A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

Great escapes

THESE DAYS, WHEN a new drama turns up in the schedules it's something to be celebrated, as we can never be certain when the next one will come along. This week we welcome something to BBC1 that's new and also bit special. We talk to the extraordinarily talented Michaela Coel, who has turned a traumatic personal experience into a no-holds-barred drama. I May Destroy You is brave, funny and a tough watch at times, but it's a story she had to tell. Read more on page 8.

Luckily, filming was completed on Coel's drama before lockdown descended. But what about other programmes that have been postponed or cancelled due to Covid-19? On page 12 we ask the heads of drama commissioning at the BBC and ITV what they think the future holds for drama as lockdown and social distancing continues.

These days, it's sometimes nice to spend time watching programmes that transport us to parts of the country that we haven't been able to visit for months. At least that's how our award-winning columnist Alison Graham is getting through the days.

And who can blame her? Who hasn't looked wistfully at the scenery in the background of a drama, or a Countryfile report, and thought "I wish I was there..."

Here again are the ways you can ensure you enjoy your weekly copy of RT – and a welcome taste of escapism...

The power of art is priceless

Don't sell off masterpieces to pay for the pandemic

MAKING TELEVISION ABOUT art is, at one level, downright weird. All my life I have haunted art galleries and got a huge emotional kick from great paintings. But it has taught me that you really have to see them in the flesh. There is something about being in the presence of a great work of art that clever reproduction, on the page or on the screen, however crisp, can't rival.

My new Channel 5 series, The World's Greatest Paintings, tells stories behind ten of the best-known, best-loved paintings in the world. For me, the thrill was very much about spending hours, almost alone, with Leonardo's Mona Lisa, Rembrandt's The Night Watch, Monet's Water Lilies, Constable's The Hay Wain, and many more, face to face, just looking and thinking. It takes a long time to look at a picture properly.

Afterwards, I felt I knew them better and understood them more completely than I had before. Television, which shows you a painting briefly and then snatches it away again, isn't the same. And yet the Covid-19 crisis, which arrived in the middle of filming, was the perfect validation of what we were doing.

Suddenly, the world's great galleries were closed. Most of us who love art and try to practise it were locked out of inspiration; and our studios. Life classes stopped. Nobody would be commissioning a portrait for a long time. And exhibitions, ranging from one of my own oil paintings, to the glory of the National Gallery's magnificent Titian show, went silent and dark.

Yet through this time, art has kept me going.

I'm not sure what I'd have done without it. It has meant drawing, obsessively, every day. But also hovering over the wonderful websites of galleries all around the world, reintroducing myself to paintings virtually, and watching films made by and about artists. No, it's not the same. But this, and TV series such as mine, is all that's on offer for now. You can't get out to see them: so they must come to you.

THIS WEIRD PERIOD also makes us ask, what will be different about the world of art in the future? The worst idea so far has come from a French businessman, who proposes selling the Mona Lisa for €50 billion (£44.43 billion) and using the money to support contemporary artists.

This is a terrible notion for two reasons. First, the Mona Lisa doesn't belong to the French state. It belongs to mankind, part of the common patrimony of all those who love art. Like the glorious public collections of art around Britain, our cathedrals and parks, it isn't for private pleasure. You might as well propose selling off Notre-Dame, or the Grand Canal in Venice. It's cultural barbarism to think that all enjoy with new zest old pleasures we once took for granted – a fresh pint in a warm pub, a stone-baked pizza with the family, shouting loudly from a touchline.

Art is just the same. There's nothing like standing for ten minutes in front of van Gogh's Sunflowers, Turner's The Fighting Temeraire, or Picasso's The Weeping Woman to help you see the world anew. If our films encourage people to do it, I'll be thrilled.

The World's Greatest Paintings with Andrew Marr is on Saturday 8.15pm Channel 5 because something's old, it's somehow less alive to the contemporary world.

Second, state support for contemporary art almost always produces terrible contemporary art. If artists are forced to sell to survive – to engage with a sceptical public – they think harder and work better.

I'd say the big lesson from Covid-19 is that once the great unlocking happens, galleries must throw open their doors and welcome more people to appreciate art in the flesh. In the months to come we will

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 4-10 JUNE 1977

WHAT WE WATCHED

Silver Jubilee week was marked with revelry, pageantry, fireworks – and a souvenir issue of Radio Times. A newly knighted Norman Hartnell, who designed the Queen's Coronation gown, was reminiscing about the decade in which the monarch came to the throne: "I look back to the 50s as the last of those days When London Was Lovely – a good title for my next memoirs." That wistfulness seemed due to the impact of inflation on his workroom, where the number of embroiderers had dwindled from 85 to just five. But he continued designing for both the Queen and the Queen Mother until his death two years later, in 1979.

WHAT YOU SAID

David Frost's interview with Richard Nixon made history thanks to his extraction of an apology from the former US president. But this failed to impress Norman Wilson of Liverpool, who wrote, "It is deplorable that the BBC has spent what must have been a considerable amount of its licence income in presenting Frost's interviews with Nixon, a discredited, corrupt and foul-mouthed disgrace. He should be allowed to remain in his ignominious obscurity." Mr Wilson didn't get his wish: three decades later, Peter Morgan turned the encounters into a play and then a hit movie, Frost/Nixon. DAVID BROWN

MICHAELA COEL ZOOMS into view on my laptop, all sunshine cheerfulness and boundless enthusiasm with, in the foreground, a bucket-sized beaker of green juice. It pretty much fills the screen.

“It’s almost as if I wanted you to notice it!” is her playful rejoinder when I ask what it is. Apologising, the actor/writer/director says it was blending this health-giving smoothie that made her a notch late for our lunchtime interview. “Why did I do this?” she ponders. “Because it’s quick and I haven’t eaten yet.”

Coel first came to our attention in 2015 as the creator and star of the double-Bafta-winning E4 comedy Chewing Gum; now she’s here to talk about her latest, very different, project, the must-see BBC1 drama I May Destroy You, which she also wrote and stars in.

She is isolating alone in a flat in Shoreditch, east London, at the moment but is weathering the solitude just fine. “This is a very familiar mode to me. I write long... things, so I go away to the middle of nowhere and don’t see human beings for weeks on end,” she explains of a routine that has taken her to writing retreats in Somerset, Cornwall, Zurich, Berlin and Lake Tahoe. “So, I’m OK. I’ve got my health!”

The 32-year-old Londoner is maintaining her physical and mental health by exercising and meditating. She runs or cycles daily, using her outdoor excursions to exchange the occasional nod or smile with strangers. “It’s like a dopamine hit for me.” As for the meditation – “My method is, I focus on my breath, and sometimes play with my breath. So I’ll take a big, big breath in, then just release it, and I do that over and over again, so lots of oxygen gets into my brain.”

That lust for life in the teeth of adversity is shot through I May Destroy You. A dark drama studded with nuggets of hard humour, it centres on Arabella (Coel), a 20-something Londoner whose sharp, pithy tweets go viral and propel her from social media star to bestselling author of a memoir titled Chronicles of a Fed-Up Millennial.

She wins a publishing deal for a follow-up book but, struggling to meet her deadline, pulls an all-nighter. To let off steam, she pops out for drinks with friends. As we see in unflinching detail, the evening gets big, boozy, druggy and messy, with Arabella ending up back in front of her laptop with a fuzzy recollection of events. But as the hangover-clouds part, she experiences flashbacks that indicate that she’s been the victim of a sexual assault.

Over two and a half years in the making, I May Destroy You – provocative, witty and beautifully acted – has a back story as twisted as its plot. Firstly it is, at heart, autobiographical.

Delivering the annual MacTaggart Lecture at the Edinburgh International Television Festival in August 2018, Coel used her speech to reveal the horrific event that happened to her in the midst of a scriptwriting session for series two of Chewing Gum.

“I was working overnight in the [production] company’s offices; I had an episode due at 7am,” she told the audience. “I took a break and had a drink with a good friend who was nearby. I emerged into consciousness typing season two, many hours later. I was lucky. I had a flashback. It turned out I’d been sexually assaulted by strangers. The first people I called after the police, before my own family, were the producers.”

Speaking now, she tells me that, at the time she made the speech, she’d already been writing I May Destroy You for six months. But after the attack happened at the beginning of 2016, she quickly knew that she’d turn the personal trauma into a creative response.

“You go through the very normal [process] – as I try to depict in the second episode – almost like an initiation into victimhood. You’re quickly sent, in the police investigation, into the [sexual assault] referrals unit, and your swabs are taken.”

She’s keen to stress that the show is not wholly an account of her experiences. “That was the beginning. But talking to different people, I began to realise that mine was not a rare experience, and that there were many different kinds of sexual assault, where consent was taken from you and you were unaware.

“So then many, many stories developed, which enabled me to continue through 12 episodes and find a way to make it not just be about my personal experience.”

Raised in east London by her Ghanaian mum,

‘FROM ONE VICTIM, SURVIVOR TO ANOTHER’

By writing about her experience of sexual assault, Michaela Coel hopes others will find comfort

Coel started out as a performance poet and won a scholarship to the Guildhall School of Music and Drama. Post-college, she began landing parts in National Theatre productions, securing a writing commission from the Royal Court. There were acting roles on television, too, notably in Top Boy and Black Mirror.

But it's clearly her own writing, her own projects, that most fire her up. Coel's one-woman play, Chewing Gum Dreams, part of her final year's work at Guildhall, was a fringe theatre hit in 2012 and became the basis for Chewing Gum. The sitcom ran for two series and followed the comic misadventures of a formerly God-fearing woman desperate to lose her virginity.

THE STORYLINES, AS hilarious as they were often wincingly mortifying, were inspired by her own teenage conversion to Pentecostal Christianity. Coel embraced a "militant faith" that compelled her to stay celibate between the ages of 17 and 22. She was so devout she converted her mother and sister, too.

It was in January 2016, a few months before her two Chewing Gum Bafta wins (for breakthrough talent and best female performance in a comedy), that the assault happened. The following year she began shopping around the idea for a show based on her experience. "I pitched to HBO and they could see, more than I could, that I wasn't ready to do the show – it was too soon."

Having shelved the idea, in 2018 she was shooting Black Earth Rising. The gripping BBC2/Netflix thriller about African war crimes, ▷

COEL INDUSTRY

Her TV landmarks, clockwise from right: the Black Mirror episode USS Callister (2017); as Arabella in her new BBC drama I May Destroy You; with Hollywood star John Goodman in Black Earth Rising (2018); and in the self-penned sitcom Chewing Gum

◁ written and directed by Hugo Blick, featured Coel in a leading role alongside John Goodman and Harriet Walter. In the midst of production, Netflix asked for more information about her new idea.

“I pitched it to them, they liked it, but niggling in my mind was a desire to retain a small portion of my rights as the creator, writer, director, star of the show – even two per cent of my rights. And they wouldn’t go for that,” she says with a wry smile. “So, I said no.”

‘How could a period be taboo? It’s like saying oxygen is’

But during the shoot for Black Earth Rising, “I got to know the BBC a little bit, so I went in to meet them. We spoke for an hour, then Piers [Wenger, controller of BBC drama commissioning] emailed me in September to say: ‘We would like you to do this show with us. And we would like you to make it as near the knuckle, as honest and as true to your creative vision as you desire. And we want you to have your rights, too.’”

Retelling the story now, Coel beams. “And this email was humbling. Humbling. Humbling! I sometimes go back to it and read it now!”

I May Destroy You is a gripping, unsettling watch, as it must be. There is scatological humour and explicit sex, some involving Arabella, some involving her gay male best friend, some involving threesomes. There is significant drug use. There are intimate details relating to periods. Was there any pushback from the BBC to any of these scenes?

“No! And, you know, periods aren’t taboo. How could a period be taboo? It’s like saying oxygen is taboo. No, there was no pushback.”

Still, she understands what I’m getting at. “Honestly, friends are like: ‘Oh, God, was it hard doing it with the BBC?’ I’m like: ‘Guys, they let me [do anything].’ You know those things you put your toddler in – some sort of harness?”

Reins.

“Yeah? The BBC took them off. And I just went running, sing, vomiting, period-ing everywhere. And they were like: ‘Good!’”

She laughs as she delineates the “insane” demands on her time, energies and focus during the gruelling six-month shoot for a 12-episode show that, when we speak, she’s still finishing. She likens it to “a big, long extended high. It’s like being in a long labour! And at the end you get a baby. And this is my baby.”

I May Destroy You is the story Michaela Coel had to tell. It’s part of her process of recovery, and it’s part of her mission to amplify conversations about sexual consent, sexual assault, self-destructive behaviour, male abuse of power and the proliferating use of date-rape drugs.

Was anyone charged with the crimes committed against her? “No,” she replies flatly. “It was a year and three months of brilliant work by the investigators but they were never found.”

THE SUSPECTS WERE identified, because there were cameras in the bar. But, nonetheless, nobody was brought to justice. That, she says, is “very common. This is the way it normally is. But the miracle is, I had a flash [of memory]. The miracle is I happened to realise. The way this normally is, nothing is ever done because nobody really remembers.”

Does she know what physically happened to her? Pause. “Um, I do. But I don’t know how useful it is for us to go into that. What I would love when people watch this show, is to try and see themselves. There are so many characters. Look for yourself, and separate me, and look at this world. Because it's so common. I realised that my experiences are the experiences of millions of women and men."

It's a facile question, one I apologise for asking, but: how did this experience change Michaela Coel? Did it make a confident, outgoing person much more guarded?

"No, no I didn't. I definitely had..." She stops, then starts again. "It's very scary and it's very shocking because it's a traumatic event. But people generally react in different ways to things. Something can make you retreat. But also there's this idea of running into [something]... you just keep going into it, I won't back down, I'm gonna start boxing, I'm gonna start running... It's coping mechanisms, isn't it?"

She agrees that creating these stories and these characters was also part of her coping mechanism. "It's not a conscious thing [of]: 'In order to cope, I'm gonna write this show,'" she clarifies. "But I've always written based on something inspiring me from reality, with everything I've done, even as a poet. So the inception of it was something true. But then it became this huge story of all these fictional characters that I was able to create – some of whom were rapists, some of whom were victims of horrible crimes, creating family structures and friendships... And that focus does help you cope.

'There is a lack of TV content created by working-class people'

"Falling in love with all these characters – because they were all creations of my imagination – you learn to love yourself. And you learn to perceive the world in maybe a healthier light."

For her next project, Coel admits that she might ease up a little, and write something less personal and less exposing.

"And if-slash-when I do that, I think it would involve this mysterious thing called 'the writers' room' that I've heard about, where other people are also doing [the writing]," she laughs, adding that, before the pandemic hit, she was due to shadow "absolute legend" Jesse Armstrong in his writing room for his hugely popular US drama series Succession.

"I am so curious, so the minute I get a chance I'm gonna be like a little mouse on Jesse Armstrong's shoulders, listening in, trying to experience how it happens. Because I've never been in one. But that would be the next phase."

When it comes to her own viewing, what does she enjoy? "I see great TV around me. I thought Trigonometry was incredible – great roles for women, great roles for men of colour. Pure was also fantastic. What I do think is: when we are given the opportunity to make the content, roles appear that are great for women, great roles appear for people of colour, for people from working-class backgrounds.

"This is what we need: I still feel there is a lack of content created by working-class people in this country. And I think we really have a long way to go."

AS FOR I May Destroy You, she says she isn't apprehensive about sharing these brutal experiences with the public. "It's really lovely to know that this show may enable people who feel alone in having a particular experience to know that they're not alone. TV is a form of communication, and some people find it really hard to communicate with anyone, let alone a therapist. This is just a little something that might lead you towards a step of getting the help you need. Of feeling some sort of commonality from one victim, survivor – however you want to call it – to another."

But also be entertained? "Oh my God, yes! Because it is a ride. And it's funny. And it goes way beyond the subject of sexual assault. Because sexual assault exists in a world where a lot of other things are happening."

I leave sunny, positive, forward-pushing Michaela Coel to another afternoon in lockdown, to her running, meditating and flagon of green gunk. I wonder if those are alternatives to the corona-coping self-medication mechanism being deployed by many of the rest of us, as it's been reported that Coel is teetotal. Did she stop drinking as a result of what happened to her?

"No, I wouldn't say I don't drink any more. I feel like a journalist may have caught me at one point where I didn't drink – then that moment kinda passed!" she cackles. "So maybe on a Saturday I'll have a glass of wine. Or, what I got into a couple of weekends ago, making my own strawberry daiquiri. And I put a little bit of oat milk in there – hey, smoothie! And it was fantastic."

"So, I fluctuate," she admits, and that includes her sugar intake, too. "The Friday before last I had four jam doughnuts, vegan churros and vegetarian Percy Pigs in one day. I have highs," she smiles, "and lows."

Just like the rest of us, then, but Coel is able to metabolise even the worst kind of lows into high-flying TV triumphs.

DRAMATIC PAUSE....

For now, broadcasters still have new series on the shelf, ready to be screened. But for how long – and what happens next? RT asks the drama commissioners, when will TV find its new normal...?

INTERVIEWS BY MARK LAWSON

MICHAELA COEL'S I May Destroy You, just like recent hit Normal People, represents a lost pre-Covid-19 time, when the main questions a drama commissioner had to answer were whether they liked a project and which slot to put it in.

Some pundits have made much of both Normal People and I May Destroy You running on BBC1, despite being quirkier than the network's traditional hits. But with so much demand for content watched on many different platforms, does channel branding matter less?

"I do think that," says Piers Wenger, controller of BBC drama commissioning. "Although that's my personal view, not wider BBC policy. Will Normal People be remembered as a BBC1 show, a BBC3 show or an iPlayer show? People just want to be able to watch great shows at the time and speed they want to watch them. And I think that's why iPlayer will inevitably become the biggest pillar of the BBC story."

On Coel deserving her place on the channel, Wenger says he admired Chewing Gum, her Channel 4 show, which started out as a one-woman play, as did Phoebe Waller-Bridge's BBC hit Fleabag. For Wenger, the fact that both Coel and Waller-Bridge began as theatrical monologists is proof that the medium has to look for stars in unusual places.

"That is a drum I've been banging for a while," he says. "Clearly, there will always be space for the masters of their genres – the Jed Mercurios and Sally Wainwrights. But the audience's tastes have become much more sophisticated because of seeing work from all over the world on the streaming networks. So, we have to look outside the known storytellers and find new voices that will diversify drama – voices from the margins."

For the foreseeable future, though, questions of the content and scheduling seem irrelevant; the BBC would just like to be able to film any drama at all. With the remakes of Alan Bennett's Talking Heads now completed – as monologues, they could be filmed within social-distancing rules – there is currently no new BBC fiction being shot. Although Wenger says: "We're gearing up to start again on EastEnders [the existing episodes are due to run out this week]. And we're exploring actively what we might be able to film in the summer and the autumn."

'The biggest issue is social distancing on screen'

Polly Hill, head of drama at ITV, currently has 15 new dramas in various stages of suspension, but already has Emmerdale back in production, with social distancing in force on and off screen. She says: "All the daytime, all the entertainment shows that have kept going through this [such as Loose Women and This Morning] have taught us a lot about how to run a socially distanced set – crews separated into teams and different entrances and exits and so on."

The post-Covid-19 episodes of Emmerdale observe – as will EastEnders and Coronation Street, when they resume filming – working will be there, but it won't be the only thing happening in Albert Square." Hill confirms that Emmerdale will take a similar approach.

Both drama supremos are aware, though, that the soap approach only goes so far. Wenger says: "I think, until there's a way of getting lots of actors together and up close in a space, it's going to be hard to make satisfying peak-time drama." Hill agrees: "The biggest issue for us in drama is social distancing on screen. There aren't many stories you can tell with everyone two metres apart. That's the thing we haven't cracked yet."

ITV's recent Isolation Stories cleverly used actors who live in the same household to circuit the no-touching rules. It's in the nature of the business that there are a lot of well-known actors who share a bed in real life. So might a solution to intimate scenes be to cast couples as lovers?

"It would!" says Hill. "What we learned from Isolation Stories is that, where there are actors in households, they can get much closer."

Wenger is less sure. "From a casting perspective," he says, "that would be a bit of a case of the tail wagging the dog. There are obvious cases that spring to mind of great actors who live together. But, in the time it takes to create shows around those couples, we might be beyond social distancing."

The biggest underlying difficulty is knowing how long our strange new world will exist off-screen and therefore should be reflected on it. So, just as viewers are now mildly shocked to see characters crowding or kissing strangers in older shows, fiction commissioners have to avoid the opposite phenomenon.

"I think that's a really valid conversation," agrees Hill. "On the first 9pm dramas we hope to put back into production, we haven't made the decision to put social distancing or personal protective equipment [PPE] on screen. It would change the nature of the story we're telling. We don't want to start filming characters in PPE on a show that won't go out for two years."

"We don't know how long wearing masks and social distancing are going to be part of our contemporary reality," concurs Wenger. "So if we rush into making them part of contemporary drama, it may look dated or odd when it airs in a year's time. But I think the question is also important because of why people watch drama. They don't necessarily want the cold hard reality of the world reflected back to them. That's for news, documentary, and current affairs. On the whole, we're watching drama for bigger moral and emotional stories."

AS THE GOVERNMENT struggles with a timetable for ending the wider lockdown, TV must also choose its moment carefully. "The cost of starting and then having to close down again would be considerable," says Wenger. "We have to make sure that, when we do return, it can be done in a controlled, safe and sustainable way."

Hill agrees. "The start-up costs and daily running costs of a drama are huge. So, the financial implications are terrifying if you have to stop because someone falls ill."

Apart from finding ways of filming safely, the biggest issues are that precautions will lengthen shoots and swell budgets (a 10–20 per cent increase is an industry estimate), and that insurers won't offer cover against Covid-19. At times when the threat of terrorism made it impossible for art galleries to insure borrowed paintings, the Government indemnified them against insurance claims. So is that a possible solution? "Yes," says Hill. "Exactly that conversation is going on with the Culture Secretary now."

Finally, what about dramas telling the story of these strange times? Following the extraordinary saga of the questionable judgement and eyesight of Boris Johnson's chief advisor, many writers are desperate to pitch The Road to Barnard Castle: the Dominic Cummings Story, especially as Benedict Cumberbatch has already played Cummings in Channel 4's Brexit: the Uncivil War.

Would the commissioners buy it? "In the right hands, yes," says Wenger. But Hill isn't quite as keen: "I think it's a bit soon. The best stories about this period will be told when we have a bit of distance."

BEHIND THE SCENES
Drama heads Piers Wenger and Polly Hill, of BBC and ITV respectively guidelines agreed between the television industry and the secretary of state for culture, Oliver Dowden (who may know more about soaps than most ministers, as his Hertsmere constituency includes the BBC studios in Elstree, where EastEnders is filmed). "Soap is the easiest form to manage," says Hill, "because there are a lot of two-hander scenes and the sets are already there."

Wenger agrees: "Some soaps in other countries have carried on filming during social distancing – cheating the camera angles or editing together actors filmed separately. So there are ways round it."

Once safe filming protocols were agreed, the next question was to what extent storylines would reflect the viral emergency. "EastEnders is set in a version of the here-and-now," says Wenger, "so it won't be a Covid-free Walford – there will be social distancing and so on – but we may not dwell on the virus and make it the heart of the story. I'm unsure about that. I think people watch a show like EastEnders for the characters and their relationships. So, Covid-19

ANTHONY BRYAN WAS in his north London home when he heard the knocking. It was a Sunday in September 2016 and Bryan, then 59 and working as a painter and decorator, initially ignored the sound and assumed the men at his front door had the wrong address. But the knocking wouldn't stop. He opened the door and was confronted by six police officers. They asked him to confirm his name and when Bryan did, they told him they had a warrant for his arrest. They would be taking him immediately to a detention centre.

He'd never been in trouble with the police or broken any laws yet he was being led into a police van. "I was wondering where they were taking me. We were driving for nearly a day so I was getting scared because I didn't know where I was going to end up." Bryan was driven 166 miles to Dorset where he was locked up as if he was a common prisoner – but he wasn't a criminal; he was a victim of what became known as the Windrush Scandal, and his story has been dramatised in Sitting in Limbo, a BBC drama written by his half-brother Stephen Thompson.

Bryan came to Britain in 1965 aged eight, when he travelled from Jamaica on his mother's passport. He was part of the Windrush Generation – migrants named after the Empire Windrush, the first ship to arrive carrying people from Caribbean countries to help rebuild postwar Britain, which started in 1948 and carried on until 1971. Bryan had never held, or needed, a passport before and it was only while filling out the paperwork to visit his elderly mother in Jamaica that he was shocked to learn there was no record of him as a British citizen.

He'd fallen victim to the Conservative government's Hostile Environment policy, which aimed to make life difficult for immigrants living in the UK without leave to remain, hoping that they would go voluntarily. With the onus on him to prove his British citizenship to the Immigration Office, Bryan was stuck in limbo, forced to leave his job and unable to claim benefits while he tried to collect evidence to prove he had been living in Britain – a task made more difficult by the fact that the landing cards of the Caribbean migrants had been destroyed in 2010.

Forcibly removed from his home, he was detained as an illegal immigrant. "I was locked up from eight in the evening till six in the morning, which was hard because I'm claustrophobic so I'd have panic attacks." He was released after three weeks but two months later detained again. The Home Office informed him that, as he'd failed to prove citizenship, his application for a UK passport had been denied and he was issued with a deportation order that would be executed within 72 hours. It was only when the media – specifically an interview he did in The Guardian – featured Bryan's story that it became clear that his was not an isolated example and the threat of deportation was lifted.

His ordeal was shared by his six sons, partner Janet and his half-brother Stephen Thompson. Bryan wanted the world to know what he, and so many others, had endured. "We thought about it first as a non-fiction book about the Windrush Scandal, using this story as an example," says screenwriter Thompson, "but Anthony told me there had been interest from a documentary maker and that set me thinking – why couldn't it be a drama?" He approached Left Bank Pictures (producers of The Crown), was "commissioned to do the script in June 2019 and I finished the first draft three months later. We started filming last December."

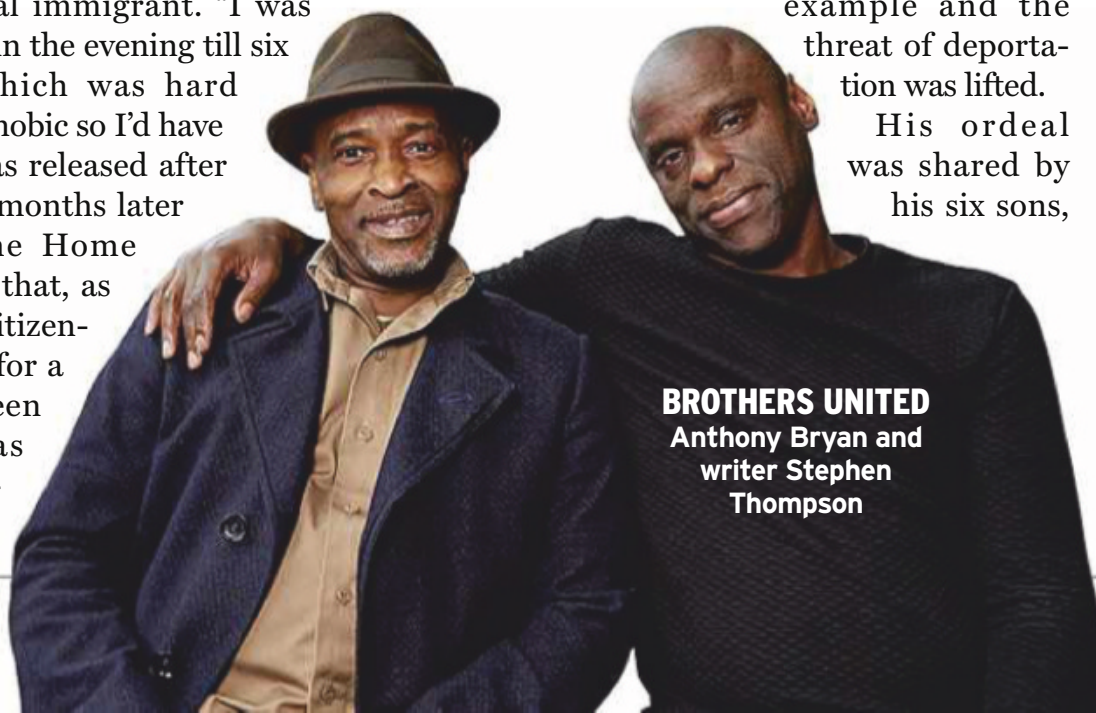

Sitting in Limbo is a drama unapologetically drawn from real life. Bryan's name hasn't been changed and Patrick Robinson and Nadine Marshall, the actors portraying Anthony and Janet, look uncannily like them. Viewers are don't feel obliged to give you any reasons for it." Bryan is still hoping to visit his ailing mother in Jamaica, who, before she retired, worked as a cleaner in the NHS for 30 years. "She'd get up at six," Thompson recalls, "and eventually it wore her down, and she got chronic arthritis, but throughout her working life she felt completely underappreciated and disrespected."

I was reminded of their mother's experience while reading the stories of the over-representation of BAME victims of the Covid-19 pandemic and how much so-called "low-skilled" hospital workers were valued, particularly within the NHS. "The irony is," says Thompson, "that during the crisis, a lot of these key workers, not just in the health service but also in social care – a lot of whom were BAME workers and have gone back to the Caribbean and other parts of the Commonwealth – there's been a call for those who have retired to come back and help out again! I mean, you can't write this stuff!"

'You feel like you're not valued. You feel you're an alien'

"And when the pandemic was in the early stages," he adds, "they were sending planes all over the world to repatriate British people, they were hiring private planes and people were coming back in their hundreds, thousands even. But there were people stuck in the Caribbean who couldn't get back here who were British but being told that they weren't. Some of them are still there."

Sitting in Limbo ends with a reminder that 83 people were wrongly deported to the Caribbean. It was a fate that almost befell Anthony Bryan – a man who had lived virtually his whole life in a country that tried to deny him. "The Windrush Scandal opened up Pandora's box about what it means to be British," says Thompson, "who gets to say they are British, and who gets to have their citizenship renounced." That is what makes Anthony Bryan's story so horrifying and Sitting in Limbo compelling and sadly necessary.

likely to watch and accept what they see as if it was a documentary and that, for Bryan, is why he wanted his story told. "You can see what we have gone through," he says. "In a newspaper you can read these things, but in a film, when you see it, it will always be with you."

"I want people to feel the injustice of it," adds Thompson, "to put themselves in those shoes. 'What if that were me, on a Sunday morning, and somebody came knocking on my door, telling me I'm not British?'"

It's been four years since those events, but the psychological wounds have yet to heal for Bryan. "There's a scar but it's not what everybody can see," he says. "Only Janet can see that, or people close to me." His brother notes that "it's affected his sleep, his nerves, his relationship – because of course you get withdrawn and lose confidence", while wife Janet adds she has witnessed "mood swings, proper panic attacks" since his detention. "You feel like you're not valued," adds Bryan. "You feel you're an alien."

HE RECEIVED AN apology from the Government but, incredibly, is still waiting for compensation. "I've borrowed money off friends and family. They want to know when they're getting their money back. I feel angry because you have your life to continue and you don't get any help. I've not given up, but I still haven't heard anything back from the Home Office."

"That's one of the frustrating things," adds Thompson. "They deprive you of your freedom, swoop on you like you're a criminal, threaten deportation, but when they release you, they

BACK IN THE

A new C4 series re-opens the Peter Falconio and Joanne Lees outback murder case – but is it justified, asks Ginny Dougary

IN THE SUMMER of 2001, a young English couple, Peter Falconio and Joanne Lees, were in the red heart of Australia, on a backpackers' trip of a lifetime. Travelling in their bright orange Kombi-van, they were flagged down at around 7.30pm by a driver who said there were sparks coming out of their van's exhaust. Falconio went to look; there was a loud bang and then the driver came to the front of the vehicle, shoved a gun in Lees's face, pushed her onto the tarmac, bound her hands behind her back, attempted to tape her feet and mouth, and deposited her in his landcruiser while he left to dispose of her boyfriend's body and the Kombi.

Lees managed to get out of the vehicle, running into the bush, where she hid for around five hours before flagging down a passing truck driver who took her to safety.

Her next ordeal was about to begin, one which continues to this day.

In December 2005, 47-year-old drug dealer Bradley John Murdoch was found guilty by the Northern Territory Supreme Court of murdering 28-year-old Falconio, and of attacking Lees.

Murdoch has always professed his innocence and in 2006 was granted permission to appeal against the conviction, but the appeal court found the case against him "overwhelming".

It's doubtful anyone who has lost a loved one in such a grotesque way, and then faced the scrutiny Lees has, can just get on with their life without a backward glance – but she is undeniably hampered by what seems to be an enduring fascination with the case. Over four nights this week, a new Channel 4 series re-examines the evidence, talking to the same people who have spoken so many times over the years since Falconio was murdered, and casting doubt once again on Lees's reliability as the sole witness.

Part of Lees's unpopularity with the press was her reluctance to be interviewed by them, which was construed by some as an indication of guilt. There are, of course, other reasons why someone wouldn't wish to be grilled again, particularly after so many hours' questioning by the police. At any rate, when she published her own version of events in her book No Turning Back in 2006,

The Times was offered an interview and I was the person dispatched to do it.

I found her a pleasant young woman, equal parts tough and vulnerable. Her take on the mistakes she made (wearing a T-shirt emblazoned with the words Cheeky Monkey at a press conference among them) was, "Hindsight's a great thing, isn't it? There is no manual that comes with this: 'Oh, you're a victim of a violent crime? These are the rules of behaviour...' And I'm a private and quite shy person. I'm not an actress, I'm a support worker."

Lees was naive in some ways, savvy in others. Her unwell mother, whom she had cared for growing up, died soon after Falconio's death. If you believe her innocent – as two court cases have, and I do – then Lees has been through one of the most terrifying ordeals imaginable.

She refused to be a victim of the predator on that night and she refused to be a victim of the press after the event. I liked the way she handled moments in the interview where she didn't want to be led in a firm but unofficial way – for instance, when she didn't want to talk about her birth father. It was difficult trying to talk about that horrific night and its aftermath, for me as well as for her. "It's because it's such a personal story," she said. "And private, and painful."

I've watched all four hours of the Channel 4 series with a more than passing knowledge of the case, as well as a first-hand impression of Lees. Also, having lived in Australia during the years of the Lindy Chamberlain trial (her self-contained demeanour after the disappearance of her baby daughter Azaria near Uluru in 1980 was often interpreted as guilt, in the same way as Lees), and travelled in the Northern Territory, I know just how huge that area is and how difficult it must be to find a body. So I may have a different perspective on this series to the average viewer.

What, then, can be made of a public broadcaster's decision to return to this ▷

TRIAL BY MEDIA
Main picture: the scene of Peter Falconio's murder in 2001 and, above, some of the newspaper coverage the case has generated ◁ murder? The series consultants are disgraced former criminal defence lawyer Andrew Fraser, who once enjoyed a £100,000-a-year cocaine habit and who served five years in prison in 2001 for involvement in cocaine smuggling, and his business partner, Victor Susman, who, in 2011, was quoted as saying, “This is just a great story. We see a book deal in this as well as the factual documentary. This is a fantastic opportunity.” They drive the narrative of the investigation, with the hand of Channel 4 almost visibly descending from time to time with counterpoints in an attempt at balance.

What is the justification of dragging Lees back into the frame, as well as the Falconio family, both of whom declined to appear in the series? Danny Horan is Channel 4’s head of factual, which commissioned the series from an independent Australian television company, CJZ. Horan acknowledges that the consultants are “completely flawed characters. They would probably say that about themselves and also are unreliable in some ways. Andrew Fraser has quite a dodgy past, which he talks about.”

Doesn’t it make him feel uncomfortable, I ask, that someone he admits is unreliable should anchor this re-examination of the case? “Not any more. Early versions, I did feel that. But I think we undermine their argument quite a lot now.”

Horan believes it’s worth airing issues around the trial and conviction because there are some questions that have still not been satisfied: “We didn’t just commission this on the basis that it was a well-known, very big troubling story that we cynically thought would get viewers.”

HIS VIEW IS that the documentary raises important issues about memory, how women are treated by the media, mistakes that can be made by the police, miscarriages of justice and so on. But as a viewer, this was not my experience of the series, at least in the version I was sent. In each episode, there are moments presented as fresh responses to an old case but which were, in fact, raised at the time and rejected as invalid.

The series refers in passing to a different rape and abduction charge Bradley Murdoch was acquitted of. Why not, for reasons of transparency and balance, look at that case in detail to highlight similarities in the two?

Falconio’s name is blackened by referencing a colleague who called him “dodgy Pete” and the series looks at the possibility that he staged his own disappearance because he was an expert in insurance fraud, ignoring the quantity of his blood at the crime scene. But they neglected to ask whether Falconio had taken out a policy on his own life and, if he had, whether that policy was cashed. Presumably he didn’t – in which case, why even raise this possibility?

Horan strongly believes that different theories about what happened remain: “Even people I know say, ‘She obviously had something to do with it, look at the way she behaved at the press conference.’ It’s literally all that people remember. I think there’s a strong sense in Australia that there was something nefarious going on. Whether she was involved in drugs, or whatever it may be, there are all sorts of conspiracy theories, that Murdoch is innocent. There are enough people who question this – some sensible people, I think – and that’s partly why we commissioned it.”

I contacted a dozen journalist colleagues in Australia to test Horan’s theory and not one of them agreed. In fact, quite the opposite. As Peter Wilson, author and former foreign correspondent for The Australian, says: “The media and the public learnt from Lindy Chamberlain who was convicted by the court of public opinion. We also know from trauma that it may be there are some small gaps in people’s story. My experience is that it is actually more suspicious for victims/witnesses of traumatic events to have perfect recall and stories that add up perfectly.”

Horan says there have been few programmes since he has been at Channel 4 where its legal team has had to work so hard and “get into the weeds of it” as this one. “I accept it is a tabloid story, and I accept that Andrew and Victor are quite tabloid characters, but I don’t accept that this is a completely tabloid presentation.

“It’s always a careful balancing act and I hope that we always get it right, but we don’t always get it right, and that’s always the really hard thing. Is it in the public interest, are we asking the right questions, is it fair and accurate and should we be doing it?”

TODAY LEES, NOW aged 46, is living in Australia trying to rebuild her life, having discovered she has a half-sister there. It has been reported that she has enlisted the help of the Aboriginal people of the Northern Territory to help her search for the remains of her boyfriend.

Falconio, she’d told me, “always made me feel safe and untouchable when I was with him, and he always encouraged me to be the strongest person I could and to fulfil my ambitions.”

In finding him, however remote that possibility, maybe the world can finally move on, as Lees has been trying to do ever since that terrible night in 2001.

B EING LOCKED DOWN at home during a global pandemic is not, perhaps, how John Torode and Lisa Faulkner envisaged the start of married life.

It's been five years since the couple got together, tying the knot at a stately home in Northamptonshire last October. "It's funny that nearly half of our marriage has been in lockdown!" says Faulkner. "It's a good job I like him! I have to say, the novelty of calling him my husband hasn't worn off in any way. Sometimes he will say, 'You're my wife', and I think, 'Oh, that's so exciting.'"

Being in the rose-tinted honeymoon period is seeing them through as they live together, cook together, and even now work together, filming a new series of ITV's John and Lisa's Weekend Kitchen under specially adapted socially distancing measures.

"We're doing pretty well," says Torode, "considering we have been next to each other non-stop for nine weeks and then doing a TV show where we're working together really hard. It's tiring but it's all good."

They really must be in a honeymoon phase, because they spend our interview gushing about each other. When I dig a little deeper to find out what they argue about, there's nothing – or at least nothing they will admit to.

The kitchen, for many couples, is a place of stress. And for two people who love cooking, surely there must be a bone of contention somewhere: doesn't it annoy Torode the way Faulkner loads the dishwasher, for example?

"I really don't think there is," he says. "If there was, we wouldn't argue, we'd just get on with it. I'm a fan of the vacuum cleaner and the iron and Lisa is the one who bleaches the bathroom. That wasn't even talked about, it just happens. It's a division of labour with cooking, too. If I can cook a steak really well, why would Lisa want to do it? If Lisa makes the most amazing cake, why would I try to make one the same?"

They met on Celebrity MasterChef in 2010, which actress Faulkner won. She said "about 15 words" to judge Torode throughout the series, but the pair bumped into each other at events for months afterwards. Eventually, with both separated from previous spouses, Torode wrote to Faulkner to ask her out.

"I was surprised," she admits now. "I knew we'd had a couple of nice times where we met, chatted, had fun and talked a lot. So we were friends, and it didn't come out of the blue, but I thought it was a very gentlemanly thing to do, a letter."

Faulkner still watches MasterChef religiously, much to Torode's dismay; he sits playing Scrabble on his iPad alongside her until it's over. It has to be said that as a co-host, Faulkner brings out a softer side of Torode than Gregg Wallace. "Of course it's different," says Torode. "Lisa, I live with and love. Gregg is a fellow judge. We have our jobs to do. Gregg and I are very different to each other and we don't social-

"Lisa is very easy to live and work with, so that means you do soften a little. The fact is, Weekend Kitchen is a very different thing altogether and I'm pleased about that. It's there to get people at home to cook. It isn't telling people they have to be the best cook in the world.

"One of the things that has come out during lockdown is how therapeutic cooking is. Food distracts you; you can't let your mind wander when you're chopping because you'll take your finger off. So it clears your head. It's a bit like yoga, except with yoga you're losing weight and with cooking you may gain it."

'Nearly half of our marriage has been in lockdown!'

It's comforting that the pair are also prone to making mistakes, like any of us. Faulkner recently posted an Instagram video showing the aftermath of an explosion in the kitchen that took Torode two hours to clean up. "That was a silly thing to do," he admits. "I put a hot sauce into a pureeing machine and it went all over the show we're doing eight recipes a day. We couldn't physically do it." Torode adds, "No way in the bloody world. We couldn't fit the cameras in. What you see on Instagram is the whole space."

Was there any reticence about working together? It is, after all, quite revealing, as they swap banter and poke fun at each other, and Torode has always been private.

"It was Lisa's idea," he says. "She wanted to make cooking accessible to people. She's an extraordinary cook, so if we can give something back, then why not? As for our relationship, we show what happens in our kitchen but nothing else. It should make people smile and think, 'Oh crikey, we're just like that!' It is real and that's the good thing about it."

NOT THAT THEY'VE got anything to hide: they are very genuine in their praise for each other. Faulkner says Torode will ask what she wants for dinner and make anything she plucks out of thin air (she is particularly partial to his Thai curries and steak). Torode loves his wife's roast potatoes (she adds a stock cube to the hot fat), and adds that she's an instinctive cook.

He says, "When you follow a recipe you forget that tomatoes are different sizes, you can get a bunch of tarragon that tastes different from another bunch. One of the most amazing things with Lisa is that she just feels, smells and tastes it and whatever she makes will always taste absolutely delicious."

place. I'm still finding specks in the light fitting."

As silly as setting fire to a tea towel live on This Morning, as he did recently? "Because of the two-second delay, I couldn't hear Phillip Schofield and Holly Willoughby panicking immediately," he says. "You have to stay calm in the kitchen. It's a good lesson, though – you shouldn't have something on the stove and turn your back on it. And also, don't put a tea towel anywhere near the stove."

Even so, were they not tempted to film John and Lisa's Weekend Kitchen at home? Plenty of people are, after all, such as Jamie Oliver, whose Channel 4 show Keep Cooking and Carry On is filmed by himself and wife Jools, with their children wandering in and out of shot.

But it wasn't an option for Torode and Faulkner, who have five children between them – Faulkner has an adopted daughter Billie, 14, and Torode has grown-up children Marcel and Casper from a previous relationship, and two children with his ex-wife: Jonah, 12, and Lulu, ten.

Faulkner says, "To cook in our own kitchen is hard enough with home schooling and everything else. For our

'TRUMP IS A DANGER TO THE WORLD'

Hillary Clinton says she's on a mission to prevent Donald Trump being re-elected – but it's not personal, this is politics...

CAN YOU HELP me, Charles?" Sliding into her seat, Hillary Rodham Clinton needs a little push from her publicist to move her chair forward and get settled. It's about the only time the former First Lady requires any assistance. Arriving with a continent-wide smile, the 72-year-old knows how to command a room. She may have lost to Donald Trump in the infamous 2016 US presidential election, but she still exudes the assurance of a woman who has spent more than 40 years in public life.

We meet in Berlin's Adlon Hotel, shortly before the coronavirus makes such encounters all but impossible.

The spread of disease is already a concern for her. "It's connected to mobility," she says. "People are getting on airplanes now that never got on airplanes and bringing diseases with them." By the spring, the US will lead the world with cases and deaths. "He did promise 'America First,'" she later tweets, jabbing at Trump's mishandling of the pandemic. Certainly, it's hard to imagine Clinton suggesting that imbibing disinfectant may provide a cure.

Today, she's wearing a jigsaw-patterned coat and gemstone necklace – all very diplomat-chic and an outfit as composed as she is. There are no aides whispering sweet answers in her ears, just the occasional swerve of a direct question to make a point. Well, once a politician, always a politician. Candid and competent, it still defies belief she lost the election.

Even now, Hercules-like, the weight of the world droops on her shoulders. "I'm congenitally an optimist because I think it's a better way to live," she says, "but I'm worried. I'm worried about the rise of xenophobic, extremist, nation-alistic, populist movements and authoritarian leaders. And I'm worried about the example Trump has set: how to use the media in all of its forms to dominate the discussion and feed into people's insecurities, their angers, resentments."

IS IT ALL an act, though, or is she authentic? That's one of the many questions examined in Hillary, Nanette Burstein's new four-part documentary – and the reason we're speaking today. "The problem is... she is one of the most admired and one of the most vilified women in American history," remarks Jake Sullivan, her senior policy adviser in the 2016 election, when she came within a whisker of becoming the first ever female American president. Divisive doesn't even begin to cover it.

The original intention was to make a behind-the-scenes film about the election, collated from 2,000 hours of campaign trail footage. Then Burstein was hired and she felt there was a bigger picture to tell – "an opportunity to reflect on our culture", she notes. But Clinton knows that the spotlight still falls on her. "Maybe this is an opportunity, warts and all, to tell the story about who I am," she shrugs. "Maybe that will help a lot of people better understand me."

Part fly-on-the-wall, part biography, Hillary weaves that fateful election with her earlier years: growing up in a Methodist family in ▷

The documentary devotes plenty of airtime to Trump and that narrow election defeat. In one scene, she casually raises a dismissive eyebrow when she spies a news report about his advancement as the Republican nominee. Was it arrogance? “We did not think he could win,” she sighs. “I didn’t think he could win. Obama didn’t.” Tim Kaine, her 2016 running-mate, even relays Obama’s much-cited sentiment in the film, that Trump is a “fascist”.

It was all looking rosy, until then FBI director James Comey re-opened an investigation into the email scandal where Clinton was found to be using a private server for government business. “That was one of the biggest disappointments in that campaign,” she explains. “Something that was not illegal, and did not involve any information marked classified, was used to discredit me and undermine my record. It was devastating.”

PLANE SPEAKING
On the campaign trail in 2016 with childhood friend and supporter Betsy Ebeling, who died last year

THERE WERE BIGGER forces at play, too, she adds, such as Russian interference in the electoral system. But the bigger question might be why she didn’t garner enough female support? “I don’t know why some felt that way and others didn’t, but y’know, that’s politics. I don’t have any criticism of that. I do think there are some concerns about older women who still are trying to figure out: do I want to support a woman for president?”

Like the rest of the world, Clinton has been forced to watch Trump’s three-and-a-half-year White House rollercoaster. His chaotic style clearly rankles. “It’s government by tweeting: I’m against it! It’s disgusting! It’s awful! End it!” Worse still, she adds, he offers no alternatives to the numerous agreements or programmes – the Paris climate accord, the Iran nuclear deal, Obamacare – that he has either withdrawn from or dismantled.

She cites Russian leader Vladimir Putin – whom she once claimed “had no soul” – as a “role model” for Trump. “Trump has a real admiration for that kind of leadership... I think Trump has an authoritarian personality and wants to acquire greater and greater unaccountable power, which is why I am absolutely convinced we have to replace him in this next election. We can recover from four years of the damage that he’s inflicted, but it will be much harder if he gets another four-year term.”

The film does see her make some sour comments towards Bernie Sanders, whom she beat in the 2016 race to become the Democratic presidential candidate. Concerned this may be blown out of proportion in an election year, she points out that those were made 18 months ago, part of 35 hours of interviews that she did with Burstein. But there is clearly no love lost. “He never gave me the respect I had given to Obama,” she tells me, referring to when she conceded against Obama in the 2008 primaries.

Sanders quit this year’s primary, too, leaving Joe Biden as a virtual shoo-in to be the Democrat candidate for this year’s presidential election. While this must be a private relief to Clinton, her main mission is to get Trump ejected from the Oval Office. “I think any Democrat is better than Donald Trump. Donald Trump is a clear and present danger to our democracy and, frankly, to the world. So I will support whoever our nominee is.” She looks fired up. “I believe we can and should win and I will do everything I can to make that happen.”

One of the biggest issues the upcoming election faces is the proliferation of voter-swaying fake news on the internet. Last year, the Trump campaign ran a “totally false ad” about Biden on Facebook, claiming he abused his power to help his son in Ukraine. “It was an outrageous, totally stupid lie. They tried to get it on TV and the TV stations said, ‘No, that’s not true.’ They ran it on Facebook over and over and over again. So I think we have to start with sensible regulation that holds the [social media] platforms to some journalistic, editorial standards.”

AWAY FROM POLITICS, Clinton claims she’s happy – she gets to spend more time with her family: husband Bill, daughter Chelsea and three grandchildren. “We have a wonderful time taking long walks, going to the movies, spending time with our grandchildren. There is no substitute for that,” she says. She and Chelsea even co-authored The Book of Gutsy Women, published last year. But you sense that Clinton is far from done. Vilified or venerated, she has no intention of simply retiring from the spotlight. “Oh, I have lots of plans,” she smiles. “I intend to remain very active.” JAMES MOTTRAM

Thursday 10.00pm C4

THE "GRUNDY MOMENT" – named after the Thames TV host Bill Grundy, who in December 1976 dared the Sex Pistols to "say something outrageous", and they did – is every live broadcaster's nightmare. My own occurred on 6 Music in 2003. I was due to speak "down the line" from London to rising British jazz and soul star Amy Winehouse, who was sitting in a Portakabin at a minor festival before delivering a live set. I could hear her, but she had nothing in her cans. Blissfully unaware that she was on air, she muttered, "I can't hear s!" Frustrated, to anyone who was listening, she said it again for the record: "I can't hear s!"

I can smile about this minor vernacular infraction now, but at the time it was terrible. I had to fade out Amy Winehouse.

Senna director Asif Kapadia's assiduous portrait of her accelerated trajectory, drawn from 100 interviews, is as rounded as they come. Amy's story starts off in childish innocence as she grows up in north London suffused by jazz. Passing through stage school, the self-doubt, addiction, bulimia and eventual fame-induced meltdown hove incrementally into view, as they can in real life. The effect is utterly if morbidly gripping, and your jaw may drop.

HER DEATH, AGED 27, in 2011 rumbles in the background like an approaching thunderstorm and, even if you didn't like her music, her choice of boyfriend, or her sailor's tattoos, this cautionary and humane film elicits an open-minded viewing. The use of existing home movies and archive with new audio testimony is unflinching in pursuit of unvarnished truth. But when in 2009 Amy's media-friendly dad Mitch turns up during her rehabilitating break in St Lucia with his own camera crew in tow, you'll start to wonder who had her ear, and why would she bother to listen.

There are many scenes, earlier on, of innocent fun, family and friends, and evidence of the healing power of music along the way. History has bestowed no especial significance on my sole exchange with the superstar-in-waiting, although I do now feel fortunate to have eventually chatted cordially to this dazzlingly talented, defiantly unvarnished performer when she was in a good place. The business dared her to do something outrageous. And she did.

REMEMBERING D-DAY

The Longest Day ★★★★★ Saturday 2.00pm, Friday 3.20pm Film4

Scheduled to mark the anniversary of D-Day on 6 June 1944, The Longest Day is remembered today for its logistically powerful re-creation by directors Ken Annakin, Andrew Marton and Austrian Bernhard Wicki of the Allied invasion of Normandy, and its top-heavy, all-star cast. Among the big guns are the likes of John Wayne, Henry Fonda, Robert Mitchum, Kenneth More and Richard Burton, all of whom look battle-ready or battle-trained. From Maurice Jarre's famous march to vignettes like Red Buttons's dangling parachutist and Cornelius Ryan's exceptional pre-New Journalism account of the day itself, which puts you in the thick of the action, it's the perfect package – and in black-and-white, to create that vérité effect. AC

Alexander and the Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Day ★★★ 10.00-11.15am BBC2 PG

COMEDY Treading similar territory to the Wimpy Kid films, this Disney comedy stars Ed Oxenbould as Alexander, who's just had the day from hell. It's now his 12th birthday and, frustrated by a schoolmate's plan to stage a rival mega-party, he wishes that his family could feel what a worst-ever day feels like, too. Things naturally descend into chaos, which includes an escaped crocodile, a failed driving test and a self-destructing school play. In trying to appeal to a broad family audience, Alexander sometimes spreads its comedy thin. But it has a big heart and remains upbeat throughout. DA (US 2014, HD)

Carousel ★★★★★ 3.20-5.30pm BBC2 U

MUSICAL Immaculately cast and partly filmed around glorious Maine locations, this is a marvellous screen version of the Rodgers and Hammerstein classic. Some may find this tale of a deceased reprobate's return to Earth to look out for his daughter arch in the extreme, but the superb score and the sensitive handling of the material make things quite moving. Gordon MacRae and Shirley Jones, reunited after Oklahoma!, have the roles of their lives here, with their rendition of If I Loved You a highlight, though they're done no favours by Henry King's static direction. The spirited June Is Bustin' Out All Over more than compensates. TS (US 1956)

The Lego Batman Movie ★★★★★ 5.05-7.10pm ITV2 U

COMEDY Having made his bow in The Lego Movie (2014), the diminutive Caped Crusader gets a starring role in this riotous animated yarn. Batman (voiced by Will Arnett) leads a lonely life, and butler Alfred (Ralph Fiennes) thinks it's time he had a family. Enter excitable orphan Dick Grayson (Michael Cera), who becomes the boy wonder Robin and teaches the Dark Knight the joys of friendship and togetherness. Director Chris McKay and his sharp-witted writers take pleasure in both celebrating and mocking Batman's mythology and his previous screen incarnations. Add to that an exemplary voice cast and some eye-popping design, and you have what could be the best Batman film, ever. TeS (US/Den 2017, HD)

Moana ★★★★★ 5.50-7.30pm BBC1 PG

MUSICAL ADVENTURE I don't think Disney need worry too much about diversity after Pocahontas, Mulan, a New Orleans shake-up of The Princess and the Frog and 2016's Moana, whose Polynesian vibe was more than just a floral garland round its neck. Co-directors Ron Clements and John Musker researched Oceanic culture and hired Hawaiian storyliners to authenticate island lore and legend. Its titular protagonist, headstrong chief's daughter Moana, is voiced and sung by Hawaiian Auli'i Cravalho, who sails out to sea to end the island's blight by retrieving its "heart", a stone stolen by a volcanic demon. Dwayne Johnson voices a redemptive tattooed demigod (not much of a stretch), while comic relief comes from Jemaine Clement's bling-obsessed crab, who has one of the best musical numbers in Shiny (Hamilton's Lin-Manuel Miranda is one of the songwriters). The whole thing is bright and verdant, and Dwayne's hand-drawn storytelling tattoos are animation at its best. (US 2016, HD) onto a ship bound for Canada. After the ship is wrecked during a storm, Pi is left adrift in a lifeboat – his last surviving companion a fearsome Bengal tiger. The strength of the film is in its stunning imagery, which evokes the mysteries of the universe and stirs great tension as Pi and the truly life-like CGI tiger search for both land and enlightenment. SP (US/Tai/Aus/UK/Can 2012, swearing, HD)

Casino Royale ★★★★★ 8.30-11.10pm ITV 12

SPY Daniel Craig makes the role of James Bond his own as the series goes back to basics. This is essentially an origins story, as agent 007 gains his two zeros (the two authorised kills needed for his infamous licence) before tackling villain Le Chiffre (Mads Mikkelsen) in a high-stakes poker game. Craig's humanised interpretation balances Martin Campbell's physical direction, which ups the violence and strips Bond of any obvious campy humour. Eva Green also provides an alluring love interest in what proved to be a triumphant new beginning for the franchise. AS (UK/CzRep/Ger/US 2006, violence, col/BW, HD)

Eric Clapton: Life in 12 Bars ★★★ 9.15-11.20pm BBC2 15

DOCUMENTARY Most Clapton fans will be familiar with his musical journey through the 1960s and the addictions and tragedies that threatened to blow him off course over the years. But anyone hoping to gain fresh perspective on Slowhand's evolution as a solo artist will be disappointed by Lili Fini Zanuck's film, which overlooks a large amount of Clapton's work, as he insists he can hear how drunk he was when he listens back to it. The wealth of archive footage is fascinating, but voiceover observations by Clapton himself frustratingly limit any deeper insight. More hard rocking follows, with Guitar Heroes at the BBC. DP (UK/US 2017, swearing, drug abuse, col/BW, HD)

Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children ★★★★★ 9.15-11.45pm C4 12

FANTASY In another dark, delirious fairy tale from director Tim Burton, children aren't gifted with special powers, they're cursed with them. Jake (Asa Butterfield) doesn't know what makes him different, but when he discovers a loop in time created in 1943 and inhabited by Miss Peregrine (Eva Green) and otherworldly children like himself, things start to make sense – relatively speaking. Burton's impish humour and in-your-face weirdness means this fantastic journey never becomes truly heart-wrenching, but he compensates with his typically meticulous, gothic atmosphere and spine-chilling thrills aplenty. SP (US 2016, violence, HD)

The Hurt Locker ★★★★★ 11.00pm-1.05am BBC1 15

THRILLER Kathryn Bigelow's account of the lives of a US Army bomb-disposal squad focuses on the men who voluntarily put themselves next to deadly IEDs (improvised explosive devices). Covering the last month the squad has of their current tour of Iraq, the film follows the contrasting attitudes of a trio of soldiers – including the risk-taking Staff Sgt William James (Jeremy Renner) – all of whom are aware that every job they do is potentially their last. Bigelow avoids both red wire/yellow wire cliché and political preaching to deliver a film that is as psychologically fascinating as it is taut and exciting. AS (US 2008, violence, swearing, HD)

Big Game ★★★ 11.45pm-1.20am C4 15

ACTION During a traditional rite-of-passage solo hunt in the scenic Finnish mountains, a young boy (Onni Tommila) saves the crash-landed US President (Samuel L Jackson) from assassination after Air Force One is shot down in a coup attempt. The tone veers all over the place in this light-hearted if far-fetched thriller, whose action beats verge on the cartoonish – a Secret Service man parachuting through a missile onslaught, an ejector seat flight over a nuclear explosion etc. But director Jalmari Helander's style is lively, the two leads make a nice double act, and events move at a brisk clip. AJ (Fin/UK/Ger/Fr 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom ★★★ 7.30-10.00pm ITV 12

SCI-FI ADVENTURE The second instalment in the Jurassic World cycle of films may at first appear to be another noisy, galumphing prehistoric adventure, but it's also a lean, thoroughly modern fable about conservation versus capitalism. Picking up three years after the events of the previous film, it reunites Chris Pratt's dino whisperer with Bryce Dallas Howard's reformed corporate shill as they attempt to rescue the dinosaurs still stranded on the site of the condemned theme park. Director JA Bayona (The Impossible) keeps things moving, particularly during the scenes on the volcanic Isla Nublar, while Jeff Goldblum (from the earlier Jurassic Park trilogy) makes a cameo as an expert testifying to the Senate. He'll be back alongside Sam Neill and Laura Dern for Jurassic World: Dominion, due in cinemas next summer. (US/Sp 2018, violence, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

Sound designer Al Nelson blended snarls and bellows made by cougars, lions, pigs and a chihuahua to create the Indoraptor's cry

The Way West ★★★★★ 9.50am-12.15pm ITV4 12

WESTERN Andrew V McLaglen's spectacular adaptation of the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by AB Guthrie Jr boasts a magnificent leading trio of Kirk Douglas, Robert Mitchum and Richard Widmark. The scale of the picture is impressive, as politician Douglas leads a wagon train west along the hazardous Oregon Trail to California. Mitchum is remarkably good value as a scout, and watch out for the young Sally Field in her movie debut as teenager Mercy McBee. Bronislau Kaper's outstanding score is a splendid accompaniment to the action and deserves to be better known. TS (US 1967, violence, HD)

Mr Bean's Holiday ★★★ 1.30-3.15pm c5 PG

COMEDY Rowan Atkinson's slightly creepy creation returns for this second feature outing, which sees Mr Bean bumble his way across France after winning a holiday to the Côte d'Azur, with "gracias" his sole attempt at the local lingo. If the film-makers had stopped there, we'd have had an amusing series of slapstick sketches. Instead, they introduce a daft plot involving a young boy (Max Baldry), a pretty actress (Emma de Caunes) and the Cannes film festival, which merely offers a lost-looking Willem Dafoe the chance to guest star as a pretentious director. There are more hapless high-jinks with Atkinson in Johnny English Reborn, which follows in today's comedy double bill. DA (UK 2007, HD)

Guys and Dolls ★★★★★ 3.50-6.15pm BBC2 U

MUSICAL When Hollywood producer Sam Goldwyn set about filming this Broadway classic, he went after the best dancer he could find: Gene Kelly. Louis B Mayer wouldn't release Kelly to his rival, so Goldwyn went for the best actor in the movies instead. That's how Marlon Brando became the definitive Sky Masterson, singing the Frank Loesser songs himself, with choreography from Michael Kidd. With Jean Simmons waking up to love with If I Were a Bell, and Frank Sinatra and Vivian Blaine as Nathan Detroit and his ever-lovin' Adelaide, what more could you want? The film is preceded by a Talking Pictures special on screen sex symbols. TS (US 1955)

GI Joe: the Rise of Cobra ★★★★★ 6.45-9.00pm Film4 12

ACTION Mounted on a massive scale, the big-screen transfer of Hasbro's other big toy line (after Transformers) is a nonstop thrill-ride. The Mummy director Stephen Sommers delivers a terrific blend of comic-book adventure and James Bond-style spectacle, as the special-ops team of super-elite soldiers (known as "GI Joe") battles the Cobra organisation. The flashbacks to the origins of key characters, such as Channing Tatum's hero Duke and Sienna Miller's evil Baroness, ensure the pace doesn't flag, and the high-quality visuals continually assault the senses. Meanwhile, the gadgetry – from power suits to nanomite weaponry – is every tech-head's fantasy. AJ (US 2009, violence, HD)

Pitch Black ★★★★★ 9.00-11.10pm Sky1 15

SCI-FI It starts out resembling another assembly-line sci-fi saga, but this visually stunning adventure soon becomes as thrilling as it is imaginatively striking. The setting is a world with three suns, where the tri-solar eclipse heralds the arrival of flesh-hungry creatures from under the ground. The motley crew that must traverse this nightmare landscape is led by tough guy Vin Diesel, whose charismatic performance is pitched somewhere between Mad Max and the T-1000 from Terminator 2. With its first half sporting a brilliant desert surrealism and the second loaded with stylised gore, director David Twohy's futuristic frightener is a vivid, pulse-pounding achievement. AJ (Aus/US 1999, violence, swearing, HD)

Sommersby ★★★ 9.00-11.20pm 5 Select 12

DRAMA This Hollywood reworking of the Gérard Depardieu/Nathalie Baye modern classic The Return of Martin Guerre isn't a patch on the original, either in terms of tension, intelligence or performances. Nevertheless, there's much to enjoy in the central mystery surrounding the identity of returning American Civil War veteran Richard Gere, in particular the sensitive playing of the excellent Jodie Foster as his confused "widow". Unfortunately, neither Gere nor Bill Pullman (as an embittered suitor) can hold a candle to Foster in the acting department, and the resolution won't satisfy everybody. DP (US 1993, some violence, sex scenes, swearing)

A Few Good Men ★★★★★ 9.00-11.50pm 5 Star 15

DRAMA The ultimate movie rebel Jack Nicholson has a ball playing the ultimate establishment figure in this star-laden, rather old-fashioned courtroom escapade. In fact, Nicholson's role as the obsessive, hard-nosed marine officer is little more than a scene-stealing cameo – the two leads are Tom Cruise and Demi Moore, who play naval lawyers trying to discover the truth behind the death of a recruit. It's crisply directed by Rob Reiner (Misery, When Harry Met Sally...), who once again shows that he is comfortable with numerous styles of film-making. If it becomes a little too talky, the climactic fireworks between Nicholson and Cruise still make for compulsive viewing. JF (US 1992, violence, swearing, HD)

Cobain: Montage of Heck ★★★★★ 9.00-11.30pm Sky Documentaries 15

DOCUMENTARY Made with the full co-operation of his estate, this is an exhaustive but suitably punk-rock hagiography of Kurt Cobain, the doomed leader of US grunge band Nirvana. Director Brett Morgen (The Kid Stays in the Picture) tells the frontman's 27-year life story from Pacific Northwest childhood to suicide, mixing interviews with eerily carefree Super-8 home movies, stock footage and clips of unseen gigs. Animators Stefan Nadelman and Hisko Hulsing also bring Cobain's endless notebooks to dazzling, disturbing life in a film that reaches far beyond easy fan-bait. AC (US 2015, swearing, sex and drug references, HD)

Joy ★★★★★ 11.15pm-1.30am c4 12

DRAMA Rich with enchantment and fuelled by female determination, this story of the travails of an ordinary heroine is as delightful as its title suggests. Jennifer Lawrence plays Joy Mangano, who happens upon an idea for a revolutionary mop and sets about making it happen. Despite the quietly showy camerawork, director David O Russell mines Joy's familial relations and the weird world of home shopping to amusing effect. Robert De Niro and Bradley Cooper provide spot-on support, but a gutsy Lawrence leads by example in a role that inspires great admiration. EAS (US 2015, swearing, HD)

Hannibal ★★★ 10.55pm-1.25am C5 18

HORROR THRILLER Hannibal takes place ten years after the grisly events of The Silence of the Lambs, making it a belated sequel to what remains, in Oscar terms, the most decorated horror film of all time (winning best picture, director, actor, actress and screenplay). Jodie Foster and director Jonathan Demme declined to return, so Julianne Moore takes over as Clarice and Ridley Scott steps behind the camera. The story revolves around surviving, deformed victim Mason Verger (an unrecognisable Gary Oldman), who plans to flush Lecter out of hiding and feed him to his specially trained hogs. Anthony Hopkins almost twinkles as Lecter, though a certain sequence involving Ray Liotta will fill your nightmares for years to come. (US 2001, violence, swearing, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

The Jane Austen Book Club ★★★
4.30-6.40pm Sony Movies 12

ROMANTIC COMEDY Writer/director Robin Swicord's cosy rom-com follows the members of a California book group set up by six-time divorcee Kathy Baker, who find their personal relationship dramas echoing the works of Jane Austen. The engaging cast includes Emily Blunt and Maria Bello, while the witty dialogue makes up for the sometimes laboured storytelling. But, at times, Swicord does get beyond the quaintness of the premise to show how Austen's observations are still relevant to the romantic woes of the modern woman. SP (US 2007, may be edited for swearing)

Sundown ★★★
7.10-9.00pm Talking Pictures TV

ADVENTURE Gene Tierney's sultry looks are used to good effect in this Second World War yarn, which is new to Talking Pictures TV today. It's set in Africa, where the Nazis are supplying weapons to tribesmen in the hope that they will rise up against the British.

Commissioner Bruce Cabot befriends the locals, while English major George Sanders wrestles with his distrust of Arabs. Tierney is the linchpin, working under cover for the Allies but arousing Sanders's suspicions as she romances Cabot. The film rattles along, even if it doesn't quite reach the heights it aspires to. SuR (US 1941, BW)

Role Models ★★★
9.00-11.00pm Sky1 15

COMEDY This step-up from the usual crude teen comedy elevates its smutty set pieces and filth-ridden dialogue with strong performances, likeable characters and the ability to stay the right side of sentimental. After crashing his truck in a fit of pique, energy-drink salesman Paul Rudd and his cohort Seann William Scott are sentenced to community service mentoring disenfranchised youngsters. Scott's initiation of streetwise Bobb'e J Thompson into the ways of the party animal is funny. However, the real pleasure is in Rudd's relationship with nerdy Christopher Mintz-Plasse. IF (US/Ger 2008, swearing, nudity, HD)

The French Lieutenant's Woman ★★★
9.00-11.30pm Sony Movies Classic 12

ROMANTIC DRAMA Director Karel Reisz and screenwriter Harold Pinter here take on the near-impossible task of filming John Fowles's complex novel. Two stories are told in parallel: one about an affair between a disgraced Victorian governess and an English gentleman; the other about the relationship between the two modern-day actors portraying the couple. Jeremy Irons and Meryl Streep give scorching performances in their dual roles, while Reisz conjures a powerfully claustrophobic atmosphere. JM (UK 1981, swearing, sex scenes, brief nudity)

Escape from New York ★★★
11.20pm-1.25am Paramount Network 15

THRILLER A sullen Kurt Russell channels Clint Eastwood in this tough, futuristic western, in which Manhattan has become a maximum security prison. When the president's plane goes down in the city, Russell is charged with carrying out a rescue. This is certainly one of John Carpenter's slickest-looking films, and the presence of Lee Van Cleef reinforces its Sergio Leone associations. Yet, despite a marvellous night-time opening sequence, this slice of escapism never really delivers on the ingenuity of its premise. Still, it's better than the 1996 sequel, Escape from L.A. AJ (US 1981, violence, swearing)

DOCUDRAMA One man's determination to walk a tightrope between the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in New York is detailed in this jaw-dropping blend of talking-head interviews, archive footage and dramatic reconstruction. Its subject, charismatic Frenchman Philippe Petit, is a joy to watch, and the film offers a deceptively sturdy sounding board for his crazy ideas. Director James Marsh expertly captures the vertiginous thrills of that day in August 1974 when Petit's daredevil plan became a reality. Damon Wise (UK 2007, some nudity, HD)

Logan ★★★ 9.00-11.45pm Film4 15

ACTION Hugh Jackman's fabulous swansong as the X-Men's main man is set in a future when no mutants have been born in years, and a jaded Logan is lying low, along with a sick and unstable Professor Xavier (Patrick Stewart). However, their desert seclusion is shattered with the arrival of the mysterious Laura (Dafne Keen), who proves to be a chip off the old mutant block. Although very violent, the film has an end-of-an-era tone worthy of Sam Peckinpah. JA (US 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

DRAMA As a passionate believer in universal access to and appreciation of art, I squirm sometimes at satirical movies set in the art world. But Swedish writer/director Ruben Östlund just about sidesteps the obvious pitfalls with his second internationally released hit (after Force Majeure), set in a Stockholm art museum. There, borderline farcical installations are displayed and provocations include a posh dinner interrupted by a topless man pretending to be an ape. Claes Bang (most recently seen in TV's Dracula) brings urbanity to the part of the paranoid curator dragged into a blackmail plot, while Elisabeth Moss (The Handmaid's Tale) as an American journalist is just one more reason to view this Palme d'Or-winning, Oscar-nominated Scandi treat. (Swe/Ger/Fr/Den/US/Nor 2017, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

FILM NOIR Also known as Out of the Past, this film contains a memorably languid performance by Robert Mitchum as the ultra-hard-boiled former private eye who falls for the woman (Jane Greer) he's been hired to track by gangster Kirk Douglas. Unfairly underrated for many years, it is a stylish, atmospheric, highly watchable movie from director Jacques Tourneur, who also made horror classics Cat People and Night of the Demon. Scriptwriter Daniel Mainwaring (credited here as Geoffrey Homes) also penned the classic 1956 version of Invasion of the Body Snatchers. PF (US 1947, BW)

12

SCI-FI The screenplay is ragged and the cheap humour is miscalculated, but on the awesome-spectacle front, director Michael Bay raises the action bar to a new level with this second Transformers sequel. The story recounts how the 1960s space race was initiated in response to an alien vessel landing on the Moon, and how that proves to be part of an elaborate Decepticon plan to enslave humankind. Naturally, it's left to Shia LaBeouf and the Autobots to save the world again. It's an exhausting watch, but it certainly takes your breath away. AJ (US 2011, edited for language, violence, HD)

Les Misérables

MUSICAL The King's Speech director Tom Hooper brings the stage sensation based on Victor Hugo's epic saga to the screen. Hugh Jackman is cast in the role of reformed thief Valjean, who is pursued through 19th-century France by Russell Crowe's officer Javert.

Anthems such as Bring Him Home and I Dreamed a Dream are all present and correct, although Hooper fails to vary their presentation, which can make the onslaught of songs (performed live, with no studio enhancements) rather heavy going. It won't convert those averse to musicals, but fans of the stage version will find it built to please. AJ (UK 2012, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

DRAMA The less-than-wholesome traits of Kenya's "Happy Valley" crowd in the 1940s are nicely delineated here in all their dissolute glory by director Michael Radford. The film is based on a true story about the murder of an aristocrat who was servicing half of the valley's bored ladies, but while Charles Dance makes a believable stud and Greta Scacchi looks gorgeous, there is simply no one in this over-egged drama who elicits any sympathy. Meanwhile, Sarah Miles delivers a performance that is bizarre even by her wacky standards. SH (UK 1987, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

WAR DRAMA Brad Pitt stars here as the commander of a tank rolling through Germany in the dying days of the Second World War. Shia LaBeouf, Michael Peña and Jon Bernthal are his crew, but it's through the eyes of replacement driver Logan Lerman that the reality of conflict hits home. While there are familiar archetypes to be had, writer/director David Ayer probes for what makes a man beneath the brutality and the bluster, resulting in a film that burns into the memory. Stella Papamichael (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

The Girl with a Pistol ★★★

8.00-10.00pm Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY DRAMA Director Mario Monicelli's Oscar-nominated comedy picaresque is new to Talking Pictures TV today. Monica Vitti stars as the Sicilian village girl who absconds to Britain and vows revenge on her seducer (Carlo Giuffrè) when he refuses to marry her. HORROR Adapted from Stephen King's novel, this killer-car chiller is the ultimate in auto eroticism. The idea that a 1958 Plymouth Fury can turn into a jealous mistress is a cracker and, through his seductive angles, director John Carpenter makes Christine the sassiest thing on four wheels. He also gets a likeable performance out of Keith Gordon as the geek who becomes a dude when he puts his key in the ignition. It's more of a dark comedy than a horror, and the oldies soundtrack weaves an eerie magic. DP (US 1983, violence, swearing, sex scenes)

FILM OF THE DAY

Almost Famous ★★★★★

9.00-11.30pm Sony Movies 15

COMEDY DRAMA The defining moment in this paean to rock music from former junior Rolling Stone magazine stringer turned screenwriter/director Cameron Crowe takes place on a Memphis-bound private jet in 1973. Crowe's avatar, William, played by Patrick Fugit, is a fly on the wall to the antics of fictional rock band Stillwater, whose deep-thinking guitarist Billy Crudup is about to grant an interview. When the plane jolts sideways with turbulence, endangering the jet and its passengers, Crudup whoops, "Rock 'n' Roll! I love all of you!" Drawing on his own experiences, Crowe offers a love letter to the last days of innocence before the corporations took over the music biz. His film is sincere, knowing and humorous, and also superbly cast, with Jason Lee as Stillwater's frontman, Noah Taylor as their tour manager and Kate Hudson as a self-empowered "promoter" who's clearly a groupie. Rock nerds will enjoy the period detail, and the tour-bus rendition of Elton John's Tiny Dancer is pure joy. (US 2000, swearing, nudity, drug abuse)

DID YOU KNOW?

DRAMA This adaptation of William Inge's Pulitzer Prize-winning play earned six Oscar nominations for its frank depiction (by 1950s standards) of the emotional havoc wreaked on the women of a rustic Kansas town when a sexy itinerant joins their Labour Day picnic. William Holden is the attractive cat among the pigeons, among them tomboy Susan Strasberg, spinster Rosalind Russell and beauty Kim Novak. Directed for maximum cinematic effect by Joshua Logan, this is enjoyable drama with an edge. RK (US 1955)

Hampstead ★★★

6.55-9.00pm Film4 12

COMEDY DRAMA Set in the well-to-do London district of the title, this socially conscious trifle sees weary American widow Diane Keaton put aside her financial woes to take up the cause of shack-dwelling curmudgeon Brendan Gleeson, whose home on Hampstead Heath is being threatened by developers. Loosely based on a true story, but with added romance, Hampstead knows its onions when it comes to its location, but though well cast, the film is terribly nervous about the central relationship and there's an absence of spark in the script and its overall execution. EAS (UK/Cay 2016, swearing, HD)

Mission: Impossible – Ghost Protocol ★★★★★

9.00-11.40pm E4 12

THRILLER The Incredibles director Brad Bird transfers his dazzling skills to the live-action format in his gripping rejuvenation of the spy franchise. Agent Tom Cruise and his crack team are blamed for a botched mission and officially disbanded, only to secretly regroup to stop rogue scientist Michael Nyqvist from causing nuclear armageddon. The story may be familiar, but the gadgets are more outlandish than ever and the spectacle is absolutely amazing – especially the scene in which Cruise dangles off the Burj Khalifa tower in Dubai. AJ (US 2011, violence, HD)

Bridesmaids ★★★★★

9.00-11.30pm ITV2 15

COMEDY Boasting an incredible ensemble of female comedy talent, Bridesmaids offers a hilarious romp through tribal-bridal culture. Kristen Wiig is the loser singleton asked by lifelong pal Maya Rudolph to be maid of honour at her upcoming wedding. But their friendship is torn asunder by Rudolph's new friend, icky perfectionist Rose Byrne. So Wiig musters a motley crew of bridesmaids and tries to get her best friend back. The film is produced by gross-out genius Judd Apatow (Knocked Up), but benefits from a smart script

(co-written by Wiig) and deft direction from Paul Feig. Some memorably outrageous scenes show off Wiig's lightning-quick comedy timing, while credit should also go to Chris O'Dowd as her love interest and Melissa McCarthy as the awkward but lovable oddball in the bridal party. KK (US 2011, swearing, HD)

Viral ★★★

9.00-10.45pm Horror Channel 15

HORROR Parasitic worms literally mess with people's heads in this unnerving movie from the co-directing team of Henry Joost and Ariel Schulman (Paranormal Activity 3 and 4). Sofia Black D'Elia and Analeigh Tipton play teenage sisters who battle to survive infection and quarantine in small-town America, and their abrasive relationship remains an emotional anchor at the heart of the horror – even when a ghoulish party gatecrasher brings the disease distressingly close to home. JA (US 2016, violence)

Tormented ★★★

12.20-1.45am BBC2 15

HORROR In Jon Wright's slick feature debut, a bullied schoolboy returns from the dead to take revenge on his classmates. But is the "zombie ghost" real or a figment of the guilty students' consciences? Wright offers a British slant on American high-school horrors such as Carrie and The Faculty, aided by a script from Stephen Prentice that's full of sarcastic wit and cruel humour. Alex Pettyfer (Stormbreaker) stands out among the good-looking cast that also features alumni from TV's Skins. AJ (UK 2009, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Davis v Taylor: the '85 Black Ball Final Available now

There's one simple reason why this documentary works: large swathes of it are just footage of the match, without cutting to interviews or any other gubbins. Thus we get to relive properly the unique evening when the final of the World Snooker Championship – between champion Steve Davis and underdog Dennis Taylor – went down to the last frame, which went down to the last ball. There are, however, enough reminiscences to add extra colour, with Taylor's memories naturally the most vital. Flip your glasses upside down and enjoy it all over again. JACK SEALE

A punchy film sees Suzi Perry (centre, above) spend a weekend watching the Cookstown 100 motorcycle race, run on the roads of Tyrone. Most competitors are male, but three are women: one who's taken up the sport late in life, another who travels across Europe to compete, and a third whose family are terrified as they spectate. This fully conveys how fast and dangerous the event is.

IF THE GLOVES FIT OJ: Made in America

Available now

As a whole, this series (part of the Storyville strand) isn't really about sport, since it follows former Buffalo Bills running back OJ Simpson's murder trial. On that score it's an epic piece of work: how and why Simpson was acquitted proves to be a profound tale of decay at the heart of US society. But the first of the five episodes, reviewing Simpson's football career, stands up as a thrilling sports doc about an emerging talent.

CECIL & FRANKEL

The Trainer & the Racehorse: Frankel's Legend

Available now

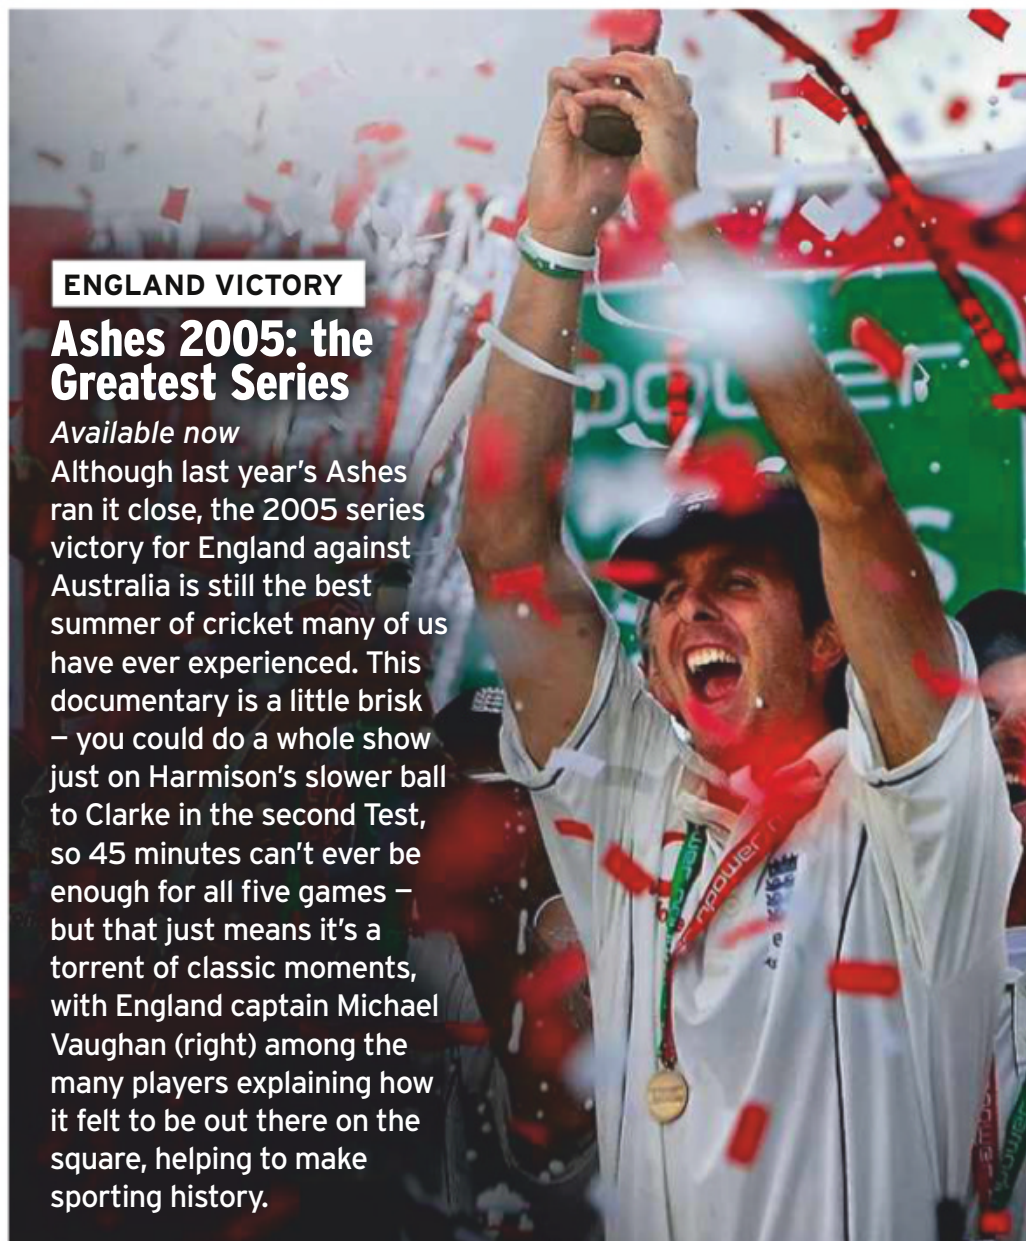

Looked at purely in terms of results, Frankel's dominance of flat racing at the start of the 2010s is one of easy excellence. But as this documentary relates, behind that was a story about trainer Henry Cecil (above) overcoming personal loss, ill health and professional setbacks to rise again and train perhaps the best horse the world has ever seen.

ENGLAND VICTORY

Ashes 2005: the Greatest Series

Available now

Although last year's Ashes ran it close, the 2005 series victory for England against Australia is still the best summer of cricket many of us have ever experienced. This documentary is a little brisk – you could do a whole show just on Harmison's slower ball to Clarke in the second Test, so 45 minutes can't ever be enough for all five games – but that just means it's a torrent of classic moments, with England captain Michael Vaughan (right) among the many players explaining how it felt to be out there on the square, helping to make sporting history.

DUBAI 2019

World Para Athletics Championships

Available now

With the Paralympics in Tokyo put back to next year and the World Championships bumped on to 2022, the next best thing is to revisit this highlights package of the 2019 Worlds in Dubai. Ed Jackson and former 800m champ Danny Crates oversee a day-by-day retrospective, with standout moments from sprinters Hannah Cockcroft (above) and Kadeena Cox, among many others. JS

SEE IT LIVE, AS IT HAPPENED

If you crave the thrill of watching actual football matches, rather than documentaries about the game, and coverage of the crowd-free Bundesliga isn't quite scratching that itch, this is your best lockdown option.

Last year saw Amazon Prime branch out into live Premier League football, buying up two entire "gameweeks" of fixtures and then showing every single match in full. You can still revisit every minute of all 20 games, with highlights including Wolves' eventful 27 December game against Manchester City, and the Merseyside derby earlier in the same month.

If football's not your bag, there's tennis, too, including the five-set thriller between Rafael Nadal and O that decided the US Open, and an ATP Tour Finals match between Novak Djokovic and Roger Federer that saw one of them put on a masterclass.

All or Nothing: All Blacks

Available now

A documentary franchise that began in 2016 by spending a season in the NFL with the Arizona Cardinals, before expanding to other teams and other sports. It was there to watch Manchester City win the 2018 Premier League, and scored a coup by tracking the New Zealand rugby union team throughout 2017 (Rieko loane takes on the South African Springboks, above). As a snapshot of elite sport, it's unparalleled.

LIFE IN THE FAST LANE

Formula 1: Drive to Survive

Available now

Even non-petrolheads might enjoy this swish documentary series, which combines race footage, cameras in the pits and post-hoc interviews with drivers and team bosses to extract every drop of drama from elite motor racing – including the crashes, the personalities of the drivers, and plenty of behind-the-scenes gossip. There are two series, covering the 2018 and 2019 F1 seasons.

BASKETBALL ICON

The Last Dance Available now

Since its launch in April, this series about the Chicago Bulls' attempt to win the 1998 NBA championship in Michael Jordan's final season has been hailed as one of the great sports documentary series. It deserves the acclaim, because it has everything: interviews with everyone, several incredible personal stories to tell and the massive trump card of behind-the-scenes footage, permitted by the Bulls at the time but somehow never seen until now. The basketball itself is exhilarating; the power struggles between Jordan (pictured) and his colleagues and management are fascinating.

THE ONLY WAY IS UP?

Sunderland 'Til I Die

Available now

Watching this docuseries is a strange experience if you're used to Amazon's All or Nothing (see above): it has the same close access to a major sporting club with the glossy efficiency of a big corporation... except the last part of the formula doesn't quite pan out. Series one (of two) sees cameras arrive in the wake of Sunderland's relegation from the Premier League, but what they capture is the opposite of a renaissance.

FIGHTING BACK Andy Murray: Resurfacing

Available now

This feature-length and, at times, punishing documentary follows Britain's greatest ever tennis player between 2017 and 2019. As Murray struggled with the hip injury that looked like it could end his career, there's high emotion as he endures rehab sessions and painful, abortive comebacks. We knew he needed determination to be a champion – here we learn just what that meant.

Netflix proved that college sports can make for tremendous factual series with its show about American football, Last Chance U. But could we really become invested in students following their dream to become champion cheerleaders? Yes, we could, because it turned out that the personal stories of individuals using a competitive discipline to help them overcome their problems were no less gripping. 'THIS STORY SPOKE TO ME'

Simon Bird's directorial debut tale of family angst is a labour of love

QUALITY TIME
Librarian Sue (Monica Dolan) and heavy-metal-loving son Daniel (Earl Cave)

TEEN COMEDY

Sky Store/iTunes/Curzon Home Cinema, from Monday 8 June

Simon Bird steps behind the camera for this look at familial angst. When taciturn teen Daniel Bagnold is forced to spend the summer with his librarian mother Sue after his father cancels his visit, Daniel sulks angrily, Sue is exasperated and their relationship is set to snap. The story can feel slight, as it never digs into Daniel's depression. But debut director Bird shows a sharp eye for cinematic compositions, putting Sue's Metallica-loving offspring at amusing odds with the serenity of suburbia. And Monica Dolan (of W1A) transforms this humdrum mum into a hero.

EMMA SIMMONDS

You made your name as a comedy actor, in The Inbetweeners and Friday Night Dinner. What drew you to make your directorial debut?

I knew I wanted to direct. And when I was scrabbling around for possible stories, I remembered this graphic novel, Days of the Bagnold Summer by Joff Winterhart, that my wife [author Lisa Owens] had bought me a few years ago as a Christmas present. This sounds very pretentious, but it spoke to me. It felt totally like the thing I wanted to make.

The story isn't your usual graphic novel. It focuses on Daniel, a suburban teenage goth. Did you go through a rebellious phase?

My rebellion didn't really stretch very far. I might have thrown down my violin bow once or twice! But also, weirdly, Daniel in the film isn't really that rebellious. He swears at his mum a bit, but in terms of what he actually does, he's quite a sweet kid.

Your wife Lisa also wrote the script. How did that come about?

I think, originally, it was the last thing that either of us wanted. We didn't even really consider it – it's the definition of nepotism! But the more I looked into it, the more Lisa kept popping into my head. There hasn't been a film I've seen in the past 12 years that we haven't watched together. We talk a lot about films and always have roughly the same taste and opinions, and it became the obvious solution.

You have two young children. Has dealing with stroppy teens been on your mind?

Oh yes. The book is great because it does make you see a parent/child relationship from both sides. Obviously that was paramount in my mind when we were making the film!

As a new director, did you take pleasure in giving orders to the actors and getting them to do embarrassing things?

Yes! Although, at the same time, I don't think I was asking anyone to strip off and shave arrows into their pubic hair, or whatever else we were asked to do on The Inbetweeners. So it was never quite on the same level. I don't think I would have relished having those conversations, to be honest.

Which do you prefer, of acting and directing?

I love them both. Acting is just really fun and there's no downside really. Directing is much more stressful and time-consuming. I'd like it to be possible in the future to continue to do both.

Will you and Lisa write together again, do you think?

This set-up didn't bring us to blows, but I can see it being problematic! On Bagnold Summer, she would have been on set more if we hadn't had kids, but we tried to build a – what do they say in The Good Wife? – Chinese wall! JAMES MOTTRAM

HILARIOUS BROMANCE
The Disaster Artist ★★★★★
Netflix, from Tuesday 9 June

An affectionate look at the making of The Room, a film so bad it became a cult. Directed by and starring James Franco as film-maker Tommy Wiseau, it co-stars Franco's brother Dave as Greg Sestero (on whose memoir the film is based), a fledgeling actor whom Wiseau whisks off to LA after the pair meet at acting class. Their budding friendship is depicted with real warmth before the production of Wiseau's pet project causes reality to bite. James Franco launches himself at the role with uncanny, often hysterical results. ES

ENDEARING BIOPIC
A Beautiful Day in the Neighborhood ★★★★★
Sky Store/DVD/Blu-ray, from Monday 8 June

Tom Hanks channels the spirit of Fred Rogers, America's most beloved children's TV host and a genuinely good man. In Marielle Heller's delightful drama, Lloyd Vogel (Matthew Rhys) is sent to interview Rogers in an effort to bring the troubled journalist back from the emotional brink. Initially resentful, Vogel is soon reaching for Rogers's help after opening up about his toxic relationship with his father. In sneakers and knitwear, Hanks brings Rogers alive with a light, careful air, only hinting at his Presbyterian background. You may actually learn a thing or two about emotional intelligence. KAREN KRIZANOVIC

SENSITIVE DRAMEDY
Dating Amber ★★★★★
Amazon Prime, from Thu 4 June

Set in Ireland in 1995, gay student Eddie (Fionn O'Shea from Normal People) wants to get through high school without being outed. He is subjected to schoolyard rumour and paternal pressures, but after learning that Amber (Lola Petticrew) is also secretly queer, the pair form a fake relationship to ride out the storm. However, maintaining the façade proves trickier than expected. Their sparring gives the film its many funny and heartfelt moments, and Sharon Horgan also shines as Eddie's perceptive mum. JOSH WINNING

WOODY ALLEN COMEDY
A Rainy Day in New York ★★★
Sky Store/iTunes, from Friday 5 June

Woody Allen returns to Manhattan for his 49th film, which stars Timothée Chalamet (above) and Elle Fanning as dating students who become embroiled in an escalating series of farcical scrapes after going to New York to interview a film director (Liev Schreiber). The two leads are charming, though their constant kvetching can feel hackneyed. Rebecca Hall and Jude Law also feature in the starry supporting cast, and their dialogue is a definite highlight. The film was originally to be released by Amazon, who then distanced themselves from Allen, but despite the controversy it works well on its own terms and for Allen fans marks a return to form. CALUM BAKER

COMEDY HORROR
The Dead Don't Die ★★★
Now TV/Sky Cinema on Demand, from Sunday 7 June

Despite its obvious affection for the quirky traits of small-town living, the latest film from Jim Jarmusch is set against a backdrop of "total planetary destruction" as polar fracking turns the Earth on its axis and somehow unleashes flesh-eating zombies. Bill Murray and Adam Driver are the cops trying to get to grips with the chaos, Tilda Swinton stands out as an unflappable martial artist/mortician, and the zombies include Carol Kane and Iggy Pop. However, the absence of scares seems odd. ES

Getting away from it all

TV can take you to wonderful places, says Alison Graham

I MET A GOOD friend in a local park recently for a socially-distanced chat on a bench. We both turned up looking as if we were en route to a coffee morning at Porton Down: masks, gloves, even our celebratory doughnuts were hermetically sealed.

Goodness, we wondered, will there ever again come a time when we don't have to gown up as if preparing for a walk-on role in The Quatermass Experiment?

Will we ever be carefree in public again? For instance, I'm a big railways fan and, not too long ago, I travelled by train a lot. But doubtless my days of tripping carelessly across the concourse at Paddington or King's Cross heading for somewhere well away from London to see people who aren't in my household are at an end.

Which is why I find The Architecture the Railways Built (Tuesday Yesterday) so lovely yet so poignant. Railway historian Tim Dunn, a delightful young man with so much enthusiasm for his subject you wish it could be turned into a flavour of ice cream and sold in cartons, visits railways across the world to look at sumptuous or quirky stations and other trackside delights.

I love the series and it has become one of my lockdown treats, though my heart hurts just a little with every episode because Tim, so untypical of many presenters who make you feel like they are doing you a favour just by turning up, doesn't have to board a train in full hazmat gear and carrying a canary. You can catch up with it on UKTV Play. It's real balm to the soul: you will be transported in so many ways and there is an essential kindness to it, too.

Dunn meets other enthusiasts and historians, who all want to share their joy. Yet there is nothing about this series that even a non-railway nut cannot love, and in the simplest and safest of ways, it gets us out of the house.

I've also made a list of stations I'd like to visit after Dunn revealed their hidden or not terribly obvious delights, such as Great Malvern station in Worcestershire, somewhere I haven't been for decades, which has the most delightful wrought iron decorative flowers and foliage. I need things like that in my life.

ON MY BUCKET LIST
The wrought iron delights of Great Malvern Station, as recommended by Tim Dunn, inset below

Welcome to Great Malvern!

I also need to look at houses other than my own, which is why the splendid A House through Time (Tuesday BBC2) is another lockdown saviour. Historian David Olusoga is in his home

'The Architecture the Railways Built is one of my lockdown treats' city of Bristol for another revealing series as he peels back the layers of an "ordinary" house (though 10 Guinea Street is actually a gorgeous Georgian pad lovingly restored by its owners, as an estate agent would say). Just for an hour we can wander up someone else's stairs and poke about in their living rooms, admiring the floor-to-ceiling windows and the cornice work.

YOU PROBABLY HAVE your own escapist treats. I loved Channel 4's Grayson's Art Club (available on All 4) even though I have no artistic ability, because other people have and it's great to see. The A Word, Peter Bowker's absolute belter of a drama (Tuesday BBC1 and available in full on iPlayer), is another trip away from the present to the days when families could gather to love, laugh and share. And it's set in the Lake District. Just breathe in, virtually, all that fresh air!

And just because I feel this wretched hot weather is mocking us all (hey, it's lovely, let's eat fish and chips by the sea... NO, YOU CAN'T!), I'm captivated by the crime drama Cardinal (Wednesday BBC2), which is set in the frigid, snowy wastes of Canada. What I wouldn't give for a good, cleansing blizzard right now.

Stay healthy, stay happy.

PICTURE PUZZLE

PICK OF THE DAY The World's Greatest Paintings 8.15pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK New series It's hard to imagine Simon Schama devoting a programme to the Mona Lisa. Come on, she's art's queen of clichés, a tourist magnet drawing crowds to grab selfies. But snobbery be damned, because Andrew Marr opens his series on great paintings by properly examining why this modest portrait – not even his favourite work by Leonardo da Vinci, he says – has become the most recognisable work of art there is.

He does a good job, too, taking us back to the “culturally swaggering” world of Renaissance Florence, where Leonardo was in his 50s by the time he set about painting the young wife of one of his father's clients. That sideways pose and direct gaze were revolutionary, we gather; the use of “sfumato” blurring around her mouth was the special effect that brought the about-to-smile half-smile to life; and it wasn't until 1911 that the painting became a global celebrity – by being stolen. DAVID BUTCHER

Euros Rewind/ITV Football Classics

1.15pm BBC1/3.10pm ITV

SPORT Can it really be 24 years since Euro 96? For football fans of a certain age, it still feels like yesterday. In a neat piece of synchronicity, BBC1 and ITV are both unspooling classic matches from the tournament today.

BBC1 kicks off its Euros Rewind strand with England v Scotland and a chance to relive that pulsating minute from Gary McAllister's penalty miss to Gazza's audacious goal.

ITV follows that with England v Holland, as the hosts blew away the Dutch in a blistering 11-minute spell of football. There are more Euro 96 memories on BBC1 tomorrow, and all 31 matches from the tournament are streaming in full on the ITV Hub.

CHRIS HUGHES

The Masked Singer US

4.40pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT The Masked Singer became a minor phenomenon earlier this year, and although we'll have to wait a while for series two, ITV is airing this substitute: season two of the US version of the show.

Some of the panel will be recognisable: The X Factor's Nicole Scherzinger, Ken Jeong (who was a judge on the UK version) alongside Blurred Lines singer Robin Thicke and, very much a US personality, Jenny McCarthy. Admittedly, many of the secret singers are only really famous for a US audience – so there will be a lot of “who?”s when the flamingo, panda and egg masks come off – but even so, it's enjoyable both for the daft spectacle and the amazing vocals. FRANCES TAYLOR

Pointless Celebrities

7.30pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT “We agreed that we'd go hard or go home,” says one of the celebrities taking part in this authors special as she and her teammate get impressively low scores for their obscure answers in the first round. Among the players are Adam Kay, Nick Sharratt, Juno Dawson and Martina Cole (who makes Alexander Armstrong and Richard Osman roar with laughter when she unexpectedly goes straight from chatting about her latest book to suddenly giving her first answer).

The tabloid headlines describing Bond films are incredibly tough to decipher and there's an unexpected twist when they all try to work out the names of capital cities hidden in other words. JANE RACKHAM

Alan Carr's Epic Game Show

7.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT The Price Is Right has had more glittery comebacks over the years than Cher, but it's the 1980s incarnation that lingers longest in the memory. Who can forget Leslie Crowther's “Come on down!” yell and the contestants' frenzied Thatcherite desire to acquire stuff – any kind of stuff, just so long as there was lots of it? Such a naked display of greed is seen, by modern eyes, as being crass. So host Alan Carr wisely opts for a more ironic air in this tacktastic revival.

The reliably noisy studio audience also fully embrace the naffness – at one point, they even “ooh” and “ahh” over a bag of pasta and a bottle of mouthwash. DAVID BROWN

PILOTS DAY ON SONY CHANNEL

Rewind to simpler times today when Sony Channel shows the pilot episodes from the series of yesteryear. Here's the line-up:

Due South (2pm) So popular was the pairing of Canadian Mountie Benton Fraser and Chicago cop Ray Vecchio in the UK that the BBC co-funded a third series.

TJ Hooker (5.30pm) William Shatner's bid to move on from Star Trek saw him don a police uniform. Starfleet colleague Leonard Nimoy was in an early episode. Starsky and Hutch (7pm) The pilot marks just one of three occasions when Starsky wore his chunky white Mexican sweater. M*A*S*H (8.30pm) Did you know that the series first aired in the UK without a laugh track? When the BBC accidentally left the canned laughter switched on for one story, viewers complained. DAVID BROWN

Dad's Army

7.45pm BBC2

SITCOM It's teatime in the Pike household, and young Frank joins mum and Sergeant Wilson after a day-long medical. Despite his croup, wonky ankles and a touch of "verdigris" if he stands on anything, "They passed me fit. I'm A1!"

Before he goes on active service – and before his celebratory fish-and-chip-and-fizzy-pop supper, Pike and Mainwaring give blood in the church hall. If only the captain hadn't boasted that his platoon would rustle up 100 pints to beat the total offered by the despised Hodges...

It's a delightful episode: a tidily constructed story, spicy glimpses of home life and a soupçon of pathos. A marvellous pun from Wilson, too.

MARK BRAXTON

Michael McIntyre's Big Laughs

8.15pm BBC1

COMEDY New series The perfect tonic for the next four Saturdays, a trot through highlights from McIntyre's Big Show, with a smattering of new links from the host. It's all great stuff, including my favourite ever Midnight Game Show, when an initially appalled and affronted but very game Judge Rinder awoke to oversee the burglary trial of Sooty. Sweep was, of course, defence counsel.

There's plenty of McIntyre stand-up, including a long, affectionate monologue about the constant battles of parenting kids, including coming up with a costume when one of the brood tells him as they go to school that "it's Roman Day today".

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Ronnie Wood: Somebody Up There Likes Me

9.00pm Sky Arts

DOCUMENTARY Much more than a portrait of an old rocker, Mike Figgis's absorbing and cinematic doc touches on many things, including Wood's addictions and art as well as his music. There are notable gaps – no mention of Wood's previous marriages – but it's a delight to hear his rock peers (including Mick Jagger, Rod Stewart and Keith Richards, who says, "He's very much like me. Got a great immune system!") talking freely about his turbulent life (at least as much as they can remember).

Lingering sequences of Wood drawing or painting make an appropriately gentle contrast with the interviews and evocative performance footage from his early years. JR

Peter Crouch adds Maya Jama and Alex Horne to his team sheet

Peter Crouch: Save Our Summer

ENTERTAINMENT New series
Asking anyone to save this summer is a tall order – but the BBC is pinning its hopes on Peter Crouch. Yes, England striker turned podcaster Crouch is here to save our collective summers. Admittedly, when it was first commissioned, the premise was a live "post-match festival" that would review the Euro 2020 finals with a humorous twist. But given that the tournament has been postponed, this has morphed into a "one-stop shop of summery entertainment" with Crouchy being joined by former Radio 1 DJ Maya Jama and Taskmaster's Alex Horne.

The trio will be bringing celebrity guests, live music, comedy and sport together in a show that also rather ominously threatens "interactive audience fun" and, on the face of it, feels like a souped-up Saturday-night incarnation of The One Show. FT

GRANDSTAND FINISH
Villanelle (Jodie Comer) has an appointment at the Royal Albert Hall

PICK OF THE DAY Killing Eve 9.15pm BBC1

DRAMA What is going on in Villanelle's head? Having said she doesn't want to be an assassin any longer, she meets Carolyn Martens in the Royal Albert Hall (where else?) to see if she can work for MI6. "And what is it you want?" asks Carolyn incredulously. "To know what the canteen is like," comes the ludicrous answer. Even Villanelle's trademark outrageous outfits can't swing this job interview.

As the final episode of this series wends its way to its climax (a much softer, touching scene than the last one, when Villanelle shot Eve), there's a confusion of loose ends, some of which are tied up and some of which are left dangling. But there are a couple of don't-miss moments, including one where the steely Carolyn calmly confronts several key players over the truth behind her son's death before surprising them – and us – with her actions.

While the script in this series hasn't had quite the verve and style of Phoebe Waller-Bridge's, I doubt that we've seen the last of Villanelle and Eve.

JANE RACKHAM

World Cup Final '66:
England v West Germany

1.30pm C4

SPORT England won the World Cup on 30 July 1966. That's FIFTY-FOUR years ago. Yet we still go on about it as if it happened only yesterday. Come on, how many people have been born and grown up since then? Even those of us who remember England's 4-2 victory over West Germany are old by now.

Clearly the English appetite for this famous victory will never fade, so Channel 4 is putting this hunger to good use by re-running, for the National Emergencies Trust's Coronavirus Appeal, the whole thing, with some colour footage.

Viewers will be in good company, with the hat-trick-scoring Sir Geoff Hurst and other star guests. Gabby Logan hosts. ALISON GRAHAM

Porridge: Inside Out

7.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY In the first of a 2014 three-part series, creators Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais reveal the unlikely origins of, and initial fears for, one of our finest ever sitcoms. One fab sequence sees the pair dissect their favourite scene, chuckling at every familiar line.

Eric Idle points out the roundedness of HM Prison Slade's wiliest character (Fletch), and Kate Beckinsale, daughter of Richard (Godber), reminds us that the series really clicked when it became a two-hander. It's a treat for devotees of the comedy where not a word was wasted. David "Old Man Blanco" Jason narrates. MARK BRAXTON

Whale Wars: Captain
Watson's Story

8.00pm Discovery

DOCUMENTARY Paul Watson, head of the Sea Shepherd marine conservation group, believes in direct action. He left Greenpeace (he was a founder member) after deciding it was too passive and he's spent the decades since chasing and disrupting whalers, seal-clubbers and shark-fishers. Everything his organisation becomes involved in, Watson films (he even had his own TV show, Whale Wars) and he is very media savvy. Which means there is a lot of extraordinary, often harrowing footage, including the unspeakable shark fin trade in full cry as crews chop the fins from sharks before throwing the creatures back into the water, to die slowly. AG

IOAN GRUFFUDD'S TVCV

Welsh-born Gruffudd has been starring as medical professionals both here in the UK and in Australia. He was surgeon Andrew Earlam in ITV's Liar and now plays a forensic pathologist in Harrow, which is on Drama tonight at 9.20pm.

The 46-year-old first shot to fame back in 1998 as CS Forester's hero Hornblower. But he got his first taste of period drama two years before that when he featured in a one-off revival of Poldark, where he portrayed the titular character's son Jeremy.

Since that time, Gruffudd has appeared in more contemporary fare on TV (in the Peter Kosminsky-directed Warriors and an adaptation of the Tony Parsons novel Man and Boy) and on to the big screen in two Fantastic Four adventures and as Tony Blair in biopic W. DAVID BROWN

Romeo and Juliet: Royal Shakespeare Company

9.00pm BBC4

ARTS An abstract metal set, black-and-grey clothing, gender-playful casting: this is the sort of Shakespeare production that won't please everyone but will delight some (possibly teenage and 20-something) viewers.

It's a recording of the 2018 RSC production directed by Erica Whyman, which one reviewer praised as "the most fleet-footed account of Romeo and Juliet since West Side Story".

A young, diverse cast rattles through the story, with Karen Fishwick as a Scottish-accented Juliet (perched atop a metal cube for the balcony scene), Bally Gill as impetuous Romeo, and Mercutio played as a cockney bruiser by crop-haired Charlotte Josephine. DAVID BUTCHER

Murder in the Outback

9.15pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series If you are a devotee of lip-smacking true crime documentaries with ropery dramatisations and doomy music, then this could be for you.

Murder in the Outback is hardly a sober examination of the mystery surrounding British backpacker Peter Falconio, who vanished in the Northern Territory of Australia after he and his girlfriend Joanne Lees were held at gunpoint in 2001. Falconio was shot, though his body was never found, and Lees escaped abduction when she was rescued by a lorry driver.

You might take it more seriously if the investigators weren't a convicted cocaine-smuggling ex-solicitor and his friend, who worked in advertising.

Runs nightly until Wednesday. AG

Dave

10.00pm, 10.30pm BBC2

SITCOM A second series of Dave has been given the go-ahead in the US. I'd love to see how our neurotic, self-involved wannabe rapper fares in quarantine, especially if he's trapped in a house with Mike, his defiantly square friend-turned-manager.

In the first of tonight's episodes Mike is urging Dave to sign with a record company offering a six-figure deal. The trouble is, Dave is away with his long-suffering girlfriend Ally, at her awful sister's wedding. Standard romcom moves are given a round thumping there, before the finale opens with a long, disturbing sequence that doesn't so much push the taste envelope as shred it entirely. Dave's new song may be a step too far for his record company. DAVID BUTCHER

Alan Shearer's Euro 96

10.30pm BBC1 (11.30pm N Ireland)

SPORT By now, football fans across England and Wales – and possibly Northern Ireland and Scotland, too – should have been pinning up their Euro 2020 wallcharts and preparing for the big kick-off on Friday.

With the tournament deferred for 12 months, the BBC are dusting off some vintage Euros memories. In a programme first broadcast in 2016, Alan Shearer reunites with Messrs Venables, Gascoigne, Baddiel and Skinner to reflect on Euro 96, from the dentist's chair and Three Lions to Gazza's goal and Gareth Southgate's heartbreak.

Earlier on BBC1, Euros Rewind (1.50pm) showcases Wales's opening encounter of Euro 2016 against Slovakia. Despite a magical strike from Gareth Bale, the hero turned out to be Hal Robson-Kanu, who didn't even have a club at the time, but did have a chant to the tune of Salt-N-Pepa's Push It. Little did he know things were about to get even better... CHRIS HUGHES

WHAT'S THE SCORE?
Paul Gascoigne is on song for England in June 1996

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Definitely Dusty
iPlayer (expires today)

This profile of Dusty Springfield is 20 years old, but is as insightful as it was in 2000, the year after the singer's death. In it, the expected roster of admiring fellow musicians – Neil Tennant, Elton John, Lulu – is joined by associates and acquaintances who had kept their counsel while Springfield was alive. We see how Dusty was never sure of her place on the scene, yet was a single-minded artiste who was much more in charge of her own sound and success than many might have assumed.

FRANK AND FEARLESS
Michaela Coel plays fast-rising London writer Arabella

PICK OF THE DAY I May Destroy You 10.45pm BBC1 (11.15pm N Ireland, Wales)

DRAMA OF THE WEEK New series Michaela Coel writes and plays the lead in a swirling 12-part drama about sexual consent, partly based on her own experience. In the opening half-hour she does a bravura job of setting the scene – the millennial landscape her heroine inhabits of dating and partying, friends and boyfriends, work and intoxicated play.

Coel plays Arabella, a hot young writer hoping to follow up her early success, and on a deadline to deliver a draft of her new book. But Arabella is also distractible, and her life throbs with distractions. In one scene, she tries to blitz the work she has promised to deliver the next morning, but it's not going very well, so she lights another joint and simply googles "how to write quickly".

But her heart isn't in it, and before long Arabella is tempted out by her rich, fun-loving friend Simon for a few drinks in Hackney, then a few more... Part two is tomorrow. DAVID BUTCHER

Saving Our Nurses

DAYTIME CHOICE New series

Even before the current health crisis, more than one third of nurses were so unhappy at work they planned to leave the NHS. But Queen's Hospital, Romford, has devised a mentoring scheme to support new nurses in the hope they'll stay in the profession.

In what feels like a realistic snapshot of our hospitals, we meet newly qualified Lauren, who is passionate about working in the emergency department but struggles with the stress because, as her experienced mentor Taz explains, "A&E has four or five times the number of attendances that we should see coming through the doors. We're bursting at the seams." Continues daily. JANE RACKHAM

Devon and Cornwall

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The lure of the West Country is irresistible, as this second series of vignettes shows. Tonight's edition follows Newquay fisherman Phil Trebilcock, who's been going out to sea for 40 years and now seeks lobster, which he thinks is a tad overrated, and crab, which he prefers. On the edge of Exmoor, relatively new farmers Rob and Sarah Taylor believe "Devon is heaven" as they track down native ponies for the show season.

Near Mylor Harbour, Mark Milburn heads out in search of shipwrecks, and on remote Lundy Island warden Dean Jones keeps a watchful eye on puffins and kittiwakes. If it's bugging you who the narrator is, it's John Nettles. PATRICK MULKERN

Sitting in Limbo

8.30pm BBC1

DRAMA After spending almost all of his life in the UK, having arrived here from Jamaica aged eight with his mum in 1965, Anthony Bryan's life turns to dust. This powerful drama, based on a true story, stars Patrick Robinson as Anthony, a hard-working builder with a stable family and a good home, who is suddenly accused of being here illegally.

He's a victim of the Government's "hostile environment" policy. Out of the blue, he's sacked and told he's unable to access the NHS or any benefits.

But Anthony's efforts to discover why bring him hard up against a granite bulwark of officialdom. And then, there's an early-morning knock on his front door... ALISON GRAHAM

Grow Your Own at Home with Alan Titchmarsh

8.30pm ITV (not Wales)

GARDENING After weeks of Covid-19-related programmes and news, this is a most welcome oasis of calm and inspiration. Whether or not you're interested in growing fruit and veg – and even if you haven't got so much as a window box – there's something comforting about watching Alan Titchmarsh and his gardening pals chatting away about their plants and horticultural plans.

Tonight he creates a lettuce patch, while Katie Rushworth constructs a vertical garden and Frances Tophill introduces us to flowers with pest-fighting superpowers to plant next to our veg. JR

By this stage, it had been assumed that Emmerdale (7pm ITV) would be off air, with pre-lockdown episodes having run dry. But the soap has now begun a return to filming at its studios in Leeds, the result being that new episodes will continue to air. Due to social distancing and potential health implications, only two characters will feature at a time – it's not quite Talking Heads with Sam Dingle (James Hooton, right, with Karen Blick as Lydia) rather than Patricia Routledge, but you get the idea. And let's hope that ITV announces that it will soon do something similar with Corrie. Over on EastEnders (8pm BBC1), Ian arranges a memorial for Dennis, only to get overcome with emotion when he starts to make his speech. Little does Sharon know that those tears are due partly to guilt rather than grief. Thankfully, Phil steps in and says some words of his own. Don't be expecting a "stop all the clocks" Four Weddings and a Funeral moment, though. DAVID BROWN

Inside Monaco: Playground of the Rich

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY New series One of the oddest nights of my life was spent in a huge venue in Monte Carlo at a reception thrown by Prince Albert, where Cher belted out If I Could Turn Back Time about 12 feet from my table.

Film-maker Michael Waldman manages to capture at least a flavour of the pointless excess of a place where no one pays tax and where people think little of spending 28,000 euros on a bottle of champagne.

He's there as a guest of Prince Albert, who is filmed signing documents in his office and then passing them to his assistant. At a big do, guests are given an allotted 15 seconds to shake the hands of the Prince and his wife, Charlene. AG

Ocean Autopsy: the Secret Story of Our Seas

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY A thorough, pitiless documentary gives the North Sea a health check as a way to illustrate the state of the world's oceans.

If you were already worried about plastic debris, you'll be more worried about microplastics – or worse, nanoplastics. Then there's the PCB problem – industrial chemicals banned decades ago but still turning up in dead killer whales.

And let's not forget acidification, global heating or pharmaceutical drugs. One of the most shocking bits of data involves the amounts of one anti-diabetes drug flowing down the Thames. DAVID BUTCHER

Comedians: Home Alone

10.00pm BBC2 (10.30pm N Ireland)

COMEDY Tonight's short and sweet pick 'n' mix has an animal theme going on, at least in part. Sara Pascoe shows some of the problems of living with a celebrity pet (Mousethedog, with 14.4k Instagram followers), Bob Mortimer gives us more Cat Names ("Len Chestweazles...") and Adam Buxton gives his hilarious, dirty-dog take on The Room Where It Happens from the musical Hamilton.

Sports fan Tony Way makes a virtue of lockdown by inventing a Front Door League: "We had Amazon versus Deliveroo and it was a tight match, I can tell you." There's Vic Reeves as Graham Norton (no prosthetics, just cardboard boxes). And with Reginald D Hunter and Matt Berry, it's another little gem. MARK BRAXTON

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Behind the Filter

BBC3 (from 6am)

Phoebe Walsh (above centre) makes a promising sitcom debut with a 15-minute pilot about Ruby, who sees herself as an influencer online but is held back by the fact that she's a clumsy loser. Can she avoid making a fool of herself as she welcomes two much cooler peers (Patricia Allison and Edward Bluemel, who both appeared in Netflix's Sex Education) to her parents' house to record a podcast? And can she get herself invited to an event that's meant to be for queer women of colour? No, and no.

KIDS' CHOICE

Do Try This at Home with Chris and Xand

9.05am CBBC, iPlayer

The van Tulleken twins, usually hosts of the excellent Operation Ouch, return with a domesticated new series. In their kitchen, they explore a different part of the body in each episode, starting here with bones. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Hannibal

10.55pm Channel 5

Anthony Hopkins returns as cannibal serial killer Hannibal Lecter in director Ridley Scott's gory sequel to The Silence of the Lambs, with Julianne Moore taking over from Jodie Foster as FBI agent Clarice Starling. See page 29

SMOOTH OPERATOR
Nigel Havers presents a new series from the makers of The Repair Shop

The Bidding Room

ENTERTAINMENT New series

Combining the bidding-room tensions of Four Rooms with Antiques Roadshow's personal stories, this daily series from the makers of The Repair Shop proved incredibly popular when a version was shown in Germany.

Unusual treasures – in today's first show there's a 1930s hair dryer, Edwardian scientific scales, a set of tin drawers and a battered teddy – are valued by auctioneer Simon Bower, who also advises the owners on what points to emphasise to get the best price. Object and owner then face five dealers who, after some friendly banter and general enquiries, bid against each other to buy the item. Or not.

The fun is guessing how much they'll pay for something. A tip: they're not as tough as the Four Rooms crowd and often pay more than the auctioneer's estimate. Presenter Nigel Havers adds a touch of class. JR

Joe (Max Vento) comes to the rescue as the series ends

Bake Off: the Professionals

8.00pm C4

FOOD Never has Benoit Blin's congratulatory "Boom!" been more apt as this week's chocolate showpiece must incorporate fireworks as well as a moving part. The theatricality of all the creations makes everyone smile (especially one that collapses as the sparklers fizzle out). But there are also tears from one of the patissiers following the judges' comments.

First, though, the remaining four teams have a secret recipe challenge, which (don't tell anyone) is to create a sharing dessert using chocolate and matcha tea. Sadly, Benoit and Cherish Finden seem underwhelmed. Boy, are these two difficult to please. JANE RACKHAM

The Architecture the Railways Built

8.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY This week's boyhood-dream-realised moment for irrepressible railway historian Tim Dunn is a visit to the enormous Severn Bridge Junction signal box at Shrewsbury Station. "Can we go inside...? Oh brilliant!" he beams at the railway employee who'll show him around and you just want to give him a lollipop. He even gets to pull a lever: "I've just set a signal."

There's also a sentimental journey on the Snowdon mountain railway, a favourite of Tim's late grandfather, and a visit to its stunning summit café and station. Its architect comes along, too, and is thrilled when, for pretty much the first time, he sees it when it isn't shrouded in clouds. AG See p39

A House through Time

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY As this fascinating series relies almost entirely on historian David Olusoga reading the contents of key social documents to camera, there's clearly a need to keep things a bit lively. After all, he can't sit in libraries or in the front room of 10 Guinea Street, Bristol, all the time. But it does lead to some incongruities. In this episode, to illustrate a sad tale of the perils of passing tuberculosis in the 19th century through dairy products, the elegant Olusoga is in a milking shed and later in a field of mooing cows.

In another revealing and poignant episode, he also meets the redoubtable 91-year-old Jean, who was actually born in number 10. AG

PICK OF THE DAY The A Word 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Peter Bowker's joyful, life-affirming series about the small madneses of a chaotic, happy family life ends with relationships ebbing and flowing.

Nice Ben thinks he and Alison "need to find somewhere quiet to talk" (oh dear), while nervous, anxious Sarah bakes Paul a moving-in cake with experimental flour because there are things, too, that she needs to say. Which she does using a tortuous slow-cooker analogy.

It's simply a delightful, grown-up hour full of hope, kindness and optimism, and a tiny bit of sadness, too. But no one dwells, there is so much to look forward to, such as Rebecca's imminent baby.

Irrepressible Maurice, meanwhile, decides his girlfriend Louise is lonely after Ralph moves out to live with his wife Katie, and Joe comes to the rescue in an emergency. The whole series is available on iPlayer and I, for one, will be watching again, all in one go.

ALISON GRAHAM

Jac Naylor in Holby City (8pm BBC1) is sending out mixed signals where Kian Madani is concerned. One moment she's calling him "Canada's most annoying export since Justin Bieber", the next her eyes are out on stalks at the sight of him stripping out of his scrubs. And yes, we get another one of those Let's All Objectify Kian moments, a cringey aspect to the show that tipped over into parody months ago when Dr Madani went butt-naked on a mountain top. There's keen observation going on elsewhere as well, though of a very different nature. Ric is watching over Dr Guy Self (never has a surname felt so appropriate, though it should really be the double-barrelled Dr Guy Self-Centred). And Sacha wants his colleagues to ensure that a fragile Essie is coping. He's referring to her treatment for cancer, but I'm more worried about the voiceover narration she provides at the start of the episode. What programme does Essie think she's on? Grey's Anatomy? DAVID BROWN

Deep Ocean: Giants of the Antarctic Deep

9.00pm BBC4

NATURE Here be monsters. It's long been known that the dark, cold waters of the oceans around the Antarctic are home to oversized versions of creatures found elsewhere – colossal squid weighing half a ton, jellyfish with arms ten metres long, starfish the size of a 12in pizza. Why this should be isn't fully understood, but now a team of marine biologists are taking submersibles, and hi-tech cameras, up to 1,000m below the surface to learn more about its supersized denizens.

The first views of the ocean floor are astonishing – like a garden designed by Hieronymus Bosch. Followed at 9.50pm by a weird and wonderful 2018 documentary about underwater bioluminescence. GILL CRAWFORD

Ben Fogle: New Lives in the Wild

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY A life-threatening parachuting accident was the catalyst that persuaded Jim Alston to pursue his "Robinson Crusoe" dream, while his partner Kim Nguyen also had a near-death experience in a horrific car crash.

In 2017, Ben Fogle went to visit the pair on the aptly named Wilderness Island off Australia's north-western cape, where he got a lesson in the art of mud-crabbing and the necessity for fresh water (which the island was without).

Ben now returns to find Kim and Jim have now built an eco-resort and gained an extended family. "This island has served as therapy for both of them," he concludes. JR

I May Destroy You

10.45pm BBC1 (11.45pm N Ireland)

DRAMA As Michaela Coel's bruised Arabella takes stock of her night out, there are troubling blanks in her memory – in fact, it's mostly blank. "You were pretty waved," her friend Terry (Weruche Opia) tells her. But why is Arabella's head grazed and her phone smashed? She has fragments of memories of being at a cashpoint, barely able to stand, of being in a toilet cubicle with a man blocking the door...

Coel's script deftly sketches out the confusion, and the sense of everyday, messy life undermined by something underneath that feels very wrong. It doesn't help that her banker friend Simon (Aml Ameen) is being evasive about how the evening ended. Did he abandon her or take her home?

DAVID BUTCHER

Das Boot

9.00pm, 10.10pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA If Das Boot crept under the sonar on its UK launch last year, it was still widely applauded, hence series two. One of Germany's most expensive TV shows, it drops us onto the pivot of the Second World War, 1942, and throws us a new character. U-boat ace Johannes von Reinhardt (Clemens Schick) performs a sea manoeuvre that combines triumph and tragedy in an instant. It's a heart-stopping sequence that underscores the series' agenda not to paint with black or white – only shades in between.

Then it's back to La Rochelle, where our mouse-that-roared, Simone, continues to lead a knife-edge existence (an interpreter for the Germans while aiding the Resistance) that is seriously imperilled now. A catch-up with the story's American dimension ties everything together, and sets us on our way again.

The period staging convinces, the interplay is tense... and we're heading into choppy waters. MARK BRAXTON

The Ladybird Books Story

iPlayer (expires today)

This 2013 Timeshift documentary is an utterly charming waft of nostalgia, particularly if you grew up between the 1950s and the 70s and used Ladybird books as your way to learn about the wider world. Fans both ordinary and renowned, the latter including Chris Packham and Andrew Motion, rejoice as they remember those neat, nicely illustrated little hardbacks, issued in what feels now like a simpler, friendlier time.

KIDS' CHOICE

Kiri and Lou

9.10am CBeebies, iPlayer

This animated musical comedy from New Zealand, which debuted in April, returned yesterday with a batch of new episodes. Behind the usual cartoon fun is a heartfelt effort to help small viewers develop emotional intelligence by teaching them about their own feelings and those of others. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Man on Wire

9.00pm Sky Documentaries

Made in 2017, this is the gripping account (and dramatic reconstruction) of daredevil Philippe Petit's attempt in 1974 to walk a tightrope between the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in New York.

9.00 A House through Time
RT 3/4 Series 3. Historian David Olusoga traces the continuing fortunes of the inhabitants of 10 Guinea Street near Bristol's docks. This chapter opens in the 1880s with the arrival of Owen and Louisa Pow. After the tragic death of their young daughter from tubercular meningitis, Owen opens a milk tavern in response to the Temperance Movement but ends up in court for watering down his produce. A large family buys the property in the late 1880s but identifying the next tenants requires detective work and leads to an elderly herbalist in a neighbouring house with a clandestine business. Thereafter a large close-knit family moves in for several decades and a 91-year-old living relative reminisces about her three aunts. Looking into their records, David charts their remarkable experiences during the First World War. See page 70.

COLD COMFORT
Troubled cop John Cardinal (Billy Campbell)

PICK OF THE DAY Cardinal 9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC2

DRAMA Grizzled, handsome, tormented detective John Cardinal (Billy Campbell) turns up out of the blue at the home of his lovely partner Lise Delorme (Karine Vanasse). He's carrying case files and a takeaway meal. What could it mean?

Though I've never before detected any hints of romantic tension between the two, this last-ever series is dropping heavy hints that there's something in the air. After all, he's a tragic widower and she's broken up with a long-term boyfriend and is about to transfer to another police force.

But as ever, with even putative romance between two misfit cops, crime gets in the way, in this case a killer who is picking off victims not because of who they are, but because of who they are related to.

It's a satisfyingly tangled case, shot in the gorgeous, icy wilds of northern Ontario in Canada, where the blood shows up oh-so well on the snow.

ALISON GRAHAM

Bradley Walsh & Son: Breaking Dad

8.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY The joy of these two series was the enviably loving relationship between Bradley Walsh and his son Barney, so if you didn't see them first time, this condensed version is a great introduction to the pair.

Starting in LA, where Bradley frets about manoeuvring their 36-foot long motorhome ("It's like driving a block of flats!" he gasps), they make their way to New Orleans doing crazy stuff like sky diving, riding motorbikes down Route 66 and learning to be cowboys. Despite moaning constantly, Walsh Snr gives everything a go, making son Barney very proud and us laugh – a lot. They're good fun. JANE RACKHAM

Mystery of the Ice Age Giants

8.00pm Smithsonian

DOCUMENTARY "Man or climate?" asks the voiceover, posing the key question here: was it human hunters or a warming planet that caused the extinction of animals such as woolly mammoths? The other key question in this kind of documentary is how good are the digitally generated creatures?

Well, they're good. Mammoth fur wafts believably in the breeze as the CGI sequences do just enough to help us picture a world where vast steppes replaced forests – "a cold, worldwide Serengeti". Meanwhile, scientists search for fossilised bones and teeth in Canada – and find a handsome tusk just lying around on a riverbank. DAVID BUTCHER

The Great British Sewing Bee

9.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT We've all learnt over the weeks that the choice of fabric is really important. Well, apart from one sewer who keeps picking unusual cloth, despite the judges' frequent criticisms. It's crucial this time because, for World Week, the challenges are to make a Filipino terno blouse with statement butterfly sleeves (think Imelda Marcos) and a flamenco skirt.

Joe Lycett makes some painful jokes while Patrick Grant has a smashing time with a Provençal tablecloth for the transformation challenge. I've got my eye on a potential winner, although they don't do well in the made-to-measure round, so I may be wrong. JR

Africa's Wild Horizons

9.00pm Sky Nature

NATURE If you saw Levison Wood's recent Channel 4 series, it gave an immersive impression of walking through Botswana's Okavango Delta. This is a straight-ahead nature programme on the same area, with a pleasant parade of local species.

You don't get thrilling hunt sequences in this level of wildlife doc but what we do see is lovely, like the pied kingfisher – the largest bird able to hover in one place. Or the martial eagle, which we're told has vision that can spot a squirrel six kilometres away (how do they know?).

Among the other species on parade are elephants – variously described as "noble pachyderms", "gentle-natured giants" and "big-eared bathers". DAVID BUTCHER

Yasmeen (Shelley King) is the latest in a long line of Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) heroines to have spent time behind bars for a crime they didn't commit. But tonight, we get a glimmer of hope as Yasmeen (right) enters a not-guilty plea.

And back on the Street, Sally (Sally Dynevor) is increasingly convinced that Geoff's story doesn't stack up. With Sally herself no stranger to a prison tabard, she should be championing her incarcerated neighbour to anyone who'll listen. I like to think that there's a wall of a cell at the nick graffitied with the names of all the wrongly imprisoned Weatherfield women – "Deirdre was here. And Fiz. And Gail. And Anna. And Sally. And Yasmeen..."

It's a Cain and Aaron two-hander on Emmerdale (7pm ITV), something I imagine won't require much in the way of dialogue. In fact, it'll probably just be half an hour of glowering (Cain) and crying (Aaron), punctuated by the sound of cans being opened.

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Operation Mincemeat

iPlayer (expires today)

From 2010, here's a typically effervescent Ben McIntyre documentary about wartime cunning and cheek. It's 1943, and the Allies want to invade Sicily, but that's exactly what the Nazis are expecting. Cue an outrageous con, based on an idea by future James Bond creator Ian Fleming and starting with a corpse floating off the Spanish coast. It's a tale packed with characters who saw the war as a grand adventure, but were brilliant enough to have fun and win.

FILM OF THE DAY

McMillions

9pm, 10.05pm Sky Documentaries

DOCUMENTARY You'll recall that the FBI's investigation into the McDonald's Monopoly scam began with a tip-off on a Post-it note. As we reach the conclusion of the story, there are still two big questions that need resolving: how did Jerome Jacobson, the mythical "Uncle Jerry" behind the scheme, actually get hold of those winning game pieces? And who tipped off the FBI? You might think you know both answers, but you're guaranteed to be off the mark on at least one.

Before everything's resolved, we get the FBI's big day, when they gleefully pick up all the major players in the scheme – and there are quite a few. But a casual mistake almost derails the entire investigation.

GILL CRAWFORD

We Hunt Together

10.00pm Alibi

DRAMA Gaby Hull's appealingly strange murder serial ends tonight, and we still don't feel sure about beautiful, murderous Freddy (Hermione Corfield). Is she a Villanelle-style killer, charming but lethal, or a traumatised sex worker looking for redemption? Is she using former child-soldier Baba (Dipo Ola), or does she love him? And how many slightly over-heated dialogue scenes will we need to sit through to get to the answers?

As our romantic serial killers head for Freddy's old boarding school for a reunion with her creepy teacher (Kris Marshall), the excellent cop partners (Babou Ceesay and Eve Myles) are on their tail. Let's hope it's not their last case – this has legs. DAVID BUTCHER

Staged

10.45pm, 11.00pm BBC1 (11.15pm, 11.30pm N Ireland)

COMEDY Good Omens pals David Tennant and Michael Sheen play versions of themselves in a series of quick-hit, 15-minute episodes, filmed in lockdown.

Staged owes something to The Trip, though no one goes anywhere, but it's deliciously funny in its own right. A needy, anxious director wants the two actors to rehearse, for three hours a day on Zoom, Pirandello's Six Characters in Search of an Author.

Tennant is unsure, but promises to broach the subject with a slightly deranged Sheen, who thinks birds are about to take over the world.

It's a hilarious potter around the insecurities of the acting profession, and the leads are terrific. AG

ON THE CASE

Ashley Jensen as crime-solving Agatha Raisin

Agatha Raisin

9.00pm, 10.05pm Sky 1

COMEDY There's a moment in this new mystery when Agatha Raisin references Scooby-Doo. It's perhaps unwise to invite comparisons, when this whole thing is basically a slightly more grown-up version of the Hanna-Barbera cartoon. There's a haunted house, a cloaked figure and swirling smoke, and a tendency on the part of Agatha (Ashley Jensen) and her crime-solvers to split up and look for clues. Throw in a talking Great Dane and you'd have the full package.

So, yes, it's really all too ridiculous to be taken seriously and makes Shakespeare & Hathaway look po-faced. But the cast is good value, especially Jason Merrells as foppish Sir Charles Fraith. And it's hard to hear characters delivering lines about such things as "the Battle of Titley's Knob" or "Operation Back Passage" without smiling, particularly if you're after a kind of Carry On Crime Drama.

9.00 The Great British Sewing Bee RT 8/10 Series 6. As the quarter-final begins, the five sewers must follow a pattern that they've never encountered before as they are asked to make a Filipino terno blouse. Delicate in appearance but deceptively robust, the garment requires them to work with tricky fabrics to create the distinctive voluminous butterfly sleeves and intricate covered buttons. The sewers must then transform distinctive bold-print Provençal tablecloths into brand-new imaginative outfits, before creating perfect figure-hugging flamenco skirts for their models. These must come complete with eye-catching ruffles – which leaves the sewers having to insert yards of fabric into their skirts against the clock. Joe Lycett presents. See p80. Director: Justin Lennox-Bradley; Exec producer: Sara Ramsden (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Murder in the Outback: the Falconio and Lees Mystery

4/4. There was very little physical evidence at the crime scene of the Peter Falconio murder – no body, no gunshot residue, no bone fragments, and only a small pool of Falconio's blood. This concluding episode of the investigation shows how DNA found on Joanne Lees's shirt and the couple's camper van were decisive in the murder trial of Bradley John Murdoch. Andrew Fraser, however, feels there are serious questions still to be answered in this case, but are they enough to have Murdoch's conviction overturned? The whole series is available online at All 4. Repeated 11.05pm and Friday 12.10am 4seven and a signed repeat tomorrow 1.25am C4 (S) (AD) (HD)

Director/Producer Jon Eastman Signed repeat 2.55am (R) (S) (HD)

9.00 SAS: Rogue Warriors

2/3. As the story of the SAS continues, the death of Lieutenant Jock Lewes at the end of 1941 sees the newly promoted Captain Paddy Mayne – an Irish rugby international with a reputation as something of a loose cannon – take over as David Stirling's second-in-command. Meanwhile, unknown to Stirling, the Germans are training special units to track, intercept and kill the SAS. Director/Producer Matthew Whiteman (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

10.00 Blood and Gold: the Making of Spain with Simon Sebag Montefiore

1/3. Conquest. Simon Sebag Montefiore explores the history of Spain, beginning with the country's early years, when Iberia was a minor province of Carthage – then the most coveted of Rome's colonies – through to Spain's Muslim age and the Córdoba Caliphate. Director/Producer Marion Milne (R) (S) (HD)

11.00 Ocean Giants

3/3. Voices of the Sea. Whales and dolphins are some of nature's supreme vocalists. The mighty sperm whale produces deafening clicks to hunt giant squid miles beneath the surface, while narwhals use sound to locate breathing holes in Arctic ice floes. But the most famous voice of all surely belongs to the male humpback whale, whose lengthy, haunting, operatic performances seem to be about singing purely for pleasure. (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

12 midnight The High Art of the Low Countries 2/3. Andrew Graham-Dixon looks at the 17th-century Dutch Golden Age. (R) (S) (HD)

PICK OF THE DAY Ambulance 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Everyone in Ambulance, both patient and crew, has a story and often its profound sadness slowly leaks out unexpectedly and to devastating emotional effect. Like that of the warehouseman who's called an ambulance because a cherry-picker has run over his foot, caving in his steel-capped boot. He's in a huge amount of pain.

It turns out that this isn't just physical. As the cheerful paramedics load the patient into their ambulance and everyone starts chatting, the man opens up about his 40-year-old daughter and his young grandson. Everyone is eventually in tears.

And then there's the splendid 99-year-old lady with a chest infection who still desperately misses her Dunkirk veteran husband, ten years after he died. The crew are both moved by her sadness and delighted by her incredible spirit. It's another terrific episode of a series that just keeps hitting the spot.

ALISON GRAHAM

Ross Kemp: Living with Dementia

7.30pm ITV (not STV)

DOCUMENTARY When Barbara Windsor bowed out as EastEnders' Peggy Mitchell in May 2016, she was already in the early stages of Alzheimer's. Four years on, her screen son Ross Kemp hears from Windsor's husband Scott about her deterioration, and the fact that she often can no longer recognise him.

The film crew doesn't film with Dame Barbara at close quarters, so Kemp instead meets with the Buckman family to discover how dad Jerry's early-onset dementia diagnosis has affected those around him. Watch out, in particular, for 12-year-old son Jack, whose eloquence and empathetic attitude is especially touching. DAVID BROWN

You Are What You Wear

8.05pm BBC1

REALITY New series In this series, which was postponed when lockdown started, Rylan Clark-Neal presents a sort of Gok Wan/Trinny and Susannah makeover show, although with considerably less intimate prodding and poking.

Rylan's not doing the styling, though. There's a Famous Five of trendy experts who take it in turns to help four people with their wardrobe dilemmas. As they dress them in various outfits, their fellow stylists "ooh", "ah" and occasionally bitch about their choices. It's accessible and fun, but there are often emotional reasons these people are stuck in a style rut, so have a hankie to hand – a nice designer one, preferably. JANE RACKHAM

First Dates Hotel

9.00pm C4

REALITY The hotel has closed for the season, so this is a chance to relive some of the more memorable couplings we've witnessed over the restaurant table and round the pool.

It's impossible to forget parfumeur Perry – he of the gold lamé trunks and unnerving habit of sniffing people – while our collective hearts were broken when Lauren, back on the dating scene after having cancer, was told by her date Pat that he wasn't interested romantically: "I'm always the fg friend," she sobbed.

There was also Michael, who broke a fundamental rule of dating by asking how old 26-year-old Robyn was and then exclaiming "Oh wow! I thought you were older!" JR

Outlander

9.00pm More4

DRAMA Time traveller Claire has always known she has prime position in her husband Jamie's affections. But there are other people who are close to his heart, too – as we see in flashback to his time as a groom at Helwater, where he secretly had a son, Willy, who was to be brought up by Lord John Grey, with whom Jamie had a long connection.

Now Lord John is back to visit – and he's brought a teenage Willy with him. As Jamie and "William" reacquaint themselves, Claire and John must each deal with their jealousy and find a way past their mutual antagonism. And John also rouses the mistrust of the returned Murtagh, who's playing a dangerous game. GILL CRAWFORD

Disasters on Hollyoaks (7pm E4) are a regular feature, but not many have featured two future Doctor Who companions. Back in November 2012, when the high-stakes 'Enjoy the Ride' plot was being hyped, fans wondered who would die in the soap's wedding-day minibus crash. Neil Cooper (Tosin Cole, later Ryan Sinclair in Doctor Who) turned out to be one of the victims, but also present in this era was Phoebe McQueen, played by Mandip Gill, aka Ryan's fellow Tardis traveller Yasmin

Khan. As you'll see in tonight's repeat, Phoebe survived the cull, though she did go on to be murdered three years later by the Gloved Hand. See, I told you it was a dicey business living in this village.

In a Classic Coronation Street double bill from 1995 (2.50pm, 3.20pm ITV3), Liz tells appalling husband Jim that she's sick of his aggressive attitude. It's a complaint she'd keep on making over the next two decades whenever he'd work himself up into a blur of double-denimed rage. DAVID BROWN

Gangs of London

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA The "London" in Gangs of London is a bit of a red herring. Nobody in the drama talks in the accents of London; we don't see the usual landmarks; and it's possible the basic premise of different ethnic gangs gathering under the wing of one family of Irish property developers isn't that true-to-life either.

But inventing a sort-of mythical London is a good wheeze by the writers because it means they can get away with anything – and often do. Tonight sees some of the maddest plot developments yet and several more bloodbaths. Would-be kingpin Sean Wallace and Marian, his fearsome mother, are forced to hide out in a shabby flat. They're down, but they're not out. DAVID BUTCHER

Hillary

9.00pm Sky Documentaries

DOCUMENTARY New series Now and then in this excellent interview-profile of Hillary Clinton you get some small sense of the frustration deep in her bones. At one point she repeats through gritted teeth, "It never ended!", referring to attacks during the 2016 presidential campaign on her use of a personal email account as Secretary of State.

Again and again, as the programme takes us through her early career, we hear how she overcame prejudice and misconceptions. She is still a powerfully polarising figure – "one of the most admired and one of the most vilified women in American history," says an aide. And her life makes for an extraordinary political story. DAVID BUTCHER

Brassic

10.00pm Sky 1

COMEDY DRAMA Brassic bows out with another comedy heist and more filthy gags. This time the plan for our Lancashire larcenists is a sort-of smash-and-grab on a big Hindu wedding. Cardy wants to marry Carol, so to ensure they have all the trappings and trimmings, the lads decide to rob everything from the venue where one of their cousins is getting married. (It's OK: said cousin deserves it.)

Cue the usual Keystone Kops-like scramble. But before that, a problem from an earlier caper comes back to haunt gang leader Vinnie, when the local Mister Big utters the timeless line, "The only thing tying me to that headless corpse is you and your idiot friends." DAVID BUTCHER

iPlayer (expires today)

Meades's aggressively intelligent 2018 essay sees him move his gaze onto an area of expertise that underpins all his other interests: language. How he phrases his provocations is always a joy, so this attack on dissemblers and obfuscators – starting with politicians using spin, and lawyers hiding behind unnecessary Latin – plays to his strengths. The programme is full of classic Meades moments where what seems like snobbishness turns out to be the reverse.

SITCOM The first series of this mockumentary about clueless vampires had flashes of brilliance (often courtesy of Matt Berry), but it couldn't live up to the 2014 film that it evolved from. Now the second series arrives and it feels as if more blood has been drained from its veins. Crucially, co-creator Taika Waititi looks to have moved on. What remains is still a glorious premise – vampires and familiars living in suburban Staten Island – and the cast give it their all, but too many of the jokes feel... undead.

Tonight's first episode sees Haley Joel Osment guest star as a new familiar, overly fond of high-fives and calling people "dawg". In the second, Nadja (Natasia Demetriou) reminisces with the ghost of her dead human form: "So much toxic masculinity in the Ottoman Empire, serious..." DAVID BUTCHER

PARALLEL LIVES
Tess and Cathy (Rebecca Front and Ellie White) and Cat and Marilyn (Lauren Socha and Siobhan Finneran)

PICK OF THE DAY The Other One 9.00pm BBC1 (9.30pm Wales)

COMEDY OF THE WEEK Holly Walsh and Pippa Brown's culture-clash sitcom is revving up nicely. If last week's pilot (filmed in 2017) felt creaky, this first proper episode zips along. The idea of very different families forced together by the death of the man they shared (unbeknownst to each other) bubbles with comic possibilities that the cast pop ruthlessly.

When bitter widow Tess (Rebecca Front, on top form) turns up in colourful outerwear, Marilyn (Siobhan Finneran, just as good) wonders, "Why is she dressed like she works at a cattery?" Turns out it's for Nordic walking, Front's version of which is hilarious (Stephen Tompkinson has a fun cameo as her smoothie coach).

But it's the satire of middle-class mores that's most on the money. Tess and her son-in-law-to-be harmonise along with The Archers' theme, and as Tess lines up her dating apps she mutters, "I missed the first sexual revolution because I was living in Guildford: I'm not missing this one, too." DAVID BUTCHER

Isle of Wight Festival Greatest Hits

7.00pm, 9.00pm Sky Arts

MUSIC Remember music festivals? They were good, weren't they? Apart from the camping and the mud. And the flags. This year's Isle of Wight festival was meant to feature the Chemical Brothers, Duran Duran and Lionel Richie, but the idea of 80,000 people yelling in unison to All Night Long now sounds rather less appealing.

So it's back to the good old days for this retrospective. We don't yet know who will be included in the line-up, but hopefully we'll get some vintage performances from Hendrix and the Doors, alongside more recent sets from youngsters like... the Rolling Stones.

GARY ROSE

The World's Most Scenic Railway Journeys

8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Our latest train trip seems very unseasonal because it takes us to Lapland. Rovaniemi in northern Finland – which was destroyed at the end of the Second World War but rebuilt famously in the shape of a reindeer – now serves as the official home of Father Christmas. No doubt the mere mention of the bearded gift-giver will inspire some people to start compiling lists of presents and checking to see whether Home Alone is on Netflix (it's not, I've looked).

Thankfully, distraction soon comes at Kemijarvi, where it's possible to ski across the Arctic wonderland – and get a glimpse of the Northern Lights. DAVID BROWN

9.00pm Alibi

DRAMA New series Don't get too used to this sun-kissed, surfing mystery as it's already been cancelled in the US. That's a shame, as fans of Hawaii Five-O, which recently ended its run, will find this a wave worth catching.

The set-up is simple: Cat Chambers (Without a Trace's Poppy Montgomery) is a reformed crook and surfer who turns detective after arriving back in her idyllic Pacific island home. Don't bother asking why, but Cat's new association with the police permits her to get embroiled in various breezy adventures – and to spar with both the local lawman and her ex-husband, the latter played by Rome's Ray Stevenson. DAVID BROWN

The Beatles: Made on Merseyside

9.30pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY A night of Fab Four-themed repeats starts with this documentary on the early years. The 2019 film explores the influences that sculpted the band, both in Liverpool and on the mean streets of Hamburg's Reeperbahn.

Insights from friends and contemporaries add colour. "I don't think many of the parents liked John. They used to refer to him as 'that Lennon'," says the Quarrymen's Len Garry. Paul, meanwhile, "always did his homework on time", and Ringo "was in hospital so much, the other kids called him Lazarus".

It's followed by Sings the Beatles (10.55pm) and TOTP2: John Lennon Special (11.55pm). GR

Carla is cornered in the khazi on tonight's Coronation Street (7.30pm ITV) after she's followed into the pub loo by mysterious newcomer Chelsey. What does she want? And will we once again get viewers posting on social media about how, according to the layout of the Street itself, the little-seen lavatories at the Rovers are actually situated in the Barlows' front room? Thinking of the residents at number one, we also get Ken giving Adam a book token for his birthday. I suspect

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Ken must be getting his gifts mixed up. Studious Daniel will probably end up receiving a Paul Smith voucher.

Emmerdale has attracted all the headlines for its lockdown episodes, but daytime favourite Doctors (1.45pm BBC1) is also depicting its characters dealing with the effects of quarantine. In an extended episode that was filmed remotely, we'll see the gang at the Mill try to raise each other's spirits, counsel a frontline worker and deal with a crisis very close to home... DAVID BROWN

Later... with Jools Holland

10.00pm BBC2

COMEDY Could Gregory Porter have been anything other than a soul singer? He's got the look, the name and the voice. You just can't imagine him doing anything else. Here, the double Grammy-winning Californian singer tells Jools about his impending sixth album, and his podcast – well, everyone needs one of those.

Porter's smooth contours stand in contrast with the jagged edges of Dublin's Fontaines D.C., whose angsty social commentary and attention-grabbing sets made them a festival favourite last year. Their latest video, which features Aidan Gillen as a cheesy talk show host, is bound to polarise opinion. But then in music, that's always a good thing. GR

Sex in Lockdown: Keep Shagging and Carry On

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Well, there's a title to thwack you between the eyes. Most of us are coping with social distancing, but how does sexual distancing work in these restrictive times, if you don't actually live with your lover? If you crave an outlet for your desires, but Tinder, Bumble, Hinge and Grindr have ground to a halt? If you're just craving a bit of romance?

Anna Richardson, the writer, host of C4's dating show Naked Attraction and partner of Sue Perkins, grapples with this topic – virtually, one hopes – and talks to Brits up and down the land, from a separated couple who created a replica penis to a singleton who flouted the rules to revel in sex outdoors. PATRICK MULKERN

Jason Manford: Muddle Class

10.45pm BBC1

COMEDY According to 8 out of 10 Cats comedian Jason Manford, who, he reminds us, grew up on a council estate in Manchester, the middle classes are those who "eat olives while watching Jeremy Kyle". Which presumably is what he does now because he admits he's confused about his social status.

This struggle between the class you were brought up in and the class you – and your children – can end up inhabiting is the driving force of this stand-up show. He gets in plenty of digs at middle-class stereotypes: from quinoa and sourdough bread to political correctness and education. All delivered in his trademark amiable, chatty way. JANE RACKHAM

MYTHIC SHORES

Bettany Hughes sets sail for the Greek island of Ithaca, home of Odysseus

A Greek Odyssey with Bettany Hughes

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY New series If you're aching for a holiday, perhaps you shouldn't watch this. Otherwise, it's a treat, as historian Bettany Hughes takes to the seas to follow the route Odysseus took to get home to Ithaca after the Trojan War. It took him ten years – quite a detour, as one salty sailor tells Hughes the journey should only take about 20 days...

As she makes landfall on the islands of Lesbos, Chios and Samos at the start of her journey, there are lovely meals, encounters with the locals and a smattering of archaeology and mythology thrown in, including ancient shipwrecks in the evocatively named "White Cape of Death" and an aqueduct carefully dug out through a mountain.

There's a sobering reminder of more modern history, too, as she passes a huge refugee camp on Lesbos. GILL CRAWFORD

STREAMING CHOICE

The best of streaming and catch-up

Netflix

This animation for adults is much less acclaimed than other grown-up Netflix cartoons such as BoJack Horseman and Big Mouth, but it's not too far behind them. Co-creator Bill Burr stars as Frank, the balding, paunchy, eternally irked head of a dysfunctional American family in the 1970s. The big event in the new fourth series is the arrival of grandpa (Better Call Saul star Jonathan Banks), who made Frank's childhood hell and now prompts him to swear even more than he did already.

KIDS' CHOICE

Bedtime Story

6.50pm CBeebies, iPlayer

Kristin Scott Thomas glides into the storytelling area today, to treat kids to The Rhythm of the Rain by Grahame Baker-Smith, a tale about a boy called Isaac who pours a jar of water into a mountain pool, then watches as it goes on a journey along rivers, over waterfalls and into the open sea. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Almost Famous

9.00pm Sony Movies

Oscar-winning comedy drama from Jerry Maguire director Cameron Crowe, based on his own experiences as a teenage rock journalist. Billy Crudup, Frances McDormand and Kate Hudson star and the soundtrack is peppered with hits from the 70s. See page 31

The breakfast assassin

INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

Nick Ferrari at Breakfast
Monday–Friday 7.00am LBC

NICK FERRARI HATES it when he misses a good news angle on his morning radio show. “I get really angry when people get great stories, or think of things I haven’t thought of,” he says.

He’s still bothered that Piers Morgan beat him to a trick in March, when he offered to pay health workers’ parking fines. “That was clever, saying he would cover nurses’ tickets. Classic tabloid journalism, a brilliant idea, well executed. Why didn’t I think of that?”

It might sound like the 61-year-old LBC presenter isn’t doing well. Far from it. Ferrari is having a very good 2020. The latest figures from industry body Rajar revealed that Nick Ferrari at Breakfast, three daily hours of news, phone-ins and interviews, has a record 1.4 million weekly listeners, up from 1.3 million last quarter.

Ferrari’s reach goes beyond his Rajar figures; his interviews often generate the biggest national news story of the day. Last year he brought the nation to a halt when he asked Boris Johnson the question everyone else had been thinking but not saying: “There is a trust issue Mr Johnson, how many children do you have?”

Ferrari likes to put people on the spot but he seldom hectors. “I think if you go in deciding this minister or prime minister is a lying oaf and I’m going to expose him or her, it’s probably not going to go that well,” he says. “I think the trick to interviews is to listen to the answers. If someone is clearly all at sea and they don’t know the numbers or background, then you can press home the advantage.”

When, on 26 May, Michael Gove appeared to claim that he had, like Dominic Cummings, also tested his eyesight by going for a drive, Ferrari simply smiled and said, “I’m staggered. I don’t know how you’re going to get out of this one but it’s going to be fun.”

‘I’m far closer to the public mood than anyone else’

Diane Abbott, then shadow Home Secretary, will forever be haunted by the 2017 election encounter where she struggled with the costings and numbers of a police recruitment drive she’d come on to announce. “What people forget,” Ferrari says, “is that she knew what she was going to be asked to talk about. It’s not like I’d bumped into her in the street. That’s why I was incredulous. I said, ‘That means they’re all being paid £30,000 a week’, or whatever it was, and all you could hear was the shuffle of papers. Silence on radio is so bloody powerful because it’s not meant to happen.”

His instincts are shaped by an old-fashioned

HOW MANY CHILDREN, PRIME MINISTER?
In November, Ferrari's interview with Boris Johnson made headlines tabloid background; Ferrari has worked for several. His father Lino (known as Dan) was news editor of the Daily Mirror and young Ferrari was allowed to stay up for dinner parties. "There would be the Mirror's royal editor and Dad would say, 'Right, tell us a great story about Princess Anne'. I'd go to bed thinking, 'Wow, these people, the stories they get.'"

His father also knew Norman Scott, lover of Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe. "I found Scott the most fantastically flamboyant, sensational character," he says. Thorpe attempted to have Scott killed before the affair went public. Did that put him off politicians? "I don't think it was the fact that Jeremy Thorpe plotted to murder Scott that made me think, 'Right, give me 30 years and I'll come after the bds.'"

Anyway, he says, he's not out to get politicians. "I don't see it like a gladiatorial competition. My job is to be informative and entertaining."

FERRARI LEARNT THE power of being informative and entertaining early in life. When he was nine, his 17-year-old brother Simon suffered terrible injuries in a car crash and Ferrari aided his recovery. "Simon was in a wheelchair for months. I'd throw a tennis ball, it would roll down his lap to the ground, so I'd throw it back. I'd chat to him, and help him get some motor skills back."

Simon, who died aged 51 in 2002, went on to be a journalist as well, working at the Daily

Mirror. "You could see he'd had some kind of accident," Ferrari says. "His left arm didn't move very well, his face was slightly twisted, he was blind in one eye and his speech was slightly slurred. He knew some people aren't good in front of disability so when he met strangers he'd find funny lines to put them at ease. I'd watch and think, 'What a bloke. Not only has he got all this to combat all day, but he's going out of his way to talk to this person he's just met in the butcher's.' I learnt so much from that attitude."

When listeners call in to Ferrari's show no one is ridiculed. "Being on LBC means I'm fortunate enough to be far closer to the public mood than anyone else." That's why, he says, the BBC was surprised by the Brexit vote and he wasn't. Likewise, he thinks, until recently the mood of the country around the current pandemic is less critical of the Government than some journalists might hope. "I think we have to hold the Government to account. But needlessly and ceaselessly beating them up is a turn-off for people."

He's happy to admit that he's a Conservative. ("David Cameron actually spoke to me about running to be London mayor.") LBC's schedulers follow Ferrari's show with James O'Brien, darling of left-leaning millennials. The two broadcasters could hardly be less alike. "I know people are hoping for a sniff of blood," he says, "but there really isn't any. His dad was in print, on the Telegraph!" And with Ferrari, you don't get higher praise than that.

Sir Tom's Musical Years

Sat 9.10pm Radio 2/Sun 1.00pm Radio Wales

Sir Tom Jones turns 80 on 7 June and the BBC has laid on an appropriate birthday feast. Since last Tuesday, Radio Wales has been serving up appetisers (all available on BBC Sounds) such as a look at how the boy from the Valleys conquered America and people's recollections of meeting Sir Tom – from schoolmates to contestants on The Voice. There's a tongue-in-cheek look at his role in famous moments in history; and an examination of how he has evolved musically over his long career.

But the centrepiece is this new interview with Jones's friend and fellow Welsh belter, Cerys Matthews, broadcast over two weekends. During the course of their intimate, two-hour conversation they talk about the music and songs that have meant the most to him and shaped his life and career. They start with the extraordinary story of his birth – involving his grandma swinging the baby Jones around her head – and from there Sir Tom ladles on the richly evocative anecdotes about his childhood and youth. Tasty cuts of gospel, boogie woogie and rock 'n' roll are scattered throughout. Blow out the candles and tuck in!

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

This week the focus shifts to Bridge Farm, where everyone is trying to cope with the demand for veg boxes. When Helen is faced with a problem, Susan comes to the rescue with an idea, but it leaves Helen having to confront some demons from her past.

On a lighter note, Tony's uncut hair is causing consternation within the family. But Tony himself is more worried about his grandson and ends up going too far – resulting in Johnny making a drastic decision. Finally, Tom has a controversial plan that some members of his family don't take to, while Natasha is struggling in light of recent events. Will she find a way through? DAVID BROWN

Living history

As universities prepare to offer teaching online in the next academic year, it helps to remember how many of the great minds of the past did most of their educating themselves. They say Thomas Jefferson had read all the books in his father's library by the time he was five. David Hume left university at 14, feeling it had nothing left to teach him. We can only guess how much more erudite both might have been had podcasts been around in the 18th century. Since history is essentially a storytelling medium, it's no surprise that many historians have taken to it. Here's a selection of the range on offer.

HOW TO FIND A PODCAST Simply type the name of the podcast you are looking for into Google and listen on your computer. Most people, however, listen to podcasts on smartphones via apps such as BBC Sounds, Apple Podcasts, Stitcher or Acast. If there isn't already a podcast app on your phone, you can download a free one in seconds. Then search within the app for the podcast you want and "subscribe" to it. It won't cost you anything, and new episodes will turn up in your feed as they are published, which you can then play at your leisure.

PODCAST OF THE WEEK

Homeschool History

From the same stable that brought you Greg Jenner's comedy history podcasts You're Dead to Me come these relentlessly jaunty takes on Florence Nightingale, Charles Dickens, Pocahontas, the Restoration and other historical favourites. They're aimed at those young people who have limited patience with history unless they can be guaranteed the imminence of a comedy sound effect.

Revolutions

Not everyone presents bite-sized history. When US historian Mike

Duncan turns his lens on another revolution – so far he's done the French, American, English and Russian, and he's looking for more – he slices it into a surprising variety of entrees rather than wolfing it down whole. Duncan's may be a strictly one-voice format, but it amounts to the audio equivalent of reading a medium-sized book on the subject, which may be what you're looking for.

Slow Burn

History doesn't have to be ancient – it can be anything that's no longer in the papers. This product of the American website Slate takes complex stories from the recent past – Watergate, the Bill Clinton/Monica Lewinsky scandal and, in series three, the feud between rappers Tupac Shakur and Biggie Smalls – and, reasoning that most people have either forgotten the details or never knew them in the first place, tells them again. The accent is on the human dramas of the people caught in the maw of history.

The Big Steal

According to Gavin Esler, who presents this dramatic nine-part account of how the wealth of Russia was stolen by a handful of power players, Vladimir Putin is not merely the richest man in the world, he's very likely the richest man there's ever been. Having brought off the heist of the century, Putin now wants to convince us that this kind of theft is just a fact of life and we should all just simmer down and get used to it. It appears to be working.

PADDY O'CONNELL

I've taken listener interaction back to basics

Throughline

The American novelist William Faulkner wrote, "The past is never dead.

It's not even past." That would make a good motto for this very polished production from National Public Radio, which holds that the events that occurred in so-called history have a direct relationship with our equally so-called present. A good example is Aftermath, the episode dealing with the response to the disastrous Mississippi Flood of 1927. At the time, there was a man in the White House who thought it was the job of the states rather than central government to clear up the mess.

Dan Snow's History Hit

Dan Snow is very good at this stuff. He's got an amiable manner and it's a pretty simple format. In each instalment he talks to a different historian about their pet subject: thus you get Andrew Roberts on Churchill, Emma Butcher on the Brontës, Lauren Johnson on Henry VI and Augustine Sedgwick on coffee. You get a taste of their specialisms, ably encouraged in their enthusiasm by Snow, who is never too far away from describing any of the figures of history as "really hardcore".

ENTHUSIASTIC
Dan Snow gets the best out of the experts

Email us! We'd love to hear your views." "Tweet me at once!" "I'm on Instagram Live right now!" "Download the free BBC Sounds app!" The list of online ways to reach your favourite radio station is endless. "We're on the smart speaker!" "Check out our webcam!" "Just say 'play Eddie Mair' to Alexa."

For a long time now, listening has been exhausting. You can't just sit there lapping it all up. On no, you've got to fill the airtime for these people, while listening in three different ways. So when pricking out in the potting shed, put down your baby begonias and type your reactions on your tablet. Stop drinking that cuppa, email us your views on Brexit at once. When driving, pull over into a lay-by and call in with your opinions.

For years, I've got round this media neediness on Broadcasting House by one simple tactic – I never give out the email address. I learnt this from the great Nick Ferrari (see page 110). When I worked at LBC I would give out the phone number all the time, like the last singleton at the disco.

'One card shows a donkey alone in a boat'

Ferrari never bothers. His listeners know how to call LBC, because they love the station. It's the same on Radio 4. People can work out how to get in touch.

But radio stations long ago dumped their old postal address. So guess what? I've brought it back – asking for postcards from isolation. Yes that's right, postcards. You write a message, place a stamp on costing £76 and pop it in the mail.

Hundreds of cards are arriving, with poems, quotes and personal life stories, and myriad photos on the front.

"One of the best things about lockdown is not having to go to church," says Gillian. One card shows a donkey alone in a boat on its way to a Greek island... that's from Declan and Jim. Catherine in Ireland has lived alone all her life. She's started doing her family tree. Denis in Winchester is broke, but feels lucky to have a dog. Vera relies on her postman.

Many listeners express in their messages how excluded they feel by all the online messaging systems – for the simple reason that they're not online at all.

They feel that the radio people must fear they're infected with a nasty virus that could sweep the world. But we all know how fantastical that sort of talk is! So we're all learning a lot in lockdown, and my message is to bring back the postal address.

Colleagues tell me that the instant reaction has made radio better, and I'm not being rude to the listeners who do email us. But the people who write cards aren't, on the whole, as angry as the people who complain while we're on air: "You're all wrong!" "Your guest is stupid."

These postcards take time to write, they cost money to send and I'm cherishing them. Every last one of time, even as they build up in a pile on the spare desks that surround me when I go into the socially distanced Broadcasting House office at the BBC. When we sent former postman – and one-time Home Secretary – Alan Johnson the scans of 20 of our hundreds of cards to read live on the show on 31 May, you could sense him flinch as he guessed the weight.

When the you-know-what is over, I shall have the uncomplaining postie who has delivered my sack of postcards to thank for teaching me a basic lesson about radio: never assume all your listeners are the same. If you don't agree, tweet me.

Today's Choices

Inside Music

1.00pm Radio 3

Writer and actress Phoebe Waller-Bridge may be happy to be known by her old family nickname "Fleabag", but one couldn't blame Isobel Waller-Bridge (above) if she's now tired of being tagged "Fleabag's older sister".

She is, after all, a sought-after composer, and has written music for other TV series besides Fleabag, as well as for the movies Vita & Virginia and Emma. Her choices here range from Satie to Scott Walker – not forgetting Venice's very own "hot priest", Vivaldi.

Archive on 4: Anthony Blunt, A Question of Retribution?

8.00pm Radio 4

He had been the Surveyor of the Queen's Pictures and an MI5 intelligence officer, but few outside royal and academic circles had heard of Anthony Blunt. Then in 1979 he became a national hate figure following the revelation he had traded secrets with the Soviets during the Second World War. Historian David Cannadine re-examines Blunt's career and asks whether artistic reputations can survive political actions or personal disgrace. CHRIS GARDNER

Today's Choices

Drama on 3: Adventures with the Painted People

7.30pm Radio 3
Leading Scottish playwright and theatre director David Greig wrote Adventures with the Painted People for the Pitlochry Festival. With no festival taking place, he has re-purposed it for radio, and it works beautifully. We're in Roman times in the land of the Picts (modern-day Scotland), where local woman Eithne sees an opportunity in captured Roman officer Lucius: she'll rescue him in exchange for him teaching her to write. But in a slow-burn love story, he too learns from her. The dialogue flows, and the performances by Kirsty Stuart and Olivier Huband are quietly moving.

World Book Club/Bookclub

2.05pm BBC World Service
4.00pm Radio 4
It's book club bonanza today, starting on the World Service with Deborah Levy talking about her 2016 novel Hot Milk, a hypnotic tale of female sexuality which has been compared to Virginia Woolf. Later on Radio 4, James Naughtie's guest is Max Porter, who discusses his 2019 novel Lanny, a follow-up to his acclaimed Grief Is the Thing with Feathers and a striking portrait of childhood. Listeners to both programmes contribute remotely. SIMON O'HAGAN

Today's Choices

The Essay: It's a Hack's Life

10.45pm Radio 3
Journalists recalling how the media has changed since they started out is well-worn ground, but there's a freshness to this week-long overview of the US scene from Michael Goldfarb (above), who started out nearly 40 years ago as a copy aide on the Washington Post. Goldfarb witnessed first-hand CNN's coverage of Reagan's shooting, and ponders if instant reporting has changed the business for the better. He provides insights into foreign corresponding, presenter cults and the future of freelancing. TOM GOULDING

Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert

1.00pm Radio 3
Kicking off a second week of lockdown-busting lunchtime chamber concerts live from Wigmore Hall, cellist and Twitter sensation Steven Isserlis and young London-born pianist Mishka Rushdie Momen access the cupola-capped stage from opposite doorways to perform socially distanced sonatas by Beethoven and Fauré, framing the three Romances (Op 94) by Isserlis's beloved Robert Schumann, performed in celebration of the composer's 210th birthday. MARK PAPPENHEIM

New series. 1/10. Coronavirus has shaken many people out of the view that if they get sick, doctors and nurses will know how to make them better again. But living in a time where there is limited treatment – and no cure – is not a new experience for all. In this series, Peter Staley explores the emergence of HIV/Aids through the stories of those who were on the front line, including gay men, doctors, nurses, politicians and activists. He begins by recalling moving to New York in 1983 and first hearing about a "gay cancer". Producer Richard Fenton-Smith

Drama: The Jester of Astapovo

2.15pm Radio 4

By the time Leo Tolstoy (above) died of pneumonia, the remote Russian outpost of Astapovo was overrun with press photographers and well-wishers. A week earlier, on October 28, 1910, the writer had walked out on his wife, Sonya. He was fleeing by train when, as his health failed, his companions had to get him off at a small station 120 miles from Moscow. Astapovo's stationmaster and his wife gave up the bed in their humble home for Tolstoy – and so began a defining experience of their lives. Rose Tremain turned the intriguing tale into a short story and has now dramatised it for radio.

Afterlives

11.00am Radio 4

Beautiful words like "joy" and "forgiveness" are triggers to Petra Velzeboer and Dawn Watson, reminders of the ugliness of their experiences in the Children of God cult, which became known for despicable sexual exploitation, including paedophilia. While Petra and Dawn, both now successful businesswomen, do not shrink from the truth of their past, this programme documents their first meeting and it is one where the common bonds are what has helped them to heal. A sensitive and important piece of radio. JANE ANDERSON

Today's Choices

Little Lifetimes

11.00pm Radio 4

Jenny Eclair (above) must surely have shrugged off her "grumpy old woman" persona when she learnt that Little Lifetimes had been commissioned for a sixth series? The interior dialogues of six women, each played by a talented comedy actress, have not lost any of their acerbity. This opening episode has Pauline McLynn as a portly, menopausal woman who's taken to sporting pixie boots and streaking her hair to match her cat. She's also divorced her dull-as-ditchwater husband. But what will she do when he starts dating a younger, slimmer model? No spoilers, but it does involve the erotic removal of those pixie boots...

Free Thinking

10.45pm Radio 3

I cannot help but wonder if the subject matter of this evening's conversation – "Failure and Female Friendship" – may have been inspired by Elizabeth Day's wonderful podcast, How to Fail. Host Shahidha Bari is joined by two writers – Michèle Roberts and Lara Feigel – and Alexandra Reza, one of the batch of 2020 New Generation Thinkers, who has been looking at the role of the kitchen in novels. All three have found therapeutic nourishment in food and female friends when faced with failure.

Today's Choices

The Film Programme

4.00pm Radio 4

Several big-budget movies have had their cinema releases postponed for months. But the producers of the new biopic of Marie Curie – Radioactive, with Rosamund Pike (above) in the title role – have taken the online premiere route. The movie's Iranian-born director, Marjane Satrapi, talks to Antonia Quirke. Meanwhile the man behind the camera of some of the most popular films in British cinema history – Douglas Slocumbe – features in this week's Lockdown Film Club talking about his Ealing comedies and the complex special effect in Kind Hearts and Coronets which allowed eight characters played by Alec Guinness to appear in a single shot. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Afternoon Concert

2.00pm Radio 3

G&S fans may know Alfred Cellier as the man who conducted the premieres of several Savoy Operas and cobbled together the overtures for HMS Pinafore and The Pirates of Penzance when Sullivan declined to do so himself. But he was also a successful composer, whose "pastoral comedy" Dorothy outstripped The Mikado in popularity and whose final work, The Mountebanks – heard today in a BBC Concert Orchestra recording – set a Gilbertian libretto that Sullivan had rejected. MARK PAPPENHEIM

2.15 Drama: Rumpole and the Sleeping Partners

2/2. Benedict Cumberbatch stars in Richard Stoneman's adaptation of John Mortimer's tale. After a legal ball in the Savoy Hotel, Rumpole and Hilda argue about Rumpole's drunken behaviour in front of Mr Justice Gwent-Evans. Rumpole can take no more of his wife and jumps out of their taxi. He intends to spend the night in chambers but finds Erskine-Brown in Equity Court, with Phillida Trant, "working late". Rumpole asks Phillida to help him with the defence of Hugo Lutterworth, who's accused of trying to kill the husband of his lover. Phillida goes home with Erskine-Brown, leaving Rumpole to sleep on his sofa - strictly against the rules of chambers.

Zoe Ball

6.30am Radio 2

Created by Chris Evans, the 500 Words short story writing competition for children is now in its tenth year and an incredible 934,296 entries have been received since its launch. The powerhouse sentence of judges – Evans, Zoe Ball, the Duchess of Cornwall and authors Malorie Blackman, Frank Cottrell-Boyce, Charlie Higson and Francesca Simon – have read the 50 shortlisted mini-masterpieces, which are available on R2's website, and the winners in the two age categories (5–9 and 10–13 years) are celebrated this morning. A variety of celebrity names read the stories aloud but the real stars are the children who wrote them. JANE ANDERSON

Life, Uncertainty and VAR

11.00am Radio 4

Any football fan could bore for days about the video assistant referee (VAR). Science writer Tom Chivers goes deeper in this fantastic documentary, using the debate around VAR as a jumping-off point to explore wider societal preoccupations with eliminating uncertainty via objective truths. Particularly pertinent to the coronavirus crisis. A tranche of statisticians talk of problematic metrics and over-interpretation but the nub is this: life's complex; you may as well embrace uncertainty. DAVID CRAWFORD

Down the Line

Face behind the voice Emily Pilbeam BBC Radio Leeds

Age: 23

Current job

Presenter of BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire (Saturdays, 6–10pm), BBC Radio Leeds.

CV Grew up in King's Lynn, Norfolk, and volunteered at her local hospital radio station: "I've always wanted to get into radio. It's a massive part of my life that I don't think I could ever escape, really." Then worked as a team assistant for BBC Radio 1 and various BBC local radio stations: "I was working alongside my idols, such as Scott Mills, Chris Stark, Greg James and Annie Mac. That felt absolutely crazy – I didn't even think I'd get the job!" Then presented Monday Night Mixtape for BBC Radio Leeds.

First radio memory "My mum was a single parent, so she would be working quite a lot. When I got home from school, I'd quite often be home alone for a while, so to have a little bit of company, I'd put the radio on. It's been a constant throughout my life."

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I'm now on air across BBC Radio Leeds, Sheffield and York. It's been challenging getting used to the changes – especially with losing so much BBC Introducing content – but it's been so great to still be on air and chat to people. I've also had to remind myself how to edit videos for our BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire socials, so that we can continue to champion the incredible talent in our area. One of my favourite things about presenting this show – besides discovering crazy good new music – is meeting all of the talented acts we're so lucky to have in our patch. I've met friends for life through working on this show. I think the artists appreciate it, too; we know it's so hard for them right now to build an audience,

'It has been so reassuring to see the support out there'

so to record a live session for us and have a chinwag with someone other than their housemates is, I think, really appreciated!"

Best recent moments "It's a toss up between an Easter egg hunt that we did in our garden, introducing Fancy Friday (dress-up day!) to the house, and the day we bought a paddling pool! It has also been really heartwarming seeing the music industry come together during all of this. It's such a difficult industry to work in at the best of times, so to see it pull together in the way it has, has given me a bit of faith. There is still so much work to do to improve the music biz, but it has been so reassuring to see the support out there."

Worst moments "I lost a relative shortly before lockdown, so it was very tough not being around family during that time. I'm not used to being at home all the time – I'm very much the type of person that is out of the house working, DJ'ing or at shows, so to not have that option has been strange. I'm very fortunate to have really great housemates, though – and an array of board games to get us through the evenings!"

Coping skills "I suffer with anxiety and one coping mechanism for the past few years has been to listen to the Scott Mills daily podcast or Scott and Chris's show on Radio 5 Live. Listening to their show never fails to make me smile, pick me up when I'm down and just helps me escape from the world. And giving good ol' Grandma Pilbeam a ring always gives me so much joy. She's an angel and chatting to her on the phone for half an hour always brightens my day. Also Life on Mars – I revisited that recently. Love it! Hello, Gene Hunt..." MEG FIRTH

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice Emily Pilbeam BBC Radio Leeds

Age: 23

Presenter of BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire (Saturdays, 6–10pm), BBC Radio Leeds.

CV Grew up in King's Lynn, Norfolk, and volunteered at her local hospital radio station: "I've always wanted to get into radio. It's a massive part of my life that I don't think I could ever escape, really." Then worked as a team assistant for BBC Radio 1 and various BBC local radio stations: "I was working alongside my idols, such as Scott Mills, Chris Stark, Greg James and Annie Mac. That felt absolutely crazy – I didn't even think I'd get the job!" Then presented Monday Night Mixtape for BBC Radio Leeds.

First radio memory "My mum was a single parent, so she would be working quite a lot. When I got home from school, I'd quite often be home alone for a while, so to have a little bit of company, I'd put the radio on. It's been a constant throughout my life."

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I'm now on air across BBC Radio Leeds, Sheffield and York. It's been challenging getting used to the changes – especially with losing so much BBC Introducing content – but it's been so great to still be on air and chat to people. I've also had to remind myself how to edit videos for our BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire socials, so that we can continue to champion the incredible talent in our area. One of my favourite things about presenting this show – besides discovering crazy good new music – is meeting all of the talented acts we're so lucky to have in our patch. I've met friends for life through working on this show. I think the artists appreciate it, too; we know it's so hard for them right now to build an audience,

'It has been so reassuring to see the support out there'

so to record a live session for us and have a chinwag with someone other than their housemates is, I think, really appreciated!"

Best recent moments "It's a toss up between an Easter egg hunt that we did in our garden, introducing Fancy Friday (dress-up day!) to the house, and the day we bought a paddling pool! It has also been really heartwarming seeing the music industry come together during all of this. It's such a difficult industry to work in at the best of times, so to see it pull together in the way it has, has given me a bit of faith. There is still so much work to do to improve the music biz, but it has been so reassuring to see the support out there."

Worst moments "I lost a relative shortly before lockdown, so it was very tough not being around family during that time. I'm not used to being at home all the time – I'm very much the type of person that is out of the house working, DJ'ing or at shows, so to not have that option has been strange. I'm very fortunate to have really great housemates, though – and an array of board games to get us through the evenings!"

Coping skills "I suffer with anxiety and one coping mechanism for the past few years has been to listen to the Scott Mills daily podcast or Scott and Chris's show on Radio 5 Live. Listening to their show never fails to make me smile, pick me up when I'm down and just helps me escape from the world. And giving good ol' Grandma Pilbeam a ring always gives me so much joy. She's an angel and chatting to her on the phone for half an hour always brightens my day. Also Life on Mars – I revisited that recently. Love it! Hello, Gene Hunt..."

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice Emily Pilbeam BBC Radio Leeds

Age: 23

Presenter of BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire (Saturdays, 6–10pm), BBC Radio Leeds.

CV Grew up in King's Lynn, Norfolk, and volunteered at her local hospital radio station: "I've always wanted to get into radio. It's a massive part of my life that I don't think I could ever escape, really." Then worked as a team assistant for BBC Radio 1 and various BBC local radio stations: "I was working alongside my idols, such as Scott Mills, Chris Stark, Greg James and Annie Mac. That felt absolutely crazy – I didn't even think I'd get the job!" Then presented Monday Night Mixtape for BBC Radio Leeds.

First radio memory "My mum was a single parent, so she would be working quite a lot. When I got home from school, I'd quite often be home alone for a while, so to have a little bit of company, I'd put the radio on. It's been a constant throughout my life."

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I'm now on air across BBC Radio Leeds, Sheffield and York. It's been challenging getting used to the changes – especially with losing so much BBC Introducing content – but it's been so great to still be on air and chat to people. I've also had to remind myself how to edit videos for our BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire socials, so that we can continue to champion the incredible talent in our area. One of my favourite things about presenting this show – besides discovering crazy good new music – is meeting all of the talented acts we're so lucky to have in our patch. I've met friends for life through working on this show. I think the artists appreciate it, too; we know it's so hard for them right now to build an audience,

'It has been so reassuring to see the support out there'

so to record a live session for us and have a chinwag with someone other than their housemates is, I think, really appreciated!"

Best recent moments "It's a toss up between an Easter egg hunt that we did in our garden, introducing Fancy Friday (dress-up day!) to the house, and the day we bought a paddling pool! It has also been really heartwarming seeing the music industry come together during all of this. It's such a difficult industry to work in at the best of times, so to see it pull together in the way it has, has given me a bit of faith. There is still so much work to do to improve the music biz, but it has been so reassuring to see the support out there."

Worst moments "I lost a relative shortly before lockdown, so it was very tough not being around family during that time. I'm not used to being at home all the time – I'm very much the type of person that is out of the house working, DJ'ing or at shows, so to not have that option has been strange. I'm very fortunate to have really great housemates, though – and an array of board games to get us through the evenings!"

Coping skills "I suffer with anxiety and one coping mechanism for the past few years has been to listen to the Scott Mills daily podcast or Scott and Chris's show on Radio 5 Live. Listening to their show never fails to make me smile, pick me up when I'm down and just helps me escape from the world. And giving good ol' Grandma Pilbeam a ring always gives me so much joy. She's an angel and chatting to her on the phone for half an hour always brightens my day.

Also Life on Mars – I revisited that recently. Love it! Hello, Gene Hunt..." MEG FIRTH

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice Emily Pilbeam BBC Radio Leeds

Age: 23

Presenter of BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire (Saturdays, 6–10pm), BBC Radio Leeds.

CV Grew up in King's Lynn, Norfolk, and volunteered at her local hospital radio station: "I've always wanted to get into radio. It's a massive part of my life that I don't think I could ever escape, really." Then worked as a team assistant for BBC Radio 1 and various BBC local radio stations: "I was working alongside my idols, such as Scott Mills, Chris Stark, Greg James and Annie Mac. That felt absolutely crazy – I didn't even think I'd get the job!" Then presented Monday Night Mixtape for BBC Radio Leeds.

First radio memory "My mum was a single parent, so she would be working quite a lot. When I got home from school, I'd quite often be home alone for a while, so to have a little bit of company, I'd put the radio on. It's been a constant throughout my life."

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I'm now on air across BBC Radio Leeds, Sheffield and York. It's been challenging getting used to the changes – especially with losing so much BBC Introducing content – but it's been so great to still be on air and chat to people. I've also had to remind myself how to edit videos for our BBC Introducing in West Yorkshire socials, so that we can continue to champion the incredible talent in our area. One of my favourite things about presenting this show – besides discovering crazy good new music – is meeting all of the talented acts we're so lucky to have in our patch. I've met friends for life through working on this show. I think the artists appreciate it, too; we know it's so hard for them right now to build an audience,

'It has been so reassuring to see the support out there'

so to record a live session for us and have a chinwag with someone other than their housemates is, I think, really appreciated!"

Best recent moments "It's a toss up between an Easter egg hunt that we did in our garden, introducing Fancy Friday (dress-up day!) to the house, and the day we bought a paddling pool! It has also been really heartwarming seeing the music industry come together during all of this. It's such a difficult industry to work in at the best of times, so to see it pull together in the way it has, has given me a bit of faith. There is still so much work to do to improve the music biz, but it has been so reassuring to see the support out there."

Worst moments "I lost a relative shortly before lockdown, so it was very tough not being around family during that time. I'm not used to being at home all the time – I'm very much the type of person that is out of the house working, DJ'ing or at shows, so to not have that option has been strange. I'm very fortunate to have really great housemates, though – and an array of board games to get us through the evenings!"

Coping skills "I suffer with anxiety and one coping mechanism for the past few years has been to listen to the Scott Mills daily podcast or Scott and Chris's show on Radio 5 Live. Listening to their show never fails to make me smile, pick me up when I'm down and just helps me escape from the world. And giving good ol' Grandma Pilbeam a ring always gives me so much joy. She's an angel and chatting to her on the phone for half an hour always brightens my day. Also Life on Mars – I revisited that recently. Love it! Hello, Gene Hunt..."

URGENT BEAR RESCUE! DON'T LET THEM BE LOCKED UP FOR LIFE.

The rescues are underway – and there's no time to lose!

With restaurants in Armenia in lockdown, the caged bears they keep to attract tourists no longer serve any purpose. These sad bears are now unwanted, unloved and at serious risk of starving to death.

Right now, International Animal Rescue is saving these abandoned bears. The first three are already safe in our care.

But many more bears are in desperate need. They have been left hungry for weeks already...

Your help is urgently needed to rescue more bears before it's too late. Please make a donation to help free them from their misery and give them the lives they deserve. They have been locked up long enough.

TO DONATE

Return the form, call us on 01825 767688 or visit www.internationalanimalrescue.org

Back from the brink

ITN's Tom Bradby has channelled the pain of his meltdown into a high-paced thriller

Two years ago things fell to pieces for Tom Bradby. He'd been the face of News at Ten since 2015; before that, as a journalist, he bagged big exclusives like his 2010 interview with Prince William and Kate Middleton. Then, in 2018, he suffered a dramatic mental health crisis that took him off the air for three months.

Bradby's breakdown had been a long time coming – years of overwork exacerbated by extreme insomnia and, he admits, failure to emotionally process the death of his parents. “You get to the bottom of the barrel where you're not sleeping at all and you think you're going mad,” he says, looking back.

In 2018, the big question was what would become of his broadcasting career. But what about Bradby the author? The 53-year-old is a highly regarded writer of popular thrillers, influenced in part by his literary hero Len Deighton. The first, Shadow Dancer, set in Troubles-era Northern Ireland, was published in 1998. As his career as a reporter took him around the world, a series of novels followed, drawing on his experiences. On one occasion, he was even shot while reporting on riots in Indonesia. “Having been shot, it's quite easy to write about it,” he says. “I'm not saying you have to experience something to be able to write about it, but obviously the adrenaline, the fear, the kind of panic, if you've experienced it, you may write about it more vividly than you would if you haven't.”

Bradby hit full stride with Secret Service in 2019. The fizzing espionage adventure featured senior M16 officer Kate Henderson struggling to save the British state from Russian interference. Now, two years into recovery, Bradby has a new book featuring Henderson again, Double Agent, and is in talks to turn it into a TV drama.

He is also in the position of being able to trace his own crisis through his writing. “When I look at Secret Service, what's weird is that I can see that to some extent the novel is the product of a fevered mind, or at least Kate is developing quite a fevered mind.

“Anyone reading that book can see that she's basically on the verge of some kind of meltdown. As was I, but I didn't recognise it in myself at that point. Secret Service was what it was like for me just before falling off a cliff. Double Agent was falling off the cliff, I suppose, but written with the clear-eyed perspective of someone who'd climbed back up the other side of the valley.”

THE NEW BOOK is built around a set-up that, even in these interesting times, seems unlikely. The UK Prime Minister is actually a Russian agent. When he was a British Army officer serving in the Balkans he had sex with two underage girls, the brutal encounter was secretly recorded and the film made its way to Moscow, hence the Russian hold over him. Now a Russian agent wants to defect and bring the film to the UK, exposing the Prime Minister.

A little far-fetched? “The current Russian hierarchy and Russian oligarchs, they're in the West,” Bradby says. “They keep their money here, they send their kids to school here. There's no question that they are trying to destabilise Western democracies. They must be trying to corrupt Western politicians. So what happens if they actually succeeded?"

Kate Henderson must decide if the operation goes ahead – and deal with her complicated domestic arrangements: her adulterous husband has defected to Moscow and her children are under threat. She begins to crack under the pressure, and suffer agonising stomach cramps.

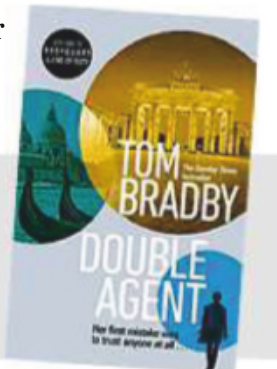

Kate is not Bradby, he insists, but physically she is going through much of what he experienced. "Stress floods your body with adrenaline and cortisol all day, you feel like you're about to be attacked by someone when in fact you're just walking to work. We're not meant to live at that level of threat alert for long periods of time. You end up with severe physical symptoms, as Kate does. So, I was sort of looking back, and creating a situation for Kate based on all the knowledge I had accumulated in my meltdown."

WITHOUT GIVING THE end away, Double Agent shares the pessimistic mood of many contemporary thrillers. "Kate tries to take on the world and the world kind of defeats her," Bradby says. "She just decides, 'Enough, I recognise my limits here. I can't do any more. I've got to get out and look after myself and look after my family.'"

It seems downbeat: Henderson seeing the world as irredeemably corrupt and deciding that sometimes you just can't do anything about it? "I didn't view it as downbeat," Bradby says. "One of the things that came out of what happened to me was realising that I had to let a lot of stuff go. You have to stop worrying about a whole bunch of things you used to care about. If you've pushed yourself through life and you're trying to achieve success and everything that comes with it, it can all come to matter too much. The only thing that really matters is your family and your friends. Nobody else is going to be lining up by my graveside when I peg it."

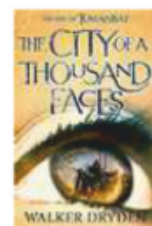

What happened to Bradby seems to have made him a more balanced human being but, at the risk of being flippant, did the breakdown actually improve his writing? "One reason I enjoyed writing Double Agent so much is that I felt like I was bringing something substantial to the process. There's no question that what happened to me made me a ten-times-better writer." MICHAEL HODGES

City of dreams or nightmares?

History and mystery, magic and modernity, crime and punishment

THE CITY OF A THOUSAND FACES WALKER DRYDEN

Tumanbay Monday 2pm Radio 4

This epic historical fantasy is based on the hit radio drama Tumanbay – now on its fourth series – and written by the duo behind it, Mike Walker and John Scott Dryden. Inspired by the Mamluk slave dynasty of Egypt, Tumanbay is the heart of a thriving empire, a city where people born as slaves are now the ruling class.

In The City of a Thousand Faces (Orion Books, £16.99), life is not as perfect as it may seem in the so-called city of dreams – political unrest, supernatural forces and mysterious strangers arise and threaten to change Tumanbay for ever.

LANNY MAX PORTER

Bookclub Sunday 4pm Radio 4

The follow-up to Max Porter's award-winning novel Grief Is the Thing with Feathers reimagines the folk tale in a rural English commuter town. The titular Lanny beguiles and bewilders those around him and is prone to near-magical disappearances. He draws to him the ancient spirit Dead Papa Toothwort, who has been watching – and interfering – in village life for hundreds of years. In Lanny (Faber & Faber, £8.99), Porter once again entwines magic with modernity in a mystical, lyrical tribute to childhood, nature and legend.

CROSSING THE LINE: LESSONS FROM A LIFE ON DUTY

JOHN SUTHERLAND

Book of the Week Mon–Fri
9.45am FM/12.30am Radio 4

John Sutherland spent 25 years as a police officer in the Met, rising through the ranks to chief superintendent. After suffering a breakdown in 2013, he retired and published a powerful memoir, Blue, about his career, illness and recovery. His new book, Crossing the Line (Weidenfeld & Nicolson, £16.99), invites us behind the scenes in police stations and looks at ten of the biggest challenges facing police officers today, from extremism to drug and knife crime. It promises to be another eye-opening read.

TENDER ANNUAL CLIMBERS are fun, colourful and some of the best-value plants around. In one season they grow from a tiny seed to scramble up and over archways, trellis, a wired wall or fence, even through a shrub, and flower their socks off all summer long. You can also grow them up a wigwam in the border for some height – ideal for a quick fix.

Ideally, you would have sown seed by now, but it's not too late to sow directly into the ground, or buy them as plug plants or in pots ready to go straight in the garden. Either way, dig a nice deep hole and add plenty of compost.

The key with annual climbers is to get them going. When seedlings appear (or you've planted them from a pot or plugs), encourage them to twine up the structure, and be vigilant about slugs and snails, which love their soft new, fleshy leaves. Once they reach a decent height, feed every two weeks with liquid seaweed and they should sing out all summer.

COLOURFUL CLIMBERS

Sweet peas are the best-known annual climber, grown for their intoxicating scent and to bring indoors as a cut flower. Shade their roots with other plants and water regularly in dry spells.

Morning glory (not to be confused with bindweed!) reaches 3m tall, so is perfect for boundaries. It comes in a range of colours, from blues ("Heavenly Blue") and purples ("Purple Haze") to whites and yellows. Their flowers only last a day, unfurling from tight twists every morning, but they produce them constantly.

Spanish flag (ipomoea lobata), though related to morning glory, is a completely different plant which reaches about 4m tall. Its unusual, exotic flowers grow in racks on strong upright stems and fade from yellow to red.

Black-eyed Susan vine (Thunbergia alata) is always fun, with bright orange, yellow and white papery flowers with dark centres.

Angel's trumpet (Asarina barclayana) is great for a shady spot. A twining climber (left) that grows to a height of 2m, it produces rosy-pink, snapdragon-like flowers that may grow back after a mild winter.

Climbing nasturtium (such as Tropaeolum majus "Climbing Mixed") may be too untidy for some, but is ideal for a neglected area, or planted in a compost heap. It produces kidney-shaped leaves and edible red, yellow and orange flowers that taste great in a salad.

Cup and saucer vine (Cobaea scandens) is pretty vigorous, with lush foliage and large, cup-shaped purple flowers. Cobaea scandens "Alba" has white flowers.

ONE-HIT WONDERS

GET WEEDING

You may have heard the maxim "one year's seeding makes seven years' weeding"? If you've recently dug over a new patch, you're likely to have stirred up masses of weed seeds! Some say a weed is simply a plant in the wrong place, but most are categorised as invasive plants that smother others if given a chance. And at this time of year, they can get out of control.

KNOW YOUR SPACE INVADERS

Some fabulous garden plants naturally self-seed around, but when weeding you may be taking them out by mistake. Identifying young weeds means you can get them before they seed, so try to get to know the main ones.

Annual weeds such as bittercress, chickweed, herb robert and cleavers (sticky willie) flower, seed and die off in one year. The seed dropped is triggered next year. Regularly hoeing and then picking or raking them off a flowerbed will keep on top of them. If you stop them seeding, they'll die out eventually.

Perennial weeds are those such as creeping thistle, dock, ground elder, nettles and couch grass. Dying back in winter they come back every year from the roots, often spreading through their root systems as well as seeding around for a double whammy.

The most pernicious ones such as bindweed, mare's tail and the dreaded Japanese knotweed are particularly difficult to remove. Be patient, keep weakening them and it can be done!

THE ORGANIC WAY

By hand Pull or weed with a fork or weed knife with a hooked end and cut repeatedly to weaken. If you leave even a tiny bit of root, most perennial weeds will be back, so be rigorous.

Flame gun Popular for gravel areas and paths as they burn weeds right down to the roots without the need for chemicals.

Mulch Mulch deeply with bark, compost or other organic matter around ornamental plants to smother the weeds. Some swear by placing a layer of cardboard in tricky areas too, and mulching on top.

CHEMICAL WARFARE

I don't use, or advocate the use of, herbicides such as glyphosate-based weedkillers (certainly nowhere near edibles), but some people use them to get an unmanageable area under control.

CAMPSIS "SUMMER JAZZ" TRUMPET VINE COLLECTION – 3 PLANTS

If you want to set your garden alight in summer, our sensational bright citrus-coloured Trumpet Vines are perfect. They look tropical, but are actually very hardy, tough and easy to grow, and they flower their socks off in summer well into autumn, with bright, vivid displays. This new "Summer Jazz" series is the result of new breeding, making it much more compact (2m maximum), hardier and more floriferous.

Although they are called vines, they do not climb, and instead prefer to lean against structures. This makes them ideal for growing against sunny walls, trellises or sheds, where they can easily be fixed or tied in – as they flower best when exposed to sun for most of the day. They will grow in most soils, apart from very wet, and require little care apart from tying the branches in once a year.

In summer, they erupt into magnificent displays, smothered in bold, bright, trumpet-shaped flowers that bees just adore. Widely grown on the continent, you may have seen their bold, usually red, displays before, but this new breeding has brighter, stronger colours.

You will get on established plant each of:

- "Indian Summer" £16.99 – mandarin orange 550001
 - "Gold Trumpet" £16.99 – golden yellow 550002
 - "Fire Trumpet" £16.99 – fiery scarlet red 550003
- Campsis 2L – Pack of all 3 £47.97 SAVE £5 550046

Why not plant all three along a fence, wall, or shed for a spectacular display or share them with friends if you haven't got space for all three.

A Greek Odyssey with Bettany Hughes

Friday 9.00pm Channel 5

IFIRST FELL IN love with ancient Greece by reading books on a freezing beach in Hythe, near Folkestone,” recalls Bettany Hughes. “I didn’t go on foreign holidays when I was a kid, and I remember reading these stories about the myths and legends, thinking, ‘That sounds like an amazing, hot world that I want to explore.’”

She got her chance while studying ancient history at university, and Greece didn’t disappoint. “I had a summer romance with a boy and travelled around the islands on the back of his moped, sleeping on ferries and hitchhiking on fishing boats. That was 30 years ago, and I’ve been back every year. What I love about Greece is the tradition of xenia – you should always welcome strangers and make them feel like your guests. It’s why it’s such an amazing place to visit as a tourist, and this culture of friendliness to strangers goes right the way back to Odysseus’s story – it’s how he survives.”

In her new Channel 5 series, Hughes tries to retrace the journey of Homer’s epic hero, who may not be entirely mythical. “Odysseus could well be based on a real person. We go to the Peloponnese on the Greek mainland where a helmet made out of the tusks of wild boar has turned up that’s identical to one described in the story. So we know there are moments of history, but the myths and legends are also universal stories telling us how to live, and talking about things that we’re finding are incredibly important to us now – like resilience and facing unexpected dangers and loving home.”

It took ten years for Odysseus to sail from Troy back to his homeland in Ithaca. Hughes began her six-month shoot on the island of Chios off the Turkish coast, and ended on Ithaca, which is west of continental Greece. “Chios has a reputation, going way back back to ancient history, for having some of the best sailors in the Mediterranean. I went on a beautiful yacht called Nemesis, which means fate or retribution. It didn’t seem like a very good name, but loads of dolphins played with the boat, and in ancient legend they’re messengers from the sea god Poseidon. If they sail with you, it’s supposed to be a really good omen, so we felt blessed as we set off. Exploring by boat is one of the most beautiful ways to see Greece, and you’re travelling as the ancients would have travelled – you’re seeing it through their eyes.”

In the interests of historical and mythical veracity, she relived her student days and travelled on less glamorous vessels, too. “We know Odysseus used lots of different kinds of craft, so I sailed on 27 boats. We travelled during the winter because we wanted to experience the beauty of the sea, but also its roughness – just as he did – and ended up getting caught up in two incredible storms, where the waves were between six and nine metres high. Once we were out on a little sailing boat in the middle of the night and it was scary. I came away from the series with even more respect for those ancient sailors in their tiny wooden boats.”

HUGHES’S 1,700 MILE-LONG voyage took her to lesser-known islands as well as perennially popular destinations such as Santorini, Mykonos and Crete. “Santorini is one big volcano where a huge eruption went off around 3,600 years ago and buried a whole prehistoric civilisation. Among the remains of Akrotiri – the Pompeii of the Aegean – are three-storey-high buildings with beautiful windows and frescoes that were covered by lava, pumice and ash.

“People think of Mykonos as a party island, but there’s an incredible Stone Age site on a beach that’s believed to be the tomb of Ajax, one of the heroes of Troy. And from there I took a speedboat to tiny Delos, one of the most sacred islands in the ancient world. It’s absolutely covered in extraordinary remains: temples, mosaics and streets. I went at dawn, so I had it to myself apart from the cats – Greek cats are always your companion!”

When she finally reached Ithaca, she was shaken awake on the first night by an earthquake, which felt like a fitting end to her epic trip. “Poseidon, who chased Odysseus down and made his journey very difficult, was the god of earthquakes as well, so we were being pursued right to the end.”

Bad-tempered gods weren’t the only hindrance; the coronavirus pandemic nearly cut her odyssey short. “We finished filming on the day that archaeological sites were closed in Greece and we got back [to the UK] just in time. This was a real journey of a lifetime, and I felt so lucky to manage to do it just before Covid-19 hit.” CLAIRE WEBB

Pensioners shortchanged

Older married women should check if they qualify for a higher state pension, says Paul Lewis

TENS OF THOUSANDS of older women are being paid too little state pension. The women who may be underpaid are all born before 6 April 1953. That means they get the old state pension, not the new one. It does not apply to younger women.

When a husband reaches state-pension age, his wife can get a pension based on his National Insurance Contributions of 60 per cent of the basic pension, which currently comes to £80.45 a week. That applies even if he – but not she – is on the new state pension. If she has a state pension less than £80.45 a week or none at all, it is topped up to that amount. Nowadays that higher pension should be paid automatically when her husband reaches pension age. However, before 17 March 2008, a married woman who already had a pension when her husband reached pension age had to apply for the upgrade.

Research done by former Pensions Minister Steve Webb indicates that there could be tens of thousands of women married to men born before 17 March 1943 who did not apply for the upgrade and still get less than £80.45 a week. There may also be some with younger husbands who, mistakenly, were not upgraded automatically.

Not every woman in this position will be due extra pension. Her husband must normally have a full basic state pension – currently that is £134.25 a week. It's only his basic pension that counts, not extras like additional pension. If he was originally given less than a full basic pension – called Category A – then his wife's pension on his contributions may be less than £80.45.

However, a married woman who does not get what is called a Category BL pension (see your original DWP pension paperwork) and has a basic pension less than £80.45 a week should still claim the extra and may be successful.

To see if you may qualify, use this calculator: <https://www.lcp.uk.com/is-your-state-pension-being-underpaid/>. If you think you may be due extra pension, apply as soon as you can because the DWP normally only backdates the extra pension 12 months. To claim, call the Pension Service on 0800 169 0154 or at gov.uk search “pension service”.

Word of the Week – normal

"Normal" is now on the lips of many. We share photos of our old normal while longing to discard what is fast becoming the new kind. Normal itself has meant many things. It arrived in English in the 17th century from the Latin normalis, meaning "at a right angle". Both are based on norma, a carpenter's square consisting of two arms at right angles used to ensure straight edges.

In a 1658 dictionary, normal is defined as "done exactly, according to the rule, or square". It is from here that we get the idea of a norm or standard set of affairs, as well as the modern sense of normal to mean conforming to a regular pattern. From this same trail came "enormous" (e-, "out of", and norma, "standard") used originally for something out of the ordinary, before it settled upon size.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

POWERFUL VIEWING
Tony Slattery now and (below) in the 90s musical Radio Times

When the national singalong for VE Day was announced, I thought of a musical I saw in the early 1990s that was a homage to the morale-boosting power of wartime radio shows such as It's That Man Again. It was called Radio Times and starred Tony Slattery.

Fast-forward and who should appear in RT (16 May) but Tony Slattery, his face etched with years of troubled mental health. The candour, courage and humility he showed in What's the Matter with Tony Slattery? (21 May BBC2) made for extremely powerful viewing.

I hope Tony will be able to conquer his demons and have a brighter future. Radio Times will always be my favourite musical and, thanks to a new-to-me CD, I now have a recording that, unlike my wonky cassette, plays at the correct speed.

Maybe that's a good omen, Tony.

7pm it was the turn of Sophie Ellis-Bextor with her Kitchen Disco, which turned out to be the best two hours of music we'd heard in a long time.

TIMELY REMINDER

Many thanks to BBC2 for the magnificent but disturbing first episode of the new series of A House through Time (26 May). Please remember that the Society for Effecting the Abolition of the Slave Trade was comprised of ordinary Quakers, with Thomas Clarkson as its fiery leader and William Wilberforce its House of Commons mouthpiece. What they achieved was miraculous.

Rowland Dale Birmingham

SPRINGWATCH TRIUMPH

The first special edition of Springwatch (26 May BBC2) was one of the best ever. Over many years it has become more and more complicated, losing much of the original charm, but the lockdown version was entertaining, delightful and educational.

DANCING QUEEN

Sophie Ellis-Bextor was a hit with her Kitchen Disco

Chris Packham was utterly brilliant, saying all the right things and with total honesty and passion. Well done to the team, including Michaela Strachan, who also said all the right things from South Africa. We missed her.

Mike and Lesley Wright

Canewdon, Essex

...The "stripped-down" Springwatch was an absolute triumph and so inspiring. With no gimmicks and minimal or remote technology, it showed us how wildlife appears to have taken over in the absence of human activity. I can't imagine any more powerful argument than these programmes to prove the value of the BBC and underline the importance of ensuring its independence.

Rosemary Curtis Swindon, Wiltshire

SPARKLING FORMULA

Praise be! For four weeks we're being treated to the brilliant Bill Nighy, Jon Glover and Suzanne Burden in the wonderful comedy drama A Charles Paris Mystery (Friday Radio 4). The quickfire repartee and laugh-out-loud situations simply can't be bettered.

John Brooks London SE3

SEW INSPIRED

Shining out among the repeats of repeats and something to look forward to each week have been Grayson's Art Club (C4/All 4) and The Great British Sewing Bee (Wednesday BBC1).

Grayson Perry's encouragement and cheerfulness are infectious, in a good way!

I am amazed, too, at the skill and imagination of the sewers in Sewing Bee, which is full of fun and laughter, a real pleasure to watch.

I want to dig out my sketch books and dust down my sewing machine, which surely is the point of these programmes! More like this, please.

Pippa Tremlett

CODE BREAKERS

Whoever it was at Sky that came up with the idea of teaming Stephen Graham with Daniel Mays in the comedy Code 404 is a visionary genius!

Edlin Parks Horsham, Sussex
Code 404 was Sky's biggest comedy launch in eight years, with record cumulative figures for episode one of 1.9 million viewers across Sky 1 and Now TV – unsurprising, then, that they've announced it will return for a second series.

BLOODIEST BATTLE

I was disappointed that Britain's Lost Battlefields with Rob Bell (5 Select/My5) didn't feature the battle that really is "lost" (unlike Naseby, Hastings etc) and which, despite being the bloodiest battle fought on English soil, few people ever seem to have heard of. I live a mile from the site of the Battle of Towton, which took place in blizzard conditions on Palm Sunday 1461 between the Houses of York and Lancaster. It was one of the key battles in the Wars of the Roses and, reputedly, 28,000 soldiers died that day.

ALL DAY WITH RADIO 2

Radio 2 gave us a very enjoyable day on Bank Holiday Monday (25 May). Every hour, we listened to Ken Bruce's All-Day Popmaster competition and realised how little we knew. We lunched with Claudia Winkleman – always a treat – and had tea with Sara Cox. Then at RT: "It was done by my wife Susan, who does other members of our household as well – she's had a lot of practice over the years. She's trimmed my hair every few weeks during lockdown – aren't I lucky!"

BOUQUETS FOR CHELSEA

I cannot praise the BBC highly enough for presenting the RHS Chelsea Flower Show this year from its presenters' own gardens. From reminding us of stunning show gardens from past years to answering viewers' questions and offering tips for growing successfully in whatever space we have available, Chelsea has helped us through another week in this most difficult time of all our lives.

Hilary Willson

...What a joy the Chelsea programmes (BBC1/BBC2) have been. I hope the BBC will do the same again for the RHS Flower Shows at Hampton Court and Tatton.

TIME FOR A TRIM

My husband was due for a haircut when lockdown was announced and he is beginning to resemble a certain breed of dog used to advertise paint. Huw Edwards and Hugh Pym on the 10pm News (26 May BBC1) both looked as beautifully coiffed as usual. How? Do they have access to a barber with 2m-long scissors?

Sheila Colman Keyworth,

RACISM IN THE STREET

I've been a fan of Coronation Street (ITV) for many years, but I've never seen an episode as powerful as that on 22 May, which addressed the issues of racism and homophobia.

The calm, measured and unsentimental denunciation of the racist manager of the bistro by Ed Bailey (Trevor Michael Georges) was clearly from the heart. It was electrifying.

Later in the episode, Ed finally realised that the homophobia being experienced by his footballer son James paralleled the racism that he had encountered all his life. It was moving to watch as he found the strength and the words to recognise his own failings and literally embrace his son for the person that he was.

Beverley Mason Cardiff
Baroness Doreen Lawrence – whose son Stephen was killed in a racist murder in 1993 – worked with the series on the Bailey family episodes.

NORMAL VALUES

During the most unusual time in most people's memory, it's apt that several programmes have made us think about what it means to be "normal". Most prominent is the excellent Normal People (BBC1), but I was especially touched by Soul Boy: Our Lives (27 May BBC1).

It introduced us to Anthony, a teenager raised in care whose unexpected love of Northern Soul music inspired all around him and gave him a sense of belonging. What a beautiful story to show us the happiness that comes from embracing, rather than closing off, the unusual parts of ourselves.

Jack Webb Chester

AMBRIDGE MONOLOGUES

As a lifelong listener to The Archers (Radio 4), I'm disappointed that it could not be made via some Zoom-type collaboration. Surely listeners would have preferred to sacrifice perfect sound recording rather than the dire monologues we have now. I feel we have lost one of our national treasures, just when we need it most.

Jenny Chesshire Telford, Shropshire

BEWARE THE MOZZIE

While having greatly enjoyed Levison Woods's Walking with Elephants (C4), I wish he'd stop referring to various large mammals as "the most dangerous animals in Africa". His chances of getting killed by a hippo, elephant or lion were far lower than getting killed by the seriously most dangerous animal in Africa, the Anopheles mosquito that carries the malaria parasite.

In 2018, there were an estimated 405,000 deaths from malaria ▷

YOU ASK US

What's it like to transform your life?

The families in A Country Life for Half the Price (Channel 5) were so courageous. I've love to know more – will there be a follow-up?

Pauline Coombs, Sale, Cheshire
Great news – production company Raise the Roof hopes to start filming four follow-up episodes later this year, for broadcast next April/May. Executive producer Andrew Jackson tells RT: "Everyone's writing protocols about how to film in a safe and socially distant way, so TV is starting to gear up. You'll find out if the Cooks in Shetland have transformed their horsebox into an Airbnb, or the Goldbys in Shropshire have got their cow..."

"The Covid-19 crisis will be an interesting lens to see how the first year has been. I suspect they're all enjoying their new lives even more than they thought, but they might not have been able to get building work done, for example. The people in series one wanted sustainable lives. It was all about taking money off the mortgage, and reading the kids a bedtime story rather than being stuck on the M25."

"Series two will be eight episodes rather than six, and we're casting for that over the next few months. We're looking for a mix of families who know where they want to go and even the house they want to get. We'll help them sort out their animals and veg patch and so on.

COUNTRY LIVING
The Goldby family swapped Surrey for Shropshire. Inset: Kate Humble helps to peel apples

"Kate Humble has signed up for the next series, too. She's really passionate about it as she's done it herself – she quit west London 12 years ago and bought a smallholding in the Welsh hills. So she knew exactly where to go when the Goldbys wanted to get hens, and she sourced their pigs. She offers lots of help."

If that appeals and you'd like to take part in series two, email country@raisetherooftproductions.com (subject line: Application).

HELP THE HEARTACHE

At a time when elderly residents of care homes are isolated from their families, it's good to learn about the Smiling Sessions. Made by a team at Shapeshifter Productions, who in normal times play at care homes, these are singalong videos of well-known songs, with on-screen lyrics so everyone can join in. They now also feature celebrity guests – this week Scottish actor Derek Riddell (from A Confession); next week Basil Brush and Mike Windsor!

The singalongs are free, but the team are seeking donations in order to buy tablets so that more care homes can take part. To sing along, go to <http://bitly.ws/8Dyy>

CORRECTION

In last week's Your RT Money, Paul Lewis explained the dos and don'ts for furloughed workers and said, "Every day of leave must be paid at 100% of wages not 80%, and no HMRC grant will be given for those days of leave." That was partly incorrect: every day of leave must be paid at 100%, but the Treasury's grant covers 80% of wages.

KEVIN McNALLY

The Das Boot star has swapped the submarine for his home studio

What's been on your watchlist?

I saw Unorthodox on Netflix, which was very interesting. And because I so enjoyed the performance of its star, Shira Haas, I also sought out Shtisel, which had some fascinating insights into Jerusalem's orthodox community. I also enjoyed The Kominsky Method with Michael Douglas. And I attempted to watch all of the classic animated features on Disney+, but I ran out of steam around Alice in Wonderland.

Do you and your wife [Phyllis Logan] watch TV together?

We did sit down together the other day to watch Terry Johnson's wonderful film Cor, Blimey! from 2000, about the relationship between Sid James and Barbara Windsor. It's rare that we'll do that, though, because we have quite different tastes. She'll usually watch regular telly in the living room and I'll lie on the bed with my iPad resting on a pillow. But that's fine. We always get together for meals.

How has being in lockdown affected your career?

It was more by accident than foresight that I installed a recording studio in my study before the lockdown started. So Phyllis and I are both currently recording narrations for upcoming TV series, which means we can cover the wine bills. But a lot of my upcoming projects have been postponed. Old hacks like me are lucky in that we can survive for a while not working. The people I feel sorry for are those who are just starting out. They had all these dreams and suddenly everything's stopped.

Is your latest series, Das Boot, the ultimate lockdown drama? After all, it's about being confined in close quarters...

Yes, exactly! And the scenes on the U-boat are my favourite parts of the series. It's also a cracking binge-watch because you have three amazing stories involving the French, the Germans and the Americans, all of which are intertwined.

Last year, you starred in Dad's Army: the Lost Episodes. Would you ever like to play Captain Mainwaring again?

It would be hard because there aren't any other lost episodes and it would take a very brave person to attempt to write new ones. There was talk that we'd do it as a stage show, but the way things are now, it's doubtful that'll happen – at least not for a very long time anyway.

Are there any other classic characters you'd like to revive?

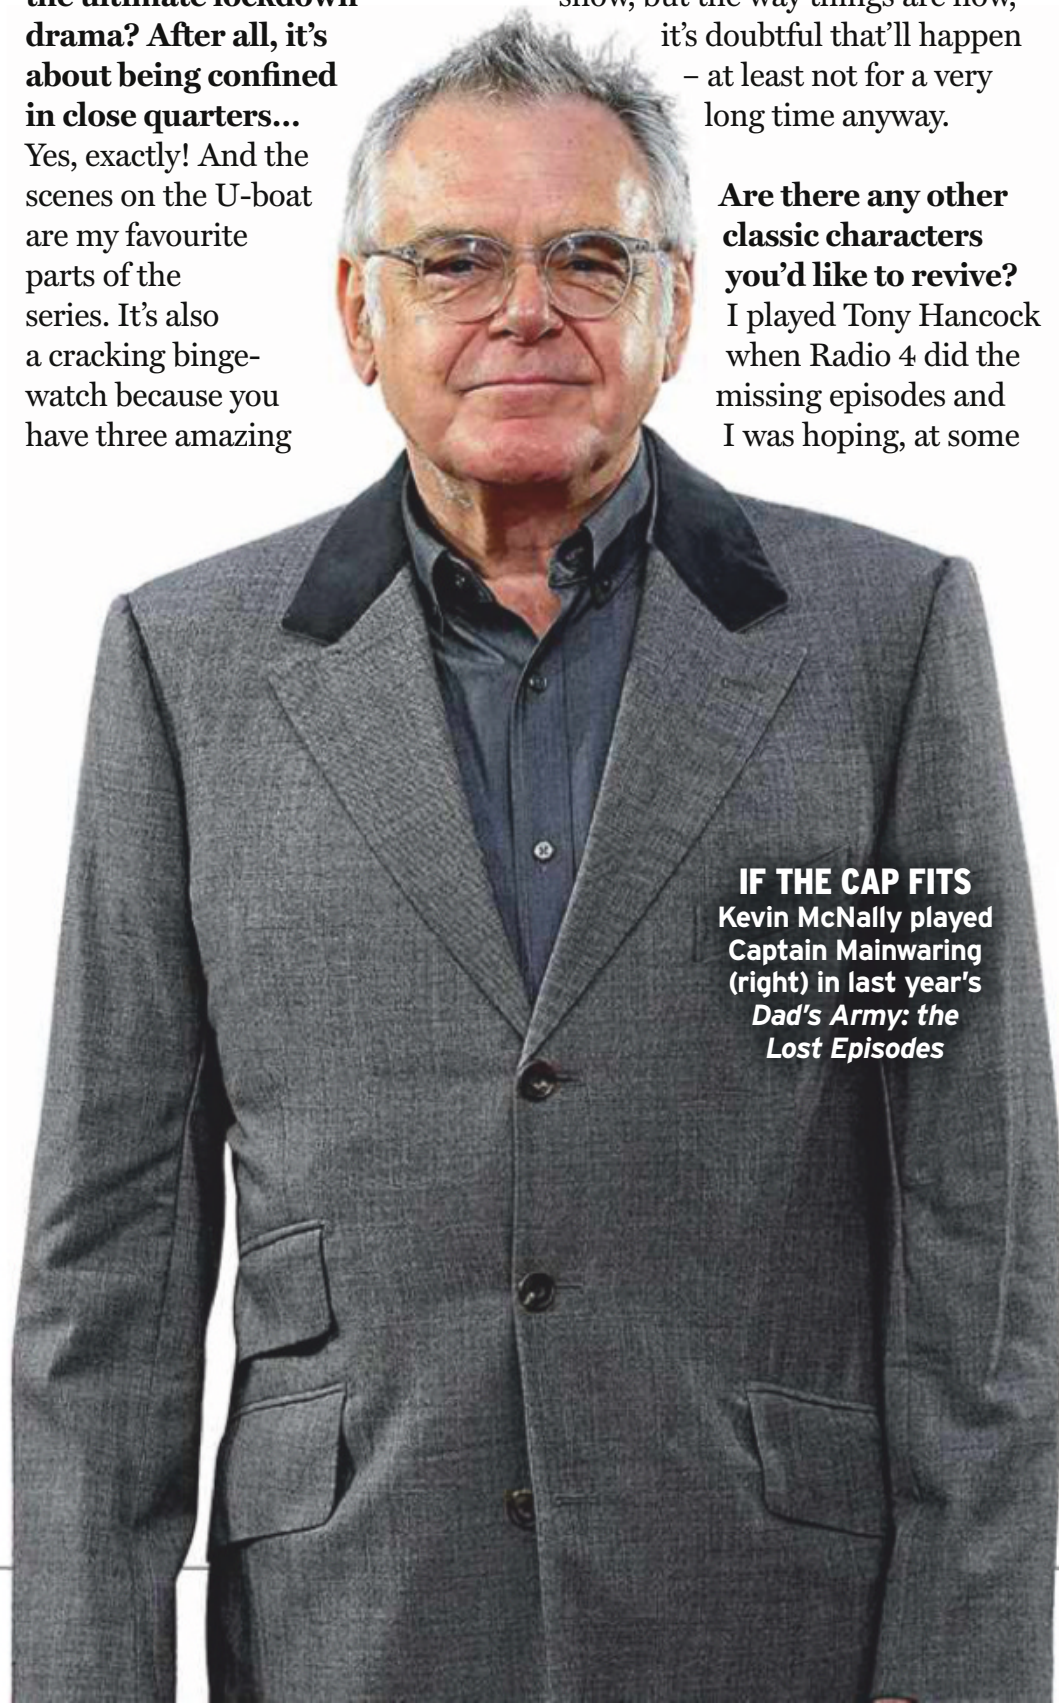

I played Tony Hancock when Radio 4 did the missing episodes and I was hoping, at some point, to re-create those lost radio episodes theatrically, too. But, again, that's been scuppered.

What do you think the future holds for actors?

One of the problems making a TV show, for instance, is that it involves a lot of people in the same place at the same time. I read an article that described a set as being a Petri dish of infection, which is true. As soon as one person falls ill, everyone else does, too. I'm slightly concerned about what's going to happen to those of us who are over 60. There's a lot of talk, particularly in America, about not being able to insure those who are more vulnerable. But regardless of age, it's looking pretty bleak for the rest of the year and it's very hard to know which type of production will be the first to come back. DAVID BROWN

Kevin McNally stars in Das Boot, Tuesday 9.00pm, 10.10pm Sky Atlantic

IF THE CAP FITS

NOTHING TO WATCH?

PODCAST Recently I've been asked to do a lot of them. I did My Time Capsule with Michael Fenton Stevens, which was really good, and a great one with Sacha Bennett called The Isolation Station.

BOOKS I can recommend Neil Shubin's Your Inner Fish if you like fossils and palaeontology. As far as fiction is concerned, I've been revisiting my old favourite, PG Wodehouse – lockdown reading to cheer you up.

RT WINE OFFER

£13!

ENJOY A SUMMER FIZZ FIESTA

Pop fruity La Vida Bonita for just £3.29 a bottle!

Pick up a case of six for just £19.74 (was £32.94), plus FREE delivery (usually £7.99) and enjoy a delicious taste of the Mediterranean good life

A NEW SUMMER SPARKLER

Never mind Prosecco and forget Champagne, meet the sparkler that's dazzling everyone who tastes it. Popular in the seaside bars of Valencia, La Vida Bonita is a feather-light, fruit-filled Spanish fizz that's made from the Moscatel grape.

TASTING NOTES

Perhaps its appeal is due to the seductive peach and orange blossom aromas and lovely, fruity grape flavour... all joyfully delivered on a soft wave of delicate bubbles. It has that tantalising "have-another-glass" hint of sweetness and – at just 5% alcohol – there's no reason not to!

SAVE £13 PLUS FREE DELIVERY

It really is the perfect summer sipper. So, we've teamed up with our friends at Laithwaite's Wine to bring Radio Times readers this special offer. Pick up a case of six for just £32.94 £19.74. The enticing case saving of £13 means you are paying only £5.49 £3.29 a bottle. What's more, we'll deliver to you for FREE (usually £7.99).
