THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Three dramas for you to treasure

HAVE ALWAYS BEEN a huge Anton Lesser fan. He has the most beautiful, mellifluous voice and I would happily listen all day to him reading the Screwfix catalogue (not that I would ever ask him or anyone to do such a barmy thing).

Lesser is one of those actors who turns up in a supporting role, quietly acts everyone else off the screen, then goes away again until the next time, so it feels in the nicest way possible that he appears in absolutely everything that's ever on telly... he was Sir Thomas More in Wolf Hall, and most recently Michael Eddowes in The Trial of Christine Keeler.

dispatches because he will crush your heart in the final episode in this series of Endeavour (Sunday ITV). Writer Russell Lewis has come up with a byzantine finale packed with plot and stories and with even a bit of high gothic thrown

I'm mentioning Lesser in

in. But the most devastating scenes involve Lesser after he's given some difficult news by Fred Thursday. Prepare yourselves.

N A HAPPIER NOTE, it's with joy in my heart that I welcome the return, after a very long break, of Sally Wainwright's warm-hearted family saga Last Tango in Halifax (Sunday BBC1). The gang is back, more or less, to pick up their lives once more.

Not everything runs smoothly, Alan and Celia (our cover stars Derek Jacobi and Anne Reid) get tetchy with one another when Alan wants a job, his daughter Gillian wants a loan and Celia wants a kitchen.

The week's other big drama event is Flesh and Blood, which runs nightly from Monday to Thursday on ITV.

> That's quite a commitment but I became enmeshed quickly in writer Sarah Williams's story of a family determined to rip itself apart when their widowed mum re-marries.

Halifax calling...

It's high time we heard a northern voice reading the news

ERE IS THE news and this is the North making it. The headlines: there's a crumbling red wall all across the map and in the words of the prime minister, Redcar is now Bluecar. Seismic and nuanced shifts in political culture are happening at the top end of England and this historic earth tremor will be rattling the pots on the sideboard for years to come.

So here is the news from the North, from the top of the bulletin to the flat-capped "And finally...", but is the North reading it? No, the North can't be trusted with t'autocue, tha knows. The North is a ventriloquist's dummy and the South is in control of the speaking mouth. Newsreaders from the North aren't reading the news about themselves because, well, there aren't any. And there haven't been since the sainted Wilfred Pickles, unmistakeably from Halifax, last read a bulletin on the Home Service during the Second World War.

It's not that my neck of the woods is being ignored completely on our small screens; the welcome return of Last Tango in Halifax shows us that TV commissioners understand that those of us from the North Country can be funny and intellectual and loving and, in the words of my Auntie Mabel, "deep as a pit pond".

Last Tango is Shakespearean in scope and Dickensian in its tumultuous depiction of characters that are like people you know, only turned up a notch and painted in brighter colours. It's been understood for a long time that a drama set in the North populated by people speaking in northern voices would have a lot of, to use a popular word, heft. A northern accent in a drama could do a lot of the heavy plot lifting and could hold its own in a tense cliffhanger of a shouting match. And it could be subtle, too. Look at those early black-and-white episodes of Coronation Street; like Ibsen in a flowered pinny.

'The idea that the flat vowel equals flattened gravitas isn't new?

Imagine an evening on television when the contemporary drama from the North ends and the credits roll and the (don't you dare!) brassband music plays and then it's time for the news. The news where you are. Or even the news where you aren't, if you're not from the North. Read by, well, someone who's not from there, wherever North is. Listen to them pronouncing Slaithwaite.

This isn't a new phenomenon, of course, the idea that the flat vowel equals a flat cap equals a flattening of gravitas, and that in the words of the late, great Scottish writer Tom Leonard, the news can't be read by "wanna yoo scruff".

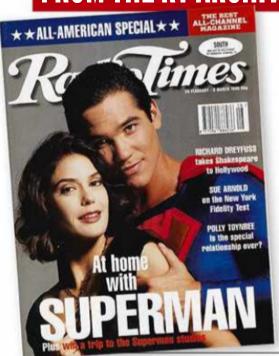

ECADES AGO, WHEN I presented a show on BBC Radio Sheffield that involved me reading bits of travel news and occasional weather and sports headlines, a man collared me on Platform 1 at Barnsley station and said, "I heard yer this morning and let me tell thi yer can't talk like that on't wireless." I replied, employing the demotic, "Aye, but I talk like thee!" and he then said, with a note of triumph, "Yes, but the shouldn't on't wireless", and the debate would have continued but the train arrived. Years after that a radio critic wrote of my work: "Ian McMillan, with his eee by gum ecky thump pervading the airwaves like bindweed on an allotment." What a beautifully wellturned phrase!

So come on, people in charge: let a northern voice read the news, and not just the news about the North. Let's pervade the airwaves like bindweed on an allotment. I promise it won't be a vast tangle in Halifax. Or beyond. And that was the "and finally..."

See you in the newsroom!

WHAT WE WATCHED

The New Adventures of Superman returned for a second run of heroic adventures with Dynasty's Emma Samms taking on a guest role as Lex Luthor's scheming estranged wife, Arianna Carlin. RT, though, was finding out how star Dean Cain felt about playing the Man of Steel. "I don't find it strange, seeing myself on TV – I watch it for my performance, but I'm not horribly critical. Teri Hatcher, who plays Lois Lane, just destroys herself every episode." A further two seasons followed, before the series ended in 1997 with an unresolved cliffhanger that saw a baby mysteriously left on Lois and Clark's doorstep.

WHAT YOU SAID

Praise was being heaped upon ER, which had recently made its Channel 4 debut. "This souped-up, turbo-charged Casualty on speed goes at a breakneck rate to deliver a multitude of ailments in a Chicago hospital, giving the viewer palpitations and a possible hernia," wrote Martin Richmond of Falkirk. "Pass the swab, sister, and mop my brow; this programme will definitely suture." Suture – geddit? No mention of George Clooney, its first breakout star. But then, it would be another year before his character Doug Ross famously got saturated in a storm drain while wearing a tux. DAVID BROWN

Last Tango stars Anne Reid and Derek Jacobi are in complete harmony – both on and off screen

INTERVIEW BY GINNY DOUGARY

ASADA: A MOMENT in the Argentine tango that provides an opportunity for the lady to add flourishes of her own, and where "a considerate leader will give her time to perform if she wishes".

This perfectly describes the way Anne Reid MBE and Sir Derek Jacobi CBE interact in Last Tango in Halifax, which returns this week – thank you Sally Wainwright! Like their characters, Celia and Alan, in the much-loved series of late-blossoming love in Yorkshire, the actors are in tandem but with Reid often given the opportunity to lead. She is the more voluble, with great comic timing; he gently concurs, with sudden eruptions of laughter and ruminative digressions. They often finish each other's sentences, like a real couple.

As we sit down to chat, I joke that since all the men in her family were journalists – including her father (Middle East correspondent for The Daily Telegraph, among other postings) and her three older brothers – it has probably left her with a healthy mistrust of other journalists. She fixes me with a look, as flinty as Celia gazing on Alan's feckless farmer daughter Gillian, and says, "I don't trust you as far as I could throw you." Cue (slightly nervous) laughter from me.

At various times, Reid, who's 84, says that she's "blind as a bat" and "deaf as a post", but there's nothing reduced about her. On the contrary, her pretty eyes shine and her vivacity makes us all feel more animated. If Reid were to meet Celia in real life, would they be friends?

Reid laughs. "No, because she's racist and homophobic. I mean, I've known people like Celia and you can take a friendship so far. You can have lunches with them, but if you scratch the surface..."

But you won't say that you actually dislike her? "No, I can't possibly, because I adore her. No, absolutely not. Sally would have a fit!" She pauses. "But there is a lot wrong with her."

In the first episode of the new series, much to snobbish Celia's chagrin, Alan goes for an interview at the local supermarket for a job on the till. And it's here we're introduced to a new character – a "mucky" little boy, with a brilliant vocabulary,

'I think about dementia every time I forget a name' who's been stealing food. The storyline heralds one of the themes of the series: child poverty.

We talk about the rise in food banks and the number of people dropping below the poverty line. Both actors say they carry coins to give to the homeless. "It's terrible and it never seems to get any better, does it?" says Reid. "I try to give money to people," Jacobi adds very quietly, "and ask if they need anything."

"I always carry money to give them, always," Reid continues. "And it makes me think of ▷

went out with money and was advised against it - because then it would be like the Pied Piper, with thousands of children following you. It's disgusting the way we haven't sorted this world out. I have to say, it's men. It's not women. It's men that have caused all the trouble."

HE HATES IT when people refute that by citing Margaret Thatcher. "Oh, come on - one woman. Everybody quotes her. Everybody. One woman. But it's not women who fight in the street. How many stabbings in London have been done by women? How many?" She's almost belligerent now. "How many women fight outside pubs and throw bricks through windows? I'm sorry, darling. If we'd got control of the planet 500 years ago, it would have been very different."

Jacobi looks on meekly.

We make a brief foray into political correctness, following Laurence Fox's statements on Newsnight and Alastair Stewart's resignation from ITV News after alleged misuse of social media. "It's a minefield," says Jacobi.

"It's very hard for my generation... it's ridiculous," says Reid, before retreating into the safer territory of losing one's marbles, another theme of the new series of Last Tango with the return of Alan's brother Ted, played by Timothy West.

"I think about dementia," Jacobi, who's 81, says dreamily, "because I'm getting old. Every time I forget somebody's name or lose words. You just can't find the words - 'the flower'... it's a fing daisy! But I've forgotten the word. I do The Times crossword every day, just to make sure. It's very helpful."

Reid also swears like a trooper, she says. Do you use the F-word? "All the time." Do you use the C-word? "Not in front of you, no." Pause. "Only to very, very close friends."

As for her mental capacity: "I've always been a bit vague," she says. "But we work, so Derek and I are very lucky because we both have that facility to remember - well, he's better than me. It must be dreadful if you can't. And there are people a million times cleverer than me - no, I'm not putting myself down! - who can't remember their simple lines."

Reid is self-deprecating to a fault. I comment that she's always saying how fat and ugly she is, that she's inelegant and just a jobbing actor (emphatically untrue on all to pay her a compliment. For instance, tell her how great she was as the matriarch Muriel Deacon in Russell T Davies's dystopian tour de force Years and Years, and she sniffs: "Oh thank you, but it wasn't too much of a stretch, darling. I mean, it's a northern grandmother, you know, it wasn't like playing Lear or Hamlet."

The two of them talk about their nightly gin and tonics at the hotel, followed by dinner where they talk about everything other than Last Tango - and I wonder if they ever get bored with one another. Obviously, they both say no, smartly. Then Reid adds, "I don't, but I probably bore him to death."

"No, no, now that was putting yourself down! Naughty!" Jacobi taps Reid on her arm.

HIS PROMPTS REID to reveal, "Oh darling, it's all a terrible conceit! It's so people will say, 'No! You're not really like that - you're wonderful." At which Jacobi throws back his head and howls with laughter. "And let's get one thing straight," she continues, "I am not insecure, am I?"

Jacobi has talked about how delighted he was to be cast as Alan, so that people could see him "as common as muck and an ordinary Joe" and could forget all his "posh" roles and the Shakespearean greats.

Jacobi was born in Leytonstone in east London, a war baby and only child who didn't see much of his father, Arthur, until he was seven. He was evacuated for 18 months to a village that was only two miles from the secret code-breaking ▷ centre at Bletchley Park in Buckinghamshire - which is satisfyingly circular because he ended up playing Alan Turing on stage in the 1986 play Breaking the Code. "You might have passed him on your bicycle," says Reid.

Later, when Jacobi's mother, Daisy, was out at work, he would go to his Auntie Hilda's for lunch. His grandparents lived above his aunt, all within walking distance of his parents' house, so every day he would see all his family. Reid says, "You always felt loved, didn't you?" Jacobi concurs. "Always."

When he was nine and a half, he got rheumatic fever, had his legs encased and was confined to bed for nearly two years. "I became very good at crosswords, extremely good at embroidery and of course I listened to the radio 24/7," he says. "I'm sure it permeated."

At his grammar school, Leyton County High School for Boys, the fledgeling actor was in plays and read the lesson in the morning assembly. It was the Teddy boy era and he had the full look: drape jacket, beetle-crusher shoes, a little jabot and a quiff. "Because I sounded posh and was in the school plays, the other boys sent me up and called me a poof. But when I was on my own, they'd sidle up to me and go, 'Ere, wherdyou get yer 'air done?' They rather admired it, you know."

T CAMBRIDGE, WHERE he read history and his contemporaries were Ian Mckellen and Trevor Nunn, he was given some voice lessons by a fellow girl student. It still makes him emotional to recall being left at the university by his parents. He was just 19, surrounded by 21-yearolds who had done their national service. "I'd never been away from home and I was suddenly on my own and having to be responsible. My parents left me there, and we were all crying even though it was only 50 miles away."

For the past 30 years Jacobi has been with his partner, actor and theatre director Richard Clifford.

Reid was born in Newcastle upon Tyne, and her father insisted she had elocution lessons, because "I had a very strong north-eastern accent, like Newcastle mixed with maybe Middlesbrough, really 'orrible."

Her late husband, Peter Eckersley, head of drama at Granada (the two met when she was in Coronation Street, where he was a writer and producer), died in 1981 when their son, Mark, was nine. Now 48, Mark is a film editor on series such as The Crown, Black Mirror and Peaky Blinders and his wife Sarah works for the BBC.

"I adore her," says Reid. "We have so much in common." Which gets her onto the subject of other people's children: "To me, other people's children are... [she shrugs]. I can't be bothered dren, there's nobody in the world like them."

Reid would have done musical theatre if she could roll back time and go to the Guildhall School of Music and Drama rather than Rada. She has performed a one-woman cabaret act in London, and last year she and Jacobi did a West End show together at the Theatre Royal Haymarket in which she interviewed her fellow actor about his career. "We were rather good, weren't we?" she says. "Abbott and Costello..." (They'll be doing the show again next month at The Lowry in Manchester.)

They also recorded an album, called You Are the Best Thing... That Ever Has Happened to Me, named after a Stephen Sondheim tune included on it. They break into another number together - "I may be wrong, but I think you're wonderful..." - sweetly looking at one another as they sway and sing. The Sydney Opera House had offered them a show this January. "But my friend," says Reid, giving Jacobi a look, "was in India living it up at the Taj Mahal. That would have been nice."

Last Tango is popular all over the world. Diane Keaton wants to make an American version, and when Reid was in Tasmania researching a convict ancestor for people were constantly calling, "Celia! It's Celia!" [She renders this in broad Strine.]

The two offer an intriguing insight into the way Sally Wainwright handles her Last Tango scripts, giving detailed stage directions. "She kind of writes motivation into the pages," says Jacobi. Reid agrees. "She sort of directs it, doesn't she? It's uncommon for writers to do that. Some of them don't write anything at all. Some of them write total drivel and you think, 'What's all this about?"

OULD IT APPEAL to either of them to be in a Mike Leigh film, with his famously improvisational approach? "It was talked about at one point," Reid says. "But I couldn't spend months improvising something and then find I've got four lines. He said that doesn't happen, but I know somebody it did happen to and, frankly, I haven't got enough time left in my life to give months and months. I want to know what I'm doing. We're both the same like that, aren't we, Derek? We like a script, we like to work on it and maybe just a little bit of improvising – although we didn't do any in this [Last Tango] at all." Jacobi says, "No, I'm not keen on improvising." Reid laughs. "Look if I'm going to play the lead, I don't mind!"

Talking of which, there are some leading roles she would have loved to have had a crack at.

> "I would have liked to have played don't laugh - Cleopatra. No, I wouldn't really." Peals of laughter. "But I'd definitely have liked to have played Hedda Gabler. I think I might be the best Hedda Gabler you've never seen. Maybe they could produce an older me?"

It's now a lot harder to get onto MasterChef as a contestant. When it started, there were 500 applicants a year. Now there are 3,000, and the bar is a lot higher. "We're looking for passion. Our contestants want to make the leap from an amateur cook to something in the food world," says Ambler. "They have to show some technical knowledge. One of the questions is, 'Do you make your own sauces?' We wouldn't discount a candidate if they didn't but... well, the bottom line is to make it through the competition, you need to be able to cook bloody well."

Once through the auditions (in which you have to cook a dish and bring in something you've already cooked), it's time for the big walk. "Very few people are prepared for the walk into the kitchen," says Torode. "Everyone thinks it's a set and it's all planned. It's not. It's all unscripted. The contestants walk through the door and they have to start cooking." Sometimes that comes as a surprise. "When he was on Celebrity MasterChef, Joey Essex thought he was going to be helped. He stood there waiting for someone to do the cooking for him."

The standard has gone up phenomenally. "The food has evolved enormously since when we started," says Ambler. "The level of ability has got better and better. A lot of that is to do with the internet. People can train themselves up via YouTube. In the very first series, someone in the final cooked apple crumble in a ramekin. Imagine! These days that wouldn't get you through the first round. It wouldn't show enough technical or presentational skill."

The filming is stop-and-start and the hosts get up to all sorts between takes. "John and I have adjoining dressing rooms," says Wallace. "We often chat and have a nap. We phone our family and friends. I've spotted John once or twice doing yoga." Although it's not for him... "I'm a workaholic and have a huge to do list." Torode is a bit more concerned about the visuals. "I ride a bike in, then I shave. You get a rash if you shave before cycling!"

Most of the crew members have been with MasterChef for many years and, as such, many of them carry personalised cutlery around with them on set. According to Wallace: "We might only taste one chip, but there's a whole basket of chips behind the scenes that needs to be eaten."

An average filming day in the MasterChef kitchen can go from 8am to 6pm. But there's no typical day, and contestants are expected to continue with their day jobs. "Because of the structure of the series, we film for about four months," says Ambler. "Contestants are only required for three days in the heats, and if they get all the way to the final, they're with us for six weeks, three to four days a week. At that point, we pay people an out-of-work allowance, but we sometimes shoot at weekends."

'I love Bake Off – they took a lot of elements from us'

Eating all day, even tiny spoonfuls, must take its toll on the waistline. How do they manage? "I might have a chocolate bar on the go for energy. I always eat breakfast as I've just come out of gym and I'm ravenous for protein," says Wallace. "I have boiled eggs, brown bread with chicken sausages or smoked fish on Ryvita with horseradish. I try to be as fit as possible, so I do a lot of exercise every day. Cardio, weights, uphill walking. I am just over 12 stone, and I have less than 18% fat. I'm trying to reduce that to 15%. I used to eat dinner after a filming day. Not now."

Wallace doesn't go to dinner parties any more. "I haven't been invited to anyone's for dinner since the show began," he says. "I like eating with friends in restaurants instead. You all choose what to eat, have a starter, main and dessert, and then you go home."

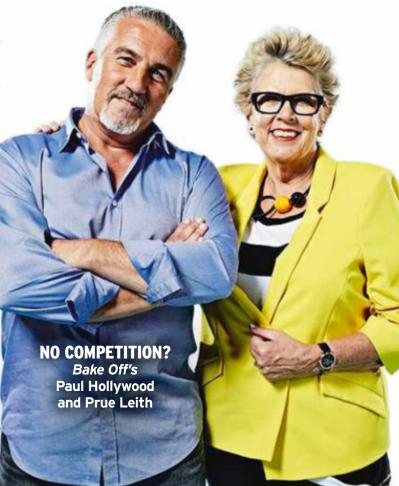

What's the thinking behind those dreadful swing doors – has anyone ever dropped a plate of food after being hit by one? "Any professional kitchen has swing doors," says Ambler. "They're very light. It's easier to push plates through a door than use a handle and if they were left open, you'd see off set.

And as for dropped plates? "We've had dropped plates due to the wind, and various other things, but believe it or not the assault course presented by the set doesn't cause many problems!"

Do the contestants keep the aprons? Yes, but only after the show has aired. It's all recorded months before and secrecy about who is in it must be preserved. Because each contestant has their name embroidered on their apron, they're highly sought after.

They're not in competition with The Great British Bake Off. "I love Bake Off," protests Ambler. "It's a great show. However, they don't do anything better than us. And we were there first. I'd say they took a lot of elements from us. Probably. Who cares if their viewing figures are higher? We have a slightly odd format, where we start with 60 people. We have heats stripped over eight weeks, with three a week. It's a different style. We have two judges who are keen to mentor and passionate about food. It's a warm show. We're there to support people and their dream of being a professional chef." ROSIE MILLARD

'I'm very tough on myself

But not as tough as she is on crisp-munchers and mobile-phone users.

Imelda Staunton lets rip...

THE RT INTERVIEW BY GINNY DOUGARY

IT WOULD BE a mistake to underestimate Imelda Staunton. She may be diminutive – just under five foot in size-three shoes – but, boy, is she a force, albeit a quiet, gently-spoken one. Her most stern firmness is reserved for audience members. To anyone on a mobile phone in the theatre: "I will turn round and say, 'Can you turn that off, please?"

Food in the cinema is another no-no: "A bloke came in with a big packet of Doritos and I just said to him. 'What are you doing? You can't eat those. You either eat them now before the film or afterwards." What was his reaction? "Er, sorry?"

onomatopoeiacally. "I just do not get it.

And also none of us can be without food for five minutes.

And the drinks! Plastic glasses falling on the floor when there's a quiet moment..."

Her intolerance for mobile phones extends beyond auditoriums. Staunton finds it perplexing, even disrespectful, when fellow actors come out of an emotional scene and immediately check their devices. "I do wonder: why can't you just be 'here' today? This is your job. There is nothing more important than this moment now."

"And it's not just on film sets. It's everywhere. Now if people work in an office, long gone are the days when it was 'No personal calls, please' – it's just all day [she acts someone on their phone barely looking up], 'Sorry? What? No hang on..." There are a lot of short scenes acted out by Staunton during our interview.

Another aspect of modern life that exercises her is the red carpet – why is it still such a twirling anachronism? She understands why lovely young women want to feel good in their pretty dresses, "but I'd like them all to go in DJs one year, just to mess it up a bit. And there's always got to be a bum shot, hasn't there? When the photographers shout out, 'Turn around! Turn around!' Why don't you just say, 'No, I'm not gonna turn around, mate."

'A bloke came in with a packet of Doritos – "You can't eat those"?

She comes across in the press as someone refreshingly un-grand. The surprise is the steel. The reason Staunton does her own make-up and wardrobe for shoots, such as this one for Radio Times, may be that she doesn't like the fuss and time, but I would guess it's also because she's so tiny, she knows exactly what suits her and she's happy with the way she looks when she does her own make-up, so why change it?

what she refers to, with actorly reverence, as "the work". Her range and versatility is extraordinary – she sings, dances, acts on stage, in film and television, does funny and sad and excels at it all. She has won many awards, among them four Oliviers (latterly for her much fêted Gypsy and Sweeney Todd; Stephen Sondheim is mad about her), Oscar nomination and Bafta for Vera Drake, Screen Actors Guild Award for Shakespeare in Love. More Olivier nominations for Guys and Dolls, Good People, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? and Follies. In 2006, she received an OBE and ten years later a CBE, for services to drama.

To demonstrate this versatility it has recently been announced that Staunton will be returning to the West End stage later this year for a run of the musical Hello Dolly!, while also taking on the part of the Queen in the final series of Netflix's The Crown.

COUPLE OF YEARS ago, Staunton fancied doing TV again. She had been in Dennis Potter's The Singing . Detective back in 1986, alongside her husband of 36 years Jim Carter (beloved Carson, the butler in Downton Abbey – the couple were reunited on the big screen in the Downton film last year). They also co-starred alongside each other in Cranford – with their daughter Bessie. But after an absence of nearly ten years from the small screen and hefty parts on the stage, the actor says she wasn't expecting to get comparable roles. And then along came A Confession.

A Confession was a six-part ITV drama, screened late last year, based on the true story of a serial killer's confession that was deemed inadmissible because the police officer in charge of the case (played by Martin Freeman) had failed to caution him. Staunton's role was Karen, whose daughter Becky Godden-Edwards was murdered in 2003. Before her disappearance, Becky was addicted to drugs and there were painful scenes in the drama of her mother being spat at in the face and of Karen trying to "chase the dragon" in front of her daughter - declaring it "horrible" - in an attempt to understand the heroin addiction. When she eventually hears it confirmed that her daughter is dead, Staunton's animal howl of despair is harrowing.

Her new television role is Mary in Flesh and Blood, a fourpart series, again on ITV, co-starring among others, Francesca Annis, Russell Tovey and Stephen Rea. It's about three adult siblings and their reaction

Mary has been Vivien's next-door neighbour for the past 40 years, their homes overlooking the Sussex coast. There is a suggestion Staunton's character has formed an unhealthy attachment to Vivien.

"She has no family of her own, and her husband has died, so she's taken for granted takes in the post, has babysat the kids, and so on," she says. Where's the tension then? "That's to be discovered within the series," Staunton says stoutly.

T WAS VERA Drake, directed by Mike Leigh, in which she plays a working-class woman who performs free, illegal abor-_tions and is arrested, that was a gamechanger for her. It was also, she says, "the best acting experience of my life". The Oscar nomination led to Staunton being cast in the Harry Potter films as Hogwarts professor, Dolores Umbridge: "They might have wanted me before but my profile wasn't high enough, so that recognition is useful," she says. Her Gypsy had also been initially postponed from going into the West End for the same reason: "They said 'because you're not famous enough."

Was she crestfallen? "Well, I emailed Stephen Sondheim [who had insisted on her playing the role of Mama Rose after seeing her Mrs Lovett in Sweeney Todd] and said, 'Are you depressed?' and he wrote back, 'Yeah I am.' Look, that's the business. I was more embarrassed for him. And > I knew if I had done a big film... But anyway, it didn't matter, we did it." They did, and esteemed theatre critic Michael Billington, for one, described her Gypsy as: "One of the greatest performances I've ever seen in musical theatre."

> She was the only child of Bridie and Joe who had come from County Mayo joining the big influx of Irish immigrants who settled in north London in the 1950s. Her father was a labourer and her mother was a hairdresser who had her own salon by her early 20s. The family lived in a flat above the business in Archway, moving to Finchley when Staunton was ten.

> Every weekend was spent with her grandmother, Beatrice, in Highbury because her parents were working. Summer holidays were back in County Mayo, "and I absolutely loved it because all the grown-ups were out getting drunk all night long and we kids were just running around and playing in the streets all day ▷

Days 2-3. The West Highland Line and the Isle of Mull

Today, you'll journey on one of the world's most scenic railway lines - the West Highland Line. You'll glide through the untouched highland landscapes and idyllic lochs as the train climbs to Fort William. The next day, you'll catch the ferry to the Isle of Mull. Spend your day exploring Duart Castle, the current and ancestral home of Clan Maclean. Tonight, you'll be treated to traditional whisky tasting.

Day 4. Neptune's Staircase, Loch Linnhe cruise and Glencoe

Watch water defy gravity at the engineering phenomenon of Neptune's Staircase – Scotland's largest staircase lock that raises the canal an incredible 62ft. Later in the day you'll cruise the scenic waters of Loch Linnhe, then vist Glencoe. Find yourself in one of Scotland's most iconic glens.

Day 5. The Jacobite Steam Train

Glencoe

Hop on board the Jacobite Steam Train† travelling along the picturesque West Highland Line to Mallaig. Be captivated by the views of Ben Nevis from your seat before the train climbs up through the mountains surrounding Glenfinnan. You'll cross the 21-arched Glenfinnan Viaduct – an incredible feat of engineering, as featured in the Harry Potter films. As Mallaig approaches you'll drop to sea level, where the landscape opens up for a picture-perfect view of the "Small Isles".

[†]On early departures the Jacobite Steam Train does not operate and we make this excursion using Scotrail's scheduled service.

Day 6. Legendary Loch Ness

The mysteries of Loch Ness await. Experience the breathtaking scenery that surrounds the legendary waters. Later on, explore the quaint Urquhart Castle that's perfectly nestled within the surrounding foothills. Discover the tower and its trove of medieval artifacts as you admire stunning views over the loch. As the sun sets, travel back to Inverness to indulge in a delicious evening meal.

There were always lots of parties as a child, with everyone singing away. Staunton would be called to stand up and join the entertainment, which she hated, thinking: "I'm not a grown-up so how do I do that?" Her song was Two Little Orphans. At her private convent school, she was more enthusiastic about performing and was cast in all the school plays and musicals, rattling off a list including Benjamin Britten's Noye's Fludde and The Little Sweep, The Beggar's Opera and Pride and Prejudice.

was also encouraged to take part in drama festivals and her elocution teacher, who taught her drama after school, helped to prepare her for auditions at drama school; she was rejected by Central and Guildhall schools but accepted at Rada, the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts.

She appreciated the six years in rep that followed graduation, being under the radar while practising her craft: "I was given parts with huge responsibility – Saint Joan, Electra, Piaf – and of course they weren't all great by any stretch of the imagination but I was trying to do my best, obviously.

'I might be selfish. Only children aren't good at sharing'

"Also, you think, 'God, who would come to see Electra in Exeter?' and people came because they went to the theatre then without having to have a star in it. It was fantastic training, a real apprenticeship."

Work is a priority but so is home life and family. "Balance is very important to me," she says. "Balancing our life and our work, balance in our family, balance in all things."

Staunton likes to play women who are not like her and particularly ones who shout a lot, which is something she doesn't do, she says, because her parents argued a lot.

Drinking and arguing, never a great combination... Her parents divorced when their daughter was 18 and both remarried. "So I never wanted to shout as an adult."

She and Carter mark every wedding anniversary and have a three-week limit to the time they are prepared to be away from one another – "Now we can absolutely say, 'I'd rather be home doing the gardening." Staunton confirms that they are both good gardeners but "he's the head gardener and I'm only the assistant. Have you planted your tulips yet?"

As a late parent - Imelda had Bessie when she was 37; her mother had her when she was 21, as her mother had done before her – she has said that she and her husband maybe worked too hard to create the perfect childhood. "Well, we loved creating the garden and the playground," she says. "We had a treehouse and slide and trapezes – and I think, maybe, when you have a kid when you're 20 or 21 you just get on with it. But I thought, at my age, 'This has got to be absolutely right', and I think that can take its toll. But then I think, 'So you bloody well should. A parent needs to work hard."

s both an only child and the parent of an only child, Staunton believes the lack of rough and tumble that comes with having siblings leaves one more vulnerable (but only in her personal, not professional, life, she stresses): "I can be oversensitive and yet I'm very tough on myself and I think I probably have a layer missing, which might help in my job.

"I might also be selfish. I read that only children aren't good at sharing because they've never had to. The emotional vocabulary is missing. So if you get a friend, it's 'She's my friend,' when of course it's, 'We can all be that person's friend.' Or, 'Where did you get that?' [looking down at her dress]. 'I'm not going to tell you because it's my thing.'

"I have struggled with that because it's so petty and I know that. It's something that I need to think about and work on."

She and her husband went on the march against the Iraq war in 2003 – "Bugger all use that did" – and have been members of Greenpeace for over 30 years. Staunton is funny and cheerful, as well as firm and nobody's fool.

When I ask her, finally, what makes her sad she says: "Our politics – it's like all the grown-ups have gone and they have opened a creche in Parliament and that's who's running it. It's all really shocking and I can only hope that we have now seen so far into the darkness that we go, 'Oh, it's so dark in here and – look! There's a little glimmer of light over there...' It's got to go another way."

A man dies after being found in a blood-spattered Essex flat. What happens next? A BBC series investigates

CASE SUMMARY

Murder 24/7 follows three separate Essex murder inquiries. Filmed over more than a year, they will air over consecutive weeks on BBC2. In the first investigation – played out over three nights this week, and documented in this photo montage – a man dies after being discovered in a blood-stained room in a flat just yards from Southend United's stadium. Two suspects quickly emerge, but there's an absence of compelling evidence.

In the second case, a man calls police to tell them he has killed his terminally ill mother by throwing her off a balcony. But is it murder?

The third investigation follows an attack on two homeless men, one of whom dies. The evidence trail leads to so-called "county lines" drug dealing.

SERIES DNA

ESSEX POLICE; EXPECTATION; ALAP

Executive producer Ruth Kelly says she's set out to capture both the breadth and complexity of a murder inquiry. As well as five camera teams deployed on the ground, in the edit suite Kelly has employed a range of smart visual tricks to help underline that investigative sweep.

"It's not just one cop and his sidekick, as drama would have you believe. There are so many strands running, so many different sorts of specialists involved, and we wanted to make a series that made a feature of that.

"Where other series might try to filter the action through a central character, we were, in fact, doing the opposite. We wanted to be with the forensics guys, with the phone analysts, with the manhunt specialists – we wanted our cameras to be in all of those places.

"The multi-pane, mosaic approach that we use [on screen] is trying to reflect all of that simultaneous action."

MURDER APPEAL

"What we were interested in was not what kind of murder it was, but what kind of investigation," says Kelly. "It was always going to be important that we had a murder investigation that spanned a significant amount of time."

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

"We've included things in this series that we wouldn't have done in others," Kelly says. "Other series would focus less on the dead ends, but we've made a feature of them, because they're a feature of a typical murder investigation.

"There were pages of protocols that we spent a lot of time working on, around things like consent [to film], but there weren't any red lines. Essex Police do get to view the programmes in advance, but that's only to comment on factual accuracy – they have no editorial control."

DOCS IN THE DOCK

Our appetite for crime used to be sated by drama writers, but now access-all-areas factual series are taking over. Kelly puts the case for the documentary. "People often say that if your documentary series is like a drama then you've managed to do a really good job, as if that's the rarefied genre to aspire to. Actually, for me, it's the opposite: as documentary-makers, we can use the tropes of drama, such as cliffhangers, but the fact that our films are populated by real stories is exactly why they pack a punch, in a way that drama can never do."

WE, THE JURY

Although the programme depicts real crimes, involving real victims, Kelly hopes the stylised approach to chronicling the investigations will engage viewers on a whodunnit level. "We almost allow people to play home sleuth. They see the evidence building up, and you hope they ask themselves 'What does that mean?' or 'What piece of the puzzle does that solve?""

Can't pay, won't pay?

As the Government asks if people who refuse to buy a TV licence should no longer go to jail, Mark Lawson explores the arguments for and against. Turn to p33 to tell us what you think QUEEN ELIZABETH II and those serving jail sentences would seem to have little in common, except that prisoners are said to be "serving at Her Majesty's pleasure".

But another connection is that a monarch and a convict are two of the very few Britons who can legally watch television without a licence fee. They are beneficiaries, at different ends of the spectrum, of a "Crown Exception" in the law that requires most others watching UK programmes to pay £154.50 a year.

However, because TV licence evasion can lead to imprisonment, this means that, except for royals and over-75s (whose right to free licences is a separately controversial topic), the most sure way to watch TV for free is to be sent to prison for refusing to pay for it.

That loophole, though, may soon be closed. The Government has announced a "public consultation on decriminalising licence-fee evasion" (open until 1 April). Radio Times readers can take part easily by completing the survey over the page or, if you prefer, by visiting the Government's website. We'll submit the results of our survey to the Department for Digital, Culture, Media and Sport. They will help the Government decide whether people should still do time for watching repeats of Porridge on the sly.

Although the licence fee is most associated with the BBC (which is given all of the current £3.69 billion annual revenue, with some obligations imposed by the Government), the document is legally required to watch most live or recorded shows. The TV Licensing website has started to warn that its purview includes not just BBC iPlayer, but also "Sky, Virgin, BT, Freeview, ITV Hub, All 4, YouTube, Amazon Prime or NOW TV." (Note that Netflix – the BBC's biggest competitor in drama and documentary – remains a lucky exemption.)

 punishment – five people were locked up in 2018 – is only for those who refuse to pay a court fine (of up to £1,000) for licence-fee evasion. In the same year as the imprisoned quintet, a further 129,141 evaders were dealt with by the courts in ways short of incarceration.

The gov.uk site set up to solicit responses to the consultation offers hints (useful for our Question 3) that alternative remedies might include making non-payment a civil court matter, in line with parking fines – thus removing the risk of a criminal record, but increasing the chance of credit histories being affected.

clear that it wants to retain the "Go to jail" card. Central to its defence is that any reduction in income if the licence fee is easier to sidestep will affect programme-making raising the possibility that viewers will see less of favourites such as Sir David Attenborough and Strictly Come Dancing, and that the BBC might need to be meaner with its senior high-earners (Gary Lineker has the highest published BBC salary, of £1.75 million a year).

The corporation guesses that decriminalisation would cut its annual funding by £200m. However, a concrete figure is that, according to the BBC Annual Report and Accounts 2018–19, £103m was spent from licence-fee income on "licence-fee collection costs". So the Government's survey should perhaps examine closely the efficiency of a system by which £100m of income is going out of Broadcasting House to ensure that, by the BBC's own estimate, £200m keeps coming in.

Another intriguing number in the BBC accounts is that licence-fee income fell by £140m from 2018 to 2019. Where did those 900,000 or so people go? As they seem unlikely to be accounted for by death, imprisonment or marriage into the Windsors, it suggests that increasingly people are either not watching television at all or they're not paying for it, which is why the issue is so urgent for the BBC.

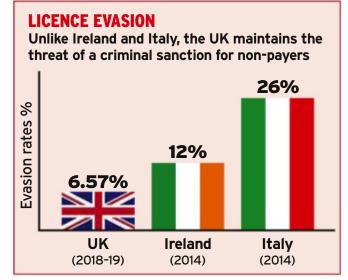

The government site warns that: "This consultation is not considering any other changes to the TV licence. Information given in these areas may be disregarded." That "may", though, could be eloquent. Many in politics and broadcasting see this consultation as a first step by those who see the BBC as too large, self-important and financially coddled.

It seems unlikely to be a coincidence that the sounding exercise was launched in the same week as the announcement that the TV licence fee will rise to £157.50 from 1 April, in line with the inflationary increase until 2022 written into the BBC's current Royal Charter. The next BBC directorgeneral will negotiate with the Government the cost of the licence from 2022–27. If the level were reduced or even frozen, then the legal status of unauthorised viewing would be the least of the broadcaster's problems.

So the bigger question that lies behind the government questionnaire is whether this is just the start of a wider questioning of whether there should be a licence fee at all.

Irish rugby's professionalism is paying off on the pitch

Six Nations: England v Ireland

Sun 2.10pm (k/o 3pm) ITV, 2.45pm R5 Live Sp Ex

England in the Six Nations on Sunday. It will be a match between equals, a match that might well decide the tournament. But those with long memories might pause for a second to ask: how come Ireland are now so good? In the 1990s, during the old Five Nations, Ireland never finished higher than fourth. They were bottom three years in a row, and in 1991 they lost a two-match series against Namibia.

I remember a match touched by magic in Dublin in 1993, when Ireland impossibly beat are the state of the control of the England thanks to the deadeye kicking of Eric Elwood. It was a glorious fluke, one of those upsurges of team spirit and joyous incredulity that characterises an underdog victory. That was Irish rugby: a reliable supply of local colour to the annual sporting round.

I was there for the same fixture in 2007. It was held at Croke Park, scene of the Bloody Sunday horrors of 1920. And yet, incredibly, the English national anthem was not booed. Such behaviour was no longer necessary, provincial sides have been turned into four super-clubs that contest the Pro14 league, alongside teams from Italy, Scotland, South Africa and Wales. The top Irish players have central contracts: they play where and when the national team think appropriate.

'It's a mature, selfconfident nation, with a rugby team to match'

No split loyalties, no tail wagging the dog. It helps, of course, that Ireland have had some great players in recent years; it also helps that great players are managed in a way that allows them to give their best on the greatest occasions.

for the past six years. He stood down after last year's World Cup – and in what might turn out to be a coup, they put Andy Farrell in charge. Farrell was part of the England coaching team until Eddie Jones arrived in 2015, and since then he has been working in Ireland, mostly under Schmidt. Farrell's tenure has seen Ireland produce two wins in two games so far, and now there's a chance to put one over Jones – and Farrell's son, Owen, the England captain.

Ireland are still capable of these glorious rushes of team spirit, in which everyone is suddenly twice the player he was before. But while inspiration and individual brilliance are always great, they work best within a structure built on sound principles. England, maddeningly inconsistent, with an organisation hagridden by cross-purposes, are the team in need of luck. Still, if they want to learn about grown-up, professional sport, they can always ask the Irish.

NE WAY OR another, Mark Ruffalo is going to save the world. He's best known as the actor behind Marvel behemoth Hulk, and it's the boxoffice slam of Avengers: Endgame and associated pea-green outings that have given him the clout to bring real-life whistleblower drama Dark Waters (in cinemas from Friday 28 February) to the screen. "That's a worthy trade-off," he says intently, having served as star, producer, and heart and soul of this politically charged new film. "It has just become much easier to get the other things that I like to do made. Things in line with my activism."

Dark Waters, you could say, belongs to Ruffalo's alter-ego career. Based on a New York Times Magazine article, with cool clarity it tells the true story of unassuming Cincinnati attorney Rob Bilott (Ruffalo), who exposed the biggest environmental cover-up in US history.

Chemical giant DuPont had been pumping a carcinogenic acid, known as PFOA, into the Ohio River for decades. It took one distraught West Virginia farmer, his cattle dying horrifically, to bring the evidence to Bilott, who turned his slingshot upon the corporate Goliath. Cancer was rife; the company was literally poisoning the water. For Bilott, this was a moral choice.

'I thought, this is a horror film - but it's real?

When Ruffalo read the article he was floored. "I thought, this is a horror film – but it's real and no one knows about it," he says, unable to keep the passion from his voice.

PFOA is used in the manufacture of Teflon, which might make you think differently about your frying pan, and the case goes way beyond that other real-life story of legal and consumer activism told in the film Erin Brockovich. To put things in context, Bilott is currently fighting a class action suit on behalf of every single citizen in the United States.

Equally at home at Comic-Con as at a stump rally for Democrat politician Bernie Sanders (he's a big supporter), Ruffalo is a rare mix. At 53, his hair peppered with grey, he brings no ego into the room; no publicist lurks by the door. Born in Kenosha, Wisconsin, he worked his way up through theatre and low-budget dramas, but there's no missing the movie-star charisma: his laughter carries down the hotel corridor. But he is adept at finding the extraordinary in the ordinary. Idealism flows through his bloodstream as radiation flows through Hulk's.

"There's only so far a magazine article can go," he insists. "A documentary can go further. But if green Mark Ruffalo became a star as Hulk, now he's the force behind a powerful eco-thriller you do a movie and do it right you can reach an film, Safe, Julianne Moore develops an audience that no one else can get."

This means entertaining people, and what might seem the unconventional choice of New York-based indie-king Todd Haynes as director. Ruffalo agrees he could have played it straight, but preferred Haynes's vision, "beautifully shot" and with added "depth of character". Haynes, 59, leans toward the experimental. He began his career telling Karen Carpenter's story with Barbie dolls, and later cast Cate Blanchett as one of six Bob Dylans in 2007's I'm Not There. And he's no stranger to political issues. In his 1995 extreme chemical sensitivity - an environmental illness.

"I was trying to think of a film that might address the new populist movement," explains Haynes, "then the Dark Waters script arrived, where everybody was on the wrong side of politics" as Bilott takes on the full force of corporate America. Haynes wraps the rural Appalachian exteriors in a veil of almost post-apocalyptic winter light, while the frosted glass partitions and poky cubicles of Cincinnati become tableaux of officeblock alienation.

Amid the procedural thrillers of the 70s, Watergate classic All the President's Men, says Ruffalo, was their "true north". "It's a genre I love and I've dabbled in myself," alluding to his performances in edgy thrillers like Zodiac and Spotlight. In fact, Dark Waters can be seen as a companion to the Oscar-nominated 2014 truelife drama Foxcatcher, in which Ruffalo played Olympic wrestler Dave Schultz, who was murdered by Steve Carell's John du Pont, the heir to the DuPont fortune.

HE EMOTIONALLY CONSTRAINED Bilott presented a challenge for the actor: a mild-mannered Bruce Banner (Hulk's human incarnation) who would never blow. Everything was on the inside. "At every single turn, I'm like, is this the Oscar speech?" he laughs. "It's a very different way of speaking truth. There's no ego in it. There is nothing showy about him. And that was hard."

What we get is a symphony of restraint. Indignation and determination emanate from the screen. Ruffalo did his research - what we see, he says, is "the tip of the iceberg". Haynes, too, does a wonderful job in visualising the huge volumes of paperwork involved as DuPont tried to derail Bilott's case by overwhelming him with documentation. Plus, there was a responsibility: you're dealing with a real life.

Next up, while Haynes plans a film about Lou Reed and the Velvet Underground, Ruffalo hasn't entirely said farewell to Hulk, needing to find a window to lend his voice to in-the-works Marvel animated series What If...? (He treats playing Hulk every bit as seriously as someone like Bilott. "There's still got to be some inner life going on," he says.) His time has more recently been taken up with new HBO miniseries I Know This Much Is True, in which he plays twins, one of whom is a paranoid schizophrenic. "There's some really bold stuff," he says.

Of course, in the event, and disappointingly for the actor, Dark Waters failed to become part of the Oscars conversation. Not that his ego needed stroking, but the coverage would have really helped the cause. The thought stirs a speech.

> "This is a small story that captures a whole systematic abuse of corporations, whether we're talking nary gallery. "Water's not political, man! We have to have clean water." Heroic stuff. IAN NATHAN

Farewell to Kirk

They say never nurse a grudge, but sometimes, as with the titanic Kirk Douglas, who died, aged 103, on 5 February, it's worth digging your sandals in.

Born into an immigrant Russian Jewish family in New York, Izzy Demsky was discharged from the Navy in 1944, having changed his name to Kirk Douglas. The young sofa-surfer scraped a living on stage and in commercials; the humble "ragman's son" of his 1988 autobiography. Following contemporary Burt Lancaster in founding his own production company (named Bryna after his mother), Kirk never had to take back control. Robbed of the lead in Ben-Hur by Charlton Heston, he optioned Spartacus and, as t was a tough, fraught shoot, but with Douglas's death, the sword-and-sandals epic has taken on a more meaningful aura, not least for the worldwide affection for the scene in which Spartacus, marked for crucifixion, inspires the massed cry of solidarity "I'm Spartacus!" (The scene is parodied in Monty Python's Life of Brian, with its chorus of "I'm Brian of Nazareth!... No, I'm Brian!... I'm Brian!", and climaxing with the entreaty, "I'm Brian and so's my wife!")

FIGHTER

gladiator

A standing ovation at the 2018 Golden Globes as he presented the best screenplay award with daughter-in-law Catherine Zeta Jones marked one of his last official appearances. Denied an Oscar for his acting and producing work, he accumulated Lifetime Achievement awards and a Presidential Medal of Freedom. When asked in 2014 to discuss a dozen of his best-loved films, he praised Ace in the Hole, Lust for Life, Paths of Glory and, you guessed it, Spartacus. "I have forgotten most of them," he quipped, "and so has the public." Not a chance. There can be no doubt: Kirk Douglas was and will now always be Spartacus.

Despicable Me 3 ***
5.20-7.00pm ITV

COMEDY Setting aside the games, books and theme-park rides, the Despicable Me franchise (four films so far, with a Minions sequel on its way this summer) has made nearly $4 billion at the worldwide box office. In this instalment, reformed supervillain Gru (voiced by Steve Carell) is working with his wife (Kristen Wiig) and the Anti-Villain League to defeat Balthazar (Trey Parker), a former child star who's turned evil. Failing in their mission, the pair are kicked off the case, and Gru is deserted by his loyal Minions for renouncing his villainous ways. But when Gru discovers that he has a long-lost twin, he is tempted back to the despicable side by his gloriously coiffured brother, Dru. Pierre Coffin and Kyle Balda's film sometimes strains for the dizzy heights of the first sequel, but you will be entertained, not least by the irresistible, Esperanto-splurting yellow drones. (US 2017, HD) DID YOU KNOW? Gru is originally from the fictional land of Freedonia – the same country namechecked in the Marx Brothers'

U

THRILLER Tom Cruise stars here as Barry Seal, the real-life TWA pilot who spent much of the late 1970s and 80s playing the CIA and Mexican cartels off against each other. There are vicarious thrills galore in this free-wheeling tale of drugs, planes and Reagan-era politics. It's fun to have a seat on the ride, but as soon as things get serious the lack of any deeper motivation for Seal other than cash means the final act falls a bit flat. Cruise is as charismatic as you would expect, sporting a respectable southern accent and portraying Seal as a man in search of the next rush. Domhnall Gleeson, playing Seal's CIA handler, is on hand to add a touch of darkness. JL (US 2017, swearing, HD)

Phil Spector ★★★★ 9.00-10.45pm Sky Atlantic

BIOPIC This superb drama from David Mamet caused a furore on its release in the US, with hints in the script that Phil Spector's conviction for the murder of actress Lana Clarkson in 2003 may have been a miscarriage of justice. It's ostensibly about Spector's legal team building its case for his trial, but at the film's heart is the relationship between Spector (Al Pacino) and lead attorney Linda Kenney Baden (Helen Mirren). Never knowingly underwritten, Mamet's dialogue crackles with wit and verve, while Pacino's resemblance to Spector - all grandiloquence and paranoia in a fright wig – is nicely contrasted by the resolute Mirren. The soundtrack is pretty good, too. DC (US TVM 2013, HD)

DRAMA Writer/director Martin Provost, (Séraphine, Violette) presents a little light character sketching for a pair of esteemed French actresses in this droll dramedy that was specifically penned for Catherines Frot and Deneuve. Frot plays dedicated hospital midwife Claire, who is contacted by eccentric Béatrice (Deneuve), the woman who ended the affair that drove her father to suicide. Reuniting after 35 years. the pair hardly hit it off. The by-play between the stars is riveting, with Deneuve playing against type as a gluttonous harridan. Moreover, it's heartening to see a film exploring midlife ennui from a female perspective for a change. DP (Fr/Bel 2017, nudity, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Allied ★★★

11.00pm-1.15am C4

DID YOU KNOW? Marion Cotillard helped Brad Pitt with his French accent; she had previously worked hard to lose hers for her role in Public Enemies

ROMANTIC THRILLER In 2015, Back to the Future director Robert Zemeckis amassed a $100-million budget to go back to the past. Allied is an old-fashioned Second World War adventure romance in the Casablanca mould, written by Steven Knight of period gangster saga Peaky Blinders renown. The story opens in Casablanca itself, where Brad Pitt's pilot joins

French Resistance activist Marion Cotillard to assassinate a German diplomat (warning: what occurs is much more violent than the Bogart/ Bergman template). The action then shifts to London during the Blitz, where suspicions are raised regarding Cotillard's loyalties. From the start, Allied pushes the buttons of a demographic that longs for a simpler, matinée-friendly past, with Pitt and Cotillard bringing plenty of old-fashioned style and star power to their roles. How the West Was Won $\star\star\star\star$ 9.55-1.00pm ITV4

WESTERN Although it loses its impact on TV, this epic re-creation of the settling of the American west was one of only two narrative films made in three-camera Cinerama. To match the scale of the movie, it also has a truly all-star cast with the likes of James Stewart and Gregory Peck pairing up with feisty pioneering women such as Carroll Baker and Debbie Reynolds. Genre icons John Wayne, Henry Fonda and Richard Widmark also make significant appearances. A massive undertaking at the time, it really is true to say they don't make them like this any more. TS (US 1962, violence, HD)

The Love Punch $\star\star\star\star$ 1.55-3.50pm C5

ROMANTIC COMEDY Pierce Brosnan and Emma Thompson star in this fizzing screwball caper, which tracks the bumbling efforts of a divorced couple to steal a diamond. Writer/director Joel Hopkins may be courting an older audience here, but not necessarily a more mature one. Thompson and Brosnan are giddy as schoolkids on a mission that takes them to the French Riviera, where they scale cliff-faces, get into car chases, and, yes, fall in love with each other all over again. If the plot is a bit clumsy, that's more than made up for with the sheer exuberance of the playing, plus plenty of cheeky banter. SP (UK/Fr 2013, swearing, HD)

Dunkirk ★★★ 2.45-5.00pm BBC2

WAR DRAMA Produced by Michael Balcon, this Ealing reconstruction of the evacuation of Dunkirk is impressive in its scale and authenticity, but slightly disappointing in its writing and execution. John Mills, Richard Attenborough and Bernard Lee scarcely have to act, as their respective parts – a corporal lost on the beaches, a snivelling stay-at-home and a cynical reporter – are so cleverly tailor-made. Director Leslie Norman does well to maintain the docudramatic feel, in spite of some shoddy dialogue. Christopher Nolan put a more immersive and breathtaking spin on the same events with his 2017 film Dunkirk, now available on Netflix. DP (UK 1958, BW)

FANTASY This snappy comedy sequel sees night watchman/entrepreneur Larry Daley (Ben Stiller) return to New York's Museum of Natural History only to find that his exhibit pals (including Owen Wilson and Steve Coogan) are headed for permanent storage at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

He's summoned by a phone call from the bowels of the archive warning of a plot by egotistical Egyptian prince Kahmunrah (Hank Azaria on top form) to take over the museum. The film has a broader scope and more imagination than the original, but it's the delightful special effects that impress the most. KK (US/Can 2009, some violence, HD)

Bridge of Spies $\star \star \star \star$ 6.10-9.00pm Film4

THRILLER Steven Spielberg's glossy espionage drama spins a complex story of political intrigue into timeless entertainment. Inspired by real events and set during the height of the Cold War, it follows principled insurance lawyer James B Donovan (Tom Hanks) as he agrees to represent unassuming Soviet spy Rudolf Abel (Mark Rylance). Spielberg finds humour in the escalating subterfuge and includes plenty of eye-catching period detail. The film seems slowed to match the pace of Rylance's riveting, Oscar-winning performance, and its compassionate message is written all over his face. EAS (US 2015, violence, swearing, col/BW, HD)

● Jurassic World ★★★★ 6.35-9.00pm ITV2

ADVENTURE Director Colin Trevorrow's Jurassic Park sequel/reboot is a roaring return to the breathtaking action that made the franchise such a hit. In a new theme park that has been built on the site of the original attraction, dinosaur wrangler Chris Pratt and park boss Bryce Dallas Howard are forced to fight for their lives after a genetically modified beastie escapes and goes on a killing rampage. But the true stars of the show are the dinosaurs themselves, not least the mutant Indominus rex. With a potent blend of scares, laughs and affectionate nods to Steven Spielberg's 1993 original, this thrill ride has everything you could want from a family blockbuster. HF (US 2015, violence, HD)

The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby ★★★★ 6.50-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV

PERIOD DRAMA Alberto Cavalcanti had several outings as a director for Ealing Studios, but this postwar take on Dickens was to be overshadowed by David Lean's Oliver Twist and Great Expectations. However, it still deserves attention as a screen version of a story that has relevance today. Derek Bond is hopelessly wooden as Nicholas, but Alfred Drayton is suitably loathsome as the head of Dotheboys Hall, with Cedric Hardwicke's Uncle Ralph a diabolical villain. For a director who began as a surrealist, Cavalcanti keeps himself gracefully in check and the narrative is wonderfully to the point. TH (UK 1947, BW)

Dawn of the Planet of the Apes ★★★★ 9.00-11.40pm E4

SCI-FI In this sequel to 2011's Rise of the Planet of the Apes, most of the human population has been wiped out by simian flu. While superintelligent chimpanzee Caesar (Andy Serkis), now the leader of a large ape colony, feels compassion for the beleaguered humans, his right-hand-ape Koba (Toby Kebbell) is determined to show him the error of mixing with mankind. What follows is an epic tale of betrayal, deception and brutality that plays out like a Greek tragedy – with a touch of Animal Farm thrown in. The human characters are underdeveloped, but the apes seem 100% real. With both brains and heart, this is superior blockbuster fare. LB (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

BIBLICAL EPIC Russell Crowe stars as the man chosen by God (here called the Creator) to undertake a momentous rescue mission before apocalyptic floods consume the Earth. Yet beyond the task of shepherding animals into a gigantic ark, Noah is also tormented by several big questions, not least why he should be the one chosen as saviour. It all makes for an impressive spectacle – the ark itself is built to scale – but the film sometimes seems unsure of whether it wants to be epic or relevant. Crowe is charismatic throughout, in marked contrast to the hammy supporting turns by Anthony Hopkins and Ray Winstone. TeS (US 2014, violence, HD)

• • Rogue One ***
7.20-10.00pm ITV2

SCI-FI In 2016, Rogue One entered new narrative territory for the Star Wars franchise, introducing a whole new set of players in a standalone adventure. The action takes place prior to Episode IV: a New Hope, with the feministfacing Jyn Erso (Felicity Jones) leading a rag-tag group of rebels on a mission to steal the plans for the Death Star. The story requires no previous knowledge of the saga, but there are Easter eggs dotted throughout to please the faithful, including canny cameos for Princess Leia, Grand Moff Tarkin, C-3PO and Darth Vader. The cast is cosmically diverse - Forest Whitaker, Riz Ahmed, Diego Luna, Donnie Yen and Jiang Wen – with direction from Nuneaton's very own Gareth Edwards. (US 2016, violence, HD)

Last Train from Gun Hill ★★★★ 1.20-3.15pm Film4

WESTERN Showing in tribute to the late Kirk Douglas, this very fine western was made by the same team (including director John Sturges and producer Hal Wallis) that worked on Gunfight at the OK Corral. Douglas is at his most intense as a man seeking revenge following the rape and murder of his wife. Anthony Quinn makes a tough adversary, and the rich photography by Charles Lang Jr is exemplary. The 1965 war drama In Harm's Way follows in today's Douglas double bill. TS (US 1959)

Brighton Rock ★★★★ 6.10-8.00pm Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA This is one of the most sinister crime films ever made in Britain. Graham Greene, scripting from his own novel (not in collaboration with Terence Rattigan as many sources state), drew some of the film's teeth by allowing waitress Rose the faint hope that her malicious husband might love her after all – a contrivance that was given a glutinously spiritual slant by director John Boulting. Richard Attenborough turns in the best performance of his career as Pinkie the teenage gangster, and he is magnificently supported by William Hartnell and Carol Marsh. DP (UK 1947, some violence, BW)

Back to the Future Part III  6.40-9.00pm Film4

sci-fi adventure Robert Zemeckis's blockbusting series went slightly off the rails with the second segment, but it got right back on track (literally) with this concluding instalment. The story is set predominantly in the Old West and, as before, the plot revolves around the need to tinker with time and the problem of how to power the trusty DeLorean car so that Michael J Fox can get back to the present. Using the special effects intelligently, Zemeckis stages a spectacular steam-train finale and neatly ties up all the trilogy's loose ends. JF (US 1990, edited for violence, language, HD)

Jupiter Ascending ★★ 11.00pm-1.25am C5

SCI-FI Matrix masterminds the Wachowskis followed 2012's Cloud Atlas with another ambitious sci-fi action epic. Mila Kunis stars as a down-on-her-luck human who discovers she is intergalactic royalty. With the help of a genetically enhanced soldier (Channing Tatum), she must attempt to prevent the Earth from being "harvested" by alien aristocrat Eddie Redmayne. While the Wachowskis have not lost their visual flair, the disorganised plot becomes increasingly hard to follow, making this a diverting but quite empty experience. JL (US 2014, HD)

The Pumpkin Eater $\star\star\star\star$ 11.05pm-1.20am Sony Classic

DRAMA Fans of the late, great Yootha Joyce - whose ferocious domestic life force shone through in ITV sitcoms Man about the House and George and Mildred - may be surprised by her earlier appearance in this black-and-white British melodrama, adapted by Harold Pinter and directed by Jack Clayton (Room at the Top, The Innocents). The story revolves around Anne Bancroft and her violent union with philandering third husband Peter Finch. Through tears, physical fighting, alarming camera angles and a jazzy score by Georges Delerue, the pair attempts a reconciliation. Joyce shows up as an unnamed soul who reveals her post-hysterectomy loneliness to Bancroft while the pair are at the hairdresser's ("my life is an empty place"). Do not miss. (UK 1964, BW)

COMEDY Michael Keaton finds his time stretched to the limit between his wife (Andie MacDowell), career and family, until he meets a scientist who offers to clone him - but, of course, one clone ends up not being enough and soon he has an attic full of them. This inventive romp from Harold Ramis is not as eye-wateringly funny as the director's classic Groundhog Day, but it benefits hugely from Keaton's multiple and versatile performances. JB (US 1996, edited for violence, language)

Beetle Juice ★★★★ 9.00-10.55pm 5STAR

HORROR COMEDY Michael Keaton stars once again in this refreshingly flaky fantasy from director Tim Burton, which showcases monstrously zany special effects, demonic one-liners and offbeat performances. Keaton is amazing as an irritatingly unstable freelance exorcist, called in to help recently deceased Geena Davis and Alec Baldwin rid their new home of human pests. Winona Ryder also impresses in an early role as the goth stepdaughter with an affinity for the dead. AJ (US 1988, edited for language, HD)

Zero Dark Thirty ★★★★ 10.30pm-1.35am ITV4

THRILLER The hunt for Osama Bin Laden is catalogued in forensic detail in this wordy but well-paced movie from the makers of the Oscar-winning Hurt Locker. Driven CIA operative Jessica Chastain follows every small lead across the globe while attempting to track down the al-Qaeda figurehead, frequently locking horns with her superiors back in the United States. With the aid of on-screen timeline and location captions, director Kathryn Bigelow skilfully manages to present a cohesive narrative out of potentially confusing material. The film's scenes of torture provoked controversy, but Chastain's gutsy performance gives it a strong human centre. TeS (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

CRIME The towering presence of Michael Shannon as New Jersey hitman Richard Kuklinski gives this true-crime biopic a backbone of steel. A prolific killer for the powerful Gambino family, Kuklinski was known as the Iceman for his modus operandi, which involved freezing and storing the bodies of his victims to obscure the date and time of death. It sounds like a traditional Mob movie premise, but the selling point here is that Kuklinski led a double life, hiding his sordid secret from his family right up until his arrest in 1986. DW

Radio Times is giving away 5,000 tickets to previews on Monday 2 March 2020

Starring Bafta award-winners Kristin Scott Thomas and Sharon Horgan, Military Wives the feature film is inspired by the BBC documentary series The Choir: Military Wives, which saw choirmaster Gareth Malone select and train amateur singers to form choirs, sparking a global phenomenon. The film celebrates a band of women who form a choir on a military base. As unexpected bonds of friendship flourish, music and laughter transform their lives, helping each other to overcome their fears for their loved ones in combat.

Preview screening on Monday 2 March 2020 - 6pm arrival for 6.30pm screening (except Showcase cinemas, 6.30pm arrival for 7pm screening). Tickets are allocated on a first-come, first-served basis, so book now to avoid missing out. For details of participating cinemas see below.

DRAMA This informed and immersive film is set in the early 1990s as the Aids epidemic rages, and shows the Act Up Paris collective's "positive and combative" approach to effecting change. Director Robin Campillo puts us in the midst of impassioned debates and protests, making time for a relationship between vivacious founder member Nahuel Pérez Biscayart and newcomer Arnaud Valois. There's love, tragedy and laughter in an inspiring, visually arresting look at a group refusing to go down without a fight. Emma Simmonds (Fr 2017, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

● • Vice Versa ★★★ 12.30-2.35pm Sony Movies

COMEDY Although it lacks the charm of the 1947 British film of the same name, this was a better-than-average entry in the cycle of body-swap movies that gripped Hollywood in the late 1980s. Most of it is down to the inspired playing of Judge Reinhold and Fred Savage, who learn that their respective lives are not quite as enjoyable as they imagined when they switch bodies using a magic ancient artefact. The two leads are fresh and convincing in both their personae, and, although sentimentality occasionally rears its head, director Brian Gilbert keeps the action flowing. JF (US 1988, edited for language)

Cover Girl ★★★★ 2.35-4.50pm Sony Classic

ROMANTIC COMEDY A milestone in the history of the glossy film musical, this Technicolor offering features a stunning Rita Hayworth and a score by Jerome Kern that includes Long Ago and Far Away. Columbia borrowed the young Gene Kelly from MGM and gave him free rein with his own sections of the movie. Kelly stepped up to the challenge, knocking out soundstage walls to create a continuous street scene for himself, Hayworth and Phil Silvers to dance through without any need for cuts. He also used trick photography to dance with himself in the "alter ego" routine. Kelly returned to MGM a master of his craft. The film is a little dated. overlong and corny, but a treat nonetheless. TS (US 1944)

Cop Land $\star\star\star\star$ 10.30pm-12.40am ITV4

POLICE DRAMA Sylvester Stallone appears here in a touching role as an out-of-shape New Jersey sheriff with a hearing disability and zero self-esteem who patrols a community made up of New York City cops. Stallone gives his all (including a dramatic weight gain for the role) as he uncovers corruption among his police friends, and is easily the match of a terrific cast that includes Robert De Niro, Harvey Keitel and a really nasty Ray Liotta. Writer/director James Mangold's urban western succumbs to a few contrivances, but the quality of the acting, the evocative score (by Howard Shore) and a riveting climax are recommendation enough. DRAMA Best remembered (if at all) for Philip Green's jaunty theme music, this British Lion horse-racing romp gains from the fact that it was photographed in colour and CinemaScope by the great Jack Hildyard. It also has good-looking leads in handsome Terence Morgan and sultry Peggy Cummins, who, together with a sly performance from Cyril Cusack, keep the whole thing a good deal more watchable than it deserves to be. Comedy fans might care to note the pre-Carry On casting of Charles Hawtrey, while Wilfrid Hyde White also puts in an appearance. TS (UK 1956)

Knocked Up ★★★★ 9.00-11.40pm ITV2

ROMANTIC COMEDY Writer/director Judd Apatow cemented his reputation after The 40 Year Old Virgin with this very modern rom-com, in which pothead Seth Rogen impregnates media career girl Katherine Heigl during a drunken one-night stand. Deciding to give the relationship a go, our odd couple learns lessons about responsibility and life in general, but to hilarious rather than schmaltzy effect. Marriedwith-kids Paul Rudd and Leslie Mann are the foils for the younger pair, and Rogen's friends (including Jonah Hill and Jay Baruchel) are the geek chorus. Thanks to quality, near-the-knuckle repartee and believable chemistry between Rogen and Heigl, Knocked Up proves that hit comedy doesn't have to dumb down for its demographic. AC (US 2007, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

Night of the Living Dead $\star\star\star\star$ 18 9.00-10.45pm Horror Channel

HORROR This highly acceptable remake of George A Romero's 1968 horror classic sticks close to the events of the original, as a group of people becomes trapped inside a farmhouse by flesh-eating zombies. However, the masterstroke here is to keep the viewer off-guard by introducing fresh slants, courtesy of Romero (who updated his own script) and director Tom Savini. Shot in atmospheric muted colours and well acted by Patricia Tallman and Tom Towles in particular, this succeeds thanks to Savini's sure hand – he brings flair, intelligence and imagination to what could have been a thankless task. P The Big Sick ★★★★
11.05pm-1.00am BBC2

ROMANTIC COMEDY Kumail Nanjiani (Silicon Valley) has often mined his Pakistani upbringing for material – and does so again in The Big Sick. He plays a version of himself as Kumail, a comedian whose overbearing parents want to set him up with a nice Muslim girl. When Kumail starts seeing irreligious Emily (Zoe Kazan), a tricky situation is exacerbated by an unexpected twist. The story is based on the actual courtship of Nanjiani and his wife Emily V Gordon, who both wrote the Oscar-nominated screenplay. Director Michael Showalter balances the bitter with the sweet, while Ray Romano and Holly Hunter steal every scene they're in as Emily's parents. SPY DRAMA Here's a glamorous trawl through international espionage from Charade director Stanley Donen, starring the eternally puzzled Gregory Peck and the lovely Sophia Loren. The plot is nonsense, about Arab spies (hence the punning title), but Alan Badel and Irish actor Kieron Moore provide fine support. Cary Grant rejected the Peck role and would have made a better choice, but this remains lush, mindless and expertly crafted matinée fare. TS (US/UK 1966, edited for violence)

Die Hard 2 ★★★ 9.00-11.25pm Film4

THRILLER Bruce Willis dons the white singlet for another hugely entertaining slice of action hokum. Director Renny Harlin makes no attempt to re-create the intriguing battle of wits in the original between Alan Rickman and Willis, instead cheerfully piling on the increasingly grand explosions and set pieces. This time around, Willis uncovers a terrorist plot as he waits for wife Bonnie Bedelia to fly in to a snowbound Washington airport. Alison Graham calls time on this winter's drab dramas AM TRAUMATISED BY the Welsh noir thriller Hidden (Saturday BBC4, Tuesday BBC1 Wales). I've lost sleep and been paralysed into wakefulness by the full horror of what I've seen, week upon week. There are pictures I can't get out of my head as my brain twists into the kind of dripping hell-holes that would send even Hieronymus Bosch crying into his duvet and begging his mum for a toffee apple.

I'm talking, of course, of Hidden's hideous carpets. And its kitchens. And its bathrooms. It comes to something when a submerged dead and mutilated body lying leaking into the bathtub actually improves the decor.

Hidden has a particularly brutal taupe-ery about it, as if every atom of the air is filled with fag smoke that's seeped into every door frame, wall and item of furniture. Even the police station is a drab, barely lit shed where sadness oozes from the ceiling and spores of disappointment stain the atmosphere.

I've grown a bit tired of dreary-looking dramas where the sun never shines. I know, of course, that Hidden strives for a kind of grubby realism and I like it, I really do, particularly its lead detective, Cadi John (Sian Reese-Williams), who is sensible and not given to that maverick male cop thing of bashing walls and sweeping the contents of a desk onto the ground in one swoop. But it's heartening to turn towards the light occasionally, so I'm very glad there's a whole crop of good-looking dramas brightening the days of this most inescapably dull month.

There's Flesh and Blood, which runs from Monday to Thursday on ITV. It's actually a crime mystery but the houses are chic and wellfurnished and no one seems to be living in the inside of a kitchen waste bin.

Showing something on consecutive nights is always a bit of a gamble for any major network: if the first episode limps away to die then the remaining instalments are left to flap in the breeze like forgotten washing.

•No one seems to be living in the inside of a kitchen waste bin⁹

I'm generally not a fan of this one-shot, oneweek hit, but in the case of Flesh and Blood I think it works well. And it's so fast-moving that back-to-back scheduling means the tension doesn't drop between episodes.

Flesh and Blood reminds me a lot of Big Little Lies – it's very sunny, there are lots of characters, and having seen the apparent zipping of a body bag in the first few minutes of episode one, we are then left to discover the identity of the victim only at the end of the series. Meanwhile, characters are interviewed by a doughty detective as they give their versions of events.

There's even a beach! With lots of shots of the lovely beach-front house of the lead character Vivien (Francesca Annis) as she trots along the sand. Refreshing.

It's a delight, too, to be back after four years in the sunlit uplands of West Yorkshire and the return of Sally Wainwright's beloved Last Tango in Halifax (Sunday BBC1). It's a series with so much heart and kindness and great kitchens though it is never, ever insipid. In this week's opening episode, one character even declares, "I'm happier than I have ever been."

What, a happy character in a television drama? Unthinkable.

WEATHER WARNING

It had to happen one day, when a reporter buffeted by a storm while telling us that emergency services have advised people to stay indoors comes a cropper. That singular honour fell to BBC News's Simon Jones, who was on the seafront at Dover during Storm Ciara on a live link to Shaun Ley in the studio. But then Simon made the mistake of turning to look out to sea and BAM! He was hit full in the face by a wave (below). He was then, bless him, forced to spit

THEY'RE BACK! Outlander

Available now

It's not quite the global sensation it was back in series one, but the time-travelling romance should still get fans' hearts beating faster as it unravels its fifth run, with a new episode every Monday. Heroic lovers Jamie and Claire (Sam Heughan and Caitriona Balfe) are settled in a new country, but will the coming war for American independence pull them apart?

SPORT, UP CLOSE All or Nothing: Brazil

Available now

The latest entry in the behind-thescenes sports series isn't a hugely revealing piece of film-making, but for football nuts it offers glimpses of life inside the goldfish bowl. As Brazil try to win the 2019 Cop America, interviews with the players and the franchise's trademark ground-level footage of games tell the story. We also see what it means to folks back home.

BY FANS, FOR FANS The Doctors

Available now

A lo-fi but extensive series of interviews with Doctors, companions and other actors from the classic Doctor Who era - starting with a tribute to William Hartnell, right. The host, "voice of the Daleks" Nicholas Briggs, strikes a good balance between enthusiast and insider.

BRITBOX

AN ALL-TIME CLASSIC Up

Available now

One of the great documentaries. From Seven Up! in 1964 to 63 Up in 2019, in most cases it's stuck with the 14 seven-year-olds from varied socio-economic backgrounds who appeared in the original film. As time's gone on we've had a close-up view of how beliefs, hopes and dreams change and ebb over time. BritBox has every episode.

The Lost Honour of Christopher Jeffries

Available now

Jason Watkins deservedly took the leading actor Bafta in 2015 for portraying a man suspected of murder, then monstered in the press. As this unsettling true story develops, media excess and our own wild instincts are powerfully brought into focus, as is the choice Jeffries was left with: try to recede into obscurity, or fight back?

Tough, BUT A MUST-SEE Three Girls

Available from 20 February

This 2017 BBC1 drama is an immensely hard watch, but the sorry tale of the Rochdale sex abuse scandal is one of voices that weren't heard when they needed to be. Invaluably, some measure of atonement was offered by a series in which Maxine Peake and Lesley Sharp bolstered a superb main cast of unknowns. Just as a piece of TV, it's fine, fierce storytelling.

NETFLIX

The Chef Show

Available from 19 February

Fresh from showrunning Disney's mega-budget Star Wars TV show The Mandalorian (it comes to the UK in the spring), Jon Favreau returns with a third "volume" of a lo-fi cookery show loosely inspired by his 2014 movie Chef. So it's all about fast, street or comfort food, cooked with vast expertise by Favreau's chef sidekick Roy Choi. Set to make you drool this year: the ultimate hot dog.

NEW FROM ITALY Luna Nera

Available now

This period/fantasy drama is so lush to look at, a non-Italian speaker could feasibly enjoy it without the subtitles on, marvelling at the 17th-century village and castle sets, the pulchritudinous cast and the shadowy colour palette. Switch the words on and you get a fruity story about a young woman caught up in a witch hunt – in a world where witches exist.

BBC iPLAYER

The Pale Horse

Available now

Writer Sarah Phelps continues her somewhat miraculous reinvention of Agatha Christie as a source of disturbing, offbeat chills, a world away from the stately Poirot and Marple dramatisations of years gone by. This eldritch two-parter stars Rufus Sewell, in his element as Mark Easterbrook, a wealthy man whose life is marred by tragedy, complicated by bad relationships and, perhaps, tainted by witchcraft. Bathe in its filthy, threatening atmosphere.

KIDS, EH? Get Even

Available now

A new teen drama that might not appeal to many viewers outside that demographic, but which certainly has a different take on the usual themes of emotional confusion, gossip, uncertain friendship and the traps that lie in wait for kids using social media. At a stylised elite school where bullying is rife, a secret society of girls exacts elaborate revenge. But their schemes are (eventually – the major event doesn't happen for a couple of episodes) about to backfire.

APPLE TV+

DRAMA ANTHOLOGY Little America

Available now

In an era with too many streaming series to cope with, here's to the drama anthology: you can dip in and out, sampling self-contained episodes whenever you fancy. The lives of US immigrants is the theme of this one, which offers eight half-hours, all by different writers/directors and rarely featuring actors you'll recognise. That makes it feel fresh, while its focus on overcoming hardships means it's usually warm and optimistic.

A STORY TOLD WITH PRIDE Visible: Out on Television

Available now

A five-part doc charting the history of LGBTQ representation on US TV, from groundbreaking moments on shows such as Soap and All in the Family, through the dark days of the 1980s Aids panic and on to more modern landmarks like Ellen and Orange Is the New Black. It's a comprehensive, emotive overview that has scored interviews with almost every key figure (including Neil Patrick Harris, above).

NOW TV/ SKY BOX SETS

The L Word: Generation Q

Available now

A reboot of a drama that blazed a trail in the 2000s, but wasn't always mindful enough of bi and trans experiences and had a weakness for outlandish plotting. All that's fixed here, as the original characters mix with younger new additions to form a show that's soapy and (explicitly) sexy, but feels grounded in the real present.

BRAND-NEW COMEDY Intelligence

Available from 21 February

It still feels like an event whenever a Friends alumnus lends their comedy royalty to a new show, especially a British one. David Schwimmer is a star presence in this workplace comedy, set among the nerds and hackers within GCHQ. The arrogance of his American newcomer contrasts with a meek computer guy played by series creator Nick Mohammed.

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Ant and Dec's Saturday Night Takeaway 7.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Ah, Takeaway, it's good to have you back. The series didn't air last year as Ant was taking time off to focus on his recovery, while the final two episodes of 2018 were presented by Dec on his own.

So Saturday nights have just got a whole lot better: most of our favourite pre-recorded segments such as Undercover and Get Out of Me Ear remain, but there's a new prank with the lads dressed up as talking pandas called Howai and Wayai (think Geordie) and the return of their super-sleuth mini-series The Honoured – this time they're battling a secret race called the Squittarianuvians who pose an intergalactic security issue to Earth.

It's a 90-minute (less the ads of course) entertainment onslaught presented in a seemingly effortless way by the pair. It's slick, funny and touching, the pranks are spot-on, while the End of the Show Show always makes you smile. There's simply no one to match Ant and Dec, so no wonder their homes are stuffed with TV awards. JANE RACKHAM

Six Nations Rugby

1.25pm ITV/4.00pm BBC1

SPORT Hostilities are resumed in the Six Nations, beginning with Italy v Scotland (k/o 2.15pm ITV), two teams that could do with a win. The Azzurri are mired in last place while Scotland are still licking their wounds after their 13–6 defeat to England. The ongoing absence of fly-half Finn Russell on disciplinary grounds ensures Scottish rugby is not in a good place right now, but victory today would at least represent one step forward.

The spotlight switches to Cardiff for Wales v France (k/o 4.45pm BBC1). Wales coach Wayne Pivac might contemplate a few changes to his playbook after a painful 24–14 loss to Ireland, but France haven't won in Cardiff for ten long years. CHRIS HUGHESSport: page 35

The Greatest Dancer

7.05pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The apex of the competition is on the horizon – next week is the semi-final and the prize of £50,000 and the chance to perform on Strictly is within touching distance. After the first couple of weeks saw double eliminations, tonight just one of the seven remaining acts will be leaving the competition.

It's tricky to predict who will strike a chord with viewers at home and make it through, although troupes Dancepoint and Brothers of Dance are still looking strong. Not only will the remaining acts have to pull off the challenge set by their captain, they'll also have to battle the bizarre themes. Last week was Around the World and tonight it's Dance Fusion – whatever that means! FRANCES TAYLOR

The Voice UK

8.30pm ITV

coaches' teams complete, now comes the second stage, where Sir Tom Jones, Olly Murs, Will.i.am and Meghan Trainor face the tricky task of whittling down the singers in the battle round. Each coach has ten acts to mentor, and this rather brutal and gladiatorial phase of the show sees two singers from the same team being directly pitted against one another for just one performance.

The coach can only choose one of their acts to keep, while the other must leave the competition – unless, of course, they are thrown a lifeline by one of the other coaches; they can choose to "steal" a singer, save them from elimination and add them to their team. FT

Rise of the Superbombs

9.00pm History

Documentary This is horrifying. Don't watch it unless you're very interested in futuristic weapons because the picture it paints of how future wars may unfold is nightmarish. It starts with the current arms race in huge conventional weapons, such as the 11-ton bomb US forces dropped on an Isis complex in 2017. But it takes in hypersonic missiles that travel to their targets at thousands of miles an hour, and the lasers designed to zap them out of the sky – assuming the weather isn't overcast.

When you think it can't get worse, the scene shifts to drone swarm technology: clusters of micromissiles. "The consequences could be unfathomably brutal."

DAVID BUTCHER

SATURDAY 22 FEBRUARY

SIAN REESE-WILLIAMS'S TV CV

Sian Reese-Williams's role as stoic DCI Cadi John sees her investigating brutal murders in Hidden (9pm BBC4). But she once played a homicide victim herself on Emmerdale, where Gennie Walker was bumped off by a serial killer. "I wanted Gennie to have a really decent send-off. And she got one," she told RT in 2013.

The 38-year-old has proved, though, that there can be life after soap death. She played Manon in Hinterland, as well as pub landlady Trudy in BBC1's creepy thriller Requiem. Though the star was dicing with danger once again as firearms officer Jane Cafferty, who took a bullet to the stomach in the fifth series of Line of Duty.

As a fluent Welsh speaker, she is called upon to act in two languages for Hidden, something that can prove tricky: "They aren't direct translations, so it makes it feel like two completely different performances." DAVID BROWN

Casualty

9.10pm BBC1

DRAMA Isn't modern technology marvellous? Skype, in particular, has revolutionised the soap comeback, with video calls having allowed Angela Griffin to reappear on Corrie and Tameka Empson to resurface on the Christmas EastEnders. Casualty has gone one better, with a laptop-based cameo for Sharon Gless as maestro surgeon Zsa Zsa Harper-Jenkinson. Gless first did a guest turn in 2017, but Zsa Zsa shares a new scene with Will Beck tonight as Dylan seeks advice on young Luka's treatment. I like to think of the veteran star dialling in from Cagney & Lacey's precinct room.

Elsewhere, there's some rather grim drama for Ruby and her sister Violette, with the latter now struggling in rehab. DAVID BROWN

Snowfall

10.30pm, 11.15pm BBC2

DRAMA It's a Sunday morning in 1980s Los Angeles. It's the happy day that Andre, the uniform police sergeant with a frown as deep as the Grand Canyon, is supposed to be driving his only daughter Melody to university. She's a straight-A student, a smart kid, no fool. But we know what Andre doesn't: that on her last night in LA, Mel went to a party and, in a crazy moment, veered onto another path.

So what now? For followers of the show, seeing what unfolds for sweet, wholesome Mel is agony, but it makes for one of the best episodes yet. As the dread builds, Leon warns Franklin, "Once the rock get ahold... the person you know, they gone." And Leon should know. DAVID BUTCHER

Fight Night Live

12 midnight BT Box Office

SPORT It's been billed as Unfinished Business, and in a sport that is never short on hyperbole, the title is probably justified for once. Fifteen months after their last fight ended in controversy, Deontay Wilder and Tyson Fury are reunited in Las Vegas with Wilder's world heavyweight title on the line.

The divisive Fury doesn't exactly lack motivation, but he can take some from that contentious draw: Wilder retained his belt on a split decision, following a dramatic 12th round that saw the self-styled Gypsy King beat the count and rise to his feet after a fearsome right-left combination from Wilder put him on the canvas. The pay-per-view show starts at midnight, with the main event expected to begin around 4am. CH

Hidden 9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA There's something magnificent in Hidden's relentless, remorseless darkness, its endless parade of unhappy families, wasted lives and horrible carpets.

The admirable DCI Cadi John (Sian Reese-Williams, see TV CV above) doesn't seem to have much help on the murder inquiry, there's just her sidekick sergeant Owen (Siôn Alun Davies), a woman who keeps bringing them bundles of papers, and CID's anxious boss, who's always knocking on the office window, asking for updates. Inevitably, "the case is gathering traction in the press". Ah, the pesky, pesky press.

As this isn't a whodunnit, but a whydunnit, we follow the killers of a retired teacher, found dead in his bath, drowned after a brutal attack, while Cadi and Owen look into the dead man's background and discover there are reasons behind his reclusiveness. ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR Alison Graham: page 47

Sienna does it her way

■ American Woman ★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

A working-class single mother in Pennsylvania is floundering in alcohol and promiscuity when her teenage daughter goes missing, in this indie drama directed by Jake (son of Ridley) Scott. Sienna Miller latches on to the central role of the rough-hewn heroine, whose story unfolds over a decade as she struggles to get her life back on track. There's assured support from Christina Hendricks as her sister and Aaron Paul as a suave yet slippery suitor, but this is Miller's show all the way. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Anyone for a wee dram?

Whisky Galore! ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

It was always going to be a challenge to remake an Ealing classic that is regarded as one of the best British comedies of all time. This version sticks fairly closely to the original story of Scottish islanders trying to recover the liquid cargo from a grounded ship during the Second World War. But while there is whisky, whimsy and charm galore, laughs are a somewhat rarer commodity. However, Eddie Izzard is excellent as the pompous English Home Guard officer, as is Fenella Woolgar as his wife. BRIAN PENDREIGH

Now on Netflix

★★★ Netflix

Colin Firth stars in this true-life tale about the bid to save trapped sailors from the stricken Russian nuclear submarine Kursk in 2000. The scenes on the surface may betray the film's modest budget, but those beneath the waves are terrific, generating a claustrophobia that's almost palpable. DAVE ALDRIDGE

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Last Tango in Halifax 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK It's nearly four years since we visited West Yorkshire and the Last Tango gang, but Sally Wainwright refuses to make things easy for us. There's the briefest of "Previously on..." montages before we're pitched straight back into the lives of Alan and Celia and their families.

But with a bit of effort the years fall away and it's good to see everyone again... not just Alan and Celia (Derek Jacobi and Anne Reid), but also Celia's headteacher daughter Caroline (Sarah Lancashire) and Alan's brittle farmer daughter, Gillian (Nicola Walker).

Gillian, a twitchy misery who has her dad wrapped around her little finger, much to the indomitable Celia's chagrin, needs a loan and there's a very uncomfortable birthday dinner when the subject is raised.

We catch up, too, with Caroline's ex, the comically dolorous John (Tony Gardner), and his volatile, stupendously wealthy author-partner, Judith (Ronni Ancona). ALISON GRAHAMSee feature: page 12

Six Nations Rugby

2.15pm (k/o 3pm) ITV

SPORT It's time for England v Ireland, and if we learnt one thing from England's 13–6 victory over Scotland, it's that you shouldn't upset Ellis Genge. The prop derided England's critics as "sausages" after scoring the winning try, which may not be up there with Eric Cantona's line about seagulls and trawlers, but was the most entertaining thing about a drab game.

The result set up Eddie Jones's team for a decent crack against Ireland, although the visitors will fancy their chances of a grand slam if they can come away with a win. Don't forget that Ireland beat England 24–15 at Twickenham on the way to their last slam, in 2018.

Doctor Who

7.10pm BBC1

DRAMA After defeating a
Dalek in 2019, the Doctor
(Jodie Whittaker) now comes face to faceplate with the series's other great baddies – silvery cyborgs the Cybermen, back with a slightly tweaked design (new handles!) and a particularly ruthless attitude.

In the first of a two-part finale that concludes next week, the Doctor and her friends arrive in the far future at the tail end of a war, with a handful of humans still holding out against the remnants of a Cyber-army.

Soon, the Doctor realises she might have put her friends in some seriously terrible danger – and as the Cybermen march on, expect some shocking moments.

Call the Midwife

8.00pm BBC1

DRAMA There's a grave existential threat to Nonnatus House when the grey, suited men of the Health Board increase its peppercorn rent to a disastrously high level while making a brutal budget cut.

Sister Julienne (Jenny Agutter) must plead for the order and the place she loves so much, but it seems no one is in the mood to listen.

As the series comes to a close, the East End is changing, buildings are bulldozed and "progress" is stamping its boots on Poplar.

Work must go on, though, as the midwives look after two young pregnant women with something surprising in common, and drug-addicted Dr McNulty reaches a crisis. AG

My Family and the Galapagos

8.00pm C4

Galápagos Islands were discovered in 1535, humans have done a lot of damage to them. Farm animals, pets and even giant snails were introduced before their impact was known; while boats had alien life forms clinging to them and people (unwittingly) brought in foreign seeds and insects. Then there's the plastic we threw away.

Monty Halls and his family learn about the efforts being made to put right mistakes that are, after all, humankind's fault, hammering home the message that with sky-rocketing levels of tourism, all visitors are responsible for not destroying the eco-system further. JANE RACKHAM

SUNDAY 23 FEBRUARY

LOVE ISLAND: THE CLIMAX

Love Island (9.00pm ITV2) comes to an end this evening. After the show's regular presenter, Caroline Flack, stepped down from hosting after being charged with assault, Laura Whitmore (right) became the face of the series, alongside the voice of the show – and her real-life boyfriend – lain Stirling, who has made plenty of quips about their relationship in his droll narration.

This first "winter" series hasn't had the same impact as in its regular summer slot.

The launch episode drew 4.41 million viewers (consolidated figures), down by 660,000 on the previous run and the first time the show's ratings have fallen series by series for a launch show.

This has also been the shortest run since 2016, coming to an end after six weeks in the South African sun rather than eight. However, there won't be long to wait for more – the next series will air this summer. FRANCES TAYLOR

Win the Wilderness: Alaska

9.00pm BBC2

REALITY To test their resilience and see how they would cope with the isolation, the couples are split up and the least independent partner is packed off for a couple of nights on their own in the wilderness. Except, of course, that they do seem to have a film crew with them for most of the time.

Meanwhile, their other halves are in the relative luxury of Fairbanks with the owners of Ose Mountain, Duane and Rena, so they can get to know them better. The emphasis tonight is on the couples' emotional response to being apart, but by the end, two more couples have shouldered their backpacks and left. JR Your RT Travel: page 148

Homeland

9.00pm C4

DRAMA World and US affairs having moved on apace since its previous outing, Homeland is looking a little old-fashioned these days; certainly not the jagged, zeitgeisty creature of yore. But it's still good to have "the Carrie and Saul show" back, albeit for one last hurrah – and this is a deceptively sedate instalment.

After her seven-month no-meds hell in a Russian prison, Carrie is now brokering peace in Afghanistan, while Saul directs operations from Qatar. Carrie (still miraculous Claire Danes) follows up a mysteriously proffered lead, but is hampered both by doubts about what she may have confessed to in Russia and by her eager-beaver intern making rookie mistakes. And then there's Saul... MARK BRAXTON

Art on the BBC: Constable – the Rural Rebel

9.00pm BBC4

ART Cutting and pasting the best bits from old art docs, art historian Rose Balston tells the story of John Constable. Don't think of him as a purveyor of cosy, sunlit scenery, presenters through the decades warn us. He was a radical. A rebel. He was a proto-Impressionist, a subversive, a forerunner of Jackson Pollock.

As they try to rescue him from the heritage biscuit tin, it's fascinating to see how documentary-making has changed, from 1960s experts in bow ties lecturing the camera to 1990s baggy suits and baggier camerawork: why not lie interviewees down and let them talk to the sky? DAVID BUTCHER

DRAMA Writer Russell Lewis gives us a great big dramatic, gothic ending to this too-brief series (just three episodes) as Morse searches for the woman he loves, that doe-eyed coquette he met in Venice.

Emotions run high throughout and it's not just romance that causes the detective heartache: he and Fred Thursday reach a sad parting of the ways after words are said that can never be taken back.

The pair square up on that eerie, misty towpath after yet another murder as each picks at the scabs of a messed-up investigation. The argument becomes so heated that the normally placid DS Jim Strange and pathologist Dr DeBryn have to intervene.

The signs of a permanent sundering of the relationship between boss and bagman are only too obvious when Fred rounds on Morse: "You stand there, looking down your nose at everybody, nobody's good enough!" AG

9.00 Art on the BBC: Constable – the Rural Rebel

RT 4/4. Often dismissed as a chocolate box painter, in his day John Constable revolutionised his craft. Art historian Rose Balston discovers how TV has influenced our understanding of him over the past six decades. Constable pushed the boundaries of landscape painting, to the point of being rejected by the establishment. Perhaps just as surprisingly, he poured his love for one woman on to the canvas as no painter of landscapes had ever done before. See page 61. The road to gory

Bone Tomahawk ★★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

Leaving C4's catch-up service on Tuesday, this grim but gripping tale sees four men hunting for a kidnapped woman. Kurt Russell, Patrick Wilson, Matthew Fox and Richard Jenkins are the guerulous guartet riding – they hope – to the rescue. The film moves at an art-house pace, enlivened by repartee that's guirky and entertaining. And while it's all reminiscent of John Ford's The Searchers, the climactic confrontation between the foursome and their ferocious foes is definitely not for the faint-hearted. JEREMY ASPINALL

The king of chat

□ Hot Air ★★ 6.00pm Sky Premiere

Alan Partridge is reinvented as a New York talk radio host in this comedy vehicle for Steve Coogan. He plays Lionel Macomb, once the king of right-leaning chat, who is plunged into a ratings battle with a former minion. Matters are further complicated when the niece Macomb never knew he had descends on Manhattan, turning his life upside down. Sadly, the satire is blunt and the comedy fails to land many punches. Fans of Coogan can also see him in cinemas in Greed, while The Trip to Greece arrives on Sky1next week. DAVID PARKINSON

Bring cinema home

Mr Jones ★★★

Curzon Home Cinema

Now in cinemas and also available on demand, this biopic focuses on Gareth Jones, the Welsh reporter who uncovered the Kremlin's role in the Holodomor famine that claimed millions of lives in the 1930s. Although the story is stodgily told at first, James Norton exudes courage and decency in the lead. DP

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Flesh and Blood 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA New series Your heart might plummet when Flesh and Blood opens on a wearisome cliché. A body is discovered and then... flashback! But stick around, as writer Sarah Williams's drama opens up into an absorbing family saga/thriller. There are faint echoes of the BBC's Gold Digger from last year, but this is much better – Vivien (Francesca Annis) celebrates her 70th birthday with a family dinner in her lovely house by the sea. But the atmosphere sours when she announces that after a year of widowhood, she's found a new man, a retired medic called Mark (Stephen Rea).

The news opens up faultlines within the family – son Jake (Russell Tovey), a personal trainer and part-time gigolo, is suspicious and furious, while daughters Natalie and Helen (Lydia Leonard and Claudie Blakley) are more welcoming. And next door, always observing, is friendly neighbour Mary (Imelda Staunton)... Continues nightly until Thursday. ALISON GRAHAM The RT Interview with Imelda Staunton: page 22; Alison Graham: page 47

This Country

7.00pm BBC3, 10.35pm BBC1 (Wales: 11.05pm; N Ireland: 11.25pm) COMEDY OF THE WEEK Kurtan offers one of his stupid-yet-profound insights into human behaviour when he tries to explain the essence of the vicar. "The vicar is a drama queen, plain and simple, and you can't save a damsel if she loves her distress."

Both Kurtan and Kerry (Charlie and Daisy May Cooper) face endless vistas of freedom now that Kurtan has a provisional licence and is about to take his first driving lesson from the vicar. "Think of all the places we are going to be able to go on our own!" trills Kerry. "Yeah... Gloucester Services!"

But the vicar (Paul Chahidi) is in a reflective mood as he turns his back on his parishioners. AG

DOCUMENTARY New series

Our appetite for docs on gritty policework shows no sign of dimming. Every nut and bolt of an Essex murder case is covered in this short series, broadcast over the next few nights – it makes 24 Hours in Police Custody look like a rush job.

In Southend, officers examine the flat where a violent assault took place. A heart-shaped cushion sits on a bloodstained sofa. Essex police's prime suspect is lan Slater, but he's gone missing. In an almost comic interlude a neighbour insists Slater is "the sweetest geezer going", just as officers searching Slater's flat find a baseball bat wrapped in barbed wire.... series, skilfully filmed by Paddy Wivell, whose presence behind the camera gives it an unvarnished tone. All the more galling, then, that Channel 4 changed the running order just as RT went to press, meaning we couldn't watch this week's episode.

In it, Wivell returns to HMP Foston Hall, a women's prison where over half of the inmates are suffering from the effects of long-term emotional, physical or sexual abuse. In an attempt to tackle these issues, Foston's regime has set up a prisoner-led therapy group. The leader is no-nonsense Sonia, who is inside for attempted murder and says, "Prison saved my life – it's what you make it." DAVID BUTCHER

Inside No 9

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: Tue 11.45pm)

ANTHOLOGY If you were bemused by last week's gentler edition, this No 9 steers back on course with some deliciously dark material.

Misdirection shows the ends to which magicians are prepared to go to poach ideas and advance their careers. "In this community, the theft of an idea is worse than murder," says the preening Neville Griffin (Reece Shearsmith), after an encounter with Willy Wando (Steve Pemberton), who hopes to impress Neville with his extraordinary "chair-raising experience".

It's a gripping instalment, with Jill Halfpenny and Fionn (Dunkirk) Whitehead in the guest cast.

Once a villain proves to be a hit, writers can never resist bringing them back for one last scare. Or several last scares in the case of lawyer-turned-lunatic Pierce Harris (Jonathan Wrather, right) on Emmerdale (7pm ITV), who resurfaced just in time to kill Graham in the show's recent big whodunnit and is now holding Vanessa (Michelle Hardwick) captive. You can expect the village vet to make a last-ditch attempt to escape tonight, only to be thwarted by her kidnapper.

Speaking of legal eagles with a dark side, we also have Gray on EastEnders (8pm BBC1) hearing a plea from Tiffany to help Whitney, who's now been arrested following the untimely death of wicked Leo. Keeping up? It doesn't matter if you're not because my point is that if you're a lawyer in need of work, then the place to be is on a soap opera. All your neighbours are criminals and you get handed every single case of fraud, divorce, robbery and murder in the local area. DAVID BROWN

prama The lovely, meandering piano theme announces another visit to war-torn Iraq, where Inspector Khafaji finds himself the rope in a tug of war between his shady British boss Temple and US military policeman Perodi. "This land Iraq, it corrupts," moans Temple – and it certainly corrupted him. He learns his big bag of dollars is missing and he's not happy about it.

Khafaji seems cavalier about annoying either or both of his bosses: his bravado may be because he's in a poker game in which he only has pebbles to bet and the other players keep beating him up. Also tonight, we gather why they cast an actor as sinister as Neil Maskell in what seemed like a minor role. DAVID BUTCHER

The Rise and Fall of a Porn Superstar

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Jonathan Agassi has been called the Marilyn Monroe of the gay porn industry, and while he is similarly successful in his world, this Storyville film mines his equally troubled personality.

Following him as his career crumbles, it could be a stereotypical depiction of a gay porn star: doting mother; cold, distant father; self-loathing drug user. Yet there's emotional depth as Jonathan tries to reconcile with his father, and the scenes with Jonathan and his mother are tender and gently comic – when he shows her a new pair of rubber trousers, complete with backside zip, she says, "I'd rather you buy yourself a nice coat." DAVID CRAWFORD

The End

10.10pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA There are tiny signs that the frosty relationships are beginning to thaw in Samantha Strauss's black comedy about dying with dignity. Edie's defences against brusque fellow retirement-village resident Pamela are eroding; she even agrees to join her in a Christmas show – one that Edie's estranged daughter Kate promises to attend. It's a clever and knowing reverse of the school-nativity trope. Kate, meanwhile, has been suspended from work while the death of Beth, a patient in her care, is investigated. Can she make a breakthrough with Beth's angry husband?

The End is as bracing as a cold-water bath, but invigorating nonetheless, especially in its insights into parentchild dynamics. MARK BRAXTON

Untouchable: the Rise and Fall of Harvey Weinstein

iPlayer (expires today)

The trial of movie producer Harvey Weinstein lends new currency to this sobering 2019 film, in which a large number of women, both famous and not, lay out allegations that they were sexually assaulted by the movie mogul. It's an important document of how a predator might abuse their position of power.

dilemma: do you go simple but make it perfectly, or do you try something ground-breaking? Tonight one amateur cook makes a Thai/Greek fusion dish that has the judges worried, while another produces a plate of venison with beetroot purée that couldn't be more classic. Place your bets on which one leaves John Torode "properly blown away".

In a twist to the usual formula, the six contestants provide their own ingredients for their signature dish (except that one person's leeks are back home in their fridge). The two best cooks go straight through, while the others are gradually whittled down. There are no real horror shows (so no chocolate mousse with sweet potato or ballotine of crocodile this time). In fact, the standard's pretty high.

Continues on Wednesday and Friday. JANE RACKHAMSee feature: page 18

□ Official Secrets ★★★ Sky Store/DVD

Keira Knightley gives a committed performance here as Katharine Gun, a British intelligence analyst who blew the whistle on shady US/UK government collusion in the run-up to 2003's Iraq War. With so much plot to explain in under two hours, the human element of the story gets rather crowded out in favour of spy movie-type suspense. However, Knightley brings genuine fire to her character's principled stand, ensuring Gun's actions remain more than just a historical footnote. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Causing a buzz

□ Tell It to the Bees ★★ 9.45pm Sky Premiere

This ripe melodrama set in a 1950s Scottish village includes lesbianism, backstreet abortion, sexual assault and an attack by bees – yet still manages to be rather dull. Anna Paguin plays a doctor who returns to her home town to take over her dad's practice. But tongues start wagging when she starts to get close to local mum Holliday Grainger, whose son develops an almost telepathic connection with bees the doctor keeps. The leads are decent, but the whole thing reeks of an overwrought soap opera. DAVE ALDRIDGE

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Back in Time for the Corner Shop 8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series How relaxing it must have been to be a customer in a Victorian local shop. You took a seat and gave your order, while the shopkeeper weighed, wrapped and then handed the goods to you. Bliss – and no electronic cries of "unexpected item in the bagging area" to be heard either. Though it wasn't so calm for those on the other side of the counter, as our era-jumping guinea pigs the Arderns discover when they take over a shop in Sheffield and try to cope without pre-packaged produce, fridges or tills. And when brand names are eventually introduced, some of the recipe ideas aren't exactly appetising, as dad Dave discovers when wife Jo serves up a breakfast of buttered shredded wheat and Marmite broth. Yum.

This opening episode progresses into Edwardian times and through the food shortages of the First World War before stopping at 1920. But the weeks ahead will take the institution of the corner shop right up to 1990, at which point they presumably all morph into soulless Tesco Metros. DAVID BROWN

Champions League Football

7.00pm (k/o 8pm) BT Sport 2 SPORT Frank Lampard knows how to foil Bayern Munich: he captained the Chelsea side that did it back in 2012, in the last Champions League encounter between the two teams. It also happened to be the final; after 120 minutes of stalemate, the Blues won on penalties.

But Lampard also knows what it is to lose at the hands of the German giants, too: Bayern wrought their revenge on Chelsea the following year, when they faced them in the Super Cup. Now the manager of his beloved Blues, Lampard will need to draw on every ounce of his playing experience as they host Bayern tonight, their first test en route to the quarter-finals. HANNAH SHADDOCK

The Split

9.00pm BBC1 (Wales: 10.35pm) DRAMA Why does no one in The Split realise what lovely, comfy lives they lead? Nice coats, great kitchen islands... what more could anyone want? But Hannah (Nicola Walker) is all tearful and twitchy about the ghastly Christie, her ex-lover and now her stroppy stalker.

"Shouldn't we at least talk?" she pleads with him during a fire drill at their posh offices. "We have to find a way to push this on." But Christie isn't listening, though in his own twisted, controlling way, he eventually DOES find a way to "push things on". But you can bet it won't be pleasant for Hannah and her increasingly suspicious husband Nathan (Stephen Mangan, bringing heart and humour). ALISON GRAHAM

Flesh and Blood

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA We still don't know what happened on the night of "the incident" or what "the incident" actually was. Clearly it resulted in something nasty happening to someone. But to whom? And how?

Sarah Williams's mystery owes a lot to Agatha Christie, with a soupçon of Big Little Lies thrown in to keep the pot simmering. The action unfolds in flashback as a detective (David Bamber) interviews witnesses – or are they suspects? Vivien and Mark's (Francesca Annis and Stephen Rea) relationship continues to vex Vivien's children, while nosey neighbour Mary (Imelda Staunton) doesn't trust Mark either. AG The RT Interview: page 22; Alison Graham: page 47

Royal History's Biggest Fibs with Lucy Worsley

9.00pm BBC4

HISTORY There's an inevitable spoilsport element to this series, particularly involving stories adored since childhood. Like the tale of Sir Francis Drake sanguinely finishing a game of bowls as the Spanish Armada descended. I loved that, but Worsley says it's not true. Oh dear.

Then there's the "weak and feeble" woman speech Elizabeth I made atop her horse to her troops at Tilbury, before they went into battle. Apparently she didn't mention having the "heart and stomach of a king". That came years later, as the event became mythologised. Oh.

But at least Worsley gets to dress as Elizabeth to be paraded around London in a rickshaw. AG

TUESDAY 25 FEBRUARY

Do you remember that tub-thumping speech Ric Griffin (Hugh Quarshie, right) made on Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm) in September of last year when he climbed up on scaffolding with a loudspeaker in his hand and launched into a mad-as-hell tirade about overworked doctors? If you recall, Ric reached the end of his tether because he felt responsible for the death of patient Gareth Gannon (played by Trevor Michael Georges – now Ed Bailey in Corrie, soap trivia fans).

Well, now, Gareth's sister Rebecca turns up in need of treatment – and, once again, the department is stretched to breaking point. Ric makes a plea for more nursing staff, but Max McGerry is immovable. Will Ric keep his cool? And can recent returnee Hanssen make a difference? As we now know, the former CEO is collaborating with Fletch on a secret mission. But is it the right time for the rebels to rise up and retake the hospital? More tomorrow at 8pm. DAVID BROWN

Ben Fogle: Make a New Life in the Country

9.00pm Channel 5

ex-Londoner ups sticks and moves as far away from the capital as possible. This week it's goodbye to the grey skies of the big smoke – and hello to the grey skies of John o'Groats – for Cara Puffin. Here, the former nanny has bought a farm, despite having no experience of agriculture. Or keeping animals. It's a risky move.

A little digging reveals a catalyst for Cara's move to be the passing away of her mother. But likeable Cara's demeanour matches her wonderful name, and she manages to stay chirpy, despite the hard toil, scant returns and stormy skies. Plus she has her prize boar, Mr Bingley, for company. GARY ROSE

Strike Back: Vendetta

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA Sky's shooty action thriller returns for one last crash-bang series, with the armed lunks of Section 20 in the Balkans to rescue a British scientist taken hostage by the Albanian mafia (It's always the Albanian mafia) in Kosovo. As a plot about a stolen bio-weapon unfolds, the dialogue hums with lines like "Zero alpha we have inbound, five armed tangoes", followed by bursts of gunfire.

An early scene features an armoured car with our heroes on board crashing through a brick wall in a hail of bullets, to the swelling strains of Nessun Dorma. If that sort of adrenalised tosh floats your boat, this is as enjoyable as ever, even if the plot is a complete load of Balkans. DAVID BUTCHER

The Twilight Zone

9.00pm Syfy

anthology series comes courtesy of a man with form in scaring audiences – Jordan Peele, director of Get Out and Us. And he's certainly pushing all the right buttons here with his fresh and classy take on a classic chiller. The original Nightmare at 20,000 Feet saw a mentally fragile salesman (William Shatner) frightened by a gremlin on the wing of a plane.

Peele's version ups the altitude to 30,000 feet and puts Adam Scott on a flight where he starts listening to an odd podcast that describes the disappearance of the very plane he's currently on. As nerves fray, we start to realise that Peele has positioned the terror inside rather than outside the cabin... DAVID BROWN

The Windsors

10.00pm C4

COMEDY Writers Bert Tyler-Moore and George Jeffrie have hardly been short of material in the near two-year gap since we last paid a visit to The Windsors.

Despite being filmed before "Megxit", the writing is as brilliant, near-the-knuckle and on the money as ever, with Prince Andrew addressing his relationship with Jeffrey Epstein ("I just used to go to his parties, fly on his jet and stay in his house. I was never his friend...") and Camilla (Haydn Gwynne) turning out to be the mastermind behind breaking up the "Fab Four" (aka Kate, William, Meghan and Harry).

Prince Harry is also a new man – he's given up alcohol, but also has a different face: actor Tom Durant-Pritchard seamlessly takes over the role from Richard Goulding, who left the show due to conflicting commitments.

The taste of freedom

Free State of Jones ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This American Civil War film stars Matthew McConaughey as a disillusioned medic for the Confederate Army who, in 1862, deserts his post on principle and leads a resistance movement in Jones County, Mississippi. Writer/director Gary Ross (The Hunger Games) serves up an intriguing chapter of American history, but the way he handles the chaste relationship between McConaughey and slave girl Gugu Mbatha-Raw is less convincing. Roma ★★★★ Netflix/DVD/Blu-ray

As well as being available on Netflix, director Alfonso Cuarón's Oscar-winning film is released this week on DVD and Blu-ray. Set in the upper-middle class Mexico City neighbourhood of Roma during the 1970s, the film centres on a marriage slowly splintering apart and the live-in maid who stands at the swirling heart of the family. This is Cuarón's love story to his youth, and he discusses it in new documentary Road to Roma, also on Netflix and included in the home entertainment release. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

Beverly Hills Cop trilogy from 10.05pm Sky Comedy

He's hot again in the wake of Dolemite Is My Name, but Eddie Murphy shot to fame in this film series, showing tonight on Sky. Murphy is set to return in Beverly Hills Cop 4 for Netflix, but we'll have to wait to see if he still has Axel Foley's signature baseball jacket. An anxious world holds its breath... STEVE MORRISSEY

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Saving Lives at Sea 8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Jumping off a harbour wall into the sea on a sunny evening is the sort of thing teenage boys do. But judging by this, Axmouth harbour in Devon isn't the place to do it. The tides produce strong currents in the narrow harbour mouth, as 15-year-old Archie learnt last June.

When he was caught by a rip tide, his friend Bo dived in to help and both boys were swept out to sea. What follows is a classic piece of RNLI drama, including a helicopter winch sequence described as "like threading a needle while riding a bucking bronco".

You might be hoping this marks a new series of the reliably moving lifeboat show but I'm sorry to say it's just the broadcast of two programmes held over from the last one. Also featured tonight is the hunt for a kayaker missing after a race in Studland Bay near Poole: eight lifeboats and two helicopters are scrambled to join the search.

DAVID BUTCHER

Champions League Football

7.00pm (k/o 8pm) BT Sport 2 SPORT As pan-European football matches go, it doesn't get much bigger than Real Madrid v Manchester City.

City may have surrendered the Premier League title, but it could work in their favour as they search for the one trophy Pep Guardiola is yet to win with the Sky Blues. In La Liga, however, Real Madrid are locked in that familiar game of cat-and-mouse with Barcelona, and play in what could be a decisive Clásico just days after meeting City.

If Pep and co can strike a blow tonight, they'll be confident of finishing the job at the Etihad. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Flesh and Blood

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Vivien has so many happy plans as she and her new love Mark make their way in the world in the penultimate episode of Sarah Williams's clever thriller. But the suspense builds nicely as Vivien's family slowly tears itself apart.

Everyone is hiding something, or is living under a cloud of low-level fear and anxiety. There is desperation and there are lies everywhere as the police try to piece together what happened at Vivien's (Francesca Annis) birthday party. In flashback we see her children discover some information that could be dynamite in their hands. Flesh and Blood ends tomorrow. ALISON GRAHAM The RT Interview: page 22;

Kevin McCloud's Rough Guide to the Future

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY As this entertaining tech series ends, you'll have been amazed, even if not entirely convinced, by Kevin McCloud's belief that technology can repair the planet and solve climate change. And as there was no preview at the time of writing we don't know whether he's persuaded his trio of "moaning nay-sayers", either.

Alice Levine is in Japan, hanging out with robots that are becoming as advanced as humans; Phil Wang's in China seeing how technology is creating new work opportunities; and Jon Richardson is reporting on the American technology that claims to prolong life. Bet that thought cheers him up. JANE RACKHAM

A Very British History

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY In 1980, aged three, Aminul Hoque came to Britain from Bangladesh. His father, like many others, had already been working here for nearly 20 years. Archive footage and conversations with other British Bangladeshis reveal the squalid living conditions and hard work ("The area hummed with the sound of sewing machines at night," one woman recalls). And during the 70s and 80s racially motivated violence escalated, something Aminul experienced himself: a teacher had to escort Bangladeshi children to school.

While tensions still exist, food – in the form of the Bangladeshi-created "British curry" – has helped smooth relations a little. JR

90

The biggest twist to come out of Coronation Street's (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) glorious 10,000th episode came when Ken announced that he was leaving. Not that actor William Roache is exiting, just that his alter ego is set for a new life at the Still Waters luxury retirement complex, where he and current girlfriend Claudia will get reacquainted with fellow residents Norris and Freda as part of an upcoming plotline. But let's just say that the path to relaxation doesn't run smoothly.

In the meantime, though, we have all the haggling over the future at No 1.

Ken has put his home on the market, so Peter (Chris Gascoyne) and Tracy (Kate Ford, left) are now at loggerheads over who should own the property where so many happy memories have been made down the decades. Tracy's chip-pan fire, Ken almost throttling Deirdre, Ken being pushed down the stairs, Becky bursting in with a sledgehammer... who wouldn't want to live in a house with a history like this? DAVID BROWN

Work in Progress

9.40pm Sky Comedy

SITCOM Abby McEnany, star and co-creator of this comedy about a self-loathing middle-aged gay woman, plied her trade for years in Chicago's improv scene, and it shows. The speech rhythms are fragmented, lines overlapping or incomplete, muttered or screamed, and when the characters aren't speaking they are generally laughing at themselves or someone else.

The naturalism means scenes that might otherwise feel forced, such as a loud brunch with polyamorous "throuples" or a discussion of what not to do in bed with a trans man, just breeze past. And for fans of parody king Weird Al Yankovic, he has a brilliant cameo, playing a very boring version of himself. DAVID BUTCHER

THE HIGH GROUND

In Wester Ross, the

majestic Stac Pollaidh is in Paul Murton's sights

Home

10.00pm C4

SITCOM Douglas Henshall is painfully good as the rogue element in this sitcom. He plays Elliot, Katy's ex, a music promoter who is everything Peter (her new boyfriend) isn't: cool, affable – and employed. He's also a preening pillock whose every line jars like nails on a blackboard – a nicely crafted character who, at the same time, I can't wait to leave the screen.

This week Elliot arrives to take John – his son – to a Drake concert and the tension he brings to the family unit is palpable. While he stirs things up, Sami goes to reacquaint himself with the nurse he met on the bus. And, naturally, there's another scene where a bigot gets slapped down: this one unfolds (in more ways than one) at a charity shop. DAVID BUTCHER

Killing Eve

11.05pm, 11.50pm BBC1 (Wales: 11.35pm, 12.15am; N Ireland: 12.05am, 12.50am)

DRAMA If you were left a little disappointed by the second series, you are not alone. All the more reason to catch this return to the start of series one, where we first met playful, barking-mad assassin Villanelle.

Phoebe Waller-Bridge's 2018 adaptation of Luke Jennings's novels went on to be showered with plaudits and awards. It is stylish and clever, with a terrific soundtrack full of bombastic Euro-pop tunes, and it features fabulous performances from Sandra Oh as restless, bored
MI5 officer Eve Polastri, and Jodie
Comer as Villanelle, purringly coquettish one minute and the next a dead-eyed monster. AG

Grand Tours of Scotland's Lochs

7.30pm BBC2

TRAVEL Scotland's lochs are inevitably described by presenter/ explorer Paul Murton as "the jewels of the Scottish landscape" but though it might be a cliché, in this case it happens to be true. Great ribbons of water glisten between brutal walls of rock in Wester Ross, where Murton begins his six-part travelogue, though he doesn't just look out at the water, sighing.

No, he meets men and women who have made their lives and livelihoods in the landscape, notably in the tiny off-grid community of Scoraig, where he chats to a craftsman who makes the most beautiful violins in his tiny shed.

In Ullapool, Murton hears of Soviet ships that used to fish the waters for its highly prized mackerel, with crews often coming ashore to charm the locals. First shown on BBC Scotland last September. DAVID BUTCHER

Welcome to Me ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

One of a number of new films added to C5's catch-up service today, Welcome to Me stars Kristen Wiig as an "emotional exhibitionist" who creates her own talk show after winning the lottery. With no one to rein in its creator – who's suffering from borderline personality disorder and has come off her meds – the show proves to be an indulgent mess. Offering a terrific platform for Wiig's deadpan comedic skills, the film takes a swing at the cultural climate that stokes and rewards self-obsession. EMMA SIMMONDS

A 2020 Oscar winner

American Factory ★★★★ Netflix

Hi-tech China meets blue-collar USA when co-directors Steven Bognar and Julia Reichert visit a recession-hit Ohio factory. In 2015, Chinese tycoon Chairman Cao re-opened the old car factory as a glass-making facility, meaning jobs for the former workforce and his Chinese employees. But a culture clash soon occurs between the bosses and US workers. The winner of best documentary at this year's Oscars, American Factory is a prophetic snapshot of a world subject to automation and globalisation. JEREMY ASPINALL

This study of corruption stars Antonio de la Torre as Manuel, a fixer for a political party in Spain, who turns whistleblower when the organisation betrays him. De la Torre is compelling in the lead, but the dénouement is as unsubtle as Olivier Arson's pounding electro score. DAVID PARKINSON

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Secrets of the Museum 8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY There's much excitement in the theatre and performance department of the Victoria and Albert Museum when a stormtrooper costume from the 1980 Star Wars sequel The Empire Strikes Back is taken out of its special drawer ready for display.

Director George Lucas had a tight costume budget of just £90,000 so there are obvious economies – the figure's footwear is a pair of Chelsea boots painted white. Unfortunately, a crucial piece is missing – there is no stormtrooper helmet, so one has to be commissioned, using a quite astonishing process that unfolds before the conservator's amazed eyes, from a specialist prop-maker in Yorkshire.

Elsewhere, the Cast Courts exhibits are given an overhaul, including a copy of a 14th-century sculpture panel from Notre Dame Cathedral. In a sad coincidence, conservators are at work on the panel as news comes through of the devastating fire. ALISON GRAHAM

The Secret Life of the Zoo

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Sharkface and Poptart are hardly Romeo and Juliet but it's hoped that when these Bermuda skinks (a tiny but aggressive reptile) are introduced, they'll breed. It's risky because the males bite the females to keep them still during copulation. Nice.

Elsewhere at Chester Zoo, Daissie the rock hyrax has given birth – again. She's produced 26 pups over the past seven years – always at the same time of year. And the keepers want to persuade black rhino Magadi to mate with flirtatious Ema. To get him interested, they shovel her poo into his pen. It works, although initially his technique is a bit off.

JANE RACKHAM

Hospital

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY It must be agony to get prepped for a vital heart operation only to have it cancelled at the last minute – whether it's because an emergency case bumps you off the list, there are staff shortages or an earlier operation overruns.

At the Liverpool Heart and Chest Hospital, cardiology surgeon Suneil Aggarwal has three complex cases on his daily list but after nearly five hours working on his first patient, there's no time to do both the other two. However, 45 minutes later he and his team start operating on Joe, a cheery 81-year-old, who must undergo a tricky procedure or he'll die. The catch is, there's only a 50/50 chance of it working. JR

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA And so it ends... at last we discover what happened on the night of Vivien's birthday party, and who it happened to. Though you've probably had a good guess by now. There are no stonking surprises in the final part of Sarah Williams's highly enjoyable drama, but as it's been all about character up to now, that feels fine. Really the conclusion is about the people we've come to know, and their relationships with one another.

Vivien's (Francesca Annis) children are still suspicious of her new husband Mark (Stephen Rea) after what they learned about his first wife. But when they call a family council, Viv is in no mood to listen. AG The RT Interview: page 22; Alison Graham: page 49

Hunted

9.00pm C4

REALITY After seven days there are still nine fugitives at large but – largely as a result of Facebook connections – another one is close to being nabbed.

Don't read on if you've not seen last week's episode, when Jess and Ella had their eagerly anticipated pub lunch interrupted by the news that the hunters were nearby. Surely there's no escape from such a tiny village?

Meanwhile, best mates Ben and Rob are feeling cocky after coming up with what they think is an untraceable way of getting help, while Frankie and Dan's plans go horribly wrong. It gets so tense you'll need a lie-down and a cup of sweet tea afterwards. JR

THURSDAY 27 FEBRUARY

The happy/sad counterpoint is a tactic beloved of EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1). You know what I mean by this, right? Basically, if something joyous is happening in one corner of the Square, there has to be a soul-crushingly awful event unfolding elsewhere to balance it out. So, even though it's ostensibly happy news that Jean (Gillian Wright) is told that her MRI scan has come back clear, Walford law dictates that there will still be tears before the doof-doofs... Whenever storylines about the menopause are attempted, interest is lost rather quickly. Usually, a character will just get time to ventilate their blouse, act vague for half a scene and slap on an HRT patch before we move on to the next ratings-grabbing disaster. As Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) is a medicalbased drama, I'm hoping for greater depth when Emma starts to experience menopause symptoms. Anything more than "Why is it so hot in here? Why have I written this prescription?" would be an improvement. DAVID BROWN

Carter

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA Whether you take to this fluffy crime comedy drama will largely depend on how resistant you are to its lead, Jerry O'Connell. He plays Harley Carter, a big TV star who's now back in his small home town and bringing his actorly ways to crime solving. He's by turns intensely vain and irritating yet insightful, and somehow always cracks the case.

As the second series opens, Carter's now a licensed PI, and hoping to grab his first case – his client is played by Colin Mochrie (a familiar face from Whose Line Is It Anyway?). But he's also struggling with dodgy dreams about his old friend Sam; and there's a new police chief in town, who's entirely immune to Carter's shtick. GILL CRAWFORD

First Dates

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT There are many reasons that people lack confidence when it comes to new relationships. Some are physical so are immediately obvious; others take a while to uncover.

For Reece it's his height, or rather lack of it – he's 5ft 4in tall, although initially that doesn't seem to worry his date Ria. Meanwhile, Fenella, who at 54 has a lifelong hearing impediment, is determined it won't hinder her love life any more.

Byron and Lexi, on the other hand, have rather unusual careers, which they say have previously put their dates off. He's a funeral director and mortician, while she's an Ann Summers party planner. Will they hit it off? JR

Meet the Richardsons

10.00pm Dave

SITCOM New series Comedians Jon Richardson and Lucy Beaumont married five years ago and live near Hebden Bridge with their daughter, Elsie. Their life there forms the basis for an enjoyably sour mockumentary featuring plausible versions of themselves scripted by Beaumont and Car Share writer Tim Reid.

Jon (or this caricature of him) has a misanthropic gloom somewhere between Victor Meldrew and Larry David. As Lucy mocks Jon's tightness ("He bought a tuxedo from Matalan. He's been on TV for ten years"), he retreats to the pub he built in his garage ("The Dog & Bastard") and is assailed by an unlikely nemesis: family friend, Bernie Clifton. Death in Paradise 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA "This island, it likes to trip one up, from time to time," says Olivia, a retired actress who has lost her sight. She has also, as of the opening sequence, lost her husband – to a bullet through the heart.

Since Olivia (Frances Tomelty) is blind and her husband was shot from some distance away, it seems unlikely she killed him, but if not her, who? The evidence all points one way, but a way that - as we've come to expect – makes no sense at all.

A starstruck Neville sets to work on the puzzle but he's working against the clock. If his doctor gives him the all-clear to fly, he can flee Saint Marie, with its heat and sand and biting insects, back to his homeland with its shade and pub quizzes. Certainly, Commissioner Patterson is keen to pack him off, but Saint Marie – it can trip you up. DAVID BUTCHER

8.00 The Truth about Takeaways

It is estimated that 3 million takeaways are eaten in Britain every day. But what is consuming all this convenience food doing to us? Journalist Nikki Fox teams up with scientists at Liverpool John Moores University to run a unique experiment. A group of 15 volunteers eat nothing but takeaways for two weeks and undergo a barrage of tests, to examine their levels of blood sugar and body fat, changes to their gut bacteria and the effect on their mental sharpness. The results reveal the shocking truth about how takeaways affect our bodies and brains. Nikki uncovers what's really in them, why we love them – and how to kick the habit.

A haunting tragedy

Genova ★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

Colin Firth stars here as a man who relocates with his family to Italy after his wife dies. But then his youngest daughter reports seeing and speaking with her departed mum... It sounds like the premise of a bog-standard supernatural thriller, but in the hands of director Michael Winterbottom this is a down-to-earth examination of grief. Some plot tangles remain unresolved, but the approach is sincere and the acting gives it vigour, while Winterbottom captures Genoa in all its eerie grandeur. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL

Enter Sandman

Adam Sandler day from 7.15am Sky Comedy

Whether you're a fan of "the Sandman" or not, anyone who's seen Adam Sandler in his recent triumph Uncut Gems (now on Netflix) will agree that his performance as jittery jeweller Howard Ratner is a revelation. Today, Sky Comedy presents a day of the actor's slightly more family-friendly films, including comedies Big Daddy and Happy Gilmore, rom-coms 50 First Dates and Spanglish, and Mr Deeds, in which Sandler takes the Gary Cooper role for a remake of Frank Capra's Mr Deeds Goes to Town. The Peanut Butter Falcon ★★★ Virgin Movies/DVD

A young man with Down's syndrome (Zack Gottsagen) escapes from a residential home in this modern variation on The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn. The story sometimes lapses into sentimentality, but Gottsagen shares a great rapport with Shia LaBeouf, as his reluctant travelling companion. DAVID PARKINSON

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY The Yorkshire Steam Railway: All Aboard 8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY The summer season is coming to an end and there's one last hurrah on the North Yorkshire Moors Railway: its annual steam gala. And there's a star attraction, a 9F engine that was rescued from a scrapyard in 1966 by a gang of steam-lovers. It's been painstakingly restored, but there are some final, crucial touches that must be made.

Will it work in time for the gala? Well, what do you think? It's always heart-warming to see the commitment of staff and volunteers, and one of the original rescue team – who paid a total of £9,000 for the engine – is on hand, ready to make a dream come true as he prepares to drive the engine.

On one of the railway's regular runs, catering staff prepare afternoon teas, though there is a hiccup – a passenger doesn't want jam or cream on his scone. What? ALISON GRAHAM

Look Who's Driving

7.30pm PBS America

pocumentary Driverless cars have got truckers and taxi drivers fearing for their jobs. But the death of Elaine Herzberg, killed by one such vehicle in 2018, fuelled the debate over their safety. Unfortunately, as this sober documentary shows, driving is one of the most complex activities that humans regularly engage in.

A look into the science behind its development reveals the chief stumbling block for the self-driving software as "perception": the complex ability to interpret and derive meaning from data. While this is an eye-opening glimpse into how artificial intelligence "thinks", the fact that many people actually enjoy driving isn't really discussed.

GARY ROSE

Our Coast

8.30pm BBC2 (not N Ireland or Wales)

FACTUAL If this breezy seaside-set series were to return, I'd like to see Adrian Chiles and Mehreen Baig co-presenting more reports – the show has more of a spark when they're together. Their attempts at cold-smoking salmon are borderline boisterous, while a trip to Scotland's biggest second-hand bookshop tips over into the eccentric when Chiles starts talking to a stuffed badger and then later to a tattooed pagan who whittles walking sticks and whose hands resemble Darth Maul's face.

There's oddness elsewhere, too, as Joe Lindsay visits Kirkcudbright, the setting for cult 1973 horror The Wicker Man. But he fares better than Edward Woodward did. DAVID BROWN

Vera

8.30pm ITV

DRAMA We've known DCI Stanhope a long time, the tenth series has just ended, so maybe it's a good time to go back to the first run, where her flashes of anger and spiteful putdowns reach apocalyptic levels as a straight-talking woman working in a difficult, male environment.

Following the suicide of Jeanie Long, in prison for a murder she swears she didn't commit, new evidence comes to light. It means reopening the case – and in the process a lot of old wounds because everyone, even the investigating officer of the time, seems to be lugging around emotional baggage.

Vera pursues several false leads before stumbling, implausibly, on some vital evidence. AG

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

as if it is, very understandably, going through the motions for its final season. Still, there's pleasure in watching a well-oiled sitcom machine tick over smoothly, even if it never works up much steam. This episode includes a throwback to the show's first season, as Jay asks Phil out to help fly his model plane, just as he did a decade ago, and with similarly disastrous results. It's a barbed take on what it takes to be a good dad.

Meanwhile, Mitch and Cam mistakenly give their friends the impression they've split up. And as Cam says, "There are two things a gay can't sit on – a plastic patio chair and a juicy bit of gossip."

DAVID BUTCHER

Hen nights on Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) are as fraught as the actual wedding day. In fact, if a bride is looking wretched as she's saying her vows at the altar, it's often because something god-awful has happened the evening before. In Sarah's case, this will be down to Beth storming the do at the Rovers Return in tonight's hour-long episode and revealing that Sarah's headstrong daughter Bethany is planning on moving to London with Daniel and baby Bertie in tow. Not the inaccessible metropolis of London, I hear you cry. In Corrie terms, this is the equivalent of Bethany being on the first manned mission to Mars.

Next door, Ken Barlow is reminiscing about his years spent at No 1 as the rest of his fractious family gathers at the house for the opening of those all-important sealed bids. Which of the younger generation will be the new owners? Honestly, it's like Succession, but with the addition of framed photographs of Albert Tatlock. DAVID BROWN

Just One Look

9.00pm More4

DRAMA How long before distraught wife Eva (Virginie Ledoyen) goes the full Ripley from Alien, grabs the dead-eyed killer who has kidnapped her husband and screams, "Get away from him, you b!"? But she has to catch him first and tonight there's a frantic car chase to Paris, which ends chillingly.

There's a nice tension in seeing how far Eva will go to find her husband Bastien and we find out when grieving gangster Grégory grabs a possible witness – and some household tools.

Meanwhile, there's more about that concert in the catacombs 20 years ago, which I'm beginning to think is a red herring fishier than Billingsgate Market.

DAVID CRAWFORD

Intelligence

9.00pm, 9.30pm Sky 1

sitcom It would have been tempting to desert Intelligence after the second episode but resist the urge: episodes three and four definitely pick up and are worth sticking with. GCHQ is tasked with working through the night when all the NHS systems go down after being hacked by a virus. As ever, Jerry (David Schwimmer is brilliant at playing it straight as an arrogant and idiotic NSA maverick) is convinced he's identified the cyber-terrorist. When no-nonsense Chris asks, "What if you're wrong?", Jerry replies: "I don't think that's physically possible."

Meanwhile episode four sees a new hotshot hacker being brought into the fold, leaving Joseph (the also-excellent Nick Mohammed) feeling sidelined and left out. FRANCES TAYLOR

Frankie Boyle's Tour of Scotland

10.00pm BBC2

divides audiences: some delight in his misanthropic tone; others reject his unvarnished approach. But if you've ever read his political commentary in the papers you'll know there's a deal of considered thinking behind his comedy. This series ends with a particularly thought-provoking coda on where Scotland's future lies.

Before that, he discusses where Scots get their brand of apocalyptic nihilism with comic-book legend Grant Morrison, tries out Robert the Brucestyle broadsword fighting, learns about Glasgow's slavery-tainted past and offers the city's audience at his show the best line I've heard yet on the upside of Brexit. Belsen: Our Story iPlayer (expires today)

The lack of physical evidence of the Bergen-Belsen death camp, which was burned down by the liberating Allied troops a little under 75 years ago, in April 1945, does not prevent this documentary from offering profoundly shocking and moving accounts of the atrocities that occurred there. Dramatic reconstructions and interviews with survivors lucidly tell a horrifying story.

Eric Burdon: Rock 'n' Roll – Animal 9.30pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

"Some of our artists in their times are not as appreciated as others..."
Patti Smith is talking about Eric
Burdon but the same could be said of his band the Animals, who are always mentioned after 60s giants the Beatles, Stones, Who and Kinks.

This full-throttle doc begins with the Animals "invading" Manhattan in 1964, riding their motorcade cars like they're go-karts, but backtracks to the grimy, rough-and-tumble childhood of their Geordie frontman and his early initiation to the blues.

He's described as a hellraiser and hard to work with, and bitterness still surrounds the royalties to House of the Rising Sun (your jaw will drop at what he'd like to do to Alan Price). But Burdon is no one's fool, his views are passionate, and you won't hear a more generous tribute than that of Bruce Springsteen, after playing the Animals' We Gotta Get Out of This Place, saying, "That's every song I've ever written." DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.30 Eric Burdon: Rock 'n' Roll – Animal

Part of the "British Invasion" of the US pop charts in the mid-1960s, the Animals scored a global hit with their cutting-edge interpretation of House of the Rising Sun - which famously inspired Bob Dylan to take up the electric guitar. At the band's heart was lead singer Eric Burdon, a formidably talented street kid from Newcastle, whose mercurial nature would ultimately impede his path to world stardom. This film conveys the zeitgeist of the 1960s and 70s while revealing Burdon's ruminations on triumph and failure. See page 111. Director Hannes Rossacher; Producers Katharina Maus, Katja Lau and Kerstin Päpke Repeated 2am (S) (HD)

10.30 On Drums...Stewart Copeland!

The musician explores the drums as the founding instrument of popular modern music. Beats that travelled from Africa, via New Orleans and across the world, are the consistent force behind musical evolution.

Stewart plays with some of the most inspiring drummers of the past 50 years, including John Densmore of the Doors, Chad Smith of Red Hot Chili Peppers, Prince's musical director Sheila E, New Order's Stephen Morris and the Foo Fighters' Taylor Hawkins.

Director Nico Wasserman; Producers Nicky Lessware and Nico Wasserman Repeated 3am (R) (S) (HD)

11.30 Burt Bacharach: a Life in Song

The real Monroe? My Week with Marilyn $\star\star\star\star$

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This delightfully evocative true-story drama takes place in 1956, when Marilyn Monroe was paired with Laurence Olivier to star in British movie The Prince and the Showgirl. Eddie Redmayne plays Colin Clark, a production runner on the film who became a confidante/companion to the isolated movie star during her stay in England. Michelle Williams captivates as Marilyn, while Kenneth Branagh makes for a hilariously scathing Olivier. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL

A monstrous letdown

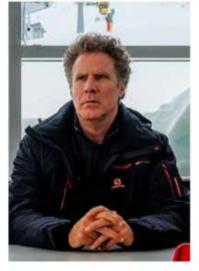

\square Godzilla: King of the Monsters $\star\star$

8.00pm Sky Premiere

The third in Legendary Pictures' Monster Verse assembles the cream of the Kaiju superstars – Ghidorah, Mothra, Rodan, plus Godzilla – for the behemoth of battle royals. Sadly, the film fails to deliver on its heavyweight promise. Vera Farmiga heads the human cast as a scientist who is taken captive with her daughter (Stranger Things star Millie Bobby Brown) by eco-terrorist Charles Dance. There's action and peril in spades, but little of the plot makes any sense. JAMIE HEALY

In cinemas today...

Will Ferrell's cowardly actions on a skiing holiday have life-changing consequences in Downhill (pictured) – a remake of the Swedish film Force Majeure. Mark Ruffalo plays a whistleblowing lawyer in true-life drama Dark Waters (see feature: p36). And 1917's George MacKay takes on the role of Aussie outlaw Ned Kelly in True History of the Kelly Gang. ELLIE PORTER.

s A WRITER as well as an actor, Rebecca Front knows a great radio script when she sees one, and the moment she picked up the script of Love in Recovery – Pete Jackson's Radio 4 comedy drama set in the world of Alcoholics Anonymous – she felt sure she was on to a winner. "I started reading it, and I just couldn't stop."

Front wasn't wrong. She signed up to play the part of Fiona – a haughty ex-banker, one of a small group of recovering alcoholics that the story revolves around – and earlier this month, in honour of her performance, she was named best actress at the BBC Audio Drama Awards.

Love in Recovery is a showcase for some formidable acting talent. As well as Front, the cast boasts Sue Johnston, John Hannah, Johnny Vegas and Paul Kaye. According to Jackson, it was the fact that Front signed up to the role that opened the way for the other leading names to follow. But according to Front, she was persuaded to take the role after finding out who else was going to be in it. Whichever way round it was, Love in Recovery – the third series of which aired last year – is among the best things that Front has ever done.

Jackson, who based the series on his own experience of alcoholism, says that what makes Front's performance so special is "to do with how much she can convey in just a few words. I'd find I could cut back Rebecca's lines – they just weren't needed. Just the way she might say hello would reveal so much about her character."

'So many comedy performers started on BBC radio'

For many fans of Love in Recovery, the most compelling plotline is the relationship that evolves between Fiona and a journalist called Simon, played by Hannah. "I love that relationship," Front says. "John is so fantastic. His character goes from being an annoying jerk to this incredibly nice guy. He's trying so hard to have a normal, lovely, fairy-tale romance with this woman, and she will do everything she can to derail it, whether she wants to or not. So he's massively backed the wrong horse, and for me that's one of the great jokes – that Simon is so doe-eyed and romantic over this woman, who could really not be a worse choice for him."

RONT, WHO IS 55, has embraced both comic and straight acting roles in her career, on both television and radio. On TV her CV includes Kavanagh QC, The Thick of It, Nighty Night, Poldark, Lewis War and Peace, and the space comedy series Avenue 5, currently airing on Sky 1. With telly, actors often complain about how they have to hit their mark and stay on their mark. In radio, you literally have to stay on your mark because otherwise you won't be heard. So it's technically very precise, and I think in writing terms it's also precise, because you're not just communicating characters and story, you're also having to convey all the stuff that would otherwise be visual.

UT FRONT SEES a cloud on the radio drama horizon, and she took the opportunity of her acceptance speech at the Audio Drama Awards to draw it to people's attention. "I'm just very aware that the BBC licence fee is under threat, and I worry that people aren't aware of the extent to which radio drama is woven into the fabric," she says. "So many performers who we really value in terms of their comedy output and their drama output started on BBC radio. People like Stephen Fry and Steve Coogan and Hugh Laurie. It worries me that we might undervalue it. Budgets get cut and cut and cut, and you think, how are we going to develop the talent of the future? People can't do it in isolation. They develop their talents on the BBC."

So what of the future of Love in Recovery? There is talk of it following the path that so many radio shows have trodden before, and being turned into a TV series. "I think we all really love that idea," says Front. "I think we'd all be very much up for it."

Happy medium

Digital future? We still love medium wave!

E'LL SWITCH OFF FM!" So said those nasty radio people a few years ago. Not since Farmer Giles booked Foxy to look after his chickens had anything so stupid been suggested outside of the hen house. Naturally the TV equivalent, switching off the analogue signal – which was completed in 2017 - was a good idea. Nobody cared. None of us noticed at all, preferring to check out the bashed biscuits box at Poundland. Don't tell those people who fill the pages in the front of Radio Times, but many of the televisions I see aren't turned on. Viewers are streaming on their phones and catching-up on their laptops while shopping online.

But we would have noticed the end of analogue radio. Radio's biggest dunderheads plotted to squash FM and AM once the hapless listeners had been obliged to leap over a few hurdles to embrace the digital future. Crucial was to be the moment when 50 per cent of all listening was digital. And what happened?

Well, the quarterly radio listening figures came out this month. By tradition, all radio bosses claim these figures as a huge victory, even if they actually prove that thousands of listeners have run off with their fingers in their ears shouting, "I'm as mad as hell and I'm not going to take this any more!"

These statistics are partially compiled by diarists who faithfully record their listening habits. The entire multimillion-pound radio industry, a talent factory that gave us Kenny Everett, Liza Tarbuck and Tony Blackburn, basically revolves around a woman with a pencil in Macclesfield.

Anyway, guess what? These same figures broke records for digital listening, boosted by success for stations like LBC and Radio 4 (sorry, Mr Murdoch) as well as a host of new stations like Magic at the Musicals. Digital listening rose 11 per cent to 58 per cent! Well blow me down, what was said about switching off FM now we'd passed 50 per cent? NOTHING! NADA!

You see, while millions of us are supposed to have traded in our old trannies for the latest ANYONE FOR A BIT OF CRACKLING?

smart speaker shaped like Madonna's conical bra, all this technology has not killed off FM and AM. Far from it. Multi-platform is the new buzz phrase. For this reason, the same radio listening figures showed millions of us are still locked on to crackly, patchy old medium wave!

ccording to Stuart Clarkson from industry website Radio Today, there are ten million "listening hours" to Radio 5 Live on MW alone, and Talk Sport has 6.7 million! That's a bigger number than the combined sales figures of our big national newspapers. And in Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh and more, actual living breathing people tune to MW sister stations like Clyde 2, Forth 2, Northsound 2 and Tay 2.

Of course, plenty of us listen to this signal on digital devices, but commercial stations can still make more money out of MW than it costs them to broadcast on it. And out on the roads, millions of cars still don't have DAB - to switch off the analogue signal would be positively dangerous!

Nothing in life gives me as much pleasure as the moment radio people shut their great big mouths. Call it my Marconi Moment. Where are the calls to switch off FM now? Oh, they've gone strangely silent. Unlike those MW radios! Ha!

SOUND BITES

The art of interviewing

Celebrities shouldn't interview other celebrities. I realised this afresh the other day when I caught Top Gear on TV and saw Andrew Flintoff and Paddy McGuinness failing to fill the boots of Jeremy Clarkson in the show's interview slot. They just can't do it. They don't have the skills. No more reason you would ask them to interview somebody than you would toss Clarkson the new ball and ask him to polish off the tail. Celebrities have never absorbed the first secret of interviewing. That it's all about one simple question. The question is: "In what way?"

Here's how it's done

The one celebrity I except from this rule is the American actor Alec Baldwin. His interview programme Here's the Thing has been running on WNYC for some years now. It's just turned up on Radio 4 Extra so there's no excuse for not finding out whether I'm right. This programme consists of him interviewing pretty much anyone who takes his fancy, from Jerry Seinfeld to James Caan, from Congressman Adam Schiff to Barbra Streisand. Basically he gets everyone to tell him their life story, so if you want a grounding in such people, there's none better.

Perfectly equipped for the role

Baldwin is qualified to do the job that so many celebrities manifestly cannot do by virtue of his genuine interest in how the world works, his impeccably dark brown voice and his years in the film and TV business. It's this last that gives him the right to ask Julie Andrews about what it was like working with "Jim" Garner and "Chris" Plummer. More to the point it allows him to ask her questions such as "Did you change your agent at this point?", questions that no civilian would have the temerity to put, and which would be so easily swatted away if only they didn't come from a fellow actor.

Non-verbal communication

He also understands that part of the radio interviewer's job is to be the person you can't always hear but can always sense. They say 53 per cent of communication is non-verbal. Baldwin, like Michael Barbaro - another excellent interviewer and host of the New York Times podcast The Daily – understands this and therefore has a repertoire of encouraging noises. These are the aural equivalents of the nods of assent, brief laughs of approval and occasional raised eyebrows that encourage the interviewee to say slightly more than they intended to. Listen closely. They're all there.

The fourth year of the series produced in collaboration with the Wellcome Collection begins with an examination of air pollution. It comes in the wake of horrifying statistics: more than 90 per cent of the world's population is breathing toxic air, which causes up to nine million deaths a year. But all is not lost. Contributors from around the world reveal how the effects can be reversed. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Lift Going Up 1.30pm Radio 4

Before lifts came along, the top floor of many buildings was synonymous with disease and poverty. Then everything was, as it were, turned on its head. Lifts enabled tall buildings, and the higher up you travelled the more rarified the environment. I like how the contributors to this elevating history of the lift are presented as lift passengers, with comic top notes – "Doors closing!" - provided by the lift-announcer voice of Emma Clarke. Fine work from producer Laurence Grissell, whose elevator pitch must have been right on the button. It's a big week for Grissell; he is also the producer behind The Californian Century, beginning on Radio 4 tomorrow. simon o'hagan

The Pallisers

3.00pm Radio 4

The prospect of reworking Anthony Trollope's Pallisers novels for radio is daunting, but Mike Harris's take on Victorian high society and politics continues at a refreshing pace. The story picks up with Cora's husband Plantagenet set to become prime minister, but will her influence threaten his fragile coalition government? Witty and satirical, this is a welcome return to a Trollope tale little-adapted since Simon Raven's landmark 1970s TV version. TOM GOULDING

7.30 Drama on 3: The Glass Menagerie

Tennessee Williams's first big success, premiered in 1945 on Broadway, remains the most touching of his works. The playwright based the play on his own life and family in St Louis in the 1930s and broke away from naturalism to create a dream-like atmosphere in which narrator Tom conjures up recollections of the cramped and claustrophobic tenement home shared with his often overbearing mother and painfully shy sister. One day Tom succumbs to his mother's pressure and brings home a gentleman caller to visit his sister, and their quiet existence is shattered. Introduced by Williams biographer John Lahr. Today's Choices

The Californian Century 1.45pm Radio 4

What better way to tell the story of California than in a film script? Stanley Tucci narrates this history of the seemingly ineluctable rise of the Golden State during the 20th century as a hard-boiled writer reading set directions. It begins, in noir-style appropriately enough, with a shooting – of the first person to direct a complete film in California, Francis Boggs, in 1911. Each episode, broadcast daily, uses a similar vignette as a jumping-off point to unearth the shady dealings, environmental degradation and institutional racism nowadays masked by Cali's image as a beacon of virtuous liberalism.

Out of the Ordinary

DAVID CRAWFORD

As a chronicler of the eccentric and the esoteric, Jolyon Jenkins has carved out a special place for himself with Out of the Ordinary. As with Louis Theroux on TV, Jenkins accepts the oddballs he encounters on their own terms - I'm thinking of the programme in which he met people who believed in the benefits of drilling a hole in your head – and today's exploration of whether humans have hidden navigational powers allows him to open up the world as only he does. simon o'hagan

Today's Choices

Leap

11.30am Radio 4 A leap day, according to this programme's producer Eliza Lomas, is an occasion when "conventions are ignored, and normality is turned upside down". Enter Monster Chetwynd - the Turner Prize-nominated artist (above) who installed large, illuminated slugs at the entrance to Tate Britain – as she puts together a performance that emphasises the oddness and freedom of 29 February. We learn the history and significance of the day, before the lesson culminates in an off-the-wall, polyphonic gathering of Chetwynd's friends and fellow artists in her Glasgow flat. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Being gay in the Middle East is far from easy. A 19-year-old male recalls how he was subjected to a despicable gang attack after arranging to meet another guy through a dating app. Fear is common among LGBTQ people in the region, but now they can utilise a new open-discussion platform, Ahwaa. Security is high, anonymity key. Some say it's "not an alternative to dating apps". Never mind; Ahwaa has abated anxiety and, crucially, transformed lives.

2/5. Poet Helen Mort continues her journey exploring the complexities and subtexts of apology, drawing on both her own lifelong tendency to say sorry for almost anything and on remarkable poetic apologies including Ralph Waldo Emerson's The Apology. She reflects on how we often use apology to justify or explain our behaviour rather than express contrition and examines the motives of those posting under the hashtag #sorrynotsorry. Do we sometimes say sorry as a pre-emptive defence against criticism. she asks? And is this a modern phenomenon or a return to apology's roots as a rhetorical or argumentative device? Today's Choices

The Compass 1.30pm/11.05pm BBC World Service

There's nothing like Vybarr Cregan-Reid's programme to make us re-think 21st century existence. The professor traces most of our ailments to changes wrought during the Industrial Revolution. The new series of The Compass begins with his warnings about the way we sleep. "Sleep enables us to function when we are awake," he reminds us. Tell that to call centre workers in the Philippines, suffering because they work all night. Closer to home, we drink too much coffee while our children wake up to check their phones. It turns out that cultures that practice the siesta have the right idea. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Only Artists

9.00am/9.30pm Radio 4 The simplicity of this series is its strength. Let two artistic minds loose and see what happens. In this edition, one originates from Huddersfield, the other from Manchester, an hour away. From their early careers, both were celebrated as part of a creative new guard and, now into middle age, they are still envelope-pushers in their fields. What playwright Simon Stephens and poet laureate Simon Armitage also have in common is a dry humour; listen out for it. FIONA HUGHES

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3 Lesser-known and longer-lived than his contemporaries Messiaen and Boulez, the French composer Henri Dutilleux, who died in 2013, aged 97, is emerging from their shadows. His song-cycle Correspondances traces mystical links between letters from Rilke, van Gogh, Alexander Solzhenitsyn and Prithwindra Mukherjee. It's sung tonight by British soprano Carolyn Sampson (above), though any correspondences to be found between its colouristic concerns and the monumental expansiveness of Bruckner's Eighth Symphony lie in the hands of conductor Donald Runnicles.

MARK PAPPENHEIM

The Likely Dads 11.00pm Radio 4

Are new fathers prevented from talking about their own sleep deprivation? Do they feel scared to speak out when they feel there's something that they can do better than mums? Tim Vincent heads up a panel of dads tackling these thorny topics with smart humour. But as all parents know, a structure is vital and the issue with this pilot is that it's a little too freewheeling. If it were to become a series, they need to establish a routine.

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Forum Internum 11.00am Radio 4

We're never very far from the ominous predictions of George Orwell. Not only is Big Brother watching us, there is now the danger of his "thought crime" becoming reality. Forum Internum – in international law it refers to a person's right to develop convictions and beliefs of every kind – is a three-part series about freedom of thought and why it might need protecting in the digital age. Helena Kennedy QC (above), who specialises in human rights, and philosopher James Garvey look at the growth of new technologies, among them Al and neuroscience. Can the law prevent their misuse by corporations and the state? DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

An amplified sextet spawned by America's hippest new-music series, the Bang on a Can All-Stars tonight join the BBC Concert Orchestra in BOAC co-artistic director Julia Wolfe's new Flower Power, a heady evocation of the 1960s hippie era premiered in LA just last month. Scored for 19 solo strings, Philip Glass's 1995 Third Symphony offers the Concert Orchestra's own string section a chance to show that they too are all stars in their own right.

Face behind the voice

Eliza Philippidis BBC Radio Jersey

Age "Fluid! Some days I'm 22 and others about 109..." Current job Presents the weekday drivetime show (4pm) on Radio Jersev. CV Born and brought up in Shoreham, West Sussex. Her father is Greek, and at 20 she moved to Athens, where she ran an adventure sports business. When her daughter was 13, she moved back to the UK: "Then I discovered I had cancer. After a year undergoing surgery, tests, treatment, I needed to rethink what I was doing – so I went back to university." Graduated from Kingston University with a First in journalism in 2014. Started doing travel updates on Radio Jackie, then went to Heart as newsreader, LBC as a reporter, then BBC Radio London, presenting news. Offered a full-time presenter's job at BBC Radio Guernsev in May 2019. Then joined Jersey last month. Best moment "When I was invited to take on this drivetime show. It's heart-warming and amazing. Everywhere you go in the world, the BBC touches people's lives." Worst moment "I had to do a live piece from a funfair, coming down the helter skelter. As I launched myself off the top, I dropped my kit. It bounced down in front of me and I came after it, shouting 'Oh, no!'."

Off air "I love the sea. Now I'm here in Jersey, I'm going to learn to surf and windsurf. I love moving around – it's an adventure. But Jersey is home at the moment and I love it. I'm also passionate about fashion, and I love art. '

First radio memory "Steve Wright in the Afternoon – the energy of him!" Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari is amazing, especially his political interviews. I love Chris Evans and his ability to just spread joy. And she's not on the radio, but I really like Naga Munchetty she's so contemporary, and asks questions you want to hear the answer to." Ambition "I'm old enough to be on Radio 2 – how amazing would that be..? But seriously, I just want to create a show that people want to turn on and listen to. I want the audience to celebrate life and enjoy it with me, and think 'She brings a bit of warmth into the house'."

Dream job "The one I'm doing right now! Yes, absolutely that, For someone who eniovs conversations, asking and finding out stuff, it's the best job in the world. I love it! It really is a little bit of magic." Secret skills "When I play tennis, my service is so completely appalling that no one knows what to do with it – so I win every point!" CAROLINE MEYER

Eliza Philippidis BBC Radio Jersey

Age "Fluid! Some days I'm 22 and others about 109..." Current job Presents the weekday drivetime show (4pm) on Radio Jersey. CV Born and brought up in Shoreham, West Sussex. Her father is Greek, and at 20 she moved to Athens, where she ran an adventure sports business. When her daughter was 13, she moved back to the UK: "Then I discovered I had cancer. After a year undergoing surgery, tests, treatment, I needed to rethink what I was doing - so I went back to university." Graduated from Kingston University with a First in journalism in 2014. Started doing travel updates on Radio Jackie, then went to Heart as newsreader, LBC as a reporter, then BBC Radio London, presenting news. Offered a full-time presenter's job at BBC Radio Guernsev in May 2019. Then joined Jersey last month. Best moment "When I was invited to take on this drivetime show. It's heart-warming and amazing. Everywhere you go in the world, the BBC touches people's lives." Worst moment "I had to do a live piece from a funfair, coming down the helter skelter. As I launched myself off the top, I dropped my kit. It bounced down in front of me and I came after it, shouting 'Oh, no!'."

Off air "I love the sea. Now I'm here in Jersey, I'm going to learn to surf and windsurf. I love moving around – it's an adventure. But Jersev is home at the moment and I love it. I'm also passionate about fashion, and I love art. '

First radio memory "Steve Wright in the Afternoon – the energy of him!" Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari is amazing, especially his political interviews. I love Chris Evans and his ability to just spread joy. And she's not on the radio, but I really like Naga Munchetty she's so contemporary, and asks questions you want to hear the answer to." Ambition "I'm old enough to be on Radio 2 – how amazing would that be..? But seriously, I just want to create a show that people want to turn on and listen to. I want the audience to celebrate life and enjoy it with me, and think 'She brings a bit of warmth into the house'." Dream job "The one I'm doing right now!

Yes, absolutely that. For someone who enjoys conversations, asking and finding out stuff, it's the best job in the world. I love it! It really is a little bit of magic." Secret skills "When I play tennis, my service is so completely appalling that no one knows what to do with it - so I win every point!" CAROLINE MEYER

Eliza Philippidis BBC Radio Jersey

Age "Fluid! Some days I'm 22 and others about 109..." Current job Presents the weekday drivetime show (4pm) on Radio Jersey. CV Born and brought up in Shoreham, West Sussex. Her father is Greek, and at 20 she moved to Athens, where she ran an adventure sports business. When her daughter was 13, she moved back to the UK: "Then I discovered I had cancer. After a year undergoing surgery, tests, treatment, I needed to rethink what I was doing – so I went back to university." Graduated from Kingston University with a First in journalism in 2014. Started doing travel updates on Radio Jackie, then went to Heart as newsreader, LBC as a reporter, then BBC Radio London, presenting news. Offered a full-time presenter's job at BBC Radio Guernsev in May 2019. Then joined Jersey last month. Best moment "When I was invited to take on this drivetime show. It's heart-warming and amazing. Everywhere you go in the world, the BBC touches people's lives." Worst moment "I had to do a live piece from a funfair, coming down the helter skelter. As I launched myself off the top, I dropped my kit. It bounced down in front of me and I came after it, shouting 'Oh, no!'."

Off air "I love the sea. Now I'm here in Jersey, I'm going to learn to surf and windsurf. I love moving around – it's an adventure. But Jersey is home at the moment and I love it. I'm also passionate about fashion, and I love art. '

First radio memory "Steve Wright in the Afternoon – the energy of him!" Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari is amazing, especially his political interviews. I love Chris Evans and his ability to just spread joy. And she's not on the radio, but I really like Naga Munchetty she's so contemporary, and asks questions you want to hear the answer to." Ambition "I'm old enough to be on Radio 2 – how amazing would that be..? But seriously, I just want to create a show that people want to turn on and listen to. I want the audience to celebrate life and enjoy it with me, and think 'She brings a bit of warmth into the house'."

Dream job "The one I'm doing right now! Yes, absolutely that. For someone who enjoys conversations, asking and finding out stuff, it's the best job in the world. I love it! It really is a little bit of magic." Secret skills "When I play tennis, my service is so completely appalling that no one knows what to do with it – so I win every point!" CAROLINE MEYER

Age "Fluid! Some days I'm 22 and others about 109..." Current job Presents the weekday drivetime show (4pm) on Radio Jersey. CV Born and brought up in Shoreham, West Sussex. Her father is Greek, and at 20 she moved to Athens, where she ran an adventure sports business. When her daughter was 13, she moved back to the UK: "Then I discovered I had cancer. After a year undergoing surgery, tests, treatment, I needed to rethink what I was doing – so I went back to university." Graduated from Kingston University with a First in journalism in 2014. Started doing travel updates on Radio Jackie, then went to Heart as newsreader, LBC as a reporter, then BBC Radio London, presenting news. Offered a full-time presenter's job at BBC Radio Guernsev in May 2019. Then joined Jersey last month. Best moment "When I was invited to take on this drivetime show. It's heart-warming and amazing. Everywhere you go in the world, the BBC touches people's lives." Worst moment "I had to do a live piece from a funfair, coming down the helter skelter. As I launched myself off the top, I dropped my kit. It bounced down in front of me and I came after it, shouting 'Oh, no!'."

Off air "I love the sea. Now I'm here in Jersey, I'm going to learn to surf and windsurf. I love moving around – it's an adventure. But Jersey is home at the moment and I love it. I'm also passionate about fashion, and I love art. '

the Afternoon – the energy of him!" Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari is amazing, especially his political interviews. I love Chris Evans and his ability to just spread joy. And she's not on the radio, but I really like Naga Munchetty she's so contemporary, and asks questions you want to hear the answer to." Ambition "I'm old enough to be on Radio 2 – how amazing would that be..? But seriously, I just want to create a show that people want to turn on and listen to. I want the audience to celebrate life and enjoy it with me, and think 'She brings a bit of warmth into the house'."

Dream job "The one I'm doing right now! Yes, absolutely that. For someone who enjoys conversations, asking and finding out stuff, it's the best job in the world. I love it! It really is a little bit of magic." Secret skills "When I play tennis, my service is so completely appalling that no one knows what to do with it – so I win every point!" CAROLINE MEYER

in Shoreham, West Sussex. Her father is Greek, and at 20 she moved to Athens, where she ran an adventure sports business. When her daughter was 13, she moved back to the UK: "Then I discovered I had cancer. After a year undergoing surgery, tests, treatment, I needed to rethink what I was doing – so I went back to university." Graduated from Kingston University with a First in journalism in 2014. Started doing travel updates on Radio Jackie, then went to Heart as newsreader, LBC as a reporter, then BBC Radio London, presenting news. Offered a full-time presenter's job at BBC Radio Guernsev in May 2019. Then joined Jersey last month. Best moment "When I was invited to take on this drivetime show. It's heart-warming and amazing. Everywhere you go in the world, the BBC touches people's lives." Worst moment "I had to do a live piece from a funfair, coming down the helter skelter. As I launched myself off the top, I dropped my kit. It bounced down in front of me and I came after it, shouting 'Oh, no!'."

Off air "I love the sea. Now I'm here in Jersey, I'm going to learn to surf and windsurf. I love moving around – it's an adventure. But Jersey is home at the moment and I love it. I'm also passionate about fashion, and I love art. '

First radio memory "Steve Wright in the Afternoon – the energy of him!" Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari is amazing, especially his political interviews. I love Chris Evans and his ability to just spread joy. And she's not on the radio, but I really like Naga Munchetty she's so contemporary, and asks questions you want to hear the answer to." Ambition "I'm old enough to be on Radio 2 – how amazing would that be..? But seriously, I just want to create a show that people want to turn on and listen to. I want the audience to celebrate life and enjoy it with me, and think 'She brings a bit of warmth into the house'."

Dream job "The one I'm doing right now! Yes, absolutely that. For someone who enjoys conversations, asking and finding out stuff, it's the best job in the world. I love it! It really is a little bit of magic." Secret skills "When I play tennis, my service is so completely appalling that no one knows what to do with it – so I win every point!" CAROLINE MEYER

Age "Fluid! Some days I'm 22 and others about 109..." Current job Presents the weekday drivetime show (4pm) on Radio Jersey. CV Born and brought up in Shoreham, West Sussex. Her father is Greek, and at 20 she moved to Athens, where she ran an adventure sports business. When her daughter was 13, she moved back to the UK: "Then I discovered I had cancer. After a year undergoing surgery, tests, treatment, I needed to rethink what I was doing - so I went back to university." Graduated from Kingston University with a First in journalism in 2014. Started doing travel updates on Radio Jackie, then went to Heart as newsreader, LBC as a reporter, then BBC Radio London, presenting news. Offered a full-time presenter's job at BBC Radio Guernsev in May 2019. Then joined Jersey last month. Best moment "When I was invited to take on this drivetime show. It's heart-warming and amazing. Everywhere you go in the world, the BBC touches people's lives." Worst moment "I had to do a live piece from a funfair, coming down the helter skelter. As I launched myself off the top, I dropped my kit. It bounced down in front of me and I came after it, shouting 'Oh, no!'."

Off air "I love the sea. Now I'm here in Jersey, I'm going to learn to surf and windsurf. I love moving around – it's an adventure. But Jersey is home at the moment and I love it. I'm also passionate about fashion, and I love art. '

First radio memory "Steve Wright in the Afternoon – the energy of him!" Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari is amazing, especially his political interviews. I love Chris Evans and his ability to just spread joy. And she's not on the radio, but I really like Naga Munchetty she's so contemporary, and asks questions you want to hear the answer to." Ambition "I'm old enough to be on Radio 2 – how amazing would that be..? But seriously, I just want to create a show that people want to turn on and listen to. I want the audience to celebrate life and enjoy it with me, and think 'She brings a bit of warmth into the house'."

Dream job "The one I'm doing right now! Yes, absolutely that. For someone who enjoys conversations, asking and finding out stuff, it's the best job in the world. I love it! It really is a little bit of magic." Secret skills "When I play tennis, my service is so completely appalling that no one knows what to do with it – so I win every point!" CAROLINE MEYER

TACEY HALLS ONLY popped into the Foundling Museum in London's Bloomsbury to kill time before meeting a friend. But she came out with an idea for her new novel.

"I saw all these tokens – coins, thimbles, buttons, bits of sewing – that the mothers left with their babies when they gave them up. It was so moving," she says. "I started to wonder what it would have felt like for me if I'd been one of those mothers. The tokens were a way to identify the babies – what if they got mixed up?

If a mother's circumstances changed and she came back to reclaim her child, but got the wrong one? I knew I had a story."

The Foundling is set in Georgian London and follows the fortunes of an unmarried mother and the daughter she gives up, on the day she is born, to the philanthropically run Foundling Hospital, as it was then called. Halls paints a vivid picture of life in the 1740s for those at the bottom of the heap. Bess, the heartbroken young mother, parts with her baby to give her a better future and education that she, as a "shrimp girl" selling her pungent wares from Billingsgate around the streets, can't provide.

Depending on a series of coincidences, the switchback plot works its way through eight years as the characters travel across a richly drawn cityscape. This is a time when talk is of a third bridge being built over the Thames, the river that carried then-thriving businesses such as the whalebone trade, valuable for stays and market gardens.

Lambeth's farmland

Surprisingly for someone whose descriptions are so vivid and dialogue is so fluid, she admits to finding the actual writing "more of a struggle". She's not a historian by training, but a journalist, having started out as an editorial assistant at the magazine The Bookseller, the publishing industry's bible, and become its media editor.

She was first inspired to have a go at writing by the authors she met. "Talking to them, I realised that some of them weren't all that different from me," says Halls, the daughter of market traders from Rossendale in Lancashire. "It made me think, maybe I could write a novel."

T 30, SHE already has one hit under her belt, last year's The Familiars, set against a backdrop of the 1612 Pendle witch trials at Lancaster assizes. It proved to be a bestselling debut. Halls is undoubtedly interested in what happens to ordinary people, and to women, especially.

"I'm particularly interested in writing about the struggles women have faced historically, rather than the opportunities," she says. "Life was so boxed in for women and there were few roles available to them, and I'm drawn again and again to the restrictions and limitations placed upon them and how they negotiated that space."

What if a mother came back to reclaim her child?

STACEY HALLS

Her 21st-century curiosity also homes in on hidden histories. The London of The Foundling is a multicultural city and she credits Gretchen Gerzina's 1995 book Black England for inspiring the black family she includes in the story. "I read that something like 30,000 people of colour lived in London then," Halls says.

The Gibbons family she portrays rent two substandard rooms in a Houndsditch boarding house in the City of London and work to support their two boys. Keziah repairs worn clothes and sells them at the Rag Fair; her husband William earns money playing his violin in rich people's houses. They keep their sons indoors as much as they can because of the very real danger of them being snatched on the streets and pressganged to serve on ships or forced to become servants in grand houses.

It's a dangerous place outside, especially at night. A supporting character in the book, Lyle

STORIES FROM THE PAST

Stacey Halls picks her top works of historical fiction

THE RUBY IN THE SMOKE

Philip Pullman, 1985 (£7.99; order for £7.99 plus £1.50 p&p) "My favourite book. Set in Victorian London, it's about a young woman investigating her father's death who brushes up against the criminal underworld."

MY COUSIN RACHEL

Daphne du Maurier, 1951 "Set in 19th-century Cornwall, this novel is a masterpiece in atmosphere and ambiguity. Was Rachel a murderer or misunderstood? I still don't know."

FINGERSMITH

Sarah Waters, 2002 (£8.99; order for £8.99 plus £1.50 p&p) "I read this when I was 16 and it blew my mind: the love story, the twist... it's so rich in Victorian detail and so well written."

THE MIRROR & THE LIGHT

Hilary Mantel, out 5 March (£25; pre-order for £21.50 incl p&p). "I can't wait to be reabsorbed into Cromwell's world in this third and final Wolf Hall instalment. Even though we all know the ending, getting us to want to read it as if we don't know is Mantel's superpower."

HAMNET Maggie O'Farrell, out 31 March (£20; pre-order for £18 incl p&p) I was sent an advance copy and it's phenomenal – about the death of Shakespeare's only son, aged 11. It's one of the most immersive novels I've read."

Kozak, is a "link-boy". His job is to roam the unlit streets and light his torch when a customer asks, illuminating their way, on foot or by carriage, to their destination. "What I found fascinating about him," Halls says, "is the idea that link-boys would have lived on the edge of criminality. Working at night, knowing all the alleys and shortcuts, seeing things, coming into contact, perhaps, with gangs, thieves..."

As for her next book, Halls doesn't want to say too much – but she is starting again with a whole new period, the Edwardian age. I, for one, can't wait to read it. FIONA HUGHES

The price of belonging

Two fathers on opposing sides are united in grief

APEIROGON COLUM McCANN

Open Book Sun 4pm, Mon-Fri 12.04pm, 10.45pm Radio 4

The latest work by Irish author Colum McCann is billed as a novel, but it's rooted in real events: the loss endured by two fathers, one Israeli, one Palestinian, of their young daughters, 13-year-old Smadar and ten-year-old Abir, both casualties of the occupation. In Apeirogon (published 25 Feb; pre-order for £17.50, incl p&p) – the title refers to a shape with an infinite number of sides – McCann attempts to reconstruct the context and impact of the girls' deaths through more than a thousand nonlinear fragments, with the friendship between the two bereaved fathers always at its heart.

SUCH A FUN AGE KILEY REID Free Thinking Wed 10pm Radio 3

An innocuous everyday act lies at the centre of this sparkling debut novel (£12.99, incl p&p) from American Kiley Reid. One evening in Philadelphia, a babysitter, Emira, takes her young charge, Briar, to the grocery store. Emira is black and Briar is white. First they come under the scrutiny of a fellow customer, then a security guard. The resulting scene is only calmed by the appearance of Briar's father, Peter, "an old white guy". But the repercussions of that night spiral out of control, with life-changing consequences both for Emira and for Briar's mum, Alix, in this nimble tale of race, class and womanhood.

THE CRYING BOOK

HEATHER CHRISTIE Book of the Week Monday-Friday
9.45am Radio 4 FM

Crying isn't something most of us give much thought to – it usually happens against our will and feels embarrassing, or perhaps sometimes it can be a relief. But poet Heather Christie hopes to change that with The Crying Book (published 27 Feb; pre-order for £14.99, incl p&p). This intimate, lyrical look at the act of weeping was inspired by Christie's own experiences, as she faced the suicide of a close friend, her own depression and became a new mother. She also expands her exploration to take in the broader role of tears in human history and society, discovering the science and psychology behind why we cry. HANNAH SHADDOCK

LASTING POWERS OF ATTORNEY – ONLY £399*pp

There may come a time when you are unable to make decisions for yourself, maybe through illness or injury. If that were to happen, who would make decisions about your care or manage your finances? It's important you make your wishes clear in a legal document known as a Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA).

There are two types of LPA – one that covers your health and welfare, and one that covers your property and financial affairs.

A health and welfare LPA deals with your medical care and can only be used once you become unable to make decisions for yourself.

A property and financial affairs LPA deals with financial matters, and can also be used while you still have full mental capacity, for example if you become frail or immobile.

If you're married and your partner becomes unable to make decisions, marriage does not give you the authority to make decisions on their behalf – you will only be able to do this if you're formally appointed as an attorney.

READER OFFER - SAVE £250

For a limited time, Key Estate Planning is offering to create both your property and financial affairs LPA and your health and welfare LPA for £399 per person. Offer ends 9 March 2020.

Key Estate Planning has a team of estate planning specialists who can explain and arrange these documents. They can also offer you a free no-obligation consultation and recommendation on wills and trusts, based on your circumstances and legacy objectives*.

Making marriage work for you

There is still time to claim up to £1,150 in Marriage Allowance, says Paul Lewis

HERE ARE JUST a few weeks left to get the maximum amount of marriage allowance. Claim by 5 April at the latest to get £1,150.

The Marriage Allowance is given to married or civil partnered people who fulfil two conditions: that one of you does not pay income tax, and that the other does pay income tax but not at the higher rate. Normally that means an income below £50,000 (below £43,430 in Scotland).

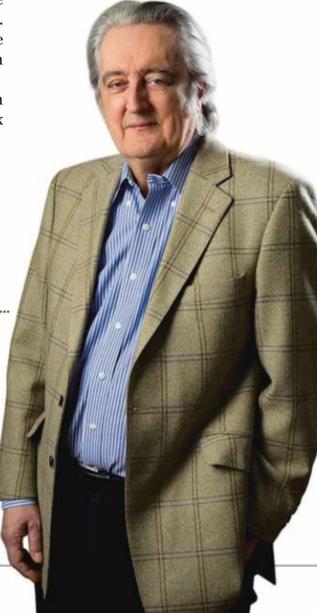

If you fulfil those conditions, then the partner who doesn't pay tax

Claim by 5 April 2020 at the latest to get £1,150°

should claim Marriage Allowance to transfer some of their unused personal tax-free allowance to their spouse. In addition, they can claim for each year that the couple fulfilled the conditions, from 2015/16. Those five years are worth a total of £1,150 to the taxpayer. To get that amount a claim must be made by 5 April, 2020. If you claim later than that the allowance for 2015/16, worth £212, disappears.

Once claimed, the allowance will continue from year to year, as long as the conditions are fulfilled. Next tax year, 2020/21, it will be worth at least £250. The allowance for the current tax year is given by adjusting the taxpayer's tax code. For previous tax years HMRC sends a cheque.

The couple must be married or civil partnered at any time in the tax year to claim it. Opposite sex couples who could only become civil partners since December can only claim the allowance for this tax year.

Claiming is simple, but there are around two million people entitled to Marriage Allowance who have not put in the claim and are missing out. Go to gov.uk, search "marriage allowance" and make sure you claim it back to 2015/16.

OLDER COUPLES

If one of you was born before 6 April 1935, then you cannot claim Marriage Allowance. Instead you should claim Married Couple's Allowance. That applies even if both of you pay tax, and it can reduce the tax bill of the partner with the higher income by up to £891.50 in 2019/20. To claim that, go to gov.uk and search "married couples allowance".

WHY AM I BEING CHARGED EXTRA FOR PAYING BY CARD?

Graham emailed to ask "how come [his payment provider] is allowed to deduct a credit card charge when all retailers have been stopped from doing so?"

Paul Lewis replies: The law says that any business that sells us things is not allowed to charge more for one way of paying than another. In the past, airlines did not charge us to pay by debit card but many added 3% if we paid by credit card. From 13 January 2018, new EU rules banned all such surcharges. Shops, pubs, online retailers, hotels, letting agents indeed any business that sells direct to customers cannot charge more for one way of paying than another. So if you pay by credit or debit card, cash, or bank transfer, the price must be the same.

Firms are allowed to charge supplements, however, as long as they apply to all buyers. And that is what Graham's payment agent did, adding £1 to all eBay purchases made through it, regardless of whether it was paid by credit or debit card. Shops are allowed to refuse all card payments under a certain amount. Or to refuse all cash payments if they choose.

Win the Wilderness: Alaska

Sunday 9.00pm BBC2

RITISH COUPLES ARE hoping to win the keys to their dream home in Win the Wilderness: an Alaskan house 100 miles from the nearest road. To prove themselves worthy, they've had to fell trees, cross glaciers and brave freezing waters.

But you don't need to be a hardy adventurer to get a taste of Alaska's raw wilderness. The 49th State is an ideal cruise destination, while its empty highways and 500-mile Alaska Railroad meander through the untamed interior. In its vast national parks, you can spot bears, caribou and eagles. Peak season is summer, when the average daytime temperature in Anchorage is 16°C. While at this time of year, the mercury drops to sub-zero and the state is buried under snow.

SAIL THE INSIDE PASSAGE

A cruise is the easiest way to explore the USA's inaccessible northernmost territory. Its craggy coastline rises and falls with brooding peaks and towering glaciers, and sightings of orcas and humpback whales are common in its icy waters. The most popular itinerary is a round trip from Vancouver or Seattle via the Inside Passage – a sheltered waterway that meanders past Pacific Ocean islands and fjords. Ports of call include Alaska's isolated capital Juneau, the Gold Rush town of Skagway, Russian-influenced Sitka and Ketchikan, which is a centre for Native Alaskan cultures. Expedition cruises on smaller ships allow passengers to get closer to the epic scenery and wildlife, but are more expensive. Excursions range from guided hikes and kayaking to helicopter trips and seaplane tours.

Gulf of Alaska voyages also venture further north to Seward or Whittier – the gateway ports for Anchorage. The cruise season runs from late April to September, and the warmer, wetter months offer the best chance of spotting wildlife.

RIDE THE RAILS

The Alaskan Railroad runs year-round and wends from Fairbanks to Anchorage in 12 hours, stopping at Denali National Park. The final 114-mile stretch (the Coastal Classic route) is the

aska

Or Sofies

You don't have to be an intrepid explorer to get a taste of raw wilderness... try boat, train, car or plane most spectacular. After leaving Anchorage, the railway follows the coast, then burrows through backcountry and the Kenai Mountains, winding past blue glaciers, thundering waterfalls and crossing a gorge. The final stop is the harbour town of Seward, where you can search for otters, whales, sea lions, porpoises, bald eagles and puffins on a boat trip around Resurrection Bay.

The narrow-gauge White Pass & Yukon Route Railroad is also stupendous. Linking Skagway with Whitehorse in Canada, it climbs nearly 3,000 feet in just 20 miles and snakes past glaciers, gorges and waterfalls. Built in the 1890s during the Klondike Gold Rush, it's a mind-boggling feat of engineering that required tens of thousands of men and 450 tons of explosives.

EPIC ROAD TRIP

Only 20 per cent of Alaska is accessible by road, but its highways are refreshingly free of billboards, motels and traffic jams. Its most famous road is the Parks Highway, which links Anchorage and Fairbanks. On a clear day, North America's loftiest peak, Mount Denali, is visible from the road. The shorter Seward Highway glides past dramatic coastal scenery. It starts in Anchorage and skirts mountains, lakes, glaciers and bird-rich wetlands. If you don't fancy being behind the wheel, you can take the bus. The Park Connection Motorcoach operates between Anchorage, Denali National Park and Seward in > summer. The 1,500-mile Alaska Highway connects the 49th State with "the Lower 48", after traversing Canada's Yukon and British Columbia.

WALK ON THE WILD SIDE

Alaska's most popular national park is Denali, which is over half the size of Switzerland, and home to grizzlies, moose, lynx, wolves and golden eagles. The awesome centrepiece is the snow-capped 20,310ft Mount Denali, although you're more likely to see a bear: the lonely peak is often blanketed in cloud.

Most visitors explore the park's forest, tundra and glaciers on a bus tour, or stick to its waymarked trails. But the best way to enjoy this untamed landscape is to hike off-trail: join a guided trek if you don't fancy meeting a bear. A more leisurely but expensive option is a scenic flight or helicopter trip. In winter, you can do cross-country skiing, snowshoeing, fatbiking and dog-sledding.

ANCIENT INCA DISCOVERY: MACHU PICCHU AND THE SACRED VALLEY

20 nights* from £3,899pp departing October 2020 to March 2021

Perched on the top of a mountain plateau lies Machu Picchu. No one knows why this aerial citadel was created – maybe it was due to religion, a summer palace or a place to study the stars. However, you'll learn more insights of how this civilisation worked during your fully escorted tour. You'll also discover Cusco and the Sacred Valley where you could uncover more Inca relics in the form of megalithic temples and crumbling ruins.

Flying to Santiago for a two-night hotel stay, you'll embark Westerdam for your South America voyage to Buenos Aires. Highlights include sailing through the Chilean fjords and an overnight stay on board ship in Buenos Aires. In the former, admire glaciers overlooked by snow-dusted mountains and witness them shedding huge crumbs of ice. In the latter, dance your way down La Boca district where bars tinkle out sultry notes and the buildings are decorated with vibrant colours. Cruise code: AME7342

PRICE INCLUDES

- 1-night hotel stay in Lima
- 2-night stay in Cusco with escorted tour of Cusco city & Machu Picchu

Joe Fattorini picks six dream destinations for wine-lovers dappled veranda, you are poured a glass of your new, favourite wine, that you discovered 15 minutes ago. The sun sets as supper is served. Is it any surprise that wine holidays are one of the fastest-growing areas of the tourism industry?

I've visited wine regions on every continent (bar Antarctica, the only one that doesn't produce wine). Wine regions are always gorgeous locations, with beautiful vistas, delicious food, and, well, wine. So which destinations are best?

Wine holidays are a fastgrowing area?

Best for history lovers is Georgia. This former Soviet Republic is the home of wine-making, with an 8,000-year tradition of fermenting grapes. In the capital Tbilisi you'll find specialist wine bars and the most delicious food on earth. The birthplace of wine sits on the Silk Road, bringing together culinary traditions from Asia, Europe and the Middle East.

Closer to home, how about hiring a bike to trundle through the gently rolling hill vineyards of Burgundy? Or taking a river cruise through the teetering cliff vineyards of the hiking through the gorgeous countryside between Siena and Florence in Tuscany?

Rhine Valley? Or

A less exhausting option is the Portuguese city of Porto and the Douro river. Porto is bustling with gastronomic treats – and there are plenty of options for day trips along the imposing beauty of the Douro river, where you'll taste port and the fruity red wines of the region.

Australia is a food- and wine-lover's paradise. With non-stop flights it's now 17 hours away. Head to Margaret River near Perth for farmer's markets, gourmet restaurants and a swathe of Australia's most awarded wineries. I will never forget one foraging trip with an aboriginal guide; we matched wine to sea vegetables and shoreline pickings.

Don't forget we have vineyards on our doorstep, too. It's possible to get from Trafalgar Square to some of Kent's vineyards and wineries in an hour, and to Sussex, Hampshire, Wiltshire, Cornwall in a bit longer. Many local producers also run fabulous restaurants but, best of all, you can visit one of the world's most exciting wine regions – on a day trip.

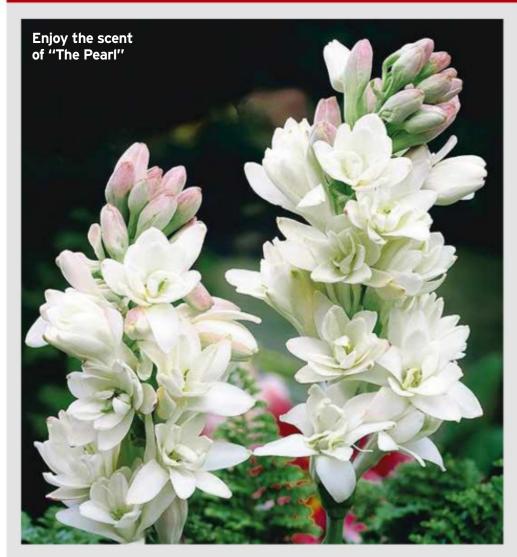

Joe Fattorini is a presenter of The Wine Show on Amazon Prime. The first two series are available now; series three is coming soon

FRAGRANT DOUBLE TUBEROSE

5 for £10 plus p&p* or collection of 30 for £24 plus p&p* – SAVE £36 Why not plant a pot of the most fragrant bulb in the world and enjoy a summer of exquisite heady scents? The tuberose is so popular its fragrance is used in some of our most expensive high-end perfumes. Its foliage is like grass, but its flowers form erect stems laden with masses of creamy-white blooms, which make a lovely, long-lasting cut flower. It thrives in sunny sheltered locations, in well-drained soil. Height 80cm and spread 30cm. Supplied as 8-10cm bulbs in early March.

Dictionary corner Susie Dent

We're all about fools and foolishness this week. Synonyms for "fool" in the OED number over a hundred, and any dialect dictionary will offer many more. They include saddle-goose and buffard from the 1400s, little Witham from the 1500s (apparently after a village whose inhabitants were known for their stupidity) and niddicock and dizzard in the 1600s, leading up to today's nincompoops, wallies and plonkers – plus, of course, many others, especially those that riff on parts of the anatomy.

If all those fools came together and acted in extreme combined idiocy, they could be described as unasinous, a word with only a single quotation in the OED, from 1656, but which is surely due a comeback. It means "united in stupidity", and comes from the Latin unus, "one", and asinus, "ass".

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Mary Beard's naked truth

In Shock of the Nude with Mary Beard (3/10 February BBC2), Professor Beard was both delightfully engaging about the subject of the nude in art, ancient and modern, and utterly engaged herself. It was stimulating to be drawn into her contemplation of the awkward moral, social and artistic questions to which there are no glib answers, but which are so worth confronting.

As for posing herself, what an inspiring example of someone comfortable in herself – motivated not by self-promotion, but by the search for understanding and insight.

SUPERB OMENS

Good Omens (BBC2), starring Michael Sheen and David Tennant, is superb – zany, scary, funny and anarchic. It was doubtless intended for the younger viewer, but we are in our 70s and adore it. Maggie Guillon Moorgreen, Nottinghamshire

...OR PARADISE LOST?

So, the new detective inspector, Neville Parker (Ralf Little), in Death in Paradise is, yet again, a white man. An opportunity missed, I think. Am I alone in thinking that, the excellent commissioner and other officers aside, always making the problem-solving detective genius in charge a white man and his sidekick detective sergeant an attractive young black woman is both racist and sexist?

WATCH AND WEEP

Call the Midwife (9 February BBC1) was, as always, a wonderful episode despite the great sadness it portrayed. I could only watch and weep and feel so grateful for the immunisation now available to our babies - but especially against German measles.

The drama offered a painful insight into the impact of the disease in the days before vaccines. Sandra Horton Solihull

THIS COUNTRY-PHILE

Like Alison Graham, I was gutted to learn that the third series of the supremely funny This Country (Monday BBC1/BBC3/iPlayer) is to be the last. I rank it alongside The Office and Gavin & Stacey - could there be any higher praise? The writing and characterisations are beyond reproach, but special mention must go to the glue holding the whole enterprise together, Paul Chahidi's masterful underplaying of put-upon vicar, the Rev Francis Seaton. Colin Drury Dinas Powys, Vale of Glamorgan

NO LAUGHING MATTER

Oh Sky Atlantic, what were you thinking when you decided the "comedy" of new drama The End (Monday) was what the nation needed? From the opening scenes of a woman trying to kill herself by alcohol/house fire/falling from a window (choose whatever you feel is hilarious), this was a dreadful attempt at gritty humour.

I think they were trying to be too clever with an edgy subject, and failed to deliver. By the end of the first episode I couldn't care less what happened to any of them. Please allow this show to gracefully pass away into the realms of TV mistakes. Jason Barrow Park Street. Hertfordshire

SCOTLAND'S FINEST

Secret Scotland with Susan Calman (Channel 5) is one of the most enjoyable series I've watched, on any channel, in recent months. Please tell me there'll be further series. I record these programmes and save them for times when I need her wonderfully concise, informative and beautifully natural comedic presentation to take me from daily pressures to wonderful scenic Scotland. Go for it, Susan! Margaret Donnelly Dalton-in-Furness, Cumbria

There's no news yet on a third series but we'll keep you posted.

SINGING ENDORSEMENT

A big thank you to 6 Music. My girls bought me an iPod Touch for Christmas and their amazing documentaries, especially The A to Z of Psychedelia and Alan Freeman's The Story of Pop, have helped me with my regime of walking four miles a day in an attempt to remain a healthy 70-year-old. Apologies to anyone walking behind me on the cycle track, though, as I do tend to sing out loud...

WALKS TO REMEMBER

Watching Shanaz Gulzar walk from Bolton Abbey to Simon's Seat in Yorkshire Walks (12 February BBC2; first shown on BBC1 North West) took my breath away. It was without doubt my favourite walk with my late husband Bryan. On one cool day we sat among the rocks at the top sharing a flask of coffee with the odd snowflake drifting down. Memorable! Thank you, BBC, for the pleasure of doing the walk again - albeit from my armchair.

FROCKS & TRUNKS

What an honour to go behind the scenes at the V&A in Secrets of the Museum (Thursday BBC2) and witness the conservators keeping the treasures in tip-top condition. It's like The Repair Shop on steroids!

The first delightful hour (6 February) was crammed with interesting objects and dedicated craftsmen and women, showcasing their skills in such diverse areas as paper conserving, portrait miniatures and vintage clothing. Then we had little Pumpie, an Edwardian home-made toy elephant who was looking every one of his 100-plus years. Textile conservator Jo soon had him spruced up and ready to be enjoyed by a new generation.

It was a visual treat from start to finish.

BRIGHT STAR

What a fantastic actor Kellie Bright is (RT, 15 February). Her portrayal of the alcoholic Linda Carter in EastEnders over the past couple of months has been outstanding. I do hope she'll win an award for her brilliant performance. Liz Allison Oakham, Rutland

I've been watching Coronation Street (ITV) since I was a little girl and I'm now nearly 60, so I've been hanging on in there through the good and bad times! Of late I've moaned about storylines that have ranged from violent to downright daft. But after watching the 10,000th episode (7 February), I have to commend the writers for the way they transported us back to the good old days.

The older characters like Rita and Ken were given centre stage and it brought me to tears in the final few minutes watching Rita reminiscing while she looked at old photos in the Rovers and we heard the familiar voices of Annie Walker, Bet Lynch, Elsie Tanner and Hilda Ogden... Fabulous!
Lesley Rooke Lincoln

...In reply to the question posed in Feedback (15 February) about the abuse storyline, in my opinion it certainly does have a purpose, although it has been too long-drawn-out. Having got out of an abusive relationship myself and gone through lots of therapy, time did heal, but I have felt dragged back into it with this prolonged storyline. As a huge Corrie fan, I don't switch off, but I do turn down the sound when Geoff and Yasmeen are on screen.

BBC NEWS HOUNDS

Among the fine foreign correspondents on BBC radio and television, Quentin Sommerville's reports from Syria are always incisive and he never shies away from asking the direct question of those who've been involved in terrorism, such as on 4 February (Radio 4) when he interviewed an Indonesian man imprisoned in Syria after moving his family there, lured by the promise of free food, lodging and income in return for fighting with Isis.

It brings to mind another of my favourite correspondents, who seems to have been absent from Radio 4 recently. Where is Hugh Sykes these days? His insight, his ability to relate to his interviewees and his conversational style mean he's always a joy to listen to. Marion Seymour

Telford, Shropshire

Jonathan Munro, head of BBC Newsgathering, tells RT: "We're really pleased that your reader is finding Quentin's reporting from Syria so insightful – he's a fantastic journalist who helps our audiences make sense of the complex conflicts across the Middle East. You'll also be pleased to know that Hugh Sykes remains a reporter with Radio 4's PM."

...As the BBC is reducing its news staff, I hope they won't break up the partnership of Katty Kay and Christian Fraser on Beyond 100 Days (BBC News). Their on-screen chemistry and brilliant analysis of the US political scene will be even more essential in the run-up to the presidential election.

Will the BBC celebrate Tom and Jerry?

Feedback

Tom and Jerry recently turned 80. Will the BBC be doing a retrospective? Years ago, Tom and Jerry cartoons were shown regularly - but it seems they're not shown now because of the on-screen violence.

Mike Bickley, Birmingham Sorry to disappoint you, but the BBC have nothing planned. Warner Bros hold all the rights, and for decades BBC1 used to broadcast these cartoon shorts or use them as a filler if there was a technical hiccup; Tom and Jerry's vicious battles and rivalry are woven into the childhood memories of many of us. But the last time the warring cat and mouse appeared on the BBC was in 2014, raising money for Children in Need in a animated segment that featured BBC shows from Strictly to EastEnders (find it on YouTube).

The original cartoon was dreamt up by William Hanna and Joseph Barbera, and hand-drawn at the MGM studios in Hollywood (more recent versions are animated on computer). The very first short released, Puss Gets the Boot in 1940, was Oscar-nominated, and Tom and Jerry's appeal over the years since has endured. It is still watched worldwide, and in 2015, research by YouGov named Tom and Jerry as the most popular animation in the UK among over-18s, beating both The Simpsons and Family Guy.

ow to the question of whether the violent altercations between the pair are just harmless fun, or are too disturbing for today's sensibilities. Certain episodes featuring offensive racial caricatures aren't usually streamed today, but Amazon Prime Video has 60 episodes available, dating from the 1940s to the 60s, and children's channel Boomerang shows them, too. There are Tom and Jerry cartoons on Warner Bros' children's channels on YouTube and they have a live-action film version planned for release just before Christmas.

BBC News online journalist Kelly-Leigh Cooper has written a fascinating history of Tom and Jerry at 80. She tells RT: "I've been overwhelmed with the response of readers around the world getting in touch with their memories of Tom and Jerry. The show's plot is timeless and its slapstick humour remains funny at all ages. It's clear that Tom and Jerry transcends cultural and national boundaries, even after all these years."

Having read the interview with The Pale Horse star Rufus Sewell (RT, 8 February) and noted his preference for character parts, I'm surprised there was no mention of his turn as the fabulous Seth Starkadder in the BBC film of Cold Comfort Farm (1995). I remember watching it with my sister, both of us helpless with laughter as he spoke his lines (to Kate Beckinsale, equally brilliant as Flora): "Be them knickers you're sewin'?" and "You women – always fussin' over your fal-lals... Temptin' me..." lines we repeat to this day!

Carol Hunt Kingston upon Thames, south-west London

HANKY PANKY

I noticed in the first episode of The Pale Horse (9 February BBC1) that the white handkerchief of Mark Easterbrook (Rufus Sewell), which had been in his left breast pocket, switched to the right then back to the left during his time in the woods... JON RICHARDSON AND LUCY BEAUMONT

'She cheats on me'

The real-life comedy couple are sneaky when it comes to First Dates

What's the view from your marital sofa?

JON We can see the wood-burning stove, which is too small. LUCY Which I said it would be, but he wanted to get the cheaper one. We've only ever had it on once. JON Last Christmas, Lucy put candles on top of the stove, and wax melted all across the floor. So what you can see from our sofa is loads of wax and logs, a TV and a threeseater sofa. We sit at either end because the marriage is going fine.

We hardly dare ask how you decide what to watch...

LUCY That's one thing we agree on. We like First Dates, Gogglebox and a good Scandi drama. JON But it has to wait until we've finished eating our tea on our laps, because you can't watch subtitles while eating. By the time we've put our daughter [Elsie, three] to bed and had our tea, we've got about 17 minutes, so you can't really get into a

What do you watch alone?

LUCY When Jon's away I end up watching things like Women Who Kill or Women Behind Bars. JON She constantly cheats on me when I'm away. She watches First Dates without me. LUCY I do. And then I lie about it.

Why do you love First Dates?

JON At the start we go, "These are the worst people, I hope they have an awful time," and then they reveal some past trauma, and we realise they're lovely and we're the awful, judgemental ones.

Do you watch the news?

LUCY I'm still so pleased we've got Channel 4 News. JON I don't, really. Since we had our daughter, everything's become unremittingly bleak, both politically and environmentally. A child is an excuse to be a bit selfish for a while and worry only about her.

LUCY If we were thinking about having a child now, I honestly think I might not have one, because I'd be so anxious about what they might see in their lifetime. Sorry, it's gone really dark.

To lighten the mood do you watch comedy?

JON I love it. I still feel more like a fan than a comedian. I grew up on The Fast Show, Harry Hill, Bottom and The League of Gentlemen.

What do you watch as a family?

JON: The kids' telly we watch works on an adult level. There's a reason why a lot of them are voiced by comedians. But our daughter definitely gets ruder as she watches TV. Peppa Pig taught her to say no.

The two of you have made a sitcom. What's it like living and working together?

LUCY It's really hard. Sometimes I question why I'm doing it. There are nice moments, but you have to go through a lot of s to get to them.

JON It was quite intense for Lucy to write for both of us. But the filming was really good fun. What we found was, arguing for eight hours a day on camera leaves you with nothing left to argue about when you get home.

What's the last thing you do at night?

JON Lucy will go to bed and read for half an hour. I'll stay downstairs and drink myself into oblivion. Two different approaches to getting to sleep. EMMA COX

Jon and Lucy's new sitcom Meet the Richardsons starts on Dave on Thursday at 10pm
