We also visit the remains of Angkor Thom, an impressive ancient city-temple.

Days 17-18. Homeward bound. After a leisurely morning, we transfer to the airport for the overnight flight back to London, via Hanoi arriving on Day 18.

FILM OF THE DAY

Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them ★★★★★ 7.25-10.00pm ITV2 12

FANTASY With the second Fantastic Beasts prequel The Crimes of Grindelwald a guaranteed hit before Christmas, JK Rowling's Wizarding World seems set for a long run. If you missed Potter custodian David Yates's 2016 opener, meet Eddie Redmayne's academic with a Tardis-like suitcase full of critters, as he rocks up in Jazz Age New York and rubs up against the Magical Congress of the USA. Meanwhile Ezra Miller's abused adoptee and Colin Farrell's powerful auror orbit one another ominously. The connections to Hogwarts must wait for the next chapter but there's enough invention and whimsy to keep Potter fans glued, and James Newton Howard's score is lavish. (UK/US 2016, violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Redmayne might count himself lucky that he was unsuccessful in his audition for the minor part of Tom Riddle in Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets

Don't Breathe ★★★★
9.00-10.45pm Film4 15

HORROR A trio of Detroit delinquents attempt to burgle a blind man's isolated house in a superior shocker from Fede Alvarez, director of the Evil Dead remake. But their victim is a Gulf War veteran who has his own secrets to hide. Drawing on genre favourites such as Wait until Dark and The Strangers, Alvarez keeps the twists escalating, while Avatar's Stephen Lang is exceptionally intimidating as the thugs' far-from-feeble prey. AJ (US 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

Mission: Impossible III ★★★
9.00-11.20pm Sky1 12

THRILLER JJ Abrams is in the director's chair here, as Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) is called out of retirement to rescue a former trainee who's been kidnapped by a ruthless arms dealer (a superb Philip Seymour Hoffman). But when the assignment goes wrong, it's Hunt's new wife (Michelle Monaghan) who's the primary target for revenge. The race against time that follows is fast-paced and slick, but the formula itself feels stale. SF (US 2006, violence, HD)

Cape Fear ★★★★
10.05pm-12.40am ITV4 18

THRILLER Martin Scorsese's remake of the Robert Mitchum classic sees Robert De Niro take the Mitchum role of a vicious ex-convict who torments his former attorney (Nick Nolte), believing Nolte betrayed him during his trial for a brutal sex crime. De Niro is way over the top, but Nolte and his family (Jessica Lange and Juliette Lewis) are wonderfully fragile, and Scorsese brings a dazzling array of cinematic techniques to the party. JF (US 1991, violence, swearing, HD)

The Servant ★★★★ 10.20pm-12.40am
Talking Pictures TV 15

DRAMA Scripted by Harold Pinter from Robin Maugham's novel, this tale of envy and manipulation sees James Fox descend from a champagne lifestyle into a decadent dependence upon his servant, Dirk Bogarde. The snarling story is handled with great insight by director Joseph Losey. DP (UK 1963, BW)

DID YOU KNOW? When the play was first performed in 1914, Eliza's phrase "not bloody likely!" was the cause of over a minute's laughter

ANDREW COLLINS
FILM OF THE DAY

Pygmalion ★★★★★
2.35-4.30pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Assuming you've seen My Fair Lady, the Lerner and Loewe musical of George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion, you'll be pronouncing "lovely" as "luverly" in readiness for this first British film version from 1938, with Wendy Hiller as Eliza and Leslie Howard as Professor Higgins. Shaw himself insisted that Hiller be cast as the flower girl – and she became the first British actress Oscar-nominated for a British film. In crisp, moody black and white, and on fine Edwardian sets, Shaw's comedy of manners (it was partly adapted by him) is expertly rehearsed with rattling teacups and raised eyebrows. The grand ballroom scenes are new to the film, Hiller is magnetic and Wilfrid Lawson hilarious as Eliza's father. (UK 1938, BW)

Shenandoah ★★★★
2.40-5.00pm 5Spike PG

WESTERN This marvellous western features a superb performance from James Stewart as a widower out to ignore the Civil War until the tide of history washes over his whole family. Unusually, the deliberate sentimentality works, and the scene in which Stewart offers a moving soliloquy beside his wife's grave was so popular that it was released on record. There's a real sense of scale here, and the support cast (including veterans from John Ford's rep company) is well chosen. TS (US 1965, edited for violence)

How Do You Know ★★
6.35-9.00pm Sony Movie Channel 12

COMEDY There's an impressive cast in this romantic comedy drama – Paul Rudd, Reese Witherspoon, Jack Nicholson and Owen Wilson – but sadly this line-up doesn't deliver. Witherspoon plays an about-to-retire pro softball player who's struggling to coax bachelor Wilson into a steady relationship. The third ingredient of this burgeoning love triangle is Rudd, who works for his dad (Nicholson) and is made a scapegoat for dodgy dealings. Wilson does have funny moments as a self-aware commitment-phobe, but Nicholson is on autopilot. SP (US 2010)

Sin City ★★★★
9.00-11.30pm Syfy 18

CRIME Frank Miller's hard-boiled comic book Sin City comes to spectacular life in this directorial collaboration with film-maker Robert Rodriguez. Shot in black and white with occasional splashes of colour, the pulpy thriller meticulously re-creates three interlinked stories in stellar neo-noir style. In each segment, cops, criminals and femmes fatales blur the lines between good and evil as they collide in love, lust or gory conflict. Bruce Willis brings poignancy as the disgraced ex-cop shielding a dancer from a deformed maniac, while tough private eye Clive Owen's clash with a love rival adds a streak of gallows humour. However, it's a barely recognisable Mickey Rourke who steals the show, playing a soft-hearted brute out to avenge a lover. SF (US 2005, violence, swearing, nudity, BW/col)

Black Sheep ★★★★
11.05pm-12.50am Horror Channel 15

HORROR It's appropriate that Peter Jackson's Weta Workshop provided the effects for this fun Kiwi splatter-fest, as it's powered by the same gleeful tastelessness he brought to cult hit Braindead. Here, a sheep-phobic farmer's son reluctantly returns to the family holdings to sign everything over to his bullying brother. However, he soon discovers that his sibling has been playing around with nature, and that the usually docile flock now has a taste for human flesh. JF (NZ 2006, violence, swearing)

10.45pm-12.55am Film4 15

DRAMA If you liked the urban vibe of Kidulthood, the resourceful 2006 release that gave future Yardie star Aml Ameen his first film role and was written by the inspirational Noel Clarke (who briefly appears), you probably saw 2008 sequel Adulthood. By that time, Clarke had taken over directing duties, as he did on this third instalment, the no less violent Brotherhood in 2016. Here, Clarke's Sam is now a family man, but feuds run deep and dirty money corrupts the west London estates. It was easier to root for the rudderless kids in the earlier films, although grime stars Stormzy and Bashy give good accounts of themselves amid lurid sex and the unwanted sight of a nail gun. (UK 2016, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

Noel Clarke rising, p98

DID YOU KNOW? Clarke is one of the few actors to be in Doctor Who (as Mickey) and the Star Trek franchise (he appeared in Star Trek into Darkness)

Battle Los Angeles ★★★

9.00-11.25pm Sony Movie Channel 12

SCI-FI War of the Worlds meets The Hurt Locker in Jonathan Liebesman's down-and-dirty alien-invasion flick. Aaron Eckhart stars as a burnt-out marine who leads a misfit platoon against intergalactic aggressors in need of Earth's water for fuel. The intriguing gimmick here is filming the hectic military operations from the soldiers' point-of-view, creating newsreel-type immediacy. The allegorical nods to what was going on in Afghanistan wear a bit thin but it's a watchable epic with visual punch. AJ (US 2011, violence, swearing)

Get Him to the Greek ★★★★

10.00pm-12.15am 5STAR 15

COMEDY Russell Brand reprises his role from hit comedy Forgetting Sarah Marshall here, only this time he's hogging the limelight as impish rock star Aldous Snow. Jonah Hill (who also appeared in that film) is typically hangdog as the record-company drone charged with getting Aldous to the Greek Theatre in LA for his big comeback gig. It's hardly an original premise from writer/director Nicolas Stoller (Yes Man), but he does set the stage for some brilliantly funny turns, and not only from the leads. Sean Combs is a scream as Hill's crabby boss and Rose Byrne is simply outrageous as Aldous's racy rapper ex-girlfriend. SP (US 2010, swearing, sex scenes, drug references, HD)

Villain ★★★

11.00pm-1.00am Talking Pictures TV 18

CRIME Made the same year as Get Carter, Villain stars Richard Burton as a vicious East End gangster, who rules by fear and the cut-throat razor. Clearly inspired by the Krays, the film is one of unrelieved ugliness, from the run-down locations to the run-down bulk of Burton himself: overweight, shabby, self-loathing. Adored by his mum, he's a homosexual with a toy-boy lover, a Labour voter who worries about OAPs. Wavering uneasily between horror, black comedy and sentimentality, it's held together by Burton's skill. AT (UK 1971, violence, swearing)

The Beatles: Eight Days a Week – the Touring Years ★★★★

11.05pm-1.15am More4 12

DOCUMENTARY The most celebrated and scrutinised group in music history once more falls under the spotlight in Ron Howard's suitably fab film. Focusing on the period from 1962 – when Ringo first joined Paul, John and George in the line-up – to the Beatles' final bow at San Francisco's Candlestick Park in August '66, the film captures all the excitement, antipathy and exhaustion of the band's years on the road. It's a story that has been anthologised more comprehensively elsewhere, but the unseen fan-shot footage and some surprisingly underused newsreel bring welcome freshness. JH (US/UK 2016, swearing, drug references, col/BW, HD)

PICK OF THE REST...

FILM OF THE DAY

A Cry in the Dark ★★★★

9.00-11.35pm Paramount Network 15

DID YOU KNOW? After Michael Chamberlain's death in 2017, Neill tweeted "throughout their cruel ordeal, Michael maintained a quiet, unassuming dignity – an impressive man RIP"

BIOPIC Followers of genial Sam Neill on social media will know him for photos of his beloved pigs and the organic vineyards he tends in his native New Zealand. Let's not forget he also acts a bit. In 1988 he starred opposite Meryl Streep in fact-based A Cry in the Dark (or Evil Angels as it was known in the Antipodes). The movie sees them as Australian couple Lindy and Michael Chamberlain, whose nine-week-old baby disappears from a campsite ("The baby! My baby!"). An inquest decides their tale of a dingo carrying off the infant is true, but the media sees events in a different way and the investigation is reopened. Fred Schepisi's compelling dramatisation presents the Seventh Day Adventists played by Streep and a blonde-tinted Neill as a little odd ("try and be more demure"), but never guilty. The film takes their side against a hasty judiciary and a fulminating press. The two leads are so convincing, Streep accent-perfect and both winning two of the film's six Australian Academy Awards. (US/Aus 1988, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

Quantum of Solace ★★★

8.00-10.10pm ITV2 12

SPY Daniel Craig's second outing as James Bond picks up events directly after Casino Royale's climax, and sees Bond looking for answers after the death of his lover, Vesper Lynd. The trail leads to Quantum, a mysterious organisation that has infiltrated the world's corridors of power. Marc Forster's take on 007 was hit by a writer's strike during its making, and the script suffers as a result, but Craig's committed performance remains eminently watchable. JH (UK/US 2008, violence, HD)

Kick-Ass ★★★★

9.00-11.30pm 5STAR 15

ACTION COMEDY Based on the graphic novel sensation by Mark Millar (Wanted), director Matthew Vaughn's adaptation is refreshing, if somewhat controversial. It follows the exploits of high-school nerd Aaron Johnson, whose attempts to reinvent himself as superhero Kick-Ass seem doomed to failure, until he meets Nicolas Cage and his daughter, Chloë Moretz. It's a sophisticated and sometimes shocking parody laced with wistful comic-book nostalgia. AJ (US/UK 2009, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

The Legend of Hell House ★★★

Talking Pictures TV 15

HORROR In this haunted house tale, dying millionaire Roland Culver offers a reward to scientist Clive Revill and psychics Pamela Franklin and Roddy McDowall if they can discover the secret of the afterlife in an infamous house. Although director John Hough makes atmospheric use of the suitably eerie sets, he is too content to send shivers rather than shocks. DP (UK 1973, some swearing, a sex scene, brief nudity)

Shanghai Knights ★★★

11.50pm-1.40am BBC1 12

ACTION COMEDY Jackie Chan's Chinese sheriff and Owen Wilson's slacker outlaw reteam in what is meant to be Victorian London (actually Prague) for this spry sequel to Shanghai Noon. The pacing is variable, but Chan's action sequences are as inventive as ever while Wilson's trademark laid-back delivery remains amusingly off-beam. AS (US 2002, swearing, some violence, HD)

P The Wife ★★★ 15

From Monday Sky Store and Virgin Movies (also on DVD, Blu-ray and download)

DRAMA Adapted from Meg Wolitzer's novel, this slow-burning drama from director Björn Runge stars Jonathan Pryce as Joe Castleman, who is in Stockholm to bask in adulation and be presented with the Nobel Prize for literature.

Meanwhile, his spouse Joan (Glenn Close) is offered shopping excursions and beauty treatments, though it's then that a would-be biographer (Christian Slater) jumps at the chance of pursuing the juicy story behind Close's decades of loyalty in the face of her hubby's serial philandering.

The film is a triumph for Golden Globe-winning Close, who is mesmerising as the woman who, with subtle glances, suggests a lifetime of simmering discontent. And there's the bonus of her daughter Annie Starke playing young Joan rather effectively in the flashbacks. Trevor Johnston (Swe/US/UK/Swi 2017, swearing, HD)

SCI-FI THRILLER Boyd Holbrook stars as ex-army sniper Quinn McKenna, who witnesses a spaceship crash and sends some dodgy alien-tech back to his autistic genius son (Jacob Tremblay) in Shane Black's reboot of the alien-hunter franchise. The plot is an incoherent mess but it succeeds on the slam-bang visceral level thanks to plenty of tough-guy machismo, spectacular stunts and very gory dismemberment. AJ (US 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

The House with a Clock in Its Walls ★★★ 12 28 Jan on DVD, Blu-ray, download

Goremeister Eli Roth turns child-friendly with this lively, if lightweight, adaptation of the Young Adult fantasy by John Bellairs. Orphaned Lewis Barnavelt (Owen Vaccaro) moves into the spooky mansion of his eccentric Uncle Jonathan (Jack Black), only to discover he's a warlock whose best friend Florence (haughtily amusing Cate Blanchett) is a wayward witch. Roth crafts the monster moments with enchanting aplomb, while ultimately failing to put a distinctive stamp on all the frivolous dangers. But the splendid production design is gorgeous. The DVD includes a commentary by Roth and Black, featurettes and deleted scenes. Alan Jones RT Offer To order the DVD for £13.99, call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply), quoting reference RT1695. REVEALED: THE VITAL DECISION FACING BRITAIN'S AGEING POPULATION Arranging a Power of Attorney before it's too late is critical to avoiding heartache for friends and family later, claims Which?

None of us likes to think about a time in life when we're no longer able to make our own decisions. But should that moment come, it'll affect every part of your life – from your home to your finances to your medical care. And if you haven't made the right preparations, it's your family and friends who'll be left to sort everything out, as they try to take best care of you.

It's shocking to realise that as many as 1 in 3 of us over the age of 65 will go on to suffer from dementia, but of course, an unexpected accident or illness can strike anytime. So setting up, and registering, a Power of Attorney is the sensible solution. When – and only when – it's necessary, your Power of Attorney can be activated to enable someone you trust to step in and take key decisions for you. And as the specialists at Which? point out, this vital preparation can be achieved easily online.

POWER OF ATTORNEY DEALS WITH:

- Medical emergencies
- Accessing NHS care
- Local authority services
- Benefits, savings, investments
- Your home and care needs

Why use Which? to prepare your Power of Attorney

It can be daunting to think about making a Power of Attorney. That's why the specialists at Which? offer their Power of Attorney service to guide you through the process.

- Easy-to-use online document creator, with helpful tips to guide you through
- Which? Power of Attorney specialists are a phone call away to answer any queries

ALISON GRAHAM
PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

We are privileged

Alison Graham is humbled by Holocaust testimonies

Anita Lasker-Wallfisch survived the Auschwitz concentration camp and is one of that dwindling band of old women and men who were children when their families were wiped from the face of the earth.

Lasker-Wallfisch is one of the contributors to The Last Survivors (Sunday BBC2), a powerful 90-minute documentary featuring testimony from some members of this small group who made their homes in Britain after the Holocaust.

I would like every reality television contestant, every talent-show hopeful and everyone who has ever emptied out the contents of their souls in front of baying strangers on The Jeremy Kyle Show to pay close attention to Lasker-Wallfisch when she feels that the film-maker is probing too impertinently into her feelings about her concentration camp experiences.

"This is a private matter… people always want to see emotions… Forget it. We are talking about facts here," she barks, brooking no argument. I wanted to hug her hard for saying this, because if anyone is entitled to blare their emotions to the world it's Lasker-Wallfisch and all of those men and women who witnessed humanity at its worst.

She survived because she played the cello, and we know that the Nazis loved their orchestras. So she wasn't sent off to die, though it was close – her head was being shaved and she was being prepared for execution in the gas chambers when this lifeline suddenly presented itself.

Yet there are idiots who ask Lasker-Wallfisch, "How could you play the cello in Auschwitz?" as if everyone was having a jolly time in some sort of perverted swing band. She played the cello because it kept her alive, you fools. (She's too polite to put it so brutally, but I'm not.)

All of the contributors to The Last Survivors are self-contained and matter of fact. I'm lost in admiration, yet won't be impertinent enough to wonder how on earth they could live lives of order and peace, with marriages and children, after such hideous experiences that left so many of them lonely and bereft. That is their business, not mine.

Films like The Last Survivor are so very important. Like all of those documentaries that capture the words and experiences of soldiers from both world wars (most recently, the astonishing They Shall Not Grow Old), they should be treated as treasure and we should feel privileged to have had them passed on to those of us who are lucky enough to have been born in more gentle times.

HONOUR Anita Lasker-Wallfisch with her MBE

Our own current political maelstrom pales as we listen to the elderly gentleman who talks of the sister who was barely one year old who died in the camp and whose body was put on to a heap of other bodies for disposal. He'd made her a little gift for her first birthday, but she didn't live long enough for him to give it to her, something that haunts him to this day.

Then there's the gentleman with his class photo, rows of happy smiling young faces. You don't have to look closely to see the identifying Star of David sewn into their clothes. He's put red stickers on some of the classmates. "Red for dead," he says, and we need no more explanation.

A PANEL GAME TO LOVE

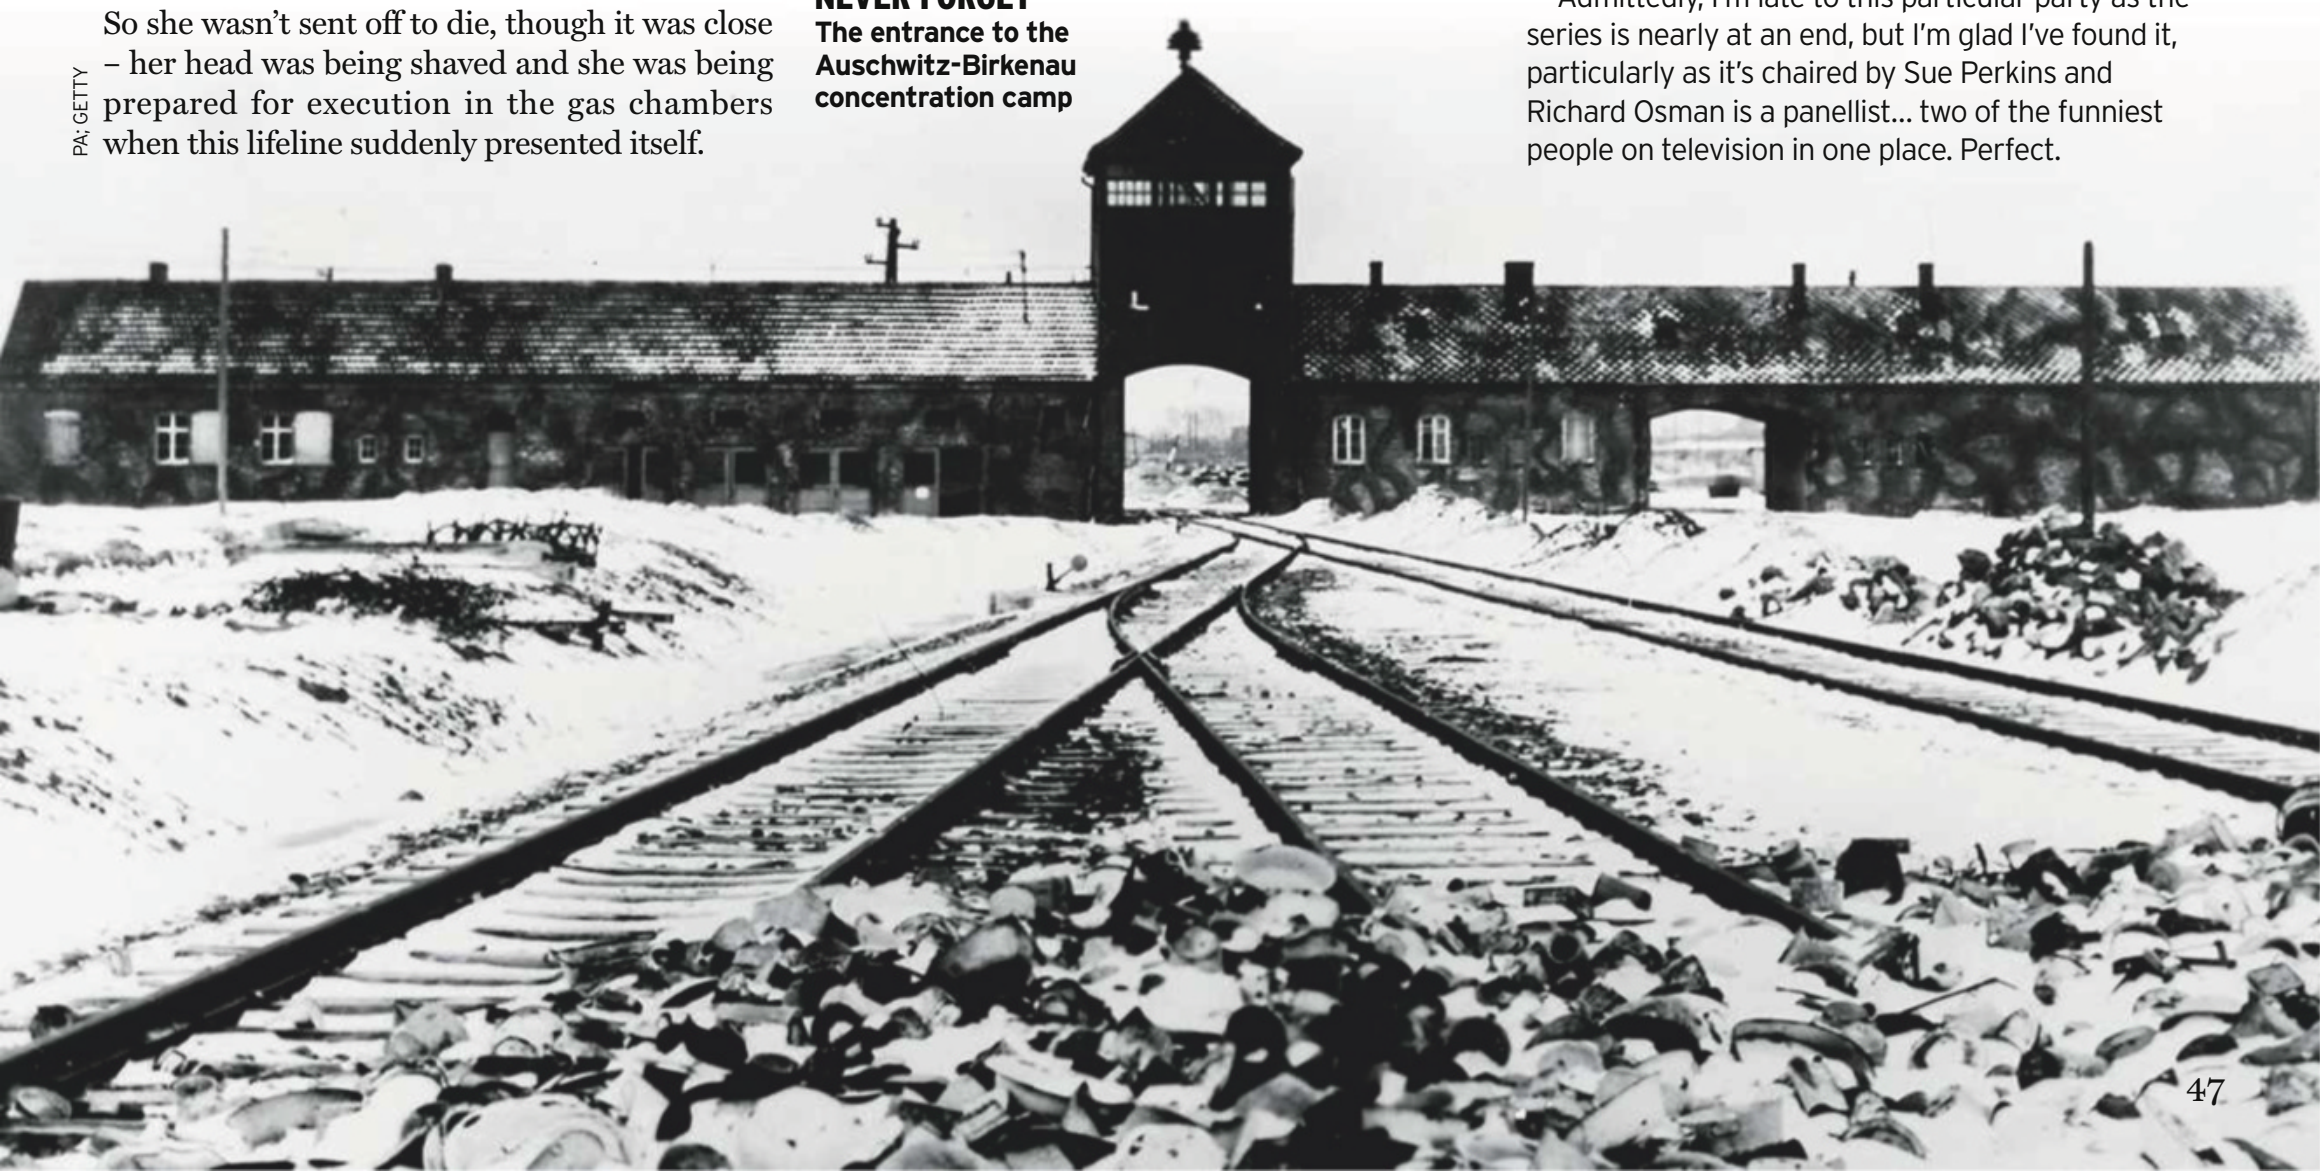

I'm not a fan of television panel games. I find them shouty and cliquey and one-uppy, and usually overwhelmingly male (though thankfully not so much these days).

But I love Insert Name Here (Wednesday BBC2). It's silly and good-natured and civilised in a daft kind of way, and there isn't that panelly feeling that everyone is just desperate to outdo one another with quick-fire gags or acute observations.

Admittedly, I'm late to this particular party as the series is nearly at an end, but I'm glad I've found it, particularly as it's chaired by Sue Perkins and Richard Osman is a panellist… two of the funniest people on television in one place. Perfect.

NEVER FORGET The entrance to the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp

HOT PERIOD DRAMA

1 Medici: the Magnificent

Netflix

One strong cast replaces another as the Anglo-Italian anthology returns, skipping on 20 years to meet a new generation of Florence's hottest Renaissance family. Out go Richard Madden and Dustin Hoffman (although Medici: Masters of Florence is still on Netflix), in come Sarah Parish, Daniel Sharman and Bradley James. Available from 25 January

2 Tin Star

NowTV/Sky Box Sets

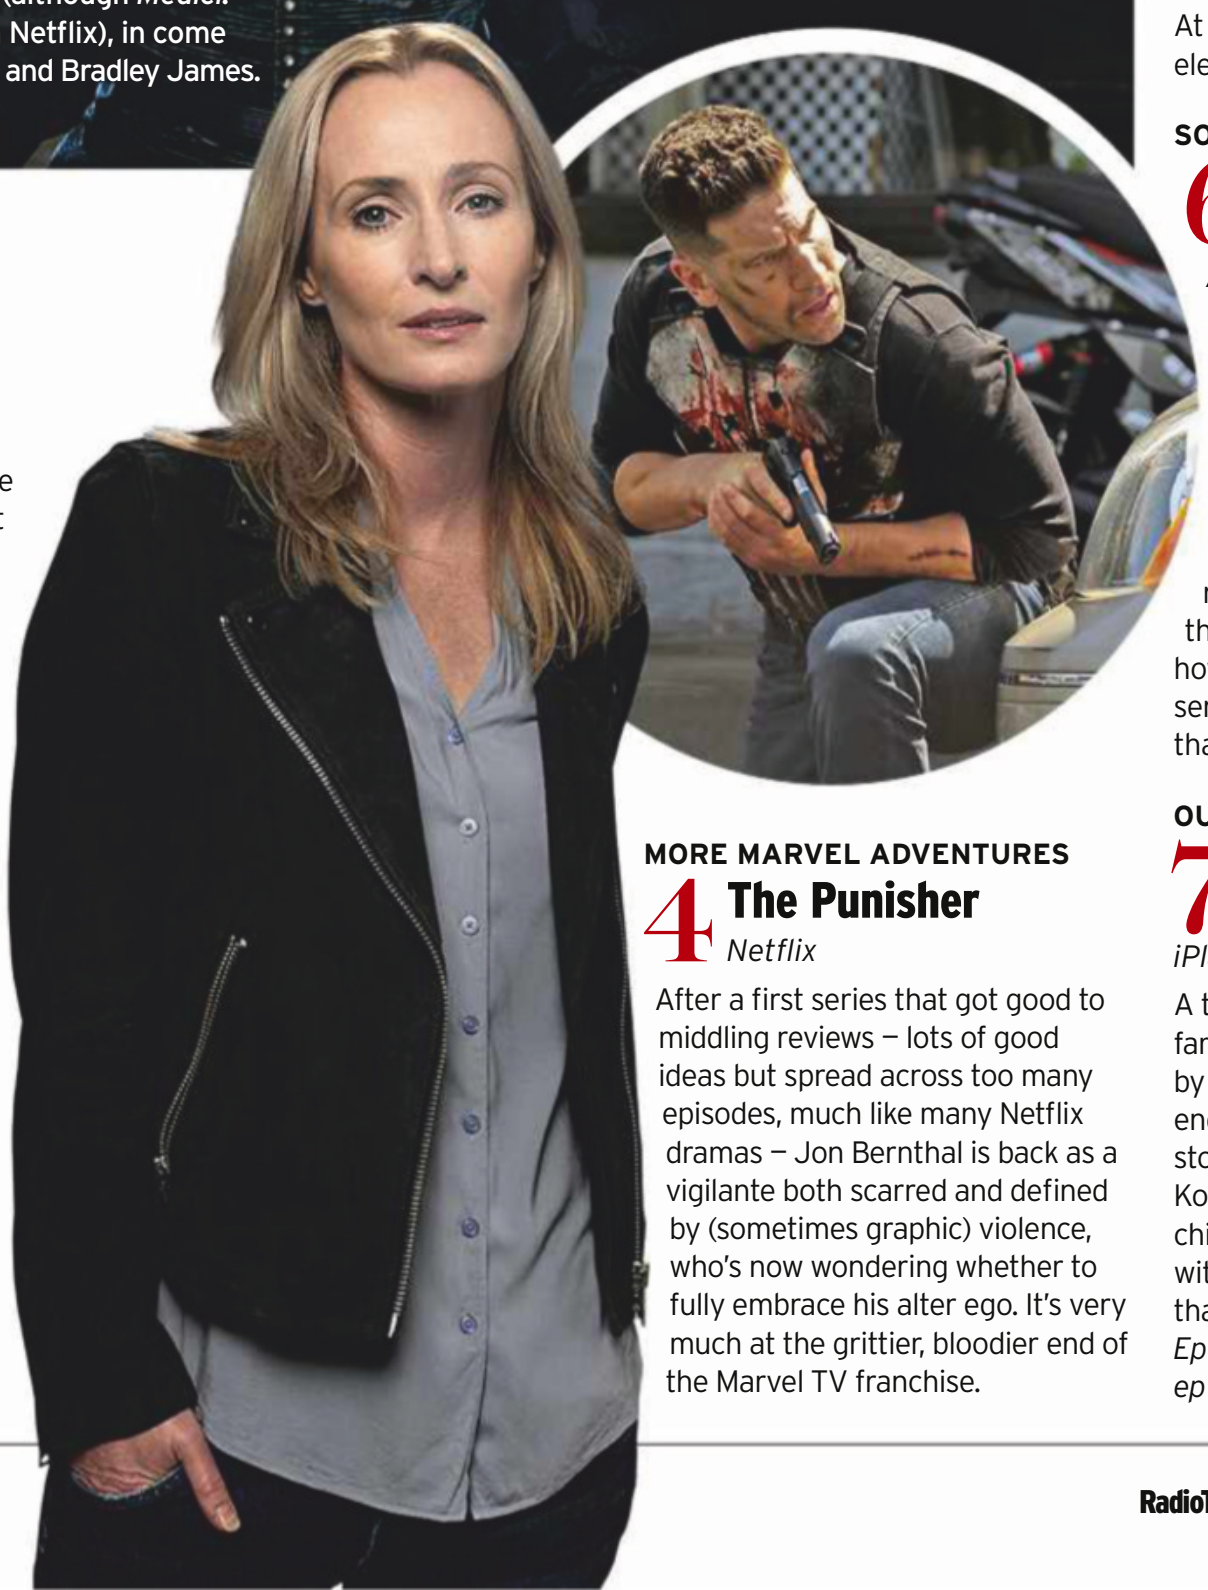

Tim Roth is back as a British cop, abroad in chilly Canada, in series two of a drama that became more bloody and outrageous as it went on. Roth's character continues to battle the bottle, a malign oil company and his own split personality, as he strives to extricate his daughter from a religious community. Genevieve O'Reilly (right) co-stars as a wife and mother with a lot to cope with. Watch episode 1 at radiotimes.com/tinstar from 24 January – for free

NEW TO NETFLIX

3 Poldark

Netflix

If you've never experienced the heady, sexy rush of this period drama, starring Aidan Turner as a hirsute philanthropist in 18th-century Cornwall, catch up immediately. Netflix now has the first three series.

MORE MARVEL ADVENTURES

4 The Punisher

Netflix

After a first series that got good to middling reviews – lots of good ideas but spread across too many episodes, much like many Netflix dramas – Jon Bernthal is back as a vigilante both scarred and defined by (sometimes graphic) violence, who's now wondering whether to fully embrace his alter ego. It's very much at the grittier, bloodier end of the Marvel TV franchise.

EERIE EURO-DRAMA

5 Perfume

Netflix

A cool, menacing German crime series that at first looks like any other lurid murder drama: a beautiful young woman is found floating in the swimming pool of a gloomy mansion, and the killer appears to be some sort of twisted trophy-hunter. The victim turns out to be a minor celebrity whose funeral attracts a gang of her old schoolmates: time to delve into them and their past. At that point it all gets even more elegantly unpleasant.

SOBERING DOCUMENTARY

6 A Year of British Murder

All 4 (C4)

In 2017, 768 people died in Britain as a result of murder or manslaughter. This necessary but deeply sad documentary shows that many, many more lives than that were ruined. While relatives of victims talk about the near-impossibility of moving on, the film also zooms out to look at how the type and frequency of serious crime has evolved, and what that tells us about our nation.

OUTSTANDING STORYVILLE DOC

7 Waco: Madman or Messiah

iPlayer (BBC4)

A two-part exposé that examines a famous story – of the Texas cult, led by David Koresh, that met a violent end in 1993 when the FBI resolved to storm the group's compound. How Koresh manipulated his flock is chilling; how the authorities dealt with the threat is a controversy that's carefully re-assessed here. Ep 1 available until 1 February; ep 2 available until 1 February

8 The Secret World of Emily Brontë

All 4 (C4)

Lily Cole – model, actor, Cambridge graduate and official creative partner of the Brontë society – lauds one of British literature's most heavily analysed authors. She delves into Wuthering Heights itself and how the experiences and political struggles of the Brontë family informed it, moving from there to consider the contemporary relevance of both.
Available until 1 February

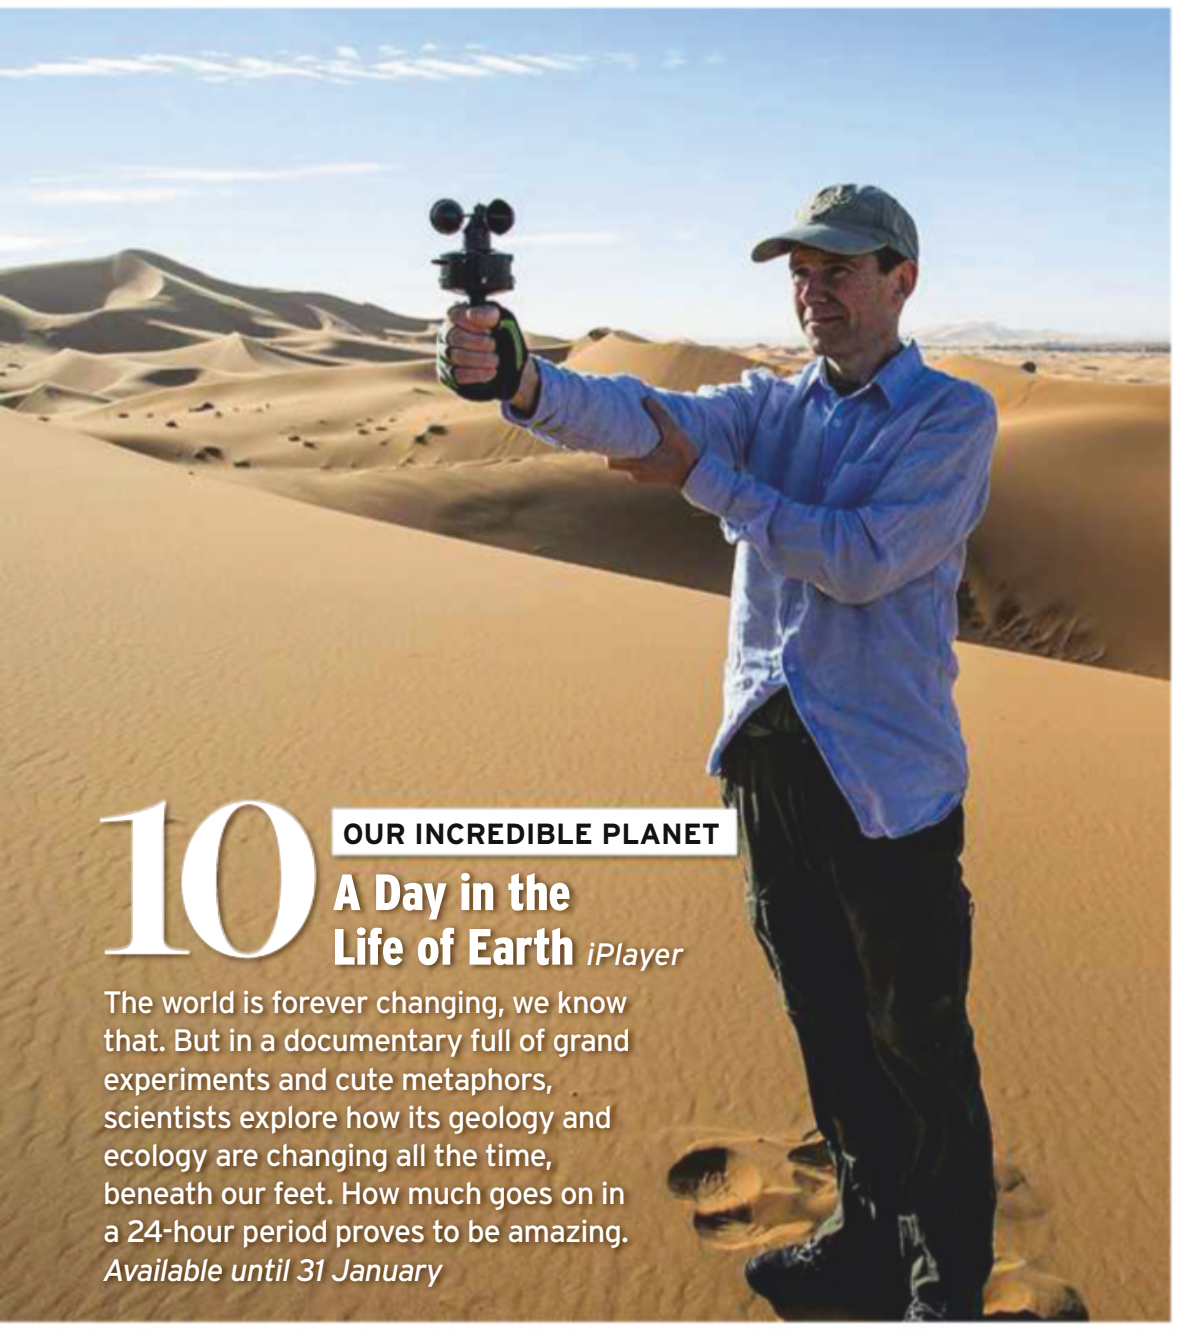

SEE THE SERIES

9 Black Lake

iPlayer (BBC4)

BBC4 has been showing the second series of the supernatural Swedish thriller in double bills on Saturday nights, just like it used to in the glory days of Scandi crime imports. If you've fallen behind, enjoy a creepy romp through every familiar trope of the "flawed, horrible people are trapped far from home while something spooky closes in, but to be honest they've brought this on themselves" genre. Perfect for a dark-evening binge.

10 OUR INCREDIBLE PLANET: A Day in the Life of Earth iPlayer

The world is forever changing, we know that. But in a documentary full of grand experiments and cute metaphors, scientists explore how its geology and ecology are changing all the time, beneath our feet. How much goes on in a 24-hour period proves to be amazing.
Available until 31 January

YOUR NEXT BINGE

It's worth obsessing over this glossy drama

You'd be forgiven for thinking You is the product of a Netflix algorithm that spits out by-numbers amalgamations of popular shows past and present. A Gossip Girl star (Penn Badgley) is its glowering leading man, Joe; he woos wannabe writer Beck (Elizabeth Lail) who, thanks to her friends (which include Pretty Little Liars' Shay Mitchell), occupies a rarefied world that is equal parts paranoia and glamour.

In fact You is based on a 2014 novel by Caroline Kepnes, but it slots neatly into Netflix's teen drama stable: executive producer Greg Berlanti also made Riverdale.

Set in New York, it opens with Beck visiting the bookshop Joe manages; they bond over author Paula Fox ("Courtney Love's maternal grandmother, but you're not expected to know that"). We soon realise, though, that this is a meet not-so-cute.

Joe googles Beck when he gets home – so far, so millennial. But then he finds her address, goes to her flat, watches her through the window; the next day he follows her to yoga, to college, to a bar. This is all accompanied by Joe's narration, an internal monologue addressed to Beck. Slowly, smoothly, he finds new ways to manipulate her, and we see what he's capable of.

As the violence and melodrama ramp up, there's a deftly kept balance between light and dark: Beck's life is materially attractive and aspirational, even as she flounders creatively and romantically; Joe is charming and kind to his neighbour's kid, even as he keeps a prisoner in the bookshop's basement.

There are duff moments, such as the often toe-curling attempts at literary earnestness, but they should be savoured. Just like Riverdale, or Gossip Girl, or Pretty Little Liars, this is a show that doesn't take itself very seriously – and it's all the better for it.

DOCTOR DIGITAL

Can we fix it? Yes we can!

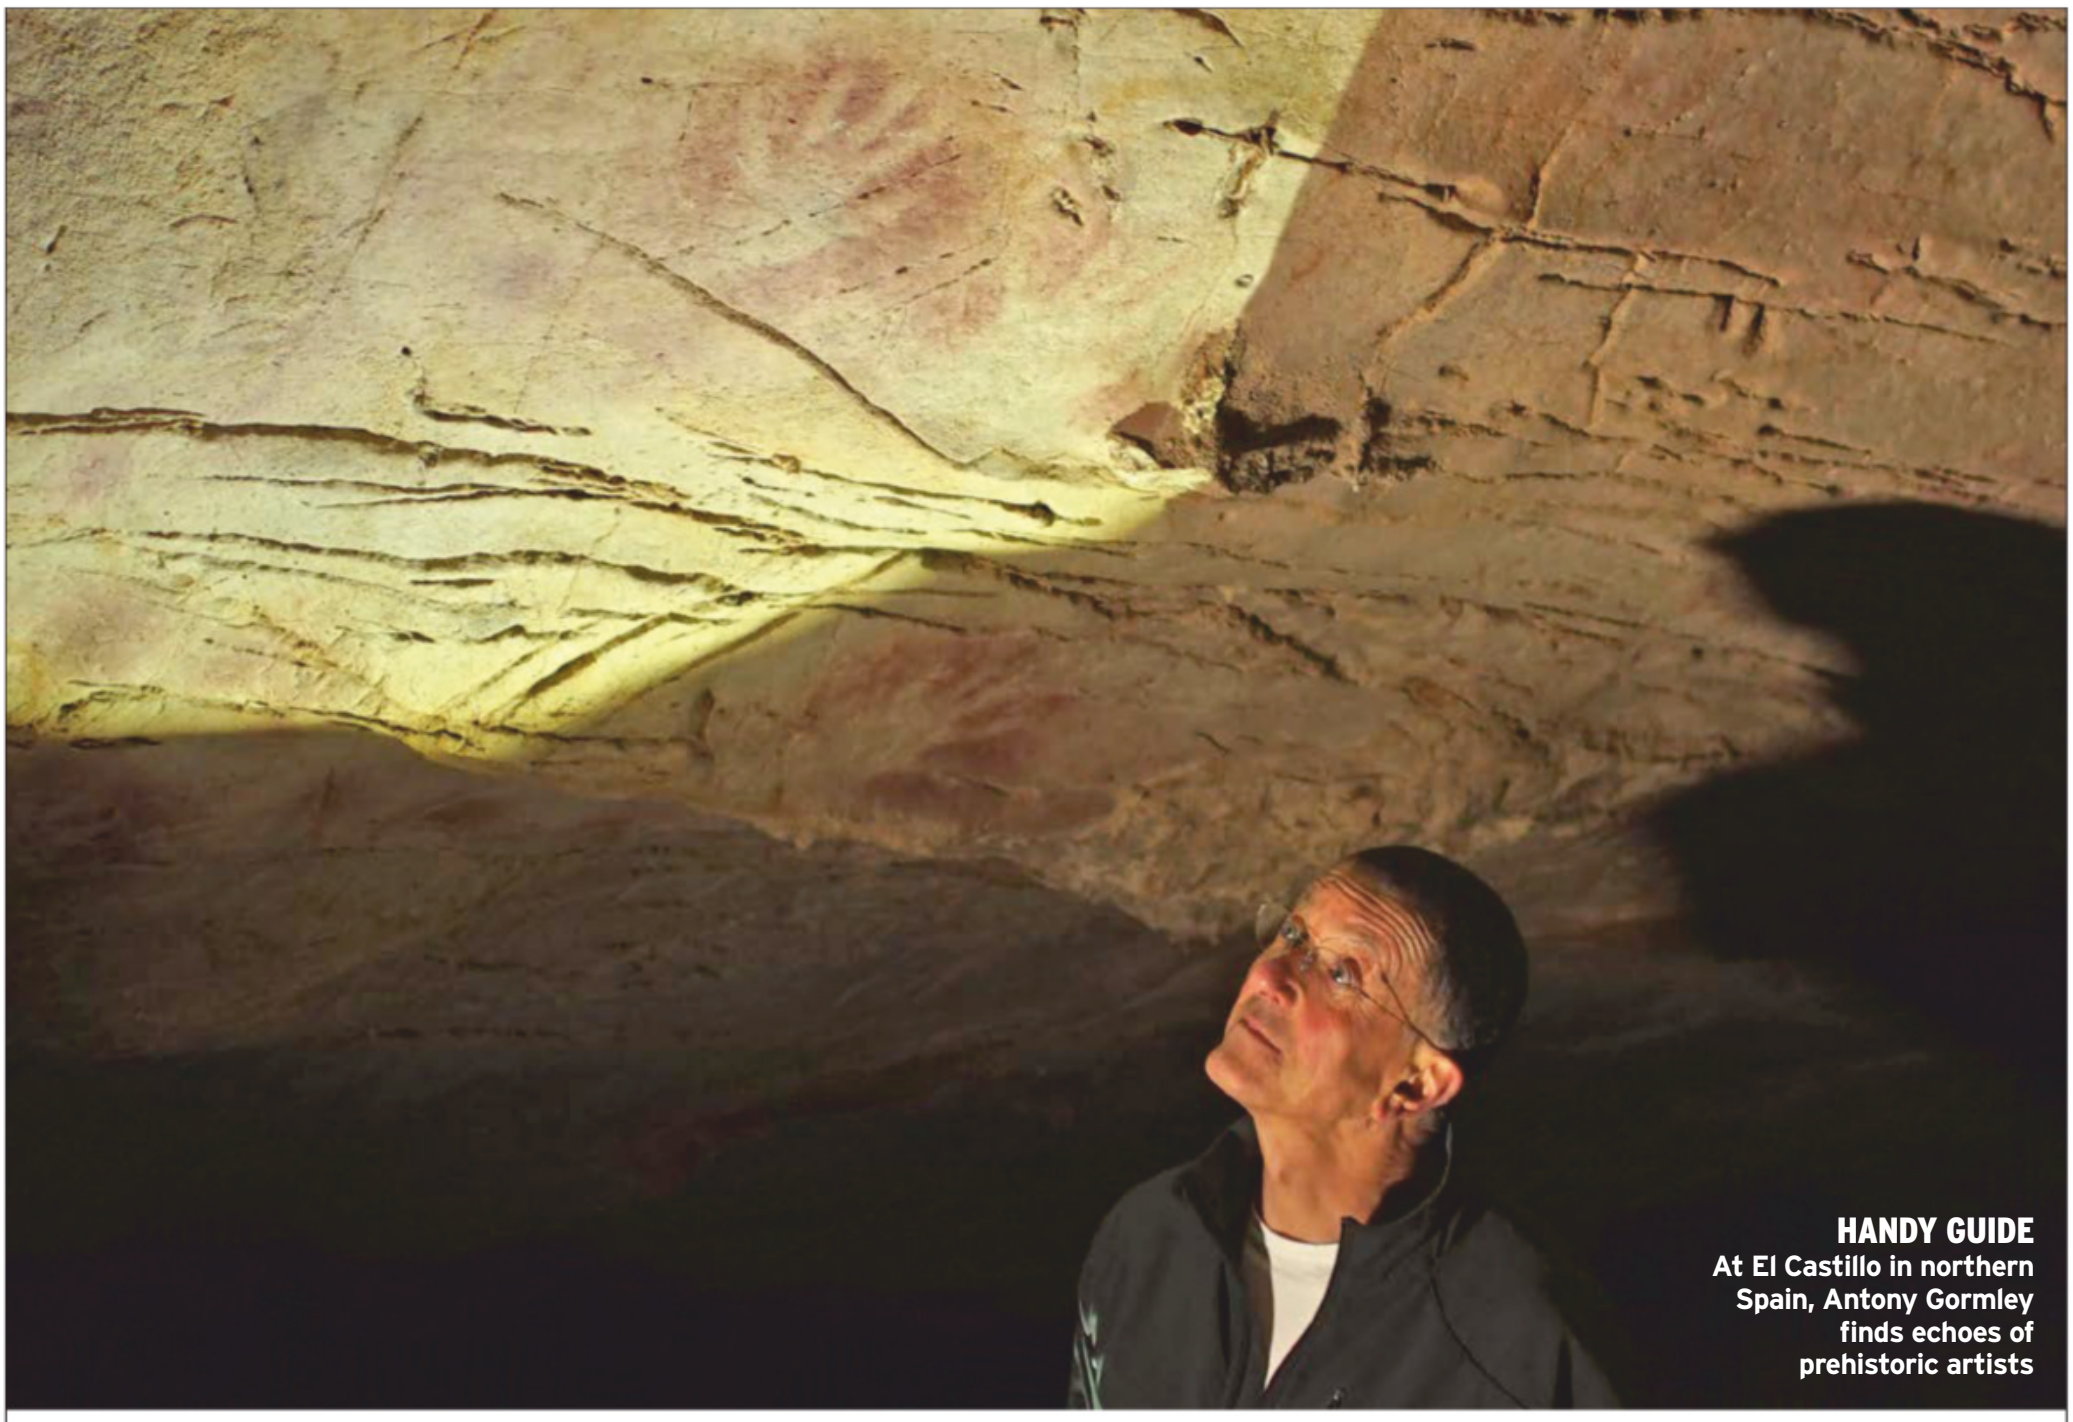

Beloved family pets aside, you don't truly own something until you've taken it apart. However, modern gadgets are notoriously difficult to repair. The EU and certain US states will soon introduce "right to repair" laws, to ensure electronic products last longer and are easier to fix. But there are steps you can take by yourself.

First, check your warranty. Basics such as upgrading the memory in your desktop PC shouldn't invalidate it – but do check. If your gadget is out of warranty, all bets are off.

Online, ifixit.com is a one-stop shop for repairing everything from games consoles to cars, with user-created guides and clear pictures. It also sells spare parts and neat tool kits: Doc Dig is a fan of their "spudger", designed to pry apart plastic cases on smartphones.

Many repairs can be as simple as clearing dust with a can of compressed air, picking out fluff with a paperclip (a common fix for a phone that won't charge) or cleaning contacts with isopropyl alcohol, but take precautions. Unplug for a few hours beforehand and remove batteries if possible. And leave televisions well alone: the old-fashioned CRT models store a terrifying amount of voltage, and flat screens are usually glued together. No amount of spudging will help there. JONATHAN HOLMES

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

HANDY GUIDE
At El Castillo in northern Spain, Antony Gormley finds echoes of prehistoric artists

PICK OF THE DAY

Antony Gormley: How Art Began 9.00pm BBC2

ARTS Yes, it's a documentary about prehistoric cave art. How often over the years have we seen an arts presenter in torchlight, sighing about the ineffable power of a cave painting?

But this is different. This is Antony Gormley, one of our great artists, who by lucky chance is also a better talker about art than most presenters, making a pilgrimage not just through the French caves that he first visited on his honeymoon (we see a holiday snap) but also venturing further afield to Indonesia and Australia, looking for the first stirrings of human creativity.

"This is a cathedral of joy in living things," he says in a cave called Les Combarelles. "I think we've found a Palaeolithic Picasso," he jokes in Niaux. And in an extraordinary scene at Pech Merle, with its 28,000-year-old paintings of horses, a local expert demonstrates how they were made, by chewing up charcoal and delicately blow-spitting on the rock. DAVID BUTCHER

The Greatest Dancer

7.30pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The ratio of performance to faff is off the scale, but at least when someone does eventually dance, it's worth the wait. Last week's contestants, couple Harry and Eleiyah, were dubbed the ones to beat by Matthew Morrison, while seven-year-old Shyla's routine was simply unforgettable.

Tonight sees the last auditions, and at the end of this episode the dance captains will pick the three acts each wants to take through to the live challenge shows. The competitiveness that's brewing looks set to spill over, and Oti Mabuse gets emotional as she breaks the news about who has failed to make it onto her team. FRANCES TAYLOR

Oti Mabuse's view from the sofa: p162

Chris Packham: In Search of the Lost Girl

7.30pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 8pm)

DOCUMENTARY Chris Packham travels to Indonesia hoping to find a girl he photographed 20 years ago in the jungle. "That was one of the greatest moments of my life," he says, recalling the day in 1998 when he encountered a group of Orang Rimba tribespeople in a Sumatran forest and took a set of striking portraits. Today, the Orang Rimba's way of life has been hit by massive deforestation, so trying to find the woman is partly "a way of measuring the condition of the planet".

This 2018 film makes for an extraordinary quest, with Packham in the role of both detective and eco-prophet: "If we don't stop this nonsense, we've had it," he sighs. DB

Digging Up Britain's Past

7.30pm Channel 5

HISTORY Many of us grew up with the legend of Robin Hood, that dashing outlaw who lived with his merry men in Sherwood Forest robbing from the rich to give to the poor. In fact, he was probably a mythical character, but that doesn't stop Helen Skelton and Alex Langlands joining the dig in the heart of the forest where the palace of King John – and he definitely existed – once stood, to learn more about these 13th-century adversaries.

They also visit Robin Hood's supposed hideouts, while the present-day Sheriff of Nottingham shows them the castle's dungeons – but doesn't lock them up there, thankfully. JANE RACKHAM

The Voice UK

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Ex-pop stars have form on The Voice. Liberty X singer Kevin Simm, who initially found fame on ITV's Popstars in 2001, went on to win this ITV talent show 15 years later. He was announced as Wet Wet Wet's new frontman late last year. This evening, another former pop group member is stepping up to the Blind Auditions, no doubt hoping for a similar success story.

Jennifer Hudson, meanwhile, is scouting for a male vocalist to join her (currently) all-female line-up of contestants. The coaches' spots are filling up fast: along with Tom Jones, Jennifer has just five spaces remaining on her team, while Olly and Will.i.am each have six remaining slots to fill. FT

HELEN SKELTON: MY TV HERO

"Anneka Rice [below] was what made telly exciting and interesting when I was a kid. She was the original action girl," says Helen Skelton, presenter of Digging Up Britain's Past (7.30pm Channel 5).

"In her shows, it was as if there weren't any boundaries. She was also always interested in people and their stories. I started in local radio, and people used to say, 'God, isn't that boring?' but it wasn't at all, because you get to interview people who are really passionate about the most random things.

"I'm a mum now so I spend half my life trying to find exciting things for the kids to do, but it's just the normal stuff you remember from being a kid.

"I'm sure my mum would be mortified at me saying my favourite thing from my childhood was getting fish and chips and watching Challenge Anneka." FT

Casualty

8.40pm BBC1

DRAMA Tormented Iain lurches towards his worst crisis yet when he and Ruby are called to a farm after the farmer becomes tangled in barbed wire. The patient is teetering on the brink – the bailiffs are coming, his wife is heavily pregnant and his life is in ruins, so he pulls a gun...

Iain takes yet another stupid risk where he's suicidally careless with his personal safety. But this is a mere aperitif to the main course, when his hopeless drug addict friend, Base, gets into trouble again.

Meanwhile, back at the hospital, nurse Louise, the Conscience of a Nation, is rude to a consultant as she tries to protect Denzil from Only Fools and Horses (Paul Barber). ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

The Go-Betweens: Right Here

9.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY It's a pleasant surprise to see Sky featuring Aussie indie underdogs the Go-Betweens on Saturday prime-time. In the dozen or so years of their existence, the band never charted higher than 80 in the UK, and even their top hit in their home country only peaked at 68.

The issue here is that songwriters Robert Forster and Grant McLennan were easily capable of writing saleable melodies (the 1983 single Cattle and Cane, in particular, is an underground classic). Were they just too ordinary-looking to qualify as rock gods? Who knows? But the result is a superb film about how the Go-Betweens became one of those bands whose acclaim far outstripped their success. GARY ROSE

Holocaust: the Revenge Plot

10.20pm More4

DOCUMENTARY More than 70 years after the end of the Second World War a handful of Jewish people, now in their 90s, still rage with unrepentant anger as they talk about a doomed plot to punish the Germans. As Jews were slaughtered, a handful of their surviving relatives swore revenge. Under the leadership of a charismatic poet called Abba Kovner these so-called Avengers declared their aim – to kill six million Germans for the six million Jews who died in the Holocaust: "An eye for an eye."

Helped by recordings made by the group in 1985, this film, first shown on Channel 4 a year ago, pieces together their plan to poison water supplies, with deadly results. AG

Football: FA Cup Live

From 12 noon BT Sport 2, 5.20pm BBC1

SPORT Seven Premier League sides bit the dust in the FA Cup third round, and with another three all-Premier League ties scheduled for the fourth round, the competition genuinely looks like it's opening up for a surprise. But where from?

Accrington Stanley v Derby County (k/o 12.30pm BT Sport 2) is first up. Frank Lampard was fired up after Derby's penalty shootout win over Southampton, his enthusiasm in the post-match interview infectious. Is a Cup fairy tale brewing?

Millwall v Everton (k/o 5.30pm BBC1) on a Saturday evening is clearly the box office tie. Not all has gone to plan at the Den this season, but four Championship wins on the bounce followed by a Cup comeback against Hull led by super sub Shane Ferguson have stoked a Millwall revival.

The night ends with an all-London tie, Wimbledon v West Ham (k/o 7.45pm BT Sport 2). The two sides have already faced each other once this season in the Carabao Cup. The Dons were ahead within two minutes – and reduced to ten men after just 18 minutes. West Ham took control from there, winning 3-1. JAMES GILL

9.00 Antony Gormley: How Art Began
RT One of Britain's most celebrated sculptors travels back in time and journeys across the globe to piece together how art began. Once we believed that it all started with the cave paintings of Ice Age Europe, but new discoveries are overturning that idea. Deep inside the caves of France, Spain and Indonesia, Gormley finds beautiful, haunting and surprising works of art. The creator of the Angel of the North asks what these images from millennia ago tell us about who we are. See page 50.

Anderson's animal magic

P Isle of Dogs ★★★★ 6.15pm Sky Premiere

Wes Anderson's second stop-motion animation (after Fantastic Mr Fox, showing today on Comedy Central Extra) is set in a futuristic Japan where canine flu has turned man's best friend into his worst enemy. As the mayor banishes dogs to a rubbish-tip island, a boy is forced to hunt for his own missing pooch. Designed in the director's trademark quirky style, it allows Anderson stock players like Jeff Goldblum and Bill Murray to supply deadpan American voices to the malnourished mutts. ANDREW COLLINS

Enter Herbert Lom

6.20pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

Born in Prague, Herbert Lom moved to Britain in 1939 and became a film fixture. Flexibly multilingual, he relished his first English-speaking role as Napoleon in this 1942 flag-waver (review, p37) and returned to play Bonaparte – the "much-maligned gentleman" in his words – in War and Peace (1956). During filming in Italy, members of the army, playing extras in the battle scenes, queued up to shake Lom's hand. AC

A fistful of Eastwood

Clint Eastwood day Sky Select

If you are a fan of Clint (whose latest, The Mule, is in cinemas), Sky Select will make your day with a collection of the good, the fab and the OK from the 88-year-old's career. Sadly, there are no Dollars films but westerns like Two Mules for Sister Sara and High Plains Drifter, prison flick Escape from Alcatraz and the classic Dirty Harry more than compensate. JEREMY ASPINALL

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

BELOW THE SURFACE
Vera (Brenda Blethyn) and Aiden (Kenny Doughty) investigate a death on the Tyne

PICK OF THE DAY Vera 8.00pm ITV

DRAMA OF THE WEEK A party boat chugs along the River Tyne before docking at Newcastle Quayside. But the jolly mood is shattered when a scream goes up from the deck – there's a body in the water.

It's a young woman, a hairdresser called Danielle, and Vera is filled with compassion, even ticking off the abrasive new pathologist (Paul Kaye) for his flippancy. "Have some respect!" she snaps, before cutting through the tangled relationships in the dead woman's family.

There are a lot of suspects, including a boyfriend Danielle's family are very keen to blame for her death, and the stench of money – these are wealthy people – taints the air. Though Vera (Brenda Blethyn) is sanguine: "I don't begrudge anyone, not if they've grafted."

As the hunt goes on, Vera takes a trip on Middlesbrough's magnificent Transporter Bridge, and there's a nice little gag when she goes shopping... ALISON GRAHAM

Football: FA Cup Live

3.30pm BT Sport 2, 5.45pm BBC1

SPORT TV coverage for the FA Cup fourth round is London-centric this year; have you noticed? All but one of the seven games picked for live broadcasts by the BBC and BT Sport are hosted by clubs in the capital.

Crystal Palace v Tottenham Hotspur (k/o 4pm BT Sport 2) is one of them, an all-London, all-Premier League tie. Spurs put seven past poor Tranmere in the previous round, and while Palace could only manage one against Grimsby, they did beat their north London rivals en route to the final in 2016. Holders Chelsea face Sheffield Wednesday (k/o 6pm BBC1), again, in the capital. Tomorrow, Barnet, the only non-league side left, host Brentford (k/o 7.45pm BT Sport 2). JAMES GILL

Dancing on Ice

6.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT There's no theme for this edition, although perhaps we could suggest "sub-zero"? Of late, it's seemed frostier off the rink than on it, with tabloid woes reported between Love Island star Wes Nelson's girlfriend and his professional skater Vanessa Bauer, Gemma Collins's alleged "diva behaviour" and, of course, the pointed barbs from Jason Gardiner, veering towards mean-spiritedness rather than panto melodrama.

Some of us, however, are here for the skating. Currently, the celebrities to beat look like Melody Thornton, James Jordan and Wes Nelson. But, as ever, this could all change: there are still many, many more weeks to come. FRANCES TAYLOR

Les Misérables

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA The warmer currents of the plot are starting to flow together. People still do things for no clear reason. Why is police chief Javert quite so fixated on catching Valjean, even as Paris descends into chaos? He just is. Why is Thénardier similarly obsessed with Valjean? He just is. But if the script sometimes fails to flesh out characters, it has finally given us a romance to root for, in the growing love of Marius and Cosette.

She finds herself alone in that beautiful house with the walled garden: just the place for a moonlight meeting... Meanwhile, around them revolution is stirring: "All we need now is one spark to set off the powder keg and Paris will go up in flames..." DAVID BUTCHER

The Last Survivors

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK An old lady, who survived the Nazi concentration camps as a child, talks of her transportation to Auschwitz. It was a hellish train journey of about eight days in an overcrowded, stinking wagon. On her arrival at Auschwitz, the world fell on its side and could never be righted again. "The terror and aggression hit us immediately... the Germans were waiting." If you were sent to the left you lived, to the right you went to the gas chambers. That was it. Disposal.

This extraordinary, harrowing and powerful film hears testimony from some of the small band of men and women who survived the camps as children and later settled in Britain. AG

JOSH O'CONNOR'S TV CV

Josh O'Connor's star is exponentially on the rise. Since graduating from Bristol Old Vic Theatre School in 2011, he's appeared in Inspector Lewis, Doctor Who and Law & Order: UK as well as films The Riot Club and God's Own Country.

More recently, the 28-year-old has starred in some of the biggest dramas on TV including as Lawrence in The Durrells as well as Peaky Blinders and Ripper Street. He is currently playing Marius in Les Misérables (9pm BBC1).

Last year saw O'Connor nominated for Bafta's EE Rising Star Award, and although he lost out to Daniel Kaluuya, he's about to be propelled to global stardom. He'll play a young Prince Charles in seasons three and four of Netflix's The Crown, alongside Olivia Colman and Helena Bonham Carter. Of landing the role, he said: "I'm very aware it's a formidably talented family to be joining, but I'm reliably informed I have the ears for the part and will fit right in." FRANCES TAYLOR

Wolf Hall

10.00pm Drama

DRAMA Cardinal Thomas Wolsey, aged and rheumy-eyed, has fallen spectacularly out of favour with Henry VIII after he failed to rid the king of his wife, Katherine of Aragon. Their union is fruitless and the king is ready to move on with Anne Boleyn.

As this alluring, award-garlanded 2015 adaptation of Hilary Mantel's novels Wolf Hall and Bring Up the Bodies begins a rerun, her protagonist, lawyer Thomas Cromwell (Mark Rylance, mesmerising) stands quietly in the shadows at Wolsey's side. Watching, listening, waiting. He's a man who feeds on information and yet he remains unreadable. Even when he speaks directly to the king (Damian Lewis), there's no tremor of fear. Just his stark intelligence. AG

Unlocking the Truth

10.00pm W

DOCUMENTARY Presenter Ryan Ferguson takes a bit of a break from investigating potential miscarriages of justice this week, attending an Innocence convention in Texas where he meets someone else who's been through the mill of conviction and exoneration – Amanda Knox.

One of the features that keeps recurring in this series is a lack of faith in the ability of police to do their job honestly. We see footage of Ryan's own interrogation, when he was being encouraged to incriminate himself, and in the case of Kalvin Smith, what one lawyer describes as a clear case of "coercive confession" by the detective in charge. Race is also an issue. It's really not very edifying. GILL CRAWFORD

Ride upon the Storm

11.00pm C4

DRAMA New series In Borgen, writer Adam Price dissected Danish politics. Now he turns his attention to another pillar of the Danish state, the clergy. Johannes Krogh (Scandi stalwart Lars Mikkelsen) is a Copenhagen priest, devout but ambitious, with a smart wife and two sons, one of whom has become a popular military chaplain himself. But although Johannes can give religious succour to some (in one particularly powerful scene), there are cracks in his veneer, and it's not long before these extend into major fissures.

No matter your own faith (or lack of it), this is compelling stuff, beautifully filmed and performed – think of it as a Danish Barchester Chronicles, without Obadiah Slope. GC

NEW MUM
Trixie (Helen George) comforts Betty Marwick (Lisa Ellis)

Call the Midwife

8.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Efforts to persuade Poplar's new mums to sign up for a measles vaccination trial don't go well, largely because over-eager, over-earnest newbie Sister Frances (Ella Bruccoleri) puts the fear of God into them with tales of death and serious illness.

There's only one volunteer, but her baby is a bit too young to take part. Mum, though, is vocally furious, yet maybe something else is going on, maybe there's a very specific reason behind her apparent anxiety? Well, of course there is, this is Call the Midwife. When the tale emerges, it's one of enormous sadness.

Meanwhile, Valerie attends to Betty, a heavily pregnant mother of a bunch of riotous children. But when the baby is born, something is wrong and everyone must tread carefully and other mums say nasty things. Maybe Dr Turner can help? AG

Paedophile Hunters: the Rise of the Vigilantes

from 10am BBC3

Livvy Haydock investigates one way in which the internet is a Wild West of conflicting, complex morals: groups have sprung up who pose online as potential victims of child groomers, only to expose the miscreant when their trap's sprung. They often get results, but can we trust impassioned members of the public to do a delicate job that ought to be the preserve of the police?

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.00 The Last Survivors

RT In this landmark documentary, director Arthur Cary gathers together the testimony of the last Holocaust survivors living in Britain today. Over the course of a year, the film follows these remarkable individuals in their everyday lives, offering an insight into how certain memories have remained with and influenced them, how they see the events of their childhood now, and what concerns them most as they near the end of their lives. We also follow some on personal and profound journeys: one man returns to Auschwitz with his daughter, while a German-Jewish survivor addresses the Bundestag, and another goes back to his hometown for the first time since 1946 to finally mark the death of his brother. See p60.

A runaway romance

P The Leisure Seeker ★★★★ 6.00pm Sky Premiere

This bittersweet drama follows an ageing couple who take a road trip to the Florida Keys in their trusty camper van. Helen Mirren plays a talkative southerner with an unspecified illness. Her husband, Donald Sutherland, is a retired academic who has a form of dementia, which means his memory comes and goes. This leads to situations that are amusing (he accidentally joins a pro-Trump rally) as well as heartbreaking. There aren't many surprises, but the film captures the realities of a long-term relationship to a tee. STEPHEN CARTY

Happy birthday, Rosamund

What We Did on Our Holiday ★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

We wish Rosamund Pike a happy 40th birthday. Building on early TV parts in the likes of Love in a Cold Climate, her stock went up as a Bond girl in Die Another Day. An Education, Made in Dagenham and What We Did on Our Holiday (available all week on iPlayer) finessed her CV, while Gone Girl (now on Netflix) earned her an Oscar nomination. Pike's recent Golden Globe nomination as crusading journalist Marie Colvin in A Private War (in cinemas from 15 February) simply confirms her Hollywood A-list status. ANDREW COLLINS

Lest we forget

Holocaust Memorial Day Sky Select

Sky marks Holocaust Memorial Day today with a triple bill of moving dramas. Wartime tale The Resistance, Warsaw ghetto drama The Zookeeper's Wife and Steven Spielberg's Oscar-showered Schindler's List will provide food for thought on a theme that should make everyone pause for reflection. TOM FOLLEY

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Imagine...

10.45pm BBC1 (N Ireland and Wales: 11.10pm)

ARTS At 61, Jo Brand refuses to fade away; here, in an Imagine... edition called No Holds Barred, she makes a call to arms, urging older women not to be silenced or to be pushed into the background: "I'd encourage all women to be really annoying," she tells Alan Yentob.

Brand is great fun, as you'd expect, or not... as she says herself, "I don't think anyone has ever gone, 'Oh, she's all right'. They go, 'She's great' or 'I can't bear her'."

As the comedian does the circuit of literary festivals to promote her book Born Lippy, Brand talks with caustic candour about her life and her career.

Hugely successful appearances hosting Have I Got News for You (she's filmed collapsing into giggles at a script meeting) and The Great British Bake Off: an Extra Slice have brought her a kind of cuddly fame, but don't call her a national treasure. "I am not a national treasure, I am a national disgrace!" ALISON GRAHAM

NO NATIONAL TREASURE
Comedian – and occasional Have I Got News for You host (below) – Jo Brand gets the Yentob treatment

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ It's always good; it's never not worth tuning in to Only Connect for half an hour of brilliance, wit and general niceness. But this episode, for some reason, is especially bouncy, as well as involving answers so smart that host Victoria Coren Mitchell exclaims, "You're all brilliant! I feel like you're all my brilliant children in the school play!"

Perhaps the cheery vibe is because the Brews, who thought they'd been knocked out, have been recalled to the competition on account of the Dragons withdrawing for personal reasons. The Brews also manage a rare feat on one question in round two: they spot an alternative sequence the setters hadn't intended. DAVID BUTCHER

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA This week's two-parter gets off to a jolting start, as an ordinary-seeming Sunday dinner ends in horror. It leaves the Lyell pathologists examining some barely recognisable remains and talking in those loud, declarative postmortem tones about "contusion" and "transection" and (unpleasantly) "ruptures of the eye globes".

Jack (David Caves) takes centre stage in the story, partly because there's a Northern Irish connection: evidence suggests the return of a style of bomb-making seen in 1980s Armagh, and the involvement of a secretive Loyalist organisation. A shadowy businessmen muses, "Sometimes I wonder if we settled for peace too soon..." DB

Inside Europe: Ten Years of Turmoil

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series Don't run away! You might think you've heard enough about Brexit, but this excellent series lays out, with admirable clarity, the roots of Britain's ruptured relationship with the EU. Even now, probably especially now, it's important to understand how it all began – and there are plenty of big names who are willing to tell us, including George Osborne, Donald Tusk, Nicolas Sarkozy and Jean-Claude Juncker (but not David Cameron, who is seen only in news footage).

The saga begins with Cameron's struggle to placate the Euro-sceptics in the Conservative Party with the promise of an in/out referendum. AG

Cold Feet

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Young Adam (Peter and Jen's son) and his band are making their professional debut at a rather genteel-looking festival, so the entire Cold Feet gang goes along to show support. It turns out to be a weekend of mixed emotions and fortunes – there's a hoary bit of clichéd comedy when David gets stoned on biscuits with a surprise (to him) ingredient, while Jen, who still hasn't told anyone her big secret, decides to seize the day and have some fun. Inevitably things don't work out as she'd planned.

But there's a significant moment for Karen and Adam (Hermione Norris and James Nesbitt) when they take a little trip in an effort to recapture their long-lost youth. AG

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

When Sharon (Letitia Dean, right) headed off overseas to visit Michelle in late December, leaving a despondent Keanu (Danny Walters, right) behind, it felt as though EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) was letting its best storyline slip through its fingers, just when it should have been ratcheting up the tension in time for Christmas. I'd have preferred to see Sharon trying to keep her infidelity a secret from husband Phil than witness Alfie Moon plunge down some stairs after being pushed by a gaggle of screaming Slaters. But what do I know? Thankfully, the queen of the cliffhanger pout is now back in town and being met by the sight of Keanu kissing Louise. Will Shazza be flaring her eyeballs in anger in time for the doof-doofs?

There's potential romance elsewhere, too, as Stacey encourages Jay to invite Ruby on a date, while Mick gets flirty with Linda, only for the moment to be ruined by a broken pump. All of which sounds filthy and not at all suitable for pre-watershed viewing. DAVID BROWN

True Detective

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Following the discovery of Will Purcell's body in a sinister prayer pose deep inside a cave strewn with occultish-looking straw dolls in Arkansas's Ozark Mountains, our charismatic cops Hays (Mahershala Ali) and West (Stephen Dorff) focus on the Roman Catholic church he attended. Its priest seems very creepy but in this mesmerisingly eerie world, where three interlocking timelines add an extra disorienting layer, nothing can be taken for granted.

Woodard, the native American trash-collecting guy, is also attracting more suspicion and opprobrium from the locals. And the community's simmering racial tensions are not helped by the evidence of one particular witness. BD

Sean Bean on Waterloo

9.00pm PBS America

HISTORY As Ned Stark in Game of Thrones and the eponymous rifleman of the Sharpe adventures, Sean Bean is no stranger to the battlefield. But that's just fantasy next to his findings in this lively and sobering two-part history.

Visiting the quaggy Belgian fields of the 1815 battle, he discovers the horrific conditions experienced by the soldiers, the shocking effect of musket balls and the factors that swayed the outcome.

Journal entries and expert input bring alive the events at Ligny and Hougoumont, while one act of mercy shown towards a French drummer boy shines out from the insanity. Tomorrow's conclusion explores Wellington's cavalry. MARK BRAXTON

Two Doors Down

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

SITCOM You might think at the start that tonight's episode looks like being overly gentle.

Gordon's parents are on a visit from Yorkshire so he and Ian bring them round to meet Ian's parents. It's a stilted sort of occasion until tactless neighbour Christine arrives to hurl little darts of unpleasantness in all directions.

The comedy of manners broadens further when Cathy arrives to vie with Christine over who can drop the most homophobic barbs. ("He's quite boring for a gay, isn't he?" she mutters to Gordon's mum.) As Colin brings up the Yorkshire Ripper ("He certainly put you on the map for a wee while") the gathering looks set for disaster. DAVID BUTCHER

Steph and Dom: Can Cannabis Save Our Son?

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The public perception of erstwhile Gogglebox stars Steph and Dom Parker – posh, big house, usually half-cut – is not even half the story. Their son, Max, is epileptic; as a child, seizures so ravaged his brain that now, at 18, his mental age is five. Conventional drugs have terrible side effects and have proved relatively ineffective, but this intimate portrait of family life sees them explore the potential benefits of cannabis oil.

It won't reverse the damage but could save Max's life, meaning his parents don't say goodnight to their son wondering if he will be alive in the morning. It's distressing to witness Max's seizures, but uplifting to see the resilience of this warm, loving family, which also includes Max's younger sister Honor and his carer. BEN DOWELL

Series four of the time-travel romance hasn't been a classic, partly because the days of rollicking passion between Sam Heughan and Caitriona Balfe seem to be over – but also because at times it's been hard (for viewers who haven't read the books, anyway) to see where it's all heading. We'll get some answers here as the series concludes. Of course the show's already been commissioned for two more.

New to Netflix today

P Assassin's Creed ★★★ Netflix

Michael Fassbender heads a stellar cast in this adaptation of the bestselling video game. It's a moody, richly textured if occasionally confusing spectacle, where Fassbender's DNA is the key to ending a centuries-old war between the controlling Templars and the Assassins, who are essentially freedom-loving rebels. Scientist Marion Cotillard has invented a machine that sees Fassbender regress to the time of the Spanish Inquisition to locate what both factions want: the genetic code for free will. ALAN JONES

A mother's redemption

P Who We Are Now ★★★★ 9.50pm Sky Premiere

Julianne Nicholson (I, Tonya) delivers a powerful performance here as Beth, an ex-convict trying to regain custody of her son. Told in parallel with the struggles of an idealistic young lawyer (Emma Roberts), this is a captivating study of society's capacity for forgiveness, and what type of person we regard as "redeemable". The cleverly written script also subtly asks the audience whether we believe Beth deserves another chance, and if we have the right to deliver such a judgement. JAMES LUXFORD

What next for Bosley?

Charlie's Angels ★★
9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

The role of John Bosley, patient mediator between the enigmatic Charlie and his Angels, is played here by Bill Murray almost as a fussy butler. But the upcoming reboot will be switching things around, with director Elizabeth Banks taking the role. It'll be interesting to see how she plays it. TOM FOLLEY

CHILLING OUT Chris Packham, Gillian Burke and Michaela Strachan are all wrapped up

PICK OF THE DAY Winterwatch 8.00pm BBC2

NATURE The likelihood of freezing temperatures and a blanket of snow makes the Cairngorms National Park a chilly prospect for our Winterwatch presenters, but its wildlife always delivers. As Chris Packham puts it, "It's the happening zone in conservation and home to the most amazing diversity of sexy species."

For the next four nights he, Michaela Strachan, Gillian Burke and Iolo Williams will be hunkering down in a lodge on the edge of the Abernethy Caledonian pine forest, where they hope to showcase the whole region's wildlife as well as looking at the projects working to conserve it. This being nature, red in tooth and claw and all that, there may be some disturbing footage. In the past some viewers were upset at scenes of violence (remember the owl who fed her dead chick to its siblings? And the fur-flying squirrel brawl?), so this year there will be warnings. JANE RACKHAM

Britain's Top 100 Dogs Live

7.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Judging by how many labradors I see when out walking my own dog, I'd guess they're still our favourite dog. But this list, compiled from a survey of 10,000 dog owners, may say differently. A celebration of our love for man's best friend, there are heart-warming tales about the springer spaniel who helped his owner overcome depression and the setters that donate blood to help others.

Viewers can vote on the top ten breeds to decide the winner, but with 100 breeds to mention, Ben Fogle and Sara Cox will have to zip through the list like a pair of eager greyhounds. JR

Pubs, Ponds and Power

7.30pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Archaeologist Ben Robinson continues to unearth the often grim stories behind the growth of picture-postcard English villages. Today he's in the Cornish fishing village of Port Isaac, familiar to many viewers as the home of Doc Martin, but which Robinson pinpoints as an incubator of an entrepreneurial spirit that capitalised on international trade in the Tudor period.

Robinson whips along at a brisk pace, but his brief lessons in geography, economics, marine biology and sociology explain succinctly how Port Isaac grew into a booming port until its decline in the 19th century and subsequent rebirth as a 20th-century tourist attraction. DAVID CRAWFORD

The Secret Life of Five-Year-Olds

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The final programme of the series is typically wonderful, packed with major life lessons delivered courtesy of minor stars. The theme is bouncing back from knocks. Vinnie is naturally competitive ("Winning is the best thing in the world!") but he's sensitive, too. When he loses a task in the nursery, he hides in a basket under a duvet, stricken.

Tilly-Marie, meanwhile, can't swing across the monkey bars, but is determined to rectify that, however often she falls off ("I just fell on my bottom!" she cries, in triumph). But it's bespectacled Samuel whose ability to deal with the harshest of blows will floor you. DAVID BUTCHER

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA I'm not sure what viewers in Northern Ireland will make of Silent Witness's take on recent history. The story puts us in the midst of a vendetta that dates back to the Troubles. An ageing IRA bombmaker who now lives in suburban Britain under an assumed identity is looking for revenge after his own wife was killed by a car bomb.

The man's son has no idea of his father's past but tonight gets drawn into the cycle of violence. All this has painful resonance for Jack (David Caves), but on the plus side it involves his father (Richard Durden) in the story: Caves and Durden look so plausibly like father and son the casting director deserves an award of some kind. DB

The title of tonight's Holby City 8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.45pm) is Mad as Hell, which should give you some idea as to what you can expect, especially if you're familiar with the 1976 movie Network in which Peter Finch's news anchorman Howard Beale yelled those very words during an on-air meltdown. Doing a Beale here is Ric Griffin (Hugh Quarshie), who grabs a megaphone and climbs some scaffolding when he finds himself overwhelmed by the pressures that come with a winter crisis.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

We also get the arrival of Ange's sparky daughter Chloe (musical theatre star Amy Lennox), who's introduced as a doctor at a neighbouring hospital. In the weeks ahead, she'll be joined by one-time EastEnders actor Jack Ryder, who'll play Chloe's on-off boyfriend Evan. Oh... and a grief-stricken Frieda is immersing herself completely in work. And yes, she does feature in a seemingly now-obligatory "attacking the punchbag in the basement" scene. DAVID BROWN

Icons

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Lily Cole is convinced that the ultimate icon of the 20th century should be an artist because, whether a painter, sculptor, film-maker or writer, "artists push the boundaries of our culture, reflect the zeitgeist and portray new directions for society". And so she puts forward the argument for Virginia Woolf, Pablo Picasso, Alfred Hitchcock and Andy Warhol.

Cole admits that while she knew some of their work well, others – such as Woolf – were a revelation for her. So which of these four do you think should go through to next week's final (joining the likes of Ernest Shackleton and Nelson Mandela) when all the celebrity advocates return to restate their case? JR

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Who could have predicted that New Lives would run to eight series – with hopefully more to come? It's become Channel 5's most enduring staple, while Ben Fogle has matured into something resembling a worldly adventurer.

In the final instalment of the current run, the series visits South America for, surprisingly, the first time. Maybe there aren't enough hermits for Ben to call on down there. Or perhaps it's the fear of creepy critters that's kept him away. In Brazil's Amazonian jungle, he meets tarantulas, termites and piranhas. Oh, and a Scottish eco-warrior called Chris, who's been fighting the good fight against the illegal wildlife trade. GARY ROSE

Escape at Dannemora

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA This may be the most drably convincing prison drama ever. It helps that it is filmed inside the New York State correctional facility where the story unfolded for real in 2005.

The fug of claustrophobia in the shabby-creepy corridors and yards feels tangible, and director Ben Stiller's long tracking shots pile up a sense of oppression – both for our two inmates (Benicio del Toro and Paul Dano) and the prison worker (Patricia Arquette) who helps them.

So that's the Dannemora side of the title covered, what about the the escape part? 'We're leaving tonight,' growls Del Toro as the tension goes up several notches: but can Arquette's character, Tilly, handle it? DAVID BUTCHER

TWO WHEELS GOOD
Rob (Rob Delaney) is in a rush to get to a birthday party

Catastrophe

10.00pm C4

COMEDY OF THE WEEK It's Sharon's wayward brother Fergal's 40th birthday and Rob is so miffed that his wife didn't organise a shindig for his own big four-oh he only decides to hotfoot it there at the last minute. The event's awkwardness is guaranteed by the presence of Sharon's mum's sexy new boyfriend, with Fran bringing her squeeze (the brilliant Douglas Hodge) along for the ride as well.

It's as rude, funny and sharp as ever, but tonight the show's dark edges flood the canvas more obviously than usual with a riot of middle-aged, boozey soul-searching. As so often, some of the best Catastrophe moments are the quieter, more intimate ones. Like the bedroom scene when Rob reflects on his fairly barren sex life with Sharon and whether a "warm feeling when I look at you" is enough. BEN DOWELL

7.30 Britain's Top 100 Dogs Live
RT Sara Cox and Ben Fogle are the presenters for this year's celebration of the nation's most popular breeds. The programme will run down the chart from 100 to ten, revealing which of the 217 currently registered breeds in the UK have most captured our hearts. The final top ten breeds will then be decided in a live countdown with voting open to all viewers.

Aside from featuring dogs of all descriptions and sharing some wonderful relationships between owner and pet, the programme has facts on the heritage, key characteristics and personality traits of each chosen breed.

Happy New Year, Colin Burstead ★★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

It's your last chance to catch up with Free Fire director Ben Wheatley's latest film, which premiered on BBC2 over Christmas. A slow-burner set in a stately home, it stars Neil Maskell as the host whose attempt to throw a party for family and friends goes awry when his prodigal brother (Sam Riley) turns up. The cast (including Asim Chaudhry, Hayley Squires and Charles Dance) is to the manor born when it comes to improvising cracking and pithy dialogue. ANDREW COLLINS

A zomcom with extra bite

One Cut of the Dead ★★★★ iTunes

Paying affectionate homage to genre film-making while simultaneously shredding its conventions, Shinichiro Ueda's debut feature is a refreshing and masterly satire that has acquired an instant cult following. Opening with a bravura 37-minute single take that chronicles the carnage besetting a zombie-movie shoot at an abandoned water plant, the film's tautly edited action manages to be both riotous and poignant, and announces its writer/director as a talent to watch. DAVID PARKINSON

Desperate Daniel

P Beast of Burden ★★

9.45pm Sky Premiere

Daniel Radcliffe gamely expands his post-Potter portfolio with this high-concept B-movie. He plays a pilot delivering an illegal cargo who juggles radio calls from a drug cartel, a hitman, the DEA and his wife, all while confined to the cockpit of a rickety plane. It aspires to the ingenuity of Tom Hardy's Locke but falls short. AC

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

DANDY DYER

PICK OF THE DAY Danny Dyer's Right Royal Family 9.00pm BBC1

HISTORY The sight of the EastEnders actor comparing the size of Tudor codpieces isn't going to change the minds of viewers who feel that Danny Dyer is dumbing down the BBC's history programming. Truth be told, there's little in this concluding part that would make it into the pages of a Simon Schama coffee-table hardback. And a guest appearance by Dyer's daughter (and Love Island winner) Dani will probably have those critics frothing that the whole show should be banished to ITV2.

But if that had happened, a lot of us would have missed out on some much-needed laughs. Surely there's a place on the BBC for both Civilisations and a 41-year-old man trying to do push-ups in full medieval armour and giving his unique take on a particularly brutal painting of 14th-century torture? "Oh no, have they taken his winkle?" asks Dyer, showing genuine concern. DAVID BROWN

Tom Kerridge's Fresh Start

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD So far, none of Tom Kerridge's reluctant cooks has turned up their nose at his recipe ideas, although one of his younger volunteers does look a little anxious when he's handed a plate of warm salmon salad that includes what, for him, must be an alarming amount of radish, asparagus and fennel. To his credit he gives it a good go.

This week the focus moves from cooking healthy food from scratch to increasing their exercise levels. Suddenly the volunteers have to work hard for the energy bars, goat's cheese frittata and lower-fat plum fool that Tom prepares for them. JANE RACKHAM

The Twinstitute

8.30pm BBC2

HEALTH This series has a simple premise, but each week throws up the kind of eyebrow-raising conclusions that could prove handy. For instance, if you're trying to give up smoking, is therapy or acupuncture more helpful? A pair of 20-something identical twins with a ten-a-day habit test both methods.

Similarly, there's a twins v twins experiment to see whether applying an alcohol gel or regular washing with soap and water works better at cleaning hands. And presenters Chris and Xand van Tulleken find out which helps with concentration the most – classical music or the football manager's friend, chewing gum. DAVID BUTCHER

Cleaning Up

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Just when you think Cleaning Up can't get any worse, there's a slow-motion montage of everyone having fun at a child's birthday party, dancing to Earth, Wind and Fire's September.

Still, it's a bit of joy for cleaner and insider-trader Sam (Sheridan Smith) as her life spirals completely out of control, with agony piled upon agony. As the mysterious "Nancy Oliver" (see what she did there?), Sam attends an uncomfortable meeting with some City wide boys and the surprise face we met last week.

Luckily, by the simple expedient of having her hair hanging loose, rather than tied up, Sam isn't recognised. But surely such a brilliantly inventive disguise can't be maintained? ALISON GRAHAM

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Whenever there's drama involving some kind of corporate backstabbing at Home Farm on Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) , I'm always braced for Howards' Way-style business dialogue. Rearrange these phrases in any order and you've got a regular day in the farm office: "We're in too deep, we can't stop this now", "He'll never find out, just keep going", "Did you get the balance sheets? Tell me you got the bloody balance sheets!" Today, it's Nicola (Nicola Wheeler, right) left terrified that her fraudulent activities will be found out when Graham (Andrew Scarborough, left) demands to see plans for the new housing development. Expect anxious glances and quivering manila folders.

Over in Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV), Seb (aka Harry Styles after a week sleeping in a skip) lies in court at the twins' custody hearing, while Evelyn heads to Italy, believing Tyrone is done with her. Let's hope Maureen Lipman comes back soon as she's been brilliantly vinegary. DAVID BROWN

Phil Spencer's History of Britain in 100 Homes

9.00pm More4

DOCUMENTARY New series Although he starts this eight-part series in an über-modern home (a sparkling, glass-walled cathedral with a helipad), Phil Spencer is really exploring the history of British homes – starting in 11,000 BC with caves, simple huts and communal living in crannogs. Each property reveals something about the way we lived and shows how innovations such as chimneys, indoor toilets and good-quality building materials improved our domestic life.

The owners clearly love their unusual, and sometimes challenging, homes: "You have to be gentle with it," says the proud owner of a hovel – not what you might imagine – in Aylesbury. "It does tend to crumble!" JR

Magnum P.I.

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA I don't know if fans of the original Magnum P.I. have a name (Magnumaniacs, maybe?), but those with a sound knowledge of the show will recognise the name Luther H Gillis. He was the portly fellow private investigator who'd turn up in Hawaii from time to time with his old-school skills to lend Thomas a hand. Well, he's back (now played by Community and The Hangover actor Ken Jeong) to ask our hero to find out the true identity of a man's comatose fiancée who has had mysterious and extensive facial surgery.

It's a case that has a couple of neatly plotted twists and – as with Death in Paradise – the sunny location provides a welcome antidote to our winter chill. DAVID BROWN

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.5pm)

ENTERTAINMENT This is such good fun, even if you don't like panel shows (and I don't). Sue Perkins is the impeccable host and Richard Osman, who is truly the funniest man on television, one of two brilliant team captains – Josh Widdicombe is the other.

There's not much to Insert Name Here: everyone riffs on a first name and tonight it's "Liz". Watch out for some moments of unalloyed joy, including Liz Hurley in a rare acting role, in the terrible film Passenger 57.

You'll also learn, if you didn't already know, that the Queen is a big fan of Pointless, though the identity of the man who gave panellist Gabby Logan a posh watch will for ever remain a secret. AG

SOBERING SCIENCE Angela Rippon with Dr Adam Roberts of the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine

The Truth about Antibiotics 8.00pm BBC1

(Wales: Thursday 7pm BBC2)

DOCUMENTARY Presenter Angela Rippon is at a bowling alley, holding a bowling ball. "Imagine the pins are bacteria and the bowling bowl is antibiotics." OK, I've imagined. Later we're at a running track to signify the race against infection. Then we see a bowl of apples and one of them is rotten to illustrate how antibiotics target bacteria.

Enough with the visual metaphors! I'm not eight, I can take in the very straightforward message of this documentary: that we're using too many antibiotics, bacteria are building up resistance and, in about 15 to 20 years, antibiotics will be useless to fight infection.

It's a sobering thought, though all is not lost. Innovative ways of combating bacteria are being tested, including one that involves the blood of alligators. But maybe the simplest preventative measure is to wash your hands properly. AG

iPlayer (expires 8pm tomorrow)

Avoid this "dramatised" documentary if you simply don't like natural history programmes that shape wildlife footage into a compelling narrative. But this one's up-front about its little edits and additions, they do make it gripping, and the shots it has of a wolf in the Dolomites, split from her pack, are often quite stunning.

8.00 The Truth about Antibiotics
RT The number of bacterial diseases becoming resistant to antibiotics is growing rapidly, and scientists predict that in the future millions could die if new ways to fight such infections aren't found. Angela Rippon investigates the latest scientific breakthroughs, getting up close to some wild alligators whose blood could be key to a solution and having a sniff around a sewage plant where scientists are looking for new treatments. She also meets a GP who is on the front line in the fight against infection and explains how we can all support the effort to keep our existing cures effective. See page 91.

9.00 Danny Dyer's Right Royal Family
RT 2/2. The EastEnders star delves further into his aristocratic roots as he continues his journey through 800 years of British history. Finding out what his ancestors liked to enjoy during their leisure time, Danny also learns about how they lived and what they ate, as well as trying on some of the more stylish threads that they would have worn.
As he hears about Edward II and his French wife Isabella, Danny is delighted to find out that their lives played out like a medieval soap opera. Then it's time for the Walford tough guy to don some 14th-century armour and learn to fight like his 19-times great-grandfather, the noted medieval knight Sir Henry "Hotspur" Percy. Before finding out about his Tudor ancestors, Danny brushes up on his etiquette, learning how to sing and dance like one of Henry VIII's courtiers. And as he gets to grips with a ruff, Danny ends his investigation into his bloodline when his own family, in all their Tudor finery, join him at an Elizabethan sugar banquet. See page 90.

How to Really Win at War
8.00pm Historian Saul David gives his view on the decisive matters

7.00pm Beyond 100 Days (S) (HD)
Followed by Weather (S) (HD)

7.30 Pubs, Ponds and Power: the Story of the Village
4/6. Milton Abbas. Ben Robinson reveals how one man's wealth and power transformed this part of Dorset. An 18th-century landowner destroyed a town – uprooting its residents, because it ruined his view – and had a new village built on his estate.
First shown on BBC1 South Rptd 2.30am (S) (HD)

8.00 Bullets, Boots and Bandages: How to Really Win at War
1/3. Staying Alive. Military historian Saul David tells the stories of how wars have been won and lost through history – not in the bravado of the front line, but in the military planning of the backroom. He begins by looking at how to keep an army fed and housed.
Series producer Cameron Balbirnie
Executive producer Eamon Hardy (R) (S) (HD)

9.00 Andrew Marr's History of Modern Britain
3/5. Paradise Lost. In 1964, Harold Wilson, the "grammar-school boy made good", was elected prime minister of a country that was fast embracing a revolutionary spirit of progress. But while the Swinging Sixties unleashed dreams of a fairer, liberated future, Wilson's governments presided over years of industrial conflict, stagnation and decline.
Director/Producer Francis Whately
First shown on BBC2 Repeated 3am (S) (AD)

10.00 How We Built Britain
2/6. The Heart of England – Living It Up. David Dimbleby visits the great country houses from the reign of Elizabeth I. He marvels at the forest of chimneys on Burghley House's roof, decodes the riddle of the Triangular Lodge and visits Shakespeare's schoolroom, before ending his journey in a rare Puritan chapel.
Director/Producer Sally Benton (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

11.00 Castles: Britain's Fortified History
1/3. Instruments of Invasion. Sam Willis looks at the castle's appearance in Britain with the Normans, and the longest siege on English soil at Kenilworth Castle 200 years later.
Series director/producer Ben Southwell (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

12 midnight Immortal Egypt with Joann Fletcher 4/4. Egypt's downfall. (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

Noel Clarke rising

Brotherhood ★★★★ 10.45pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Noel Clarke has come a long way from dodging lasers and monsters as Mickey Smith in Doctor Who. Now a Bafta and Olivier-winning actor, he became the driving force behind the 'Hood trilogy, writing and starring in edgy urban drama Kidulthood, and adding directing duties for sequels Adulthood and Brotherhood (see Film of the Day, p43). The west Londoner has also written graphic novel The Troop, while his Sky 1 cop show Bulletproof is due to return for a second series. The man's unstoppable. JEREMY ASPINALL

Leaving iPlayer tonight

Absolutely Fabulous: the Movie ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Nearly 25 years after their first series, sitcom socialites Eddy and Patsy get their own movie. Here, the shambolic duo (played as ever by Jennifer Saunders and Joanna Lumley) go on the run after being suspected of killing Kate Moss, and try to make a new life on the French Riviera. The comedy hurries along at a fast pace, throwing in gags alongside the pair's unique perspective on everything from ageing to social media. Camp, chaotic fun. JAMES LUXFORD

A cult classic

The American Friend ★★★★ MUBI

Dennis Hopper stars as the shady loner who persuades an ailing art restorer into contract killing in director Wim Wenders's dazzling adaptation of Patricia Highsmith's Ripley's Game. MUBI will present further Wenders film finery in February, including his remarkable 1984 road movie Paris, Texas. ALAN JONES

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

Fred and Rose West: the Real Story with Trevor McDonald

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY It's 25 years since human remains were unearthed from beneath a shabby house on the fringes of Gloucester city centre. It was the home of odd-job man Fred West and his wife Rose and had been a kind of sordid bed and breakfast, where drifting, vulnerable young women fetched up and, more often than not, were never seen alive again.

Number 25 Cromwell Street lives in infamy as the murderous, sado-masochistic lair of an unspeakable couple who killed and tortured not only young strangers, but also their own children.

Here Trevor McDonald fronts a documentary that promises new insights into the Wests (no previews were available). There are contributions from people who have never spoken before, including a former Cromwell Street lodger, a West family member and the sisters of one of the young victims.

The programme also attempts to unpick the dynamic between Fred and Rose.

Would I Lie to You? The Best Bits

8.00pm BBC1 (not Wales)

COMEDY There's a moment in this compilation of best bits when David Mitchell becomes almost incapable with laughter over a Bob Mortimer story involving Chris Rea, a bath and an egg. "If anyone else made this allegation, we wouldn't give it a moment's thought!" he manages to gasp when his team decide this ludicrous tale is true.

In other snippets, Jo Brand turns into a proper Miss Marple when she cross-examines Shaun Williamson over the details of his absurd nightclub story, while Lee Mack manages to offend both Rob Brydon and Mitchell by telling them that he was invited to the recent royal wedding. JANE RACKHAM

The Secret Life of the Zoo

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Getting some of Chester Zoo's animals to do what's required can be a challenge for the keepers. Eastern black rhino Malindi, for instance, is famously stubborn, but she's grumpier than usual because she's at the end of her second, lengthy pregnancy. However, somehow the stroppy rhino must be coaxed into a new enclosure to give birth safely.

That's a doddle compared with encouraging two 23-foot-long reticulated pythons to co-operate with a house move, because they're one of the few snakes that prey on humans. And what do you do when a new mum or dad takes a dislike to their offspring? JR

Young Sheldon

8.30pm E4

SITCOM "Five more minutes?" goes a familiar bedtime cry over a video game. It's not ten-year-old Sheldon who utters it, however, but his grandmother. Such is their addiction that she even takes Sheldon out of school so they can both play.

Elsewhere, George and his elder son Georgie are at loggerheads over the school football team, but the problem becomes academic – if that's not the wrong word – when Georgie reveals a secret skill. Helping out at the garage, it turns out "he's got a sixth sense for tyre damage". It's a nice detail to tie in with parent show The Big Bang Theory, and sees the lad cradling a tyre on a turntable like Patrick Swayze with a clay pot in Ghost. MARK BRAXTON

Hospital

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Fans of this series know that it's never an easy ride, emotionally. Tonight the cameras are at Alder Hey Children's Hospital, Liverpool, following cardiac surgeons as they operate on patients with life-threatening heart conditions. You feel for tiny three-month-old Edith's parents as they see her wheeled off on a trolley for a high-risk operation to build a new pulmonary artery.

The calm and skill of surgeon Ram Dhannapuneni as he completes the 11-hour procedure is staggering. It's just as well he loves his work: "The job is rewarding," he says, simply, with a broad smile. "Sometimes I feel that if I were to be reborn I would do the same job." DAVID BUTCHER

EastEnders (7.30pm, 8.30pm BBC1) fans were recently left wondering if they'd dreamt a week's worth of episodes when Mel and Hunter (Tamzin Outhwaite and Charlie Winter, right) appeared to vanish without explanation after doing away with Ray Kelly and burying him in woodland. One minute we had a firearm being waved around and a shot ringing out, then... nothing. It was like Mel and Hunter didn't exist any more and the Men in Black had turned up to erase everyone's memories.

Well, you can stop worrying that you're losing a grip on your sanity because the writers have recovered the Mel and Hunter storyline document (it had reportedly been mislaid under a leg of Arthur Fowler's memorial bench) and the two characters are now back on screen. Tonight's double bill sees the brooding but bonkers Hunter reassuring mum Mel that he's fine. Well, as fine as a person who'd now score 100 per cent on an online Are You a Psychopath? quiz can possibly be. DAVID BROWN

American History's Biggest Fibs with Lucy Worsley

9.00pm BBC4

HISTORY In a career first, Lucy Worsley launches a nuclear bomb. Not really, but she's given one of the keys to destruction when she visits a missile silo site, now a museum, in the Arizona desert. The other is in the hands of its former commander, and in a co-ordinated "strike" she issues the orders and death is dispatched.

Again, not really, but there's something eerie and terrifying about the banality of turning a couple of keys and watching a few buttons light up, which, if this had been real, would have signalled mass death. This informative series ends with Worsley examining the myths of the American Dream. AG

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA There are healthy signs that this throbbing fever dream of a drama is going to be more enjoyable in the second series than it was in the first. A typical line of dialogue has Tim Roth's character, Jim, confronting his wife about their daughter: "Did I kill her boyfriend? Because if I killed her boyfriend then he must have killed Pete [Jim's young son], so I'm off the hook, right?"

This could come across as overheated bunk, but Roth delivers most of his lines with a sort of casual jokiness, as if, amid all the murder, he can't understand what the fuss is about – and that works a treat. Tonight, daughter Anna takes refuge with the Ammonite brethren, but Jim comes after her. DAVID BUTCHER

Camping

10.00pm, 10.35pm Sky Atlantic

SITCOM New series It seems churlish to begrudge Americans the chance to remake British TV series in their own image, but selling them back to us is another matter. Here, Julia Davis's bleak, oddball comedy about an excruciating camping trip is reworked, but fans of Vicki Pepperdine's terse uptightness may struggle to accept Jennifer Garner in the role of the controlling Fiona (now called Kathryn), who's arranged the trip to celebrate the 45th birthday of her sappy husband (David Tennant).

Davis's dark magic is lost in translation, with even little things irking – why swap the bizarre fishbowl helmet of Fiona's cosseted son for the more mundane American football one of Kathryn's? DAVID CRAWFORD

STRADDLING TWO WORLDS
DI Jack Mooney (Ardal O'Hanlon) tackles another case with a tropical backdrop

Death in Paradise

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA "Wonderful world, beautiful people", sings Jimmy Cliff over the post-solving-the-case, having-a-beer scene tonight. But this drama likes to show the ugly people that also exist in Saint Marie, alongside the kind that Cliff sings about. It's a feat to straddle the two worlds as deftly as Death in Paradise does – and no doubt this achievement is partly why it kills in the ratings.

Tonight, the dark side delivers a case involving one of those nest-of-vipers families where everyone bears a grudge. An arrogant coffee millionaire is shot by the pool of his villa after it emerges that he is selling the family plantation. Did his bitter sister (Anna Chancellor) do it, or his new, much younger wife? As Jack wrestles with the case and fixates on a missing bookmark, the newest member of his team, Ruby, spills a secret that could end her police career. DAVID BUTCHER

from 10am BBC3

It's a while since a major flashpoint reminded us of it, but one of the many simmering crises in US politics is the rise of groups who flirt with, or have simply adopted, fascism. This documentary charts the growing tensions in President Trump's first year in office, following "AntiFa" activists and culminating with the terrible events in Charlottesville in August 2017.

8.00 Wonders of Life
4/5. Brian Cox heads to Australia to explore the effect an animal's size has on its physiology and longevity. A close encounter with a great white shark reveals how its contours have been shaped by the physics of water, while a trip to a rainforest shows how some insects appear to defy gravity.
Director/Producer Paul Olding
First shown on BBC2 Repeated 2am (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 American History's Biggest Fibs with Lucy Worsley
RT 3/3. Supremacy. Lucy Worsley holds a mirror up to the United States in the 1950s and early 1960s. By this time it had emerged as a global superpower, but contrary to the usual Panglossian depictions of a golden era of abundance, harmony and the realisation of the American Dream, there were deep flaws in its make-up. For this was a time of racial conflict, the ever-present fear of nuclear annihilation and considerable government deception. See page 101.
Director/Producer Tom Cholmondeley
Signed repeat 3am (S) (HD)

10.00 Britain's Treasure Islands
2/3. Southern Ocean. Continuing his trip to the UK's overseas territories, Stewart McPherson visits the remote Tristan da Cunha, which provides a home to the entire world population of a spectacular albatross. Then, in the Falkland Islands, he meets a fearsomely intelligent bird of prey. As he learns about Ernest Shackleton's ill-fated Antarctic expedition, Stewart witnesses one of the greatest wildlife spectacles on South Georgia.
Director/Producer Stewart McPherson (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

11.00 Bill Bailey's Jungle Hero
1/2. Wallace in Borneo. The comedian heads to Indonesia to follow in the footsteps of Victorian naturalist Alfred Russel Wallace, who devised the theory of evolution through natural selection independently of Charles Darwin.

The oil rig in a parking lot

Deepwater Horizon ★★★★

9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Director Peter Berg wanted his disaster movie (review, p44) to be as true to life as possible, and plans included shooting on an actual rig. When that idea fell through, he decided to build his own in a parking lot in New Orleans. It took three million pounds of steel and 85 welders working for eight months to complete the 85% scale reproduction of the real Deepwater Horizon rig. The structure included a helicopter pad and two lifts to carry cast and crew around. TOM FOLLEY

Arnie does angst

Aftermath ★★★ Amazon Prime

Arnold Schwarzenegger gives one of the best performances of his career in this sombre, slow-burning drama, which was recently added to Prime. He plays Roman, a construction foreman who is devastated when his wife and daughter are killed in a plane crash. Consumed by grief, he tracks down the air traffic controller (Scoot McNairy) he believes is responsible.That doesn't mean a gun-toting revenge mission, however. Instead, director Elliott Lester offers a mournful and affecting study of guilt and grief. STEPHEN CARTY

This hugely enjoyable documentary focuses on the early years of Oasis, the iconic rock band who rose to fame during the early 1990s. The archive footage is fascinating to watch and is inevitably dominated by Noel and Liam Gallagher, both of whom are funny and unusually frank. SC

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY

Six Nations Rugby

7.25pm BBC1

SPORT France v Wales (kick-off 8pm) This is the beginning of the end of an era for Wales. Coach Warren Gatland is leaving the national side after the 2019 Rugby World Cup, making this his last Six Nations. Since taking over as coach in 2007, Wales have won two grand slams and three Six Nations titles.

Captain Alun Wyn Jones is the only surviving player from Gatland's first squad, a second-row giant and the heartbeat of the side. Only a man of his stature could face down France on a Friday night under the lights and win – no wonder Gatland has called it their "toughest" match of the tournament. It may feel strange starting the Six Nations tonight rather than the traditional Saturday slot, but don't be fooled: this match is no false start. JAMES GILL

Jeremy Wade's Mighty Rivers

8.00pm ITV (N Ireland: 10.45pm; not Border Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY This week Jeremy is on the Yangtze in China, where the river's turbid, tea-brown waters hold little life. The obvious reasons are pollution and over-fishing, but there's a non-obvious reason, too: dredging. Vast amounts of sand are gouged from the river bed to make the concrete used by China's construction industry, and in the process the waters are muddied.

The low visibility threatens sturgeon and paddlefish, but Wade does spot a pod of the world's only species of freshwater porpoise. He also visits the Three Gorges Dam, the scale of which is hard to fathom. Its upstream reservoir is 400 miles long. DAVID BUTCHER

The Victorian House of Arts and Crafts

9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY It's taken four weeks but at last Keith Brymer Jones bursts into tears. It's a familiar sight to anyone who watched The Great Pottery Throw Down as Brymer Jones, his voice bubbling with emotion, becomes overwhelmed. There are two items in the last episode of this Arts and Crafts experiment that take hold of his heart, but he's not the only one who is overcome. One of the craftspeople who's been living in that lovely house on the Welsh border really doesn't want to leave, and has a bit of a sniffle.

For the final challenges, everyone is paired up to make an object and the group collaborates on a pergola. ALISON GRAHAM

Grantchester

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA It's a cheerless visit to the Cambridge countryside this week. The ever-present dark currents in the drama seem to have washed over the whole thing, bathing the characters in gloom. Even new vicar "Call me Will" Davenport, with his 150-watt smile, gets dragged down.

"Is it always like this?" he wonders aloud, as tension at the vicarage becomes suffocating. Well no, there are usually shafts of sunlight, but Leonard and Mrs Chapman have reached a terrible impasse and Geordie's wife is in agonies after the encounter with her predatory work colleague. A murder case involving a weirdly intense farming family completes the picture. DB

Now, I'm not saying that Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) is repeating itself, but if Bill Murray woke up in tonight's episodes with I Got You Babe coming from his clock radio, then I wouldn't be surprised. Because, yes, Peter is once again moving in for a kiss with Carla and Corrie doesn't want me to reveal how she responds. Join us next week when Peter will no doubt be chancing his arm once again.

Elsewhere, there's good news when Rita hears from Norris (hooray!), only to be left crushed when she finds out he's gone travelling with Emily and Freda and wants to sell the Kabin (boo!).

And Jenny is being encouraged to put on the war paint and face her customers. But it seems as though she needs a drop of Dutch courage before entering the bar. Watch yourself, Jenny, the last time you resorted to those tactics, you ended up sending Liz McDonald over your car bonnet in a blur of leopardskin and pleather.

DAVID BROWN

Perception

9.00pm 5 USA

DRAMA At first, Daniel Pierce (Will & Grace's Eric McCormack) appears to be a collage of TV detective quirks. He's a college professor like Fitz on Cracker, has Inspector Morse's love of crosswords and classical music, Monk's poor social skills as well as Sherlock's upturned overcoat collars. But then we get the twist: he also experiences schizophrenic hallucinations.

If you can buy into the conceit of a serious mental disorder being an invaluable aid to solving mysteries, you'll find this US import (first shown on Alibi) likeable enough. But I found its implausibility off-putting and perhaps even in questionable taste. But hey, at least it's not as po-faced and grim as the BBC's short-lived River, which explored similar terrain. DAVID BROWN

Rob and Romesh vs the NFL

9.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY "We complement each other: he's sad, I'm happy," says Rob Beckett of fellow stand-up Romesh Ranganathan. Which is why this mates-on-sporting-missions caper works so well. This week, their quest to find out whether American football can take off in the UK kicks off in Philadelphia – home of SuperBowl champions the Eagles – for a spot of training. But fitness is clearly an issue. As Romesh says, "I became short of breath eating from this bag of pretzels."

The banterous boys become hilariously competitive in front of star players Rick Lovato and Hackney-born Jay Ajayi, and you'll feel the tension before their half-time challenge in a game at Wembley. MARK BRAXTON

QI

10.00pm BBC2

QUIZ What is the weirdest place to feel another person, Sandi Toksvig asks the teams. There's a barrage of suggestions: Loughborough... Salford... Bognor Regis... your perineum! Actually, it's none of those but the theme – phenomena – may give you a tiny clue.

This round does at least inspire Cariad Lloyd and Alan Davies to perform some TS Eliot karaoke, which is almost as much fun as watching Josh Widdicombe competing against the man with the world record for... no, I won't spoil your enjoyment. Instead you might like to consider what's the most terrifying thing about Anne Robinson. The panellists don't get that one right, either.

Friday Night Jukebox Live!

10.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Here's an exciting chance for fans of the BBC music archive (and who isn't?) to choose what gets shown. But as said resource is exhaustive (I've always imagined it to be like that warehouse at the end of Raiders of the Lost Ark), the producers of this live interactive special are confining us to the theme of friendship. A whole raft of rare and barely seen clips can be chosen from bbc.co.uk/jukebox: everything from Paul Simon to Ed Sheeran via James Taylor and REM.

Last year's three-hour special marking 30 years since the final Whistle Test showed the mileage to be had from a good ransacking of the BBC catacombs, backed up by live interviews and songs. Bob Harris really earned his crust that night – let's hope Jukebox jivers Phill Jupitus and Clare Grogan can marshal this 90-minute gig with equal aplomb. MB

Orange Is the New Black star Natasha Lyonne co-creates and co-writes a comedy with an alluring premise. She plays a woman who dies on the way home from her birthday party, only to find herself back at the party, only to die in a different way on the way home from the party... Lyonne's natural air of suppressed angry chaos as she starts questioning her own sanity makes her a logical fit for the role.

7.25 Six Nations Rugby
RT France v Wales
The opening match of the championship at Stade de France in Paris (kick-off 8.00).

Both sides are enduring injury woes, with France coach Jacques Brunel drafting in five uncapped players to help plug the gaps while Warren Gatland has named two players currently sidelined by concussion, Leigh Halfpenny and Ross Moriarty, in the Wales squad.

Wales come into the tournament on the back of a series of triumphant autumn internationals and will beat their record of 11 straight international victories, which has stood since 1910, if they win their first three games. But the last time they played in Paris, in 2017, the match ran to a gruelling 100 minutes after a series of late scrums, with France overturning a five-point deficit in the extra time to snatch the win.

A love that must come out

P Love, Simon ★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

The travails of teenage romance get even more complicated when you're hiding your true sexuality, as a 17-year-old boy discovers in this drama. Nick Robinson's Simon is a pretty average middle American adolescent – except that he's increasingly anxious about coming out if it means friends and his doting parents (Josh Duhamel, Jennifer Garner) will start treating him differently. Accessible and inclusive, this is the first mainstream Hollywood teen movie to feature a gay central character. TREVOR JOHNSTON

John Ford's Welsh classic

How Green Was My Valley ★★★★★

3.15pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Director John Ford may be synonymous with the western but he won his Oscars for films like How Green Was My Valley, a Welsh mining drama starring Walter Pidgeon and Maureen O'Hara. In 1942, it stole the glory from Orson Welles's Citizen Kane, winning best director and picture. You'd think the irascible Ford would be triumphant at his victory, but he hated awards ceremonies and was quite fond of Welles. The feeling was mutual. ANDREW COLLINS

Way out West... in Israel

Billy Two Hats ★★★

11.25am TCM

This British-financed western about a bungled robbery was filmed in Israel, which looks like Spain pretending to be New Mexico. It has some decent action sequences (thanks to Ted Kotcheff, director of First Blood) and the novelty of the upright Gregory Peck ostensibly playing a Scottish baddie. ADRIAN TURNER

Local hero

Mark Steel has discovered that every town is funny in different ways – but mind your language in Hull...

Mark Steel's in Town
Thursday 6.30pm Radio 4

THE REASON I love making Mark Steel's in Town – all 50 episodes so far – is because of what happens when you come across a strange metal box by the harbour in Hull.

It was placed there during Hull's year as City of Culture in 2017, and somehow it records anything said by passers-by, and the words immediately light up on massive bulbs on a tower about 200 yards down the road. So if someone mumbles, "I've got an itchy arse today," they get a shock when they see their comment lit up for the whole city.

Edited by

Inevitably, as word got round about this machine, thousands of people marched to the harbour to stand by it, calling out the most obscene thing they could think of, so they could enjoy seeing their filthy prose flashing across the area. In response, a computer engineer was sent to adapt the software, so it didn't repeat any swear words.

I mentioned all this during the recording of the Hull edition of In Town, and asked for the rudest swear word anyone still managed to trick the machine into repeating, and without a moment of hesitation one man shouted, "Leeds!" Of course he did, because every town is naturally funny.

The first show in the latest series came from Hastings, where many people move down from the capital, as the houses are much cheaper. These incomers have been given a name by people brought up in the town – "FILTH", which stands for Failed In London, Try Hastings.

So far, every place I've been to has provided lines like this, lines that only make sense to the people of that town. It also seemed to make perfect sense in Hastings that almost every local business is named after the Battle of Hastings, including a 1066 Jazz Club, a 1066 massage parlour, a 1066 skip hire service, 1066 Waxing for Men, and a building firm called William the Concreter.

'Hastings has a building firm called William the Concreter'

Every town is equally generous with some aspect of its history. In the last series I went to Bedford, and came across a religious group called the Panacea Society. The basis of their faith was that, after much investigation, they'd concluded that the Garden of Eden was in Bedford.

So they bought the house with the garden, which is now a brilliantly crazy museum. Among their exhibits is a series of books, which the group's prophet claims are "conversations I had with the Devil".

A documentary shows one follower of the cult, saying she read the books and commenting, "The thing with the Devil is he was SO rude." I can't help agreeing – even if you're the Devil, there's no excuse for bad manners.

For those who aren't familiar with the programme, each week I perform a show in a town, written specially for the local area, and I'm as rude – though not as rude as the Devil – about the place as I can be.

For example, when it was suggested we make a show in Gibraltar in 2016, in a glorious theatre carved inside the Rock itself, it felt the only possible opening line should be, "I'm so pleased that at last we've been able to make one of these shows in Spain".

The lazy image of Gibraltar is of an angry enclave of anti-Spanish expats, but they seemed remarkably warm and self-aware. I mentioned at one point how many shops boast of their "Britishness", with huge boards that say "BRITISH fish 'n' chips", and a chocolate shop that says "BRITISH chocolate", and you expect the chemists to go, "BRITISH Anusol – you don't want anything Spanish going up there".

The people there seemed, as they do everywhere, joyously eager to take part in pulling apart the daftness of their own quirks. Because the other quality shared by every place I've visited is that they are all gloriously different.

When every town centre seems increasingly identical, it can feel as if nothing is local any more. But every town still has its own world, its own sayings, heroes, rivals, accents, places to avoid, all of which combine to create a shared sense of community.

That's why, during the recording in the small north Devon town of Lynton, a woman marched on to the stage with a barrel. I asked what she was doing and she said, "I don't care whether this is going on radio or not, we always have a raffle during an event at the town hall."

It may also explain why, in Penzance, several people warned me, "Don't go to St Ives. You won't like it up there, Mark. They're all posh." So I asked the audience if they thought this was true, and a woman shouted, "They ARE posh! They've got their own dentist!" And why people in Northampton are so proud of the sign at their hospital, which says, "Family planning – use rear entrance".

But throughout the series, the only time someone found an issue too disturbing to listen to was on the island of Portland, in Dorset, where it's considered a swear word to say "rabbit". I talked about this during the recording, careful not to say the rude word. But at the end I said, "To finish off a lovely evening, I'd like you all to join me in singing the classic old Chas 'n' Dave song…"

And I realised from the distressed faces in front of me that saying "rabbit" was far worse than telling the people of Gibraltar they're in Spain. This was serious. If ever someone puts a strange metal box on Portland that lights up words on a tower nearby, please make sure they get the software not to repeat the word "rabbit".

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama: The Bottle Factory Outing
Saturday 2.30pm Radio 4

"Beryl Bainbridge's novel, The Bottle Factory Outing, published in 1974, was inspired by her experiences at Belloni's wine warehouse in London where, just like Freda and Brenda, she and a friend worked sticking labels on wine bottles," says Sue Johnston, who narrates this unique and experimental piece.

Recorded at the BBC Radio Theatre in London's Broadcasting House, it is part-drama and part-improvisation as the two leading ladies, playing Freda and Brenda, discuss why the story has been so important to them ever since they first performed it at drama school together. Luckily for us, they happen to be two of the country's finest actors, especially when it comes to pitch-black Bainbridge humour – Maxine Peake (right) and Diane Morgan. Add Johnston into the mix and you have a veritable powerhouse of female talent, delivering a play that pulls no punches.

Written years before the #MeToo campaign went viral, this drama examines the issue of consent from two very different women's perspectives, and throws in questions about our views on "expected" and "acceptable" behaviour when it comes to men from a European, rather than a white British, background.

Bainbridge was definitely ahead of her time and this has a decidedly au courant feel.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week…

In a totally unsurprising move, Brian is refusing to back down over the decision he made at the partnership meeting, despite the trouble he risks bringing to others. Jennifer implores him to change his mind, but with his dander up, it's unlikely that Brian will see sense.

Johnny struggles to deal with an emergency at Bridge Farm that could have terrible consequences. Pat, meanwhile, tries to voice her concerns to Helen, but will she allow her mum's opinion to cloud her judgement of Lee?

And as Kenton and David fear for Elizabeth as she continues to bury her head in the sand, Jolene hatches a plan to help her sister-in-law. But will she succeed where the rest of her family have failed? DAVID BROWN

The face of radio

When the publicity machine breaks down

WHAT A DIFFERENCE six months make. Half a year ago, amid the utmost secrecy, I was whisked into Global's global headquarters in Leicester Square in London before 6am for a photoshoot. As the latest (giant moon-) face to join LBC I was to be slathered with make-up, propped up in the LBC studio and forced to grin like a ninny until I'd been captured from every angle. It was vital the world had some snaps to herald this new dawn for broadcasting.

As I relayed to you at the time, my primary concern was that my face was falling off. I'd returned from holiday late the previous evening, and despite all attempts at skin protection, the Corsican sun had done more damage to my fine features than Chris Grayling did to the criminal justice system. I passed the Singing Detective in the corridor and he said, "That looks nasty."

The kindly make-up artist could not have been more supportive. If she was privately thinking, "Mum was right, I should have gone into engineering," or "It would be easier just to behead him," she gave no hint, and with the utmost care and professionalism proceeded to turn the surface of Neptune into something smoother than a Cadbury's Caramel.

'The Global media team escort me in case I nick stuff'

In subsequent photoshoots over the following months, there was no sign of the original make-up artist. The Global media relations team told me the experience was so shocking for her that she had gone into hiding/rehab/the nunnery/the European Research Group. Their mocking was relentless but since I rely on them to lie about my age to the press, I let it pass. (I'm 42.)

This week I did an interview for one of the papers and another photoshoot was required. I'm happy to report that the original make-up artist was there waiting to prepare me. I turned to the Global media team who escort me everywhere in case I nick stuff, and said, "See, she's not a nun!" and no one knew where to look.

She remarked that my skin was looking much better and before long (45 minutes) I was ready to be photographed.

ANDY BARNES / FAME FLYNET

The newspaper photographer was all set up and all I was required to do was sit, or stand, follow his instructions and shut my gob. I felt I did an excellent job of staring into the middle distance, or at the Global media team who were assembled, just out of shot.

The photographer declared himself a fan, which I assumed at first was professional politeness. But he said that, growing up abroad, his father had always listened to and revered the BBC World Service. And he said he loved me on PM. And here's what he said next: "I knew you had left because you weren't there but I had no idea where you'd gone until today. Sorry."

I TURNED TO THE Global media team. Having been mocked mercilessly by these people for my face fandango, at last I had something to hit them with. They had witnessed the photographer's experience and I enquired as to why this dedicated Eddie Mair fan had no idea I had joined LBC. It was their job, wasn't it? Publicity?

Revenge at last for all those jibes.

They fell as one to their knees and begged my forgiveness. I decided to show mercy and had only three of them fired.

I think I'll live to regret my ruthlessness. If stories start appearing in the papers about how vile I am, or that I am 53, you'll know why.

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays at 4pm

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Sex, lies and podcasting

The last thing I wish to do is add my voice to the chorus of men in the media falling over themselves at the moment to point out that women are superior in every respect. However, the rise of the podcast has brought me face to face with one shameful aspect of my fellow owners of the Adam's apple. It's this. All men are, to some extent, windbags. This tendency is most cruelly exposed in the podcast medium.

A game of two presenters..?

The podcast relies on people keeping talking at all costs and it's a field that's full of co-hosting pairs, the male half of which seems to do most of the talking. The Game is the football podcast from The Times. It is allegedly co-hosted by Natalie Sawyer and Gabriele Marcotti but even the most glancing encounter will find Marcotti monopolising the conversation, asking the questions, immediately answering them and then lampooning what he thinks the others would have said if he'd only allowed them. Marcotti knows plenty and he's very entertaining but he might be slightly more entertaining if he could entertain the possibility that he might just be going on a bit.

A long time in politics

The same thing happens in the world of politics with the podcast from the New Statesman. This features the estimable Helen Lewis and Stephen Bush who both know an insane amount about politics. But whereas Helen delivers her points with the admirable economy of a teacher who knows Year 9 will not remain still for ever, Stephen launches into his in leisurely fashion, as though it's a university tutorial and it's ages until tea will be ready.

Let's talk about... no, let's not

There are times during most male conversation where you sense the speaker has forgotten how he began and hasn't have a clue where he might finish. Furthermore, men have a tendency to either make things up or at least embellish them. Unexpected Fluids, Radio 1's podcast about sex, which is one of the most extraordinary things ever put out under the BBC's imprimatur, is presented by Alix Fox and Riyadh Khalaf (right). Whatever aspect of sex they're talking about the latter can be relied upon to pitch in with some preposterous story about the wild erotic adventure of somebody he went to school with. I'm reminded of the stories we men used to tell each other in the pub as students. Half of those weren't true either.

Between the Ears
9.30pm Radio 3

Listeners looking for a respite from the January blues are advised to dip into this documentary, which finds 87-year-old swimming instructor Pierre Gruneberg reminiscing amid the aquatic sounds of a Mediterranean summer. Born a German Jew, Gruneberg escaped the Nazis to spend a lifetime teaching people – including the likes of Liza Minelli (above) – how to swim at the Grand Hotel du Cap-Ferrat in the south of France; a skill he now hopes to instil in presenter Jane Ray. Ray's splashing and paddling lend themselves to Between the Ears' dreamlike format, though the most surreal moment undoubtedly comes when Gruneberg recounts sitting down to dinner at the hotel with a former SS guard. TOM GOULDING

A Broken Heart in a Warzone
7.05pm BBC World Service

This is the drama that won the English as a Second Language prize in the BBC World Service/ British Council International Playwriting Competition last year. Written by Aziz H, it's a pitch-black comedy set in an unnamed warzone where a couple of amiable housebreakers – less tooled-up than their victims – encounter an adulterous affair that scuppers their plans. And don't mention the big cat. How refreshing and enjoyable to have a new drama that challenges our perspectives.

Today's Choices

Private Passions
12 noon Radio 3

Writer, novelist, academic, free-speech campaigner and current chair of the Royal Society of Literature, the Polish-born, Canadian-bred, UK-based Lisa Appignanesi (above) is the very model of a public intellectual. In conversation with Michael Berkeley, she reflects on the "ghosts" that haunted her immigrant childhood, how music helped her cope with the anger she felt at her husband's recent death, and the new-found joy that the birth of a grandson has given her. Her musical choices range from Monteverdi's L'Orfeo, epitomising the madness of grief at the loss of a loved one, via Glenn Gould playing Debussy (for once, not Bach), to Laurie Anderson's O Superman (with its prophetic resonances of 9/11) and the sheer physicality of female singers Lotte Lenya and Bessie Smith. MARK PAPPENHEIM

The First Time...
1.00pm 6 Music

Frederick "Toots" Hibbert is one of the most influential artists in reggae; the 1968 Toots and the Maytals song Do the Reggay practically coined the term. Matt Everitt talks to Toots about the key musical moments of his life, from his earliest experiences of singing at church and making his own guitar, to winning a Grammy for best reggae album in 2004 (rather late in the day considering the excellent albums he made in the 70s). Whether Everitt can wring anything new from the oft-told tale of how Toots's brief spell in prison inspired his ska classic 54-46 Was My Number remains to be heard. DAVID CRAWFORD

11.00 Percussion Century
3/3. Hypnotic Repetition. Percussionist Colin Currie chooses some of the most innovative, exquisite and powerful works written for percussion over the past century. In this concluding instalment he strips percussion right back to the bare essentials as he chooses music that revels in its own sounds, patterns, loops and melodies – minimalism. The ability of certain instruments to weave together multiple layers of sound leads to a playlist with works by John Adams, Philip Glass, Arvo Pärt, Lou Harrison and Steve Reich.

12.00 Classical Fix
Clemency Burton-Hill creates a bespoke classical playlist for her guest. Producer Matthew Dover

Today's Choices

Prepper
11.30am Radio 4
Sue Johnston (above, also the narrator of our Pick of the Week, see page 121) and Pearl Mackie (Bill Potts in Doctor Who) play two working-class Mancunian women who share an obsession with the end of days and have been vlogging and blogging about this for years with "Apoca-tips" advice for those of us who have yet to store hundreds of cans of baked beans beneath our beds. Things come to a head when they break down on a motorway – will their survival packs, so different in content, prove useful after all? Would you opt for easily consumed snacks or a basic knife? This is a well written and directed new sitcom, aided by great acting talent and it will, I hope, be picked up by Radio 4 for a future series. Set in the future? Maybe. An accurate post-Brexit vision of a paranoid UK? Most definitely. JANE ANDERSON

Full Circle 1.45pm Radio 4
There's nothing I enjoy more than uninterrupted narrative, where people tell their own stories without the distraction of questions that lead to the same end result. In this case, however, there is almost too much information as individuals and couples discuss the most intimate aspects of their relationships. Fear not, it doesn't get down and dirty, but the conversations in this first programme, for sure, border upon self-indulgent. There's a point at which one slips from mild interest to boredom whenever someone discusses how they met, the status of their relationship, etc. But hang on in there today to discover the identity of "Fox". JANE ANDERSON

BBC World Hacks: The Shopping Mall Where Everything Is Recycled

3.05pm/8.05pm
BBC World Service

Second-hand is definitely not second best – and to prove it, in a decidedly challenging retail market, British second-hand shops are not only surviving but thriving. Today's programme visits a project in Sweden's Eskilstuna (70-odd miles west of Stockholm) that is aiming to go one step further... pushing the demand for repurposed items into the mainstream. With its 14 retail outlets selling only recycled and upcycled goods, the Retuna shopping mall invites visitors to the city's refuse centre (just next door) to leave their unwanted items, to be given a fresh lease of life by the green-minded owners. Lessons in environmental issues are now commonplace in schools, with reduce, reuse, recycle the three Rs of the sustainability generation. Yet where but in Eskilstuna could you take a one-year certified course in upcycling? SUE ROBINSON

Drama: Chopsticks

2.15pm Radio 4

Joanne and Pauline were more than just close friends as teenage girls – they were lovers. Joanne went on to have trans-operative work to become a man (Joel), whereas Pauline moved from north to south and decided to call herself Blaise, while considering a similar route. One would think that their reunion would be easy, considering their shared experiences, but there is an awful lot of baggage that they both bring with them. This is an empathetic look at gender issues but also offers an insight to our perceptions of identity. JANE ANDERSON

The Documentary: The Beatles' Final Concert

11.30am/11.30pm/2.30am
BBC World Service

It lasted 42 minutes and comprised nine takes of five songs until locals' complaints about the noise led to the police bringing proceedings to a premature conclusion. The scene was lunchtime on the rooftop of the Beatles' Apple HQ in central London, and the band were performing in public – more like semi-public – for what would be the final time (above). This documentary, marking 50 years to the day since perhaps the greatest impromptu act in pop history, brings together people who witnessed it and finds out how it came about. I'm hoping it might also tell us where on earth Ringo got his awful red plastic top from. SIMON O'HAGAN

ReincarNathan

6.30pm Radio 4

It's a tough life being reincarnated – especially if you have not made a very good job of being a decent human being. While Nathan Blakely would never acknowledge this, he was an appalling person – a jumped-up pop star whose fame was definitely on the wane when he met with an unfortunate death (Take That fans may note a close resemblance to the work of one G Barlow in the clips that we hear of Nathan's oeuvre). Now he has been given a second chance at redemption – as a snail. He's not fond of the slime trail he leaves, hates passing over gravel, but nothing comes close to the horror of getting pregnant. Starring Daniel Rigby, Diane Morgan and Josh Widdicombe, this is a damn fine fast-paced comedy – unlike Nathan. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

The Art of Intimacy

11.30am Radio 4

Novelist Eimear McBride (above) presents this fascinating take on #MeToo, asking how art and literature from Shakespeare's time onwards have dealt with the issue of sexual consent. She finds that Samuel Richardson's heroine Pamela said "No" a lot in his 1740 novel. In turn it influenced Jane Austen and Charlotte Brontë. Even DH Lawrence's gamekeeper had a consensual relationship with Lady Chatterley. McBride is perhaps at her most enlightening when discussing lovemaking's rituals – the sign language of hats and fans – that proceeded in lieu of conversation. Of course variants exist today, when we are more concerned than ever with the meaning of the word "No". Highly recommended.

DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Afternoon Concert

2.00pm Radio 3

Is there any sadder example of life imitating art than Tchaikovsky's opera Eugene Onegin? No sooner had he set the scene in which the impressionable young Tatyana stays up all night, writing a passionate love letter to a man she has only just met, than Tchaikovsky received a similar letter from a virtual stranger. Fearful of copying Onegin – who coldly rejects Tatyana, only to regret it forever – he instantly agreed to marry her. But Tchaikovsky was gay and the marriage traumatically brief. The opera, however, is an enduring masterpiece.

3.00 Open Country
Easdale is a small, car-free island in the Firth of Lorn in Scotland. Once a centre of the British slate industry, Easdale slate was exported around the world and the island was home to hundreds of quarry workers. After the quarries were flooded the island was nearly deserted by the 1960s but today more than 60 islanders live there permanently and Easdale has become a thriving community again. Right at the heart of that community is the Puffer bar and restaurant and its owner is looking for someone to take over. No cars, no street lights and no noise except the sound of the sea and the exceptional wildlife. Helen Mark discovers what it takes to run the island's local and what makes Easdale special.

Today's Choices

Drama: Suspicious Minds

2.15pm Radio 4

This time-travelling fantasy began life as a stage play at the Edinburgh Fringe – a big ask as the settings range from Ancient Rome to the Titanic. Fran (Susannah Fielding) and Mark (Tom Mothersdale) have hit a hurdle in their relationship. She has slept with someone else and he, understandably, can't forget this. In an attempt to patch things up, Mark buys the trip of a lifetime that involves visiting different periods of history without the ability to change known events, which is quite tricky when you are on a boat that is about to collide with an iceberg. It has a thrilling plus side for them both, though – who knew a beheading at a Roman gladiatorial ring could be such fun – but can it mend a broken heart? Maybe a trip to a 1973 Elvis concert is the only answer? They can't go on together with suspicious minds, after all. JANE ANDERSON

The Full Works Concert

8.00pm Classic FM

Where other arts have their A–Zs, classical music famously has its "three Bs" – Bach, Beethoven and Brahms – the "Holy Trinity" who laid the foundations on which all other composers build. Not all agree about who should fill the role of Holy Ghost: Berlioz was there before Brahms, and some would replace Brahms with Bruckner or Britten. But no one has ever seriously suggested toppling Bach from his position as, in Beethoven's words, "the immortal God of Harmony". No surprise, then, that Classic FM should launch its "Great Composers Month" with Bach, more Bach and nothing but Bach. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Face behind the voice

John Leech BBC Essex

Age "I feel younger than I am!"
Current job Presenter of The Soul Show on BBC Radios Northampton, Three Counties, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Essex (Sunday 4.00pm) and John Leech's Big Essex Soul Night on BBC Essex (Friday 7.00pm). He also presents Time 107.5's weekday drivetime show.
CV Born and brought up in Ilford, Essex, he joined the BBC as a schools radio clerk in 1978. He was the record librarian at Capital Radio before joining Essex Radio in 1986. He moved to Chelma/Dream FM, then Time in 2006 and BBC Essex in 2011. Winner of eight New York Radio Festival awards.
Best moment "Flying to New York, cruising the Hudson River and arriving at the awards ceremony in a stretch limo to collect my first New York Radio gold medal in 1987. My soul show had beaten all its American rivals!"
Worst moments "Broadcasting a remix I hadn't heard before, only to discover it was full of swear words. The phones went berserk! And recording an interview with Lauryn Hill of the Fugees – but I hadn't pressed the record button."
Off air "I'm single and live in Rayleigh, Essex, with my rescue cat, Solar. In my spare time I do a bit of fishing and photography and sailing on the Norfolk Broads. I'm a Christian and I regularly study the Bible."
First radio memory "I've always loved radio but, as a kid, it was the 'pirate' Radio Caroline."
Favourite broadcasters "I learnt a lot from my inspirational colleagues in my early days at Capital – Roger Scott, Nicky Horne and Alan Freeman. All great one-to-one communicators."
Ambition and dream job "To play my soul music on Radio 2."
Secret skills "Living on my own, I've become really good at DIY – decorating, plumbing, carpentry. I do a lot of cooking: basic food like roast dinners (though, as a vegetarian, I replace meat with Quorn). I also restore vintage audio equipment, including old broadcast mixers." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

John Leech BBC Essex

Age "I feel younger than I am!"
Current job Presenter of The Soul Show on BBC Radios Northampton, Three Counties, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Essex (Sunday 4.00pm) and John Leech's Big Essex Soul Night on BBC Essex (Friday 7.00pm). He also presents Time 107.5's weekday drivetime show.
CV Born and brought up in Ilford, Essex, he joined the BBC as a schools radio clerk in 1978. He was the record librarian at Capital Radio before joining Essex Radio in 1986. He moved to Chelma/Dream FM, then Time in 2006 and BBC Essex in 2011. Winner of eight New York Radio Festival awards.
Best moment "Flying to New York, cruising the Hudson River and arriving at the awards ceremony in a stretch limo to collect my first New York Radio gold medal in 1987. My soul show had beaten all its American rivals!"
Worst moments "Broadcasting a remix I hadn't heard before, only to discover it was full of swear words. The phones went berserk! And recording an interview with Lauryn Hill of the Fugees – but I hadn't pressed the record button."
Off air "I'm single and live in Rayleigh, Essex, with my rescue cat, Solar. In my spare time I do a bit of fishing and photography and sailing on the Norfolk Broads. I'm a Christian and I regularly study the Bible."
First radio memory "I've always loved radio but, as a kid, it was the 'pirate' Radio Caroline."
Favourite broadcasters "I learnt a lot from my inspirational colleagues in my early days at Capital – Roger Scott, Nicky Horne and Alan Freeman. All great one-to-one communicators."
Ambition and dream job "To play my soul music on Radio 2."
Secret skills "Living on my own, I've become really good at DIY – decorating, plumbing, carpentry. I do a lot of cooking: basic food like roast dinners (though, as a vegetarian, I replace meat with Quorn). I also restore vintage audio equipment, including old broadcast mixers." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

John Leech BBC Essex

Age "I feel younger than I am!"
Current job Presenter of The Soul Show on BBC Radios Northampton, Three Counties, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Essex (Sunday 4.00pm) and John Leech's Big Essex Soul Night on BBC Essex (Friday 7.00pm). He also presents Time 107.5's weekday drivetime show.
CV Born and brought up in Ilford, Essex, he joined the BBC as a schools radio clerk in 1978. He was the record librarian at Capital Radio before joining Essex Radio in 1986. He moved to Chelma/Dream FM, then Time in 2006 and BBC Essex in 2011. Winner of eight New York Radio Festival awards.
Best moment "Flying to New York, cruising the Hudson River and arriving at the awards ceremony in a stretch limo to collect my first New York Radio gold medal in 1987. My soul show had beaten all its American rivals!"
Worst moments "Broadcasting a remix I hadn't heard before, only to discover it was full of swear words. The phones went berserk! And recording an interview with Lauryn Hill of the Fugees – but I hadn't pressed the record button."
Off air "I'm single and live in Rayleigh, Essex, with my rescue cat, Solar. In my spare time I do a bit of fishing and photography and sailing on the Norfolk Broads. I'm a Christian and I regularly study the Bible."
First radio memory "I've always loved radio but, as a kid, it was the 'pirate' Radio Caroline."
Favourite broadcasters "I learnt a lot from my inspirational colleagues in my early days at Capital – Roger Scott, Nicky Horne and Alan Freeman. All great one-to-one communicators."
Ambition and dream job "To play my soul music on Radio 2."
Secret skills "Living on my own, I've become really good at DIY – decorating, plumbing, carpentry. I do a lot of cooking: basic food like roast dinners (though, as a vegetarian, I replace meat with Quorn). I also restore vintage audio equipment, including old broadcast mixers." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

John Leech BBC Essex

Age "I feel younger than I am!"
Current job Presenter of The Soul Show on BBC Radios Northampton, Three Counties, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Essex (Sunday 4.00pm) and John Leech's Big Essex Soul Night on BBC Essex (Friday 7.00pm). He also presents Time 107.5's weekday drivetime show.
CV Born and brought up in Ilford, Essex, he joined the BBC as a schools radio clerk in 1978. He was the record librarian at Capital Radio before joining Essex Radio in 1986. He moved to Chelma/Dream FM, then Time in 2006 and BBC Essex in 2011. Winner of eight New York Radio Festival awards.
Best moment "Flying to New York, cruising the Hudson River and arriving at the awards ceremony in a stretch limo to collect my first New York Radio gold medal in 1987. My soul show had beaten all its American rivals!"
Worst moments "Broadcasting a remix I hadn't heard before, only to discover it was full of swear words. The phones went berserk! And recording an interview with Lauryn Hill of the Fugees – but I hadn't pressed the record button."
Off air "I'm single and live in Rayleigh, Essex, with my rescue cat, Solar. In my spare time I do a bit of fishing and photography and sailing on the Norfolk Broads. I'm a Christian and I regularly study the Bible."
First radio memory "I've always loved radio but, as a kid, it was the 'pirate' Radio Caroline."
Favourite broadcasters "I learnt a lot from my inspirational colleagues in my early days at Capital – Roger Scott, Nicky Horne and Alan Freeman. All great one-to-one communicators."
Ambition and dream job "To play my soul music on Radio 2."
Secret skills "Living on my own, I've become really good at DIY – decorating, plumbing, carpentry. I do a lot of cooking: basic food like roast dinners (though, as a vegetarian, I replace meat with Quorn). I also restore vintage audio equipment, including old broadcast mixers." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

John Leech BBC Essex

Age "I feel younger than I am!"
Current job Presenter of The Soul Show on BBC Radios Northampton, Three Counties, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Essex (Sunday 4.00pm) and John Leech's Big Essex Soul Night on BBC Essex (Friday 7.00pm). He also presents Time 107.5's weekday drivetime show.
CV Born and brought up in Ilford, Essex, he joined the BBC as a schools radio clerk in 1978. He was the record librarian at Capital Radio before joining Essex Radio in 1986. He moved to Chelma/Dream FM, then Time in 2006 and BBC Essex in 2011. Winner of eight New York Radio Festival awards.
Best moment "Flying to New York, cruising the Hudson River and arriving at the awards ceremony in a stretch limo to collect my first New York Radio gold medal in 1987. My soul show had beaten all its American rivals!"
Worst moments "Broadcasting a remix I hadn't heard before, only to discover it was full of swear words. The phones went berserk! And recording an interview with Lauryn Hill of the Fugees – but I hadn't pressed the record button."
Off air "I'm single and live in Rayleigh, Essex, with my rescue cat, Solar. In my spare time I do a bit of fishing and photography and sailing on the Norfolk Broads. I'm a Christian and I regularly study the Bible."
First radio memory "I've always loved radio but, as a kid, it was the 'pirate' Radio Caroline."
Favourite broadcasters "I learnt a lot from my inspirational colleagues in my early days at Capital – Roger Scott, Nicky Horne and Alan Freeman. All great one-to-one communicators."
Ambition and dream job "To play my soul music on Radio 2."
Secret skills "Living on my own, I've become really good at DIY – decorating, plumbing, carpentry. I do a lot of cooking: basic food like roast dinners (though, as a vegetarian, I replace meat with Quorn). I also restore vintage audio equipment, including old broadcast mixers." DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

John Leech BBC Essex

Age "I feel younger than I am!"
Current job Presenter of The Soul Show on BBC Radios Northampton, Three Counties, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Essex (Sunday 4.00pm) and John Leech's Big Essex Soul Night on BBC Essex (Friday 7.00pm). He also presents Time 107.5's weekday drivetime show.
CV Born and brought up in Ilford, Essex, he joined the BBC as a schools radio clerk in 1978. He was the record librarian at Capital Radio before joining Essex Radio in 1986. He moved to Chelma/Dream FM, then Time in 2006 and BBC Essex in 2011. Winner of eight New York Radio Festival awards.
Best moment "Flying to New York, cruising the Hudson River and arriving at the awards ceremony in a stretch limo to collect my first New York Radio gold medal in 1987. My soul show had beaten all its American rivals!"
Worst moments "Broadcasting a remix I hadn't heard before, only to discover it was full of swear words. The phones went berserk! And recording an interview with Lauryn Hill of the Fugees – but I hadn't pressed the record button."
Off air "I'm single and live in Rayleigh, Essex, with my rescue cat, Solar. In my spare time I do a bit of fishing and photography and sailing on the Norfolk Broads. I'm a Christian and I regularly study the Bible."
First radio memory "I've always loved radio but, as a kid, it was the 'pirate' Radio Caroline."
Favourite broadcasters "I learnt a lot from my inspirational colleagues in my early days at Capital – Roger Scott, Nicky Horne and Alan Freeman. All great one-to-one communicators."
Ambition and dream job "To play my soul music on Radio 2."
Secret skills "Living on my own, I've become really good at DIY – decorating, plumbing, carpentry. I do a lot of cooking: basic food like roast dinners (though, as a vegetarian, I replace meat with Quorn). I also restore vintage audio equipment, including old broadcast mixers." DAVID GILLARD

A ripping adventure and parable for today – John Lanchester's The Wall is the first read of our new Radio Times Book Club

AUTHOR'S NOTE
Writers can make a difference, says John Lanchester

"When I was a boy, we would go to the border," says John Lanchester. "There was barbed wire, a machine-gun emplacement with two bored Gurkhas, and Chinese peasants on the other side. Even then, I could feel this incredibly strong sense of people desperate to get across."

The 56-year-old writer and financial journalist, author of the Whitbread First Novel Award-winning The Debt to Pleasure and 2012's Capital, is remembering his childhood, when Hong Kong, then a British territory, faced Communist China's impoverished millions. Now, almost half a century later, the idea of a heavily defended barrier between the destitute and the comfortable has arisen again in Lanchester's new book, one of the best and possibly most important novels you will read this year.

The Wall explores a near future where global warming has caused the oceans to rise, and the world's dispossessed are heading north. To stop these "Others" from entering Britain, the entire coastline is enclosed by a defensive wall manned by the Defenders: heavily armed young men and women like Kavanagh and Hifa, the book's protagonists. If any Defenders allow their section of wall to be breached, then they are expelled and become Others themselves.

The novel could hardly be more timely. President Trump is intent on building a wall on America's southern border, desperate refugees are crossing the English Channel in dinghies, and an environmental cataclysm, Lanchester believes, is coming our way. "The Inter-governmental Panel on Climate Change warns of a global temperature rise of three and a half to five degrees Celsius," he says, when we meet at the offices of his London publisher. "Look at a map of the world showing what would happen with a four-degree rise – whole bands are uninhabitable. Not just the Sahara. I'm talking about currently densely inhabited, rich countries."

Capital, set on a London street where rich and poor alike readjust after the credit crash, became a 2015 drama starring Toby Jones which won best mini-series at the International Emmy Awards in 2016. "When our producer, Derek Wax, accepted it at the Hilton hotel in New York," says Lanchester, "he was on the same podium from which Trump had made his acceptance speech for the presidency a few weeks before."

> 'I think people read more when times are hard'
> JOHN LANCHESTER

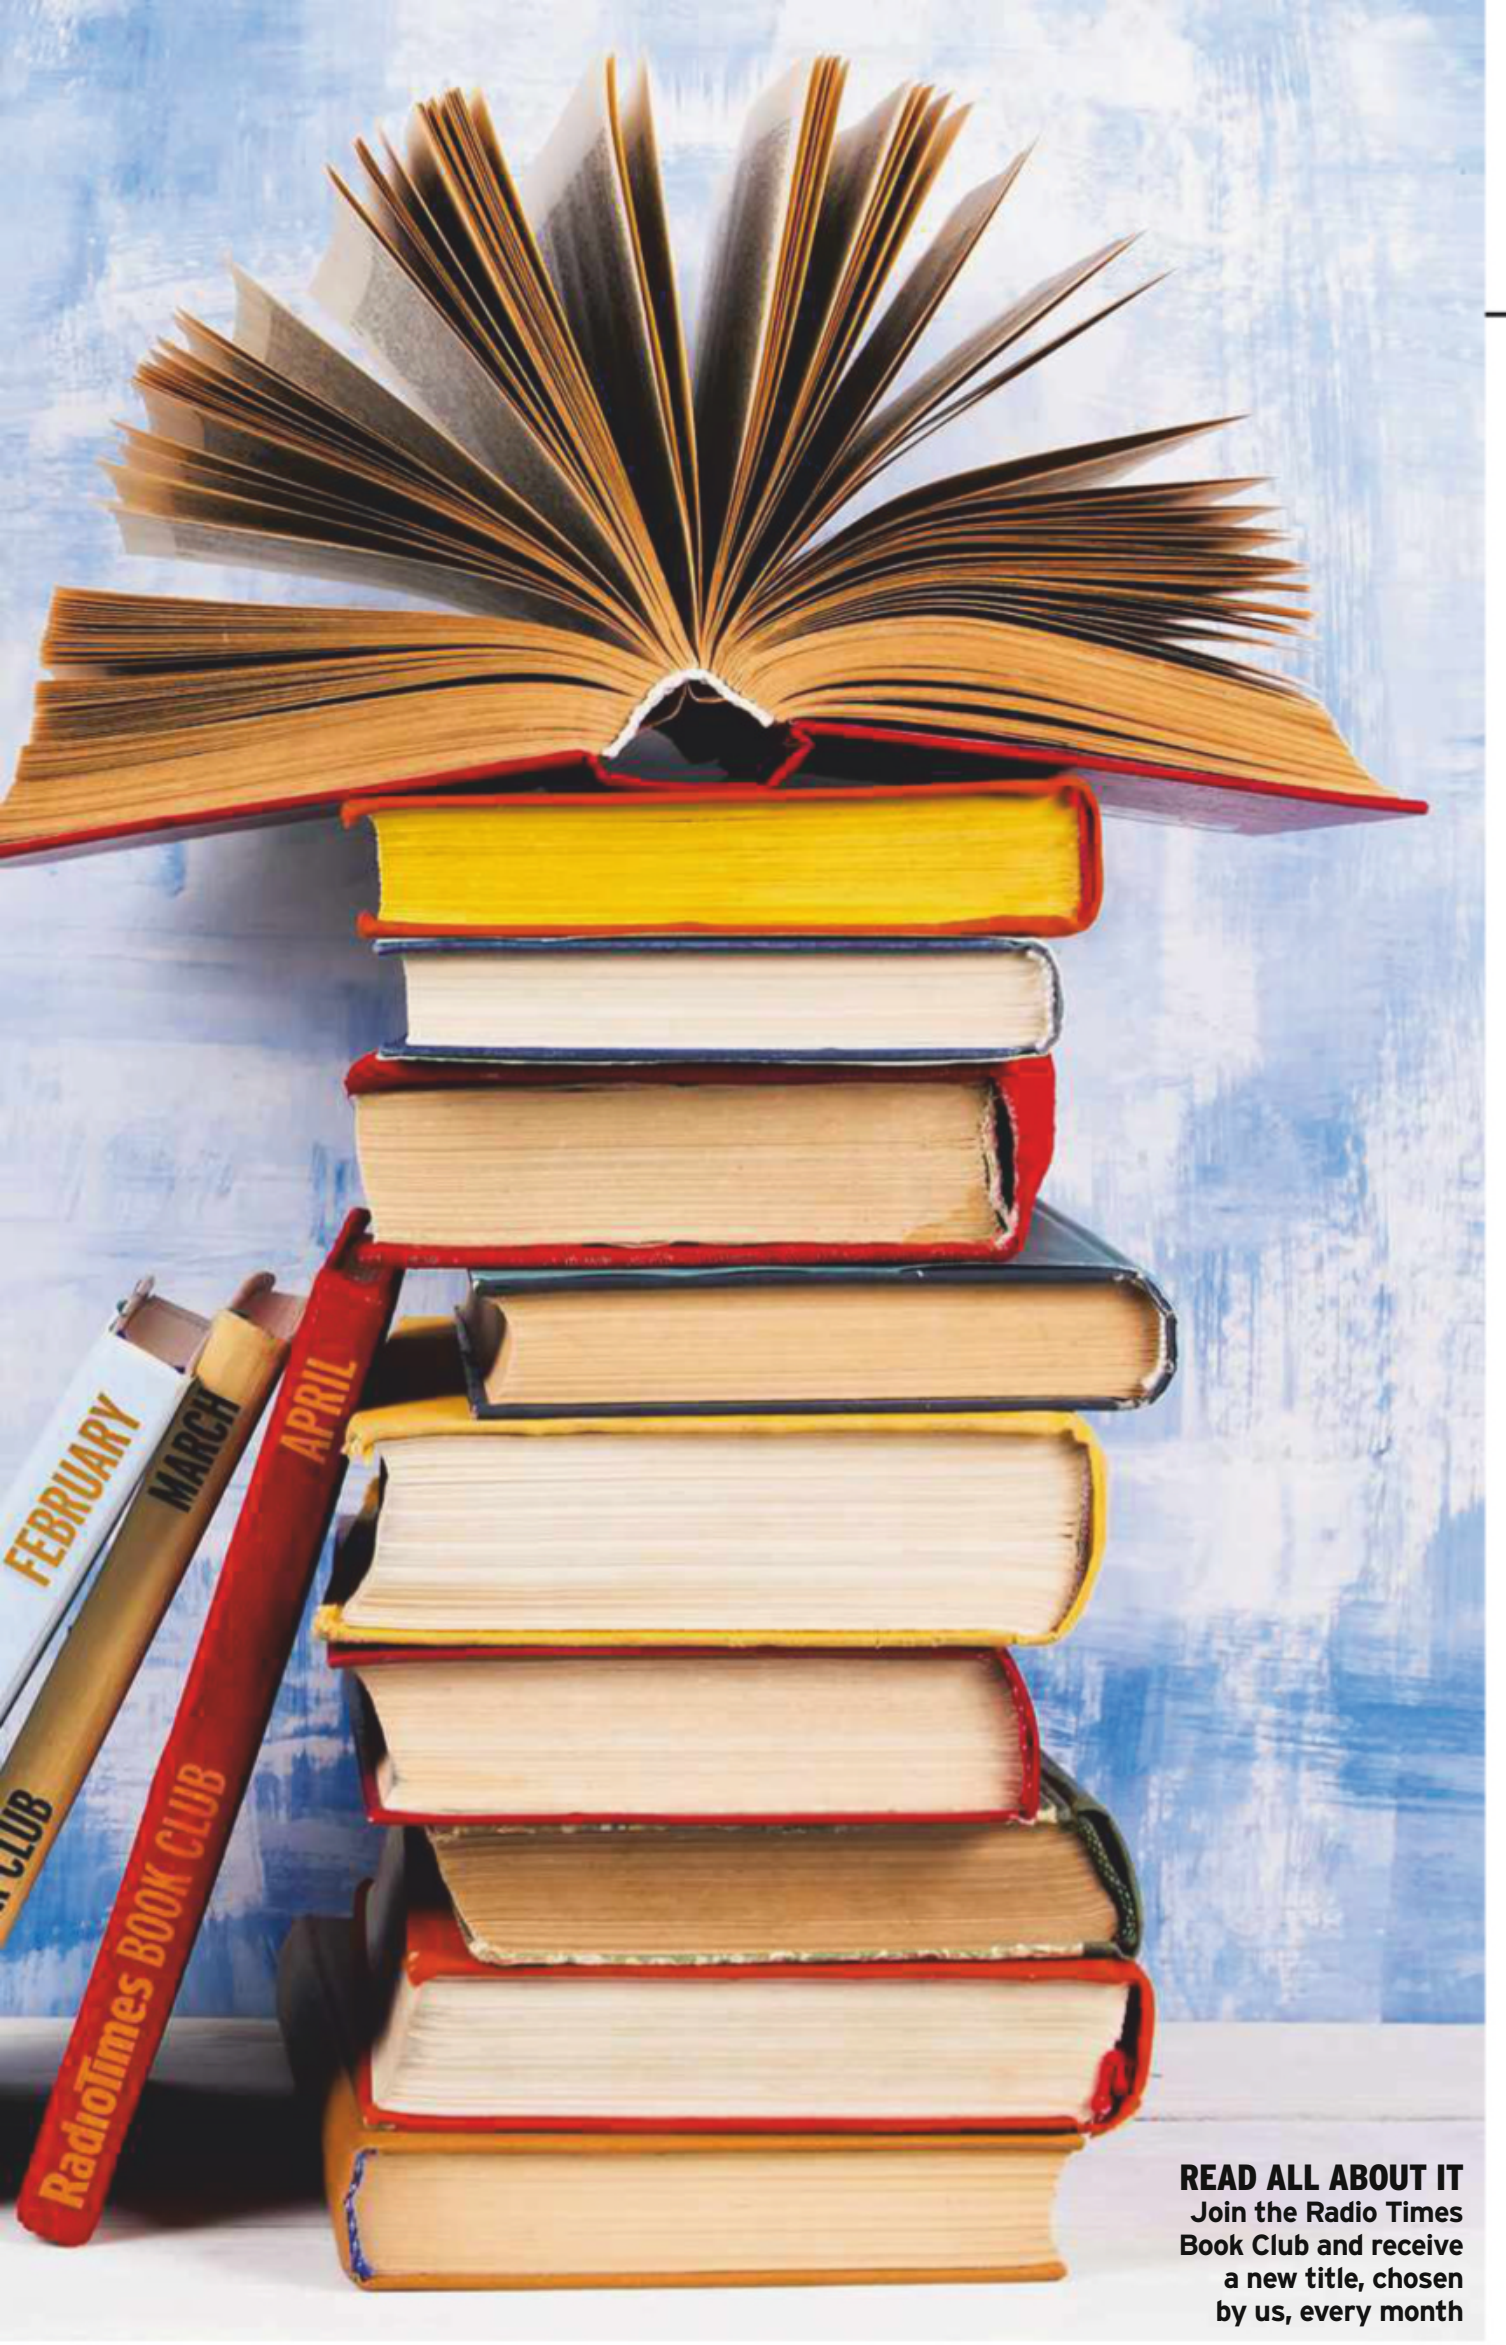

Did Lanchester have Trump in mind when he wrote The Wall? "Not specifically, but it was weird when he said 'the wall is like the wheel'. It's completely wrong, and yet there's some truth to it. There's something very elemental about walls. We don't need to have them explained to us. There's an imaginary wall in all our heads and we fully know what that means."

Capital was laced with humour, but The Wall is short on jokes. It reads like a parable-cum-adventure story while offering a dystopian vision in the tradition of Orwell's 1984. Lanchester's Britain is under "a government of national emergency on a war model", and state propaganda warns against the threat from the Others and traitors within – though Lanchester thinks Orwell made one mistake about tyrannies. "In 1984 he's completely wrong about the state being against sex. Sex is a useful distraction."

Beyond the wall, life is desperate and savage. Some survivors have banded together in communities of rafts and boats, another image that comes from Lanchester's childhood in Hong Kong, where his father was a banker. "I remember a floating village in the harbour," he says. "There were people who didn't go ashore, 80-year-old ladies who had never set foot on dry land. That's an astonishing thing for a child to witness."

In Lanchester's future, the generations are divided. Kavanagh hardly talks to his parents, as he blames them for what happened to the world. "The intergenerational thing does preoccupy me," Lanchester says. "My children are 20 and

16. They've been talking about climate change since primary school. It plays a very different role in their mental landscape. I do understand people who don't want to accept climate change. It's a hard thing to accept! Also, active falsehoods play a more dominant role in our public life than they used to and maybe that skews older people against doing something about it."

Despite this, Lanchester remains an optimist who thinks writers can make a difference. "I really hope so," he says. "I don't know how much power you have as an author, but there's that thing that [novelist and critic] James Baldwin said: the way writers can change the world is by changing the way you see the world." And, in a particularly apt message from the first author to be featured in the new Radio Times Book Club, he thinks we readers can change the world as well: "There is measurable evidence that reading expands people's empathy," he says. "I think people read more when times are hard. Maybe that's what's been happening recently – people are reading more because they want to understand more. And that is a good reason."

The Wall will be broadcast on Radio 4 from Monday 25 March

RT MONEY PARTNER OFFER

THERE'S NEVER BEEN A BETTER TIME TO PLAN YOUR SEND-OFF

End-of-life planning is a taboo subject. Many people don't want to talk about it or even accept that it might happen, but it's better to prepare for it, for the sake of your loved ones.

The importance of planning for your funeral lies in the rising cost of dying – which might sound blunt, but it's true. Nowadays, commemorating a loved one is getting more and more expensive.

The average cost of a funeral in 2018 was £4,045*. If prices continue to rise, the cost of a funeral could reach more than £5,700 by 2026.

There are many different factors to consider when assessing the price of a funeral, including Funeral Directors' Costs and Disbursements (such as cremation fees and clergy fees). There are also significant regional differences, with the most expensive place to die in the UK being London, at an average funeral cost of £5,880†. The south west of England is the next most expensive place for a basic funeral, at £4,685†.

So, what can you do? The answer is to make plans now and choose a funeral provider that you can trust and who respects your wishes.

RT has teamed up with Dignity to offer you the Prepaid Funeral Plan. Dignity have already helped more than 824,000 people to plan for their funeral and pride themselves on being there at one of the most difficult moments of families' lives.

Maximum worry from mini-bonds

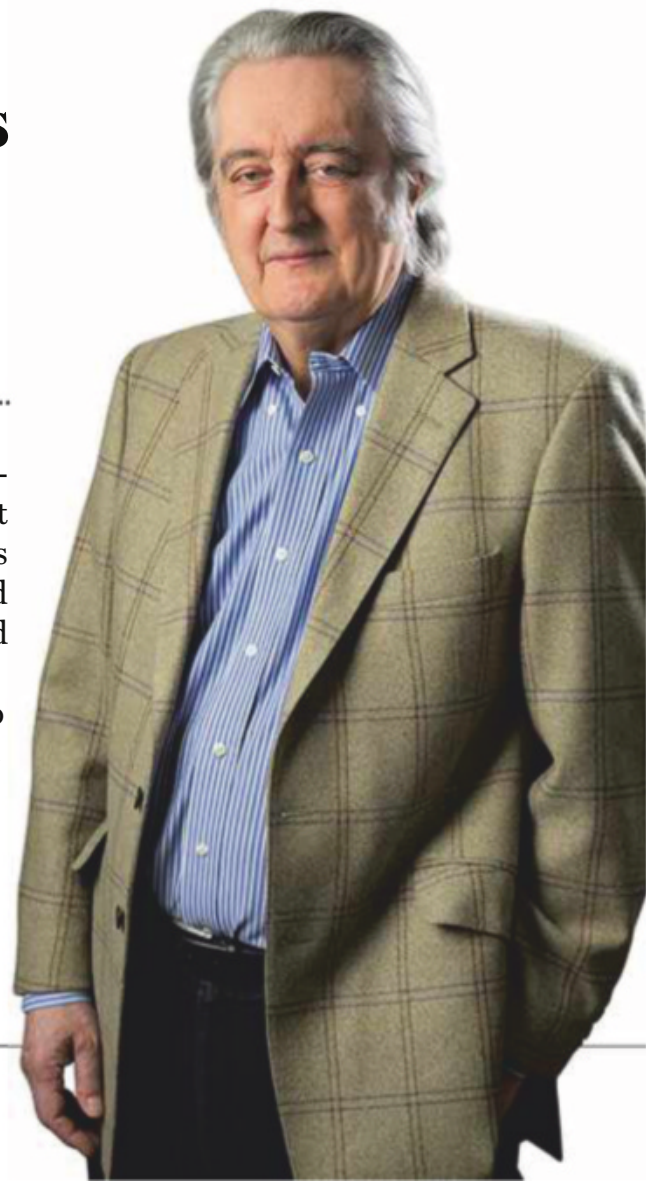

A group of investors are wondering if they'll get their £214 million back – buyers beware, says Paul Lewis

AROUND 14,000 INVESTORS in a mini-bond promoted by London Capital & Finance (LCF) are wondering when, and indeed if, they will get their money back. Between them they had invested a reported £214 million – an average of £15,285 each – on the promise of an eight per cent annual return, which the firm says so far has been paid. But payments have now ceased on the order of the regulator, the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA), which has frozen the company's assets and ordered it to cease all regulated investment activity.

The latest move came just two weeks after the FCA instructed the firm to withdraw all of its marketing material relating to its fixed rate ISAs and bonds. It says investigations are continuing.

Mini-bonds are tempting for investors because they promise much better returns than cash but claim they are without the risks associated with other investments. That is not true. Mini-bonds are simply loans to a company that promises to provide a regular return. In the case of London Capital & Finance, it was using the money raised to lend on to small firms. The returns promised to investors depended on those loans being serviced and repaid and on LCF's business continuing. The returns on mini-bonds are not and cannot be guaranteed and, as with other investments, capital is at risk.

Once invested in fixed-term mini-bonds, it is very hard to get your money out early. They are not regulated, so if the firm does collapse investors cannot get redress from the Financial Services Compensation Scheme.

The FCA does regulate some of the firms that sell them – LCF is itself regulated – and in those cases all marketing has to conform with FCA rules and be fair, clear and not misleading. At least one Independent Financial Adviser had reported LCF promotions to the FCA before its recent action.

Anyone with an investment in LCF will now have to wait and see what the regulator concludes and when and how much of their money is returned. LCF says it continues to work with the FCA to find a way forward.

Remember, mini-bonds offer no guarantees and there is no compensation scheme. If you are tempted, be aware that you may lose your money.

ARE SPECIAL-EDITION COINS OF EXTRA VALUE?

"Is my grandson correct in his enthusiasm about possessing a 2017 50p with Peter Rabbit on it?" writes John B.

Coins can be fun to collect. But like all collectables, keep them for their interest, not their value. There are reports that a 2016 (not 2017) Peter Rabbit 50p coin was sold for hundreds of pounds. And there are some 2017 Peter Rabbit 50ps on sale – but not bought – for even more; eBay is not the most reliable guide to what something is worth. A coin's value is only what another collector will pay for it at the time.

As a pre-decimal teenage bus conductor, I used to rummage through my bag looking for a 1933 penny of which, we were told, only six were made. That was not quite correct, but one example did turn up in 2016 and fetched £72,000.

The Royal Mint likes to tempt us with special coins at very special prices. Several – from D-Day to Sherlock Holmes – are due out in 2019. All such coins are minted in the millions. The only guarantee is that they are worth their face value.

Chris Tarrant: Extreme Railway Journeys
Monday 9.00pm Channel 5

Crossing Vietnam

Chris Tarrant relives the highs and lows of his journey on Vietnam's Reunification Express

Chris Tarrant chugs up the spine of Vietnam on the 1,072-mile Reunification Express in the last in the series of Extreme Railways. As well as being very long, it turned out to be extremely slow and cheap.

"Initially, I went for a 'Hard Seat' to see what that was like and it was awful – a bare wooden bench," he says. "But it cost about 30,000 dong – a pound – to go an enormous distance, and you can get a 'Soft Seat' with air-conditioning for a few pounds more." He wasn't sure whether to be reassured or alarmed by the railway's regulations. In addition to forbidding intoxicated persons and anybody with infectious diseases, they warned passengers not to pack corpses or the remains of human bodies in their luggage. "This was pinned up at every station. Now why would I pack a human body in my suitcase?"

The Reunification Express isn't a single train; it's any train on the north–south railway line between Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City. The railway was built during the decades of French rule, but repeatedly sabotaged and bombed during the three decades of the Franco-Viet Minh War and the American War (as it's known in Vietnam).

Following the Viet Cong victory in 1975, the new Communist government repaired 1,334 bridges, 27 tunnels and 158 stations in just two years and the renamed line became a symbol of a united country. It's become popular with tourists because it offers a sedate way to see rural Vietnam, meandering through sleepy villages, rice paddies and dense jungle at an average speed of 55km per hour.

Tarrant started his journey in Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam's biggest metropolis. It was also renamed after the war (after the first Communist leader), but the dilapidated letters on the train station's roof still spell out its former moniker: Saigon. Today, fancy shopping malls and skyscrapers jostle with faded temples, a red-brick colonial cathedral, and pavement cafés dishing up fragrant bowls of pho (noodle soup).

> 'Why would I pack a human body in my suitcase?"
> CHRIS TARRANT

But the first thing most tourists notice is the roads, which are famously jammed with honking motorbikes carrying whole families and all sorts of unlikely objects. Tarrant took a scooter taxi to the station, and the experience made a hard seat on a slow train seem infinitely more appealing. "I was terrified. How do you do that every day? They don't seem to have any road rage, that's the weird thing. They just pootle around."

One of Ho Chi Minh City's most sobering attractions is a warren of passages hand-dug by Viet Cong guerrillas during the war, the Cu Chi tunnels. They lived under ground, carving out weapons factories, kitchens, classrooms and field hospitals. Tarrant visited another of their former subterranean bases in the north, and squeezed into one of the narrow tunnels, which were often infested with vermin. "I hated it," he says with a shudder. "It was horrific, especially when you think there were children being born down there who didn't see daylight for years. Lots of them died there, buried alive when bombing made the tunnels cave in."

Most visitors to Hanoi admire its Buddhist shrines, tuck into street-food and haggle over silk scarves in the city's atmospheric Old Quarter. Tarrant sought out a narrow lane nicknamed "Train Street" instead. It's like any other alley – children play outside, laundry dangles overhead – except a train screeches down it twice a day, only inches from their front doors. Rather than scurrying indoors like the residents, he stationed himself in a doorway and came nose to nose with it. "It's just extraordinary –

TARRANT'S TOP TIP

Chris also explores Spain's extremely efficient trains in this series. "When Spain built its railways about 150 years ago, they had this thing called the Iberian gauge, which meant the gap on the rails was different from everywhere else," he says. "It was almost like a wall: 'Our trains will stop at the French border and none of your trains can come down here.' They eventually had to rebuild the whole railway so it fits with their neighbours.

"These days Spain's railways are the best in Europe. They have these streamlined high-speed trains that bat along. They're punctual, very clean and the restaurant cars are beautiful." CW and terrifying. The railway was built and then they built housing for the workers right next to it."

He hopes his penchant for tight spots won't put viewers off Vietnam. "I really enjoyed it. It's like nowhere you've ever been: the food, the smells, the people... The Vietnamese are incredibly kind and friendly. They seem to have no grudges against the Americans or anybody else. The attitude is: 'Welcome back, we want to expand our tourist industry.' When you think of what they've suffered... but everywhere we went people were really welcoming." CLAIRE WEBB

Cookery is a dying art

Kitchen skills must be taught in schools, says Sheila Dillon

I LEARNT TO MAKE rock cakes. My brother, a box to keep things in. That's the way it was at primary school. It didn't get any better at secondary level. Home economics classes were about her cooking for him. We've improved now, though – no one cooks for anyone. We ring for a takeaway. I exaggerate, but less than I'd like.

The recent report from Public Health England showing that the average British ten-year-old has already eaten 18 years'-worth of sugar revealed more than sugar addiction. It confirmed the new normal: our reliance on food and drink that's industrially prepared. I was asked to comment on the report on Radio 4's PM. "Can we turn the clock back?" asked presenter Carolyn Quinn. We can learn to cook, I said. It's a life skill. If you cook, you know what's in your food. Bring cooking back into schools! I got carried away... because, as I know, cooking is back in schools. In 2014 it replaced "food technology" – children learning how to design pizza boxes.

The problem is getting it taken seriously. For children aged 11 to 14 in state schools in England, cooking and nutrition are compulsory, through the design and technology programme in the national curriculum. But often they get just ten hours a year on healthy eating and learning to cook nutritious dishes.

THERE ARE THOUSANDS of dedicated food teachers, but many of them work with little support. There are models, though: Charlton Manor Primary School in south-east London starts teaching children to cook in the nursery. As headteacher Tim Baker puts it, food is key to health and wellbeing, which is crucial to doing well in the world.

And at Broadclyst Community Primary, near Exeter in Devon, the revolution started in the dining room. No more queuing and airline trays, but china plates, knives and forks, older children serving the younger ones at the table. Their professional chef teaches cooking in the afternoons. And the staff are trained to understand that lunch – food – is part of education, where tolerance, kindness and support are learnt around the table and in the kitchen – those laboratories where the foundations for a healthy life are also laid, pleasurably, every day.

Obesity, type 2 diabetes, heart disease, cancer... they cost us in so many ways. Cooking really is part of the answer.

Sheila Dillon presents The Food Programme, Sunday Radio 4

Travel in the luxury of a bygone era

NO-FLY VENICE SIMPLON-ORIENT-EXPRESS AND MEDITERRANEAN EXPLORER

11 nights from £3,999pp
Departing 6 September 2020 on board Queen Victoria

Let the train take the strain...

Cruise to Italy in style on board the elegant Queen Victoria, enjoy hotel stays in Florence and Venice and travel home in the most exquisite way possible on board the Venice Simplon-Orient-Express.

Your holiday begins in Southampton where you'll embark the stunning Queen Victoria for your cruise to Rome. This elegant ship has been designed with modern conveniences together with the splendour evocative of great ocean liners past. From elegant public rooms to gourmet dining and luxurious cabins, Queen Victoria exudes class.

After a couple of days at sea, you'll discover flamenco and delicious tapas in Seville, marvel at the works of Gaudi during an overnight stay on board the ship in Barcelona and soak up the glamour of Monte Carlo before disembarking in Rome.

From Rome, you'll travel to Florence for an overnight hotel stay. The most beautiful of Italy's Renaissance cities, Florence is often described as an open-air museum. Great fun can be had just strolling the streets, joining the locals as they potter between the stunning piazzi, crossing the Ponte Vecchio and shopping for beautiful leatherwear in the city's colourful markets.

Next, you'll travel to Venice for a further one-night hotel stay, giving you the opportunity to explore its famous cobweb of canals that branch out to imposing gothic squares. Whether you choose to glide under the Bridge of Sighs on a gondola ride or sit in a cosy café by the waterside, Italian wine in hand, you'll be enchanted by this city.

Further luxury awaits as you board the Venice Simplon-Orient-Express, where you'll be greeted with prosecco upon arrival; the ideal beginning to a journey that puts the elegance back into travel. As twilight falls and glittering lights appear on the passing hillsides, you'll spend your evening sipping cocktails in the Bar Car, accompanied by pianist.

After crossing the channel, you'll be transferred to the British Pullman for afternoon tea – and sparkling rosé – as you roll through the beautiful Kent countryside towards London.

Enjoy the attractions of beautiful Florence

Dictionary corner Susie Dent

Why, when we're explaining the truth, are we being "frank"?

Stephen Derek Tilehurst, Berkshire

Whenever we talk about being "frank" we are linking ourselves with the powerful Germanic people who conquered Gaul around AD 500.

The Franks were named after their preferred weapon, the franca (javelin) and gave their name to modern France. Following their occupation, full political freedom was granted only to ethnic Franks or to those among the conquered Celts who were specifically invited to live under their protection. As a result, "franc" came to mean "free" as well as socially superior to slaves.

"Frank" gradually extended its meaning of "free" to the qualities of being liberal and generous, and, eventually, candid.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Powerfully relevant

EMOTIONAL

Having been an admirer of Call the Midwife (Sunday BBC1) from the beginning, I congratulate the cast and production team for excelling themselves in episode one of the new series (13 January). The superb acting, not to mention the atmospheric sets, enabled these believable characters to step effortlessly from the screen.

Storylines such as the one about the back-street abortionist are still of such importance today. I did my policing during those years, and the impact of those dangerous practices in the early 60s was as difficult to watch then as now. It's so sad that midwife Jennifer Worth, who died in 2011 and whose memoirs still inspire the series, did not live to see her characters brought so brilliantly to life.

Maureen (Dusty) Miller Gorleston-on-Sea, Norfolk

Maureen Miller wins a Bose SoundLink Micro Bluetooth speaker, in either orange or black. This small but powerful speaker delivers unmatched sound for its size. With up to six hours' battery life, a silicone rubber exterior and a tear-resistant strap, it's portable, rugged and waterproof. RRP £99.95. bose.co.uk

RIGHT ON TRACK

More gems from Michael Portillo. Great Alaskan Railroad Journeys and now Great Canadian Railway Journeys (weeknights BBC2) have been as informative, entertaining and visually stunning as ever. Even the background music (usually my pet hate) is sensitively and unobtrusively used.

In my ignorance of Alaska, I had imagined it to be a frozen wilderness; how wrong can you be! Well done, Michael; may you go on many more railway journeys.

Allan Whatling Newquay, Cornwall

BRUCEY BONUS

As a regular viewer of BBC1's Question Time (Thursday), I was dubious about the selection of Fiona Bruce as the new host. A newsreader? An antiques enthusiast? Did she have the authority to command a forum of political egos and determined wafflers? Was she too gentle to have an impact on broadcasting bullies and overenthusiastic audiences?

My goodness, what a triumph! Witty, totally in control, she was incisive and took no nonsense. Well done, Fiona – long may you continue in the chair.

Barbara Barrett Birmingham

IN THE WILDERNESS
Michael Portillo in Alaska – yes, really

ALAMY

…Fiona Bruce kept the panel under control and pulled them back to the point relentlessly. One thought crossed my mind, though. Could they be issued with Graham Norton's red chairs, so the audience could flip them back when they waffle on about a subject that they've not been asked about? Just a thought.

Dave Lewis Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire

GIFTS FOR THE EARS

Last September, with my 50th wedding anniversary looming, I was frantically trying to find a gift for my husband – until I remembered how much he'd loved Richmal Crompton's Just William stories on Radio 4, performed with wonderful skill by the gifted Martin Jarvis. My husband was delighted and I'd hear little deep chuckles as he listened to them anywhere we had a player in the house and on every car journey.

Sadly, he passed away suddenly on 3 December, but I will always have the memory of the great pleasure he got from his "gifts for the ears". Thank you, Martin Jarvis, for giving a lovely man so much enjoyment in his last months of life.

Linda Harding Hornchurch, east London

Martin Jarvis replies: "Thank you, Linda. Your touching letter makes it all worthwhile. The late Richmal Crompton would have been thrilled, as I am, that her William stories continue to give such pleasure." More of Martin Jarvis's Just William Live! recordings will be transmitted on Radio 4 in May.

NOT SO BIG BAND

Why has The Swing & Big Band Show with Clare Teal (Sunday Radio 2) been cut by one hour? It was the two hours I looked forward to each week. I'm a very disappointed listener.

Sid Baylissm Birmingham

Helen Thomas, head of content commissioning, Radio 2, replies: "We launched a new weekday schedule on Radio 2 recently, which meant our specialist music weekday programmes (Blues, Jazz, Folk and Country) are now broadcast at 9pm.

"The documentaries that were broadcast in this slot have moved to 9pm on Sundays. With a duration of 60 minutes, Clare's show is now in line with the other Radio 2 specialist shows mentioned above."

A LESSON TO ALL

I found the two-part Silent Witness story Lift Up Your Hearts (14/15 January BBC1) extremely moving. It sent a really powerful message about the dangers of drugs and how they affect people's lives. Beautifully acted, and particular plaudits go to Colin Salmon as the dedicated headmaster.

Patricia Pallett Salhouse, Norfolk

DAYTIME THEATRE

Snobbery I know, but I've gone through my whole life without having watched a whole episode of a soap. That boast fell by the wayside when I happened upon the opening scene of daytime drama Doctors, and I just had to watch the episode Project Basilisk (15 January BBC1) through to the end. It was the perfect little play, worthy of Alan Ayckbourn.

It didn't matter that I didn't know the characters or their back story, the episode was a self-contained little gem.

John Dell Birmingham,

PAST ITS PRIME

I've just (painfully) watched the first episode in the new series of Grantchester (11 January ITV). Unbelievable script, terrible American accents, dreadful toupees… this was a perfect example of why an initially enjoyable series should know when it's time to stop. Obviously James Norton already has!

The viewing public deserve better from ITV, after a plethora of brilliant dramas from the BBC.

Gill Dodgin Addlestone, Surrey

TALKING POINT

The great TV licence fee debate

DOUBLE STANDARDS

Hurrah for Raymond Snoddy's article on licence fees for over-75s (RT, 19 January). The BBC is part of neither the Department for Work and Pensions nor the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Despite the World Service being an effective instrument of UK "soft power", the FCO stopped the grant to the BBC in 2014. UK influence around the world is now paid for entirely by the licence fee payer.

The over-75 licence concession was a blatantly populist measure (which, incidentally, brought no benefit to those without TVs – so it's a non-universal universal benefit). Pensions should cover what people need to have a respectable quality of life, with no faffing for TV licences or winter fuel. Or does the Government plan to compel energy companies to shoulder the cost of the £200 winter fuel allowance without raising their prices? I suspect not, as that wouldn't involve kicking the BBC.

Hector Hill Settle, North Yorkshire

WE SHOULD ALL PAY

My wife and I believe pensioners aged over 75 should pay for their TV licences, and have continued to pay the full fee even after we reached that age. We survive on our pensions and are therefore hardly rich, but we feel we can and should be able to afford to do this.

I accept that many cannot, and Snoddy's suggestion that those on pension credits should receive them free has our support. I also believe that the likely cost of that – some £135 million a year – should be met not by the BBC at all, but by the Government.

Iain Pavely Godstone, Surrey

DON'T PENALISE US

Regardless of the fact that many people don't even watch BBC programmes any more, they are still compelled to buy a licence. Other TV providers have to find a way of supporting their income by adverts, so why not consider that rather than penalise the elderly and those on a limited income?

Over Christmas there were so many repeats; are any of us getting value for money? And the one thing that really gets to the public is hearing of the number of BBC staff that have received inflation-busting wage increases at a level many of us can only dream about:

If those in charge at the BBC have an ounce of conscience, then do not stop the elderly receiving a free TV licence.

Bob Davis Rickmansworth, Hertfordshire

PROTECT THE POOR

The BBC is one of our greatest national assets and shouldn't have to endure a massive cut in its funding to provide a social welfare measure, which is not its responsibility. As an 83-year-old, I know how important radio and TV are when living on one's own. My own life is greatly enriched by many programmes, such as David Attenborough's natural history epics, and I hope no old person will be deprived of this pleasure by being unable to pay.

However, if the measure goes ahead, I suggest people over 75 who live alone should pay 25 per cent of the fee and elderly couples 50 per cent. We could appeal to people who love the BBC to contribute an extra £5 to go into a hardship fund to help people in genuine need. Kindness might achieve what politicians are unwilling to do.

Laura Sunderland Lymington, Hants

CALL THEIR BLUFF

Raymond Snoddy is quite right about the elderly (me) paying for our licence rather than the BBC cutting back its programming. The problem began with Lord Hall rolling over when pressured by the Government to take this burden on. They dare not cut the winter fuel allowance or free bus travel, but dumped on the BBC. The Beeb, warts and Hall, remains a jewel in the UK's broadcasting crown. Stop the free licences and call the Government's bluff.

Barry Hyman Bushey Heath, Herts

YOU ASK US

What do all these BBC reporters actually do?

Can you explain the BBC's political reporting? Nearly all of it seems to be done by the wonderful Norman Smith (who once called Chancellor Philip Hammond a "gloom bucket"), though he's only an assistant political editor. What are the other correspondents doing while poor Norman is out in the rain?
Maggie Hughes, Gnosall, Staffordshire

The BBC has an 11-strong team, and it sometimes feels as if they're all talking about Brexit. Katy Searle, head of BBC Westminster, says: "All our correspondents work hard! As political editor, Laura Kuenssberg focuses on BBC1's six and ten o'clock news, but she's responsible for leading the political coverage across the BBC. You're right, though, that Norman Smith is a hard worker – he can be heard across Radio 4 from first thing right up to the 6pm bulletin. In between, he pops up on the News channel and BBC1's one o'clock news. But our coverage doesn't stop there!

"As deputy political editor, John Pienaar presents Pienaar's Politics [Sundays Radio 5 Live], deputises for Laura on TV and also has a focus on Radio 4's World at One.

"As for the others, well, there's 5 Live news, PM and The World Tonight on Radio 4, Breakfast news on BBC1, Jeremy Vine on Radio 2; there are digital films and video 'explainers', and the politics page on the website, too. And that's without mentioning the hours and hours of doing the journalism, hitting the phones, making the contacts that inform our broadcasting day and night. Oh, and don't forget the press conferences, exclusives, briefings... shall I go on?!"

IN ALL WEATHERS

STAR OF OUR SKIES

Will the wonderful Stargazing Live ever return to BBC2?
Françoise Currie, Hampshire

BBC Commissioning's Craig Hunter tells RT: "We are in discussions with the production team about future series. And we're really excited to be bringing Brian Cox's The Planets to BBC2 later this year. This series will use the most detailed imagery ever, and the latest research, to piece together the history of each world. These are stories of beauty and creation, violence and destruction, that reveal the solar system and our place in it to be far more dramatic then we could ever have imagined."

EARLY SERVICE

◁ Moira Stuart, Chris Evans snapped her up to read the news on his Radio 2 show. And now that he's moved to Virgin, Classic FM have snapped her up to read the news and also to present her own music show on Saturdays.

I feel that the BBC underused her. I still remember a TV interview she gave many years ago and she came across so well, with a lovely sense of humour and warmth. I feel sure she would be as good at interviewing celebrities as politicians.

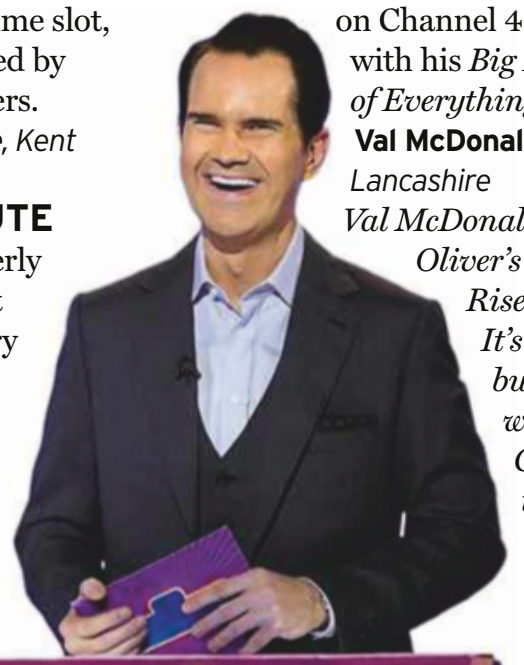

Good as she is at reading the news, she could have done so much more, had she been given the opportunity. It's not too late; her talents deserve to be recognised.

FREE GUIDE WRITTEN BY RT'S PAUL LEWIS

A FLEXIBLE WAY TO HELP FUND YOUR RETIREMENT

Radio Times has partnered with Key to produce a free guide by Paul Lewis to give you the information you need to start on your equity release journey

It's easier than ever to take tax-free cash from your home – and in a way that suits your unique needs. For more and more over-55s, their house is no longer just their home. Thanks to the flexibility of current equity release plans, it's become a way to help fund their retirement dreams.

Why equity release?

People opt for equity release for many reasons. For some, it's a simple matter of using the tax-free cash to clear debts or a mortgage in order to free up their monthly income. Others use it to fund the things they've always dreamt of doing and now have the time to enjoy – whether it's holidays of a lifetime or exciting new experiences.

Equity release can also enable you to provide financial support to your family, contributing to their education costs or helping them to get a foot on the housing ladder.

Home improvements, whether to upgrade the facilities or for comfort and safety, are also right up there on the list of reasons why more people are choosing to access money from their homes.

More choice and increased flexibility

Equity release plans come with a wide range of features, all designed to give you greater flexibility and more control over your finances. With so much choice, now might be the right time to release tax-free cash from your home. There are currently some low interest rates available, starting from 3.66% fixed AER (at the time of writing).

Cash when you need it

With every equity release plan you can take an initial lump sum, or with a lifetime mortgage, if you'd prefer to take smaller amounts out later on, as and when you need to, a drawdown plan might be suitable for you. Following the initial sum, the rest of the money you may release is kept in a cash reserve, ready for you to access later.

Inheritance protection

Some plans offer a Guaranteed Inheritance Feature, allowing you to protect a percentage of your home's future value for your loved ones.

Downsizing protection

This feature is designed to give you peace of mind should you sell your home and move to a property that does not meet the lenders criteria. If it's five years after taking out your plan, you can repay in full without incurring any penalty.

Now, more than ever, there's no questioning that equity release is one solution that could help you fund whatever plans you have for retirement, and in a way that meets your needs.

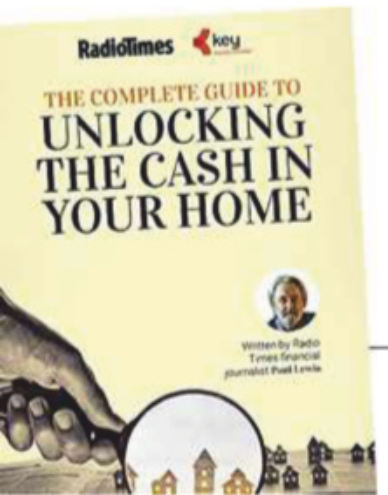

GOOD ADVICE IS KEY

Taking equity release is an increasingly popular solution for those looking for financial flexibility coming up to or during retirement. However, it might not be the best or only solution available to you. With so many different plans available and circumstances differing from person to person, it's important that you seek independent advice before deciding on equity release.

If you're considering releasing cash from your home, Key can guide you through your options. There's no obligation to go ahead if you book an appointment. Our job is to give the expert advice and information you need to make the decision that meets your individual needs. Key offers:

- Qualified independent equity release advisers
  We are not tied to any lenders
- Face-to-face appointments
  In the comfort of your own home, so you can invite your family members to be part of the process
- Whole of market comparison
  We consider ALL providers

Equity release may involve a lifetime mortgage, which is a loan secured against your home. Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits. You should always think carefully before securing a loan against your home. Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge, as our usual advice fee of 1.99% of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

To request your FREE Radio Times guide, written by RT's Paul Lewis, or to book a no-obligation consultation, call FREE on 0808 252 9760 or visit radiotimes.com/equityrelease

Lines open Monday to Thursday 9am–8pm; Friday 9am–5.30pm; Saturday 9am–5pm.

OTI MABUSE

‘I’m such a maths nerd!’

The Strictly star enjoys numbers just as much as rumbas…

Where do you watch TV, Oti?
I sit on my L-shaped grey couch, which you can extend by pulling out the bottom of it – it becomes really, really big and you can put your feet up. I have a very large TV – my husband [latin and ballroom dancer Marius Lepure] bought it for me as a gift. We live in Wembley Park in London so we have a view of the stadium, and at night all the lights look so beautiful when they sparkle. The living room has lots of scented candles – I love them so much – and there’s a photo of me and my husband.

What do you watch?
I’ve been watching a lot of David Attenborough’s Dynasties. Mostly, I watch documentaries on Netflix. Stacey Dooley’s investigative series are inspiring and educating. I also love game shows. Countdown is my favourite and Eight out of Ten Cats Does Countdown is also great. Recently, my favourite drama has been Narcos, about drug kingpins in Colombia. It feels like a documentary and it’s very interesting to learn all about that world.

You studied civil engineering at university – that’s quite different from ballroom…
I started dancing when I was four and have been doing it my entire life and it’s always been a part of me – jazz, contemporary, latin and ballroom. But when I was at school, I decided to go on and study, dance and work at the same time. We were brought up by my mum that way – to do it all. South Africa, where I’m from, is a very sporty country and we were always told it was important to go to school, have your friends, do your sport, dancing and then go to bed!

Looking back, I must have been self-disciplined, but I also just loved going to school. I did watch some TV in the evenings as a child but not that much because my parents weren’t that into TV.

How do you relax?
I play Solitaire, Tipping Point and The Chase on my phone, and I also have mental maths apps. Oh God, you’re going to think I’m such a nerd. I love maths. My mind is definitely orientated in that way. I also spend time having chats with my friends and having girls’ nights. I find that very soothing.

Did you always want to be a professional dancer?
I always wanted to compete, I always wanted titles. I wasn’t sure at first when I was asked to be in the German version of Strictly because it wasn’t competing in the way I had thought I would – but when I did it, I fell in love with it and have stayed with the show. I don’t have goals in life; I just say yes and have so far been in the right place at the right time. Britain really loves watching people dance! KASIA DELGADO

Oti Mabuse appears on The Greatest Dancer, Saturday 7.30pm BBC1

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK Becoming by Michelle Obama.

MY FILM I’ve just watched a romcom called Baby Mama on Netflix. It’s stars Tina Fey and I love her.

MY APP I play Sudoko – that’s what I mostly do on my phone.

How to watch...

BBC iPlayer
ITV Hub
All 4

You can use these websites to catch up with programmes from the BBC (bbc.co.uk/iplayer), ITV (itv.com) and Channel 4 (all4.com). They're free to use, and to watch any of their programmes all you need to do is sign up. You can watch on a computer, a smart TV or via special digital boxes that you can connect to your TV. If you want to watch on your phone or tablet, apps for all three are available from your usual provider.

Netflix

Set up Netflix on your computer or TV by entering an email address, password and credit-card number into the website (netflix.com/gb) and you're ready to go. A subscription starts at £5.99 a month.

Amazon Prime

Set up an account on the Amazon website (amazon.co.uk) and you'll be able to watch all of the TV and films in the Amazon Instant video section of the site. This will cost you £7.99 a month.

Walter Presents

Walter Presents is a brand within Channel 4, so either watch it online, on your TV or download the All 4 app onto your phone or tablet.

BBC3

BBC3 is no longer broadcast on television, but you can find all of the channel's programmes on iPlayer.

NowTV

Buy the NowTV box (£45.99 – nowtv.com/tv-boxes), which connects straight to your television, and a monthly subscription (£7.99) to channels including Sky Atlantic (and hundreds of Sky Box Sets) is available immediately from the main menu.

UKTV Play

It's easiest to find UKTV shows on set-top boxes: YouView, Virgin Media, Freeview Play and BT TV all have the app built in. The first time you switch it on you'll have to create an account – either enter an email and password or sign in with Facebook.

Fresh Off the Boat

Amazon Prime

SERIES 1–3 AVAILABLE This sitcom follows 11-year-old Eddie Huang – a TV chef on whose memoirs the show is based – and his family as they move in the 1990s from Washington DC's Chinatown to the suburbs of Orlando, where there's not a single Asian restaurant in sight. Eddie's dad Louis (Randall Park) wants to get away from working for his wife's family business so he can buy the Cattleman's Ranch Steakhouse and pursue the American Dream. Warm, relatable and pretty subversive for a mainstream TV show. KD

49
I'm Alan Partridge

Netflix SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE

What's so good about watching a middle-aged man struggle with dwindling fame, a rapidly changing world and the realities of living in a Travel Tavern? Everything. Steve Coogan's 1990s creation sees the presenter – one of the most important voices and faces in broadcasting, don't forget – plot his resurrection from a cheap hotel after his talk show is cancelled and his marriage breaks up. Alan is back on the BBC early this year, so watch this if you want more of the foot-in-mouth maestro... TG

48
Westworld

NowTV SERIES 1 AVAILABLE

Michael Crichton's original 1973 film Westworld is a fairly simple techno-thriller that sees the robot cowboys at a futuristic theme park turn murderous. Running with the same premise but a new story (and an all-star cast including Anthony Hopkins, Thandie Newton and Ed Harris, below), the TV adaptation eschews the movie's cheap shocks for thrilling plot twists and lofty discussions about ethics, wrapped up in a creeping dread as the android "hosts" of the new Westworld start to malfunction... KD

47
Queer Eye

Netflix SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE

Since Queer Eye landed on Netflix last year it's become the default feel-good binge-watch, each episode a much-needed shot of serotonin. The show's presenters, known as the Fab Five, seek out a struggling subject (often a straight man, but not always) to help them revamp their lives. Alongside an external makeover, there's also a focus on tougher, more personal challenges: a lack of ambition, poor self-esteem, relationship issues. It's those transformative moments that pack a genuine emotional punch. HS

The Good Place

Netflix SERIES 1–3 AVAILABLE A sitcom about mortality might not sound very joyful, but this show from the co-creator of Parks and Recreation is spit-your-tea-out funny. When the recently deceased – and not very nice – Eleanor (Kristen Bell, above) finds herself in a heavenly afterlife, it's clear there's been a mistake. What follows is a witty and philosophically poignant look at the meaning of life. Co-stars Ted Danson (above) and Jameela Jamil shine just as brightly. KD

45
Green Wing

All 4 SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE A short-lived but near-perfect comedy, Green Wing follows a hospital full of oddballs as they do very little work and further tangle their already chaotic personal lives. Its stellar cast is led by Tamsin Greig (above left), Stephen Mangan and Julian Rhind-Tutt, but even on the fringes there are virtuoso turns from the likes of Michelle Gomez and Sally Phillips (above). It's deeply silly stuff, with a surprisingly affecting finale. HS

44 Sherlock

Netflix SERIES 1–4 AVAILABLE Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss struck gold with their take on Arthur Conan Doyle's classic stories. The clever writing is only enhanced by great performances from Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman as Holmes and Watson, while Una Stubbs is perfectly oblivious (except when it's crucial) as the boys' landlady – and Andrew Scott is mesmerising as their enemy, Moriarty. Whipsmart, compelling TV. SD

43 BoJack Horseman

Netflix SERIES 1–5 AVAILABLE Set in a fantastical version of Hollywood, the eponymous BoJack is a struggling actor trying to revive his career. Oh, and he's a horse. This animated comedy is wonderfully imaginative, but it's no children's cartoon. Sharp and poignant, it has been justly praised for its sensitive, funny and realistic portrayal of depression and substance abuse. KD

GETTY

42 Narcos

Netflix SERIES 1–3 AVAILABLE Narcos explores the turbulent career of Pablo Escobar – the real-life Colombian narcotics kingpin who started out as the son of a poor farmer – and the drug enforcement agents trying to stop him. The third season picks up after his downfall and tracks the rise of the Cali Cartel, the organisation that stepped in to dominate the cocaine trade in Colombia. A tense and at times uncomfortable drama, Narcos is a triumphant piece of television with, at its centre, a Golden Globe-nominated performance by Brazilian Wagner Moura as Escobar. TG

41 Save Me

NowTV This six-part mystery with a missing child at its heart makes for a gripping thriller, written by and starring Lennie James as a father obsessively searching for his 13-year old daughter. What gives the drama its unique power is James's Nelson "Nelly" Rowe, an absent father and a womaniser for whom this search offers a kind of redemption. Both James and Suranne Jones, as the child's mother, are on brilliant form, wringing out your heart and leaving you reeling. KD

40 No Offence

All 4 SERIES 1–3 AVAILABLE Following a group of police officers in Manchester who are more vigilantes than protocol-abiding coppers, this series has gallows humour and lots of dark moments – but great warmth and humanity, too. The Thick of It's Joanna Scanlan takes the lead as Detective Inspector Viv Deering, straight-talking, sexually charged, eagle-eyed and maternal all at the same time. It's got the close-to-the-bone subject matter of writer Paul Abbott's Shameless, but with the nail-biting drama of State of Play, his 2003 political thriller with John Simm and David Morrissey. KD

39 Transparent

Amazon Prime SERIES 1–4 AVAILABLE There have been few series with as much humanity as this one; Jill Soloway's drama is why Amazon deserves to be taken seriously as a TV creator. Transparent is about gender, identity, Jewishness and pain, centred on an LA family who all feel desperately, sometimes hilariously, lost. Jeffrey Tambor, who plays the transgender matriarch of the family, won't return for the fifth, final series after allegations of sexual misconduct (which he denies). But the depth of feeling you develop for the other characters means the show will be able to survive just fine.

38

Jessica Jones

Netflix SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE

Unwilling superhero Jessica (Krysten Ritter) was a revelation when she first arrived on Netflix. A psychologically complex woman, vulnerable but no damsel in distress – the very male Marvel universe had been crying out for this. Private eye Jessica is haunted by David Tennant's mind-manipulator Kilgrave, who imbues the show with a masterful menace. No knowledge of Marvel is required to fall in love with this sensitive, darkly funny and intelligent show about abuse, trauma and prejudice. KD

35

Gilmore Girls

Netflix SERIES 1–7 AVAILABLE

Mother-daughter relationships are often complex, and rarely explored in any real depth on TV. American comedy drama Gilmore Girls is all about this bond. Single mum Lorelai (Lauren Graham) and her teenage daughter Rory (Alexis Bledel) live in the tiny town of Stars Hollow and as boyfriends come and go, and school and work gets serious, the real, enduring love story is between Lorelai and Rory, whose easy intimacy and verbal sparring is a celebration of female companionship. KD

Flint Town

Netflix Understaffed law enforcement, unemployment, social division and water crises – Flint, Michigan, is on a knife edge. This eight-part series gets unprecedented access to the inner workings of the police department of Flint, one of the poorest cities of its size in the United States. It's a nuanced take on the combustible relations between police and populace in a dangerous city and what, if anything, can be done to diffuse tensions. Brutal, unflinching and real. KD

33

Wild Wild Country

Netflix The more you get sucked into this six-part documentary, the more surreal, disquieting and utterly implausible it gets. During the early 1980s, Indian guru Osho attempted to build a utopian city in the Oregon wilderness. But events soon spiralled out of control when his right-hand woman, Sheela, started employing ever-more devious tactics to deal with disgruntled locals. Brilliantly compiled from extensive source material and more compulsive than any soap opera, it's a surprise "cult" hit. GR

Monty Python's Flying Circus

Netflix SERIES 1–4 AVAILABLE

Can it really be 50 years since we were introduced to the funniest joke in the world? There's no mistaking the wit and invention of this classic sketch show. Some of the humour has dated, but the best sketches prove that Messrs Cleese (right), Palin, Jones, Idle, Chapman and Gilliam have more than earned their place in the comic pantheon. Neil Gaiman said ranking the best Python sketches was one of the worst things you could make someone do. Try to pick which of the 45 episodes to watch and you'll soon see what he means. KD

Peep Show

All 4 SERIES 1–9 AVAILABLE Olivia Colman may be winning awards and acclaim for her latest film The Favourite, but to fans of this brilliant sitcom she'll always be Sophie, the difficult love interest of David Mitchell's Mark. The agony of watching Mark and his equally dysfunctional flatmate Jez (Robert Webb) navigate awkward situations is addictive and glorious, and part of that joy comes from the fact that (whisper it) we all recognise ourselves in the characters. KD

ALLSTAR; REX

32 Ozark

Netflix SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE

Moody and addictive, this Netflix original follows the story of financial adviser Marty Byrde (Jason Bateman), his PR adviser wife Wendy (Laura Linney) and their children as they are suddenly forced to move from Chicago to rural Lake Ozark in Missouri after a money-laundering deal goes wrong. Struggling to adjust to their new circumstances, the Byrdes are drawn into a world of crime, strange and dangerous locals and political misdemeanours, as they try to keep a Mexican drug cartel happy, keep their family together – and stay alive. TG

31 National Treasure

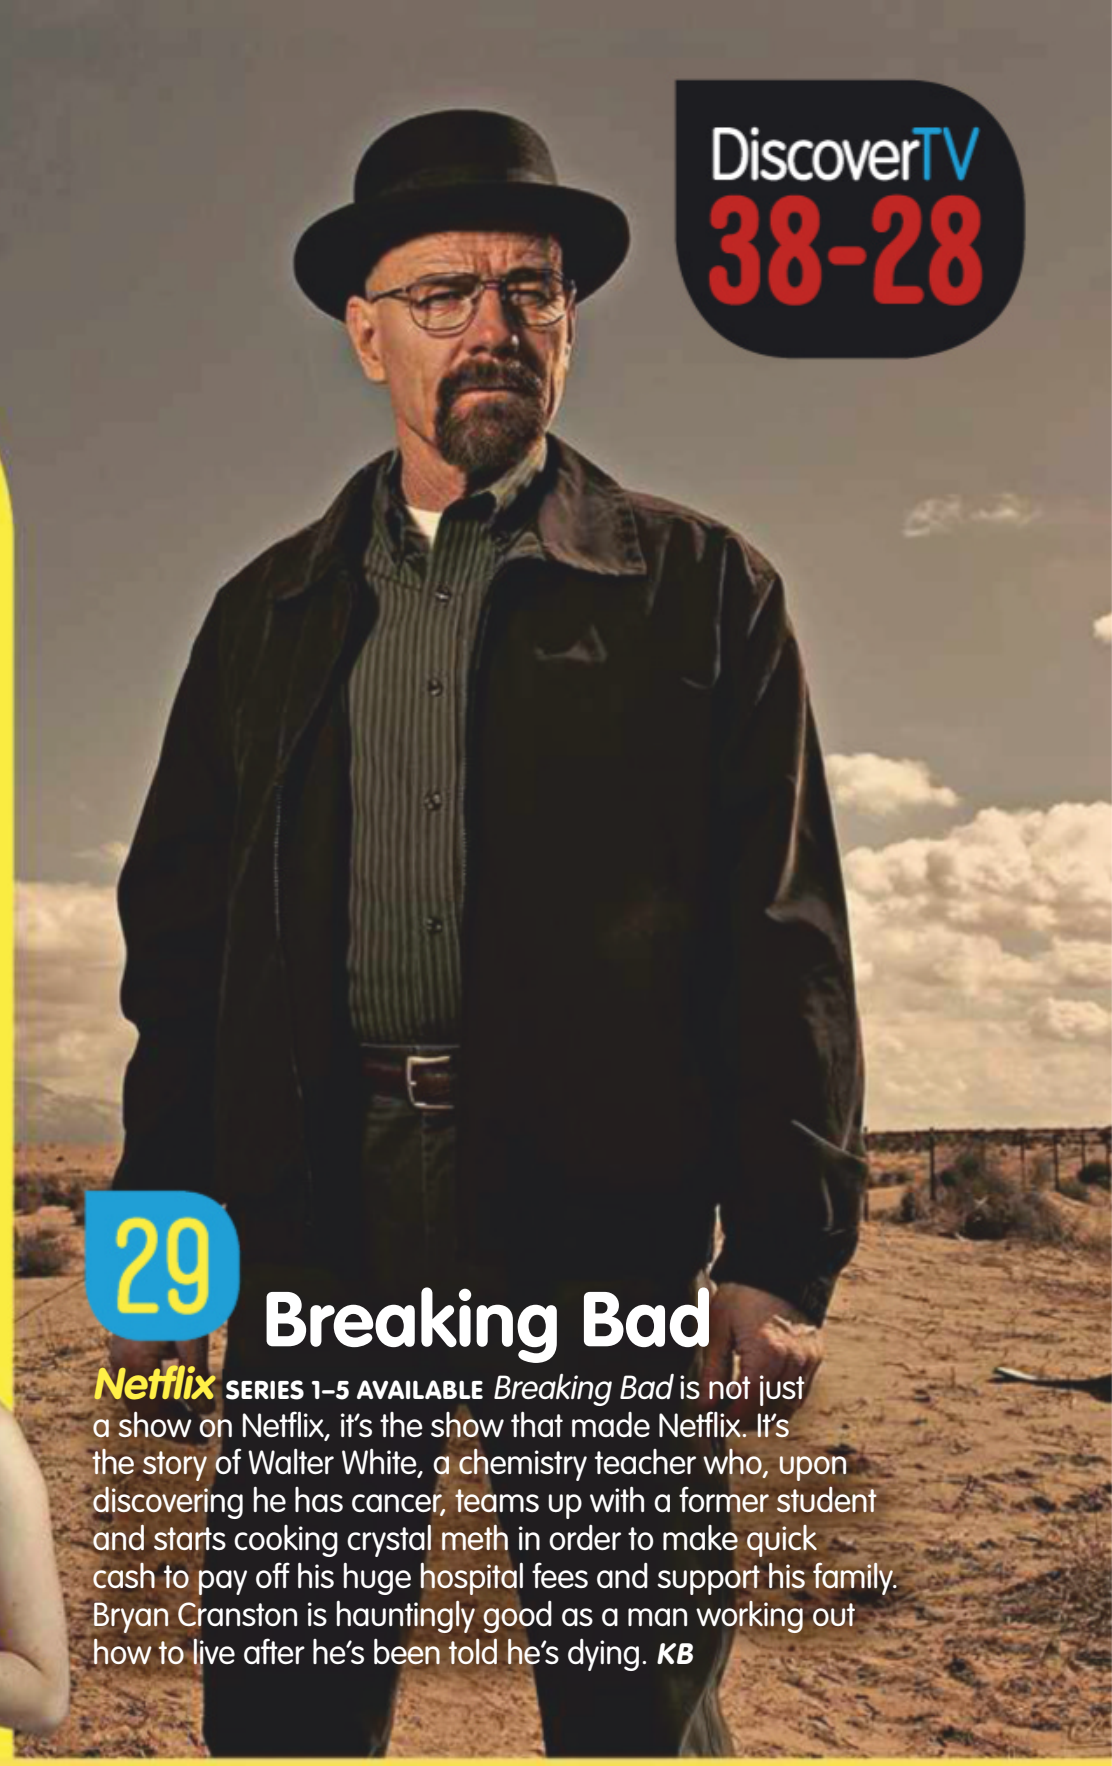

All 4 This powerful four-parter tackles the issue of historic sex abuse with devastating and poetic vigour. Robbie Coltrane plays Paul Finchley, an accused comedian who finds himself living in the shadow of Jimmy Savile. Julie Walters is his wife wife Marie, who sticks by her husband through all of her own doubt and the media's speculation, while Andrea Riseborough is wild and hypnotic as their daughter Dee, a recovering addict. National Treasure reaches an unflinchingly honest conclusion that, as in reality, is free of sugar-coating. EH

30 Parade's End

Netflix Benedict Cumberbatch is mesmerising in this 2012 BBC2 three-part period drama. Adapted from four Ford Maddox Ford novels, it follows an old-fashioned Tory aristocrat, Christopher Tietjens, resisting the modern world. Even while his wife Sylvia (Rebecca Hall, below) is flagrantly unfaithful, Christopher vows to stay loyal, because that's what his morals dictate. But when he falls in love with a suffragette, he finds himself in a wretched love triangle. A masterful study of the power of love, hate and self-destruction. KD

29 Breaking Bad

Netflix SERIES 1–5 AVAILABLE Breaking Bad is not just a show on Netflix, it's the show that made Netflix. It's the story of Walter White, a chemistry teacher who, upon discovering he has cancer, teams up with a former student and starts cooking crystal meth in order to make quick cash to pay off his huge hospital fees and support his family. Bryan Cranston is hauntingly good as a man working out how to live after he's been told he's dying. KB

28 Chewing Gum

All 4 SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE

Set on an estate in London's Tower Hamlets, this comedy is all about 24-year-old Tracey Gordon (Michaela Coel, who also wrote the show), and how she deals with religion, race, sex and family. Tracey's first line is, "My mum was gonna name me Alyssa, which means sweet angel in Indian. But when I came out, she looked at me and called me Tracey." Her mum was right, she's not a sweet angel, thank God. She's crude, confused, hilarious and deeply human. KD iPlayer AVAILABLE UNTIL 28 MARCH David Suchet was always going to be a tough act to follow as Agatha Christie's Belgian detective extraordinaire, Hercule Poirot. But after Kenneth Branagh took the plunge on the big screen in 2017's Murder on the Orient Express, BBC1 landed another Hollywood heavyweight for the leading role in their new TV adaptation of The ABC Murders: John Malkovich. He makes his debut in the classic murder mystery – alongside Harry Potter star Rupert Grint – to which writer Sarah Phelps adds some thrilling twists. KD

26 GLOW

Netflix SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE Towards the end of the first series, it was clear that this comedy about a (real) 1980s TV wrestling show might be something special. It follows Debbie (Betty Gilpin) and Ruth (Alison Brie, both pictured above) and the rest of the Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling as they deal with the ups and downs of the television industry. Yes, the slapstick in leotards is fun, but GLOW is brilliant at teasing out the vulnerabilities of its characters – the serious moments pack a big punch, more so in the even better second run. BA

25 Happy Valley

Netflix SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE Sally Wainwright's drama, starring Sarah Lancashire as police sergeant Catherine Cawood and James Norton as a rapist and murderer, was 2014's biggest word-of-mouth hit. Its second run won big at the Baftas; a third is on the way. Actors are seldom given as rich a creation as Cawood: direct, emotionally intelligent and self-aware, but also irrational and reckless. Wainwright's twisting plot won't let you breathe for 60 minutes, yet every character is believable, flawed and sympathetic. JS

24 Father Ted

All 4 SERIES 1–3 AVAILABLE, PLUS CHRISTMAS SPECIAL Hysterical, surreal and infinitely quotable, there's a reason why Father Ted is one of the best sitcoms ever written. Priests Ted, Dougal and Jack get tangled up in hilarious jams across its 25 episodes, from a disastrous caravan holiday to getting trapped in very dark caves, catching out an unruly milkman and dealing with an unhappy sheep – fuelled by copious sandwiches and cups of tea made by housekeeper Mrs Doyle. If you've never seen this Channel 4 classic, or haven't paid a visit to Craggy Island for some time, you really should. FT

23 Salt Fat Acid Heat

Netflix Does any TV chef approach food with as much pure glee as US cook, presenter and writer Samin Nosrat? Her enthusiasm is infectious, whether she's taking us to Japan for a deep dive into the world of salt, collecting seaweed and making miso eggs, or to Yucatán to learn the arts of the sour orange and the fiery salsa. Food programmes are abundant, but in this four-parter Nosrat offers something genuinely refreshing – she's no alienatingly glossy domestic goddess, which helps make Salt Fat Acid Heat one of the more interesting morsels served up in 2018. EBG

Whitney

15 Amazon Prime

This feature-length documentary about the tragedy of Whitney Houston's foreshortened life isn't the first, but is the more definitive. Director Kevin Macdonald (who also made rock biopic Marley) coaxes disarmingly frank testimony from the singer's family and confidants, including husband Bobby Brown, reminding us of Whitney's talent, as well as her capacity for self-destruction.

The Breadwinner

12 Amazon Prime

In the follow-up to their Oscar-nominated Song of the Sea, Kilkenny-based animation house Cartoon Saloon breaks with Irish tradition to lend its deft visual and narrative touch to a fable set in Taliban-controlled Afghanistan. Protagonist Parvana (voiced by Saara Chaudry) dresses as a boy in order to reconnect with her incarcerated father, and the result is captivating.

Avengers: Infinity War

12 NowTV/Sky Cinema on Demand

With 27 principal and supporting parts in this third Avengers outing from directors Anthony and Joe Russo, it's tempting to think of the 19th film from the Marvel stable as expensive crowd control. But witty dialogue punctures the pomposity and the fun Guardians of the Galaxy ensure mix-tape levity. Have a bingo card ready…

Manchester by the Sea

15 BBC iPlayer (until 11 Feb)/Amazon Prime

Writer/director Kenneth Lonergan's knack is to give even minor characters something to say. So it's not just the protagonists (though leads Casey Affleck and Michelle Williams are outstanding) in this salty family drama who come alive.

Roma 15 Netflix

Instantaneously showered with awards, Alfonso Cuarón's stunning hymn to his childhood in early-70s Mexico City was not just shot by the Gravity director, but written, photographed and edited by him, too. In warm black and white, Roma captures both the warp and weft of a middle-class family and the inner life of its equally vital but invisible housekeeper.

The Post

12 Amazon Prime

Last year's awards season was enlivened by Steven Spielberg's slice of US media history: his depiction of The Washington Post publishing the Pentagon Papers in 1971 celebrates non-fake news and journalistic courage. Tom Hanks and Meryl Streep lead a stirring tale of rolled-up sleeves and pencils behind ears.

BlacKkKlansman

15 Sky Store/iTunes

Spike Lee delivers a comic slice of social history based on a memoir by the first black officer in the Colorado Springs PD, played by John David Washington (son of Denzel), who infiltrates the Klan. A Grand Prix winner at Cannes, its ending divides audiences, but I loved it.

Bird Box

15 Netflix

Ignore the dimwits who turned this high-concept apocalyptic chiller into a blindfold internet challenge and instead lose yourself in Susanne Bier's frankly terrifying scenario, in which humans kill themselves en masse after glimpsing "entities". Sandra Bullock tries to lead her children to safety in a tense vision of what life might be like when Waitrose runs out of avocados.

22 Friends

Netflix

SERIES 1–10 AVAILABLE Nothing warms the heart more than the sight of these six familiar pals – Phoebe, Chandler, Rachel, Ross, Monica and Joey – living privileged lives in the heart of Manhattan. All they do is hang out at Central Perk drinking coffee, joke around and go on dates. From Phoebe's endearing quirks to Ross and Rachel's romantic ups and downs ("We were on a break!"), the gang's exploits in the US sitcom that ran in the UK from 1995 to 2004 have seared themselves into the collective consciousness of pre-Netflix generations. KD

21 The Trip

Netflix SERIES 1-2 AVAILABLE

Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon's supposedy spiky friendship is at the heart of this brilliant, part-improvised documentary as the pair travel around the north of England and Italy. They visit restaurants and hotels, with Coogan apparently writing reviews for a fictitious Observer column and Brydon tagging along with nothing better to do. They spar, joke and do impressions, while navigating worries about middle age. It's not quite clear whether they're playing or parodying themselves. And therein lies the joy. KD

20 The Affair

NowTV SERIES 1–4 AVAILABLE

A thrilling, almost unbearably tense portrait of adultery and its aftermath, The Affair is powerful not only thanks to Dominic West and Ruth Wilson's excellent acting, but also because every event is shown from each character's perspective, revealing just how differently they all experience and remember crucial moments. The Golden Globe-winning show is an unusual, unclichéd look at deception and attraction, which cleverly leaves you doubting which characters you can really trust – and that makes for addictive viewing. KD

19 Black Mirror

Netflix SERIES 1–4 AVAILABLE, PLUS INTERACTIVE SPECIAL

It began as a Channel 4 shot in the dark, but Charlie Brooker's drama quickly became one of the most bleakly gripping series on TV. Then Netflix jumped in – because clearly a dystopian vision of the future where technology has taken over our lives is just the thing to show on a service specifically designed to keep us watching our screens for hours on end. The fourth series featured some of its most ambitious tales to date, before creator Brooker changed the game, literally, with the choose-your-own-adventure Bandersnatch. KD

18 Master of None

Netflix SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE

Aziz Ansari stars as New Yorker Dev – clearly loosely based on himself – who is struggling to become an actor. He's a decent, if sometimes selfish everyman who's confused about how his life is going to pan out. Full of bold social observations, Master of None is a stylish, smart sitcom that looks at the dilemmas faced by modern 30-somethings. It's not always comfortable viewing, but Ansari has created characters who pinpoint exactly what's so darned confusing about being an adult. KD

17 Mad Men

Netflix SERIES 1–7 AVAILABLE

Savour this slow-paced series like the Old Fashioned you might order at a cocktail bar. Matthew Weiner's good-looking drama transports you to 1960s Manhattan, where the air is thick with cigarette smoke. Jon Hamm's Don Draper is an advertising executive at the top of his game in the golden age of Madison Avenue – while his marriage to Betty (January Jones) is rapidly falling apart. The show celebrates the glamour of the era while not shying away from its darkness. KD

14 Inside No 9

iPlayer

SERIES 1-4 AVAILABLE In October, Reece Shearsmith and Steve Pemberton pulled off their most audacious trick yet with Dead Line, the "live" Halloween episode that wrong-footed even Inside No 9's savvy audience. Some months before that, series four of the horror-comedy anthology had delivered some memorable episodes, from Shakespearean merriment to old-showbiz pathos and, in Once Removed, a fiendish feat of reverse storytelling. Shearsmith and Pemberton are masters of their craft, succeeding at things other comedians couldn't even imagine. JS

16 Absolutely Fabulous

Netflix SERIES 1–6 AVAILABLE

You might not want to pop class-A pills, slurp champagne and be outrageously self-absorbed, but it's immense fun to watch Eddy and Patsy do it. Jennifer Saunders and Joanna Lumley's 1992 creation makes for one of the most memorable sitcoms of all time as they totter around London being high-powered, darling, yet also not turning up to work until midday and taking three-hour lunch breaks. Alongside the odious duo, the late June Whitfield was quietly wonderful as Eddy's good-natured, indifferent mum. KD

15 Upstart Crow

iPlayer SERIES 1–3 AVAILABLE, PLUS CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

Ben Elton's comedy sees David Mitchell play that little-known, struggling playwright, Will Shakespeare. We meet him at the start of his extraordinary career, and learn the surprising sources of many of his best ideas. Full of pantomime performances and Bard-y jokes, Upstart Crow is huge fun – and a reference to one of Shakespeare's real-life rivals who branded him "an upstart Crow, beautified with our feathers". KD

13 Unforgotten

Netflix

SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE One of the most thoughtful crime dramas on TV, in which tragedies and cold cases are investigated by DCI Cassie Stuart (Nicola Walker) and DI Sunil "Sunny" Khan (Sanjeev Bhaskar). Screenwriter Chris Lang's ITV drama thrums with smothered sadness. In each series we meet some wildly different individuals; the patchwork comes together to make a whole as the victim is lifted, piece by piece, from a shallow grave. A fourth series is in the works, but the first two are available to watch now, each with an emotional power that is all Unforgotten's own. JS

Derry Girls

All 4 SERIES 1 AVAILABLE Writer Lisa McGee's surprise sitcom hit of the year, with its rampaging Northern Irish teens, has all the energy of the best coming-of-age comedies, and the Troubles as a distinctive backdrop. Stories about someone's uncle being tied to a radiator by the IRA add an extra note of absurdity, although McGee's scripts are too smart and agile to belittle the anguish of the times. The final scenes of episode six see the teens dancing around joyfully in their school hall while at home a very different story is unfolding, as Ma Mary, Da Gerry, Aunt Sarah and Granda Joe stare solemnly at the TV screen as reports of a fatal bombing filter through. Series two will air in March this year. JS

There She Goes

iPlayer Dinner time, bath time and bedtime are familiar battlegrounds for any parent. But for Simon (David Tennant) and Emily (Jessica Hynes), even the simplest routines are almost stupefyingly difficult: their disabled nine-year-old daughter, Rosie, can't form sentences, and they have the scars to show how uncooperative she can be. What makes this five-part comedy so moving, authentic and uplifting is the honesty of Shaun Pye's scripts, based on his own experiences as a parent of a child with a disability. There are breathtaking moments of breakthrough for this beautiful, believable family unit. BD

10
Doctor Who

iPlayer SERIES 1–11 AVAILABLE
A solid thumbs-up for the first episodes overseen by showrunner Chris Chibnall, starring new Tardis pilot Jodie Whittaker – the first woman to lead the show in its 55-year run – and residing in a new Sunday slot. Whittaker's Doctor is intensely moral, a little distracted and bursting with energy and charm. She's both the Doctor we know and a new version of the Time Lord. The overtly educational historical episodes have been a welcome innovation and, crucially, Whittaker is exceptional – like she'd always been there. It's become more reliable family viewing, too. You can catch up on the whole run now, or hurl yourself back in time and rewatch all ten previous series on iPlayer. JS

09
This Country

iPlayer SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE
Winning two Baftas last year meant that BBC3's mockumentary could no longer be described as underrated. Could it exceed those high expectations with a better second series? In short, yes. Daisy May and Charlie Cooper's snapshots of two wastrel cousins in a knackered Cotswolds village welcomed newcomers with a fresh torrent of stupid antics and twisted one-liners, particularly from Daisy May Cooper as both Kerry Mucklowe and her mother, Sue – who's becoming one of the great never-seen comedy characters. Series two is more sturdily put together, too, with some textbook sitcom plotting and stronger pathos, as we see what matters to these young people who are so hilariously careless on the surface. JS

08 The Crown

Netflix SERIES 1-2 AVAILABLE

Just one episode into this sumptuous Netflix show, we all wondered whether TV had finally outdone the movies. Created by Oscar-nominated writer Peter Morgan and given a budget never seen before on the small screen, The Crown is a triumph. It charts the rise of Queen Elizabeth II from princess to monarch alongside her husband, Prince Philip. Claire Foy is wonderful as a wide-eyed Elizabeth learning to cut through her detractors in carefully clipped tones. This depiction of royal life is enriched by lavish surroundings, stunning costumes and John Lithgow's praiseworthy portrayal of an ailing Winston Churchill. An all-star cast is led by Foy and Matt Smith – but not for much longer. In series three, the show resets, with a new cast and a new time period. All hail Olivia Colman! KD iPlayer Rather like 2015's The Hunt, this David Attenborough-voiced masterclass of natural history documentary-making has given the lives of animals a narrative power that feels cinematic. But whereas The Hunt is like a series of fast-moving thrillers, this five-parter is pure drama, with lions, tigers, penguins and, most unforgettably, chimpanzees starring in brutal fables about individual families trying to survive – often in circumstances made even harsher by the selfish actions of humankind. JS

07 Dynasties

06 Patrick Melrose

NowTV Benedict Cumberbatch continues to be as good at choosing his projects as he is at acting in them: here he pops up in a dramatisation of Edward St Aubyn's novels that allows him to show his prowess at raucous, substance-fuelled comedy and, in the next moment, awfully dark drama. Much of Melrose's story is mirrored in the novelist's own experiences – the abuse, the urge to obliterate his mind, to anaesthetise a brain riven with pain. The skill of this adaption is in not losing that, while still showing all the epic self-destruction. Across five episodes that shift in location, time and tone to form a cogent picture, Patrick Melrose is a study of an addict for whom privilege and wit is no defence against the lifelong grief of childhood trauma. JS

04

iPlayer SERIES 1 AVAILABLE

If there's one programme that proves what a healthy state television is in, it's this brilliant black comedy. Adapted by Fleabag creator Phoebe Waller-Bridge from Luke Jennings's Villanelle novellas, the series sees bored, desk-bound MI5 worker Eve (the exceptional Sandra Oh) playing cat and mouse across the planet with a savage, stylish, psychopathic female assassin, played by the magnetic Jodie Comer. It's a wild plot, self-consciously preposterous, which nods to the spy thrillers of the 1960s and 70s while also breathing new life into the genre. This is an eccentric, subversive and riveting series, with some of the best acting you'll see on TV for a long time. KD

05

The Marvelous Mrs Maisel

Amazon Prime

SERIES 1–2 AVAILABLE This joyful, smart comedy is staggering under the weight of all the awards it's won – and rightly so. Miriam Maisel, played by House of Cards's Rachel Brosnahan (who just picked up her second consecutive Golden Globe Award for the role) is a Jewish housewife in 1950s New York who strides around the Upper West Side haggling for the best pastrami to tempt the rabbi round for Yom Kippur. All is well until, one day, her home life falls apart and she finds herself performing drunken stand-up at a dingy club in the wrong bit of New York. As it turns out, she's a natural-born stand-up comedian. Brosnahan has incredible comic timing in this gem about a woman being funny when the idea of a female comic was laughable. KD

03

Big Little Lies

Now TV SERIES 1 AVAILABLE

UNTIL 26 MARCH Nicole Kidman (left), Reese Witherspoon and Shailene Woodley play three mothers in an ultra-wealthy Californian seaside town, where the residents do yoga in leggings that cost more than a first-class flight while judging each other's parenting. The series begins with a death at the school fundraiser, the identity of the victim unknown. We learn about it through police interviews with other parents, who have gossipy and contemptuous things to say about the women at the heart of the show. Based on the Australia-set book by Liane Moriarty, Big Little Lies seems at first a show about bitter, rich women but ends up being more a celebration of female friendship in the face of horror. Catch up on series one now, before the second run starts later this year. KD iPlayer AVAILABLE UNTIL 23 MARCH Line of Duty writer Jed Mercurio is known for spinning thrilling yarns, so it's little wonder that his latest creation had the nation hooked. A whopping 11 million tuned in to the finale of Bodyguard, a drama that presented itself as the tale of a man (Richard Madden's David Budd) tasked with protecting a controversial politician (Keeley Hawes's Home Secretary, Julia Montague) but turned out to be so much more. You'll never be quite sure who you can trust as terrorism and political treachery collide, with suspicious body-guard Budd caught in the crossfire. Is he innocent – or at the heart of the grand plan? Come for the superb 20-minute opening sequence and stay for Hawes's acting master-class, conspiracy, collusion and some rather incrimi-nating kompromat… SD

Bodyguard

Catastrophe

All4 SERIES 1–4 AVAILABLE Sharon Horgan and Rob Delaney's brash and brilliant sitcom turned the idea of romantic comedy on its head when it began in 2015. What starts as a fling for Sharon and Rob (the creators and writers opted to keep their own names for their characters) leads to two children and a marriage: we follow the pair as they muddle through, raising their kids and navigating difficult relationships with both friends and family (the late Carrie Fisher stole every scene as Rob's mother, Mia). Depicting the highs, lows and banalities of a modern relationship, Catastrophe has struck a transatlantic comic nerve, being nominated for both Baftas and Emmys. The fourth series is airing now, in which we rejoin the couple in their domestic bliss – or not. It's as brutally, bracingly honest as ever. FT
