A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

is broadcasting

from her kitchen

UR WORLD HAS been turned upside down. Yet so much seems to stay the same. Welcome to your new issue of Radio Times, brought to you, as it has been every week since 1923, from RT HQ.

Except today that isn't at the BBC, or even the smart multimedia offices in west London that have been our home since 2012. No, today RT HQ is to be found scattered across dozens of kitchen tables, spare bedrooms and makeshift offices all over the country.

Because, just like most of you, we are locked up at home. As, of course, are so many of our favourite broadcasters. We're all now familiar with the difficulties that come with being cooped up inside for days on end with perhaps, if we're lucky, a dash to the supermarket to risk social distancing in an unfathomably long queue. But how do you make top-class television and radio from the spare room?

We were intrigued. How is the lockdown changing the programmes our broadcasters make? How is it changing us all? What about their partners, children, dogs in the room next door? And, when you're broadcasting from the kitchen, is there such a thing as too much toast? Meet the new Home Service on p12.

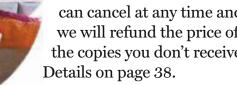

Since we are all stuck inside for the foreseeable future, here are the three ways to guarantee you receive future copies of RT.

HOME DELIVERY

Many newsagents will deliver your copy.

BECOME A TEMPORARY SUBSCRIBER

For the next 12 weeks we will deliver Radio Times to your door, for the usual price and without a direct debit. You can cancel at any time and we will refund the price of the copies you don't receive.

BECOME A SUBSCRIBER

You will find a card on p11 with our current direct debit offer.

If you are already a subscriber and want to change your delivery address, visit our website www.buysubscriptions.com/login. Or send us an email, including your customer number, old address and new address, to radio.times@buysubscriptions. com. Or call 03330 162129.

We look forward to dropping onto your doormat next week. Until then, we hope you enjoy the issue.

WHAT I'M WATCHING...

All three presenters are currently working from home – but what are they watching while they're in lockdown?

PROFESSOR MARY BEARD

I have got a very strong desire to watch the BBC drama I, Claudius again," says the classicist. "That was a programme from my youth and I remember it so vividly. I don't particularly want to see Killing Eve – I want to go back to comfort telly, like comfort food.

Satchmo steps up

Sometimes Bach needs to take a back seat at Radio 3

THOUGHT I'D DO lots of reading during this enforced retreat, but each time I've picked up a book I've struggled to concentrate. I decided I'd watch all of Spooks on iPlayer, but haven't managed to start. Yet somehow, classical music still cuts through, clearing my mind of all else.

I listened to the Nash Ensemble performing Schubert's Octet in the Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert recently. Thoughts of ventilators, vaccines and press briefings disappeared. For the first time since this all began I stopped scrolling through tweets and news sites and focused on an hour of the most sublime music.

R3 listeners send several hundred emails, tweets and texts to Breakfast every morning, a significant percentage coming from those taking refuge from Today and news-based breakfast shows on 5 Live and LBC. Given Covid-19's domination of the daily agenda, it seems natural that many turn to classical music in these strange times. But which music? When is the right time for the songs of Schubert, whose lyrics often deal with death and dark emotions? Likewise, I've long played a work by Bach just before seven each morning, but a few correspondents report that they find the beauty of Bach, normally balm for the soul, a little overwhelming.

Haydn is a beneficiary of the crisis, listeners feeling his simple, straightforward approach suits the national mood well. But since the lockdown started there have been subtle changes to the sort of music people want to hear. They see no reason why jaunty songs by Louis Armstrong, Marlene Dietrich or Maurice Chevalier shouldn't sit alongside Mozart and Beethoven. It feels like people want bright fare first thing.

So I've been including a March of the Day each morning at 8.30. We've heard the band of the Royal Marines, theatre marches by Prokofiev and Rossini, and a folk fiddler playing a wedding march from Norway. The biggest response so far was when I played Calling All Workers, a tune by Eric Coates (of Desert Island Discs fame), used in 1940 as the theme to Music While You Work, a programme that epitomised radio's wartime coming-of-age. Coates wrote the piece for his wife when she was working in a Red Cross factory making hospital supplies, which seems almost painfully apt at the moment.

y programme is not the only one on Radio 3 that anecdotal evidence suggests listeners are approaching differently. There's more time for Donald Macleod's erudite storytelling on Composer of the Week. People seem happy to accept less than studio-quality sound in our Home Sessions, where celebrated musicians including Andreas Scholl and Sheku Kanneh-Mason perform in their front rooms. And we can focus properly on the great performances being revisited in our lunchtime and evening concerts.

Perhaps, as the crisis continues, it's the cheerful stuff we'll really need. When I first floated the idea of March of the Day listeners were largely dismissive; "It just feels a bit too militaristic" was a common response. Three weeks on the mood has changed. Parents send photographs of them and their children listening together before home-schooling begins. A hospital doctor commuting to work in Shrewsbury tweets suggestions for the slot that, she writes, will "set me up nicely for a day of respiratory medicine". Others talk of marching around the kitchen, with a broad smile. One listener called it 'Radio 3's equivalent of Joe Wicks". Given the amount of good feeling and respite that Joe Wicks is reportedly bringing to the nation, that's an unlikely compliment that I'm very willing to take.

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 16-22 APRIL 1977

WHAT WE WATCHED

Jubilee Year felt like an appropriate time for BBC1's new series Royal Heritage, which showed off some of the treasures accumulated in more than 1,000 years of monarchy. Cameras were allowed to film parts of the collection never shown to the public before and producer Michael Gill revealed that members of the royal family aided in the production. Prince Charles even took a film crew to Glas-allt-Shiel, the house Queen Victoria had rebuilt for herself near Loch Muick, with Gill commenting: "He did this while rowing a small boat. At the other end huddled cameraman, sound recordist and electrician."

WHAT YOU SAID

Derek Jacobi had recently won Bafta's Best TV Actor Award for I, Claudius and was wowing Radio 4 listeners for his role in Vivat Rex, a chronicle of the English crown through 200 years. Mary Ansdell of Lowestoft, Suffolk wrote: "After being moved to tears and sometimes laughter by his sensitive portrayal of stammering Claudius, I sat and wept with him as he handed over his crown and kingdom as Richard II. Truly we have here a fine actor who lives his parts and feels the changing moods of the characters as surely as if he were Claudius or Richard II himself."

I'm grateful I don't have beauty

Gemma Whelan says her face is her fortune. She talks cheekbones, babies – and why women run the show on Killing Eve secrets. After playing Yara Greyjoy in Game of Thrones for eight years, she is accustomed to journalists trying to trick her into spilling juicy plot twists. "What's she like to work with?' Who knows if I've worked with her?" she fires back playfully, when I ask about Jodie Comer. "If this is a trap, I'm not falling into it! I saw Jodie at the read-throughs and we had a brief exchange. She's a very cool, down-to-earth person."

THE RT INTERVIEW BY LAURA CRAIK

There was always going to be high excitement about series three of Killing Eve, but never more so when it can feel as though we're running out of box sets to binge-watch. If anyone can be relied upon to take the nation's mind off things, it's Villanelle. How would everyone's favourite psychopath pass her time in lockdown? I dread to think.

When we speak, Whelan can't give away much about her role, other than her name, Geraldine.

"She's very eager with her emotions. She's emotionally fluid, let's say, and has never found her true path in life. She's a bit of a drifter."

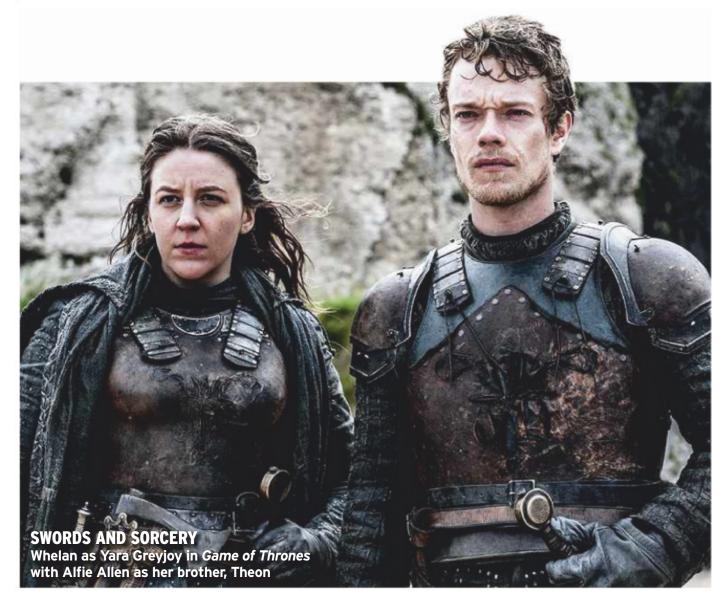

Several days later, I'm told I can divulge that Geraldine is the daughter of Carolyn Martens, the enigmatic M16 chief played so brilliantly by Fiona Shaw. Whelan was delighted to land the part. "I'd had a few near misses with a few jobs, and I was feeling a bit despondent. I was saying, 'Oh God, please let this be one that lands'. I was completely thrilled when they called me and said it had gone my way. This is the acme. There is nothing like Killing Eve. And whoever I worked with on the show – which I don't dare speak about – I was really a bit star-struck by."

It's a testament to Whelan's humility that she still feels star-struck by anyone, given her CV. From film to theatre to primetime TV, she's done it all: recent work includes playing the protagonist's governess in the film adaptation of \triangleright

Gentleman Jack, and aspiring actor Kate in Upstart Crow on BBC2.

While adults will most readily recognise her from hard-hitting TV dramas such as Game of Thrones, The Moorside and White House Farm, children will more likely recall her as "the girl in Horrible Histories", the award-winning factual TV show in which she starred from 2017–19. "They were all such fun!" she says, asked about her favourite sketch. "Maybe the Shakespeare sketch where I was a groundling: a horrible, toothless idiot scratching around in the dirt. I had to wee in a bucket. There's nothing more joyful than being allowed to do things that you wouldn't ordinarily be allowed to do."

ORRIBLE HISTORIES WAS the perfect gig for an actor who started out doing comedy. A keen dancer as a child, she first caught the acting bug while at school in Warwick, where she was encouraged by a teacher. "I was the class clown. I love making people laugh." After graduating from Middlesex University and completing a postgraduate degree in musical theatre at the London Studio Centre, she started doing stand-up comedy, performing at the Edinburgh Fringe as a character called Chastity Butterworth.

The picture Whelan posted on Instagram of her breastfeeding while filming Game of Thrones

"Straight stand-up terrified me, but I was slightly shrouded behind Chastity."

She kept auditioning for small parts in various comedies, and eventually got an agent. "I had to work quite hard to be taken seriously because I didn't have any formal training. And then I was at the right place at the right time for my Game of Thrones audition."

Does she feel that the scripts she's offered now are meatier than they were then? "Yes, absolutely. When I started out, I wasn't really woke to the idea of female roles being big, small or whatever. I was just grateful to get work. Game of Thrones really did change things in terms of how women are written and represented.

'I'm able to shapeshift because I'm not known for my cheekbones?

"Obviously, it was a fantasy, but the women were painted very realistically nonetheless. Maybe not the murdering side of things, but they were independent and capable of running the show. But nowadays, a huge part of the writing process is making women front and centre. But that's not to say that we should forget there are some bril-

'I WAS TERRIFIED OF BEING PART OF KILLING EVE'

Fiona Shaw on playing MI6 agent Carolyn Martens

How is lockdown treating you, Fiona? Very well. My bread-making has improved, and my gardening. It's the Chinese dictum: "A chance to take the time to take the time".

I interviewed Gemma Whelan, who joins Killing Eve in the third series as your daughter, Geraldine. What can you tell me about her?

Gemma is utterly superb. But oh my God, Carolyn and Geraldine have a terrible relationship – really terrible – and I can only say what a pleasure it was to film those scenes with her. Unlike Kenny [Carolyn's son, who has been in KE since the first series and is also an MI6 spy], who is so like Carolyn, with that slightly spectrum-like focus and maybe lacking certain social gifts, Geraldine is entirely an emotional creature, who tends towards the spiritual, and therefore drives Carolyn utterly insane.

Harriet Walter also joins the cast in this series. Had you worked with her before?

We're very old friends! We were at the Royal Shakespeare Company together. We did plays, and we've been at the National [Theatre] together. We go back a long way, and we're very good friends, and I was dying to have some scenes with her, hoping that there would be a huge standoff between her character and Carolyn – but that didn't necessarily emerge...

Carolyn has the best lines in Killing Eve, would you agree?

We all have very good lines. But I'm glad you think that! I love Carolyn. She has power, and power always has some connection with wisdom. But, of course, Carolyn doesn't have wisdom; she appears to have wisdom. She is a wonderful series of contradictions. She's very scatty about ordinary things, while being very clever on difficult things.

Which is often the way with highly intelligent people...

Yes. So she's very brilliant, but not so brilliant that she knows the answer to everything. She does make mistakes. I think that's really important. And the result is that you can both like her and dislike her.

Would you say that Phoebe Waller-Bridge – who wrote the first series and developed all the characters for the screen - is particularly good at creating compellingly flawed women?

She's a master. There were many years that Phoebe was down in her pub doing her writing and obviously learning every day, beat by beat, how to get better. People like Phoebe don't fall off a log. As she says herself, she puts in sorrow and joy cheek by jowl, as all good writers do.

Series three seems especially prescient given the current situation...

It has just absolutely hit the moment correctly. Every generation is a bit lost. But something about this generation's [lostness] has to do with actual identity, and not belonging, and a strange isolation. Despite a plethora of tools that allow us to connect, people seem to feel more disconnected than ever. They're unsure as to what is good to believe in that lasts more than the length of a text message.

Phoebe's gift [as writer and now executive producer; series three is written by Suzanne Heathcote] has been being able to hold that in relation to the things that unite us, which is humour and delight. Humour is brilliant, because it means you recognise the other person, way beyond what they've said. You recognise them in their foolishness. Phoebe's done that in spades. She is also infectious. Her enthusiasm for everybody around her makes her a superb leader. In the beginning [when Killing Eve started, in 2018] you just wanted to believe her and follow her. I was terrified of the piece. I wasn't sure whether it was funny or not funny. And, of course, it's both funny and not funny.

You were terrified of the piece – but how did you feel about playing Carolyn?

I lost a lot of sleep over her. I wasn't sure that allowing Carolyn to be so unknowable would hold in the audience's imagination. But it more than holds. People want to be chasing her down the rabbit holes of her mind. Normally, I play somebody who holds the moral argument. And there's something about Killing Eve where nobody holds the moral argument. There's a ruthlessness to the power of those people.

And of course, it plays a brilliant trick, which is that the characters are charming. And they're charming because they're full of wit. And you're left slightly hooked on them, because you just don't know where they're going next. They have all the charm of virtuous people, so they lead you up the garden path, and then sometimes they're not. It's like juggling: there's always a ball in the air. And you don't know where it's going to land. LC liant male-led things out there, like Succession. There's space for all of us."

After posting a picture of herself breastfeeding her baby daughter Frances on the Game of Thrones set, Whelan became a postergirl for the #normal-isebreastfeeding movement, despite being unaware it was a movement. "It wasn't a conscious decision to pioneer breastfeeding, because that's not my place. I've got one kid and I do a bit of boobing: I'm no one, but I was proud to show how accepted it was [on set]. When you have the right support around you, it's easy to achieve. It's something that should be achievable for everybody."

Frances is now two: as we speak, she's cheerfully watching Baby Shark in the south London home Whelan shares with her husband, writer and comedian Gerry Howell. "I was worried, as many actors are, that if I had a baby my career would be over. Actually, if you just ask for what you need without being an idiot, it [taking your baby on set] isn't insurmountable. And your career isn't over."

popping up in all my favourite TV shows, not least because she contrives to look so different in every one. Is this chameleon-like quality something of which she's conscious? "I'm conscious that it does seem to be true, but it's not something that I make a point of achieving. I have a strange face that's not known for beauty, but perhaps for character, so perhaps I'm able to shapeshift a bit more, because I'm not known for the cheekbones and the big eyes. I don't know."

Character is better, I assure her. Character lasts. "Yes, maybe there's more longevity in character." All the beautiful people spend their lives worrying about it fading, then spend a fortune on Botox.

"That's why I'm so grateful that I don't have beauty. I'm a cool person, it's OK, but I do know that I've got a character face that will hopefully serve me for a long time."

As will her talent. With Frances getting restless, I probe her on Killing Eve one final time. Does anything happen in the new series that will shock viewers any more than they already have been?

"Nothing at all," she says, deadpan. And then, with a missed beat that makes her such a good comedic actor: "Yes! Massively! When we did it at the read-through, there were audible gasps. It's quite shocking. I can't wait for people to see it..."

Justin Webb

Today Mon-Fri 6am, Sat 7am Radio 4

It's eight o'clock in the morning and I'm making a coffee. "What's up next?" asks my wife Sarah, who's just come downstairs. "I'm talking to Grant Shapps, the Transport Secretary." "Ooh, I'll do it!"

NO! Presenting Today from home is fraught with practical difficulties, but it's the ones you haven't bargained for that throw you: a mischievous partner with a career change in mind; a dog that thinks you might be more cheerful if you heard him chewing his squeaky plastic pineapple; an online delivery the very moment you're handing to the weather.

It's all very odd. For more than a decade, at half past three in the morning, the picture in our street in south London has been the same: I emerge, say a croaky "Hi" to the driver, and make for the office, head down over the papers.

Until last month, when everything changed. For 60 years, Today has been presented from a studio. True, we sometimes get out and about, but someone is always back at base to keep it all together. Now, the mothership is deserted.

But the home fires are burning bright. Well, bright-ish.

I admit I have embraced a slightly more relaxed approach to the morning. I'm not shaving, largely to compete with Nick Robinson, who came back from a holiday last year looking like a Mills & Boon romantic hero. As for clothing: the great cliché of radio is that you can do it with no clothes at all if you really want to. But why would you? I wear the same clothes I would wear to the office.

And I sit up straight. Once, in another life, I was in the Bosnian civil war, sharing a room with my good friend the BBC correspondent Allan Little. After a noisy night of shelling, Allan decided to do his early-morning Today hit on the phone by his bed, only then to drift off. Lesson learnt: do radio naked if you must, but sit up.

I find myself getting up at the same time, because the time I used to spend in the car to work is now spent bringing work to home. There is something daunting about starting up the whole kit and caboodle in the small hours with the knowledge that there's no one to help if the tech goes wrong. I have a fancy telephone connection, a BBC computer, a good quality microphone and an "atomic clock" app for those squeaky junctions before the news when the pips are coming and will wait for no man.

t's all a bit of a lark. Except, of course, that it's also deadly serious. Today is a service; it's not for profit. It's meant to be there, designed to be there, when it's needed, morning after morning, into our shared future. It's not a tiny bit as important as curing Covid-19 or getting sick people the help they need, but – like the BBC itself – it should be taken seriously. In the early hours of the morning, sitting in my study, I am taking it seriously.

We all are: Nick, Mishal Husain and Martha Kearney, but also a whole team of people whose lives are also disrupted and who are doing their best to make sure the service we offer is as good as it can be. This home-presenting period has reminded me more than ever about the team, without whom, of course, nothing would work.

One day we will be back in the office. Like everyone in the country, we will have learnt a lot. We are more flexible than we thought. We are closer, even when socially distant.

And Nick will get to see my beard and realise he cannot compete.

The Mash Report Friday 10pm BBC2

Our new six-part series of The Mash Report began on 3 April. When the idea of presenting it from home was first floated, I had serious doubts it was viable. Even now I have no idea how it's done. The technical input from others is extraordinary; all I have to do is plug things in and switch them on.

A specialist camera person in full protective gear came to my house to set up a disinfected camera and three lighting panels in a small box room – we followed the safety guidelines to the letter. Then I dressed the shelves behind me with a couple of Easter egg jokes, the toilet rolls being the most obvious. By the time the first show went out, news programmes were broadcasting with anchors at home and the audience was familiar with our current televisual vocabulary.

There were some technical problems along the lines of Donald Rumsfeld and his "known unknowns" – a lot of stopping and starting. We usually record over two hours on a Thursday night, whereas now we shoot over several hours both on Wednesday and Thursday.

My beard was certainly an unforeseen problem. The last time I tried to trim it myself, my barber said if I ever did it again he would insist on hosting The Mash Report, so I guess I now owe him an episode. It went horribly wrong and I had to shave the whole thing off.

It's strange delivering lines without a studio audience. The monologues have to generate their own momentum now, as I can't rely on laughter to roll me to the next line. But working from home has parallels with a normal writers' room. They're notoriously unhealthy places – crisps and sweets on the go, and by the evening the room takes on a sub-optimal odour. In that sense, nothing has changed, but I really miss working together in the same space.

Being able to see the people I care about is something I hope never to take for granted again. I also hope this time fundamentally reframes how we talk about key workers, doing jobs the rest of us can't live without.

Peston Wednesday 10.45pm ITV

I began broadcasting from home on 20 March – my partner Charlotte had symptoms of Covid-19 so we went into quarantine. I had mild symptoms and think I've probably had it, although of course I have no access to a test.

When it was clear I'd be broadcasting from home for a good while, we turned our sitting room into a makeshift mini-studio. Charlotte was a bit worried that we've never got round to buying a nice lampshade for the overhead pendant light, so she was very keen that the camera should be angled away from the exposed lightbulb. Other than that, there was no background curating.

Political journalists do a lot of hanging around in the House of Commons picking up stories, so at the moment there's no bumping into people who tell you stuff that's on their minds, which could be a big lead. Interviewing by video link means losing the nuance of body language that you get face-to-face, but there is a gain – you have to concentrate much more on the words being said. What distinguishes my Wednesdaynight ITV show from others is the relaxed chat in the studio with MPs who I always call "my so-called chums". That's difficult to replicate down the line.

A big risk is that I find myself working literally all the time – I can't feel any difference between weekdays and weekends, and it easily becomes 24/7. With a story as enormous and important as Covid-19, it's very hard to persuade yourself to take time off. I have three email addresses that are all deluged with very long emails from scientists, statisticians, analysts, struggling businesses... I respond to as many as I can, but it's hard to prioritise which are really important and which are a bit more eccentric.

6A big risk is that I find myself working literally all the time?

I'm in touch with office colleagues via WhatsApp, Zoom and Houseparty like everyone else, with lots of funny and touching content. I miss going to my favourite coffee shops for an expertly made flat white – is that a bourgeois thing to say? - but I seem to have slightly lost my taste for alcohol. I'm sure it will come back.

The longer we broadcast this way, and the longer we have slightly lower-quality visuals, the more it will become the accepted norm. That might be a good thing in the news sense, because it will give us all flexibility on how and where we broadcast. We may become more obsessed with breaking stories and the quality of the journalism rather than the look of it. That might be a good thing. KB

Mary Beard Front Row Late Thursday 11.30pm BBC2 I do my broadcasting in a little study

Mary Beard in her makeshift studio in hei study at home in Cambridge

we built at the back of our house in Cambridge. I have absolutely nobody else in here, it's just me. I'm not the heroic presenter; the only reason I can make broadcastable telly is because there is a BBC team behind me, explaining how to get better pictures on the iPhone, helping me to download vast files and showing me - remotely - how to set myself up with Margaret Atwood on Zoom for Front Row Late. Every now and then little parcels of tech stuff - headphones, mics and so on – arrive in boxes at the front door, which I have to open with gloves and disinfect properly.

I have tea and biscuits in here, but when we film Front Row Late in the studio we have wine, so I'm allowing myself the occasional glass towards the end of the day. Only one – two is dangerous. And I do brush my hair before I start work. Everybody says I don't, but I promise I do!

I'm working very hard, but I'm perhaps not as disciplined at home as I could be. I have those moments when I think, "What shall I do now? Oh, I'll have some more toast and Marmite!" I'm becoming a real slob, partly because I lack a bit of willpower. My husband is trying to encourage me, rightly, to go up and down the stairs more often than I usually do.

I did actually look at Joe Wicks. He does a wonderful exercise routine for seniors. I thought, "Right, I'm 65, I'm a senior," and I did play it to myself and thought, "I can do that." The trouble was, I never quite got around to it.

When we saw what was happening with the lockdown, I thought BBC Arts would say, "Oh, well, that late-night show, that can go, can't it?" But they did no such thing. There has been huge support and I really hope that when I'm doing this from my study and it's actually going out on telly, people think, "God, they did well!"

There may still be a few glitches and it probably won't be quite as slick as some things, but if I was completely on my own with a laptop and an iPhone, then I would have made really rubbish telly! MICHAEL HODGES

Blue Peter Thursday 5.30pm CBBC

I'm currently at home with my parents and two brothers in Oxfordshire and the conservatory has become my makeshift base. There's a very Blue Peter do-it-yourself attitude about how the show is now being made, which is the essence of the programme; giving something a go, getting involved and believing you can do it.

Luckily, I had a few Blue Peter badges lying around at home, otherwise I would have had to appear on screen badge-less. If there was one thing that could have got me fired, that would have been it!

It's a very full house here and my brothers and I aren't used to having all this downtime to spend together, but we've set up a darts tournament in the garage. I'm quite enjoying working from home, but I'm definitely missing the Blue Peter crew. I now always have two laptops on the go – one for my script, the other so I can video-call my producers. The team are sending me post, but because my producer has to be on mute while we're recording I've put about 85 pink post-it notes on the window behind the camera reminding me of names, ages and where children have written in from.

At the moment, the show can't be about the adventures that the presenters are having because I'm here at home and Richie [Driss, Russell's co-host] is at his flat in Salford. Instead, we're seeing lots of what the children are getting up to, be it making homes for hedgehogs or cooking in their kitchens.

I also feel it's really important that our audience gets to see us coping. So many children are turning to CBBC so they can see their favourite presenters and I think they appreciate the stability of having Blue Peter there for them as normal.

It's a real public service – we need to show them that they're not alone in having their lives turned upside down. It's us, too. DAVID BROWN

The Steph Show Mon-Fri 12 noon C4

The show has been in planning since last autumn. We were all set to launch from a studio at Leeds Docks on 30 March, but around the beginning of March we started to think that might not be possible. We chucked around the idea of me presenting from home but didn't take it seriously until lockdown was announced on 23 March. After a feasibility study, everyone jumped into action.

It means I've never been at home this much. It's amazing to spend lots of time with my daughter and I'm chatting to my neighbours more – at a safe distance, of course. Meanwhile, we do the show from my kitchen/dining/living room. Our director has done a lot of reality TV and he thought of rigging four cameras in my living space, so that I could move around presenting from different areas, like a studio. A couple of technicians set it all up under distancing guidelines, and then I did a hell of a lot of tidying. I have a five-month-old baby so my partner and I moved all her stuff to the "good room" next door. I got in some brighter cushions that go with the show titles, and that was it.

During each show there's a production team of 12 on site. Four are in my garage (I moved my car to my parents' house), all two metres apart, with eight others either outside or in one of the four trucks on the drive and in the garden. We've had to add a Portaloo and set up a hand sanitising station, so we're lucky we've a house that made it possible. The first day was disruptive for the neighbours, but they've been great.

The show is live and a fair few times links to guests haven't worked so I've had to fill. But viewers quite like it when the occasional thing goes wrong. My style is more rough and ready than perfectly polished, anyway.

Five days after The Steph Show began, I also presented Have I Got News for You from my kitchen, with all of us taking part remotely.

'I've a five-month-old baby... I did a hell of a lot of tidying up'

Channel 4 co-operated with the BBC to allow the use of a camera. The actual presenting was very weird. You judge a lot on that show by the audience reaction so it was tricky, but I think it worked.

he way we're connecting now with viewers is so different. Every single person is going through something they've never experienced. Everyone is looking for something to make them feel normal, and that's my aim on my show. People are so creative with daft things they're doing, and alongside key workers doing their stuff, that's special.

For so long our society has classed carers, bin collectors and others as unskilled, yet my view has always been we couldn't function without them. There are so many funny people and lovely stories out there, and it was always my plan to focus on that with this show.

I know it sounds proper cheesy, but when we come out of this I don't want anyone to feel like other people are better than them. KB

I'm an obstinate optimist'

Conservationist Jane Goodall has dedicated her life to saving her beloved chimps – but now there's a whole new threat to their future...

s Octogenarian activist Jane Goodall charges around the world with an Attenborough-esque zeal for saving the planet, she has one constant companion – a little stuffed toy she calls Mr H. "He's a sort of monkey and was given to me 29 years ago by a young man who suddenly went blind and decided to become a magician."

Yes, a blind magician. The seeming impossibility of that proposition is a constant reminder to Goodall that her own mission – to save the world from consuming itself – is not a hopeless cause. Former US Marine Gary Haun (hence Mr H) was so accomplished that the children he performed for didn't realise he was blind.

"But at the end he tells them," says Goodall. "He says, 'Look, something awful might happen to you, but if it does don't give up, there's always a way forward.' It's that indomitable spirit that I carry around with me."

Indomitable is a word that fairly describes Goodall, a London-born deb who's just turned 86 but who, in 1960 at the age of 26, left the UK to live and work among chimpanzees in Tanzania. Handpicked by the world-famous anthropologist Louis Leakey, she was part of what became known as the Trimates – a trio of female researchers studying the great apes.

The others in her cohort (also known as Leakey's Angels) were Dian Fossey (gorillas) and Biruté Galdikas (orangutans). Through their work the three women, and Goodall in particular, changed not just our view of apes, but of mankind, too. "Thanks to the chimps being so like us in behaviour and biology, science simply had to come out of its narrow reductionist box and realise that we too were part of the animal kingdom," she says now.

In 1986, Goodall realised that to save her beloved chimps she'd have to leave the Gombe National Park where she'd spent so much of her adult life and take the message of conservation out to the world. Since then, she's spent more than 300 days of every year travelling to lobby, to cajole, to support and to inspire.

She has the ear – or, more probably, is able to bend the ear – of political leaders around the world. In The Hope, a 90-minute National Geographic special marking the 50th anniversary of Earth Day, she's seen mimicking an intimate ape greeting with the royal formerly known as Prince Harry.

Does she still hope for his support in the future? She's of an age where things like protocol and convention matter less. "I don't know how his career is going to map out, but yes, I've been in touch, though I think he's finding life a bit challenging just now."

He and brother William are both great allies, champions of the natural world, I venture. "Yes, except they hunt and shoot," she fires back. "But I think Harry will stop because Meghan doesn't like hunting, so I suspect that is over for him."

16 RadioTimes 18–24 April 2020

OR THE MOMENT, the coronavirus epidemic means travelling the world is over for her. She's had to cancel a speaking tour of North America and Canada and is currently grounded with her sister Judy in the Bournemouth home they grew up in and where Goodall was first inspired to pursue a life with animals, through fictional characters such as Doctor Dolittle and Tarzan.

"All the books I had as a child are here, and the trees I used to climb are outside my window. So, it's my roots really."

Is she restless being stuck in one place? "No, I hate travelling the way I do, but I still have a message to get out." Interviews like this are one way. Technology avails her of many others. "With all the emails and requests I'm getting, this is actually more exhausting than travelling," she sighs.

Is she worried about Covid-19 spreading

'Harry will stop hunting – Meghan doesn't like it'

among other primates, such as her chimpanzees? "It's hard to say, because even with the human population, why do some people get sick and die and others survive? People don't really understand this virus at all. I can't really predict the consequences." Though she then underlines how easy it is for disease to jump species. "Chimps are 98.6 the same as us and we got HIV from them." Goodall, twice married with one son and three grandchildren, is at her most evangelical when talking about the international youth movement she founded called Roots & Shoots. Informed, compassionate youngsters will, she believes, provide the salvation she's looking for... Though don't mention school strikes.

"It's the youth that gives me the most hope," she says. "I'm not particularly thrilled about children missing school and marching, I'd rather they did things like planting trees and clearing rubbish, but it's a sign that young people are determined to have a voice.

"When I travel around, I meet amazing people doing fantastic things. The trouble is the media tends to play up the doom and gloom, which of course they have to, but they don't give enough time to the positives and if people only hear the doom and gloom, they give up and lose hope."

But is it possible, with the world in the grip of climate change, with deforestation and population growth changing the face of the planet, not to lose hope? To remain optimistic? She laughs.

"It does get harder, but because I see so much of the positive side, the energy and commitment of young people and because I'm basically an obstinate optimist, I won't give up."

Goodall, who as family tradition demands drinks a whisky "with a splash" at 7pm each night wherever she is in the world, has been described as the Mother Teresa of the environment. Perhaps we should raise a toast to that – and to obstinate optimism. TERRY PAYNE

Keep calm and

Now is the perfect time to get out the needle and thread, says The Great British Sewing Bee judge Esme Young LONGSIDE "DIG FOR VICTORY", another phrase that's enjoying a revival is "make do and mend". It feels apt, then, that a new series of The Great British Sewing Bee begins this week on BBC1, having moved from BBC2.

"Everyone is feeling a bit anxious, so we all need something to keep us going and cheer us up," says fashion designer Esme Young, who judges the contestants' efforts with fellow expert Patrick Grant. "I'm so pleased that Sewing Bee is back on television, and hopefully it will be uplifting and comforting to viewers."

This is the sixth series of the stitching contest, now presented by comedian Joe Lycett, and Young hopes we'll find solace not only in watching the show, but also in the act of sewing itself.

"I think sewing is really good for your mental health. It makes you slow down, and you solve problems," she says. "Since the lockdown, I have been sewing so many things, including alterations that I haven't been able to get round to for a while."

Indeed, her advice to us all is to "keep calm and keep stitching!"

Young adds: "You are using your imagination and when you've finished making the item you feel it's a great achievement. It's comforting, and at the same time you're concentrating so hard it means you're not thinking about depressing things. The more distraction the better and, actually, making something that you can wear can only be a good thing!"

Ironically, Young currently doesn't have a sewing machine that she can use at home ("all of mine are in my workshop, which of course I can't get to now!"), so instead she's revisiting the pleasures of stitching by hand.

"I love hand sewing, and find it really relaxing. I have just cut the pattern for a bias-cut silk petticoat – I love a petticoat. Not many people wear them any more, but for some reason

You can make items special to you that you just can't buy?

I really like them – and I'm going to hand sew it with lace on it.

"Sewing has been passed down the generations, and it's lovely now that more people – particularly younger people – are embracing it and getting stuck in," she adds. "They sewed in the Iron Age, they had to have something to hold their bear rugs together! It's an ancient art and it's very practical and necessary."

For any stitching novices, Young has some reassuring advice. "If you've never made anything before, you will make mistakes. But if you don't make mistakes, you won't learn. I have many vintage sewing books that I use for reference, but you can go online and there are plenty of tutorials on YouTube." And her top tip? "Keep practising!"

Meanwhile, those with more experience "can make anything," she insists, adding that while she's at home she's making dresses, cushion covers and curtains. "You can make items that are individual and special to you that you just can't buy in the shops."

Sewing also doesn't have to be a solitary activity. "Although I'm not hi-tech on a computer, it's amazing how people can keep in touch in

HOW TO MAKE A DENIM APRON

Here's a cunning use for an old pair of jeans

Denim is a great fabric, but it's very labour- and water-intensive to produce, so the longer we can make use of it, the better. This simple pattern from the Sewing Bee book (below) turns a pair of old jeans into an apron, for men and women. You could add rivets for an industrial look, re-use the pockets, play with the shape, topstitch in a contrasting colour or combine elements from different jeans.

MATERIALS

- Pair of full-length jeans
- Basic sewing kit, including a tape measure, seam gauge and pins
- Unpicker or sharp small snips (embroidery scissors)
 - Denim needle (size 90)

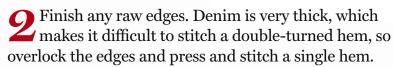

TOP TIP

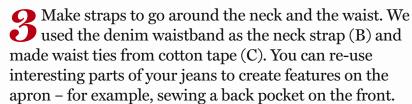

You need a generous amount of fabric for this project, so skinny jeans might not be the best choice.

NOTE

You may want to use a different material for the waist tie.

Using both the legs of your jeans to create your apron front: unpick the inside leg seam of both legs all the way up to the crotch and cut them away from your jeans. Pin the longest sides together and sew down the middle. Press your seam open so it lies flat. Mark out the shape of your apron top at the narrowest part of the leg (A). Cut out, unfold the leg and there is your apron front.

these times," says Young. "In the past, if there was a lockdown like this, we wouldn't have had social media. Now Patrick, Joe and I have a WhatsApp group and we are constantly in touch. Although I miss seeing them for a night out, we are always texting."

Alongside her role on Sewing Bee, Young, whose sewing career spans more than 50 years, also teaches at renowned London fashion college Central St Martin's and has moved her students' tutorials online.

"I'm sure it will all work out OK. At least we will still be in touch and I can keep teaching, that's the main thing," she says. "With what's happening at the moment, it's important to keep going on as normal the best we can - even if it's remotely." FRANCES TAYLOR

PLAYED

Joe Cole found fame in Peaky Blinders. Now he's back in a new graphic gangster tale. So how come his role model is Matt Lucas?

INTERVIEW BY EMMA COX

T THE AGE of 31, actor Joe Cole has already established a bit of a reputation for playing hardman roles. As John Shelby in Peaky Blinders he stabbed an Italian rival in the eye, between shooting gangsters and blowing things up; while his award-winning turn in the 2017 film A Prayer before Dawn saw him as a kick-boxing convict in a Thai prison.

His latest project, the nine-part Sky Atlantic series Gangs of London, is no less violent: its stand-out scenes are huge hit-'em-up sequences with a graphic comic-book style, reminiscent of Asian combat movies, with over-the-top sound effects and a creative choice of weapons, from ashtrays to axes.

But this time, Cole is taking a bit of a back seat from the action to play Sean Wallace, the privately educated son and heir of a recently murdered gangland boss (Colm cool, detached stillness and he says he wasn't sad to miss out on most of the fights.

"Not at all, I enjoyed it," he insists. "In terms of the fighting I have done a lot of physical roles, so it was nice to tell other people what to do. I enjoyed playing the king on the chessboard rather than the knight or bishop. It was a coming-ofage role, in a way."

It's certainly grown up. Cole's performance is mesmerising, sharpsuited and with an accent that's half-posh, halfcockney. When I suggest it may be based on director Guy Ritchie, Cole laughs and doesn't deny it. In terms of motivation, though, he says he based the character more on Eddie Hearn, the son of boxing and snooker promoter Barry Hearn. "Barry is hugely successful and Eddie was young and had to prove himself in his father's world," says Cole. "I use that analogy because that's what Sean is. Audiences may not warm to him at first. They may see him as rash and dangerous. But once you start to see into his past, see that he has this PTSD from a traumatic upbringing, there is an empathy that develops, hopefully."

Gangs have been a staple subject matter in film and television for decades: from the Godfather trilogy and The Sopranos to Peaky Blinders. And Cole is obviously drawn to them.

"I said after Peaky that and Paul Anderson in I would steer clear of that genre," he says. "I was sent Gangs and initially, when I saw the title,

I thought, 'No way'. But then I saw Gareth Evans was involved [he's co-created, written and directed the series] and I love him, so I read the script and it was the best I've read in years.

"These are my favourite kind of roles. There are different shades to these characters and different things to play. There is > a vulnerability and sweetness to Sean, but there is also a darker edge and a lot of those gangland characters

THE BROTHERS

With Cillian Murphy

do provide that.

"That genre was always my favourite growing up - Boardwalk Empire, The Wire. I loved the characters and the way they spanned years or even decades. There's something about the genre that's exciting and takes you out of your relatively straightforward life. And I get to play something totally different from my usual life, which is fun."

As the oldest of five boys growing up in Kingston-upon-Thames, perhaps it's reminiscent of his childhood, surrounded by a close group of brothers? Cole laughs. "Maybe, I don't know... My family aren't gangsters, though."

Indeed not. His mum was a primary school teacher and his dad was a management consultant, which he gave up later in life to become a sailing instructor. There are no actors in the family's history but the brothers, all talented performers, used to put on Christmas concerts and there are home videos in existence of Cole singing Moon River and bossing around his brothers - two of whom have also become actors.

"They're more talented than I am," he says. "One is particularly musical. They're all doing different things. One of my proudest moments was when Finn got a part in Peaky Blinders [as Michael Gray, Polly's son]. I felt very emotional about that." Cole first caught the bug for acting aged nine in an Oliver Twistthemed assembly in which he played, naturally, "an Artful Dodger-type character". In secondary school his drama teacher put on ambitious plays, which he loved, but never thought of acting as being a proper career.

But as he got older, having been a high achiever, suddenly he struggled to concentrate at school, failed to get the grades to get into a top university, and developed an almost-catastrophic apathy for his future, at one point getting himself arrested - he doesn't care to elaborate what for, replying simply, "Nothing much, it's not necessary."

HINGS MIGHT HAVE turned out very differently had he not written off his academic dreams - and ambitions as a carpet salesman and applied for the National Youth Theatre. Suddenly, his drive and focus returned.

Small parts in The Bill and Holby City started him off, with his big break coming in cult youth drama Skins. Since then he's rarely been out of work, especially since Peaky Blinders propelled him to another level.

Not that he's all that keen to talk about the hit drama: he answers my questions about it politely rather than enthusiastically. "To be honest, I think I got out at the right time," he says. "I have a lot of fond memories and love for everyone involved, watching the likes of Cillian Murphy and Helen McCrory do their thing. It was good times. It was like a family."

Other projects followed, including an episode of Black Mirror and the Channel 4 comedy drama Pure, as well as A Prayer before Dawn, for which he won best actor in the 2018 British Independent Film Awards. He immersed himself fully in that part, filming in a Thai prison surrounded by non-English speaking extras and transforming his body with training.

"I'm not putting myself in the same group as these guys," he says, "but Tom Hardy in Bronson and Michael Fassbender in Hunger were inspirations for me. I always wanted to do something like that where it's a real, physical, true story and you put everything on the line. A Prayer before Dawn was a game-changer for me."

It would be easy to pigeonhole Cole, but it would also be unfair. He's currently writing a couple of scripts and is keen to keep mixing up more light-hearted roles alongside the intense ones. In real life he is naturally sharp-witted, so it comes as little surprise to learn he nearly made a comedy with Matt Lucas. "I wrote a comedy drama years ago," he admits, "based on my upbringing and things that happened to me. I had a small part on Come Fly with Me. I was only in for a day, but I kept in touch with Matt and when the script was ready I cheekily emailed it to him and asked for feedback.

"He liked it and we actually set up a company to make this show and it went through various iterations, but for one reason or another we never got it made. Then my career sort of took off. Matt was a real role model, a bit of a champion early on, and I have nothing but love and respect for him. At the beginning you don't know what you're doing, but he said, 'You're talented, man,' and gave me belief in myself."

KIRSTEN EVANS, 34, A BRIDAL HAIR AND MAKE-UP ARTIST, LIVES WITH HER MECHANIC HUSBAND MARK

Having our daughter has been an incredible journey and Mark and I have gone through every emotion you can think of over the last few years.

We always wanted children – when we met online six years ago, we had both split up with previous partners because they didn't. But we also knew it wasn't going to be easy. Shortly before I met Mark, I learnt I had a heart-shaped womb, which makes pregnancy more challenging.

After we married, we had miscarriage after miscarriage. I never got past the seven-week mark and after the sixth miscarriage, in June 2018, I'd pretty much given up on having a family naturally.

We decided to explore other avenues, and had actually been accepted as foster parents when, in October 2018, I learnt that I had cartilage in my womb that could be removed by surgery and might help me carry a pregnancy.

'I had pretty much given up on having a family naturally'

An operation was booked for the following April but I still didn't get my hopes up; I'd been through too much, and when I accidentally fell pregnant again in February before the surgery was due, I assumed I would miscarry again.

Instead, week after week went by and before I knew it I was at my 20-week scan, which is when we learnt that our baby's oesophagus wasn't connected to her stomach OLIVIA-HOP and she would require surgery when she was born. My pregnancy was also high-risk because of the excess fluid in my womb caused by her inability to swallow.

It was a shock, but after everything that had happened both Mark and I took it in our stride. We were so thrilled that I was still pregnant that our view was that we would happily take any hand we were dealt. We completely trusted the doctors, and our focus became extending the pregnancy as far as possible - ideally to 30 weeks.

MELISSA AND BERTIE

MELISSA KYNOCH IS MUM TO FOUR-YEAR-OLD DEI AND GAVE BIRTH TO BERTIE SIX MONTHS AGO

As a 40-something mum I was well aware there was an increased risk of having a child with Down's syndrome: when I had Dei at 41 I was already classed as a geriatric mother and four years later I'd gone into a whole different risk bracket.

As far as I was concerned though, "risk" was the wrong word: I felt like being pregnant again was such a blessing that I didn't even want to be given the statistics for the likelihood of Down's.

Then at my 12-week scan I was told my readings indicated a number of problems with the baby, some of which would be incompatible with life.

Waiting for the results of blood tests was one of the darkest times of my life, so when I received a call to say my baby had a high chance of being positive for Down's but low risk for the more lifethreatening conditions, I cried with relief.

A more detailed scan followed, which pretty much confirmed that Bertie had Down's syndrome, but also that he had a heart condition.

I was determined to fight for my boy, as becoming a mother later in life made me feel I had finally found my purpose. I'd always wanted to be a mum, but the right person had never come BERTIE along. When I got pregnant at 41 with my boyfriend at the time, it was a magical surprise.

That boyfriend didn't stick around, but then I met Richard, Bertie's father, and when I got pregnant at 44 I couldn't believe how blessed I was. At first Richard wasn't too sure; now he's a devoted father, even though we're no longer in a relationship.

The doctors induced me at 36 weeks, and I had a fantastic labour. Bertie showed he was a fighter from the start, too: while doctors had prepared a cot for him in the neonatal care unit, he did so well that he didn't need it and I was able to take him home the next day.

After that things got more complicated: Bertie got jaundice and had to be readmitted, after which his condition deteriorated. He had an eight-week stint in intensive care and then, shortly after arriving home, he was readmitted again suffering heart failure. The doctors operated and he was in hospital for another nine weeks.

Thankfully he's now back home. Richard and I don't know whether he'll need further surgery; we're just taking it one step at a time. Bertie is such a chilled, happy little baby and brings joy to us every day.

FAY AND REMI

FAY RICKETTS, 34, GAVE BIRTH TO REMI LAST NOVEMBER. SHE AND HER PARTNER RYAN LIVE WITH FAY'S ELDER DAUGHTERS

Ryan and I always knew that my pregnancy was going to be high-risk – but it was a risk we wanted to take for Ryan to become a father.

He'd already taken on the role for my two daughters after the sudden death of their dad, my husband Karl, who four years ago passed away unexpectedly at the age of 31 following a bleed on the brain.

I was completely blindsided: there were no warning signs and I was left a widow with two children aged just three and eight months [Isla and Seren].

Karl and I had been through a rough few years beforehand, too, including my diagnosis in 2014 with cervical cancer. Treatment involved having part of my cervix removed, which was always going to be a problem with another pregnancy.

The doctors gave me an abdominal stitch to seal the womb, but when I fell pregnant with Seren, I had a very difficult time and I was on bedrest throughout.

> Then, when she was born in 2015, we discovered she had talipes, or club foot, and arthrogryposis, which would affect her walking.

We were just processing this when Karl died. I was devastated and never dreamt I would meet anyone else, so although I had had my abdominal stitch replaced after Seren, it felt like I would never need it. Until, to my amazement, Ryan came into my life.

He didn't put any pressure on me to have another baby, but he was so wonderful with my girls that I wanted him to have a child of his own to bind us all together.

When I did fall pregnant again, we knew there was a high chance I would give birth prematurely and, from the 20-week scan onwards, I was in hospital most of the time in a lot of pain. Towards the end I was begging the doctors to get the baby out as I was in agony.

Remi was born by caesarean section at 34 weeks and, while she came out crying, she then stopped breathing. The next thing we knew, lots of doctors rushed in and she was whisked away to a ventilator.

It was scary but the fact that I'd been through something similar with Seren took some of the fear away. Remi did amazingly well, and we were able to take our beautiful, healthy daughter home eight days later. I feel so lucky that we were able to complete our family. INTERVIEWS BY ISOBEL JAMES

HIDDEN GEM

Women in Love Friday 9.00pm Sony Classic

The word "maverick" is overused, but Ken Russell, who died aged 84 in 2011, approached traditional cinema from various directions, reappraising the biopic and period drama in the process. Women in Love, adapted by Larry Kramer from the DH Lawrence novel, remains his finest and most accessible work, nominated for four Oscars (including best director). It follows two sisters (Glenda Jackson and Jennie Linden) and their suitors (Oliver Reed and Alan Bates) in the Midlands of the 1920s. Famed for its homoerotic nude fireside wrestling scene, it's a tactile, unvarnished piece, full-blooded and unabashed about sexuality, class issues and the nature of art. AC

Grease ★★★★

Sunday 5.50pm C4

Thanks to the diaries I kept as a boy, I can state with confidence that in 1978, aged 13, my early teen obsessions ran as follows: Monty Python, the Electric Light Orchestra, the RSPB, and John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, the lithe new stars of Grease, a high school musical I had yet to see.

That September, my friend Hirsty and I were dropped off at the Northampton ABC so that we could remedy this intolerable purgatory. The agonising wait served only to multiply our chills.

Don't forget, this was the very same year in which I was transfixed and owned by another blockbusting, all-American import, Star Wars which arrived in the faraway towns of the UK nine long months after its LA premiere. Grease and Star Wars represented something of a watershed in terms of the hopelessness of my devotion to the next picture show.

HOULD IT EVER arise in a pub quiz, Randal Kleiser is the name of the director of Grease, a man lost to obscurity despite masterminding what was a musically enhanced film adaptation of a nostalgic, 1950s-set touring production, whose marketing was planned militarily. Its arrival in cinemas was presaged by five drip-fed hit singles, each a bawdily, bendily choreographed tease revealing a little more about the plot, and, in You're the One That I Want, giving away the big makeover reveal of Newton-John's character Sandy.

The Grease soundtrack album sold 22 million copies – one of the biggest sellers of all time. It took the coronavirus to prise its brothel-creepers from theatre stages around the world, and one assumes they'll be back in a braver new era than the Eisenhower years when the story is set.

Hirsty and I walked home from the town centre that balmy evening convinced that we were now transformed into slick, bequiffed, leather-jacketed, comb-wielding high-school adults. We weren't but it mattered not. As newly anointed Grease fans, we imagined that we jitterbugged all the way down Billing Road.

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

 \square The Sense of an Ending $\star\star\star$

DRAMA This adaptation of Julian Barnes's 2011 Booker-winning novel about the unreliability of memory and the danger of revisiting the past is set in one of those leafy parts of London where people casually discuss philosophy over the garden fence. It begins genial, self-congratulatory and slow, but that all changes when a letter and sum of money lands on the mat of divorced, camera-shop proprietor Jim Broadbent. The missive triggers a series of flashbacks to Broadbent's university years, where he's convincingly played by Billy Howle, star of another tweedy literary adaptation, On Chesil Beach. The rest of the cast is first-rate, and includes Harriet Walter, Charlotte Rampling, Emily Mortimer and Downton's Michelle Dockery. It's all crisply directed by Ritesh Batra (The Lunchbox), and while you might sense the ending before the protagonists do, it's not

CAPER These things rarely come off, but the reteaming of Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid stars Paul Newman and Robert Redford and their director George Roy Hill proved to be a glorious triumph. Newman and Redford play conmen who, after the death of an old chum, set about fleecing dangerous mobster Robert Shaw out of a fortune. The sting itself is as audacious as it is elaborate, but the real pleasure comes from the chemistry between the two leads, the lovingly created 1930s settings and Marvin Hamlisch's inspired reworking of Scott Joplin's music. JF (US 1973, may be edited for language, HD)

Seabiscuit ★★★ 1.40-4.25pm Sony Movies

SPORTS DRAMA The incredible but (mostly) true story of a racehorse that won against all the odds is told in this overly sentimental yet thoroughly absorbing film. Jeff Bridges, Chris Cooper and Tobey Maguire play the owner, trainer and jockey of a stubborn no-hoper named Seabiscuit, who lifts the spirits of Depression-era America. Gary Ross may be unsubtle in his direction at times – the parallels between the injured Maguire and the lame Seabiscuit are overplayed – but the emotional core of this heart-warming story nonetheless remains true, while the races are grippingly executed. AJ (US 2003, edited for violence, language)

_ _ Jumanji ★★★★ 3.00-5.00pm Comedy Central

ADVENTURE It was dismissed by many critics as a noisy, scary and utterly worthless excuse for some ingenious computer effects, but as empty experiences go this fantasy is absolutely exhilarating. Toddlers, as well as pre-teens, will be spellbound by the marauding wildlife that is unleashed when Kirsten Dunst and Bradley Pierce rescue Robin Williams from the sinister board game in which he's been trapped for 26 years. Any film where the action is determined by a roll of the dice is bound to be episodic, but this hardly detracts from the enjoyment as one spectacular set piece follows another. The result is wonderful, escapist family entertainment. DP (US 1995, HD)

● • Oliver! ★★★★ 3.20-6.25pm C5

MUSICAL In this immensely popular film version of Lionel Bart's Dickens musical, Ron Moody – top-billed and Oscar-nominated as Fagin - brings a and a certain magnificence, to the role he had created on stage. Mark Lester is a bit too sweet as the orphaned Oliver Twist, but Oliver Reed brings such dark brooding menace to the part of Bill Sikes that he might be too scary for younger viewers. The film collected six Oscars, including best picture and best director (for Carol Reed), and there's no denying that the Academy recognition for sound and art direction was well and truly justified. Today, it works well as a child's introduction to Dickens, and adults can enjoy Shani Wallis's Nancy, Jack Wild's impish Artful Dodger and the inimitable Harry Secombe as Mr Bumble. TS (UK 1968, HD)

● • Shrek ★★★★ 6.15-8.00pm ITV2

COMEDY This animated fantasy from DreamWorks introduced an unlikely hero in the form of Shrek, an ugly, antisocial green ogre, voiced in a variable Scottish accent by Mike Myers. He's tasked by the evil Lord Farquaad (John Lithgow) with rescuing a human princess (Cameron Diaz) in order to rid his swamp of an infestation of fairy-tale characters. Although the animation is stunning for its time, it's the characters that carry what is an incredibly slight beauty-and-the-beast story, with Eddie Murphy's part-improvised turn as Donkey stealing the film. Children will love it, while adults can enjoy the action-movie homages and incessant Disney-mocking. AC (US 2001, HD)

Star Trek into Darkness ★★★★ 12 9.00-11.35pm C4

SCI-FI Benedict Cumberbatch is on sensational form as the roque Starfleet officer who turns intergalactic terrorist in this thrill-a-minute blockbuster sequel from returning director JJ Abrams. The story is built primarily around the burgeoning friendship between Kirk (Chris Pine, more relaxed in his iconic role) and Spock (Zachary Quinto, finding the perfect Vulcan balance of logic and emotion), which means that other key characters are either sidelined or, in the case of Alice Eve's new recruit, weakly drawn. But Abrams pulls out all the action stops, sustaining the warp-speed spectacle all the way through to the epic finale in San Francisco. AJ (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

The Heat ★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm E4 15

COMEDY Sandra Bullock and Melissa McCarthy make an inspired double act in this hysterical cop romp. It gets off to a wobbly start as, separately, each woman tries to negotiate her way through a man's world and bring a drugs lord to justice. But as soon as they pool resources the movie becomes a fluid, fun and wickedly foul-mouthed buddy flick. Bullock's gift for physical comedy is brilliantly employed, as her prissy FBI agent is knocked sideways by McCarthy's antisocial Boston cop. While the plot follows a standard formula, the simple gender twist, great casting and hilarious banter keep things sizzling. SP (US/UK/Aus 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

THRILLER In this small masterpiece from director Francis Ford Coppola, Gene Hackman gives a superb performance as the surveillance expert tracking the movements and voices of Frederic Forrest and Cindy Williams, only to find that the marital infidelity he supposes he is observing could be part of a murder plot. DRAMA Director Tom Hooper (The King's Speech) gleefully re-creates the hairy, fag-smoking days of English club football in the story of manager Brian Clough's unhappy 44-day tenure at Leeds United in 1974. Michael Sheen gives a pitch-perfect performance in the lead, showing how the arrogant, outspoken Clough took on the club, its players, fans and revered former manager Don Revie (Colm Meaney). With Timothy Spall providing respite from the bombast as Clough's righthand man, Peter Taylor, this is a stirring, tragicomic portrait of one of football's great characters. AC (UK/US 2009, swearing, HD)

The more casual viewer will be just as thrilled by a chance to revisit Jason and the Argonauts, the best-loved of his films. He's soon besieged by a giant statue, flying harpies, the Hydra and a troop of skeletons (all designed by Harryhausen). ADVENTURE Speed director Jan De Bont takes destruction to new levels in this daft but breathtaking salute to the daredevil meteorologists who chase the tornados that plague America's Midwest. Bill Paxton stars as a TV weatherman who is drawn back to his dangerous former profession as a storm chaser to help estranged wife Helen Hunt place a tornado-measuring invention in the eye of a storm. Don't worry about the laboured story or the lack of chemistry between Paxton and Hunt; just sit back and gape at the wondrous effects that allow cars, houses and even the odd farm animal to be sent spiralling through the air. JF (US 1996, may be edited for language, HD)

SCI-FI What would happen if there was a real monster hiding inside your truck? This unlikely question is answered with entertaining results by Ice Age director Chris Wedge in his first live-action feature. The story follows hero Tripp (Lucas Till) as he bonds with Creech, a monster resembling both a cartoon shark and a giant pickle who escapes after an industrial drilling accident and takes up residence inside the set of wheels that Tripp has built from scrap. Both man and thing are petrol-heads who attract the attention of the bad guys in town and are forced to stuntdrive their way out of trouble. Till and the effects department put on a good show, but they're not a patch on Jane Levy, who creates sparks in the role of Tripp's almost girlfriend. KK (US 2016, HD)

● • 🖸 The Lego Batman Movie ★★★★★ 4.30-6.35pm ITV2 U

COMEDY Having made his bow in The Lego Movie (2014), the diminutive Caped Crusader gets the starring role in a riotous yarn that delights in mocking both the character's mythology and his previous screen incarnations. Batman, aka Bruce Wayne (voiced by Will Arnett), leads a lonely life away from fighting crime, and faithful butler Alfred (Ralph Fiennes) thinks it's time he had a family. Enter excitable orphan Dick Grayson (Michael Cera), who, after a makeover, becomes the boy wonder Robin and teaches the Dark Knight the joys of friendship and togetherness. With its exemplary voice cast, eye-popping design and a script bursting with verbal and sight gags, this is as good as anything in Pixar's canon – and quite possibly the best Batman film ever. TeS (US/Den 2017, HD)

Anne of the Thousand Days $\star\star\star$ 6.05-9.00pm Sony Classic

DRAMA Producer Hal Wallis's inventive and flamboyant slice of English history revived a moribund genre and provided marvellous showcases for Richard Burton, as a roistering but soulful Henry VIII, and Geneviève Bujold, touchingly well cast as Anne Boleyn. The period interiors are beautifully designed, while Margaret Furse's costumes rightly won an Oscar. It's a shame that Charles Jarrott's direction is poorly paced, but this is, nevertheless, a respectable example of film-making craftsmanship. TS (US 1969)

ADVENTURE Anne Heche stars here as a New York fashion magazine journalist who sets out on a romantic island trip with her fiancé (David Schwimmer from Friends), but ends up stranded on an even more remote island with drunken local pilot Harrison Ford. The pirates and plot twists are entertainingly directed by Ivan Reitman (Ghost Busters), though he neglects to explore the far more interesting chemistry between the two leads. It's enjoyable thanks to the presence of Heche and Ford, but also slightly frustrating, because it could have been so much better. JB (US 1998, may be edited for swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

COMEDY Goldie Hawn and Amy Schumer team up as a cautious mother and impetuous daughter whose Ecuadorian getaway takes a turn for the nightmarish when they are kidnapped. The pair thrash out their differences in the heart of the Amazon, while unhelpful bureaucrats and a bogus saviour leave the ladies to liberate themselves. Schumer's mix of brutal honesty and brilliant timing ekes every last titter out of the solidly witty script, and Hawn is an endearing if occasionally passiveaggressive foil as she keeps cool in a crisis. Comedy legends Wanda Sykes and Joan Cusack lend welcome support. EAS (US 2017, swearing, HD)

P Hotel Mumbai ★★★ 9.00-11.20pm Sky Atlantic

THRILLER Waiter Dev Patel and head chef Anupam Kher risk their lives to protect patrons from terrorists in this dramatisation of the 2008 siege of Mumbai's Taj Mahal Palace Hotel. Director Anthony Maras takes an unflinching look at the event, but sadly, the focus on the violence means we learn little about the people behind the headlines. Given its real-life inspiration, there's something uncomfortable about Hotel Mumbai's determination to show the horror of what happened, but it leaves you in no doubt of the heroism of those involved. 10.30pm-1.25am BBC1

DRAMA This three-hour-long, multi-Oscar winner from Michael Cimino remains one of the finest and most controversial movies about the Vietnam War. Starring Robert De Niro, Christopher Walken, John Savage and John Cazale – as well as Meryl Streep in her first major role – it's a thematic update of the Second World War classic The Best Years of Our Lives, showing how ordinary servicemen - and America itself – coped with the horrors of war and its aftermath. With its mournful guitar theme, performed by classical guitarist John Williams, this intense drama lingers long in the memory. AT (US/UK 1978, violence, swearing, HD)

DRAMA Tom Hardy takes on dual roles here as East End gangster twins Ronnie and Reggie Kray. Writer/director Brian Helgeland fashions their reign of terror into a battle for Reggie's soul between the wife (played by Emily Browning) who wants him above board and the unstable brother loath to lose his partner in crime. Unfortunately, the upbeat handling of the material seems skewed, with Helgeland withholding the impact of the violence until the final act. The screenplay flirts with crime clichés, but Hardy succeeds in creating two distinct, compelling characters, making the movie an entertaining showcase for its lead. EAS (UK 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Rocky ★★★★ 10.00pm-12.25am ITV4

BOXING DRAMA An unknown Sylvester Stallone bet his future on a script he'd written in three-and-ahalf days, about an unfancied Philadelphia fighter given a shot at the title. United Artists risked $1 million for him to star in it, and it returned a knockout $225 million at the box office. Sly became an instant industry heavyweight, and the film he created won the Oscar for best picture. ITV4 is showing the first five Rockys on consecutive nights this week, the armchair version of going the distance. The original remains a genuine, old-fashioned, soulful classic; with its stirring message and bombastic score, it's the champion of boxing movies (I know this because you're already humming Bill Conti's rousing theme tune). And, rebooted as Creed in 2015, the series lives on. (US 1976, violence, swearing, HD)

5.55-8.00pm Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY After hitting the big time with The French Connection and The Exorcist, director William Friedkin opted for a distinct change of pace with this wild but often hugely entertaining heist caper. Re-creating what was then dubbed "the crime of the century", it stars Peter Falk as the leader of a gang of amateur crooks who knock over a Boston security firm to the tune of nearly $3 million. The art direction team notched up an Oscar nomination for their stylish period designs, but it's the cast that catches the eye, with Warren Oates a standout as Falk's doltish sidekick. DP (US 1978)

THRILLER A burnt-out NYPD detective finally finds his moral courage in this redemptive crime story. It centres on the mismatched relationship between Bruce Willis's laconic, alcoholic cop and the motormouth criminal (Mos Def) that he's assigned to transport to court. But a routine 16-block ride turns into a fight for survival when corrupt fellow officers try to prevent the prisoner from testifying. Though the story is simplistic and predictable, there's a pleasing emphasis on character as well as action set pieces. SF (US 2006, violence, swearing)

HORROR Having made his name with independent productions such as The Evil Dead (showing tonight on Horror Channel), director Sam Raimi got his first studio break with this splashy amalgam of The Phantom of the Opera and Doctor X. A perfectly cast Liam Neeson plays the scientist who dons synthetic flesh masks to take revenge on the mobsters who disfigured him. Pathos and tragedy are always lurking beneath the horrific surface of this kaleidoscopic take on classic 1930s Grand Guignol with a nifty 90s spin. With its gothic moodiness, startling make-up effects and expressionistic artifice, it remains one of Raimi's best. AJ (US 1990, violence, swearing)

HORROR Based on Steve Niles and Ben Templesmith's cult graphic novel, this solid shocker unfolds in the Alaskan town of Barrow, which spends 30 days each year cut off from the outside world in polar winter darkness - making it ideal territory for feral bloodsuckers. After the initial invasion, survivors led by sheriff Josh Hartnett attempt to wait out the interminable month without attracting the attention of the screeching fiends. It's a variation on the classic siege-by-monsters scenario, with snowy landscapes adding to the chill of the slow-building tale. AJ (NZ/US 2007, violence, swearing)

January Jones co-stars as Neeson's wife, Diane Kruger is his taxi-driver saviour, while Bruno Ganz is the investigator trying to uncover the deception. AJ (Can/Fr/US/UK/Ger/Jpn 2011, violence, HD)

SCI-FI Using a similar found-footage approach to The Blair Witch Project, this movie follows a group of astronauts on a pioneering mission to the Jupiter moon of Europa. Midnight Run ★★★★ 9.00-11.35pm Film4

THRILLER With today's Robert De Niro on elegiac form in Martin Scorsese's melancholic The Irishman, it's interesting to contrast that with a look back at the film that introduced us to his comic side. Directed by Martin Brest - missing in action since 2003's disastrous Gigli - the set-up of buddy caper Midnight Run (1988) is simple: De Niro's harried bounty hunter must escort white-collar embezzler Charles Grodin from New York to LA and deliver him before the Mob takes him out. There's physical comedy and car chases to be enjoyed in their cross-country trek, but it's the moments during which the two bond that leave the biggest impression, such as Grodin's finger-wagging speech to De Niro about cholesterol. It always feels like a favourite film you forgot about. (US 1988, violence, swearing, HD) comedy This medieval spoof from the formidable team of Norman Panama and Melvin Frank gave Danny Kaye one of his finest roles, as the meek valet who saves a kingdom from its tyrannical ruler. It's worth watching for the classic "vessel-with-the-pestle" routine alone – one of the funniest devices Kaye ever employed. disfigurement confronts the challenge of starting a new school in this engrossing, thoughtful drama by director Stephen Chbosky. Gifted Jacob Tremblay (Room) shines in the lead, cutting a touching but rarely self-pitying figure behind the prosthetics, with fine support from Julia Roberts and Owen Wilson as his parents. HORROR In this highly sophisticated and disturbing Canadian chiller, director John Fawcett expertly transcends the banality of the werewolf formula. When teenage Goth Ginger (Katharine Isabelle) is attacked by a mysterious beast, she becomes a sexually charged dominatrix whose lust turns deadly. Fawcett puts the lycanthrope myth into the tortured-adolescent melting pot and keeps the blood spilling, the suspense high and the humour engaging as this wonderfully crafted film hurtles towards a sustained, lyrical and powerfully bleak climax. 10.00pm-12.20am Sky Witness

THRILLER After the feel-good mythology of Field of Dreams, director Phil Alden Robinson changed tack completely and came up with this smart and snappy caper that is blessed with a sparkling script and an outstanding ensemble cast. Robert Redford, graciously sending himself up just a little, plays the former student radical who now makes a living heading a team that is paid to break in to hi-tech buildings to show up lapses in security systems. However, his past returns to haunt him when he is blackmailed into stealing the ultimate codebreaker. Ignore the holes in plot logic and savour the relaxed and unselfish comic interplay from a cast that includes River Phoenix, Dan Aykroyd, Sidney Poitier, David Strathairn and Mary McDonnell. COMEDY Made during the Second World War but set in a postwar future, this unusual British comedy is based on a Caryl Brahms and SJ Simon novel about a Soho club founded by a group of idlers. The satire is slight, but co-screenwriter/director Val Guest keeps it moving along nicely, and there's terrific work from stars Margaret Lockwood, Vic Oliver and Peter Graves. There's also a wonderfully brash performance from 14-year-old Jean Simmons as Lockwood's sister, demonstrating her future star quality. TS (UK 1944, BW)

SCI-FI This good-looking movie is set in a hi-tech future where a group of human soldiers and a half-android weapons designer (The Crown's Vanessa Kirby) land on a remote island for a training mission, only to encounter a group of robots that try to hunt them down. The special effects are the highlight of this low-budget, claustrophobic thriller, which takes obvious inspiration from sci-fi staples such as Alien and Predator. Clunky dialogue slows things down, and Thure Lindhardt never quite convinces as the group's grizzled leader, but Kirby has great presence as the mysterious antihero. JL (UK 2016, violence, swearing) comedy If you're in the mood for some superior tosh, Judd Apatow's break-out comedy should fit the bill. The premise doesn't sound like much: a middle-aged stereo salesman unwittingly betrays his lack of sexual experience and his colleagues decide to help him lose his

HORROR Hitchcock protégé Gordon Hessler took over the direction of this shocker after the death of Michael Reeves, who had planned it as his follow-up to Witchfinder General. The Edgar Allan Poe story sees a deranged voodoo victim buried alive by his brother, only to return from the grave to wreak gory vengeance. A pervasive aura of evil is summoned up in the wellmounted period piece, and there are flashes of visual flair. Vincent Price is well used, but Christopher Lee sporting a blond wig – is sadly wasted. Shaun of the Dead Executa

9.00-11.05pm ITV2

COMEDY How modest in budget and scope this seems now, 16 years on. The first feature outing for the team behind Channel 4 comedy Spaced, it catapulted director Edgar Wright, co-writer and star Simon Pegg, and co-star Nick Frost to global fame. None could have predicted the success of the resulting "Three Flavours Cornetto" trilogy, which comprised this, Hot Fuzz and The World's End, and accumulated over $150 million worldwide. Satirising zombies with 100 per cent affection and fidelity, Shaun of the Dead remains a confident, landmark fusion of horror and comedy, as scary as it is funny. It unleashes the undead on North London, forcing Pegg's sales assistant, Frost's slob housemate and girlfriend Kate Ashfield (pictured) to turn their local pub into a fortress and make a last stand. It's still irresistible, although not for the squeamish. (UK/US/Fr 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

ROMANTIC COMEDY Hugh Grant reteams with Music and Lyrics writer/ director Marc Lawrence for the fourth time, playing a washed-up Hollywood screenwriter forced to take a teaching post at a provincial university. Marisa Tomei's mature student, a can-do single mum, offers him a fresh perspective on life, as well as his craft, in a film that resolutely sticks to a tried-and-tested comedy formula. No-one does likeably shambolic cynicism quite so well as Grant, though, and Tomei proves a spiky foil – the pair's chemistry ensures this easy-going charmer overcomes its predictable plotting. TJ (US 2014, swearing, HD)

DRAMA Although it promises a buddy yarn to delight and amuse, this rarely screened outing for Robert Redford and Michael J Pollard does little more than cash in on the stars' previous films (Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid and Bonnie and Clyde). Redford is the handsome blond racer who exploits his mechanic (Pollard, who drools over him) and gets ex-drug addict Lauren Hutton pregnant. COMEDY In this feature spin-off from the TV comedy, Steve Coogan's hapless Norfolk radio DJ Alan Partridge becomes the mediator in a siege at the radio station. Alpha Papa draws from Partridge's TV universe, featuring Tim Key's sidekick, Felicity Montagu's PA and Phil Cornwell's damaged jock, and they all benefit from a hilarious script, directed with sharp comic timing by Declan Lowney (Father Ted). THE BEST SHOWS AND BOX SETS TO WATCH ON DEMAND

DANDY HIGHWAYMAN Robin Hood

Series 1-3 available now

A series you can sit down with the family to watch is more valuable now than ever – how about BBC1's spirited version of Robin Hood? Its debut in 2006 was met with the odd mumble about the contemporary language but it was and is a sturdy arrows-andapples caper, with Jonas Armstrong as a cheeky yet moody hero, and some deliciously fruity villainy from Richard Armitage and Keith Allen. David Harewood, Toby Stephens, Joanne Froggatt and Lara Pulver arrive in the third and final series.

LAVISH FAMILY SAGA War and Peace

Available now

Putting aside the inevitable problems that come with compressing Tolstoy's boulder of a book into six episodes, Andrew Davies's dramatisation is a fine period saga in its own right. For every rushed resolution or blank supporting character there's a memorable scene of tingling romance or fierce despair, with one outstanding performance by Paul Dano as luckless cuckold Pierre, and a gradually strengthening portrayal of Natasha by Lily James. If great TV is about great moments, this scores heavily.

DARKLY GRITTY The Devil's Whore

Available now

Co-scripted by Our Friends in the North writer Peter Flannery, this 2008 C4 series has a cast that looks even better now that it did then. Andrea Riseborough capped off her breakthrough year playing Angelica Fanshawe (above), a fictional heroine in the midst of real historical figures who participated in the English Civil War: Peter Capaldi as Charles I, Dominic West as Cromwell and John Simm as Edward Sexby. There's a filthy tang of revolution in the air.

BLOOD AND PASSION New Worlds

Available now

Six years after The Devil's Whore aired, there came the belated sequel. It wasn't such a hit, perhaps because the cast (including Joe Dempsie and Alice Englert) weren't as well-known at the time and perhaps because the split English/American setting didn't have the same immediate historical resonance. But it's a densely eventful four-parter, full of gutsy acting and bloody intrigue – especially when settlers meet the Native Americans whose land they covet.

MODEL MONARCH Elizabeth I

Available now

A bold format and attention-grabbing casting are this three-parter's calling cards: it's a drama-documentary in which model Lily Cole plays the formidable Queen. In truth her sections are weaker than the straight factual bits, which are an impeccably gripping tale told with skill and verve by historians Suzannah Lipscomb and Dan Jones. First shown in 2017.

Available now

A nice and breezy go at Daniel Defoe's castaway yarn, with Philip Winchester as a suave Crusoe and Tongayi Chirisa as a suitably modern Friday who's more smart sidekick than servant. With Sam Neill and Sean Bean lending star power to flashbacks, it has enough wisecracks, swashbuckling and gorgeous locations to make an hour or two fly by. Its original C5 2008 airing was almost overlooked; try it for some unpretentious adventuring. JS etflix has already changed one genre of TV: when the whole first series of House of Cards was released in one go in 2013, It permanently undermined the idea that dramas had to be consumed one episode at a time. It's now pulled off a similar trick with documentaries.

Tiger King: Murder, Mayhem and Madness is the most extreme example yet of a trend that's rapidly developed in recent years. That fresh thing is the bingeable, shareable, gossip-worthy longform documentary series, the aim of which is to make you watch another episode immediately because you cannot believe what you saw in the previous one. In Tiger King, the main character is – or appears to be – Joe Exotic, who we're told from the start is both the proprietor of an Oklahoma animal park that specialises in tigers and also in prison for trying to pay to have someone killed.

The titular Mr Exotic has a bleach-blond mullet, a gaudy internet TV show, a sideline in autobiographical country music, more than one husband and a deadly obsession with an animal rights activist called Carole Baskin. The fact that he bears a passing resemblance to Eric Idle underlines that he could be a crass comedy character: but no, he's real. What's more, he turns out to be part of a network of American tiger-fanciers, all of whom are unbelievably, irresistibly awful in different ways. And as for Carole Baskin...

There's crime in Tiger King – but this isn't really a true-crime series like Making a Murderer. It's more like the cult exposé Wild Wild Country, the internet sleuth saga Don't F with Cats, or the incredible kidnap story Abducted in Plain Sight. At times it's like all of them at once, a bewildering parade of tawdry accusations and conflicting theories, put forward by a gallery of hideous caricatures. In truth, it doesn't make much of a point beyond emphasising that rare about whom Joe animals need greater protection. Exotic makes eye But when one of its countless twists hits, just you try not to play the next episode. JACK SEALE opening claims

Is Brandy the German shepherd key to the plot of your comedy After Life?

Yes. Dogs are incredible and they will save humanity. They have got an emotional brain like us and they know when we're sad. So I put that in the show, both metaphorically and literally. That dog saves my life constantly. As my character Tony says, "If it wasn't for the dog, I'd be dead now."

Was Brandy easy to work with?

She's brilliant. This isn't Disney, I didn't want her doing tricks. I wanted her to just be a dog, being with me and playing with that ball. I was going to do an outtakes package because before a take you can hear me going, "You're such a good girl. Such a good girl!" She's great.

You famously like dogs very much. Did you become close?

Brandy was the only character where I nearly cried when I had to leave at the end of filming. I was saying goodbye to the cast and crew, and when it came to the dog, I welled up because I thought, "She doesn't know why she's not going to see me Monday." I arrogantly thought she would miss me as much as I missed her! MICHAEL HODGES

You can watch every episode of Lennie James's superlative thriller on demand – both the original 2018 series and all of the follow-up, which is still airing on Wednesdays on Sky Atlantic. James plays Nelly, a south London chancer who has never had to take anything seriously but must now hunt for his missing daughter. The dark, twisting narrative and the authentic small details of a working-class urban community are both handled with great skill.

RUSSELL'S COME HOME Russell Howard's Home Time

Available now

Topical comedies such as The Mash Report and Have I Got News for You have already pivoted to a new format where contributors appear via online video chat. It's brought mixed results but the latest interpreter of news to have a bash, Russell Howard, has a strong track record of finding fresh ways to make this kind of comedy work. His new programme sees him deliver jokes and conduct interviews... from his old childhood bedroom. JS arim Zeroual, Oti Mabuse and CBBC presenter Katie Thistleton are some of the famous faces who will be leading what is being dubbed the BBC's biggest push on education in its history.

With schools up and down the UK now closed, the corporation hopes to plug some of the gaps in the national curriculum, expanding their educational offering and providing 14 weeks of lessons and programmes to children of all ages.

There will also be teachers providing educational material, alongside organisations such as the Royal Shakespeare Company, Puffin Books and the Premier League. These – as well as other big organisations that are yet to be announced – have signed up to offer activities and content.

Starting from 20 April, the new educational resources will be available across BBC iPlayer, BBC4, BBC Sounds, the BBC red button and the BBC Bitesize app and website, where there will be lessons, videos, quizzes, podcasts and articles to assist with children's learning.

also feature advice for effective home-schooling and guides for children with special educational needs.

BBC4 A chunk of programming each weekday evening will be dedicated to shows that support both GCSE and A-level curriculums. These will involve theatre performances from the Royal Shakespeare Company of productions including Hamlet, Much Ado about Nothing and

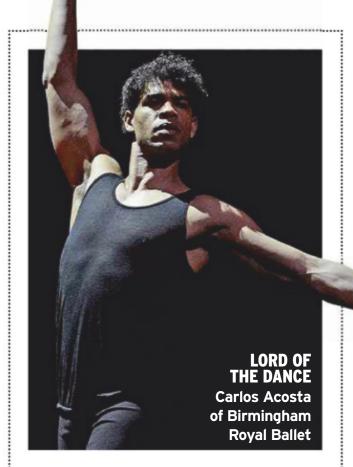

> Macbeth, starring Christopher Eccleston. There will also be factual programmes, such as Andrew Marr's History of Modern Britain and Meet the Romans with Mary Beard, and science programming, including Chemistry: a Volatile History and Shock & Awe: the Story of Electricity.

BBC SOUNDS There will be two brand-new daily educational podcasts on the Sounds app, called BBC Bitesize Primary Planner and BBC Bitesize Secondary Planner. These will be aimed at the parents and guardians of children of primary and secondary age, with each ten-minute episode guiding them through the homeschooling material that's available across the BBC. FRANCES TAYLOR

CULTURE IN QUARANTINE

With the pause button pressed on cinemas, theatres and festivals, the BBC has decided to deliver the best of the arts and culture straight into our living rooms over the coming weeks and months.

Branded Culture in Quarantine, a virtual festival of the arts programme will bring exhibitions, museums, performances and even a book festival to life across TV, radio and online. Birmingham Royal Ballet director Carlos Acosta and other ballet stars took part in a live dance class that viewers can join in with now via BBC iPlayer. Plus, iPlayer also has every episode of arts series Performance Live, including productions by Kate Tempest and Akala, while new short plays, recorded using video conference > come to BBC4, with works from playwrights including Charlene James and James Graham, the man behind ITV's hit drama Quiz. FT

BBC BITESIZE DAILY Strictly Come Dancing stars Zeroual and Mabuse, alongside

CBBC's Thistleton, will present Bitesize Daily, which will be available on iPlayer and the BBC red button. Every day there will be six 20-minute programmes available, bringing to life subjects including maths, English and science. The shows are split into age groups, catering for six different age brackets for children between five and 14 years old.

BITESIZE DAILY

ONLINE Easy-to-follow daily lessons in core subjects including history, geography and art will be available alongside maths, English and science. The resources here will complement the daily episodes of BBC Bitesize Daily, and will

A STATE OF THE STA

NETFLIX
Price £5.99/month
(£8.99 for HD)

Why subscribe Netflix was the first name in original internet television, launching with political remake House of Cards. It has remained on top by expanding into every audience and genre.

How to get it It's hard to find a gadget that won't load Netflix – just open the main menu of a streaming device like the Apple TV 4K (£179) or Sky Q set-top box. Many modern TVs even have a Netflix button on their remote. netflix.com

AMAZON PRIME VIDEO

Price £7.99/month (included with Amazon Prime next-day delivery)

Why subscribe Amazon's original content is really just a "sweetener" to convince you to subscribe to Amazon Prime, which includes overnight delivery. However, they're willing to spend big money to make it – a billion-dollar Lord of the Rings series is in the offing.

How to get it The best way of watching Prime is on Amazon's own gadget. The Fire TV Stick (£39.99 with Prime membership) is a dongle that plugs into your television's HDMI port, and can be controlled with your voice. amazon.co.uk/video

DISNEY+

Price £5.99/month

Why subscribe Less a streaming service than a babysitter. Disney+ features everyone from Snow White to Darth Vader to Iron Man, and even Homer Simpson. Moreover, it's the only place to catch new TV series set in the world of Marvel and Star Wars.

How to get it Although it's brand new, this is a mega-budgeted Disney product, so the service will be available on pretty much every smart TV and streaming gadget from day one. You can also find it by searching on the Android and Apple app stores, so children can watch it on tablets or smartphones. disneyplus.com

NOW TV

Price Entertainment: £8.99/month (for HD), Cinema: £11.99/month

Why subscribe Designed for people who want to watch the occasional Sky programme, without drilling holes for a satellite. So if you want to watch the latest HBO shows on Sky Atlantic, you subscribe to the Entertainment Pass; for new movies, plump for Sky Cinema. (The Sports Pass is currently unavailable.)

How to get it The Now TV Stick (£24.99) is a well-made piece of kit that accesses other services such as Netflix as well as Now TV, although Sky hopes you'll use it to buy a few Entertainment Passes. nowtv.com

APPLE TV+

Price £4.99/month

Why subscribe A star-studded line-up – featuring Jennifer Aniston, Steven Spielberg, Steve Carell, Reese Witherspoon and Oprah Winfrey – has yet to produce a must-watch series, but it's got the determination (and money) to make it work.

How to get it Apple TV+ is baked into most of their products, from iPhones to MacBooks. For watching on television, the confusingly titled Apple TV 4K (£179) is a swanky box that will give a pristine image. As a bonus, if you buy a new Apple device, you get one year of Apple TV+ free.

BRITBOX

Price £5.99/month

Why subscribe Just because streaming is new doesn't mean we have to abandon the classics. A collaboration between the BBC and ITV, this features British gems such as Gavin & Stacey, Whitechapel, Endeavour and Broadchurch.

How to get it BritBox isn't ubiquitous yet, but it does have apps for Android and Apple devices. It is also available for Samsung and Panasonic smart TVs, but before you buy a new set, consider a Google Chromecast dongle (google.com/chromecast, £30). With this, you start watching something on your phone, press a button (the rectangle with lines in the corner) and it transfers to your television. britbox.co.uk JONATHAN HOLMES

If you'd like to hear some of the great radio shows of the past, turn to page 112, where David Hepworth explains how to listen on the BBC Sounds app

AND HERE ARE SOME STREAMING SERVICES YOU CAN GET FOR FREE...

BBC iPLAYER

It's free to watch BBC shows via iPlayer (bbc.co.uk/iplayer). All you need to do is register with a BBC account to get access to a raft of programming that is also free to download. Access this either via an app through your TV, or simply watch via your computer online.

ITV HUB

ITV programmes are free to catch up with via ITV Hub. Look for the icon on your TV's apps section, or visit itv. com/hub to watch programmes from ITV, ITV2, ITV3, ITV4, ITVBe and CITV. It's free to register, but to download shows or watch without adverts, there's ITV Hub+ (£3.99 per month).

ALL 4

To catch up on Channel 4, E4, More4, Film4 and Walter Presents programmes, sign up for free for an All 4 account online (channel4. com). Similar to ITV, Channel 4 also have All 4+, which enables you to watch without adverts for £3.99 a month.

MY 5

Channel 5's shows are also available for free, either through the app on your TV or the website my5.tv where there's not only programming from Channel 5 available to catch-up with, but also the likes of Blaze and the Smithsonian Channel. JH

Fed up? You bet I am

I'm not a child, so stop jollying me along, says Alison Graham

K, DEAR READER, let me be ruth-lessly honest with you. Here goes... Firstly, I'm tired of people trying to cheer me up. Secondly, I'm sick of men in suits standing behind podiums (or should it be podia?) telling me what to do. Apart from the kindly and reassuring Chief Medical Officer Professor Chris Whitty. I like him and his doleful, last teddy bear left in the shop demeanour, and I was very glad when he emerged from his isolation.

Now, I am in fact perfectly cheerful, I know that I'm very lucky to be warm and comfortable and fed, and I'm not one of the dispossessed poor of India, or in a Syrian refugee camp trying to keep my starving children alive. And this is NOT like a war, we are not being bombed in our homes every day.

But if sometimes I don't fancy being stoical, then I won't be, and I will feel quite entitled to shout at Matt Tebbutt on BBC1's Saturday Kitchen when he urges us to "send us your feel-good food stories." Why? I don't care. Leave me out of it, just show me some nice recipes I will never, ever cook because I'm too idle. I'm simply not interested in effusively happy people filming themselves making improvised omelettes from bananas and treacle or whatever.

If I want to be a bit fed up, then I will be. Neither will I feel any pressure to subject myself to social and communal embarrassment. My friend Sarah, with a wink and a smile, forwarded me someone's Twitter exhortation to "dance on your doorstep!" knowing exactly what my unprintable reaction would be. (Thanks, Sarah!)

Thus, sometimes, I grow weary of television's determination to try to keep me laughing and was delighted to read a letter in a recent issue of Radio Times from reader Kathy Randall, dismissing a suggestion made in the previous week's Feedback. "I am 71 and I really do not want to see any 'old-fashioned shows or films from the archives'... And as for repeats of Morecambe and Wise and The Two Ronnies, surely these have been done over and over again. We're not all stuck in the past."

I love that letter; it exemplifies the kind of spirit that will see us all through to the end of this emergency and out the other side. No, I don't want to watch old Morecambe and Wise episodes, either. Just because I'm in lockdown it doesn't mean I've reverted to being 14 again when Saturday nights were spam and entertainment, I'm not ready to revert to the television equivalent of evaporated milk and tinned satsumas just yet. I still need some edge, I think we all do. Nothing better illustrates this than a friend whose recovery from the coronavirus was hastened by her binge-watching every episode of The Thick of It. There is nothing warm and fluffy about Armando Iannucci's caustic and foul-mouthed discostion of the mouthed dissection of the horrors of backroom politics. I love The Thick of It, it makes me proud to be British.

As did the first lock-down episode of Have I Got News for You, at least for a little while,
when guests and hosts were united by video link. It didn't work, it felt forced and desperate, but I'm glad it was there.

Stay as happy as you want to be. And good health to you all.

SATURDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY TWIN 9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA I'm not sure "Adam" – in reality, Erik – and Ingrid are being the best of parents right now. Six-year-old son Fredrik seems to be an afterthought (cake for breakfast? Sure, go ahead), while teenage daughter Karin is going off the rails, finding parties to go to and drugs to take in that windblown archipelago off the north of Norway.

Running through the story is a study of the painful fallout when families break apart, but on the surface there's the pressing question of how surfer-Viking Erik can escape detection as he pretends to be his more strait-laced (and dead) twin brother. His saving grace is that people expect Adam to act out of character at this point: he's grieving. But Karin smells a rat.

Meanwhile, we get more glimpses and hints of the brothers' rift and Adam's secrets. The plot has a tendency to open cans of worms, then let them wriggle away, but the sad, intriguing details of what made these people who they are keep coming. DAVID BUTCHER

Animal Rescue School

4.20pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The trainee RSPCA inspectors are now on probation and investigating cases by themselves. If all goes well, they'll be offered a permanent role with the charity.

So Debs has to catch a potentially deadly snake that's on the loose before finding a new owner for Chico, a staffie-cross that's living in a storage unit.

Elsewhere, Rowena has to make an agonising decision over Nemo, a terrier with a flea infestation, and Jess helps a family who are struggling to care for Sasha, a boxer that she can see has a tumour.

They're all challenging cases, although I think Rowena got lucky with her other case: recapturing an escaped pet rabbit. JANE RACKHAM

Casualty

7.25pm BBC1

DRAMA There are bad days at work – and then there's paramedic Ruby's shift in tonight's episode. Patient Hanna is lying under a train and her mangled, flattened arm is now trapped between engine and track. When Ruby is asked what can be done to free Hanna, colleague Jan hands her some scissors. If you're wincing while reading this, just wait until you witness what Ruby does next. My hands were gripping the underside of my chair in anguish.

Now, speaking of hands, we also get the mum of a poorly boy taking drastic action at the hospital when she disagrees with Connie and Rash's diagnosis. In a state of stress, she superglues her own digits to the reception desk. DAVID BROWN

Great Canal Journeys

8.00pm C4

TRAVEL Nothing much happens in these gentle, drifting travelogues. But boy, it happens beautifully. In this 2017 edition, Prunella Scales and Timothy West are in Portugal combining two passions – waterways and wine – along the Rio Douro. "We seem to have taken a couple of steps back in time," says Pru as they follow the route that wine barges took from the riverside vineyards to Porto.

It's a glorious landscape — all craggy gorges and terraced slopes, but with the river that shaped it now tamed by a series of dams. I lost count of how many glasses of port they drank and how often they compared their marriage to a well-matured wine, but who can blame them? DAVID BUTCHER

Gavin & Stacey/ Outnumbered

8.15pm, 8.45pm BBC1

SITCOM Gavin & Stacey, James
Corden and Ruth Jones's warm hug of a sitcom, is proving a week-by-week treat (2.5 million watched the opener).
The lovers' engagement (at SWAT gunpoint) meets with contrasting reactions, and arguments ensue in Essex. It's down to Uncle Bryn (Rob Brydon) to slap down the sniping with a brilliant, from-the-heart reminder as to what's brought them all together.

Outnumbered's one-family-underone-roof premise works well in the current circs, but tonight Pete and Sue take a trip to parents' evening. Ben (Daniel Roche) briefs them: "If Mr Hunslet mentions Lucy Barker and the formaldehyde, that was a misunderstanding." MARK BRAXTON

FROM WALFORD TO HOLBY...

It's a big week for paramedic Ruby in Casualty (7.25pm BBC1). Actress Maddy Hill first found fame as Danny Dyer's screen daughter Nancy in EastEnders. And she's not the first to make the move from Walford to Holby: Shaheen Jafargholi played the ill-fated Shakil, before joining the ED as nurse Marty.

Charles Venn was once Bianca's boyfriend Ray and is now staff nurse Jacob. And Jacob's mum Omo was played by Ellen Thomas, who has had four different roles in EastEnders – the most recent being the vampy Claudette.

After a stint on the Square as Libby, Belinda Owusu became a series regular in Holby City as trainee doctor Nicky.

Michael French was shady David Wicks on EastEnders and then surgeon Nick Jordan in both Casualty and Holby City.

And Pam St Clement (Pat Wicks) turned up as patient Sally Hodge. DAVID BROWN

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.15pm BBC1

COMEDY Another edition that doesn't quite spark into life, probably because two of the guests on the sofa are Eamonn Holmes and Ruth Langsford, the husband-and-wife presenters of This Morning, who are far more skilled at asking questions than their hosts, the Browns. Though Mammy gets a laugh with her line, "How do you do that – working with your wife every day?" Jennifer Gibney (Cathy) and Brendan O'Carroll (Agnes) are of course married in real life.

There's some lame tripe about Buster and Dermot's bromance faltering over another guest, Joel Dommett (host of The Masked Singer), and a decent new song from the Shires, Lightning Strikes. If only it had in this studio. PATRICK MULKERN

Prince Philip: the King without a Crown

9.20pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Prince Philip, rather archaically referred to here as "the Queen's Consort", is the latest hapless member of the royal family to come under Channel 5's laser-sharp focus as it tells us everything we already know about him and don't necessarily feel the need to hear again.

No preview was available, but we are promised insight from "royal experts" (we can probably guess who they are). So here goes – Prince Philip, "from war hero to the rock at the Queen's side", is examined from his charity patronages to his constant support of the monarch. As the Queen once said: "He has, quite simply, been my strength and stay all of these years." ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Soul and Beyond with Corinne Bailey Rae and Trevor Nelson

12.30am BBC4

MUSIC A 2018 edition of an agreeable series that brings a chatty Gogglebox vibe to what's otherwise yet another bundle of old music videos. Here, DJ Trevor Nelson and singer/songwriter Corinne Bailey Rae swap anecdotes about formative musical experiences that led them to choose the tracks in their joint soul soundtrack.

Memories of childhood inform a love of the Jackson 5 and Gladys Knight, for instance, while lifetimes spent in music have echoed to classics by Prince, Stevie Wonder, Marvin Gaye and slightly more modern titans such as Mary J Blige. JACK SEALE ENTERTAINMENT Simon Cowell wasted no time when it came to pressing his Golden Buzzer during the Britain's Got Talent auditions this year.

He chose his act during the first session on the very first day of auditions and has already predicted that his "mini diva in the making" will go on to great things after the show.

The BGT auditions this year were held in both London and Manchester before restrictions around TV filming took hold, with four of the five Golden Buzzer acts chosen in the country's capital (only David Walliams chose his act in Manchester).

Hopefully, we will see one of those magic moments this evening when the golden confetti rains down and an act is fast-tracked to the live shows.

There's a compelling story to be had in this look at the life of the author of The Hobbit and The Lord of the Rings, but its telling is let down by a welter of safe biopic contrivances. Orphaned at 12 and raised by a priest, John Ronald Reuel Tolkien (Nicholas Hoult) studies at Oxford and marries the love of his life (Lily Collins), before enduring the horrors of the First World War. The performances are solid and the period detail is well rendered, but the film fails to explore what made the British literary giant truly tick. ALAN JONES

The release of this true-story comedy drama was hit by cinemas closing their doors, but it's now being given an early digital release. Director Philippa Lowthorpe and a top-notch cast (including Keira Knightley, Jessie Buckley and Gugu Mbatha-Raw) chronicle the lead-up to the disruption of the 1970 Miss World contest by the Women's Liberation Movement. By spotlighting a significant moment in British history, the film offers a resonant reflection on equality, diversity and chauvinism today. JEREMY ASPINALL

Trainspotting * All4 FREE TO VIEW

Danny Boyle's adaptation of Irvine Welsh's novel is a landmark British classic that takes a tragicomic look at a group of Edinburgh lads on a drugs and petty-crime bender. As provocative as ever, it boasts career-defining roles for Ewan McGregor, as smart-aleck junkie Renton, and Robert Carlyle, as the violent Begbie. AJ

SUNDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY One World: Together at Home 7.45pm BBC1

MUSIC Lady Gaga could have stood on her doorstep once a week, like the rest of us, applauding the heroic efforts of the health workers who are trying to curb the current pandemic. But instead she's persuaded some of the biggest names in the music business to honour their work in this special event that's being streamed around the word.

Organised in conjunction with the World Health Organisation, there's an impressive line-up that includes Stevie Wonder, Paul McCartney, Elton John, Lang Lang, Chris Martin and Billie Eilish. Of course, this is no Live Aid. They will be performing but, under current restrictions, they obviously won't be able to bounce onto a stage to sing together.

Details of the format and content are sketchy at the time of writing but there will be a strong message of gratitude and appreciation as well as stories highlighting the world's healthcare heroes. So not so much a fund-raiser as a morale-raiser — and we could probably all do with that right now. JANE RACKHAM

The Good Karma Hospital

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA As Dr Fonseca talks to acid-burn victim Jyoti about coping with her disfigurement, you get the feeling that this speech is coming from Amanda Redman's heart because, as we know, Redman was badly burnt as a child.

At the hospital Dr Walker is looking peaky. Lack of sleep? Trying to drink away the memory of seeing Gabriel and Aisha kissing? It turns out to be something more serious.

Most of the storylines (Teddy's mission to find his childhood love, Greg's absent daughter) are neatly sewn up, although romantic viewers will be howling in exasperation at the series' ending. JR

Matthew Bourne's Swan Lake

8.00pm Sky Arts

ARTS "The men were out of this world – it just sends shivers up your spine," raved Darcey Bussell, emerging from the celebrity gala of this spunky revival in 2018.

Matthew Bourne's ground-breaking update created more than a few ripples 25 years ago when it premiered at Sadler's Wells.

It returned home for a season in 2018, still as virile, perhaps even funnier and more emotive than before. But forget what modern dancers, punters and critics love about it. One can only wonder how mesmerised and thrilled Tchaikovsky would have been by this muscular, male-love interpretation. PATRICK MULKERN

Stacey Dooley: Locked Up with the Lifers

9.00pm BBC2

pocumentary It's hard to imagine how it would feel to be given a prison sentence of life with no possibility of parole. In that context, Iowa Correctional Facility for Women is about as humane a place as you could hope for, thanks to a peaceful regime introduced by an enlightened warden.

Stacey Dooley meets her and a number of inmates, including Barbara, who is a few days into a life sentence for murdering her husband and is overwhelmed by her sentence. "The finality of it," she says. "I've lost my life... my children." Dooley also meets Judy, who has been inside since 1979 and in a relationship with a fellow lifer for 30 years. DAVID BUTCHER

STREAMING CHOICE

iPlayer (expires today) A swift gallop through the short but sparkling history of a real cultural landmark: for a few years in the early 1960s, the ITV's music showcase Ready Steady Go! was bringing a pop revolution to people's living rooms, almost on its own. Aside from excellent contributors – including the programme's big-thinking producer Vicki Wickham – and an avalanche of rare clips, the documentary is always careful to put what we're seeing into clear context.

KIDS' CHOICE

Craft Party!

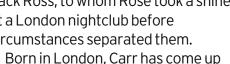

9.30am CBBC, iPlayer Find plenty of ideas to pass the time at home – and maybe something to give that next TikTok video or Instagram story a little something special – with the return of the series in which a diverse gang of (older) kids get together to cut, sew and stick costumes and props for a party. JACK SEALE

GARY CARR'S TV CV

In Trigonometry (10.00pm BBC2), Gary Carr plays Kieran, part of a very modern love triangle. But it's not the first time that the actor, 33, has been involved in an unconventional romance. He will be familiar to fans of Downton Abbey, where he played American jazz musician Jack Ross, to whom Rose took a shine at a London nightclub before circumstances separated them.

through the ranks of British television, with early roles in Holby City, Law & Order: UK, Foyle's War and Inspector George Gently. He played Millsy in edgy army comedy Bluestone 42, and spent three years in the Caribbean as dedicated police sergeant Fidel Best in Death in Paradise from 2011 to 2014. More recently, he's had a very different role, as pimp CC in gritty New York drama The Deuce. GILL CRAWFORD

Belgravia

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA After the discovery of those incendiary letters written by the dead, sainted Sophia Trenchard, everyone is readjusting to the new reality.

It's more difficult for some than for others as Julian Fellowes's treacle pudding of a drama ends. Absolute bounder John Bellasis sees the future he's imagined for himself slipping from his grasp, particularly when his lover Susan Trenchard calls.

Susan imagines she and John have a future together, but he is mean and insulting. Would he ever consider marrying "the divorced daughterin-law of a dirty tradesman"?

Meanwhile, the result of Sophia's union, Charles Pope, breezes through life, unaware that he's a target for some very angry people. ALISON GRAHAM

Limmy's Homemade

Show! 10.45pm BBC2 COMEDY Somewhere between surreal and sinister, Glaswegian Brian "Limmy" Limond ploughs a lone comedy furrow. Nowhere else will you see a running gag in which an affable bloke dispensing tips on contactless payments is called away for his other job as a hitman. Such shifts in tone are the key to the wonderfully off-kilter world of Limmy, who makes light of a stranger in his house even though he is, frankly, terrifying. But Limmy can mix things up, ridiculing manly adverts such as Water for Men - or "Woo-tah!" – and seeing what happens when you point a TV remote at people.

But still the prickling unease, as he differentiates between types of door knock... "I don't like the sound of that!" MARK BRAXTON

What We Do in the Shadows

11.15pm, 11.45pm BBC2

SITCOM A mockumentary on the domestic lives of vampires is one of those comic ideas that sweeps all before it with a swish of its big, black cape. It made for a very enjoyable 2014 indie film that last year shapeshifted into this US-made sitcom of the same name, which is well worth a look if you missed it first time around.

We're in suburban New York, where vampire housemates share a crumbling mansion. Nandor (Kayvan Novak) was once, he claims, a warrior in the Ottoman empire. Laszlo (Matt Berry) and Nadja (Natasia Demetriou) are an undead couple in a centurieslong relationship. It's a great (mostly British) cast and, as you'd expect, Berry steals the show. DAVID BUTCHER

Director Cédric Jimenez's take on Operation Anthropoid – the plot to kill the leading Nazi known as the "Blond Beast" – stars Jason Clarke as Reinhard Heydrich, and takes the brave step of presenting events from his perspective. The early scenes depicting his family life (with wife Rosamund Pike) are the film's most effective, and it's only when the focus shifts to his would-be assassins (Jack Reynor and Jack O'Connell) that the story loses its edge. JAMES LUXFORD

Ripped from the headlines

□ Trial by Fire ★★ 10.15pm Sky Premiere

A well-documented miscarriage of justice is explored with sensitivity, but precious little finesse, in this drama directed by Edward Zwick. Trial by Fire tells the story of Cameron Todd Willingham, who was executed by lethal injection in 2004 for starting the fire that killed his daughters. Jack O'Connell plays Willingham, while Laura Dern is the playwright trying to prove his innocence, but even their performances can't prevent this death-row melodrama from feeling mawkish and formulaic. DAVID PARKINSON

Portrait of a Lady on Fire ★★★ MUBI

The blustery French coast in 1760 provides the setting for director Céline Sciamma's arresting drama, now available on subscription service MUBI. A countess hires an artist (Noémie Merlant) to paint a pre-marital portrait of her daughter (Adéle Haenel), only for a love affair to bloom between the pair. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY University Challenge 8.30pm BBC2

QUIZ What a corking series this has been, full of fantastic teams and truly eccentric, brilliant contestants in that great University Challenge tradition.

At the time of writing we know that at least one of them is through to the final, that devastating, gesticulating, bouncing-bomb of general knowledge that is lan Wang, team captain of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

He is one of those classically divisive figures, but truly, Wang rejoices in his cleverness and, frankly, who wouldn't? Even host Jeremy Paxman let his mask slip during the semi-final against Durham. "That is impressive!" he told Wang, after he answered something particularly unanswerable. Even one of his teammates was taken aback, uttering, "Bloody hell!"

So maybe Wang and the Corpus Christi boys might be joined by that other Brainiac, brilliant Brandon of Imperial College London? Imperial played its semi-final last week against Trinity College, Cambridge.

Kirstie: Keep Crafting and Carry On

5.00pm C4

FACTUAL New series Channel 4 has been quick off the mark with programmes making the best out of our enforced hometime.

Jamie Oliver's been knocking up simple recipes, and now here's Kirstie Allsopp, needle and glue gun in hand, dishing out craft ideas across the week using the materials she's got to hand, and getting online tips from crafting experts.

The big project of the week is a patchwork cushion, with all sorts of needlework techniques, while today's mini-makes are paper garlands and – one for budding entomologists – a bug hotel. Tomorrow she creates a cardboard loom and a robot dog from tin cans. GILL CRAWFORD

The Restaurant That Burns Off Calories

brownies are packed with calories? Chips are less healthy than salad? We know this stuff by now, don't we? But a rousing Horizon tries to make us know it more, by creating a restaurant (remember those?) where a secret workout team in a backstage gym burns off calories consumed in the dining room.

The 989 calories in fish and chips, for instance, equate to two hours on an exercise bike. Fred Sirieix and Dr Zoe Williams oversee the experiment and keep elaborating the basic point. They also digress into the part our genes play in what we eat, and that fallback of TV health shows, our microbiome. DAVID BUTCHER

A Mother's Son

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA In the absence of much new drama, ITV has rummaged through its wardrobe and come up with this excellent two-part thriller by Chris Lang (Unforgotten) from 2012.

Hermione Norris is Rosie, mistress of a deli in a charming Suffolk seaside town, chatelaine of the most beautiful house and new wife of widower Ben (Martin Clunes). Between them Ben and Rosie have four teenage kids and everyone is trying to settle into their new lives.

But it looks like this domestic idyll could be ruptured for ever when a schoolgirl is murdered and a terrible suspicion bubbles up in Rosie, one that, however hard she tries to, she cannot dismiss.

Concludes tomorrow. AG

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9.00pm C4

REALITY Let's be honest, seeing someone like Katie Price screeching hysterically as she's suspended halfway down a Scottish cliff in lashing rain while Ant Middleton yells at her is why we watch this show.

Out of the 12 celebrities taking part in this SAS testing, she gets the most four-letter ear bashing. "You'd give a fing aspirin a headache," she's told. Joey Essex, meanwhile, is mainly concerned about how fungal infections and ticks might affect his planned naked photoshoots. In one test of discipline they're ordered to pummel the four strongest celebs... who are not allowed to retaliate. It's like something out of The Handmaid's Tale. JANE RACKHAM

60 RadioTimes 18–24 April 2020

Whitney (Shona McGarty, right) in EastEnders (8.00pm BBC1) is obviously petrified of going back to jail, but she needn't be so worried. Half the Square have done time and lived to tell the tale. In fact, many of them probably feel more at home in a prison tabard than they do in their regular clothes. One former inmate – Max Branning – is even popping round tonight to tell a frit Whit about his own experiences behind bars.

Mind you, Whitney does also have the added pressure of Michaela posting horrible things about her online.

Michaela is cut from the same cloth as Marion Logan in Coronation Street and Wendy Posner in Emmerdale – both blinkered, grieving mums who'll defend their late, psychopathic sons. And Michaela's smear campaign does appear to be working, with Whitney ultimately deciding to reach for her passport. You can find out tomorrow at 7.30pm whether anyone will be able to put a stop to her plan to leave town.

How to Build a Bentley

9.00pm More4

New series Yes, it feels like a great big advert for the wonders of the Bentley Continental, and yes, the levels of nerdy detail are slightly nuts, but this is mesmerising. If you have any interest in cars or engineering, the deep dive into Bentley's factory in Crewe will have you rubbing your thighs like Vic Reeves on Shooting Stars.

The Continental GT is a blingy grand tourer, beloved of footballers and rappers (who refer to it as an MFB for reasons I won't explain), but seeing the craft and tech that go into it is fabulous. All the wiring and the stitching and the Hawaiian surfboard wood veneer and the technical stuff about coined edges and takt times and engine marriage tables – fill your boots. DAVID BUTCHER

The Vietnam War

9.15pm PBS America

HISTORY If you missed Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's compelling documentary first time round in 2017, thinking you didn't have the time to spare, now's the time to catch up.

"Coming home was as traumatic as the war itself – for years nobody talked about Vietnam," says an interviewee at the start of this exhaustive ten-part series, which aims to redress the balance, seeking testimony from all sides to try and make sense of a messy, impossible conflict. The first episode takes us from the French invasion of 1858 to the foundation of the Viet Cong in 1960. The Americans enter the fray in the early 1950s, terrified about Communist infiltration and financially backing French occupying forces. GC

Flack

practice of celebrity reality TV stars and a sly dig at Strictly in the story of a star who has to protect her marriage (and brand) after she gives birth to a baby that's the product of her affair with her dancing partner. Soon cynical PRs Robyn and Eve are spinning for all they're worth, and writer Oliver Lansley is sprinkling the script with memorable one-liners: vaping is like, "the dying fart of a gummi bear".

But amid all the snark and melodrama the series carries a subtle feminist message, made explicit today in two rousing diatribes, from Eve and from Robyn's sister, about the place of women in the modern world.

DAVID CRAWFORD

Emergence

9.00pm Fox

DRAMA New series This is one of those puzzle-box US dramas with supernatural edges – the kind that start with a plane crash then spin into a long-running mystery, Lost-style. At the heart of the story is Allison Tolman's Jo Evans, the sensible, decent police chief in a Long Island town (Tolman played a similar role in Fargo).

Evans finds an unhurt child near the wreckage of a private jet that crashed on the beach. But the girl can't remember anything and groups of fake federal agents in black SUVs are after her, as is an investigative journalist.

Crucially, there's a sci-fi/ supernatural layer on top of all this, because it seems the girl can make stuff happen, Carrie-style. Is she some kind of alien, or an X-Girl mutant? The whole thing has a good whiff of conspiracy and what-the-heck-is-going-on intrigue: it's well worth a look.

The Last Dance

The current vogue for sports teams letting cameras film their every move behind the scenes isn't completely new: Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls did it for what would prove to be a legendary NBA season in 1997–98. The somewhat belated result is this ten-part documentary, capturing the intensity of a team of stars, led by one global megastar – who, having left his sport and then dramatically returned, wasn't satisfied when he won a comeback title. He wanted another, and another.

Star Wars Episode IX: the Rise of Skywalker
Virgin Movies/iTunes/DVD/Blu-ray

Director JJ Abrams does what many thought impossible and stages a rip-roaring conclusion to the beloved sci-fi saga, brimming with old friends, foes and familiar references. The Emperor has returned, and his plan is to unite enemies Kylo Ren (Adam Driver) and Rey (Daisy Ridley) in a bid to relaunch the Sith. Unflagging and pulse-pounding, this is a grandiose and stunning finale to the generation-capturing franchise. ALAN JONES

Ghost Stories ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Adapted from the successful stage play, this spine-chiller from Jeremy Dyson (The League of Gentlemen) and Andy Nyman revives the portmanteau horror anthologies of iconic studios Amicus and Hammer. Nyman also stars as a debunker of supernatural occurrences who's tasked with solving three terrifying riddles involving Paul Whitehouse, Alex Lawther and Martin Freeman. What follows is an creepy white-knuckle ride that affectionately pays homage to generations of film suspense. TERRY STAUNTON

TUESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Your Home Made Perfect 8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY The team is in Halifax to help Jeremy and Paula, who live in a four-bedroom Victorian house. Their problem is the horrible conservatory, which is freezing in winter, boiling in summer and deafening when it rains.

Such drawbacks will be familiar to anyone with a conservatory, but they are more pressing for Paula, who has MS and must increasingly rely on a wheelchair. The conservatory is a no-go area because it's so dull, unpleasant and hard to navigate. So what can architects Robert Jamison, with his fetching shawl and interesting trousers, and Laura Jane Clark suggest?

Through the miracle of virtual reality goggles, Jeremy and Paula are shown two very different worlds for their £15,000 budget. Robert envisions lots of wood and plants, while Laura borrows from the bridge of a ship for her big feature. ALISON GRAHAM

Pain, Pus & Poison

8.00pm BBC4

pocumentary Michael Mosley reveals how drugs revolutionised modern medicine, and in this episode (first shown in 2013) explores how chemistry conquered pain. There are stomach-turning clips, including footage of a 1917 cataract operation and Mosley stabbing a needle through his own anaesthetised hand.

But the key message rings loud and clear: pain prevention and drug addiction are inextricably tied.

Morphine, extracted from opium, led to modern pharmacy; cocaine was a wildly popular early anaesthetic, endorsed by the Pope for its medicinal benefits. The next time you need a tooth out, remember to thank these brilliant but foolhardy drug pioneers. JAMES GILL

Our Girl

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Medic Georgie Lane (Michelle Keegan) is undergoing a psych test to see whether she's fit for duty or not. Judging by all the voices echoing through her head, I'd say probably not. She's also tormented by the prospect of Omar, the Taliban warlord who killed her fiancée (among countless others), being given safe passage to Pakistan.

The rest of 2 Section are on training exercises with the Afghan troops in order to, as Colour Sergeant King so sensitively puts it, "turn these grunts into soldiers". No wonder there's tension at the barracks. It's a low-key episode – mainly a sulky Georgie moping about – but it's laying the foundations for something massive next week. JANE RACKHAM

Inside the Factory

pocumentary One thing we learn from today's field trip is that soup is seasonal. It makes sense that people eat more in cold weather, but a man from Heinz knows how much: for every degree centigrade the temperature drops, soup sales increase by 3.5 per cent, apparently. Gregg Wallace follows the vegetable soup line at a factory in Wigan that can turn out 2.5 million tins a day.

Gregg sees peas go from a field in Yorkshire (a very big field) to the can, while Cherry Healey learns why soup fills you up for longer than solid food – it's true, a scientist says so. And of course, Ruth Goodman delivers a history fix, learning about sippets and potage at Cowdray House in Sussex. DAVID BUTCHER

A Country Life for Half the Price

9.00pm Channel 5

pocumentary While last week's relocation was refreshingly hitch-free, this one's a bit more problematic. Sam and Lucy are struggling with their work/life balance and want to slash their commute by moving to Suffolk. With chickens and bees in their garden, they're Essex's answer to Tom and Barbara from The Good Life.

They've got their fingers in a lot of pies though, and Kate's worried they're taking on too much. Chirpy Sam's not bothered – "You're probably the most optimistic person I've ever met," Kate Humble tells him. Surely the current climate will see more people following their sustainability trail. GARY ROSE

70 RadioTimes 18–24 April 2020

Jimmi (right) and Emma in Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) are both facing quandaries. He has only just gone back to work and is now being asked to return as FME (Forensic Medical Examiner). She is being asked to take part in a student radio show about LGBT issues but, with her mind on her homophobic attack, refuses. When the pair open up to each other about their respective offers, will they reconsider?

There's a double bill of Classic Coronation Street on ITV3 from

2.50pm. And I really do mean Classic. It's 1995 and Samir Rachid ("I love you, Dee-dree") is attacked by a gang of youths. Those who remember Deirdre's young Moroccan husband will know that this is the catalyst for his tragic exit, though his kidney does still live on in Tracy Barlow, something that is still referred to in present-day scripts from time to time. For light relief, Betty gives Raquel driving lessons, which even on paper is surely enough to raise a smile? DAVID BROWN

Miss Scarlet and the Duke 9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA Infuriated by the police and press's failure to recognise her part in solving crimes, Eliza is sidetracked by the Victorian vogue for spiritualism. Hired by a "death photographer" who is receiving unnerving messages, she attends a séance, while Detective Inspector Wellington is detained by an oddball journalist (played by Kevin Eldon, whose genius for eccentric turns enlivens any show).

With its moody lighting, period peripherals and Sherlocky soundtrack, Miss Scarlet and the Duke certainly has the ring of familiarity, while the light tone and gentle romantic undertow give it the air of Moonlighting in a bustle. But Rachael New's sparky policer is best when pursuing its own, feminist agenda. MARK BRAXTON

Kidding

9.35pm Sky Comedy

COMEDY Jim Carrey's "sad-com" has a lighter touch this week – despite opening with scenes in 1990s war-torn Croatia, where a group of terrified children are finding solace in watching kids' entertainer Jeff Piccirillo as Mr Pickles (Carrey). That one of those children grows up to run a puppetbased erotica website and speaks with Pickles's voice is an endearing touch.

The comedy is good, too, as Jeff experiments with medical marijuana and reveals he lost his virginity to an older actress – let's just say it was supercalifragilistic expialidocious. Meanwhile, things are looking good for Puppet Time as Deirdre appears to have secured a deal with Amazon. But there's an almighty sting in the tail. DAVID CRAWFORD

I'll Get This

10.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT This series has an added layer of interest at the moment. Watching people – anyone, even overexcited celebrities - having a laugh over a posh restaurant meal carries a hit of vicarious pleasure.

Adrian Edmondson orders a £50 steak. Sara Pascoe looks petrified by the whole thing. Kelly Osbourne fans her face. They swap brittle banter and proceed to the parlour games, which mainly involve embarrassing stories, money and alcohol.

Would the assembled celebrities rather be unbelievably sexy or very clever? How much do Osbourne's haircuts cost? As they try to guess the answers, the losers end up competing to drink shots – but are they drinking vodka or water? DAVID BUTCHER

Beyond the Walls: In Search of the Celts

iPlayer (expires today)

A documentary about the Celts that opens by saying there's not really any such thing: we're in satisfying mythbusting territory here as Durham University's Dr Eleanor Barraclough goes on to investigate how the image of the Romans constantly battling stroppy Britons – and having to keep some areas completely at bay with barriers like Hadrian's Wall and Offa's Dyke – is much too simplistic. First shown in 2018.

Life and Birth

8.00pm BBC1 (10.45pm in Scotland) DOCUMENTARY New series

Much like One Born Every Minute, this is an intimate peek at the birthing experience, this time at Birmingham's maternity units.

Inevitably there are highs and lows. There are straightforward births, complicated ones and one where the newborn is purple and floppy – that makes you hold your breath with fear for the outcome.

Among those we meet are Channelle, whose birth plan is "to get through it alive" and Jenna, who simply wants to reach full-term to give her baby, who has a heart flutter, the best chance of survival. "Giving birth is like going on a journey where there are lots of forks in the road. You have to make decisions one at a time," says one of the midwives sagely. Sometimes it's the medical staff who have to make those decisions, though.

Harrison Ford shines in this 1980s classic, which marked his first serious role after his escapades as Han Solo and Indiana Jones. He plays a cop who visits a Pennsylvanian Amish community to protect a boy who has witnessed a murder at a city railway station. It is partly a love story between Ford and the boy's mother (Kelly McGillis), and partly a thriller, but mainly a study of cultural collision. The bucolic world of the Amish is brilliantly evoked, and director Peter Weir's delicacy of touch impresses throughout. John Ferguson

Peckinpah at his peak

Ride the High Country ★★★★ 7.05pm TCM

Director Sam Peckinpah proved his magisterial talent with this, his second movie (and many think his finest), which offers a gentle requiem to the Old West. Joel McCrea and Randolph Scott bicker their way through a plot about a gold shipment, and there are marvellous supporting performances from Peckinpah regulars Warren Oates, LQ Jones and RG Armstrong, while Edgar Buchanan appears in a knockout vignette as a drunken judge. This is a deeply satisfying, mature movie, so don't miss it. TONY SLOMAN

WEDNESDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY The Great British Sewing Bee 9.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT This is exactly the kind of reassuring TV we need. To see 12 amateurs settling down at their sewing machines to create wrap skirts and tea dresses while politely encouraging each other is uplifting and comforting. And fretting over meandering hemlines, puckering fabrics and uneven waistbands is a welcome – if brief – distraction from more serious matters.

They're a lovely mix of individuals: one chap makes clothes for his drag queen partner, there's a woman who likens her dress sense to Miss Marple

(above, far right), while the rest are assorted bikers, bankers, glamorous grannies, mums and ballroom dancers. Joe Lycett flits about the room, asking questions and making jokes without ever being tiresome, while judges Patrick Grant and "super-punk icon" Esme Young cast an appraising eye over the finished outfits. "It's going to be like a marathon obstacle course, but with zips rather than barbed wire," they promise, making it sound a lot less genteel than the sewing competition actually is. JANE RACKHAM

The Repair Shop

8.00pm BBC1 (7.30pm in Scotland)

ENTERTAINMENT Ceramics expert Kirsten Ramsay has a few nerveracking moments repairing a badly damaged plate. Though broken and heavily glued, it is a beloved treasure to its owner, Sandy from Stoke Newington in London – who, it turns out, must once have been a neighbour of presenter and local lad Jay Blades. The plate bears a photo of Sandy's mum, who died recently after a stroke. Ramsay does an astonishing job, holding her breath during a very delicate process.

Elsewhere, a lady brings in a mechanical tractor (not a toy but a demonstration model) and the experts are asked to make a 1917 compass work again. ALISON GRAHAM

Devs

9.00pm BBC2

glimpses into the past that the nerds in the Devs building (a glowing biscuit tin suspended above a forest) watch on their screens are astounding. They're cleverly done, too, even spine-tingling when it becomes clear, through a blizzard of static, what they portray – some of the most momentous events in history. And Marilyn Monroe having sex with her husband Arthur Miller (there's a good gag about this from the nerds' boss).

Devs is, of course, towering tosh, but it's sleekly done and is turning into a polished, bonkers conspiracy thriller as Lily tries to hoodwink her sinister bosses after the murder of boyfriend Sergei. This is, however, a risky strategy. AG

Our Queen at War

9.00pm ITV

pocumentary The 24 million people who watched the Queen's perfectly judged broadcast as she rallied the nation in the face of the coronavirus pandemic will recall that she mentioned her Second World War radio message.

The teenage Princess Elizabeth and her sister Princess Margaret spoke directly to the young people of the Empire after the outbreak of war and the mass evacuation of children.

This efficient documentary, which features various royal biographers and commentators, draws heavily on newsreel and home movie footage of the royal family and we hear some of that well-known message: "Goodnight children and good luck to you all." AG

Comedy against Living Miserably

9.00pm Dave

comedy Mental health issues are no joke, but Nish Kumar, Suzi Ruffell, Darren Harriott and Seann Walsh openly refer to their own mental health in their stand-up shows – as we see from the clips of them performing at a fund-raising show for Calm. But then backstage we see them chatting honestly and thoughtfully about their personal experiences: Harriott reveals the trauma of his dad's suicide, while Walsh talks about how last year's Strictly media storm affected him.

Their talk covers eating disorders, Twitter trolls and panic attacks but, despite being serious about the subject, they can't resist a spot of mickey-taking, too. JR

80 RadioTimes 18–24 April 2020

How do you keep your teenage children safe while they're online? It's a question a lot of parents will be asking themselves at the moment, what with their bored offspring communicating solely on devices after being physically separated from friends and peers. It's even become a problem in Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV), which despite currently being in a virus-free bubble, has found one of its teen characters taking a big risk on Facetime and then ruing her actions. As we've seen, Asha's world has come crashing down after the video of her going topless was swiped and shared. Now, word reaches her dad Dev, who first rails at and then consoles his sobbing daughter.

Over at Stillwaters, Ken and Claudia have reached an impasse. He explains that the retirement complex will never be his home, while she wants to stay put. He's someone who's spent all of his life dreaming of new horizons, but might Ken be destined to head back to the Street? DAVID BROWN

Save Me Too

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA In the fourth episode of Lennie James's harrowing drama, Nelly knows how far he has pushed his friends in his hunt for his trafficked daughter Jodie. But he can't help it: "I'm not going to stop, I can't, I don't know how... I don't know where I'm going, but I ain't lost."

We haven't seen much of Nelly's ex-wife Claire (Suranne Jones), but we know that she's facing an awful conflict. She wants the search for Jodie to be over, even if the outcome is unthinkable.

So Claire chooses exhilaration to face up to the turmoil, while Nelly doggedly follows the scent of someone he thinks will have the answer to Jodie's whereabouts. AG

UNDER THREAT

9.00pm Sky Comedy

COMEDY DRAMA One-time college lovers Ruby (Merritt Wever) and Billy (Domhnall Gleeson) have texted each other the word RUN, and now they're on a train to Chicago. Ruby's booked a roomette and sex is on the agenda. But maybe not quite yet. "Should we talk first?" asks Billy, who instigated the whole process, but is obviously in some kind of pain – Gleeson is brilliant at exposing Billy's distress.

There's still time for some comedy - a North by Northwest-style interlude as they grapple with the folding beds - and a stimulating interlude with another passenger, but as the barbs fly, you can understand why their lives went in separate directions. Can this momentary madness ever last? GILL CRAWFORD

Feel Good

10.00pm C4

COMEDY "I was an island before I met Mae and I can be again." That's what George (Charlotte Ritchie) insists to her weird-but-well-meaning flatmate as he tries to comfort her in his own way... by giving her a bucket of worms.

At one level Feel Good is a sharp romantic comedy, but it's also good on how addiction issues play out: we've always known that a relapse was on the cards for Mae at some point. It's never a good sign when someone declares, "I am a tiger!"

So where next for our endearingly hopeless lovers? We'll need a second series to feed our addiction to these two. DAVID BUTCHER

And if George is struggling after the break-up, Mae (Mae Martin) is worse. or "I want to be a vagabond poet!"

Earth Day Australia's Zoo Wildlife Hospital is caring for from 8.00am National Geographic this endangered koala DOCUMENTARY Today is Earth Day and and her babies National Geographic has filled its schedule with programming to mark the event's 50th anniversary. The koalas were photographed by Joel Sartore for his Photo Ark project, with episodes throughout the day (from 11am) charting his attempts to capture images of endangered species around the world. At 8pm Jane Goodall: The Hope, which details the veteran conservationist's decades of work to protect chimpanzees, sees her meet with everyone from schoolchildren in Zanzibar to Silicon Valley tech bosses and Prince Harry. In Ocean's Breath (10pm), two National Geographic explorers look at the past and future of coral reefs, searching for solutions that might save them. An Earth Day celebration

Jane ★★★★ Disney+/Netflix

Today marks Earth Day, the global event that seeks to raise awareness of issues affecting our planet. This year's 50th anniversary has been overshadowed by the coronavirus, but there are still ways we can celebrate and learn about the natural world, such as watching this compelling documentary from 2017 about the work of Jane Goodall, whose study of chimpanzees transformed our understanding of simian behaviour. Jane Goodall: The Hope, showing tonight on National Geographic, brings her story bang up to date. Read our interview with Goodall on p16. DAVID PARKINSON

New to Prime today

□ 21 Bridges ★★★ Amazon Prime

A cop-killing bloodbath lights the fuse for a lockdown of the island of Manhattan in this pacey thriller co-produced by Black Panther star Chadwick Boseman and Avengers: Endgame directors Joe and Anthony Russo. Giving another magnetic performance, Boseman plays the detective leading the hunt against the perpetrators of the crime, played by Taylor Kitsch and Stephan James. There's nothing genre-shaking about the movie, but there are plenty of shoot-outs and street chases to savour. JEREMY ASPINALL

1.40pm Sky ThrillerA highlight in a day devoted to the Master of Suspense is this timely showing of Hitchcock's self-isolation classic. James Stewart plays the photojournalist confined to his New York apartment after an injury, who becomes convinced of a crime in the residence opposite. Grace Kelly adds glamour as his doubting girlfriend. JOSH WINNING

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

"I have never – in 30 years at Comic Relief – known so many people coming to us, asking if they can help... from performers, to talent managers, to CEOs of big businesses. We're normally knocking at their doors.

"People want to show their support for key workers on the frontline and help everyone get through these dark times. We've also had calls from other charities, desperately in need of financial support to continue their work, supporting the most vulnerable in our society, who have become doubly vulnerable in the face of coronavirus.

"It feels logical that we at Comic Relief should join forces with Children in Need to make The Big Night In happen. Between us, we can distribute the money to do the most good in this immensely difficult time. And I promise you, we'll work our hardest to do you proud."

PICK OF THE DAY The Big Night In 7.00pm BBC1

CHARITY Let's face it, none of us is going anywhere, so we might as well surrender ourselves as cheerful captives to a whole night of fund-raising comedy.

The BBC's charity behemoths, Comic Relief and Children in Need, have combined their mighty forces in the hope that viewers, if they can, will donate to help frontline staff fighting the virus along with all of those behind-the-scenes men and women who are keeping the country running in a time of crisis. front-man Lenny Henry and Matt Baker, Mr Children in Need, will jointly host the evening, with help from Zoe Ball and, inevitably, Paddy McGuinness.

As a special treat Peter Kay will make an appearance, along with Catherine Tate. There's music from Gary Barlow and some Strictly stars will strut their stuff (presumably alone in their sitting rooms). And Britain's favourite comedy sketches will be rolled out across the night. ALISON GRAHAM

It was one of soapland's most audacious stunts so it's no surprise to see Hollyoaks Favourites (E47pm) reshowing the 2014 wedding train crash. There's no denying how spectacular it is, though it does also contain a ridiculously protracted death scene, as Carmel clings on in the wreckage so that assorted McQueens can find time to gather around her while Ella Henderson sings plaintively on the soundtrack.

Classic EastEnders (1.00pm, 1.40pm Drama) provides a "whatever happened to him?" moment where a viewer claps eyes on an actor they may not have seen for years. In this case, it's Sean Maguire who, as Aidan, is sleeping rough in a portakabin with Mandy in 1993. Maguire had come to Walford following a stint at Grange Hill and left EastEnders by the end of the year, released a hit single in August 1994 before heading to the US, where he became a series regular on such fantasy dramas as Once upon a Time, The 100 and The Magicians. DAVID BROWN

Devs Gor

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA The beardy boss of the strange, sinister and downright dangerous Devs (short for Developments) project, Forest (Nick Offerman) clearly has a specific and personal reason for wanting to see into the past. But he's a complicated fellow. When one of his young nerds makes what everyone agrees is an extraordinary breakthrough, recording clearly the voice of a man speaking Aramaic 2,000 years ago (two clues there), Forest's reaction is unexpected. "I am scared we might be magicians," he says. No, I have no idea what he's on about either.

Meanwhile, software engineer Lily must work hard to protect herself and her friends from Forest and his henchmen. AG

Gordon, Gino and Fred: American Road Trip

9.00pm ITV

TRAVEL "Have you ever seen a white dolphin?" Fred Sirieix asks Gordon Ramsay, before neatly diving beneath the surface of a Texas river. Yes, the macho trio have stripped off again even though the sign clearly says, "No skinny dipping."

They end their culinary road trip (a bit of a misnomer because they spend more time larking about like drunken juveniles than tasting food) criss-crossing the Lone Star State.

Here they play at being cowboys, eat beans (with the inevitable result) and play something called chicken sh*t bingo. The relentless showing-off, swearing and nudity do get tedious but at least they seem to be having fun. JANE RACKHAM

Breeders

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA I like the way the writers on this dark, dark comedy play on the fears of dad and not-quite husband Paul (Martin Freeman). They string his insecurities through every storyline, wind them tight and strum like flamenco guitarists. Paul's eagerness to get married isn't quite matched by Ally (Daisy Haggard), who has been married before – and it didn't turn out well. She's going along with the wedding idea but can barely focus on it, especially with her boss Darren (the smarmy-seedy Patrick Baladi) hassling her with offers of a promotion.

Meanwhile, Paul has to deal with son Luke being violent. Easy: "If you keep upsetting other kids, I'm going to burn all your toys." DAVID BUTCHER

They're back! Already! It's only a few months since we enjoyed series three of a modernised Mexican telenovela that is, undoubtedly, the most eventful drama ever to revolve around floristry. As we rejoin La Casa de las Flores, once again a family member is looking at a stretch in prison: doubtless there'll be plenty more upheaval but we're really here for the relationship ups and downs of an ensemble with good LGBT representation.

Gangs of London

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA New series Sky's new crime saga opens with a horrific death scene and it doesn't lighten up much from there. Yes, we expect thrillers to be violent but, trust me, this has scenes that could strip the plasma off your screen, including a fight involving a meat cleaver and a mattress I won't forget in a hurry.

Bear that health warning in mind and you'll be fine: it's a classy, cool, richly cast drama about a crime family thrown into chaos when its patriarch is killed. Son Sean (Joe Cole from Peaky Blinders) is set on revenge and as an Albanian rival notes, "A boy like him could burn cities to convince the world he's a man."

As we get to know the extended family and its associates, the standout is footsoldier Elliot (brilliant Sope Dirisu), a "washed-up squaddie" whose skills are established via a pub fight where he takes out eight Albanians.

With one dart. DAVID BUTCHER

Defending her family A Good Woman Is Hard to Find ****

10.00pm Sky Premiere

In this slow-burning yet visceral thriller, Sarah Bolger (Emelie, TV's Mayans MC) plays a meek and mild widow forced into violence after a twitchy thief puts her family in grave danger. Director Abner Pastoll builds the tension deftly with the aid of Matthew Pusti's menacing score, while Bolger delivers a convincingly nuanced performance as the bereft and downtrodden innocent who is driven to increasingly gruesome acts. JEREMY ASPINALL

Blue Story ★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies

Two best friends find themselves on opposite sides of a London gang war in this contemporary drama, which looks at youth culture in a way that feels authentic and honest. Directed by YouTube sensation Rapman (aka Andrew Onwubolu), who narrates through his music, it stars Stephen Odubola and Michael Ward as the studious teens who become hardened gang members. Theirs is a sobering journey, and while the film's plot is entirely fictional, the issues it addresses are very much rooted in reality. James Luxford

William Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet ★★★★

8.00pm Sky Drama
To mark Shakespeare's birth (and death) day, here's Baz Luhrmann's dazzling 1996 take on the Bard's beloved tragedy. Young Leonardo DiCaprio and Claire Danes are divine as the star-crossed lovers, swooning inexorably towards an unforgettable death scene illuminated by neon crosses. ELLIE PORTER

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY After Life all of series two is available from 8.00am Netflix

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Intriguing that two of the finest comedies of recent times, After Life and Mum, have had the agony of grief as their springboard. After Life is quite beautiful, a perfect balance of the hilarious and piercingly sad, written from the heart by Ricky Gervais, who also directs and stars as widower Tony, one of the most cuttingly honest characters on television.

Series two finds him aiming to be "more Zen" and kinder to his chums and colleagues at The Tambury Gazette. Episode one begins with an uplifting montage to the Carpenters' Top of the World but soon sees Tony effing his way out of a yoga class and interviewing a miserable 100-year-old care-home resident (an astonishingly potty-mouthed turn from Annette Crosbie).

There are many joys in After Life, chief among them Tony's easy, tender friendships with women: Ashley Jensen as Emma, the nurse he is sweet on but has put on hold, who now has a sexier admirer; Roisin Conaty as sex worker Roxy, who's soon dating the grotty postman, Pat; and heavenly Penelope Wilton as Anne, the widow that Tony charms and makes chuckle while they're offloading at their spouses' gravesides. PATRICK MULKERN

Rick Stein's Road to Mexico

7.00pm BBC2

FOOD Around 50 years ago Rick Stein first travelled from California to Mexico and, in this 2017 series, he returns to find out what's changed since his culinary imagination was fired by exotica like guacamole and tacos. Notebook in hand, he peers over the shoulders of various chefs as they cook their speciality before making his version back home. And so he creates a San Francisco fish stew that's "unctuous" (his favourite word, he says) and a dish known as "the American housewife's best friend" – mac and cheese.

It's all about the food for Rick, yet strangely he doesn't make Chinese fortune cookies, but is saucy reading the predictions. JANE RACKHAM

Vera

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Castles in the Air (an episode first shown in 2013) opens with three young women who are having girly chats and getting drunk in a big, beautiful house in the middle of nowhere.

But gunshots fracture the damp night and someone falls dead, and soon Detective Chief Inspector Stanhope (Brenda Blethyn) is shambling through the crime scene, as a thoroughly absorbing story of jealousy and guilt unfolds.

Although not based on one of Ann Cleeves's books, the story gives her ramshackle detective Vera Stanhope plenty of room to do what she does best – watch, listen and dig into other people's souls.

ALISON GRAHAM

Walking Britain's Lost Railways

8.00pm Channel 5

poignant lost-world feel about prepandemic docs like these... Here's Rob Bell on a crowded Edinburgh railway station or shaking hands with and chatting to engineers and enthusiasts in the happy days before social distancing. In the final episode he's in Scotland, tracing the Waverley Route, which closed in 1969 amid huge controversy.

But there's good news – part of the link that once ran for 100 miles across the border from Edinburgh to Carlisle was re-opened in 2015. He talks to workers involved in the project and visits a cashmere mill that puts his scruffy jumper to shame. AG

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

in on its final finale: three more episodes and it's goodbye for good. Which makes it strange that this feels like a decent but run-of-the-mill instalment, apart from one storyline, which looks set to tee up an emotional finish. First, we revisit the show's longest-running sight-gag, the broken stair in the Dunphy house. It claims another victim, leaving dopey Dylan concerned about his twins. "You're not even in the terrible twos yet!" scoffs Jay. Dylan replies, "When do those start?"

But crucially, Cam and Mitchell are thinking of enlarging the family and adopting a baby boy. If they were on their death beds, could they trust Lily not to pull the plug? DAVID BUTCHER

100 RadioTimes 18-24 April 2020

If their storyline wasn't so traumatic, I'd be thinking that Charity (Emma Atkins) and Vanessa (Michelle Hardwick) in Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) were in the middle of some fantasy body-swap comedy. Six months ago, if I'd been asked to guess which of the pair would be featured in a widely distributed video on social media showing them getting into a row with a stranger on a boozy night out, I'd definitely have predicted it to be Charity. But Vanessa's cancer diagnosis has sent her into a tailspin, so much so that there's now a rift between her and Charity. And it's set to widen further tonight when Vanessa makes a big request that leaves Charity faltering.

Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) fans hoping to see Yasmeen send Geoff packing may have to wait a little longer. He's found the pamphlet she received about domestic abuse and then decides to take a different approach by creating a divide between his wife and her best mate Cathy, thus isolating Yasmeen even further. DAVID BROWN

Around the World by Train with Tony Robinson

9.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL The colourful Hawaiian shirts have been replaced with a padded anorak and beanie hat because Tony Robinson is in the chilly environs of Vladivostok at the very eastern end of Russia. It's here that he's starting his 10,000-kilometre journey on the Trans-Siberian Express to Helsinki in Finland via Moscow.

Obviously, he hops off every so often to see the sights. He drinks home-made vodka with a family, meets the Mistress of Copper Mountain, rubs a bronze cockerel for good luck in Moscow's metro and disco dances on both sides of the Urals. That vodka must have been really strong. JANE RACKHAM

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA When a foreman is electrocuted and the burnt remains of a body are discovered in the oven at a brick factory, a complicated case involving illegal immigrants, casual racism and bribery is mixed up with the series' trademark focus on emotional family affairs – the soundtrack's plaintive strings and piano are put to a lot of work.

Meanwhile, Valeria is slowly emerging from the fog of her addiction, which makes her even quicker than usual at uncannily spotting clues and wrapping up the case – but she's still brittle and brusque towards that lumbering hunk Andrea, who's smarting after his efforts to help her came to nought.

Bulletproof

10.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA The Cypriot drugs-and-sextrafficking clan our guys are trying to bring down have been very welcoming. They've taken Pike and Bishop to their hearts, never really questioning whether these young chancers they've allowed into their outfit might be, you know, undercover detectives or anything.

Finally, the police-badge-shaped penny has dropped. The Markides have rumbled that so-called Tyrone (aka Pike ie Ashley Walters) is a "fed", leading to one of those "Shoot him or I'm going to shoot you!" scenes. It makes for an episode with real tension along with the clattering shootouts where the bullets fly but only uniform coppers without speaking parts ever get hit. Or do they? DAVID BUTCHER

The best of streaming and catch-up

The Mandalorian Disney+

This franchise spin-off has been excellent so far, with storytelling taut enough to deliver single half-hour episodes that feel big enough to belong in the Star Wars universe. Pedro Pascal is working wonders with his faceless lead character, while the surprise casting of Werner Herzog (above) as the Client is one of many other wry delights in a show that's as drily funny as it is spectacular. This week, an old enemy makes the Mandalorian a peace offering, but it's unlikely to be as simple as that.

KIDS' CHOICE

Gabby Duran and the Unsittables

5.30pm Disney Channel (Sky 609, Virgin 724), Disney+

FILM OF THE DAY Shaun of the Dead

9.00pm ITV2

Zombies take over London, but slacker Shaun (Simon Pegg) has bigger problems to contend with, in this entertaining blend of George A Romero-style horror and offbeat humour. With Nick Frost, Kate Ashfield and Penelope Wilton.

Hubble: the Wonders of Space Revealed science "One could argue," a scientist says here, "that Hubble is one of the most successful scientific experiments in history."

9.00pm BBC2

And 30 years after the space telescope first went into orbit, astronomers, astronauts and Nasa folk line up to sing the praises of its "eye to the universe".

There are interesting sequences based around the missions to service Hubble – including the first, in 1993, to correct a misshapen mirror that, embarrassingly, threatened the whole $1.5bn project. It's always extraordinary to watch space walks and hear from those who did the walking. But the best scenes explore the images Hubble has produced by peering deep into the clouds and "pillars" at the heart of distant galaxies. They're majestic, even when they look like something from a 1970s sci-fi calendar.

Aliens beware!

■ Men in Black: International ★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

Chris Hemsworth and Tessa Thompson (alias Thor and Valkyrie in the Marvel films) take over from Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones for this redundant fourth movie in the Men in Black franchise. Rookie Agent M (Thompson) teams up with slacker Agent H (Hemsworth) to protect visiting alien royalty, but discovers there's a mole in the agency with an apocalyptic agenda. A neuralyzer won't be needed to render this pointless sequel instantly forgettable. ALAN JONES

Sweet and Lowe

Sightseers  All4 FREE TO VIEW

Alice Lowe and Steve Oram co-wrote and star in this indecently funny road movie from director Ben Wheatley. They play a Midlands couple who embark on their first caravanning holiday together, but when they encounter others who don't share the same respect for the country code, the vacation turns into a thrill-killing spree. With its mix of the mundane and the murderous, this is playfully sick but effortlessly entertaining. Lowe's pregnancy black comedy Prevenge is also now available on C4's catch-up service. AJ

Sonic the Hedgehog ★★★★ iTunes

Available now to download and keep, this fast-paced and fun video-game adaptation sees the speedy blue icon at the top of his game. Sonic teams up with smalltown cop James Marsden against a mad scientist, played with scene-stealing relish by Jim Carrey. Bonkers CGI hilarity ensues. DAVE ALDRIDGE

T thought Idlast six months'

But it's been ten years since Jamie Cullum launched his jazz show. He tells us what makes nearly 300,000 listeners tune in

The Jazz Show with Jamie Cullum Tuesday 11.00pm Radio 2

EN YEARS AGO, the musician Jamie Cullum was between tours and doing the occasional presenting spot on a digital jazz station when Radio 2 came calling. The network was looking to rejig its schedule and offered him a weekly jazz show. Cullum wasn't at all sure but his manager had some advice. "He said, 'You spend most of your time evangelising about other people's music when you're supposed to be promoting your own. Why not give it a try?' So I did. I thought I'd last six months but loved it so much I decided I wanted to do it for as long as I could."

This month he's celebrating a decade of The Jazz Show with Jamie Cullum, for which he has twice won at the Arias (Audio & Radio Industry Awards) and which has an average weekly audience of 280,000. Cullum, whose 2.5 millionselling debut Twentysomething remains the biggest-selling jazz album in UK history, soon realised the job of a presenter involved more than just playing good music. Among his broadcasting heroes were Trevor Nelson, Gilles Peterson and the late John Peel; he recalls being in awe of "the ease they had talking about music and just the feeling of being comfortable on the radio, as if you, the listener, were the Morrison and Clint Eastwood. He already had connections with Eastwood, having worked on the theme song to his 2008 film Gran Torino; their interview remains one of his most cherished broadcasting moments. "Many people interviewing him find him a bit curmudgeonly, but because we were talking about jazz, which he loves, it was a way to talk to him about everything." He also recalls an interview with Lars Ulrich, the drummer from Metallica: "That was a big deal for me as I was a real metalhead as a teenager, and he's very into jazz. To hear some of [1984 album] Ride the Lightning go out on Radio 2 was quite something."

Cullum, who is 40, is no jazz purist - his approach to both making music and playing it on the radio is deliberately inclusive. "My love of jazz has been filtered through hip hop, drum 'n' bass and guitar music. I've never had a sense of what is cool or uncool. And I will always find jazz intimidating because I'm still struggling to against a brick wall trying to get better. That's part of the joy of it, though. A life project."

SNAZZY AND JAZZY "I've never had a sense of what's cool or uncool," says Jamie Cullum

Cullum's musical journey began in the early 2000s when, as a hip young crooner, he was signed to a major label for a million pounds. Back then he was famed for his dressed-down style, favouring scuffed Converse trainers and T-shirts instead of suits, and for leaping around during performances, tapping out beats on his piano and plucking the wires with his fingers.

INCE THEN, HE'S spent years on the road mixing jazz standards and Radiohead covers with his own compositions, selling out New York's Carnegie Hall (The New York Times called him "two parts Billy Joel to one part Harry Connick Jr") and collaborating with Laura Mvula, Gorillaz's Dan the Automator and Pharrell Williams. He has pared back the touring to be around for his family - he's married to model and author Sophie Dahl, with whom he has two children.

Cullum is a lifelong radio listener and delights in the open-mindedness and eclecticism of Radio 2, which has welcomed his varied and sometimes outré tastes. "For me, the station's charm lies in that broad spectrum of music and conversation. I think it introduces a lot of concepts into the mainstream that maybe wouldn't get there otherwise. Originally, when I started the show, we were scheduled straight after Simon Mayo. We would capture seven million of his listeners in the first 20 minutes and I'd be playing John Coltrane's A Love Supreme. Someone emailed me once after an 11-minute improvised piece saying,

'I never knew Robbie Coltrane played the saxophone."

Cullum's continuing work as a musician makes him well placed to keep up with new music. Before he got the radio job, he recalls listening to the Elbow frontman Guy Garvey on his Xfm show "and the way he talked about new music, it was incredibly powerful. What I try to do before I play something is ment and curiosity, and try to make whoever is listening think, 'I really want to hear this.'"

The coronavirus lockdown called for changes to his show's tenth birthday celebrations. He'd planned to reunite with favourite guests but, in the event, broadcast from his home studio, choosing highlights of past sessions with Cleo

Laine and Ramsey Lewis, and with Polar Bear, who were his first guests ten years ago: "They set the agenda and tried to make clear that this wasn't going to be some stuffy beard-scratchy jazz show." Cullum was also set to be touring but, with that postponed, he's content to have time to work on his songs and unearth new music. "I'm lucky to do for work what I'd be doing in my spare time," he says. "Sit around listening to music? What a privilege." FIONA STURGES

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama on 3: Othello Sunday 7.30pm Radio 3

I've seen Othello a fair few times. Boiled down, it's a domestic-abuse horror show. But, going for the bigger picture, I've also seen a version that emphasises the Islamic world, as Emma Harding does in her new adaptation for radio. She brings the action into the near future, against a soundscape of whirring choppers and news broadcasts that puts one in mind of Homeland.

There is no knowing for sure whether Othello, a Moorish ambassador in Venice, was born Muslim. All there is to glean of his faith from the text is his conversion to Christianity. Interesting to reconsider this great play of "otherness" and racism from a Christian-Muslim angle, then.

In the title role, Khalid Abdalla maintains an even dignity, while his trusted adviser, "honest" lago (Matthew Needham), secretly abuses and undermines him. Needham moderates his tone in true psychopathic fashion. It's hard for Desdemona, Othello's wife and one of the objects of lago's jealousy, to come across as anything but a poor sap. Here, though, Cassie Layton gives her a strong voice. If only Carrie Mathison from Homeland had been there to save her.

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

The impact of coronavirus will soon be felt in Ambridge, with listeners noticing a change in the style of episodes. Instead of characters interacting, the drama will feature villagers sharing private thoughts with the audience, as actors record down the line from their own homes. This calls for storylines written right up to the wire, which means that the production team won't always have time to provide plot teasers in advance. So please excuse us if Ambridge Diary becomes sporadic.

For the week ahead, though, it's business as usual, with Shula facing some home truths, Philip feeling spontaneous, and Phoebe trying to get the better of Justin Elliott. DAVID BROWN

A wonderful world of classic radio awaits on BBC Sounds – here's the pick of the best Broadcasters are a lot more bothered about what's new than we are. If they didn't produce anything new for the next year it would probably take some of us just as long to notice. However extended this current state of emergency proves to be, it's unlikely to last long enough for us to catch up with even half of the great radio programmes we've probably missed in recent years, let alone those you've heard and always meant to revisit. The BBC may not always help itself by the way it swaps things in and out of its platforms for various inexplicable reasons, usually to do with "rights", but the present time, when we're all off games, is a massive opportunity to appreciate the range and depth of the BBC programming you've probably never heard that is still available either as a podcast or via listen-on-demand. Here are just six for a flavour.

SOUNDS

All the BBC's audio offerings are accessible via BBC Sounds – radio programmes as they air, radio programmes that remain available after broadcast, as well as a huge range of podcasts. You can find BBC Sounds at bbc.co.uk/sounds, or you can go to the BBC website bbc.co.uk - where there is the option to click on Sounds. In the Sounds section you will find all the networks - Radios 1, 2, 3 and 4 etc - and podcasts in the Podcasts section. If you know the podcast you are looking for, you can search for it.

PODCAST OF THE WEEK

The Armstrong Tapes

The great jazz

trumpeter Louis Armstrong was a tireless home taper, dragging a bulky reel-to-reel machine with him on the road and leaving behind on his death in 1971 miles of home recordings of him talking about every aspect of his life, with fans, journalists, other musicians and even the regular people he lived alongside. Here those same tapes provide a rare opportunity to get to know the most interesting musical personality of the 20th century.

The Betrayal

This recording from 2010, the same year Helen Dunmore's novel was nominated for the Booker Prize, is just one of scores of BBC audiobooks, which range from canonical classics to paperback hits. The story concerns a doctor called in to perform a difficult operation on the son of one of Stalin's most feared henchmen. Suddenly he and his wife face the terrifying prospect of having people in high places know who they are. This is a brilliant idea and it's superbly narrated here by Sara Kestelman.

In Our Time

If you want a crash course in anything, from the history of coffee through the early days of the railways to the evolution of horses, there is very little to beat three top academic experts on the subjects being put through their paces by Melvyn Bragg. Thanks to BBC Sounds there is an unbelievable wealth of back episodes of this programme at your fingertips. Nobody has any excuse for ignorance while this is still available on the BBC.

Test Match Special

The playwright Ben Travers was 94 in 1980

when he climbed to the Test Match Special commentary position at Lord's to regale Brian Johnston and John Arlott with his memories of watching WG Grace – who was, incidentally, his mother's doctor and the great Jack Hobbs play cricket. This proved to be the first View from the Boundary, a format that has since hosted everyone from the Duke of Edinburgh to Lily Allen. You can find them under Test Match Special.

Shakespeare's Restless World

Neil MacGregor, the man who brought you

A History of the World in 100 Objects, which is still available for you to hear, followed it with a series taking the same approach to England's greatest writer. By looking at Shakespeare's world and our world through the prism of old pictures, antique clothing and even old cutlery abandoned on the banks of the Thames, MacGregor proves that a great storyteller really doesn't require all that much to go on.

Sleep

When Max Richter's eight-hour, slowly unfolding celebration of somnolence was first performed for Radio 3 in 2015, some audience members came staggering out of the Wellcome Collection saying they had actually seen visions, while others claimed it was the most profound musical experience they had ever had. Some audience members remained on the borders of sleep throughout, while others slipped right over. Both outcomes are perfectly acceptable. Try it. You don't have to be up early this morning.

Listening in lockdown

Drivetime is having a car-free moment

ere's a quiz question to distract you in these lockdown times. Can you name me the one word in the English language invented entirely for radio? Pop yourself into Dictionary Corner, put on an embarrassing jumper and tell me! Go on! It's such a powerful word, it helps explain how and why millions ever got the listening habit at all.

So, what is this single word? Well, it's drivetime. Where TV has primetime, radio has been powered for years by people in cars. For me, when I think of drivetime I think of my friend Lisa, who drove a 1975 cream-coloured Mini with a dodgy battery. Tuned to Radio 1 in the early 1980s, the signal would get stronger with speed. So at 30mph, you could get a decent FM signal, but navigating a roundabout, the static would drown out speech and music.

If you switched to the tape cassette instead, the song would then slow down with you. Approaching the traffic lights in Aberdeen, where Lisa and I were both students, Kylie Minogue would increasingly become Rick Astley going down through the gears. "Better the devil you know..." (shift down to second) "w-h-o-a o-h o-h (stationary behind a blue Transit van) "o-h o-h o-h o-h".

From the end of the school run to the commute home, by way of all those vans heading home at the end of the day, any time from 4pm to 7pm is a peak-time slot. It's there you can hear some of our best-loved stars.

Which makes it all the more remarkable that right now, amid the crisis over You-Know-What, with hardly any cars on the road at all, drivetime is booming. Traffic has halved but audiences have soared. The radio wins right now because it's either got the information we need or the entertainment. There's nothing better for feeling normal at home or connecting families who are isolating than hearing the voices you love on the radio.

You'd think that current conditions would bazooka the radio business. No cars, no listeners. Think again. The big broadcasters report the opposite. Global, which owns Capital FM and LBC, and the BBC say streaming of their live radio stations has gone up more than 15 per cent. Parliament's not sitting, offices are empty, the banter is gone. Even the pub bore has been sent packing. But radio remains a public space for debate when all other places are shut. When you're looking for something to do as you scrub the skirting boards for the umpteenth time, you need radio to convince you life will return to normal.

t's no coincidence the Government has chosen to schedule its daily briefings at 5 PM – Prime Drivetime! Perfect for Eddie Mair between 4 and 6 on LBC and Evan Davis on PM on Radio 4. Indeed, PM now often begins at 4.30 instead of 5 where it sat for 50 years. Over at Radio 2, schedules are being ripped up so that Sara Cox, their cheeky voice of drivetime, can keep us going for another hour, right up to 8 pm.

The test of a great radio moment always used to be that as you sat in your car, having reached your destination, you couldn't get out until the thing you were listening to had ended. "I stayed in the car till the song stopped / till that amazing woman with the parrot rang off."

Now that we've parked our cars on the driveway for weeks, we've simply taken the radio inside with us. No more are we firing up the ignition and tuning into drivetime. But we are listening to it in lockdown.

Today's Choices

Make a Difference BBC Local Radio stations and BBC Sounds

Back in March, BBC Local Radio stations launched a campaign to keep communities connected and help bring people together. The response has been staggering. Well over 200,000 people have made contact and there 've been many outstanding contributions from volunteers; from picking up prescriptions, to delivering food to the most vulnerable – a wealth of acts of kindness. Now a twice-weekly podcast has been launched, showcasing some of the incredible stories coming out of the Make a Difference campaign. One man, registered as blind, rang BBC Hereford and Worcester to say he had lost his wallet on the way to buy a microwave. A support worker went out to look, but couldn't find it - then offered to buy him a microwave herself. In Cornwall, a woman with a heart condition, self-isolating with her severely disabled son, called Radio Cornwall for help, and volunteers delivered food for her son to her doorstep – along with flowers for her. And in Nuneaton, a man whose 100th birthday party had been cancelled was touched when lots of BBC CWR listeners sent him happy birthday wishes, to help him celebrate his big day. New podcasts featuring these uplifting stories are available every Tuesday and Friday at bbc.co.uk/makeadifference Saxophonist Jess Gillam and a fellow musician swap tracks and share musical discoveries across a range of styles, revealing how music shapes their everyday lives. The programme was the winner of best specialist music show at the Audio and Radio Industry Awards, held in March.

1.00 Inside Music

Series in which musicians offer an insider's take on various works, today with Alex Woolf, composer of the NHS Symphony and the M1 Symphony, discovering a mix of old and new in both Mozart's Requiem and Nico Muhly's Motion. He also muses on the power of a single unbroken musical line in Knussen's Violin Concerto, reveals the unlikely but magical combination of four bassoons and soprano in an aria by Rameau, and ponders whether Beethoven would have appreciated people analysing his music so much.

3.00 Sound of Gaming

4/5. Composer Jessica Curry presents Radio 3's first showcase of music from video games. This penultimate instalment in the current series focuses on vinyl, including a report from Newcastle record shop Chipfreq and a chat with composer Chipzel.

6.30 Opera on 3

Verdi's dark drama of political intrigue Simon Boccanegra, premiered in 1857, is a story of simmering, long-held resentment that ultimately resolves into forgiveness and reconciliation. Set in 14th-century Genoa, it concerns a great sea-going hero who reluctantly accepts high office, and who late in life discovers the long-lost daughter who disappeared years ago. Carlos Alvarez stars in this production recorded in December 2018 at the Royal Opera House, London. Presented by Martin Handley, who is joined by pianist and music analyst Nicholas Baragwanath.

Today's Choices

On Your Farm

6.35am Radio 4

A new series begins today with a tour of the Taw River Dairy, a farm in Devon begun three years ago by husband and wife Sam and Katie Bullingham. They can barely keep up with demand and it's encouraging to hear that what people want is ethical, organic farming. The Jersey cows are solely pasture fed. They suckle their calves. And their milk is sold in glass bottles which, let's face it, should have replaced plastic long ago. The Bullinghams make ice cream too. Try to listen without licking your lips. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island, Kidnapped and Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde have enthralled readers for 150 years. A different beast is Weir of Hermiston, which he was working on when he died from a cerebral haemorrhage in 1894. Completed from Stevenson's own notes and adapted in two parts by Colin Macdonald, this is a gripping romance set amid the Scottish hills, with the hallmark human struggle of darkness and light. Today's Choices

Curious under the Stars

10.45am/7.45pm Radio 4 Comedy dramas come and go on Radio 4, leaving a moist mark on our memories, like an early morning mist on the grass, if they are done well. Now back for its tenth series, the effective use of magical realism means that Curious under the Stars has roots as strong as the sacred oak tree that once bound the Welsh village of Glan Don together. Two couples are facing rucks in their relationships but the Druid's Rest, the local pub, has a more pressing destructive force to deal with. This is pure escapism with a light touch, combining folklore and mysticism in a contemporary setting. JANE ANDERSON

Drama: GF Newman's The Corrupted

2.15pm Radio 4

It's the post-Thatcher, pre-social media world of 1991, and as Brian Oldman languishes in jail, claiming he's been framed, his parents are embroiled in bitter divorce proceedings. Amid the acrimony, a familial secret and a link to then-PM John Major are revealed. The conceit of mixing fictional characters with real-life figures isn't new, but adds much-needed piquancy to The Corrupted. The ever-excellent Toby Jones, as Brian's dad Joseph, injects a quicksilver seam of gravitas and credibility. CHRIS GARDNER

1/5. Putting on a Show. Donald Macleod traces Beethoven's story between 1799 and 1801, when the composer was preparing to launch his music to the wider public after years of peddling his talents to Vienna's music-loving aristocrats. As he reached his 30th birthday, he finally began to produce the enduring works that would mark him out as one of the great artists of his age. But there were clouds on the horizon.

1/5. Survival. Musician, broadcaster and birdwatcher Tom McKinney reads a series of essays in which he considers the ways in which he has been affected by the sounds of birds and their astonishing annual migratory journeys. He starts with "fall-out" – the mass arrival of tiny songbirds each year on the Texan Gulf coast. Good habitat for food and shelter is sparse, and in a bad year, hundreds of thousands of birds can die from exhaustion and dehydration. Producer Melanie Harris (R)

Jakub Jozef Orlinski (above) is the countertenor who's almost too hot to Handel. A champion break-dancer as well as a fashion model, the 29-year-old Pole with the sensual voice, winning stage presence and impressive physique proved the sensation of last summer's Glyndebourne Festival after being invited to take over the title-role in Handel's Rinaldo halfway through rehearsals. Orlinski is here heard preparing to tackle Handel's Tolomeo, a role originally written for the legendary castrato Senesino.

Graham Greene: The Confidential Agent

MARK PAPPENHEIM

10.00am/3.00pm R4 Extra Written in the course of six weeks in 1938 while Graham Greene struggled to finish The Power and the Glory, this "entertainment" was not one of his favourites. Yet this dramatisation from 2016 highlights its suspense-filled action, as a government agent travelling from a war-torn country to Britain to secure a fuel deal finds himself the target of dark forces. It makes explicit Greene's inspiration from the Spanish Civil War but skims over his deeper theme of heroism struggling amid the fog of war. DAVID CRAWFORD

Today's Choices

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3 When Alban Berg wrote his Violin Concerto in memory of Alma Mahler's 18-year-old daughter Manon Gropius (above), who died of polio on this date in 1935, he can't have known that he himself would die on Christmas Eve. Yet this haunting work, dedicated "to the memory of an angel" and crowned by a set of variations on a death-devoted Bach chorale, is distinctly valedictory in tone, incorporating cryptic references to Berg's own life and loves. It's framed tonight by two equally valedictory symphonies from two Russian composers: Shostakovich and his sometime pupil Edison Denisov. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

The Film Programme

4.00pm Radio 4 We're all having to be resourceful right now, and The Film Programme is no exception. UK cinemas closed weeks ago, but this is an opportunity for Antonia Quirke to begin re-assessing films of vesteryear. "The idea is to recommend a film for people to watch while in self-isolation," says producer Stephen Hughes. "A film they can watch online and get delivered online." This choice couldn't be better. When it was first released in 1969 Women in Love was spoken of largely in terms of its "scandalous" sexual content. But 50 years later...? Among those speaking from the archive are director Ken Russell, cameraman Billy Williams, and Glenda Jackson, seen above with co-star Oliver Reed. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Marking today's anniversary of the birth of Shakespeare in 1564, actor Adrian Lester and Professor Ewan Fernie talk to scholar Islam Issa about Birmingham's First Folio and the man who brought it to the city. The Birmingham Shakespeare Memorial Library was founded with the help of Nonconformist preacher, lecturer and activist George Dawson (1821–76), who had a vision of Birmingham as a progressive social and cultural centre in the mid-19th century. The library houses Britain's most important Shakespeare collection, comprising 43,000 volumes, including a copy of the 1623 work First Folio (Mr William Shakespeares Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies). Over three years, the Everything to Everybody project aims to share these cultural riches with the people of Birmingham in a wide range of ways.

Gardeners' Question Time

3.00pm Radio 4

It's a year since Kathy Clugston (above) took over as chair of Gardeners' Question Time following the announcement of Eric Robson's retirement, and the way the anniversary is working out is not quite as the one-time Radio 4 newsreader might have expected. "I have loved visiting glorious gardens all over the UK, meeting GQT listeners, and, most of all, getting to know the panel," she tells RT. "It's been a new type of broadcasting for me. I am learning all the time, not least now that we are making GQT 'at home' and connecting remotely." Let's hope GQT and rest of us will be free to hit the road again soon. sımon o'hagan

Late Junction 11.00pm Radio 3

At the time of writing, the country is in the midst of an unprecedented social experiment. With millions stuck at home, just how can we learn to relax and adapt our daily routines? This is the question posed by psychologist Josh Cohen in this episode of Late Junction. With its emphasis on ambient soundscapes and sonic reflections, it will come as little surprise to regular listeners to hear that experimental music might be the answer. Tom Goul DING

Beamish's Third String Quartet (subtitled Reed Stanzas) was inspired partly by the Elias Quartet's Donald Grant, who doubles as a Scottish fiddle player, and also by bird calls and the landscapes of Suffolk and Harris. Bookending Beamish's String Quartet are two by Beethoven, who learned from the form's inventor and pre-eminent composer, Haydn, only to then become arguably the master of the genre.

11.00 Late Junction

At a time when many are being forced to change our daily routines, Late Junction asks how music can help people discover a different internal rhythm. Writer and psychoanalyst Josh Cohen discusses the importance of music that slackens the pace, attuning people to slower, more drifting states of mind – boredom, weariness, "infinite languor" and pure consciousness. Other works include Australian composer Tilman Robinson's sonic reflections on the Anthropocene. Producer Alannah Chance

Face behind the voice

Mani Djazmi BBC World Service

Age 39 Current job Presents World Football every Friday on BBC World Service. CV Born in

Tehran, Iran. Came to England with his family when he was four to have surgery to save his eyesight. The surgery didn't work, however the family stayed for his schooling. Studied English language at Sheffield University, then did a postgrad in broadcast journalism. Freelanced for BBC Radio 4's In Touch for ten years: "I had been determined I would never work for In Touch, as I thought it was the ultimate in pigeonholing. But I realised I didn't deserve a career in journalism if I didn't." Worked on other Radio 4 shows plus BBC Sport, then for World Service's World Football - he was given a staff contract in 2011. Best moment "In 2012 during the Paralympics I was reporting at the wheelchair rugby and when they came to me, I said, 'All the fans want to see clashes, bashes and wheelchair smashes.' As I said it, GB scored and there was a huge crescendo. It was great; live reporting in a way I never thought I'd be able to, because I can't relay what happens in front of my eyes." Worst moment "In 2011 at the Asian Cup in Qatar, after Bahrain v Australia, I asked for an interview with the sole goalscorer Mile Jedinak. They said the coach was coming too, but I said, 'No, just get Mile.' When the guy arrived, I said, 'Mile, great goal.' And this voice said, 'No, I am the coach. I am not Mile.' I wanted the ground to open up and swallow me. I was mortified!" Off air "I live on my own in Sale, Greater Manchester. I read a lot of history, especially social history. And I watch a lot of comedy. I'm obsessed with Frasier, I've watched every episode – except the last two; I don't want it to end!"

First radio memory "When I was five or six, I used to listen to the local station, BBC Radio Cambridgeshire, and phone in for their competitions. I did it mainly just to hear myself on the radio!" Favourite broadcasters "John Inverdale is the consummate broadcaster, eloquent and smooth. The interviewing style of Eddie Mair and Jane Garvey. Also Peter White - he has a smile in his voice and puts people at their ease, but gives them a hard time if they need it." Ambition "I'd really like to present HardTalk. Or to be working in a foreign bureau, bringing stories from around the world."

Dream job "I'm doing it. I've always thought this was going to be the most fun I would ever have. I've wanted to be a journalist since I was about three. In Iran I was transfixed by the news bulletins from the war with Iraq: I'd stay up and watch them. and pretend to interview people." Secret skills "I play the piano. I learnt by ear, from when I was five;

later I learnt braille music – you have to learn each part separately and memorise them." DAVID CRAWFORD

Face behind the voice

Mani Djazmi BBC World Service

Age 39 Current job Presents World Football every Friday on BBC World Service. CV Born in

Tehran, Iran. Came to England with his family when he was four to have surgery to save his eyesight. The surgery didn't work, however the family stayed for his schooling. Studied English language at Sheffield University, then did a postgrad in broadcast journalism. Freelanced for BBC Radio 4's In Touch for ten years: "I had been determined I would never work for In Touch, as I thought it was the ultimate in pigeonholing. But I realised I didn't deserve a career in journalism if I didn't." Worked on other Radio 4 shows plus BBC Sport, then for World Service's World Football – he was given a staff contract in 2011. Best moment "In 2012 during the Paralympics I was reporting at the wheelchair rugby and when they came to me, I said, 'All the fans want to see clashes, bashes and wheelchair smashes.' As I said it, GB scored and there was a huge crescendo. It was great; live reporting in a way I never thought I'd be able to, because I can't relay what happens in front of my eyes." Worst moment "In 2011 at the Asian Cup in Qatar, after Bahrain v Australia, I asked for an interview with the sole goalscorer Mile Jedinak. They said the coach was coming too, but I said, 'No, just get Mile.' When the guy arrived, I said, 'Mile, great goal.' And this voice said, 'No, I am the coach. I am not Mile.' I wanted the ground to open up and swallow me. I was mortified!" Off air "I live on my own in Sale, Greater Manchester. I read a lot of history, especially social history. And I watch a lot of comedy. I'm obsessed with Frasier, I've watched every episode – except the last two; I don't want it to end!"

First radio memory "When I was five or six, I used to listen to the local station, BBC Radio Cambridgeshire, and phone in for their competitions. I did it mainly just to hear myself on the radio!" Favourite broadcasters "John Inverdale is the consummate broadcaster, eloquent and smooth. The interviewing style of Eddie Mair and Jane Garvey. Also Peter White - he has a smile in his voice and puts people at their ease, but gives them a hard time if they need it." Ambition "I'd really like to present HardTalk. Or to be working in a foreign bureau, bringing stories from around the world."

Dream job "I'm doing it. I've always thought this was going to be the most fun I would ever have. I've wanted to be a journalist since I was about three. In Iran I was transfixed by the news bulletins from the war with Irag; I'd stay up and watch them, and pretend to interview people." Secret skills "I play the piano. I learnt by ear, from when I was five; later I learnt braille music – you have to learn each part separately and memorise them." DAVID CRAWFORD

Tehran, Iran. Came to England with his family when he was four to have surgery to save his eyesight. The surgery didn't work, however the family stayed for his schooling. Studied English language at Sheffield University, then did a postgrad in broadcast journalism. Freelanced for BBC Radio 4's In Touch for ten years: "I had been determined I would never work for In Touch, as I thought it was the ultimate in pigeonholing. But I realised I didn't deserve a career in journalism if I didn't." Worked on other Radio 4 shows plus BBC Sport, then for World Service's World Football – he was given a staff contract in 2011. Best moment "In 2012 during the Paralympics I was reporting at the wheelchair rugby and when they came to me, I said, 'All the fans want to see clashes, bashes and wheelchair smashes.' As I said it, GB scored and there was a huge crescendo. It was great; live reporting in a way I never thought I'd be able to, because I can't relay what happens in front of my eyes." Asian Cup in Qatar, after Bahrain v Australia, I asked for an interview with the sole goalscorer Mile coming too, but I said, 'No, just get Mile.' When the guy arrived, I said, 'Mile, great goal.' And this voice said, 'No, I am the coach. I am not Mile.' and swallow me. I was mortified!" Off air "I live on my own in Sale, Greater Manchester. I read a lot of history, especially social history. And I watch a lot of comedy. I'm obsessed with Frasier, I've watched every episode – except the last two; I don't want it to end!"

Cambridgeshire, and phone in for their competitions. I did it mainly just to hear myself on the radio!" Favourite broadcasters "John Inverdale is the consummate broadcaster, eloquent and smooth. The interviewing style of Eddie Mair and Jane Garvey. Also Peter White - he has a smile in his voice and puts people at their ease, but gives them a hard time if they need it." Ambition "I'd really like to present HardTalk. Or to be working in a foreign bureau, bringing stories from around the world."

Dream job "I'm doing it. I've always thought this was going to be the most fun I would ever have. I've wanted to be a journalist since I was about three. In Iran I was transfixed by the news bulletins from the war with Irag; I'd stay up and watch them, and pretend to interview people." Secret skills "I play the piano. I learnt by ear, from when I was five; later I learnt braille music – you have to learn each part separately and

memorise them." DAVID CRAWFORD

Face behind the voice

Mani Djazmi BBC World Service

Age 39 Current job Presents World Football every Friday on BBC World Service. CV Born in

Tehran, Iran. Came to England with his family when he was four to have surgery to save his eyesight. The surgery didn't work, however the family stayed for his schooling. Studied English language at Sheffield University, then did a postgrad in broadcast journalism. Freelanced for BBC Radio 4's In Touch for ten years: "I had been determined I would never work for In Touch, as I thought it was the ultimate in pigeonholing. But I realised I didn't deserve a career in journalism if I didn't." Worked on other Radio 4 shows plus BBC Sport, then for World Service's World Football - he was given a staff contract in 2011. Best moment "In 2012 during the Paralympics I was reporting at the wheelchair rugby and when they came to me, I said, 'All the fans want to see clashes, bashes and wheelchair smashes.' As I said it, GB scored and there was a huge crescendo. It was great; live reporting in a way I never thought I'd be able to, because I can't relay what happens in front of my eyes." Worst moment "In 2011 at the Asian Cup in Qatar, after Bahrain v Australia, I asked for an interview with the sole goalscorer Mile Jedinak. They said the coach was coming too, but I said, 'No, just get Mile.' When the guy arrived, I said, 'Mile, great goal.' And this voice said, 'No, I am the coach. I am not Mile.' I wanted the ground to open up and swallow me. I was mortified!" Off air "I live on my own in Sale, Greater Manchester. I read a lot of history, especially social history. And I watch a lot of comedy. I'm obsessed with Frasier, I've watched every episode – except the last two; I don't want it to end!"

First radio memory "When I was five or six, I used to listen to the local station, BBC Radio Cambridgeshire, and phone in for their competitions. I did it mainly just to hear myself on the radio!" Favourite broadcasters "John Inverdale is the consummate broadcaster, eloquent and smooth. The interviewing style of Eddie Mair and Jane Garvey. Also Peter White - he has a smile in his voice and puts people at their ease, but gives them a hard time if they need it." Ambition "I'd really like to present HardTalk. Or to be working in a foreign bureau, bringing stories from around the world."

Dream job "I'm doing it. I've always thought this was going to be the most fun I would ever have. I've wanted to be a journalist since I was about three. In Iran I was transfixed by the news bulletins from the war with Irag; I'd stay up and watch them, and pretend to interview people." Secret skills "I play the piano. I learnt by ear, from when I was five; later I learnt braille music – you have to learn each part separately and memorise them." DAVID CRAWFORD

Benefits made simple

The Covid-19 crisis is causing real hardship. Paul Lewis guides you through the help available

Universal Credit (UC) is a meanstested benefit for people under state pension age who are on low incomes or out of work. From 6 April this went up by £86.67 per month for single people and couples, though not everyone will get all of that. A similar amount will be added to working tax credit. The allowance made to private tenants to cover their rent is also going up, undoing the cuts of the past nine years. But the cap, which restricts the total amount of benefits paid, isn't increasing, so those already at the cap will get no more. Universal Credit will now be calculated for the self-employed based on their actual income. Previously they were assumed to earn at least the equivalent of the minimum wage for 35 hours a week - around £305.

'SSP is paid from day one of an illness?

payment isn't made for five weeks, people can get an advance of a month's benefit (to be repaid over the following months). The Government has ruled out making this advance a grant.

In England, working-age people on low incomes whose council tax is already reduced will get up to £150 more credit from 6 April. Some will now pay nothing. Local councils have a hardship fund to help others.

Statutory Sick Pay (SSP) of £95.85 a week is now paid by employers from day one of a coronavirus illness, or if you're absent due to the guidelines on self-isolation or to caring for others - as long as you earn more than £120 a week. If you earn less or are selfemployed, you can't get SSP and have to apply for Universal Credit.

Employment and Support Allowance (ESA) is £74.35 a week for employees aged 25 and over and self-employed people who have paid enough National Insurance Contributions. It's now paid from day one of illness, not day eight. NB The measures taken during the crisis may change; this column doesn't include benefits adjustments announced since 30 March.

Check your entitlement to means-tested benefits and grants at turn2us.org.uk or search "universal credit" at gov.uk. You can call the Universal Credit (and ESA) helpline free on 0800 328 5644.

RT MONEY PARTNER

LASTING POWERS OF ATTORNEY - ONLY £399*pp

There may come a time when you are unable to make decisions for yourself, maybe through illness or injury. If that were to happen, who would make decisions about your care, or manage your finances? It's important you make your wishes clear in a legal document known as a lasting power of attorney (LPA).

There are two types of LPA – one that covers your health and welfare, and one that covers your property and financial affairs.

A health and welfare LPA deals with your medical care and can only be used once you become unable to make decisions for yourself.

A property and financial affairs LPA deals with financial matters, and can also be used while you still have full mental capacity, for example if you become frail, immobile or unwell.

If you're married and your partner becomes unable to make decisions, marriage does not give you the authority to make decisions on their behalf – you will only be able to do this if you are formally appointed as an attorney.

READER OFFER - SAVE £250

For a limited time, Key Estate Planning is offering to create both your property and financial affairs LPA and your health and welfare LPA for £399 per person. Offer ends 11.05.20.

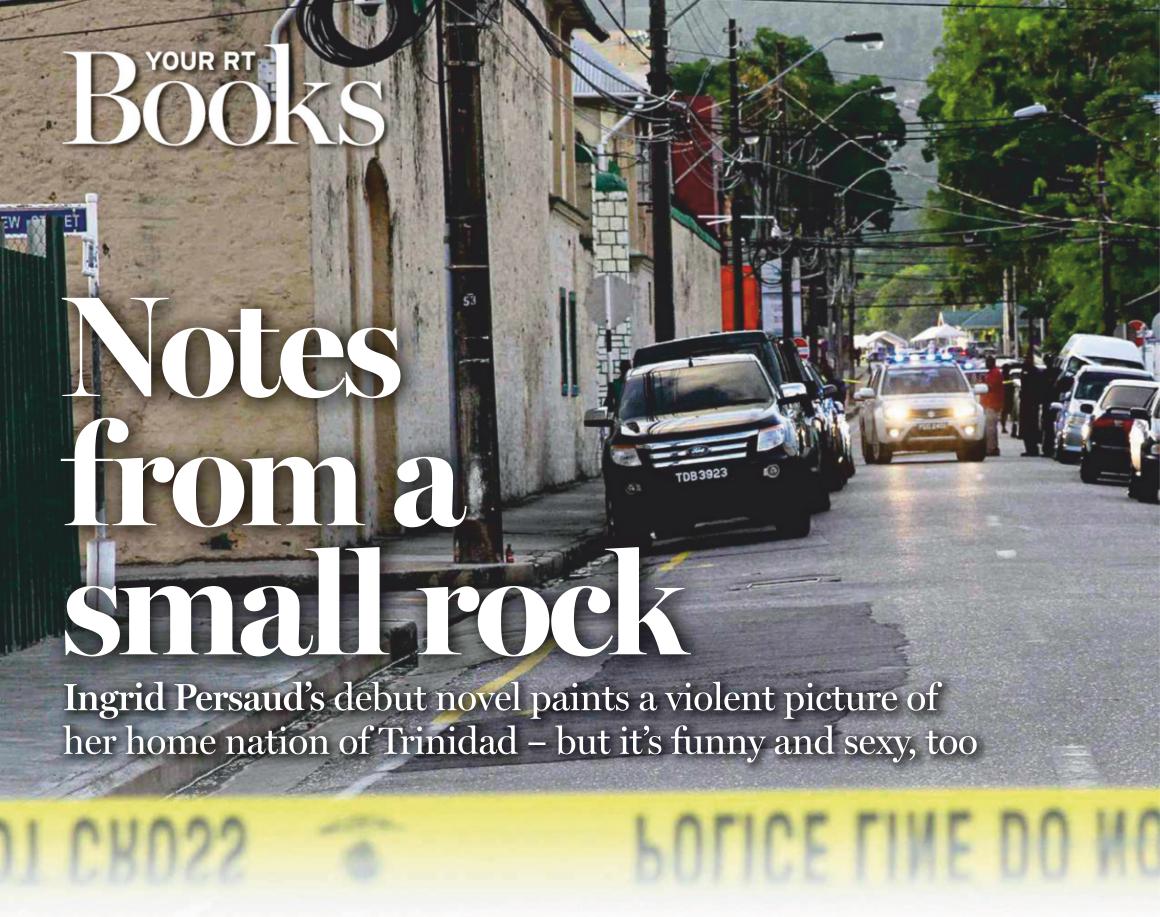

Key Estate Planning has a team of estate planning specialists who can explain and arrange these documents over the telephone. They can also offer you a free no-obligation consultation and recommendation on wills and trusts, based on your circumstances and legacy objectives*.

To arrange your LPAs, please call 0800 138 2693, or to download a free guide, visit radiotimes.com/lpa

Lines open Mon-Thur 9am-7.30pm, Fri 9am-5.30pm and Sat 9am-1pm

INDNESS AND HUMOUR are human qualities we've come to appreciate more of late. They are both present in abundance in Ingrid Persaud's debut novel, Love after Love. Yet it's a story set between the violent Caribbean island of Trinidad and a grubby corner of New York where undocumented immigrants are struggling to get by.

It's the language the characters use that is often laugh-out-loud funny. Betty, the Trinidadian single mother whose relationship with her son is at the heart of the book, has a particularly colourful turn of phrase. "Do it while your teeth in your mouth and not in a glass by the sink," she urges her lodger, who is being slow at coming forward. "Jeez-and-age", she regularly exclaims, "cheese-and-peas!".

"The language is a love song to the Caribbean, to Trinidad," Persaud says. "And I was very keen to use it to the full extent. I would often go through my latest draft and see where I had missed an opportunity, where I could put in more of the humour."

She was born in Trinidad, to Indian parents for whom "there are three career options: lawyer, doctor or failure". She started with law and ended up as an academic at King's College in London. After a few years she switched to fine art, earning two more of her four degrees, and embarked on her new life as an artist. But then she moved with her husband and their twin sons to Barbados.

"We were living in London and we took our kids back when they were six" [they are now 19]. "We wanted them to have a Caribbean childhood, running wild and not just living in the city."

When they arrived in Barbados, Persaud realised "the art scene was very different, and I didn't find my feet. So I started to write as an outlet for creativity. I used to write a blog called Notes from a Small Rock. I would do an essay once a week, 900 words, Friday morning. That was my discipline and it helped me to get into living in Barbados." They now live between London and Barbados, where her husband is economic adviser to the prime minister.

Persaud's first proper literary success came in 2018, when her first short story, The Sweet Sop, about a dying father and estranged son who bond over chocolate, won the BBC National Short Story Award.

Now, at 53, Persaud is unleashing her first novel on the world. What a time to choose. "The publicity I would have had is all gone!" she wails. "I can't have a proper launch!"

She might not be getting a party, but she has reason to celebrate. Love after Love is a strong literary proposition as well as an entertaining read, told from three perspectives by characters who are all looking for more. Betty is a force of nature, a striver and survivor. She doesn't need a man to make her life complete, but she is a sexual woman and her frank expression of her desires and encounters can be jolting. Persaud giggles at the mention.

"I wrote those bits sort of covering my eyes. I thought, 'Oh my God, how am I going to face the world with this?' But I thought it was impor-

Tales from the Caribbean

Windrush, family secrets and a reggae icon

SMALL ISLAND

ANDREA LEVY

Named one of the "100 most inspiring novels" by the BBC, Andrea Levy's Small Island tells the story of first-generation Jamaican immigrants in postwar Britain and was inspired by the experiences of her parents, who were part of the Windrush generation. A Jamaican and British couple must learn to live together under one roof in a house in Earl's Court in London: teacher Hortense and RAF veteran Gilbert have been lured to England by the promise of a better life and find themselves living in a crumbling attic room rented out by white, working-class Queenie and her racist husband. Naomie Harris and David Oyelowo starred in a 2009 TV version, and the National Theatre staged a critically acclaimed adaptation last year.

GOLDEN CHILD

CLAIRE ADAM

In Claire Adam's haunting debut novel, a father faces an impossible choice. Peter and Paul are 13-year-old twins growing up in rural Trinidad in the 1980s, but are far from alike: Peter is considered to be a near-genius, destined for great things, while Paul has always been odd. When Paul goes missing one night, his father Clyde sets off in search – and soon discovers that something more sinister is at play. What follows is a devastating examination of parenthood, as family secrets come to light.

tant that I didn't shy away from female sexuality. Why should I? If I, as a middle-aged woman, can't, who can? But, heaven forbid I have to read it out loud!"

In the novel, Persaud also deals with the threat of homophobia that is rife in Trinidad, where gay men are among the targets of more than 500 murders committed every year. "The more Caribbean writers embrace gay characters just as part of the story, the more we're doing our part to make it acceptable and maybe eventually brought in line with the human rights that the rest of us enjoy," she says.

HEN THE FOCUS of Love after Love shifts to New York, Persaud explores the situation for those who leave the Caribbean to enter or stay in the US illegally. She did her research: buying a fake birth certificate needed to apply for other papers costs $5,000. Then there will be ongoing extra blackmail payments on top. Why does she think that people put themselves through such hardship? Do they get a better life?

"I don't really know the answer, but so many people are compelled by this notion that America provides this wealth of opportunity. Leaving your home, it's a trade-off. I'm always struck by those bargains people make. I wonder how they work out, if they're really what they seem to be."

She plans to return to the Caribbean for the setting of her next novel. "Perhaps not Trinidad. Maybe a different island. I've been looking at Barbados, but what I've found is that the nuances of the language I'm having to learn are so detailed that it would be hard for me to be really authentic." FIONA HUGHES

Ingrid Persaud will be on Open Book on Radio 4 on Sunday 19 April and Thursday 23 April

A BRIEF HISTORY OF

A BRIEF HISTORY SEVEN KILLINGS

SEVEN KILLINGS MARLON JAMES

In December 1976, seven armed men stormed Bob Marley's home in Jamaica and shot and wounded the reggae musician and his wife. Jamaican author Marlon James tells the story of this attempted assassination and the aftermath in an epic tale that spans three decades and multiple narrators, and moves between 1970s Jamaica and the crack dens of 1980s New York City. Winner of the 2015 Booker Prize, A Brief History... is a tour de force that doesn't shy away from violence and delves into a troubled period in Jamaica's history.

GROW YOUR OWN

HERE ARE MASSES of leaves and lettuces to grow in a range of sizes, flavours, colours and textures. Cut-and-come-again leaves are one of the easiest and fastest crops to grow and are ideal in small spaces. They can be picked whenever you need them, and each crop will grow back to give you several harvests from one simple sowing, so they're great value.

The big daddies are the larger hearting varieties such as iceberg and cos, which take longer to grow into mature plants and need a little more space and care.

WHERE TO GROW Salad leaves require a reasonably fertile, weed-free, well-drained and moisture-retentive soil. They can be grown in full sun or with a degree of shade, which will stop them bolting and running to seed during summer months. When growing in the ground, add lots of garden compost. For containers, I use a peat-free, multipurpose compost. SOWING Broadcast sowing simply means sprinkling the seeds thinly onto a small patch; it's ideal for cut-and-come-again leaf mixes. Water the soil first; the seed is so fine it will be knocked around if you water after. Cover with approx 1cm of compost using a sieve. Drill sowing is better for loose-leaf and heart-forming varieties. Sow the seeds in straight lines approx 1cm deep, 5cm apart, with 30cm between rows.

Cover gently and water in. When seedlings are big enough to handle, thin out to 20–30cm apart and, of course, eat the pickings.

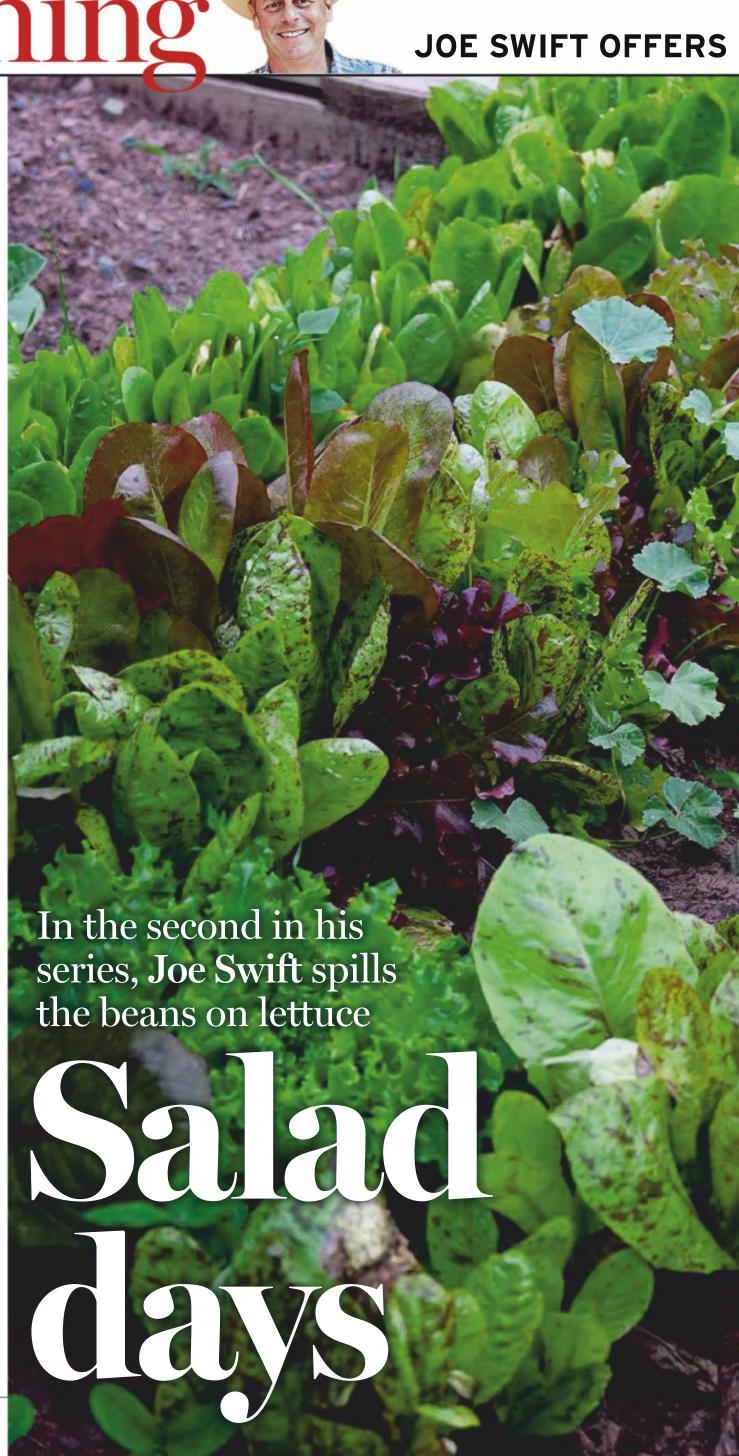

WATERING AND FEEDING
The seeds should germinate in around a week. Water regularly and don't let them dry out. Once they're up and running, feed with a weak, organic liquid seaweed or HARVESTING If growing cut-and-comeagain salad leaves, pick individual leaves with your fingers or use kitchen scissors to crop when they're 7.5–10cm high. Water and feed after cropping. They'll regrow, and you should get three or four crops from one batch.

tomato feed every three weeks.

Loose-leaf lettuces take around 40–60 days to mature. The leaves can be snipped or pulled off when they're young or, for a big salad, pull the whole plant up. Hearted varieties take about 65–90 days. When the heads are around 15–20cm in diameter, pull up the whole plant. SUCCESSION SOWING To keep fresh batches coming, sow every two weeks up until the end of September. When a pot is spent, refresh the compost and start again.

Next week: peas and beans

WEEKLY ADVICE AND INSPIRATION

SEE TO YOUR SPRING BULBS
When grown directly in the ground, when grown directly in the ground, many spring bulbs will naturalise and come up year after year, but what should you do with them after flowering? And should you throw away bulbs that have been crammed into pots and containers for a one-off seasonal display? Here's some help.

BULBS IN THE LAWN

Crocus (left), daffodils/narcissi, anemones and scilla are classic bulbs for the lawn. Once they've finished flowering, leave for a minimum of six weeks before mowing over. Timing can be an issue because it overlaps with the start of the mowing season.

Try to grow them in areas you can mow around, or naturalise them in large areas that can be left to mow over in one go. If you want them to self-seed and multiply, check the heads have split and their seed released before mowing. Good narcissi for taller grass areas include the lovely, fragrant, pure white N. poeticus "Actea" and the pheasant's eye daffodil with its elegant, swept-back petals.

BULBS GROWN INDOORS

If you forced bulbs for early flowering indoors, perhaps they can take on another life outdoors? Hardy plants (most hyacinths, daffs and tulips) can be planted out into the garden and will potentially flower again next spring. Plant the entire clump, with leaves on, at least three times deeper than the height of the bulbs. Firm the soil well. If your soil is heavy, add some grit beneath the bulbs. Feed with a liquid feed high in potash, such as tomato or seaweed. Don't let them dry out, and let the leaves die back naturally. They should appear next spring.

BULBS GROWN IN POTS OUTDOORS

Bulbs grown in pots outdoors can be planted out into the garden (as above), or lifted and stored in a dark, dry, cool place and planted out again in the autumn. Another option is to put aside the entire pot and let it dry out. Start watering it again in autumn, and feeding it in spring, to get them going again. After a couple of years, bulbs will need repotting with new compost in the autumn or planting out altogether.

Around the World by Train with Tony Robinson Friday 9.00pm Channel 5

OULD YOU KISS a wolf? Tony Robinson can't recommend it highly enough. "I had this extraordinary mixture of emotions. I was partly terrified and partly absolutely adoring this beautiful animal, and partly trying to concentrate on presenting a programme," he says. "It was one of the highlights of my life."

His wolf encounter took place in Polar Park, a Norwegian animal sanctuary inside the Arctic Circle that's also home to bears, lynx, moose and reindeer. The wolves are not tame, but nor are they really wild. They roam vast enclosures and are accustomed to humans, so it's one of the few places in the world where you can look a wolf in the eye in relative safety. "I was told I mustn't wear my usual down jacket because they'd think I was a duck and rip me to pieces. And that if the wolf bit me, I wasn't to cry out or attempt to run."

"We waited and waited, and then I saw five wolves zigzagging towards us in that rhythmic way that packs do. When they were near, the leader of the pack danced towards me. I was doing my deep breathing - the last thing I should do was show fear - and then he just put his paws on my shoulders. When they get up like that, they are massive and a colossal weight. The muscles between their shoulders and down their back are absolutely huge. It's like a tiger. You could sense its fierceness, but it was also very tender, and the way it licked me was lovely."

Polar Park is Robinson's starting point next week, which sees him take the Polar Express $\begin{tabular}{l} \succeq from Narvik on the Norwegian coast to Kiruna \\ \rightleftharpoons in Swedish Lapland – a three-hour journey past \\ \end{tabular}$ from Narvik on the Norwegian coast to Kiruna fjords, frozen waterfalls and snowy mountains. Over the series, he rides some of the world's greatest railways: Argentina's Train to the Clouds, Mexico's Copper Canyon Railroad, Canada's Rocky Mountaineer, the Trans-Siberian Railway, although the last, featured this week, was less glamorous than it sounds.

"You might think that the Trans-Siberian

'It was like a tiger, but the way the wolf licked me was lovely?

would be like the Orient Express, full of people who look like they're out of an Agatha Christie novel drinking cocktails, but it's not. It's the cheapest form of long-distance transport available in Russia and a lot of people can't afford the food, so they take three days' food. There are no curtains across the compartments, so I saw more smelly socks and pairs of pants than I really needed to. It was quite an adventure."

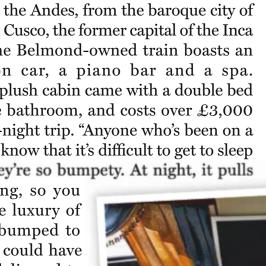

The most luxurious journey was on board the Andean Explorer, a five-star hotel-on-wheels that cruises the Andes, from the baroque city of Arequipa to Cusco, the former capital of the Inca Empire. The Belmond-owned train boasts an observation car, a piano bar and a spa. Robinson's plush cabin came with a double bed and private bathroom, and costs over £3,000 for the two-night trip. "Anyone who's been on a sleeper will know that it's difficult to get to sleep because they're so bumpety. At night, it pulls into a siding, so you also get the luxury of not being bumped to bits. And I could have breakfast delivered to my door in the morning with a vase of flowers."

From the Andes to dancing with Arctic wolves, Tony Robinson's rail adventure left him exhilarated – and terrified

But for the former Time Team presenter, the high point of the South American leg was fulfilling an ambition: visiting the mountaintop Inca citadel near Cusco.

Word of the Week - furlough

The use of "furlough" has been much in the news, due to the Government's response to Covid-19. The dictionary defines the term as a temporary suspension of employment, or leave of absence, granted to an employee. First recorded in the 17th century, it was used of soldiers given permission to be absent from duty for a certain period.

The origin of furlough is the Dutch verlof and the German Verlaub, both meaning permission granted as a sign of trust. This connection makes furlough a sibling of "leave", which can be used in much the same way. Other relatives include "belief", the trust we put in another, and also "love" – when we trust someone with our affection. All of which, surprisingly, put furlough in one of the most prized and ancient families English has to offer.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

A World to look forward to

Towards the end of World at One (weekdays Radio 4), they give us Words at One, a few moments of something quite other than the gloomy contents of the bulletin. We've had Ian McEwan on the wonder of creating jazz, Prue Leith extolling the magic of making bread, a vivid evocation of walking the fields at Wimpole Hall, a comprehensive litany of the whole range of NHS staff from Adam Kay, birdsong and playing music. It really is something to look forward to.

Thank you to the World at One for having the imagination to see how badly this is needed.

Describing in detail the contents of an important announcement is a growing and irritating tendency. The Queen's address to the nation (5 April) was too significant an occasion to have its message diluted by knowing what Her Majesty would say before it was broadcast. Margaret Campbell Edinburgh

SHE'S A NATURAL

What an absolutely delightful presenter Dr Zoe Laughlin was in How to Make: the Trainer (2 April BBC4). She is so engaging – a joy to watch – and has the ability to involve one by being so natural. Will we see more of her in the future? I do hope so as her enthusiasm is infectious. Fascinating subject matter: the common shown as uncommonly complicated.

Sheena Bailey

Zoe Laughlin responds: "It's wonderful to know how much people have been enjoying the series! If we're lucky enough to make a second series, I'd love to investigate the kettle. All round to mine for a cuppa! A MUSICAL LEGACY

Michael Appleton, who has died, was a key figure in the history of popular music on television. A stalwart of the arts programme Late Night Line-Up in the 1960s, he went on to create and produce the ground-breaking rock show The Old Grey Whistle Test in 1971. Focusing on album music rather than commercial pop, he introduced a generation of viewers to artists they would never have encountered otherwise.

In 1985, Mike was at the helm of Live Aid, against the odds pulling together a globally televised concert in a matter of weeks and winning a Bafta in the process. The many archive music programmes currently broadcast by BBC4 perfectly illustrate his remarkable legacy. Jeff Evans

SERVICE, PLEASE?

I am glad that, with the churches closed, BBC1 is televising

Sunday Worship. So it was disappointing on 5 April to find it had begun 15 minutes earlier than the advertised time. I'm sure many people would have been distressed on Palm Sunday to lose half the broadcast. It was also sad that at this, the holiest week in the church's year, not a single church service was being broadcast on radio or television for Maundy Thursday or Good Friday. Surely there must have been many in the archives. Many things, I know, are being streamed over the internet, but many older people rely solely on the radio or television.

Marjorie Whitehouse Sutton, south London A BBC spokesperson replies: "We are committed to providing audiences with an opportunity to worship during this difficult time and are doing all we can to keep short-notice changes to our schedule to a minimum. Our wide range of live worship and new programming over Easter included the Archbishop of Canterbury's Easter Message on Radio 4, as well as the Easter Sunday Service and Pope Francis's Easter Message and Blessing live from Rome on BBC1, which are available on iPlayer. There were also virtual church services on local radio on Good Friday and Easter Sunday,

HONOR BLACKMAN 1925-2020

'She was my first crush...'

Paul O'Grady salutes his idol - and friend

onor Blackman was my first crush. At the age of eight I was obsessed with The Avengers - and I still am! I first met her about 25 years ago and I was in awe. She had such a presence - she was slinky like a cat when she walked, and had that beautiful voice I could listen to all day.

Honor was a trendsetter. No one had ever seen a woman on TV lay men out like that! Her character Cathy Gale was an anthropologist, highly intelligent, and an excellent role model because she believed in justice and never played dirty like Steed [Patrick Macnee] did.

The Avengers was a tough gig for her because it was so physical and it was all shot "as live". She said they'd put the LP on, Johnny Dankworth's music would begin and the butterflies would start. She'd charge out, have this huge fight, throw some guy over, then rush off, put on an evening gown and be in Steed's flat, all composed, a minute later. She had judo lessons every day and I remember her telling me her very strict father had taught her to box, which came in very handy.

At first she had her gun in a garter – but with the weight of it on a piece of frilly elastic, it was soon hanging round her ankles! And after that they had her rooting round in her handbag looking for it. So she said, why don't you make Cathy Gale a martial arts expert? And Patrick Macnee suggested she was all in leather.

She always spoke of The Avengers with such affection, and I think she regretted leaving it, actually. But the offer of Goldfinger [she played Pussy Galore] would be tough to turn down for any actor.

he was born in the East End and her father sent her for elocution lessons. After drama school her first job was as an understudy in the West End, and she became a Rank starlet in those British black-and-white movies. And in the war she was a Home Office dispatch rider, on a motorbike!

I interviewed her so many times but Honor was quite shy really. When she came on my teatime show the audience went mad, and she just blushed and gave a lovely shy smile.

It was an honour to have known Honor. What's sad for me is that all my childhood superheroes have now gone – so who's going to protect us from diabolical masterminds?

Paul O'Grady tells us he's at home self-isolating, and looks forward to returning to his Radio 2 show

LIGHTS OUT

I'm a great fan of foreign crime dramas with subtitles, where you try to guess what's being said while also trying to follow the story. I've been enjoying the Italian series Thou Shalt Not Kill (Fridays More4) – a dark tale, set in a dark Turin (although we occasionally glimpse sunshine through the window of a dark room), featuring a number of dark-haired ladies with almost identical haircuts.

While the dark storylines are intriguing, the filming is so dark that I find it almost impossible sometimes to know who's doing what where. I appreciate that the film-makers want to create an atmosphere, but sometimes it would be good if they could throw a little light on what's happening! Caroline Fowler Poole, Dorset

ENDEAVOUR SPECIAL

Writer Russell Lewis opens his secret file...

How did the audience respond to the most recent series, and what can fans expect from the next?

People have been terribly generous about Endeavour 1970. The hiatus in production may throw a spanner in the works in terms of the happy timeline we've found ourselves in across the past four series, with our story year being exactly 50 years distant from the year of broadcast. We know the cards that remain in our hand; it's a case of arranging the order in which they're played to bring about the desired "grand slam".

Any stand-out moments of fun from your location shoots?

I wish I could tell you it's like The Monkees... For cast and crew the days are a form of managed anxiety. I think we all enjoyed Jeux Sans Frontières [in the 2018 episode Quartet]. A mad morning in a field. That was lovely. It's hard to top a beautiful morning in the Quad at New College, Oxford, where we filmed the song-and-dance routine Make Believe You Love Me [for 2017's Canticle]. All these fantastic dancers in their raincapes and galoshes. I'm a hoofer at heart. [Watch the video here:

https://tinyurl.com/rrsvjpy]

In a recent episode, Dorothea (played by Abigail Thaw) met Sally Alexander as she set up the first Women's Lib conference. In real life Alexander is Thaw's mother, and was played here by her daughter! Did you enjoy writing that scene?

Oh, enormously. It was, and remains, massively important. A singular regret is that I didn't have Joan Thursday [Sara Vickers] in play, as I expect she would have been front and centre at that gathering. One of the great joys of Endeavour on the surface, at least, quite a "boysie" show – is its women. The three who have been part CHIGTON GREEN of the story from the start, or as near as damn it - Dorothea,

Joan and the mighty Win – have given us a bit of a window on womanhood in a small, wet island off continental Europe at a hinge of history. It says a lot for Dorothea that she's achieved all she has in a field crowded with galumphing or resentful chaps. So... not at all like today. It's a bit like that line of Ginger Rogers, in that she did all that Astaire did, only backwards, and in heels. See

- we're back to dancing again!

Fans adore the "Easter eggs" you work into the scripts. Which are your own favourites?

My favourite was by Sam Costin, my script editor across the first three series. It was so elegant and witty. The mattress at Burridges department store tested by Endeavour and CLASSICAL EDUCATION

Monica was "the Silent Spring". A quick google should bring readers to the fun of it. We nodded to Trumptonshire because I grew up on it, and because 1969 was the year that Chigley was broadcast. A harking back to some lost, bucolic, Elysium.

Do you think you managed to sneak any Easter eggs past viewers?

Maybe it was easier in the early series when the audience hadn't tumbled to our mischief. Sam and I have a shared fondness for Joe Orton, the films of Lindsay Anderson and Kubrick, noir cinema, and "women's pictures" of the 40s and 50s. So little nods crept in. There is a fair bit of that type of mischief waiting in the wings. More sunshine across the board. Heaven knows we'll all be ready for it by then.

Have any crime writers or shows influenced you?

I guess everything has an influence, for good or ill. Agatha Christie, as a kid. Those Tom Adams covers had me hooked. Around 1975, the BBC aired the Ellery Queen Whodunit series, which was fantastic. Conan

Doyle, naturally. I'm sure lan Fleming was an early influence. I'd write Bond knock-offs over the holidays, filling exercise books with chapter after chapter of derring-do!

Have you always known how Endeavour will end?

Always. I wrote some of it down - just in case...

So what's next?

I'm adapting Peter James's Roy Grace novels for an ITV series starring John Simm. There are always other things in development. But, for the moment at least, Oxford's finest still have a way to go.

AMRITA ACHARIA

We shine a light on medics'

The Good Karma star says let's show the NHS love more often What's your telly set-up?

My sofa is massive, blue, and covered in loads of cushions. My TV is small because I don't like it taking up too much space.

Who do you watch TV with?

I live alone, which suits me very well. I did have a cat but my ex took it then it died, so that was karma. I'd love another but my sister is moving in and she's allergic, so I've been googling hypo-allergenic cats.

Talking of karma: you're in The Good Karma Hospital as Dr Ruby Walker. What's the response been like in these coronavirus times?

Our followers have been amazing and we've gained new viewers. I think it's great that we're shining a light on medics. Maybe we need to show our NHS staff more gratitude, more often, when this is over.

The show had a 12-month break last year. Did you miss going to Sri Lanka to film?

Yeah, it was bizarre to have a summer in London. But I ended up doing an ITV series called The Sister, which I wouldn't have been able to do. It's an intense thriller by Neil Cross [Luther] that takes the

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY PODCAST I have one of my own, if I may plug it. It's called Rule Not the Exception.

MY WEBSITE I like doing courses online. I did nutrition last year.

MY BOOK One non-fiction: People like Us by Hashi Mohamed. And a fiction: Friday Black by Nana Kwame Adjei-Brenyah.

past and buried secrets catching up to haunt you to an extreme. It'll have people on the edge of their seats.

Is it true you speak Ukrainian?

I spent my early childhood in Nepal and Ukraine, then my teen years in England and Norway, so I speak English and Norwegian fluently, and conversational Ukrainian. I do also speak Dothraki which is a made-up language! [Amrita played Irri in Game of Thrones.]

That's a lot of very different TV to watch. What was your favourite?

What about Norwegian TV?

It's a lot darker. I still love watching it, although I don't think The Bridge can be beaten. My first ever lead in a feature film was a Scandi indie called IAm Yours, which made it onto the Oscar list.

So much of Scandi drama is about what is not said more than what is said. That's probably why I love The Crown so much, which I'm currently bingeing.

Are you a bingewatcher generally?

Yes, because I'm always catching up on shows much later than everyone else. My first ever binge was Breaking Bad. I didn't sleep for days until I'd got though it all.

What don't you like?

Soaps aren't my thing and I haven't really got into reality. A director friend said I should watch Love Island because I'm interested in psychology. But I think the aftermath of what they have to deal with can be frightening and quite upsetting.

Growing up, did you find there were enough people on TV that looked like you?

Within my family it was so normalised that my dad was brown and my mum was white. I didn't watch TV and think, "They're whiter than me." I was always more interested in character and story than how people looked. It's only now I'm an adult that I can see that there was a lack of representation, not just in skin colour but in terms of sex and disability and even the class system.

Does that affect your career?

As a "half and half" you can tread both sides: I can tan in the summer and look paler in the winter. Sometimes when you go up for romantic leads it can be hard to get your foot in the door. I'd just love to see more stories like Good Karma where nobody makes a thing about my character's race. EMMA COX
