Foreword

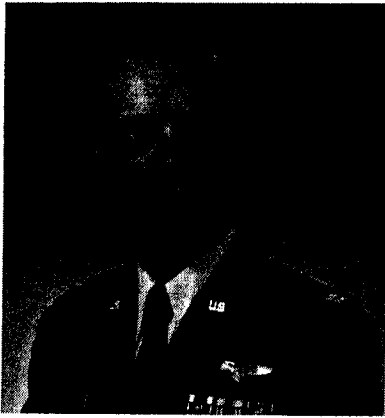

In 1993 Air University Press published the Airpower Journal Index, 1987-1991. The Journal has now been in print for over 10 years. Since our first index, we've grown from a fledgling publication—a professional journal dedicated to the advancement of airpower and the understanding of its application to the operational level of war—into the chief of staff's professional flagship publication.

After reconstituting and convening our editorial board and widening our referee network, we now publish selected articles that examine strategy and policy issues. Further, we have completed construction of and now continuously improve our Internet publication, Air Chronicles.

This updated index compiles the first 10 years of the Airpower Journal's efforts to promote the Air Force professional dialogue and to encourage a broad discussion of airpower subjects. We hope you find it an effective research tool as you continue to read us and enjoy watching us grow.

About the Editors

Ms. Pamela A. Lang

Maj Michael J. Petersen is assigned to the Professional Journals Division; Airpower Research Institute; College of Aerospace Doctrine, Research, and Education; Air University; Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, where he is senior editor of Airpower Journal. Previously, he served as a military doctrine analyst at the Airpower Research Institute. His operational assignments include tours as a Minuteman III missile-launch officer and as an aircrew member on "Looking Glass"—Strategic Air Command's airborne command post—serving as an operations plans officer and as chief of emergency war-order training for the 2d Airborne Command and Control Squadron at Offutt Air Force Base, Nebraska. Major Petersen holds a BA in history and an MS in business administration from the University of Northern Colorado and an MA in military history from the University of Alabama. He is a graduate of Squadron Officer School, Air Command and Staff College, and US Marine Corps Command and Staff College.

At the time she assisted in the editing of this index, Ms. Pamela A. Lang was a secretary assigned to the Professional Journals Division; Airpower Research Institute; College of Aerospace Doctrine, Research, and Education; Air University; Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama. She previously served as secretary for the director of reserve affairs, United States European Command, Stuttgart, Germany; for the Legal Office, San Vito Air Station, Italy; and for the director of operations, 6917th Electronic Security Group, San Vito Air Station, Italy. Ms. Lang holds a BA in biology from North Adams State College (Massachusetts) and an MS in management from Troy State University (Alabama). She is married to Maj Glenn A. Lang, USAF, and has two daughters, Alana and Lauren.

Preface

This publication lists all articles, editorials, and short commentaries from the first 10 volumes of Airpower Journal (1987–1996) in author, title, and subject indexes. The subject index—divided into 135 categories—also includes book reviews, listed alphabetically by name of the book’s author. The other categories of the subject index list entries alphabetically by title. A typical entry includes the author’s name, title of the article/editorial/commentary, volume number, issue number, date of issue, and inclusive page numbers. Articles, editorials, and commentaries may be cross-referenced in as many as five different categories. We used our best judgment in assigning entries to subject categories, although—in the spirit of both inclusiveness and usefulness—we have deliberately placed entries in categories that may be only marginally appropriate. We have retained most of the category titles used in the Airpower Journal Index, 1987–1991 but have added 24 new categories that reflect such changes as the demise of the Soviet Union and the return of Russia, the emergence of information warfare, and the revolution in military affairs.
