Three days in the life of a producer known as the 'toughest cookie in television'

LARRY HAGMAN

By Mary Murphy

It is Tuesday afternoon in Screening Room E at MGM Studios, the second week after shooting has begun on the pilot for a new television series called Secrets of Midland Heights, and Lee Rich, the president of Lorimar Productions, is watching the dailies with his staff. The projector is rolling and Lorenzo Lamas, a 21-year-old male lead, is seen lying in a hospital bed, necking with his teen-age girl friend. The girl, an actress named Linda Hamilton, has on a sheer beige dress; but not until the camera pulls back for a long shot does Lee Rich notice that underneath the sheer beige dress she is wearing a black brassiere. "What the—! . . . Why is she wearing a black bra? . . . Doesn't it bother anyone but me? . . . Jesus!" The assistant producer's eyes are darting back and forth, hoping to catch someone's attention, anyone's attention. No use. Everyone else is staring straight ahead. On screen, Lorenzo Lamas opens his mouth, this time to speak. A moment later, Lee Rich is at it again: "One of the great actors of our generation he is not," says Rich. "He's conscious of his teeth, he's conscious of his chin.

executive. "I can never figure out exactly what he's doing, or how he's doing it. I just always figure I can trust him about as far as I can throw MGM. Yet I buy what he is selling."

The second thing they say about Lee Rich is that he knows how to stay tough in negotiations; in other words, he knows how to make money. In 11 years he has turned Lorimar into one of → the most successful independent production companies in television. It wasn't easy. His first series for television was The Rat Patrol, for Mirisch-Rich Productions in 1966, three years before he started Lorimar. Now, more than a decade later, Lorimar has four hit series and six more in production, plus two hit movies, "Being There" and "Cruising," and earned more than $150 million last year.

Everything but his acting." Given that, Rich decides shortly thereafter that this strikingly handsome teenager may become "the next John Travolta." As the scene unfolds, the sex gets steamier, and suddenly Lee Rich's mockery turns to enthusiasm. "Great. This is wonderful stuff. Terrific." He is tapping his feet. He even hoots. "This pilot will be on the air so fast it will make your head spin. It's hot stuff." Secrets of Midland Heights is hot stuff. Teen-age sex is hot stuff. And it's his new baby. Rich wants people to pay attention. The black bra is forgotten. "What you are witnessing," he says, "is the birth of a hit series."

Like Secrets of Midland Heights, Lee Rich, too, is hot these days. He is the man behind Dallas and Knots Landing and The Waltons and Eight Is Enough. He is a super-salesman; that is the first thing people say about him. Skillful enough to make his way to the top in advertising at Benton & Bowles before jumping to television, Rich learned the consummate art of selling from the best. "He's a wizard," says one NBC

Besides money, Lorimar has won numerous awards: 23 Emmys, three Peabodys, five People's Choice Awards and three Christophers. "Being There" has recently been nominated for two Academy Awards, and with these nominations Lorimar has shed its boutique-studio image and gone big time. This year Lorimar will produce nearly as many films as, say, Paramount or 20th Century-Fox, and more television series than either. "I knew it would all happen," says Rich. "I just didn't know when." When it all started in 1969, it was a two-man operation in three rooms on Rodeo Drive; just Lee Rich and a money man, California real-estate developer Merv Adelson.

Now Lorimar is a 200-person company with offices in New York, London and at MGM Studios, where it occupies 50 per cent of the studio space. It does its own film financing, most of its own advertising and all of its own foreign distribution. It is now run by an informal committee of four, but Rich is the major creative force, and he is the one pushing the company even further into the areas of pay-TV, cable TV and foreign distribution. This year, he bought the entire library of 500 films from Allied Artists to sell to television. He follows, almost to the point of religious fervor, a saying framed in plexiglass in his office: "If you want to be better than the best, you have to work harder than the best."

How does Lee Rich "work harder than the best"?

For starters, he rises each morning by 6, reads two newspapers before breakfast, pumps an exercycle for 12 minutes, arrives in the office by 8 A.M., is on the phone to New York by 8:05, has appointments scheduled every half hour, handles close to 70 phone calls a day, scans at least three more newspapers and attends staff meetings and daily screenings. He then reads scripts at night, is available for crisis calls from producers throughout the night, brings home at least 10 scripts every weekend, spends Friday and Sunday at the videocassette recorder, catching up on TV programs he missed during the week; and he "relaxes" Saturday night by holding movie screenings at his home, which are attended by executives of all three networks. To observe Lee Rich at work is to watch a man at the peak of his powers; it is a dazzling display of daring and creative energy, as a typical three days spent with him clearly show.

By 8 A.M. of the first day he pulls his silver Mercedes 450SLC into the parking lot in front of the Irving Thalberg Building at MGM, walks to his office, flips through the overnight ratings and calls New York. He wants to know what is happening with the novelization of Dallas.

"I think we should have a little auction and sell it off to the highest bidder; get the best deal," he tells Bridget Potter, Lorimar's vice president of motion picture and television development.

"So are you saying we should make trouble?" asks Potter.

"That's exactly what I'm saying, my dear."

All that matters to Rich is spread in stacks across his desk. "I'm not a neat-desk person," he says, "but I know what every single piece of paper means." Rich's one indulgence, besides his single vodka martini at 5 P.M., is candy. Across the room, on a long table, are jars of treats that would drive a little kid mad: jelly → beans and pretzels and boxes of chocolates and jars of bite-sized Hershey bars, and hard candies in flavors of grape, lime, lemon and cherry. He is partly bald, a somewhat round man, who looks more like a friendly Papa Bear than the "toughest cookie in television," which is his reputation. And although his father was a banker from Shaker Heights, Ohio, Lee Rich sounds like a truck driver. And he will scrap with anyone. "There are big-name stars," he says, "who have come to me, saying, 'I will do this only if I can have story control and casting control.' Well, in this company that ain't about to happen. I wouldn't give that control to anybody but me." Rich makes it a practice rarely to speak to actors directly, even the ones who work for him, but to deal instead through their agents, with whom he takes a tough line. "Got to," he says. "Or we would have the inmates taking control of the asylum."

Legend has it that Lee Rich can sell the same idea to all three networks in one day and then hold out for the highest bidder. That is exactly what he tries to do now, with an idea based on a newspaper piece about a Washington mistress, written by Sally Quinn.

He calls Len Hill, vice president of motion pictures for TV at ABC. "The life of a Washington mistress will be a great movie-of-the-week," Rich tells Hill. "I have a particular point of view: mistresses are not winners."

Hill says he doesn't think it will receive big ratings. "I'll get back to you," he tells Rich.

Rich then calls NBC. On the other end of the line, a newly hired woman executive tells Rich that NBC might be interested if someone else, "maybe Nora Ephron," had written the newspaper piece. . . . Rich doesn't let her finish: "Listen, lady, I never want to talk to you again," he says, "because you are an ass." He hangs up.

He is annoyed. "I could have talked them both into it," he says. "Those arguments are B.S."

Eventually, he sells the project to CBS as a TV-movie.

Joanne Brough, Rich's executive assistant, bustles in with the script for a pilot called Dusty. Rich holds it, weighing it on his own private scale, then flips through it for a few seconds until he reaches the last page, which is numbered 72. Then, he starts shouting.

"Seventy-two pages is ridiculous! That's it! I'm not going to start shooting."

He picks up the phone and simultaneously drops the script on his desk. "Eddie," he says to his vice president of production, Eddie Denault, "I'm sitting here with a 72-page script. Either the writer cuts this down by 5 tonight, or I get a new writer."

Rich has a luncheon at the Brown Derby in Beverly Hills. Somewhere between MGM Studios and the parking lot on Rodeo Drive next to the building where it all began 11 years ago, Rich volunteers to analyze the key to his success: "It's my ability to make decisions," he says. "I have courage in business; I always have. Making a decision in business only hurts for a minute. I have no patience with people who can't do it. Me, I make a decision, say, about an actor or a director or a writer, and if it doesn't work out, I fire them and get somebody else." In his personal life, too, Rich's responses are visceral. He turned to Grant Tinker one night at Chasen's Restaurant and announced that he was going to marry a woman standing across the room, an actress, Pippa Scott, whom he had met that evening. They have been married for 16 years.

"My life is a rags-to-riches story," he says, "although I was never really poor. I mean I started this company with nothing and Merv [Adelson] kept pouring the money in when I needed it. Our first picture, 'The Sporting Club,' → was a huge failure. Nobody saw it, and yet Merv kept on pouring. The turning point came when, a year and a half after we began, we did a movie-of-the-week called 'The Homecoming.' It was the start of The Waltons. It started us moving. It gave us credibility, momentum and recognition. Then other things started to happen." Other things such as The Blue Knight, "Helter Skelter," "Sybil" and series like Eight Is Enough, Kaz and finally Dallas. Mostly because of Dallas, and its spin-off, Knots Landing, Rich's critics say he has forged his success by trafficking in ignorance. They point to the two series as prime examples.

"I never apologize for what I do," says Rich. "I'm very independent, very aggressive, and I take a lot of chances. Besides, what I do makes me happy. I have a lot of fun. Suddenly, this year, at the age of 53, I feel younger than springtime."

At lunch with Bud Grant, the West Coast programming chief for CBS, Rich talks about how to maintain that younger-than-springtime feeling: "I work out every day—that's what the doctors at Scripps told me—and," he sighs, grabbing two pieces of hot cheese toast, "I am also supposed to lose 15 pounds."

In the afternoon he returns 20 phone calls. Partly he is benevolent, partly tough, partly a psychiatrist, partly creative guide.

At 5 P.M. he heads for Screening Room E. Nursing a martini, he begins watching an hour and a half of dailies. He is pleased with Secrets of Midland Heights, and with Reward, a series about a modern-day bounty hunter, starring Michael Parks and written by Jason Miller, but not with the frames from The World of Joshua McCabe, Earl Hamner Jr.'s new pilot, starring Richard Crenna as a widowed Southern doctor. What he sees on-screen is that the director of Joshua has been shooting take after take of the same scene:

Crenna feeding a litter of pigs. "Can't he make up his mind?" yells Rich. "Does he even know what he wants?" At 7 P.M. the screening is over, and Lee Rich goes home.

By 9 A.M. on the second day, the cameraman on Joshua has been replaced, and the director has been given orders to shoot less film—or else.

Rich, who has begun to act as tough as they say he is, has a reputation for "shouting when he doesn't like something," according to a former secretary, who remembers the day he arrived in his office, found all the furniture missing, discovered it had been loaded into a moving van by mistake and began shouting. It took the movers only 20 minutes to return the furniture.

He can also be gentle, and gentlemanly, as when he has to take a favorite producer off a project because that producer has been working too hard.

He can also be generous. When he learns that his business-affairs senior vice president Irv Sepkowitz is taking his wife away for the weekend, Rich tells Sepkowitz, "The weekend is on me."

It is raining, so Rich cancels a lunch date, orders tuna fish, and joins David Picker, the head of Lorimar's motion-picture division and the former president of Paramount Pictures, motion-picture division, for lunch in Merv Adelson's empty office. Adelson is on a Caribbean cruise.

They discuss politics: "I would vote for that wastebasket before I would vote for Ronald Reagan," says Rich. They discuss actors. "I always raise my hand when I am talking about actors," says Picker with his right hand in the air, "just to remind myself that I'm talking about actors and not to take it seriously."

In the afternoon Rich meets with Irwin Molansky, who is currently involved in a lawsuit with Penthouse magazine over an article alleging that Molansky had organized-crime connections. "That is absolutely and totally → without foundation," David Picker says later. Molansky is introduced by Rich as one of his "partners," and they discuss the possibilities of expansion at the current interest rate. "Forget it," Molansky tells Rich. "The whole world has gone topsy-turvy." Then, Rich tends to personal business. He orders a $300 sport jacket to be sent to Molansky in Las Vegas for his birthday.

At 5 P.M. he watches an episode of Dallas, in which two shots are fired at J.R. Ewing. When the episode is televised two weeks later, it draws 50 million viewers. "The best thing about these nighttime serials," he says, "is that you can bump off any actor at any time. I remember when I was involved with The Edge of Night, the lead actress told me she wanted to quit the show. When I went back to the office and told them, they were furious. We had a meeting. What were we going to do? Everyone got angrier and angrier. Finally, someone said, let's kill the bitch! What we did was run her off a cliff. That's one of the pluses of this kind of show: whenever they give you trouble, you can run them off a cliff." (Actually, the character was killed by a speeding car.)

At 9 A.M. on the third day, Rich meets with Earl Hamner Jr., the creator of The Waltons, to map out the program's ninth season. "This is the last year," says Rich, "so why not go for broke? I would like to make this thing as different as possible, keep the kids, keep Walton's Mountain, but put up new buildings, maybe have a black riot, erect a Catholic church." He's getting enthusiastic again. "If we fall on our asses, who cares."

"What I would like," Hamner draws in his Virginia accent, "is to call the series The Young Waltons." He pauses. "Besides that, we could put our money to much better use if we got rid of Michael and Ralph totally. They have outlived their usefulness."

Rich, too, pauses. He pushes his glasses onto his forehead.

"Write up where you think it's going," says Rich, "and make a strong case for getting rid of Michael and Ralph."

Some would call this a story conference; others would say it was a coup. Or an attempted coup: when CBS announced its new season, Waite was still in the series. After Hamner leaves, Rich says, "After eight years of those personalities working together, it never fails. Familiarity breeds contempt."

The phone rings. "Where are we?" he says to his lawyer on the other end. He listens, but only for a moment, before he begins shouting. "If you tell me that you don't know the address of that writer who skipped out on me, I'm going to come across the wire and strangle you." He listens again. "Then get a detective." He hangs up. He is inundated by phone calls this morning. "Bob Radnitz wants his own casting person," says Irv Sepkowitz. (Radnitz is a veteran Hollywood producer.)

"His own casting person?" Rich pulls his glasses from his forehead to his nose. "Tell him to go to hell."

At lunch he meets Herb Lazarus, one of Lorimar's consultants, at the Palm Restaurant, where television power brokers gather for lunch. As Rich walks to his table, heads turn. He is interrupted five times during lunch by agents and producers.

"The key to his success," says David Picker back in the office, "is that Lee is a man who loves every minute of every day. But more than that, he reads everything and anything. He understands that ideas come from everybody and anybody. No day ever ends."

This one doesn't seem to. In the afternoon, Lee Rich pitches two movies-of-the-week.

"Hold onto your pants," he tells Len Hill at ABC. "This is the story of →

DAIRY DAYS USA RECIPES

Union Jack Bread

1 small (8 oz.) French bread, unsliced (or 1/2 of large loaf (1 lb.) French bread
8 slices (1 oz. each) Monterey Jack or Brick cheese

1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder

Slice bread into 1-in. thick slices. Make a vertical cut in center of each piece about half way into bread. Cut each slice of cheese into 4 squares. Place 2 squares of cheese in each center cut of bread slice. Next combine butter, Parmesan cheese and garlic powder. Spread both sides of each bread slice with butter mixture. Place bread on foil; do not wrap. Bake in preheated 450° F. oven about 7 minutes until cheese is melted and bread is lightly browned. Makes 6 servings.

Yankee Doodle Salad

4 oz. elbow macaroni (uncooked)
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 cup sweet pickle relish, drained
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped green onion
3 tablespoons vinegar
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
2 cups (8 oz.) cubed Cheddar cheese
1 pound hot dogs; cut in 1/2-inch pieces

Cook macaroni according to package directions; drain. In a large bowl toss macaroni with sour cream, pickle relish, green pepper, onion, vinegar and mustard. Fold in cheese and hot dog pieces. Chill 3-4 hrs. to blend flavors. Makes approximately 6 cups.

Red, White & Blueberry Freeze

3 pints vanilla ice cream, softened
1 cup fresh strawberries, halved and
1/4 cup fresh blueberries, chilled

Place 5 1/2-cup metal star-shaped mold in freezer for 30 minutes. Next, pack ice cream firmly into mold. Cover with foil and freeze for several hours or overnight. To unmold, dip mold in lukewarm water for 1 to 2 minutes. Immediately invert onto serving plate. Return to freezer for 1 to 2 hours. About 10 minutes before serving, decorate with strawberry halves and blueberries. Serve immediately. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

a 12-year-old feminist. A child adventure story . . ."

"I have a proposition that will drive you up the wall," he says to an NBC programming vice president. "It's called Masquerade. It's about an upper middle-class family, and how they survive after the father goes to jail for a white-collar crime. I guarantee a sure 45 share!" (Masquerade has since been abandoned.)

At 5 P.M. he walks to the screening room carrying a martini. "Today is the big fight scene in Secrets of Midland Heights," he says. He is palpably excited when talking about it. "I can hardly wait." On screen, Lorenzo Lamas bursts into a fraternity party looking for his girl friend, a fight breaks out, boys are fighting boys, girls are fighting girls. . . . "God, people are going to love it," says Rich. Besides CBS's Secrets of Midland Heights, a teen-age version of Dallas, Lorimar planned three more series in the Dallas genre: a deep-South version of Dallas which has become Flamingo Road, an NBC series for fall; a daytime version, based on the novels of Rosemary Rogers (that project fell through); and a gamier, late-night Dallas. "The trick will be to know when enough is enough," says Rich.

Lee Rich was at the top of the heap in the world of advertising. Now, he's a top independent producer in television. What next? The presidency of a network? "I've turned down two networks already," he says. Rich is the best salesman in television and the best money man. And yet, he's still searching for the perfect deal.

As soon as the screening ends he rushes to his office, grabs a bite-sized Hershey bar, picks up the phone and begins shouting in a voice that carries all the way to the elevators. "I think," he is saying, "I'm going to become the porno king of television." He is laughing. (END)

[The four-part Disraeli: Portrait of a Romantic is the current Masterpiece Theatre presentation, Sundays on most PBS stations. See "Sports and Specials" in the program section for local times and channels.]

"I advise you to take care of my letters, for if I become half as famous as I intend to be, you may sell them for 10 guineas apiece." The young man of 25 who wrote these words in 1829 was a foppish dandy, his well-oiled black hair elaborately coiffured, who made spectacular appearances in London with morning and evening canes, wearing purple trousers, a canary-colored waistcoat and white gloves with jeweled rings outside them. His name was Benjamin Disraeli and though he had written one anonymous novel, "Vivian Grey," nothing could have seemed more farfetched than such grandiose ambitions. Yet he rose to become the leader of an aristocratic Tory party that despised his birth and race; a chief figure in a popular assembly that derided his clothes and manners; and the Prime Minister of a puritan country that distrusted his brains and beliefs.

Disraeli liked to imagine that his family had been great landowners in Spain and merchants in Venice, but, in fact, his father was a modest man of letters, author of "Curiosities of Literature," who had married the daughter of an Italian Jew and lived quietly in London. Benjamin, their second child, arrived in 1804, and though a Jew by birth, had been baptized a Christian.

"To enter high society," he later said, "a man must either have blood, a million, or a genius." Though conscious of literary genius, he dreamed of a great career in politics and, since his blood was against him, he staked all on getting money. In seven months of gambling on the stock exchange he lost several thousand pounds (a debt that took him 30 years to discharge), while a journalistic venture to set up a rival to the London Times lost his publisher £26,000.

Disraeli's health was not strong and his romantic notions seemed more happily placed in a number of extravagantly poetic novels than in business. He was more popular with women than men, and this seemed to promise social rather than political success. The most notorious of his love affairs was with the haughty, sensual Henrietta, Lady Sykes, wife of the baronet Sir Francis Sykes, who was enjoying an affair with a former mistress of Disraeli's, Clara Bolton. Meanwhile Lady Sykes was carrying on a second affair with Disraeli's friend Lord Lyndhurst.

From scandals such as this he was eventually rescued by a widow, Mary Anne Wyndham Lewis, 12 years older but with a house in fashionable Park Lane and an income of £14,000 a year. Mary Anne and "Dizzy," as she called him, were perfectly matched. "Dizzy married me for my money," she told a friend many years later, "but if he had the chance again, he would marry me for love." They lived happily together until her death in 1872, for she was, as he once complimented her, "more like a mistress than a wife."

By the time of their marriage in the summer of 1839, politics had finally claimed Disraeli. After several unsuccessful attempts to enter Parliament as a Radical, he had been elected in 1837 as a Tory member of Parliament for Maidstone. During his maiden speech in the House of Commons, he was drowned out with a chorus of yells and hoots. His last words were long to be remembered: "I sit down now, but the time will come when you will hear me." Though he continued to write novels, he was more an aphorist than a novelist, and his wit and epigrammatic flair soon made him a formidable adversary in House of Commons debates.

By the late 1840s, feeling that he was destined for the highest political place of all, Disraeli began to tone himself down. His clothes became less dazzling, his speech less flamboyant, his novels less romantic—"Sybil" (1845) gives a hideous picture of industrial poverty in the north of England; "Tancred" (1847) is an exposure of Victorian materialism. His charm and quickness of repartee were winning him many friends, but many Tories still mistrusted him and he usually gave as good as he got. On one occasion, an elector shouted out that Disraeli's wife had picked him out of the gutter. Disraeli retorted: "My good fellow, if you were in the gutter, nobody would pull you out."

Twice in the 1850s he held office as Chancellor of the Exchequer, but his budgets and reform bills, designed to establish a Tory democracy, were not popular and it was not until 1868 that he finally emerged as Prime Minister. "Yes, I have climbed to the top of the greasy pole," he replied to a friend's congratulations. Queen Victoria, who originally did not approve of him, had by now succumbed to the spell of his enigmatic personality. Over the last 12 years of his life, as leader of the Tories, both on the government and opposition benches, his chief adversary was Gladstone, who, though he did not have Disraeli's party political skills, was a compelling orator. Asked to define the difference between the words "misfortune" and "calamity," Disraeli replied: "If Mr. Gladstone fell into the Thames, it would be a misfortune; but if someone pulled him out, it would be a calamity."

Disraeli's main achievements were to prepare the Tory party for the 20th century and to make the monarchy popular again in Britain. "Everyone likes flattery," he said, "and when you come to royalty, you should lay it on with a trowel." But such cynicism concealed his real kindness. In his humorous and romantic company, the Queen ceased to be a brooding widow and, wreathed in smiles, allowed herself to be persuaded to take a public part once more in national functions. He made her Empress of India; she made him Earl of Beaconsfield and, when in 1881 he lay dying, she sent him primroses picked by herself—"your favourite spring flower," said the note that accompanied them.

The youthful dandy, who yearned for love and longed for power and set out to conquer the world, had miraculously achieved his goal. END

Ballplayers court the TV cameras with some extraordinary moves

By Berry Stainback

Professional athletes as a group have always had a warm affection for television cameras. Viewers are all too familiar with football players hamming it up on the sidelines, wagging a finger and mouthing, "We're No. 1," or waving at the camera like so many 6-year-olds in home movies. Last season at least two NFL players who acted out for the home-screen audience went a mite too far. Dallas Cowboys receiver Drew Pearson soared high into the air to spike the football he'd caught for a touchdown, landed awkwardly and injured his knee. Good move, Drew. And during a Monday-night telecast, Cowboys linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson laughed it up so much on the sideline while his team was losing that coach Tom Landry immediately shipped him back to Hollywood.

Baseball players, however, have learned how to use television without damaging their careers, perhaps because they are so accustomed to the omnipotent eye. Baseball is telecast more than any other sport. On games that go nationwide—the Game-of-the-Week, ABC's Monday Night Baseball and the post-season contests—players tend to caress the camera the way Marilyn Monroe once fondled lenses.

Mike Weisman, coordinating producer for NBC's Game-of-the-Week, points out, "We try to avoid situations where the athletes are obviously playing to the camera. We'd have cameras in the dugouts, and as soon as the red light went on, the players would start mugging. We finally had to disconnect the lights on our dugout cameras."

Until recent years NBC had the managers announce their starting lineups for the camera, but their characterization of each of their players was invariably: "He's a great one." The manager would have nine "great" players and a second-division ball club. "So we began looking for players who could come up with good lines to announce the lineups," Joe Garagiola says. "Jay Johnstone, when he was with the Yankees, really worked on his lines. He'd introduce Cliff Johnson, who's massive, by saying, 'Cliff Johnson, DH—should be part of a tag-team wrestling match'."

"We like to get the characters, the flakes, to do the off-the-wall stuff," Weisman says. "One time we set up a pre-game scene in the Houston clubhouse in which Joe Niekro sprung a 'Kiss me—I'm Polish' T-shirt on Tony Kubek. But once the game begins, we don't want anything staged or phony."

Relief pitcher Al Hrabosky taped a "closing comment" several years ago. He began, in measured, resonant tones, "Make sure you watch out for the Mad Hungarian"—pause, voice rising menacingly—"because he's gonna get you!" In that game Hrabosky was summoned in the ninth inning to face the hard-hitting Boston Red Sox, who had the bases loaded. The Mad Hungarian struck out the side, threw his arms up victoriously, snarled and stormed off the mound—as NBC rolled the tape. "It was perfect," Weisman says.

"Players definitely get pumped up for nationally televised games," says Hrabosky, who is now with the Atlanta Braves. "When someone finds out that his team is scheduled for the Game-of-the-Week, word filters through the clubhouse, and everybody looks forward to it. The players refer to it as the 'Game-of-the-World.' I'd much rather have one of my better Mad Hungarian performances witnessed by 30 million people."

"It's reached the point where players ask us if they can tape a spot," Weisman says.

For the Game-of-the-Week (which will hereafter be referred to as the GOTW), most players do some very serious primping to make sure they look swell. In this area the Pittsburgh Pirates have a splendid advantage, thanks to reserve outfielder Matt Alexander, an off-season barber. Alexander's tonsorial talents are in great demand for every GOTW. "Everybody goes to Matt for a trim to look pretty," third baseman Bill Madlock says.

"Of course, you've gotta forget the cameras once you're on the field," Madlock adds. "If you try to psych yourself too much for TV, you may end up not doing anything. But there are guys who play to the cameras for fun. Willie Stargell is one of the best. When guys get on first base, he playfully elbows them off the bag, knowing the camera's on him. Especially when [Houston Astros second baseman] Joe Morgan reaches first. Willie's so big and Joe's so small that Willie just flicks him off the base."

Some players seem to get higher than others for national TV, and no one tops Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees, according to former umpire Ron Luciano, who now works for NBC. "It's like his metabolism changes," Luciano says. "He gets a little glow, his arms seem to grow larger, his gait to the plate is more demonstrative, his eyesight appears to be sharper, everything about him seems improved. Reggie always looks like he achieves a distinctive high for national TV."

Reggie Jackson may be a TV producer's delight, but there are those in the industry who suggest that a lot of Reggie goes a little way. Tony Kubek says, "Guys like Reggie and Pete Rose [another producer's prize who also happens to be a fan's favorite, a designation that Jackson is in no danger of acquiring] are in my opinion overexposed. Television can really distort the value of a player to a team. A guy can have a mediocre season, like →

Jackson did in 1977, then have a great World Series, and everyone thinks he's played that way all season. There's a real injustice in that."

"TV coverage is definitely more beneficial to the controversial or colorful player," Hrabosky says, "the guy who has a little more flair. The cameras look for him and he gains instant notoriety. That's what happened to Mark Fidrych of the Tigers because of that Monday-night ABC game he pitched his rookie year." Fidrych, who is back in the minors with shoulder trouble, became famous for talking to the baseball.

"I've heard guys say they want to play better because the game's on national TV," Kubek says. "But what they're really saying is that they don't put out enough effort when the cameras aren't there. I have seen guys make miraculous recoveries from injuries because they wanted to play on TV. And I've observed the reverse—guys who were nervous and so insecure that they tried to get out of the lineup because of national TV."

"There are a few camera-shy players," Luciano says. "I've seen Milwaukee Brewers second baseman Paul Molitor make some of the greatest infield plays ever. I mean plays that Mark Belanger of the Orioles—who's probably the best infielder in the game—couldn't make. But in national TV games, Paul bobbles ground balls."

Without question, the players with the most profound craving for television coverage are those who get little exposure because they get little playing time.

"Guys on the bench spend as much time figuring out how to get on-camera as they do figuring out what the opposing pitcher is throwing," Hrabosky says. "No matter how cold it is at a national TV game, guys on the bench never wear jackets that would hide their names and numbers. And they always seem to get up the moment a camera's on them. They've developed a very specialized talent." →

Among the most talented is the Yankees veteran irregular Fred Stanley, who reveals that his most effective technique is to negotiate a space next to a guy the cameramen love to focus on. "Yogi Berra is the key man in our club," Stanley says. "Yogi has a kind of sixth sense that tells him when the camera's going to zoom in on him. When I see Yogi go and fool around by the camera, I scoot over next to him because I'll be sure of getting on. Catfish Hunter was another good guy to sit next to. He'd blow a big bubble and I'd let the cameraman know I was going to pop it so he could focus. When you're not playing, you've gotta find ways to stay loose or you go crazy. And it's always nice to let your mom know you're still alive."

Baseball players' love for the TV camera is no recent phenomenon. More than 10 years ago, during a GOTW telecast, Detroit Tiger teammates Denny McLain and Norm Cash both wanted the star-of-the-game award that would earn the winner a post-game television interview and $100. When Cash, who had two hits, came up for his last at-bat, McLain rooted against him, yelling to the opposing pitcher: "Throw him a breaking ball—he won't hit it." The pitcher threw a curve, Cash popped out and McLain applauded. When McLain, who was pitching a shutout, faced Harmon Killebrew in the ninth inning, Cash shouted from his first-base position: "Hit a home run, Killer!" McLain protected his shutout, did the interview and walked into the Tiger dressing room with the $100 bill pasted to his forehead and a huge grin on his face.

But it wasn't the money that thrilled him. As Tiger pitcher Mickey Lolich had said, when a rainout had cost him that particular GOTW start: "Things are really going against me. I had a chance to do what Denny usually does—pitch on national TV and get all that exposure." (END)

'Speak Up America' Angers NBC Stations; Some May Drop It

Hollywood—NBC may be proud as a peacock about its new fall series Speak Up America, but many of the network's affiliates are ready to pull the feathers of the new program.

After a closed session with executives from local affiliated stations, an NBC spokesman disclosed: "There was a lot of concern that this show blurred the lines between news and entertainment." Indeed, there appears to be more than just "concern" surrounding SUA. Many station officials told newsmen at the annual convention of affiliates in Los Angeles that they would not carry the new show, which had a tryout this spring and drew a dismal 23 per cent of the audience for two outings.

The affiliates give three reasons for being upset about the show. They say Speak Up America is "tasteless" (a sperm bank was the subject of one feature). Speak Up America deals with reality and can be confused with a news show, even with the affiliate's local newscast. Finally, Speak Up America has a tendency to take swipes at controversial targets, such as the oil industry. Executives fear that these segments, if not carefully balanced, could keep lawyers for the stations busy with lawsuits.

Despite the opposition, NBC officials are calling the new series, produced by Real People's George Schlatter, "The Time Magazine of the Airwaves." They say the show is "a work in progress" and will probably be toned down as a result of the affiliates' opposition. Even so, NBC officials may have more trouble than they anticipate. An additional troubling factor is Speak Up America's host, Marjoe Gortner, the child evangelist who became an actor. During the opening of the two shows already broadcast, Marjoe used a revivalistic chant reminiscent of the manic speeches of Howard Beale, the fictional Mad Prophet of the Airwaves in the movie "Network."

"Marjoe's nothing but a clown," said one station executive from the Midwest. "His outbursts are too editorial, and I think we could have some very serious Fairness Doctrine problems." Another station complaint about Speak Up America is the editing of some segments that juxtaposes wild statements from "men in the street" with more temperate comments from business officials or corporate spokesmen. "In these pieces," one executive said, "all the public is getting is mob responses for effect."

CBS chairman William S. Paley's newest heir apparent, Thomas H. Wyman, assumed the duties of president and chief executive officer of CBS, effective June 2. Wyman, 50, previously was an official with the Pillsbury Co., the Green Giant Co. and Polaroid Corp. Paley, 78, fired his last two handpicked successors—Arthur Taylor and John Backe—because he felt they overstepped their authority.

As We See It

□ Three years ago, several religious groups wanted to keep Franco Zeffirelli's "Jesus of Nazareth" off TV because they thought it presented a wicked and blasphemous portrayal of Christ.

Members of the groups hadn't actually seen the film, mind you; they were reacting to what they'd heard. When "Jesus of Nazareth" was broadcast, it was widely acclaimed—and has since become an Easter favorite.

□ Those protests have died, but protest groups are alive and kicking. This year one of those groups—an ad hoc committee sponsored by the NAACP—is kicking about Beulah Land, a six-hour NBC miniseries set on a Southern plantation during the Civil War era. The protestors charge that the film presents a demeaning and stereotyped portrayal of blacks.

There is, of course, hardly a group that hasn't been stereotyped by television; that's almost the nature of the beast. But whether Beulah Land's depiction of blacks is "demeaning" is another question, and one for individual viewers to judge.

□ David Gerber, the film's executive producer, was outraged when NBC decided to postpone the telecast (from May until fall) because of the pressure-group tactics. By his account, the protests were based on an original script that was revised 15 times after the NAACP committee saw it, and checked for accuracy by the chairman of the department of history at Rutgers University. Gerber has, incidentally, won several awards, including one from the NAACP, for portrayals of blacks in previous productions with which he's been associated.

The dramatic quality of the film is not at issue here: Beulah Land may turn out to be an outstanding show, a mediocre one or a third-rate version of "Gone with the Wind." What is at issue is the right of viewers to make up their own minds. We urge NBC—and the NAACP—to let us do that.

recommending a new, national non-profit pay-cable television network to be called PACE (Performing Arts, Culture and Entertainment), which the public-television community would create and operate.

Such a network would need $30 million to start up, said the Carnegie study, and could be financed initially by grants from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, private foundations and public agencies. Viewers would pay $9 a month for a commercial-free cable channel that would bring them a varied menu of music, drama, dance, movies and documentaries. In less than four years, the study predicted, PACE would be in the black.

Carnegie's announcement was timed to precede the annual meeting of the Public Broadcasting Service in Washington. A few PBS members told TV GUIDE that the proposal would generate heated debate at the meeting, even "a power struggle." Would PACE weaken conventional public broadcasting by fractionizing its already tiny audience? Would programs now available on free television be available only to cable subscribers willing to pay extra for them? Such questions are certain to be raised.

Lurking behind Carnegie's recommendation is the suspicion that somebody, sometime soon (perhaps one of the commercial networks) will "take the plunge" and set up a cultural pay-cable network. "And there won't be room for more than one or two such enterprises," a Carnegie spokesman said privately.

Alan Pifer, president of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, believes that new television technology—of which PACE is a proposed offspring—gives public broadcasters "an extraordinary opportunity to extend the range" of their service "while helping themselves to survive during difficult economic times."

Broadway's Tony Awards, an outing that traditionally wins praise for its pacing and entertainment, highlights a week that also includes a trio of interesting first-run documentaries and two worthwhile reruns.

SATURDAY. Filmed before the ouster of the Shah and the seizing of the American hostages, Iran: Inside the Islamic Republic (9 PBS) aims to give some insights into the turmoil that has wracked the country and the strategy by which the Ayatollah Khomeini has transformed it. Unfortunately, producer-director Bigan Saliani (himself an Iranian) lets pro-Khomeini bias get in the way of reportage in several segments, and the result is a film that borders on propaganda—and seems likely to stir controversy.

SUNDAY. The highlights of The Tony Awards (9:30 CBS; live to most areas) are usually production numbers from the nominated musicals. But in addition to tonight's numbers from those shows—"A Day in Hollywood/A Night in the Ukraine," "Barnum," "Evita" and "Sugar Babies"—there's a bonus: show-stoppers from Broadway revivals of "Peter Pan," "West Side Story" and "Oklahoma!" that feature Sandy Duncan, Debbie Allen, and Christine Andreas and Joel Higgins.

MONDAY. M*A*S*H (9 CBS) reinforced its reputation as one of television's most innovative series with a powerful episode, rerun tonight, about a grim race against time. A clock in the corner of the screen ticks off the precious minutes as Hawkeye (Alan Alda) labors to save a wounded soldier—whose life depends on the timely death of another critically injured GI. . . . For drama of another sort, there's a rerun of Mark Twain: Beneath the Laughter (9 PBS). Dan O'Herlihy, in an excellent performance, is the elderly Twain, an embittered misanthrope who offers caustic reflections on two things he claims to have no use for: life and mankind.

WEDNESDAY. "I'm a sculptor," says Henry Moore (9 PBS), "because I'm obsessed with the shape of things, their three-dimensionality." That obsession—and Moore's gift for rendering man and nature on a larger-than-life scale—has resulted in some of the most novel works of art in this century. Many of them are seen in this profile of the 82-year-old Englishman at work, in reflection and on a visit to America in December 1978.

THURSDAY. For their first foreign assignment, cinéma-vérité documentarians Alan and Susan Raymond ("Police Tapes," "Bad Boys") focus on a divided land in "To Die for Ireland." Filmed largely in Belfast over a two-month period, this ABC News Closeup (10 P.M.) tours urban and rural "battle zones," where the hardened views of British soldiers and IRA sympathizers lend grim—and, say the Raymonds, "balanced"—testimony to a decade of war that has caused 2000 deaths.

In some areas network shows may not be seen on the days and at the times indicated. Times are Eastern.

IS TV OUT TO GET BIG OIL?

In response to your article "Is TV Out to Get Big Oil?" [May 17]: Television and the American people can question, conspire against and accuse the oil companies all they want, but things will not change. The oil companies do not have to answer questions and accusations. They have something the American people cannot live without! If we don't like it, what are we going to do? Freeze in winter and not go to work? Fat chance.

Marilyn Unick
Lake Hopatcong, N.J.

Anyone who thinks that there is no anti-oil bias on network TV should ask themselves why NBC allowed Ralph Nader to appear on a recent Saturday Night Live segment and mention April 17 as antibusiness "Big Business Day" with a speech that was definitely anti-oil and anti-business?

Ronald Larsson

VIDIOTS?

I liked your interesting editorial on the problem of "heavy TV users," but I must protest your saying, "Where are the studies on 'print abusers'?" [As We See It, May 10.] That is a cheap shot, and you must know that it is. Reading, no matter how poor the quality of the literature, is an active process: there is a small amount of continual effort of will involved in scanning the lines and turning the pages. The television habit is much more insidious because watching television is by its nature a passive process. Once the set is turned on, one is absorbing material almost constantly while hardly being aware that one is doing so. For some people, television can and does accompany every other routine activity. It is a nonstop, all-day-fix—and that's why a vidiot has a more significant problem than does a readaholic.

Jeannette Apperson
Thibodaux, La.

[Then again, which takes more mental effort—watching a Shakespeare play on television or flipping through the pages of a trash novel?—Ed.]

THE NETWORK ROAD SHOW

Ron Nessen's characterization of television coverage of the Presidential nominating process was very apt. America's quadrennial madness is made even more silly by the "network roadshow." ["Now Television's the Kingmaker," May 10.] This time around, we had ridiculous theatrics at the Nashua, N.H., debate, a jogging George Bush, gossip about Kennedy's personal life, and a proxy/telephone campaign by President Carter. To this we can add a transcendental Jerry Brown, a remarkable display of party loyalty by John Anderson . . . This material might be good enough for a picture—perhaps "The Road to Washington"?

Drage Vukcevic
Beecher, Ill.

SOCIETY AND MENTAL ILLNESS

I couldn't figure out whether Dr. Thomas Szasz felt that society was awful for not being able, or willing, to cope with the symptoms of mental illness, or that the ill were awful for being ill, or both! ["Back Wards to Back Streets," May 17.] Blaming the mentally ill would be as intelligent as blaming an epileptic for his seizures. Blaming society for being unable to live with their symptoms is absurd—any illness is a strain on those close to the victim.

Janice Hagan
Athens, Ga.

If we are truly concerned about the treatment afforded the so-called "mentally ill" individuals in our midst, the first thing let's do is hang all the psychiatrists. After all, it is the pseudo-science of psychiatry that is largely responsible for the abominable treatment meted out to the emotionally traumatized individuals in our society.

Something old, something new, something retitled—it's a network-movie week wherein stars like Paul Newman, Art Carney and Jack Nicholson are at the mercy of mediocre material.

Not only Paul Newman but also James Mason and several fine British character actors waste their talents in The Mackintosh Man, a dull and, back in 1973, dated spy melodrama that even director John Huston seems bored with. Adapted by Walter Hill from Desmond Bagley's novel "The Freedom Trap," the plot is all too familiar. Here's Harry Andrews (Mackintosh of the secret-agent service) recruiting Paul Newman (so he becomes the Mackintosh man—get it?), who has to turn criminal to get to Mason, a prominent Member of Parliament who's a foreign agent. The emphasis is on action rather than character, and the shift of locales among England, Ireland and Malta a bit muddling. But the scenery and Newman are very good to look at.

So is Madeline Kahn, who's on hand with Carney, Bruce Dern and a host of old-time stars in cameo in 1976's Won Ton Ton, the Dog Who Saved Hollywood. Written by Arnold Schulman and Cy Howard, who were presumably inspired by Rin Tin Tin, a dog star of the '20s, this spoof of silent-moviemaking is a mixed bag of good gags, clunkers, soft satire and thin plotting. Kahn's delightful as "the woman behind the dog"; Dern's a would-be filmmaker and Carney's a lecherous studio head. All are done in by the flimsy script and Michael Winner's uneven direction, but television's fragmentation may highlight the brighter moments.

The ABC Friday late-movie premiere is of Michelangelo Antonioni's 1975 The Passenger. It stars Jack Nicholson, who seems to have stopped in front of the Antonioni cameras on his way to do some acting somewhere else. Antonioni, that master of cinematography whose films have been concerned with alienation, presents Nicholson as a television reporter somewhere in Africa who assumes the identity and business of a dead gunrunner. Everybody's up to his eyeballs in angst, elliptic dialogue and pretentiousness.

Two of the new made-for-TV movies seem to be pilots, offering the prospect of unthrilling series ahead. Turnover Smith, written by Richard Jessup and directed by Bernard L. Kowalski, offers William Conrad (also executive producer) in still another detective role. This time he's "the world's leading criminalist," giving a world-famous course in "criminalistics" in San Francisco, with the required Minority Group assistants (a young black, a cute blonde). He's hunting a strangler who, he discovers by no hint of logic, is "playing a game of chess"; Arab terrorists are also involved. And since we meet the murderer early on, the suspense is minimal.

M Station: Hawaii bears all the ambience of Hawaii Five-O, not surprisingly since Jack Lord, star of that series for

IS THIS THE YEAR THEY GRADUATE FROM A TIMEX TO A CARAVELLE?

A lot of kids get a Timex watch when they're in grade school. So when they graduate from high school or college, why not spend a little extra to get them something a little more special?

Like a Caravelle by Bulova.

A Caravelle is a fine timepiece with a precision 17 jewel movement. And research proves that people prefer to receive it as a gift over a Timex.

This year, when your graduate steps down from the podium, he or she will be well on the way to becoming an adult. Give them a watch that proves it.

Model Shown #42570 Automatic, Day and Date, Suggested Retail Price $69.95

This Week's Movies

12 seasons, served as executive producer and director of the Robert Janes teleplay as well as a cameo star. This time the five-person "station," composed of three men and two women with the matching racial balance of three Occidentals and two Hawaiians, are civilian oceanographers suddenly involved in getting data for the Federal Government from a sunken Soviet nuclear submarine. Half the movie is devoted to setting up the cardboard characters; the second half is a plodding spy chase with not a surprise on hand. There's little credibility in the Russians' spy tactics or the Americans' know-how along the way to the predictable sluggish resolution under and over water.

A third new TV-movie, Nightside, unavailable for preview, stars Doug McClure as a Los Angeles policeman who works the night shift.

Five TV-movies are on their second run. 1979's Women in White, a pilot that was originally a three-part miniseries, has been cut down to serve as a two-part movie and a compendium of soap operas about selfless doctors and nurses at a Florida hospital. 1978's Getting Married offers Richard Thomas in a heavy-handed "madcap" comedy about a young man determined to marry an indifferent young woman. 1979's "Sanctuary of Fear" has been renamed The Girl in the Park, but it still reduces Bernard Hughes, portraying G.K. Chesterton's Father Brown, to just another TV detective in a boring thriller. And the second half of 1979's Captain America is no more exciting than the first. The pick of the repeats is 1977's Panic at Lake Wood Manor, formerly titled "It Happened at Lake Wood Manor," a dumb but entertaining thriller that has Myrna Loy, Suzanne Somers and Robert Foxworth, among others, besieged by killer ants.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated

WITHOUT DIET PILLS OR EXERCISE.

SLEEP COMFY AND COZY...AND WAKE UP TRIMMER THAN YOU WERE THE NIGHT BEFORE... THANKS TO SLIM-SLEEPERS®.

The fast, safe reducing method you can wear! That's right...slip into Slim Sleepers®, the comfortable new reducing pajamas, and the next morning you will actually wake up thinner than you were the night before. Amazing, but true. It couldn't be easier. Slim Sleepers® are made from DuPont's amazing Tyvek®*. This special fabric seals in body heat, and while you're blissfully of daily house chores, work in the yard, or sit around relaxing or watching TV. And, if you wear Slim-Sleepers® while you exercise, you'll slim down even quicker— as you firm up.

EASY...AND EFFECTIVE

If you've failed with diets and exercise, you're in for a treat with Slim-Sleepers®. Let Slim-sleepers® work for you while you do your daily duties. Slim-Sleepers® are guaranteed to work the first night you sleep in them, or return them for a full refund...no questions asked! Slim-Sleepers® are specially designed to provide freedom of movement and comfort, double-seam, reinforced. They are available for men and women. Slim-Sleepers are machine washable and will last for years under normal use. Hurry and order yours today.

- ACTUALLY SLIMS WHILE YOU SLEEP
- MAKES JOGGING MORE EFFECTIVE
- SLIM DOWN AS YOU CLEAN HOUSE
- LOSE INCHES AS YOU RELAX

asleep, works to rid you of unwanted, excess tissue moisture. Wake up thinner, more rested, and ready to go!

AN EFFORTLESS WAY TO REDUCE

After the first night with Slim-Sleepers®, you will notice a difference that you can measure. Each succeeding night you use the Slim-Sleeper® plan, the size reduction will continue until you have reached your ideal measurements. And, just by wearing Slim-Sleepers® for a few days a month (after you've reached your ideal measurements), you can maintain those ideal measurements for as long as you like.

MORE THAN JUST FOR SLEEPING Slim-Sleepers® are also perfect for jogging or exercising. Or, wear them around the house. You'll lose inches as you take care

Special: The first of the Big Three events on the women's tour.

Although Donna Caponi Young earned the winner's check (adding another major title to accompany her two U.S. Women's Open crowns), last year's LPGA Championship will probably be remembered as the place where runner-up Jerilyn Britz first made a name for herself.

Britz's 64 on the first day at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center in Mason, Ohio, included nine birdies, tying the then LPGA record. Proving that her play here was no fluke, Britz won the '79 U.S. Women's Open one month later. (Live)

"I think I'm pregnant"

Now there's an easy way to determine if you're pregnant. It's Acu-Test... a safe and simple urine test for pregnancy that requires no internal examination.

In tests by hundreds of women in the privacy of their own homes, Acu-Test's pregnancy readings proved to be 97% accurate. Acu-Test is the same kind of test that's used in a doctor's office.

You can clearly see the results of your Acu-Test in just 2 hours. The appearance of a dark ring in the mirror at the base of the Acu-Test kit indicates that you're pregnant.

The sooner you know if you're pregnant, the sooner you can begin to take proper care of yourself and consult your doctor.

At your drug counter now.
Follow instructions carefully.

As they grow, their protection grows. Your premium stays the same.

The cost of living is going up. Your expenses continue to grow for food, clothing, education and practically everything your family needs or wants.

Think of how this affects the cost of protecting their financial future. As your family's needs and living standards grow, you'll need more and more insurance just to keep pace.

Life of Georgia knows this. That's why we have new Executive Participating Life Plans. These plans offer you an opportunity to hedge against inflation in your life insurance program.

Under our Cost of Living Addition option, dividends can increase the value of your insurance based on the increase in the Consumer Price Index. These dividends are used to purchase additions to your original policy. The total coverage can grow to twice the original amount. But the premium stays the same.

Life of Georgia's Executive Participating Life plans have four more dividend options. Your dividend can be paid to you in cash. It can be used to reduce future premiums. You can purchase paid-up permanent insurance. Or you can leave it on deposit earning interest. The amount of the dividend is determined by the Company's future experience with interest rates, mortality, and expense.

*If you'd like to learn more, just mail the coupon, and one of our agents will phone to arrange an appointment to explain the special features of these new plans. By return mail, we'll send you What My Family Should Know. It's a convenient, spiral-bound financial log for recording all your assets and obligations.*

LOSS FORMULA...ACTUALLY REDUCES
BODY FAT AS FAST AS FASTING OR COMPLETE STARVATION.

Dr. Alan Howard of Cambridge, England, headed a team of British scientists who, after 8 years of research and clinical study, have perfected the ultimate diet. “Here at last,” says Dr. Howard. “we have unlocked the dietary secret that causes the body to burn up the maximum amount of its own excess fatty tissues—and to do so safely.”

Dr. Howard's clinical case histories show users safely losing 6 lbs in 48 hours, 15 lbs in one week 22 lbs in 14 days, 46 lbs in six weeks and so on. And now this incredible new “Super Diet” is available in America.

Dr. Alan Howard

“I couldn't believe my eyes. Between April 17 and April 21—just 5 days—I lost 24 lbs. I've tried everything and there's nothing like this diet. It's a real winner! P.S. My husband lost 17 lbs in the same time.”

Ola Spears, Gary, Indiana

"Reduced 21 lbs in 5 days on fantastic Cambridge Diet™"

Barbara Andrews, Eugene, Oregon

Dr. Alan Howard: "Here finally is the diet plan for the person who has been disappointed or frustrated by every other diet. Whether you need to lose 15 lbs or 50-10 lbs or 100-I'm sure you will find the Cambridge Diet formula the most effective weight loss-fat loss-food in the world. Not only is it the ultimate weight loss diet, but totally fulfills the body's adult daily requirement for nutrients -vitamins and minerals according to standards set by the U.S. Government. This is the diet program that can guarantee consistent and dramatic weight loss week after week and do it safely. It is an unprecedented achievement in reducing-totally delicious, nutritious-with a 'breakthrough' balancing of food elements that will actually reduce body fat as fast as fasting or complete starvation."

FOOD BARGAIN OF A LIFETIME ...AS LITTLE AS 50¢ PER MEAL

There's nothing funny about an unknown insurance agent.

A black and white photograph of a man in a dark suit and tie. Instead of a face, he has a crumpled paper bag for a head. Two circular holes are cut into the bag, serving as eyes. The man's expression is neutral, and he is looking directly at the camera.

Because when you really need to talk with one, you need one who knows you. One whose service you can depend on. One whose answers you can trust.

That's the way Liberty National agents work. Once you have one, your Liberty National agent makes it a point to understand your needs. And be available anytime you need insurance help. That's one-to-one service. And that's the way it ought to be.

A RACE AGAINST TIME

Alan Alda and Mike Farrell

A GI with a badly lacerated aorta (the main chest artery) is brought to the 4077th via helicopter—and Hawkeye must act quickly to save him. Cutting into the man's chest with a pocket-knife, he stems the bleeding by hand. But by doing so, Hawkeye leaves only 20 minutes to close the wound and restore circulation. Any longer, and the patient will be paralyzed—or possibly die.

Once in the operating room, it's obvious that the blood vessel is beyond repair and that a graft is needed. The only possible donor: another casualty with a fatal head wound—provided he dies in time.

Filmed without a laugh track, the episode gains dramatic impact from a clock in the corner of the screen that ticks off the precious minutes in very real time.

Hawkeye: Alan Alda. B.J.: Mike Farrell. Potter: Harry Morgan. Hot Lips: Loretta Swit. Charles: David Ogden Stiers. Klinger: Jamie Farr. Father Mulcahy: William Christopher. Roberts: Kevin Brophy. (Repeat)

The Original
WAISTAWAY
No Cheap Cloth Or Elastic Imitation

You Will Lose

Reducing belts and devices may come and go, but WAIST AWAY started it all and continues to remove inches & trim bulges long after imitators are gone. Why? Because WAIST AWAY is designed from sound scientific principles that work for everyone!

WAIST AWAY works on the tested and proven reducing principles used for year by professional athletes, taking the body's own heating effect and concentrating it on areas with bulging fat.

Lose 4-6 Inches In The First 24 Hours!

That's right. WAIST AWAY can work on your waist and hips that fast! The effective slimming action comes from our original design, which can be imitated but not duplicated. Our rubberized material is soft and washable. The same material athletes use to sweat away the excess moisture that forms bulky fat-quickly, efficiently. Imagine how delighted YOU will be to find yourself inches slimmer in the waist and hips the very next day!

Don't Hold Fat In...LOSE IT!

WAIST AWAY is not a glorified corset like so many imitator's belts are. We don't squeeze it in. We trim you down and with our 5 minute exercise program, you can lose inches of unsightly fat where you want to lose them most. It is working right now for some of the most famous athletes and entertainers in the world and IT WILL WORK FOR YOU!

WAIST AWAY Does More!

Our special construction creates a soothing massage effect, relieves back pain and tense muscles while trimming fat. The heating effect trims bulges without cumbersome weights, machinery or drugs. And, NO Starving. You can jog, do housework or office work while wearing WAIST AWAY. And, after you lose a few inches, WAIST AWAY adjust quickly to allow you to start losing more!

Lose Inches Or Pay Nothing!

You have ten days to try WAIST AWAY at home to find out it does all we claim AND MORE. If you aren't totally delighted, return for a full, no questions asked, refund of your money. You risk absolutely nothing, so order NOW!

FOR THE THIGHS TOO!

Based on the same principle as the WAIST-AWAY, THIGH WRAPS will reduce excess fatty tissue on the thighs—one of the most difficult places on the body to reduce excess fat. Wear THIGH WRAPS like the WAIST-AWAY and get the same fast, guaranteed results!

HENRY MOORE

8 PM 10

A PROFILE OF THE SCULPTOR AT 80

Moore's five-ft. tall bronze "Family Group," which took four years to sculpt.

Special: Like modern-day counterparts to Stonehenge, the sculptures of Henry Moore are mysterious and monumental—ranging from attenuated human figures to totemic animal faces and flowing organic forms full of intricate curves, planes and hollows. Why so huge? "Size has its own emotional impact," Moore explains in this documentary by Robert M. Fresco. And it's the role of the artist, the sculptor adds, to "make people use their eyes and see things which ordinarily they might pass over."

As seen in this 1978 portrait, Moore himself might easily pass for a sedate and settled English country squire. In fact, though, he's revealed as something of a jet setter, leaving his Hertfordshire home to visit the West German foundry where many of his enormous bronzes are cast, and to tour five U.S. cities where several of his open-air works are displayed.

The octogenarian Moore also emerges as an astute and acerbic businessman ("I don't want commissions," he snaps) as well as a keenly observant artist. "I prefer trees in the winter," he says, "because they show their anatomy." Other sources of inspiration include his infant grandson Gus and a Paul Cezanne painting of bathers, whose textured forms so delight Moore's eye that he is creating three-dimensional replicas. # Shampoo in thickness while washing away damaged hair.

A unique scientific breakthrough now provides you with thick, lustrous, in fact, more beautiful hair.

Don't confuse: Pro-Hair is not like other shampoos. Most shampoos are merely cleansers which damage hair further by hastening the stripping process. Even shampoos which claim to condition or thicken, only coat the hair shaft, but do nothing to alleviate the real problem. Pro-Hair is really like a medicine formulated into a shampoo. It works from within to help repair broken and damaged hair while making it thicker.

After one use, the improvement will be as obvious as the hair on your head, or your money back. Send unused portion to Heath-Winslow for full refund if not fully satisfied.

Extra strength: To achieve the best results in bringing your hair back to good health, try Pro-Hair Extra Strength Conditioner along with the shampoo.

The problems: Thin hair Broken and damaged hair. Mostly, these problems are caused by blow-drying, exposure to the elements, brushing, coloring, and even combing. These are just some of the things which strip hair of vital oils, causing the outer layer of the individual hair shaft to break. (See Photo at left) If examined under a microscope, almost every hair on your head would show some kind of damage or deterioration.

The solution: Medically tested, clinically proven, Pro-Hair Thickening and Nourishing Shampoo.

Pro-Hair Shampoo offers you something no other shampoo can. new, revolutionary Vylinium. Extensive laboratory tests have shown Vylinium actually penetrates the hair shaft to make thin hair thicker and damaged hair healthier. It has a molecular structure so small that it works its way into the outer layer of each hair shaft to help damaged hair from within, making it thicker and healthier while leaving it clean and shiny.

TO DIE FOR IRELAND

Special: Ten years of sectarian conflict in Northern Ireland have resulted in more than 2000 deaths. And, say documentarians Alan and Susan Raymond, there's no resolution in sight, as a well-armed IRA guerrilla force numbering 300-500 continues to oppose— with deadly skill—an estimated 33,000 British and government troops.

Exploring "both sides of the story" in and around Belfast, the report (still being edited at press time) interweaves scenes of—and comments from—British soldiers and IRA sympathizers. The Raymonds accompany a British bomb-disposal unit to a bus depot that has been raided by terrorists; and join in a tense military patrol of the village of Crossmaglen, where nearby—hours after the murder of Lord Mountbatten last August 18—British soldiers were killed in IRA bombings that constituted, by one account, "the single worst military loss the British had suffered in

British troops guard the streets of Crossmaglen, a village in Northern Ireland.

Ireland since the 1916 Easter Uprising in Dublin."

But to an official with the Sinn Fein (the political wing of the IRA), it's the "Brits" [who are] the real men of violence" in Northern Ireland. That feeling is sometimes echoed in the streets, as in one scene where British tanks are pelted with rocks by hostile residents. (60 min.)

It will take a $40 haircut and regulation
Southern California fingernails... for refugees from 'Dallas'
to make it in 'Knots Landing'

By Cyra McFadden

Poor Val and Gary Ewing, refugees from rapacious Dallas and the series of the same name. Now they live in Knots Landing, a small, exclusive Southern California beach town, and they can't adjust to life on the West Coast.

Val looks like Joan Kennedy but dresses like Daisy Mae. In her early 30s, she wears hair ribbons, flat shoes and ruffled sundresses she must order from the Prepubescent Miss department of some Dallas store. How can she possibly fit in, in Southern California.

Cyra McFadden is the author of "The Serial." "Perceptions" is an occasional feature in which noted American writers offer their personal views of television.

without natural cottons from a chic boutique, a $40 haircut and porcelain fingernails?

As for her husband Gary, he still wears his cowboy boots. Luckily, these are trendy just now among people who've never seen a cow; but someone should tell Gary to stop sleeping in that Stanley Kowalski undershirt before he hears from the Knots Landing improvement association.

In the inflated California real-estate market, those big houses in the Ewings' cul-de-sac, ticky-tacky though they are, must go for half a mil. And out here, communities that well-heeled generally have rules. I know of at least one in which cats must be kept on leashes.

We're big on role models out here, too, so Val might as well choose her neighbor Karen Fairgate. Karen is nice, mind you; intelligent and likable. Still, one can tell at a glance that she has her designer jeans drycleaned to keep their shape and that her eyelashes began life as part of a mink.

Karen also has regulation Southern California fingernails, those inch-long, dark-red, "sculptured" claws that look as if they belong on a lobster. We're told she still manages to be a marvelous cook, in her gourmet kitchen with its requisite butcher blocks and baker's racks, but I don't believe it. Sculptured nails, like Chinese bound feet, render a woman fashionably helpless.

"Type?" wailed a secretary in a Los Angeles TV production company to me. "I can't. I just spent $60 on a brand-new set of nails."

Surely no one would subject such an investment to the hazards of a garlic press or a cheese grater.

Two other Knots Landing neighbors have just the right look. Laura is a lawyer's wife, Ginger a schoolteacher married to a record producer. Both are thin, pretty and glowing with health. You know they're on the Scarsdale Diet and never miss a workout at the local branch of Jane Fonda's gym.

Despite half-hearted efforts to suggest the Knots Landing gang are just folks, these are people with at least superficial sophistication. When they go to dinner at a fancy French restaurant, for example, they all know their way around the menu, debating between bouillabaisse, escargots and caviar. (I should add that all this urbanity was undercut when Richard ordered the wine. What he asked for came out "Shadow LaFeet.")

Yet Knots Landing is a cul-de-sac in more ways than one. "Karen, do you know it's 10 o'clock?" Sid Fairgate demanded in one episode, when his wife came home from a high-school PTA meeting. I dropped my popcorn. This is a California husband to a California wife?

Karen protested mildly but, in what I thought a marked departure from reality, did not tell Sid where he could put his wristwatch.

As throwbacks go in Knots Landing, though, Laura and Richard are even more unlikely. When Richard complains about his breakfast eggs, Laura cowers and offers to make more. She also apologizes abjectly for having sent—his shirts to the laundry. What should she have done—beaten them clean, with rocks, in a cold stream?

Richard is fiercely ambitious professionally, a '70s replay of the '50s organization man. Dutiful Laura even goes to bed with an old boy friend to advance her husband's chances, but go-getters aren't regarded as properly mellow in Richard's part of the world, and he is hopelessly out of touch with the pervading style. What other Southern California lawyer wears gray suits, white shirts and ties?

Because I live in Northern California, one must allow for regional differences. I still think Richard should know that my most successful lawyer friends dress like very clean, very rich lumberjacks.

Sometimes, happily, Knots Landing manages to blast out of its time warp and take on a contemporary California feel. One such episode hinged around the effort to save the town's beach from offshore oil drilling. In a new and timely version of the Western, Texas oilmen were the villains and the ecologists the good guys in the white hats.

True, the save-the-beach contingent brought the oilmen to their knees with remarkably little effort—about as much as it would take to recycle the bottles from a case of rare old Shadow La-Feet. They're to be commended nonetheless. As the governor of California likes to point out, we're all fellow passengers on "Spaceship Earth," although some of us are traveling coach while the Knots Landing types travel first-class.

Another up-to-the-minute segment dealt with rape. The four husbands of the series, even Richard the jerk, reacted to the event sensitively. No macho chest-beating, no vigilante attempts, no flicker of suggestion that the wife involved might somehow be to blame. Since husbands in TV rape dramas are often depicted as unfeeling louts, it pleased me to see this treatment avoid such stereotyping.

Small details, too, often ring true if one knows the turf. When Laura orders a drink in a bar, it's a white-wine spritzer—the fashionable California drink. (Order a Scotch-and-soda, and the bartender will peer through the overhanging ferns and ask you how to mix it.)

A high-school teacher not only has the blond good looks of an overgrown surfer, he wears his shirts fashionably unbuttoned almost to the navel. You know he not only doesn't sleep in his underwear, he doesn't own any.

Even Val and Gary's kitchen sports golden-oak furniture and a Tiffany lamp, sure signs they're assimilating. So maybe they'll like it here after all. They'll settle into their new, biodegradable soap opera, get themselves suntans and trade their Texas-style gas eater for a tiny compact.

Frankly, I'm glad they're not my neighbors, though. That Val Ewing has problems.

Spectacularly miscast as a country-music singer, Julie Harris did a guest shot on Knots Landing as Val's monster of a mother. Harris played a stone-hearted woman who trod her nice husband and her tender young daughter in her mad pursuit of fame.

"You would have been proud of me if I'd made it big," Harris screamed, in the obligatory mother-daughter confrontation scene.

"No!" Val screamed back at her. "All I wanted was a momma!"

This episode set both country music and career mothers back a hundred years. But never mind. What worries me is that it ended with Val crooning tenderly to her childhood rag doll.

God knows I'm usually the last to recommend such things, but maybe Val would benefit from some of the new California therapies—primal screaming, or est, or meditative massage. Or maybe she could just bundle her doll and her Dogpatch sundresses off to Goodwill and try writing a thousand times "I AM A GROWN-UP." END

April Fool's Day brought a sudden change in the fortunes of ABC News' Bettina Gregory

By Stephen Banker

When ABC news correspondent Bettina Gregory was recently taken off her beat as the network's No. 2 White House reporter and put on general assignment, it occurred to me that the move might give some insight into the workings of a network news operation. I had been hearing good things about Gregory—"hard-working," "alert," "tenacious"—so there had to be more to the switch than met the eye. But when I asked ABC's Washington bureau chief, Carl Bernstein, what had happened, he stonewalled me.

Bernstein is the former Washington Post ace, who knows about stonewalling firsthand from his Watergate investigations. His belief in the public's right to know is legendary. When I raised the Bettina Gregory matter, however, he waved me off. I asked, "Would you call this a promotion, a demotion or a lateral move?" His answer was to tell me that I wasn't asking good questions.

That's when I knew I was on to a story that deserved digging.

Bettina Gregory the daughter of a New York plastic surgeon, is, at 33, a late bloomer in the news business. After a year of Smith College, she dropped out to attend drama school in London, with the idea of becoming an actress and dancer. Her marriage there to a Greek naval officer ended in divorce after four years. Returning home, she free-lanced for The New York Times. It was only eight years ago that she launched her career in broadcasting, as a reporter for an Ithaca, N.Y., radio station.

I began with the knowledge that her assignment at the White House had been a difficult one. She was, to quote one of her colleagues, "working off the No. 1 ego in the Presidential press corps." That would be Sam Donaldson, who is probably this era's most visible White House correspondent, a man who relishes confronting politicians of whatever rank. With Gregory No.-2, Donaldson was normally the reporter for World News Tonight, the news department's evening showcase. Gregory was more often given spots on the early Good Morning America and the 11:30 P.M. Iranian special, which later became the ABC News Nightline.

Those long hours finally caught up with Gregory on April 1, 1980. That was the day of the Wisconsin and Kansas political primaries. It was the day President Carter met with his advisers before dawn and then with reporters. And it was also a time when Sam Donaldson was on vacation.

The top story was that Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr had indicated his willingness to accept control of the American hostages under certain conditions. Bani-Sadr's speech caught Washington in the wee hours. That night, with Donaldson not available, Gregory reported: "The President and his top aides gathered around the fireplace in the Oval Office. They drank coffee, the President informal in a gray cardigan sweater."

But Lesley Stahl of CBS had an arresting angle on the same event: "Eager to respond quickly and also to get the message out before the polls opened in Wisconsin, Mr. Carter invited camera crews into the Oval Office."

Gregory had failed to subject the story to the harsh light of politics. ABC executives felt her spot was "loosely constructed," it "wandered around," it had "a lot of superfluous stuff." "She had 10 hours before the newscast," says one ABC hand. "She ended up with the fireplace, the coffee and the sweater, but not the politics."

Gregory's defenders felt that although that spot may have been below par, she had previously demonstrated excellence. Her assignment to the White House last summer was in recognition of the solid work she had done in covering the regulatory agencies, and, before that, the Pentagon. Among TV reporters, she had been out in front in coverage of alleged fraud and mismanagement in the General Services Administration.) She also had won praise for her coverage of Three Mile Island and the Patricia Hearst trial.

Reenter Carl Bernstein. He had felt, dating back to his taking over the bureau in March, that not enough digging was going on. He specifically criticized the White House press corps as a passive bunch.

But Bettina Gregory, like Bernstein himself, had flair, persistence and the ability to dig. She also had displeased the top-ranking bosses, as Bernstein himself had done time after time on The Washington Post. When Watergate came along, he grabbed the brass ring. Could Gregory, as a general-assignment reporter, do the same? On Bernstein's urging, ABC is betting her salary of around $90,000 that she can—and will.

Gregory got a bit emotional the day Bernstein broke the news of her transfer to her. "One boo-boo," she said later, "and they come down on you like a ton of bricks." But now the spirit has healed. For instance, she and David Browde, Pentagon correspondent for the Cable News Network, are planning on getting married this summer, something she had been resisting while she thought the No. 1 White House job might be in the cards.

Her new beat is the Federal Government—with as broad a definition as she chooses. What happens is up to her and her telephone. Gregory is certainly not the sort to wring her hands when direct action is available. Sam Donaldson knows that. His unrestrained sense of humor once led him to nibble at her arm. Well, maybe it was more than a nibble. Gregory dropped a typewriter on his foot.

"Bettina is no shrinking violet," he says admiringly. "Soon she'll be on the show [World News Tonight] two or three times a week. You wait and see."

So the answer that Carl Bernstein would not give me is that, whatever the network bosses think, Bettina Gregory is moving up. (END)

"The popularity of white rum and tonic is no surprise. We Puerto Ricans knew it was only a matter of time."

Fernando Lugo, architect, and his wife Isabel

More and more people are enjoying Puerto Rican white rum in place of vodka or gin. Like the Lugos, they appreciate white rum's incredible smoothness. It mixes beautifully with tonic or orange juice or soda. And makes a superbly dry, clean-tasting martini.

You see, every drop of Puerto Rican rum is aged, by law, for at least one full year. And when it comes to smoothness, aging is the name of the game.

Make sure the rum is Puerto Rican.

The name Puerto Rico on the label is your assurance of excellence. The Puerto Rican people have been making rum for almost 5 centuries. Their specialized skills and dedication result in a rum of exceptional taste and purity. No wonder over 85% of the rum sold in this country comes from Puerto Rico.

Lincoln at Gettysburg characterized American democracy as "government . . . by the people." One skeptic amended Lincoln's statement to read: "government by those who can make themselves heard." In politics today, that usually means those who can afford to buy television time.

All through this primary-election season, TV viewers have been bombarded with paid political programs and commercials, and after a brief timeout in July and August for the party conventions, the barrage will intensify nationwide as Election Day (Nov. 4) approaches.

Can an aspirant for the Nation's highest office actually "buy" his way into the Presidency by spending more than anybody else on TV commercials that proclaim his purity of spirit, perspicacity and overall fitness for the top job in the Free World?

The answer clearly is no.

John Connally spent more than any other candidate, Democrat or Republican, in the early campaigning this year ($12 million, of which $2 million went for media) and managed to win exactly one convention delegate; and he employed the same TV expert (Roger Ailes) who worked on President Richard Nixon's 1968 campaign. Connally fell by the wayside on March 9.

Similarly, among the most expensive media campaigns in the New England primaries was that of Sen. Howard Baker ($325,000), but he too dropped from the running in early March when it was clear his candidacy was going nowhere. President Carter far outspent →

Can a candidate buy his way into office?

A look at whether the fortunes spent on commercials really pay off

By Herbert E. Alexander

Sen. Edward Kennedy in the March 25 New York primary, but Kennedy scored an upset victory by a wide margin. Back in 1976, President Gerald Ford conducted the most intensive media effort in Presidential history during the final 10 days of the general-election period: $4 million was plowed into a series of half-hour commercials featuring Ford and former baseball player Joe Garagiola. "The Joe and Jerry Show" was considered a big hit and millions of people saw it, but President Ford came in second in the race.

In spite of those examples (and many others we might describe), it's clear that no modern Presidential campaign can prosper without judicious use of commercials. Although President Carter was far ahead of Senator Kennedy in the polls through the early primary season, his media experts spent more than $1 million on a series of 30- and 60-second spots and several five-minute commercials whose purpose was to give Carter "a presence" (as Gerald Rafshoon put it) in the state primaries while allowing the President to remain in the White House, above the hurly-burly of the campaign trail.

Rafshoon, Carter's media adviser, has pointed to surveys suggesting that voters can learn more about a candidate's stand on issues from commercials than from TV news programs. "It gives a candidate a chance to disseminate his message widely to the public without intermediaries," says Rafshoon. "It's up to the public to decide, by looking at those commercials, whether they like him or don't like him."

And many of the political spots in use this year have pulled no punches. One Carter commercial bluntly invited TV viewers to recall Chappaquiddick: "You may not always agree with President Carter," it said, "but you'll never find yourself wondering whether he's telling the truth." A Kennedy commercial had actor Carroll O'Connor saying: "Herbert Hoover hid out in the White House, and we got a hell of a Depression. But I'm afraid Jimmy Carter's Depression is going to be worse than Hoover's."

The Presidential-selection process in 1980—primaries, caucuses, conventions and the general election—will cost about $225 million, a record amount. The largest single category of expenditure will be television and its related costs—probably around $45 million. That's about double what it was in 1976, far exceeding the four-year rise in the Consumer Price Index. And it may even run higher, depending on the size of John Anderson's television spending.

This year, with 36 primaries spanning 14 weeks and with Presidential straw polls stretching back to Florida's in November, political TV advertising is more important than ever. In Iowa, to gain less than two per cent of delegates—50 Democrats, 37 Republicans—the spending for broadcasting totaled more than $500,000 out of close to $3 million spent overall.

Rep. John Anderson, running as a Republican early in the primary season, plowed increasingly larger amounts into television as near-success in a few primary states brought contributions into his coffers. George Bush did the same. Ronald Reagan opted to "front load" his campaign expenditures, gambling that if he went all-out in the early primaries and sewed up the nomination, he could spend far less in the later ones; thus, by May 1, Reagan had spent fully $15.3 million ($2.4 million of it on media and 70% of that on TV) of the $17.6 million that's the legal limit for candidates seeking nomination who've accepted Government matching funds. This year, only John Connally declined to accept Government subsidy for his campaign, a decision that—had his ambitions prospered—would have allowed him to raise and spend as much as he wanted in the primaries. →

The Saving Place

The largest single chunk of campaign war chests always goes to television. And most of that amount always goes to 30- and 60-second spots because both politicians and broadcasters prefer it that way: brief, carefully sculpted political commercials (rather than five-minute or 30-minute broadcasts) are over before a viewer can cross the room to turn them off; and besides, they don't disrupt a station's or network's schedule, nor drive ratings down.

Still, five-minute and 30-minute ads are extremely useful to a well-run campaign. Some viewers mistake them for news specials, instead of paid advertisements, especially if they appear just before or after a regular news program. And long-form ads have another important advantage: they're sold at broadcasters' programming rates rather than at the rate for commercials, which is far higher.

For example, the Carter campaign in the 1976 general election spent more than $2 million for 56 60-second spots on three commercial networks, an average of $38,000 each. For 71 five-minute ads, they paid only $847,599, or $11,938 each. And that figure included $62,698 in editing costs charged to Carter for the shortening of regular programs to fit the five-minute ad at the end.

Actually, most broadcasters aren't too crazy about selling time to politicians at all, because the 1971 Federal Election Campaign Act says they have to charge them "the lowest unit rate"—the discounted price they get from regular advertisers. As a result, TV stations and networks often come out behind in their selling of time to office-seekers.

But do broadcasters have to sell time to politicians if they don't want to? Yes, because the law says that candidates must have "reasonable access" to the public airwaves. During campaign periods, stations and networks open up a number of time slots for purchase by politicians, and those are sold on a first-come-first-served basis—cash on the barrel head in advance: no credit.

That law was tested this year when all three networks refused to sell President Carter a half hour of air time that the President wanted for the kickoff of his campaign. The President was asking for too much time too early in the campaign season, the networks insisted. Carter's people appealed to the Federal Communications Commission and won, and that ruling was upheld in March by a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. The decision held that the networks had acted "unreasonably" in refusing to sell the President air time. But the decision came too late to be helpful.

Actually, incumbent Presidents enjoy enormous natural advantages in getting their propaganda onto the airwaves because they traditionally get free time for speeches and press conferences—which are exempt from FCC equal-time rules.

But even when broadcasters provide free time voluntarily, as in Presidential debates, candidates still are eager to spend lots of their money on commercials. Why? Because they work. If TV commercials can sell soap, they can also sell candidates—a fact that's been clear since the early 1950s. And even though TV time is appallingly expensive, it's cost-effective, giving the widest coverage per dollar spent. In Madison Avenue terms, it's a "good buy."

Even though the record shows that you can't buy the Presidency by outspending your opponent for TV time, the question remains: can a candidate in the television era become President without buying TV ads?

The answer: nobody knows. It's never been tried. (END)

rand Opera Meets Grand Ole Opry

It's pasta with a side of cornpone, as Luciano Pavarotti and Loretta Lynn tape a TV duet

By Harry Stein

[Loretta Lynn and Luciano Pavarotti appear on Omnibus, to be telecast Sunday, June 15, on ABC. Consult local listings for time and channel.]

Loretta Lynn is more than a little apprehensive. Here she is in a television studio in New York City, 15 minutes until taping, and some assistant director is sitting beside her with a cassette machine in his lap that is playing an Italian song at her.

"I ain't never gonna learn this," she says. "What's the name of this tune, anyway?"

"'Come Back to Sorrento'."

"I can't hardly sing in American, let alone I-talian." She shakes her head, then manages a half smile. "Why can't he help me sing 'Louisiana Woman, Mississippi Man'?"

One can only imagine the reaction of Luciano Pavarotti, Loretta's partner in performance this afternoon, to such a proposition.

The idea of pairing the reigning titan of the operatic stage with the queen of country music was hatched by the producers of Omnibus, the two-time trial revival of the toney variety show of television's Golden Age; and on paper it looked to be an inspiration. Grand opera meets the Grand Ole Opry, pasta with a side of cornpone. But it is the kind of notion that can very easily blow up in everyone's face.

"This is gonna be some crazy thing," says Loretta, turning away from the damnable tape machine. "He can't talk English and neither can I." She laughs.

"Do you know each other?" someone asks.

"I ain't even sure of that. I might've met him on The Tonight Show, but I can't say."

She'd have remembered. Five minutes later, Luciano Pavarotti, that huge, endlessly playful manchild, sweeps into the studio, accompanied by his entourage, and buries little Loretta in an embrace. Then he steps back and →

they study each other; she is wearing a denim suit, with "Loretta" stitched in screaming red on her back pocket and a "Loretta" belt around her waist; he is in tails.

"Look at you," she says, "you're all fixed up."

"And you," he says, "you are beautiful."

A moment later they have assumed their places for a brief rehearsal before the cameras roll. "Where," demands Pavarotti, "are the idiot cards? Ah, there they are."

He catches a glimpse of himself in the monitor at the back of the room. "No, don't take this shot." Feigning immense concern, he motions the camera closer. "Closer. Closer. No long shots. Please, my face must fill up the screen."

Loretta laughs along with the other 50 people jammed into the studio, but she obviously remains preoccupied.

"I'm very nervous," she confides to Pavarotti a moment later. "After I do my song, they want me to sing something with you. Something they got on tape. I can't speak I-talian."

He smiles. "Don't worry, no one in Napoli speaks so well, anyway."

But the bonhomie is forced. Ten minutes later, when the taping of their patter commences, they sound like exactly what they are: strangers reading to each other from cue cards. It is not until midway through the segment, when Pavarotti, in the course of explaining what opera is about, launches into a brief aria from "Rigoletto," that the atmosphere between them abruptly changes. As his full, heartbreakingly glorious tenor fills the room, she studies him with an awe that seems matched only by her surprise.

"Wow!" she exclaims when he is finished. "That's really pretty." She shakes her head. "If someone were really down and heard you, boy, it'd pick him right up again." She smiles.

Itchy, watery eyes...

Runny nose...

"I ain't ever gonna sing again."

But a moment later, with the cameras back on, she is doing just that, offering up her hit single "Pregnant Again," and it is Pavarotti's turn to play audience. The song is so recent that Loretta is reading the words from cue cards:

*The car payment's late, and the mortgage is due,
And three of the children are down with the flu.*

This week the eggs cost us one dollar nine,

And dinner was bread with white gravy and I'm

*Pregnant again . . . **

The melody that goes with the soap-opera-sad lyric is haunting, and Loretta, singing the song in her famous soulful, silky way, turns it into a kind of country dirge. Pavarotti, sitting a few feet away, listens with a look that can only be described as transported.

"What a beautiful song," he gushes at the end. "That is so beautiful!"

Loretta allows herself a full smile. "Why, thanks."

And so, 15 minutes later, she lets herself be led to the piano for "Come Back to Sorrento." Loretta Lynn ends up tackling but one line of the song—and that after much language coaching by Pavarotti—and when it is over she is still dubious.

Turning to the friendly genius beside her, she asks, "How'd I do?"

"Excellent. From 1 to 10, I give you 8½ on your Italian accent."

She smiles. "Hey, I'm almost ready for It-ly." A beat. "And how'd it sound?"

"Ah, perfecto, perfecto."

"Perfecto? Does that mean perfect?"

"Perfecto," says Luciano Pavarotti, "means perfect."

"Hey," says Loretta Lynn, "hot damn." (END)

By Robert MacKenzie

BEN WATTENBERG'S 1980

Ben J. Wattenberg is a character hard to characterize: journalist, demographer, maverick social critic. . . . "Independent thinker" might be preferred by his fans; "crank" by his detractors.

Ben Wattenberg's 1980 exposes the television public to one man's view of his times. It's rather a dark, unsentimental view; Wattenberg thinks we are in trouble, and he doesn't buy any of the comfortable liberal formulas for getting us out of it. The man loves hard facts and story statistics, and piles them on with grim relish. He's a tweedy, long-jawed, graying chap, delivering the bad news in a dry, that's-the-way-it-is tone. If a conservative is someone who wants a smaller Government and a bigger army, Wattenberg loosely fits the description, but he is too free a thinker to wear anyone's label, unless he wears it upside down.

The opening shot in his salvo of 10 PBS programs concerned what he calls "the power shift" and was intended to scare hell out of us—or at least it had that effect on anyone who was paying attention. The power shift is what has happened in the past 10 years, and the shift is from the United States to the Soviet Union—now perhaps the premiere military power in the world, in Ben's unrosy view.

Wattenberg relentlessly laid on the statistics: an American land force that has been cut by 200,000 men since 1970, while Soviet forces have been boosted by a quarter million. The Russians could put 1,700,000 men in the field tomorrow; the U.S. is more or less ready with 500,000. Our 10,000 tanks would be looking into the noses of 47,000 Russian tanks. In a land war, "tanks are still what you need," says Wattenberg impassively.

The situation in nuclear weapons and missiles is better but getting worse, Wattenberg shows us, and the Russians' huge commitment to their navy and to new aircraft carriers has turned our control of the seas into an iffy standoff. A huge force of Soviet ships now patrols the Mediterranean, gateway to the Mideast oil fields. "Why does the Soviet Union want that blue-water force? What are they up to?"

Wattenberg took the pressure off somewhat in his second outing, an interesting exposition of the social and economic changes caused as the post-war "baby boom" passes through its life cycle—causing the suburban explosion, the crisis of the cities, the crime peak—and, still to come, a consumer's boom as this huge population lump becomes middle-aged and affluent, and a staggering welfare load as it reaches the age of retirement.

In future shows he goes back to scaring hell out of us, drolly pointing out, for instance, that the Soviet missiles now targeted on New England depend on equipment developed there. And his review of the reporting of the Vietnam War is an overdue second look at the journalism of that period. If you find Ben somewhat glum, you will also find his conclusions hard to shake off and even harder to smother in a cloud of wishful thinking. He's here to give us the medicine, and doesn't much care if we like the way it tastes. (E.M.)

Hollywood

It's been 28 years since lawyer Will Kane (played by GARY COOPER) rode off into the sunset in "High Noon." Now he's back in a CBS TV-movie, "High Noon: The Return of Will Kane," this time played by LEE MAJORS . . . CAROL BURNETT headlines a special for CBS next season, after finishing on "Chu Chu and the Philly Flash," a theatrical movie. In that, Carol portrays a dance instructor who has a romance with an ex-baseballer played by ALAN ARKIN . . . Carol's former costar TIM CONWAY has traveled to Atlanta to work with DON KNOTTS in "The Private Eyes," a movie spoof of detective yarns.

JOHN FORSYTHE has replaced GEORGE PEPPARD as the patriarch in "Oil," ABC's Dallas-like movie and series pilot. Peppard denied speculation that he left the show because of a reluctance to play a character patterned after LARRY HAGMAN's J.R. Ewing, though he does say that he quit because of a disagreement over how his role should be played. Forsythe will continue his work as the voice of Charlie on Charlie's Angels, and as host on The World of Survival . . . NBC, too, has a Dallas clone. Texas, a daytime soap opera, is set in Houston and chronicles the lives of several powerful families. It begins Aug. 4, with a cast that includes BEVERLEE MCKINSEY, LEE PATERSON, CARLA BORELLI, ELIZABETH ALLEN and JIM POYNER, all former inhabitants of Another World.
