JANE HALL REPORTS

ALL THIS LUXURY. PLUS THE MOST ADVANCED

With its new standard V6 engine, its sleek new aerodynamic styling and new tire technology, The New Chevrolet is so advanced no other 1980 full-size car with standard powertrain beats its EPA estimated MPG. And none matches its highway estimate (except in California).

What makes this new efficiency especially attractive is what comes with it—the room, the elegant comfort, quietness and smoothness of America's most popular

California estimates slightly higher. Remember: Compare the "estimated MPG" to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage, depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions, and trip length. Actual highway mileage will probably be less than the highway estimate. The New Chevrolet is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.

Goodbye '70s, Hello '80s

A look at where television has been and where it's heading

By Neil Hickey

Janus, the god of portals in Roman mythology, was also the patron of beginnings and endings, and as such, had two faces: one looking forward, the other back. As new decades begin, the urge both to reminisce and to prophesy waxes powerful, and in the case of one industry—television—that urge requires godlike perceptions to see, in the past, clues to the future.

But only mortals are at hand, regrettably, to assay the 1970s, a decade of bewilderment and expectation about colossal evolutionary changes in television, and to handicap the 1980s as the decade when (it is imagined) we will at last enter a luxuriant new telecommunications future.

A few experts are predicting Armageddon toward the end of the new decade—for the traditional institutions of American commercial broadcasting: three networks and more than 700 local stations. Will they survive the guerrilla siege being laid by cable TV, videodiscs, video recorders, satellite transmission and pay-TV? Early in the 1970s, the pioneer backers of those new systems were at pains to convince the rich and politically powerful broadcast establishment that they were no threat to the established order—lest they be devoured in infancy. As Woody Allen put it (in another connection): “The lion will lie down with the lamb but the lamb won’t get much sleep.” →

But the lamb grows bolder, and in the 1980s will attain such heft as to challenge the lion.

Other experts are certain that today's giant networks have nothing to fear and will continue dominant to the millennium and beyond, adjusting their priorities and adapting to the new realities.

And yet . . . to take just one example of what's in store, there's little doubt that, by 1990, Earth stations for receiving TV signals from satellites will be a common sight all across the American landscape. A lot more will have changed by then: we'll have 244 million Americans—about 40 million more than in 1970; the number of American households will grow twice as fast as the population, partly because of divorces and separations; we'll have 93 million television homes instead of 1970's 60 million; and the population will be getting noticeably older: the median age of Americans in 1990 will be 32.8 years (it was 28.1 in 1970) and middle-aged folks (35 to 54) will be the fastest-growing segment of the population through the next decade.

And so the urge to look backward and forward, like Janus, is one we won't resist. The view in both directions is fascinating.

THE PROGRAMS

The September 1970 prime-time television schedule contained 16 variety shows (Lawrence Welk, Ed Sullivan, Andy Williams, Glen Campbell, Johnny Cash, Dean Martin, Tom Jones, et al.). The current schedule has none. Only three programs survive from that 1970 premiere week: Disney's Wonderful World, Hawaii Five-O and 60 Minutes. Marcus Welby, M.D. was the top-ranked series that autumn, trailed by The Flip Wilson Show, Here's Lucy, Ironside and Gunsmoke. Of the top-20 offerings of the entire decade, eight were segments of Roots, the medium's all-time ratings smash; seven others were Super Bowl games and two were "Gone with the Wind."

A pair of rules adopted in the 1970s greatly changed the character of prime-time entertainment: the so-called Prime-Time-Access Rule, which in effect removed from network control the 7:30 to 8 P.M. (ET) weekday period for the purposes of expanding the sources of program supply and encouraging local stations to originate more shows; and the Family Viewing Rule (sanitizing the 7-9 P.M. time period), which the industry imposed upon itself in 1975 in response to audience and Congressional shock over shows such as NBC's 1974 TV-movie "Born Innocent," which contained explicit scenes of a 14-year-old girl's rape by other inmates in a reform school.

Both rules failed spectacularly, each in its own way. The Prime-Time Access Rule, still in effect, has led to a sorry goulash of syndicated game shows, while doing virtually nothing to improve local stations' coverage of their own communities. The Family Viewing Rule—which had the effect of making the 9-11 P.M. period safe for sex and violence—was found unconstitutional by a Federal district court in November 1976—a decision that an appeals court overturned last November, leaving the rule's fate uncertain.

Oddly, those two rules had a reverberant effect never imagined by their creators. By jostling and interrupting tried-and-true program scheduling strategies, they set the stage for the industry's most seismic event of the decade: the precipitate and unpredicted accession of the lowly and contemned ABC network to the ratings leadership, displacing lordly CBS, which had reigned as if by divine right from 1956 to 1976.

One figure was central to that saga. His career provided the industry with more fun and gossip than that of any other television executive in the 1970s. Fred Silverman began the decade as a CBS whiz kid in charge of programming, and in a daring 1975 leap, defected to third-place ABC, where he assisted the company to ratings dominance before assuming the presidency of the entire National Broadcasting Company in 1978. There he remains enthroned today, the chosen prophet to lead that organization out of the Nielsen desert to the Promised Land of higher profits.

The preeminent television producer of the 1970s was Norman Lear, whose All in the Family changed the face of prime-time entertainment when it first appeared in 1971. Lear was asked recently whether things had changed much during the decade. "The competition for ratings is now a conflagration," he said. "It's no longer on the back burner, as it was at the start of the decade; in fact, it has engulfed the industry." Television is consumed by the pursuit of short-term gain to the exclusion of long-term public interest, or even its own long-term self-interest, he feels. Today's TV executives "have no room in their bellies for innovation," Lear believes. "The visionaries like Pat Weaver are gone and the medium is in the hands of technocrats." What do we need for the 1980s? "A new breed of visionaries," says Norman Lear.

Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, president of NBC in the 1950s, accuses commercial television of strategic "stupidity" for moving further and further in the 1970s toward pandering to juvenile tastes and the "heavy-viewing center," while forsaking the interests of better-educated people, and even the interests of large institutional advertisers, many of whom were enthusiastic TV sponsors in earlier days but who are reluctant to underwrite the situation comedies and cop shows offered to them now.

That's why conventional broadcasting will face significant problems in the 1980s. Weaver claims, even though profits are high right now. "The advertising people are a lot smarter than the network people think, and TV audiences are more ready than ever before for product far beyond what the set gives them." When he and his peers sat down to map out television's future back in the '40s and '50s, "We knew we were running the most important communications activity in the history of man," Weaver recalls. "We had the potential for turning the common man into the uncommon man. TV people should want to help inform, enrich and enlighten as well as entertain."

But are today's network executives interested in those abstractions? "No," says Pat Weaver. "And that's unfortunate. But in the 1980s we'll have another chance."

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE INDUSTRY

Today, profits in the television industry are at record highs. Wall Street analysts are certain that, no matter what new gadgets emerge for home-TV use, conventional broadcasting will be a vastly lucrative enterprise to 1990 and beyond. Network pre-tax profits jumped 562 per cent ($56.4 million to $373.5 million) between 1968 and 1978, and even in 1974 and 1975, the longest and deepest recession in the postwar period, broadcasting outperformed the rest of the economy.

All suspicion to the contrary, the vast majority (90 per cent) of the homes using television at any given moment in prime time still tune in the commercial networks, and that figure has remained constant through the 1970s, even with the growth of cable TV, pay-TV, public TV and nonaffiliated stations. Even the most loyal network partisan, however, admits that that share of the audience will decline measurably (at least 10 per cent) in the next decade as viewers begin to notice the tempt- → ing new dishes in this emerging telecommunications smorgasbord. The number of television homes actually using their TV sets on an average evening may jump from the current 60 per cent to perhaps 80 per cent, as American families eager to save gas, money and time simply stay home and watch a pay-TV movie or spin a few videodiscs.

The upshot of it all is that—as security analyst Ellen Berland Sachar (of Goldman, Sachs & Co.) puts it—conventional broadcasting “is not likely to fall apart” in the foreseeable future because (among other reasons) it’s a marvelously efficient mass-marketing tool for mass-produced and mass-consumed items like toiletries, food and soap. And the American consumer’s capacity for home entertainment and information—old-style as well as new-fangled—has not yet been charted.

Television’s economic health in the 1980s will depend, in no small measure, on regulatory decisions (or lack of them) made in Washington. The mood of the Carter years, both at the Federal Communications Commission and in Congress, has been distinctly laissez faire toward telecommunications: let market forces, rather than Government, decide the shape of the industry. Many Government regulations impeding the growth of cable, pay television and satellite transmission were removed during the 1970s.

Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Cal.), chairman of the House subcommittee that oversees broadcasting, agrees and points out that the scarcity of channels in television broadcasting is a totally artificial one, “created by a combination of regulation and public ignorance” about the potential of cable systems, satellite-receiving dishes and other new tools. The public soon will discover, says Van Deerlin, that it’s been kept “subsisting on a starvation diet of situation comedies, warmed-over reruns and canned applause—while the cupboard is full, and just waiting to be raided.”

THE NEWS

In 1973-74, after years of sometimes brutal conflict between the networks and the White House, it was television that gave the Nation its most riveting and illuminating civics lesson when it broadcast the House and Senate Water-gate hearings, which dramatized how our system operates in moments of constitutional crisis.

In 1976, television news helped elevate an obscure one-term ex-governor to national attention. “Carter had 12 Democratic challengers, almost all of whom were better known than he was,” says one TV news executive. “Television gave him the national identity he needed.” Carter and John F. Kennedy used television better than any other President of the TV era, say most experts, and televised campaign debates—16 years apart—were crucial to the victories of both.

During the 1970s, TV journalists realized that the 30-minute nightly newscasts were far too skimpy to convey a proper sense of the day’s news, and began agitating for hour-long newscasts. But neither networks nor affiliated stations were willing to hand over the extra half hour, and probably won’t in the 1980s. Says former ABC News boss Eimer Lower: “News is important to the networks. Whenever they get in a jam with Congress or the FCC, they never talk about Laverne & Shirley; they talk about the evening news, magazine shows and news specials. But if the networks don’t rise to meet the challenges of the 1980s, they may lose their strong news position. They can do more if they just show a little statesmanship. If they don’t, Ted Turner will steal the show from them.”

Who? Ted Turner, the wealthy yachtsman/entrepreneur and owner of Atlanta’s so-called “superstation” (WTBS), is financing television’s first 24-hour-a-day all-news program to be distributed → to cable systems via satellite, and he confidently expects to have four million viewing homes by next June's start-up date, 7.5 million in two years, and 30 to 35 million by the middle of the decade. Turner says he is spending $40 million of his own money on the scheme in the first year, and that figure (he estimates) may go to $100 million before the news network becomes profitable.

Turner's Cable News Network is thought by many in the industry to be the most promising idea to hit broadcast news in decades. Says Assistant Secretary of Commerce Henry Geller, the Administration's chief broadcast theorist: "I think it's a wonderful development; it's the exact thing that should be done and I certainly hope it succeeds, because it brings added diversity."

A few industry experts foresee the day when the conventional networks will get out of the entertainment business altogether and concentrate on their unique strength: namely, news and sports. While not agreeing with that sentiment, NBC's Fred Silverman confessed recently that news would be "the most important service we provide" in the 1980s and claimed that "the most important long-term changes we can make will be in the area of news. We have something unique, something none of the new technologies will ever have—a professional staff of journalists with the ability to transmit world events into every living room in the country."

THE TECHNOLOGY

"The potential of the satellite is so great that it will change the entire fabric of society," says British scientist James Martin in his book "The Wired Society." And that assessment leaves aside all the other paraphernalia we've been hearing about during the last decade—cable, pay-TV, videodiscs, video recorders, interactive two-way home-video systems—the cumulative effect of which over the next 10 years is impossible to assay for even the most perceptive and reckless theorizer.

Consider that, in 1970, only 4.5 million American homes had cable television and by 1990, about 40 million will. Pay-cable television didn't exist 10 years ago, but 20 million homes may have it 10 years from now. RCA recently guessed that there'll be 25 to 40 million videodisc players in use in 1990, and that sales of players and discs will be a multibillion-dollar industry.

A grand sweep of historical forces in the 1970s changed the very nature and prospects of American telecommunications: around 1972, the FCC began its

A few industry experts foresee the day when the networks will get out of entertainment and concentrate on news and sports.

"Open Skies Policy," giving private industry the green light to operate domestic communications satellites; cable and pay-TV emerged from the regulatory cocoon that had threatened to suffocate them; fiber optics and laser technology promised scores of channels into and out of the home: the Public Broadcasting Service and the Home Box Office pay-TV company pioneered the use of satellites for regular transmission of their programs; last August, Comsat dropped the bombshell that it planned to offer by 1983 a direct satellite-to-home pay-TV service, a system of transmission that some fear might one day obviate all others; in October, the FCC in a major policy decision effectively took itself out of regulating who can and can't own a satellite-receiving station; in September, IBM and MCA Inc. "sent shock waves through the industry" (as Business Week put it) with an announcement that they were joining forces in a new company called DiscVision Associates to build and market videodisc players and discs; and the parent companies of all three commercial networks started down the uncharted path of creating and acquiring programs for the emerging home-video systems.

This year, NASA will launch its space shuttle—the most significant space feat since the Apollo program—and as a result the puny satellites we've known so far (6- to 7-foot long, 400-500 pounds) will be replaced by others weighing many tons that will be ferried into space in the vehicle's freight-car-sized cargo bay. That new generation of powerful satellites will make feasible Earth stations so small and so cheap that by the end of the decade, many American families will be buying them for their rooftops and attics.

Of the Nation's 4100 cable systems, half will soon have Earth stations and doubtless all of 1990's cable companies will be able to offer their customers the movies, sports events and informational services raining down from those stationary-orbit transmitters 23,000 miles over our heads. The cable industry was "down and out" in 1970, recalls Tom Wheeler, president of the National Cable Television Association, "but we're looking at a whole new horizon now that looks as bright as the early '70s looked dark." Ninety-eight per cent of American homes have conventional television, Wheeler points out, but one-third of those homes do two-thirds of the viewing. "We're going for that two-thirds who turn off their sets because they don't like what's there. We're going to give them an option."

And options are what the 1980s are all about. If a mere 25 million homes paid only $5 a month for special, alternate programming, says Pat Weaver, the resulting $125-million monthly fund would turn the TV production system upside down and create "a profusion of great, new, fresh material" that could be available for purchase on video-discs after its pay-TV run. A recent, landmark Nielsen survey showed that some pay-cable programs get far larger audiences (in pay-TV homes) than their competition on the three commercial networks and regularly run a far closer fourth than anybody had imagined.

People like cable pioneer Irving Kahn (chairman of BroadBand Communications, Inc.) are outspoken in their conviction that fiber optics and satellites will create for us a "thousand-lane highway where we now have a horse-and-buggy path" and that the old-fashioned network-affiliate structure will be obsolete by decade's end.

Fred Silverman tends to disagree with that, but even he has allowed that by the 1990s NBC might be feeding six "networks" simultaneously instead of only one (e.g. concerts, children's shows, news, sports). The Administration's Henry Geller sees TV ending up as a "video publisher" with an industry structure like magazines, offering fare for every special interest.

And so—what are the answers to such remaining questions as: Will these new video services—most of which involve cost to the consumer—drive a wedge between the haves and the have-nots in our society, depriving poor families of information and entertainment they've received on "free TV" all these years? Will this bewildering array of choices induce in consumers (as Swedish scientists have suggested) a clinical catatonia triggered by neurotic indecision over what to watch? Will newspapers and neighborhood movie houses become relics as the services they purvey become increasingly available on TV screens?

Beats the heck out of us. All we know is that there is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, will make a lot of people rich if they work it right, and change the lives of the rest of us in important ways.

But that's a story for another decade. See you in 1990. END

At home on the street

Threlkeld at work, interviewing a food chemist.

Dropped as an anchorman, Richard Threlkeld is back at the job he likes best—covering the news

By John Weisman

There is a story, no doubt apocryphal, about a reporter who discovered a much-decorated Marine pilot blasting away with an old carbine at the base rifle range. "How come you're wasting your time like this when you fly a million-dollar fighter?" the reporter asked.

The pilot stroked his trusty M-1. "I sorta consider myself a rifleman who's just temporarily flying jets," he said.

Richard Threlkeld is like that, too. The slim, 42-year-old from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, flew the CBS Morning News for a while (he was co-anchor). But he always considered the assignment temporary. His real trade, he tells you, is "grunt" journalist—street reporter.

These days he's back doing what he does best. Since January 1979, he has been the reporter for "Cover Story," the lead feature on CBS's newspaper of the air, Sunday Morning. In the past year he has flown more than a quarter of a million miles and reported from 35 states and half a dozen foreign countries. According to Threlkeld, who loves reporting even more than California wines and running, he has a near-perfect assignment.

"I still don't know what it all means," he says. "What I do know is that every week we try to synthesize an important story in a way that'll do more than just tell what's happened."

For Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping's U.S. visit, for example, Threlkeld and his staff of four dug out a copy of Marco Polo's first-hand impressions on entering old Cathay for the first time. As viewers watched shots of Deng's progress through state dinners, Kennedy Center galas, meetings with President Carter and assorted rodeos, factory visits and barbecues, Threlkeld read from a translation of Polo's 14th-century text. The juxtaposition was, in the words of one of his competitors, "Just spectacular—a classic example of brilliant TV reporting."

Threlkeld smiles. "I guess I have what you could call a pretty good deal."

It certainly sounds that way. Especially for Threlkeld, who made his reputation at CBS as a "fireman"—a guy who could, and did, cover wars in Cambodia, Vietnam and Lebanon; who could jump on a plane and the next day report with considerable authority about the intricacies of Italian politics; who was resourceful enough to wangle dummy scripts past Indian censors in New Delhi while he slipped the real story onto the news-film sound track.

It's also a good deal for someone who, like Threlkeld, is known as a reporter who can work alone, when he has to. As CBS's one-man San Francisco bureau, for example, he covered the Patricia Hearst case and followed up on Sara Jane Moore's assassination attempt on President Gerald Ford. "Some correspondents need a producer with them," says one CBS source. "It was never that way with Dick. He'd do it all when he had to."

Not that the work is without its drawbacks. Threlkeld's marriage suffered (he and his wife have been separated* for more than five years). But his reporting and writing skills earned high marks from CBS News brass. He was one of the last TV newsmen evacuated from Phnom Penh and Saigon, back in 1975. It was Threlkeld's third tour there.

CBS Reports' Ed Bradley, who covered Cambodia and Vietnam at the same time as Threlkeld, remembers the quality of Threlkeld's work. "Dick is a gifted writer," Bradley says. "His stuff is poetic and sensitive and highly evocative. He is, however, one of the world's worst blackjack players."

Exactly how bad? "He lost a million Vietnamese piasters to me one night in Saigon," says Bradley. "And the so-and-so tried to pay me off just as the North Vietnamese were closing in and the bottom was falling out of the piaster market."

Threlkeld is a 14-year man at CBS. He started as an overnight assignment editor in 1966, moving on to become a producer, reporter and correspondent. And when the panjandrum at Black Rock decided to replace Hughes Rudd's curmudgeonly countenance with a more youthful one on the old Morning News, Threlkeld, who had never before worked as an anchor, was brought in.

The experiment was never entirely successful. Threlkeld's aviator-frame glasses and laid-back manner ("He brought 'mellow' to the Morning News," says one colleague) were seen by some as just plain dull. CBS News president Bill Leonard agreed. When Morning News was redesigned, Threlkeld and his co-anchor, Lesley Stahl, were dumped.

"I wasn't happy with the decision at first," Threlkeld says. "Nobody likes to think he's failed."

He didn't sulk very long, however. There wasn't much time for it. Although he's generally in the office on Monday, and returns Saturday to put "Cover Story" together, the rest of Dick Threlkeld's week is spent on the road. "I thought when I left the Morning News I'd have the chance to live more normally," he says, laughing.

On the other hand, perhaps Threlkeld is living normally—for a street reporter. Which is exactly what he wants to be. END

The day takes a lot of vitamins out of you...

Mega-Vitamins puts them back.

It happens. Every day. You lose some of the most important vitamins in your body. Like vitamin C and the B complex vitamins.

These are the vitamins your body doesn't store, and they should be replaced every day.

That's just what Mega-Vitamins does. Just one tablet each day gives you really potent amounts of these vitamins. In fact, you get five times the ordinary supplement level of B vitamins, and twice the vitamin C. Plus you get all the iron of regular Geritol.

Put back the vitamins the day takes away, with Mega-Vitamins. It's from Geritol, so you know it's potent.

'The Lathe of Heaven'

When facts look crazy, and your imagination shivers — that's science fiction at its best

By Ursula Le Guin

[PBS broadcasts "The Lathe of Heaven" on Wednesday, Jan. 9. See "Sports and Specials" for time and channel.—Ed.]

There's a funny thing about science fiction: it has fans. It has fans that make baseball and football fans look like pikers. Science fiction fans hold huge conventions; they run dozens of magazines full of news, reviews, letters and insults; they do awful things to people who say "sci-fi" instead of "SF"; they won't let Star Trek die; and they wear T-shirts like you never imagined. Why does "SF" rouse such loyalty—what does it do to people, anyhow?

I got to thinking this over while I was involved in turning my science fiction novel "The Lathe of Heaven" into a TV-movie. What occurred to me was this: maybe it isn't anything it does to people; but rather what it sometimes makes them do—or rather allows them, invites them to do. Something so many of our books and films and TV shows don't ever let people do: use their imaginations.

The secret of "SF," I think, is that even when it isn't very good, it involves the readers or viewers, because to follow it they have to use their minds and imagination. When a writer tells us, "The shadows of the moons were growing longer," we can't just register, "Oh, yeah, moonlight," and read on; we register, "Moons . . . double shadows . . . maybe triple shadows?" And right there our imagination has got a pleasant nudge. We have been asked to use our mind's eye, to see something for ourselves that we have never seen before. And this is a delight.

Now in filmed "SF" the moviemakers often tend to get carried away by the purely → visual possibilities. This works wonders when it produces things like the approach to Jupiter in "2001" or the desert-planet part of "Star Wars"—unforgettable visions. But the danger of using the visual as an end in itself is that you wind up with a lot of great landscapes and wonderful special effects, and nothing much else. It's pretty, but it ain't "SF."

Real "SF" is where real people get involved in doing real crazy things. . . .

Here's the basic proposition (the crazy part, in other words) of my book "The Lathe of Heaven": there is this ordinary guy named George, with one funny thing about him. Sometimes his dreams actually come true.

Now if you're willing to let me get by with that, with that one basic preposterous notion, then I'll keep my side of the bargain. I'll tell you the whole story as honestly as I can, with no faking. Every fact I borrow from the science I'm using (in this case, psychophysiology: sleep and dream research) will be on the level; and everything my characters say and do will be as close to real life as I know how to make it. Because that's the fun of the game—combining a fantastic idea with scientific fact and ordinary people, mixing it up together until facts look crazy and fantasy looks ordinary and it seems as if maybe neither of them can ever get anywhere without the other. . . . which is what "The Lathe of Heaven" is about.

Maybe the most interesting problem that faced us in planning and shooting "Lathe" was: how do you photograph a dream? The old movie conventions for dreams, such devices as the picture wavering or going blurry or staying fuzzy around the edges, struck me as all wrong. Dreams aren't fuzzy. Some of them are more intense, more vivid than anything we see waking.

We had to try to arrive at our own style, and it took some time, a couple of years, in fact. I remember spending a long, beautiful afternoon by a vast swimming pool in California with the producer-directors of the film, David Loxton and Fred Barzyk; and with Dr. William C. Dement, who is one of the foremost sleep researchers in the world; and eight or 10 lovely puma-colored cats wandering under the chairs.

David would say things like, "If you dream about a tree, what does the tree look like?" and Fred would say, "Where does the light come from in a dream?" and Dr. Dement told us about the researchers who are trying to map people's dreams to see if they ever end up in each other's territory. He even played us a record of a man in a sleep lab having a nightmare, his blood-curdling screams echoing across the pool while the cats drifted past like sunset clouds. . . . honestly, the whole thing could have been a dream.

Maybe that's when we decided to do without the blurries, and film the dreams just as we would film the waking scenes—not being really sure any more what the difference is. So when George dreams of a horse, we just show an ordinary, everyday horse. And when he dreams that aliens have invaded the moon, we just show an ordinary, everyday invasion of the moon. And when the Mad Doctor starts having his own dreams, we show an ordinary—well, no. You can't have an ordinary everyday End of the World! Things did get a little spectacular there for a while.

But I do hope that what stays with the viewer when the show's over won't be just the showy parts, but might instead be something one of the characters says, or a reflection in the water, or a glance.

Film is a visual medium, but that doesn't mean it all has to take place on the surface of your eyeballs. It can move right inside your head and be where it belongs, in the place where the dreams come from. END

OFFICIAL MATCH THE SUPERSTAR GAME RULES.

How to play:

1. Use this card when you watch Super Bowl XIV on CBS TV January 20, 1980.
2. Use the edge of a coin to rub off all five squares on this game card. If one of the jersey numbers on your game card is exactly the same as the number on the jersey of the Most Valuable Player in the 1980 Super Bowl announced at the end of the live network telecast, and the Most Valuable Player is from the same conference (AFC or NFC) displayed on your game card, you have won a coupon good for your choice of a free large bottle of Coke, TAB or Sprite, and you are also eligible for the cash prize sweepstakes drawing. Your chance of having a game card good for a free large bottle of Coke, TAB or Sprite is one in fifty.

If you miss the announcement of the Most Valuable Player in the network telecast of Super Bowl XIV, you can learn the winning number and league by calling the following toll-free number after the telecast January 20, through February 19, 1980: 1-800-241-3820 (Georgia residents call 1-800-282-1790).

3. To claim your free large bottle, if you are a winner, fill in your name and address and mail your winning game card to: Match the Superstar, P.O. Box 3408, Maple Plain, Minnesota 55359.

Upon receipt of your winning game card, Maple Plain Company, One Industrial Drive, Maple Plain, Minnesota 55348 will mail you a coupon good for a free large bottle of Coke, TAB or Sprite. Allow up to six weeks for coupon delivery.

4. Free large bottle coupons awarded in this game will be redeemable at retail stores where the specified product is sold. The coupons issued will be good for a free large bottle; up to, and including, 2 liter size, depending upon the type of package available in the local stores. Winners redeeming the coupons must pay local sales tax, if any, and bottle deposit, if required.
5. All winners of a free large bottle of Coke, TAB or Sprite who mail in for their free coupon will be entered in a random drawing for the cash prizes listed.
6. To claim your free large bottle coupon and to be eligible for the sweepstakes drawing, game cards from free bottle winners must be received at The Maple Plain Company by February 20, 1980. Each contest entrant assumes responsibility for delivery by the post office. Cash winners will be selected in a random drawing on February 27, 1980. Winners will be notified by mail or telephone immediately after the drawing. All cash prizes will be given away.
7. Your chance of winning a cash prize depends upon the number of winning game cards received by the official judging organization.
8. You can obtain a game piece by mailing a self-addressed stamped envelope containing a single handwritten request for one game piece to: MATCH THE SUPERSTAR GAME PIECE, P.O. Box 4530, Maple Plain, Minnesota 55359.
9. For a list of cash prize winners, send a separate, stamped self-addressed envelope to: Match the Superstar Winner's List, P.O. Box 4322, Maple Plain, Minnesota 55359.
10. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY.

Note:

Since teams participating in Super Bowl XIV were not determined prior to printing of game cards, it is possible that one or more of the numbered jerseys on game cards will not be represented by players in the Super Bowl.

Official Rules:

1. The decisions of the independent judging organization are final. Game cards that are illegible, forged, tampered with, mechanically altered, or are irregular in any way, will not be honored.
2. Only one cash prize and no more than five bottle prizes will be awarded per household. No substitute prizes are offered. Prizes are not transferable.
3. Winners are responsible for all local, state and federal taxes.
4. Contest is open only to residents (including Florida) in geographic areas in which displayed or advertised and where legal. Offer void in Maryland and wherever prohibited or restricted by law. Offer void outside U.S.A. All federal, state and local laws and regulations apply.
5. The contest is not open to employees (and their immediate families) of The Coca-Cola Company, its Bottlers or its advertising and judging agencies, the NFL or its member clubs. Cash winners may be subject to proving eligibility.
6. The Most Valuable Player in the 1980 Super Bowl for this game is selected by Sport Magazine.

The Screening Room

Previews of noteworthy series and specials by TV GUIDE programming editors
For movie choices, see 'This Week's Movies,' by Judith Crist, in this section

If a difference of opinion makes horse races, the 1980 Presidential derby should be off to a flying start this week: a crowded field of six GOP candidates (minus front-runner Ronald Reagan) and three Democratic contenders present their views in two nationally televised debates at the Civic Center in Des Moines, Iowa. The Republicans start it off on Saturday at 8:30 P.M., in a two-hour forum scheduled to be broadcast by ABC, CBS, NBC and PBS. On Monday at the same time it's the Democrats' turn, as the four networks zero in on President Jimmy Carter, Massachusetts senator Edward M. Kennedy and California governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. If politics aren't your preference, there's a tribute to Toscanini and the debut of a new series.

SATURDAY. 30 Minutes (1:30 CBS): which normally concentrates on the problems of American teen-agers, turns its attention to the violence and religious conflicts that have hardened the youth of Northern Ireland. "It doesn't bother me," a Belfast girl says of a terrorist attack that killed an army officer and injured an innocent bystander. "We're used to it," her sister says. "We see it everyday."

SUNDAY. Karl Malden, returning to series TV, plays a tough, 56-year-old Pittsburgh steelworker named Pete Skagska in Skag (8 NBC), a new drama series created by Emmy and Oscar winner Abby Mann. The well-acted opener deals frankly with the troubles besetting Skag and his family, including the promiscuity of his 15-year-old daughter and Skag's own sexual impotence.

TUESDAY. "It really is war—with spies and everything—just like in the movies." So wrote Soviet dissident Yulya Voznesenskaya in her diary about the harassment, arrests and interrogations she endured from KGB agents following her efforts in 1975 to publish an "underground" anthology of fellow poets. As dramatized on World (9 PBS), "Yulya's Diary" lacks the suspense and involvement of cinematic spy thrillers, but Yulya herself is convincingly played by Victoria Fyodorova, a Russian film star (and an American admiral's daughter) who immigrated to the United States five years ago.

WEDNESDAY. In 1886, 19-year-old Italian cellist Arturo Toscanini was summoned at the last minute to conduct Verdi's "Aida" before a hostile audience in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The young musician turned the hostility to admiration—and launched a career that was to span the next 68 years. Excerpts from "Aida" and other Toscanini showpieces can be heard on a New York Philharmonic concert salute to the maestro on Live from Studio 8H (9:30 NBC; taped in some areas). This first of a projected series of classical-music specials features conductor Zubin Mehta, soprano Leontyne Price and violinist Itzhak Perlman.

In some areas network shows may not be seen on the days and times indicated. Times are Eastern.

Network Shenanigans May Force Earlier Football Game Times

New York—The NFL's weekend games could start 15 minutes earlier next season, and TV is the reason. The change is one of several the league will explore when it sits down with NBC and CBS after the Super Bowl. Advancing the starting times, which would probably trim the length of the pre-game shows to 15 minutes, is being considered because NFL telecasts have been exceeding their allotted three-hour periods. The result has been confusion for the networks in switching from one game to another, and delays in starting the Sunday prime-time shows.

The latest snafu came on Dec. 16, when NBC cut away from the N.Y. Giants-Baltimore game to show the conclusion of Tampa Bay's play-off-clinching defeat of Kansas City. According to Val Pinchbeck, the NFL's director of broadcasting, NBC violated informal league TV guidelines by cutting from a game where the second-half difference in score was smaller than three touchdowns, and by failing to show the entire game in New York.

Pinchbeck admits that there have been more problems with the networks this season and attributes them to the "competitive nature of television and its desire to present the best games. CBS and NBC have had either errors of judgment or have gone a step beyond our written agreements or understandings." Mike Trager, a former NBC Sports executive who now places advertising for Anheuser-Busch, says the problems occur because "switching games is to the advantage of the advertiser, who doesn't want his ads stuck in a game whose conclusion is foregone."

The early-morning network competition is more intense than ever. For the first 13 weeks of the season, ABC's Good Morning America has increased its ratings average by 26 per cent compared with last year, while NBC's Today show is off 5 per cent. The result is that GMA trails Today by an average of only .3 of a rating point, or just over 200,000 homes a morning. Meanwhile, CBS's Morning continues to post the highest figures in its history.

Predictably, the competition has caused changes on the shows. Today is using more film and tape features "to move the show out of the studio," producer Steve Friedman says, and then following them with discussion, as with the new "Staying Afloat" home-economics series. Co-hosts Tom Brokaw and Jane Pauley now read the news, and weatherman Bob Ryan may be replaced by his flamboyant substitute, Willard Scott.

Good Morning America's executive producer, George Merlis, says he is only performing "fine-tuning" but may add another self-help segment.

Over at CBS, some affiliates have loudly complained the past two years about its low early-morning ratings, the audience-flow problems in going from an adult show to a children's show (Captain Kangaroo) and back, and the fact that Kangaroo's juvenile audience is not a prime target for advertisers. So, there have been rumors of Morning expanding to 90 minutes, taking the time out of Kangaroo's hide.

As We See It

The Columbia Broadcasting System has looked upon its work and found it good. This time we have to agree with them.

We refer to the CBS Television Reading Program, now almost three years old, which, to date, has reached more than five million elementary and high-school students in cities across the United States.

This program is based on a conviction that television, instead of being considered a negative competitor for students' time, should and can be made a positive adjunct to their education—a stimulator to help them read more, learn more and think better.

The network's plan is simple. If a class is participating, each student is supplied in advance with a complete gratis script of one of the better specials that CBS will broadcast (examples: "All Quiet on the Western Front," "The Corn Is Green," "Mayflower: The Pilgrims' Adventure"). Students first read the script at home—or in class, with some of them reciting the various roles. Then this printed dialogue is followed again as the student watches the production in his own home (quite often with his parents); and it is discussed in school after the broadcast.

For this purpose, teachers are provided with Reading Enrichment Guides (prepared by educational consultants) that suggest topics for class discussion of the story, vocabulary drills, reading lists, other activities and projects.

Recently CBS commissioned the Child Research Service to find out what good, if any, all of this was doing. The investigation, reaching into 11 metropolitan areas, found improved reading skills and an increased expression of ideas and critical thinking among students, and warm approval of the program among teachers and parents.

Any school that would like to be included in this reading program should contact the CBS station in its area.

But that will not happen. "Captain Kangaroo is our crown jewel," says CBS network president James Rosenfield, "and at no point have we thought of taking a half hour away from it." Rosenfield says the network may move the Captain and is considering shuffling the time periods yielded to the affiliates. The 4-4:30 P.M. (ET) period, which has a low clearance rate, could be given to the affiliates, with the network reclaiming the 9-9:30 half hour. In that case, Morning could run from 7-8:30 and Captain Kangaroo from 8:30 to 9:30. Until then, the most likely change on Morning is the addition of a weatherman, although the expense in salary and equipment (as much as $250,000) may be a deterrent.

Unless important candidates drop out, ABC will join the other networks and PBS in presenting the Iowa Presidential campaign debates Jan. 5 and 7. The coverage postpones the debut of Stone and the move of Angie to Monday nights until Jan. 14.

ABC has started to recoup some of its investment in the 1984 Summer Olympics. The network has consummated a deal with Coca-Cola for approximately 160 minutes of advertising, carrying a tab in excess of $34 million. That's an average of about $210,000 a minute, compared with an average of about $165,000 for NBC's coverage of this year's Olympics in Moscow.

Some observers are surprised that ABC has started selling the time so soon, noting that the prices it initially charged for the Lake Placid Winter Olympics, and the rates that NBC first charged for the Moscow Summer Olympics, turned out to be considerably less than the final figures. Insiders estimate that ABC will have to bring in more than $400 million to make its Olympic coverage profitable.

NEWS VIEWS

So David Brinkley thinks coverage of foreign news is excessive ["Documentaries: 'Why Bother?'; Exposés: 'Overrated'; Foreign News: 'Excessive'," Dec. 15]? If the American people are not kept informed about the rest of the world and how it works and thinks, intelligent responses to crises involving the United States will become more and more difficult; the days of isolationism are over. We need a one-hour newscast, with an expansion of both foreign and domestic news, especially the former.

*Joseph Karpenski
Norway, Mich.*

If that tired old newscaster could muster half the energy of 96-year-old Eubie Blake, he might try tuning to CBS's Morning to learn how well one network handles a 60-minute news program. Better yet, David Brinkley might sample Charles Kuralt's great hour-and-a-half Sunday-Morning. And for lively documentaries, there's another CBS program titled simply 60 Minutes. Obviously the potentially exciting world of TV news swept past Brinkley's petulant vision many years back.

Edward F. Reading Morganton, N.C.

David Brinkley's naiveté belies his more than 36 years as a journalist when he says documentaries "never offer any answers to these serious public problems they raise." They are not supposed to. A road sign reading "Bridge Out Ahead" also does not cure the detour problem, but it fulfills its function of providing an awareness of that problem. The problem's solution lies with society.

*Vince Danca
Rockford, Ill.*

Gee, I never realized Brinkley had that much common sense. I didn't think anyone like that was left in the world.

THE LITERARY SIDE OF TV

What a stimulating pleasure to read Robert Penn Warren's article on William Faulkner ["William Faulkner: A Life on Paper," Dec. 15]. As an ardent admirer of both men, I felt my faith renewed in the literary ability of our society. What a pleasure it would be to see more of their work on TV.

*Alice Bunnell

RATING THE HOSTS

Regarding the expert who rated "Talk Show Hosts: Who Are TV's Best?" [Dec. 8]: it's so typical of all us psychologists (and other scientists) that we frequently forget the content for the process. The number of questions or self-disclosures [a host offers] isn't as important as what the guests and hosts are talking about.

Chesterfield, Mo.*

I most definitely prefer the ratings of Nielsen to those of Dr. Gerald Goodman. Johnny Carson is irreplaceable; Dick Cavett [Goodman's choice for No. 1] is easily replaceable.

*P.M. Hassett

How in the world did Carson rate so well in Glenn Esterly's and Dr. Gerald Goodman's evaluation? He doesn't respond except to interrupt and top interesting stories being told by his guests. I watch his show now only when his replacements are on.

Thelma Rollins Imbler, Ore.

Here's my scientific evaluation of the article on talk show hosts: 40 per-cent enlightening, 30 per-cent entertaining, 20 per-cent amusing, 5 per-cent confusing, 3 per-cent revealing and but 2 per-cent boring. My compliments to the chef.

This Week's Movies

By Judith Crist

Sunday, ABC	The Longest Yard
Wednesday, CBS	Seizure: The Story of Kathy Morris
Wednesday, PBS	The Lathe of Heaven
Friday, ABC	Make Me an Offer
Friday, NBC	Two-Minute Warning

Science fiction, inspirational illness, the double sex war (man vs. woman, woman vs. woman)—we're off and staggering into another network-movie year.

We start off at a brisk pace with PBS's The Lathe of Heaven, officially described as public television's "first major" made-for-TV-movie—and a lavish special-effects-laden offering it is. Adapted by Roger E. Swaybill and Diane English from Ursula K. Le Guin's novel, co-directed by David R. Loxton and Fred Barzyk, and set in Portland, Ore., in "the near future," it offers a feast for science-fiction enthusiasts and at the very least some visual razzle-dazzle and a fine Michael Small score for nonaficionados. Its hero, Bruce Davison, is a man whose dreams come all too true in the "real" world; its villain, Kevin Conway, is a psychiatrist who specializes in oneirology and manipulates Davison's dreams for the good of the world and, not too incidentally, himself. And for romantic interest there's Margaret Avery as a civil-liberties lawyer.

For most of the way we're in the expected morality tale of the "mad" scientist who wants to rule the world (in this case for "the greatest good for the greatest number")—and we know what happens to scientists who want to play God. And finally we arrive at dreams within dreams, odd encounters with "aliens" who look like giant sea turtles and are given to aphorisms ("To go is to return") and a complete muddle of time, place and plot amid a flood of kaleidoscopic effects. The performances are commendable, as are the graphic displays and settings devised by a variety of specialists. But underneath it all is a nagging feeling of being trapped somewhere between pop art and pretension, with small substance beyond what meets the eye.

Detailed brain surgery meets the eye of those who can bear to watch it in Seizure: The Story of Kathy Morris, the "true" story of a singer who recovered from the complication of an interrupted brain-tumor operation. The well-intentioned teleplay, based by Jack and Mary Willis and Robert Lewin on the Charles L. Mee Jr. book, tells of the young woman's joie de vivre before, during and after her medical problems and its effect on her morose surgeon, who is reunited with his wife because of his patient's bravery. Once again Penelope Milford proves herself an able and appealing actress, with Leonard Nimoy providing yeoman support, with non-Spockian ears, as her doctor. But I for one have had my fill of operating-room procedures and the cinematic "inspiration" provided by human suffering. The courage of the young in facing quadriplegia, a variety of disabilities, cancer and now brain tumor has been exploited to a fare-thee-well in blood-and-suds soapers. Certain matters are far better left to documentaries; there is a difference between exploitation and entertainment.

That difference is not apparent in

Make Me an Offer, written by Pam Chais and directed by Jerry Paris. Here it's women's independence, rather than a medical problem, that is exploited under the guise of slick social comedy. Our heroine, Susan Blakely, is a "nice" pretty young woman who has supported her husband through law school only to discover, on the very night that they are to celebrate his passing his bar exam, that he's been having a long-running affair with a neighbor. "Somewhere along the line you stopped growing and turned into a bore," he tells her and moves out with the pick of their possessions. Along comes Patrick O'Neal, a big Beverly Hills real-estate wheeler-dealer, with the offer of a job. She gets a Farrah Fawcett-like hairdo and a license and becomes "real-estate rookie of the month." Soon she's in business for herself, using all the sleazy tricks of the trade O'Neal taught her. But before long even her cute assistant quits: "I'd rather be exploited by a man than by a ruthless love-starved woman." Can our heroine succeed in business without really drying up? Can a woman have a career and a sex life? In getting the answer you'll learn more about Beverly Hills real estate than about human beings—and the real estate is, in fact, more attractive and interesting than the folks on hand here.

Two theatrical repeats complete the skimpy schedule. At least there's Burt Reynolds as his old-time macho self in the third run of 1974's The Longest Yard, Robert Aldrich's movie about a prison football team that offers some sharp political satire. Larry Peerce's tedious and gory 1976 Two-Minute Warning, which had new footage added to inflate its sniper-in-a-stadium plot for a three-hour telecast, has been cut back to a two-hour slot for its second run. Less has to be better.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

Now! TRIM & SLIM ANY FIGURE INSTANTLY

WITH Trimline ONLY $7.98

WITHOUT EXERCISING TAKE INCHES OFF YOUR WAISTLINE!

At last there's an alternative to the exercise that you never seem to have time for... a lightweight, effective way to a slender, athletic figure! And no seams, or fasteners to show through even tight jeans or clinging fabrics!

Instant Trimline is a light, stretchable, waist-and-hip hugger that can flatten tummy bulge, shape your waist, make your hips look trimmer the moment you put it on. Made of cloud-soft porous nylon and Spandex — not heavy elastic or rubber that makes you perspire!

Completely washable, of course, and it holds you in, trims you from bust to hips in one smooth sexy flowing line. There's a size to fit you perfectly from 24" waist to 52" — and a special price for two, so you'll have a spare on washday. Order under our risk-free promise! Mail coupon today!

OUR CUSTOMER SATISFACTION POLICY! You must be satisfied or return any item within 14 days for refund, (except postage & handling, of course).

Special: The first head-to-head engagement in the 1980 Presidential campaign.

Two weeks before the Iowa precinct caucuses, six Republican candidates for the GOP Presidential nomination are expected to debate domestic and foreign-policy issues at the Des Moines Civic Center. The candidates scheduled to appear are Illinois representatives John B. Anderson and Philip M. Crane, Sen. Howard Baker Jr. (Tenn.), George Bush, John Connally and Kansas senator Robert Dole. According to the Des Moines Register and Tribune (which is sponsoring this and the Jan. 7 Democratic forum), Ronald Reagan has declined an invitation to participate.

In the program's major segment, the candidates will be questioned on a rotating basis by a panel of journalists. After additional questions from members of the audience, each man will be allowed three minutes for a closing statement. (Live; 2 hrs.)

Debut: Karl Malden stars in this drama series as Pete Skagska, a hard-working Pittsburgh steel-mill foreman, loving husband and father of four.

Skag (as he's called) is not without his problems. His aging father, a stroke victim, requires constant care. As the family join Skag and his wife Jo (Piper Laurie) for Thanksgiving, Skag clashes with his two sons, one a medical student, the other a steelworker. And soon, Skag will learn that his 15-year-old daughter is sexually promiscuous.

But suddenly, the family's troubles must take a back seat, as Skag suffers a stroke himself. His road to recovery is long—and uncertain. "You want me to tell you," the doctor says to Skag's son David, "you're going to have your father back the way he was. But you're not. They don't come back the same way, never. There's a change."

Written by series creator Abby Mann; directed by Frank Perry.

Folks have been chuckling at these Uncannily Human Paintings for over 100 years!

Every expression reminds you of someone you know! Every action is authentically dog-like, but downright human at the same time! Coolidge first discovered he had this fantastic talent way back in 1873. For more than a century these true-to-life lithographs have made millions chuckle. You can literally look at one for minutes at a time and still discover more detail to delight you . . . no artist since has been able to capture his extraordinary talent . . . (and many have tried!).

Don't let every poker fan, dog lover, and student of human nature beat you to this incredible bargain. Each print on 12" x 16" art paper in full color, ready to frame. At 4 for $3, plus a fifth print free, you're getting a fabulous value. So hurry your order — if not delighted, keep the bonus print as a gift and return the other 4 for full refund (except postage & handling). Mail coupon now!

POLITICAL DEBATE
7:30 PM ABC, CBS, NBC, PBS

Special: In 1976, a strong showing in Iowa's precinct caucuses launched Jimmy Carter as a serious Presidential candidate. The state's caucus elections will be held Jan. 21, but tonight the Democratic contenders—President Carter, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (Mass.) and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California—are scheduled to debate at the Des Moines Civic Center.

The format calls for the candidates to be questioned by a panel of journalists and, in the last half hour, by a "cross section of Iowans" in the audience. Each candidate will be allowed a two-minute closing statement.

The panel: James Risser and James Flansburg of the Des Moines Register and Tribune (sponsor of the debates), Jack Germond of the Washington Star and Al Hunt of the Wall Street Journal. James Gannon is moderator. (Live; 90 min.)

[President Carter has announced that his participation in the debate hinges on developments in the Iranian crisis.]

The Original
WAISTAWAY
No Cheap Cloth Or Elastic Imitation.

You Will Lose
4-6 Inches The First Day!

WAIST AWAY!™

Trim Stomach & Hip Bulges
The Scientific Way! Without Dieting!

Reducing belts and devices may come and go, but WAIST AWAY started it all and continues to remove inches & trim bulges long after imitators are gone. Why? Because WAIST AWAY is designed from sound scientific principles that work for everyone! WAIST AWAY works on the tested and proven reducing principles used for years by professional athletes, taking the body's own heating effect, and concentrating it on areas with bulging fat.

Lose 4-6 Inches In The First 24 Hours!

That's right. WAIST AWAY can work on your waist and hips that fast! The effective slimming action comes from our original design, which can be imitated but not duplicated. Our rubberized material is soft and washable. The same material athletes use to sweat away the excess moisture that forms bulky fat - quickly, efficiently. Imagine how delighted YOU will be to find yourself inches slimmer in the waist and hips the very next day!

Don't Hold Fat In... LOSE IT!

WAIST AWAY is not a glorified corset like so many imitators' belts are. We don't squeeze it in. We trim you down and with our 5 minute exercise program, you can lose inches of unsightly fat where you want to lose them most. It is working right now for some of the most famous athletes and entertainers in the world and IT WILL WORK FOR YOU!

WAIST AWAY Does More!

Our special construction creates a soothing massage effect, relieves back pain and tense muscles while trimming fat. The heating effect trims bulges without cumbersome weights, machinery or drugs. And, NO DIETING. You can jog, do housework or office work while wearing WAIST AWAY. And, after you lose a few inches, WAIST AWAY adjusts quickly to allow you to start losing more!

Lose Inches Or Pay Nothing!

Try Waist Away at our risk for 10 days to find out it does all we claim AND MORE. If you aren't totally delighted, return for a full, no questions asked, refund of your money. You risk nothing, so order NOW!

These are jumbo bricks for walls and bridges, houses and skyscrapers for cities and towns, even trucks and busses for busy city streets!

Each "block" is really an empty half-gallon milk carton you and your youngster cover with our beautifully printed, pre-cut and scored heavy craftboard covers. Because they're milk cartons, they're light in weight... and big enough for little hands to build with them easily.

They're educational, creative, and fun. And what a fabulous way to get the kids to drink their milk! — order yours, today.

SEIZURE: THE STORY OF KATHY MORRIS

A medical drama that's compelling because it's true.

In 1976, an aspiring 22-year-old singer from New York named Kathy Morris underwent brain surgery for the removal of a tumor that was causing her to experience seizures. What was assumed to be a generally routine operation turned into a nightmare: Kathy's brain inexplicably began to swell, surrounding the tumor, seeping up through the incision and prompting one doctor to tear away tissue in order to close her skull.

The surgery is graphically re-created in the first half of this 1980 TV-movie, which records Kathy's experiences with an almost clinical coldness. What follows, though, is more compassionate: how Kathy survived and battled to recover from incapacitating brain damage in a show of courage and conviction that's captured in Penelope Milford's performance and the film's inspiring climax.

THE LATHE OF HEAVEN

A provocative science-fiction drama about a man whose dreams literally come true.

It's the awesome power of his gift that George Orr, a resident of 21st-century Portland, Ore., finds so nightmarish. As George (Bruce Davison) tells his psychiatrist, "my dreams changed everything that came before them—and nobody knows it but me!"

But somebody does: George's shrink, a specialist in dream research named William Haber (Kevin Conway). Skeptical at first, he orders George under hypnosis to dream a change in the weather—then stands back amazed as cold, rainy Portland instantly becomes another Miami.

Soon, Dr. Haber has bigger changes in mind. With George his reluctant "instrument," he sets out "to make the whole world right." But Orr's dreams have a way of backfiring. Told to cure overpopulation, George dreams up a devastating plague. And Haber's wish for "no more killings of humans by other humans" is promptly answered with an alien invasion.

A MUSICAL TRIBUTE TO TOSCANINI

Special: Arturo Toscanini (1867-1957) led the New York Philharmonic for 10 years. But he is probably best remembered for the live concerts he gave as maestro of the NBC Symphony Orchestra from 1937 to 1954 (first on radio and later on TV) in NBC's Studio 8H.

That studio is the setting for this New York Philharmonic concert dedicated to Toscanini. Conductor Zubin Mehta (who recalls his predecessor in a filmed intermission segment) leads the orchestra and guest artists Leontyne Price and Itzhak Perlman in a program comprising Toscanini favorites. (Live; 90 min.)

There's a world of difference in the world of sportscasters. And if you're a sports buff who watches Channel Four's Charlie McAlexander, the difference is in your favor.

Charlie Mac doesn't just report scores and rankings. He involves Mid-South fans in the sport itself by showing you the action and including the details other sport segments miss.

The reason? Charlie Mac is as big a sports fan as you are.

Bullworker it all together

Over
5 Million Men Use
Bullworker

in only
5 minutes a day

CHEST

Looking for a fitness program that's fast, easy and gets results right away? ...asks fitness expert. Bob Breton

"Bullworker puts it all together. Just 5 minutes a day is all it takes to give your body a complete fitness workout: shoulders, back, arms, chest, abdomen and legs—plus important circulatory training as well."

IT'S FAST each exercise takes only 7 seconds, once a day.

IT'S EASY any man between 16 and 65 in good general health can perform the whole program without getting tired. From the first day on you see your strength grow on the built-in Powermeter. After two to three weeks, most men can expect to measure an extra inch or two of muscle on their shoulders, chest and biceps—and an inch or two less flab around the middle.

And that's just for starters. There are specialized exercises for building-up or trimming down any part of your body you want to. And since Bullworker training is progressive, you perform better each time. Yet the training always seems easy since with each workout your strength increases by about 1%—that's an increase of up to 50% in the first three months.

It's great to feel fit again, whether you're 16 or 65

BUILT-IN POWERMETER

The built-in Powermeter measures your increase in strength from the first day on—every day. And what increases: up to 4% per week. That's 50% in just three months.

SEEING IS BELIEVING: See your strength grow day by day

The interplay's the thing

Shows like 'M*A*S*H' rely on teamwork to remain creative

By David Johnston

Late on the first day of filming for the eighth season of *M*A*S*H* on CBS, seven of the eight cast regulars struggled through one of what became more than 20 attempts to complete successfully an especially long and complex comedy scene. Conditions were perfect for a frustrated star's temper to flare. Because it was too noisy, the air conditioner was shut off, and the relentless Los Angeles summer sun made the studio a giant oven. The army of klieg lights trained on the mess-tent set broiled the cast. And just when it appeared that the scene had finally been performed flawlessly—an actor flubbed the last line.

But Alan Alda, the show's mainstay, didn't get mad at the actor whose goof meant more delay, more heat and more tension. Instead Alda tried to find out whether he himself could do better on the next take. "I think I overdid that," he said, turning to a fellow performer. "What do you think?"

Few television stars would invite such an on-stage critique of their work. Fewer still would deign to seek counsel from anyone below their own rank. But Alda sought help from a member of the supporting cast—actor Jamie Farr.

"Things like that happen all the time on *M*A*S*H*," Farr said. "We trust each other, so we try to help each other. It's not like the other shows on which I've been a regular, where a couple of people try to capture the show for themselves, making life unbearable for everyone else. On this show, everyone believes that the play's other televised ensemble productions—including Barney Miller, Taxi, Lou Grant, the old Mary Tyler Moore Show and Gunsmoke—use or used one or two main characters to anchor the series. On *M*A*S*H* the anchors are Alda as the witty cynic Hawkeye Pierce, and Mike Farrell, who portrays B.J. Hunnicutt. As actor David Ogden Stiers puts it, "Alan Alda is the core, the central figure, rather than the star, because 'star' implies a certain kind of behavior, and with Alan, there is none of that." Adds Loretta Swit, "The star of the thing."

Most television shows operate on the star system, with one or two stars around whom the program revolves. "Everyone else in the cast exists only to make the star (who gets 75 per cent of the lines) look good," explains Farr.

But *M*A*S*H* is the enduringly successful result of a different philosophy called ensemble acting. At the heart of this approach is the full development of all the regular characters and the creation of episodes that focus on each of them.

In adapting the ensemble-acting idea from the stage, some modifications have been necessary, principally because of television's severe time limitations. A weekly *M*A*S*H* episode lasts just 23 minutes. *M*A*S*H* and most

*M*A*S*H* is *M*A*S*H*."

Because ensemble acting involves a complex interplay among all of the regular characters, it requires much more skilled writing than a show built around just one or two personalities. Danny Arnold, executive producer of Barney Miller, believes a successful ensemble production demands a chemistry among the cast members—and among the cast and the writers and producers—that encourages mutual trust and respect. The key to developing that, he says, is the emergence of a natural leader in the ensemble.

"The Barney Miller cast were all strangers in the beginning, so I tried to be the leader," Arnold recalled. "After a while Hal Linden [the star] got to know everyone and he took over. →

You need to have someone, usually the producer or star, who will take charge, make everyone feel comfortable; someone everyone trusts and respects and who can say a light word at a tense moment." Arnold blames the failure of Fish, an ensemble show that was spun off from Barney Miller, largely on the lack of such a leader. "Chemically, it just didn't work right and there was no one who could pull it together. Slowly but surely this begins to affect people, who fear they won't get back full measure for what they give."

If Alda's co-workers deny he is the star of *M*A*S*H*, they all agree he is the leader. Says Farrell, "Alan is so eminently fair, he allows people to develop the courage to say, 'My character needs more here . . . or less.'" Adds executive producer Burt Metcalfe, "From the start there were no barracudas on this show, so no one had to fight for his survival. If Alan Alda, the star, is not a prima donna, how can someone sixth down the line be one?"

William Christopher said that although his character, Father Mulcahy, is less prominent than the others "it's heartening to work on this show because I know that my time will come each year and there will be a show in which my character will be expanded." Arnold believes that "When each actor feels he will have an important part, however small, which lets his character grow and develop, you don't get the petty jealousies that can tear a show apart."

Getting actors who can evolve a productive chemistry is mostly a matter of luck and professionalism, according to actor Harry Morgan, who plays Colonel Potter. "It can't work without professional actors. You can't do it with a bunch of amateurs. You can't have an ensemble show with the likes of Farrah Fawcett."

A show must also have a workable premise, as producer Jerry Thorpe discovered with the ill-fated Chicago Teddy Bears series in 1972. Whether or not friction among the cast tore that show apart, as some connected with it claimed, Thorpe said the series was doomed to failure "because the premise was all wrong. It was about guys in a speak-easy and they were always on the shady side of the law. On TV you just can't have a comedy in which the cops are the heavies."

To Alda, ensemble acting means more interest in the "communal rather than the individual effort. It means shared playing, and if most of the people have to stand by while someone else gets all of the lines, it shows in slightly muted characters. The audience catches on to that. We try to make an experience for the audience, not just to advance our careers."

Stiers is convinced that audiences pick up on the subtleties of the cast's attitudes toward one another. "When you feel relaxed and confident, you trust the other actors more. It's not that you look better, but that you all look better together."

So strong is the bond of trust that →

M*A*S*H actors sometimes ask to be taken out of a scene, even if it almost eliminates them from an episode. Farr recalled one Monday script-reading at which he objected to a comedy routine that called for his character, Corporal Klinger, to fall asleep while on guard duty.

"Klinger would never do that. He wants a Section 8 [discharge for mental instability], but in every other way he is a good soldier," Farr explained. "I got fewer lines on that show, but I was happy: I had protected my character."

Says Swit, "How many lines you have isn't important. What matters is that we all look good together."

When he was hired two years ago, Farrell said he was "bowled over to have them ask me for my comments on the scripts. This is unheard of in television, where they generally don't care what actors think and would prefer actors who don't think. If I tell them a joke doesn't work, they ask why, they listen, and if I am right they change it." Once they thought Farrell was so right they rewrote an entire script.

The script called for Alda and Farrell to remove the healthy appendix of a combat-happy colonel who was sending far too many young soldiers to their deaths to prove his ferocity as a warrior. Surgery would have kept the colonel from the battlefield for weeks.

When Farrell read the script he hit the roof. "It's absolutely outrageous. My character wouldn't do it and, furthermore, I wouldn't be a part of it."

Recalls Alda: "Mike was really hot, really incensed, that we would treat what he saw as mutilation as a joke. It would have been easy to dismiss his objections. But this show is about caring about people—about their feelings."

Alda enjoys a moment with Gary Burghoff, who played Radar on the show until his departure from the cast early this season.

The debate consumed most of the day, with the actors often arguing as if they really were the characters they portray. "There are 100 boys who'll be alive tomorrow if the operation is done,"

Pierce said. "Cutting into a healthy body is mutilation," Hunnicutt shot back, adding he'd hate himself if he took part in the appendectomy. "I'll be able to hate myself with a clear conscience," Pierce replied.

Finally producer Metcalfe interrupted. "We'll have a much better show if we rewrite the script to reflect these issues," he said. Many of the lines in the show were taken directly from the script-reading debate between the actors. "We worked it out together and because we did, it was better than what any writer alone could have done to improve the show," Swit said. "We each got into the behavior of our characters and we just acted it out."

Metcalfe views the debate over the show as evidence of how a "nurturing atmosphere" has allowed the cast to grow into their roles and improve the creative product. The best evidence of that may be how the same situation, drawn from a real Korean War incident, actually was handled as one of the first M*A*S*H episodes. Everyone connected with the show had forgotten about the first time the incident was portrayed, back when the ensemble was trying to get its act together. In that early episode, the appendectomy was handled as a gag. And no one thought to question his role in it. (END)

'Nazis in America'

A man who tracked down 1100 war criminals explains his unrelenting mission

By Simon Wiesenthal

[An ABC News Closeup scheduled for Sunday, Jan. 13, will focus on the U.S. Government's pursuit of Nazi war criminals living within our borders.—Ed.]

Despite eyewitness testimony from Allied soldiers who first stumbled upon the Nazi death camps (their crematoriums still warm, their gas chambers primed, their teeming burial ditches and starving scarecrow survivors still there), for years after World War II, people everywhere were reluctant to believe that 11 million fellow humans, among them six million Jews, had been deliberately humiliated, brutalized, then exterminated—all in the service of an idea. For these past 35 years, I have devoted my life to turning the skeptics into believers, documenting the crimes and bringing the criminals to justice.

Personally, I have been responsible for the arrest of 1100 such criminals—ranging from Adolf Eichmann, who erected the machinery of death that would kill millions, to Karl Silberbauer, the Gestapo officer who arrested the child named Anne Frank. Their trails have led me on a wild odyssey through many countries—and now to the United States, home of the very people who liberated me.

The American Government is considering building a museum in Washington in memory of the victims of the Holocaust; meanwhile, almost 400 perpetrators (among them three Jews) of that Holocaust walk your streets → with impunity. An American President proclaims your devotion to human rights; meanwhile, living quietly in California, a man is free whom the Yugoslavs accuse of murdering 600,000.

How did the murderers get among you? In 1944, when the Germans had to retreat before the advancing Soviets, amid the tide of refugees flowing back toward Germany from the East European countries were thousands of "voluntary" Nazi collaborators—Ukrainians, Poles, Latvians and others. Men and women who had served in execution squads, informed (for a percentage of the confiscated property) against the Jews, and held positions of power in puppet regimes.

In 1948, three years after the war ended, the Berlin Blockade signaled the start of the "Cold War" between the U.S. and USSR. American intelligence organizations in Germany began combing the refugee camps (crowded with slave-laborers from Eastern Europe) in search of people who could provide useful information in the event that the Cold War boiled over into a hot one. The Nazi collaborators, fearful of reprisals if repatriated to their homelands, were only too anxious to cooperate. The Americans did not probe too deeply into the histories of the people they recruited.

Ninety-five per cent of the war criminals who entered the U.S. (often with the unwitting assistance of your Government) are now U.S. citizens. Some, when they emigrated to America, already had been sentenced in absentia in their native lands. Others, when asked if they had ever served in a foreign army, perjured themselves on their immigration forms. Being a known criminal and/or falsely answering the immigration application are grounds for denaturalization and deportation.

In 1973, as a result of a dossier I had submitted nine years before, Mrs. Hermine Ryan, née Braunsteiner (responsible for the deaths of several hundred women and children at the death camp Majdanak), was denaturalized, and extradited to West Germany for trial as a war criminal. Currently, 16 more cases are in the courts, and another 200 are being developed by the Justice Department's special investigative unit, established in 1979 (whose budget will double in 1980 to $5 million). In a recent conversation, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti assured me that these cases will be prosecuted vigorously.

The Attorney General recognizes that, on the one hand, these voluntary Nazi collaborators are both a security risk (vulnerable to blackmail, since the Soviets always seem to know more about their dark past than the Americans do) and a political embarrassment. (The Soviets and their satellite nations never tire of gloating over the U.S. "harboring" Nazi war criminals.) Yet, there are still people who say: why bother bringing these criminals to trial, when death will soon overtake them anyway?

My reasons are twofold. First, these trials can have a valuable impact—psychological, ethical, educational and even political. When I succeeded in arresting a deputy commander of the Sobiborg death camp, 36 years after the crime, at a distance of 10,000 miles from the scene of the crime—it was a warning to the murderers of tomorrow that neither time nor distance will ever make them safe from retribution.

Second, and just as important as our warning to the living, is our personal debt to the dead. Someday, in a world after death, we, the survivors, will meet the millions who died so horribly. They will greet us in silence, and their silence will be a challenge: "What have you done to avenge us?"

Some will say that after the war they resumed careers as dentists and became prosperous. Others will say they made fortunes manufacturing jewelry, or made millions smuggling American cigarettes into Germany. I will be able to say: I never forgot you. END

This Is Not a Sign of Success

Not even $100,000 of her husband's money could buy Maray Ayres steady work as an actress

By Ellen Torgerson Shaw

Historically, Hollywood is the land of the Big Sell. Everything is for sale. The scent of buying is as much in the air as the brown sunshine. Men and women talk about the Deal as soulfully as ministers speak of Heaven.

And yet . . . can you really buy an acting career? Can anyone actually purchase stardom for his wife or girl friend or daughter or cousin from Catherine, Kan.? Well, they can try.

About two years ago, quarter-page ads began appearing in both the Hollywood trade papers, Daily Variety and The Hollywood Reporter, two and three times a week for a solid month. In all the ads, the same sexy-looking woman was gazing merrily into the lens of the camera. Her costume varied each day; she might turn up as a Bavarian peasant girl, then as Marie Antoinette, then in a Judy Garland tights-and-tux outfit.

The lady's name was also there: Maray Ayres. But nothing else, no telephone number, no address, not even a post-office-box number. When the month ended, Maray's image began showing up on giant billboards along the Sunset Strip: in all of them she was wearing an emphatic white sweater, her arm behind her head, holding up a flood of caramel-colored hair. The billboards said: "Maray Ayres—SUPERDIVERTISSEMENTIVE." Or Maray Ayres—ULTRADRAPHILIAC." Nothing else.

Maray was an aspiring actress who had semi-abandoned her profession before she'd ever really started. Now, at 33, she wanted to make a "come-back," and her millionaire husband, Joel Nelson, decided she should have her chance, this time generously backed by unlimited husbandly funds. He spent, he says, about $100,000 on the ads and billboards.

The result? So far, Maray has graced an episode of CHiPs. Period. That's all. Oh, she's also made an industrial movie for a cosmetics company. And there's been a "promise" about a film on the life of a tennis champion. But mostly, Maray auditions and auditions. And auditions again.

As a farm kid growing up in Santa Cruz, Cal., Maray always hungered to be an actress. She was milking cows, feeding pigs and collecting eggs from under chickens, but she thought only about acting, dancing and singing. Tall and formed with a fearful symmetry, even at 13, she began winning beauty contests. At 17, unblessed by parental consent, she left for San Francisco, where she found an acting job in a small repertory company. In 1965, she marched into Hollywood. "I took acting lessons and joined another small theater group." Maray played nuns and harlots. She painted scenery and lugged props.

By 1972, her career not noticeably successful, Maray took a job as a dancing, singing waitress in a restaurant. There, she met Joel Nelson. "We got married on the stage of the Gaslight Club," Maray says. "The room could hold only 101 people, so that's how many we had."

The joys of wedded life (Maray learned gourmet cooking) and new motherhood (she reared Joel's three young sons from a previous marriage) kept Maray busy. In the back of her mind, of course, her dreams of an acting career were as feverish as ever, and after a few years Maray said, "Enough. Back to show business."

Joel, whose insurance companies, bus-rental agencies, travel agencies and multiple other holdings allowed him the freedom to be indulgent, decided to market her. And he did. "She's just another product to sell," he says disarmingly. "I accomplished what I set out to do. She's known all over the industry."

Alas, being known is not the same as being cast. "There are women who've been made from publicity," says a veteran Hollywood publicist. "Suzanne Somers and Farrah Fawcett were built for publicity. But they were in hit shows."

Indeed, the consensus among producers, agents, publicists and actors is that Joel Nelson can't buy his wife a career—attractive, talented and sexy though she may well be.

Meta Rosenberg, once an agent herself and now the executive producer of The Rockford Files, says: "If Maray's husband spent $100,000, he threw it away. A million bucks wouldn't do it.

There's too much pressure from the people who put up the money, from the studio, from the network. A producer can't be irresponsible. Even very beautiful girls don't become stars; beauty alone won't do it. Look at Cheryl Tiegs. She's a good example of packaging, but she has yet to gain a real acting career from all her publicity, although she is certainly successful in advertising."

Other knowledgeable people agree. Veteran actor Conrad Janis, Mindy's dad in Mork & Mindy, says, →

"You can start a career with quasi-nepotistic maneuvers, maybe. But anybody putting anybody in a show for reasons other than talent is in a lot of trouble. In Maray's case maybe it'd be smarter for her husband to put $10 million into a movie for her than buy her one of somebody else's." In television, Janis says, "the ratings system negates buying a career. You can't buy a rating."

Actor Robert Webber—who recently costarred in "10"—is blunter. "You can't buy a career. You can't sell the public something they don't want. The landscape is strewn with corpses, even with big hype, big publicity. Howard Hughes with all his millions couldn't sell Faith Domergue. Maybe somebody like James Garner, Alan Alda, or Jack Klugman could get a small part in his series for his wife, but that's all he could get."

A top Hollywood television producer, currently responsible for at least three hit TV series, admits that producers sometimes do give their wives and sweethearts roles, usually minor roles since love is not the consideration here and money is. None of these ladies, though, has a serious career.

One thing that money and influence can do in Hollywood is buy an opportunity. A star, or a producer, or a studio, or a network executive, or a very rich, well-connected man can create an opening for someone. "The rest," says a long-term television producer, "is charisma, talent, something magical and hard to predict." An example par excellence is Elizabeth Montgomery. Without her father, Robert Montgomery, giving her that initial chance in his TV series, she might have been merely another beautiful girl trying her luck. But the public responded to Elizabeth for her very own self. Yes, she had a helpful papa, but her subsequent stardom remains hers alone.

Some do not grasp such opportunities with the expected aggressive fervor. Harve Bennett, long a producer in the Hollywood mill—The Mod Squad, The Six Million Dollar Man, Rich Man, Poor Man—Book I were his—admits having provided an actress friend with a job in From Here to Eternity. "It was a tertiary role," he says. "She was excellent. Everybody liked her so much they wanted to expand the role." But no one could find her. She'd left town, never to be seen again.

And Maray? She's still game, still hoping, still sure it will happen because she is grittily determined to have a career, much in the manner of a crazed lover who's dead certain he can warm up a tepid affair by sending his beloved roses every day. Hollywood, however, is not susceptible to gallant courtship. Still . . .

Maray Ayres and Joel Nelson are entertaining a visitor in their home, a home that once belonged to W.C. Fields. Unreluctantly, they discuss Maray's future and Joel's past. At the age of 7, he was already hard at work. "We had a chicken farm," he says. "We started with 500 of 'em and wound up with 10,000." Candidly he acknowledges he doesn't know beans about show business. But he feels confident he can learn.

"Do you know what happened when we were in Las Vegas one time?" Maray inquires. "Joel wanted me to see 'the trio' performing down the street. It was Olivia Newton-John."

Not at all embarrassed, Joel laughs ("She didn't know who Yehudi Menuhin is"). He doesn't think that sort of information matters much. After all, show business is just business and he's an expert in business.

"I'm going to make a comedy disaster movie," he says, "about the Government spending dough on stupid things." Naturally, Maray will have a role in the film. But even Joel thinks Jacqueline Bissett might be better for the lead.

As he says, he's a smart businessman. END

PARIS

When James Earl Jones unfurls his great eyebrows and brings that Shakespearean basso rumbling up from the cavern of his chest, he can knock theatergoers off their seats—at 200 yards. But the television camera isn't squinting from the back rows. It's right in his lap, watching mighty emotions roll up and down that stage-sized face.

Jones—who plays detective captain Woody Paris in this CBS police show—carries magnificent acting equipment. But I'm afraid the lightning of his eyes and the thunder of his voice make pretty heavy weather for television, a medium that registers eyelash flickers and magnifies glances.

Aside from that problem, which is a technical one that Jones can maybe solve, he has a likely thing going as Paris, a passionate but disciplined middle-aged cop—married and tenured, conservative in his methods, but wrathful and tenacious on the trail of the week's murderer. Paris goes by the book and does what his superiors tell him, a welcome shot of realism after all those rebels and mavericks we're supposed to adore.

In his first case, Paris, who teaches a criminology class on the side, was tossed a hot potato: the wife of a powerful city councilman (Vic Morrow) had been murdered, ostensibly by a burglar. Paris suspected the councilman, brushing aside warnings about riling the political forces upstairs. "I'm not running for office." Uncovering the lesbian relationship that had triggered the murder, he sent Morrow up.

In another case, Paris had a rebellious young black policeman on his hands. Lawrence-Hilton Jacobs was a fledgling cop whose mother had been run down by a gang of young hoods. He defied Paris by pursuing the punks on his own, adding insult by calling Paris "an old Tom." Paris, ordered to use the boy undercover, had to swallow his aggravation. The story illustrated a prime frustration in police work: getting witnesses to testify. Paris finally cracked the case when a garment manufacturer, who wanted to conceal his extramarital affair with one of the victims, agreed to identify the thugs.

I notice that most of the crime-fighters on the tube now are policemen or some sort of salaried employees, not private eyes or Bondian adventurers. In fact, free-lancers and individualists of all kinds are on the wane; it seems the organization man is coming back into style. Paris, for instance, is a harassed civil servant, resigned to the constraints of the system. I like the trend; organization men do most of the world's work and take most of the guff, while James Bond uses too much oil and gets a disproportionate share of the pretty girls.

Lee Chamberlin is warmly unglamorous as the wife who kids Paris out of his dark moods, and Hank Garrett is suitably impervious and irritating as Paris's police boss.

If the plots are sharpened and if Jones can learn to strap in his talent a bit, Paris should cop a respectable audience. END

ITALIAN FOOD WITHOUT GUILT

The truth is, you're more likely to stay on a diet if you like the food you're eating. That pounds can fall off without suffering. That Lasagna for dinner is such a treat, you'll feel satisfied.

And when you feel satisfied you don't cheat. And when you don't cheat, you don't feel guilty.

And when you don't feel guilty, you feel absolutely free to tell your best friend's sister she can send the Cabana Banana Diet back to the Jersey Shore.

EASY ON THE LIPS. EASY ON THE HIPS.

First Phyllis Dubrow tried the 9-Egg-A-Day Diet. She hated eggs. Next Phyllis's neighbor told her about the Hi-Protein. And her breath started smelling like nail polish remover.

Fad diets are so boring and so unbalanced they almost never work.

But Weight Watchers works because our Frozen Meals are designed for a sensible weight loss program. And all 28 of them taste so good, you won't think of them as diet food.

We do it by cooking our Lasagna, Canneloni, Ziti Macaroni and Veal Parmigiana with such well chosen herbs and spices, you never miss the fats and fillers.

We twirl the dough on our Italian Pie extra thin and you still get the pleasure of eating Italian Pie.

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS

"I played an idiot running around on my hands and knees for 10 years," said MAX BAER recently during a discussion of his days as Jethro on The Beverly Hillbillies. The character became so clearly identified with Baer that he was rarely offered any other type of role after the series left CBS. That's about to change soon, however, when he begins his new job in "Culpepper," the NBC pilot in which he'll play a detective. "The show's producer, MICHAEL FISHER, is the reason I'm doing it," Baer said. "Most other people asked me to play Jethro or Little Abner. He saw me as something else."

HENRY WINKLER, JOHN RITTER, DICK VAN PATTEN and GAVIN MacLEOD are the cohosts for the Hollywood segment of the "Weekend with the Stars Telethon for Cerebral Palsy," Jan. 12-13. PAUL ANKA and DENNIS JAMES share the emcee chores in New York . . . MEADOWLARK LEMON, a costar on Hello, Larry and a longtime player on the Harlem Globetrotters, has formed his own basketball team, to be seen in an upcoming NBC SportsWorld. "The Bucketeers," Meadowlark told us, "is my version of a barnstorming comedy basketball team." The team plans to tour this country and abroad with a lineup that will occasionally include MARQUES HAYNES and WILT CHAMBERLAIN . . . You can't blame the people making NBC's movie "The Curse of King Tut's Tomb" if they take the title seriously. An automobile accident on the movie's location site in Egypt caused a leg injury to costar IAN McSHANE, forcing him out of the film.

LEROY "SATCHEL" PAIGE, the legendary pitcher who toured the black baseball circuit in rickety buses for years before the major leagues recognized his talents, arrived for his Hollywood TV-movie-debut press conference at a baseball park recently in a two-limousine caravan. Satch's entourage included LOUIS GOSSETT JR., who'll portray Paige in ABC's "Don't Look Back." Dressed in his Kansas City Monarchs uniform, Satchel ambled over to second base, sat down in a rocking chair and met the press. "Who taught you to throw?" a TV sportscaster asked. "I could throw hard from birth," he replied. Satchel--who's close to 80--was also asked to give a pitching demonstration. He thought about that for a moment, looked at the producer and said, "Is it in my contract?" He then walked to the mound and pitched to a TV sportscaster-catcher, who later said, "He had some stuff."
