A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

Normal service

WELCOME TO YOUR “weekly dose of normality”, as one kind reader put it when they wrote to us this week. It's not always easy to find the familiar in an unfamiliar world, but that's our job at RT as television and radio try hard to remind us of life BC (Before Coronavirus, as our columnist Paddy O'Connell writes on page 115).

Inform, educate and entertain are the founding principles of the BBC, and as much as we rely on the corporation to deliver on all three, we need others to put their shoulders to the wheel, too. So step forward Ricky Gervais, a man made by the BBC who now entertains millions worldwide with his really rather profound comedy After Life. As he tells us on page 8, it's a show about grief. But it's also about hope – and laughter. And we have rarely been in more need of both, so thank heavens Gervais, like so many others in this issue, delivers in spades.

Since most of us are still stuck indoors, here again are the three ways to guarantee you receive future copies of Radio Times without leaving home.

FUN TIMES

ROSIE MILLARD

‘Our charity one-off The Big Night In on BBC1 has taken up all my time recently,’ says the chair of BBC Children in Need. ‘But my regular TV treat is Pointless, which is the perfect antidote to the news.’

RICKY GERVAIS

‘The latest series of Curb Your Enthusiasm is remarkable,’ says the actor and comedian. ‘The issues Larry David deals with are just for laughs, it’s pure comedy. I’m still a huge fan of The Simpsons. It goes in peaks and troughs, but in its heyday if someone had said, ‘Give me the funniest 100 jokes off the telly,’ 50 would be in The Simpsons.’

Ricky Gervais interview – page 8

JIMMY DOHERTY

‘I’ve gone box-set crazy,’ says the farmer and TV presenter. ‘I thought the period drama Harlots was really good, and I’ve just started The Man in the High Castle as I’m very interested in military history. Mastermind and University Challenge are a must in our house – the whole family plays. We watch the celebrity ones because the questions are easier.’

SATURDAY 25

Television

Britain's Got Talent

8.00pm ITV
Another batch of hopefuls parade their talents in the audition round – all recorded before the nationwide lockdown began, of course.

Twin

9.00, 9.45pm BBC4
The thoughtful tale from the wilds of Norway ends with a moving double bill that puts our central couple on the rack.

New Becoming Matisse

9.15pm BBC2
Henri Matisse’s early years are explored by his great-granddaughter, Sophie (below right), who thinks his wife and children should get some credit for his success.

SATURDAY starts p42 ▶

SUNDAY 26

New The 1981 London Marathon: a Historical First

2.00pm BBC1
There’s no London Marathon this year, so instead feast your eyes on this look back at the first ever race, when 7,747 runners took to the streets of the capital.

New Van der Valk

8.00pm ITV
Marc Warren (right) is the titular Amsterdam cop in a reboot of the hit show. In the first, feature-length, episode he and his team investigate a double murder.

New/Documentary of the Week Primates

8.15pm BBC1
A charming tour around the varieties of behaviour in our own animal family – from lemurs to mischievous macaques to mountain gorillas.

SUNDAY starts p52 ▶

In praise of wonky carrots

Let's grab this chance to rethink our attitudes to food

WHO CAN FORGET the scenes of empty supermarket shelves at the start of this crisis? The tins of beans and packets of pasta had disappeared suddenly, and we all understood just how fragile the food supply chain is.

It was a terrible shock but it was also, for me, a lightbulb moment. What if, out of all this horror, positive things could come as well – a new appreciation of our food and, also, the environment in which it is produced? Perhaps this is a chance to reconnect with a more balanced relationship with what and how we eat. Perhaps we should be more like our grandparents' generation and make more of the food that comes our way, food that was often grown in the fields outside the towns and cities they lived in.

Because even as the supermarket shelves were emptying, spring was coming, offering an abundance of crops and produce. Near our farm in Suffolk the fields are full of cauliflower, and my friend just down the road is a big asparagus grower. What could be easier or nicer than fresh asparagus steamed with a bit of butter and salt?

Great British food is out there. Getting it to our tables is a matter of logistics, but there are other, less obvious, obstacles we need to overcome. Asparagus is delicious but we associate it with being posh. For many people in towns and cities, the countryside is an alien environment – not a place for them. Likewise the idea of using leftover chicken stock for a risotto, or having a stocked larder, is often seen as a bit bourgeois. The irony is, making the most of our own produce is a working-class habit.

My nan was a rag-and-bone lady in the East End. She always had a little pot of fat in the fridge or cupboard and always had split peas for soup. She would make bread and butter puddings out of stale bread and boil up half a sheep's head with onions for dinner.

I'm not saying sheep heads will get us through this crisis, but we can all make the most of things. If you're roasting a chicken, try to buy the best chicken you can afford, make stock and get several family meals out of it. And when we

'When we return to the supermarket, we do need to be less picky'

STILL TASTY...
If we pass by misshapen fruit and veg, it's the suppliers who'll suffer return to the supermarket we really do need to be less picky. Saying, "These carrots are a bit wonky, I don't want to buy them" – these days that's a luxury. If we don't buy things because of the shape, the supermarket doesn't take the hit, it's the supplier.

THE NHS HAS been an absolutely fantastic frontline over these last weeks but behind that frontline are the food producers, the farmers who are going out and growing the stuff we need. So I really hope we can reconnect the general public with their food producers and vice versa. There is lots of stuff online, the NFU education service and eatfarmnow.com are putting information on how your food is produced on Instagram or Facebook, and that is really important. I would love it to be the new cornerstone, the re-engagement of people with our food producers and understanding the importance of a healthy farming industry.

We need to lose those stereotypes about the countryside, and, equally, countryside people need to lose any stereotypes they might have about town people. The Italians don't have this problem. You can be the poorest of the poor or the richest of the rich, but you will all eat pretty much the same food and it unifies you. That's what we should be thinking about. Rather than food being a fashion thing, it should be a humbling necessity that brings us all together, brings us all round the table.

Jimmy Doherty presents Spring at Jimmy's Farm, Thursday 8.05pm C4

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 25 APRIL-1 MAY 1998

WHAT WE WATCHED

Paul Nicholls was forging a career away from Walford on BBC1's City Central and commenting: "I went into EastEnders and I loved it. After about six months, I looked at my bank balance and said, 'Phew! I could stay here for ever!' But I couldn't. I got a bit bored with Joe." The post-soap fates of other stars were being charted, with Sue Johnston and Amanda Burton ranked among the successes. Looking at the TV listings, a few actors would also go on to make a clean break: Joe Absolom (A Confession) featured in EastEnders and Joanne Froggatt (Downton Abbey, Liar) was right at the bottom of Corrie's cast list.

WHAT YOU SAID

The Midlands had just suffered its worst flooding in living memory, but Elaine Newcome of Bristol pointed out that the characters on The Archers hadn't suffered anything nearly as severe: "Cut to Phil Archer coming in, slightly damp, from outdoors and saying, 'It's only a shower. I should think there'll be a rainbow in a few minutes.' Honestly, anyone would think it was a fictional programme." Such observations are still being made today, with some EastEnders viewers complaining about the Vic remaining open during the coronavirus crisis, despite scenes being filmed prior to lockdown. DAVID BROWN

'MY ONLY ANXIETY IS IF I SCREW UP A JOKE'

His Netflix hit After Life tackles grief head on – just laugh, says Ricky Gervais, and we can find hope in adversity

YOU MIGHT NOT be expecting this, but Ricky Gervais has good news for us. This may seem like the worst possible moment to bring back After Life, his show about a man who struggles to accept the death of his wife. Across the country, thousands of families are coming to terms with tragedy and loss because of the coronavirus crisis – do we really need more misery? But the message of what Gervais calls “a sitcom that’s not a sitcom” isn’t miserable at all. It’s actually uplifting.

The first series was about Gervais’s character Tony Johnson’s shock, denial, then anger after losing his wife Lisa, played by Kerry Godliman. “Now he’s into bargaining,” says Gervais. “He tried everything, being rude to people, hurting them, giving them as bad a day as he’s having. Didn’t work. He tried drugs, didn’t work. So he’s trying kindness. And it does work!”

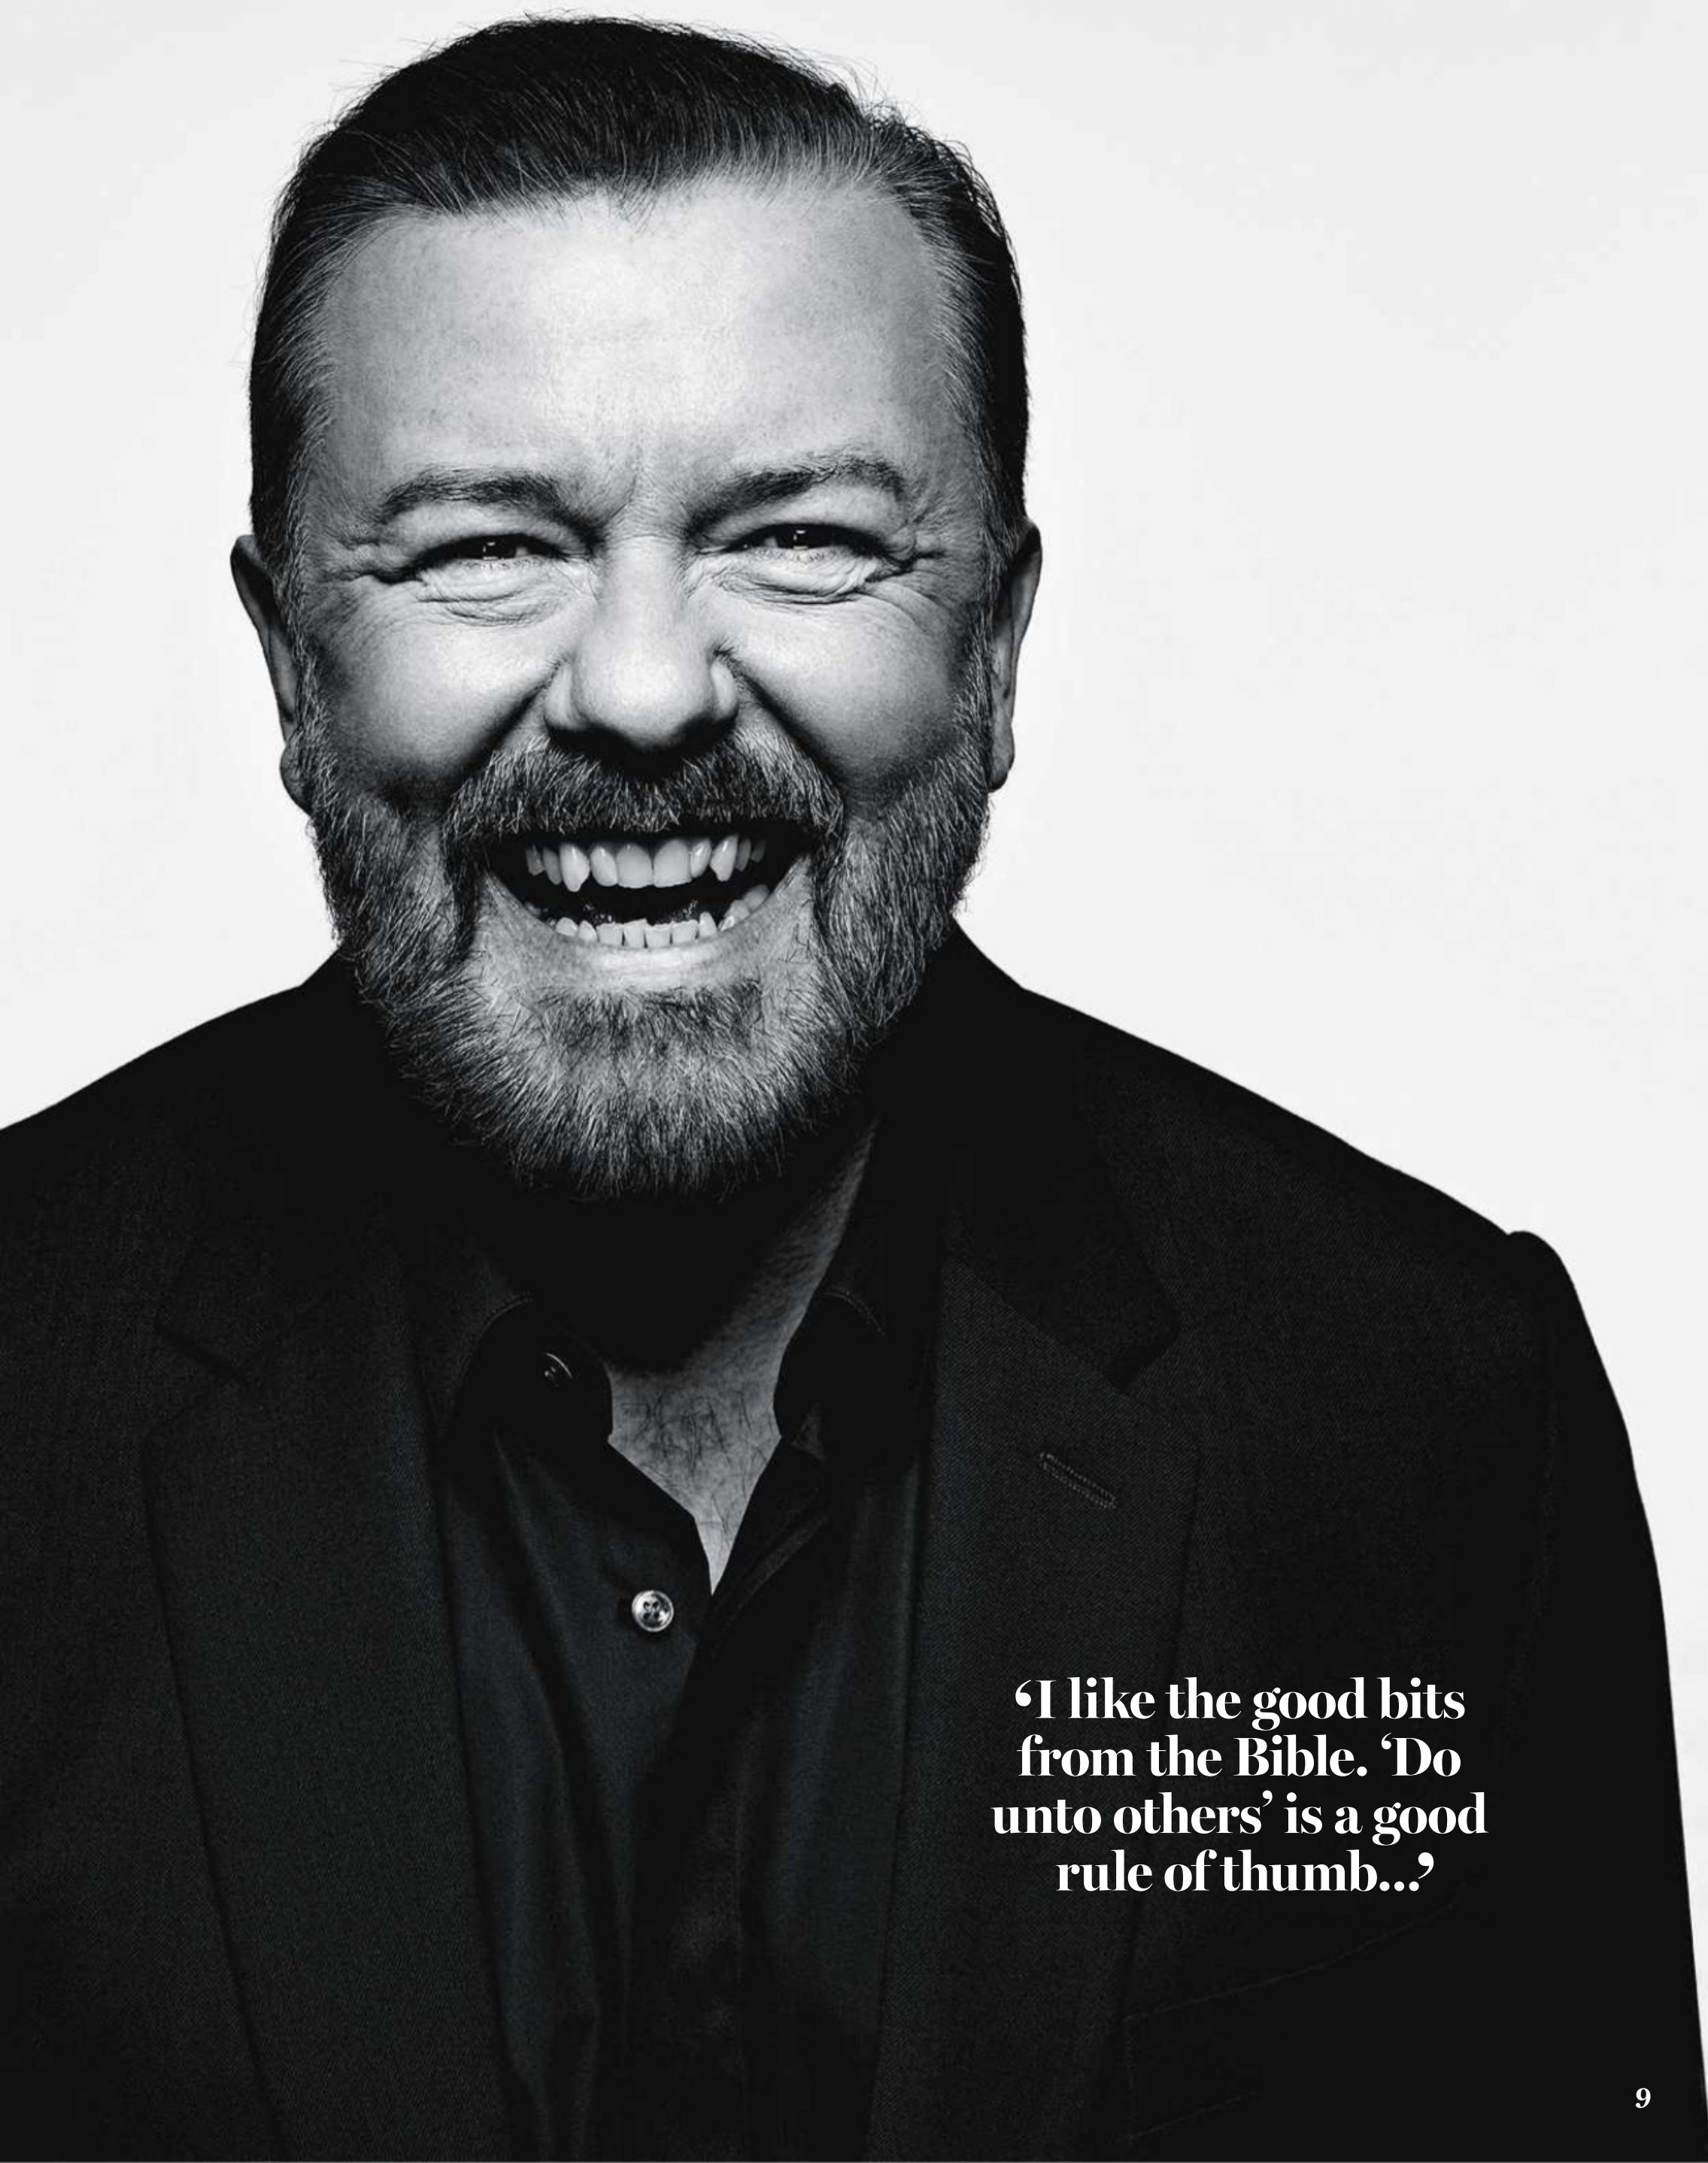

For now, as any wise 58-year-old carrying a bit of weight should, he’s holed up at home watching TV. “We binge-watched three episodes of the Netflix documentary Tiger King last night,” he says. “Remarkable, just crazy, just wow!” He’s been tweeting about putting on weight in a pandemic and the pleasures of self-isolation. Consequently, we’re meeting by video call rather

MICHAEL

than in the flesh and I’m looking into the living room of the home in Hampstead, north London, that he shares with the writer Jane Fallon, his partner since 1982. Gervais is sitting on the floor in front of a white sofa, something only a man without children would contemplate owning. His stomach and legs are tucked underneath the coffee table on which he has balanced his laptop.

“I worried myself in the first series,” he says. “I thought, ‘Hang on, how can they [the audience] go from seeing a woman dying from cancer who we know is dead now, to getting a laugh?’ And you can, because people do it every day. We go from laughing and joking to being bumped into and going, ‘Who the f*** do you think you are?’ We can flip from ‘Ha-ha!’ to ‘Who’s he looking at?’ We can do it. A lot of people second-guess the public, and say, ‘They’re not going to be able to take this.’ And I want to go, ‘Of course they can! It’s not as bad as real life.’”

He’s already said he wants a third series and After Life might just be the crowning achievement of a career that only began when Gervais, creative but unfocused through his 20s and 30s, wrote The Office with his XFM colleague Stephen Merchant in the late 1990s. The hugely successful show was followed by the occasional self-indulgence of the star-studded Extras, ▷

‘I like the good bits from the Bible. ‘Do unto others’ is a good rule of thumb...’

◁ the uncomfortable Derek, a series of largely unremarkable movies, acclaimed stand-up performances and even bestselling children's books.

I'm expecting him to be full of it. In his recent Twitter broadcasts, three Baftas have been clearly visible behind him. In January, he destroyed a room full of Hollywood stars at the Golden Globe awards, suggesting they were friends of the sex offender Jeffrey Epstein, but the only time he gets tetchy is when I ask about the lampooning of an apparently gay character in After Life. "What gay character?" Gervais demands. "He's theatrically camp. I don't think we go into his sex life."

In part, he admits, the show is a love letter to his own relationship with Fallon. "I wanted it to be real," he says of the scenes seen in flashback between Tony and Lisa. "I didn't want it to be soft focus and always giving each other Valentine's presents. I want them to be goofing around, they're soul mates, they're friends. All those silly pranks that I do on the show, I do those in real life, and if I'm doing something with Jane now and I go, 'Oh, I should put this into After Life,' Jane goes, 'Poor Kerry.'"

AFTER LIFE IS set in the fictional seaside town of Tambury and filmed near Gervais's home in Hampstead (he has another place in Los Angeles) and just outside the capital at Hemel Hempstead and Beaconsfield. The beach scenes are filmed on the south coast at Camber Sands in East Sussex. "I want to give people the sense that this place is another character," he says. "I think it's a Little England. It's not surreal, and it's not even that heightened. Everyone knows everyone. You could walk round it in the day and you'd see the one prostitute and the one psychotherapist, the local paper and the local dairy. I didn't want it to be a sprawling factory and superstores and Amazon delivering everything. I wanted it to be a slightly forgotten, quaint place."

I say it's like Dad's Army's Walmington-on-Sea. Like Walmington-on-Sea, that is, if it had a sex worker and heroin addict. "Yeah, it's Kent," he says, but prefers the Dad's Army comparison with The Office. "David Brent would not make sense unless he was the boss. If he was a 25-year-old idiot who happened to be a temp, who cares? But he was meant to be in charge. It's men behaving as boys. That's what's funny. In Dad's Army, originally, the posh one was going to be in charge, then they said, 'No, of course not! Let's have some class conflict!'"

Class conflict is actually missing from After Life. There is no drawling public-school Sergeant Wilson figure; even the therapist is a leery cockney. The central antagonism is the really big one, the one we don't usually talk about, that between living and dying.

"The older you get, the more you've got to grieve about and the more people you've lost," he says. "But it's still a taboo subject. No one goes up to anyone and says, 'I'm really sad [about losing someone]'. They don't want to burden you. After Life opens the conversation. People say to me, 'I lost my brother three weeks before, and I was worried about watching it, but I absolutely loved it, it really helps, so thank you.'"

For a long time, fans of The Office would say to Gervais, "Do the dance! Brilliant!" but After Life has changed that. "It's not like that [The Office]. It's a proper human connection. I've never had that before, an emotional connection."

Has the coronavirus crisis made a series about grief more pertinent? "Well, no," Gervais says. "I don't think people want to see a show like this mentioning coronavirus. I think this might be a relief, that people know this was made before it happened, because everyone is grieving all the time anyway. People are still getting ill and dying through all the other stuff; that hasn't gone away. It's not like suddenly for the last month people have understood illness and dying. It's always been around, it's just that it's on the news every day now."

It seems counter-intuitive that such a famous and successful figure could produce such an acutely observed report from the uneasy margins of ordinary English life, as if he's still one of us. "Comedians are court jesters," he says. "We've got to be down in the mud with the other peasants, making jokes about the king. Without getting executed. So we've got to have low status for them to be able to laugh with us and at us."

How does someone estimated to be worth £110 million and who reportedly signed a $40 million deal with Netflix maintain low status? "I let them peep behind the curtain. I go, 'What, you think it's all glamour, being famous? Well, here's how I embarrassed myself in front of the Queen.' Or, 'Here's what happened the first time I took a private jet – they thought I was the cook.' You tell them, 'I'm the loser.' I shamble out and go, 'I'm getting old and fat. I'm losing my hair. I feel ill all the time. I'm an idiot.'

"At the Golden Globes, I do it by being on the side of the people watching at home who aren't winning awards. I come out with a beer, I don't want to be there, I don't like these people. The people at home go, 'Well, you've worked with them, you're one of them, you're a millionaire.' Yes, but look! I'm wrong for this job. They don't want me here. It would be nauseating for me to go, 'Hey, George, thanks for letting me use your villa.' 'Hey, Brad, are we having a drink later?' Horrible. Right? So I've got to come out, and punch up. I've got to go, 'Look at this billionaire here, isn't he brilliant? He's got sweat shops.'"

Doesn't he get nervous when he steps out on stage in front of Hollywood? "Yes, but probably for different reasons than you think. I do go through anxiety. I say no [when I'm asked], because I want to rule stress out of my life, and then they persuade me, they appeal to my ego. Then I go, 'Yeah, that would be good.' And you think, 'Oh, Christmas ruined. I've got to write jokes. I should be getting drunk!'

"My only anxiety is if I screw up a joke. That's what I'm worried about. Every joke is like taking a penalty. If that ball goes into the back of the net, no one can argue with that. No one can go, 'That was a terrible goal.' They go, 'It was a goal.'

"So if I do that joke right, people might not like it, but I scored. I don't want to fluff a joke or say the wrong line – that's the only thing that worries me."

When I ask if the furore his public performance causes possibly distracts from the serious achievement of After Life, he employs the same sleight of hand used by his idol David Bowie – that it isn't the real Ricky Gervais we're seeing up there.

"With stand-up and rock stars, people think you are that person. When you tell a joke, people assume that that's a window to your soul, like that's what you think in real life. And it's not true. I will flip the view of a joke, if it makes the joke better. I'll pretend to be right wing if it makes the joke better. A joke is a fiction."

ONE OF FOUR siblings – brothers Larry and Bob, and sister Marsha – he was born in 1961 and brought up in Berkshire. "I grew up in the shadow of the war. Everyone I knew, the generation before me, they'd all gone to war. The next-door neighbour had an Anderson shelter." The war made Gervais. His father Jerry, a Canadian labourer, came to England and met Gervais's mother Eva in a black-out. They died within two years of each other, Eva in 2000 and Jerry in 2002. Both had church funerals and in 2007 Gervais told Kirsty Young on Desert Island Discs that he played practical jokes. "At my mum's funeral and my dad's, we were laughing and crying," he says. "It was funny and sad."

There is also a poignant church funeral in After Life – "Spoiler Alert!" he shouts, but don't worry, I won't tell you who it is – and although the pervading theme of the series is grief, I suspect After Life is mostly about hope and love. Gervais, who based a whole stand-up show, Super Nature, on bashing religious belief and who is one of the most famous atheists in the country alongside Richard Dawkins and Stephen Fry, has made a very Christian work.

'All the silly pranks I do on the show I do in real life'

"Yes, but without the actual belief in God," he says. "I like the good bits from the Bible. 'Do unto others' is a pretty good rule of thumb, but then it gets complicated."

If there is cruelty in After Life, it's in the merciless portrayal of men. Brian Gittens, a deeply troubled, sociopathic loser played by David Earl, who seldom changes his clothes and, when asked to perform stand-up at the amateur variety night, delivers a stream of foul-mouthed despair, would quite possibly be sectioned if he walked down any high street but Tambury's.

"I've never thought of Brian as mentally ill," says Gervais. "He's hit hard times. I think people, when they see something on telly, and they're used to watching Friends and ER, when someone like Brian comes on, they think, 'Oh, they're odd.' Actually, they're not odd, they're normal! Having a doctor who looks like George Clooney, and six friends who look like that, that's what's odd! If I take you around England, you'll see that we're all Brian Gittens. We're not Brad Pitt."

"That's the best thing about comedy: it says, 'We're all a bit crap. All a bit weird.' And that's all right, because we're all in the same boat."

I'M COPING FINE. If I'm really honest, it doesn't seem that different to me. Aside from all the terrible suffering that we are witnessing," says Marc Warren over Zoom as he talks about his experience of social lockdown. "There's something about an actor's life that gets you used to this. You have to structure your own day. I have been doing that since my 20s, with unemployment or whatever.

"Also, I'm a bit of a loner anyway," continues the actor, who has starred in everything from Hustle, State of Play and The Musketeers to Band of Brothers, Doctor Who and Mad Dogs. "I've been in this room on my own for 23 days. I've had good chats with some pals over Zoom. In fact, I've chatted to more people than I would normally.

"There is a nice camaraderie during this period. We're all in this together, dealing with adversity. We are all facing the same things – concerns about our health and our loved ones and anxiety and boredom.

"Until we get tested, the great debate for all of us will be, 'Have I had the virus?' I have had a cough and lost my sense of taste. Although, when I told a friend that I felt like I had lost my sense of taste seven days ago, he said, 'Is that why you bought that jumper?'

"Another friend told me that it must be because I'm a terrible cook. It's amazing the things you get to hear when the chips are down!"

As well as the fierce Zoom banter, another by-product of the lockdown is that we are all now devouring inordinate amounts of television. Warren's latest offering, playing the eponymous Amsterdam police officer in a stylish new ITV reboot of Van der Valk, will certainly keep us all gripped for the next three weeks.

Written by Chris Murray, whose previous credits include Midsomer Murders, Agatha Raisin and Wild at Heart, Van der Valk is an update of the hit 1970s detective drama – briefly revived in the 1990s – that starred Barry Foster and featured a jaunty theme tune, Eye Level, performed by the Simon Park Orchestra, that went to number one in the charts in 1973.

The 53-year-old actor reflects that, "I hope that in these extraordinary times, for a couple of hours each Sunday, we can offer people a little bit of escapism. Van der Valk is about a group of people solving a bit of crime, in a lovely city in the summer."

Rewind seven months (although it actually feels more like seven years) and Warren and I are in that lovely city, chatting during a break in filming over a delicious lunch on a gorgeous

Marc Warren stars in a reboot of the 70s classic Van der Valk. But, he says, this is the Amsterdam detective as you've never seen him before

INTERVIEW BY JAMES RAMPTON

NOW AND THEN
Marc Warren's version of Piet Van der Valk is very different to that played by Barry Foster sunny day in a typically funky waterside bar in Amsterdam.

In the past, interviewers have sometimes found the actor to be a touch reserved, but on this occasion he couldn't be friendlier, or funnier, frequently breaking into a captivating smile. Yet, as an actor who steadfastly refuses to talk about his private life, an air of mystery continues to hang over him. He explains: "My postman delivers my mail, and I'm grateful he does that, but I don't need to know anything about his life."

Safely back on the topic of work, Warren explains that the new version of Van der Valk has little in common with the original, which was adapted from the bestselling novels by Nicolas Freeling. "The similarities are that it's called Van der Valk and that it's about a Dutch detective, but the rest is an entirely new take. It's not based on Nicolas Freeling's novels. It's completely different and completely modern."

THAT DOES NOT mean, however, that Warren isn't feeling the pressure of stepping into someone else's shoes.

"I used to play leads in my 30s and early 40s, but I've not played the lead in a long time. I've been very happy just playing second or third fiddle. But this is different. There is obviously a bit of pressure to it."

Does that worry him? "No. All you can do is turn up and try your hardest, and it either works or it doesn't. If it doesn't work, I'll have to carry the can!"

To emphasise how much it has changed from the 1970s version, this iteration has dispensed with Van der Valk's wife Arlette and given him an entirely new team, including a gay sidekick, Lucienne Hassell (Maimie McCoy), and a smart black assistant, Job Cloovers (Elliot Barnes-Worrell).

"Diversity is a big topic now, and I like to think that this is diverse," says Warren. As a white man, does he now feel marginalised, I ask? "No, that has not prevented me from getting work. I'm just grateful when anything comes along!"

Warren's interpretation of Piet Van der Valk is more subdued than the sparky performances we are used to seeing him deliver. "I'm a bit more moody than normal in this," he says. "It's a very different venture for me. I'm used to playing more outgoing, showy characters.

Van der Valk is not that. He's more introverted. He's a man of few words, a loner who lives on a houseboat. I wouldn't say he's a ray of light!"

The creature the detective is closest to is his boss's dog, Trojan. Warren, a confirmed dog lover himself, continues: "Van der Valk loves dogs, and that says more about him to me ▷

◁ than anything else. I love dogs, too. They are wonderful. Unless you've had that relationship with a dog, you don't know how much they get into your psyche. I don't trust people who don't like dogs!"

Amsterdam is, of course, also a principal character in Van der Valk, and the series makes excellent use of the city's unique beauty. Warren muses that this version, "Shows people a side of Amsterdam which they haven't seen before. It doesn't portray the normal clichés of the red-light district, stag parties and coffee shops."

RATHER, IT FORE-GROUNDS the more off-the-beaten-track areas of Amsterdam. "It's a very special city and a really cool place. Amsterdam has a great character to it. I love the fact that Chet Baker used to be here. In fact, he fell to his death from a window here. Jacques Brel also sang about the city. It has a lovely European feel to it. I certainly didn't feel like I was shooting in Manchester or London."

The location Warren enjoyed filming in most was the Rijksmuseum, the Dutch national museum, which plays a key role in the first episode. "That was a highlight for me. We were in there on our own. I was shooting in this gallery full of Vermeers. How often does someone get to do that?" How much are they worth? "More than I'm getting paid! We weren't allowed to drink coffee next to them, that's for certain!"

Warren proceeds to disclose that, "Another scene was just me with Rembrandt's The Night Watch in the background.

THE NEW LINE-UP

Just before we went in there, a guy on a stretcher was brought into the gallery. He was on his deathbed and his final wish was to see that painting. It was very moving.

"It's a very, very impressive piece. It's one of those paintings in which you see endless things. In some way, you interpret your own life through it. To film in front of it was a great privilege."

Would he say that this job has been the highlight of his career? "People often ask, 'What's your favourite project?' But I never have an answer to that. Whenever we spend too much time thinking about the past or the future, it normally ends in some form of suffering. It's not great for our happiness to dwell on the past or the future. The classic thing is that you regret the past and fear the future. There is nothing productive in that. Just try and stay present and grateful.

"People talk about a five-year plan, but I don't know what I'll be doing this afternoon, let alone in five years' time! I've never been able to do that. I'm just lucky that my career seems to have unfolded regardless and without my knowing."

Or, it seems, without him watching it. Back on Zoom, Warren admits that he won't be able to watch his new series with the rest of us because he doesn't own a TV. On hearing this, I offer to host a screening of Van der Valk for Warren at my house when the social-distancing measures are finally lifted. I promise to cater for the occasion by providing copious amounts of Edam.

Cracking one last, slow smile, Warren adds: "And I'll bring a windmill..."

THE WINDMILLS OF MY MIND

Alison Graham recalls 1973 and her blond, blue-eyed hero who won over Britain

The only aspect of Van der Valk that I can vividly recall is the music. That incongruously jolly instrumental number, Eye Level, topped the charts, as we used to say, in 1973 and you couldn't switch on Top of the Pops without seeing the Simon Park Orchestra doing its thing.

I even remember crooner Matt Monro's version called And You Smiled. It was pretty awful, but Matt Monro was one of my mum's favourite singers, so I probably heard it a lot. Familiarity doubtless bred contempt.

As for the actual show, well, yes, I remember it for Barry Foster, its blond, blue-eyed star, and for the Amsterdam settings.

At a time when cop dramas were set in either London or America, Amsterdam had a freshness about it as a location, and it's worth remembering that back in the olden days it wasn't a case of just hopping on a train or a plane and being there in no time. Foreign travel was a mighty haul, even to Europe. Going abroad was a big deal. Seeing Amsterdam on the telly, with its pretty bridges and canals, was very novel.

DUTCH MASTER
Barry Foster became a household name as the Amsterdam cop

Then there was Barry Foster, who I tried very hard to have a crush on. He was on telly, so of course I tried very hard to have a crush on him. I might even have succeeded; my memory is mercifully fuzzy.

What I remember most about Van der Valk, though, is how much we loved it, as a family and as a nation. It was massively popular. Maybe a restless country in lockdown, desperate for escape, will take ITV's reboot to its hearts. Maybe...

The colour of genius

Henri Matisse's vision shocked the world – a century later his great-granddaughter still feels the effects

THE SNAIL AND the Blue Nudes by Henri Matisse are among the most recognisable and popular artworks of the 20th century. Created in the early 1950s, just before the French artist's death, aged 84 in 1954, buzzing with colour and playful geometry, these dazzling works appeal across age and nationality.

Copies of The Snail hang in classrooms around the world and, when London's Tate Modern eventually reopens, room two will again be jammed with people admiring the original, a work cut out of hand-coloured paper with tailor's scissors.

"Google Matisse and the first images that come up are the Blue Nudes and the cut-outs," says Matisse's great-granddaughter, New York-based artist Sophie Matisse. "I think that's just wonderful. But I also think that there are other, earlier, works that it is really important to discover."

Sophie, 56, is the presenter of Becoming Matisse, a documentary that uses Henri's early diaries and letters to argue that the great painter – youthful follower of Pissarro, friend and rival of Picasso – is a truly revolutionary figure, the man who brought about the birth of modern art, at great personal cost. Furthermore, we too easily forget that Matisse endured years of ridicule on his way to world renown. "He had a creative force within him," says Sophie. "He had to suffer the consequences of his longing to be the artist that he became. It wasn't an easy ride. There were a lot of bumps and scratches, and just plain hard times."

Matisse was born in the industrial town of Bohain in the north of France, close to the border with Belgium. His father, a grain merchant, didn't want his son to be an artist and it was Matisse's mother who gave him his first set of paints when her son was 21, bedridden with appendicitis and most probably suffering from depression. "Women supported him all his life," says Sophie. "First his mother and then his wife Amélie."

Amélie was by his side during the fateful summer of 1905, when he visited the small French port of Collioure with fellow artist André Derain. In the south of the country, Matisse had discovered Mediterranean light and here he gave himself up to vibrant, and sometimes violent, colour. Throughout 1905, he painted a series of works that changed the course of art. These included the astonishing – at that time – portraits of Amélie, Woman with a Hat and The Green Stripe, and the nude group scene Le Bonheur de Vivre that would directly inspire Picasso's famed Les Femmes d'Alger two years later.

NO ONE HAD painted like this before – in The Green Stripe Amélie's face is bifurcated by a vivid emerald brush stroke. Matisse had opened the doors to a new creative epoch, to abstraction and all that would follow. But this new approach, where colour trumped everyday appearance, caused outrage when Matisse exhibited in the Paris galleries in the autumn of 1905. Alongside Derain he was denounced as one of the "fauves", the wild beasts. Matisse became the subject of open mockery and crowds came to galleries just to laugh at his work.

'I think Henri could be excruciatingly overbearing'

It was a public scandal but Amélie stood by her husband, insisting that Matisse – who did waver at least once and start painting more commercial works – stick to his instincts. "He was very strong and he survived," says Sophie. "But he could only do it with the help and support of Amélie."

THE MASTER
Henri Matisse's 1952 work Nu Bleu III and (far right), 1905's Woman with a Hat, a portrait of his wife Amélie that shocked the art world

Sophie Matisse brings a uniquely personal perspective to the work and reputation of her great-grandfather. Art world legend has it that she only realised who he was when she saw his name on the side of a museum.

“That’s the romantic version,” she says. “But there is some truth in it. I think my father [the sculptor Paul Matisse] was quite saturated with [Henri] Matisse growing up. He, too, was an artist and he was very sensitive, and I think it was a bit crushing for him in a way. So when he started his own family, he wanted to create something without those negative elements that he had experienced in terms of Matisse. The stories from the past that I heard and loved were stories of my father. The Henri Matisse stories were few and far between. It was only later, once I grew up and got more into my own life, that he came more into focus, became more prevalent in my life and, to be honest, more overwhelming.”

CONSEQUENTLY, MAKING THE documentary was difficult for Sophie, who had to accommodate her own father’s complex feelings about the man whose shadow he had lived in. Paul doesn’t appear in the film but, says Sophie, he saw it and gave it his blessing.

“I think Henri could be excruciatingly overbearing for some people in the family,” she says, “while he could be completely charming to others. If you have that kind of force inside you, the force that enabled him to survive what he survived, it’s going to come out in other ways as well. And if you are in the way, good luck to you. Because that was part of my father’s experience. It’s just not easy to deal with somebody with so much life force.”

Although Matisse has been dead for 65 years, that life force is still palpable in his work and even the things he touched. In the film, Sophie opens a paintbox used by her great-grandfather complete, still, with tubes of oil paint. “When I open those paints, I respond extremely strongly to them,” she tells me, “because they really do have an effect. Absolutely, it’s vivid. They’re like little time capsules. You can feel it, they are very magical.”

MICHAEL HODGES

A very modern

Sally Rooney may have been described as a “Salinger for the Snapchat generation”, but her story of teenage love is timeless – and now it’s coming to the BBC

When it came out, Normal People was a huge bestseller. Not bad for only your second novel.

What inspired you to write it?

The book follows the relationship between a young man called Connell and a young woman called Marianne, as they make their way through their final year of secondary school in County Sligo and into university at Trinity College, in Dublin. As to what inspired me to write it, I have no idea. A few years ago I wrote a story about the same two characters called At the Clinic [published in literary magazine The White Review, in 2016] set when they were in their mid-20s, so I decided to go back and write about their lives at school.

Were you surprised by how it was received?

The reaction to the novel was largely positive. It generated a lot more attention than my previous novel. Was I surprised? I don’t know. I found the whole publication process quite stressful the first time, for no special reason, so I think I was bracing myself for the worst when the second one came around. I felt determined not to be surprised by anything that happened. There’s no alternative to publishing books, I can’t just put them in a drawer somewhere. These things have to happen.

How did the TV adaptation come about, and how did you feel about it?

The BBC offered to adapt the book before it was published. I was delighted, because I knew and trusted the team behind the offer, and because director Lenny Abrahamson was involved. I’m a huge admirer of Lenny’s films [Room, What Richard Did], so it was pleasing to think he wanted to do something with my novel.

How involved were you in the production?

I worked with [screenwriter] Alice Birch on several of the scripts, and I was involved in the casting process from the beginning. To be honest, I didn’t set much store by my own involvement, because everybody on the production team was more qualified and knowledgeable than I was. But hopefully I was able to chip in a little bit.

What made Daisy Edgar-Jones and Paul Mescal perfect for the lead roles?

As someone with no professional expertise in the area of casting, I find it hard to explain exactly what made them so perfect. I think we all just knew when we saw their tapes. It wasn’t really the way they looked, and it wasn’t even so much the way they delivered particular lines or made particular gestures. It was just the way they were. It’s a funny thing.

Did you give them any tips before filming?

Far be it from me to give tips to such impressive and gifted professionals. No, I didn’t give them any tips! They kindly refrained from giving me any, either. It was purely a pleasure to meet with them and talk about the characters and the story.

How did it feel to see your story brought to life?

I visited the set a couple of times. It was very strange to walk through Marianne’s house – strange when it matched what I had imagined, and strange when it didn’t. Maybe the weirdest thing was seeing how many people are involved in making a TV show. There were people everywhere! And all of them highly skilled specialists in their own areas. In terms of writing a book, it only takes one person. Although I knew that intellectually, it still came as quite a shock when I visited the set.

Are you pleased with the result?

I feel I have no right to be pleased with the result of so many other people’s hard work – but yes, of course, I am. I think it’s very beautiful. I feel some of the same trepidation I feel about having my books published – it’s hard when things go out into the world. But as with books, there’s no other way.

It’s been announced that your first novel, Conversations with Friends, is also being adapted. Are you more relaxed about that?

The adaptation is at an earlier stage, and I’m not exactly sure yet how much involvement I’ll have in the writing and production. So either I’ll be excited from up close, or excited from afar. Either way, almost certainly not relaxed. I wish.

What are you enjoying on television or radio at the moment?

At the moment I’m living in a remote rural cottage with no television and no internet connection. When we do get the internet sorted out, I’m looking forward to watching the new series of the German drama Babylon Berlin.

BRIGHT FUTURE
Daisy Edgar-Jones
plays Marianne

◁ when I was 14, and it was there that I realised it was a career possibility.” She landed her first job before she left school – playing the daughter of Hermione Norris and Robert Bathurst in Cold Feet.

She grew up in north London, and showbiz runs in the family: her father is a TV producer and her mother was a film editor. To perfect Marianne’s west coast lilt, she worked with an accent coach and spent a lot of time listening to recordings of author Sally Rooney, who grew up in County Mayo.

“Initially I had quite a strong accent, but the director felt it was important to soften it because Marianne’s mother is from the north and her family is middle-class. I didn’t want to mess up the accent, because I’m sure a lot of people would want an Irish person to play this part, and I completely understand that because it’s such an Irish story. There’s a sense of humour and a sensibility that I understand because my mum is from Northern Ireland and I have family there.”

LIKE THE NOVEL, the drama doesn’t shy away from sex, but filming those scenes wasn’t as embarrassing as you might imagine. “We had a brilliant intimacy coordinator who choreographed them, and they were always very low-pressure. Sally writes about intimacy and sex beautifully in the book, so it was really important to get those scenes right. I hope young people will watch the brilliantly excruciating scene where they first sleep together and realise that’s how it should be – fun, awkward and relaxed. I hope it’s a very positive representation of sex.”

Rooney also nails the headiness and transformative power of first love. “When you fall in love and realise someone so wonderful can love you back, you start to like who you are a bit more. Marianne suddenly thinks she’s attractive and starts to see herself differently, and I definitely have had that.”

Despite her success, she also relates to her character’s lack of self-esteem. “I’m quite hard on myself and Marianne is, too. As she grows up, she starts to accept who she is; I’d like to be more accepting. I’m only 21, so I’m still discovering who I am.”

Although she loved living in Dublin for five months, and has already landed her next big role as the lead in an adaptation of Jo Bloom’s novel Ridley Road, she can’t imagine moving far away from her parents permanently. “I live ten minutes from my mum and dad, and it will probably stay that way forever. I’m an only child and very close to them. I need my mum nearby, so she can make me a cup of tea when I have a cry!” CLAIRE WEBB

PAUL MESCAL

plays Connell

THE PROSPECT OF meeting Sally Rooney was almost as terrifying as the audition for screen newcomer, Paul Mescal. “I met her for two coffees before we started shooting and I was terrified, because you want her blessing,” he recalls. He needn’t have worried. “She was really open and funny, and as excited about the project as I was.”

This is the 24-year-old Irish actor’s first TV role, and he knows he’ll be the envy of many of his peers. He’s from Maynooth, a university town in Kildare, and has starred in several high-profile theatre shows in Dublin. He was bitten by the acting bug when he appeared in a school musical aged 16. “When it came to picking colleges and deciding what to do, I was like, ‘OK, this is the only thing that I really enjoy,’ and with blissful ignorance I went off to drama school in Dublin.”

‘Screen relationships are often romantic. This is true’

Like his character, he initially felt like he didn’t belong in college. “When I was 18, I wasn’t particularly well read and suddenly I felt stupid because people in class were talking about Ibsen and Chekhov. I used to pretend I’d read them, and then you realise everybody is trying to impress everybody else.”

Connell’s inability to express what he’s really thinking or feeling also struck a chord with Mescal. “That’s something that I recognise in myself. You’re always overthinking and over-analysing, and sometimes that can be crippling. And then when you do take a risk and express what you feel, the results are usually positive.”

The actor is confident that lots of other young people will similarly be able to identify with Connell and Marianne. “I love how the book captures that tricky time from 17 to 18 to the end of college, when you’re discovering yourself, and how difficult and joyous it can be. I think it’s been so popular because people either recognise themselves in earlier years or see themselves currently in the characters’ lives.”

During the shoot, the novel was his bible. “You psychoanalyse this person to death, and then you hope that your thoughts materialise when the camera starts rolling.” Has he experienced the giddy rush of first love so perfectly rendered in Rooney’s words? “Totally, and it’s intoxicating. You just have to think about it and you can remember how full that feeling is. You feel kind of drunk all the time and you always know where that person is in the room, even if you aren’t looking at them.”

HE BELIEVES MARIANNE and Connell are a refreshing change from couples in many TV dramas. “A lot of relationships we see on screen are either deeply romantic and incredibly positive or abusive, whereas this is a true representation of a complicated yet loving relationship. We tried to approach the sex scenes like any other. They’re a dialogue between two people who are discovering what it is to be deeply in love.”

Mescal has just moved from Dublin to London and is looking forward to exploring his new home when the lockdown ends. Although he’s a little bit apprehensive about the exposure of being in a big BBC drama. “I have no idea what it’s going to mean on a day-to-day basis. I consider myself relatively private and it scares me that it could potentially have an impact on my personal life. Unfortunately, it’s the transaction that you make when you work in this industry.” CW

I quit Dragons' Den in 2014 to spend time with my family, but this was a wonderful opportunity to spend a month in India – in the city of Puducherry and Rishikesh in the foothills of the Himalayas. Paul Chuckle [Paul Harman Elliott of the Chuckle Brothers], John Altman and I got on particularly well. I loved Britt Ekland, too: she's so funny and straightforward. I asked if she had a “significant other” and she said, “You mean, am I sleeping with someone?”

We had a yoga lesson with one of the world's best teachers. I was thrown off a horse in 2006 and smashed my hip. Countless experts and physios couldn't fix it, but within six weeks of starting yoga, my pain had gone, so I practise regularly. Maybe I'm vain, but I feel like I'm in my 50s and I don't want to let myself go.

Over the past year my drive to build up businesses has gone and I've been looking to reduce my debt. But since 20 March my health clubs and hotels have been closed. If we don't reopen before 1 October, we'll be in £30 million of debt. I can't complain: other people are worse off, and we'll get through it.

My eldest daughter had a baby a couple of weeks ago and my second oldest is due to give birth in two months. It's a worrying time, although it's lovely sitting with my wife Nigora and having a gin and tonic. We didn't do enough of that pre-virus.

We'll definitely do a lot less travel in future, although we'll still take life by the balls, even if that means spending more time at home rather than running all over the world.

I don't want to leave this earth because it's so wonderful. It doesn't frighten me: when I go, I go. But I want to enjoy it for as long as I can.

BRITT EKLAND, 77, ACTOR

I wasn't sure if I could deal with the poverty in India. Children sleep on the pavement, surrounded by waste. It's a terrible way to live and I have no solution, which bothers me today. And I found it difficult to deal with the noise, day and night, mainly traffic. You'd see an entire family on one scooter without helmets. There are cows in the middle of the road and you swerve to avoid them. It was so frightening.

But I found a lot of positives, too. I discovered women are the backbone of India. They are always beautiful, immaculately dressed, no matter how poor.

I don't know if I'd call myself a feminist, it's just the way I was brought up. I started work at 14 and my dad made sure we were independent. It's harder for women, of course. I was 46 when I had my last child. I really pushed the limits on that. Do I envy my ex Rod Stewart for being able to have babies in his 60s? I sincerely doubt he changes nappies. My son and his wife split all the childcare, but I don't think men in Britain do that, especially not those with much younger wives.

‘Once women are past 50, it's over’

Once women are past 50, it's over. It's still a man's world. That's what makes money. But the #MeToo movement showed that things can change and we must never stop trying.

The past year has been spectacular. It's liberating to still be able to learn lines and be taken seriously. For many years I wasn't. Now it's turned around and my life is like a dream.

I don't intend to retire, and I've already downsized, although maybe with the virus we will all cut back more. Sadly, I need to use aeroplanes because my family's in LA, but we must do what we can to create a better world.

It disappoints me when people have everything and they're still not satisfied. Or they don't look after themselves. You've got to be fighting fit for the fabulous opportunities that come up.

Sometimes I read about my life and think, “I never did that, did I?” But I did. I had a wonderful life – and I still do.

I love adventure. I once drove from London to Bombay in a 1921 Rolls-Royce, so when this came up, I couldn't resist. And I've never enjoyed anything so much in my life.

When I first went to India in 1963, it was hard work, but now the hotels are as good as anywhere in the world, if not better.

I usually wear extravagantly coloured clothes and in India you can get those made to measure for thruppence, so I came back with lots of shirts and trousers.

They love their cricket in India, too, and we went to a match in Puducherry. But my greatest adventure was in the Himalayas with Britt. We had a pedicure: I thought, "There's one of the most beautiful women in the world and if she looks to her left she'll see the most hideous man. I hope it doesn't damage her reputation too much!" I've always loved champagne, pretty ladies and travelling.

'I drove to India in

Actually, I love all sorts of people. Paul Chuckle and I did laughter yoga, which was frightfully funny. I like to cheer people up if I can. When things are gloomy, as they are now, there's always a silver lining somewhere.

Although my wife Valeria and I usually eat out a lot, we haven't missed it during lockdown. She's Italian and cooks brilliantly so once this is over I doubt we'll go out as often as we used to. We're always rushing around and it's wonderful, the things we've talked about in this lockdown.

We are fresh from a long trip to Tahiti, New Zealand and Sydney, so I'm not missing travel yet. However, having retired from commenting in 2017, I do miss the banter of the box. But I have always dealt with tomorrow rather than yesterday and I like to be busy; I loathe the word "retired". We have a house in Menorca, so in a few years, if I'm still alive, we'll probably spend more time there. But I've given talks on cruise ships and in theatres and I hope to keep nipping back to the UK for the odd gig.

I couldn't give a damn about my legacy. I shall be six feet under and I couldn't care less what people think of me. I've had a lovely life.

AS TOLD TO EMMA COX

STEPHEN GRAHAM AND Daniel Mays are two of the country's most acclaimed actors. They have reduced the nation to tears with heartfelt performances in gritty dramas such as The Virtues (Graham), Mother's Day (Mays) and, in separate series, Line of Duty. Now, however, they will be inducing tears of laughter as detectives in the Sky 1 comedy Code 404.

"We're both associated with serious drama," says Mays. "When I read the script for this I was crying with laughter and I could hear my wife Lou shouting from the other room, 'So you're going to do it, then?'"

"They hadn't filled the other role yet. Stephen was the first person who popped into my head. I knew he'd be brilliant."

Graham's wife, fellow actor Hannah Walters, was also integral to his decision to take the job. He says, "She read the script and went, 'You're doing this. You've done too much serious s**t lately, you need to have a laugh.'"

Code 404, written by Not Going Out's Daniel Peak, is a cop pastiche: Mays plays DI John Major, who has been shot dead then brought back to life using artificial intelligence, while Graham is his partner, DI Roy Carver. The set-up works to the actors' strengths: Major is an instinctive genius but prone to putting his foot in it, while Carver is his rock.

'We had to add 20 minutes each day to allow for corpsing'

Graham, 46, says, "I was brought up watching Morecambe and Wise and the Two Ronnies and all of those great comedy double acts. Danny's so physical with his comedy and some of the faces he pulls have me in bits. I was out of my comfort zone. I thought, 'I'm not funny, I can't do comedy.' But I've learnt from Danny you just play the scene and find the little moments in it."

Mays, 42, has dabbled in comedy (Channel 4's underrated 2009 comedy Plus One, and the recent Dave series Porters) and says: "Steve's hilarious but he underplays everything, which is a wonderful combination. It's a classic funny man/straight man double act. I have a lot of slapstick. We had to add on an extra 20 minutes to the schedule every day to allow for corpsing."

Over the 12 months that DI Major has been "dead", DI Carver has fallen in love with his widow Kelly (Anna Maxwell Martin), creating a genuinely moving love triangle. "The show's dead weird and wacky," says Graham. "But I felt me, Danny and Anna could bring proper realism, which would make you believe it."

Visually, Code 404 could easily double for a realistic crime drama and both actors have done their fair share of those, including in Line of Duty, where Mays was killed off in the first episode of series three (but not before putting in a Bafta-nominated performance), while Graham was an undercover cop in the fifth run of the BBC drama.

Says Danny, "There's a definite in-joke at one point where a hologram memorial says, 'Murdered in the line of duty.' And I do get killed at the beginning, again... but I come back to life in this one." Graham agrees, "We're sending up crime dramas, but we're also doffing our cap to them."

Line of Duty was life-changing for both even though they were already successful. For Mays, "It was a game-changer, without question. It was the best role I'd had to date." Graham agrees: his Line of Duty was the 17th highest-rating show of the entire decade when it was seen by 12 million viewers, most of whom who had perhaps not seen him in the likes of This Is England or Boardwalk Empire.

Says Mays: "I remember Vicky McClure saying, 'Be prepared.' I was like, 'OK, I have been doing this for a while, though.' But she was right. It went out on the Sunday night and on the Monday when I went to the Co-op, everything had changed."

GRAHAM AND MAYS met on the 2004 MTV comedy Top Buzzer, written by Johnny Vaughan, which ended with Graham acting as a matchmaker for Danny and make-up artist Louise Burton. They now have two children, Mylo, 12, and Dixie, seven.

"I was his Cilla Black," says Graham. "I put them together on a date and, bingo, all these years later they're a wonderful little family."

Both men admit to being reliant on their other halves for all sorts of reasons, including helping to log on to Skype for our quarantine interview: Hannah laughingly looms into view as she helps.

Graham says, “There were times on The Virtues which were gut-wrenching and painful.

I’d phone Hannah and say, ‘It’s been tough today’ and she’d go, ‘Really? I was up at seven, Alfie’s got a toothache, Grace has a fever, I had to do all the washing and ironing’ and I’d go, ‘Am I being a prima donna?’”

Hannah’s straight talking came in handy again when Graham shared billing on the Martin Scorsese film The Irishman with Al Pacino, Robert De Niro and Joe Pesci. “I phoned her and said, ‘I can’t do this – I’ve got a big scene with Al Pacino!’ She told me to relax, enjoy it and just do what I do.”

Not that Mays hasn’t had his own starry moments: for 2011’s motion-capture movie The Adventures of Tintin: the Secret of the Unicorn, Mays was directed by Steven Spielberg, who invited A-list friends to come and watch.

“The technology was really new so everybody wanted to come on set,” says Mays. “We wore all-in-one suits and I was standing with Mackenzie Crook looking like an overgrown sperm. He spotted Tom Cruise and said, ‘Let’s go and talk to him.’ I was like, ‘Dressed like this? Are you having a laugh?’ The whole thing was an out-of-body experience.”

The boys have certainly done good. Both are proudly from working-class backgrounds: Mays is from Buckhurst Hill in Essex, while Graham is from

STEPHEN GRAHAM

Kirkby in Merseyside.

Three years ago, before the Line of Duty effect on Graham’s career, Rada-educated Mays told RT about his feeling that public-school actors were benefiting from industry favouritism.

He said at the time, “I saw my very good friend Stephen Graham in a repeat of This Is England the other night and was completely hit for six by his performance. He is consistently brilliant but doesn’t get the plaudits he deserves.”

WHEN I READ the quote back to him, Mays laughs: “Well, that’s changed! He’s the man of the moment now and I’m over the moon for him. These things go in waves. I think the whole Benedict Cumberbatch and Eddie Redmayne thing, maybe four years ago they really were getting lauded and winning all the awards and rightly so, they’re phenomenal actors.

“But the plight of a working-class actor is still in a precarious position. It needs trailblazers like Stephen to keep plugging away.”

Graham seems less keen to get into a debate about class divide, but when I ask if he’s ever had a similar experience to Mays, who was told to drop his Essex twang, Graham admits, “Yeah, when I was in drama school one teacher did say, ‘You’re going to have to lose that accent.’ I asked why and he said, ‘You won’t get any work speaking like that.’ I don’t know what happened to him!”

Hanging his head in shame somewhere, one imagines. For there’s hardly anybody better than these two working in television today. And it looks as if, with Code 404, they have another, albeit very different, hit on their hands.

Stephen Graham and Danny Mays say serious cop dramas are ripe for a comic makeover. But why do they think the plight of the working-class actor is no laughing matter?

Get 'em off, lads!

The Full Monty ★★★★★

Friday 10.45pm BBC1 (11.15pm in Wales)

I WAS HOPING NOT to mention the war, but the origin of the phrase “the full monty” – latterly kitemarked by the post-industrial unemployment comedy of the same name in 1997 – has forced my hand. That’s because many lexicographers claim that Sir Montague Maurice Burton, founder in 1903 of the Burton male outfitting chain, lent his name colloquially to a three-piece suit for demobilised servicemen: the full Monty.

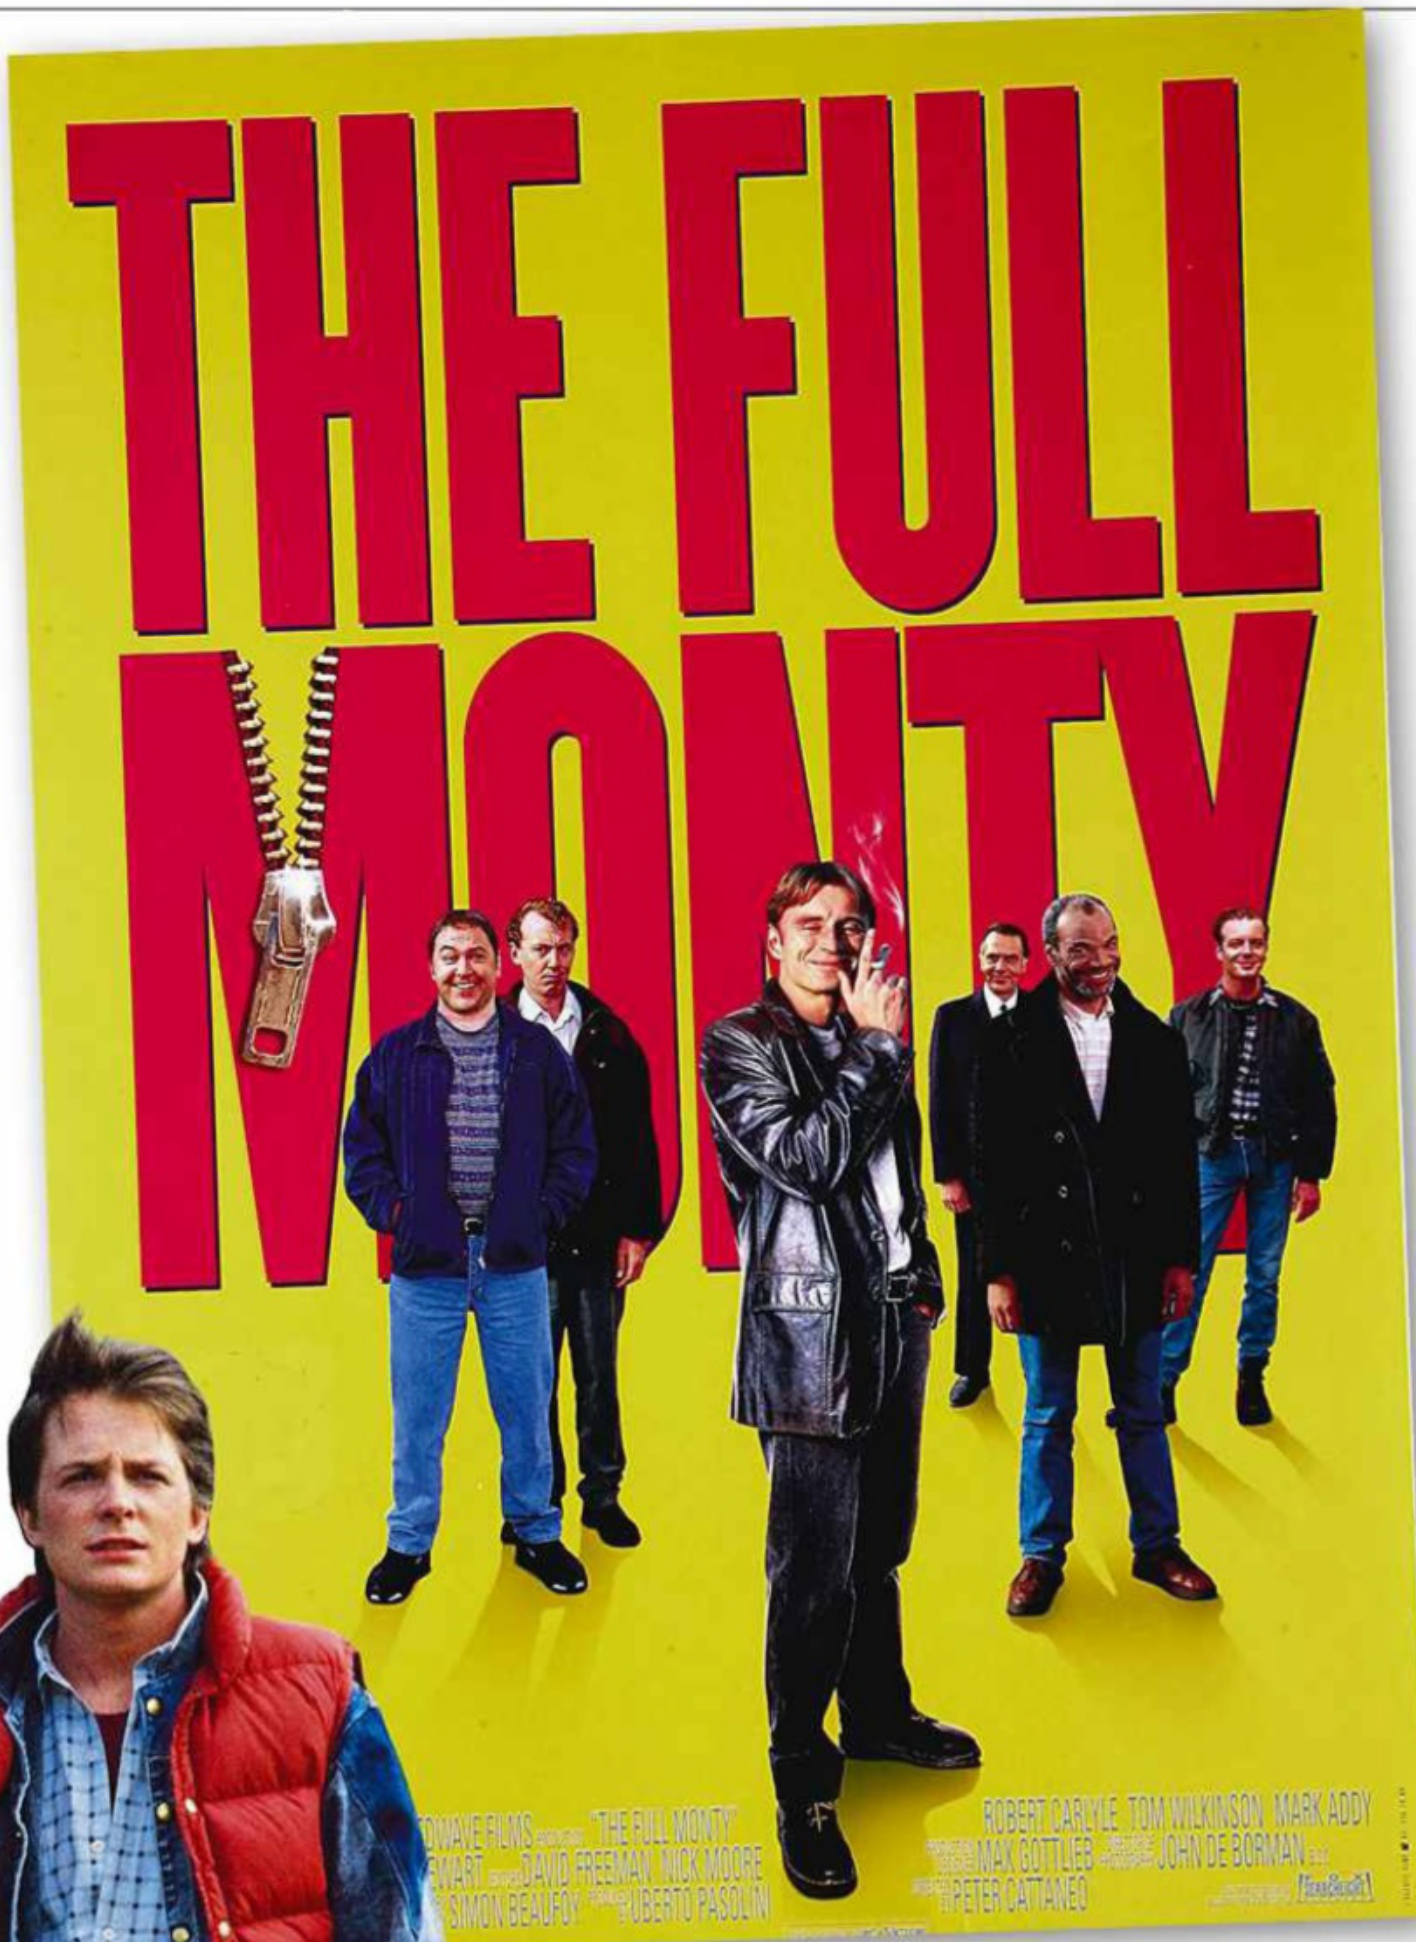

There’s a delightful irony in the fact that while the original Monty was designed to be put on, the comedic update is about stripping off. Hence the film’s rebirth and extended life as a live-action hen-night musical and a brand that’s been stretched on TV to various celebrities disrobing for cancer causes.

The cinematic Full Monty was a notable break-out hit, finding an international audience without resorting to the heritage trappings of period drama, and with only one biggish name in Robert Carlyle from Trainspotting. (That said, it made stars of Tom Wilkinson, Mark Addy and Hugo Speer, and gave Paul Barber a new lease of life, with Lesley Sharp, as Addy’s wife, already in the Mike Leigh/Jimmy McGovern orbit.)

In Simon Beaufoy’s witty, humane script, six unemployed Yorkshiremen turn themselves into a motley Chippendales-style troupe by way of revenge from the post-industrial scrapheap. The Chippendales keep their pants on; our unlikely heroes and sex symbols do not.

THE SUBJECT PROVIDES a hook for ribald scenes aplenty, but also poignant social commentary about Britain in a recession (imagine that). From this foundation, with a likeable cast and sure direction from Peter Cattaneo (recently at the helm of the Monty-esque Military Wives), The Full Monty forges a frothy, camp comedy with a super soundtrack of pop hits. Hugely influential and abidingly uplifting, it came home with only one of its four potential Oscars: Anne Dudley won for her clever, 20-minute score.

A surprise hit, breaking $250 million at the box office, it proved that being all mouth and no trousers has its dividends.

Michael J Fox entered semi-retirement in 2000 to manage his Parkinson’s disease, but TV has given him a new lease of life. One of the brightest, most likeable stars forged in the youthful white heat of the 1980s, Fox’s boyish stature and crackling wit carried this Spielberg-produced, Robert Zemeckis-directed time-travel fantasy trilogy, in which Marty McFly zooms back to the 50s in a DeLorean courtesy of eccentric prof Christopher Lloyd. In the sequel he’s whisked forward to 2015, along with his girlfriend, this time to prevent a crime involving his teenage son. Finally, the only weak link, set in the Wild West of 1885, at least allows Doc to get the girl. Try them in one sitting while you have the luxury of time. AC

CRIME DRAMA Rewinding from The Irishman, here's Martin Scorsese's earlier depiction of Irish-American gangster life, which finally won him the best director Oscar. Adapted from the Hong Kong movie Infernal Affairs, the story unfolds in the Boston underworld, and revolves around a show-stealing turn from Jack Nicholson as crime boss Frank Costello. He has a mole (Matt Damon) in the Boston police force, while the cops have their own man (Leonardo DiCaprio) in Frank's circle. The action throbs with deeply etched male supporting roles (Mark Wahlberg, Ray Winstone), but barely a walk-on for actresses like Vera Farmiga and Kristen Dalton. It's solid, tense and violent but perhaps not quite the match of the director's best work. However, Scorsese coasting is still better than the crowning career achievements of others, and the Oscar was compensation for the Academy overlooking the likes of Taxi Driver, Raging Bull and GoodFellas. The acting is exemplary, with Sheen spot on as Blair and Sylvia Syms a joy as the Queen Mother – but it's Helen Mirren's brilliant, Oscar-winning turn as the beleaguered Queen Elizabeth II that resonates most. AJ (UK/Fr/It 2006, may be edited for language, HD)

She whisks him to an enchanting subterranean land, but Victor would rather be wed to his living fiancée Victoria (Emily Watson) above ground. BIOPIC This uneven film focuses on two significant periods in the life of Brian Wilson, the Beach Boys' troubled co-founder. Half the action takes place in the 1960s, and follows Brian (Paul Dano) as he tries to take the band in an experimental direction. The other half jumps to the 1980s, when Brian (now played by John Cusack) has become a fragile man-child being micro-managed by a manipulative psychotherapist (Paul Giamatti). Alas, both strands fail to ring true. Dano features in the most effective scenes – which depict Brian recording in the studio – but neither he nor Cusack can quite disappear into the role. BIOPIC The combined energy of director David Lynch and producer Mel Brooks brought the incredible story of the so-called Elephant Man to the big screen in 1980. It was adapted by Eric Bergren and Christopher de Vore from two non-fiction accounts about John Merrick, whose disfiguring neurofibromatosis led him to join a barbaric travelling freak show. Merrick, heroically portrayed under layers of latex by John Hurt, elicits both cruelty and kindness in his short life, not least from Anthony Hopkins's humane Dr Frederick Treves, who takes him in, first as a medical specimen, but latterly as a friend. John Gielgud, Wendy Hiller, Freddie Jones and Anne Bancroft further elevate a handsome cast, but it's Lynch's clear if sometimes sentimental vision that makes this film such a moving and unforgettable experience. The use of Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings (later to be memorably used in Platoon) in one key scene is utterly devastating. (US 1980, some violence, BW, HD)

DRAMA Based on the comic-strip character created by David Low, Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger's film takes a pop at the complacency of the top brass; however, thanks to Roger Livesey's astonishing performance in the lead, it is also a tribute to the more laudable aspects of a seemingly buffoonish, out-of-touch colonel – honour, loyalty and a genius for making the most of a bad lot. Anton Walbrook also excels as Livesey's Prussian rival, who becomes a lifelong friend, while a young Deborah Kerr makes her mark playing the three women in Livesey's life. This is one of British cinema's undisputed masterpieces. DP (UK 1943, HD)

They're

COMEDY Arguably the best of Norman Wisdom's movies, this was a neat follow-up to his hit debut Trouble in Store, and features the bumbling star as a handyman trying to save an orphanage from collapse. His money-raising schemes are often hilarious, while his sequences with leading ladies Joan Rice and Australian 1950s zither girl Shirley Abicair are charming. Of course, the film is overly sentimental, but, if we can look beyond the schmaltz, we can recognise the rare quality of a true cinematic clown. TS (UK 1954, BW)

ROMANTIC COMEDY This frail but winsome romantic comedy reunited Tom Hanks with both his Sleepless in Seattle co-star, Meg Ryan, and director, Nora Ephron. Billed as the screen's first internet love story, it is a reworking of Ernst Lubitsch's classic The Shop Around the Corner, in which the stars play rivals in the bookshop business who unknowingly fall for each other in an online chat-room. It's not as amusing as it might be and rarely romantic. However, the screwball tale is slickly staged and played with consummate ease, and Ryan and her bookshop staff exude a lovely feeling of cosiness. DP (US 1998, edited for language, HD)

WESTERN Well, not really. This is the fourth and last outing for the famous title (until the original was remade in 2016), and no members of the original cast are to be found. Still, Lee Van Cleef makes a perfectly acceptable substitute for Yul Brynner and the theme remains true to the original's concept. Here the bandits kidnap Van Cleef's wife and the seven are rounded up to seek vengeance. Mariette Hartley and Stefanie Powers provide stronger-than-usual support, but the real star is still Elmer Bernstein's pulsating score. TS (US 1972, edited for language, violence, HD)

With the geological stakes higher than ever, the human focus is on LA fire department helicopter pilot Dwayne Johnson, who is intent on saving estranged wife Carla Gugino and their daughter, Alexandra Daddario. Though the committee-written script flips between sincere and ironic, inexperienced director Brad Peyton handles the ride well. Oscar-nominated Owen stands out as aggressive consultant Larry, and Mike Nichols's elegant direction gives a sheen of sophistication, but the whole thing still feels a bit stagebound. Wes Craven's 1977 cult classic. Like the original, it depicts a vacationing family (headed by Ted Levine and Kathleen Quinlan) falling victim to a murderous clan after breaking down in a stretch of American desert. However, the savages here are the mutated offspring of miners exposed to nuclear fallout. Once the brutal action explodes, there's no let-up. While the script doesn't allow much exploration of Turing's then-illegal sexuality, Cumberbatch delivers a career-best performance, betraying his character's innermost feelings through delicate inflections. He also has fine sparring partners in Charles Dance (as Turing's superior) and Keira Knightley as his confidante and fiancée. Fascinating and thrilling, The Imitation Game keeps you gripped by always offering a reminder of what's at stake, as well as exploring the mind of a brilliant but unfairly treated war hero who should never be forgotten. JL (UK/US 2014, col/BW, HD)

Touching on isolation, prejudice and duty, the story sees a Romanian migrant, Gheorghe (Alec Secareanu), brought in to help self-medicating farmer's son Johnny (Josh O'Connor) after his father (Ian Hart) suffers a stroke, with the two men then embarking on an affair. Helen Mirren's steely colonel is the remote commander of a joint UK/US mission aiming to capture key terror targets, while Aaron Paul (from TV's Breaking Bad) is the US pilot operating the armed drone. All the legal and moral quandaries relating to remote warfare are woven into the narrative, and there's humour, too, from Alan Rickman, in his final film role, as a general who finds his role as intermediary exasperating. EAS (UK 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

Having faked his own death, agent 007 is sent to Japan to discover why Russian and American spaceships are disappearing, going native and “marrying” a local girl in the process. Director Lewis Gilbert keeps the pace up, and the script (co-written by Roald Dahl) is suitably arch, but it’s surely production designer Ken Adam’s triumph: the volcanic interior, where the film’s explosive climax unfolds, remains the definitive secret base, and has been much parodied since. COMEDY DRAMA I find it difficult not to recommend a Cary Grant film, but I hope nobody's complaining. The Talk of the Town is a modest jewel in director George Stevens's crown, in which Grant plays a wrongly accused political activist on the run and hiding out at the house of the magnificent Jean Arthur (a key player in so many screwball comedies). Awkwardly, she's renting her place out to Ronald Colman's bookish law professor, but bromance brews (Colman: "There's a touch of the philosopher about you that I like.") and a love triangle develops. Matters are further complicated by the trio's attempt to prove Grant's innocence. It's not a comedy per se, but brims with funny moments. (US 1942, BW)

1973 AND ALL THAT

Life on Mars Available now

Let's go back in time to... 2006! That's when we were first gripped by a BBC1 drama with a maddeningly clever premise: John Simm is DI Sam Tyler, who is knocked out and wakes up... in 1973, where he has to solve crimes with sexist boor DCI Gene Hunt, played with relish by Philip Glenister. The culture clash and overarching mystery (why 1973?) make it much more than a nostalgic romp, although that's why it's such fun. All three series of the 80s-set sequel Ashes to Ashes are also available now on iPlayer.

THE INVISIBLE ARMY Night Force

Available now

More than three million people work night shifts – or at least they used to not so long ago. That's the excuse for this friendly "nice people getting on with various jobs" documentary series, originally shown in the mornings on BBC1, which drops in on folk fixing roads, restocking shelves or answering emergencies that can't wait, while the rest of us blithely sleep. The result is a lot of little slices of life, gilded with facts and figures in the show's narration.

FAMILY FANTASY

His Dark Materials Available now

The nation's second-favourite kids' fantasy saga was well served last year by BBC1, when it dramatised the first of Philip Pullman's series of novels. We follow Lyra (the formidable Dafne Keen, pictured), whose parents have left her behind but have imbued her with a fierce rebel spirit in an alternate universe full of wonder, heroism and armoured polar bears. The luxurious visuals more than match any vivid pictures that readers had in their heads.

A VERY ENGLISH SCANDAL Quiz

Available now

Michael Sheen's impersonation of Chris Tarrant is among the delights here, as the controversy surrounding supposed cheating on ITV's Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? in 2001 becomes fuel for a thrilling drama. Matthew Macfadyen is terrific as Major Charles Ingram, whose triumph unravels amid an unbelievable-but-true story about what happens when a cultural phenomenon gets eccentric, unpredictable members of the public stuck in its gears.

AMERICAN TEEN SAGA Dawson's Creek

Available now

Ah, remember this? The hairstyles, the clothes, the searing stories of unrequited love and uncertain sexual awakenings? Once a staple of lazy Sunday brunchtimes, the adventures of a gang of cosseted New England teens still have the power to leave you wriggling with vicarious, gossipy excitement. It's a mystery why so many of the cast enjoyed Hollywood success, while James Van Der Beek was destined always to be Dawson.

QUIRKY HOSPITAL COMEDY Scrubs

Series 1–9 available from 1 May

The modern equivalent of this US series, which began in 2001, would be something like Brooklyn Nine-Nine: snappy, accessible sitcom that's got too much odd stuff swirling around in it to go fully mainstream. Zach Braff leads a group of young doctors in a hospital comedy that flips between wild flights of fancy, black comedy powered by sharp quips, and regular notes of sadness. All 4 has all nine series, including the weird final one.

GROUND-BREAKING DRAMA

Queer as Folk

Available now

Daringly rude and transgressive, from that almost-swearing title downwards, Russell T Davies's 1999 snapshot of the Manchester gay scene still startles with its energy, humour and compassion. Its three leads – Charlie Hunnam in the tabloid-baiting role of keen teen Nathan, Aiden Gillan as cockily confident Stuart and Craig Kelly as lovelorn Vince – cleverly reflect different facets of the gay experience that still resonate.

WHEN I FIRST met up with Rafe Spall, the father-of-three was sitting in a pub in Camden, north London, pondering the challenges of playing one half of a sitcom couple desperate for a baby.

“Even though the majority of people watching this show won’t know what it’s like to go through infertility or adopting,” the actor, 37, said after stepping off the set of his new Apple TV+ comedy Trying, “I think everyone knows what it’s like to get to a point in your life and feel like something is missing.”

Spall, familiar from the recent TV adaptation of War of the Worlds and from films like Swallows and Amazons and I Give It a Year, has in the past said, “Fatherhood is the hardest and most important thing I’ve done.” When we catch up again, he’s in lockdown in the Cotswolds, with his children, aged nine, seven and four, hovering nearby. Although apparently things aren’t too different from usual right now.

“I’ve spent quite a lot of my life as an actor sat around in my pants, with no idea where the next pay cheque’s coming from, so this is really nothing new to me!” he cackles.

Even homeschooling has been fine thus far, although the junior Spalls’ school has said that after the Easter holidays, fully timetabled lessons are coming... “and our four-year-old is a wild animal, so God knows how we’ll deal with that.”

There are, too, the ongoing parenting challenges faced by Spall and his actress wife Elize du Toit. “But we are sort of through it,” he says. “The youngest has some resemblance to a human being. Not fully – the will is definitely brighter than his reason. But I’ve been wiping bums now for nine years, ’cause I still wipe my older boy’s bum. He should probably do it himself, to be fair.”

Nappies and toilet-training? That would be bliss for Jason and Nikki, the characters played by Spall and Esther Smith (Cuckoo) in Trying. They’re a north London couple who turn to adoption when they discover they’re unable to have their own children. That is to say, they attempt to turn to adoption. Created by comedy writer Andy Wolton, himself an adoptee, the wonderfully scripted series is an empathetic exploration of the trials of trying to have a baby and then trying to navigate your way through an adoption system that is necessarily rigorous. For Jason and Nikki, it’s all very, well, trying. Think Catastrophe, but with less swearing, self-loathing and darkness.

“It’s about nice people,” agrees Spall. “There are no anti-heroes in this show. And I think everyone at the moment is tuned into altruism and kindness and community. There’s a lot of that going on – and Trying falls neatly into that.”

Unlike his character, Spall was blessed that fatherhood came readily and easily. “I had children when I was relatively young by modern standards. I just always felt like that’s what I wanted. I didn’t question it. I come from a lovely family background – my mum and dad have been together years, they have three children, and I guess you emulate what your parents did.

“So I got married at 27, first baby at 27, two before I was 30. And the reality of having children hit me like a ton of bricks. We had the first two 18 months apart, and that was no joke.”

Spall has always talked in loving terms about his own background. He remembers strangers stopping him in the street to sing the praises of his father, Timothy Spall, the star of Mike Leigh films and, on TV, the hugely popular Auf Wiedersehen, Pet.

“My dad was really famous when I was young. Everyone knew who he was, which was strange. But when people always ask me what it was like watching my dad on telly, I never really have an answer because it was the status quo.”

And it’s a situation that continues to this day, he adds proudly, referring to his prolific father as “a national treasure... I haven’t sat in a make-up chair on the first day of any job without the make-up person saying: ‘Oh, I worked with your dad recently, I love him so much!’”
The situation, however, isn’t quite the same for Spall’s own offspring. “I had a much more famous dad than my children have got!” he grins. “I see them watching me on telly and they’re in no way impressed.”

ALTHOUGH IT HAS led to some tricky questions – notably when he got eaten by a T rex in 2018’s Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom. “I probably should have warned my son, because he burst into tears and said: ‘How did you get out of that T rex’s tummy?’ I explained that it was just a film but he persisted with, ‘Yeah, I know, but how did you get out?’ However much I said: ‘It’s not real, it’s all computers...’ he kept asking. ‘How did you get out – did you have a sword?’ Eventually I just said, ‘Yes, son, I had a sword.’”

Trying is the first British production being broadcast on Apple TV+ and Spall says, “It’s weird to do a show that is going to be seen around the world.” That, though, only added to the series’ appeal to an actor who is fiercely proud of his south London roots.

“You’re seeing a version of London that isn’t always represented in an international way. Global audiences tend to digest British culture in things like Downton Abbey. That’s emblematic of the fetishisation of the British class system. But these characters lead normal lives, and I think that’s important to show the world. We don’t all live in stately homes.”

It’s time for Spall to go. Finger-painting and long division beckon, as does some lockdown telly. He and his wife have “started up the third season of Ozark. But it’s a bit dark. Don’t really want to see people killing each other at the moment.” Beats bum-wiping though, right? CRAIG McLEAN

THE BIG NAMES ARE ALL HERE – THE BEST OF APPLE TV+

APPLE TV+

NEWSROOM DRAMA

The Morning Show Available now

Even in the fast-moving world of streaming TV, it’s still possible to have a sleeper hit. Because AppleTV+ tends not to release the whole of a series on day one, it took a while for viewers to assess this drama, which stars Jennifer Aniston, Reese Witherspoon and Steve Carell as journalists on a TV news show that’s been clouded by sexual harassment allegations. Once the last episode had aired, The Morning Show was revealed to be flawed and a little earnest, but capable of packing an almighty punch. JACK SEALE

TAUT THRILLER

Defending Jacob

Starts 24 April

Captain America and Lady Mary – oh, all right, Chris Evans and Michelle Dockery – are a happy, well-off couple whose world collapses in this new US drama. A boy at their son’s school is murdered, and it soon looks as if their own teen might be the killer. Which is bad enough, but Dad happens to be the district attorney. It’s somewhere between prestige drama and Gone Girl thriller, but you’ll want to know how it turns out. It starts with three episodes, followed by one more each week.

UNHAPPY FAMILIES

Servant

Available now

There are eye-catching personnel on board for this drama: it’s written by Tony Basgallop (What Remains, Inside Men) but initially directed by US movie twist king, M Night Shyamalan. Lauren Ambrose and Toby Kebbell play a rich young couple (Rupert Grint co-stars as Kebbell’s brother) who suffer the devastating loss of a child. Then things get increasingly weird – it’s best not to know anything more than that before you start watching, but get ready for a very creepy atmosphere. JS

CRUSADING CRIME DOC
The Innocence Files

Available now

Based on the work of the Innocence Project in the US, this documentary series is an antidote to some of Netflix's more lurid true-crime series. As it lays out how various serious crimes were investigated and taken to questionably conducted trials, it doesn't need gimmicks to whip up a sense of injustice – watching interviews with citizens incarcerated for years for something they didn't do is enough.

MORE THAN MURDER
Unforgotten

Series 1–3 available now

One of the finest detective series of the 2010s. Nicola Walker and Sanjeev Bhaskar are cops investigating crimes committed many years ago, which isn't a new idea – but the way the drama lays bare shattered lives makes it unusually affecting. It's the best of a slew of British dramas to come to Netflix recently: others include Press, Brexit: the Uncivil War, The Durrells, McMafia and SS-GB. JS

BIG BOY NOW

EPIC REVENGE ROMP

The Last Kingdom Series 4 available from 26 April

Once an underrated drama on BBC2, now The Last Kingdom is... an underrated drama on Netflix. The streaming service took co-production duties for the second series of the historical epic, set in the late-ninth century in what's soon to become England, before assuming complete control of the show for series three. Now we're on to the fourth run, and the battle between Danish invaders and the various Saxon kingdoms, all of whom are also in bitter rivalries with each other, has ramped up in the wake of King Alfred's demise. The Netflix era has increased the sex, swords and stabbing – gruesomely in the eyes, neck and chest of countless unlucky soldiers.

As it introduces a plethora of new characters, the shifting alliances and ruthless acts of vengeance make it a rewarding game of thrones, centred on beefy hero Uhtred (Alexander Dreymon). Grab your shield – we're going back in... JACK SEALE

Why subscribe Amazon's original content is really just a "sweetener" to convince you to subscribe to Amazon Prime, which includes overnight delivery. However, they're willing to spend big money to make it – a billion-dollar Lord of the Rings series is in the offing.

How to get it The best way of watching Prime is on Amazon's own gadget. The Fire TV Stick (£39.99 with Prime membership) is a dongle that plugs into your television's HDMI port, and can be controlled with your voice. amazon.co.uk/video

DISNEY+

Price £5.99/month

Why subscribe Less a streaming service than a babysitter. Disney+ features everyone from Snow White to Darth Vader to Iron Man, and even Homer Simpson. Moreover, it's the only place to catch new TV series set in the world of Marvel and Star Wars.

How to get it Although it's brand new, this is a mega-budgeted Disney product, so the service will be available on pretty much every smart TV and streaming gadget from day one. You can also find it by searching on the Android and Apple app stores, so children can watch it on tablets or smartphones. disneyplus.com

APPLE TV+

Price £4.99/month

Why subscribe A star-studded line-up – featuring Jennifer Aniston, Steven Spielberg, Steve Carell, Reese Witherspoon and Oprah Winfrey – has yet to produce a must-watch series, but it's got the determination (and money) to make it work.

How to get it Apple TV+ is baked into most of their products, from iPhones to MacBooks. For watching on television, the confusingly titled Apple TV 4K (£179) is a swanky box that will give a pristine image. As a bonus, if you buy a new Apple device, you get one year of Apple TV+ free.

BRITBOX

Price £5.99/month

Why subscribe Just because streaming is new doesn't mean we have to abandon the classics. A collaboration between the BBC and ITV, this features British gems such as Gavin & Stacey, Whitechapel, Endeavour and Broadchurch.

How to get it BritBox isn't ubiquitous yet, but it does have apps for Android and Apple devices. It is also available for Samsung and Panasonic smart TVs, but before you buy a new set, consider a Google Chromecast dongle (google.com/chromecast, £30). With this, you start watching something on your phone, press a button (the rectangle with lines in the corner) and it transfers to your television. britbox.co.uk

2 Gangs of London

Streaming 23 April

This thrilling Sky original is set in present-day London, in the grip of an all-consuming power vacuum between international gangs, caused by the assassination of the head of the city's most powerful crime family. Sean Wallace, played brilliantly by Peaky Blinders' Joe Cole, must now step into his father's footsteps and try to take control, in partnership with the rival Dumani family. But with the scene now more dangerous than ever, he'll have a tough time staying in command.

What will we watch?

When normal life returns, what'll be on TV, asks Alison Graham

WHAT IS THE first thing you will do when this is all over, when those imaginary portcullises are lifted and we are let out – pale, spotty, stir-crazy and with incredibly long hair – into the sunlit uplands of a post-lockdown world?

Perhaps you will run around your neighbourhood, crashing into people just because you can, as you scream, “I’m free, I’m free, you can’t catch me!” Then you will go to the supermarket and stand very close to the person in front of you. (I must state, as a civilised person, that none of this is acceptable, it is rude and unseemly and we are not savages.)

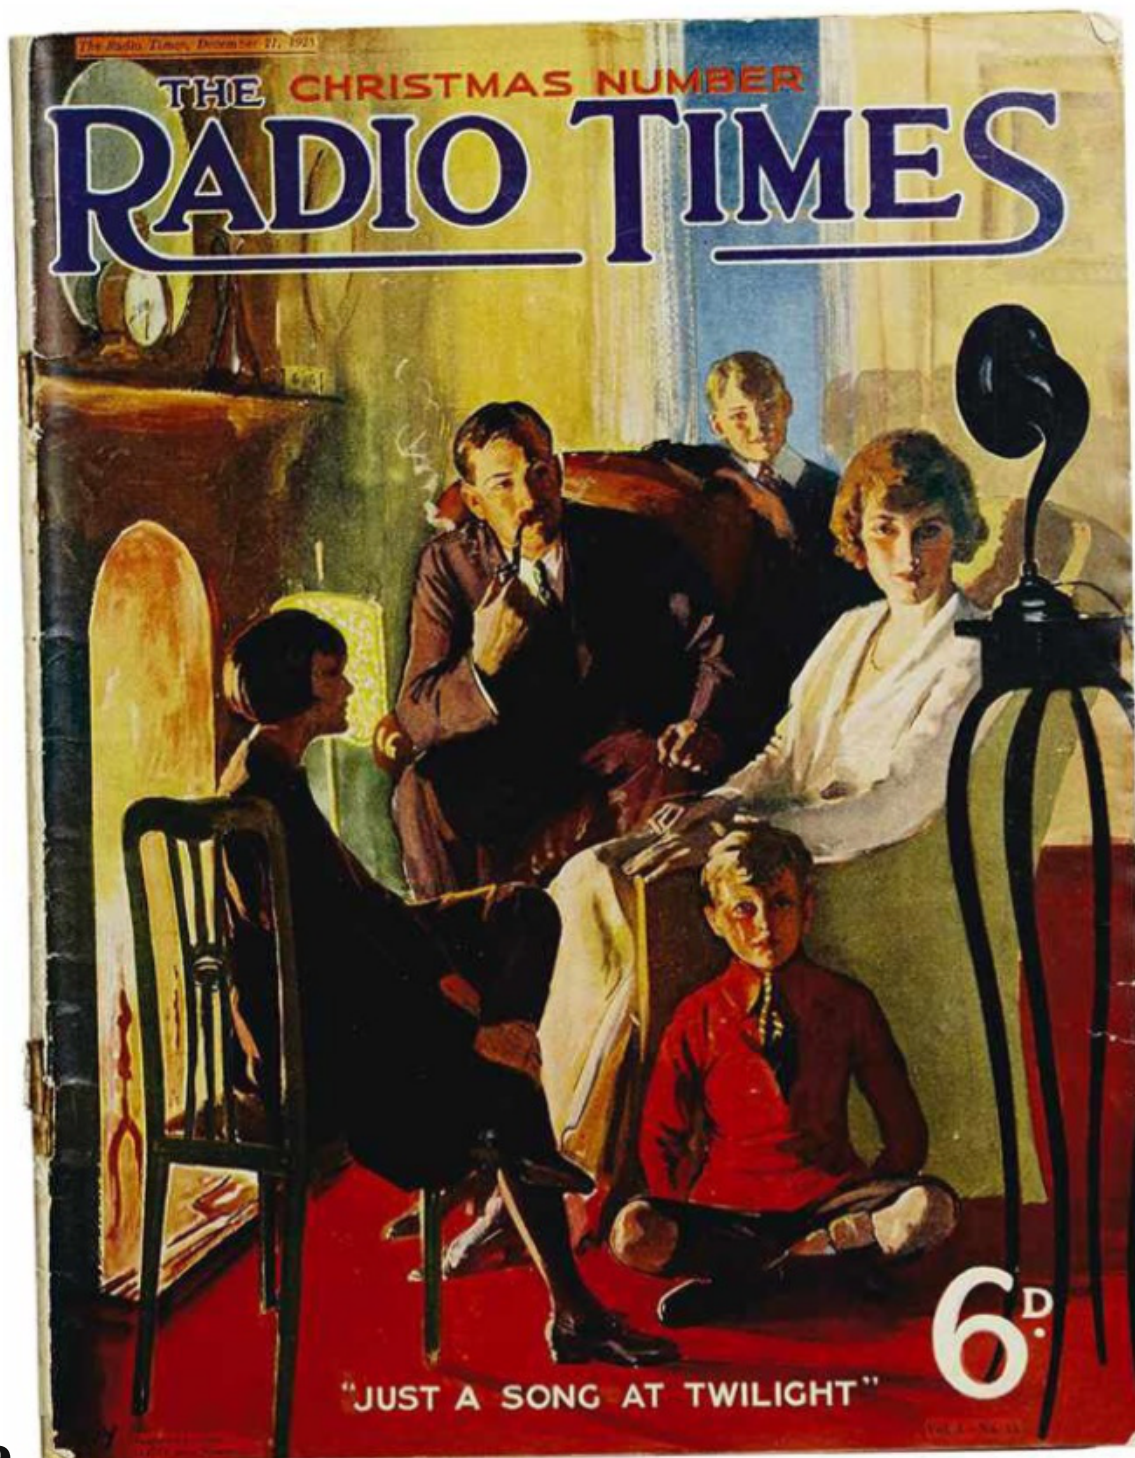

I, on the other hand, will take enormous pleasure in burning my Covid cardie, the grey, hooded (cashmere!) monstrosity that I’ve been wearing around the house as I work. I hate it. It makes me feel like a bored monk and I will forever associate it with the pandemic.

I wonder, too, what we will all want to watch on television once the world begins to adjust to something approximating normality. I, for one, never ever want to hear the words “box set” again, for the rest of my days.

‘We’ll have to make our own entertainment come Christmas...’

Yes, yes, I know, box sets are a fact of pandemic life... watch stuff you were never that bothered about in the first place on box set! Box sets! Box sets! Roll up and see every single episode of something on BBC3 that you wouldn’t, in a normal world, watch without a police escort.

Sit through box sets of Waking the Dead on iPlayer! You know you don’t want to, you had always hoped your years of watching Trevor Eve

FAMILY UNITY

Will we see a return to the traditional values of this Christmas 1923 Radio Times cover?

about the coronavirus, much as I currently don’t want to watch documentaries about the coronavirus.

Neither do I want to watch mawkish adverts for a brand of oven chips that claim to bring unity and love to locked-down households. They are oven chips, not Tom Hiddleston. (Sorry, I’m giving a bit too much personal stuff away there.)

No more television comfort food, either. When isolation ends and when television production picks up again – and my, I wonder if there will be anything new to watch in the autumn, and possibly even Christmas at this rate – I will have exhausted my patience with anything fluffy and aimed specifically at making me feel good.

BUT WILL ANYONE want to watch dystopian dramas?

Yes: because my goodness, we’ve lived through our own very real dystopia, so it will be comforting to watch a fictional Year Zero? Or no: because you are all dystopia-d out and want only to see shows featuring tiny kittens being petted by burbling babies?

Maybe we’ll have to make our own entertainment come Christmas, playing charades and singing carols around the piano. Except you don’t have a piano. I think we will all be sitting around the wireless in our best jumpers, just like the family on my favourite Radio Times Christmas cover from 1923.

Stay safe, stay healthy.

swishing through a big shower curtain in that cold-case basement before he scribbled on a whiteboard were long over.

Yet, what else is there to do? Paint very bad likenesses of your mutinous family in oils? Try to cultivate a taste for houmous, even though you know it’s the food of the devil? Shout at your friends on video-calls about how there are pixies living behind your skirting boards and they hate Waking the Dead as much as you do?

I worry that my television palate will forever be dulled by my pandemic TV diet. I certainly can say right now with my hand firmly on my heart, that I DO NOT want to watch dramas

LIFE STORY
Sophie Matisse in front of the family business in Bohain, and (inset) Henri Matisse's 1906 self-portrait

PICK OF THE DAY Becoming Matisse 9.15pm BBC2

ART Henri Matisse, one of the true greats of 20th-century art, is today remembered for his vivid, child-like cut-outs, produced in his final years. But what set the artist on his path? In this affectionate and heartfelt film, presented by his great-granddaughter Sophie Matisse, herself an artist, we explore his earliest creative exploits.

No child prodigy like Picasso, Henri was in his early 20s before he even picked up a paintbrush, ill and stifled by life in the north-east of France. Early art studies in Paris were equally difficult, but he was determined to find his creative path. He was helped by his wife, Amélie, who stuck with him throughout the darkest times (including during a notorious financial scandal in Paris in 1902) and, along with their children, inspired his breakthroughs with colour and light.

As Sophie Matisse trawls through family photographs or walks along the Mediterranean beaches that inspired him and other artists like André Derain to break from the strictures of the French artistic establishment, she's determined that his family's role shouldn't be forgotten. GILL CRAWFORD

Eliud Kipchoge: My Sub-Two-Hour Marathon

1.15pm BBC1 (2.45pm Wales)

DOCUMENTARY Some names are carved in the record books: Roger Bannister ran the first four-minute mile; Javier Sotomayor is still the only high jumper to have cleared eight feet. And Eliud Kipchoge will always be the first human to prove that yes, it is possible to run 26 miles in less than two hours.

The Olympic and world champion broke the barrier last October in Vienna – although news coverage focused on his hi-tech running shoes more than his relentless training at high altitude. This doc visits his almost monastic training camp in the highlands of Kenya and hears from Kipchoge on what motivates him to keep going faster. DAVID BUTCHER

Casualty

7.25pm BBC1

DRAMA Only a naive fool would have believed we'd seen the last of Charlie when he stormed out the other week. But you might not have foreseen how he'd make his return. Rather than opting to put his nurse's uniform back on, the ED stalwart is now getting a taste of life as a patient when he's ambulated in with a head injury after being found drunk.

Along with the inebriation comes some new-found sassiness: when Connie asks him whether he thinks he might have developed a problem with alcohol in the aftermath of Duffy's death, he replies that he won't be lectured at by a junkie! She's (almost) lost for words.

DAVID BROWN

Sounds of the 60s

from 7.30pm Yesterday

MUSIC Here's a BBC series from nearly 30 years ago looking back 30 years prior to that, and despite the Beeb's archive being severely depleted of classic 1960s pop shows such as Juke Box Jury and Top of the Pops, it still yielded enough gems for this ten-part package.

It starts with early Dusty, and I mean very early Dusty. It's 1961, she's still in her folk trio the Springfields, hasn't gone blonde, and they're in a boxy studio wailing a joyous Wimoweh. These first three editions feature the Beatles (She Loves You), Gerry and the Pacemakers (Ferry cross the Mersey), The Supremes (Baby Love) and the Rolling Stones (The Last Time and Get Off of My Cloud).

Much to love. PATRICK MULKERN

Britain's Got Talent

8.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Carefree shows such as Britain's Got Talent have never been more welcome in the schedule, and acts such as David Walliams's Golden Buzzer choir Sign along with Us are an uplifting antidote to troublesome times. Swathes of viewers were moved to tears by their performance of This Is Me, while other variety acts such as the can't-look-but-also-can't-look-away spectacle of contortionist Papi Flex and madcap comedian Steve Royle provide a welcome escape.

The auditions, filmed earlier this year, continue this evening with a new gamut of wacky and wonderful acts hoping for that all-important thumbs up from Simon Cowell and his fellow judges. FRANCES TAYLOR

POPULAR IN THE CRISIS

■ What are television viewers tuning in to at this time of crisis? It seems we're after a bit of uplift (quite literally in the case of dance troupe XIX), what with the first edition of this year's Britain's Got Talent having bagged more than eight million viewers in recent overnight figures. There's more from the talent search contest at 8.00pm on ITV.

■ The make-do-and-mend mentality of BBC1's The Repair Shop has also proven attractive, with six million now paying a regular visit. The One Show also hit six million when Matt Baker exited as co-host back at the start of April, while MasterChef isn't far behind on five million.

■ But all have a long way to go if they want to beat the Queen, whose speech to the nation on Sunday 5 April, in which she promised that "better days will return", was watched by 24 million across the BBC, ITV and Channel 4. DAVID BROWN

Outnumbered/ Gavin & Stacey

8.15pm, 8.45pm BBC1

SITCOM This brace of family sitcoms is proving the perfect tonic. In Outnumbered's Brockman house, Mum is convinced that Jake is "up to something", while Dad is unimpressed by his younger son's ideas for a school talent contest. "Ben, you don't even know what the wall of death is."

Plans for Gavin and Stacey's union are in top gear now, with a mass Shipman-West gathering at a wedding fayre (they're always called fayres aren't they?). It's the small moments that delight in G&S: Nessa and Stace with depilatory moustaches, flicking through mags; Smithy overcome by being Best Man. And Pam's whopper about being a veggie keeps coming back to bite her. MARK BRAXTON

All Round to Mrs Brown's

9.15pm BBC1

COMEDY Tonight's final edition starts with Agnes practising her zumba and Winnie getting a laugh out of her angina. It's uphill from there. Jonathan Ross strides into Mrs Brown's kitchen and starts flirting with her: "I've always found you strangely attractive." She teases him with: "How long have you had problems with your Rs?"

Also a guest on the sofa for The Cathy Brown Show is Judge Rob Rinder, whose mum Angie comes on with embarrassing photos and a tape of him singing The Loco-motion at his bar mitzvah. There's a sweet moment when she and Agnes discuss the joys of having children who are gay. The Nolans drop by briefly, while the act at Foley's pub is Fleur East. PM

Anne: the Daughter Who Should Be Queen

9.15pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY The rather splendid Princess Royal's no-nonsense views about philanthropy and charity fund-raising have hit the headlines recently after she gave a forthright magazine interview. She's an old-fashioned (in the best sense) royal who believes in doing years of groundwork before embarking on any philanthropic activities. Clearly, she has no truck with the ideas of some of the younger members of the clan.

C5 sheds light on a tremendously hard-working member of The Firm, widely admired for her backbone and Britishness. Of course it mentions that 1974 kidnap attempt and looks at how the Princess Royal is perceived by the public. ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Toxic Town: the Corby Poisonings

iPlayer (expires today)

A righteous Horizon film, setting out the story of a national scandal that blew up from a local problem: in the 1990s, a journalist noted that several children in Corby, Northamptonshire had similar birth defects. Could airborne toxins, stirred up by the excavation of poisonous waste on the site of an old steelworks, be to blame? A decade-long battle for justice ensued, in which the tenacity of mothers was as important as the expertise of lawyers.

KIDS' CHOICE

Nick Cope's Popcast

9.20am CBeebies, iPlayer

Former Candyskins frontman Nick Cope and his whippet, Norman, begin a brand-new series filled with funny songs and magical moments. Today's theme is dinosaurs: Nick and Norman get a visit from a giant tyrannosaurus rex, and Norman does his best dinosaur roar. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

The Departed

10.30pm ITV

Director Martin Scorsese's superb, Oscar-winning crime drama from 2006 in which Boston's cops and robbers plant a mole in each other's organisation. Stars Leonardo DiCaprio, Matt Damon and Jack Nicholson.

RUTHLESS

Is Ingrid (Rebekka Nystabakk) ready for the conclusion of this Norwegian saga?

Twin

9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC4

DRAMA For a drama that calls on us to make some leaps if we want its story to add up, Twin is more poignant than it has any right to be. Yes, there are moments when a voice in your head might murmur a question or two about the plot. But brush it aside because the fable unfolding by the fjords of northern Norway has big dollops of sad truth in it about how life gets away from people – and magnetic performances.

Ingrid and Erik did an awful thing the night of her husband's death, but in many ways what they've been doing since is worse, and now their not-very-well-made carapace is cracking. Erik's friend Frank, the traffic cop, is chipping away at their story about that night and he's a driven man. But we're also gathering that behind those freckles, Ingrid is emotionally ruthless – and she has the most to lose.

Sky celebrates with Pacino

Al Pacino turns 80 today, so what better excuse to sit down for a marathon watch of some of the Oscar winner's finest films. Sky Greats's birthday programming kicks off with all three Godfather films, followed by a blistering Brian De Palma double bill: in Carlito's Way, Pacino plays an ex-con attempting to go straight, while in Scarface (pictured) he plays a Cuban immigrant who rules Miami's drug scene. It's not all gangsters, though: Al's on the right side of the law in Serpico, playing the true-life cop who goes undercover to expose corruption in the NYPD. ELLIE PORTER

Last chance to see

47 Metres Down ★★★ A14 FREE TO VIEW

Swimming off C4's catch-up service tonight is this daftly entertaining shark-fest. Mandy Moore and Claire Holt star as tourist divers in peril when their viewing cage gets detached from its surface vessel and great whites begin to circle. While its murkily chaotic style can occasionally make it hard to follow, the film is efficient, claustrophobically intense, and overall a taut thrill-ride that all but committed fish-phobes will enjoy. A sequel, 47 Meters Down: Uncaged is currently available to watch on Netflix. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Extraction Netflix

Black-market mercenary Chris Hemsworth is sent to rescue a drug lord's kidnapped son in this action thriller. The film reunites Hemsworth with Avengers stuntman Sam Hargrave (here making his directorial debut), while fellow Marvel alumnus Joe Russo provides the screenplay. If the trailer is anything to go by, thrills are in copious supply. EP

GOING DUTCH
The popular 70s cop show is rebooted with Marc Warren as Piet Van der Valk

PICK OF THE DAY Van der Valk 8.00pm ITV

DRAMA New series This three-episode reboot of the adored Dutch-cop show (on ITV 1972–77, then 1991–92) should at least guarantee an audience of the curious. Will the theme tune be the same (no, but there's a little piano-tinkle of the melody, just as a reminder) and does Marc Warren measure up to Barry Foster? Well... hard to say as yet.

The problem, at least with this first feature-length story, is that 21st-century Van der Valk feels generic. He works in lovely Amsterdam, but he could really be anywhere: New Malden, Hartlepool, Slough...

And Piet Van der Valk is your typical maverick – no truck with authority, a complicated personal life, too prone to flings with age-inappropriate women, lives on a boat...

In his first case, with his scruffy band of hipster sidekicks (they have team briefings in a bar!), he investigates the murders of two young left-wing political activists. ALISON GRAHAM

The 1981 London Marathon: a Historical First

2.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY In normal times, 40,000 pairs of feet and sets of wheelchair tyres would be pounding the streets of the capital today in the 40th London Marathon. To fill the gap, here's a look back at the first race, in March 1981.

With a field of 7,747 runners (as David Coleman always used to say, "a great sea of humanity"), the event was an instant hit, raised thousands of pounds for good causes and ended in a dead heat in the men's race.

The programme also promises to show what a very different place the pre-London Eye capital of 1981 looked like. CHRIS HUGHES

Antiques Roadshow

7.15pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT During this second visit to Castle Ward in Down, Northern Ireland, an expert is left almost speechless when he hears about a fiery hiding place for a collection of jewellery. The visitor who brings in the pieces recalls how her relative secreted them around the house, including the oven. But forgetting they were there, she cooked the Sunday roast. Miraculously, the jewellery survived.

There are all kinds of other jaw-dropping stories, too, including the astounding history behind a collection of SAS and Special Boat Service medals and insignia. And a man with a chalice recalls his wife's horror when she bought it for £500 in a fit of "auction fever". AG

Reasons to Be Cheerful with Matt Lucas

7.30pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT New series

Matt Lucas's coronavirus-themed charity single, the Baked Potato Song, an update of a 20-year-old Shooting Stars ditty, won the Little Britain comic plaudits and, more importantly, raised funds for the Feed NHS campaign.

So he's the obvious presenter for one of those "let's do the show right here" programmes that have sprung up across the networks since the lockdown and social distancing began.

Reasons to Be Cheerful is written by Harry Hill, always a hallmark of quality and a very specific strand of utter, joyful madness, and focuses on finding fun in our narrowed lives. AG

Race across the World

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This series takes the chaotic scramble of budget travel and packages it in a way that, by some TV sorcery, makes for great viewing. More than three million of us watch as backpackers run to catch buses and boats (no planes allowed), which is phenomenal, even in these travel-deprived times.

But the journey ends tonight: after 21,000 kilometres and 17 countries, the teams are heading for the finish line. After criss-crossing Latin America they will finally get to shrug off their backpacks in Ushuaia on the southern tip of Argentina, where a £20,000 prize awaits. But first, one team runs out of cash and another benefits from a monumental act of kindness. DAVID BUTCHER

REDISCOVER SOME TV CLASSICS

With the real world full of uncertainty, there's comfort to be found in the classics. A diverse range is on offer, beginning with a 2018 BBC modern-dress production of King Lear (9pm BBC4), starring Anthony Hopkins (right) as the tyrannical ruler dividing up his kingdom.

Over on Drama, we have Tom Hardy as Bill Sikes adding real menace to Sarah Phelps's 2007 BBC adaptation of Oliver Twist (from 4.10pm). Sky Arts has Matthew Bourne's Romeo & Juliet at 8pm.

And if you're craving more bold retellings of beloved favourites, iPlayer has both the recent edgy take on A Christmas Carol (starring Guy Pearce), as well as James Norton in the six-part War & Peace, first shown back in 2016.

Starzplay (starts today)

Mishel Prada and Melissa Barrera return as two sisters with very different temperaments who have inherited an LA bar, in a drama full of wit and heart. Beneath the family saga is a portrait of the city's Latin community as it grapples with gentrification, gender and sexuality issues, and Trump. This new, third series is also the last. Starzplay, which has a decent roster of American dramas, can be accessed at starz.gb or by adding the channel to an Amazon Prime Video subscription.

The Snow Spider

6.05pm CBBC, iPlayer (5.20pm BBC1 Wales)

It's the final episode of the drama about the adventures of a boy magician, Gwyn Griffiths (Fflyn Edwards). With his Snow Spider safely returned, Gwyn sets off to battle Efnisien – not realising that Eirlys (Mali Jenkins, above) and Alun have followed him. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

The Elephant Man

10.30pm BBC1 (11.00pm in Scotland)

David Lynch's poignant biographical drama based on the true story of John Merrick (John Hurt), who was exploited as a sideshow freak and battled the prejudices of Victorian society with the help of a surgeon. See page 28

Stacey Dooley: Costa del Narcos

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Southern Spain is only a quick speedboat ride away from Morocco so, perhaps not surprisingly, this is one of the most popular routes used by drug cartels to smuggle cocaine and hash into Europe. Battling turf wars and the drugs trafficking that drives whole towns, the authorities have been struggling for years to take control.

Stacey Dooley talks to police, dealers and smugglers to learn about the drug supply chain and how it operates, as well as meeting a Colombian drug boss to find out why this part of Spain sees so much cocaine. It's a shock to hear how much of it will end up in Britain.

JANE RACKHAM

Killing Eve

9.15pm BBC1

DRAMA Reviews of series three have been cool so far, with suggestions that, under Suzanne Heathcote, Killing Eve has lost some of its verve and tension. Certainly this episode is a tad downbeat. There's only one assassination and that's strangely unsatisfactory, despite Villanelle's glorious clown costume.

At a wake, MI6 officer Carolyn (a masterful portrait of controlled grief by Fiona Shaw) and Eve are trying to cope with the death of (spoiler alert) Kenny. Meanwhile, in France, Villanelle must prove that she can still cut the mustard (and possibly a few throats) as a Keeper. "Just so you know, I'm kind of a big deal in this industry," she tells her protégée.

What a killer line. JR

Limmy's Homemade Show!

10.45pm BBC2

COMEDY While there are dribbles of disquiet running through much of Limmy's humour, his brand of psychological comedy is fascinating. In the final part of his "one-man band" of a series, Limmy is troubled by the position in the alphabet of the letter Q, and admits he likes reading the safety notices on trains.

There are "mainstream" laughs, too: societal pressures to stay a certain shape ("Hoos about we aw just get fat?"); recommending a favourite film to a friend, only for them to hate it; and football spectators seeing themselves on the jumbotron and not quite reacting in time. Broad or niche, he's hilarious... If you have a tendency to overthink things, you'll love Limmy.

MARK BRAXTON

WHO'S THE DADDY?

But one silverback mountain gorilla is just a big softie

Primates

8.15pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK New series In TV wildlife terms, this isn't an 800lb gorilla like the BBC's landmark Planet series. It's a boisterous monkey of a show, jumping around and plucking fun stories to bring back.

Chris Packham narrates a string of winning sequences with a message about how primates' adaptability and ability to cooperate help them survive in any number of habitats. Family ties matter, we're reminded, most memorably for yellow baboons, who have a gripping showdown with a leopard that has cornered one of their troop. One shot of the leopard loping lazily towards the tree where his quarry hides is gorgeous.

Stronger ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

While 2016's Patriots Day looked at the big picture of the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing, Stronger focuses on the recovery story of just one of its victims, Jeff Bauman, who lost both legs in the blast. Jake Gyllenhaal is perfectly cast as Jeff, and there's an equally fine performance from Miranda Richardson as his mother, while Tatiana Maslany plays his partner. The movie can slide into mawkishness, but this is a strong story, solidly told, and an ideal choice for audiences seeking a little emotional uplift. DAVE ALDRIDGE

Rappers delight

Beastie Boys Story ★★★★★ Apple TV+

Shot at Brooklyn's Kings Theatre, this lively concert film captures Adam Horowitz and Michael Diamond (aka Ad-Rock and Mike D) in their two-man show, as they look back over their life, friendship and career as rap's enfants terribles the Beastie Boys. Our hosts are refreshingly candid as they tell of the group's rise, fall and resurgence, but it's their love, respect and deep sense of loss for third member Adam Yauch (aka MCA), who died of cancer in 2012, that gives the show its big emotional pay-off. JAMIE HEALY

Can it really be ten years since Despicable Me first introduced us to supervillain Gru (voiced by Steve Carell) and his little yellow sidekicks? With the release of the new Minions film pushed back until next year, here's a chance to revisit the first two films in a franchise that can be relied upon to tickle the ribs. ELLIE PORTER

RED-HOT
Marianne (Daisy Edgar-Jones) and Connell (Paul Mescal) fall in love

PICK OF THE DAY Normal People 9.00pm, 9.30pm BBC1, iPlayer from Sunday

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series Sally Rooney's brittle 2018 love story Normal People was a publishing sensation, the kind of book that sparked evangelical fervour in those who loved it and annoyed the heck out of those who didn't. Its central couple, Connell and Marianne, were just so irritating.

Yet as one of the latter, I've rather fallen for this BBC3 adaptation (the whole series will be on iPlayer after tonight), thanks to pinpoint-perfect casting.

Daisy Edgar-Jones (she was in Cold Feet) as Marianne and newcomer Paul Mescal as Connell bring off-kilter charm to their roles as an awkward couple of sixth formers, who against all the odds, start to fall in love.

Marianne is brilliantly bright, but lonely and unhappy, with a horrible mother and a ghastly brother, while Connell is a popular sporting star. But stolen glances in the corridors soon lead to something more.

Museums in Quarantine

7.30pm BBC4

ART New series Experiencing great art has become almost impossible. You can find nuggets online – Philip Mould from Fake or Fortune? giving brief lectures on his own collection on YouTube, for example – but here's a neat idea. Over four nights this week, some of our favourite TV art experts will explore some of Britain's finest collections and exhibitions.

Tonight, Alastair Sooke explores the major Andy Warhol exhibition at Tate Modern that opened a week before lockdown. Tomorrow, it's Simon Schama on Rembrandt at the Ashmolean in Oxford, then Dr James Fox at Tate Britain, and Dr Janina Ramirez enjoying her favourite objects in the British Museum. Every little helps. GILL CRAWFORD

Beat the Chasers

9.00pm ITV

QUIZ New series "It's like The X Factor for quizzers!" whoops Bradley Walsh at the start of this souped-up version of The Chase. Every night this week, brave members of the public take on the combined forces of the Beast, the Vixen, the Governess, the Sinnerman and the Dark Destroyer – the more Chasers they successfully challenge, the more money they win.

Somehow everything's bigger about the show: the contestants are more engaging, Bradley's quips come quicker, the studio audience is more enthusiastic and the tension higher. If you watched ITV's terrific drama Quiz recently, be reassured there's no time for any helpful coughing, because the contestants barely have time to think. JANE RACKHAM

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9.00pm C4

REALITY Minutes into this episode, focusing on the recruits' mindset, one of them hands in their armband and leaves. Hit the ground and give me 50 press-ups if you can't guess correctly who it is.

The remaining 11 celebrities must then fall backwards out of a helicopter into the icy waters of a loch, which they all do calmly and successfully except for "Number Nine", who gives Ant Middleton and his directing staff a reason to drag him in for interrogation. Yet he's not the next person to give up.

Scarily, the battle re-enactment is so realistic that, in the heat of the moment, seven celebrities "shoot" a friendly soldier. Oops. JR

The Price of Everything

9.00pm BBC4

ART You may think we don't need another documentary about how modern art is prey to big money, but this is a very good one. Instead of lamenting the way artworks are seen as baubles for the mega-rich, Nathaniel Kahn's film approaches from multiple angles. "It's very important for good art to be expensive," says a voice early on – otherwise we wouldn't treasure it.

But the painter Gerhard Richter gestures at one his own works in a gallery and growls, "It's not good when ziss is ze value of a house." We see Jeff Koons's workshop, where assistants toil away on a string of "his" works. And we visit the cabin of Larry Poons: once an artworld darling, now not so much. DAVID BUTCHER

Actors who play soap villains will often say that they're accosted by viewers in supermarkets or yelled at in the street by fans who are incensed by their actions. Goodness knows then what vitriol is being directed at Ian Bartholomew – those who can't separate fact from fiction probably want to tear him limb from limb. As villain Geoff in Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV), he's cooked a pet chicken, locked wife Yasmeen (Shelley King) in a box and has now – as it turns out – also given her chlamydia.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

the start of what turns out to be an extremely distressing week for Yasmeen – see Friday's Today in Soapland for more on what happens next. DAVID BROWN

Poor Yasmeen gets the shock news this evening during a trip to the medical centre to see Dr Gaddas. But there will no doubt be further audience outrage when Geoff first accuses his wife of infidelity (we all know that he's actually been paying for sex) before declaring that she must have caught the STI from her ex-husband, Sharif. This is merely

How to Build British: Aston Martin

9.00pm More4

DOCUMENTARY This week we're at the Aston factory in Warwickshire, where some things feel right and some don't. It feels wrong that the chassis panels for the brand's top-of-the-range DBS Superleggera are glued together like some sort of Airfix kit, but it feels right and proper that the machine that does the gluing is nicknamed the "James bonder".

The marque's long association with 007 is lightly touched on, but its financial woes (which were as serious as an oil leak even before the current slowdown) are, of course, ignored. We can enjoy instead the lingering shots of the DBS's gorgeous bodywork, summed up by a designer as like "a brute in a suit". DAVID BUTCHER

NCIS

9.00pm 5 USA

DRAMA It's the start of season 15 and we're being led to believe that Gibbs (Mark Harmon) and McGee (Sean Murray) have been killed during an off-the-books raid in Paraguay to rescue local kids. But within the first five minutes, it turns out that our two heroes are being held captive by a sadistic crime boss who has a look of the Man from Del Monte. If the Man from Del Monte were into torture rather than canned fruit.

Back home, fellow agents are attempting to track down their missing colleagues, but they aren't quick enough to prevent Gibbs from having to endure a particularly nasty waterboarding session that sets the tone for the rest of the episode.

DAVID BROWN

Emergence

9.00pm Fox

DRAMA "Computers, they're going to be the death of us all!" mutters a character at one point tonight, only half joking. This drama about a small-town police chief harbouring a girl with strange powers has a streak of technophobia running right through it.

Last week we saw the mysterious girl remove an implant from behind her ear that looked like a processor chip in a cough sweet. This week we have hospital data stolen, a radio from the plane wreckage that gives you a shock if you touch it and a scene where gravity and magnetism go on the blink. Luckily, Jo's solid common sense looks to be a match for any far-reaching weirdness: she's basically motherhood and apple pie.

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Amazon Prime

How much worse can life get in 18th-century America, at the advent of the Revolutionary War? The epic time-travelling romance has been perhaps more arduously tragic than ever in its fifth series, which is now only a few episodes short of the finale. After last week's nail-biting near miss and the devastating losses earlier in the series, will there be another calamity here, or can Claire (Caitriona Balfe, above, with Sam Heughan as Jamie) use her medical wiles to come to the rescue once more?

KIDS' CHOICE

Bedtime Story

Gather round the TV, mums... he's back. Tom Hardy lowers himself into the storytelling chair once more to recite Hug Me by Simone Ciruolo, a tale about a young cactus called Felipe who really needs a hug. If it leaves you hungry for more, good news: Tom and his French bulldog, Blue, are here all week. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

God's Own Country

11.05pm Film4

A tender romance develops between two young men when a Romanian farmhand is hired to work on a windswept Yorkshire farm in this naturalistic and affecting drama. Starring Josh O'Connor, Alec Secareanu and Gemma Jones. See page 29

COLD COMFORT FARM
Jim (Adrian Dunbar) tries to reconnect with his family

Blood

9.00pm Channel 5

DRAMA A year on from the first series of this psychological thriller (running nightly until Friday), we return to the fractured family at the heart of Blood. Jim Hogan (Adrian Dunbar) is a sadder and wiser man when he once again sets eyes on his ailing, very troubled daughter Fiona, after the death of her mother.

She's considerably more sympathetic than his other children, but still, all is clearly not well in Fiona's world, as Jim starts work on the farm where she and her husband Paul live.

After a dramatic few opening minutes (the story is told, inevitably, in flashback), when a car lurches from a road into a canal, the story unwinds at a leisurely pace – possibly too leisurely. Jim and Paul see something nasty in the barn, and there's a shock when the police come to call... AG

8.30 Ken Dodd: How Tickled We Were

Unmistakable thanks to his unruly hair, protruding teeth, golden larynx, tickling sticks and inexhaustible supply of gags, Ken Dodd entertained the nation for six decades with his television series, pantomimes, Shakespearean roles, pop singing, summer seasons – and his epic five-hour live performances. The comedian died in March 2018 at the age of 90 and this film portrait, first shown later that year, traces his life from his 1930s childhood in Knotty Ash to his final performance in Liverpool in December 2017. The programme also features the memories of his wife, Lady Anne Dodd, and the thoughts of friends, colleagues and fellow performers. Director Ian Denyer; Producer Tony Nicholson (R) (S) (HD)

9.45 Blackpool: Big Night Out

A nostalgic look back at the significant role played by the glitzy seaside resort in the history of entertainment, recalling its heyday as a mecca for stars including Morecambe and Wise, who launched their career in Blackpool, and Frank Sinatra. ### New to rent today

Spies in Disguise ★★★ Virgin Movies/DVD
A story about a secret agent who is transformed into a pigeon might sound strictly for the birds, but this spy spoof is rather fun. Spider-Man's Tom Holland voices Walter, a science geek whose experimental formula is ingested by hapless agent Lance (Will Smith). The film's second half loses some of its charm and coherence as hectic action sequences take over, but there's plenty of pacy slapstick to at least keep kids amused. A cyborg baddie may test more sensitive little souls, though. DAVE ALDRIDGE

John Ford's masterpiece

The Searchers ★★★★★ 1.30pm TCM
Like Monument Valley, where it was filmed, this majestic western of revenge and reconciliation from director John Ford is massive and unmissable. As John Wayne's Ethan Edwards sets out to kill both the Comanche butcher of his brother's family and the abducted niece (Natalie Wood) who, in his eyes, has turned native, his five-year quest becomes a search for his own soul. Ford's great allegory is of a people lost and found. Arguably, it's John Ford's finest western, and he made some of the best. TOM HUTCHINSON

Watch it for free

Border ★★★★★
All4 FREE TO VIEW
In this strange romantic thriller, Eva Melander stars as a brutish-looking Swedish customs officer who pulls aside an eerily familiar-looking suspect (Eero Milonoff) during a routine check, and an attraction soon develops between the pair. To reveal more would be to spoil this unusual and compelling curio. JEREMY ASPINALL

HEADING FOR TROUBLE

PICK OF THE DAY Our Girl 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA "I don't know who to trust any more," medic Georgie Lane (Michelle Keegan) confides in Prof, moments before they unwittingly get into an armoured car with someone who's definitely not on their side. Unfortunately, unlike us, she hasn't witnessed that exchange between the Afghan cadets, or she might not have put herself in such a dangerous situation.

It's the day of the election and the Army are anticipating trouble – they just haven't got a clue that some of the trouble is within their ranks. But before it all kicks off – and there are several massive shocks along the way – we learn a bit more about nervous junior medic Mimi Saunders (Amy-Leigh Hickman) when, during an incredibly tense stand-off, she reveals the truth about her childhood.

It's been widely reported that Michelle Keegan is hanging up her dog tag after this series, but there's no dramatic exit – although she does, thank heavens, finally get closure over her fiancé Elvis's death.

JANE RACKHAM

Life and Birth

8pm BBC1 (10.45pm Scotland)

DOCUMENTARY Midwives probably hear all sorts in the delivery suite, but Dale's reaction to the birth of his fifth son, Charlie, is a bit unusual: "He's done!" he says. "Like a perfect jacket potato!"

Of course, births aren't always straightforward, although the staff at the Birmingham hospital remain incredibly calm and reassuring no matter what. First-time mum Gabi's liver condition means she must be induced, while concerns for Samantha's unborn baby lead to an emergency caesarean. Kirsten's situation is even more worrying, because even after a safe delivery, her baby will need an operation to enable her to swallow. JR

Your Home Made Perfect

8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY I wonder what would happen if the couples in Your Home Made Perfect didn't like either of the virtual reality home-revamping designs they are presented with. Would they choose one to be polite? Or walk away with a handshake?

This week, Rachel and Mike don't seem mind-blown by either Robert Jamison or Laura Jane Clark's plans for their fractured Wiltshire house and its horrible conservatory.

But maybe they simply aren't as effusive as other couples, because they do choose a design to fit their £40,000 budget and are extremely enthusiastic. Though some big expanses of glass prove a headache. ALISON GRAHAM

The Architecture the Railways Built

8.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY New series

Tim Dunn LOVES railways so much, he glows with joy. In the first of a cheery and informative series, the presenter boards the Eurostar at St Pancras International for the four-hour trip to Rotterdam. But he doesn't mind; he could sit there for three or four times that because: "I'm never happier than when I'm on a train!" he beams.

But Dunn starts his tour of the architecture left behind by Europe's railway systems at one of London's disused Underground stations, Down Street in Mayfair. It was designed by architect Leslie Green, famed for his love of the highly distinctive oxblood red tiles that still adorn his stations in use today. AG

EastEnders (7.30pm BBC1) is setting up some sibling rivalry as Bobby and Peter vie for Dotty's affections. I can't be the only one thinking that, at some point, Bobby is going to revert to type and reach for his hockey stick again. Though New Peter (Dayle Hudson) is so tall that Bobby (Clay Milner Russell) would only reach his kneecaps. Tonight, however, it's Bobby's health at risk, when he collapses at a club night.

Next, a quick word about Holby City, which fans will have noticed has currently vacated its usual Tuesday evening slot. You may have read that, with production temporarily suspended, the show has donated its stash of much-needed ventilators to the NHS. But with filming halted, episodes are now also in short supply. Hence the BBC deciding to take Holby off air until July in order to ensure that there are soaps in the schedule over the summer months. So you'll have to wait to discover whether Killer Cameron gets his comeuppance. DAVID BROWN

How to Keep Your Dog Happy at Home

8.30pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY New series Those of us who have a dog to keep us company during lockdown are lucky – as are our pets. However, with so many restrictions on outdoor activities, our canine friends can get bored.

There was no preview at the time of writing but this series, narrated by dog-loving Martin Clunes, offers some useful tips on how to keep your dog entertained when you're stuck indoors for long periods. So, we join Ben Fogle as he tries dog yoga with his labrador, while Gabby Logan discovers that her boxer loves jumping to great heights in the garden and the owner of an energetic border collie reveals how teaching him new tricks keeps him stimulated. JR

Inside the Factory

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY You may reckon that Baileys Irish Cream – that incredibly sweet, rich liqueur – is a bit naff, the sort of tippie your great aunt might sip at Christmas or that hen parties neck by the pint in clubs. But since this "girly drink" was created in the early 70s, the Dublin factory has produced squillions of bottles of the stuff – Americans drink 13 million litres of it a year.

Gregg Wallace booms and gurns his way round the lengthy process (it takes three years just to distil the whiskey), learning about grist, mash and wash as well as bombarding us with the usual mega-statistics. Meanwhile, Cherry Healey investigates aperitifs and Ruth Goodman gets in the spirit. JR

Miss Scarlet and the Duke

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA The Duke is in irascible mood, spurned by his superintendent but forced to attend a police function, and now interrupted by Eliza's loyal housekeeper, Ivy. But she gives him real cause for concern: Eliza has disappeared. Could this be linked to her discovery last week of the old casebook of her late father, Henry? What ensues lacks a little ambition but at least it thrusts our argumentative will-they-won't-they pair together and brings Henry more into the picture.

Miss Scarlet is a curious peasouper of a drama, with its punky, Peaky titles and Guy-Ritchie-Sherlock-Holmes fisticuffs, but its heart lies in its proud, pioneering heroine, and it would do better to focus on her. MARK BRAXTON

Francis Bacon: a Brush with Violence

iPlayer (expires today)

Francis Bacon was a great artist, one of the most revered of the postwar period in Britain. But in real life he was a gobby, unpleasant drunk. Or was he? In a film first shown in 2017, admirers and associates including Marianne Faithfull, Terence Stamp and Damien Hirst uncloak the complex, vulnerable man behind the myth, and the demons that informed his often troubling work. Also on iPlayer: Francis Bacon: Fragments of a Portrait, first shown in 1966!

KIDS' CHOICE

Holly Hobbie

5pm CBBC, iPlayer

A new episode of the drama about a budding singer/songwriter in a small American town. Today, a giddy Holly (Ruby Jay) writes a new song to perform at her audition for the town musical. But basing it on her own romantic life means it becomes a distraction from the task at hand. JACK SEALE

Notorious

7.00pm Talking Pictures TV

An undercover agent persuades the troubled daughter of a German spy to betray a group of Nazi collaborators in postwar Rio. Brilliant and visually stunning Hitchcock thriller starring Cary Grant, Ingrid Bergman and Claude Rains. See page 29

HAPPY EATER
Paul Hollywood gets a taste of Japanese life

Paul Hollywood Eats Japan

9.00pm C4

REALITY New series It's not the most original observation from Bake Off's Paul Hollywood – surely he won't find bread in Japan, as "it's all about rice and noodles, isn't it?" Of course it isn't, as Hollywood rapidly discovers in an eatologue (as opposed to travelogue) where he scoffs his way around Tokyo.

His guide is a cheerful young comedian who ticks off Hollywood for his lack of manners – in Japan people don't eat in the street and they don't point with chopsticks.

There's a whiff of "aren't the Japanese amusingly odd with their little quirks?", but if you can get past that, and narrator Rebecca Front who is lumbered with the most annoyingly glib script, you might learn something.

Such as that the gift-giving of fresh fruit is stupendously expensive, that there are four museums in Japan dedicated to the "cup noodle" and that there are bakeries. Good ones, too. AG

New to rent this week

Escape from Pretoria ★★★ Virgin Movies/DVD
Director Francis Annan's suspenseful, true-life thriller pulls few punches. Set during Apartheid-era South Africa in the early 1970s, it stars Daniel Radcliffe as political prisoner Tim Jenkin, who is arrested for leaflet "bombing" and sentenced to 12 years in a maximum security prison. There he begins plotting his escape alongside two fellow inmates. While the film is shaped in the image of other prison-break movies such as 1956's A Man Escaped, it doesn't quite reach the nail-biting heights of the genre's best. STEPHEN CARTY

Southern hell

Grand Isle ★★ 10.00pm Sky Premiere
Set in a broad-brush American South in the 1980s, this mad gumbo of a thriller opens with Kelsey Grammer's "well I do declare" cop questioning a bloody suspect (Luke Benward). Flashbacks tell the story of Benward's encounter with gun-happy Nicolas Cage and seductive wife KaDee Strickland, but this is a genre movie that's unsure of what it wants to be: southern gothic, horror or police procedural? Of the cast, Cage is reliably great, and his gonzo acting style almost holds it all together. STEVE MORRISSEY

Keep calm and...

ITV Player FREE TO VIEW
Things have taken a cheeky turn on ITV's catch-up service, with a number of the classic Carry Ons now available to stream. Barbara Windsor's energetic stretching provides one of the more eye-catching moments of Carry On Camping, and there are more sniggers to be had in Matron, Up the Khyber, Girls and more. JOSH WINNING

SEW GOOD
Joe Lycett, Esme Young and Patrick Grant are in a holiday mood

PICK OF THE DAY The Great British Sewing Bee 9.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Joe Lycett's eye-wateringly jazzy shirt is very appropriate because the second week's theme is holidays (remember those?). The first challenge for the remaining 11 amateur sewers is to make a pair of palazzo pants (Lycett's nickname at school, apparently), an exercise in pattern-matching that defeats a couple of them. Then, before you can say "I'm off to the beach", they're given two towels to transform into a new outfit. They can't use any other pieces of material, but Esme Young tells them they "can go wild in haberdashery", which some of them certainly do.

Their men's holiday shirts are pretty wild, too, although it's impossible to get anything past Patrick Grant. Even the clever ruse of getting one of the attractive male models to wear his shirt unbuttoned doesn't distract him from picking up the garment's faults. "So let's find out who's a beach boy and who's a beached whale," quips Lycett at the end. Previews never include the judges' decision, but I think it's obvious who'll be going home. JANE RACKHAM

The Repair Shop

8.00pm BBC1 (7.30pm Scotland)

ENTERTAINMENT Two lamps, each with a wonderful history, are brought into the barn for restoration. One is an old miner's lamp, which saved the life of its original owner when the roof fell in at the Welsh colliery where he worked; the other is a large lamp with beautiful stained-glass panels that hung outside a family-owned Worcestershire chemist for generations. "That's brilliant," says the current owner of the miner's lamp – absolutely seriously – when she sees it lit for the first time.

Meanwhile, across the barn, upholsterer Sonnaz Nooranvary is working on a dusty, rug-covered armchair, but it's one of the other experts who unlocks the secrets of the chair... JR

Absolutely India: Mancs in Mumbai

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY New series This takes a little bit of Who Do You Think You Are? and embeds it in a laddish but likeable travelogue. Actor Ryan Thomas (formerly of Corrie and winner of Celebrity Big Brother) and brothers Adam (Emmerdale and I'm a Celebrity) and Scott (Love Island) have never been to India, despite the fact that they're a quarter Indian: their grandfather migrated from Mumbai to Manchester in 1947.

Now the siblings set out to explore their heritage in Mumbai, alongside their father, Dougie, and a film crew, who capture them choking on fiery street food, remonstrating with taxi drivers and joking with kids at their grandad's school. DAVID BUTCHER

DRAMA As Free's mournful Oh I Wept plays on the soundtrack, we learn the nature of the overarching tragedy of sinister tech boss Forest's life. So at least we can take an educated guess as to what his eventual, monstrous, plans for his Devs project actually are. We get a clue when the tech team uses a dead mouse in an experiment...

The episode (there's another tomorrow at 9pm) starts to fill in some of this portentous drama's yawning gaps (about time, too) when we see how Forest (Nick Offerman) came to recruit his right-hand woman, the icy Katie (Alison Pill). And Silent Witness's Liz Carr makes a guest appearance as a quantum physics lecturer. ALISON GRAHAM

Save Me Too

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA One of writer/creator Lennie James's great skills is his ability to make every satellite to his main character, Nelly, exist in his or her own world. Like sex offender Melon (Stephen Graham, viscerally brilliant as always) and his young, pregnant, frightened wife Bernie. They must face being parents in a world that has already judged Melon and found him very badly wanting.

Then there's damaged Grace (a heartbreaking Olive Gray), rescued from her traffickers but, since the events of the previous episode, now feeling forgotten, abandoned and angry. In an episode directed with great sensitivity and skill by Coky Giedroyc, she goes to extreme lengths to attract attention. AG

Our empty Easter egg boxes have now been binned and taken off for recycling, but the rationing of Emmerdale (7pm ITV) means that the villagers are only just now heading out on an egg hunt.

The occasion gives clandestine lovers Jamie and Belle (Alexander Lincoln and Eden Taylor-Draper, pictured) the opportunity to meet up with each other and first deny and then declare their love for the umpteenth time – but little do they realise that they're now being observed by Jamie's wife Andrea, who's hiding behind a tree. Honestly, Andrea, I wouldn't bother trying out for a career with MI5. There have been playground games of 40–40 with more tension.

Elsewhere, bent copper DI Malone is explaining all about a dangerous new job that he wants reluctant underlings Cain, Will and Billy to do for him. The trio can't help but feel apprehensive about what lies ahead, which suggests that the upcoming task will have higher stakes than Andrea's spot of woodland subterfuge. DAVID BROWN

Run

9.00pm Sky Comedy

COMEDY DRAMA This episode is called *F**k*, but that's a bit of a tease. It could easily be called *Exp*sition*, as we get some useful backstory into what's brought former lovers Ruby and Billy (Merritt Wever and Domhnall Gleeson) to Chicago, negotiating with a hotel receptionist to get a room.

It could also be called *H*nesty*, as our pair are forced into confessing their real motivation for responding to the RUN text message.

A third person enters the story – Archie Panjabi plays a nice Englishwoman who helps out Ruby during a dressing-room panic. But my favourite scene is small but perfect: just watch Ruby devour an ice-cream cone as she waits for Billy. Now that's what I call g*sto. GILL CRAWFORD

Mister Winner

SITCOM Once you get on the wavelength of this calamity-based comedy, it grows on you. Luckless Leslie Winner is a more complicated creation than he seems at first, and actor Spencer Jones makes him more than a clueless clown.

It's the day of Leslie's wedding to long-suffering Jemma (Lucy Pearman) and all he has to do is get from the hotel to the venue in his suit, on time, without mishap. We know something will go excruciatingly wrong, but the way writer Matt Morgan toys with his creations then ambushes them is nicely controlled – and at several points tonight, properly, stupidly funny. The good news is, it's set up nicely for another series. DAVID BUTCHER

Code 404

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY New series High-concept cop-buddy comedy sounds like a tricky genre to pull off, but this series from Daniel Peak (Not Going Out) about a detective brought back from the dead as a not wholly efficient AI prototype succeeds by not taking the concept too seriously, focusing instead on the relationship at its heart.

The cast is excellent: Daniel Mays plays the cop killed in the line of duty, and Stephen Graham is his disbelieving partner, who started a relationship with Mays's wife (Anna Maxwell Martin) in the year since his death. It's silly and broad-brush comedy – Mays's elastic features are hilarious – but winningly so. The full series is available as a box set on Sky and Now TV. DAVID CRAWFORD

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Ben Building: Mussolini, Monuments and Modernism

iPlayer (expires today)

A bold, densely knowledgeable lecture, first given by Jonathan Meades on BBC4 in 2016. Behold the architecture of Italy under Benito Mussolini, a dictator not quite ruthless enough to squash cultural development, and not quite hated enough for the best constructions of his era to be torn down later. As usual with Meades, every minute has an astringently original thought.

KIDS' CHOICE

Big Hero 6

5pm Disney XD (Sky 611, Virgin 707), Disney+

Series two of the animated series, spinning off from the 2014 film, continues. Today, while Supersonic Stu breaks his gran, Supersonic Sue, out of prison, Wasabi is given a tricky task by Granville: he's to fill in for an absent teacher, but his fear of public speaking makes that easier said than done. Meanwhile, a tough battle with the Supersonics looms. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

You Only Live Twice

8.00pm ITV4

Sean Connery's 007 goes on a mission to Japan to take on crime syndicate Spectre and its evil boss Ernst Stavro Blofeld (Donald Pleasence).

DEX FACTOR

Stumptown

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA New series This new drama, set in Portland, Oregon, and based on a graphic novel by Greg Rucka, has a striking opening: two guys are in a car discussing coffee while a woman locked in the boot seeks to fight her way out with the help of a fire extinguisher.

It's fast and entertaining, and sets the scene for what's to follow, although don't expect comic-book heroics. The woman is Dex Parios (Cobie Smulders, from How I Met Your Mother and The Avengers), a military veteran with PTSD, a gambling problem and a brother with Down's syndrome. How she got into the boot of that car is explained, as she agrees, with misgivings, to help the Native American owner of a local casino locate her missing granddaughter.

There's a good supporting cast – including New Girl's Jake Johnson as Dex's barkeep bestie – and Smulders is impressive as she stumbles in and out of trouble. GC

Rory's Way ★★★ 10.00pm Sky Premiere

In this screen version of José Luis Sampedro's novel The Etruscan Smile, an ornery Scotsman travels to San Francisco to rebuild bridges with his son, then forms a life-changing bond with his baby grandson. The book is about a man from southern Italy visiting family in Milan, but the Scottish twist in this adaptation reveals the universal resonance of the material. It also provides Brian Cox with a tailor-made role as the title character, whose certainty begins to fail him as mortality looms. TREVOR JOHNSTON

You couldn't make it up!

Capricorn One ★★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

Did the Americans really land on the Moon, or did they fake it in a TV studio? That's the premise of this ingenious thriller, new to C5's catch-up service, in which three men are bound for Mars until there's a technical hitch on the launch pad. The astronauts end up faking the mission to save face, but there's a bigger hurdle to overcome when the space capsule (which went without them) burns up on re-entry. Elliott Gould plays the nosy reporter who smells a story in a film that grips all the way to the finale. ADRIAN TURNER

Farewell to Ip Man

Ip Man 4: the Finale ★★★ iTunes

Donnie Yen bows out as real-life kung fu legend Ip Man in this fan-pleasing sign-off, in which Master Ip travels to San Francisco at the invitation of his former student Bruce Lee. There's plenty of pulse-pounding action to be had, while the screenplay highlights the racism directed at the Chinese in the US. JAMIE HEALY

CHECKING IN

PICK OF THE DAY The Real Marigold Hotel 9.00pm BBC1

REALITY "I'm not what you'd call an intrepid explorer," says Barbara Dickson as she nervously joins seven other celebrities of a certain age on the flimsy premise of checking out whether India would be a good place to retire. But she seems game for new experiences as they settle into a glorious haveli in Puducherry (or Pondi as the locals call it) on India's eastern coast.

It's too early to decide who's going to delight and who's going to irritate, although Chuckle Brother Paul Elliott is missing his wife even before the plane has touched down at Chennai, while Duncan Bannatyne goes walkabout at the bus station to the consternation of the others – I'm not sure he's a team player. Meanwhile, eccentric Zandra Rhodes adds a zing of colour and Buddhist Susie Blake enthusiastically embraces everything from ayurvedic medicine to tuk-tuk rides.

It's as familiar as a pair of old flip-flops, but at least introducing new celebs each time keeps it fresh and entertaining. JANE RACKHAM

DIY SOS: Homes for Veterans

8.05pm BBC1

PROPERTY Four and a half years is a long time in the life of a member of the royal family. Back in October 2015 we saw Princes William and Harry team up to joke about with Nick Knowles as they joined in the biggest DIY SOS build to date. That's not going to happen again now, is it?

Anyway, here's another chance to see Knowles and his team – not to mention innumerable volunteers – in Newton Heath, north Manchester, where they'd taken over a street of run-down houses, their plan being to convert the empty properties for homeless ex-service personnel. It was a tough project, but one the princes were keen to get involved with. Part two next week. GILL CRAWFORD

Spring at Jimmy's Farm

8.05pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series Lucky Jimmy Doherty. Here we all are, cooped up in our living rooms with, if we are very lucky, only our patios and gardens to give us a glimpse of the outdoors, while he has a whole farm to roam around in.

But of course, life on Britain's farms must go on and indeed does go on, as this is spring, the very time of birth and renewal in the countryside. Doherty is offering us pale and stir-crazy sofa-sitters a vicarious bit of fresh air and a welcome change of scenery.

He's on his Suffolk farm and intends to show us how his pigs and sheep are getting along, while taking us around his woodland and animal park. ALISON GRAHAM

Devs

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA The fact that everyone talks in riddles in Alex Garland's dystopian drama ("Does anything ever happen for no reason?" "Why did you just blink?") isn't helped by the fact that most of these conversations take place in semi-darkness.

So prepare to peer through the gloom as software engineer Lily has a showdown with her mad Messianic boss Forest and his terrifyingly cold girlfriend Katie, the boss of the Devs project.

By now it's clear why Forest (Nick Offerman) is pursuing his quest to look back into the past as a means of altering the future, and if you can't wait until next week's final double bill, all episodes are on iPlayer. AG

First Dates Hotel

9.00pm C4

REALITY Now that Italy (like most places) is off limits to us, it's especially nice to return to that beautiful hotel in the hills near Naples where nobody worries about social distancing. In fact, in some cases, the matchmaking is so spot-on, it's the complete opposite.

This week we meet 75-year-old Alexandria, who's lived a little and likes to talk about it. She wants a Sean Connery lookalike, although, of course, she's met the real one. Meanwhile by the pool, two women recognise each other. Privately, each admits she fancies the other, although both are at the hotel to find a man. It makes for an interesting – by which I mean awkward – situation in the restaurant. JR

Arthur Fowler (Bill Treacher, right) became Walford's least likely sex symbol in 1993 thanks to his secret affair with Christine Hewitt (played by Elizabeth Power, one-time wife of Michael Aspel). Their first torrid tryst was labelled "Bonk of the Year" in the tabloids, but we're now at the stage in Classic EastEnders (1pm Drama) where it's all gone sour, and Pauline has lamped her cheating husband with a frying pan. Now, with an aching noggin, Arthur is fretting because he's banned from seeing son Martin, while Michelle is confronting Christine about wrecking her parents' marriage.

In Classic Coronation Street (2.50pm, 3.20pm ITV3), episodes from July 1995 see Roy Barraclough return as crafty Alec Gilroy after three years away. What I always enjoyed about Barraclough's performance was the way he'd make a cigarette quiver in his mouth when Alec was under pressure. It must have taken a lot of practice to perfect that flourish. DAVID BROWN

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Soup Cans & Superstars: How Pop Art Changed the World

iPlayer (expires today)
Alastair Sooke's art history programmes are always sharp and nimble: this 2015 effort sweeps you through the basics of pop art in one concentrated hit, from its origins in Britain in the 1950s (not New York in the 1960s) to its lasting influence today, sometimes in unexpected places. Along the way are many spiky insights, and contributors including Peter Blake, above right.

KIDS' CHOICE

Kiri & Lou

9.10am CBeebies, iPlayer
A brand-new episode of the gently funny stop-motion animation about prehistoric creatures. Today, Lou wakes up to find himself on a lily pad in the middle of the lake. He's very scared to be all on his own at first, but before too long his Calm Inner Voice comes to the rescue.

JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Lincoln

9.00pm Film4
Another film, another Oscar for Daniel Day-Lewis in Steven Spielberg's superlative, yet stately, biopic, focusing on the American president's final months as he battles to get slavery abolished and bring an end to the brutal Civil War. See page 31

Brooklyn Nine-Nine

9.00pm E4

SITCOM Ding, dong, the witch is dead! The battles of insults between taciturn Captain Raymond Holt (Andre Braugher) and his nemesis Madeline Wuntch (Kyra Sedgwick) have been a regular highlight of Brooklyn Nine-Nine, so it's no surprise that Holt has no qualms about speaking ill of the recently deceased after she apparently dies.

But when he's asked to give Wuntch's eulogy in front of the crème de la crème of the NYPD, can Holt restrain his impulses in order to give her a good send-off? And given how fond she was of dastardly schemes, can he be so sure that Wuntch doesn't have one last fiendish surprise for him in her final moments?

HUW FULLERTON

Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY For this episode, first shown in 2018, Kermode delivers a lecture on science fiction that, as usual, is deeply knowledgeable while also being admirably light on its feet. Kermode is equally at home talking about the populist (Back to the Future) as the obscure (Soviet-era Russian sci-fi, or 1970s Afro-futurism).

One sequence reminded me of Rock Family Trees, as Kermode charts how Alfred Hitchcock's Vertigo helped to inspire experimental French film La Jetée, remade as Twelve Monkeys; while La Jetée also influenced the Terminator films. And what is his favourite sci-fi film of all? 1970s environmental fable Silent Running.

DAVID BUTCHER

Breeders

10.00pm, 10.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM This funny/painful look at the dark side of parenting has kept a fine balance between the fun and the pain. Now the final double bill tips fully towards the parts of being a parent that are no easy matter to joke about, though Breeders still manages.

Paul gets a work opportunity just as Ally's job in Germany is taking off. Then they're blindsided by something that leaves all comedy in the hands of the supporting cast.

When that cast includes Patrick Baladi as a gloriously craven boss and Alun Armstrong as an out-of-his-depth granddad, we're in safe hands. The writing (Simon Blackwell) and direction (Chris Addison) are immaculate, too. More series, please.

DAVID BUTCHER

Gangs of London

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Scenes tonight include executions with a stun-gun designed for cattle, a high-end gay orgy and the most almighty shootout involving assault rifles, grenades, gas canisters, the lot. This is the way Gangs of London works: it has sombre scenes where various flavours of gangster talk about shipments and loyalty and stuff and then another mad set-piece kicks off. But we get our money's worth.

As of last week's dénouement we know more about cool operator Elliot (Sope Dirisu) and what his game is. But in the big picture it's still mostly Sean (Joe Cole) threatening to avenge the death of his father, while Ed (Lucian Msamati) calms things down with his weapons-grade gravitas. Also coming into focus is burly traveller boss Kinney (Mark Lewis Jones). Yes, his son pulled the trigger on Sean's dad, but surely they can move on? DAVID BUTCHER

AGAINST THE WALL
Sean Wallace (Joe Cole) has vengeance in mind

8.05 Spring at Jimmy's Farm

RT New series. Ep 1. In any other year, as spring arrives on Jimmy Doherty's farm, his 280-acre park would be teeming with families, eager to see his collection of exotic animals. But 2020 is no ordinary year, and while there are no guests, his animals still need caring for. This documentary, filmed by a small crew, offers a unique insight into how Jimmy and his team are managing. In the first episode, lambs, goats and reindeer are all due to give birth, a camel needs to find its mate and Jimmy builds hides and nesting boxes to keep an eye on what the badgers, birds and fish are getting up to. See page 92. Executive producers Ross Harper and Jane Rogerson Series editor Richard Park (S) (AD) (HD)

Branching out

A Monster Calls ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This adaptation of Patrick Ness's children's novel tells the story of a bullied 12-year-old (Lewis MacDougall) coping with a terminally ill mother (Felicity Jones), an absent father (Toby Kebbell) and a cold grandmother (Sigourney Weaver) in a northern English town. He is offered respite from his grief by the parables told by a tree (voiced by Liam Neeson) that creaks into life. The film is hard-going but never patronising, and Ness's own hand on the screenplay ensures the story's emotional core remains intact. ANDREW COLLINS

Teenage strife

Mickey and the Bear ★★★★★

10.10pm Sky Premiere

A family tie becomes an inescapable burden in this humane drama from first-time director Annabelle Attanasio. Camila Morrone plays the titular teen stuck in Anaconda, Montana, with her ex-Marine dad (James Badge Dale), whose ghosts and addictions threaten to consume them both. Things get dark as we're brought agonisingly close to an unenviable predicament, but the lush cinematography captures every detail of Morrone's nuanced performance. EMMA SIMMONDS

Now on Netflix

Sixteen Candles

★★★ Netflix

John Hughes made his directorial debut with this sharp comedy, starring Molly Ringwald as the teen whose parents forget her 16th birthday. With its keen ear for teenspeak, the film established Hughes as the master of the 1980s teen pic. The Breakfast Club and Ferris Bueller's Day Off are also on Netflix.

Most live events have been postponed. Schedules were still being updated as Radio Times went to press and are subject to change

FOOT TAPPERS

PICK OF THE DAY The Shadows at 60 9.30pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY If you're hoping for TV-sets-through-the-air tales of wild excess, this is plainly not the rock-doc for you. The Shads' clean-cut journey to and through an apparently small window of popportunity is one of crisp DJs, tea and sandwiches, and a twee triangular dance. It's also a quietly uplifting story of friendship and staying power, of "simple melodies, beautifully played, that everyone could learn," as Pink Floyd's David Gilmour puts it.

Former frontman Cliff Richard recalls the Fender Strat that kicked things off, while founder members Hank Marvin and Bruce Welch talk us through the twang, from their first number one (Apache in 1960) to their last. And if you want grit, the Who's Pete Townshend's observations are amusingly direct.

But there's so much more to this: Summer Holiday, Eurovision and the still-stunning 70s reinvention of Marvin, Welch and Farrar, right up to the present. (Sadly nothing about miniature immortality in Gerry and Sylvia Anderson's Thunderbirds Are Go.) The boys have every right to look comfortable in their anecdotalage, and Hank's humble tears at the memory of one pin-drop gig moment could just set you off, too. A Wonderful Land for sure. MARK BRAXTON

The World's Most Scenic Railway Journeys

8.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL Although Tony Robinson's train-travelling series has inexplicably pulled over into a siding, railway fans should be mollified by this 187-mile trip across Scotland because it passes through some glorious landscapes. We board the train at Inverness, passing through Aviemore, Pitlochry and Fife, before crossing the Forth Bridge to arrive eventually in Edinburgh.

There are more facts and figures than there are in celeb travelogues (and no stage-managed chats with fellow passengers), but what's really good is that the programme isn't scared to leave a few pauses in the narration so that we can actually enjoy the view. JANE RACKHAM

Modern Family

8.30pm Sky 1

SITCOM Mitch and Cam are saying goodbye to their old house – literally in Cam's case: "Goodbye, drawer dedicated to batteries and takeout menus!" he trills, sadly. "Goodbye, wall-dent from when we thought Lily was a trombone prodigy!"

Mitch is less dramatic about it all. Or is he? When Gloria steps in (she's their unlikely estate agent) to help him get closure, Jesse Tyler Ferguson as Mitch gets a glorious solo moment involving the Dirty Dancing theme.

Elsewhere, in the last episode before a two-part finale, Phil and Claire reluctantly mix with older grandparents. "He's such a gentleman," one woman says of her husband. "Always opens the bathtub door for me." DAVID BUTCHER

Blood

9.00pm Channel 5

DRAMA Jim Hogan must be the most luckless patriarch in television drama history, directly involved in not just one but two deaths of close family members.

As this torrid and very gloomy melodrama ends with a double bill, Jim (Adrian Dunbar) must confront what happened to his son-in-law Paul, while his ailing daughter Fiona has to face up to the reality of her horrible marriage as she hatches an escape plan.

The second instalment is told in one huge flashback as we go through the events of a particularly grim and tragic day. Brace yourselves for a lot of misery and fury as the family implodes.

ALISON GRAHAM

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA There's a sinister hook tonight when a blank musical greeting card is left beside the grave of a young woman. Its discovery opens a sad and ultimately disturbing story about the parents of a 16-year-old who went missing four years ago.

The loss has torn them apart, with the mother resigning herself to the fact that her daughter is most likely dead – hence the grave – while the father is determined she is still alive and spends his days putting up missing posters around Turin.

Yet again it's a crime of passion played out to mournful strings, which Valeria solves with ruthless efficiency while ignoring her own sad family situation. DAVID CRAWFORD

The coercive control storyline in Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) has resonated with those who have found themselves in similar circumstances to Yasmeen (Shelley King). And with the nation currently being asked to stay at home, there will be Corrie viewers who now find themselves trapped with the very people who are abusing them. Certainly, the National Domestic Abuse helpline has had a spike in calls, with figures published earlier this month revealing an increase of 25 per cent since the lockdown began. A quick warning, then, that events at No 6 see a crescendo tonight after Geoff (Ian Bartholomew) forces his wife to wear an overtly sexy dress to a party at the Bistro before cruelly revealing, once they return home, that he originally bought the frock for one of his many escorts. As Yasmeen grabs at a wine bottle, a struggle ensues – all of which results in Geoff left slumped on the floor. Has the evildoer paid the ultimate price for his actions? DAVID BROWN

Classic Albums

from 9.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Classic Albums is as reliable a brand in television terms as Rolls-Royce is to the motor industry. The track-by-track treatment is bliss for music fans, and tonight's back-catalogue quartet are all strong entries. In the first, dissecting Elton John's Goodbye Yellow Brick Road from 1973, it feels as important to hear from the man who wrote "You can't plant me in your penthouse" (Bernie Taupin) as it does the composer of that mammoth segue from Funeral for a Friend to Love Lies Bleeding

It's followed at 10pm by Phil Collins's till-ringing behemoth Face Value from 1979, then at 11pm by Meat Loaf's 1,000cc opera Bat out of Hell from 1977 and finally at midnight by Def Leppard's 1987 LP Hysteria. MB

Bulletproof

10.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA You might remember that back in the first episode, Tanner, the senior cop played with her usual cool by Lindsey Coulson, quietly skimmed off ten grand of the money the NCA seized from the Markides drugs bust.

Or you might not – it was many weeks ago. Having tucked away that storyline the writers dig it out just as Tanner's unit is under scrutiny because of another misdeed filed away earlier, the one where Bishop (Noel Clarke) slept with a junior member of the Markides clan. "Actions lead to consequences, bro," Pike (Ashley Walters) reminds him helpfully, in an episode that detours from the main plot for a look at how law-abiding teenagers get drawn into violence. DC

Great Guitar Riffs at the BBC

10.30pm BBC4

MUSIC The fact that Friday nights have become a scheduling ghetto where we can bathe in bygone pop heroics is no bad thing. Among the rockumentaries tonight is this blaring Marshall stack of an archive compilation, originally a companion piece to The Joy of the Guitar Riff but a perfectly good watch on its own.

There's an enjoyable change of gear halfway through when, after the crunching hard-rock riffs of the 1960s and 70s (Cream playing Sunshine of Your Love at their final gig; AC/DC on TOTP and so on), we arrive in 1983 and Johnny Marr's jangling intro to Hand in Glove, over which Morrissey mildly informs the world, "The sun shines out of our behinds..." DAVID BUTCHER

The best of streaming and catch-up

Upload

Amazon Prime

Greg Daniels, co-creator of Parks and Recreation and the superlative US remake of The Office, is behind this harder-edged but impressively realised new comedy drama. It's roughly Black Mirror meets The Good Place: in a near-ish future of self-driving cars and drone police, a disaffected employee of a company running digital after-lives for the dead bonds with one of her clients, who's arrived by accident and questions his new (virtual) reality. But his artificial heaven has a glitch.

KIDS' CHOICE

Diary of a Future President

Disney+

A new episode of the cute drama about a middle-school girl who's facing a lot of ordinary problems, even if we know she has an extraordinary future ahead. This week, Elena (Tess Romero, above right) wants to go to the dance with her crush, but he'd rather take an older girl. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

2.30pm Talking Pictures TV

A wrongfully accused man hides out with a former sweetheart and her law professor tenant in this classy 1942 comedy drama starring Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman. See page 31

SURPRISE!

Will Mum (Tamsin Greig) and Dad observe the ground rules?

Friday Night Dinner

10.00pm C4

SITCOM Exciting times: Adam and Jonny are bringing their girlfriends over for dinner. First, though, with the girls waiting in the car outside, they must remind their parents of the ground rules.

These include no telling of baby stories or kissing on the head (Jackie) and no talking about the time he saw a man kill a turkey with a brick (Martin) or discussing Britain's waterways (also Martin, who is of the opinion that Britain's waterways are "criminally underused").

With that agreed, the girls – both called Lucy – can be allowed into the house and writer Robert Popper is free to detune the sanity of what follows in painful stages. Why, for instance, is Martin being so weird and secretly sieving the chicken soup? It sets up the awful unravelling, but for once it all builds to an uplifting finish. Who would have thought?

Pure movie magic

Once upon a Time... in Hollywood

9.00pm Sky Premiere

Quentin Tarantino returns to the LA of Reservoir Dogs and Pulp Fiction with this love letter to showbiz. In 1969, a TV star (Leonardo DiCaprio) struggles with his dwindling fame alongside his stunt-double buddy (Brad Pitt), while Sharon Tate (Margot Robbie) tries to make it as an actress. Mention of Tate's name might suggest a tale centred on the Manson family, but they're only one component of an audacious film that sees Tarantino firing on all cylinders. TERRY STAUNTON

The Assistant

The sentencing of disgraced movie mogul Harvey Weinstein casts a long shadow over this powerful fiction, in which Julia Garner plays an assistant at a New York film house who performs tasks for her boss that go beyond the secretarial. Written and directed by Kitty Green, the film alludes to abuse by a heard-but-not-seen CEO, and artfully conjures a fear-filled office atmosphere. The Assistant cannot help but resonate at a time when Hollywood is finally confronting its long-ignored problems. ANDREW COLLINS

This triumphant sequel sees our ursine hero framed for the theft of a valuable book, taking the audience on an adventure that involves prison, police chases and a hatful of marmalade sandwiches. Hilarious moments abound in a story that brims with quick wit. JAMES LUXFORD

COMIC GENIUS

"Tim had the audience eating out of his hand," says Graeme Garden.

"They just loved that vulnerability and appearance of fear in him."

My dear friend Tim

Graeme Garden says farewell to Tim Brooke-Taylor, his comedy partner since the 1960s – and a friend for life

THEY MET, NATURALLY, on stage. Arriving at Cambridge University in the early 60s to read medicine, Graeme Garden fancied his chances in the Footlights theatrical society. The student in charge of auditions was Tim Brooke-Taylor, one year his senior. "I was in awe of him," 77-year-old Garden recalls. "I'd already seen him on stage with John Cleese, Miriam Margolyes and Bill Oddie. They all looked so professional and cool. I knew they all wrote sketches, so I did something different: I drew pictures on a big bit of paper and did a running commentary, and they all laughed, so I got in. It was life-changing."

It certainly was. Garden, along with Brooke-Taylor and Oddie, was to become a bona fide national treasure in the wildy popular satirical triumvirate The Goodies, whose show ran on BBC TV from 1970 to 1980, and then on ITV from 1981 to 82. Their partnership on radio was even longer, with Brooke-Taylor and Garden as the original comedians on Radio 4's panel game I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue, from its inception in 1972 until the present day. The 73rd series was due to run next month, with all but two recordings having been completed before the lockdown, and Garden and Brooke-Taylor as ever-present as always. As RT went to press the BBC was considering when to broadcast these shows.

When we speak, Garden is still struggling to process what has happened to his greatest friend, workmate and inspiration. Tim Brooke-Taylor died from Covid-19 on Easter Day, aged 79. "He seemed to be getting better. They were taking him off the ventilator and he was due to be discharged.

Then... he was lost. It's so cruel for his family. I don't think they were able to say goodbye properly." Did he? "No. I didn't manage to speak to him. By the time we realised how much he was in danger, he was unconscious. There has been such an outpouring of love on Twitter, hasn't there?"

AMONG THE TWITTER tributes came warm words from Stephen Fry, Rory Bremner and Eric Idle, among others. His gentle wit and perfect timing were revered by the stand-up community. Much of the magic in I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue sprang from the juxtaposition of the veteran Brooke-Taylor with younger comedians like Jack Dee, Jo Brand and Susan Calman. "The next generation of comics all loved him," says Garden. "They found it was a great joy to watch him work and see how much the audience loved him, how funny he was. When Tim got into one of his set pieces on the radio, you would just sit back because you had the best seat in the house."

A special moment from the show? "He always used to insist on doing the song rounds. He would take a hit from the Top 20, usually by a

PICK OF THE WEEK

Miriam and Youssef

Wednesday 11.30am BBC World Service

It might just be time for a big meaty drama, and here comes the World Service ready to oblige, with a very fine ten-part story rooted in the founding of the state of Israel.

To say that this is a challenging moment in history to try to fictionalise is an understatement, but the writer, Steve Waters, goes about it with both empathy and conviction, and there are impressive performances and production values, with an original score by Glenn Sharp and a soundscape by Caleb Knightley. Waters adds a layer of veracity by introducing real-life figures into the story, including Israel's first prime minister, David Ben-Gurion (below), played by Elliot Levey.

The central characters are a Jewish girl and a Palestinian Arab boy, teenagers when we first meet them in 1917, their lives destined to intersect in the place they both call home.

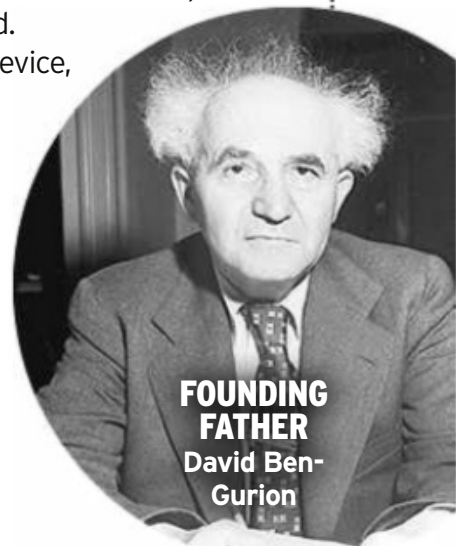

Miriam (Ava Merson O'Brien) arrives on the shores of Palestine filled with hope for a better life than the one she has left behind in Russia. Her mother is not so sure. "Not a shekel to our names in an alien land," she despairs.

The relationship between Youssef (Rafi Essex) and his father has its own tensions. The boy is bright, but when a British civil servant – occupying a role as part of the British mandate – arranges for him to get a scholarship to a good school, the help is not entirely welcomed.

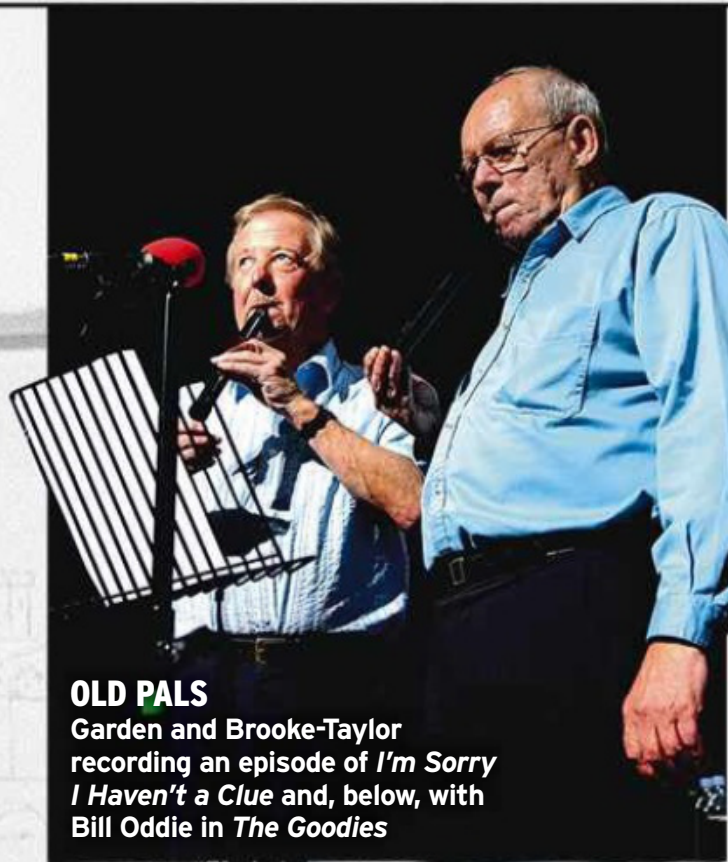

As a useful framing device, the adult Miriam and Youssef – played by Shani Erez and Amir el Masry – look back on their younger selves, and if there are times when you notice the exposition in the dialogue, I think it counts as a good fault given how much clarity the background to this particular story requires.

The moment when we hear the contents of the Balfour letter – "The British government view with favour the establishment of a national home for the Jewish people" – is highly effective.

Waters was the writer of The Fall of the Shah, a big World Service hit last year, and Miriam and Youssef deserves to be another one.

OLD PALS

Garden and Brooke-Taylor recording an episode of I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue and, below, with Bill Oddie in The Goodies

in rivers, jumping off cliffs and, of course, their three-person 'trandem'.

Garden explains the genesis of the show. "We were fond of silent-movie comedy and cartoons like Tom and Jerry or Road Runner, and we tried to get that feeling out of it." The fraternal eccentricity was the same off-camera as on. "We never had a row. The magic number three meant you always had a casting vote."

I tell him how, growing up, my family would watch The Goodies together on our black-and-white TV, crying with laughter. "It became a show that families could enjoy together. Across the generations. It got labelled as a kids' show and in Australia it went out at 6pm, but that meant that a lot of Australians grew up remembering it."

DID HE MIND that Monty Python's Flying Circus was regarded as a bit cooler? "No, the Pythons earned their success, especially with the films culminating in The Life of Brian, which is one of the funniest films of all time," says Garden generously. "It would be churlish to dismiss our fans. People who really got the show understood the satirical side. The kids enjoyed the falling over bits."

What was Brooke-Taylor's particular contribution? "Tim would get the most hair-raising stunts and the most uncomfortable costumes. Amazingly, he was only injured once. It was when we were sitting on the bike, which was raised about six feet off the ground on wires, and we were supposed to be flying underneath a balloon. Well, Tim got his hand trapped between the wire and under the bike. The on-set nurse was French. I remember Tim telling her that we were 'the Bon-Bons'."

Brooke-Taylor remained a huge name on the radio throughout his career. "Tim had a special relationship with the audience. John Cleese always said he was "very good at playing frightened", and that was true. Tim had the audience eating out of his hand. They just loved that vulnerability and appearance of fear in him."

'Night after night I would hear waves of laughter'

What does his oldest friend think Brooke-Taylor's legacy will be? "Well, at the moment I'm struggling to understand what has really happened," admits Garden. "But I think his legacy will be that he was such fun. Night after night I would watch him go through his paces and I would hear waves of laughter coming over. It was just pure joy." ROSIE MILLARD girl band, because he had this comically high voice. He would have to learn a brand-new song each week. He was courageous and I admired that greatly, because I would go for a much safer option. You would see him the night before, in the car park of the hotel wherever we were staying, sitting in his car, listening to the CD and learning the song, making sure he had it right."

They never intended to be national treasures, but once on stage with Brooke-Taylor and Oddie, Garden never toyed with the idea of being a doctor. "None of us had ambitions to go into showbiz, but our revue show [1963's A Clump of Plinths] then spawned a radio show, I'm Sorry I'll Read That Again, for the BBC. We went into the BBC mob-handed. None of us would have gone in on our own."

It was a good time to try things out on TV, and they did. "Tim, Bill and I did a series called Broaden Your Mind, which was pretty successful. Orson Welles, of all people, saw it and wanted to work with us. In those days the BBC was liable to say, 'Go and do something', and we did." Hence the creation of The Goodies, with their mad costumes, speeded-up capers, falling

Pope John Paul II once remarked: "Of all the unimportant things, football is the most important". Having been a handy goalkeeper in his youth, His Holiness would have understood how, for many people, life is measured out in kick-off times. At a time like this, with the memory of the last match fading away into history and the prospect of the next one so far in the future as to be purely theoretical, many of us find ourselves unmoored. This particularly applies to those who make a living writing about or commenting on sport. There are, of course, thousands of sporting podcasts, but most of them are driven by the sporting calendar. This is what gives them their rhythm. Untune that string and what are they really made of? Here are six sporting podcasts that take a longer view and have something to say to a world that suddenly finds itself off games for the foreseeable future.

How to find a podcast Simply type the name of the podcast you are looking for into Google and listen on your computer. Most people, however, listen to podcasts on smartphones via apps such as BBC Sounds, Apple Podcasts, Stitcher or Acast. If there isn't already a podcast app on your phone, you can download a free one in seconds. Then search within the app for the podcast you want and "subscribe" to it. It won't cost you anything, and new episodes will turn up in your feed as they are published, which you can then play at your leisure.

PODCAST OF THE WEEK

That Peter Crouch Podcast

When asked what he would have been had he not become a Premier League footballer, Peter Crouch famously replied: "a virgin". His post-playing career follows that same line of self-deprecation. This podcast, in which he reveals the mundane details of the daily routine of a top pro – how they train, what they say to each other on the pitch, how they book a holiday, what they're like to live with when they lose, what they do with all that cash – has been a great success. It's amazing nobody got around to doing it before.

The Sound of Sports

We think the sound accompanying TV footage of sport is captured live. It's not that simple. The sound must be designed to enhance the drama, to reflect the camera's point of view and, in some cases, such as with the thunder of hooves in horse racing, where there's no practical alternative, provided on a loop. If you only listen to one sport podcast, make it this doc, originally broadcast on Radio 4 in 2011 and still available on the 99% Invisible podcast. You'll never watch TV sport the same way.

Zonal Marking

There is a growing army of soccer nerds who consider football a science, poring over stats and speaking unselfconsciously of "false nines" and coaches who have "a body of work". Zonal Marking's Michael Cox and Ali Maxwell are as comfortable looking back as forward, chewing over such arcane matters as the distinction between a long ball and a long pass, finer points that, happily, can be discussed without any reference to last Saturday.

30 for 30

These documentaries, superbly produced for the American sports broadcaster ESPN, focus on the culture of sports, in particular wherever they intersect with money, politics or race. Some of the actual sports may be alien to British listeners – not just baseball and basketball, but even poker and baccarat – but the stories are universal. To get started, you could do no better than start with the episode about the man who made a fortune out of the slogan "Yankees Suck". God bless America.

You've got to laugh

Oh, to hear a live radio audience again

The Ornstein & Chapman Podcast

The business side of football is the meat and drink of this excellent collaboration between The Athletic's David Ornstein and broadcaster Mark Chapman. The current lockdown – with its talk of games behind closed doors, prizes not being awarded, clubs looking to the Government for help, players feeling embarrassed about their earnings and broadcasters demanding their money back – gives them, if anything, even more to talk about than they would if the season was proceeding normally.

Lineker & Baker: Behind Closed Doors

Some people think football is essentially chaos, a weekly carnival of thud and blunder, written up as myth in the light of the score. This is certainly the view of Danny Baker, the best interviewer of footballers because he's never afraid to ask the obvious questions about football life. Happily, nobody is better placed to answer them than Gary Lineker. Their podcast is sidelined at the moment, but nothing in their back pages will have dated remotely.

ON THE BALL

Gary Lineker and Danny Baker take a sideways look at football

Close your eyes for a moment, as I believe many of you do when turning to this column. Magic into your mind the sound of an audience laughing and clapping. To help you, here's my favourite Barry Cryer joke...

A man was driving down a country lane and ran over a cockerel. He apologised to the farmer, saying: "I'd like to replace him." "Please yourself," came the reply, "the hens are round the back." Cue collapse of audience (pre-lockdown).

Imagine if we could capture the laughter from you and the hundreds of thousands of RT readers right now as a live radio audience. There would be the glorious sound – currently banned – of us all laughing, clapping and hooting. Oh, how I miss those rolling waves of radio laughter. I'm even missing those people who laugh out of time with everyone else. "Oooh, ha, ha, HAAA!"

When I hear audiences laughing now, I realise I must be listening to a repeat. There is a lot of repeating going on at the moment on Radio 4, from comedies to concerts to A History of the World in 100 Objects. And, for once, the words "and now another chance to hear" mean relief, not disappointment. All the big TV and radio networks have chanted this mantra over the years, but rarely has it been used as widely as today. Six words to do the work of just one: repeat.

'I'm even missing those people who laugh out of time'

Of course, there's some amazing live programming covering the crisis, with the PM saved, thousands of lives and livelihoods lost, and millions of us in lockdown. Here's to the teams across the airwaves who are doing this, balancing their own hopes and fears.

There are programmes that scarcely mention the crisis, relying on pre-recorded music or drama, such as The Archers, which is currently virus-free. Is the Bull the only pub in Britain that's currently open? Next month, the writers promise us some Covid-19 storylines, just as many listeners will have become desperate for some blessed relief.

But back to repeats. The thing with "another chance to hear" is that it signals

BC – or Before Coronavirus in the phrase coined by the great Historical Lord, Peter Hennessy. BC brought us audiences at music concerts, radio panel shows, Any Questions? and more. Actual humans sitting next to each other! Think of it!

Sometimes the station announcers use the shorter version of "another chance to hear", plumping instead for "classic editions", which promises another helping of rare treats. To be fair, I've always loved these and I'm very glad that Radio 4 is airing episodes from the vast archive of Just a Minute. With luck, we'll get some classic Kenneth Williams, affronted as only he could be, at being stopped mid-flow.

Kenneth Williams He challenged me! He stopped the story! I'm not going to say it now! NO!

Nicholas Parsons He's hurt.

Kenneth Williams: I'm not hurt at all! I'm not hurt! I'm not hurt!

Peter Jones Oh, do be quiet. [LAUGHTER]

Kenneth Williams You can't just say, "Jump! Go on!" It's like a thoroughbred. It's got to be taken at the moment the muse alights upon my shoulder! [BUZZ]

Nicholas Parsons Peter Jones has challenged.

Peter Jones I wish he'd sulk for a bit and be quiet. [BIG LAUGHTER]

Now it's the audiences, not the contestants, who are quiet. What a joy it will be to hear them again.

Paddy O'Connell hosts Broadcasting House, Sunday at 9am on Radio 4

Today's Choices

Archive on 4: Malcolm McLaren: Spectacular Failure

8.00pm Radio 4
Heavy metal surfing Nazis: a gangland movie on the waves. From Hollywood pitches to London politics, it's fair to say that not all the ideas Malcolm McLaren (above) came up with cut the mustard. But as cultural commentator and McLaren biographer Paul Gorman argues here, there was more to the anarchic manager of the Sex Pistols than met the eye. Combining archive insights, far-fetched anecdotes and punchy dialogue, this is a fun and heavily stylised spin on McLaren's frenetic life that the great svengali would have embraced. TOM GOULDING

Opera on 3

6.30pm Radio 3
Although Richard Strauss's Ariadne auf Naxos boasts no fewer than three leading ladies, there's no doubt which is the "Prima Donna" – the character helpfully bears that name. In the Royal Opera's 2014 production, rebroadcast tonight, the part was taken in suitably glamorous style by star Finnish soprano Karita Mattila, as diva-ishly stand-offish in the back-stage shenanigans of the Prologue as she was sublimely abandoned in the mythological heroics of the concluding opera-within-an-opera. MARK PAPPENHEIM

DISCOVER RADIO

Bitch Bitch Bitch

Some jobs seem far removed from the nine-to-five humdrum but are they really as glamorous as they appear? Matt Lucas invites three guests to dish the dirt on their professions, from cabin crew to sports commentators, and it's mighty funny. JANE ANDERSON

Following the recent 100th anniversary of the birth of Indian "sitar maestro" and composer Ravi Shankar (1920–2012), Tom Service speaks to author Oliver Craske about his new biography of one of the 20th century's most significant musicians. Repeated Monday 10pm
12.30pm This Classical Life
Saxophonist Jess Gillam invites a fellow musician to swap tracks and share musical discoveries across a range of styles, revealing how music shapes their everyday lives. Today she's joined by Lloyd Coleman, composer, clarinettist and associate music director of the British Paraorchestra. They discuss music by Debussy, Sibelius and Anna Meredith, and a recording by Kraftwerk. (R)
1.00 Inside Music
Series in which musicians offer an insider's take on various works, today with British conductor Gabriella Teychenné including the impressionism of Debussy and Ravel, a love duet by Monteverdi, and startling sound worlds from Radiohead's Jonny Greenwood. She also introduces the neglected Russian composer Weinberg (1919–96), plus some Shostakovich that might leave listeners unsure as to whether to laugh or cry. She also chooses a movement from Haydn's Missa in angustiis ("mass for troubled times") and finds that the music brims with determination and optimism.
3.00 Sound of Gaming
5/5. Bafta Award-winning British composer Jessica Curry presents Radio 3's first showcase of music from video games. ## Today's Choices

Drama on 3: Henry IV – Part One

7.30pm Radio 3
For my money, Toby Jones is the great comic actor of our age. He looks the part, with that big crumpled forehead and wayward hair, but it's more that he carries the anxiety of our times. This gives him an edge as Falstaff, Shakespeare's larger-than-life lovable rogue. The confidence and bravado seem tarnished, even as he holds forth in the tavern on Eastcheap. Prince Hal (Luke Thompson) looks on in amusement and plots to take his funny friend down. Meantime, his father King Henry (supremely majestic Iain Glen, above) has more serious concerns as the country faces rebellion. Adapted and directed by Sally Avens. FIONA HUGHES

Radio Shuttleworth

10.30pm Radio 4 Extra
A gold star for whoever dug this 1998 series out of the archive. It features John Shuttleworth broadcasting homely fun from his Sheffield living room (although, unlike today, he also goes out to talk to passers-by). John, his wife Mary and neighbour Ken are the creations of Graham Fellows, another recruit from the 1980s alternative comedy circuit, where he met one of today's guests, John Hegley. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

12.00 Private Passions
Michael Berkeley's guest is John Dyson, who spent 33 years as a judge, moving up through the High Court, the Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court and finally becoming Master of the Rolls. Three years ago he retired as Master of the Rolls. Dyson is an accomplished pianist, as reflected in his choices of music by Beethoven, Schubert and Bach, plus works by Verdi and Bernstein.
1.00pm Liam Byrne's String Theories 3/3. Friction. This final instalment looks at interactions between multiple stringed instruments and features traditional Swedish music for nyckelharpa (a jangly assemblage of bowed and sympathetic strings and wooden keys), a multitracked cello that sounds like a synthesised organ, and repetitive yearning semitone figures for a ten-stringed fiddle.
2.00 The Early Music Show

7.30 Drama on 3: Henry IV – Part One

RT Toby Jones stars as the comical figure Falstaff in Sally Avens's adaptation of the history play by Shakespeare. Rebellion is brewing in Britain. King Henry must reunite his country, but even his own family is divided. As Henry's rule is threatened, his son Hal appears unconcerned, keeping company with the comically corrupt Falstaff and common thieves. Yet the kind of leadership needed to unite the country may just as well be found in the taverns of Eastcheap as within the Palace of Westminster.

Today's Choices

Discovery: Plague of Locusts

8.30pm BBC World Service
For people in the West, locusts are no more than the stuff of biblical nightmares: an ancient curse from God to torment Egypt and force the Pharaoh's hand. But across East Africa and the Middle East the threat posed by them is very real. These regions have recently seen the worst infestation for a quarter of a century, with swarms descending on crops and threatening food security. Here, Roland Pease reports on how climate change is driving this swarm activity, and what could be done to mitigate it.

TOM GOULDING

Forest 404

11.00pm Radio 4
The Aria and Writers' Guild awards-winning podcast is repurposed for traditional radio, with each episode of the environmental thriller broadcast with an accompanying talk exploring its themes. In a dystopian 24th century, data archivist Pan (Pearl Mackie) is trawling sound files from our data-heavy time, deleting anything not deemed worth saving – Mozart, Neil Armstrong – when she comes across something totally alien, which bewitches her – the noises of a rainforest. It's a fascinating concept and the soundscape is beguiling. DAVID CRAWFORD

Radio 3 In Concert

7.30pm Radio 3
After fronting 16 Proms over the past decade, including homages to such artists as Jamie Cullum, Scott Walker and Nina Simone, plus 2015's "Ibiza Prom" with DJ Pete Tong and 2019's "Breakdancing Prom", conductor/arranger Jules Buckley was recently appointed the BBC Symphony Orchestra's first Creative Artist in Association with the brief of taking the band in new directions. Recorded at the Barbican in February, this collaboration with singer-songwriter Lianne La Havas (above) marked the first fruits of Buckley's new role.

MARK PAPPENHEIM

The Life Scientific

9.00am/9.30pm Radio 4
Jim Al-Khalili's first guest in a new series is, he says, someone who can explain something almost nobody understands. He's right. Physicist Brian Greene, author of The Elegant Universe (1999), a seminal book about string theory, makes it sound quite simple. The universe consists of up to 11 more dimensions, too small to observe, even through the Hadron Collider, although mathematics "proves" their existence. Take a giant leap and confront a Very Big Question and the Theory of Everything.

Today's Choices

Free Thinking

10.00pm Radio 3

Who wouldn't fancy a night on the town with Cary Grant (above)? Famously, women want to be with him and men want to be him, so in an entertaining bit of escapism Matthew Sweet and his guests will be prepping listeners for an imaginary date with the urbane Hollywood star, born Archibald Leach in Bristol in 1904. Through an appreciation of his work and investigation of his character you'll get tips on what to say – don't mention the mad mother or the LSD therapy – and Sweet will give the recipe to Cary's favourite cocktail before the man himself knocks on the door. DAVID CRAWFORD

Quanderhorn 2

6.30pm Radio 4

The sequel to The Quanderhorn Xperimentations (2018) strays a long way from its inspiration, Nigel Kneale's Quatermass serials from the 1950s. The companions of Professor Quanderhorn are transported to various periods of ancient history for time-travel fun closer to Doctor Who. The script is zany enough to allow Kevin Eldon to play a Martian as Terry-Thomas. I sniggered. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

11.00 Essential Five Another of this week's five recommended Op 1 works.
12.00 Composer of the Week: Handel 3/5. A Head Full of Maggots. When Handel's librettist Charles Jennens paid a visit to the composer while he was at work on his oratorio Saul, he found his head to be "more full of Maggots than ever" – maggots being not the larvae of flies, but an archaic term for 'bizarre ideas'. The first thing to disconcert Jennens was "a very queer Instrument which he calls Carillon. Then there was the trio of sackbuts (trombones) Handel was planning to use, and to cap it all, a specially commissioned contraption: "an organ of £500 price, which, because he is overstock'd with money, he has bespoke of one Moss of Barnet." Presented by Donald Macleod. Saul (excerpts)

8.45 Dvorak Symphony No 4 in D minor (R)
10.00 Free Thinking

RT Matthew Sweet and guests imagine an evening in the company of perhaps the quintessential Hollywood male screen star, Cary Grant (1904–86), from screwball comedy genius to suave leading actor. His many defining classics include The Awful Truth (1937), Bringing Up Baby (1938), His Girl Friday (1940), The Philadelphia Story (1940), Notorious (1946), To Catch a Thief (1955) and North by Northwest (1959). Born Archibald Leach in Bristol, he played opposite Irene Dunne, Ingrid Bergman, Grace Kelly, Deborah Kerr and, most famously, Katharine Hepburn. Sweet is joined by blogger and journalist Pamela Hutchinson, Charlotte Crofts – who runs the bi-annual Cary Grant Comes Home Festival, which is due in November in Bristol – and Mark Glancy, a reader in film history who runs the film history at Queen Mary University of London.

Today's Choices

I Capture the Castle

10.00am/3.00pm

Radio 4 Extra

Romance, escapism and English eccentricity are the order of the day in this two-part adaptation from 2015 of Dodie Smith's coming-of-age novel starring Holliday Grainger (above) as the 17-year-old Cassandra Mortmain. The story is set in 1930s Suffolk, where the Mortmain family, facing financial ruin, have taken to selling the furniture from the castle they are renting in order to survive, while their troubled father (played by Toby Jones) struggles to start upon his "difficult" second book. The arrival of their wealthy American landlords could offer a lifeline – if Cassandra's beautiful sister Rose can hook one of the sons with her charms. Comic mayhem involving fur coats and dungeons follows, tightly directed, and expertly handled by a strong cast. JANE ANDERSON

Open Country

3.00pm Radio 4

Open Country continues to defy the lockdown odds, finding big stories in small places. Today's back garden belongs to Brett Westwood, of Living World fame, his three-week diary of life in his corner of Worcestershire charting a positively hectic time of the year in the natural world. SIMON O'HAGAN

Opera Matinée.

Fabio Ceresa's production of Vivaldi's Dorilla in Tempe, a melodramma eroico pastorale, recorded last November at Wexford Festival Opera in Ireland. Based on themes from Greek mythology, the story centres on the shepherd Nomio, who is in fact Apollo in disguise. He falls in love with Dorilla, the daughter of the king of Thessaly, who is herself in love with the shepherd Elmira. Meanwhile, the king must save his kingdom by offering his daughter as a sacrifice to the sea-serpent Pitone. The opera is followed by more from this week's featured performing group, the Bavarian RSO.

10.00 Free Thinking

Hetta Howes learns that the absence of dental floss in the Neolithic era has left archaeologists with invaluable information about how our ancestors lived and where they travelled to. And piles of pig bones near Stonehenge reveal a communal society that used feasting as a form of negotiation. Lecturers Penny Bickle and Jim Leary uncover their findings from research projects in the Vale of Pewsey, Alsace and Stonehenge. (R)

10.45 The Essay: Music of the Spheres

4/5. Music and Astronomy in Crisis. As the Dark Ages come to an end, the weight of evidence begins to threaten the music of the spheres as a theory of everything. With the discovery that the Earth is not the centre of the cosmos, new ways of explaining the universe – and new ways to define music – have to be found. Presented by Stuart Clark. (R)

Bulgaria's Children and the Norwegian Bogleman. Thousands of Bulgarian parents pulled their children out of school in a mass panic recently, fearing they would be abducted by social workers. Many more are protesting against a draft law that says puts 70 per cent of children at similar risk. Are they right to be scared, or has fake news spread hysteria about the power of the state? Tim Whewell investigates what is behind these rumours – and why they are treating one Western country, Norway, as the ultimate source of evil.

Today's Choices

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3
When Simon Rattle (above) returned from Berlin in September 2017 to become music director of the London Symphony Orchestra, the band mounted a 10-day festival to welcome him home. "Is all the hype justified?" queried the Guardian's critic Erica Jeal when writing up Rattle's account of Berlioz's quasi-opera The Damnation of Faust, before concluding, "It's looking that way", and delivering a five-star review of a performance in which "everyone involved seemed to sense they were part of something special". There's another chance to share Rattle's musical alchemy when Radio 3 rebroadcasts the concert tonight. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Tony Blackburn's Golden Hour

8.00pm Radio 2
The evergreen DJ has endured a surfeit of mickey-taking over his long career, nearly always with good grace. At 77, he is still very much part of the Radio 2 firmament, his perma-zeal continuing to course through the airwaves. In this week's golden-oldie slot we're promised hits from, among others, the Jackson 5, Take That and Carly Rae Jepsen. Though you may not be a fan of all of them, there'll be memory-stirrers here for us all. CHRIS GARDNER

11.30 Slow Moment A musical reflection.
12.00 Composer of the Week: Handel 5/5. Last Thoughts, Fading Light. Handel's oratorio Joshua tapped into contemporary events with a tale of conflict, heroism and deliverance, and was a huge success. By contrast, his bleak and inward-looking Theodora – about the Christian martyr and her Roman lover, Didymus – failed to make an impression. Donald Macleod recalls the mixed fortunes of the composer's later works, and the onset of his blindness.

11.00 The Learning Revolution*3/3. Learning.

Right now, more than 860 million students worldwide are not at school because of the coronavirus pandemic. Many are studying from home but, amid endless distractions, are they actually learning? For centuries, formal learning has been confined to a dedicated school or university building at a particular stage of life. Now more than ever, that looks set to change. In designing an education system fit for the future, how might we harness the human brain's incredible capacity for learning? There's much to be gleaned from how babies and teenagers learn. Lifelong learning will also be an important part of education in the future – but what might it look like in practice? Alex Beard used to be a teacher, and is now an education explorer, of sorts. In the final episode of this series, he hears from neuroscientists, psychologists and education experts, and sets out the blueprint for his Learning Revolution. Producer Deborah Dudgeon

11.30 My Obsession

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Luci Holland Scala Radio

Age 31
Presenter of The Console with Luci Holland, Scala Radio's weekly programme

featuring new, emerging and classic scores from video and online games (Saturdays 5pm).
CV Has spent the majority of her life in Edinburgh and East Lothian, and took her BA and MA in music composition at Edinburgh University before moving into a career as a composer and arranger. Much of her current work is managing arts programming with small groups like the Tinderbox Project and Absolute Classics, which bring together hundreds of young people from different backgrounds on music-based arts and digital events. "I find I work less with orchestras now and have become the classical jack of all trades."
Best moment "I am quite new to radio but have already learnt so much. The highlight so far has been playing the world radio premiere of Gareth Coker's superbly moving soundtrack for Ori and the Will of the Wisps [a platform-adventure game]."

Worst moment "No terrible ones just yet, but I do really struggle with the pronunciation of any kind of name – and you do come across some pretty unusual ones in the world of gaming..."

'I find I have become the classical jack of all trades'

Off air "I live in Edinburgh with two adorable chinchillas, which always seems to surprise people, but I also love yoga, cycling – and gaming, of course. At the moment my friends and I are having to play Dungeons and Dragons online, which is weird, but we are getting used to it."

First radio memory "My parents didn't listen to the radio that much but I do remember mastering a terrible tape machine so that I could record tracks to play in the car."

Favourite broadcaster "Jessica Curry on Radio 3 [Sound of Gaming]. She is a fabulous composer and her voice is so relaxing."

Ambition "Composing and playing music all the time would see me happy and fulfilled. And I would love to learn how to code games, although I do have a funny relationship with maths."

Dream job "In theory I would be in a games studio composing music all the time, but in practice I wonder if I would soon be contemplating doing other things."

Secret skills "I can solder and build basic electronics. I recently made a small sensor that picked up the sound of people walking past it, for an audio installation."

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Luci Holland Scala Radio

Age 31
Presenter of The Console with Luci Holland, Scala Radio's weekly programme

featuring new, emerging and classic scores from video and online games (Saturdays 5pm).
CV Has spent the majority of her life in Edinburgh and East Lothian, and took her BA and MA in music composition at Edinburgh University before moving into a career as a composer and arranger. Much of her current work is managing arts programming with small groups like the Tinderbox Project and Absolute Classics, which bring together hundreds of young people from different backgrounds on music-based arts and digital events. "I find I work less with orchestras now and have become the classical jack of all trades."
Best moment "I am quite new to radio but have already learnt so much. The highlight so far has been playing the world radio premiere of Gareth Coker's superbly moving soundtrack for Ori and the Will of the Wisps [a platform-adventure game]."

Worst moment "No terrible ones just yet, but I do really struggle with the pronunciation of any kind of name – and you do come across some pretty unusual ones in the world of gaming..."

'I find I have become the classical jack of all trades'

Off air "I live in Edinburgh with two adorable chinchillas, which always seems to surprise people, but I also love yoga, cycling – and gaming, of course. At the moment my friends and I are having to play Dungeons and Dragons online, which is weird, but we are getting used to it."

First radio memory "My parents didn't listen to the radio that much but I do remember mastering a terrible tape machine so that I could record tracks to play in the car."
Favourite broadcaster "Jessica Curry on Radio 3 [Sound of Gaming]. She is a fabulous composer and her voice is so relaxing."

Ambition "Composing and playing music all the time would see me happy and fulfilled. And I would love to learn how to code games, although I do have a funny relationship with maths."

Dream job "In theory I would be in a games studio composing music all the time, but in practice I wonder if I would soon be contemplating doing other things."

Secret skills "I can solder and build basic electronics. I recently made a small sensor that picked up the sound of people walking past it, for an audio installation."

JANE ANDERSON

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Luci Holland Scala Radio

Age 31
Presenter of The Console with Luci Holland, Scala Radio's weekly programme

featuring new, emerging and classic scores from video and online games (Saturdays 5pm).
CV Has spent the majority of her life in Edinburgh and East Lothian, and took her BA and MA in music composition at Edinburgh University before moving into a career as a composer and arranger. Much of her current work is managing arts programming with small groups like the Tinderbox Project and Absolute Classics, which bring together hundreds of young people from different backgrounds on music-based arts and digital events. "I find I work less with orchestras now and have become the classical jack of all trades."
Best moment "I am quite new to radio but have already learnt so much. The highlight so far has been playing the world radio premiere of Gareth Coker's superbly moving soundtrack for Ori and the Will of the Wisps [a platform-adventure game]."

Worst moment "No terrible ones just yet, but I do really struggle with the pronunciation of any kind of name – and you do come across some pretty unusual ones in the world of gaming..."

'I find I have become the classical jack of all trades'

Off air "I live in Edinburgh with two adorable chinchillas, which always seems to surprise people, but I also love yoga, cycling – and gaming, of course. At the moment my friends and I are having to play Dungeons and Dragons online, which is weird, but we are getting used to it."

First radio memory "My parents didn't listen to the radio that much but I do remember mastering a terrible tape machine so that I could record tracks to play in the car."

Favourite broadcaster "Jessica Curry on Radio 3 [Sound of Gaming]. She is a fabulous composer and her voice is so relaxing."

Ambition "Composing and playing music all the time would see me happy and fulfilled. And I would love to learn how to code games, although I do have a funny relationship with maths."

Dream job "In theory I would be in a games studio composing music all the time, but in practice I wonder if I would soon be contemplating doing other things."

Secret skills "I can solder and build basic electronics. I recently made a small sensor that picked up the sound of people walking past it, for an audio installation."

JANE ANDERSON

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Luci Holland Scala Radio

Current job Presenter of The Console with Luci Holland, Scala Radio's weekly programme

featuring new, emerging and classic scores from video and online games (Saturdays 5pm).

CV Has spent the majority of her life in Edinburgh and East Lothian, and took her BA and MA in music composition at Edinburgh University before moving into a career as a composer and arranger. Much of her current work is managing arts programming with small groups like the Tinderbox Project and Absolute Classics, which bring together hundreds of young people from different backgrounds on music-based arts and digital events. "I find I work less with orchestras now and have become the classical jack of all trades."

Best moment "I am quite new to radio but have already learnt so much. The highlight so far has been playing the world radio premiere of Gareth Coker's superbly moving soundtrack for Ori and the Will of the Wisps [a platform-adventure game]."

Worst moment "No terrible ones just yet, but I do really struggle with the pronunciation of any kind of name – and you do come across some pretty unusual ones in the world of gaming..."

'I find I have become the classical jack of all trades'

Off air "I live in Edinburgh with two adorable chinchillas, which always seems to surprise people, but I also love yoga, cycling – and gaming, of course. At the moment my friends and I are having to play Dungeons and Dragons online, which is weird, but we are getting used to it."

First radio memory "My parents didn't listen to the radio that much but I do remember mastering a terrible tape machine so that I could record tracks to play in the car."
Favourite broadcaster "Jessica Curry on Radio 3 [Sound of Gaming]. She is a fabulous composer and her voice is so relaxing."

Ambition "Composing and playing music all the time would see me happy and fulfilled. And I would love to learn how to code games, although I do have a funny relationship with maths."
Dream job "In theory I would be in a games studio composing music all the time, but in practice I wonder if I would soon be contemplating doing other things."

Secret skills "I can solder and build basic electronics. I recently made a small sensor that picked up the sound of people walking past it, for an audio installation."

Crisis management

The Government is giving a grant to the self-employed – but many will miss out, says Paul Lewis

THE GOVERNMENT WILL help 3.8 million self-employed people with a grant of up to 80% of their monthly profits for three months. However, it will miss out probably the same number of people who earn some or all their income from working for themselves.

To qualify for the Self-employed Income Support Scheme, you must have filed a self-assessment tax return for 2018/19 (the deadline to do that was extended to 23 April) and filled in the self-employment pages. Anyone who started their self-employment on 6 April 2019 or later will not fulfil this condition, leaving at least 300,000 people out.

‘The payment won’t be made until June’

Two further key conditions: first, you earned more of your income from self-employment than from all other taxable income including from a job, pensions and investments. You can fulfil this condition either in 2018/19 alone or on average over 2018/19, 2017/18 and 2016/17 if you had self-employment income in those years.

The second key condition is that your self-employment taxable profit is under £50,000. That can either just be in 2018/19 or the average of the last three years if you were self-employed then.

If you can jump these hurdles, you will get a grant from the Government of 80% of your average annual profits over three months (a fifth of your annual profits). The average will be taken over the years 2018/19, 2017/18 and 2016/17, ignoring years when you weren’t self-employed. There is an upper limit of £2,500 a month if your annual profits were £37,500 or more, up to the limit of £49,999.

PEOPLE WHO TRADE through a limited company or a personal services company are excluded. Self-employed people who qualify can carry on working.

The payment will not be made until sometime in June. HMRC will contact those who qualify. How it will distinguish this communication from the many scams that are doing the rounds is not clear. Neither is it clear if others who think they are entitled can claim.

Until June, the Government suggests self-employed people who cannot manage should claim Universal Credit. If you’re over pension age, try pension credit.

Webb pages

Robert Webb's debut novel is about a grief-stricken widow. But he first dreamt it up on Peep Show

Robert Webb remembers the exact moment when he came up with the plot for his first novel. He was filming the cult sitcom Peep Show, sitting in his character Jeremy's VW Golf. "It was very odd," says the comedy actor. "I just remember looking through the car window and unfocusing my eyes, and this idea of a widow going back in time and meeting her future dead husband when he's a teenager appeared."

This was in 2012 and it would be another five years before he started writing about Kate, the heartbroken, sardonic, straight-talking widow who narrates Come Again. The story begins nine months after the sudden death of her husband of 28 years, when she's at rock bottom: she's rebuffed her friends, lost her job and spends her days drowning her sorrows.

"The whole book is about grief," says Webb. "Not wishing to undersell it, because it's mainly quite uplifting and cheerful, but the arc of the story is the difference between grief and mourning. When we meet her, she's living in the past, and she has to literally go and live in the past in order to remember what there is about the present to re-embrace. You go through grief where you're stuck in the past, and then mourning comes later, and it's where you learn to integrate the lost past with the new present – and that's when we get better."

He experienced the paralysis of bereavement at the age of 17, when his mother died shortly after being diagnosed with breast cancer. "I think losing a partner must be much harder, but I certainly remember what it felt like. If you've lost someone who you lived with, they're just everywhere you turn for those first few months. The hum of the fridge, the way a chair squeaks when you sit on it – everything reminds you of them and that's really hard."

Despite the bleak beginning, Come Again is uplifting, and funny, thanks to Kate's deliciously grouchy interior monologue. Through her, Webb playfully ridicules everything from literary snobbery to 90s fashion to Brexit. He also breaks the cardinal rule of book publishing by flitting between genres. "It's a sort of adventure-comedy-sci-fi-time-travelling-thriller-grieffy-misery-memoir-romance. This book has been described as bonkers, and it's because I don't really know the rules yet."

ONE DAY, KATE wakes up back in her student digs at York University in October 1992, which is the same year her author started university, although he read English at Cambridge. The college chapters are packed with fabulous characters and spot-on details. "It was fun reliving the 90s, but I'm suspicious of myself wanting to spend too much time there," says Webb. "This isn't a literary novel, but when it's got its thinking hat on, the story is interested in nostalgia and the limits of nostalgia and it was both of those things."

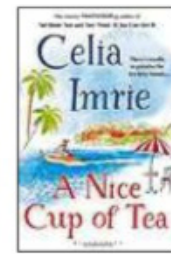

Webb grew up in Woodhall Spa, Lincolnshire, where he kept his ambitions to be an actor and writer to

Celebrity bestsellers

Novels from Nadiya, Ruth Jones and Celia Imrie

CELIA IMRIE

The Calendar Girls and Best Exotic Marigold Hotel actor is the author of a bestselling series about a group of retired expats who live in the south of France and co-own a chic restaurant. The third book, A Nice Cup of Tea, is now out in paperback and finds the five friends struggling to save La Mosaïque from going under. The Brits have personal problems as well as financial troubles: a missing granddaughter, a mysterious stalker and rude old acquaintances. Mixing mystery and screwball comedy, it's fast-paced, light-hearted and full of Imrie's gentle wit.

NEVER GREENER
RUTH JONES

The comic actor who co-wrote and starred in Gavin & Stacey and Stella has turned to novel-writing in recent years. Never Greener has sold more than a quarter of a million copies and is a far cry from her comedy shows. It tells the story of a passionate love affair: 17 years after her intense relationship with an older married man, Kate meets Callum again and the spark is still there. But should they rekindle their passion, or are some things better left in the past? Ruth Jones's second novel, Us Three, will be published in September.

THE HOPES AND TRIUMPHS OF THE AMIR SISTERS
NADIYA HUSSAIN

Since winning The Great British Bake Off in 2015, Hussain has been unbelievably busy. As well as presenting several cookery series and travel documentaries, she's written cookbooks, an autobiography, children's books and novels. The Hopes and Triumphs of the Amir Sisters is the third in a series billed as a "British Muslim Little Women", and follows the youngest of the four sisters, Mae, as she struggles to find her place in the world. When her self-belief and confidence are rocked, Mae questions her identity and where she fits in, both in life and in her family. Hussain's warmth and positivity shine through in a tale of family, culture and faith.

up whenever we're allowed to. I'm not having a haircut yet, much as I'd like to."

He hasn't ruled out doing another series of Peep Show, but fans will have to wait a long time before they get to see its dysfunctional duo bickering again. "If David and I are blessed as to still be around in our early 70s, I think it would be very funny to watch fat, old Mark and Jeremy still in the same flat, having the same argument." CLAIRE WEBB himself. "You didn't say that out loud because you'd just have people rolling their eyes or sucking in their cheeks." Just as it is for his time-travelling protagonist, university was life-changing because it's where he met his comic partner of 28 years and Peep Show and That Mitchell and Webb Look co-star, David Mitchell.

He wrote his first book after Peep Show ended in 2015. How Not to Be a Boy is a hugely poignant coming-of-age memoir and manifesto on masculinity, and a Sunday Times bestseller. "As well as all the arty-farty reasons, I did need something to do. The book came out of a feeling that I should have a self-generated project and this novel is the natural extension of that. Books are my focus at the moment, but I'll never stop acting. I enjoy it too much."

Webb lives in north London with his wife, fellow comedy performer Abigail Burdess, and their eight- and ten-year-old daughters. Like parents across the country, they're currently getting to grips with home-schooling. "Most of home-schooling seems to be IT support. Making sure Zoom and Slack work – words that I'd never heard of a couple of weeks ago – and that all the passwords work on the right computer." When the lockdown happened, he and David Mitchell were three days from wrapping the second series of their squirmingly good Channel 4 sitcom Back. "TV location shoots are not conducive to self-isolating, so we'll pick it back

GROW YOUR OWN

THERE'S LITTLE MORE delicious than a crisp, freshly picked French bean, runner bean, mangetout or a pea popped straight from the pod, and it certainly isn't too late to start for a bumper crop this summer. They're pretty easy to grow and some do really well in pots. Once they start producing, be sure to keep picking to keep them coming throughout the summer.

MANGETOUT AND SUGAR SNAPS

Why not grow a range of green and purple-podded peas, which look fabulous on the plate? Sow mangetout and sugar snaps now, directly in the ground. They like an open, sunny spot, neutral to alkaline soil (add compost, or some lime to acidic soils) and good drainage. Make a flat trench around 5cm deep and 15cm wide (a draw hoe is ideal, or drag a piece of wood) and space your peas about 7.5cm apart. Lightly cover with soil, firm and water. They'll need some support to scramble up, such as a trellis, canes or netting. The dwarf varieties are great for pots.

FRENCH BEANS

These are divided into climbing and dwarf varieties, and come in a fine range of colours. The climbers are best grown in the ground with plenty of sun and will need some support, such as a free-standing wigwam made from hazel or bamboo poles tied at the top. Start them indoors now (sow one bean per small pot), gradually harden them off (acclimatise them to the outdoors) and then plant after the last frosts (around late May).

RUNNER BEANS

Ideally, start these off indoors, one to a small pot, and harden off – or you can plant two seeds in the ground per support (bamboo pole or similar) in mid-May and remove the weakest after germination. They do best in full sun in a deep, fertile soil that doesn't dry out, so dig in plenty of organic matter. Build an A-frame or simple wigwam to about 2.4m. When the plants reach that height, snip off the tops and they'll bush out and produce more beans.

HOW TO GROW

Feed every two weeks with a liquid seaweed or tomato feed and water regularly. Tip: place climbing plants inside the poles of any leaning structure, so you can hoe and the poles will save the plants from being cut by accident.

Peas on earth

Nothing beats the taste of beans and peas – and you don't need a veg patch to grow them, says Joe Swift

UPCYCLE & RECYCLE CONTAINERS

SUMMER CROPPING
You can eat your sugar snaps at any stage of their growth

I've become super-resourceful recently – I won't throw anything away in case I can use it. I've never been sure what the difference is between recycling and upcycling (is it to do with aesthetics?), but when it comes to containers, the simple rule is: if it can hold compost and drain water, it can be turned into a pot!

SEEDLINGS

Toilet and kitchen roll tubes with one end folded in (perhaps temporarily taped) make great little pots for sowing seed into. When they're ready, they can be planted directly into the ground and will biodegrade. Newspaper makes great little pots, too: wetted, wrapped around a tube shape, folded at the bottom and left to dry. Old tins will need holes punched or cut into the bottom; the safest way is to use a tin opener to make slits around the outside (not all the way or the bottom will fall out!) and push the holes in a bit. Plastic bottles and milk and soup cartons all work, again with holes. Cardboard egg boxes can be used: either the individual pockets or the lids filled with compost can hold a few seedlings, as can takeaway metal trays.

MEDIUM CONTAINERS

I use large olive oil tins (a local Turkish restaurant always leaves them outside), which look great, especially with herbs in them. Metal containers get hot in the sun and the soil dries out very quickly, so line the inside with thick cardboard, or ideally some polystyrene board, to cool the plants' roots. You could also use wooden wine boxes and small crates, or knock something together using old pallet wood. Line the inside with plastic, such as an old compost bag stapled to the inside. Cut some slits in the bottom and fill up with compost and plants.

LARGE CONTAINERS

If you buy compost in a bag, it can easily be turned into a growbag. Consider what you want to grow in it before making a slit: potatoes, parsnips and carrots require deeper soil so place them on end for increased depth and grow straight into them. Stacks of old tyres make nice big planters (for potatoes, add an extra tyre as you earth up). Old dustbins are also great for growing in, too.

AMONG THE WHITEWASHED houses of Strandhill in County Sligo on the west coast of Ireland, a sea wind whips up the roar of giant Atlantic waves. People don't linger when the elements are rough – but although this tiny seaside town seems empty, it's never devoid of life.

The Shells café and shop is forever busy with hikers and surfers, wrapped in woollen layers as they tuck in to cinnamon buns and sausage rolls. Walk past the seafront pub – the Strand Bar – and the chatter of drinkers over live Irish music trails out into the rumbling wind.

County Sligo is studded with lively little towns and villages like this. Its 50-mile stretch of north-west Ireland's Wild Atlantic Way is sleepy on first impression but, behind the chintz curtains, exhilaration is never far away.

It's the setting for the BBC3 series Normal People, based on Sally Rooney's multi-award-winning 2018 novel. Rooney grew up in Castlebar, in the neighbouring County Mayo, not far from the fictional Sligo hometown of her teenage characters, Marianne and Connell. The trailer shows the on-off couple side by side on the dunes, dwarfed by a deserted coast and the flat-topped Dartry Mountains behind.

With ancient cairns topping these moody mountains, vast sandbars and world-famous surfing waves, Sligo is one of Ireland's best-kept secrets. Tucked above its more famous neighbours Mayo and Galway, it gets a fraction of the footfall and remains innocently uncommercial.

A holiday cottage in Strandhill will set you within a 45-minute striking distance of anywhere in the county. Wherever you are, the hulking, 520-metre Benbulbin Mountain dominates the skyline. Peculiarly block-shaped, it looks more like a table for the gods than a natural feature. A guide is strongly advised for anyone who doesn't possess climbing powers akin to the long-horned sheep that cling to its grooved slopes.

Sligo's other claim to literary fame is that Nobel laureate WB Yeats is buried here, in his chosen spot at the foot of Benbulbin, in a humble plot in Drumcliffe Cemetery. The poet and leader of the Irish Literary Revival movement spent parts of his childhood in Sligo in the 1870s, and folklore tales of fairies, banshees and ghosts in this mystical landscape were a wellspring for his imagination.

Set around the mini-rapids of Ireland's shortest river, the two-mile Garavogue, is inviting Sligo Town. Behind the doors of an imposing old schoolhouse is The Model arts centre, an airy space containing one of the best public art collections in Ireland, including ever-changing avant-garde displays.

Artists, writers and poets aren't the only ones to fall in love with Sligo. It's also famed for its surfing, with big-wave junkies descending on the 30ft breaks at craggy Mullaghmore peninsula, to the north. If the weather's mild, anyone can paddle out; wherever the swell's good, groups bob like seals in their hooded wetsuits, waiting for their few seconds of glory on the water's white crests.

AS THE TIDE creeps away at Cummeen Strand, a few miles from Strandhill, a line of stout stone pillars emerges.

Erected in 1845, these 14 reassuring sentinels guide walkers and vehicles the mile-and-a-half distance across the sandbar to Coney Island. This 1.5 by 0.75-mile landmass is said to be where the New York resort island received its name, but the namesakes have little else in common. Of Coney's 20 or so houses, there's just one permanent family. Electricity didn't arrive until 1999, yet you'll find a pub on the hilltop – a lonely, single-storey building that looks just like the rest aside from a little "BAR" sign painted on a wooden slab. It's open at weekends "in the season". To ensure a leisurely beer, walk across two hours before low tide, taking in the rainbow of reflections on the wet sand. Seaweed dangles from a wire fence beside parked cars on the mainland – a reminder to return in time.

Ireland's wild west

Though this region feels remote, Ireland is in fact well connected. It's easy to imagine how Marianne and Connell, like Rooney, would be lured to Trinity College in Dublin – the second location in Normal People. Three hours on the train or two and a half by car and the howl of sea winds is swapped for the bell of the tram, the quiet rush of the River Liffey and tourists on pub crawls. The rhythm of toe-tapping bands and the pumping of beer taps linger alongside the sights of the city's two cathedrals and cream-stone Trinity. Across the city you can feel the exuberance of youth, from the teenage buskers in the Temple Bar area to students making their mark on the murals of Liberty Lane.

Back in Sligo's seaside towns, the pubs are a refuge from nature's might. As you shed your warm layers and lift a Rockshore Irish lager by the open fire, a fierce sea wind roars in the darkness outside. SIOBHAN WARWICKER

CAN YOU AFFORD TO HELP YOUR FAMILY FINANCIALLY?

With finances stretched more than ever, many would like to be in a position to give their family a financial helping hand. In fact, a recent report showed that 62% of people due to finish full time work this year, already provide support to their dependents*. But can they continue to do so in retirement?

In later life, your pension and savings may be enough to meet your everyday needs, but providing a lump sum or more regular financial help to others may be more of a struggle. So it's unsurprising that homeowners that have turned to equity release are citing gifting as their reason for releasing the cash tied up in their properties.

Equity release is a way of unlocking some the tax-free cash tied up in your home. It can be used in a wide variety of ways, from home improvements to clearing debt. However, last year saw 28% of Key customers tap into their property wealth to help out friends and family with their finances**.

Having taken out an equity release plan through, Key, Phillip Stothart gifted money to his son to help with his home, as well as using the funds to enjoy his retirement.

"I was due to retire. We worked out our finances and found that if we took out equity release, we could do all the things we wanted to and live comfortably. We also saw it as a perfect opportunity to help out our son and his wife, who have just bought their own property. We bought them a new door and windows, and gave them £5,000 towards a new bathroom."

For over 20 years, Key has been advising and supporting people in finding out more about equity release. In fact, they've now helped over a million people decide if equity release is right for them. And now they're offering all their expert advice in full over the phone.

Find out more for free: All of Key's equity release advice relates to their range of Key-branded products and is completely free of charge. So you can find out if it's right for you without costing you a penny

Word of the Week – yawmagorp

Extended periods at home might make all of us feel a bit lethargic – a word that takes its name from the river Lethe of Greek myth, whose waters, when drunk, brought oblivion and forgetfulness. The act of yawning attracts a small but expressive lexicon that begins with the term "oscitation".

gape or yawn, which in turn is from os, the mouth (the source of "oral").

In Joseph Wright's glorious 19th-century English Dialect Dictionary, we find the word "yawmagorp", a gently mocking term from Yorkshire, Lancashire, and Leicestershire for a yawning, stretching person – in other words, a lounge. Wright also gives us a term for the biggest lounge of the lot, "hobbledehoy": "a clumsy or awkward youth", aka a teenager.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Now for some good news

LIFE IN SONG
Zoey (Jane Levy)
puts on a show

For an antidote to the news, Zoey's Extraordinary Playlist (Wednesday E4; all episodes on All 4) is pure escapism. Every time I watch it, I can't help but feel lighter and happier.

The premise of this unusual American comedy drama sounds strange, with Zoey (Jane Levy) acquiring the ability to read other people's thoughts through music, but it really works, and the song-and-dance routines are slick and fun. It's witty, bright and weaves in some serious subjects (even terminal illness) without it ever losing the sense of hope it instils. Give it a go and feel a bit better about the world.

Joe Bonanno Leicester

Joe Bonanno wins a BOSE SoundLink Revolve speaker, in either black or silver. One of BOSE's best-performing portable Bluetooth speakers, it is water-resistant, has a rechargeable battery that plays for up to 12 hours and delivers true 360° sound, wherever you place it in the room. RRP £179.95. bose.co.uk series was well thought out and put together – congratulations to everyone involved in making it.

Patricia Payne Caldicot, Monmouthshire

...I tuned in to The Nest because of Martin Compston (Line of Duty was brilliant), but initially was unsure about the surrogacy subject – and the accents. I'm glad I hung in there, though, as the acting and storyline were compelling.

Dorothy Pickering Sulham, Berkshire

WE'RE NOT ALL ONLINE

BBC TV and radio have been very good at giving information on the coronavirus, and a lot of feedback from viewers and listeners, but the advice they give is all based online. It's always:

find this website, go to this Facebook page, contact us on Twitter. A lot of people can't do that – and feel utterly isolated. Please, BBC, serve the people who are being excluded.

Robert Yardy
St Albans,
Hertfordshire

BEAUTY OF SLOW TV

Britain by Balloon (Easter Day Channel 5) was a delight and a fine example of Slow TV, in the solitude of a hot-air balloon gliding over the landscape of the Lake District. One small point: the informative captions about the lakes and the hills were in white. Against the sky, black type would have been a big improvement.

Wally Throter Garboldisham, Norfolk

...The Great Mountain Sheep Gather (Easter Monday BBC4), about the shepherd herding sheep on Scafell, was wonderfully relaxing, and gloriously free from background music. If only TV producers would understand the beauty of silence!

Francis Roads London E18

DON'T SIT SO CLOSE

We enjoy Gogglebox (Friday C4), but have been dismayed to see the (very funny) Siddiqui brothers, who don't live together, sitting on the same sofa and believing they are social distancing by being two metres apart.

We haven't seen our grandson for three weeks – we know we can't visit and sit in the same room as him. But Channel 4 has continued to flout the Government rules that the rest of us are living by, inconvenient and even painful as they are. Surely the brothers could have been "virtually together"?

via email

RT asked Channel 4 if the Siddiquis are now living together, but it's unclear. A show spokesperson said: "Most of the families live together,

EASTER MESSAGES

The BBC did us proud with two wonderful programmes of choral music for Easter – Easter from King's (11 April BBC2), thankfully recorded before the virus struck; and, in Sacred Songs: the Secrets of Our Hearts (Easter Day BBC4), the ensemble Tenebrae, by the miracles of modern technology, each singing in their own home. I was particularly moved by the anthems of William Byrd and Alonso Lobo. Thanks to all those involved.

Richard Turbet Holt, Norfolk

... Three Vicars Talking (Easter Day Radio 4) was thought-provoking, humorous, honest and deeply moving. And later that day we were treated to Rev Kate Bottley's Pick of the Week: a joy. I hope she does more of these, she's a natural.

Sue Wallis Cambridge

...Checking out Radio Times for something cheerful to watch over Easter, I was amazed to find The Bridge on the River Kwai (Easter Monday Channel 5). Surely the broadcasters could have shown something a little lighter? I found the bank holiday weekend entertainment quite disappointing.

Julia Smith Beverley,

FLYING THE NEST

I really enjoyed The Nest (BBC1) and in particular I admired Mirren Mack, who played Kaya. It was a wonderful part for a young actress, and she will go far. And of course also in the cast there were Martin Compston as Dan, Fiona Bell playing his sister Hilary and Liz Ewing as Kaya's social worker Janis – who was especially good in the final episode. The but where they don't, they are complying with Public Health England social distancing guidelines. Gogglebox will only film with families where it's safe to do so. The health and safety of our cast and crew is paramount.

"To ensure Gogglebox stays on air for the remainder of the series, we've been busy making sure we can film with rigged cameras, allowing the families to take part without any contact from crew."

GIVING UP ON SKY

I wonder how many readers have found, as I did, that it isn't that easy to pause your Sky Sports subscription (Feedback, 11 April)? I ran into a crowd of cookies and pages of terms and conditions, which so overwhelmed me that I gave up.

Gareth Jones Bangor, Gwynedd
Although the process has been smooth for some, others have reported problems with this process online – or a lengthy wait on the phone. A Sky spokesperson tells us: "We are working as hard as we can to meet the needs of our customers in the face of resource challenges at this time, both in call centres and in digital processing, and the vast majority of customers have been served quickly. We apologise to those affected and will continue working to make the process easier."

I'M HERE ALL WEEK...

Following RT readers' suggestions for programmes that they'd like to see again (Feedback, 11 April), surely the best thing BBC1 could do is show daily repeats of Not Going Out.

Simon Pilborough
Stourbridge, West Midlands

NOT THAT LOCKDOWN

Bearing in mind the current situation, can we all look forward to viewing Zoomiversity Challenge and Only Disconnect later in the year? And will Alexander Armstrong and Richard Osman want to see Pointless contestants go into a "lockdown" ever again?

ADRIAN DUNBAR

‘I’m not bad for my age’

The Line of Duty star keeps fit with fast walks and prosecco

Where’s your TV, Adrian?

It’s hidden away. If you walk into our living room during the day you’ll think there isn’t a TV and then, in the evening, we take out a screen and there you go – the news, then MasterChef! I love MasterChef. We’re watching a lot of food programmes because we’re becoming obsessive about what we’re going to eat in the evening.

What else is bringing reassurance while you’re at home with your wife, Anna?

History documentaries and nature are a great comfort at the moment. David Attenborough is one of the things that will get us through this crisis. We’ll probably get going on the box sets soon. Knowing we’re going to be here for the long haul means we’re all eking things out, making them last. I’ve been having a look at the study this morning and I think that could take me at least three days to tidy.

Are you still keeping fit?

I’m going for very fast walks on Hampstead Heath... I have to do something to justify a glass of prosecco in the evening.

Twitter seems to be full of women who are fans of yours...

I really don’t pay much attention to that stuff. It’s nice if you get success at this age [61]. Later in your career you’re more ready for it, you have perspective. You’re not 25 with things coming at you. I’m pleased it’s happened to me at this point, it’s very satisfying.

But you are in good shape...

I’m not bad for my age. I’m not in any pain and I know a lot of people who are suffering. I thank my lucky stars for that.

So, you’d recommend being 61?

I’d recommend being 30 if you’re giving me the choice.

The filming of series six of Line of Duty has been suspended – are you still keeping in touch with the rest of the team?

Everybody in the cast is on WhatsApp at the moment to see how we’re all doing. You should watch Martin’s [Compston] new series The Nest, it’s extremely good. We were filming Line of Duty for nearly four weeks before we closed down, to protect everybody. We just got a sniff of what it was like to be back at work and then it all stopped and we don’t know when it’s going to start again.

Your Line of Duty character Ted Hastings and your character Jim Hogan in Blood seem very similar – essentially decent men who come under suspicion...

They do have a lot in common. They’re both the same age and they both look like me and, when you think about it, they’re both trying to do the right thing all the time.

Blood is set outside Dublin; any other Irish shows you think we should watch?

There are a lot of things in Irish culture that the British public could be more aware of. TG4, the Irish-language station in Galway, produces lots of really interesting programming. And there’s Jimmy Nesbitt’s new drama for the BBC, Bloodlands, set in and around Belfast; that’s going to be really good.

Did you know Sophie Petzal said she pictured you as Jim Hogan when she was writing Blood?

That’s very flattering, and it’s not happened to me before. Every actor knows they are usually fourth or fifth choice.

But you must have been first choice for Ted Hastings?

You don’t know. Producers tend to aim high and they can’t all have the same actor. That’s how it works, you’re never first choice. On the other hand, you never quite know what’s going to come through the door. Those two characters [Ted and Jim] are great, but I’m very happy to do lots of different things. I’d like to do a musical, I’d like to bring out an album, I’d quite like to do some comedy!

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY RADIO I listen to Radio 4, 5 Live, Jazz FM and TalkSport.

MY BOOKS Samuel Beckett’s Dream of Fair to Middling Women. I read the Irish Times every day.

MY MUSIC I’m listening to a lot of Tamla Motown, and traditional Irish music by Andy Irvine and Paul Brady.
