There's one rule for you...

Is there a whiff of a witch-hunt in the pursuit of Priti Patel?

Sheryl Sandberg has spoken about the speed with which women (many others would add, especially black women) are labelled aggressive and bullying for behaviour that's tolerated in a male boss. When does assertive become aggressive? When does it spark an investigation? And do we have a problem with assertive women?

There was quite a stir when Sir Philip Rutnam called TV news cameras to his home last month. The knighted Whitehall mandarin and former Morgan Stanley investment banker (via Dulwich College, Cambridge and Harvard) announced his resignation as permanent secretary at the Home Office and his plan to bring a claim for constructive dismissal, citing the "behaviours" of his boss, Home Secretary Priti Patel. The Westminster hack-pack moved in on the scent of a possible resignation.

Before her parliamentary career, Patel already had a controversial reputation as a lobbyist for British American Tobacco. And she was forced to step down as Theresa May's International Development Secretary in 2017 for unsanctioned meetings with Israeli government officials while on holiday.

Reporters including Newsnight's scrupulous political editor Nicholas Watt have turned up further allegations against Patel – stretching back to her ministerial roles in International Development and in Employment – about swearing, table thumping and belittling staff.

Perhaps there's something about Patel that has made the kind of coverage she gets inevitable? We saw this daughter of unskilled Indian immigrants, who is undeniably photogenic, basking in rapturous applause as she addressed the Conservative Party Conference last October. In interviews she has calmly batted away challenges that the Government's planned points-based immigration system would have denied her own father entry to this country. This is a new system, she explains.

It wins her admirers, but invokes horror in some TV viewers of immigrant heritage themselves. Is she ministerial proof, as is also claimed of former Chancellor and bus driver's son Sajid Javid, that Britain is "post-racial" on immigration? And do some in the media have a problem with this that affects their judgement?

Her natural expression makes her look as if she's always smiling. Last October the BBC had to apologise after more than 200 viewers complained that Andrew Marr had unfairly accused her of laughing as she listened on a remote link while he read out a list of British businesses concerned about a hard Brexit. "I can't see why you're laughing," he'd said. I've yet to find an example of such a comment being made to a male minister.

Yet Michael Gove appeared on Newsnight in 2013 and was accused by his opponent – but not by Jeremy Paxman – of smirking about austerity cuts. In fact, Paxman smiled throughout and declared it an "end-of-the-pier show".

ominic raab, Chris Grayling and Iain Duncan Smith (all ministers at the time) have all been accused by their political opponents of callous disregard for the consequences of policies such as Universal Credit and the privatisation of parole services. Yet have any found themselves pursued with as much passion as Priti Patel? Is there just the slightest whiff of a witch-hunt?

And what of Sir Philip Rutnam's moral high ground? He was at the Home Office when the scale of the Windrush scandal emerged. In this unedifying battle between minister and mandarin, one hopes TV news doesn't ignore the true scandal of the bullying of ordinary citizens, not just the alleged bullying of civil servants.

WHAT WE WATCHED

Paul McCartney was going on the record for Radio 1 and opened up about the mercurial John Lennon: "I have a recollection of arguing with John and of getting fairly hot under the collar about some Beatle thing, and he swore at me and I must have looked a bit dismayed. He had his round glasses on, and he took them off, and said: 'It's only me.' Then he put the glasses back up and it was Mr Front again." Nearly nine years on from Lennon's murder, McCartney was feeling reflective about his former bandmate.
"When I think of him now, it's the little things I remember, all the inconsequential things, not the big ones," he added.

WHAT YOU SAID

In a letter that could have been written in 2020, Mrs JE Brackle of Norfolk addressed the press's treatment of celebrities. After watching BBC2's Scene: My Brother David, about the life and untimely death of David Scarboro of EastEnders, she wrote: "I was deeply shocked at the tactics employed by journalists who were just after a sensational story... This has caused deep distress to those concerned and in this case appears to have been almost entirely to blame for the clinical depression and subsequent death of David." How little things have changed.

"If you've got somebody there with you it's amazing because you don't get above yourself in the good times and you don't get below where you should be in the bad times."

They've known each other for 32 years, since they met at Cambridge University, and they've worked together ever since, going through the best and worst of times – most famously, when they found out at the height of Bake Off mania (the 2016 final was watched by nearly 16 million viewers) that the show had been poached in a big-budget move by Channel 4, which caused outrage after the BBC had spent years quietly building it up.

Giedroyc and Perkins found out via a television news report. They immediately jumped ship, along with judge Mary Berry, while Paul Hollywood went to the show's new home, where he was joined by Prue Leith, Noel Fielding and Sandi Toksvig.

HE FALL-OUT FROM Bake Off's poaching dominated the headlines for months. Giedroyc and Perkins have always been sanguine, but with a little distance behind them now, they admit that quitting the series was hard.

"It was painful, and we've kept our counsel as to the whys and wherefores, and I think there is dignity in that," says Perkins. "It's a show about cakes and the moment you get tied up in intense feelings you tell yourself to stop being silly. "We wish it the best and in return we just wanted them to understand that it would have been hard for us to carry on in those circumstances. There's no antagonism there. I just think, 'If you're going to let us find out that way [from TV], then we're not really a team, are we?"

Giedroyc adds: "It was hard, but it was the right time. I think it's good to leave the party

'Leaving Bake Off was painful – we found out from TV'

before the sandwiches start to turn up at the corners. I have no problem at all with the fact that the show still goes on."

Not that she's watched the new incarnation, and neither has much to say about Toksvig stepping down in January (to be replaced by Matt Lucas), apologising but shrugging, "We don't know what the scoop is."

But they do reveal that their tenure on the award-winning show nearly didn't happen: in fact, they quit on day one of filming the very first series. "We wanted to make it kind," says Giedroyc. "That was absolutely our number one priority and on day one we had quite a frank chat with the producers."

"We resigned, basically," interrupts Perkins. "Because it was not a kind show. They were pointing cameras in the bakers' faces and making them cry and saying, 'Tell us about your dead gran.' So we had very stiff words about how we wanted to proceed. I think we can say that, now we're out of it, can't we?

"We're quite cheesy and homespun and we just want to have a laugh. Who wants to see people crying? I don't. Especially if you work in television and you know the mechanisms that have been used to make them cry."

ARMING TO HER theme, Perkins continues: "I made a documentary once about lab chimps. The scientist ended up releasing them and he said something profound that makes me think about television a lot: they released the chimps because they weren't studying the effects of disease, they were studying the effects of stress because they were so unhappy in cages.

"And I think that about television. If you take the general public and you don't make them feel welcome, essentially what the programme is doing is studying the effects of stress, not looking at how they bake. As presenters, you need them to be in good form because that's when they confide and you have those little moments.

"So much of Bake Off, the glue of it, was about how the bakers communicated with one another. It was a place of play and sweetness and enjoyment and that's what I loved about it."

The pair have undoubtedly had other lows: bringing back The Generation Game in 2018 to terrible reviews, for example. "I really love ▷ think, 'Gosh, that's a bit much," says Perkins.

Giedroyc agrees. "It's weird that, having done Bake Off, which people seemed to really like, you're exposed again. You're up for grabs."

ERKINS IS 50 and lives with her TV presenter partner Anna Richardson, while Giedroyc, 51, is married to television director Ben Morris, with whom she has two daughters

(Florence, 18, and Vita, 16). On TV, Giedroyc is the goofy, jolly one; Perkins is the acerbic, controlled one. But in real life Giedroyc is organised and so controlling of her emotions that Perkins calls her "the onion", with many hidden layers; whereas Perkins is a self-confessed worrier who has emotions so close to her surface that she appears near to tears several times during our interview.

Giedroyc is fiercely protective. She isn't on Twitter, but Perkins is and has more than one million followers. Although she says her social media exchanges have been mainly positive, she admits she was once trolled by someone who wished she'd get cancer. Giedroyc is aghast: "If I'd seen that, I'd have gone ballistic."

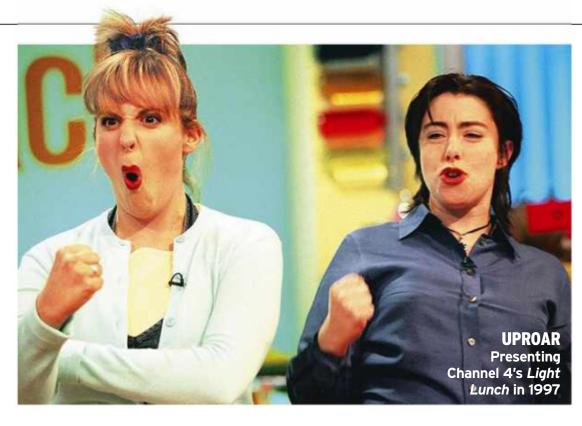

Perkins shrugs. "I called it out and said, 'This is what's happening in my life and you might want to revise that, and he said, 'Mine too': he was lashing out about his own pain."

There have been more highs than lows notably Perkins's BBC travelogues and Giedroyc's acclaimed turn in the Stephen Sondheim musical Company in London's West End. As for Hitmen, they admit to having been terrified at the prospect of their first real acting job. "We went from doing a sketch comedy when we were never ourselves, to [Channel 4 comedy chat show] Light Lunch," says Perkins. "So to come back and do some acting after all these years, it feels like another huge reversal to try to forget about our dynamic as real people. But because we love each other, our chemistry will always come across. But our characters

Mel adds: "We felt honoured that somebody [Joe Parham and Joe Markham] had written something for us. So we were keen to serve the scripts and not hijack it and say, 'Let's subvert this and give a wink to camera.'

"But it's great fun doing the old acting, especially with your best mate. I've always been a bit pashmina and glasses on chains, so this is great."

"I was really scared taking my glasses off," says Perkins. "I just felt very vulnerable. I suppose they hide a multitude of sins: they hide the old baggy eyes and they're just enough of a shield. But if I'd had them on, it would have just felt like Mel and Sue.

One thing they didn't have to worry about was creating an on-screen friendship. They have only ever rowed "one and a half times": over Perkins's timekeeping and over costumes, neither serious, and they say they can't imagine having a major rift.

"I don't even want to think about it," says Giedroyc. "We're pretty gentle with each other, and supportive. There are so many people who want to judge you in the outside world, but I just want to have each other's back."

Perkins agrees: "There is nothing that she could say or do that would make me not be her friend. In Hitmen there are moments where we have arguments, and we were really excited to rage at each other because we never do - but if it happened in real life I would be devastated."

IEDROYC AND PERKINS say they hope for another series of Hitmen and want to work together whenever possible - although Giedroyc doesn't think she'd be up to doing Perkins's travelogues, while Perkins is in awe of, but in no way envious

"The key is to relish each other's triumphs and savour those moments when we come together because they're like > heart," says Perkins. "The flesh landslide is significant, but the energy between us seems to be no different from when we were 18 so I hope that a toddler-style glee still lurks within."

Giedroyc is in accord. "We were in our caravan during Hitmen, having a ripe old laugh, and we realised we were having as much fun as we'd had filming Light Lunch 22 years ago. And that's a pretty great thing to be able to say."

change."

Dan Walker, it's that he's not much given to venting. Whether on air presenting BBC Breakfast and Football Focus, or off it giving interviews of his own, the 43-year-old always comes over as agreeably uninterested in the sound of his own voice. Yet the most recent months of his four-year tenure on the Breakfast sofa have generated some bruising criticism, and Walker has had enough of remaining dutifully mute. Throughout this chat, his courtesy never wavers. But the time has come to speak his mind.

He starts by breaking his silence on the "Naga saga". On Breakfast in July last year, Walker and his co-host that day, Naga Munchetty, discussed comments by Donald Trump in which the President instructed his opponents to "go back" to the "places from which they came". Walker turned to Munchetty and described Trump's comments as "telling", whereupon she responded: "Yes. And every time I have been told, as a woman of colour, to go back where I came from, that was embedded in racism."

In September, the BBC initially upheld a complaint against Munchetty for breaching BBC guidelines, by criticising the US President for perceived racism. An outcry ensued, and it emerged that the complaint also named Walker – yet he was not sanctioned. BBC directorgeneral Tony Hall ultimately overturned the entire decision. So when the fallout began, did Walker feel culpable?

"Breakfast isn't the ten o'clock news," he says, after a long pause. "We are there to share a bit of ourselves, and maybe we shared a bit too much. At the time it felt a very natural conversation. We knew in that moment that it was different to the sort of things we usually talk about. But I don't regret it, and I don't think Naga does either.

"This is the first time I've said anything, out of respect to Naga. I asked her at the time if she wanted me to speak about it. She was at the centre of this storm. I felt I should have said something in support of her, but she didn't want any more attention. The day the story came out,

I wrote to Tony Hall, saying, 'If Naga is guilty, then I'm guilty'. At the time I didn't know I'd been mentioned in the original complaint.

"The BBC should have given a more robust defence of their presenters. We do think it could have been dealt with very differently. It was the right decision to overturn the original finding, but it didn't need to get that far. Both of us felt we sailed near the line but we didn't cross it. They came round to the right decision eventually. They've apologised to Naga."

But not to Walker. Is he due an apology? "That's for someone else to decide."

ORE CRITICISM CAME Walker's way in January when his live interview in Downing Street with the Prime Minister for Breakfast was judged by some to be insufficiently robust. Does Walker detect professional snobbery here?

"There's always a bit of that... 'He does Football Focus, why is he interviewing the Prime Minister?' I have an understanding of what our viewers want. I don't want you talking about me at the end of it. I'm not going to berate him. I don't want you to think, 'Oooh, that Dan Walker, he's hard-nosed'. I want you to listen to Boris Johnson and form your own opinion. He was pressed on all sorts of issues, and I told him he was making up policy live on air. I'm very proud of that interview."

Among those instantly willing to denigrate Walker's interview was Piers Morgan, calling it a "soft-paddle interview" and an "easy ride". The Good Morning Britain host frequently spars with Walker on Twitter, describing him as "the dullest, most excruciatingly virtue-signalling, tediously opinion-devoid, toe-curlingly snivelling sycophant on TV". Walker grins knowingly.

'I told Tony Hall, "If Naga is guilty, then I'm guilty"?

"I've met Piers a few times – we've played golf, and I went to his 50th birthday party, about 25 years ago," he laughs, enjoying the joke. "I like Piers. He's a very good broadcaster and they do a great job on GMB. Calling me a 'snivelling sycophant'... That's the way he operates. He hates that we still get double the audience every morning, despite all the money they've spent on GMB."

Walker insists he never feels overshadowed by Morgan's sheer noise, but their many Twitter spats don't read like banter. As if discussing a small child, Walker says Morgan is just trying to get a reaction – so in that case, why respond?

"I fight back because nobody else does," replies Walker. "In the noise that circulates around him, I don't care what he says about me, only when he pokes fun at Breakfast, or has a pop at \triangleright

 □ Carol Kirkwood, or at our viewers. In all that noise, you can forget we are by some distance the number one break-fast show in the UK.

"Maybe I should on occasions just let it lie. I'd like to think he doesn't really mean those things. I really don't think it's genuine animosity. He talks about us an awful lot on GMB, whereas I don't think we've ever mentioned him on Breakfast. When we meet, we have a laugh and he talks about himself a lot. Outside all the froth, somewhere inside there is probably a decent bloke."

their chosen battleground. Walker has 622,000 followers (against Morgan's 7.1 million, before he points it out), but is questioning whether to stay.

"I'm thinking a lot about getting rid of it," he muses, having seen his Breakfast co-host Louise Minchin visibly happier since cutting back on Twitter. "There's such a difference in Louise. She's clearly more at ease. I find it more hurtful to read what's said about Louise than about me. She said she felt as if she was opening the door of her own home to allow people in and tell her she was rubbish, whereas I just don't let it in my head that way."

What does Walker feel about celebrities seeking validation from thousands – or even millions – of strangers on social media? Following Caroline Flack's suicide, the instruction #BeKind was promoted on Twitter by those whose posts are often anything but. In Walker's case, his Christian faith provides him with armour.

"I feel valued by God, my family and friends. I don't know if social media should only be for those who are mentally robust enough to deal with it. We do that thing where you criticise, you hound, you judge, then when it gets to the horrible point that it did with Caroline Flack, people say, 'Oh she was brilliant, what a great presenter, lovely person'. I only met her once at a do, years ago, but I'm heartbroken that someone should feel that's the only way out.

'Somewhere inside Piers is probably a decent bloke'

"Whether people think I'm brilliant or terrible, that doesn't affect how I feel about myself. Louise thinks I'm weird like that. I don't allow the praise to lift me too high, or the criticism to drag me too low."

Those words suggest a more human, more appealing version of the Piers Morgan rhino hide. But Walker isn't entirely immune to the travails of appearing in the nation's living rooms, declaring himself "embarrassed" to have his annual salary of £280,000 published by the BBC.

"You get accused of being part of the liberal, metropolitan elite and I couldn't feel further from that," says Walker, a longtime resident of Sheffield with his wife Sarah and their children Susanna, 12, Jessica, 11, and nine-year-old Joe. "I do think I provide good value. I work my backside off six days a week and I have done for a long time. I constantly come up with ideas and ways to make them happen. I'm committed to working hard. I get paid a lot. I really feel privileged and thankful for my job, and I love the people I work with."

When Walker refers to working "six days a week" he doesn't use the expression lightly. His Christianity has always decreed that the seventh day is spoken for.

"I'll never work on a Sunday," he confirms. "That's a decision I made a long time ago, and it's been a positive in my life. I do sometimes feel judged as a Christian in a way that others aren't, but everything you do and say on TV, particularly on the BBC, is under scrutiny. I don't wear a badge saying, 'Hi, I'm a Christian', although I take it very seriously, and it influences who I am and what I do."

T'S CERTAINLY ONE reason why he gives a proportion of his income to charity. He is diffident when the subject is raised, and declines to specify how much he gives. Does he feel the BBC's star salaries prompt a disconnect with the audience?

"It's an issue," he agrees slowly. "I'm not saying the BBC is perfect, but it has to do more to fight back and show how brilliant it is. A media landscape without the BBC would be a wilderness. I do think the BBC is under attack from people who would benefit from it not being here." Under attack by whom? The Prime Minister? But that is one question Walker chooses not to answer.

Meanwhile, despite all the trials of the last months, and for all his apparent lack of ego, Walker's professional drive – often obscured by his mild-mannered persona – is plain to see, if you choose to look.

"I host the biggest breakfast show in the UK and the most-watched football magazine show in the UK," he says. "I'm ambitious. I love the peril of what can go wrong in live TV, trying to hold it all together. I think I could do Saturdaynight TV – shiny-floor shows, they call it in the industry. Once you've done all the things I've done, you can do anything. It's just convincing other people to see you in that space."

Martin Compston is the Line of Duty star who is full of surprises. RT interrogates him on family, accents and class

INTERVIEW BY GARETH McLEAN

F, LIKE MOST people, you recognise Martin Compston from his most famous role - that of dogged Detective Sergeant Steve Arnott in Line of Duty – there may be something you're missing. In police procedural parlance, "a crucial bit of intel", the emergence of which will make you question everything you thought you knew about him.

This being real life, consequences of its disclosure aren't quite so dramatic and will emerge, unremarked upon and in an entirely straightforward manner, if you watch The Nest, his new thriller written by Nicole Taylor (Three Girls, Wild Rose). In it, Compston plays Dan, who with his wife Emily, played by Peaky Blinders' Sophie Rundle, turn to surrogacy to fulfil thwarted parental desires. But what's all this got to do with the missing piece of Martin Compston's puzzle? The Nest is set in and around Glasgow. And Dan is Scottish. Like Compston.

For those who haven't seen Compston's screen debut, at 17, in the Ken Loach film Sweet Sixteen, his broad Scottish accent may come as a bit of a shock. The damaged, doomed Liam is probably > the role for which Compston was best known, before Line of Duty. But Jed Mercurio's cop-show juggernaut casts a long shadow. So, if you didn't know about Compston's Caledonian pedigree, you're not alone.

> Fellow actor – and indeed fellow Scot Mark Bonnar remembers meeting Compston for the first time on the set of Line of Duty, in which Bonnar played DCC

Michael Dryden in 2014. "I was introduced to this English guy who I thought was brilliant in the first series," Bonnar explains. "A couple of days later, we were all in the pub and I went up to say hello and I was so shocked to hear this broad Greenock accent coming from Martin's mouth. Because he keeps up his English accent throughout the working day, I really had no idea."

Compston smiles as he says (in a gentle Scottish burr, naturally) that "even now, some people are still surprised when they hear how I really talk". When I suggest that it's quite the compliment, praise for how believable Arnott's accent is, Compston looks a bit bashful.

"Well if it is, then that's great. Because it means all the hard work has paid off. Accents are like going to the gym: if you work harder, it gets better."

IVEN HOW MUCH time Compston spends speaking in an accent that's not his own - after learning his actual lines, of course - that's one tough exercise regime. It takes discipline and stamina, which are even more impressive when you consider that Compston has no formal training as an actor and never went to drama school.

"I've always said I owe my career to two people: Ken Loach and Jed Mercurio," he says. "I never thought someone would trust me to carry a film, but Ken did. And I never thought someone would trust me in a primetime BBC drama, but Jed did. A lot of people were up for both roles, so I was very lucky."

Compston returns to how lucky he's been throughout our conversation, and it's tempting to attribute this (entirely genuine) humility to his working-class roots. If Ken Loach hadn't held open auditions for Sweet Sixteen in Greenock, and if Compston hadn't gone along as much out of curiosity as anything, he's convinced that he wouldn't have become an actor. "It would never have occurred to me that it was even a possibility. Acting was something that posh ▷ ≼ kids did. In Greenock, you finished school and then you got a trade."

Not that in reality he's actually gone that far ironically he was back in Inverclyde to film The Nest. "We actually filmed a couple of scenes just around the corner from my mum and dad's house," he explains. "And there's another scene in which I'm sat on a bench – and it's the same bench that I sat on in Sweet Sixteen. I never said anything to anyone at the time because I didn't want to jinx it, or for them to move the scene for whatever reason. So I ended up sitting back on the same bench, feeling a real 'coming full circle' feeling. Starting out there when I was 17 and then coming back as the lead in a BBC1 show."

IVEN HOW CONFIDENT, accomplished and composed Compston seems now - how content he is with his life on screen and off, it's hard to imagine an alternate version of him that never left his home town. The alternate version wouldn't have carved the career Compston has, nor would he, when he's not working, be living in Las Vegas with his wife, actress Tianna Chanel Flynn. She's from Vegas and the pair have just had a baby. Compston says Greenock will always be home - "It's a place where everyone knows you, they've got your back and you've got theirs" – but, for now, Vegas is where he lives.

"People think of Las Vegas and they think of the Strip - but that's a tourist trap. I think I can call myself a local now and where I live is really quiet. The neighbours are lovely, they don't care who you are, and all I do is walk the dog." Compston has a pitbull, called King. "What I love about it is that when you take him to the vet," he smirks, "they shout out for 'King Compston."

What differentiates Compston from a lot of other actors is that, as far as his success goes, it comes with zero sense of entitlement. Everything he's got, he got the hard way. Undoubtedly, luck plays a part in Compston's story, but so do his tenacity and talent. It was the latter that inspired Nicole Taylor to write the part of Dan in The Nest specifically with him in mind.

"Over the years, you meet people and everyone says they're trying to write something for you, to get you in their show. But usually nothing happens," says Compston. "Not so with Nicole. She said that she was writing something for me, and then it came through."

Taylor, a fellow Scot, says she's always wanted to write for Compston, "but all the more since he became Steve Arnott, as I thought it would delight an audience to see and hear a totally different side to him. His English accent is perfect, but the man is Greenock born and bred. He has standing of the world I was trying to create. I never for a moment imagined anyone else playing Dan, so I was thrilled and relieved that he read the script in a couple of hours and said yes."

Taylor wasn't the only one who was thrilled.

"It's the first time in a long time that I've felt I could really let fly," enthuses Compston, 35. "The shackles were off, I didn't need to worry about voice or accents or whatever, and weirdly I didn't have to think. I just did. It felt so natural - as if I didn't even have to learn it. Obviously with a lot of things, you're consciously playing a character. That's why you do it, to pretend to be somebody else, but with this, there was a real feeling of being present in the moment."

Perhaps in part because of this process, The Nest has a spark and energy to it, and, despite it absolutely being A Thriller and meeting the requirements of the genre, it also has an authen> ticity. Much of that is to do with the sterling Scottish ensemble cast, including James Harkness (The Victim) and newcomer Mirren Mack, and the natural accents they bring to it. In fact, it'll be interesting to see how it's received because usually such regionality is greeted with Daily Mail articles demanding subtitles.

"Sometimes, you walk into ADR [automated dialogue replacement, when an actor goes into a studio to re-record lines that were unclear when originally filmed] and there'll be notes on the clarity, or that you missed the T in 'matter', but with this, there was none of that," says Compston. "Nicole is at a place in her career that she can write that certain characters' accents fluctuated and it's accepted. It was a case of 'This is who these people are. This is their world. This is how they speak'.

"I've done films and they've said that you have to be understood in Wisconsin or wherever. But, with the greatest respect, f Wisconsin. Make it for what it is, where it's set. Be truthful."

ITH COMPSTON BUOYED, and our time nearly up, I try to probe him for details about the next Line of Duty, which they've just started filming. He's thoughtful for a moment... "My favourite ones were the first three, when we were on BBC2, because I feel they were more subtle. Then you go on to BBC1, it's a bigger audience and it's car chases and whatever. Now we're established on BBC1, I hope we can go back to what we were on BBC2 when the dramas were all in the massive interview scenes and in back alleys."

Judging by the look on his face, and the bottle of lager now in his hand, I suspect any more questions will be greeted with "No comment". For as much as Compston has found his own voice, he certainly knows when to keep his mouth shut.

GOD'S GREEN EARTH

that part of the world – Croatia – I was raring to go. The only concern for me was who my six fellow pilgrims would be. This was a real worry: two weeks talking about personal stuff, and covering such a distance, would have felt a long time with the wrong kind of people.

To explain what I mean by "wrong" in this context I need to tell you what I think about religion. Firstly, I believe in it. I fully understand how much harm is done in the name of religion but, on balance, I think faith does a lot more good than harm. It all depends on what kind of person your faith makes you, and it matters not a jot to me whether you're Christian, Muslim, Hindu, Sikh or Jewish. All I know is that if it makes you calm, kind, tolerant and open-minded then it's all good with me. If it makes you angry, judgemental and quite sure your religion's way is the only true way, then for me that's all wrong.

pleading, bribery or promises of eternal life (joke) would persuade the production team to give me any names. So, there I was, outside the terminal building at Belgrade airport, waiting anxiously for the others to show themselves. First out was Edwina Currie, who I'd obviously known as a politician, and latterly as a broadcaster. I vaguely recalled something about a Jewish upbringing, but that was all I knew. Then Fatima Whitbread joined us. I suspected she'd be useful if we had to spear wild animals on our way, but I knew nothing of her faith. Next, three people I didn't really know much of, but I'm terribly glad I do now.

Mim Shaikh, broadcaster and DJ, is young enough to be my son but, not being a listener of Radio 1 Xtra, I wasn't familiar with his work. Amar Latif, entrepreneur, traveller and broadcaster, has been blind for most of his life, although he doesn't seem to let that hold him back much. Mim and Amar were both raised Muslims, but it's been a bigger part of Mim's life then Amar's. Pauline McLynn arrived with ▷

 <i them. I remembered her as Mrs Doyle, the priests' housekeeper in Father Ted. Pauline was raised a Catholic in Ireland but believes in not a jot of it now. And then came someone who believes in even less of a jot of it than Pauline, the comedian and writer Dom Joly.

And off we all went in the direction of Istanbul. We were following part of the Sultan's Trail, a path whose full length runs between Vienna and Istanbul. It was the route Suleiman the Magnificent took while trying to conquer Vienna for the Ottoman Empire in 1529. It is now travelled as a trail of peace.

UR FIRST NIGHT was spent in a hunting lodge south of Belgrade, where the men shared a room. We all marvelled at how loudly Dom and I snored, how sweetly Mim slept, and how Amar managed to unpack, wash, sleep and repack in the morning without the benefit of eyesight. None of us ever got used to this; some of us (well, Dom) even dared to question whether Amar was actually blind at all. In the ladies' quarters, the matter troubling Edwina and Fatima was whether Pauline would ever stop talking so they could get some sleep.

The next morning we all laid our theological cards on the table. For me, I explained, faith is just about having some sense of mystery, and a means of accessing some moments of stillness and peace every week. Now this might be a bit on the vague side for many Christians, but as a priest once said to me: "Ninety per cent of religion is just superstition; just be still, and the truth will come to you."

"Fine," said Dom, "I get that." And everybody nodded. If you watch the programme looking for a thousand miles of religious argument, you'll be disappointed. And if I was looking for peace, quiet and stillness, then pilgrimaging (if there is such a verb) might not have been for me. All seven of us had plenty to say for ourselves, so most of the time we were shattering silence rather than enjoying it. And in terms of making my point that religion is a good thing, the route was tricky. In this part of the world, Christians and Muslims (with Jews usually caught miserably in between) have been kicking lumps out of each other for time immemorial. But even in these areas where, depressingly, Christianity had tried to erase Islam, or vice versa, there were moments of peace where there was what I see as God's grace – atop a mountain range in Bulgaria; in astonishing frescoes in Orthodox churches; in the kindly eyes of a Serbian nun plying us with cake. Atheists like Dom and Pauline saw this beauty, too, but differently, and that's cool. As we kept saying to one another, each to their own. We'd hug it out and move on.

T ALL DEPENDS on how you frame it. What kind of God, one might ask, robbed a young man like Amar of his sight nearly 30 years ago? I have no answer to that. But to watch him scampering up a mountain, I saw nothing short of divinity in how wonderfully he deals with his blindness. For stretches it was my privilege to guide Amar. This was less about telling him where to put his feet than describing the scenery around us. If you ever really want to know the beauty of God's green earth, do try describing a central European mountain scene to a blind person. I like to think that I'm good with words, but I never felt I quite found adequate ones to convey the beauty of everything around us.

I hope the programme does justice to that beauty, the kindness of so many strangers and the sheer humanity of my six pilgrim friends, be they believers in whichever God, or none.

More than Friends

Mae Martin gave Radio 4 a guide to modern sexuality. Now she's busting taboos in a TV comedy with Lisa Kudrow

AE MARTIN HAS packed several lifetimes into her 32 years, not that you'd know it. She looks at least a decade younger, her all-black attire accentuating the pale skin, wide blue eyes and shock of blonde hair.

Although you might not be au fait with the Canadian stand-up's CV, Martin's comparatively young age belies the 20 years she has already been working as a comedian.

At the age of 13, Martin was performing live on stage around her native Toronto. Two years later, she dropped out of school to pursue comedy full time, left home at 16 and put herself into a day programme for drug rehab at 18. She also made her TV debut, broke through with her stand-up set Us, which tackled sexuality and gender, while Dope (which was nominated for Edinburgh Best Comedy Show in 2017) addressed addiction and was turned into a half-hour special for Netflix.

A Radio 4 series (Mae Martin's Guide to 21st Century Sexuality) and a book (Can Everyone Please Calm Down?) attest to a tremendous work rate, driven not just by her self-confessed addictive personality but also her frustration with the increasingly poisonous, tribal debates about gender and sexuality.

Martin has been clean for more than a decade and resident in the UK since 2011. And now she has made her debut TV series for Channel 4 and Netflix: Feel Good, a semi-autobiographical comedy drama also starring Call the Midwife and Fresh Meat's Charlotte Ritchie and Friends icon Lisa Kudrow.

Written with best friend Joe Hampson, Feel Good sees Mae playing – wait for it – a queer, Canadian stand-up and recovering addict called Mae. On meeting George (Ritchie), an uptight, unromantic, hitherto straight girl, the fireworks are instant.

"I feel more inhibited now than I did at 13," Martin says with a shrug. "High school can be so brutal for an outsider, but then I found this community where you could say all these things that were different about you and be celebrated for it. It felt like a clubhouse for misfits; there were tons of queer comics so no one ever bullied me, I dated boys and girls and that was fine.

dep and know for per subsection with the second share second seco

I found my people."

Feel Good is funny, but also profound in its depiction of characters yearning for connection and love. "It's very brave," says Ritchie, who has known Hampson since university and Martin for almost as long. "Thank God for all those people prepared to lay themselves bare for other people to find relief in. Mae makes delicate subjects easy to talk about. People are really screwed up about sex and sexuality and desire, so the more we can release people from that shame, the better."

ITCHIE IS FILMING in Blackpool on a balmy summer's day, alongside Lisa Kudrow, who plays Mae's brittle on-screen mother, Linda. "The scripts were really well observed and fun," says Kudrow. "Mae's wonderfully patient with a world that can react to things like addiction, sexual or gender fluidity by putting up walls. A person used to just declare their sexual orientation but now there's a nuance to it, a spectrum everyone needs to start thinking about. Entertainment goes a long way towards making people comfortable with things they weren't in contact with before. It's Ellen DeGeneres was "the only person that looked like me on TV".

That must have felt very lonely. "I think so. If you don't see stories that reflect your experiences you can feel a bit isolated. Growing up feeling in the middle of the gender spectrum – there's a line in Feel Good about feeling like a failed version of both – I felt this discord inside. That had something to do with wenting to get out of my head and hadve and with wanting to get out of my head and body on drugs. There was definitely a moment, when we finished the edit and watched it all back, where I felt a sense of therapeutic relief."

Martin is astonishingly open on stage, on screen and in person, but she's aware of the dangers. "You've got to curate carefully, but nothing's off limits in terms of emotional truth. It's drawing on old adolescent conflicts, although my parents are nothing like the parents in the show. They're really supportive and protective, and worried about me. They don't see me live because it makes them anxious."

Martin describes her upbringing as a "liberal utopia", full of culture, travel and freedom; her parents never assumed she was straight, so she never really had to come out to them. Her mother predicted her attention-seeking five-year-old would be a comedian and, by the age of 11, Martin was a regular at Toronto's comedy clubs.

One night, she was invited on stage by a stand-up who, having mistaken her for a boy, used her as a ventriloquist's dummy to spout filth about Pamela Anderson. An experience that could have crushed lesser mortals merely confirmed the vocation for Martin, who quickly graduated from observer to performer. "I got a lot of attention because of my age, so I started making money really quickly even though I wasn't particularly good. There was a harsh reckoning around 18 where I wasn't the youngest on the circuit any more and had to write some jokes. It took a while to find that the closer I got to myself, the better it could be."

T was also at this time she went to rehab, in part because she was flat broke and a nearby programme for teens offered free oatmeal and noodles. "I also was desperate to fix my relationship with my parents," she adds. "It was a real turning point, because adolescence was pretty explosive – I hung out with a lot of older comedians and that [addiction] happened."

She unleashes a butter-wouldn't-melt grin. "Now, luckily, everyone's getting along great!"

Although that work rate shows little sign of slowing down – a teen show and new stand-up set are in development, and a second series of Feel Good much coveted – she's currently trying to focus on friends and, just maybe, children.

"I was consumed by relationships through my 20s, but I could write a love song about my friends now. They're having kids and it's mind-blowing. On the one hand, I'm drawn to settling down – and from a narcissistic perspective I wonder if I'd grow as a person when I have kids. On the other, I'd like 25 boyfriends and girlfriends..."

I ask her what the 13-year-old Mae would have made of herself now? She looks thrilled. "Oh, man! That's such a nice thought. She'd be so pumped, squeaky little voice, spots exploding on her face. I wanna go back and give her a hug. It's nice to have had the same dream for so long." GABRIEL TATE

LISA KUDROW

ULIAN FELLOWES ISN'T a football fan. He doesn't follow a team, he "hated" playing sport at school and views exercise itself with suspicion. Yet his new series on Netflix, The English Game, is all about football. "I don't pretend to be an expert on football,"

"I don't pretend to be an expert on football," he says over lunch at a restaurant near his London home, "but football is the sport that gripped the world and became a kind of alternative to religion in our own generation. When you need something to believe in, if you can't manage to believe in a life beyond this one, you can at least believe in Manchester United, or whoever you support. And that I rather like."

So, when an old friend, Eddie Charlton, a banker who'd helped fund Fellowes's Oscarwinning film Gosford Park, came to him several years ago with an idea for a TV drama about the origins of football, Fellowes was intrigued.

"It appealed to me, because what I'm really interested in, historically, is periods of great change. Sometimes you get a ten-year period when nothing much happens. Sometimes, though, everything changes."

In Downton Abbey, Fellowes charted the decline of the great English houses between the wars. In his 2016 novel Belgravia – which has been adapted for the screen and is currently airing on Sunday nights on ITV – he examined

'Football gave the workers something to live for' the rise of industrialists after the Napoleonic Wars, and what that meant for the ruling classes. Moving from stately homes to muddy pitches may seem like a big leap, but to Fellowes, Britain in the 1870s is just another period of extraordinary cultural flux, ripe for storytelling.

The English Game is set at the time when football, having been invented by English public schools, was codified with a formed Football Association – which consisted almost entirely of public schoolboys. But football was too good a game to remain the preserve of the posh, and it very quickly gained huge popularity among the working class.

set of rules agreed on by the newly

"The mill owners saw football as a way of unifying their workforce and giving them something to live for, if you like," says Fellowes. "And they did. They lived for their teams to an extraordinary degree from early on in the development of the game."

'WE'VE BEEN TRAINING FOR MONTHS'

Kevin Guthrie reveals what it took to play a football pioneer

t Manchester United's training ground in Carrington, a bus is waiting outside the clubhouse. The under-12 development squad is off to Prague for a tour, accompanied by mountains of kit. Parents are milling around, glancing occasionally at a group of players training on an astro-turf pitch. A man sporting a retro moustache gets the ball, dinks one way, then the other, then fires off a powerful shot that pings past the goalkeeper. One of the parents turns to another and asks, "Who was that?"

It turns out he's not a footballer, but an actor. Kevin Guthrie is one of nine thespians who is at Carrington training with Manchester United youth coach Gabe Mellor. In The English Game, Guthrie plays Fergus Suter, a man who is held in high regard by Mellor. "I've taught football and the history of football for 18 years," he says, "and now I'm training Fergus Suter."

Suter is a key player in The English Game, just as he was in the development of football. "Because Suter was being paid to play and train he was spending more time thinking about the game," explains Mellor. "That was where pass-and-move started. That's why professionals took over the game. The gentlemen amateurs had done it for moral and social reasons. Suter was like, 'Hang on, if I can get better at this, I might get more money, more time off from working in the factory, more time training etc'."

uthrie, who like Suter is from Glasgow, is also a big fan of the footballing pioneer: "He created the idea of tactics, positions... He completely transformed what it was to win a game of football. He also represented the first working-class movement in terms of being a rival to the private schools."

Happily for the authenticity of the drama, the actors can all play a bit – "They're actually decent," says Mellor. "I had no idea what to expect, but they can all do a little bit."

That's especially true of Guthrie, who was scouted by Celtic and Rangers as a youth player. "I'm pretty good," he concedes. "I've played all my life, played schoolboy football, junior football. Being able to play was a massive part of the role. It was almost a prerequisite of getting in front of the execs. But equally the support has been there from the outset. Simon Clifford and John Farmer, our lead football coaches, have worked with football in film before. And Gabe knows his stuff inside out, so we're in safe hands and we've been training for months on the set pieces you'll see in the series."

The main difference for the players, says Guthrie, is the ball. "It's very heavy and stays low to the ground. The balls were like that until the 40s: when it got wet it was like trying to head a medicine ball. I'm glad those drills are over!" BW

☐ During the late 1860s and early 1870s, new clubs proliferated; by the 1880s, more than 200 clubs had joined the FA. Soon, the old public schools were outnumbered ten to one and workers would spend their one afternoon off a week following their team.

"Human beings need to feel they're part of something worthwhile," says Fellowes. "Whatever their job, they normally will reconstruct a culture around it so that it becomes a noble thing to do. Suddenly, between 1865 and 1870, football became a noble part of people's lives. It was everywhere. That fascinated me—the whole deposition of the old Etonians and everything: after 1882, no public school team ever won the FA Cup again."

Within that period of change, Fellowes found a hero in the extraordinary figure of Lord Arthur Kinnaird. An aristocrat, an old Etonian, and a banker, Kinnaird, unlikely as it sounds, emerges as a champion of the working classes as The English Game unfolds.

"He was unusual in that his family were a banking family as well as being old nobility," says Fellowes. "It would have been seen as slightly odd that they actually worked for their living. But I sometimes wonder if that kind of anchoring helped him to see that what they were all engaged in [football as a sport for gentlemen amateurs] wasn't going to go on very much longer. Of course, his reward was to be president of the FA for the rest of his life. Right into the 1920s. He fascinated me."

'After 1882, no public school team won the FA Cup'

Fellowes's research, using both the FA and the Old Etonians' archive, took him back to the roots of the game. He found that football, as devised in the 19th century, may have been played by gentlemen, but it was savage in its early form.

"It was so brutal. You can see how rugby was just a split away from football then. Pushing and shoving, kicking and simply clearing the opposition out of the way as you pushed to get the ball over the goal line – that was the game."

The development of football into the pass-andmove game that went on to conquer the globe was a result of necessity. Men from mill towns were shorter (the average officer in the First World War was several inches taller than most of his men), less fit and badly nourished. They weren't able to run through the likes of Eton, Harrow and Charterhouse – so they worked out that they would have to run round them.

OREOVER, THEY WERE working five or six days a week – they didn't have time to practise. The only way they could train was if they were paid to do so. Turning the game into a profession was essential if the working class were to flourish in it. The rise of the professional player, and the public schools' attempts to prevent it, form the backbone of The English Game's narrative.

"That was the big tussle," says Fellowes, "because the Etonians were the crowd-pleasers and everyone knew that once professional players entered the game, they were out."

So were the old Etonians just protecting their patch, or did they have a point? "There is an argument on both sides," says Fellowes. "They did see professional footballers becoming dominated by money and by commercialism. I may not know much about football now – but I do know that is precisely what has happened."

ake a splash of sci-fi, a spoonful of British drama and a sprinkling of vintage pop culture and you've got the perfect recipe for TV success - and the exact make-up of Ashes to Ashes. Part sequel, part spin-off to the sublime Life on Mars, this nostalgia-laden show has laughs and tears aplenty, all accompanied by a killer soundtrack. And, most importantly, it stars Philip Glenister as DCI Gene Hunt, from the punch first, ask questions later school of police work.

No longer the self-proclaimed "Sheriff of Manchester", the politically incorrect detective has left the Greater Manchester Police and now takes on hardened criminals at the London

Met. His wispy sideburns and trademark snakeskin boots may remain the same, but in Ashes to Ashes, Gene has a new time-travelling sidekick, DI Alex Drake (Keeley Hawes).

Smart, fiery and with a razor-sharp wit, Alex is more than a match for Gene, and a dab hand at psychological profiling. She quickly rose up the ranks of the London Met - but then, in 2008, she was shot in a botched abduction. When Alex wakes up, she realises that she's been transported to 1980s London, a time when the capital's streets are rife with crime, and a modern career woman is not the norm for the Met. But will she be able to find her way back home?

The sound of silence

Sport is a shadow of itself without the noise of spectators

make when it's scored in a deserted stadium? It's a question viewers must consider as the patterns of life are increasingly disrupted by coronavirus. Sports events are being postponed and cancelled all over the world, while others take place as usual – but with no one in the stadium. How strange does that feel? Just ask the players of Wolverhampton Wanderers, whose first leg of their Europa Cup tie with Olympiakos took place behind closed doors.

In Italy and Spain, the top leagues have been suspended, while in France and Greece, football matches are being played without spectators. The Bahrain Grand Prix and the Gymnastics World Cup event in Doha will also take place behind closed doors, while in the US, basketball has gone dark until further notice; all of tennis is getting ready to follow.

In this country, Manchester City v Arsenal has been postponed. As I write, the rest of the Premier League goes ahead as usual – but it's possible that soon the biggest clubs in the land will be playing to the spooky echoes of their own voices.

Football is an emotional game, and it's a strange thing to experience without the sound of all that emotion. When you can clearly hear the thump of boot on ball and every urgent instruction to pass, you can't help but wonder why we're bothering. It all seems quite meaningless.

The crowd plays an intimate part in every bigtime football match – so much so that you can read the game from the sounds alone. Walk away from the telly, come back five minutes later and you know at once if there has been a goal and which side has scored it. You can tell with your ears alone if the game has hotted up and someone is about to be sent off.

What's it like for the players when the sound is turned off? If you're used to playing with 60,000 people singing your name or howling abuse, a game in silence will seem quite unreal. As if it didn't actually matter.

'It's a strange thing to watch football without the sound of emotion'

The crowd matters desperately to television. Before every live event at the 2012 London Olympics, those in the stands were addressed by a hysterical young man imploring: "Make some noise!" This was so television audiences across the world would be aware that it mattered.

The truth is that witless whipped-up noise doesn't communicate to a TV audience. What matters is the intensity of audience involvement: the quiet before match point in a Wimbledon final is perhaps the most thrilling sound in sport.

Remember the half-second of silence after the ball had left Jonny Wilkinson's boot – followed by the roar of joy when it was clear that he had struck it true and England had won the World Cup? Remember the Oval crowd's slow transition from desperate anxiety to incredulous joy in the hour after lunch as Kevin Pietersen ensured that England won the Ashes in 2005? That's the sort of thing we will miss if football falls silent.

We must brace ourselves for the possibility of Liverpool marching towards their long-desired triumph to the sound of sharp cries of "man on", the desperate instructions of the losing manager and the voice of the commentator sounding as if he was describing the funeral of a minor royal.

True, mass illness brings much greater problems than this. Sport really doesn't matter. But in order to enjoy it we need to pretend that it matters – and without a crowd, that pretence is hard to sustain.

HEN JO ROBINSON was arrested for her part in the protest against the Miss World contest in 1970 she wanted to put the Women's Liberation Movement on the map and start a feminist revolution. Even in her wildest dreams, she never imagined that she would end up being the hero of a glossy film with a stellar cast. Directed by Bafta-winning Philippa Lowthorpe, Misbehaviour (in cinemas from 13 March) follows the events leading up to that incendiary beauty pageant, and stars Jessie Buckley as the anarchic young Robinson, along with Keira Knightley, Keeley Hawes and Lesley Manville.

Nearly 50 years on, 77-year-old Robinson vividly recalls that historic night in November 1970 when feminist activists disrupted the beauty contest by storming the stage at the Royal Albert Hall. At the agreed signal – a football rattle – they lobbed flour bombs at host Bob Hope and showered the audience with leaflets. For her part, Robinson hurled a lettuce and rotten tomatoes at journalists. "I spied the male, sexist press that had always given women a hammering in the news," she remembers with a grin. "I thought, 'Right, it's time to educate you lot, take this!' They looked a bit surprised."

At the time, Miss World was broadcast by the BBC and considered to be family entertainment. "We thought that the concept of 'the most beautiful woman in the world' was very old-fashioned and demeaning," says Robinson. "Most of all, we objected to the fact that the men who organised it were making money out of women." The beauty contest was watched by 100 million people across the globe and wreaking havoc was a clever way of generating worldwide publicity for the newly formed Women's Liberation Movement.

In the film, Robinson is wrestled to the floor by a policeman, but for her the actual events that night were more dramatic. She fled the Royal Albert Hall after squirting a water pistol filled with blue ink at a white-tuxedo-clad bouncer. Outside, she was chased down by a plain-clothes policeman, who let her go after learning she was pregnant. She then hopped on a bus to Piccadilly and threw a stink bomb outside the afterparty at Café de Paris. "As I threw it, I felt the strong arm of the law around my hand and I was yanked off to Bow Street Police Station," she recalls.

"We were held overnight with some female sex workers who advised us to plead guilty and 'get it over with quick'. We said: 'We don't do that. We're going to speak out in court and do it our way." Robinson was one of five women arrested, and conducted her own defence – just as the suffragettes had done decades before.

She's pleased that Misbehaviour also focuses on Jennifer Hosten from Grenada, played by Gugu Mbatha-Raw, who that night became the first black woman to be crowned Miss World. Pearl Jansen, the first black contestant from South Africa (named "Miss Africa South" because there was also a white Miss South Africa) was runner-up. It was a game-changing result at a time when the Anti-Apartheid Movement was gaining momentum. "We were fighting overt sexism. They were fighting racism," says Robinson. "We were always clear that we were not criticising the contestants."

Like many of the demonstrators, Robinson's feminist awakening was the first ever national Women's Liberation conference at Ruskin College, Oxford, in February 1970. Afterwards, she moved into a commune in Islington in London and joined a women's group. "I was a Blackpool oik who didn't know anything about politics. We explored ourselves, our lives, the sexism that our mothers had endured, what it meant to be a woman. We went into great detail and we came out angry. Our eyes were opened, and we saw with feminist vision."

With her pink-and-blue dyed hair and Doc Martens, Robinson still looks every inch a rebel with a cause. She went on to work as a midwife, teacher and gardener, and raised her son in the > commune until he was five. Today she spends her time fighting local and feminist campaigns. Recently she joined Extinction Rebellion because she thinks the climate crisis is the most pressing issue of our time. After we've spoken, she emails me on behalf of her fellow Miss World activists, who became lifelong friends and clearly aren't planning to let bigscreen fame distract them from their fight for political and social justice.

They're frustrated that women's hard-won rights are now being eroded by austerity and deprivation, celebrity culture, the insecurity of the gig economy and the loneliness of social media. "We are seeing women with children on their own, or with health problems, or from immigrant backgrounds, living in terrible circumstances again – and blaming it on themselves, or being blamed," they write.

s for the beauty industry, Robinson worries it's more powerful and insidious than ever. "They can now target women through personalised ads on their computer. And Disney makes toy make-up kits for children of three."

The BBC eventually stopped broadcasting Miss World in the 1980s, but she considers reality TV programmes such as Love Island – in which impeccably groomed female (as well as male) contestants sashay around in skimpy swimwear and are eliminated by public vote – just as toxic. "It's so callous. There are so many programmes where these women all look the same, with big pout mouths, and have to compete with each other."

Nevertheless, she's optimistic about the future. "I used to think we took one step forward and two steps back. But now I think that there's real progress happening, and I'm particularly inspired by the young women who are leading the way. They're spearheading the climate movement, setting up their own businesses, doing all kinds of things. It's like a thousand blossoms are opening. I am very hopeful." CLAIRE WEBB

DRAMA It's a story you couldn't make up, which explains why this enriching drama is based on a memoir by Liverpudlian actor Peter Turner. In 1978, he found himself sharing a London bedsit with rum noir icon (and Oscar winner for 1952's The Bad and the Beautiful) Gloria Grahame while she appeared in W Somerset Maugham's Rain. Ignoring the age difference – he was 29 years her junior – their friendship bloomed into romance and, subsequently, dependency when she suffered a breast cancer relapse and refused treatment. Jamie Bell and Annette Bening bring the unlikely pair to contagious life in Paul McGuigan's film, which is by turns gleefully carefree and melodramatically dark. The trajectory has tragedy built in, but McGuigan's handling of the material is both nimble and sincere. (UK 2017, swearing,

THRILLER Liam Neeson stars as an air marshal on a flight from New York to London who receives a text telling him a passenger will die every 20 minutes unless $150 million is transferred to a secret account. Aided by frequent flyer Julianne Moore, Neeson plays a cat-and-mouse game above the Atlantic. The premise is intriguing, and director Jaume Collet-Serra (Unknown) delivers intermittent claustrophobic thrills. It's not Neeson's most convincing action-hero performance, though, and he's not helped by a script that lays on the hammy dialogue a little too thickly. TeS (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

ACTION Director Luc Besson deals in the mind-blowing as much as the physical in this collision of Limitless and 2001: a Space Odyssey. Scarlett Johansson plays an American abroad in Taiwan who's forced to act as a drug mule for a vicious crime boss (played by Oldboy's Choi Min-sik). When she accidentally ingests the experimental substance, her cerebral capabilities expand towards the godlike. It's a barmy conceit, but Morgan Freeman lends his usual gravitas as a scientist whom Johansson seeks out for answers. While this is not a patch on Besson's best work (Nikita, Leon), he compensates by turning action clichés (fights, car chases) on their head to often breathtaking effect. JA (Fr 2014, violence, HD)

The Woman in Black ★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Horror Channel

HORROR A classy if cliché-ridden ghost story from Hammer, this provides a full-throated reminder of the studio's Gothic horror heyday. Efficiently adapted by Jane Goldman (Kick-Ass) from Susan Hill's popular novel, the story follows a grieving solicitor (Daniel Radcliffe) as he uncovers the secret of a remote community haunted by rampant child mortality. Eden Lake director James Watkins does a fine job re-creating the Hammer mood, chasing shadowy scares via sudden loud noises and close-up shock cuts. And while the melodrama creaks as much as the nursery rocking chair, the grim resolution adds an unexpectedly uplifting and bittersweet twist. AJ (UK 2011)

THRILLER A young woman thinks she's in contact with her dead twin in this vapid hybrid of ghost story, stodgy psychodrama and obvious pop-culture satire. Kristen Stewart's second alliance with French director Olivier Assayas is inspired by a line in their Clouds of Sils Maria collaboration about movie fantasy being more real than reality, and finds the star in Paris tending to the wardrobe needs of a celebrity fashionista (Nora von Waldstätten) while trying to access the spirit world. Fuzzy direction, predictable twists and a daft ending merely underscore the ineptness of a film that confuses po-faced inanity for style. ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

The First Wives Club ★★★★

3.55-5.55pm C5

DID YOU KNOW? The starring trio of Diane Keaton, Bette Midler and Goldie Hawn will reunite for upcoming Christmas comedy Family Jewels

COMEDY One for Mother's Day, perhaps? Based on the late Olivia Goldsmith's novel, this is the story of four friends who, after graduating from a Vermont college, vow to stay in touch. Two decades later, though, the women have grown apart, and have all ended up married to men who traded them in for younger models. A tragedy reunites the surviving trio: washed-out Bette Midler, confidence-lacking Diane Keaton and Goldie Hawn, a boozy actress who has become hooked on plastic surgery (a reference to Goldsmith's own life). They plot creative, slow-burning revenge as the First Wives Club, assisted by Maggie Smith's socialite. Bad news for the exes: tech tycoon Dan Hedaya, advertising man Stephen Collins and mogul Victor Garber. Cameos include Mayor Ed Koch and Ivana Trump, but don't let that put you off. (US 1996, some swearing, HD)

Dead Poets Society ★★★★ 12.40-3.10pm Sony Movies

PERIOD DRAMA Director Peter Weir's warm, touching tale struck a chord with audiences around the world. Robin Williams plays the unconventional teacher at a stuffy boys' school in late-1950s America. He awakens a love of poetry and writing among a disparate group of troubled adolescents, headed by Robert Sean Leonard and Ethan Hawke. However, the individualism he fosters eventually leads to tragedy. The two young leads – along with Josh Charles - turn in subtle performances, and the film is lusciously photographed and genuinely moving. JF

Beaches ★★★ 1.25-3.55pm c5

(US 1989, may be edited for language)

MELODRAMA A movie about a lifetime relationship between two women makes a refreshing change, especially when it stars the powerhouse pairing of Bette Midler and Barbara Hershey. They make the most of their roles as the friends from different backgrounds who first meet as 11-year-olds (with The Big Bang Theory's Mayim Bialik in the Midler role) and, despite various setbacks, remain close over the years. Pretty Woman's Garry Marshall directs slickly and Hershey is very appealing as a poor little rich girl, but the movie belongs to Midler's brash, selfish singer. This drama is at its best when Midler gives free rein to her character rather than when it slips into schmaltz. SH (US 1988, edited for content, HD)

COMEDY America's favourite dysfunctional cartoon family made the leap from TV to the big screen with this feature, cheekily described by creator Matt Groening as "Homer's Odyssey". It's certainly epic, with 11 writers, a team of South Korean animators and a plot that follows Homer from Springfield to Alaska and back again after he accidentally causes an environmental disaster. The script is glorious in its ambition, tackling everything from lowbrow slapstick to inventive visual gags, barbed political comment and irreverent swipes at its competitors (Walt Disney gets a bashing). It reaffirms The Simpsons as the jewel in the crown of American animation. JR (US 2007, HD)

The Lady Vanishes 3.40-5.15pm BBC2

THRILLER A close second behind The 39 Steps as the best film of Alfred Hitchcock's British period, this sublime comedy thriller was co-scripted by Alma Reville (Mrs Hitchcock) and the dynamic duo of Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat.

There isn't a wasted frame, as Michael Redgrave and Margaret Lockwood search a Balkan express train for dotty Dame May Whitty. Basil Radford and Naunton Wayne drew all the plaudits as the cricket-mad Charters and Caldicott, but the support playing of Paul Lukas, Mary Clare and Cecil Parker is also first class. Hitchcock cameo fans should keep their eyes peeled during the London station scene. DP (UK 1938, BW)

Mother's Day ★★

4.20-6.35pm Film4

COMEDY It's a timely showing for this third – and final – part of a star-studded series that began with Valentine's Day (2010) and New Year's Eve (2011). The story follows several overwrought American moms (including Jennifer Aniston, Kate Hudson and Julia Roberts) as they negotiate family traumas leading up to Mother's Day. The movie relies almost solely on the appeal of its stars, with single parent Aniston and widower Jason Sudeikis being the most empathetic of the bunch, but they all fall foul of a clumsy script that avoids the true hardships of motherhood in favour of picket-fenced relationship fantasies. JL (US 2016, edited for language, HD)

● Jurassic Park III ★★★ 7.10-9.00pm ITV2

ADVENTURE This third instalment of the hit dino-franchise saw Stephen Spielberg hand over the reins to Jumanji director Joe Johnston. It's basically a retread of the earlier films, but Johnston has done a creditable job. We're back on Isla Sorna, where genetically engineered dinosaurs run wild. Cue another band of walking packed lunches: divorcees William H Macy and Téa Leoni, looking for their 14-year-old son who is lost in the jungle; scientist Sam Neill (from the first film); and his protégé Alessandro Nivola. It covers familiar ground, but the set pieces are excellent, particularly the pterodactyl attack. AC (US 2001, may be edited for violence, HD)

Bridget Jones: the Edge of Reason ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm 5 Star 15

ROMANTIC COMEDY Following the huge success of 2001's Bridget Jones's Diary, the makers of this first sequel didn't take any risks deviating from the winning formula. The main difference here is that gormless but lovable Bridget (Renée Zellweger) has hooked dishy but taciturn lawyer Mark Darcy (Colin Firth). It's not long, however, before they're squabbling over minor personal foibles, so Bridget heads off to Thailand to make a travel programme with handsome cad Daniel Cleaver (Hugh Grant). If you can ignore the many similarities to the original, you may still laugh your socks off. BP (UK/US/ Fr/Ire 2004, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, HD)

 \blacksquare Mindhorn $\star\star\star\star$ 10.45pm-12.05am BBC2

COMEDY "This isn't the Bronx, this is the Isle of Man!" shrieks an incredulous

local dignitary as events take a violent turn in this exuberantly preposterous comedy. The Mighty Boosh's Julian Barratt stars as a washed-up actor who's asked to don the guise of his most famous character, fictional TV sleuth Mindhorn, to lure a deranged fan out into the open. Merging Alan Partridge: Alpha Papa with Bergerac, and combining surrealism with satire, Mindhorn gets ample mileage from the gulf between the thespian's delusions and his ignominious reality, as he sets about hijacking the police investigation for his comeback. EAS (UK/US 2016, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

11.05pm-12.50am C4

DRAMA Writer/director Peter Landesman's feature debut is an as-it-happened reconstruction of the events of 22 November 1963, when a dying President John F Kennedy was rushed to Parkland hospital in Dallas, followed a day later by his assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald. In sticking to the facts known on the day and focusing on ordinary people at work, this assured, involving and personal view of history cuts through the myth. In a note-perfect ensemble cast, Marcia Gay Harden and Zac Efron stand out as a doughty head nurse and a shell-shocked junior doctor in the fraught, gory and politically sensitive ER sequences. AC (US 2013, swearing, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

War of the Worlds $\star\star\star\star$ 9.00-11.15pm Sky1

SCI-FI HG Wells's enduring sci-fi novel has provided nightmare fuel for multiple generations, from the legendary 1938 Orson Welles radio adaptation to BBC1's crinoline disappointment last December. This is the contemporary Steven Spielberg model from 2005, and the great director's bombastic, CGI-assisted spectacle has weathered well. Tom Cruise plays the divorced New York

dock worker (no, really) who's left looking after the kids (Dakota Fanning and Justin Chatwin) when the otherworldly Tripods rear up and set about vaporising and harvesting humanity. A John Williams score, Morgan Freeman narration and knockout set pieces keep it firing on all cylinders, and certain scenes remain hellishly scary. Sleep tight. (US 2005, violence, HD)

COMEDY This pleasing but predictable heist caper boasts a classy cast. Giving one of the better performances of his twilight years, David Niven plays a criminal mastermind who blackmails old lag Richard Jordan into joining his assault on a swanky bank. Making his first film in five years (and it was to be his last), veteran director Ralph Thomas fails to impose himself on the familiar sequence of events, but coaxes a splendid performance from American actress Gloria Grahame. DP (UK 1979)

Kevin & Perry Go Large ★★★ 15 9.00-10.45pm 5 Star

COMEDY Harry Enfield takes his finest comic creations - the hormonally charged teenage boys Kevin and Perry (played by Enfield and Kathy Burke) and successfully expands them from a five-minute sketch into a feature-length movie. The plot follows the spotty twosome as they descend on Ibiza, where they hope to become top DJs. Ed Bye's film zips along nicely and features disgusting adventures that make There's Something about Mary look like Mary Poppins. There's also daft support from Rhys Ifans as top DJ Eye Ball Paul and Laura Fraser as the Essex girl who falls for Enfield's charms. JB (UK/US 2000, swearing, drug abuse, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

SCI-FI Duncan Jones (who, as David Bowie's son, was once known as Zowie Bowie) made his directorial debut with this intelligent, poignant tale, which recalls the very best of 1970s sci-fi. Sam Rockwell plays a lone mining engineer stuck on the dark side of the Moon. His only company is Gerty, a somewhat anodyne robot (voiced by Kevin Spacey), but as time goes on Rockwell begins to suspect that things are not what they seem. The script by Jones and Nathan Parker delicately explores the themes of loneliness and humanity, making for a hugely impressive first feature. AS (UK 2008, swearing)

Death Wish ★★★ 10.00pm-12.05am ITV4

THRILLER This is the highly controversial movie that finally made Charles Bronson a star in America, and set a regrettable trend for trashy and ultra-violent vigilante thrillers. Bronson plays liberal architect Paul Kersey, who takes matters into his own hands after his wife is killed and his daughter is raped by a Manhattan gang (led by an unsettling Jeff Goldblum in his film debut). Director Michael Winner's blood-lusting shocker is as intense and upsetting as it is morally reprehensible, but was very influential in its day and spawned a series of dismal sequels. AJ (US 1974, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

The Fifth Element ★★★★ 11.05pm-1.20am C5

SCI-FI Ancient evil returns to destroy the galaxy in this flight of fantasy from director Luc Besson. Bruce Willis's laconic former government agent is forced to save the universe when the secret key to preventing its destruction literally falls into his cab in 23rd-century New York. This inventive rollercoaster ride delivers on all levels: the satire is slick, the visuals unusual and the thrills futuristic, while Gary Oldman's evil Zorg is haute-couture corruption personified. If the Big Apple special effects don't amaze, the trip to the resort planet of Fhloston Paradise certainly will. AJ (Fr 1997, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

ROMANTIC COMEDY Kicking off a Nicolas Cage triple bill that includes action films Gone in Sixty Seconds and The Trust, this cosily watchable true-life tale sees the star playing a good-hearted cop who divides his lottery winnings with Bridget Fonda's waitress. Rosie Perez gives one of her usual shrieking performances as Cage's wife, but all three leads are on top form in a charming scenario worthy of Frank Capra. David Parkinson (US 1994, violence, swearing)

Alien: Covenant $\star\star\star$ 9.00-11.20pm Film4

SCI-FI Following on from yesterday's showing of Prometheus, this second Alien prequel is gorier than any earlier film in the series, as Billy Crudup's spaceship skipper takes his crew on a detour to a remote planet. In terms of story, it's familiar creationism and originsof-man stuff, with Danny McBride's redneck pilot and Michael Fassbender's android the most memorable characters. Although scarv as hell, it adds little new to the franchise. TeS (US 2017, violence, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Saturday Night and Sunday Morning * 7.10-9.00pm Sony Classic

DRAMA Arthur Seaton, who won't be beaten, is the working-class hero of director Karel Reisz's definitive kitchen-sink drama, based on Alan Sillitoe's novel. Impeccably played by a Baftanominated Albert Finney, Seaton is perpetually dreaming of his next fag and a good time. Reisz's visuals are soot black and overcast grey, suggesting colour has yet to reach Nottinghamshire. (If ever a film looked like a Smiths song 20 years before a Smiths song was written, it's this.) The cautionary tale sees Seaton juggling an affair with an older married woman (Rachel Roberts), which leads to an unwanted pregnancy, with his relationship with a girlfriend (Shirley Anne Field) who doesn't believe in sex before marriage. The film remains a captivating cornerstone of a FANTASY Children will revel in this first film adaptation of Hugh Lofting's stories, but in its day it was an infamous and costly disaster that almost killed off 20th Century-Fox. Its longevity belies a thumpingly leaden affair, in which Rex Harrison is squeakily embarrassing as the dotty doc. There are some good tunes, including the Oscar-winning Talk to the Animals, and the special effects also won an Academy Award, but overall it is rather a bore – to adults, that is. Another curious example of a film that bombed at the box office but refuses to lie in its celluloid grave. SH (US 1967, HD)

ADVENTURE Daniel Craig made the role of agent 007 his own in this cracking reboot for the spy. GoldenEye director Martin Campbell delivers an origins story that sees a rough-aroundthe-edges James Bond gain his two zeros before tackling villain Le Chiffre (a splendidly thin-lipped Mads Mikkelsen) in a game of high-stakes poker. Craig's more flawed interpretation of the role balances Campbell's gritty direction and co-writer Paul Haggis's sparing wit, while Eva Green provides an alluring love interest. London Has Fallen ★★ 9.00-11.00pm 5 Star

ACTION This sequel to 2013's Olympus Has Fallen relocates to an overcast London for a state funeral that is plunged into chaos by a terrorist attack. Gerard Butler's Secret Service agent and Aaron Eckhart's unlucky US President improvise an escape, Colin Salmon and

Charlotte Riley lead the stoic British response, while Morgan Freeman and the Joint Chiefs fret remotely on the other side of the Atlantic. FILM OF THE DAY

Cromwell ★★★★ 10.00pm-12.15am BBC4

HISTORICAL DRAMA Preceded by a Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema covering historical movies, this 1970 film about the life of Oliver Cromwell is forever destined to draw accusations of inaccuracy. Writer/ director Ken Hughes (The Trials of Oscar Wilde, Chitty Chitty Bang Bang) did his research but takes unavoidable liberties, particularly when it comes to Richard Harris's charismatic future Lord Protector. My advice? Sit back and enjoy the expensively sumptuous view, with Parliament reconstructed at Shepperton and an authoritative line-up that includes Alec Guinness as Charles I, RSC star Dorothy Tutin as the French Catholic Queen and Charles Gray as the leader of the New Model Army. On top of the fruity court intrigue, the film's cast of thousands includes a 24-year-old Timothy Dalton.

The Sound of Fury ★★★★ 11.00am-12.50pm Film4

(UK 1970, some violence)

DRAMA This stark low-budget offering features Lloyd Bridges as a criminal of the Depression era who recruits a jobless family man (Frank Lovejoy) as his accomplice in a kidnapping. Only the unnecessary moral comments of an Italian doctor lessen the film's impact, and the critical view of American mores contributed to the blacklisting of its director, Cyril Endfield, who moved to Britain (he went on to carve out a career that culminated in Zulu). The film deserves to be as well known as Fritz Lang's 1936 study of mob vengeance, Fury. AE (US 1950, some violence, BW, HD)

Trapped in Space ★★★ 4.00-5.50pm Horror Channel

SCI-FI Based on the Arthur C Clarke short story Breaking Strain, this tense drama could be described as Alfred Hitchcock's Lifeboat in space. When a cargo spaceship on a routine assignment is hit by a meteor, the astronauts find themselves condemned to a lingering death in an airless craft. The devastating effect this has on the once-friendly crew members is depicted in nerve-jangling fashion by director Arthur Allan Seidelman, whose film is an efficient, no-nonsense exercise in chilling claustrophobia and fragmented fear. AJ (US TVM 1994, edited for content)

Contagion ★★★ 9.00-11.15pm ITV2

DISASTER A mystery virus triggers a global pandemic in this taut and intelligent film, receiving a timely showing given current events. Early victim Gwyneth Paltrow's Hong Kong business trip soon appears to be key to the virus's path, as eco-scientists Laurence Fishburne, Kate Winslet and

Jennifer Ehle struggle to contain and combat the bug. Director Steven Soderbergh's ensemble piece is reminiscent of his Oscar-winning Traffic, but never quite delivers the same level of drama or tension as that drugs saga, and the scenes of panic and looting are at odds with the otherwise cerebral and wordy storyline. TeS (US/UAE 2011, HD)

The Lost Boys ★★★ 10.00pm-12.05am 5 Star

HORROR COMEDY When Dianne Wiest moves her family to the Californian coast, the local teenage gang is revealed to be a pack of vampires with designs on her teenage sons (Jason Patric and Corey Haim). This 1980s tale is a slick attempt to update the bloodsucking genre for the MTV generation, blending Hollywood glitz with pop-culture cool. Kiefer Sutherland is excellent as the charismatic leader of the vampires, and the film has a clever script that's packed with twists. AJ (US 1987, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Witness *******

10.45pm-12.35am BBC1

THRILLER Australian director Peter Weir's timeless 1985 thriller gave Harrison Ford a decent contemporary role after establishing himself as Han Solo and Indiana Jones, and also introduced us to the curious ways of the Amish. The story follows an eight-year-old boy (Lukas Haas) who witnesses a murder, with Ford as the detective who acts as his protector. A double Oscar winner for its screenplay and editing, the film was largely shot around a genuine Amish community in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. As well as a crime potboiler that offers a handy series of carpentry lessons, it's a love story between Ford and the boy's mother, played by Kelly McGillis (Top Gun), and is as good today as it has always been. (US 1985, violence, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

Sabotage ★★★★

4.10-5.45pm Talking Pictures TV

THRILLER Alfred Hitchcock adapts
Joseph Conrad's novel The Secret Agent, with Oscar Homolka as the terrorist who uses his marriage to Sylvia Sidney and his business as a cinema owner as a front for his subversive activities. Hitch's rigorous nonconformity is apparent in the unnerving scene in which a boy carries a bomb aboard a bus. While the director later described the film as
"playful", it is in fact a deadly game with cruel conclusions. TH (UK 1936, BW)

Das Boot ★★★

9.00-11.55pm Sony Classic

ACTION DRAMA This sprawling U-boat epic is based on actual incidents during the 1941 battle for the North Atlantic. The submarine action alternates between tense periods of silent stalking and frantic moments of engagement, and director Wolfgang Petersen depicts the crew as courageous conscripts serving a cause to which they are not wholeheartedly committed. However, his preoccupation with the terrors of their claustrophobic existence means that, apart from steely captain Jürgen Prochnow, few of the characters come alive. DP (WGer 1981, some violence, swearing)

Kill Bill Vol 1 ★★★★

9.00-11.20pm Sony Movies

DRAMA Quentin Tarantino celebrates his 57th birthday today, so sit back and enjoy a double bill (pun intended) of Kill Bill Vol 1 and 2. The first, hypnotically entertaining instalment introduces Uma Thurman's Bride as she sets out on her "roaring rampage of revenge" against the crack assassination squad who left her for dead. Dripping with violence and using startling flashbacks and a quite brilliant anime section,

Vol 1 is a daring cinematic experiment that references everything from Eurotrash horror to Far Eastern martial arts movies and beyond. AJ (US 2003, violence, swearing, col/BW)

Farewell to my Country

I'll miss the marvellous Kerry and Kurtan, says Alison Graham

'M A WEEPER, a softy, a big cry baby. Just this morning I arrived at work having blubbed at a piece on BBC Breakfast where a man who'd donated his bone marrow met the recipient. He'd given her back her life and I sobbed along with the pair of them.

Not too long ago I teared up at the little boy who'd received a sweet, thoughtful letter from Liverpool manager Jürgen Klopp, who had clearly given it so much consideration. The wee boy was so thrilled, grinning from ear to ear, what else was I going to do but cry?

And I sobbed out loud at this week's last-ever episode of This Country (Monday BBC3/BBC1). God, I am going to miss that show and its endearing, not as dumb as they seem, beating hearts, Kerry and Kurtan Mucklowe (writer/creators Daisy May and Charlie Cooper).

I interviewed the pair of them for a cover feature at the start of the series and came away clutching a postcard bearing words written by the pair of them – Daisy May wrote the speech that's engraved on my comedy-loving heart: "I've got enemies everywhere, in North Cerney... South Cerney... Cerney Wick". Charlie added a little message, calling me a "dirty peeper". I'm not, but if you watch the show you'll know what he means.

'The last time I felt so strongly was during the era of Mad Men?

I never ask anyone for stuff like this because I'm not 12 and Daisy May and Charlie Cooper aren't the Osmonds. But I love This Country so much it actually feels like a part of me. I think the last time I felt so strongly about something was during the era of Mad Men. And yes, I asked Jon Hamm for his autograph when I met him. What can I say?

Television has such power to transform and move, more so than the theatre and film. It's probably on a par with novels: you come across something to treasure and you hold it close.

This Country is the most beautifully observed mock documentary, a chronicle of lives going nowhere, which sounds like Ken Loach but is anything but, thank heavens. Kerry and Kurtan have their tiny hopes and, crucially, a joy in the now and in the small things... the Screwfix catalogue (Kerry) and the best bargains from TK Maxx in Swindon (Kurtan).

o MUCH OF This Country is touching and human, and you don't have to have grown up in a small Cotswold town to recognise the small boredoms of small communities anywhere in Britain, where there's nothing to do as a kid except hang around the swings and the bus stop.

I can't help but wonder how the American version of This Country will turn out, as the original is so English, full of references to folklore and tradition. The Coopers, who were born, bred and who still live in the Cotswolds, told me they attend every duck race, scarecrow festival, woolsack race and cheese-rolling contest to make sure they are fully absorbed in the world they create on screen.

The final episode is a wonderful swansong; Kerry and, particularly, Kurtan's lives are about to be thrown into turmoil by a decision made by their vicar/father figure, and Kurtan's sadness is acute.

But it ends on just the right note, with a callback to a previous episode that is a joyous payoff for fans. Though I will miss Kerry and Kurtan, they have picked the perfect farewell.

SUNSHINE AMID THE GLOOM

In these troubling times, when the sight of Huw Edwards, the One Horseman of the Apocalypse, and his "We're all going to die so you might as well put away that hand sanitiser" face becomes too much on the ten o'clock BBC News, I turn to old television favourites for comfort.

This Country (see above) of course, always does the trick (all three series are on iPlayer) – I feel nothing bad can happen while Kerry and Kurtan are in their tiny world. And Seinfeld, streaming on All 4, never loses its lustre. But it's Detectorists (again, all three series are on iPlayer) that takes me to another world of sun-dappled gentleness. I'd be lost without it.

FINGER-CLICKIN' COMEDY High School Musical: The Musical: The Series

Available from 24 March

Yes, that's the correct title for this movie spin-off. In the high school where High School Musical was filmed, the pupils are putting on their own stage musical version of High School Musical. Got that? It's an excuse for a lot of knowing gags about cattily ambitious starlets, and even some jokes at the expense of the original film franchise.

Canadian comedian Mae Martin (above right) has drawn on her own past, as a new arrival in London and as someone with addiction problems, to create this off-kilter dramedy. Martin plays Mae, a Canadian comic who comes to London... As the woman with whom Mae has a life-changing romance, Charlotte Ritchie leads a strong supporting cast in a show that's well tuned to the many ways in which love is a drug.

DARK EURO-DRAMA The Teacher

Available from 20 March

It's the second series of this Polish crime drama with a difference. Having investigated a murder in his home town and become tangled up in all sorts of business in the process, eponymous teacher Pawel (Maciej Stuhr) is blackmailed into moving to an elite school in Wroclaw, where more death and intrigue await. As ever, he and the show are adept at mining for rotten secrets beneath a community's calm exterior.

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

DOCUMENTARY Football fans love a grudge. But even those still smarting from the "Hand of God" goal, which slapped England out of the 1986 World Cup, will find a reservoir of sympathy for Maradona after this stylised portrait by Senna director Asif Kapadia.

The film focuses on the player's time at Napoli between 1984 and 1991, and his deterioration from wide-eyed, fresh-faced Diego to bloated, cocaine-fuelled Maradona.

The pivotal point comes not, as expected, with Argentina's 1986 World Cup victory, but with Napoli's league title win – and the ensuing hounding he got from the crass Italian sports media.

His former mentor, Fernando, offers a profound assessment of this metamorphosis, saying, "With Diego I would walk to the end of the world. With Maradona I wouldn't take a step." Just one plea to sports-documentary makers: could we have some wider shots of the action? All those close-ups make it hard to see what's going on.

It may look like an uneven match-up – in the league, City have racked up the most goals of any team this season, while Newcastle have mustered the fewest. DRAMA There have been two horrible deaths in that grim little town, both committed just for kicks. But the net is at last closing in on the leader of the gang, Mia, as DCI Cadi John faces her final showdown in the last episode.

Lives are unravelling all over the place as the vulnerable buckle under the sheer weight of Mia's evil. Meanwhile, she stalks the woods, like a malign Little Red Riding Hood, armed with a knife after paying a visit to someone she blames for her unhappiness.

The entire series has surely been building up to Cadi taking her place opposite Mia for a police interview, and everyone gets their Line of Duty moment. AG

Ashes to Ashes

from 9.00pm Drama

DRAMA Matthew Graham and Ashley Pharoah's Ashes to Ashes was the follow up to their monster hit Life on Mars, and began in 2008, which now seems half a world away, particularly when you consider the career of one of its stars, Keeley Hawes.

Here Hawes is 21st-century cop Alex Drake, who after being shot on duty regains consciousness in 1981. It's a fairly thankless role as Alex is quite annoying, but Hawes would later go on to career-defining brilliance with Line of Duty.

The great Philip Glenister (currently in Belgravia on ITV) returned as knuckle-dragging Gene Hunt, and there were all kinds of will-they-won't they? hoo-ha when the show first went out. AG

Agnes Brown (Brendan O'Carroll) puts the kettle on for her guests

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.15pm BBC1

COMEDY The epitome of Marmite telly returns for a fourth outing. It's ribald, it's obvious and tacky, but the show also has such heart and can be very funny. Tonight's edition shimmers with inclusivity as Agnes and family welcome John Barrowman (gregarious and saucy as ever) to their Finglas abode, as well as the world's most famous transgender person, Caitlyn Jenner, star of Keeping Up with the Kardashians. "Did you start by dressing up as a woman?" probes Agnes. "Would you know anything about that?" counters Caitlyn.

As Barrowman's mum Marion and dad (also called John) squeeze on the settee, the talk turns to the empowering act of coming out as gay, trans etc, being strong, not apologising for who you are, and having a laugh. Barrowman Junior demonstrates this with a banana.

Wolverine's last stand

Logan ★★★★ A/I/4 FREE TO VIEW

Hugh Jackman's swansong as the X-Men's main man is showing on Wednesday Film4 this week and is also available on demand. A grizzled Wolverine is lying low south of the border, along with a sick Professor Xavier (Patrick Stewart), when a mysterious girl pitches up, pursued by an army of killers. The allusions to western classic Shane border on sentimentality, but director James Mangold and his star have produced a visceral, often moving drama with an end-of-era tone worthy of Sam Peckinpah. JEREMY ASPINALL

One scareful owner

□ The Intruder ★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

In this by-the-book thriller, a young couple discovers their new dream home isn't all it's cracked up to be when the creepy previous owner can't say goodbye. Meagan Good and Michael Ealy see domestic bliss turn into a nightmare, as widower Dennis Quaid hangs around and goes to disturbing lengths to ensure the memories he shared with his late wife are preserved. Sadly, any attempts at old-school suspense are crassly undermined by some gratuitously gruesome scenes of violence and torture. TERRY STAUNTON

Parents on patrol

Blockers ★★★★ Netflix

This recent addition to Netflix stars Leslie Mann, John Cena and Ike Barinholtz as a trio of parents who follow their daughters from party to party on prom night after discovering their plan to lose their virginity. Although not averse to grossing out its audience, this raucous comedy is also disarmingly sweet and sincere. EMMA SIMMONDS

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY The Nest 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series Glossy, attractive couple Dan and Emily Docherty (Martin Compston and Sophie Rundle) appear to have everything – a strong, happy marriage, considerable wealth from Dan's Glasgow development business and a stunning waterside Grand Designs-type house. But there is an enormous gap in their lives. They desperately want a child. Emily is particularly wounded by repeated IVF failures and an attempted surrogacy with Dan's sister that ends in miscarriage.

It's a sad scenario but one that writer Nicole Taylor, with considerable skill, turns into a claustrophobic, thrilling piece of domestic noir. Because a cuckoo lands in the Dochertys' comfortable nest – troubled, vulnerable 18-year-old Kaya (a remarkable performance from newcomer Mirren Mack). She winds herself into Dan and Emily's lives, and picks at Emily's psychological wounds, offering to be their surrogate out of pure altruism. The couple are tempted, but something is badly off here... ALISON GRAHAM

FA Cup Football

1.00pm BT Sport 1/4.00pm BBC1 SPORT Round two of this weekend's quarter-finals sees one of this season's surprise packages in action in Sheffield United v Arsenal (k/o 1.30pm). There's been a lot to like about Chris Wilder's formidable side this season – plenty of neutrals will be cheering them on this afternoon.

Then for the finale: Norwich City v Manchester United (k/o 4.30pm).

A much-improved United will fancy their only shot at domestic silverware this season, but it's also the first time Norwich have reached the quarter-finals in 28 years, so the Canaries will be more than up for the fight. And we already know they're capable of taking down the big guns – just ask the Reds' rivals, Manchester City. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The damp, blustery weather in Carmarthenshire at the National Botanic Garden of Wales didn't put the crowds off, although it played havoc with Fiona Bruce's hair: "Argh, I look like a shaggy dog," she gasps before inspecting some Welsh folk art for the Basic, Better, Best segment.

Then two vases are brought in: one the owner considers ugly, the other she likes. You can guess which is the more valuable. We hear the mantra "It's not for sale" so often that it's almost shocking to hear someone say straight off that she intends to sell her tiny Cartier watch. But there's a fabulous reaction to the valuation of two "honour" goblets.

another 17,000km to go. The remaining couples trekking across Latin America are told their next checkpoint will be Quito in Ecuador and off they canter. The programme does a great job of whittling down a gazillion hours of footage and shaping an engaging story revealing more of the couples' personalities.

It feels like a balancing act — much as it must be for the contestants.
One minute you're thinking: never mind the race, let's slow down and take in the sights. The next you think: forget the scenery — who's winning? Stressed-out Jen is coming round to the whole experience, despite herself: "Beneath all the trauma, it's actually great fun." DAVID BUTCHER

The Good Karma Hospital

8.00pm ITV

Barca station, giving hundreds of local people the chance to have the sort of cutting-edge medical treatment that's rare in rural India. On board is the glamorous Dr Aisha Ray (Priyanka Bose), a former colleague of Gabriel's. Judging by her wistful gazes, they have history – so will this derail his blossoming affair with Ruby?

Among the medical cases is a young woman who was the victim of an acid attack right outside the hospital. This burns storyline is one that's close to the heart of actor Amanda Redman (Lydia Fonseca), as she was scarred by a scalding accident when she was a toddler. JR

RISING STAR: EMILY REID

Emily Reid may have graduated only recently, but the young actor has already landed some plum TV roles. She's currently appearing in not one, but two dramas – as Sophia Trenchard in Belgravia (9pm ITV) and as Roxanna Dubiki in The Trouble with Maggie Cole (Wednesday 9pm ITV).

She says she was "so happy" to get the part in Julian Fellowes's new drama, and particularly enjoyed working with Tamsin

Greig: "I learnt so much from her. That was really exciting. I'm very green. From Tamsin, I learnt the importance of playing with your screen partner and always being present."

After studying at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art, Reid's credits have included Sky 1 drama Curfew, while her next project is as the lead in The Deceived, a Channel 5 drama written by Derry Girls' Lisa McGee. FRANCES TAYLOR

Brainboxes

8.00pm W

DOCUMENTARY Reuben is eight, with an encyclopaedic knowledge of aeroplanes. But when his mum bakes him an Airbus cake, he's frantic in case his friends try to eat it. Anya, who's ten, is a gifted chess player, but her competitive father is concerned that she lacks the killer instinct to win.

We're meeting six gifted New Zealand children and learning about the challenges faced by their families. There are highs – many clever kids score highly in empathy – but there are lows, too. Tristan, 16, is finishing his undergraduate maths degree. But by law, his mum has to be on campus with him. "I don't think it looks good for a postgraduate student to have his mum with him," she comments, ruefully. GC

Dragons' Den

9.00pm BBC2

BUSINESS Here's a tip for entrepreneurs hoping to get Deborah Meaden to invest in their product: bring a friendly dog with you to the pitch. "Just have the money," she teases the young man with the pooch before he even says a word about his insect-based dog treats. But minutes later the friendly atmosphere evaporates when she and Touker Suleyman have a tetchy exchange.

Also up for consideration is a natural energy drink. It's a tough market because apparently 90 per cent of drinks launched in this sector fail, so Sara Davies suggests they need influencers to promote it: "You want every man and their dog talking about it." What is it with Dragons and dogs this week? JR

West Side Stories: the Making of a Classic

DOCUMENTARY West Side Story's plea for tolerance chimes as much now as it did during the New York riots of the 50s. But as Bruno Tonioli and Suzy Klein discover in this enthralling 2016 doc, its creation produced stories as moving as the musical itself.

Venerated wordsmith Stephen Sondheim recalls a niggly relationship with genius composer Leonard Bernstein ("He was very fond of changing my lyrics"), but also tells of perfectionist choreographer Jerome Robbins altering Bernstein's orchestration. Rehearsals were tense and rumble scenes ended in blood and breakages. But such a risky proposition gave rise to a work of art - and a universal prayer. MARK BRAXTON

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Polite society is a teeny bit scandalised when the austere Lady Brockenhurst (Harriet Walter at her most magnificently magisterial) insists that a handsome young chap sits next to her at one of her spectacular dinners.

Who is he? everyone wonders. Why does Lady Brockenhurst look so enthralled by his company? The young chap is personable and ambitious businessman Charles Pope (Jack Bardoe), whose origins must, of necessity, remain secret in the second episode of Julian Fellowes's sumptuous drama.

Tamsin Greig as Anne Trenchard, another holder of that same secret, is brilliant at suffering with dignity. Every new horror and humiliation is etched on her face as she quietly tries not to crumple into a heap at that ghastly ball.

As the details of lives are peeled painfully away upstairs, downstairs the servants plot, scheme and steal. AG

New this weekend

The Leisure Seeker ★★★★ Netflix

This bittersweet drama follows an ageing couple who take a road trip to the Florida Keys in their trusty camper van. Helen Mirren plays a talkative southerner with an unspecified illness. Her husband, Donald Sutherland, is a retired academic who has a form of dementia, which means his memory comes and goes. This leads to situations that are amusing (he accidentally joins a pro-Trump rally) as well as heartbreaking. There aren't many surprises, but the film captures the realities of a long-term relationship to a tee. STEPHEN CARTY

A hard rain's gonna fall

Noah ★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

An Old Testament favourite is given a blockbuster makeover by mother! director Darren Aronofsky. Russell Crowe stars as the man chosen by God to undertake a momentous rescue mission before apocalyptic floods consume the Earth. Yet Noah is tormented by the big questions, not least why he should be the one chosen as saviour. Noah offers an impressive spectacle – the ark itself is built to scale – but is unsure of whether to be epic or relevant. However, Crowe is powerfully charismatic throughout. TERRY STAUNTON

A late-night bite

Interview with the Vampire ★★★

11.40pm TCM
It may lack the darkness of Anne Rice's cult novel, but there's much to enjoy
about Neil Jordan's beautifully mounted screen adaptation.
Tom Cruise stars as the vampire Lestat, whose close relationship with Brad Pitt forms an erotic twist on the Dracula
legend. ALAN JONES

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY This Country 7.00pm BBC3, 10.45pm BBC1 (Scotland and Wales: 11.15pm; N Ireland: 11.45pm)

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Kerry Mucklowe is made the village's Lord of the Harvest, which appeals directly to her incipient megalomaniac vision of herself as "a Princess Diana, a Meghan Markle... I get amongst the people collecting the taxes thyself." Which means Kerry (Daisy May Cooper) uses terrifying efficiency and threats to collect goods directly from her flock.

The title, though, is a sop from the Vicar (Paul Chahidi) after he feels the full wrath of both Kerry and particularly Kurtan's fury at his news.

Relationships between the trio look as if they are forever sundered.

In the final episode (say it isn't so!) of this diamond of a comedy, your heart will fracture as Kurtan (Charlie Cooper, at his absolute finest as a manchild whose blustering anger hides a soft soul) struggles to comprehend an altered life.

But there is a brilliant, beautiful pay-off as we say our last goodbyes...

and his wife Angel make renovating and running a French chateau look like un morceau de gâteau. So this series, dropping in on other Brits doing the same, is definitely a reality check. Some we've met before: previously Dick helped Erin and her French fiancé JB with a moat-related problem at their chateau – now they're attempting to restore a turreted bedroom.

Elsewhere Tim and Sasha organise a New Year's Eve party at their south of France château to provide some low-season income, and one-woman DIY machine Fiona is revamping a derelict bedroom for her daughter's visit. JANE RACKHAM

QUIZ A more relaxed and chummier edition than usual, if that's possible. Yes, it's the third-place play-off or, as Victoria Coren Mitchell puts it, "quizzing for quizzing's sake – so British". Our host even encourages a spot of group singing at one point, though it's mercifully brief.

Not that there's any slackening in the standard of questions: the picture round in particular is that killer combination of fiendish and satisfying that Only Connect specialises in.

Family trio the Forrests' cerebral skirmish with cheese fanciers the Turophiles includes a football-meetsmaths excursion, and the clue "Instagram in Armenia".

FOOD There are two people in this heat who create dishes that really blow John Torode and Gregg Wallace away – I don't think I've ever seen them bicker over who gets to eat the last morsel before. The guest judges (including Anthony O'Shaughnessy, who famously served up chicken parmo in the 2018 competition) are also ecstatic over another contestant's fishy dishes.

Other than that, there are the usual weird combinations (duck with carrot and chocolate sauce?), timing issues and a tendency to put too many ingredients on the same plate.

Finally, someone attempts a chocolate fondant pudding.

available for this Horizon film, but the story it tells deserves to be more widely known. It unfolded in Northamptonshire, where Corby borough council redeveloped the site of a vast steelworks and in the process released airborne toxins that – it was eventually proved – were linked to birth deformities in 19 local children.

But establishing that link took over a decade, and was only achieved thanks to a group of mothers and a tenacious lawyer described as a "British Erin Brockovich". The programme charts an extraordinary scientific battle – and its far-reaching legal significance. DAVID BUTCHER

The current tagline in promos for EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) states that "Family Means Everything", though I don't think anyone's told Sharon (Letitia Dean, right) because she's insisting that no Mitchell is welcome at Dennis's funeral. But since when did anyone in that particular soap clan obey the rules? First, we have Jay risking incurring the wrath of Sharon when he arrives with flowers from Ben and Lola. And tensions only increase at the wake when Sharon and a very guilty-looking lan are stunned as a surprise mourner suddenly arrives back on the scene: Phil.

Over at the Queen Vic, Linda's (Kellie Bright) vow to stay sober appears to have lasted just a month. After telling husband Mick that she's ready to return to work full time, the on-the-edge landlady finds Shirley's bottle of vodka and pours herself a drink. By tomorrow, you can expect Shirl to have caught her red-handed and when Mick turns up, Linda admits that she's succumbed to temptation. DAVID BROWN

DRAMA We know immediately that there's something nasty in the shipping container when DI Renton bellows that immaculate sentence, the one so favoured by TV cops: "Get SOCO here now!"

And then we flash back eight years. To Edinburgh. Oh come on, please, can't we just stay in a place and a year? Must we tango through the decades, and the great cities of Europe? Presumably the idea is to show us why the horrible Andrew Earlham (loan Gruffudd) became such a perverted creep.

We have our answer, and it's an unlikely one, as he stumbles upon another deeply unpleasant creature and they form a kind of folie à deux. AG

Age of the Image

episode brings us up to the present day as he explores our continuing obsession with and dependence on the visual image. We're now fully in the grip of the digital era, which has made image production and consumption more accessible to billions, but in turn has made those very images less reliable.

From Photoshop to Instagram, Ron Mueck's hyperreal sculptures to high-resolution copies of classic paintings that let us see how the artists left their mark, technology's done amazing things, but it's also allowed for manipulation and "fake news". Plenty to chew on – and you might look at "selfie" culture a bit differently afterwards. GILL CRAWFORD

Westworld

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA After her absence from the first episode, we finally catch up with Thandie Newton's awakened robot host Maeve this week, and it's a great return for the series' best-developed, most interesting character.

Waking up in an entirely new theme park – a 1940s Second World War fantasy land called WarWorld – Maeve has to team up with some old friends to battle her way out, but in a story full of twists and turns it's no easy journey for Westworld's former madame.

And Game of Thrones fans take note – there's a great Easter egg for fans of Sky Atlantic's OTHER big US TV show during tonight's action. HUW FULLERTON

Putin: a Russian Spy Story

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series

The climax of this first episode of a sharply drawn profile shows Vladimir Putin in 2000, as he strides through vast golden doors at the Kremlin to be sworn in for the first time as Russian president. And despite everything we've seen in the programme, you still wonder how on earth he did it.

The programme explores his astonishing rise from schoolyard thug ("very small but a fierce fighter") in St Petersburg to a modest career in the KGB, then as an aide to St Petersburg's mayor, then somehow to becoming head of the KGB's replacement, the FSB – and from there, via a leg-up from Boris Yeltsin, to the presidency. There's no shortage of stills and video footage, always with Putin there in the background, with thinning hair and that bored, unsmiling gaze. It's mesmerising. DAVID BUTCHER

Cars in their eyes

□ Le Mans '66 ★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/DVD

In this thrill ride of a film, the real-life rivalry between Ford and Ferrari is set against a backdrop of the titular 24-hour motor race. Christian Bale (as British driver Ken Miles) and Matt Damon (as American car designer Carroll Shelby) are perfectly cast as maverick petrolheads, and the sparring between them is terrific. Meanwhile, director James Mangold (Logan) elegantly stages the races, often putting the viewer in the cockpit, delivering breakneck drama both on and off the track. TERRY STAUNTON

Rutherford on the case

Murder She Said ★★ 1.30pm TCM

All four of Margaret Rutherford's Miss Marple mysteries are showing on TCM this week, starting with Murder She Said, in which she witnesses a killing on a passing train. It's the weakest of the quartet but worth watching for Rutherford's endearing performance as the dotty, determined sleuth who goes under cover to find the body. Agatha Christie herself wasn't keen on the changes made to her stories for the movies, but was a fan of Rutherford and dedicated her novel The Mirror Crack'd from Side to Side to her. TOM FOLLEY

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY OUT GIT 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA "I'm all right. I'm all right," Georgie Lane (Michelle Keegan) keeps insisting. Although she's not saying it because she's under fire in a war zone. She's at home In Manchester, watching her sister get married and, having been promoted to sergeant, helping to train other medics.

But as the fifth series of this soapy military drama starts, we know she's not really been OK since losing the love of her life in a Taliban attack. She's plagued by memories (lots of soft-focus flashbacks) so, inevitably, Georgie goes back to Afghanistan to face her fears. Or something like that.

There are several familiar faces as well as a few new recruits including ex-Hollyoaks star Nico Mirallegro, The Hollow Crown's Will Attenborough and Ackley Bridge's Amy-Leigh Hickman. She plays Mimi, a young trainee medic who may be racked with self-doubt but, as we know that Keegan is leaving the series, is obviously going to be stepping into Georgie's combat boots quicker than you can say "man down". JANE RACKHAM

The Art Mysteries

8.30pm BBC4

ART The way Waldemar Januszczak meanders down art history alleyways is beautifully done in this series.
Tonight he looks at the pointillist Georges Seurat's Les Poseuses.
Or rather, he mostly looks at two more famous paintings by Seurat, A Sunday Afternoon on the Island of La Grande Jatte and Bathers at Asnières (you'd know them at once if you saw them) and shows how Seurat "rhymes" one picture with the other.

By the magic of television we see the paintings side-by-side as halves of the same scene. Then when our guide finally comes to Les Poseuses, the programme has a neat pay-off, suggesting the whole picture is a kind of art history pun. Clever stuff. DAVID BUTCHER

April Jones: the Interrogation Tapes

9.00pm Channel 5

pocumentary The abduction of five-year-old April Jones in 2012 just yards from her home in a small Welsh town triggered the biggest missing person investigation in British police history. A local man, Mark Bridger, was quickly arrested, but police worked desperately against the clock to persuade Bridger to tell them what he'd done with April, as they hoped she was still alive. But four days later, Bridger was charged with her murder.

This documentary has access to Bridger's interview tapes and interviews with detectives involved in the inquiry, as well as the forensic psychologist who drew up a profile of the killer. ALISON GRAHAM

Comedy against Living Miserably

9.00pm Dave

COMEDY Talking honestly and sharing problems is at the heart of Dave's collaboration with mental health charity Calm. It's a stand-up special featuring Joel Dommett, Kiri Pritchard-McLean (whose outfit alone is worth the admission), Judi Love and John Robins. Dommett does a routine about his father: "We've never hugged. He's never said 'I love you'. But when I leave his house, he taps the roof of my car. That's dad-love, that." While Pritchard-McLean talks about gaslighting and why it's similar to adults who commute on scooters.

There's also an off-stage chat that is as interesting as the comics' routines. DAVID BUTCHER

Curb Your Enthusiasm

9.00pm, 9.40pm Sky Comedy

cracking run for Larry David as he's blundered across the post-#MeToo minefield with his vexed pal Jeff repeatedly mistaken for Harvey Weinstein. Larry offended Clive Owen (playing himself) and even Coldplay's Chris Martin, while buddying up with Jon Hamm. He fumed when he was seated in the "ugly section" of a restaurant, canoodled with ex-wife Cheryl, and set off the volcanic, hilarious Susie.

Tonight wraps up with a double bill, bringing the episode tally to a round 100 since Curb began 20 years ago. It sees the culmination of his war with barrista Mocha Joe – will his "spite store" Latte Larry bring down his rival? PATRICK MULKERN

The shortage of nurses continues to be an issue for Fletch (Alex Walkinshaw) in Holby City (8.00pm BBC1; Scotland: 10.45pm), so his short-term solution tonight is to draft Casualty's David Hide (Jason Durr, right). So here he is, doing a shift on Darwin and being taught by a chilled-out Kian to relax. I say "taught", but it's a work in progress – and the antsy David might need to do a six-month secondment before he cracks it.

Coinciding with all this is Max (Jo Martin) nervously anticipating the meeting she's having with her estranged daughter. As Ric worries that patients are being sidelined, Max heads to a park, only to be left stunned by the sight of her child. I won't reveal the reason for the shock, but you can expect Max's prejudices to surface rather speedily. Elsewhere, Essie is also tense as she awaits the CT scan that'll reveal whether her cancer has returned. But will she turn to Dom for support now that she's aware of his illicit kiss with Ben? DAVID BROWN

The Trip to Greece

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY "Don't start there, Steve," Rob Brydon warns, as Steve Coogan embarks on a Demis Roussos impression – singing Forever and Ever, but in what Rob reckons will prove too high a key. "As your proctologist, I would advise you, don't start there..." They bicker for a while over that song, and it's the prelude for a quiet episode with that subtext of ageing and fading that always lurks in the shadows of this show.

It builds to a swimming race and director Michael Winterbottom cuts to a shot looking down on the pair from above, so they look suddenly less athletic, as if they're flailing in the blue water. Also featured: The Onedin Line, Epicurus and Rigsby. DAVID BUTCHER

PIECE OF CAKE

The Windsors

10.15pm C4

COMEDY If there was ever going to be a Windsors spin-off, Beatrice and Eugenie (the superb Ellie White and Celeste Dring) should be first in line – although, ironically, in this episode they realise they've dropped out of the line of succession's top ten and are worried they could "end up like Princess Margaret's children – not even characters in The Crown".

Meanwhile, has David Beckham befriended Anne just for a knighthood? Is Charles right that £80 is too much to charge for a jar of honey at Highgrove's gift shop? And when Meghan unearths some unsavoury facts in Harry's family, Megxit goes into full swing. Luckily Harry is also keen to move to North America – despite not knowing where it is. FRANCES TAYLOR

My Left Nut

10.45pm BBC1 (Scotland: 11.45pm) COMEDY New series Because it is set among Irish teens, you could see this BBC3 comedy as a (mucky) male counterpart to Derry Girls, or as an Irish Inbetweeners – take your pick. Fifteen-year-old Mick (Nathan Quinn-O'Rawe) is embarking on the foothills of flirting and dating when an alarming development in the trouser department (symbolised by a giant meatball on his teatime pasta...) adds a new layer to his anxiety.

What's going on down there? And could a spritz with holy water fix it?
One thing is clear, any advice from his mates will be worthless, and as he takes his crush, Rachael (Jessica Reynolds), on a first awkward date to the cinema, spilling the popcorn is the least of his worries. DAVID BUTCHER

The Great Celebrity Bake Off for Stand Up to Cancer

8.00pm C4

FOOD The phrase "My dogs are exploding!" isn't one you'd ever expect to cross the lips of British tennis player Johanna Konta, or anyone else for that matter.

But Konta is in mock despair after her showstopper challenge starts to go, as she puts it, "tits up". Again, not a phrase you'd expect to hear from JK. It's the most riotous episode of the Stand Up to Cancer specials so far (there are two more to go) as Caroline Quentin, Joel Dommett, Tan France and Konta try to impress with their éclairs in the opening signature round.

Quentin, who cheerfully admits she is not a baker, tells us: "I tried to rise to the occasion but I think I sank beneath the occasion."

But everyone rallies for the technical, despite incredulous laughter and shouts of "Oh no!"

Disney+ is here!

The wait is over, and Disney's new on-demand service, Disney+, launches in the UK today.

The platform is selling itself on its TV content, including 30 seasons of The Simpsons, The Mandalorian (featuring meme-magnet Baby Yoda), The World According to Jeff Goldbum (choice p50) and various Marvel spin-offs. But the vast movie library is reason enough to subscribe.

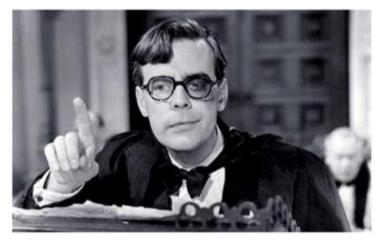

Essentially, Disney+ is a mega-upgrade of the DisneyLife platform, which offered a kiddie-focused catalogue of Disney Channel titles and animated offerings.

But with the acquisition of such properties as Marvel, Star Wars, Fox and National Geographic, Disney+ is extending its appeal to a wider and more mature audience.

More than 500 films are available to stream and download, from superhero movies (Avengers, X-Men, Fantastic Four) to science-fiction (Avatar, the Skywalker saga) and acclaimed documentaries (Oscar-winner Free Solo), not to mention all the animated classics and family favourites the House of Mouse is famous for, from Pinocchio to Pixar.

There's exclusive new film content, too, including a live-action update of Lady and the Tramp, tween-friendly Timmy Failure: Mistakes Were Made and an adaptation of young adult bestseller Stargirl (review p100).

Subscription costs are £5.99 per month or £59.99 per year (a special introductory price of £4.99/£49.99 expires on Monday 23 March), making this a serious rival to Sky, Netflix, Amazon and Apple TV+. For more information, visit DisneyPlus.com. Jamie Healy

A classic on catch-up

Lucky Jim ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

The Boulting brothers' film adaptation of Kingsley Amis's comic masterpiece misses the subtle nuances, barbed satire and deliciously sly characterisation of the book, but still makes for surprisingly agreeable entertainment. Ian Carmichael gives a good account of himself as Jim Dixon, the disaster-prone lecturer whose career in the red-bricked halls of academe gets off to the worst possible start. But it's those masters of comic support Hugh Griffith and Terry-Thomas who are bang on form. DAVID PARKINSON

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY The Trouble with Maggie Cole 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA So maybe at last things are looking up for the hapless Maggie Cole (Dawn French) after her incendiary radio broadcast, the one where she slandered most of the inhabitants of her pretty Cornish village.

Maggie has tried to make amends and, in some cases, has succeeded, though the owner of the local shop is a tougher nut to crack. Maggie said some unpleasant things about his young daughter and is no longer a welcome shopper.

Though there's not an awful lot to the central plot of The Trouble with Maggie Cole, it's proving an absorbing, funny and surprisingly multilayered tale of human relationships, with a dash of mystery thrown in. (Who is responsible for the horrible car accident that we see at the start of each episode?)

A tip-top cast – French, and Mark Heap as her genial, put-upon husband – helps too, of course. ALISON GRAHAM

Grand Tours of Scotland's Lochs

7.30pm BBC2

Murton makes a sentimental journey when he returns to his childhood village of Tighnabruaich on the Kyles of Bute where his parents ran a hotel. But it's a brief stop, as there is a lot to see as he yomps his way on the latest leg of his trip around Scotland's lochs. Murton pauses to chat along the way, of course, to various historians and experts, and hears about the arrival of the US Navy to Holy Loch, which was used as a base for its nuclear submarines.

And, inevitably, a blacksmith demonstrates his craft, as blacksmiths are expected to do on every UK TV travelogue. I wonder if they'd rather be left alone? AG

The Repair Shop

8.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL A respectful silence falls over the Repair Shop as the experts down tools when Mark Stuckey's technical brilliance takes a man back more than 40 years to his wedding day. Geoff has brought in a beloved jukebox he hasn't had the heart to listen to since the death of his wife. It played Glenn Miller's Moonlight Serenade at their wedding, the couple danced and, says Geoff, "A moment of absolute magic happened." So everyone is moved when Stuckey reveals the sprucedup jukebox to its owner, and that glorious tune fills the air.

Also the Repair Shop welcomes its oldest-ever item, a 17th-century lantern clock, and there's a lifeboat compass with an amazing story. AG

Growing Up Gifted

following the six teenagers in this series, all from low-income backgrounds, when they were aged 13 and their talents marked them out from contemporaries. As we rejoin them, they're each entering GCSE year and feeling the pressure.

Tonight's programme follows the three boys, Kian, Liam and Jamarley, and for all of them, there's a reality check. Mock exam results prove disappointing and suddenly the dreams and ambitions they've been forming – to be a doctor, a music producer or a theoretical physicist – look shaky. As the rituals of year 11 (mocks, exams, proms, results day...) roll by, Liam wonders, "Am I as good as they say I am?" DAVID BUTCHER remember Jordan who, aged 18, had a cycling accident that left him with life-changing injuries. His inspirational attitude caused a stir among viewers when he was on The Undateables in 2018, even though he didn't find love then. This update has heart-warming news: it looks as if he's found the one. Keen to show Katie how much he loves her, he plans a surprise weekend away.

We also catch up with horrormovie fanatic Rory who wants a creative woman to spend time with; ghost-hunter Lily who has Williams syndrome and hasn't been on a date for two years; and budding sports commentator Nicholas who gets a second date with Hayley. JR

He may be 80, but it seems that Ken Barlow (William Roache) still has a revolutionary streak. Those who've followed Coronation Street (7.30, 8.30pm ITV) for decades will be aware of his history of protest. Back in the 1960s, he was bundled into a black Mariah after attending a Ban the Bomb march. And who can forget his campaign in 2000 to save the Street's cobbles when they TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Harry Birrell Presents Films of Love and War

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY At the age of just ten Harry Birrell, who loved movies, was given a cine camera, as he called it "the greatest toy a child could ever wish for". It was the start of a lifelong partnership, because Harry assiduously filmed for decades, accumulating 400 films, later found by his family in six rusty boxes.

This is a lovely video diary (first shown last week in Scotland), though parts are unsparingly brutal. Harry filmed throughout his postings in the Far East in the Second World War and there are images of casualties. But it's the most extraordinary testimony to an extraordinary life, recounted here from Harry's diaries by The Bodyguard, Richard Madden. AG

SITCOM New series This is one for fans of old-fashioned, gently paced comedy. It comes across like a slowed down version of the Goes Wrong slapstick troupe or a low-octane Frank Spencer from Some Mothers Do 'Ave 'Em. Spencer Jones plays Leslie, whose all-round haplessness and wishful thinking undermine his best-laid plans. The bulk of the first episode involves his adventures with a self-playing piano that he feels sure will make his fortune.

The best visual gag comes at the beginning, as we meet Leslie face down on a massage table, listening to panpipes as his acupuncturist inserts needles in his back and legs, then leaves him to relax. Until the fire alarm goes off... DAVID BUTCHER a quirky, knockabout romcom about the travails of Mae (Mae Martin) and George (Charlotte Ritchie). Everything should be fine between them. Crucially, they love each other to bits. And yet... it isn't fine. This week George goes off to a wedding with her vividly awful friends – but why didn't she take Mae with her? Mae goes into a needy spiral ("I can't even remember what I used to think about before George") and even her "life raft"

SITCOM New series For the first time in their 30-odd year career Mel and Sue are starring together in a scripted comedy. Mel plays Jamie while Sue is Fran – two best friends and killers who are tasked with taking out hits for their mysterious boss Mr K. They are, admittedly, not the best at their job – more often than not, their congeniality gets in the way of their kill count.

The series opens with a double bill: first with Fran staring down the barrel of a friendless birthday, inviting the man they were due to be taking out round for cake (guest star Jason Watkins). In the second episode, featuring Fleabag's Sian Clifford, Jamie and Fran have to engage in torture. And, by their own admission, it just isn't their bag. Despite the subject matter it's rather amiable, while the gaps in the script are made up by the chemistry and warmth of this dependable on-screen duo. 3/3. The Potter. Following potter Abdol Reza Aghaei and his father in Meybod, southern Iran, as they make a simple water jug, offering a portrait of two master craftsmen at work. Competing with cheap Chinese imports, the pair sometimes struggle to make a living but are dedicated to keeping their traditions alive. Director/Producer Jon Morrice (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

8.00 The Victorian House of Arts and Crafts

4/4. For their final challenge, the crafters must create a pergola, a decorative mirror and a weather vane, as well as writing and printing their own Arts and Crafts magazine – all in a week. Will they get it done in time for a ball and fireworks display to mark the end of their month in the house? Anita Rani presents, while potter Keith Brymer Jones and dealer Patch Rogers assess what the participants have learned about life as a creative crafter in the Victorian era. Executive producers Nick Catliff and Lisa Hazlehurst Series editor Jeremy Daldry Signed repeat 2.45am First shown on BBC2 (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Harry Birrell Presents Films of Love and War

A look at the life of Harry Birrell, who recorded his experiences with a wonderfully cinematic eye on thousands of feet of high-quality 16mm film. From commanding a battalion of Gurkhas in the Indian army at the start of the Second World War to dangerous sorties deep behind enemy lines in Burma at its end, and from the ballroom dances of his youth in the 1930s to teaching his children how to dance the twist in the 1960s, Harry's entertaining and errant adventures are filmed with the intimacy of home movies, but on the scale of Lawrence of Arabia. Narrated by Richard Madden. See page 93. Director Matt Pinder (S) (HD)

She's an inspiration

Stargirl ★★★ Disney+

America's Got Talent winner Grace VanderWaal makes her feature debut in this coming-of-age tale, part of the original content on the new Disney+ service. VanderWaal charms as the kooky free spirit whose infectious joie de vivre has a transformative effect on her Arizona high school, with the musical numbers showcasing her singing and strumming skills. Although dramatically lightweight, this adaptation of Jerry Spinelli's young adult bestseller proves inspirational with its message of being true to yourself. JAMIE HEALY

Run for your money

Our Kind of Traitor ★★★ AII4 FREE TO VIEW

What would you do if a mobster asked you for help? In this globetrotting spy thriller based on a John le Carré novel, a university lecturer (Ewan McGregor) is surprisingly amenable after discovering his new friend (Stellan Skarsgård) is a money launderer for the Russian mafia. Director Susanna White (graduating from TV serials like Bleak House and Parade's End) offers intrigue throughout, while the film receives an added boost whenever the focus shifts to Damian Lewis's dogged MI6 agent. STEPHEN CARTY

Flash Gordon $\star\star\star$

3.15pm Sky Sci-Fi/Horror Swedish-born actor Max von Sydow sadly passed away earlier this month, aged 90. His storied career spanned seven decades, and ranged from acclaimed Ingmar Bergman dramas to genre movies, including The Exorcist, Minority Report and this gloriously campy sci-fi, in which he memorably played villain Ming the Merciless. THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Born to Be Different 9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY If, like Channel 4, you've been following these five children who were born with various disabilities for the past 20 years, you can't fail to be moved by how much most of them have progressed.

Zoe was always a cheery, independent little girl, determined not to be restricted by her arthrogryposis. Now off to university, she says she doesn't see the point in trying to fit into the social norms any longer: "The only thing I have control over is my mind, because my body tends to do what it wants to do." In New Zealand, Hamish's dwarfism hasn't stopped him from taking an engineering degree and swimming in the 2016 Paralympics, while Emily, who as a child was doubly incontinent from spina bifida, is qualifying as a nurse.

Not all the stories are as happy, though. In this update we see that both William and Shelbie have serious ongoing health issues. This is a positive, uplifting series, which, more importantly, may help us all to accept and understand our differences. JANE RACKHAM

Villages by the Sea

7.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This week, it's the see-sawing fortunes of Walberswick in Suffolk. It's a place that feels serenely beautiful to visit, although Ben Robinson learns that its history is anything but.

The way he skips over the centuries may leave you wanting more detail on some episodes, but broadly, it was an affluent port in the Middle Ages, fought a kind of trade war with its neighbour, Dunwich, became more affluent, then declined in the 16th and 17th centuries.

The late Victorians and Edwardians rediscovered its charm and Robinson visits some of the fine Arts and Crafts houses built by architect Frank Jennings.

You Are What You Wear

8.00pm BBC1

LIFESTYLE New series Does Rylan Clark-Neal ever find time to sleep? Here he is presenting yet another fun, accessible show, this time a sort of Gok Wan/Trinny and Susannah make-over although, in these woke times, there's considerably less prodding and poking.

Rylan's not doing the styling, though. There's a Famous Five of fashion experts who take it in turns to help four people with their wardrobe dilemmas. As they dress them in various outfits, their fellow stylists "ooh", "ah" (and occasionally bitch) about their choices. But there are reasons these people are stuck in a style rut, so have a designer hankie to hand. JR

Noughts + Crosses

9.00pm BBC1

Kamal Hadley, Paterson Joseph brings subtlety to a conflicted character. At one level, Kamal is an authoritarian, committed to the idea that races shouldn't mix, and prepared to suppress Nought dissent by any means he can. But we learn more of his past tonight, and of his connection to Yaro (Luke Bailey), the young man he wanted the police to find for him.

But we also know Kamal is playing a double game, promoting the unrest he claims to be appalled by, and his ugly (secret) alliance with the rebels has just the effect he wanted.

Meanwhile, the lovers fall out and Callum moans to Sephy, "You still don't get it, do you?" DAVID BUTCHER

Hospital

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Alder Hey's leading neurosurgeon Chris Parks jokes that he spends more time with maxillofacial surgeon Ben Robertson than he does with his wife. The pair have performed over 2,000 hours of surgery, but lack of funding means not all operations can go ahead.

Fortunately Violet, an adorable toddler, can have the intricate operation to reshape her skull because she has craniosyntosis and is in danger of being severely brain damaged. But the pressure on the team – and the waiting lists – will increase when Ben returns to Australia. It takes 23 years of training to become a maxillofacial consultant – and there is no one to replace him. JR

Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) is marking its 20th anniversary with a change to the usual format. Rather than being a regular episode, this is going to be an hour-long pseudo fly-on-the-wall documentary that's been filmed by a camera crew who've been working at the Mill Health Centre. If you have a sound working knowledge of the history of TV medical dramas, you'll no doubt recognise this as a similar set-up to ER's famous live episode from 1997. It might sound derivative, but there's still much for long-time Doctors devotees to enjoy, most notably the return of one-time Nescafé bean-shaker Diane Keen (left), who reprises the role of former practice manager Julia Parsons for the first time since 2012. And because this is a special birthday, the budget appears to be higher, too: a road-traffic accident near the surgery results in Daniel, Zara and Al rushing to help the wounded, while Sid attends a scene of chaos following an explosion at a microbrewery. DAVID BROWN

Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Two thousand years of British history in 60 minutes: not an episode of Doctor Who, but a feast of clips and Kermodish commentary. All the major figures of our timeline are represented: Boudicca, Henry VIII, Elizabeths I and II, Hengist Pod...

Great to see all those 60s thespian colossi knocking about and enunciating as no actor does today. But while maleness, war and imperialism are sadly common themes, there is redress in more recent productions, from The Favourite and Mary Queen of Scots to Belle and Victoria & Abdul. Plus impressively smart marshalling of all those acres of material by Kermode, who ends his essay with modern royalty: the rock star. MARK BRAXTON

Brooklyn Nine-Nine

9.00pm, 9.30pm E4

SITCOM Brooklyn Nine-Nine's sixth series ended with a major shake-up when Captain Holt (Andre Braugher) was summarily demoted to a junior officer for a year – and as we return to the 99th precinct for a double bill the new status quo is causing tension, particularly when Holt tries to take over Jake's (Andy Samberg) search for an assassin.

Later, Holt's replacement as captain seems too good to be true, leading the squad to hunt out clues about her real motives.

Full of great one-liners, believable characters and even some fun action scenes, this sitcom continues to go from strength to strength. New York's Finest indeed.

COMEDY DRAMA This week in the parental dramedy, a little more seriousness, less sitcom-ery and more focus on Ally (Daisy Haggard). It's a well observed half-hour and the fact it doesn't build to any great comedic

Haggard is great and Barunka O'Shaughnessy's script neatly fills in some of Ally's past before she and Paul (Martin Freeman) were together. Crucially, it turns out she had a previous marriage, whereas she and Paul have never got married. Does that matter? The way they say it doesn't suggests it might, a bit, at least to him. Meanwhile, her father is still sleeping on their floor, and overhearing far more than is convenient. DAVID BUTCHER

10.00pm BBC4 Richard Harris and Alec Guinness go head to head as

SPORT For Scotland and Northern Ireland, this could be judgement night. If they win tonight, they could still book a place at Euro 2020 assuming the tournament takes place as planned. To secure their golden ticket, they must each win a one-off semi-final tonight and a final eliminator on Tuesday. At the time of writing there were no plans to stage the match behind closed doors, so expect an old-school atmosphere at Hampden Park as manager Steve Clarke leads out his Scotland team. If they beat Israel (Sky Main Event), they'll be away to Norway or Serbia next Tuesday.

It feels like a tougher assignment for Northern Ireland: victory in Bosnia-Herzegovina (Sky Premier League) would set up a potential final against the Republic of Ireland, who face Slovakia in Bratislava (Sky Football). CHRIS HUGHES

RT 2/3 Series 2. British History Movies. The film critic examines a guintessentially British film genre. From the Roman invasion of AD 43 all the way to events from the 19th century, Mark identifies a remarkable range of styles and situations, with each period a mini-genre exploring its own themes and characters. He also notes that historical facts rarely stand in the way of a good story or a striking shot. See page 103. Series producer Nick Freand Jones Executive producer John Das (S) (HD)

Happy birthday, Keira

Say When ★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

Keira Knightley turns 35 today, and she's now in cinemas in the true story of the 1970 Miss World contest, Misbehaviour (see feature p36). In this indie comedy, her directionless daddy's girl strikes up a friendship with teenager Chloë Grace Moretz and hides out at her home while pretending to attend a life-management seminar. There is a refreshing intimacy about their pairing, but events take a more familiar course when Knightley meets Moretz's diffident but dishy single dad (Sam Rockwell). DAMON WISE

Swede and sour

Midsommar ★★★ Amazon Prime

A recent addition to Prime, this enjoyable riff on The Wicker Man sees Florence Pugh, Jack Reynor and Will Poulter fall foul of pagan practices when they drop in on a Swedish village's summer solstice celebrations. Directed by Ari Aster (Hereditary), the film revels in the notion that things that go bump in the night can equally well go bump in daylight. And, for a time, in this land of the midnight sun, they do – and creepily so. However, the novelty of high-noon horror does wear a little thin over the long running time. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Stallone in the zone

Rambo night from 10.00pm Sky Action
Bandanas and baby oil at the ready! Sylvester Stallone's war veteran invades Sky Action today with a bullet-riddled quadruple bill. The fun kicks off with 1982's First Blood, followed by Rambo: First Blood, Part II, Rambo III and, simply, Rambo. Just remember: you're not hunting him, he's hunting you... JOSH WINNING

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Pilgrimage: the Road to Istanbul 9.00pm BBC2 (Wales: 9.30pm; N Ireland: 11.05pm)

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK The temptation to groan aloud at yet another bunch of celebrities thrown together to do something or other is strong. But resist, Pilgrimage (this is the third series) is once again absorbing, surprising, always interesting and frequently optimistic.

A group of seven men and women of varying faiths and none (Dom Joly is a very vocal atheist) meet in Belgrade to hike to Istanbul on a route that has become a path of peace. Adrian Chiles, Edwina Currie, Fatima Whitbread, Pauline McLynn, Mim Shaikh, Joly and Amar Latif appear to bond instantly, which is useful when they become lost in some woods.

They are an intriguing, well-mixed group of respectful people who are thoughtful about their various stopping points along the way, including a monastery and a church. Though Joly leaves a service halfway through when the chanting becomes too much: "I get the gist." ALISON GRAHAM See feature: page 24 sport Club football may have been suspended in Italy, but the national team are still (at time of going to press) due to travel to Wembley to face England (kick-off 8pm, ITV). The Italians are unbeaten in 14 matches, while England manager Gareth Southgate will doubtless be anxious to assess his attacking options while Harry Kane recovers from injury.

In the evening's other friendly, Wales take on Austria in Swansea (kick-off 7.45pm, Sky Football/Main Event/S4C), which should prove an emotional homecoming for Daniel James, who built his stellar reputation at the Liberty Stadium before his big move to Manchester United. CHRIS HUGHES

Celebrity Murder Mystery

9.00pm Channel 5

ENTERTAINMENT New series There must be a talent agency for veteran celebs who'll go caravanning, barging and cage-fighting (don't laugh, it's bound to happen) on TV. John Sergeant will surely be on the books. Ditto Sheila Ferguson. So, it's no surprise to see both here sleuthing on a murder mystery weekend.

Although such events have a built-in formula, there are still some shocks in store when it comes to the fate of some of the stars taking part. And life below stairs at the country house venue seems like a right laugh thanks to twinkly-eyed Keith Duffy playing a gentleman's valet and a breathless Su Pollard as, naturally, a lady's maid. DAVID BROWN

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA The shockwaves from the death of that poor abused woman are quickly forgotten as the second series of the moody Italian crime drama continues. Instead the focus is on the family of brooding, rebellious detective Valeria Ferro (Miriam Leone) and the mystery surrounding the murder of her father. There are flashbacks to 1998, when Valeria was a brooding, rebellious teenager, and her parents were at loggerheads over her mum's insistence on moving the family to France for some unspecified yet vital reason.

Valeria's raw emotions drive the plot and even when she's assured a culprit will be imprisoned, she asserts, "It's not enough. I want the truth!" DAVID CRAWFORD

Bulletproof

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA There's a lot to enjoy in this cartoon cop thriller – car chases and shootouts and snappy bits of dialogue. And the plot that connects these things makes exactly as much sense as it needs to and no more.

Crucially, the whole thing doesn't feel cheap: action sequences are pricey to shoot well, and here there's a flair to them, whether it's a car chase around the streets of a housing estate or a fight in a garage with a giant tattooed Balkan who keeps throwing spanners.

But the main plot is with Bishop (Noel Clarke), who has won the trust of the Cypriot criminal family. Pike (Ashley Walters) wonders if he has penetrated them a little too far.

DAVID BUTCHER

112 RadioTimes 21–27 March 2020

I'm calling this evening's soap drama Fallout Friday. In Emmerdale (7pm ITV), Brenda (Lesley Dunlop, far right) is understandably still in a panic, especially when she overhears Kerry and Wendy talking about Dan. As we saw yesterday, Dan was carted off to A&E after having a bad reaction to one of the wraps that were being served in the café. After studying the ingredients, Brenda is now frantic that her poor labelling resulted in Dan's hospitalisation. Is the finger of blame about to be pointed in her direction?

Meanwhile in Hollyoaks (6.30pm C4), it's time for the plates to be cleared and the coffee and mint thins to be served at Liam Donovan's devil's dinner party. He's locked all his enemies in the Dog in order to take revenge on them all. Has he forced ex-lover Mercedes to bump off his own sister Grace? In fact, are any of the guests still in the land of the living? And might this be the most violent Hollyoaks Come Dine with Me of all time? DAVID BROWN

Babylon Berlin

9.00pm, 10.00pm Sky Atlantic

builds to a wonderfully overwrought sequence at Babelsberg Film Studios, where that mysterious masked figure in the black cape is at large again, wreaking havoc. It's these ripe set pieces that make Babylon Berlin worthwhile. That and the sense of ugly things brewing in the recesses of 1920s Germany, particularly in that "gentlemen's club" where the colonel with the scar holds court.

Nyssen makes a proposal to them based on his reading of the "collective hysteria" of the stock market bubble. He's basically Steve Carell in The Big Short, and nobody's interested. All the while our hero, Rath, is still investigating Benda's murder, but it's not going well. DAVID BUTCHER

Rock 'n' Roll Island

9.30pm BBC4

MUSIC No offence to south-west Londoners, but Twickenham isn't exactly the epicentre of the capital's music culture these days. That wasn't always the case, though, and any fan of 60s British R&B knows about Eel Pie Island. The Stones, Elton John and the Yardbirds all cut their teeth there. It sounds like quite the scene.

This film about it is largely anecdotal, given the lack of moving footage from the time. But that's not an issue when the anecdotes are so good. Hawkwind's Dave Brock, for instance, tells how he and Eric Clapton used to swim across the Thames, with their clothes on their heads, to avoid paying the 2p entrance fee. Now there's an image. GARY ROSE enjoyable, but it doesn't break new ground. Created by two Simpsons producers, the brief might have been to make "an animated sitcom like The Simpsons or Family Guy, but different". Still, when the characters are wittily scripted and voiced by the likes of Amy Poehler and Ty Burrell (Phil from Modern Family), every comedy beat stays hit.

Our hero is Duncan, a small-town 15-year-old with parents who, in the first episode, become obsessed with stealing the recipe for a chilli that will win them first prize at the town's annual Witch Day fair. Or as one of Duncan's friends describes them, "your hot mum and that guy she's too good for". DAVID BUTCHER

Ozark Netflix

It's series three of one of Netflix's darkest and best original dramas, and the Byrdes (Jason Bateman and Laura Linney) are somehow in even deeper. Having become high-level money launderers by mistake, they're now running a casino, pitching them further into the criminal underworld around Missouri's dodgy lake resorts. Their marriage crisis provides the notes of tar-black comedy.

SITCOM Stop what you're doing, bambinos, it's back. Robert Popper's gloriously painful sitcom returns for half-a-dozen episodes every two years and each time the audience has grown: never mind being a cult comedy, these days it's an out-and-out hit.

And as tight as ever: from the premise of Adam and Jonny (Simon Bird and Tom Rosenthal) returning for a meal with their overbearing parents each week, Popper each time probes new depths of farce. The way in tonight's opener the evening descends swiftly but just-plausibly into madness is beautifully done.

The big news is that Dad (Paul Ritter) has bought a caravan – not a nice one but a run-down heap parked in the front drive. 'It's not a shole!' he insists, beating Jonny with a slipper. Meanwhile, the boys both now have girlfriends, but whatever happens, they mustn't tell Mum. DAVID BUTCHER

Rock'n' roll magic

■ Rocketman ★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

Elton John celebrated his 73rd birthday on Wednesday and his farewell tour reaches Canada tomorrow, and Sky subscribers can now enjoy this compelling biopic of his rise to fame. From the unhappy home life of Elton's youth to a solid grounding in the music biz before superstardom takes its toll in a haze of drink and drugs, the singer's story is recounted with flair by director Dexter Fletcher, with Taron Egerton giving a Bafta-nominated performance in the lead. If it gets you in the foot-tapping mood, pop over to Sky Greats, which becomes Sky Musicals from today. TERRY STAUNTON

Bold and beautiful

Thoroughbreds ★★★★ Netflix

This teen movie taps into the dark heart of horror classic Les Diaboliques, as Amanda (Olivia Cooke) is sent to study with the rich and spoiled Lily (Anya Taylor-Joy). Amanda comes with baggage after the killing of her horse – and Lily harbours grim secrets, too. A murderous pact is made, but which girl is willing to see it though? Writer/director Corey Finley's sharp script pushes things to a deliciously amoral conclusion, abetted by his two femmes fatales and, in his final screen role, Anton Yelchin as their stooge. DAMON WISE

(Not) in cinemas

Today was supposed to mark the release of Disney's live-action Mulan (right) and Peter Rabbit 2, but both films have been postponed owing to concerns over coronavirus. Still scheduled at this time are trippy sci-fi Vivarium, starring Imogen Poots and Jesse Eisenberg, Swedish oddity Koko-di Koko-da, and Czech wartime drama The Painted Bird. JOSH WINNING

The Late Night Alternative with Iain Lee

HE MOMENT THAT stopped listeners in their tracks was when a caller told Iain Lee he'd taken an overdose. "When did you do that?" asked Lee. "About an hour ago," came the reply. "Oh, whoah, whoah, whoah" was Lee's response. The talkRADIO host was suddenly plunged into a situation that, looking back on it a little over a year later, he says was "completely uncharted territory for me".

What followed was half an hour's worth of radio that made such an impact on people that at this month's Audio and Radio Industry Awards (Arias), it was voted the radio moment of the year, in a category sponsored by Radio Times and which, alone among the 26 categories, was voted for by the public.

The caller's name was Chris. It was late one December night, and he was out on the streets of Plymouth. In his desperation, the person Chris chose to try and speak to was Iain Lee - a tribute to the connection Lee makes with listeners to his phone-in show, and to his openness about mental health issues, including his own.

Lee kept Chris talking, eliciting enough information about his whereabouts that his producer and co-presenter Katherine Boyle was able to call an ambulance. Throughout the time it took for Chris to receive help, Lee was right there beside him. "I'm not going to let you die," he told him. "I love you, man!" Chris's speech was slurred, and for a horrendous few minutes he drifted out of consciousness. Lee kept talking, and he kept talking, and he talked some more, and then finally a woman's voice came on the line. It was a police officer, and she was with Chris.

phone-in career, and he promptly burst into tears. "That's when it hit me – that this poor man, so lost and so desperate, chose us. I felt humble. I felt scared. I felt protective of my kids. You know, everything. It was really emotional."

Lee says he has not listened back to the call because "I don't need to hear it". So what does he remember about the experience? "The adrenaline, mainly. If possible, I just wasn't going to let him die – not on my watch. So a lot of it was adrenaline. Everything else sort of disappeared."

Was it right that he allowed the call to carry on? "I could have said, 'OK, we'll go to some adverts now and I'll talk to you off air,' but I'm glad I didn't, because just that 30 seconds of going into the next studio, he could have put the phone down. And throughout the conversation, I was trying to get him to say what he could see from where he was, and that was great, because people were texting saying, 'I know Plymouth. It sounds like he's here.' And with their help, we managed to locate him."

And what about such a call receiving the moment of the year accolade? "Part of me felt quite uncomfortable that a man at his lowest ebb was being flagged in such a way. But I've kind of got my head around that now and I'm aware that this was not really what was being celebrated."

Lee is 46 and divorced and has two sons, aged eight and ten. He grew up in Slough and lives near Aylesbury. He's had a varied broadcasting career in which he enjoyed his greatest prominence as a contestant on the 2017 series of ITV's I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here! He was a big enough hit to finish third out of the 12 contestants. He's done stand-up, presented The II o'Clock Show on Channel 4, and has had gigs on both LBC and Absolute Radio. He says he was drawn to broadcasting from "a weird combination of low self-esteem and arrogance".

He joined talkRADIO for its launch in March 2016, since when The Late Night Alternative with Iain Lee has established itself on the five weeknights (10pm to 1am), with a loyal audience drawn to his matey charm, larky humour and the chemistry he has with Boyle. It's his favourite job ever, he says. Boyle says the pair, who first met seven years ago and have worked on the show together from the beginning, have "a telepathic understanding".

'This poor man, so lost and so desperate, chose us'

"I don't want to make the show sound overly important," Lee says. "At its heart, it's just a silly radio show. But radio is a real companion for a lot of people, and I think we're maybe doing a little bit more than just being entertaining."

HEN TOPICS TURN personal and callers are in pain, Lee draws on his own experience. He's been open about the abuse he suffered as a child and the effect it has had on him in adulthood. He's a recovering alcoholic and he's been suicidal. "I've had a lot of therapy, but I'm not trained in any way whatsoever. All I can do when I'm on air is three things: I can share what I've been through. I can talk. And I can listen." He also points people in the direction of the Samaritans – an organisation he has at times turned to himself.

Lee says he had no expectation of winning moment of the year, but he had thought about the speech he would give if he did. What followed was a plea from the heart – a plea for us all to be kinder to each other.

"Caroline Flack dying really upset me," Lee says. "I worked with her about ten years ago for a few days and she was delightful. I'm not going to point the finger at anyone because I don't think you can when someone takes their own life. It's the culmination of all kinds of different factors, but 'Be kind' was what really hit me about that. In fact, 'Be kind' isn't enough. It's 'Be kinder'. However kind you're being, you can be kinder."

Lee was very kind to Chris from Plymouth, and the pair were in touch again in the days that followed the call. Lee's example is there for anyone to follow. SIMON O'HAGAN

PICK OF THE WEEK

The Battle for English Monday 11.00am Radio 4

Radio Times columnist Susie Dent (below) is also the longtime occupant of "dictionary corner" on Channel 4's Countdown. Our most high-profile lexicographer also hosts the hit podcast Something Rhymes with Purple with Gyles Brandreth. Now she embarks on an exploration of something that not long ago would have been unthinkable – the potential demise of the English language.

All manner of historic forces have come together to create this prospect, not least, as one of Dent's contributors puts it, that "a number of countries don't like English very much because they see it as colonial and repressive".

There are five non-native English
speakers for every one English speaker and the rate at which the world is taking up English is slowing.
Other languages are asserting themselves, and we hear from a Dutch pop band breaking the English tradition by writing songs in their own language.

Then, beyond a certain point, there is the sheer difficulty of English – its nuances, idioms and vocabulary. At a London language school, students are asked to differentiate between "snigger" and "giggle". Not easy, is it?

Hot Priest & me

Overheating and overrunning...

O THERE I was with Elaine Paige in Barbra Streisand's dressing room. Andrew Scott – who played the hot priest in Fleabag and starred in 1917 – was on his way up. We were due to be broadcasting live on Radio 2 to millions of theatre fans, but in the cramped backstage of London's Prince of Wales Theatre, filled with guests, radio equipment and a central heating system working at full blast, we began to overheat.

Paige, who is known as the First Lady of British Musical Theatre, or simply to fans like me as EP, whipped off her shimmering jacket. I reached for the air conditioning, and together we stood under its cooling breeze. A speaker on the wall barked instructions from the stage: "Five minutes... five minutes."

"Pull that speaker off!" ordered Mark the producer. It was the work of a few seconds to unscrew it and disconnect its tiny wires. Now I know what you're thinking. Where was Streisand? What did she make of this scene, EP and I chilling beneath her air-con, pulling bits of the room apart? Well, she hadn't actually been in the room since Funny Girl in 1966. Back then, Dressing Room No 1 at the Prince of Wales Theatre had indeed been hers. Now it was ours.

What did Streisand make of us pulling her room apart?

I searched the room for signs of Babs. Was there perhaps a single slipper? One of her two Academy Awards? An old bag of peanuts? No, not a sausage. One of the few stars to have won an Oscar, a Tony, a Grammy and an Emmy, she didn't even leave one of them there. With so many gongs, you'd think she could spare it.

I'd been drafted in to deputise for another legend, Ken Bruce, who in my mind is as big a deal as Barbra Streisand. Anyway, in the style that broadcast dreams are made of, he was unavailable for the Sunday-night broadcast, and my job was to stand in for him, his stunt double on the air. Now as you know, I adore Ken, but on the radio, you have to steal work from your friends, and so it was that I was mingling with the stars. Ken Bruce? Never heard of him.

EP, as readers of a certain age will know, made the role of Evita her own and one of the awards that night was for Jamie Lloyd, who directed a revival of the famous show. Among the many highlights of our programme, she was going to interview him live sitting on the sofa where once Babs had preened prior to performance.

HEN ANDREW SCOTT arrived, his five minutes on air went on... and on. Ten minutes, 15 minutes, half an hour went by and still we asked him questions. It was like Desert Island Discs, without the music. One of the most successful actors of his generation, the poor man must have been delighted to get out of there. In this way, the What'sOnStage Awards passed, three happy hours, ending with the award voted for by thousands of Radio 2 listeners. They'd picked Six the Musical, about the wives of Henry VIII. But seven starlets walked in. How come? Had history forgotten a Tudor spouse who had escaped Henry's axeman? Sadly no. Like me, she was merely the understudy.

Then it was over. We put the speaker back on the wall. We removed the equipment that had sent the temperature soaring, and drifted away into the night. Had it really happened? As both Babs and EP themselves famously sang, it's just a Memory. But perhaps Streisand was in the room after all, because no one rained on my parade.

SOUND BITES

BY DAVID HEPWORTH

Wake up, 5 Live, and bring Mickey back!

I very much regret the fact that Mickey Clark is no longer one of the presenters of Wake Up to Money on 5 Live. Many's the time I have stood in a cold kitchen waiting for the kettle to boil, enjoying the sound of Mickey turning the searchlight of his genial scepticism on some media-trained CEO before inviting them in the nicest possible way to pull the other one. It isn't simply what Mickey knows. It's what Mickey sounds as though he knows. Voices like Mickey's, suggestive of a life lived beyond the BBC newsroom and an impatience with cant, are the kind the Corporation can ill afford to lose. They should get him back as a Diversity hire.

Stars: go the podcast route

If you have the good fortune to act in a long-running American drama, you'll make a lot of money while doing it, but once it's finished you may have trouble shaking off the association.

Meanwhile, the work you once did goes on streaming its way into the affections of new fans, making money for its creators but not always for its stars. So, if you don't want to go the fan-convention route, knocking out your signature for small bills and posing for your picture for bigger ones, then why not do a podcast about the old show?

Joshua Malina

The West Wing lives on

Joshua Malina was a regular cast member in The West Wing, which finished 14 years ago. After it finished there were still a lot of people who wanted to keep on thinking about the show so he became the co-host of The West Wing Weekly, which examined every one of its 156 episodes with the help of other actors, producers, writers and fans. This mammoth task is now ended, though it's all still there for anyone who wants it. All you have to do is use a well-known search engine.

Comedy is a serious business

Into the gap it left steps The Office Ladies, in which Jenna Fischer and Angela Kinsey, who played Pam and Angela in the US version of The Office and happen to be best friends, similarly reminisce about and take apart all 201 episodes of their hit series, which finished in 2013. It's worth hearing, if only to be reminded of just how thorough long-running American sitcoms can be and just how seriously they take the business of getting the audience to laugh. It makes you wonder which British shows could excite comparable fascination and which former stars should be thinking about getting there first. Mrs Brown's Boys?

Many American film-makers still are, and listless anti-heroes at odds with the absurdity of the world are now part of the mainstream. 6/7. An ancient pilgrim route will soon re-open in south Wales. Known as the Penrhys Pilgrimage, it will stretch from Llandaff near Cardiff to Penrhys in the Rhondda Valley. As Clare Balding discovers, while walking the final section, a huge amount of work from local volunteers has gone into making this project happen. Penrhys is the site of an ancient well and a statue of Mary and already has a pilgrim route passing through from east to west (the Cistercian Way) but from 25 March this new waymarked route, running 21 miles south to north, will be available to all-comers, pilgrims or not. Today's Choices

Sunday Feature 6.45pm Radio 3

When Truman Capote (above) spied a newspaper article on a grisly backwater crime, it spawned a thilling project that would initiate a new literary genre. Published in 1965, In Cold Blood was effectively the first true-life crime novel, which in spellbinding detail records the murder of the Clutter family in their remote Kansas farmhouse. Daringly, and with great skill, Capote put perpetrators Dick Hickock and Perry Smith centre stage, his rounded depiction of them eliciting our compassion. Presenter Corin Throsby feels the piece is "manipulative", but she's undeniably in awe. Her measured exploration of a landmark book is the best thing I've listened to this year.

CHRIS GARDNER

Explicable Me 9.00pm Radio 2

Latest addition to Radio 2's Funny Fortnight is this nonsensical panel game co-hosted by Suzi Ruffell. The show is inspired by the personality tests that make pronouncements depending on your answers to questions a, b and c. The guests in this pilot - AJ Odudu and Ruffell's podcast chum Tom Allen - do their best but sound defeated by the final round in which co-presenter Ahir Shah ("I studied psychology for a year") talks garbage. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

7.30 Drama on 3: Schreber

Christopher Eccleston stars in the world premiere of Anthony Burgess's never-produced screenplay of the influential 1903 work Memoir of My Nervous Illness by Daniel Schreber (1842–1911), a German High Court judge who later in life suffered a series of nervous breakdowns. During his first stay in hospital he kept notes which would be the basis for his memoir, which Freud analysed extensively. Burgess, who died in 1993, saw the work as a key to understanding modern life. Dramatised by Jeff Young.

The Book of Polyamory

8.00pm Radio 4

I can give no assurances about this programme. There was no preview available and there's little known about presenter Sophie Duker (above), who's only recently begun performing after doing backstage stuff for comedy shows. I suppose the bottom line is that if you're open-minded about sex, you'll want to listen. It's about The Ethical Slut, an American book about polyamory – in other words every kind of sexual relationship other than monogamy between one man and one woman. Allegedly the authors say sensible things about communication. Will you join me? DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Thanks A Lot, Milton Jones!

Andrew McGregor presents two contrasting pieces – an electroacoustic work by Italian avant-garde composer Luigi Nono (1924–90) and Brahms's A German Requiem – performed by the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra conducted by Ilan Volkov and recorded on Thursday at City Halls in Glasgow. Nono's Per Bastiana Tai-Yang Cheng (1967) work transforms the orchestra into urgent tectonic strata of unearthly chords, mixed with magnetic tape sounds re-rendered for the 21st century by electronic music experts Sound Intermedia. In A German Requiem, Brahms created his own form of vernacular libretto to structure a majestic choral meditation. Today's Choices

The Hidden History of the Mantelpiece 4.00pm Radio 4

The first mantelpieces started to appear in 12th-century homes, when it became practical to move fires to the wall. And according to one of the contributors to this warming programme, "they immediately became a framing device – a means of expressing identity". The presenter is Rachel Hurdley, the author of a book about mantelpieces, and the voices she gathers together include that veteran observer of style Peter York, an adornment in himself, and still getting mileage out of his 1982 Sloane Ranger Handbook. With their clusters of wedding invitations, Sloane Rangers really knew about mantelpieces. simon o'hagan

The Documentary 1.30pm/11.05pm

BBC World Service

Early on in his exploration of Miami, Peter White – the blind presenter of Radio 4's In Touch – meets a local who calls it a corrupt wild west that's "not a nice place to live". The Florida city seems to engender stronger passions than its easy-going atmosphere would suggest. White sets out to find its character through sound; the result is a cacophony of traffic, parties and late-night pushers, and an insight into a contradictory urban sprawl. TOM GOULDING

Today's Choices

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 4 Concert audiences are usually reminded to turn off their mobile phones. But for tonight's BBC Concert Orchestra programme the audience were actively encouraged to switch them on in order to participate in Tan Dun's Passacaglia: Secret of Wind and Birds, which opens with the sound of birdsong transcribed for ancient Chinese instruments, relayed via the audience's phones. As if that wasn't enough to tweet about, the concert also includes two premieres: brink by Alexia Sloane, a 2018 winner of the BBC Young Composer competition, and Pacific by the Concert Orchestra's own composer-in-residence, Dobrinka Tabakova (above).

Lauren Laverne

7.30am 6 Music

MARK PAPPENHEIM

I imagine the music writer and broadcaster Pete Paphides gets pretty fed up with being asked what it's like to be married to Caitlin Moran, author of How to Be a Woman. Now he's grabbed a bit of the limelight himself, with the publication of a memoir called Broken Greek - the title a nod to his family background. He joins Lauren Laverne to talk about the book, and it remains to be seen whether she asks him that question. simon o'hagan

Today's Choices

Drama: The Blackrock Girl

2.15pm Radio 4

Don't be sucked in by the cheerful Irish music that soundtracks this two-part drama by Lucy Gannon – it's not as cosy as it first appears. It opens as Finn (Fenella Woolgar) arrives in an Irish village to start a new life, after spending much of it travelling as a nurse for Médicins Sans Frontières – or so she tells her new neighbours. Father Ted's Pauline McLynn is a local shopkeeper who falls for Finn's wordly charm, but other locals are more sceptical. Soon the tale takes an almighty twist.

HANNAH SHADDOCK

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 4

Tonight's BBC Philharmonic concert contrasts two symphonic works premiered in London some 60 years apart: Dvorak's darkly dramatic Seventh Symphony, which the Czech composer conducted at St James's Hall, Piccadilly, in 1885; and Poulenc's typically sprightly Sinfonietta, a post-war pick-me-up commissioned by the BBC and premiered by the Philharmonia in 1948. In between, Macedonian pianist Simon Trpceski plays the sparkling showpiece concerto that Shostakovich wrote for his son Maxim to play on his 19th birthday. MARK PAPPENHEIM

11.30 Re-Enactment Radio

Antonia Quirke presents a programme which seeks to put right movie moments that seem to have gone wrong. In the desperate climax of Titanic, for example, could Jack, played by Leonardo DiCaprio, have survived if only Rose (Kate Winslet) had budged up on the large piece of wood on which she is floating in freezing water?

7/7. Herefordshire Interfaith Group on the Malverns. Clare Balding concludes a series of Ramblings in which she has walked with people and groups of many faiths and none to discover how being in the natural world can affect our inner life. Today she walks across a section of the Malvern Hills with members of the Herefordshire Interfaith Group. In a world that feels increasingly divided, this group draws together Muslims, Quakers, Buddhists, Bahá'ís, Methodists and more. It's a leisurely stroll, with many pauses to reflect and share readings on the themes of pilgrimage and nature.

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

It's A Fair Cop 11.30am Radio 4

After 18 years on the Humberside Police force, Alfie Moore (above) hung up his helmet to become a stand-up comedian and has successfully worked his way up the chortle ranks. He begins his fifth series for Radio 4 by asking the audience to join him in examining police complaints procedures - and, as always, their responses to genuine scenarios Moore has encountered fuel a good part of the show's gags. So which member of the public complained about our Alfie: an old man with the wrong documents, a deputy head wielding a sausage roll, a sex-offender late to sign in, or an affronted diabetic cyclist? JANE ANDERSON

The Science of Dad 11.00am Radio 4

Discussions around societal problems often focus on absent fathers and a lack of male role models, but there's little scientific research to back up such claims. Most science focuses on the mother. Now, though, studies are starting to reveal the impact of fatherhood on men and on their children. Oscar Duke, a doctor and new dad, explores how becoming a father changes a man, including hormonal changes bigger than puberty. DAVID CRAWFORD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Gary Robertson BBC Radio Scotland

Age 52 Current job Co-host of Good Morning Scotland (6-9am weekdays). CV Born and raised in

at Moray Firth Radio while at school, and was asked to sit in on the Saturday breakfast show: "I have a tape of it; I sound very squeaky and nervous." Got a full-time job there at 19, which included having to present the news. Then joined BBC Scotland as a producer, including on Good Morning Scotland. In 1994 moved to London to produce on 5 Live. Then freelanced as a presenter, returning to BBC Scotland in 1999 to present various news programmes and joined Good Morning Scotland in 2006. Best moment "The independence referendum in 2014. For three weeks we went on the road, touring the whole country, speaking to people. It was an interesting time, really quite exciting." Worst moment "Too many slips of the tongue, though not any James Naughtie moments! And one time the studio desk caught fire, everything went dead and we had a mad dash to find another studio."

Off air "I live in Glasgow, around ten minutes away from the studio, which is handy for 4am starts! I enjoy cooking, going to the cinema and running. I've lost count of the 10ks I've done."

First radio memory "When I was about ten I got a hi-fi for Christmas and I used to listen to Radio 2 and Radio 1 a lot. I really liked Noel Edmonds's Sunday morning show on Radio 1, with all the characters and funny voices."

Favourite broadcasters "Ken Bruce, he's so good at what he does. And Nicky Campbell, I loved his show on Radio 1 – maybe because he's Scottish! And I got to meet and work with him on 5 Live." Ambition "A cliché but, to keep doing my best every day. I enjoy it so much." Dream job "To be a chef. I enjoy eating nice food, the whole artistry of it. Or perhaps I could present MasterChef." Secret skills "I don't have one - I can't sing, I can't dance! I do cook a lot; I've pretty much mastered risotto. Though I'm not sure people who eat my food would say what I do in the kitchen is the most skilful..." DAVID CRAWFORD

Gary Robertson BBC Radio Scotland

Age 52 Current job Co-host of Good Morning Scotland (6-9am weekdays). CV Born and raised in

at Moray Firth Radio while at school, and was asked to sit in on the Saturday breakfast show: "I have a tape of it; I sound very squeaky and nervous." Got a full-time job there at 19, which included having to present the news. Then joined BBC Scotland as a producer, including on Good Morning Scotland. In 1994 moved to London to produce on 5 Live. Then freelanced as a presenter, returning to BBC Scotland in 1999 to present various news programmes and joined Good Morning Scotland in 2006. Best moment "The independence referendum in 2014. For three weeks we went on the road, touring the whole country, speaking to people. It was an interesting time, really guite exciting." Worst moment "Too many slips of the tongue, though not any James Naughtie moments! And one time the studio desk caught fire, everything went dead and we had a mad dash to find another studio."

Off air "I live in Glasgow, around ten minutes away from the studio, which is handy for 4am starts! I enjoy cooking, going to the cinema and running. I've lost count of the 10ks I've done."

First radio memory "When I was about ten I got a hi-fi for Christmas and I used to listen to Radio 2 and Radio 1 a lot. I really liked Noel Edmonds's Sunday morning show on Radio 1, with all the characters and funny voices."

Favourite broadcasters "Ken Bruce, he's so good at what he does. And Nicky Campbell, I loved his show on Radio 1 maybe because he's Scottish! And I got to meet and work with him on 5 Live." Ambition "A cliché but, to keep doing my best every day. I enjoy it so much." Dream job "To be a chef. I enjoy eating nice food, the whole artistry of it. Or perhaps I could present MasterChef." Secret skills "I don't have one – I can't sing, I can't dance! I do cook a lot; I've pretty much mastered risotto. Though I'm not sure people who eat my food would say what I do in the kitchen is the most skilful..." DAVID CRAWFORD

Age 52 Current job Co-host of Good Morning Scotland (6-9am weekdays). CV Born and raised in

at Moray Firth Radio while at school, and was asked to sit in on the Saturday breakfast show: "I have a tape of it; I sound very squeaky and nervous." Got a full-time job there at 19, which included having to present the news. Then joined BBC Scotland as a producer, including on Good Morning Scotland. In 1994 moved to London to produce on 5 Live. Then freelanced as a presenter, returning to BBC Scotland in 1999 to present various news programmes and joined Good Morning Scotland in 2006. Best moment "The independence referendum in 2014. For three weeks we went on the road, touring the whole country, speaking to people. It was an interesting time, really guite exciting." Worst moment "Too many slips of the tongue, though not any James Naughtie moments! And one time the studio desk caught fire, everything went dead and we had a mad dash to find another studio."

Off air "I live in Glasgow, around ten minutes away from the studio, which is handy for 4am starts! I enjoy cooking, going to the cinema and running. I've lost count of the 10ks I've done."

First radio memory "When I was about ten I got a hi-fi for Christmas and I used to listen to Radio 2 and Radio 1 a lot. I really liked Noel Edmonds's Sunday morning show on Radio 1, with all the characters and funny voices."

Favourite broadcasters "Ken Bruce, he's so good at what he does. And Nicky Campbell, I loved his show on Radio 1 maybe because he's Scottish! And I got to meet and work with him on 5 Live." Ambition "A cliché but, to keep doing my best every day. I enjoy it so much." Dream job "To be a chef. I enjoy eating nice food, the whole artistry of it. Or perhaps I could present MasterChef." Secret skills "I don't have one - I can't sing, I can't dance! I do cook a lot; I've pretty much mastered risotto. Though I'm not sure people who eat my food would say what I do in the kitchen is the most skilful..." DAVID CRAWFORD

Age 52
Current job Co-host of Good Morning Scotland
(6–9am weekdays).
CV Born and raised in

at Moray Firth Radio while at school, and was asked to sit in on the Saturday breakfast show: "I have a tape of it: I sound very squeaky and nervous." Got a full-time job there at 19, which included having to present the news. Then joined BBC Scotland as a producer, including on Good Morning Scotland. In 1994 moved to London to produce on 5 Live. Then freelanced as a presenter, returning to BBC Scotland in 1999 to present various news programmes and joined Good Morning Scotland in 2006. Best moment "The independence referendum in 2014. For three weeks we went on the road, touring the whole country, speaking to people. It was an interesting time, really quite exciting." Worst moment "Too many slips of the tongue, though not any James Naughtie moments! And one time the studio desk caught fire, everything went dead and we

Off air "I live in Glasgow, around ten minutes away from the studio, which is handy for 4am starts! I enjoy cooking, going to the cinema and running. I've lost count of the 10ks I've done."

First radio memory "When I was about ten I got a hi-fi for Christmas and I used to listen to Radio 2 and Radio 1 a lot. I really liked Noel Edmonds's Sunday morning show on Radio 1, with all the characters and funny voices."

Favourite broadcasters "Ken Bruce, he's so good at what he does. And Nicky Campbell, I loved his show on Radio 1 – maybe because he's Scottish! And I got to meet and work with him on 5 Live." Ambition "A cliché but, to keep doing my best every day. I enjoy it so much." Dream job "To be a chef. I enjoy eating nice food, the whole artistry of it. Or perhaps I could present MasterChef." Secret skills "I don't have one – I can't sing, I can't dance! I do cook a lot; I've pretty much mastered risotto. Though I'm not sure people who eat my food would say what I do in the kitchen is the most skilful..." DAVID CRAWFORD

Gary Robertson BBC Radio Scotland

Age 52 Current job Co-host of Good Morning Scotland (6-9am weekdays). CV Born and raised in

at Moray Firth Radio while at school, and was asked to sit in on the Saturday breakfast show: "I have a tape of it; I sound very squeaky and nervous." Got a full-time job there at 19, which included having to present the news. Then joined BBC Scotland as a producer, including on Good Morning Scotland. In 1994 moved to London to produce on 5 Live. Then freelanced as a presenter, returning to BBC Scotland in 1999 to present various news programmes and joined Good Morning Scotland in 2006. Best moment "The independence referendum in 2014. For three weeks we went on the road, touring the whole country, speaking to people. It was an interesting time, really quite exciting." Worst moment "Too many slips of the tongue, though not any James Naughtie moments! And one time the studio desk caught fire, everything went dead and we had a mad dash to find another studio."

Off air "I live in Glasgow, around ten minutes away from the studio, which is handy for 4am starts! I enjoy cooking, going to the cinema and running. I've lost count of the 10ks I've done."

First radio memory "When I was about ten I got a hi-fi for Christmas and I used to listen to Radio 2 and Radio 1 a lot. I really liked Noel Edmonds's Sunday morning show on Radio 1, with all the characters and funny voices."

Favourite broadcasters "Ken Bruce, he's so good at what he does. And Nicky Campbell, I loved his show on Radio 1 maybe because he's Scottish! And I got to meet and work with him on 5 Live." Ambition "A cliché but, to keep doing my best every day. I enjoy it so much." Dream job "To be a chef. I enjoy eating nice food, the whole artistry of it. Or perhaps I could present MasterChef." Secret skills "I don't have one - I can't sing, I can't dance! I do cook a lot; I've pretty much mastered risotto. Though I'm not sure people who eat my food would say what I do in the kitchen is the most skilful..." DAVID CRAWFORD and was asked to sit in on the Saturday breakfast show: "I have a tape of it: I sound very squeaky and nervous." Got a full-time job there at 19, which included having to present the news. Then joined BBC Scotland as a producer, including on Good Morning Scotland. In 1994 moved to London to produce on 5 Live. Then freelanced as a presenter, returning to BBC Scotland in 1999 to present various news programmes and joined Good Morning Scotland in 2006. Best moment "The independence referendum in 2014. For three weeks we went on the road, touring the whole country, speaking to people. It was an interesting time, really quite exciting." Worst moment "Too many slips of the tongue, though not any James Naughtie moments! And one time the studio desk caught fire, everything went dead and we had a mad dash to find another studio."

Off air "I live in Glasgow, around ten minutes away from the studio, which is handy for 4am starts! I enjoy cooking, going to the cinema and running. I've lost count of the 10ks I've done."

First radio memory "When I was about ten I got a hi-fi for Christmas and I used to listen to Radio 2 and Radio 1 a lot. I really liked Noel Edmonds's Sunday morning show on Radio 1, with all the characters and funny voices."

Favourite broadcasters "Ken Bruce, he's so good at what he does. And Nicky Campbell, I loved his show on Radio 1 maybe because he's Scottish! And I got to meet and work with him on 5 Live." Ambition "A cliché but, to keep doing my best every day. I enjoy it so much." Dream job "To be a chef. I enjoy eating nice food, the whole artistry of it. Or perhaps I could present MasterChef." Secret skills "I don't have one – I can't sing, I can't dance! I do cook a lot; I've pretty much mastered risotto. Though I'm not sure people who eat my food would say what I do in the kitchen is the most skilful..." DAVID CRAWFORD NABID to encourage us to garden with the environment in mind, there is one key element worth exploring – the Great British Lawn. Every weekend, mowers (often polluting) are hauled out of sheds to cut the green sward nice and short. Lawns are often also fed with chemicals, are watered and are generally monocultural, supporting little biodiversity.

SAY GOODBYE TO THE MOWER

Lawns are cheap and practical, especially in large gardens. But the smaller a lawn is the more impractical it becomes; it receives more wear and often ends up compacted in winter. How about liberating yourself from it altogether?

Try laying down a few stepping stones or a simple path or two, perhaps some gravel areas and, wait for it, wildlife-friendly plants such as small shrubs, flowering perennials, ornamental grasses and spring bulbs.

LET THE GRASS GROW

If losing the lawn altogether is a step too far, how about changing what you mow and your mowing regime? If you have a large garden, perhaps some lawn can stay more manicured near the house and allowed to grow long further away. The odd meandering path mown through it (maybe with a bench to draw the eye) can look great. The long grass can be cut at the end of summer. Over a few years wildflowers will appear or can be sown in and it will become a haven for wildlife.

LAWNS WITHOUT GRASS

Want a no-mow green carpet with plants? Here are some ideas for smaller gardens.

Camomile Ideal for a sunny spot, with a soothing aroma. C. "Treneague" is mat-forming so stays nice and dense. Good for light traffic only.

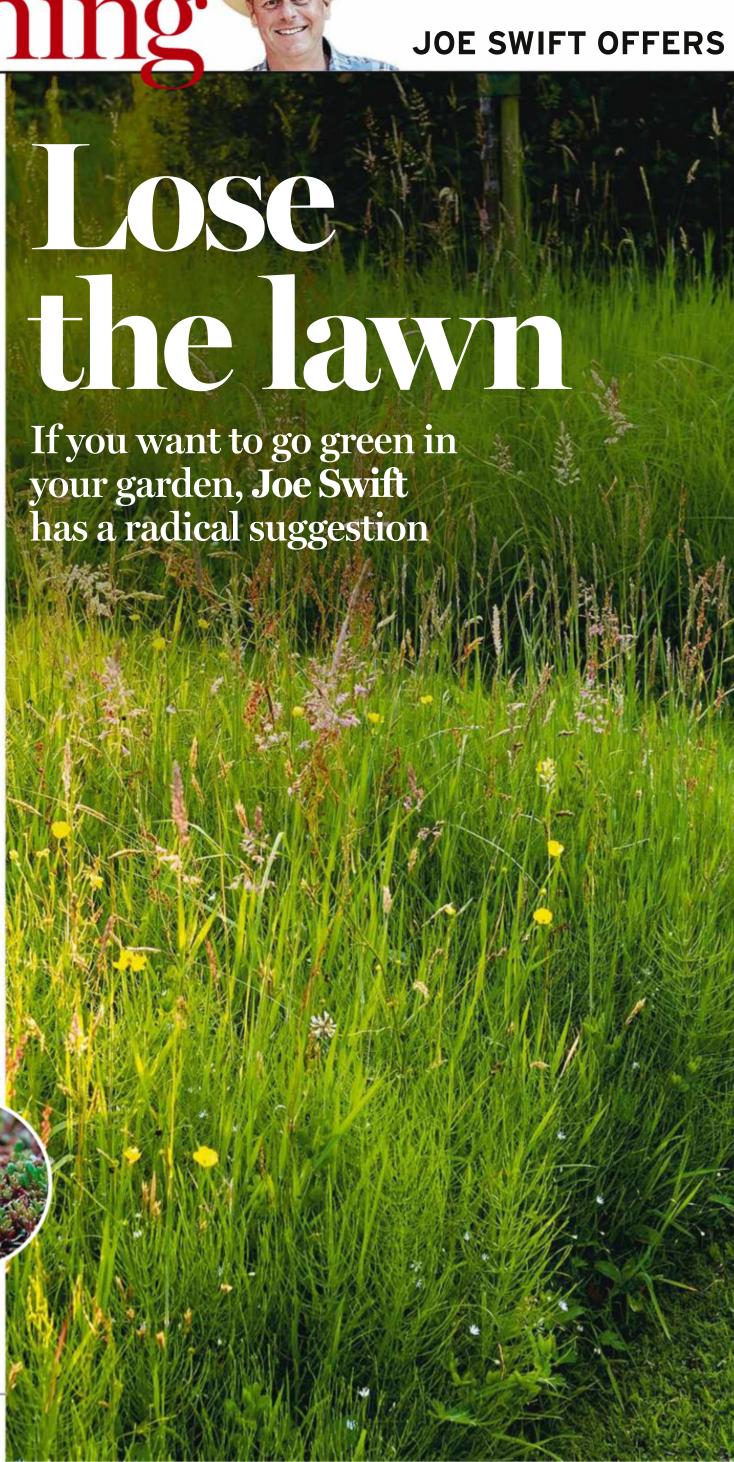

Creeping thyme A mixture of varieties, some with variegated aromatic leaves, create a tapestry effect. Light traffic. Sedum (right) can be bought on a roll ready to roll out on soil. It's made up of varieties that flower in summer, stay evergreen and grows almost anywhere.

Ornamental only.

Helxine Ground-hugging, and looks a little like fresh moss.
Good in sun and shade. But hard to get rid of. Ornamental only.

Acaena A low-growing mat-forming evergreen. A. saccaticupula "Blue Haze" is a good choice with small pewter-grey ferny leaves. It can cope with a degree of shade. Ornamental only.

Vibrant forsythia

UNIQUE DWARF FORSYTHIA

Buy one plant for £12 or buy three for £18 plus p&p* – half price!

Flowering in gardens now, "Minigold" is a unique dwarf variety of forsythia. Displaying a neat, compact habit, it is perfectly suited for pot centrepieces or gardens with less space, where its lovely narcissi scent can be enjoyed throughout spring. Growing to only 1.2m tall it will stay compact enough for the smallest of gardens. Supplied in a 9cm pot in 14 days.

Dwarf Forsythia Minigold x 1 £12 (RT13PF1)

Dwarf Forsythia Minigold x 3 £18 (RT13PF3) - half price!

DAZZLING DAHLIAS from £14.99 + p&p*

"Minigold"

With dazzling blooms from mid-summer to late autumn, these tuber-rooted perennials are great for adding late seasonal interest. They are large enough to use in a pot but equally perfect for plugging gaps in borders. Plant in full sun and free-draining soil. Supplied as bulbs in 14 days.

Radio Times has teamed up with Key Equity Release to produce a free guide to give you the information you need to start on your equity release journey. It's easier than ever to release tax-free cash from your home, and in a way that suits your needs. For more and more over-55s, their house is no longer just their home. Thanks to the flexibility of current equity release plans, it has become one way to help fund their retirement dreams.

WHY EQUITY RELEASE?

People opt for equity release for many reasons. For some, it's a simple matter of using the tax-free cash to clear an existing mortgage to free up their monthly income. Others use it to fund the things they've always dreamt of doing and now have the time to enjoy – whether it's holidays of a lifetime or exciting new experiences.

Equity release can also enable you to provide financial support to your family, contributing to their education costs or helping them to get a foot on the housing ladder. Home improvements are also right up there on the list of reasons why more people are choosing to access money from their homes.

Flexibility that puts you in control

Key Equity Release plans come with a wide range of features designed to give you greater flexibility and more control over your finances.

Key Equity Release plans involve a lifetime mortgage, which is a loan secured against your home. Now, with so much choice, might be the right time to release tax-free cash from your home.

Most Key Equity Release customers have received a fixed annual interest rate of 3.77% or lower. The overall cost for comparison is 3.95% APR. Now, you could access annual interest rates from as low as 2.73%, fixed for life with Key Equity Release*.

Cash when you need it

With every equity release plan, you can take an initial lump sum, or with a lifetime mortgage if you'd prefer to take smaller amounts out later on – as and when you need to – a drawdown plan might be suitable for you. Following the initial sum, the rest of the money you may release is kept in a cash reserve ready for you to access later.

Inheritance protection

Some of our plans offer a guaranteed inheritance feature, allowing you to protect a percentage of your home's future value for your loved ones. Key always encourage discussing your decision with family as equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits.

Downsizing protection

This feature is designed to give you peace of mind should you sell your home and move to a property that does not meet the lender's criteria. If it's five years after taking out your plan, you can repay in full without incurring an early repayment charge. Now, more than ever, there's no question that equity release is one solution that could help you fund whatever plans you have for retirement and in a way that meets your needs.

WHY CHOOSE KEY?

Key understands we all have questions when it comes to equity release. Key Equity Release advisers deliver expert advice that is unique to you and your needs, ensuring they find the right solution for you. If equity release isn't right for you, they'll tell you. Plus, unlike some advisers, all their equity release advice is free. So why not order your free guide today?

What's the point in saving?

Paul Lewis reports on the sorry state of falling interest rates for savers

ANY PEOPLE LIKE the safety of cash - it protects their savings from events like the recent fall in share values by 11% over five days - the biggest oneweek fall since the financial crash of 2008. Despite this, cash is hardly producing blistering returns.

Banks have been steadily cutting rates on our savings (as I write, the Bank of England has just cut interest rates again, to 0.25%) and in February, National Savings and

Move savings once a year to maximise your returns⁹

Investments slashed the interest paid on its most popular income bond to cut the income of nearly 200,000 savers by 39%.

The average amount saved in NS&I Income Bonds is just over £100,000. At the moment that is earning 1.15%, which is £1,150 a year. From 1 May, that will fall to 0.7% or £700 a year - a loss of £450 for its 181,000 customers. Cuts in other products have been slightly less - though generally, all are over 25%. In its three main savings products currently on sale, NS&I will take more than £120 million a year in interest from nearly two million customers.

Premium Bonds were also cut. The interest paid, which is used to form the monthly prize fund, is falling from 1.4% to 1.3% and the chances of a bond winning each month will fall from 1:24,500 to 1:26,000. The effect is that someone with the maximum £50,000 in bonds who now expects on average just over 24 prizes of £25 a year will in future get 23. The number of prizes of £50 and £100 have been cut in half, so the average wait for one, even with 50,000 bonds, will rise from 71 years to 77. The bigger prizes will still never be seen by most savers.

NS&I explained that it was following the banks as they cut their rates. It also stressed that savings up to any amount were safe, whereas only the first £85,000 was guaranteed if the worst happened and a bank went bust.

Currently, the best instant access rate is 1.3%, and 1.6% in one-year bonds. Use the impartial website savingschampion.co.uk to find the best deals – and move your savings at least once a year to maximise your returns.

Martin hired a car in Spain. He emailed with a familiar tale. "Dear Paul, the hire firm has claimed far too much money for damage we did not do, as shown by our agreed return Inspection Document of which we both have a copy. The firm is not answering any of our correspondence." Paul Lewis replies:

Any amount is too much to claim from you for damage you did not do! As this is a dispute in another European country you should contact the UK

European Consumer Centre run by the Trading Standards Institute. It can give individual advice by phone or email. The details are at ukecc.net. The UKECC website also has advice on how to protect yourself if you hire a car abroad.

If the firm persists, then you may be able to make a claim against your credit card company under s.75 of the Consumer Credit Act; if you paid by debit card, consider a chargeback claim against the bank – for details visit paullewismoney. blogspot.com and search "money back plastic".

Ainsley's Mediterranean Cookbook

Sunday 10.30am ITV

VERY TIME AINSLEY HARRIOTT cooks paella, he remembers a holiday souvenir that his mother proudly displayed on the kitchen cabinet when he was young: a replica of the Spanish rice dish with painted peppers and prawns. "Visitors would say, 'Ooh, what's that?" he recalls. "From a very young age I remember travelling abroad. All my friends at school thought my holidays were very posh because I went on planes, instead of to Blackpool or Margate. My dad was in showbiz – he was a pianist and entertainer – which meant we had a bit of money. So I was really lucky and it opened my eyes, especially in the food department, because they didn't adapt the flavours for tourists as they often do today."

Nowadays, many of us wouldn't think twice about hopping on a plane to Spain or cooking a paella at home, which is why Harriott decided to explore the far reaches of the Med in his latest cookery show. "Let's be honest, so much of the Mediterranean has been done," he says, "so I thought it would be nice to open it up and look at the islands and places that have influenced those countries."

His first port of call is the French island of Corsica, the aptly named Île de Beauté. Lying a few miles north of the Italian island of Sardinia, Corsica is the Med's most mountainous island with more than 200 beaches, crystal-clear waters, craggy peaks, excellent vineyards and historic towns. Its chief claim to fame is being the birthplace of Napoleon Bonaparte in 1769, shortly after France bought the island from the Italian city-state of Genoa. The French emperor never lost his Corsican accent and dreamt of independence in his youth. "If Napoleon had been born 15 months earlier, he would have been Italian and not French," notes Harriott.

'The real beauty of Corsica lies in the family restaurants'

"Corsica still has a local dialect that's closer to Italian than French. The Italian influence is evident when you look at the menus – stuffed pasta, risotto, rustic stews – but you can also find lovely boulangeries with home-made pastries. But the real beauty of Corsica, for me, was the fact that a lot of restaurants and hotels are owned by families."

Many Corsican dishes are flavoured by the wild herbs that grow on the maquis, the fragrant, flowery shrubbery that carpets much of the island and accounts for the island's other moniker: "the scented isle".

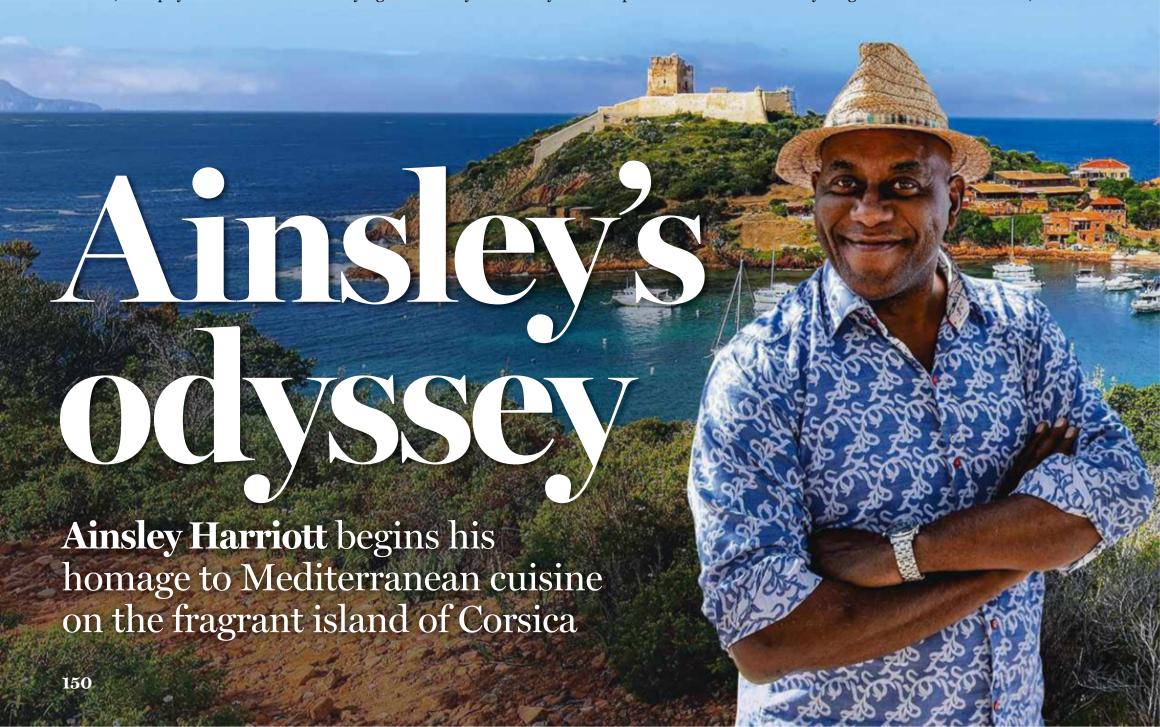

In Spain, he eats his away around Andalusia, which is famous for its Arabicinfluenced dishes, fried fish and seafood, and fabulous charcuterie. Harriott couldn't get enough of the melt-in-the-mouth slivers of jamón ibérico, which is a far cry from the packaged cured ham in British supermarkets. "The taste is just unbelievable. It lifts your spirits and lingers. That's what they do really well: good-quality food, whether it's wonderful hams or olive oils."

Seville's answer to fast food is serranito de lomo, a not-so-humble ham sarnie. "It's made with fried peppers, tomatoes and salty, seared pork tenderloin, and it's the don of sandwiches. When you bite into it, the juice trickles down your chin. Beautiful."

Seville is said to be where tapas was invented, but you'll wonder why its ubiquitous bars are empty if you like to dine early. "You go out at 7 o'clock in the evening and no one is in the restaurant. Go at 10 o'clock at night and places are full of families. I love the fact that they take their young children out with them, and when

in Jordan

The Nabatean

tombs of Petra

you talk to people about their food, they're always talking about their parents. 'My mum used to do this', or 'My dad used to cook that."

Surprisingly, Harriott's final destination is the Middle East, as he explores how ancient spice routes linking Europe and North Africa with Asia shaped Mediterranean cuisine. The highlight of his visit to Jordan wasn't the wholesome Levantine fare, delicious though that is, but visiting Petra, an abandoned city hewn out of mountains in the Wadi Rum desert. It was built by the nomadic Nabatean people some 2,000 years ago and lay at the crossroads of trade routes.

"It blows you away because you think, how did they have the engineering? How did they have the skills to be able to mastermind doing something like this? It is breathtakingly beautiful, and you could go off trekking for three days and find hundreds more amazing palaces and tombs."

N AN ERA when the most powerful man in the world is a former reality TV star, who can doubt that we live in the Age of Celebrity? Well, Greg Jenner does, for one. In his new book Dead Famous: an Unexpected History of Celebrity from Bronze Age to Silver Screen, the historical consultant to CBBC's award-winning Horrible Histories and presenter of the BBC podcast You're Dead To Me argues that, "After four years of research and 1.4 million words of notes, I am prepared to say that, in every single way, celebrity as a concept has been around for 300 years. It's been gaining pace and significance in society, but you can chart it all the way back to the

says Jenner, "were and still are made known to the public via media coverage, their lives are publicly consumed as dramatic entertainment, and their commercial brand remains profitable for those who exploit their popularity, including themselves." That is Jenner's working definition of "celebrity" – and the public historian is well placed to judge.

"I work with lots of famous people," he says.
"I've been at award ceremonies and things like that. I'm not hugely into celebrity culture, but there are a couple of people who are genuine heroes to me and I've stumbled over my words when I met them. One was Eddie Izzard, and another was Stephen Fry when I first worked with him, but he turned out to be everything I hoped he would be and more. Oh, and I once went round a corner and bumped into Scarlett Johansson, who's incredibly beautiful, and part of me was like, 'Oh my God, you really are a movie star.'

"I'm not a celebrity and wouldn't want to be," he adds. "I've had a taste of what it must be like and I really didn't like it. There was one instance when someone massively overstepped the line of acceptability and really upset me and my wife, and there was another time when I was going for some medical treatment and the nurse recognised me. It's nice and kind [when people recognise you], but if you want to be an anonymous patient at that point it's a bit odd."

'I've had a taste of celebrity and didn't like it'

The dark side of the fame game, it will come as little surprise, is nothing new. "It has always been quite high pressure," says Jenner. "There have always been stalkers and violence and people really struggling [with the effects of it]. I'm not sure there was ever a golden era where it was kinder or better, but we now live in a culture where it's 24/7 and we're all hyper-aware of everything that everyone is doing at all times, and that can certainly make things worse."

presenter Caroline Flack is a case in point. "My initial reaction was sadness, it's a horrible story... I went to write a few tweets, but then deleted them. On the one hand I've written this book all about celebrity culture, and we need to talk about this stuff, but then I thought, 'No, I'm going to wait, respect her family, respect their loss.' It's impossible to predict the future, that's not what historians do, but my fear is that it might keep happening.

"The TV companies clearly have a responsibility to look after the mental wellbeing of the people who go on a show, because the press are never going to not talk about celebrities or stop covering their lives because – as the book shows – it is part of our culture. But we all have to be more compassionate and find a way to recognise when people might be going through some really tough stuff."

Word of the Week - mumpsimus

"Mumpsimus" is a 500-year old epithet for someone who insists that they are right, despite clear evidence that they are not. The term originated in story about a priest who kept > tripping up while reciting the post-communion prayer. The prayer includes the line Quod ore sumpsimus, Domine ("What we have received in the mouth, Lord"), but the priest accidentally substituted the non-existent word "mumpsimus" for sumpsimus. He was corrected, but responded that he would not change his old mumpsimus for his critic's new sumpsimus.

The story was picked up by many in the 16th century as an example of those who refused to accept reality. In 1530, William Tyndale complained that those trying to find reasons to annul Henry VIII's first marriage were "all lawyers, and other doctors, mumpsimuses of divinity".

LETTER OF THE WEEK

The A-team's A-team

The Heat Is On: Sport Relief (11 March BBC1) was a moving account of how the celebrities battled with the heat of the desert and their own doubts and anxiety to highlight the work supported by the charity. We salute them.

However, wherever the celebrities go, there's someone there with a camera and a sound recorder to capture it. The film crew, too, have to battle with the elements and cope mentally and physically, not to mention taking all the scenic shots that so expertly give us a feel for the inhospitable terrain. What challenges did they face with all that sand getting into their kit! Let's also salute their exceptional work.

A CRUEL TRADE

I was incredibly moved and upset by Tigers: Hunting the Traffickers (4 March BBC2).

.....

Our inhumanity to these animals is heartbreaking. Tigers desperately need a champion as brave as Aldo Kane.

Elaine Unwin Reigate, Surrey

A QUALIFIED HIT

Noughts + Crosses (Thursday BBC1) has great acting and interesting themes that make you think. Punchy, pacey, full of intrigue and based on the writing of Malorie Blackman, the great children's author of her generation, what's not to like?

Having read the original book, I understand why the characters were made older for the TV adaptation, but I think it was a mistake, as their perspectives enriched the story. I also wish the series could have been shown when more young people, the book's intended audience, could see it, instead of at 9pm on a schoolnight. Maybe the Doctor Who slot on a Sunday?

Jennifer Shelden Orpington, south-east London

A POTTY DECISION

Who had the bright idea to ask The Great Pottery Throw Down contestants to build a functioning loo (4 March More4)? Ludicrous! I am a potter myself and have never built a loo. Neither has any studio potter I know. Lavatories are made in a production pottery, in moulds, not by hand. And as for plumbing them in – it's like asking a florist to throw the pot to put their flowers in.

The programme is great, so please don't spoil it, More4, by being too clever.

Barbara White Wiggaton, Devon

VANCOUVER ON MY MIND

I was enthralled by James Taylor's Great American Songbook (Radio 2) and enjoyed his interview with Paul Sexton in RT (14 March). However, Taylor did not mention the vital part he played in the launch of Greenpeace.

He performed at a benefit concert in Vancouver in October 1970 that raised enough money to charter a fishing boat, renamed Greenpeace, to sail to Amchitka island in Alaska in a bid to stop US nuclear testing. The voyage raised worldwide awareness of the issue and the publicity generated may well have influenced the US government's decision to cancel future tests there.

Mike Pender Cardiff

KING PREDATOR

Having set the scene explaining his childhood obsession in The Real T Rex with Chris Packham (5 March BBC4; first shown on BBC2), Chris Packham presented a fascinating, fresh look at the giant predator.

What made it such great TV was the enthusiasm of the contributing scientists, palaeontologists and CGI artist – even though I couldn't envisage T rex sporting a shaggy mane, I was riveted.

Maryann Welsburg Brighton, East Sussex

A NEW PERSPECTIVE

In The Stakeout, the final episode of the excellent Inside No 9 (9 March BBC2), I noticed that Steve Pemberton's character was looking through his binoculars the wrong way. Was there some meaning to this, to indicate that he should be looking behind him? Or was it just to provoke someone (like me) to write a letter to Radio Times? I can't believe it wasn't deliberate...

David Bloomfield Maidstone, Kent

FORGOTTEN GEM

So, a big feature about the wonderful Nicola Walker (14 March) – and no mention of River? How could you! Written and directed by the equally wonderful Abi Morgan and starring the also wonderful Stellan Skarsgard, it was a truly stand-out series.

Sandra Kremer Woking, Surrey

CAPITAL DRAMA

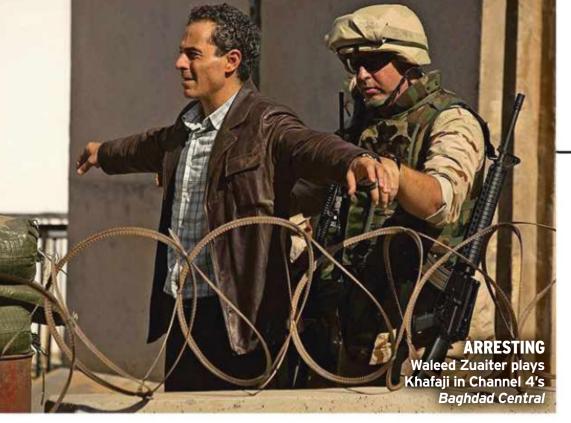

I'm surprised that there hasn't been more praise for Baghdad Central (C4), which was really excellent.

The central performance by Waleed Zuaiter was mesmerising, and deserves an award. He conveyed real emotion and engagement, without any histrionics.

The other actors were totally convincing, too, particularly Corey Stoll as Captain Parodi. And the settings created the atmosphere of occupied Iraq with such realism that you could almost feel the heat and dust amid the rubble. To see it all through the eyes of an Iraqi rather than Westerners was enlightening.

Having since read the novel by Elliott Colla that the series was based on, it's clear just how much the TV scriptwriters added, while still keeping the plotline clear. Scope for a second series? I certainly hope so.

Graham Hamblin Bromyard, Herefordshire

THE FUTURE IS NOW

We're going through troubled times at the moment. Has anyone else noticed a similarity between what we're experiencing now and Russell T Davies's excellent 2019 drama series Years and Years?

Sometimes when a news item comes on, we expect to look across the room and see the grandmother, Muriel (played by Anne Reid), watching television with us.

Shirley and Ivan Fowler

Rugeley, Staffordshire You can still watch the entire series of this dystopian drama on iPlayer. It will be available for another 11 months.

A QUESTION OF IDENTITY

How are Kian Madani (Ramin Karimloo) from Holby City (Tue BBC1) and Marty Kirkby (Shaheen Jafargholi) from Casualty (Sat BBC1) related? Marty said they were cousins – but isn't he Iranian and Kian Italian?

Joan Watson

Chesterfield, Derbyshire RT has had it confirmed by both Casualty and Holby City that Kian and Marty's mothers are sisters - and while Kian is Iranian Canadian, Marty is Iranian British. Mystery solved.

HUMAN RACE

What a joy to see Race across the World (Sunday BBC2) back on our screens. The diversity of the contestants makes such fascinating viewing as their trials, tribulations and adventures unfold over the weeks.

DIGNIFIED DOCUMENTARY

Lost Lives (7 March BBC2/16 February BBC1 N Ireland), about the victims of the Troubles, was one of the finest and most poignant documentaries I have ever seen.

Whether it was the stories of children and their parents, or the man who cradled a dying RUC officer, each account was handled with the utmost sensitivity and dignity. The footage of the sea and beautiful landscape acted as solace amid often unbearable tragedy.

> The documentary came, fittingly, a few weeks after the death of MP Seamus Mallon, a courageous peace> > maker of immense humanity. I would urge anyone to also read his memoirs, A Shared Home Place.

A KIND QUIZZER

I was sad to hear of the death of Dave Rainford.

DAVE RAINFORD 1968-2020

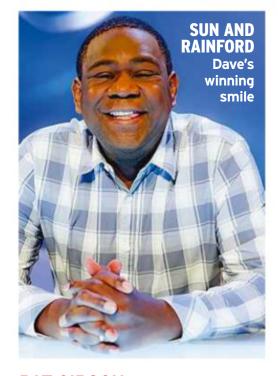

'He was the cheeky chappie of the team'

Fellow Eggheads pay tribute to "Tremendous Knowledge" Dave

Dave Rainford of BBC2's quiz show Eggheads died recently, at the age of 51, and we've rounded up some tributes to this all-round good Egg...

KEVIN ASHMAN "Dave quickly became a key member of the Eggheads line-up. He had an instantly winning combination of a naturally cheery personality and great modesty. Dave was a top quizzer, but took a self-deprecating approach to his nickname 'Tremendous Knowledge'. He established himself as the cheeky chappie of the team, and his friendliness made him a real favourite with teams who came to play against us, and with the public. I'll remember the occasions when we were the last Eggs standing after end-of-series parties: just the two of us having a meal at 5am."

STEVE COOKE "I felt an affinity for Dave right from the off. Maybe it was the fact that we were both northern and loved Manchester United. Perhaps that's what made me request his help during my heat and semi-final of Make Me an Egghead. Of course, he answered both questions put to him correctly. During his illness, I visited him and we'd talk on the phone. Dave could talk for England. I lost count of the times I ended up eating cold food after he finally hung up. But I'd eat cold dinners for the rest of my life if it meant we could have him back."

PAT GIBSON "Dave and I were big NBA fans. On a rest day from filming, we attended a basketball game at the home of the Glasgow Rocks and were lucky enough to be introduced to the players. Later, our taxi driver turned out to be a former member of the pop band Marmalade, to Dave's delight: sport and pop on the same outing."

CHRIS HUGHES "Despite being in a lot of pain with his mobility problems, in 2017 he made the effort to travel to Crewe, just to spend the evening having a curry and a few beers, so I wouldn't be alone on my 70th birthday."

JUDITH KEPPEL "I shall miss David so very much. My abiding memory of him will be his great big laugh. Such a lovely man."

BARRY SIMMONS "I am simply devastated at the passing of my good friend. Dave had a rich, resonant voice and a wonderful turn of phrase that made him a joy to be with. He bore his last painful years with so much courage that I always felt humbled. He was truly loved by so many people, which is the true measure of the man."

LISA THIEL "When Dave played Derek Jacobi in a celebrity Eggheads, he nervously asked what he should call him and was delighted with the response, 'Just call me Del Boy.' Dave lost, but was far too made up to care. Dave was one of only five Eggs to pull off a singlehanded victory when the rest of us had all got knocked out. He loved life and made it so much richer for everyone he met. And he had incredible generosity of spirit. He was always the first to congratulate you when you won and console you when you lost. Always the Egg who bought chocolates for the crew."

BETH WEBSTER "He never failed to be supportive. He'd leave me voice messages to say I'd been great even when the opposite was apparent. He lit up a room with his infectious laughter and massive personality. He was incredibly generous with his knowledge and his time and nothing you ever said was stupid in his eyes. I will miss him so much. A little bit of joy is now missing."

episode of McDonald & Dodds, Wilderness of Mirrors, referred to as the "13th" step when it was, in fact, the one for the word "11th". The two are completely different.

This was a fundamental part of the storyline, yet it would appear the production team didn't take the time to ensure the correct outline was used.

Helen Walker Winchester, Hants A production spokesperson replies: "Our writer and script team checked multiple sources for the shorthand, but creatively we also wanted to reflect the panic and fear that a drunken Jane is feeling as she writes this message. The messiness of the scrawl is also part of the reason Dodds doesn't immediately recognise it as shorthand, and it takes one of his classic library research visits to come closer to the solution. We hope that you still enjoyed the story!"

Helen Walker wins series nine of Call the Midwife. To order your copy for £14.99 $incl p \mathfrak{S}p (RRP)$ £19.99), call 0844 848

RYLAN CLARK-NEAL

'I miss feeling normal'

Britain's most ubiquitous presenter on the pitfalls of reality TV

Where do you watch telly? In my kitchen. It's where I film Celebrity Gogglebox with my mum.

What's usually on your TV? Keeping Up Appearances or Birds of a Feather. That's me sorted.

You don't watch reality TV? No, I don't. I worked on Big Brother for seven years, but reality TV's not reality any more – there are always producers getting involved, telling people what to do, and set-up shots. That's not me.

You rose to fame on The X Factor. Does reality TV look after people well enough?

I'm not the best person to ask -I was one of the lucky ones. I didn't have that moment where it all stopped. But I understand how it can really affect people. In your own head you go from being the most-talked-about person in the country to nothing.

You now host your own show on Radio 2 and present Strictly: It Takes Two and The One Show. Was any of it planned?

No, I didn't plan anything. I went from this kid on The X Factor to growing up overnight. I had two choices - go out and get p or put my head down and go to work. I went to work.

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY SINGLE Two Become One by the Spice Girls. They were genuine icons to me when I was growing up.

MY WORKOUT I've got a gym in my home but I've only been in there once for a Lucozade.

MY RADIO STATION I thought I was too young for Radio 2, but I tried it and they play songs I know!

Along with Madonna, Cher and Cheryl, you're a one-name celebrity - do you enjoy that? I don't love being famous. I'm very lucky that people know who I am but I do miss feeling normal, walking down the street or sitting in a restaurant.

You're very recognisable...

I'm 20ft tall with the biggest teeth in Britain. A hat does nothing for me. I couldn't hide unless I was wrapped up in a blanket and being wheeled along on a cart. But it's part of the deal. You've sold your soul really.

But you love working with the public! I know, look at my roster of shows: Ready Steady

Cook, Supermarket

Sweep... I love it because I'm a member of the public, I just happen to be on telly. I'll always see myself like that. They're perfect shows for me. I don't leave work worrying about someone's welfare or that they didn't win the money.

Is that important?

Yes. It's not life-changing money, it's the experience people come for. I leave work pleased that I've met a contestant and they've had a fantastic time. My shows are warm, there's never any malice.

And your new show, You Are What You Wear?

That's working with the public, too. It's an easy way to show people how to dress if they've had a baby or have been going through a bad time. I'm not a stylist, I'm there to hold the pants, but it's a nice show.

Why have you been successful when others haven't?

I think I'm nice to work with. I don't care if you're my runner or the head of a channel, I'll value your opinions the same. I come from a normal background and I haven't got time for hierarchy. That's the key to success: be nice to people. MICHAEL HODGES
