Thank you

Public-service workers. Now, more than ever, we at Boundless want to say thank you.

Founded in 1923, we're a membership club who are here to help public-sector and civil-service workers get more from their time and money. Now, though, we just want to say thank you to the people who put others first. To those who keep turning up, day after day. For the early mornings and late nights. And for keeping the nation running, no matter what.

A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

Testing times

EVEN AS LOCKDOWN starts to ease and parts of Britain begin to stir into life, there remains an unusual stillness about daily life. For some it's been eerie and unsettling, for others a bonus, like a month of old-fashioned Sundays. But if you have listened hard enough, you might just have heard the background hum as millions of us scratched our heads. Because, in lockdown, Britain has become a nation of quizzers.

From Puzzle for Today at breakfast to QI before bed, we exercised our brains long before the virus hit. But since lockdown many of us have been quizzing from dawn to dusk via Zoom or Skype or even the old-fashioned telephone, with friends, family and work colleagues. Proving few things keep us in touch with others better than pitching our little grey cells against theirs.

It's in this spirit that we proudly present on page 8 our bumper lockdown quiz, hosted by our friends, the peerless presenters of Pointless, Alexander Armstrong and Richard Osman. Together they explain the art of the quiz and reveal the golden rule according to television quizmaster, William G Stewart: the best questions are those that leave you saying "Oh, I knew that!" or "Oh, I never knew that!"

We hope you will be shouting both long before you've finished our 50 questions. Then, if you've the appetite for more, test your TV knowledge with a classic RT hidden-clues picture quiz.

For quizzers and non-quizzers alike, here's how to guarantee you get RT every week:

STUART MACONIE

‘I love quizzes and I love Scandinavia,’ says the radio presenter. ‘So, alongside stacked episodes of Richard Osman’s

House of Games, I’m loving State of Happiness on BBC4. It’s a drama about the birth of the Norwegian state oil industry that, frankly, could have been made for me.’

Music that heals – page 110

DR JANINA RAMIREZ

‘I loved being a part of BBC4’s Museums in Quarantine series and all four episodes are worth catching,’ says the historian and presenter. ‘Michael Wood’s Story of England is available, and I love Lucy Worsley’s Royal Photo Album. Best for art history are Waldemar Januszczak’s Mysteries of Art and James Fox’s Age of the Image.’

REBECCA FRONT

‘My daughter has been nagging us for some time to watch Game of Thrones,’ says the actor.

‘I had avoided it because I thought it would be a bit violent, but I’m now completely gripped and we’re watching two episodes per night. I do have to close my eyes quite often, though!’

The Other One – page 22

Don't wreck BBC4!

It's original and unique – not all about repeats

WHISPERS HAVE TURNED into rumours, which have turned into an outcry. The news is out there. BBC4 – the channel dedicated to culture, foreign drama and more – is under threat. The BBC has announced the channel will now focus on the corporation's "rich archive" and I, for one, am deeply concerned.

I'll lay my cards on the table. I want BBC4 to stay because it's been my broadcasting home for over ten years and I've had the privilege of writing and presenting many documentaries on everything from the art of Lisbon to the Hundred Years War. I've always been a proud bookworm, balancing presenting alongside my post as an Oxford lecturer. When I make something for TV, I want to deliver it with as much passion, sincerity and geeky detail as I would in the classroom. BBC4 is the place I can do this.

BBC4's future is uncertain. Will it become a repeats channel? Will they stop commissioning new content? Why do I think we should try to save it and invest even more in it? Because it's truly unique. Only there can you watch Slow TV like a winter sleigh ride, discover foreign dramas like Twins or Inspector Montalbano, find experts delivering considered, hour-long documentaries on often esoteric topics, and watch past episodes of Top of the Pops that are both entertaining and historical (particularly in terms of the outfits)!

Whenever I work abroad and mention BBC4, the response is: "We haven't got a channel like that. It sounds amazing!" In my opinion, it is.

There are complaints levelled against BBC4: that it is intellectually elitist and its slot would better serve the youth audience. BBC4's average audience age is apparently 62 (incidentally, the average audience for BBC1 is 61). Yet over the years, I've had enthusiastic teens, and even school children, tell me how much they enjoyed my programmes. On Twitter the #LoveBBCFour hashtag has attracted comments from all age groups and all demographics. But if it's serving older viewers then that's worth protecting, too? There's something to be said for a channel that appeals to those most vulnerable during this period of uncertainty.

The unanimous cry from all sides is that so many have learnt so much from BBC4. As an advocate of lifelong learning, I often worry that some people feel their education stops when they leave school. BBC4 allows those who may not have had the opportunity to continue studying at 16 or 18 a chance to find new interests. Passionate presenters, many of whom are talking about topics that are the most important things in their lives, deliver content that sparks passion.

I have no doubt that BBC2 will continue to commission arts and science documentaries by more established presenters. But I worry about new talent coming through. I was brought in to BBC4 as a wide-eyed expert, no idea how to do a "walking piece to camera" without falling over. With each opportunity, I've learnt more, studying how documentaries are made and how I can communicate my passions via TV. A pared-down BBC4 team often creates programmes made "from the heart", delivered without the over-editing of bigger budget projects.

But this isn't just about "Saving BBC4". The problem is much broader. The BBC is struggling to maintain its relevance in an ever-more crowded world of content provision. As the coronavirus devastates the economy, the BBC will be left with a huge deficit. But is the answer really to write off the channel that more than any seems to fit Lord Reith's promise to "inform, educate and entertain"?

I for one value ALL the BBC provides and that's why I encourage you to let them know that you #LoveBBCFour. Shout about it or we risk losing it...

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 3-9 JUNE 1995

WHAT WE WATCHED

TV doctors were getting pulses racing, with Jeffrey Geiger (a pre-Homeland Mandy Patinkin) from Chicago Hope and Claire Maitland (a pre-Cold Feet Helen Baxendale) from Cardiac Arrest on the cover. RT assessed their bedside manner with some judgemental critiques: "Mandy may be a girl's name, but he's walking testosterone." Of Baxendale's character, we said, "How her hair shines and her skin stays flawless when she lives on sandwiches and Coke, viewers may never understand." ER's smouldering Doug Ross (George Clooney) impressed us: "He can't say 'hello' to a child's mum without it sounding like a sexual invitation".

WHAT YOU SAID

Christine Spencer of Wincanton, Somerset was lamenting the absence of Bob Flowerdew from Gardeners' World, calling him "the gardening woman's crumpet". Her family had various theories why he was off screen: "My aunt is sure that he's been too busy making 69 (or was it 76?) tit boxes. But my children are convinced his ponytail contravenes BBC presenters' hair-length regulations." She insisted that "he has a large cult following among earthly women of a certain age". Flowerdew would continue on the show until 1997 and is now a regular on Gardeners' Question Time. DAVID BROWN

RT'S BIG LOCKDOWN QUIZ!

Pointless hosts Alexander Armstrong and Richard Osman introduce 50 fiendish brain-teasers from your favourite TV quiz shows

The country is quizzing in lockdown, so has Pointless gained a new audience?

RICHARD OSMAN It's a good question, because daytime TV has very healthy audiences, but now everyone's watching. Pointless is definitely getting a new audience, although we're up against Boris Johnson or Matt Hancock sometimes. If we're up against Matt Hancock our ratings shoot up, but when it's Rishi Sunak we're in trouble. He's very much the Bradley Walsh of the Cabinet.

ALEXANDER ARMSTRONG It's hard to be sure if these are new people coming to Pointless – I'm absolutely certain that's true, but when you go out on the street, you're not being stopped by quite so many people for selfies, for reasons I can't understand. Maybe it's the face mask, I don't know – but we're not getting the daily feedback.

Do you feel that the British TV quizzing scene is in a good place?

RO There are two kinds of people who come on quizzes – those who see it as an experience like climbing Kilimanjaro, and the professionals. The guy who won Mastermind this year is a Fifteen to One champion. And why not? Some people are brilliant at general knowledge, so they enter those competitions. You tend not to see them on Pointless or The Chase so much – more University Challenge and Mastermind.

AA I think it's a stroke of genius having a jackpot that is resolutely low – that keeps the coughing major crowd away. Sometimes by a quirk of fate it can work its way up.

RO We've yet to find anyone coughing in the audience, have we?

AA There's a lot of coughing in the audience, but we've yet to find anyone doing it on cue.

Why do you think quizzes have become so important during the lockdown?

AA We're spending an awful lot of time inside our heads and for some people that's a nice place to be, and for some it's a very

distracts people. You can’t worry as much if you’re trying to think of the capital

difficult place to be. A quiz show distracts you. You can’t be worrying as much if you’re trying to think of an African country – you haven’t got the bandwidth.

RO That’s why people are doing quizzes at home, because you’re constantly being asked to think about something else.

AA And Zoom is a wonderful tool, but it can be a nightmare. If you’ve got something with a bit of structure, Zoom makes sense. So a quiz is perfect, because we’ve all got something to do. It’s like a board game at Christmas. We don’t argue, because we’re trying to decide on the capital of Ecuador.

Are you constantly asked to host quizzes at the moment?

AA Yeah – are you, Rich?

RO Literally non-stop. It’s as if someone’s thought of it for the first time. I do charity ones and I do for people I know, but I get asked a lot. So if I haven’t replied to your email, please forgive me.

Have you taken part in any quizzes yourselves?

RO Yes. I love it. It’s always more fun to play. My favourite bit of any quiz show development is the bit at the beginning where you’re the competitor. People think you’re going to be cleverer than you are, but that’s about the only downside.

AA I’m so much less well informed when it’s not Pointless-type questions. And on Pointless I’m very selective. If I ever volunteer an answer it’s because I know it, and if I don’t know it, I won’t catch Rich’s eye. Some of the names that come up – they might be Dutch footballers or tennis players from the 70s – I listen very carefully and then repeat the noise I think I heard. If they coughed as they said it, I would probably also cough.

What tips do you have for amateur quiz creators?

RO Make sure all your rounds score the same amount. Don’t ask too many questions with very specific answers. “What’s the capital of Surinam?” – either you know it, or you don’t. “Which South American country won the first World Cup?” – you can at least chat and guess. Make sure there’s stuff for different ages; make sure the first question in a round is a bit easier. And remember William G Stewart’s golden rule – the best questions are “Oh, I know that!” or “Oh, I didn’t know that.”

AA I would also add you want everyone to have a good shot at getting at least 70 per cent. I think what our question setters do really well is questions that bring a smile to your face – like “Things Rick Astley is never going to do”. People enjoy them, even if they don’t know what the answer is.

RO Also, crucially, make sure there are not three possible answers to your question. Don’t say, ▷

◁ “Which horse did Ginger McCain train to win the Grand National?” if he trained more than one. A friend of mine’s doing a quiz this week, and wants to do, “Who’s the best-selling female author of all time?” For something like that, find a source you trust, then say, “According to Britannia, who is the best-selling female author in history?” Then you don’t get those endless rows afterwards.

AA And Wikipedia is not a source.

When you’re not quizzing, how have you been surviving lockdown?

RO Well, I decided to take six months off to write my second novel so I’m doing what I thought I’d be doing, except I’m wearing gloves more often than I imagined.

AA You do wear gloves a lot, though.

RO I do, to be fair. The thing is, this is an incredibly difficult time for a huge amount of people. I’m very fortunate, my kids are older so there’s no home schooling, I have a job and I’m one of nature’s introverts. I think I’ve been very lucky.

AA I’m also incredibly lucky – I’m really glad we’ve got a garden. It’s been useful just to get my head back into family life and actually to genuinely participate in my children’s schooling.

RO He’s at home with four kids, can you imagine?

AA I feel I will look back very fondly on the time I’ve spent with them. The worry we all have is – it’s not normal, we haven’t been through this and we don’t know how it’s going to end up.

‘If we’re up against Matt Hancock our ratings go up’

RICHARD OSMAN

For the thousandth episode of Pointless, you switched presenting duties. Are there any plans for similar mischief in episode 2,000?

RO We talked about doing a live episode, didn’t we? It’s always a joke in the studio because we mess up quite a lot.

AA It would certainly be hilarious. The trouble is we would have to end on time to hit the news.

RO Maybe we should be a team?

AA We could be a team!

RO But then either we win, in which case everyone boos us, or we lose and...

AA No, you’re right, that’s a lose/lose situation. I guess we could each try to be a bit better just for once. I mean, I’m rubbish, and Richard’s rough, so maybe we could just do the show properly.

RO That’s an interesting thought. Hard to imagine, but interesting... STEPHEN ARMSTRONG

GRACE BROS

IMAGE MANIPULATION BY IAN MCKINNEL; ALAMY

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE that 20 years have passed since I wrote the first Alex Rider novel, Stormbreaker. Curiously, that first book was all about a deadly virus. The villain, Herod Sayle, had been bullied by the future prime minister when they were both at school and created a mutated form of smallpox as his revenge. Of course, Alex foiled his evil plan, parachuting into the Science Museum in London and destroying his machinery at the last minute. If only life were that simple.

I'm often asked whether the coronavirus might make an appearance in a future Alex book. The answer to that is almost certainly not. What makes the virus so particularly grim, quite apart from all the deaths, is the gnawing uncertainty of it all. When will it end? What is our future to be? Will life ever be the same? We can't even be certain right now where Covid-19 began – and the sad truth is that very few heroes have emerged among our leaders in the UK, or indeed around the world.

Classic children's adventures deal in absolutes, and this is what gives them their longevity. The Pevensie children in CS Lewis's Narnia books easily become kings and queens because they are inherently good, just as the White Witch has no redeeming features whatsoever. Edmund may waver along the way, but that's part of his rite of passage and he emerges as the best of all of them. There is no light and shade between Peter Pan and Captain Hook, Matilda Wormwood and her parents or, for that matter, between James Bond and Blofeld, even allowing for the nuances (the cigarettes, the sex) that accompany their adult world.

ALEX RIDER DOES not drink, smoke, swear, carry a gun, lie or cheat. When he pickpockets a member of the public in Eagle Strike, he agonises over what he has been forced to do for the greater good: "He cursed Damian Cray for turning him into a thief." When he's attacked by two bullies and beats them up in Never Say Die, he at least has the decency to call an ambulance.

That's not to say, though, that he's a goody two-shoes. One of the many things I like about the new Amazon Prime adaptation starring Otto Farrant is that it portrays Alex as a real teenager – partying with his friends, in one memorable scene losing his temper, fighting against authority, never completely in control of his life. I'm very glad that the series is being shown now. And although the latest Alex novel, Nightshade, came out when the bookshops were closed and with no launch party, talks or signings, I still felt the publication was somehow timely.

Right now, we need heroes. Yes, we have the NHS and all the key workers who are keeping the country going. I loved the Banksy image of a child playing with a nurse-doll while Batman and Spider-Man are in the bin. The only problem is that there is no certainty that the nurses will actually win.

If young adult (YA) writers have one sole responsibility, I think it's to provide an optimistic view of the world, to believe in the future, because it's our readers to whom that future belongs. It's one of the reasons why I

'Right now, we need heroes'

With no end to the crisis, children are escaping into fantasy, says Anthony Horowitz returned to Alex after saying that Scorpia Rising would be the last book. It was too gloomy. I felt I had a duty to my readers to return Alex to his old self. Even the title of the next book, Never Say Die, was more affirmative. Characters who had died returned to life. Alex came back to England and to his friends. He was happy again.

THAT'S THE JOY of writing the Alex Rider books and it's what, I hope, makes them relevant now. They make it clear that there is no threat to life or safety that cannot be sorted out – effectively and definitively – by the fortitude and ingenuity of a 14-year-old spy. Herod Sayle has his virus. Damian Cray steals nuclear weapons. The evil organisation, Scorpia, draws on deadly nanotechnology to target the UK's schoolchildren. Alex doesn't even want to be a spy – he's a reluctant hero – but somehow he defeats them all.

After 12 novels and a dozen short stories, Alex has changed. So many bad things have happened to him (shot, kidnapped, manipulated, interrogated, set up for medical experiments etc) that he's inevitably become a little more adult and introspective. But he remains, unambiguously, a hero.

I've often acknowledged my debt to Ian Fleming and Bond, but I was equally inspired by Joseph Campbell's The Hero with a Thousand Faces, which inspired George Lucas when he made Star Wars. Alex receives a call to adventure and follows “a road of trials”. He briefly flirts with the dark side. He brings his experiences back to the ordinary world and helps humanity. The trick of the Alex books, and perhaps one reason why they've lasted so long, is that the central protagonist is both identifiably modern and yet classical at the same time.

It's been wonderful to see so many writers supporting young readers through this crisis, with David Walliams, Cressida Cowell and Francesca Simon among those reading their books online, others providing writing courses and some (Axel Scheffler and Katherine Rundell) even producing completely free books. Many of us have spent years talking about the value of reading and now, suddenly, there's no argument. Back in March, the BBC was reporting a spike in fiction sales of 33 per cent, and although adults seem to be veering towards plague stories (such as The Decameron, The Viral Storm and Journal of the Plague Year), I'd like to think younger readers are using books and stories to get them away from all this.

I've spent my life writing escapist fiction and for me, reading – more than films, TV or computer games – has always been the great escape. I have no idea where we'll be six months from now, but I'm confident that Alex Rider will still be out there, saving the world.

Does your home have a history rich enough to entice David Olusoga to your front door?

THERE ARE 23 million houses in Great Britain. So, when it comes to choosing one to film for A House through Time, it must be hard to know where to start. The four-part BBC1 series has taken a new property and is delving into its past, exploring its history and the lives of its residents over the course of hundreds of years. But how do they even begin to select a home to focus on?

Series producer Mary Crisp explains, "There's a whole process that goes on behind the scenes for months before we even start filming. In fact, I'd say the filming process is only about the final ten per cent of the work."

"There are lots of things to consider. The house we choose needs to cover several different stories: it can't have generations of one family living there for years and years."

"It's also interesting if a house changes status: in other words, goes from being a rich merchant house, for example, to a less wealthy one with residents facing different challenges. We wouldn't choose a vicarage or a house that contains residents with similar occupations.

A HOUSE IS NOT JUST A HOME

PRESENT DAY

"And, quite importantly, the house needs to reflect what's going on in the city, and to some extent Britain in general."

The process starts with picking a city. Having focused on Liverpool in the first series and presenter David Olusoga's former hometown of Newcastle in the second, the current, third series moves to Bristol, which was suggested by Olusoga for its wealth of historical interest.

Crisp explains: "We are pretty open-minded about what sort of stories we aim to cover, but of course there are some threads you expect to see. So in Bristol we'd have been surprised if we didn't hit on the slave trade, as so many houses there are built on jobs connected to that, whether it be directly involved in transporting slaves or perhaps working in the sugar trade, which relied on the labour of enslaved people.

"But really we are looking into the histories of the houses and picking whichever one has the most fascinating stories attached to its residents, whatever they may be."

ONCE THE CITY is chosen, the team then create a longlist of around 200 homes, picking them partly from the National Heritage List for listed buildings index, and partly in a fairly rudimentary way, by driving around and dropping flyers into the homes of properties that catch their eye.

Some can be discounted immediately: those that are built after 1900, for example, or converted barns and stables, which have only become residential recently.

For this series, the team whittled that longlist down to around 80 suitable properties.

TRACE THE STORY OF YOUR HOUSE

How do you uncover your home’s history? Kat Feavers, from A House through Time, shares her top tips

Step 1 Start at the beginning

We usually start with the census because it can be accessed online and it gives you more than just names. It’s available through paid-for sites (findmypast.co.uk or ancestry.co.uk) – your library will likely have subscriptions to these websites so you can access them for free.

It will list everybody living in the household and their relationship to the head of the household. It will also tell you where and when people were born; from there you can find birth, marriage and death certificates. It’s worth creating a separate timeline for each family and tracing them through the censuses.

You can also find your house deeds, if you don’t already have them, by searching online at gov.uk/get-information-about-property-and-land/copies-of-deeds. The electoral registers (at your local library or archive) will also give you names of more recent occupants.

Step 2 Google It

Once you have names, Google will throw up more than you might expect, to start off with. Then in the British Newspaper Archive (britishnewspaperarchive.co.uk), you can find all sorts of amazing stories: court cases, bankruptcies, accidents, suicides. If there’s an unusual name that’s great, but tread carefully with your John Smiths and Ann Robinsons – you have to be sure you’ve got the right one!

Step 3 Check the public records

National and local archives have records you can access digitally or in person. To order a birth, death or marriage certificate, go to the local register office where it was registered. In England and Wales you can also order by calling the General Register Office on 0300 123 1837, or at gov.uk/order-copy-birth-death-marriage-certificate. They cost from £11 each.

Step 4 Watch your spelling

Name spellings can differ, particularly in the 18th century, but even in the 20th century it was common for people fleeing Europe to change their names. So try lots of spellings in your searches.

Step 5 Ask for help

You’ll learn how to read between the lines while researching. A woman with children who says she is married or widowed on the census but still has her maiden name might indicate an illegitimate child. An “unexpected relative” may mean the father is in prison, or the mother has disappeared. You may read something vague such as “indecent assault”, which usually means rape. There will be plenty of experts willing to help you with queries. #househistory on Twitter is great, which is every Thursday between 7pm and 8pm.

Step 6 Check the maps – and the footprint

On large-scale maps, which you can find at your library, you can see the footprint of your house and how it changes over the years. The council can also help with planning permissions granted.

Step 7 Find your local archive

This is where you find that sometimes your parish will have changed boundaries. Street numbers change, too. If you go to your local archive and ask lots of questions, you should find the answers.

Kat Feavers is a development producer on A House Through Time whether the residents are happy for us to film several times a week over three months, which is quite a lot of intrusion. Having said that, they get to find out so much about their home, and people consider that a worthwhile swap.

“Another thing we really need to ask ourselves is, ‘Is there a high turnover of residents?’ Because that is more likely to give us a breadth of stories.”

For the next three months, three full-time researchers scour every available resource to come up with a potted history of the shortlisted homes. They look at the deeds and the census to find the names of residents, then use tools such as historic newspapers, court records and death certificates to search for dramatic events that happened under that roof.

As you might imagine, that process comes with huge eureka moments as well as devastating cul de sacs. “Occasionally the trail goes cold because we can’t track residents,” says Crisp. “But not as often as you’d think. The biggest problem is the lack of turnover of residents – which is vital – or just a lack of diverse stories generally.

“It’s awful when you find one amazing story without enough supporting stories on either side. For this series we found a house in Bristol’s suburb of Montpelier with a gripping infanticide, which would have made a whole programme on its own, but we need enough different stories to make four episodes, right through to the present day. We have to be ruthless.”

When the team have four houses that could all make a gripping series, they are too invested in the process to make an objective decision, and hand the stories over to the BBC for the final say.

And they were pleased with the broadcaster’s choice for this series: 10 Guinea Street, in the parish of Redcliffe, a mile south of the city centre, which was built in 1718 during George I’s reign.

The stories uncovered include that of a runaway slave, piracy, a TB outbreak, a foundling baby left on a doorstep and a mysterious Mrs Watson who doled out pills that induce miscarriage.

Crisp says, “It was a good decision. It’s hard to say which of the four I would have gone for because they are all like my babies! But it would have been up there. There was a fascinating story in Somerset Street, which had a resident who, according to his obituary, had fled the French Revolution, and some family members had been guillotined. But 10 Guinea Street had strong stories throughout the centuries, which is not easy to find.

“The story of the foundling baby is extraordinary, as is Mrs Watson, and Thomas the slave. The house also goes through several stages from being a rich merchant’s house to sliding down the scale somewhat. It’s got a bit of everything, which is just what you hope for when you set out.” EMMA COX

THEY SAY GRIEF takes many forms: and discovering your father's secret second family after his sudden death throws a whole new level of complexity into the mix.

That's the premise of The Other One, in which Catherine ("Cathy") Walcott finds out her late father Colin was hiding another daughter the same age – also called Catherine ("Cat") Walcott.

The set-up is the basis for an Odd Couple-style sitcom as Cathy (Ellie White) is middle-class, square, and anxious: the exact opposite of Cat (Lauren Socha), who lives on a council estate and is warm, chaotic and laid-back.

Writers Holly Walsh and Pippa Brown also explore the different ways in which the two young women and their mothers Tess (Rebecca Front) and Marilyn (Siobhan Finneran) navigate the mourning process.

Comedian and stand-up Walsh, who also co-wrote hit BBC comedy Motherland, says the premise came from "a friend who knew someone who did exactly that – including giving both his children the same name to avoid suspicion. The guy sounded awful, so I decided I shouldn't write about him, but about the people who are left behind. Pippa and I always wanted to write about messed-up women with flaws."

Says Finneran: "Holly's a wonderful writer. I loved Motherland and what that did was have you roaring with laughter one minute, then it'd be followed by quite a stressful or difficult scene."

Having four lead actresses, a pair of female writers, female executive producers and director (The Other One is Walsh's directorial debut) is something that everybody agrees is still unusual: but vital.

"Having female directors is particularly important," says White, who is arguably best-known for playing Beatrice in The Windsors. "Everything that's come before on film and TV has been established by men, but it's so important to have a female viewpoint."

"People are far more interested in female voices now, and more women are doing it."

And women in comedy form friendships because we have a shared experience: every woman has been told she's 'funny for a girl' or seen dumbfounded faces at a woman on a stand-up stage."

Even Front, who won a Bafta for her role in The Thick of It, says that she has rarely been in such a female-centric series.

"I've done a couple of things, like Up the Women with Jessica Hynes," she says. "But yes, it's still unusual. And it's interesting

SECRETS, LIES AND LAUGHS

Following Fleabag and Motherland, meet the stars of the BBC's latest female comedy, about a dead man's secret second family. But can heartbreak be funny?

MULTI-TALENTED
Writer Holly Walsh is also a successful stand-up that we always end up talking about it because it should be a thing.

"It is changing and I've seen a real difference in the past 15 years, but we mustn't get complacent and say, 'We've got the women thing now', or 'the black comedy thing' or 'the Asian thing'. This is a golden age for comedy, but now there is this outpouring of great content, we have to keep it coming."

White, who also writes and performs in a double act with Natasia Demetriou, agrees that the part made a change compared to the usual scripts that land on her doormat.

She says, "There's so much more to them than strait-laced Cathy and crazy Cat, which was very appealing. It's very much the case that you still get very dry female characters in scripts, or ones who are meant to be crazy and kooky but are just one-dimensional. Cathy was way more complex than anything I'm usually sent."

"I remember when Fleabag first came out. I'd be pitching a show and I'd say 'I'm writing a show based on a 19th-century farm' and they'd go, 'OK, but you could be a sex addict and talk to the camera...'

"Fleabag was amazing, but we don't need

EXTENDED FAMILY
Rebecca Front, Ellie White, Lauren Socha and Siobhan Finneran

THE EARLIER ONE
Walsh also co-wrote hit comedy Motherland, starring Diane Morgan, Anna Maxwell Martin and Paul Ready

The premise of The Other One particularly resonated with Socha. Her father Robert died of an alcohol-related heart attack when she was just 15, having already left Lauren's mother Kathleen and started a new family.

As a result, Socha found herself digging particularly deep into her feelings to play Cat. "I miss my dad very dearly. He's not met my daughter or seen me grow as a woman. I never mentioned it at work, but I used those feelings on set.

"I have two stepbrothers and a half-brother, and I always felt pushed out. Not that my dad made it like that, but you're just figuring

'As women we have all been told we're "funny for a girl"'

HOLLY WALSH

stuff out as a kid. My brothers had a bedroom in Dad's house that got painted and I didn't; that sort of stuff.

"I've tried to reach out to my half-brother, he's 21 now but perhaps he's not ready. He knows where I am."

For Front, the appeal of The Other One was characterisation and humour, but also the beautifully negotiated balance between laugh-out-loud comedy and quieter, more poignant moments. It follows a trend of comedies from Catastrophe and After Life to Fleabag and Mum that have a deep emotional story at their heart.

Says Front, "I think in a way we've always had that [in comedy]. Only Fools and Horses always had that, and so did Carla Lane's Butterflies. But we would try and hide it, and we'd take the mickey out of American comedies for having those schmaltzy scenes.

"I think we're much more accepting these days of scenes within a comedy that have feeling and truth. In an ideal world you can have heart-breaking scenes with fantastic lines that are still funny." EMMA COX another one. It was original and fresh. If you try and re-create something, it's just going to be s**t."

For Socha, who made her name in the gritty Samantha Morton-directed The Unloved, won a Bafta for Channel 4's Misfits and starred in Five Daughters, based on the Ipswich serial murders, The Other One also switched things up for her.

"I'm always the crackhead, prostitute or rude girl and I'm so bored with it. It's clichéd," she says. "People might expect Cat to be the drunk, naughty one, but she's not at all. She's soft, and she's got charm, and she doesn't do loads of drugs or smoke all the time. It was a good part for me."

Socha recently made headlines for returning to work as a care assistant during the coronavirus outbreak at a home in Derbyshire. "I've always done it [balanced care work with acting] so I was surprised it became a big story. I don't work for six or seven months of the year and I need to earn a living. And I love doing it. I look after a lady of 100, and she's brilliant."

IF SOCHA WAS offered more comedy work like The Other One, however, she'd jump at it. "I never thought I'd turn to comedy in my acting career," she says. "I was probably angry all the time before I was a mum [she has a daughter Reenie, four], but I laugh at situations more now. I look at things differently."

'I know who I am now'

Simon Jeffery was just hours old when he was abandoned outside a pub toilet. Six decades later he found his siblings...

FOR MOST OF his 57 years, Simon Jeffery has yearned to turn back the clock to the very moment he was born. "I wanted to go back in time to see what happened, and why," he says now.

It's a sentiment shared by other foundlings: babies abandoned at birth who are left with no sense of their identity and little way of tracing their parents or their origins.

For decades, Simon knew only this: that on a cold October night in 1963, when he was just a few hours old – parts of the umbilical cord were still attached to him – he was placed in a box and abandoned outside the ladies' toilet in a pub in Greenhithe, Kent, where he was found by a member of the local darts team.

Beyond those few, poignant facts lay an enduring mystery. While Simon had a very happy upbringing with his adopted parents, Kathleen and Ernest Jeffery, questions over his start in life have always hung over him.

Today, though, those questions have been answered, courtesy of the ITV series Long Lost Family. A DNA test in March 2018 ultimately revealed a match to a full brother – one of six full siblings, all older. Moreover, their family home in Gravesend was just a few streets away from where Simon was brought up.

This astonishing story is unravelled this week by Simon and three of his four surviving siblings, Tony, Christine and Julie – none of whom had known of their baby brother's existence. "There was nothing there at all to ever indicate what had happened and that our parents had given up a baby," Julie recalls today.

Simon grew up knowing he was adopted, but it wasn't until he was ten years old that he came across a tin of newspaper cuttings about a baby's abandonment and concluded that he must be the infant in question. The discovery came as a bombshell. "It felt like being discarded," he says. "I wanted to know where my mum was – was she found, was she OK and why she abandoned me."

Simon never mentioned to Kathleen what he had learnt, for fear of hurting her feelings, but as soon as he was old enough, he secretly began searching for his birth mother. It was a search hampered by perilously little information. It's one reason he continued to live in the home where he grew up, following Kathleen's death in 1989, in the hope that if his birth mum came looking for him, she might find him.

She never did, and her other surviving children – born between 1951 and 1961 – can only speculate on what happened.

"All I can think of is that Mum had six children and he came along and she just couldn't cope," says Julie. "We didn't have any money, we had a tiny house, my youngest sister had been born three months premature and we do think Mum might have had postnatal depression. Either way, once they'd done it they couldn't go back. Admitting it would have been too difficult."

The secret was preserved for nearly 60 years. Yet when presenter Davina McCall showed Simon a photograph of his siblings, there was "an instant connection".

"It's hard to describe," he says. "I couldn't believe how much we looked like each other."

It's a sentiment that's shared by his remaining brothers and sisters, who have delightedly welcomed him into the extended family fold, which now includes Simon's three children alongside seven of their own.

"It was hard at first to find out Mum and Dad had abandoned him," says Julie. "We worried that would be difficult. At the same time, they had their reasons, which we are never going to know, so we just had to get on with it, and accept it happened."

FOR HIS OWN part, Simon says he has never felt bitterness towards his birth parents. "We can't change the past. As I said to Julie, let's shut that door and move forward."

Sharing their lives has, however, led to some extraordinary revelations, not least that Simon and Julie worked at the same Co-op store in Dartford at the same time in the 80s. "I probably bumped into Julie in the canteen dozens of times, never knowing she was my sister," he says.

His older brother Colin, who has since sadly died, worked in the store's bakery, where Simon remembers a friendly male assistant who would give him free doughnuts. "We went for a drink on one occasion and now I wonder if that man was my brother?" he says.

It's one of the few remaining question marks – but Simon is happy to let it lie. He's just grateful that he's finally found the identity he's spent a lifetime searching for. "I'm no longer a foundling – I'm a sibling, I'm a brother," he says. "I know who I am now."

FILM OF THE WEEK

Ice breaker

Frozen ★★★★★

Saturday 6.20pm BBC1

THE COLD, HARD REALITY of capitalism is that big begets bigger and bigger begets biggest. Crane your neck toward the top of any list of highest-grossing films and you'll see a bottleneck. The victors largely combine big budget and risk-aversion; they're too big to fail. However, with all that on board, it would seem self-defeating to write off, say, Frozen, just because it's been built by experts.

The planet's third-highest-grossing animated film, Frozen was painstakingly conceived, modernised, researched, scripted, designed, scored, animated, cast, translated, dubbed into 41 languages and laser-marketed by Walt Disney Animation Studios to herald Thanksgiving 2013. It scored a captive holiday audience sassier and younger than I am, and willingly merchandised into mass adoption of this cool update of Hans Christian Andersen's The Snow Queen.

The same demographic who'd flocked to The Princess Diaries, Tangled and Enchanted now had Frozen's Grammy- and Oscar-winning singalong hit Let It Go, viewed on YouTube more than two billion times.

YET IT'S A captivating, visually bejewelled, family-friendly musical ingeniously adjusted for modern audiences without denying its Scandi origins. Young princess Elsa (Idina Menzel) is cursed by a secret ability to produce sub-zero weather, isolating her from younger sis Anna (Kristen Bell) after causing icy harm. Elsa's issues prevent the marriage of Anna to a handsome prince (Jonathan Groff, from HBO's fabulous gay comedy drama Looking), resulting in an almighty tiff, self-imposed exile in an ice palace and the kingdom locked down for an eternal winter.

Old-fashioned Disney charm comes via Olaf the deluded snowman and Sven the hee-hawing reindeer, while writers/co-directors Jennifer Lee and Chris Buck have rebuilt the tale from the central sibling relationship up, with a nod, too, to the sterling pipes of Menzel, a Broadway star who belts out that sig tune.

Last year's Frozen II is also worth a look, promoted – as it was destined to be in the UK – by supermarket Iceland. The irony is that the all-time highest-grossing animation is the photorealist 2019 Lion King, which pushes Frozen II to two, and Frozen to three.

Elsa will just have to learn to let it go.

The Good, the Bad and the Ugly ★★★★★

Sunday 9.00pm Paramount Network

The man with no need of a surname is 90 years old on 31 May, as active as ever in front of and behind the camera. (His most recent film, the true story of wrongly convicted titular security guard Richard Jewell, is available on DVD and to download on 8 June.) Eastwood fashioned laconic icon status for himself under a poncho for Sergio Leone's cult spaghetti westerns before expanding to include cops, commandos and, well, more cowboys, while also earning his spurs as a director. Sky Cinema Greats is also showing arguably his finest work, 1992's Unforgiven (Sun 4.45pm, Thu 6.45pm), which earned four Oscars. AC

ADVENTURE In a genre filled with noise and gimmicks, Pixar went back to basics with this touching tale about a young dinosaur (voiced by Raymond Ochoa) who is stranded with a cave-boy far from home. Keeping things simple proves a double-edged sword, though, meaning this isn't quite up there with the studio's finest. However, it's well told and features cleverly cast supporting roles, including Sam Elliott as a grizzled T rex. The story is emotionally involving and the stunning animation provides some jaw-dropping moments and delivers plenty of thumping dinosaur action. JL (US 2015, HD)

COMEDY ADVENTURE This animated pastiche of PoW classics represents Aardman studios at its best. The nods to the likes of The Great Escape are funny and plentiful, as charismatic rooster Rocky promises to help the hens in a high-security egg farm find a way to freedom. The largely British voice cast (Julia Sawalha, Jane Horrocks, Miranda Richardson, Timothy Spall) lends moments of humour and pathos, and the set pieces are exhilarating in their ingenuity and comic élan. The need to justify Mel Gibson's vocal presence as Rocky slows the pace occasionally, but this is still a soaring flight of fancy. DP (US/UK 2000, HD)

COMEDY Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon are ideally matched in this crackling cross-dressing caper, playing a pair of 1920s musicians who hide out in an all-girl band after witnessing the St Valentine's Day Massacre. Curtis didn't always get on with Marilyn Monroe (he compared his embraces with her to kissing Hitler), but sparks fly when she falls for his bogus oil tycoon – who boasts the voice of Cary Grant and the body language of Grace Kelly! Lemmon's fling with his own millionaire is equally hilarious. Lemmon and Curtis are celebrated in Talking Pictures specials that bookend the film. DP (US 1959, BW, HD)

FANTASY It was dismissed by critics as a worthless excuse for some computer effects, but as empty experiences go this is one of the best. Children will be spellbound (and younger ones slightly scared) by the marauding beasts unleashed when Kirsten Dunst and Bradley Pierce rescue Robin Williams from the board game in which he's been trapped for 26 years. Any film where the action is determined by a roll of the dice is bound to be episodic, but that doesn't detract from the enjoyment as one spectacular set piece follows another. The result is wonderful family entertainment. DP (US 1995, HD)

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Captain America: Civil War ★★★★★
9.30pm-12.15am ITV 12

ADVENTURE Poor old Captain America went to the back of the Marvel Cinematic Universe queue when the Avengers were introduced. He was furloughed while Iron Man, Hulk and Thor were assembled first – but Cap's origins story, set during the Second World War and maturely told in Captain America: the First Avenger, was one of my favourites. In Civil War, the super-soldier's third outing, Cap (Chris Evans) has adjusted to the 21st century, where his old mucker Bucky Barnes (Sebastian Stan) is now the brainwashed rogue Winter Soldier and Secretary of State Thaddeus Ross (a returning William Hurt) wants to take the Avengers under a UN umbrella. The politician's plan divides Avenger opinion, creating a rift between Cap and Iron Man (Robert Downey Jr). Tom Holland has marginal fun as his humorous Spider-Man joins the gang, and a debuting Black Panther (Chadwick Boseman) sweetens the mix. (US 2016, violence, some swearing, HD)

MUSICAL This movie brought director Baz Luhrmann's "Red Curtain" trilogy to a suitably colourful and theatrical close after the success of Strictly Ballroom and Romeo + Juliet. Ewan McGregor stars as the struggling writer who falls in love with beautiful courtesan Nicole Kidman at the Parisian nightclub of the title, but their love is threatened by her tuberculosis, as well as her betrothal to unscrupulous duke Richard Roxburgh. The simple story is staged with a near-insane visual ambition, all wrapped up in an audacious mix of traditional and contemporary song. You'll either fall in love with every camp flourish or find yourself exhausted after 20 minutes, but either way it's a singular achievement. AC (US/Aus 2001, some violence, HD)

Bram Stoker's Dracula ★★★★★
9.00-11.30pm Horror Channel 18

HORROR Eerie, romantic and operatic, this exquisitely mounted revamp of the undead legend is a supreme artistic achievement. Francis Ford Coppola's film is grandiose in its visual approach and uses every cinematic trick – from the basic atmospheric lighting of the silent era to today's more sophisticated digital techniques – to accentuate the poetic sensuality of Bram Stoker's novel, rather than the more exploitative bloodsucking elements. Keanu Reeves's acting as threatened estate agent Jonathan Harker may not be to everyone's taste, but, as the tired count who has overdosed on immortality, Gary Oldman's towering performance holds centre stage and burns itself into the memory. AJ (US 1992, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity)

As cyber-terrorists led by Timothy Olyphant threaten to hack America to a complete standstill, McClane is once more the wrong guy in the wrong place at the wrong time. Willis returns to the role that made him an action star with unexpected ease, striking up a witty, odd-couple partnership with Justin Long's cowardly hacker. Gere is especially good as the dishonest and often violent policeman, and the vendetta that develops between him and the perpetually smouldering Garcia enthralls and repels in equal measure. 7.30-10.00pm ITV 12

FANTASY In the style of a multidirectional Star Wars saga, JK Rowling's Wizarding World seems set for the long haul, with the Fantastic Beasts films doing a good job of filling that Harry Potter-size hole in our lives. Having worked his magic on the final four Potter films, director David Yates was brought back to help launch the prequel series, which introduces Eddie Redmayne's soft-hearted academic Newt Scamander, whose Tardis-like suitcase of critters causes mayhem in Jazz Age New York. Meanwhile, Ezra Miller's abused adoptee and Colin Farrell's powerful auror orbit one another ominously. The connections to Hogwarts are explored in more depth in sequel The Crimes of Grindelwald, but there's enough invention and whimsy in this opener to keep Potter fans glued. We await news of part three with bated breath. (UK/US 2016, violence, HD)

●● The Book of Life ★★★★★

1.25-3.15pm C4 U

COMEDY Imagine a Tim Burton animation splashed with bright colour and you'll get an idea of The Book of Life. Inspired by the Mexican Day of the Dead holiday, it follows troubadour Manolo (voiced by Diego Luna) through the Lands of the Living, the Dead and the Forgotten, driven by his love for local beauty Maria (Zoë Saldana). Writer/director Jorge R Gutierrez keeps the story simple, but tackles the subject of death with gusto and occasional humour, never patronising younger viewers. Boasting vivid characters and psychedelic landscapes of stunning depth and detail, this will transport you to other worlds. SP (US 2014, HD)

●●●● Oklahoma! ★★★★★

2.05-4.20pm BBC2 U

MUSICAL This rousing film version of the massively influential Rodgers and Hammerstein Broadway production retains both the superb songs and Agnes DeMille's choreography. The location photography is stunning, particularly in the Oh, What a Beautiful Morning opening sequence. Heading the notable cast is the underrated Gordon MacRae as a finely shaded romantic Curly, while Shirley Jones, in her film debut, is superb as Laurey. If Rod Steiger is a shade morose and out of kilter, well, so is his character, Jud Fry. Director Fred Zinnemann can't quite muster the required pizzazz, but there's still much to enjoy. TS (US 1955)

●● The Lost World: Jurassic Park

★★★★ 3.45-6.05pm ITV PG

ADVENTURE There's another island full of genetically created dinosaurs in this exuberant sequel to Jurassic Park. But while there is a sense of déjà vu, it never gets in the way of the excitement and spectacular effects, which are served up in deliciously scary dollops. With Richard Attenborough and Jeff Goldblum back to test the balance of nature off the coast of Costa Rica, director Steven Spielberg ensures his epic thrill-ride delivers the goods. Even though the final third, where a T rex terrifies San Diego, seems tacked on, events move at such a pace there's barely time to think about anything other than screaming in amazement. AJ (US 1997, edited for violence, swearing, HD)

●●● Dunkirk ★★★★★

5.00-7.15pm BBC2 PG

WAR DRAMA Showing to mark the 80th anniversary of the evacuation of Dunkirk, this reconstruction of events is impressive in scale and authenticity but slightly disappointing in its execution. John Mills, Richard Attenborough and

Bernard Lee scarcely have to act, as their respective parts – a corporal lost on the beaches, a snivelling stay-at-home and a cynical reporter – are so tailor-made. Director Leslie Norman (father of Barry) handles the manoeuvres with skill and gives it all a docudramatic feel, but his approach is too reverential and eager to inspire rather than engross. The film is preceded by a Talking Pictures special devoted to Attenborough. DP (UK 1958, BW)

6.40-9.00pm Sony Movies 12

COMEDY DRAMA In his early career, Johnny Depp avoided the sort of films his pretty boy looks would seem to demand, and this gentle oddity is a case in point. Depp takes the title role, playing the sensitive but level-headed teenager coping with an enormously obese, housebound mother (Darlene Cates) and a mentally disabled younger brother (Leonardo DiCaprio). The latter steals the show, but the entire cast, which also includes Juliette Lewis and Crispin Glover, is excellent. Director Lasse Hallström lets sentiment creep in, but demonstrates a sharp outsider's eye for the quirkiness of Americana. JF (US 1993, may be edited for swearing, sex scenes)

THRILLER The fruitless search for Weapons of Mass Destruction after the 2003 Iraq invasion leaves one dogged US Army officer questioning his own side in this reteaming of Bourne franchise director Paul Greengrass and star Matt Damon. The action takes place following the fall of Saddam, with Greengrass's trademark handheld camera on hand to capture the mayhem. CIA boss Brendan Gleeson, Washington intelligence expert Greg Kinnear and ordinary Iraqi Khalid Abdalla give powerful performances illustrating all sides of the argument. Exciting and thought-provoking, this is popular cinema at its most enjoyable. TJ (US/UK/Fr/Sp 2010, violence, swearing, HD)

●●● Die Another Day ★★★★★

10.20pm-12.45am ITV 12

ADVENTURE Before James Bond went back to basics with Casino Royale, director Lee Tamahori pulled out all the stops for this 007 adventure. From North Korea to a dazzling Icelandic snow palace, the locations are inspired, even if the plot is more preposterous than ever (invisible car, anyone?). Pierce Brosnan is on fine form as a vengeful 007, combining the secret agent's usual charm with a degree of toughness and venom. The introduction of Halle Berry as a truly equal, if underdeveloped, female sidekick was also a coup at the time. The only real problems are Madonna's grating theme song and her dire cameo as a fencing instructor. SF (UK/US 2002, violence, sex scenes, HD)

●●●● Billy Elliot ★★★★★

10.30pm-12.15am BBC1 15

DRAMA Stage director Stephen Daldry made his feature debut with this amiable study of daring to be different. The decision to set this story of an 11-year-old north-easterner's ballet ambitions against the backdrop of the 1984 miners' strike has more emotional resonance than social relevance; it's the heart, not the conscience, that Daldry is keenest to tweak. He succeeds triumphantly, thanks largely to Jamie Bell's performance as Billy (for which he won a Bafta and an Oscar nomination), and marvellous support from Gary Lewis as Billy's dad and Julie Walters as his dance teacher. DP (UK 2000, swearing, HD)

BLACK COMEDY This great little film launched the career of Richard E Grant and has since developed into a cult classic. Grant and Paul McGann play two out-of-work, drink- and drugs-sodden actors in 1960s London. Tiring of the baroque squalor of their Camden flat, the pair decamp to the Lake District where they struggle to survive the weather and the lecherous advances of Uncle Monty (Richard Griffiths). This hilarious, poignant film was written and directed by Bruce Robinson and based on his own experiences as a struggling actor. SH (UK 1986, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Day of the Jackal ★★★★★
9.00pm-12.05am Sony Movies Classic 15

THRILLER A glossy update of this 1973 classic was just what we didn't need in 1997. Marquee stars Bruce Willis and Richard Gere proved an attractive enough star pairing, but it was a fool's errand. The chilly, hard-wearing original, directed with care and a keen attention to detail by Fred Zinnemann, remains the definitive telling of Frederick Forsyth's novel. Edward Fox is neither cold nor showy as the interrailing Jackal, charged with assassinating General de Gaulle, and tracked by Michel Lonsdale's deputy commissioner. There's some Bond-like seduction of aristos, but otherwise the fuse burns slowly, deliberately and compellingly to its explosive conclusion. (UK/Fr 1973, violence, swearing, brief nudity)

DID YOU KNOW?
The Jackal's rifle was specifically designed and built for the film. Two were made: one went to a museum; the other to the authorities

The Incredible Shrinking Man ★★★★★
1.00-2.35pm Horror Channel PG

SCI-FI This must-see classic is directed by the master of 1950s science fiction, Jack Arnold, and derived from the thought-provoking novel by genre luminary Richard Matheson. Grant Williams slowly shrinks after passing through a radioactive cloud and, on the way down, sees his marriage collapse and is terrorised by the pet cat and a basement spider. A cogent comment on the plight of the "little man" in today's hi-tech world, Arnold's superlative thriller still retains its irony, shock and power. AJ (US 1957, BW)

Pal Joey ★★★
2.45-4.30pm BBC2 PG

MUSICAL Frank Sinatra's expert delivery of some great Rodgers and Hart songs, including The Lady Is a Tramp, more than makes up for the whitewash here of the black-hearted hero from the stage version. Joey is now a crooner, not a hooper as on stage, and his lust for bed (on the make for fading star Rita Hayworth, but really loving Kim Novak) and bright lights has been toned down for an out-of-kilter happy ending. Novelist John O'Hara's original Broadway exposé clearly deserved a more sarcastic treatment. There are more matinée musicals all this week on BBC2. TH (US 1957, HD)

Groundhog Day ★★★★★
6.55-9.00pm Sony Movies PG

ROMANTIC COMEDY Bill Murray gives one of the best performances of his career here as Phil Connors, the weatherman with attitude, trapped in a day he will remember for the rest of his life because, unless he can find some answers, it will be the rest of his life. Director Harold Ramis uses every trick in the book to keep what is essentially a one-gag movie brimming with life and ideas, with dark laughs guaranteed during the montage where Connors repeatedly tries to end it all. Stephen Tobolowsky gives a superb turn as a nerdy insurance salesman and, as Connors's producer, Andie MacDowell has never been better. DP (US 1993, swearing)

Stargate ★★★★★
9.00-11.25pm Film4 PG

SCI-FI Aliens colonised ancient Egypt through a space-time portal, according to this hugely enjoyable adventure, which gives Erich Von Daniken's ideas an Indiana Jones-style action makeover. James Spader is terrific as the code-cracking archaeologist who accompanies soldier Kurt Russell across the universe to fight galactic tyrant Jaye Davidson. Stargate is simple in execution, yet classic in the nostalgic way it evokes the feel of vintage 1940s serials, with director Roland Emmerich doing an outstanding job combining plot strands from literature and other films of the genre. It's fabulous fun, and the film spawned several TV series. AJ (US/Fr 1994, violence, swearing, HD)

3 Days to Kill ★★
10.55pm-1.00am C5 12

THRILLER On paper, this genre movie looks like an attempt to do for Kevin Costner what Taken did for Liam Neeson. Unfortunately, it doesn't have Taken's pace and energy. Costner plays a veteran CIA agent whose assignment in Paris is complicated by his attempts to connect with his surly teenage daughter (Hailee Steinfeld). The performances can't be faulted, and the action sequences have plenty of verve, but director McG interrupts these with tedious comedy sequences in which Costner gets parenting tips from various villains, plus some overly sentimental moments where he tries to bond with his family. JF (US/Fr 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

DRAMA David Essex is perfectly cast here as the teenager looking to escape humdrum 1950s suburbia. He brings a certain swagger to the role of Jim MacLaine, who abandons school to work in a holiday camp and then with a travelling fair, as he dreams of rock 'n' roll stardom. Director Claude Whatham and writer Ray Connolly eschew the perfect, sun-kissed teen world depicted in Frankie Avalon films for a grittier tale set in an austere postwar Britain, with Ringo Starr, Keith Moon and Billy Fury among the music royalty in support. TP (UK 1973, swearing)

MUSICAL After 644 performances as "the hostess with the mostest" in Irving Berlin's hit Broadway show, Ethel Merman repeated her role on the big screen for the world to enjoy. Yet she doesn't quite outdo the scintillating dancing of Donald O'Connor (as her press attaché) and Vera-Ellen (as a princess); nor does she upstage the suave George Sanders, who steals Merman's heart. The film saw Dorothy Dandridge become the first African American to be nominated for the Academy Award for best actress

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Carmen Jones ★★★★★ 2.50-4.30pm BBC2 U

MUSICAL "Something musically terrific!" yelled the trailer for this lavish African-American opera released in 1954. It sizzles with energy, belts out great songs reworded by Oscar Hammerstein II from Bizet's opera Carmen and feeds off its own reputation. Ironically, director Otto Preminger didn't like the stage version and sought to restore its soul by making it "a dramatic film with music". Dorothy Dandridge plays Carmen, a North Carolina factory worker during the Second World War who's arrested and escorted by Harry Belafonte, whom she fails to seduce. She ends up working in a nightclub, various jealousies lead to violence and, true to the source, tragedy looms. The songs have phonetic titles (Dat's Love, Stan' Up an' Fight) that feel reductive now, but the sheer heat of the numbers compensates, and there's full-bodied support from Pearl Bailey, Diahann Carroll and Joe Adams. (US 1954)

12.45-2.55pm Sony Movies Classic PG

ROMANCE Graham Greene's novel of doomed love in war-torn London is convincingly brought to life by director Edward Dmytryk and contains a trio of powerful star performances from Deborah Kerr, John Mills and Peter Cushing. The only weak link is Van Johnson, who fails to achieve the requisite Catholic angst, which is certainly suggested but not really explored by Stephen Murray, who plays the all-important priest. TS (UK 1954, BW)

Two Mules for Sister Sara ★★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm Paramount Network 15

WESTERN Clint Eastwood plays a bemused cowboy in this immensely enjoyable Don Siegel caper, saving nun Shirley MacLaine from a fate worse than death in the Mexican desert. The leads are perfectly paired, and MacLaine turns in a great comic performance. Siegel keeps up the tension and pace, though some may find the final, gory battle scene out of kilter with the rest of the movie. SH (US 1970, violence, swearing, HD) Clint at 90, page 26

The Game ★★★★★

When amoral cop Michael Shannon needs cash for a gambling debt, he'll stop at nothing to get his hands on the valuable parcel the cyclist is out to deliver. Gordon-Levitt did many of his own stunts during the production (sustaining an injury requiring 31 stitches – check the end credits) and he gives a charismatic lead performance, while Shannon is simply delicious as the bad guy. KK (US 2012, some violence, brief swearing)

Smartphones - helping you be closer to your loved ones

In just a few taps of the screen you could be sharing a video call – talking to them as if they were right there beside you.

Smartphones can do so much more than make phone calls.

You can video call your family, text, browse the web or keep up with friends on Facebook, anywhere from your home to a cafe to the bus.

But using them isn't always as easy as you'd want – and that's putting it mildly.

Do the manufacturers do it on purpose?

It can seem like they make it hard on purpose, hiding away how to use the best features. Swipe up, swipe down, swipe sideways or in... double swipe... how on earth are you suppose to know what to do until you've been shown?

And there's no manual with it - or if there is, there might as well not be for all the good it does!

That's why I've published two books: iPhones One Step at a Time and Android Phones One Step at a Time.

Plain English... and that's not all

These books explain how to use the phone in plain simple language, with pictures of the screen showing you exactly where to tap or slide your fingers.

No jargon!

Only Half the Story...

That's only half the story, but I don't have room to explain what I mean by that here. So I've put together full information about the books – who they're for, what they cover and so on.

What's more, the books also come with a small free gift – no room to explain that here, either!

"Should come with every smartphone"

Here's what one reader said:
"Thanks for a fantastic smart phone book. Very pleasant staff as usual."

I think this book should be sold with every smart phone. I have learnt so much from it, the info you get with the phone is non-existent."

Don't buy now, do this instead:

These books aren't available in the shops or Amazon. Instead, you can find out the full details about them: what's covered, who they're suitable for and what you might be missing out on, then decide. Just ask for a free information pack.

Quick and Easy to get Yours

Why not ring or send off for the free information now? There's no obligation at all. Discover what the books will do for you and about the free gift. (And don't worry, we won't share your details with anyone else.)

FILM OF THE DAY

Professor Marston and the Wonder Women ★★★

11.10pm-1.20am Film4 15

BIOPIC This film offers a portrait of Harvard academic William Moulton Marston, the man who created Wonder Woman. It reveals how the feminist ideals and sexual fantasies of Marston (Luke Evans) and the two women in his life – his wife (Rebecca Hall) and their shared lover (Bella Heathcote) – fed into his creation of comicdom's first successful and, at times, controversial female superhero. It's an untold tale well told, and you won't see Wonder Woman in the same light again. DA (US 2017, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Newsies: the Broadway Musical ★★★★★

1.00-3.10pm BBC2 PG

MUSICAL This is a glorious filmed version of the Broadway hit about a group of newspaper boys who form a union to get better treatment from their bosses. While there's all the gloss you'd expect from a Disney movie, the script doesn't shy away from harsh reality. It may lack the thrill of the live experience for theatre fans, but this works as a happy compromise between the stage and the screen, with Jeremy Jordan giving a terrific performance as "newsie" Jack Kelly. JL (US 2017, some violence, HD)

The Rebel ★★★

7.20-9.25pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Tony Hancock's first star vehicle is no masterpiece, but it is a fascinating misfire. Written by Ray Galton and Alan Simpson, the film has all the touches that made Hancock's Half-Hour so popular, although they seem a little strained over the course of a film. Happier in suburbia using landlady Irene Handl as a model for "Aphrodite by the Waterhole" than he is fooling the pretentious Parisians of the Left Bank, Hancock is his usual deluded, pompous self, while suave George Sanders is as watchable as ever. DP (UK 1961)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Beach ★★★★★

9.00-11.25pm Sony Movies 15

ADVENTURE I first met Danny Boyle at a film awards bash in 1996, where his debut, Shallow Grave, came away with three Perspex slabs and we ended up doing that disloyal thing of ducking out of the posh hotel and going for a pint. We spent the rest of the evening raving about our shared love of Apocalypse Now. Boyle's ambitious fourth film was an adaptation of Alex Garland's hip novel The Beach, with Leonardo DiCaprio taking top billing as a thrill-seeking backpacker in Thailand who becomes caught up in the search for a mythic, paradisiacal island after an encounter with Robert Carlyle's drug burnout (a role that could have been modelled on one of the zonked-out GIs in Apocalypse Now). It makes sense to think of the whole hallucinogenic affair as a gap-year war movie staged as a video game. (US/UK 2000, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, drug abuse)

DID YOU KNOW?

The Gay Divorce ★★★★★

2.45-4.30pm BBC2 U

MUSICAL A case of mistaken identity fuels this knockout musical comedy, the follow-up to Flying down to Rio. Fred Astaire is paired with Ginger Rogers as leads for the first time, and how they shine! The score includes the Cole Porter classic Night and Day and the Oscar-winning The Continental. The sets (including a very deco Brighton) are ingenious, and the supporting cast is witty and well chosen. Watch out for a pre-stardom Betty Grable, performing Let's K-nock K-nees with Edward Everett Horton. A delight all round, it's preceded by Astaire and Rogers Sing George and Ira Gershwin. TS (US 1934, BW, HD)

Forever Female ★★★

5.30-7.20pm Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY And Ginger Rogers also stars in this new addition to Talking Pictures TV, a comedy that's haunted by the ghost of All About Eve (1950), but is bitchy, witty and romantic in its own right. Rogers is the fading stage star desperate to regain her top-billed status, who competes with ambitious youngster Patricia Crowley for the lead in a new play, only to fall for its author, William Holden, along the way. It's polished entertainment, directed by old hand Irving Rapper. RK (US 1953, BW)

The Take ★★★

9.00-10.45pm Film4 15

ACTION Director James Watkins (The Woman in Black) is a master of suspense, but loosens his strangler's grip for a movie that presses the pedal firmly to the metal. Idris Elba plays a CIA agent in Paris who is pursuing a pickpocket (Richard Madden) and a bag containing a bomb intended for the French Nationalist Party HQ. When the device goes off and the explosion is pinned on Islamic extremists, Elba and Madden join forces to follow the trail. But all is not as it seems... The buddy dynamic never gets going, but The Take certainly delivers on the thrills front. EAS (US/Fr 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

Anchorman 2: the Legend

Continues ★★★ 9.00-11.20pm E4 15

COMEDY Nearly a decade after Will Ferrell introduced the character of sexist, moustachioed newsman Ron Burgundy in Anchorman, he returns with this rib-tickling sequel. Estranged from wife (and news rival) Veronica Corningstone (Christina Applegate), Ron is thrust into the arms of a New York network exec (Meagan Good) and her fledgeling rolling news channel. Ferrell's penchant for silliness is at its best early on in the movie, including some satirical swipes at the dumbing-down of TV news.

There's also some great banter to be had between Ferrell and his old cohorts Paul Rudd, David Koechner and Steve Carell. SP (US 2013, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Identity ★★★ 9.00-11.00pm W 15

MURDER MYSTERY A group of strangers becomes stranded at a remote motel in the Nevada desert on the proverbial dark and stormy night. The place is suspiciously reminiscent of another roadside hostelry (proprietor: N Bates), so it's no surprise when they find themselves being picked off one by one in increasingly bloody ways. The shocks are well staged and there are flashes of wit, while the performances of a classy cast (including Ray Liotta, Alfred Molina and John Cusack) are sly without being too tongue-in-cheek. Unfortunately, director James Mangold can't sustain the atmosphere in the face of increasingly outlandish plot twists. AS (US 2003, violence, swearing, flashing images, HD)

I Give It a Year ★★★

11.25pm-1.00am BBC1 15

COMEDY The directorial debut of comedy writer Dan Mazer (Borat, Brüno), this romp has everything you want in a relationship comedy: sex appeal, warmth and genuine laughs. The only downside is the occasional lapse into lame sleaze, but that doesn't last long and at least provides some edgy moments. Rose Byrne and Rafe Spall star as the freshly married but hopelessly mismatched couple, and there's a fantastic supporting cast including Simon Baker, Anna Faris and Stephen Merchant, playing an excruciatingly awkward best man. KK (UK/Fr/Ger/Lux 2013, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

REVIEWERS THIS WEEK Dave Aldridge, Jeremy Aspinall, Joanna Berry, Andrew Collins, John Ferguson, Sloan Freer, Sue Heal, Tom Hutchinson, Trevor Johnston, Alan Jones, Robin Karney, Karen Krizanovich, James Luxford, Stella Papamichael, David Parkinson, Tony Peters, Simon Rose, Jamie Russell, Emma Simmonds, Tony Sloman, Adam Smith

How's Your Head, Hun?

Ep 1 on BBCiPlayer; weekly episodes on BBC3

BEHIND THE VISAGE

Michelle Visage wants you to join her in LA for a dance – and maybe an Italian lesson...

Where are you in lockdown – and who is with you?

I'm in Los Angeles – my daughter, Lillie, is at uni [away from home], and my other daughter Lola is at home and has moved her boyfriend Dylan in. They were only together for three months before this happened. She's 18 and I said to my husband [writer David Case], "She'll be using every excuse to go out and see him, which would be dangerous." So I said if they could be mature and handle spending all this time together, then fine. Lillie struggles with mental health issues so it's a worry. I want more than anything to have my kid home, but I have auto-immune issues so I'm higher risk. But we're figuring out how to bring her home.

Are you having any problems with living on top of each other?

My husband and I bicker all the time, but my headspace is not there for an argument. I can't storm out, the beaches and parks here are closed. If I need to, I hide in the loo.

Does isolating make you anxious?

Anxiety's huge for me. I came off meds eight years ago and I know how to manage it with breathing exercises, but it's the first time in a long time that I've said, "Look who's creeping back: Miss Anxiety."

What's your advice to people struggling with lockdown?

It's OK not to be OK. If your way of handling this is to eat crap food then do it and don't feel bad. Know that you're not alone.

Your new show is called How's Your Head, Hun? – what's it about?

It's traditional, like Keeping Up with the Kardashians, but this is not a traditional situation. Some crazy stuff goes on. The main point is to make people laugh, but maybe I'll motivate people to dance – or learn Italian.

You're actually learning Italian?

On Strictly I kept asking my partner Giovanni Pernice to teach me and he'd say, "No, we're learning to dance," but now I've persuaded him. Why not come out of this with a new skill? Strictly gave me belief to do things I never thought I'd be able to.

You halted filming Drag Race UK when the lockdown measures came into force. When will it resume?

I assume when Government guidelines are lifted, we'll start again. I can't wait to pick up where we left off. And I can't wait to get back to England. I miss it so much. Maybe the solution is for Strictly and Drag Race to be filmed outdoors...

Maybe Strictly dance partners should quarantine together?

I would kill to do that. Gio wouldn't have been able to escape me...

It may send the Strictly curse into overdrive, though...

I don't know if that's a bad thing. Don't get me wrong, it's different if you're married, but for single people what's the problem? EMMA COX

GANGLAND COMEDY Man like Mobeen

Available now

Guz Khan's broad but savvy sitcom casts him as a Birmingham man tasked with caring for his younger sister while keeping his idiot friends out of trouble: Mobeen is a classic comedy lead, a sardonic cynic who's the smartest guy in the room but not quite canny enough to avoid mischief. Racism and gang violence are strong undercurrents beneath the character comedy, with the latter coming to the fore in the third series to create more of a comedy drama.

EMPATHETIC EXPOSÉS

Stacey Dooley Available now

She's the hardest-working documentarist in showbiz. Since being plucked from obscurity in 2008, Dooley has racked up a vast catalogue of factual programmes, most adhering to the formula of her travelling to a benighted part of the world to talk to people in dire straits, and/or the villains who have put them there. Often the title says it all – Young Sex for Sale in Japan and Russia's War on Women were just two of the Stacey Dooley Investigates – but her closer-to-home projects like On the Psych Ward have showed the same qualities: curiosity, courage and a knack for asking exactly the right questions, plainly and directly.

NOTES FROM A LOUD WOMAN Shrill

Available now

One of those shows that feels as if it's been rather tossed away in the online-only, box-set era of BBC3. Series one debuted last Christmas, followed very swiftly by a second run of episodes, neither of which attracted much attention. But this sharp, tender US dramedy deserves another look. Based on Lindy West's hit memoir, it stars Aidy Bryant as Annie, a journalist who has vowed to stop conforming to society's expectations of how she should look or act.

MODERN-DAY MASCULINITY Ladhood

Available now

Stand-up comedian Liam Williams, whose 2017 YouTube culture satire Pls Like is also available on iPlayer, has deadpan comic sensibilities underpinned by weary intelligence and a touch of rage. He gives those tendencies a free run with this daring comedy, based on his radio series, in which his screen persona – cynical and riddled with hang-ups – steps into flashbacks from his teenage years, each explaining a different aspect of his fragile masculinity.

INMATE INSIGHTS Boys Banged Up

Available now

An illuminating four-part documentary takes Stephen Nolan inside Hydebank Wood in Northern Ireland, a correctional facility housing young offenders and those on remand. After taking the temperature of prison life – the routines, the everyday problems, the drug addiction and how to curb it – Nolan looks at the responsibility that social deprivation bears for the crimes the men have committed, before witnessing the way Hydebank tries to achieve rehabilitation.

IDENTITY ISSUES

Jesy Nelson: 'Odd One Out'

Available now

In January, this extraordinary celebrity confessional won the Factual trophy at the National Television Awards. That's testament to how powerful Jesy Nelson's examination of her own anxieties is. From day one of her pop-star fame she was subjected to vicious criticism online. What drives people to use social media to hurt, why couldn't she brush it aside and how has it changed her body image? With great courage, she confronts all those issues and finds answers. JACK SEALE

THERE'S NOT GETTING the memo and then there's Lisa Kudrow, ditsy Phoebe from Friends: for her entire time filming Space Force, a Netflix comedy about a new branch of the US military, she was blissfully unaware that it was a satire, inspired by President Trump's announcement in 2018 of a real Space Force.

"It's the most embarrassing thing," says Kudrow. "I wasn't aware. I missed the announcement. I think everyone just assumed I knew. Why wouldn't they? After we're done shooting, I see the President giving his State of the Union address and he mentioned the Space Force again and I went, 'Oh, s***, that's real?'"

That's such a fabulous, Phoebe kind of thing to say. But then, as Kudrow says, "These days, almost any comedic thing that you do gets Trumped." In the case of Space Force, it was when Trump declared that, to go with the Army, the Navy and the Air Force, he was directing the Pentagon to create a "Space Force" to extend US power to the Moon and beyond.

Netflix had been looking to work with Greg Daniels – creator of the much-loved Parks and Recreation and the US version of The Office – as well as Steve Carell, who won an Emmy for his performance in The Office. So the idea of a Space Force was a gift.

"We just had those two words, 'Space Force', says Carell, "but the idea made everybody laugh in a meeting. And then I called Greg and said, 'Hey, you want to do a show called Space Force?'"

'These days, almost any comedy you do gets Trumped'

LISA KUDROW

He said, 'Yeah, that sounds good. Let's do it.' And it was really based on nothing, except this name that made everybody laugh."

Carell and Daniels went away to imagine how you might go about setting up a real vanguard to repel galaxians and colonise space.

"Once we had the concept," says Carell, "Greg and I asked, 'Well, what will it be about?' And we landed on the idea that it should be about the inception of the Space Force – the person who is entrusted with its development, the creation of a new branch of the armed forces. And my character, General Mark R Naird, is the person who's drafted in to create this branch."

Naird is well-meaning and of great integrity, but in an environment that requires cutting-edge science as well as endless diplomacy, he's way out of his depth. Everyone, from his right-hand man and head of science, Professor Adrian Mallory (played by John Malkovich), to his wife Maggie (Kudrow), his daughter Erin (Diana Silvers) and even his buffoonish PR chief, F Tony Scarapuducci (Ben Schwartz), thinks that building a Space Force is a terrible idea.

"I play the head scientist," says Malkovich, speaking from New York, "and he is very much against the militarisation of space and believes it should be a global treasure. We don't quite know yet how that will turn out – either in this series or in real life."

SCHWARTZ PLAYS THE fast-talking PR supremo whose job it is to sell another moonshot in the age of Instagram.

"My character comes in as that energetic millennial saying, 'Whatever's happening here we have to find the coolest way to say it and express it to everybody. Or else nobody is going to know what's going on.' Steve Carell's character, who is the older-school military man, obviously doesn't love the idea that I'm putting so much importance on 160 characters."

Kudrow's character Maggie appears in the first episode as a triumphant Washington wife whose husband has just been elevated to the heady ranks of a four-star general.

"Maggie is super-excited to have a little more power in the DC area," says Kudrow. "Then Naird is put in charge of the newly formed Space Force and they have to move to Colorado. Maggie seems pretty devastated. Then, by the end of the episode, we see that, a year later, Maggie is in prison."

And there she remains. Kudrow has as much idea why as she did about the real Space Force.

"I asked everyone – Greg, Steve – what she'd done, but they wouldn't tell me. Or they'd just say it's up in the air. But then I get to wear an orange prison outfit for the whole series. That was part of the appeal. My theory is that she's a covert badass who's been flipped [rumbled], but I don't know."

It is, of course, against all-natural laws to speak to Lisa Kudrow in 2020 and not ask about the much-anticipated Friends reunion. Set to coincide with the launch of HBO Max

Naturally, everything is now on hold, and Kudrow says she’s as disappointed as the rest of us.

“It was going to be fun for us to reconnect and reminisce – and hopefully for whoever’s watching, too. But we can’t go ahead because you can’t get people together, and it takes so many people to do this. We’ll see.” BENJI WILSON

THE BOYS ARE BACK

Queer Eye Series 5 available from 5 June

The five gay gurus have in recent years shifted their shtick to Australia and Japan, with some success – but they’re always better off in their natural habitat, which is unfashionable parts of the US. Series five sees the “fab five” hit Philadelphia to find more ordinary people – in series one it was straight men, but the subjects are more diverse now – who deserve a second chance at being themselves and need a lifestyle makeover to get their confidence back. Every episode is a tear-soaked emotional odyssey. JACK SEALE

THE JOY OF CHEESE
Fuller House

New episodes available from 2 June
The slightly cheesy 1980s/90s sitcom Full House didn’t seem as if it was crying out to be remade back in 2016, when this new version started – but it’s become a hit. Centred around a new generation living in a San Francisco townhouse, it offers heartfelt but not entirely corny stories about parenting and family, wrapped up in jokes viewers of all ages can enjoy. The show bows out for good with a triple wedding.

THE ROCK'S ON A ROLL
The Titan Games

Available from 1 June
An American series that ought to please fans of Ninja Warrior or, for that matter, Gladiator. Dwayne “The Rock” Johnson is your host, and indeed the series creator, as members of the public who are unheralded heroes in their ordinary lives pull on leotards and compete in a series of outsized physical challenges. The Rock, or “DJ” as he’s called here, looks on, making tough but inspiring remarks. JS

Parasite ★★★★★

Sky Store/iTunes/Curzon Home Cinema/DVD/Blu-ray, from Mon 1 June

The gulf between rich and poor is under fire in this satire from South Korea's Bong Joon-ho, which this year became the first non-English-language film to win the Oscar for best picture. Trickery is the game for the protagonists and director alike. The Kim family (Chang Hye Jin as mum and Song Kang-ho as dad) are living in a squalid semi-basement until their luck changes when their son (Choi woo-sik) wangles a tutoring post with a prosperous family – and an audacious con is born. Explosions of anger await in an enjoyably farcical narrative that alternates between suspense and wicked wit. Parasite delights in its devious set-up and savage social commentary. Before you know it, it will have worked its way right under your skin. EMMA SIMMONDS

HOMAGE TO 50s SCI-FI

The Vast of Night ★★★★★

Amazon Prime, from Friday 29 May

A pair of students receive messages from outer space in this stylish riff on Twilight Zone-style storytelling. Science student Fay (an engaging Sierra McCormick) and beatnik DJ Everett (Jake Horowitz) pick up extraterrestrial interference through the switchboard Fay operates. Skilfully playing with tone, debut director Andrew Patterson has forged an affectionate, Spielbergian paean to the 1950s that lands somewhere between screwball comedy and eerie sci-fi and heralds a promising new film-making voice. ANDREW COLLINS

Sky Store/iTunes/Virgin Movies/DVD/Blu-ray, from Monday 1 June

Teenage elf brothers seek a magic spell to bring back their late father for a single day in Pixar's sprightly animated adventure set in a world that looks like ours, except it has unicorns, centaurs and faerie folk. Nerdy Ian Lightfoot (Tom Holland) and his older sibling Barley (Chris Pratt) go on a noble quest and get into various exciting scrapes. The blend of action, comedy and emotion manages to honour the fantasy genre while also giving it a good ribbing, and proves unstoppably entertaining. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Jurassic Park: Fallen Kingdom ★★★
Netflix, from Friday 5 June

This follow-up to 2015's Jurassic World is a shadowy cousin to Jurassic Park's 1997 sequel, The Lost World. It brings back Jeff Goldblum's Ian Malcolm in a key cameo, follows a similar save-the-dinos plot and, like The Lost World, struggles to tell a new story away from the original island. But there's still plenty to enjoy, including the return of likeable leads Chris Pratt and Bryce Dallas Howard, creepy new dino the Indoraptor and a brave ending that upends the rules of the franchise. HUW FULLERTON

Driven ★★★★★
Now TV/Sky Cinema on Demand, from Sunday 31 May

Inspired by real events, Driven depicts the downfall of car designer John DeLorean, who created the cool gull-winged sports car featured in Back to the Future. When former drug smuggler turned FBI informant Jim Hoffman (Jason Sudeikis, above right) involves the cash-strapped DeLorean (Lee Pace) in a lucrative drug deal, what could go wrong? The morally dubious Hoffman is still likeable, and his friendship with DeLorean is at the core of an enjoyable story of betrayal and ambition. STEPHEN CARTY

Where are the women?

Give them pole position at the podium, says Alison Graham

IT COULD BE down to cabin fever, but I am fixating on the oddest things. Such as: I really like that gold-bottomed mug on the BBC Oneness having-a-cuppa sequence; I love the judges' hexagonal water glasses on The Great British Menu. And I really hate that hideous Downing Street press room carpet.

Get rid of it. All of those swirling patterns, it's like a 1970s suburban front room. Can't you find something in calming mint green, or even oatmeal, for heaven's sake? There's enough to get upset about in those conferences without being traumatised by the soft furnishings.

I say "conferences", but really it's Men In Suits Telling Me What to Do behind those wretched podiums. And, oh, the repetition. I have the Five Steps embroidered on a cushion. Move on.

I wonder, too, if there was ever any panic in the top levels of government when everyone realised that there were NO WOMEN.

Or only Home Secretary Priti Patel, and she's put up at weekends, when there's not much happening.

The call must have gone out: "Where are the women? We need a Woman In A Dress to go through the slides!" Luckily there are a few Women In Dresses, incredibly clever medical and pandemic expert scientists such as the Deputy Chief Medical Officer for England Dr Jenny Harries, with her "death data" and "all-cause mortality". Yet they don't lead these conferences, they are called upon to go through the slides like assistants on a tacky game show after the Important Man has spoken at considerable, tedious length.

Again, these are incredibly clever women. But they go through the slides. I'm sure they also bake banana bread for the entire cabinet when they have a minute and do a bit of dusting in the briefing room.

Those conferences are painful, they are like the dullest school prize-giving ceremonies and

As for the rest, there's Dominic Raab, a decent head boy but he isn't expected to do well in his A-levels. School mums like him, though.

Then there's Matt Hancock, the biology master, who is a bubbling vat of fury with an anger that boils over because no one ever believes what he says and people (ie Nick Robinson on the Today programme) keep interrupting him and he doesn't like it.

There's Rishi Sunak, the nice maths teacher. The girls like him. They call him Dishy Rishi. And Boris Johnson, the headmaster, so confident he can turn around a failing school.

So quick, get the Woman In A Dress to take us through the slides before we get yet more questions-that-are-never-answered.

NOTICE, TOO, HOW every government boss says, "Thank you for the question, member of the public/journalist" or "That is a very important question, member of the public/journalist".

That meaningless phrase is classic thinking time, it gives the person being questioned a few seconds to sort out what he is going to say. But a few seconds usually isn't enough, only ten years with a Whitaker's Almanack and a box of felt-tip pens will help.

ITV Football Classics

4.30pm ITV

SPORT It might seem a little premature to label this one as a classic. After all, it's not even two years since England faced Colombia in Moscow. But it's not every day that (spoiler alert) England win a World Cup tie on penalties.

In 28 years of trying, they hadn't won one. And with Euro 2020 on furlough for 12 months, it's an opportunity for England fans to dig out their Gareth Southgate replica waistcoats and relive a hot-blooded dust-up that spilled into extra time after Colombia snatched a 93rd minute equaliser, before a new breed of Lions steeled themselves for a duel at 12 yards. For a few days, it really did look like football was coming home. CHRIS HUGHES

Britain's Got Talent

7.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Ordinarily, this should be when Britain's Got Talent wraps up its pre-recorded auditions and hurtles straight into a full week of nightly live shows. This year, of course, that isn't going to be. This is the final cluster of auditions, and although nothing has been confirmed, Amanda Holden recently hinted that the judges have been given a provisional date for the live programmes to go ahead in early autumn. We'll have to wait and see.

Among the doom and gloom, it's been a joy to have BGT's slice of silly escapism on a Saturday night, while being absorbed back into a world of frivolousness and normality. This year, more than ever, that will be missed. FRANCES TAYLOR

Pointless Celebrities

7.55pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT There's a team of Pointless champs in this sitcom special and they get off to a flying start, racking up only a couple of points between them in the first round. hilariously, they bicker over nearly every potential answer, which makes you wonder how they managed to win last time.

The line-up demonstrates that sitcoms are a broad church. Taking part are actors from 'Allo 'Allo, Citizen Khan, The Office and Still Open All Hours (although Nina Wadia, who plays Mrs Hussein in Hours, reveals she once got a comedy award for her role in EastEnders – now that would be a good quiz question).

JANE RACKHAM

PICK OF THE DAY Ella Fitzgerald: Just One of Those Things 9.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY What a woman! What a voice! One of the undisputed legends of the 20th century had very lowly origins, growing up in poverty in Yonkers, New York and homeless in Harlem by the age of 16. In 1934, she entered a talent contest at the Apollo Theatre and decided at the last minute not to dance but sing. A 100-year-old local, Norma Miller, claims to have been there and gulps, "Can you imagine – we booed Ella Fitzgerald?" Those boos soon turned to astonishment and Ella was on the ascent.

Across the decades she became the first lady of jazz, bee-bop, swing, and ultimately the definitive interpreter of the Great American Songbook, taking in Cole Porter, Jerome Kern, Irving Berlin and of course Duke Ellington.

This excellent documentary is packed with interesting detail, clips that will make you want to travel back to the glory days of the Cotton Club, but also covers the appalling racism she and her band members faced, more on their home turf than on many foreign tours. We hear from Smokey Robinson, Johnny Mathis, Laura Mvula, Jamie Cullum and Ella's adopted son Ray Brown Jr – but most importantly we hear Ella, in rare interviews and singing with dazzling creativity and joy. PATRICK MULKERN

GAME SHOW GREATEST HITS

■ ITV is hoping to tap into our nostalgic affection for quiz formats of yesteryear with Alan Carr's Epic Game Show (8.15pm). No surprise, really, as the sight of contestants answering questions on TV can often attract many millions of viewers. ■ Looking at the history of television, you'll find game shows ranking high in ratings rundowns. An edition of Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? shown in January 2001 was seen by 15.9m. In the 1990s, Millionaire fever was at its peak, with 19.21m watching on 7 March 1999. ■ Blankety Blank and Mastermind hit 19m back in 1980, as did Double Your Money and Take Your Pick in 1966. But it's in the 1970s that we find the highest game show audience figure – a strike at the BBC in December 1978 resulted in 21.15m catching Nicholas Parsons hosting the Christmas Eve episode of "quiz of the week" Sale of the Century on ITV. DAVID BROWN

Dad's Army

8.00pm BBC2 (not N Ireland)

SITCOM "I like being an officer, don't you, Uncle Arthur?" No, Pike and Wilson haven't been promoted, but are strutting around in German uniforms in this 1975 caper – Ian Lavender's favourite ("Because I got to dress up; it was great fun"). The platoon is taking part in a training film, and Mainwaring turns puce when it transpires they'll be playing Nazis. Injured pride is the least of his worries, however.

Watch for Hodges, the Vicar and the Verger managing to somehow reveal their characters simply by the act of running. Look out, too, for John Bardon (EastEnder Jim Branning) as the film production assistant, and the pub landlord played by Jack Haig (initially considered for the role of Jones). MARK BRAXTON

Casualty

8.40pm BBC1

DRAMA A disillusioned Charlie visits the hospital one last time to return his uniform and security pass, but gets the chance to play the hero when a gunman takes hostages in the ED. At first, I thought this may have been an extreme role-playing exercise designed to lure Charlie back to work. But no, the bullets are real and, as it turns out, Charlie is just as angry as the guy with the firearm.

Also, let's not forget that the last time Mr Fairhead faced off against an armed attacker (series five, October 1990, Casualty fact fans!), he didn't fare too well. Surely I can't be the only one to recall a distraught Megan Roach yelling, "You SHOT Charlie!"? DB

The Young Montalbano

9.00pm BBC4

DRAMA This prequel series, first shown in 2013, in some respects betters the daddy show. The direction and storytelling are sharper, the music lingers in the memory and while the young pretender, Michele Riondino (slim, handsome, hirsute), looks nothing like stocky, bald Luca Zingaretti, crucially, he embodies the charisma, slyness and integrity of the older Salvo Montalbano.

It starts with two of the Sicilian detective's cases in the early 1990s and follows his promotion and transfer from a dreary mountain backwater to Vigata, his boyhood home. Soon he's revelling in the sea air and seafood, and over six episodes we see the roots of his relationships with Livia, Catarella, Mimi and Fazio. PM

WHAT A CARD!
Alan Carr presents a new version of an old favourite

Alan Carr's Epic Game Show

8.15pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT New series "Don't touch that pack, we'll be right back!" "You don't get anything for a pair – not in this game!" Yes, many of Brucie's catchphrases are dusted off for this Alan Carr-fronted Play Your Cards Right, the first in a series of one-off game-show revivals. Mercifully, the croupier is now referred to as a "dealer" rather than a "dolly dealer" – however, glam Sam doesn't get a surname until the end credits.

Luckily, the format still has that same addictive "higher, lower" tension, only this time it's celebrities such as Eamonn Holmes and Ruth Langford playing with the deck rather than members of the public. In the weeks to come, we'll get to see whether the likes of Bullseye and Take Your Pick also remain as entertaining as we like to remember. DB

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Nicolas Roeg: It's about Time

iPlayer (expires today)

"There aren't many original people in the world. He's one of them." So says Don't Look Now star Julie Christie about the film's director, Nicolas Roeg, in this Arena profile of a singular cinematic visionary. Valuable insights come from Mike Figgis, Ben Wheatley and other directors who wear his influence, as they discuss such Roeg motifs as bending time, montages and the colour red. It was shown on BBC4 in 2015; Roeg, who is interviewed here himself, died three years later.

7.00pm This Farming Life

1/12. As autumn arrives, farmers across Scotland prepare their livestock for the forthcoming mating season. On the Isle of Lewis, former barrister Sandy shepherds his flock of wild sheep from a remote island by boat. In the far north, John gives a health check to 4,000 ewes, while preparing to welcome thousands of visitors to the World Sheepdog Trials. Narrated by James Thornton.

Executive producers Amanda Murray and Lisa Ausden First shown on BBC2 (S) (HD)

8.00 Masters of the Pacific Coast: the Tribes of the American Northwest

2/2. Survival. Archaeologist Dr Jago Cooper reveals how the American Northwest cultural tradition survived European contact, disease, theft of land and oppression. Cooper argues that a connection to the land that began over 10,000 years ago made the region's indigenous people extraordinarily resilient and able to adapt and transform to become one of the longest continuous cultures in the Americas. Series producer Tom Stubberfield; Executive producers Aisling O'Connor and Tom Stubberfield Signed repeat 3am (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

PODIUM, PLEASE
Hélène Barizet (Marie-Sophie Ferdane) has much to prove

PICK OF THE DAY Philharmonia 11.15pm C4

DRAMA New series Meet the Philharmonia, a Parisian orchestra riven with disharmony, egotism and stale players, who together have earned the nickname "maestro killer". Indeed, their elderly conductor keels over dead in the overture to this engaging, dark-hearted French drama. Cue Hélène Barizet, who flies home from New York to take his place, only to be met with misogyny and pouts. When she first stands before them, the ensemble try to unsettle her by playing the theme to Mission: Impossible.

But "maestra" Barizet (Marie-Sophie Ferdane) is tough, more than a match for this lot and – for reasons that should become clear – an international conductor who packs a pistol in her luggage. On day two, she shakes things up by replacing the seasoned first violin with a "third-tier" violinist, 20-year-old Selena, who idolises her. Bubbling in the background are Hélène's anxiety that she'll inherit the unspecified mental disorder that has institutionalised her mother, and the threat from a French horn player who is bonking her hubby.

It plays well from the start and if you're up for an encore, all six episodes of Philharmonia will go up on All 4 after episode one. PATRICK MULKERN

BBC Young Musician 2020

7.00pm BBC4

MUSIC Tonight, it's a feast of strings in the last of the five category finals. The teenage competitors are cellist Ellen Baumring-Gledhill, harpist Huw Boucher and three violinists, Coco Tomita, Ilai Avni and Mio Takahashi.

If you're enjoying this programme, prepare for a long interval. The strings winner and those who won in the other four categories have already performed in the semi-final, which took place in March just before lockdown. However, BBC4 has decided to keep that in reserve and show it later in the year, closer to when they hope to stage the grand final. Frustrating for the finalists, but at least they have ample time to practise. PM

Burma with Simon Reeve

7.15pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY After 60 years of brutal military rule, Burma (or Myanmar) is now a democracy and, while poverty is endemic, life has improved for most. Leader Aung San Suu Kyi is credited with this change but she hasn't condemned the military's attacks on the country's Rohingya Muslims.

After giving us a glimpse of Burma's positive side, Simon Reeve investigates the inflammatory situation in this two-part travelogue-meets-reportage from 2018. He meets a sect of Buddhist monks who preach that Muslims are "inherently mean" and visits the biggest refugee camp in the world in Bangladesh to hear first-hand accounts of ethnic cleansing. JANE RACKHAM

Two Sisters, One Body

9.15pm C4

DOCUMENTARY "We got dealt a weird hand, but we've got to work with it," says Carmen Andrade philosophically. Seventeen years ago, she and conjoined twin sister Lupita arrived in America from Mexico aged two for medical treatment and have stayed ever since on a series of visa extensions.

This sharp, upbeat documentary looks at what it's like to be sisters joined at the abdomen and "two Mexican kids trying to get along in Trump's America". (Lupita says, only half joking, that the latter is more of a problem than the former.) We get a sense of the sisters' distinctive grit and humour as we follow their driving lessons, bowling games and trips to the beach. DAVID BUTCHER

Dave

10.00pm, 10.20pm BBC2

SITCOM This sitcom is almost showing off now. It's meant to be about a white rapper trying to make it in the music business but in the first of tonight's double bill, Dave himself barely features. Instead we have a detour into two supporting characters, as Elz (Dave's engineer/producer) and Emma (his grumpy graphic designer) start a relationship, a little awkwardly.

Suddenly, we've got an edgy little romantic comedy. Then, it's back to the main story arc as the second episode sees Dave bump into several real-life celebs playing themselves, amusingly, including Justin Bieber and Kourtney Kardashian. There's also an eccentric subplot about wooden shirts. DAVID BUTCHER

HOME IN THE COUNTRY

The presenters on Countryfile (7.15pm BBC1) have been keeping to their local patches of late. Matt Baker was seen tackling jobs at home, while Ellie Harrison was helping with conservation work in her neighbourhood. Now, it's the turn of John Craven to give viewers a glimpse of his garden as he gives tips on which butterflies to look out for, before meeting lockdown hero Captain Sir Tom Moore. Speaking to RT, series editor Jane

Lomas revealed that the hosts are being filmed either by family members or self-shooting directors, who also operate the sound equipment. But should restrictions be eased further, the team is aiming to be "as flexible as possible. It's our mission to bring a reassuring slice of the countryside into the nation's homes while reporting on the impact of the pandemic from the perspective of all who live and work there." DAVID BROWN

Dracula by Northern Ballet

10.00pm BBC4

ARTS Bram Stoker's classic horror story has been adapted many times, but never with this much athleticism and sensuality. Choreographed and directed by David Nixon, this recent production transforms the Leeds Playhouse into a vault of dense black, iridescent reds and carnal lust.

It licks through the plot with the thirst of a vampire and has a score to die (and rise from the dead) for by Schnittke, Rachmaninov and Michael Daugherty. Among dozens of standout moments, the love scene between Dracula and an eager Mina to Part's Spiegel im Spiegel is mesmerisingly graceful. Javier Torres brings Latin virility to the Count. Eat your heart out, Claes Bang. PM

Deep Water

10.00pm ITV3

DRAMA This six-part adaptation of Paula Daly's Windermere-set novels didn't cause much of a stir when it was first broadcast last year. The characters described by ITV as "three complex and vibrant women" didn't quite gel. But it has its moments, the cast is good and as a bonus it's set in the Lake District, so that's nice.

The trio at the heart of the story – Lisa (Anna Friel), Roz (Sinead Keenan) and Kate (Rosalind Eleazar) – are on the surface all friends, but there are ructions in their lives that will have an impact on them all.

The catalyst is a terrible dinner party where Lisa does something very unwise, with catastrophic consequences.

Mayans MC

10.50pm, 11.45pm BBC2

DRAMA This week's double bill in the Sons of Anarchy spin-off introduces a notable political vibe to the proceedings, chiefly in the scene where thrillingly rotten US attorney Lincoln Potter (Ray McKinnon) leans on crime lord Miguel Galindo (Danny Pino) for help in discrediting a local protest movement. Like most gang dramas, a lot of this show is about one-on-one battles of wills: here's ratty and wily versus slimy and mendacious.

Galindo's wife Emily (Sarah Bolger), meanwhile, spots a chance to make a rather uncertain debut as a dirty businesswoman. Can she bring herself to bribe a financially vulnerable old friend?

JACK SEALE

Killing Eve

9.15pm BBC1

DRAMA Your heart will leap with joy at the sight of Villanelle sporting an outrageous marabout-trimmed golfing outfit and a Scottish accent as she prepares to dispatch some loud-mouthed American on the 16th hole. Because, despite announcing that she didn't want to do this (ie assassinations) any more, it looks as though she's now changed her mind and intends to be a killing machine again.

Meanwhile, Eve is still obsessed with tracking Villanelle down, even though Carolyn warns her that "heroes only get the girl in Hollywood", while Konstantin, who hates surprises (people will keep waiting for him in darkened rooms and scaring the living daylights out of him), has several shocks this week. Doesn't stop him roaring with laughter, though, and Kim Bodnia has one of the best laughs on TV. JR

ON THE GREEN
Dasha (Harriet Walter) and Villanelle (Jodie Comer) are ready to play

STREAMING CHOICE

BBC3 (from 6am)

Series two of an easy, likeable reality series, set in a Tyneside hair salon where the girls wear matching pink outfits and enjoy nothing more than discussing the minutiae of each other's (love) lives while expertly applying hair extensions to customers: if you're missing the gossip you have the chance to earwig on when you have your hair done, this is a good replacement. Once again, the salon's management team have some tricky personnel decisions to make – and lockdown is looming.

JUST GOOD FRIENDS?
Marianne (Daisy Edgar-Jones) and Connell (Paul Mescal) have some decisions to make

PICK OF THE DAY Normal People 9.05pm, 9.35pm BBC1

DRAMA It's a sweaty summer in Sligo and Connell and Marianne are at home again, tiptoeing around their relationship. They are trying to be just friends, but the depth of their emotional and sexual attachment runs too deep.

In the final instalment of this extraordinary, brilliant drama, expect to collect the pieces of your heart in a little bag by the end, as the pair (so wonderfully underplayed by Paul Mescal and Daisy Edgar-Jones, who deserve to go on to even greater things) navigate their different places in the world.

Marianne must come to terms with the true horrors of life at home with her torpid mother and bullying, violent brother, while Connell receives the chance of a lifetime, a real opportunity to make his name as a writer.

But can he accept? As Christmas and New Year come and go, Connell and Marianne must each make life-changing decisions. ALISON GRAHAM

Championship League Snooker

2.50pm ITV4

SPORT Sport fans: the wait is over. After months with live sport sidelined, there is finally some action to watch. Yes, snooker is back, in the form of the Championship League, coming from the Marshall Arena in Milton Keynes – chosen because it has on-site accommodation so that players and officials won't need to leave the venue.

The round-robin competition will take place behind closed doors and the organisers have promised strict rules on social distancing, testing and hygiene. Among the 64 players taking part, names so far confirmed include Judd Trump, Neil Robertson, Mark Allen and Kyren Wilson.

DAVID BUTCHER

Into the Wild: India

8.00pm Sky Nature

NATURE New series Did you ever see that stunning bamboo canopy fight scene in the film Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon? It'll be brought to mind as you watch a family of hoolock gibbons swing through their own patch of bamboo forest in Assam on a virtually nonstop search for food. We're told they can reach speeds of up to 35mph, and occasionally the camera has a fight to keep up with them.

In this first, beautifully filmed episode of a series exploring the enormous range of habitats India has to offer, we're following Samar, an eight-year-old gibbon with a mournful face, as he breaks away from his close-knit family to start a new one of his own. GILL CRAWFORD

Grow Your Own at Home with Alan Titchmarsh

8.30pm ITV (not Wales)

GARDENING Are film crews going to become redundant now that so many amateurs, like Alan's wife Alison, are managing to make TV programmes like this so well? The occasional camera-wobble when she laughs as Alan nearly knocks over his strawberry planter merely adds to the charm.

There are barrow-loads of tips for the enthusiastic but inexperienced gardener who fancies growing some fruit and veg: how to make a runner bean wigwam; and ways to keep pigeons off your brassicas and slugs off your strawberries. But the key message is that you don't need a lot of space – a balcony or even a doorstep is enough. JANE RACKHAM

Hitched at Home: Our Lockdown Wedding

9.00pm C4

REALITY Channel 4 requests the pleasure of your virtual company at the wedding of Patrick and Louise, whose original plans to tie the knot were scuppered by Covid-19.

The wedding is being held in their own home with friends and family watching online, but this is no DIY-do because Fred Sirieix from First Dates is calling in favours from celebrities and contacts in the world of hospitality to make their day really special.

Fortunately, there's no dress code – so you can watch in your pyjamas if you like – but remember, if you throw confetti at the newlyweds, you'll have to clear it up yourself. JR

EastEnders (8.10pm BBC1) has already been quite experimental in the way it has depicted the deterioration of Ben Mitchell's hearing. Audio in certain scenes has been deliberately muffled, so that viewers can gain an insight into Ben's experience. Now though, the soap is to screen an entire episode that comes from Ben's perspective, complete with more limited sound, fractured dialogue and subtitles.

But as laudable as it is for EastEnders to attempt to portray the realities of life as a deaf person, I do find it hard to empathise with Ben. The main thrust of tonight's drama sees him rejected by dad Phil, as the Mitchell patriarch heads off on this nefarious "job". Well, boo hoo, Ben – you can't be a career crim like your thuggish old man. Diddums. Now, I'm not saying Ben has to be either an entirely sympathetic character or defined by his deafness. But the show's obsession with gangsterism does risk overshadowing what could be an impactful plotline. DAVID BROWN

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

A&E after Dark

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY New series

"He has urinated quite a lot around the department..." More than half of A&E admissions at night are drunk patients and, in this dispatch from Hull, we see what a drain it is on the staff. Tonight they have one aggressive idiot and one flirty, charming but ultimately still annoying idiot to deal with.

Boozers aside it's a sometimes grim, ultimately cheering selection of cases, including extensive footage of a dislocated elbow, and the troubling spectacle of a sexagenarian with a near-fatal rectal bleed. If that doesn't finish off squeamish viewers, the young man who's coughing up Lord knows what in the waiting room will.

JACK SEALE

The Plastic Nile

9.00pm Sky Documentaries

DOCUMENTARY

We're all aware of the problems of single-use plastics, and tote our hessian shopping bags with pride. Yet for many people in developing countries, not using them is a life-or-death decision: often plastic containers are all they have to transport clean drinking water miles home.

In this distressing film, Alex Crawford travels the length of the Nile to highlight how much the "cradle of civilisation" is clogged with harmful waste. A vet pulling a mass of plastic out of a cow calf's digestive tract epitomises the problem. Crawford is rightly angry but recognises that in countries blighted by war, famine and poverty, solutions are not easy.

DAVID CRAWFORD

Comedians: Home Alone

10.00pm BBC2 (10.30pm N Ireland)

COMEDY OF THE WEEK New series

This is more like it: a bespoke package of DIY comedy under quarantine. And you don't have to worry about any of that segmented television schedulers seem to think the nation likes. The first of a seven-part sketch series kicks off with the excellent Kerry Godliman, fresh from After Life season two, as an embarrassing mum. Bob Mortimer offers his customary incongruity in Cat Names. Rhys James serves up some neat one-liners, while man-of-the-moment Michael Spicer remotely advises the Home Secretary ("That's enough hot air for one answer"). And competitive lip-syncing from Rachel Parris and her husband Marcus Brigstocke makes for a surprisingly glitzy finale. MARK BRAXTON

The best of streaming and catch-up

Anthony Bourdain: Parts Unknown

Netflix

The late chef and Kitchen Confidential writer's various TV travelogues were where his combination of plain speaking, open curiosity and food expertise came to full fruition. This show was originally made for CNN: Bourdain credited that network's global infrastructure with allowing him to access places like Iran and Libya. Politically acute as it is compared to his earlier work, it's also simply Bourdain at his swaggering, insightful best.

KIDS' CHOICE

Oti's Boogie Beebies

8.30am CBeebies, iPlayer

Strictly pro and lockdown YouTube star Oti Mabuse brings her new brand of homespun dance magic to pre-schoolers, with a new show designed to get them moving around the living room. Today, we're zooming to the Moon! Mabuse is also the reader this Friday on Bedtime Story. JS

FILM OF THE DAY

9.00pm Sony Movies Classic

Suspenseful 1973 thriller adapted from Frederick Forsyth's bestseller about a plot to assassinate General de Gaulle, starring a glacial Edward Fox and Michel Lonsdale.

See page 29

EMOTIONAL JOURNEY
Presenter Nicky Campbell with Helen, who was abandoned as a baby

Long Lost Family Special: Born without Trace

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

"I was left in a wooden box outside a pub"; "I was found in a ladies' toilet": it's hard to imagine such a sad start to a life. With no official birth date or place and no inkling of their parents' names, it's almost impossible for people abandoned as babies to trace their birth families. They grow up not knowing a single thing about who they are.

So the two founding stories featured in tonight's programme are extraordinary, and emotional. But ultimately heart-warming. In 1962 David was found in a shopping bag in a stranger's car parked in a Belfast driveway. Helen was born six years later, discovered in a phone kiosk in Dundalk on the other side of the Irish border. Amazingly, Nicky Campbell and Davina McCall can piece together some of their histories and give possible reasons why they were both abandoned. JR

THEIR BIG DAY
Ralph and Katie (Leon Harrop and Sarah Gordy) tie the knot

PICK OF THE DAY The A Word 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA It's the day before Ralph and Katie's wedding and there is a surprise uninvited and not-very-welcome guest, Ralph's long-absentee dad Doug (Ian Puleston-Davies).

Instantly Maurice's male hackles rise as his ego takes over and his protective/competitive feelings kick in. But as his son-in-law Paul notes with juicy precision: "It's two silverbacks flinging their s**t at each other."

Once again, writer Peter Bowker mines the deepest feelings with the lightest touch as Maurice (Christopher Eccleston) and Doug get to know one another better, despite Louise's abiding fury at the man she felt abandoned her and their son.

As the wedding day arrives and the happy couple (Leon Harrop and Sarah Gordy radiate all that is joyful and good) unite in front of their friends, other relationships begin to grow and, perhaps, flourish. Or perhaps not.

ALISON GRAHAM

Bake Off: the Professionals

8.00pm C4

FOOD And then there were five... but one of the remaining pairs is clearly way, way ahead. In the showpiece challenge, judges Benoit Blin and Cherish Finden are delighted by these contestants' quite extraordinarily elegant sugarwork.

But this loveliness has to be eaten, so all the cakey-bits must come up to scratch, too. There are some amazing structures, including a nougatine tower, and birds must play a part in the design. Ever wanted to see a heron made of sugar? Well, here's your chance.

Of course, there are triumphs and disasters and the kitchen at one point is filled with the sound of shattering brittle. There are tears. AG

The Architecture the Railways Built

8.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY Historian Tim Dunn visits his favourite railway station, the glorious Victorian Gothic chocolate cake that is St Pancras in London.

The child of architect George Gilbert Scott and engineer William Henry Barlow, its future was once under threat. Just days before the bulldozers were due to move in, only the intervention of railway fan John Betjeman saved it and the station was given Grade I listed status.

A delighted, if a bit dizzy, Dunn is taken up a spiral staircase to view the building's gracefully arched roof and later see some of its glorious features, including gorgeous Minton tiles and elaborate ironwork. AG

Mystic Britain

8.00pm Smithsonian

DOCUMENTARY Series two of a history show with a pleasing presenter combo: while Clive Anderson focuses on droll larks, anthropologist Mary-Ann Ochota brings the facts – but Anderson is also capable of smart insights, and Ochota easily holds her own when it comes to raising laughs. It's all the more fun as its focus is on the odder mysteries of Britain's ancient past.

Tonight: the Picts! They repelled the Romans, were converted to Christianity by the Loch Ness Monster and were keen harpists, but what ultimately befell them? The wilds and winds of Scotland have the answers. Meanwhile, Clive takes a DNA test to determine how much of a Pict he is. JACK SEALE

Long Lost Family: Born Without Trace

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Learning that you are adopted can be hard, but looking at your birth certificate and seeing the word "unknown" where your date of birth and parents' names should be must be devastating.

Simon Jeffrey describes being left outside a Greenhithe pub in 1963 as "like being discarded", while Fi Beazer, discovered in a public toilet in Warminster two hours after her birth, can't understand how anyone could ignore their newborn's cries.

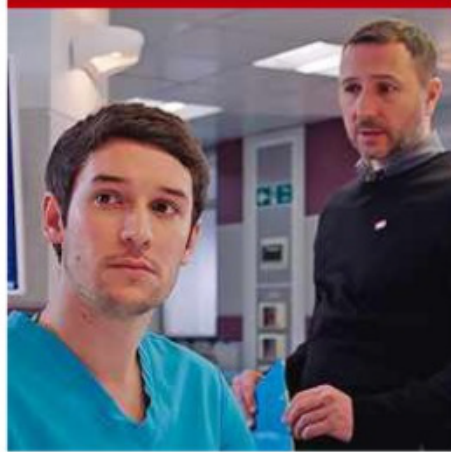

Both of them have theories about the circumstances that caused their mothers to abandon them, but DNA testing throws up some incredible – and complicated – results. JANE RACKHAM

Holby City (8pm BBC1) went off air back in April at a moment of high drama. Xavier Duval had just died after being knocked over by a cyclist, meaning that his efforts to expose killer Cameron's secret ultimately came to nothing.

An extended break obviously wasn't something that the writers had planned, but once filming stopped, the decision was taken to save Holby's remaining episodes for the summer months. It's a tactic that might well pay dividends: after six weeks of stewing, fans will be more eager than ever to see Cam caught, but will they get their wish?

All I can say is that the shifty trainee surgeon is looking very antsy about a voicemail message that Zav sent to Donna minutes before his untimely death. Can Cameron (Nic Jackman, far left) convince Donna that it should be deleted before she's even had a chance to listen to it? And might porter Jason stumble on something incriminatory as he plans a poignant send-off for his fallen friend? DAVID BROWN

A Very British Hotel Chain: Inside Best Western

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY It's Christmas 2019 and hapless development manager Mark is at Best Western's York HQ dressed in an elf sweater, complete with jingling bells, because he thinks it's Christmas Jumper Day. But it's not, that's next Tuesday.

Poor Mark is in competition with Terii to boost the brand's member-hotels. Terii thinks she can sign 26 in one swoop, but what about Mark?

This excruciating fly-on-the-wall series ends with BW's annual Ambition conference. The keynote speaker is Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards: "You can achieve anything if you put your mind to it" he tells a rapt crowd. AG

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY You'll remember Colbert? He's hard to forget. In 2014 Ben Fogle visited the eccentric 60-something who had built his dream home (a wood cabin with no electricity or running water) in the oppressive, mosquito-ridden swamps of Georgia, USA.

Fogle couldn't understand why anyone would choose to live there. He struggled with Colbert's lifestyle and his unconventional attitude, but he obviously admired him, too.

He returns to learn that Colbert's beloved home burnt down a few years ago. Undeterred, the wildman rebuilt it. "I feel overwhelmingly blessed. I'm one of the richest people in the world," he says with a smile. JR

A Black and White Killing: the Case That Shook America

11.30pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Larnell Bruce was 19 when, after an altercation in Portland, Oregon, he was run over by Russell Courtier, and died. Bruce was black while Courtier belonged to a white supremacist group. But was racism his motivation?

In this memorable documentary from 2019, journalist Mobeen Azhar visits Portland as Courtier goes on trial accused of murder. However, the court case isn't straightforward.

There's an air of Louis Theroux about Azhar's gently pertinent probing, but it doesn't take much digging to uncover a disturbingly deep seam of sickening racism. JR

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Angela Carter: of Wolves and Women

iPlayer (expires today)

Hattie Morahan's energetic readings enliven what's already a very good documentary tribute to the author Angela Carter, whose own life story – one of sadness, liberation, lust, impecuniosity and transformative shifts of location – informed her restlessly imaginative novels. Salman Rushdie, Margaret Atwood, Anne Enright and Jeanette Winterson are among the eminent admirers. First shown on BBC2 in 2018.

KIDS' CHOICE

Arthur

7.00am CBBC, iPlayer

A new series of animated adventures about a young aardvark and his friends began yesterday. Today, Arthur's friend Brain makes a time capsule, but is then overwhelmed by people asking to have their favourite belongings included. Will he find room for all his friends, or go his own way? JS

FILM OF THE DAY

That'll Be the Day

10.00pm Talking Pictures TV

Set in the late 1950s/early 1960s, this 1973 British drama charts the story of an angry West Country teenager as he drops out of school and sets out to become a rock 'n' roll star. David Essex and Ringo Starr lead a cast of familiar faces.

See page 29

HISTORY MAN
David Olusoga gets to the heart of a Bristolian story

A House through Time

9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY One of the great strengths of this brilliantly involving series is how it encompasses broad social and political issues while still keeping its stories close, personal and individual.

Like that of one resident of 10 Guinea Street, Bristol, John Haberfield, whose name first comes to historian David Olusoga's attention on the electoral roll as the 19-year-old son of the house's new tenants, in 1804.

But John is more than some callow teen, he has ambition and aspirations that take him from being an apprenticed clerk to a solicitor and into politics. He becomes Mayor of Bristol where he is in charge of the civic response to riots and the Chartist movement.

There are smaller, sadder tales linked to the house, too, including that of a servant abused by her husband, and the tragic teacher who ended up as an inmate of the dreadful Bristol Lunatic Asylum. AG

FROSTY SILENCE

Canadian detectives Cardinal and Delorme (Billy Campbell and Karine Vanasse)

PICK OF THE DAY Cardinal 9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC2

DRAMA OF THE WEEK As a frigid wind sweeps across the snowy wastes of the fictional Algonquin Bay in Canada, the world's saddest cop, John Cardinal, and his sidekick Lise Delorme arrive on BBC2 from BBC4, for the fourth and last-ever series.

If you're unfamiliar with Cardinal then rest assured, all of the must-have elements are here – a lead detective with A Tragic Past He Cannot Come To Terms With, a bit of chemistry with his lovely deputy, and a twisted, sadistic serial killer who is always at least two steps ahead of the police.

But the mysteries are always chewy and the landscape – snow-blasted and freezing – is utterly, brutally gorgeous. In the first of a double bill, a married local prosecutor is abducted from a hotel room where he's meeting a mistress. As Cardinal and Delorme (Billy Campbell and Karine Vanasse) crunch through the ice there is, of course, a race against time. The whole series is available on iPlayer as a box set afterwards. ALISON GRAHAM

Absolutely India: Mancs in Mumbai

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Adam, Ryan and Scott Thomas bid farewell to India in the last episode of the series. The only relative still to be investigated is their Aunt Pansy, a formidable hockey player who is sadly no longer with us. A former opponent stands in, offering photographs of the hockey scene back in the day and encouraging the lads to have a go against a local girls' team.

Then, it's time to board one of "India's iconic trains" and head for the Golden Festival in Jejuri, to be whipped and doused in turmeric. And we get a hint of what a less laddish series might have explored: the brothers' longing for praise from their taciturn father. JACK SEALE

Britain's Coronavirus Catastrophe

9.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The coronavirus blame game is just getting started. Some insist that questioning the government's recent decisions is "missing the mood of the nation", but the subtitle of this Dispatches report, Did the Government Get It Wrong?, suggests reporter Antony Barnett isn't one of them.

Previews weren't available, but as he probes possible lessons to be learnt, Barnett asks: what was the scientific advice to ministers? What warnings were received from the French and Italian governments? Why weren't testing and tracing ramped up early on? And why were care homes left to become lethal centres of infection? DAVID BUTCHER

McMillions

9.00, 10.05pm Sky Documentaries

DOCUMENTARY What started as a fairly jolly exploration of a decade-long scam against McDonald's and its Monopoly game takes a more serious turn with the involvement of the mob. And as the FBI continues its investigation, including a sting that could almost be seen as entrapment, we meet some of the not-quite-innocent parties suckered into a scheme involving stolen game pieces and fake addresses.

As we learn more about those involved – Jerry Jacobson, who obtained the $1m winning pieces, and Jerry Colombo, who dished them out for a healthy cut – there are still more questions than answers. And a cracking cliffhanger that colours the second episode. GILL CRAWFORD

Africa's Wild Horizons

9.00pm Sky Nature

NATURE This series offers a pleasant escape to some glorious African scenery. The narration is corny, but try to ignore references to "seas of undulating grassland", "mountains of ancient rock" (is there any other kind?) and a river "on its long, lonely journey to the sea" and focus instead on the mellow sights.

We're in South Africa in the 300-square-kilometre crater left when a meteorite struck Earth two billion years ago. The Vredefort Dome has a range of habitats (see above) supporting impressive species like the goliath heron and the long-tailed widowbird. We also learn about the bizarre mating habits of damselflies on the Vaal river. DAVID BUTCHER

The glorious EastEnders "Sharongate" imbroglio from 1994 has a lot to answer for. Ever since Sharon's fling with Phil was revealed to the Queen Vic punters, soap writers have been unable to resist the lure of exposing extra-marital affairs in front of gossip-hungry pubgoers. It's got to the point where you'd think that any character having it away with someone behind their partner's back would stay away from public houses out of fear that their secrets will get served up along with their pints.

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Not so, Jamie and Belle on Emmerdale (7pm ITV), whose trysts have now become common knowledge thanks to screenshots of their illicit texts being flashed up on the quiz screen at the Woolpack. And tonight's drama sees Jamie (Alexander Lincoln, left) panicking when his wife Andrea and their daughter Millie disappear. Serves him right. Not just for cheating, but for daring to drink in a social setting rather than buying cans of lager from the village store and necking them at home. DAVID BROWN

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

The $50m Art Swindle

iPlayer (expires today)

Vanessa Engle, consistently the director of fascinating documentaries, delivered again last year with the feature-length story of Michel Cohen, a high-flying art dealer in the 1990s who then ran into debt, conned his clients out of millions, escaped jail in 2003 and vanished... but Engle found him and persuaded him to tell his own tale, so he's the main interviewee. It's one of those sagas that would be outlandish as a fictional thriller, but it's not fictional.

Code 404

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY Daniel Peak's robocop sitcom has been a real hit; Sky's biggest comedy launch since 2012, it has been commissioned for a second series. It's hardly surprising, as the three leads, Daniel Mays, Stephen Graham and Anna Maxwell Martin, have handled what could have been an awkward mix of broad comedy and underplayed emotions superbly.

If you've not binge-watched the whole series, tonight's final episode builds on last week's cliffhanger with real tension, as Major and Carver move in on the Juggler, and Carver and Kelly's affair risks exposure. There are still laughs, in particular the brilliant running joke about Officer "my-name-is-not-Judy", who finally gets the last word. DAVID CRAWFORD

We Hunt Together

10.00pm Alibi

DRAMA The things that make this crime drama a bit too wonky for a main channel are the same things that make it interesting. The usual shape of a police procedural is that cops catch killers and restore the moral order. Here, though, our mismatched cops share screen-time with the two apprentice killers. None of them is obviously the lead, and each of them has shady secrets.

When bright-eyed manipulator Freddy is questioned over the murders she says sweetly, "Some people just have a darkness inside them, you can feel it," and looks hard at troubled cop Lola while she says it. Meanwhile, she and partner-in-crime Baba must decide what to do with another body. DAVID BUTCHER

Dial "B" for Britain: the Story of the Landline

11.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Smartphone "zombies" might be a curse on 21st-century pavements but, according to this fun, fact-filled history of the landline network (first shown in 2017), when telephones were first introduced into Victorian houses, they were seen as stains on the sanctity of home life – "thundering nuisances".

Victoria Coren Mitchell's arch narration places the changes in our phone habits in their wider social contexts, while excellent contributors – such as GPO engineers and switchboard operators – provide juicy details, such as the story of the first act of phone-box vandalism (in 1907!). DC

Little Big Awesome

7.25am CBBC, iPlayer

New episodes of the animation about a shapeshifting pink blob and his floppy-hat-wearing best friend are running all week. Today, Lennon brings Gluko to Jellyopolis, so he can refill his jelly. There, Lennon learns Jelly Giants are afraid of solids, so he must hide his identity to help Gluko. JS

FILM OF THE DAY

Carmen Jones

2.50pm BBC2

Otto Preminger's sizzling 1954 US musical based on Bizet's operatic masterpiece Carmen, with modernised lyrics. Set in the Deep South during the Second World War, Dorothy Dandridge and Harry Belafonte head the all-black cast.

See page 30

SEW AMUSING

It's back to the 80s for Joe Lycett

The Great British Sewing Bee

9.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT Most of the remaining six sewers were children in the 80s – or, like Joe Lycett, a toddler – so they definitely never wore shoulder pads or puffball skirts. However, they manage to channel their inner Joan Collins (Dynasty era) for 80s week, even though one person chooses unsuitable fabric (again) for her tailored power jacket and then uses something similar to make her 80s cocktail dress, which worries Esme Young. To make the shoulder pads scarily big they stuff them with everything they can: "I don't have any socks on now," jokes one stitcher.

They're usually a jovial lot, often laughing even when they're under pressure, but that final challenge is so difficult that one person walks out and Patrick Grant has to persuade him that all is not lost. Or is it? JANE RACKHAM

9.00 The Great British Sewing Bee

RT 7/10 Series 6. The remaining contestants head back in time to the 1980s, attempting to revive the glamorous, often over-the-top style of the decade. First up, judges Patrick Grant and Esme Young challenge them with their trickiest pattern so far, a woman's power jacket. The task involves grappling with tailoring fabrics and negotiating daunting technical hurdles such as lapel construction and inserting shoulder pads. For the transformation challenge, the hopefuls let their imaginations rip, turning high-vis work clothes into a party outfit. For the made-to-measure challenge, the sewers take on that 80s must-have, the cocktail dress. Working with bold, shiny fabrics, they must create a dress that embodies the excess of the decade. See page 81.

PICK OF THE DAY Ambulance 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY It's the night of St Patrick's Day and emergency calls are stacking up in the North West Ambulance Service control room as this exemplary series returns. But a BT operator calls to report a pressing emergency, a baby who has stopped breathing.

The control room leader immediately takes over, telling the child's dad how to perform CPR as an ambulance and a rapid-response doctor race to the address.

The outcome is profoundly sad and everyone involved is called to a meeting to talk about what happened. It's a glimpse at the enormous pressures that face personnel who are always first on the scene.

But there is levity when a very jolly lady celebrating her 70th birthday is taken to hospital after a fall. She and her giggling friend take selfies with the crew, one of whom attracts a lot of their ribald attention.

ALISON GRAHAM

Britain's Brightest Celebrity Family

8.00pm ITV

QUIZ Interesting dynamics are at play here, as the families of footballers John Barnes and Matt Le Tissier compete. John has brought his daughter and her partner (both are junior doctors) but says his plastic-surgeon son couldn't be there as "he's got a real job". Charming. Then there's an anecdote about a holiday swimming gala that "almost ended in tears". I get the feeling they might be just a little bit competitive. Matt admits that he, his son and daughter "don't spend a huge amount of time together at the same time", so hopes they can all bond. Judging by that comment, they're treating this more like a counselling session than a light-hearted quiz. DAVID BROWN

QI

9.00pm BBC2

QUIZ Not all editions of QI send you away with facts to wonder at but this one does, and delivers on the comedy front, too. It's a rambling, uproarious affair and host Sandi Toksvig almost loses control at one point, as guests Tom Allen, Susan Calman and Zoe Lyons joke about bikini waxing.

More diverting is the official reason table tennis bats have a red and black side and the dumbfounding phenomenon that if you toss the bat in the air it will, we're told, always land with the opposite side facing up. Why? Well, that isn't really explained.

Also on the agenda are nature's most genderfluid bird, the origins of the word Piccadilly and why blackberry bushes have thorns.

DAVID BUTCHER

First Dates Hotel

9.00pm C4

REALITY If you doubt that these couplings ever work out, prepare to be corrected because Vanessa and Julian, who met here two years ago, are back for another romantic stay. First though, James returns for a second attempt, this time with Max, who has had an interesting love life. He's also very tall, as everyone repeatedly tells him. He probably knows that, guys.

We also meet "notoriously single" Zoe, and Joe, who says, "In my head I'm Brad Pitt but in person I'm Mr Bean" – I'm not sure he's either. And then there's George, self-confessed chat-up disaster, who is thrilled when he spots what he hopes is his curvaceous date before she's even checked in. JANE RACKHAM

Outlander

9.00pm More4

DRAMA It's 1768 and Jamie and Claire are settling down nicely at Fraser's Ridge. There's jerky in the jar, and a pig is eating Jamie's hat. But the outside world beckons; Jamie's got to go to town to find tenants for his 10,000 acres, and Claire has some midwifery to tackle. But things don't go quite according to plan – in this plot-heavy drama, when do they ever?

Jamie finds it inexplicably hard to attract any interest until the sudden reappearance of a very old friend, who makes it very clear where his loyalties lie. Back at home, Claire is soon reduced to late nights alone with whiskey in one hand, a musket in the other, and Rollo growling at the door. GILL CRAWFORD

Hollyoaks (7pm E4) is often so overrun with serial killers that it can feel like a Thomas Harris novel. And the grisliest moments of one of its most notorious murderers, Silas Blissett (Jeff Rawle, right), are now getting reshown. Rawle will perhaps be more recognisable as nervous George Dent in Drop the Dead Donkey and poor Amos Diggory in the Harry Potter movies. But here, he's an altogether more merciless figure, with Silas having just taken a fifth life, that of his own daughter Heidi Costello. It's a move that leaves Mercedes petrified that she'll now be victim number six...

On Classic EastEnders (1pm, 1.40pm Drama), we reach a pivotal point in the history of Phil Mitchell, who's under pressure to burn down Frank's Autos. But as we now know, the 1994 car lot fire would result in the death of homeless Alan Hall (future Hollyoaks star Nick Pickard). With Phil having not really experienced lasting happiness since, it feels like he's still being punished for his part in the blaze. DAVID BROWN

After Truth

9.00pm Sky Documentaries

DOCUMENTARY The term fake news has been doggedly devalued – not least by Donald Trump using it for any press stories he doesn't like. But this HBO documentary explores the role of, as it were, real fake news; that is to say, deliberate lies spread for political ends – or purely for mischief.

A preview wasn't available but among the cases examined is the Pizzagate conspiracy theory, which in 2016 spread false stories across social media about a secret paedophile ring based in a Washington pizza joint: a gunman attacked the restaurant as a result. The film-makers follow right-wing propagandists who claim that cynical disinformation has become merely a "tool of war" like any other. DAVID BUTCHER

The First Team

9.30pm BBC2

SITCOM The characters and storylines in this football sitcom feel convincing – maybe too much so. Instead of laughing at hotshot player Jack (Jack McMullen) and his shyness about ever venturing into the real world, you start to feel sorry for him, as a Tinder date goes wrong and he is surrounded by fans wanting selfies.

While Jack is obsessively washing his hands to make it all go away, Mattie (Jake Short) – the one sane person at the club – tries to befriend Mexican midfielder Carlos and soon regrets it. Carlos is an intimidating loner who cheats at everything from pool to laser-quest because winning is all that matters to him. It's all very plausible, but never exactly funny. DAVID BUTCHER

Brassic

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA The pinball plotting in Brassic can be disconcerting but there's rarely a dull moment as we lurch from slapstick to serious and back again. This week, our gang of small-town criminals plan to put on a music festival as a way to shift all their home-grown weed. One of the best scenes involves a brilliant anti-festival rant from Jim, the farmer whose land they'll use – a tour de force from actor Steve Evets.

Meanwhile, it's also disconcerting that Parth Thakerar, who plays a candidate for London mayor in Gangs of London over on Sky Atlantic, plays the very different JJ here – this week JJ has to drive a bulldozer through a wall and steal a pig called Bernard. DAVID BUTCHER

Anthony Horowitz's popular books finally make it to the small screen, with Otto Farrant (above) as the teen spy who, when we meet him, seems to be an ordinary schoolboy. Readers of the 2001 book Point Blanc will, however, know roughly what's coming when a billionaire with a troubled teen son suddenly plummets to his death. The resulting adventure, which ends up at a shady alpine boarding school, is handsomely mounted, albeit perhaps too dark for kids and too stilted for grown-ups.

FILM OF THE DAY

Professor Marston and the Wonder Women

11.10pm Film4

The curious story of the Harvard academic who created the Wonder Woman – and the lie detector test. Luke Evans, Rebecca Hall and Bella Heathcote star. See page 31

WHO'S THE BOSS?

Trouble's never far away from Sean Wallace (Joe Cole)

Gangs of London

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA When everything comes together, Gangs of London has the chops to become what it seems to want to be, a gangland Game of Thrones. This week we get the kind of episode that initially looks as if it is merely mopping up odd story spillages from earlier in the series – then delivers a blow that knocks us sideways.

Don't worry, things haven't gone quiet on the violence front – there are a couple of massacres, some amputations and so on. But the heart of the story is about loyalties and in that respect, a very large cat is let out of a bag and sharpens its claws on Sean Wallace's carpet.

Meanwhile, that missing half a billion pounds is still missing, which is awkward. So the Nigerians attack the Albanians and a small army arrives from Ireland. The Nigerian boss, Mosi (Richard Pepple), isn't someone you want to cross. DAVID BUTCHER

GOGGLE THAT!
A chance to check out the décor chez Nick Grimshaw and his niece Liv

PICK OF THE DAY Celebrity Gogglebox 9.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT One of the most enjoyable things about this series is peeking inside the homes of the famous (or not-all-that-famous), whether it's Nick Grimshaw's glamorous London pad or Stacey Solomon and Joe Swash's family kitchen. But now that everybody is filming TV shows in their front room (having rearranged the bookshelves and ensured the lighting is flattering, of course), that guilty pleasure has become almost commonplace. However, there are some new faces this time, including Zoe Ball and her son Woody, Nicola Adams with her partner Ella Baig, and Harry Redknapp with his beloved wife Sandra. The latter's Sandbanks mansion should definitely be worth checking out.

It's always difficult to gauge who'll be good value – I never expected Sheila Hancock and Giles "open kimono" Brandreth to be so funny – but even if someone is being less than sparkling, you can always amuse yourself by inspecting their soft furnishings. JANE RACKHAM

The World's Most Scenic Railway Journeys

8.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL Pack your bag and prepare to board the Northern Explorer in Auckland for a trip across New Zealand's North Island to Wellington.

There's big, impressive scenery everywhere you look, and the train's passengers are so dazzled they beam with joy. Who can blame them? "It's a much better way of seeing the country than driving," says one. "It beats flying," adds another.

The train trundles through vast landscapes, some lushly green and others volcanic, at one point winding up a steep incline on a spiral. And of course no proper scenic railway journey would be complete without some marvellous viaducts, and here there are three. ALISON GRAHAM

The Other One

9.00pm BBC1 (11.25pm in Wales)

COMEDY New series A pilot for this promising comedy went out on BBC2 back in 2017. Now, finally, we get a series – but opening with that same pilot, which feels slightly less fresh.

The story starts with a surprise party that goes brilliantly wrong, as Tess (Rebecca Front, stealing the show) discovers her husband Colin has another wife and daughter – just as he has a fatal heart attack.

That means strait-laced daughter Cathy (Ellie White from The Windsors) gets to meet her secret sister (Lauren Socha) – also called Cathy, but different in every other way. Jokes about scattering ashes and "completing Tinder" now feel worn, but the character comedy has legs. DAVID BUTCHER

Portillo's Empire Journey

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Michael Portillo concludes his somewhat generous analysis of the British Empire by visiting North America, starting in New York. He hears about the Revolutionary War, how it was lost, where the Native Americans stood, and how Brits and loyalists who fled to Upper Canada were joined by slaves offered their freedom if they could make it across the border.

In Hamilton, Ontario, Portillo tours Dundurn Castle, once the seat of Allan MacNab, a future Prime Minister of Canada (1854–6). A local historian explains how the British class system and American-style republicanism fought to become the paradigm. JACK SEALE

Thou Shalt Not Kill

9.00pm More4

DRAMA As the series concludes, anyone expecting closure from Lombardi's investigation into the murder of Valeria's mother will be disappointed. Aside from a brief coda, it's not mentioned. Instead you're rewarded with a smart story about high passions in a ballet company that follows the themes of Giselle and moves along to hints of Adolphe Adam's sprightly score.

When the company's principal dancer dies during rehearsals, Valeria faces a battle of wills to discover who wanted him dead. It's a satisfyingly knotty case that, for once, she struggles to unpick. But if you want to know about her mother, you'll have to wait for the series' return. DAVID CRAWFORD

Ian Bartholomew, who plays evil abuser Geoff Metcalfe in Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) has had to do a lot of Soap Cliffhanger Face Acting this week. You know what I mean? Darting eyes, throbbing Adam's apple, audible gulps no other character seems to notice...

The reason for Geoff's discomfort is due to the fact that a lot of his guilty secrets seem to be spilling out. First, he had to do some rapid thinking after his hidden cameras at number six were discovered. Now, we have him being forced to admit that, yes, he did pay for a string of prostitutes behind wife Yasmeen's back.

Despite the revelation giving the nickname "Jiggle It Geoff" new and seedy connotations, son Tim still refuses to accept his dad's guilt and reckons the prostitutes gave Yasmeen a motive to try to kill him.

Hopefully Sally will realise that Tim has a portion of Betty's hotpot where his brains ought to be and she'll try to talk some sense into him. DAVID BROWN

This Is Us

Amazon Prime

Amazon's now the UK home for a US drama series that was, for the first two series, on Channel 4/More4, without becoming as big a hit here as it is over there. Revolving around a couple and their three children, it makes deft use of time jumps to fill in the background and finer details of highly emotional family stories. Fresh characters in this new fourth series – we know they'll end up connected to the main clan – include a marine with PTSD and a teen dad tempted by a life of crime.

Later... with Jools Holland

10.00pm BBC2

MUSIC It's hard to believe Ellie Goulding is now approaching pop veteran status, with her debut album ten years old. Her fourth is due out this summer, and here the singer looks back on Later... performances almost certain to include her strikingly Michael Jacksonesque 2014 Hootenanny version of Blame It on the Boogie.

This week's young pretender is Biig Piig – not to be confused with Aussie band Big Pig, who had a hit with Hungry Town in 1986 (remember that one, pop quizzers?). Her new single Switch is edgy, eclectic and slickly produced; its spacey vocal ushering in splashes of drum 'n' bass rhythm on the chorus. GARY ROSE

Big Zuu's Big Eats

10.00pm Dave

FOOD Zuu and his crew come home to London this week, where their guest, comedian Phil Wang, has a gig in Leicester Square. Wang is ready with his top five starchy staples: he puts noodles at number one, so Zuu heads to Chinatown to stock up before finding more than one imaginative way to use them. Our host also unleashes the sort of unimpeachable authenticity that spices up any cookery show by inviting his mother into his van to cook proper jollof rice.

Each course of the resulting meal comes with a complementary cup of gourmet tea. There's a better match between food and drink than between guest and host, but if Zuu and Wang have little chemistry, it doesn't matter when the dinner looks so good. JS

The IT Crowd

From 11.05pm C4

SITCOM Written by Father Ted's Graham Linehan, this was a bit of an oddity when it was first broadcast in 2006 and didn't really set the world alight.

But it's a classic grower, one of those special little shows that audiences come to appreciate – certainly, in my case, years later, after watching repeats on 4Music. Of course, it also made big stars of its lead cast, Chris O'Dowd, Richard Ayoade and Katherine Parkinson.

In the first of all six episodes of the opening series showing tonight, Parkinson is Jen, a "relationship manager", who arrives in the IT department of a huge corporation, to the consternation of lazy geeks Roy (O'Dowd) and Moss (Ayoade). AG

9.00pm BBC4 (also 9.00pm BBC1 in Wales)

ENTERTAINMENT The archives are thoroughly raided tonight to celebrate Wales's hairiest big voice, whose 80th birthday looms on Sunday. This hour-long profile mops up all the back catalogue hits of The Voice UK star – including Delilah, It's Not Unusual, Kiss and The Green, Green Grass of Home – while digging up old footage and interviews to put some muscle on the showbiz story.

After that, at 10pm on BBC4, there's a rerun of the 2016 documentary Tom Jones's 1950s: the Decade That Made Me, which is about the 50s generally rather than Jones specifically, but is fronted by him and contains deep Tom cuts such as What I'd Say and Lucille ("Ohhhhhhhhhhh BABY!").

Rounding off the night on BBC4 are vintage performances in Tom Jones: a Little Later (11pm), Sounds of the Sixties (11.15pm) and ...Sings Elvis (11.45pm). JS

11.00am The Weaker Sex ★★ Sentimental wartime drama about life on home front. Ursula Jeans (1948, U) (S)
12.45pm The Fighting Seabees ★★★ Wartime drama in which John Wayne plays the boss of a construction company who orders his workers to take up arms against the Japanese. Susan Hayward (1944, U) (S)
2.50 Track of the Cat ★★★ A symbolic hunt for a wild cat drives this brooding western. Robert Mitchum, Teresa Wright (1954) (S)
4.55 The Naked Jungle ★★★ Both an adventure and a thought-provoking drama, this riveting tale set in an ant-infested jungle remains one of Charlton Heston's most interesting early films. Eleanor Parker (1953, 12)

6.50pm 27 Dresses ★★★ Katherine Heigl stars in this fluffy, reassuringly predictable romantic comedy about a woman who is always the bridesmaid, never the bride (she has the dresses to prove it) whose story attracts the attention of a newspaper columnist. James Marsden, Malin Akerman (2008, 12) (S) (AD)

9.00 The Take ★★★ Pacey action thriller with Idris Elba as a CIA agent stationed in Paris. Review p31. Richard Madden (2016, 15) (S)

10.45 Punisher: War Zone ★★ The Marvel Comics vigilante hero returns in a simplistic slice of violent escapism that's watchable on a trashy level. Ray Stevenson, Dominic West (2008, 18) (S)

12.50-3.15am Kill Zone 2 ★★★ Fists of fury fly after an undercover cop is betrayed in this martial arts thriller. Tony Jaa, Wu Jing (2015, 15) (S)

Castaway classics

Lockdown has put us all on a desert island. But which discs have helped you through, asks Stuart Maconie

Your Desert Island Discs
Friday 9.00am Radio 4

LATE ONE NIGHT in 1941, as he padded in his pyjamas around his cottage in Bushey, Hertfordshire, stirring his cocoa and desperately thinking of new work avenues, jobbing actor and recently out of work commercial radio presenter Roy Plomley had an idea for a radio programme.

In those gentler times – before “commissioning rounds”, “pilots” or “focus groups” – all it took was a couple of letters to Broadcasting House and Desert Island Discs, now the UK’s longest-running radio programme, was born. (Interestingly, the longest-running in the USA is country and western stalwart Grand Ole Opry, which also has music at its heart, but rather more Stetsons.)

‘Music gives shape to things and fills the gaps in everyday life’

We’ve all been castaways of late, marooned on our own desert islands – albeit ones where it’s rather easier to get the essentials of life as well as the luxuries. Plomley’s island has always assumed “a gramophone and an inexhaustible supply of needles” and, in 1951, when the show introduced the idea of allowing guests to take a luxury with them, the first chosen (by actress Sally Ann Howes) was, surprisingly, garlic.

We can have both gramophone needles and garlic delivered to our desert islands within hours of course, as well as all the music we could ever wish to hear, not just on eight gramophone records but plucked from the air at will, like magic. Thanks to Spotify, Amazon, YouTube and DAB, as Caliban in The Tempest said, our “isle is full of noises, sounds and sweet airs, that give delight and hurt not... sometimes a thousand twangling instruments... and sometimes voices.”

This week, Desert Island Discs breaks from its usual format of celebrity castaways to ask Radio 4 listeners which one piece of music they have turned to for solace or uplift during lockdown. We have all been realising that, to borrow from poet William Congreve, “music has charms to soothe the savage breast”.

From the singing balconies of Rome to the Hacienda club’s 12-hour online raves, it’s been music – more, it seems, than comedy, drama or certainly the news – that we’ve used to give shape to things and fill the gaps in everyday life. There will surely be a palpable sigh of relief when Radio 3 begins broadcasting live music from the Wigmore Hall this week [Monday-Friday, 1pm], albeit to a Bundesliga-style empty auditorium, and in solo and duo recitals only.

Even if your breast hasn’t felt particularly savage these past two months, you’ve probably felt anxious, unsettled, possibly bored, and there will have been times when not even the amiably studious face of Professor Chris Whitty, Chief Medical Officer for England, has provided enough distraction and reassurance.

The work of another professor points up the subjectivity in all this. Rupert Till, professor of music at Huddersfield University, a global leader in the study of pop music who DJs as “Professor Chill” (I know, but let it pass), has drawn up a series of playlists that aim to “lighten the lockdown and soothe self-isolation”.

That one man’s balm is another’s bane is clearly evidenced by the fact that at least two of the tracks, John Lennon’s glutinous Imagine and the meaninglessly shouty Don’t Stop Me Now by Queen (or, as I like to think of them, “The One Show Led Zeppelin”), would have me begging to be locked in the shed in darkness and silence until October. Containing also Pharrell Williams’s Happy and Louis Armstrong’s What a Wonderful World, Prof Till’s list is determinedly literal, but I’ve found that I’m eschewing songs with positive “messages”, prefer-

PICK OF THE WEEK

Drama on 4: A Room of One's Own
Sunday 3.00pm Radio 4

"A woman must have money and a room of her own if she is to write fiction," declared Virginia Woolf in A Room of One's Own, first published in 1929. This key polemical work was and remains a seminal feminist text – but it's so much more than shouty politics.

The extended essay is an exquisitely crafted and witty examination of the struggle to be creative if you're not wealthy enough to indulge in such artistic interests and, more to the point, the psychological, cultural and practical barriers that stand in the way of women being recognised in any field.

Dramatist Linda Marshall Griffiths has done a superb job in turning Woolf's essay into a believable play. It's set in the university town of "Oxbridge", where the young female writer is told to get off the college grass, unable to enter the libraries without a male companion and expected to live off a diet of yellowing Brussel sprouts.

Indira Varma takes the role of "the Woman" (aka Woolf), while Jenny Platt is the imagined voices of Charlotte Brontë and Mary Seton, some of the dead women who act as both a challenge and an inspiration on Virginia's remarkable journey.

LONE WOOLF
Indira Varma plays
"the Woman"

ring chamber music, jazz and, naturally, 1970s Turkish psychedelia.

But many people seem to be finding comfort in the familiar. At the risk of letting light in on magic, I can confirm that even the hippest radio stations have relaxed their usual playlists to allow for more "bangers". Gold Soundz from noon on 6 Music is an uninterrupted daily hour of indie, dance and alternative rock classics.

ON RADIO 2, Ken Bruce's PopMaster (9.30am Monday-Friday) is now, for some of us, a more crucial and unmissable daily appointment than the Downing Street Covid-19 briefing. Patterns are beginning to emerge – there's always a Steely Dan track at the end of it. (PopMaster, not the briefing, although I'd like to see Dominic Raab walking off to Rikki Don't Lose That Number.)

When Desert Island Discs tried this before, asking for the nation's castaway choices in 2011, the results were fairly predictable – Beethoven's Fifth, Elgar, Bohemian Rhapsody, and Vaughan Williams's two biggies, Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis and The Lark Ascending. Weirdly though, Pink Floyd's Comfortably Numb was also in the top ten, a grim dirge about a medicated rock star's feelings of self-loathing and isolation. It'll be interesting to see whether the nation has turned to such suddenly topical choices or prefers to "push pineapple, shake a tree" with those crazy bon vivants, Black Lace.

Finally, here comes the science bit. Studies show that music has a direct effect on mood. Bradt & Dileo (US sociologists, not a 70s soft rock duo) cite 26 studies covering almost 1,500 heart patients, which found that listening to music reduced heart rate, blood pressure and anxiety. And a 2009 study found that a short blast of happy music made participants perceive other's faces as happier; the opposite being true for a snippet of sad music. The biggest effect was seen when people looked at faces with a neutral expression. In other words: people projected the mood of the music they were listening to on to other people's faces.

So, next time you think that Matt Hancock looks unnervingly like a man who thinks he might have left the gas on, try blasting out Black Lace's Agadoo and imagine that he's just psyching himself up for the dance moves.

Stuart Maconie presents the banger-free Freak Zone on Sundays 6 Music

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Many parents will empathise with Emma as she cooks up a storm in the Tearoom at the same time as trying to educate George and Keira. And tensions increase when Emma discovers Keira has been keeping something from her.

Ben is complaining about the restrictions on his life, but soon finds himself the pupil in an unexpected history lesson when he comes across some of Jill's childhood mementoes. What will he discover about his beloved grandmother and how will it affect his future?

And despite the world being in flux, some things remain the same: Ed is facing a shearing battle with Jazzer. But he also has something on his mind involving Emma... DAVID BROWN

Getting us Thorough

Missing intimate conversation? Louis and friends are here to help

A friend who runs a large company ruefully reflected that never once in all his regular meetings with the risk assessment people did anyone ever mention the threat of a pandemic. Henceforth, of course, it will be the first thing on the agenda. That's how we humans are. What's going on at the moment has pressed the pause button on our lives, left us wondering what kind of world we'll eventually emerge into and thrown us back on the oral tradition for both entertainment and instruction – and audio producers have taken advantage of the fact that for once we're in the frame of mind to sit still and listen.

HOW TO FIND A PODCAST Simply type the name of the podcast you're looking for into Google and listen on your computer. Most people, however, listen to podcasts on smartphones via apps such as BBC Sounds, Apple Podcasts, Stitcher or Acast. You can download a free one in seconds. Then search within the app for the podcast you want and "subscribe" to it. It won't cost you anything, and new episodes will turn up in your feed as they're published, which you can then play at your leisure.

Rob Beckett and Josh Widdicombe's Lockdown Parenting

Those of us who are missing seeing our grandchildren don't know we're born. Their parents, on the other hand, are singing the old song How Can I Miss You When You Won't Go Away? Here two comedians welcome celebrity guests such as Miles Jupp and Jonathan Ross to talk about child entertainment in challenging times. Hot tip: take a three-year-old into a car and allow them to play with all the switches. Occupies an hour.

Being Socially Distant

Like a lockdown audio version of Outnumbered, this comedy podcast from Tin Shed Productions looks at what might be going on behind the plantation shutters of Nappy Valley, as three anxious young women worry about how Mungo's getting on with the home schooling, why their credit card has just been refused, whether maybe they're reaching for the furlough Merlot a little too early in the day and just how long they have to keep clapping on a Thursday evening.

Cautionary Tales

Right now, we're all prepared to believe Murphy's Law: "If anything can go wrong, it will go wrong." Hence this Tim Harford series – which tells true stories about historic mistakes and looks at how we can learn from them – predates lockdown but could have been made with that predicament in mind. What does the opening of the wrong envelope at the Oscars have in common with the disaster at Three Mile Island? We blame human error while designing systems that make human errors more likely.

Forgotten Stories of Football

In this period when sport is off-limits, memories of recent league football soon fade, but our interest in the beautiful game grows, if anything, more intense. That's why this series, which promises to cover old stories of the captain of France who murdered for Hitler and the Sheffield Wednesday star who acted with Chaplin, is a good idea. It's also why I'm prepared to overlook the clumsy start in their story of football at the Berlin Olympics, in which the narrator rather overacts.

SHOW OF THE WEEK

Grounded with Louis Theroux

I love these candid interviews with the likes of Jon Ronson and Helena Bonham Carter, because they remind you that most interview programmes are such victims of their own narrow agendas, shutting off tangents just at the moment they're getting interesting. The chat here happily follows all the tangents and its title underlines the fact that at this point in time, when we're all living the same life, there really isn't a lot of point trying to impress each other.

Swipe Left Swipe Left

We've all got one story of a romantic experience that went colourfully awry. Most of us prefer to keep such stories to ourselves, while hoping – for entertainment's sake – that other people don't do the same. In this podcast, various total strangers step up to tell their embarrassing stories. No radio station would run them because they're usually NSFW (ie not safe for work) and the speakers aren't famous. Having heard them, you'll breathe a sigh of relief that it wasn't you.

The Proms must go on

Virtuoso soloists can save our summer

For millions of us living in lockdown, music is the nearest thing to a vaccine. A blast of Beethoven can briefly banish the daily diet of doom on the news. Sinatra can croon out corona. And, as their name suggests, the Cure are, well, just that – a temporary fix for all that viral anxiety. But Glastonbury's gone. Eurovision was cancelled. What on earth, music lovers, will happen to the BBC Proms? Even as you read this column, a decision is due from Broadcasting House.

The Georgians invented promenade concerts and as the orchestra played in pleasure gardens, you could walk around, arm in arm, alone, or in groups (just imagine that). Then

'Music is the nearest thing to a vaccine'

Henry Wood decided to bring some order to the meanderings and insisted the wandering music lovers checked into a concert hall instead. Wood's Proms began in 1895 in the Queen's Hall on Langham Place, where they continued until the Luftwaffe flattened the hall in 1941. By the time of the 50th anniversary, the Proms had relocated to the Royal Albert Hall, where they've returned every year since.

These days we may know the Prommers more for their whistles and inflatable bananas than their parasols and top hats, but their spirit and love of music remains the same. I've been as a guest and broadcaster many times but I've stood in the centre of the hall on the Last Night of the Proms just once. It was 2017, and there was an Amazonian woman from Schleswig-Holstein next to me and a diminutive student from Caerphilly in front. At least it wasn't the other way round or I wouldn't have seen a thing. There was so much rubbing of shoulders in classical music's only mosh pit that we all became firm friends for the evening.

But most of my memories of the Proms are thanks to the BBC broadcasts that fill the airwaves, and I'm not alone. For many the BBC Proms define the summer as surely as swallows on the wing or Test matches at Lord's.

Sun and symphonies, heat and Hollywood themes, and hundreds of great musical moments make up the memories. But one stands out: the loving silence last year when conductor Bernard Haitink laid down his baton for the last time at the Proms, soon after to head into retirement. There followed an explosion of sound – this time from an orchestra of hands clapping and hoots of "Bravo!" Haitink had been at the height of classical music for 65 years and as he left the stage of the Royal Albert Hall, I was there too, listening in my kitchen.

So please BBC, don't cancel the Proms. If supermarket staff stack shelves and delivery drivers ring our bells, then the virtuoso soloists, if not the trombonists and third oboists, can do the same. And the BBC can keep doing what it does best – broadcasting great music, even if for one year, they must do it safely.

Because what begins as socially distanced soloists in empty concert halls can, as the season continues, develop as the view changes on what's possible for the safety of players, Prommers, roadies, theatre staff and more. Mass gatherings might be impossible to stage, but broadcasting to the masses has never been more important.

With a mix of modern works scaled down and an archive of amazing recordings, the Proms could still delight and surprise. Just as distancing in the open air can help us beat the infection, so too can the open airwaves.

LISTENING IN LOCKDOWN

Et voilà! Here's my lockdown listening set-up this week: at lunch awaiting R4's The World at One – perfect with an omelette à la Vanessa Feltz (see RT 23 May). And reflecting my new gardening fetish (RT 16 May). Send me your pictures of your lockdown listening set-ups and I'll publish the best (with or without a gnome).

Today's Choices

Archive on 4: The Wellness Phenomenon

8.00pm Radio 4

Experimental healthcare products and dietary fads have been filling newspaper columns for decades, yet somehow still have the capacity to shock us; Gwyneth Paltrow (above) continues to court controversy with the range of products championed by her Goop brand, such as jade eggs. Like many social phenomena, the $4 trillion global wellness industry had humble origins. Here, Claudia Hammond traces today's lifestyle fads back to an innocuous public health initiative launched on a US university campus in the 1980s that would quickly become a victim of its own success.

Opera on 3

6.30pm Radio 3

Glyndebourne is closed for the duration, but Radio 3's season of highlights from the Sussex opera house continues, tonight with Bizet's Carmen, in a 2002 production built around the distinctly un-stereotypical casting of "Nordic ice-maiden" Anne Sofie von Otter as the hot-blooded Gypsy temptress. Some were less than convinced by her stage performance: one chorus wit commented, "She looks as if she's gone to Stockholm public library to look up the word 'sex'." But, purely vocally, it's a fascinating interpretation.

Today's Choices

Bette Midler, for the Girls

5.00pm Radio 2
Back in 2014, 42 years after her first US hit and three years prior to her Twitter debut as the sassy voice of irreverence targeting her President, consummate entertainer Bette Midler (above) and Radio 2 producer Malcolm Prince made this warm and breezy love letter to the girl group sound, covering not just its 1960s peak (Supremes, Shangri-Las, Ronettes, et al) but hits across 60 years. Here she articulates her undying love for all-female harmonizing, armed with that signature broad smile in a voice that is never cloying. This programme coincided with the release of her album of polished girl group covers, eight of which feature here, though the originals reign supreme.

Today's Choices

Girl, Woman, Other

12.06pm Radio 4

Joint winner (with Margaret Atwood) of the 2019 Booker Prize, Bernardine Evaristo's eighth novel is a sensitive examination of the lives of 12 characters, most of them British black women. Evaristo (above) was praised for how she tackled the complexities of smart, switched-on modern females still facing challenges and prejudices in a patriarchal society, and criticised for having a naive view on what constitutes "privilege". Please put these intellectual arguments aside and take this for what it is: an uplifting insight on interlocking lives, where even the darkest of stories can end with a ray of hope through the act of passing them on.

JANE ANDERSON

Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert

1.00pm Radio 3

Countless soloists, orchestras and choirs have been posting online performances from their homes during lockdown, but now live concerts return to Radio 3 for the first time in ten weeks, as Wigmore Hall in London hosts a series of weekday lunchtime recitals throughout June. With artists observing strict social distancing, minimal staff and no audience present, the series opens with pianist Stephen Hough playing Bach and Schumann. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Should This Exist?

Listen at shouldthisexist.com Caterina Fake, founder of Flickr, hosts the series that questions how technological advances impact on our humanity. It's hi-tech with applied morality. I was both amazed and perturbed by the episode on the "woebot" – psychotherapy via an app. JANE ANDERSON

TUESDAY Radio

Tuesday

Radio

Schedules are subject to change at this time

Today's Choices

Weans' World

11.00am Radio 4
Audrey Gillan's 2018 portrait of homelessness Tara and George is one of the great radio achievements of recent years, and she brings a similarly attentive but un sentimental eye to bear in this study of childhood in modern-day (but pre-lockdown) Glasgow. It's the city where Gillan (above) grew up in the 1970s, but she goes easy on the comparisons and the programme transcends politics. A startling opening leads into a mosaic of children's voices that Gillan and producer Alan Hall have captured in all their naturalness, benefiting from the skills of 11-year-old recordist Jayden. SIMON O'HAGAN

Drama: An Accident that Wasn't Your Fault

2.15pm Radio 4
Jess has let work slide and faces the awkwardness of a new flatmate. But much worse, she's unable to get over the loss of confidante Anna. Meanwhile, the next name on bored-witless cold-caller Lydia's list just happens to be Jess. "I believe you've been in an accident..." To her surprise, Jess has, and she recounts the car crash in which Anna died. A friendship blossoms born of each other's needs, never a safe base, and is soon tested by a lie. If at times predictable, Margaret Perry's story of two women adrift in life is touching and well played. CHRIS GARDNER

Natalie Haynes Stands Up for the Classics

Today's Choices

The Essay: Islands

10.45pm Radio 3

In his second series on Scottish islands, Glaswegian poet Kenneth Steven delivers a 13-minute gem every night this week. Tonight his gently rolling voice takes the listener on a tour of Staffa (above), a satellite of Mull and home to the magical Fingal's Cave. Strange basalt columns, similar to those of the Giant's Causeway in Northern Ireland, have attracted many tourists before, including Boswell and Johnson, Keats and Queen Victoria. All left impressed, and the mere sight of it from sea inspired Mendelssohn to compose his overture The Hebrides. A lovely place to visit on the way to the land of nod. FIONA HUGHES

Michael Frayn's Magic Mobile

11.30am Radio 4

At 86, Michael Frayn is funnier and more observant than ever. So it's a sad goodbye today to Magic Mobile, the sketch show that takes an easy-going angle on existential angst. Delights have included God actually talking to a vicar and Frayn's exposure of just why prescription medicines have such daft names (there's a committee that makes them up). This final show, starring David Suchet and Joanna Lumley, features trouble for Zeus on Mount Olympus and an edited Ten Commandments. Come back soon! MICHAEL HODGES

The Naked Scientists Podcast

Listen at

thenakedscientists.com

Expert research and opinion in an accessible format. The episode on post-coronavirus society is a must-listen, while the special on Second World War science hits a nostalgic target. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

The Forum

10.05am BBC World Service
The ancient Mesopotamian city of Babylon has long had a reputation for depravity; though the ancient Greeks considered it one of the wonders of the world. Bridget Kendall gathers a group of scholars to mull over why Bible stories such as the Whore of Babylon and the Tower of Babel have endured. The seasonal floodings of the Euphrates and Tigris appear to have played a part, but in the past two centuries cuneiform tablets have been raised from the marsh that shed light on the city's magnificence and mathematical and astronomical achievements. If you've ever wondered why there's 60 seconds in a minute, blame the Babylonians. DAVID CRAWFORD

Ramblings

3.00pm Radio 4
Today's ramble through past Ramblings highlights some of the singers and writers who have been Clare Balding's walking companions. They include actress-singer Toyah Willcox, folk group Ninebarrow, nature writer Robert Macfarlane and natural health therapist Emma Mitchell. Pressed for a favourite clip, producer Karen Gregor chooses Balding's 2015 encounter with Bill Bryson. It involves the two of them helping each other into their waterproofs. "That's one item on my bucket list," says Bryson. "Nice chemistry," notes Gregor. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

The Disrupters

Listen at bbc.co.uk/sounds
The subject of starting one's own business might not seem a sure-fire bet for wit and humour, but hosts Kamal Ahmed and Rohan Silva ensure that this is exactly what we get, as they talk to entrepreneurs including James Dyson and Martha Lane Fox. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

Crowd Science

8.30pm BBC World Service

At a time when most of us, not least frontline medical professionals, are dealing with daily risks, Crowd Science listener Alix wants to know why certain people take risks to help others. She has experience: she has pushed someone out of the way of an oncoming car and been hit herself, and has saved schoolchildren from a nest of hornets and got so badly stung that she ended up in hospital. Marnie Chesterton explores whether there is an evolutionary advantage to such risky behaviour. The possible answer is surprising. DAVID CRAWFORD

Life on Lockdown

11.00am Radio 4

Laura Ann is living in a burger van with her partner, contemplating being pregnant. Mick is missing the dance group he went to in pre-lockdown days that helped him deal with his grief. Margaret's active husband ended up in hospital with Covid-19. He asked her to read him poems on the phone – they were all about death and sometimes she couldn't talk for the tears. Cathy FitzGerald's third programme on the personal impact of life in lockdown is quietly beautiful, an understated, incredibly powerful insight into sadness, fear, and hope. JANE ANDERSON

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice Trish Adudu BBC CWR

Age: 50
Current job
Presents the weekday afternoon show (2pm-6pm) on BBC CWR.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "There's a strong community feel. People want to interact. There are light exchanges and fun – like singing happy birthday to each other. Then the government briefing comes on, with the death figures. It's a concertina of emotions and it keeps you on your toes. The show has evolved into Oprah versus Paxman!

"Audiences want to be entertained. But in the pandemic everything is refocusing. We're getting a new kind of listener phoning in. Deeper thinking. Afternoon shows are not heavy, usually. But we're questioning everything at the moment. And we're reflecting on why we're grateful to be healthy and active.

"You have to be reflective, to let people talk more. And we have to listen. There are strands of poignancy and sadness. It's a barometer of what's happening in the community.

"Coventry is a diverse city. And one of the positive effects of this crisis is that we're having more and more of those diverse voices coming on air."

Best moments "The great thing about the BBC Local Radio Making a Difference campaign is – it's really making a difference! Community is key.

"A restaurant in Coventry has donated over 50,000 meals to NHS staff, cooked by their staff working for nothing, and funded by donations from the public.

"For our Thankful Thursday slot, a nine-year-old boy's mum phoned in so that he could read out his own thanks to NHS workers. His auntie is a paramedic in London, and his cousin is a nurse in ICU and he's worried about them, so he just wanted to say thank you to them himself. It was very emotional."

Worst moments "A man called in who had just lost both his father and his brother within the space of eight days. He said 'I'm at my wit's end, arranging the funerals of my dad and brother. But I'm thankful that I have the radio. I would be in a very dark place without people to listen to and laugh with. However dark it gets, you'll get through."

Off air "Career-wise, I'm loving it; but personally, I'm anxious! I have two teenage boys and my partner, who's a chef, is furloughed. It's brought us all a hundred times closer together. We're spending quality time together and having meaningful conversations – no more one-word sentences! Usually, I have to prise out of them what they're thinking!

'Every week is a long one in lockdown'

"My oldest boy, who is 19, is doing a weekly online show, connecting teenagers during lockdown – at fridays.org.uk – with tips on food, fitness, freetime and careers.

"My youngest has also had eight weeks of thinking, and has decided to change the course he's doing at college. Young people have time to sit and reflect at the moment, with no distractions. I'm very proud of what they're achieving."

Coping skills "Every week is a long one in lockdown. We're not in control of our lives! So many listeners are starting to panic – worrying if people get too close, and such. I'm very open – I say 'I'm having a wobble, help me cope.'

"But I'm a lively person – no one is allowed to be down for too long! My message is 'Let's try to embrace one thing each day from lockdown that's positive.'

"What it's made us do is, we're spiritually connecting. There's been a seismic shift in attitude, as a result of all this stress. Our show is about community and hope. It's a privilege to present it, and a humbling experience."

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice Trish Adudu BBC CWR

Age: 50
Current job
Presents the weekday afternoon show (2pm-6pm) on BBC CWR.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "There's a strong community feel. People want to interact. There are light exchanges and fun – like singing happy birthday to each other. Then the government briefing comes on, with the death figures. It's a concertina of emotions and it keeps you on your toes. The show has evolved into Oprah versus Paxman!

"Audiences want to be entertained. But in the pandemic everything is refocusing. We're getting a new kind of listener phoning in. Deeper thinking. Afternoon shows are not heavy, usually. But we're questioning everything at the moment. And we're reflecting on why we're grateful to be healthy and active.

"You have to be reflective, to let people talk more. And we have to listen. There are strands of poignancy and sadness. It's a barometer of what's happening in the community.

"Coventry is a diverse city. And one of the positive effects of this crisis is that we're having more and more of those diverse voices coming on air."

Best moments "The great thing about the BBC Local Radio Making a Difference campaign is – it's really making a difference! Community is key.

"A restaurant in Coventry has donated over 50,000 meals to NHS staff, cooked by their staff working for nothing, and funded by donations from the public.

"For our Thankful Thursday slot, a nine-year-old boy's mum phoned in so that he could read out his own thanks to NHS workers. His auntie is a paramedic in London, and his cousin is a nurse in ICU and he's worried about them, so he just wanted to say thank you to them himself. It was very emotional."

Worst moments "A man called in who had just lost both his father and his brother within the space of eight days. He said 'I'm at my wit's end, arranging the funerals of my dad and brother. But I'm thankful that I have the radio. I would be in a very dark place without people to listen to and laugh with. However dark it gets, you'll get through."

Off air "Career-wise, I'm loving it; but personally, I'm anxious! I have two teenage boys and my partner, who's a chef, is furloughed. It's brought us all a hundred times closer together. We're spending quality time together and having meaningful conversations – no more one-word sentences! Usually, I have to prise out of them what they're thinking!

'Every week is a long one in lockdown'

"My oldest boy, who is 19, is doing a weekly online show, connecting teenagers during lockdown – at fridays.org.uk – with tips on food, fitness, freetime and careers.

"My youngest has also had eight weeks of thinking, and has decided to change the course he's doing at college. Young people have time to sit and reflect at the moment, with no distractions. I'm very proud of what they're achieving."

Coping skills "Every week is a long one in lockdown. We're not in control of our lives! So many listeners are starting to panic – worrying if people get too close, and such. I'm very open – I say 'I'm having a wobble, help me cope.'

"But I'm a lively person – no one is allowed to be down for too long! My message is 'Let's try to embrace one thing each day from lockdown that's positive.'

"What it's made us do is, we're spiritually connecting. There's been a seismic shift in attitude, as a result of all this stress. Our show is about community and hope. It's a privilege to present it, and a humbling experience."

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice Trish Adudu BBC CWR

Age: 50
Current job
Presents the weekday afternoon show (2pm-6pm) on BBC CWR.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "There's a strong community feel. People want to interact. There are light exchanges and fun – like singing happy birthday to each other. Then the government briefing comes on, with the death figures. It's a concertina of emotions and it keeps you on your toes. The show has evolved into Oprah versus Paxman!

"Audiences want to be entertained. But in the pandemic everything is refocusing. We're getting a new kind of listener phoning in. Deeper thinking. Afternoon shows are not heavy, usually. But we're questioning everything at the moment. And we're reflecting on why we're grateful to be healthy and active.

"You have to be reflective, to let people talk more. And we have to listen. There are strands of poignancy and sadness. It's a barometer of what's happening in the community.

"Coventry is a diverse city. And one of the positive effects of this crisis is that we're having more and more of those diverse voices coming on air."

Best moments "The great thing about the BBC Local Radio Making a Difference campaign is – it's really making a difference! Community is key.

"A restaurant in Coventry has donated over 50,000 meals to NHS staff, cooked by their staff working for nothing, and funded by donations from the public.

"For our Thankful Thursday slot, a nine-year-old boy's mum phoned in so that he could read out his own thanks to NHS workers. His auntie is a paramedic in London, and his cousin is a nurse in ICU and he's worried about them, so he just wanted to say thank you to them himself. It was very emotional."

Worst moments "A man called in who had just lost both his father and his brother within the space of eight days. He said 'I'm at my wit's end, arranging the funerals of my dad and brother. But I'm thankful that I have the radio. I would be in a very dark place without people to listen to and laugh with. However dark it gets, you'll get through."

Off air "Career-wise, I'm loving it; but personally, I'm anxious! I have two teenage boys and my partner, who's a chef, is furloughed. It's brought us all a hundred times closer together. We're spending quality time together and having meaningful conversations – no more one-word sentences! Usually, I have to prise out of them what they're thinking!

'Every week is a long one in lockdown'

"My oldest boy, who is 19, is doing a weekly online show, connecting teenagers during lockdown – at fridays.org.uk – with tips on food, fitness, freetime and careers.

"My youngest has also had eight weeks of thinking, and has decided to change the course he's doing at college. Young people have time to sit and reflect at the moment, with no distractions. I'm very proud of what they're achieving."

Coping skills "Every week is a long one in lockdown. We're not in control of our lives! So many listeners are starting to panic – worrying if people get too close, and such. I'm very open – I say 'I'm having a wobble, help me cope.'

"But I'm a lively person – no one is allowed to be down for too long! My message is 'Let's try to embrace one thing each day from lockdown that's positive.'

"What it's made us do is, we're spiritually connecting. There's been a seismic shift in attitude, as a result of all this stress. Our show is about community and hope. It's a privilege to present it, and a humbling experience."

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice Trish Adudu BBC CWR

Age: 50
Current job
Presents the weekday afternoon show (2pm-6pm) on BBC CWR.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "There's a strong community feel. People want to interact. There are light exchanges and fun – like singing happy birthday to each other. Then the government briefing comes on, with the death figures. It's a concertina of emotions and it keeps you on your toes. The show has evolved into Oprah versus Paxman!

"Audiences want to be entertained. But in the pandemic everything is refocusing. We're getting a new kind of listener phoning in. Deeper thinking. Afternoon shows are not heavy, usually. But we're questioning everything at the moment. And we're reflecting on why we're grateful to be healthy and active.

"You have to be reflective, to let people talk more. And we have to listen. There are strands of poignancy and sadness. It's a barometer of what's happening in the community.

"Coventry is a diverse city. And one of the positive effects of this crisis is that we're having more and more of those diverse voices coming on air."

Best moments "The great thing about the BBC Local Radio Making a Difference campaign is – it's really making a difference! Community is key.

"A restaurant in Coventry has donated over 50,000 meals to NHS staff, cooked by their staff working for nothing, and funded by donations from the public.

"For our Thankful Thursday slot, a nine-year-old boy's mum phoned in so that he could read out his own thanks to NHS workers. His auntie is a paramedic in London, and his cousin is a nurse in ICU and he's worried about them, so he just wanted to say thank you to them himself. It was very emotional."

Worst moments "A man called in who had just lost both his father and his brother within the space of eight days. He said 'I'm at my wit's end, arranging the funerals of my dad and brother. But I'm thankful that I have the radio. I would be in a very dark place without people to listen to and laugh with. However dark it gets, you'll get through."

Off air "Career-wise, I'm loving it; but personally, I'm anxious! I have two teenage boys and my partner, who's a chef, is furloughed. It's brought us all a hundred times closer together. We're spending quality time together and having meaningful conversations – no more one-word sentences! Usually, I have to prise out of them what they're thinking!

'Every week is a long one in lockdown'

"My oldest boy, who is 19, is doing a weekly online show, connecting teenagers during lockdown – at fridays.org.uk – with tips on food, fitness, freetime and careers.

"My youngest has also had eight weeks of thinking, and has decided to change the course he's doing at college. Young people have time to sit and reflect at the moment, with no distractions. I'm very proud of what they're achieving."

Coping skills "Every week is a long one in lockdown. We're not in control of our lives! So many listeners are starting to panic – worrying if people get too close, and such. I'm very open – I say 'I'm having a wobble, help me cope.'

"But I'm a lively person – no one is allowed to be down for too long! My message is 'Let's try to embrace one thing each day from lockdown that's positive.'

"What it's made us do is, we're spiritually connecting. There's been a seismic shift in attitude, as a result of all this stress. Our show is about community and hope. It's a privilege to present it, and a humbling experience."

Dos and don'ts of furlough

Paul Lewis explains what you can – and can't – do if you've been furloughed due to the coronavirus

MORE THAN SEVEN million workers are on furlough. The current rules will apply until the end of July, and details of changes from August to October are expected soon.

Firms can ask some or all of their staff who were recorded with HMRC as on the payroll by 19 March to go on furlough, which means they stay at home and do not do their job for at least three weeks. Employers can rotate staff on and off furlough. Workers are paid 80% of their gross pay, subject to a £2,500 limit for anyone earning £37,500 a year or more. Income tax and National Insurance will be deducted as normal, as will pension contributions, unless the employee leaves the scheme or opts out of auto-enrolment.

'You can't even make work phone calls'

Student loan contributions are deducted based on the lower amount of pay. If that is below the relevant threshold, then no contributions will be taken.

The employer is paid a grant from the Treasury to cover 80% of wages plus any employer's NI contributions and pension contributions up to the nominal 3% set for auto-enrolment. While on furlough, workers cannot do any work for their employer. That means they cannot make phone calls, have online meetings, or do anything that will contribute to the firm's business, including working voluntarily for them. Employers cannot ask furloughed staff to do some work, and employers who do risk losing their grant. This rule may be changed from August. Furloughed workers are free to take work with other employers, unless their contract bans that.

Some employers are telling furloughed individuals to take some annual leave. They can do that, but every day of leave taken must be paid at 100% of wages not 80%, and no HMRC grant will be given for those days of leave.

The Government wants firms to consider a slow return to work where it's possible to do so safely. A worker on furlough can be recalled to work as normal. The terms of that recall should've been set out in the letter that put them on furlough. Firms can only impose a pay cut with the employee's agreement.

Book of the Week: Endell Street

Monday–Friday 9.45am FM/12.30am Radio 4

WAR OFFICE, LONDON, FEB 1915

Flora Murray and Louisa Garrett Anderson entered the War Office on the corner of Whitehall and Horse Guards Avenue with a mixture of anticipation and trepidation. In the five months since they had last been living in London the city had changed out of all recognition. By day the streets were thronged with women – driving cars and delivery vans, riding motorcycles as telegram messengers and patrolling as police volunteers. By night the city was empty, dark and hushed. Street lamps were extinguished, clocks muffled and searchlights raked the sky for the air raids that were expected at any moment.

Filled with apprehension, they were shown into the office of Sir Alfred Keogh, the most senior doctor in the British Army. With a new “push” set to begin on the Western Front as soon as weather conditions allowed and more battle zones opening up further afield, Keogh urgently needed an extra 50,000 beds in Britain – as well as more doctors – to treat inevitable casualties.

Anderson and Murray had been among the first to recognise the unique opportunity that war presented to women. They knew that as well as posing a terrifying threat to the nation, war with Germany offered women a once-in-a-lifetime chance. Both qualified doctors, they were no longer in the first flush of youth. Louisa, 41, was a surgeon and Flora, four years older, a physician and anaesthetist. Yet despite more than ten years’ experience apiece, neither had enjoyed a significant spell of work in a major general hospital.

Since hospital appointment boards were almost entirely controlled by men, women doctors were effectively excluded from training or working in mainstream hospitals or attaining high-status medical positions. Women were likewise barred from becoming Army doctors

Flappers' Hospital

Author Wendy Moore celebrates the suffragette doctors who fought against inequality on the home front – and won regardless of the current pressing need. Although their medical qualifications were exactly equivalent to their male colleagues, Flora and Louisa had been restricted to treating women and children. Through necessity as much as desire, therefore, they had worked in hospitals run by women for the treatment of women and children alone.

War had changed everything. Despite their complete lack of experience in treating men, or dealing with war injuries, the two women had set up two emergency hospitals in France to treat wounded soldiers plucked from the battlefields there. Glowing reports of their hospitals in Paris and Wimereux, near

Boulogne, had been forwarded to the War Office by the most senior Army medical officers in France, including Keogh’s deputy, Sir Arthur Sloggett, a ladies’ man who was now one of their staunchest allies. It was through Sloggett and other army chiefs in France that they had secured this critical meeting with Keogh. Four years earlier Louisa had been arrested in

Whitehall for her part in the Black Friday demonstration, when suffragettes marched through the West End, smashing windows with hammers and stones. Only six months before the War Office had sent women doctors away with a stinging rebuff. Now Keogh welcomed Murray and Anderson with open arms.

To their astonishment, he invited them to run a military hospital in the heart of London with up to 1,000 beds. Like their hospital in Wimereux, it would be supplied by the Army with War Office funds. But unlike any other British Army hospital it would be run solely by women with an almost entirely female staff. Indeed, Keogh promised Anderson and Murray complete freedom to appoint whichever staff they pleased. It was, as Anderson immediately recognised, “a great opportunity”.

THE BEST HOSPITAL IN LONDON

Three months later, the first patients arrived at Endell Street. When they pulled up outside the old workhouse building in the heart of London’s theatreland, the great black iron gates were opened by a woman in a military-style jacket and ankle-length skirt. The ambulances juddered to a halt in the dimly lit courtyard and then women stretcher-bearers, wearing the same military-style uniform, carried the men to a lift. When they arrived on one of the wards, they saw a room bright with coloured blankets and fragrant with fresh flowers. They were surrounded, naturally enough, by female nurses, orderlies and clerks. Then the doctors arrived. And all of these were women, too. From the physician who assessed their condition to the surgeon who inspected their wounds, from the radiologist who ordered x-rays to the pathologist who took swabs, from the dentist who checked their teeth to the ophthalmologist who tested their sight, every one of the doctors was female. With the sole exception of the burly policeman at the entrance and a handful of male orderlies who were too old or too infirm for combat, the Endell Street Military Hospital was staffed entirely by women.

A few patients were convinced they had been sent to Endell Street to die, that they were hopeless cases. For why else would the Army dispatch them to a hospital run by women – and not just any women, but suffragettes, former enemies of the state? But as they soon discovered, from talking to the other patients on their homely wards, or in the recreation room stuffed with books, or in the courtyard filled with plants and striped umbrellas, the “Suffragettes’ Hospital” as it was commonly known, or the “Flappers’ Hospital” as it was sometimes nicknamed, was universally popular. Endell Street Military Hospital, as it was formally titled, was indeed – they all agreed – the best hospital in London.

**BASED ON PUBLISHERS’ PRICES

I'VE ALWAYS BEEN a huge fan of euphorbias; the first film I ever did on Gardeners' World (back in 1998!) was about them. The name is only one letter off "euphoria", which can't be a coincidence, can it? The euphorbia family contains around 2,000 species, including a mind-boggling range of shrubs, hardy herbaceous plants, annuals, biennials and cacti-esque succulents from hot climates. Even the indoor Christmas poinsettia is a beguiling euphorbia.

The hardy perennial and shrubby plants, commonly known as spurges, are the ones we grow in our gardens. Their zingy green, acid-yellow, chartreuse-green and vibrant brick-orange colours add drama to borders and are a perfect foil, complementing the colour and form of other plants. The flowers are actually showy bracts, so they last for ages. Some also have large, exotic foliage with striking markings – a fine addition to a tropical border.

Most euphorbias are sun-lovers and many cope well with drought conditions, so are perfect for a baking dry bank. A few tolerate shade, with the common native wood spurge E. amygdaloides var. robbiae being one of the best spreading, shady groundcovers around.

After flowering, leave the faded bracts on for as long as they look good. Most varieties should be cut back to the ground in summer or early autumn to encourage new shoots. Always wear gloves when working with euphorbia, as their milky sap is a nasty skin irritant.

SIX EUPHORBIAS TO PICK

E. x martini Dark grey-green rosettes of foliage and long-flowering acid-green flowers with a bright tomato-red eye. Copes with dappled shade. Height 90cm x spread 60cm.

E. characias* subsp. *wulfenii Large and shrubby, perfect for a dry Mediterranean look or in a mixed border. Tall chartreuse flowers with bronze eyes. Height 1.5m x spread 1.5m.

E. palustris Zingy number with fresh foliage and long-lasting acid-green bracts (left). Height 90cm x spread 90cm.

E. mellifera* (honey spurge) Perfect for a sheltered exotic garden, this large, rounded plant has architectural, strappy leaves and orange-brown, honey-scented flowers in spring. Height 2m x spread 2.5m.

E. amygdaloides* var. robbiae (wood spurge) Evergreen rosettes of dark-green foliage and fresh flowers. Height 60cm x spread 90cm.

E. griffithii* "Dixter" Herbaceous perennial that dies back in winter. Fiery brick-red flowers and stunning foliage that turns from dark green to red, then yellow. Likes moist, rich soil and copes with dry conditions. Height 1m x spread 1m.

Euphoria!

You can find a euphorbia to brighten up any dull patch in your garden, even a shady one, says Joe Swift

GROW PLANTS FOR TOUCH

BOLD AND BRIGHT
Euphorbia amygdaloides var. robbiae makes ideal ground cover in a shady spot

Though euphorbias are not to be stroked due to their noxious sap, many plants have surely been designed by nature to be caressed by the human hand. Growing plants especially for touch is a great way to get kids into gardening and helps us view plants in a different way. A range of plants with interesting textures also adds visual depth to a garden. I like to take a photo of a border and turn it black and white to show the range of textures, which helps me to decide whether adding in softer or glossier leaves will enhance the composition.

SOFT LEAVES

Lamb's ears (Stachys byzantina) Extremely tactile, downy grey leaves (right). Likes sun and is ideal for edging a path.

Silver sage (Salvia argentea) Large, silvery leaves with a woolly texture and spires of white flowers in summer.

Moss If you have a shady, damp garden, then moss will most likely appear on its own, but why not encourage it onto a rock or two? It's one of the most tactile plants and especially cooling on a hot summer's day.

GLOSSY LEAVES

Castor oil plant (Fatsia japonica) An almost indestructible plant that can cope with deep shade. Large, deeply cut leaves.

Spotted laurel (Aucuba japonica) Easy-to-grow shrub that makes a good hedge in shade. Green and yellow leaves.

Wrinkled viburnum (Viburnum rhytidophyllum) A tough evergreen, with large, corrugated leaves. Prune some of the lower leaves off to give it a more majestic shape.

TACTILE BARK

Tibetan cherry (Prunus serrula) This has the shiniest mahogany-coloured bark that naturally peels (but try not to peel a bit off yourself!).

Birch (Betula) There are so many great birches (including the silver birch) with smooth or peeling bark (left), or both.

Snakebark maple (Acer davidii)

Its bark has stunning green and white stripes, which both look and feel great.

Explore the Paris few tourists see – starting with this futuristic concert hall

Philharmonia: Walter Presents

Sun 11.15pm C4 (whole series on All 4 from 29 May)

THE LATEST FRENCH thriller to cross the Channel is set in the world of classical music and transports us to the Philharmonie, a glittering concert hall in north-east Paris. Designed by the experimental architect Jean Nouvel, it is the city's largest cultural venue – yet many visitors don't even know it exists. Opened in 2015, it has a dazzling, spaceship-like façade constructed from interlocking bird-shaped tiles and a fabulous rooftop terrace. Inside, concertgoers surround the stage in a curvaceous, 2,400-capacity hall with cascading balconies.

In the drama Philharmonia, which begins on Channel 4 this week, the concert hall is presided over by the formidable Héléne Barizet, who is appointed conductor of the orchestra following the sudden death of its long-serving maestro. She is gifted, sexy and stubborn, and episode one squeezes in adultery, backstabbing and a possible murder along with musical interludes.

"What I enjoyed most was being immersed in the world of a large orchestra for months on end," says Marie-Sophie Ferdane, who plays Héléne. "And working with the musicians of the wonderful Orchestre National d'Ile-de-France. I attended recordings and rehearsals, and was trained by a young conductor, Christophe Dilys, who taught me all he could in a very short time.

"We filmed in the Philharmonie's grand auditorium, as well as in its rehearsal and dressing rooms. It's really impressive, both in terms of architecture and acoustics, and the series showcases its beauty."

MOST VISITORS STICK to the historic heart of the city, but Ferdane recommends seeking out its more hidden treasures. The Philharmonie is in the Parc de la Villette, a cultural complex – in the down-at-heel 19th arrondissement – where you can also find a music museum, Europe's biggest science museum, a gigantic mirrored dome housing an IMAX cinema, jaunty postmodern pavilions and themed gardens, including a garden of childhood fears.

The 19th is also home to Centquatre, a vast contemporary arts centre in a glass-roofed old funeral parlour. "Centquatre is an amazing space," says Ferdane, "with concerts, shows and a restaurant, and young dancers train all year round in the public precinct. You can watch them rehearse while you have a coffee. Another place that I love very much is the Maison de la Poésie. Every evening, writers or actors do readings, sometimes accompanied by musicians or singers. There are even literary 'naps' on a Sunday afternoon, where people lie on the stage while singers and actors read and play to them."

PACESETTER

In new thriller Philharmonia, Héléne (Marie-Sophie Ferdane) is a force of nature

When we spoke, Ferdane knew exactly what she would do when France's strict lockdown was relaxed. "The first thing I'll do is walk. It will be a great joy to be able to walk to the Seine and not have to stay within a kilometre of my home." Her tip, when travel resumes, is to explore her city on foot. "Start at the Grand Palais or the Beaubourg district, then after your visit walk, walk, walk until you stumble upon the next wonder."

While travel restrictions remain in place, you can still catch a concert at the Philharmonie, explore parts of the Louvre and enjoy the view from the top of the Eiffel Tower, without ever leaving home... CLAIRE WEBB

ARMCHAIR PARIS

GO TO A CONCERT

There are dozens of concert recordings and interviews to be enjoyed on the Philharmonie's website, including by the Paris Orchestra – France's leading symphony orchestra – as well as performances from the Parc de la Villette's annual jazz festival. Go to: live.philharmoniedeparis.fr.

SEE AN EMPTY LOUVRE

You'll have the world's most-visited museum to yourself on a virtual tour of the Louvre's Egyptian and medieval collections, and its gold-drenched Gallery of Apollo (above). You can also scoot round exhibitions, such as the one on the great artists of the Renaissance. See louvre.fr/en/visites-en-ligne.

VISIT NOTRE DAME

The 850-year-old cathedral is under scaffolding after being ravaged by fire last year. But the Universal Museum of Art, which creates fantasy exhibitions, has digitally reconstructed the damaged Gothic cathedral, bringing together 60 paintings inspired by it by artists including Picasso, Chagall and Matisse. Among other virtual exhibitions is one reuniting the artworks attributed to Leonardo Da Vinci, including the Mona Lisa: see the-uma.org.

CLIMB THE TOWER

Google's Arts and Culture Hub allows you to see the view from the top of the Eiffel Tower, and wonderful old photos depicting the birth of the "Iron Lady". Explore other popular sights, too, such as the Musée d'Orsay, to see how a railway station metamorphosed into a temple of Impressionism: artsandculture.google.com.

Word of the Week – doolally

The lockdown has taken its toll on our mental health. While some of us feel "stir crazy", which draws on the 19th-century criminal slang use of "stir" for prison, others may say they're going "doolally".

During Crown rule in India, the British Army set up a military base at a sanatorium in Deolali, north-east of Bombay, which doubled as a transit camp where soldiers would await a boat home. As boats left only between November and March, many waited for months under the scorching sun or the deluges of monsoon season, becoming so bored they went "doolally tap": "doolally" being the Brits' pronunciation of Deolali, "tap" being Urdu for "malarial fever" – in other words, "camp fever". Eventually, "tap" dropped off and "doolally" slipped into the mainstream.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Eurovision gets my vote

EURO STAR
Graham Norton, host of the lockdown Eurovision:
Europe Shine a Light

Eurovision: Europe Shine a Light (16 May BBC1) was brilliant, and it accomplished what it set out to do: promote unity and hope. Unlike previous years, which have been spoilt by political voting, it was very emotionally driven – first with the nod to the NHS and key workers through the beautiful a cappella version of Heroes, and then the heartfelt sentiments from this year's entrants.

We were reminded why this often denigrated contest has stood the test of time. Katrina and the Waves's 1997 winner, Love Shine a Light, represented the sense of community the whole programme had engendered, and its lyrics could have been written for today.

Graham Norton's emotionally overwhelmed thank you to the producers will stay with me. A departure, perhaps, for him, but it reflected everything our family was feeling.

RRP £179.95. bose.co.uk

WRONG TIME AND PLACE

I feel Coronation Street producer Iain MacLeod's response (Feedback, 16 May) to readers who questioned the suitability of the distressing Yasmeen/Geoff scenes of 1 May missed the point. While there's no doubt the storyline succeeded in unsettling viewers, the more fundamental questions are: should it have been done in that way before the watershed; and is that actually the role of Coronation Street?

The first question gets a resounding no from me. The second is a matter for debate but, at the very least, is causing me to question my longstanding loyalty to the programme.

Kevin Sutcliffe

Bexhill-on-Sea, East Sussex

THANK YOU, MONTY

Who could fail to be moved by the great dignity shown by Monty Don when paying tribute to Nigel in Gardeners' World (15 May BBC2). Anyone who has loved and lost a dog will understand how difficult and painful that must have been. Following the loss of my own beloved golden retriever, it was watching Nigel's antics in the garden at Longmeadow that gave me the encouragement I needed to share my life with a new puppy.

We all adored Nigel. Thank you, Monty, for sharing him with the nation.

Judith Minto

Hexham, Northumberland

SINGALONG SATURDAY

While being isolated for so long, what an absolute joy that someone at BBC2 decided to cheer us all up with a couple of musicals we could sing along to from the golden age of films – South Pacific and Paint Your Wagon (16/17 May).

Could we have some more, please? I suggest Gigi, Rose Marie, Kiss Me, Kate, On the Town...

Dana Perrin

Ticehurst, East Sussex

DON'T RUIN THE MUSIC

Despite running adverts, channels such as Sky Atlantic manage to let the music playing over the end titles of programmes run without interruption.

Contrast that with the BBC "talk-over" at the end of Normal People (18 May BBC1), which promoted the soundtrack of the series above the music itself! If the music is an intrinsic part of a programme, let us hear it. Don't insult my intelligence by talking across it – especially if you're trying to make a buck by flogging it to me.

Tim Langhorn

Guildford, Surrey

...Episode eight of Normal People (18 May) ended with Nerina Pallot's version of Joy Division's Love Will Tear Us Apart. This came on the 40th anniversary of the death of Joy Division singer Ian Curtis – beautiful but sad.

Richard Hugall

Lewes, East Sussex

OFF COURSE?

I'm second to no one in my admiration of the erudite Eric Monkman and Bobby Seagull, but

Liz Bonnin warned against business as usual

...As a Eurovision fan of 50 years (you can't say All Kinds of Everything without humming the Dana song), I was pleasantly surprised. Expecting the worst, with no songs, no voting and no contest, I thought we wouldn't be in for any treats. I shouldn't have worried – the Dutch broadcasters did us proud.

Darryl Telles

St Leonards-on-Sea, East Sussex

CRITICAL MOMENT

Liz Bonnin (RT, 16 May) expressed what very many of us are thinking – that after the pandemic subsides, business as usual is no longer an option. Unless we address overpopulation, climate change, pollution and resource depletion, then the future looks very bleak indeed for the generations that follow us. We will never be forgiven if we squander this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

MY COVID HOLIDAY

Thank you for the beautiful, barmy and sometimes brutal sparkle that was Devs (BBC2). It was a relief to spend time in a world that wasn't a crime drama, an old favourite or a sports rerun.

Devs was lovingly filmed and it was a great place to take a Covid holiday. Let's have more of the

MAKING WAVES
Bobby Seagull and Eric Monkman chart a course on their pedalo...

I think I spotted an error in Monkman and Seagull's Genius Adventures (18 May BBC2).

The subject under discussion was John Harrison's 1762 marine chronometer, which enabled sailors to determine their exact position at sea. Aboard a pedalo, Bobby blew up an inflatable globe on which Eric was to demonstrate the principle.

A presumed variation of four hours from 12 noon at Greenwich was correctly equated to a difference in longitude of 60 degrees, but Eric then drew his pen southwards down a meridian of longitude to establish the position of an imaginary island. Sadly, the longitude of his pen remained unchanged throughout.

A difference in longitude should be measured along a parallel of latitude (eastward or westward from Greenwich).

Keith Martin

Chertsey, Surrey.

Nice try! Eric Monkman replies: "I'm very pleased you enjoyed our adventures, Keith. Thank you for sharing your question. When marking the location of our mysterious island, we needed both the latitude and the longitude. Once both are known, it doesn't

BLESS HIS HIDE

My husband and I enjoyed The Repair Shop repeat (13 May) when Ralph the leather rhino was brought along by his owner. He was made near her childhood home, she fell in love with him after glimpsing him on her way to school and finally came to own him on her 18th birthday.

He had suffered at the hands of her children and the claws of the family cat, but Suzie Fletcher (below, right) lovingly restored him – to the delight of his owner.

I was amazed when I re-read Graeme Garden's tribute to Tim Brooke-Taylor (RT, 25 April) to see a photo of Tim with Ralph's twin!

BOWLED OVER

Having watched The Real Marigold Hotel (BBC1) right from the first series, I cried when Syd Little and Susan George spoke of their losses – but watching episode two of the current series (14 May BBC1), as local Indian cricketers came face to face with Henry Blofeld, whose every word they had hung on for more than 40 years, I was in bits. Blowers even gave them (and us) a little commentary on the game.

I'M LISTENING

Chris Mason is a worthy successor to Jonathan Dimbleby on Any Questions? (Fri/Sat Radio 4), but Anita Anand deserves much credit for the way she steers the conversations from those phoning in to Any Answers? (Saturday). She is always so patient, never gets ruffled and is a delightful host.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Could you stay at the Real Marigold Hotel?

With foreign travel a distant dream, many of us have been enjoying the vicarious pleasure of watching a bunch of retirement-age Brits exploring south-eastern India in The Real Marigold Hotel (BBC1 and available on iPlayer for more than a year). After three previous sets of celebrities tried out life in Jaipur, Kochi and Udaipur, this series has been set in Puducherry (or Pondicherry, as it used to be called) on the Bay of Bengal. Whatever the trials of the heat and the culture shock, the temporary home of this year's gang – a hotel in the heart of the French Quarter, just 200 metres from the water – has been enviably peaceful.

The building, which is 160 years old, is typical of the French colonial era, with high columns, wide arches, an inner courtyard and madras terrace roof. It was restored in 2008 by Jyoti Saikia and Kakoli Banerjee and opened as a hotel, called Gratitude, in 2010, which they run with Jyoti's son Siddarth.

"We welcomed the cast and worked closely with the crew of

HAPPY DAYS
The Real Marigold Hotel stars loved their elegant retreat (below)

The Real Marigold Hotel for the entire period of their filming," Siddarth tells RT. "We got to know them very well – they were all wonderful. Barbara Dickson left her signed guitar with us, and Zandra Rhodes gave us a number of drawings and sketches of the house, which we display as a treasured memory of their stay with us."

The cast were certainly living in some comfort. They occupied all eight spacious air-conditioned en-suite rooms, with yoga and massage therapy available and the attentions of eight staff and the cook, Shanti. But, as the celebrities discovered, the cost of living well is low in India. If you like the idea of experiencing it for yourself when it's finally possible to travel again, the rates range from 2,999 to 6,999 Indian rupees per night (according to room size and season), which translates as around £32 to £75.

WE NEED TOMMY!

During the months of lockdown, I'm sure many of us have tackled some of the outstanding DIY jobs at home. Is it time for a dedicated DIY programme to give us a bit more skill and knowledge? After all, we're always being told to mend things, not throw them away.

While we may not have the fabulous skills in evidence in The Repair Shop (Wednesday BBC1), we could at least try a few things, with some guidance. The interest shown in the garden DIY jobs with Tommy Walsh in HealthCheck UK Live (15 May BBC1/iPlayer) is a case in point. I'm sure there would be an audience for a show that helped us to put up a shelf straight!

View from my sofa

TOM ALLEN

‘It’s a show of respect’

The comedian wears a suit and tie at all times – even to the shops

What’s the view from your sofa?

I live with a lovely couple called Mum and Dad. In the sitting room (they would call it a lounge but I’m trying to encourage them to call it a sitting room because I’m a snob; drawing room is too much), we’ve got a blue sofa and a cream check sofa. Dad bought a new TV screen at Christmas and then bought a soundbar – he’s obsessed with soundbars. I do not understand why or how it all works, or why remote controls on modern televisions are so complicated.

How does the remote control dynamic work between you, Mum and Dad?

Mum and Dad like Rick Stein going around France eating things. They also love Four in a Bed. We start the day every day with Frasier on Channel 4, but generally they choose what to watch and then if I don’t like it I go upstairs and watch iPlayer or All 4 on my laptop in my room like a teenager. I’m basically living the life of myself 20 years ago.

What do you tend to watch after stropping off to your room?

I’ve been watching more sitcom-type things recently. I really enjoyed Shrill and I’ve been watching Feel Good, too. I know Mae Martin from doing the circuit and she’s such an individual voice. It’s a really lovely story about the tribulations of trying to find your way in the world. And I also love a good scandi-drama, like The Bridge.

You’re known for wearing a suit and tie at all times – is that true even now, while in lockdown?

I do, because it makes me feel ready for work. Especially at the moment it’s quite nice to feel like I’ve got a proper job! For me, wearing a suit is all about how it makes you feel. And I’d say I tend to dress smartly, even to go to the supermarket. As Tom Ford said, wearing a suit is a show of respect for people around you.

You’re back with Bake Off: the Professionals. What have you enjoyed most about presenting?

Working with Liam Charles [Allen’s co-host and former Great British Bake Off contestant] has been such a lovely experience. This was my first presenting job and both of us have learnt our craft together at the same time. And meeting the chefs, having a chance to watch them, maybe make them laugh, that’s been so exciting. And of course it gets compared to “the other show”, as I call it, that usually happens in the summer.

I don’t like to call it the “main show” as our show is just as important!

Matt Lucas was recently announced as the new host of “the other show” – did you audition?

No, auditioning wasn’t something that I considered. I’m very happy and very lucky to be doing the things I’m doing. And Matt is such a nice, genuine, kind and lovely man. I think he’s a perfect pairing with Noel. It’s going to be so funny!

Is there anything you haven’t done yet that you’d like to?

I would like to write a sitcom. It would probably be about me! And living in suburbia. Often people are mean about the quietness of suburbia and describe it as quite boring and petty, but I love it. I just love how it showcases human beings being slightly nosy. I like to do my daily exercise around 5 or 6pm, when some people put their lamps on in their sitting rooms, and it means I can have a nose at their furniture as I walk past. That’s a top tip.

STEPHEN KELLY

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY FILM I watched The Personal History of David Copperfield – a wonderful love letter to Dickens.

MY BOOK I’m reading the new Hilary Mantel book, The Mirror & the Light. It’s very good.

MY WEBSITE The John Lewis website! I just like dreaming of things to order.
