A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

RT is here for you

WE ARE LIVING in extraordinary times. As we all spend far more time at home than we ever imagined possible, all of us here at Radio Times are very aware of two things.

Firstly, in times like this we appreciate the role broadcasting plays in our national life. It's not just vital for communication, but also essential to keep us entertained and informed at a time of national need. Which means that at Radio Times this week, more than any other week, we understand that our role as your trusted guide to the very best programmes on British TV and radio is more important than ever.

So in this issue we have done our level best to deliver a magazine that picks out not just shows worth watching and listening to on your favourite television channels and radio stations, but we also cast an eye further afield. Because this week we have gone in search of the hidden gems in the world of digital entertainment that all of us, with a little extra time on our hands, are free to explore. To find out more, turn to our new Streaming section starting on page 36.

Secondly, we understand that, with so many of us confined to our homes, it may be more difficult for you to get hold of your copy of Radio Times. So, we're here to help. There are three easy ways to guarantee you receive RT in the weeks and months to come.

HOME DELIVERY Many newsagents will deliver copies to your home, or they'll reserve a copy for you if you are able to go out.

BECOME A REGULAR SUBSCRIBER

We run offers to our subscription service, which is usually only available on direct debit. You will find a card on page 15 with our current direct debit offer on it.

BECOME A TEMPORARY SUBSCRIBER

We are aware that some people don't like taking out direct debits, so for the next 12 weeks, we will deliver your Radio Times to your door, for the usual price and without a direct debit. You can cancel your copies at any time, and we will refund the price of the copies you don't receive. Which we think you'll agree is a simple, no-strings way to get your Radio Times delivered to your home. You can find details of this offer on page 42.

We hope you enjoy the issue. But most important of all, we wish you well. See you next week.

Editors, Radio Times

PS We are sorry to say that the current health crisis has meant we have decided reluctantly to cancel the BFI & Radio Times Television Festival. For those who booked tickets, details of how to claim a refund are on page 32.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

SIMON ARMITAGE

‘Succession has been the latest binge-watch in this house – every character is so brilliantly and engrossingly hideous, it’s unmissable,’ says the poet laureate. ‘If I could have designed a radio network to cater for my personal tastes, 6 Music would have been the result. I listen to Tom Ravenscroft’s Friday-evening show without fail, usually on a Saturday morning, then again during the week in the car or the train.’

Me and my shed – page 114

SARFRAZ MANZOOR

‘I’m watching The Trip to Greece,’ says the writer. ‘The locations have changed with each series, as have Steve Coogan’s hairstyles, but thankfully the competitive Michael Caine impressions have not. I’m also watching the final series of Homeland. I have watched and loved this from the start. It’s a strange world when I watch Homeland for some light relief from the real world...’

KEEP CALM AND CARRY ON WATCHING...

The UK may be in crisis, but the BBC has plans to keep our spirits up

CHARLOTTE MOORE, THE BBC executive charged with keeping a country in isolation comforted and stimulated through the medium of their television set, has turned to Lord Reith, the founder of the BBC, for inspiration.

As the coronavirus outbreak brought much of the TV industry to a standstill in just a few turbulent days, the corporation's director of content said: "We have lots of programmes already made and we will ensure that our channels and iPlayer continue to provide a rich offering that will inform, educate and entertain audiences."

It's a moment for the BBC, already facing a fight for its own life, to reassert its importance in the life of the nation. But it's going to be a monumental challenge.

"We are doing all we can to keep our programmes going," says Moore. "A number of producers have consulted with us and decided to postpone filming on a range of shows, which we fully support, as the duty of care to cast and crews is our priority."

NO DRAMA

Those dramas where filming has been suspended include Line of Duty, Peaky Blinders and Baptiste.

Cast and crew on all the BBC's continuing dramas have also been stood down indefinitely. The biggest of those, EastEnders, will from this week show two episodes a week in order to ration the 20 or so episodes it currently has in the can (Coronation Street is being scaled back to three episodes a week). It gives them three months' breathing space, but then what?

Dramas that will be coming to your TV screen soon include Killing Eve, plus adaptations of the David Nicholls novel Us and Normal People by Sally Rooney.

STILL LIVE

Shows filmed with audiences have been particularly badly hit, though Question Time is pressing on without an audience and, from Thursday 26 March, will be broadcast from the same central London location, rather than touring the country. It will, however, go out live rather than "as live", as previously, and in an 8pm slot for the time being.

Fiona Bruce says: "There'll be no studio audience for obvious reasons but we know that hearing from politicians and experts and scrutinising their decisions will be more important than ever to our audiences during these difficult times."

The One Show is also continuing on air, but with a virus-skewed change of emphasis. From now, there will be health and wellbeing advice, plus tips on eating well and keeping fit.

We also understand that producers of The Graham Norton Show are working on a new format that reflects the likely unavailability of star interviewees and the absence of an audience.

FAITH IN TROUBLED TIMES

With our daily routines abandoned and the pace of life slowing down, the BBC believes we will have more time to reflect. As a consequence it will launch what it calls a "virtual" Sunday morning church service across local radio

TO THE RESCUE
Clockwise from above: Killing Eve; "virtual" church led by the Archbishop of Canterbury; Fiona Bruce and Question Time; and Graham Norton stations in England, led initially by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Justin Welby. Subject to what they call “outside broadcast capacity”, they also aim to show a Sunday-morning service on BBC1, while exploring how in the future to connect with those of other faiths.

THE HUB

House in Portland
Place, London

A SUMMER TO REMEMBER

While broadcasters wrestle with the issues of schedule tweaking, looming ahead is a massive programming vacuum created by the cancellation of events like the Chelsea Flower Show and, critically, the Euro 2020 football tournament. To give you an idea of the challenge they face, in 2016 the BBC broadcast 140 hours of football coverage, matched in scale by ITV. That could mean we see more repeats in future.

NEWS UPDATE

Radio 4's World at One host Sarah Montague has been broadcasting the programme from home, but the BBC says its main TV newscasters like Huw Edwards and Sophie Raworth will continue to broadcast from the studio. And they're presenting to record audiences. The 6pm News on 18 March was watched by 8.7 million viewers – the most in more than a decade.

HEAD TO THE ARCHIVES

BBC iPlayer is dusting off a bunch of popular, though not necessarily calming, dramas and comedies. New box sets about to be made available include Spooks, The Missing, Wallander and French and Saunders. See our new Streaming pages on page 36. TERRY PAYNE

Viewpoint

What's on the box? Lots!

RT is here to help us all make sense of a new world of choice, says John Sergeant

AT THE AGE of 75 I find myself in the group that will be spending more time at home than we had previously planned. I had been looking forward to watching more television, but I have an admission to make. I'm not absolutely sure what's on.

This is almost entirely my own fault. There has been an explosion in streaming and catch-up programmes and I cannot say I have adapted to the different ways of enjoying this golden age of television.

But if we are going to sit out the coronavirus crisis in front of our TVs, then I really do have to work harder at planning my viewing.

Many years ago, in a BBC television comedy called On the Margin, I appeared as a bossy channel controller, whose choices determined the evening viewing of millions of people. The other character in the sketch was the Archbishop of Canterbury, played by Alan Bennett. The joke lay in the idea that the head of the Church of England had considerable influence, but nothing like the enormous power of a BBC channel controller. How things have changed!

The new technology is having a profound effect on what we watch and when we do so. Until quite recently a glance at the listings would be enough; most of us would decide to stick with what was offered, rather than go to the bother of using video recorders or checking what was available on catch-up.

As for radio, we would be even more likely to listen to one channel, and if we didn't like what they were offering simply switch to another. Now, to get the best out of increased choice we have to engage in much more complicated planning and research.

The growing importance of the BBC iPlayer and Sounds are merely one part of a streaming revolution that has spread to all the other channels; big new outside players, particularly Netflix and Amazon, have invested vast sums to provide ever-increasing competition.

I'm still getting used to the idea that instead of listening to what's being broadcast on the radio, I could choose a podcast. Old habits die hard. But many younger people are totally used to a plethora of choice. To them, five-channel TV and you just watch what's on is as old-fashioned as wartime rationing.

But right now, with the possibility of weeks of self-isolation ahead for many older viewers, the radical changes to our broadcasting system may have come just in time. The cornucopia on offer should provide us with better programmes (although it doesn't always work out that way). At any given time of the day we now have access to thousands of hours of media material. Some of it is of the highest possible quality. But how can we find what we want, and will it suit the other people who may be watching with you?

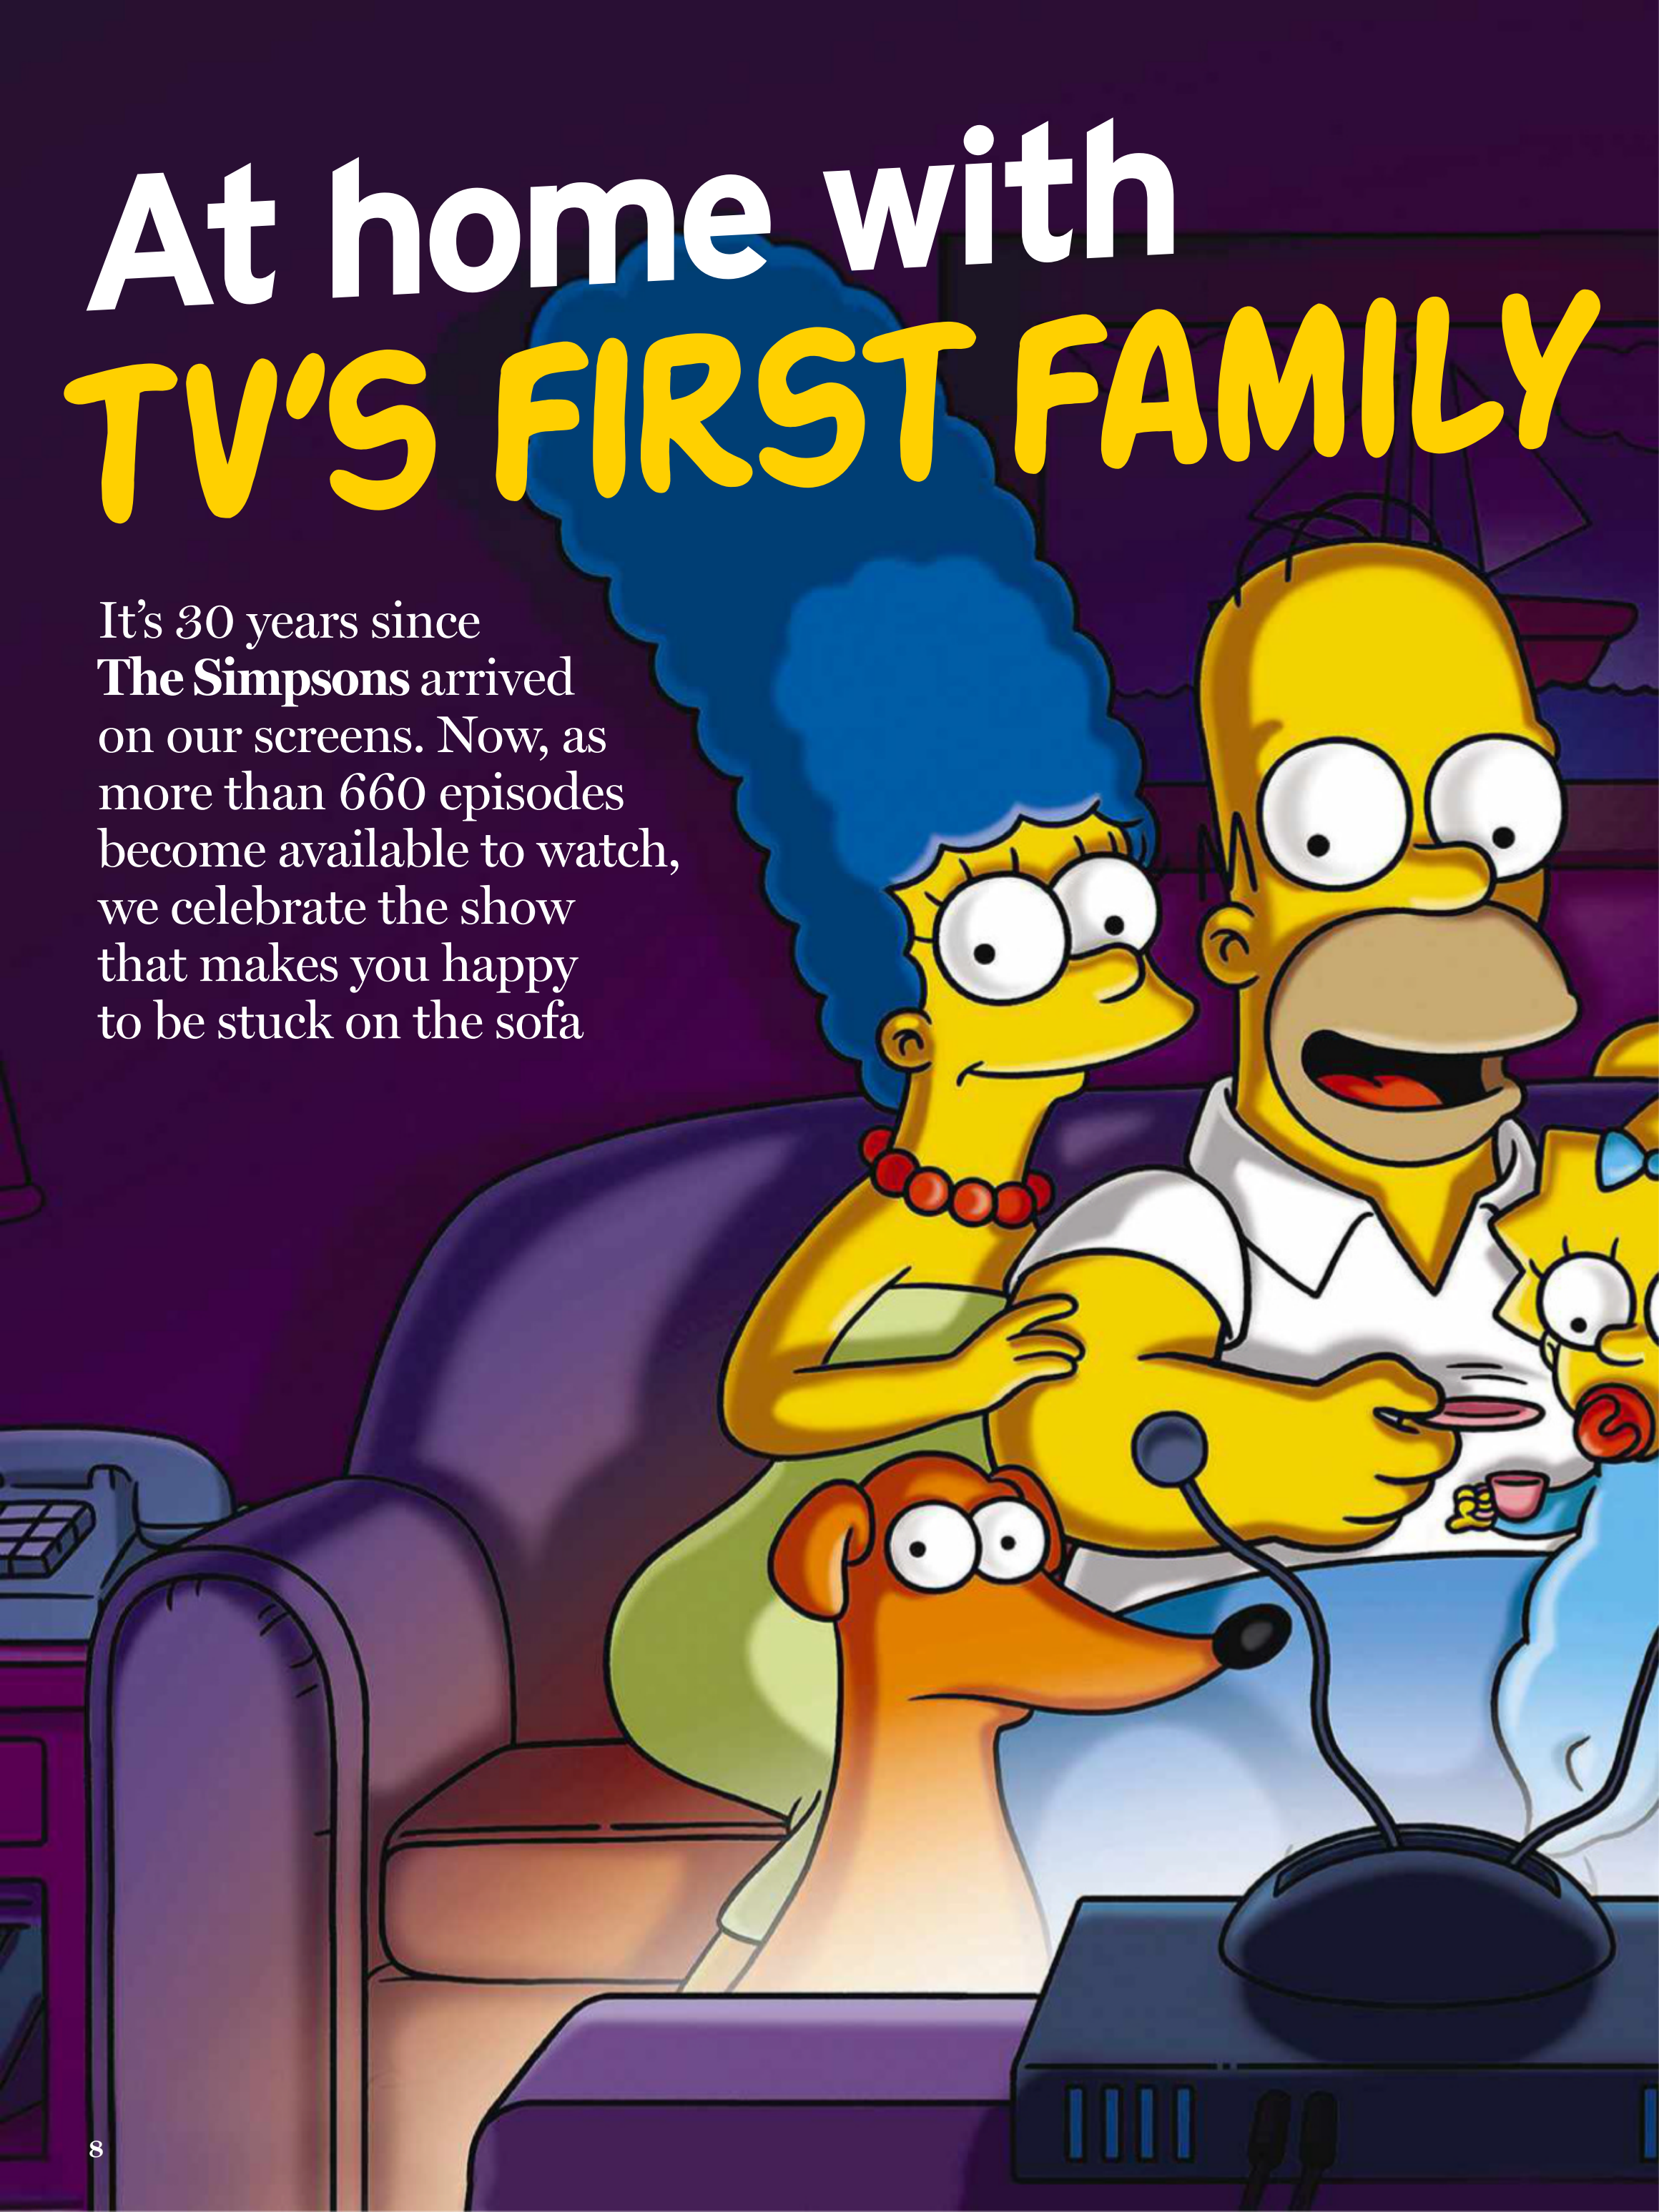

THE TRUTH IS that extra choice is more bewildering. There are no longer those benevolent controllers on whom we could rely to supply high-standard impartial news, information and entertainment. I end up being constantly frustrated by programmes that promise a lot but turn out to be mere dross.

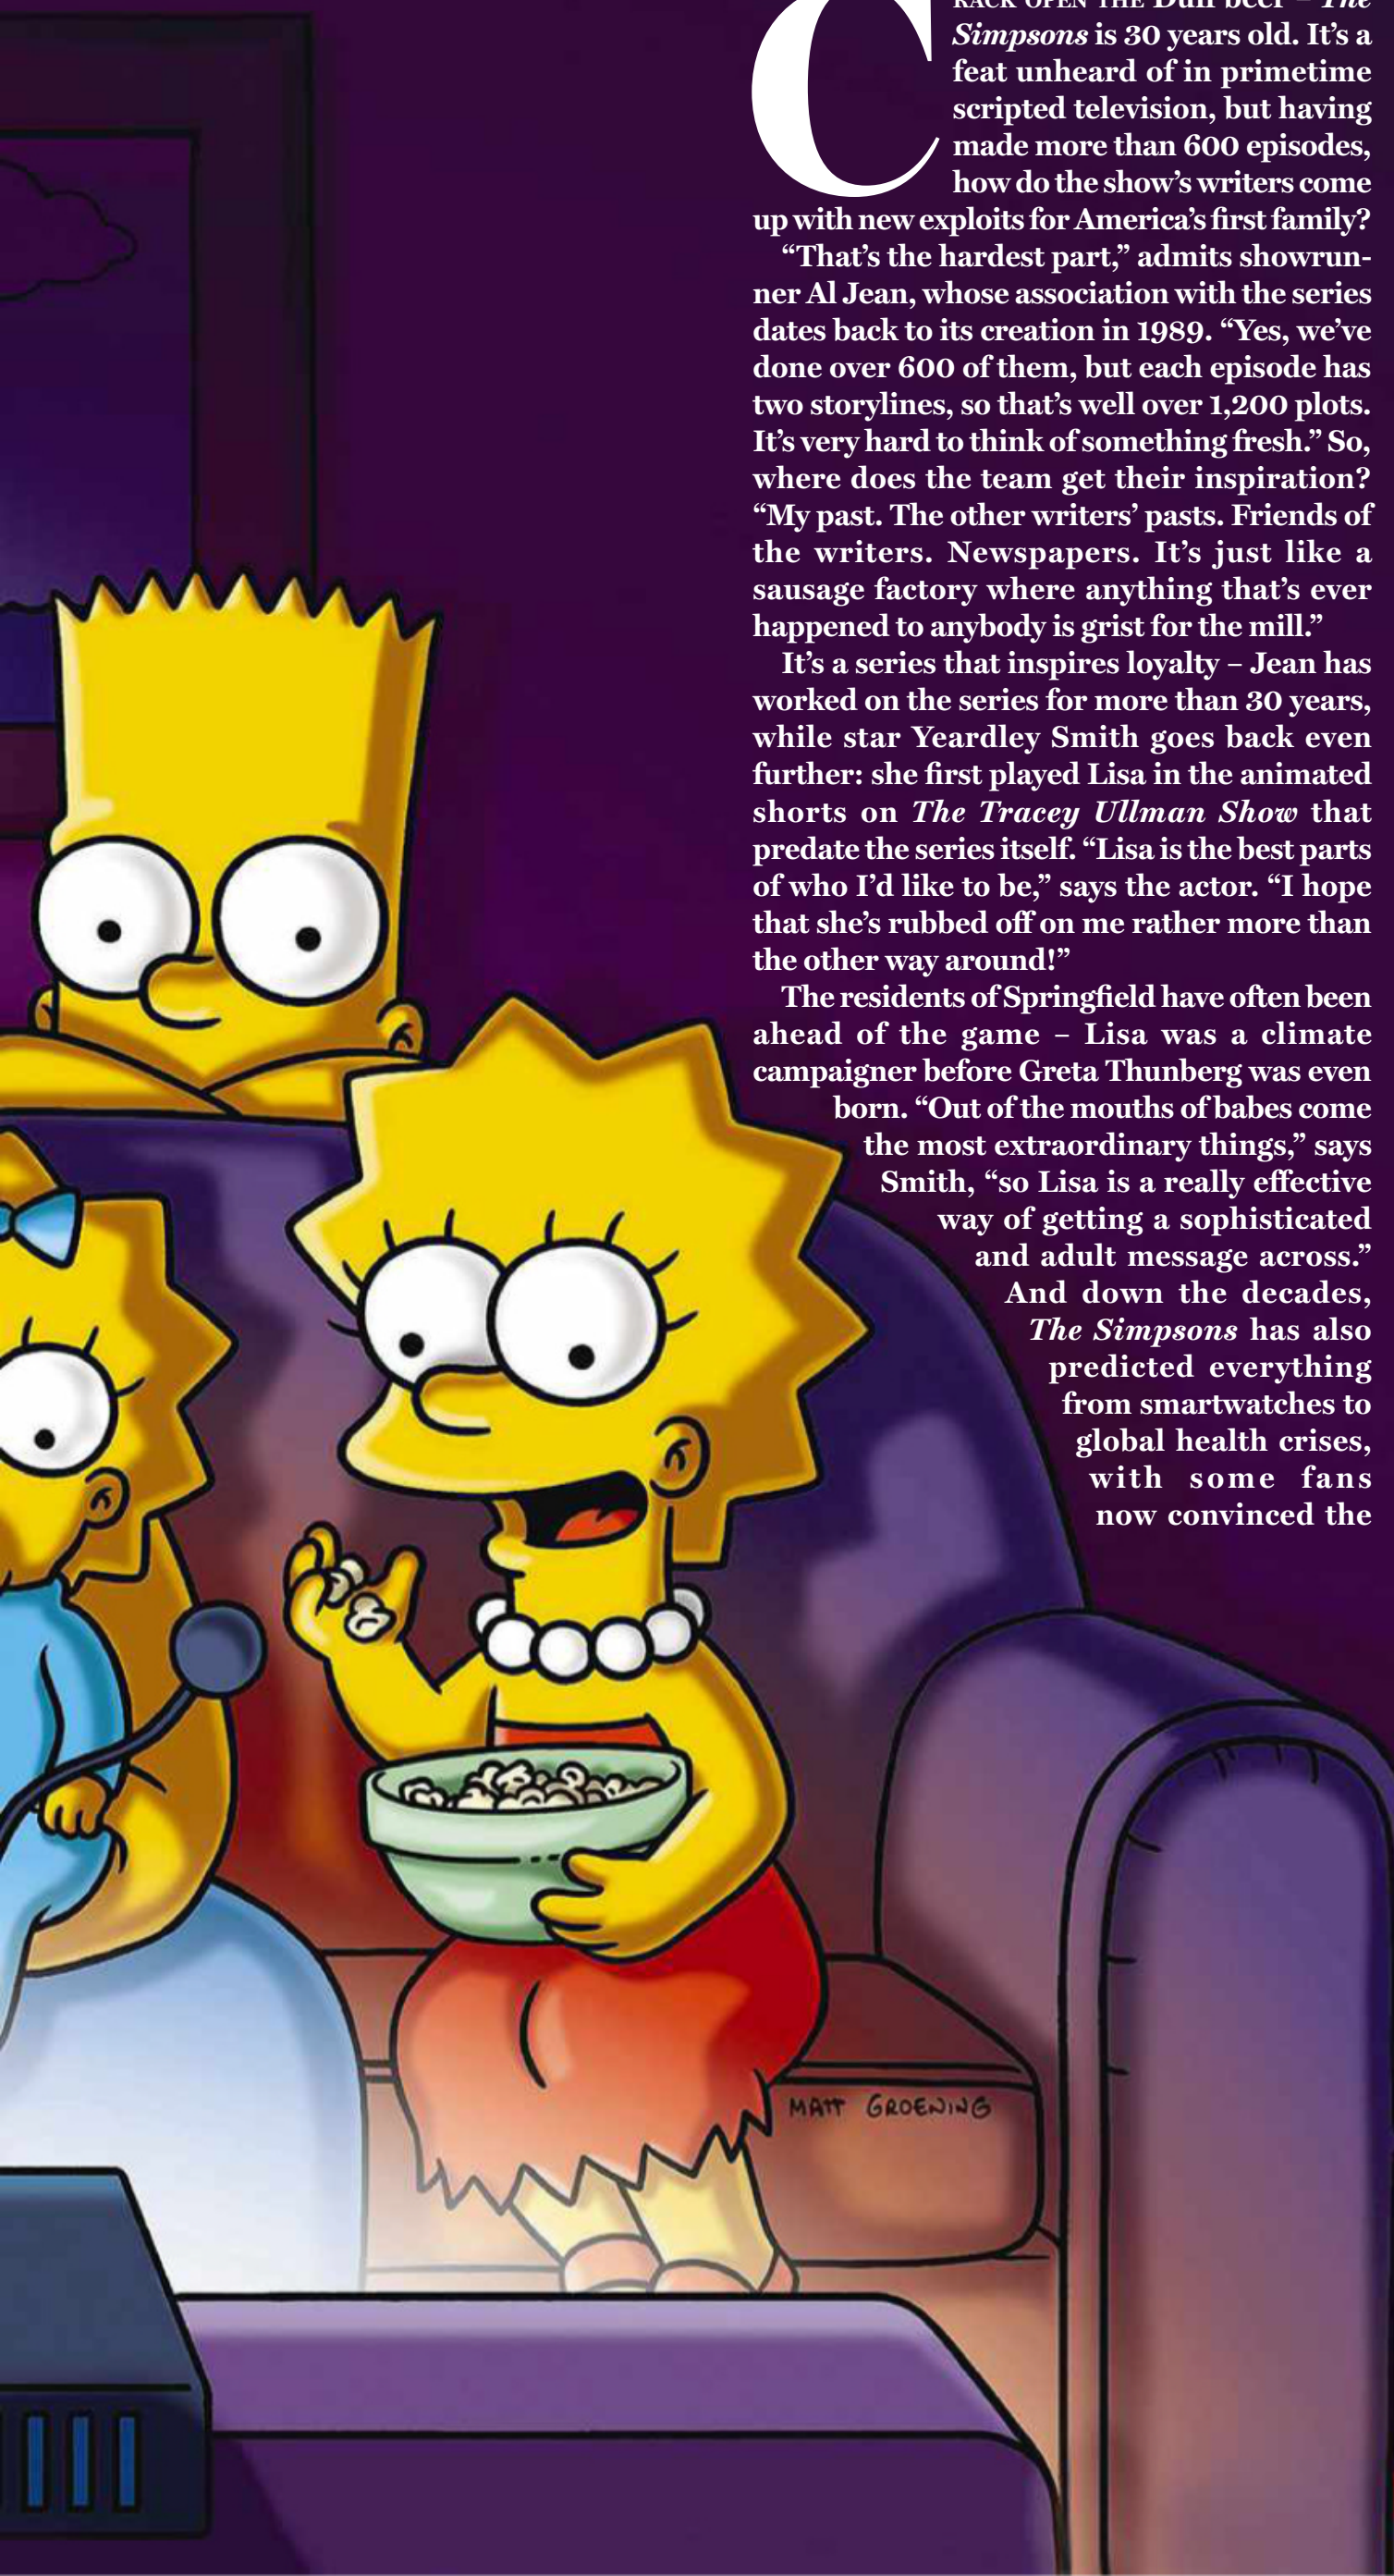

There's no point in trying to buck the trend. It would be absurd to suggest that what we really need is less choice. But we could do with better guidance on what's worth watching. Which is why I'm delighted that this issue of Radio Times features a new, five-page Streaming TV section that will make the new broadcasting world much more navigable. Apart from anything else, I want to make sure that we have enjoyable evenings in front of the television. There's going to be quite a few of them! Now turn to page 36.

John Sergeant was the BBC's chief political correspondent and ITN's political editor

At home with TV'S FIRST FAMILY

It's 30 years since The Simpsons arrived on our screens. Now, as more than 660 episodes become available to watch, we celebrate the show that makes you happy to be stuck on the sofa CRACK OPEN THE Duff beer – The Simpsons is 30 years old. It’s a feat unheard of in primetime scripted television, but having made more than 600 episodes, how do the show’s writers come up with new exploits for America’s first family?

“That’s the hardest part,” admits showrunner Al Jean, whose association with the series dates back to its creation in 1989. “Yes, we’ve done over 600 of them, but each episode has two storylines, so that’s well over 1,200 plots. It’s very hard to think of something fresh.” So, where does the team get their inspiration? “My past. The other writers’ pasts. Friends of the writers. Newspapers. It’s just like a sausage factory where anything that’s ever happened to anybody is grist for the mill.”

It’s a series that inspires loyalty – Jean has worked on the series for more than 30 years, while star Yeardley Smith goes back even further: she first played Lisa in the animated shorts on The Tracey Ullman Show that predate the series itself. “Lisa is the best parts of who I’d like to be,” says the actor. “I hope that she’s rubbed off on me rather more than the other way around!”

The residents of Springfield have often been ahead of the game – Lisa was a climate campaigner before Greta Thunberg was even born. “Out of the mouths of babes come the most extraordinary things,” says Smith, “so Lisa is a really effective way of getting a sophisticated and adult message across.”

And down the decades, The Simpsons has also predicted everything from smartwatches to global health crises, with some fans now convinced the scriptwriters even foresaw the coronavirus epidemic. Which clearly is wishful thinking, born of a deep attachment to a show that inspires more loyalty among its adherents than a minor cult. Some critics, though, say the show has lost its edge: is there now a cosiness over at 742 Evergreen Terrace that wasn’t evident in those scabrous early years?

“We still court controversy,” insists Jean. “We did a song a year ago about upstate New York that got us into a little trouble [lyrics included: “Start watching Fox News/Stop watching your weight/There is no fancy part of it/Upstate New York!”]. But what’s happened is that, in the time we’ve been on air, animated shows that are more adult have come along. So, we’re seen as being more mainstream than we were at the beginning, even though we haven’t changed what we do.”

Jean feels that there’s plenty of life left in The Simpsons yet. He still has eye on high-profile guest stars (“We’ve talked about Harry and Meghan. I hear she wants to do voiceover work. So if they’re reading this, give us a call”) and he’s more than happy to pledge his own future to the series: “In ten years’ time, I hope I’ll still be here, doing the same thing. Kids are discovering the show all the time, which I feel is down to [creator] Matt Groening’s original designs. The fact that the Simpsons are yellow means that a kid today can relate to it in the same way a kid from 30 years ago did. It’s not of any era or any specific ethnicity. It’s a generalised cartoon family, which means it works in many cultures and times.”

THE HOPE NOW is that viewers will also be eager to revisit classic seasons on Disney+, in the same way Netflix subscribers have with Friends. “I think the 90s were a happier era, so that’s why people like to look back at The Simpsons and Friends. It was also the last time that you had shows with an unfragmented audience getting a huge number of viewers.”

He’s not wrong when he talks of The Simpsons once having mass appeal. In its 90s heyday, episodes hit a peak of 33 million viewers in the US (in 2020, the average is more like eight million). The characters’ perceived dysfunction also attracted the ire of the country’s elite, with former president George HW Bush famously remarking in a speech in 1992 that America’s families needed to be “a lot more like the Waltons and a lot less like the Simpsons”. But despite it no longer being the ratings juggernaut it once was, Jean believes the show still speaks to its fans.

“What people respond to is the fact that though the forces arrayed against the little person are immense, the Simpsons themselves get by because of the love of family. That message works no matter what country the audience is in. The key to the show is that, even though Homer gets mad at Bart, he loves him. That’s the secret.” DAVID BROWN

30 Simpsons secrets

How did Homer get his name – and his catchphrase? And what's the secret message in his hair? The show's stars and creators reveal all

1 If the producers had their time over again, they'd reconsider the voicing of Indian store owner Apu, played until earlier this year by Hank Azaria, Al Jean tells RT. "If we were casting the character now, we'd cast someone who was ethnically correct to play Apu. The way we always wrote him, though, was as a hardworking, thoughtful family man who was smarter than everyone else in Springfield. The majority of the jokes were about Springfield not appreciating what a gem he is. So we're proud of him."

2 How have technological advancements aided production? "We can do editing of the audio at home, we can storyboard on a tablet, but the whole process still takes around eight months. Because while the colouring is done on computers, it's not a computer-generated image – it's generally all hand-drawn on to the screen," says Jean.

3 They draw the characters onto a screen because: "The cellulose that the artists used to paint on stopped being made," explains Yeardley Smith (aka Lisa Simpson). "The artists work in the same way, but in a different medium. What speeds the process up is the fact that the backgrounds can be replicated. If a scene takes place in the living room, you can computer-generate that, because it stays the same."

4 All the cast record their lines at the same time, like a sitcom as opposed to an animation. "We do it together, which is quite unusual. Other animated shows have actors recording separately," Smith reveals. "Hank Azaria has now moved to New York, so he won't be in the studio, but me, Dan [Castellanata], Julie [Kavner], Nancy [Cartwright], Harry [Shearer] and Chris [Edgerly] will all get together at 20th Century Fox. The reason is because James L Brooks, who originally developed the series, has a background in sitcoms. He said, 'You're all having a conversation as a family, so of course you'll be together.'"

5 Recording each episode in this way has been streamlined so it now only takes five hours. Says Smith: "We used to start at 10am and it wouldn't be unusual for us to finish at 7pm, which is a very long time to record a half-hour show. And the script was being rewritten throughout the day. Now that doesn't happen. These days, we do a table read with the cast at one end of a conference table and the writers at the other. Based on how that goes, they'll do a rewrite and then we'll record that episode ten days later in a session that lasts from 10am until 3pm. We do each scene four times, then the production team cuts together the best parts of that recording session. Dialogue will be rewritten as the episode is animated over the next eight months, so we can be called back to re-record lines."

6 The show's most popular character is Homer, but this wasn't always the case. "At the beginning, Bart was the most popular," says Jean. "He was the breakthrough character. But as the writing staff got a little older, they started writing more for Homer. So he's now the most famous symbol of the show. But the great thing about The Simpsons is that it works regardless of your age. Even if you're a crazy old man like Grandpa, there's a character for you."

7 The show predicted Donald Trump's presidency 17 years before he took office. In a 2000 episode, Lisa becomes Commander-in-Chief and comments, "We've inherited quite a budget crunch from President Trump." Creator Matt Groening explained that: "Trump was the most absurd placeholder joke name we could think of at the time."

8 Despite the Trump prophecy, the writers tend to shy away from topicality. "We once had a joke about the Soviet Union and by the time the colour animation had come back, the Soviet Union had broken up. So we had to change it. Because of that, we decided that the comedy had to be timeless," says Jean. "It means that a kid today can watch an episode from the first season and still find it funny."

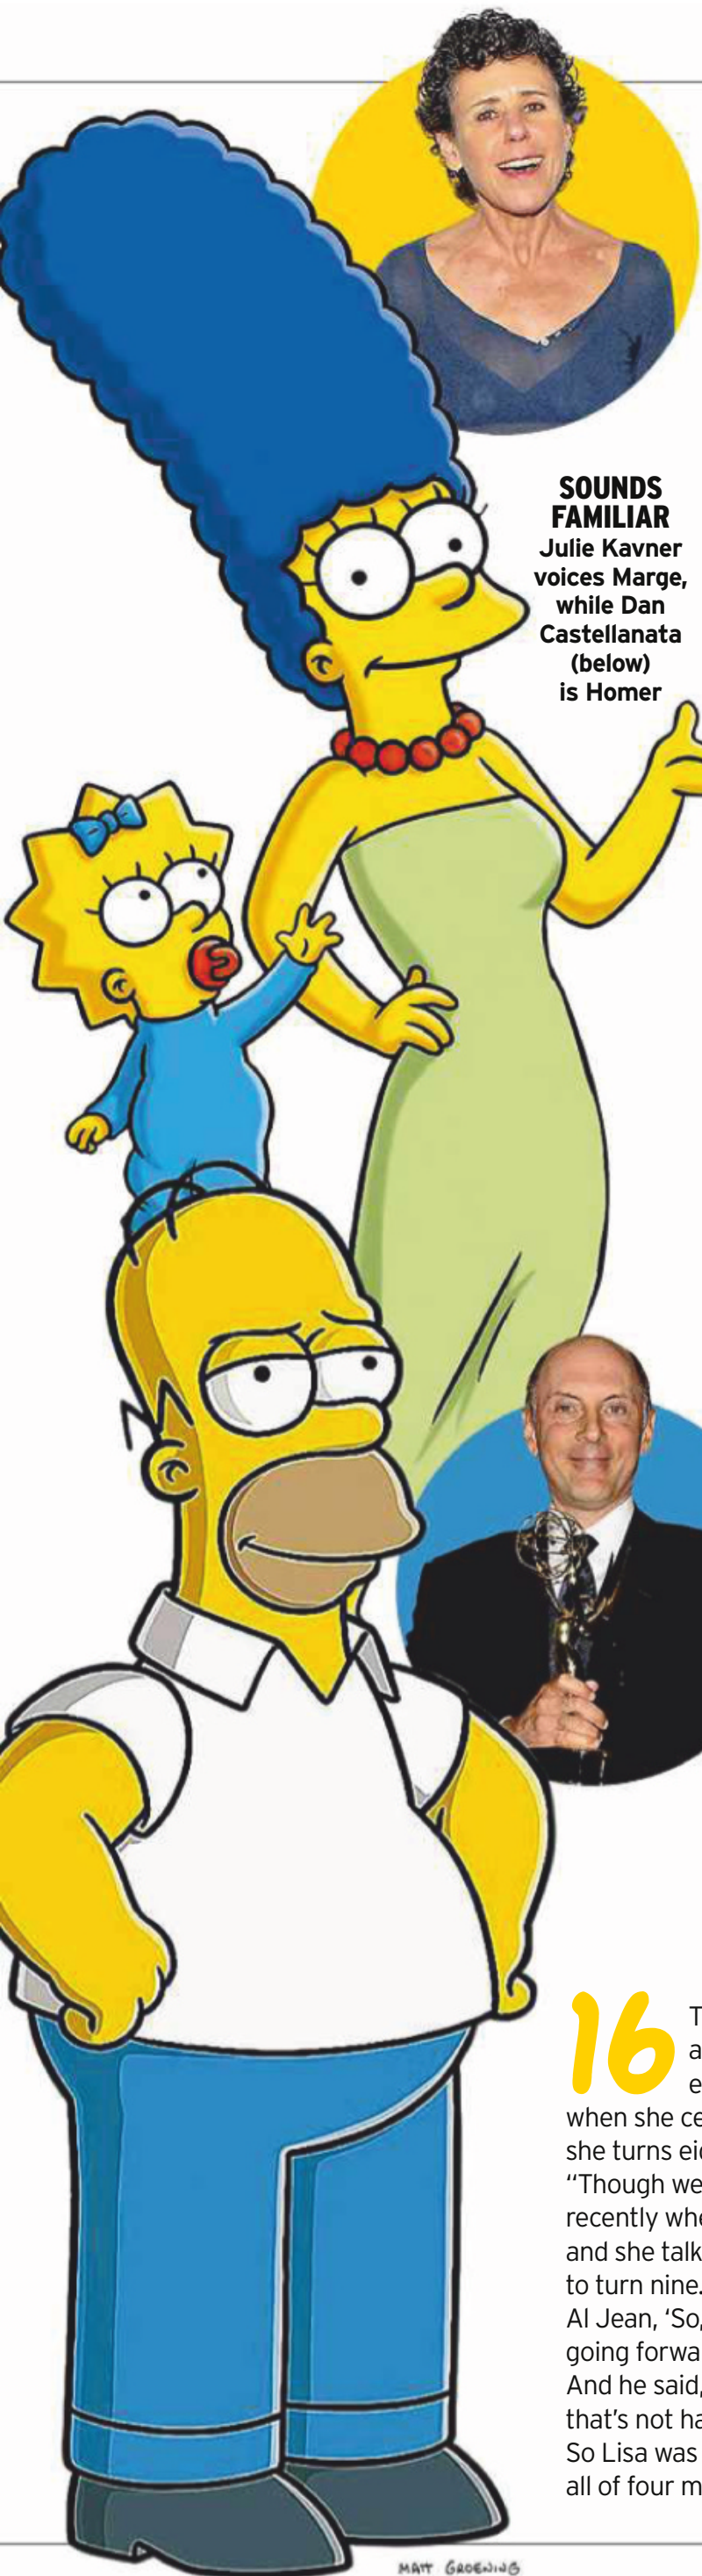

9 Lisa Simpson has become a gay icon. "Lisa means so much to LGBTQ viewers because the character has often felt like an outsider. Fans have come up to me and said, 'You really got me through a hard time in my life when I didn't know who I was,'" Smith says. "It's an extraordinary perk of the job to have this effect on strangers who find the work meaningful."

10 Jean has his favourite guest stars: "Kelsey Grammer has always been fantastic," says Jean. "The late Phil Hartman was great, as was Anne Hathaway." But there have also been some duds: "José Canseco [the baseball player] – he was not good."

11 Fans may love the inventiveness of the ever-changing opening couch gag, but it serves a practical purpose, too. The reason why they vary in length from short to elaborately long is because the writers sometimes need to fill out an episode's running time to the standard 22 minutes.

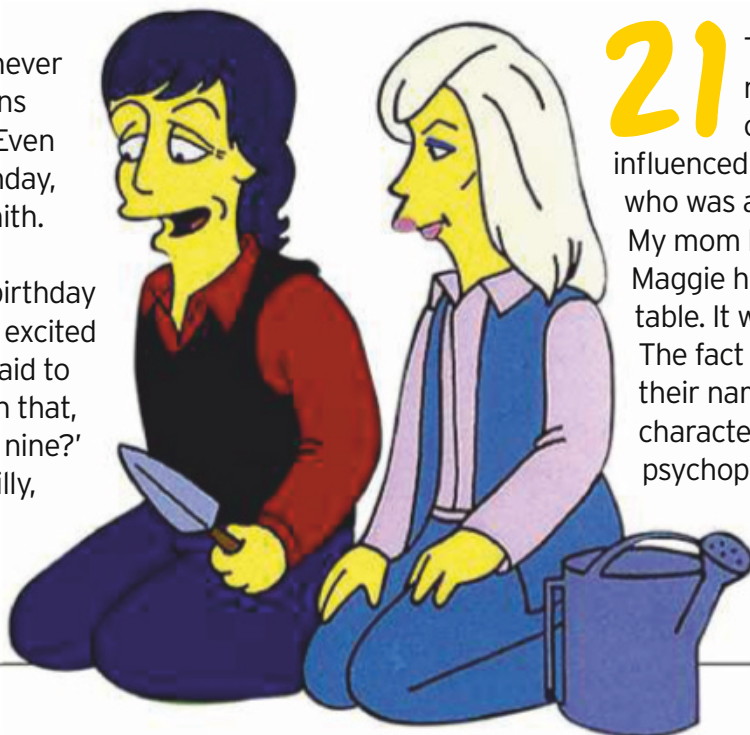

12 It's not just voices that celebrities lend to The Simpsons. Elusive artist Banksy stirred up controversy in 2010 when he created an opening sequence for the show [above right] that featured an Asian sweatshop where workers were tossing cats into a wood chipper in order to make stuffing for Bart dolls. "This is what you get when you outsource," said Jean.

13 Why are the Simpsons yellow? Groening explained the colour choice to RT, saying, "At first I was a little hesitant and then I thought, 'If the show turns out to be a hit, when you're flicking through channels on your remote control and you go by this flash of yellow, you'll know you're watching The Simpsons. And so we'll stand out from everything else.'"

14 The show was an instant hit. "As soon as the first episode aired, I'd be wearing a Simpsons jacket and people would be coming up to me and offering to buy it," says Jean. "It became a phenomenon very quickly. And the fact that it's sustained is really rare – we're now the longest-running primetime scripted show by a wide margin."

15 Paul McCartney famously made a guest appearance in an episode that saw Lisa stop eating meat. But his cameo [below, alongside his late wife Linda] came with one stipulation, as show consultant David Mirkin explains: "When I asked him to do the vegetarian episode, he agreed but made me promise to keep Lisa as a vegetarian – and I was happy to comply, because I'm a vegetarian, too. Every time I see him, he always checks – and he's always surrounded by nine or ten lawyers, so it's quite frightening!"

16 The characters never age. "Lisa remains eight years old. Even when she celebrates a birthday, she turns eight," laughs Smith. "Though we did an episode recently where Lisa had a birthday and she talked about being excited to turn nine. Afterwards, I said to Al Jean, 'So, does this mean that, going forwards, Lisa is now nine?' And he said, 'No, don't be silly, that's not happening'. So Lisa was nine for all of four minutes."

21 The origins of the Simpsons' names come from Groening's own family: "I was greatly influenced by my father, Homer Groening, who was a film-maker and cartoonist. My mom Margaret and my sisters Lisa and Maggie had a lot of verbal wit at the dinner table. It was very competitive to be funny. The fact that there is a TV show in which their names are attached to these crazy characters totally makes sense within the psychopathology of the Groening family." Groening was originally going to give Bart the name Matt, but eventually decided on an anagram of "brat". ▷

17 Back in 2003, the writer Matt Selman penned an episode entitled The Dad Who Knew Too Little, in which Homer gave his email address as ChunkyLover53@aol.com. Before transmission, Selman signed up for the ChunkyLover53 email account, and within minutes of the episode being shown, his inbox was overloaded and at its 999-message limit. "Many, many, many women sent messages to Homer that were designed to make him, uh, stray from his rock-solid marriage to Marge," he revealed.

18 One episode that won't feature on Disney+ is Stark Raving Dad, which featured a guest appearance by Michael Jackson. Following the accusations of sexual abuse made against the singer, it's been withdrawn from circulation. "I'm against book burning of any kind. But this is our book and we're allowed to take out a chapter," said Simpsons co-creator James L Brooks. Regarding the decision, Al Jean told RT: "I agree with the decision to withhold it."

19 Brooks negotiated a provision in the contract with the Fox network that prevents the studio from interfering with content in The Simpsons. Hence the regular digs against Fox News, including a slogan on a helicopter that read "Fox News – not racist, but #1 with racists."

20 When the series started being made in high definition back in 2009, the writers found that the new image quality offered opportunities for even more comedy. Says Jean, "The moment of realisation came when we had this scene set in a bookstore and the director said, 'You've got 500 books visible on the shelves. Do you have titles for them?' And we didn't. HD meant that we had to get used to this entirely new visual format."

D'oh!

22 Even though Groening didn't give his own name to Homer and Marge's son, he's managed to ensure that his initials appear in every episode. Take a look at Homer's face and you'll notice that the single strand of hair by his temple is the letter "M", while the shape of his ear forms a "G".

25 Homer's "D'oh" catchphrase is written in scripts as "annoyed grunt". Voice artist Dan Castellanata was attracted to the "Doooooh!" noise that Laurel and Hardy foil Jimmy Finlayson used to make in the movies and was encouraged by Groening to speed it up.

28 It's one of the most famous TV themes of all time, but Danny Elfman says it took him just three days, two hours, 48 minutes and 19 seconds to compose. And he freely admits that the three notes he sings at the beginning made him a very wealthy man. "That kept me in health insurance for 25 years," he says. "I thought the show was going to run two or three times and disappear forever."

23 Trying to explain the series' global fame to RT, Groening once joked: "We expected it to be a success in the United States: they're idiots, right? But overseas people are sophisticated. The fact that The Simpsons has resonated so much may be because other people like seeing stupid Americans. Maybe that's the secret."

26 In 2012, Groening revealed that Springfield was named after a town in Oregon. The location had been the subject of much debate, seeing as Springfield's geography features deserts, farmland and even mountains. Groening must have thought twice about his revelation, because a week after the interview was published, Bart's chalkboard gag in the intro saw him writing, "The true location of Springfield is in any state but yours."

29 You'd have thought that celebrities would be queuing up for a guest role, but The Simpsons has hit the odd casting hurdle. "Jon Bon Jovi supposedly wanted to do the show, so we wrote him a part where he was in a plate of spaghetti and meatballs. And he turned it down. So we had singer-songwriter Jackson Browne do it instead – he was great!" reveals Jean.

24 Nancy Cartwright had planned to audition for the role of Lisa, but found herself being drawn to the description of the more rebellious older brother: "For Bart it said, 'Ten-year-old school-hating underachiever and proud of it.' Now if you had to choose between an eight-year-old child and what I just said, which would you rather do? So I read for the part and that was it – they hired me on the spot."

27 Ricky Gervais wrote and starred in an episode in 2006 [pictured left], and found the experience overwhelming: "When I first went into comedy, it had always been my ambition to get a joke on The Simpsons. And here I was, writing an episode. The way I see it is that The Simpsons is the greatest TV show of all time. All I could do was make it slightly worse."

30 There's no end in sight just yet, but Al Jean does have plans for a finale: "In my mind, the last episode should go back to the first episode with the Simpsons getting ready for that Christmas pageant. So the whole show is a continuous loop without a beginning, middle or end. We're a show that goes back to square one every episode, so it'd be weird to have an ending where a main character dies or something. It's just not what we do." DB

'I HOPE GRETA'S A FAN OF LISA!'

The voice of Lisa Simpson says she was the original eco warrior

Thirteen years after making a speech warning of environmental catastrophe, Lisa Simpson has been vindicated. Springfield's young eco warrior now has a real-life equivalent in the form of Greta Thunberg, and actor Yeardley Smith wants the climate change activist to appear on The Simpsons.

"It would be amazing if Greta came on as a guest star. I hope she's a fan of the show and of Lisa," says Smith, who gives voice to Homer and Marge's elder daughter. "It'd be great if Greta plays herself – she'd be passing through Springfield and find that she has so much in common with Lisa. But the heartbreaker would be when Greta moved on to her next stop and Lisa would be with all those people in the town who wish she'd just keep her trap shut. She'd have to carry the torch for the rest of time on her own."

That outsider status is, of course, a key part of Lisa's make-up, but Smith believes that an ability to stay positive in the face of her family's ignorance has bred backbone in the character: "There's an extraordinary optimism to her – she dusts herself down, picks herself up and gets on with it the next day. This doesn't mean she discounts her disappointment. She's just always determined to find another way. I admire that in her. In fact, for me, she's one of the most fully formed, multifaceted female characters ever created. Even though she's a two-dimensional cartoon."

It's no surprise that Smith is a strong advocate for Lisa, seeing as she's been playing her since 1987, back when Matt Groening's creations featured as animated shorts on The Tracey Ullman Show. And 33 years later, she feels very much like the guardian of her alter-ego.

FIRM FRIENDS
Yeardley Smith has been the voice of Lisa for 33 years

"I will always stick up for my girl if the script ever includes something that I don't think Lisa would say or if somebody is mean to her and she doesn't have an appropriate retort. I feel like it's my job to fight the fight, even if I don't win. Because I don't think you can play a character for so long and not be seriously invested.

"That rarely happens, though. And I think that's because the writers are most like Lisa Simpson of all the characters, because they too were misfits growing up. They were all the smartest people in the room for as long as they can remember."

Does Smith ever think of the point where she'll stop sharing her life with Lisa? After all, The Simpsons can't run for ever, despite current evidence pointing to the contrary. "Well, we're at least halfway through," she jokes, before adding, in a melancholy tone, "and yes, I do think about it. It'll be a lot like a really good friend who you've known most of your life has moved away and is never coming back. So I'm dreading it, to be honest. Lisa is never far from me, so it's going to create a big vacuum. It'll be very sad."

As it would be for all of us who've spent so many years revelling in the exploits of the Simpson clan. "The Simpsons latches on to very universal themes of family, dysfunction, self-esteem – all kinds of human turmoil," says Smith as she attempts to sum up the success of the series. "That stuff is timeless." DB

Fred Sirieix, Gino D'Acampo and Gordon Ramsay are hitting the road again – across the USA. But what's their recipe for primetime success?

INTERVIEW BY

PHOTOGRAPHED EXCLUSIVELY IN TEXAS FOR RADIO TIMES BY JAMES STENSON

GORDON RAMSAY HAS just picked up a chicken when it decides to relieve itself on his leg. Swearing profusely and putting Loretta Lynn the hen back down on the bar, Gino D'Acampo and Fred Sirieix laugh and throw insults in his direction. The TV cameras aren't rolling, but the whole exchange could have been lifted straight from their ITV series.

In Austin, Texas, the trio are having a day off from filming Gordon, Gino and Fred: American Road Trip and the heat is nudging 40 degrees. After the runaway success of their European adventure, the latest series sees them driving through Mexico, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Las Vegas and Texas. This is where the Little Longhorn Saloon – where they will be returning to film later in the week for the bar's chicken-themed bingo game – is located. It's also where RT's shoot is taking place. Not that I'm going to see it, I'm told.

Having travelled 5,000 miles to the US, there's suddenly some doubt over whether I'm allowed to make the final five miles to the bar for the photoshoot itself. Word has come from Ramsay's team that they're not keen on me being there, and only after a lot of haggling am I given the green light. Looking on while our photographer gets to work, Ramsay's team – who fill the small bar – appear to be on edge at my presence, although it's not made clear exactly why.

Pictures taken, we travel in convoy back to the trio's hotel and settle in a corner of the restaurant, where Ramsay is charm personified. Were they surprised by the success of the first series? Without missing a beat, he says, "It's nice to see the boys back on primetime TV." D'Acampo protests that he already is.

"Seven-thirty is not primetime. Nine o'clock is primetime," Ramsay responds, turning to me and hitting the table in front of him. "He's trying to say that seven o'clock is primetime! I'm proud that both of them have hit it big now."

ATORNADO AND an imposing presence, everyone knows when Ramsay's in the room. His no-nonsense fieriness and bravado have helped him build a global multimillion-pound restaurant empire and 20-year TV career, and while D'Acampo and Sirieix go under the radar in the States ("Nobody knows us," D'Acampo says pragmatically), Ramsay is a household name over there. David, the bar owner where RT's shoot takes place, tells me that Ramsay is a superstar. When I ask him whether he can name any other British chefs, he can't. D'Acampo and Sirieix seem awestruck with Ramsay's Stateside fame: D'Acampo even says he was daunted at the prospect of working with him. "Oh, stop it," the Kitchen Nightmares star says; he's uncomfortable and quickly deflects the unexpected adulation.

Barbs and banter are the foundations on which their travelogue shtick is built. The programme was a surprise hit when the first series aired in 2018, being shortlisted for a Bafta as well as NTA and RTS Awards.

"It was so amazing to see that," says Ramsay, 53, whose production company makes the show. Its conception came when he said to ITV's commissioning editor Sue Murphy, "How do we do a Top Gear for food?" and from there we started thinking about names and ideas."

The alchemy between the three was an instant hit with viewers. "My mum's friends said to me, 'Well, you've got writers,'" says Ramsay. "I said, 'We've got what? No, we haven't.'" D'Acampo, 43, balks at the idea the show is scripted – he jokes that he can't read – as Ramsay continues. "This is banter. A lot of it is us being out of our comfort zone, and we are so competitive. If we had that removed, the spine of the programme would disintegrate into something a little bit fake."

Sirieix, 48, and the most reserved of the group, shrugs. “People are not stupid. People want to see real relationships because I think they are fed up with fakeness.”

D’Acampo reckons about 60 per cent of what they film goes into the programme – the remaining 40 per cent is either too outrageous or unusable, which is not dissimilar to this interview. “This is for Radio Times,” Ramsay half-jokes at one point, gently chastising D’Acampo for telling unrepeatable anecdotes. While being in their company is entertaining, it’s also akin to herding cats. Three cats with big egos.

BUT AMONG THE silliness, there was a sobering moment while filming in Mexico. They were driving desert buggies round a race track while their RV – a souped-up American version of the one that took them around Europe – was parked in the middle of the circuit. During rehearsals, they got a caution for their driving. “They warned us: one more incident and we’d be banned from the track,” says Ramsay. But that didn’t deter them.

“We hit the first corner, and we got told to moderate our speed,” says Ramsay. “I backed off and all of a sudden, Gino’s car shot past me. He lost control, hit the RV and there’s paramedics, gas everywhere, a tyre burst...”

D’Acampo takes over. “I saw the RV coming very close, and I thought, ‘OK, that’s it.’ I was going 70 or 80 miles an hour, and when I hit it I thought, ‘This is over now. I’m going to die.’ The thing that scared me the most is that my fuel-tank burst and I had petrol all over me.” Ramsay, who came away from the incident with whiplash, adds, “Fortunately, he hit the RV side on...”

D’Acampo walked away from the crash relatively unscathed, but it was a further 24 hours before he was able to start filming again.

Even asking the trio to be serious about a near-death experience is a challenge, and they soon begin relaying a more light-hearted moment at Ramsay’s home in Los Angeles. “They were terrible,” says Ramsay. “They went through my bedroom, through [wife] Tana’s drawers and then jumped in my pool, stark naked, in front of my poor mum,” he huffs. “Ten years ago my mum, who smoked for 40 years, had a heart bypass and they nearly gave her another heart attack.” He turns to Sirieix: “Then you dived on my mum – a 73-year-old Scottish woman – on the sofa, nude...”

“She loved it,” laughs the First Dates maitre d’. But that wasn’t all. Ramsay’s neighbour in LA is Stevie Wonder and he must have been perplexed as to how and why cheese appeared in his swimming pool.

“They threw the cheese over the fence,” Ramsay explains, throwing his hands up in mock-exasperation at culprit Sirieix. “Imagine him then going out to his pool...”

ALTHOUGH GETTING THEM to be serious is a challenge, I change the conversation to address the current state of the UK restaurant industry.

“What we’ve all experienced, especially in the UK, is that anybody can open a restaurant,” says Ramsay. “People fall in love with the glamour. Well, there’s nothing glamorous in owning a restaurant.” D’Acampo takes it further. “People should respect the industry more,” he says. “Nowadays, everyone writes a cookbook. Models, singers, whatever; everybody thinks that they can do it and cook on TV. What they don’t understand is that if you want to do it well, you need to put in the hours.”

The UK has recently lost several high-profile restaurant chains from the high street, including Jamie Oliver’s chain, which collapsed last year.

GORDON RAMSAY

“It’s a tough time at the moment,” says Ramsay, speaking before coronavirus threw the whole hospitality sector in the air. “Customers vote with their feet, like viewers vote with their remote control. The good will last. Customers are savvy and that’s good news for us as it’s making the industry sharper and improving the nation. It’s been a testing time – very testing – but I’m pleased it’s flushed out the crap.”

Has he spoken to Oliver about Jamie’s Italian going into administration? The pair fell out over comments Oliver made about Ramsay’s family and in an interview with Radio Times in 2017, Ramsay said he wouldn’t speak to Oliver again unless he apologised.

“Listen, we spoke,” says Ramsay. “We had a barbecue together. It’s sad – especially when it’s a chef that the nation loved and adored. He’s such a nice guy; he came out and was brutally honest about it. The economy dictated that failure and the message is that you need to keep an eye on your business. It’s tough. It’s never easy seeing anyone fail.”

After a firm handshake, Ramsay blusters out of the restaurant, the three of them disappearing to film the next leg of their adventure.

Actor and writer
Lennie James found huge success in the US – but being a black Englishman who grew up in care in south London made him the star

THE RT INTERVIEW BY MARK LAWSON

'I DON'T
MY RACE'

THE AWARD-WINNING Save Me, in which Lennie James plays troubled south Londoner Nelly, whose long-estranged daughter goes missing, returns for a second series this week. It was described as James's writing debut when it aired in 2018. But, two decades ago, he scripted BBC2's Storm Damage, based on his experience of growing up in a council care home, which starred Adrian Lester and also won a Royal Television Society award, as well as being nominated for a Bafta. So, after that early success as a screenwriter, why did he wait so long to try again?

"Trying to get Storm Damage done took a herculean effort and six years of my life," James remembers. "And so I think I became a little gun-shy about going through it again. And then, as has tended to happen with my writing career, my acting career got in the way."

Since 2006, Nottingham-born James, who grew up in south London, has appeared in well over 100 episodes of four successive US television series: the post-apocalyptic drama Jericho, the sex-industry comedy Hung, the zombie thriller The Walking Dead and now its prequel, Fear the Walking Dead.

Many actors-turned-writers say that they made the move in order to create parts for which they wouldn't otherwise have been cast, but that wasn't the case for James. "I'd be lying if I said that, when writing Save Me, I wasn't interested in playing Nelly, but, because of the shows I was doing in America, I remember very clearly having the conversation with the powers that be to say: 'If you might be interested in this, I don't want my possible participation as an actor to be an issue.' But then, everyone who read the scripts said, 'Well, of course you're playing Nelly', but I still didn't know if I could be free to do so. And I was clear that I would let it go to another actor if it meant my show got made."

You don't have to be a crossword champion to spot that Nelly is close to being an anagram of Lennie. Although Storm Damage was more directly autobiographical, Save Me and Save Me Too can also be seen, in their focus on parent-child relationships, to draw on James's story. When his mum, a single mother, died when he was 11, Lennie went to a children's home, and later to a foster family. Although many writers take parenting as a theme, has he got an unusual perspective on it?

"Yes. Absolutely. I think it's at the heart of me. I have a particular perception of what family is. The first 11 years of my life, my family was my mum and my brother. For the next chunk of my life, between 11 and 16, my family was 16 or 17 other kids, because we were living in a children's home. And, from 16 on, my family has been my blood brother, my foster brother, my foster sister and my foster mother. And then their kids and partners, and my partner and kids."

JAMES, 54, HAS three grown-up children with his wife, Giselle. "So those have been my definitions of family. I think, over and over again, my definition of family has been redefined. So it's obviously part of what I write about. Save Me is really about an opposite version of the father-daughter relationship I know. I'm the father of three daughters and I'm a constant in their life. Nelly is the opposite. He met his daughter for an hour and a half, and then signed a paper to relinquish his parental responsibilities. In Save Me, we have a father and daughter who may never, ever meet again, and that was central for me."

From Storm Damage to Save Me, separation from a parent seems to be his theme. "Yeah. I remember Douglas Henshall saying that as an actor he could only use his own emotional blueprint, his understanding of life, for a character. That phrase has always stuck in my head. And I think that's true of my writing and acting. I do things that involve definitions of family and community."

The question of an actor playing their own blueprint also touches on the topically controversial issue of casting. Even though all TV casting is now race appropriate – Anthony Hopkins couldn't play Othello on the BBC today, as he did in 1981 – there's a complication. Is skin colour incidental to the storyline – as in BBC1's The Split, where lawyers just happen not to be white – or relevant to the narrative? In the first episode of Save Me Too, for example, Nelly warns a white character that they may be about to find out "how buck wild a black man can get".

"I would argue that the race of a character or actor is always relevant," says James. "If you are someone who is not white in a predominantly white community, race will always be a factor. The problem is that, when people talk about it being relevant, it's to do with it being a 'problem' or dealing with racism. It's important to me that Nelly is a black man in this community, with the history of being a black man, a black ▽

◁ Englishman, a black Londoner, who has been alive in the world for 50 years. All that affects who he is, where he drinks, and the relationships he has. But it’s equally important that his best friend is London Greek. But every character I play is a black guy – it’s always there.”

So never a guy who happens to be black?

“I hate the term ‘colour-blind casting’ because I don’t know what it means. I don’t want anyone to ignore my race. It doesn’t have to be the major topic of conversation. But to ignore something about someone just seems a little odd. Would you ignore that someone was from Liverpool or France?” Some liberals and tweeters would say yes. “But it’s part of what they are.”

And Nelly’s line about how wild a black man can get is also playing on white people’s stereotypical fear of black violence and anger?

“Absolutely. You can’t grow up as a black man of his age and not be aware of exactly what it is that makes white people frightened of you. And you spend an enormous amount of time placating that fear. But, just occasionally, you can use it to your advantage. As Nelly does there.”

JAMES WROTE SUPPORTING roles in Save Me for actors he knew and admired – including Stephen Graham, with whom he has another connection. They both guest starred as antagonists in Jed Mercurio’s police corruption series, Line of Duty – James as DCI Gates in series one and Graham as rogue undercover cop John Corbett in series five.

“It’s phenomenal to see what that franchise has become,” says James. “For us, working on the first series, it could have ended as a very good one-off. But it’s clear now that Jed had long-term plans.”

‘TV DRAMA IS FASCINATED BY MISSING CHILDREN’

Suranne Jones, plays Claire, Nelly’s ex-wife and mother to missing Jody

How is Claire, 17 months on from series one?

As with any trauma specific to you, people around you care and react for a certain amount of time, then they move on with their lives. But Nelly and Claire are stuck. She’s moved back in with [her second husband] Barry because she never belonged in Nelly’s world, and she’s trying different support groups for help – but, as with any missing person’s case, she hasn’t got any answers, so she can’t grieve properly. I was a bit apprehensive about doing another series because I didn’t want to repeat myself, but if grieving can be fun in any way, Lennie’s given me an interesting take on it.

How have Claire and Barry pieced their life back together, given the mutual betrayal of trust?

They’re living together, but still very separate. They’re aware of each other’s pain, but they’re not sharing it or dealing with what happened around the time Jody went missing. They’ve been honest with each other and it’s keeping them together, but I wouldn’t say their marriage is happy. I much prefer Claire on the estate or with Nelly than when she’s with Barry, because she loosens up. It’s like me when I go back home – my husband, who’s from the South, always says: “Oh my God, you’re so Manc!” Even the food I eat, I just regress!

Did you have reservations about coming back to the world of Save Me?

This job goes in the safe box because I’ve already done it and I’m part of this family. I still vet what I read and if there was anything too harrowing, I could have said it wasn’t for me. I’m in no rush to do anything about missing children, and I’ve read some scripts recently – television drama seems to be fascinated by them, but it doesn’t hold any interest for me at the minute. I’m being careful about what I swap my family life for.

One of those select projects is series two of Gentleman Jack – can you tell us anything about it?

Nothing for now. I’ve been invited to executive produce the series, so we’re working on the scripts and putting it together now. We start filming in June and we’re really excited to start the next chapter. Anyone who’s read the bit in Anne Lister’s diaries after the marriage will know what’s coming, but Sally [Wainwright] puts it together brilliantly – it feels vibrant, but it has real emotional depth.

Is the Doctor Foster chapter closed for you?

Yes. I haven’t said that before in interviews, as I tend to say: who knows? I loved it, I love [writer] Mike Bartlett, I love [the producers] Drama Republic. Series one was amazing, series two, equally, peaked at nearly ten million viewers and pushed in crazy directions. But I think Gemma’s done. GABRIEL TATE

Help people in the world's poorest places See the Way to a brighter future – give before 12th May 2020 and every £1 you donate to our See the Way appeal will be doubled by the UK government.

Dear Friend,

Life with cataracts has not been easy for three-year-old Leah, living in East Africa. Unable to see, every morning she sits on an old car tyre, hearing the sounds of her brother and cousins going to school. She feels left out and alone.

Leah's mother is heartbroken that her daughter is needlessly blind. She told us, "Sometimes she cries because of the discomfort. It is as if she sees stones instead of light in her eyes." Cataract surgery to restore sight can take just 45 minutes, but many families in low-income countries cannot afford the £95 for surgery.

You can change that with a gift to CBM today. £95 could fund cataract surgery for not one but two children like Leah. That's because every pound you give will have double the impact - you could fund twice as much equipment and medical supplies, medication and a skilled surgeon's time, as well as any follow-up care, including eye drops and glasses.

Give before 12th May 2020 and every £1 you donate to our See the Way appeal will be doubled by the UK government.

God bless you,

Louise

CBM Programme Manager

Public donations will support CBM's work preventing blindness and transforming lives wherever the need is greatest. Match funding from the UK government will improve access to sight saving eye-health services in Malawi.

◁ hour of compelling television because he – along with Sally Wainwright – is the best model of how to do TV drama. I steal from him at every opportunity.”

James worked again with his mentor on Critical, the Sky hospital drama, during the making of which there was briefly an unlikely resuscitation. “While we were shooting that, Jed was writing the fourth series of Line of Duty. And he came in one day and said to me, ‘I’ve just been writing a scene where DCI Gates comes back.’ I was so excited.” But didn’t Gates die? “Er, yes. Jed came in the next day and said, ‘Sorry. I don’t know what I was even thinking when I said that.’”

Mercurio has also tried to keep alive old-fashioned once-a-week TV drama, resisting the trend towards box-set bingeing. Does James think about how people will watch Save Me Too?

‘Jed Mercurio is the best model of how to do TV drama’

“When I wrote the first series, I very much imagined it being seen week by week, with cliff-hangers. But all six episodes dropped as a box set. I’m based in Los Angeles, so there was an eight-hour time difference. And, by the time I woke up in LA on the day of release of Save Me, close to 100,000 people had already watched the whole series from beginning to end. Which was ridiculous. So, this time around, I thought of it more as a six-hour story.”

JAMES IS ROUTINELY included in the melancholy lists of black, Asian and minority ethnic (BAME) British actors who were offered better roles in the US than at home. But, while acknowledging that “the particulars of my journey here have to do with race and the limitations placed on me as an actor in Britain”, he adds the interesting caveat that the UK can be limiting for actors in ways beyond race.

“I have to say that all ambitious showbusiness talent – from everywhere – has been coming to the US since the foundation of Hollywood. Errol Flynn came from Australia, Charlie Chaplin, Cary Grant and David Niven from Britain. America has always been where actors got properly paid to do the widest range of work. So now, in the golden age of television, actors are coming from all over the world to do that.”

Having lived and worked mainly in the US for a decade and a half, where does he think of as home? “London.”

Would he ultimately want to return?

“Yeah. Or, as we have been for the past several years, moving between the both of them. I love the sun of Los Angeles, but there’s a lot I miss about being a Londoner.”

‘I PLAY WOMEN IN A LOT OF PAIN’

Lesley Manville joins the cast as Jennifer, whose husband is arrested

Were you aware of Save Me before you were cast?

I’d seen great big posters at the railway station, but I don’t have Sky and don’t watch a lot of television anyway. Lennie called me and very sweetly said that he’d had me in his head all the time he’d been writing Jennifer. He sent me series one and I was addicted – it was really rich writing.

Tell us about Jennifer.

She and Gideon [her husband, played by Adrian Edmondson] are a well-off, sociable, middle-class couple: nice house, good clothes, speaking with a certain ease and accent. On a normal day, I think she’s efficient, conscientious, precise, probably doesn’t have the biggest sense of humour in the world... But Jennifer is also a woman married to someone for 30-odd years, only to discover he’s been running a paedophile ring. So then you have to say to yourself: “How will that person behave in this extreme situation?” The humiliation and embarrassment would be phenomenal.

Do you understand why Lennie James thought of you for the part?

I think he felt that I’m quite adept at playing women with a lot of hidden pain and grief.

Did you find Jennifer being oblivious to her husband’s activities hard to reconcile?

Objectively it does seem ludicrous that you could be that close to somebody and simply not know, but you only have to look at similar cases in real life. Gideon is brilliant at disguising it and keeping it separate. They had a good marriage, which is almost more scary.

What relationship does she form with Nelly?

An unusual one! He’s on a mission and he’s pretty ruthless. He starts out not having much sympathy, but he’s quite a tender, understanding man and when he genuinely sees she’s not been aware of Gideon’s activities, they come to an understanding. It’s rather nice.

Does the script feel like the work of an actor?

Nelly takes you through it, but Lennie divvies everything else out nicely and equally and the writing is very speakable. It’s great when you’re an actor of a certain status to do big leading roles, but I always judge it on the material. I want to do quality work, which doesn’t always mean you’ll be the one up front, and I’m always happy to support the lead.

How is it joining an existing company, rather than being in it from day one as you were with Mum or World on Fire?

I went to the read-through with this huge cast and they were really lovely. My initiation was complete when they asked me to join their WhatsApp group, but unfortunately after one day I had to mute them when I woke up to 41 messages. They’re quite a chatty bunch of people! When I wasn’t filming I’d be doing something else and they were WhatsApping from makeup at 6am so my phone kept pinging. But it’s lovely seeing people having a great time creating great drama. GT

'BREXIT FEELS LIKE AN INNOCENT AGE'

Nish Kumar always wanted to be a comedian – but can he, and The Mash Report, find humour in the current crisis?

INTERVIEW BY SARFRAZ MANZOOR

THE LAST TIME Nish Kumar was presenting The Mash Report, Boris Johnson had prorogued Parliament as an attempt to force Brexit through and Extinction Rebellion protesters were warning of a climate apocalypse. It felt like Britain was in uncharted waters and the comedian was hardly alone in thinking, "This is as strange as it can possibly get. But in the last two months Australia caught fire and we now have a global disease threatening to decimate the global population."

The coronavirus pandemic has, Kumar admits, "given us all a healthy sense of perspective – if anything Brexit feels like an innocent age." The Mash Report, which is about to start a new run on BBC2, is the most successful attempt British television has made at emulating US hits like The Daily Show and Last Week Tonight. I wonder why he thinks The Mash Report has succeeded, when other British attempts have not.

"The reason these shows haven't succeeded in the past is just because they haven't been given enough time," he says. "When we first started there was a guaranteed commission for ten episodes and we premiered in the summer, when people don't really watch TV.

I think also there's an element that we were in the right place at the right time, in terms of audience's interest in political comedy."

Kumar, 34, grew up loving comedy with a political edge. "The golden era of The Simpsons, Jon Stewart, Chris Rock, Chris Morris and Armando Iannucci – these are the people I grew up idolising and their comedy was incredibly political in its nature."

The son of Indian Hindu parents, Kumar's mum came to the UK in the early 1970s, while his dad arrived in the early 1980s. "My parents were keen for us to integrate and fit in," he recalls. "I was constantly told, 'Be British. Learn British culture. Integrate with Britain.'" Brought up in Croydon, he came of age in the mid-1990s, when British Asian artists such as Nitin Sawhney, Asian Dub Foundation and Cornershop were celebrating the idea of having dual cultural heritage. "I never had any anxiety about describing myself as British-Indian," he says. "I never felt like my ethnicity was going to hold me back."

I came of age a decade earlier and it's striking how different his teenage confidence was to my childhood as a working-class British Pakistani in Luton, convinced my class and colour would stop me ▷

◁ achieving my dreams. It was only when I discovered the work of Bruce Springsteen that it felt possible to dream bigger dreams. For Kumar, his Springsteen was Sanjeev Bhaskar. “Bhaskar and the whole Goodness Gracious Me rabble planted an idea in my mind when I was 12 that there was no reason that I couldn’t be a comedian,” he says. “I still cite that as the single most important influence in my career.”

“I never doubted that it was possible that an Asian man could be a stand-up comedian, because I’d seen it at too young an age.” That is such a gift, I say. “It’s invaluable,” he agrees, “the four of them are tired of me saying it. My mum still sometimes says, ‘It’s their fault that you’re doing this.’”

KUMAR STUDIED ENGLISH and History at Durham and knew he wanted to do stand-up but had little idea how that might be achieved. “At university I joined this sketch group, the Durham Review,” he says, “and from the first moment I did a sketch show and then did stand-up a year later I had a sense that I didn’t want to do anything else.” He took the sketch show to the Edinburgh Fringe while at university and later returned to do critically acclaimed solo shows that began with stories inspired by his experience of racial abuse. “One story I would tell around 2013 was about being confused for you at the Latitude Festival,” he tells me, “but by 2015 my show was pretty much almost exclusively a political show.”

He was planning to return to Edinburgh when he auditioned to present The Mash Report. “I auditioned to host the pilot, and then my agent and I found out that I was hosting the pilot. Terrifying. But the whole time, we were thinking, ‘Well, obviously this isn’t going to get made.’” He felt so sure that he had a run in Edinburgh booked, “and we were starting to put a tour in that we then had to hastily cancel, such was my lack of confidence that this would be picked up.”

The show has been particularly successful online, where Rachel Parris’s monologues on Piers Morgan or sexual harassment attract millions of views. But with that success has come criticism. Andrew Neil described the show as “self-satisfied, self-adulatory, unchallenged left-wing propaganda”, which makes me wonder if Kumar’s worried that he’s not being hard enough on those who might share his political views.

“The news is being very tough on those people anyway,” he says. “I’m not sure those people need to be further beat up. They’re getting their beat-downs from election results.”

But does he not worry that he’s reinforcing our politically polarising culture?

“Completely,” he says. “It’s constantly of a concern to me that I, personally, am just constantly making things worse.” This leads me

EYE OF THE STORM
On Question Time with Fiona Bruce and Labour’s Emily Thornberry

‘I don’t believe myself to be qualified to be on Question Time’ to his multiple appearances on Question Time. The show’s presenter Fiona Bruce recently told RT that she was “surprised by the programme’s level of toxicity”. When the producers call, is he never tempted to decline and suggest they ask someone who has some actual expertise – by taking part is he not, to use his phrase, making things worse?

“Yeah, definitely. I worry that we’re all contributing to the overall coarsening of discourse, but part of the reason I said yes [to Question Time] was because I came home drunk and saw that the panel was a bunch of people that I didn’t agree with, and there were also no ethnic minorities. Obviously, I don’t believe myself to be qualified to be on Question Time, but if we all turn down those invitations then no one is being invited to speak for our communities.”

Speaking out, particularly about what he considers to be the folly of Brexit, has made Kumar a target for critics. In the case of an infamous appearance last December at a Lord’s Taverners charity lunch, he was a literal target, when a bread roll was aimed at him after he made jokes about Brexit. I wonder what he had learnt from the incident?

“I’m forever being told by absolutely everyone that the left is unbelievably censorious and has no sense of humour about itself, and that actually the political right is the place where people go for free speech. That is absolute b*s, and I am first-hand living proof that being sensitive about your political beliefs is absolutely not just preserved for the left.”

But it was not just a well-lobbed bread roll that Kumar faced – he also received online death threats that led to the police being called. “There was a deluge of varying degrees of threats and violence. I think it’s important that people know that these kind of threats are out there, and some of the violence that’s threatened to me is quite specifically race- and colour- based. The tone is, ‘You don’t have the right, because you’re not from here.’ If you’re a person of colour in the public eye, there is an element that you just have to factor that into your day.”

WHEN I ASK KUMAR what other ambitions he still holds, he mentions trying his hand at something scripted, like a sitcom, but then adds, “My wildest aim was to host a topical show and be able to tour stand-up in theatres. I did not anticipate things going this way, quite frankly.”

He also could not have anticipated that he would be having to consider how to present a television show during the most significant pandemic in the last 100 years. “The show will be on in some form,” he reassures me – but as part of precautions says that they are “operating under the assumption that we will, at best, be recording in a studio but with no studio audience. We are also exploring a couple of alternative options, which may include me filming myself on my phone.”

The prospect of performing without an audience might seem curious and even eerie, but Kumar appears completely unfazed – indeed he appears to almost welcome it as a sort of homecoming to his first days in stand-up. “Performing to largely empty rooms is my bread and butter,” he jokes. “All those years of performing in one-third-full-at-best caves at the Edinburgh Festival – it’s all been leading up to this moment.”

HAVING TURNED 30 last June, Imogen Poots is finally being allowed to grow out of the daughter and girlfriend roles that account for the bulk of her back catalogue – for example as Jane Austen’s niece in Gwyneth Hughes’s Miss Austen Regrets for BBC1 alongside a young Tom Hiddleston, and as the sullen teen Amber in violent siege horror Green Room, in which she’s nifty with a boxcutter.

In the graphic-novel adaptation I Kill Giants (available on Netflix), she’s old enough to be the surrogate parent of a younger brother and sister. And in her London stage debut in Edward Albee’s Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? she’s the mousey Honey, who, according to one reviewer, “suffers beautifully” at the hands of boozy protagonist Martha.

Her latest film is Vivarium (on iTunes, Apple TV, Amazon and other major streaming platforms from 27 March), named after an enclosure where animals or plants are kept for observation or research, something we can perhaps better identify with at the present time. The film is a startlingly original, darkly satirical sci-fi nightmare from a story by first-time director Lorcan Finnegan and writer Garret Shanley, which pairs Poots for the third time with The Social Network’s Jesse Eisenberg. In Vivarium they play house-hunters lured into viewing an idealised new-build estate that turns into a nightmare.

To give you a flavour, Vivarium’s disturbing prologue features a cuckoo pushing the offspring of another bird out of its nest. Coincidentally, the surname Poots is a dialectical British variant of poult, meaning a young fowl. (Poot can also be used as a verb to express disgust.)

While Eisenberg’s CV is firmly anchored to his Oscar-nominated performance as Mark Zuckerberg in The Social Network, Poots has built a showreel drawn from around 35 feature films of varying box office in 15 years, plus two TV movies, one mini-series, a cancelled comedy drama and the obligatory single episode of Casualty when she was 14.

Naturally funny, Poots can charm any chat-show host. She held her own with former Late Late Show host Craig Ferguson in 2014, amusing him with an apology for having broken the salad tongs in the green room and worrying about how posh her voice sounds to Americans, trilling, "Thank you very much!" in a cut-glass accent. She spoke about growing up in Chiswick, a smart west London enclave, which she downplayed as "full of pensioners and pigeons". Despite having upped sticks to LA at that time, she even used the word "trundling". (Before the travel ban, she was commuting between New York and London, maintaining a transatlantic relationship with partner James Norton.)

'Poots is part of a new, empowered wave of actresses' chosen: Terrence Malick's free-associative Knight of Cups, in which she plays a pink-wigged LA rock chick; the suicide quartet A Long Way Down; and neo-noir Frank & Lola (in which she was described as "sizzling and unpredictable"). The fact that she'd never learnt to drive didn't stop her co-starring with Aaron Paul (her boyfriend in A Long Way Down) in the tyre-squealing thriller Need for Speed, in which she memorably shimmies out of the window of a speeding performance car to pull off a refuel from a moving gas truck.

SHE WON BEST supporting actress at the British Independent Film Awards in 2013 as the daughter of Soho pornographer Paul Raymond (Steve Coogan) in The Look of Love, a brave role that helped define her. An English rose when it suits, Poots also famously turned up on the red carpet of Green Room wearing Gucci knuckledusters. In 2011, she was interviewed for Interview magazine by director Cary Fukunaga, who'd cast her in Jane Eyre, and encouraged her to discuss the "special bra" she was expected to wear for Fright Night that "made me look like I had bigger boobs". Fukunaga asked if "big boobs" were "necessary" for scary movies? "They probably should be," she replied. "But I was glad, at the end of every day, to be able to remove them."

Website the AV Club called her a "combination starlet and workhorse". She prefers to describe herself as "an actor for hire".

THE OFFSPRING OF journalist parents, Poots has the armour-plated confidence that comes with a London private school education (a "really fing good one", she told the Evening Standard). She went from Bute House prep to Queen's Gate, whose old girls include the Duchess of Cornwall and Nigella Lawson; then Latymer Upper, alma mater of Hugh Grant, Heston Blumenthal and Alan Rickman. She emerged with far-reaching tastes, including F Scott Fitzgerald's short stories, film noir and William Faulkner. But she's not above shlock horror, having fronted Fright Night (a remake of the 1985 vampire-next-door shocker) and Black Christmas (a misogynistic cult 1974 sorority-house bloodbath updated to include what Poots describes as "some female characters that are complicit with the patriarchy").

Flashing her diagonal smile of non-standard-issue pearly white teeth – such imperfections are part of her relatability – Poots finds herself part of a new, empowered wave of British actresses young enough to play university students and new parents, but mature enough to play detective sergeants. Poots played a girl in blue in Filth, seemingly the only woman in the entire force in Edinburgh, but "strong, assertive and feminine", she maintained in an on-set interview. "She's a female with balls," she grinned. "Big time, millions of balls." Her contemporaries are actresses like Lily James, Holliday Grainger, Clare-Hope Ashitey and Tuppence Middleton.

Brother beyond

Counting 246 toothpicks by just looking at them, maple syrup that's supposed to be on the restaurant table before the pancakes arrive, constant cries of "Uh-oh!"... While our awareness and understanding of autism are now thankfully a good deal higher than they were in 1988 when Dustin Hoffman won an Oscar for his performance in Rain Man with a carefully calibrated series of ticks, it wasn't until the 1980s that the symptoms of the condition were laid out in the American Psychiatric Association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, at which a distinction was made to differentiate the condition from childhood schizophrenia.

In the story by Barry Morrow, which he co-wrote with Ronald Bass (Stepmom, How Stella Got Her Groove Back), slick would-be car importer Charlie (Tom Cruise) learns of the older brother he never knew he had when their father dies and leaves his estate to Raymond (Hoffman), who has been institutionalised since childhood – like the title character in Morrow's earlier, Emmy-winning TV-movie Bill, in which Mickey Rooney played an older autistic man. Raymond is something of a handful at first, a savant with incredible mental capacity for arithmetic.

MAIN MEN
Dustin Hoffman and Tom Cruise as the Babbitt brothers

While everyone remembers Rain Man as Hoffman's great acting triumph, it's equally Tom Cruise's. As a fast-talking wheeler-dealer living out the 1980s dream, he learns that he's out of his father's will, save for the 1949 Buick of what is a classic road movie, with the two siblings crossing country from Ohio to California. Hoffman's a mass of baseball and airline-disaster statistics, but prone to hysterics. He's believable, unsentimental and often hilarious, but without Cruise, whose emotional journey runs from confused and impatient to understanding, protective and eventually loving, there is no film. Director Barry Levinson handles the whole thing beautifully, and also won an Oscar, while the film also took best picture and best original screenplay.

Many still feel that portrayals of autism in films and TV dramas work against a more nuanced appreciation, but at least we're all on the journey together.

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Girls Trip ★★★★★
9.00-11.25pm C4

COMEDY This hit movie introduces a quartet of confident young women as they graduate college with next to no worries (although one prays to God, "Let me get pregnant by somebody rich."). Fast-forward to some years later and the friends are, by turns, famous (Regina Hall's Oprah-like author), not-as famous (Queen Latifah's web reporter), domesticated (Jada Pinkett Smith's divorced nurse and mum) and living the good life (Tiffany Haddish's party girl). In an effort to reconnect with them all, Hall invites them on a New Orleans trip, and it's not long before they revert to type, with a series of accidents noisily occurring. Director Malcolm D Lee (Night School) admirably keeps the many plates spinning as absinthe is glugged, the mistress of Hall's cheating husband turns up, and a zipwire dare has a scatological outcome. Its special brew of comedy helped Girls Trip become the first film with an African-American female screenwriter (Tracy Oliver) to pass $100 million at the US box office. Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves ★★★★★ 1.55-4.55pm C5 PG

ADVENTURE Although Kevin Costner is more "Indiana Hood" than the Locksley lad of yore in this 12th-century jaunt, Alan Rickman is a joy to behold as the panto-styled Sheriff of Nottingham – and Morgan Freeman's cultured Moor is a commanding, though unlikely, medieval presence. But it's director Kevin Reynolds who deserves the most praise for disguising such overfamiliar events with imaginative staging, and turning in such an enjoyable popcorn epic. And, yes, this is the film where Bryan Adams sings (Everything I Do) I Do It for You during the final credits. AJ (US 1991, edited for content, HD)

Jane Eyre ★★★★★
4.10-5.45pm BBC2 PG

DRAMA Director Robert Stevenson (Mary Poppins) showed an unusual talent in his warmly sympathetic treatment of films about women. This adaptation of the Brontë classic is a fine example of his work, though many will persist in attributing the film's virtues to Orson Welles. His Edward Rochester is suitably awesome, dominating his scenes (naturally), but slowing the pace whenever he appears. Joan Fontaine, still recovering from a double dose of Alfred Hitchcock – Rebecca and Suspicion – is fine in the title role, but watch for a young Elizabeth Taylor in a small and telling role. TS (US 1943, BW)

FAIRY TALE Merida (voiced by Kelly Macdonald) is a Scottish princess whose head of unruly red hair conveys her fiery spirit. When she learns that her mother (Emma Thompson) plans for her to marry, the princess takes off. But this being a fairy tale, she winds up meeting a witch and begs for a spell that will change her mother's mind. Bad idea. Brave can seem rather old-fashioned alongside such Pixar films as Up and WALL-E, but there is still plenty to admire, in particular the stunning visuals, from the Scottish countryside to Merida's live-wire hair. BP (US 2012, HD)

Stronger ★★★★★
9.00-10.50pm BBC2 15

DRAMA While 2016's Patriots Day looked at the big picture of the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing, Stronger focuses instead on the recovery of just one of its victims, Jeff Bauman, who lost both legs in the blast. Jake Gyllenhaal plays Jeff, and the film concentrates not only on his physical rehabilitation, but also on his struggle with his elevation to the status of the pin-up boy of the "Boston Strong" movement. Gyllenhaal is perfect for the part, and there's equally fine support from Miranda Richardson as Jeff's mother. While the movie occasionally slides into mawkishness, it's a strong story, solidly told, and perfect for audiences seeking a little emotional uplift. DA (US 2017, swearing, HD)

Safe House ★★★
10.00pm-12 midnight ITV 15

THRILLER The world of CIA rookie Ryan Reynolds is turned upside down when he goes on the run with rogue former agent Denzel Washington after they are attacked ahead of a routine interrogation. But who are their pursuers? Reynolds plays the initially out-of-his-depth younger operative with a mixture of fear and feistiness, while Washington is the epitome of detached cool as a bad guy audiences find themselves rooting for. Director Daniel Espinosa occasionally gets bogged down in the complexities of the plot, but is on more confident footing with the white-knuckle chase scenes. TeS (US/SAfr 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Single White Female ★★★★★
10.25pm-12.30am C5 18

THRILLER Jennifer Jason Leigh plays the lodger from hell who makes Bridget Fonda's life a misery in this ludicrous but hugely enjoyable adaptation of John Lutz's novel. Fonda is the chic Manhattanite looking for a roommate, with Leigh the shy, frumpy "perfect" candidate. That is until she starts dressing like Fonda and even tries to steal her boyfriend. You may be able to guess where this is all headed from the first five minutes, but that doesn't make it any less enthralling, and director Barbet Schroeder should certainly win a few plaudits for the most ingenious use of a stiletto heel in a movie. JB (US 1992, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Old School ★★★
11.20pm-12.45am BBC1 15

COMEDY This early romp from Joker director Todd Phillips is a spirit-lifting scream. Luke Wilson, Vince Vaughn and Will Ferrell play the bored buddies who try to recapture the fun of their college years by establishing their own off-campus fraternity. While Wilson's dry comic style only really comes to life during the film's bolder set pieces, Vaughn and Ferrell are such natural clowns that they up the tempo whenever they're on screen. The two combined are a delight, taking the film beyond the realm of just another Animal House carbon copy. SF (US 2003, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Margin Call ★★★★★
11.35pm GMT-2.15am BST BBC2 15

DRAMA Following other dramatisations of the 2008 US financial meltdown, this film from writer/director JC Chandor focuses on the reaction of an investment bank to the crisis over a 36-hour period. The action is driven by way of a MacGuffin, in this case a USB stick handed to whizzkid junior Zachary Quinto by bitter manager Stanley Tucci, after he is escorted from the building. News of the information then travels up through the ranks until it reaches elusive CEO Jeremy Irons. The isolationism of the financial services industry is cleverly implied and the central disaster is cleverly humanised. AC (US 2011, swearing, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Star Wars Episode VII: the Force Awakens ★★★★★ 3.50-6.25pm ITV 12

SCI-FI ADVENTURE As someone who remembers the first Star Wars debuting in cinemas in 1977, I feel qualified to impart wisdom to the younglings. It used to take three years for a new Star Wars film to be released, but, since Disney purchased Lucasfilm in 2012, we've been getting roughly one new movie a year set in that galaxy far, far away. The Force Awakens kicked off the final trilogy and deftly balances in-jokes (Han Solo announcing, "Chewie, we're home") with socio-political upgrades for millennials. This time around its young heroes are working-class independents: one a black male deserter (John Boyega); the other a kick-ass scavenger (Daisy Ridley). Credit where it's due to JJ Abrams, who directs like the kid who got a Lego Death Star for Christmas. (US 2015, some violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
John Boyega was so superstitious about being cast, he didn't tell his parents until an official photo was posted on Twitter

Evil under the Sun ★★★ 3.05-5.00pm BBC2 PG

MURDER MYSTERY Peter Ustinov made his second appearance as fussy Belgian detective Hercule Poirot in this polished whodunnit, adapted by Anthony Shaffer (writer of Sleuth) from the Agatha Christie novel. You won't use up too many grey cells figuring out who is responsible for the murder of actress Diana Rigg, but there's enormous pleasure to be had from sitting through the movie waiting to be proved right. The stellar cast clearly enjoys itself, with Maggie Smith in fine fettle as a hotel manageress. DP (UK 1982, edited for language, HD)

Battle of the Bulge ★★★★★ 4.45-8.00pm ITV4 PG

WAR DRAMA This truly spectacular war epic is almost on a par with Patton, though its impact really depends on how big your TV set is. Based on the last German offensive in 1944, when thousands of tanks smashed their way through the snowy pine forests of the Ardennes, it's a study of resolve on both the American and the German sides. Representing Uncle Sam are Robert Ryan and Dana Andrews, with Henry Fonda as the only man who sees the German tactic months before it happens. But the picture is dominated by Robert Shaw's riveting portrait of military genius infested with paranoia as a German colonel. The climax is High Noon with tanks. AT (US 1965, violence, HD)

Despicable Me 3 ★★★★★ 5.10-6.55pm ITV2 U

COMEDY ADVENTURE In this animated sequel, reformed supervillain Gru's extended family gets a little bigger when he discovers he has a long-lost twin brother. However, Dru (also voiced by Steve Carell) wants his sibling to return to his wicked ways, as do the underemployed Minions, who are bored with the good-guy life. Meanwhile, 1980s child star Balthazar Bratt (Trey Parker) has dastardly plans to get even with the Hollywood elite who scorned him after he reached puberty years before. As always with this series, the dialogue is whip-smart, the sight gags brilliantly executed, and the arrival of Bratt opens the door to a killer soundtrack of 80s hits. TeS (US 2017, HD)

Independence Day ★★★★★ 6.10-9.00pm E4 12

SCI-FI No film had presented the destruction of the Earth on such an epic scale before this preposterously successful movie came along. Of course, when we say Earth we really mean the USA – the rest of the world barely gets a look in. The story is simple: giant alien spacecraft take up positions above the world's major cities and then set about destroying everything below. Those plucky Yanks, however, won't go down without a fight. Will Smith's performance as a wisecracking fighter pilot helped make him one of the biggest box-office draws in the western world, while Jeff Goldblum delivers a variation on his boffin role in Jurassic Park. Bill Pullman, meanwhile, keeps a straight face as the American President. JF (US 1996, violence, swearing, HD)

Bridget Jones's Baby ★★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm 5 Star 15

ROMANTIC COMEDY Over a decade after Miss Jones said "yes" to her Mr Darcy, she is alone, again, in this total hoot of a threequel. Renée Zellweger reprises her role with gusto, as Bridget celebrates her 43rd birthday with a cupcake and plenty of wine – older but no wiser. Original author Helen Fielding shares writing credits with Dan Mazer (Borat) and Emma Thompson (also giving a rib-tickling turn as Bridget's doctor), who bring a more satisfying mix of dry wit and slapstick than in the 2004 instalment, The Edge of Reason. Even if the machinations of the plot are unlikely, Bridget's insecurities about impending motherhood and her career are relatable, and the film itself is a bundle of joy. SP (UK 2016, swearing, HD)

The Odyssey ★★ 10.00-11.55pm BBC4 PG

BIOPIC The late Jacques Cousteau brought undersea exploration alive for television viewers in the 1960s and 70s, but all was not well behind the scenes, if this drama is to be believed. Lambert Wilson portrays the man as an ambitious if somewhat aloof individual, more interested in furthering his own brand identity than preserving ocean life, while Pierre Niney plays his more idealistic, eco-aware son Philippe. The film was made without the involvement of the Cousteau estate and is surprisingly uninvolved, with lots of felicitous period detail and some obvious digital embellishments in the sub-aquatic scenes. Poor Audrey Tautou also plugs away in a thankless role as Cousteau senior's neglected spouse. TJ (Fr 2016, HD)

Rain Man ★★★★★ 10.30pm-12.35am BBC1 15

Andrew Collins My Movies page 29. (US 1988, swearing, HD)

Jawbone ★★★ 10.45pm-12.10am BBC2 15

BOXING DRAMA An honest look at a well-worn subject, this home-grown drama about a boxer's fight back to sobriety packs some punch. Ian McShane and Ray Winstone add dazzle and awe to the story of Jimmy McCabe, who is played by Johnny Harris. The story charts the ex-champ's blurry re-assessment of his future after yet again reaching rock bottom by deciding to return to the familiar security of his old gym. But, somewhat inevitably, our hero must prove himself worthy by accepting one last fight. Tat Radcliffe's camerawork is dynamic, but the movie suffers from predictability and a less than riveting performance by the usually magnetic Harris (Welcome to the Punch). KK (UK 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

Dawn of the Planet of the Apes ★★★★★ 11.00pm-1.25am C4 12

SCI-FI In this pumped-up first sequel to Rise of the Planet of the Apes, most of the human population has been wiped out by simian flu, while superintelligent chimpanzee Caesar (Andy Serkis) is now the leader of a large ape colony and is teaching his companions to live in peace. But then the pesky humans turn up to spoil things. What follows is an epic, Shakespearean tale of betrayal and brutality that plays out like a Greek tragedy – with a touch of Animal Farm thrown in. A storming and soulful blockbuster, this has brains as well as heart. LB (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

The Homesman ★★★★★ 12.10-2.05am BBC2 15

WESTERN Hilary Swank stars here as a feisty pioneer woman who volunteers to transport back to Iowa three women from her town who have all been driven mad by life on the Nebraska plains. Tommy Lee Jones (who also writes and directs) plays the shady claim-jumper she saves from hanging and press-gangs into accompanying her. So begins this tough-minded, intelligent western, very much a 21st-century update for the genre. Jones's direction is stylish and assured, and he generously gives Swank room to prove what a great actor she can be with the right material. LF (US/Fr 2014, violence, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

ADVENTURE Worth your time for the sweeping Jerry Goldsmith score alone, The Wind and the Lion also boasts Sean Connery in one of his finest ever roles as the Berber chieftain who kidnaps an American woman (Candice Bergen) and issues a ransom to US President Teddy Roosevelt. Directed with gleeful energy by John Milius, who also penned the script, the film offers a fascinating look at Morocco in the period before the First World War. Connery's unlikely casting proves a masterstroke, with the former 007 looming large in a turban, and the support playing of John Huston (as Secretary of State John Hay) and Brian Keith (as President Roosevelt) helps thicken the plot. COMEDY Rex Harrison is superbly cast as an amnesiac philanderer in this jolly romp from Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat. Giving Harrison a run for his money are Kay Kendall (whom he later married), Margaret Leighton and French actress Nicole Maurey. The Technicolor photography exudes a pleasing period sheen, and the witty screenplay by Gilliat and Val Valentine ensures this light-as-air comedy is a delight. TS (UK 1955)

COMEDY THRILLER Working from a Quentin Tarantino script, Tony Scott directs this fast-moving tale of a movie-obsessed comic-store worker (Christian Slater) who meets hooker Patricia Arquette and gets hitched. However, after the pair accidentally steals a fortune in cocaine from her pimp (Gary Oldman), the honeymoon is soon over and oblivion beckons. The film blends Hong Kong gangster movie clichés, film noir revisionism, slick ultra violence and a host of great star cameos (Brad Pitt, Val Kilmer, Dennis Hopper, Christopher Walken and James Gandolfini among them) to create an acid cocktail. The superb visual style is the icing on the cake. AJ (US 1993, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity)

The 6th Day ★★★★★

SCI-FI Director Roger Spottiswoode provides another satisfying slice of action for star Arnold Schwarzenegger. Exploring similar themes to Total Recall, this thriller depicts the moral hell that could be unleashed if DNA tampering isn't properly regulated. When ex-fighter pilot Schwarzenegger discovers he has been illegally cloned, he embarks on a mission to get his identity back. Arnie's stiffly delivered, trademark one-liners often get in the way of the serious issues raised, but the film still brims with all the elements of great sci-fi film-making: dark speculation, a sense of wonder and ace special effects. AJ (US/Can 2000, violence, swearing, brief nudity)

MARTIAL ARTS Critic Pauline Kael once described Bruce Lee as "the Fred Astaire of martial arts", and he's at his balletic, brilliant best in this kung fu classic that, tragically, proved to be his last completed film. When his sister kills herself rather than succumb to the henchmen of a ruthless master criminal, Lee leaves the Shaolin temple where he teaches kung fu to become a James Bond-like secret agent. When he arrives at an island fortress to take part in a brutal martial arts tournament, he finds himself having to smash an opium ring and a white slavery racket, as well as fight for his own life. Director Robert Clouse produces a series of fast, furious, intricate and athletic fight scenes that have yet to be bettered. It's clear why the Lee legend lives on. DP (US 1973, violence, swearing, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

COMEDY DRAMA A hit on page and stage, Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall's Billy Liar was brought to the screen by John Schlesinger as a faultless blend of social realism and satirical fantasy. Tom Courtenay shines as the undertaker's assistant who escapes from his mundane existence into the neverland of Ambrosia, where he is supreme dictator. The performances around him are all first rate, especially Julie Christie and Helen Fraser as two of the women in his life. Simply a must-see. DP (UK 1963, BW)

ACTION The jingoistic sequels reduced Vietnam War veteran John Rambo (Sylvester Stallone) to an indestructible cartoon figure, but this first film in the series is an involving portrait of an ostracised loner pushed too far. Brian Dennehy is on fine snarling form as a bigoted small-town sheriff and the action is tautly assembled by director Ted Kotcheff. 11.10pm-1.25am ITV4

DID YOU KNOW?
The film is based on the LAPD's real-life Gangster Squad, and two of its surviving members visited the set during filming

CRIME DRAMA Not quite as iconic or ironic as it intends to be, Gangster Squad risks turning into a parody of, rather than a tribute to, the postwar mob thrillers it tries to emulate. That said, its glossy comic-book take on the genre – written by former LA detective Will Beall and directed by Ruben Fleischer (Venom) – does start to reel you in as Ryan Gosling and Josh Brolin's LAPD sergeants target a reptilian mobster (Sean Penn). Wide-brimmed hats and machine guns are present and correct, while moll Emma Stone shares cute scenes with Gosling that follow their first pair-up in Crazy, Stupid, Love, and prefigure their less bloody La La Land. Meanwhile, Nick Nolte's low growl as a grizzled police chief is indeed a rib-tickler. (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

HORROR Director Wes Craven's intelligent reinvention of the slasher genre sees a sick maniac on the loose in a small suburban town, murdering anyone who gets horror trivia questions wrong. Gleefully exploring the bond between gore movies and their fans, this terrific shocker exposes the genre's knee-jerk devices, while still giving gasps galore – and a surprising dénouement. Kevin Williamson's script keeps things scary even when the sinister events are at their funniest, while also paying clever homage to Halloween and Friday the 13th. AJ (US 1996, violence, swearing, HD)

DRAMA Labour's first prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald, was supposedly the inspiration for this political drama from director Roy Boulting. Yet Nigel Balchin's screenplay owes more to melodramatic contrivance than to historical fact, as Michael Redgrave rises from the north country slums to high office. Redgrave gives a powerhouse performance, but such is his dominance that there's little room for other characters to develop. DP (UK 1947, BW)

Big Stone Gap ★★

ROMANTIC COMEDY If you're a fan of either Ashley Judd or Whoopi Goldberg, here's an amiable if slightly schmaltzy distraction for you. Judd plays the small-town pharmacist who uncovers a secret about her family, not realising it will have implications for who she really is. Writer/director Adriana Trigiani adapts her 2001 romantic novel set in Virginia's Appalachian Mountains in a tale that's comfortably predictable but heartwarming. SuR (US 2014, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Charade ★★★★★ 12.40-2.55pm Film4 PG

THRILLER Perhaps the most Hitchcockian thriller not to be directed by the man himself, Charade is instead the work of director Stanley Donen, who proved himself a nifty choreographer of both action and dance. His film is one long Technicolor chase made thoroughly modern (for 1963) by Henry Mancini's bongo-driven score. Cary Grant – star of North by Northwest and three others for Hitch – is the ski slope stranger dragged into the life of Audrey Hepburn's glamorous translator after a murder. The action moves to Paris, multiple passports are found, the CIA gets involved and the war is invoked via gold stolen by the French Resistance. While James Coburn, George Kennedy and Ned Glass give good hench, it's Grant and Hepburn who mesmerise as the accidental couple. (US 1963, HD)

Thunderball ★★★
8.00-10.40pm ITV4 PG

SPY ADVENTURE The Bond series went well and truly comic strip with this gadget-filled extravaganza. Playing 007 for the fourth time, Sean Connery is still getting a kick out of the role, but he's less the suave spy and more the man of action here than in previous outings. Director Terence Young never quite solves the pacing problems posed by filming underwater, but John Stears's Oscar-winning special effects more than compensate. DP (UK 1965, violence, HD)

Atomic Blonde ★★★
9.00-11.15pm Film4 15

THRILLER Charlize Theron does the majority of her own stunts here, playing an MI6 spy tracking down a list of double agents during the final days of the Berlin Wall. Director David Leitch's adaptation of graphic novel The Coldest City merges John Wick with John Le Carré, Bourne and Bond for a sexy gut-punch of A-list gorgeousness that provides Theron with a franchise-friendly heroine to call her own. AJ (US 2017, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

The Longest Yard ★★★
9.00-11.00pm Comedy Central 12

COMEDY Adam Sandler teamed up for the third time with director Peter Segal for this remake of 1974 Burt Reynolds comedy The Mean Machine. Sandler plays a washed-up football star who ends up in jail and is asked to train a group of convicts to take on a team of guards. Lazily predictable but warmly humorous, this avoids complex characterisation in favour of well-worn clichés, but the action is excitingly choreographed. GM (US 2005, violence, swearing, HD)

The Innkeepers ★★★
10.50pm-12.50am Horror Channel 15

HORROR This throwback to 1970s schlock from Ti West (The House of the Devil) will either appeal as an engaging character study or test the patience of anyone waiting for something to actually happen. After a century of service, the Yankee Pedlar Inn is closing down, prompting the remaining employees – genial Sara Paxton and ghost enthusiast Pat Healy – to uncover proof that it is one of the USA's most haunted hotels. The film's payoff may be slightly underwhelming, but it has unexpected warmth, sparkling dialogue and some oddball casting. AJ (US 2011, swearing)

TWIN PACK £49.99

WHATEVER your sleep problems, the dream of a good night's sleep has now become a reality – thanks to a breakthrough invention - the Gx Suspension Pillow. All conventional pillows flatten significantly during sleep – becoming less supportive and more uncomfortable as the night progresses. The result of this is disturbed and broken sleep, frustration and the fruitless search for a better pillow. That search is now over!

To stop the flattening we've come up with a solution that's so simple it's ingenious. By the clever installation of 'double X' internal ties we have produced the world's first pillow to retain much more of its plumped shape all night long.

The ties work to pull the pillow in and up so that your head and neck are gently cradled and supported in softly sprung comfort. As well as having the revolutionary internal ties, the pillow shell is 100% cotton with our superb hypoallergenic Polycoz filling, and we have added a unique integral air vent to help keep you cool through the night.

As if all these benefits were not enough, you can purchase the pillow with our 30-night comfort guarantee – total satisfaction or your money back.

Tens of thousands of delighted customers have already rediscovered the benefits of a great night's sleep, why not join them? Now available with FREE delivery for readers, use code RT7.

- ✓ Unique internal tie technology maintains shape throughout the night
 - ✓ Stays plump all night long
 - ✓ Provides comfort and support
 - ✓ Integral air vent keeps you cool
 - ✓ Luxurious 100% cotton shell
 - ✓ Hypoallergenic Polycoz filling
 - ✓ Designed and made in the UK
 - ✓ Choose from Medium-soft or Medium-firm
- Most sleepers prefer Medium-soft however if you prefer a firmer pillow choose Medium-firm*

Harley Street Consultant and back pain specialist, Dr Deane Halfpenny, recommends Gx Pillows:
"I can honestly say that your pillow has made the world of difference...and fully endorse your pillow as being quite unique in its ability to maintain support throughout the night"

Actor Rula Lenska had this to say:
"It is rare that something advertised as unique and life changing turns out to be true!! I have a chronic back and neck situation and I can honestly say these pillows make a huge difference!! Comfortable...supportive...and positively magical for my neck!! Congratulations! Many, many thanks"

Our promise to you: Sleep on the Gx Pillow for 30 nights and if you are not completely satisfied, we'll give you your money back*

ANDREW COLLINS
FILM OF THE DAY

Midnight Special ★★★★★
11.05pm-12.50am BBC2 12

SCI-FI Director Jeff Nichols is an American auteur who, in a relatively short period of time, has carved out an intriguing niche for himself. He turned heads with Take Shelter, in which Michael Shannon hallucinates the apocalypse, and Mud, a deadly slice of southern gothic. But, in 2015, he pulled out all the stops for Midnight Special, a road movie that casts Shannon as a concerned father who is on the run from the FBI with his eight-year-old son. Why? Well, the boy has special powers. Another Nichols regular, Joel Edgerton, is Shannon's boyhood friend, while Adam Driver plays a boffin from the National Security Agency, and Kirsten Dunst the boy's estranged mother. Much of the action is set at night, which offers an abundance of atmosphere, and it shares a few surface similarities with Netflix's Stranger Things. (US 2015, violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?
This was director John Nichols's fourth outing with Michael Shannon, and he managed to shoot the entire film in an economical 40 days

First Men in the Moon ★★★★★
6.50-9.00pm Sony Classic U

SCI-FI Outstanding special effects from stop-motion magician Ray Harryhausen add further lustre to director Nathan Juran's colourfully engaging tale, adapted from the HG Wells novel about a Victorian lunar expedition. Lionel Jeffries is splendid as the eccentric Professor Cavor, who uses his antigravity paint invention to achieve lift-off. Jeffries, Edward Judd and Martha Hyer are then captured by insectoid creatures and menaced by a Moon caterpillar in what is an enjoyable flight of fantasy. AJ (UK 1964)

Happy Death Day ★★★★★
9.00-10.50pm Film4 15

HORROR The Groundhog Day formula gets a gruesomely funny reworking as a student (Jessica Rothe) is murdered on her birthday, over and over again, and determines to find out who wants her dead. While it's never more than a bog-standard slasher, Happy Death Day possesses a knowing sense of humour, and many of the laughs derive from the fact that Rothe is not a virginal heroine. Her flaws become endearing, not least when she's paired with the one student who believes her (Israel Broussard). Although gleefully superficial, this horror brims with tongue-in-cheek fun. JL (US 2017, violence, HD)

Sliding Doors ★★★★★
10.45pm-12.20am BBC1 15

ROMANTIC FANTASY If you could live your life again, would you do it any differently? That's the idea posed here, as Gwyneth Paltrow plays out two different scenarios after she misses/doesn't miss a train home. Paltrow handles her English accent with ease, and she's well supported by John Hannah and John Lynch. But because her life is more interesting in one half than the other, the movie never quite gels. JB (UK/US 1997, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

Bad Neighbours ★★★★★

COMEDY Zac Efron stars here as the fratboy neighbour who makes life hell for new dad Seth Rogen and his wife Rose Byrne. His loud parties with neon lights and naked girls provide a rude awakening for the couple, who begin a campaign of dirty tricks to shut down the fraternity. The friction between all three is bitterly amusing, and the biggest laughs come when director Nicholas Stoller stands back and lets the actors bounce off each other. SP (US 2014, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

CLASSIC COMEDY

French and Saunders

Available from 26 March

A proper treat from the BBC archives: every episode of Dawn French and Jennifer Saunders's sketch show, which made its debut in 1987 and ran for six rude, silly, clever series.

Emerging from the alternative comedy scene at a time when female-fronted comedy was still an often-derided novelty, French and Saunders came out swinging with their rawer early material, particularly when they played the unforgettably disgusting Two Fat Men.

Mostly, though, they were a blast of playful fun and sly satire – as their popularity swelled and budgets got bigger, the classic sketches became the lavish, extended parodies of everything from Misery and The Silence of the Lambs to Madonna and Bananarama.

Their work as a duo is not referenced, talked about, or replayed on YouTube as much as, say, Fry and Laurie or Mayall and Edmondson – but it more than deserves its place in that 1980s/90s pantheon, and you'll discover uncountable nuggets of hilarity if you turn back time by hitting play.

ALL 92 EPISODES
Waking the Dead

Available from 26 March

Fancy a giant crime-drama binge? Get a load of this: all nine series of the BBC1 cold-case drama, starring Sue Johnston and Trevor Eve as veteran investigators – a psychological profiler and a top cop, respectively – who, more often than not, have discovered something absolutely horrific in the distant past. Amid high ratings, it introduced personal drama and even political debate among the strongly drawn characters as it went along, with excellent support from Claire Goose and Holly Aird in the early series, and Tara FitzGerald later on.

GRIPPING SPY THRILLER
Spooks

Available now

A spy thriller that announced itself handily in 2002 with one of the most appalling screen deaths in British TV history – yes, the one with the deep-fat fryer – it remained a must-see until its powerful ending, with Peter Firth still leading the cast. Over the years Matthew Macfadyen, Keeley Hawes, David Oyelowo, Rupert Penry-Jones, Hermione Norris and Nicola Walker all joined and then left MI5's crack anti-terror team, constantly renewing the cycle of nailbiting heroics and noble sacrifice.

BRANAGH AT HIS BEST
Wallander

Available from 30 March

As Scandi drama mania took hold in 2008, the BBC produced this slightly glossier, yet somehow just as downbeat, take on the detective created by author Henning Mankell – Kurt Wallander had already been brought to life by an excellent Swedish series. Kenneth Branagh is the (English-speaking, but still in Ystad) cop, worn and bruised by all the sadness he's seen. Running to four short series, this languidly elegiac crime drama is more thoughtful and artful than most.

EXPLOSIVE DRAMA
The Honourable Woman

Available from 30 March

Hugo Blick's slick eight-part drama attracted the adjective "topical" when it aired on BBC2 in 2014 – but its story of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and of shady arms deals and other international intrigues, is fairly timeless. Moreover, after eight episodes of shocks and murky mystery, the secrets and strife of ambitious businesswoman Nessa Stein (Maggie Gyllenhaal) were as personal as they were political. Beautifully shot, this thriller is as canny as they come.

SUPERLATIVE SPIN-OFF
Baptiste

Available from 31 March

The Missing led to a spin-off series for its main star – but, no, not James Nesbitt, or the series two leads David Morrissey and Keeley Hawes. Viewers instead wanted more of the calm, veteran French detective Julien Baptiste, played by Tcheky Karyo. His own show debuted last year and is nearly as gripping as The Missing itself, with excellent supporting turns from Tom Hollander and, forming a surprise chalk-and-cheese partnership with Karyo, Jessica Raine. The Missing to Baptiste is a journey well worth taking.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT
The Missing

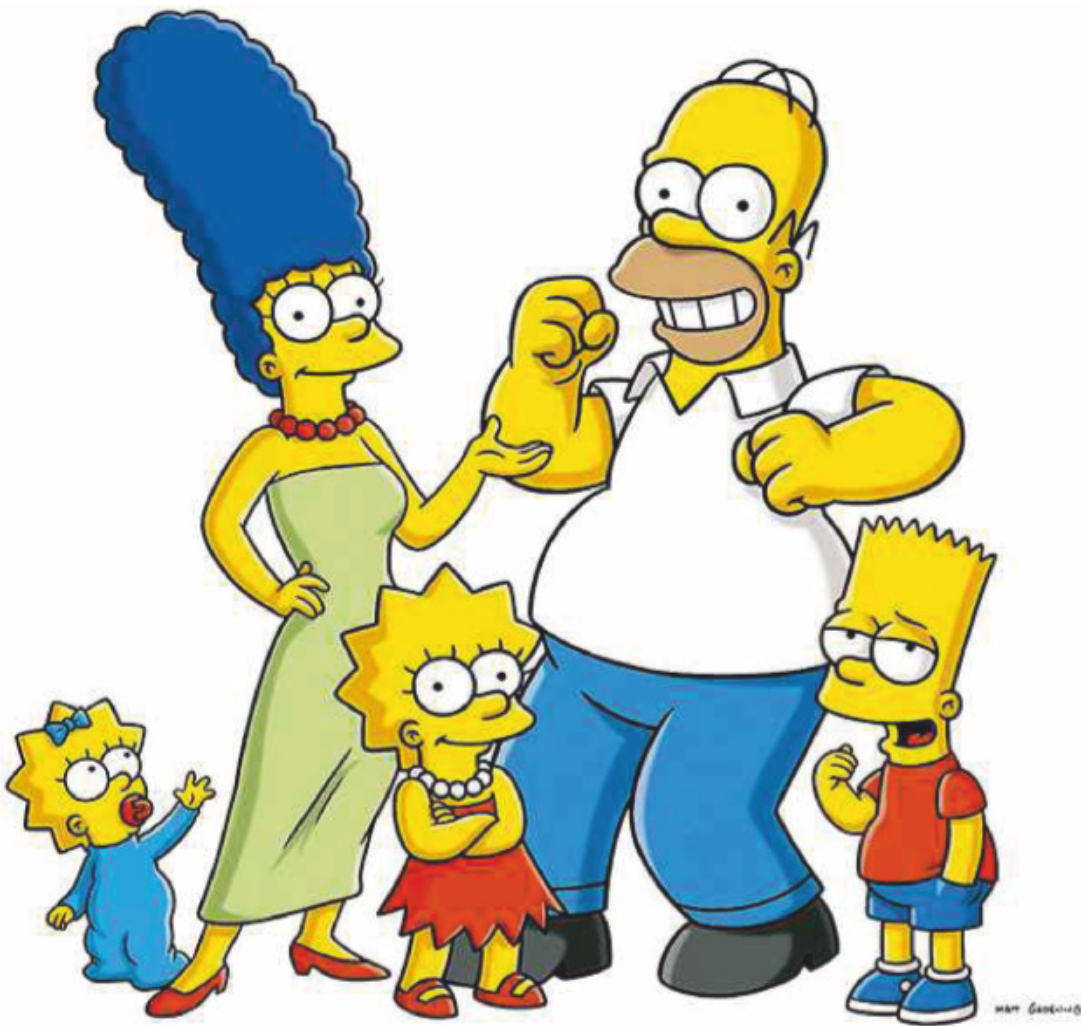

Available from 31 March

There are good dramas, there are great dramas, and then there are those rare dramas that get the whole nation talking. First shown on BBC1 in 2014, The Missing opens with a man (James Nesbitt) losing sight of his son while holidaying in France. From there a knotty tragedy unfurls, perpetually wrong-footing the audience – then a second series with different characters plays the same trick again. Grab a pen and paper and some string and get on the case. See also Baptiste, right...

5 BEST EPISODES OF THE SIMPSONS

Just where do you start with 660 episodes spread over three decades? Here's RT's pick of the best

1 HOMER'S ENEMY

Series eight, episode 23

The hardworking Frank Grimes joins the power plant and is affronted by Homer's incompetence. Will the company's laziest employee get the sack?

2 DEEP SPACE HOMER

Series five, episode 15

References to 2001: a Space Odyssey abound as Homer is selected by Nasa to participate in a space flight. Best remembered for the scene in which Homer eats floating potato chips to the strains of Blue Danube.

3 HOMER THE GREAT

Series six, episode 12

Widely regarded as the high point of the series, this joke-stuffed episode finds Homer joining an ancient secret society known as the Stonecutters. Patrick Stewart lends his voice.

4 ITCHY AND SCRATCHY LAND

Series six, episode four

Robots rebel when the family pays a visit to an amusement park, themed around the violent cat-and-mouse cartoon.

5 MARGE VS THE MONORAIL

Series four, episode 12

Marge resolves to stop a hastily purchased (and faulty) monorail from destroying Springfield. Leonard Nimoy guests.

HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE TO BINGE THE SIMPSONS?

As things stand, there are 660 episodes available, which each run at 22 minutes. To watch them all would require a Homer-level of sofa-sitting. By our reckoning, it'll take a little over ten straight days to binge the back catalogue. DAVID BROWN

NIGHY'S SPY HERO

Available now

You might be bingeing on the least demanding TV you can find at the moment, but this isn't obligatory. Seek a different kind of refuge with all three films in the sleek, wordy "Worricker trilogy", written by David Hare and shown on BBC2 in 2011-14. Bill Nighy is Johnny Worricker, a weary MI5 analyst given new purpose by a personal tragedy in the first instalment, Page Eight. Crisp epigrams and subtle subtexts abound.

ISLAND SLEUTHING

Shetland

Available now

Series five of the windswept BBC detective drama has arrived on BritBox, completing the box set and bringing you another dose of brooding doom, with Douglas Henshall refreshingly – by the standards of most TV sleuths – underplaying his role. There are plenty of fine, sensitively structured crime stories to get through: the way series three handles difficult material is particularly impressive.

STAR-STUDED ADAPTATION

Great Expectations

Available now

Dickens on TV can be wordy and traditional or impressionistic and dark; this BBC dramatisation from 2011 is decidedly in the latter camp. Written by Sarah Phelps, known now for her bold reworkings of Agatha Christie, it's an imaginative take that casts the noticeably unwizened Gillian Anderson as Miss Havisham, along with Douglas Booth as Pip, Ray Winstone as Magwitch and future The Crown star Vanessa Kirby as Estrella.

PERFECT PREQUEL

Endeavour

Series 7 available from 25 March

Earlier this year, ITV's Inspector Morse prequel delivered a short, sharp shock of a seventh series with just three new episodes. It pushes Morse and Thursday into the dank, tense 1970s, where they're beset by disillusionment, bad politics and some awful clothes as one of TV's classiest detective dramas has a moment of dark reflection. Start from the beginning and you can savour a period piece that's rich in retro style and dry wit.

How to stream TV

Baffled by the range of streaming services on offer? Doctor Digital offers his guide to the main players

NETFLIX

Price: £8.99/month (for HD)

Why subscribe: Netflix was the first name in original internet television, launching with political remake House of Cards. It has remained on top by expanding into every possible audience and genre, from food shows to period dramas such as The Crown.

How to get it: These days, it's hard to find a gadget that won't load Netflix – just open the main menu of a streaming device like the Apple TV 4K (£179) or Sky Q set-top box. In fact, many modern televisions have a dedicated “Netflix” button on their remote. netflix.com

AMAZON PRIME VIDEO

Price: £7.99/month (included with Amazon Prime next-day delivery)

Why subscribe: Amazon's original content is really just a “sweetener” to convince you to subscribe to their Amazon Prime membership, which includes overnight delivery from their shop. However, they're willing to spend big money to make it. The Grand Tour (featuring the old Top Gear boys) has finally found its footing, while a billion-dollar, multi-series adaptation of Lord of the Rings is currently in the offing.

How to get it: The best way of watching Prime is on Amazon's own gadget. The Fire TV Stick (£29.99 with Prime Membership) is a small dongle that plugs into your television's HDMI port, and can be controlled with your voice. amazon.co.uk/video

DISNEY+

Price: £5.99/month

Why subscribe: Less a streaming service than a babysitter. Disney+ features everyone from Snow White to Darth Vader to Iron Man, and even Homer Simpson.

Moreover, it's the only place to catch new TV series set in the world of Marvel and Star Wars. The Mandalorian – a series set in the same universe, which has made a star of a character known as “Baby Yoda” – has got better reviews than any of the recent Star Wars movies.

How to get it: Although it's brand new, this is a mega-budgeted Disney product, so the service will be available on pretty much every smart TV and streaming gadget you can name from day one. Most importantly, you will be able to find it by searching on the Android and Apple app stores, so children will be able to watch it on their tablets and smartphones. disneyplus.com

Price: £5.99/month

Why subscribe: Just because streaming is new doesn't mean we have to abandon the classics. A collaboration between the BBC and ITV, this features British gems such as Gavin & Stacey and Broadchurch.

How to get it: BritBox isn't ubiquitous yet, but it does have apps for both Android and Apple phones and tablets. It is also available for Samsung and Panasonic smart televisions, but before you buy a whole new set, consider plugging a Google Chromecast (google.com/chromecast £30) into your existing TV. With this dongle, you start watching something on your phone, press the button (a rectangle with lines in the corner) and it transfers to your television. britbox.co.uk

AND HERE ARE SOME STREAMING SERVICES YOU CAN GET FOR FREE...

BBC IPLAYER

It's free to watch BBC shows via iPlayer (bbc.co.uk/iplayer). All you need to do is register with a BBC account to get access to a raft of programming that is also free to download. Access this either via an app through your TV, or simply watch via your computer online.

ITV HUB

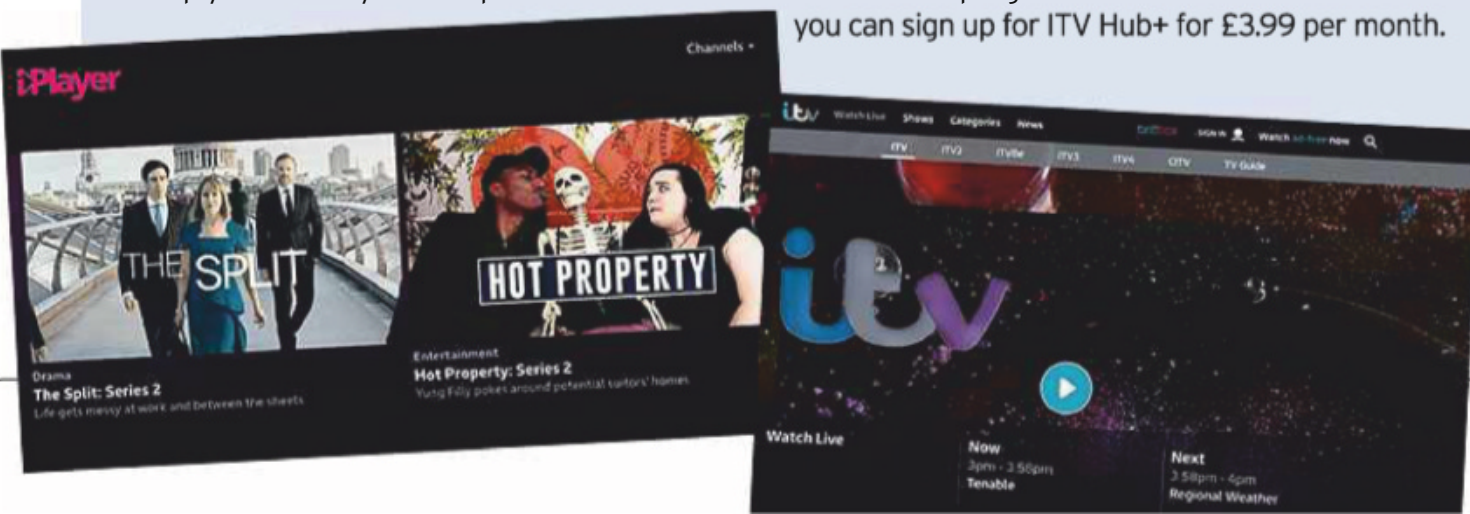

ITV programmes are free to catch up with via the channel's streaming service, ITV Hub. Look for the icon on your TV's apps section, or visit itv.com/hub to watch programmes from ITV, ITV2, ITV3, ITV4, ITVBe and CITV. All you need to do is register, but to download programmes or watch without adverts you can sign up for ITV Hub+ for £3.99 per month.

ALL4

To catch up on Channel 4, E4, More4, Film4 and Walter Presents programmes, sign up for free for an All 4 account online (channel4.com). Similar to ITV, Channel 4 also have All4+ enabling you to watch without adverts for £3.99 a month.

MY 5

Channel 5's shows are also available for free, either through the app on your TV or the website my5.tv where there's not only programming from Channel 5 available to catch-up with, but also the likes of Blaze and the Smithsonian Channel.

Missing Where the Heart Is? You can prescribe yourself a generous dose of this much-loved medical drama as it returns to the Drama channel

Get home to Where the Heart Is

Philip Middlemiss and Leslie Ash star in the heartwarming drama

Where the Heart Is is as quintessentially British as dunking biscuits in your tea and discussing the weather. And, as with all great series, life and love often collide in the bittersweet drama.

Set in the heart of the Yorkshire Dales, the show follows the trials and tribulations of district nurses and sisters-in-law Peggy Snow and Ruth Goddard, played by a post-The Darling Buds of May Pam Ferris and a pre-Happy Valley Sarah Lancashire, respectively.

Heralded for its realistic but gentle portrayal of life's highs and lows – from handling promiscuous teenagers to dealing with marriage breakdowns – delving into the lives of fictional Skelthwaite's medical staff became a Sunday-night ritual for many during the show's run from 1997 to 2006. And now you can enjoy this light-hearted drama all over again as it returns to Drama with series 5, or catch the first four seasons on UKTV Play.

If you're a soap fan, you'll also enjoy the smorgasbord of familiar faces that crop up throughout the series. With Coronation Street's Lesley Dunlop and Philip Middlemiss, and Emmerdale's Samantha Giles and Fiona Wade among those popping up, it's something of a who's who of the soap world.

You can't beat a good helping of comforting nostalgia, plus gripping and emotive storylines. So, what are you waiting for? Tune in to the Drama channel now.

Like your drama with a touch of nostalgia? Let your remote take you back in time with the Drama channel. It's home to a selection of critically acclaimed shows that are sure to keep you glued to your screen, from Ashes to Ashes and The Bill to New Tricks and Silent Witness.

Now, which one to watch first...

Don't miss an episode. Starts at 4.20pm on Friday 27 March on the Drama channel

GANGSTER SQUAD Peaky Blinders

Available now

As RT went to press, the fifth series was just dropping off iPlayer and the sixth series has put its filming on hold. To Netflix, then, for the retrospective binge. A successful attempt to ape the grandiose menace of American gangster series such as Boardwalk Empire, this BBC saga set in 1920s Birmingham has a mesmerizing leading man in Cillian Murphy and a knack for memorable violence and put-downs.

HE'S ELECTRIC Black Lightning

Series 3 available from 26 March

The DC comic about a school principal in a rough urban area who would rather not use his ability to generate and manipulate electricity has been turned into a thoughtful but thrilling TV show. In the States it airs on the CW, the network that brought us Arrow, The Flash and Riverdale – this has got a bit of those shows' soapy gloss, but the racial politics of the character and the set-up are intact, as Black Lightning's alter ego Jefferson Pierce (Cress Williams) faces up to gang violence and police brutality. We're now on to series three.

SMELLS LIKE TEEN SPIRIT Dare Me

Available now

If you recently became engrossed in Netflix's cheerleader documentary series Cheer – and if you've not tried it, check it out pronto – here's the vastly less wholesome fictional version. A tough new coach (Willa Fitzgerald) arrives in a nowhere town to shake up the local cheerleading team, with flashforwards telling us that blood and chaos are incoming. In the interim is an almost trippy portrayal of lethally disaffected teens, obsessed with each other's bodies and sitting on a tinderbox of secrets.

AMAZON PRIME

FIERCE COMPETITION Making the Cut

Available from 27 March

At first glance this looks like a rip-off of the recent Netflix show Next in Fashion, where designers from around the world compete to present the most innovative couture to celebrity judges. In fairness to hosts Heidi Klum and Tim Gunn, though, they are veterans of the similar, long-running series Project Runway. In this show, the hook is that the competition is on Amazon, which will also then sell the winner's clothes worldwide. Judges include influencer Chiara Ferragni and Naomi Campbell.

PERIOD ROMANCE Shades of Love

Available now

Indulge in some shameless escapism with a series that was first shown on Channel 5 in 2013, but feels about 20 years older. Based on the Rosamunde Pilcher book, it's a stirring tale of romance, secrets, disputed paternity and a fair lashing of tasteful but still lusty sex, often in lakeside summerhouses. Rebecca Night is the beautiful heiress at the centre of it, in a cast that also features Charles Dance, Eileen Atkins, Harriet Walter, Freddie Fox and, in an early TV role, Jessie Buckley.

UKTV PLAY

FLY ON THE WALL Warbird Workshop

Available now

Here's a delightful meeting of makeover TV and historical nostalgia from the Yesterday channel. Teams of experts restore aircraft that were crucial to the Allied effort in the Second World War, while learning what those planes were used for. The series plays its trump card, Spitfires, in episode one, but subsequent episodes are just as involving.

I love British television

Nothing beats our TV in times of trouble, says Alison Graham

SO TELEVISION HAS now come into its own – and by that I mean mainstream, “old-fashioned” television that everyone can watch. Not only are people warming their hands around Huw Edwards as they would a glowing camp fire – viewing figures for dear, trusted BBC News have rocketed – even as he delivers the big, bad stuff, but audiences (you and I) are also taking refuge in gentle escapism.

There are buckets of love in and for The Repair Shop (Wednesday BBC1), which harks back to those days when people still hugged each other and we didn't have to place ourselves a metre away from anyone else in case they shared their conspiracy theories about Covid-19.

‘It does my heart good to know that campfire TV is far from dead’

Antiques Roadshow and Countryfile, already the BBC's Sunday-night artillery, have increased their viewing figures as the nation looks to lose itself in these downy cushions of grass and sunshine. Surely nothing can really go wrong in a world where people want to know the true value of a hideous vase they feel is of the Tang dynasty. Or where Matt Baker NEVER STOPS SMILING when he meets people in fields.

If you really want to dive head-first into a marshmallow bed, not just from the coronavirus but from real life, real people and real dialogue in general, you could do a lot worse than Belgravia (Sunday ITV). You could even go the whole hog by putting on an empire-line dress and gathering your hair into ringlets. And that's just the men. Ho-ho.

But surely there is no better time to pretend

SAFE SPACE
Huw Edwards, Matt Baker and the experts of The Repair Shop are all vital comfort in uncertain times you're an aristocratic Georgian lady as you swan around in splendid self-isolation, introducing yourself to other imaginary members of the aristocracy as you eat dainty scones and insist on updates about the Napoleonic Wars. Believe me, if anything is going to take your mind off the current crisis it's watching some very good actors battle barbed-wire sentences such as, “What is this new-fangled tea? Why can't one sit at table?”

Somehow it does my old heart good to know that camp-fire television is far from dead, despite all of the doomy predictions about how scheduled TV is a moth-eaten concept in this bold new world of streaming, downloading and devices. In fact it booms in times of adversity, clearly.

Of course streaming has its place. If we need to take refuge in something well away from family members as they bicker about the last of the half-fat milk, why not hide in iPlayer where you'll find Wallander and the brilliant This Country?

But as the country and the world fracture into small pieces of humanity, each of us existing in little pods of safety (we hope), we need something to tie us together, to give us shared experiences, even if it's only remotely.

AT LEAST IF we've all watched something, we can chat about it online, or by text, or even (heavens!) face to face, whatever our chosen means of communicating with our telly friends. Only old-fashioned television can do this, supply those shared experiences that are so important when so many of our fellow humans across the country are facing long periods in potentially lonely isolation.

Wherever you do your viewing, and whatever you plan to watch, I wish you safety and strength, health and happiness. There are hard times ahead, but we'll manage. We have great television.

SHIELD MAIDENS
Were there women warriors among the Repton Vikings?

PICK OF THE DAY Britain's Viking Graveyard 8.00pm C4

HISTORY In the middle of the ninth century, Britain was invaded. It wasn't the first time the Vikings had landed here, but this was no raiding party – they were here to stay. Rowing their longboats along the river network through the heart of England, they arrived at Repton, in Derbyshire, the religious heart of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Mercia, and settled in.

In this doc, first shown last Easter, archaeologists Dr Cat Jarman and Prof Mark Horton (whom you may recall from Time Team) are sifting through the evidence and using the latest technology to find out more. Most of this evidence comes from bones – lots of them. "One felt this crunch, crunch, crunch as one passed across this sea of human debris," says Horton; he was part of the team that uncovered the remains of 264 individuals in the village churchyard in the 70s. This is nitty-gritty archaeology, where the smallest finds can reap the largest rewards; the pair are positively giddy when they uncover a small lump of lead that has major significance. GILL CRAWFORD

Animal Rescue School

6.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The trainee RSPCA inspectors we met in episode one still have nine months of rigorous teaching, physical tests and on-the-job assessment before they land a job with the charity. So for now they're out shadowing qualified inspectors on real-life cases.

For young Georgie that involves rescuing two abandoned cats and helping a malnourished swan, while Natalie helps police officers as they stamp out blood sport in Lincolnshire. Then it's back to the classroom for a wave of pass-or-fail exams on animal welfare law. Rowena is feeling the pressure – it's the first exams she's sat in seven years and she's struggled to keep up with her revision. JANE RACKHAM

Ant and Dec's Saturday Night Takeaway

7.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT This, more than any other show on TV, relies on the involvement of its studio audience. Not just for the "win the ads" game but for all those feel-good segments and general party atmosphere. But following Covid-19 restrictions, the show has not only announced that the finale episode from Florida is cancelled but that the rest of the series is going to be broadcast without a live audience.

It will certainly be a test of Ant and Dec's entertainment skills, although they will have the production team to bounce off as they do with I'm a Celebrity. No news about guests yet.

The Voice UK: Most Memorable Moments

8.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT After the pre-recorded rounds we've seen over the last few months on The Voice UK, tonight was supposed to be the live semi-final followed by the final next weekend. However, these two episodes have now been pushed back until later in the year, so we're going to have a bit of a wait before this year's winner is crowned.

But that doesn't mean that we're not going to get a fix of The Voice, as ITV have instead put together a compilation of some of the best moments from the past few series, looking back at some of the most memorable performances and some of the coaches' favourite Blind Auditions. FRANCES TAYLOR

Inspector Montalbano

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA BBC4 aims to lift our mood with a tantalising glimpse of the currently unreachable fantasy of Sicily in all its glory. With bit of murder, of course. In A Delicate Matter, first shown in 2017, Salvo is holidaying in Genoa, when, to his lover Livia's chagrin, he's summoned back to Vigata. A rather refined 67-year-old prostitute, Maria Castellino, has been strangled to death in her boudoir. Mimi theorises about "deviant" gerontophilia and erotic asphyxiation, and finds a suspect who ticks both boxes, but Salvo is having none of it.

A rambling investigation ensues, compensated for by local colour, eccentrics and yummy food. It's a dish to savour. PATRICK MULKERN

MATCH OF THE DAY: TOP 10

For those missing Match of the Day, the BBC has launched an alternative to ensure you get a fix of Gary Lineker, Alan Shearer and Ian Wright's take on the beautiful game. It'll be broadcast from Lineker's kitchen, with the trio hosting a new podcast called Match of the Day: Top 10, in which the former England internationals will chat about a range of football-related top 10s.

"There's so many amazing talking points in football, past and present, so it's a pleasure to have Alan and Ian round my place to discuss these for the podcast," said Lineker. "I might even provide lunch if we can agree on a few things."

The first episode is available on BBC Sounds now, and new episodes will be uploaded every Wednesday. Tonight's TV schedules see Match of the Day replaced with a double-bill of Ricky Gervais sitcom Extras. FT

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Pappano's Greatest Arias

iPlayer (expires today)

First shown last year, this is a satisfying example of the "music explained" documentary style, in which the longstanding musical director of the Royal Opera House takes apart his favourite moments of transcendence. He analyses the development of the aria, from Monteverdi through the classics and on to the modern form. It's a grand meeting of passion and expertise: many of the musical demonstrations are electric.

KIDS' CHOICE

Andy and the Band

iPlayer

Available in full just when you might need something new to distract the kids, this 15-episode, iPlayer-only series sees CBeebies star Andy Day and his musician friends touring the country, doing odd jobs for fans in need of help. As they go they sing songs with a theme of acceptance and encouragement. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Girls Trip

9.00pm C4

Raunchy comedy with a big heart starring Regina Hall, Jada Pinkett Smith, Queen Latifah and Tiffany Haddish. Four friends embark on a wild weekend in New Orleans that will either strengthen or destroy their bond. See p30

Celebrity Murder Mystery

9.00pm Channel 5

REALITY Move over, Angela Lansbury – now Angela Rippon is displaying Jessica Fletcher crime-solving nous. "She has one of the most brilliant forensic minds I've ever come across," says John Sergeant, whose hangdog charm leaves you questioning whether he really means anything that comes out of his mouth. But there's no denying that without Rippon, this band of amateur detectives really would be floundering.

In the concluding part of Channel 5's enjoyable reality whodunnit show, the body count rises and the murder scenes get more grisly (the fake blood budget must have been huge), before the mystery is solved in classic style as the suspects gather for the unmasking. DAVID BROWN

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.15pm BBC1

COMEDY "Instead of being depressed," as the opening jingle goes, prepare to snigger, even guffaw, as parallel comedy worlds collide when Lee Mack joins Agnes in her kitchen. The star of Would I Lie "on" You? gets into a hilarious tangle with Mammy when she struggles to make him tea. "I see why you're not on at eight o'clock," says Mack. Just as game are Emilia Fox and her actress mum Joanna David. A classy pair, they're excited to be on the show, and the latter sees it as an opportunity to broach the igniting of farts.

This format has cut the dreck and found its feet, becoming much more of a saucy chat show. Tonight's dream topping is Billy Ocean, who serenades Agnes in the boozier. PM

Clive James: Postcard from Shanghai

11.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY It's wonderful that, as a tribute to the late great Clive James (who died last November), BBC4 is reviving his travelogues from three decades ago. Each has a different flavour, but all are replete with his dry wit and wry observations.

What a difference 30 years make. In 1990, Shanghai was on the cusp of radical change: "If they really were heading for the future, they were starting from a long way in the past," notes Clive, gazing out from his Hilton loft but eager to immerse himself in the melée of the streets, markets and parks below. He packs a lot in – cycling, tai chi, demos and opera... There's a small stack of other Postcards to catch via iPlayer. PM

TOUGH TIMES

Charlie (Derek Thompson) is causing consternation

Casualty

8.20pm BBC1

DRAMA In the wake of Duffy's death, stalwart nurse Charlie (Derek Thompson) has been hiding from his duties, opting to clean cubicles rather than treat patients. But it's now reached the stage where Jacob (Charles Venn) has made a complaint, so Fletch (Alex Walkinshaw) has made the trip down from the wards of Holby City to assess the situation.

Unfortunately, what he witnesses is Charlie making a mistake where a patient's wishes are concerned – something that leads to one of his increasingly splanetic outbursts, this one railing against everyone in his line of vision.

Someone else with a temper threatening to boil over is paramedic Lev, who's struggling to cope with son Luka's cancer diagnosis. It's a heart-breaking state of affairs and I'm fearing that there'll be a tragic end to this story.

Her Smell ★★★ 10.05pm Sky Premiere

Alex Ross Perry's grungy redemption saga marks his third collaboration with star Elisabeth Moss following Queen of Earth and Listen Up Philip. She plays Becky Something, a burnt-out wild child who makes life hell for her bandmates, manager, mother and ex-husband. Moss seizes the role with both hands and gives a magnetic performance, raging both eloquently and malevolently. While too little of Becky's bile finds its way into her songs, there's poignancy in the piano ballad she sings to her daughter. DAVID PARKINSON

Tempting date

Man Up ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Now available on catch-up, this feel-good comedy stars Lake Bell as a single woman who steals someone else's blind date (Simon Pegg) and attempts to perpetuate the lie over the course of one mayhem-filled night. The script is snappy and there's a screwball rhythm to the action, plus winning support from Rory Kinnear (as Bell's oddball school chum) and Olivia Williams (as Pegg's weird ex-wife). Set against buzzing London streets, Ben Palmer's film feels like a frisky romantic version of After Hours. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

Kid on the case

Timmy Failure: Mistakes Were Made ★★★ Disney+

Part of the new original content on the Disney+ service, this playful offering stars Winslow Fegley as an oddball kid with delusions of being a detective. Together with his (imaginary) polar bear partner, he sets about trying to solve the case of a missing backpack, only to become embroiled in a Russian conspiracy. JAMIE HEALY

WHO'S THE CUCKOO?
Dan (Martin Compston) and Kaya (Mirren Mack) are struggling

PICK OF THE DAY The Nest 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Wealthy married couple Dan and Emily and their teenage surrogate Kaya are an unhappy trio in that beautiful house on the water. Kaya (the excellent Mirren Mack) feels stifled by Emily's (Sophie Rundle) constant monitoring and her insistence on healthy eating.

"Superfoods!" she trills as she puts a plate of green stuff in front of Kaya. "Kale, lentils and lean beef."

So Nicole Taylor's excellent domestic noir thriller moves up several gears when Kaya is pushed beyond her fragile limits to outright rebellion. We already know there's something not quite right about her. Yes, she's spent most of her young life in care and is brittle and vulnerable. But there's something else, something unsettling...

Dan (Martin Compston), a Glasgow property developer, is beginning to regret bringing Kaya into his ordered, moneyed life. When a journalist starts sniffing around, he makes his move. ALISON GRAHAM

Countryfile

7.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL There'll probably be a Matt Baker-shaped hole in this edition; he announced recently he was self-isolating. So, unless he's done some pre-records, the burden falls on Ellie Harrison's shoulders.

She's in the Lugg Valley in Herefordshire, where toads should be waking up from hibernation and making the journey back to their breeding ponds. These migrations often involve the amphibians crossing busy roads, one of the reasons their numbers have dropped by an alarming 68 per cent in 30 years. Ellie joins volunteers helping them cross. She also meets an artist inspired by flooded landscapes (the area was badly affected by February's rainfall). JANE RACKHAM

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT A couple of keen younger members of the Roadshow audience are among the crowds on a second visit to Morden Hall Park in London. A little girl brings in a box of bits she found in a house move, while a small boy demonstrates a remarkable piece of knowledge about high-end jewellery during Fiona Bruce's "good, better, best" challenge.

As for the adults, there are plenty of "oohs" and "aaahs" and gasps when the experts give their valuations. There are some beautiful objects, including a crisp pink pendant watch described as "absolutely cracking" and a fine collection of vinaigrette boxes, one of which is "vanishingly rare". AG

Race across the World

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY "Reaching the other side of the world has never been easier..." announces narrator John Hannah at the start of each episode. With the current state of world travel, they might want to tweak that. In fact, Race across the World is one of many series in production that have been hit by the coronavirus crisis. But when they were filming this race last year, the problem was unrest in Ecuador, meaning tonight's episode begins with something anathema to the spirit of the show: a plane flight.

"Everyone feels like being in a plane is cheating. I bloody love it!" says 19-year-old Sam. Meanwhile, Jen and Rob are hoping to meet spectacled bears. DAVID BUTCHER

The Good Karma Hospital

8.00pm C4

DRAMA Like all doctors in medical dramas, Ruby Walker always gets embroiled in her patients' lives as well as treating their medical issues. Having set elderly patient Edmund (Kenneth Cranham) on the path to tracing his childhood friend, Ruby now takes on a villager who has both diabetes and personal problems. Lydia, too, takes matters into her own hands and confronts Jyoti's fiancé about the acid attack. She's surprised – really? – that he's so casual about it.

And Gabriel and Aisha decide that now she's working at the hospital, it's better everything is out in the open. Ruby agrees. A prescription for heartbreak, I suspect. JR

KENNETH CRANHAM'S TV CV

Dunfermline-born Kenneth Cranham has been appearing on screen since the 1960s. He's currently playing Edmund in The Good Karma Hospital (8pm ITV). Other recent roles have included in BBC1 sitcom Scarborough, ITV mini-series Hatton Garden and crime drama Bancroft.

After starting out in groundbreaking programmes like Coronation Street and Z Cars, the now 75-year-old actor (who was married to Diana Quick in the 1970s), went on to star in shows including Shine On Harvey Moon, Rules of Engagement and El CID.

Cranham, who trained at both the National Youth Theatre and Rada, has also enjoyed an illustrious career in film and on the stage. Alongside roles in films including Chocolat, Valkyrie, Made in Dagenham and Maleficent, he was nominated for an Olivier Award for An Inspector Calls in the West End in 1992, and won the best actor Olivier gong in 2016 for The Father. FRANCES TAYLOR

Secrets of Egypt's Valley of the Kings

8.00pm C4

HISTORY The return of the Egyptological equivalent of Digging for Britain, where we follow teams of archaeologists from around the world as they continue to delve into the history of one of the great civilisations.

In this episode, they're investigating why Egypt's pharaohs chose to abandon their great – and highly visible – funerary monuments, the pyramids, for underground tombs in a hidden desert valley some 400 miles away. There's a scary descent 100m below ground to explore the first tomb built in the Valley, and in a treat for those with a ghoulish bent, one group tries to identify the body parts left behind after tombs were ransacked by ancient looters. GILL CRAWFORD

Dragons' Den

9.00pm BBC2

REALITY This is almost too good to be true. A couple enter the Den with what should be the hottest product on the planet right now – hi-tech machines that purify the air and kill viruses. Obviously, the programme was recorded months ago, so neither Dragons nor entrepreneurs could have had a clue how virus-centric the world was about to become.

Reasonably enough, the fact the pair want £100,000 for a miserly two per cent of their business makes the Dragons balk. In what world is that thing worth £5m? Well, we know the answer, and one imagines Radic8 (as they're called) are now doing quite nicely. Also up for grabs, halloumi-style cheese made in Yorkshire. DB

Belgravia

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA There's an uncomfortable carriage ride back home for the Trenchards after the disastrous ball where poor Ann e Trenchard was royally stitched up and ambushed by scheming Lady Brockenhurst.

So the Big Secret is out in Julian Fellowes's starchy drama, and everyone is agog – just who is the handsome Charles Pope, the young cotton manufacturer from Manchester who has commanded so much top-level attention?

Inevitably, his presence causes ructions in both the Trenchard and Brockenhurst families, as their idle sons – and one gambling rector – feel slighted when their requests for cash are ignored in favour of Mr Pope and his cotton empire. AG

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

In My Skin

from 6am BBC3, iPlayer

After a promising pilot episode in 2018, this comedy drama returns for a full five-part series, which is up now as a box set. Bethan (Gabrielle Creevy) is a 16-year-old whose coming of age is complicated by her eccentric dad (Rhodri Meilir) and her mother's (Jo Hartley) mental health problems. Creevy and the show's writer, Kayleigh Llewellyn, have sharp ears for the way adolescents think, talk and survive under duress – and how they hide their real selves from their peers.

KIDS' CHOICE

The Snow Spider

6.05pm CBBC, BBC1 Wales, iPlayer

Ruby Rose plays Kate Kane, the newest caped crusader in Gotham City

Batwoman

9.00pm E4

DRAMA New series Batman is missing. Gotham City is in turmoil. Now a new hero will rise and don the cowl. Time to meet Batwoman!

After airing in the US last year, this fun new superhero series from the TV "Arrowverse" – which includes Arrow, The Flash, Supergirl and Legends of Tomorrow – comes to British television at last, starring Orange Is the New Black's Ruby Rose in the title role.

As Kate Kane, a martial-arts specialist with ties to Bruce Wayne and a troubled past, Rose's new hero is the perfect person to take up the Bat-mantle when the original Caped Crusader goes AWOL. But can she tackle her own inner demons as well?

To find out, she'll have to take on a dastardly new villain with a love of Alice in Wonderland and a penchant for knife-throwing. Curiouser and curiouser...

The right to vote

Suffragette ★★★★★ A114 FREE TO VIEW

Director Sarah Gavron and writer Abi Morgan beat their feminist drum proudly with this story centred around the fight for the female vote. Opening in London in 1912, the fictional story stars Carey Mulligan as a wrung-out laundry worker, Anne-Marie Duff as her feisty colleague and Helena Bonham Carter as a local campaigner, while Meryl Streep plays real-life activist Emmeline Pankhurst. Suffragette is an inspiring introduction to a chapter of history that's been largely ignored on screen. EMMA SIMMONDS

Mulan ★★★★★ 4.30pm Sky Disney/Disney+

This weekend was meant to mark the release of Disney's live-action adaptation of Mulan, only for it to be postponed owing to the coronavirus pandemic. You can still watch the studio's 1998 animated version, though. Set in ancient China, it sees the eponymous heroine donning men's clothes and going to war to save her family honour. There are some splendid action set pieces, a romance between Mulan and her brave captain, and lots of laughs courtesy of a snappy little dragon voiced by Eddie Murphy. TOM HUTCHINSON

Cinema releases at home

Sky Store and other streaming platforms Universal is tackling the coronavirus crisis by releasing a number of its in-cinema films direct to streaming. Jane Austen adaptation Emma (pictured), thriller The Hunt and horror The Invisible Man are now available to rent, with animated sequel Trolls World Tour to follow on 6 April. JOSH WINNING

PORTRAITS OF THE ARTIST
Mark Gatiss profiles author and illustrator Aubrey Beardsley

PICK OF THE DAY Scandal and Beauty: Mark Gatiss on Aubrey Beardsley 9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK Aubrey Beardsley died of TB aged 25 having lived life, said one observer, "with the fatal speed of those who are to die young". Mark Gatiss, a long-time Beardsley admirer, presents an absorbing profile of this briefly blazing talent. Beardsley had a very modern facility for self-promotion and thought nothing of pushing himself in front of the most influential people, starting with the great Pre-Raphaelite artist Edward Burne-Jones. Gatiss tells of how Beardsley and his sister visited the latter's London studio, and Beardsley having the temerity to show the great man his drawings.

Luckily, Burne-Jones saw great promise and urged Beardsley to become a professional artist. On and off throughout his brief career, Beardsley's unsettling, often frankly revealing drawings, caused scandal.

He even became, accidentally, embroiled in the downfall of his friend Oscar Wilde, and Gatiss talks to Stephen Fry about Beardsley's influence on Wilde's work. ALISON GRAHAM

London Kills

2.15pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE As the second series of this daily crime drama starts, builders find a body buried in the back yard of a Camden house once lived in by students. The murder investigation team's DS Vivienne Cole (Sharon Small) and DI David Bradford (Hugo Speer) soon learn the dead lad had mental health issues before they uncover a swirling mass of resentment, deceit and prejudice among his so-called friends.

Meanwhile, Bradford's missing wife causes problems with his young daughter. There are holes in the plot big enough to bury a body in, but Small and Speer are always good to watch and spotting guest stars is fun. Today it's Downton Abbey's Sophie McShera. JANE RACKHAM

First Dates Abroad

8.00pm E4

REALITY Prepare to throw another prawn on the barbie as the dining-and-dating show returns Down Under.

Italian-born electrician Daniel is looking for a woman who likes "tradies" (that's Aussie slang for tradespeople), so there's a real connection when he hooks up with Alex. When he discovers she's half-Italian, there's even more of a spark.

At another table is Brad. He wants to find a woman he can love as much as his two dogs. How romantic. His date, farmer Kelly, has been single for nine years: in fact, she's had longer relationships with her 25 horses than with any of her previous boyfriends. Could these animal lovers be the perfect match? JR

Plane Resurrection

8.00pm PBS America

DOCUMENTARY There are stirring tales of WW2 derring-do here, including one involving an American Volunteer Group pilot, Charlie Bond, who, after being shot down, bailed out with his flying overalls aflame and eyebrows singed before rolling in a stream to put out the fire.

But you may come away feeling that the programme doesn't quite live up to its title, as we don't actually see much modern-day footage of enthusiasts restoring P-40 Warhawks to their former glory. It's a shame because the tiger shark teeth on those aircrafts are as striking now as they must have been while bared in battle nearly 80 years ago. Though some brief air-to-air photography does give us a taste. DAVID BROWN

MasterChef

9.00pm BBC1

FOOD It's knockout week, which means the remaining 16 cooks are split into two groups. The first eight cook for John Torode and Gregg Wallace tonight – and the standard is impressive. "I was ready to dislike both your dishes, but I think they're fantastic!" Torode tells one contestant while another is told, "For an amateur cook, this is extraordinary."

After this challenge, the best five move on to Michelin-starred London restaurant Da Terra for a lunch service where one starter involves plating a slow-cooked egg yolk – without breaking it. A scary prospect when, as the contestant admits, you know you can be a bit heavy-handed... "It's like performing surgery." JR

Changes to the soap schedules due to the coronavirus's impact on production were being finalised as RT went to press, but should settle into their new patterns this week. Coronation Street now airs three times a week (Mon, Wed, Fri at 7.30pm); Emmerdale drops the bonus Thu episode but remains on Mon–Fri at 7pm; and EastEnders reverts to twice-weekly (Mon 8pm, Tue 7.30pm). Tonight Phil makes a big entrance at the wake of his adopted son Denny's funeral, but grieving mum Sharon blames her ex for his death so she's unlikely to be offering him a finger sandwich from the buffet. Meanwhile, Hollyoaks is now on thrice-weekly, Mon to Wed 6.30pm, and EastEnders fans should tune in to see Richard Blackwood, formerly Walford gangster/supergrass Vincent Hubbard, make his debut as Felix Westwood, long-lost father of Martine's triplets. Let's hope Hollyoaks make more of Blackwood's charismatic talents than EastEnders did in the latter part of his tenure there. JOHNATHON HUGHES

Liar

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA At one stage in this interminable drama a character wails, "I just need this to end, one way or another!" You and me both, love. As it is, Laura (Joanne Froggatt) continues to rattle around that seaside town, turning up at the gates of the police station, meeting a stranger under a pier and stalking a detective.

The timeline is still all over the place... one week... two weeks... to the point where it's hard to keep track on reality and it's even harder to care who killed rapist Andrew Earlam.

Meanwhile, Laura's sister and brother-in-law join the hunt for whoever is trying to frame Laura for murder, and we learn something about DI Renton's personal life. AG

Putin: a Russian Spy Story

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY This chapter of the probing profile looks at how Vladimir Putin tightened his grip on power in the 2000s. Bridget Kendall recalls interviewing Putin early in his presidency: "He was a bit unsure of himself. When he came into the room, you didn't quite notice he'd come in... You felt a sense of vulnerability."

That didn't last. The programme charts in chilling detail how Putin took on Russia's oligarchs and eliminated former allies whom he saw as traitors, such as former FSB officer Alexander Litvinenko. The latter's widow Marina speaks about their assumption that London would be a safe place to live in exile – until her husband was poisoned. DAVID BUTCHER

Westworld

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DOCUMENTARY Who is Charlotte Hale? That's the question both the audience and Charlotte (Tessa Thompson) herself will be asking after this week's Westworld, which homes in on the former corporate executive-turned-robot doppelganger.

After the real Charlotte was killed last series, rebellious robot host Dolores (Evan Rachel Wood) took her place – but now there's a different host brain inside Charlotte, and she's losing her grip on reality. Who exactly is inside the Charlotte body remains a mystery, but Thompson still puts in an arresting performance as a synthetic human having an identity crisis – and when it's revealed that there's a mole inside "her" company, her troubles are just beginning. HUW FULLERTON

We're past halfway in series five of the time-travelling romance, which this year has its protagonists only fitfully together. While Jamie (Sam Heughan) concentrates on the American Revolutionary War, Claire (Caitriona Balfe) is flitting between that and the 1960s, although both involve struggling to stop people dying by giving them penicillin.

QUEEN VIC

Victoria Coren Mitchell presides over a suitably fiendish final...

Only Connect

8.00pm BBC2

QUIZ What will we do during this time of national crisis without Only Connect, which ends tonight with the grand final? Surely part of any Government emergency strategy should be to show the super-quiz for super-brains every night until further notice. Now there's a morale-booster. Surely, too, by the time the emergency is over, every one of us will be expert quizzers, what with all of that extra reading and noodling around on the internet we're doing in our isolation.

Possibly not to this level, though. It's a tough final contest, with each precious point painfully won by two excellent teams. But even these fine minds find hitting a consistent beat of right answers hard, and the connecting walls are brutal, with our sympathetic host Victoria Coren Mitchell describing them as "horrible".

There isn't even much comfort for viewers at home in the missing vowels round, which is a beast. AG

9.00 The Real Michael Jackson

Investigative reporter Jacques Peretti has spent much of his life analysing the controversial singer. In this feature-length documentary he charts Jackson's rise to fame and his subsequent fall, seeking to capture a fuller picture of this complex, contradictory character by exploring what clues were missed. Did he manipulate his celebrity status and the entertainment machine to conceal the truth? And what was the audience's part in it all, if any? With contributions from, among others, Donny Osmond and Michael Jackson biographer J Randy Taraborrelli. Producer Shurwin Beckford (S) (HD)

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.00 Scandal and Beauty: Mark Gatiss on Aubrey Beardsley
RT The actor and writer examines the life of the Victorian artist who scandalised the art world of the 1890s, revealing a man who was a technological innovator. He follows Beardsley's footsteps from his childhood in Brighton, via notoriety among the decadents of London's fin de siècle society, to his early death in France in 1898 at the age of just 25. See p64.
Director Matthew Thomas; Exec producers John Das and Sebastian Barfield Signed rpt 3am (S) (HD)

10.00 England's Forgotten Queen: the Life and Death of Lady Jane Grey 3/3. On the final day of her reign, the men who placed Jane on the throne abandon her and switch sides to join Mary. Jane is placed on trial and, at first, her life is spared, before her successor decrees that she should be executed. Historian Helen Castor discovers the legacy she left behind.
Director Bill Thomas; Executive producers Tim Green and Emily Dalton (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

11.00 Sex and Sensibility: the Allure of Art Nouveau 3/3. Stephen Smith explores how the development of the "jugendstil" aesthetic revolutionised the art and architecture of Vienna in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Through the work of artists and designers including Gustav Klimt, he explains how Viennese disciples of art nouveau rebelled against establishment ideas.

A snow-stopping triumph

Frozen II ★★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/DVD This worthy sequel has surpassed the game-changing original film to become the highest-grossing animated movie of all time. In a darker continuation of the story, sisters Elsa and Anna search the misty far north for an enchanted forest where the truth about their royal parents lies. The movie weaves spectacular fairy-tale fantasy with edgy humour, and the animation literally shimmers off the screen. It takes a little time to warm up, but the superbly choreographed song Into the Unknown breaks the ice. ALAN JONES

New to Netflix today

I, Tonya ★★★★★ Netflix

Disgraced ice-skating champion Tonya Harding's tough life informs this irreverent and entertaining biopic. Despite her technical prowess, Harding was far from the ladylike ideal desired by America's figure-skating governing body, while her association with those behind the infamous attack on her rival Nancy Kerrigan brought about her downfall. Margot Robbie successfully captures Harding's rough edges, while Allison Janney gives a Bafta-winning turn as her mother, the driving force behind her success. EMMA SIMMONDS

Sky Musicals

Stefani Germanotta, aka Lady Gaga, celebrated turning 34 on Saturday. Instead of the usual Happy Birthday singalong, grab the mic for this Oscar-winning update of the lovelorn classic, in which her star-on-the-rise falls for Bradley Cooper's faded and jaded country crooner. JOSH WINNING

KITCHEN COLLEAGUES
Joe Sugg, Alex Jones,
James Blunt and Alison
Hammond

PICK OF THE DAY The Great Celebrity Bake Off for Stand up to Cancer 8.00pm C4

FOOD Brace yourselves for a disaster-strewn episode – one contestant cuts his finger then faints into the arms of a paramedic, while another somehow smashes her mixing bowl and, yes, cuts her finger. Though she doesn't faint.

Injuries notwithstanding, this is a very game bunch of celebs of varying (very varying) abilities, who are doing their bit for Stand Up to Cancer. James Blunt, Alex Jones, Alison Hammond and Joe Sugg are a genial lot, to the point where everyone dissolves into helpless giggles during the judging of one particular round in the face of Paul Hollywood's horrified expressions.

Hammond is particularly confident: "This is just going so well, I am literally a natural baker." But, literally, is she?

The gang give all the challenges a jolly good go, and there's a very entertaining showstopper round, with some bizarre but clever 3D biscuit scenes. ALISON GRAHAM

Back in Time for the Corner Shop

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This has been a show about the march towards modernity, but as the shutters come down on the series, we find that the ethics of the past are again being embraced. In zero-waste stores, there's the air of Arden's in Victorian times, with loose goods on the shelves that are free from packaging. Elsewhere, community shops are giving customers service with a smile.

But as it turns out, science is running rampant in Milton Keynes, where R2-D2-style robots are transporting goods to people in the area. And a mobile phone app that can scan and pay for items ends up making the shopping experience feel more like shoplifting. DAVID BROWN

The Art Mysteries

8.30pm BBC4

ART The revelations in this series are not terribly dramatic. For instance, Waldemar Januszczak works out that the Breton church where Paul Gauguin hoped to hang his weird and wonderful Vision after the Sermon is not the one some art historians thought. Which is perhaps not hold-the-front-page stuff, but the way our presenter brings a forensic zeal to his subject is great to watch: seeing someone who knows their subject holding forth is always satisfying.

Januszczak has also worked out that the received idea that Gauguin walked out on his wife and children is wide of the mark. And of course, he decodes the picture itself, "a painting about temptation and desire", brilliantly. DAVID BUTCHER

Inside Waitrose

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY As with loo rolls in supermarkets, a preview for this was not available at the time of writing. But what we're promised is a light-hearted look at whether Waitrose warrants its reputation as the UK's premier grocery.

Sure, it has the royal seal of approval and house prices can even be boosted just by properties being positioned close to one of their stores. But how will it fare in a taste test that compares its food to what's available in rival shops? Get ready to don a blindfold before placing those Prince Charles Duchy Original organic sausages in the grill pan alongside the Tesco value-range offerings. Actually, don't. That would be incredibly dangerous. DAVID BROWN

Miss Scarlet and the Duke

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA New series Cobbles, gas lamps, flat-capped street urchins and chimneys belching black smoke into grey skies. It's a familiar, foggy scene (even the interiors are foggy). But this is more She-lock than Sherlock. Kate Phillips plays Eliza Scarlet, who takes over her father's private-eye business after his sudden demise.

Eliza cuts an appealing hero, fending off sexist dullards and grabby drunkards with equal insouciance, and deducing in seconds what a detective has scratched his head over for hours (Stuart Martin's "Duke", with whom chemistry is signposted as clearly as the tincture of laudanum.) But there's a refreshing lightness of touch after all the grim Victorian policiers... and real heart to it. MARK BRAXTON

The shortage of nurses continues to be an issue for Fletch (Alex Walkinshaw) in Holby City (8pm BBC1; 10.45pm Scotland) and his short-term solution is to draft Casualty's David Hide (Jason Durr). So here he is, bum-bag and all, doing a shift on Darwin and being taught to relax by a chilled-out Kian. I say "taught", it's more a work in progress – and the famously antsy David might need to do a six-month secondment before he cracks it.

Coinciding with all this is Max (Jo Martin) nervously anticipating the meeting she's having with her estranged daughter. As Ric worries that patients are being sidelined, Max heads to a park, only to be left stunned by the sight of her child. I won't reveal the reason for the shock, but you can expect Max's prejudices to surface rather speedily.

Elsewhere, Essie is also tense as she awaits the CT scan that will reveal whether her cancer has returned. But will she turn to Dom for support now that she's aware of his illicit kiss with Ben?

Alan Bennett's Diaries

iPlayer (expires today)

One of the highlights of Christmas telly back in 2016 is just as delightful today: a documentary based around the publication of another volume of Alan Bennett's precious diaries. For some of us, him reading bits of them would be enough; wending the text thoughtfully around a year in his life, the ins and outs of the publication process and his appearance on Radio 3's desert-island-discs show Private Passions is even better.

KIDS' CHOICE

FILM OF THE DAY

Billy Liar

10.00pm Talking Pictures TV

Comedy drama starring Tom Courtenay and Julie Christie. Billy Fisher, an ambitious but lazy young man who lives with his parents in an unexciting northern town, retreats into a world of fantasy and lies.

See page 32

Kidding

9.35pm Sky Comedy

COMEDY DRAMA Jim Carrey is increasingly moving away from the manic persona that made him famous (his clownish turn in Sonic the Hedgehog notwithstanding), and his role in this poignant comedy drama is a prime example.

He plays Jeff Piccirillo, aka Mr Pickles, a Fred Rogers-type children's TV entertainer who's sweet and kind but slowly disintegrating after the death of a son and the end of his marriage, in a tender yet darkly funny exploration of love and loss.

The series two opener has echoes of that great Carrey vehicle, Liar Liar, as Jeff realises that if he tells a lie, for the first time in his life, anything is possible.

DAVID CRAWFORD

The Trip to Greece

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY I still can't work out why The Trip works. By rights it shouldn't make sense to merge a serenely filmed travelogue with a petty sitcom about men doing silly voices and then add a whole subtext about death – and film it all in cars and restaurants.

The unlikely formula has delivered again for what looks sure to be the final series, which makes tonight the last-ever episode. As you would expect, it is comically insubstantial nonsense, until suddenly it isn't.

A routine from Rob about the Ottoman Empire ("At Ottoman Empire there are great savings on ottomans of all sizes. Open Bank Holiday Monday") is the last laugh before things turn sombre.

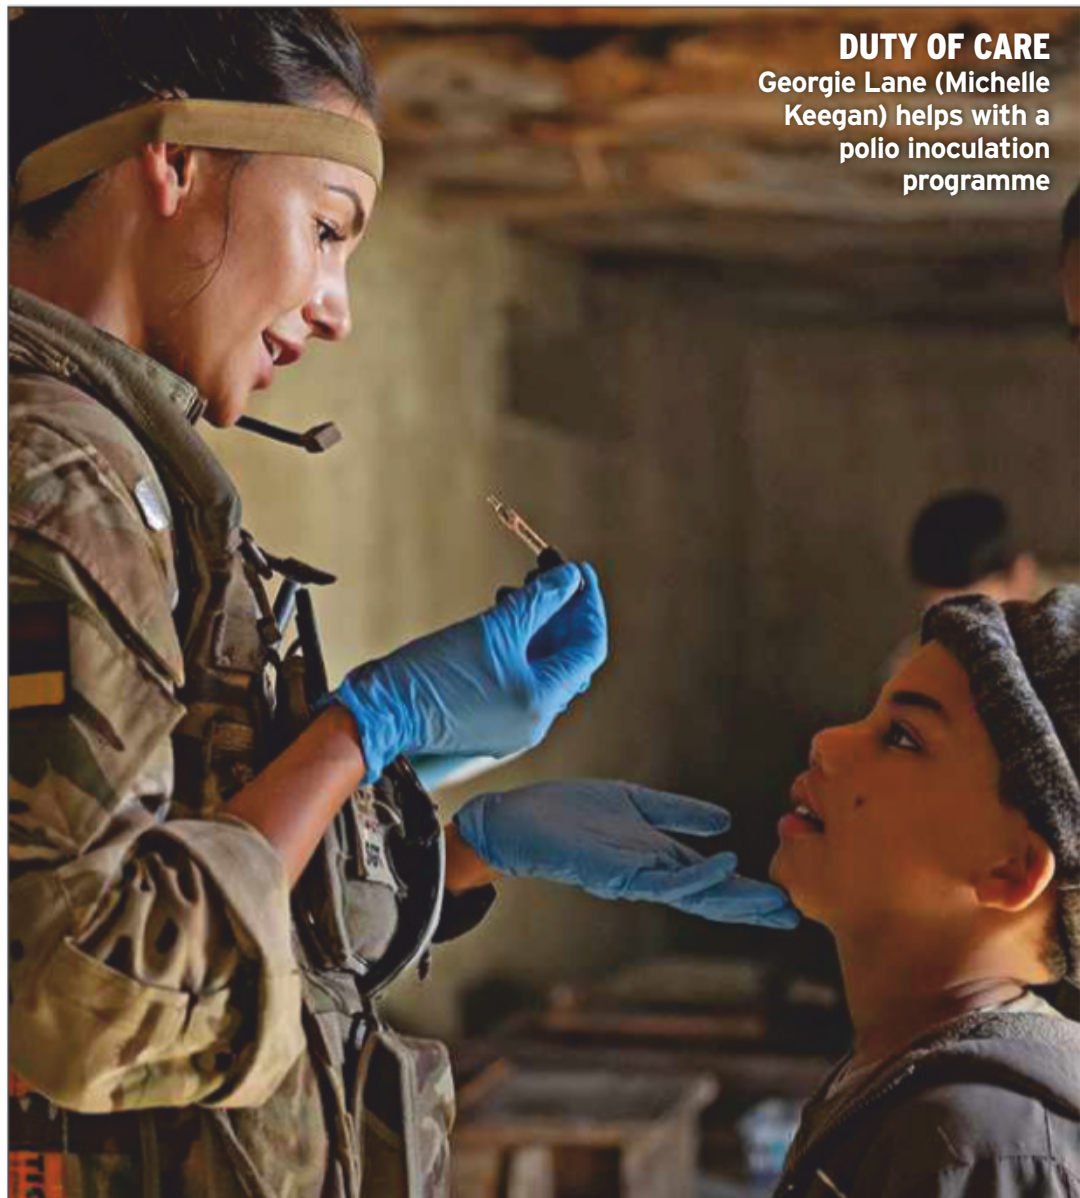

DAVID BUTCHER

The Windsors

10.15pm C4

COMEDY Harry and Meghan have moved to America to get away from the royal family – but Prince Charles and Camilla are hot on their heels. After being invited by President Trump to be King and Queen of the US, Charles has eagerly accepted. "We'll be going to the Oscars every year and we won't have to sit through Michael McIntyre at the Royal Variety Show," he quips.

Wills is understandably suspicious as to Trump's motives, while Pippa also makes a sneaky Stateside move of her own. The series ends in a wedding – albeit one in Woking Register Office – and with plenty of real-life material to mine, here's hoping another series will be bestowed by Channel 4 in the near future. FRANCES TAYLOR

DUTY OF CARE
Georgie Lane (Michelle Keegan) helps with a polio inoculation programme

Our Girl

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA "Soldiering is 99 per cent boredom and one per cent extreme violence," we're told tonight. That's almost the same as the ratio of not-very-much-happening to full-on-action in this military drama. So there's lots of army banter before 2 Section get to do something, which is protect Dr Bahil (Badria Timimi), an Afghan doctor running a vaccination programme.

The locals are suspicious of her motives, but the real concern is she'll be kidnapped by warlord Omar (the chap who killed Georgie's fiancé), hence the military presence. Frankly, I'm not sure I'd trust that Throbber to guard anyone. He has no cultural empathy and is incredibly juvenile – a real liability. But he's among those keeping an eye on medic Georgie, who (obviously) has volunteered to accompany the doctor around villages where known insurgents operate. Equally obviously, it doesn't go to plan. Escape to the country

The Runaways ★★★ 6.00pm Sky Premiere

Documentarist Richard Heap makes his feature debut with this involving picaresque, in which three children (played by Molly Windsor, Rhys Connah and Macy Shackleton) are forced to leave their Whitby home after their father (Mark Addy) dies suddenly. As they make their way across the Yorkshire moors towards their estranged mother (Tara Fitzgerald), Heap makes evocative use of the lush countryside, while Lee Boardman is a hissable villain as the children's despicable uncle. DAVID PARKINSON

Murder most funny

Knives Out ★★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/DVD

This whodunnit thriller from director Rian Johnson is superbly performed by a game cast. Daniel Craig revels in his comic turn as the Deep South detective who investigates when the patriarch of the Thrombey clan (Christopher Plummer) is found dead. Jamie Lee Curtis, Toni Collette and Michael Shannon are among the star names, but best of all is Chris Evans as the black sheep of the family. As he did with Brick and Looper, Johnson takes a well-trodden genre and gives it an exhilarating tweak. JEREMY ASPINALL

Prisoners of war

FREE TO VIEW

This is an earnest but very watchable adaptation of Nevil Shute's novel about the hardships faced by a group of women as they are route-marched across Malaya by the invading Japanese. Virginia McKenna's romantic interludes with Peter Finch provide some relief from the trials of the trek. DP

A MAN ON A MISSION
Nelly (Lennie James) is still searching for his daughter

PICK OF THE DAY Save Me Too 9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Save Me, written by and starring Lennie James, was one of the best dramas of 2018, a brilliant portrait of a man, Nelly, driven to the edge of reason and sanity after the abduction of his daughter Jody.

Nelly restlessly roamed south London looking for Jody and at the end of the first series thought, for one brief, joyous second, that he'd found her. But instead he'd discovered another unhappy, trafficked girl, young Grace.

Nelly, in his trademark scruffy yellow anorak, is still looking for Jody, haunted by her face wherever he goes. James is again brilliant as a decent, honest man thrust unwittingly into terrible circumstances as he hunts down the man he is convinced sold his daughter to the sex trade.

As his rag-tag band of mates at the local pub prepare a surprise birthday party, Nelly is missing, and bloody... ALISON GRAHAM

The Repair Shop

8.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL What could be better at this point than a Sussex barn full of cheerful miracle workers? This week's star heirloom is brought in by Liz from Essex: a portrait of her mother that has seen better days. The story behind it dates to when her father was serving in Italy in 1945: he took a photograph of her mother (his fiancée at the time) to an artist who agreed to paint a portrait from it – in exchange for a chocolate bar. It was a good deal: the resulting picture is lovely, but Lucia has her work cut out removing the dirt of decades.

Elsewhere, this week's top tool is a gooseneck stretcher, used to repair a leather armchair that also took a battering in the Second World War.

DAVID BUTCHER

Great British Menu

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD You really do have to admire the creativity of these chefs. Given the brief of making dishes to celebrate children's literature, I'd struggle to come up with the idea of a venison tartare served with smoked celeriac remoulade as a homage to the Harry Potter series of books. I may be wrong but I don't recall that being eaten by the pint-sized wizard, or even Dumbledore... Two returnees – Gordon Jones and Ross Bryans – join Roberta Hall and Amy Elles in this week's Scottish heat.

While social media's response to GBM's new format has not been positive, I still think presenter Susan Calman brings a lot to the table.

JANE RACKHAM

Growing Up Gifted

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Last week we saw how the talented boys got a wake-up call when their GCSE mock results came in. Now we get an update on the girls. Shakira, Jada and Anne Marie also come from low-income families and have many challenges to overcome as well as those posed by their education.

In year ten, Shakira was excluded for bad behaviour, Anne Marie was estranged from her mother and her alcoholic father died before she could see him again, while Jada must share a bedroom with her sister. At one point it looks as though one of the girls won't be taking any exams because she has depression but, thankfully, there's a happy ending. JR

The Undateables

9.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT Charlotte, Richard, Alex and Sam were a massive hit with viewers when they appeared in a previous series – although sadly three of them are still looking for "the one". The good news is that Sam, the 26-year-old postman is now engaged... to his old college friend Vanessa, rather than any blind date the show set up.

Plain-speaking Charlotte is trying not to keep hugging her dates, while train-loving Richard still struggles to talk to women. Then there's Alex, whose passion for football equals his enthusiasm for brightly coloured clothes. His self-confessed lust for life means his career is flourishing, even if his love life has yet to blossom. JR

Geoff's coercive abuse of wife Yasmeen is the kind of storyline Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) has cornered the market in over the years. Right back to Alan Bradley and Rita Fairclough (as was), through to Richard Hillman and Gail Platt (as was) and Pat Phelan and Eileen Grimshaw, such manipulation of middle-aged women strikes a real chord with the audience, and often becomes a national talking point.

Finally, after months of psychological belittling and bullying, the scales are set to fall from Yasmeen's eyes as she realises the truth about her husband. Alya has been like a dog with a bone in trying to expose Geoff's true colours, and when Yasmeen walks in on her other half threatening her granddaughter, it's a wake-up call. We've seen his efforts to convince Yasmeen (Shelley King, left) he's got heart trouble so they can't attend a family wedding, and squirmed at his penchant for prostitutes – could a bit of laptop-hacking prove his undoing? JOHNATHON HUGHES

George Best: All by Himself

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY There are plenty of accounts of the rise and fall of George Best, but Daniel Gordon here delivers a beautifully balanced perspective – in a film first shown in 2017 – extolling the sublime skills that galvanised Manchester United to European Cup glory while offering sobering analysis of how unprecedented fame (for a footballer), booze and his own inner demons stalled his career.

This is neither a hagiography nor a hatchet job, thanks to incisive input from George's wives and sports journalist Hugh McLivane. It's a poignant, tragically familiar tale of a great talent wasted (Best died in 2005, aged 59). But what a talent.

JEREMY ASPINALL

Feel Good

10.00pm C4

COMEDY DRAMA It's probably best to avoid Feel Good if you're easily shocked. There's a lot of saucy stuff in it about Mae and George's intense on-again-off-again sex life. But over and above the raunch, it's a comedy with a heart as well as big laughs.

George (Charlotte Ritchie) still hasn't told her friends about their relationship. Instead she has invented a boyfriend, Jonathan Crenshaw, a lie that spins enjoyably out of control at one of her friend Binky's parties. Binky is gloriously awful – you can see why George is reluctant to come out, explaining to Mae that her friends "find emotions disgusting. They just want to have a good time and make jokes." To which Mae replies, "Oh, so they're British." DAVID BUTCHER

Van Meegeren: the Forger Who Fooled the Nazis

10.30pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Andrew Graham-Dixon tells the story of Dutch faker Han van Meegeren, who persuaded wartime art historians – and Hermann Göring – that his forgeries were genuine. He specialised in Vermeers: religious canvases from a previously unrecorded "middle period" of the artist, and he was only unmasked in Holland at the end of the war.

The more he sold, the worse his work got. In this doc, first shown last autumn, Graham-Dixon gasps at one shocking effort – but as he points out, van Meegeren's greatest con was getting people to believe in the illusion he'd created. GILL CRAWFORD

Stacey Dooley Investigates: SpyCam Sex Criminals

from 6am BBC3, iPlayer

Dooley is in South Korea to investigate a very particular sex crime, known as "Molka". In a country where pornography is illegal, the covert filming and online sharing of intimate footage of women – in toilets, changing rooms or other private places – is rampant. As is her wont, Dooley confronts the perpetrators as well as sympathising with the victims.

FILM OF THE DAY

Gangster Squad

11.10pm ITV4

Ryan Gosling, Emma Stone, Sean Penn and Josh Brolin star in this stylised drama, set in Los Angeles in the 1940s. Gosling and Brolin are LAPD detectives looking to bring down local gangster Mickey Cohen (Penn).

NOT SO HAPPY FAMILIES

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA This is such a curious drama. If that's what it is. Maybe it's a comedy drama? A bit of both? One or the other? Neither? The Trouble with Maggie Cole can't quite find a tone and stick to it, veering from soupy and confessional, to broadly funny, then to a little bit menacing.

Still, I like it, and in tough times it's a decent slab of escapism – it's set in Cornwall after all, so what more could anyone want? And the cast is great. In the penultimate episode Maggie (Dawn French) keeps trying to make amends while also shouldering the fallout from last week's disastrous planning meeting.

It's hard to believe she had no knowledge of the secret that was unveiled before every greedy eye – how could a woman who knows everyone's business have so little clue about her own family life? AG

More Ghibli on Netflix

The third and final monthly drop of Studio Ghibli titles on Netflix brings the tally to 21 movies from the acclaimed Japanese animation house. This month's crop includes The Wind Rises (2013) and When Marnie Was There (2014) – which are less whimsical than your average Ghibli – as well as Howl's Moving Castle (2004), the wonderfully surreal tale of an enchanted girl and a mobile fortress. The pick of the bunch is 2008's Ponyo (pictured) from master director Hayao Miyazaki, telling the delightful story of a fish princess who wants to become a human girl. TOM FOLLEY

Her bid for freedom

Harriet ★★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/DVD

The remarkable tale of Harriet Tubman receives a long overdue screen adaptation under the direction of Kasi Lemmons (Black Nativity). Tubman is born into slavery as Araminta Ross, but, when her owners plot to sell her on, she decides to run. There's huge emotion and tension in her 100-mile bid for freedom, but what's more extraordinary is that Tubman keeps returning to Maryland to guide others to safety. Cynthia Erivo gives a hypnotic lead performance in a story that is both impassioned and inspiring. EMMA SIMMONDS

That's a wrap!

The Mummy trilogy

Sky Sci-Fi/Horror

Banish memories of Tom Cruise's ropery reboot with a triple bill of Brendan Fraser's sand 'n' scares Mummy movies. The first film remains the best, but The Mummy Returns has its share of family-friendly frights – just beware third entry Tomb of the Dragon Emperor, which unravels all too quickly. JOSH WINNING

BOLD AS BRASS
The Three Amigos, Gordon Ramsay, Gino D'Acampo and Fred Sirieix, in Tijuana, Mexico

PICK OF THE DAY Gordon, Gino and Fred: American Road Trip 9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY New series It only takes two minutes before one of the Three Amigos mentions testicles. But then, if you've seen previous trips in this light-hearted travelogue series, you'll know that references to that part of the male anatomy are frequent when the perennially macho Gordon Ramsay, Gino D'Acampo and Fred Sirieix get together.

This time they brag, argue, swear, show off and ego-bash their way through Mexico and the USA. These guys take male competitiveness to another level, whether they're drinking tequila, tasting chillis or racing dune buggies. However, a mishap that almost writes off their RV, "Betty the Beast", does subdue their boisterous mood a smidgeon.

While Gino goes over the top and Gordon can't bear anyone to be better than him at anything, it's up to Fred to be the peacemaker. Their constant bickering may get on some viewers' nerves but it's fun – and surely any chance for a spot of virtual travel is welcome right now. JANE RACKHAM

Villages by the Sea

7.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY In the early 18th century, Sunderland Point in Lancashire went from being a quiet fishing hamlet to one of the wealthiest ports in the country. Today it's once again a village of 30 or so houses: its fortunes have risen and fallen, but unlike some places in this series, tourism hasn't taken up the slack where commerce left off.

Ben Robinson charts the area's history, which is very much tied to its geography, perched on a peninsula on Morecambe Bay and cut off twice a day by the tides. The Atlantic slave trade was part of that history and theologian Robert Beckford joins Robinson to discuss how slavery was "the yeast that allowed the British economy to rise". DAVID BUTCHER

How to Beat... Fat

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Why do so many of us start a diet with good intentions, only to end up slipping back into old ways? Work stress is one factor, illness another, while temptation also runs high when we're socialising. In these self-isolating times, the latter shouldn't be a problem – though perhaps "socialising" should be replaced by "boredom", with the danger of our heads constantly surfing our fridge shelves.

So what's the answer? It is, of course, changes to our lifestyle – something that our guinea pigs find can now be monitored, thanks to a urine test that tracks their sugar intake. It's a wake-up call for the snackers who like reaching for a Snickers. DAVID BROWN

How to Make: the Trainer

8.00pm BBC4

FACTUAL New series Foot phobics look away now – materials engineer Dr Zoe Laughlin isn't shy about exposing her tootsies as she attempts to make her own bespoke pair of trainers, dissecting their anatomy as she goes. Laughlin is an engaging enthusiast, nerding out when she visits the shoe museum in Northampton, with its world-beating collection of trainers, and gleefully "going all Monty Don" as she attacks a pair with secateurs.

She's also very good on the science, meeting students who are making cutting-edge biomaterials and highlighting the problem of shoe waste – 300 million are dumped in the UK each year. DAVID CRAWFORD

Noughts + Crosses

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Callum is sliding downhill. The lad who not long ago was a promising recruit at Albion's elite military academy has cut himself loose. Shocking news at the start of tonight's episode leaves him angrier than ever. We know he's angry because he bangs things and shouts a lot. Then he cries. Then he has arguments where he spits out lines through clenched teeth.

The question is, in his vulnerable state, will he be drawn to the terrorists of the Liberation Militia and end up doing something foolish? Even more foolish than his brother has already done. Meanwhile, in a feverish episode, new Prime Minister Kamal Hadley tries to enforce greater segregation. DAVID BUTCHER

Hotten police station is such a hot bed of corruption in Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) that I'm expecting it to become the focus of AC-12's investigations in the next series of Line of Duty. DI Mark Bails was banged up following revelations of the historic sexual abuse of Charity when she was a teenage sex worker, and now we have his replacement, DI Mark Malone. What do the writers have against the name Mark, incidentally?

The bent bobby's rivalry with Cain deepens tonight when Malone realises the dodgy Dingle has double-crossed him. Cain and accomplice Billy hope they've got enough on Malone to shut him down, but the pair are in over their heads. And Will has history with the detective inspector, but he may be too busy saving his own skin to help Cain.

Ironically, Cain is the good guy here, trying to clean up the streets by putting a stop to Malone's crooked activity. But he's more likely to get a death threat than a Pride of Britain award for his efforts. JOHNATHAN HUGHES

Hospital

9.00pm BBC2 (11.15pm N Ireland)

DOCUMENTARY At the centre of this week's programme is an extraordinary operation on two-year-old Yeshua, who has a cancerous tumour in his abdomen. If surgeons at Alder Hey can't remove it, Yeshua has only a 40 per cent chance of survival. But the tumour is wrapped around vital organs and blood vessels, wedged between tiny liver and tiny kidneys: the surgeons talk it over with Yeshua's father using a plastic model that has been 3D-printed from scans – a remarkable new technology. Then the surgeons embark on what becomes a 12-hour operation.

As they probe and slice the tumour, one surgeon says with feeling, "You just want to burn it to death, don't you?" DAVID BUTCHER

Born to Be Different

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Of all the children this series has followed, Shelbie had the most profound disabilities. Yet despite the incredible physical and emotional problems, her parents ensured she had as normal a life as possible and fought to keep her alive every time she became perilously ill. Which was often. There's desperately sad news about her.

Although the other youngsters are deeply affected by this, they're generally getting on well with their lives and it's uplifting to see how strong their friendships are. Zoe and Emily are great pals while William, who has the normal surging hormones of a teenage boy, is understandably besotted with the perennially bubbly Zoe. JR

Breeders

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA The sharp-edged black comedy gets a whole lot blacker tonight. One of the things that's impressive about Breeders is its commitment to dealing with some properly dark subject matter, and tonight it takes that to new levels.

We begin with our struggling parents Paul and Ally (Martin Freeman and Daisy Haggard) trying to deal with the death of the family gerbil, Sprout. How best to talk about it with the children? Unexpectedly, Ally's feckless American father (Michael McKean) steps in with a neat way for the kids to think about death: he may be a pain to have living with them, but sometimes he comes into his own. DAVID BUTCHER

Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY The man in black's final cinematic essay lovingly examines "the uneasy world of mystery and suspense": the spy movie. Naturally 007 is heavily featured (Skyfall is one of his favourite movies of the past decade, although so is Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy, which couldn't be more different). As always, there are some thought-provoking comparisons, including a split screen showing how From Russia with Love replicated an explosive scene from Hitchcock's North by Northwest made four years earlier.

Even more thrilling is being let in on cinematic tricks such as the way they filmed a "nerve-jangling" chase through Waterloo Station for The Bourne Ultimatum.

Kermode is skilful at making us look at, and consider, films in a completely new way. And we never feel we're being lectured. JR

Rhythms of India

iPlayer (ep1 expires today)

Ordinary life in India has been well covered by British television documentaries, but – with the exception perhaps of the country's globally renowned film industry – its popular culture hasn't. Musician and composer Soumik Datta puts that right here with an eclectic three-part series, first shown last year, about India's classical, pop and folk music heritage. It starts in Kolkata, where Datta plays the sarod and explains what music can tell us about the imperial past.

3/10 Series 12. The Curate's Egg. Danny and Steve "welcome" new boss Ted Case into the office in Sasha's absence, but for all his experience, keen eye for detail and a killer instinct for detecting liars, they aren't as sold on his superstitious quirks. While trying to work one another out, the team treads carefully in the case of a murdered vicar who received racist hate mail in the lead up to his death. With emotions running high, it's up to Ted to pull together his new unit and keep the peace in one of the squad's most sensitive cases.

Wrestling with demons

Foxcatcher ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Although the plot of Foxcatcher is inspired by real events, it's best to come to this film with as little knowledge as possible to fully savour its surprises and shocks. Channing Tatum and Mark Ruffalo play wrestling brothers Mark and David Schultz, who accept an invitation to build an Olympic team for billionaire John du Pont (Steve Carell, sporting a prosthetic nose). But is the tycoon just interested in the sport? What follows is an American tragedy that could have come straight out of the pages of a novel. LESLIE FELPERIN

Demolition Man ★★★★★ 9.00pm TCM

Making a rare appearance on TCM, this slick vision of the future comes pretty close to being Sylvester Stallone's best ever movie. He plays a tough cop whose unconventional methods land him in a cryogenic prison. Decades later, he is defrosted to hunt down an old sparring partner, the psychopathic Wesley Snipes. Director Marco Brambilla delivers the goods when it comes to the all-important set pieces, and Sandra Bullock has an early fun run at an action role she would later perfect in Speed. JOHN FERGUSON

Top of the cops

21 Bridges ★★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/DVD

A cop-killing bloodbath in Brooklyn lights the fuse for a lockdown of the island of Manhattan in this pacy thriller, new to rent this week. There are plenty of shoot-outs and street chases to savour, and Black Panther's Chadwick Boseman stars as the righteous avenger leading the manhunt.

LIGHT RELIEF

Ian Hislop, Paul Merton and guests chew over the latest news

PICK OF THE DAY Have I Got News for You 9.00pm BBC1

COMEDY Sarcastic sanity returns! Have I Got News For You is back for, incredibly, its 59th outing and boy do we need it. Even if you've felt as if some recent series have been a bit tired, when HIGNFY is on form, it is the most reliably funny panel show on television.

So, I wonder what will be under discussion, I mean, it's not like very much has happened since we last saw Ian Hislop and Paul Merton... it's all been very quiet really... there was Brexit, and then...

But clearly if there's even the slightest smile to be mined from these dark and difficult times, Hislop and Merton will find it, albeit not, of course, in front of a studio audience. They'll be helped by an excellent guest presenter, Steph McGovern, and two great panellists, the brilliant Miles Jupp and journalist Helen Lewis.

Meanwhile on BBC2 at 10pm, topical show The Mash Report returns.

ALISON GRAHAM

Vera

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA A female social worker is murdered while swimming in a remote Northumbrian river in this episode from 2012. There's an infuriating lack of skeletons in her closet so there's no obvious motive, but she did work on an infamous drowning case.

We're cleverly teased with hints of what might – or might not – be clues: are the bored teenagers loitering by the beach significant? Why is the health club worker so shift? Do the tears of the dead woman's boss tell us something? Has Vera's height at the age of ten got anything to do with anything? Some are relevant, some aren't, but the theme of water runs throughout. JANE RACKHAM

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

COMEDY After an iffy start, this turns into a sharp episode, with four subplots spiralling in zingy comic directions. An old neighbour and friend of Phil's who has become a super-rich tech titan pays a visit and announces that – surprise! – he has bought them both tickets for a trip to the International Space Station. What's more, he might have a job offer for Claire...

At her job, Alex needs an assistant, so she takes on Jay's veteran PA, who needs some guidance in the ways of the modern workplace. And as ever, Jay's despair at his son's theatrical leanings offers good value: "A terrible thing happened today at Manny's one-man show. He got me a ticket." DAVID BUTCHER

Gregg Wallace's Fun Weekend

9.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL New series I'm not sure if this is brilliant scheduling or extremely poor timing because in this series Gregg Wallace is doing a sort of brasher, less tongue-in-cheek version of Travel Man.

He's off on various short trips around European destinations. Still, I suppose if we can't go to foreign lands ourselves, at least we can enjoy them vicariously.

He starts in Rome, touring the city on the back of a scooter ("I feel like Audrey Hepburn!" he trills. Hmmm), talking to the locals, tasting some truly glorious-looking food and – brace yourself – stripping off to dress up as a gladiator. Hello Gregorius Wallacium. JR

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA Oh dear, Valeria is in a right mess. The grief-stricken Turin detective is moping around her gloomy flat, bingeing on sleeping pills and being vile to her chisel-jawed colleague/boyfriend when he dares try to help. But the series isn't turning into "The Diary of a Junkie Cop", as the discovery of a dead child in the countryside around Turin brings us another emotionally overwrought police officer (who happens to be the boy's aunt) who is happy to trample all over proper procedure to get justice.

And as the Turin team are drawn into the investigation, Valeria's interest is piqued by another family torn by grief and riven with secrets... DAVID CRAWFORD

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

The dark cloud appears to be lifting for new mum Gemma in Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) who has been struggling with the challenges of parenting quads. The post-natal depression storyline facilitated the return of her own mother, bolshy Bernie, but tonight, rather like some sections of the audience, Gem (Dolly-Rose Campbell, right) decides she doesn't need her any more. Little Aled has his hearing aid fitted and hears his parents' voices for the first time. It's a heartwarming moment that gives the mum-of-four a sense of optimism after weeks of psychological gloom. Declaring she's feeling fine and no longer requires assistance with babysitting and housework, Gemma tells Bernie to leave. Harsh.

In Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) there are signs Jamie Tate may be earning the right to his family name after all as he schemes to get Belle fired from the vet's. The son of Kim Tate, Yorkshire's own Alexis Colby, has been disappointingly nice thus far, we're hoping this heralds a new era. JOHNATHON HUGHES

Bulletproof

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA "If you ain't a Fed then why aren't you doing a line?" It's the sort of dialogue you always get at some point in a story about undercover cops and Pike (Ashley Walters) hears it from the twitchy young gangster whose crime family he has infiltrated.

This being a retro-style action thriller, they're in an Amsterdam pole-dancing club at the time, as things start to look very Sweeney-ish. Earlier in the series, Starsky and Hutch was the obvious reference point, now we're straying more into Sweeney or Professionals territory.

But Bulletproof doesn't do things by halves: the climactic car chase alongside Amsterdam canals is good value. DB

Rich Hall's Countryier than You

9.30pm BBC4

MUSIC In this 90-minute one-off, first shown in 2017, the wry comedian does a line in sarky reportage from his native United States. He explores the roots of country music, travelling to Nashville, Tennessee and Austin, Texas to compare the music scenes in the two cities.

Hall is a big fan of country music – he won the Perrier Comedy Award in 2000 for his Edinburgh routine, performed in character as Tennessee musician Otis Lee Crenshaw. As ever, his stance on the genre is acerbic, and sometimes scathing. He has firm tastes of his own, and even performs his self-written song Working Dog to demonstrate how styles differ within the genre. SARAH CARSON

Friday Night Dinner

10.00pm C4

COMEDY One of the enjoyable things about the Goodmans is how brutal they are with each other. Emotionally and verbally they beat each other up – often physically, too.

But we know underneath they love each other. Or do they? Tonight's slice of suburban torture revolves largely around Adam's inability to tell Jackie, his mother, that he loves her. Why can't he just say the words?

An increasingly deranged battle ensues between the two of them, while dad Martin is absorbed in his own feud – with a carrier bag stuck up a tree outside their house.

Add a couple of visits, of course, from neighbour Jim, and the levels of raging oddness are off the scale. DB

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Netflix

Part four of La Casa de Papel, to give it its original Spanish title, picks up where the last episodes left off (each "part" is really half of a regular series): the gang of daring criminals who began the show by breaking into Royal Mint of Spain to print millions of euros are now planning an even cheekier job on the Bank of Spain. As their own tangled loyalties and heavy pressure from the authorities bear down, it's another spectacular opera of guns, showdowns and crazy schemes.

KIDS' CHOICE

Raven's Home

5.30pm Disney Channel (Sky 609, Virgin 724), Disney+

A new episode of the US live-action comedy about two families living together, both headed by divorced single mums – one dimwitted, one psychic. Today, the school's basketball team makes it to the National Championship; Tess hosts a telethon to raise funds. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

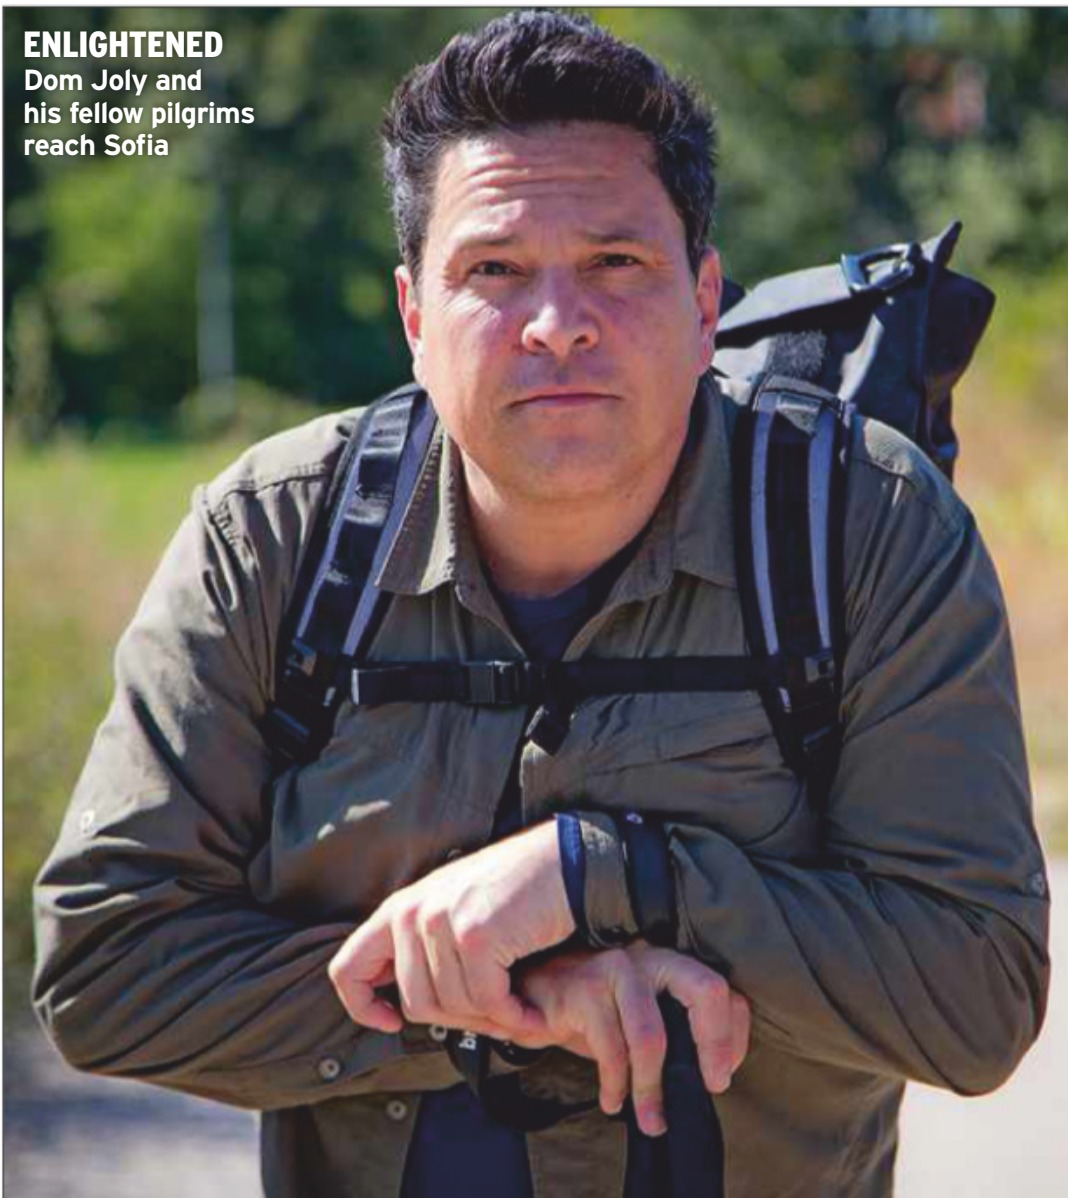

Midnight Special

11.05pm BBC2

Michael Shannon and Joel Edgerton star as childhood friends who are on the run after abducting an eight-year-old boy – but all is not as it first appears. Sci-fi drama, directed by Jeff Nichols.

ENLIGHTENED
Dom Joly and his fellow pilgrims reach Sofia

Pilgrimage: the Road to Istanbul

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Dom Joly prepares to take a photo of former Conservative health minister Edwina Currie as she poses with a monolithic statue of Lenin in Sofia's Museum of Socialist Art: "This is going straight to The Telegraph, Edwina." The seven pilgrims have reached Bulgaria in their path towards enlightenment. Or not (Joly is a confirmed atheist), but it's good to be in their company as they are a bunch of thoughtful people.

They gel brilliantly and even occasional spats – Joly objects to the fitter members of the group striding ahead on a long, steep walk – are quickly over and forgotten.

Their honesty is admirable as is the lack of hugging and weeping, and Adrian Chiles is not afraid of asking tough questions. "What about gratuitous sex? Does that interest you at all?" he asks young Muslim broadcaster Mim Shaikh. AG

Four Kids and It ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

This endearingly old-fashioned fantasy yarn is adapted from Jacqueline Wilson's 2012 novel – itself an update of E Nesbit's classic Five Children and It. It follows four siblings holidaying in Cornwall who stumble across a creature that grants their wishes. But tough lessons are learnt as the children face the repercussions of their unleashed imaginations. The film boasts a fantastic young cast, but the CGI-generated "Psammead" is the real crowd-pleaser, and is impeccably voiced by Michael Caine. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Comedy titan Eddie Murphy turns 59 today, and you can enjoy a whole day of his films on Sky Comedy, with Trading Places among the highlights. Over on Netflix is his recent triumph Dolemite Is My Name (pictured), which sees Murphy giving a Golden Globe-nominated performance as Rudy Ray Moore, the cult entertainer who risked all by making his own blaxploitation movie. Murphy also has a number of sequels in the pipeline, including Coming 2 America; Triplets (a follow-up to 1988's Twins); and cop comedy Beverly Hills Cop 4. Steady, Eddie! JOSH WINNING

An occult classic

Kill List ★★★★★ A114

FREE TO VIEW

A uniquely terrifying experience, director Ben Wheatley's down-and-dirty chiller sees a contract killer (Neil Maskell) talked into doing "one last job" with his mate (Michael Smiley). But their hit list brings them into contact with the occult. Be warned: this is darkly comic but also brutally violent. ALAN JONES

GOVERNMENT ADVICE TO self-isolate has found our poet laureate supremely well prepared. Simon Armitage is ensconced in a wooden shed at the bottom of his garden, on the edge of the Pennines high above Huddersfield. Apart from me, there is no other human being within an acre.

The medium-sized structure he calls “a half-way house between inside and out” is where Armitage records his podcast, The Poet Laureate Has Gone to His Shed. It’s also where he writes.

Inside, a stand-up piano is squeezed up against the sofa where he naps in the afternoon (“Only a quarter of an hour and I feel very restored. Any longer and you get up feeling groggy”). There are two chairs, a small table, a wood-burning stove and a sideboard on which seven bottles of sherry sit.

‘I’ve always thought poetry is the art form of concentration’

“These are my training sherries,” he says. “When you get the laureateship you are given a ‘butt of sack’, which in my case amounts to 80 bottles of sherry over ten years. I have to pick my favourites. I quite like the amontillado and the cream, though I might go for some fino as well.” Do they help with the poems? “Oh no, we open them during the podcast, but I can’t write if I’ve had a drink. I know some people do – and various other substances as well – but I’ve always thought poetry is the art form of concentration.”

Armitage, 56, is instantly recognisable; his fringe and short back and sides give him the look of a 1950s schoolboy even though he has a Desperate Dan chin and shoulders broad enough to shift steel girders as well as a stanza.

He has been responsible for a stream of acclaimed poems since his first collection, Human Geography, in 1988. His work also includes travel writing, non-fiction, documentary, music and translation. Uniquely, he has an Ivor Novello award, a Bafta and a Queen’s Gold Medal for Poetry. None of which hang on the shed wall, although there is a small watercolour of an owl, a visual aid as he works on a translation of the 12th-century Middle English poem The Owl and the Nightingale. “I like to do the translation work in here because there’s something monkish about a shed,” he says. “Illuminating your manuscript in a cell.

An ode to my

Podcasting poet laureate Simon Armitage on the joy of self-isolation

“Nearly all the writers I know say they write best in the morning. I don’t. Definitely not. I’m really scratchy in the morning. So I use the mornings to pull things vaguely within distance and then by 2pm, 3pm, that’s when I can see it clearly and start giving it some shape and polish.”

But, like all of us, Armitage starts to twiddle his thumbs after a while. “I need distractions,” he says. “I can only go for so long. I was thinking it would be great if people dropped by every now and again and the podcast evolved out of that. I wanted to share the space acoustically.”

The series makes the most of the podcast medium’s strengths – discursive, open-ended conversations with guests and host talking about themselves, Armitage’s work and, of course, sheds. When musician Guy Garvey was a guest, he delighted in memories of tools in his father’s shed when he was a boy, just across the Pennines in Lancashire. “I think people have felt free to chat in here,” says Armitage, “and I’m happy to go wherever the conversation wanders. A lot of the people I’ve been talking to are performers and they haven’t needed much encouragement. Guy had a go on the piano.

“Testament, who’s a beatboxer from just the other side of Huddersfield, was doing his beatboxing in here. Sam Lee, a folk singer, sang the Holmfirth Anthem, a really beautiful Yorkshire folk song."

Some men see their sheds as sanctuaries, a place to quietly avoid life's demands. Not for Armitage. For him, sheds are about physical labour. "When I grew up, everybody seemed to have a bit of a smallholding and a shed that might have a few tools, a lathe, a grinder. They were dangerous but great places to play."

ARMITAGE'S ATTITUDE TO small spaces was deeply affected by the ten years he spent as a probation officer, which included visiting overcrowded prisons. "I found that a really tough atmosphere," he says. "I feel if I was to be in prison, it would have to be a single cell. Fifteen years' solitary confinement: that's the only way I could do it. With a window and a canary."

There are no canaries up here on the edge of the moors, but foxes and badgers visit regularly and Armitage names the birds that frequent the garden and, occasionally, hop across the shed's asphalt roof.

"There are tawny owls. I've seen brown owls. And green woodpeckers – which are amazing weird-looking, prehistoric birds – come on to the lawn and patio and pick at grubs. There are nuthatches, wrens, coal tits, blue tits, great tits, long-tailed tits, goldfinches, herons and buzzards."

It's a delightful if windswept shed, with a picture window that offers views over his garden and the West Riding valleys up to the heights of Saddleworth Moor. For the time being there will be no guests in his shed. So I ask Armitage who, if he could, he would pick – past or present, alive or dead – to join him in his shed for a special, fantasy edition of the podcast.

"I'd be crazy if I didn't pick Shakespeare," he says. "We still know virtually nothing about him. I would like to put a few of those vexed issues to bed over 45 minutes in my shed, with a drop of sherry." MICHAEL HODGES

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama: Settlers

Tuesday 2.15pm Radio 4

Deadly pandemics, environmental collapse, choking pollution – any one could have you contemplating the prospect on starting life anew on some distant Eden.

This sci-fi yarn by Adam Usden explores the reality of just what travelling across the galaxy to colonise an exoplanet would entail. We open on two scientists, Sam and Ian, as they wake from cryogenic freezing after 30 years below the surface of a planet selected as the new home for humanity. The problem is that's 870 years too early and the atmosphere above ground is far from habitable.

What follows is a bittersweet tale, with Laura Aikman (right, who played James Corden's girlfriend in the Gavin & Stacey Christmas special) and Tom Rosenthal bickering, wittily battling malfunctioning technology and slowly falling in love as Sam and Ian try to ensure they'll be able to share their futures with the rest of the thousand "settlers" still sleeping in their pods.

As with all sci-fi there's plenty of technobabble but also some lovely, funny and poignant lines – "It's life, of course it's sad." Mostly what it is, is a reminder that relatively speaking, life on Earth isn't too bad after all.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

The village is in desperate need of a boost, so Shula and Kirsty organise a Fayre with a difference. Fallon, though, is struggling to gain interest in her Easter bonnet concept, but soon comes up with a twist that may just prove to be a winner. Kirsty, however, is left wondering whether her plans are appropriate in the wake of all that's happened.

Good news at last comes to Brookfield and Ben is surprised to run into a young woman from his past. And there are celebrations for the Aldridges as Xander's birth certificate comes through, but Brian has a controversial suggestion for Adam that succeeds in stirring up unpleasant memories... DAVID BROWN

Podcasts

THEY'RE AS EASY TO LISTEN TO AS YOUR RADIO

Desert Island Discs

Not all great radio formats make great podcasts. This one does. It's a simple frame into which you can slot everyone from Ian Fleming to Ian Wright. The edition with the latter reduced both my daughters to tears, and neither of them cares about football. The podcast version gives you slightly more speech and, for rights reasons, slightly less music; it's worth it for access to such a national treasury.

Backlisted

Now's the time to read those massive novels you've put off since your 20s. Here's the very podcast, with its promise to "breathe new life into old books", that could motivate you to do just that. Bibliomaniacs John Mitchinson, Andy Miller and guests guide you through everyone from Marcel Proust to Jilly Cooper, entertain you with good jokes and send you back to your shelves with renewed determination to get your nose into something improving.

Table Manners with Jessie Ware

Podcasting has provided careers that used not to be careers. Here singer/songwriter Jessie Ware and her mother Lennie talk to celebrities, ostensibly about food but actually all about the personal things we all want to talk to celebrities about. Taking your mother along guarantees two things. The important questions will get asked and the interviewees, who now range from Labour MP Jess Phillips through Jamie Oliver to actor David Schwimmer, have to answer.

Criminal with Phoebe Judge

There's only one thing better than reading about true crime and that's being told about it, particularly when the teller is Phoebe Judge, an American who sounds far nicer than anyone has any right to sound when they know so much about the staggering diversity of human frailty. Each edition is about a different crime. Each crime, as Tolstoy said of unhappy families and this podcast proves, is unhappy in its own way.

Life Goals with Theo Delaney

There are many football podcasts, which don't have a lot to say at the moment. Theo Delaney's show doesn't have this problem because it's the football equivalent of Desert Island Discs. The idea is that notable fans like presenter Eamonn Holmes, comedian Bob Mills and journalist Julie Welch tell their life stories via the eight goals that they particularly remember. It's quite remarkable how neatly this works in summoning the past and how well it unlocks the uniqueness of everybody's experience.

Listen up!

David Hepworth's ten unmissable podcasts

IF YOU'RE ONE of those people who is voluntarily isolating themselves and you've had your fill of rolling news programmes trying to fill their schedules with programmes that do little more than stoke public anxiety, then now could be the time to dip a toe into the world of podcasts. They may sound technologically forbidding, but in truth podcasts are almost as simple to access as your favourite radio station.

To find a radio programme you must know which station broadcasts it and when. To find a podcast you only need its name. Once you've got that, you can summon it any time that suits you.

Most people listen to podcasts on smartphones via podcast apps such as Apple Podcasts, BBC Sounds, Stitcher or Acast. There are many more. If there isn't one installed on your phone, you can download a free one from the web in seconds.

Then all you have to do is search within the app for the podcast you want to hear, "subscribe" to it, which, despite the word, doesn't cost anything, and then every time the podcast publishes a new episode, which may be weekly, monthly or even daily, a new one pops up in your feed and you can listen to it at your leisure. If you decide it's not for you, then unsubscribing is as simple as subscribing.

If you don't want to go that far, you can simply search for any of these podcasts with your usual search engine on your computer and play them from your web browser or, if you use a streaming service like Spotify, listen to them just as you would any piece of music. It really is very easy and could connect you with a whole new back catalogue of free content. Such as these ten...

The Treehouse with Danny Baker

Podcasters don't need a pay cheque to talk – just a microphone. Since he was let go by Radio 5 Live, Danny Baker has been looking for somewhere to unload his head full of arcane knowledge and his listeners have been itching to phone in about that time they had a horse in their kitchen. Thanks to the miracle of the podcast, he and Louise Pepper are back, keeping a multicoloured beach ball of human interest in the air like a pair of hyperactive seals. Twice a week. For free.

How to Fail with Elizabeth Day

From the security of their own success, it's not hard for successful people to talk about those occasions when they have failed. That's the premise on which this podcast is based. That and a mobile phone full of all the right numbers. Elizabeth Day's first few interviewees were Phoebe Waller-Bridge, Sebastian Faulks and Gina Miller, and it's similar riffraff to this day. The deal is simple. They talk about everything that makes them fabulous, as long as they mention the few times they were just like the rest of us.

Here's the Thing with Alec Baldwin

Alec Baldwin has a number of winning qualities as an interviewer. One is the actor's fabulous voice. Another is his equally fabulous nosiness when it comes to how careers are built. His series has him talk to "actors, policy-makers and performers", but in truth it's anyone who takes his fancy. That's why the podcast's capacious archive contains Barbra Streisand, Roger Daltrey, Carly Simon, Patti Smith and even the late Debbie Reynolds among many others.

You Must Remember This

In which Karina Longworth, who has a voice like a vamp from a 1940s film, takes her sweet time to tell the long, invariably melancholy personal stories of famous, glamorous women, generally from the Golden Age of Hollywood. From Merle Oberon to Mama Cass, it turns out they all endured private pain in order to achieve earthly glory. If you've always wanted to read juicy Hollywood biographies but never got around to it, this is the perfect medium.

The Stories of Our Times

And finally, should you tire of escapism, this new daily podcast from The Times, closely modelled on The New York Times's trailblazing Daily, promises to bring the stories that matter into close focus every day. They couldn't possibly have guessed they'd be launching into such a news-rich environment.

PADDY O'CONNELL

Broadcasting my house

I'm working from home with my dog Bob

I'm fully wired, plugged in and turned on – much like you, as an RT reader. From now I can go live to the nation with my Radio 4 show Broadcasting House – on air not from the BBC's throbbing nerve centre in Portland Place, but from my one-bedroom flat in Camden Town, north London. Simon Mayo's just blazed a trail broadcasting on Scala Radio from his house, as did Sarah Montague with The World at One on Radio 4. Well, now my own home studio's got the green light. It's all thanks to "crisis planning".

So, if needed, even the country's leading broadcasters – and some of the UK's not so leading broadcasters – can WFH (that's "work from home"). Which is why this Sunday I can drone on and on and on as normal but, for the first time, in my pyjamas and fez. I've tested the equipment, and I'm raring to go. But between you and me, there will be some problems, which media people call "challenges" or "issues going forward".

Number one is my dog, Bob. He's a five-year-old border terrier who barks whenever the door bell rings, or indeed when a buzzer sounds on a radio quiz show. "Bzzzzzzzz." Woof! Woof! Grrrrr! etc. Listening to I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue or Just a Minute is impossible if he's in the room. I can't tell you how many times I've missed Barry Cryer's swanee whistle.

'I've often missed Barry Cryer's swanee whistle'

It's the same with guests who arrive (that's house guests, not guests on the show). Nothing I can do will stop him. It goes on until I open the front door, when he looks both ways up and down the street, a sentry at his post. Although this risks being live on the radio when a delivery arrives. I like to have essentials like wine delivered at all hours, as well as the occasional luxury such as carrots and potatoes, not to mention loo rolls.

The "other issue going forward" is the upstairs neighbour's washing machine. She's a lovely woman, but her spin cycle makes my bed shake. The tea cup rattles on the saucer, my dentures slip onto the carpet, and my toupee – on loan from Eddie Mair – flaps on my head like a baby starling fleeing its nest for the first time.

My worry is this commotion might all sound on the radio as if I was suddenly standing in a thunderstorm, while playing the xylophone, with a mad dog biting at my wig. Then there's the neighbour on the other side whose cat uses my glass roof as a toilet. If I see this puss pawing my roof, I'll be doing my damndest not to shout, as I normally do, "Dirty!" "Off! Out!" "Grrr!"

I worry that this will all make me sound rather eccentric at this time of national emergency. Worse still, it could end up being the highlight for anyone listening. As much as the media people like to think it's the content that matters, it's often the context, the surprise, and the unexpected. So stay tuned, I might finally be about to sound much more interesting. Live from my home... Woof! Filthy beast! Grrrrr! Off!

Paddy O'Connell hosts Broadcasting House on Sunday at 9am on Radio 4, and co-hosts the podcast Dogpod

Today's Choices

This Classical Life

12.30pm Radio 3

It was a year ago that Jess Gillam (above) became, at 20, Radio 3's youngest ever presenter, hosting a new show in which she and another youthful guest share musical discoveries. In spite of the programme's title, the discoveries tend to come from a wide variety of genres. A pacier listen than most of Radio 3, This Classical Life has energised the network's Saturday lunchtime schedule and made the Cumbria-raised Gillam – the first saxophonist to reach the Young Musician of the Year final – a bit of a star. It just won Best Specialist Music Show at the Arias, the judges calling it "a highly refreshing addition to the classical music landscape".

SIMON O'HAGAN

Jock

9.00pm Radio 2

This pilot radio sitcom, written by Greg Hemphill and Donald McLeary, accidentally provides one of the first portraits of a post-coronavirus society. The titular football manager (Gary Lewis) has finally retired and now has to imagine a world without his beloved sport. The best moments come when Jock's wife pushes him out of his comfort zone, telling him to engage their daughter in conversation. "Where did you get your trousers?" he asks her. HANNAH SHADDOCK

6.30 Opera on 3

The triumph of love, courage and freedom over oppression, tyranny and evil are the eternal themes of Beethoven's only opera, a project close to his heart but which cost him dear in over a decade of revisions and rewrites. Recorded earlier this month at the Royal Opera House in London, with Antonio Pappano conducting a cast led by two of the most celebrated singers on today's operatic stage. Soprano Lise Davidsen plays Leonore, the devoted wife of Florestan (tenor Jonas Kaufmann), whose love for her wrongly imprisoned husband means she will stop at nothing to ensure his freedom.

Slow Radio: If You Go Down to the Woods Tonight

11.30pm Radio 3
Producer Cathy Robinson promises all kinds of delights for those who never have spent a whole night in Suffolk woodland (probably that would be all of us). Her binaural recording box, placed in a tree, captures a church clock striking the hour, owls hooting, and all kinds of creatures including a muntjac (it's a deer) scurrying past. "And there's a really beautiful moment quite near the beginning when a plane goes past," she tells me, "It's like a sound sculpture." If you're listening with headphones, "a rainbow of sound moves from one side of your head to the other." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

The Music of James Bond with David Arnold

1.00pm Scala
The name is Arnold, David Arnold. And, as the composer of five of the 25 James Bond films so far, who better to host a five-part series exploring the music of the 007 movies? In today's episode, Arnold offers a personal insight into his own scores for Tomorrow Never Dies, The World Is Not Enough and Die Another Day. Next week he previews Hans Zimmer's soundtrack for movie No 25, the coronavirus casualty No Time to Die. MARK PAPPENHEIM

The Essay: Paul Robeson in Five Songs

10.45pm Radio 3

The turbulent life of Paul Robeson (above), the American performer whose career was shamefully curtailed by racism and anti-Communist hysteria, is reflected in five of his songs in a series of essays through the week. His was one of the most magnificent bass baritone voices of the 20th century, and the story behind his biggest hit, O! Man River, is told by his granddaughter tomorrow. Robeson's most sustained success in films was in the UK but mostly the roles offered him were demeaning and he turned to political activism. The trade union ballad Joe Hill (Friday) provides a melancholic epitaph. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Book of the Week: Charles Dickens: A Life

9.45am FM/12.30am Radio 4

Suggestions abound for books to immerse oneself in during the great coronavirus shutdown. I can't think of a better one than Claire Tomalin's enthralling and hugely empathetic portrait of Charles Dickens. Alternatively, here's Penelope Wilton reading extracts from it – originally broadcast when the book was published in 2011, now reappearing to mark the 150th anniversary of Dickens's death in June. SIMON O'HAGAN

RT 1/5. No More Auction Block. The life and struggles of New Jersey-born bass-baritone singer, actor and civil rights activist Paul Robeson (1898–1976) are explored through five of his songs. Robeson's signature performances include Show Boat and Othello, but spirituals defined his early career, and in 1925, Robeson and his accompanist Lawrence Brown turned them into "art music". In this first instalment, scholar and professor of black music Shana Redmond explores the ways in which Robeson's performances of No More Auction Block map his own struggles. Producer Mark Burman

Sharing the Baby

4.00pm Radio 4

One of the last things Nick Clegg did when he was deputy prime minister was push through the right to shared parental leave (SPL) in 2015. It sounds great: both parents get two weeks' leave after the birth of a child and can then divide the remaining 50 weeks into chunks. But why have only three percent of parents taken this up, asks Fi Glover. She discovers that just three-in-seven couples qualify and then they have to face social, financial and career hurdles. An important piece of radio.

JANE ANDERSON

A Normal Universe

6.30pm Radio 4

Thank goodness this got recorded before the drawbridge went up. I can't think of anyone I'd rather be entertained by right now than the wonderfully funny and humane Henry Normal, back with a new programme in his occasional series of musings on life, love and – here – the universe. You can't spell universe without verse, the great comic creative tells us, starting with a quote: "Poetry is the best words in the best order – Coleridge Taylor Samuel." Marvellous. And the lovely sound of a live audience, too.

Susan Robeson explores the personal and political aspects of the song that is forever identified with her grandfather – Ol' Man River, written by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein expressly for Robeson for their groundbreaking 1927 musical Show Boat. But the singer would not wrap his unique voice around it until the following year in the London production. He would have a lasting and complex relationship with the song, especially as a black superstar performing for white audiences. "My grandfather transformed Ol' Man River from a song of submission and despair into a song of resistance." Producer Mark Burman

Plum House

11.30am Radio 4

And now for some very British humour. Welcome back, for a third series, to the dysfunctional staff of the National Heritage Trust's Plum House, the former Lake District home of a worthless 18th-century poet. Simon Callow (above) plays the grandly idle curator, with Miles Jupp as his ineffectual sidekick and Jane Horrocks as the dozy gift shop manager. Everyone's a-jitter because "the trouble-shooters' trouble shooter" (Pip Torrens) has been sent to turn business around. But can he repeat the tricks he pulled off at the Aberdeen Granite Experience and the Truro Pasty Museum? Unlikely with this lot on the payroll. FIONA HUGHES

How to Play

9.00am Radio 4

As live concerts are being cancelled up and down the country, this new series has turned out to be especially timely. It examines four great classical masterworks as seen through the eyes of the musicians who actually perform them. To launch the series, we listen in as the brilliant young "royal wedding cellist" Sheku Kanneh-Mason rehearses Elgar's autumnal Cello Concerto with the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra as they prepare to perform it at last year's BBC Proms. MARK PAPPENHEIM

From Barry Levinson's 1988 film Rain Man to (Mary) Temple Grandin, the woman who transformed the cattle industry; from the French anti-psychiatry guerrilla Fernand Deligny to Robina Rose's 2004 film Jigsaw which depicts a group of autistic children in a specialist school in London – Bonnie Evans from Queen Mary University, London joins Shahidha Bari to discuss the light shed by film on our understanding of neurodiversity, as the Barbican in London runs a season of film screenings.

10.45 The Essay: Paul Robeson in Five Songs 3/5. The Canoe Song. Paul Robeson and film should have been a perfect fit. The 20th century's first black superstar had presence, voice and fierce intelligence that projected from the screen. British audiences adored him, but for Robeson cinema was a constant betrayal of his political idealism. Matthew Sweet considers the confusing threads that make up Zoltan Korda's 1935 Empire flag-waver Sanders of the River, which still hummed to the astonishing power of Robeson's voice in the Canoe Song, prompting British audiences to declare him as "our Paul".

Today's Choices

Crossing Continents

11.00am Radio 4

In October 2019, forest ranger Liviu Pop was shot dead as he confronted illegal loggers in Romania's mountainous Maraures region. The father-of-three's murder is the latest in a string of violent clashes between the people putting their lives on the line to protect the country's virgin forests (above), the lungs of Europe, and those who would exploit them. Here, Tim Whewell investigates how Pop met his death, in a disquieting story being repeated in areas of natural wilderness the world over. TOM GOULDING

Open Country

3.00pm Radio 4

I always rejoice in a new series of Open Country, and in these uncertain times a programme that lives and breathes the great outdoors is particularly welcome. But even so, plans unavoidably had to change, for the first episode at least. Rather than exploring Newlyn in Cornwall, Olympic rowing champion Helen Glover now reports from her own back garden in Berkshire. She's married to naturalist and adventurer Steve Backshall who, with trademark brio, helps her explore what wildlife can be found in a small-scale domestic garden. CHRIS GARDNER

4/5. Zog Nit Keynmo! When Paul Robeson stood before a Moscow audience on the evening of 14 June 1949 in the Tchaikowski Hall, few expected to hear him perform the Yiddish

Partisan song Zog Nit Keynmo! (Never Say). His rendition of this fierce anthem of defiance, composed in the middle of Nazi slaughter, was thick with emotion, and at the end the crowd either fiercely applauded or booed. Robeson had sung for those he knew were already murdered, imprisoned or facing death as a new wave of Stalinist repression against Soviet Jews was underway. Nigerian-born actor and singer Tayo

Aluko explores Robeson's torment and contradictory emotions that make this performance so dramatic.

Charles Dickens: a Life

4/5. Claire Tomalin's acclaimed biography of Charles Dickens – a writer who created characters who continue to endure in the popular imagination, including the Artful Dodger, Mr Pickwick, Pip and David Copperfield. He was a ferociously hard-working man – a philanthropist, a supporter of liberal social causes, and father of ten, but his genius possessed a dark side. Crowd Science

8.30pm BBC World Service

In the absence of any sport, perhaps this will help to tide people over. Presenter Anand Jagatia seeks to answer a question posed by a listener: are placebos ever used to improve the performance levels of athletes or sportspeople? And if so, can they help us amateurs, too? Jagatia touches on neurology and psychology, while also taking on the challenge himself: can techniques such as "verbal placebos", which can reduce anxiety and improve concentration, help him raise his own game?

HANNAH SHADDOCK

Drama: Eavesdropper

2.15pm Radio 4

Paranoia has returned to our lives in unexpected ways in the 21st century. Surveillance has become an accepted evil and its psychological impact on all has reopened a rich seam for writers. In Jeremy Raison's drama, secret agent Claire is looking for terrorists but a new listening device makes her realise she is not always making her own decisions. A quality cast – Lydia Leonard, Anton Lesser and Stephen Critchlow – ramp up the tension. It's a busy time for Lesser: he concludes reading the new Hilary Mantel this week in the lunchtime and Book at Bedtime slots. FIONA HUGHES

Charles Dickens: a Life
5/5. Claire Tomalin's acclaimed biography of one of Britain's best loved novelists paints a portrait of a brilliant writer and a complex man. Today's themes are adulation and farewells. First broadcast in 2011, and repeated now to mark the 150th anniversary of Dickens's death in June, Tomalin's book evocatively portrays Dickens as a writer charged with tremendous imagination and energy, enabling him to create characters who continue to endure in our popular culture, including the Artful Dodger, Mr Pickwick, Pip and David Copperfield. He was also a hard-working journalist, a philanthropist, a supporter of social causes, and father of ten, but his genius had a dark side. Read by Penelope Wilton.

Face behind the voice

Kath Melandri BBC Essex

Age 46

Current job Presents the Saturday breakfast show on BBC Essex (6-9am), does continuity on BBC TV.

CV Born and raised in Edmonton, north London. "My mum was a telephonist and that's where I got the idea you could talk for a living." After a politics degree did a postgrad course in radio, with work experience at Radio York and LBC. Then joined GLR (later BBC London 94.9). Took redundancy in 2009 and worked for a charity for a year, before returning to the BBC. In 2016 got the Saturday lunchtime show on BBC Essex and in 2018 moved to breakfast.

Best moment "I introduced the opening ceremony of the 2012 Olympics on TV. And when I was producing Danny Baker's breakfast show at BBC London, Zippy and George from Rainbow came in - I don't think I've ever smiled as hard or as much."

Worst moment "My dad passed away at the end of last year and saying it on the radio was the hardest thing I had to do. But the audience are like friends. The messages were so heartfelt."

Off air "I live in north London. I spend a lot of time with family and friends, and enjoy going to the cinema, cooking and travelling. I'm an amateur rum nerd. And I dance salsa... I'm quite busy!"

First radio memory "We used to listen to Radio 2 in the morning, so Terry Wogan woke us up - a masterclass. Then in the car we listened to Capital."

Favourite broadcasters "Wogan, of course. I used to listen to Gary Crowley and thought he was brilliant - I had the privilege to do shows at the same station as Gary, but I was too nervous to talk with him on-air! Moira Stuart on the telly, a fantastic newsreader. And Jane Garvey, she's brilliant."

Ambition "To cover for Liza Tarbuck on Radio 2. Next time she's off, someone needs to call me!"

Dream job "Presenting a podcast about rum - all about drinking rum, and learning about how to make rum."

Secret skills "Salsa dancing, I'm a latin dancing whirlwind! Also, I can tell the difference between red and white wine blindfolded..." DAVID CRAWFORD

Face behind the voice

Kath Melandri BBC Essex

Age 46

Current job Presents the Saturday breakfast show on BBC Essex (6-9am), does continuity on BBC TV.

CV Born and raised in Edmonton, north London. "My mum was a telephonist and that's where I got the idea you could talk for a living." After a politics degree did a postgrad course in radio, with work experience at Radio York and LBC. Then joined GLR (later BBC London 94.9). Took redundancy in 2009 and worked for a charity for a year, before returning to the BBC. In 2016 got the Saturday lunchtime show on BBC Essex and in 2018 moved to breakfast.

Best moment "I introduced the opening ceremony of the 2012 Olympics on TV. And when I was producing Danny Baker's breakfast show at BBC London, Zippy and George from Rainbow came in - I don't think I've ever smiled as hard or as much."

Worst moment "My dad passed away at the end of last year and saying it on the radio was the hardest thing I had to do. But the audience are like friends. The messages were so heartfelt."

Off air "I live in north London. I spend a lot of time with family and friends, and enjoy going to the cinema, cooking and travelling. I'm an amateur rum nerd. And I dance salsa... I'm quite busy!"

First radio memory "We used to listen to Radio 2 in the morning, so Terry Wogan woke us up - a masterclass. Then in the car we listened to Capital."

Favourite broadcasters "Wogan, of course. I used to listen to Gary Crowley and thought he was brilliant - I had the privilege to do shows at the same station as Gary, but I was too nervous to talk with him on-air! Moira Stuart on the telly, a fantastic newsreader. And Jane Garvey, she's brilliant."

Ambition "To cover for Liza Tarbuck on Radio 2. Next time she's off, someone needs to call me!"

Dream job "Presenting a podcast about rum - all about drinking rum, and learning about how to make rum."

Secret skills "Salsa dancing, I'm a latin dancing whirlwind! Also, I can tell the difference between red and white wine blindfolded..." DAVID CRAWFORD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Kath Melandri BBC Essex

Age 46

Current job Presents the Saturday breakfast show on BBC Essex (6-9am), does continuity on BBC TV.

CV Born and raised in Edmonton, north London. "My mum was a telephonist and that's where I got the idea you could talk for a living." After a politics degree did a postgrad course in radio, with work experience at Radio York and LBC. Then joined GLR (later BBC London 94.9). Took redundancy in 2009 and worked for a charity for a year, before returning to the BBC. In 2016 got the Saturday lunchtime show on BBC Essex and in 2018 moved to breakfast.

Best moment "I introduced the opening ceremony of the 2012 Olympics on TV. And when I was producing Danny Baker's breakfast show at BBC London, Zippy and George from Rainbow came in - I don't think I've ever smiled as hard or as much."

Worst moment "My dad passed away at the end of last year and saying it on the radio was the hardest thing I had to do. But the audience are like friends. The messages were so heartfelt."

Off air "I live in north London. I spend a lot of time with family and friends, and enjoy going to the cinema, cooking and travelling. I'm an amateur rum nerd. And I dance salsa... I'm quite busy!"

First radio memory "We used to listen to Radio 2 in the morning, so Terry Wogan woke us up - a masterclass. Then in the car we listened to Capital." Favourite broadcasters "Wogan, of course. I used to listen to Gary Crowley and thought he was brilliant - I had the privilege to do shows at the same station as Gary, but I was too nervous to talk with him on-air! Moira Stuart on the telly, a fantastic newsreader. And Jane Garvey, she's brilliant."

Ambition "To cover for Liza Tarbuck on Radio 2. Next time she's off, someone needs to call me!"

Dream job "Presenting a podcast about rum - all about drinking rum, and learning about how to make rum."

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Kath Melandri BBC Essex

Age 46

Current job Presents the Saturday breakfast show on BBC Essex (6–9am), does continuity on BBC TV.

CV Born and raised in Edmonton, north London. "My mum was a telephonist and that's where I got the idea you could talk for a living." After a politics degree did a postgrad course in radio, with work experience at Radio York and LBC. Then joined GLR (later BBC London 94.9). Took redundancy in 2009 and worked for a charity for a year, before returning to the BBC. In 2016 got the Saturday lunchtime show on BBC Essex and in 2018 moved to breakfast.

Best moment "I introduced the opening ceremony of the 2012 Olympics on TV. And when I was producing Danny Baker's breakfast show at BBC London, Zippy and George from Rainbow came in – I don't think I've ever smiled as hard or as much."

Worst moment "My dad passed away at the end of last year and saying it on the radio was the hardest thing I had to do. But the audience are like friends. The messages were so heartfelt."

Off air "I live in north London. I spend a lot of time with family and friends, and enjoy going to the cinema, cooking and travelling. I'm an amateur rum nerd. And I dance salsa... I'm quite busy!"

First radio memory "We used to listen to Radio 2 in the morning, so Terry Wogan woke us up – a masterclass. Then in the car we listened to Capital."

Favourite broadcasters "Wogan, of course. I used to listen to Gary Crowley and thought he was brilliant – I had the privilege to do shows at the same station as Gary, but I was too nervous to talk with him on-air! Moira Stuart on the telly, a fantastic newsreader. And Jane Garvey, she's brilliant."

Ambition "To cover for Liza Tarbuck on Radio 2. Next time she's off, someone needs to call me!"

Dream job "Presenting a podcast about rum – all about drinking rum, and learning about how to make rum."

Secret skills "Salsa dancing, I'm a latin dancing whirlwind! Also, I can tell the difference between red and white wine blindfolded..." DAVID CRAWFORD

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Kath Melandri BBC Essex

Age 46

Current job Presents the Saturday breakfast show on BBC Essex (6–9am), does continuity on BBC TV.

CV Born and raised in Edmonton, north London. “My mum was a telephonist and that’s where I got the idea you could talk for a living.” After a politics degree did a postgrad course in radio, with work experience at Radio York and LBC. Then joined GLR (later BBC London 94.9). Took redundancy in 2009 and worked for a charity for a year, before returning to the BBC. In 2016 got the Saturday lunchtime show on BBC Essex and in 2018 moved to breakfast.

Best moment “I introduced the opening ceremony of the 2012 Olympics on TV. And when I was producing Danny Baker’s breakfast show at BBC London, Zippy and George from Rainbow came in – I don’t think I’ve ever smiled as hard or as much.”

Worst moment “My dad passed away at the end of last year and saying it on the radio was the hardest thing I had to do. But the audience are like friends. The messages were so heartfelt.”

Off air “I live in north London. I spend a lot of time with family and friends, and enjoy going to the cinema, cooking and travelling. I’m an amateur rum nerd. And I dance salsa... I’m quite busy!”

First radio memory “We used to listen to Radio 2 in the morning, so Terry Wogan woke us up – a masterclass. Then in the car we listened to Capital.”

Favourite broadcasters “Wogan, of course. I used to listen to Gary Crowley and thought he was brilliant – I had the privilege to do shows at the same station as Gary, but I was too nervous to talk with him on-air! Moira Stuart on the telly, a fantastic newsreader. And Jane Garvey, she’s brilliant.”

Ambition “To cover for Liza Tarbuck on Radio 2. Next time she’s off, someone needs to call me!”

Dream job “Presenting a podcast about rum – all about drinking rum, and learning about how to make rum.”

Secret skills “Salsa dancing, I’m a latin dancing whirlwind! Also, I can tell the difference between red and white wine blindfolded...” DAVID CRAWFORD

Face behind the voice

Kath Melandri BBC Essex

Age 46

Current job Presents the Saturday breakfast show on BBC Essex (6–9am), does continuity on BBC TV.

CV Born and raised in Edmonton, north London. “My mum was a telephonist and that’s where I got the idea you could talk for a living.” After a politics degree did a postgrad course in radio, with work experience at Radio York and LBC. Then joined GLR (later BBC London 94.9). Took redundancy in 2009 and worked for a charity for a year, before returning to the BBC. In 2016 got the Saturday lunchtime show on BBC Essex and in 2018 moved to breakfast.

Best moment “I introduced the opening ceremony of the 2012 Olympics on TV. And when I was producing Danny Baker’s breakfast show at BBC London, Zippy and George from Rainbow came in – I don’t think I’ve ever smiled as hard or as much.”

Worst moment “My dad passed away at the end of last year and saying it on the radio was the hardest thing I had to do. But the audience are like friends. The messages were so heartfelt.”

Off air “I live in north London. I spend a lot of time with family and friends, and enjoy going to the cinema, cooking and travelling. I’m an amateur rum nerd. And I dance salsa... I’m quite busy!”

First radio memory “We used to listen to Radio 2 in the morning, so Terry Wogan woke us up – a masterclass. Then in the car we listened to Capital.”

Favourite broadcasters “Wogan, of course. I used to listen to Gary Crowley and thought he was brilliant – I had the privilege to do shows at the same station as Gary, but I was too nervous to talk with him on-air! Moira Stuart on the telly, a fantastic newsreader. And Jane Garvey, she’s brilliant.”

Ambition “To cover for Liza Tarbuck on Radio 2. Next time she’s off, someone needs to call me!”

Dream job “Presenting a podcast about rum – all about drinking rum, and learning about how to make rum.”

Secret skills “Salsa dancing, I’m a latin dancing whirlwind! Also, I can tell the difference between red and white wine blindfolded...”

Sunday 4.00pm Radio 4

YOU MIGHT THINK that you know everything there is to know about William Shakespeare. Then along comes Hamnet by Irish author Maggie O'Farrell, which casts fresh light on familiar ground.

O'Farrell's eighth novel is named after Shakespeare's only son, who died at 11, probably from the plague. Four years after Hamnet's death in 1596, the Bard wrote Hamlet – at that time, the two names were interchangeable. O'Farrell's book was inspired by what she describes as her "idle speculation" about the connection between the two events.

"Why would you name this tragic hero after your dead son?" she wonders when we meet in Edinburgh, where she lives with her husband, writer William Sutcliffe, and their three children. "Shakespeare is such a mystery, and I thought, 'This is a sign, it's telling us something. We'll never know what it is – but it's not nothing.'"

Hamnet, she says, "has been under-written about. In most biographies, you're lucky if you get two references. Mention of his death is usually followed by statistics about child mortality, which were very high. I wanted to think about him, his life, who he was."

'It was important for me to give his wife and son a voice'

She does so beautifully and at times heart-breakingly, in the process offering an intriguingly human portrait of Shakespeare, who is never named in the novel. "There's too much baggage," she explains. "Everyone feels they have their own relationship with Shakespeare, our own version inside our heads. I wanted people to forget what they think they know about him."

O'Farrell's Will is a callow teen when we first meet him, barely 30 when the novel ends. He's a man whose gift takes him to places, physically and emotionally, where his family cannot reach him. We see him from their perspective, not as a genius, but as a loving yet self-absorbed and often absent husband and father. "I wanted to give an idea of the stories that might be behind this person that we know so little and so much about. It was important for me to give his son and wife a voice."

While writing, O'Farrell

RADIO TIMES BOOK CLUB CHOICE

Behind the Bard

Maggie O'Farrell on the relationship between Hamlet and Shakespeare's son found herself becoming increasingly "outraged" on behalf of Shakespeare's wife Anne Hathaway, who was also known as Agnes. Wilful, sensual, a little strange, she is portrayed as a devoted mother with powers of divination. "She's had so much vilification over the centuries," says O'Farrell. "People say that she tricked him into marriage. The question should be: why should she marry him? He was 18, penniless, no trade. She was from a good family with a good dowry. She could have made a much better marriage, but maybe she saw something in him, even then. He was never ordinary, clearly."

BORN IN NORTHERN Ireland, O'Farrell grew up in Wales and Scotland. Her first novel, After You'd Gone, was published in 2000, and she won the Costa Book Award in 2010 with The Hand That First Held Mine. She had long been brooding on the idea of Hamnet, but felt a superstitious need to wait until her own son was older than Shakespeare's son was when he died. "I knew that to write it I would have to put myself inside the skin of a woman at the bedside of a child who dies. I thought, 'I can't do that while he's still that age.'" Though her son is now in his teens, she was unable to write the death scenes in the family home. "We have this really dilapidated greenhouse, so I wrote them in there in short bursts, then I'd go for a little walk. It was quite peculiar."

As well as learning to fly a kestrel, O'Farrell's research included growing her own Elizabethan physic garden. "I was thinking, with this terrifying virus sweeping towards us, imagine if those plants and herbs were all you had to protect yourself and your children."

While the novel's plague theme is "weirdly relevant right now," she is focusing on more positive news. Film and TV rights to Hamnet have already been sold, and the BBC adaptation of Hilary Mantel's Wolf Hall has proved that historical literature can artfully move from page to screen. She's excited at the possibilities.

"I know they've sent the book to Claire Foy, and she would be incredible as Agnes – someone with intelligence and sensitivity. As for Will, I don't know," she adds, almost as an afterthought. "Someone quite young!" GRAEME THOMSON

YOUR RT Gardening

For happy, healthy plants, find them the perfect home, says Joe Swift

THE LATE, GREAT plantswoman Beth Chatto's mantra was "right plant, right place" and most good gardeners know this philosophy is fundamental to success. It's the basics of a sustainable garden, one that we garden with rather than fight against, as it won't require lots of watering or trying to change the kind of soil we have.

All of us have tried to grow plants where they just don't want to be. Some may survive, but always struggle, need disproportionate care and rarely look happy. The good news is that whatever soil (clay, sandy, acidic or alkaline) and aspect (sunny or shady) you may have, there will always be a large range of plants out there that you can put together to thrive and look great. The key is to let the soil and aspect dictate and then create a list of the right plants to use in the right place.

GET DOWN TO EARTH

Soil-test kits are cheap, immediate and will give you the pH of your soil. Test a few different areas around the garden as they may differ. Pick up a handful of soil, make a ball and rub it through your fingers and it'll tell you a lot. A clay soil will form a ball and feel sticky with very fine particles, a sandy soil will feel gritty and impossible to make a ball from (it'll fall apart) and a loamy soil will form a ball but easily break up, too. Peaty soils are like sponges when wet and chalky soil will have visible lumps of chalk or stones.

CHECK WHERE THE SUN IS

If you know your garden well, you'll know how the sun moves across the sky and the sunny and shady areas it creates during the day from the position of boundaries, buildings and trees. If you're new to it, work out if you're north, east, south or west facing and watch the sun move. In summer it will change as it gets higher. Try to compartmentalise areas in your garden – such as full sun, full shade, part sun or dappled shade (under the canopy edge of a deciduous tree) and perhaps draw a basic plan.

FIND PLANTS TO THRIVE

Now you can go looking for plants that will grow happily together. For sandy soils in sun, for example, you'll need plants such as lavender, geraniums, buddleia, sparges and the ever-flowering erigeron daisy; for clay soils in shade, try hostas, ferns, hellebores and Japanese anemones. Look online or ask the experts at nurseries about your specific needs. Most garden centres divide their plant aisles into categories like this and will gladly give advice about what grows best where.

IMPROVE YOUR SOIL

All soils' fertility will be improved by incorporating plenty of organic matter and/or mulching annually (garden compost, well-rotted manure – whatever you can get in quantity locally). This will improve the moisture retention of sandy soils and the drainage in heavy soils. It won't change the underlying soil type you have, but will further increase the range of plants you can grow and improve their health.

BRING BACK YOUR BUGS

Our gardens are important resources for wildlife. Encouraging a wide range of species to come into them makes them healthier, too, as beneficial insects such as lacewings, ladybirds and bees prey on pests and pollinate our plants. Birds will also come to feast on the insects – it's the circle of life! There are some very simple things we can do to encourage these insects.

LOG STACKS

Decaying wood supports many insects (including ground beetles), fungi, mosses and lichen and can make a home for amphibians. Log stacks can simply be an informal pile of logs. With a little ambition, however, they can act as dividers within a garden or a backdrop to a seating area. Cap them with a little wildflower turf or put some soil on top and sow some seed to encourage pollinators.

BUG BOXES AND HOTELS

You can buy fancy ones in garden centres and online, but they're easy to make from whatever you can get your hands on and a fun project for adults and kids alike. Small holes make ideal hibernating homes for ladybirds and lacewings, so lengths of bamboo cane cut into short sections with the hollow section exposed are perfect. They can be set into an old wooden box, along with decaying wood and some stones (with the aim of creating nooks and crannies).

An easier option is simply to tie a bundle of pieces of bamboo cane together, or drill a log with some holes. You can get carried away if you have the room! Stack a few pallets and pack them with all sorts – cut grass and straw, cracked bricks, twigs, bamboo canes, stone, old tiles and the like – for the most desirable bug hotel in town!

LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION

Place your bug hotel in a warm, sunny, sheltered position, away from the prevailing wind and close to vegetation. If you make one for hanging, it can be suspended from trees or pergolas or fixed onto a wall or fence. If aphids are a problem on a particular plant, such as roses, site your bug house nearby, be patient and you should notice the difference as the beneficial insects get to grips with them.

Take your pick from three top-quality, carefully selected plants that no garden should be without – strong performers that will give you beautiful displays for weeks on end, year after year, in their chosen spot, whether as ground cover or as the centrepiece of colourful containers.

SAVE ON YOUR PLANTS

A GERANIUM PYRENAICUM "BILL WALLIS"

A super-tough, long-flowering variety that's resistant to droughts and avoided by rabbits and slugs. Good for borders, it will grow in sun or part-shade, flowering from May to October. 510922

1 x 9cm plant £5.50 £4.95
3 x 9cm plants £13.95 £12.55

B ERIGERON KARVINSKIANUS

A brilliantly versatile plant that can be used as ground or wall cover, or grown in containers, borders or hanging baskets. It flowers for around nine months of the year, from April to November. 510342

1 x 9cm plant £4.95 £4.45
3 x 9cm plants £11.50 £10.35
1 x 2 litre plant £12.95 £11.65

C GAURA LINDHEIMERI "THE BRIDE"

Wonderful long, elegant spikes with pink buds opening to white blooms that just keep on coming and outlast many other plants in your garden. 510353

1 x 9cm plant £4.95 £4.45
3 x 9cm plants £12.95 £11.65
6 x 9cm plants £13.95 £12.55

HELP FUND A BETTER RETIREMENT WHILE LOOKING AFTER LOVED ONES

Often when you're facing the question of how to afford your own retirement, there could be an ageing parent with care needs, a child that needs help getting a foot onto the property ladder, or grandchildren you want to support and spend time with. It means an added set of financial pressures and responsibilities at a time you should be looking forward to the next chapter of life.

Nowadays, more and more over-55s are finding themselves caring for ageing parents as well as helping adult children. With the young struggling to save for deposits and the elderly needing care, this leaves those in the middle – the sandwich generation – left in a unique situation.

Faced with this juggling act, a solution many are turning to is equity release. Freeing some of the cash tied up in your home means you could benefit from the value of your property while helping loved ones too.

EQUITY RELEASE – HOW DOES IT WORK?

When it comes to equity release, we all have questions, but the first question Key Equity Release will answer is whether it's right for you.

Personal

Key's equity release advice is unique to you, delivered by qualified experts who will take the time to understand your needs and search their product range to find the right plan for you.

Transparent

Key will ensure you consider your options, including downsizing or other forms of borrowing, and if equity release isn't right for you, they'll tell you.

Supportive

Your Key adviser will give you all the information you need to make an informed decision.

Free advice

All of our equity release advice relates to our range of Key branded products and is completely free of charge. So, you can find out if it's right for you without it costing you a penny.

FREE READER GUIDE

Request your new, free 2020 guide to equity release today. Or to book a no-obligation consultation, call FREE on 0808 208 4168 or visit radiotimes.com/equityrelease

Lines open Monday–Thursday 9am–8pm; Friday 9am–5.30pm; Saturday 9am–5pm

EQUITY RELEASE THAT'S RIGHT FOR YOU

- Equity release allows you to access some of the cash from your home, leaving you to enjoy the boost to your finances.
- Key Equity Release offer lifetime mortgages only, which is a loan secured against your home.
- With Key Equity Release plans there are typically no monthly repayments to make as the loan, plus roll up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end.
- Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits.
- There is a great deal of flexibility and range of features available with Key Equity Release plans. You may wish to take one lump sum, or an initial amount with the option to withdraw more funds when you need to, and with some plans you can guarantee an inheritance. Thanks to these options, it's easier to find a plan to meet your needs

More or less – what are you due?

The new financial year brings changes to the pension you'll get, says Paul Lewis

ABOUT 10,000 PEOPLE in their 70s or older who are currently getting an extra £70 a week with their pension for a dependent spouse or civil partner who is still under state pension age will face a big cut in their state pension from 6 April.

The cut was announced back in 2007. No new claims were accepted the council that bills you.

All other state pensioners should see a boost in their income from 6 April. The full new state pension will rise by £6.60 a week, from £168.60 a week to £175.20, which is well over £9,000 a year. The rise is 3.9% – more than double the rate of inflation. This pension is paid to people who reached state pension age on 6 April 2016 or later.

‘The rise is more than double the rate of inflation’ from April 2010 and the increase will stop being paid from 6 April.

Anyone who loses this £70 should see if they can claim pension credit or another means-tested benefit such as council tax reduction or, if they pay rent, housing benefit. You can claim pension credit by calling the pension credit claim line on 0800 99 1234. It can also help with housing benefit claims; otherwise go to your local council. For council tax reduction contact

The old basic state pension for people who reached state pension age before 6 April 2016 will increase by £5.05 a week, from £129.20 to £134.25. For couples where a wife depends on her husband's National Insurance contributions, the total for both will be £8.05 a week more at £214.70.

Some people get less than the standard amounts of new or basic state pension; their pensions will rise by 3.9%. Some get more and anything over the standard amounts will rise by just 1.7%, the rate of Consumer Price Inflation (CPI) last September.

Disability benefits and the bereavement allowance will rise by 1.7% and, for the first time in five years, so will benefits paid to working-age people such as jobseeker's allowance. That will add just a pound or two to most weekly benefits. The bereavement support payment stays frozen at 2016 rates.

TAX ON A HOUSE SOLD TO FUND CARE

Allen is worried about Capital Gains Tax. ‘My father is in a nursing home. We're about to sell the house he lived in to fund his care. Will he be liable for CGT?’

Paul Lewis replies: When you stop living in a property, the last nine months before you sell it count as if you still lived there (before 6 April it was 18 months). However, for people in long-term residential care it is 36 months. So if his home is sold within 36 months of him moving into care, no CGT is due.

Periods when he did live there are also ignored. So even after five years' absence from his house the tax may be negligible. He would be counted as absent for five years minus the last three years, which leaves two years. Say he bought the house 30 years ago and it has gained £220,000 in value. He can deduct anything spent on improving it – apart from normal maintenance – say £20,000. The taxable gain would be years absent divided by years owned times the gain of £200,000. That is £13,333. Each year there is a CGT allowance – £12,300 from 6 April – so deduct that and the tax due would be 28% of £1,033, which is £289.

The Good Karma Hospital
Sunday 8.00pm ITV

WITH ITS GOLDEN coastline, emerald hills and picturesque waterways, Kerala is India's tropical paradise. The southern state also has the country's highest literacy rate and best healthcare, although you wouldn't know it from watching ITV's medical drama The Good Karma Hospital. The show stars Amanda Redman and Amrita Acharia as doctors in an under-resourced Keralan cottage hospital, but the series is actually filmed in Sri Lanka because of the Indian state's long monsoon season.

Wedge between the Arabian Sea and the rugged Western Ghats range, Kerala stretches along the southwestern tip of the subcontinent. Its name translates roughly as "land of coconuts" in the local language, but it was the region's prized spices that first brought maritime traders here 2,000 years ago. Today Kerala is one of India's most popular destinations, thanks to its enchanting backwaters, jungly hills, palm-fringed beaches and fabulous seafood.

CRUISE SERENE BACKWATERS

Kerala is famous for its 900-mile labyrinth of canals, rivers, lagoons and lakes that are best navigated on a kettuvallam or houseboat – converted barges traditionally used to transport rice and other cargo. Nowadays you can hire deluxe kettuvallams with air conditioning, private bathrooms, chic furnishings and personal chefs, but you'll still feel like you're stepping back in time as you glide past paddy fields, coconut groves and toddy shops.

TAKE A TEA BREAK

The British introduced tea to Kerala in the 1890s and manicured plantations still carpet the rolling hills that surround the former Raj resort of Munnar, along with spice gardens and rubber estates. Several working tea factories are open to the public, but the best way to appreciate the splendid scenery of the lower Western Ghats – and work up a thirst – is to do a tea-tasting walking tour, or cycle along the trails that wind through the estates.

BOOK INTO A HERITAGE HOTEL

You can explore Kerala's chequered history in Kochi (formerly Cochin), a sleepy harbour city where Dutch, Portuguese and British-era houses jostle with ancient mosques and temples in the historic quarters of Fort Cochin and Mattancherry. Centuries-old homes are now boutique hotels, such as Le Colonial – which is where Bill Oddie and Lionel Blair resided while filming the BBC reality show The Real Marigold Hotel. Offshore, giant Chinese fishing nets hang from curved teak and bamboo poles, and are believed to have been brought to Kochi by Chinese traders in the 14th century.

Some colonial buildings have been turned into galleries and art cafés, and in

The cast of The Good Karma Hospital

December the city will hold one of India's premier art festivals, Kochi-Muziris Biennale 2020. It's also a great place to see a performance of kathakali, Kerala's classical dance-drama.

MEET THE LOCALS

Kerala has six national parks including the Periyar Tiger Reserve, which is a vast expanse of mist-shrouded, forest-blanketed hills. Poachers-turned-guides lead treks and camping trips, although you're more likely to see herds of elephants and bison than an elusive tiger. Another option is to try to spot a few of Periyar's 250 species of birds on a cruise of the park's lake.

State of bliss

Kerala – home to The Good Karma Hospital – offers the best of India

HIT THE BEACH

India's loveliest beaches are along the state's 360-mile coastline, and accommodation ranges from luxury resorts to eco-friendly guesthouses and Ayurvedic wellness centres – Kerala is the home of Ayurveda medicine. The beaches in the south are more developed, while the north is wilder and emptier. If you want to get off the beaten track, hop on a plane or overnight ferry to the Lakshadweep islands, an isolated archipelago 185 miles off the coast. Foreign tourists are only allowed to stay on a few of the islands, which are ringed by coral reefs, warm lagoons and powder-soft sand.

FEAST ON SEAFOOD

Keralan food is richly spiced, colourful and healthier than northern Indian cuisine. Like the state itself, it's a melting pot: Hindus are big on vegetables and coconuts; Christians are fond of seafood and meat; Muslims prefer biryanis and breads. It's famous for its endless varieties of fragrant fish curry. CLAIRE WEBB

Word of the Week – snottinger

Rather pleasingly, the Victorians liked to call a hankie a "snottinger". Hankie is, of course, short for handkerchief. The first element is clear enough, but "kerchief" has a more complicated history. It comes from the Anglicisation of an Old French word, couvrechief, which referred to a woman's headdress.

Over time, the word extended to mean a piece of cloth with which one could mop one's brow as well as nose. The French term was mangled to "kercher", and then "kerchief", with "hand" tacked on for transparency. Both gave way to the diminutive "hankie".

As for that "snottinger", it can be found in a Slang Dictionary of 1865 adjacent to the "snotter" or "snot-hauler", defined as "a pickpocket who commits great depredations upon gentlemen's pocket-handkerchiefs".

A tonic for the soul

TRANSPORTING

and Laura Morera as Countess Marie
in Mayerling

It was wonderful to settle down to watch The Royal Ballet: Mayerling (15 March BBC4), which was danced and acted impeccably. It was such a treat to switch off from depressing reality and be transported to another world – a tonic for the soul and the senses.

With two ballet documentaries to follow, this was an evening of TV heaven. I hear the BBC is to launch their Dance Season later this year. It's just what's needed when visits to the theatre to see the real thing will be just a memory. Returning my Swan Lake tickets won't seem such a hardship if I can rely on evenings like this on the television.

LOST SHUTTLECOCKS...

My wife and I, like tens of thousands of others, are badminton players and we were delighted to find that the All England Open Championships in Birmingham were shown on the BBC, even if it was only on the red button. We enjoyed four days of seeing the best players in the world and following our favourites.

We eagerly set the afternoon aside to watch the finals (15 March) and were so disappointed to find they weren't broadcast. What on earth was the BBC thinking?

Tony and Bridget Skirving
Wordsley, West Midlands
It seems the red button carried other events on that Sunday, in particular the BBL Women's and Men's Basketball Trophy finals.

PITMAN POST

As a Pitman shorthand user for 62 years, I think the outline shown in Feedback (21 March) from McDonald & Dodds (ITV) looks like the "14th" step rather than the "11th". I checked it in my shorthand dictionary.

SPLITTING HAIRS

I enjoyed the latest series of The Split (BBC1), although I found it increasingly incredible. Nicola Walker is much more believable in her wellies as farmer Gillian in Last Tango in Halifax than as high-flying lawyer Hannah.

For example, when her husband Nathan let himself into Christie's flat in episode four (3 March) and found his wife's book on the bedside table, it only added to the implausibility. If Hannah takes a book along when visiting her lover, Nathan clearly has nothing to worry about!

ROY HUDD 1936–2020

‘He never looked for laughs’

Barry Cryer pays tribute to his dear friend

Roy’s big break on TV was in the 1960s BBC satire Not So Much a Programme, More a Way of Life.

We met soon after and became friends, though we hardly ever worked together – apart from in Roy’s 1969 sketch series The Roy Hudd Show.

Like lots of other people, his career had ups and downs. He was at a low ebb when Danny La Rue saw him in a panto and booked him for his show at London’s Palace Theatre – which then ran for two years. Roy never forgot that.

His knowledge of music hall and variety was encyclopaedic. When people asked me about a comedy, I would always refer them to Roy. “Talk to the Man,” I’d say.

He was one of those people you never heard a bad word about, which is quite an achievement in our business. He loved people and warmth was his great quality. Audiences would start laughing as soon as he came on.

We’d drink together and swap stories. We agreed real life was funnier than jokes – things that happened or somebody’d said.

He wrote a lot of his own material for Radio 2’s The News Huddlines [1975–2001]. I remember there was a new series coming up that Alison Steadman, who played Mrs Thatcher, couldn’t do, and Roy mentioned this to June Whitfield, with whom he was appearing in panto. During the matinee, June played the Fairy Queen entirely as Margaret Thatcher – she was auditioning for him! Roy came off stage and said, “You’ve got the job!” He loved it.

He was a good actor himself. Roy said to me, “It’s because I’m not sweating over looking for laughs.” He starred in a brilliant 2002 radio play called Casting Shadows by Mark Burgess, playing his idol, Max Miller. It was perfect casting.

The last time I saw him was last year, at a reunion for members of Danny La Rue’s legendary London revue. Roy was there reminiscing about the influence Danny had had on his career. I’m so glad I saw him again. He was such a dear friend.

SOAP STAR

Sue Nicholls (Audrey Roberts in Coronation Street) loved acting with him as undertaker Archie Shuttleworth from 2002–10:

“My heart is heavy to say goodbye to Roy, a truly wonderful comic and actor and a very treasured friend. Thank you for being in my life, dearest Roy. God bless.”

TREASURED
Sue Nicholls felt great affection for her co-star of nature and the threat human beings pose to the natural world.

Julia Rowles
Bookham, Surrey

... The music was superb, the photography was exquisite, and Colin Stafford-Johnson’s eco ethics reflected his concerns about species extinction.

He reminded us, too, of the ongoing strains on Cuba caused by the embargo introduced by the Americans in March 1958, but pointed to the signs of care for the environment still managed by its people.

In contrast to nature programmes that focus almost entirely on competition and aggression, Colin focused on the joy of survival and this was so appreciated at this time of concern.

Gail Parfitt
Exeter, Devon

BACK TO THE FUTURE

With us over-70s being confined to barracks for a few months, it seems, how about the BBC (and other broadcasters, for that matter) replacing cancelled sports events and the like by digging out some seldom-seen good old-fashioned comedy and light entertainment shows or films from the archives to keep us in good spirits?

A dedicated hour or two every day in the same slot would give us something to look forward to!

Richard Allen
Carnforth, Lancashire

...This is a wonderful opportunity to use BBC2 to raise our morale. Morecambe and Wise and The Two Ronnies immediately spring to mind. The BBC is sitting on a treasure trove.

YOU ASK US

Where's Jack Farthing off to after Cornwall?

Now we've seen the last of Poldark, I hope it doesn't mean we've seen the last of the excellent Jack Farthing. Has he any new projects in the pipeline?

Derick Oakham, Ryde, Isle of Wight
Jack confirms to RT that his next project is Love, Wedding, Repeat. This is a romantic comedy about the power of chance, as a brother tries to arrange the perfect wedding day for his younger sister – and alternate versions of the day unfold. Expect mayhem – these apparently involve an angry ex-girlfriend along with an unexpected reunion with the girl of his dreams who got away...

Jack and his Poldark co-star Eleanor Tomlinson both have roles in the film, alongside stars Sam Claflin, Olivia Munn and Freida Pinto. Jack tells RT it will be released on Netflix soon (we hear possibly as early as April), but his lips are sealed about Marc, the character he plays. "Suffice to say it's very different from 18th-century Cornwall!" he says.

TIME FOR MORE MANTEL
Are there any plans for the BBC to make Wolf Hall available again on iPlayer as there's so much noise around Hilary Mantel's new novel, The Mirror & the Light?

MISSED

Michelle Ricketts, Ammanford, Dyfed
There's no news on this, but it's unlikely as Wolf Hall has been made available to new streaming service BritBox (britbox.co.uk). See p36 for more great viewing on demand.

MISSING THOSE EGGS
Will the Eggheads ever be back?
William Williamson, Yell, Shetland
The wait is over! Weekday repeats begin on Monday at 4.45pm on BBC2, with new episodes on air from Easter Monday (13 April).

SOME GOOD NEWS...

With the prospect of being at home for weeks to come and watching more television, there's been one cheering piece of news. The Government has decided to postpone asking some over-75s to pay for their (formerly free) TV licences – a change that was scheduled for June. Now the payment won't be introduced until August. Who knows, perhaps they'll decide that older viewers have taken enough punishment and push the deadline back even further...

ESCAPE TO THE COUNTRY

It's decided, we're moving to Ambridge (The Archers, Radio 4). There may be no GP, no fire brigade, no postie, no petrol station, no public transport or mobile phones to speak of. But there is no Covid-19!

And here we were, thinking the village was just down the road, inhabited by folk just like us.

Bel Rayner
Fortrose, Ross-shire Jeremy Howe, editor of The Archers, has tweeted: "For the time being we have enough episodes recorded to keep taking listeners to Ambridge as usual for the weeks ahead, but like everyone else we're faced with an unprecedented situation. We're working on plans for beyond this, given there are significant challenges and the safety and wellbeing of our production team and cast are paramount. We're sure listeners will understand and we'll update as plans become clearer."

View from my sofa

PAUL RITTER

'I said fine to going topless'

As Friday Night's shirtless Martin, he has to steer clear of puddings

What's the view from your sofa?

There's no television as all my viewing is done on diminutive devices, so the view from my sofa is a wall of pictures and posters. Streaming is my friend, and I used to catch up with sporting events live on the radio. I adore football on the radio. It comes from never being allowed to stay up when I was a kid so I became obsessed with having my ear pressed to a tinny transistor. That thrill has never left me.

What do you like to watch?

Loads of documentaries. I'm always spectacularly behind the curve, so I never see things when they come out. I've loved documentaries since I was a kid watching Paul Watson's The Family and Michael Apted's Seven Up and 14 Up. Recently I've packed in two music documentaries: one about Lemmy from Motörhead – Motörhead got me through some very tough times as a teenager; I suspect not many people say that. And then one about Lil Peep [Everybody's Everything, Netflix], the rapper who died tragically early.

Do you watch programmes that you star in?

I did watch the first five episodes of The Trial of Christine Keeler on iPlayer and then deliberately ducked the last one – which was the one that I was in. I knew what happened in it anyway...

Friday Night Dinner is back after a couple of years. Has anything changed?

I think it's very much what we've come to know and love. It comes back to Robert Popper's wonderfully crafted scripts. He's surpassed himself with this new half dozen. It's the established ensemble of actors minus the wonderful Frances Cuka [who played Grandma] as she recently passed away. But we're on a safe wicket – it's terrain that we know.

When you first signed up as Friday Night's Martin, did you ever think you'd be going topless on screen for nearly a decade?

No. The topless idea was explained to me quite early on and like a fool I said, "Yeah, fine." One leaves one's dignity at the door, I guess. There's a great quote from Bert Kwouk talking about the Pink Panther films. He said, "Always take the work seriously but not yourself." That's what I've tried to do.

Does it require a punishing gym regime before each new series?

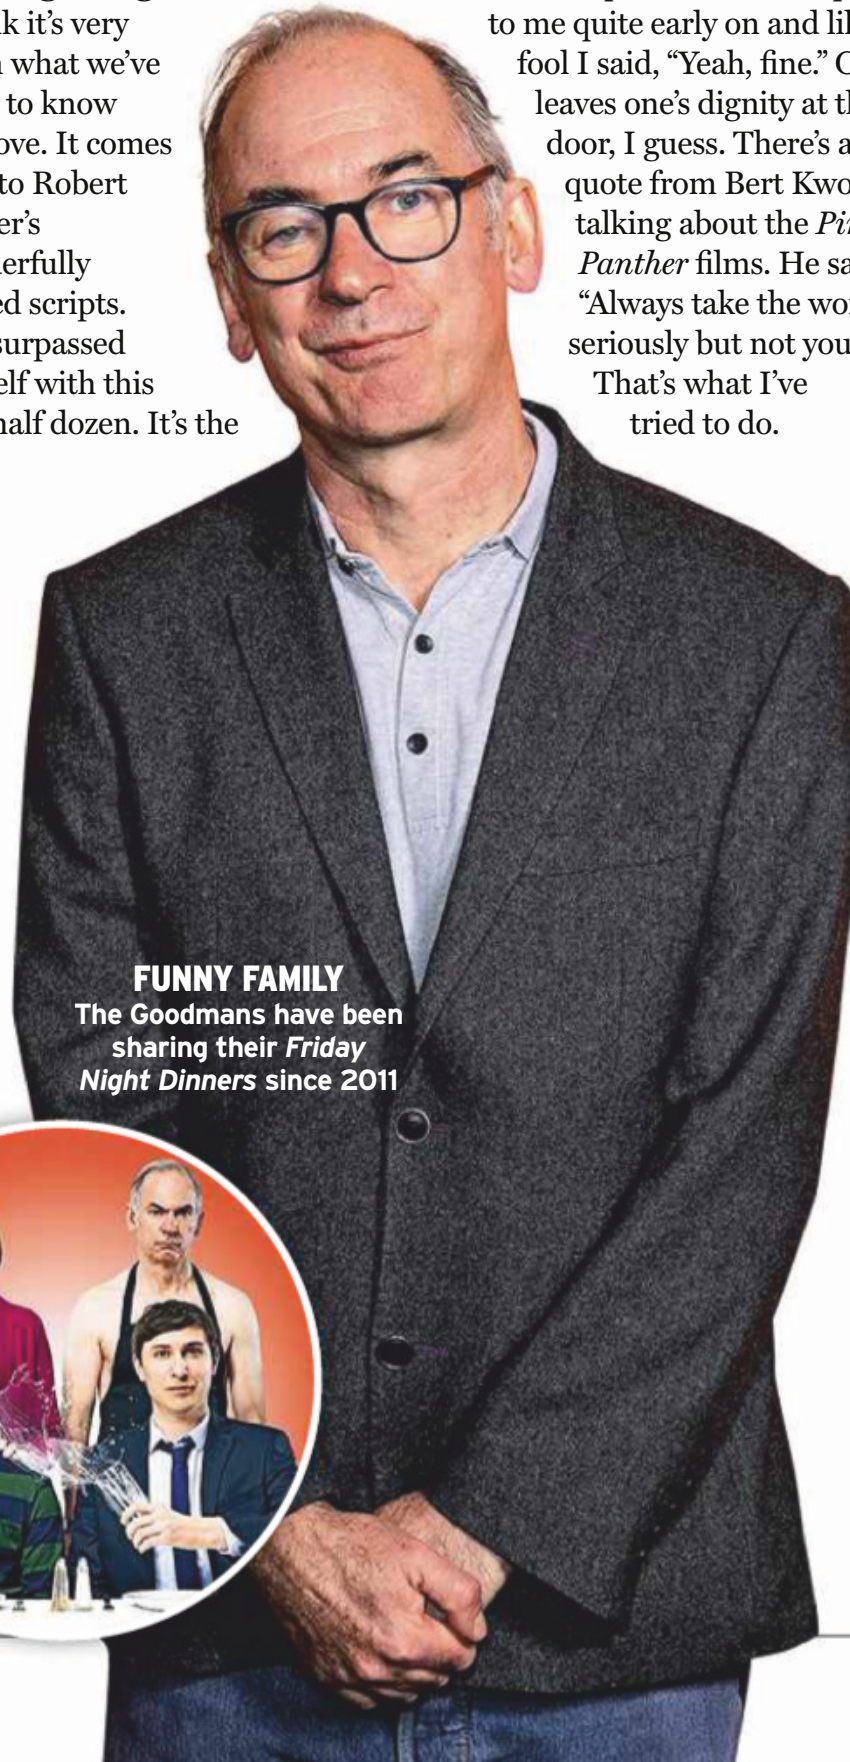

I do steer clear of the very tempting puddings that the Friday Night Dinner caterers serve up and I go teetotal during filming. That's how you get to see the sculpted body that people so admire.

Has your role in Chernobyl made a difference to your recognition?

It was fantastic and I felt very privileged to be involved with it but I don't stick my head up and survey whether I'm more recognised or anything like that. I'd say about 60 per cent of people who recognise me is due to Friday Night Dinner – particularly among the younger constituency of viewers. And yes, I do get a fair bit of Martin's catchphrase "S on it!" shouted at me in the street...

BENJI WILSON

Friday Night Dinner is on Friday 10pm C4. Paul also stars in Belgravia (Sun 9pm ITV)

FUNNY FAMILY
The Goodmans have been sharing their Friday Night Dinners since 2011

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK In Your Defence by Sarah Langford. It's an anthology of cases she's worked on over the years as a defence counsel.

MY FILMS I'm watching an awful lot of modern westerns – The Ballad of Buster Scruggs is my current recommendation.

MY RADIO A lot of 6 Music. Mark Radcliffe and Stuart Maconie are two of my favourite broadcasters. I once startled Stuart Maconie in a hotel in Manchester, leaping on him in a very fanboy way.
