A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

All together now

IN THESE STRANGE days it's reassuring to discover that some old truths still hold true. One being that nothing can bring the nation together like television. It's no surprise to discover that news programmes on both TV and radio in recent days have enjoyed (if enjoyed is the right word) record audiences. But with this week's comedy takeover of Saturday nights, viewers will flock to the screen to do something more therapeutic than get abreast of the latest news. Namely, to laugh.

With Gavin & Stacey returning to our screens on Saturday nights we can expect plenty of laughter. But we can also expect something that we've been told for years was dying out: the return of the great communal viewing experience. When you're sitting in front of the TV, even if you are stuck in enforced isolation, it's reassuring to know that millions of others are watching – and laughing – with you. It's a timely and warm reminder that we're all in this together.

We hope that this issue delivers some of that warmth as well, along with the very best guidance to the shows Britain is watching. But to make sure you can get your hands on next week's issue, we'd like to repeat our message that there are three easy ways to guarantee you receive your copy of Radio Times in the weeks and months to come...

HOME DELIVERY Many newsagents will deliver your copy, or they will reserve one for you if you are able to go out.

BECOME A REGULAR SUBSCRIBER

We run offers to our subscription service, which is usually only available on direct debit. You will find a card on page 15 with our current direct debit offer.

BECOME A TEMPORARY SUBSCRIBER

We are aware that some people don't like taking out direct debits, so for the next 12 weeks, we will deliver Radio Times to your door, for the usual price and without a direct debit. You can cancel your copies at any time, and we will refund the price of the copies you don't receive. Which we think you'll agree is a simple, no-strings way to get Radio Times delivered to your home. You can find details of this offer on page 44.

And finally, a word to our existing subscribers. If you want to change your delivery address, you can do so on our website at www.buysubscriptions.com/login. Alternatively, you can send an email including your customer number, your old address and the new address to radio.times@buysubscriptions.com, or you can call our enquiries line on 03330 162 129†.

We hope you enjoy the issue. Stay safe and healthy. See you next week.

KATE HUMBLE

‘We’re about to get busy with lambing,’ says the presenter, ‘so there’s not much time for TV. But my new discovery is Modern Love on Amazon Prime – a series of self-contained love stories taken from a column in the New York Times. I’ve also just discovered Last Tango in Halifax. It’s bloody marvellous!’

Culture will see us through

A new BBC arts festival brings solace to our isolation

IN ALMOST EVERY aspect of our lives, the past few weeks have been the most testing in modern history. While many with specialist training will spend the next few months out and about, ensuring essential services like the NHS continue to function, far more of us are coming to terms with the realisation that the most useful thing we can do for society right now is to stay indoors. This is difficult to process. We're worried about our loved ones and for the wider community and feel frustrated that we can't do more to help.

It's a small consolation to know that, throughout history, this condition of anxious inactivity – known as quarantine – has produced great art. The Decameron, one of the pinnacles of Western literature, was written in the mid-14th century during the Black Death and follows a group of young people in quarantine outside Florence, who pass the time crafting extraordinary stories for one another. Just over 250 years later, Shakespeare took advantage of his theatre being closed for months because of the plague to write King Lear, Macbeth and Antony and Cleopatra. More recently still, the painter Edvard Munch spent his quarantine with the Spanish flu in 1919 producing haunting self-portraits.

You don't have to be a genius like Shakespeare to experience the creative benefits of quarantine. One constructive outcome we can all draw from the restrictions of the current crisis is simply an opportunity to experience those works of art

SEDUCED BY DANCE
Northern Ballet's dazzling Dracula

– novels, plays, symphonies – that we struggle to prioritise in our normal routines. There are many reasons why we might want to do this, but for me the main one is that great art – like the plays of Shakespeare or the songs of the Beatles – both entertains us and also makes sense of the times we live in. The consolations of art are endless because it draws us out of ourselves and helps us confront the challenges of life head-on.

ONE VITAL ROLE for the BBC at this time, therefore, is to be a trusted guide; not only to keep alive the connection between artists, cultural organisations and the public, but to boost it. Over the coming months, to keep the arts alive in people's homes, we will be running the Culture in Quarantine Festival, across Radio 3, Radio 4, BBC2, BBC4, Sounds, iPlayer and our digital platforms.

We'll be offering guides to shuttered exhibitions or to the permanent collections of museums and galleries that nobody's currently able to see. We'll record new performances from world-class musicians and comedians without an audience. In theatre and dance, we'll present jewels from the archive. And we're working with major theatres to ensure recent productions can reach a new audience through BBC services.

As with every area of business, those who work in the arts – from performers to producers to the back-stage professionals who keep it all turning – are facing immense pressure on their ability to sustain a living. Yet even just a few days into the new reality, the internet is alive with activity – famous musicians are offering free tutorials and everyday craftivists are sharing their latest creations. Wonderful things, like Margaret Atwood's Front Row Late puppet show in her study on BBC2, are happening.

We can't help it – after all, the UK is world-renowned for its creativity. There is always creativity and culture, even at a time of widespread quarantine. The job of the BBC is both to support and reflect that. And to be there for you.

Jonty Claypole is the BBC's director for arts

BBC CULTURE IN QUARANTINE FESTIVAL: THREE HIGHLIGHTS

THEATRE Stay at home with Shakespeare. BBC4 and iPlayer will screen six RSC productions: Hamlet, The Merchant of Venice, Much Ado about Nothing, Romeo and Juliet, Othello and Christopher Eccleston's brooding Macbeth (above right).

VISUAL ARTS With that exhibition you longed to see cancelled, a four-part BBC4 series, Museums in Quarantine, will transport you to now-shuttered gems like Titian: Love, Desire, Death at the National Gallery.

DANCE BBC4/iPlayer will show Northern Ballet's Dracula, with music by Schnittke, Rachmaninov, Pärt and Daugherty; and BalletBoyz' Deluxe (left).

WHAT WE WATCHED

We now think of the swingometer as a staple part of election night coverage, but back in 1992, it had actually been in mothballs for 13 years. The new hi-tech version boasted a 20ft arrow connected to £20,000-worth of computer technology. "It's really all terrific fun," said the BBC's Peter Snow, presiding over more gadgets than Q had in his laboratory. The electronic wizardry was augmented by a brand-new feature: a nationwide exit poll. The BBC and ITV went on to predict a hung Parliament, with the Conservatives only just getting more seats than Labour. The Tory victory therefore took many pundits by surprise.

WHAT YOU SAID

K Craig of County Durham was mourning the end of Thirtysomething in the UK: "Although criticised by many, the highly original show has had a huge effect on its audience, and even created a new word in the process. It succeeded due to its remarkable consistency and extremely well-rounded characters – TV won't be the same without them." Little did our correspondent know a revival would be announced in February 2020, featuring such stars as Ken Olin, Patricia Wettig and Mel Harris. Expect the focus to be on the offspring of the original ensemble.

The best medicine

Seldom has the country needed a good laugh more than it does now. As the BBC shows the very first Gavin & Stacey, Mark Lawson celebrates the therapeutic power of classic comedy

GAVIN & STACEY, your nation needs you. Ruth Jones and James Corden's romantic sitcom, about two Welsh women and two Essex men, leads the package of repeats that BBC1 is dropping into peak time from this week. "Another chance to see," as continuity announcers put it.

The comedy is one of the solutions to the current wreckage of television schedules. Numerous gaps have been left by the cancellation of sport and suspensions of many shows due to the Covid-19 pandemic.

Repeats have always been a contentious issue; newspapers often print letters from readers complaining about their number. However, old shows often attract higher audiences than new ones; for example, episodes of Dad's Army, five decades after they were made, regularly out-rate material hot from the editing suite.

Cannily acknowledging this ambiguous audience attitude, the shows the BBC has chosen – including Outnumbered and Peter Kay's Car Share, as well as Gavin & Stacey – belong to the prestigious sub-genre of Classic Repeats.

While resorting to reruns is a pragmatic response to an interruption of the supply of originals, it also has a therapeutic purpose. The popular saying that "laughter is the best medicine" shouldn't be taken too literally in the current situation. To avoid infection, our best bet is to follow the Government instructions on isolation and distancing; and, if symptoms develop, to seek advice on the NHS 111 website.

Yet, there is general medical consensus that laughter both enhances mood and boosts the immune system. Giggling with others is said to be especially beneficial so, as the Gavin & Stacey special was watched simultaneously by 11.6 million of us on Christmas Day, the series feels a good choice to entertain families in lockdown.

However, to enter another caveat in these exceptional times, stereotypical home viewing, with grandparents, parents, and children cuddled up on a sofa, will have to be adjusted. Relatives should probably take opposite ends of the (ideally two or more metres long) sofa, or sit on separate chairs, widely spaced.

As both Gavin & Stacey and Outnumbered have predominantly domestic settings, there will be the paradox of people sitting at home, watching people sitting at home. We may feel a sense of shock that the characters are not observing social distancing. Peter Kay's Car Share, set almost entirely in a car during rush hour, will feel almost like science fiction.

Depending on how long the lockdown continues, other comedy repeats may be needed. The Royle Family might seem ideal, creating a mirroring situation – people banned from going out watching a clan who self-isolated long before it was obligatory.

However, showing the Caroline Aherne sitcom would raise an intriguing aspect ▷

TO THE RESCUE
Gavin & Stacey's James Corden and Ruth Jones will be leading the troops as an army of comedy repeats heads to the front line

RUTH JONES

WE NEED A BIT OF COMFORT NOW

I think there's something reassuring and comforting about watching old favourites again on TV, and God knows we need a bit of comfort right now. I've been delving back into Curb Your Enthusiasm these past couple of weeks – such a brilliant show.

It's lovely that BBC1 are broadcasting Gavin & Stacey again, along with so many other great BBC shows. Hopefully, it will distract a little from what's going on and lift spirits, even for just half an hour on a Saturday night. Plus, we get to see Doris again, played by the brilliant Margaret John. What a treat!

One of my favourite moments from episode one is Doris's conversation with Stacey on the doorstep, when she's advising her on how far to go with Gavin on their first date: "A kiss, a cuddle... just don't go selling him the whole farm!"

HAPPY CHRISTMAS!
The 2019 festive edition of Gavin & Stacey pulled in an audience of over 11 million ◁ of these emergency schedule changes. A key episode features the death of a beloved elderly relative, which might be thought insensitive at a time when the apparently greater risk of Covid-19 to older people makes such bereavements statistically more likely. The Royle Family was also generally shown in later-night slots due to the sometimes vulgar vocabulary (of Jim in particular).

Under the BBC's "editorial compliance" rules, any material due to be repeated has to be seen or heard again by an executive, to ensure it contains nothing that might have become inappropriate through new context.

‘Resorting to repeats has a therapeutic purpose’

Some decisions are easy. For example, there is a significant sub-genre of movies about killer diseases – including The Satan Bug, The Andromeda Strain, Outbreak and 28 Days Later – that seem unlikely to be shown over the next few months and, if already scheduled, are liable to be removed. While commissioners often want to be topical – showing football movies in the run-up to the World Cup, for instance – the instinct in current circumstances, outside of news programmes, is to be irrelevant.

An advantage of Gavin & Stacey and Outnumbered in this respect is that both are reassuring, feel-good series that can be shown at peak time. It will be interesting, though, to see whether BBC1 reruns the fifth episode of Outnumbered season one, in which, the episode guide reports, “Ben has a mystery illness.”

And Gavin & Stacey may be less of a safe choice than the BBC hopes. When it premiered in 2007, the show was conceived as niche and edgy, launched on the youth service BBC3. The opening episode features a running gag about a rape alarm, male denigration of women's looks, and scenes of what is now called “fat-shaming”.

While all the comments are defensible as authentic to the attitudes of the characters who make them, it will be interesting to see how the series is received, 13 years on, in a culture much more sensitive to offence. When, after a nine-year gap, the show returned with its Christmas special, there were vociferous objections to the inclusion of The Pogues's song, Fairytale of New York, in which a homophobic term is used.

THE COMPLEXITY OF judging the present suitability of past material is well illustrated by Dad's Army. As the most durably popular comedy in British TV history, it is theoretically ideal to cheer up the country. However, its depiction of a sometimes hapless civilian effort against national peril might no longer seem safely historical.

Lance Corporal Jones's hysterical catchphrase, “Don't panic! Don't panic!”, and Private Frazer's dour predictions that “We're doomed!” would play very differently today, in a national emergency with some resemblances to wartime, including contemporary descendants of the black market-profiteer, Private Walker. Boris Johnson's government might also prefer that BBC1 does not feature, in Arthur Lowe's Captain Mainwaring, a posh-voiced bumbler who deludedly sees himself as another Churchill.

But, with exceptions for unexpected editorial sensitivity, comedy seems sure to be the BBC's major weapon during Operation Hole-Filler. This is not only because humour is reassuring and communal, but because the sitcom has proved to be the type of TV that most bears frequent reviewing.

Other programming that has historically matched audience figures for comedy – soap opera, crime and thriller fiction, sport – depends heavily on tension. Line of Duty and England v Croatia were among my most memorable recent viewing experiences, but knowing the outcome reduces my desire to sit through them again.

John Cleese has admitted to being surprised that people watch Fawlty Towers multiple times. Because a joke depends on a kind of suspense – the set-up resolved by the punchline – even the best gags should, logically, only work once. However, there seems to be an additional level of pleasure in knowing what will happen when Basil's hand seeks blindly for the light switch, or Del Boy Trotter leans nonchalantly on the bar. We admire the beauty of the execution, as with an action replay of a great goal.

THE PROSPECT OF families coming together, at safe distances, to watch comedy seems set to be part of a wider shift in viewing habits for the duration of the health crisis. The Prime Minister's “Stay at home” broadcast to the nation at 8.30pm on 23 March was watched by 27 million people across BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and Sky, the biggest simultaneous audience since the wedding of Princess Anne to Captain Mark Phillips in 1973, when there were only three networks in the UK and little significant rival home entertainment.

The almost 12 million who watched the Christmas Gavin & Stacey together (catch-up figures raised the total audience to 18.49 million) was seen as a rare exception to the prevailing trend for people to view TV alone and at times of their own choosing. But Johnson's “lockdown” broadcast more than doubled a one-off audience that was seen, as recently as December, as extraordinary and counter-historical.

With most of the population now confined at home, such old-fashioned communal watching – of Government broadcasts and repeats – seems likely to become, for the period of fear, the way in which British broadcasting is consumed again.

As every episode of Gavin & Stacey and Outnumbered was already available on iPlayer, the BBC's comedy offer is to some extent scheduling what was already available for self-scheduling. (Peter Kay's Car Share is a genuine luxury, being generally scarce online.) So the BBC seems to be hoping that, by putting the shows on BBC1, they will encourage group viewing.

Ironically, a virus that has driven broadcasters apart – with presenters sitting on opposite sides of the studio, or co-hosting from home – may bring viewers unexpectedly together.

SEVEN SHOWS TO CHEER YOU UP

Laughter won't fix the world, but for half an hour it will make things feel a whole lot better. Here's our pick of what's on this week...

QI XL

Saturday 9pm BBC2

In an extended version of an episode first shown in February this year, host Sandi Toksvig welcomes the fine young minds of James Acaster, Bridget Christie and Joe Lycett, along with immovable panellist Alan Davies, to answer questions based on the theme of quantity and quality. Among the highlights is a discussion about the devastating fire in the Houses of Parliament in 1834, caused by the burning of wooden "tally sticks", an outmoded accounting method. Surely the delicate task of disposing of the sticks in a sensible manner wasn't entrusted to a man called... Mr Wibbly-Wobbly? JACK SEALE

Would I Lie to You?

Monday 8.30pm BBC1

"This is Shabs and he has taught his parrot to say, 'Nice shoes, Dave!' whenever I enter his cobbler's." David Mitchell puts his claim in the "this is my" round with a straight face in this episode of the always-funny panel show, first shown in 2018. But the other claims are equally out of the question: that Shaun Williamson stores chicken drumsticks in Shabs's nuclear shelter, or that Shabs used to park cars on Jonnie Peacock's foot. Other conundrums: did Jo Brand rub nettles on her face to get out of school, and did the Spice Girls run around hotels naked, as Emma Bunton claims?

Thursday 10pm BBC2

It's always a treat to catch a stand-up comic just as they've mastered their craft. That's how it felt in 2016 watching this episode's host, Joe Lycett, as his Kenneth Williams sneer, sudden changes of direction and precisely articulated disdain all came together. The spirit of the consumer crusading he does now (as in Joe Lycett's Got Your Back, Friday 8pm C4) is there, too, in an encounter with a post office clerk: "She's so smug she's got one of those faces that's folded in on itself. Like someone's punched a quiche." Ivo Graham and Phil Wang are in support. JS

Have I Got News for You

Friday 8.30pm BBC1

It's week two of HIGNFY's very different new run. For years the topical panel show hasn't altered its format, with even the guest presenters settling into a roster of familiar names, such as this week's host Stephen Mangan. But the pandemic has affected everything and HIGNFY is no exception: it now has no studio audience, so Paul Merton, Ian Hislop and this week's panellists, Tim Shipman and Zoe Lyons, can't tell if their zingers have landed. Plus, how will they cope with the fact that there is, essentially, only one news story? JS

Outnumbered

Saturday 8.45pm BBC1

Martin Freeman's Sky 1 comedy Breeders (Thursdays) is strong meat, but it can't claim to have invented dark parenting sitcoms. From this Saturday, BBC1 is rerunning the misadventures of the Brockmans, a nice south-west London couple (Claire Skinner and Hugh Dennis) struggling to cope with their three children (Ramona Marques, Tyger Drew-Honey and Daniel Roche). Partly improvised around scripts by Andy Hamilton and Guy Jenkin (who recently made a comeback with Kate & Koji, Wednesdays ITV), its authentic portrayal of ordinary domestic chat means the chaos that always comes is painfully realistic. JS

Dad's Army

Saturday 6.30pm BBC2

The quintessence of "keep calm and carry on", this never-say-die sitcom still does amazing Saturday-night business for BBC2. Its Home Guard heroes may be afflicted with croup (too-young-for-the draft Pike) or creaking with rheumatism (ever-obliging Godfrey), but all of them, to a man, embody the British bulldog spirit. Warm, gentle, deliciously silly and sometimes poignant, few comedies can unite generations in front of the telly in quite the same way. MARK BRAXTON

Peter Kay's Comedy Shuffle

Friday 9.30pm BBC1

We're into the fourth series now of a clips show dedicated to the work of Peter Kay, from the faultless Car Share back to Phoenix Nights, with Max & Paddy and his other TV projects filling the gaps in between. This week, Peter raises his concerns about the environment, they're doing Robot Wars down at the Phoenix Club, and there's a special guest appearance from Alan Partridge. JS

I GOT A PHONE call from our exec producer, Preethi Mavahalli," says Koby Adom, the director of Noughts + Crosses, which culminates this week. "She said: 'Stormzy really wants to be involved, any ideas?' And very quickly we went from the obvious stuff – like he could do some music for the series – to something more exciting. Which part can we get him to play?"

The gripping dystopian thriller Noughts + Crosses has been electrifying audiences since it hit our screens six weeks ago. The social media response has been intense, and reviews enthusiastic. Adapted from the Malorie Blackman books, the show's race-flipping premise – we are in a world where black people are the ruling class, through 700 years of colonialism – has proved to be revolutionary TV.

And for those who've been watching weekly, rather than bingeing the full series on iPlayer, RT can reveal that the final episode will feature the UK's beloved man du jour, Stormzy, in his acting debut. The singer/rapper/publisher/all-round firestarter plays Kolewale, the editor-in-chief of national newspaper the Ohene Standard. And plays him well – but no spoilers!

For Adom and Mavahalli, he was perfect casting. Stormzy was already a massive fan of the books, having read them at school. When Blackman presented him with an award at the 2018 South Bank Sky Arts Awards, he told her just how much the books meant to him. "I was trying to be cool," recalls Blackman, "but I think my smile was in danger of swallowing my face!" Stormzy told her he would love to be involved in the TV adaptation in any way he could, so she passed the message on.

Though another role was considered (a policeman), it quickly became clear that Kolewale was the right part for the show's new cast member. "Kolewale represents the establishment," says Mavahalli. "If you control the media, you control the national discussion."

It's clever casting, bringing an extra dimension to the part. In real life, Stormzy has had several run-ins with newspapers such as the Daily Mail and The Sun over his quotes being taken out of context and claims of racism, so seeing him as Kolewale reminds you of how certain parts of the media can stereotype and pigeonhole men like him. "When you see young black men on screen, they tend to be playing gangsters or criminals," says Mavahalli. "We don't see them in an establishment position of power. Seeing Stormzy play an editor-in-chief makes you think, 'Of course he could do that job! Why don't I see that in real life?'"

Adom – a British-Ghanaian brought up in London who makes his TV directorial debut on Noughts + Crosses – describes how the musician went out to film in Cape Town, South Africa, for just a few days. He worked hard, running lines with Adom and actor Jonathan Ajayi (who plays Lekan), in a hotel room for several hours, taking on Ajayi's feedback to enjoy the physicality of the role.

"We treated him as an actor, which is what he was,” says Adom. “He was a little nervous at the beginning, but he’s adaptable and resilient, and in the end, expressing himself as Kolewale was almost like therapy.”

Stormzy’s presence in the episode is brief, but full of energy and heft. It’s unsurprising: I’ve interviewed him on a couple of occasions, and he’s not only professional but very dynamic, his physical height matched by his vast charisma.

Adom deliberately allowed him to use that on screen. “Stormzy is so exposed to the world and to the media,” he says, “and the way he handles it is amazing. He has huge confidence and he will dust himself off and crack on. That takes an incredible amount of steel. He’s bold in presence, fearless. And we all know he can perform: watch him at Glastonbury.”

Off screen, though, Stormzy was far more low-key. Both Adom and Mavahalli call him “humble”. “He made everyone comfortable around him, he wants to be part of a team,” says Adom. “He said to the cast and crew, ‘Look, while I’m here I’m not Stormzy,’ and he told them to use his first name.”

His real name is Michael Omari Junior, and he often makes a distinction between the two characters. At home, at church – a committed Christian, he gave a Gospel reading on BBC1 at Christmas, winning himself a new fan in the Archbishop of Canterbury – and off screen he is Michael. He brings out Stormzy when needed.

Talking to Blackman, Adom and Mavahalli, who refers to Stormzy as a “national treasure”, it is clear how excited they were to have him in their show.

So how has this son of a single mother from Norbury, south-west London, achieved national treasure status in the three years since his debut album Gang Signs and Prayer came out? Let’s not forget that Stormzy is, at heart, a grime star, and musicians that come up through that genre don’t tend to morph into mainstream heroes. Perhaps the key lies in his honesty.

FROM THE START, Stormzy felt no shame in saying that he wanted to compete with the likes of Adele and Ed Sheeran: “I don’t want to be the best rapper in the UK,” he said. “I want to be the best artist in the UK. Why can’t I?” He said he was there to represent his “young black kings”, to inspire them to be something great.

And he’s put his money where his mouth is, setting up a book imprint for young BAME writers (#Merky Books, which will publish Blackman’s autobiography) and creating a yearly scholarship to Cambridge for two black undergraduates, paying for all their accommodation and fees.

Stormzy himself enjoys learning and was academic at school, earning six A*s, three As and five Bs at GCSE – though he was disappointed to get ABCDE at A-level, which he revealed during a talk at Oxford University. He owns up to mistakes – his track Lessons, about his relationship with presenter Maya Jama, confesses to his shortcomings in a way that most young men would find immensely hard.

As Blackman says: “He speaks his truth unapologetically. He knows when to stand his ground when he’s right and when to admit that he’s got something wrong. And I love the way he’s not afraid to show who he is, warts and all, in his songs.”

In my last interview with Stormzy, he mentioned that he was going to come off social media for a year (he also did this before his first album), to give himself a break. When he returns, who knows what he’ll be up to? There’s no doubt that Noughts + Crosses would have him back if there’s a second series.

“He is so talented,” says Mavahalli. “Of course we would want him back. He can put his mind to anything, there is no end to what he can do. And the world will let him.”

'I KNEW THAT SHE WAS PERFECT'

MASALI BADUZA PLAYS SEPHY

How did you get the part?

I trained at the LA campus of the New York Film Academy, before coming home to Cape Town to work in the theatre, then I was asked to audition for Noughts + Crosses. It was pretty scary because it's my first leading role, and a book that a lot of people grew up with! It was a lot of pressure.

How did you bond with Jack?

We lived in the same complex for six months during filming so it was easy to build up our chemistry off set. He gave so much, even when the camera was on me and he was off screen.

How did you get on with the cast?

I grew up watching Friends so when I found out Helen Baxendale was going to be in the show, I freaked out. I couldn't even talk to her at first because I was worried I'd shout out, "Emily!" And then there's Bonnie Mbuli, who is a household name here in South Africa, so for her to play my mum was wild.

What about Stormzy?

I wasn't in any of his scenes but I went down to set and had a selfie with him! He worked hard and was open to learning and trying different things, and he was really kind!

What was it like to see African culture portrayed on screen?

Incredible. There was nothing like it when I was growing up, so seeing it for the first time was a big moment and it made me feel really proud. You have to adjust and unlearn things you are used to seeing.

Did you tell Jack about your experiences as a black woman?

Yes, although I don't believe you can ever really explain racism to someone. I have experience of racism but Sephy doesn't, so we all had to portray something that is the reverse of our own lives.

Is racism still overt in South Africa?

There have been some overt experiences but usually it's everyday micro-aggressions. I'm looking for somewhere to rent in Cape Town and the agents treat a black person as if we can't afford it. Or you go to view a place and they see you and say it's already been given to someone else. It's really draining, every single day.

Do you hope that Noughts + Crosses may help in the fight against racism?

I hope people watch the show and see themselves in a way they've never had to before. People are uncomfortable talking about race, but we can't progress unless we confront it.

JACK ROWAN PLAYS CALLUM

How did you get the part?

I did three auditions, then readings with four British girls. I assumed one of them had it, but everything went quiet. Then they asked me to do another one with a South African girl who flew over. I knew when I read with Masali that she was perfect.

Did you have much time to build up your relationship before shooting?

It was difficult, being in different countries, but we had a couple of weeks in South Africa before we started shooting. Getting to know each other off screen does naturally help the chemistry on screen.

Did you discuss your own experiences as a white man and a black woman?

Of course. You use your experiences in any role. But it was difficult for me, a white guy from London, because I've never been on the receiving end of racism. They did put me in a bootcamp – because Callum joins Mercy Point [a military school] – where I was the only white guy and I ate alone at lunch, which was very immersive. It hurt, man. Even though it was fictional, it gave me a taste of what it's like for someone to experience that every day because of their skin colour or religion.

Did this role make you think about your own white privilege?

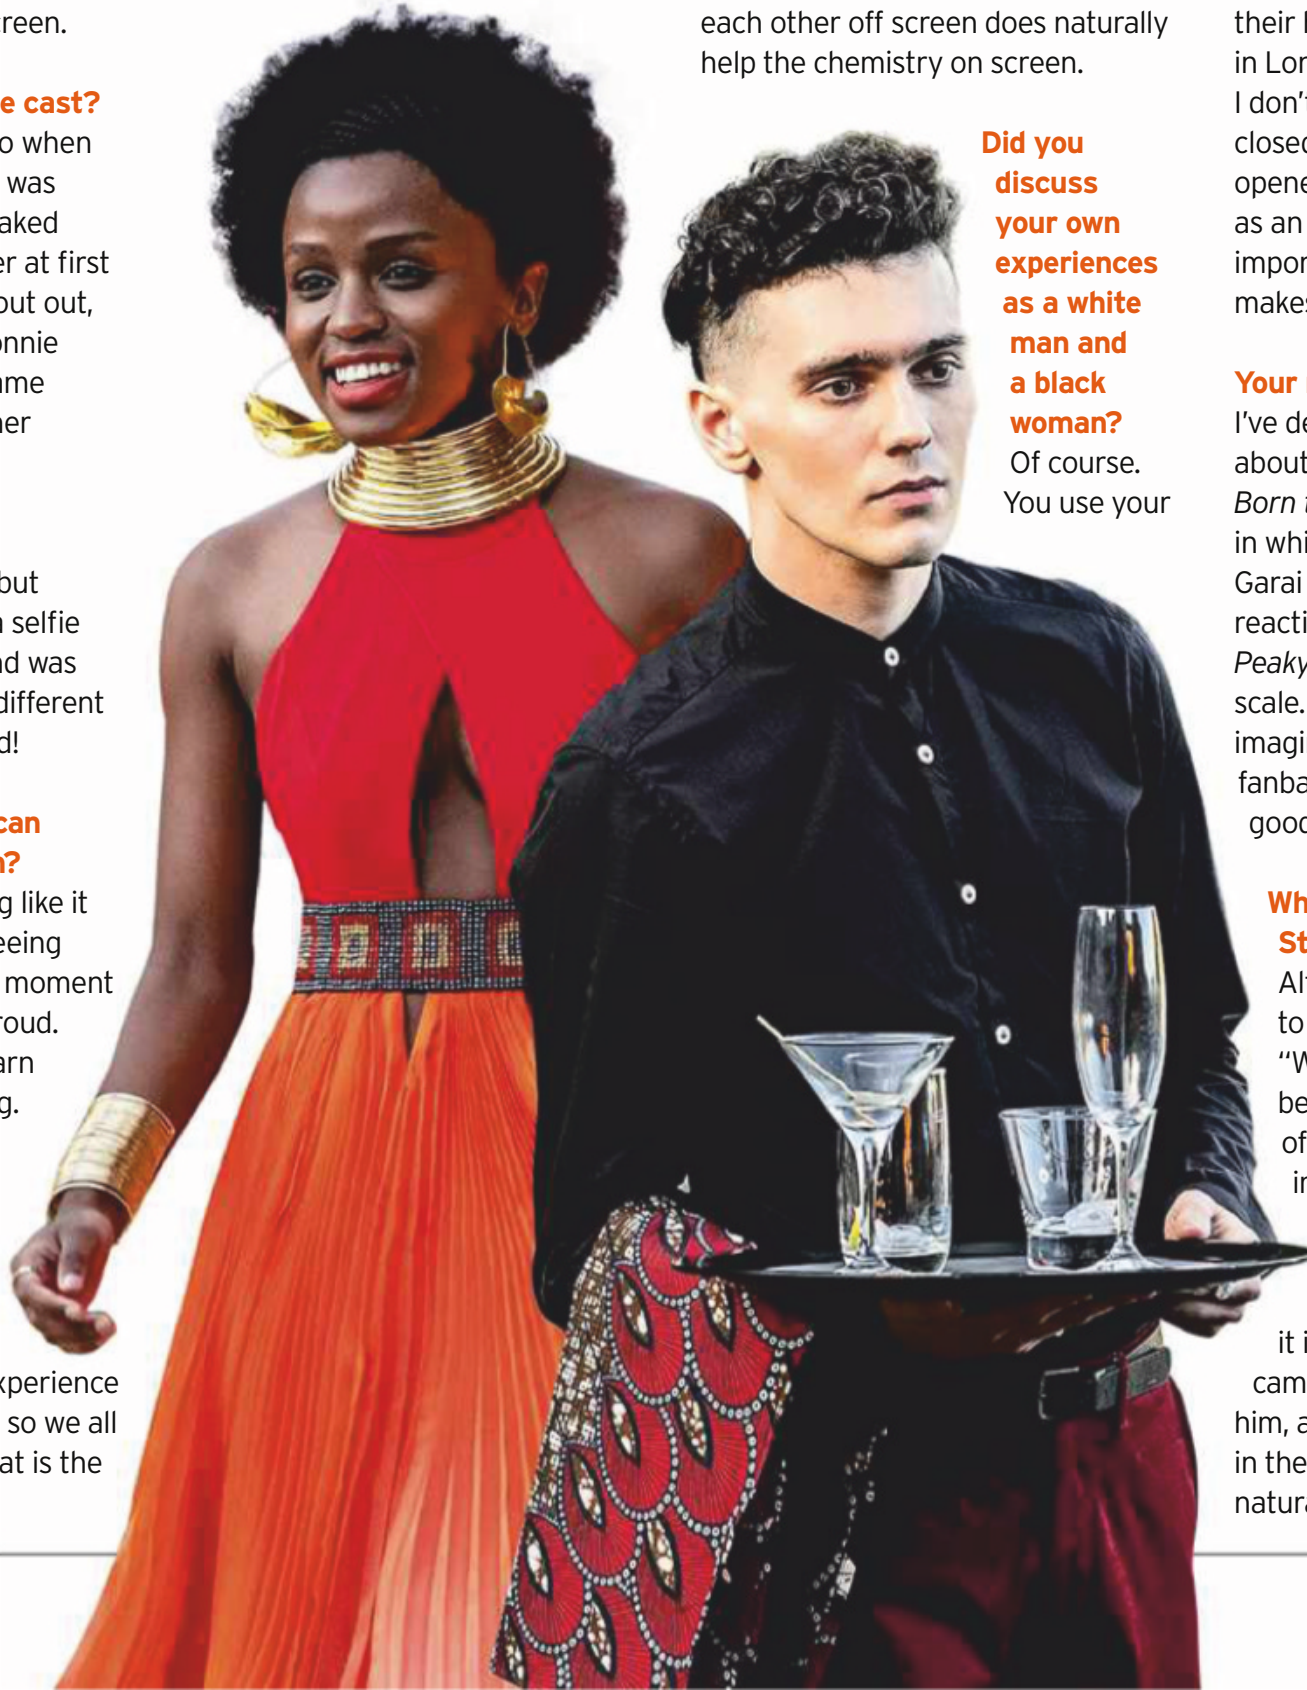

How could it not? Just being in South Africa and learning about their history... Being a white man in London, I've never felt like that. I don't feel my eyes were ever closed, but they've certainly been opened a little bit more. I've grown as an actor and as a person. It feels important to tell this story, which makes the work very rewarding.

Your most rewarding role to date?

I've definitely had more messages about this than anything else. Born to Kill [a 2017 Channel 4 drama in which he starred alongside Romola Garai and Daniel Mays] had a great reaction and so did [BBC1 series] Peaky Blinders, but this is off the scale. It's really captured people's imaginations. The books had a huge fanbase and they've done such a good job of turning it into TV.

What was it like having Stormzy join the cast?

Although it was exciting for us to work with him, I also thought, "Wow, what a moment for him," because he was a huge fan of the books and now his imprint is publishing Malorie's autobiography, so he's come full circle. And he didn't just turn up and phone it in, he worked hard. Everyone came on set and wanted to meet him, and I was so glad I got to be in the scene with him. He's a natural performer. EMMA COX

Time to escape

Kate Humble says when this crisis is over we will rethink how we live. So why not follow her lead and move to the country?

INTERVIEW BY TERRY PAYNE

KATE HUMBLE HAS always been a restless soul. She's not long back from a trip to Colombia and is safely hunkered down at home on the Monmouthshire smallholding that she and her husband, television producer Ludo Graham, moved to 12 years ago. "This is the longest I've lived anywhere in my adult life and it's the only place I've ever felt homesick for."

While many of us are having to endure enforced isolation, Humble positively embraces it. "I've never for a moment regretted moving here. The only thing I hanker for is to be more in the middle of nowhere."

It's a place she suspects many will be contemplating as they reassess lifestyle during anxious hours of home confinement. "Oh, I think there will be a lot of rebalancing of lives. The world has been chucking fire and floods at us and we still think we can carry on behaving as we have been – now maybe we'll realise we can't. It's hard to consider at the moment, but I think there could be some positive outcomes to this."

Which brings us to the reason for the interview. This week Humble is on the move again, but it's a professional move, rather than a geographical one.

Long thought of as a BBC staple, she's making her debut on Channel 5 with a series about others, like her, who've upped sticks and moved to the countryside. If ever there was a programme for our time, this is it.

"It's a lovely series. One I'm really proud of. It shows that with a bit of a spirit of adventure, people can trade in what are sometimes chaotic and cash-draining lives for something that gives them space and time to live richer lives."

It feels very much like the sort of series we might have seen her presenting on the BBC. Has there been a falling out?

"No. I've loved working for the BBC and, of course, I'm still doing Animal Park for them. Television and the way we watch it is changing so fast, I don't think viewers associate particular presenters with specific channels any more. My philosophy has always been to work on programmes that I really want to do, that I have a real interest in and can make a proper contribution to."

The series follows the fortunes of six couples as they swap their city or suburban homes for somewhere that isn't just more rural, but also cheaper and bigger – a transition that's summed up neatly by the programme title, A Country Life for Half the Price. Humble agrees that the timing of it shows an almost Nostradamus level of foresight.

"I think a lot of people at the moment will be re-evaluating their lives and considering what's important. Instead of chasing mad consumerist things, we'll realise that the important things are family and community and outdoor space and nature."

For one couple, the Cooks from Exeter, it meant moving with their two daughters 700 miles away to Yell, one of the most northerly ▷

'Come and put your wellies on and muck in with the rest of us'

COUNTRY GIRL

◁ islands in Shetland. Selling up in the West Country and buying a house on an island that's closer to the Arctic Circle than London saw them £95,000 in pocket.

But being unshackled from large monthly mortgage repayments was only one factor, says Humble. Another couple with nine children moved from their four-bed, one-bathroom home in Surrey to one with five beds and three bathrooms in Shropshire. Oh, and they've already installed 12 hens, three pigs and a cow on the land that came with it.

"They all had different reasons for moving, but essentially the commonality of those reasons was a better quality of life. All of them wanted space, they wanted fresh air and they wanted the ability to be a bit more self-sufficient. That's what a lot of us yearn for and I suspect after this terrible virus problem we will all be thinking about that very hard. By changing their priorities, what all these families have done is give themselves more time with each other, and time is the greatest luxury of all."

ALTHOUGH SHE SPENT her formative years in London, 51-year-old Humble is a country girl at heart and remains one of its biggest champions. She hopes the series will persuade more people to help repopulate rural areas – but says that people shouldn't bring any "city slicker" ways with them.

"If a result of what's happening is that more people consider moving to the countryside, I'd say 'come and do it'. All the families in this series have been dreaming about it for years – none of them regret it for a second. But if you're going to do it, don't come stamping around in your Jimmy Choos. Come and put your wellies on and muck in with the rest of us.

"I think the countryside has got an awful lot to teach people in the cities and I would rather see it that way around."

The countryside provides Humble with a deep sense of attachment and it's true to say she's needed it this past year. A little more than 12 months ago her father Nick, whom she adored, died at the age of 82 after a two-year illness. She's still unsettled by it.

"Grief is a very odd process. You go through a maelstrom of emotions at the time and you still do now. Last week, for no apparent reason, I just completely lost it. But in a way you also feel grateful for that grief because you don't feel that emotion unless you've loved somebody."

She laughs now at memories of her father, of their last moments together in the nursing home where was being looked after.

"We knew that he wasn't going to survive the night and Mum and I were with him. Mum went to talk to a nurse, so he and I were having a conversation. I had hold of his hand and said, 'You know we'll look after Mum,' and he said,

'We knew what Dad's wishes were and honoured them to the letter'

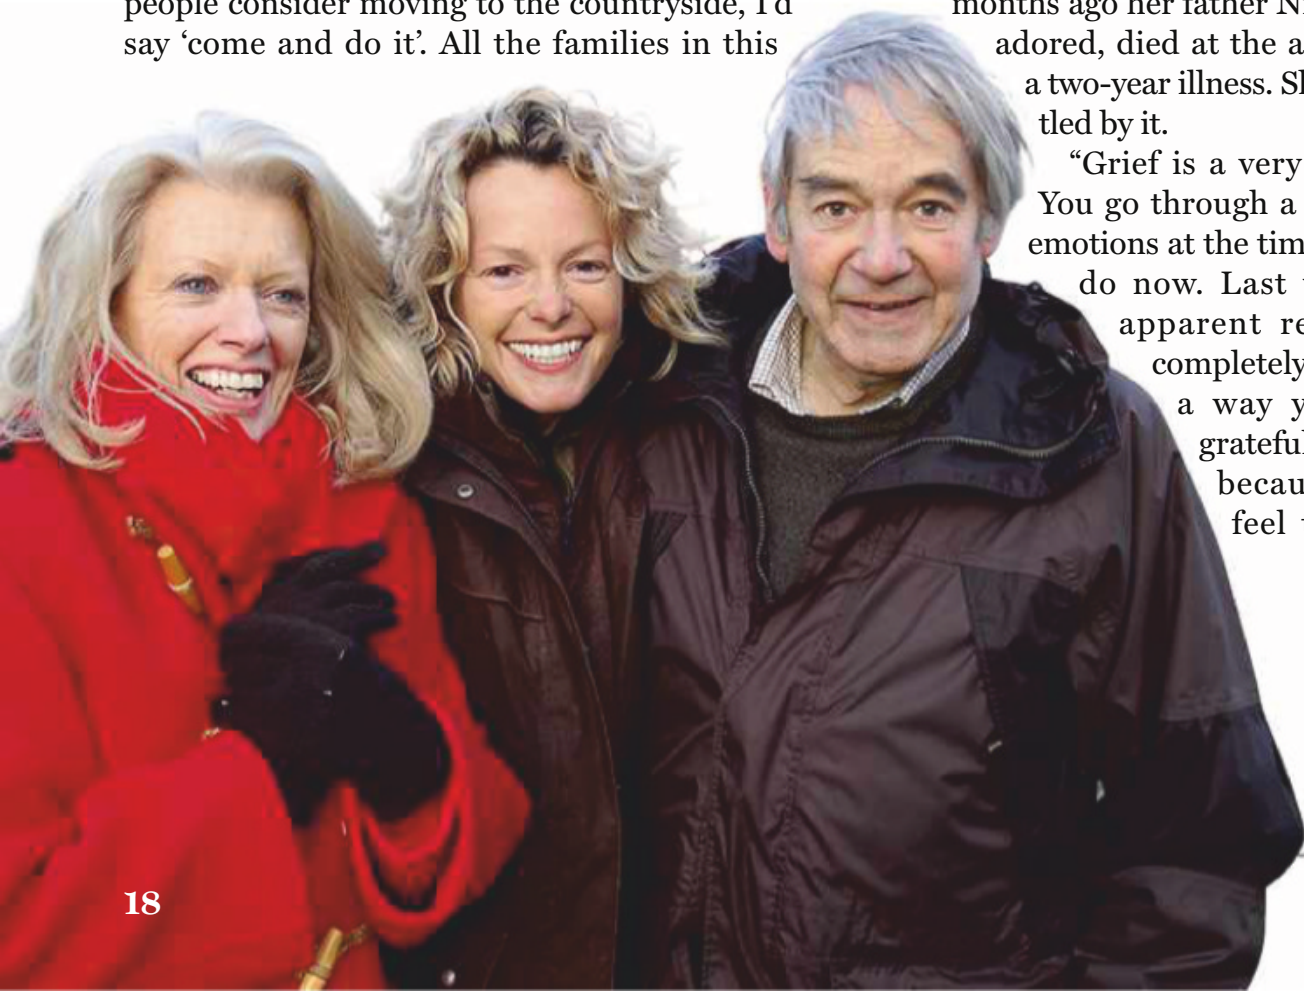

"Of course I know that.' Then he said, 'Could you just do something for me? I've got money on a horse in the 3.30 at Kempton, could you just see if it's come in?' I said 'Dad, are you ping away our inheritance?' and he replied, 'I might have won you £60, so just check.' And that was our last conversation."

And what of his bet? "The horse came in fourth, which was really annoying," she chuckles.

Humble shares her father's pragmatism and uses his approach to death as a way of counselling others.

"If I can say anything – and I'll say it until I'm Let's move to...

Property expert Phil Spencer's top rural destinations

The Great British countryside is a beloved national treasure, so it's no wonder that many of us dream of moving there.

Having grown up on a farm, it was inevitable that at some point my family and I would leave our central London lives and move to the countryside. Four years ago, we did just that and moved to Hampshire. Since then, I haven't had so much as a backward glance. For me, it was about getting back to my roots, getting closer to nature and having more outside space and freedom for my boys.

If you have always dreamt about leaving the rat race, you need to be flexible about where you look. While prices can be extortionate in some of the UK's most picturesque villages, there are still bargains to be had in idyllic locations.

But a word of warning – a rural life isn't for everyone. I recommend thorough research and even renting for six months to a year first, to see if it's for you. You can do plenty of research on the internet while isolating, so when the world settles down you will be in a strong position.

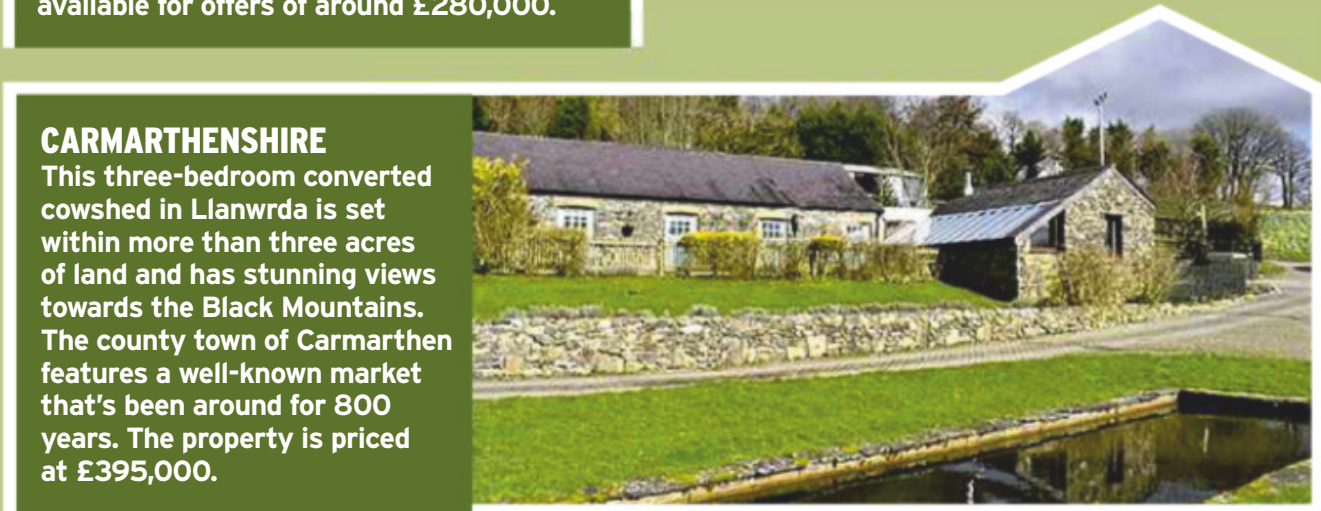

So, if you're still keen to get more bang for your property buck, or perhaps even ditch the mortgage completely, here are my top tips for where you should be looking...

THE HIGHLANDS If you want to be surrounded by nature rather than people, the Scottish Highlands provide remoteness and stunning scenery in spades. But with Inverness being the only major city, the Highlands are not for the faint-hearted. This three-bed detached house in Garve is available for offers of around £280,000.

THE NORTH WEST Cumbria is England's second largest county, and one of the least populated. Outside the national park there are still bargains to be found; this three-bed cottage near Kaber in the Eden Valley has a paddock and a price of £300,000.

CARMARTHENSHIRE This three-bedroom converted cowshed in Llanwrda is set within more than three acres of land and has stunning views towards the Black Mountains. The county town of Carmarthen features a well-known market that's been around for 800 years. The property is priced at £395,000.

NORFOLK With 90 miles of unspoilt coastline, picturesque villages and the unique Broads National Park, Norfolk is a great location for a family to move to. This three-bedroom 16th-century thatched cottage in North Lopham near Diss is priced at £250,000.

DORSET This three-bedroom thatched cottage in Milton Abbas was built in the late 1700s and is priced at £360,000. The county, over half of which is designated as an area of outstanding natural beauty, is packed with quaint villages, market towns and award-winning sandy beaches.

blue in the face – talk to your parents [about their funeral] and find out what they want. Don't let them wriggle out of it. When Dad was diagnosed with this condition, which he knew would finish him off, he wrote to me and my brother and gave us details of everything, admin wise, we needed to know.

"We were able to have the funeral that he wanted – the music and the readings – we knew exactly what his wishes were and we were able to honour them to the letter. For us as a family to be able to do that was just so incredibly comforting."

Earlier in the day, Humble heard about the publication plans for her latest book, A Year of Living Simply [due later this year], in which she ponders the conflict between modern living and the pursuit of happiness.

IT'S LOOKING AT the idea that, as a society, we have confused convenience with simplicity," she explains. "What convenience does is rob us of all the things that make us happy. We don't grow things any more, we don't fix things any more, we don't cook and garden as much as we did two generations ago. And we've got these amazing tools at the ends of our arms called hands and we don't use them."

Not true in her case. Her hands are as restless as her spirit. With the interview over, her thoughts turn to mucking in with the lambing on her nearby farm. "We have to keep going. What else can you do?"

Space-age SURVIVOR

More than 30 years after its launch, Red Dwarf is still going strong – much to its stars' surprise

WHEN RED DWARF first aired on BBC2 in February 1988, no one could have predicted that, 32 years later, the show would be one of Britain's longest running sitcoms. Few could have predicted it would last beyond a series.

It had already been rejected by the BBC three times, before eventually being snuck in by creators Rob Grant and Doug Naylor through the "back door" of BBC Manchester. Then there was the cheap, drab set, which according to Naylor, "looked like it was made out of grey wood". But most of all, as Craig Charles explains, "It's such a peculiar pitch, isn't it? 'I've got this great idea: there's one surviving human in space – and to keep him company, he's got a hologram of his dead bunkmate, a character that's evolved from a cat, and a dodgy rubber robot.' I don't know how it got made in the first place."

But surviving against the odds is what Red Dwarf is all about. This is the show that was cut adrift by the BBC in 1999 (not a "cancellation" Naylor says, simply their decision to prioritise new projects), but which was revived ten years later by digital channel Dave.

It's since gone on to return for three more series, each one pulling in some of Dave's biggest ratings, and now it's returning with a feature-length special, The Promised Land. So what's the secret to its longevity?

"Well, it was unique to start with," says Chris Barrie, who plays snivelling hologram Rimmer. "But it always has been completely different to anything else on television, which in 1997/98 changed completely and sitcom kind of became a dirty word. But people were still saying, 'Why are those shows not happening any more?' Of course, whether Red Dwarf classifies itself as a sitcom in the first place... that's part of its charm."

"It's a science-fiction sitcom where the comedy isn't about the science fiction," suggests Robert Llewellyn, who plays mechanoid Kryten.

"It's a sitcom mixed with nothing that looks like sitcom," chips in Danny John-Jules – aka Cat. "And it was totally ahead of its time. All this rubbish they're talking about diversity today makes me laugh through my teeth. Red Dwarf should have been held up as a bastion of diversity in television. Fifty per cent of its cast were black, you never had a person's colour mentioned once – 32 years later and we're still doing that."

"The cast's chemistry is very good, too," says Charles (vindaloo-loving last human alive Dave

'We're very different, but stick us in a room and it all just clicks'

Lister). "We're all four very different people but when you stick us in a room it all just seems to click. I think these are the longest adult relationships I've ever had. I've known Robert, Chris and Danny longer than I've known anyone else, including my wife. All our children were born when I was making the show."

"That's true," agrees Llewellyn. "My children don't know anything other than Dad-in-rubber."

"Don't talk about your sex life, Rob..." chips in Charles, not missing a beat.

The idea to make a Red Dwarf feature-length special was originally suggested by Dave owner UKTV, who felt that it might allow writer Doug Naylor to do something new with the format that hadn't been done before – although not for want of trying. Naylor spent much of the noughties trying to raise the money for a big-budget Red Dwarf movie: a long, frustrating process that saw funding secured before falling through.

NAYLOR IS KEEN to stress, however, that The Promised Land is not the Red Dwarf movie. "That had a budget of £20 million. The special is a 90-minute story, and has a very handsome sitcom budget, but it's nothing like that." Yet it's undeniably Red Dwarf at its most epic. UKTV has splashed the cash for bigger sets while a new special effects company has been employed to spice up the visuals.

Naylor says he'd be "stunned" if UKTV didn't commission more scripts, and the cast are as enthusiastic as ever to return – albeit with the caveat that they're not as young as they were.

"I'll keep making them as long as people want to watch them and we're having fun," says Charles. "I think I'd be sad the day I realised Red Dwarf had become a thing of the past." STEPHEN KELLY

"I TOOK A CRAZY RISK"

Countess Alexandra Tolstoy once enjoyed a billionaire lifestyle. Then her life imploded...

OVER THE LAST few years Countess Alexandra Tolstoy has often asked herself the same searching question. "It's impossible not to think, 'How did that happen?'," because we're all the authors of our own destiny," she says.

For many years that destiny seemed to be enviably gilded: married to Sergei Pugachev, a Russian oligarch once known as Vladimir Putin's banker and reputed to be among the thousand wealthiest men in the world, Alexandra's life unfolded against a backdrop of multimillion-pound homes around the globe, private jets and designer labels.

This is the world the viewer first sees at the start of the BBC2 documentary The Countess and the Russian Billionaire, in which filmmakers set out to chronicle the couple's privileged world at a time when Pugachev's fall from grace threatened everything they knew.

"It [the film] was Sergei's decision and, like everything, I just went along with it," 46-year-old Alexandra insists today. "But I think there was also a part of me that thought it might be a chance to speak my truth at some point."

'I was living in this extraordinary bubble'

The "truth" to which she refers underpins a plot worthy of Leo Tolstoy himself, the great 19th-century Russian novelist to whom British-born Alexandra - whose title comes from her father, the Anglo-Russian historian Count Nikolai Tolstoy - can directly trace her lineage.

When the documentary-makers started filming the couple in 2015, Pugachev's life was starting to unravel. Having been declared an enemy of the Russian state, not only was his business empire under threat, but also his life and that of his family.

GOLDEN COUPLE
Alexandra Tolstoy and Russian oligarch Sergei Pugachev in happier times

Yet as first months, then years, went by, it turned into something else altogether: an intimate portrait of the breakdown of a marriage amid mind-boggling accusations of control.

Hers was already an extraordinarily colourful story long before she met Pugachev: raised in upper-middle-class comfort in Oxfordshire, her rebellious nature meant that before she had reached the age of 30 she had trekked 5,000 miles on horse and camel along the Silk Road, and garnered newspaper headlines in 2003 after marrying Shamil Galimzyanov, a penniless Uzbek horseman, citing the "romantic madness of the steppes".

Her marriage to Galimzyanov was already in its death throes when, in 2008, she first met Pugachev after being hired to teach him English in Moscow. At the time he presided over a vast fortune made in post-communist Russia and was one of Putin's most trusted advisers. He too was married, but the pair embarked on a passionate love affair that within months left Alexandra pregnant.

Two other children quickly followed, and Alexandra was elevated into the world of the unfathomably rich: a globe-trotting world of private jets and a retinue of staff bouncing between a double-fronted home in London's Chelsea, a 200-acre country estate in Herefordshire, a château on the French riviera and a £40 million beachfront villa in the millionaire's playground island of St Barts in the Caribbean. "It was incredible. I had a private jet and I just had to pack my suitcase and off we could go. I spent months in these incredible places," she recalls. "It was an adventure I will never forget."

ON PAPER, IT was a million miles from the life she was living in a modest Moscow flat with her Cossack first husband. Yet Alexandra insists that while the circumstances of her two lovers were poles apart, what united them was her desire to live a life less ordinary. "The common thread is I took a crazy risk," she says. "Both relationships were about living very passionately in the moment and seizing the day.

"Although their worlds are very different on paper, what they have in common is that with both I was living in this extraordinary bubble."

But by 2010 the bubble she lived in with Pugachev was about to burst. Amid question marks over a vanished $1 billion loan made by Putin's government to a bank Pugachev claims he no longer owned, he had become embroiled in a battle with the same Russian state of which he was once a privileged member.

By late 2015 he was in exile and fielding death threats – circumstances that would place a strain on any relationship. Yet Alexandra says now that behind their polished façade the cracks had started to show long before.

"From early on Sergei was one minute domineering, the next charming," she recalls. "Nobody around me could see it – it wasn't like I was covered in bruises. I remember looking around at women on the school run thinking they were just living these normal lives and they had no idea how isolated I felt."

It's against this backdrop that in 2015 Alexandra and Sergei invited in the documentary cameras. But very quickly the narrative changed. The documentary shows the peril the couple faced: the trackers found on the family cars, the threatening visits by Russian secret police and the constant sense of being followed.

Footage from the time shows Alexandra clearly frightened by the threat to her family, although today she says her husband held equal terror. "The irony is that, however frightening it was at the time, in some ways I owe a lot to Russia – their pursuit of Sergei meant that in the end he ran away from us. And I honestly think that saved us," she says.

By spring 2016, with Pugachev now living in exile in France, the couple's relationship broke down completely following a family visit, during which Alexandra says her husband physically confronted her and she was concerned for her safety.

'I was so unhappy and frightened all the time'

The family haven't seen Pugachev since. Alexandra describes her relationship with him as "nonexistent", taking place only via abusive letters and texts. "He's extremely vindictive," she says. Cut off financially, she now supports herself by leading horse-riding expeditions across Kurdistan and writing.

THE TRAPPINGS OF her oligarch lifestyle – the designer clothes, the shoe and handbag collection – are long gone, offloaded in sales she calls "cleansing".

"The clothes were a superficial symptom of how much I'd lost myself," she says. "Hand on heart, I do not miss one single element of that life. I spent months in these wonderful places, but I was so unhappy and frightened all the time and it was exhausting."

It's one reason she says she continued to let the cameras film, as life as she knew it unravelled. "I did have reservations about continuing with the filming, but I wanted to very publicly be disassociated with him. It got to a point where in Russia, I was being accused of being in cahoots with him."

Today she remains on edge – in fear not, she says, of the Russian state but of the father of her children. "I wake up at 3am in a panic."

Yet for all that she has been through, she says she would not turn back the clock. "There is fear, and there is stress – but I am back to being myself again." ISOBEL JAMES

Weaving a web

Where do you start when adapting magical children's classic The Snow Spider for TV? Poet Owen Sheers explains...

IT CAN BE a such a special experience of modern childhood, that moment when a well-loved story that has always felt so personal – an internal conjuring trick of words and imagination performed between author and reader – suddenly becomes something more universal. A film, a TV series; a shared telling of a familiar yet altered world, still somehow yours and yet, through its new medium, now everyone else's, too.

If the adaptation is good, then this experience of witnessing a cherished story make the transition from page to screen is hopefully one that's comprised equally of loss and gain. Yes, the images created in your mind's eye have been superseded by someone else's imagination. And yes, the voices you've heard in your head have been replaced by new timbres and accents. And yet, because of their shared original story, these images and voices are also somehow heightened by the excitement of seeing that story out in the world where it can be felt beyond yourself.

'The duty of carrying a story into TV is not to be taken lightly'

I can remember so clearly the first time I had this experience. Watership Down was the first book that captured me entirely, when I was around eight or nine. If I closed my eyes I could see and hear the rabbits' world in all its variety, beauty and terror. Then, one rainy day, there was that world again, transmogrified before me into a film of strange and lyrical beauty. An hour and a half of confirmation and surprise as my own visualisation of Watership Down braided with that of the film's.

My experience that day came to mind when I was approached last year to adapt Jenny Nimmo's 1986 novel The Snow Spider. Although I hadn't read the book myself, I knew it was cherished by many children and adults, and recognised that the duty of carrying its story into television was not one to be taken lightly. Readers would have their own internal Snow Spider worlds, their own images of the boy magician Gwyn, their own ideas about the otherworldly Eirlys. Whatever 21st-century version of the book I created, it had to touch the borders of all those worlds, all those images and ideas, while protecting the heart of the story, too.

FOR ANY ADAPTER, that concept of a story's "heart" is the first creative challenge to answer. What comprises the essential core of the original story?

What are the elements that, even if everything else changes, must be protected? It was with these questions in mind that I sat down to read and then re-read Nimmo's magical novel of missing children, ancestral powers and dark, mysterious forces, all played out in the austere beauty of the hills of mid-Wales.

At the end of those days of reading, I wrote down what I thought were the "heart" ingredients of The Snow Spider. A story of a young boy's relationship with his ancestral past, his landscape and, representative of both, his wonderfully eccentric grandmother, Nain. A story about a young boy working out his place in the world, his identity.

The next question I ask myself when adapting a story is, "What is my own angle of entry?" What is a way into this story that binds together those heart elements and is also, in some way, personally resonant? This time I found my answer through a single line in the book when Nain, speaking of Gwyn's inherited magical gift, tells him: "Once in every seven generations the power returns, so they say; your father never had it, nor did mine."

‘It’s a story of a boy’s relationship with his ancestral past, the Welsh landscape and his wonderfully eccentric grandmother’

OWEN SHEERS

BOY HERO

Nain (Melanie Walters, familiar to viewers as Gwen in Gavin & Stacey) and Gwyn (Fflyn Edwards)

There was something in this idea of a power skipping generations that echoed deep within me. I realised that what Nain’s words reminded me of was my own relationship with the Welsh language. Both my wife and I had Welsh-speaking grandparents, but we were brought up at a time and a place in Wales when Welsh was not taught in the schools.

Now, however, things are very different. Welsh is taught in all the schools and many children, including our daughters and many of their friends, are educated entirely through the medium of the language. From an early age they’ve had the gift of being bilingual and so have been able to step back into a linguistic flow that stretches through thousands of years and hundreds of generations. In short, they have a power and an access to the past that we, their parents, do not.

So, there it was, my way in to The Snow Spider. Welsh would be the silver thread that could bind together those heart elements of heritage, place, distance and identity, while at the same time making the story feel contemporary. This is why, in my adaptation, it’s the Welsh language that carries the magic, which enables Gwyn to reconnect with his ancestral inheritance. That this is the case also means that another crucial element of so much children’s fiction is further strengthened – the idea that it’s the kids that save the adults.

SADLY, AT A time when it’s the children of the world who are pressing most urgently for action on the climate crisis, this trope of children’s literature and film feels truer than ever.

Which brings me to the third question I find myself asking, not just of an adaptation, but of any of my writing projects. Why this story now? What is it about this story that makes it feel urgent? At a time when an increasing amount of children’s TV content originates from the United States, representations of British and European culture are perhaps more vital than ever before. Identity is formed through reflection as well as experience; in seeing your culture, your way of life, your stories and your language, rendered in fiction, film or theatre. Such reflections breed not only confidence but also questions, healthy interrogations of who we were, who we are and who we want to be.

In the case of seeing and hearing Welsh in a network TV drama, this isn’t just important for children from Wales. The Welsh language is a treasure that belongs to all of Britain. At one time, before the successive invasions that would form the English language, a version of Welsh was spoken across the entire island. Our earliest tales and myths were told in this language and then, later, written down in Welsh as the myths of the Mabinogion (one of which also inspired The Snow Spider).

Welsh is also, as I’m reminded every day by my daughters’ voices, a living and active thread in the contemporary fabric of our country. A thread that deserves to be appreciated and experienced beyond Wales. As such, I hope children all over the UK will enjoy hearing its rhythms and words in The Snow Spider – an ancient power restored, a little bit of time travel and magic, back in all our lives once again.

I HAVE REPORTED FROM all over the world. I have seen unspeakable things. I have seen dead and dying people in terrible abundance. And those experiences invariably brought one phrase to mind, a phrase that haunts me to this day. "I entered the world of a nightmare." Not my words, but those of my father, Richard Dimbleby – though nothing I have witnessed bears comparison with what led my father to use those words 75 years ago this month.

In the spring of 1945, he was a BBC war correspondent accompanying Montgomery's Second Army as the troops fought their way through northern Germany on their way to Berlin. One day, he was with an advance party when he heard about a German prison camp in the woods further up the road, at a place called Bergen-Belsen. Several PoW camps had already been liberated but, even so, he decided take a look. He had no idea what he would find until he got there. It was "the world of a nightmare".

I have just come back from Belsen to mark the 75th anniversary of its liberation, on 15 April 1945 – the first Nazi concentration camp to be liberated by the British. It is a vast, desolate space, rough grass and tracks surrounded by a forest of birch trees. You might, for a moment, think it was a nature reserve. And then you see the mounds that conceal the mass graves of those tens of thousands of people who perished there in the weeks before the British arrived. There are also headstones, a monument and, at the entrance to the site, a modern museum that, with stark clarity, tells the full story of the atrocity that was Belsen.

'My father never said a word about Belsen to me'

I was there with some of the dwindling band of survivors who returned to Belsen to share their nightmare with me. It has been a searing experience. To hear elderly men and women – who were then children – describe calmly how they played among the dead or dying and crawled over corpses to find food or water is to relive their nightmare, with today's perspective. Their stories of gnawing hunger and of SS guards who cruelly abused them and their parents merely because they were Jews – and therefore a "sub-human" species – is to remind oneself why these horrors should never be forgotten.

Like many of the British soldiers who liberated Belsen, the survivors were very often so traumatised by the experience that they could not speak of it for years, often for decades. Some have never spoken. My father, who later became the most eminent broadcaster of his era, never said a word about Belsen to me. I understand why he preferred to bury it and "move on", but I wish now that I had asked him. As it was, I know about his feelings through his famous broadcast, which I only heard after he had died. By that time, I was myself an adult and not much younger than he was when he sent his report back to the BBC. It brought me to tears then, as it still does today. And that's not just filial piety. I have heard again and again that it has had a similar effect on many, many others.

His report – which now lodges as an important document in the Holocaust archives – was precise, detailed, simple and accurate. It is written in clear prose without excess adjectives. His voice is quiet and measured. And yet, his horror and outrage shine through, the more powerful for not being overtly expressed. It was masterly.

From today's standpoint, it seems grotesque that his bosses initially refused to put it out because they thought it would distress too many listeners – and also, perhaps, because they feared he might have exaggerated the truth. He was so angry at their reaction that he told them he would never make another broadcast in his life if it was not transmitted. They relented.

I HAVE ALWAYS HELD that moment in my mind. My father was not given to throwing his weight around. But he had integrity. On location in the midst of a drama, I often found myself asking, "What would my papa have said or written?" The values of candour and compassion – alongside accuracy and fairness – which he had in abundance have always seemed to me to be the hallmarks of the best reporters. I sometimes wonder today whether the associated values of balance and impartiality – which are totemic for the BBC and other public service broadcasters – can get in the way of the truth, especially when the facts are distressing or the arguments passionate.

I'm certain from what he said and wrote in the following years that my father emerged from the war chastened by his experiences. Like so many of those who fought on the battlefields against the Nazis, he believed with passion that the price of freedom is eternal vigilance – that the ballot box and the rule of law are not God-given but must be cherished and nurtured. He knew them to be fragile human creations that rest on shallow foundations that – as the Nazis discovered – can only too easily be washed away by consent.

This is not to say that history repeats itself, but that the past offers a warning – a reminder of what human beings can inflict on one another by twisting the truth, distorting the facts, and rewriting the past. When demagogues rant at mass rallies or pollute social media to exploit the fears and resentments of vulnerable people, they should be exposed for what they are – disciples of the evil that led to Auschwitz and Belsen.

It is their tub-thumping rhetoric that licenses the gullible to regard those with different skins or cultures as if they were in some way inferior, or a threat to their own existence. It is their dark forebodings that turn refugees – risking their lives to flee war or poverty – not merely into non-citizens but into non-people. It is such snake oil salesmen of “popular” solutions to complex social and economic problems that Belsen warns us against.

This is why the survivors speak out. They not only want to honour the scores of thousands who died there in unimaginable squalor, but they want us to hear their own testimonies. When Anita Lasker says, “If they had killed us all, there would not be a single witness... We are the voices for the people lying in mass graves,” it is because she wants to ensure that Holocaust “deniers” will be ridiculed into oblivion.

They also want to remind us, in the words of a fellow survivor, Tomi Reichental, that “the Holocaust did not start with gas chambers. The Holocaust started with whispers and abuse.” Or, as Shraga Milstein says: “I regard it not as a piece of history, but also as a present day choice that people have to make... Belsen is an expression of the power of hatred.”

That is why they will go on speaking out, for as long as they have breath. It is also why my producer Simon Broughton and I end our film with the last words of my father's final broadcast from Belsen: “There is one thing you must do and that is vow with all your heart such things will never happen again.”

FILM OF THE WEEK

Super Powers

Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery ★★★★★
Sunday 9.00pm Sony Classic

IN A MORE AGREEABLE parallel universe, this week would have seen the launch of the 25th James Bond movie in cinemas around the world. Now even its title, No Time to Die, feels frivolous. But for fans of espionage minus the existential threat, there's always Austin Powers.

A warm-as-toast tribute to the Carnaby Street style, suavely seductive sexism and Walther-PPK-packing moves of the early 007 films, Powers is the durable creation of Canadian funnyman Mike Myers who, following the success of Wayne's World in 1992, worked up a saucy, swinging Sixties "gentleman spy" with the voice of token British Monkee Davy Jones. (Myers was born and raised in Ontario, but to Liverpudlian parents, and he honed his stand-up skills during a stint in 80s London.)

TO DIG DEEPER into the Power-verse than straight parody, screenwriter Myers cleverly inserted himself into an idealised 1967 where he's cryogenically frozen, ready to defrost should the world order be imperiled by supervillain Dr Evil (also played by Myers, in cueball-headed homage to Donald Pleasance's Ernst Blofeld), the master of the "easily escapable situation involving an overly elaborate and exotic death". Myers's skilful slapstick in the thawing-out scene reminds us of Woody Allen's awakening in sci-fi spoof Sleeper; the more scatological Powers incarnation involves the longest overnight wee in history. "Evacuation complete," trills a soothing female computer voice.

It's all directed with swing and affection by subsequent Meet the Parents helmsman Jay Roach, who made his reputation on the $6.7 billion-grossing Powers trilogy between 1997 and 2002. It's easy to identify the brand's precinct - literally, in the first film's opening musical number, with a Universal backlot dressed to look like Carnaby Street - and it's impressive that they squeezed two further, hugely bankable instalments with crossover cast and crew.

Sony Classic is also showing four Matt Helm spy spoofs, a series that was fronted by Dean Martin around the time of Thunderball and You Only Live Twice. Meanwhile, ITV4 continues to count down the actual Bond movies, which is something of a public service, I'd argue.

ARMCHAIR HORROR

Ghost Stories ★★★★★ Saturday 10.45pm BBC2

Inspired by 1970s TV anthologies like Armchair Thriller, writer/director/star Andy Nyman first co-wrote the portmanteau Ghost Stories with childhood friend and silent League of Gentlemen partner Jeremy Dyson for the stage. Adapted for the screen in 2017, it transfers intelligently, linked by Nyman's academic psychic debunker investigating three ghoulish cases: nightwatchman Paul Whitehouse, mourning his wife; troubled teen Alex Lawther, who regrets a drive in the woods; and clipped City hedge-funder Martin Freeman, living in fear of his own imminent baby. Staged in claustrophobic drains, caravans and cellars, it packs plentiful jumps and a coherent unifying thread sewing it all together, with an intriguing undercurrent of Jewish guilt. Have a cushion handy. AC

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

War for the Planet of the Apes ★★★★★
9.00-11.50pm C4 12

SCI-FI Although they reboot the beloved, late 1960s/70s franchise, the 21st century Planet of the Apes films have merits of their own. This final chapter, the second to be directed by co-writer Matt Reeves, approximately retools Battle for the Planet of the Apes (1973), as the simian tribe led by Caesar (a motion-captured Andy Serkis) aims to relocate to a promised land after its forest outpost is targeted by the genocidal Colonel (Woody Harrelson). Reeves and co-writer Mark Bomback introduce allusions to fascism and slavery, with mutant humans in chains and subjugated apes referred to as "donkeys", before a spectacularly pyrotechnic battle brings the saga to a close. Operatic in scale and threaded with connections for old-school fans, it's a great trilogy-capper – and with ownership now in the hands of Disney, a next leap in this franchise's evolution can't be far off. The Rainmaker ★★★

6.50-9.20pm Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA Burt Lancaster only agreed to making Gunfight at the OK Corral on the condition that he star in this movie, which is new to Talking Pictures TV today. The story unfolds in Kansas in 1913, with Lancaster playing the conman who promises he will bring an end to a serious drought, charming spinster Katharine Hepburn along the way. Director Joseph Anthony staged the original play (a Broadway flop) and clearly has a reverential ear for dialogue; sadly, he has a blind eye when it comes to locations and camerawork. The visibly edgy pairing of Lancaster and Hepburn is the real reason to watch. AT (US 1956)

Anchorman: the Legend of Ron Burgundy ★★★
9.00-11.00pm Sky1 12

COMEDY Will Ferrell stars here as Ron Burgundy, a top news anchorman in the 1970s, who suddenly finds his job under threat from a woman. When ambitious reporter Veronica Corningstone (a sparky Christina Applegate) joins the top-rated but male chauvinistic San Diego news team, she sets her sights on becoming the first female anchor. However, Burgundy has no intention of sharing the limelight and tries to frustrate the plans of his rival. The jokes are puerile in the extreme, but a few pay off hilariously, and matters are given a lift by star cameos from the likes of Tim Robbins and Ben Stiller. Overall, though, this feels like a comedy sketch extended way beyond its natural length. AS (US 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

Inception ★★★★★
10.00pm-12.35am ITV 12

SCI-FI The subconscious mind becomes a deadly maze for Leonardo DiCaprio in this wildly inventive thrill-ride from Christopher Nolan (Dunkirk). DiCaprio stars as a spy who steals secrets from other people's dreams, but begins to lose his grip when tasked by a business mogul (Ken Watanabe) with implanting an idea in the mind of the heir to an energy empire (Cillian Murphy). Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Tom Hardy and Ellen Page are among the specialists assisting DiCaprio on his mission. While the film lacks emotional impact, Nolan certainly knows how to craft an enthralling brainteaser, and he delivers plenty of incredible action scenes akin to The Matrix. SP (US/UK 2010, some violence, HD)

11.00pm-12.25am BBC1 12

SCI-FI Director Duncan Jones (Moon) helms this suspenseful story, which finds Jake Gyllenhaal attempting to identify the perpetrator of an attack aboard a Chicago commuter train. Blending elements of Déjà Vu, Murder on the Orient Express and even Groundhog Day (since the fateful events are replayed to clarify the killer's identity), the premise is fascinating, and the whodunnit element is riveting. Gyllenhaal balances vulnerability with muscle-bound action, and there is solid supporting work from Michelle Monaghan as a fellow, imperilled passenger. TJ (US/Fr 2011, swearing, HD)

Solace ★★★ 11.50pm-1.35am C4 15

THRILLER Anthony Hopkins stars here as a clairvoyant enlisted by two FBI agents (Jeffrey Dean Morgan and Abbie Cornish) to stop a serial killer. Flaunting the influence of films such as Se7en, Solace offers a sombre exploration of what such a power can mean to those who have it. Director Afonso Poyart succeeds in creating an unsettling mood, but his flashy visual style does undermine some of the story's deeper issues. While Morgan and Cornish are rather lifeless in their roles, Hopkins occasionally captivates, especially during a speech to a bereaved mother. JL (US 2015, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Tinkerbell and the Secret of the Wings ★★★
9.50-11.00am BBC2 U

FANTASY The petite pixie gets in more trouble in another pleasing if inessential entry in the animated series. This time, Tinkerbell enters the forbidden Winter Woods, where she befriends a long-lost family member, which puts the lives of all the fairies in jeopardy. Colourfully animated with moderate thrills and plenty of giggles, this yarn efficiently serves its audience of under-10s. Although it lacks the squabbling banter of previous instalments, the messages of friendship and reconciliation are adeptly handled. JH (US 2012, HD)

Casper ★★★★★
12.55-2.55pm ITV PG

COMEDY With comic books and cartoon series full of muscle-bound superheroes vying for big-screen superstardom, it's nice to see a gentler character making such an impact in his first film outing. Casper the Friendly Ghost does his bit to make Whipstaff

Manor a homelier place for lonely Christina Ricci to live with her father (Bill Pullman), but it's his ghoulish uncles Stretch, Stinkie and Fatso who scare up all the fun. The film is dominated by special effects, but Cathy Moriarty's hissable villainy as a greedy heiress threatens to steal the show. DP (US 1995, may be edited for violence, language, HD)

The Muppets ★★★★★
4.00-5.40pm BBC2 U

COMEDY Kermit the Frog rounds up the gang to save the Muppets' derelict theatre from a ruthless tycoon (Chris Cooper) in this laugh-out-loud return for the enduring TV characters. Aided by a couple of humans (co-writer Jason Segel and Amy Adams), our fuzzy heroes stage a money-spinning telethon on the site of their former triumphs. Will an indifferent modern-day public take them to their hearts again? It's skewed towards a younger audience, but director James Bobin packs the film with enough subversive humour to amuse grown-ups who will remember the show from their own childhood. TeS (US 2011, HD)

FANTASY DRAMA Much digital artistry went into the crafting of this cinematic adaptation of the Carnegie Medal-winning novel by author Patrick Ness and illustrator Jim Kay, which is surely the gloomiest children's fantasy of recent years. Sensitive, artistic, bullied 12-year-old Conor (Lewis MacDougall) must cope with a terminally ill mother (a photogenically ailing Felicity Jones), a teasingly absent father (Toby Kebbell) and an icy grandmother (Sigourney Weaver) in a northern English town. When an ancient yew tree (voiced by Liam Neeson) creaks to life in a neighbouring graveyard, it offers three exquisitely animated parables in exchange for a reluctant Conor's own stories. Rather than being patronising, this Freudian journey functions as an adolescent self-help manual under the gothic direction of Juan Antonio Bayona (who restaged a tsunami in The Impossible and went on to helm Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom). And Ness's own hand on the screenplay ensures it retains his novel's devastatingly emotional core. (US/Sp/UK/Can 2016, violence, HD)

CAPER In this spoof of his own intricate heist classic Rififi, Jules Dassin pioneered one of the most popular subgenres of the 1960s, the comic crime caper. Deliciously scripted by one-time Ealing alumnus Monja Danischewsky from Eric Ambler's novel The Light of Day, the film combines sparkling dialogue with moments of unbearable tension. The band of misfits hired by Melina Mercouri and Maximilian Schell are effectively played, but Peter Ustinov's showy performance stands out and earned him his second best supporting actor Oscar. DP (US 1964, HD)

SPY COMEDY Fans of Mr Bean star Rowan Atkinson's rubber-faced brand of physical comedy will know what to expect from this send-up of the James Bond-style superspy. In a performance comprised largely of facial tics, childish pratfalls and poo jokes, Atkinson plays the titular hero, an enthusiastic but bumbling intelligence agent appointed to track down those behind the theft of the crown jewels. Director Peter Howitt forgoes subtlety for youngster-friendly sight gags, while the game cast – particularly John Malkovich as a French megalomaniac – seems to relish the opportunity to lark around. SF (UK/US/Fr 2003, edited for language, HD)

The Croods ★★★

COMEDY ADVENTURE This Flintstones-esque slice of CGI-animated family fun has Nicolas Cage and Emma Stone voicing the dad and daughter of a Stone Age family who are thrust into the wild when a rock slide destroys their cave. Fleeing disaster in the company of a more evolved teenager (Ryan Reynolds) from another tribe, they seek safety, shelter and enlightenment through a colourful and weirdly trippy landscape. The Croods sometimes mistakes frantic for fun, and its emotional complexities and all-over-the-place ending may baffle younger viewers. But there's enough prehystrical slapstick to keep the kids entertained and adults smiling along. DA (US 2013, HD)

DISASTER MOVIE Independence Day and The Day after Tomorrow director Roland Emmerich is firmly in his comfort zone with this apocalyptic movie, in which solar flares threaten the planet. Cue some expensive, dramatic and genuinely awesome CGI as Yellowstone goes supervolcano, entire cities are destroyed and giant tsunamis romp across the globe. John Cusack stars as the failed author who is told the truth about the end of the world by Woody Harrelson's conspiracy theory nut, and then attempts to save his kids and ex-wife (Amanda Peet). The actors do their best but they are, inevitably, dwarfed by the breathtaking visual effects. JR (US 2009, edited for language, HD)

ROMANTIC COMEDY Cecil Parker, one of Britain's most distinctive stiff-upper-lip character actors, enjoys a role tailor-made for his screen persona. He plays Arnold Prohack, an adept government Treasury official who comes into a fortune, only to prove less competent at handling his own money. His unwise investments and the extravagances of his family make for what is essentially a one-joke comedy that eventually runs out of steam. But there's fun to be had along the way in the company of a classy cast that also includes Hermione Baddeley, Dirk Bogarde, Glynis Johns, Ian Carmichael and, making his film debut, Denholm Elliott. RK (UK 1949, BW)

SPY ADVENTURE Director Sam Mendes brings all the classic James Bond elements together to make this 23rd film in the series one of the very best. The ever-impressive Daniel Craig leads from the front in a breathless pre-credits sequence through Istanbul's Grand Bazaar. Stunts aside, Mendes also succeeds in creating a convincing human drama, centred around the relationship between Bond and M (Judi Dench). Making the most of the intelligent, witty script is a fine cast that includes Ralph Fiennes, Naomie Harris and Albert Finney. But it's Javier Bardem as campy villain Silva who gets all the best lines. Released 50 years after the first Bond film, Dr No, this pays tribute to the series in style. JH (US/UK 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

The Interview ★★★

9.00-11.30pm Comedy Central

COMEDY The Interview's release was unique in irking North Korea as well as agitating the FBI. But what of the film itself? Real-life friends Seth Rogen and James Franco play a TV news producer and a sleazy celebrity TV presenter who plan an interview with Kim Jong-un (Randall Park) as a ratings booster. Unexpectedly, Kim is a huge fan of Franco's show, and the two bond. As a spoof on popular culture and politics, this is naughty, dumb and patchily funny. And while Franco chews the scenery, Rogen and Park display excellent comic timing. KK (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

ADVENTURE Filmed on the open sea, this handsome movie feels both authentic and modern while delivering the throwback thrills of the classic 1950s matinée feature. Pal Sverre Hagen stars as Thor Heyerdahl, the ethnographer who took his life in his hands when, in 1947, he set out to prove his theories of migration by setting sail from Peru to Polynesia on a primitive balsa wood raft. While it skirts the less sanitary aspects of six men being at sea in a confined space for 101 days, Kon-Tiki captures the scale of the expedition with an appropriate sense of awe. And although history tells us that Heyerdahl and his crew succeeded in their voyage, the film generates plenty of tension. DW (UK/Nor/Den/Swe/Ger/Malta 2012, violence, col/BW, HD)

ROMANTIC COMEDY James Gandolfini gave one of his final performances in this adult-skewed tale of love, its demise and the lessons learnt. He plays Albert, an overweight charmer who meets divorced masseuse Eva (Julia Louis-Dreyfus) at a party. At the same get-together, Eva begins a parallel friendship with Marianne (Catherine Keener), a successful poet who endlessly disparages her ex-husband. Man of Steel ★★★ 9.00-11.45pm Sky1 12

FANTASY The lukewarm reception given to Bryan Singer's Superman Returns (2006) led to a seven-year wait for the big-screen revival of DC's archetypal superhero. The last son of Krypton returned in the strapping shape of buff Brit Henry Cavill for this reboot, which melds the plots of the first two Christopher Reeve epics – origins story meets Kryptonian bad-guy invasion. The Man of Steel's upbringing with his adopted parents (Kevin Costner, Diane Lane) is revealed in scattershot flashback, and the action picks up with the arrival of General Zod (a ferociously shouty Michael Shannon) and his icy henchwoman (Antje Traue). The climactic smackdown in Metropolis rivals anything the Marvel Cinematic Universe has to offer. Jeremy Aspinall (US 2013, violence, HD)

School for Scoundrels ★★★ 3.15-4.45pm BBC2 U

COMEDY Based on Stephen Potter's popular one-upmanship books, this hit-and-miss comedy passes muster thanks to the willing performances of Ian Carmichael and Terry-Thomas. There are some amusing moments as Carmichael learns how to "confound a bounder" under the tutelage of Alastair Sim, but director Robert Hamer handles the subtle humour with a heavy hand and can't quite knit the various sketches into a convincing whole. Our sympathy is firmly with the lovable rogue, and, whether crowing with caddishness or beaten and bemused, Terry-Thomas is the star of the show. DP (UK 1960, BW, HD)

ADVENTURE The plot and setting have been updated, but the essence of Michael Bond's much-loved character thankfully remains intact in this classy first feature outing. After a prologue set in darkest Peru, the eponymous young bear (beautifully voiced by Ben Whishaw) moves into the west London home of the Brown family and eventually wins their affections. But can they keep him safe from the clutches of a mysterious taxidermist (Nicole Kidman)? Both children and adults will find plenty to relish in this lovingly, deeply British film. ROMANTIC COMEDY The Four Weddings team produced another smash with this charming tale about a bumbling bookshop owner (Hugh Grant) who falls for the "most famous actress in the world" (Julia Roberts). Inevitably, the course of true love is a bumpy road, with friends, family and a layabout flatmate (Rhys Ifans) getting in the way, but that's the cue for a series of hilarious scenarios. If you can accept the fluffiness and lack of realism, there's much to enjoy in this light-hearted commentary on the nature of celebrity. LH (US/UK 1999, some swearing, HD)

The Family Way ★★★★★ 10.00pm-12.15am Talking Pictures TV 15

COMEDY DRAMA Considered almost risqué on its original release, this gentle comedy can now be seen as a fond portrait of an era when sex was still taboo. With a score by Paul McCartney, the film recounts the experience of many 1960s newlyweds who had to share a house with their in-laws. Hywel Bennett is the husband so wound up by cohabitation that he is unable to consummate his marriage to Hayley Mills. But it's her real-life dad, John Mills, who steals the show with a splendid study in working-class cantankerousness, closely followed by Marjorie Rhodes as his long-suffering but speak-as-you-find wife. DP (UK 1966)

The Rise of the Krays ★★ 11.00pm-1.15am C5 18

CRIME DRAMA The lurid early history of notorious British gangster twins Ronnie and Reggie Kray is rendered surprisingly boring in this flat and feeble biopic. The narrative jumps from one brutal incident to the next, as director Zackary Adler fetishises the violence using excessive slo-mo and lots of grisly close-ups, while turning the siblings themselves into caricatures. The miscast leads lack screen presence, with Simon Cotton more risible than fearsome as Ronnie and Kevin Leslie utterly bland as Reggie. Superior 1990 treatment The Krays, starring Martin and Gary Kemp, is also showing tonight on ITV4. SF (UK 2015, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

THRILLER Mark Wahlberg is a man bent on self-destruction in director Rupert Wyatt's take on Karel Reisz's 1974 movie. Wahlberg makes a fine substitute for James Caan, playing a literature professor deep in crisis, splurging stacks of cash on high-stakes games and risking all to pay off his debts. The film's self-conscious visuals are sometimes out of kilter with its narrative focus on existential angst, but the casting is perfection, with a powerfully husky Jessica Lange and a sensitive Brie Larson making their mark. Emma Simmonds (US 2014, swearing, nudity, HD)

SATIRE This story of a scientist undone by his own invention is the only Ealing comedy to truly bare its teeth. Capitalist greed, professional jealousy and fear of progress are just some of the themes of this razor-sharp satire that spurns the studio's usual whimsy. CLASSIC THRILLER The film that marked Alfred Hitchcock's arrival in Hollywood in 1940 (and went on to win the best picture Oscar), this noir beauty was adapted from Daphne du Maurier's gothic novel. (Hitch also directed adaptations of du Maurier's Jamaica Inn and The Birds.) The action begins in Monte Carlo, where Laurence Olivier's wealthy widower Maxim de Winter marries Joan Fontaine's chaperoned debutante. Maxim whisks his bride back to his Cornish mansion, Manderley, where she is terrorised by housekeeper Mrs Danvers (Judith Anderson) and haunted by constant mention of "the first Mrs de Winter". THRILLER Armed with a clever script by John Mortimer (of Rumpole fame), director Carol Reed managed to turn a thoroughly run-of-the-mill potboiler into a hugely entertaining three-hander. Reed always had an unerring ability to conjure up atmosphere, and he's aided here by the striking photography of Robert Krasker and the canny playing of a splendid cast. Laurence Harvey is gleefully extravagant as a cocky conman, Alan Bates doggedly decent as the insurance assessor on his trail and Lee Remick beguiling as the "widow" caught between them. DP (UK 1963, some violence)

FANTASY New to Sony Movies today, Jim Henson's whimsical adventure sees the Muppet team visit Alice in Wonderland territory, as babysitter Jennifer Connelly wishes her younger brother into the Goblin King's clutches and has only hours to rescue him from a castle maze. The fuzball gremlins will keep the children amused, while adults will laugh at David Bowie's Tina Turner wig for entirely different reasons. The film may be weak on suspense, but it still emerges as firm fantasy fun. AJ (US 1986)

DRAMA The seventh instalment in the Rocky franchise is one of the best – a fresh-faced crowd-pleaser as smart as it is rousing. Michael B Jordan plays Adonis Johnson, son of the late Apollo Creed, who is so convinced of his own boxing talent that he seeks out his father's old sparring partner Rocky Balboa (Sylvester Stallone) to act as his coach. Finding a new form for old-fashioned thrills, this is a boxing movie with a hero for young and old alike. KK (US 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

Tablets – helping you be closer to your loved ones...

Tablets are becoming hugely popular. And no wonder - you can sit in a comfy armchair and browse the web or even video call (Skype or FaceTime) your family and friends who live just down the road, or even half way around the world.

They're easier to use than PCs in lots of ways, too.

But there's a catch. In fact, two

Catch number 1:

They're different from PCs. So if you already know how to use a PC, you have to start again.

Catch number 2 (the big one!):

There are lots of important features that are "hidden". There's no button for them, saying "click here". And you simply can't work it out. You need to know to slide the screen from the left, or drag the thingy-me-bob to the right.

Someone needs to tell you these things – it's just not possible to work it out as you wouldn't even know they're there!

If I ran the world...

If I ran the world, these devices would come with a proper manual. But when they do come with a manual, it's on the device, so you can only get at it if you already know how to use the thing! And when you do get at it, it's usually written assuming you already know how to use it - which makes it a bit pointless.

That's why I've written these books: iPads One Step at a Time and Android Tablets One Step at a Time (ideal for all Android tablets).

Plain English - that's not all...

They explain how to use the device, in plain simple language, with pictures of the screen showing exactly where to tap or slide your fingers. No jargon!

Only Half the Story...

That's only half the story, but I don't have room to explain what I mean by that here. So I've put together full information on the books - who they're for, what they cover and so on.

What's more, the books also come with a small free gift – no room to explain that here, either!

"Better than WHSmith's Best"?

As soon as these books came out, I started getting comments like...

"Thank you for producing such a superb book – it is really helping me. I had bought one (a book) in W H Smiths a short while ago and couldn't get on with it at all!" - J.S.

and "I am delighted with the new book on tablets, so many things I didn't understand before, being of the 'retired brigade' it's a great help." – Doreen Wadsworth

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

GoodFellas ★★★★★
10.05pm-12.50am ITV4 18

CRIME DRAMA There are some films you catch partway through and still have to watch until the end. GoodFellas is a definitive example. Co-adapted from Wiseguy, Nicholas Pileggi's 1985 non-fiction account covering 20 years in the life of mafioso Henry Hill (played here by Ray Liotta), the film opens with a violent prologue, and then takes confident strides from juvenile delinquency to witness protection. All the while, Scorsese finds grace and brutality within the New York Mob, typified by Robert De Niro and a terrifying, Oscar-winning Joe Pesci. Warning: once will not be enough. (US 1990, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

DID YOU KNOW? Martin Scorsese was so particular about the cast's wardrobe that he often tied Ray Liotta's tie himself to make sure it was just right

Whisky Galore! ★★★★★
3.25-4.45pm BBC2 PG

COMEDY Alexander Mackendrick's sublime directorial debut is one of the jewels in the Ealing crown. At the centre of this droll story of whisky smuggling in the Hebrides during the Second World War stands Basil Radford, who gives the performance of his career as the despised Sassenach commanding the local Home Guard. The Today islanders are played to perfection by Gordon Jackson, Wylie Watson and Joan Greenwood, while Catherine Lacey is a delight as Radford's wife, who greets his posturing and humiliation with equal detachment. DP (UK 1949, BW)

Smokey and the Bandit ★★★★★
8.00-10.05pm ITV4 PG

COMEDY This good-natured chase movie features Burt Reynolds as the inimitable, beer trucking "Bandit", outpacing sheriff Jackie Gleason ("Smokey") from state to state by way of some spectacular stunts. Though as much a platform for Coors beer as for stuntman-turned-director Hal Needham, the movie benefits greatly from the real-life, as well as on-screen, sexual chemistry between Reynolds and his vivacious co-star Sally Field. It spawned several sequels, but none captured the fresh charm of this terrific original. TS (US 1977, may be edited for language, HD)

Assassin's Creed ★★★
9.00-11.10pm Film4 12

SCI-FI Michael Fassbender heads a stellar cast in this moody and richly textured (if confusing) adaptation of the hit video game. Marion Cotillard plays a scientist who has invented a machine that allows Fassbender to regress back to the time of the Spanish Inquisition in order to end a centuries-old war. The flashbacks feature plenty of eye-popping parkour stunts and the bleak finale is marked by a swirl of death, destruction and destiny that seems to anticipate a sequel. Both the ardent fanbase and casual observer are well catered for. AJ (US/UK/Fr 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

Troy ★★★ 10.00pm-1.05am
Paramount Network 15

EPIC The Trojan War was fought for the love of a woman, the legendary beauty Helen, Queen of Sparta (played here by Diane Kruger), who was seduced away from her much older husband, Menelaus (Brendan Gleeson), by the impulsive Paris, Prince of Troy (Orlando Bloom). For the most part, this telling of the tale succeeds handsomely. Purists may complain about the amount of dumbering down, but the battle scenes are stupendous and the cast is as starry as they come, and includes Brad Pitt, Julie Christie and Peter O'Toole. TH (UK/US/Malta 2004, violence, a sex scene, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Raiders of the Lost Ark **★★★★★

6.40-8.30pm BBC1 PG

ADVENTURE A whip-smart dose of period 1930s adventure, this riff on Saturday-morning serials was produced by George Lucas and helmed by cinema's greatest showman, Steven Spielberg. He buffed up old conventions with vim and ingenuity, while Empire Strikes Back writer Lawrence Kasdan laced the iconic set pieces (boulder; face-melt) with wry wit. The extant four films have amassed a combined $1.9 billion at the box office, with a fifth due in 2021 under the direction of James Mangold (Logan). But this first excursion set the coordinates, with Harrison Ford's grumpy action archaeologist in a globe-spanning race against Nazis. He "gets" the character from the start – ruffled, irritated, making it up as he goes along – and Paul Freeman and Ronald Lacey make terrific villains in what Lucas called a "James Bond film without the hardware". (US 1981, may be edited for content, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

Look out for a nod to producer George Lucas's Star Wars as R2-D2 and C-3PO appear as hieroglyphs on a pillar in the Well of Souls

9.25-11.00am CBBC PG

COMEDY The lovable bear returns in a triumphant sequel, which sees our ursine hero framed for the theft of a valuable book by an egotistical actor and thrown in prison. The film is not only superior to the fun original, but is also one of the best family movies you're likely to see. The script brims with wit, funny misunderstandings and hilarious moments, and is performed by a consummate cast led by Hugh Bonneville and Sally Hawkins as Mr and Mrs Brown. There's also a superb villain in the form of Phoenix Buchanan, brilliantly played by Hugh Grant, who demonstrates just how deft a comedy actor he can be. JL (UK/Fr 2017)

Rio Lobo ★★★ 2.45-5.20pm C5 PG

WESTERN It may be a mite saddle-weary (considering it's yet another variation on Rio Bravo) but John Wayne's last film with director Howard Hawks has a wonderful sense of western occasion, together with a sardonic humour that lights up a listless story. Jorge Rivero and Chris Mitchum (son of Robert) play the Confederate looters snatching Union gold, and Wayne is the colonel trying to find the traitor who's feeding information to the robbers. Meanwhile, wild-eyed

Jack Elam looks askance at the whole business. It unfolds at a leisurely pace, but the characters and circumstance make a real impression. TH (US 1970, HD)

The Lavender Hill Mob **★★★★★

3.30-4.45pm BBC2 U

CRIME Ealing Studios had quite a year in 1951. Not only did the company produce satire The Man in the White Suit (see review p32), it also released this superb crime spoof. Alec Guinness stars as the bank agent who decides to steal a million in gold bullion. He is well supported by Stanley Holloway, Alfie Bass and Sid James as members of the gang he recruits. Watch out, too, for blink-and-miss-them walk-ons from James (billed as William) Fox and Audrey Hepburn. Director Charles Crichton tips his hat to such genre staples as the studio's own The Blue Lamp and the hard-boiled gangster movies produced by Hollywood, and TEB Clarke deservedly won an Oscar for his script. DP (UK 1951, BW, HD)

Babe **★★★★★

3.45-5.30pm Sky1 U

FANTASY An Australian adaptation of Dick King-Smith's book The Sheep-Pig, this enchanted millions around the world, converting many small children to vegetarianism in the process. The "babe" of the title is an orphaned piglet adopted by a family of Border collies who learns how to handle sheep under the patient training of farmer James Cromwell. The mixture of live action and animatronics brings the animals magically to life (the film won an Oscar for visual effects) and their voices are adeptly handled by Christine Cavanaugh (of Rugrats fame), Hugo Weaving and Miriam Margolyes. It's a delight from start to finish. JF (Aus 1995, HD)

Hop **★★★

5.15-7.15pm ITV2 U

COMEDY This seasonal children's yarn finds young rabbit EB (voiced by Russell Brand) reluctant to succeed his father (Hugh Laurie) as the Easter bunny. So he runs away from the family home (on Easter Island, naturally) and heads for Hollywood with dreams of becoming a rock drummer. Once there, he bounds into the life of a slacker human (James Marsden). Director Tim Hill mines the same seam of cuteness as in his earlier Alvin and the Chipmunks, with Brand's manic characterisation helping to paper over the cracks of a flimsy story. It's all good fun for the very young, but is unlikely to keep many grown-ups interested for long. TeS (US 2011, HD)

Wall Street **★★★

9.00-11.30pm 5 Select 15

DRAMA Oliver Stone changed direction following the success of Platoon with this stylish morality tale about insider trading. Charlie Sheen is the gullible broker who's prepared to break the law in pursuit of riches, and he's matched by his father Martin (also playing his screen father) as the blue-collar union representative who takes a dim view of his son's wheeler-dealing. Stealing the show, however, is Oscar winner Michael Douglas as ruthless corporate raider Gordon Gekko. Stone's trademark neurotic camera movements seem appropriate here as the film details the titanic struggle for good over greed. JM (US 1987, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, drug abuse)

The Theory of Everything **★★★★

10.15pm-12.25am ITV 12

DRAMA Despite its title, this version of Jane Hawking's memoir cleverly foregrounds her relationship with Stephen, spanning young love, family life, practicality in the face of illness and eventually divorce. Eddie Redmayne deservedly won an Oscar as Hawking, and his complete bodily and facial transformation in the role is remarkable. However, the film's secret weapon is Felicity Jones as Jane, and it's through her that we are given a way into Hawking's often impenetrable world of academic brilliance. Director James Marsh should also be commended for capturing pivotal life moments in their lives, including Hawking's first fall, the friction when Jane befriends widower Jonathan Hellyer Jones (Charlie Cox), and the decisive instant when nurse Elaine Mason (Maxine Peake) takes control. AC (UK 2015, some swearing, HD)

Absolutely Fabulous: the Movie

★★★ 10.40pm-12.05am BBC1 15

COMEDY Nearly 25 years after their first series, sitcom socialites Eddy and Patsy get their own movie. The chaotic plot sees the duo go on the run after being suspected of killing Kate Moss, and then try to make a new life on the French Riviera. Joanna Lumley and Jennifer Saunders look as if they're having as much fun as ever in their roles, and there's a dizzying mix of cameoing celebrities and returning cast members along for the ride. The whole film feels like a feature length pay-off for the show's loyal fan base. JL (UK 2016, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

The Bling Ring **★★★★

11.05pm-12.25am BBC2 15

DRAMA Sofia Coppola's film is a dryly funny and perceptive take on a very modern kind of crime. It concerns a group of high-school kids (among them Emma Watson) who become so obsessed with tabloid stars' private lives that they decide to burgle their houses. Though nominally not a comedy, there are plenty of laughs to be had. More seriously, though, The Bling Ring addresses head-on our culture's obsession with celebrity, investigating a post-reality-TV world where everybody and anybody can be not just famous for 15 minutes, but rich, too. DW (US/UK/Ger/Jpn 2013, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Jack Seale investigates

START FROM SCRATCH

Line of Duty

Available now

Jed Mercurio's police-corruption saga has, sadly, fallen foul of the coronavirus: series six was still a long way from completion when TV productions across the country were forced to shut down. But this means that, if you've somehow resisted being swept up in one of the most talked-about shows of the past decade, there's more time now to catch up with the whole box set.

At first it's merely very good drama indeed, as we meet AC-12 – the cops who investigate other, possibly bent, cops. Somewhere around the series two or three mark, however, it becomes almost unbearably gripping, as Mercurio masters his mix of twists, red herrings and brutally sudden character deaths.

Beneath it all (pay attention during series one!) is a giant conspiracy, enmeshing senior law enforcement with terrifyingly potent organised crime, that stays just out of the grasp of our AC-12 heroes. Then there's the biggest question: are they all heroes?

UNDER THE SICILIAN SUN
Inspector Montalbano

Available now

Do you need to get away? Gorge on every episode of this lugubrious, witty drama, starring the formidable Luca Zingaretti as the Sicilian police chief – his adventures are a restorative shot of sunshine. Montalbano's cases are engaging whodunnits against a backdrop of sleaze and villainy, but he's the sort of guy who only gets around to finding a murderer once he's enjoyed some sumptuous Italian cuisine under azure skies.

TRICKS AND ILLUSIONS
Jonathan Creek

Available now

One of the best-ever detective comedy dramas: Alan Davies is the magician sleuth (initially paired with Caroline Quentin) who knows that the impossible and the supernatural are always just a trick. Written by master plot-wrangler David Renwick, it repeatedly outfoxes its audience with clever "locked room" set-ups – and surprises us with comedy stars in straight roles. Bob Monkhouse and Rik Mayall are two standout examples.

LIVING IT LARGE
The Mallorca Files

Available now

A daytime crime show that shamelessly doles out sunny escapism, this series mixes death in the Balearics with some classic, reluctant romantic chemistry between two mismatched cops. Perhaps the only surprise is that the wisecracking foil for fussy Brit Miranda (Elen Rhys) is Max, a German detective played by Julian Looman: together they solve glamorous crimes, often involving the rich and famous, in a series of stunning locations.

BLOOD ON THE BEACH
Death in Paradise

Available now

You can see all the first eight series of this deservedly popular crime drama, set on the fictional Caribbean island of Saint Marie. Ben Miller, Kris Marshall and Ardal O'Hanlon all enjoy around three series each of tropical sun as British (or Irish) policemen, out of their comfort zone but learning to adjust to a different pace of life – while solving seemingly impossible, but not too complex, cases. Who knew murder could be so relaxing?

CHEERY CRIME-BUSTING
Shakespeare & Hathaway

Available now

Initially shown on weekday afternoons, this is perfect for anyone seeking an undemanding binge. This comedy drama is powered by the easy chemistry of its stars, Jo Joyner and Mark Benton, as gumshoes cheerily pounding the streets of Stratford-upon-Avon and its pleasant rural environs, working their eccentric way through plots that are light on sleuthing but always full of laughs, big characters and the odd impressive guest star.

PERIOD PIECE
Vienna Blood

Available now

Some detective shows are all about the intricately plotted cases. Some are more about characters and atmosphere. Fitting confidently into the latter category is this period piece – based on the bestselling novels of Frank Tallis – that's set in Vienna in 1906 and dripping with golden-age grandeur and underground nastiness (be warned, it does get very nasty). Matthew Beard (above) and Juergen Maurer are strong co-leads, as a curious young doctor and his policeman friend.

COASTAL CONUNDRUM

Broadchurch

Three series

It arrived at a time when programme-makers were worried that viewers were no longer willing to commit to a lengthy television serial. But the first series of Chris Chibnall's Broadchurch proved that if a tale is gripping enough, an audience will return week after week. By the time episode eight aired in April 2013, nearly ten million were desperate to discover who in this close-knit coastal community had killed young Danny Latimer.

Stars David Tennant and Olivia Colman would return for two further series, both of which also reunited such supporting players as Jodie Whittaker and Andrew Buchan. But it's that original mystery that lingers longest in the memory, with the discovery of Danny's body at the base of the town's cliffs still delivering a punch to the guts.

NETFLIX AND NOW/SKY

DETECTIVE WITH A DIFFERENCE Bancroft

Two series available

Just when you were thinking that every single permutation of the tortured TV detective had been tried, along came Sarah Parish in 2017 as Elizabeth Bancroft, a tenacious superintendent with a very sinister secret. To say anything more would be to spoil things for newcomers unaware of Bancroft's premise, but be prepared to start feeling very conflicted about Parish's anti-heroine as she tries to bring a criminal gang to book after a cold case is reopened.

THE DALES OF JUSTICE DCI Banks

Five series available

If there was an award for Most Dour TV Detective then Stephen Tompkinson would be the runaway winner for his portrayal of the permanently scowling Yorkshire-based inspector. Mind you, he doesn't have all that much to smile about, what with his cases involving grisly murders, fatal arson attacks and contract killings. There are problems on the personal front, too, thanks to tragedy within Banks's own family, as well as an on/off romance with subordinate DS Annie Cabbot.

UPHOLDING THE LAW Law & Order: UK

Eight series available

Doctor Who fans who were surprised by how good an actor Bradley Walsh is obviously hadn't seen his work in this slick police-and-lawyers drama. As seasoned investigator DS Ronnie Brooks of London's Major Incident Unit, he's the heart of the show and a wise mentor to various young sidekicks, including Jamie Bamber, Paul Nicholls and Ben Bailey Smith. There are eight seasons of hard-edged cases on offer, with all episodes adapted from the acclaimed original US version.

LATER ENDEAVOURS Inspector Morse

Seven series available

The debut appearance of the opera-loving, classic Jag-driving DCI in 1987 changed the genre forever. Morse (John Thaw) was the first TV cop on the block to boast two-hour, lushly filmed cases with a real sense of prestige – and without him, it's doubtful that ITV would have commissioned the likes of Midsomer Murders and Vera. The lonely, irascible central character also remains endlessly fascinating, so much so that we now get to chart his early career in the spin-off prequel Endeavour.

NETFLIX

GREATCOATED CRUSADER

Luther

Five series available on iPlayer/four on Netflix

At times, this feels more like a shadowy superhero series than a crime show, with John Luther as a Batman figure, his greatcoat a substitute for a cape and London standing in for Gotham City. The sadists he encounters (notably Ruth Wilson as psychopathic Alice Morgan) also wouldn't look out of place in a noir graphic novel. But what keeps it grounded is a towering performance from its star, Idris Elba, who imbues his hero with fierce intelligence and serious swagger.

COPYCAT COLD CASES

Whitechapel

Four series

Jack the Ripper's old stamping ground becomes the scene of a modern-day crimewave in this grimly gothic whodunnit. Rupert Penry-Jones heads up a team of 'tecs dealing with murders that replicate historical crimes. Series one focused on a Ripper-esque copycat, with later outings centring on the Krays' impact on east London, and the notorious Ratcliff Highway Murders. Bonkers but addictive.

NOW TV/SKY BOX SETS

DER DEUTSCH DETEKTIV Babylon Berlin

Three series

Be transported to 1929's Weimar Republic as we open the casebook of inspector Gereon Rath and police clerk Charlotte Ritter. Period detail is also a character in its own right – the budget is the biggest in history for a non-English-language series. But it justifies the price tag, as the seedy underbelly of the city has been brought to life with seamy authenticity.

ALL 4

A STAR ON THE RISE

Why O-T Fagbenle created a comedy about life after fame

He has been acting for 20 years and now O-T Fagbenle is finally poised for global fame. After starring as Luke, Offred's husband in The Handmaid's Tale opposite Elisabeth Moss, he's now on the cusp of stardom after landing a role in the Marvel film Black Widow.

First, though, there's his new turn as a comic antihero in six-part E4 series Maxxx (the whole series is available on All 4 from 2 April). It was the yearning to play a lighter part that led him to write the role for himself. "I love comedy," he says, simply. "It was a great way of looking at topics like the way we deal with loss and heartbreak, emptiness, and how we replace hugs with likes."

Not only does he play the lead (a former boy-band star shamed by the tabloids for his drug use), he also produces, writes and directs Maxxx, which features cameos from Larry King, Jamie Oliver, the Backstreet Boys, plus model Jourdan Dunn as Max's ex-girlfriend. "She's a really brilliant actress," says Fagbenle of Dunn.

Maxxx will be catnip to anyone still wishing that Bros doc After the Screaming Stops had produced a sequel; Fagbenle admits it was an inspiration. "I didn't even know if it was worth making Maxxx after watching that piece of genius," he laughs.

He concedes that opportunities for BAME actors have improved since he started out. "When I graduated [from Rada] in 2001, as far as I remember there was not one black British actor who was known in Hollywood. Now, if you think of black British actors who have been nominated for Oscars, you've got Chiwetel Ejiofor and Daniel Kaluuya. So that's a measure of the progress that we've made, but to me that isn't the challenge. The challenge is: look behind the camera. When I turn up on film sets in America, Canada and England, I try to count the BAME heads of department. To make systematic change is really hard. One has to change rules and take more risks. We have to put the onus for change on the people who have the power."

Which is hard, because those in power don't tend to want to give it up. "No, they don't. But social pressure leads to consciousness and understanding. Most importantly, it's about a recognition of the value of diversity. If we'd excluded Lin-Manuel Miranda from writing history, would we ever have had Hamilton? The heartbreaking thing is thinking about all the extraordinary stories that we're not gaining from because people don't want to change the system." If anyone can change the system, O-T can. In fact, he already is. LAURA CRAIK

NINETIES NOSTALGIA WITH A TWIST
Derry Girls

Series 1-2 available now

Lisa McGee's comedy debuted in 2018 but has since become a word-of-mouth hit. It follows a gang of teen girls (and one boy) attending a convent school in the 1990s, who have an Inbetweeners-style sense of mischief. The highly quotable lines rest on a solid sitcom structure – and it's a sharp, fresh take on the Troubles in Northern Ireland, too.

BIG-HEARTED COMEDY Home

Series 1-2 available now

It was evidently conceived as a response to both Brexit and the nation's attitude to refugees, but Rufus Jones's sitcom is a more universal plea for tolerance, as well as a corking comedy. He's the head of a family who, due to a sitcom mix-up, end up hosting a Syrian immigrant (Youssef Kerkour): the newcomer's interactions with strangers give the show its compassionate, sometimes angry, heart.

ROYALLY SILLY COMEDY
The Windsors

Series 1-3 available now

It's exceptionally disrespectful but really, this royal sitcom is too silly to be offensive. It pitches wild caricatures of every Windsor (except the Queen and Prince Philip) into soapy storylines that include organ donation and Kate Middleton being replaced by a murderous robot. It's often worth it just for the posh accents.

How to stream TV

Baffled by the range of streaming services on offer? Doctor Digital offers his guide to the main players

NETFLIX

Price: £8.99/month (for HD)

Why subscribe: Netflix was the first name in original internet television, launching with political remake House of Cards. It has remained on top by expanding into every possible audience and genre, from food shows to period dramas such as The Crown.

How to get it: These days, it's hard to find a gadget that won't load Netflix – just open the main menu of a streaming device like the Apple TV 4K (£179) or Sky Q set-top box. In fact, many modern televisions have a dedicated “Netflix” button on their remote. netflix.com

AMAZON PRIME VIDEO

Price: £7.99/month (included with Amazon Prime next-day delivery)

Why subscribe: Amazon's original content is really just a “sweetener” to convince you to subscribe to their Amazon Prime membership, which includes overnight delivery from their shop. However, they're willing to spend big money to make it. The Grand Tour (featuring the old Top Gear boys) has finally found its footing, while a billion-dollar, multi-series adaptation of The Lord of the Rings is currently in the offing.

How to get it: The best way of watching Prime is on Amazon's own gadget. The Fire TV Stick (£29.99 with Prime Membership) is a small dongle that plugs into your television's HDMI port, and can be controlled with your voice. amazon.co.uk/video

DISNEY+

Price: £5.99/month

Why subscribe: Less a streaming service than a babysitter. Disney+ features everyone from Snow White to Darth Vader to Iron Man, and even Homer Simpson. Moreover, it's the only place to catch new TV series set in the world of Marvel and Star Wars. The Mandalorian – a series set in the same universe, which has made a star of a character known as “Baby Yoda” – has got better reviews than any of the recent Star Wars movies.

How to get it: Although it's brand new, this is a mega-budgeted Disney product, so the service will be available on pretty much every smart TV and streaming gadget you can name from day one. Most importantly, you will be able to find it by searching on the Android and Apple app stores, so children will be able to watch it on their tablets and smartphones. disneyplus.com

Price: £5.99/month

Why subscribe: Just because streaming is new doesn't mean we have to abandon the classics. A collaboration between the BBC and ITV, this features British gems such as Gavin & Stacey and Broadchurch.

How to get it: BritBox isn't ubiquitous yet, but it does have apps for both Android and Apple phones and tablets. It is also available for Samsung and Panasonic smart televisions, but before you buy a whole new set, consider plugging a Google Chromecast (google.com/chromecast £30) into your existing TV. With this dongle, you start watching something on your phone, press the button (a rectangle with lines in the corner) and it transfers to your television. britbox.co.uk

AND HERE ARE SOME STREAMING SERVICES YOU CAN GET FOR FREE...

BBC iPLAYER

It's free to watch BBC shows via iPlayer (bbc.co.uk/iplayer). All you need to do is register with a BBC account to get access to a raft of programming that is also free to download. Access this either via an app through your TV, or simply watch via your computer online.

ITV HUB

ITV programmes are free to catch up with via the channel's streaming service, ITV Hub. Look for the icon on your TV's apps section, or visit itv.com/hub to watch programmes from ITV, ITV2, ITV3, ITV4, ITVBe and CITV. All you need to do is register, but to download programmes or watch without adverts you can sign up for ITV Hub+ for £3.99 per month.

ALL 4

To catch up on Channel 4, E4, More4, Film4 and Walter Presents programmes, sign up for free for an All 4 account online (channel4.com). Similar to ITV, Channel 4 also have All 4+ enabling you to watch without adverts for £3.99 a month.

MY5

Channel 5's shows are also available for free, either through the app on your TV or the website my5.tv where there's not only programming from Channel 5 available to catch up with, but also the likes of Blaze and the Smithsonian Channel.

Guilt-free pleasures

In troubled times, try You've Been Framed! says Alison Graham

THERE WILL SURELY come a time when those of us who write for a living will be asked what Great Work we produced during the coronavirus pandemic.

I just know this will happen and all kinds of fabulous minds will be paraded in front of us, the intellectually lazy, to induce guilt. You know the kind of thing – “Henry James wrote Portrait of a Lady in instalments while queueing for loo roll in the Boston branch of Tesco during the great Sneezing Outbreak of 1880.”

Or “TS Eliot wrote the Four Quartets while self-isolating in his office at Faber & Faber during the Earwax Crisis of 1941. So what did YOU do?” Dear reader, this will be a tough one, as my piercing literary vision stretches only as far as picking plot holes in Silent Witness.

There will be no magnum opus from me, there will be no Ulysses, no Ring Cycle, there will only be Spin Cycle, written from my well of pain when I realise, thanks to the absence of extraneous noise (cars, planes, people), just how deafening the washing machine is.

Alas, as I gaze into the future, I know it will not be illuminated by the light of my incisive mind, honed to blood-drawing sharpness as I peered at a laptop for months on end or wrote lists of Things to Do When No One Can Go Anywhere, using coloured pens for alternating lines, just to make it interesting.

Sadly, there will be no Pride and Prejudice, only Sausage Rolls and You've Been Framed! That will be my contribution to pandemic literature.

I'd be surprised if anyone can even see me, as I'm currently mired in a pit of sausage-roll crumbs so deep only a tractor can get me out... What IS it about sausage rolls? I don't eat them during “peace time” yet, come sickness or emergency, there they are in the fridge, lined up like tiny soldiers. How did they get there? I didn't buy them, did I?

Ah well, what's the point of feeling guilty? Seize your delights, however small, where you can. Which brings us to You've Been Framed! As long-term readers of this column (bless you all) will probably know, I've long had a deep admiration of You've Been Framed! that can make me feel a bit, well, intellectually grubby.

‘Seize your delights, however small, where you can’

Surely I should be watching something presented by Andrew Graham-Dixon on BBC4 instead of home-movie footage of people falling off skateboards? Though if Andrew Graham-

Dixon should ever front a BBC4 show about people falling off skateboards, believe me, I'll be right at the front of that audience.

I love You've Been Framed! but set only in the context of Harry Hill's divinely subversive commentary, where he references everyone from former US vice-president Dick Cheney to John Barrowman. (Barrowman is a running gag.)

YBF! episodes routinely take up massive chunks of ITV2 and I can only be thankful. I've probably seen every single episode multiple times, but the utter pure delight of watching a cocky snowboarder land on his bottom will never pale.

THESE DAYS, FOR me, YBF! serves an even greater purpose than just TV filler. It makes me laugh without complication and I'm taken out of myself and the mad world just a tiny bit. If I can yelp with laughter at badly filmed footage of a man who falls from a ladder while fitting a curtain pelmet, life, for a while, doesn't seem so awful.

Stay happy and healthy, everyone.

SERVING SUGGESTION
Harry Hill's You've Been Framed! commentary will lighten your mood – especially while tucking into a sausage roll (or 12)

DOUBLE TROUBLE

Ingrid (Rebekka Nystabakk) is tested by twin brothers Erik and Adam (Kristofer Hivju)

Celebrity Mastermind

6.25pm BBC1

QUIZ Stepping up to test their general knowledge and specialist subjects are actor and writer Daniel Lawrence Taylor, Paralympic skier Kelly Gallagher, comedian and presenter Stephen Bailey and the fourth (who must surely be leaving the others quaking) is mathematician and University Challenge alumnus Bobby Seagull.

Not only is the Cambridge graduate putting his reputation as brainbox extraordinaire on the line but, after facing down questions from Jeremy Paxman, he's now boldly putting himself in front of John Humphrys. If he can triumph, he'll leave with both a nice trophy – and bragging rights over Eric Monkman. FRANCES TAYLOR

Ant and Dec's Saturday Night Takeaway

7.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT It's the final show of the series and, as we all know, the grand plans for taking hundreds of viewers to Florida have had to be shelved. You can imagine the stress for the production team who'd spent months planning it but are now having to create something from scratch. So not surprisingly then we have no details about content. However, Ant and Dec have proved that they can entertain us without the buzz of an excitable studio audience – around ten million watched and enjoyed the show a fortnight ago.

JANE RACKHAM

Casualty

7.25pm BBC1

DRAMA "I gotta have Faith," sang George Michael – a lyric I assume must be ricocheting around Dylan's brain at the moment. He's denying being in love with Faith; in fact he's going so far as saying that he'd have to be "certifiable" to want to get involved with the clinical practitioner, what with her being married to burly paramedic Lev, who looks like he could kill a person with a hard stare. But I think we all know the truth, however much Dylan protests to David.

Someone else who's secretly in torment is Marty, whose hedonistic lifestyle is about to catch up with him. Will an encounter with HIV-positive patient Danny be the wake-up call that he needs? DAVID BROWN

PICK OF THE DAY Twin 9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series Here's a dark and stormy Norwegian saga to get wrapped up in over coming weeks. It has the kind of premise – about the woven destinies of twin brothers – that could feel like a stretch, but instead it comes over as a bleak modern folk tale.

Kristofer Hivju (Tormund Giantsbane from Game of Thrones) plays bear-like Erik, an irresponsible surfer dude in the north of Norway whose home, a beachside caravan, gets towed away because he hasn't paid the farmer rent.

As Erik's life unravels further he turns to his straight-laced twin, Adam, who runs a tourism business. "Anything Erik touches he breaks," Adam groans to his wife Ingrid, and by the end of the first double bill, a lot gets broken, as their lives enter a warped new reality.

It's powerful stuff and, as with the best Nordic noir, the setting is a key contributor: the wildly beautiful mountains and fjords of the Lofoten archipelago are quite something. DAVID BUTCHER

VIRTUAL GRAND NATIONAL

■ With the sporting calendar looking blank, TV commentators are bringing their expertise to bear on a hypothetical version of what's normally the most keenly anticipated horseracing event of the year. The Virtual Grand National (5.00pm ITV) sees presenter Nick Luck (below, right) utilising CGI animation and complex algorithms to answer this afternoon's big question: who might have won the race if it had gone ahead?

■ Joining him will be champion jockey Richard Pitman, who casts his eye over a pixelated recreation of Aintree and predicts whether Tiger Roll (the 2020 favourite, above left) could have had a third victory. There's also set to be a Race of Champions, that'll pit 38 past winners against each other.

■ Also trying to stay as close to normality as possible are the Match of the Day team (10.20pm BBC1), with Gary Lineker and continuing to debate their Top Tens. This week: goalkeepers. DAVID BROWN

Great Asian Railway Journeys

8.00pm BBC2

TRAVEL Michael Portillo would like us to be wowed by the awesomeness of Hong Kong's Mass Transit System, with its punctuality record just shy of 100 per cent. And while it's undeniably slick and efficient, I don't think the railway will be remembered as the most striking thing about the opening hour of this South East Asia trip (first shown as two episodes in January).

For that, we have to visit the fifth-floor flat of a man who makes noodles the traditional way. With typical have-a-go pluck, Portillo straddles a bamboo pole and bounces up and down until the noodle dough is flattened. He is left exhausted, his pastel pink shirt saturated with sweat. It's haunting TV. DAVID BROWN

Gavin & Stacey/ Outnumbered

8.15pm, 8.45pm BBC1

SITCOM I like to think BBC director-general Tony Hall has a glass case in his office that is only to be opened at times of national emergency. He has just broken into it and dished out the medicine an anxious viewing public needs at this point – classic repeats of Outnumbered and Gavin & Stacey.

I mean, clearly these have been shown many times before, but that's not the point. Last year's Gavin & Stacey special was the most watched programme on Christmas Day, reaching 11.6 million and cementing the Barry/Billericay clan's place in our hearts. Tonight, BBC1 shows the very first episode from 2007 and the Outnumbered episode about Uncle Bob's funeral. DAVID BUTCHER

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.15pm BBC1

COMEDY It's a windy day in Finglas and look who blows into Mammy's kitchen – Melanie Brown, aka Mel B or Scary Spice, looking impossibly glam in this tawdry milieu. "Apart from yourself," probes Agnes, "who was the bitch?" Mel won't be drawn but is still candid about her years with the Spice Girls and their recent reunion – and what persuaded her to return from LA and settle back in Leeds.

Matt Lucas is a jovial presence on Cathy's couch, revealing as much as he can about his and David Walliams's plans to revive Little Britain. His mum Diana extols his virtues and quirks, until a mortified Matt yells from the next room, "This is like being present at your own funeral!" An edition with a beating heart. PATRICK MULKERN

Flights of Fancy: Pigeons and the British

iPlayer (expires today)

Miles Jupp playfully narrates a clip-driven history of British males and their love for pigeons, first shown in 2017. Once it was discovered that these birds had a phenomenal sense of direction and could be trained to return home from miles away, this power was immediately put to great use: offering men a chance to spend hours away from their wives, tinkering in a shed or just staring into space.

Titian: Behind Closed Doors

9.45pm BBC2

ARTS Is Titian's 1553 masterpiece Danae Receiving the Gold Shower (above) truly "one of the sexiest paintings ever painted"? That's the view of one of the art historians here, surveying the series of six large works Titian produced for the future Philip II of Spain when he was a young prince eager to impress. They had been due to be shown together at the National Gallery in London, until you know what...

The subjects are loosely taken from Ovid's Metamorphoses (cue Mary Beard to explain how the reading of the Latin poet's work has changed in the light of the women's movement), and while the works show Titian at his peak as an artist, they're also troubling.

As well as the works themselves, we get an insight into the lives of Venice's 16th-century courtesans, Philip's huge debts, and a glimpse, Through the Keyhole-like, of Titian's Venetian home (currently owned by a former Cosmopolitan cover girl). GILL CRAWFORD

Writer/director Lorene Scafaria spins a true-life con into a glamorous tale of friendship and revenge. Constance Wu (Crazy Rich Asians) plays stripper Destiny, who is taken under the wing of Jennifer Lopez's veteran clothes-shedder Ramona. After the 2008 financial crash sends their fortunes south, Ramona devises a hustle, drugging Wall Street clients and racking up vast credit card charges. Lopez brings pop-star swagger and bravura moves to what could be her most eye-catching role yet. EMMA SIMMONDS

TICKING BOMB
Kaya (Mirren Mack) is carrying a secret that could blow Emily's life apart

PICK OF THE DAY The Nest 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA There are a couple of corking "well, I didn't see that coming" moments as this sharp domestic-noir thriller turns up the tension.

Wealthy property developer Dan (Martin Compston) is restless and unhappy as he struggles with the enormity of what he's learnt about their young surrogate, Kaya (Mirren Mack).

It's simply too big for him to share with his fragile wife Emily (Sophie Rundle), so he confides in his shadowy solicitor/fixer Souter (David Hayman).

Together the pair of them come up with a monstrous plan.

As for Kaya, she's establishing a life of her own, though she's a deeply troubled young woman who can never escape a hellish past. No matter how much she tries to run, she will never be able to hide.

Gentle Emily, meanwhile, unaware of the tumult about to engulf her, carries on as normal, shopping for baby clothes as she excitedly awaits the birth. ALISON GRAHAM

Penelope Keith's Hidden Villages

5.30pm C4

DOCUMENTARY This is the series where Penelope Keith offers a gentle meander around sleepy villages and their stories. A long-term village-dweller herself, she knows the issues that trouble them: visiting a lovely Suffolk settlement she observes that for all its beauty (watercolourists throng the pavements) it lacks a shop or post office to give it life.

East Anglia is her beat for this first series opener (from 2014), including the joyously named Little Snoring. "I've rarely been classed as a rustic local," she says in her glassy tones, as she tries to learn the local accent from a man who speaks Norfolk dialect. It has a debt to the Dutch, apparently. DAVID BUTCHER

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The slightly drizzly weather doesn't deter the crowds at Lytham Hall in Lancashire, where the experts see a remarkable variety of treasures including a small wooden box with a fascinating story, a first edition of a book with a dedication from a certain Dr Livingstone, and a Moorcroft vase with a valuation that makes its owner realise she'll either have to get rid of the cat or sell the vase.

There's always a teaser at the start of the programme each week so I'm not spoiling anything to reveal that an elaborate art nouveau-style piece of jewellery has an impressive price tag. "I won't wear it outside then," says the owner.

JANE RACKHAM

Race across the World

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Day 28, and it's time to leave Peru and head south to Argentina. This means a choice between Chile and Bolivia, and most of the racing pairs opt for routes via the vibrant Bolivian capital La Paz, followed by the incredible salt flats at Uyuni. This is, after all, a sightseeing trip too, as Sam reminds Jo when she again looks for a cheap, unpleasant bus that will take them south quickly.

That's the mildest of the duos' meltdowns – Jen and Rob, while trying to find out information at a transport terminus, have a massive row. There's also a brief, frightening medical emergency. Eventually Argentina looms into view, offering something everyone's been looking forward to. Wine. JACK SEALE

The Good Karma Hospital

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA While the awkward situation between Ruby, Gabriel and Aisha rumbles on, the doctors are still busy: there's a patient with dengue fever, a young woman with post-operative problems and, of course, the acid attack victim. Down on the beach Greg discovers the reason for his daughter's visit – or rather Lydia finds out for him. And Edmund finally returns to the village he remembers so fondly.

You don't come to The Good Karma Hospital for subtlety – the dramatic devices of this medi-soap couldn't be more obvious if they were painted on the hospital's walls – but it certainly supplies lashings of tropical escapism. JR

TV CV DOUGRAY SCOTT

He's currently getting a taste of comic book-inspired action in the role of Jacob Kane in Batwoman (9.00pm E4), but Dougray Scott, 54, was almost cast in another fantasy franchise. Back in 2000, filming overran on Mission: Impossible 2 (in which Scott was playing bad guy Sean Ambrose) and the Scottish actor had to drop out of X-Men, where he'd been lined up to star as Wolverine. "Tom Cruise didn't let me do it," Scott has revealed.

Since then, he's combined film and TV work, playing the lead in the movie of Robert Harris's bestselling Enigma and Teri Hatcher's on-screen boyfriend in Desperate Housewives. He's at home playing both heroes and villains, having appeared as duplicitous Sir Percival Glyde in the BBC's The Woman in White, Moses in The Ten Commandments and as both man and monster in Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde. DAVID BROWN

Batwoman

9.00pm E4

DRAMA In Gotham city, all anyone can talk about is the shock return of Batman – but what they don't know is that it's actually his cousin Kate (Ruby Rose) donning his familiar black cape and mask and driving round the city at all hours as she tries to solve the new mystery that haunts her.

Could that evil Alice in Wonderland-themed villain (Rachel Karsten) really be her lost sister, whom she believes died 15 years ago? And if it is her, why does she have such a vendetta against their father (played by Dougray Scott, see above)? To find out, Kate will have to do more than just wear someone's spare costume – she'll have to become Batwoman. HUW FULLERTON

Olivier Awards: the Greatest Moments

ENTERTAINMENT West End theatres are dark. Performances have been cancelled. Actors and technicians have joined the rest of us in lockdown. It's a chilling time for the industry and what would normally be a chance to celebrate the last year's standout productions is forced to go in a very different direction tonight, but one that should still please theatre lovers.

Instead of the usual ceremony (which organisers now hope to hold in the autumn), Jason Manford presents a clip show featuring highlights from the past ten years of the awards, with performances from Olivier-winning productions including Dreamgirls, Hamilton, The Book of Mormon and The Lion King. DAVID BUTCHER

Ride upon the Storm

10.55pm C4

DRAMA If you didn't catch the first series of this outstanding, and mysterious, Danish family drama last year, now's the perfect time – it's all available on All4. It's a biblical tale of sorts, focused on the Krogh family, headed by patriarch Johannes (Lars Mikkelsen), the latest in a long line of priests in the Danish National Church. He's devout, but hugely flawed (alcoholic, casually unfaithful), with two children – August (also a priest), and a prodigal son, Christian. Wife Elisabeth, meanwhile, has also sought solace outside her marriage.

As we return, 18 months have passed and the family is still processing its grief after its tragic loss. But is there any salvation in faith? GILL CRAWFORD

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

from 6am BBC3/iPlayer

A new four-part series – available in full now – that goes behind the scenes at Manchester modelling agency Nemesis. The company is riding a trend, with the "Manchester look" a specific requirement for designers and magazine editors. What sort of person comes through their doors, and how do they cope with photoshoots, international travel and the rest of the hoopla, particularly if they've just been plucked from ordinary backgrounds?

KIDS' CHOICE

The Snow Spider

6.05pm CBBC, iPlayer

Episode two of a series based on the trilogy of books by Jenny Nimmo – inspired by Welsh mythology – continues the adventures of boy magician Gwyn Griffiths. Today, Gwyn investigates the identity of the girl in the web. But his powers are putting a strain on his relationship with his parents. JS

FILM OF THE DAY

A Monster Calls

10.30pm BBC1 (11.30pm in Wales)

Lewis MacDougall, Felicity Jones and Liam Neeson star in this touching fantasy based on an award-winning children's novel about a sad little boy who is given strength by an ancient yew tree. See page 31

CHARMED AND ADORING

Lady Brockenhurst (Harriet Walter), Lady Maria Grey (Ella Purnell) and Anne Trenchard (Tamsin Greig)

Belgravia 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Until now the below-stairs staff have kept themselves to themselves, dealing with nothing more sinister than luncheon, hair tongs and port decanters. However, the morass of intrigue that's swirling around upstairs has now seeped through the floorboards.

Lady's maid Ellis and butler Turton have been enticed into betraying their masters by that duplicitous bounder John Bellasis. While there's barely a soul in Julian Fellowes's drama who doesn't have a secret or isn't up to no good, Bellasis really takes the biscuit (as well as his mother's hidden silver and liberties with a married woman).

Only the charming Charles Pope is untainted by such unpleasantness. When the adoring trio of Lady Brockenhurst, Lady Maria Grey and Anne Trenchard visit him at his office, it's like a ray of sunshine amid all the dark goings-on. JR

Vita & Virginia ★★★ 6.00pm Sky Premiere
The lives and loves of writers Vita Sackville-West and Virginia Woolf get dramatic if stagey treatment in this adaptation of Eileen Atkins's 1992 play. In the 1920s, Vita (Gemma Arterton) and Virginia (Elizabeth Debicki) embark on an affair that proves sexually liberating for Woolf but emotionally destabilising for both women's marriages. Overall, the film is moderately fascinating, especially for those who know the background, but the performers sadly never truly disappear into their roles. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Bring the cinema home

Military Wives ★★★★★ Various streaming platforms
Fresh from cinemas and now available to rent, this broadly comic account of the rise of a female-voice choir follows a group of women as they unite to sing at a British Army base while their partners tour Afghanistan. A class struggle ensues between officer's wife Kristin Scott Thomas and laid-back slob Sharon Horgan, and they're joined by Lara Rossi's tone-deaf siren and Gaby French, who suffers from stage fright. It all builds to a feel-good climax that will have you on your feet, cheering and crying. ANDREW COLLINS

DINNER IS SERVED
But will John Torode and Gregg Wallace be impressed?

PICK OF THE DAY MasterChef 9.00pm BBC1

FOOD "The Navy sails on its stomach!" announces the Commanding Officer on HMS Diamond, which conjures up an interesting image. The nine semi-finalists are in Portsmouth where, split into three teams, they're cooking for 120 of the ship's company who are attending the annual Trafalgar Night celebration dinner. It's a massive undertaking: two of the amateur cooks must fillet 12 large salmon – despite never having dealt with fish that big – and also prepare 20kg of potatoes. Despite the quantity of food required, they're still expected to create a fine dining experience.

Then it's back to the MC kitchen for an invention test. John Torode and Gregg Wallace have each loaded a table with their favourite ingredients but the cooks can only select items from one table. "I just don't consider egg as a lovely bedfellow for kidney. But we'll see," says Wallace of one contestant's plans. By Thursday the cooks will be reduced to five. To make the final, they must impress those picky restaurant critics with their food. JANE RACKHAM

First Dates Abroad

8.00pm E4

REALITY There must be a lot of single electricians in Australia because there's yet another one looking for love in this Australian edition of the dating show.

Brad, 25, is hoping to make a connection with his blind date, model Sarah. She's come to the conclusion that there's more to life than partying and posting on social media, but will there be enough of a spark between her and the good-looking country boy?

Next up is Libby, a pole-dancing stockbroker (now there's an interesting combination of activities) who wants to find someone with a brain as well as the muscles of Arnie. Say hello to philosophical personal trainer Nick. JR

The Lost Ships: the Hunt for the Kaiser's Superfleet

8.00pm Smithsonian

HISTORY In 1914 a decisive encounter took place in the South Atlantic. The British Navy took on its German counterpart off the Falkland Islands, and sank four vessels, with the loss of more than 2,000 lives.

A century later, maritime archaeologist Mensun Bound put together an expedition to find the wreckage of the flagship SMS Scharnhorst, but using sonar "fish" to track a huge stretch of seabed is, Bound says, like "mowing a gigantic lawn". And this is the stormy South Atlantic, not the placid Med.

Five years later, Bound is back at sea to try again... GILL CRAWFORD

Terror in Paradise

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Last April, a group of suicide bombers inspired by Islamic State targeted churches and hotels in Sri Lanka, causing hundreds of deaths. Here, Jane Corbin talks to survivors and those who came into proximity with the killers before they struck, as well as looking at first-hand evidence of how the attacks were carried out.

Corbin also looks into the backgrounds of the culprits, finding that they don't fit the stereotype of the vulnerable loser who succumbs to brainwashing having nothing else to lose. More importantly, could they have been stopped? Questions have been asked about how many warnings the Sri Lankan government ignored. JACK SEALE

Liar

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Characters find it so easy to break into each other's homes in Liar... a conveniently open window in an earlier episode and tonight the key to Andrew Earlham's gorgeous house is found under a gnome by the front door as Laura (Joanne Froggatt) tries to discover who is framing her. But basic home protection measures are the least of Liar's problems as the final episode mercifully comes around and we discover who killed Earlham. Hello, are you still there?

DI Karen Renton (Katherine Kelly) undergoes a complete personality transplant, though she still acts illegally when interviewing a suspect (people can ask for solicitors, you know) and someone says "It's over". Phew. ALISON GRAHAM

There have apparently been viewer complaints about soaps still featuring scenes that take place in pubs. After all, real-life landlords have now been told to call last orders, at least for the time being. But we need to cut the likes of EastEnders (8pm BBC1) some slack.

These episodes were filmed a while ago and the BBC is trying to eke out its supply for as long as possible now that filming has been put on pause. So just think of Walford as a land of lost content, albeit one where everyone feels permanently wretched.

Take Mick (Danny Dyer), for example. He's currently looking deflated because an estate agent has called to value the Queen Vic. And a guilty-feeling Linda (Kellie Bright) is soon suggesting that she no longer work behind the bar. With the Carters set to sell, we're promised a bidding war when it comes to who gets ownership of the Square's beloved boozier. My dream would be for vampy Chrissie Watts to make a surprise comeback. DAVID BROWN

Du Fu: China's Greatest Poet

9.00pm BBC4
DOCUMENTARY There's no point pretending this is an easy watch. Michael Wood is an engaging guide to any chapter of the past, but his powers are stretched here. In China, Du Fu (AD 712–770) is considered a giant of literature – schoolchildren learn to recite his verses by heart.

But the nuances don't really translate: it's hard for newcomers to get any sense of what makes his works so special, even read by Sir Ian McKellen. Wood charts Du Fu's tempestuous life story and follows his wanderings across China – via some staggering scenery. There's no comparable figure in Western culture, Wood tells us, in the way Du Fu "embodies the moral sensibility of an entire civilisation". DAVID BUTCHER

Westworld

9.00pm Sky Atlantic
DRAMA It's Maeve vs Dolores in tonight's episode, with Thandie Newton's awakened host forced to track down Evan Rachel Wood's synthetic zealot, while battle lines are drawn between artificial life and the rest of the world.

Meanwhile, Jeffrey Wright's Bernard has his own plans to save humanity in an enjoyable episode full of heist sequences (Aaron Paul's Caleb playing a blinder as he fleeces a bank), brutal gang takedowns and terrific action scenes.

And we're finally offered answers as to who the other hosts that Dolores rescued from Westworld were.

Though the truth might not be what any of us was expecting...

Yellow Is Forbidden

10.00pm BBC4
DOCUMENTARY Forget "fast fashion", this is an eye-opening and at times eye-watering look at the work of Chinese super-luxury designer Guo Pei. A child of the Cultural Revolution, her clothes are an almost insanely opulent response to austerity, laden with embroidery, metallic thread and gems, and are dauntingly expensive.

Until recently, she sold exclusively to an elite domestic audience (although Rihanna wore a huge yellow cape of hers at the 2015 Met Gala), but as this film shows, she's keen to enter the hallowed "haute couture" club in Paris. But will she be granted entry? It's fascinating to see commerce and art battle for supremacy – and how a supermodel tries to walk in a dress that weighs 50kg. GILL CRAWFORD

iPlayer (expires today)

An overwhelming feature-length elegy, based on a book (co-authored by David McKitterick, above) that chronicles every single life taken by the Troubles in Northern Ireland. Actors read a selection of devastating miniature obituaries, over visuals that aren't just footage of bloody casualties and broken buildings: dark green rural landscapes remind us of the sheer beauty of an island torn in two by violence. Most affecting are the quoted words of grieving relatives.

Malory Towers

5.30pm CBBC, iPlayer
The BBC responded to the sudden need for home entertainment by putting this series up as an iPlayer box set two weeks early. Now here it is in its scheduled slot. Based on the Enid Blyton classic, it follows 12-year-old Darrell (Ella Bright, above centre) as she leaves home to attend a girls' boarding school. JS

Putin: a Russian Spy Story

DOCUMENTARY The final part of this sinister history doesn't quite come up to date with Vladimir Putin's moves to "reset" the Russian constitution so he can rule, theoretically, until at least 2036 – longer than Stalin. But it does walk us through some of his other moves to entrench power, including vote-rigging in parliamentary elections that was so brazen, his approval ratings fell amid mass street protests.

Leading the protests was opposition leader Boris Nemtsov, who was then simply gunned down on a street near the Kremlin. In a chilling sequence we see how, when mourners left flowers at the site, a helicopter was sent to hover low enough that they would be scattered by the draft from its rotors.

These days, we are told, the world stage interests Putin more than the Russian one, and with various "mini-Putins" installed around the world, his legacy looks safe. DAVID BUTCHER

Ordinary Love ★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies
Belfast-based married film-makers Lisa Barros D'Sa and Glenn Leyburn direct this sensitive drama about a middle-aged couple still grieving the loss of their grown-up daughter when the wife is diagnosed with breast cancer. Lesley Manville touchingly hits the right restrained notes as a woman long predisposed to not making a fuss, while Liam Neeson excels as her worried hubby. While too-chic settings can give proceedings a self-conscious air, the film's compassion is hugely moving. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Treading the boards

Bullets over Broadway ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW
Part of the Woody Allen collection still available on C5's catch-up service, this comedy is a pivotal entry in the director's "nostalgia" trilogy (after The Purple Rose of Cairo and Radio Days). John Cusack grabs the spotlight as the playwright making his Broadway debut, while Dianne Wiest thoroughly deserved her best supporting actress Oscar for her performance as an amorous alcoholic. As a celebration of the heyday of New York's theatreland, Allen's film delivers darn good entertainment. DAVID PARKINSON

Billy Dee is 83

The Empire Strikes Back ★★★★★
8.00pm Sky Star Wars
Released 40 years ago, the fifth episode in the space saga has yet to be bettered. Opening out the Star Wars universe, Empire introduced such fan-friendly characters as Jedi-master Yoda, the evil Emperor and old charmer Lando Calrissian, played by Billy Dee Williams, who celebrates his 83rd birthday today. JAMIE HEALY

NEVER FORGET
Jonathan Dimbleby retraces his father's footsteps and talks to survivors and their children

PICK OF THE DAY Return to Belsen 9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Seventy-five years ago, in April 1945, Richard Dimbleby spoke on BBC radio (after threatening to resign if his report wasn't broadcast) about witnessing the liberation of the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in northern Germany: "I passed through the barrier and found myself in the world of a nightmare..."

Haunted by his father's words, Jonathan Dimbleby visits Belsen and hears from those who survived its disease and starvation – many having transferred from other camps. "In Auschwitz, there was order. In Belsen... complete, utter disorder," recalls Eva Behar.

It's hard to grasp the scale of the disorder: Mady Gerrard remembers the smell of unburied corpses – 13,000 of them by the end – and there's grim footage of the burials. We also get a vivid sense of the anger and pain of British soldiers who witnessed the Belsen carnage: "It haunts me," says veteran Ian Forsyth. "I can't get rid of it." DAVID BUTCHER

Your Home Made Perfect

8.00pm BBC2

LIFESTYLE The USP of this makeover series is its use of virtual reality technology to show us what the two designers have in mind. For those of us who struggle to visualise an interior from looking at drawings, it's brilliant.

It's useful for Silvia and Julian, too. They are desperate to modernise their poky 40s bungalow and somehow link it to their beloved garden, but planning restrictions have defeated any building ideas they might have had. However, architects Laura Jane Clark and Robert Jamison can each show them their suggestions using VR and there are some radical ideas. A wooden bath in the kitchen? Really? JANE RACKHAM

The Great Celebrity Bake Off for Stand Up to Cancer

8.00pm C4

FOOD "I never thought I'd be asked by Carol Vorderman to undress a boy doll and a girl doll," says a giggling Rob Rinder as this week's four celebrities become increasingly hysterical over their bakes.

There is a Hollywood handshake, however, for one person's sandwich biscuits (which are not, as Noel Fielding thinks, combinations such as egg mayo and digestive), while some of the guilty-pleasure showstoppers really impress the judges. There are, perhaps, a few too many references to Carol's "resplendent buns", but I suppose it makes a change from soggy bottoms. JR

The Art Mysteries

8.30pm BBC4

ART In all honesty, this last in Waldemar Januszczak's series feels a little thin. It's as if our guide wants to cut loose on Paul Cézanne and his paintings of card players but can't find much of a mystery there, so he sort of vamps to fill. No matter, it's worth watching for the chance to wallow in various Cézanne paintings and for Januszczak's main insight, which is that the "father of modern art" was deeply affected by the front porch of Aix Cathedral opposite the law school where he studied.

How does Cézanne infuse his weathered old boys playing cards with such gravitas? Because "it's a religious picture without any religion in it". They are "a pair of hopeless saints". DAVID BUTCHER DRAMA After last week's disastrous attempt to protect Dr Bahil, the Afghan doctor who was vaccinating children in villages where insurgents operated, you'd think that 2 Section wouldn't be allowed out on their own ever again. But the soldiers are keen to put things right, so when they learn that Georgie accidentally left her smartwatch in the stolen vehicle, they realise they can now track warlord Omar's movements.

Our Girl

9.00pm BBC1

A rescue mission is mounted, which is not without tense moments and a few shocks. Not only that but after everyone – including Sergeant King – despaired of that muppet Throbber ever behaving like a proper soldier, he does something absolutely extraordinary. JR

Max (Jo Martin) in Holby City (8pm BBC1; 10.45pm Scotland) isn't reacting well to revelations about her estranged offspring. With all her prejudices spilling out, she decides to head to Albie's bar and ends up staring at the first drink she's ordered after years of sobriety. And after returning to work, it isn't long before she's accused by Ric of having imbibed. Having a far more pleasant time of it are Jac and Kian, who are getting flirtier by the episode. By the end of tonight, they're even sharing a takeaway pizza, something that strains credulity to snapping point. As if gym bunny Kian goes within sniffing distance of carbs. I like to imagine that the ghost of Nick Cotton is sitting on daughter Dotty's shoulder, encouraging her to stir up trouble wherever she goes. The week's second (and final) EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) finds her goading and ultimately threatening Ian. And while I'm loath to condone such bullying, it is quite fun watching the odious Ian being driven potty by Dotty. DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Inside the Factory

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY There's a lot of Gregg Wallace about at the moment. As well as co-hosting MasterChef, he's roaming European cities for Gregg Wallace's Fun Weekend (Friday Channel 5) and here returns to what is surely his best gig, bellowing over the sound of production lines for BBC2. I mean, I know we all need Wallace's boundless good cheer in these hard times, but could it be too much of a good thing?

No previews were available, but this edition comes to us from a plant that cooks and crimps 180,000 Cornish pasties a day. Wallace learns how they do it and doubtless shouts "Maaaate!" at people in hairnets, while Cherry Healey gets a crash course in the science of onions. DAVID BUTCHER

A Country Life for Half the Price

9.00pm Channel 5
LIFESTYLE New series Kate Humble presents a lifestyle makeover show that depicts an almost agonisingly elusive fantasy: she follows Brits as they leave their cramped urban houses and move to the remote countryside. First up it's Gen and Alain in Exeter, for whom life with their two daughters is a sludge of bills, worry and perfunctory evening meals – until they sell up and buy a big cottage on Yell, Shetland.

The change coincides with Gen's mother nearing the end of her life, which adds a bittersweetness to the fact that, absolved from debt and routine, the family are now free. The only thing they're unprepared for is Shetland's unending high winds, but that's a small price to pay. JACK SEALE

Miss Scarlet and the Duke

9.00pm Alibi
DRAMA Eliza Scarlet (Kate Phillips), Victorian private detective, continues to ruffle more feathers than you'll find in an aviary. With her jauntily cocked cap and 2020 vision (the year, not the eye-chart reading), she starts to take the law into her own, gloved hands, now that her fledgeling business faces bankruptcy. Fortunately, for her and the series, her services are secured by the mysterious, well-to-do wife of a man facing the hangman's noose...

An impasse is reached with the dishy detective (Stuart Martin as "the Duke") on whose toes Eliza repeatedly treads, though I could do with more scenes with her Miss-Hudson-like housekeeper Ivy (Cathy Belton). It's not quite the full shilling (at times it's preposterous), but still a fun watch. MARK BRAXTON

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Ellie Undercover: Nudes4Sale

from 6am BBC3/iPlayer
Yet again BBC3 identifies and investigates an aspect of internet and social media culture that might shock you now your attention's been drawn to it: more and more young people are making extra money, or indeed a full living, from selling nude photos and videos to their "fans" online. Reporter Ellie Flynn looks at how, if at all, the websites facilitating this protect vulnerable young people – and how many of them are in fact underage.

KIDS' CHOICE

My Life: Making Waves

5.30pm CBBC, iPlayer
The documentary strand about kids with unusual lives tells the story of a group of teenage students from London, making history as the only state school to compete in one of the world's most famous sailing races – the Fastnet. How will the gang of friends fare? JS

FILM OF THE DAY

The Gambler

9.00pm Film4
Mark Wahlberg steps into James Caan's shoes in a swaggering, if occasionally crass, remake of the 1974 crime thriller about a high-roller on the skids. Brie Larson and Jessica Lange are among the co-stars. See page 32

NOTHING BUT A DREAMER
Are Alma Nuthall's plans realistic?

Alma's Not Normal

10.00pm BBC2

COMEDY Sophie Willan, the inaugural recipient of the BBC's Caroline Aherne writing bursary, repays the investment with a terrific comedy pilot about three generations of women in Bolton/Bury. The youngest is Alma (Willan), to whom we're introduced as she cycles uphill – unwisely wearing a pink fake-fur coat – to a jobseeker's appointment, at which she declares she'd like to be given acting work.

She's a dreamer who, for lack of opportunity, has never got close to any dream coming true: right now she's wondering how she'll pay her rent, having been dumped by her awful boyfriend. As Alma erratically attempts to sort herself out, a potty-mouthed, plain-speaking show develops around her and her unreliable support network.

Siobhan Finneran and Lorraine Ashbourne as Alma's mum and nan, and Jayde Adams as confident best friend Leanne, all make their characters zing. JS

Stranger than fiction

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This beautifully made film concerns the true-life romance between fading Hollywood beauty Gloria Grahame (a film noir icon in classics like The Big Heat) and jobbing actor Peter Turner in 1970s Britain. Based on the memoir by Turner (played here by Jamie Bell), this witty and moving drama is anchored by a fearless performance from Annette Bening, who displays all of the ageing Grahame's chutzpah without ever resorting to impersonation. JEREMY ASPINALL

Now on Prime

The Current War ★★★★★ Amazon Prime

The race for the electrification of the USA in the late-19th century is the focus of this drama, which sees rivals battling for superiority. Benedict Cumberbatch brings his usual intensity to inventor Thomas Edison, who's up against the imposing figure of Michael Shannon as business magnate George Westinghouse. The film doesn't pick favourites, and there's egotism and greed on both sides. But without any one man to root for, the staid results prove intriguing rather than electrifying. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Mary Poppins/Mary Poppins Returns from 3.20pm Sky Musicals

Here's a spit-spot double serving of magic with everybody's favourite supernanny. Julie Andrews sings up a storm in the 1964 original ("Just a spoonful of sugar"), while Emily Blunt swoops in for the sequel, this time minding the adorable children of a grown-up Michael (Ben Whishaw). JOSH WINNING

The Poison Squad

8.35pm PBS America

FACTUAL Here's a comprehensive (it's two hours long) guide to the life of US chemist and campaigner Dr Harvey Wiley, who, at the dawn of the 20th century, ensured Americans weren't being steadily poisoned.

Mass industrialisation and urbanisation led to the rapid growth of processed food made by huge new companies, who loaded their products with preservatives and colourings. Wiley saw that these substances were toxic and lobbied for legislation: among his allies in a long battle were soldiers, feminists, and a group of volunteers in a rather intimidating experiment.

The Trouble with Maggie Cole

9.00pm ITV

COMEDY DRAMA The trouble with The Trouble with Maggie Cole is that it started well as an appealing comedy drama, but lost its way after pulling itself in all kinds of directions. The final episode has romance and comic business, which is fine, but then we are plunged into some tame and silly gangster action which jars with everything else.

At least there is a proper ending, and we find out who rolls across the bonnet of a speeding car in the pouring rain, something that's been teased since episode one.

As Maggie (Dawn French) eases herself back into public life, everyone attends the village fête. Which is fateful. ALISON GRAHAM

Save Me Too

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Though Lennie James's drama is harrowing and frequently incredibly bleak, its language is often beautiful, as James (also the writer) occasionally, with an elegant turn of a sentence here and there, throws a dim light into the darkness.

After the stark news delivered at the end of the opening instalment, the second episode unfurls entirely in flashback as the events of a dreadful day build to an inevitable conclusion.

Nelly (James) attends the trial of Gideon (Adrian Edmondson), the man he is convinced stole his daughter. Giving evidence, the young woman he rescued, Grace, is raw and frightened. In the gallery, Gideon's wife (the excellent Lesley Manville) is wondering about the man she married. AG

PICK OF THE DAY The Countess and the Russian Billionaire 9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Now and then a documentary opens a door to a world we rarely see. This ushers us into the impossibly wealthy, seemingly enchanted lives of Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, Russian oligarch Sergei Pugachev and their three children. At their elegant Chelsea house, Tolstoy shows off her handbag collection ("My weakness is Chanel") and describes how she shipped radiators from one house to another by private jet.

The couple have a country estate, a château in Nice, a beachfront villa in St Bart's, and so on – it's a life throbbing with luxury. But this was 2015, when the crew started filming. What unfolds from there is dark and chilling, a very modern tragedy of the super-rich, as Pugachev's falling out with the Russian regime – where he was once known as "Putin's banker" – escalates.

The climactic scene where Alexandra is ambushed live on Russian television is brutal to watch.

DAVID BUTCHER

Being a nation of animal lovers, we're always hit hard when a beloved soap pet dies. There are some who've never recovered from the poisoning of Wellard in 2008, while others are still brought to tears by memories of Schmeichel's demise in 2011. Now, Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) is set to leave us traumatised once again as Emma takes little Eccles for a walk, only to realise that she's not herself. A visit to the vet then reveals that the lovable dog has an inoperable tumour.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Canny Corrie fans may have twigged that something was wrong with Eccles when she was seen looking lackadaisical in Ken's lap the other week. With the pair having forged a close bond this last decade, you can expect the Barlow family patriarch to be devastated by news of the border terrier's death. After all, they have been through a lot together – Eccles even had to witness some of randy Ken's canal-side trysts with Martha Fraser, the poor thing.

Suffragettes with Lucy Worsley

iPlayer (expires today)

Originally shown in 2018 to mark the centenary of the first women winning the right to vote, this chunky 90-minute documentary features campaigners' diaries, newsreel footage and some memorable still photographs, as well as Lucy Worsley in costume, lurking within dramatised scenes. The history of the long suffrage campaign includes sickening details of how female protesters were treated by male law enforcement.

Mister Winner

10.00pm BBC2

SITCOM There's something so endearing and satisfying about simple visual comedy when it's done well. This episode of Matt Morgan's comedy, starring Spencer Jones as a hopelessly gauche loser, is a peach. Leslie's embarrassingly randy mum has an aggravatingly smooth playboy of a boyfriend, but he's got good contacts: he scores Leslie an interview for a senior management position at a flash law firm.

We know our man will be found out soon enough and, despite making every effort to get it right this time, Leslie immediately makes a basic mistake. But it's an error that, if he's lucky and goes to some elaborate lengths, he might just be able to get away with. JS

Feel Good

10.00pm C4

COMEDY So far, Lisa Kudrow (yes, the Lisa Kudrow) as Mae's nightmarish mother has been peripheral. Every now and then she video-calls Mae to say something appalling from the other side of the Atlantic – until now.

This time, she gets in touch to tell Mae her cat has died and oddly, fails to mention that she's in Blackpool. "Do not disagree with my mother about anything," Mae warns George as they head for a rendezvous by the sea involving brutal truths and a painful ghost train ride.

Kudrow is brilliant as an overbearing monster who thinks everyone else is rude. But she has some bleak insights too, warning George: "You're just a mirror [Mae] is holding up to herself." DAVID BUTCHER

Hitmen

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY Traditionally at this point in a series, sitcoms deploy a "bottle episode" to save money and speed up production: an instalment where it's just the main characters, trapped in one location. This is almost that. Jamie and Fran (Mel Giedroyc and Sue Perkins) have a drug dealer they're supposed to kill, but they're also looking after a dangerous dog, and they're all in the van together. A flurry of cocaine and a flash of canine teeth later, and nobody's going anywhere in a hurry. That leaves plenty of time for back-and-forth between Mel and Sue, whose chemistry is of course a delight.

A key question that pops up tonight: can ketamine be used in lieu of paracetamol? JS

DING DING

Dominic Chinae and Jay Blades are all aboard with Barbara Walker

The Repair Shop

8.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Barbara brings in a rusty toy double-decker Glasgow bus, bought by her parents in the early 1960s to help her brother, who has cerebral palsy, learn to walk. There's often a moment in these repair stories when the dedication of it all gets to you slightly and for me it's watching Dom spray-painting the tiny seats from inside the bus, which he's removed and strung up in a little line across his part of the workshop.

Then again, you may be more moved by the work Kirsten does on an alabaster light fitting that comes to her as a box of smithereens. We see how she goes about fixing it, every stage, but the result is so good, it feels as if there's been some cunning sleight of hand: as the owner gasps, "I just don't know how you could have done that."

8.00 Great British Menu

Northern Ireland regional finalists in the past two years, Alex Greene and Shauna Froydenlund return to the fray this year, joined by newcomers Paul Cunningham – a keen forager – and advocate of local produce Leigh Ferguson. Paul's starter is an ambitious ode to Alice's Adventures in Wonderland in the form of a duck crumble with rhubarb, while Leigh honours Enid Blyton's The Enchanted Wood with a mushroom panna cotta served with artichokes and hazelnuts. But it's the fish course that will decide which one of the four goes home tonight. (S) (HD)

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

9.00 The Countess and the Russian Billionaire

RT The secret world of Alexandra Tolstoy and her partner, Russian oligarch and billionaire Sergei Pugachev, is documented over a period of five years as he fears losing his fortune – and his life. Pugachev once owned one of the biggest private banks in Russia, gaining the moniker "Putin's banker", but in the same year he married Alexandra, 2008, the global financial crash led to its collapse. With a billion-dollar loan from the Russian Government failing to bail the bank out, Pugachev fled to London with his family and now lives in an extraordinary world populated by bodyguards, death threats and lawsuits. See p86. Executive producers Lucy Hillman and Sam Whittaker; Editors Gregg Morgan and Chris Dale Repeated tomorrow 11.15pm (S) (AD) (HD)

Binge the seafaring saga

Pirates of the Caribbean Disney+

The new Disney+ platform offers box-sets galore, including all five instalments of this rum-glugging adventure series. It's a pirate's life for Johnny Depp, whose panda-eyed Jack Sparrow swaggers and shrieks through the lot of them. The first film, Curse of the Black Pearl, remains the visually sumptuous best, while the sequels variously pit Cap'n Jack against Geoffrey Rush's Barbossa, Bill Nighy's Davy Jones, Ian McShane's Blackbeard and Javier Bardem's Salazar. All together now: "Yo ho, yo ho..." JOSH WINNING

Mad Max ★★★★★ 9.00pm TCM

Despite its low budget, this landmark classic is a highly inventive, violent action picture that spawned a franchise, with Mel Gibson at his moody best playing a near-mute cop who's trying to survive in a bleak and desolate future. What this vigilante fantasy lacks in repartee it makes up for in rip-roaring spectacle and terrific stunts. And making his debut feature, director George Miller exhibits a striking visual style, particularly with his use of fender-level cameras that help crank up the excitement. ALAN JONES

Leap of faith

First Reformed ★★★★★ Netflix

A recent arrival on Netflix, Paul Schrader's powerfully restrained drama stars Ethan Hawke as a self-medicating priest who reaches a crossroads in his life. When a church-goer (Amanda Seyfried) asks him to counsel her eco-activist husband, the cleric is forced to question not only his own conscience but also the Church itself. ANDREW COLLINS

THEY'RE BACK
Craig Charles, Robert Llewellyn, Danny John-Jules and Chris Barrie return

PICK OF THE DAY Red Dwarf: the Promised Land 9.00pm Dave

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Now here's a treat, exploding out of the schedules like a supernova. A feature-length outing of the sci-fi sitcom, packed with verbal and visual gags. Not only does it delve back into the series' origins, explaining the set-up for newcomers, it also really does recall the glory days.

We're reminded of how the quarrelsome quartet of the eponymous mining ship got together: scuzzy last living human Dave Lister (Craig Charles), the pedantic hologram of his bunkmate Arnold Rimmer (Chris Barrie), Cat (Danny John-Jules), a creature evolved from Lister's pregnant pet, and service mechanoid Kryten (Robert Llewellyn). Now, descendants of Cat's people (felix sapiens) turn up and idolise Lister, but are pursued by a feral leader (Ray Fearon) who promises death to all felines who worship anyone but him...

Writer/director Doug Naylor captures the magic of Dwarf's heyday via the trademark bants and insults, in a caper with an epic feel to it, some decent effects and even a touch of pathos. There are nods to sci-fi classics (the 2001 reference is a beauty) and moments to draw applause from the studio audience – just like we used to hear. Fun in the sun, indeed. MARK BRAXTON

How to Make: the Toothbrush

8.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY It's endlessly fascinating seeing how everyday objects have evolved over time. When Dr Zoe Laughlin roots around the archives of the Dental Association, she discovers badger brush, silver toothbrushes and a "chew stick", similar to what would have been used in 3500 BC.

But she's not so impressed with the brushes on sale today, questioning whether their innovations are just marketing spiel and worrying about all their plastic. She wants to make a sustainable brush and toothpaste – and her materials range from birch sticks and a towel for the brush to glass for the paste. Try selling that, Mr Colgate! DAVID CRAWFORD

Noughts + Crosses

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA In the end, a powerful concept and an atmospheric production haven't been quite enough. The race-reversal drama had strong moments but flat scripts and a meandering structure have made it hard to love. They have also let down a good cast – notably the charismatic Masali Baduza as Sephy and Paterson Joseph as her father, Kamal, now Albion's prime minister.

When the Liberation Militia decide to kidnap Sephy, it's down to her disillusioned lover Callum, of course, to betray her with a kiss. "She's nothing to me," he assures his comrades, but we suspect otherwise. Meanwhile Kamal is forced to bark at underlings, "I'm the prime minister! Find her!" DAVID BUTCHER

Gordon, Gino and Fred: American Road Trip

9.00pm ITV

TRAVEL With all the farting, crude jokes, boasting and horseplay, you'd be forgiven for thinking the Three Amigos are daft teenage lads on a stag weekend rather than mature and responsible adults. They're driving – well, swerving all over the road, actually – around California, Arizona and Nevada, trying out fishing (not successfully), gambling (even less so) and cattle herding (surprisingly not bad).

They end up at Gordon Ramsay's LA mansion, where the chef's mum sees more than she expected of Gino D'Acampo and Fred Sirieix in the swimming pool. Yes, the machismo and innuendoes are childish, but it still made me laugh. JANE RACKHAM

The Mum Who Got Tourette's

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY This film takes us to Bedfordshire, where Simon and Elizabeth are the nice, normal parents of three kids in a lovely middle-class village. Just after her 40th birthday, however, Elizabeth developed Tourette syndrome and now involuntarily peppers their daily lives with awkward obscenities.

Early on, Simon gives us permission to chuckle, but their light-heartedness becomes more remarkable when we learn that the syndrome, a hereditary condition, has in the past given them cause for serious worry. In the end it's a downright inspirational portrait of how families share burdens. JACK SEALE

Scheduling changes following the suspension of filming across soapland means that there are no new episodes of our favourite evening shows airing on a Thursday. But there are hidden gems to be found: archive episodes of Hollyoaks (7.00pm E4), EastEnders (1.00pm Drama), Emmerdale (1.45pm ITV3) and Coronation Street (2.50pm ITV3) are all available.

And today's classic Corries are a nice reminder of simpler times, featuring, as they do, the 1995 debut of Tracy Shaw as Maxine, salon cohort of Angela Griffin's Fiona (pictured). She arrives acting all bubbly and adorable, little knowing that eight years later she'd be brutally murdered by Richard Hillman.

Doctors (1.45pm BBC1), meanwhile, continues in the afternoons, with today's visit to Letherbridge finding Daniel, Valerie and Izzie operating under the cover of darkness as their plan to save the birds sees them cutting the netting on the trees in the car park.

iPlayer (ep 1 expires today)

Ian Hislop's 2014 series hasn't become any less relevant in the intervening years. He presents a guide not to our history itself, but to our long history of hankering after a past that doesn't really exist; of nostalgia for an imaginary paradise lost. A fear of modernity and a conviction that the world was better just before we were born are, Hislop thoughtfully argues, part of the national character. Episode one looks at King Arthur and King Alfred.

The Great Big Dig: History in Your Back Garden

9.00pm More4

HISTORY If Outnumbered's Hugh Dennis knocked on your door and asked if he and some friends could dig up your back garden, how would you respond? The residents of Florence Road in Maidstone, Kent are very obliging and soon, small teams of archaeologists are lifting up lawns and digging up the soil beneath. "Don't dig behind that pot," says one resident, Babs. "My chinchilla's there."

So what's brought the experts to this ordinary street on a small plateau above the river Medway? The remains of a Roman bathhouse, found at the top of the road when a pub was demolished. Discovering what else might be there becomes a true community effort. GILL CRAWFORD

The Undateables

10.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT Finding the right partner can be difficult in so many different ways. For Michael, a 21-year-old fine arts student who's just come back home – to a beautiful house, by the way, near Penzance, Cornwall – after his first year away at university, the worries around dating are the familiar ones. He's never been on a date and is full of nerves and optimism in equal measure.

Meanwhile in Surrey, Zena is also looking to start her dating career, since her 30th birthday is looming. She's got confidence issues of a different kind: can she find someone who's as bold, funny and energetic as she is? Bonus points if they like show tunes, preferably sung by Shirley Bassey on second-hand vinyl. JS

Breeders

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA Breeders is evolving into something more than it was. To begin with it felt like a sparky, black-edged sitcom about parenting, couched in rampantly filthy language (in a good way). But it has added layers to become a gritty relationship comedy – and still filthy. It's like a romcom that takes place ten years after most romcoms have ended, with everyone older, wiser and tetchier.

Anger is at the heart of this week's story, as Ally tries to say a long goodbye to her father. Coming into his own is Darren, her silkily obnoxious boss played by Patrick Baladi: they all spend a weekend at his stunning Wiltshire house, but it doesn't pan out as they hoped. DAVID BUTCHER

FULL SPEED AHEAD

Dynamo returns to our screens with a new series full of typically mind-bending tricks

Dynamo Beyond Belief

ENTERTAINMENT New series

The great street magic maestro returns with a thoughtful three-part series. It's effectively a comeback, after he emerged from a crippling health crisis that saw him diagnosed with reactive arthritis connected to the Crohn's disease he suffered from as a teenager. "I could get sucked into the darkness or choose to embrace it," he tells us amid flashbacks to his time convalescing and animated pages from the notebooks he filled with ideas.

But we don't come to Dynamo for deep quotes; we want disconcerting tricks that leave members of the public reeling away in panicky laughter, and there are plenty. In Tokyo, he balances sushi utensils in a way that defies physics and makes a geisha giggle. In Dubai, he replaces a sandcastle with insects, creepily, and best of all, in Moscow he drives a taxi down the streets at speed, blindfolded – and backwards.

8.00 Coronavirus: How Clean Is Your House?

At a time when much of the UK population is staying at home, this documentary explores how safe it is behind closed doors. Two families have their houses forensically swept for fingerprints to find evidence of what they may unwittingly be spreading. It also looks at how the virus can travel indoors from the outside, and shows which household products could help to stop covid-19 in its tracks.

Director/Producer Ali May (S) (HD)

9.00 The Mum Who Got Tourette's

RT Mum of three Elizabeth is a stay-at-home housewife. Soon after her 40th birthday, she developed Tourette syndrome, a neurological condition that can cause involuntary tics. This film follows Elizabeth and her family over the course of a busy summer, including a holiday in Cornwall and meeting her son's new girlfriend, where every triumph and tribulation is amplified by the unpredictable impact of her condition. See p96.

7.30 The Wonder of Animals

Chris Packham learns how foxes have been able to adapt and thrive in a world with an increasing human population. Chris discusses a theory that the creatures use the Earth's magnetic field to determine the location of their prey. Director/Producer Lara Bickerton (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

8.00 How to Make: the Toothbrush

RT 2/3. Designer and materials engineer Dr Zoe Laughlin sets out to make a sustainable toothbrush, seeking inspiration at Sweden's low-impact mega-factory Tepe, where handles are made from sugar cane bio-based plastic. She also looks at bespoke production techniques using 3D laser sintering and dips into the Dental Association's archives before exploring the possibilities for toothpaste using bio-active glass. Lessons learnt, she creates her own eco-friendly, alternative toothbrush and paste. See page 96.

Series producer Nick Freand Jones; Exec producers Richard Bright and John Das (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

10.00 Dawn French Live: 30 Million Minutes

A recording of the comedian's critically acclaimed one-woman show, filmed during its final West End run in October, 2016. In 30 Million Minutes, Dawn takes her audience on a journey through her life's experiences, detailing irksome tribulations, crucial lessons that she has learnt along the way, and things "she knows to be true". With a sharp eye for comic detail and an ear for the absurdities of life, Dawn draws on her personal and professional personas to offer an alternative view to modern living.

Directors Michael Grandage, Ed Bye; Executive producers Lucy Ansbro, Maureen Vincent (R) (S) (HD)

11.55 Arena: Loretta Lynn – Still a Mountain Girl

The celebrated singer/songwriter has sold over 45 million records worldwide and has won more awards than any other female country music star. This documentary looks back at the long and extraordinary life and career of the "coal miner's daughter" from Kentucky.

Director Vikram Jayanti Executive producer Anthony Wall (R) (S) (HD)

Monsoon Wedding ★★★★★ All4 FREE TO VIEW

Mira Nair's film is set around the lavish nuptials between the eldest daughter of an affluent Punjabi family and a US-based engineer. While the emphasis is firmly on fun, there's still plenty of social comment to add backbone to the comedy. Nair celebrates the wisps of tradition that hold together Indian society while also exposing its less salubrious facets, drawing vigorous performances from an impeccable ensemble cast and bathing the action in an irresistible Holly/Bollywood glow. DAVID PARKINSON

Celebrate with Kristen

Charlie's Angels ★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies/DVD

New to rent this week, this post-#MeToo update of the 1970s TV series from writer/director Elizabeth Banks follows a new generation of Angels (Naomi Scott, Ella Balinska, Kristen Stewart) as they try to stop dangerous technology falling into the wrong hands. This very modern makeover neatly evolves the concept, but these Angels deserved a more dynamic mission for their debut. Of the new trio, it's only a wisecracking Stewart – celebrating her 30th birthday today – who stands out. JAMES LUXFORD

HEAVEN ON EARTH
Alexander Armstrong joins historian Carol Harris at Hailes Abbey
in the Cotswolds

PICK OF THE DAY Alexander Armstrong's Heavenly Gardens 1.40pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY The six gardens, steeped in faith and spirituality, that Alexander Armstrong visits to mark Easter weekend may be closed to the public for the foreseeable future but at least we can enjoy their beauty and serenity at a screen's distance.

He is starting his journey at Pluscarden Abbey, a Catholic Benedictine monastery near Elgin in Scotland, where for centuries the grounds have instilled a sense of tranquillity into visitors. The abbey is also well known for its vegetable plot, so Alexander helps pick apples and joins in with the singing of psalms. Meanwhile, Arit Anderson is at Sudeley Castle in the Cotswolds. It's the only private castle in England to have a queen buried within its grounds.

There was no preview available at the time of writing, but if Heavenly Gardens is anywhere near as beguiling as Monty Don's Paradise Gardens, it will provide much-needed balm to our souls. A second programme goes out on Easter Sunday. JANE RACKHAM

Miss Fisher and the Crypt of Tears

7.00pm Alibi

DRAMA Phryne is back in a feature-length adventure part-funded by her fans. And they certainly got their money's worth: in the opening 20 minutes alone, our glam 1920s detective has had four costume changes, run along the top of a moving train in Jerusalem and flown a plane over London.

It's all a rollicking blast and there are definite Indiana Jones influences on the mystery, which involves lost tribes, an ancient curse and a gigantic glinting emerald. Needless to say, star Essie Davis manages to look immaculate throughout, which is more than could ever be said for Indy.

DAVID BROWN

Joe Lycett's Got Your Back

8.00pm C4

CONSUMER Or, as it should be called, Hugo Boss's Got Your Back because, as his Twitter followers already know, Joe Lycett recently changed his name to that of the fashion brand in revenge for it being somewhat heavy-handed with small businesses and charities that use the word "boss" in their names.

A brilliant David and Goliath tactic, it shows that Lycett (or Boss if you prefer, although Bruce Springsteen might have the copyright on that) practises what he preaches when it comes to consumer issues.

He'll explain more tonight as well as tackling viewers' consumer problems with the help of Katherine Ryan and Mark Silcox. JR

Around the World by Train with Tony Robinson

8.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL Mexico isn't renowned for its rail system, but Tony Robinson gets lucky when he boards the El Chepe train on the west coast of Mexico: it's surprisingly luxurious and passes through magnificent scenery, neither of which he was expecting. En route to his final destination of LA, he stops off in Chihuahua and Juarez, does yoga next to the border – or Trump's "ghastly, metal and barbed wire obscenity" – and has a nippy encounter with a feisty little dog.

He's no Michael Portillo, although his colourful shirts give the latter's wardrobe a run for its money. JR

Pilgrimage: the Road to Istanbul

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY The final leg of this good-natured spiritual journey takes our celebrity pilgrims across Bulgaria and into Turkey. Some camping is called for, and watching Dom Joly wrestle with his tent is like seeing someone manhandle an angry swan.

Fatima Whitbread is glad to enter Turkey, since she has Turkish heritage via her birth parents. Meanwhile, Amar Latif is wrestling with the fact he has never admitted to his mother he no longer practises Islam (she will know now). The trip culminates with a Sufi service at a mosque in Istanbul, which Joly calls, "The most powerful religious thing I've ever seen." DAVID BUTCHER

I hope you're now getting used to Emmerdale's amended broadcast pattern; the thrice-weekly offering of Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 7.00pm means that ITV have enough supplies in the store cupboard to last until at least early summer.

Tonight, we'll see the usually moist-eyed Jamie display some Tate ruthlessness when he persuades Paddy to fire Belle (Eden Taylor-Draper, right).

Elsewhere, Mandy is insisting on planning Lydia's hen night, as well as Sam's stag. There aren't enough painkillers available in Yorkshire to soothe the hangovers that'll follow.

After little Oliver's lethargy became a feature of his birthday celebrations back in February in Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV), I started to suspect that the state of his health would soon be providing new drama. And so it turns out tonight, when the youngster has a fit, all of which results in Steve scooping up his son and dashing off in search of medical help... DAVID BROWN

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Anni Albers: a Life in Thread

iPlayer (expires today)

A delightful documentary from last year's Bauhaus season, telling its story in an agile half-hour. Anni Albers enrolled in the Bauhaus school in 1922 expecting to become a painter but was, like most of the female artists there, shunted into textiles instead. So she set about redefining the form, soon producing weaving work that constituted influential abstract art. We see how her whole life was spent refusing to let discrimination bring her down.

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA The emotionally charged Italian crime drama veers into melodrama as the tangled, poisonous web of family life surrounding the boy found murdered in a field north of Turin starts to unravel. Central to it all is scarred, corrupt cop Officer Alesso, who seems to be working to her own malevolent agenda.

As the boy's mother finds her world crashing around her, detective Valeria Ferro is drawn towards the damaged family, and the case offers her some salvation from her drug-induced stupor. Meanwhile, suspended commander Lombardi is sniffing around the case files for the murder of Valeria's mother – illegally, naturally – and makes a worrying discovery. DAVID CRAWFORD

Friday Night Dinner

10.00pm C4

COMEDY Who is the woman with Jackie waiting in the hall as Adam and Jonny arrive? Why, of course, it's Gibby (Sally Phillips), the au pair from Switzerland who looked after them when they were little – except neither of them remembers. Gibby is obsessed with using "the facilities" and cream teas with "the jam of the berries of the straw" – and she also seems strangely emotionally fragile.

It's agonising for everyone concerned and the premise for a beautifully odd confection of an episode, with detours into Martin's hopeless memory and boundless hunger. There's also some of the most delicious work yet from Mark Heap as twitchy neighbour Jim: yes, he's in like Flynn. DAVID BUTCHER

Bulletproof

10.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA Locations this week include several classic crime thriller standbys: a greyhound racing track, a bare-knuckle boxing match and the roof of a multi-storey car park. I'm guessing in the real world, senior detectives have never used car parks much in lieu of, say, booking a conference room at the station, but it happens on TV all the time.

Or at least it does in the cartoonish sort of cop show that Bulletproof excels at. But there's no shame in embracing the genre clichés if you do it with this much conviction and flair. This week, the lads are on the trail of an Afghanistan vet-turned-gun dealer. To track him down involves Pike (Ashley Walters) boxing, which he seems to relish. DAVID BUTCHER

ARE YOU SITTING COMFORTABLY?

The Graham Norton Show

9.00pm BBC1

CHAT SHOW Relocating the odd presenter or contributor hasn't proved too much of a challenge for many TV shows, but how will the nation's glitziest chat-fest cope in an age of webcam isolation and no studio audiences?

Graham Norton promises us that "the biggest stars and the best stories" will still be present as a new post-lockdown series begins tonight, in an earlier time slot and with a shorter running time.

While, understandably, nothing had been confirmed as RT went to press, there is a distinct possibility that viewers could get to see inside some celebrity houses, which should be great fun. Either way, we're told that we will definitely glimpse the homes of the odd viewer, because the Red Chair segment lives on, only this time with the storytellers sitting in their own armchairs. JACK SEALE

📺 Pokémon Detective Pikachu ★★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

The first live-action movie based on the trading-card phenomenon finds Detective Pikachu (a CGI creation voiced by Ryan Reynolds) helping a former Pokémon trainer (Justice Smith) find out what happened to his late policeman father. Goosebumps director Rob Letterman delivers a charming mystery with more than a passing resemblance to Who Framed Roger Rabbit?, and its fun moments far outweigh the flaws. JAMES LUXFORD

Off to the races

Steve McQueen: the Man & Le Mans ★★★

BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

How could a drama about motor racing starring Steve McQueen go wrong? But, in 1971, Le Mans was a critical and box-office failure. With access to behind-the-scenes footage and interviews with McQueen's ex-wife, this documentary shows how a labour of love turned into folly. Petrolheads will revel in the race sequences, but, like Le Mans itself, this watchable documentary could also have done with some judicious editing. JEREMY ASPINALL

Friday frights

47 Meters Down: Uncaged ★★★ Netflix

This inevitable sequel to 2017's low-budget shark-cage thriller traps teenage scuba divers in a submerged Mayan city that inconveniently houses a blind prehistoric sea monster. Returning director Johannes Roberts handles the hyperventilating shocks and air-pocket moments with skill. ANDREW COLLINS

Here's Johnnie!

Radio 2 DJ Johnnie Walker on sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll – and his brush with cancer

INTERVIEW BY GINNY DOUGARY

Sounds of the 70s

Sunday 3.00pm Radio 2/BBC Sounds

IT'S HARDLY ROCK 'N' ROLL – more Val Doonican than Mick Jagger – but they like it. Johnnie Walker is on the stage, as part of his Sounds of the 70s tour on the back of his Radio 2 show of the same name. A rangy figure – with just a hint of midriff thickening – skinny black jeans, camel thin cord shirt, boots. His style is that of a gentle raconteur – utterly relaxed, sauntering or sitting on a stool at the side of the band – with tales of meeting this or that rock legend: the famously surly Lou Reed hugging him for playing Walk on the Wild Side and helping to make it a hit; Les McKeown telling him off, quite recently, for being rude about the Bay City Rollers when their Bye Bye Baby was number one for six weeks in 1975.

In the no-frills dressing room of the White Rock Theatre in Hastings where we talk, Walker's rider is modest – green tea bags and a couple of supermarket sandwiches. He's more comfortable with monologues than dialogues, perhaps a by-product of his profession, and even tells me off for ruining his patter when I try to ask questions at inopportune moments – “You really know how to interrupt a flow, don't you?” – softening the reprimand with a laugh.

He suffers an interruption of his own a few weeks after we meet. The coronavirus outbreak claims his tour as a casualty, but the promoters hope to reschedule it for later this year and early next. “When we're finally able to go out on the road, it will be a joyful celebration of both the music and being together again,” says Walker.

What the postponement can't do is diminish his fondness for the 1970s. His Sunday show, recorded at his home studio, gets an audience of two million, and Walker thinks he knows why.

“Although there were some dark times politically, the three-day-week, rubbish piling up in the streets, listeners talk about how life was just so much more simple then... A lot of them are having their 60th birthdays now – so I think the music brings all those memories back, which is why the radio show works.”

‘I'm not sure I would have made it without her’

Born on 30 March 1945, he was christened Peter Dingley but his name was changed to Johnnie Walker with his first job on a station called Radio England, run by Americans who had appropriated (“nicked” he says baldly) jingles from the station they worked on in the States and wanted to save themselves a few bob.

His speech has a slight transatlantic twang on certain words, but he was born in Acocks Green on the outskirts of Birmingham. He does pick up accents, he says, and when he was 15 he took a summer holiday job in a factory and went back to school with a “serious Brummie accent, which didn't impress the teachers at school”.

School was an unhappy experience for him – “an all-boys public school, very old-fashioned, a lot of corporal punishment and I just didn't like surgery a year ago), spirituality and how crucial it is to have the support of someone who loves you. On their honeymoon in India he felt unwell and returned to be diagnosed with non-Hodgkin lymphoma, a cancer of the immune system: "All I could say to her when I got the news was, 'I'm so sorry, Tiggy,' because I felt so guilty – as though I had conned her. We're trying to start off on a new life together as a married couple and then right away I'm going to be a burden on her."

He had a 60 per cent chance of survival and was naturally frightened "of this experience into the great unknown". On his fourth chemotherapy session, his intestines burst open. He was rushed to hospital into surgery and was later told by the anaesthetist, "I lost you three times." When he was in the ward he saw a very elderly woman who had no one at home to look after her and all he could think of was how lucky he was to have Tiggy: "I'm not sure I would have made it without her love."

TEN YEARS LATER, he turned carer when Tiggy got breast cancer. He was able to advise her well, having had the experience of going through cancer treatment. One of the useful tips was that rather than suffer the profound disorientation of whole clumps of hair coming out in the shower, "a very strange feeling as though your body is falling to bits", he suggested that she get her hair shaved off (see overleaf). Walker bought a razor in preparation, then shaved Tiggy's hair off himself. There's a photograph of this event in her book about recovering from cancer: "I just thought she looked utterly beautiful. I said 'Forget Sinéad O'Connor, you just look so beautiful.'"

His interest in spiritual matters started when he was preparing to be confirmed at 14 and then, like many in the 1960s, he was searching for the Meaning of Life. Walker believes in life after death – "I think that there's this amazing other spirit world" – and although influenced by the Native American philosophy and culture, says that he has his own belief system.

The rebellious streak that manifested itself at school runs like a thread throughout his life. It was the head of Radio 1 telling him he couldn't keep "sprinkling" album tracks into the playlist of top 40 fodder – "The problem with you, Johnnie, is that you're too into the music, man" – that precipitated his move to California in 1976. His father died while he was working there on a radio station that gave him free rein musically. He was troubled ▷ the place at all. I got in with a rebellious gang and we went smoking behind the cycle sheds and that sort of thing." He has the distinction of leaving without a single O-level to his name. "Well, it was pretty much on purpose."

At one time, he said that his school days had left him feeling neurotic and ungrounded. But marrying his vivacious wife Tiggy in 2002 changed all that: "I feel very settled now and it's a lot to do with a good marriage. Tiggy's fantastic, with a wonderful personality and within 30 seconds of meeting her, I knew that she was very, very special. She has made a huge difference to my life."

Much of our conversation, led by him, turns to ill health (once a cancer sufferer, it's always perhaps in the back of the mind; he also had triple heart bypass

PICK OF THE WEEK

Ingenious

Monday–Friday 1.45pm Radio 4

As long as there have been redheads, there have been people with opinions about redheads. So speaks Kat Arney, and as the picture of the science writer and broadcaster (below) shows, she should know.

Arney's series is a deep dive into our genes, and given the responses to her colouring that she has encountered, the redhead gene is as good a place as any for her to start.

"Humans were fascinated by heredity way before we knew anything about genes, genetics or DNA," Arney says, and with all of us now required to think more about our bodies than we've maybe tended to, Arney has come along at the right time.

As well as the ginger gene, she considers four other genes: the milkshake gene (the gene that makes some people dairy-intolerant), the gene behind Alzheimer's, the breast cancer gene, and the cyclops gene, which relates to eye development.

Arney brings a light touch to bear on what could be quite a dense subject. This really is the very best of popular science. And who knew that there was a cluster of red-headed people living in deepest Russia – all genetically linked to their red-headed Celtic brethren.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Grey Gables is reopening its doors, but Oliver is still struggling with all that's happened. Despite Roy and Tracy proving to be a tower of strength, an encounter with Robert might well end up making him feeling worse. And all this before Roy pays a visit to the hospital...

Lilian recruits Freddie for support at the B&B, but with the weight of a confession still hanging heavy, will Freddie be able to cope – or is he set to betray a confidence and reveal all?

Meanwhile, the Grundys and Carters are planning the surprise party that Keira asked for, but it's touch and go as to whether Emma will be able to put her feelings to one side for the sake of her children. DAVID BROWN

True crime

Here are six of the best to stop you in your tracks

Criminal cases are often too complicated to get proper treatment in the newspapers. The devil is always in the detail, which is why true crime suits the podcast format so well. Here are six true-crime podcasts to get you started, with crimes that range from international swindles through political assassinations to sadly workaday murders. Each one is guaranteed to have you stopping in your tracks at least once and saying, “They did what?” And lots of them will have you thinking how amazing it is that you’d never heard this story before. There’s a whole world of diverting darkness out there, all of which can be easily summoned with a couple of clicks on your smartphone...

How to find a podcast You only need its name. Then simply type the name into Google and listen on your computer. Although most people listen to podcasts on smartphones via apps such as BBC Sounds, Apple Podcasts, Stitcher or Acast. If there isn’t one on your phone, you can download a free one from the web in seconds. Then search within the app for the podcast you want, “subscribe” to it, which doesn’t cost anything, and every time the podcast publishes a new episode, a new one pops up in your feed – listen to it at leisure.

PODCAST OF THE WEEK

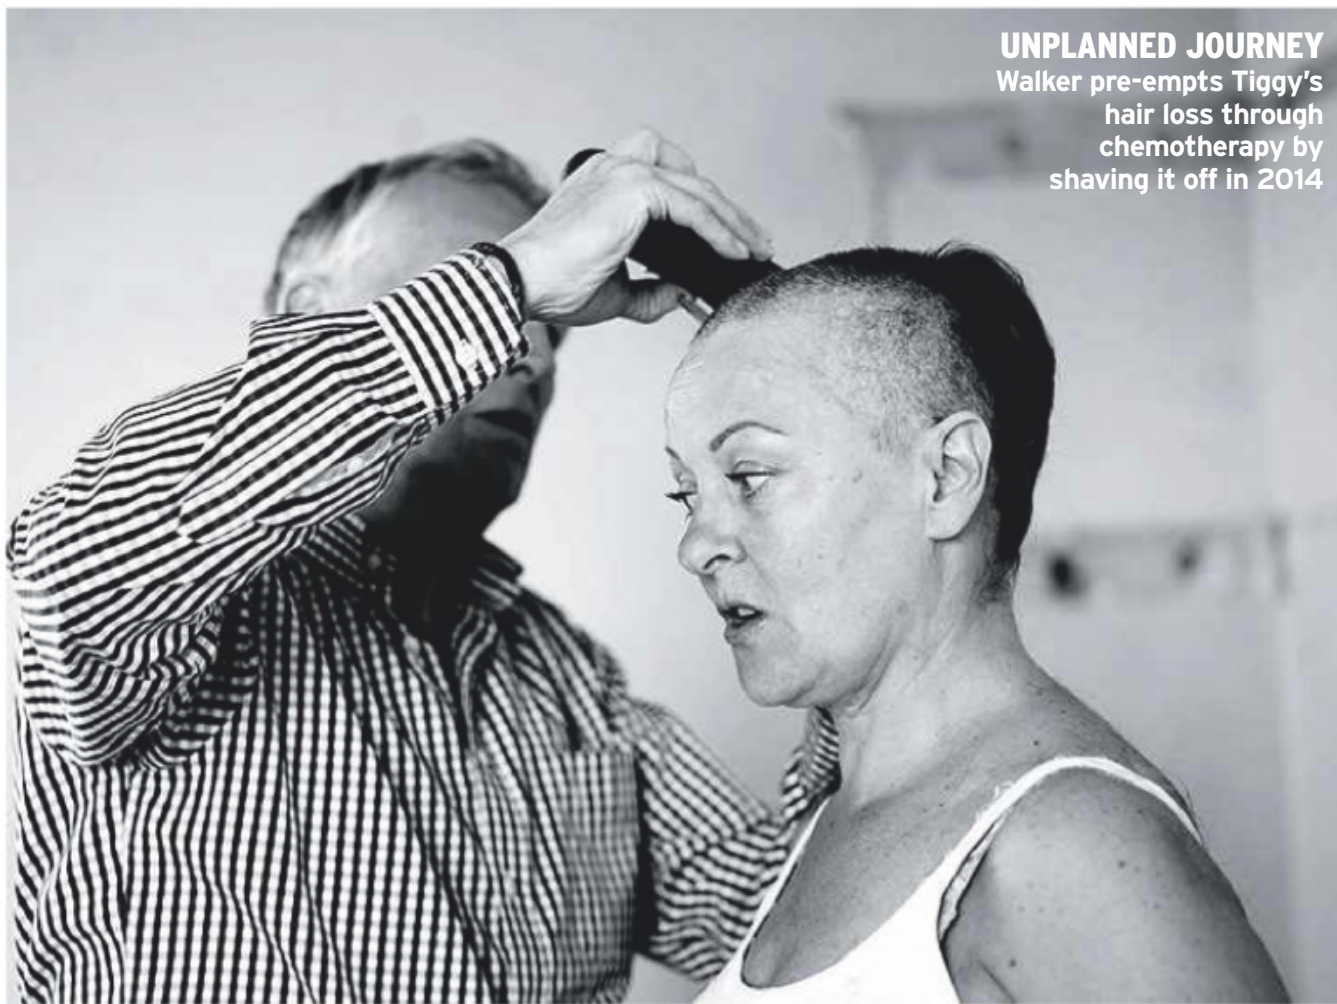

SERVING LIFE
Adnan Syed, who was convicted of the 1991 murder of Hae Min Lee

Serial

The boom in true-crime podcasts began in 2014 with this American production, which is so polished you might mistake it for fiction. Its first season sought to shed light on the 1999 murder of a high school student. What made Serial gripping is it didn’t set out to prove the guilt or innocence of the boyfriend who was convicted of the crime, instead putting the listeners in the position of the members of the jury, trying to decide who to believe.

UNPLANNED JOURNEY
Walker pre-empts Tiggy’s hair loss through chemotherapy by shaving it off in 2014

◁ that he had been unable to return to England to say goodbye. (He was skint and hadn’t sorted out his green card and was worried he wouldn’t be allowed back in, when his then wife and two children were in the States with him.) “But the relationship I had with him after he died was much better, in a way, than the one I had when he was alive – ha-ha-ha-ha,” he laughs.

At a certain point in his life, the real sex and drugs and rock ‘n’ roll lifestyle did kick in with threesomes and recreational drug use that turned into a full-on cocaine addiction. There have been hard times, such as being so broke in San Francisco that he and his son, Sam, were sleeping in the car. Periods of depression, his paternal grandfather took his own life, as did other close relations. His attempt to end his own life was botched when he couldn’t close the car window because of the pipe from the exhaust, and he remained stubbornly (and happily) resistant to the poisonous fumes, deciding in the end that he was making a foolish mistake.

IN 1999, HE was the subject of a News of the World sting and the reporters secretly filmed Walker snorting cocaine. The BBC suspended him from his drivetime show but he was reinstated mainly, he believes, because his listeners wrote in to support him in sufficient numbers to impress the management.

Caroline Flack’s suicide is on our minds when we meet and I wonder whether, after his experience, he blames the media. He says that social media where people can be “as mean and hateful as they want to be” behind anonymity is as much to blame, as well as ITV: “I wish Caroline Flack had had more support from ITV. I really think they should have supported her in the same way that they did Ant from Ant and Dec.”

Is it that women are worth less than men? “No, I think it was down to the financial value of the individual. That’s the reality. Ant and Dec’s programmes earn a huge amount of income.”

Since the Bay City Rollers were his idea of “musical garbage”, as he said on air, much to the distress of their many fans (he was unrepentant), what are his favourite singles from the period? He cheats and picks one from 1965 – Otis Redding’s Respect, which Redding wrote although Aretha Franklin’s version is the better known. “But Otis Redding’s has such power, such a great driving beat and I remember I heard it in a pub near Birmingham that used to do disco weekends and I thought, ‘Some way, somehow, I’m going to earn my living being involved with music.’”

Final question. He’s interviewed a lot of rock gods, so was it ever a case of “Never meet your heroes?” “Well, I’ve never been completely disappointed” – we both hoot at this – “but some of them did keep me waiting for an awful long time.”

The Assassination

In this well-produced BBC World Service production, Owen Bennett Jones takes you inside the power elite of Pakistan to shed light on who could have been behind the 2007 assassination of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto. Between the warring clans, religious fundamentalists, freelance hotheads, state institutions and the 20 families who run that country, there's no shortage of candidates. Why anyone would bother to read political fiction when there are true stories as complex as this is anyone's guess.

The Missing Cryptoqueen

The story of how the slippery Dr Ruja Ignatova managed to persuade people all over the world to invest their savings in a wholly theoretical new currency called OneCoin is in some senses as old as the hills. A glamorous, charismatic, ruthless con artist targets investors desperate to believe in a magically better future. At the same time it's a warning about the perils of our connected modern world. Georgia Catt and Jamie Bartlett set out to track her down.

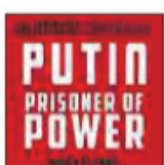

The Harvey Weinstein Trial: Unfiltered

Irish journalists Phelim McAleer and Ann McElhinney had the bright idea of going through the transcriptions of the evidence given in court during the recent sex offences trial of the Hollywood mogul and getting actors to perform key exchanges. What you will hear probably won't change your views about Weinstein but it's a reminder of how even the most apparently open-and-shut case can teeter on the edge of falling apart and also how Hollywood goes about its business.

They Walk among Us

George Orwell said the English liked nothing better after their Sunday lunch than to curl up on the sofa and read about a good murder. Orwell's murders had to take place against the familiar background of Blighty; he would have liked this podcast, the work of husband-and-wife team Benjamin and Rosanna Fitton, because they similarly concentrate on home-grown crimes, hence the title. Orwell suggested most English murders were about sex, money and respectability. The Fittons would probably agree.

Putin: Prisoner of Power

In Russia it might be a bit risky to list this under true crime, but how else do you explain how one civil servant, who lived the first part of his life in obscurity, came to own a vast, populous, energy-rich country and to twist its political system so that he owned it in perpetuity? It's a story that no airport novel would dare invent, told here by McMafia author Misha Glenny and available via Audible.

PADDY O'CONNELL

Dedication...

That's what you need – especially now

I love an acronym – as does that proportion of the population that listens to Radio 2. Do you remember what Terry Wogan's devoted listeners were called? Terry's Old Geezers, of course. Or TOGS. So inevitably, that other Radio 2 favourite Paul O'Grady became POG. Although it probably all began with a PROG (as in Jimmy Young and "the JY Prog").

So, imagine my delight when I stepped in to host Radio 2's brand-new radio emergency show All Request Sunday, and I discovered it was known by those in the know as ARS. ARS is on air on a Sunday evening long after I've hosted BH on R4 following EP on R2 only because POG is not. Are you keeping up?

Like millions of us, I've been listening to Paul O'Grady since he started on Radio 2. He's among my all-time favourites since I tuned in as a boy when the frequencies changed back in the 1970s. He's warm, he's funny, he's great company, but most of all he's totally genuine. His cackle as he fights with his producer, Malcolm Prince, is exactly the tonic the nation needs.

But POG has had to switch off. It's a national emergency. He's been doing this for a few weeks to follow the health guidelines to self-isolate. This voluble man of the people has been forced to fall silent, in good health, but in isolation.

Now, I have long been a bloke R2 turn to when all else fails. I've been the stunt double for Graham Norton, Jeremy Vine, Zoe Ball, Chris Evans, Ken Bruce, Jo Whiley, and many more. I've even been Vanessa Feltz. I'm not that convincing, but like Vanessa I know how to show up.

Which is how last week I became the temporary host of ARS. Helped by loyal producer Malcolm, and an audio boost from POG himself, who sent a voice message to his millions of listeners imploring them to be kind and not switch off. Boosted by POG's showbiz sparkle, we opened the airwaves to requests and dedications from millions of families separated by social distancing and a Mother's Day lockdown.

We nearly broke the system. Messages came in from listeners cut off from mums, dads, children and more. People sent radio love letters to their partners. One man was alone in a boat on Loch Lomond, "self-isolating and self-intoxicating". A daughter requested the song her late dad sang to her mum. Producer Bridget Apps teared up. I had something in my eye, too.

It was only a few days later I realised that we had travelled back to the future. For years one of the network's hit Sunday shows was Family Favourites. Now it was back, only called something else (ARS). Well, we had requests for isolated 90-year-old ladies in care homes, we heard from paramedics on shift who couldn't see their families, we heard from a Belfast driver who'd just taken a coach full of nurses to work who told us he must now self-isolate but before he disappeared, he wanted a record.

All of us who listen to the radio know what makes it great. There's nothing quite like the feeling of a dedication. You wait for your own chance for a request while you hear all the songs you hate. But you are totally connected, in the moment. Just as the UK has been asked to lock down, radio doesn't just throw open the windows, it throws the bolt on self-isolation – for your ears at least.

Best of all, amid the poignant messages and sweet sentiment, was the inevitable sense of humour the British tend to reveal in times like these. All Request Sunday may indeed spell ARS, but one listener sent us an anonymous text with a proposed new name – All Request Sunday Evening.

I don't need to spell it out. But it's the spirit that will keep us all going long after POG is back where he belongs – on air and in your ears on Sunday nights.

Return to Vegas: a Musical Drama

3.00pm Radio 4

Roland Gift (above), front man for Fine Young Cannibals, possessed one of the most distinctive soul voices of the 1980s. He remains in fine fettle in his verse drama (interspersed with Gift songs old and new) in which he's a pop star jailbird bequeathed a working men's club. Gift envisaged the project first as a film then a play. It's unlikely to have worked as either. But its poetic, almost classical, ambitions – a long way from TS Eliot but not William McGonagall either – suit radio rather well. Recorded at Gerry's, a theatrical hang-out in London's Soho.

Drama: The Garrick Year

3.00pm Radio 4
What a treat. This dramatisation of Margaret Drabble's second novel, published in 1964, will surely have readers reaching for her full back catalogue. The lot of women in the Swinging Sixties is seen through the eyes and considerable mind of Emma (Melody Grove), mother to two children under two, who follows her unthinking husband and his big career as an actor to the provinces for a role in The White Devil. When she meets the gravel-voiced director Wyndham Farrar (Tom Burke), she wakes up to the possibility that something is missing in her life. FIONA HUGHES

Private Passions

12 noon Radio 3
Having ushered in the past 27 New Years as host of BBC TV's annual Hootenanny and fronted a record-breaking 54 series of Later... with Jools Holland, the Blackheath-born "king of boogie-woogie piano" shares his life-long love of classical music with Michael Berkeley, revealing a deep-rooted passion for Bach as well as for vintage recordings by the likes of Kathleen Ferrier and Isobel Baillie. MARK PAPPENHEIM

6.45 Sunday Feature: Wordsworth - Poet of the People

Ahead of Tuesday's 250th anniversary of the birth of William Wordsworth (1770-1850), Jenny Uglow looks at the poet's response to the Industrial Revolution and contrasts his view with that of Adam Smith, the Enlightenment moral philosopher and father of modern economics. Uglow visits the Lake District and finds that far from hills and dales empty except for sheep, the countryside that Wordsworth knew was rapidly industrialising with mills and canals, quarries and ironworks. But while Wordsworth lamented the end of small-farm self-sufficiency, Adam Smith saw the potential of industrialisation. Producer Susan Marling

6.35 Natural Histories

Fly. Brett Westwood explores how flies that live close to us – houseflies, bluebottles, fruit flies – have buzzed in our imagination but have also taught us much about who we are. A scholar of literature, a genetic investigator, a naturalist, a forensic entomologist and a plain fly-lover come together to talk flies: Steve Connor, Peter Lawrence, Peter Marren, Martin Hall, and Erica McAlister. The readers are Anton Lesser and Niamh Cusack.

Today's Choices

Cosmic Quest

2.15pm Radio 4 Extra
The epic-scale series Cosmic Quest did for astronomy what A History of the World in 100 Objects later did for humankind. Its scope is – sorry – universal, encompassing writings on the cosmos from all eras and cultures. Today we begin with structures such as pyramids and stone circles, which suggest that thousands of years ago “the sky was as important to humanity as events on the Earth”. In 30 weeks’ time we end with the perennial question “Are we alone?” The series is being repeated as a tribute to its wonderfully engaging presenter Heather Couper (above), who died in February.
DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

The Untold

11.00am Radio 4
Coronavirus has led to a great flowering of the volunteer spirit. The Untold, returning today for a new series, has been quick off the mark in finding a story that illustrates the urge to help others in need, drawing on a the example of a relationship that came about through the organisation OnHand, which matches volunteers to older adults.

12.04pm American Dirt

1/10. Massacre. Yolanda Vazquez reads from Jeanine Cummins's heart-stopping and heart-rending novel following a mother and son, on the run from Mexican drug cartels. Vivid, visceral, and gripping, the novel brings into sharp focus the harrowing experience of thousands of migrants who cross the US-Mexico border each year. It begins with Lydia and Luca cowering in their bathroom to the sound of gunshots outside. They know that their happy family life in Acapulco is about to change for ever. Abridged by Richard Hamilton.

Producer Justine Willett Repeated 10.45pm

Today's Choices

Ellie Taylor's Safe Space

6.30pm Radio 4
 "Having a baby has ruined my life," says comedian and actor Ellie Taylor (above), and being granted a "safe space" by Radio 4 where she and the audience can air controversial thoughts and feelings, she wants to know how many people agree with this sentiment. Just ten per cent at the start of the show, but will this figure alter after she presents her "evidence"? Her daughter, though loved, is like a miniature Piers Morgan (always the centre of attention) and a wasp at a picnic (bloody irritating), says Taylor. The controversy is pretty harmless, as are the laughs – which, just like babies, are unpredictable..

JANE ANDERSON

Drama: The Will

2.15pm Radio 4
 An original plot involving a dying father and his will contrives to put two adult sisters together for the first time – Angie from Manchester and Birgitte from Copenhagen. They embark on a road trip of sorts and their growing bond holds the attention. As do their contrasting accents, this being a British/Danish co-production. Fascinating how Birgitte's phone calls in Danish somehow work to make the whole thing less radio drama and more real world. FIONA HUGHES

Dolly Parton's America

While most of this series is a refreshing and illuminating insight into the joyous, God-filled world of Dolly Parton, the producers don't pull their punches. The Dixie Disappearance explores a darker side of Dollywood.

Drama: The Kubrick Test 2.15pm Radio 4

More than 20 years after his death, Stanley Kubrick (above) lives on as one of the most enigmatic giants of cinema history. "Everyone" who worked with him has shared memories, among them his factotum Leon Vitali, who's a character in this memoir by Radio 4 voice-of-them-all Kerry Shale. Shale reveals that genius/madman Kubrick wanted him to read one sentence for a trailer for Full Metal Jacket...and then virtually took over his life. "He's one of the most original film-makers of the 20th century," says Vitali of his boss. And this is a terrific, illuminating, funny play. I loved every minute. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Robin Lustig's comprehensive survey of the state of free speech reaches its penultimate episode and finds him on the home turf of journalism. After a trip to Paris to interview the editor of Charlie Hebdo, he heads to Hong Kong where reporters risk their lives when they write about the pro-democracy protests. Is it a good time to be a reporter in Hong Kong, Lustig asks one journalist. "I don't think so!" A quality if dismaying listen.

Today's Choices

Made in Heaven

11.15am/9.15pm Radio 4 Extra
In Andrew Sachs's 1971 play, housewife Harriet Avon (Prunella Scales, above) is a garrulous knitting-mad drudge who mourns the career she never had, and incessantly upbraids her outwardly meek husband (Timothy West, whom she's married to in real life). While he counters the termagant outbursts of "my little dove" with a string of platitudes, in his mind he's throttling her to death. So far, so funny. As the couple near breaking point, Made in Heaven takes a fantastical turn. Not aired since the original broadcast, it holds up surprisingly well, delivering a vivid account of domestic ennui, enhanced by the dream casting of one of theatre's most cherished couples.

CHRIS GARDNER

The Art of Raising a Child

11.30am Radio 4
Can you quantify the effects of creativity? A project involving children in Leicester examines whether art can be transformative in the lives of children living in deprived areas and whether creativity can be taught. The goal is not to grow a new generation of Damien Hirsts but to give children the imagination and adaptability to cope with a changing social landscape. DAVID CRAWFORD

Argentina's "White" Gold Rush. With the advent of electric cars, manufacturers claim the world is racing towards a clean-energy future. But these vehicles are powered by lithium, and most of the world's stocks of this lightest of metals are found deep beneath salt flats, high in the Andes. Massive projects are under way but extraction requires huge quantities of water – and in a super-dry region, using up such a precious resource is leading to anxiety and outright opposition. Today's Choices

Anneka's 80s TV Hunt

2.00pm Radio 2
Like Greg Wallace today or Chris Evans in the 1990s, every decade is defined by its ubiquitous TV personalities. The 1980s saw the ascendance of Anneka Rice as she donned a jumpsuit and took to the skies to guide contestants on Channel 4's Treasure Hunt. Now she's back to relive her career in a one-off radio special that will also see her delve into old favourites like TV-AM. It's an odd format choice, but Rice at least supplements these visual highlights with hits from Phil Collins, and from a performer who once came second to the presenter in a poll of the decade's most influential women – Madonna.

TOM GOULDING

The Verb

10.00pm Radio 3
"Social" seems to have taken on a different meaning recently, and tonight's edition of The Verb explores this new reality. Joining Ian McMillan tonight – all from their own homes – are Kate Fox, who reflects on distance and isolation through the lens of autism; poet John Carey, who will offer some soothing verse; and singer/songwriter Boo Hewerdine, who will perform a new song on the subject of far-flung friendships.

7.00 Radio 3 in Concert

Another chance to hear a semi-staged performance of Bach's choral masterpiece the St Matthew Passion, first broadcast in September 2014 as part of the BBC Proms at the Royal Albert Hall in London. In contrast to the dramatic St John Passion (heard this afternoon), the St Matthew confronts suffering and torture as well as salvation and redemption in some of Bach's most moving music. A starry line-up of soloists is led by Mark Padmore's Evangelist, with German baritone Christian Gerhaher singing the words of Christ. Presented by Donald Macleod.

A campaign across the BBC's local radio stations aims to keep communities connected

BBC local radio stations up and down the country have launched a campaign to keep communities informed during the coronavirus crisis, joining forces with volunteer groups to help get across messages of support – and giving information to the elderly, the housebound and others who are vulnerable or at risk, on what assistance is available and how to access it.

Each day brings more examples of acts of kindness from listeners. BBC Radio WM tweeted that a taxi company had contacted them to offer free pick-ups of supplies for the most vulnerable, and had already delivered 50 parcels.

BBC Sussex and Surrey featured a couple in their 80s who are self-isolating. After speaking on the station, they were overwhelmed by support from people offering to lend a hand so that they don't have to go out. The station also covered the plight of a 90-year-old man who had a bad cold, but couldn't get tissues and toilet roll. Within half an hour, a member of a community support group had offered to deliver them to him.

A freelancer contacted BBC Radio Bristol, worried about how he was going to pay his rent, now that he has no work. The station were able to give him advice on the help that is available, so that he could talk to his landlord and secure his home.

BBC Radio Nottingham received a call on their afternoon show from a 38-year-old father of three young children who has a terminal lung disease. With no online food delivery slots available, his wife has to go out every day to buy essentials – putting him at further risk. As a result of that call, the station was able to connect him with a group of people who are now getting shopping for them and giving the family much-needed support.

So that all the BBC local radio stations can focus on community support and give live updates on the coronavirus situation, all programmes include news updates every 30 minutes, along with open phone lines for listeners to use and advice for local communities.

Programmes have been standardised into four-hour slots, beginning at 6am with a news-focused breakfast segment, then 10am, 2pm and the evening show from 6pm. From 10pm, it's the late show, then stations join Radio 5 Live.

BBC Radios Scotland, Wales, Cymru and Ulster are also focusing much of their programming on audience stories and interaction, alongside their usual daily news programmes. Read more on Feedback: p152.

To offer help – or if you need help yourself – get in touch with your BBC local radio station. Contact details for each station are at bbc.co.uk/makeadifference

A campaign across the BBC's local radio stations aims to keep communities connected

BBC local radio stations up and down the country have launched a campaign to keep communities informed during the coronavirus crisis, joining forces with volunteer groups to help get across messages of support – and giving information to the elderly, the housebound and others who are vulnerable or at risk, on what assistance is available and how to access it.

Each day brings more examples of acts of kindness from listeners. BBC Radio WM tweeted that a taxi company had contacted them to offer free pick-ups of supplies for the most vulnerable, and had already delivered 50 parcels.

BBC Sussex and Surrey featured a couple in their 80s who are self-isolating. After speaking on the station, they were overwhelmed by support from people offering to lend a hand so that they don't have to go out. The station also covered the plight of a 90-year-old man who had a bad cold, but couldn't get tissues and toilet roll. Within half an hour, a member of a community support group had offered to deliver them to him.

A freelancer contacted BBC Radio Bristol, worried about how he was going to pay his rent, now that he has no work. The station were able to give him advice on the help that is available, so that he could talk to his landlord and secure his home.

BBC Radio Nottingham received a call on their afternoon show from a 38-year-old father of three young children who has a terminal lung disease. With no online food delivery slots available, his wife has to go out every day to buy essentials – putting him at further risk. As a result of that call, the station was able to connect him with a group of people who are now getting shopping for them and giving the family much-needed support.

So that all the BBC local radio stations can focus on community support and give live updates on the coronavirus situation, all programmes include news updates every 30 minutes, along with open phone lines for listeners to use and advice for local communities.

Programmes have been standardised into four-hour slots, beginning at 6am with a news-focused breakfast segment, then 10am, 2pm and the evening show from 6pm. From 10pm, it's the late show, then stations join Radio 5 Live.

BBC Radios Scotland, Wales, Cymru and Ulster are also focusing much of their programming on audience stories and interaction, alongside their usual daily news programmes. Read more on Feedback: p152.

To offer help – or if you need help yourself – get in touch with your BBC local radio station. Contact details for each station are at bbc.co.uk/makeadifference

A campaign across the BBC's local radio stations aims to keep communities connected

BBC local radio stations up and down the country have launched a campaign to keep communities informed during the coronavirus crisis, joining forces with volunteer groups to help get across messages of support – and giving information to the elderly, the housebound and others who are vulnerable or at risk, on what assistance is available and how to access it.

Each day brings more examples of acts of kindness from listeners. BBC Radio WM tweeted that a taxi company had contacted them to offer free pick-ups of supplies for the most vulnerable, and had already delivered 50 parcels.

BBC Sussex and Surrey featured a couple in their 80s who are self-isolating. After speaking on the station, they were overwhelmed by support from people offering to lend a hand so that they don't have to go out. The station also covered the plight of a 90-year-old man who had a bad cold, but couldn't get tissues and toilet roll. Within half an hour, a member of a community support group had offered to deliver them to him.

A freelancer contacted BBC Radio Bristol, worried about how he was going to pay his rent, now that he has no work. The station were able to give him advice on the help that is available, so that he could talk to his landlord and secure his home.

BBC Radio Nottingham received a call on their afternoon show from a 38-year-old father of three young children who has a terminal lung disease. With no online food delivery slots available, his wife has to go out every day to buy essentials – putting him at further risk. As a result of that call, the station was able to connect him with a group of people who are now getting shopping for them and giving the family much-needed support.

So that all the BBC local radio stations can focus on community support and give live updates on the coronavirus situation, all programmes include news updates every 30 minutes, along with open phone lines for listeners to use and advice for local communities.

Programmes have been standardised into four-hour slots, beginning at 6am with a news-focused breakfast segment, then 10am, 2pm and the evening show from 6pm. From 10pm, it's the late show, then stations join Radio 5 Live.

BBC Radios Scotland, Wales, Cymru and Ulster are also focusing much of their programming on audience stories and interaction, alongside their usual daily news programmes. Read more on Feedback: p152.

To offer help – or if you need help yourself – get in touch with your BBC local radio station. Contact details for each station are at bbc.co.uk/makeadifference

A campaign across the BBC's local radio stations aims to keep communities connected

BBC local radio stations up and down the country have launched a campaign to keep communities informed during the coronavirus crisis, joining forces with volunteer groups to help get across messages of support – and giving information to the elderly, the housebound and others who are vulnerable or at risk, on what assistance is available and how to access it.

Each day brings more examples of acts of kindness from listeners. BBC Radio WM tweeted that a taxi company had contacted them to offer free pick-ups of supplies for the most vulnerable, and had already delivered 50 parcels.

BBC Sussex and Surrey featured a couple in their 80s who are self-isolating. After speaking on the station, they were overwhelmed by support from people offering to lend a hand so that they don't have to go out. The station also covered the plight of a 90-year-old man who had a bad cold, but couldn't get tissues and toilet roll. Within half an hour, a member of a community support group had offered to deliver them to him.

A freelancer contacted BBC Radio Bristol, worried about how he was going to pay his rent, now that he has no work. The station were able to give him advice on the help that is available, so that he could talk to his landlord and secure his home.

BBC Radio Nottingham received a call on their afternoon show from a 38-year-old father of three young children who has a terminal lung disease. With no online food delivery slots available, his wife has to go out every day to buy essentials – putting him at further risk. As a result of that call, the station was able to connect him with a group of people who are now getting shopping for them and giving the family much-needed support.

So that all the BBC local radio stations can focus on community support and give live updates on the coronavirus situation, all programmes include news updates every 30 minutes, along with open phone lines for listeners to use and advice for local communities.

Programmes have been standardised into four-hour slots, beginning at 6am with a news-focused breakfast segment, then 10am, 2pm and the evening show from 6pm. From 10pm, it's the late show, then stations join Radio 5 Live.

BBC Radios Scotland, Wales, Cymru and Ulster are also focusing much of their programming on audience stories and interaction, alongside their usual daily news programmes. Read more on Feedback: p152.

To offer help – or if you need help yourself – get in touch with your BBC local radio station. Contact details for each station are at bbc.co.uk/makeadifference

Riding the migrant express

A thriller about Mexican stowaways risking their lives to reach the US has sparked a storm

Book at Bedtime: American Dirt
Monday–Friday 10.45pm Radio 4

THIS WEEK'S Book at Bedtime has been hailed as a 21st-century Grapes of Wrath and showered with praise by the likes of Stephen King, John Grisham and Oprah Winfrey, who selected it for her Book Club – the holy grail for publishers. But it's also ignited a ferocious debate about who has the right to tell which stories.

Written by US author Jeanine Cummins, American Dirt is about a Mexican bookshop owner, who is forced to flee Acapulco after a drug kingpin shoots her journalist husband and relatives at a family barbecue. Lydia and her son Luca have no choice but to risk death riding la Bestia – a freight train that trundles north towards the US border carrying hundreds of desperate stowaways. It's a gripping, harrowing, wonderfully tender tale, but some Latino writers have accused it of exploiting the struggles of migrants and stereotyping Mexico and Mexicans.

"There's a reason that this book touched a nerve that I didn't intend to touch," says Cummins, speaking from New York. "There's a backlog of legitimate frustration in the Latin American community because of the deep inequities in publishing – because their voices have been underrepresented for so long. It was like throwing a match on to a pile of dry kindling. I wish that American Dirt was not in the crosshairs of this conversation, but it's an incredibly important conversation, and I hope it results in a greater platform for Latino and Latina voices in this country."

Her book tour was cancelled after threats of violence, and her US publisher apologised for claiming that the novel defined the immigrant experience and for its clumsily written afterword. In it, Cummins claims she has "a dog in the fight" because her husband was an illegal (undocumented) migrant, but fails to point out that he's Irish. "Some people were very angry about that, because they felt I was conflating his experiences with those of people who come here from Mexico and Central America, which I did not intend to do," she says now.

"My husband was undocumented for more than ten years and we lived with the fear of deportation every single day. I absolutely believe that it is relevant, but it's equally true that we had a tremendous amount of privilege compared to people who are coming here via the southern border of this country. He didn't have to risk life and limb to get here, and he doesn't face systematic racism and profiling now that he's here."

BORN IN SPAIN, Cummins grew up in Maryland and lives in New York with her husband and two daughters. Her paternal grandparents were Puerto Rican and Irish, and she was frustrated by the public discourse surrounding migration long before Donald Trump pledged to build a wall along the border between Mexico and the US.

"Our immigration policy in this country is completely inhumane, and the tenor of the way we talk about migration is so appalling and so shameful," she says. "I wanted to write a book that would put the reader firmly in the shoes of the people who are most affected by our immigration policy, so that when people talk about it, or are thinking about how to vote, they might remember that migrants are human beings. It could happen to any of us."

American Dirt is her third novel, but she made her name with a moving memoir about the murder of her cousins. When Cummins was 16, Julie and Robin Kerry were brutally raped and thrown off a bridge by four men in St Louis, Missouri. Cummins's older brother was also assaulted and thrown into the Mississippi river, but survived the ordeal. "I wanted to reclaim that story for my cousins. People were making documentaries about the men who killed them, and we would see my cousins' faces on the news and their names would be backwards or misspelt. That infuriated me, and I feel like the same thing is happening with the stories about drug cartels. In the vast majority of those stories, the women and children who get gunned down are just footnotes."

'It was like throwing a match on to a pile of dry kindling'

Despite the massive backlash, Cummins is proud of American Dirt. Dozens of readers have sent her messages saying it's inspired them to read more about the plight of America's illegal migrants. "That was what I hoped would happen. That people would begin to engage with the stories of real migrants, because that's something that fiction can do." CLAIRE WEBB

American author Jeanine Cummins

ALAMY

BY DEFINITION, BOUNDARIES such as walls and fences mark your garden's perimeter. But in design terms – and as an opportunist – I always view them as, well, an opportunity!

When ground space runs out, the only way to go is up and climbers help to green up these barriers. Many are deliciously scented, too.

The greener your boundaries are, the more blurred the edges of a garden tend to become, tricking your eye into not quite knowing where the garden begins and ends – particularly beneficial in a small or awkwardly shaped space. Climbing plants are also better than most artificial boundaries at sustaining wildlife and supplying berries to feed birds in the autumn.

If it's a wall with character, you may want to leave key areas exposed. Look for a variety of climbers – some evergreen, some deciduous.

SELF-STARTERS

Some climbers will cling with aerial roots so won't need a support framework. Ivies, an evergreen climbing hydrangea such as Pileostegia viburnoides, Virginia creeper (which can grow very quickly) and Campsis radicans (the trumpet vine, which needs sun) are all good choices.

FAST MOVERS

If you want colourful cover for this year while other plants establish themselves, then go for annual climbers grown from seed, or buy plug plants and plant out after the last frost. Try black-eyed Susan (yellows and oranges), morning glory (purples and blues) and Spanish flag (orange-red and cream flowers). Most will scramble up to two or three metres in a single season and flower their socks off all summer.

CLINGY TYPES

A range of plants need support, including climbing roses, wisteria, jasmine, honeysuckle, clematis, star jasmine (Trachelospermum jasminoides) and the chocolate vine (Akebia quinata). Cover walls or fences with a strong network of galvanised wire, fixed through screw eyes, because climbers can get heavy once matured.

SHADY CHARACTERS

Shade can be tricky, but there are plants that will grow well on a north-facing wall: ivies, climbing hydrangea, Virginia creeper, some climbing roses ("Albéric Barbier" has small white double flowers or "Souvenir du Docteur Jamain" with deliciously scented, wine-red flowers) and Akebia quinata, the chocolate vine (exotic foliage and maroon scented flowers in early spring).

The only way is up!

LET YOUR KIDS GROW THEIR OWN

Most children love gardening. There are no downsides; it's fun, healthy, creative, educational and rewarding. It teaches them a little patience, too: one must wait for things to grow. Sure, you can buy plants in small pots or plug plants, but sowing seeds and watching them grow, flower and fruit is where the real magic lies.

PLANT A SEED

Large, easy-to-handle seeds (beans, sunflowers, sweetcorn, courgettes) are ideal for small hands, and fast-growing annual flowering plants (such as marigolds, nasturtiums, snapdragons and cosmos) are always a favourite. Some can be started off in little pots or modules on the windowsill, which can be made from toilet roll innertubes. Dib them in potting compost and water regularly – but don't drown them! Once they've got going and the frosts are definitely over (usually by the end of May), they can be planted out. The cardboard will rot away as the plant grows. Or wait until the soil's warmed up and plant seeds outside, directly into flowerbeds or pots.

A PATCH OF THEIR OWN

Creating a simple theme for an area will help you choose seeds. They could decide to grow a butterfly garden, sensory touch garden, scent garden, salad garden or crazy-colour garden. Perhaps you already have some existing plants in the garden to work around, such as a buddleia (for butterflies), or lavender (for scent). Most plants have crossover qualities, so you don't have to be too rigorous. They could make a fun sign (for example, "Harry's super-smelly garden") and add a scarecrow or bird bath.

LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION

Some success is vital to keep their interest going. Make sure the patch you give them has decent soil and is in a sunny spot: most plants do best with sun. It needs to be practical and accessible, so put a few stepping stones around it – or dig up a section of the lawn so they can reach it from all sides. Ideally, site the patch close to the house so they can watch their plants grow and know when to weed and water. Growbags and large pots also work very well.

OVER 55s UNLOCKED £3.92 BILLION FROM THEIR HOMES LAST YEAR

The past year has seen some ups and downs for the economy, but throughout, older homeowners have continued to use some of their property wealth to help transform standards of living, help with potential financial difficulties or, in some cases, turn long-dreamt-of-plans into a reality.

According to the latest report from the Equity Release Council – the industry body for the sector – a record £3.92 billion of housing wealth was released through equity release in 2019*.

PROPERTY WEALTH SUPPORTING RETIREMENT

Selling and moving to a smaller property is one obvious option to access the wealth in your home. However, a lifetime mortgage, the most popular form of equity release, allows you to unlock some of the tax-free cash from your home while staying put.

Last year saw homeowners over the age of 55 take advantage of the lower interest rates on offer, with a record 85,497* taking out equity release. It wasn't just the interest rates that appealed, though.

TAKING CONTROL

Increased flexible product features also fuelled the rise in popularity of equity release. Plans now come in all shapes and sizes and this rise in available options means that those taking out equity release can ensure a more tailored plan suited to their circumstances.

Some plans include features such as:

- Voluntary partial capital repayments, meaning you can reduce the size of the loan on which interest is charged
- Drawdown plans, allowing you to take out a smaller initial amount of tax-free cash and "draw down" money later in stages.
- Inheritance protection, guaranteeing that a percentage of the future value of your home will be left to your loved ones
- Downsizing protection, ensuring that if you need to move to a property that doesn't meet your lender's criteria after five years of taking out a lifetime mortgage, you can pay the loan back without an early repayment charge.

FINDING OUT YOUR OPTIONS

Equity release specialists Key Equity Release understand that we all have questions. Delivering expert advice that is unique to you and your needs, they'll ensure they find the right solution for you. If equity release isn't right for you, they'll tell you.

Key Equity Release offer lifetime mortgages only, which is a loan secured against your home. They'll explain how a lifetime mortgage will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means-tested benefits.

COULD YOU BENEFIT FROM THE CASH TIED UP IN YOUR HOME?

READER OFFER Radio Times's partner, Key Equity Release, have produced a FREE expert guide to give homeowners over 55 the information they need about unlocking cash from their property.

For more information, or to request your FREE guide to equity release, call FREE on 0800 188 4813 or visit radiotimes/equityrelease

Time to go paperless – e-books and online newspapers should soon cost less, says Paul Lewis

THE CHANCELLOR GAVE a £175m boost to people who read books and newspapers on their tablets rather than on paper. Paper publications are free of VAT. But those that you download are subject to VAT of 20%. Not for much longer. With a phrase reminiscent of the “end the taxes on knowledge” campaigns of the early 1800s, new Chancellor Rishi Sunak will end what he called higher rate 40% tax kicks in at £50,000 – or £43,430 in Scotland. Unlike the rest of the UK, the Scottish Parliament has agreed to cut taxes slightly for 90% of taxpayers, and those whose income is less than £27,200 – well over half of taxpayers – will now pay less than they do elsewhere in the UK.

One saving applies throughout the UK to anyone under state pension age who works. They will pay £104 a year less National Insurance Contributions, and the self-employed will pay £78 a year less as the threshold income where it starts rises to £183 a week or £9,500 a year. Although fewer people will pay National Insurance Contributions as a result, it does not mean that fewer will qualify for a state pension. People earning under the threshold down to £120 a week (£6,240 a year) will get credits to fill the gaps.

The cut in the Bank Rate to 0.1% and a new £100 billion fund of very cheap money from the Bank of England for small businesses and mortgage lenders will mean that savings rates may fall even lower than the nugatory rates the banks pay now. So keep an eye on the best buys and move your money as they change.

Another Budget is promised – or threatened – in the autumn.

Paul Lewis presents Money Box on R4

‘We will need to keep a sharp eye on publishers’

“the reading tax” from 1 December. We will need to keep a sharp eye on publishers. One newspaper I subscribe to costs £26 a month including VAT. That should drop to £21.67 from December. And an £8.99 book downloaded to my tablet should be £7.49. A good incentive to buy e-books for Christmas!

The main tax allowances were frozen. You can still have up to £12,500 a year before any tax is due and

I'M SELF-EMPLOYED – WILL I GET A PENSION?

Helen is self-employed but has worked for the same organisation for about two years. “They don’t provide me with pension, sick pay, or holiday. I hoped there may be a change in the rules that obliges them to provide at least some sort of pension.”

Paul Lewis replies: If you have worked exclusively for the same organisation for two years, then you are probably not self-employed. HMRC takes a dim view of people who look like employees but are paid their fees gross. Ask the firm if you can be taken on as an employee. If your contract is extended for several years, then you should have the right to become an employee.

Anyone who works for a firm and is paid through PAYE with tax and NICs deducted must be automatically enrolled into a pension by the firm if they earn more than £10,000 a year and are aged 22 to 65. They are also entitled to holiday pay and sick pay.

The genuinely self-employed – those who are free to manage where and how they do their work and usually have several clients – have none of those rights.

Gordon, Gino & Fred: American Road Trip Thursday 9.00pm ITV

GORDON RAMSAY, GINO D'Acampo, and First Dates' Fred Sirieix embark on the US leg of their road trip this week. The trio will motor to Las Vegas, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Napa Valley in their RV, before heading south to Texas. Road-tripping is as American as apple pie, and the possibilities are endless. You could go west for epic Pacific Coast views, revel in Route 66 nostalgia in the Midwest, or explore the sublime topography and musical heritage of the East Coast's Appalachian Mountains. In Florida, you can even island-hop on its Overseas Highway.

WEST COAST CRUISE

California's 656-mile Highway 1 snakes along the Golden State's rugged coastline from San Francisco to San Diego via Los Angeles. It's a journey that's best spread out over a week, taking time to enjoy the sweeping ocean views, stretch your legs on scenic walks and chill out in beach towns such as Santa Cruz and Santa Barbara. The winding, cliff-hugging Pacific Coast Highway is the most dramatic stretch. It's bordered by Big Sur's redwood-blanketed mountains and takes you over gorge-spanning Bixby Creek Bridge – a breathtaking feat of engineering. You can continue north from San Francisco on the equally stunning Highway 101 to Oregon's windswept capes and Washington's untamed Olympic Peninsula.

APPALACHIAN ADVENTURE

The 469-mile Blue Ridge Parkway swoops through the forest-carpeted southern Appalachian mountains of Virginia and North Carolina, linking the Great Smoky Mountains and Shenandoah national parks, and owes its name to the blueish mist that collects in the valleys. The scenery is especially glorious in autumn when the maples, scarlet oaks, hickories and sweet gums don fiery autumn garb.

Discover Virginia's bluegrass, old-time and country music history on the Crooked Road (a heritage trail that overlaps with the Blue Ridge Parkway) or take a detour to Dolly Parton's kitsch theme park, Dollywood – the Queen of Country grew up in a two-room cabin in the foothills of the Smokies. It's easily combined with a road trip to Nashville, where boisterous honky-tonk bars await.

TEXAN CITY TOUR

Texas is roughly the same size as France, so it would take at least a month to explore its diverse attractions: over 350 miles of coastline with sandy barrier islands, Big Bend National Park's hulking, weather-beaten mountains and expansive desert. However, you can tick off Houston, San Antonio, Austin and Fredericksburg in a leisurely ten days, clocking up 350 miles in total and spending a couple of nights in each place.

Oil-rich Houston has fabulous museums and restaurants, cosmopolitan San Antonio has a fascinating history and a delightful network of café-lined canals, while Austin is outdoorsy and Texas's live music mecca. Originally a 19th-century German settlement, charming Fredericksburg is the capital of the Hill Country – the Lone Star State's wine region.

THE MOTHER ROAD

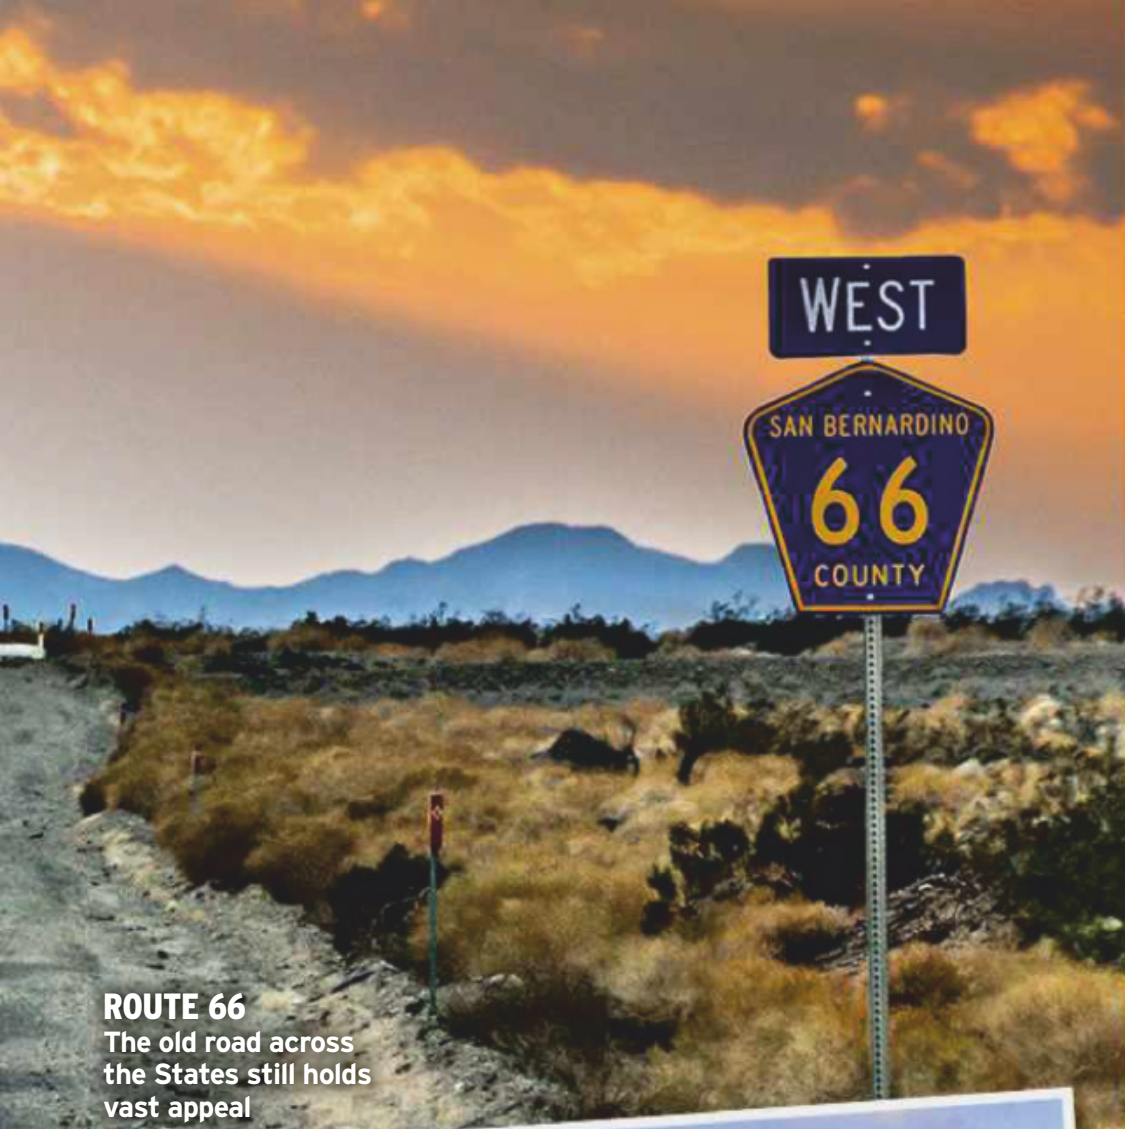

Built in the 1920s, Route 66 meandered nearly 2,500 miles from Chicago to Los Angeles and was a lifeline for migrants escaping the Dust Bowl and the Great Depression. Christened "the Mother Road" by John Steinbeck and immortalised by Nat King Cole, America's legendary asphalt artery disappeared from maps in the mid-80s after being eclipsed by fast but bland interstate highways. But with the help of a decent guidebook, you can still find its old byways, which wind through the Midwest and are lined with ghost towns, abandoned gas stations, kitsch attractions, classic motels and retro diners dishing up a nostalgic slice of Americana.

Only a week to spare? Stick to Arizona: step back in time in the sleepy town of Seligman, which looks like a western movie set; bed down in a 50s-built concrete teepee in Wigam Village; and take a detour to the Grand Canyon.

FLOAT TO FLORIDA KEYS

If you're after maximal views and minimal miles behind the wheel, you can't beat the Florida Keys Overseas Highway. This 113-mile road skirts the Everglades National Park – a tropical wilderness where alligators roam – and links the Florida Keys’ island chain. The most famous of the 47 bridges is the Seven Mile Bridge, which glides over dazzling blue-green waters. The stop-offs are spectacular, too: snorkel or scuba-dive in Key Largo’s coral reef state park, feed rescued turtles at Marathon’s Turtle Hospital, and admire Key West’s pastel, Caribbean-style houses and Ernest Hemingway’s old home. CLAIRE WEBB

Word of the Week – bumf

Toilet paper has been much in the news. This suddenly elusive item has gone by various names over the years – in the 17th century, for example, something used to clean oneself after "visiting the Spice Islands" (as the Victorians later called a trip to the loo) was called "arse-wisp".

Another moniker from the 1600s was "bumfodder". Very quickly, this also became a byword for any written material considered to be tedious or unnecessary. The word was eventually shortened to "bumf", leaving little trace of its literal origins behind. (In 19th-century public schools, a bumf-hunt was a paperchase.)

As for toilet paper itself, some names should surely never have been flushed away, including bungwad and tail-timber. Whatever we call it, we can only hope normal service resumes soon.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

FITTING TRIBUTE
The celebration of the NHS during the London 2012 Opening Ceremony

On the PM programme (19 March Radio 4), Evan Davis played Caliban's Dream from the Opening Ceremony of the 2012 Olympics.

If the BBC is looking for a programme to fill the gap left by fewer dramas, soaps and episodes of Casualty and so on, the whole of the 2012 London Olympics Opening Ceremony would be excellent. It showed just how brilliant and inspirational our NHS, and our country, can be. It was a wonderful, life-affirming demonstration of who we are, and it might be just what we need to see again in these worrying times.

of us stuck at home? I'm 75 and in good health, thank goodness, but housework doesn't thrill me and I can't read or watch television all day for goodness knows how long.

Yes, the Green Goddess (aka Diana Moran) is back on BBC Breakfast on BBC1 with routines on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at around 6.55am and 8.55am.

QUIET AN IMPROVEMENT

Question Time without a studio audience on 19 March (BBC1) was a breath of fresh air. No histrionic posturing, but instead a calm, reflective and courteous debate between people who, while disagreeing with each other, did not interrupt while others were putting forward their point of view. It was also a refreshing change not to have so many interruptions from Fiona Bruce.

WINNING FORMULA

I'm surprised that the BBC hasn't given the wonderful drama series Trigonometry (Sunday BBC2) more promotion and trailers. It's such a beautifully acted and produced piece, which really shows the lives of contemporary young Londoners. It has a very engaging storyline and a terrific cast, and I really recommend it.

Anna Wolf Ripon, North Yorkshire
The entire series will be available on iPlayer for a year so you have plenty of time to explore it.

WHY CHANGE THE MENU?

The Great British Menu (Wednesday-Friday BBC2) is the best cookery programme on TV, but the new format was a huge disappointment. It felt rushed and I felt exhausted watching it. I welcomed the addition of a fourth chef, but it was all downhill from there. And I like Susan Calman, but I don't see what value she adds – the presentation (and the kitchen) felt too crowded with her there and we don't watch this show to get a laugh. We watch it to be awed by the skills of the chefs.

The amuse-bouche welcoming the judging chef was a good idea, but not at the expense of losing a contestant before they have a chance to cook all their dishes, which seems unfair. From a viewer's perspective, I was thinking of all the imaginative dishes that we will never get to see – particularly the showstopping desserts.

BEWARE FRAUDSTERS

RT readers should be extra alert for fraud at this time. I had a scam message telling me my TV licence would run out the next day and to go online to set up a new standing order. It isn't and I didn't, but it looked authentic. Beware!

DIVIDED OPINION
Charlie and Daisy May Cooper in This Country

LOVED IT...

Like so many fans, I'm sad that This Country (BBC1) is no more. Plaudits to Daisy May and Charlie Cooper for one of the most original mockumentaries of recent years and to Mandy (delightful Ashley McGuire) and the Vicar (Paul Chahidi) for pared-back, believable characterisation.

Kurtan's grief at the Vicar's news was so touching, his anger so convincing, that even when he changed his mind – as he does with so many things – it ranked as a reflection of Charlie's true acting ability. Give that boy a Bafta!
Anna Coats-Brown Hove, East Sussex

...LOATHED IT

There is no comedy for me in pointing out other people's apparent lack of intellect, which is why I found Ricky Gervais's Derek deeply unsettling and insulting. The Vicar of Dibley and the much-missed gormless Alice had the odd good line; but for me This Country goes the whole hog, or as Kurtan elegantly put it to Kerry, "You're as thick as compacted pig s." The only saving grace was the lack of canned laughter.

Oh for the days of intelligent, clever, often cutting humour like Dave Allen or the inspired lunacy of the Goons or Monty Python – all of them funny without it being at the expense of others.

Martin Walker Keighley, West Yorkshire

MY TRAIN OF THOUGHT

We very much enjoyed the wonderfully calming series The Yorkshire Steam Railway: All Aboard (Channel 5), although we spotted one or two mistakes in the commentary. The 9F locomotive featured is not "the only one on the planet". Nine examples survive, not least of which is Evening Star, the last steam locomotive built for British Railways, and housed at the railway museum in York.

The top speed of the Scorpion reconnaissance vehicle is 50mph, not the 70mph stated. I think the producers mixed up miles and kilometres. And finally, it's the Great Central Railway at Loughborough, not the Grand Central Railway. But here's hoping for another series, eventually!

LOCAL RADIO'S FINEST HOUR

'It's critical to phone and hear a human voice'

With large numbers of people isolated in their homes, BBC local radio is at the forefront of the drive to bring us together. Chris Burns, head of Audio and Digital for BBC England, tells RT about an imaginative campaign called Make a Difference:

"When the crisis was looming, we decided we needed to do something very, very quickly that was quite low-tech. It's critical for people who don't have access to technology that they can pick up a phone and hear a human voice, whether they need shopping or just someone to walk the dog.

"Local radio, we decided, would be a one-stop shop for local news, information and advice – and that sense of community. We felt there was a great desire out there to give help to those who needed it, and local radio has linked those two groups of people together.

"You phone your local radio station (or you can text or email if you like) and we link you up with groups that may be able to help. It's like being a virtual noticeboard. We're working with local councils, too, and it's a two-way thing – via us they can say what they're doing."

TOGETHER WE STAND
The BBC's Chris Burns is spearheading a vital local radio campaign

With anxiety rising, our mental health is every bit as important as providing practical help. "Every afternoon," says Burns, "Jo Good has been doing a kind of mindfulness and yoga. You sit, you clear your mind... for many it will be a moment of stillness. And as for keeping fit, we're looking at ways we can encourage people to stay active within their homes. The view of a 50-year-old now isn't what it used to be, or indeed of a 70-year-old or an 80-year-old! Exercise classes are harder, of course, on the radio, but for some of our audience we can tie in with platforms like Facebook and social media."

For many people, their faith is increasingly important. Burns says, "We've got virtual services going out on local radio, and on Easter Sunday a service given by Cardinal Vincent Nichols, Archbishop of Westminster. We're keen that local radio is about all faiths, though, so we're also providing reflections from other faiths over the local network on Fridays at 5.45am, in areas where we have a high proportion of Muslim listeners: cities like Birmingham, Manchester, Sheffield and Leicester.

"We're using radio to try to relieve loneliness. Radio Tees is doing a podcast looking at how self-isolation actually feels. And there's Upload, the speech equivalent of BBC Introducing in music. It's a great way to use your creativity, connect with other people, and most importantly tell your story. You can send in short stories you've written to share with other people. It's a lovely listen.

"We're in uncharted times so every couple of weeks on local radio we'll be launching something new. We're looking, for instance, at what we can do around sport. For example, we've a lot of athletes currently at home, unable to perform, so we're looking at doing a series of Your Top Ten Sporting Moments... and there will be more."

ANGELA SCANLON

But in the presenter's own home, two-year old Ruby is in charge

You're back with a new series of Your Home Made Perfect, which uses virtual reality to create amazing interiors. Did that give you loads of ideas?

I've always been interested in design so the opportunity to snoop around people's houses under the guise of work is fantastic. We rent but I find myself going into houses thinking, 'Oh, the sun is much better in the evening here.' Now I understand that the way that you use the space changes your house. Our couples seem so delighted to see their house in virtual reality just because its tidier.

Tell us about your sofa...

It's big. I came back from a holiday in Majorca where everything was white linen and – I don't know what I was thinking – but I bought a cream linen sofa in a house with dogs and a young child. The whole thing is covered in blankets with every shade of paint, pesto and bean juice.

Do you watch a lot of TV?

As new parents, we stay in more and really try to resist getting into box sets because we feel so bad when we're hoping that Ruby [her two-year-old daughter with husband

Roy Horgan] doesn't wake up, so we can watch another Peaky Blinders. Not great parenting.

Who rules the remote?

We're figuring out pretty quickly that Ruby is the boss, so we watch a lot of CBeebies.

I'm a big fan of Louis Theroux. And I absolutely love Succession, Game Face

by Roisin Conaty, This Way Up by Aisling Bea and I recently watched Katherine Ryan's Glitter Room on Netflix. Very good.

Is there anything you absolutely hate watching?

No. When people on Twitter tell you they hate your show, I tend to say, "Look, you've got a remote. Don't torture yourself. Switch channels. Don't hunt me down to say you wouldn't have worn that boilersuit today. No one asked you."

You presented the revival of Robot Wars alongside Dara O Briain in 2016. Were you disappointed when it was cancelled?

Absolutely gutted. Robot Wars was a magic show.

It went out against Blue Planet, the TV event of the decade, which didn't help. By the third series, it felt like we had really found our feet. Dara doing his brainy stuff and me in the pit eating sausage rolls and chatting to the lads. We had started to get more applications from females, too. So, as you can tell, I'm not over it.

You've spoken about suffering from anxiety in the past – is there a balance that you've struck?

I've thrown the kitchen sink at it – therapy, meditation, and I try to find a balance between work and normal life. Having a baby has given me perspective. When I'm with her, being really present is kind of meditation in itself.

STEPHEN ARMSTRONG

Your Home Made Perfect returns on Tuesday, 8pm BBC2. Her Radio 2 show airs early on Sunday morning (4am).

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK A Girl Is a Half-formed Thing by Eimear McBride. It's pretty heavy going but brilliant.

MY MUSIC Nick Cave. I went to see him at the O2 a few months back playing the album about his son's death. There wasn't a dry eye in the house.

MY HOBBY I love a bit of pottery. Until recently I was taking my daughter to a pottery café to make bowls. It was as much for me as for her.
