

Those western paperbacks...where men were deadshots, women were dangerous, and thieving wranglers were lynched 'til the cows came home. Now—get ready for the reprint to end all reprints...

John A. Dinan's classic book on pulp westerns returns!
With new material—fully illustrated.

Praise for the first edition:

"This attractive volume is a bonanza of information, anecdotes and rare illustrations."

— Los Angeles Herald Examiner, April 22, 1984

"John A. Dinan has given in his valuable book an analysis of this relatively neglected category that so engrossed American men for decades."

— The Magazine In America 1741-1990 by John Tebbel and Mary Ellen Zuckerman (Oxford University Press)

"This is highly recommended to all interested in this important aspect of Western writing."

— The Roundup (Official publication of The Western Writers of America)

"John uncovered things about my writing that I wasn't aware of myself."

— Walker A. Tompkins (Western writer)

"The subtitle 'A Popular History of the Western Fiction Magazine in America,' to which the adjective 'respectful' should be added, concisely states the purpose of this useful monograph-length, reference volume."

— Michael T. Marsden (Western American Literature)

John A. Dinan is now ten-years retired from the aerospace business where, after college, he had worked for The National Security Agency, Avco, RCA, GTE Sylvania, Systems Development Corp, and Raytheon as a human factors psychologist. After the army he worked as a prison psychologist (Clinton Prison at Dannemora) and school psychologist (Clinton County New York). Since retirement he has spent time frolicking in dime novels, pulp magazines, comics and other such wonders. He has six children and four beautiful grandkids for which he feels most blessed.
