NICOLA WALKER

‘I’ve just binged Dracula over a couple of nights and really enjoyed it,’ says the star of The Split. ‘I do watch a lot of telly – Top Boy last year was great – but sometimes I’m flicking through channels and come across episodes of Spooks when I’m very young. It’s quite disorientating...’

JAY BLADES

‘I like watching people who do things differently,’ says the Repair Shop host. ‘I want another series of the dating show Hot Property on BBC3. The guy who presents it is called Yung Philly, and his energy is fantastic. He reminds of me how I wanted to be when I was young but I was too shy to be that courageous. He’s a really cool guy.’

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

Steve McQueen was on the guestlist for a dinner hosted by celebrity hair stylist Jay Sebring at 10050 Cielo Drive, Los Angeles on 9 August 1969, but his attention was diverted by a young woman, and he never showed up. That night, members of the Charles Manson “Family” broke into Sebring’s house and murdered all of the guests, including actress Sharon Tate. It later emerged McQueen was on a Manson death list.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

OLD MAN RIVER

TV presenter George McGavin, whose tussle with skin cancer was documented in a BBC4 film last year, is enjoying life. "I have got a renewed sense of purpose," he tells me. A Year to Save My Life showed McGavin exploring potential treatments for his stage three melanoma. He believes his life was saved by a new drug therapy, but adds a cautionary note: "While recent scans have shown there's no disease evident, I'm being told to carry on taking the drugs." Unperturbed, McGavin has been busy making a new BBC4 documentary looking at the state of our rivers and oceans. He reports: "The Thames is awash with antidepressants, cocaine, hormones... the fish must be completely pain-free and high as kites."

VIEWERS RALLY ROUND VICTORIA

The campaign to save BBC2's Victoria Derbyshire show from the chop gains momentum, with over 700 complaints submitted and a petition calling for its reprieve signed by 70,000 people. The BBC, though, continues to offer no guidance on when that axe might fall, save confirming the plan remains for it to end "later in the year".

DAVID'S GLOBAL VISION

Could Sir David Attenborough's star shine any brighter? Tickets for the Albert Hall premiere of his latest film, A Life on Our Planet, sold out within minutes of going on sale, and more than 600 cinemas around the country have signed up to simultaneously screen it. It will also be shown live in the Netherlands, Iceland, Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland, and the following day in Australia and New Zealand. "It's my witness statement, my vision for the future," he says. The screening is on 16 April; it airs on Netflix soon after.

CHRIS'S WILDLIFE REBELLION

A key theme of Attenborough's documentary is how reversing the loss of biodiversity can save the planet. He has an ally in Chris Packham who, with stepdaughter Megan McCubbin, is launching a new campaign about that very subject called Wildlife Rebellion. They have the controversial HS2 firmly in their sights. "It won't be carbon neutral for 100 years. It'll damage 700 sensitive wildlife sites, just in the south part. We have to keep challenging people to think and encouraging them to change their minds." TERRY PAYNE

No 1 Lady detective

Television's first female Victorian detective will be solving her debut mystery soon when period crime drama Miss Scarlet and the Duke arrives on Alibi.

"I guess I am the first, I'm not aware of any others. But that's the lovely thing about this show: it feels like it's been waiting to be written," says star Kate Phillips. "It's fantastic to watch a woman in a man's world trying to muscle her way through and carve out a career for herself against the odds. At every stage, she faces people who underestimate her and don't expect her to succeed."

The opening episode sees our heroine Eliza Scarlet assume control of her late father's detective agency, something that also gives Phillips top billing after three years spent in a supporting role on the BBC's Peaky Blinders, where she plays Arthur's ex-wife Linda.

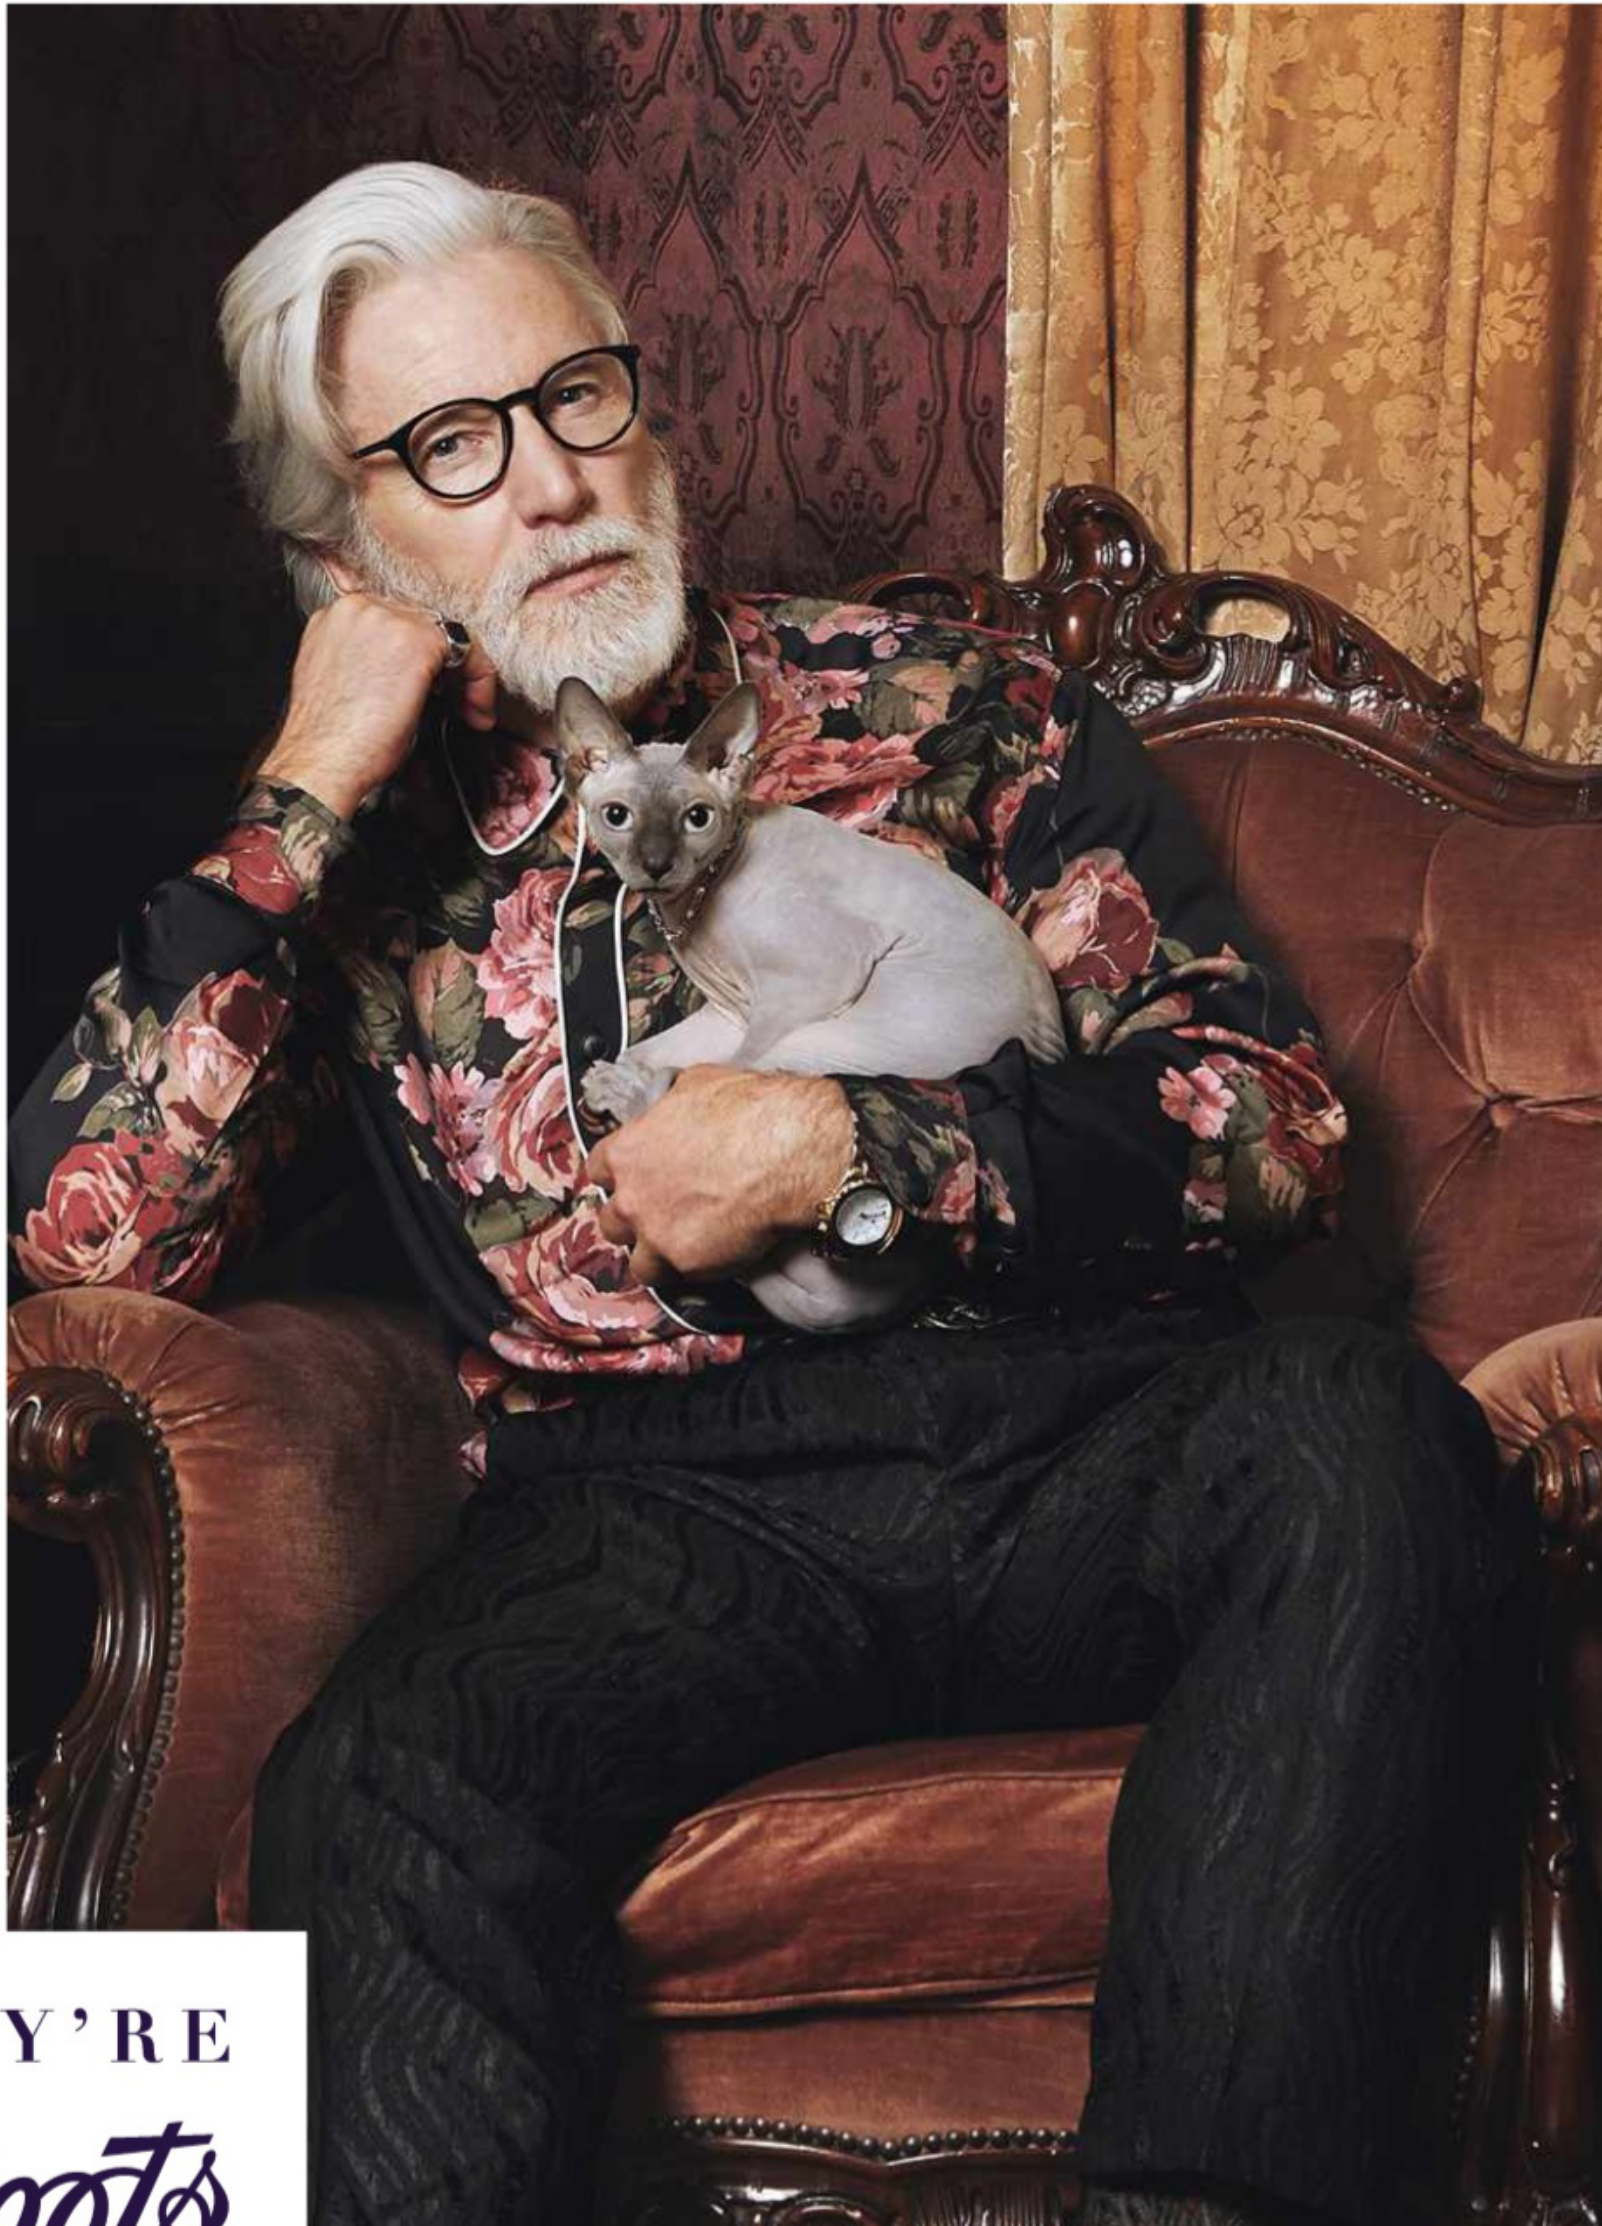

"I've relished every second of it," she adds. "It's been so rewarding to be an element of every part of the plotline."

Miss Scarlet opens her casebook in the coming weeks. DAVID BROWN

Grow up, Facebook

Social media giants can safeguard free speech by being more responsible

IHAVE NO DOUBT that the world would be a more pleasant place if we tried not to be offensive. Twitter and Facebook would certainly be more pleasant places. But I'm also in no doubt that we must defend our right to be offensive, and it's that right which now seems to me to be increasingly at risk.

Freedom only to speak inoffensively is not worth having. So why, after nearly 50 years as a journalist and broadcaster, am I increasingly worried that speaking inoffensively may soon be all that we are allowed to do?

While researching my new series The Compass: the Future of Free Speech, I met Gérard Biard, editor-in-chief of the French satirical magazine

'Freedom only to speak inoffensively is not worth having'

Charlie Hebdo, which was attacked in 2015 by two jihadi gunmen who shot dead 12 people, including several of its best-known cartoonists. He now has a round-the-clock bodyguard and operates from an office at an undisclosed address.

Biard says that since the explosion of social media sites, many have come to regard their own feelings as more important than the law. Narcissism rules. Instead of free expression, they demand censorship. Instead of testing ideas, they post selfies. The courts can insist until they are blue in the face that the law upholds the right to offend, but many people, including those jihadis, insist instead on their right not to be offended. (Charlie Hebdo had published cartoons mocking the Muslim prophet Muhammad.)

If you spend as much time on Facebook or Twitter as I do, it's easy to conclude that free speech is a mixed blessing. No wonder, you might think, that the Government now proposes to put media regulator Ofcom in charge of making sure that social media sites do more to protect their users from "harmful" content.

Yes, there is plenty of foul stuff online. Yes, it can do real harm. So can the nutty conspiracy theories that swirl about in the deeper recesses of the internet. Even so, I think there's real cause for concern if a state regulator is to be given the power to decree what is "harmful" and what is not.

Back in 1968, an anti-Vietnam War protester walked into the Los Angeles County Courthouse wearing a jacket emblazoned with the slogan "F the Draft". He was arrested, but the case ended up in the US Supreme Court, which ruled that his arrest had contravened his First Amendment right to free speech. In the words of Justice John Marshall Harlan II, if the arrest were deemed to be lawful, "government might soon seize upon the censorship of particular words as a convenient guise for banning the expression of unpopular views". So three cheers for the US Supreme Court.

I accept the need for laws that ban the incitement of hatred or violence. But I'm pleased that just last month, Harry Miller won his case against Humber-side Police, who'd warned him against posting allegedly transphobic comments on Twitter that, though they broke no law, the police chose to classify as "hate incidents".

WE NEED TO recognise that one of the prices of living in a democracy is that sometimes we'll be shocked. We also need to encourage Mark Zuckerberg of Facebook and others to grow up and take responsibility for the monsters they've created.

In Washington, the law professor Stephen Wermiel told me that the previously accepted bargain – you put up with stuff that you don't like in order to uphold free speech – is a bargain that more and more people are now not prepared to accept. I think that is a very dangerous development. And so would George Orwell, whose warning is inscribed on the wall of the BBC's London HQ: "If liberty means anything at all, it means the right to tell people what they do not want to hear."

Robin Lustig presented The World Tonight on Radio 4 until 2012. The Compass: the Future of Free Speech begins on BBC World Service on Wednesday at 1.30pm

WHAT WE WATCHED

Doctor Who's imminent return was being hyped ahead of its transmission in May, with an on-set report from Vancouver revealing that Paul McGann had been signed up for five years. "The magnitude of what I have taken on is still only really dawning on me," said the actor. Unfortunately, this TV movie outing for the Time Lord received disappointing ratings in the US and it would be another nine years before the series returned. Proving to be more of a runaway hit was The X-Files: BBC2 was giving viewers another chance to see the first series, hence the crib sheet being provided on Mulder and Scully's cases thus far.

WHAT YOU SAID

It had been an especially rowdy year at the Brit Awards but readers weren't happy that ITV had made cuts when the event was screened the night after it was staged. "Surely Pulp's Jarvis Cocker and his reported disruption of the Michael Jackson extravaganza was worthy of some coverage, if only to enliven a sanitised and heavily edited broadcast," said David DeSilva of Bucks. "Where were Oasis's Gallagher brothers' increasingly incoherent speeches of acceptance?"

We can only assume that bad language bleepers weren't as sophisticated back in the mid-1990s. DAVID BROWN

The new Downton

Julian Fellowes introduces his latest drama about class, politics and sex, set in the poshest part of Victorian London

WHEN JULIAN FELLOWES began writing a novel about high society in 19th-century London, he had an inkling that it might end up on television. It was 2015 after all, and he had just finished writing the final season of Downton Abbey – at the time the biggest show on TV.

“By then, most of my writing was for stage or screen so I suppose, in a way, I had half-written the book, hoping it would end up on the screen,” he says now. Belgravia came out in online instalments, each of which worked perfectly as a potential episode – it was basically a TV series waiting to be made.

And now it has been, with Fellowes adapting his own book into a six-part series for ITV. Belgravia tells the story of the Trenchards, a nouveau-riche family headed by James (Philip Glenister), who has made his fortune supplying the Army during the Napoleonic Wars and has returned to London and moved into construction.

He’s been working with famous architects the Cubitt brothers, and Belgravia is his crowning glory, a white-stuccoed wonderland for the rich. But the moneyed men who buy his houses are less welcoming of types like Trenchard and his family, who live alongside them behind the porticoed doors of London’s newest exclusive des res.

“I’m always very interested in social change,” says Fellowes, “and the early 19th century after the Napoleonic Wars was a period of tremendous expansion. Fortunes were made, and that put the old guard, the aristocracy that had ruled England throughout the 18th century, firmly on the back foot.”

Belgravia explores what happened when old money and new all collided in the elegant terraces surrounding London’s smartest square. BENJI WILSON

MEET THE TRENCHARDS

Philip Glenister JAMES TRENCHARD

Tell us about James Trenchard...

He's the son of a market trader, who's worked his way up, so he's a self-made man. One of the themes of Belgravia is the beginnings of the nouveau riche and he fits into that bracket.

Anyone in the modern day who inspired you?

He's a cross between Donald Trump and Del Boy. He'll go to the opening of an envelope and sometimes makes a total fool of himself. What I love is his ambition. Without Victorians like James Trenchard, we wouldn't have a lot of the incredible infrastructure that we have today and take for granted.

Did you have the opportunity to discuss the character with the writer Julian Fellowes?

We had dinner with him before we started shooting. He's very unassuming. We thought we'd get some decent wine, but he told us he drinks any old plonk.

Do you enjoy donning a top hat and whiskers?

It's fun because it gives you a different gait and makes you stand taller, but it always amazes me when I look in the mirror and see how fat I look. My excuse is that they've aged me.

Have you played many aristocrats over the years?

No, this is as high as I go. When I say I'm doing this, friends of mine immediately presume I'm going to be below stairs. Watch this space – I might get to play a viscount in ten years' time.

How posh are you?

I'm not posh. When I was at drama school, ▷

◁ we all had to sit in a circle and guess where everybody was from. When they got to me, everybody went “London suburb”. I’ve never been so insulted in all my life.

But it’s true?

Yeah, I’m just a suburban boy from Harrow in north-west London.

Didn’t your father, John Glenister, direct costume dramas?

He did. He became known as Mr Costume Drama back in the 70s. The most prominent ones were The Six Wives of Henry VIII, Casanova and Marie Curie with Jane Lapotaire and Nigel Hawthorne.

What’s the perennial appeal of costume dramas?

I’m sure there’s an element of escapism – the lavishness of a bygone period. With everything going on at the moment, our industry has a responsibility to keep people a bit cheerful while telling some truths.

There were six series of Downton. Would you be up for another five series of Belgravia?

Absolutely. At my age, you take what you can get. When I first started, I never wanted to do more than two series. You get to your mid-50s and you’re like: “Can we just do it as a soap?”

‘I’ve got three petticoats on – you can’t breathe’

TAM SIN GREIG

Tamsin Greig ANNE TRENCHARD

Tell us about Anne Trenchard...

She’s the daughter of a schoolmaster and is probably more educated than most women, but she’s married the son of a tradesman. I think she’s swept along by his ebullience and then realises that it’s his ambition that drives him, which she’s not so keen on.

Being in Julian Fellowes’s new drama, do you feel the weight of expectation?

I’m trying to not think of it as “the next Downton” because it’s just too much pressure. This is a different story and it happens to have been penned by the same writer. Of course, people will want to compare, but Downton was its own thing.

What appealed to you about the role?

Julian knows how to spin a yarn. He’s very good at relationships and teasing out deeply human elements of historical stories. He’s put two strong women at the centre, who are fighting for position. That struggle with power and identity is very human. What’s interesting about the Trenchards is they’re Mr and Mrs – not Lord and Lady – so they’re more identifiable. They’re the middle classes. That’s what was really changing in that century: new money was coming up and it was challenging for the elite. We’re embodying the person who is thinking on their feet. I think people will relate to that.

Did you enjoy squeezing into corsets?

It creates a great silhouette, but physically it’s not much fun. When you’ve been in it for three months, you get used to what you can and can’t do. These women were passing out all the time because there’s not enough oxygen getting in and carbon dioxide getting out.

Can corsets tell us anything about the role of women in the 1800s?

Bizarrely, as they go through that century of incredible political and social change with the rise of the middle-classes and the Industrial Revolution, women agree to be more constrained. The corsets come in and in, and the petticoats get heavier and heavier. I’ve got three petticoats on, so you can’t breathe and then you’re wearing pounds and pounds on your hips all the time.

What kind of lives did middle-class women like Anne lead in the mid 1800s?

Before the Industrial Revolution, businesses were often based at home and women would have a part in them. But with James Trenchard becoming more established, you get a division of the family – the men go out to work and the women are at home ruling this little kingdom. And then there’s the cult of beauty: women had to look beautiful.

Do you ever worry about making faux pas in social situations?

I’m probably the person who speaks out of turn or mucks about when it’s inappropriate because I see the silliness of it all. I do lie in bed a lot thinking, “I’d better text that person and tell them I was taking the p.” ▷

‘The tectonic plates of society were shifting’

‘He’ll never get through the glass ceiling’

Richard Goulding OLIVER TRENCHARD

Tell us about Oliver Trenchard...

He’s been born into a world of privilege, but there’s a glass ceiling of social rank that he’ll never get through because he’s not landed or titled. His father’s from humble beginnings and his son has completely different expectations, so there’s a generational tussle.

What makes the 1840s such a significant time for these characters?

It’s an intriguing period. In 1832, there was the Great Reform Act, which was the first chink in the armour of the old aristocratic hold on Parliament. It allowed men who had property and money to vote, so it opened the door, but not the floodgates – the majority of working-class men and women still had no vote. It’s a time where the tectonic plates of society were beginning to shift a little.

You’ve played Prince Harry in both The Windsors and King Charles III. Are you a real redhead?

It’s all fake. When we took King Charles III to Broadway, I had bright orange hair and I got mistaken for Ed Sheeran in a coffee shop. That was a new one on me.

You went blonde to play Boris Johnson in Brexit: the Uncivil War. Would you step into the PM’s shoes again?

I was surprised to be cast because I’m a bit young to play him. I’m not sure I’d be in the running for a biopic – which is quite a relief.

Would you like to be cast as a working-class geezer for a change?

I think I’ve shot myself in the foot on that one. I’ll be forever associated with Prince Harry. By the way, I’m not actually posh. I’m middle-class. I went to a very old boys’ boarding school, but it wasn’t anything like Eton. But my parents come from relatively humble backgrounds and have never been wealthy.

Class is crucial to all Julian Fellowes dramas – any other universal themes?

Belgravia is also about people falling in love with the wrong person and wanting to have sex with someone they can’t – Romeo and Juliet stuff.

Have you ever fallen for someone your family didn’t approve of?

When I was 16, I thought I was madly in love with my girlfriend and my grandmother took a strong dislike and had stern words. She referred to her as “that girl”. My grandmother was a wonderful woman, but a terrible snob.

This is bound to be compared to Downton Abbey. Did you find that daunting?

No, because it’s the happiest, most relaxed set I’ve ever been on. I thought it might be a very tense, precious, difficult place where expectations are very high. I think expectations are very high, but the atmosphere couldn’t be better.

‘High society was a career for women then’

Alice Eve SUSAN TRENCHARD

Tell us about Susan Trenchard...

Her husband [Oliver] keeps calling her barren, but she has a hunch she’s fertile. Then along comes this chap who is very front-footed in his pursuit...

Have you ever fallen for someone you shouldn’t, as Susan does?

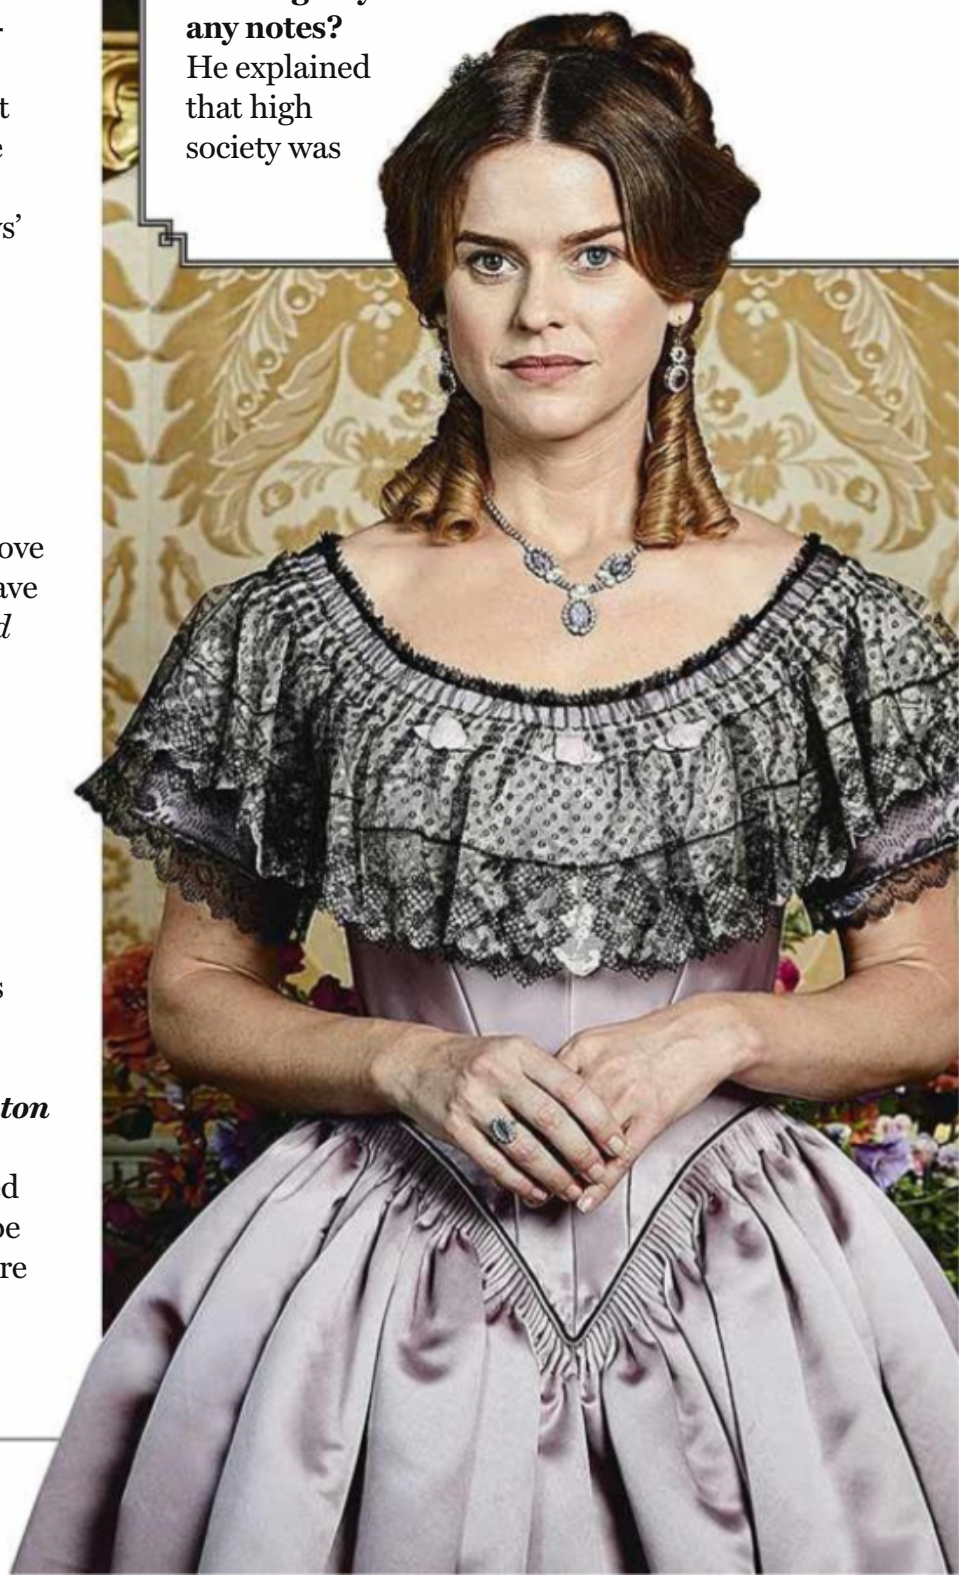

Of course. I used to like bad boys. My dad [actor Trevor Eve] would tell me clearly if he didn’t approve. I’d tell him clearly back what I thought.

Did you jump at the chance to be in a Julian Fellowes drama?

Yes, I turn to certain films when I’m jetlagged and in a strange country, and one of them is Gosford Park. I also like watching things like Big Little Lies and Keeping Up with the Kardashians that take me out of my world but into another feminist space, and he’s created some really interesting feminist spaces in this, so that appealed to me.

Did he give you any notes?

He explained that high society was a career for women back then, and managing male energy was a career. If they didn't do it right, they were cast out of society, so the stakes were very high, which really made sense of Susan's life to me. He's really good at writing for women and giving layers to the character, and that's wonderful to play.

LIVE ON STAGE!

Do you consider yourself posh?

I was at Westminster School and Oxford, which means I'm educated well enough to know that class means nothing. It's the people that matter.

Do you enjoy wearing a corset and having an elaborate hairdo?

I love all things beauty. My hairdresser Jess and I took my hair very seriously. It takes an hour and half in the morning and it's a combination of real and fake hair. We had a lot of fun designing it.

How else did you prepare?

I watched loads of documentaries on Queen Victoria and that period. In the 19th century, there was such restriction that everything became erotic. They had to cover everything that looked phallic – even piano legs. A look to the left or a fan in the right hand meant “I'm willing”. Everything was signed and very clear.

‘I was in a very dark place’

Today, The Repair Shop’s Jay Blades is living the dream, but five years ago he was homeless and close to ending it all

INTERVIEW BY KATE BATTERSBY

LIFE, JAY BLADES agrees, doesn’t get much better than this. The BBC’s sleeper hit The Repair Shop, in which a team of craftspeople restore beloved family treasures, is about to graduate from its afternoon slot on BBC2 to 8pm peak-time status on BBC1. Blades, the presenter of the show and the nation’s most-celebrated furniture restorer, has just turned 50 and he marked the February milestone with a gathering of family and friends from every stage of his life.

“My party was really emotional,” he says. “There were lots of speeches by people from when I was born right up to The Repair Shop. It was great. Fifty is cool – it’s the new 20.”

Yet just five years ago, after the breakdown of his marriage and the collapse of the youth charity he had founded, Blades was homeless, sleeping in his car and close to taking his own life.

“I felt helpless, vulnerable, really scared and totally alone,” he recalls. “For many years I had been the strong person for everyone else. The embarrassment of everything collapsing made it impossible for me to ask for help. Where I was brought up [in east London], showing vulnerability wasn’t done as a man. It made you a victim. For men of a certain era, at times like that, all you want is to be left alone, when that’s the last thing you need. If it had continued for 24 hours more, I don’t think I would be talking to you now.”

Blades’s entire life story has recurring themes of seriously challenging circumstances alongside a profound sense of good fortune that people were there for him at the times when he needed them most. Born in Hackney to West Indian parents, he and his younger brother were raised by his mother. Blades didn’t meet his father until he was 21. “And by 22 I thought, ‘No thank you.’”

“As a kid, there was no money around,” he says. “Second-hand was brand new to me. My mum was incredibly resourceful and there were loads of aunts and uncles around who helped. Me and my brother were always making and repairing things – what people call upcycling now. But at school I was a shy kid, very quiet and reserved.”

Undiagnosed dyslexia was a big part of that. It went unrecognised until Blades went to university at 29, but he believes that in a sense his dyslexia helped him to learn other communication skills, most especially the power of talking. At the time, however, school was tough.

“I went to a predominantly white secondary school and experienced a lot of hate and racism,” he says. “They would racially abuse me, spit on me, throw stuff at me, trip me up, smash my books up. I had to defend myself against bullies a lot. There were also a lot of drugs in Hackney, but when I saw people strung out, it just taught me they were messed up and I didn’t want to do that.”

After leaving school at 16, he and a longtime mate called Johnathan Joseph began putting on DJ sets and fashion shows. That mate is now better known as DJ Spooky, and the two remain close friends, chewing over the old times at Blades’s 50th. “We blagged clothes from all over the place to put on a fashion show,” remembers Blades, whose personal style is part of his professional signature now. “I had a sense of the visual even then.”

For a long while the simple matter of making a living took precedence. He worked in a sausage factory, a peanut-packing factory and as a labourer, before taking a degree course, studying Criminology and Philosophy at Buckinghamshire New University. It was there he met his future wife, Jade, and became involved in community work, eventually leading him to start a charity called Out of the Dark, where he taught disadvantaged young people to repair and restore old furniture. Meanwhile, he was also making and selling pieces he’d created himself.

He hosted workshops, one of which ▷

UPCYCLING

◁ was attended by Kirstie Allsopp's assistant, which led to his TV debut in 2014 on Kirstie's Handmade Christmas, where Blades demonstrated how to make an alternative Christmas tree from driftwood. Soon after, he shot the pilot for the BBC's Money for Nothing, in which pieces of dumped household furniture are transformed into items of value. But months later, funding for his charity collapsed, coinciding with the breakdown of his marriage.

"I needed to get away – the pressure of everything was too much," recalls Blades. "I left the family home, gave the house to my ex-wife and just drove. I didn't know where I was going. I slept in my old estate car for three or four days. I was in a really dark place."

'I left the family home and slept in my old car'

He didn't realise that Jade had been so alarmed by his disappearance, he'd been posted as missing. Police found him in Wolverhampton. When Jade was told, she contacted local fashion designer Gerald Bailey, to whom Blades had sold a piece of furniture a few years earlier.

"He gave me some money for food and clothes, and allowed me to cry in front of him," says Blades. "He let me use a warehouse for my arty-farty stuff [his furniture-making]. It took me six months to get back up. Learning to ask for, and receive, help was crucial. I felt reborn."

Life began coming back together. With Bailey's help, Blades established Jay & Co, his furniture restoration business in Wolverhampton, where he still lives. He met his partner of the past four years ("she doesn't want her name published, but she's great"), and Money for Nothing took off as a daytime series.

Three years ago saw the start of The Repair Shop, filmed in a barn at the Weald and Downland Living Museum in West Sussex, where immense expertise is invested into the restoration of broken items, many of which have no market worth and all of which are near-priceless to their owner. Devotees of the show include Stephen Fry, Richard Osman, Kathy Burke and Greg James, and Blades isn't a bit surprised that it's won both ratings and awards.

"Truthfully, I did always think it would become as popular as it has," he smiles. "On the first day of shooting, I told the director how special it was. We live in a society where there isn't much kindness. There are those competition shows where people make fun of others, but on ours we're a community helping someone we don't know to mend something they cherish, because we can. That naivety in the making of the show is a key part of it. Awards will keep coming to us because the show is beautiful to film and to watch, and the show will keep going as long as we remember who we are. We feel totally honoured that the audience has been so vocal about moving it to peaktime."

Equally important to Blades, he has established a good relationship with Jade, and sees their 13-year-old daughter Zola often, along with his sons Levi, 29, and Dior, 25, from earlier relationships.

"I was a dad at 20, when I wasn't ready for the responsibility," he muses. "But it was good. I get on well with them all, and they like it that I'm still the same even though I'm on telly."

IT ISN'T A great leap to observe the human parallel between Blades's work and the changes in his life since that night in the "dark place" five years ago – he was broken, and has been saved through loving care.

"I totally agree with you," he says. "It's so difficult to get yourself out of that dark place on your own, as a man. Other people helped me. That's why what I want from my TV work is to be the Jamie Oliver of furniture – I want to say to people from the poorer parts of town, 'You can do something beyond sport, music or crime'. You can do a craft, or anything you want.

For me, it's not about being famous. I don't even know if I am. But I enjoy life now. I have the best time because of the people around me. And I'm so grateful."

MEET THE REPAIRERS

How did they acquire their remarkable skills?

SUZIE FLETCHER

"I can vividly recall from a very young age making saddles and bridles for my rocking horse and now I specialise in designing saddles for women. I lived in the US for many years, but after the loss of my husband I decided to return to the UK. My brother Steve (below) told me he was involved in this new BBC TV show and I jokingly said, 'If they need anyone to do leather, I'm your gal.' It's helped me through some very dark days."

STEVE FLETCHER

"I've been repairing and restoring clocks for more than 45 years and although I know an awful lot about them, I'm still learning. I run a clock and watch repair business where we have seven clockmakers and two watchmakers, including my son and one of my daughters."

KIRSTEN RAMSAY

"I started my career in ceramics almost 30 years ago. Ceramics come from all over the world and sometimes it's possible to see the human marks made by the hand of the maker. That connection to the past still gives me an unbelievable buzz."

BRENTON WEST

"I was 'arty' at school, which led to me doing a degree in silversmithing. It gave me the ability to shape, make and repair metal and other materials. As well as gold and silver, I've worked on racing and classic cars, but silversmithing is my most enduring skill as I've been doing it for more than 40 years."

AMANDA MIDDLEDITCH & JULIE TATCHELL

"Amanda and I work as a team," says soft toy restorer Julie Tatchell (below, right). "We always have done. A lot of our work is artistic as well as being a historic thing and I think, in our case, two is better than one. We can't imagine ever not working together."

MANDY, IS THAT the sun on your arm?" says Neil Morrissey, gently nudging his co-star's arm into the shade. It's been a long day filming on the set of The Good Karma Hospital, and as the sun sets on another warm Sri Lankan evening, Morrissey and Amanda Redman are enjoying a chilled glass of white wine and talking about the relationship they've developed while working together on the show, which returns this week for a third series.

"That is a prime example," Redman smiles, pulling a shawl over the scars she got when a pot of hot soup accidentally spilt on her as a baby, and which she wears with pride. "Seriously. It started blistering a few weeks ago because the heat was so bad. So he's very aware of that. Thank you, darling."

She's most familiar as the cop who marshalled a team of grumpy old blokes in New Tricks, while he's a man best known for behaving badly. In The Good Karma Hospital – set in India, but filmed in Sri Lanka – she is Lydia, who runs the hospital, and Morrissey is Greg, owner of a beach bar. They've formed an unlikely but beautiful relationship – on and off screen.

"The drama was pretty much written for Amanda," says 57-year-old Morrissey. "I walked into the audition and went, 'Galle barman. Amanda Redman's love interest. Who else?!' That might sound arrogant but it was just to get their attention. I'm normally really nervous when I go into auditions. But I thought, 'I love this so much, I've got to go in confident.'

‘My teacher said, “Don't let Neil become an actor”’

NEIL MORRISSEY

"And it's been such a great working relationship. It was a relief because I'd have probably been fired if we hadn't got on so well. We'd have got to episode five and it would have been like, 'Shame about that car crash. I'm really upset about Greg.'"

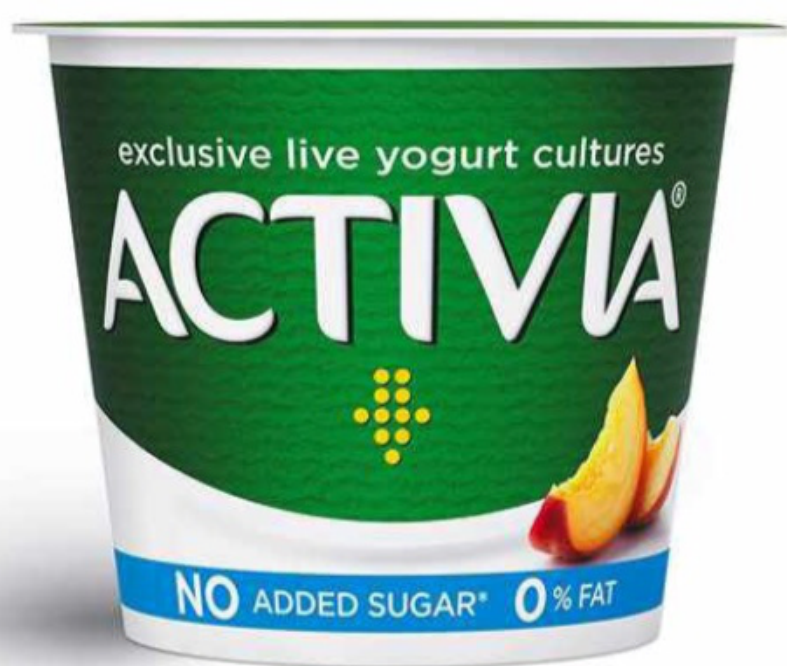

"The thing is, you've got to have that chemistry on screen," says Redman. "And not just between a man and a woman, but for instance between you and Martin [Clunes, Morrissey's co-star in Men Behaving Badly], or myself and the boys on New Tricks. You can always tell when there's chemistry."

There's a warmth between the two that transcends the tropical Sri Lankan climate, and translates on to the screen beautifully; despite a rocky start, Lydia and Greg are now happily co-habiting in a villa overlooking the paddy fields. Does their close friendship off screen ever make more intimate scenes tricky?

"Well we're too old to be doing full-on scenes," laughs Redman. "Nobody needs to tell Greg and Lydia to 'Get a room,'" adds Morrissey, with a wink, "but everyone knows they've got one and they use it."

"And you know what, that's rare," says Redman, 62, changing the tone of the conversation in an instant, as she's prone to do when a subject she feels passionately about comes up. "On telly. It really is. ▽

◁ I was thinking about the fact that the Americans seem less frightened of intimacy between older couples. I'm watching Madam Secretary, and the two leads are in their late 50s and have a really healthy sexual relationship. And it's not repulsive. We in Britain tend to shy away from that. There's ageism involved there.

"And – I'm going to get on my soapbox here – I believe that exists in this industry in our country," continues Redman, while Morrissey nods along. "Especially when it comes to women. There are lots of actresses in their 50s who are wonderful, and they are nomads. Seriously. The men have a much easier time of it. They just do. And that makes me cross.

"Sheila Hancock said to me recently, 'Can you imagine pitching a series to the BBC in which there's three old, female police officers and we've been brought out of retirement to work with a hot young guy who's still a serving police officer?' Not a chance."

LOOKING AT THE opportunities available to the two actors between series of Good Karma, Redman may have a point. Morrissey stars in Penance on Channel 5 (which starts on Tuesday) and has appeared in recent dramas such as The Trial of Christine Keeler, Unforgotten and The Night Manager. He also appeared in the first three series of Line of Duty, where all of the female guest roles tend to go to younger actors.

"Amanda would be great in Line of Duty!" enthuses Morrissey. "Jed would love her. I'll tell him next time I see him! One of my best mates in the world is Adrian Dunbar, so I always get

'At one audition, they said, "We need you in your pants"' him to tell Jed, 'Morrissey says he's still alive.' And Jed goes, 'I know! Tell him I know!' My character retired, and they still haven't found the Caddy – just saying..."

NEIL MORRISSEY

Not that Redman hasn't been busy. She recently starred in Bumps, a BBC comedy about a woman in her 60s who wants to have another baby, and is perennially occupied with her acting school, nurturing new talent: "In fact, we've got four students from it coming out to set at the end of this month," she says proudly.

PERFECT MATCH

Such opportunities weren't available to Redman and Morrissey, who, despite growing up in different parts of the country – Brighton and Stafford respectively – had difficult childhoods and similar routes into acting.

"I was in hospital until I was five with my burns," says Redman. "I had too much energy, so my parents put me into a drama class. And I loved it. That was it for me."

"Same here," says Morrissey. "School plays from about 11 and, because I was brought up in kids' homes and was determined, I was down at the local rep. The social workers didn't like that. Even the head of my sixth form college told my foster parents, 'Don't let Neil become an actor, he doesn't have the aptitude.' There you go Mrs Willis! I do have the aptitude."

"I was also banned from doing school plays," laughs Redman, "because they wanted me to concentrate on maths. Horrible Miss Brand."

"There's always one, isn't there?" says Morrissey. "I got a Saturday job when I was 17 to pay for my auditions at the Guildhall [School of Music and Drama]. I applied for a grant, but there was only one from Staffordshire County Council, and someone else got it. So I worked in Just Pants Plus. When I got in to Guildhall they asked for my fees and I didn't have a bean, so I said, 'Well, we'll write to my MP and you'll say how marvellous I am, and we'll go from there.' Luckily, within about three weeks we got a 50 per cent grant, which meant my fees were paid."

"I got the grant in Sussex," says Redman. "My dad wasn't around so I had to send money back home to my mum, and I worked every night to save enough. I worked out that I needed £1 a day to eat during working and drama school time. And then at weekends I could have £5 for a bottle of wine."

"We both had to" – Morrissey puts on an exaggerated Northern accent – "lick road clean wit' tongue to get to where we are!"

The hardships didn't end there. Once out of drama school, they both plied their trade in regional panto to get their equity cards, and endured humiliating auditions.

Of the worst, Morrissey recalls: "I went for a Gillette commercial once, and they said: 'We need you in your underpants.' I mean, it would never happen these days. Imagine me at 22, looking like a stick – you could play glockenspiel on my ribs. I hadn't even hit my mark before they said, 'Absolutely no!' Poor little me in my scruffy Y-fronts!"

Redman's worst experience is more disturbing, and telling of the era. "I had one – this was an audition for the BBC – I walked in and the guy said, 'Those purple velvet jeans look lovely on you, but I think they'd look better on the floor, would you take them off please?'"

Morrissey gasps, "Hashtag MeToo! A BBC show?"

"Oh, darling," says Redman, rolling her eyes, "it happened every day. I didn't take them off, obviously. I burst into tears and I ran. I remember exactly who it was, but I won't be saying. That was the norm then. I was 22 as well – a baby, really."

THEY'VE COME A long way since then, but remain ambitious. "I'd like to be in a project that my son writes," says Morrissey. (Sam is his only child from his first marriage; he's now with a long-term partner.) "He's plying his trade as a writer doing pop videos and short films. So, if he gets something off the ground, it would be lovely to work with my boy."

"I want to do Cleopatra on stage," says Redman, who has a daughter with her first husband, Robert Glenister, and is now remarried. "It was my audition speech for drama school and now I'm the right age. Shakespeare wrote fantastically well for women. You'd be a great as Malvolio," she suggests to Morrissey.

"Ooh, I wouldn't mind him," laughs the actor, proving that you can take the man out of the show but you can't stop him from behaving badly. "He's the naughtiest! 'Her Cs, Us and Ts...' He's the only Shakespeare character who says the c-word on stage. Maybe I'll get my cowboy boots back on next year." ALEXIA SKINITIS

‘She would have been proud’

Nicola Walker’s grief when her mother died nearly ended her career – then acting saved her

MICHAEL HODGES

I JUST FELT LIKE I had to work or otherwise I would go mad." Nicola Walker's face is set in a frown, the same one she uses when she considers her husband's infidelity in The Split or her step-mother Celia in Last Tango in Halifax, but this time it's caused by her own real-life pain. The moment 20 years ago when her mother died and she thought her career was going to end. "I wanted to not think," she says. "That was my state of mind."

Walker was born in the East End of London in 1970. Her father was a scrap-metal dealer, her mother an interior designer. "Mum came out of Hoxton," says Walker. "I have no idea where her love of theatre came from, but she took me to shows as much as she could.

From a very young age she used to make me read Shakespeare to her friends. I was rubbish at it, I still think I'm rubbish at Shakespeare, but I wouldn't be doing this without her."

As complex in real life as she is on screen, Walker contrives to be exceptionally open and intensely private at the same time.

She tells me about losing her mother, but not her mother's name or how she died. I ask if it was out of the blue or following a long illness and Walker says, "It was both."

When she was still a child the family moved out of London to Harlow, a new town in Essex. Enchanted by old musicals on the TV, Walker decided she wanted to be an actor and her mother enrolled her at the local youth theatre at 13. "I loved it," she says. "I thought, 'This is what I want to do, these are the people I want to hang out with.' I don't come from an acting background, but I just wanted to act. That level of naivety can be incredibly useful because you don't know how hard it's going to be."

Walker went on to read English at Cambridge,

'Mum made me read Shakespeare to her friends' but acting remained her priority; she befriended Sue Perkins and joined Footlights. After university she didn't go to drama school, but got jobs performing in pub theatres, learning her craft as she went. "I think if I'd gone to drama school they would have taught me how to do it properly, but actually, the older I'm getting I realise that's not strictly true," she says. "There's a lot of intuition in what I do, that's what I go on."

After Walker won a lead role in crime drama Touching Evil opposite Robson Green in 1997, her career looked set – but then, the woman who had supported her ambitions all her life fell ill and died. Devastated, Walker decided to lose herself in her work, but the work had gone. "I didn't get a job for months," she says. "Four months out of work can be normal for an actor, but after seven I said to myself, 'If this doesn't change soon I'll do something else.'" Exactly what that might have been she doesn't know. "I'm not trained to do anything else," she admits. "I've just got an English degree."

HER CAREER WAS saved by an out-of-the-blue casting in 2001. "At the last minute someone dropped out of Sam Shepard's A Lie of the Mind at the Donmar Warehouse and I was offered the role," she says. "My mother was played by Sinead Cusack and my brother was Andy Serkis. So I thought, 'You just follow them and you'll be OK.' That was the job that pulled me out."

The television and stage success that followed took off with Spooks in 2003 and would include a spell on Broadway and an Olivier award in 2013 as best supporting actress for her performance in The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time. Recently things have exploded. Walker has had huge hits with BBC1's Last Tango in Halifax and The Split (both of which end their latest run this week) and ITV cold-case police drama Unforgotten, a new series of which she's now filming with co-star Sanjeev Bhaskar.

When she gets on the Tube, Walker sees her own face on fellow passengers' mobile screens. "It's really bizarre," she says. "People are watching TV programmes that I've spent six months of my life making. You just get your chin down ▷

◁ and pretend you're listening to something on your phone." Does she wear a disguise? "No, I don't need to, I very rarely get recognised. The people that don't like your stuff don't bother to say so, they've got Twitter for that. When people do come over, I can guess what they're going to say by what age they are. If it's men in their 30s then it's Spooks. They watched it when they were younger, maybe when they shouldn't have been. But often you're completely wrong and they say, 'I really love The Split.' That's surprising – I didn't expect 28-year-old men to be in the demographic, but they are."

Her teenage son Harry is definitely not in the demographic. "He's not seen much of what I've done," she says. "I had three lines in a film of Thunderbirds over a decade ago. He's watched that many times." Walker is married to fellow actor Barnaby Kay, which, she says, means there are two people in the house who must film themselves for parts. "The amount of rows it causes – everything has to stop because one of you has to record the other one. One of you needs to do it to get a job and the other just wants to go and walk the dog."

I DOUBT SHE NEEDS to audition for much any more, but Walker claims to be a little baffled by her own popularity. "All the stuff people really seem to enjoy, like Tango, I don't know why that is," she says. "I don't know why Spooks worked. It was the first show to pick up on that increasing paranoia about terrorism, on the culture of fear, I think, but if you could point at why any show works, we'd all be making brilliant popular shows all the time." Yet, that's exactly what she's done, I say. "I've just hitched my wagon to Sally Wainwright."

It's not the first time she credits other women for her achievements: alongside Last Tango creator Wainwright she namechecks Nicola Shindler, who brought the show to the BBC; Jane Featherstone, producer of The Split; and Unforgotten executive producers Sally Haines and Laura Mackie. "My career over the past six or seven years has been down to those women."

She says the TV industry has started to reflect the world as women see it. "It's coming into line with what we see in our lives." What if that's a blip? "I'm hoping that's not the case, but if it is I'll go into battle. I'll get behind all those women I've just listed. I would follow them into a fight."

Walker was always unlike other actors of her generation. Intense and impatient, her face set in a frown, she appeared to be thinking her way through parts that others would simply perform. She still believes she can get better at what she does. "There would be no point in doing it if I didn't feel like I was changing," she says. "That would be the time to either give yourself a very big talking to or stop doing it.

"I've been thinking a lot about that lately. I didn't train as an actor so I was falling back on using a lot of me. I'd always thought there was no way of escaping yourself, that I didn't know how to do that. But I can now."

I ask the question that everyone who admires Walker wonders: is she more like Hannah in The Split or Gillian in Last Tango? "Gillian is much easier for me to slip on. When I went to the audition I thought there was no way I was going to get that job. I really thought, 'Not a chance, but at least I can go in and not make a fool of myself.' Then, after ten minutes, I thought, 'This is going really well, I really like saying these words, being this woman' and it happened in the room. It's a strange feeling, when you're so certain you're wrong for something and it works. I'm not being disingenuously humble, it's good writing – that's what really does it for an actor."

EMPATHIC
Solving cold cases with Sanjeev Bhaskar in Unforgotten

And Hannah? "Hannah in The Split is a long way from who I am. I found playing her intimidating at first. Abi Morgan [the writer] is asking some really tricky midlife questions. She's very gently taking your skin off."

Before shooting the first series of The Split the BBC arranged a meeting between Walker and a leading female family lawyer. "She was this really brilliant mix of empathy and legal precision, which seems so contrary. The way she looked, I found so unlike everything I'd played before in theatre and telly. This was someone who was immaculately groomed because of her very well-paid job. They look that way for a reason – the clothes are professional armour. I thought, 'I get it now' and I came away thinking, 'I really want to be this woman. I've got to play her.'"

WALKER IS 50 this year and it feels as if her golden moment is going to continue into her next decade, though she resists the idea. "You can have a really lovely run but that's because it's your turn now, which means it's going to be someone else's turn next. You would be crazy to ever think this was your golden moment. No, it's not that. And I think you have to be careful when you say 'having a moment', it feels like a slightly back-handed compliment."

Still, I say, she has achieved more than her mother could have hoped for when she first took the 13-year-old Walker to Harlow Playhouse.

"She's always there for me," Walker says. "I don't mean in a spiritual or religious way, she's just part of me. My dad and I talk about her a lot. And she would have been incredibly proud."

From Bullet Boy to Top Man

Rapper, actor, father of eight – Ashley Walters says conquering his past has made him a role model for young black dads

ASHLEY WALTERS, THE 38-year-old actor who plays cops and robbers (and Romeo), was weight training in his local park in Crouch End, north London, last year when he was approached by a teenage boy. “He was like, ‘Er listen, I really wanna get into actin’ an’ that, blud...’ And I was like, ‘Alright, cool, we’ll speak,’” Walters recalls.

“Then I realised how entrenched in street life he was. He had a few cases in court coming up for knife crime and I just thought to myself that, without telling him my plan, I’d call him and bring him to the studio and then take him on set with me. And gradually he has changed. He aspires for more. He stopped doing his street stuff and called me and said, ‘I’m not making no money but I know I want to get into the acting thing.’”

Does he have talent? “He’s guest lead in episode seven of Bulletproof,” Walters says, like a proud dad, “and he’s just got an agent.”

This story tells you a lot about Walters. He has a social conscience and acts on it, mentoring young lads among other things. It’s something he does for free, but he has advice for Dame Cressida Dick, commissioner of the Metropolitan Police. “If you want people to do it who are ex-offenders – people who have been through the lifestyle, that kids are going to have a certain level of respect for, enough for them to listen – then you need investment, because those people also need to be empowered and incentivised to take time out, because it is a job, at the end of the day.”

He’s open about his faults, present and past – he served a prison sentence for carrying a gun, when he was teenage rapper Asher D, with lyrics about guns, crime and street violence, in the south London garage and hip-hop collective So Solid Crew.

Charm is something he has in abundance but without the manipulative quality it’s sometimes accompanied by. He has a frequent laugh and is self-deprecating – saying he’s a dad-dancer with no rhythm and no fashion sense (he wears the clothes his wife buys him or a stylist picks out for a shoot, and the rest he gives away to the homeless). He is thoughtful and funny, both unassuming and remarkable.

INTERVIEW
BY GINNY DOUGARY

At the end of last year, he met Prince Charles to discuss his new role as one of the Prince’s Trust ambassadors. They were both there for the opening of a new building for the youth of Southwark. What was it like meeting the Prince? “It was amazing! I shook his hand and said, ‘Your Royal Highness’. I was really nervous before he came but he knows how to relax people and he knew everything about me. I don’t know if they make him watch things... but it was really comfortable and we had a laugh.”

There are also a lot of laughs in the new series of Sky 1’s Bulletproof, a sort of London cop-caper version of Starsky and Hutch (for those of us of a certain generation), based on an idea developed with his co-star, Noel Clarke.

Walters and Clarke had always gone up for the same parts, “so there was an element of competition between us”. Then they were placed on the same table at the Baftas, and Clarke told his manager that he was going to approach his competitor about teaming up. He already had the skeleton of the idea of two cops working in tandem: “Pike [Walters] is a married family man, Bishop [Clarke] a tearaway, but together they uphold the law: they bend the law as much as they can but they never break it.”

“Our biggest thing was about creating two strong black role models that were positive and human, as well. They spoke normally, like the kids – it just so happened that we were cops rather than drug dealers. We wanted to create a show that kids could watch and feel like we used to back in the day when we watched Knight Rider or Beverly Hills Cop. Obviously I’m involved in Top Boy, too [the Netflix series returning later this year in which he plays drugs boss, Dushane], so I do the other side as well.”

WALTERS WAS BROUGHT UP ON a Peckham estate in south London by a strong mother, Pamela Case, who was head of human resources at Croydon council before setting up her own HR consultancy firm. His aunt was a barrister and his grandmother worked in catering for the police for many years. From the age of six, he attended the Sylvia Young Theatre school at weekends, learning tap and ballet as well as acting. His secondary school was in Pimlico, where he achieved ten GCSEs.

What was missing in his life was his late father, who he describes as a gangster who was in prison 17 times – Walters has counted – and had six children with six different mothers. Why, when troubled young men have such sterling female role models in their lives, do they still crave a father substitute enough to go off the rails? ▷

◁ “I was constantly looking for a father figure in every man I met, and it meant that the majority of the time I was just eager to please – or trying to get people to be proud of me. And that means sometimes if there was weed to sell, I would do it. If there was something bad to do, I would do it. It wasn’t about ‘I wanted to be bad’ or I was confused from my upbringing or I didn’t have an education. It was actually that I wanted to fit in and I wanted to feel safe and I was looking for all of those things that I was missing, really, from not having a father.”

By the time he went to prison, aged 19 – serving part of an 18-month sentence in a youth offenders institution at HMP Olney, in Rugby – he was already a father, to the first of his three children with then partner Natalie, born when he was 17. He now has eight children.

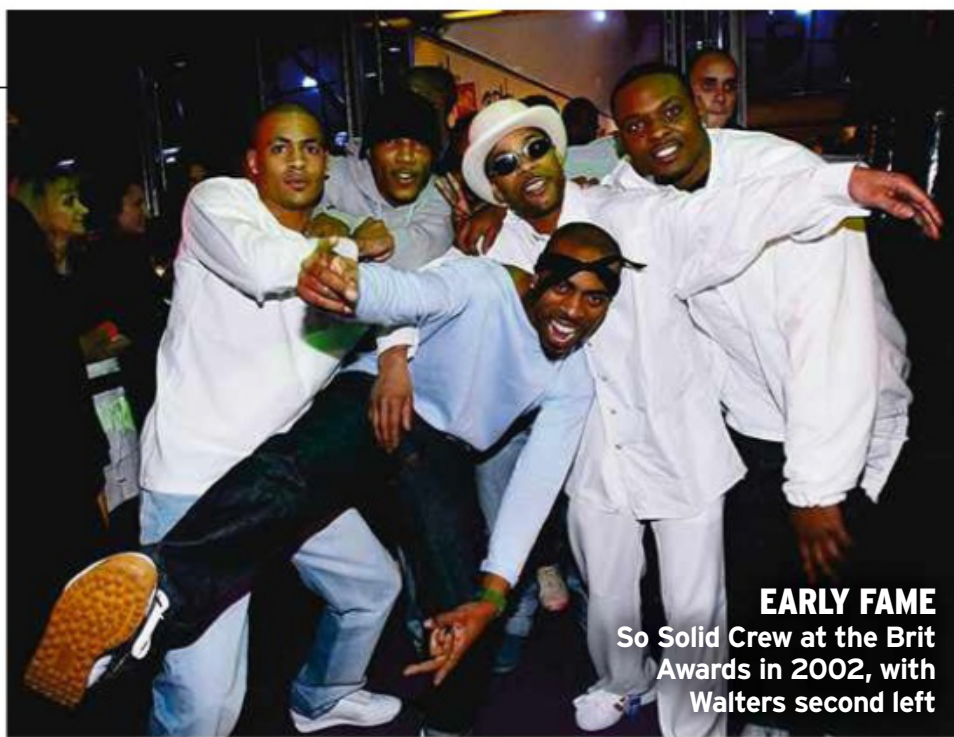

PART OF THE problem was the notoriety of So Solid Crew and the money that came with it; both got Walters a lot of unwanted attention and threats but there was also doubtless the desire to affect the swagger of the culture (something he admits he had admired in his errant father).

After his release, he was ashamed and depressed. For the first three months, he didn’t even leave his home. Last October he spoke openly with the model Adwoa Aboah on her podcast The Gurls Talk about how he had used alcohol to self-medicate. “I was done with music and I was done with So Solid – I felt it was their fault and not my fault and I shouldn’t have gone to prison,” he says, with a gentle laugh, “so I turned my back on everyone.”

One night he went out drinking and woke up on a bus the next morning, having been robbed – even his shoes were gone – and without a clue of what had happened. Eventually he realised that he needed to get some help. First with one-on-one counselling and then group therapy for a year. “The depression was a lot to do with prison and lack of self-worth – not forgiving myself for the mistakes I had made,” he says. “I thought everyone held it against me.”

He’d gone to jail with a nest egg, but when he came out, due to poor management, there was nothing left. “I’d lost everything – I didn’t have finances or a home and no one wanted to work with me. Everyone had turned their back. “I was the ‘gun-toting gangster’, but deep down inside, I knew that I wasn’t that person, so to see every newspaper calling me that was pretty intense. I became a recluse and shut myself away.”

After a year, Walters was rescued by his manager, who somehow duped him into leaving the house – “in my pyjamas! No, I’m joking!” – to go to his office where he was presented with a script that had been written especially for him by Saul Dibb. This was 2004’s acclaimed film Bullet Boy, which “changed everything for me and reflected how I felt at the time”. The story mirrored his own, but with a different resolution, and ended with the hero being shot dead on the streets.

EARLY FAME

Since Bullet Boy, Walters has worked continuously, and in 2013 married fellow actor Danielle Isaie. But there have been a few occasions in which he has got into hot water. He was fined £600 for aggressively confronting a security guard in Aberdeen in 2014, having been wrongly accused of causing a disturbance at a restaurant. Another time, he was staying in a well-known chain of hotels with his wife when security and front desk staff tried to prevent him, humiliatingly, from returning to their bedroom after they’d been smoking outside. Each time, the way Walters tells the events, it’s clear to me that he has been the victim of racial profiling.

But what’s notable about Walters is that he insists on taking the blame for his reactions, however unfair his treatment: “The one thing I know about myself is that I do sometimes have some anger management issues. I could have said what I wanted to say in a calm way, but I go from zero to 100 at times and I can see how that could be intimidating to people who don’t know the context.”

All that is behind him now. “I drink a lot less, but also I just feel like I’ve grown up. There was a moment when I was so passionate about proving points but actually, at 38 years old with a mortgage and kids,” a husky laugh, “those things are insignificant now and I’ve got bigger fish to fry.”

He is now committed and determined to being the role model for his kids that he lacked himself. “If we look at my dad’s generation – their parents had just come from the Caribbean, the Windrush kids – they experienced a lot of racism and backlash for being here, and you find that most of them were in and out of prison and did turn to drugs or alcoholism. They were our fathers. But now we should try and change the stereotype. And all the young black dads that I know are 100 per cent in their kids’ lives, trying to do as much as they can for them.”

He and his business partner, producer Najan Ward, set up their own film production company SLNda in 2017 and have the green light on a short film Walters is directing in the mould of those “kids’ movies from the 80s with a message, which I grew up on, like The Goonies.”

They also own Kingdom, a drama school in Bow, east London, set up by Ward seven years ago. Walters had been teaching classes there for five years and was asked if he would invest. The idea is to reach out to pupils from more challenging backgrounds and draw them in.

HIS A VERSATILE actor – as well as TV and film he has appeared on stage at the Royal Court and the National. I ask him to do the “Bond, James Bond” line and he gamely obliges. Since Idris Elba has declared he’s out of the running to play the next Bond, Walters should be practising, shouldn’t he? “I hope so.”

These days, he only tends to go back to Peckham and the estate he grew up in when he’s doing photo shoots. What’s it like when he returns? “I don’t mind – I’m proud of where I grew up. I’m proud of Peckham,” he says with one of his slow smiles. “You see, the thing with me is that I don’t regret anything that happened. At the time, it was difficult. At the time I was in prison, I hated it and wished I’d done something different but actually now with space and time, all of that stuff has made me the person I am and you can’t hide from the fact that the best actors, the best musicians – they come with a lot of pain, and have been through a lot of experiences to be able to have that depth in their music and performances.”

Like I said, Ashley Walters – he really is remarkable.

THREE AGES OF DOM

What made Dominic Cummings the man he is today? We ask three people who know him to reveal all...

HEADMASTER'S REPORT

Dominic Cummings was born in Durham in 1971. His father managed the construction of oil rigs and his mother was a behavioural specialist who worked in local schools. Having attended a state primary, the young Cummings was then sent to Durham School, the ancient private establishment in the centre of the city.

"He was Dominic Cummings even at a young age," says his then headmaster, Michael Lang. "He always stood out as somebody who thought for himself and did things for himself."

But he was not, says his friend Ralph Woodward, a very social boy. Woodward remembers him as "intense – a bit of a loner, not friendless but never really quite one of the lads". The pair were on the school cricket team together. Cummings was a top-order batsman with an aloof "aristocratic" disposition who reminded Woodward of Ted Dexter, the England cricketer whose moody self-confidence won him the nickname "Lord Ted". Cummings, too, was mercurial, and a good cricketer – with his "classical, straight-bat technique", says his childhood friend. But Woodward remembers him as "a bit of an outlier" on the team bus en route to matches. "He was not hugely humorous. Any photograph you see of him, he's a bit angry."

As a schoolboy cricketer, Cummings had not yet discovered the ancient texts and scientific ideas he now reveres; that would come at Oxford. Instead his interests were fairly typical. If he was reading a book it would be something like a Len Deighton spy novel: classic boys' fiction.

But Cummings's temperament was already clear, and it reminded Woodward too of Douglas Jardine, another English cricket captain and the "evil genius" of what is now known as the Bodyline series. In the 1932/33 Ashes series, Jardine directed his bowlers to aim for Australia's batsmen, rather than at their stumps. Cummings has since proven the comparison apt. Politically he thrives on confrontation, and encourages civil service reform by playing the man not the ball: he has both personally pursued and otherwise condoned attacks on those he disapproves of, setting the context in which Philip Rutnam, the Home Office civil servant chief, recently quit after feuding with Priti Patel.

But there was, says Woodward, "a certain sort of integrity" to Cummings, even at a young age. He did not try to ingratiate himself with the group: "Being true to himself was more important." He would openly "big up" Thatcher in the 1980s, at the height of her unpopularity in the North East, "partly to be confrontational, partly out of belief. He would have subscribed to Norman Tebbit: you know, pull yourself up by the bootstraps."

As Cummings grew up at Durham School, his maternal uncle, John Laws, was proving himself as a leading lawyer; he would go on to become one of the UK's longest-serving lord justices. Ralph Woodward assumed that Cummings would follow in Laws's footsteps: "He was quick on his feet and could argue." Cummings didn't join his uncle's profession – but he did end up at his alma mater: Exeter College, Oxford.

MICHAEL LANG, FORMER HEADMASTER

THE UNIVERSITY WASTREL

At Oxford, Cummings was “the kind of person that would have an argument with you just for the hell of it,” says Leby Eyres, who was part of his friendship group at the time. “He wouldn’t measure his opinions in order to spare your feelings – he just says what he thinks.

“He’s not bound by the sort of moral code that people acquire over the years, or if he does have a moral code it is different to the vast majority of the country,” says Eyres. “He never struck me as an empathetic person.”

Cummings was part of a friendship group that, according to Eyres, called itself the wastrels, after a condemnation from one of their tutors. But although he hung out with the group peripherally, Cummings was “set apart” from the rest. He worked hard building relationships with tutor Dr Michael Hart, the classicist Robin Lane Fox, and Norman Stone, the professor of modern history. Hart remembers Cummings as “a very clever guy, intellectually unorthodox, and too restless to be an academic”.

Eyres and her friends did not know of Laws, Cummings’s esteemed uncle and predecessor at Exeter. The only uncle they knew of was Phil Cummings, one of his father’s brothers, who ran an infamous nightclub in Durham called Klute. In comparison to the predominantly southern students of Oxford, Cummings, says Eyres, had a “marked edge – he just seemed tougher than the rest of us”.

THE WORKAHOLIC BREXITEER

After Oxford, Cummings spent some time in Russia trying to get an airline off the ground. Then, in 1998, he joined the anti-Euro group Business for Sterling in London. He was 26. He soon impressed and four years later he was briefly made director of strategy to then-Tory leader Iain Duncan Smith.

He did not last: he and Duncan Smith did not click, and he was supported by few allies. But in 2004 he made his name by helping defeat New Labour’s proposed regional assembly in the North East. The “Nesno” referendum, as it was known, demonstrated many of the tactics Cummings would later use when he ran Vote Leave, the pro-Brexit campaign in 2016.

Paul Stephenson was the Vote Leave communications chief, and describes Cummings as a willing delegator, although also remembers one memorable change he made to a job advert: “He deleted a reference to working 70-hour weeks and made it 90. He was trying to mould the team to be a band of brothers.” His account of Cummings contrasts with that of Eyres. He was “privately very warm, caring, and loyal,”

‘He used to say, “Brexit is just the beginning”’

says Stephenson, as evidenced by the outcry among staff in January 2016 when the Vote Leave board tried to remove him. They felt his was a flawed campaign that ignored the Eurosceptic ideas many of them had long propounded. Cummings thought their messaging needed reinventing.

But he is, Stephenson agrees, “single-minded” and that can be a strength and a weakness. “I think if he thinks he’s doing the right thing, that comes first,” says his erstwhile ally. That willingness to make enemies meant that “had we lost, he would have been vilified,” Stephenson continues. “Two weeks before [the result] people were saying we were running the worst campaign in modern political history. A couple of years later he’s a [TV] star – it’s that binary.” Cummings was played by Benedict Cumberbatch (below) in Channel 4’s Brexit: the Uncivil War.

The day after the vote, the team headed to the pub, drained by relief more than victory. A week later, the Johnson-Gove alliance collapsed. Cummings, says Stephenson, was “the glue that held them together”, but he’d stepped away from the leadership campaign, hoping to rejoin the pair in government.

Nearly four years later, the triumvirate has reunited. Cummings is in Number Ten as Johnson’s chief of staff, while Gove – Cummings’s political patron, who he advised between 2007 and 2014 – is a leading figure in the Cabinet. “Before the referendum,” says Stephenson of Cummings, “he would always say, ‘Brexit is just the beginning.’” HARRY LAMBERT

Champions League Football: Manchester City v Real Madrid

Tuesday 7pm (k/o 8pm) BT Sport 2, 8pm 5 Live

ONE OF FOOTBALL'S great pleasures is the opportunity to go a little bit nuts. You can shout at the television. It's acceptable for grown men and women to weep at a 93rd-minute winner. You're let off rational thought until the whistle goes. You can act – at least for the duration – as if the whole point of life was the wild and reckless pursuit of glory.

Football's essential madness provokes people to go on crazy journeys, buy Jimmy-Floyd Hasselbaink's underpants and name daughters after an entire team. Sane and sober entrepreneurs go into football with the best intentions and get taken over by the madness. They, or at least their clubs, sometimes end up bankrupt.

Such madness lies at the heart of the biggest fixture of the week when Manchester City take on Real Madrid in the Champions League round of 16, having already beaten them 2-1 at the Bernabéu. Madrid, the old, old champions who have won the competition 13 times take on the brilliant hopefuls who have never won the damn thing at all.

The sporting drama has been heightened after Manchester City fell foul of Uefa's Financial Fair Play regulations. Fined £25 million, they've also been banned from European competition for the next two years, so this might be their last shot to win the big one for a while.

The regulations were designed to place a legal straitjacket on football's madness: those who run football clubs were no longer allowed to spend money they didn't have on transfers and players' wages. Manchester City – essentially owned by the oil-rich emirate of Abu Dhabi – have been penalised for breaching these regulations. Perhaps the punishment is a high-minded effort to prevent Abu Dhabi from going broke in the pursuit of footballing glory. Or perhaps there's something else going on.

‘Last season City were as close to perfection as a team could be’

Perhaps the FFP regulations are being used to protect the clubs with huge global fanbases and income streams from those seeking to break into the elite. The old guard of Real Madrid, Barça, Bayern Munich, Juventus and AC Milan would rather keep the club exclusive.

And the best way to keep your club exclusive is to use the blackball.

against the verdict and have appealed to the Court of Arbitration for Sport. Which of course infuriates their rivals.

But last season City were as close to footballing perfection as a team could be. They won all three domestic competitions and only failed to make the Champions League final by the funkiest of VAR decisions. The way they played was beautiful and glorious. Of course, their success served to glorify Abu Dhabi, and the hegemony of fossil fuels: let's not duck that. But the fact is that this collision with Real Madrid is packed with meaning.

Cheer for beauty and adventure against privilege and entitlement, or for the old guard against the upstarts, as you choose. It's a match about money and politics and privilege and power: but also about beauty and glory and the pursuit of perfection. It's still football. And therefore mad.

FOR A DIVIDED island in the North Atlantic with a population of nearly seven million, Ireland's cultural reach is borderless; thanks to the long memories of a sentimental diaspora, the music, poetry and sport of north and south punch above their weight. The national cinema is no different. The renamed Irish film board Fís Éireann (Screen Ireland) drives the Republic's illustrious screen export profile with state and EU cash, while Northern Ireland Screen can bag Liam Neeson for modest cancer drama Ordinary Love and open the Game of Thrones Studio Tour in Banbridge later this year. With the south's latest hard-centred gangster fable Calm with Horses in cinemas from 13 March, RT marks St Patrick's Day with our own top ten made, set (or both) in the Emerald isle.

6 My Left Foot 1989 Reverence for the mammy and irreverent wit make this a quintessentially Irish undertaking, yet in Christy Brown, who managed cerebral palsy to become a writer and painter, the country gained an unexpected icon. Daniel Day-Lewis convincingly expresses the anger and frustration experienced by many disabled people. Oscars for him and for his co-star Brenda Fricker were a tremendous fillip for a small film, and set director Jim Sheridan on the path to In the Name of the Father and The Boxer.

10 The Quiet Man 1952 It's easy to mock the leprechaun-green, theme-park Irishness of John Ford's soppiest movie, a paean to the rough but decent land his hungry émigré parents left behind in the 1870s. But the fictional Innisfree (actually the village of Cong, in Co Mayo) glows as John Wayne's boxer-turned-farmer woos Maureen O'Hara's local siren. Full of lilting Irish airs and roughhouse brawls it won Ford an Oscar and don't worry, Wayne never attempts the accent.

8 Bloody Sunday 2001 Shown on ITV 30 years after British paratroopers shot and killed protesters at a civil rights march in Derry, director Paul Greengrass's drama-doc later won awards across the world. Restaging the carnage on Dublin locations, involving ex-soldiers and the Derry community, proved a healing experience in itself, while the film's combination of you-are-there visuals and forensic dissection of the tragic losses make it a telling act of remembrance.

9 Sing Street 2015 Written and directed by Dubliner John Carney, whose career rocketed after 2006 busking romance Once, this is a Commitments for today, albeit set in 1985. An honest, charming, rags-to-nicer-rags story celebrates teen misfits mitigating the humiliation of adolescence by forming a synth-pop band. Gary Clark's songs sound surgically appropriate for the titular school band and its bullied leader Conor (played with fine comic timing by Ferdia Walsh-Peelo) – it's clear the youngsters are actually playing their instruments. A delight you'll find yourself imploring people to seek out.

7 The Secret of Kells 2009 Cartoon Saloon is a Kilkenny animation house founded by Tomm Moore, Nora Twomey and Paul Young, whose Oscar-nominated debut was quite the calling card: an exquisitely drafted telling of a Celtic tale of faeries, Vikings and monks guaranteed to enchant all ages. Brendan Gleeson ennobles a keen voice cast, while comparisons to Japan's Studio Ghibli are not without merit.

5 Man of Aran 1934 Robert Flaherty is a famed documentary pioneer, yet having his subjects re-enact their lives on camera fails today's expectations of authenticity. Flaherty, however, was after a deeper truth, represented by this depiction of hardscrabble lives on rocky islands off Ireland's west coast. Lashed by crashing waves, the locals gather soil to grow potatoes, and battle basking sharks to fill their oil lamps. The elemental struggle between man and nature illustrates the indelible power of cinema to preserve a now-lost way of life.

4 Rosie 2018

An intimately plotted day-and-a-half in the life of the titular young mum (Sarah Greene), her restaurant worker husband (Moe Dunford) and four kids, living in a car after eviction in Dublin amid an Irish housing crisis. Seasoned director Paddy Breathnach channels Ken Loach's indignation via a Roddy Doyle script and on-the-hoof shooting. A vital slice of life from the south's post-Celtic Tiger housing bubble that's heartbreaking and heroic.

3 Garage 2007

With the Catholic church's waning influence, Ireland has experienced extraordinary social changes in recent years. This modestly scaled character portrait explores the uncomfortable area of mental health, with stand-up comic Pat Shortt inhabiting the role of a cheery yet challenged filling-station attendant in a rural community – patronised by all, isolated and perhaps unknowable. Director Lenny Abrahamson was Oscar-nominated for 2016's Room, but this compassionate and troubling film is his finest achievement.

2 Odd Man Out 1947

James Mason gives an indelible performance as a wounded IRA man on the run in this masterly Celtic noir from director Carol Reed. Arguably overshadowed by The Third Man, made a couple of years later, its fresco of shifting loyalties and shadowy, labyrinthine streets are equally striking. The blend of Belfast locations and Denham studio settings represent old-school film craft at its zenith.

1 Michael Collins 1996

A redoubtable, stirring history lesson that's neither dry nor sensational and largely factual, Neil Jordan's lively biography of the Irish revolutionary-turned-politician re-creates events from the 1916 Easter Rising to Collins's death by IRA ambush in 1922. An astute, statuesque roll-call of Irish and second-generation talent – Aidan Quinn, Stephen Rea, Brendan Gleeson – round out a rich re-enactment of tumultuous times, honestly remembered. Hard to imagine anyone other than Liam Neeson in the title role.

Unforgettable vision

Before we go back to the future, some recent history: the previously movable feast that has been the UK's Sony Channel settled in January into a tripartite "offer": Sony Movies, Sony Movies Action and Sony Movies Classic. The first of these hosts the Freeview premiere of Blade Runner 2049 this week.

The original sci-fi blueprint was made in 1982 and set in 2019, which seemed very much in the future at the time. Its creators waited 35 years to stage a comeback, delivering us to a future that's still conveniently ahead of us by 29 years. I'd like to say that the future's so bright, you've got to wear shades, but a full hazmat suit might be more appropriate.

As per exec producer Ridley Scott's trusted-trader calling card, the sequel represents a group effort par excellence: carefully chosen director Denis Villeneuve (Arrival); cinematographer Roger Deakins (Oscar-winner for this and the Great War-set 1917); original co-writer Hampton Fancher (working with Logan scribe Michael Green); and Dennis Gassner's crack design team. Together they create an unforgettable vision of a deracinated future.

FUTURE TENSE
Ryan Gosling is replicant cop K

Harrison Ford returns as grizzled ex-LAPD cop Rick Deckard, sought by Ryan Gosling's more beatific, synthetic cop, "K", who's been tasked to track down a fabled replicant child. There follows a picaresque journey across the vast GM farms of a ravaged California (it's still raining in LA), a Dickensian recycling centre staffed by orphans, and a decommissioned Las Vegas where Sinatra makes a playful appearance.

Speaking as a teenager who was blown away by the original, I still prefer it to this sequel. But the action is tense and tactile, and the overall feeling is one of space, or should that be void. When a replicant wolfhound walks across a tiled floor, every one of its clawed footsteps resonates, while the synth score by Hans Zimmer and Benjamin Wallfisch quotes Vangelis's original: another link with the past in a film about the future.

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

A Quiet Place ★★★★★
9.00-10.45pm C4 15

HORROR THRILLER Shhhhh! Extraneous noise in the cinema – rustling, whispering, texting and, currently more alarmingly, coughing – has reached epidemic proportions. It's why I prefer to watch films at home. That's the perfect place to view the low-volume, high-concept horror A Quiet Place, which arrives on Freeview hot on the heels of its Netflix debut and is best experienced in total silence. It's co-written by director John Krasinski (the lead in Amazon's Jack Ryan), who also plays the survivalist dad of a nuclear-ish family that includes his real-life wife Emily Blunt. They all tiptoe around a tripwire-fenced New York cabin in a world roamed by blind monsters that are hyper-sensitive to sound. One of the children is congenitally deaf, and brilliantly played by hearing-impaired Millicent Simmonds, and the state of permanent, shushing siege proves utterly gripping. Having made $340 million off a $20 million budget, its sequel – A Quiet Place Part II, in cinemas this Friday – was greenlit at what must have been one of the shortest meetings of all time. (US 2018, violence, HD)

Into the Woods ★★★
3.00-5.00pm BBC2 PG

MUSICAL FANTASY Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine's magical Broadway show makes a potent transfer to the screen in the capable hands of director Rob Marshall (Chicago). Using such fairy-tale favourites as Cinderella, Rapunzel and Little Red Riding Hood to craft a new fable, the story focuses on a baker and his wife (James Corden and Emily Blunt) as they attempt to break a witch's curse so that they might have a child. Witch Meryl Streep, Prince Charming Chris Pine and sleazy wolf Johnny Depp give the standout performances in this entirely sung-through spectacle. AJ (US 2014, HD)

Rooster Cogburn ★★★
4.00-6.10pm ITV4 U

WESTERN This movie is made memorable by the collaboration between John Wayne and Katharine Hepburn. Wayne reprises his Oscar-winning role from True Grit and Hepburn returns to the same kind of Bible-bashing spinster she portrayed in The African Queen, playing the missionary who tames the truculence of one-eyed Wayne as they search for her father's killers. The performances are wonderful, but the film relies too much on its veteran leads and is flawed by Stuart Millar's sluggish direction. TH (US 1975, HD)

My Best Friend's Wedding ★★★
6.55-9.00pm 5 Star 12

ROMANTIC COMEDY This sparkling romcom was a career-resurrecting movie for Julia Roberts – and for once she plays someone who may not get the guy. When she hears her best friend and former lover (Dermot Mulroney) is getting married, Roberts realises she wants to be more than just friends after all. What makes PJ Hogan's film work so well is that it's not just "The Julia Roberts Show". The stunning Cameron Diaz (as the bride-to-be) and superb Rupert Everett (as Roberts's gay friend and accomplice) battle it out for best supporting performance – and it's a dead heat. JB (US 1997, swearing, HD)

Minority Report ★★★★★
9.00-11.40pm Sky1 12

FUTURISTIC THRILLER Steven Spielberg's masterfully sleek movie is an awesome mix of skewed sci-fi, twisty Hitchcock-style thrills and outstanding design. It's set in 2054, when police use precognitive mutants to detect crimes before they're committed, and sees top "Pre-cop" Tom Cruise forced to go on the run after he's identified as a future killer. This is what sci-fi cinema should always be about: mind-boggling images and a literate, witty script skilfully working together in perfect harmony to create a world of unnerving wonder. Terrific stuff. AJ (US 2002, some violence, swearing, drug abuse, brief sex scenes, HD)

American Gangster ★★★★★
10.45pm-1.25am ITV 18

CRIME DRAMA As this true-life New York saga (set between 1968 and 1974) unfolds, master director Ridley Scott makes "big" look easy. Denzel Washington brings a suave tranquillity to his role as emerging Harlem drugs lord Frank Lucas. In contrast, Russell Crowe's honest New Jersey cop Richie Roberts juggles divorce, pariah status within a corrupt police department and the logistics of bringing Lucas down. Fidelity to events takes the dramatic sting out of an operatic climax, and Scott sidesteps the electric set pieces of such genre maestros as Martin Scorsese and Brian De Palma, but this is still one classy crime fable. AC (US/UK 2007, violence, drug abuse, HD)

True Lies ★★★★★
10.45pm-1.20am C4 15

ACTION COMEDY Until the arrival of GoldenEye in the mid-1990s, this knowing spy yarn was the nearest thing in years to a great James Bond movie. Arnold Schwarzenegger reunites with his Terminator director James Cameron, playing an unshaken, unstirred secret agent, always saving the world in time to get home for dinner with his wife and kids, who are blissfully unaware of his dangerous job. Aside from the truly spectacular action, there's exceptional comedy support from Tom Arnold and a winning performance from Jamie Lee Curtis, who transforms from timid housewife to confident heroine. It may be wildly implausible and a trifle misogynistic, but, on a pure excitement level, Cameron's blockbuster is unbeatable. AJ (US 1994, violence, swearing, HD)

The Place beyond the Pines ★★★★★
10.55pm-1.10am BBC2 15

CRIME DRAMA This unconventional melodrama stars Ryan Gosling as a motorcycle stunt rider who turns to crime in order to raise the son he never knew he had. But then writer/director Derek Cianfrance changes lanes in an unexpected way and the focus of the story shifts to policeman Bradley Cooper. The last third of the film sees their sons (Emory Cohen and a superb Dane DeHaan) crossing paths in yet another turn of fate. Although Cianfrance relies a little too much on coincidence, this remains a smart, sprawling and beautifully crafted morality tale. DW (US 2012, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

11.45pm-1.30am BBC1 15

PRISON DRAMA Director Don Siegel did much to establish his reputation with Riot in Cell Block 11 in 1954, and he went back behind bars for this compelling reconstruction of the only successful escape from San Francisco's notorious island prison. Driven stir crazy by the strictures of warden Patrick McGoohan's regime, Clint Eastwood's Frank Morris plans an ingenious bid for freedom with a pair of convict brothers (played by Fred Ward and Jack Thibau). Siegel shoots the preparations with an attention to detail that exerts as strong a grip as the events of the escape itself. DP (US 1979, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Pride & Prejudice ★★★★★
3.45-6.05pm CS

PERIOD DRAMA This handsome, dew-speckled 2005 version of the Jane Austen staple features a doughty Matthew Macfadyen as Mr Darcy and – sue me – I actually prefer him in the part to the BBC's Colin Firth. Debuting director Joe Wright (Darkest Hour) cleverly makes the Bennet household a living, breathing, three-dimensional entity, taking us in and out of the working farm via front and back door, under washing and over the back wall, until we really get a feel for the place. To the usual parade of National Trust properties, he adds swathes of forestry and farmland – exquisitely photographed by Roman Osin – and, when Darcy makes his long walk to declare his love for Keira Knightley's pouting Lizzie, it's the misty landscape that steals the scene. Kudos also to Donald Sutherland as the first fully rounded Mr Bennet. (US/UK/Fr 2005, HD)

Macfadyen has such poor eyesight that, for the misty morning shot, Wright had to wave a red flag to show him which direction to go

Wuthering Heights ★★★★★

ROMANTIC DRAMA Laurence Olivier's Heathcliff is even more handsome than the Yorkshire moors across which he howls his doomed love for Cathy (Merle Oberon) in this stirring melodrama of smouldering passion. Produced by Sam Goldwyn, directed by William Wyler, and also starring David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Flora Robson, this is still the best of the many big-screen versions of Emily Brontë's novel. It garnered eight Oscar nominations, including best picture, but only won one, for Gregg Toland's cinematography. Had there also been an Oscar for best smouldering, Olivier would have walked it. PF (US 1939, BW)

The Cruel Sea ★★★★★
2.00-4.00pm BBC2 PG

WAR DRAMA Charles Frennd's San Demetrio London was one of the finest naval combat films made anywhere during the Second World War. The director's insight into the conditions endured and the emotions experienced by embattled sailors of all ranks is very much to the fore in this stirring adaptation of Nicholas Monsarrat's bestselling novel. Produced by Leslie Norman (father of Barry), this is a prime example of the docudramatic style that, spurning the gung-ho heroics of Hollywood, characterised the best British war films. The performances of Jack Hawkins and his all-star crew (Donald Sinden, Stanley Baker and Denholm Elliott among them) reinforce the sense of realism. DP (UK 1952, BW, HD)

Trolls ★★★★★
3.15-4.35pm BBC1 U

MUSICAL This upbeat extravaganza from animation house DreamWorks features the voice talents of Justin Timberlake and Anna Kendrick as bickering trolls who, armed only with their magical hair and a few songs, face off against the giants who've kidnapped their kinfolk. Inspired by the Scandi dolls that once adorned every pencil-end, these trolls are carefree and colourful, but their miserable neighbours, the giant Bergens, have developed a taste for troll flesh. Threaded with a Cinderella subplot and featuring a mix of musical covers and original songs (including the Oscar-nominated Can't Stop the Feeling), Trolls is quality entertainment for little ones. DA (US 2016, HD)

Peter Pan ★★★
3.35-5.40pm ITV PG

FANTASY In this umpteenth adaptation of JM Barrie's children's masterpiece, Peter Pan (Jeremy Sumpter) and Wendy (Rachel Hurd-Wood) flirt as though there is no tomorrow in Neverland. In searching for a mother figure, Peter nearly ends up with a wife. It's no wonder that fairy Tinker Bell (played by Ludivine Sagnier) occasionally throws a tantrum, as our young heroes tussle with Jason Isaacs's terrifying Captain Hook. Australian writer/director PJ Hogan (My Best Friend's Wedding) gives the story of the boy who wouldn't grow up an eye-catching makeover and, despite Sumpter's American accent, manages to retain the essential Englishness of the source text. TH (US/UK/Aus 2003, may be edited for violence, HD)

The Lost World: Jurassic Park ★★★
6.25-9.00pm ITV2 PG

SCI-FI There's another island full of dinosaurs in this exuberant sequel to Jurassic Park. But while the cloned package elicits a sense of déjà vu, such feelings never get in the way of the special effects, which are served up in deliciously scary dollops. With original cast members Richard Attenborough and Jeff Goldblum on hand, director Steven Spielberg ensures his thrill-ride runs smoothly along well-oiled tracks. Even though the final third of the movie, where the T rex rampages through San Diego, seems slightly tacked on, events move at such a breakneck pace there's barely time to think about anything other than screaming in amazement. AJ (US 1997, may be edited for language, violence, HD)

Dark Shadows ★★★
7.00-9.00pm Sony Movies 12

HORROR COMEDY Director Tim Burton layers on the quirkiness in this gothic farce, which is based on the 1960s supernatural soap opera. In his eighth Burton collaboration, Johnny Depp plays vampire Barnabas Collins, who returns to his Maine stately pile in 1972 after two centuries of hibernation, and sets about restoring his family's fortunes. Burton's style is a visual treat, but in trying to capture the cult TV show's blend of eccentric comedy and full-blooded melodrama, the film's sense of madcap fun is often left high and dry, while the action finale is ridiculously overblown. AJ (US 2012, may be edited for content)

Bridget Jones's Diary ★★★★★
9.00-11.00pm 5 Star 15

ROMANTIC COMEDY Renée Zellweger stars in the first cinematic outing for the 30-something Londoner. In an Oscar-nominated turn, she brings wit and warmth to the role of Bridget, the chardonnay drinking heroine with "absolutely enormous panties", whose life takes a different turn when she has a flirtation with her boss (Hugh Grant), despite the derision of an old family friend (Colin Firth). With a zinger-laden script co-written by Richard Curtis (Love Actually), this adaptation of Helen Fielding's novel is well-directed by Sharon Maguire (who returned for third film, 2016's Bridget Jones's Baby), and is very funny indeed. LH (UK/US 2001, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

The Big Heat ★★★★★
11.10pm-12.55am Sony Classic 15

FILM NOIR Glenn Ford crusades against Mob-led civic corruption and hunts for vengeance in this hard-boiled classic from director Fritz Lang. Its most famous scene, when moll Gloria Grahame is scalded by hot coffee hurled by crook Lee Marvin, was trimmed by the censors but is now fully restored. Ford is excellent as the cop on a mission – his character was based on the investigators who uncovered the bile in US cities during the 1950s Estes Kefauver Senate inquiry – and Lang gives the vicious exposé a sleek and glossy surface. TS (US 1953, violence, BW)

Flying Blind ★★★
12 midnight-1.30am BBC2 15

THRILLER An engineer working on an MoD contract begins an affair with an Arab student in this topical, small-scale British film. Helen McCrory's striking central performance shows us both sides of Frankie: the stern professional in a male-dominated workplace; and the emotionally vulnerable lover in a fraught relationship with Kahil (Najib Oudghiri). Polish director Katarzyna Klimkiewicz creates sympathy for both characters in a film that offers an intriguing take on how the war on terror permeates even the most intimate spaces. TJ (UK 2012, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Kind Hearts and Coronets ★★★★★

5.50-8.00pm Talking Pictures TV U

BLACK COMEDY You may have your favourites from Ealing Studios' approximate golden years of 1948-55, but Kind Hearts and Coronets is a glorious place to start for newcomers.

A rogue's gallery of nine members of the D'Ascoyne line are deliciously played by Alec Guinness, including four brothers (notably a port-loving vicar and a banker) and a ballooning Suffragette aunt, and they are targeted by the disinherited and homicidally impatient Louis Mazzini (Dennis Price). Never mind HBO's Succession: in this family, anybody who gets in the way is unceremoniously bumped off. Directed by Robert Hamer, the film has an unkind heart but a lightness of touch, and lost out on the best British film Bafta to The Third Man. (UK 1949, BW)

DID YOU KNOW?
The film's ambiguous ending was changed for US audiences to comply with a Production Code rule that crime must not be shown to pay

Thoroughly Modern Millie ★★★

11.00am-1.50pm Film4 PG

MUSICAL This popular vehicle for Julie Andrews succeeds despite a confusing plot and a tendency for excess. The real delights are co-stars James Fox and Mary Tyler Moore, the latter's natural good-naturedness providing a fine counterpoint to Andrews's studied brittleness. Director George Roy Hill lacks the lightness of touch that this movie needs, and although the production values are sumptuous, Millie stubbornly refuses to become Thoroughly Modern, and now looks sadly dated. It's best dipped into rather than fully endured. TS (US 1967, HD)

Sicario ★★★★★

9.00-11.20pm Film4 15

CRIME THRILLER The unofficial war zone that is the North American/Mexican border is the setting for this dark, gripping narco-thriller. Emily Blunt stars as a by-the-book FBI agent who is called on by a special ops team (headed by Josh Brolin) for their next mission.

But Brolin may not be all he seems, a suspicion fuelled by the presence of the aloof and shady Benicio Del Toro, who makes no attempt to ingratiate himself with the rookie. As Blunt is plunged into a world of bloodshed and duplicity, the sense of paranoia is brilliantly conveyed by director Denis Villeneuve. DW (US 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

Déjà Vu ★★★

9.00-11.35pm Sony Movies 12

SCI-FI Denzel Washington reteamed with his Crimson Tide and Man on Fire director Tony Scott for this thriller about manipulating the past to save lives in the future. Washington plays a New Orleans federal agent investigating a bombing incident, who is given access to a government team experimenting with the link between the present and the past. Could they prevent the crime from ever happening? The script provides some commentary on surveillance, home-grown terrorism and the Bush-era policy of pre-emptive strikes, but Scott is far more interested in the pyrotechnics. JR (US 2006, some violence)

The Internship ★★

10.00pm-12.25am 5 Star 12

COMEDY Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn made a winning double act in Wedding Crashers, but, eight years later, they're going through the motions in director Shawn Levy's culture-clash movie. They play salesmen who are made redundant and forced to compete for a job at Google (which, disturbingly, plays like a recruitment video for a cult with a Zen-like philosophy). Levy's film may boast a hi-tech backdrop, but it's an old banger of a comedy, with Vaughn's mile-a-minute spiel especially rusty and Wilson looking too meditative throughout. SP (US 2013, swearing, HD)

The Curse of Frankenstein ★★★★★

11.10pm-12.50am Horror Channel 12

HORROR This was the classic that single-handedly revived traditional British Gothic and firmly placed the "Hammer House of Horror" on the global gore map. Peter Cushing is the demented Baron who yearns to resurrect the dead, while Christopher Lee plays the creature who proves his mad theories correct. With its gruesome atmosphere, unflinching direction and outstanding design, this phenomenally successful film was the first colour version of Mary Shelley's gallows fairy tale, setting a standard that even Hammer found hard to live up to. AJ (UK 1957, violence)

The Owl and the Pussycat ★★★

9.00-10.55pm Sony Classic 15

ROMANTIC COMEDY Showing on free-to-air TV for the first time since 2003, this slick adaptation of Bill Manhoff's Broadway hit stars Barbra Streisand as an eccentric hooker who moves in with bookish neighbour George Segal. Director Herbert Ross and scriptwriter Buck Henry give the raucous original an extra glow of warmth, and Streisand and Segal are so good together you wonder why they never did a sequel. Tom Hutchinson (US 1970, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse)

Olympus Has Fallen ★★★

10.35-12.45am C5 15

THRILLER When the White House is infiltrated by terrorists, it's up to Gerard Butler to save the day. He stars as a former bodyguard to the US president (Aaron Eckhart) who is being held hostage. Using his inside knowledge of the building, Butler wages a one-man war against the bad guys, even as they threaten to disarm America's missile defences. Director Antoine Fuqua wears his action movie influences on his sleeve, and while Butler struggles with the pithy one-liners, he convinces as the hero who's got what it takes to get the job done. TeS (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Wolverine ★★★
9.00-11.25pm Film4 12

ACTION This week, fans and latecomers alike can chart the arc of the ever-popular superhero Wolverine, he of the X-Men comic-book series, played with gruff dignity by Aussie actor Hugh Jackman. Following on from X-Men Origins: Wolverine (which showed yesterday) is The Wolverine, in which the world-weary mutant takes a trip to Japan. Director James Mangold returns to wrap up the trilogy with Logan tomorrow, which plays with unabashed references to classic western Shane. In all three films, Jackman makes the part his own and abides as one of Marvel's true icons, having appeared in nine of the ten X-Men movies (his presence is also very much felt in the two Deadpool films). If Logan really is his final outing, it remains the perfect way to bring the mutton-chopped icon's tale to a satisfying close. (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
Action star Dwayne Johnson gave Jackman some tips on achieving Wolverine's buff physique, including a 6,000-calorie daily diet

The Odessa File ★★★
12.45-3.20pm Film4 PG

THRILLER A terrific Frederick Forsyth plot and impressive production values make this thriller eminently watchable, even if veteran director Ronald Neame lets the pace drag. Jon Voight gives a superb performance as the journalist tracking down a concentration camp commandant, his quest hindered at every turn by members of the sinister Odessa organisation. There are several splendid moments to be had, but one might have expected a little more from a screenplay co-written by former intelligence expert George Markstein, who was also the script editor for TV series The Prisoner. TS (UK 1974, violence, HD)

Here Comes the Boom ★★★
7.00-9.00pm Sony Movies 12

ACTION This hit-and-miss comedy stars Kevin James (Zookeeper) as a jaded teacher who, in order to save his school's music department, moonlights as a mixed martial arts fighter. A series of bruising encounters brings his exploits to the attention of disapproving superiors, but will his endeavours help him win the heart of feisty school nurse Salma Hayek? The inspirational life lessons of Dead Poets Society and underdog melodrama of Rocky make an odd pairing, but James's charm helps carry the film through its stuttering storyline and predictable plot twists. TeS (US 2012, violence, some swearing)

The Upturned Glass ★★★
10.05-11.50pm Talking Pictures TV

CRIME DRAMA In his last British film before taking off for Hollywood, James Mason returned to the kind of brooding figure that audiences adored in The Seventh Veil and Odd Man Out. He's the brain surgeon who concocts an elaborate revenge on the person responsible for the death of the woman he loved. The murderess is played by Pamela Kellino (Mason's wife, who co-wrote the script), while Rosamund John is his great love. The plot is heavily contrived, but Mason's performance and Lawrence Huntington's directorial flair keep you hooked. AE (UK 1947, BW)

Heartbreak Ridge ★★★
10.15pm-12.55am ITV4 15

WAR DRAMA Clint Eastwood struts his stuff here as a grizzled gunnery sergeant training rookie soldiers. The movie recycles many clichés of the genre, from the misfit recruit gaining his dignity to the old, die-hard veteran butting heads with the modern-thinking major. There's a by-the-numbers feel to it all, but Eastwood is the main reason to watch, as he whips the troops into shape in readiness for the invasion of Grenada. AJ (US 1986, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Wedding Singer

★★★★ 8.00-10.00pm 5 Star 12

COMEDY Adam Sandler is pitch-perfect here as hopelessly romantic cabaret wedding singer Robbie Hart, who falls for waitress Julia (Drew Barrymore) at a nuptial function, only to discover that she's engaged to someone else. Director Frank Coraci has enormous fun with the music, fashions and fads of the mid-1980s setting, while the chemistry between the two stars proved such a hit that they got back together for 50 First Dates (2004) and Blended (2014), which you can see later tonight. Alan Jones (US 1998, swearing, HD)

The Hunchback of Notre Dame

★★★★ 6.55-9.00pm Sony Classic PG

GOTHIC DRAMA This is one of the best adaptations of Victor Hugo's classic tale of the misshapen Parisian bell-ringer and his love for gypsy girl Esmeralda. A brilliant and authentically literate script by John Gay is seized on with relish by Anthony Hopkins and Derek Jacobi (playing Quasimodo and Dom Claude Frolo respectively), who both give their difficult characters a warmth and sympathy beyond their tragic and villainous dimensions. Wonderful period production values are the icing on the cake in this lush made-for-TV production. AJ (US TVM 1982)

National Lampoon's Vacation

★★★ 10.30pm-12.35am ITV4 15

COMEDY Animal House is still National Lampoon's funniest film by far, but this decent effort is miles better than subsequent movies in the series. Chevy Chase plays the dad who takes his family across America to an amusement park, and runs into numerous mishaps along the way. Director Harold Ramis (Groundhog Day) keeps the silliness coming at a furious pace, and he has the benefit of a supporting cast that includes Beverly D'Angelo, Randy Quaid, Christie Brinkley and John Candy. JB (US 1983, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Man with the Iron Heart ★★★

11.05pm-1.00am BBC2 15

WARTIME THRILLER You wait ages for a film to dramatise the assassination of Nazi official Reinhard Heydrich, aka the architect of the Holocaust, and then two come along within a year of one another: first Anthropoid and then this French-Belgian production. The films further expanded a Heydrich subgenre, which began in 1943 with Hitler's Madman and Hangmen Also Die! and also includes 1975's Operation Daybreak. Directed by Frenchman Cédric Jimenez, The Man with the Iron Heart is the most star-studded of them all, with Jason Clarke disarmingly unhinged as the targeted officer, Rosamund Pike as his strong-willed wife, Stephen Graham as Himmler and Jacks O'Connell and Reynor as the Czech assassins. It's a tense mission movie with an eye for historical accuracy (albeit with frustratingly little for the ladies to do), with a conclusion that is beyond cruel. But Heydrich's journey from family man to monster is the real draw. (US/UK/Fr/Bel 2017, violence, sex scenes, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

The title comes from a phrase used by Hitler to describe Reinhard Heydrich, who was known for his cruelty even among his peers

Born Free ★★★★★

12.45-2.40pm Sony Classic U

ADVENTURE Beautifully shot and sensitively staged by director James Hill, this charming adaptation of Joy Adamson's bestseller is one of the great animal films. It goes without saying that all eyes will be on Elsa the lioness whenever she is on the screen, with her reluctance to take the first steps back into the wild bringing a lump to every throat. But the human performances are also first rate, with Virginia McKenna and Bill Travers bringing warmth, rather than easy sentimentality, to their roles, while Geoffrey Keen excels as the kindly commissioner who persuades them to part with their pet. DP (US/UK 1966)

The Boss Baby ★★★

6.45-8.10pm CBBC U

ANIMATED COMEDY Seven-year-old Tim (voiced by Miles Christopher Bakshi and also Tobey Maguire, as the grown-up who narrates) is horrified when his parents bring home a baby brother – especially as he can already talk and is dressed for Wall Street. After a fractious start, the siblings team up to save their mum and dad (Lisa Kudrow and Jimmy Kimmel) from evil industrialists. Alec Baldwin's wisecracking mini-mogul is essentially a talcum-tushed version of Jack Donaghy, the hard-nosed TV network exec he played in the sitcom 30 Rock, which ensures that this occasionally mawkish animation is peppered with riotous chuckles. TeS (US 2017)

Warm Bodies ★★★

9.00-10.50pm 4Music 12 (Freeview 29; Sky 139; Virgin 337)

COMEDY HORROR Nicholas Hoult feels dead inside at the start of this offbeat comedy, mainly because he's a zombie. But writer/director Jonathan Levine (Long Shot) breaks the rules of the genre by delivering an undead hero, R, who is able to think deeply about his life (or lack of it) and conveys this in a rib-tickling voiceover. That residual spark of humanity is then fanned into something warmer thanks to a meeting with mortal blonde Julie (Teresa Palmer). The plot does lumber a bit, but the interplay between the couple is surprisingly tender and witty. SP (US 2012, violence, swearing)

Sausage Party ★★★

9.00-10.55pm Dave 15

COMEDY Food and other comestibles take on a life of their own in this outrageous animated tale set in a supermarket. A horny hot dog (voiced by Seth Rogen) and a pretty bun (Kristen Wiig) dream of being together in a utopia they believe lies beyond the sliding doors. A scene riffing on Saving Private Ryan – where a can of spaghetti attempts to scoop up its insides – encapsulates both the horror and the hilarity, though some viewers may find the risqué humour difficult to digest. SP (US 2016, swearing, HD)

Blade Runner 2049 ★★★★★

9.00pm-12.20am Sony Movies 15

Andrew Collins My Movies, page 37. (US/UK/Can 2017, violence, swearing, nudity)

Marvel Avengers Assemble

10.35pm-12.50am BBC1 12

ACTION FANTASY Iron Man, Black Widow, Thor, Captain America and the Hulk unite in this first Marvel group effort, in which rogue Asgardian god Loki orchestrates an alien invasion of Earth. Samuel L Jackson's SHIELD boss Nick Fury mobilises this bickering team of heroes, and the result is a city-wrecking slugfest that puts the Transformers franchise in the shade. But what raises this escapade above the merely awesome is director Joss Whedon's script, which brims with laugh-out-loud banter, with Robert Downey Jr at his quipping best. JA (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Bullet to the Head ★★★

12.10-1.45am C4 15

CRIME Sylvester Stallone and director Walter Hill (The Warriors) team up for this endearingly retro action film. Firmly in the buddy-cop mould, the plot sees Stallone's tattooed hitman reluctantly siding with a straight-arrow police detective (Sung Kang of Fast and Furious fame) to face a mutual foe in Jason Momoa's sadistic killer. There's decent chemistry between the leads, but effortlessly stealing every scene is Momoa, whose blend of brain and brawn make him a terrific boo-hiss baddie. DA (US 2012, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Cops on the rocks

I could run a murder investigation better, says Alison Graham

IN A NATIONAL emergency, I could run a murder investigation. The circumstances must of course remain unthinkable and I hope impossible... every single police officer in the country self-isolates from the coronavirus at home or they all get so fed up with bureaucracy, they head off on holiday together.

I'd be good at it, too. I wouldn't be all maverick TV drama cop, punching walls in frustration, smacking my desk before sweeping all my pots of pens to the floor in impotent fury because the Chief Constable is breathing down the neck of my jobsworth boss to wrap this up – fast – because “the Press are all over it”.

I'd be calm and considered, I'd make notes, I'd be pleasant, I'd play by the rules because I'm that kind of person. I'll stick my neck out here and say we'd all be passably good because we know how these things work, thanks to the tidal wave of police documentaries... Murder 24/7, Murder Trial, Catching a Killer and, particularly 24 Hours in Police Custody... that have flooded our screens in recent years. Even the explosion in true-crime dramas (A Confession, White House Farm) has played its part in showing how things should be done.

‘All my internal alarm bells clang loud and long during Liar’

But it's documentaries in particular that sound the death knell for maverick cop dramas because they make them seem silly and redundant. We all know what goes on at police interviews because we've watched them, thanks to the real-time recordings that feature so heavily in fly-on-the-wall series.

We know that real police officers don't take their chances of an (inadmissible) confession by interviewing suspects alone, in cells, or without switching on the tape recorder, or by being oppressive. Thanks to the real-life investigation we're now exposed to, we've seen the proper process at first hand. We know what goes on.

Thus all of my internal alarm bells clang loud and long during episodes of Liar (Monday ITV) with its smirking DI Karen Renton (Katherine

UNORTHODOX
Liar isn't following correct police procedure

Kelly). Though there's a lot else about Liar, including its first series way back in 2017, that's disturbing, especially predicating a whodunnit on a sex attacker who filmed his assaults on all 19 of his victims. As a premise, it's icky and unpleasant.

IT'S CONFUSING, TOO, leaping from one timeline (“THREE WEEKS EARLIER”) and back again, though it's rarely entirely clear which era we are in. But Renton is the real sticker for me. She's awful, a bully and a boor, chewing her nicotine gum (her particular Maverick Cop signature), while being monumentally insensitive towards Laura Nielson (Joanne Froggatt), a rape victim who Renton is determined murdered her attacker, Andrew Earlham (Ioan Gruffudd). Renton is from another television age and it makes no difference that she's a woman; she doesn't signal some kind of feminist progress.

Renton pressures Laura during needlessly nasty interviews, oppresses her boyfriend with the interview tape machine off, as she and her oppo await his solicitor, deliberately leads Laura from the police station through a baying gaggle of photographers, and leaves a police mugshot of her boyfriend “accidentally” on her desk knowing Laura will see it.

This kind of Stickle Bricks plotting is so boring, we can see right through it and we know it's implausible, thanks to 24 Hours in Police Custody and its ilk. Dramas can't get away with it any more.

LOVELY LAST TANGO

In such unsettling days, as we sit in front of the TV with our sanitised hands, our rubbish bins full of used tissues, our bathrooms full of panic-bought toilet rolls, it's good to have a bit of constancy and reassurance. Like Last Tango in Halifax, which ends this week (Sunday BBC1). It's a lovely final episode from the peerless Sally Wainwright, full of attainable happiness (take comfort in the everyday) and some sadness, too. But no sentimentality. I'm so glad it returned to our screens after its four-year absence. Though I really hope we don't have to wait another four years for its return.

FUN DOWN UNDER

Five Bedrooms

Available now

An Australian comedy drama in the Cold Feet vein, with the twist that the characters all live together: a group of singletons have a collective what-the-hell moment and jointly buy a house. Once they've moved in, their personal crises and ill-advised flings cause a lot of good-natured complications.

NOW TV/ SKY BOX SETS

RISQUÉ NEW DRAMA

Mrs Fletcher

Available from 10 March

The attention-grabbing headline for this US dramedy is "divorcee gets into internet porn after her son leaves for college", but although it's not shy about tackling its lead character's awakening sexuality, Mrs Fletcher is at heart a humane, rounded portrait of people learning to be themselves. Kathryn Hahn is typically excellent as the empty-nester cutting loose.

RIBALD COMEDY

Sandylands

Available now

A seaside fling of a comedy, starring Natalie Dew as a woman who has long since abandoned the coastal resort where she grew up for the sophisticated mores of That London. When her dad disappears she's thrown back into a cavalcade of gaudy eccentrics, leading to a gush of naughty jokes delivered by a roster of strong comic performers, including David Walliams (above).

SPOOKY CRIME DRAMA

The Outsider

Available now

A miniseries that gives detective drama a supernatural shake-up. A boy has been murdered, and evidence shows a local man did it. But he says otherwise and, when he proves his innocence, the cops wonder if something more sinister is afoot. It is, because this is based on a Stephen King book.

ENGROSSING DOCUMENTARY

Secrets of the Museum

Available now

London's Victoria & Albert Museum proves easily interesting enough to sustain this six-episode doc, following the "conservators" who work behind the scenes preparing for exhibitions. It helps that the establishment's remit leans it towards the glamorous, the famous and the pop-cultural, with everything from Christian Dior to Elton John popping up.

DETECTIVES, CLOSE UP

Murder 24/7

Available now

A series using a format recently established by C4 documentaries such as 24 Hours in Police Custody: we're tracking real detectives in the crucial early phase of a murder investigation, witnessing both the grisly details of a crime scene and the details that require methodical work to uncover. The first case, a stabbing in Southend, leads us into a web of twists and shady villains.

SITCOM GEM

Bob Servant

Available now

The finest creation of writer Neil Forsyth – who also penned Eric, Ernie and Me and Guilt, the latter of which is on iPlayer until 16 March – Dundee burger-van magnate Bob Servant became a memorable role for Brian Cox in this 2013 sitcom. The local MP has died, which creates an opening for a canny, deeply beloved local personality. Instead, Bob tries his luck.

WHAT'S NEW ON IPLAYER, NETFLIX, AMAZON AND BEYOND

NETFLIX

OFFBEAT TEEN DRAMA On My Block

Available from 11 March

Set in a bad Los Angeles neighbourhood, this US teen drama takes a bold approach to the dangers of modern urban life. Instead of being a backdrop the group of high-school pals here are largely immune to, gang violence is something they're caught right up in, despite still being funny, impetuous kids. In series three, they're dealing with the whims of a new local kingpin.

EYE-OPENING INVESTIGATIONS Dirty Money

Available from 11 March

Alex Gibney, the documentarist behind Going Clear and Enron: the Smartest Guys in the Room, is back with a second series of investigations tackling corruption and greed in America. Series one looked into Donald Trump's business dealings and this one takes aim at the President's son-in-law, Jared Kushner, but Gibney's main theme is large companies ruthlessly rinsing ordinary folk on an industrial scale.

ELECTRIC ESPIONAGE Queen Sono

Available now

Pearl Thusi blazes through her lead role in South Africa's answer to Bond and Bourne: she's a secret agent with a dark past, working undercover to bring down criminal syndicates while blithely ignoring her orders. Occasionally a supporting player pops up with some iffy acting, but that doesn't detract from the glamorous, international spy antics and magnetic central character.

DRESSED TO IMPRESS RuPaul's Drag Race

Available now

If last year's successful British version gave you a taste for the Drag Race, here's the twelfth run of the American original, in which RuPaul sets budding drag artistes a series of fashion- or performance-themed tasks, including the climactic lip-synch. Guest judges this year include Nicki Minaj, Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez and Daisy Ridley; Netflix has a fresh episode every Saturday.

AMAZON PRIME

ON TOUR WITH TEAM AUSTRALIA The Test

Available from 12 March

There's a trend for documentaries that go behind the scenes with elite sports teams. They don't always get a big story, but this one does: we join the Australian cricket team in the aftermath of the 2018 ball-tampering scandal, which means new coach Justin Langer has to rebuild the squad's pride from scratch. Then the series has some luck, when the Aussies go to England for an Ashes series that proves to be a classic...

CULT DRAMEDY Please Like Me

Available now

Starring and almost entirely written by Brisbane wunderkind Josh Thomas, this hip saga about a young gay man called Josh and his friends is like Girls directed by Wes Anderson. But in Australia. It's low-key, whip-smart and warm-hearted, with a global reputation that's grown steadily since it debuted in 2013. Thomas's new show Everything's Gonna Be Okay is (we hope) imminent, so get up to speed with his spiky genius now.

ALL 4

TOP-LEVEL QUIZZING Jon Snow's Very Hard Questions

Available now

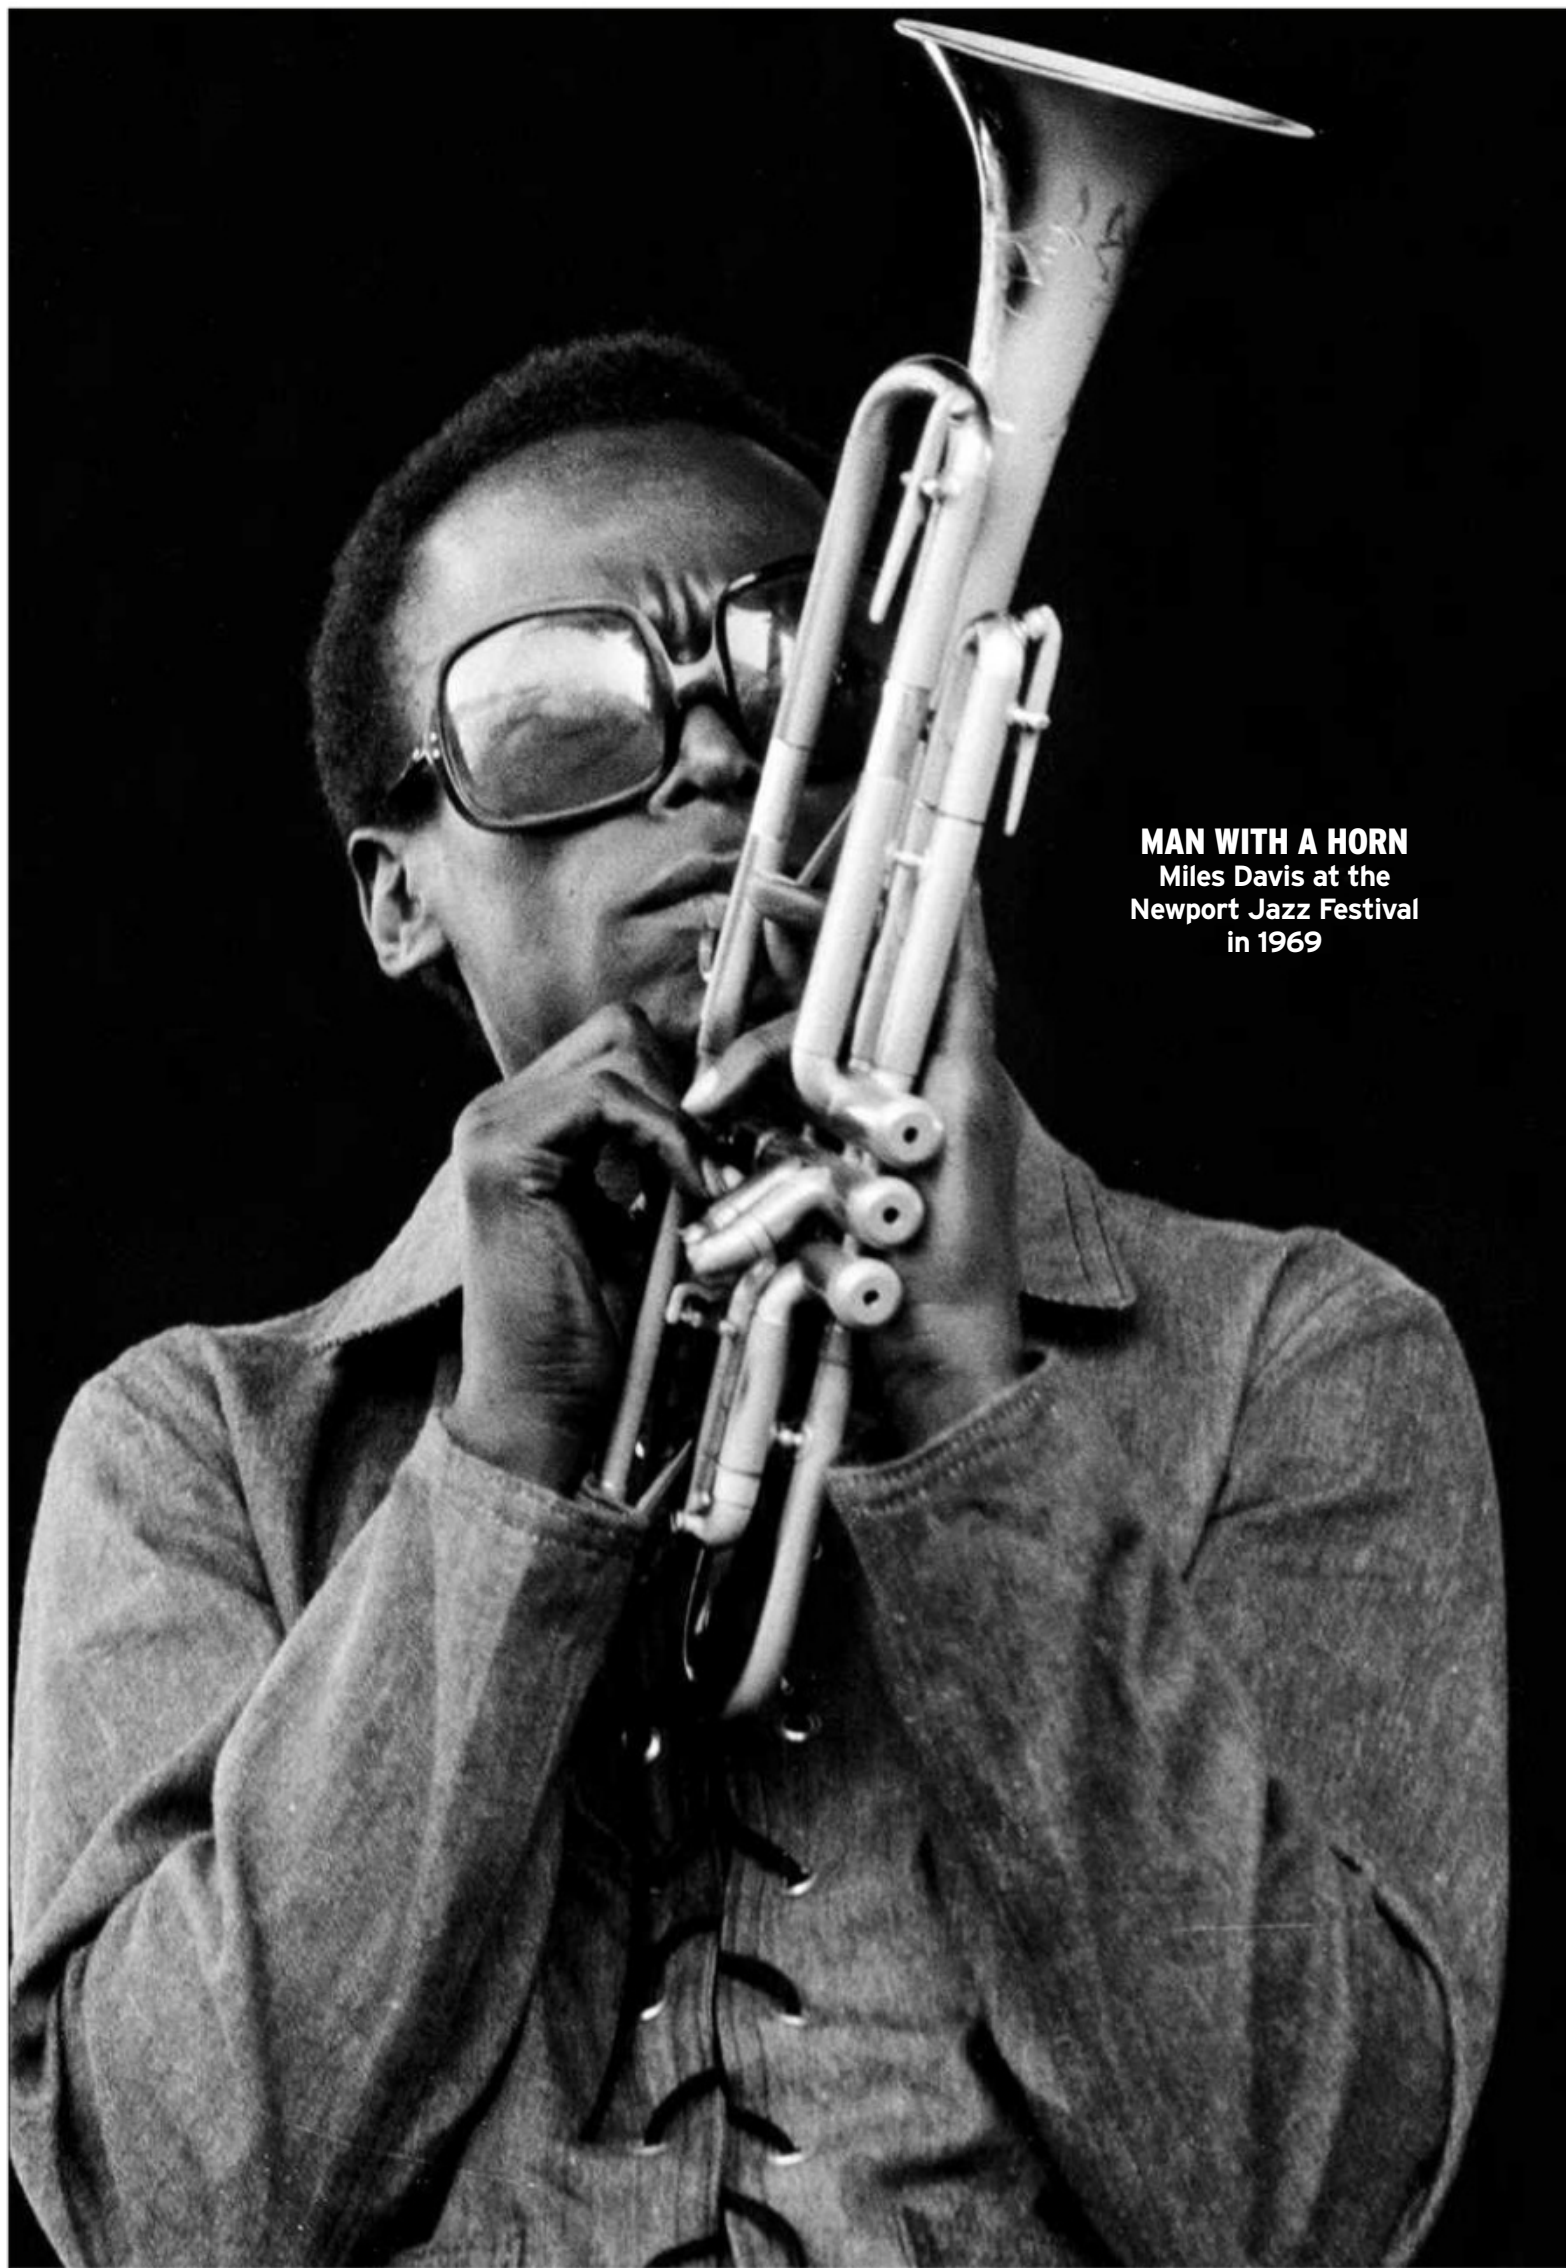

It's genteel and a bit slow but this new quiz successfully apes Only Connect's admirable celebration of nice, nerdy super-quizzers. Jon Snow is a suitably avuncular host for a format that relies on teams collaborating on the right strategy, using Millionaire-ish lifelines to make hard questions easier. Try it if the Monday OC/University Challenge double-header is the highlight of your TV week.

INCREDIBLE TRUE STORIES How to Rob a Bank

Available now

What's it like to rob a bank, and how do you do it? Drawing on how common the crime is in America (there are 14 bank jobs a day over there) this US series meets bank robbers and asks them for the inside story. The thieves' stories are backed by reconstructions that, although it always all goes wrong eventually, lean shamelessly towards finding the logistics of heists quite thrilling. Which, let's face it, they are.

Celebrity Mastermind

5.35pm BBC1

QUIZ I love the way this show brings together unlikely bedfellows. Former home secretary Alan Johnson next to comedian Katy Brand, say, or Adrian Edmondson with Gareth Thomas.

Tonight, the tradition continues with former England striker Darren Bent taking his place alongside florist Elizabeth McKenna: you may recognise her from a run on The Apprentice a few years ago. Then there's Maya Sondhi, whom Line of Duty fans will recognise as ill-fated AC-12 officer Maneet Bindra.

And, best of all, Bez. Will the Happy Mondays dancer shimmy his way across to the leather chair, arms aloft, perhaps with a pair of maracas? Let's hope so.

DAVID BUTCHER

Pointless Celebrities

6.05pm BBC1

QUIZ Musical duo Mick Foster and Tony Allen tend not to hang around long when they're on Pointless. They've generally been knocked out after the first round, so Richard Osman announces they'll sing at the end of the show, "just so they can stay a bit longer this time".

It's an Irish edition, with broadcaster Henry Kelly and Father Ted's Pauline McLynn also among the guests. There's only one, incredibly obscure, pointless answer in the first round, so well done if you get it at home. While the pop song titles round is agony for the older celebs, the St Patrick's Day-themed picture round proves easier. JANE RACKHAM

Ant and Dec's Saturday Night Takeaway

7.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT There have been some tiny glitches in the usually slick entertainment show: Dec reminding us to tune in next week to Britain's Got Talent, for instance; and the audience laughing at something in the studio while we at home were watching a very sad film clip. But that's live TV for you. About six million are still tuning in.

Details of this week's line-up are sketchy. We do know that Joanna Lumley, previously the head of a secret organisation made up of individuals honoured by the Queen in the show's miniseries The Honoured, is tonight's Guest Star Announcer. Is that a promotion or demotion? JR

PICK OF THE DAY Miles Davis: Birth of the Cool 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Director Stanley Nelson's film is a compelling slide through the life of a complex character who's been ascribed almost mystical status by jazz heads.

Davis's own words, largely gleaned from his autobiography, are read by an actor, as we learn how he studied music theory by day, while streamlining his craft on 52nd Street at night; hung out with Picasso and Sartre in Paris; became blindsided by drug addiction.

The film's linear, biographical style is pretty straight-edged by today's elevated standards. But, as Davis demonstrated in his music, who needs showy tricks and techniques when your source material is so strong? Especially when you've got the likes of Quincy Jones, Carlos Santana and Wayne Shorter lining up to tell the story. "Being into Miles was, in itself, the definition of being hip," says collaborator James Mtume. GARY ROSE

TVCV SAMUEL WEST

■ The television career of Samuel West (Midsomer Murders, 9pm ITV3) dates back to 1975 when, at the age of nine, he played Queen Victoria's grandson Prince Albert Victor in Edward the Seventh. It was a busy year for West and his family: his father Timothy had the lead in the same TV drama, while mother Prunella Scales played hotelier Sybil for the first time in Fawlty Towers.

■ Since that childhood debut, West has stacked up dozens of screen credits, including the high-profile role of Leonard Bast in the Merchant-Ivory movie version of Howards End, the BBC's adaptation of Jonathan Strange and Mr Norrell, as well as Death in Paradise, Mr Selfridge and The Hollow Crown.

■ He's portrayed the traitorous Anthony Blunt on two occasions – in 2003's Cambridge Spies and more recently in series three of The Crown. DAVID BROWN

The Voice UK

8.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT We've been through the Battles and had the steals – now the Knockouts begin, with the final 24 acts vying for one of only eight places on the live shows. This is when the scythe is taken to the coaches' teams and fundamentally this is where it's hard to engage with The Voice; they get rid of singers too quickly to the point where you can't possibly get to know them before they're turfed off.

Tonight, Sir Tom Jones, Olly Murs, Meghan Trainor and Will.i.am will choose one act each from their teams to go through to the live semi-finals, before picking a second singer next week. Along for the ride are guests Shania Twain, Ellie Goulding, Ella Eyre and Jesy Nelson. FRANCES TAYLOR

When TV Double Acts Fall Out

8.30pm Channel 5

ENTERTAINMENT This is one of those cheap and cheerful C5 shows where you see the title and go, "Oh lord, not another cheap and cheerful C5 shows." But if you are desperate, this will help you pass a useless hour.

You know the format – plenty of clips, followed by various talking heads (Anne Diamond! Garry Bushell! Anita Harris!) explaining what you have just seen. But there's some guilty fun. Kim Woodburn, of How Clean Is Your House?, dishes the dirt on her relationship with co-star Aggie MacKenzie ("We were polar opposites"), while there's chat about double acts from David Walliams and Matt Lucas to Sonny and Cher.

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Hidden

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA There's more blood, darkness, pouring rain and revolting kitchens in the penultimate episode of this gloomy crime drama when violent death visits that small, festering community once again.

As the police – ie Cadi Jones and her sidekick, no one else seems terribly bothered – have failed to make much headway with the first murder, of the schoolteacher, it doesn't seem likely they'll be hot on anyone's trail for the second.

But Cadi's thoughts start to click slowly towards the culprit when she thinks more closely about the death of Gwilym, the troubled boy who took his own life. Maybe one of his close friendships could hold the key to the mind of a young murderer. AG

Six Nations Rugby

1.45pm, 7.25pm BBC1

SPORT Today sees the final round of the Six Nations, normally a happy day when a carpet of free-to-air rugby unrolls before us across an entire afternoon and evening. But not this year. This year, the tournament's later stages have been affected by the coronavirus and as Radio Times went to press, tournament organisers decided to postpone England's concluding match in Rome. With Italy's game against Ireland already called off, the tournament as a whole will remain unfinished until who-knows-when.

But at the time of writing today's other two matches were set to go ahead. If they do, we kick off with Wales v Scotland (kick-off 2.15pm): the Scots face an uphill battle at Cardiff, where they haven't won since 2002. And in the evening, there's France v Ireland (k/o 8pm), where a dazzling French back line meets the obdurate Irish defence.

9.00 Miles Davis: Birth of the Cool

RT The work of jazz pioneer Miles Davis continues to have a huge influence, but the restless determination to break boundaries and live life on his own terms that made him a star also gave him the reputation of being difficult to live with. In music and in life, Davis broke with tradition - and when he thought his work had come to represent a new convention, he changed again. It was this constant thirst for new experiences that made him such an inspiring collaborator. Archive footage and studio out-takes help illustrate the life of a singular talent. See p52. Director Stanley Nelson; Producer Nicole London (S) (HD)

New to Sky today

Robert the Bruce ★★ 10.00pm Sky Premiere
Covering the same period as David Mackenzie's Outlaw King, this drama unfolds at the start of the 14th century, with Robert the Bruce – nominally Scotland's monarch – on the run from both English forces and his own divided countrymen. Angus MacFadyen reprises the role he most famously played in Braveheart, and also shares writing and producing duties on the film. The star nails the careworn characterisation, but the script labours for a good hour before really coming to life. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Every parent's nightmare

Lost Girls ★★★ Netflix
New to Netflix this weekend, a true-story drama starring Amy Ryan as a waitress searching for her missing sex-worker daughter. As she proved in Gone Baby Gone, Ryan shows she can do a lot with very little, and puts flesh on the bones of her confrontational character. She's aided by a largely excellent female cast, while Liz Garbus's direction adds extra grit. If it all doesn't quite gel, that's partly to do with our expectations of a happy or a conclusive ending; this being real life, the outcome is never assured. STEVE MORRISSEY

Leaving iPlayer

Captain Fantastic ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This bittersweet, feel-good comedy stars Viggo Mortensen as a left-wing radical whose home-schooled kids risk being taken into care when they attend their late mother's funeral. The young cast are smart and likeable, shepherded by the charismatic Mortensen, who was Oscar-nominated for his performance. DAMON WISE

COSTUME! DRAMA!

Alice Eve, Ella Purnell, Jack
Bardoe, Harriet Walter, Philip
Glenister, Tamsin Greig and Tom Wilkinson star in ITV's new Sunday-night series

PICK OF THE DAY Belgravia 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA New series From the people who brought you Downton Abbey... another Downton Abbey. A moneyed household upstairs and an assorted bag of servants downstairs, some resentful, some loyal. Actually, there are differences: Belgravia (based on Julian Fellowes's novel) is set in another time and place; it begins during the Napoleonic Wars before a dramatic "26 Years Later" time jump. And it's not Yorkshire it's, well, Belgravia, a part of London one character describes as "this spangled city for the rich".

The cast is terrific – Tamsin Greig and Philip Glenister are wealthy traders Mr and Mrs Trenchard. He made his money procuring supplies for the Duke of Wellington. But they are looked down upon by London society. Apart, possibly, from the Countess of Brockenhurst (the great Harriet Walter).

Everyone explains the plot – which hurtles in an unexpected direction – to each other and the whole show is sumptuous. ALISON GRAHAM

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL The last time the Roadshow set up shop beside Dundee's V&A museum, the experts saw all sorts of treasures with a Scottish connection. It's the same this time with someone's vast collection of Scottish agate jewellery, an Orkney chair that its owner sat on when she was a child and a swatch of tartan that Apollo 12 astronaut Alan Bean took to the Moon.

First, though, Fiona Bruce teases us with a pair of ancient wooden goggles that have a cross cut out of the eyepieces. "Who do you think these belong to?" she asks. As the Discovery is berthed right next to the V&A, there's a pretty big clue there.

JANE RACKHAM

Race across the World

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This backpacking version of Wacky Races packs in plenty of drama as the contestants take a ground-level trip through Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica, heading for their next checkpoint in Panama City.

"I didn't appreciate how hard it would be," says Jen – the eternal cry of reality TV guinea pigs. "You've got no money. You're starving. You're tired. In the middle of nowhere. You're not allowed a phone. You don't speak the language. It's really stressful!" Yes it is, but enjoyable to watch from the comfort of an armchair that isn't swelteringly hot, caught in a deluge, or on a coach with a loo that won't flush.

Last Tango in Halifax

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Here's a lovely final episode with all of those sparkling Sally Wainwright hallmarks, notably a loving state-of-our-lives talk between Alan and Celia that manages to be funny, touching, a bit peppery and deep without being earnest.

I'm going to miss the Tango gang and hope fervently it's not another four years before we see them all again. Who can wait that long to see if Caroline (Sarah Lancashire, never better) finds someone special? And will she give in to Gillian's repeated pleas and attend the Hebden Women's Disco? We find out tonight. There is sadness, too, as Ted makes a sentimental journey to the seaside, to Bridlington, where he and his wife had their honeymoon. AG See p24

Dragons' Den

9.00pm BBC2

REALITY The climax tonight is a humdinger. You could tune in 15 minutes from the end of the programme and get the best of a dramatic tussle over one man's invention of a glorified staple gun, including the most touching "I'm out" speech we've had for a while.

But prior to that, there are other impressive pitches and engaging characters, like Mariette and her hair-extensions business. This is a woman who manages to say, "Deborah! You're so cute in real life!" and get away with it.

A cheesecake entrepreneur enters predicting, "They'll be throwing their money at me." And Sara Davies tells one hopeful, "Yer tryna push water uphill with a fork." DAVID BUTCHER

HOW TO SEE THE GP...

The Formula One season screeches back on to the screen with coverage of the Australian Grand Prix (5.05am Sky Sports F1). The big question will be whether defending champion Lewis Hamilton is still the fastest driver on the track. But viewers needn't have a lengthy Sky contract to discover the answer. Day, week and month-long passes for Sky Sports are available, while the race is also available to view through Now TV. Sky Sports F1 is set to have live coverage of every race in 2020, though Channel 4 will also offer highlights, with the best moments from Melbourne to be shown at 2.10pm.

Hamilton will be competing for his seventh championship this year – a feat that would put him even with the all-time record holder Michael Schumacher. You can chart his progress over the weeks ahead as the action shifts first to Bahrain (22 March), then to Vietnam (5 April) and the Netherlands (3 May). DAVID BROWN

The Royal Ballet: Mayerling

9.00pm BBC4

ARTS Kenneth MacMillan's dark and brooding 1978 masterpiece tells the story of the real-life Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria and his morbid obsession with death, which descends into a suicide pact with his lover Mary Vetsera. It places huge demands on the dancer playing Rudolf (Steven McRae here) as he has to be on stage for almost the whole production, dancing seven pas de deux.

In this broadcast version, Sarah Lamb shines as Vetsera – after she'd wowed as Rudolf's mistress in the premiere staging. This epitome of male dancing is followed by Darcey Bussell's celebration of male ballet heroes and then a profile of its ground-breaking choreographer. DAVID CRAWFORD

(N Ireland: 11pm, 11.45pm)

DRAMA New series BBC1's Wanderlust looked at a middle-aged couple who explored sleeping with others. Here, it's a London couple in their 30s who take on a lodger in their flat and discover the joys of polyamory. Gemma and Kieran are doing OK but are up against it. Her café is a money pit and he works nights as a paramedic, so they rarely share time together.

When Ray turns up to rent their spare room, she's not so much a gooseberry as a unicorn – "the third party who makes it a party", a friend explains. The script is fond of awkward moments and pauses, but there's a chemistry among the cast that looks like it will dissolve through any stiltedness. DAVID BUTCHER

Before We Die

11.00pm C4

DRAMA This hard-nosed Swedish police show is back for a second run and hasn't shaken off the shackles of the first. The malign Mimica family are still on the sidelines, trading narcotics and evading justice, and main cop Hanna Svensson frets for her son Christian, missing since he went under cover among the Mimicas.

In series two, Hanna (Marie Richardson, Sweden's answer to Susan Sarandon) is on the trail of a leak in her department. It soon becomes clear that there's a slew of bent cops at work, known as "the Circle". Her drippy chief gets tough and wants "Every. Damned. Name" but unfortunately for Hanna the mugs she sends their way meet sticky ends.

ANOTHER DAY IN PARADISE?

The Karma crew are back

The Good Karma Hospital

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA There's not much good karma coming to Dr Ruby Walker (Amrita Acharia) when she returns to the chaotic Kerala hospital after four months away on her family's tea plantation. Far from being welcomed with open arms, she gets a frosty reception from Dr Lydia Fonseca (Amanda Redman) who's furious that Ruby's only there because her sister is about to give birth.

As for dishy doc Gabriel Varma (James Krishna Floyd), he can barely look at his former amour. All it takes is a medical emergency and Ruby has picked up her stethoscope again.

A few new characters – including beach bar owner Greg McConnell's daughter – are introduced to pep things up and fans who've been on tenterhooks for two series waiting for Ruby and Gabriel to cement their blossoming relationship are finally rewarded for their patience. JR

9.00pm Steven McRae and Sarah Lamb

7.00pm Beavers Behaving Badly
They may be small but beavers can mean big trouble for the residents of Jackson Hole, Wyoming, felling trees and building dams that result in costly damage to local properties, as this Natural World documentary reveals. It's down to wetland conservationist Drew Reed, nicknamed the "beaver buster", to restore harmony between the humans and their furry neighbours. Director David Johnson Series editor Roger Webb (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

8.00 Cake Bakers and Trouble Makers
Despite its origins in a shed, the Women's Institute had grand ambitions even in 1915. Lucy Worsley begins her examination of the movement's first 100 years by exploring its roots, including campaigns for decent housing in 1918 and the fight for equal pay in 1943. She also examines the Institute's crucial role in both world wars and its struggle to adapt to the social revolution of the 1960s. Director/Producer Eleanor Scoones (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 The Royal Ballet: Mayerling
RT Darcey Bussell and Ore Oduba introduce Kenneth MacMillan's Mayerling from the Royal Ballet. It's a dark and intense piece based on the true story of the deaths of Crown Prince Rudolf and his young mistress Mary Vetsera in 1889, two challenging roles played here by Steven McRae and Sarah Lamb. Since its premiere in 1978, Mayerling has been recognised as possessing choreography that pushes the boundaries of classical ballet. See page 63.

Wahlberg on the case

Spenser Confidential ★★★ Netflix

Growing up, Mark Wahlberg was a fan of TV detective series Spenser: for Hire, set and shot in his home city of Boston – and now he's playing the titular private eye in this new film for Netflix. Wahlberg's dog-eared charm is a real plus, and he's well supported by Winston Duke as sidekick Hawk and Alan Arkin as a wry father figure. But it's Iliza Shlesinger, as Spenser's caustic ex, who gets the biggest laughs. The film takes a while to get going, but once Spenser is on the case of a cop killer, the action quickly picks up. STEVE MORRISSEY

American Honey ★★★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

Andrea Arnold (Fish Tank) directs this exhilarating celebration of modern youth, which leaves C4's catch-up service tomorrow. Newcomer Sasha Lane plays Star, an 18-year-old girl left in charge of two younger siblings by her absentee mother. But after a chance meeting with charismatic salesman Jake (Shia LaBeouf), Star walks out on her family and sets off for adventure on the open road. With its lengthy running time and arty flourishes, this is a heady, intoxicating experience. DAMON WISE

WHERE THERE'S MUCKLOWES...
... there's comedy brass, as Kurtan and Kerry (Charlie Cooper) wait for the vicar

PICK OF THE DAY This Country 7.00pm BBC3, 11.05pm BBC1 (N Ireland, Scotland and Wales: 11.35pm)

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Kerry and Kurtan are left in charge of parish affairs while the vicar visits his son Jacob in Bristol. Yes, Kerry and Kurtan Mucklowe. In charge. Surely there is trouble ahead?

Yet strangely enough the cousins take their new responsibilities seriously, though Kurtan's patience wears thin when it becomes clear he's at the mercy of any discontented villager with a grievance.

There's a marvellous scene on a railway platform as the couple await the vicar's return, when Kurtan (Charlie Cooper) becomes embroiled in a farcical phone call with "Peggy from Camera Club" who can't grasp the keycode for the village-hall door. It sends actor Daisy May Cooper (Kerry) into real-life paroxysms of giggles.

The best bits of This Country always involve just the two of them and this penultimate episode is a beauty, though it ends on a sad note ready for next week's last-ever instalment. ALISON GRAHAM

DAYTIME CHOICE Rylan Clark-Neal's mission to resurrect all our favourite daytime TV programmes took a few strides forward when he became the host of RSC. While the budget for the bag of ingredients has risen by a full £2.50 (well, what can you get for a fiver these days?) and the celebrity chefs are different (so no Antony Worrall Thompson or Lesley Waters), the format remains the same as when you watched it a decade or two ago. (It ended in 2010.)

It's not MasterChef, so no tuiles or foams, just fuss-free, tasty dishes. Today Henry and his daughter Alice team up with chefs Ellis Barrie and Anna Haugh (who was on Saturday's Pointless Celebrities).

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ Stick around until the end of this semi-final: Victoria Coren Mitchell signs off with one of her finest and most elaborate double entendres about Michael Portillo.

Before that, there's a beast of a missing vowels round. Some people (I'm one) like to think that however flaky they might be on early rounds, they could earn their keep on an Only Connect team by being quick off the mark with vowel-free phrases: all I'll say is, good luck with tonight's "animal, vegetable, mineral" set.

Otherwise, the 007s and the Turophiles joust politely for a place in the final via questions featuring Theophilus of Adana, the Smurfs, $e^{ix} = \cos x + i \sin x$ and not one but two references to Guam. DAVID BUTCHER

FOOD Sometimes you have to wonder what goes through the minds of some of the amateur cooks. Of all the dishes they could make to showcase their culinary skills, why would anyone choose pasta served with two different sauces piled on top of each other? Or squid risotto with mango salsa? "I'm not quite sure," says John Torode diplomatically, "but I'm here to be convinced."

Fortunately, two of the contestants sensibly avoid oddball combinations and simply cook their food beautifully: "I'd happily eat six of these," says 2018 finalist Alex Jorge about one pudding while Torode goes "Boom!" and Gregg Wallace is so busy shovelling it in, he can't speak at all. JR

DRAMA So many coincidences, so many heavy-handed developments, and a timeline that shifts constantly to and from "three weeks earlier"... it's easy to lose track of where we are supposed to be – before Andrew Earlham died, or after? Or during? It's hard to care, particularly when the awful DI Karen Renton smirks from the sidelines, chewing gum, as she pursues rape victim Laura Nielson for Earlham's murder.

Maybe an implied question from her bagman will let us in on Renton's thought processes: "This seems more than just another case for you, the way you are going after Laura," he ventures. And – bingo! A plot point/motivation drops from the sky like a dead seagull. AG See page 49

Neighbours (1.45pm, 5.30pm, 10pm C5) is going all high concept for its 35th anniversary, with three deaths and five weddings across the week. In order to fit in all the drama, there are five additional late-night episodes, which find a batch of characters taking what turns out to be an ill-fated trip to an island resort to celebrate Elly's 35th anniversary.

In Erinsborough, meanwhile, we get the Lassiter's Wedding Expo hosting a quintet of nuptials, all of them featuring some familiar faces. For fans whose association with the show dates back to the 1980s, I need only say the words "Des" and "Plain Jane Superbrain" for you to get some idea as to what kind of nostalgia-fest we'll be witnessing. No word yet on whether Angry Anderson will be on the soundtrack, but here's hoping. As for further soap birthdays, we have Corrie's 60th, Doctors' 20th and Hollyoaks' 25th in the weeks and months ahead. So, best be braced for plenty more trips down memory lane.

DOCUMENTARY It's a bit like Round Britain Quiz: what links the Kodak moment, the Marlboro man, Anita Ekberg disporting herself in the Trevi Fountain and Helmut Newton's risqué fashion photos? They're all, according to James Fox, dream worlds, created in the postwar era where advertising and art combined to fulfil our fantasies, psychologists having realised we're all more susceptible to pictures than words.

There's a lot to chew on in these programmes, which are dense but rewarding. This week Fox examines Maurice Sendak's original drawings for Where the Wild Things Are, and explores the ever-changing Madonna in an MTV world where music is turned into a visible medium. GILL CRAWFORD

Westworld

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Westworld leaves the cowboy robot uprising behind in this confident new series opener, which sees awakened host Dolores (Evan Rachel Wood) finally out in the real world and making plans to help her species survive while Bernard (Jeffrey Wright) hides out.

After two series set almost entirely within themed robot "parks" it's an interesting change to see Westworld's take on future Earth, which falls somewhere between Black Mirror and Blade Runner. Progress and technology have continued, but for some (most notably Aaron Paul's mysterious new character Caleb), the game is still rigged in favour of the rich and powerful. Time for some new players... HUW FULLERTON

SITCOM New series The topic of gaining citizenship is timely, not only this side of the pond, but also in the US where this snappy sitcom hails from. Co-created by and starring Kal Penn – who previously juggled acting jobs with being part of the Obama administration – it takes an amusing swipe at politics, and more specifically, the politics of immigration.

Garrett Modi (Penn) was a young, rising New York City councillor, but after more than a decade of overpromising and underdelivering (plus a drunken video of him being posted online), he finds himself ousted from office. But for an eclectic bunch of immigrants who need help with their citizenship tests, it turns out he's their only hope. FRANCES TAYLOR

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

Fifty years ago, Women's Liberation protesters disrupted the Miss World contest at the Royal Albert Hall, an event watched by 100 million people across the globe, 24 million of them in the UK.

One of the women lists the arsenal she packed into her satchel: "Rotten veg, a bag of flour, a smoke bomb and a water pistol." Though rudimentary, they did the trick. During compere Bob Hope's excruciatingly sexist routine, there was uproar when a football rattle signalled a volley of flour bombs, leaflets and yelling. Hope left the stage (sadly, only temporarily).

Film-maker Hannah Berryman brings the protestors together for a return journey to the Albert Hall for this cheery documentary. There are also contributions from the night's host, Michael Aspel, and from contestants, including the winner, Miss Grenada, Jennifer Hosten, the first black Miss World. AG

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.00 Miss World 1970: Beauty Queens and Bedlam

RT The story of the infamous Miss World contest which, for one anarchic night, made the Royal Albert Hall the crucible for some of the era's political and social controversies. A small group of protestors, armed only with flour bombs, rotten fruit and water pistols, dramatically disrupted the event, kickstarting a feminist revolution in front of an audience of millions. Meanwhile, at a time of growing anti-apartheid protest, the first ever black South African contestant was taking part, alongside the "official" white Miss South Africa, and amid all the mayhem it was Miss Grenada who would emerge victorious – the first ever black Miss World. She (Jennifer Hosten) is among the contributors to this documentary, along with the night's compere Michael Aspel and protester Sue Finch. See page 73. New to Prime today

Blinded by the Light ★★★★★ Amazon Prime Gurinder Chadha directs this endearing and energetic adaptation of Sarfraz Manzoor's memoir Greetings from Bury Park. Manzoor is represented by Luton teen Javed (Viveik Kalra), whose Bruce Springsteen obsession upsets his Muslim parents while fuelling his dreams of escaping suburbia. An appreciation of the Boss's canon is somewhat bludgeoned into the viewer, but the film's belief in the power of music is sincere, and Javed's relationship with his dad (Kulvinder Ghir) is the story's beating heart. ANDREW COLLINS

Turkey leftovers

Last Christmas ★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/DVD Although a hit at the box office, this sentimental seasonal offering from Bridesmaids director Paul Feig is dispiritingly conventional. Emilia Clarke plays shop assistant Kate, whose fortunes change when she meets the too-good-to-be-true Tom (Crazy Rich Asians' Henry Golding). Clarke is charming but lacks the comic chops to enliven the thin material, and the film's attempts at earnestness feel a little self-congratulatory. Some respite is provided by the George Michael songs on the soundtrack. EMMA SIMMONDS

A feast of Holmes

The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes ★★★★★ 1.30pm TCM A week of Sherlock Holmes matinée double bills begins with one of the sleuth's best screen cases, released the same year as The Hound of the Baskervilles, which follows today. The season comes to a close on Friday with Dressed to Kill, which marked Basil Rathbone's final outing as Baker Street's finest. ELLIE PORTER

CLOSE ENCOUNTER
Sandi Toksvig, Prue Leith and Paul Hollywood check on Richard Dreyfuss's progress

PICK OF THE DAY The Great Celebrity Bake Off for Stand Up to Cancer 8.00pm C4

FOOD There's an Oscar-winning Hollywood star in the tent, Richard Dreyfuss, of Jaws and Close Encounters fame, who manages not to look as bemused as he must surely feel. Has he even heard of his fellow contestants Patsy (EastEnders) Palmer, Scarlett (Gogglebox) Moffatt and James (The Inbetweeners) Buckley?

It's a riotous contest: someone is truly and utterly hopeless, while someone who claims to be truly and utterly hopeless turns out to be not that bad after all. Quite the opposite. But there's a lot of laughter and plenty of good feeling and mutual support as the group bands together to raise money for Stand Up to Cancer.

After some problems with the electric mixers – there's flour everywhere – the gang gets down to making roulades. "You need a machete to get through that," says Paul Hollywood of one effort. But there is delight elsewhere. ALISON GRAHAM

Champions League Football

7.00pm (k/o 8pm) BT Sport 2

SPORT Manchester City v Real Madrid After winning – and, crucially, scoring twice – at the Bernabéu, Manchester City will go into this second leg at the Etihad with plenty of confidence. But, as we saw last season in the Champions League round of 16, it's not over until it's over – and Real Madrid, though they're not the vanquishers they once were, still boast players who can change a game: 19-year-old forward Vinícius Júnior has been a frustrated figure in recent months, but as he showed in the recent clásico, he's capable of moments of magic, too.

Tomorrow, Chelsea travel to Bayern Munich (7pm BT Sport 2).

HANNAH SHADDOCK

Back in Time for the Corner Shop

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Viewers who grew up in the 1970s should brace for a rush of nostalgia. In the shop, Starbursts and Snickers are still Opal Fruits and Marathons, kids are getting a kick out of clackers, while David Essex's blue eyes are staring out from the cover of teen magazines. For the Arderns, this is definitely the decade that they've enjoyed the most, despite the stress of power cuts and inflation hitting 16 per cent. Mum Jo's main highlight is the fact that British tastebuds are now craving branded wine, which means she's finally able to enjoy a glass with dinner. Those bottles of Mateus Rose won't be staying on the shelf for long. DAVID BROWN

The Art Mysteries

8.30pm BBC4

ART New series Nobody decodes art like Waldemar Januszczak. In this series of impish lectures he uncovers meanings hidden in famous paintings, starting with Vincent van Gogh's Self-Portrait with Bandaged Ear.

The story of art history's most famous episode of self-harm has been told often – how Van Gogh quarrelled with his housemate/rival Paul Gauguin, then sliced off his own ear with a razor, wrapped it in newspaper and presented it to a prostitute. What Januszczak cleverly uncovers is the symbolism swirling in Van Gogh's psyche – a mix of religion, bullfighting and the belief that prostitutes were saintly, adding up to "a genius with a Christ complex". DAVID BUTCHER

The Split

9.00pm BBC1 (Wales: 10.35pm)

DRAMA There are so many tears in the final part of Abi Morgan's domestic drama which, to its credit, doesn't take the easy way out (though you will know this if you've already binge-watched the series on iPlayer). After last week's explosive admission, Hannah and Nathan (Nicola Walker and Stephen Mangan) are torn asunder. He can't face her and drinks beer sadly in a soulless hotel and she weeps at her desk, though somehow mascara doesn't drip on to her pristine white jacket.

By the end, as the Defoe women take one last slow-motion walk across the Millennium Bridge, there's another mournful lady-ballad as everyone re-evaluates their lives. AG

Deceit is the big theme of the week on Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.35pm). Essie is trying to keep her baby secret under wraps, Ben continues to conceal his true sexuality, while Hanssen's attempts to be a spy in the McGarry camp are in danger of backfiring. But, as you'd expect, it's Xavier's (Marcus Griffiths, right) determination to expose Cameron's (Nic Jackman) misdeeds that really drive the drama. If you assumed Xav would bring his colleague to book with ease, then this episode might make you think again... I'm loving this newfound bond between Sharon and Kathy on EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1). After years of sparring, Kath is now there for her former enemy in her hour of need, which reminds me of the way Phil supported bitter rival Ian after Lucy's death. Mind you, I don't expect this white-flag-waving to last: give it six months and Kathy will probably be scratching Sharon's eyes out again. DAVID BROWN

Joanna Lumley's Hidden Caribbean: Havana to Haiti
9.00pm ITV

TRAVEL After lingering for a while in Guantanamo (a charming Spanish-style city, despite the proximity of the infamous US detention camp), Joanna Lumley leaves Cuba and travels the 57 miles across the sea to Haiti. She's heartbroken to see the shore piled high with litter and discarded plastic (since the earthquake, the only water safe to drink is bottled) and streets ankle-deep in mud and rubbish. Unfailingly charming to everyone, she also visits Port au Prince – "one of the grimmest cities I've ever been in... so challenging, so lawless, so unpredictable" – and hangs out at a voodoo ceremony. JANE RACKHAM

The Trip to Greece
10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY Here's an episode that will test your love for this show, because the petty banter and bickering between Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon charts new depths. They're like teenage show-offs, trying to top each other's impression of David Frost or Neil Diamond or whoever. Why? Probably because two women have joined them – photographer Yolanda and fixer Emma (regulars Marta Barrio and Claire Keelan). Over a long scene at a restaurant in Hydra (and boy, the food looks good) the boys' one-upmanship mounts. Rob teases, "I think you've got to start experimenting with his dosage." And Steve describes Rob's Keith Richards laugh as "like the death throes of Muttley". DAVID BUTCHER

The Windsors
10.15pm C4

COMEDY The Windsors heads into more surreal territory this week as Charles – in his role as Defender of All Faiths – attends a meeting for the Church of Satan and ends up possessed. It's down to Camilla (a scene-stealing Haydn Gwynne), to sort it out – but not before she has a smoke and delivers a withering eye roll. In Verbier, Beatrice and Eugenie have a turbulent time at mum Fergie's chalet B&B (there's a brilliant line about why Prince Andrew can't ski), William gets swindled for £30 million by builders renovating his kitchen and Harry ends up performing brain surgery after a doppelganger causes a case of mistaken identity. It's both thoroughly silly – and thoroughly enjoyable. FRANCES TAYLOR

Armando's Tale of Charles Dickens

As a director, Armando Iannucci recently triumphed with his new cinema version of David Copperfield. Nobody who has seen this thoughtful and insightful 2012 documentary will be surprised at Iannucci's mastery of Charles Dickens: here, he explains why he finds Dickens to be both eternally relevant and, more than most people think, deeply funny.

HE'S BEHIND YOU...
What does Jed (Nico Mirallegro) want from Rosalie (Julie Graham)?

Penance
9.00pm Channel 5

DRAMA New series A lovely big house with a fabulous kitchen is decked warmly and brightly for Christmas as mum Rosalie (Julie Graham) makes a plum pudding in honour of her son Rob, who's due home after a backpacking trip to Thailand. You know what happens next, of course you do... the doorbell goes and it's the police: Rob has drowned after a drunken party on a Thai beach. The family begins to collapse. Penance, based on Kate O'Riordan's novel, mines all kinds of emotions, and not just bereavement, after Rosalie and her troubled daughter Maddie attend a support group. There they meet charming Jed (Nico Mirallegro), who touches them both with a sad story about his parents and his dead nan. As the erotic tension builds, everything gets very torrid indeed. Episode two is tomorrow and Penance concludes on Thursday. AG

The Post ★★★★★ Netflix

Meryl Streep and Tom Hanks star as the publisher and editor of The Washington Post in this slice of liberal history from Steven Spielberg that concerns the leaking of the so-called Pentagon Papers in 1971. When the incendiary documents land in the newspaper's lap, a legal battle to publish them ensues, with the Nixon administration acutely aware of the threat. Spielberg's film functions well enough as a hymn to good old-fashioned print journalism, seen from the perspective of the "fake news" age. ANDREW COLLINS

Kingsley the spy

Spider in the Web ★★★ 10.00pm Sky Premiere

Ben Kingsley is a joy to watch in this intricate spy thriller, playing a veteran intelligence agent on a crucial mission. His thoughtful, measured portrayal of a man living in the shadows proves to be the most fascinating aspect of a familiar spy story, whose deliberate pace may prove hard work for those used to more frenetic fare. Spider in the Web doesn't break any new ground, but is given focus by Kingsley's excellent performance and takes viewers on an intriguing journey. JAMES LUXFORD

Available to rent

Judy & Punch ★★★★★ Virgin Movies/DVD

Mia Wasikowska gives a poignant performance as Judy, and Damon Herriman offers a drunk, abusive take on Punch, in this supremely clever spin on the puppet-show double act. One moment the film is a beautifully rendered, light-hearted period drama, the next a darkly sinister fable for our times. ALAN JONES

PRESERVING MEMORIES
Will Kirk (centre, left), Jay Blades (centre) and the team work more magic

PICK OF THE DAY The Repair Shop 8.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL Until now The Repair Shop has been a daytime treat, one that inspires a passionate following among people who like seeing a bradawl do its stuff or a lathe in full flow. Now, though, it graduates to a peak-time slot and – hopefully – a wider audience, who tonight can see handiwork of the highest order as the craftspeople work on a portable pump organ, a battered RAF cap and one of those lovely old wooden cribs designed to rock slightly from side to side and lull a baby to sleep.

The latter was made 100 years ago, out of wood salvaged from a bombed church, by the grandfather of the two sisters who currently own it, and it has rocked dozens of babies over several generations since. Time for Will Kirk to get to work and make it safe again, while Ian Harding works wonders on that historic hat, and along the way we learn about the uses of buckram, rubber solution and microcrystalline wax. DAVID BUTCHER

Grand Tours of Scotland's Lochs

7.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Presenter Paul Murton is on Scotland's west coast, where he tracks Bonnie Prince Charlie and walks along a so-called coffin road, a well-worn path trodden for centuries by mourners taking their dead to a final resting place on a sacred island. Between 30 and 40 friends and family formed the party to carry the coffin in relays of four, pausing to add stones to commemorative cairns on the way.

It's an eerie, fascinating journey that ends on beautiful, uninhabited St Finan's Isle on Loch Shiel. Sadly, a medieval bell chained to the altar of a ruined chapel Murton pauses to ring was stolen after his visit.

FOOD A speedier new format means one of the four chefs in each regional heat will leave after the fish course is judged. Also new is an amuse-bouche challenge, only to be used as a tie-breaker, although inexplicably those pointless "Are you happy with the consistency/acidity/texture?" judging chats remain untouched.

This year's banquet celebrates the magic of children's literature, which prompts one of the Central region chefs to make a starter of wood ants, locusts and crickets inspired by Roald Dahl's Revolting Recipes. It's a bit too Bushtucker Trial for new presenter and welcome addition Susan Calman, but the weird combos keep coming. JANE RACKHAM

Taking Control: the Dominic Cummings Story

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This profile by Emily Maitlis explores how the former aide to Michael Gove, once known mostly for wordy blogs excoriating the establishment, went from the political wilderness to the heart of Downing Street.

So what drives him? Other than recruiting "weirdos and misfits" to Number Ten, what does Cummings believe in? These feel like useful things to know about someone widely seen as the puppetmaster of Boris Johnson's government. But how long will Johnson's cabinet put up with being seen as puppets? DB

The Trouble with Maggie Cole

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA We're still no nearer to discovering the genesis of the opening road accident in the pouring rain. But the third episode of this oddly likeable comic drama provides a couple of clues. Heaven knows when the full picture will be revealed, by the halfway point chastened village gossip Maggie (Dawn French) is starting, slowly, to build bridges with the friends and neighbours she traduced during a drunken radio interview.

Everyone, though, has secrets, not necessarily ones exposed by Maggie. Her own husband, genial head teacher Peter (Mark Heap) looks shifty, even as his son and daughter-in-law deliver good news. AG

Has there been a more disturbing soap moment in recent memory than the abusive Geoff giving Yasmeen her pet chicken to eat on Coronation Street (7.30, 8.30pm ITV)? So chilling was the scene that it's taken up to now for me to start wondering how Geoff managed to kill, pluck, cook and then serve the chicken up in such a short time. This is, though, a minor unanswered question where Geoff's behaviour is concerned. A more pertinent one would be: where does he go on those all-too-frequent occasions when he storms out? Keep watching as answers could be coming. Soaps have never been that smart at depicting the long-term impact of traumatic events. So often, the reset button gets pressed all too quickly. But Hollyoaks (6.30pm C4) is doing a fine job of showing how the Peter Pan-like Darren's attempts to chase his youth have affected his mental health. An open-mic event tonight might well end with his depression being discovered. DAVID BROWN

The Undateables

9.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT It's impossible not to be charmed by these young people who are taking their first tentative steps into the world of dating while living with various challenging conditions.

Royal family fanatic Sam has been "single since the day I was born" – the delightful 19-year-old has autism so finds social situations tricky. Chatty Jodie, 22, has no such problem, but her dwarfism has hindered her search for a girlfriend to travel the world with. And sporty Hannah, 29, has sporadic paralysis that can suddenly leave her in pain and unable to walk.

Some of them hit it off immediately with their dates, while others struggle to maintain the flow of conversation. Wonderfully affirmative TV. JR

Steve McQueen: Le Mans and the Man

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Steve McQueen's film Le Mans, filmed at the gruelling 24-hour motor race, was widely denounced as a meandering mess of a vanity project when it was released in 1971. It's not surprising, considering its tortured history – a threadbare script, a series of terrible race-track accidents, including one in which a driver lost his lower leg, and producer and racing fan McQueen's insistence on being heavily involved behind the camera and taking risks on screen.

This feature-length doc hears from some of those who were there throughout the whole farrago, including McQueen's first wife Neile Adams, who blames the film for the collapse of their marriage. AG

COMEDY DRAMA New series Mae Martin stars in this tale of a Canadian comic who comes to London and falls in love, but can't escape her past. The fact that the object of Mae's affection, George, is played by Charlotte Ritchie smoothes over any kinks and makes for a charming offbeat dramedy.

George learns (via Mae's nightmarish mother – a brief turn from Lisa Kudrow) that Mae used to be an addict. "I have everything under control," claims Mae. "Said every junkie ever..." replies George. There's quality all through the cast – including Ophelia Lovibond (from W1A) and Al Roberts (from Stath Lets Flats) as George's impressively horrible friends. The whole series is available on All4. DAVID BUTCHER

CAFE CONFLICT

Kate (Brenda Blethyn) is no fan of new customer Koji (Jimmy Akingbola)

Kate & Koji

8.00pm ITV

SITCOM New series There are bound to be comparisons between this and Channel 4's Home – another comedy about Brits befriending an asylum-seeker. But Kate & Koji is a different beast, an old-fashioned studio sitcom. Yes, one touching on immigration and prejudice – it's all very 1970s.

But the writers are Andy Hamilton and Guy Jenkin, who were responsible for Outnumbered. And the cast is led by Brenda Blethyn, no less. So give it time, because although it feels broader and blunter than Home, there are good lines and well-drawn characters. Seaside café owner Kate (Blethyn) takes against her latest customer, Koji (Jimmy Akingbola), an African doctor housed at a nearby hostel.

"There's four things in life I hate," Kate declaims, "Scroungers, foreigners, doctors and posh people, and he's all four." Her nephew (Blake Harrison) tries to broker a truce. DAVID BUTCHER

The Look of Love ★★★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

Available to stream until tomorrow, this sensitively handled biopic charts the life of Paul Raymond, the pioneer of adult entertainment who funnelled his profits into property to become the richest man in Britain. Steve Coogan gives a moving performance as Raymond, who struggles to communicate with his wife (Anna Friel), long-term lover (Tamsin Egerton) and daughter (Imogen Poots). Despite the potentially salacious subject matter, this is one of director Michael Winterbottom's more human efforts. DAMON WISE

Fonda and the hired gun

Cat Ballou ★★★★★ 4.30pm TCM

In this entertaining comedy western, Jane Fonda plays a schoolteacher who hires a gunman to avenge her murdered father. The man she finds is a long-haired, booze-sodden gunfighter who goes by the name of Kid Shelleen. He's played by Lee Marvin, who pulls double duty by also playing Shelleen's psychopathic adversary, a killer with a silver nose. Nat King Cole and Stubby Kaye string along for a singalong in a knockabout genre offering that helped pave the way for Mel Brooks's Blazing Saddles. ADRIAN TURNER

The Good Liar ★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies

Confidence trickster Ian McKellen has his sights on fleecing widow Helen Mirren in this adaptation of the novel by Nicholas Searle, new to rent this week. Although grittier than the gentle Sunday evening TV fare it at first appears to be, the film ultimately proves only moderately diverting. TREVOR JOHNSTON

THE POWER OF CINEMA
Mark Kermode turns his attention to superheroes

PICK OF THE DAY Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema 9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY The notion of escape is what propels most of us to our local multiplex, and there's no purer expression of that than in the genre of the superhero. In the first of three new TV essays, film criticism's man in black channels a blizzard of caped-crusading clips into patterns and categories.

The most instructive segment shows how comics and movies fed into each other – the pen-and-ink Clark Kent was based on Harold Lloyd, for instance – but there's never a drab moment in this colourful compendium.

Today's crowded Cinematic Universe, with its CGI maelstroms, shows the thirst for such pulp fiction, but the touchstone that Kermode returns to time and again is 1978's essentially more charming and romantic Superman. Our host's arch delivery of such phrases as "sub-atomic quantum realm" suggests these may not be his favourite films, but his advice to producers on how to swerve cliché is both serious and sound, his knack for summation as pithy as ever: "Get some better endings!" MARK BRAXTON

from 6.00am Sky Sports Cricket

SPORT England's seventh Test match of the winter gets under way in Galle today, with Joe Root's men looking to build on the 3-1 success they enjoyed in South Africa in December and January. Sri Lanka, by contrast, have kept largely away from the format in 2019-20, losing a one-off Test away to Pakistan at the end of September, and winning a one-off Test away to Zimbabwe in January.

The last time England played a Test series in Sri Lanka, in late 2018, they enjoyed a 3-0 whitewash, and there's every prospect that in this two-match series – with a second Test in Colombo starting on 27 March – they will be similarly dominant. SIMON O'HAGAN

How to Beat... Stress

8.00pm C4

HEALTH The stakes prove to be unexpectedly high in this chill-out challenge: one volunteer quits their high-pressured job midway through the experiment, another ends up in hospital after a heart attack.

So what stress-busting solutions can be found? Some are so obvious as to be barely worth filming – I think we all could have guessed that a stroll in the park rather than an urban area can improve our mental health. But when the focus shifts to alleviating workplace tensions, there's greater wisdom to be found. By the end of the hour, viewers across the land will no doubt wish that their office was like London's Lego HQ, with its power-nap pods and racing games. DAVID BROWN

Noughts + Crosses

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA In its weaker moments Noughts + Crosses can feel like an earnest fringe theatre production. Its messages about prejudice feel important and they're delivered bluntly, by means of tetchy, soapy arguments and brittle dialogue. But when it's good, it's very good, an allegory full of provocative parallels with the real world, only flipped in a what-if mirror.

The household of Home Secretary Kamal (Paterson Joseph) and his wife Jasmine (Bonnie Mbuli) is in crisis as she spirals into drink, but Meggie (Helen Baxendale) is determined to help. Meanwhile, rebel leader Jack Dorn (Shaun Dingwall) wants to strike a blow against the regime. DAVID BUTCHER

Hospital

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Pauline has been waiting a year to see consultant neurologist Chrissie Burness at Liverpool's Walton Centre about the mysterious and disabling seizures she's been suffering. Halfway through the appointment, Pauline has a fit. David also has unexplained seizures and can barely walk a few steps, while Tara, who's pregnant, has bouts of painful spasms.

The cause is unknown but it's horribly debilitating for the patient and distressing to watch. What's frustrating is that, while specialist physiotherapy can help with functional neurological disorders (and it does for David), a lack of NHS funding means treatment is not generally available. JANE RACKHAM

Marlon and Paddy, the beloved comedy double act in Emmerdale (7.00, 8.00pm ITV), are often put into action to provide much-needed light relief. But we're a world away from Chuckle Brothers territory tonight when the pair take a drive and immediately get into trouble. As we've already seen, Marlon's (Mark Charnock) stress levels keep spiking following his recent release from prison and when he now begins to feel a sharp pain in his arm, Paddy (Dominic Brunt) starts to think his best mate might well be having a heart attack.

But after making a dash to the hospital, events take an unforeseen turn when Paddy trails behind the paramedics and unwittingly leaves his baby daughter Eve asleep in her car seat. When he belatedly realises what he's done, Paddy rushes back to the vehicle, only to find that Evie is missing. By tomorrow, the authorities are getting involved – and we all know how over-zealous those soap social workers can be in a time of crisis. DAVID BROWN

The Station: Trouble on the Tracks

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY There's a point where jolly docs about British railway stations all begin to sound the same. This happens when there are delays, and the complaints from passengers squeezed onto packed platforms are uniform... "It's chaos, absolute chaos! And there's no information!"

Birmingham New Street grinds to a standstill because Euston Station is closed. As Euston is in London this might sound odd and a really rubbish excuse, but that's what happens when trains in and out of such a big terminus are paralysed. Staff at New Street are worried that passengers returning late from London won't be able to get their connection to Wolverhampton. Oh, the drama. AG

Hunted

9.00pm C4

REALITY Regardless of whether you've followed the rest of this series, it's worth seeing tonight's finale, a ridiculously tense climax. After 22 days on the run, six of the ten original fugitives are still at large. If they can make it through another three days and get to the extraction point (in north Anglesey, it turns out), they win a share of £100,000.

But it's about the buzz as much as the money. "Life-changing" is how one fugitive describes the whole experience. The episode starts with a tense chase through nettles and bracken for two fugitives, then one couple try a bold ruse to throw the hunters off their trail. And as the clock ticks down, it all gets very emotional. DAVID BUTCHER

Breeders

10.00pm Sky 1

SITCOM The way Paul and Ally (but mostly Paul) shout and swear at their kids is shocking and funny – but is it more than that? Tonight, the plot takes a turn that suggests their meltdowns might be more than forgivable letting-off-steam.

Paul starts to question himself: "I'm the rager. I'm the hair-trigger Harry," he frets, as a plausible sequence of incidents leaves them expecting a visit from the local authority's children's safety team – ie social services. Ally says it makes her feel like she's in a Ken Loach film, but really, it's the middle-classness of it all that is well observed – the kids' tea of spaghetti with butter and marmite, the recycling anxiety and what can only be called fridge shame. DAVID BUTCHER

YORKSHIRE HEIGHTS

Time to reflect on Robin Hood's Bay

Villages by the Sea

7.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Robin Hood's Bay on the North Yorkshire coast is a tourist hot-spot, a film-set beautiful village in a ravine packed with red-roofed houses that look as if they've been thrown from on high to settle where they land. By the way, the name is a mystery; there's no evidence Robin Hood went anywhere near the place.

Archaeologist Ben Robinson looks at Robin Hood's Bay's smuggling history. In the 1700s it did a roaring trade in contraband luxury goods and the whole village was involved, ensuring silk, tea and barrels of rum were moved through a network of tunnels and vaults to escape the attention of hapless excise men.

When that trade ended, many of Robin Hood's Bay's menfolk joined the whaling industry, centred on the nearby town of Whitby, and set sail for Antarctica. AG

9.00 Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema

RT New series. 1/3 Series 2

Superheroes. The critic unmasks the key characteristics of the superhero movie, currently the genre doing the biggest business at the box office. It may have stirred a backlash from some leading film-makers but as Mark explains, superheroes have been on cinema screens for the past eight decades and the genre is rooted in timeless themes and storytelling traditions. Drawing on a wide range of films, he examines the origin stories, vigilante mindsets, superpowers, costumes, secret identities and supervillains that are its recurring elements. He also analyses why they resonate with audiences across the world, addresses criticisms of them and suggests how they must adapt for the future. See page 102.

An Oscar for Affleck

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Available on iPlayer until the end of March, this drama from writer/director Kenneth Lonergan features an Oscar-winning performance from Casey Affleck as a surly janitor who returns to his seaside home town to face the secrets of his past. There's an easy-going, low-key humour throughout that dispels some of the story's gloomier aspects, making the inevitable showdown with Affleck's ex-wife (Michelle Williams) all the more electric. DAMON WISE

A class of its own

Luce ★★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/iTunes

Sparks fly when a star pupil's parents (played by Naomi Watts and Tim Roth) are alerted to potentially troubling behaviour by his teacher (Octavia Spencer). This tense drama, new to rent this week, turns modern kitchens and sterile classrooms into battlefields. Offering a fascinating insight into society's messy morality, the film asks questions about the damage caused when labels are put on young people. The standout performance belongs to Spencer, who keeps you guessing as to her true intentions. JAMES LUXFORD

More from Forky

Toy Story 4 ★★★★★

6.15pm Sky Disney

The latest in the animated series introduces a brilliantly bonkers new character in Forky, a handmade toy who accompanies Woody and the gang on their road-trip adventure. He's become so popular that he's been given his own show – Forky Asks a Question – which you can see on Disney+ when the new service launches next week. JOSH WINNING

GET A GRIP

PICK OF THE DAY Super Powered Eagles 9.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 3pm Sat 21 Feb)

NATURE If you watch docs on National Geographic or Discovery, you'll know American channels like to make wildlife films more dramatic with lots of manic music. The exciting news is that this style is now available on Natural World, with the opening sequence here – of various eagles doing their stuff – layered with the kind of music and sound effects you'd expect to find on the trailer for a film where Liam Neeson kills everyone.

Not to worry, though, things calm down and we get a perfectly pleasant documentary about different eagle species and “the science behind their superpowers” – how talons work, what eagle-eyed really means, and so on.

Nest cameras follow the early weeks of two bald eagle chicks in Iowa, following their ups and – alarmingly – downs. And a splendid golden eagle called Tilly is put through her paces on a Scottish glen while her owner calls her “my love” and shouts, enviously, “I wish I was you!”

24 Hours in A&E: Heart Special

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Regular viewers will remember the cases in this charity episode, made in conjunction with the British Heart Foundation. All three were rushed in with heart problems: perhaps the most dramatic was Corey, who was just 24 when he had a cardiac arrest during an ice hockey game. There's also Angie, 59, and Steve, 49, who are both struggling with a fast heart rate, though due to very different causes.

Those with hypochondriac tendencies may be unnerved by the emphasis on the unpredictability of the heart – but reassured by the catch-ups at the end, which show how the patients are getting on today. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Gardeners' World

8.30pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 7.30pm Sat 21 Feb)

GARDENING It's been an incredibly wet winter so most of our gardens aren't the profusion of green shoots we'd expect. Even Monty Don's garden at Longmeadow has suffered (despite dog Nigel's valiant attempt to drink all the puddles), so the area he used to call the “damp garden” is now known as “submerged pond”.

However, Monty's undeterred and in the first of a new series is intent on getting everything ready for the growing season. If you're one of those poor souls whose garden is still flooded, Frances Tophill's report from RHS Wisley about houseplants may inspire you to bring greenery indoors. JANE RACKHAM

The Story of Ready Steady Go!

9.00pm BBC4

MUSIC In 1963, Ready Steady Go! was at the cutting edge of youth TV. In fact, it pretty much was youth TV. Its intimate visual style was hailed as innovative, but the real innovations came in the artists it booked: from the Beatles to James Brown.

As this pacy, fun doc shows, the addition of Kathy McGowan took the show up a notch: she was the first youth-TV presenter in the modern mould. Original producer Vicki Wickham says, “When Top of the Pops started I was pissed, because its formula was going to knock us off at some point.” And, by the end of 1966, it had. Followed at 10pm by a selection of some of the show's top performances. GARY ROSE

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA This Italian cop drama returns with the death of another woman to anger and frustrate volatile Turin detective Valeria Ferro (former Miss Italy and daytime TV presenter Miriam Leone – like Alex Jones from The One Show playing Vera). It's a cop drama, so Ferro is obviously a troubled maverick with an intuition that befuddles her flat-footed, rulebound colleagues.

The first series had a feel similar to The Killing, focusing on the effect of a murder on the victim's family, and that emotionally charged atmosphere pervades the start of the second as the murder of a domestic abuse victim draws Ferro into the woman's complex family relationships. DAVID CRAWFORD

I recently saw a picture of EastEnders' (8.30pm BBC1) Ben and Callum on social media with #RelationshipGoals typed underneath. This kind of thing isn't unusual, as we've previously seen Emmerdale's Aaron and Robert and Vanessa and Charity put on pedestals, too. But the thing that seems to unite all these soap couples is their ability to lurch continually from crisis to catastrophe. They've never had a happy day together, so are the fans venerating these characters craving turmoil and misery in their own lives? Maybe so. For those wanting to witness more anguish, look no further than Walford, where Callum (Tony Clay, left) is distraught when he discovers that boyfriend Ben (Max Bowden) has been arrested after stealing a car. And what's more, he was seen leaving the Prince Albert in the company of a punter called Hugo prior to being pulled over by the police. Might Callum be about to disappoint those #Ballum devotees by binning Ben off? DAVID BROWN

Bulletproof

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA Sky 1's all-action buddy-cop drama is back. As the two leads, Noel Clarke and Ashley Walters bring the kind of wisecracking chemistry you see mostly in US franchises like Lethal Weapon or Bad Boys, but here it is sharply scripted (by Nick Love) in "bruv"-heavy London street talk.

Pike (Walters) and Bishop (Clarke) are NCA detectives taking down organised crime under the supervision of their boss, Tanner (Lindsey Coulson), who may not be quite the straight arrow she seems. The opening sequence is a riotous chase sequence and the pace stays sharp: you will never see quite so many different bad guys knocked off mopeds. DAVID BUTCHER
See feature: page 28

Babylon Berlin

9.00, 10.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA At the start of tonight's double bill the drama takes such a dive into Eyes Wide Shut territory you half expect Tom Cruise to appear. We visit a country mansion where the mysterious "Fraterna Saturnii" have a candlelit gathering. Gereon, his detective rival and Lotte arrive and don masks and capes for an occult ceremony with some very weird stuff involving, well, tongues.

It's a heck of a sequence but strangely, the significance of it then isn't mentioned at all. Instead we follow the Jewish journalist's exposé about the Luftwaffe and the right-wing thugs' efforts to silence him. Dark forces are at work and "our Fatherland is at a crossroads". DAVID BUTCHER

Big Narstie's Big Adventure: Jamaica

11.00pm C4

TRAVEL Anyone who's caught an episode of The Big Narstie Show will be familiar with the larger-than-life star's inimitable style, and now the musician, rapper and presenter has added hosting a travelogue to his CV. The grime star is getting off the chat-show sofa and embarking on a tour of Jamaica – where his parents hail from and where he was sent as a youngster to meet the wrath of his aunt after a brush with the law.

Now he returns under more salubrious circumstances to meet the next generation of Dancehall artists, learns what it takes to be a supermodel from Tyson Beckford, and visits Bob Marley's legendary recording studio. FRANCES TAYLOR

HELL FOR LEATHER

Eton's footballers are gentlemen – and amateurs

The English Game

Netflix

DRAMA New series Five days after the debut of Belgravia, writer Julian Fellowes is here again with his first Netflix series, based on modern football's development in the late 19th century. The Old Etonians are heavy favourites for their 1879 FA Cup tie against a Lancashire mill-workers team: football is a gentleman's game, the preserve of men who know which way to pass the port. But the mill's progressive owner (Craig Parkinson) sees sport as a way to give his community hope and pride, so he's brought in two ringers from Scotland, where tactics are more advanced. The toffs don't know what's coming...

Fellowes has previously mixed cartoonish class contrasts with deft comedy, but he's abandoned the latter here. Simplistic as the melodrama is, though, it's handsomely mounted, the cast are strong, and who, really, can resist an against-all-odds sports yarn? JACK SEALE

Paws for thought

The Secret Life of Pets 2 ★★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

Patton Oswalt takes over vocal duties from Louis CK as Max the dog for this sequel, which finds the pooch anxious at the arrival of his owner's first child. The plot treads a familiar path to the first movie, but gives Bunny Snowball (Kevin Hart) and pampered poodle Gidget (Jenny Slate) their own side adventures, making it feel a bit more episodic in nature. But with knowing gags and slapstick humour in abundance, it's sure to make younger tails wag. JAMES LUXFORD

Stay out of the sewers...

It ★★★★★ Netflix

In director Andrés Muschietti's glowing adaptation of Stephen King's novel, seven outcast tweens encounter an ancient child-killing, shape-shifting entity in their Maine home town. It's cleverly placed in the same time period that the book was written, and the references to King's work give it a nostalgic texture. Among the standout scenes is a nightmare confrontation in a bloody bathroom with Pennywise the evil clown (Bill Skarsgård) that's on a par with The Shining's indelible lift sequence. ALAN JONES

In cinemas today...

Emily Blunt (right) tiptoes her way through horror sequel A Quiet Place Part II, this time encountering Cillian Murphy's enigmatic newcomer. Rosamund Pike plays pioneering chemist Marie Curie in Radioactive, also starring Anya Taylor-Joy. And the life of comedy titan Buster Keaton is explored in documentary The Great Buster. JOSH WINNING

James Taylor wanted to change the world, then heroin intervened – now he's the grand old man of American music

INTERVIEW BY PAUL SEXTON

James Taylor's Great American Songbook
Sunday 9.00pm Radio 2

FOR A MAN who is the very blueprint of the singer/songwriter, and the creator of some of the most emotionally incisive songs of the pop era, James Taylor has always done a mean cover version. It's quite an irony that the writer of Fire and Rain, Sweet Baby James and Carolina in My Mind has had some of his biggest hits with other people's material, from Carole King's You've Got a Friend to Holland-Dozier-Holland's How Sweet It Is. Now he's doing it again, by evoking a time before he was even born.

Taylor, 72, segued long ago from a wayward past that now embarrasses him into the role of avuncular ambassador of American music. But now he's reaching back further than ever before, with an album that inhabits an era that he considers to represent the zenith of popular songcraft.

On American Standard, he takes set texts such as Moon River, The Nearness of You and Pennies from Heaven and JT-ises them to supremely cultured effect. Stripping the compositions to the bone, he reconstructs them in his instantly recognisable, acoustic guitar and vocal hallmarks, so deftly that you almost imagine he wrote the things himself.

"These were songs from my family's record collection in North Carolina in the 50s and 60s," he tells me. "I learnt to play them as practice pieces. So I wanted this to be those guitar arrangements without anything masking it. No keyboard player on top, no orchestrations. Only the guitar, the melody, the [chord] changes in the way I harmonise these songs, in my vocabulary. Then I added some singers here or a solo there, or a violin part."

In an accompanying two-part Radio 2 series, he delves studiously into the history of the great American songbook to explain exactly why he now sees the generation that preceded his own as music's highest waterline. That appreciation was first fuelled in a well-to-do family upbringing with his parents and four siblings, all of whom are still alive – apart from brother Alex, who died in 1993.

"My mom would take us up to New York in little groups of two and three to see a museum, a play or a musical and to visit a department store; a Japanese store like Takashimaya," he says. "When we got interested in music, my parents would take us to Schirmer's music store [in Union Square], which was a great source of sheet music in the day. That's where I got my first guitar. These little trips up to New York that mostly my mom did, sometimes my dad, too, they were a real gift," he says, sitting in his London hotel in his trademark cap.

By the age of 15, he and lifelong friend Danny Kortchmar were playing coffee houses on Martha's Vineyard. Taylor suffered depression in his teens and checked himself into a psychiatric hospital, before he and "Kootch" moved to New York, with all its worldly pleasures. Soon those old songs felt... well, old.

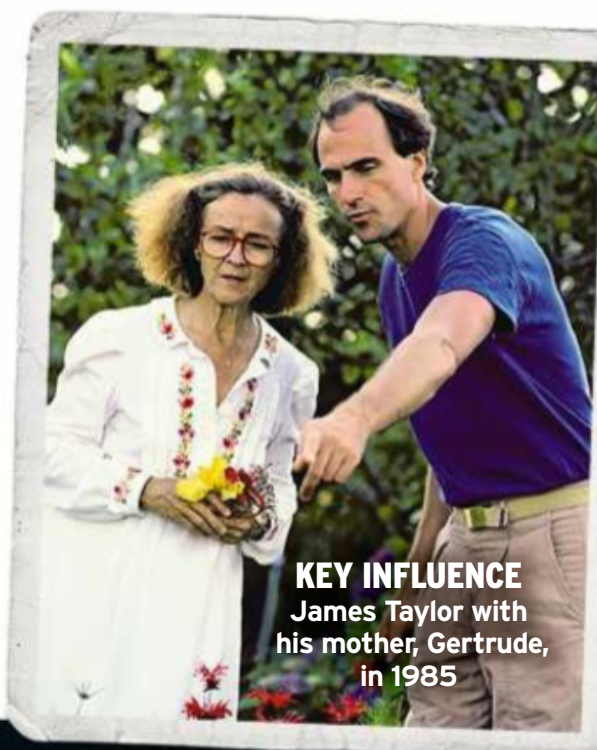

"In the mid-60s, when the baby boomers reached young adulthood and the college campuses were exploding, everybody was distancing themselves from the prior generation," he says. "I think part of that is just growing up. You've got to leave home and get this aversion to it. But some of it had to do with a generational divide. We were such a force that we thought we'd change the world, and we had our own music."

"So we distanced ourselves from Andy Williams and Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett and Rosemary Clooney, these wonderful artists. There were people who found themselves on the wrong side of that divide, like Bobby Darin, who was really a huge talent."

He smiles to think now what his younger self would have made of his reading of Ol' Man River, for example. "Yeah, I would have been surprised to see myself doing this. I felt music began with the folk revival, and that the music of my parents' generation was tainted somehow. It was too Vegas, too tuxedo."

When he made it to the Big Apple, he imbibed a great deal more than just recording history. "My drummer Joel ▷

◁ O'Brien was a real musicologist and loved this music," says Taylor. "He turned me on to Sinatra. He also turned me on to Afro-Cuban music, and to Celtic music. And he turned me on to heroin."

Taylor's natural modesty and manners do not mean that he underestimates his place in the pantheon. He regards his matchless lullaby Sweet Baby James as his best song, and is aware of the indelible mark his catalogue has made in a career of 100 million sales. But he views coming off drugs as a greater achievement than any song he's written, especially as he was almost in his mid-30s when he finally got clean in 1983.

That feat, too, was tinged with regret, as it came at the cost of his first marriage to Carly Simon. After a second partnership that also ended in divorce in 1995, he's been happily wed to Caroline Smedvig, known as Kim, since 2001; she even appears on the new record. "Yes, she sings that ingénue part in Surrey with the Fringe on Top," he says. "It took a while to get her to come and do it, but when she did, she nailed it."

My first of many interviews with Taylor was 27 years ago, when he was still facing down his demons one day at a time. Then he told me: "It wasn't that my drug use was too crazy and too wild. It was too damn narrow. I felt as though I lived on a postage stamp. As though I were going into a phone booth as Clark Kent to become Superman, but I ended up spending all my time in the goddamn phone booth."

The contrast with the elder statesman role he fills today, and the respect he engenders, could not be more stark. At a concert in Florence in 2015, as his band walked off at the end of the first half, I saw him park his frame at the edge of the stage and spend the intermission signing records and autographs. Then, as the band filed back in, he simply stood up and started playing again.

A proud Democrat, Taylor performed free shows to support Barack Obama's presidential campaign in 2008, before singing at his inaugural celebration a few months later. Four years on, he sang America the Beautiful when Obama was re-elected, and was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 2015. You can discuss politics with him all day, American or British, but as far as the current incumbent of the White House is concerned, he's all talked out. "The overwhelming thing is, it's not worthy of our attention," he says. "It's a person who you wouldn't bother to waste memory and attention on, and it's all he craves. I almost feel like I refuse to think about him any more."

THE RADIO 2 series has JT playing some of his new album and examining the enduring appeal of its songs through previous versions, and not always the obvious ones. He spins Pennies from Heaven by Louis Prima, who gives the Arthur Johnston and Johnny Burke chestnut a delicious shoobee-doobee swing. Taylor also explains why Lady Gaga deserves our respect as a great vocalist and, in programme two, how his record-playing sessions with his folks would also include everyone from Leadbelly to Miles Davis.

He will embark on a Canadian tour with his friend Bonnie Raitt in April, before an extensive US itinerary with another long-serving pal, Jackson Browne, from May into July.

If American Standard captures the public imagination, Taylor will incorporate a few tunes into a show of set-in-stone classics – some of them his, some borrowed from elsewhere, but all of them with his unforgeable signature.

"I have this process with songs like Handy Man, How Sweet It Is, Up on the Roof, Everyday, that basically puts them in my vocabulary and through my process," he says. "And it's really well illustrated on this album, because it's just the guitar at the centre of it. It's not just my voice on someone else's song, it's the whole thing."

Episode one of James Taylor's Great American Songbook is available on BBC Sounds

PICK OF THE WEEK

Help! My Head's in Wookey Hole
Friday 11.30am Radio 4

Say the name Anneka Rice and most people will think of her as the spirited, smiley, game-for anything presenter of Challenge Anneka, or of the warm embrace she offered listeners to Radio 2, or her more recent appearance on Strictly.

The Anneka Rice of Help! My Head's in Wookey Hole – a one-woman show recorded in front of a live audience – is still recognisable. We still feel safe with her. But there's a whole lot more, in what amounts to an exercise in coming to terms with fame – both the acquisition of it and the loss of it.

The conceit – Rice's search for her Madame Tussaud's waxwork head, which is supposedly stored in a cave in Somerset – allows her to look back over a career trajectory she sees as going from "national treasure to national junk".

That seems a bit extreme, but then again when you reach the level of celebrity that Rice once did, it's a very long way down.

She's a wonderfully entertaining raconteur, and from the tales she tells of her mis-spent youth – Anneka Rice the shoplifter? – it's obvious that the role TV demanded of her was never really her.

The audience take her to their hearts, and so they should. Well done Anneka Rice for surviving an experience that not everyone does.

The Archers this week...

The fallout from last week means that Ben's 18th birthday party proves to be something of a damp squib, though an unexpected gift from Jill and Leonard provokes a debate. Elsewhere, Alistair attempts to interest Ed in a sheep healthcare plan. But Ed is distracted by his concern for a loved one...

In a different corner of the village, Harrison is determined to help out when a neighbour reports a crime. But when he investigates the situation, he makes a worrying discovery. Over at Home Farm, Adam's running on little sleep thanks to lambing and a restless Xander. Will Brian's suggestion as to how to ease his burden meet with approval? DAVID BROWN

Va-va-voom radio

If you want audio gold, head to France

THIS IS THE first RT column that could actually save your life. So naturally, it's buried here – at the back of the magazine – after all those essential TV features pages on Home in the Sun. But do cut it out and keep it, perhaps in the glove box of your car.

I've just been to France by ferry. As soon as I cross the Channel, I love to tune the dial. It's like time-travelling back to those lazy days of the 1970s when, seeking Radio 2 on long wave, you'd pick up Swiss yodelling and Belgian crooners. "Ne me quitte pas", "Je t'aime", "Yooooood-leeyehooooo" etc. Nosing my bonnet into the Normandy drizzle, I chanted the words "Loop left, tight right" that, when incanted in France, help keep the British motorist safely on the right side of the road. Thus, you hug the kerb in one direction – tight right – and take the long curve on to the dual carriageway in the other – loop left. See? I told you I could save your life!

And so it was that la route stretched safely before moi as I scanned the airwaves. Just off the ferry, you can get Heart, a little patchy Radio 2 and some scratchy Radio 4 – depending not on the programme's quality, but on your direction of travel. However – and no offence intended, BBC – whatever is the point? What's required after crossing the Channel is a completely incomprehensible discussion about the same dull old news as we have in Britain, except in French. Imagine how much better Question Time could be if Fiona Bruce was forced to conduct affairs in a foreign language! "Non. NON, MONSIEUR!"

Anyway, back on the radio, best of all is to lock on to a decent French music station. France has retained a few channels that have a genuinely mixed playlist. Imagine that. Here in the UK, we listeners are marshalled like sheep for shearing into radio pens. We devote our stations to themes – the 80s, musicals, rock, speech. But French radio still boasts an old-style mix. This is how radio really should be. Surprise me. Teach me. Amaze me. Don't bore me!

Some years ago, those grumpy old grinch from the regulator Ofcom swooped to shut down a French radio station, which was somehow being broadcast to Sussex, despite being based in Paris. While British listeners swooned to Fip radio's eclectic mix, nasty old Ofcom moved to switch the station off. If you can be bothered to find their official explanation, it was something to do with a possible breach of broadcast regulations. But who cares? I want more, not less, interesting radio!

THE FRENCH CERTAINLY do broadcast some banal rubbish, too. But they can also delight. As I headed down the Atlantic coast I heard new French music, for example, mixed with 80s hits from the UK. On one channel, there was even an hour-long tribute to Ron Goodman, famed British film composer of themes including Where Eagles Dare, Those Magnificent Men in their Flying Machines and Monte Carlo or Bust, a snippet of which introduces I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue. It was a diet as delicious for the ears as French cooking is for la bouche.

So, vive la différence! If you want a radio treat, drive to France. But always remember, loop left and tight right!

Dolly Parton – a sage for our podcast age

Dolly Parton was the star of one of the strangest live shows I ever saw. It was back in 2002 when she was playing Hammersmith Apollo.

At one point, a raiding party of what I took to be militant lesbians tried to invade the stage. They were stopped by the intervention of a bodyguard, who smartly picked up the tiny icon and whisked her out of harm's way. The manner of her exit stays with me still because Dolly's body had been so tightly inserted into her costume that at no point did she appear to bend. Therefore the minder could tuck her under his arm as though rescuing a department store mannequin from a fire.

There's a Dolly for everyone

That night I realised that Dolly Parton is one of those entertainers in whom all sorts of people choose to see all sorts of entirely different things. This is why the nine-part podcast Dolly Parton's America (from your usual podcast provider) is such a good idea. Jad Abumrad, who is of Lebanese descent but grew up in Nashville, sells his series as "the story of a legend at the crossroads of America's culture wars", but it's even richer than that suggests.

Stories full of surprises

This is the polar opposite of all those programmes that spoil everything by telling you at the top of the show who they're going to talk to and what they're going to say. Dolly Parton's America pulls in audio from all over the place to tell its story. When it makes a good point it leaves a silence to let it sink in. You genuinely have no idea where each episode is going until you arrive.

Smoky Mountain wisdom

Each one gets hold of a thread in the rich tapestry that is Dolly – her early career as the protégée of country star Porter Wagoner, her hit film Nine to Five and the enduring appeal of her "sad ass songs" – and tugs. My favourite episode is Neon Moss. This is about Dolly's Tennessee mountain home, as made famous by her song. She's had one replica built at her theme park Dollywood and another on the original site back in the Smoky Mountains. This gives Dolly Parton something in common with the presenter's Lebanese father, which I won't spoil by revealing here. Suffice to say it gives Dolly the opportunity to tell the interviewer, "You never know your parents like other people do", which struck me as the truest thing I've heard in a while. I can't recommend this podcast too highly.

The Man With the Golden Gun

2.45pm Radio 4

Precision-timed, 007-style, to pip the release of No Time to Die, this is pure Bond – Ian Fleming's commander not Hollywood's. James has been pronounced missing, presumed dead, but now, a year later (1965), he turns up in London asking to see M, whom he promptly attempts to assassinate! Those KGB bastards have been messing with his mind, but, after some "recuperation", Bond is back and ready for his next mission – to Kingston. "Surrey," he asks? "Jamaica," replies M, reminding us there is (almost) as much humour as action. Bond's mission: to kill the deadly Cuban assassin Scaramanga, the villain with a gold-plated gun. From stunning sound effects to a stellar cast, this is licensed to thrill. JANE ANDERSON

Opera on 3 from the Met

6.30pm Radio 3

The title role in this Met broadcast of Wagner's The Flying Dutchman should have been sung by Bryn Terfel, but the great Welsh bass-baritone withdrew after breaking his ankle while singing the same opera in Bilbao in January. In the role of the accursed sea captain is the Russian Evgeny Nikitin, a former drummer and guitarist in a heavy metal band.

1.00 Inside Music
Pianist Keval Shah compares the last movement of Sibelius's Fifth Symphony to a long-distance train journey. He also describes how John Adams uses a huge symphony orchestra to conjure up the feeling of being suspended in space, finds Martha Argerich and Maurice Ravel painting watery sounds together, and plays a 400-year-old piece that he believes sounds as if it was written yesterday.
3.00 Sound of Cinema
Prompted by the release of the sci-fi mystery western Bacurau, Matthew Sweet examines the "weird west" subgenre – which combines the traditional cowboy flick with elements of sci-fi, fantasy or horror – and the music written for it.

6.30 Opera on 3 from the Met
RT Wagner's The Flying Dutchman, which premiered in 1843 in Dresden. In today's performance from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, Evgeny Nikitin sings the role of the legendary Dutchman, cursed to sail his ghostly ship for eternity and only allowed ashore every seven years. The only way to break the curse is to find a woman who will be faithful to him until death. Presented by Mary-Jo Heath with further commentary by Ira Siff.

12 noon Radio 3

Few authors can claim to have a life as eventful as the ones they portray in their books, but Isabel Allende (above) is one of them. Topics covered during the Chilean author's delightful conversation with Michael Berkeley include life under the Pinochet dictatorship, the death of her daughter at just 29, and her serendipitous third marriage. Listen out for Berkeley's reaction when Allende describes what she likes to do while listening to Vivaldi. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Drama: The Heart is a Lonely Hunter

3.00pm Radio 4

Carson McCullers's first novel, written when she was only 23, propelled her into the first rank of American writers. Her profoundly moving story of loneliness and loss is set around a boarding house in the American Deep South during Hitler's inexorable rise. Amanda Dalton's evocative adaptation is told through the letters of the deaf man John Singer, played by deaf actor David Bower from Four Weddings and a Funeral.

Wales: A 20th-Century Tragedy?

8.00pm Radio 4

Simon Jenkins is passionate about Wales, the land of his father. His 2008 book Wales: Churches, Houses, Castles showcased the beauty and majesty of Welsh architecture, but the author and journalist is now worried for the nation's future, citing among other factors the rise in the poverty index, while counties just over the border such as Cheshire have become richer. Examining Wales's illustrious cultural, political, industrial and intellectual heritage over the past century, Jenkins uncovers historical reasons for this comparatively recent decline.

CHRIS GARDNER

Your Blue-Eyed Boy

10.45am/7.45pm Radio 4

Helen Dunmore, who died in 2017, crafted beautifully wrought stories. Her 2008 novel of domestic turmoil and blackmail is a prime example. Lawyer Simone (Pippa Nixon) takes a job as a county court judge in Norfolk as her businessman husband teeters on the edge of bankruptcy – and then she receives a letter she'd rather not read. Fiona Evans's adaptation fillets the novel finely, heightening the ominous tension as Simone faces up to long buried emotions. DAVID CRAWFORD

Afternoon Concert

2.00pm Radio 3

We're perhaps familiar with the roll-call of British composers affected by the First World War, the likes of George Butterworth, beloved for his idyllic The Banks of Green Willow, shot by a sniper on the Somme, and Arthur Bliss, future Master of the Queen's Music, twice wounded and once gassed while fighting in France with the Royal Fusiliers. This afternoon, though, there's a rare chance to hear music by a casualty on the German side: Rudi Stephan (above), considered by some the most promising talent of his generation, killed by a Russian sniper's bullet aged just 28.

MARK PAPPENHEIM

Drama: Edith Sitwell in Scarborough

2.15pm Radio 4

Extravagantly attired poet Edith Sitwell (1887–1964) is considered one of the great "eccentrics" (she rejected the term) of the 20th century. Her childhood was privileged but miserable and in this glorious fantasy Dame Edith, accompanied by her younger self, returns to her birthplace to settle scores with her uncaring parents. The older Sitwell provides Glenda Jackson with another of her outstanding radio roles, and Julia Davis is perfect as her awful mother Lady Ida. Superb writing and production. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Today's Choices

Tim Key's Late-Night Poetry Programme

11.00pm Radio 4

Long ago, the outer reaches of surreal comedy were explored on the BBC's Third Programme. There is a direct line from this rarefied humour to Tim Key (above), whose fifth series has arrived. Don't even think about it unless you like to be challenged. Tonight Key is in a cable car in Norway and his disgruntled accountant is threatening to bite through the cable with his metal teeth. The word "genius" has been used of Key and it's not unwarranted. The poetic crosstalk puts one in mind of – dare one say it? – Samuel Beckett. Or at the very least, NF Simpson.

The Forum

BBC World Service

Guide dogs are capable of amazing feats, whether the everyday act of helping someone cross the road, or calmly escorting their owner out of the World Trade Center on 9/11. This latter tale of courage is just one of several fascinating and noble stories told in this edition of The Forum, in which Bridget Kendall and guests chart the history of dogs helping people with visual impairments. When did man first realise his best friend's full potential? The journey starts with an American police dog breeder living in 1920s Switzerland, whose training school would transform our relationship with service animals. TOM GOULDING

Alfie Brown's School of Wrong

11.00pm Radio 4

Big in Edinburgh, angry young comedian Alfie Brown is being tried out on radio with this political chat show. His guest is Marie le Conte, whose book Haven't You Heard? reveals how gossip and rumour at Westminster can become news and even policy. Conversation is about political debate on Twitter, then moving to the impossibility of true impartiality. I'm not sure we're told anything we don't already know.

11.30 Out of Soweto: BCUC

BCUC - Bantu Continua Uhuru Consciousness - sound like no other band, bringing together polyrhythms, prison songs, chanting, electronics and heavy bass. They remember the end of apartheid, and they feel the weight of their inheritance as South African musicians, living and working in an iconic site in the political struggle: Soweto, outside Johannesburg. After a few years of touring globally, last year they achieved their ambition of playing Glastonbury. This programme, presented by South African spoken word poet Thabiso Mohare, follows BCUC backstage at the festival, and finds out how they've forged their sound and their outlook. 2.15 Drama: Moving the Goalposts

In Juliet Ace's one-woman play, Pam Ferris plays 80-year-old Mattie, who has stage 4 cancer. With 18 months to live, she has an opportunity to plan her "future"; there's a will to make, a funeral to organise and possessions to give away. But then, unbelievably, she doesn't die, and four years later, Mattie is left with very limited mobility and exhaustion - a condition she shares with many cancer patients who are supposedly cured of the disease. But she has her sense of humour, her irreverence, and an ability to appreciate the ironies of the situation. Director Tracey Neale

Friday Night is Music Night

8.00pm Radio 2
What with the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, the Supremes, the Dave Clark Five and other pop giants, it took a lot to make an impact on the charts in 1964, but a 15-year-old Scottish sensation called Lulu (above) managed it with a raucous, ebullient cover of the Isley Brothers' Shout. It was an astonishing debut, and perhaps equally astonishing is that, 56 years on, here is Lulu wowing an audience at the London Palladium as she reprises this and other hits. SIMON O'HAGAN

The Men From the Ministry

8.00am/7.00pm R4 Extra
Is it time to re-evaluate this long-running (1962–1977) comedy series? Extremely popular in its day, it was subsequently dismissed as Yes, Minister-lite. (The more incisive TV series arrived in 1980). Yes, Edward Taylor's scripts are silly, but they're also slick with elements of satire ("First rule of administration: pass it on to someone.") Starting today is the very first series starring a classy double act – Wilfrid Hyde-White and Richard Murdoch. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

RT Nearly 56 years since hitting big with her debut single Shout, singer and actress Lulu celebrates her career in an event recorded on Sunday at the London Palladium. Backed by her band and, for the first time, an orchestra, the Scottish star tells her story and sings signature charts hits such as Shout, The Boat That I Row, The Man Who Sold the World and To Sir with Love, America's top single of 1967. Plus covers of I Don't Wanna Fight, Teardrops and two songs with which she hit big in collaborations with Take That and solo Gary Barlow respectively: Relight My Fire and We've Got Tonight. Lulu is joined on stage by Barlow. During the interval Gary Davies celebrates Lulu with BBC archive moments.

Adam Ball BBC Radio Oxford

Age 39

Current job Presenter of the weekday drivetime show (4.00–7.00pm) on BBC Radio Oxford.

CV "I'm Oxfordshire, through and through – born at the John Radcliffe Hospital." Studied media and performing arts at college, "Which is where I saw the magic of radio and wanted to be involved." At 17, did a week's work experience at BBC Radio Oxford: "I made my first radio demo tape there and used it to get into Fox FM (later Heart). And I stayed there for over 20 years." Joined BBC Radio Oxford in April 2019.

Best moment "I managed to wangle an interview with McFly. I'm a massive fan. I also introduced them live at Fox FM's Party in the Park. Geeing the crowd up and getting them to scream – I felt like a rock star for about 30 seconds! I also met Michael Jackson briefly when he came to the Oxford Union to do a talk. He arrived on crutches, and limped past. I said 'Hi Michael, how are you doing?' and we chatted for a few moments. They couldn't believe it at the station!"

Worst moment "In my very early days, I mispronounced Sade – the phone lines immediately lit up. And I had a mild swearing moment once, when I described the heavy rainfall rather too graphically!"

Off air "I live in Faringdon and my little boy is nearly 18 months old. I have a recording studio in my garden and I write and perform music. We're just waiting for that million-pound song to sell to Justin Bieber! Music is in the family – my dad is nearly 70 and still in a rock 'n' roll band."

First radio memory "When I was six, I was DJ Adam in my bedroom, pretending to be on the radio. I always listened to Dr Fox's Sunday chart show. And I was a big fan of Chris Moyles on Radio 1 breakfast – I thought, 'One day, I want to work for the BBC.' And last year I got that."

Favourite broadcasters "Still Chris Moyles, now on Radio X. He knows how to command an audience. And I'm a big fan of Steve Allen, who does the early mornings on LBC. Genius radio."

Ambition "To never feel like I'm going to work every day. In my 23 years in radio, I've never felt like that. Mind you, if I got offered a national BBC Radio show...who wouldn't aspire to that?"

Dream job "Hands down, a Red Arrows pilot... I'd love to get the Red Arrows to do a special flyover for Radio Oxford's 50th birthday in October."

Secret skills "I love cooking for people – Thai curries or beef stroganoff (my dad's recipe). I can also dislocate my big toe..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Adam Ball BBC Radio Oxford

Age 39

Current job Presenter of the weekday drivetime show (4.00–7.00pm) on BBC Radio Oxford.

CV "I'm Oxfordshire, through and through – born at the John Radcliffe Hospital." Studied media and performing arts at college, "Which is where I saw the magic of radio and wanted to be involved." At 17, did a week's work experience at BBC Radio Oxford: "I made my first radio demo tape there and used it to get into Fox FM (later Heart). And I stayed there for over 20 years."

Best moment "I managed to wangle an interview with McFly. I'm a massive fan. I also introduced them live at Fox FM's Party in the Park. Geeing the crowd up and getting them to scream – I felt like a rock star for about 30 seconds! I also met Michael Jackson briefly when he came to the Oxford Union to do a talk. He arrived on crutches, and limped past. I said 'Hi Michael, how are you doing?' and we chatted for a few moments. They couldn't believe it at the station!"

Worst moment "In my very early days, I mispronounced Sade – the phone lines immediately lit up. And I had a mild swearing moment once, when I described the heavy rainfall rather too graphically!"

Off air "I live in Faringdon and my little boy is nearly 18 months old. I have a recording studio in my garden and I write and perform music. We're just waiting for that million-pound song to sell to Justin Bieber! Music is in the family – my dad is nearly 70 and still in a rock 'n' roll band."

First radio memory "When I was six, I was DJ Adam in my bedroom, pretending to be on the radio. I always listened to Dr Fox's Sunday chart show. And I was a big fan of Chris Moyles on Radio 1 breakfast – I thought, 'One day, I want to work for the BBC.' And last year I got that."

Favourite broadcasters "Still Chris Moyles, now on Radio X. He knows how to command an audience. And I'm a big fan of Steve Allen, who does the early mornings on LBC. Genius radio."

Ambition "To never feel like I'm going to work every day. In my 23 years in radio, I've never felt like that. Mind you, if I got offered a national BBC Radio show...who wouldn't aspire to that?"

Dream job "Hands down, a Red Arrows pilot... I'd love to get the Red Arrows to do a special flyover for Radio Oxford's 50th birthday in October."

Secret skills "I love cooking for people – Thai curries or beef stroganoff (my dad's recipe). I can also dislocate my big toe..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Adam Ball BBC Radio Oxford

Age 39

Current job Presenter of the weekday drivetime show (4.00–7.00pm) on BBC Radio Oxford.

CV "I'm Oxfordshire, through and through – born at the John Radcliffe Hospital." Studied media and performing arts at college, "Which is where I saw the magic of radio and wanted to be involved." At 17, did a week's work experience at BBC Radio Oxford: "I made my first radio demo tape there and used it to get into Fox FM (later Heart). And I stayed there for over 20 years."

Best moment "I managed to wangle an interview with McFly. I'm a massive fan. I also introduced them live at Fox FM's Party in the Park. Geeing the crowd up and getting them to scream – I felt like a rock star for about 30 seconds! I also met Michael Jackson briefly when he came to the Oxford Union to do a talk. He arrived on crutches, and limped past. I said 'Hi Michael, how are you doing?' and we chatted for a few moments. They couldn't believe it at the station!"

Worst moment "In my very early days, I mispronounced Sade – the phone lines immediately lit up. And I had a mild swearing moment once, when I described the heavy rainfall rather too graphically!"

Off air "I live in Faringdon and my little boy is nearly 18 months old. I have a recording studio in my garden and I write and perform music. We're just waiting for that million-pound song to sell to Justin Bieber! Music is in the family – my dad is nearly 70 and still in a rock 'n' roll band."

First radio memory "When I was six, I was DJ Adam in my bedroom, pretending to be on the radio. I always listened to Dr Fox's Sunday chart show. And I was a big fan of Chris Moyles on Radio 1 breakfast – I thought, 'One day, I want to work for the BBC.' And last year I got that."

Favourite broadcasters "Still Chris Moyles, now on Radio X. He knows how to command an audience. And I'm a big fan of Steve Allen, who does the early mornings on LBC. Genius radio."

Ambition "To never feel like I'm going to work every day. In my 23 years in radio, I've never felt like that. Mind you, if I got offered a national BBC Radio show... who wouldn't aspire to that?"

Dream job "Hands down, a Red Arrows pilot... I'd love to get the Red Arrows to do a special flyover for Radio Oxford's 50th birthday in October."

Secret skills "I love cooking for people – Thai curries or beef stroganoff (my dad's recipe). I can also dislocate my big toe..." CAROLINE MEYER

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Adam Ball BBC Radio Oxford

Age 39

Current job Presenter of the weekday drivetime show (4.00–7.00pm) on BBC Radio Oxford.

CV "I'm Oxfordshire, through and through – born at the John Radcliffe Hospital." Studied media and performing arts at college, "Which is where I saw the magic of radio and wanted to be involved." At 17, did a week's work experience at BBC Radio Oxford: "I made my first radio demo tape there and used it to get into Fox FM (later Heart). And I stayed there for over 20 years." Joined BBC Radio Oxford in April 2019. Best moment "I managed to wangle an interview with McFly. I'm a massive fan. I also introduced them live at Fox FM's Party in the Park. Geeing the crowd up and getting them to scream – I felt like a rock star for about 30 seconds! I also met Michael Jackson briefly when he came to the Oxford Union to do a talk. He arrived on crutches, and limped past. I said 'Hi Michael, how are you doing?' and we chatted for a few moments. They couldn't believe it at the station!"

Worst moment "In my very early days, I mispronounced Sade – the phone lines immediately lit up. And I had a mild swearing moment once, when I described the heavy rainfall rather too graphically!"

Off air "I live in Faringdon and my little boy is nearly 18 months old. I have a recording studio in my garden and I write and perform music. We're just waiting for that million-pound song to sell to Justin Bieber! Music is in the family – my dad is nearly 70 and still in a rock 'n' roll band."

First radio memory "When I was six, I was DJ Adam in my bedroom, pretending to be on the radio. I always listened to Dr Fox's Sunday chart show. And I was a big fan of Chris Moyles on Radio 1 breakfast – I thought, 'One day, I want to work for the BBC.' And last year I got that."

Favourite broadcasters "Still Chris Moyles, now on Radio X. He knows how to command an audience. And I'm a big fan of Steve Allen, who does the early mornings on LBC. Genius radio."

Ambition "To never feel like I'm going to work every day. In my 23 years in radio, I've never felt like that. Mind you, if I got offered a national BBC Radio show...who wouldn't aspire to that?"

Dream job "Hands down, a Red Arrows pilot... I'd love to get the Red Arrows to do a special flyover for Radio Oxford's 50th birthday in October."

Secret skills "I love cooking for people – Thai curries or beef stroganoff (my dad's recipe). I can also dislocate my big toe..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Adam Ball BBC Radio Oxford

Age 39

Current job Presenter of the weekday drivetime show (4.00–7.00pm) on BBC Radio Oxford.

CV "I'm Oxfordshire, through and through – born at the John Radcliffe Hospital." Studied media and performing arts at college, "Which is where I saw the magic of radio and wanted to be involved." At 17, did a week's work experience at BBC Radio Oxford: "I made my first radio demo tape there and used it to get into Fox FM (later Heart). And I stayed there for over 20 years."

Best moment "I managed to wangle an interview with McFly. I'm a massive fan. I also introduced them live at Fox FM's Party in the Park. Geeing the crowd up and getting them to scream – I felt like a rock star for about 30 seconds! I also met Michael Jackson briefly when he came to the Oxford Union to do a talk. He arrived on crutches, and limped past. I said 'Hi Michael, how are you doing?' and we chatted for a few moments. They couldn't believe it at the station!"

Worst moment "In my very early days, I mispronounced Sade – the phone lines immediately lit up. And I had a mild swearing moment once, when I described the heavy rainfall rather too graphically!"

Off air "I live in Faringdon and my little boy is nearly 18 months old. I have a recording studio in my garden and I write and perform music. We're just waiting for that million-pound song to sell to Justin Bieber! Music is in the family – my dad is nearly 70 and still in a rock 'n' roll band."

First radio memory "When I was six, I was DJ Adam in my bedroom, pretending to be on the radio. I always listened to Dr Fox's Sunday chart show. And I was a big fan of Chris Moyles on Radio 1 breakfast – I thought, 'One day, I want to work for the BBC.' And last year I got that."

Favourite broadcasters "Still Chris Moyles, now on Radio X. He knows how to command an audience. And I'm a big fan of Steve Allen, who does the early mornings on LBC. Genius radio."

Ambition "To never feel like I'm going to work every day. In my 23 years in radio, I've never felt like that. Mind you, if I got offered a national BBC Radio show...who wouldn't aspire to that?"

Dream job "Hands down, a Red Arrows pilot... I'd love to get the Red Arrows to do a special flyover for Radio Oxford's 50th birthday in October."

Secret skills "I love cooking for people – Thai curries or beef stroganoff (my dad's recipe). I can also dislocate my big toe..." CAROLINE MEYER

Face behind the voice

Adam Ball BBC Radio Oxford

Age 39

Current job Presenter of the weekday drivetime show (4.00–7.00pm) on BBC Radio Oxford.

CV "I'm Oxfordshire, through and through – born at the John Radcliffe Hospital." Studied media and performing arts at college, "Which is where I saw the magic of radio and wanted to be involved." At 17, did a week's work experience at BBC Radio Oxford: "I made my first radio demo tape there and used it to get into Fox FM (later Heart). And I stayed there for over 20 years." Joined BBC Radio Oxford in April 2019.

Best moment "I managed to wangle an interview with McFly. I'm a massive fan. I also introduced them live at Fox FM's Party in the Park. Geeing the crowd up and getting them to scream – I felt like a rock star for about 30 seconds! I also met Michael Jackson briefly when he came to the Oxford Union to do a talk. He arrived on crutches, and limped past. I said 'Hi Michael, how are you doing?' and we chatted for a few moments. They couldn't believe it at the station!"

Worst moment "In my very early days, I mispronounced Sade – the phone lines immediately lit up. And I had a mild swearing moment once, when I described the heavy rainfall rather too graphically!"

Off air "I live in Faringdon and my little boy is nearly 18 months old. I have a recording studio in my garden and I write and perform music. We're just waiting for that million-pound song to sell to Justin Bieber! Music is in the family – my dad is nearly 70 and still in a rock 'n' roll band."

First radio memory "When I was six, I was DJ Adam in my bedroom, pretending to be on the radio. I always listened to Dr Fox's Sunday chart show. And I was a big fan of Chris Moyles on Radio 1 breakfast – I thought, 'One day, I want to work for the BBC.' And last year I got that."

Favourite broadcasters "Still Chris Moyles, now on Radio X. He knows how to command an audience. And I'm a big fan of Steve Allen, who does the early mornings on LBC. Genius radio."

Ambition "To never feel like I'm going to work every day. In my 23 years in radio, I've never felt like that. Mind you, if I got offered a national BBC Radio show...who wouldn't aspire to that?"

Dream job "Hands down, a Red Arrows pilot... I'd love to get the Red Arrows to do a special flyover for Radio Oxford's 50th birthday in October."

Secret skills "I love cooking for people – Thai curries or beef stroganoff (my dad's recipe). I can also dislocate my big toe..." CAROLINE MEYER

The Mirror & the Light

Monday-Friday 12.04pm/10.45pm Radio 4

RADIO 4 HAS CHOSEN Anton Lesser to read Hilary Mantel's The Mirror & the Light this week, the final novel in her trilogy about Thomas Cromwell, chief adviser to King Henry VIII. Lesser played Sir Thomas More, executed for his religious opposition to the monarch's remarriage plans, in the 2015 BBC2 series Wolf Hall, based on the first two books in the sequence, and his prior association with Mantel's project must have been one reason for picking him.

But, for listeners previously familiar with the stories as readers and viewers, the broadcast will cause an interesting aural double take. The novels are told from the point of view of Cromwell, played on television by Mark Rylance. The vocally varied Lesser will give strong radio voice to all the people but, for those with firm memories of the TV version, there will be a sense of More narrating the story.

The casting of audiobooks opens up the often surprisingly complex question of who or what the voice of a story is. Producers of audiobooks seem usually to cast readers of the same gender as the writer, presumably concluding that it might sound odd if Brian Blessed read a Joanna Trollope, or Joanna Lumley a Lee Child. But, as Mantel stressed in last week's Radio Times interview, her novels' perspective is inside

‘Mantel is desperate to get back Damian Lewis as the King’

Cromwell's head so, counter-intuitively, this is fiction by a woman that would sound odd if performed by an actress.

At a commercial and entertainment level, the original James Bond novels narrated by Daniel Craig would be a sensation, but the “voice” of the books isn't Bond, but the third-person narrator, writer Ian Fleming, who sounded a bit like the Duke of Edinburgh. There can also be cultural sensitivities. John le Carré, a magnificent mimic, has recorded versions of most of his books, doing the female dialogue as well, but sensibly handed over The Mission Song, which has a young black narrator, to David Oyelowo.

While listening to Lesser's The Mirror & the Light, our minds will surely also wander to the casting of the BBC TV version on which Peter Kosminsky and Peter Straughan, director and screenwriter of Wolf Hall, have just started.

Mantel told me that, subject to availability and contracts, she is understandably desperate to get back Rylance as Cromwell and Damian Lewis as the King.

IN VISION
Damian Lewis played King Henry VIII in the TV Wolf Hall

Who would be king?

Mark Lawson says Hilary Mantel's novel has to be read by a man

Bernard Hill and Mark Gatiss, who played the Duke of Norfolk and Bishop Gardiner in 2015, may be interested to know that their characters get a lot to do in the third book, as does Jane Seymour, played in Wolf Hall by Kate Phillips. Her agent's negotiations may be helped by Phillips' added star quality from playing Linda in Peaky Blinders. As the two series will eventually be boxed, there is great logic in continuity of casting.

S ECTIONS IN THE Mirror & the Light where Cromwell remembers key encounters with Anne Boleyn and Cardinal Wolsey would allow the return of Claire Foy and Jonathan Pryce, who played those characters in the 2015 series.

Budgets and actor availability would influence whether Kosminsky uses clips from the first version for the flashbacks, or shoots new material. I would hope the latter, as it's clear in the third book that some of Cromwell's recollections have crucially changed in detail and meaning for him.

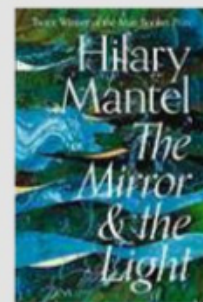

The major new character in the last part of the trilogy is the fourth wife, Anne of Cleves. Kosminsky and his casting director will surely have better and more original ideas, but my dream as a viewer would be Jodie Comer. She is in the historically correct mid-20s age range, and her internationally shifting guises in Killing Eve suggest that she could suggest Anne's Germanic background, as well as a rather chilling quality suggested by the Holbein portrait of her. Another great younger actress, Saoirse Ronan, is also exactly the right age and physical type. The fifth wife, Catherine Howard, a young teenager when Henry alighted on her, seems a perfect role for a newcomer, who is likely still at drama school.

And Lesser, when recording the flashbacks in The Mirror & the Light to the counsellor killed for defying the King, must surely have wondered if the second TV series, due on BBC2 in 2022, might contain more More for him.

YOUR RT Gardening

Go greener

Britain's 16 million gardens are our biggest nature reserve, says Joe Swift. Let's make them buzz with life!

WELCOME BACK TO my gardening column, which signifies the start of the new series of Gardeners' World! Gardeners up and down the country will no doubt be out in force, planting, pruning and pondering over the exciting season ahead.

It's been a long and extremely wet and stormy winter. Most gardens have suffered, but should recover fully. If you have waterlogged areas, try to keep off them until they've dried out, as any traffic (be it on foot or mower) may lead to compaction and further drainage issues down the line.

Our weather is becoming more unpredictable and the environment is an ever-pressing issue, which makes our gardens more relevant than ever. They're not only spaces for us to connect with nature, de-stress and improve our wellbeing, but also chunks of the planet that we are custodians of – somewhere where we can make a difference. There are an estimated 16 million gardens in the UK that, combined, cover a larger area than all our nature reserves put together. Our city and town plots are vital wildlife corridors, too. Together, these spaces host a diverse range of plants that are increasingly essential to sustain a huge amount of wildlife. The numerous habitats, even within a small plot, can offer homes to invertebrates, birds and mammals, and the more biodiverse a garden is, the healthier it tends to be, as predators are attracted in to do the pest control, avoiding the need for sprays.

This year I'll be helping gardeners to go a little greener wherever possible. Gardening with the environment in mind certainly doesn't mean a messy garden, either – it can be as designed and fancy as you wish, but a richer plot with layers of interest throughout the seasons will, in my view, only lead to a more interesting and successful garden; one buzzing with wildlife that will always feel truly alive.

Many of us garden sensitively already, but if you want to get on board, it's really very easy. Often very small changes in garden habits, approaches and plant choices can make a huge difference. In fact, it can mean less, not more, work, giving you time to de-stress even more. Now that's what I call a win-win!

IF YOU DO ONE THING THIS WEEK

INSTALL A BIRD FEEDER

One of my great pleasures in life is watching the birds in the garden. I could sit for hours, idling the day away. Bird feeders are an important resource for birds when food is scarce. It's important to keep feeding them once they start coming, as they may become reliant on your food. Birds like cover and places to perch like trees, large shrubs, climbing plants and hedges, and some available water, such as a bird bath. Avoid cutting hedges during the nesting season between March and July.

SQUIRRELS AWAY

There are many types of feeders on the market: bird tables, hanging feeders, window feeders and ground feeders – there are even some squirrel-proof feeders. A feeder within a cage works best for small birds. Buy a strong one, though, as I had one that a squirrel gnawed through eventually, after hours of trying!

LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION

Look for somewhere quiet (away from human traffic), but somewhere you can see them feeding. It should be open and safe, away from predators, but ideally with a shrub or small tree quite close so they can perch and plan their approach. Put them at eye level or above for hanging feeders (well away from cats) and ideally in a place with some shade in summer.

WHAT'S ON THE MENU?

Black sunflower seeds An excellent all-year-round feed with high oil content.

Nyjer (or niger) seeds Tiny seeds with high oil content, which attract finches and siskins.

Peanuts Crushed peanuts will attract robins, dunnocks, coal tits and sometimes wrens. Use natural peanuts (not salted or dry roasted) and buy from a reputable source, as some can contain a harmful toxin.

Live food Mealworms are loved by robins and blue tits. Only use fresh mealworms – dead or discoloured ones may contain salmonella.

Fat balls and food bars A great high-fat winter food. Remove any mesh bags before hanging to avoid small birds getting caught.

Household scraps Chopped unsalted fat, such as bacon fat, small quantities of bread, mild grated cheese and soaked dry fruit can all work as bird feed.

BACK TO WORK

As we look to spring, it's time to focus on our gardens again, says Joe Swift

PLAN YOUR FUNERAL IN ADVANCE AND PROTECT YOUR LOVED ONES

Getting the right funeral plan has never been easier

There's never the perfect time to talk about your send-off. However, planning your funeral in advance makes perfect financial sense.

Not only does it alleviate the financial burden on your loved ones, it also offers you peace of mind that the ones you care about will have the support they need when the time comes. We know that arranging a funeral is no easy task. But we also know that any support the important people in your life could get while arranging your funeral is not only incredibly valuable, but a pragmatic decision.

Radio Times has teamed up with Dignity, one of the UK's leading funeral plan providers. Dignity has already helped over 910,000 people plan for their funeral in advance and will be there for the ones you love, when they need it most. What's more, if you purchase before 30 April 2020, Dignity is offering £100 off the price of your plan*.

Why choose the Dignity Prepaid Funeral Plan?

The Dignity Prepaid Funeral Plan allows you to pay for your funeral in advance – once paid for, you will never pay more for the services included in the plan. The Prepaid Funeral Plan from Dignity is a simple way of taking control of your affairs, protecting against future increases in funeral costs and gaining peace of mind for everyone concerned.

HMRC is asking some parents to repay their child benefit, says Paul Lewis

THOUSANDS OF PARENTS all over the country are getting letters from HMRC asking them to pay back their child benefit. The bill can be thousands of pounds for what is called the High Income Child Benefit Tax Charge. They have been caught by the means test imposed in 2013 that takes back some of the child benefit from a parent if they or their partner has an income over £50,000 – and all of it if they earn over £60,000.

Parents are informed of the rules

when they first claim child benefit and most parents are well below the limits. But a change of circumstances, as outlined below, can easily send people over it.

- They can become liable if their income has crept up over the years or a recent pay rise takes them over £50,000. The thresholds have not been increased since 2013, even though wages have risen by 13%. One in five families is now liable for the tax charge as a growing number of people now earn over £50,000.

- They have an income below £50,000 but move in with a new partner whose income is more than that. It doesn't matter if the new partner is not the parent of the child. Indeed, the biological parent who lives separately does not pay the charge, whatever their income.

To receive emails with RT offers, visit radiotimes.com/money-email

● They are paid less than £50,000 but have a company car or other benefit in kind that counts as part of their taxable income and takes them over the threshold.

ONE WAY FOR those just over the threshold to escape the tax charge is to pay extra amounts into a pension, reducing what is called their “net adjusted income”.

A person who does exceed the limit must fill in a self-assessment form and pay the tax. If they don't, then HMRC will use the records it has of income and child benefit to track them down.

People can avoid the tax by opting out of child benefit. But it is very important to claim it first and then opt out. A parent who never claims child benefit will not get National Insurance credits towards their state pension, and their children will not automatically get a National Insurance number at the age of 16.

A WINTER FUEL CHILL

Emma wrote to me about her parents who live in the Auvergne in France. “When they moved to France they were entitled to the Winter Fuel Payment but now they no longer are. Can I challenge this decision?”

Paul Lewis replies: The Winter Fuel Payment is between £100 and £300 tax-free and was paid this past winter to people born before 6 April 1954. It can be paid to people who have lived here but now live in another EU or EEA country. However, in 2015 the Government took it away from people living in seven EU countries that are warmer in winter than the south west region of England.

France is included (even though it can be very cold there) because its average temperature includes its four tropical overseas territories. Sadly for Emma's parents there is little chance of changing this rule.

Now that the UK is leaving the EU it is possible the Government may stop new claims from people who move to the EU from 2021. But people already living there should continue to be eligible.

If you were born before 6 April 1954 you can claim up until 31 March – go to www.gov.uk and search “winter fuel”.

LASTING POWERS OF ATTORNEY – ONLY £399* pp

There may come a time when you are unable to make decisions for yourself, maybe through illness or injury. If that were to happen, who would make decisions about your care, or manage your finances?

It's important you make your wishes clear in a legal document known as a lasting power of attorney (LPA).

There are two types of LPA – one that covers your health and welfare, and one that covers your property and financial affairs.

A health and welfare LPA deals with your medical care and can only be used once you become unable to make decisions for yourself.

A property and financial affairs LPA deals with financial matters, and can also be used while you still have full mental capacity, for example if you become frail or immobile.

If you're married and your partner becomes unable to make decisions, marriage does not give you the authority to make decisions on their behalf – you will only be able to do this if you are formally appointed as an attorney.

READER OFFER – SAVE £250

For a limited time, Key Estate Planning is offering to create both your property and financial affairs LPA and your health and welfare LPA for £399 per person. Offer ends 6 April 2020.

Key Estate Planning has a team of estate planning specialists who can explain and arrange these documents. They can also offer you a free no-obligation consultation and recommendation on wills and trusts, based on your circumstances and legacy objectives*.

IN A CRITICALLY acclaimed new film, Georgia's historic capital, Tbilisi, is the backdrop to a tender love story set in the conservative world of Georgian traditional dance. And Then We Danced is about a young male dancer who develops feelings for a talented rival, and is caught between orthodox customs and his liberal desires.

In recent years, Tbilisi has become the coolest city in the Caucasus. Georgia used to be a little-visited Eurasian backwater, but the former Soviet republic has flung open its doors in the last decade and tourism is booming. Wedged in between Russia, Azerbaijan, Armenia and Turkey and the Black Sea, it's half the size of England, but has a lot to offer for such a small country. You can hike amid the snow-capped peaks of Europe's second highest mountain range, sip natural wine in ancient vineyards, explore medieval monasteries and fortresses, and sunbathe on the subtropical shores of the Black Sea...

RELAX IN A HOT BATH IN EURASIA'S COOLEST CITY

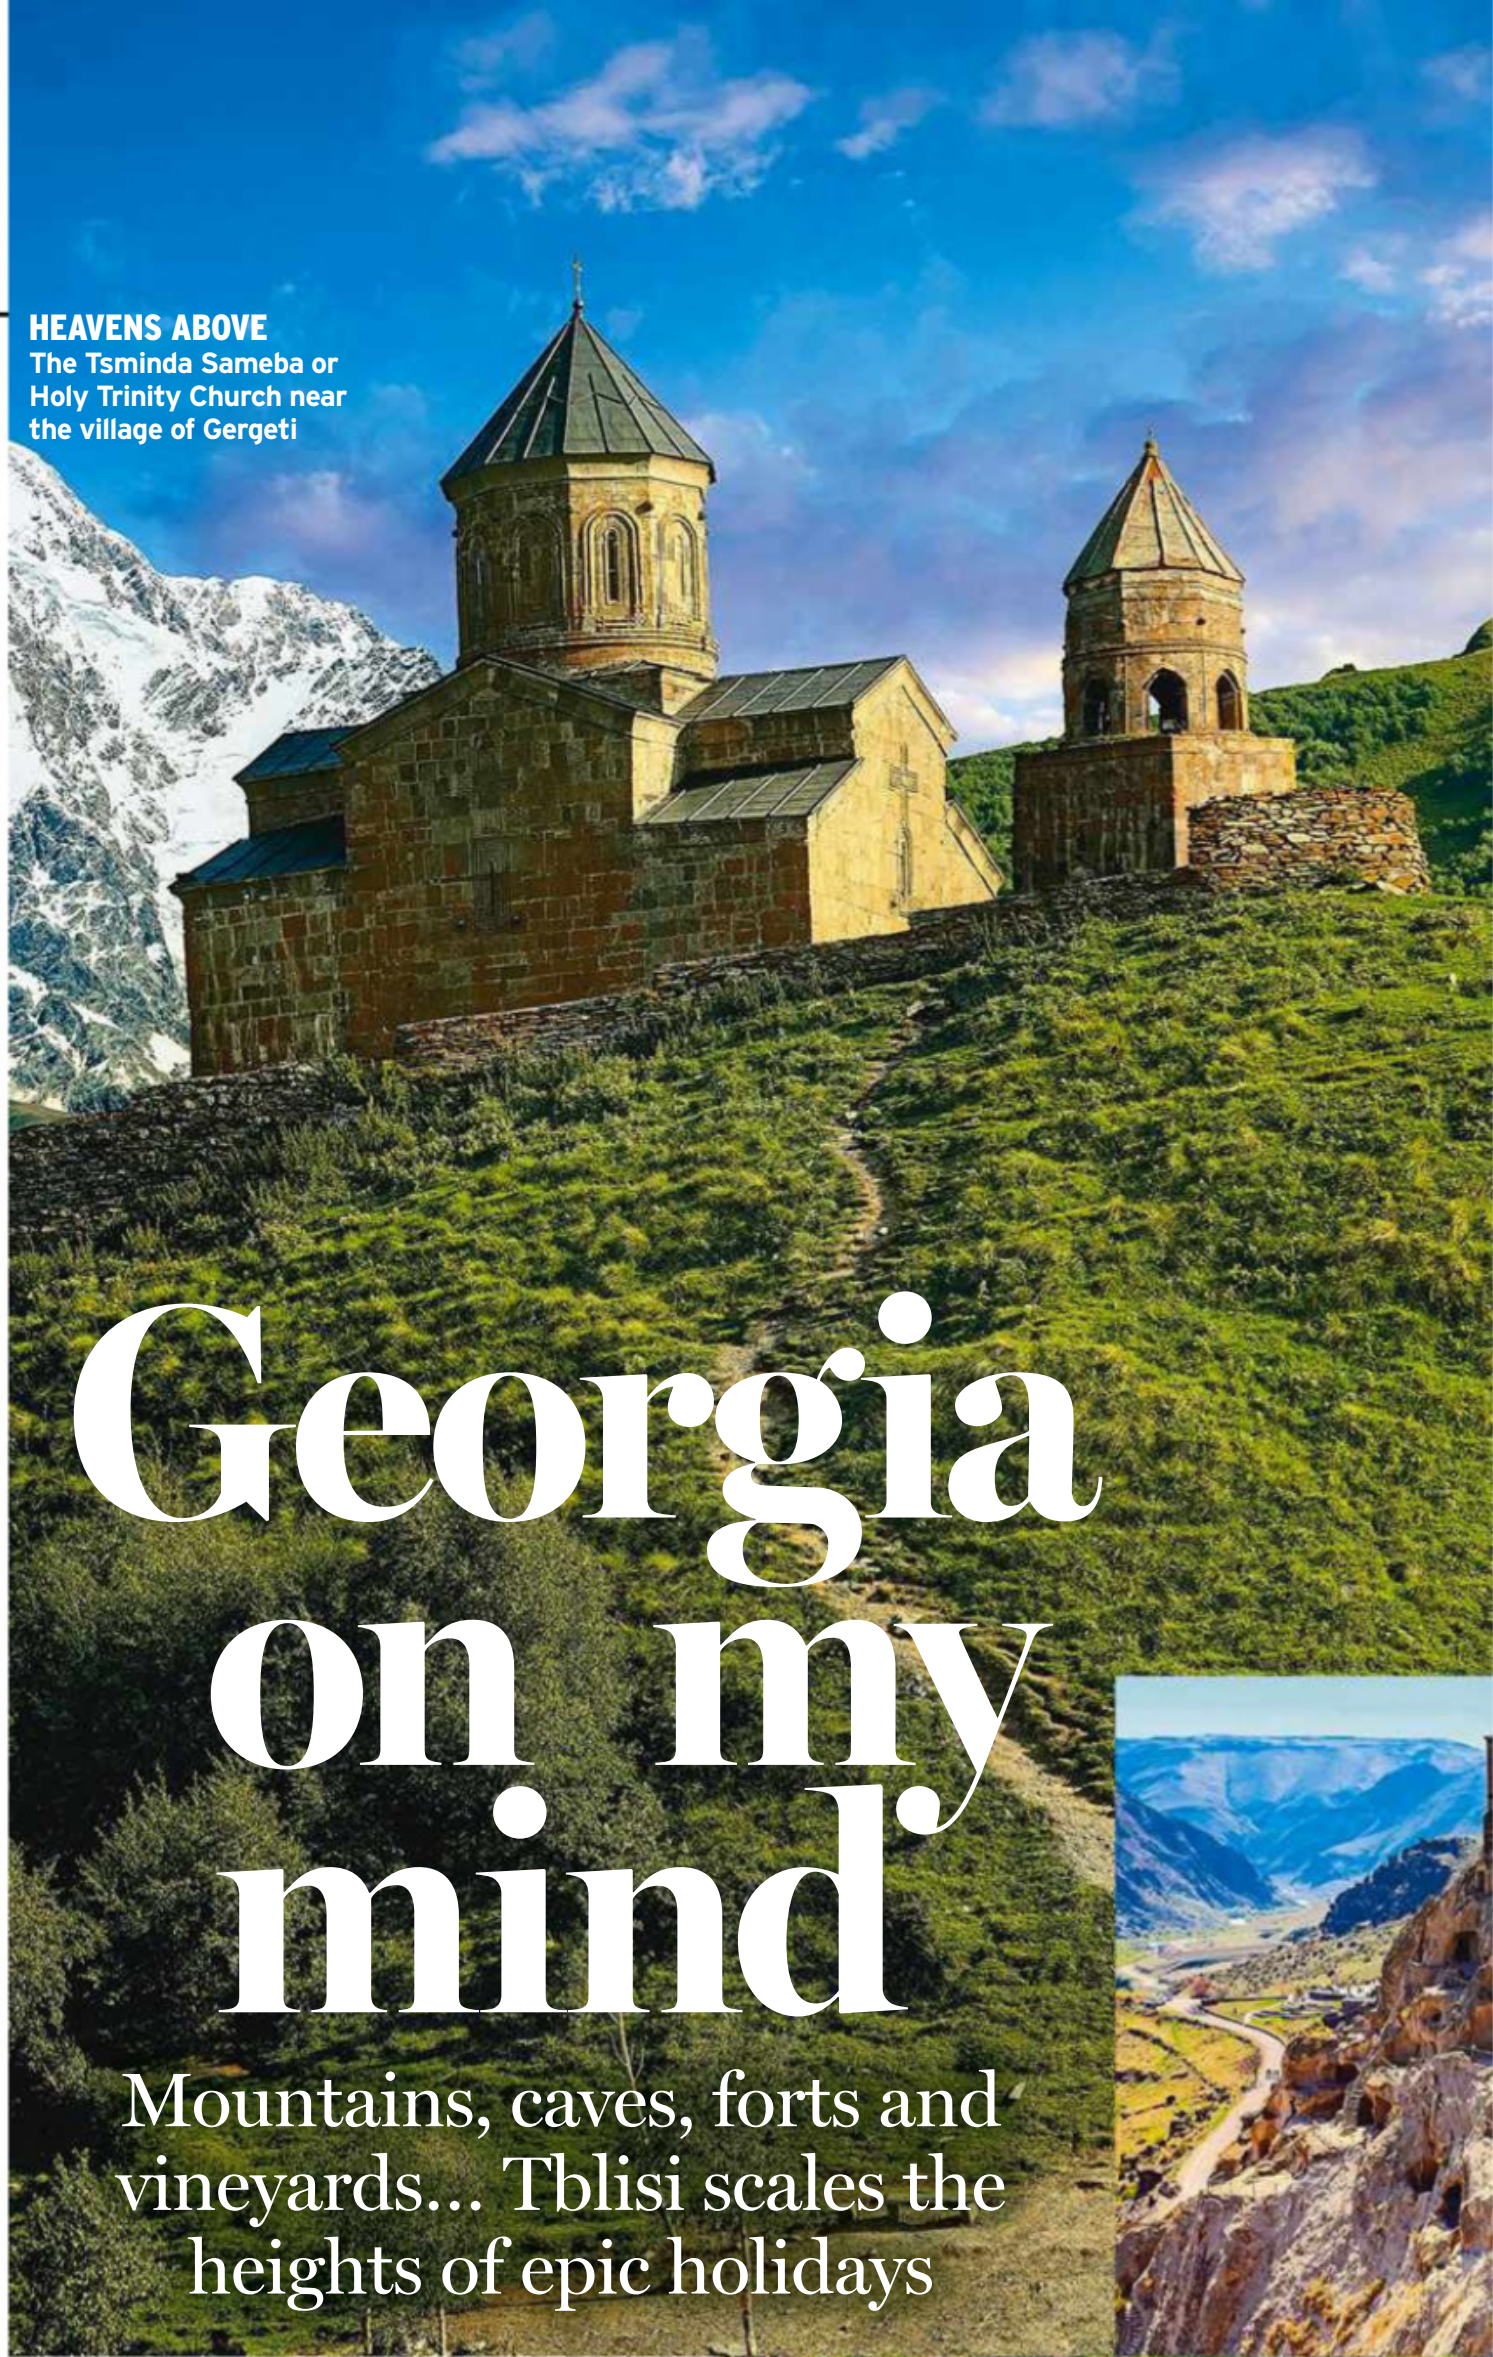

"Tbilisi" translates as "warm", and legend has it that a medieval king founded the city after his falcon drowned in a hot spring while pheasant-hunting. In the historic bathhouses of the Abanotubani neighbourhood, you can bask in therapeutic waters in communal or private sulphur baths. Admire the works of local artists in the National Gallery and Georgian Museum of Fine Arts on grand Rustaveli Avenue, or learn about Soviet-era history in the Georgian National Museum. Take selfies on the flamboyant, glass-roofed, LED-lit Bridge of Peace over the River Mtkvari, and enjoy panoramic views from the ruins of a 17th-century fortress and the feet of Mother Georgia – a giant, sword-wielding aluminium statue that looms over the city. In the delightful Old Town, art nouveau buildings now house trendy wine shops, bohemian cafés and courtyard restaurants serving up twists on Georgian classics.

TAKE THE HIGH ROAD

The Georgian Military Highway is one of Europe's most spectacular drives and has been a trading route for thousands of years. After leaving Tbilisi, it climbs into the hulking Caucasus Mountains to the Russian border, reaching a lung-busting 2,379 metres. Most travellers go as far as Georgia's most-photographed church: 14th-century Tsminda Sameba sits pretty on a hill in the shadow of Georgia's third highest peak, snow-dusted Mount Kazbek. The ancient Greeks believed that Prometheus was chained to the mountain as a punishment for stealing fire from the gods and giving it to mortals. These days there's a road up to the church, but many visitors choose to hike up and are rewarded with stupendous views.

WALK ON THE WILD SIDE

For super-sized alpine scenery without the crowds, head to Europe's loftiest mountain range – the Greater Caucasus – in Georgia's wild north west. In Upper Svaneti, you can hike past glaciers and deep gorges, and sleep in ancient hamlets dotted with crumbling towers. These eerie edifices served as both dwellings and fortresses in medieval times. The Unesco-listed village of Chazhashi has more than 200 and is overlooked by 5000m-high Mount Shkhara – Georgia's highest peak and Europe's fourth highest.

Due to its strategic location at the crossroads of Asia and Europe, Georgia was invaded by the Romans, Persians, Ottomans and Russians, and is sprinkled with castles and forts. Most astonishing of all is Vardzia, a Lord of the Rings-style cave monastery built by Queen Tamar in the late 1100s, when the Kingdom of Georgia was attacked by Mongol hordes. It was dug out of a hillside and historians believe it had 13 floors and 6,000 rooms, and was accessed by a secret tunnel. Tamar's rock-hewn holy city was destroyed by an earthquake, exposing its warren of caves, but it's still a magical spot, especially the fresco-smothered church.

TASTE ORANGE WINE

Georgia is one of the world's oldest wine-making countries. In 2017, archaeologists dug up shards of qvevri, an egg-shaped clay pot, with traces of wine dating back 8,000 years. During the Soviet era, it produced industrial quantities of plonk, but its traditional wines are enjoying a renaissance thanks to the vogue for natural wines. Its amber-coloured whites have been made in the same way for millennia: grapes (including skins, stalks and pips) are fermented in pots that are buried in the ground. The sunny hills of Kakheti in the east are the main wine-making region, and many vineyards do sampling tours.

Punctuation of the Week – @

The punctuation we know today as the "at symbol" is a foundation of social media and email. But why? Its modern form began when Florentine merchants used it to denote an amphora, a terracotta vessel that had become a unit of measure for wine. The symbol took on a specialised role in accounting, where @ meant

"at the price of", and eventually found its way on to modern keyboards.

@ was propelled into the modern vernacular by a computer scientist looking to connect programmers. Searching for a keyboard character that wouldn't get mistaken for anything else in a user name, Ray Tomlinson's eyes fell on the @ on his Model 33 teletype machine. He sent himself an email, and in so doing created the linchpin of modern communication.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Keep calm and carry on

SPREADING FEAR
Endless news coverage isn't helping worries about coronavirus

President FD Roosevelt, at the height of the Depression, told the American people, "There is nothing to fear but fear itself". I thought of this watching the BBC 10pm news last week, which had, for a good 20 minutes, been devoted to the coronavirus.

Most people who contract the virus report mild symptoms. Compare this to the suffering of those caught up in the Syrian war and other, unreported horrors of the world. News editors decide – as with Brexit last year – to give blanket coverage to a subject, but does anyone consider the effect it has? One person told me, "It's the first thing I think of when I wake up in the morning." I'm not saying this virus isn't serious, or that there's nothing to fear, but please – a bit of balance.

heap in an episode that my six-year-old nephew described as "daft". Rethink, I think...

Jim Hillis Belfast
The recent series has divided opinion among Doctor Who fans right down the middle.

NOT A FOOT WRONG

In episode two of Last Tango in Halifax (1 March BBC1), writer Sally Wainwright gave us a scene demonstrating what homophobia looks like without reducing either of the characters to types or adding any patronising little coda explaining that the reaction of the character was to be deplored, thus allowing the audience to make up their own minds.

This is what television drama used to be like, before it decided that polemic was more important than the exploration of ideas and characterisation.

Many thanks to the writer, also to Sarah Lancashire (Caroline) and Lu Corfield (Ruth), who played the scene so beautifully.

Frank Startup Cirencester, Gloucestershire

WE'RE LOSING OUT

I have every sympathy with Brian Stabler (Feedback, 29 February), who complained that The Passenger on More4 was dropped with two episodes still to go. Channel 4's explanation that it was done "to maximise overall performance" was just corporate gobbledegook. It means "not enough people would be watching the adverts".

Channel 5 are guilty of dropping programmes, too. Walking Britain's Lost Railways was supposed to be six episodes but has been dropped after two. If a series is advertised as having six episodes, is there not a moral obligation to honour this?

Richard Fullerton London W5
A spokesperson for Channel 5 tells us: "Walking Britain's Lost Railways is an important show for us and we want viewers to watch and enjoy it. Unfortunately, where we had it scheduled, it underperformed, so we are looking for an alternative home for it where we hope it will attract a bigger audience. Please be assured it will definitely return."

VISCERAL DRAMA

Flesh and Blood (ITV) had me gasping, in a good way, at its pace and verve. What a relief to see a quality drama where the acting is impeccable and the plot plausible as well as unfailingly gripping. Well done writer Sarah Williams. Special mention must go to the mesmerising Imelda Staunton as Mary. And, after all these years, Francesca Annis can still pack a punch!

Corinne Shefford Hereford

TIMELESS TREAT

I have to nominate The Victorian House of Arts and Crafts (showing again Wednesday BBC4) as the best show I've seen lately. Totally fascinating and without the usual trumped-up dramas and ridiculous time deadlines – and best of all, no one cried. It even ended with morris dancing. Can TV get much better?

Neil Anderson Driffield, East Riding of Yorkshire

REACH FOR THE STARS...

I've been a Doctor Who fan since I was around five years old, nearly 40 years ago, and the latest series has been quite decent – ten weeks of twists and turns, lots of nostalgic quips about the past and rewriting its history, with a great cliffhanger at the end. I do think it's a shame they moved it to Sunday, though.

Vic Grimes Chelmsford, Essex

...I've fallen in love with Doctor Who again. I think the audacious nature of Chris Chibnall's revisionist history of Gallifrey and the Doctor, in The Timeless Children (1 March BBC1), is extraordinarily exciting. Jodie Whittaker gave an electrifying performance, her Doctor finally coming into focus with verve and passion.

Perry Thomas Penarth, Vale of Glamorgan

...OR CRASHLANDING?

I was a little disappointed by series 12. I think the writers have done the excellent Jodie Whittaker a huge disservice. The reintroduction of the Master was tedious to say the least. I hope series 13 redresses the balance and returns the show to its roots, using time travel to visit various timeframes in history and putting the Doctor centre stage – where the character belongs.

Andy Beech Clevedon, North Somerset

...Oh dear, BBC! What have you done to poor old Doctor Who? My niece and two little nephews no longer watch as they think it's boring, never mind this 49-year-old! Preachy, inane and banal, it staggered drunkenly to a crashed

ODD COUPLE
Tala Gouveia and Jason Watkins in McDonald & Dodds

DETECTIVE DELIGHT

Having felt let down by The Pale Horse, I was finally able to go to bed happy. McDonald & Dodds (ITV) was a proper whodunnit with an interesting and original couple of detectives, an exciting story and, best of all, an ending we could understand – baddies caught and the plot explained.

Gillian Robbins Oxford

...Some critics have been sneery about McDonald & Dodds. I hope that ITV commissions another series of this very watchable programme. The Bath setting is beautiful and Jason Watkins is superb. Criticism has dismissed it as cosy and old-fashioned – for which, much thanks!

Alastair Coe Stockton-on-Tees, Durham

...I was born and brought up in Somerset and yes, while not as alien as the drama made out, London is different in lots of ways (try getting a bus in Nether Stowey at midnight).

But for me the real crime was the accents. I half-expected the

Suzanne Parsons Orpington, south-east London

DIVIDED BY THE WALL

As a fan of Only Connect (Monday BBC2), I feel there is considerable unfairness in the third round

(the connecting wall), in that the two teams have separate walls to solve. This was made clear in the edition of 2 March, when the second wall was far harder than the first, and the team presented with it consequently lost. I would suggest that both teams are given the same wall, but separately.

Robert Clark Bristol
The Only Connect Question Editor replies: “It can be difficult to judge the difficulty of quiz questions – it comes down to how well the required knowledge matches the knowledge of the team. The same is true in the first two rounds of the show when teams get different questions. Questions that seem impossible to one person are swept up impressively by another (for example the recent one about the Smiths song Panic that Victoria Coren Mitchell thought was one of the hardest in the history of the show). Certainly there’s an element of luck in the way the questions fall, but that’s true of many shows and Only Connect is no exception.”

RISING STAR

I love the production values of the Welsh drama Hidden (Saturday BBC4, Tuesday BBC1 Wales), it’s so atmospheric. And the star of the show for me is Annes Elwy, who plays

STANDOUT
Annes Elwy in Hidden

Mia Owen. She commands your attention and conveys her emotions with subtle expressions. She’s surely destined for a great career.

Brian Anderson Stroud, Gloucestershire

POSTER BOYS

I’m a huge fan of Inside No 9 (BBC2). There isn’t a TV show I look forward to more every week, or miss more in its absence. Reece Shearsmith and Steve Pemberton have a unique ability to craft unusual characters and create a sense of dread, even if it’s sometimes more comedy than horror. The episode posters are as captivating as the show itself.

WIN A COMPLETE BOX SET OF VERA

'There are a lot of laughs in that Land Rover'

The latest series of Vera, which went out recently on ITV, is now available on DVD, along with a complete box set of all ten series – that's 40 episodes on 20 discs! And we have five box sets to give away to RT readers, courtesy of ITV Studios. For your chance to win one, see below.

DCI Vera Stanhope and her sergeant, Aiden Healy, may be the perfect detective partnership, but this wasn't always the case. "I didn't think I'd got the job," admits actor Kenny Doughty about the role he's been playing since 2015. "I'd done a screen test with Brenda [Blethyn] and we'd got along well, but it hadn't felt like the work I'd hoped to do. When I got home, I spoke to my agent and told her that it hadn't worked out. And she said, 'Well, that's funny because they've just offered you the part.'"

DS Healy quickly became a well-established part of the team. But the Barnsley-born Doughty, 44, says that it took him a while to find his feet when he made his debut, back in series five...

"I'd just come off the back of

CHEMISTRY
Brenda Blethyn and Kenny Doughty are good mates doing The Full Monty in the West End for two years, so I felt rusty where the technical side of TV was concerned. It took me the length of my first series to find who Aiden was and to get my confidence. And I'd been a big fan of the show, so I was also aware of the fantastic work that David Leon had done as the original sidekick, Joe Ashworth. So I wanted to maintain the quality of what had gone before."

These days, Doughty considers the cast and crew to be "a second family", and he and Blethyn strive to keep standards high. "We've become very close, both on screen and off. There are a lot of laughs in that Land Rover. And, after work, we'll get together and chill out either at her flat or mine in Newcastle. We'll make each other dinner and go over what we have to do the following day. Brenda's on top of all the scripts and she makes sure that everyone is as passionate about the series as she is."

Speaking of those scripts, does he ever contribute ideas for developing his character?

"No, I like being surprised by what the writers come up with. But I do joke that there should be a Vera special where Aiden is on holiday in the Italian vineyards and she rocks up in the hat and coat in the blazing Mediterranean sun with word of a new murder investigation. That'd be fun!"

WIN A DVD BOX SET For your chance to win one of five copies of Vera: the Complete Series 1-10, courtesy of ITV Studios, go to radiotimes.com/veraboxset – closing date 11.59pm on Friday 27 March. Or to buy the box set for £74.99 incl p&p (RRP £84.99), call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply, see website) or visit radiotimes.com/dvdshop, ref RT1812. Your contract is with Simply Home Entertainment.

◁ had four named storms, Atiyah, Brendan, Ciara and Dennis. However, the next weather system hitting us was initially named by the Spanish weather service because of the impact it would have there. Jorge is, of course, Spanish for George, and because they named it first, we follow that naming convention. The next one, if named by the Met Office or Met Eireann, will definitely be Storm Ellen."

BRING ON BUMPS

Why did the BBC decide to run a one-off episode of Bumps (21 February BBC1)? It was the most entertaining comedy we've seen for a long time. Amanda

Redman and cast were first class. We were disappointed to find it was just a pilot episode, especially since we'd told several of our family and friends to watch out for it! Stop teasing us, BBC – deliver the full package.

PUT IT TO THE PEOPLE

As a regular listener to The Archers (Radio 4) and patron of the Bull, I think it's about time we were given a chance to decide on the change of name to the B @ Ambridge via a referendum – after all, it's as much our pub as the regulars!

Phillip Moore Penzance, Cornwall

Phillip wins Inside No 9 – series five of Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith's weird, clever and sometimes disturbing anthology. To order your copy on two DVDs for £14.99 incl p&sp (RRP £19.99), call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply) or visit radiotimes.com/dvdshop, quoting ref RT1806. Your contract for supply of goods is with Simply Home Entertainment.

View from my sofa

ANDI OLIVER

‘Formula One? Waste of time’

The Great British Menu judge would much rather watch witches...

What's your TV set-up?

My new sofa is massive. Being cosy is one of the most important things in the world to me so there are duvets, blankets and pillows everywhere. The TV is also huge.

Who rules the remote?

I do. I'm like a stereotypical dad in a weird cartoon.

What do you watch?

I have different tiers of watching – on my own, with my partner and with Miquita [Oliver, Andi's TV presenter daughter]. On my own, I'm in the middle of rewatching True Blood and I've watched all of Chilling Adventures of Sabrina. I like anything that's got magic or superpowers in it.

Is there anything you hate?

Cowboy films, football, but most of all Formula One. What is that about? People driving in circles really, really fast to end up where they started – what a waste of time.

You were in the post-punk band Rip Rig and Panic with Neneh Cherry – wasn't your first cookery show with her?

Yes, Dish It Up – that was the first food broadcasting that I'd done. Neneh and I bonded over our love of cooking. We were weird teenagers – for parties we'd make ten kilos of chicken wings and rice. Most teenagers just buy cider.

You now have two food shows and two restaurants – do you cook at home as well?

All the time. Before I left the house today, I prepped all the vegetables for tonight because otherwise by the time I get home I won't be bothered. I make oils and pastes and purees and have them in the fridge ready to go.

Do you have a signature dish?

The kids love my honey bake chicken where you rub it with spices, slow cook it, then at the end you pour honey over it and put it back in the oven. It all goes sticky and crisp. When Lily Allen did Saturday Kitchen, that was her Heaven dish.

You took over from Prue Leith as a judge on Great British Menu in 2016 – was there any backlash?

I wasn't that worried until 20 minutes before the first one went out and I suddenly thought, "Oh my God, what if they all hate me?" But actually, the Great British Menu audience welcomed me with open arms. It's been a really loving experience.

Any social media reaction?

Twitter's the cesspit of filth, but I had a guy on Instagram the other day saying that I was going to hell if I didn't grow my hair. I wanted to message back and say, "Darling, there's so much other stuff that hair's not going to be the thing that sends me to hell."

What's the theme on Great British Menu this year?

It's 150 years of British children's authors and it's beautiful. From the time I was very little, books were the thing that gave me succour when I really needed that space. You won't believe some of the dishes that came out of this.

Speaking of children, you've worked with Miquita before. Would you do so again?

We're having conversations with BBC and another one with Channel 4 about projects we'd love to do together. People tried to get us to work together years ago, then somebody said, "Do you want to drive across Asia together in a 1953 Morris Minor?" [for 2018 BBC2 series Eight Go Rallying: the Road to Saigon] It taught us patience with each other. Can you imagine being in a car with one of your parents for ten hours a day over three weeks? We only had one argument! STEPHEN ARMSTRONG

Great British Menu returns on Wednesday at 8pm on BBC2

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK Song of Solomon by Toni Morrison.

MY RADIO Radio 4 makes me feel safe and happy.

MY MOVIES Guys and Dolls, When Harry Met Sally..., A Streetcar Named Desire – there's a bunch to be
