Several times NIXON asked Helms for the Kennedy assassination files but Helms refused to give it to him; refused a direct order from the President. I believe NIXON would have uncovered the true facts in the assassination of President Kennedy and that would have taken off the heat in Watergate, because NIXON wanted the files the CIA felt they had to get rid of him. NIXON was lucky he wasn't killed. Assassinated like President Kennedy.

STURGIS told the same "exclusive" story to Steve Dunleavy of the National Star and to Malcolm Abrams of the Midnight Globe. STURGIS said that Watergate was a plan to set up NIXON by the CIA because NIXON had asked for information on the Kennedy assassination that would indicate Castro was behind it. STURGIS also named Robert Bennet as "deep throat." In 1995 Oliver Stone suggested that NIXON was involved in the assassination of John Kennedy. John Erlichman reacted:

Stone has NIXON dragging the chains of JFK's assassination with him. I saw no signs of this. The only time I recall Nixon raising the subject was the day Bobby Kennedy announced for President in 1968. NIXON and I were in a hotel in Oregon, watching television. NIXON shook his head. 'I was in Dallas just before Jack was shot' he said 'and that was bad. But this' - he motioned toward the TV - 'is going to unleash wild forces that can only be worse for the country. Stone also has me asking Haldeman about NIXON'S 'thing' regarding the Bay of Pigs. Haldeman explains that the fixation is connected to JFK'S murder. He and I said nothing of the kind, then or ever." [Newsweek 1.8.96]

The NIXON Foundation commented:

The charge that the 37th President of the United States had any knowledge of, and indirect moral and operational responsibility in the murder of the 35th President of the United States is so reprehensible that it should render wholly illegitimate any text or narrative in which it is contained.

HUNT BLACKMAILS NIXON

As stated, HUNT blackmailed NIXON for $1 million. The White House tapes:

NIXON: Let me put it this way, let us suppose that you get the million bucks, and you get the proper way to handle it. You could hold that side?

Dean: Uh-huh.

NIXON: It would seem to be worthwhile...my point is, do you ever have any choice on HUNT?...I don't think we need to go into every fucking thing HUNT has done...There is nothing in it for HUNT. Let me ask you this (?) [Will the Watergate Grand Jury go back over everything he's done prior to that time?] There might be something?...We protected Helms from one hell of a lot of things. Of course this HUNT, that will uncover a lot of things. You open that scab there's a hell of a lot of things and we just feel that it would be very detrimental to have this thing go any further...Yeah, but the point that I make is this, is really of course you know, it's the limits of his testimony...If he testifies just on the Watergate that's fine. Your major guy to keep under control is HUNT...I think. Because he knows...about a lot of other things [This line was transcribed in the White House's version of the tapes as "Your major guy to keep under control is HUNT?...I think...Does he know a lot?"]...But at the moment, don't you agree that you better get the HUNT thing?...HUNT, of course, who is most valuable in my opinion, might, uh, blow the whistle...and his price is pretty high, but at least ah, we should buy the time on that...For Christ sakes get it...

HUNT'S silence about the conspiracy to kill President Kennedy was worth $1 million and NIXON told John Dean: "It would seem to be worthwhile." What choice did NIXON have? "Do you ever have any choice on HUNT?...I don't think we have to go into every [illegal] thing HUNT has done." NIXON wondered if HUNT would testify about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy before a Grand Jury: "What's in it for him?" He asked Dean if the Watergate Grand jury would delve in HUNT'S past since: "There might be something...you open that scab..." NIXON wasn't worried about Watergate: "If he testifies just on the Watergate that's fine. Your major guy to keep under control is HUNT...because he knows about a lot of other things...Of course this HUNT, that will uncover a lot of things [Dealey Plaza]." In a televised address NIXON said he considered long and hard whether he should pay blackmail to HUNT because of HUNT'S threat to expose "a potential national security problem of serious proportions." At this time NIXON claimed he knew of none of HUNT'S activities other than the Ellsberg break-in.

NIXON'S SECOND TERM: CARL SHOFFLER AND EDMUND CHUNG

CARL SHOFFLER

On November 7, 1972, NIXON was reelected in a landslide, carrying 49 states. Carl Shoffler, one of the arresting police officers at Watergate, advised the Ervin Committee that in January 1973, a week before the Watergate trial began, Edmund Chung, an acquaintance, approached him about the arrests. Carl Shoffler and Edmund Chung had served together at the U.S. Army Security Agency in Warrenton, Virginia. Carl Shoffler testified that Edmund Chung suggested he was in some way involved with those arrested, and appeared to be seeking some unspecified assistance. Carl Shoffler said that Edmund Chung indicated that he was going to make a report on his three-hour meeting with Carl Shoffler, and that his people would not be pleased unless he cooperated. Carl Shoffler met with Edmund Chung again in mid-April 1973. Carl Shoffler stated that Edmund Chung asked him if there was any way Watergate could be made to look like a set up, and suggested that Carl Shoffler might say that he had prior knowledge of the prospective arrests. Edmund Chung allegedly offered Carl Shoffler a large sum of money. Carl Shoffler told this researcher: "There was a conflicting viewpoint on that. My interpretation of his offer was different than his feeling toward the offer. The one thing that is clear to both sides was that there was an offer made. The perception of why the offer was made was in dispute." Carl Shoffler had no idea who was behind Edmund Chung.

The Senate Select Committee on Campaign Activities interviewed Edmund Chung. Edmund Chung denied any knowledge of efforts either to conceal facts related to Watergate, or to induce others to alter their testimony. He said he called Carl Shoffler after seeing his name in the newspapers and had dinner with him. Edmund Chung told the staff that there was a second evening spent with Carl Shoffler in mid-April 1973, but that on this occasion, Carl Shoffler did not have much to say about Watergate and seemed obsessed with the idea that Edmund Chung was a CIA agent. Edmund Chung denied being a CIA employee. The employer of Edmund Chung, the U.S. Army Security Agency, was interviewed about him. His superior advised that the military duties of Edmund Chung had been classified and that Edmund Chung held a Top Secret Crypto clearance. Edmund Chung's superior claimed he was unaware of a Chung/CIA connection. [Minority Report SSCIA Investigation of Advance Knowledge of Illegal Political Espionage.]

WATERGATE CONVICTIONS

On January 15, 1973, five of the seven Watergate defendants pleaded guilty, hoping to avoid a wider investigation. STURGIS, BARKER, Rolando Martinez and Virgilio Gonzalez were asked by Judge John Sirica if pressure had been put on them by higher-ups to enter this plea. They were asked if they had received any payments from the White House. They replied negatively. BARKER indicated he was prepared to implicate no one in the conspiracy beyond HUNT, whose name was already linked to Watergate. On January 30, 1973, the two remaining Watergate defendants, G. Gordon Liddy and McCORD, were convicted. On October 20, 1973, NIXON dismissed Archibald Cox, the Watergate Special Prosecutor who pressed for the White House tapes. United States Attorney General Elliot Richardson and his deputy, William Ruckelshaus, were also dismissed in what has come to be known as 'The Saturday Night Massacre.'

THE DEATH OF BEVERLY KAYE

While their disposition was being debated by Congress and the Courts, the White House tapes were kept in the safekeeping of White House Secret Service Agent Stephen Bull. On December 22, 1973, the secretary of Stephen Bull, Beverly Kaye, 42, told her co-workers she was feeling ill. A White House physician was summoned, and was accompanying her downstairs in an elevator, when she reportedly collapsed. She died, according to doctors at George Washington Hospital, of a massive stroke. [Wash. Post 12.22.73] On August 5, 1974, NIXON released the White House tapes. Four days later, on August 9, 1974, NIXON resigned, and Gerald Ford became President.

THE WARREN COMMISSION AND WATERGATE

NIXON wanted former Warren Commission Counsel Arlen Specter for his Watergate defense. He settled on Herbert J. Miller. In 1954 Herbert J. Miller was the former deputy of Richard Bissell. In this capacity he was involved with the U-2. [Powers, Man Who Kept the Secrets, p120] In the late 1950's Herbert J. Miller was part of a law firm retained by the Board of Monitors of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. In 1961 Herbert J. Miller, the third-ranking U.S. Assistant Attorney General, was appointed head of the Criminal Division of the Justice Department by United States Attorney General Robert Kennedy. In 1964 Herbert J. Miller became the liaison between the Justice Department and the Warren Commission. [WCR p479]

Warren Commission consultant, Leon Jaworski, became a Watergate Special Prosecutor. Warren Commission Counsel Joe Ball became an attorney for John Ehrlichman, and Warren Commission Assistant Counsel Charles N. Schaffer became co-counsel to Watergate defendant John Dean. John Dean was represented by Bernard Fensterwald's associate, Robert McCandless, as well as Charles N. Schaffer. [Schorr, Daniel Clearing The Air pub. 1978]

NIXON AND WILLIAM C. SULLIVAN

William C. Sullivan, the head of the Domestic Intelligence Division of the FBI, played a key role in the cover-up of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. William C. Sullivan advised J. Edgar Hoover on the aspects of the assassination that led to ANGLETON, NIXON, HEMMING and the CIA. In late November 1963 William C. Sullivan was going to circulate, at government expense, posters of OSWALD, which depicted him as a leftist. H.R. Haldeman reported that when William C. Sullivan was called before the Warren Commission to testify, "the CIA literally erased any connection between the Kennedy assassination and the CIA. In fact ANGLETON called William C. Sullivan and rehearsed the questions and answers that they would give."

In the early 1960's William C. Sullivan initiated OPERATION HOODWINK, a program that targeted the Communist Party. The purpose of HOODWINK was to persuade members of organized crime that Communist Party was after them. This was intended to provoke mafia attacks on the Communist Party. By the late 1960's HOODWINK became COINTELPRO, a dirty tricks operation directed primarily against the New Left. [FBI 92-6054 NR 8.17.67] In 1969 William C. Sullivan became the middleman in the NIXON Administration's special wiretaps program on 13 government officials and four newsmen. William C. Sullivan took transcripts of these wiretaps to White House aide Robert C. Mardian for safekeeping. At this time, NIXON hinted to William C. Sullivan that he planned to drop J. Edgar Hoover, and name a new FBI Director. William C. Sullivan supported this move, since he believed that J. Edgar Hoover put too many restrictions on the war against domestic dissidents. An FBI document dated February 17, 1975, Aides Initial: WRS Intelligence Coverage Domestic and Foreign Cabinet 6 Drawer 1 Folder X stated:

Internal memoranda setting forth FBI technical and microphone coverage on black extremists and New Left Subjects and organizations for background in connection with Hoover's meeting with Richard Helms, Director of the CIA, Admiral Noel A. Gaylor, Director of the National Security Agency, and the Attorney General. Memoranda from Hoover reporting results of meeting wherein Helms desired to discuss broadening operations particularly of the very confidential type. Hoover reports he was no enthusiastic about such extensions by the FBI in view of hazards involved. Helms was to make an in-depth review of what he and Gaylor wanted and thereafter would call for another meeting.

NIXON claimed that the reluctance of J. Edgar Hoover to fight domestic dissidents was the reason he formed the White House/Special Operations Group. J. Edgar Hoover, however, forced William C. Sullivan, 56, out of the FBI on September 30, 1971. On October 8, 1971, NIXON discussed the J. Edgar Hoover problem with Attorney General John Mitchell:

For a lot of reasons he oughta resign...He should get the hell out of there...maybe I could just call him and talk him into resigning...If he does go, he's got to go of his own volition...that's why we're in a hell of a problem...I think we've got to avoid any situation where he can leave with a blast...

...I told you that bizarre story that Edgar Hoover refused to investigate because Louis Marks, Mark's daughter was married to that son-of-a-bitch Ellsberg. (May 8, 1973)The problem we've got with some of this in the Ellsberg stuff, you see, Edgar Hoover wouldn't do the job because (Patricia) Marks, his closest friends daughter, was married to Ellsberg and wouldn't do it, and that's why some of that crap was done in the White House. (April 29, 1973).

THE DEATH OF J. EDGAR HOOVER

J. Edgar Hoover died on the evening of May 1, 1972, at his home in Washington, D.C. His housekeeper discovered his body alongside his bed at 9:00 a.m. The Justice Department said he died of natural causes. No autopsy was performed. J. Edgar Hoover, age 77, succumbed to high blood pressure; he had been suffering from a heart ailment for some time. In November 1973 Mark C. Frazier interviewed Watergate burglar Felipe De Diego. Mark C. Frazier tricked Felipe De Diego into obliquely acknowledging having burglarized the home of J. Edgar Hoover. [Harvard Crimson 11.10.73] "Two burglaries took place at Hoover's Washington home. The first was in the winter of 1972 to retrieve documents that might be used for blackmail against the White House. "After the first burglary," according to Diego, "a second burglary was carried out; this time, whether by design or misunderstanding, a poison, [of the] thyon phosphate genre, was placed in Hoover's personal toilet articles. Hoover died shortly after that."

There is no such poison as "thyon phosphate" as it was probably spelled phonetically. There is an organophosphorus compound containing the elements phosphorus and carbon, whose physiological effects include inhabitation of acetylcholinesterase, which is vital for nervous system functioning. The pesticides malathion and parathion and virtually all nerve agents are organophosphorus compounds. Most exposure victims experience bradycardia (slowed and weakened heart rate) but pulse rate may be increased initially and tachycardia (The heart normally beats at a rate of about 60 to 100 beats per minute at rest. A rate faster than 100 beats a minute in an adult is called tachycardia) is more common in very severe poisoning. Parathion is rapidly absorbed through the skin and may cause systemic poisoning. In January 1976, 79 persons in Jamaica were acutely poisoned by the organophosphorus insecticide parathion. Seventeen died. It was ironic that J. Edgar Hoover, who was known for planting bugs, might have been assassinated with a bug killer.

Researcher Tony Summers reported that in 1988 STURGIS said that Felipe De Diego told him about a break-in at the home of J. Edgar Hoover immediately after his death: "Felipe told me about it. I suspected the CIA was behind it. I told him, 'I guess our friends probably wanted to go over there and see what kind of documents Hoover had stashed away.'" When Tony Summers asked STURGIS if he had been involved, he said: "I'm not saying 'yes' to my involvement. Let me say 'no' to that. It opens up a can of worms." [Summers Secret Life J. Edgar Hoover p416] The FBI reported: "Subject BERNARD L. BARKER'S bank account showed large sum of money in his account in May 1972 amounting to $89,000. BARKER withdrew money in cash." [139-4089-311] The White House/Special Operations Group was interested in the death of J. Edgar

Hoover. STURGIS, BARKER, Humberto Lopez and Pablo Fernandez attacked demonstrators at his funeral. Humberto Lopez told the FBI that he was

...secretary of the Authentico Party headed by Carlos Prio Socarras...He stated that the Authentico Party's office is located next to the office of BERNARD BARKER Associates. He advised that he has been on speaking terms with BERNARD BARKER for several years. He stated that, upon the death of John Edgar Hoover and upon learning that Mr. Hoover would lie in state on May 3, 1972, BARKER asked him as a representative of the Authentico Party to be his guest and go to Washington, D.C. to pay respects to the Director. Lopez stated he thought this was an excellent idea, as he was a great admirer of Mr. Hoover, and accepted the invitation. He stated that while in Washington, D.C., there was a brief melee with a hippie group who were engaged by the Miami contingent, but that no arrests were made although there was some press coverage to the incident... The following individuals stayed at the motel with him: Pablo Fernandez, Angel Ferrer, Reinaldo Pico, and FRANK FIORINI. The others he believed stayed in an older hotel which was located relatively close, namely BARKER, Martinez, V. Gonzalez, H. Gonzalez, and De Diego. Lopez explained that other than his work with the Authentico Party he does not consider himself an activist, and other than his slight relationship with BARKER, he was never closely associated with any other individual in this group. He advised that, while he believed BARKER paid the fare and lodging, he was given his ticket by Rolando Martinez, and that his hotel room which was single was also paid for by Martinez. He believed that his airline ticket and hotel registration was under the name Manuel Garcia. Relative to his background, he stated he was employed in the Ministry of Government under Dr. Grau in Cuba. In August 1960 he sought asylum in the Embassy of Brazil and stayed there until March 1, 1961, when he received asylum in Venezuela and was at the Embassy in Venezuela until he entered the United States on September 10, 1962, and was assigned INS # 11261938. [FBI 139-4089-34, 6.30.72]

Kalpana Srinivasan of The Associated Press reported:

George Washington University Professor of forensic science James Starrs was granted access to the District of Columbia medical examiner's records to reinvestigate how Hoover died. No autopsy was performed. Starrs said nothing in Hoover's medical history would suggest he was a candidate for a heart attack. Without an autopsy, other causes of death are still open, he said. "Everything thus far indicates there was nothing of sufficient medical history to write this off as a heart attack," Starrs said. Hoover's death was the subject of a panel at the American Academy of Forensic Science meeting on February 13, 1998 in San Francisco, California. "The main suggestion was that it was part of the Watergate scene in the 1970s," Starrs said. [Seattle Times January 19, 1998]

INFORMATION CONCERNING REINALDO PICO RAMON

During the period of November 1, 1963, to December 31, 1963, BERNARD BARKER'S Operational Progress Report indicated:

The following disseminations of Subject's production were made during the reporting period:

- a. UFG-3986 (cable) from Reinaldo Pico: Unification of Activities by Manolo Ray.
- b. UFG-4004 (pouch): Cover sheet data.
- c. UFG-4041 (cable) from Reinaldo Pico. Plans of Ray and Cisneros to Infiltrate Cuba for JURE.
- e. UFG-4183 (pouch) from FRANK FIORINI: Possibility that Harvey Manning Participated in Air Strike over Cuba. [CIA FOIA D002246]

A proposal has been submitted to JMWAVE Training Branch for a short course in basic tradecraft to equip Subject for a possible Principal Agent role in FI or CI operations. It expected that do to the heavy training schedule; this course cannot be started before early March. Meanwhile we have Subject prepare a study of his current and post Contacts for more specific exploitations.

Gardner Hathaway was a forty year veteran of the CIA who became its Counter-Intelligence Chief in 1984. He joined the CIA in 1950 and was assigned to the Soviet/East European Division. By the late 1950's he was running ops against the Poles out of Berlin. In 1964 Hathaway served in Brazil during the U.S. backed overthrow of President Juan Goulart. From 1967 to 1972 he was posted to Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires, and served through numerous military dictatorships. By 1973 he was Chief of Station in Montevideo . In July 1974 he was transferred to Argentina where he worked with the death squads in arranged the murders of the "disappeared." [Counterspy SU 1980] As CI Chief, Hathaway handled the defection of Vitaly Yurchenko in 1984. In 1987 he testified in trial of Clayton Lonetree, the Marine accused of spying for the Soviets. Hathaway was involved in the Edward Lee Howard flap. Instead of going to the FBI, Hathaway recommended that ex-CIA Agent Howard see a psychiatrist. Hathaway was reprimanded by CIA Director R. James Woolsey for his handling of the Aldridge Ames case. [Wash. Post 10.20.94] He retired on February 22, 1990.

AMES ON ANGLETON

The New York Times stated:

'The culture in which Mr. Ames flourished was shaped by a reaction to Mr. ANGLETON'S excesses,' Mr. Woolsey said, 'Skittish of smearing innocent people, the Agency did not police itself properly.' On this point Mr. Woolsey and Mr. Ames agree: the legacy of witch hunts made it extraordinarily difficult for the Agency to conduct an effective mole hunt... 'You would wind up with people throwing up their hands and saying 'I can't do it,' Mr. Ames said. 'You would wind up with JIM ANGLETON doing ANGLETONIAN things. People would be fired all the time for no grounds. You've got two or three or four thousand people running around doing espionage. You can't monitor it. You can't control it. You can't check it. And that's probably the biggest problem with an espionage service. It has to be small. The minute you get big, you get like the KGB or you get like us.' [NYT 7.28.94]

Aldridge Ames was a serial killer. The information he supplied the Soviets led to numerous arrests, murders and disappearances. Ames would have been too frightened to do what he did when ANGLETON had still been Chief of CI because he might have been investigated arbitrarily, for example, if ANGLETON was investigating everyone whose name began with "A." If Ames had acted as mole for the Soviets he would have been detected after ANGLETON received the first allegation about him from a woman CIA employee in November 1989:

A woman employee of the Agency who knew Ames well reported that he had bought an expensive house and was living beyond his means. The informant also knew that Ames had access to the compromised Soviet cases in which agents had disappeared. And she knew Ames well enough to know that Rosario's family was not wealthy. Based on this information, Dan Payne, a young CIA investigator assigned to the mole hunting unit, began a financial inquiry into Ames lavish spending. [Wise, Nightmover, p187]

That month Ames was reassigned to the Counter-Intelligence Division. He could have been appointed to the mole hunting committee that CIA Director William Webster had appointed, which was led by Hathaway. If this had occurred Ames would never have been detected because he would have been in charge of investigating himself. The CIA did not turn the investigation over to the FBI until the summer of 1993. The CIA covered up this penetration for four years. The Ames case leaves little doubt that the CIA has engaged in cover ups that were against the interest of the American people.

In June 1972 William C. Sullivan received a call from Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, inviting him to return to Washington and help establish an National Narcotics Intelligence Office within the Justice Department. [Unger, Sanford FBI] Less than a year after leaving the FBI William C. Sullivan was back, working with FBI Director L. Patrick Grey. When L. Patrick Grey resigned, under fire for destroying Watergate documents, William C. Sullivan was considered for FBI Director, but Clarence Kelley got the job instead. The appointment of Clarence Kelley came as a surprise to William C. Sullivan. On March 13, 1973, NIXON told John Dean he was going to destroy the image of the late J. Edgar Hoover. William C. Sullivan was the key to this scheme. John Dean told NIXON that William C. Sullivan would cooperate if he got back into the Bureau. John Dean then suggested William C. Sullivan's "desire in life is to set up a domestic national security intelligence program" and that "you could put him out in the CIA or someplace..." NIXON: "We will do it. There is no problem with William C. Sullivan. He is a valuable man." William C. Sullivan never got a position with the CIA, and he returned to New Hampshire, where he was hired by the Atomic Energy Commission. Researcher Tony Summers reported:

In 1975 William C. Sullivan responded in opaque fashion to a question from a Congressional Committee about OSWALD. Asked whether he had seen anything in the files to indicate a relationship between OSWALD and the CIA, William C. Sullivan replied, 'No...I think there is something on that, but you asked me if I had seen anything. I don't recall having seen anything like that, but I think there is something on that point...it rings a bell in my head.'

William C. Sullivan died in a hunting accident on November 9, 1977, just before he was scheduled to testify before the HSCA. He was mistaken for a deer and shot in the neck by Robert Daniels, the son of a Corporal in the New Hampshire State Police. The FBI did not investigate the accident. The investigation was conducted by the New Hampshire Fish and Game Department. Robert Daniels was charged with shooting a human being mistaken for game and plead nolo contendere. He was fined $500 and his hunting license was suspended for ten years. The Soviet News Agency Tass speculated that it was a strange story that William C. Sullivan was killed in a hunting accident, and claimed William C. Sullivan held files which might have shed light on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. In November 1977 HSCA investigator James P. Kelly was told by Tim Ingram of the House Government Operations Subcommittee that William C. Sullivan had informed him that some of his records had been destroyed in a barn fire at the home of his sister, near Bolton, Massachusetts. [HSCA Memo Kelly to Fenton 4.28.78] The death of William C. Sullivan was accidental. No link could be established between Daniels and the intelligence community. More Soviet propaganda like the HUNT letter. William Kunstler repeated these allegations to this researcher.

NIXON was quoted as saying that if United States Attorney General Robert Kennedy had instituted ten more wiretaps, he would have discovered the "OSWALD PLAN." When the press questioned him, he said: "I said if ten more wiretaps could have been found the conspiracy, if there was a conspiracy, or the individual, then it would be worth it. As far as I'm concerned I am no more an expert on that assassination than anyone else."

NIXON: HUNT worked for Kennedy, he worked for Johnson, now he worked for the White House. That's the whole story about him...And he worked for the CIA. He worked in the Bay of Pigs. I mean, he's done a lot of things. So I've got to guess is that, I mean, it could be isolated instances. If the man's worked for various things, he's worked for...HUNT must be a pretty good guy though.

Colson: He's got one of the most interesting careers of anybody I've known. The tragedy is that the guy is a dedicated patriot...God.

Nixon: Of course and he deliberately decided he is not going to be around, is that right? That is what I hear.

Colson: I don't know.

Haldeman: He isn't around-

Colson: You know he's-

NIXON: Well, you know, you don't want him in here, Bob.

Colson: He came to me in February and he said: This is the only year I care about; the most important thing that ever happens is this man be re-elected; I just want to help. And you hate to see the poor guy get it.

NIXON: Oh well.

Colson: It just happens...he's lived through this before.

NIXON: What the hell, the Bay of Pigs.

Colson: He lived in exile once before and so forth.

Haldeman: He's used to this sort of stuff...It's part of his life.

Nixon: He's written 42 novels.

June 30, 1972

NIXON: He wouldn't do such a stupid thing. The White House thing, I mean this fellow, what's his name, HUNT?...This HUNT fellow, did you ever meet HUNT? I've never seen him.

April 28, 1973

NIXON: You know the thing about that is that Colson never told me about HUNT, that he knew HUNT, until after the Watergate thing.

Erlichman: Is that right?

NIXON: I never heard of E. HOWARD HUNT, no, sir, no. No sir...I had understood he said he doesn't know HUNT well, or something like that. I think that's apparently been his line...But afterwards he said he was an intimate friend.

HUNT may have met NIXON when HUNT was a CIA Chief of Station in Latin America, however, this would have been a brief and forgettable encounter. In Give Us This Day HUNT described NIXON as the White House Action Officer for Bay of Pigs. It was during this period that HUNT had his first significant contact with Vice President NIXON. As documented in Coup D'Etat in America Data Base NIXON worked with HUNT on the assassination of NIXON'S rival, John Kennedy, in 1963. In 1971 NIXON reassembled many of the members of this hit squad and used them against other political rivals. At this point NIXON expressed a familiarity with the talents of HUNT as evidenced by the June 30, 1971 reference to HUNT. NIXON knew that one of HUNT'S talents was surreptitious entry. On June 21, 1972 NIXON pretended he was not well acquainted with HUNT:

HUNT must be a pretty good guy though." It is interesting to note the reference here to HUNT having lived in exile. There is no such reference to a period of exile in Undercover, HUNT'S autobiography. Haldeman had HUNT disappearing to a Spanish speaking country:

Haldeman: But HUNT disappeared or is in the process of disappearing. He can undisappear if we want him to. He can disappear to a Latin American country. But at least the original thought was that that would do it, that he might want to disappear (unintelligible) on the basis of these guys, the Cubans-....

Perhaps this explains HUNT'S murky assignment in Spain in 1964, the nature of which remains unknown even to the CIA. Note that NIXON knew the exact number of novels authored by HUNT. On June 30, 1972 NIXON denied he had ever met HUNT and on April 28, 1973 NIXON claimed he had never even heard of HUNT until after Watergate. This contradicts earlier recordings and clearly demonstrates that NIXON was a liar.

HOW FAR BACK DID HUNT'S MISDEEDS GO?

NIXON: Of course, this, HUNT, that will uncover a lot of, a lot of, you open that scab there's a hell of a lot of things in it that we just feel that this would be very detrimental to have this thing go any further.

NIXON: The one that is really going to pull the plug on Colson is HUNT... I don't think he'd pull the plug on his earlier ventures for us, do you? (April 10, 1973)

NIXON: Well, your major guy to keep under control is HUNT - because he knows about a lot of other things. (March 21, 1973)

NIXON, VESCO AND CHOTINER

Ehrlichman: Vesco...was going around hot-shotting, saying that the White House was behind me and so on, and I had to say that he was to get no special favors or consideration. Just after he got out of jail, he was using Mitchell's name and my name and everybody's name - I've just met him. I don't know him. But his people have been brought into my office... Murry Chotiner's been working for him.

NIXON: What the hell's he doing for him?

Ehrlichman: He (Chotiner) comes in. He tried to see me and I wouldn't see him. My assistant (Tod R. Hullin) talked to him and he had a deal. Vesco would fix us up in South America. He'd act as an operative down there and he'd do this and that if we got him off the criminal prosecution. And then there's an element of blackmail, that the worst isn't yet out and that its going to hurt the administration if they tell all they know, and this, that and the other thing.(March 16, 1973)

ANGLETON AFTER THE COUP

ANGLETON IS FORCED TO RESIGN

On December 30, 1974, ANGLETON resigned from the CIA because of the flap caused by Seymour Hersh's exposure of the HT LINGUAL mail opening program. This article led to the formation of the Rockefeller Commission. Raymond Rocca, Newton S. Miler and William J. Hood resigned as well. William Hood commented: "I didn't resign at all. I had put my retirement papers in long before the Seymour Hersh article. It was my luck it would have to coincide with it." The Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, William Colby, had wished ANGLETON to resign for some time but yielded, "because I feared that ANGLETON'S professional integrity and personal intensity might have led him to take dire measures." DAVID PHILLIPS spoke with ANGLETON on the day he resigned. [Martin, Wilderness of Mirrors p211] Raymond Rocca wrote a Memorandum for the Record about ANGLETON'S dismissal in which he stated that it occurred because of Seymour Hersh's article. He said that ANGLETON desired that he or Newton S. Miler be the next Chief of Counter-Intelligence. Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. William Colby, did not go for it and, although he did not ask either of these men to leave the Agency, "He did request that they stay on in their positions for a transition period." [2.27.75] ANGLETON subsequently claimed that as the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, William Colby reduced the Counter-Intelligence staff from 280 to 80 during his 1973 to 1976 tenure.

Asked for reasons for his resignation he was quoted as saying: "Police state . . . Soviet bloc . . . fragmentation . . . I had a son in the infantry in Vietnam. Went from private to corporal."

Police state...Soviet bloc...fragmentation...I had a son in the infantry in Vietnam. Went from private to corporal. ANGLETON was asked if the boy was wounded or killed? "I think he's okay."

WHO STRUCK JOHN?

got problems." He explained his domestic activities this way:

"A mansion has many rooms, and there were many things going on during the period of the [antiwar] bombings. I'm not privy to who struck John."

Mr. Angleton, who had been in charge of rooting out foreign espionage agents in the United States, later permitted news-

In December 1974 ANGLETON told The New York Times: "A mansion has many rooms and there were many things going on during the period of the bombings. I'm not privy to who struck John." ANGLETON was saying that the CIA (a mansion), has many agents (rooms), and during the anti-Castro exile bombings of Cuba (the period of the bombings), the plot to assassinate President Kennedy was formulated (there were many things going on.) "I'm not privy to who struck John." (I know who killed John Kennedy). In his deposition during the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN, ANGLETON stated that the quotation had nothing to do with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and was similar to "Who killed Cock Robin?" ANGLETON:

The question had to do with the many charges regarding massive domestic operations attributed to me and it had nothing, the John does not refer to John F. Kennedy. It's a slang expression of 'Who struck John?' Well, I wasn't prepared to go into all of the allegations made by Seymour Hersh which had me the number one culprit - the man wearing the black hat, so to speak, for a whole, massive, massive domestic situation. I was just quoting from the Bible.

ANGLETON knew how his words would be perceived by those who believed the CIA was behind the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The quotation from the Bible read: "In my father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you." [John 14, line 2] John the Baptist (and DAVID CHRIST) and we are expected to believe there was no irony intended? When he made this cryptic statement ANGLETON threatened to talk if CIA made him the scapegoat for its domestic operations scandal. ANGLETON possessed the evidence to do this. Nonetheless, when researcher Paul Hoch pointed out to the CIA that "Regardless of what ANGLETON now says he meant by this comment, an intended reference to John Kennedy seems as likely as any other explanation." The CIA responded: "Mr. Hoch's willingness to attribute sinister implications to such a common phrase is both humorous and revealing. It belies the impression of reasonably objective scholarship he has sought to project in his memorandum." [CIA 1634-1088 4.29.75] The Rockefeller Commission: "The whole ANGLETON quotation makes it clear that he was being asked about CIA activities occurring during the period of anti-war bombings...The period of the anti-war bombings didn't begin until 1967 or 1968, some years or more after President Kennedy's death." ANGLETON was questioned by attorney Marvin Miller:

Q. Did you ever discern any direct involvement by OSWALD with the Agency?

A. None, whatsoever.

Q. Any interest in him prior to the assassination?

A. I cannot answer that because I don't have my records. In other words, I am not trying to avoid responding to it, but what is, since I don't have access to any of my records, I can only say that now it appears where I'm on very wobbly ground, the trip to Mexico. And, I don't recall the details any more as to the trip to Mexico made by OSWALD. I don't remember whether it was before or after, and I can't remember whether we were notified, when we were notified. I know that in my memory all matters concerning OSWALD came to, came to light, so to speak, after the assassination.

ANGLETON 1978 TO 1987 ANGLETON'S HUNT DOCUMENT

In 1977 HSCA investigator Edward Lopez reported he heard about, but had not seen, a CIA document signed by ANGLETON and Richard Helms projecting:

Some day we are going to have to account for HUNT'S presence in Dallas on November 22, 1963.

Edward Lopez commented in June 1993: "It could have been someone in CIA who told us about this document, someone we interviewed. It is possible that ANGLETON could have told us about this document during his interview. I bet it was, it is very possible it might have been ANGLETON himself who told us. I think it was him."

The existence of such a document might have been too good to be true. First: no CIA Staff member would have put a statement like this in writing. Second: why would ANGLETON have revealed its existence? Would he want to buttress the theory HUNT was in Dallas, when doing so might have revealed his own role in the coup? After the call from Edward Lopez in 1977, I called my friend and former associate, Victor Marchetti, who said it looked like "the Agency was going to burn HUNT during a limited hangout." Victor Marchetti agreed to investigate. Victor Marchetti testified that he received information that two other reputable journalists were working on the story. Victor Marchetti called William R. Corson, who allegedly verified that such a document existed. Victor Marchetti:

Dr. Corson, who then elaborated upon the [document] and told me it was written by JAMES ANGLETON and written to former Director Richard Helms, that it had been initialed by Sammy Halpern....One point here I met with Dr. Corson. He claimed that he had discussed the matter with JAMES ANGLETON. And that it was from him, he had gotten the story from ANGLETON, he said that ANGLETON said he wrote the memorandum, gave the date, January 7, 1966, and it was from him...And besides wondering about HUNT'S presence in Dallas, on that faithful day...ANGLETON wrote in the memo HUNT was not involved in any sort of an operation for him, and asked if he was doing something for the Director? He said the Director, who was then Richard Helms, sent the memorandum down to the Deputy Director of Plans, who was FitzGerald and he is now dead, where it was initialed by one of his aides, Sammy Halpern. Corson said ANGLETON seemed to be very worried about the fact that he completed the memorandum, and said something about how the CIA had aided in HUNT'S Chinese cover story. [HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT 2.1.85 p68]

The notes of Victor Marchetti read:

Meanwhile V. M., asked B.C. to check out memo, with his sources on committee and in intelligence circles, no solid confirmation, but he felt A. J.'s information was accurate."

William R. Corson was a career Marine officer who served as a Naval attaché; as a member of the U.S. Country Team for Communist China; as a member of the Far East Inter-Agency Defector Committee; as a Secretary to the President's Special Group (CI) Joint Department of Defense - CIA Counterinsurgency Committee Staff; as a Special Assistant to the Director of Advanced Research Projects of the Department of Defense; and as the Officer in Charge of the Southeast Asia Intelligence Evaluation Program (Systems Analysis) which was headed by the Assistant Secretary of Defense. William R. Corson was interviewed telephonically by this researcher on June 1993: "I saw JIM [ANGLETON] on and off all the time." William R. Corson was then asked about CI/SIG: "That's an acronym that I am unfamiliar with. I have a pretty good understanding of the operations that JIM had. That's a new one. I just never heard of it. It sounds like it should be more associated with the Office of Security, rather than with ANGLETON'S outfit." William R. Corson said he did not recall if he did, or did not, verify the existence of the document to Victor Marchetti. [Corson William telephone 301-299-3608] On August 20, 1978, The Wilmington, Delaware, Sunday News Journal, ran an article by Joe Trento entitled: "Was HOWARD HUNT in Dallas the Day JFK Died?" It read:

Washington: A Secret CIA memorandum says that HUNT was in Dallas the day JFK was murdered, and that top Agency officials plotted to cover up HUNT'S presence there. Some CIA sources speculate that HUNT thought he was assigned by higher-ups to arrange the murder of OSWALD. Sources say HUNT, convicted in the Watergate conspiracy in 1974, was acting chief of the CIA Station in Mexico City in the weeks prior to the Kennedy assassination. OSWALD was in Mexico City, and met with two KGB Agents at the Russian Embassy there immediately before leaving for Dallas, according to the official Warren Commission report. The 1966 Secret memorandum, now in the hands of the HSCA, places HUNT in Dallas on November 22, 1963. Richard Helms and JAMES ANGLETON initialed the memorandum, according to investigators. [In other descriptions of the document, it was dated January 7, 1966, and initialed by both Desmond FitzGerald and Sam Halpern of the Office of the Inspector General of the CIA.] According to sources close to the HSCA the document reveals, 'Three years after Kennedy's murder Helms and ANGLETON were elevated to their highest positions in the CIA, [ANGLETON was CI Chief from 1954 to 1974. He was not promoted during this period; Helms was elevated to the position of the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency] they discussed the fact HUNT was in Dallas on the assassination day and that his presence there had to be kept Secret.' Helms and ANGLETON thought that news of HUNT'S presence in Dallas would be damaging to the Agency should it leak out. Helms and ANGLETON felt that a cover story giving HOWARD HUNT an alibi for being elsewhere the day of the assassination, ought to be considered.' Committee sources told the Sunday News Journal that both Helms and ANGLETON had been questioned by Committee investigators but that the issue of the memo was not raised with either witness...When ANGLETON was questioned by committee staffers, he was evasive according to a source who was present. ANGLETON could not be reached for comment. Asked to explain why a potentially damaging coverup plot would be put on paper, one high level CIA source said, 'The memo is very odd. It was almost as if ANGLETON was informing Helms, who had just become Director, that there was a skeleton in the family closet that had to be taken care of and this was his response...It was also learned from CIA sources that during the time the Warren Commission was investigating the Kennedy assassination, ANGLETON met regularly with a member of the Commission, Allen Dulles. Dulles on a weekly basis, briefed ANGLETON about the direction of the investigation.'

Later, Joe Trento explained his sources let him see the memorandum. This was Joe Trento's first article about the assassination and it was picked by the Associated Press. The HSCA did not have this document. Edward Lopez said he heard of it, but had not seen it, yet Joe Trento described his source as close to the HSCA. ANGLETON was questioned by the HSCA. Still later in the piece, he described the source as inside and outside the CIA. ANGLETON had been inside the CIA as its CI Chief, and outside the CIA when he was forced to resign in December 1974. The part of the document Joe Trento quoted from which gave it some degree of authenticity was the reference to providing an alibi for HUNT: the CIA considered placing HUNT at meeting in Washington, D.C. with Richard Helms, Enrique Williams and STURGIS. When ANGLETON testified in HUNT v. WEBERMAN, he was asked about this memorandum. He replied that no such document existed. ANGLETON was asked if Joe Trento had spoken with him about the article. ANGLETON testified:

After publication, I had a telephone call from Trento. He said he was calling from the office of William Corson, who is the Penthouse representative, and an ex-Marine Colonel and he, I think his first question was, 'Have you heard from HOWARD HUNT?' and I said 'No' and his next questions, it was a whole series of staccato questions, and I told him my lunch was getting cold and I was at the Army-Navy club and that was the end of it.

In his deposition during the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN, ANGLETON said he knew Joe Trento since 1976. Why did ANGLETON claim Joe Trento waited until after the piece was published to contact him? Logically, Joe Trento should have contacted ANGLETON before the article went to press, since ANGLETON'S initials were allegedly on the document. According to ANGLETON, the first question Joe Trento asked ANGLETON was: "Have you heard from HUNT?" rather than "Can you confirm the facts of the article?" This sounded as if they had had previous contact. In 1993 Joe Trento told Dick Russell that ANGLETON was his source for the document:

In 1978 ANGLETON called and asked me to come down for lunch at the Army-Navy Club. He said he wanted to talk to me about something. This was as the HSCA's investigation was winding up, and he told me a number of things concerning the Kennedy assassination and its aftermath. Then he explained some very complicated counter-intelligence operations. 'Did you know HOWARD HUNT was in Dallas on the day of the assassination?' What I am trying to tell you is, 'Some very odd things were going on that were out of control.'

Joe Trento elaborated:

JAMES ANGLETON was dead, and my bond was no longer in effect. There are a few things you must understand. You have HUNT going on to Dallas to kill Kennedy.

According to Joe Trento, after their conversation, ANGLETON arranged for the HUNT memorandum to be delivered to him. ANGLETON claimed he had simultaneously alerted the HSCA using Senator Howard Baker as his intermediary, and had sent a copy to Senator Howard Baker's Committee. Joe Trento added:

It was all handled in a way that ANGLETON was not the source...My guess is it was ANGLETON himself who sent HUNT to Dallas, because he didn't want to use anybody from his own shop. [Russell, Man Who Knew Too Much, p475]

Joe Trento was asked why a footnote in the HSCA Report stated:

During the course of the HSCA a rumor was circulating that the HSCA had uncovered a memorandum in CIA files indicating HUNT was in Dallas on November 22, 1963. The rumor was not founded on fact. In addition, HUNT gave the HSCA a sworn deposition in which he denied the allegation, and the HSCA found no evidence that contradicted HUNT'S deposition. [HSCA R p91]

Joe Trento: "I can't deal with what they said in the Report. But if you believe everything in that HSCA Report..." Joe Trento told Dick Russell that Senator Howard Baker gave the memorandum to the HSCA. Dick Russell wrote this in his book. Senator Howard Baker's aide, Fred Marcum, stated in June 1993:

I took the page from Russell's book in and discussed that with Senator Baker, and he has absolutely no recollection of any of that ever happening. And he even went back and talked to some staff people who would have been aware, who were involved in things of that nature, and they concurred, nobody has any memory of that whatsoever.

Robert Blakey stated:

I don't know if that memorandum exists. There was a controversy of some kind about that we found a memorandum in the CIA that indicated that HUNT was in Dallas that day. We never found a memorandum like that. We never got it from any source. We never had any evidence that HUNT was anywhere other than with his family in D.C. Period. And everything else is just smoking mirrors by critics of one kind or another. This memorandum does not exist. It never happened. It is a lie. The story has done great damage to HUNT.

Joe Trento advised:

Call Blakey and ask him about a break-in that occurred in the HSCA safe involving a CIA official. Two hundred documents were stolen out of the HSCA safe after my story appeared. The CIA reassigned this man. That's when the memorandum was removed, along with documents of more significance.

When Joe Trento was asked if he copied the document, Trento was non-committal. He was told, "I assume you did not copy it since if you had, the burglary would be irrelevant." He answered, "They didn't want the copy." I asked: "They wanted an original?"

No. They didn't want the document, period. Can I make a challenge to you? I want you to write that I don't have the document. And I'm putting you on warning now. We'll go to court and I'll take everything you have.

Trento does not have this document. When Joe Trento was informed that Senator Howard Baker had disclaimed any knowledge of the document he stated: "I'm glad that you're so trusting that a guy, who had to leave the Senate because he faced a 12 count indictment, is your source. Did you talk to Howard Liebengood? He was the Baker aide who dealt with ANGLETON." Howard Liebengood, formerly with the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities, was contacted. He said he had had contact with ANGLETON, but was never given the document. Howard Liebengood:

I have never seen the document. I have seen the tramp pictures and heard the theory that one was HUNT. I can damn well guarantee you I never got anything from ANGLETON. Baker's never seen it, never heard of it, neither have I. I spent a lot of time with JIM ANGLETON over a number of years and we talked about lots of things, including the Kennedy assassination. He believed OSWALD was a Soviet sleeper agent. I wouldn't even want to begin to speculate what went on in JIM ANGLETON'S mind. I never figured him out.

Had ANGLETON forged this document or fabricated its existence as part of his campaign to dissuade the HSCA from investigating the HUNT/Dallas connection or was the document for real? By having created this document and perpetrating the leak that the HSCA had it in its possession, when it clearly did not, ANGLETON maneuvered the Committee into a position of defensiveness at its own guilt about damaging HUNT'S reputation. The HSCA believed HUNT was being unjustly accused as to his presence in Dallas. Ellis Rubin called the HSCA and demanded a public hearing about this document. [HSCA 180-10083-10453] In 1985 HUNT testified: "A memorandum, spurious or not, had been foisted off on the Committee by the CIA or by a private individual."

ANGLETON'S DEPOSITION IN HUNT V. WEBERMAN

On May 17, 1979, ANGLETON was deposed regarding the document. First, he denied any professional or social relationship with HUNT. A CIA attorney who accompanied ANGLETON that day stated: "A search was undertaken to locate a document and effort proved negative." ANGLETON was given a copy of the Trento piece. After reading it, he remarked:

A. I say, I've never read so much disinformation all the way on through, and I think I will probably turn this over to my attorney for my own purposes. I mean, I'm serious about this: this is really extraordinary.

Q. Now in that article you just read, there's a CIA source quoted in there to the effect that Mr. HUNT thought he'd been assigned to arrange for OSWALD'S murder. Do you recall that in the article?

A. I don't know. I can't. I mean this thing jumps all over the place.

Q. Having now read the Marchetti and Trento articles, do you recall ever having seen any memoranda, or ever having any information or inquiries regarding thoughts by the CIA on Mr. HUNT'S involvement with the events that occurred in Dallas?

A. Never. Emphatically never. I would also like to further add that any matter of great importance that would have come to our attention would not have necessarily have been the Subject of a memorandum. It would have been a telephone call immediately to the Director or to the Deputy General, the Deputy Director and there would, and the modus operandi would be, that there would be a meeting immediately, before the sun set, so to speak, so I couldn't see myself sitting down, writing a memorandum. I would be on the Secret phone or jack box stating, 'We've received such-and-such information.'

Q. I am quoting from the Trento article, "HSCA sources told the Sunday News Journal that...Helms and ANGLETON had been questioned by HSCA investigators but that the issue of the memo was not raised with either witness."

A. I made a long statement to the HSCA in my first appearance...when I was under oath regarding that allegation.

Q. The allegation that HUNT was in Dallas?

A. That's right. I stated it was a fabrication...I, of course, when I made the statement I took, I mean, my, I charged them as to their security of allegiance because in other words, I was speaking from all source information on a variety of delicate subjects on the understanding that, by way of a letter from Carlucci of CIA, that there was an arrangement between the HSCA and the Agency, the Agency would have the right to delete classified information, and I wanted also to be, know what, where I stood in terms of my oath in terms of disclosure. Therefore, I was perfectly free to speak with all source information, knowing that it would be going through the Agency prior to publication. And so, therefore, I was concerned when I read this article that quoted HSCA members, alleged HSCA members speaking to Trento.

Q. When did you first read the Trento article?

A. I think on that - somebody sent it to me very shortly after it was published.

Q. All right. Did you contact Mr. Trento?

A. I'm not certain. I know that when I read it, that it was very near my appearance, and I think it may have stimulated my inquiries to the Agency about parameters and my oath and all that type of thing. In fact, I think they hand-delivered to me, because of a little slowness on their part, what the agreement was.

Q. Did you make any inquiry of the HSCA whether or not they had such a memo?

A. I did. I volunteered, but they didn't give me any statement one way or the other.

Q. You volunteered what?

A. I volunteered the Trento article with that, which I don't think they had even seen it.

Q. Did you ask the staff how did Trento get this information?

A. I did indeed; charged them as to their security. They were embarrassed. They didn't admit or deny, but their whole demeanor was one of being quite shocked.

Q. Did you ever talk about this article with Mr. Helms?

A. I discussed the general problem of Trento with Mr. Helms. I might add that Mr. Helms lives, has a summer place in Llewes and, therefore, he has friends in Wilmington, and he has his Sunday afternoons ruined by telephone, long distance telephone calls from people from Wilmington who'll give him the good news regarding Trento's latest.

HELMS' DEPOSITION IN HUNT V. WEBERMAN

Later that afternoon Richard Helms testified:

Helms: I happened to see it on the day it appeared, but I have no knowledge of any such memorandum, and I thought that the allegation, such as it was, that HUNT had been in Dallas, had been disposed of by the Rockefeller Commission Report, and I know nothing further about this. I don't even know where Mr. Trento is alleged to have gotten his information from. Trento's article rather sweetly and gently suggests that either ANGLETON or I may have been a mole in the Agency. I suppose that is the honest history which we ought to protect?"

The honest history that Helms made reference concerned a remark this researcher made to Richard Helms during his deposition. Helms was shown a copy of CHRIST'S photograph:

Rubin: May I ask where that photograph comes from, what is that piece of paper?

WEBERMAN: It is from an underground newspaper.

Helms: An underground newspaper? I didn't know we had underground newspapers. Do we have underground newspapers in this country?

WEBERMAN: Fortunately, yes, we do.

Helms: But, they're underground from what or from whom? This is for my edification.

WEBERMAN: They're underground from people who want to suppress the truth about American history, okay?

Richard Helms said he complained to Gannett Incorporated, the parent company of The Sunday News Journal, which then sent a reporter to interview him. Neither ANGLETON, Richard Helms nor HUNT sued Joe Trento. HUNT explained: "I am a man of limited means and I can't afford to sue everyone, kooks included, who make false, defamatory statements about me." Joe Trento stood by his story, and a retraction was never printed. Ellis Rubin warned: "I can't say that The Sunday News Journal is an underground newspaper, but I hope to bury it soon." The CIA obtained the original manuscript of the Joe Trento article. [CIA 22309 rel. 3.91] Ellis Rubin died on December 12, 2006. He had been fighting cancer for more than six years.

HUNT made reference to Trento's article in his testimony before the HSCA:

From time to time, magazine articles rake over the cold ashes of supposed involvement in the Dallas assassination. And the more malicious underground press frequently dwells boldly on the subject, maligning and defaming me to my continuing detriment. Against these injurious falsehoods, I have found myself helpless, for the agitators and profiteers accept no answers save those they prescribe in advance. Last August, two newspapers—Spotlight, published in Washington, D.C., and the News journal of Wilmington, Delaware—printed similar stories concerning me that I found profoundly disturbing. Their burden was that this committee had received from the Central Intelligence Agency a memorandum purportedly initialed by Director Richard Helms in 1966, stating that some day it might be necessary to reveal that Howard Hunt was in Dallas on the day of President Kennedy's assassination. Copies of both stories have been furnished to this committee together with my request that a copy of the alleged memorandum be furnished to me. To date, the committee has not responded to my request, and I now renew it: I demand that the committee confirm or deny receipt of such a memorandum, and if the memorandum indeed exists, that it be furnished to me so that I may refute its contents in their entirety. Because I was not in Dallas on the day President Kennedy was killed, I know that the purported memorandum is spurious. The veil of mystery surrounding it, however, is exceedingly damaging to me. The charge has been made; the committee is said to be the source of the false information, and it is within your power to set the matter straight once and for all. Fair play demands it, and simple justice requires it. Thank you.

ANGLETON'S HSCA TESTIMONY

Miss Brady. Did you have contact with Bernard Barker, Howard Hunt or Eugenio Martinez during your CIA career?

Mr. Angleton. None of them.

Miss Brady. At any time?

Mr. Angleton. No. I want to explain the Hunt business. One of the things that this Joe Trento, the reporter, gave out that he learned from this Committee, he put it that he learned from the Committee that they had a memorandum between myself and Dick Helms to the effect that I wrote a memo to Dick saying that Howard Hunt was in Dallas at the time of the assassination and I was suggesting or proposing a cover-up.

Miss Brady. To whom?

Mr. Angleton. To Helms. Now, when I was called before the Watergate Committee I was challenged about some such and such in the Executive Office Building. I didn't even know what they were talking about. I determined that that is where all the Watergate people were hanging about, Hunt. I kept getting all these threatening telephone calls from Seymour Hirsch of the New York Times and all of that. I couldn't honestly understand what they were talking about until the whole Hunt thing hit the fan and they arrested Hunt and so on.

Then a journalist came to me and told me that there was in inspector Bast, he called himself Inspector Bast, who is supposed to be a well to do man, a lawyer of some sort, a private investigator in McLean, and he had invited Colson to his swimming pool and that he had a hidden microphone in the shrubbery and that Colson told him that Angleton had recruited Hunt and was running Hunt in the White House as his agent and that Hunt reported to Angleton daily. Bast was reported to have this tape recording which he made known to this journalist. The journalist was going to print all of this.

Miss Brady. When was this? During the Watergate period?

Mr. Angleton. Sometime maybe a little after or during. So I laughed at this fellow and told him, I said 'That is just about as crazy as anything I have ever heard.' I said, "If you pursue that", I told him, "You will be exposed on this. I never met Howard Hunt in my life." He was arrested on a Friday or Saturday. The first working day I asked the Office of Security to supply me with eight by ten photos of his security badges. In our organization you go to hundreds of meetings without knowing all the people. It is part of the compartmentation, if you would like. Therefore, I had to be doubly sure because the newspaper picture of Hunt was about this big and you couldn't get any features out of it. So, when they showed me the photographs, I had never seen Hunt in my life.

The curious thing here, and I never explained it to the (press or anybody), is the fact that my Deputy's name is Jim Hunt and I just let them go along, since they started the myth, let them live with it. But Jim Hunt being retired and playing golf, I saw no reason to give an explanation and ruin the 19th hole so to speak. So, when Trento called me at the Army-Navy Club, one of the things he also said to me at that time was, "Has Hunt been in touch with you?" Again he is on that same Colson-Bast et cetera, route as the others.

Miss Brady. So it is fair to say, apart from whatever was made known publicly about the Watergate incident, you had no independent knowledge of Hunt's activities with the Agency?

Mr. Angleton. No. Later when he was picked up, yes, I called for his file and read his file. I might also add that I feel quite honestly that the man has suffered a great deal, I mean a very great deal, the death of his wife and all the things he went through and tragedies and trying to put his life back to gather again with all these character assassins still running after him. He paid his price. But I am a little sympathetic with the fellow without ever knowing him.

Miss Brady, Was there ever really any Agency document about Hunt's whereabouts' on November 22, 1963?

Mr. Angleton. I don't remember any such thing. As I said, Hunt didn't mean a thing to me until after the Watergate.

ANGLETON freaked out when HUNT got arrested. He immediately asked for his photograph so he could compare it against that of the HUNT tramp and do a damage assessment evaluation. Charles Colson was a member of the Nixon administration who later founded a prison ministry. Christ helped him find the and I don't mean David Christ. Colson was not making shit up about ANGLETON. He was telling Bast what he knew. Bast was a sneaky BASTard. When I visited his office he even recorded me!

In American Spy HUNT wrote,

In August 1978, a former CIA agent, Victor Marchetti, put out an article about the assassination in Spotlight, a weekly magazine published by the Liberty Lobby, a right-wing group that regularly published articles and advertisements with anti-Semitic, white supremacist, and neo-Nazi slants. In this article, the author relied on a "1966 CIA memo" from Allen Dulles to James Angleton, which revealed that Frank Sturgis, CIA agent Gerry Patrick Hemming, and I had been involved in the assassination plot. The memo was supposedly in the hands of the House Special Committee on Assassinations (HSCA), which was scheduled to hold hearings later in the month. The memo, of course, was either fictitious or forged, as it has apparently never seen the light of day and was never published by the HSCA.

There are two possibilities here. By adding FRANK STURGIS and GERRY PATRICK HEMMING to the document HUNT is either trying to discredit it further or is confirming its existence having seen the actual document himself. HEMMING was never a CIA Agent however he was the CIA contract employee who brought OSWALD into the plot.

In 1978 ANGLETON founded the Security and Intelligence Fund, a group similar to PHILLIPS' Association of Retired Intelligence Officers. Founding members included Newton S. Miler and Sam Papich. I met ANGLETON in 1978. When he shook my hand, he squeezed it. In 1980 then-Director of the Central Intelligence Agency Stansfield Turner convinced Congress to approve a special fund to compensate CIA officers victimized by ANGLETON. In 1984 ANGLETON was a member of the National Strategy Committee of the American Security Council. Other members included General Lyman Lemnitzer, Claire Booth Luce, Dr. Robert Morris, Charles J. V. Murphy and Dr. Stefan Possony, who died in April 1995. ANGLETON died of cancer at Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington, D.C., on May 12, 1987, five days after former CIA Director William Casey died of pneumonia following an operation for brain cancer. ANGLETON was 69.

THE PAINES AFTER THE COUP

THE TELEPHONE CONVERSATION

Michael Paine related the events of November 22:

When it happened I was eating lunch with a colleague at a bowling alley. Someone told me the President had been shot and we dashed back to lab to listen to the radio. And my colleague, Frank Krystinik, was urging me to call the FBI and tell them that LEE worked there. Oh, no I thought. Everyone is going to be jumping on him. The obvious target there. I couldn't see why LEE would do that. If he was a rational body he's gonna get Johnson, but he shot Kennedy. I took Johnson to be more to the right. I've come to realize since, I didn't take into account LEE'S close connection with Cuba, which would have changed the complexion somewhat of what he might have felt toward Kennedy. But he did say to me that he thought Kennedy was the best President we've had in his lifetime. He also said that he thought change wouldn't come about, except through violence.

Frank Krystinik had a slightly different version of events:

On November 22, 1963, Krystinik and Paine were in the office of the Bell Helicopter Company laboratory when they heard the news that the President had been shot. There was some discussion about the exact location of where the shooting had occurred, so they looked it up in the Dallas City map. Paine said with surprise "That is right next to the Texas School Book Depository Building." Krystinik then said, "Well isn't that where LEE OSWALD works?" Paine said, "Yes, but he does not even own a gun." [WCD75 p724]

THE TELEPHONE CONVERSATION

On November 26, 1963, Dallas Confidential FBI Informant T-4, advised that he had received information that a male voice was overheard in a conversation which took place between telephone number CR-5-5211, Arlington, Texas, and telephone number BL-3-1628 [Michael Paine's home telephone number], Irving, Texas, on November 23, 1963. Informant advised the exact time of this conversation was not available, and that it was not known from which of the telephone numbers the call originated. Informant advised that the male voice was heard to comment that he felt sure LEE HARVEY OSWALD had killed the President, but he did not feel OSWALD was responsible, and further stated: 'We both know who is responsible.' [WCD 206 p66; FBI DL 100-10461 RPG;gmf]

The FBI reported:

It should be noted that the only telephone call between telephone number CR-5-5211, Arlington, Texas, and telephone number BL-3-1628, Irving, Texas, during the period November 22, 1963, to November 26, 1963, was the one call on November 22, 1963, which, according to the telephone company records, indicates that Mrs. Michael Paine was calling collect from CR-5-5211, the place of employment of her husband. Previous information, furnished by Captain Paul Barger, Irving, Texas, Police Department, to the effect that he had received information from individual he could not recall concerning a telephone conversation which took place on November 23, 1963, between telephone numbers CR-5-5211, Arlington, Texas and BL-3-1623, Irving, Texas, has been reported. Mrs. Ruth Paine, 2515 West 5th Street, Irving, Texas, has previously stated that on November 22, 1963, at about 1:00 p.m., her husband telephoned from his place of business, and advised her that the President had just been shot. Mrs. Paine denied having any conversation with her husband at his place of employment on November 23, 1963.

The telephone records of Michael Paine, BL-3-1628 indicated that on November 22, 1963, a collect call was placed "from Arlington, Texas, number CR-5-5211. Mrs. Michael Paine was calling." [FBI DL 100-10461 1.23.64 Robert Lish] Wesley Liebler questioned Ruth Paine about this telephone conversation:

Liebler: You have previously been questioned about a supposed telephone call that was supposed to have been made from Michael Paine's office to your home shortly after the assassination, and I do not represent that I have knowledge of such a call, that such a call was ever made, but as you know, there were rumors to the effect that this man and woman together in the conversation - that one of them said he really wasn't responsible for the assassination, and they both knew who was and I think both of you and Michael have testified about this before and have denied there was any such telephone conversation between you and anyone. Was there a telephone conversation of any kind between you and Michael between your residence and Michael's office on November 22, 1963, or November 23, 1963?

Paine: I have testified to the fact that Michael called. I don't know whether it was from the cafeteria where he had been eating, or more likely from his office, to my home, on November 22, 1963.

Liebler: Was that the only telephone conversation between those two numbers on those two days that you know of?

Paine: Yes.

Ruth Paine commented told this researcher, "It rings no bells for me. I must say I am not impressed with the quality of FBI reporting." Michael Paine stated:

I've heard that a couple of times, way back, for many years. When I first heard that said, I thought that they must have overheard me talking to my father very shortly after the evening or the next day of the assassination. In this conversation I said to him rather emphatically 'We know how he got that job at the Depository.' Which we did. Immediately after the assassination, I assumed the phone was tapped.

Frontline reporter Scott Malone reported "T-4" has not been identified. It has been suggested that "T-4" was an illegal wiretap put on Michael Paine's telephone after the assassination. Note how Barger placed the date of the tap later in time. By November 23, 1963, he had received permission to tap Michael Paine's telephone from the courts. The telephone records, which are generally fairly accurate - they are used as evidence in court - placed the call on November 22, 1963. Note how Barger had also forgotten the source of this information. The telephone records indicated that Ruth Paine placed a collect call to Michael Paine from his office to his home yet no one at Bell Helicopter testified that they saw Ruth Paine at the facility that day. Marina Oswald testified that Ruth Paine was not absent any time during that entire day. Yet telephone records indicated that some time on November 22, 1963, probably shortly after the Kennedy assassination, Ruth Paine went to Michael Paine's office. Marina could have watched the children. Michael Paine was not there, so she called him at his house. Perhaps Michael Paine went to Ruth Paine's home, and finding that she was not there he drove home, where he received a telephone call from his wife calling collect from his office. Not realizing his telephone would be tapped in so short a time, Michael Paine commented that he felt sure LEE HARVEY OSWALD had killed the President, but he did not feel OSWALD was responsible, and further stated: 'We both know who is responsible.' They both thought that the CIA was responsible, because people connected with the CIA had told them to befriend OSWALD.

WHEN DID RUTH PAINE KNOW OSWALD WAS A SUSPECT

Ruth Paine testified that after she heard that President Kennedy had been shot in the vicinity of the Texas School Book Depository, she thought that "LEE might be able to say somewhat about what happened, had been close to the event. This was my thought, that we would know somebody who would be able to give or possibly give a first hand - I never thought of him as a violent man. He never said anything against President Kennedy, nor anything about President Kennedy. I had no idea that he had a gun." She said she told Marina what had happened.

During one part of Ruth Paine's testimony before the Warren Commission she was asked:

McCloy: You said you were sitting on the sofa. While you were listening or looking at the television, was there any announcement over the television of a suspicion being cast on LEE?

Paine: It had been announced that they had caught someone in a theater, but there was no name given.

McCloy: So up to this point there was no suggestion that LEE was involved.

Paine: No, not until the officers came to the door. [Paine Test. To WC p70]

Ruth Paine testified that Michael Paine arrived at her home in the mid-afternoon. She was asked:

Jenner: Now would you please tell me exactly to the best of your recollection the words of your husband as he walked in the door.

Paine: I don't recall his saying anything.

Jenner: Now his words if any with respect to why he had come.

Paine: I asked him before he volunteered. I said something to the effect of "How did you know to come?"

Jenner: What did he say.

Paine: He said he heard on the radio at work that OSWALD was in custody, and he came immediately to the house.

Jenner: And that is what you recall he said.

Paine: That is right...I might interject one recollection if you want of Michael having telephoned to me after the assassination. He wanted to know if I heard.

Jenner: Did he call you before he arrived at your home?

Paine: He called, he knew about the assassination. He had been told by a waitress at lunch time. [Paine WC test. P110]

Ruth Paine was lying about the events of the day. First she testified that she did not know that OSWALD was a suspect until Dallas Police Officers came to her door. Later she said she heard it from Michael Paine.

HOSTY, ODUM, HOWE AND DeBRUEYS

The FBI reported that on November 26, 1963, material of various types which had been recovered by the Dallas Police Department from OSWALD'S and Ruth Paine's residence were turned over to Howe, Hosty and DeBRUEYS. [WCE 2077 p139] The post-assassination investigation of the Paine family was conducted and directed by FBI Agents Bardwell Odum, Kenneth Howe, WARREN C. DeBRUEYS and James P. Hosty. S.A. Hosty questioned the Paines 15 times. Ruth Paine believed OSWALD was guilty because of "massive circumstantial evidence that surrounds his relationship, or where he was, what he had, at the time of the assassination." Michael Paine did not believe that OSWALD could have been a provocation:

You can weave any kind of a plot you want, but he was not a provocation. I don't see that. When the assassination occurred I didn't suppose that he had done it. I didn't think he could, because it didn't fit with my understanding of what his objectives would be. The only way I could figure a reason for him doing this was his convoluted argument that you get in Johnson and Johnson being more to the right, would have angered the left more. It struck me as a spur of the moment action which wasn't the result of much advance planning. And it struck me that he must have done that after he had seen the motorcade route published a day before his visit. He saw it was going to go right by his building there. Get himself on the map. What's he gonna take his rifle for, if he wasn't going to assassinate the President? OSWALD was not an instrument of the right. He was a bona fide leftist, no question of his sincerity....

Michael Paine was asked, "You have no CIA-connection?" He responded, "No connection with that. The closest connection I have had, that I knew of, was I took a trip with the Presbyterian Church Choir. We went to Germany and we had an FBI person who was a choir member. He couldn't dare go into East Germany. We took a little tourist trip there." Michael Paine was asked if he believed the CIA was involved with overseas assassinations. He said, "Yes, I do. I think it is bad for us. I think they're clumsy. Well, not just clumsy..." He was asked if he believed the CIA might have been involved in any domestic assassinations.

I don't speculate a lot" Michael Paine said, "but if there was going to be a conspiracy in which OSWALD was involved, then it would have been with some other little buddies who loved Cuba, and were still incensed at Kennedy for the Bay of Pigs. I have no idea what motivated RUBY, and why he felt so outraged as to deprive the nation of a trial of this person. I don't know about RUBY'S organized crime connections.

The Kennedy assassination reunited the Paines; Michael Paine moved in with his wife and child.

THE MISSING MINOX

When journalist Earl Goltz interviewed Dallas Police Detective Gus Rose, one of the officers who searched the Ruth Paine's home after the assassination, Gus Rose remembered having found a "small German camera and black case on a chain and film." Gus Rose inventoried the evidence and turned it over to FBI Agent WARREN C. DeBRUEYS, who identified the Minox camera as a Minox light meter. Michael Paine stated: "I did have a light meter for a Minox. I kind of forgotten that I had a light meter. And it looked like a half-size version of a Minox camera. It had the same leather case and flexible metal chain. They didn't get it at the same time. They got the camera later." If a Minox light meter was found among OSWALD'S possessions, was there a camera that accompanied it? Michael Paine, who stored his possessions in the same garage as OSWALD, was questioned about this. He said:

He owns a Minox camera and that camera is at his home in Irving, Texas. Several years ago he dropped this camera in salt water off the coast of Cape Cod, Massachusetts, and after retrieving it, soaking it in kerosine and cleaning same, it appeared to be in good working condition. Thereafter, someone bent the shutter by pulling the lens out too far, and, to the best of his knowledge, it is not now in working condition. He stated that he did have some cans of film, and that some of them were probably exposed film, but that the pictures made on this film were at least five years old. He stated that he had a case for the camera and other accessories including a light meter. He stated that when the police came to his house on November 22, 1963, they took the entire contents on a drawer containing photographic equipment which included the items mentioned above with the exception of the camera. He stated that this camera was in his garage at that time and that although he mentioned the camera to the police, they did not seem interested in it. He stated that he is sure LEE HARVEY OSWALD never used this camera, and he is of the opinion that it is not in working condition at the present time. Mr. Paine stated he had no knowledge of a 'no admittance' sign which was picked-up by the police at his residence. He stated this sign is not his and he has never seen it before. [FBI DL 100-10461 1.31.64 Bardwell Odum]

On February 1, 1964, Ruth Paine gave FBI SA Bardwell Odum a Minox III camera, serial number 27259.

THE THREE UNDEVELOPED ROLLS OF FILM

The Dallas Police Department found three undeveloped rolls of Minox film in Michael Paine's garage. "Two Minox cassettes, one containing film; two containers with unexposed Minox film." Detective Gus Rose said he found one roll in OSWALD'S sea bag. This researcher applied for these photographs under the Freedom of Information Act. The FBI stated: "In as much as the material you requested is of great historical interest, these pages are being released to you without excisions." [ltr. Allen H. McCreight FBI 6.12.78] The FBI Laboratory Report on the exposed film stated that two of the rolls had been exposed in Michael Paine's camera but the other was not:

FBI LABORATORY
FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION WASHINGTON D.C.

Bureau request November 25, 1963

Request comparison of Minox film recovered from possessions of LEE HARVEY OSWALD in the assassination of President Kennedy, November 22, 1963, Dallas, Texas, case with specimen Q5.

Result of examination:

It has been determined that the questioned Minox film designated as specimen Q5 in this case was not exposed in the same camera as Minox film recovered from the possessions of LEE HARVEY OSWALD (Item 377) in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, November 22, 1963, Dallas, Texas, case. [FBI 62-109060-NR 12.2.63 #174]

Michael Paine was contacted in July 1993. He said,

All the ones that I've seen copies of prints of, have been taken by me, yes. I took a camera with me. I bought the camera originally because I wanted something I could carry in my pocket all the time. I was hoping you could make good pictures with that camera, but it was very tricky, everything had to be right. So it didn't have any use, I thought." It was pointed out to Michael Paine that the Minox is most often used for photographing documents. He agreed, "It was noted for that purpose, yeah. It was, of course, good for, it could take pictures up close. When I got to Korea I took along a little developing tumbler about the size of a glass. But the water we had was out of the rice paddies, and I thought it would leave little specks of dirt, so I never tried developing the things I did in Korea. I guess I never used it again. I used a different camera, stereoscopic. It's news to me that there should be a roll mixed-in with mine. That seems very odd.

THE PHOTOGRAPHS

The two rolls of Minox film that were taken with Michael Paine's Minox camera contained photos of a trip to Europe. The roll that was not taken with Michael Paine's camera seem to have been photographed in either Qemoy or Matsu. The photographs depicted several Marines horsing around on a large military vessel; a shot a tanker and LST-845P, shots of an island from offshore; shots entering a harbor; Asian children walking past a heavily fortified military base; a Chinese funeral passing the perimeter of the base, and a photo of OSWALD with an M-16.

OSWALD possessed a Minox camera while he was in the Marines. JFK CIA document 1993.06.18.16:24:34:590000 is a piece of an envelope from SR/CI/R listing contents as "One folder XAAZ-22448 May 5, 1965, State Department Files 1963. 2) Paine photos removed and attached to DBA 64420, from which they had been taken."

During the Garrison Investigation in 1968 Marina Oswald testified,

I like Ruth Paine and appreciate what she did. I was advised by the Secret Service not to be connected with her, seems like she was...not connected...she was sympathizing with the CIA. She wrote letters over there and they told me for my own reputation, to stay away.

RUTH PAINE POST COUP

On September 17, 1965, Ruth Paine asked Mr. Maceo Smith of the Federal Housing Administration for the names of Negro families interested in purchasing houses in Irving, Texas, and asked for help in furthering her efforts in this regard: "Mr. Smith advised that Mrs. Paine obtained his name by contacting a principal of an Irving, Texas, school and asking for the name of a Negro who might be able to help her in her integration efforts." Ruth Paine's request was transmitted to E. J. Dee, Director, Federal Housing Administration Insuring Office, Dallas, Texas:

Mr. Dee stated he is of the opinion some Negro people of the Irving, Texas, area have been contacted by Mrs. Paine, but they, the Negroes, do not want anything to do with her. He said he arrived at this opinion as he, Dee, was contacted by a leader of the Negro community of Bear Creek near Irving, Texas, who told him they did not want to have anything to do with Ruth Paine, and asked Mr. Dee if he could keep her away from them.

In June 1976 Ruth Paine was living on a yacht in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. In 1991 she became U.S. Coordinator of Pro-Nica, a project of the southeastern yearly meeting of the American Friends Service Committee. In this capacity she had dealings with the Sandinistas. When questioned by the Warren Commission in 1964 Paine was asked:

Jenner: What is your personal attitude towards the Castro regime?

Paine: I have very few opinions about it. I suspect that the press is correct, that it is used for a jumping off ground for people, for Communist deputies going to Central American countries, trying to stir up trouble. That I object to strenuously. That the people of Cuba have Castro as a leader is not of any particular offense to me. I do think he has more popular support than his predecessor.

In 1991 Ruth Paine put out a newsletter about Nicaragua, describing it as "a roller coaster of ups and downs, a kaleidoscope of progress and decay...Unemployment is estimated at 50%. The central government is broke. The AID funds account for about one third of the Government of Nicaragua's budget. Nicaraguan men and women have discovered what a free society can mean to them, and they are not likely to forget it." As of 1992 Ruth Paine was living in Managua, Nicaragua, and St. Petersburg, Florida. This interviewer spoke with Ruth Paine during the Summer of 1993 and pointed out some of the facts contained in this book. She stated, Mostly I don't like to do interviews much. But anyway, you're an interesting guy though.

Can you see why I am convinced that there was a conspiracy involved?

I certainly see that, yes. From the vantage point I had, it didn't look that way. Because here he was, already a very strange guy. He had a rifle, and he was doing clandestine things, like having an assumed name. Made him look a little strange. He was a very unstable kind of guy.

In December 1994 Ruth Paine was living in St. Augustine, Florida, and working in Tampa, Florida as a school psychologist and still did volunteer work for the Quakers. [Xmas card 12.30.94] HEMMING told this researcher:

Ruth Paine's a fucking patriot, she doesn't know shit from Shinola. Don't read nothing, don't wanna know, don't give a fuck. And they're loyal till the day they die. They believe what's told to them. They're like cult members out of Waco, or Georgetown. 'Drink your Kool Aide, drink it before goes bad.' She's a religious fucking fanatic. They'll believe shit out of the fucking book. God is on their side. That's the kind of fucking people they are. Very valuable fucking people. They never give yaa...Now, that she would be in touch with an OSWALD, that's saying something. They don't expose people like Ruth Paine to fucking dimwit numbfucks. She was baby sitting the guy regarding some knowledge he had acquired in the Soviet Union. She was told to put him in the Texas School Book Depository. They don't tell why. They put a 14 inch nigger dick between her legs and that's it. They do what the fuck they're told. You don't tell some fucking cunt what's going on. She's not going to betray anyone. She'll keep her mouth shut until the day she fucking dies. Her relatives in the CIA were serving their country. If they were used and abused, it's not their fault. They are not the enemy. They were complete fucking dupes. In ANGLETON'S business, the people that are closest to you, that know too much, are scared. They're always scared.

MARINA OSWALD POST COUP

HEMMING told this researcher: "Here's a broad that's been played like a violin, threatened to be deported with her two girls left behind. She was put in the path of OSWALD in the Soviet Union so that they could get hooked up. She doesn't describe anything in any detail. So much of what she would ordinarily know, she doesn't know."

And that sends up a flash right there." Marina Oswald told this researcher: "How dare he call me 'a broad?' It's absolutely not true. I just went to the dance. It was simply fate, freak accident." After November 22, 1963, Marina Oswald was befriended by John and Katia Jacobs of Alexandria, Virginia. John Jacobs was the radio officer for the 1959 American National Exhibition in Moscow. In 1961 John Jacobs joined the USIA. [FBI 105-82555-3583, LHM 6.21.67 Tampa FL] Marina Oswald told this researcher in 1994: "I never heard of him." Marina Oswald associated with Ilya Manatov, an Estonian national who attended the University of Latvia during the German occupation. In late 1945, a U.S. citizen sponsored the immigration of Ilya Manatov to America. He was hired by Sun Oil, and given a CIA clearance. Ilya Manatov served as an interpreter for Marina Oswald.

MARINA'S OSWALD'S SEX LIFE: JAMES HERBERT MARTIN

James Herbert Martin was the business manager of Marina Oswald. James Martin knew JACK RUBY. When asked by the FBI if he had any criminal connections, James Herbert Martin told them that he had a cousin-by-marriage named Al Cervantes, presently Mayor of St. Louis, Missouri, and Cervantes was a friend of Frank Costello. The Warren Commission noted that Marina Oswald was having sexual relations with James Herbert Martin, who was married. The possibility of deporting Marina Oswald for moral turpitude was investigated. Warren Commission investigator Richard Mosk concluded: "Mrs. Oswald did not commit adultery since D.C. Stat. Title 22 301 provided that when such an act is committed between a married man and a woman who is unmarried, the man only shall be deemed guilty of adultery...The statutes of the District of Colombia do not make fornication a crime."

On February 19, 1964, the FBI obtained a lengthy statement from Marina Oswald

...regarding sex incident involving herself and her former manager, James Herbert Martin. This statement reflects the following: While residing at Inn of Six Flags under the surveillance of the Secret Service she was informed by a Secret Service Agent that James Herbert Martin [a manager at Six Flags] had invited her and her children to reside at his home. She accepted the invitation to visit the Martin home on Thanksgiving, and while she was at the Martin home on that occasion accepted an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Martin to reside with them. She moved into their home about November 29, 1963, until February 9, 1964, until her trip to Washington the week of February 3, 1964, she was under United States Secret Service surveillance at the Martin house.

Shortly after beginning residence at the Martin house, her intuition told her that James Martin had feelings of love toward her. On New Year's Eve, after refusing to be kissed by James Herbert Martin when he asked to give her a New Years kiss in the presence of his wife, James Martin subsequently caught her in the hallway and told her he loved her and then kissed her. She believed him to be sincere.

Following this event James Herbert Martin almost daily professed his love to her and frequently hugged her and kissed her, but always surreptitiously. He also propositioned her to have sexual relations, but she refused. She did tell James Herbert Martin she was willing to be his mistress, and they made plans when she would have a place of her own, and he would visit her clandestinely. James Herbert Martin also gave her several gifts.

About January 4, 1964, James Herbert Martin took her alone to the La Tunisia Restaurant, Dallas. Two Secret Service agents occupied a table nearby. They enjoyed a good dinner. James Herbert Martin professed his love to her and she replied everything would be fine if it were not for his family. She did not have sexual intercourse with James Herbert Martin at the Martin home.

Following her testimony in Washington on Friday, February 7, 1964, she and James Herbert Martin and June ate together and thereafter took a walk in Washington. They returned to the hotel at 7:00 or 8:00 p.m. That evening they slept together and engaged in sexual intercourse. They slept together the entire night. This was done with Marina Oswald's consent and there was no force whatsoever on the part of James Herbert Martin.

While in Washington, United States Secret Service Agent Leon Gopadze told her there were rumors James Herbert Martin loved her and these rumors might be so detrimental as to lead to her deportation from this country. Martin told her he had friends who could fix up a fictitious marriage which would forestall deportation.

On Sunday, February 9, 1964, Robert Oswald came to the Martin home in Dallas and took Marina and June to the cemetery to visit the OSWALD grave. Robert suggested she leave the Martin residence, and she agreed to do so, and accompanied Robert to his home in Denton, Texas, the same day. On Tuesday, February 11, 1964, she called Martin on the telephone at his home from Robert Oswald's home, while Mrs. Martin listened on extension. They engaged in a three way conversation. She told Martin she was dispensing with him as a manager and as a lover and suggested that Mrs. Martin be told the whole truth. On February 14, 1964, she sent registered letters to both Martin and Thorne, which dismissed them as manager and lawyer respectively."

J. Edgar Hoover:

Mr. Rankin asked if I didn't think that business about her being willing to be James Herbert Martin's mistress was a strange thing, and I stated I did. That it shows certainly the complete lack of any character, and the thing that also impressed me was, if you look at the picture of Marina when this happened and the picture of her afterwards, it is almost like two different people, as in the second picture of her she is not unattractive... Somebody got hold of her and got her fixed up and that probably put ideas in her head also. I stated there was no question this fellow Martin was making love to her. I stated that if this kind of thing gets out before it is nailed down and the Commission reaches a conclusion as to what and what not to believe, it would be bad.

The attorney of Marina Oswald, John M. Thorne, FBI files reflect that he was interviewed as Special Agent applicant, April 1951. Recommended unfavorably and all paper forwarded to Bureau. He was reported to have received LLB Degree, Southern Methodist University, June 1951. Dallas file 94-152-69 in a memo entitled (Deleted as of 2010) Dallas Division. The OSI furnished a list of reported (deleted as of 2010). In this list is one John M. Thorne, Grand Prairie, Texas. File 145-134 reflects a PCI advised on March 1, 1958, that two males and two females had appeared at a tourist court and had taken about three reels of film for a car and into the tourist cabin. PCI believes that these persons were showing the films and possibly making others. PCI said this person, John M. Thorne, come to the tourist courts on an average of two or three times a week.

Priscilla Johnson was asked if she noticed any indication that Marina Oswald might be a sexually active individual: "I have no comment."

HEMMING: NO PORK ROLL FROM OSWALD

HEMMING told this researcher:

She wasn't getting any pork roll from OSWALD anyway. The guy was practically fucking impotent. The pressure was a little bit too much for him. He had periodic impotence. He probably wouldn't have eaten her box either. If he'd have gone to Cuba with me he would have learned all them techniques. The guy had fucking stresses and strains you wouldn't believe. This guy couldn't figure what time of day it was. When a guy has trouble with trade craft, you know he hasn't been played back to you. When you fuck up some of the basic stuff, and have to be led by the hand. He was a fuck-up." Marina Oswald: "They put me right away in the hands of the people that I trusted. FBI have a tape of everything, telephone and the things like that. They have a big list, in case if I tell the truth, or honest, or dwell into something, they will do everything in their power to compromise me. If I make waves right now, please listen to me, I'm telling you the truth, you know how much material and garbage gonna pour all over me? 'How can you trust that person when she's a so in so. When she's no good?' This stuff was stashed away for blackmail purposes. I wonder who is the people who is cooking all this up? The FBI? I didn't have an affair with Martin. I responded to his advances when the Secret Service arranged a suite in Washington, D.C. They taped everything. You don't have to be a fallen woman. When you're husband gets killed and you just want somebody's hand around you, just to hold you, when the whole world is against you, you definitely respond. For that one thing I have been blackmailed for many years. I did not break up the family. I didn't ask him to come to me. He showed kindness to my kids. That was all pre-fab before, to subject me to deportation, even with approval of his wife. Tell me about the Walker thing again. Are you telling me that I lied? Listen to me. It would be more advantage to me that I could say now, 'I was scared, they twist my arm, I said that as a lie.' Don't you understand that? I'm not saying LEE was there. I wasn't there. But I am telling you what happened as he told me. I will be telling you this until I go to grave. Better I should say it right now that I lied about. You know what I mean. I think we ought to finish on that. People who tell you lies you believe them. When I tell you the truth you question it. So if you measure me by that stick I don't think we can continue this conversation.

After Marina Oswald left the home of Robert Oswald she moved in with Declan Ford. She retained William A. McKenzie as her attorney. William A. McKenzie advised the FBI "it would be to the welfare of the Bureau not to interview Marina Oswald concerning the NIXON affair until his return because of her fatigue resulting from many interviews, particularly the long interview of today of an intimate nature." [FBI 105-82555- NR 2.29.64 199]

Profits soon became available to Marina Oswald. Life magazine paid Marina Oswald $5000 for the OSWALD/Rifle photograph and she received another $25,000 for other photographs in her possession. Marina Oswald told this researcher: "The amount of money that they claim I was paid by this and that is not true." Isaac Levine offered her $25,000 for the rights to her story in book form, although no book materialized until 1977, when Priscilla Johnson's Lee and Marina was published. The HSCA asked Marina Oswald why the book took so long to get into print: "Well, it is not an easy book to write about, especially when you try to be so accurate and not just to bluff around because it was lots of research." Marina Oswald received $70,000 in contributions from unnamed sources. In 1964 Marina Oswald married Kenneth Jess Porter. In 1965 Marina Oswald asked a Dallas justice of the peace for a peace bond against her husband. She said he had slapped her and threatened to kill himself. "We got into an argument today" Marina stated "He slapped me in the face and tried to put the children outside so that he could be alone with the gun he carried. I am afraid that he might try to do me bodily harm." Porter was released from the Dallas County Jail after posting $15,000 peace bond. [Dallas Morning News 8.19.65] In the 1970's Marina and her husband invested some of their money in a Dallas bar the subsequently failed. In 1975 Kenneth Porter managed a sewing machine outlet and Marina sold children's clothing in a department store at a suburban shopping center. [Newsweek 8.11.75] Marina Oswald told this researcher: "I was too stupid to be involved in espionage. I was working in a Seven-Eleven. Someone was stealing money. They were dragging me and another clerk to take lie detector tests at the time. I asked, 'Why manager doesn't take lie detector test?' That was in my FBI file?" It was pointed out to Marina that the men who took part in the coup benefited from the coup. NIXON, HUNT, STURGIS and McCORD ended up in the White House, not as cashiers in Seven-Elevens.

DE TORRES AFTER THE COUP

An article appeared in the St. Petersburg Times that stated "February 20, 1964 Cuban invasion Brigade 2506 members have threatened to resign their special U.S. Army training to fight Fidel Castro on their own, a Bay of Pigs veteran claimed here today. The 168 exiled officers training here since last year have become impatient with US policy toward Cuba said Jose Morales Cruz. However brigade veterans are not expected to make any definite until after next Monday when they meet with their acting chief, Eneido Oliva and members of the Defense Department at Fort Benning, Georgia. Juan Jose Peruyero, Bernardo DE TORRES and Andres Basol said the problem stemmed from a lack of action rather than discontent with army life, state Morales Cruz.

The CIA:

His brother Carlos was the liaison between the Intelligence Department of the [Brigade] Association and the LNERGO (the true name was deleted, not supposed to be), and provided the necessary means to guide Subject in his position. Carlos provided information on all matters of importance to the LNERGO. (once again deleted when not supposed to be) About the time BERNARDO DE TORRES was involved in the Garrison investigation it was said that he liked to boast of his influence and contacts. (Deleted). [CIA Traces on Sources of Information (deleted) To: (Deleted) Miami From CAS Miami 10.1972]

BERNARDO DE TORRES was interviewed by the Miami FBI Office on March 3, 1964, relative to a reported plot by members of the Bay of Pigs Brigade to carry out a raid against Cuba. BERNARDO DE TORRES told the FBI that

...although he was a permanent resident of the United States, and considers himself loyal to the United States, he felt compelled to fight against the Castro Government in Cuba, because Cuba was the land of his birth. He said that he did not believe he would be imprisoned for violation of the Neutrality Statutes, for the reason that the United States is also committed to the fight to overthrow Castro and further, the United States was involved in violation of neutrality in its support of the Cuban invasion of April 1961.

On May 18, 1966, DE TORRES was briefly contacted by the Miami FBI Field Office concerning the anti-Castro plans of the Association of Veterans of the Bay of Pigs. He was the military leader of the association, and had been working on military plans, which he declined to reveal. In 1972 HEMMING put former Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty in touch with CARLOS De TORRES. HSCA investigator ED LOPEZ wrote a report on DE TORRES.

A report of May 12, 1967, from the FBI office in New Orleans stated that on May 11, 1967 CARLOS BRINGUIER appeared at that office and said that on the proceeding day he had been telephoned by Rene Carballo, a Cuban refugee in New Orleans. Carballo said he was conducting his own investigation of the JFK assassination and was providing the results to a reporter from the New Orleans States Item. He said that the head of the training camp in Lake Pontchartrain was know as "el Mexicano" and that this man accompanied OSWALD to Mexico City. Carballo questioned BRINGUIER concerning the latter's contacts with the FBI. BRINGUIER denied such contacts.

Ed Lopez included the above in his DE TORRES file. Rene Carballo might be related to Robert Carballo, a close associate of BERNARDO DE TORRES. In May 1972 DE TORRES was considered for "intelligence type informant" by the Bureau of Narcotics and dangerous drugs. He gave two cards to the BNDD agent, one of which listed as a supervisor of sales for Werbell's Military Armaments Corp. and the other from Defense System International. DE TORRES told the agent that he comes to Mexico on an average of once a month to sell arms and audio equipment and he claimed to be in contact with Mexico's Minister's of Defense and Education. "Reason for approach to BNDD is that subject claims to have information on high-placed GOM officials involved in narcotics traffic and protection. Subject said he is willing to work for BNDD on fixed salary basis.

On September 14, 1976 Miami confidential source advised three Cubans, including DE TORRES (Manolo Camargo Saavedra and Robert Carballo flew to D.C. to meet with Chilean Naval Attaché, Rear Admiral Ronald McIntyre at Chilean Embassy, September 7, 1976. They desired to unite as many exiles as possible in Florida in order to influence same to vote favorably for any bills or foreign aid which would help the Chilean Government. They also met with Clemens who told them he had high government contacts and asked for $50,000 to deposit in D.C. bank. Cubans became disgusted and returned to Miami.

DE TORRES AND THE LETELIER ASSASSINATION

BERNARDO DE TORRES was called before a Federal Grand Jury in 1976 that was probing the Letelier murder. BERNARDO DE TORRES had attended a meeting with Hector Duran, Bay of Pigs Brigade member Armando Lopez Estrada, the head of DINA (the Chilean secret police) and American Richard Townley, during which the assassination of Orlando Letelier was discussed. [Covert Action July 1978] Jack Anderson reported that Robert Carballo, who is head of the Veterans of the Bay of Pigs Brigade might be in danger of assassination. His predecessor, Juan Jose Peruyero was shot to death in Miami in January 1977 because he was going to talk to the FBI about the Letelier assassination. Carballo was a suspect in that hit. [Jack Anderson April 22, 1977]

ROLANDO OTERO IMPLICATES DE TORRES

A Response to Green List Request No. 104574 was requested for Rolando Otero Hernandez (born April 18, 1941, 201-285923) on September 21, 1960, by Betty Vetter of Western Hemisphere/4. The request was stamped P.O.A. Expedite. The CIA stated that Rolando Otero was a former SAB Team Leader, recruited February 1964, who was never used on a JMWAVE mission, and was terminated August 26, 1964, for a security violation. He was re-recruited in September 1964 for (deleted) Project in which he served until December 1964. In the spring of 1975 Orlando Bosch ordered Rolando Otero to begin a series of actions against the United States. On October 13, 1975, a bomb exploded in a luggage locker at Miami's International Airport. In December, Rolando Otero bombed Miami's Federal Building, Post Office, FBI Field Office, and Police Department. A bomb exploded in luggage locker at New York's LaGuardia Airport. Numerous people lost their lives. The New York City Police Department Detectives Lou Fontaras and Kenny Cohen told me Croatian separatists were responsible for the bombing. Rolando Otero said he was in the Dominican Republic when the LaGuardia bombing occurred.

Bay of Pigs veteran Frank Castro was a witness to Otero's presence in the Dominican Republic. Frank Castro, who lived in the Dominican Republic, was close to Joaquin Balaguer, the President of the Dominican Republic. Frank Castro said that Otero entered the Dominican Republic on January 4, 1976. In 1977 Frank Castro was linked to Pablo Gustavo Castillo, who was charged with a bombing in Miami, and a murder in Mexico. [Miami News 3.17.77] In 1983 Frank Castro was indicted for conspiracy and smuggling marijuana into Beaumont, Texas. The charges were dropped in June 1984. In June 1988 Frank Castro was indicted for Neutrality Act violations for having taken part in a "military expedition and enterprise to be carried on from thence against the territory of Nicaragua." [88-6098 CR USDC SD FL cited by Brewton p304] Rolando Otero left the Dominican Republic on January 23, 1976, for Chile, where he remained until he was extradited to the United States in May 1976, and charged with the bombing of Miami Airport. U.S. Attorney Robert Rust was in charge of the case. On August 25, 1976, Rolando Otero was acquitted by a Federal jury in Miami, however, on the same day he was scheduled to be released, he was indicted on identical state charges. Maurice Ferrer expressed sympathy for Rolando Otero.

OTERO AND HOWARD HUNT

Retried in January 1977, Rolando Otero testified he was the youngest recruit at the Bay of Pigs Brigade training camp, and had been trained by HUNT. Ellis Rubin stated:

HUNT does not know Otero. HUNT never met Otero. He has never trained anyone in the use of explosives. HUNT'S only connection with the Bay of Pigs operation was as the political liaison officer between the CIA and the Bay of Pigs invaders. He had nothing to do with any military operations or training. This is another misuse of HUNT'S name by those who would take license because HUNT was involved in the Watergate situation. [Miami Herald 8.24.76]

Just before HUNT was released from prison, he testified at the trial of Rolando Otero. HUNT told the jury he had never seen Rolando Otero before in his life.

MAX GONZALEZ (MAXIAM EMILIO GONZALES)

On December 22, 1976, Joe Crankshaw of the Miami Herald reported:

At least two other persons may have been involved in the December 1975 wave of bombings in Miami for which Rolando Otero is to stand trial in Fort Walton Beach January 10, 1977, according to court records...An informant's testimony that he saw Otero, Ricardo Morales, and two unidentified men in a Little Havana Restaurant, discussing bombings, and later saw Otero outside a washroom at the state attorney's office minutes before a bomb exploded there...Other depositions by Metro detective Danny Benitez reveal that investigators have been talking to an informant who has testified that he saw Otero and three other men in a Little Havana restaurant, discussing the bombings. The informant, identified by other sources as Max Gonzalez, now serving a prison sentence on bad check charges, and who is a former associate of FRANK STURGIS - said he later saw Otero in the 6th floor hallway of the Metro Justice Building minutes before a bomb exploded in a washroom outside the state attorney's office. Gonzalez also said that one of the men in the restaurant was Richardo Morales, expected to be a key witness against Otero...Gonzalez said Otero, Morales and the two other men were discussing bombings, and how much dynamite or plastic explosives would be needed. But Gonzalez's testimony to the police differs slightly from a notarized statement he gave to the Miami Herald last October in that he stated he saw the conversation take place in the Rodeo Restaurant and Lounge, but his depositions and interviews with police have placed the talk in the Rancho Luna Restaurant. Prosecutors Yoss and Adorno said they did not expect to call Gonzalez as a witness in the case.

On December 21, 1976, the Miami News reported:

...a confidential informant has told Metro investigators that he saw bombing suspect Rolando Otero near a bathroom in the Dade County State Attorney's Office only 30 minutes before a bomb exploded there on December 4, 1975, a court deposition reveals. A 150 page transcript of two lengthy sessions on December 8, 1976, and December 9, 1976, among Otero, defense attorney William Clay, Assistant State Attorney George Yoss and Metro Organized Crime Bureau Detective Danny Benitez was filed last week with the county clerk's office. The informant's story, if it holds up, could represent new evidence against the 33-year-old suspect, who faces trial on nine bombing charges in state court next month. In the transcript, the detective described meeting the informant on the day after the explosion. He told the detective he had overheard several men discussing politics and bombs in Little Havana's Rancho Luna bar-restaurant. One of them was a pock-marked Latin who argued loudly. A few weeks later the informant said, he twice saw the same man carrying a package on the sixth floor of the Metro Justice Building. It was only 30 minutes before the noon explosion. Subsequently, the detective said in the deposition, the informant identified Otero's photo as a that of the pock-marked man. The informant also later recognized Otero at a chance meeting in the Dade County Jail. In August, Otero was acquitted of setting nine bombs in the Miami area after a long trial in Federal Court. The case presented against Otero was largely circumstantial, but the informant's story puts the suspect close to the bombing scene at a critical moment, and could be crucial at his new trial, set to begin January 10, 1977.

On January 11, 1977, the Miami Herald reported that the judge in Otero's state trial "instructed the state prosecutors to have a perspective witness, Max Gonzalez, brought from Fort Pierce Correctional Center to Fort Walton Beach so that defense lawyer could quiz him about any testimony he might give at Otero's trial." In February 1971 Maxiam Emilio Gonzales was arrested for Grand Larceny, accused of having stolen $150 from Angel Rosa during a used car deal. In August 1973 Gonzalez was arrested for passing a worthless check. In April 1974 Gonzalez was arrested for passing a worthless check. In July 1974 Gonzalez was arrested for passing a worthless check. In June 1975 Gonzalez was arrested for passing a worthless check. Max Gonzalez worked with STURGIS on OPERATION SWORD. Max Gonzalez was an informant for Detective Danny Benitez. STURGIS was an informant for Detective Benitez. Max Gonzalez, who had not come forward during the first trial of Rolando Otero, was in jail as usual, facing eight felony charges for passing worthless checks, when he remembered he had overheard Rolando Otero discussing bombings in a Little Havana restaurant. The man with whom Rolando Otero was discussing the bombing with was Ricardo Morales. What did STURGIS have against Otero? Why did he instruct Gonzalez to make up this story about Otero? In March 1977, after his conviction, Otero hinted he had inside knowledge of the Kennedy assassination he wished to offer in return for a lighter sentence. Was STURGIS aware that Otero was contemplating doing this in January 1977? HEMMING stated that this was a different Max Gonzalez.

Richardo Morales was scheduled to testify that he heard Rolando Otero boast that he planted the bombs that exploded in late 1975, however, Morales never appeared. Other evidence against Rolando Otero included a lift of his thumb print on a remnant from the Miami Airport locker. Otero was only convicted of the Miami Airport bombing.

OTERO TRIES TO MAKE A DEAL WITH THE FBI

In March 1977, Rolando Otero was interviewed in prison awaiting sentencing. The FBI reported on the interview:

On March 1, 1977, ROLANDO OTERO interviewed at the Okaloosa County Jail, Crestview, Florida, where he is presently incarcerated waiting sentence following his conviction on state charges relating to bombing incidents in Miami, Florida, area. Present during interview with Otero were and Robert Rosenblatt and Bill Clay. These attorneys were present in Okaloosa County, Florida, this date in connection with several motions filed in Circuit Court, Shalimar, relating to Otero's state conviction. Otero is scheduled to be sentenced on state charge on March 17, 1977, at Shalimar, Florida. The presence of these attorneys during interview was at their request. Attorneys for Rolando Otero stated prior to the interview that they had no knowledge as to specifics which Otero was to provide FBI relating to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

During the interview with Otero, who spoke broken English, Otero alleged that he had information regarding the Kennedy assassination. Otero declined to provide any specific information regarding this matter. Otero advised that it was his personal opinion that 'CIA, FBI and Secret Service at a high level were involved in the assassination.' When Otero was asked for specifics as to this opinion, he declined to furnish such information. Throughout interview, Otero alleged that he had information concerning the Kennedy assassination that would 'embarrass FBI.'

Initially, Otero advised that he would be willing to testify before the HSCA, headed by Mr. Sprague, concerning the 'concrete' information he had on the Kennedy assassination. Rolando Otero's condition for this testimony was for his state conviction on bombing charges to be dismissed by the FBI, or government intervention on his behalf with Florida authorities.

Otero was informed that the FBI could not enter into such an agreement. During the later part of the interview with Otero he related that if this condition for his information was not met by the end of this week, he would then release information to the media on limited basis concerning the Kennedy assassination, and in turn provide similar, but more detailed, information to HSCA. He also claimed at the same time he would furnish other information relating to Cuban activities in South Florida and South America, which he alleged would be of embarrassment to the FBI.

After the contradiction in his stated intentions in this matter were discussed with his attorneys it was determined that he initially meant to advise that he would be willing to withhold information he claimed to have concerning the Kennedy assassination, in view of its alleged embarrassment to the Bureau, if the FBI would intervene with state authorities concerning the state charge, resulting in the dismissal of the state charge against him, otherwise he would provide the information he had in his possession to both the media and the HSCA.

At this point, Otero, with his attorneys present, was specifically and unequivocally advised that the FBI wanted him to furnish any and all information he might have relating to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and other matters to the HSCA, as was his stated 'desire' and that the FBI would have no part in his withholding such information.

After this point was made clear to Otero, he advised that in view of this he would be willing to testify before the HSCA without condition concerning information relating to the Kennedy assassination, the specifics of which he declined to furnish the FBI.

Following this remark, OTERO stated that he had knowledge of a Cuban by the nickname of "Bambi" who was currently in jail in Venezuela charged with being involved in the crash of a Cuban airliner. He said that this individual had at one time been located in the New York City area and had also participated in the 2506 Brigade which participated in the Bay of Pigs invasion. He said that he would be willing to provide additional information concerning this individual to the Congressional Committee.

At the conclusion of interview with Otero he and his attorneys were informed that Otero's stated desire to testify before the HSCA would be furnished by FBI to appropriate authorities.

[FBI 62-117290-454X19]

A few weeks later Rolando Otero told a Miami reporter: "The killers of Kennedy are alive and living in Miami." The testimony of Rolando Otero to the HSCA was classified, although researcher Dick Russell obtained a copy:

They had a rumor in the Cuban community, like Kennedy was a Communist, he's against us, he's messing up the whole cause. Before the Kennedy assassination they called a meeting of these people, and they said they had to be ready because there was going to be a coup d'etat in the United States. [Russell, Man Who Knew Too Much p538]

Rolando Otero told Gaeton Fonzi that Cuban exile Juan Adames (HEMMING claimed the name was Juan Aldama Abreu) told him that BERNARDO DE TORRES had some connection with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Gaeton Fonzi: "From Otero I got the very detailed contention that, when both were in the Broward County jail, Adames said that BERNARDO DE TORRES personally knew OSWALD."

MEMO June 15, 1977
TO: Tannenbaum
FROM: Fonzi
Re: Adames & Otero interviews.

Enclosed are rough notes of my latest interviews with Juan Adames and Rolando Otero. This was my second interview with both men and the first with Adames where I identified myself and my affiliation with the Committee. The additional information developed in both interviews strengthens my opinion that we have a possibly significant new area of investigation which should be given attention.

Here are some of the important points developed in the interview with Adames:

- His experience in the Dominican Republic revolution reveal Mitch Werbell to be an extremely important character in that operation whose connections go up to the highest levels of the military-intelligence community.

- Werbell had very close association with Paul Bethel. I have always thought Bethel to be a key figure. He was press attache in the Havana Embassy and was probably the CIA's liaison-coordinator with anti-Castro groups in Miami. He was one of the first persons Veciana was told to see when he arrived here. Bethel is a very close friend of DAVID PHILLIPS whom, Bethel himself told me, was working covert propaganda in Havana...

- That DE TORRES himself does have past experience in assassination involvement.

- That Werbell does have a special relationship with Andrew St. George, and that our assumption about that relationship (see Memo May 22, 1977) may be right.

- Although we get a partial corroboration of what Otero had told us Adames had told him about DE TORRES having some connection with the Kennedy assassination, from Adames we don't get the information that DE TORRES was involved or that he was on the scene on November 22, 1963. That's specifically why I went back to Otero. From him I again got the very detailed contention that Adames told him, when both were in the Broward County Jail, that DE TORRES was involved in the Kennedy assassination and that he personally knew LEE HARVEY OSWALD.

Otero said he would be willing to testify under oath to that. Corroborating to some extent Otero's story is what Otero's girlfriend Kathy told Otero's lawyer, Bob Rosenblatt, a few weeks ago. She said that during the brief period that Adames was out on bond, he came to see her regarding possibly helping Otero. However, without being asked about it, Kathy volunteered that Adames seemed interested in what Otero might have told her about this fellow De TORRES.

Conversely, Adames says nothing to us about meeting Otero in the Broward County jail (though records indicate they were there at the same time) or his visit to Kathy. I didn't want to question him about it specifically because I did not want to reveal to him our lead to him was Otero, and if we ever get them both under oath, that could be a significant point to put some pressure on.

I tend to put more validity to Otero's information since we have made no deals with him and he has nothing to gain, as far as I can see now, from feeding us misinformation. There's a possibility as far as I can read it now, that Adames may be weighing the value of his information, holding back to see if the situation will develop where he can get the best price or deal for it.

Adames is undoubtedly a con man and there is a risk in using him that he will sell out, but, on the other hand, he could be of immense value in developing the details of DE TORRES possible involvement. On that assumption, I told him I would make an effort to expedite his situation to either a work release program or parole. This week he has been transferred to the Broward County Prison, which may be preliminary to placing him on the work release program. I'm checking on that, but I would like him to think, it's so, that we had something to do with it. Adames, as a risk to society, is minimal or nil. I feel we should make an effort to expedite his situation in order to use him most effectively, or at least do something to make him feel we were instrumental in what is going to happen to him anyway.

I also feel we should perhaps consider at some point a subpoena duces tecum for DE TORRES regarding those photo he allegedly has in his bank vault. I think we should combine it with a 24-hour surveillance program when he gets it. [NARA HSCA 180-10092-10141]

Juan Adames, was incarcerated for possession of a forged driver license. Gaeton Fonzi elaborated:

Otero said his source had told him that OSWALD was sent to Russia as a CIA agent. The decision to kill Kennedy was made before OSWALD'S return to the United States. Most of the final planning and coordination took place at meetings held at the Dallas YMCA building. BERNARDO DE TORRES posed as a photographer in Dealey Plaza on November 22.

Gaeton Fonzi checked with Juan Adames and was told,

I would not put anything past DE TORRES since I know that's the kind of business he's involved in. He led me to believe he had some photographs from down there, but I don't know from when. He said they were in a bank vault. The more I think about it, if DE TORRES was involved in anyway, Mitch Werbell must have been." [Fonzi, Last Investigation Ch. 28]

HEMMING 1994:

Juan Adames worked with Lucian Conein. I did time with Otero. Somebody tried to poison him in the Okalusa County jail. They gave the poison to the wrong guy and almost killed him. Otero can tell you something about Dealey Plaza. DE TORRES was military leader of the Brigade in the 1970's. He worked with Anslinger and the Federal Bureau of Narcotics for years. Him and his brother. They worked around Gene Marshall. He is still operational. He had dealt with people like Adames before. DE TORRES don't read this stuff. Unless someone in the government brings it to his attention and that ain't Fonzi's fault or your fault. I could give a rat's ass for Adames. His case officer will fry. DE TORRES did surveillance of OSWALD in New Orleans and in Texas, Dealey Plaza. He don't sue. If you use DE TORRES name, the son-of-a-bitch will kill you. You put that kind of a guy's name on [the Net], the son-of-a-bitch, and you're dead. You wanna be a martyr? This guy is a fucking professional killer. He won't do it personally. He has people that work for him. He'll wack your fucking ass in a heartbeat. I wouldn't bandy his name about. Fonzi didn't use his name, neither did Propper, a former U.S. Attorney. [Propper used the name.] I guess they're all cowardly fucks anyway. Maybe you're the only one with any balls? DE TORRES is afraid of me. He think's I'm even more evil than he is. I made him a partner in Parabellum, and got him on Werbell's payroll. That's a long story. It has nothing to do with JFK yet. The HSCA wouldn't give him immunity, so he wouldn't talk.

In March 1977 Rolando Otero was sentenced to 40 years. Released from prison in the late 1980's, he attempted to extort money from his lawyers by threatening to bomb them. State and federal warrants were issued for his arrest. As of 1996 Rolando Otero was a fugitive. HEMMING intimated that the DE TORRES brothers might have been individuals who offed many JFK witnesses:

I don't see people on the periphery, people that don't have a direct link. People that couldn't prove shit, they just fill in blanks, what with the nasty FBI running around talking to everyone's dog, putting shit together, who would feel threatened? Not the real shooters. They could give a fuck. But who's out there that feels threatened that may have been running dope, or doing all kinds of crazy shit, who is somebody now. Who is somebody now? Who is somebody in the fucking community now? I know one of them made money in the dope trade and turned that money around and used it against Fidel again. The Contras. And these people live comfortably. Their associates are politically prominent. They could erroneously say, 'This guy could cause us a problem.' There are cold-blooded motherfuckers out there that do this shit for practice. It don't mean nothing to them. I mean these people love their work. Good thing the American people don't know about it.

It depends on how the job was done. Shooting a guy with a rifle - that's Cuban. Karate chop, Jim Koethe, he's linked to me cause he interviewed me in 1963 when I went through Dallas. [Koethe, a reporter, was killed by a karate chop to the neck in Dallas on September 21, 1964. His murder remained unsolved.] If you're talking about someone who had an apparent heart attack or something, those are the Cuban technicians.

BERNARDO DE TORRES AND INTERPEN MEMBER ED COLLINS

Homicide and suicides often accompany intelligence community flaps. One cannot dismiss the possibility that certain people were murdered by psychos like Bernardo De Torres as a result of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. These few deaths set off a wave of paranoia. Many people believed that anyone who was remotely connected to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and died died as a result of their connection to the Kennedy assassination. The dead witnesses to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy became part of America's folklore, even though perhaps only a few witnesses were killed.

The CIA had already developed MK NAOMI, and had the capability to commit murder which appeared as natural or accidental death. But did a United States Government agency do this to its own people to cover up a crime perpetrated by men working at its highest levels? More importantly, the man who was willing to answer the lingering questions about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, GERRY PATRICK

HEMMING, was still alive. Why murder people who only possess a small piece of the puzzle and overlook GERALD PATRICK HEMMING? HEMMING told this researcher: "They consider me part of the fucking team." The possibility that key witnesses were killed by CIA agents and contract employees must not be entirely ruled out.

THE HSCA AND THE DEATHS OF THE JFK WITNESSES

The HSCA studied the deaths surrounding the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. It began by compiling a list of 21 names of people whose "deaths were considered by the critics to be mysterious." The HSCA compiled data on those 21 names: the Library of Congress supplied clippings on their deaths, autopsy reports and police reports and death certificates. From this sampling, its conclusion was that "the available evidence does not establish anything about the nature of these deaths that would indicate that the deaths were in some manner, either direct or peripheral, caused by the Kennedy assassination or any subsequent investigation." But out of that list of 21 names compiled by the HSCA, only six were listed in this data base as significant. For example Edward Voebel and William Stuckey were not included. Since the data base of the HSCA was erroneous, it was no surprise that its conclusions were inaccurate.

BERNARDO DE TORRES fit HEMMING'S description although I have no evidence DE TORRES ever committed a crime. The CIA reported: "In conversation Subject stated he is private detective employed by U.S. Government and is sales supervisor for Central and South American of Defense System International. Has suspicious visitors and there are rumors that he and brother involved in illegal activity." [CIA 201-295213]

DAVID MORALES

David Morales, Porter Goss, Felix Rodriguez, Barry Seal, and other members of Operation 40

In March 1965 Joseph B. Ragan asked CIA for a Request for a Security Clearance for MORALES so he could work in the CIA's Counter Proliferation Division. According to CIA agent Tom Clines, MORALES helped Felix Rodriguez capture Che Guevara in 1965.

We all admired the hell out of the guy. He drank like crazy, but he was bright as hell. He could fool people into thinking he was stupid by acting stupid, but he knew about cultural things all over the world. People were afraid of him. He was big and aggressive, and he had this mystique. Stories about him permeated the Agency. If the Agency needed someone action-oriented, he was at the top of the list. If the U.S. government as a matter of policy needed someone or something neutralized, DAVE would do it, including things that were repugnant to a lot of people.

In 1966 Ted Shackley was placed in charge of CIA secret war in Laos. He recruited MORALES to take charge at Pakse, a black operations base focused on political paramilitary action within Laos. Pakse was used to launch military operations against the Ho Chi Minh Trail. In 1969 MORALES moved to Vietnam where he officially worked as a Community Development Officer for the International Development Agency but in reality was involved with Operation Phoenix – an assassination program aimed at the Vietcong infrastructure.

MORALES moved to Chile in 1970. He was a member of the team that used $10 million in order to undermine left-wing forces in the country. MORALES told friends that he had personally eliminated several political figures. He was also involved in helping Augusto Pinochet overthrow Salvador Allende in September, 1973. After arriving back in the United States Morales moved to Washington where he became Consultant to the Deputy Director for Operations Counter Insurgency and Special Activities. Larry Hancock believes that during this period he provided advice to right-wing governments (Bolivia, Paraguay, Uruguay, Chile, Brazil and Argentina) as part of Operation Condor. The CIA reported, Upon his return from Vietnam in 1971 Mr. MORALES was assigned to FR Division, [deleted 24] where he was targeted on Latin American (deleted as of 2010). This assignment was initiated by Latin American Division in an effort to get at the rich operational potential afforded by the presence of [deleted 24 as of 2010] of numerous Latin American officials. Mr. MORALES, with his long years of experience in Latin America, and his native fluency in Spanish, proved ideal for this assignment. He developed numerous assets who were later pursued successfully and recruited in the field and he made several significant recruitments of his own. Following the FR assignment, Mr. MORALES returned to the Latin America Division where he completed his final year with the CIA. He served TDY as Acting Chief of Station, [deleted 16-19 as of 2010] for some months. During this period, "there was more activity and accomplishment flow out of the [deleted 16-10] that had been seen in years. The remainder of his Agency time was spent in a TDY to [deleted 11 as of 2010] and in the Cuban Operations Group, where his contribution was also very large.

HSCA investigator Gaeton Fonzi traced Morales to Wilcox, Arizona shortly after MORALES' death, and talked to his lifelong friend Ruben Carbajal and a business associate of MORALES' named Bob Walton. Walton told Fonzi of an evening in the spring of 1973, after many drinks, when MORALES went into a tirade about Kennedy and particularly his failure to support the men of the Bay of Pigs. He claimed "Kennedy had been responsible for him having to watch all the men he recruited and trained get wiped out". MORALES finished this conversation by saying "Well, we took care of that son of a bitch, didn't we?" Carbajal, who had been present at the confession, corroborated it.

Another example of MORALES indiscretion was allowing his photograph to be taken by Kevin Schofield at the El Molino restaurant on 4th August, 1973. The picture appeared in the Arizona Republic with the following text: "Feted by friends at a fiesta Saturday was former American consul to Cuba, David Sanchez, left, who was in that country when Castro took over... In government service for 28 years, Sanchez is now consultant in the office of deputy director for Operations Counter-insurgency and Special Activities in Washington." Soon afterwards MORALES left the CIA. However, he continued to make regular trips to Washington. When asked about this by his friend Ruben Carbajal, MORALES replied: "Oh, they run into some problems, I have to go up there and take care of them. These people never let go of you." MORALES built a new house at El Frita, which is about half-way between Willcox and the Mexican border. MORALES told another friend, Robert Walton, that he had put in the best security system in the United States. Walton said, "What do you need so much security for? You're still thirty miles from the Mexican border." Morales replied, "I'm not worried about those people, I'm worried about my own."

Gaeton Fonzi, staff investigator for the House Select Committee on Assassinations (HUCA) found out about Morales from CIA asset, Paul Bethel, who worked for DAVID ATLEE PHILLIPS. Fonzi had also read David Phillips's autobiography, The Night Watch. It includes a reference to a CIA agent who used the code-name Hector (William (Rip) Robertson) and his "sidekick 'El Indio', a massive American of Mexican and Indian extraction I had seen only briefly during the revolt (the CIA-stage 1954 Guatemala coup) but was to work with in other operations over the years." El Indio was Morales.

When Fonzi interviewed David Atlee Phillips on behalf of the HSCA he asked him about MORALES. PHILLIPS said that MORALES was an unimportant figure in the CIA and suggested that he might have died as a result of his heavy drinking. At this stage Morales was still alive. What is more, MORALES was far from being an important figure, he had in fact been Chief of Operations at JM/WAVE in 1963 and at the centre of the operation to kill Fidel Castro. Fonzi also discovered that MORALES had worked very closely with John Rosselli, who also played a key role in the plots against Castro. Rosselli was to be one of the first people to be interviewed by the HSCA but went missing in July 1976. His body was later discovered in the Intracoastal Waterway in North Miami. He had been cut up and stuffed into a 55-gallon steel drum. MORALES began to worry about his own health during the HSCA investigations. Rip Robertson had died in 1970 and could not be interviewed. William Pawley committed suicide in 1977 when he was asked to appear before the HSCA.

DAVID SANCHEZ MORALES made his last trip to Washington in early May, 1978. Ruben Carbajal had a drink with Morales a few days later. Carbajal told him he looked unwell. He replied: "I don't know what's wrong with me. Ever since I left Washington I haven't been feeling very comfortable". That night he was taken to hospital. Carbajal went to visit him the next morning. As Carbajal later recalled: "They wouldn't let no one in, they had his room surrounded by sheriff's deputies." Later that day (8th May) the decision was taken to withdraw his life support. Morales's wife, Joanne, requested that there should not be an autopsy. HUNT stated that MORALES was part of the conspiracy to kill JFK

I was in several meetings here in South Beach that took place in DAVE'S quarters which was being used as a safehouses at that time. MORALES was a background figure and he really never came into my kin. I think he was well thought of but he was really kind of a pre-operational sense that MORALES knew a lot but he was not a leader, he didn't give commands he followed orders and that is quite a difference. STURGIS and MORALES, and people of that ilk, stayed in apartment houses during preparations for the big event. Their addresses were very subject to change. So that's where a fella like MORALES had been one day, you'd not necessarily associate him with that same address the following day. In short it was a very mobile experience. Let me point out at this point, that if I had wanted to fictionalize what went on in Miami and elsewhere during the run up for the big event, I would have done so. But I don't want any unreality to tinge this particular story – or the information, I should say. I was a 'benchwarmer' on it and I had a reputation for honesty.

HUNT is giving up MORALES, who Gaeton Fonzi identified as a player when he worked for the HSCA. I didn't believe the men involved would let a Mexican-American into the fold, but apparently I was wrong. I noticed the photo of the dark skinned Latino with the walkie-talkie but I believe I read an article somewhere, possibly in Computers and Automation, that the walkie-talkie was actually part of a car. Without photo-enhancement it is difficult to tell if it is MORALES or not but HUNT clears this up by naming him as a player. MORALES was close to BERNARDO De TORRES as TORRES was a Bay of Pigs Brigade military and intelligence officer. HUNT's "benchwarmer" remark is highly significant. For year he denied any association with the big event. Since an operation such as this is carried out on a need-to-know basis there are no "benchwarmers" in an operation of this magnitude. This document was released in 2003:

NOTE FOR: Fredrick C. Wickham
William McNair
FROM: [03]
OFFICE IMS/ESG/HCS
Date April 11, 1998

We (HCS and DA/OIM/JFK Team) have been discussing the subject of aliases, accommodation addresses, alias documentation, and pocket litter in general and in particular concerning DAVID MORALES with the ARRB staff (Jeremy Gunn, Michelle Combs, and Bob Skwirot) over several meetings with a various mix of attendees. I believe Gunn will accept alias documentation and information thereto to be redacted when release could compromise agreements between the Agency and other governments, be they State i.e. (drivers licenses) or federal (i.e. Social Security) and Federal Aviation Agency. Pocket litter will be released i.e. National Rifle Association Card, Rotary Club card etc. But Gunn wants MORALES aliases, especially for those that might apparently only have been used I the 1960's timeframe. We have tried to "clarify" the need to protect aliases, even though more than 35 years old, and in the case of MORALES, for a deceased employee (whom the ARRB has released).

Attached you will find an example of one of our “clarification memos.” More specifics about MORALES and his aliases, and so forth, follows:

In some 47 documents currently being discussed, there are 27 in the 1960 -1966 timeframe and 20 in the 1971 – 1975. In some of the documents the same alias was used in both timeframes as was the accommodation addresses, some with apparently non-connected “co-addresses.” Of the re-checked aliases, both are still in the records as “active” although apparently in MORALES file, there is a notation of at least one possibly compromised. In at least one of the 1975 documents, one of more probably non-connected co-addresses are listed at the same PO Box. Because of earlier releases of “driver’s license” or “permit” when we fully redacted names and addresses, we have a problem now releasing the alias used exclusively in the 1960’s along even the state part of the address, let alone the street portion less the specific house number because it would expose the state government collusion or the perception thereof. Some of these are complicated by the previous release of Washington Field Office. We have tried to explain there is no way to identify which aliases MORALES might have used in which operations and no way to identify which operations or officers would be subject to expose if the MORALES aliases and addresses are released.

NODULE X29

JACK RUBY AND THE CONTRACT OUT ON OSWALD

For the most up-to-date version of this Nodule go to <http://ajweberman.com/nodulex29.pdf>

JACK RUBY was a Jewish gangster, a Meyer Lansky wannabe. His story began in Czarist Russia when Joseph Rubenstein, a Jewish peasant, became an infantryman and paid a matchmaker to find him a wife. The matchmaker introduced him to Fannie Rutkowski, the daughter of a prosperous physician. Fannie Rutkowski came from a much better background than Joseph Rubenstein, and she resented her arranged marriage. The Rubensteins had two children, Hyman and Ann, before Joseph Rubenstein was transferred to Siberia. In 1903 Joseph Rubenstein deserted, then immigrated to America. He left his family in Russia. Joseph Rubenstein settled in Chicago. In 1904 Joseph Rubenstein joined a carpenter's union and a year later he sent for his family. [CIA 1165-432-P; WCR p779] By the time JACOB (JACK) RUBENSTEIN was born in April or March 1911, Joseph Rubenstein was the neighborhood drunk. Eight children lived in the Rubenstein's three room apartment. Two other Rubensteins had died in childbirth. Fannie Rubenstein went insane from poverty and repeated pregnancy. She claimed that a fish bone was lodged in her throat and she believed her husband was having an incestual relationship with her daughter. There were violent arguments. Fannie Rubenstein was described as illiterate, unable to speak English, four feet six inches tall, one hundred and eighty-two pounds, build obese, red hair and blue eyes. Her prognosis was poor "because of the poor personality of the patient and the long duration (24 years) of her mental abnormality." [Elgin State Hospital report 8.12.37] By JACK'S fifth birthday his older brother Hyman had been declared an incorrigible by Juvenile Court in Chicago. Hyman Rubenstein would become part of Chicago's Democratic machine, well known for its corruption, and he was appointed sidewalk inspector of his ward, a position he held for eight years. [WCR p785] JACK RUBENSTEIN attended public school, but dropped out in the fourth grade at age nine.

AL CAPONE

In 1921, when JACK RUBENSTEIN was only ten years old, he became a member of the Dave "Yiddles" Miller gang, led by David Miller, a Capone-connected prizefight referee and bookie, who survived an encounter with Dion O'Banion, Chicago's top Irish hoodlum and arch-rival of Al Capone. [John Kobler, Capone, Putnams, N.Y. 1971 p80] There was a reference to a Chicago gangland figure named "Dave Miller" in the Kefauver Hearings on Interstate Organized Crime, although David Miller is a very common name. [U.S. Cong. Senate Special Committee to Invest. Organized Crime in Interstate Comm.] By the time he was 11, JACK RUBENSTEIN scalped tickets at sporting events on behalf of David Miller. In 1922 JACK RUBENSTEIN was referred to the Jewish Social Services Bureau because of his "disregard for other people's property" and an "interest in street gangs. [WCR pgs. 779-786] In 1923, when JACK RUBENSTEIN was 12, the court ordered the Jewish Welfare Bureau to place him in a foster home outside of Chicago. By 1924 JACK RUBENSTEIN was back in Chicago where he scalped tickets and made book. JACK RUBENSTEIN assaulted a police officer during an altercation about ticket scalping. Hyman Rubenstein had the charges dropped. Because of his aggressiveness, JACK RUBENSTEIN earned the nickname "Sparky."

In 1926 JACK RUBENSTEIN became a messenger for the Capone gang. Barney Ross, who had also made the transition from the Miller gang to the Capone mob, told the FBI: "When I began my prize fighting career in 1926, back in the 24th Ward, JACK RUBENSTEIN and I ran errands for Capone." Barney Ross said that Al Capone had sponsored him, and that Ralph and Matty Capone, along with Frank Nitty, were all close followers of his boxing career. [WCE 1288; WC ltr. Rankin to Hoover 6.64] During this time Al Capone collected dozens of errand boys. Charles Gioe, an associate of Johnny Rosselli, was described by the Kefauver Committee in 1950 as having once been a "messenger boy" for Al Capone. [Kefauver Hearings p5, p356 as cited by P.D. Scott] Two of RUBENSTEIN'S associates, David Yaras (born November 7, 1912; died January 1974), and Lenny Patrick, were executioners for the Capone mob. [HSCA V9 paragraph 1195; Eva Rubenstein Grant WC Test.] David Yaras began as a pinball and slot machine concessionaire under Al Capone. Robert F. Kennedy called him "a notorious Chicago racketeer." [Moldea, HOFFA Wars, p124] JACK RUBENSTEIN joined the Capone gang shortly after Al Capone inherited Chicago gangland leadership from Johnny Torrio. By 1926 the Capone family, along with Johnny Rosselli, Sam Giancana, Tony Accardo, Jake Guzik and other hoodlums had amassed hundreds of millions of dollars from bootlegging, gambling and prostitution. From 1926 to 1929 JACK RUBENSTEIN worked for the Capone mob.

Many documents linked JACK RUBENSTEIN to Al Capone and the mafia. When the FBI conducted its investigation into JACK RUBENSTEIN'S background in 1964, it interviewed James Allegetti, described as "the top local organized crime figure in Chicago." James Allegetti admitted he "may have seen RUBY back in the Al Capone days..." but became agitated when the FBI pressed the issue: "I told you, he was not connected, he was not mobbed-up!" Matty Brescia was also questioned by the FBI about RUBY. The partner of Matty Brescia, Lew Farrell, was described as being a "Top Hoodlum" from Chicago. Lew Farrell was on the fringes of the Al Capone mob and had moved into labor racketeering, where he maintained a close association with James HOFFA. [FBI #DL 44-1639 11.25.63 Chicago; FBI DL-44-1639-6266] In 1978 Matty Brescia was mentioned during the HSCA testimony of RUBY associate Lewis J. McWillie. [HSCA V5 pgs 28, 87]

Eva Rubenstein Grant, JACK RUBENSTEIN's sister, supplied evidence that linked JACK RUBENSTEIN to the Al Capone mob, when she admitted this to a friend: "Jack and I were connected with the Capone mob in Chicago." This information came to light on November 13, 1962, when the sister of a friend of Eva Rubenstein named Susan Brown, telephoned the FBI Dallas office and reported that her sister had told her that Eva Rubenstein had said this. In 1964 the Warren Commission interviewed Susan Brown and her sister. Both of them maintained their recollection of the conversation. The Warren Commission had its representative inform Eva Rubenstein about the accusations of the Brown sisters. Eva Rubenstein called the Brown sisters and confronted them with their charges. This frightened the Brown sisters and they complained to the FBI.

The FBI burned the Brown sisters because they supplied the Bureau with information which contradicted the FBI's line that Ruby was not a member of organized crime. Even in 1963, J. Edgar Hoover maintained that organized crime, or the mafia, did not exist, so how could Ruby have been a member or associate? The Brown sisters learned that FBI and the Warren Commission were intent on ignoring RUBY'S long term membership in the mafia and anyone who got in their way would be sacrificed. [FBI 44-29016-2074 10.15.64]

RUBY explained to the Warren Commission the reason he was acquainted with Chicago's top hoodlums at an early age was because of ticket scalping: "When you live in the city of Chicago and you are in the livelihood of selling tickets to sporting events, your lucrative customers are some of these people...you may know them as you get acquainted with them at the sporting events or the ball park or prizefights." [RUBY WC Test.]

THE SYNDICATE

Al Capone and Jack Ruby were associated with the syndicate, which was an equal opportunity criminal cartel. The syndicate began circa 1928 when the mafia began admitting Jews as associate members. Legend has it that the syndicate came into existence during a meeting between Al Capone and Meyer Lansky. Al Capone's cousin, "Lucky" Luciano brought the two gangsters together at a meeting of crime families in Atlantic City, New Jersey, and suggested that they discuss a merger between the Jewish and Italian underworld. [Hank Messick, Lansky, G.P. Putnam - N.Y. 1971; Dennis Eisenberg, Uri Dan, Eli Landau Meyer Lansky, Mogul of the Mob Paddington Press, N.Y. 1979] The Jewish and Italian gangsters formed the most powerful criminal organization in the world.

By 1930 gangland activity in Chicago began to decline. In 1932 Al Capone began serving a sentence for income tax evasion and "Lucky" Luciano took over his position. In 1933 President Franklin D. Roosevelt ended prohibition. "Lucky" Luciano began to import narcotics to make up for the loss of revenue due to the repeal of prohibition. In 1936, when "Lucky" Luciano went to prison, Joe Adonis was appointed boss of bosses. Joe Adonis put out the word to the families to co-operate with Meyer Lansky, because Meyer Lansky had promised to get "Lucky" Luciano out of prison. [McCoy, Alfred, The Politics of H in SE Asia, Harper Row, N.Y. 1972 pgs. 17-27] Meyer Lansky received a share of gambling revenue in Louisiana. Jake Lansky was listed as an officer in an outfit controlling slot machines. Meyer Lansky worked with CARLOS MARCELLO.

FRANKIE GOLDSTEIN

JACK RUBENSTEIN and his sister, Eva Rubenstein, were involved in illegal gambling, which was controlled by the syndicate. In 1934 they moved to San Francisco where they worked for Frankie Goldstein. [WCE 2328] In 1961 a confidential informant told the FBI that Frankie Goldstein was a bookmaker. The FBI opened a case on him, and investigation revealed he operated a local sporting book for many years, and he frequented the Ambassador Health Club. Information on this club was withheld by the FBI. In 1962 the FBI interviewed Frankie Goldstein's cousin, Anthony Hatsis, the owner of a Salt Lake City nightclub. Anthony Hatsis told them that Frankie Goldstein inquired as to the possibility of setting-up a bookmaking operation in Utah. The FBI tapped the business telephone of Frankie Goldstein. In 1964 Frankie Goldstein told the FBI that JACK RUBENSTEIN and Eva Rubenstein sold newspaper subscriptions for him from 1933 to 1939. Frankie Goldstein insisted that "JACK RUBENSTEIN had no association with hoodlums or with the underworld." In 1977 this researcher called Frank Goldstein and asked him about RUBY'S mob-connections: "The kid worked for me. I don't know any of these names you mention. How'd you got this information?" [FBI DC-44-1639-4707 ,4493; FBI SF 44-194; FBI DL-44-1639-CMS-Cover page, I, J.] RUBY told the Warren Commission: "I have never been a bookmaker." His association with Frankie Goldstein told another story.

"BONES" REMER

During JACK RUBENSTEIN'S six year stay in California he was also employed by Eugene Shriber, a gambler who worked under "Bones" Remer. "Bones" Remer was the owner of record of the Cal Neva Lounge in Lake Tahoe, Nevada. The Cal Neva Lounge was linked to the syndicate by numerous sources, including the Kefauver Committee. Eugene Shriber, who came to California from Chicago in 1933, managed a San Francisco card room for "Bones" Remer and employed JACK RUBENSTEIN and Eva Rubenstein as dealers. [FBI DL-44-1639-4094, 4110; WCD CD360 p115 interview with George T. Davis]

JOHNNY ROSSELLI

JACK RUBENSTEIN, Frankie Goldstein, "Bones" Remer, and Eugene Shriber worked under mob boss Johnny Rosselli, who controlled bookmaking in California at this time. Johnny Rosselli came to California in 1933, the same year that JACK RUBENSTEIN did. By 1936 Johnny Rosselli controlled gambling on the West Coast. JACK RUBENSTEIN sold tip sheets at Santa Anita raceway. Johnny Rosselli had risen to gangland prominence in the mid-1930's by taking over the wire service at Santa Anita. [Kefauver Hearings Part 5 p399-

400; WCR p786] In 1944 Johnny Rosselli was convicted of labor extortion through a union whose organizers included JACK RUBENSTEIN'S brother-in-law. [WC H V20 p18-cited by Scott] In 1939, JACK RUBENSTEIN, 28, left California for Chicago.

LABOR RACKETEERING

PAUL DORFMAN

When JACK RUBENSTEIN returned to Chicago in 1939 he became a labor racketeer. Johnny Rosselli had proven that labor unions could provide a steady source of revenue. JACK RUBENSTEIN contacted a friend from the Capone gang, Paul J. Dorfman (born May 22, 1901; died April 1971). The McClellan committee reported: "Paul Dorfman's connections with members of the old Capone mob are a matter of record." [McClellan Committee, Interim Report p167; FBI CG 44-645 12/18/63 Chicago; WCE 1236, 1293; FBI 44-24016-8. 62-109060-1528]

In 1928 Paul Dorfman, alias Red Paul Dolan were charged with touring a Chicago ward in an automobile "and used terroristic tactics against those opposed to the "America First" ticket. On March 10, 1942 the Chicago Tribune reported, "Detectives yesterday were seeking Paul Dorfman, 34 years old, of 903 Independence boulevard, an ex-prize fighter and secretary treasurer of local 20467 Waste Material Handlers union [AFL] on a charge of assault to commit mayhem. The crime is a punishable by one to 14 years..." In 1948 the Daily Chicago Tribune reported "Joseph R. Dorfman, 50, of 37 N. Austin blvd., was found shot to death at noon yesterday in his private office at 3222 Roosevelt rd., where he operated a real estate firm. Paul Dorfman said he talked to his brother only an hour before the shooting, and that they made plans to attend a funeral..." Paul Dorfman gave JACK RUBENSTEIN a job in the Chicago Waste Handler's Union. Several years later Chicago private detective Bob Mullenix conducted an investigation concerning Paul Dorfman and JACK RUBENSTEIN'S entrance into the Waste Handler's Union. The FBI was unable to question Bob Mullenix in 1964. He was killed in an automobile accident in 1962. [FBI 44-24016-742] Mullenix's files were sent to his brother. [FBI 44-24016-606]

THE MURDER OF LEON COOKE

Victor Riesel wrote that Ruby knew a lawyer called Leon Cook. He suggested they organize a union in an unorganized area. It was indicated there would be no difficulty getting a charter from the old AFL (A federal charter is one issued directly by the central office in Washington, not by the national union. They got their charter local 20467 Waste Handlers union.

Victor Riesel was a syndicated labor columnist, blinded in an acid attack by mob. RUBY had Riesel's telephone number in his address book. John Martin was President of the Waste Handler Union. JACK RUBENSTEIN was Secretary-Treasurer. [Dallas Morn.

News 11.30.63, Victor Riesel, "RUBY Linked to Racket." FBI 44-1639-3123] Leon Cooke, 27, the Jewish attorney who had originally formed the union, held no office. Leon Cooke only served as an advisor. In late 1939 Leon Cooke told the FBI that he had formed a rival union affiliated with the CIO and had written several letters to junk dealers about this, which he signed "Cook." John Martin had learned of these letters. [FBI DL-44-1639 F-Cover page] On December 8, 1939, John Martin shot Leon Cooke in the back. Before he died, Leon Cooke described what occurred to Chicago Police:

I went to see Martin to protest his conduct of the union. While we were scuffling he grabbed a gun. I told him he was crazy and started to leave. He fired three times. Two bullets hit my overcoat, which was over my arm. The other hit me in the back. I staggered into the hall and took a cab to the hospital.

Physicians there extracted one bullet from the side of Leon Cooke and told him he would probably recover. [Chicago Tribune 12.9.39 p.1] Cooke died. After the shooting, John Martin disappeared down the rear fire-escape with the only witness, his secretary. John Martin was under indictment for having conspired with a well known Chicago hoodlum to withhold income tax information from the Internal Revenue Service in the Gambrinus Drawing Company matter. The States Attorney Office was investigating John Martin. It believed that the Waste Handler's Union was a shakedown racket and that JACK RUBENSTEIN was a thug who would intimidate prospective members into joining the union at gunpoint. After the shooting, a member of the State Attorney's office confiscated the union's charter and records then issued the following statement: "We are looking into the union's finances. I am trying to find out where $1,400 in dues went." When the States Attorney's investigators discovered that Carlos Fontana, a notorious West Side hoodlum, worked for the union, its investigators questioned JACK RUBENSTEIN. He told them: "I had no idea he was a hoodlum."

JACK RUBENSTEIN was questioned about Leon Cooke's murder:

During our conversation with JACK RUBENSTEIN, who is Secretary Treasurer of the Scrap Iron & Junk Handlers Union, he stated that he had been out all day with the President John Martin collecting membership dues and that they entered the office about 3:00 p.m. On their arrival there they found present Gladys Welch, Vice President of the Union, Joseph Medill, employee of Leon Cooke, and Leon Cooke. He remained in the office until about 3:20 p.m. and then left in the company of Medill to go to the northwest side for the purpose of doing some organizational work. The first he knew about the shooting was at 3:30 p.m. when he telephoned his office...Leon Cooke formerly was an organizer for the Junk Handler's Union, and upon his leaving the Union his office of Secretary-Treasurer was taken over by JACK RUBENSTEIN. [Chicago PD Report Central Complaint Room No. 55513]

One day after the shooting John Martin and his secretary turned themselves in. JACK RUBENSTEIN was with them and told the press that Martin had shot Leon Cooke in self-defense. At the trial of John Martin an assistant state's attorney informed the judge that the State had obtained no evidence beyond that presented to a coroner's jury, which had absolved John Martin of blame. John Martin's story at the inquest was that Leon Cooke drew a gun on him and struck him in the face and when he struggled for possession of the weapon, it went off. The police never found any evidence to corroborate John Martin's story that the gun belonged to Leon Cooke. John Martin was acquitted of murder. He left the union. A few months later, JACK RUBENSTEIN left. He adopted the middle name of "Leon" around this time, allegedly to honor his dead friend. RUBY told the Warren Commission: "I am not a gangster. I have never used a goon squad for union activities.

"NATTY" GUMBIN

Paul Dorfman formed a new local and began to dominate it. He worked closely with Anthony Accardo, a leader of the Chicago mob since the death of Al Capone. On July 28, 1948, when millionaire industrialist Nathan "Natty" Gumbin was shot-gunned to death by two gunmen firing from a moving car, Paul Dorfman was called in for questioning. The Chicago Police stated that the slaying of Nathan Gumbin was linked to the killing of Charles Crane, another industrialist who had negotiated with the Waste Handlers Union. The Intelligence Unit of the Chicago Police Department reported that "Natty" Gumbin and Charles Crane, along with about 100 waste and rag dealers, were allegedly paying monthly installments to a person named "Dorfman," Secretary of the Waste Handlers Union, to guarantee no labor troubles. [FBI 44-24016-358] Years later the Intelligence Unit learned that during a meeting of top syndicate members in Miami in 1953, an unknown person mentioned the execution of "Natty" Gumbin, and the fact that he refused to take part in a deal. The FBI reported: "Gumbin forced to make monthly payments to laborites for labor peace in his business. Apparent guarantee of no labor problems if monthly payments made. Plant employees under two separate unions, one was Waste Material Handlers Union, Paul Dorfman, Secretary-Treasurer. The other was Scrap Iron and Junk Handlers Union founded by Leon Cooke in 1937. Cooke was slain in 1939. Paul Dorfman, upon learning of death of Gumbin, cut short vacation to avail himself for questioning. Had his union offer $1,000 reward for information leading to solution of murder." The murder of "Natty" Gumbin remained unsolved.

In 1949 Paul Dorfman joined with JIMMY HOFFA in a complex conspiracy to give a million dollars worth of Teamster Pension Fund business to an insurance company owned by Paul Dorfman's son, Allen Dorfman. [New York Herald Tribune 8.1.57 pg.1; New York Mirror 8.30.57- Riesel] Paul Dorfman continued to run the Waste Handlers Union until 1957, when he was expelled by the National Office of the AFL-CIO. [NYT 8.1.57 - Mafia Associate Ousted] The AFL-CIO tolerated Paul Dorfman for more than a decade, but Paul Dorfman's pension fund scheme brought him to the attention of the McClellan Committee, which focused on JIMMY HOFFA and the men around him. Robert F. Kennedy, an attorney for the McClellan Committee, wrote: "Everywhere HOFFA goes Paul Dorfman is close by." [Robert F. Kennedy, The Enemy Within, Harper Bros. 1960 NY] Paul Dorfman was forced into semi-retirement. In 1957 Paul "Red" Dorfman was forced to step down when the AFL became embarrassed by the information the McClellan Committee investigating organized crime's infiltration of the labor movement.

ALLEN DORFMAN

Allen Dorfman became JIMMY HOFFA's "rabbi." [NYT 8.24.67p6] When JIMMY HOFFA was indicted by a Nashville Grand Jury, Allen Dorfman and HOFFA-thug Robert "Barney" Baker helped him earn an acquittal. In early 1963 Allen Dorfman was indicted for jury-tampering in this case. The star witness for the United States Government was Edward Partin. [Sheridan, Walter, The Fall and Rise of JIMMY HOFFA, Saturday Review Press 1972; Allen Dorfman and the Teamsters, Prod. Wash. D.C.] In 1964 Allen Dorfman was indicted in Chicago on charges related to his management of Teamster Funds.

By 1967 Allen Dorfman was coordinator of the Teamster Union Pension Fund following the incarceration of JIMMY HOFFA. In 1969 Allen Dorfman was indicted by a Grand Jury in New York City. The chief witness for the United States Government in this case was also a witness against Meyer Lansky. [PROD, The Teamster Connection, bio. of Allen M. Dorfman; Overdrive, Crimes Web of Pension Fund Fraud; USDC-SDNY 66 CR. 732 - Memo From Deputy Chief U.S. Probation Office - Horvath - redirect 10433, 1333, ltr. from Lou Poller 5.30.71] In another case, Allen Dorfman and co-defendants were acquitted after a key government witness was killed in his office by shotgun blasts fired by gunmen wearing ski masks. [Newsweek, 11.24.75 p9] Allen Dorfman was convicted and sent to prison in 1972 for having taken a $55,000 kickback to arrange a loan from the Teamster's Union Pension Fund. In 1979, Gerald Denono, a mafia hit man under federal protective custody, gave a diary to the FBI that he said he stole from Dr. Canale, a New Orleans physician linked to CARLOS MARCELLO. The entry dated January 5, 1973, read:

Fitz OK Al Dorfman chi ok.--Tony Pro Jersey ok ($500,---to C.C. = nix OK.

This signified that a payment was made to NIXON through Charles Colson which had been okayed by Teamsters Allen Dorfman, Tony Provenzano and Frank Fitzsimmons. [NY Post 11.16.79] The name of Allen Dorfman surfaced in an off-shoot of the FBI's ABSCAM investigation. Allen Dorfman was involved in an attempt to bribe Senator Howard W. Cannon, (Dem.- Nevada) to sponsor favorable legislation. These charges were never proven because Allen Dorfman was gunned down gang-land style in Chicago.

After the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, the Warren Commission received several reports that indicated an on-going relationship between RUBY and the Dorfman's. Justice Department investigator Walter Sheridan received information that RUBY had recently received money from one of the Dorfman's. Assistant United States Attorney Robert D. Peloquin was assigned to investigate the matter. Robert D. Peloquin, who at the time was part of United States Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy's "Get HOFFA Squad," was called off the case by his boss, Herbert J. Miller. [FBI 44-24016-112,1247; 62-109060-1528] Herbert J. Miller informed Robert Peloquin that he had contacted the source of the information concerning RUBY and the Dorfman's, and the source had refused to substantiate the information. Herbert J. Miller ordered "no further inquiry in this matter" because "the story would give HOFFA an opportunity to criticize the Justice Department for trying to tie HOFFA in with President Kennedy's murder." J. Edgar Hoover agreed: "I do wish Justice Department would mind it's own business." [FBI DC-44-1639 BL-E-cover pg; FBI CG 44-645- DWS: pl6, cover page B] Peloquin stated that when he was Chief of the Organized Crime Strike Force of the DOJ Herbert Itkin was a paid employee on loan from CIA.

CLINT MURCHISON Sr.

On November 25, 1963, an individual who called himself "Mr. Miller" contacted the FBI and told the Bureau he was "a close friend of JACK RUBY." In addition, he identified Clint Murchison and Johnny Webb as being "friends of RUBY." When J. Edgar Hoover saw this anonymous report (the name Miller and the address given by the informant were determined to be fictitious) he ordered the Bureau to "Press vigorously. I would surmise it is Clint Murchison, Jr., not Sr. I think we should talk to Clint Murchison, Jr." [FBI 44-24016-197, 198; 62-109060-363; Wash. Post 2.14.64; Drew Pearson D13; FBI Memo 1.22.64 NR 2.6.64; FBI Memo and ltr. to WC 1.31.64 NR 2.6.64] J. Edgar Hoover was close to the Murchison family and vacationed almost annually at their Del Charro Hotel, situated near the Murchison's Del Mar racetrack. [Messick, Hank, John Edgar Hoover, McKay , NY, 1972.] Clint Murchison Jr. told the FBI he never heard of RUBY or OSWALD before the events of November 1963. Tommy Webb told the FBI the same. In 1977 Tommy Webb signed an affidavit in which he admitted his association with Clint Murchison Jr. and Allen Dorfman. [Affidavit of Thomas Dougherty Webb Jr. 10.21.77] Edward Partin told Walter Sheridan that Clint Murchison Jr. was a "great benefactor" of JIMMY HOFFA's.

"PIGFACE" COHEN

On November 27, 1963, Daniel Adario, Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Philadelphia, advised FBI S.A. Robert L. Tagg, Newark, that he had received information from a confidential informant that "(FNU) Cohen, aka, 'Pigface' operator of used car lots, and brother of Raymond Cohen, a former official of the Teamster's Union, Philadelphia, had told the informant of Daniel Adario that he was very friendly with JACK LEON RUBY and knows RUBY from Chicago. Cohen advised informant RUBY 'tied up with rackets in Chicago.'" Raymond Cohn was a close associate of James R. HOFFA. [FBI 44-24016-1069371] On June 8, 1965, the FBI reported:

Philadelphia Office has reviewed Xerox copies of anonymous letters naming RAYMOND COHEN as having information regarding assassination of President Kennedy, and Philadelphia has no information as to who might have written these letters. It is opinion of Philadelphia, also, that no useful purpose or productive information would be obtained through an interview with Raymound Cohen, former Secretary-Treasurer of Teamsters Local 107, Philadelphia. Cohen is presently serving a one to two year prison term for defrauding the Local, and has served six months of this sentence. There was much factional fighting in Local 107, which eventually deposed Cohen and any number of dissident teamsters on the opposite side to Cohen could have written the letters attempting to implicate Cohen. [FBI 157-916-319 Phil. 6.8.65]

Arlen Spector successfully prosecuted Raymond Cohen. The FBI reported:

Because of this success Attorney General Kennedy offered Spector a job on the Justice Department Staff to assist in the prosecution of James HOFFA and other Teamster officials. Spector declined because the local case against Cohen had been appealed to the Pennsylvania Superior Court, and he wished to see it through. That case was argued in September and the court's ruling is awaited. [FDBI CIA 62-109060-61 1.9.64. Phil.]

OTIS PIKE

On November 25, 1963, the Houston FBI Office received information from Al Bright, an ex-felon of Corpus Christi, Texas, to the effect that RUBY was the payoff man for the Dallas Police Department, and whenever liquor and gambling raids were to be made on the Dallas underworld, RUBY was always contacted first by some unknown person from the Dallas Police Department. Al Bright obtained this information from Roy William Pike, who had once served a bookkeeper for RUBY, and was one of 12 persons known to have been in telephone contact with RUBY just before the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Roy William Pike was arrested for rape in 1943. Roy William Pike told Al Bright: "I think I spoke with RUBY about his relationship with HOFFA." The FBI interviewed Roy William Pike, who denied having said any of this. J. Edgar Hoover confused the report of Al Bright with that of Roy William Pike, and noted: "Pike was interviewed in connection with the case on November 25, 1963, at which time he alleged that RUBY was friendly with James HOFFA and the syndicate and was a pay-off man of the Dallas Police Department." [FBI 44-24016-1196; FBI report filed 11.25.63 Corpus Christi; FBI #110-44-939 pgs.329, 530, 531, 532]

In 1941 JACK RUBENSTEIN distributed punch board gambling devices throughout the United States while serving as a courier for the syndicate. During this period he and his associates disrupted pro-Nazi German-American Bund rallies. [WCR 779-806] In September 1941 JACK RUBENSTEIN was drafted. JACK RUBENSTEIN never saw any action, and spent his military career in the United States. When the FBI questioned him in late November 1963 one of JACK RUBENSTEIN'S army buddies, Hersey Colvin, was employed by a Chicago hoodlum. [WCE 1201] He told the FBI that RUBY was not connected to organized crime. Another of JACK RUBENSTEIN'S army buddies, Urban Roschek, told the FBI that JACK RUBENSTEIN had offered him a job picking up numbers in Chicago. [FBI 44-1639-54444]

In February 1946 JACK RUBENSTEIN was discharged from the Army. He returned to Chicago where he lived with Hyman Rubenstein in the Congress Hotel. JACK RUBENSTEIN frequented the H & H Restaurant, a hang-out for bookmakers, gamblers and hoodlums. Its proprietor, Maishi Baer, got very upset when the FBI questioned him in 1964. He told the FBI that he "didn't want to get involved" then tried to unsuccessfully reach his attorney. [FBI 44-24016-275]

PAUL ROLAND JONES

While JACK RUBENSTEIN was in the service, his sister Eva Rubenstein Grant moved to Dallas where she became associated with Paul Roland Jones. In 1930 Paul Roland Jones was arrested on a bootlegging charge in Kansas. In 1931 he began serving a life sentence in Lansing, Kansas, for the first degree murder of a government witness. On December 31, 1938, his life term was commuted by Kansas Governor Ratner to 20 years, and he was pardoned on July 8, 1940. Throughout the early 1940's, the offenses of Paul Roland Jones ranged from Vagrancy to OPA Violations. He was arrested in Dunkirk, N.Y. in 1944 for Grand Larceny, but no disposition of the case was shown in the records. He was later charged with swindling in Dallas, but the disposition of that case was also not shown. During the war, Paul Roland Jones and Eva Rubenstein opened up new territory for the mob. [HSCA V9 p986] Paul Roland Jones admitted that he had started gambling operations in Dallas in 1942 on behalf of Al Capone's cousins, the Fischetti brothers. [FBI LHM, Charlotte, North Carolina 6.29.64 copies destroyed 1.21.73]

Paul Roland Jones relied on bribery to keep the syndicate's gambling operations from being closed down. Paul Roland Jones had the Sheriff Smoot Schmid and various members of the Dallas Police Department "on the pad" for at least five years. Eva Rubenstein, who had purchased a building in Dallas and was opening a nightclub, introduced JACK RUBENSTEIN to Paul Roland Jones. Paul Roland Jones recalled this meeting: "It was in 1946, at the Congress Hotel in Chicago. I came up from Dallas to discuss business with Paul Labriola and JIMMY Weinberg. JACK RUBY'S sister arranged the meeting." Paul Roland Jones convinced RUBY to move to Dallas and manage a gambling joint there on behalf of the Chicago syndicate. There was one obstacle that had to be overcome: Steven Guthrie, the newly elected sheriff, who had come into office on a reform ticket had to go on the pad.

Four months after Sheriff Steven Guthrie took office (October 1946), Paul Roland Jones called Dallas Police Detective George Butler and asked him to arrange a meeting with Sheriff Guthrie. Sheriff Guthrie and Detective George Butler made recordings of their meeting with Paul Roland Jones. Sheriff Guthrie: "Shortly after my election, Jones contacted me and asked if I wanted to make some big money. At the time gambling, prostitution were wide-open in Dallas, and there were three gangland murders each month. I knew the syndicate had moved in because there were always at least 25 Chicago thugs in town. I was determined to get them." [WCE 1251] Sheriff Guthrie installed a hidden movie camera and photographed Paul Roland Jones entering and leaving the meeting. Paul Roland Jones reported his apparent success to Anthony Accardo, who sent Paul "Needlenose" Labriola and (FNU) Weinberg to Dallas. Paul Roland Jones introduced Sheriff Guthrie to Pat Manno, a friend of Anthony Accardo. On November 14, 1946, Paul Roland Jones called Detective George Butler and told him he was going to Chicago, where the syndicate was meeting for the purpose of formulating plans for moving into gambling activities in Dallas. In December 1946, Detective George Butler visited Paul Roland Jones and introduced two men identified as Murray Humphreys and Jake Guzik, both Capone-gang members.

In 1964 Sheriff Steve Guthrie told the FBI:

JACK RUBY was a small peanut with this group that tried to bribe me. His name came up on numerous occasions as being the person who would take over a fabulous restaurant and turn it into a posh gambling joint.

Jack Wilner, a crime reporter for The Chicago Daily News stated that RUBY was involved in an effort to take over gambling in the Texas area at this time. [HSCA V19 par. 1131] Another reporter for the Chicago Daily News stated that Detective George Butler told him RUBY was involved in an attempt to bribe Sheriff Guthrie.

The HSCA obtained the original recordings of the Jones-Guthrie-Butler meetings. The original recordings were of such poor quality it was impossible for the Committee to determine if JACK RUBENSTEIN'S name came up. Two recordings were missing. The HSCA was unable to interview former Sheriff Steven Guthrie. Just before Christmas, 1946, Paul Roland Jones and his associate, Jack Nappi, were indicted on Bribery charges. Jack Nappi was related to Frank Nitti, Al Capone's enforcer. In early 1947 Paul Roland Jones was convicted on the bribery charge, then released on appeal bond.

In October 1947, Homer R. Padgett, a former manager of Eva Rubenstein's Singapore Club, told Detective Butler Eva Rubenstein had him beaten when he tried to overhear one of her conversations. JACK RUBENSTEIN called Homer R. Padgett a stool pigeon. Detective George Butler investigated the Singapore Club and examined its toll records. [HSCA V9 para. 1131] The HSCA questioned Eva Rubenstein about the allegations of Homer R. Padgett. She recalled that when her club first opened, two Dallas Police Department officers asked her questions about having known Al Capone and about gangsters from Chicago who visited her club. When Detective George Butler was questioned by the HSCA he told them that "From 1947 to 1948 some members of the Capone organization were trying to move gambling into Dallas. I had a snitch in the outfit, Paul Roland Jones, who told me the Capone outfit considered RUBY too erratic for them." Detective George Butler told the HSCA that Paul Roland Jones was a snitch. If so, why did he do time?

HEROIN SMUGGLING

Meyer Lansky, as he had promised, secured the release of "Lucky" Luciano from prison by collaborating with Charles Siragusa and the OSS to stop Axis sabotage in America's sea ports during World War II. This was OPERATION UNDERWORLD. "Lucky" Luciano was released from prison in 1946 and immediately deported to Italy. "Lucky" Luciano charged Meyer Lansky with the responsibility for managing his financial empire. Meyer Lansky played a key role in organizing the heroin syndicate of "Lucky" Luciano. The relationship of Meyer Lansky with the TRAFFICANTE family was of particular importance. In 1947 Meyer Lansky and "Lucky" Luciano had a meeting in Cuba about expanding the mob's heroin trade. In 1947 Paul Roland Jones was involved in the narcotics trade, which experienced a post-war renaissance.

JOHN AND MAURICE MELTON

The narcotics operation of Paul Roland Jones involved John and Maurice Melton, two brothers who owned 127,000 acres of land near Durango, Mexico, suitable for the cultivation of opium. The opium was grown there and was flown into the United States by pilot Taylor Crossland. [FBI report filed 12.14.63 at Albuquerque, New Mexico #AQ 44-391] In August 1947 the Federal Bureau of Narcotics became aware of the operation. Maurice Melton and Paul Roland Jones were put under 24-hour surveillance and their telephone calls were monitored:

Prior to arrest above Subjects were surveilled during course of investigation and they checked into the Central Plaza Hotel on August 2, 1947. While at this hotel they made several phone calls which were checked out and the number Kedzie-1717 was listed to Hyman and JACK RUBENSTEIN. [Bureau of Narcotics Report, Chicago 10.31.47 A.E. Aman; FBI #44-24016-586; FBI 44-1639-21, Dallas]

On August 27, 1947, Taylor Crossland was forced down, and arrested at the Mexican-American border with 48 pounds of raw opium worth nearly one million dollars in his aircraft. Taylor Crossland told the FBI that when he and Maurice Melton brought a load of opium from Mexico to Dallas he contacted Paul Roland Jones in an effort to dispose of the opium. He "stated Paul Roland Jones took him to an unknown motel, where Jones introduced an individual whom he believes possibly identical to RUBY as RUBENSTEIN. States Jones and RUBENSTEIN went back into motel, stayed approximately five minutes, and then Jones returned to automobile and said 'We will have to go to Chicago to dispose of this stuff' and no further reference was made to an individual believed to be JACK RUBENSTEIN." [FBI 44-1639-1629; WCE 1271, 1272, 1273; FBI 44-24016-481]

Taylor Crossland became a States witness against Paul Roland Jones, as did the Melton brothers. On October 24, 1947, Paul Roland Jones was arrested in Dallas. Five days later, the Chicago office of the Bureau of Narcotics questioned JACK RUBENSTEIN and his brother. JACK RUBENSTEIN said he knew Paul Roland Jones through his sister, Eva Rubenstein Grant, who met Paul Roland Jones while operating her supper club in Dallas. JACK RUBENSTEIN claimed he had never spoken to Paul Roland Jones in Chicago, either personally or by phone. When the calls in question occurred (August 2, 1947 and August 3, 1947) JACK RUBENSTEIN said he was visiting Dallas. JACK RUBENSTEIN said he was a sales promoter and merchandise distributor and he knew nothing about narcotics. Hyman Rubenstein admitted having known Taylor Crossland, Maurice Melton and Paul Roland Jones and told the Bureau of Narcotics investigators that the telephone call in question had been made to him. He admitted meeting with them, but insisted

I know absolutely nothing about opium, or narcotics in any shape, manner or form, nor the illicit traffic of narcotic drugs. Paul Roland Jones never mentioned opium to me nor did Taylor Crossland or Maurice Melton. I'm a business man with no arrests. We were involved in selling lumber and pipe. They gave me a sample of lumber which I showed around Chicago.

During the trial, Maurice Melton testified that when Hyman and Jack Rubenstein were propositioned regarding narcotics, they refused any part in it. [FBI 44-24016-395]

The Melton's had been told by Paul Roland Jones that the Rubenstein family had connections with the Chicago crime syndicate, who would offer them the best price for the opium. The deal never went through. The Melton brothers were afraid to testify against Rubenstein because they knew he was connected to the Syndicate and they didn't want to end up dead.

On January 10, 1948, Hyman Rubenstein appeared as a witness in the narcotics trial of Paul Roland Jones in Dallas. Eleven months later, the Bureau of Narcotics closed the JACK RUBENSTEIN file, but seven years later, in 1955, the Bureau reopened it. The original file released by the Justice Department in unexcised form (over the objection of the Drug Enforcement Administration - the heirs to Bureau of Narcotics files) had the following in a box labeled "Related Files": "SE-202 Mafia pages 234 and 240." When this researcher applied for these files Benjamin R. Civiletti informed him that the materials were not of "historical interest" because "even today, the materials remain substantially related to continuing investigations...I do want you to know that no reference to JACK RUBY has been discovered in the materials which are the subject of this appeal." [Ltr. Office of Deputy Attorney General 5.8.78 re: DEA/FOIA/Req#77-492-F]

After the assassination of President John F. Kennedy RUBY did not deny that he was in touch with Paul Roland Jones in Chicago. Paul Roland Jones admitted he was a member of the syndicate during this period. In late January 1948, Paul Roland Jones, who was described as a "Dangerous Public Enemy" by the FBI, was convicted of Conspiracy to Import Narcotics and sentenced to three years in prison. An additional two years were added when his appeal on the bribery charges was denied. Released in 1952 Paul Roland Jones returned to Dallas and managed several taverns for the syndicate. In 1953 Paul Roland Jones was involved in the sale of worthless uranium stock. By 1960 he had become connected with a phony cancer clinic. Paul Roland Jones lived in Birmingham, Alabama, but made frequent trips to Dallas.

In December 1947 JACK RUBENSTEIN changed his name to JACK RUBY. In early 1948, when Paul Roland Jones went to prison, RUBY moved to Dallas. After the assassination of President John F. Kennedy RUBY admitted he "came to Dallas because of connections with the Chicago crime syndicate." [WC Ltr. Hoover to Rankin 6.2.64] Later in 1948 Eva Rubenstein moved to California and RUBY took responsibility for the management of The Silver Spur Club.

LEWIS J. McWILLIE

RUBY contacted Lewis J. McWillie who helped manage the gambling interests of the syndicate in Dallas. Lewis J. McWillie was born at Kansas City, Missouri, May 4, 1908. At age 16 he was arrested for stealing a car and sentenced to two years at a boys reformatory. Lewis J. McWillie became a professional gambler, who worked river boats up and down the Mississippi. The FBI described him as a "murderer." [FBI PX-44216 12.5.63] In 1942 he worked for Benny Bickers, and Benny "the Cowboy" Binion, at the Top of the Hill Casino, located just outside the Dallas City limits. [HSCA V9 para. 1153; Lt. Butler, Kefauver Committee test; WCE1692; WCD 686d] Benny Binion had controlled gambling in Dallas ever since his rival was executed in gangland fashion. Benny Binion had been arrested for murder and possession of a sawed-off shotgun. Benny Binion left Dallas in 1948 and moved to Las Vegas where he became associated with West Coast mob figures Mickey Cohen and Jack Dragna. Jack Dragna was frequently referred to as the Al Capone of Los Angeles and was closely associated with Johnny Rosselli. In 1951 the State of Nevada granted Binion a gaming license, and he became a casino operator. [Reed, Ed, Ovid Demaris, The Green Felt Jungle, Trident Press, NY, 1963 pgs. 66, 84, 104, 184]

McWILLIE AND BENNY BINION

In 1978 Lewis J. McWillie was questioned about his association with Benny Binion and any possible connection between gambling in Las Vegas and Dallas.

Q. Did you know Benny Binion in 1947?

A. Knew him to see him.

Q. Who did you work for in the 1940's?

A. I worked for Ivy Miller and Red Scarborough.

Q. Did you know that Miller and Scarborough worked for Benny Binion in a numbers operation?

A. No I didn't.

Q. Did you know Harry Urban?

A. Didn't know him intimately. I knew him to speak to him.

Q. Did you know he was a partner of Benny Binion?

A. No.

Q. Prior to your present employment (in 1978), where did you work?

A. Binion's Horse Shoe Club in Las Vegas. [HSCA V5 pgs. 2, 22, 57, 65]

RUBY AND MARCELLO

RUBY was associated with the MARCELLO family soldiers, or capos, in Dallas. These men included R. D. Matthews (born July 26, 1920, in Aspermont, Texas), Joe Civello, (born January 2, 1902; died January 1970), Joe Campisi (born October 11, 1918, Dallas), and Sam Campisi (born May 19, 1938), and Ralph Paul (born December 17, 1899, Kiev, Russia).

R.D. MATTHEWS

Lewis J. McWillie introduced RUBY to Russell Douglas Matthews. When R.D. Matthews was seven he moved to Dallas. He served in the Marine Corps from December 1941 to October 1945, after which he returned to Dallas. [HSCA V9 par 1054] By the late 1940's R.D. Matthews was actively engaged in criminal activity in Dallas. He was described in one FBI report as a burglar, armed robber, narcotics pusher and murderer. Another described him as armed and dangerous, and stated that he had been known to carry firearms and to use explosives in the past. In 1949 R.D. Matthews was arrested for burglary and in 1950 for having violated the Federal Narcotics Act.

RALPH PAUL

Ralph Paul was most closely associated with RUBY. An employee of the Carousel Club testified: "If anybody gave JACK money, he would probably got it from Paul. He was a silent partner who passed on to him some of that cash." [HSCA V9p242] Ralph Paul, a Russian-Jewish immigrant whose name was Ralph Bielapolski, came to Dallas in 1947 from the South Bronx where he owned a fruit stand. Ralph Paul told the FBI that he had worked 16 hours a day for 25 years at this stand for very low wages. Yet when he came to Dallas he had amassed a considerable amount of capital; enough to purchase several nightclubs. [WCD 4 p466; HSCA V9 para. 1271] CARLOS MARCELLO was in the tomato growing and marketing business when Ralph Paul owned a fruit stand. CARLOS MARCELLO needed frontmen to invest his illegal earnings in legitimate businesses. The brother of Ralph Paul, Louis Paul, was President of the Pleasant Finance Company of Lodi, New Jersey. Frank Laduca was the manager of Pleasant Finance. [FBI tel from Newark #44-443 to Dallas 6.3.64] In 1952 RUBY took Ralph Paul on as a silent partner. By 1952 the MARCELLO family had gained control of organized crime in Dallas.

THE CAMPISIS

JOE CAMPISI DRINKS ON THE HOUSE

Ralph Paul was a partner of Joseph Campisi. [FBI report filed 11.24.63 Dallas, DC 44-1639, Lee and R.M. Barrett] Joseph Campisi attended high school with R.D. Matthews. In 1944 Joe Campisi was arrested for a murder that involved the shooting of an employee of Campisi's, who allegedly drew a knife on him. A Dallas County Grand Jury believed Joe Campisi had acted in self-defense. In 1947 Joe Campisi and his brother Sam Campisi bought the Idle Hour Bar in Dallas. This was the year the Campisis first met RUBY. In 1957 the Campisi brothers bought the Egyptian Lounge from John Grizzaffi; an associate of RUBY'S. John Grizzaffi, a native of Dallas, was mentioned in the Jones-Butler tapes. Employees of the Egyptian Lounge included men like Peter Piccola, who was known to the FBI as a bookmaker. [FBI 44-1639 FD-302 with P J Piccola 4.24.63 Dallas, Lee & Barrett] Other associates RUBY and Joe Campisi had in common included Lewis J. McWillie, Benny Binion and James R. Todd. [HSCA V5 para. 908] The FBI reported:

On February 17, 1959, Special Agents Robert M. Barrett and Milton L. Newsom and Charles T. Brown, Jr. observed Dallas police character and known gambler Russell Douglas Matthews at the Egyptian Lounge, which is owned and operated by Joe and Sam Campisi. The connection between Matthews and the Campisis was not known.

On May 14, 1959, Special Agents Robert M. Barrett and Jesse Hagy observed Dallas-Fort Worth gambler Al Meadows at the Egyptian Lounge. On August 18, 1959, Special Agent Robert M. Barret observed Joe Ianni and his family at the Egyptian Lounge. Ianni was observed in conversation with Joe Campisi and Frank La Coco. A newspaper article in The Dallas Morning News on November 23, 1959, stated that suspected mafia adherent Charles Vincent Saterino, FBI No. 497185, had died on November 21, 1959. Among the pallbearers were Charles Civello, brother of Joseph Francis Civello, John Ross Patrono and Joe and Sam Campisi. These same individuals attended the funeral of the father of Pete Piccola during the same week. On November 22, 1961, while contacting Sam Campisi on another matter, Special Agent (Deleted) observed (Deleted) enter the Egyptian Restaurant and engage in what appeared to be a guarded conversation with (Deleted). He left shortly thereafter.

On March 27, 1962, Special Agents (Deleted) and (Deleted) observed Joseph Francis Civello at the Egyptian Lounge apparently waiting for an order of pizza to be filled. The recent robbery of Sam Campisi was discussed with Civello.

On January 31, 1963, Special Agents Barrett and Ivan D. Lee observed known Dallas gamblers Jesse Ray McPherson, Gerald Francis Burch and John Benton Turns in the Egyptian Lounge in contact with Joe Campisi.

On August 7, 1963, Lieutenant Jack Revill, Intelligence Unit, Dallas Police Department advised Special Agent Charles T. Brown Jr. that numerous known bookmakers and dice hustlers frequent the Egyptian Lounge on a daily basis.

Lieutenant Revill advised SA Barret on December 17, 1964 that recent information had been received that Campisi was a close associate of gambler Frank James Tortoriello, Dallas Police Department number 5036 as well as Riley B. Bawcum, gambler and bookmaker. Revill further advised no information had been received from any reliable source that the Campisis were involved at present or in the recent past in any illegal activity.

Lieutenant REVILL continued that information had been received to the effect that JOE CAMPISI had been severely reprimanded by his brother, SAM, to cease any bookmaking activity as it would jeopardize their business. Lieutenant REVILL further advised SA BARRETT on January 17, 1966 that numerous Dallas area gamblers have been observed at various times at the Egyptian Restaurant. He identified these individuals as JOHN BENTON TURNS, BOBBY JOE CHAPMAN, and AL MEADOWS. Lieutenant REVILL stated that JOE CAMPISI's reputation as a "loud mouth" prevents him from being trusted by gamblers, bookmakers, or underworld associates.

DL T-3 advised SA BARDWELL D. ODUM on October 13, 1966 that CHARLIE MC MATT operates a football betting operation in East Dallas, operating out of the Crown Bar on Columbia Avenue. MC MATT reportedly talks considerably about TONY CATHERINE and SAM and JOE CAMPISI, it being indicated that BOBBY JOE CHAPMAN is connected in some manner with the CAMPISIs.

DL 1-3 further advised that JOHN ROSS PATRONO and JOHNNY GRISSAFFI are attempting to obtain financial backlog from the CAMPISIs for some kind of deal, details not known. He further advised that the CAMPISIs have a bartender at the Egyptian Restaurant who is a "square". Waitresses include RUBY LEE, the daughter-in-law of BOB LEE, Falstaff distributor for the City of Dallas. She is married to BOBBY LEE, a vice president at Falstaff Distributing Company.

D. CRIMINAL ACTIVITIES

SAM CAMPISI is not known to be engaging in criminal activities.

DL T-4 advised SA THOMAS M. O'MALLEY on April 25, 1961 that JOE and SAM CAMPISI take bets at the Egyptian Lounge, 5610 Mockingbird Lane, Dallas. On October 30, 1961, Lieutenant JACK REVILL, Intelligence Unit, Dallas Police Department, advised SA CARL X. UNDERHILL that for a period of at least ten years, information has been received that the CAMPISIs were operating a book and that prostitutes were allowed to operate from the Egyptian Lounge, but that officers of the Vice Detail had disproved these allegations and that while JOE CAMPISI is well acquainted with known gamblers and other such persons in and out of the Italian element of Dallas, they had been unable to substantiate any allegation that any bookmaking or prostitution activities were being engaged in by the CAMPISIs.

On November 21, 1961, Lieutenant REVILL advised SA ROBERT N. BARRETT that he had received information from a source close to JOE CAMPISI that CAMPISI was nervous because of a recent interview by Agents of the FBI in connection with an investigation of his activities and the activities of some of his associates and other Italian gamblers in Dallas. JOE CAMPISI allegedly advised this source that he and his associates were accepting no more bets during the football season and that it was believed things would cool down by the time the basketball season was underway. This source reportedly advised Lieutenant Revill that SAM CAMPISI had advised his brother, JOE, that they were making "good money" through the restaurant and that he, JOE CAMPISI, was not going to risk this by gambling. SAM CAMPISI allegedly stated he was not going to participate in any future gambling activities whatsoever and suggested that JOE do the same

DL-T-5 advised SA IVAN D. LEE on July 25, 1963 that JOE and SAM CAMPISI had been discussing the possibility of moving the "Italian syndicate" into Dallas to take over the gambling and DL T-2 advised that although his information was reliable, that knowing Joe Campisi like to hear himself talk, it is probably just talk. [FBI Dallas 12-7792-2]

In 1967 a friend of Joe Campisi estimated that each brother netted $100,000 per year from their restaurant business. That year the Campisis aided the promotion in Dallas of gambling junkets sponsored by the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas. From January 1967 to the day he died on December 23, 1970, Campisi was the subject of a FBI Anti-Racketeering Investigation. On April 4, 1968, the FBI in Dallas requested permission to review the Campisis telephone toll records based on their associate with Joseph Civello. In 1970 an FBI report related an assertion of an informant that Joe Campisi was close with both State judges and members of the Dallas County District Attorney's office. He allegedly had contacts within the Dallas Police Department. Joe Campisi was linked with both gambling and bookmaking activities in the Dallas area, but had never been arrested for any gambling activities. Joe Campisi's technical characterization in Federal law enforcement records was an organized crime member whose affiliation had, at one point, been termed: 'Definite.'" In the 1970's the MARCELLOS often appeared at Campisi family affairs. [Earl Golz, MARCELLO in Dallas, Iconoclast 11.21.76; Mike Graugnard, MARCELLO, Iconoclast 10.15, 29, 1976, 11.5.76] Sam Campisi died on December 23, 1970. The FBI recorded the license numbers of all out of state cars attending his funeral. [FBI 92-9792-25] It concluded: "A review of the list of registrations obtained from cars attending subject's funeral reflected the following individuals, members of a local group who allegedly control organized crime in the Dallas area, were noted and were personally observed being present at the Subject's funeral."

JOE CIVELLO

The MARCELLO family made an alliance with Dallas mafia boss Joseph Francis Civello, whom MARCELLO knew from Baton Rouge. In 1938 Civello served four years of a 15 year federal prison sentence for having participated in a heroin and cocaine distribution conspiracy that reached from Dallas, to New Orleans, to Chicago. In late 1962 the Immigration and Naturalization Service began proceedings to deport Joseph Francis Civello. The FBI: "The Campisi's are members of a small group of aliens in Dallas closely associated with Civello, deceased, former LCN leader in Dallas. The subject and brother operate the Egyptian Restaurant, 5610 Mockingbird Lane, Dallas. In addition to the above association, the subjects have been connected with gambling activities in Dallas." [FBI DL 92-9792 9.22.70]

LEWIS J. MCWILLIE, THE CAMPISIS, AND THE CIVELLOS

The HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about his, and RUBY'S, connection to the Campisis and the Civellos:

Q. Did you know Joe Civello?

A. I knew him, yes. I didn't know him intimately but I knew him to speak to him.

Q. Did RUBY know him?

A. No. I don't think he knew him.

Q. Did JACK RUBY know Joe or Sam Campisi?

A. I'm sure he did.

Q. Do you recall having dinner with JACK RUBY and the Campisis in 1954 or 1955?

A. I don't recall but its possible.

Q. Do you know of any business dealings between RUBY and the Campisis?

A. No. they would have no business dealings with JACK RUBY. [HSCA V3p73, V9 para.1153]

THE CAMPISIS AND THE CIVELLOS

When Joe Campisi was questioned by the HSCA he admitted a close connection to Joseph Francis Civello:

I knew the whole Civello family, I had known them all of my life...They owned Civello's Liquor Store, and they had imported foods like pastas and cheese...and at that time we started buying provolone cheese from them...we were just like kinfolks, you know. Just like we are, real close friends, like being cousins, you know.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Joe Civello the fact of his having been arrested at Appalachia?

A. Never have. [HSCA V9 para. 1153]

In November 1957 a meeting of the commission took place in Apalachin, N.Y. A FBI informant reported that purpose of this meeting was to Cardello told the Agents the from Malito and other sources he could not recall he had been told that the purpose of instant meeting was for the members at the meeting to contribute money to back Fidel Castro and help Castro overthrow Batista. Cardello said that apparently Batista did not let the Italian racket element get into gambling or wanted too large a share of the profits from the gambling operation. Castro, according to Cardello, was being used as a tool to sway Batista's opinion. He said that when the Italian racket element was entrenched in Cuba, they would take over all gambling operations. Cardello did not believe that Castro had knowledge as to why the Italian racket element was backing him, and also, based on recent news articles, that Castro had gotten out of hand. [FBI PH 92-444 12.58 - Bruno's FBI File]

JOSEPH LOCURTO

In 1953 RUBY obtained an interest in a third nightclub, the Vegas Club. His partner in this venture was Joe Locurto. An FBI report filed in 1953 revealed: "RUBY and Joe Locurto always carried concealed pistols and were in constant association with Jack Todd, a well known Dallas hoodlum." In July 1953 Joe Locurto was convicted of having violated the White Slave Act and having committed unnatural sexual acts. The RUBY/Locurto partnership ended when Locurto went to prison. [FBI 287527 information concerning memo 6.11.64 JWH/jh/cac. NR 6.19.64; FBI pre-1963 traces on RUBY Item 3] From 1953 to 1955 the Vegas Club was managed by Ken McDermitt. Ken McDermitt later became "State Supervisor of the Arizona State Bureau of Identification."

JACK TODD

James Robert Todd (born December 10, 1919, Groesbeck, Texas), was described as "knowing CARLOS MARCELLO on a first name basis." During World War II James Robert Todd was employed by North American Aviation. In 1948 Jack Todd became part of the Hollis Green Gang which specialized in burglaries of pharmaceutical houses and large drug-stores for narcotics and cash. [HSCA V9 para. 1324, 1054] Jack Todd worked closely with R.D. Matthews at this time. The son of Jack Todd, Gerald Todd, was involved in a shootout with Joe Campisi in 1973. The two business partners had a falling out. The HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about RUBY'S association with Jack Todd:

Q. Did JACK RUBY know Jack Todd?

A. I'm sure he did.

Q. Did you know Todd?

A. Jack Todd, I knew him...To tell you the truth, I don't know what Jack Todd did. He was in Cuba, too, just came over visiting. I saw him once or twice. [HSCA McW Dep.]

The HSCA also questioned Campisi about Todd:

Q. Do you know Jack Todd?

A. Yes sir.

Q. And how long have you known Mr. Todd?

A. Oh, ever since we were 15, 16 years old.

Q. What business, if any, have you had with Todd?

A. No business, none.

THE DALLAS MOB

Both Jack Todd and R.D. Matthews were questioned by the HSCA. Both admitted knowing the Campisis, Johnny Grizzaffi, the Civellos, and RUBY. They shared common gambling connections that included bookmakers Benny Binion and John Eli Stone. R.D. Matthews admitted having known "Izzy" Miller, the former employer of Lewis McWillie, while Jack Todd admitted knowing Paul Roland Jones and Joe Locurto. [HSCA Depo see V9p126 index]

AMERICAN GUILD OF VARIETY ARTISTS

In August 1953 an FBI agent witnessed RUBY threaten the Branch Manager of the American Guild of Variety Artists (AGVA). RUBY said he would kill the man if he didn't stop asking him to pay his entertainers in advance. The AGVA representative explained that he had been pistol whipped by Joe Locurto, and he heard that RUBY was a hoodlum who had experienced financial difficulties because of the Kefauver investigation.

JAMES HENRY DOLAN, MARCELLO AND TRAFFICANTE

By 1958 the Dallas mob controlled AGVA. James Henry Dolan, an associate of CARLOS MARCELLO and TRAFFICANTE, became a top AGVA official. [HSCA V9 para 924] James Henry Dolan was discharged from the Army in 1945. In 1951 James Henry Dolan was arrested and convicted for impersonating an Internal Revenue Service agent. In 1952 James Henry Dolan violated his probation when he rigged a poker game in Denver, Colorado. In 1953 James Henry Dolan was sent to federal prison where he remained until 1956. From 1958 to 1961 James Henry Dolan was employed by AGVA. An FBI report stated:

In late 1960 or 1961, George Fuqua and James Henry Dolan were introduced to SANTOS TRAFFICANTE JR., through TRAFFICANTE'S associate, Milo Bell. The purpose of the contact was to ascertain if Milo Bell and TRAFFICANTE could use James Henry Dolan and George Fuqua in the collection business, or as enforcers for TRAFFICANTE. TRAFFICANTE allegedly told these two Dallas people that he wanted a 'bolito man knocked-off and roughed-up as this man was holding out on his collections and owed TRAFFICANTE some money'...Dolan and Fuqua subsequently 'knocked off' this man and got about $7,000." In February 1961 James Henry Dolan was arrested in Dallas for breaking into a pay telephone. James Henry Dolan had placed a call to Milo Bell. In March 1963 it was learned that James Henry Dolan had been on a trip to New Orleans and had spoken to "CARLOS" (last name unknown, possibly MARCELLO), a "big time New Orleans hoodlum.

On May 10, 1963, James Henry Dolan was stopped by the New Orleans police, and was found to be in the company of Dimitry Sack, who frequented the Town and Country Restaurant, which was owned by Joseph A. Poretto. James Henry Dolan was also associated with R.D. Matthews, a frequent visitor to his AGVA office. On May 29, 1963, Dallas Police Intelligence advised that James Henry Dolan was in contact with R.D. Matthews, allegedly having discussed the need for $2,000 to gain the release of their associate, George Fuqua. A 1964 investigation of telephone calls made by James Henry Dolan indicated a call was made to the American Bonding Agency in Chicago, which was operated by mobster Irwin Weiner. A 1964 FBI report listed Nofio Pecora as a known associate of James Henry Dolan's. Another FBI report placed the partner of James Henry Dolan, George Fuqua, at a restaurant located across the street from the Tropical Tourist Courts Trailer Park.

DOLAN AND RUBY

When the FBI interviewed James Henry Dolan circa December 1963, he stated he had known RUBY since 1957 and had seen him quite often when he worked for AGVA.

According to the HSCA, in 1953 RUBY was a confidential source for Kefauver Committee investigators. [HSCA V9 para. 11208] RUBY was not mentioned during the Kefauver investigation, and this researcher was unable to locate any paperwork that substantiated this. In 1953 Senator Estes Kefauver named CARLOS MARCELLO as the boss of the Louisiana mafia. As a result, the Immigration and Naturalization Service issued an order of deportation against CARLOS MARCELLO. It cost MARCELLO a million dollars in legal fees to fight this order. In 1956 the first of MARCELLO'S deportation hearings began. MARCELLO'S strategy involved pay-offs to members of the Italian Parliament so that Italy would not accept him should he be deported. This international bribery brought CARLOS MARCELLO to the attention of the CIA, which was also funneling money to Italian politicians.

HARRY HALL

Throughout 1953 RUBY was involved in gambling activities and confidence games. His partner was Harry Hall. Harry Hall, (Harry Schwartz), was described as a big-time swindler associated with Johnny Rosselli. Harry Hall's uncle, Marty Schwartz, was a dealer at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas. Andrew Armstrong, the janitor at the Carousel Club, stated:

JACK would tell me stories about Marty Schwartz when Marty and he did this or he and Marty did that...about things that happened in Chicago." [HSCA V9 para. 886] On December 11, 1963, the FBI interviewed Harry Hall. He told them that he had known RUBY from childhood, since he had been raised in the same neighborhood in Chicago. Harry Hall claimed he had not seen RUBY for eight years and to his knowledge, RUBY had never visited Las Vegas. The FBI marked this document "no leads."

RUBY'S close friend, Alex Gruber, told the HSCA that Barney Ross had introduced him to Harry Hall in Chicago then he ran into him at several sporting events. Alex Gruber maintained he did not know that Harry Hall was connected with RUBY. [HSCA V9 p485; FBI 44-1639-1841, 2125; USSS File #4,3-601.0 - 454; FBI 105-82555- NR. 12.11.63; FBI # Los Angeles-44-895-WJN; mjg; HSCA V9 p251]

In Dallas, Harry Hall joined the Petroleum Club where he fleeced oil barons Clint Murchison, Sr., and H. L. Hunt. The FBI discounted the information supplied by Harry Hall about having worked with RUBY, despite the fact that Harry Hall was an FBI and Treasury Department informant who had provided the Treasury Department with reliable information in the past. Harry Hall wanted to trade his information for release from Federal prison where he was incarcerated for fraud.

In 1978 the HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about Harry Hall:

Q. Who were some of the oil men who gambled at the Top of the Hill?

A. Billy Byers, he played out there. Big oilmen, H.L. Hunt, he played out there.

Q. Did you know Harry Hall?

A. I knew a dealer years and years ago by the name of Harry Hall. Hell, he's been dead 30, 40 years.

ISRAEL AND SOUTH AFRICA

RUBY traveled to Israel in 1955. While visiting "known racketeers and gamblers" in San Francisco that year he told Harry Hall: "After I leave here I'm going to Florida to buy a load of contraband (arms) to send to Israel." RUBY'S notebook contained the phone number TE-8-7475. This number belonged to A. Snyman of New York City. The NY FBI attempted to contact A. Snyman by telephone, and personal visit, for several days without success. The agents went to her apartment and knocked on her door. As they were leaving A. Snyman appeared in the lobby. She told them that she had diplomatic immunity, and they should contact her through Ambassador M. I. Botha of the South African Mission to the United Nations. Had RUBY been involved in an arms deal between Israel and South Africa? The FBI determined the number in question was JE-8-7475 rather than TE-8-7475. The Warren Commission re-examined the entry and determined it was TE-3-7475. This number was "possibly identified with a Fort Worth resident, Carl M. Applewhite, a cousin of well know singer and nightclub operator, Charles M. Applewhite." [FBI 44-24016-1550] Charles M. Applewhite's name appeared in RUBY'S telephone book.

JAMES ECKFORD BREEN

James Breen, (born January 4, 1928), was arrested in Kansas City, Missouri, in 1942 and 1943. He became a welder's helper around this time. James Breen was arrested in 1944 in San Francisco, when he was 16. He was charged with illegally wearing a Navy jacket and cap. James Breen enlisted in the Army in 1947, but went AWOL a year later. In 1952 he was arrested for marijuana. In 1954 he was in Seagoville Federal Correctional Institute, and in 1955 he was arrested in Los Angeles on suspected narcotics act violations. In December 1955, the San Francisco Office of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics attempted to locate James Breen and Eileen Curry with a view in mind of possibly using these individuals in connection with a narcotics investigation, then in progress. The Federal Bureau of Narcotics could not locate them. James Breen was arrested in Long Beach, California, in December 1956. In March 1957 he was arrested in Signal Hill, California. In December 1959 James Breen was charged with auto theft and in 1961 he was charged with running a house of prostitution in Los Angeles. In 1962 James Breen was suspected of cultivating marijuana. He was arrested again May 29, 1962 in Anaheim, California. He was arrested March 9, 1963, in Los Angeles, and on March 28, 1963. The FBI "Breen was former FUDE, Los Angeles origin." In March 1967 Breen was convicted of interstate transportation of a stolen motor vehicle. [<http://www.altlaw.org/v1/cases/1541721>]

EILEEN ELLIS CURRY

In 1940 Eileen Curry was sent to the Ventura School for girls for five years. In 1943 Eileen Curry went to work for the War Department but by 1947 she was in the Oregon State Penitentiary. She was released in 1949. In 1951 Eileen Curry was arrested for lewd vagrancy. Curry was arrested for vagrancy on June 23, 1956 in Dallas. Eileen Curry was "lodged in a motel frequented by colored patrons...where she plied her trade as a prostitute." On October 18, 1956, she was arrested in Louisville, Kentucky. On October 30, 1956, Eileen Curry was charged with passing a bad check in Indianapolis, Indiana. She pleaded guilty and served one month in jail. She was arrested on January 3, 1957, in Cleveland, Ohio. She was arrested on December 13, 1958. On May 16, 1959, Eileen Curry was sent to prison in Ohio for prostitution. She told authorities there that "she started prostitution at an early age and has known no other measure of making a living, nor has she any intention of changing her behavior pattern." She was released on March 19, 1960. She was arrested on November 7, 1960, in Cleveland. She was arrested on August 7, 1961, and on September 29, 1961, in Cleveland. That year Assistant United States Attorney Burt W. Griffin indicted her for violations of the White Slavery Act. She pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years in prison beginning on October 25, 1961.

RUBY AND CURRY AND BREEN

After November 22, 1963, the Los Angeles Field Office of the FBI located a reference to JACK RUBY, James Breen and Eileen Curry in its files. Titled "James Breen, Miscellaneous Information Concerning" the file related that on March 18, 1956, Eileen Curry requested that the Los Angeles FBI Office have S.A. Ambrose K. Law call her collect at Dallas, Texas. The rest of the text read:

She had been interviewed twice for information she might furnish in the case entitled 'Unknown Subject, Abraham Davidian - Victim. Obstruction of Justice.' She was acting, as was James Breen, as an informant for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and Los Angeles Police Department Vice Squad. She indicated she had formerly been with Stanley Adams, a Subject in this case. Bunny at that time was operating a house of prostitution in Los Angeles on a call girl basis. She furnished no information of particular significance. James Breen was interviewed two or three times as a possible Potential Criminal Informant, but both were constantly in trouble with local authorities and contact could not be maintained with them. Bunny, on March 18, 1956, last, advised that she and James had jumped a local bond on narcotics charges about the first of this year and gone to Dallas. James was driving a cab for City Transportation Company and was apparently operating in some branch of the prostitution racket. Bunny was told by James he had a connection with a large narcotics set up operating between Mexico, Texas and the East. James made several trips and returned. He purposely did not give details so she could not get into trouble. He took his clothes about three weeks ago and said he was going on another trip. She heard later that he left her, but heard also from a bondsman named Schmit this was not true, and that James had contacted him, and asked him to look out for her in case she got into any trouble. She believes James made the connection to narcotics ring through a former associate from Seagoville Prison where James served time. In some fashion James got the okay to operate through JACK RUBY of Dallas. Several days ago, one Jack, (LNU) of Houston came to see Bunny with one Gordon Winter of Houston, a friend of hers and James. Jack told her that James was trying to hijack a 300 to 400 thousand dollar load of narcotics from Mexico and was going to try and go with another distribution setup...Bunny fears James has been killed or kidnapped and wanted to talk to someone she could trust. RE: JACK L. RUBY, AKA.

3. This item was taken from an airtel from Los Angeles to the Bureau and Dallas dated 3/20/56 entitled "James Breen, Miscellaneous - Information Concerning." [The airtel sets forth information relating to a contact of the Los Angeles Office on 3/18/56 by Eileen Curry, Breen's common-law wife [redacted] and had moved to Dallas.] It states that Curry indicated that she believed James Breen, who was allegedly handling narcotics, had in some fashion gotten the OK to operate through Jack Ruby of Dallas. This item is the basis for information set forth in the report of SA Manning C. Clements at Dallas dated 11/30/63 indicating that Ruby was known to be an associate [of Eileen Curry]

On February 11, 1964, Eileen Curry was arrested in Chicago for running a house of prostitution. The FBI received this information in March 1964. The Dallas FBI: "Since the trial of JACK RUBY is now in progress no action will be taken UACB to locate Curry and Breen for interview... Following references in Dallas files are identifiable with Breen: 137-440 (Potential Criminal Informant file on Eileen Curry). 31-7327.31-6047, 31-7294, 91-1185, Serials 16, 29, 52, 79, 135, 91-1184 Ser. 7." In June 1964 the Warren Commission asked the FBI to locate Eileen Curry and James Breen. The FBI interviewed Lieutenant Martin P. Cooney who was in charge of the Bureau of Special Investigations of the Cleveland Police Department. He told the FBI that Eileen Curry operated a brothel in Chicago and gave the agents the address. He said he considered Eileen Curry to be unreliable and would not place any credence in anything she said unless her statements could be corroborated from at least two other sources. Lieutenant Martin P. Cooney considered her "one of the most dangerous and unreliable woman he had ever dealt with."

On June 11, 1964, Curry told the FBI:

Approximately four weeks after their arrival in Dallas, James Breen brought JACK RUBY to the apartment house where he introduced RUBY to Curry as a friend of his. A few days after this first meeting, JACK RUBY, accompanied by a white male, who was short and dark, drove to the Curry apartment. They waited outside of the apartment until joined by James Breen, at which time they departed. Later that day James Breen told Curry that he had accompanied RUBY to an unnamed location, where he had been shown moving pictures of various border guards both Mexican and American. [RUBY had the telephone number of a Mexican Government Official in one of the notebooks taken from his home by the FBI in late November 1963]. In addition, included among the movies were films of persons described by James Breen as various narcotics agents as well as persons who were contacts on the Mexican side.

The FBI contacted the parents of James Breen and was told that he had been adopted, and the Breen family had experienced considerable difficulty with him. Mrs. Breen had not heard from him for 14 years. In July 1964, as a result of a telephone conversation between Burt Griffin and FBI Agent Hines, the Warren Commission asked the FBI to discontinue its attempt to find James Breen.

The Warren Commission never called Eileen Curry as a witness, despite the fact that the files of the FBI on RUBY listed Eileen Curry as one of his associates:

Information concerning RUBY'S association with Eileen Curry appears on page five of a nine page memorandum, undated, but block stamped, April 4, 1956, submitted by S.A. Emmet J. Murphy, captioned (deleted). The memo is a former Dallas Office form DL-3, which was used at the time for recording preliminary information to form the basis for opening a Potential Criminal Informant file. RUBY'S name appears on page five, paragraph J, under the sub-caption, 'Criminal Associates' The basis for inclusion of RUBY as an associate of the Potential Criminal Informant was apparently an airtel dated March 20, 1956, from the Los Angeles Office to the Director (deleted as of 2010). [FBI 44-1639-4518]

Ruby's name appears on page 5, paragraph J, under sub-caption "Criminal Associates" The basis for the inclusion of Ruby as an associate of the PCI was apparently an airtel dated March 20, 1956 from the Los Angeles Office to the Director captioned JAMES BREEN, was. "Ring" Michael Conner; Miscellaneous Information Concerning" in which the PCI made reference to Ruby. Curry was discontinued as a PCI in September 1956 when it was determined she had left the city. (Deleted as of 2010) Curry was the subject of Dallas airtel March 3, 1964 in the Ruby case along with former paramour, (Deleted as of 2010) James Breen.

In 1968 Breen, who had remarried and had a daughter reverted back to his old ways and was arrested for Interstate Transportation of a Motor Vehicle. [NARA RIF 124-10099-10249] James Breen and Eileen "Bunny" Curry were career criminals. They were apprehended often and became informants. What was the FBI waiting for? A nun or a rabbi to come forward with information on Ruby? Curry's story corroborated the earlier allegations that RUBY was involved in narcotics. The FBI was afraid to interview Breen.

RUBY AND JESSE CURRY

In 1956 RUBY traveled to Hot Springs, Arkansas, a center of gambling and vice in the South. RUBY was accompanied by Jesse Curry, the Chief of Police of Dallas, Texas. After the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, a friend of RUBY'S, Eli Schulman, told the FBI that "RUBY had many Dallas cops for friends - in fact he took the Chief of Police to Hot Springs Arkansas, when I don't know." [FBI 44-24016-275; C.Ray Hall WCE 3; FBI DL 44-1639; LL R: BC D-cover page]

ANGLETON AND RUBY

That year (1956) an enquiry about RUBY was made to ANGLETON:

December 6, 1956

Dear Jim:

~~J.B. Matthews called today and asked me to check a (Jack Rubenstein or Rubinstein.)~~ J.B. said that this bird was active in the twenties, and when I told him that the index didn't go back that far, he told me to forget it.

I would, however, like to check what we have, but as you know I don't have the R section of the index. Would it be too much trouble to have the original slips checked, and those on this man sent to me?

Sincerely,

Charlie

MEMORANDUM FOR: Inspector General

SUBJECT: Possible Questionable Activity

1. In 1963 a CIA agent was used in support of an FBI investigation of Jimmy Hoffa. Paragraph 4 requests your advice.
2. Background: On June 27, 1975, JIM ANGLETON telephoned Walt Elder. Dave Aaron of the Senate Select Committee staff had uncovered a staff agent in New York who had been an Agency Mafia penetration which ANGLETON said was made on Attorney General Robert Kennedy's authorization in 1963. The agent had tried to contact his case officer but was unsuccessful, and so instead contacted ANGLETON. ANGLETON had advised John Greaney, Office of General Counsel. Neither of them had thought to notify Chief, CI, or Review Staff. Greaney later indicated he thought the agent had retired. Walter Elder then called Bill Miller to alert him to the sensitivity of the issue, and especially to the possibility of mafia retribution against the agent. Miller noted this and said that Patrick Shea would be doing the questioning. Shea then called Elder and pointed out that he had talked to the agent and had not learned about his current employment with CIA until the end of their conversation. Shea placed his contact in the "non-abuse" category. Shea said he was summarizing his talk in an Eyes Only memo for Bill Miller. Shea planned to talk further with the agent.

3. I discussed the matter with John Greaney. In summary, he told me that the agent Mario Brod in February 1963 had come into contact with Herbert Itkin who had information about links between the Chicago Teamsters Union and the mafia. Brod reported this to his case officer, and in a few days Helms discussed the matter with Kennedy, because of his requirements for information on Hoffa, and with Sam Papich of the FBI. The FBI was enamored of Itkin's contacts with labor and the mafia Brod was to develop Itkin as an FBI source and turn him over to them. CIA could not turn over Brod to the FBI because he was a long time agent recruited in Italy in 1944 by JIM ANGLETON who had operational involvements for us in Haiti and other places.

In March 1963 Brod turned Itkin over to the FBI, but unfortunately kept a string on him. Itkin was a handling problem, and from time to time, would return to Brod for advice and so forth. Raymond Rocca (CI) had prepared a full book on the Brod - Itkin case but they are only mentioned in pseudo.

This book was brought to the attention of the Inspector General after a June 9, 1975, Time article named Mafiosi in connection with the CIA. Scott Breckinridge said that he had not seen the black book, or known of the Brod mafia link, prior to June 1975, even though there had been several Agency inquiries about questionable activities and one specifically for all Agency links with organized crime. I request your advice as to whether this is a questionable activity and whether we should alert the DCI, the White House, and the SSCIA. - Jerrold B. Brown.

Brod, a U.S. Army intelligence officer who took part in the invasions of North Africa and Sicily during World War II had arranged a warm welcome for American troops when they occupied Sicily.

ANGLETON COMMENTS ON BROWN ACCUSATIONS

DFC, [Donald. F. Chamberlain, Inspector General]

Jerry's quotation of me is not accurate. Back when TIME ran the allegation of a CIA tie with the assassination of some gangland types, we ran the name of the gangsters in against the files. No trace. John Greaney asked, and we told him what we found. He showed me a black three ring notebook that showed that an Agency contact knew a man named Itkin who knew the dead man. It was clear from the few lines I read there was no Agency tie and that the Itkin association was entirely independent of his Agency connections. As my interest was in the possibility tie of the Agency to the dead man, and this said there was none, I give it no further notice. When Jerry phoned me, I made a point of the limited nature of my interest, and what I found. He did not take issue with my statement of conclusion that there was no Agency tie to those gangland people. I recognize the subject but not the (illegible).

BRECKINGRIDGE COMMENTS

Routing Slip
To: Mr. J. B. Brown

Remarks: About your memo of 1 July appearing to quote me on points that I don't recognize. When TIME ran an article claiming CIA involvement in a gangland slaying in New York John Leader checked for operational contacts under the names of the people in the story – negative. When John Greaney called me I reported this to him and he brought us the book and showed us a passage naming the man who had been killed. This indicated a separate contact between those men and Itkin, but independent from any Agency association. We didn't take it beyond that and remained unaware of the association you have me commenting on. In fact, John Greaney seemed to agree with my interpretation at that time. From S. D. Breckinridge.

THE CIA INSPECTOR GENERAL

MEMORANDUM FOR: Jerrold B. Brown July 7, 1975

SUBJECT: Your Memorandum Concerning Contact of Agency Agent with Members of the Criminal Syndicate

1. Your memorandum of July 1, 1975 reports a contact of an Agency agent with a man who, in turn, had independent contacts with members of the Criminal Syndicate. There seems to be no relationship between the Agency and the criminals, except to the extent that the Agency's agent --- at the request of the Attorney General --- attempted to develop his contact for exploitation by the FBI.
2. It is not all apparent to us that this constitutes a questionable activity, particularly in view of the nature of the association as described by you. We intend no action on this matter unless you have further information that might change the above understanding Donald. F. Chamberlain, Inspector General

The Time article concerned the CIA's utilization of Russell Bufalino, James Plumeri and Salvatore Granello as spotters prior to the Bay of Pigs. The Sacramento Bee quoted a former CIA agent as saying Russell Bufalino, James Plumeri and Salvatore Granello supplied information to the CIA in 1961. The former agent said Lawrence Houston received the information through two CIA employees who were dealing with organized crime figures. [NARA 1993.08.12.15:54:36:560007] Walter Elder commented:

The Agency was involved with the mafia in efforts to try to get somewhere near Castro. It was well known to the Attorney General. This came to the attention of the Attorney General and we went over and talked to him about it. It was somewhat widely known throughout the Agency. It never came to my attention that we had anything to do with a Hoffa investigation. ANGLETON was in contact with agents all over the world. If it says he had an agent in the mafia, I wouldn't be a bit surprised. Maybe overseas. This memo was signed by Jerry Brown? Jerry was five or six times removed - he was on the Review Staff. To tie that all together, I think is drawing a long bow.

Elder was surprised that a CIA agent was used in a domestic, criminal investigation conducted by the FBI: "I don't know how Jerry Brown got that. He long since retired. We returned him to the Foreign Broadcast Information Service from whence he had come. I would take this whole thing with a grain of salt, given the author."

Walter Elder joined the CIA on September 10, 1951. In 1959 he was a senior intelligence duty officer in the office of Current Intelligence. On February 8, 1960 he became Assistant to the Director with the specific assignment as Executive Assistant to the Deputy Director who was then General Cabell. He continued in this capacity until Cabell retired in January 1962. McCone became Director in November 1961. In May 1962 he became DCI McCone's Executive Assistant until he left in April 1965. Elder was still at the CIA in 1975. Walter Elder was called before the Church Commission.

Mr. Schwarz: Were you present on an occasion on August, 1962 when Mr. McCone discussed the subject of assassination with Mr. William Harvey?

Elder: Yes I was.

Mr. Schwarz: Was that an occasion which followed the so-called Special Group (Augmented) August 10 meeting, the Lansdale memo or August 13 and the Harvey memo of August 14?

Elder: That is correct.

At this conference McCone raised the possibility of assassinating Castro. Elder was also involved in plots against Duvalier of Cuba, although he denied it saying McCone was Catholic and would go to hell if he authorized a murder. Elder was aware of the CIA Mafia assassination attempts against Castro:

Mr. Kirbow: What you are really saying is while Johnny Roselli and his assets were not, in fact, being used, they were never told to go away, we are finished, no further actions with you. They were stood down in the sense of the Agency.

Mr. Elder: To the best of my knowledge, as of April, 1961, they were stood down in terms as were all operations in terms of let us regroup and see where we go from here. They were never discharged or turned loose.

JAMES ANGLETON used New York lawyer Mario Brod who, according to a CIA memo, was a CI Staff agent in New York City from 1952 to 1971. [Memo of 5 September 1975 to DDO from CI Staff Chief George Kalaris, NARA #104-1010-10003, p. 2.] One of the sensitive CI Staff agents handled by Brod in New York was Jay Lovestone, the AFL-CIO International Affairs Chief. Brod died in 1980.

Herbert Itkin

HERBERT ITKIN: ANOTHER ANGLETON VEST POCKET OP

Herbert Itkin came from a secular Jewish family in Borough Park and attended New Utrecht High School. In 1944 he enlisted in a special Army training program for high school students and after V-J day was sent to northern Japan with a field hospital unit. Later he said he was a paratrooper attached to Army intelligence. When he returned home he invested in a Luncheonette which failed as a result of his father's suicide attempt. Herbert subsequently attended law school and joined Delsen, Levin and Gordon where he married Diana Kane, a daughter of a man on the fringes of Republican politics in Pennsylvania and the granddaughter of a Civil War general. Diana was his entre into the world of intelligence. Itkin told the New York Times,

The CIA was just putting people in positions where they might be useful later. Sometimes the CIA wants people in places to spread false rumors and the law firm had clients like the Indonesians and others. My recruitment was carried out at a very high level. My father-in-law, E. Kent Kane was a friend of Harold Stassen, one time Republican Governor of Minnesota and former President of the University of Pennsylvania. In July 1954 Stassen introduced me to then CIA Director Allen Dulles. Mr. Dulles interest in me stemmed from information on domestic Communism I gave to Joe McCarthy in the early 1950's. Later I was asserting myself into the underworld and I used every means I could think of to do it.

The CIA stated:

1. Mr. Herbert Itkin, a lawyer in New York City is known to have passed certain sensitive information to an asset of GOLIATH from 1961 on. Itkin claims he has been associated with GOLIATH some 1954, when he was recruited by one Philip Harbin at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia where he also met Allen Dulles.
2. GOLIATH has no information regarding Philip Harbin but is of the opinion that Harbin might be Philip Clark Horton, a former OSS employee and associate of Mr. Dulles.
3. It is therefore requested that the New York Field Office interview Horton using Goliath credentials and ask whether or not he recruited Herbert Itkin in 1954 or later or did he at any time handle or act as a cutout for Itkin.

The results of the Horton interview were never released. Stassen told the CIA he met Itkin in 1961 or 1962 and never introduced him to Dulles. Itkin told his story to CIA:

Itkin said that when he was first admitted to the bar in 1953 he was employed by the firm of Delson, Levin & Gordon in New York City (now Delson and Gordon). As I understand it, one partner, Levin, particularly had close ties with Alger Hiss, Cyrus Eaton and others of a similar nature. Apparently, at that time the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization was in the process of formation, and these people were taking the position that Indonesia and Burma should stay out of SEATO, as by their nature they would benefit more by association with socialistic countries such as Russia and China. Mr. Itkin said when he became aware of their attempts in this direction, he began reporting to Senator Joseph McCarthy. This went on for some time, but Itkin states that, when he had a conversation with Senator Joe McCarthy in the spring of 1954, the Senator said he was getting into trouble and since he had passed Itkin's reports to CIA, who thought they were very valuable, the Senator felt Itkin should report directly to the Agency. Itkin said a meeting was set up for him with Allen Dulles, the DCI, at the Bellevue Stratford in Philadelphia, probably in July 1954, but it might have been either June or August. He said Mr. Dulles was rather noncommittal but said that if Itkin wanted to continue furnishing information arrangement would be made for a CIA contact. Itkin said he did want to continue and a person known to him a Philip Harbin was put in touch with him as his CIA contact. He said he was never given anyway of contacting Harbin, but Harbin would call him from time to time and ask what there was to report. Itkin said nothing was given in writing and so far as he knew Harbin just made notes of their conversations. At this time, through his law firm contacts, Itkin said he was able to report on matters affecting U Nu, then the Premier of Burma. Ali Sastroamidjojo, Indonesian Foreign Minister; and the owner or editor of the New Dehli Times. Itkin had personal contacts with Luis Gutierrez, Consul General of El Salvador. After some reports gained from Gutierrez, Itkin said Harbin met Gutierrez in New Orleans. Itkin also had information from a Rosa Morales, who had Guatemalan contacts. Itkin said the only money he received from Harbin was $5,000, which was supposed to be repayable and for which he gave a receipt, believed sometime in 1957. He said the money was not repaid.

Itkin's story of the meeting with Mario Brod in 1961 tallies fairly closely with Brod's story, although there are some discrepancies. He said Brod was represented to him as a former Colonel in the OSS who had intelligence connections. Accordingly he asked Harbin what his relation to Brod should be, and after some time had passed, Harbin instructed him to stay close to Brod and everyone would be happy. From then on his contact was Brod and apparently Harbin dropped out of the picture. Harbin mentioned three specific episodes during his contact with Brod. The first was a plan to assassinate President Duvalier of Haiti. He said that the proposal was that the Mafia would carry out the assassination in return for a commitment from Luis des Joies and others that the gangsters behind the assassination would get gambling concession in Haiti. Itkin states the FBI was informed about this plan and insisted that it be called off. Secondly, Itkin says that in 1965 he was able to steal some Spanish papers which told about Spanish plans for Gibraltar and their efforts to oust the British. He said he submitted these through Brod and understood they were considered very important. He said the FBI had a copy. Thirdly Itkin said that on encouragement from Brod he paid $20,000 to a Haitian group, including Luis des Joies. I asked him whether this was Agency money and he said no that it was money he had he was never repaid.

Note how the results of the interview with Horton are deleted from this next document. It is obvious from the word "however" that he denied knowing Itkin. Nonetheless Angleton's men in CI continue to push the line that it was him. Why? "Harbin" was JAMES ANGLETON, or was one of his subordinates.

November 22, 1968
MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Security
SUBJECT: Herbert Itkin

1. Per your direction, I discussed this case with John Mertz, CI Staff in an attempt to find out whether or not Philip Harbin was a name that they had used. Mertz in turn asked Mr. Rocca and Mr. Paul Hartman. No one has identified the name; however, Mr. Rocca believes that this individual could have been Horton #4680. A review of Horton's file reflects that he left Agency employment in 1948 to resume work as a reporter on The Reporter.

2. Horton had been of interest covertly in October of 1955 for use on OKOPERA. However, CIOA's interest was cancelled.

3. It is of interest to note, however, that informants state that Horton worked directly for Dulles during the OSS days, and his relationship with Mr. Dulles has been described as more than an employer / employee one. The possibility exists, therefore that Mr. Dulles utilized Horton in in 1954 as a "cut-out" between himself and Itkin. Ward K. Greene SA / EPD.

In 1967, while out on bail for refusing to return escrow money Herbert Itkin was indicted along with Tony "Ducks" Corrallo for bribing New York City's Waterworks Commissioner, Stanley Marcus. Itkin was indicted in a similar scheme the following year. In March 1968 it was revealed that Itkin was a snitch working for CIA and FBI. He was immediately placed under protective custody. Mr. Itkin was also registered as a foreign agent for the Provisional Government of the Republic of Haiti in San Juan, Puerto Rico. In an agreement filed with the registration and dated May 1963 Itkin was to be paid an annual retainer of 50K for a period of two years – "immediately due and owing as soon as the said Provisional Government becomes the de facto or de jure Government of the Republic of Haiti and Haitian Territory." Itkin met with an unidentified public relations man during this time and discussed the possibility of obtaining arms and developing a clandestine organization to help overthrow the Duvalier regime. Itkin also had contacts in the Dominican Republic and made 20 visits there in 1965 shortly after a civil war broke out. Itkin described his trips to Santo Domingo as "missions." After the Haitian caper reached a dead end Itkin was involved in other missions on behalf of JAMES ANGELTON that involved the theft of precious metals including platinum, from the innards of United States missiles in Europe; the smuggling of gold from Egypt as part of a scheme to profit from the devaluation of the British Pound; a diamond smuggling operation in West Africa. In the fall of 1966 he turned up in London shortly after George Blake, a British atomic spy, had mysteriously escaped from HRM Wormwood Scrubs Prison and had fled behind the iron curtain.

When the Feds would not give Itkin's two step children protection he threatened to escape custody and "go back to the boys" – the Cosa Nostra, he explained – who would play him any amount of money not to testify. He told an FBI Agent, "I am going to have Hoffa's attorney reopen the Hoffa case because Hoffa is in jail now because of information I gave Bill about jury tampering." On February 3, 1968 Itkin threatened Brod. Later that year NYC DA Frank Hogan indicted Itkin. Itkin would later bring down Tammany Hall boss Carmine DeSapio. Itkin was allowed to keep much of the money he received in bribes and kickbacks.

SCHWARTZ

In January 1968 Robert Schwartz, a Long Island lawyer, was charged with plotting to murder Herbert. Schwartz had contracted an ex-con named Robert H. Roden to do the hit. Schwartz was working for Tony "Ducks" Corallo's partner, John Dioguardi. In 1970 Itkin was indicted on the 1968 charges that Hogan had brought against that had previously been transferred to Federal Court and dismissed at the request of U.S. Attorney Henry Morgenthau. Itkin stated that there was a Mafia mole in Hogan's office and he was probably right. In 1971 Itkin brought down Broadway Maintenance for bribery.

On November 27, 1967, ANGLETON, William Harvey and John Rosselli had a meeting at Washington, D.C.'s, Madison Hotel. William Harvey volunteered that he did not notice any Bureau surveillance at this meeting. [CIA MFR 12.11.67] By 1968 Harvey established a law office in Washington, D.C. On December 11, 1968, James P. O'Connell Deputy Director / PT Office of Security met with Rosselli. William Harvey died in Indianapolis, Indiana, on June 9, 1976, following a heart attack.

JOSEPH 'CHUBBY' MALONE

Joseph 'Chubby' Malone, who operated Duffy's Tavern, a known hangout for prostitutes, advised the FBI that he met RUBY at the Ellis Park Race Track in Kentucky in 1957 or 1958. RUBY was with the late Lieutenant Ellis Joseph, "who had been a member of the Louisville Police Department from about 1934 until permitted to resign in 1952 as outgrowth of charges alleging theft... Lieutenant Ellis Joseph told him that RUBY was a syndicate man out of Chicago." [FBI 44-1639-1086] "While at Ellis Park, Ellis Joseph introduced him to a JACK RUBY whom he recalled is the same individual whose photograph has recently appeared in newspaper publicity in connection with the shooting of LEE HARVEY OSWALD. Joseph told him that RUBY was 'a syndicate man out of Chicago.' Joseph Malone did not know where RUBY was living at that time. Lt. Ellis Joseph appeared to be well acquainted with RUBY, and both remained together during the races at the track on that particular day. Joseph Malone advised that Ellis Joseph told him that RUBY was a 'good friend' and had some 'hot' horses, that is, tips on winners, allegedly on the horse that were being bet by the 'syndicate' on that date. Joseph Malone advised that RUBY had a number of winners that date. RUBY was accompanied by an unrecalled white male, age 45 to 50, of Jewish extraction. This individual remained with RUBY and Ellis Joseph on that occasion. Joseph Malone has had no contact with RUBY since that time. [The following was crossed out] Joseph Malone noted that from 1956 to 1958 he was putting down large wagers with Louisville bookmakers on behalf of Courtney Snider, a Jeffersonville, Indiana, bookmaker. Courtney Snider was then alleged to have been handling 'syndicate' business interests from Evansville, Indiana." [NARA #124-10099-10290]

MEYER LANSKY, RUBY AND THE COLONIAL INN

When the war ended, Meyer Lansky opened a gambling house within easy reach of Miami. In 1946, The Colonial Inn opened its doors in Hallandale, Florida. The Sheriff of Hallandale, Walter Clark, operated a numbers racket from his office and controlled slot machines throughout Broward County. His deputies protected Meyer Lansky's holdings. Frank Erickson, Joe Adonis, CARLOS MARCELLO, SANTO TRAFFICANTE, Sr., Frank Costello all had points in the Colonial Inn. The profits from the Colonial Inn were invested in the Flamingo Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, then under construction. Meyer Lansky and "Bugsy" Siegel supervised the construction of the Flamingo. The Colonial Inn closed in 1948, but with the cooperation of corrupt law enforcement officials, other establishments like it flourished.

SENATOR ESTES KEFAUVER DRIVES THE MOB TO CUBA

In 1950 the Flamingo Hotel and the Colonial Inn, along with the names Meyer and Jake Lansky recurred with regularity throughout the Kefauver Hearings. Meyer Lansky admitted having known Frank Costello, Joe Adonis, Frank Erickson, the Fishetti Brothers, Vincent Alo, Anthony Accardo, Jack Dragna, Johnny Rosselli, Doc Stacher and "Trigger-Mike" Coppola. In February 1951 Meyer Lansky was questioned again. Joe Adonis was deported, and Frank Erickson was jailed. [Testimony of Meyer Lansky - Kefauver Hearings] The televised hearings brought so much "heat" on the mob Meyer Lansky could no longer operate with immunity within the United States. The syndicate returned to Cuba where the Authentic Party of Carlos Prio Socarras was in power. Meyer Lansky wanted to see Carlos Prio Socarras overthrown and Batista reinstalled. Meyer Lansky had worked with Fulgencio Batista in the early 1930's. He encouraged Fulgencio Batista to run in absentia for the Cuban Senate. [Tad Szulc, The Cuban Invasion, Ballantine Books 1962] As stated in, Batista overthrew Prio on March 10, 1952. Meyer Lansky, however, could not take immediate advantage of the coup. He was in prison for one year. When he was released in 1953 Meyer Lansky invested heavily in Cuba. In 1954, Meyer Lansky moved to Havana, where he became the top syndicate figure. SANTOS TRAFFICANTE Jr. became second in command. It was easy for Meyer Lansky to persuade Fulgencio Batista to legalize gambling. In 1955 Fulgencio Batista changed the gambling laws to permit a legal casino in any nightclub or hotel worth one million dollars or more. The Cuban Minister of Labor ruled that all pit bosses, stickmen, and dealers, in casinos were skilled technicians who qualified for admission under two year visas. The Cuban Government offered in one way or another to put up a good part of the construction costs for any new casinos. For the $17 million Riviera government-controlled banks loaned $6 million. Meyer Lansky supervised the construction of the Riviera. Within four years the syndicate constructed $50 million worth of gambling casinos; the Riviera - worth $17 million; the Cleveland-mob controlled Hotel Nacional - worth $7 million; the Tropicana - worth $6 million; Capri - a property of the mafia group headed by Charlie "the Blade" Tourine - estimated worth - $5 million; Seville Biltmore - worth $4 million, Deauville - worth $2.5 million and the San Souci - worth $1 million. [Life 3.10.58; NYT 1.12.59]

Meyer Lansky and Fulgencio Batista turned Cuba into the center of gambling, narcotics and vice in the Western Hemisphere. The take was so high that Albert Anastasia, who was the "Chairman of the Board" of Murder Incorporated, tried to take-over Meyer Lansky's empire. TRAFFICANTE hit Albert Anastasia's under-boss, Frank Costello, then hit Albert Anastasia, as he lay in a barber-chair, getting a shave. New York District Attorney Frank S. Hogan named TRAFFICANTE as a suspect in the killing and announced that he wanted to question Meyer Lansky. [NY World Telegram, 1.9.59, "An Anastasia Grab at Cuba Dice Triggered Fate," Paul Meskil; Time 3.2.59]

Meyer Lansky and SANTOS TRAFFICANTE Jr., out of reach of New York District Attorney Frank S. Hogan in Cuba, prospered. The mob's major problem was that Cuba was a banana republic. This meant constant, periodic, changes of government. In order to hedge its bets some elements of the syndicate supported Fidel Castro.

MACK BLANEY JOHNSON RUBY AND THE COLONIAL INN

According to Mack Blaney Johnson JACK RUBY owned points in Lansky's Colonial Inn. Mack Blaney Johnson (born 1900) informed the FBI of this connection on November 29, 1963: "Blaney Mack Johnson (protect identity), interviewed by S.A. Daniel D. Doyle, claims to have owned interest in Playbrook Club, Miami, Florida, in early 1950's, during which time JACK RUBY held an interest in the Colonial Inn..." The Miami City Directory for 1949 listed a Playbrook Club. It was not listed for any other year. The Colonial Inn shut down on February 12, 1948, by an injunction by the Broward Court. Miami Office FBI files did not reflect that it ever reopened. Johnson was mistaken about the time he ran the Playbrook Club so he might have been mistaken about the year that Ruby owned points in the Colonial Inn.

WALT ZASSLER

In 1975 this researcher located a former Hallandale policeman, Walt Zassler, who had worked for Sheriff Walter Clark. He was familiar with the Colonial Inn operation. He was asked if Jack RUBY or JACK RUBENSTEIN was involved. Walt Zassler stated:

I do remember the name. There was Jack so and so Rubystein and Rubystine...I do remember the name. I don't know if it was the same JACK RUBY, but there was a JACK RUBY involved. I met this guy a long time ago, about 1950. I was indicted by a Grand Jury that came about as a result of the Kefauver Investigation and I went to Alaska.

RUBY AND ARMS SMUGGLING TO CUBA

Mack Blaney Johnson also told the FBI that in the early 1950's he was an independent airplane pilot engaged in flights of cargo from Miami to Havana Cuba:

In this connection he allegedly learned of illegal flights of cargo from Miami to Havana Cuba for the Castro organization in Cuba. JACK RUBY, then known as JACK RUBENSTEIN, was active in arranging these flights. He was part owner of two airplanes used for these purposes. Mack Blaney Johnson subsequently left Miami and purchased substantial share in Havana gaming house, business name unknown, in which one Carlos Prio was principal owner. Carlos Prio, Johnson explains, was within favor of former Cuban leader Batista, but was instrumental in financing and managing accumulation of weapons by pro-Castro forces. Johnson advises one Donald Edward Browder was associated with RUBY in arms smuggling operation. Johnson names one Joe Marris, Marris Aircraft, as having contracted with RUBY to make flights to Havana. Leslie Lewis, the former Police Chief of Hialeah, Florida, now possibly pistol instructor, Dade County Florida Sheriff's Department, possessed, according to Johnson, a detailed knowledge of persons involved in flight of weapons to Cuba and has specific knowledge of RUBY participation. [FBI 44-24016-471,76; WCE 3063; FBI 44-24016-75; FBI Report 11.29.63 and 11.30.63 Atlanta; FBI 105-3193; WCE 3063; FBI 44-24016-624; WCD 856; FBI 44-1639-4835]

Johnson stated that: "Carlos Prio, Johnson explains, was within favor of former Cuban leader Batista, but was instrumental in financing and managing accumulation of weapons by pro-Castro forces." This was never true. Johnson was confused on another point.

On November 30, 1963, Mack Blaney Johnson was re-contacted by the FBI and shown a photograph of RUBY. Mack Blaney Johnson said he was convinced beyond a doubt the JACK RUBENSTEIN he knew was identical to JACK RUBY. He added that Clifton T. Bowes Jr., a pilot for National Airlines, was familiar with JACK RUBENSTEIN. The FBI claimed a problem with Mack Blaney Johnson's story was that "while there were flights of weapons to Cuba in the early 1950's, noted Castro organization was not active until about 1956." Fidel Castro tried to storm the Moncada on July 26, 1953, and his organization was active before this.

LESLIE LEWIS

The FBI questioned Leslie Lewis on November 30, 1963. He told the Bureau he was Chief of Hialeah Police Department from May 1947 to September 1947. He never heard of JACK RUBY and had no knowledge whatsoever of persons flying weapons to Cuba. He stated he did not know Edward Browder or Joe Marris.

JOSEPH MARRS

Joe Marris told the FBI on November 30, 1963,

...he was a pilot for Eastern Airlines during World War II. Immediately after the war he engaged in selling airplanes and airplane parts in Miami, Florida. He never flew for hire or transported any goods by air to Cuba or otherwise. He had never heard of JACK RUBY and as far as he knows he never saw him prior to RUBY'S appearance on TV last weekend. Concerning Donald Edward Browder, he knew him as Ed Browder, and ex-RCAF Ferry Command pilot who came to Miami about 1945. He described Browder as an individual he shunned due to being a shady promotor and blowhard who was all conversation and no money. Browder spoke of plans to set up an air transport service to South American countries, but to Marrs' knowledge did not succeed in doing so. Marrs has read of Browder's alleged escapades of smuggling, but has no knowledge of them. [FBI 44-24016-594]

Investigation in Miami developed that Joe Marrs was a former Eastern Airlines pilot until 1943, when he was dismissed because of ulcers.

CLIFTON T. BOWES

When the FBI questioned Clifton T. Bowes on December 1, 1963, he said he has been National Airlines pilot for the past 20 years. Says he never heard of JACK RUBY or JACK RUBENSTEIN and certain he has never met him. States never heard of RUBY until recent TV publicity and has no information concerning anyone sending arms to Cuba...Does not know Edward Browder though says he formerly knew a Mack Blaney Johnson as an independent pilot in Miami. Never closely acquainted with Mack Blaney Johnson, but understood Mack Blaney Johnson was ill and hospitalized for some unknown reason several years ago. Last saw Johnson some three years ago. Describes him as rational but highly imaginative, a story teller, and apt to identify himself with unusual situations. He says Johnson particularly imaginative when drinking.

[FBI 44-24016-594] Clifton T. Bowes was questioned by this interviewer in 1975. He said Johnson "was an alcoholic who has since died. He died some five or six years ago. Don't know what he died of" On November 5, 2003 CLIFTON T. BOWES JR., 83, in Lilburn, Georgia died.

The Dallas SAC determined on December 10, 1963, that the "Investigation appears to indicate information furnished by Johnson is a fabrication in its entirety. No further inquiries in same connection are intended." [FBI 44-1639-1769 to Director] On April 3, 1964, J. Lee Rankin asked that ...the allegations of Atlanta informant be fully resolved and reported to the Warren Commission. On April 10, 1964, the SAC Dallas stated that "in view of information in Miami telexs which negated information from Atlanta informant, information in Miami tels has not been submitted in report form to date, and accordingly, President's Commission, while receiving referenced Atlanta report, has not received additional investigation...Suggest Atlanta inform Johnson his identity can no longer be concealed...

The FBI informed Mack Blaney Johnson of this on April 11, 1963. Mack Blaney Johnson told the FBI that Leslie Lewis, Joe Marrs and Clifton T. Bowes were lying due to their having participated in illegal activities. [FBI 44-1639-4835] Mack Blaney Johnson "re-affirmed the truthfulness and accuracy of information heretofore furnished and expressed belief that Lewis, Marrs and Bowes, to serve their own interests, lied concerning their knowledge of, or participation in, weapons smuggling together with JACK RUBENSTEIN'S involvement." The Dallas FBI requested the Atlanta FBI check Johnson, Lewis, Marrs and Bowes criminal and credit records. No derogatory information was uncovered. [FBI 44-1639-4836] Mack Blaney Johnson had told the FBI he had no objection to his name being disclosed for official purposes. On April 13, 1964, the FBI re-interviewed Mack Blaney Johnson.

After detailed interrogation Johnson finally admitted that he could be mistaken about individual he knew as JACK RUBENSTEIN being identical with Subject JACK RUBY. He said individual he knew as JACK RUBENSTEIN described as 5'9" to 5'10", 160 lbs, black hair with full head of hair, hairline not receding, middle 40's, athletic build, was a golfer and resided in the Racket Club in Miami. Johnson also stated Bob Vollmar, of the Records Bureau, City of Miami Police Department and Bill Gould, the owner of the Playbrook Club, are individuals that should know JACK RUBENSTEIN, and were also familiar with the alleged smuggling of guns to Cuba in the early 1950's. Johnson was asked to give a more detailed time of his residence in Miami and his acquaintanceship with JACK RUBENSTEIN, and he stated this was about the time of the Kefauver Investigations. He stated it could have been 1952, or 1953, but had no way of verifying it. Records, Atlanta, Police Department, reflect no record for Mack Blaney Johnson. Credit Bureau records file established August 1961. No derogatory information. Resided in Miami 17 years prior to 1961. Johnson advised that until he suffered a heart attack several years ago he was a pilot, and had a part interest in the Playbrook Club in Miami in the early 1950's. Johnson, also as a pilot, made numerous flights of cargo from Miami to Havana, but stated he never participated in the smuggling of arms. He stated that he had participated in night club activity in Florida, and some of his activities would tend to incriminate him, but he would not go into detail. However, he indicated Playbrook Club had a gambling casino which was closed as a result of the Kefauver investigations, and he also indicated the Colonial Inn was a place where counterfeit money was handled...His wife was present during part of interview and stated she believed he was mistaken concerning the identity of JACK RUBENSTEIN, but reluctant to admit it. However Johnson converses in a rational manner and does not appear to be unstable...Johnson was shown a photograph of Eddie Browder and stated Browder not identical with the Donald Edward Browder he knew in Florida. [FBI 44-1639-4840]

Johnson finally got the message that the FBI was not going to leave him alone until he retracted his statements. On April 13, 1964, the FBI questioned Robert Vollmar. He said he knew Johnson for many years and he understood Johnson has become an increasingly heavy drinker. He denied having known RUBY etc. and said "that he feels if Johnson has attributed such knowledge to him then Johnson must be 'off the beam.'"

On April 23, 1964, the FBI re-interviewed Mack Blaney Johnson:

During previous interview Johnson picked face photograph of JACK RUBY out of two other pictures as person he knew in Florida by the name of JACK RUBENSTEIN. On April 23, 1964, group of photographs containing full length and face photographs of RUBY were displayed to Johnson. Johnson picked out several photographs as people he thought he had seen before. He picked out both photographs of RUBY as someone he thought he had seen before. He was asked to identify the person, but he could not do so. When finally it was pointed out to him that these were photographs of JACK RUBY he became quite nervous and stated that he possibly did not recognize them because he always saw JACK RUBENSTEIN dressed in a suit and the pictures of RUBY show him dressed in casual clothing...however, although he could not go on the witness stand and state that he was sure they were identical he believes they could be. Johnson also stated that he has never suffered from emotional illness or never been treated for the same. Concerning Browder as W/M, 33-35, (10 to 12 years ago) good looking, 5'9", 155 lbs, black hair, full head of hair, sometimes wore mustache, no glasses, neat dresser, carried German Lugar pistol...Johnson stated Browder was called Don and Eddie and Don Eduardo, but was not of Latin descent. He had no known occupation, but believed Johnson to be smuggler. Johnson stated he saw him a dozen times; several times at Eric Johnson Enterprises, a machine shop located in Miami. He stated Johnson is now in Nassau, Bahamas, and would definitely know Browder, but is not sure if he would know JACK RUBENSTEIN...Johnson does not recall where he first met Rubinstein, but saw him about half dozen times, twice at the Colonial Inn, and once at Sunny Airport. Johnson never saw Browder and JACK RUBENSTEIN together, but heard both mention the other, and believed they were acquainted. JACK RUBENSTEIN was not married. He was not a pilot and did his alleged gun running by boat...In view of Johnson's inability to identify a photograph of RUBY as JACK RUBENSTEIN, and his nervous state when it was pointed out to him his lack of identification, Atlanta feels that Johnson originally furnished this information, not being sure of it and is now reluctant to back away from his original statements. He was given every opportunity to do so, but still maintains he may be correct in his identification. Atlanta recommends that this phase of the investigation be discontinued in as much as all other investigation has failed to back up any of Johnson's story... If Dallas, however, feels that this must be pursued, Atlanta recommended interviewing Browder and Eric Johnson. [FBI 44-1639-4963]

Mack Blaney Johnson furnished an accurate description of Edward Browder. The FBI could not intimidate him for very long, and in the end he stuck to his identification of JACK RUBY as JACK RUBENSTEIN.

EDWARD J. BROWDER

On April 23, 1964, the FBI located Edward J. Browder and interviewed him. Edward Browder denied knowing RUBY, Mack Blaney Johnson, Clifton T. Bowes or Leslie Lewis. He said he had heard of Joe Marrs, but never met him. He also said he did not know a Donald Edward Browder. Donald Edward Browder was known as "Don" Edward Browder among the Cubans he worked with - "Don" as in "Mafia Don," or "Don" meaning "Sir" in Spanish. Johnson thought his name was Donald Edward Browder.

The FBI closed the investigation into Mack Blaney Johnson's charges. On April 30, 1963, the FBI discussed the Mack Blaney Johnson matter with the CIA: "FBI Agent said that this charge regarding RUBY sounded like a lot of nonsense, that the FBI has received many allegations of this sort, regarding RUBY, which have proved to be without foundation. I replied that since the FBI used an informant symbol for this information we have no way of determining the veracity of the source." [CIA 674-297]

WHO WAS EDWARD BROWDER?

Edward J. Browder was born on June 22, 1917, in Amarillo, Texas. The father of Edward J. Browder was Secretary-Treasurer of the Santa Fe Railroad. In March 1942 Edward Browder enlisted in the Army. In November 1942 he was an applicant SO Detroit, Michigan. In February 1943 he was an applicant at the CAA in Washington, D.C. In April 1943 he was a pilot in the SOS Army. In 1944 he worked with British Security Co-Ordination in New York where he was a civilian pilot trainee. HEMMING told this researcher: "He was hired for Latin American operations by William Stevenson, the famous 'Man Called Intrepid.' Hoover allowed the Brits to operate in Latin America." In 1944 Edward Browder became a volunteer pilot for the Royal Air Force.

In 1947 Edward Browder stole a cache of machine guns from an Army base located at Augusta, Georgia. A Federal Warrant was signed that charged Edward Browder with theft of government property and ordered his arrest. After Edward Browder was taken into custody on April 24, 1947, he told the authorities that he was involved in a conspiracy to overthrow President Romulo Betancourt of Venezuela. In December 1947, a Federal Grand Jury in Tulsa, Oklahoma, indicted Browder for unlawfully having exported a P-38 airplane from Tulsa to Havana, Cuba. On February 9, 1948, Browder was charged with conspiracy to smuggle arms from Florida to Cuba, arms which were destined for a revolution in the Dominican Republic against General Raphael Trujillo. A Cuban Government official was named as the instigator of the plot. In March 1948, he was charged with organizing and expedition against a friendly power, from Miami, Florida.

The judges in Miami and Tulsa gave Edward Browder probation, but the judge in Georgia gave him 18 months. Edward Browder served one year in prison and was released in September 1949. Edward Browder returned to Miami, then began to travel around America, getting arrested in 1951 in Los Angeles for bad checks, Denver in 1952 (Inv Fug), and in Tulsa in 1953 for bad checks. In 1954 Edward Browder was involved in PB SUCCESS and was not arrested in the United States that year. The son of Edward Browder, Joseph Browder, was contacted in July 1993. Joseph Browder:

He was one of the people who provided training and some operational support for the air part of the operation. My dad got shot down in that operation. And when the surviving members of the Jacobo Arbenz Government fled, they took some prisoners with them. My dad was in an unofficial prison that the Mexican Government let the Guatemalan exiles run in Mexico. My father was one of the people who worked for the Agency who wound up doing as much free lancing as he was doing Agency work. He spent many years in prison.

Edward Browder returned to Miami in 1957 and worked with the 26th of July Movement. He was arrested three times that year.

THE STOLEN CANADIAN BONDS

In 1959 Edward Browder was arrested for possession of $136,000 worth of stolen securities. The FBI was informed by Gene Kligmann that Paul Stevens had attempted to sell his stolen bonds. The FBI contacted Paul Stevens who agreed to set Browder up. The FBI reported:

At approximately 11:05 a.m., March 2, 1959, Stevens and Browder arrived at Mr. Ford's office on the second floor of the First Federal Savings and Loan Bank in downtown Miami. Behind Ford's desk at the time was SA John P. Lenihan, who posed as Mr. Ford. Also in Ford's office at this time was SA Charles Edmiston, who posed as Stevens' contact, Tony, and SA Robert James Dwyer, who posed as Tony's principal, Mr. Martinez...During the course of the negotiations, SA Edmiston asked Browder if his Canadian bonds were counterfeit, to which Browder replied, 'No, they sure aren't.' SA Edmiston stated if the Canadian bonds were hot they believed they could probably get rid of them through their banking contacts in Cuba. To his, Browder replied, 'Uh, huh,' At one point in the negotiations Paul Stevens stated, referring to Browder's bonds, 'already got his bonds, whether they're hot, cold or indifferent, I don't know, I presume they are warm -- I figure they're a little on the warm side.' Browder did not reply to this comment, and in the course of the negotiations, admit the bonds were stolen.

Browder was placed under arrest. The FBI found the telephone number off Morris Ernst in Browder's wallet. The law partner of Morris Ernst represented Frank Costello. [Thomas, E. The Man to See 1991 p92] The FBI also examined Browder's brief case and found more bonds along with a "cocked and load nine millimeter automatic." The FBI found Browder's passport and it indicated that he visited Italy and Zurich, Switzerland, on numerous occasions. The FBI reported:

En route to the FBI office, Browder made the statement he hoped there would be no publicity on his arrest because he pointed out the newspapers consider him a very colorful character and usually embellish his bouts with the law. He stated if he was immediately freed of this charge, the bonds were returned to him, and no publicity resulted from his arrest, he would be willing to cooperate to recover additional bonds. Special Agent Lenihan asked Browder how many additional bonds he thought he might be able to recover and his reply was that he had 80% to 85% chance of recovering $1,770,000.00 worth of Canadian bonds. Special Agent Lenihan queried Browder as to how he might draw out these additional bonds and Browder stated he would have to think about it for a while.

Browder told the FBI that he did not know that the bonds were 'hot.' Browder declined to state where he got the bonds. When Browder was shown photographs of the men suspected of having stolen the Canadian bonds Browder "examined these photographs rather flippantly and often made comments about several of them, ridiculing their facial characteristics, but would not admit being acquainted with them." When the FBI searched Browder's home on March 2, 1959, the FBI found a "contract between Edward Browder, Miami, Florida, President of the Caribbean Development Corporation, and Fidel Castro of the Revolutionary Force of the 26th of July, in which Browder agreed to deliver a 'certain quantity of material,' the material was not named, 'on the high seas,' amounting in value to $40,000."

Edward Browder claimed that the bonds did not come from the national crime syndicate. According to Edward Browder, the July 26th Movement had given him the stolen securities. The available evidence contradicted this. Edward Browder's associate, Paul Hickman, told the FBI that Vito Genovese, a nationally known hoodlum, had advised Edward Browder to "shut-up" about the origin of the bonds. Edward Browder told his business partner, Jesse Vickers, that "Cleveland mob people" were connected with the securities: "Browder mentioned that he was associated with some 'Cleveland people' who told him they did not want him to go to jail on this charge. Browder told Vickers he had told the 'Cleveland people' that Wilber [Browder's bail bondman] was pressing him for bond money and soon thereafter, the 'Cleveland people,' according to Browder, contacted Wilber to tell him not to bother Browder anymore regarding this matter." Jesse Vickers was arrested with Efen Pichardo in 1953.

EFREN PICHARDO

In 1954 Efren Pichardo was indicted in Miami, Florida, and charged with conspiracy to ship 30 M-1 rifles to Cuba on behalf of Carlos Prio Soccarras. The charges were dropped after Efren Pichardo was indicted in New York, along with his boss, Carlos Prio Soccarras. Efren Pichardo's co-defendants in this case included Marcos Diaz Lanz and Jesse Vickers. Carlos Prio Soccarras had been indicted in December 1953 for the same offense. Contacted in April 1983, Efren Pichardo was in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where he worked as a bailiff:

I used to know Carlos Prio, yes. Did I know Edward Browder? I think I did, but it's been such a long time ago. Yeah, I knew FRANK STURGIS, I think I was in the revolution with him. Okay, what do you want to know, sir? Who are you?

SAM MANNARINO

During Edward Browder's trial he was asked if he knew national crime syndicate member Sam Mannarino. Edward Browder:

I was introduced to him by one of Carlos Prio's followers, on the assumption that Mr. Mannarino was going to supply some money for arms for some of the Cubans involved in fighting against Batista. I understood that this money came from sources that had gambling concessions in Cuba or slot machines in Cuba that he was trying to protect in the event that Fidel Castro overthrew Batista.

JOSE ALEMAN

Jose Aleman was a witness against Edward Browder. He was asked if he had any knowledge of an arms deal where Edward Browder had been paid in stocks and bonds by the 26th of July Movement. Jose Aleman, who met Edward Browder in 1951 when both men were involved in smuggling arms to Fidel Castro, answered that he did not.

In April 1960 Edward Browder was convicted on two counts of having received and concealed stolen bonds. He received a three year sentence from Judge Emmett Choate. Judge Choate gave Edward Browder a week to "tie up loose ends" before sending him to prison. Edward Browder disappeared on December 20, 1961. The FBI began a fugitive investigation in the course of which they subpoenaed Edward Browder's toll records. The FBI discovered Edward Browder was in close contact with Dominick Bartone. In late 1959 Dominick Bartone and Edward Browder formed the Aero Ordinance Corporation, which allegedly dealt in government surplus. When the FBI questioned Dominick Bartone at his office in the Pan American Bank Building, Miami, he stated he did not know where Browder might be located, but he added if he did know where Browder might be located he would not advise any law enforcement agency of Browder's whereabouts...Bartone pointed out that Browder had sued him in Federal Court in Miami in connection with money Bartone stated he owed Browder...Bartone pointed out he thought it was a very stupid thing for Browder to jump bond in this case since he only had a three year sentence to serve." [FBI Miami MM 87-8756 4.4.62 - Lenihan] Later in 1962 Edward Browder turned himself in and began serving his sentence.

A State Department airgram dated May 2, 1967, to the American Embassy, Port-au-Prince, Haiti, reported that on November 24, 1964, Edward Browder leased a military aircraft in the name of a fictitious company, flew the plane to Port-au-Prince, and left it there. The airgram reported that Edward Browder cashed a $24,000 check signed by Clemard Joseph Charles.

THE HSCA INTERVIEWS BROWDER

Edward Browder was interviewed by the HSCA in January 1978 at the Federal Penitentiary at MacNeill Island, Washington, where he was serving a 25-year sentence for securities violations. The HSCA reported:

During the interview Browder discussed a series of gun running and smuggling operations he was involved in during the 1960's that were intended to result in eventual overthrow, or assassination, of Fidel Castro. Browder said that his work included assistance by the CIA in the form of money and operations. Browder said that during that period he did purchase at least two B-25 planes to be used in 'smuggling operations' that would be used to assist the gun running and raids against Cuba. Browder said he could not recall where he bought the planes. However he said a man named Pedro Diaz Lanz flew one of the planes to him.

George DeMohrenschildt was linked to Clemard Joseph Charles, who was linked to Edward Browder. Edward Browder was linked with Pedro Diaz Lanz, who was linked to STURGIS and HUNT.

BROWDER AND STURGIS

In 1978 I asked STURGIS if he knew Edward Browder. He answered he was "not sure." Joseph Browder told a reporter for the Miami News that his father had worked for STURGIS. When subpoenaed in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN Joseph Browder denied having linked the men. Joe Browder:

My dad was paroled in the early 1990's and arrested shortly thereafter when he landed a plane in one of the Mexican border towns. He was accused of flying drugs from one part of Mexico to another - grass. They found microscopic marijuana traces. He was tortured by the Mexican Police, and he signed a confession. They stuck a 45 autoloader next to his ear and fired it and blew out one of his ear drums. The powder burn caused a cancer. He still has impressions on his legs from the cattle prods. He was in prison for a year, then exchanged back here. Our government modified his sentence under the sentencing guidelines to some outrageous number of years. He is out of prison now and living in Colorado. There were all sorts of people offering him deals to spring him from Mexico, but he would not talk about his associates. He is not someone who talks. He's still alive.

This researcher asked Joe Browder to put him in touch with his father. He contacted his father:

I spoke with dad. He had already read your book. He really enjoyed it. He's not giving you an interview. There's still too many people around who care. It's still not ancient history. It's not the CIA he is worried about...

The CIA's Office of Security files of Edward Browder were "inadvertently destroyed in 1979 after the moratorium was lifted."

ASSORTED HOODS WHO MAY HAVE KNOWN RUBY "RUBIN"

On November 25, 1963, (deleted as of 2010) advised

....during the later 1940's he knew of a racketeer named 'Rubin' around Daytona Beach, Florida, but knew nothing concerning his activities. Pictures of RUBY appear similar to Rubin as he knew him then. Informant suggested the following people should have complete knowledge of Rubin:

Mattie Tracy, Daytona, Florida, a bookie, gambler and prostitute procurer.

Johnnie Whalen, Daytona. If Whalen is still living, he is probably a night club operator.

M.T. Browning, Daytona, Police Department.

Tom Johnson, former Chief of Police South Daytona Police Department.

Informant advised above people, particularly Whalen and Tracy, were buddies of Batista of Cuba when Batista in this country. Informant also suggested Pitt Cole, Deland Fla, who operated gambling devices in Daytona-s largest night club and "Kitchin" former Chief Deputy Sheriff, Deland, Fla might also be familiar. [FBI Atlanta 44-1559-2]

NORMAN ROTHMAN

Norman "Rough-house" Rothman was born December 26, 1914, in the Bronx, New York and died of a heart attack on October 13, 1985, (201-272262; OS #354 878). He was the son of Rumanian immigrants, both U.S. citizens. On December 26, 1936, he married Ethel Hurwitz. On September 29, 1941, Norman Rothman was an applicant for Naval Intelligence. On March 14, 1945, joined the United States Army. Norman Rothman was arrested in 1948 in Miami Beach on a charge of bookmaking. In 1951 Norman Rothman came to the attention of the Senator Estes Kefauver and was arrested several times on gambling violations. In December 1952 Rothman was charged with operating a gambling house in the Hotel Albion in Miami Beach, Florida. In 1952 he moved to Cuba and managed the San Souci Casino with SANTO TRAFFICANTE Jr. In 1956 Norman Rothman was charged with Interstate Transportation of Gambling devices when the FBI intercepted a shipment of his slot machines on their way to Cuba. The charges were dropped after the machines were destroyed. Rothman told U.S. Attorney Guilmartin that "he had no intention whatsoever of violating Federal law and that it was his thought that he was permitted to send the equipment out of the country if he so desires."

SAM MANNERINO

Sam Mannerino was involved with this shipment. Norman Rothman had become the slot machine king of Havana and was busily dividing up the rest of Cuba among follow gangsters like Mannarino. The FBI reported:

...Norman Rothman is subject of Miami file 92-1870. Rothman was born in New York City on December 26, 1914 and was active in gambling in the Cuban San Souci Nightclub and reportedly controlled all slot machines in Cuba except for those in Havana, prior to the Castro regime. Rothman's gambling activities in Cuba reportedly were backed by the Mannacine brothers from New Kensington, Pennsylvania, and Patsy Erra, Miami Beach, Florida, all LCN figures. Rothman was convicted in 1960 with others attempting to smuggle guns stolen from a National Guard Armory in Ohio to Cuba, and received a five-year prison term and $10,000 fine. Rothman is reportedly an associate of Santo Trafficante, Jr. LCN figure from Tampa, Florida. Rothman is reportedly a representative of Patsy Erra and the gambling and shylocking in the the Miami area. Rothman has traveled extensively of late to Las Vegas, New York and New Jersey and has been reported in the past as a courier of funds for LCN figures.

Norman Rothman became the slot-king machine king of Cuba by going into partnership with the brother-in-law of Fulgencio Batista. The CIA reported "During the Batista regime Rothman was supervisor of slot machines in Camaguey province under the national supervisor, Alberto Ardura Moya, who was also one of the owners of the Tropicana nightclub in Havana." By 1956 Norman Rothman had a controlling interest in the Tropicana Casino. In 1958, Alberto Ardura awarded Rothman the concession to operate slot machines in Oriente and Camaguey Provinces in Cuba. Adura told the FBI that in early 1959 he fled Cuba and came to Florida. He had about 300,000 Cuban pesos of his own, and had access to an aggregate of eight million Cuban pesos belonging to Mrs. Fulgencio Batista. Adura was an associate of General Roberto Fernandez Miranda, who was the brother-in-law of Batista. The CIA 201 file on Norman Rothman reflected that he first came to CIA attention in 1958 when he was residing in Dallas, Texas.

THE CANADIAN BOND HEIST

In 1958 Norman Rothman spent considerable time in the United States. On May 3, 1958, $13.5 million in registered bonds, bearer bonds, cash and jewelry was stolen from Brockville Trust and Savings Company, Brockville, Ontario, Canada, by Rene Martin and four companions. Beside the open vault police discovered Rene Martin's bankbook. When Martin was arrested police found a key on his person that opened a lock with the rest of the registered bonds taken in the heist. Martin did not reveal the names of his accomplices and was sentenced to twelve years in prison. Montreal investigators focused on Rene Martin's associate, Giuseppe (Pepe) Cotroni, eastern Canadian rackets figure. When narcotics agents seized Cotroni, they found $10,000 worth of the bonds.

ROTHMAN'S PLAN TO AID 26TH OF JULY MOVEMENT

In August 1958, Nick Jerome, an associate of Norman Rothman, contacted Jose Aleman "late at night and said that it was urgent for Aleman to come with Jerome. Aleman accompanied Jerome in a car to Rothman's residence in Surfside, Florida. Rothman had several hundred Cuban pesos in various denominations. Rothman stated that these pesos were 'phonies.' He proposed that Cuba be flooded with a quantity of these pesos in order to destroy the Cuban economy and hasten the downfall of the Batista Government. Aleman stated that these Cuban pesos looked authentic to him, and that some appeared to be well-worn pesos. Rothman claimed that some of these pesos had been aged to make them look authentic. Rothman said that he would provide millions of such pesos to the 26th of July Movement in return for a small percentage. Aleman, who was not in the 26th of July Movement which was headed by Fidel Castro, told Rothman he would contact appropriate revolutionary leaders to see if they were interested in Rothman's proposition. Aleman sent word to Jose Lanusa, Chief of the 26th of July Revolutionary Movement in Miami, who rejected to proposal. No one else was interested."

JOSE ANTONIO LANUSA

Jose Antonio Lanusa was an associate of Edward Browder. [FBI Miami 87-8756 2.23.62 George E. Davis] This was the same Lanusa who has been mucking about with the DRE in previous nodules.

WEAPONS FOR CASTRO

On October 14, 1958, about 317 weapons were stolen from a National Guard Armory at Canton, Ohio. On November 4, 1958, a plane load of guns piloted by Stuart Sutor of Hialeah, Florida, was tracked on radar by the Border Patrol flying from Pennsylvania to West Virginia where the soldier-of-fortune was arrested. The weapons stolen in Ohio were recovered.

What had happened behind the scenes was this: Controni contacted Gabriel and Samuel Mannarino, racket figures in New Kensington, Pennsylvania. Gabriel and Samuel Mannarino contacted Norman Rothman who rented a plane for $6,000 to run the guns, and contacted Joseph Merola, a close associate of Carlos Prio. Merola's job was to fly to Pittsburgh to contact Gabriel and Samuel Mannarino's boys about shipping guns to Cuba.

Rothman lined up William W. Rabin to handle the finances. Rabin set up a Swiss Bank account and posted the stolen securities as collateral for a loan. [Miami Herald 3.13.60] Others involved included Austin Young, who was in contact with Rabin and Rothman, and Paul Bert Hickman, an associate of Edward Browder.

JOE MEROLA

Joseph Raymond Merola (201-257804 born October 9, 1925), was a gun-running pilot linked to Edward Browder. Joseph Merola served in the Marines from 1941 to 1945. In the late 1950's he ran arms to Fidel Castro. The CIA described him as a "fast dealer with connections at all levels in many foreign countries. His information is usually very good. He was Batista's personal pilot and was right next to Fidel Castro at the time of the take over." In March 1959 Joseph Merola was involved in an invasion of Panama from Cuba. In May 1959 he was involved in a plot to counterfeit Cuban currency. In February 1961 he was restricted to the Miami area following his conviction on charges of theft of arms from a National Guard Armory. On February 15, 1964, a cleared police contact advised the CIA that three men who had been caught stealing dynamite claimed it was stolen on behalf of Kubarker Joseph R. Merola. The CIA declared that Joseph Merola was not an agent, only a informant: "In an occasional contact of our overt office in Miami since 1961." In November 1972 Joseph Merola began serving a one year sentence for petty larceny in New York City. In November 1974 Joseph Merola was indicted by a Los Angeles County Grand Jury for stock manipulation and fraud. In December 1974 PHILLIPS sent a telex to an unnamed component about Joseph Merola:

1. Regarding Joseph Raymond Merola [201-257804] U.S. citizen please inform DEA the following: Joseph Raymond Merola, an occasional contact of our overt office in Miami since 1961, periodically provides that office with foreign positive intelligence information. It is suggested that the FBI be contacted for additional information.
2. DEA Headquarters has informed BKHERALD June 1974 that Merola was of operational interest. They requested traces and stated he reportedly worked for BKHERALD in late 1950's. We replied that Mr. Merola had never worked for BKHERALD although we were aware that he had made such claims on number of previous instances.

3. Headquarters relaying for Station use only 20664, January 11, 1974 and Director 502254, January 17, 1974, which reports derogatory information on Merola.

4. Merola being processed in the ISR as DEA source. Will advise when registration completed.

5. Please advise local DEA Orlando Batista Viera's occupation as detective is included in category whose operational use is prohibited throughout the intelligence community and ISR policy precludes his registration. However, emphasize to DEA that this fact not intended to prohibit their use of the Subject. Batista will be recorded as contact of DEA in BKHERALD files in case any other U.S. Government agency expresses operational interest. DEA Headquarters is being informed of above.

6. The following may be passed to DEA. Batista was born July 10, 1933, Havana, Cuba. Was in Cuban Navy. Arrived in U.S. in early 1960's as exile. Subject was in prison several months in 1959 in Cuba accused of being member of Batista's Armed Forces and having idea opposed to Castro revolution, subsequently released. Subject of operational interest to BKHERALD in 1963 to 1964; interest dropped in 1964 and Subject terminated without prejudice. Ask (Deleted) to refer to FBI for more info on Subject.

7. FYI only: POA granted 1963 for Subject's use in PM boat operations; however, POA canceled when he claimed he was unable satisfactorily treat his seasickness. In 1964 Subject interviewed by FBI in Los Angeles, California, regarding group of Cubans in Miami involved in drug operations. Subject revealed his BKHERALD connections to FBI.

8. File: 200-11-11/19; 201-740127; 201-257804.

Joseph Merola reported to Herbert J. Miller of the Criminal Division of the Justice Department.

ROTHMAN' S INDICTMENT

On January 2, 1959, Norman Rothman flew to Havana. On March 27, 1959, Rothman was charged with violating the National Firearms Act. On April 9, 1959, Rothman was arrested for violation of the National Stolen Property Act in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and on June 30, 1959, Rabin, Controni, Rene Robert, Sam Marrantino and Norman Rothman were indicted in United States District Court, Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division for arms smuggling and stolen securities charges. [59CR374 Luis Kutner, Counsel] In July 1959 Rothman was charged with interstate transportation of stolen property and conspiracy. S.A. George Davis of the FBI observed Rothman when he left for Mexico from Miami on December 10, 1959, in the company of Richardo Madan Rivas, a gun-smuggler. In late 1959 Norman Rothman helped Fulgencio Batista establish headquarters at the Biltmore Terrace Hotel on Miami Beach. Norman Rothman managed the Biltmore Terrace. His associates included Rolando Masferrer and Orlando Piedra. At this time Norman Rothman supplied anti-Castro groups with stolen arms.

Rothman was convicted in February 1960 with others attempting to smuggle guns stolen from a National Guard Armory in Ohio to Cuba, and received a five year prison term and $10,000 fine. [FBI HO 165-689]

Sam Mannarino was interviewed by S.A. John S. Portella, who had been acquainted with Sam Mannarino for the past ten years:

Mannarino predicted that 30 days after Merola is released from Federal Prison, he will be murdered. Mannarino stated that he wanted the record to show that he himself was not going to kill Merola and probably would have nothing to do with his murder. Merola's testifying as a Government witness, however, would raise serious doubts and concern in the minds of several people that Merola has been involved with over them over the past five years. It would be one of those persons who probably committed some crime with Merola, according to Mannarino, who would wonder when Merola was going to testify against them. It would therefore be one of these former associates who would probably kill him. Herbert J. Miller, Jr., Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, U.S. Department of Justice by memorandum dated April 26, 1962, referred to Joseph Merola and advised that on April 13, 1962, a petition for executive clemency, together with his recommendation that petition be granted, was forwarded to pardon attorney Reed Cozart. [FBI CG 87-11127]

ROTHMAN AND STURGIS

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD April 25, 1975

SUBJECT: ROTHMAN, Norman

4. In September 1960, Norman Rothman, free on a $50,000 bond from a conviction of theft and transportation of firearms, approached FRANK STURGIS, SF #353 459, and offered to obtain from Cuba two MIG aircraft. Norman Rothman claimed he could induce the defection of a Czech pilot and a Cuban who would fly the MIGs to the U.S. At the time, it was believed that Rothman was either offering assistance to the U.S. Government for a profit motive, or perhaps in an effort to reduce, or alleviate, his sentences under federal convictions. It was not clear from file information what, if any, further contact with Rothman took place regarding the proposal outlined above." [CIA MFR 4.25.75]

5. A memorandum dated April 30, 1961, reflected that a WH Officer met with Rothman in June 1961 in the office of the Deputy Attorney General. The purpose of the meeting was to evaluate Subject's claims to operational assets inside Cuba and elsewhere in Latin America. Among Rothman's claims were the following:

(1) That he has assets that would allow him to destroy Cuban arms dumps in Mexico. (2) That he could offer and operational base in the Yucatan peninsula.

(3) That he had personnel and capabilities to conduct sabotage inside Cuba.

(4) That he had a basic plan for the assassination of Fidel Castro.

Norman Rothman expressed resentment against federal charges against him for gun-running activities and stated he was being prosecuted for the same activities which were being conducted by the CIA.

6. The meeting between the Western Hemisphere Division Officer and Rothman had been apparently set up by a political figure in Democratic Party from North Carolina and apparently was a thinly disguised effort to track Rothman's services to the CIA in return for dropping federal charges against Rothman. The WH officer was not satisfied as to the capabilities claimed by Rothman and recommended no further contact with Rothman along these lines. The 201-file on Subject contained no indication as to whether Rothman was contacted again, or utilized in any way subsequent to the June 1961 conversation.

7. A form dated January 17, 1975, categorizing the Subject's 201 file, reflected Rothman's status with the CIA as 'former witting collaborator (relationship terminated). [CIA F81-03510653]

8. Office of Security indices reflect a file in the name of one Roberto Ramino Fernandez Miranda (SF# 353 706) which indicated that Subject was identical to Rothman's associate in the hotel in Miami Beach.

10. It is obvious from the foregoing that information contained in file sources pertaining to Subject and Fernandez was fragmentary and incomplete. File sources have reflected, however, that Rothman and Fernandez were involved in business together in the Miami area and that both were involved to some degree in anti-Castro activities of a revolutionary nature.

The FBI reported:

Rothman this afternoon [June 26, 1961] furnished the following information re Latin Matters. Having operated San Souci gambling casino and other interests in Cuba for many years prior to the Castro regime, Rothman expressed deep concern about Communist takeover in Cuba and advances made by them in other Latin American countries. Stated On, Norman Rothman told the FBI that if the United States would give him a free hand, he would be in a position to procure Fidel Castro's liquidation and his top Communist echelon in Cuba and to engage in similar activity in other Latin American countries threatened by Communism. Claimed to be personally acquainted with Lombardo Toledano, Mexican pro-Communist labor leader and former Mexican President Lazaro Cardenas, who is regarded as pro-Soviet and anti-US. Claimed he could capitalize on these acquaintances to obtain valuable information. Said has great many Cuban friends both inside and outside of Cuba and that many frequent his bar at Bel Aire hotel, Miami Beach, that some were killed or captured during the April 17 Liberation Attempt and he wanted to avenge them. When asked why he had not previously offered his cooperation concerning this matter, Rothman replied that the Communist situation had never been so serious before. When queried re his motive, Rothman frankly stated he could not perform these services for the U.S. if he was serving time in jail, referring to his Pittsburgh conviction on case involving conspiracy to transport stolen guns interstate commerce stated that even though the Supreme Court denied his appeal he still has two other legal recourses. Re NIXON – Rogers matter. Rothman said that in 1951 last payment was stopped on a couple of checks accepted at the Sans Souci gambling casino totaling a few thousand dollars, drawn on a California bank, as he recalls listed maker as L. B. Smith. Said that Senator Robert Taft, Tom Dewey and other prominent Republican opponents of NIXON obtained wide publicity regarding these checks, claiming that NIXON has actually lost this money at Rothman's gambling casino in Havana, that checks were drawn on NIXON campaign fund. Stated columnist Drew Pearson published considerable data regarding this. To avoid embarrassing NIXON Rothman went to Sao Paulo, Brazil, until publicity subsided. Sometime later a Congressman named Johnson from California thanked Rothman for not testifying against NIXON. About February 1960 after his Pittsburgh conviction on conspiracy ITSP other defendant was released on bond but Rothman was detained briefly by USA Teitlebaum who told him that Attorney General Rogers wanted to talk to Rothman in Washington, D.C. Claimed that USA did not explain purpose of conference but Rothman presumed it related to NIXON matter described above as a Washington lobbyist told Rothman about this same time that Rogers was trying to locate some papers Rothman had. Rothman said he declined to go to Washington to see Rogers unless all the other defendants in the Pittsburgh case could accompany him, which was not acceptable to Rogers. Rothman several times emphasized his desire to cooperate with US Government was limited strictly to Latin American and Communist matters but he would never inform on any of his hoodlum associates. Miami investigation regarding Cuban activities reflects Rothman's bar at Bel Aire Hotel is popular hangout for many Cuban exiles and that he is acquainted with many and has befriended some. Rothman expressed criticism of CIA and State Department but indicated friendly attitude toward FBI. It is felt that Rothman has no unusual potential as PSI or CI at this time. [FBI 97-4030-18, 20]

In the course of investigating Rothman, the FBI spoke with Pedro Diaz Lanz who told the S.A. George E. Davis "that he never heard of any transaction involving the use, purchase or sale of any Canadian bonds for any such purpose, and that the July 26th Revolutionary Movement was never involved in any arms purchases involving large sums of money such as $100,000. or more. Most of the purchases were of a minor nature." [FBI Miami 87-8756 2.2.62] The FBI questioned Tony Varona about Rothman on February 24, 1962. Varona said he had heard of him but had never met him. [FBI Miami 87-8756 2.23.62 George E. Davis]

The FBI also questioned Rufo Lopez Fresquet on February 24, 1962. During the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN in Miami, FRANK STURGIS was asked if he knew Norman Rothman. STURGIS: "I have come across him on the Beach with my Cuban friends. Just 'Hello Goodbye, Have a drink" and then leave. That's it." Rothman went to prison in Atlanta, Georgia, on August 28, 1961. In 1973 Rothman pleaded guilty to income tax evasion in the Southern District of Florida for which he was sentenced to two years and 18 months. In December 1976, a Chicago newspaper reported that Joe Merola had received more than $50,000 in 1975 alone, for furnishing information to the Illinois Bureau of Investigation. In 1975 Rothman's conviction in the Canadian bond case was vacated on the basis of the fact that Rothman was not informed that Merola was an informant for the FBI and CIA. [Miami Herald 2.20.77]

The bond heist was touched off when the Canadian branch of the mafia received a hurry up order from the Caribbean for arms for the 26th of July Movement. When Fidel Castro began guerilla warfare against Fulgencio Batista, Norman Rothman and some hoods from Pennsylvania felt they needed some kind of insurance against an unfriendly revolution. Despite their close association with Batista, they smuggled arms to Fidel Castro. Norman Rothman, Mannarino and Controni were closely associated with Edward Browder, who was linked to JACK RUBY. Sam Mannarino's bonds came from the same Canadian bank as Edward Browder's. Mannarino, Rothman and Edward Browder's wife, Lilyan Martin Browder, had the same dentist, Dr. I. Fredrick Stang.

THE ACTIVITIES OF JACK "RUBENSTEIN"

Leon Hubert wrote:

The probability that RUBY was involved in illegal activities in Cuba prior to 1959...is supported by the statement of a Delta Airlines employee in New Orleans who recalled that about seven or eight years ago, RUBY flew from New Orleans to Havana. This airline employee stated that he overheard RUBY telephone his club in Dallas and state that his trip to Cuba was being paid for by someone else, and that no one should be advised of his whereabouts. [Memo Hubert & Griffen to WC 3.20.64]

State Department documents revealed that in 1958 "JACK RUBENSTEIN wrote a letter requesting permission to negotiate the purchase of firearms and ammunition from in an Italian firm."

BROWDER AND ITALIAN ARMS DEALS

The FBI reported that "Elum Addie Cuadell, wire service operator, Miami, Florida, and business contact of Ferrara, said he introduced Ferrera to Browder December 31, 1958, in connection with an arms deal in Italy." [FBI Miami 87-8756] In January 1959 Edward Browder traveled to Italy to negotiate the purchase of 5,000 Thompson submachine guns. This surfaced during an FBI interview with Paul Bert Hickman.

Paul Hickman stated Edward Browder had told him about an arms deal in Italy...Edward Browder was in contact with someone in the United States who was trying to buy these guns and sell them to one of the Caribbean leaders or ex-leaders. Paul Hickman stated he heard some Americans went to the Dominican Republic in early January 1959, and made a deal where a combining of General Raphael Trujillo; Anastasio Somoza; Juan Perone exiled former leader of Argentina, and Fulgencio Batista, exiled former leader of Cuba, were to put up a $1,000,000 slush fund to buy weapons to conduct a war against some of their enemies in the Caribbean. Though Edward Browder had not told him who wanted the arms, his theory is that either this group wanted to buy them, or Marcos Jimenez Perez, exiled former leader of Venezuela, now living in Miami Beach, wanted to purchase them...Paul Hickman pointed out that during the row between Batista and Castro in Cuba, Edward Browder was allegedly trading with both of them, both allegedly found out about it...For that reason he does not believe Edward Browder dares go to Cuba...Paul Hickman related that about midnight on March 5, 1959, he got a phone call from Edward Browder, who appeared to be somewhat excited. Edward Browder told him to get dressed and come over to Edward Browder's house right away, as it was very important...They related to him that at about 11:00 p.m., March 5, 1959, a man visited their house unannounced. He stated he was sent by 'Genovese' from New York City and was told tell the Browders they should shut up about the origin of the bonds, and to tell everyone else concerned to shut up about the bonds, less they meet with foul play from the 'syndicate.' [FBI 87-8756 - 3.26.59 Miami interview with Hickman]

In 1972 Hickman received a 10 year sentence for defrauding a car dealer out of a new Lincoln automobile by giving him a bad check and causing him to travel in interstate commerce from Alabama to Georgia in violation of federal law.

"JACK RUBENSTEIN" was mentioned in a 1959 Department of the Army Report concerning U.S. Arms Dealers in Scandinavia: "A JACK RUBENSTEIN is listed as a representative of the Saunders Company in the U. S." [CIA 85-31; 843-361; 1215-442; 1211-44OA; CIA Disposition Index p283, 288, 156; WC C0294bsc; DOS Memo for Chayes from OS 11.24.63 #0178; ltr. from R.A. Ericson Dep.Dir.Pol-Mil. Affairs 4.14.77; Dept. of Army H. 10.29.76, 12.3.76 from USAIA] In 1976 this researcher attempted to obtain copies of the Office of Munitions Control and Army Intelligence Reports under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act. The Army conducted a thorough search of its files and checked all reports in its possession on "JACK RUBY" and "JACK RUBENSTEIN." No report that dealt with arms trafficking was uncovered. The State Department responded that "while the existence of the letter may have been known in 1963, we are now unable to locate it." It suggested the letter might be in the inactive files at the Office of Munitions Control but demanded a $2000 fee for "a search involving 15,000 documents."

There was reason to believe that the CIA was aware of "JACK RUBENSTEIN" and his activities. In its letter to the Warren Commission regarding "Information concerning JACK RUBY (aka JACK RUBENSTEIN)" the CIA stated: "Examination of CIA records failed to produce information on JACK RUBY or his activities." The CIA had information that RUBY used the alias of "Abe Rubenstein."

JAMES E. BEAIRD

In 1976 James E. Beard told the FBI that in 1957, he became acquainted with many people in the area of Kemah, Texas, including one JACK RUBY, who was at that time

"involved in the business of selling guns to Fidel Castro in Cuba...Jack stored guns and ammunition in a two-story house between the waterfront and railroad tracks in Kemah. He would take the guns to Cuba mostly on weekends. Jack had a boat about 50 feet long, surplus, a military landing craft or LST." [FBI Phoenix 89-42, 6.7.76 at Apache Junction, Arizona] In 1977 this researcher called James E. Beard and asked him how he became acquainted with RUBY:

Playing poker. What I can't understand - this seems a little out of line. Well there was enough people like myself who know all about this. The doggone thing is that he was so open with it. Why nobody came forward with this information beats me. RUBY never talked about Castro. The boat would get loaded and RUBY would leave by car. It was a well known fact the boat was headed to Cuba.

OKLAHOMA STATE CRIME BUREAU

In 1958 a former member of the Oklahoma State Crime Bureau linked an "Abe Rubenstein,"owner of the Carousel Club in Dallas, to a carload of guns and ammunition destined for Cuba. [FBI El Paso 44-274, 4.14.64; WCDS56]

JAMES WOODARD
MARY THOMPSON

In June 1958, RUBY sent arms to Cuba via Islamorada, in the Florida Keys. He was accompanied by a sleazy looking blonde.

The FBI reported:

On December 2, 1963, Mrs. Mary Thompson, 1155 Dupont, Kalamazoo, Michigan, advised S.A. V. Lemar Curran that in May 1958 she and her daughter Dolores, and son-in-law Richard Rhodes, visited her brother and sister-in-law, James and Mary Lou Woodard, at Islamorada, Florida. While there they met JACK and Isabel (LNU) who lived in a small motel in Islamorada. JACK appeared to be hiding from something and she saw him only at night. Dolores and her husband spent the first night in a room at JACK and Isabell's motel. James Woodard reportedly was a member of the Dallas, Texas, Police Department for a short time, about 1954, and James Woodard had known JACK in Dallas. Mary Lou Woodard told Mary Thompson that JACK'S real name was Leon and he was not married to Isabell. They had been in Islamorada (illegible) JACK was originally from Chicago, and reportedly killed a couple of men. JACK ran a drinking place in Dallas and there had been a knifing in his place. She said JACK had a trunk full of guns and inferred that JACK was going to supply them to the Cubans. Mrs. Thompson stayed at Islamorada one week only and had not seen JACK or Isabell since. Mrs. Thompson observed Subject's photograph on television and she believes Subject is identical with the JACK (LNU) she observed in Islamorada, Florida in 1958...

DOLORES THOMPSON

The FBI reported:

On December 2, 1963, Dolores Thompson, whose marriage was subsequently annulled, advised that the Associated Press photograph in the November 25, 1963, issue of The Kalamazoo Gazette, resembles JACK (LNU) who had a small motel in Islamorada, Florida, in June 1, 1958, except JACK had a full head of dark brown hair and was darkly complected. She was told that JACK and Isabell had been there two weeks, and that James Woodard had met JACK in Texas. JACK was from Chicago and she was led to believe that he was part of the 'Syndicate.' James Woodard said JACK had a lot of guns but Woodard was drunk at the time. [FBI 44-24016-308]

JACK drove a grey car with Texas plates.

THE ROUSES

The FBI interviewed Willa Mae Rouse, the sister of James Woodard. She told the Bureau she saw her brother on November 25, 1963, at her home in Knoxville. He said he had a job at a zinc mine in Mascot, Tennessee. Willa Mae, and her husband Ed,

...both state that James Woodard not always truthful and that his sister, Mary Thompson, Kalamazoo, Michigan, also prone to make up stories. Both state in their opinion Mary Thompson insane. Willa Mae states James watched television with her on November 24 last, date Subject shot OSWALD. States she asked James if he had ever met RUBY or OSWALD since she knew James had previously lived in Dallas and states James said he did not know either one. Mr. and Mrs. Rouse both of opinion James would have readily admitted knowing RUBY or OSWALD if he had ever met either of them.

WHO WAS JAMES WOODARD?

The FBI reported:

Records of Knox County So, Knoxville, reflect James Woodard arrested October 14, 1963, on basis of three Grand Larceny warrants issued Dade County, Florida, that date. Appearance bond of James Woodard executed October 16, 1963, by local bonding company with extradition hearing set for December 10, 1963, next. Records Knox County Attorney General reflect Tennessee Governor has signed extradition papers for James Woodard and he will be returned to Dade County, Florida, if located.

There was also a warrant out for the arrest of James Woodard in Zapata, Texas.

CARL C. WOODARD

The FBI interviewed the brother of James Woodard, Carl C. Woodard, who said he has not seen his brother since October 1953, when he stole his car and machine tools.

Carl stated James visited Carl's home previously, in his absence during July 1962, accompanied by a young pre-15 female. They had in their possession a late model white Cadillac convertible...Carl's children located a gun in the glove compartment of the Cadillac during this visit...Carl pointed out that he has a strong enmity for his brother and would attack James on sight. He also advised that he never knew James to reside in Dallas, Texas, or has he ever heard that James had worked as a policeman. He stated James came to Michigan in 1953 from San Antonio, Texas.

The FBI interviewed Paul A. Woodard, another of James Woodard's brothers. He said he had not seen James Woodard since 1948 except for one night.

The FBI interviewed the father-in-law of James Woodard, Leonard Shives. Leonard Shives said that his son received telephone calls from James Woodard on a regular basis and he was certain James Woodard would call in the next few days. [FBI 44-1639-1350]

W.R. SIMONS

The FBI located Mrs. W.R. Simons, the former wife of James Woodard. She stated that ...she and her former husband, were at Islamorada, Florida, for approximately two months during the Summer of 1958. She was introduced by James to a JACK (LNU) and Isabell (LNU). She said she did not specifically recall where she was introduced to JACK and Isabell, or where they were residing in Islamorada. She said she did not recall any information while at Islamorada from James or from anyone else concerning any guns, connections with Cubans, or that JACK owned a bar in Dallas, Texas. She could only recall that JACK reportedly originally came from Chicago. Mrs. Simons was shown a picture of JACK RUBY and she could not identify JACK RUBY as being identical with JACK (LNU) met at Islamorada...Mrs. Simons said she had no indication or information that she has ever met JACK RUBY.

Mrs. W.R. Simons said it was unlikely that her former husband would contact her, because there was a local warrant out for him for failure to pay child support. [WCE 3096 p118]

Mary Thompson was exhaustively re-interviewed. The FBI admitted:

Thompson is employed as a housewife and during interview did not give appearance of making up a story, or in need of psychiatric treatment. Information furnished by Mary Thompson was corroborated in most details by Dolores Thompson, who is employed as manager of the (illegible), a health club."

The Thompsons had no criminal record with the Kalamazoo, Police Department. [FBI-44-24016-581]

James Woodard and his exploits were well known to Wallace Shanley. Information on James Woodard in his FBI file appeared to have been referred by U.S. Customs. The FBI: "Knoxville files reflect James Woodard, FBI #255317, is Subject of Miami file 52-1944, and has in past been known to carry a .38 caliber revolver and has violent temper when drinking. Refer." Another document read:

Files of the Knoxville Office reflect James Woodard, FBI # 255 317 A had been the subject of previous FBI investigation. An official of the U.S. Customs, Miami, Florida, stated Woodard should be considered armed and dangerous as he carries a weapon and has a violent temper with drinking. When interviewed at Knoxville, September 27, 1963, and September 30, 1963, James Woodard stated he had in the past participated in a Cuban invasion prior to the Castro regime, that he participated in the Bay of Pigs invasion and furnished ammunition and dynamite to both Castro and Cuban exile forces. James Woodard's statements were at the time rambling and were not always coherent. Woodard again interviewed Knoxville, October 8, 1963, 3,150 pounds of Atlas dynamite abandoned at his residence South Dade County, Florida, which dynamite was stolen from Chastine Construction Company, Terrytown, Florida. Woodard claimed above amount of dynamite stored at his residence by Cubans to be used by Cuban exile forces against the Castro regime. [FBI Knoxville 44-383 12.4.63; WCE 3065; FBI 44-24016-1019]

The FBI did not interview James Woodard. On January 23, 1964, an order went out from the SAC, Dallas, to "discontinue active investigation to locate James Woodard...it is believed extensive investigation to locate James Woodard is not warranted." [FBI 44-24016-1019] The FBI was afraid to interview Woodard. He was an unpredictable drunk who might have said that he knew JACK RUBY. Then where would that have left the FBI? With three witnesses to RUBY'S arms smuggling. HEMMING told this researcher: "We worked with Woodard's brother on parachute jumps."

ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION: STURGIS / RUBY

The Rockefeller Commission admitted that STURGIS and RUBY moved in the same circles:

An example of the testimony relating to an alleged relationship between the CIA and JACK RUBY consisted of a statement that FRANK STURGIS was engaged in a series of revolutionary activities among Cuban exiles in the United States in the 1950's and the 1960's, and that the CIA also sponsored and organized anti-Castro activities among Cuban exiles in the United States in 1959 and the early 1960's. In addition, it was alleged that FRANK STURGIS was at one time Fidel Castro's Director of Games of Chance in Havana, and that in August or September of 1959, JACK RUBY made a trip to Havana at the invitation of a friend who had interests in Cuban gambling establishments. Moreover, both STURGIS and RUBY were alleged to have connections with underground figures who had interests in the United States and Cuba. From this group of allegations, the witnesses inferred that STURGIS and RUBY could have met and known each other - although no actual evidence was presented to show that RUBY or STURGIS ever met each other. Even if the individual items contained in the foregoing recitations were assumed to be true, it was concluded that the inferences drawn must be considered farfetched speculation insofar as they purport to show a connection between the CIA and either OSWALD or RUBY. Even in the absence of denials by living persons [STURGIS] that such connections existed, no weight could be assigned to such testimony. Moreover, STURGIS was never a CIA employee.

HUNT hinted that STURGIS might have known RUBY:

Did the mafia order RUBY to kill Oswald? Again I think it is possible because otherwise we are floundering around trying to figure out a motive for RUBY to go ahead and do what he did. At that time I don't think he knew he had terminal cancer which would have been something that would have passed across his mental scanning. Has it ever been proved that he was under orders from the mob? He ran sort of a tawdry nightclub and he had to get the financial backing for that from somewhere and he hired these dancers and so forth. He needed money and there is no evidence that he ever earned much money which to start his nightclub. It seems to me that what I know what I presume of the Mafia he would have been a very weak reed for them. He was comparable in a way to FRANK STURGIS; he was a willing ally in almost anything. If somebody told JACK to this he would do it, if somebody told FRANK to do this he would do it. So that they were equal forces. I don't think that they ever knew each other but I think they were of a type and it has always been alleged that STURGIS was once in the mafia and that he associated with people who were of that nature. Many theories circle around Sturgis's possible connection with the Mafia. Frank was not a man without a history. He had owned and managed clubs in Virginia Beach, ran guns to Cuba, volunteered for a couple of Central American revolutions, from which he extracted himself without injury, and acted as a petty thief for the Mafia before he eventually straightened out to some extent. Some journalists have connected him to Meyer Lansky and Santos Trafficante, which is entirely possible. He was an amazing individual who could and did pop up in the strangest places when you least expected him.

There's only one problem with that scenario [the Mafia ordered Ruby to kill Oswald scenario]. No one has ever talked. With all the top-level Mafia figures—capos, hit men, godfathers—who have been arrested and flipped or sent to jail and written books from within the witness protection program, wouldn't someone have used the JFK knowledge as a get-out-of-jail-free card or a ticket to fame and fortune? Even Deep Throat has finally confessed! The Mafia failed to kill Castro and probably wouldn't have been very adept at a complicated scenario like the Dealey Plaza operation, either. Most hits they accomplished were either brutal assaults in a controlled environment, such as a neighborhood street or a restaurant, using massive firepower, or the quick kidnapping and disappearance of a rival. Mafia hit men were not adept sharpshooters using high-power rifles. Also, they probably would have preferred doing the hit in a town where they had more knowledge of the terrain, such as New York or Chicago.

LOUIS J. McWILLIE

Thanks, in part, to the efforts of gangsters like RUBY, Fidel Castro was soon able to out-gun Fulgencio Batista. In September 1958, three months before Fidel Castro took power in Cuba, Lewis J. McWillie moved to Havana. Lewis J. McWillie worked as a pitboss in the Tropicana Casino. The mob knew Batista was doomed and it needed men like Lewis J. McWillie, whose associates, such as JACK RUBY, had supplied Fidel Castro with arms, to smooth over the inevitable transition, and to protect its interests. The HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about his association with Norman Rothman.

Q. Do you know a Mr. Norman Rothman?

A. I know him to see him.

Q. Have you ever met Mr. Rothman?

A. It was in Cuba, yes. He'd come in and out of the Tropicana every once in awhile. He come up and introduced himself to me and shook hands with me. I'd see him gambling there when I'd go around to different places.

Q. Did you ever have any discussions with Mr. Rothman?

A. No.

The FBI reported that investigation by a confidential source reflected that "McWillie solidified his syndicate connections through his association in Havana Cuba, with SANTOS TRAFFICANTE, well known syndicate member, from Tampa Florida; Meyer and Jake Lansky; Dino Cellini and others who were members and associates of the syndicate."

The HSCA asked Lewis J. McWillie about a possible association with TRAFFICANTE.

Know him to see him. He knew who I was and he shook hands with me when he saw me, but that was it, I've been asked that a lot of times, too. But I didn't know Mr. TRAFFICANTE intimately, no. Maybe Pedro Fox introduced us.

The HSCA asked Lewis J. McWillie about Meyer Lansky: "I never laid eyes on him in my life. I know his brother, knew his brother, Jake. Very fine man. I might have met him through Dino Cellini. Mr. Lansky was around the Riviera, I don't know if he operated it or what but he was there."

Lewis J. McWillie told the HSCA that RUBY had nothing to do with his employment situation in Cuba:

A fellow named Joe Williams called me from Cuba and asked me if I'd be interested in going over there to work and I set up an appointment and went there and talked to them and then went back to Dallas and went back to Cuba in about a week, I believe. I don't know what Mr. Williams did, to tell the truth. I went to see the Foxes. The Foxes were the only owners of the Tropicana. Martinez Fox promised me a percentage of the Tropicana if it ever did any business. That was right at the time of the revolution. The Foxes didn't need any financial backing. They had a big business that made nothing but money for years and years. They had the numbers and every other thing.

The numbers or, "bolito" was controlled by TRAFFICANTE. The Foxes were also controlled by TRAFFICANTE.

SANTO TRAFFICANTE, JR.

Just before Fidel Castro took power on January 1, 1959, Fulgencio Batista flew to the Dominican Republic. When Fidel Castro entered Havana angry Cubans ransacked many mob owned casinos. One of Fidel Castro's first decrees ordered all the casinos padlocked. Cesar Blanco stated that on January 13, 1959, "both Lanskys attended a meeting with SANTO TRAFFICANTE Jr. a known narcotics operator who took over Lucky Luciano's operations. Blanco said he took action against them and tried to get them deported from Cuba, working with Interpol. On June 2, 1959, Blanco told Pella he received a letter from the U.S. Consul General (or U.S. Embassy) in Havana informing him that the U.S. Government would protest if Lansky were deported. Blanco also had a visit from a Vice Consul named Kessler who verbally told him the same thing. When Blanco informed INTERPOL they replied by letter that the Cuban Government would lose their confidence if Lansky was not deported. Fidel Castro, upon hearing this, gave instructions to Blanco not to deport Lansky or SANTO TRAFFICANTE Jr. Blanco said to Pella that he feels this gambling group has offered to financially assist the new government-in-exile set up in New York under Mario Garcia Kohly." [U.S. Gambling Syndicate Interest in Cuban Matters.] After this meeting, SANTO TRAFFICANTE Jr., was arrested as was Jake Lansky. Jake Lansky was released in a few hours, only to be rearrested. A week later (January 20, 1959) the Lansky brothers escaped to Florida. They had been too close to Fulgencio Batista to ever be trusted by Fidel Castro. Many other hoodlums, such as Norman Rothman and Charlie Tourine, were not arrested and remained in Cuba. Meyer Lansky and CARLOS MARCELLO attempted to free TRAFFICANTE. The syndicate wanted anyone who could influence Fidel Castro to intervene on TRAFFICANTE'S behalf. [NY Post 2.17.59; NYT 2.21.58; Time 1.12.59]

ROBERT RAY McKEOWN

Robert and Ethel
McKeown at Jimmy
Walker's Restaurant

Robert Ray McKeown (born January 28, 1911; died October 1980, SS # 460-01-8019) ran a coffee processing plant in Santiago, Cuba, with the blessings of President Carlos Prio Socarras. When Carlos Prio Socarras was overthrown by Batista in 1952, Robert Ray McKeown tried to restore him to power. In late 1952 Robert Ray McKeown was the Subject of an FBI Neutrality Act Investigation in connection with his having smuggled arms to the forces of Carlos Prio Socarras within Cuba. In 1956 Robert Ray McKeown lived in Miami, having been deported by Fulgencio Batista. In Miami, Robert Ray McKeown was involved in gun-running ventures aimed at the overthrow of the Batista regime. The FBI learned that the 26th of July Movement planned a raid on Cuba from Texas, and that arms had been shipped to Robert Ray McKeown. In 1957 Robert Ray McKeown piloted arms-laden ships from Kemah or Seabrook, Texas, to a drop off point in Mexico. Fidel Castro's forces landed the Granma and picked-up the arms. On February 18, 1958, the San Antonio FBI office provided information that Robert Ray McKeown had purchased a yacht. U.S. Customs seized this vessel for having smuggled guns while it was cruising to Houston from Paterson, Louisiana. [HSCA V9 para. 1808, 1105-1152; WCD7972]

On February 25, 1958, Robert Ray McKeown was charged with conspiracy to smuggle guns and related equipment to Castro forces in Cuba when an Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent raided the home of Robert Ray McKeown and discovered a small arsenal. The FBI: "Houston will note in case entitled 'CARLOS PRIO SOCCARRAS, ET. AL. FPM - CUBA' (Houston file 109-7) Robert R. McKeown, Galena Park, Texas, and others were arrested by police and later prosecuted by U.S. Customs, for possession of arms and conspiracy to violate the Neutrality Act. In this case (deleted) was in Houston and had considerable contact with (deleted) and others involved. (Deleted) but is presently out of town. On his return he will be contacted again concerning this matter." [FBI 44-1639-4195]

Eight months later Robert Ray McKeown was given a 60-day sentence and five years probation. Shortly after this arrest and prior to his sentencing, Robert Ray McKeown and Mr.(FNU) Jarrett formed a partnership and opened the J & M Drive-In on Red Bluff Road in the vicinity of Kemah, Texas. Carlos Prio Soccarras funded this venture with a loan.

ROBERT RAY McKEOWN, RUBY AND THE JEEP DEAL

In January 1959 RUBY contacted Robert Ray McKeown and asked him "to get three individuals out of Cuba who are being held by Fidel Castro." RUBY offered Robert Ray McKeown $15,000, and said that the syndicate would be grateful for his help. One week later, RUBY and Robert Ray McKeown had a meeting near Kemah, Texas. RUBY asked Robert Ray McKeown for a letter of introduction to Fidel Castro. [WCE 1689] Robert Ray McKeown did not voluntarily give this information to the FBI after RUBY shot OSWALD. After RUBY spoke of an individual "in the vicinity of Houston" who had run guns to Fidel Castro, the FBI contacted Robert Ray McKeown.

On January 28, 1964, Robert Ray McKeown told the FBI that about a week after Fidel Castro came into power Anthony Ayo, a Houston patrolman, personally informed him that someone from Dallas had called the Sheriff's office looking for him. Robert Ray McKeown told Anthony Ayo to give the caller the phone number of the J & M Drive-in. When questioned by the FBI, Anthony Ayo confirmed Robert Ray McKeown's story. How did RUBY know that Anthony Ayo knew Robert Ray McKeown? Robert Ray McKeown said that an hour later a "JACK RUBENSTEIN" from Dallas called and offered McKeown $15,000 to help release three prisoners from Castro's jails. JACK RUBENSTEIN stated that someone in Las Vegas would provide the money. Three weeks later RUBY showed up at the J & M in person, offered Robert Ray McKeown $25,000 and stated he had access to a large number of jeeps in Shreveport, Louisiana. When McKeown demanded $5,000 in advance, RUBY left, never to return. Robert Ray McKeown said the deal was never consummated. When interviewed by Gaeton Fonzi in 1976, McKeown added that RUBY told him that aside from jeeps, he had access to slot machines in New Mexico. RUBY mentioned that he knew some members of the mafia in Cuba, and he spoke with McKeown on three occasions.

Justice Warren asked RUBY: "There was some story in one of the papers that you had been interested in shipping jeeps down to Cuba. Was there anything to that at all?" RUBY answered:

No; but this was the earlier part, when the first time Fidel Castro had ever invaded Cuba. There was even a Government article that they would need jeeps. I don't recall what it was, but I never had the facilities or the capabilities to get jeeps. But probably in conversation with other persons - you see, it is a new land, and they have to have a lot of things. As a matter of fact the United States Government was wanting persons to help them [kill Fidel Castro] at that particular time when they threw out the dictator, Batista. And at one particular time there was a gentleman that smuggled guns to Castro...I think his name was Langley or Longly out of Bay - something - Texas, on the Bayshore...He was given a jail term for smuggling guns to Castro. This is in the early part of their revolution...I think he had a boat and he lived somewhere in Bay something, Bayshore, in the center part of Texas... [FBI 44-1639-3913; WCE 1688]

"DAVIS"

When RUBY first contacted Robert Ray McKeown he told him that he thought his name was "Davis." RUBY allegedly told Tom Howard (his first lawyer -deceased) that he had intended to begin a regular gun-running business with a "Davis." When the FBI asked Robert Ray McKeown about "Davis" in 1964, he told them he knew no-one by that name. Dallas Assistant District Attorney William Alexander reported he had learned RUBY had contact with a "Davis," described as an ex-convict from Beaumont, Texas. William Alexander stated that he understood FBI, Houston, had handled investigation of this person resulting in his conviction for gun running activities. The Houston FBI reported that it could not locate an ex-convict named Davis, and determined that RUBY meant Robert Ray McKeown.

THOMAS ELI DAVIS

Seth Kantor reported that in June 1958, a

Thomas Eli Davis attempted to rob a bank in Detroit for which he served five years probation. In September 1960 the probation supervision of Thomas Eli Davis was transferred to the Federal probation office in Beaumont, Texas. His probation was terminated on February 21, 1962.

[CE1688; 44-1639-3913; Seth Kantor, Who Was JACK RUBY? Everest House 1978]

The HSCA discovered a FBI report dated June 25, 1963, which linked Thomas Eli Davis to a HEMMING/STURGIS type operation: In May 1963 Thomas Eli Davis placed an advertisement that offered employment to men who wished to go to Haiti to overthrow "Papa Doc" Duvalier. The FBI, through liaison, asked the CIA if this was one of its operations. The CIA denied it. The wife of Thomas Eli Davis told an official of the State Department that her husband was a soldier-of-fortune who had worked in Indochina, Indonesia, Algeria and Cuba. [HSCA V9p183] In early November 1963, Thomas Eli Davis and his wife left the U.S. for Tangier, Morocco. In December 1963 the Moroccan National Security Police, through Interpol, informed the State Department that Thomas Eli Davis was being held on the basis of an attempted sale of a firearm to a minor. When the Moroccan Police searched Thomas Eli Davis, the police found "a letter in his handwriting which referred in passing to OSWALD and to the Kennedy assassination." The letter was addressed to attorney Thomas G. Proctor. Thomas Eli Davis was killed in September 1973 while stealing copper wire from an abandoned rock crusher site in Wise County, Texas. He was accidentally electrocuted. Ruby could have known Thomas Davis of Beaumont, Texas, however, Davis is a very common name, especially in Texas. Seth Kantor also claimed that QJ/WIN (Mankel) bailed Thomas Eli Davis out of jail in Morocco, which was unlikely. Perhaps RUBY referred to Howard Kenneth Davis? Howard K. Davis, however, worked out of Miami.

ROBERT RAY McKEOWN'S HSCA TESTIMONY

When Robert Ray McKeown testified before the HSCA he took the Fifth Amendment until he was granted immunity. Robert Ray McKeown added that he was visited by OSWALD and a mysterious pro-Castro Cuban. They wanted 300 submachine guns. Through the years the details of his story changed so frequently that Robert Ray McKeown almost earned a perjury citation from the HSCA. McKeown:

RUBY says I will give you $25,000 if you write me this letter where you will acknowledge that I am a friend of yours and have done business with you and things of that sort...He asked me all about where I had been with Castro and how we had talked, and he kept after me about how many arms are there, and were there two million worth...then he came back and we would talk about what warehouses I put the guns in, and who all helped me haul them out to his house...he came back and I told him I had the letter written...I had all of this written down but somebody burned down my house and I lost it...He said he knew the mafia, he said he had connections. He said 'You don't have to worry about money, I have good connections.' He asked me if I was familiar with Ponce Club in Miami, where all the Latins congregated.

Robert Ray McKeown was quizzed about his various associates:

Purdy: How did you hear of Sam or Joseph Campisi?

McKeown: Through Prio. He said they were good people, they were on our side. I presumed that he was working with him, I do not know.

Purdy: Did you know Joe Merola?

McKeown: Yes...he would come to me and tell me where guns would be.

Purdy: Have you had any connections which you later found out been with the CIA?

McKeown: Yes, I later found out, but I did not know...I met him at a club...I did not know him from Adam and he commenced telling me about Castro, he was over there in the mountains with Castro...he said that Castro had it in for him and that he did not want to go to Cuba.

Purdy: What contact did you have with Castro after he took power?

McKeown: Some friends of my brother were fishing and the Cubans confiscated their boat and brought them to Cuba. My brother came to me and told me these three guys were real good friends of his and they were innocent. So he asked me if I could help get them out of Cuba. This was quite a while after he was in power, maybe 1965. Four or five of the so-called mafia under Batista that ran the casinos came to me and wanted me to try and help them get back over there...they wanted me to go and try to get them to open the Americana again and the Sans Souci and all of that...this was a couple of months after he took power...one of them was Italian. They had all been forced to leave Cuba.

Purdy: Was SANTOS TRAFFICANTE one of these individuals?

McKeown: No.

Purdy: Do you know CARLOS MARCELLO?

McKeown: No.

Purdy: Do you know FRANK STURGIS?

McKeown: I seen him one time over at Prio's house. But I did not have any dealings with him whatsoever.

Purdy: Do you remember any of the names [of the mafioso who approached you]?

McKeown: It seemed to me that one of them was named Matthews, but I am not sure he was connected with the Tropicana. Maybe he was connected.

Purdy: When did you first meet Mr. Castro?

McKeown: I met him in the Shamrock Hotel in Houston. I think it was in 1957, Prio was with me. I didn't have an opportunity to speak to him alone, he was in a hurry to go out to the Murchisons.

GATLIN AND THE JEEP DEAL?

An article dated January 1968 in Ramparts Magazine written by William Turner linked Maurice Gatlin with RUBY in a jeep deal. According to Jerry Milton Brooks, the deal was scotched when Maurice Gatlin warned RUBY and Robert Ray McKeown to call it off.

In February 1959 SANTO TRAFFICANTE Jr. was still in jail. Then Fidel Castro revoked his order closing all the casinos and freed TRAFFICANTE. This was when Fidel Castro made STURGIS Minister of Games of Chance. In late February 1959, Meyer Lansky returned to Cuba. On March 1, 1959, Cuba's casinos reopened to skimpy crowds. [Time 3.2.59; How Castro Double Crossed The Mob, Jack Anderson, Parade 4.28.63]

RUBY'S MEETINGS WITH THE FBI

On March 11, 1959, RUBY met with FBI S.A. Charles W. Flynn. S.A. Flynn stated RUBY offered the FBI his services as a criminal informant. S.A. Flynn questioned RUBY about bank robberies, major thefts and the like. RUBY was unable to supply S.A. Flynn with any information on these cases. [FBI 44-24016-1138; FBI 44-24016-1180; FBI-62-109060-7394; NYT 5.13.70; William Scott Malone, The Secret Life of JACK RUBY, New Times, 1.23.78.] RUBY bought $500 worth of miniature wire recording equipment [FBI 44-1639-1358] and rented a safe deposit box before speaking with S.A. Flynn.

RUBY tape recorded his meetings with the FBI and hid the tapes in his safe deposit box in case the mob accused him of being a snitch. The second RUBY/Flynn meeting occurred on April 28, 1959, the same day that Robert Ray McKeown was embracing Fidel Castro at an airport in Houston, Texas. Fidel Castro was going back to Cuba from Washington, D.C., when he encountered Robert Ray McKeown. McKeown: "There were some people who came to me and offered me quite a sum of money and told me that we believe that you are the only one who can really get close to Fidel Castro. And they wanted me to kill him." [HSCA V9 p702]

RUBY'S TRIPS TO CUBA

In late May 1959, RUBY gave a slip of paper which contained a short written message in code which consisted of letters and numbers and the word "arriving" to Elaine Mynier, Lewis J. McWillie's mistress, just minutes before she left for Cuba. When Elaine Mynier gave the message to Lewis J. McWillie he told her that RUBY was "nuts" to have entrusted her with something important. After the assassination Elaine Mynier told the FBI about the incident. [FBI DI-44-1639 FD-302 with Mynier 11.26.63 San Fran., 11.24.63 at San Fran.] In November 1963 Elaine Mynier claimed she had been raped by two San Francisco Police Department officers, a case which received considerable local publicity. Lewis J. McWillie denied using her as a courier, and said if he wanted to get in touch with RUBY he would have telephoned him.

On June 1, 1959, TRAFFICANTE was rearrested by the Castro regime on the basis of a telegram from Harry Anslinger. [HSCA V5 p294] The Cuban Cabinet ordered the deportation of TRAFFICANTE due to his having been involved in heroin trafficking. RUBY'S next meeting with S.A. Flynn occurred on June 5, 1959. On June 18, 1959, RUBY had another meeting with S.A. Flynn. The next RUBY/Flynn meeting occurred on July 2, 1959. RUBY'S fifth meeting with S.A. Flynn took place on July 21, 1959. S.A. Flynn filed a standard report. He had questioned RUBY about several bank robberies which RUBY said he had no knowledge of. S.A. Flynn rated his informant as "good."

THE FBI DROPS RUBY

In late July, Curtis Lynum, the SAC of the Dallas FBI Field Office , received information that something wasn't kosher about RUBY. Curtis Lynum sent RUBY'S prints to FBI Headquarters so that he could get RUBY'S rap sheet. S.A. Flynn's next meeting with RUBY took place on August 6, 1959. On August 18, 1959, TRAFFICANTE was released. According to data obtained by the Cuban Government, Dino Cellini had a sister who worked as a typist in the White House. The sister of Dino Cellini solicited the aid of Senator George Smathers in obtaining TRAFFICANTE'S release. Senator George Smathers got the American Consulate in Havana to contact the Cubans with information that there were arrest warrants out for TRAFFICANTE and Dino Cellini in the United States. [Information supplied HSCA by Government of Cuba] RUBY'S seventh meeting with S.A. Flynn took place on August 31, 1959. By this time S.A. Flynn had received word from his superior to dump RUBY. S.A. Flynn countered: "While RUBY has not furnished any positive information to date, there is no indication of emotional instability or unreliability. It is recommended Potential Criminal Informant be continued."

RUBY'S TRIPS TO CUBA

RUBY told the Warren Commission that he went to Cuba for eight days in August or September 1959, for a vacation. Lewis J. McWillie told the Commission:

In 1959 I wrote JACK and asked him to come to Havana for a week. There was no ulterior motive. I extended this invitation as one would to a brother. I sent him a round-trip ticket. He came into the Tropicana and we had a few drinks together. He was like any other tourist - he didn't have any connection with Castro or Batista supporters. [FBI CO-11516; WCE1545; WCE1546]

OTHER SHORT TRIPS TO CUBA

Immigration and Naturalization Service records indicated RUBY flew to Havana from Miami on the night of September 12, 1959, and returned to New Orleans on September 13, 1959. [Memo Hubert & Griffen to WC 3.20.64] RUBY visited Major William Morgan and HEMMING, who were considered close to Fidel Castro, in his effort to secure TRAFFICANTE'S release. HEMMING told the HSCA:

I met RUBY in September or October 1959, at William Morgan's house in Cuba. Ruby had sold inferior jeeps to the Cuban Air Force, and Morgan had a few choice words about them. They were filmed by Clete Roberts of Channel 13 in Los Angeles.

HEMMING told this researcher:

JACK RUBY was with Morgan in the latter part of 1959. He was by Morgan's place. It was a mish-mash of people trying to get a meeting with Fidel. They were clamping down on the casinos. RUBY got to Cuba after FRANK had left and gone to Miami with Pedro Diaz Lanz. RUBY was on the periphery of the MARCELLO deals that they're trying cut with the new Cuban Government. To them it's just a new fucking banana republic government. Deals were going sour. We're talking about a three or four day period in late 1959. RUBY became the clean-up guy in the Kennedy assassination.

Marita Lorenz stated: "It is possible I saw RUBY with...Oh, God I am going to get killed, Charlie, Charlie 'The Blade' in Cuba. Charlie Tourine, Delmonica White, who is a friend of mine." [Depo Lorenz USDC Miami - 76-1252-Div-EBD]

RUBY returned to the United States via Miami, where he met with Louis J. McWillie's associate, Meyer Panitz. In January 1964 Meyer Panitz told the FBI RUBY was in Cuba in "the Summer of 1959," contradicting RUBY'S story of only one visit to Cuba in September 1959. [WCE1773, 1774; FBI LV-44-48 1.10.64 Las Vegas, DC-44-1639] A few days after RUBY returned to the U.S. he was seen by three Chicago businessmen in the Tropicana Casino in Havana. Jay Bishov, an attorney, Jack Marcus, and Sherwin Braun, told they FBI they visited Havana "for three or four days about September 1, 1959, as it was Labor Day weekend in 1959. Jay Bishov stated that the second or third night in Havana, he Sherwin Braun, and Jack Marcus, were standing near a crap table or roulette wheel at the Tropicana night club when a man approached and introduced himself by a name which Jay Bishov believed was JACK RUBY." RUBY said he was originally from Chicago, but had moved to Dallas. He invited them to visit him at one of his night clubs in Dallas. "Bishov stated RUBY appeared to know his way around the Tropicana, and may have been familiar with some of the employees." None of the men would positively identify RUBY from the FBI's photograph. [FBI 44-24016-167]

STURGIS AND McWILLIE

In 1974 Michael Canfield asked STURGIS if he knew JACK RUBY associate Lewis J. McWillie, when STURGIS was Minister of Games of Chance. He answered: "Yeah, that name is very familiar - I forgot what he is or who he is, but McWillie, yes. I am not sure if I knew him later in Miami." During testimony in HUNT v. WEBERMAN, STURGIS was asked:

Q. Do you remember a pit boss named McWillie?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know him later in Miami?

A. I'm not sure.

THE FOX BROTHERS

Congressman Ford asked RUBY: "When you got to Havana who met you in Havana?"

RUBY: McWillie. Now here is what happened. One of the Fox brothers came to visit me in Dallas with his wife. They came to the Vegas Club with Mrs. McWillie, and we had taken some pictures, 8X10's. Evidently the Foxes were in exile at the time, because when I went to visit McWillie, when he sent me the plane tickets, they looked through my luggage and they saw a photograph of Mr. Fox and his wife. They didn't interrogate, but they went through everything and held me up for hours.

Ford: Castro employees?

RUBY: Yes, because in my ignorance I didn't realize I was bringing a picture that they know was a bitter enemy. At that time they knew that the Fox brothers weren't going to jail, or something was going to happen. Whether it was they were in exile at the time I don't know. But they came to my club, the Vegas Club, and we had taken pictures. McWillie was waiting for me and he saw me go through the Customs line for a couple of hours, and he said, "JACK, they never did this to anyone before." Evidently, they had as pretty well lined-up as to where I come in the picture of Mr. Martin Fox. I can't think of his name.

Ford: You spent eight days in Havana?

RUBY: Yes, approximately. [I stayed at] Volk's apartments. I never used the phone. I wouldn't know how to use the phone...my dinners were served in the Tropicana. One thing I forgot to tell you - you are bringing my mind back to a few things - the owners, the greatest that have been expelled from Cuba are the Fox brothers. They own the Tropicana...they are in Miami, Florida. They know everything about McWillie, I heard, and know the officials. [STURGIS?].

FRONT MEN FOR TRAFFICANTE: THE FOX BROTHERS

The Pedro and Martin Fox (Pedro: born NY October 24, 1909, died May 1973; Martin: born November 15, 1915, NY died September 1979) were front men for TRAFFICANTE and nominally owned the Tropicana. The FBI:

"This place is supervised by Dino Cellini who is the floor manager and supervisor. The Tropicana is owned by a Cuban named Martin Fox and his connections with American hoodlum elements are unknown although it is to be noted that Dino Cellini has been connected with gambling at Tropicana for many years. With reference to the possibility that gambling in Cuba is controlled by a syndicate headed by Meyer Lansky or other individuals, it is noted that DINO CELLINI, who has operated the gambling casino at the Tropicana for many years, is also running the gambling casino at Oriental Park Race Track. His brother, EDDIE CELLINI, has been placed in the casino at the Hotel Nacional as a floor an in the gambling room. Also, Information has been received from Lt. HERIBERTO HERNANDEZ of the Cuban National Police that the license for operating in the gambling casino at the Sans Souci had been issued by the Cuban Goverflont to OSCAR ECHEMENDARIA, who is an associate and director of the Tropicana Night Club. It appears likely, therefore, that there is some sort of tie-in between at least four of Havana's gambling casinos. This matter is being followed, and the Bureau will be kept advised.

HSCA Chairman Stokes questioned TRAFFICANTE: "You did know Pedro and Martin Fox?" TRAFFICANTE: "Pedro Fox, yes sir, all I know is that Mr. Martin Fox, who was the owner of the Tropicana and one of the richest men in Cuba, he died in the United States in the 1960's. I think, and he died completely broke. And Pedro Fox was working as a waiter and maitre d' in all the restaurants and hotels around Miami." [HSCA V9 p67] STURGIS testified during the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN that he knew the Fox Brothers. During another part of his testimony RUBY said:"...I had to buy a $2 ticket, a pass to get through Florida." TRAFFICANTE controlled the numbers racket, which relied on small bets. It was popular among the Cuban exiles of Florida. RUBY clearly made more than one trip to Cuba. Ruby was acquainted with the Fox brothers, front men for TRAFFICANTE and evidence suggested that RUBY visited TRAFFICANTE in prison.

ON 26 NOVEMBER 1963 A BRITISH JOURNALIST NAMED JOHN WILSON, AND ALSO KNOWN AS JOHN WILSON-HUDSON, GAVE INFORMATION TO THE AMERICAN EMBASSY IN LONDON WHICH INDICATED THAT AN "AMERICAN GANGSTER TYPE NAMED RUBY" VISITED CUBA AROUND 1959. WILSON HIMSELF WAS WORKING IN CUBA AT THE TIME AND WAS JAILED BY CASTRO BEFORE HE WAS DEPORTED.

IN PRISON IN CUBA, WILSON SAYS HE MET AN AMERICAN GANGSTER GEMELER NAMED SANTOS WHO COULD NOT RETURN TO THE U.S.A. BECAUSE THERE WERE SEVERAL INDICTMENTS OUTSTANDING AGAINST HIM. INSTEAD HE PREFERRED TO LIVE IN RELATIVE LUXURY IN A CUBAN PRISON. WHILE SANTOS WAS IN PRISON, WILSON SAYS, SANTOS WAS VISITED FREQUENTLY BY AN AMERICAN GANGSTER TYPE NAMED RUBY. HIS STORY IS BEING FOLLOWED UP. WILSON SAYS HE HAD ONCE TESTIFIED ABOUT CASTRO ACTIVITIES BEFORE THE EASTLAND COMMITTEE OF THE U.S. SENATE, SOMETIME IN 1959 OR 1960.

On November 27, 1963, John Wilson Hudson (CIA 201-20397), contacted the American Embassy in London. He said he was imprisoned by Castro on July 1, 1959. While incarcerated John Wilson Hudson met SANTO TRAFFICANTE Jr., who he described as a gangster. Around this time, John Wilson Hudson said that TRAFFICANTE was visited by an American "gangster- type" named "RUBY." RUBY, who accompanied the person who brought TRAFFICANTE his meals to him, was identical to the JACK RUBY who shot OSWALD. [FBI 44-24016-29; 901, 255, 262; CIA 385-7369 206-83; NYT 4.22.59 p4, 7. 1.59 pl3; Miami Herald 7.1.59 p2A]

Carlos John Wilson Hudson was born in Liverpool, England, on December 29, 1918. He left his studies at Oxford University in 1936 to fight in the Spanish Civil War. John Wilson Hudson left the International Brigade and surfaced as an Axis agent. In 1939 he moved to Buenos Aires, Argentina, then to Santiago, Chile, where he married Elaine Bronfmann. In Santiago, John Wilson Hudson set up the Universal Peace Movement, a Chilean version of the America First Committee. The British Ambassador in Santiago requested his expulsion on several occasions. In the early 1950's John Wilson Hudson traded in copper, lead and sulphur. The partner of John Wilson Hudson in this enterprise was Heriberto Springwaller Einicke. Heriberto Einicke, a German, was a Colonel in the Nicaraguan Army in the late 1930's, but was expelled from the country after he ran afoul of the United States Embassy. A CIA report dated 1952 stated:

1. Source (deleted) GARA-7 is of the opinion that John Wilson Hudson is very probably an intelligence agent, and that he is under the direction of some service. There is no apparent reason for his great interest in the Yugoslav colony in Santiago nor can (Deleted) GARA-7 determine the source of Wilson's apparent income.
2. Despite the fact that most of what John Wilson Hudson says is patently rubbish and although it was reported in YCI-1556 that he was believed to be mentally ill (deleted) GARA-7 has been instructed to maintain contact with Wilson for the purpose of discovering what his objectives are and by whom he is directed
3. Any traces of John Wilson Hudson at Headquarters would be of assistance to this Station in pursuing this investigation.

A CIA informants' report of October 6, 1952, stated:

Carlos John Wilson, an Englishman by birth, but believed to be a Spanish citizen, was previously reported among other activities, as posing as an ex-RAF pilot and veteran of World War II. These activities came to the attention of the British Embassy in Santiago, and resulted in John Wilson Hudson's being twice warned by the Chilean authorities to cease this masquerading or leave the country...He also claims that at the close of the war he worked on a special mission for the British Government in Germany, Egypt, and Turkey [and] to have fought with the Spanish Republican forces against Franco...John Wilson Hudson is described as being very intelligent, astute, and well informed on current events. He is extremely sociable, friendly, a very heavy drinker and free spender.

In 1957 John Wilson Hudson reportedly worked for Batista.

An independent untested CIA source reported that during the first part of June 1959 Paul Hughes, an American soldier-of-fortune and associate of John Wilson Hudson, visited Cienfuegos, Las Villas Province, dressed in the uniform of an American Air Force captain.

ANGLETON

ANGLETON assembled information on John Wilson Hudson:

A usually reliable source reported June 18, 1959, that Carl John Wilson, British journalist, sent a cable to the British Parliament and to the British Trade Union Federation saying that he had confirmed that the U.S. Military Attaches in the Caribbean were giving military advice to dictators. He protested in the name of humanity, saying that patriots were fighting for their sacred rights to be free citizens, and that American volunteers were helping the dictators with the approval of Washington. Source commented that Wilson, was planning on accompanying Mario Calero, Nicaraguan revolutionary who was readying an expedition against Nicaragua from Cuba.

Another report dated June 26, 1959, from a usually reliable source stated that Paul Hughes, an American soldier-of-fortune, claimed to have at his disposal three aircraft, including one bomber, and planned to launch in an attack on Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, during the weekend of June 27, 1959. Paul Hughes said that Carl Wilson, a British journalist, and about 65 volunteers would join in the attack. Source commented that Paul Hughes also vaguely spoke of possibly bombing Managua for the psychological effect. Hudson Wilson said that Fidel Castro had no knowledge of Hughes.

United Press International carried the story datelined July 1, 1959, from Havana, Cuba, saying that Police had raided a private home in suburban Biltmore the day before, and seized a large quantity of arms, and arrested three Americans and a Briton. The Americans were identified as Paul Hughes, an officer in Fidel Castro's rebel army, Efren R. Pichardo of Miami, Florida and Joseph Bardor, of Los Angeles, California. The Briton listed was Carl John Wilson. Seven military men and 11 civilians were held in connection with the plot.

On July 10, 1959, Wilson-Hudson, Captain Paul Hughes and Efren Pichardo were arrested after Castro's police detained 200 armed men just before they were about to board three aircraft, including one bomber, destined for Nicaragua. Paul Hughes, Efren Pichardo and John Wilson Hudson were accused of attempting to discredit the Castro regime. A year later HEMMING and William Morgan organized a similar bogus invasion. In July 1959 John Wilson Hudson told his Cuban interrogators he was a British journalist, and was in Cuba a few days. He was an innocent bystander covering a news story. He went on a hunger-strike and had to be fed intravenously. The U.S. Army Attache in Havana, Cuba, reported July 30, 1959, that he had received the following note from Carl John Wilson:

Salvador Allende, (Communist-sponsored presidential candidate and Socialist Party member) brought a letter of definite instructions to Raul Castro (from Chile). This letter contains instructions from the Kremlin in Moscow and contains the signature of Pablo Neruda of Chile. It deals with definite instructions of anti-American agitation to commence next month in Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Cuba, Costa Rica, etc.

In September 1959 Wilson-Hudson testified before the Senate Internal Security Sub-Committee regarding communist influence in the 26th of July Movement. In September 1959 the FBI questioned STURGIS about former Castro officer Efren Pichardo.

A U.S. State Department cable from Asuncion, Paraguay, dated December 16, 1959, reported that "John Wilson correspondent for North American News Service, had informed the Paraguayan Ambassador in London on December 14 that within two days a cargo of 300 machine guns and 800 rifles were to be shipped to Buenos Aires, Argentina, at the direction of Fidel Castro. Wilson reportedly showed documents which proved his statement." [CIA CSCI 3/779,048 CHW/3/(SCELSO):jz Coord WE Division/Walsh x6660, RI, CILIA, CI/R&A, CI/ICG, WE/WALSH, WH/3 CWH/3 PROJECT NONE]

Wilson-Hudson died in Santiago, Chile, in 1964. The FBI classified several documents about John Wilson Hudson "Secret-Date of Declassification Indefinite."

JOHN WILSON HUDSON AND THE HSCA

The HSCA attempted to verify or deny the allegations of John Wilson Hudson. The HSCA questioned the man who had been the warden at Tresconia Prison in 1959. He told the Committee that he could not recall the name John Wilson Hudson, but did remember a British journalist who had worked in Argentina. [HSCA R p173] In his own public testimony before the Committee, TRAFFICANTE denied that RUBY had visited him: "There was no reason for this man to visit me, I have never seen this man before. I have never been to Dallas, I never had no contact with him. I don't see why he was going to come and visit me." [HSCA V9 para. 710]

McWILLIE ADMITS SEEING TRAFFICANTE IN PRISON

During the deposition of Lewis J. McWillie taken by the Committee in Las Vegas, Nevada, the question of a RUBY / TRAFFICANTE visit arose. Lewis J. McWillie equivocated: "I really don't know. It's possible he could have but I don't think, if he did he went with me and I don't recall it, but he could have. I don't know for sure." Lewis J. McWillie was asked: "You said you thought it was possible that someone had gone to the prison with you." He responded: "It's possible that it might have been JACK RUBY...I spoke to Dino and Jake Lansky (at the prison). Just said 'Hello' to TRAFFICANTE. But I talked to Jake because Dino was a friend of mine."

The Committee questioned Lewis J. McWillie:

Q. Are you aware that Mr. TRAFFICANTE was imprisoned in Cuba?

A. Yes, there was a bunch of them imprisoned.

Q. Did you visit Mr. TRAFFICANTE in prison?

A. I didn't visit him, I went there once or twice to visit a fellow, he was a dealer. I went out there once or twice to see him.

Q. Did you see anybody also in prison?

A. I saw everybody out there. TRAFFICANTE I think he was in there.

Q. Did you see TRAFFICANTE?

A. I saw him but I didn't talk to him, I didn't know him that well.

Q. Do you know of anybody who did visit Mr. TRAFFICANTE in prison?

A. No, I don't, I went out there with someone but I don't recall who it was. It may have been RUBY. I don't think so. He could have been, but I don't think so.

The HSCA concluded that a meeting between RUBY and TRAFFICANTE was "a distinct possibility."

The FBI's investigation into the allegations of John Hudson Wilson ended on November 27, 1963. The FBI:

Wilson has been critical of the FBI in the past, and has displayed psychopathic symptoms. Arrest by Castro July 1, 1959. We have prior information JACK RUBY was in Havana, Cuba, in 1959. It appears there is nothing to be gained from additional contact with Wilson. Legat being advised in attached cable to conduct no further investigation relative to Wilson. I concur. Hoover.

RAGANO

On April 17, 1967, Frank Ragano told the FBI that "he had known TRAFFICANTE on a personal and professional basis since childhood and he does not believe TRAFFICANTE has ever been associated with La Cosa Nostre...Ragano stated that a newspaper reporter from Long Island, New York, telephoned him to obtain confirmation of the story that JACK RUBY was to be flown from Dallas to Cuba when TRAFFICANTE was jailed by Castro since RUBY was allegedly friendly with Castro. Ragano stated that such an allegation was completely false and appeared to be in an attempt to involve TRAFFICANTE in the assassination of former President Kennedy."

RUBY'S last meeting with FBI S.A. Flynn was on October 2, 1959, and was no different from any of the others - judging from Flynn's report. On November 6, 1959, RUBY was dropped from the FBI Possible Criminal Informant rolls. After the assassination J. Edgar Hoover stated that RUBY was never an informant. [FBI 105-82555-2638] Why did RUBY meet with the FBI during the same time he was working to secure TRAFFICANTE'S release? Meyer Lansky was also in touch with the FBI around this time: "I told government authorities that Castro was a Communist and would present a problem; they thought I was just being greedy because I was losing my gambling interests." [FBI 92-102-2523, 5.6.69, Hollywood, Fla.] Ruby reported his highest net income in 1959 - $51,000. [WR p798]

RUBY'S PLANNED TRIP TO CUBA IN DECEMBER 1960

CANDY BARR AND MICKEY COHN

When Lewis J. McWillie testified before the HSCA he said RUBY was supposed to have flown to Cuba with Tony Zoppi, a Dallas columnist who was "the official odds maker" at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas. The purpose of the trip was to get publicity for the Tropicana. Lewis J. McWillie produced a letter to Matty Brescia from Tony Zoppi that read: "Give my regards to McWillie next time you are in touch. JACK RUBY and I were supposed to visit him in Havana but I got sidetracked." (Lewis J. McWillie said that the son of Matty Brescia "was sitting in a window and he fell out of the window and it killed him"). According to Lewis J. McWillie "RUBY introduced Matty Brescia to Gordon McLendon." In 1971 the brother-in-law of Gordon McLendon, another RUBY associate, along with D'Alton Smith, a MARCELLO associate, dropped the names of Gordon McLendon and Clint Murchison, Jr. as powerful friends of JIMMY HOFFA who would help Edward Partin if he recanted his testimony against JIMMY HOFFA. When RUBY was taken into custody on November 24, 1963, Dallas Police found the telephone number EM 1-1197 on a slip of paper. This telephone number was listed to Gay McLendon. [FBI B544-337 JJs: res p254; Criss-Cross Directory Dallas 1963 Coles Pub.] When the

HSCA questioned Tony Zoppi, he told them that Matty Brescia worked for Gordon McLendon:

One evening around 1952, myself, Brescia, RUBY and Juanita Slusher (Stripper "Candy Barr") Barr said she was forced in 1951 at 16 to play the lead in a grainy black-and-white erotic movie titled "Smart Aleck." She shot her second of four husbands in the stomach in January 1956 after he came home drunk and threatened her. In 1956, while dating Mickey Cohn, she was arrested for marijuana. Candy stated, "We at one of RUBY'S clubs. Brescia introduced me to RUBY. He knew RUBY through Gordon McLendon."

<http://www.nytimes.com/2006/01/04/arts/04barr.html>]

Tony Zoppi told the HSCA that during September or October 1958 RUBY offered to write Lewis J. McWillie at the Tropicana to get the airplane tickets so Tony Zoppi, accompanied by RUBY, could fly to Cuba and review the acts at the Tropicana. Tony Zoppi agreed that RUBY went to Cuba in August 1959 on vacation, and that the trip Tony Zoppi and RUBY were to take was an entirely different trip. Tony Zoppi told the Committee that he never made the trip because a big show, starring Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and Sammy Davis Jr. was scheduled for the same time. [HSCA V5 pl34, 72; V9 p67] Tony Zoppie supplied the Committee with an article he had written about RUBY in 1973. In this article he placed the date of his aborted trip to Cuba on December 17, 1960, just before the U.S. broke off diplomatic relations with the Castro regime. This dove-tailed with the date of the Sinatra-Martin-Davis show which took place from January 20, 1960 to February 16, 1960.

THE CONTRACT ON CASTRO

What motivated RUBY to have contemplated visiting Cuba during Christmas of 1960? By November 1959 the Cuban casinos of Meyer Lansky lost $10,000 a day because of the slack in tourist trade. The syndicate strip joints and houses of prostitution had all been closed down. With TRAFFICANTE gone, the narcotics trade dwindled. On November 22, 1959, Fidel Castro nationalized the Hotel Riviera, kicked out the mobsters from the casino, and put in his own men. [NYT 11.23.59] The year 1959 drew to a close. RUBY, Norman Rothman, Dominick Bartone et. al. had all been double-crossed. In 1960 the CIA had Robert Maheu contact Johnny Rosselli and Sam Giancana. In 1960 Johnny Rosselli was in Las Vegas, where he supervised the mafia's gambling interests. [Alleged Assassination Plots Involving Foreign Leaders - Select Committee to Study Gov. Operations with Respect to Intelligence U.S. Congress; HSCA V5, p255] According to Ed Becker, in mid-1962 Johnny Rosselli was granted access to JMWAVE headquarters where he worked with Tony Varona. A source close to Fulgencio Batista reported that Johnny Rosselli was meeting with HUNT around this time. [Ed Becker and Charles Rappleye, All American Mafioso, Doubleday, NY 1991 p225] Robert Maheu was also in touch with TRAFFICANTE. Robert Maheu wrote: "From what I know OSWALD did act alone. And JACK RUBY killed him out of anger. Just because the man worked for the mob and probably had ties to Johnny Rosselli doesn't mean he didn't feel strongly about Kennedy." [Robert Maheu, Next to Hughes, 1992, Harper Collins p133]

RUBY 1960

There were few reports available on RUBY'S activities in 1960. Lewis J. McWillie remained in Havana and in May 1960 he left the Tropicana to work at the Capri casino, a long-time Lansky property. Lewis J. McWillie told the HSCA how he got this job:

Q. Who did you know at the Capri Hotel to get the job?

A. If I remember correctly, I think it was Martinez told me to go up there...went up there and saw some fellows, Angelo, I don't know his last name, but his first name was Angelo...

Q. Could the last name have been Bruno?

A. No. I don't know Mr. Bruno. Never met him, I've seen him in Cuba, just to say 'Hello.' He knew who I was because in this business I'm a pretty good man in the gambling business.

ANGELO BRUNO

The FBI reported Angelo Bruno had an interest in the Capri. Angelo Bruno told an FBI informant in 1961 that he was a representative of "the commission." In 1958 an informant told the FBI that the sister of Angelo Bruno was married to a son of Mike Maggio. "Meyer Lansky's presence at the Maggio Cheese Company was a strong indication that the Italian racket element was taking over gambling in Cuba. Cardello said that Mickey Cohen was Meyer Lansky's collector and errand boy in the states." Victor Calamaro told the FBI:

Gambling originated in Cuba because Meyer Lansky supported Batista in obtaining power and return to office. Victor Calamaro was asked if Meyer Lansky controlled gambling in Cuba. He implied that Meyer Lansky had previously absolute control of gambling in Cuba, but at the present time it was amended so that Victor Calamaro implied that Angelo Bruno and other gambling figures in Cuba were dealing with someone else who was unidentified.

Angelo Bruno was shot to death in Philadelphia on March 22, 1980. [Bruno FBI file 11.5.58 Phil. 92-444]

In February 1962 the FBI recorded the following conversation between Angelo Bruno and his associate, Willie Weisburg.

Weisburg: See what Kennedy done. With Kennedy, a guy should take a knife, like all them other guys, and stab and kill the (obscenity), where he is now I hope I got a week's notice. I'll kill him. Right in the White House. Somebody's got to get rid of this (obscenity). He ain't gonna leave nobody alone.

Bruno: I know he ain't. But you see, everybody in there was bad. Brownell came. He was no good...He was worse than the guy before.

Weisburg: Not like this one.

Bruno: Not like this one. This one is worse, right? If something happens to this guy (laughs).

After the Kennedy assassination, during a discussion between Angelo Bruno and his lieutenants, one participant remarked: "It's too bad his brother Bobby was not in the car, too." [HSCA V5 Pgs. 134, 172; V9 pl6]

RAY BRANTLEY AND THE COBRAS

During RUBY'S testimony he was asked:

Did you talk to McWillie down in Cuba?" RUBY: "He is the credit manager in the Tropicana...He was a key man over the Tropicana down there. That was during our good times. Was in harmony with our enemy of our present time. I made the trip down there via New Orleans, and so I stayed at the Volk's apartments, and I was with him constantly. I was bored gambling, because I don't gamble, and there is nothing unless you speak their language, which is Spanish, I believe. And that was the only environment. That was in August 1959. Any thought of being close to Havana, Cuba, I called him frequently because he was down there, and he was the last person to leave if I recall, when they had to leave, when he left the casino...The only other association with him was, there was a gentleman here that sells guns. He has a hardware store on Singleton Avenue. Have I told this to you gentlemen? It is Ray's hardware store. His name is Ray Brantley. This was - I don't recall when [McWillie] called me, but he was a little worried of the new regime coming in, and evidently he wanted some protection. He called me or sent me a letter that I should call Ray Brantley. He wanted some four little Cobra guns - big shipment. So me, I should say myself, rather, feeling no harm, I didn't realize, because he wasn't sending them to me, and I thought there was no crime, the man wanted protection, he is earning a livelihood. I called Ray Brantley and I said, 'Ray, McWillie called me.' I don't remember if he sent a letter or he called. He said he wants four little Cobra's or something like that. He said 'I know Mac. [Mack Blaney Johnson?] I have been doing business with him for a long time.' Meaning with reference to when he was living in Texas. He did a lot of hunting and things like that. That was the only relationship I had of any mention, outside of phone calls, to McWillie, or any person from Havana, Cuba. [Brantley] denies I ever called. Evidently he feels, maybe he feels it would be illegal to send guns out of the country. I don't know if you gentlemen know the law. I don't know the law...Could have been prior to the early part of 1959...

Ray Brantley said his records reflected that RUBY purchased a Colt Cobra on January 19, 1960, and that on May 10, 1963, he mailed a .38 caliber Smith and Wesson revolver to Lewis J. McWillie in Las Vegas. RUBY was apprised of Ray Brantley's statement and remarked "...he denies that he ever got a call from me, definitely that makes it look like I am hiding something..." [FBI FD-302 with Brantley 11.24.63 Irving, Texas; WCD4 pgs.23, 25] When this interviewer spoke to Ray Brantley in 1977 he told me: "JACK RUBY is as far from Fidel Castro and the mafia as Billy Carter is to Lady Bird Johnson."

The HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about the Cobras.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection to know that JACK RUBY said that you requested four Cobras in 1959?

A. No. it doesn't. The only gun I can remember is a gun he sent out here and I let it go back, didn't take it out of the...

Q. Can you think of any reason you would have wanted guns in 1959?

A. No reason I would have wanted guns in 1959. I was in Cuba. I'd get myself killed if I had guns over there.

R.D. MATTHEWS AND A PLOT TO HIT CASTRO

R.D. Matthews was in Havana from July 1958 until January 1959. R.D. Matthews told the HSCA that when he moved to Cuba in 1958 he purchased the Sportsman's Club, which was located in the lobby of the Plaza Hotel, and he resided at the Hotel Deauville. In interviews with the FBI he stated he worked in the gambling casino of the Hotel Deauville. [HSCA V9 para.1054] R.D. Matthews was a co-conspirator in the mob's initial plot to hit Fidel. R.D. Matthews had returned to Cuba in February 1959 and purchased another club. A 1959 FBI report stated R.D. Matthews move to Cuba was made on behalf of TRAFFICANTE. In 1978 TRAFFICANTE told the HSCA that the mob's first plan was to hit Fidel Castro, gangland style, on a Havana street. [HSCA V9 p1054; Miami Herald 9.29.78] A 1962 FBI report confirmed this: A FBI informant overheard a conversation between R.D. Matthews and (FNU) Paxton "during which both men admitted having worked for TRAFFICANTE. The Embers Club in Havana and the Sans Souci were mentioned. The informant stated it was apparent that R.D. Matthews was in the Dallas rackets and had worked for a big time gambling house in Havana." In his HSCA deposition R.D. Matthews denied having known TRAFFICANTE and also stated he had no association with the Sans Suci casino. In November 1959 R.D. Matthews left Havana and returned to Dallas. R.D. Matthews was also connected with Sheriff Bill Decker. In 1959 the FBI questioned Sheriff Decker about his alleged mob ties. Sheriff Decker admitted that he had known R.D. Matthews all of his adult life. A FBI report dated 1960 stated that R.D. Matthews lived with a known prostitute and operated a Bail Bond and Loan Company. In 1961 R.D. Matthews worked for Clayton Fowler and lived in an apartment house owned by Clayton Fowler. Clayton Fowler became one of RUBY'S defense attorneys in 1964. On January 29, 1961, R.D. Matthews and James Robert Todd were arrested on Vagrancy charges. R.D. Matthews was termed a "notorious criminal" by the FBI and the Dallas Police arrested him. From 1961 to 1963 R.D. Matthews frequented several Dallas gaming clubs and was included among a group of people considered the higher echelon in Dallas bookmaking. [HSCA V9 para. 1054]

On January 2, 1961, Lewis J. McWillie left Cuba aboard a commercial flight. On January 3, 1961, the United States broke diplomatic relations with the Castro regime. During the flight Lewis J. McWillie noticed that there was an old man aboard who wore a Fair Play For Cuba button on his lapel. When the aircraft landed, Lewis J. McWillie walked up to him and punched the man. Lewis J. McWillie stayed in Miami for a few weeks then flew to Dallas where he conferred with RUBY. A job was waiting for Lewis J. McWillie at the Cal Neva Lounge at Lake Tahoe, Nevada. [WCE 1692; WCD 686d]

FRANK SINATRA AND THE CAL NEVA LOUNGE

In the late 1940's the Cal Neva Lounge was owned by Bones Remmer, a gambler and friend of RUBY linked to the mob by the Kefauver Committee. In July 1960 Frank Sinatra applied to the Nevada Casino Commission for permission to buy an interest in the Cal-Neva. Frank Sinatra was widely believed to have represented the mafia in this transaction. In May 1963 Frank Sinatra vacationed with Sam Giancana in Hawaii. In July 1963 Sam Giancana visited the Cal-Neva Lounge despite the fact that he was barred from entering any Nevada Casino. [NYT 7.14.60 p42; 10.23.63, p5l, 10.8.63 p3l, 9.14.63 p2l, 10.9.63 p3l, 9.12.63 p26, 11.20.63, pl, 4.14.76, p1, Kefauver Hearings, Test. of Mr. Brown and M. Mooney pgs. 439,549, 1074] In October 1963 the Nevada Gaming Commission revoked Frank Sinatra's casino licenses. A few days later, Frank Sinatra announced that he had quit the gaming business. In 1972 Frank Sinatra sold his private jet to the Union Insurance Agency of Illinois, which was once owned by the Dorfman family. [Chicago Trib. 10.10.77; Chicago Sun Times 6.18.72]

ROBERT KENNEDY AND ORGANIZED CRIME

When United States Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy took office, the New Orleans newspapers carried stories that he planned a Federal investigation of Jefferson Parish. Angelo Bruno remarked, "CARLOS MARCELLO had got in contact with SANTO TRAFFICANTE, who contacted a representative in Chicago. This Chicago contact was alleged to have contacted Frank Sinatra, who spoke with the President's brother. Apparently he was referring to the Attorney General." [FBI NO 92-36 RLK/mam]

Did Sam Giancana have Frank Sinatra contact RFK on CARLOS MARCELLO'S behalf? In December 1961 CG T-51 related that John Drew, in a discussion with Sam Giancana, "had attempted in some degree to convince Sam Giancana that Frank Sinatra had made some attempts to dissuade the Justice Department through Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy from conducting the intensified investigation being conducted on Sam Giancana and his activities. Drew said Sam Giancana was not at all satisfied with the effects..." [FBI CG 92-349]

When Lewis J. McWillie worked at the Cal-Neva Lounge in early 1961, Sam Giancana was in the midst of recruiting an assassination squad for use against Fidel Castro. [NYT 5.24.75 pl.] Lewis J. McWillie denied having spoken with Sam Giancana, or even having seen him on the premises, yet logic dictated otherwise. Lewis J. McWillie could have provided Sam Giancana with information about the situation in Cuba. When questioned by the HSCA, Lewis J. McWillie denied having known Sam Giancana:

Q. Do you know a Mr. Sam Giancana?

A. No.

Q. Have you heard of Mr. Giancana?

A. I don't know him.

Q. Have you ever met Mr. Giancana?

A. No.

RUBY'S CRIMINAL RECORD

Aside from his association with numerous gangsters, arms runners and career criminals, it was apparent from RUBY'S criminal record that he was involved with prostitution in Dallas. RUBY recruited underage girls from out of state to work for him. A confidential source told S.A. Gemberling that she obtained a job for Bethel 'Babs' Kramer through JACK RUBY, as a stripper at the Carousel Club: "She stated that Bethel would be staying with the Carousel bartender and his wife. She described Bethel merely as a white female who would be 18 years of age on December 21, 1961...The source understands JACK RUBY is going to obtain identification for Bethel reflecting she is 21 years of age." In June 1961 RUBY was mentioned in the report of a Potential Criminal Informant concerning prostitution in Dallas. [FBI DL-137-976 6.5.61] The report was generated by S.A.'s Kenneth Howe and Robert Gemberling: "Potential Criminal Informant Helen Afanace Roan stated that she knows JACK RUBY and that he is 'no good.' She stated he will not permit a girl to work for him unless she is intimate with him."

ROBERT PERRIN

At this time RUBY was actively engaged in smuggling arms to anti-Castro forces within Cuba. Robert Perrin worked with RUBY in this effort. The CIA reported:

Robert Pollock Perrin, Lt. (jg) USMC was security approved for OSS employment on March 14, 1944, but there was no indication that he ever was so employed. A note in his file dated March 25, 1944, states 'Will employ ETO (European Theater of Operations) if Navy slot available.' Office of Security Indices Results: Subject's file reflects the security approval of OSS employment as stated above. A PHS submitted at the time contains the following information: Robert Pollock PERRIN was born December 26, 1912 at Carlinville, Illinois. His legal residence was given as Du Page Country Club, R.D. Plainfield, Illinois. At the time he was a Lt. (jg) USNR stationed at Rochester, New York...It is noted that Subject's listed character reference, Morton Bodfish, was Deputy Chief, NO Branch, OSS, and was the person who scheduled Subject's security investigation. The only derogatory information developed during the investigation was that PERRIN's wife, Chelsea Jean (STANSBURY) Perrin, born June 23, 1918 at Chicago, Illinois, left him and joined the WAC's because of PERRIN's attention to other women. [CIA 9.18.68 40335-122]

Robert Perrin was alleged to have smuggled guns to Franco. He owned a boat that was docked in Miami, and was a daredevil driver in an auto thrill show titled "Jack Starr's Spills and Chills."

BARBARA JEAN ZEIDMAN

In 1959 Robert Perrin married Nancy Mathews who was born in Portsmouth, New Hampshire on September 9, 1936, as Barbara Jean Zeidman, and was adopted at age eight months by the Mathews family. She was described as a white female, 5' 5", slender build, brown hair, wild eyed, partly crossed, and talked with a lisp. Nancy Perrin married Charles Glenn Wilson in 1953, whom she divorced in 1955. In 1956 she attempted suicide, then committed herself to a mental hospital. In 1957 she married Louis E. Musachio, who was more often than not confined to Air Force psychiatric hospitals. She divorced him in 1959.

Nancy and Robert Perrin moved to Colorado. Nancy Perrin was arrested in Denver in 1960 for carrying a concealed weapon. She was fined $25. There, according to Nancy: "I acted as a hostess for men who were in the syndicate - you know the mafia - headed by Vito Genovese. I knew a man they called Young 'Piggy' Marchese - he was a syndicate member from New York who was hiding out in Denver - a big, fat sloppy fellow."

The FBI checked its criminal index for "Piggy" Marchese and discovered: "Las Vegas indices reflect Vincent Marchese aka "Piggy Mac" Marchese operates the Opera Lounge, St. Louis, and is reported to be a gambler, bookie, hoodlum, and associate of hoodlums, and has served a Federal prison sentence for narcotics." A cousin of "Piggy" Marchese was part of the French Connection narcotics case, and his uncle, Frank Pisciotta, was the number two mafia don in the St. Louis area. There was a "Piggy" Marchese and he could have hid out in Denver.

The FBI ignored this report and cited interviews with everyone named "Marchese" who lived in Denver. Both Michael and Rudy Marchese said they never used the nick-name

"Piggy," nor had anyone ever called them that. The FBI determined that Nancy Perrin lied about having known "Piggy" Marchese.

Circa 1960, Robert Perrin and Nancy Perrin separated. Nancy Perrin said that in the later part of 1960 she worked as "lobbyist" for the liquor industry in Boston and New Hampshire. Nancy Perrin had sexual relations with members of the Legislature in return for their votes. In 1961 she was arrested in Boston for prostitution and fined $200. Sometime in 1961 she received information that her husband had gone to Dallas. Nancy Perrin said she called Dallas and spoke with Officer J.D. TIPPIT. When she came to Dallas in June 1961 she only had $4 and went directly to the Police Department. Detective Paul Rayburn of the Juvenile Division found her a place to live. The FBI questioned Detective Paul Rayburn on December 6, 1963. He admitted having had a "close personal" relationship with Nancy Perrin who he described as a "psychopathic liar." Detective Paul Rayburn knew RUBY for about ten years. Nancy Perrin moved to Dallas where she worked for RUBY.

During her employment at the Carousel Club Nancy ran into "Piggy" Marchese." "Piggy" Marchese, who was there to visit RUBY, suggested that she leave Dallas and get a job with Lou Brindisi at the Silver Slipper in Las Vegas. Nancy Perrin exhibited the business card of Louis Brindisi. Louis Brindisi was questioned by the FBI in Las Vegas, Nevada, on December 6, 1963. He advised that he knew no one in the Denver area who used the name "Piggy" Marchese. The only Marcheses he knew in Denver were Rudy and Mike Marchese. The FBI confirmed that in August 1962 several St. Louis hoodlums, who were meeting in Dallas, were arrested and photographed by the Dallas Police Department. The FBI document which contained this information was highly deleted. Was "Piggy" Marchese was among the group? The FBI reported that Vincent Marchesi, wa., "Piggy" was a crook with St Louis PD #31875

VINCENT MARCHESI, wa., "PIGGY"
St. Louis PD #31875

Nancy Perrin testified, in a vague sort of way, that she saw a member of the Genovese family of New York in RUBY'S club. Nancy Perrin was arrested for prostitution twice during the Summer of 1961 but the charges were reduced to vagrancy. Nancy Perrin was represented by Cy Victorson, JACK RUBY'S attorney. Nancy Perrin worked at RUBY'S Carousel Club that summer until Nancy Perrin and JACK RUBY had a falling out. She then worked at another club, but became ill.

It was during this time (between August and November 1961) that Dick Cherry, a bartender at the University Club who arranged prostitution dates for Nancy Perrin, arranged for her and Robert Perrin to meet with an Army Colonel in connection with taking Cuban refugees from Cuba to Miami. When they arrived at the Colonel's house he was in uniform, and some reference was made to Enfield rifles. At another meeting JACK RUBY walked in. There was a discussion as to how to get refugees into Miami, what bay to pick them up at, and there was also a mention of military equipment and Enfield rifles, "which were going to be delivered to Castro." Nancy Perrin said when she heard the guns were going to Fidel Castro she became upset, because she was loyal to the United States, and against Communism. She was under the impression that RUBY furnished the money for this activity. Despite her qualms, Nancy Perrin and Robert Perrin attended one more meeting. She said this one happened while she worked for RUBY. This contradicted her previous statement that all the meetings occurred after her employment with RUBY was terminated.

Dave Cherry denied Nancy Perrin's charges, but admitted having known her. Dave Cherry told the FBI that Nancy Perrin was a deadbeat who was barred from the club. He described her as mentally deranged and incoherent in her speech. The University Club was owned by Benny Bickers, Lewis J. McWillie's former boss. Dick Shurian, a reporter from Los Angeles told the FBI that in 1958 RUBY was a close friend of the owner of the University Club, name unknown. [FBI Dallas 44-1639-639]

Nancy Perrin had furnished reliable information to local police departments in the past and was about as reliable as "junkie hooker snitches" came. Nancy Perrin stated that RUBY smuggled B.A.R.s. In April 1964, the Dallas Police Department checked the personnel at the garages and service stations patronized by RUBY. The Dallas Police discovered that a station attendant, Donnell Darius Whitter, who serviced RUBY'S car had been arrested on November 18, 1963, for possession of two B.A.R.s which had been taken during a burglary of the National Guard Headquarters at Terrell, Texas. Nancy Perrin referred to a man named "Youngblood." Scott Malone wrote: "Another name she mentioned was transcribed by the Warren Commission first as "Ed Brunner" and then as "Eddie Brawner" from Miami. This has lead some to suspect she was referring to Eddie Browder, who was from Miami and was in Texas at the time of the meeting." The CIA: "One Robert Perrin allegedly met with JACK RUBY, Col. L. Robert Castorr and others in Dallas in 1962 to plan a Cuban smuggling operation. Robert Perrin has been accused of being a CIA gun-runner in Spain and Cuba." [CIA 9.18.68 40335-122]

In July 1963 Nancy Perrin worked with the Oakland Police Department and investigated an abortion case which resulted in a conviction. She became a paid informant of the Oakland Police Department.

THE DEATH OF ROBERT PERRIN

Robert Perrin died in August 28, 1963, in New Orleans, of arsenic poisoning. A suicide note was found in his apartment that made reference to a woman assumed to be his wife. The police report on his death read: "Two date, two things stand out in this incident.

(1) The victim telephoned the State Police, rather than the City Police, and a State Police employee identified the victims body...

(2) The apparent suicide note addressed to 'Slim,' who apparently is the Subject's wife, stated that she had obviously gone to Baton Rouge which is central headquarters for State Police. The 'Art' mentioned in his note is probably A.R. Wick who identified the body. This appears to have been an apparent suicide, however, we are unable to state where or when the Subject obtained possession of the arsenic, and pending further tests, we will await the findings of the Coroner's Office.

On April 11, 1964, Nancy Perrin married Francis L. Rich. Nancy Perrin began to receive anonymous threatening calls and was followed from her home in Massachusetts. When she gave the license plate number of the car she thought was following her to the police, it traced back to a construction worker named John S. Alberto.

The FBI in Dallas was ordered to make every effort to "resolve information furnished by Perrin concerning running guns to Castro in Cuba" [FBI DL 44-1639-1331] Nancy Perrin's story was discounted by the Warren Commission and the FBI even though she did not fail a lie detector test - the results were inconclusive "based on Perrin's past medical history and use of drugs." Nancy Perrin had taken 10 milligrams of methedrine before taking the test. Nancy Perrin was asked:

(1) Do you know JACK RUBY?

(3) Were you employed by JACK RUBY?

(4) Have you seen JACK RUBY since 1961?

(5) Do you know why RUBY killed OSWALD? [crossed out]

(6) Do you know Tippit?

(7) Do you know Piggy Marchese? #2 Details of meeting

(1) 1st meeting (husband, girl hustler, Dick C. her)

(2) Where? What happened?

(3) 2nd meeting? When?

(4) Did RUBY attend it? How can you be sure? [all #2 was crossed out and replaced] #2

(1) In summer 1961 were you living in Dallas?

(2) Did you attend meetings concerning gun running?

(3) Was RUBY there?

(7) Did Piggy Marchese contact RUBY in Dallas?

(8) Is story you have told true?

(9) In Dallas did you hustle?

(10) Are you now hustling?

FRANK CHAVEZ

On November 26, 1963, the FBI in Washington and Dallas received this radiogram:

Administrative page, at San Juan Puerto Rico (deleted) San Juan, advised S.A. Royal L. Blassingame on November 26, 1963, instant: Anna Maria Del Valle, Secretary Treasurer Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union, was approached by Migel Cruz, organizer for Local 901, Teamster's Union who made a statement 'Now that we've taken care of President Kennedy we'll have no trouble taking over things.' (Deleted) also furnished above information to USDOJ...

Anna Del Valle advised the FBI that on November 22, 1963, Migel Cruz told her "They killed Kennedy and the second will be Ramos Ducos." Ramos Ducos was President of Local 610, Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union. When Ramos Ducos was questioned he told the FBI that he heard Frank Chavez mention the name of JACK RUBY as someone who was connected with the Teamster's Union in the early 1960's.

Sometime in about September 1961, Frank Chavez told Ramos Ducos that [he] had an appointment to meet Richard Kavner, International Vice President of the Teamsters Union, and JACK RUBY as well as a third Teamster official whose name he could not recall. The meeting was to be in San Juan.

Richard Kavner, a St. Louis teamster, was a close associate of Barney Baker and Paul Dorfman, while Frank Chavez, the head of Teamster Local 901, had a record for carrying a concealed weapon and attempted murder. When United States Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy indicted Frank Chavez, Frank Ragano was hired to represent Chavez who was head Puerto-Rican Teamsters. Frank Chavez became a staunch Kennedy hater. In 1964 he wrote a threatening letter to Robert F. Kennedy which contained a reference to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. When Frank Chavez traveled to Washington in March 1964, the Kennedy family was given 24 hour police protection. Frank Chavez, too violent and unpredictable for a permanent place in the Teamster hierarchy, was killed by his bodyguard in early 1965. [FBI 44-24016-207; FBI DL 44-1639 11.26.63 at San Juan P.R. re: Anna Maria Del Valle, Leopold Ramos Ducos by R.L. Blassingame; Slawson Notes p86]

In early 1962 RUBY had a conversation with Robert Lee Shorman, a musician in one of the bands that played at the Carousel Club. RUBY told Robert Lee Shorman he was originally from Chicago where he made a living by running a floating crap game and that he had to leave Chicago when things got "too hot." Robert Lee Shorman observed numerous police officers, uniformed and plain clothes, on duty and off, in the Carousel Club. Robert Lee Shorman never saw any of them pay for a drink. The only police officer Robert Lee Shorman knew by name was Will Fritz, head of Dallas, Homicide Squad. In all, Robert Lee Shorman saw 150 to 200 police officers go in and out of RUBY'S place in the month he worked for him. [WCE 1250; WCE 1505] In March 1962, Mary Hartford, the former secretary to Pat Gannaway, the Officer in Charge, Special Services Bureau, of Narcotics, Vice and Criminal Intelligence of the Dallas Police Department, worked for RUBY. [FBI 44-1639-1240] After the assassination of President John F. Kennedy Pat Gannaway provided the FBI with an incomplete report on RUBY. Pat Gannaway was interviewed by Special Agents Robert M. Barrett and Ivan D. Lee. Barrett and Lee were the Agents assigned to interview Joe Campisi and other MARCELLO linked figures in Dallas. They were assigned by FBI SAC Gordon Shanklin. [WCE 3021; FBI 44-939 12.3.63 Houston] RUBY'S personal papers contained the business card of W.E. Naylor of the Austin, Texas, narcotics squad. W.E. Naylor said he contacted RUBY three times in 1963 on official business. [FBI 44-1639-1844, 2082]

FRANK ANTHONY CORTELLI

Sally Kruckeberg told the FBI that Frank Anthony Cortelli (born February 23, 1919) telephoned her on the Sunday that OSWALD was slain. He asked what she thought of that "meatball RUBY." He said it was his opinion that RUBY shot OSWALD to shut him up. Cortelli told her he had met RUBY in Miami Beach and he was a "bum." Sally Kruckeberg described Cortelli as a big spender. The files of the Miami Beach Police Department reflected Frank Anthony Cortelli registered as bartender in October 1961 at Puccini's, a mob hangout. The FBI "noted Cortelli denies knowing RUBY, and does not name any associates in this area. In view of this, Miami taking no further action concerning Cortelli." [FBI 44-1639-1302, 1344; FBI 44-1639, 1119, 746]

THE TELEGRAM TO HAVANA

On April 1, 1962, RUBY'S brother Earl Ruby sent a telegram of an undisclosed nature to Havana, Cuba. The National Security Administration routinely monitored all cable traffic between Cuba and the United States and obtained a copy of the "April Fools Day" telegram. When this researcher applied for a copy of this document under the Freedom of Information Act, the National Security Administration refused to confirm or deny its existence, and cited several statutes. In 1977 this researcher filed suit in Federal District Court against the National Security Administration, challenging its determination in this matter. The National Security Administration argued that release of the document would deal a "crippling blow" to United States intelligence because it would show the enemies of America the channels being monitored in April 1962, as a result of its "pinpointed" nature. This researcher argued that the SSCIA had already declassified the fact that all cable traffic between the United States and Cuba was monitored by National Security Administration as part of OPERATION SHAMROCK, beginning in 1959. The Warren Commission, by having included a report which stated that the telegram appeared on the telephone bill of Earl Ruby, not only declassified the sender, date, etc. but also indicated the cable went via Western Union, since Western Union was the only cable company allowed to charge cables to a phone number.

District Court Judge Charles R. Brieant agreed that the American people had a right to see this telegram:

There is nothing secret or confidential now about OPERATION SHAMROCK, if we assume as we must, that the unnamed, unfriendly foreign intelligence subscribes to the publication of the U.S. Government Printing Office and can read English. Its cover has been blown by the Church Committee. The issue in this case is not whether the RUBY message itself is exempt from disclosure. Clearly, it is not. Rather, this Court must determine whether National Security Administration properly withheld the fact of existence, or non-existence of the information requested.

Judge Charles R. Brieant quoted the affidavit of the National Security Administration:

Even if we assume that National Security Administration has the requested message, it would not be possible to ascertain whether such material had been derived from SHAMROCK, or another source...If this is true and National Security Administration cannot ascertain which collection source (SHAMROCK, or some other method) obtained the RUBY message, how can it be said that foreign intelligence could discover or ascertain that source? Such a result would suggest the absurd conclusion that certain foreign powers already know more about the operations of the National Security Administration than U.S.A. does. I shall direct disclosure of whether or not the message referred to in the complaint exists, and if it does, shall direct a copy be furnished to WEBERMAN by the National Security Administration.

Rather than appealing this ruling, the National Security Administration made a motion for re-argument and in camera presentation of evidence and affidavits. After this meeting, at which my attorney was not present, Judge Charles R. Brieant reversed himself. [77-Civ-50-58-CLB-USDC/SDNY]

RUBY AND THE PLOT TO KILL OSWALD

By early 1963 Fidel Castro was entrenched in Cuba. All the mob casinos had been closed and Cuba was dependent on Soviet aid instead of gambling revenues. In April 1963, Cuba was again on RUBY'S mind. He called Clarence Rector, who was in Cuba in 1959. Clarence Rector, who had known RUBY since 1950, told the FBI that RUBY had told him, back in 1960, that he had some gambling-concessions in Cuba. [HSCA V9 p192] In May 1963 RUBY'S long distance telephone calls increased. Suspicious calls peaked in early August 1963, then dropped off until September, when they began an incline that lasted until RUBY'S incarceration. The number of all of RUBY'S toll calls increased from an average of 25 to 35 in May through September, to 75 in October, to 96 in November. [HSCA V10 p123-Fonzi] RUBY was getting involved in something. RUBY:

Some persons are accusing me falsely of being part of the plot...that I was party to a plot to silence OSWALD...They already have me as the accused assassin of our beloved President. Now if I sound screwy telling you this, then I must be screwy.

Earl Warren responded:

...there has been no witness before this Commission out of the hundreds we have questioned who has claimed to have any personal knowledge that you were a party to a conspiracy to kill our President.

RUBY contradicted Earl Warren: "Yes; but you don't know this area here."

On August 29, 1963, RUBY called Lewis J. McWillie at the Thunderbird Hotel and Casino. Two days later he called him again, just before he left for New York City. On August 4, 1963, RUBY checked into the New York Hilton Hotel. As soon as he got to his room he called the Old French Opera House in New Orleans. After RUBY got off the phone with Harold Tannenbaum, or whom ever was on the other end of the line, he called Michael Shore in Los Angeles. [WCE 1581]

REPRISE RECORDS

Michael Shore worked for Reprise Records, which, at the time, was regarded by many journalists as a syndicate front. Frank Sinatra owned Reprise Records, and he owned it at the same time he owned the Cal-Neva Lounge. He sold Reprise to Warner Brothers around the same time he gave up his interest in the Cal-Neva Lounge. [NYT 8.8.63; FBI CA-44-895-EJK:mjg cover pgs. O, P, Q, R, U]. The Los Angeles FBI Field Office had an informant at Reprise Records who reported that the daughter of a syndicate jewel thief worked there as a secretary, and that Reprise employees were calling all over the country and had placed large bets. In 1963 the FBI interviewed Michael Shore about the conviction of his friend, Marvin R. Cole, on Obstruction of Justice charges. Michael Shore told them that Cole was one of "Doc Stacher's boys." Joseph "Doc" Stacher was described by the FBI as a hoodlum, and associate of top hoodlums, who knew most of the important criminals in the United States and Europe. Joseph "Doc" Stacher had an arrest record that dated back to 1924. He was an associate of the late Abner "Longey" Zwillman and was considered as a lieutenant of the Zwillman mob engaged in bootlegging activities in New Jersey during prohibition days. In addition to gambling interests in the East, Joseph "Doc" Stacher, in connection with Abner "Longey" Zwillman, was alleged to have penetrated gambling interests in Reno and Las Vegas, Nevada, and, after the death of Abner "Longey" Zwillman, Joseph "Doc" Stacher was reputed to have taken over control of the remnants of the Abner "Longey" Zwillman mob. Joseph "Doc" Stacher was listed as an associate of Frank Costello, Frank Erickson and Meyer Lansky. Michael Shore told the FBI that he had been responsible for starting Marvin Cole out in business and had loaned money to Marvin Cole so that Marvin Cole might buy points in the Fremont Casino in Las Vegas. [FBI Los Angeles 44-895, DL 44-1039 GAP: JM cover page C] A check of the Fremont Casino's licenses revealed that Marvin Cole owned 9% of the Fremont Casino. The largest point-holder was Ed Levinson, a well-known front man for Meyer Lansky. Marvin Cole was connected with Louis J. Lederer, the secretary-treasurer of the Tropicana Hotel in Las Vegas. When Frank Costello was shot in 1957 a paper with figures in Louis J. Lederer's handwriting regarding receipts at the Tropicana was found on Frank Costello. [FBI Los Angeles 92-113] Michael Shore was investigated by the FBI at least three times.

In his youth Shore had been a member of the Communist Party:

On March 8, 1949 Horace Morton Newman, County Educational Director of the Los Angeles County Communist Party was placed under arrest by a US Marshal. Subsequently his personnel effects were made available to Special Agents Bardwell D. Odum and W. George Goold by A. Antallia, Jailer at the Los Angeles County Jail. Examination of these personnel effects brought to light two sheets of yellow paper. One contained a list of eleven names; the other contained numbered comments, apparently corresponding to the names on the first sheet. It would appear from these comments that these are persons in the Hollywood section of the Communist Party who are being considered for expulsion from the Party. Opposite the name of Mike Shore was the notation, "Friendly to us, but has bad connections that may be dangerous, continuing to give money etc."

On November 27, 1963, the FBI questioned Michael Shore about his relationship with RUBY. Michael Shore stated that he had never met RUBY, but did know his brother Earl, in Chicago, in the 1930's, when they were growing up. Michael Shore's association with Earl Ruby lasted until 1954 when Earl Ruby moved to Detroit. Earl Ruby and Michael Shore knew each other for 24 years without Earl Ruby having introduced Michael Shore to his brother JACK? Not a likely story. Michael Shore was also connected to RUBY through Irwin Weiner, who was a close friend of both men. [WCD 86 pgs. 10-15, 487; WCE 1507, Newsweek 3.3.47] Michael Shore claimed that RUBY called him about some "labor trouble" he was having and he referred him to the President of the Associated Booking Corporation. The FBI attempted to question Joseph "Doc" Stacher associate Max Unterberg about RUBY. [FBI 44-169-3858] He died of a heart attack in November 28, 1963.

SIDNEY KORSHAK

On August 5, 1963, RUBY visited Joe Glaser, President of Associated Booking. In 1962 Joe Glaser assigned all of the "voting rights, dominion and control" of his majority stock in the concern to Sidney Korshak. [FBI NY 44-974 cover page K; FBI 44-1639 12.19.63 at Dallas, James F. Glonek: BL] Sidney Korshak was born in 1907 in Chicago's West Side, the son of Jewish immigrants. Soon after his graduation from law school Sidney Korshak defended members of the Capone mob. In the late 1930's he was associated with JIMMY HOFFA and Paul Dorfman, and in 1943, he was named in a case that involved Johnny Rosselli. In the years following World War II documents from the McClellan Committee listed him as one of "three key figures in bookmaking" in downtown Chicago during that period. The New York Times reported that by the early 1950's "Mr. Korshak often drove to weekend business meetings with Sam Giancana and Tony Accardo." [NYT 9.27-30.76 - Sy Hersh] In the late 1950's Sidney Korshak testified before a Federal Grand Jury about a contract involving Anthony Accardo. On May 15, 1967, Sidney Korshak was involved in an alleged attempt to dissuade Ed Reid from publishing his information about CARLOS MARCELLO'S death threat against the Kennedy brothers. In a conversation with an FBI informant that took place one day after Ed Reid supplied the FBI with his manuscript, Sidney Korshak discussed Ed Becker and "Korshak inquired as to who Ed Becker was, and advised that Becker was trying to shake down some of Korshak's friends for money by claiming he is the collaborator with Reid, and that for money he could keep their names out of the book." The memorandum also stated that Sidney Korshak had further stated that Ed Becker was a "no-good shakedown artist." [HSCA V9 p69, V9p79]

On whose behalf did Korshak attempt to quash the CARLOS MARCELLO death threat story? In 1968 a Justice Department report described him as perhaps "the most significant link in the relationship between the crime syndicate political labor and management." The FBI never questioned Sidney Korshak about RUBY despite RUBY'S close association with Associated Booking in Dallas and his visit to their offices in New York City. The FBI concluded that Joe Glaser "is believed to be the sole stockholder in this corporation."

When RUBY returned to his hotel room in Manhattan he called Michael Shore again. On August 6, 1963, RUBY flew back to Dallas. A day later he called a number in Chicago and spoke with Sheri Aston for 34 minutes. On August 19, 1963, August 20, 1963, and August 22, 1963, RUBY called Lewis J. McWillie at the Thunderbird. In early September 1963 Harold Tannenbaum visited RUBY in Dallas. A meeting was held at the Cabana Motel which was located near the Trademart in Dallas. JOHN MARTINO was in Texas beginning on September 30, 1963: he was in Houston and Austin on October 1, 1963, Dallas, on October 2, 1963, Austin on October 3, 1963, Houston on October 4, 1963 and had also been in New Orleans, Miami.

THE CABANA MOTEL

The Cabana was built in the mid-1950s with Teamster Union Funds. RUBY had commented about the connection between JIMMY HOFFA and the Cabana Motel to his bookkeeper, and his nightclub shared several employees with the Cabana Motel. [FBI 44-24016-1196; FBI HO-44-939 11.25.63 at Corpus Christi, Texas; FBI DL 44-1639 by George Denton; FBI DL 44-1639 11.25.63 Dallas Thomas M. O'Malley; WCE 1229 p531; CE 1644; FBI-44-24016-884] RUBY was meeting with two men and a woman that day. Mrs. Howard Summers of Odessa, Texas, saw the four men, as did R. E. Lee of Seattle, Washington. Mrs. Howard Summers told the FBI:

I heard them talking - talking about a meeting that they were gonna hold. At the time I was sure the meeting had something to do with JIMMY HOFFA, who I understand owns the Cabana. We happened to be sitting at an adjoining table and happened to overhear their rather loud conversation.

[FBI 44-24016-268; 62-109060-5941]

Ruby frequented the Cabana Motel since its construction and used it as a safe-house for criminal operations. All of this telephonic and travel activity on the part of JACK RUBY did not concern obtaining sleazy dime-a-dozen strippers for his greasy dive. He could have done this in a fraction of the time. The calls concerned RUBY'S part in the Kennedy assassination - the elimination of OSWALD.

RUBY'S ALLEGED MEETING WITH ROSSELLI

Scott Malone reported that in early September 1963 RUBY flew to Miami where he had at least two meetings with Johnny Rosselli. When the HSCA final Report was published, this statement was omitted since it could not be satisfactorily verified. None-the-less researcher Scott Malone verified it with two law enforcement sources, who later recanted. Lewis J. McWillie, admitted "seeing" Johnny Rosselli:

I didn't know him. I seen him around town here like I told the FBI and then Mr. Fenton [a HSCA investigator]. There wouldn't be any way I'd know that Mr. Giancana, or Mr. Rosselli, had interests in Cuban casinos. I never heard of it, no. What attracted me to Mr. Rosselli was any time I ever saw him, he had on dark glasses.

Lewis J. McWillie was questioned about the death of Johnny Rosselli by the FBI. [HSCA V5 p111]

JACK RUBY'S TOLL CALLS

JACK RUBY - TOLL CALLS - 1963

HAROLD TANNENBAUM

CAROLINE WALKER
 CA-7-6297-HOUSTON
 HAROLD TANNENBAUM
 CLUB-5238930-NEW HOME 2423401 ORLEANS

On May 7, 1963, RUBY placed a three minute call to Harold Tannenbaum (born June 12, 1926) in New Orleans. The number he dialed (523-9468) connected him to the Sho-Bar on Bourbon Street. [WCE 2303] The Sho-Bar was a strip joint whose corporate structure was set up by former State Senator Salvador Anselmo for PETER MARCELLO. Harold Tannenbaum was the manager of the Old French Opera House, a Bourbon Street strip joint. He had been arrested on January 11, 1963, and charged with allowing a lewd and obscene act on the premises of the French Opera House. He and his wife lived at the Tropical Tourist Courts Trailer Park, which was owned by the MARCELLO family. Mrs. Tannenbaum was a cashier at the Sho-Bar. On May 9, 1963, Harold Tannenbaum went to a pay phone and called RUBY at the home of Juanita Slusher, after which he called Joe Spicola a Tampa, Florida, nightclub owner. The family of Joe Spicola owned a large hardware store in Tampa. The TRAFFICANTE family was also in the hardware business in Tampa. On May 9, 1963, Harold Tannenbaum called RUBY'S home number. On May 10, 1963, Harold Tannenbaum visited Miami. While Harold Tannenbaum was in Miami RUBY called Lewis J. McWillie who, in early 1963, worked at the Thunderbird Casino, a syndicate holding. Lewis J. McWillie told the FBI:

I am certain RUBY has no underworld connections, I have never known him to be involved in prostitution or gambling. He had no connections with Castro or Batista supporters. There was no arrangement or liaison between the gambling interests and Castro. RUBY called me about a labor matter in November and to my knowledge never visited Las Vegas.

On the same day he called Lewis J. McWillie (May 12, 1963), RUBY called the Dream Lounge, in Cicero, Illinois, a gambling joint controlled by Sam Giancana. On November 30, 1963, the FBI interviewed Jacob Yonover, the manager of the Dream Lounge. Jacob Yonover stated he had known RUBY and his family most of his life. He dated one of RUBY'S sisters. Jacob Yonover claimed he was not in touch with RUBY for 15 years and there had been no contact between them until about two months ago when they exchanged about three telephone calls. [FBI 89-69 11.29.63 New Orleans Reed Jensen pgs. 131-133, NO-44-2064 pgs 232, 233 Nathan O. Brown and Charles C. Murray; FBI 44-1636-1141; 44-2064-169; Coles City Directory, 1963, Tampa] In 1950 Yanover's bar on Rush Street in Chicago was shut down for employing bar girls. In January 1963 19 people were arrested in Yanover's Cicero, Illinois bar for gambling offenses. In January 1964 Yonover was arrested and along with seven women on vice charges. In 1968 the State of Illinois shut down two of Yanover's bars. Yanover was killed while crossing a Chicago street in December 1985.

On May 14, 1963, RUBY went to New Orleans, where he met with Harold Tannenbaum. RUBY returned to Dallas on May 20, 1963. On May 25, 1963, Harold Tannenbaum called RUBY from the Old French Opera House. On June 5, 1963, he called him again. RUBY returned his call and spoke with him for 24 minutes. The next day RUBY returned to New Orleans. The Warren Commission found no identifying records to show that RUBY was in a hotel or anywhere else between the nights of June 5, 1963, and June 8, 1963. Was RUBY staying at Churchill Downs, the multi-million dollar estate where CARLOS MARCELLO lived? [WC Hearings V14 p150; HSCA V4 p198] By June 9, 1963, RUBY was back in Dallas. On June 11, 1963, he placed another call to the Sho-Bar and on June 14, 1963, June 19 1963, and June 21, 1963, RUBY called the Old French Opera House. Eugene R. De La Parra reported: "On June 22, 1963, I was in Benny Traegel's Bookie Joint when TONY MARCELLO came in to service the pinball machine, TONY was VINCE'S and CARLOS' brother. TONY says to Benny -- the word is out to get the Kennedy family." On June 24, 1963, CARLOS MARCELLO called the Tropical Tourist Courts Trailer Park and spoke with Harold Tannenbaum and Nofio Pecora. [HSCA V4 p498; V9 p69 Id; HSCA V4 pl98] In late June, Harold Tannenbaum visited RUBY in Dallas. On July 6, 1963, RUBY called the Opera House. On July 9, 1963, Harold Tannenbaum telephoned RUBY. On July 24, 1963, RUBY called Harold Tannenbaum and was told that Harold Tannenbaum was not there. RUBY dialed his personal telephone number (242-3401) and spoke with someone for 31 minutes.

RUBY TELEPHONES JOE 'THE WOP' CATALDO COLOMBO FAMILY MAFIA UNDERBOSS

JOE COLOMBO SHOT DEAD ON COLUMBUS DAY IN COLUMBUS CIRCLE

In 1962 Geraldo (Jerry) Catena, the successor to Vito Genovese in the New York Mafia, arranged for Louie Jacobs to fund an attempt by Joe (the Wop) Cataldo – a New York gangster to gain control of the Finger Lakes track. [Emprise notes, Sports Illustrated story, 5-29-72] Cataldo owned Chandler's Restaurant on East 49th Street in Manhattan. On July 7, 1963, a call was placed from RUBY'S home telephone to Gloversville, New York. George Senator, a close associate of RUBY'S during the summer of 1963, was originally from Gloversville and this led some researchers to believe that this call was placed by him. When the FBI investigated this call the Bureau found that the telephone number in Gloversville belonged to Joe "The Wop" Cataldo, who the Bureau described as "a top New York hoodlum." The Warren Commission, however, was more interested in George Senator and in its report stated: "It is difficult to know with complete certainty whether Senator had any foreknowledge of the shooting of OSWALD." A few days before the FBI traced the toll call, FBI informant number "KY-4003-C-TE" advised that JACK RUBY obtained talent for his Dallas club through Joe "The Wop" Cataldo during the late 1950's. The only acts Cataldo booked were gangster who would "do a number" on anyone who did not come with the vigorish on his usurious loans.

On December 11, 1963, Joe Cataldo was exhibited a photograph of RUBY by the FBI. He denied any relationship at any time with RUBY. In May 1968 Drew Pearson reported on Senator George Smathers Hearings into loan sharking: "Deputy Inspector Louis C. Cottell of the New York City Police Department identified New York loan sharks as Salvatore Bonanno, Joe Cataldo and Carmine Lombardozi." [Nevada Daily Mail May 13, 1968 – Google News Archives] Joe The Wop's sons, Joseph Jr, and Dominik were Mafia members. Little Dom not only was the brother of Colombo crime family mobster Joseph Cataldo but he was also the in-law of mob boss Albert Anastasia.

In late 1973 Dominick Cataldo approached Anthony Bruno and offered $3,000 for New York State Supreme Court Judge William C. Brennan in a first degree robbery case pending before the appeals court judge. Bruno went to Brennan who, after looking into the matter, told Bruno he would accept the $3,000. Cataldo gave the money to Bruno, who gave it to Brennan. In February 1974 Brennan suppressed identification evidence linking Cataldo to the robbery, which led to dismissal of the indictment. After the dismissal, Brennan told Bruno, “[D]on’t let them kid you that they didn’t need me on this, they did.” [<http://openjurist.org/798/f2d/581>] On September 10, 1987 two men walked into a Queens barbershop and murdered Vito Scaglione, 36 years old, who had ties to organized-crime figures and was suspected of being involved in narcotics trafficking. (ironically “scag” is slang for heroin) Mr. Scaglione was convicted in 1981 in Federal District Court in Brooklyn on a charge of providing an unlicensed 9-millimeter semiautomatic pistol and a silencer to an undercover Federal informer. Mr. Scaglione’s brother-in-law, Dominick Cataldo, who, the authorities described as an important figure in the Colombo crime family, was also convicted in the case. After pleading guilty, Mr. Scaglione was placed on probation. Mr. Cataldo was sentenced to eight years in a Federal prison.

On February 29, 1980, Joe “the wop” Cataldo, who was described as a New York City loan shark, was accused of participating in a million dollar plot to sabotage the “Black Tuna” drug smuggling trial in Miami, Florida. This alleged plot involved plans to assassinate trial USDC Judge James Lawrence King, pay off key government witnesses, and otherwise disrupt the trial. [FBI NY-1639-2396, NY44-974-152; NY 24016-655; NY 44-1639-1556; 44-1639 4p teletype 11.28.63 Dallas to Albany] In July 1980 Mafia hitman Gerard Pappa was shot to death in Brooklyn by a Colombo hit squad. It was for revenge of carrying out the murder of suspected Colombo crime family stool pigeon Ralph Spero. He was murdered by Dominick Cataldo and his nephew Nicholas and Joseph Cataldo Jr., the sons of Colombo crime family Mafioso Joseph “the wop” Cataldo. Knowing how hard Gerard would be to kill, that he was always armed, very fast and very game, they were hiding in the luncheonette’s rear kitchen when he arrived. They approached him from behind and shot him in the head with a sawed-off shotgun, literally blowing his head to pieces. He was killed instantly. Sammy Gravano would later speak of feeling great sadness and remorse for the lost of his childhood friend. Genovese crime family mob boss Vincent Gigante was suspected of handing down the murder contract, but was acquitted of his alleged involvement in the murder in 1997.

In the mid-1980’s Carmine Persico, Hugh McIntosh, Gennaro Langella, John DeRoss, Anthony Scarpati, Alphonse Persico, Andrew Russo and Dominic Cataldo were convicted of various offenses arising from their participation in the affairs of the Colombo Family racketeering enterprise. All eight appellants were convicted of conspiracy to violate provisions of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (“RICO”), 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d) (1982), and seven of the appellants were convicted of substantive RICO violations, id. § 1962(c). In addition, the majority of appellants were convicted of various substantive offenses that also were charged as predicate racketeering acts. Dominic or “Little Dom” died in 2003.

The Warren Commission turned a blind eye to RUBY's Mafia connections. Ruby was in touch with some of the most notorious gangsters in America. You just don't call these guys to shoot the shit. In late September 1963 RUBY had a meeting with James Henry Dolan at the Town and Country Restaurant. As stated, James Henry Dolan was closely associated with R.D. Matthews. [HSCA V9 p423] On September 6, 1963, a call was made from the Carousel Club to the telephone number of R. D. Matthews estranged wife, Elizabeth Matthews. R. D. Matthews claimed he was not present during this conversation. Elizabeth Matthews told the FBI that she had not spoken to RUBY on that day: "A Special Services Officer from the Dallas Police Department named Dick Clark called me from the Carousel Club." Forty minutes after Elizabeth Matthews made this statement, Officer Dick Clark telephoned the FBI Field Office in Dallas and confirmed her story. The document that contained this information was culled for leads yet apparently never followed up. [FBI DL 44-1639-1120; FBI teletype 11.27.63 from SAC Las Vegas 44-48; WCE 2988, 2989] Jacob Yonover indicated RUBY had called him in October 1963. This call did not appear on RUBY'S toll records. On October 14, 1963, the Chicago FBI picked up the following during electronic surveillance of Sam Giancana and Anthony Accardo: "They discuss golf. Someone asks if Bobby Kennedy plays golf. They know that John Kennedy does. Suggest putting a bomb in his golf bag. (They all laugh)." [FBI 44-1636 12.2.63; HSCA V5 p447] On October 3, 1963, RUBY, or someone at the Carousel Club, called Elizabeth Matthews phone number and spoke for 13 minutes.

On October 16, 1963, RUBY called Harold Tannenbaum at Sam Tannenbaum's residence in Miami and spoke with him for almost 15 minutes. Sam Tannenbaum was the father of Harold Tannenbaum. On October 19, 1963, RUBY called an unidentified telephone number in Beverly Hills, California, and spoke with someone for 32 minutes. The FBI investigated three other long-distance calls RUBY made that day but never investigated this one. On October 22, 1963, RUBY received a call from Harold Tannenbaum who was back in New Orleans. Harold Tannenbaum called RUBY collect from a pay telephone somewhere in New Orleans rather than dialing RUBY directly from his home phone. He would follow this procedure through November 1963. Was he afraid his telephone was tapped? On October 23, 1963, RUBY called Michael Shore at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. On October 26, 1963, RUBY called Michael Shore at his home in California.

IRWIN WEINER

Two hours later RUBY called Irwin Weiner, (born February 5, 1911) who the FBI described as "an associate of numerous low and high caliber notorious Chicago hoodlums, including JIMMY HOFFA, TRAFFICANTE, Sam Giancana and the Dorfman's." Bondsman Irwin Weiner was Allen Dorfman's co-defendant in his jury tampering trial. Irwin Weiner was a long time Chicago syndicate member and boyhood friend of JACK RUBENSTEIN. [Rise & Fall of HOFFA pgs 137-138, 145, 262, 266-268,364] On November 26, 1963, a confidential informant told a Chicago FBI Agent that he had overheard a conversation between Irwin Weiner and his business partner, Felix Alderisio, a top hoodlum. Irwin Weiner told him that he knew RUBY:

On November 26, 1963, informant advised that Irwin Weiner told Alderisio that he knew JACK RUBY, but had refused to talk to the FBI about it. Alderisio stated that he did not know RUBY and instructed Weiner not to talk to the FBI as they would then question him about other matters. [NARA 124-10138-10069]

When the FBI questioned Irwin Weiner about this call he refused comment. Irwin Weiner "admitted that he knew JACK RUBENSTEIN and stated that he did not want to discuss with anyone his knowledge of JACK RUBENSTEIN. It was pointed out to Irwin Weiner that this matter concerned the killing of the President and LEE OSWALD and certainly did not involve him or his associates. Irwin Weiner stated that he realized this, but that he still did not wish to discuss JACK RUBENSTEIN." No further attempts were made to interview him.[HSCA V9 para. 1341; HSCA Rep 155-159; HSCA V4 p564; HSCA Rep p176; HSCA V4 p498, HSCA V5 p374] In May 1964 Irwin Weiner and Felix Alderisio were indicted for extortion in Miami, Florida. In 1978 Irwin Weiner told a reporter that the call had nothing to do with RUBY'S so-called "labor problem." In his executive testimony before the HSCA Irwin Weiner stated he had lied to the reporter. Irwin Weiner suggested that he was seeking a bond necessary to obtain an injunction in his labor troubles. The HSCA could find no evidence that RUBY contemplated court relief, nor any explanation for his having to go to Chicago for such a bond. In 1978 Earl Ruby told the HSCA that Irwin Weiner, an old high school chum, had approached him one day before he was scheduled to testify before the Committee. Weiner had a "business proposition" for RUBY. According to Earl Ruby, he declined Irwin Weiner's proposition. Irwin Weiner testified that no such proposition occurred. Later that year Lewis J. McWillie testified that Earl Ruby had approached him with an unspecified proposition and that he (McWillie) immediately refused to even speak with him. When Earl Ruby was questioned about this by the HSCA he said that he talked with Lewis J. McWillie for five minutes. Earl Ruby stated: "I mentioned all the problems he had because of JACK, and that the gun JACK had sent him, which he never picked up, and that was about it. I realized he was involved with JACK and so much had been said about the gun JACK had sent him." [HSCA V5 p32, V4 p505] Irwin Weiner was indicted in 1975 for defrauding the Teamster Pension Fund of $1.4 million. He was acquitted after the principal witness against him was murdered. Less than a month before Weiner's trial was scheduled to begin, two gunmen wearing stocking masks brazenly stalked through a busy factory in broad daylight, found the witness in his office and efficiently executed him.

On October 29, 1963, someone called the Sho-Bar in Shreveport, Louisiana, from a coin station in Abe's Colony Club. RUBY'S nightclub was located a few blocks from the Colony Club and he was known to have frequently used the pay phone there. [FBI 44-24016-1219]

NOFIO PECORA

Late in the evening of May 5, 1947, a group of men gathered together in a room at the back of The Black Diamond, a nightclub in a seedy part of New Orleans that catered almost exclusively for black people. The mob used this for a rendezvous in the belief that it would reduce the chance of surveillance. On this particular night, they were wrong and agents of the FBN (Federal Bureau of Narcotics) were checking out the expensively dressed white men who disembarked from limousines at the rear of the club and disappeared inside. Among those noted here that night, were Joe Poretto, heroin smuggler Nofio Pecora, and Carlos Marcello with brothers Vincent, Joseph, Peter and Anthony. Jake and Nick Marcello, Carlos' nephews were also in the party. Although supporters of Anthony Carolla put forward his name, they were outvoted by Carlos' men, and by the time the meeting was over, Carlos was the newly appointed head of the Louisiana Mafia. Anthony never forgot his displacement from what he obviously believed was his rightful ascension, and nineteen years later would bring his grievance up before a national Mafia commission meeting at a restaurant in New York. The Associated Press reported, "Nofio Pecora Sr., was considered by the FBI as a top lieutenant to Carlos Marcello, the New Orleans-based Mafia boss who controlled illegal gambling and drug distribution for most of the South from the 1940s through the 1970s." On February 28, 1974 the New York Times revealed that Nofio Pecora had received a $210,000 disaster relief loan from the Federal Government. He was reported by law enforcement officials to be an associate of Carlos Marcello.

On October 30, 1963, RUBY called New Orleans once again.

This time he called 242-5431. This telephone number was listed under the name of Nofio Pecora at the Tropical Tourist Court and Trailer Park. The HSCA noted that CARLOS MARCELLO had placed several calls to the same number RUBY dialed - (242-5431). When HSCA investigators sought to question Nofio Pecora about this he declined to respond. Later Nofio Pecora said he was the only person who had access to that number in 1963 but he denied having known RUBY. Nofio Pecora denied having relayed a message from RUBY to Harold Tannenbaum. The HSCA did, however, discover that Nofio Pecora was a "friend and colleague" of Harold Tannenbaum. Additionally, an associate of Nofio Pecora, James Henry Dolan, was an associate of RUBY, CARLOS MARCELLO and SANTOS TRAFFICANTE. [HSCA R pgs. 136, 170] One hour after RUBY and Nofio Pecora exchanged words, Harold Tannenbaum called RUBY collect and spoke with him for 21 minutes. One day after RUBY dialed the telephone number of Nofio Pecora he called Michael Shore in Beverly Hills, California.

In April 2004 Nofio's son, Nofio Pecora Jr., 54, entered his plea to a count of conspiring to commit mail fraud and structuring of monetary instruments at Certified Lloyd's Insurance Co. of Covington. In England, under the name John Stryker, Pecora owned Stryker's Railway, a popular pub on London's outskirts. He was arrested in December for trying to buy a firearm under false pretenses, and was extradited to Louisiana after authorities learned his true identity. Nofio Pecora's wife, who was a high official in the Department of Agriculture in Louisiana was also indicted in this matter.

On November 4, 1963, RUBY spoke with Harold Tannenbaum again. Harold Tannenbaum called collect. This was the last trace of communication between the two men as reflected by RUBY'S toll records. It was impossible to tell if Harold Tannenbaum ever called RUBY again since the FBI Field in New Orleans Office never requested any of the toll records of Harold Tannenbaum after July 1, 1963. [FBI 44-2064-69]

RUBY had called Harold Tannenbaum at least three times in the month preceding the assassination. These calls were placed to the Tropical Tourist Courts Trailer Park. He spoke with someone for a total of 40 minutes. [WCE 2303 p28; FBI N.O. 44-2064 11.29.63; Cong. Rec. 8.6.70 E7388] First RUBY had to talk to one of MARCELLO's subordinates to get permission to speak with the boss. Then he spoke with Don Carlos's underboss, Nofio Pecora, then he spoke with MARCELLO. The HSCA reported:

As noted Marcello was never the subject of electronic surveillance coverage by the FBI. The HSCA found that the Bureau did make two attempts to effect such surveillance during the early 1960's but both attempts were unsuccessful. Marcello's sophisticated security system and close-knit organizational structure may have been a factor in preventing such surveillance

BARNEY BAKER

On November 7, 1963, RUBY called Barney Baker in Chicago. Fearing his phone was tapped Barney Baker called him back from a pay phone and spoke with him for seven minutes. Robert Bernard Baker was born on August 16, 1911, in Brooklyn, New York. By age ten his immense size afforded him the title of neighborhood bully. An ex-convict (jailed three times in the 1930's), the 325 pound Barney Baker was a former professional boxer, longshoreman and bouncer before he joined the Teamsters. Barney Baker had the reputation of being JIMMY HOFFA's "roving ambassador of violence."

In 1934, Baker was convicted and sentenced to an indefinite term in the City Penitentiary in New York for setting off stench bombs in movie theaters. He served 1 year and was paroled but was sent back for setting off another stench bomb. He was paroled 1935. On March 15, 1936, while on parole, he was shot and wounded while getting into an automobile on 34th Street in Manhattan. Baker was with Johnny O'Rourke, the president of Local of the Teamster, Farmer Sullivan, a waterfront mobster, and Joe Butler, another waterfront mobster. O'Rourke was also wounded, Butler killed. Sullivan was unhurt, but his body was discovered a year or so later out in the Flats in New Jersey. It was never established who opened fire on these men, but 2 days later police raided a house of prostitution on West 90th Street, New York City. The raid was initiated by a tip believed to have come from the Dunne mob, of which Baker was a member.

In 1936 Barney Baker was shot during a Manhattan gang war - he was the strong arm man for a bunch of hoods who controlled the piers. In the late 1940's Barney Baker worked for Johnny "Cockeyed" Dunne as a mob enforcer. In the classic crime movie,

Slaughter on Eighth Avenue, an honest longshoreman was murdered by "Cock-eyed Cook and two of his meatballs." In reality, Barney Baker was one of these meatballs. Barney Baker joined the Teamsters Union in the early 1950's. According to the testimony of his wife, just before an opponent of JIMMY HOFFA's was killed in Indianapolis in the mid-1950's, Barney Baker told her that he had to go to Indianapolis "to take care of a shyster lawyer for JIMMY HOFFA." When the FBI ran traces on Barney Baker it came up with numerous Bureau cases that involved JIMMY HOFFA. [FBI 44-1639-4021] When things got hot in New York City, Barney Baker went to the Colonial Inn, where he served as doorman and bouncer. At the Colonial Inn Barney Baker became associated with Joe Adonis, Jake and Meyer Lansky, Vincent "JIMMY Blue-Eyes" Alo and Vincent "Piggy" Marchesi. [Kennedy, Robert - The Enemy Within - 1960 Harper Row NY; HSCA V9 p279] The HSCA questioned Barney Baker about this job:

Q. Was there ever an individual there at this club by the name of JACK RUBENSTEIN?

A. I know a lot of them gamblers but I never knew of that name JACK RUBENSTEIN. It is not familiar.

Q. Who were the acting owners of the club while you worked there?

A. Jake Lansky, Joe Adonis. I had no relationship with any of these gentlemen after the Colonial.

In the early 1960's Barney Baker was sent to prison for labor racketeering and was released on parole in June 1963.

EARL SCHEIB

Following RUBY'S conversation with Barney Baker, numerous telephone calls were placed from telephones available to Barney Baker, to various offices of the Earl Scheib Company, a national automobile repainting firm. At least one of these calls was placed to the main office of Earl Scheib in Los Angeles, which was investigated by the FBI in a case titled: "JAMES RIDDLE HOFFA; Earl Scheib Auto Paint Shops; et al. Miscellaneous Information Concerning," and in another June 1963 case captioned "Union Bank and Trust Company of Los Angeles Conspiracy Accounting Investigation." The latter case concerned an alleged check kiting scheme. [FBI 44-1639-4706, 44-1639-4701, 4696, 4661, 4654, 4703, 4628] Baker was working for Scheib at this time.

In 1978 Barney Baker was questioned by the HSCA about his association with Earl Scheib he stated: "I know Mr. Scheib before I went to prison, when I was with the unions... got along with him real nice ...his employees became Teamsters, I was employed by Mr. HOFFA under Central States. I was more or less appointed Chairman of the Central States Chauffeurs Division." [HSCA V9 p293]

DAVE YARAS

YARAS AND MAFIA DON SANTO TRAFFICANTE

Barney Baker also telephoned Dave Yaras, a Teamster-connected alleged mob hitman who lived in Miami. Barney Baker called Dave Yaras from his home telephone, which was probably tapped, because he believed the home telephone of Dave Yaras was also tapped. Dave Yaras had known RUBY for 16 years and was indicted with Lenny Patrick, a boyhood friend of RUBY, for the murder of a race-track wire service operator who tried to buck the mob. Author Seth Kantor reported that Robert F. Kennedy, in his role as counsel on the Senate Rackets Subcommittee, charged Dave Yaras with having helped set up a corrupt a Teamsters Local in Miami and with having muscled in on gambling activities in Cuba in 1959. A FBI teletype revealed that Dave Yaras had attended the "hoodlum meeting" at the Eden Roc Hotel in November 1963 and was "possibly tied in with RUBY in connection with shylocking and girls." The Warren Commission received reports that linked RUBY to a nationwide betting network of which Dave Yaras was a part. In 1966, RUBY'S close friend, Louis Kopple, (born September 28, 1896; died June 1978) was arrested for running a betting center for Dave Yaras. In the mid 1960's the son of Dave Yaras was slain in a gangland episode in Miami. The HSCA asked Barney Baker about Dave Yaras: "Mr. Yaras is a friend, liked him very much, him and his family, I didn't have much contact with him in 1963, I believe he tried to help me one time get a job with some laundry his son was head of. Once or twice I spoke with him on the phone in Florida." When asked about Lenny Patrick, Barney Baker stated: "I haven't seen Lenny Patrick. I saw him maybe once in my whole life, only visited him and I've never had any conversation pertaining to anything with Lenny Patrick. It's possible these men came from the same neighborhood as RUBY. But I never questioned or asked anybody after the incident where he came out of." [WCE 2352 p80; FBI 44-24016-302, 134] The HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about Dave Yaras:

Q. Did JACK RUBY know Dave Yaras?

A. I don't know. I don't think so.

Q. Did you know Dave Yaras?

A. I knew who he was.

Q. Had you ever met him?

A. I don't think so, I knew his brother. He had a brother named Sam Yaras. I don't think I never met Dave. Is his name Dave? Is that the name? I don't think I ever met him. I met his brother. His brother had slot machines, in fact, his brother died in Dallas. JACK didn't know Sam Yaras.

Why had RUBY been in touch with front men for CARLOS MARCELLO and JIMMY HOFFA prior to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy? None of RUBY'S conversations with these men surfaced in any FBI surveillance transcripts of organized crime. Was RUBY bragging about the upcoming event to the Big Boys? Did Barney Baker tell RUBY he could talk to JIMMY HOFFA at the Eden Roc Hotel, if he called there the next day?

EDEN ROC

In 1950 Morris Landsburgh of Miami Beach had formed a holding company that owned the Eden Roc Hotel. Circa 1960 Edward Partin met with JIMMY HOFFA at the Eden Roc. In 1973 Morris Landsburgh's long time association with Meyer Lansky was confirmed when he pleaded guilty to conspiring with Meyer Lansky to defraud the Internal Revenue Service. A FBI document revealed that throughout November 1963 syndicate-linked Teamster officials were meeting at the Eden Roc. JIMMY HOFFA was there, as was Murray W. Miller.

RUBY NIXON AND "DUSTY" MILLER

On November 8, 1963, RUBY called Murray W. Miller's suite at the Eden Roc. Murray Miller better known as "Dusty" Miller was a Vice President of the Teamsters Union and Director of the Southern Conference of Teamsters. Miller was a trustee of the Central States Pension Fund from 1955 to 1968. "Dusty" Miller was the number three man in the Teamsters, only JIMMY HOFFA and Allen Dorfman preceded him, and as such was regarded as a possible successor to JIMMY HOFFA. "Dusty" Miller was associated with numerous underworld figures. [FBI-44-24016-302; Miami Herald 9.11.75 p7A Victor Riesel; FBI44-24016-976; Wall St. Journal 12.23.75 p1] In a 1978 interview with the HSCA,

"Dusty" Miller admitted having conversed with RUBY. RUBY had stated something to the effect that: "Barney Baker gave me your number and told me that maybe you could help me out." When "Dusty" Miller heard the name "Baker" he said he reacted by terminating the conversation, since "Dusty" Miller did not wish to become involved with an unsavory character. [HSCA V9 p199] In April 1972 Murray W. Miller of Dallas, Texas was appointed Secretary Treasurer of the Teamsters Union. In October 1975 NIXON played a round of golf at the La Costa Country Club with Dusty Miller. Allen Dorfman was also on the golf course that day. Miller filed a libel suit against a dissident Teamster faction for publishing this in Overdrive:

Take Murray (Dusty) Miller, 4th Vice-President of the International and Director of the Southern Conference. Dusty was a trustee of the Fund from its formation in 1955 until 1968. Before he left, Dusty borrowed $1.6 million in 1965 from the Fund to buy Trinity Sand & Gravel in Dallas. Almost immediately, the Fund foreclosed on the company without a single penny having been paid on the loan. Almost as instantly, a new corporation was formed which borrowed another $1.4 million from the Fund. This corporation Metropolitan Sand & Gravel was set up by St. Louis attorney Morris Shenker, and his ownership in it is 45%. Shenker is probably right behind Dorfman when it comes to having influence over the Fund. Shenker, though, specializes in dealing with the Mafia, a subject to be covered thoroughly in our next article. The 2,800 acres of land now controlled by Shenker, it appears, now is valued at $300 million, thanks to a federal decision to build a multi-billion dollar barge channel through it from Dallas-Fort Worth to the Gulf of Mexico. This good fortune doesn't seem to have affected the company's payments to the Fund: $1.1 million loan (This does not include the $1.6 million. That is gone. Just ask Dusty.)

In August 1998 Services for retired Teamsters official Murray W. "Dusty" Miller were held at Restland Funeral Home's Wildwood Chapel. Mr. Miller, 82, died of a heart attack in St. Paul Medical Center in Dallas. He was buried in Restland Memorial Park. In 1971, Mr. Miller became the first Dallas labor leader appointed by a U.S. president to serve on a national committee. President Richard Nixon named Mr. Miller to a three-year term on a 35-member labor relations commission.

There was no roving wiretap on HOFFA and so the phone line in the Eden Roc was clean. RUBY talked to the man himself, JIMMY HOFFA, and told him that something was going to be done about JFK. The NIXON Miller connection at La Costa helps explain Nixon's presence in Dallas prior to the big event. Nixon was in Dallas to meet with JACK RUBY and assure him what he was doing was the right thing to do for American Jews. NIXON was attending a Pepsico convention as was RUBY'S close friend Larry Meyer's brother, Edward Meyers.

After dinner on November 21, 1963, RUBY returned to his nightclub where he was joined by Lawrence V. "Larry" Meyers and Jean Aase, both of Chicago. Lawrence Meyers was a salesman for the Ero Manufacturing Company. When the FBI studied the toll records of the ERO Manufacturing Company it found calls to corporations that were investigated for illegal arms shipments to Israel. [FBI NY-9444] Gateway Sporting Goods had shipped 500,000 ammunition primers to the United Lumber Company and then to Palestine. Lawrence Meyers knew RUBY for five or six years. RUBY set Lawrence Meyers up with prostitutes. [WCH V4 p627] In October 1963 Lawrence Meyers told one of RUBY'S strippers that he had business interests in Las Vegas and Minneapolis. [WCD 86 p567] Jean Aase was originally from Minneapolis where she had worked as a B-Girl and prostitute. [FBI 44-1639 -1200; Chicago News 9.29.64 p6] RUBY called a woman named "Smokey Turner" at the Gay 90's Bar in Minneapolis, Minnesota. [WCE2302, 2393] Jean Aase was described as a "dumb broad" from Chicago who was being used by Lawrence Meyers for sex during their trip to Dallas. When New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison subpoenaed David Ferrie's toll records he discovered that on September 24, 1963, David Ferrie called WH-4-4970 in Chicago, Jean Aase's number. [Garrison, Jim, Heritage of Stone, Berkeley, 1970 p125] Why would Ferrie be in touch with a prostitute in Chicago. This made no sense as did a lot of the Garrison investigation. In 1979, the House Select Committee on Assassinations "found that David W. Ferrie had called the number of Jean Aase" on September 24, 1963.

On November 21, 1963 at about 11:00 p.m., RUBY, Lawrence Meyers and Jean Aase went to the Cabana Motel for a late dinner. In the Cabana Motel's Bon Vivant Room they were joined by Edward Meyers, Lawrence Meyers brother. [WCE 2268] Ed Meyers was President of the Queens Beverage Company, headquartered at the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Plant in Brooklyn, New York, and was in Dallas to attend a Convention of the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages. Edward Meyers was a member of the Pepsi-Cola delegation as was NIXON. Edward Meyers and his wife had just visited Mexico City and were staying at the Hotel Adolphus, which was located across the street from the Carousel Club. [WCD 86 p537; Kef. Hearings p627]

After this researcher published this information about Edward Meyers in Coup D'Etat in America, Meyers served me with a summons charging me with libel and demanding $2 million. He never took the case to court.

RUBY had a cup of coffee, and at about 11:15 p.m., he left the Bon Vivant room. At 2:30 a.m. RUBY telephoned an employee at the Carousel Club and said he was still at the Cabana Motel. At about 3:00 a.m. RUBY was seen eating at a restaurant near the Vegas Club. [WR p334]

NIXON had no Secret Service protection while he was in Dallas and could roam around freely. The possibility exists that he could have had a late night meeting with RUBY somewhere in Dallas. NIXON was in Dallas prior to the coup for a reason and it was not to egg on the Bay of Pigs connected crew, some of whom (HUNT and STURGIS) would reappear years later as part of the White House Plumbers.

MORE PHONE CALLS

Returning to the chronology of his phone calls later that day (November 8, 1963) RUBY called Barney Baker. Barney Baker told the HSCA that this call never took place. On November 11, 1963, RUBY called Barney Baker again. A few minutes later Barney Baker called RUBY from his office telephone. [FBI 44-645 1.3.64 Chicago, Ill. John R. Bassett, DC 44-1639-L-Cover Page; WCE 2332] The HSCA questioned Barney Baker about these calls:

I'm under oath at this moment. I don't want no headaches. I'm giving it to you straight. The only time he called was the first time (November 7, 1963)...I didn't know him, never knew him. When I came to Chicago I believe he was already out of Chicago. He called me about a labor dispute.

When confronted with evidence of the November 8, 1963, telephone call Barney Baker stated:

Maybe he did call me, in his desperation, and the party that he says, mutual friend, might have been even there at the time for all I know, I might have told him this guy could do it, braggadocio, you know, with the guy. Must have known me - he had my number. I didn't give it to him...tell you the truth, I can't conceive of a 14 minute conversation unless he said 'Hold the wire,' went and had a drink or something, go to the lavatory, come back. I never talked long with him ...maybe ten minutes, off the top of my head. But I never heard from him again after all that...I was not very surprised when the FBI showed up, I figured sooner or later. I don't underrate no one. I know they're going to hit them right away. But I was going through unnecessary quizzing at the time, I was innocent of the event. I didn't even know this guy. After the assassination I didn't want to know who he was. I didn't even want to look at T.V. anymore. I didn't want no part of it. I couldn't duck it...After that thing happened I did go around to asking people, did you ever know this guy RUBY on the West Side, in a restaurant, where they have Jewish food. They all congregate in there general talking. Never one person by name that I can identify...they were raised with him, they went to school with him.

Barney Baker was questioned by the HSCA about his associates, many of whom were also associates of RUBY. Barney Baker:

Sure I know Irwin Weiner, he's been in the bail business downtown. I think we had some business with him...we had a good friend, I think, in Milwaukee, Phil, was a good friend of his. I used to see them together. In fact, I see him now, very friendly. I knew 'Dusty' Miller. 'Dusty' was a hell of a nice guy. JACK RUBY mentioned my name to Miller....this fellow is, nery enough to go anywhere angels fear to tread...Joe Glaser. He used to manage a band or something in Chicago. That's all I know about him. Paul Dorfman was a friend of Mr. HOFFA so I met him and he's a real nice man...I had no business relationships at all. I believe he had his own union, some independent Wastepaper Union.

Barney Baker was asked if he knew that RUBY was an organizer of this union: "Not with Mr. Paul Dorfman, with Mr. Paul Dorfman?" When asked about Allen Dorfman, he responded: "Allen Dorfman, the only relationship I have with him is that I'm employed by him now, I work for him."

Barney Baker was also acquainted with Dominick Bartone. Barney Baker: "I only met him because he had some meetings with Mr. HOFFA. That's all in 1959, 1960." Then the questioning turned to Edward Partin's accusation that JIMMY HOFFA planned to assassinate Robert F. Kennedy. Barney Baker:

I never heard him say kill Bob Kennedy. He'd like to knock his brains out, have a fist fight with him... I met Frank Chavez, around four days before JIMMY went away, at the International Office in Washington, D.C. I can't believe he had come to Washington, D.C., with a rifle to shoot Bobby Kennedy. Well the guy has to be insane to do something like that, for God's sake. These guys, they're doing their job. They're taking you on. Win, lose or draw. Buddy you don't resort to that, you don't kill people. That would be an awful thing.

RUBY didn't need Dusty Miller or Barney Baker's help in solving a petty labor dispute. This was overkill at its worst. RUBY contacted these men so that HOFFA would know that RUBY had been involved in something very big. On November 12, 1963, RUBY tried to reach Frankie Goldstein by telephone. RUBY had not spoken with Frank Goldstein for many years judging from the fact he called another Frankie Goldstein before he reached the one wanted. The nature of RUBY'S conversation with Frankie Goldstein was a matter of speculation - maybe, he wanted Frankie Goldstein to relay a message to his associates in Las Vegas, or perhaps he had called his ex-employer to tell him that in a few weeks he would be a point holder in a big Las Vegas casino and might be hiring him as a pit boss. Later that day RUBY had a meeting with Paul Roland Jones. Paul Roland Jones told the FBI he happened to be in Dallas and decided to meet with his friend. [FBI 44-24016-778, 725, 724] In June 1964, Charles Woods, the President of a television station in Dotman, Alabama, visited FBI Headquarters in Birmingham. Charles Woods, a former member of the Alabama Board of Correction, had been in contact with the bondsman of Paul Roland Jones. Paul Roland Jones told the bondsman that his visit to Dallas was connected with his position in "Murder Incorporated," an "organization that murders for a price." #### CORINNE BURGESS

During November 1963 RUBY generally made at least three or four long distance calls each day. On November 14, 1963, he only made one, to Ralph Paul in Arlington, Texas, at 1:13 p.m. Later that afternoon RUBY was seen at a small motel in Morgan City, Louisiana. Morgan City's major industry was gambling, wide-open and controlled by CARLOS MARCELLO. Corinne Burgess contacted FBI S.A. Ernest Wall, New Orleans, on November 26, 1963, and told him that she had seen RUBY at the Newport Motel in Morgan City where she worked as a cashier at about 1:00 p.m. on November 14, 1963. [FBI report of S.A. Manning C. Clements, 11.30.63 at Dallas, pgs. 449, 649] RUBY told her that he was an old friend of the motel's owner, Peter Guarisco, and had come from Dallas to see him. When Corinne Burgess told RUBY that Peter Guarisco was not on the premises, he asked her if Vick Guarisco was there. Peter Guarisco denied having known RUBY.

On February 20, 1967, excited by the New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's investigation, Corrine Burgess called the FBI and said that she had not told the Bureau everything she knew in 1963 because she had been threatened by Peter Guarisco. She said that RUBY was accompanied by someone who looked like OSWALD. RUBY said: "I'm a friend of CARLOS MARCELLO." [FBI 62-109060-4513; FBI 89-43-5720-Dallas; FBI DC-89-69-1412] The HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about Guarisco:

Q. Did JACK RUBY know a man named Pete Guarisco?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did you know Pete Guarisco?

A. No, never heard of him.

Q. Do you know if RUBY knew CARLOS or VINCENT MARCELLO?

A. Is that the fellow in New Orleans? I wouldn't think so, no wouldn't think he'd know him.

Q. Did you ever know CARLOS or VINCENT MARCELLO?

A. No sir, I sure don't.

Q. Never met them?

A. Never met them in my life.

THE THEORY OF RUBY IN LAS VEGAS

On November 16, 1963, RUBY flew to Las Vegas. In return for taking out OSWALD, RUBY was going to be made a point-holder in a Las Vegas casino. Evidence of RUBY'S trip to Las Vegas during the weekend prior to the assassination reached Las Vegas Sheriff Ralph Lamb when a confidential informant, who was rated as being "a very reliable source" told him: "RUBY was at the Tropicana Hotel the weekend before Kennedy was shot and killed...his host was Preston Fineberg, a point-holder in the Tropicana. Fineberg let him use his Rolls-Royce." [FBI 44-24016-288; FBI LV-44-48 Cover Page S,U] On the same day Sheriff Lamb received this report, the FBI was furnished with similar information by one of its Potential Criminal Informants, who was the cashier at the Tropicana Hotel:

A 'JACK RUBY' stayed at the Tropicana Hotel about November 16, 1963, and made several long-distance calls. After the President was shot I tried to locate the records of these calls and his hotel registration, I couldn't find them, which really shook-me-up, because I personally checked-out his telephone account from the front office when he checked out. She is unable to explain how the hotel records of JACK RUBY disappeared. Potential Criminal Informant has heard that bartender Ernie Muscatelle and bellmen 'Chuck' knew RUBY was at hotel. Potential Criminal Informant's reliability unknown due to limited number of contacts." [FBI-44-24016-121; LV 44-48 Cover Page V; FBI- 44-24016-1787]

The FBI checked out this report with another Potential Criminal Informant and was told:

JACK RUBY was a good friend of Preston Feinberg. RUBY came to Vegas a lot. He always visited Feinberg who he knew from the old days in Chicago. Potential Criminal Informant advised RUBY has used the names Rubin or Ruben and has brought strippers to Las Vegas and has often registered at Tropicana Hotel as Mr. and Mrs. while staying in Las Vegas with these girls. On November 17, 1963, the Saturday before the assassination, JACK played golf with Feinberg. [FBI DC 44-1639 AS:gj p257]

Before the FBI received any of these informants reports, Benny Binnion told the FBI one day after RUBY shot OSWALD: "RUBY was at the Tropicana recently." Another Potential Criminal Informant, Charles Llyod Hammer, said that RUBY never visited the casino.

A. J. Ricci, Bell Captain, Tropicana Hotel, advised the FBI that JACK RUBY was rumored to have been in Las Vegas, recently, and stayed at the Tropicana. The FBI:

He could not recall having seen RUBY. He heard RUBY played golf at the Tropicana Country Club, however, he feels sure if RUBY had been in the Tropicana he would have known about it. He recalls one year ago a JACK RUBY whom he believes identical with Subject, came to Las Vegas, and had him make reservations for a flight to Chicago. He stated that while making these reservations RUBY changed the spelling of his name several times. He recalls RUBY changed the name to Rubin, Ruben and RUBENSTEIN. He does not recall under which name the reservations were made.

Preston Fineberg denied having known RUBY in Chicago, and he said he was never in Texas. He said the Rolls Royce was being repaired during the period in question. Ernest Muscatelle, the bartender at the Tropicana said he did not know RUBY.

More people said that RUBY was in Las Vegas than said he was not in Las Vegas. Of course the FBI listened to the minority of witnesses, because RUBY'S presence there would have raised a lot of questions. While RUBY was in Vegas, George Senator ran the Carousel Club with the help of Ralph Paul. [FBI LV 44-48 FD-302 with John D. Gaughan 11.25.63 at LV Nevada James Doyle; FBI LV 44-NEW p9, 10; LV 44-48; DL 44-1639 H cover page] The FBI reported:

Information received that in 1958 Bob Cannon Tropicana Hotel, Las Vegas, Nevada stated that Rosselli was manager in fact of this hotel from the time it opened in 1957 until summer of 1958. Judith Campbell Exner friend of Rosselli and of Sam Giancana, Chicago, Illinois, (deleted). [FBI 92-3267-260]

Another FBI report stated:

Information has previously been reported in this investigation, received from more than one source, that when the Tropicana Hotel was opened in 1957 that Rosselli conducted himself in such a manner that these sources were of the impression that he had something to do with the management of the hotel. On June 27, 1962, LA T-18 furnished information that in 1958 Mr. Bob Cannon manager of the Hotel Tropicana, stated that since the hotel was opened he had been manager in name only and that all departments had been run by John Rosselli and that Rosselli told every department head what to do around the place and that this situation prevailed until recently (August 1958).

The name "Milt Jaffee, Los Angeles" was found among RUBY'S effects. The FBI questioned Milton Jaffee, an owner of the Stardust Casino in Las Vegas who was the Subject of an Anti-Racketeering case. Jaffee denied having known RUBY.

RUBY returned to Dallas on Sunday, November 17, 1963. On Monday, November 18, 1963, The New York Times began a series of articles on mob "skimming" in Las Vegas' casinos. On Monday, November 18, 1963, RUBY went back to the Cabana Motel. RUBY was spotted by a wholesale jeweler who was having a snack at the Cabana coffee shop.

RUBY & OFFICER J.D. TIPPIT

Some time before the assassination, possibly on Tuesday, November 19, 1963, evidence suggested that RUBY held a clandestine meeting with Patrolman J.D. TIPPIT. (Born September 18, 1924.) TIPPIT, a former paratrooper and father of three, joined the Dallas Police Department in July 1952. In his 11 years on the force, his name never came up for promotion. A psychiatric report of November 17, 1952, characterized TIPPIT as "wholly devoid of imaginative facilities." It indicated

...his interests and achievements were limited, and that his mental functioning and thinking corresponded with the community at large. His grip on reality was below average and it was noted that errors of judgement could be expected...On September 2, 1956, TIPPIT and his partner received a call for a routine investigation at a bar where a white intoxicated male was present. When asked to leave this man attempted to shoot TIPPIT in the head; however the gun did not fire. TIPPIT and his partner drew their service revolvers and killed the individual, who was later identified as Leonard Garland. [FBI 62-109060-3194; FBI Bufile 26-221633 - Garland's ITSM charges dated 1957]

TIPPIT was described by Dallas Police Chief Jesse Curry as having the reputation of being "a very fine dedicated officer." During the Warren Commission Hearings Allen Dulles allegedly remarked that TIPPIT may have been involved, in some unspecified manner, with narcotics. [?] Travis Kirk, an attorney who had practiced law for 23 years in Dallas told the FBI that he was personally acquainted with Officer TIPPIT: "A lady once came to my office about TIPPIT - she wanted to press charges against him - he had apparently raped her during one of his investigations." Travis Kirk was also a friend of RUBY. [Travis Kirk re: TIPPIT FBI SF 44-494 FD-302, 11.29.63 Rauch; WCH V4, pgs. 177-178] Ray Brantley was another TIPPIT-RUBY link since he also knew both men. [Tel. con with Brantley]

TIPPIT'S WEEKEND EMPLOYMENT

TIPPIT worked for a local John Bircher on week-ends. TIPPIT's boss, Austin Cook, told the FBI that although he was a member of the John Birch Society, he had never discussed politics with TIPPIT and did not believe TIPPIT was interested in politics. The HSCA interviewed Austin Cook on March 9, 1978. Austin Cook was asked if he had had known RUBY. He replied that he may have met RUBY, but he could not recall. Yet Austin Cook was partners with Bert Bowman in the ownership of the Bull-Pen Restaurant which was later sold to MARCELLO front man Ralph Paul. The Bowmans had known Ralph Paul since he had moved to Dallas and at the time of the assassination Ralph Paul lived in the Bowman's home. Mrs. Bowman told the Committee that Ralph Paul had been a source of funds for Bert Bowman. Ralph Paul had brought RUBY to the Bowman's house on numerous occasions. The HSCA interviewed Mrs. Austin Cook who told them that Ralph Paul was a mutual friend of the Cooks and RUBY. [HSCA V12 p41]

THE DOBBS HOUSE RESTAURANT NOVEMBER 20, 1963

On Wednesday, November 20, 1963, OSWALD and Dallas Police Officer J.D. TIPPIT both ate in the same restaurant. Evidence suggested OSWALD had been ordered to go there by his "case officer" and TIPPIT was told to appear by RUBY. RUBY wanted TIPPIT to get a good look at OSWALD so there would be no confusion on November 22, 1963. Waitress Mary Adda Dowling told the FBI she had seen both men eating at Dobbs House at 8:00 a.m. Dobbs House was located across the street from 1026 North Beckley.[WCD 1364; HSCA V12 p37] TIPPIT stared at OSWALD as he ate. Did OSWALD make a mental note of TIPPIT's face? Delores Harrison, another waitresses at the Dobbs House, remembered the two men eating there and told the FBI about it. [WCE 3001; WCD 1364; WCD205, p224] Douglas Leake, also employed at Dobbs House remembered seeing OSWALD there. [FBI 44-1636-1659]

RUBY AND THE FAMILY OF H.L. HUNT NOVEMBER 21, 1963

On the morning of Thursday, November 21, 1963, at about 11:00 a.m., RUBY called Connie Trammel, a former University student who said she knew him, but had never worked for him. A half hour later Connie Trammel and RUBY drove to Lamar Hunt's office. Connie Trammel called Lamar Hunt at his unlisted home telephone number at which time the maid gave her the telephone number of a straight line into Lamar Hunt's office. [ FBI DL 44-1639 7.9.64 Dallas W. H. Griffin] On July 10, 1964, Connie Trammel told the FBI that RUBY expressed an interest in meeting Lamar Hunt and accompanied her to the elevator in office building but did not accompany her upstairs. Connie Trammel was interviewed by Lemar Hunt, allegedly about a job in a "teen-age club." Lamar Hunt died on December 13, 2006.

Why was RUBY interested in the Hunt family at this time? RUBY was aware that a conspiracy was afoot to kill President Kennedy, however, he was not made aware of the personnel who were involved in the conspiracy. Perhaps he had heard the name "HUNT" in connection with the conspiracy and thought it referred to H.L. Hunt. All RUBY had been told was that he had to have a Dallas Police officer take out LEE HARVEY OSWALD on November 22, 1963. That was all RUBY had to do. RUBY wondered who the sponsors were. He might have suspected that, since the assassination was going to take place in Dallas, ultra-conservative Dallas oil millionaire H.L. Hunt was behind it.

SAM CAMPISI
NOVEMBER 21, 1963

In the early evening of November 21, 1963, RUBY met with Sam Campisi and Ralph Paul at Joe Campisi's Egyptian Lounge. In May 1978 Joe Campisi was questioned by the HSCA:

Q. Were you acquainted or are you acquainted with either VINCENT or CARLOS MARCELLO of New Orleans?

A. I know VINCENT and I met Mr. CARLOS MARCELLO about, maybe, six years ago. After all of these years that they had associated me with him I had never met the man.

Q. When did you first meet VINCENT MARCELLO?

A. It was on a junket going out of New Orleans and we went on that junket with him and I was introduced to him at the airport, and I never did see him again for about three or four months. I went back to New Orleans and went to a party and he was at the party, and we got to talking...I didn't know him. I knew JOE, the one in the restaurant business before I knew any of them...I have known JOE MARCELLO ever since I have been in the location that I am in now by meeting him through the restaurant, went out to have dinner with him. I went out and had dinner at their restaurant, you know and for a long time when I went to New Orleans I would never go there...I was scared to go there.

Q. Because of its general reputation?

A. Right, and so I came back and I told Joe Civello about it, and we laughed. He said "Do you mean you wouldn't go out there to eat?" and I says "No sir." He says, "You live here in America and you are scared to go somewhere?" and that made a point. So I said, "Well, why should I hide from something?" So the next time I went down there I went out to dinner and that's how I met him. I used to see little SAMMY MARCELLO at football games...Then I started going there and started playing golf with VINCENT. He invited me as a member guest and then I got to know SAMMY. Then I met ANTHONY and "go ahead and call JOE" and everything, you know...and I have seen CARLOS MARCELLO, how many times in my lifetime? One, two, three, four times in my lifetime.

Q. Were these times in New Orleans or...

A. Yes.

Q. In Dallas?

A. Never been to Dallas. To my knowledge he has never been to Dallas.

Q. What was the occasion of your meeting CARLOS MARCELLO in New Orleans?

A. Well, I had told the brothers that I had never met CARLOS. They couldn't believe it. "You have never met CARLOS?" I said, "No, I have never met your brother CARLOS," so I flew in one day for a golf tournament and ANTHONY picked me up and he said "Well, let's stop at the Town and Country and you can go meet CARLOS." So we get there and there were some people in the office, and he introduced me, blah, blah, blah, and so we just left, you know. Then the next time...he goes to Grand Isle every year to that fishing place. So we thought we would drive down there and go see him, and we went down there and I cooked spaghetti sauce for them...and stayed there for maybe four or five hours, and we drove back. Then the next time I saw him was at a fishing camp that they have there. The next time I was invited to the opening of Broussard's Restaurant and I met him there. I had talked to him on the phone a couple of times. He has called me and asked me if I needed any soft shell crabs, and every year I send them 260 pounds of Italian sausage that I send to them for Christmas to give to all of the brothers and what friends I have there...I have a lot of relatives there and I send sausage to all of them.

Q. Have you had any business dealings with any of the MARCELLO brothers?

A. No sir. [HSCA V9 para. 923]

Despite Sam Campisi's claim that he did not meet MARCELLO until the 1970's, Sam Campisi was a definite link between MARCELLO and RUBY.

THE COINCIDENCE OF THE BLACK BORDERED AD

On the morning of November 22, 1963, a full-page black bordered advertisement was published in The Dallas Morning News. This ad, which criticized President Kennedy from a John Birch Society-like perspective, was signed by Bernard Weissman (born November 1, 1937) who was Jewish.

CONSERVATISM USA

Bernard Weissman was a friend of Larry Schmidt. While in the Army, Larry Schmidt and a group of con men decided to exploit the "gold mine" of the radical right. The group consisted of Larry Schmidt, Larry Jones and Bernard Weissman and it called itself Conservatism USA. The group planned to hold right-wing demonstrations in Munich, Germany, in conjunction with the National Indignation Committee, to gain credibility and support from men like Frank McGehee. Members of the National Indignation Committee who were still in the Army feared arrest. Larry Jones noted that McGehee was an anti-Semite and so he suggested that Weissman covert to Christianity immediately so that the con game would not fail. In April 1962, Larry Schmidt and his brother, moved to Dallas. Larry Schmidt's brother became an aide to General Walker. Larry Schmidt became the Vice Chairman of the Young Americans For Freedom, a conservative Republican youth group.

CUSA's purpose was to penetrate the leadership of popular anti-Communist organizations, such as the National Indignation Committee, in order to embezzle the organization's funds. In 1964 Albert Jenner asked Bernard Weissman: "This group, or partnership's, material objective was ultimately a self-interest in business?" Bernard Weissman answered, "No."

Larry Schmidt's associates pretended to be conservatives and some were warned: "No jazz, no jive, no bullshit, no slang...down here a Negro is a nigger. No one, and I mean no one, is ever to say a kind word about niggers. Only liberals do that. Liberals are our enemies. Never forget that. Set Bernie straight on that. On the other hand the KKK is passe. Don't praise it. Don't preach race hatred." [WCE 1036 Vol. XVIII] Schmidt managed to infiltrate the National Indignation Committee and sent Jones progress reports on National Indignation Committee stationary. Conservatism USA targeted General Walker and the John Birch Society.

THE JOHN BIRCH SOCIETY USES BERNARD WEISSMAN

Joseph Grinnan, a member of the John Birch Society, contacted Larry Schmidt and Bernard Weissman in Dallas. Bernard Weissman came to Dallas to see Larry Schmidt in November 1963. Joseph Grinnan gave Larry Schmidt and Bernard Weissman the money to place the black-bordered ad. The ad was signed by Bernard Weissman, who was advised that his name appeared on the advertisement to counter the charges of anti-Semitism which had been leveled against the John Birch Society. Conservatism U.S.A.'s con game was working and the group was obtaining funds from the John Birch Society. After November 22, 1963, Mark Lane told the Warren Commission that an undisclosed informant said Bernard Weissman had met with JACK RUBY on November 14, 1963.

There was no evidence the meeting between Weismann and Ruby occurred. Lane's information made it seem as if the Kennedy assassination was a Jewish plot. Robert Morris, Joseph Grinnan's Counsel, told the FBI that Larry Schmidt wrote an article "relating his experience while working with Manolo Ray in the Cuban underground." On November 26, 1963, Bernard Weissman left Dallas and returned to New York.

THE FBI INVESTIGATES THE BLACK BORDERED AD

William C. Sullivan conducted a preliminary inquiry into the black bordered ad, then assigned William A. Branigan, Section Chief, Espionage Section, Domestic Intelligence Division, to the investigation. William Branigan determined: "A review of Bufiles fails to reveal any identifiable security data relating to Schmidt, Grinnan, Weissman or William Milton Burley." William Branigan sent a letter to the CIA asking for information on them. Birch O'Neal responded with a document that stated: "The records of this office contain information about one Bill Burley, a U.S. Air Force Tech Sergeant, stationed in Libya in 1958 who may have been involved in nefarious activities." Bill Burley had contact with:

(FNU) Babington, a British soldier and his German wife Irene...Heinz Koliechik...a German national, born circa 1913 to 1918. Our files reveal that your Bureau has forwarded to this office a report dated November 29, 1959, prepared by James P. Wooten (A) entitled Czechoslovak Funds, New York Divison Page 16 of that report contained the name Bernard Weissman, Dolni Podluzi C 48 on whose order $3.00 drawn for one Robert Kobler...The date cited was October 17, 1956. The above information is provided as a result of a preliminary check of our records. The records of this office contain no additional information which at this time can be identified as pertaining to the persons who might be identical with the man who placed the newspaper ad, or to persons who might have been in contact with them. [CSCI 3/778,894]

William Milton Burley had failed to report for military induction in 1961 and was interviewed by the FBI. The FBI concluded in a telex to seven of its Field Offices: "No connection was found between those placing the advertisement and RUBY and OSWALD; the advertisement was written by Larry Schmidt and Joseph Grinnan, (both John Birch Society members); funds for the enterprise were furnished by an(unidentified) group of well-to-do Dallas businessmen; Weissman and Burley were merely tools in the enterprise. In view of the foregoing, all offices immediately discontinue this matter." [words in parentheses were taken from a Branigan/Sullivan document based on this telex; FBI DL-100-10461 10.7.64-Richard J. Burnett; DL-100-

A March 18, 1968, CIA document titled Lawrence Schmidt stated: "Larry Schmidt, General Walker's associate, was supposed to have worked with Gordon Novel in Dallas. (Deleted.)" [Allen v. DOD 40318 142; WR p333; NARA Record Number: 104-10312-10026]

RUBY AND H.L. HUNT

On the morning of Friday, November 22, 1963, RUBY awoke at approximately 11:00 a.m. When RUBY saw the ad he sensed a double-cross. If President Kennedy was killed on the day this advertisement was published, his murder would be associated with the Jews since "Bernard Weissman" was a typically Jewish name and a black border was symbolic of an obituary. RUBY knew that H.L. Hunt was a notorious anti-Semite, and this confirmed his suspicions that H.L. Hunt was behind the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

RUBY'S employee, Andrew Armstrong, Jr., a black man who had served five years for a marijuana offense, worked for the Hunt family just before RUBY hired him in January 1962 as a maintenance man at an apartment building. Andrew Armstrong, Jr. knew RUBY since the early 1950's when Andrew Armstrong, Jr. was a vocalist at RUBY'S club. Andrew Armstrong, Jr. testified that he became acquainted with the Campisi family in 1970 and his nephew eventually went to work at the Egyptian Lounge.[HSCA V9 para. 923]

Additionally, after RUBY was arrested for shooting OSWALD, the Dallas police found transcripts of H.L. Hunt's Lifeline Radio Broadcasts in the trunk of RUBY'S car. [WR p367] RUBY was convinced that the Dallas chapter of the John Birch Society was controlled by the Hunt family.

RUBY: NOVEMBER 22, 1963

WELCOME MR. KENNEDY TO DALLAS...

- ... A CITY is disgraced by a recent Liberal smear attempt that its citizens have just elected the most Conservative Americans to public office.
- ... A CITY that is an economic "boom town," not because of Federal handouts, but through conservative economic and business practices.
- ... A CITY that will continue to give and prosper despite efforts by you and your administration to penalize it for its nonconformity to "New Internationalism."
- ... A CITY that rejected your philosophy and policies in 1964 and will do so again in 1968—more emphatically than before.

MR. KENNEDY, despite contentions on the part of your administration, the State Department, the Mayor of Dallas, the Dallas City Council, and members of your party, we free-thinking and America-loving citizens of Dallas still have, through a Constitution largely ignored by you, the right to address our grievances, to question you, to disagree with you, and to criticize you.

In asserting this constitutional right, we wish to ask you publicly the following questions—indeed, questions of paramount importance and interest to all free peoples everywhere—which we trust you will answer ... in public, without sophistry. These questions are:

WHY is Latin America turning either anti-American or Communist, or both, despite increased U.S. foreign aid, State Department policy, and your own Ivy Tower pronouncements?

WHY do you say we have built a "wall of freedom" around Cuba when there is no freedom in Cuba today? Because of your policy, thousands of Cubans have been imprisoned, are starving and being persecuted—with thousands already murdered and thousands more awaiting execution and, in addition, the entire population of almost 7,000,000 Cubans are living in slavery.

WHY have you approved the sale of wheat and corn to our enemies when you know the Communist soldiers "travel on their stomachs" just as ours do? Communist soldiers are daily wounding and/or killing American soldiers in South Viet Nam.

WHY did you host, salute and entertain Tito—Moscow's Trojan Horse—just a short time after our sworn enemy, Khrushchev, embraced the Yugoslav dictator as a great hero and leader of Communism?

WHY have you urged greater aid, comfort, recognition, and understanding for Yugoslavia, Poland, Hungary, and other Communist countries, while turning your back on the pleas of Hungarian, East German, Cuban and other anti-Communist freedom fighters?

WHY did Cambodia lick the U.S. out of its country after we poured nearly 400 Million Dollars of aid into its ultra-leftist government?

WHY has Gus Hall, head of the U.S. Communist Party praised almost every one of your policies and announced that the party will endorse and support your re-election in 1968?

WHY have you banned the showing at U.S. military bases of the film "Operation Abolition"—the movie by the House Committee on Un-American Activities exposing Communism in America?

WHY have you ordered or permitted your brother Bobby, the Attorney General, to go soft on Communists, fellow travelers, and ultra-leftists in America, while permitting him to persecute loyal Americans who criticize you, your administration, and your leadership?

WHY are you in favor of the U.S. continuing to give economic aid to Argentina, in spite of the fact that Argentina has just seized almost 400 Million Dollars of American private property?

WHY has the Foreign Policy of the United States degenerated to the point that the C.I.A. is arranging coups and having staunch Anti-Communist Allies of the U.S. bloodily exterminated.

WHY have you scrapped the Monroe Doctrine in favor of the "Spirit of Moscow"?

MR. KENNEDY, as citizens of these United States of America, we DEMAND answers to these questions, and we want them NOW.

THE AMERICAN FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE

"An unaffiliated and non-partisan group of citizens who wish truth"

BERNARD WEISSMAN,
Chairman

P.O. Box 1792—Dallas 21, Texas

The Dallas Morning News carried this full-page 'advertisement' on 22 November

RUBY drove to the Dallas Morning News building, which overlooked Dealey Plaza. He arrived there at about 11:30 a.m. and spoke with advertising employee Don Campbell from about noon until 12:25 p.m., when Don Campbell left his office. When Don Campbell's secretary returned from lunch she noticed that RUBY was sitting in a chair directly in front of her desk: "I am not sure which way he was looking but I have the impression that he was looking out at the scene where President Kennedy was assassinated. You see, sitting in the chair RUBY was sitting in, you can see the Texas School Book Depository, and the very window OSWALD fired from." RUBY'S first reaction to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy concerned the Bernard Weissman advertisement. RUBY opened The Dallas Morning News to the pages that contained the advertisement. "Who is this Weissman?" RUBY asked. Shortly afterward confusion reigned in The Dallas Morning News office as advertisers telephoned to cancel advertising they had placed for the weekend. RUBY opined that some of these cancellations were motivated by the Bernard Weissman advertisement. Ten minutes later RUBY called his sister, then called Andrew Armstrong, Jr. at the Carousel Club and told him: "If the President dies we will close the club." This was RUBY'S next concern - that John Kennedy had actually been killed and was not just wounded. RUBY left the Dallas Morning News building at about 1:20 p.m. and drove to Parkland Hospital where he was observed by Seth Kantor and Wilma Tice. In July 1964, Wilma Tice received a threatening phone call that advised her to "keep her mouth shut or be killed." The next day someone attempted to break into her home. [FBI 44-1639 - 582; FBI 62-109060-3680; HSCA RUBY Chronology]

An official statement was issued at about 1:25 p.m. that the President was dead. At 1:40 p.m. RUBY was at the Carousel Club and at 1:51 p.m. he called Ralph Paul and spoke with him for three minutes, while a radio at the Carousel played in the background.

RUBY AND TIPPIT

At about 1:55 p.m. the first news came over the air about the death of Officer TIPPIT. Curtis La Verne Crafard, an employee of the Carousel Club, recalled the scene:

RUBY said he knew TIPPIT, and RUBY referred to him by his first name, or a nickname, neither of which I can remember now. He said he knew him quite well. He was definitely referring to J.D. TIPPIT the Dallas Police Officer who was shot on the day of the assassination.

Andrew Armstrong Jr. heard RUBY say the same thing. Crafard had been arrested in Ohio in 1961. Charge: "Sleeper." He was also arrested in Ohio for taking a minor across state lines. Prosecution was declined. When Crafard came to Dallas after the Kennedy assassination he stayed at the Dallas City Mission. He listed his occupation as a carnival worker. [WCE 2430; WR p368; WCE 2275; FBI 62-109060-3680]

After he was arrested for shooting OSWALD, RUBY denied having known TIPPIT: "I know another TIPPIT - in the Special Service Bureau." Evidence to the contrary was supplied by Eva Rubenstein Grant who told reporters:

JACK knew J.D. TIPPIT - I knew him too. He used to come into both the Vegas Club and the Carousel Club many times. He was a fine man.

Stella Coffman, who was employed by RUBY as a head waitress from 1948 to 1953, told the FBI:

Officer TIPPIT had patrolled the area of the Silver Spur, which JACK used to own. He made numerous visits to the club and was a close friend of JACK'S. [WCE 3, C. Ray Hall; Boston Globe 12.5.63 Dom Bonafede; FBI 44-24016-443 p3]

THE THEORY OF WHY OSWALD KILLED TIPPIT

RUBY's plan was to have TIPPIT kill OSWALD for having resisted arrest. TIPPIT would have become a national hero, and no one would have linked him to RUBY, as long as he kept his mouth shut. TIPPIT would also have received a large amount of money from the Teamster Pension Fund. But, as fate had it, OSWALD killed TIPPIT instead of visa versa. RUBY had to fulfill the contract himself, despite his mafia background. The mafia knew it was better to have had a "stand up" guy like RUBY behind bars, rather than an unpredictable OSWALD. RUBY stepped out of the shadows and executed OSWALD. This frightened America. The President is assassinated and then a night club owner kills the alleged assassin two days later? What's going on here? America's credulity was strained. This, along with OSWALD'S leftist background, caused President Lyndon B. Johnson to form the Warren Commission.

JOHN MARTINO stated that someone was waiting to kill OSWALD in the Texas Theatre, where OSWALD had previously been told to go for a clandestine meeting. This did not make sense because OSWALD'S death would not have been easily explained. If TIPPIT shot OSWALD in the course of arresting him, few questions would have been asked. JACK RUBY would not have been needed if OSWALD was to be killed in the Texas Theatre.

OSWALD'S ACTIVITIES AFTER THE ASSASSINATION

OSWALD boarded a bus at 12:40 p.m. The bus was the first one that came along, not the one that stopped in front of his rooming house, and as soon as he was clear of the Texas School Book Depository area he got off and took a taxi to the 500 block of North Beckley, five blocks south of his rooming house. OSWALD got out of the taxicab at 12:54 p.m. then walked to his rooming house at a brisk pace. [WR pgs. 6, 151, 154, 613, 619, 622, 636, 648]

OSWALD was beginning to freak out. He jumped on the first bus that came along, and then uncharacteristically got in a taxi cab. OSWALD got out of the cab before it reached his door, because he wanted to make sure no one was following him and that no one had staked out his rooming house. Paranoia had set in deep. OSWALD knew it was not long before the crew HEMMING had gotten him involved with would take him out.

DALLAS POLICE CAR 207

After the assassination of President John F. Kennedy Earline Roberts reported that a police car pulled up in front of OSWALD'S rooming house at about 1:00 p.m. on November 22, 1963. When the FBI checked the number of the car (207) as supplied by Earline Roberts, it found the car was in another part of Dallas at that time and it did not belong to TIPPIT. She may have been mistaken about the number of the police car but it was unlikely she was mistaken about its presence. By 1:00 p.m. OSWALD was one block away from 1026 North Beckley. Had OSWALD also seen this police car? [CIA 339-136; Belin, You Are the Jury, Quadrangle, 1973]

OSWALD IN THE ROOMING HOUSE

After the police car drove off, OSWALD ran into the house with unusual haste, changed his clothes, and grabbed his Smith & Wesson .38 caliber revolver and some ammunition. When OSWALD ordered his revolver he also "wrote in order form in ink an order for one box of ammunition and one holster, which was then crossed out by him." [FBI Los Angeles 89-75-241] Earline Roberts saw him leave about two minutes after he entered. A few seconds later, she went to the window and noted the direction in which he was heading.

EARLINE ROBERTS

Was Earline Roberts, the resident housekeeper where OSWALD lived part, of the conspiracy? Did she report OSWALD'S post assassination movements to those who were going to murder him? There was evidence that linked her to RUBY, however, she did not fit the profile of the personnel who were used in the assassination of President Kennedy. Click HERE to see in interview with Earline Roberts.

BERTHA CHEEK

Earline Roberts was the sister of Bertha Cheek. Bertha Cheek was a friend of JACK RUBY since 1948. Earline Roberts and Bertha Cheek were previously involved in housing Cuban exiles. Bertha Cheek's former employee, Jesse Willard Lynch, told the FBI that there were two Cuban residents in Bertha Cheek's boarding house in the spring of 1958. One of them claimed to be a watchmaker and called Havana twice a week from a pay telephone in the boarding house. He stayed for seven weeks. The second Cuban claimed to be buying gas or oil refinery parts in Dallas. He stayed for four weeks. Jesse Willard Lynch was arrested and convicted of housebreaking in 1934. In 1939 he was arrested for a similar offense. Earline Roberts had no recollection of the Cubans. Bertha Cheek initially recalled having rented to them in 1959, then stated she had no recollection whatsoever of any Cubans. Bertha Cheek checked her records for the year in question, and there was no entry for any Cubans.

Bertha Cheek's relative, Berle Cheek, was involved in Dallas gambling activities. [WCE 5353] The HSCA asked Lewis J. McWillie if he knew Berle Cheek. Lewis J. McWillie: "Berle Cheek, yes I knew him too...He had been in gambling prior to my going to Dallas.

We borrowed some money from Berle Cheek I think, while I was at Top of the Hill, I don't know, $10,000 or something." In July 1957 RUBY used the name "EARL ROBERT RUBY" when he filed an application for a license for the Vegas Club. This was similar to Earline Roberts. [FBI 302 with Gladys Johnson 3.20.64 Dallas, #DC 100-16461-Switzer; FBI 302 with Gladys Johnson 11.27.63, Dallas, #DC-43-Bardwell Odum; Gladys Johnson Test. RUBY met with Bertha Cheek on November 18, 1963. RUBY claimed Bertha Cheek was considered investing in one of his nightclubs. [WCD 205 p453-62; WC Hubert Memo 3.19.64] The Warren Commission Report: "A possible link between OSWALD and RUBY was through Earline Roberts...Earline Roberts sister, Bertha Cheek, is known to have visited JACK RUBY at the Carousel Club during the afternoon of November 18, 1963." A Dallas interior decorator witnessed this meeting and told the FBI the conversation was harmless.

Had RUBY arranged for Earline Roberts to finger Oswald for a hit? If RUBY did this, Earline Roberts would have known RUBY was part of the conspiracy to assassinate President John F. Kennedy. Earline Roberts had no criminal record. If Earline Roberts fingered Oswald for a hit, how she could have communicated this information to TIPPIT remained a mystery. It was more likely that OSWALD had been told to show up at a meeting somewhere in Dallas and the man assigned to kill him knew where he lived and the general route he took that afternoon. HEMMING disagreed:

These are people that are used. They're dumb dummies. They don't know shit. They go to their graves without knowing. Did she drop a dime on him when he came in? You're goddamn right she did. She ran a safehouse. The cops who stopped by her place were on the fucking pad. She takes care of snitches for them. Would she connect something with OSWALD and all that? No. She don't give a fuck. She was told to report on OSWALD'S whereabouts every day. She thinks he's a snitch. Do they have something on her? Usually they do. She isn't the talkative kind. He didn't get the room at first, because a phone call had not been made. He walked in with an ad. Someone fucked up.

OSWALD'S STATE OF MIND

Between Officer Marion Baker's encounter with OSWALD in the Texas School Book Depository and the police car outside his rooming house, OSWALD realized that he was a patsy in the assassination of an American President and that the Dallas Police Department was going to take him out, and make it look like he had resisted arrest. By this time OSWALD had caught on to HEMMING's game which often involved fall guys and dirtied up patsys.

OSWALD KILLS TIPPIT INSTEAD OF VISA VERSA

TIPPIT found OSWALD at 1:15 p.m., about one mile from the rooming house, and pulled over to where OSWALD was walking. TIPPIT motioned to OSWALD, beckoning him to approach his car. The Warren Commission:

According to Chief Jesse Curry, TIPPIT was free to patrol the central Oak Cliff area. TIPPIT must have heard the description of the suspect wanted for the President's shooting; it was broadcast over Channel One at 12:45 p.m., again at 12:48 p.m. and again at 12:55 p.m. The suspect was described as a 'white male, approximately 30, slender build, height 5'10", weight 165 pounds.'

OSWALD did not fit this description. TIPPIT looked at him through the right front window. TIPPIT got out and walked around to the front of the car. As TIPPIT reached the left front wheel, OSWALD pulled out his revolver and shot TIPPIT in the head and stomach four times. TIPPIT died instantly. OSWALD emptied the spent shells from his revolver, and then reloaded it, while he made his escape. As he passed a taxi driver parked on the corner, he muttered "poor dumb cop" to himself.

OSWALD felt sorry for Tippit who was assigned a task he was too dumb to perform. At least nine persons saw OSWALD in the vicinity of the TIPPIT shooting with a smoking gun in his hand. A taxi driver, two housewives, a used car salesman and four of his customers picked OSWALD out of a lineup that night. They all placed him in the vicinity of the shooting with a revolver. Had OSWALD come to trial for the TIPPIT murder, he would have been convicted by any jury in the land. Aside from overwhelming eyewitness's testimony, OSWALD had the murder weapon in his possession when he was arrested in the Texas Theater. His prints were on it. The cartridge cases recovered from the crime scene had been fired from OSWALD'S weapon "to the exclusion of all other weapons." The bullets taken from TIPPIT'S body could not be linked with OSWALD'S revolver. In fact, rounds fired from OSWALD'S revolver could not be linked with one another. [CD 744] A paraffin test conducted by the Dallas Police Department revealed OSWALD had recently fired a pistol. The FBI: "...deposits characteristic of primer residues were found on the OSWALD casts, which were taken from his hands. The deposits found on the paraffin casts could not be specifically associated with the rifle cartridges since the primer deposits from the rifle cartridges contained the same elements as the primer residues from the revolver cartridges which were reportedly fired from OSWALD'S revolver subsequent to the assassination." [FBI 105-82555-NR 9.16.64]

By 1:10 p.m. OSWALD realized the "meeting" scheduled for the afternoon of November 22, 1963, was part of the set up and OSWALD zigzagged his way in the opposite direction to Jefferson Avenue. He threw away his jacket. By 1:19 p.m. he had evaded his pursuers. He walked down Jefferson Avenue and was able to put a half-mile between himself and the TIPPIT murder. Just as OSWALD passed a Hardy Brothers Shoe Store, a police car headed in his direction. OSWALD ducked into the store's display area and gazed in the window until the police car had left. Calvin Brewer, the manager of the store, noted OSWALD'S actions. OSWALD knew that the police would have him in their custody in a matter of minutes and he believed they intended to murder him when they did, so he ducked into a movie theater, without paying the admission fee. If Oswald was going to meet someone in the theater he would have paid the price of admission, to avoid drawing attention to himself. Sneaking into the movie house might bring the police to an area crowded with witnesses and make it difficult for them to summarily execute him. Calvin Brewer observed OSWALD sneak into the Texas Theater and reported it to the cashier who called the police. Ten minutes later the police had OSWALD in their custody, bruised but alive. Oswald had drawn a gun from his waist with one hand and struck an officer with his other hand. OSWALD did not try to fire the revolver: testimony of a firearms expert before the Warren Commission established that the hammer of the revolver never touched the shell in the chamber. During the scuffle that preceded his arrest OSWALD yelled: "I am not resisting arrest, I am not resisting arrest." [WCE2003; KCRD-TV Reel 9 30:57/pgk]

THE DEATH OF EARLINE ROBERTS

Earline Roberts died of a heart attack on January 9, 1966. Richard Warren Lewis, in The Scavengers and Critics of the Warren Commission, maintained that her death was a natural one; "A record of her autopsy is on file at Parkland Hospital. She died of heart failure, brought on by calcium deposits so large that they choked her heart's action. The attending physician also indicated she had a mild case of diabetes, pneumonia, a lung infection, ulcers of her throat and cataracts. He says there was no question about her cause of death."

Since TIPPIT failed, RUBY had to kill OSWALD himself, as quickly as possible, despite the consequences. At about 2:05 p.m. the news came over the radio that OSWALD had been taken alive. At 2:37 p.m. RUBY called Alexander Philip Gruber in Los Angeles. [WCE 2300-2350] Alexander Gruber knew RUBY since the late 1920's when Alexander Gruber was arrested and convicted as a grand larcenist. He had several other arrests for theft. In 1946 Alexander Gruber was arrested for procuring in Los Angeles. RUBY told the Warren Commission that Alex Gruber "was a bad kid" who reformed: "I am sure he makes a very legitimate livelihood at this time." [WCE 2204, FBI 44-895 3.9.64 and 3.16.64 Los Angeles, DC - 44-1639 Edward C. Olsen; WCD 1144; RUBY WC Test.]

When the FBI questioned Alexander Gruber he told them he was a scrap metal dealer - a position which would put him in contact with waste handlers. Seth Kantor reported that "Alexander Gruber was associated with Frank Matula, whom JIMMY HOFFA had installed as a Teamster official shortly after Matula got out of jail on perjury charges." [Seth Kantor, Who Was JACK RUBY, Everest House 1978 - pages 9,11, 34, 70, 203] Robert F. Kennedy identified Frank Matula as a leader of the Los Angeles Waste Handlers Union who JIMMY HOFFA appointed as a Trustee of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Frank Matula was one of three men JIMMY HOFFA trusted enough to guard the Union's funds. [Kennedy, Enemy Within] Gruber denied knowing Matula when he testified before the HSCA.

MICKEY COHEN

Seth Kantor maintained that Alexander Gruber also had "known connections with hoodlums who worked with racketeer Mickey Cohen." In 1953 RUBY told, Irving Alkana (died July 2002), one of his business partners, that he was a close friend of Mickey Cohen. There was other evidence of a Cohen-RUBY relationship. In 1956 Juanita Slusher (Candy Barr) was Mickey Cohen's girlfriend. The FBI received information that RUBY was Juanita Slusher's manager around this time. When Juanita Slusher was arrested on marijuana possession charges in 1957, Mickey Cohen hired San Francisco Attorney Melvin Belli as her defense attorney. Melvin Belli would later defend RUBY. Another FBI report stated that RUBY approached a pilot for the Texas Department of Corrections regarding assistance in obtaining nearly parole for Juanita Slusher. A Drug Enforcement Administration report dated 1958 suggested that R. D. Matthews and Juanita Slusher were involved in drug trafficking. The report stated that R.D. Matthews had served two years for cocaine possession. According to JOHN MARTINO, Mickey Cohen was involved in arms smuggling to Fidel Castro from 1957 to 1958. RUBY was involved in an identical venture at the same time. In 1961, Mickey Cohen went to prison for tax-evasion and was not released until the early 1970's. Throughout the fall of 1963 RUBY was in constant contact with Juanita Slusher. Their last known conversation took place on November 12, 1963, when RUBY called Juanita Slusher at her home in Edna, Texas. Alexander Gruber happened to be visiting RUBY in Dallas one day before this call was made. It was believed that it was Alexander Gruber's connection with Mickey Cohen that prompted RUBY to call him at 2:37 p.m. on November 22, 1963. By this time RUBY knew that he was going to have to blast OSWALD himself because it was impossible to find anyone else to do it. RUBY also knew that if you put out a contract on someone and your boy fails, you have to fulfill the contract yourself. So Ruby, a sleazy associate of Carlos Marchello, Santos Trafficante and JIMMY HOFFA [Newsweek 8.9.79; Peer Nugent, Mickey Cohn Prentice Hall 1975; FBI Los Angeles- 44-895 GAP: mel cover page G; WCE 1228; Messick- Lansky; WCE 1306; FBI 44-24016-56; HSCA V9 para. 1054; Martin, I Was Castro's Prisoner, Devin Adair, 1963; WCE 2284] On July 29, 1976, Mickey Cohen died of stomach cancer.

RUBY wanted Alexander Gruber to get him an attorney who would defend him after he shot OSWALD. Chances are RUBY wanted Mickey Cohen's ex-attorney, Melvin Belli. According to recently declassified FBI documents, Sam Brody, who was associated with Melvin Belli's law firm, was associated with Mickey Cohen in a questionable capacity:

In connection with the Mickey Cohen investigation in 1958, we received information that Sam Brody was with Mickey Cohen when Cohen was arrested by the Philadelphia Police Department. Sam Brody's room was searched at that time by the police although he was not arrested..." When the FBI ran a check on Melvin Belli the FBI found: "Many references concerning reported telephonic contacts between Melvin Belli and Mickey Cohen.

A further search of its indices revealed that in April 1959, Melvin Belli accompanied Mickey Cohen to the Las Vegas Sheriff's office where Mickey Cohen registered as a convicted felon. Later that year Melvin Belli defended Mickey Cohen on a charge of having assaulted the Chief of the Federal Narcotics Bureau in Los Angeles. [FBI CA 44-895 GAP: mel cover page G; San Francisco Examiner 4.28.59, 7.8.59, 8.24.59 as cited in unidentified FBI doc. in author's possession.] CIA documents revealed that Melvin Belli was in contact with Victor Velasquez, a Mexican Attorney who was Chairman of the Board of Directors of the International Academy of Trial Lawyers. In 1942 Victor Velasquez was a History Professor and Fascist Leader, at the Autonomous University of Mexico City. By 1943, Victor Velasquez was directing drug smuggling for the fascists, until the defeat of the Axis in 1945. That year Victor Velasquez was investigated by American Intelligence and found to be "pro-U.S." In 1958 he had a private interview with the American Ambassador, and in 1962 a CIA Staff employee described him as "Mexico's outstanding criminal lawyer." When questioned about RUBY'S telephone call to him on November 22, 1963, Alexander Gruber told the FBI that RUBY called to express his grief over the death of the President. According to Alexander Gruber, RUBY had never been involved in "anything illegal" prior to shooting OSWALD and RUBY'S telephone call had nothing to do with that shooting. Two minutes after speaking with Alexander Gruber, RUBY called Ralph Paul. [WR pgs. 337-340] Five minutes later he left the Carousel Club and drove to Eva Rubenstein Grant's home. He went back to the Carousel Club and directed Larry Crafard to prepare a "closed" sign. When the sign was completed RUBY walked to a nearby delicatessen and bought $20 worth of food. RUBY went back to Eva Grant's where he ate supper, then drove to the Police and Courts Building where OSWALD was being held. At least five witnesses recalled having seen him on the third floor of Police Headquarters between the hours of 6:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. One of them saw RUBY attempt to enter the Homicide Office where OSWALD was being questioned. At about 9:15 p.m. RUBY drove to a local synagogue.

Click HERE for video of Ruby at Police Headquarters on November 23, 1963

By 11:30 p.m. RUBY was back stalking OSWALD at Police Headquarters. Now he claimed to be a "translator for the Israeli press." RUBY seemed to have Israel and the fate of his fellow Jews on his mind. When OSWALD was shown to the media at a press conference in the basement of the building, RUBY was there, standing on a table, looking for an opportunity to blow OSWALD away. Later that evening RUBY corrected

District Attorney Henry Wade when he mistakenly identified OSWALD as having been a member of the Free Cuba Committee, an Anti-Castro group:

Not the Free Cuba Committee; the Fair play for Cuba Committee. There is a big difference.

He also had Cuba on his mind. Initially RUBY said that he had his revolver with him that night. He later denied it. [FBI DL-44-1639-5563] RUBY spent the rest of the night mingling with the media. He told everyone that he believed there was a connection between H.L. Hunt, the Bernard Weissman advertisement and the assassination of President Kennedy.

On November 22, 1963, at 11:44 p.m. RUBY placed a long-distance call to Galveston, Texas. RUBY dialed the telephone number of Thomas J. McKenna. On November 21, 1963, Thomas J. McKenna had telephoned the Adolfus Hotel in Dallas, across the street from the Carousel Club. The call was placed to Breck Wall's room. On November 22, 1963, Thomas McKenna placed no long-distance calls. At 4:30 a.m. on November 23, 1963, RUBY awakened George Senator, then called Larry Crafard. The three men drove to an "Impeach Earl Warren" sign on the Central Expressway in Dallas. There RUBY instructed Larry Crafard to take 3 photographs of the billboard. RUBY noted on the back of an envelope a name and Post Office Box that appeared on the sign. Pursuing a possible connection between the billboard and the newspaper advertisement, RUBY drove to the post office and asked an employee for the name of the man who had rented the box indicated on the billboard. The employee said he could not provide him with such information. [WR p344] Larry Crafard realized that RUBY'S behavior was getting more and more suspicious by the minute. At 9:00 a.m. he assembled his few belongings and left Dallas forever. [WR p345] RUBY had taken a few Preludin diet pills on Friday night and was unable to sleep during the morning of Saturday, November 23, 1963. At 1:30 p.m. RUBY drove to Dealey Plaza where he continued to mingle with the media. RUBY pointed out to a reporter that Captain Will Fritz and Chief Jesse Curry were in the vicinity. RUBY knew both these men. Jesse Curry had put Will Fritz in charge of OSWALD while he was in police custody. Travis Kirk, Officer TIPPIT's attorney, remarked: "Fritz and JACK RUBY were very close friends. JACK RUBY, in spite of his reputation of being a 'hood' was allowed complete run of the Homicide Bureau."

RUBY said that next he drove home and then returned downtown to Sol's Turf Bar. The evidence indicated, however, that sometime after leaving Dealey Plaza, he went to a pay phone located at a garage next to the Carousel Club and made several telephone calls. The manager of the garage heard RUBY mention Chief Jesse Curry's name during a conversation concerning the transfer of OSWALD. [WR p346]

The fact that RUBY made telephone calls from a pay telephone rather than from the phone at his club was significant. The General Counsel of the Warren Commission, J. Lee Rankin, vetoed a staff request for the telephone records of the parking garage, the Cabana Motel and the Egyptian Lounge. [HSCA V9 p188]

At about 3:00 p.m. on Saturday, November 23, 1963, five news reporters saw RUBY at the Police and Courts Building. OSWALD was scheduled to be moved at 4:00 p.m. and RUBY was on his case, but Will Fritz postponed the move indefinitely. [WR pgs. 346-347] Later that afternoon RUBY was back at Sol's Turf Bar at the Adolphus Hotel, where he showed everyone his Polaroid snapshots of the "Impeach Earl Warren" sign which he insisted was connected with the "Weissman Advertisement" in a way which was supposed to create anti-Semitic feelings in Dallas. That afternoon he spoke with his accountant and civil attorney, made several telephone calls from pay telephones, then went back to Eva Grant's. Later that evening he returned to his apartment and called Lawrence Meyers at the Cabana. Then RUBY went back to Eva Rubenstein Grant's house and called Ralph Paul. A waitress at Ralph Paul's restaurant overheard a bit of the RUBY/Paul conversation that night, and it concerned a gun. Shortly after 11:00 p.m. RUBY returned to the Carousel Club and made a series of five brief long-distance calls. First RUBY telephoned Ralph Paul at his restaurant, then at his home. At 11:36 p.m. a third call was placed to his home at 11:44 p.m. Then RUBY telephoned Galveston, Texas. This call lasted two minutes. Thereafter, RUBY immediately placed a one minute phone call to Ralph Paul's home. At 11:48 p.m. RUBY went to the PAGO Club, about a ten minute drive from the Carousel Club, and made more telephone calls.

RUBY stayed up all night once again and at 8:00 a.m. on Sunday November 24, 1963, he was seen near the Police and Courts Building. RUBY returned to his apartment at 9:00 a.m. About an hour later he received a call from one of his strippers who wanted to get paid. RUBY decided to wire this woman part of the money owed her. [WR 346-347] A few minutes before 11:00 a.m. RUBY left his apartment and drove to the Western Union Office. RUBY parked his car, placed his keys and his bill-fold containing $1000 in the trunk, which he locked, then placed the trunk key in the glove compartment. He did not lock the doors of the car. With his revolver, more than $2000 in cash and no personal identification RUBY entered the Western Union office. Information on the origin of these Federal banknotes was withheld as of 2010 by the FBI. [FBI NY 65-17696 p5] His transaction there was completed at 11:17 a.m. RUBY proceeded to the Police and Courts Building and entered the police basement from the auto ramp. RUBY said he snuck into the basement when a policeman outside was distracted. Sheriff Roy Vaughn was often credited with having allowed RUBY into the garage where the OSWALD murder took place because of testimony from Napoleon J. Daniels, a former Dallas policeman. Daniels said he saw someone who looked like RUBY go down the ramp with Roy Vaughn's assent, two minutes before OSWALD was killed.

PATRICK DEAN

The HSCA determined that RUBY had been aided and abetted in gaining entrance by Sergeant Patrick Dean. In addition to being in charge of basement security, Sergeant Patrick Dean was at Parkland Memorial Hospital when RUBY was there. Sergeant Patrick Dean failed a polygraph test when questioned about these incidents. HEMMING told this researcher: "The only indicators we have that somebody used resources within the law enforcement community, the biggest one being RUBY'S access to the garage. A personal visit was made to RUBY with a phone call to him. RUBY was at the old Dallas News building, looking through the same window I'd looked through when I went through Dallas earlier that year. He heard the shots. Funny thing, I was in the Miami News building."

During RUBY'S trial for the murder of OSWALD, Sergeant Patrick Dean testified that RUBY had told him, during a jail cell interview, that he thought about killing OSWALD two days before he shot him. As it turned out, RUBY'S conviction, which carried the death penalty, was reversed on appeal partly because of Sergeant Patrick Dean's testimony. Sergeant Patrick Dean made no secret of his friendship with RUBY. He told the FBI he had known RUBY since 1960 as operator of the Carousel Club. Sergeant Patrick Dean also was a friend of Joe Civello. Civello invited Sergeant Patrick Dean to a dinner in Dallas shortly after Civello was arrested with other mafia leaders at the Appalachia, N.Y. meeting in 1957. Sergeant Patrick Dean was a police sergeant until 1973, when he retired on a disability pension after incurring injuries in an auto accident. Sergeant Patrick Dean was in a coma for 21 days and suffered permanent brain damage. The HSCA was unable to arrange a convenient date for deposing Sergeant Patrick Dean and he failed to respond to its written interrogatories. [HSCA V9 p139; Goltz, Dallas Morning News 3.25.79]

RUBY stood behind the front line of newsmen gathered to photograph OSWALD. As OSWALD emerged at 11:20 a.m. RUBY moved quickly forward and without saying a word, pulled out a snub nosed .38 and fired one fatal shot into OSWALD'S stomach. At 11:30 a.m. RUBY was wrestled to the ground, disarmed, and taken into custody. He told the police that he had murdered OSWALD "because he had a communistic look on his face." At 6:00 p.m. Eva Rubenstein Grant visited JACK. Ruby had to get OSWALD before the police got him into the armored car. If he didn't he and his family were toast. “Everything pertaining to what is happening will never come to the surface the world will never know the true facts of what occurred my motive. The people that have so much to gain and have such an ulterior motive for putting me in the position I am in will never let the true facts come above board to the world.” There are few institutions in the world capable of suppression on this grand a scale and the CIA is one of them. CIA’s ulterior motive would be to create a political climate in which Cuba would be invaded and Communism overthrown. As Eva Rubenstein Grant was leaving the police station she told reporters that RUBY "didn't see why Kennedy was killed when a man like Valachi was permitted to live." Joe Valachi was a mafioso who testified against the mob. Valachi had no knowledge of RUBY. His testimony concerned mob influence in Las Vegas. In jail RUBY was visited by Breck Wall, Joe Campisi and Ralph Paul. [FBI DC-1639 12.2.63 FD-302 with M.W. Newman at Dallas Jack B. Peden]

When RUBY came to trial his attorneys were Melvin Belli and Joe Tonahill. Joe Tonahill was a highly successful attorney from Jasper, Texas, primarily engaged in negligence cases. Tonahill had assisted Melvin Belli in the Juanita Slusher case, and had also played an unspecified part in an investigation concerning Mickey Cohen. In July 1961, the FBI received information that Joe Tonahill was a subscriber to a publication which was the Subject of an interstate gambling investigation.

Melvin Belli and Joe Tonahill tried to convince a Dallas Jury that RUBY had killed OSWALD because he had an attack of "psychomotor epilepsy" in the basement of Police Headquarters. RUBY was found guilty and sentenced to death. RUBY dismissed Melvin Belli and hired Percy Foreman, a widely known Houston, Texas, criminal lawyer who specialized in murder cases. The Dallas FBI office was aware of Percy Foreman in connection with his representation of Joseph Francis Civello, top mafia figure in Dallas. [FBI 44-24016-1319] On November 27, 1963, Bobby Gene Moore, a piano player in one of RUBY'S nightclubs, called the FBI and told them he had some information on his ex-boss. Bobby Gene Moore, who had an extensive criminal record, explained that at the same time he had worked for RUBY, he also worked for Joseph Civello at the LaMonte Italian Importing Company. Bobby Gene Moore suspected that Joseph Civello was involved in "racket activities" when he would not let him open certain cartons of imported Italian cheese, although that was allegedly his job. Bobby Gene Moore said RUBY was a frequent visitor to the importing company while he worked there. [WCE 1536; FBI SF 44-494 DL 44-1639 FD - 302 with Bobby Gene Moore 11.26.63 Oakland, Calif. D.F. Hallahan; FBI DL 44-1639 - 1190] When the FBI questioned Paul Roland Jones subsequent to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, he advised them to interview Joe Civello if they wanted to find out if RUBY was "mobbed-up." Paul Roland Jones had been indicted for perjury in the Southern District of New York in a case entitled: U.S. v. Peter Crosby et. al.

RUBY'S TESTIMONY BEFORE THE WARREN COMMISSION

On June 7, 1964, RUBY was questioned by the Warren Commission. He said: "... you are weak in what you want to tell the truth about, and what you want to say which is the truth." RUBY was going to tell the truth, but he was going to do it subtly.

RUBY went on to say:

I wanted to get up and say the truth regarding the steps that led me to do what I have got involved in, but since I have a spotty background in the nightclub business, I should have been the last person to ever want to do something that I had been involved in it. In other words, I was carried away tremendously...Now everything is very vague to me as to when this transpired; after they heard the President had been shot or prior to this...Different things came up, flashed back into my mind, that it, dirtied up my background...I knew persons of notorious backgrounds years ago in Chicago. I was with the union back in Chicago and I left the union when I found out the notorious organization had moved in there. It was in 1940. Then recently I had to make so many numerous calls that I am sure you know of...all these phone calls were related, not in anyway involved with the underworld...as a matter of fact I even called a Mr. - hold it before I say it - Miller...headed the American Federation of Labor - I can't think - in the State of Texas - Miller...called Barney Ross...All these phone calls were related, not in any way involved with the underworld, because I have been away from Chicago 17 years down in Dallas...I want to set you gentlemen straight on all the telephone calls I had...Has every witness been this hesitant in trying to explain their story..."

As stated RUBY had to act quickly when he killed OSWALD. He knew that his background as a Teamster-connected gangster would come to light as a result of toll records, but it was worth it. The calls that he made most certainly concerned the Kennedy assassination as the people he spoke with all had one thing in common – they were gangsters who hated the Kennedys either connected to MARCELLO or HOFFA. RUBY would not say the word Mafia, he used “notorious” and “underworld” instead.

RUBY told the Warren Commission how he stalked OSWALD on the evening of November 22, and how he was going to have to kill him because he was backed against the wall by the mob who would go after his family if he double-crossed them. RUBY:

I went down to the assembly room down in the basement...I got up on a little table there where I know I wasn't blocking anyone's view, because there was an abutment sticking out, and I had my back to the abutment...

RUBY believed that President Kennedy was killed because of a conspiracy:

I am being victimized in a plot on the world's greatest tragedy and crime...Unfortunately for me, for me giving the people the opportunity to get in power, because of the act I committed, has put a lot of people in jeopardy with their lives...I may not live tomorrow to give any further testimony. The reason why I add this to this, since you assure me that I have been speaking sense by then, I might be speaking sense by following what I have said, and the only thing I want to get out to the public, and I can't say it here, is with authenticity, with sincerity of truth of everything and why my act was committed, but it can't be said here...I tell you gentlemen my whole family is in jeopardy. My sisters, as to their lives...Naturally I am a foregone conclusion. My sisters Eva, Eileen and Mary, I lost my sisters. My brothers Sam, Earl, Hyman and myself naturally they are in jeopardy of loss of their lives. Yet they have, just because they are blood related to myself - does that sound serious enough for you Justice Warren? Would you rather I delete what I said and pretend nothing is going on.

[Testimony of RUBY 6. 7.64 WCH p181; Memo: To: Henry Wade re: WCH held in the County Jail 6.7.64, with JACK RUBY testifying. pgs.1-21]

Ruby was saying that a coup d'etat had taken place. "Unfortunately for me, for me giving the people the opportunity to get in power, because of the act I committed." RUBY was telling Justice WARREN that his family was in jeopardy and that he was a walking dead man. Who had the power to do this? Organized crime! RUBY demanded and was given, a lie detector test. In Coup D'Etat In America, it was pointed out that by the time RUBY was asked the important questions, he was desensitized. The HSCA confirmed this and discovered that the FBI's polygraph operator decreased his instrument's sensitivity when RUBY was asked about an underworld conspiracy. [HSCA V9 p8]

RUBY PRETENDS TO BE INSANE

RUBY'S death sentence was overturned and he began serving a life sentence for the murder of OSWALD. In July 1965, he was interviewed by a psychiatrist after two suicide attempts. RUBY feigned insanity in an effort to get his sentence mitigated and convince the syndicate that he posed no threat to them as a State's witness. RUBY'S delusions took an interesting form. He told the psychiatrist, Dr. Werner Teuter, on July 12, 1965 to July 15, 1965 that his mind was functioning adequately.

He promised that, after having given such proof, he would make me acquainted with a conspiracy which I was to guard with the utmost secrecy...He considers himself the victim of a conspiracy and was 'framed' to kill OSWALD so that OSWALD could never say who made him kill President Kennedy. This framework of course is very complicated and must be guarded with the utmost secrecy. It also involves high government agencies, and his attorneys, whom he considers to be members of the plot...There is considerable guilt about the fact that he sent guns to Cuba - he feels he 'helped the enemy' and incriminated himself. 'They got what they wanted on me.' For him the assassination was an act of overthrowing the government...Then he suddenly related that he cannot possibly divulge how he was framed into killing OSWALD.

RUBY interspersed this information with tirades concerning anti-Semitism that did not make sense:

Do you hear crying - Jewish men and women and children are being slaughtered - in the next room - all over the United States. Auschwitz, Treblinka are operating again - my family is dead. Listen, I hear them, trains, coming to take them away.

The thing that bothered RUBY the most about his part in the conspiracy was that his actions could have engendered a wave of anti-Semitism. RUBY told the Warren Commission:

Unfortunately, Chief Earl Warren, had you been around five or six months ago, and I know your hands were tied, you couldn't do it, and immediately the President would have gotten a hold of my true story, or whatever would have been said about me, a certain organization wouldn't have completely formed now, so powerfully, to use me because I am of Jewish extraction, Jewish faith, to commit the most dastardly crime that has ever been committed. Can you understand now in visualizing what happened, what powers, what momentum has been carried on to create this feeling of mass feeling against my people, against certain people that were against them prior to their power. That goes over your head, doesn't it?

Chief Justice Warren thought RUBY made reference to the John Birch Society, but then RUBY said that President Johnson had "relinquished certain powers to these certain people [the CIA]."

Warren: "Well I am afraid I don't know what power you believe he relinquished to [the John Birch Society]. I think that it is difficult to understand what you have to say.

RUBY: I want to say this to you. The Jewish people are being exterminated at this moment. Consequently a whole new form of government is going to take over our country, and I know I won't live to see you another time. Do I sound sort of screwy in telling you these things?..There is only one thing. If you don't take me back to Washington tonight to give me a chance to prove to the President that I am not guilty, then you will see the most tragic thing that will ever happen...All I know is something can be saved. Because right now, I want to tell you this, I am used as a scapegoat, and there is no greater weapon that you can use to create some falsehood about the Jewish faith, especially at the terrible, heinous crime such as the killing of President Kennedy. Now maybe something [democracy] can be saved. It may not be too late, whatever happens, Lyndon Johnson knew the truth from me. But if I am eliminated, there won't be any way of knowing. Right now, when I leave your presence now, I am the only one who can bring out the truth to our President, who believes in righteousness and justice. But he has been told, I am certain, that I was part of the plot to assassinate the President.

RUBY did not "sing" to the authorities. During the time he spent behind bars he denied being part of a conspiracy. The syndicate was well-served and retribution did not have to be taken against his family. RUBY named no names. In March 1964 RUBY expressed concern that his jailers were going to kill him. [FBI 44-24016-1231] In October 1966 the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the conviction of RUBY for the killing of OSWALD in a unanimous decision. RUBY was going to get a new trial. On December 9, 1966, Judge Lewis Holland announced that the second trial of RUBY was to be held in Wichita Falls, Texas, trial date not yet set. In December 1966 widespread cancer was discovered in RUBY'S lymph nodes. He was dead one month later. The major link between the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and organized crime had been silenced. The CIA investigated the possibility of inducing cancer in humans as a means of assassinating individuals by natural causes. The CIA documents, dated in the mid-1950's indicated researchers looked into the use of "physiologically active chemical compounds," particularly the carcinogenic chemical beryllium, as a means of inducing cancer. The memos talked about having used cancer as well as "heart techniques" to "knock off key guys." The memorandums, which were released by the Assassination Information Bureau in Washington, D.C. did not reveal if the CIA ever actually utilized a cancer-causing substance against an unknowing victim. [ZNS New Service, John Newhall, 4.13.79]

In 1993 STURGIS circulated a book proposal in which he implied he knew how JACK RUBY was coerced into killing OSWALD, and how RUBY was murdered in the prison hospital. STURGIS claimed his information came from RUBY'S friend, Wally Weston. In 1976 Wally Wetson "after he read newspaper articles concerning information furnished by one FRANK STURGIS" told the FBI that he suddenly remembered that OSWALD was present at the Carousel Club. He also said that just before he died RUBY told him to the effect that now they are going to find out about my trips to Cuba, my trips to New Orleans, and the guns and everything. [FBI 62-109060-7569; HSCA interview with Fonzi 7.30.76] HEMMING told this researcher:

I went to RUBY'S nightclub one time. I didn't like the place because it reminded me of Bourbon Street. Wally Welch took us over there. I didn't recognize RUBY. We figure, well, Wally could hook us up with some people that could be of support. They knew each other and interchanged their names [Wally Welch / Wally Wetson] on a few transactions. RUBY would listen to anyone who could kill his sister. He hasn't got the phone number of the council.

THE GANGSTERS, POST COUP

MIKE McLANEY AND LEWIS J. McWILLIE

When Fidel Castro took power, Mike McLaney was arrested for three months, then freed. Mike McLaney continued to operate under Fidel Castro and hoped to become gambling czar of Cuba. Mike McLaney paid out $102,000 to Fidel Castro's Ministry of Gambling headed by FRANK STURGIS. When the Casino Nacional was nationalized in 1960 he lost $7 million. Fidel Castro had Mike McLaney deported a few days later. In the 1960's Mike McLaney built the Royal Haitian Hotel, and operated three casinos in Haiti until the late 1980's. In the mid-1960's Mike McLaney operated in the Bahamas, where he supported Linden Pindling. In the late 1960's mobster Louis Mastriana accused Mike McLaney and Elliot Roosevelt of plotting to kill Linden Pindling. In 1973 Mike McLaney told a Senate subcommittee that he had supported Linden Pindling on the promise that Lindon Pindling would award gambling concessions to him - which Lindon Pindling failed to do. In 1971 Mike McLaney was convicted of income tax evasion. In 1975 Lewis J. McWillie worked for Mike McLaney. The HSCA questioned Lewis J. McWillie about this: "I met Mr. McLaney years ago in Miami. This was in the early 1940's, 1946, or 1947. He had a restaurant called L'Aiglon, a French restaurant...when I went to Cuba, he had the National Hotel. I used to go over and visit with him, you know, like you visit with people. And then I worked for McLaney in Haiti, too. I stayed down there nine months. I got sick down there. McLaney's brother Bill was a very good friend of mine, we're still friends. I worked for him at the Carousel here in Las Vegas. They owned the Carousel, McLaneys. I wasn't aware the McLaneys were involved in anti-Castro activities after their return to the United States. Never heard it before today. I think I read it in a book too..." ## FOLLOW UP: MIKE McLANEY SON AND GRANDSON

In received this email from McLaney's grandson:

July of 1998. My father was the son of Michael McLaney Sr. He was the last remaining family member in Port Au Prince Haiti. He was operating the Royal Haitian Hotel and Casino since leaving Cuba. He had several other business ventures but the primary focus was the hotel and three casinos. While my father was departing the bank he was gunned down by unknown persons. No one has taken responsibilities for the shooting and the embassy has not determined reasons. Despite a helicopter manhunt for the assailants it proved fruitless. I heard the news head housekeeper that contacted us via telephone. I arrived on the island with my brother the following morning. We attempted to ascertain the reasons or reasons behind the shooting. What we know for sure that it was not burglary because his motorcycle was not taken and effects were not taken by assailants. One of several rumors and the most likely was: My father was attempting for some time to sell interest in Haiti with the intentions of leaving. Several military personnel which received points from operations were not to thrilled with the sale of property as the prospective buyer was a Missionary outfit out of Chicago (I believe, Not sure of city). This would leave government officials high and dry. The timing makes this the most likely scenario, the prospective buyers agents were planning on coming to Haiti to finalize the details. My father has been in Las Vegas, Haiti and Cuba and had lots of experience in the gaming industry. So no reasons can be ruled out. Information comes to us slowly and the Island is very small and people begin to talk after time has passed. As far as my grandfather : he died of natural causes in 1994. My Great Uncle William is still living in New Orleans (Undisclosed location. The last time I saw him was a few years ago but I get updates on his status. mike@mclaney.com

LOUIS J. McWILLIE AND R. D. MATTHEWS

In 1966 R. D. Matthews was arrested in Oklahoma City for possession of a concealed weapon. In 1967 he was arrested in Garland, Texas, for bookmaking. By 1971 R. D. Matthews had moved to Las Vegas, where he remained for two years. In 1973 an FBI Airtel from Dallas reported that an application had been made for an order authorizing a wiretap of R. D. Matthews along with several others. This application stated that there was probable cause to believe R. D. Matthews was involved in the illegal gambling business, along with John Eli Stone and Izzy Miller. In 1976 R. D. Matthews plead guilty in Las Vegas to a violation of the Wagering Act. In 1978 R. D. Matthews was employed by Benny Binion, who operated the Horseshoe Club. There, he worked side by side with Lewis J. McWillie. That year R. D. Matthews was observed in the company of Sam Campisi by a HSCA investigator who had been visiting Las Vegas. The name of R. D. Matthews was mentioned prominently in a Drug Enforcement Administration report on Campisi. [HSCA V9 para. 1054]

SANTO TRAFFICANTE

SANTO TRAFFICANTE Jr. conducted his business with little interruption throughout the 1960's and became the mafia's chief importer of heroin from Southeast Asia. In 1977 TRAFFICANTE was subpoenaed to testify before the HSCA. He took the Fifth Amendment on every question. In 1978 TRAFFICANTE was recalled before the HSCA. He said: "I never remember meeting JACK RUBY. I never made the statement Kennedy was going to get hit." [HSCA V5 p147, 164, 255, 325, 350, 353, 369, 372, Report pl73 V10 pl85]

CARLOS MARCELLO

CARLOS MARCELLO accumulated the most wealth, power and prestige. In October 1966, CARLOS MARCELLO, along with his brother, JOSEPH, were arrested in a raid on the Little Appalachia conference at La Stella Restaurant on Long Island. TRAFFICANTE was also arrested. When CARLOS MARCELLO returned to New Orleans he socked an FBI agent in the jaw at the airport. In 1967 CARLOS MARCELLO'S holdings were estimated at $60 million. His syndicate controlled 800 bookies in Louisiana, owned scores of hotels, a tomato cannery, French Quarter Bars, a city bus line, and an amusement machine company. In 1967 Life magazine reported that CARLOS MARCELLO had received $2 million from the national crime syndicate to free then-imprisoned JIMMY HOFFA. At CARLOS MARCELLO'S request, Aubrey Young, an aide to Louisiana Governor John J. McKeithen, made Edward Partin an offer if he would recant the testimony he gave in 1964 at JIMMY HOFFA's trial in Tennessee. Edward Partin agreed to further negotiations, and met with D'Alton Smith. One of D'Alton Smith's sisters was married to Nofio Pecora, and another was married to Joe Poretto. D'Alton Smith offered Edward Partin $1 million to recant. Edward Partin refused and notified the Justice Department about the offer. A grand jury was convened. In September 1967 Gordon Novel was called to testify. Gordon Novel had been hired by Aubrey Young to install electronic debugging equipment in the office of Governor John J. McKeithen. [FBI NO 95-50-1067]

In 1970 CARLOS MARCELLO appeared before a State legislative committee investigating high level corruption in Louisiana. CARLOS MARCELLO, represented by Dean Andrews, took the Fifth Amendment when questioned about TRAFFICANTE. In 1971 D'Alton Smith approached Edward Partin again. By this time Edward Partin was facing Federal Racketeering Charges and D'Alton Smith offered to get him off the hook if he would recant the testimony that had put JIMMY HOFFA away. Frank Matula, Frank Ragano, and an attorney in Dallas who was the brother-in-law of RUBY'S friend Gordon McLendon, all attempted to sway Edward Partin. Clint Murchison and Murray Chotiner were linked to the effort, as was RICHARD NIXON. While JIMMY HOFFA was incarcerated Frank Fitzsimmons took over the Teamsters Union. Frank Fitzsimmons met with Allen Dorfman and developed a cozy relationship with NIXON. [USDC-SDF 67-105-CrTC Casey Hearing] In 1971 NIXON commuted JIMMY HOFFA's sentence, and he was released from prison. Frank Fitzsimmons and JIMMY HOFFA began a war which probably ended in JIMMY HOFFA being kidnaped and murdered in July 1975.

Allen Dorfman was part of an entourage that appeared for former President NIXON'S "coming-out" at a golf tournament at the La Costa Country Club. [NYT 8.19.75, 9.29.57; Miami Herald 10.3.76; Los Angeles Free Press 9.12 - 18.75; 7.15 - 21, 77; Newsweek 8.11.75, 12.15.75, 8.4.75; Time 9.18.78, 10.13.75; ZNS Dispatch 11.18.77, 10.15.76; Real Paper 8.8.73; Chicago Sun Times 8.22,67; Tel. Con. bet Arthur Eagan and Edward Grady Partin on 5.19.71]

On March 4, 1986, (deleted) was interviewed and provided the following information...On December 15, 1985, he was in the company of CARLOS MARCELLO and (deleted) conversation. CARLOS MARCELLO discussed his intense dislike of former President John Kennedy as he often did. Unlike other such tirades against Kennedy, however, on this occasion CARLOS MARCELLO said, referring to the President Kennedy, 'Yeah, I had the son of a bitch killed. I'm glad I did it. I sorry I couldn't have done it myself. [FBI DL 183A-1f035-Sub L 3.6.86]

On February 27, 1989 CARLOS MARCELLO, who was in a federal prison hospital, in a semi-coherent state, said that he was "going to get Kennedy when he came to Dallas." James Robert Case advised the FBI that approximately 2:30 a.m. on February 28, 1989, CARLOS MARCELLO was mumbling incoherently and then he got their attention by saying 'mother fucker.'" Cates stated that he worked in Unit A most of the time and MARCELLO had not previously used any profanity. Cates then paid attention and heard MARCELLO say, 'That Kennedy, that smiling motherfucker, we'll fix him in Dallas.' About three or four minutes later MARCELLO said, 'I want to see Provenzano in New York.'" [FBI Dallas 175-109 3.3.89] CARLOS MARCELLO was interviewed about these statements on September 6, 1989:

As expected, MARCELLO denied making these statements, as well as denying any involvement in the assassination of President Kennedy. MARCELLO denied knowing OSWALD or OSWALD'S uncle, Dutch (sic) Murret. MARCELLO also denied knowing Edward Becker, or making a statement to Becker in 1962 about having President Kennedy killed. [NARA FBI 124-10253-10112]

ALLEN DORFMAN

On January 21, 1983, Allen Dorfman, who had recently been convicted of attempting to bribe Senator Howard W. Cannon of Nevada and was facing 55 years in prison, was gunned down in a Chicago parking lot. The New York Times reported: "Mr. Dorfman telephoned a friend, Irwin Weiner, this morning, seeking a $7,500 partial repayment of a loan. The two men had gone to a bank together, obtained a check in that amount, and proceeded to the Linclonwood Hyatt Hotel where they had a 1:00 p.m. luncheon reservation. As the men left Mr. Dorfman's Cadillac in the parking lot, they were walking between other parked cars when two men ran up behind them and yelled, 'This is a robbery.' Instantly one of the men began firing a 22 automatic. At least six spent casings were found. Only Mr. Dorfman was hit." [NYT 1.21.83] Irwin Weiner set up his long time friend and criminal associate for a hit.

HOFFA

Before he disappeared JIMMY HOFFA said:

I know Meyer Lansky. In my opinion he's another victim of harassment. I don't believe there is any organized crime, period. Hoover agreed! He said there was no mafia. They said Allen Dorfman was a part of the mafia. 100% lie! They say my good friend CARLOS MARCELLO called the mob together and put up a $1 million to get me out of jail. Another lie.

SAM GIANCANA

A month before JIMMY HOFFA disappeared (June 1975), Sam Giancana, 66, was found face-up in a pool of blood in his basement kitchen. In 1964 Sam Giancana spent 12 months in the Cook County Jail rather than testify before a Federal Grand Jury. After his release, Sam Giancana flew to Mexico where he remained until July 1974 at which time he was deported back to Chicago to face another Federal Grand Jury. In June 1975 Sam Giancana was subpoenaed by the Senate Intelligence Committee. Senator Church wanted to question him about the CIA/mafia link. Senator Richard Schweiker had some questions for him on RUBY. Sam Giancana was murdered a few days before he was scheduled to testify, after a welcome home party for the mob boss at his suburban Chicago home. One of the guests at this party remained behind, and shot Sam Giancana in his basement kitchen with a silenced 22. The Chicago Police, parked outside, did not hear a thing. Sam Giancana's guests that night included Dominick "Butch" Blasi who had become Sam Giancana's bodyguard, and Charles Nicoletti, 60, a Chicago hit man who worked for Sam Giancana as an enforcer. In April 1977 Charles Nicoletti was killed in a Chicago parking lot. Sam Giancana's knowledge of past CIA/mafia operations had made him a liability to the mob. Did Anthony Accardo finally get the edge he needed to eliminate Sam Giancana? Anthony Accardo died on May 29, 1992.

JOHN ROSSELLI

On May 22, 1961, a bug was installed in Rosselli's apartment in Las Vegas. [FBI 92-3267-272] Rosselli was aware that his bug had been planted. The FBI reported:

On February 3, 1962, this informant furnished information that John Rosselli was in contact with William Graham of Reno, Nevada, regarding an unidentified matter which Rosselli said the "professor" (Joseph Stacher) had asked him about several times the last couple of days. According to informant Rosselli informed Graham that he had told him forty years ago not to deal with this kind of guy. Informant said the matter in question involved some way what Rosselli called an "inquisition" and more specifically involved something which Graham had signed.

It is possible that the matter concerning Rosselli and Graham was in connection with a current Grand Jury investigation in Los Angeles concerning Joseph 'Doc' Stacher, who was in Las Vegas over the weekend of February 3, 1962, and February 4, 1962. On the same date this informant advised that Rosselli told Charles "Babe" Baron he had taken care of that thing, indicated Rosselli was in contact with Graham at Baron's request. Stacher was formerly associated in the Newark-New York area with Meyer Lansky and Abner Zwillman. Stacher is alleged to have interests in gambling casinos in Las Vegas and Reno, Nevada.

On April 10, 1962, the FBI installed a microphone in Rosselli's residence. [FBI 92-3267-505] In May 1962 Walter Winchell's article in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner contained the following statement: "Judy Campbell of Palm Springs and Bevhills is Topic Number One in Romantic Political Circles." On June 5, 1962, the FBI reported: "Rosselli is a prominent West Coast hoodlum and is one of the second group of 40 targets for early prosecution. A highly confidential source in Los Angeles reported that the subject informed a friend of his that he had been in contact with a newspaperman named Winchell who informed him 'I'm your man if you need any help.'" [FBI 92-3267-216] Rosselli told him that he was not in any trouble and that the last thing he needed was help from a newspaper man. In July 1962 Rosselli visited the Cal Neva Lodge, Lake Tahoe, Nevada, which was owned by Frank Sinatra.

On August 11, 1962, the FBI reported that Rosselli told (Deleted) that he had received a check from Walter Winchell for a cancer research fund located in Santa Barbara, California. [FBI 92-3267-298] The FBI reported that on August 16, 1962 Irving J. Leff "was at Rosselli's apartment and Rosselli asked Irving J. Leff if he had read Winchell's column about Nelson Rockefeller. (Walter Winchell's column appearing in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner for August 15, 1962 carried the statement 'Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's Best Kept secret is a Famous New York Model who has made Headlines.'" [FBI 92-3267-292] On August 31, 1962, the FBI reported:

LA 4396C* said Rosselli talked to Irving J. Leff this morning and talked about some matter, exact nature not known, and Rosselli said, 'They are a lively outfit,' 'they' want to 'build it in Las Vegas' and 'they' are going down to San Juan. He said Rockefeller found his hotel in San Juan could not do without.' Rosselli could be talking about gambling but seems more likely he may be referring to some entertainment group. [FBI 92-3267-308]

Another FBI report stated:

Rosselli then called Irving J. Leff and related his impression concerning some unknown venture. He said that this guy is a pretty lively outfit, that they want to build it Las Vegas too and they are going down to San Juan.

Rosselli said that they are out of their minds if they go down to San Juan. He said Rockefeller didn't want anything like that down there and tried it for five or six years and now he finds out that he has to have it so he is going for it, that they feel that they need it for the hotel. [FBI 92-3267-318]

On June 21, 1963, the FBI received information that Rosselli was going to visit Washington, D.C. Hoover noted "Follow closely." On July 9, 1963, the FBI reported: "On completion of an extensive preliminary survey it has been determined that a misur installation cannot be made at this hotel with full security. No further attempts to establish this misur are anticipated at this time." [FBI 92-3267-476] On October 24, 1963, the FBI discontinued microphone surveillance on Rosselli. [FBI 92-3267-527] On November 5, 1963, the Justice Department considered empaneling a Grand Jury to inquire into the facts concerning Rosselli's birth. On November 9, 1963, Rosselli told and FBI informant that he was disgusted "with all of the trouble the Internal Revenue Service has been causing him." On July 18, 1963, the FBI reported that Rosselli was on his way to the Cal Neva Lounge on Lake Tahoe. [FBI 92-3267-516] The FBI reported that

....on July 16, 1964 (Deleted) informed the FBI that he and (Deleted) were walking through the Stardust Casino when they were observed by Rosselli. "He made an obvious effort to engage them in conversation. Rosselli stated, among other things, that Attorney General Robert Kennedy was on his way out of office because of the Bobby Baker issue, since President Johnson was personally affected as a result of Kennedy's tenacity in the investigation. Further, Kennedy had tied up over 700 FBI personnel in furthering the Attorney General's inquiries into the 'national crime syndicate.' Rosselli further stated it was his opinion that Mr. Kennedy used certain tactics in the course of these investigations that caused a loss of prestige to the FBI as well as to Mr. Hoover personally. He further stated that certain groups, including Attorney General Kennedy, had tried to force Mr. Hoover to retire prior to the age retirement extension recently extended. [FBI 92-3267-605]

On September 4, 1964, the FBI reported: "In connection with your future coverage of Rosselli, remain alert to the possibility that the 'person close to President Johnson is (Deleted)." [FBI 92-3267-615] On August 7, 1976, Johnny Rosselli's body was discovered in a 55 gallon oil drum floating in Biscayne Bay in Miami. Johnny Rosselli had been tortured, strangled, stabbed, then cut in half and stuffed in the drum.

Johnny Rosselli, like Sam Giancana, was murdered because of his knowledge of the mafia plot to kill either CASTRO or OSWALD or both. The HSCA made reference to a 1967 CIA Inspector General's Office Report. The chapter on Johnny Rosselli was titled: "Should we try to silence those who are talking or might later." The Inspector General suspected Johnny Rosselli of having leaked information on CIA/mafia plots to Jack Anderson.

Shortly after Sam Giancana's death Johnny Rosselli testified before the Senate Intelligence Panel, once publicly, once secretly. His secret appearance dealt exclusively with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Johnny Rosselli talked in hopes of reversing a deportation order from the INS. His testimony remained secret so we have to rely on two sources who were close to him before he died. One was Jack Anderson. Jack Anderson reported that Johnny Rosselli and RUBY were acquaintances. Jack Anderson once quoted Johnny Rosselli as calling RUBY "one of our boys." Jack Anderson added:

When OSWALD was picked up (in Dallas), Johnny Rosselli suggested underworld conspirators feared he would crack and disclose information that might lead to them. This almost certainly would have brought a massive U.S. crackdown on the mafia so JACK RUBY was ordered to eliminate OSWALD.

Johnny Rosselli's story made sense until he told Anderson that President Kennedy's killers, who were part of the TRAFFICANTE organization, were secretly working for Fidel Castro. Johnny Rosselli insisted that shortly after these men had tried to kill Fidel Castro, Fidel Castro had rolled them over and recruited them for his organization. Johnny Rosselli's Attorney, Edward P. Morgan, stated: "There was never the slightest doubt in John's mind that Fidel Castro was responsible for the Kennedy assassination...Johnny Rosselli was certain that the people he (Rosselli) put around Fidel Castro in the CIA plot turned right around and killed Kennedy. The people he still knew in 1967 did it. Two of such individuals were living in the State of New Jersey." Marita put the Novo Brothers in the caravan to Dallas.

EDWARD P. MORGAN

Edward P. Morgan had a long association with the intelligence community. Edward P. Morgan, a former FBI agent, had been chief counsel to the House Committee which studied the failure of American intelligence to predict the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. In 1976 he was retained by the Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI.

The Dade County State's Attorney's Office subpoenaed Meyer Lansky, Charlie Tourine and an associate of TRAFFICANTE in its probe of the Johnny Rosselli killing. TRAFFICANTE had dined with Johnny Rosselli one month before Johnny Rosselli was murdered.

THE WARREN COMMISSION THE ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION AND THE JIM GARRISON INVESTIGATION

The Warren Commission was dominated by establishment types who were connected to the Rockefeller family, or by political types who had ties to NIXON.

NELSON ROCKEFELLER AND HIS HOE

The Rockefeller family had a huge stake in keeping the Communists out of Latin America and they were relieved when JFK got offed. After World War II, Nelson Rockefeller (born July 8, 1908; died January 1979), used his contacts in the Office of Inter-American Affairs to form the International Basic Economy Corporation, which invested heavily in Latin American supermarkets. The Rockefellers also had stock in the United Fruit Company. During the Eisenhower Administration, Nelson Rockefeller served as Under Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. In this capacity he was apprised of MKULTRA and MKNAOMI. [Szulc NY Mag. 8.29.77] Nelson Rockefeller became a Special Assistant to President Eisenhower from 1954 to 1955. He sat in on Cabinet and National Security Council meetings. During this period PB SUCCESS was effectuated. In September 1955 Nelson Rockefeller became a member of President Eisenhower's Operations Coordinating Board with Allen Dulles, the then-Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. By 1958 the International Basic Economy Corporation had 140 subsidiaries. Thomas S. Gates was a director of the International Basic Economy Corporation. [Federal Register 1959 p427] In Brazil and Venezuela, the International Basic Economy Corporation was directed by Joan Braden, the wife of Tom Braden. The Bradens were close to Richard Helms and Cord Meyer, who was Tom Braden's deputy at the International Organization Division of the CIA. Cord Meyer was a close associate of JAMES ANGLETON. Nelson Rockefeller was elected Governor of New York State in January 1958, and held this position until 1973.

Nelson Rockefeller told a meeting of the Organization of American States on February 12, 1961, that the United States had failed to "make good on the Monroe Doctrine" as far as Cuba was concerned. The Monroe Doctrine announced in 1823 that there would be no colonization, and no intervention, by European states in the Americas. Governor Rockefeller urged that an inter-American conference of foreign ministers be called to map hemispheric strategy to meet the threat of international communism. Nelson Rockefeller warned that Cuba had become "the principal Communist base in the Western Hemisphere from which men, money and propaganda are moving into other American republics on an unprecedented scale. We must face the fact that certain of the weaker Western Hemisphere countries are currently vulnerable to this onslaught. It is conceivable that pro-Castro governments of the Castro type might be established through revolutionary coups in one or more of these countries in the near future." Rockefeller disclosed in 1963 that his major disagreement with President Kennedy centered on Kennedy's anti-Cuban exile position. In the early 1970's, Nelson Rockefeller was a member of NIXON'S Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Other members of the Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board at that time included Texas Governor John Connally, Claire Booth Luce, and Leo Cherne. [Ross & Wise Inv. Gov. p187]

NELSON ROCKEFELLER AND THE COUP

THE FIRST UNELECTED VICE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The constitutional amendment which allowed NIXON to appoint Gerald Ford Vice President was approved by the Senate on September 29, 1964, less than 24 hours after the Warren Report was published. When Vice President Spiro Agnew (Angnostopoulos) resigned on October 10, 1973, after pleading no contest to charges of income tax evasion after he came under investigation for receiving payoff when he was Governor of Maryland, NIXON appointed Gerald Ford as his Vice President. When NIXON resigned, Gerald Ford became President, and appointed Nelson Rockefeller as his Vice President. Rockefeller was Ford's running mate in 1976, but he withdrew from the ticket.

During Nelson Rockefeller's Vice Presidential confirmation hearings, Nelson was asked if he believed the CIA was justified in its activities in Chile:

I assume they were done in the best national interests...I think the flexibility of the present potential actions by our Government are important in the event of some unforeseen circumstances. Therefore, I would question whether the potentiality should be eliminated...I think it would be a mistake. How they are conducting what is done is a matter for good judgment.

Rockefeller was a patrician and would never have involved himself with STURGIS, HEMMING, HARGRAVES and their ilk. He was not involved in the Kennedy assassination. Rockefeller, however, was deeply involved in the Warren Commission and Rockefeller Commission cover-ups of the Kennedy assassination. His name surfaces with Ford, an associate of NIXON who covered up the coup. Rockefeller attained the Vice Presidency of the United States as an indirect result of the coup, and Ford attained the Presidency. We will find that Nelson Rockefeller had many associates on the Warren Commission, but NIXON'S connection led to the top:

EARL WARREN, RICHARD NIXON AND MURRAY CHOTINER

Earl Warren (born March 19, 1891) was Attorney General of California from 1939 to 1943, and Governor from 1943 to 1953. Murray Chotiner was the political public relations man for Earl Warren during his gubernatorial campaign in California. Murray Chotiner had been associated with NIXON since 1946. When NIXON became the Vice Presidential nominee of the Republican Party in 1952, Murray Chotiner served as his campaign manager. In September 1953 Earl Warren was appointed Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court by President Eisenhower. In 1966 Murray Chotiner was called before Senator John McClellan's committee investigating organized crime. Congressional investigator Robert F. Kennedy questioned Chotiner about his client, crime syndicate member Marco Reginelli, and demanded a list of Murray Chotiner's other clients. Dan Moldea reported that Murray Chotiner, and his brother Jack, handled 249 cases of mob figures arrested or indicted between 1949 and 1952. [Moldea, Hoffa Wars, Paddington Press, 1978]

MICKEY COHEN, CHOTINER AND NIXON

In 1968 syndicate member Mickey Cohen, who was serving Federal prison time, said that Murray Chotiner had solicited campaign contributions from him on behalf of NIXON. Meyer Harris Cohen (A.K.A. "Mickey" Cohen), the son of Jewish immigrants, grew up in Cleveland, Ohio, where he started in the rackets. In 1940 Mickey Cohen moved to Los Angeles and worked with Jack Dragna and Meyer Lansky's partner, Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel. When Siegel was murdered by Meyer Lansky's hitmen in 1947, Mickey Cohen took over for him. California crime lord Jack Dragna became uncomfortable with Cohen, and numerous attempts were made on the life of Mickey Cohen. Meyer Lansky finally arranged for a truce between Dragna and Cohen.

In 1970 Murray Chotiner became NIXON'S Special Counsel; and in 1971, as a private attorney, he helped Teamster Union boss James Hoffa secure a Presidential pardon. Murray Chotiner was contacted by his friend, I. Irving Davidson, regarding this matter. [FBI FOIA Req. #72,182 approx. 500 pp.; HSCA OCR 11.2.78 Brady]

THE DEATH OF MURRAY CHOTINER

On January 24, 1974, Murray Chotiner's automobile collided with a Government-owned truck driven by Charles Mickens. Murray Chotiner died of a blood clot a week later, while still hospitalized for the automobile accident. [NYT 1.31.74] NIXON knew Earl Warren though Murray Chotiner. The White House tapes revealed that NIXON and H.R. Haldeman considered setting up another Warren Commission, complete with Earl Warren, to investigate Watergate. H.R. Haldeman: "But if you want Earl Warren, he'll do it..." The extent of the NIXON/Warren relationship remained a mystery because of the theft of all the contents from a folder labeled "Correspondence with RICHARD NIXON," found among the possessions of Earl Warren after he died. Earl Warren was easily manipulated by NIXON. NIXON had Earl Warren put Gerald Ford on the Warren Commission. Murray Chotiner's death should be looked into, due to the nature of his associations and the knowledge that he possessed.

CHIEF JUSTICE WARREN'S MOTIVATION

On January 20, 1964, Chief Justice Warren met with the staff. After brief introductions, the Chief Justice discussed the circumstances under which he had accepted the chairmanship of the Commission. When the position had first been offered to him he declined it, on the principle that Supreme Court Justices should not take this kind of role. His associate justices concurred in this decision. At this point, however, President Johnson called him. The President stated that rumors of the most exaggerated kind were circulating in this country and overseas. Some rumors went as far as attributing the assassination to a faction within the Government wishing to see the Presidency assumed by President Johnson. Others, if not quenched, could conceivably lead the country into a war which would cost 40 million lives. No one could refuse to do something which might help to prevent such a possibility. The President convinced him that this was an occasion on which actual conditions had to override general principles. The Chief Justice then discussed the role of the Commission. He placed emphasis on the importance of quenching rumors, and precluding future speculation such as that which has surrounded the death of Lincoln. He emphasized the Commission had to determine the truth, whatever that might be. [WC Eisenberg Memo 2.17.64]

John J. McCloy recalled that Warren stated: "When the country is confronted with threatening divisions and suspicions and its foundation is being rocked...the gravity of the situation is such that it might lead into war, and if so, it might be a nuclear war...the first nuclear strike against us might cause the loss of 40 million people..." Earl Warren delivered this response: "Mr. President, if the situation is that serious, my personal views do not count. I will do it." [?]

HEMMING told this researcher:

If I was sent over to brief Earl Warren, you know what I would say to him? Mr. Chief Justice, we have a situation here where we are closing the barn door and the horse is gone. The President is dead. This matter has to be disposed of quickly to renew the confidence of the American people. We've got civil unrest in this country. We've got a stock market to worry about, we've got investors to worry about, we've got bankers to worry about. We have serious problems. We have got to resolve this.

President Lyndon Johnson may have believed that a presidential assassination was worth starting a conventional war if an intelligence agent of a foreign power was responsible for it, but he did not believe that a Presidential assassination was worth starting a nuclear war over. The job of the Warren Commission was to prevent a nuclear war between the United States and the Soviets over the issue of Cuba and the Kennedy assassination.

All the evidence created against OSWALD led to the Soviets and Cubans. Had TIPPIT killed OSWALD, instead of visa versa, the murder of the President would have been investigated by federal and local government agencies, and it might have been determined that Castro was involved in the Kennedy assassination. Another invasion of Cuba would have been launched. The Soviets would have intervened. We could have all been blown to kingdom come.

The Warren Commission also should have logically concluded OSWALD worked for the KGB. Instead, it determined there was no conspiracy.

James Hosty commented, "They covered up the KGB's involvement for obvious reasons - it would have started World War III, now wouldn't it have? How did World War I start?"

HEMMING told this researcher:

The key ticket with the guy was that he defected to the Soviet Union, he's been trained as a KGB agent. How could these people possibly figure out that this scenario would scare the shit out of the people in Washington? What backfired on the plotters was painting this picture that it was a Castro hit. It scared the shit out of some high-ranking people, and they covered it up. Jesus Christ, the best laid plans of mice and men. They did it too good. They painted too clear of a picture that burned it's way right back to Fidel Castro. It scared the fuck out of the powers that be. They wouldn't go to war. The American people never realized we had come so fucking close to nuclear holocaust.

The CIA commented on OSWALD'S blazing trail:

Long standing KGB practice generally forbids agents serving outside the USSR to have any contact with domestic communist parties or with Soviet Embassies or consulates. This prohibition, designed to reduce the possibilities of compromise to a minimum, is probably most stringently applied to agents on extremely sensitive missions. Yet OSWALD blazed a trail to the Soviets that was a mile wide. He corresponded with the national headquarters of the Communist Party USA -- apparently with some regularity - and visited the Soviet Consulate in Mexico City. In addition to his well-known leftist political activities, he also subscribed to the Daily Worker and a Trotskyite publication, allegedly received newspapers from the Soviet Union and last June asked that his passport be revalidated for travel to the USSR. [CIA 376-154 Neil Huntley]

WARREN COMM. MEMBERS CONNECTIONS TO ROCKEFELLERS ALLEN DULLES

Allen Dulles, who was perhaps the most famous Director of the CIA, was fired by President Kennedy in 1962. He was unfairly blamed for the Bay Pigs disaster. The law firm of Allen Dulles, Sullivan & Cromwell, represented the interests of the Rockefellers and Allen Dulles was the former Chairman of the Council on Foreign Relations. During the 1970's, David Rockefeller was the Chairman of the Council on Foreign Relations. In 1987 the Council on Foreign Relations received a grant from the Asia Foundation. [CFR Annual Report 1988] After J. Lee Rankin was appointed chief counsel, Rankin suggested that Allen Dulles become "a Commission CIA file reviewer." Allen Dulles declined, but announced his willingness to provide a statement or testimony concerning his knowledge of OSWALD. Allen Dulles stated that "as far as he could remember he never had any knowledge of OSWALD at any time prior to the date of the assassination." [CIA 618-793] Allen Dulles died on January 30, 1969, at age 75 due to influenza complicated by pneumonia.

Allen Dulles had an ax to grind against Kennedy. He should not have been looking into the circumstances surrounding Kennedy's assassination. His appointment meant that no one in or around the CIA would be blamed. Dulles believed that co-existence with the Soviet Union did not prevent the Russians from engaging a war of subversion against the West. [Chicago Tribune, 4.29.64 page 10] Why didn't he believe that OSWALD was part of this subversion? Dulles had no knowledge of OSWALD and his relationship to ANGLETON.

JOHN J. McCLOY: MR. ESTABLISHMENT

John J. McCloy was born on March 31, 1895. His law firm, Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy, represented the Rockefeller interests beginning in the 1920's. In June 1941 Vacuum Oil and Royal Dutch Shell Oil entered into a deal with the Soviets wherein they would purchase oil from the Soviet Union. This infuriated the Standard Oil Companies of New Jersey, which was controlled by the Rockefeller family. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey announced its refusal to buy oil from Soviet Russia until it recognizes private property rights. The New York Times reported: "The Standard of New Jersey owns a 51% interest in the Nobel Company, a Russian oil unit that was nationalized along with the rest of the Russian petroleum interests after the Soviets took charge of the Government. The Standard of New Jersey had no substantial interests in Russia prior to the nationalization of the industry. The Standard of New Jersey, through its ownership of control of the Nobel Company has a claim against the Soviet Government." [NYT 1.16.28] The New York Times reported:

"The Rockefellers, who are largely interested in the Standard of New Jersey and the Vacuum Oil Company, are expected to use their influence to prevent any widening of the breach between the three companies." [NYT 7.26.27] In the 1930's, John J. McCloy became a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. During World War II, John J. McCloy was an Assistant to the Secretary of Defense, and supervised the Strategic Services Unit of the War Department in 1944. In 1945 he was appointed High Commissioner to Germany, the top-ranking United States official there. By 1947 John J. McCloy was an official in the Office of Policy Coordination. He worked closely with Frank Wisner on numerous CIA operations in post-war Europe. In the early 1950's John J. McCloy pardoned Nazi war criminals, despite protests from divergent quarters. When he returned to the United States, John J. McCloy resumed his role as the Attorney for the Rockefellers, and engineered the merger of the Chase and Manhattan Banks. The Chase Manhattan Bank was employed to launder CIA funds. John J. McCloy was installed as a Director of the Chase Manhattan Bank and a Director of the Rockefeller Foundation. John J. McCloy was a Director of United Fruit. In 1959 he worked with the CIA in funding anti-Communist activities at the Vienna World Youth Festival. He was a close friend of the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, John McCone. After the Cuban Missile Crisis in October 1962, John J. McCloy negotiated with the Russians. In 1964 John J. McCloy thought it was imperative to "show the world that America is not a banana republic, where a government can be changed by a conspiracy." John J. McCloy was involved in the overthrow of Joao Goulart simultaneously with his position on the Warren Commission. Joao Goulart, a left-of-center President of Brazil, had expropriated the iron ore concessions of a client of John J. McCloy. John J. McCloy worked with Colonel Vernon Walters, the U.S. Military Attache in Rio on this operation. NIXON suggested in 1972 that the Justice Department appoint John J. McCloy as the Special Prosecutor in Watergate. He refused the assignment.

GERALD R. FORD

Warren Commissioner Gerald R. Ford (born July 14, 1913) was a Congressman from Michigan and a member of the Georgetown University Center for Strategic Studies from 1963 to 1964. Arleigh Burke, who was a Director of the Free Cuba Committee, was the Director of Center for Strategic Studies at this time. Arleigh Burke told Jack Anderson that "government gumshoes, probably Central Intelligence Agency burglars, broke into his private office and stole some important personal documents." [Miami Herald 2.2.77] George Smathers was on the Advisory Board of the Center for Strategic Studies at this time. Ford was first mentioned as a possible presidential candidate in January 1964. When the FBI discovered that the Warren Commission was impressed with an article about the Kennedy assassination in the New Republic entitled Seeds of Doubt, Hoover suggested: "I think DeLoach should brief Ford regarding the New Republic article and its authors. H." [FBI 62-109090-73 Brennan to Sullivan 12.19.63] The United Press reported that documents released under the Freedom of Information Act indicated that the FBI considered Ford its spy on the Warren Commission. [Miami Herald 1.19.78] Ford told the Long Island Daily, Newsday, that "there was never any real disagreement among the members or anything." [Newsday 9.28.74]

NIXON AND GERALD FORD

In 1965 NIXON'S former campaign manager, John Stiles (John Stiles born May 12, 1916; died in March 1976) and Gerald Ford, co-authored OSWALD: Portrait of the Assassin. The CIA Counter-Intelligence Section liked Gerald Ford's book, since "Only slight mention is made of the charge put forth by OSWALD'S mother and others that OSWALD may have been a CIA agent." The CIA examined the galley proofs before the book was published. [CIA 1289-1019] Raymond Rocca wrote,

JIM, herein is (deleted as of 2010) copy of Congressman Ford's rehash of the OSWALD case. Stiles sat with him during much of the hearings period. I had this from Walter Pforzheimer for an advanced look, it must be returned to him without fail Friday morning. The first chapter, "The Commission Gets its First Shock" centers on the allegation that OSWALD was an FBI Agent. Neither the chapter nor the rest of the book sustain the charge. I'm afraid however, that the presentation if it quoted out of context could be utilized by the Lefties (Mark Lane et. al.) to continue their campaign. Perhaps you will want to call this matter to Sam's attention. (deleted as of 2010) I do not regard any treatment of the CIA - which is minimal - to be objectionable. Rock.

When Ford became President, Stiles, who had become a White House consultant, and producer Sheldon Davis, tried to have Portrait of an Assassin made into a movie. Playboy Magazine carried a story that alleged that Gerald Ford received secret CIA campaign funding in 1968.

On October 17, 1974, President Ford vetoed an effort to expand the Freedom of Information Act. [NYT 10.18.74] During his unelected presidency, Gerald Ford named Governor John Connally to his Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, after Connally was acquitted of bribery charges. Ford's reorganization of the intelligence community included attempts to tighten Government secrecy by providing by providing penalties for officials who divulged classified information. [Miami Herald 2.21.76] Ford named Leo Cherne to his intelligence advisory board. Gerald Ford pardoned NIXON and named George Bush as CIA Director.

JOHN SHERMAN COOPER

After World War II, John Sherman Cooper (born August 23, 1901), worked with John J. McCloy and helped reorganize the Bavarian judicial system in West Germany. In 1950 he served as advisor to the Secretary of State at NATO meetings. From 1955 to 1956 he was Ambassador to India. Cooper was a former trustee of the Asia Foundation. John Sherman Cooper was a United States Senator when he served on the Warren Commission. In 1969 he was reappointed Ambassador to India by NIXON.

RICHARD RUSSELL

Richard Russell (born November 2, 1897) was a Senator from Georgia who was Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee from 1951 to 1952, and from 1955 to 1968. In this capacity, he "established continuing relationships with the Directors of the Central Intelligence Agency and preserved exclusivity in his knowledge of Agency activities. [He was] also able to develop relationships of mutual trust and understanding with the the Directors of the Central Intelligence Agency that allowed informal exchanges to prevail over formal votes and close supervision." [Sup. Det. Staff Reports on For. & Mil. Intell. Bk. IV Sel. Comm. to Study Gov. Ops. with Resp. to Intell. Act. 4.23.76] Senator Russell was a leader of the Dixiecrats, and had opposed President Kennedy's military and civil rights programs. Richard Helms claimed Senator Richard Russell was aware of the CIA assassination plots against Fidel Castro. Senator Russell told the Atlanta Journal "that it was at his insistence that the report stipulated that there was no evidence of a plot, rather than saying flatly none existed. [Atlanta Journal 9.28.64] Richard Russell expressed his doubts about the conclusions of the Warren Commission on a WAB-TV interview in Atlanta in January 1970. He affirmed that he believed there had, in fact, been a conspiracy: "I think someone else worked with OSWALD. Too many things cause me to doubt he planned it all by himself." Senator Russell believed the Soviets and the Cubans were involved in the assassination. He refused to sign the Warren Commission Report until a clause was added saying their conclusions represented a judgment based on the best information available. Richard Russell's lungs were already crippled by chronic emphysema and he was hospitalized in December 1970 due to a recurring respiratory infection. He died on January 22, 1971, at age 73. [Atlanta Journal 2.28.64; NYT 1.22.71; Atlanta Constitution 1.22.71]

Senator Richard Russell was from the Deep South, believed in segregation, and was re-elected for decades by his constituency. Because of Senate seniority rules he was Chairman of the Armed Services Committee. In this context he came into contact with Allen Dulles. Dulles influenced Russell, when they were both on the Warren Commission, however, Russell still believed the evidence pointed to the Soviets and Cubans. Senator Richard Russell was not part of the eastern establishment. This was why he was the only dissenting voice.

A QUESTIONABLE OCCURRENCE: THE DEATH OF HALE BOGGS

Congressman Hale Boggs (born February 15, 1914) grew up in Jefferson Parish, Louisiana. He was an attorney in New Orleans who was first elected to the United States House of Representatives in 1946. Congressman Hale Boggs had questioned James Forrestal about the need to create the CIA. On April 5, 1971, he made an impassioned speech to his fellow Representatives on the tyranny of intelligence agencies turning America into a police state:

The story is colorfully recounted in a file Roll Call obtained from the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act. It began on April 5, 1971, when Boggs unexpectedly took the House floor during one-minute to declare that 'when the FBI taps telephones of the members of this body and the members of the Senate, when the FBI stations agents on college campuses to infiltrate college organizations, when the FBI adopts the tactics of the Soviet Union and Hitler's Gestapo, then it is time - it is way past time, Mr. Speaker - that the present director no longer be the director.' That afternoon, FBI Congressional liaison Tom Bishop, one of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's loyal lieutenants, wrote a memo to the FBI hierarchy describing Boggs's speech: 'Our relations with Boggs generally have been cordial and a letter of congratulations was sent to him by Mr. Hoover upon his most recent re-election to the House.' wrote Bishop, 'It is not known what has gotten in to him to make this statement.' But Hoover, who had increasingly been under siege from a number of other, less prominent Members for his controversial tactics, wrote bitterly in the margin, 'Just another jackal joining the pack.'...The next afternoon, Hoover himself typed up a memo for Bishop and his closest aid, Clyde Tolson, detailing his response to Boggs. He wrote that he had spoken with House Minority Leader Gerald Ford and House Speaker Carl Albert (Dem.-OK) and informed them 'there has never been a wiretap or microphone or what we call an electronic installation on any Congressman or Senator since I have been Director, which has been since 1924.' ...Numerous prominent Members began volunteering suspicions they too had been spied on by the FBI. According to an April 7, 1971, article in Roll Call, Senators George McGovern (SD), Harold Hughes, (Iowa), and Birch Bayh (Ind) - all liberal Democrats running for President - all suspected they were being bugged and Bayh actually found a device...Boggs did not produce irrefutable evidence that the FBI had been spying on Members, but he did build a persuasive case, citing among other things the Bayh incident and a claim that Senator Ralph Yarborough (Dem. -TX) and FBI critic, 'found an electronic surveillance device in the intercom system in his desk.' He also cited a case in which the neighbor of liberal Senator Charles Percy (R-Ill.)

discovered a broadcasting device underneath his car, which was always parked in front of Percy's house. Shortly thereafter, Percy's wife found two men working on the phone line outside Percy's house for what they said were 'safety purposes.' And Senator Wayne Morse (D-Ohio) another liberal, was informed of a bug in his office by a reporter. [Roll Call 8.10.92]

Congressman Hale Boggs advised his colleagues that he had evidence that the FBI was tapping his telephones. FBI document WFO-113 contained this:

New Orleans, in 1-8619, UN 6-1322, IN 7-0896

It is noted that this last call, CR 7-0696, contained a notation indicating the operator was not sure that New Orleans, Louisiana, was the destination for this subscriber. Also on this date, subject placed a call to Congressman HALE BOGGS, Democrat from Louisiana. This was a person-to-person call from subject's suite to BOGGS; however, it is not known whether subject actually talked to BOGGS nor not. On January 24, 1981 subject also placed a call to New York City, CI 6-9100 and a call to the Taft Hotel, New York, CLYDE Bell. Also on January 24, 1961 subject called Baltimore, Maryland, SA 7-4621. The records of the Willard also indicated that the following loss distance phone calls were made from this suite and charged to J. J. AMATO: New Orleans, VI 3-1317, 729-6666 Baltimore, LS 9-9762 1/23/01

On October 16, 1972, Congressman Hale Boggs, Congressman Nick Begich, and an aide to Nick Begich, left Anchorage, Alaska, at 9:00 a.m. en route to Juneau, Alaska, (575 miles) in a twin-engine Cessna 310. They were last heard from at 9:09 a.m. when Federal Aeronautics Administration officials received a visual flight plan, just as the plane was approaching the Chugach Mountain Range. The pilot gave the route as:

- (1) Over the Chugach Mountain Range to Prince William Sound.
- (2) Along the coast to Glacier National Monument.

(3) To Juneau, skirting the edge of the St. Elias Mountain Range. This route would have taken them over water for a very brief period. No one on the plane was heard from again. The pilot, Don E. Jonz, had 15,000 flying hours and a good reputation. He owned Pan Alaska Airways, from which the plane was chartered. The aircraft of Don E. Jonz was not equipped with a built-in emergency radio beacon; when asked by the Federal Aeronautics Administration whether he had "emergency gear and a locator beacon aboard," the pilot replied, "Affirmative." Don E. Jonz was required by Alaska State law to carry a hand-held locator beacon. The weather forecast that day predicted no significant changes from earlier forecasts.

More than 100 private and 40 military aircraft flew up and down the southern Alaska coast in search of the missing plane. Later, two jet reconnaissance planes, each equipped with cloud-piercing electronic equipment, intensified the emergency mission, accompanied by a total of 52 other aircraft. Air Force C130s stayed aloft throughout the search, electronically equipped to locate the emergency beacon of the Cessna aircraft. The Air Force brought out the SR-71, the successor to the U-2, to aerially photograph the landscape. There were 55 sightings of material thought to be wreckage, but none of it came from the plane. The NTSB called the mission "one of the most extensive searches in recent aviation history." After 3,600 hours of serial hunting, not a trace of the wreckage was ever found.

Even more mysterious was the fact that the C130s were unable to pick up any radio signals from the emergency equipment aboard the Cessna. Had the transmitter been destroyed even though it was specifically designed to survive a plane crash? After the crash, a hand-held emergency beacon was found in the cabin of another Pan Alaska aircraft; it was said to belong to Don E. Jonz. This seemed to explain the missing emergency radio signal. However, a witness who had seen the pilot, recalled that Don E. Jonz had an unidentified object in his briefcase the size and shape of an emergency locator. This locator was a different color than those sold at Anchorage Airport. Was it a bomb? The NTSB concluded it was "unable to determine the probable cause of the accident." [NTSB Report AAR-72-28]

THOMAS BOGGS

Congressman Hale Boggs son, Thomas Boggs, disclosed to the press in 1975 that the FBI had leaked damaging material to his father about the personal lives of researchers who studied the Kennedy assassination. Congressman Hale Boggs placed this material in the care of his son. Thomas Boggs added that his father "felt personally intimidated by the FBI's visits to see him. It was, you know, 'We know this and that about you, and a lot of things could come out in public about you.'" The FBI sent reports on seven Warren Commission critics to the Johnson White House. An FBI document:

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT MEMORANDA

TO: Mr. Callahan

FROM: H. N. BASSET

SUBJECT: Information Concerning Washington Star news article dated January 31, 1975, Regarding Hale Boggs' Son Claiming Possession of File on Warren Commission Critics.

BACKGROUND

The Washington Star News, a Washington, D.C. daily newspaper, carried an article in the January 31, 1975, edition under an Associated Press release captioned "Boggs Son Tells of Files on Warren Panel." The article quotes Tom H. Boggs, Jr., son of the late Representative Hale Boggs, as claiming that in 1970 his father gave him dossiers which the FBI compiled on critics of the Warren Commission in an attempt to discredit them. According to the article, Boggs son stated "they weren't basically sex files. They had some of that element, but most of the material dealt with left wing organizations these people belonged to."

Tom H. Boggs, Jr. declined to identify all seven of the critical authors but stated that writer Edward J. Epstein and lawyer Mark Lane were among the individuals whom he had information regarding. Boggs Jr. reportedly stated that the information given him by his father included a photograph of one of the seven engaging in an unnatural sex act with two women.

REVIEW OF BUREAU FILES

In a review of Bureau files by the Inspection Staff, no evidence was found that any information of this nature was ever disseminated directly to Hale Boggs from the FBI.

However, the Bureau file review indicates that on November 8, 1966, memoranda were furnished to Marvin Watson, Special Assistant to President Johnson, at the White House, setting forth pertinent information contained in Bureau files regarding background on seven individuals who wrote unfavorable articles concerning the Warren Commission findings.

The seven individuals mentioned in the memorandum to Mr. Watson were Edward J. Epstein, Joachim Joesten, Penn Jones, Mark Lane, Richard Popkin, Leo Sauvage and Harold Weisberg.

In addition to background information regarding the seven critics of the Warren Commission, we disseminated to Mr. Watson at the White House one facial photograph of Mark Lane, one obscene photograph of Mark Lane lying on a bed, a hand printed instruction by Lane regarding perverted sexual acts, and signed statements from two women concerning the performance of unnatural sexual acts on the person of Mark Lane.

Regarding the dissemination concerning Mark Lane, were received information that in 1962 the District Attorney of Queens County, New York, conducted an investigation of Mark Lane for alleged sodomy. At that time, statements from two women were received, along with an obscene photograph of Mark Lane and hand printed instructions which Mark Lane gave to one of the girls in order that they could perform upon his person perverted sexual acts of a sadistic masochistic nature.

The background information furnished to the White House regarding Mark Lane indicated that he is an attorney, born in New York City on February 24, 1927, and that he has a long history of affiliation with Communist Party groups and organizations.

Lane was elected to the New York State Assembly in 1960 and in May 1962, he was defeated in an attempt to secure the nomination as a candidate for the United States House of Representatives from the 19th Congressional District in New York.

OBSERVATIONS

There is no evidence to indicate that Representative Hale Boggs received information disseminated from the Bureau regarding persons critical of the Warren Commission, or information concerning the immoral activity of Mark Lane. As this information was furnished to the White House, it appears that President Johnson, or a member of the White House disseminated it to the Warren Commission, of which Representative Boggs was a member or directly to Boggs.

No written request from the White House to furnish information regarding Warren Commission critics was located in Bureau files; however, according to Bureau Supervisors James C. Farrington and James M. Murphy, who were in the Crime Records Division in 1966, and assisted in the preparation of the summary memoranda mentioned above, which was furnished to the White House, this request from the White House appeared to be a routine telephonic request which was taken through Assistant Director DeLoach's office. At that time it was customary for the White House to telephonically request background information directly through the Crime Records Division and the response to the request would be delivered through Mr. DeLoach, who had liaison directly with the White House.[FBI 62-109090-635X]

In the Summer of 1992 Roll Call published a story, allegedly based on FBI documents, which revealed that the Government had received a report, shortly after the plane disappeared, that experimental tracking equipment had located the wreckage of an airplane near Yakutat, Alaska, and that there were two survivors. This researcher was unable to locate these documents. The wife of Nick Begich stated: "It's a mystery. What did happen? How did it happen? My children wish there were answers." HEMMING told this researcher: "The people who do this shit are independent contractors. They have nothing to do with the politics of anybody. If the plane got blown to shit over the water, they ain't gonna recover nothing."

Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission reported that "HUNT categorically denied...any participation or involvement whatever in the attempted assassination of Governor Wallace, the disappearance of Congressman Hale Boggs or the shooting of Senator Stennis." [NARA SSCIA 157-10011-10090] Senator Stennis was shot on January 31, 1973, in front of his home in the capital during an apparent robbery. Three black men were convicted of this crime. There was no political motive.

J. LEE RANKIN

J. Lee Rankin was the General Counsel of the Warren Commission. The FBI reported: "J. Lee Rankin, chief counsel of the Commission, has been investigated twice by the Bureau. An applicant-type investigation was conducted in 1953 prior to his employment with the Department. He was investigated again in 1955 when he was being considered as the Department's representative to the President's Committee on Disarmament Problems. Both investigations were favorable, and our relations with him while he was in the Department were cordial." [FBI Belmont to Rosen 1.23.64] Allen Dulles opposed the appointment of J. Lee Rankin as the Chief Counsel of the Warren Commission:

Warren: Before Allen goes away, I think we ought to discuss the question of the counsel, because we had our meeting at eight thirty this morning and we discussed Mr. Rankin. Mr. McCloy, and Mr. Dulles, and Congressman Ford, all had some reservations about whether he has the great ability to do this job. I'm sure that discretion is used here, but I told them I would not want to have anyone here that would not have the full confidence of the Commission...

Dulles: I have checked very carefully on Mr. Rankin and I give you my proxy to go ahead, to go with him before we have another meeting. There are one or two other names, if Mr. Rankin's name does not come to the top among all of you. I would like to have another look at (Deleted) a little older than the age limit that has been suggested.

Warren: Little older than forty, he's seventy four.

Dulles: He's that exactly, but he's a vigorous 74. I just checked on him recently as far as his health was concerned. (Deleted) I have had very, very, well described to me. I don't know him personally. There is a man in the younger bracket named (Deleted), who came down with (Deleted) and made a great impression here, who is a lawyer. Whether he's available or not, I don't know. He's in government now, and is working with AID.

McCloy: He's in the War Department. (Deleted)

Dulles: He's been highly recommended...

Warren: ...[Rankin] has lived for causes all his life. They wanted to make him a (Deleted) when he left there, and he wouldn't take it because he wanted to be able to work for causes. I suppose if he had taken a job as (Deleted) everybody would say "there's a hell of a big man." But he wouldn't do it because he took this job; he thought it was a cause to serve over there and he just dedicated himself to it.

Russell: Mr. Chairman, if it is in order, I move the Chief Justice, Mr. McCloy and should constitute a subcommittee to look into this matter, and I would like to have Mr. Ford, too, to interview Mr. (Deleted) and others, and to select a counsel for this Commission.

J. Lee Rankin was born July 8, 1907, in Hartington, Nebraska. As an Assistant United States Attorney Rankin worked on Brown v. Board of Education, which led to the desegregation of America's schools. He became New York City's chief Corporation Counsel from 1966 to 1972. In 1972 Charles Colson attempted to recruit J. Lee Rankin for Watergate Special Prosecutor. NIXON eventually hired J. Lee Rankin to edit the strategic portions of the White House tapes. Rankin died on June 27, 1996.

ASSISTANT COUNSELS BURT GRIFFIN

Burt Griffin was a former assistant U.S. Attorney General who became a judge in Ohio. Griffin investigated the RUBY aspect of the assassination. Griffin was interviewed by this researcher in 1977. He stated that he did not believe RUBY was a member of organized crime, despite his numerous syndicate associates. He said "Everyone knows somebody connected with organized crime - a bookie, etc." He was convinced that OSWALD acted alone. In 1968 Griffin left the Legal Aid Society and went to Washington where he was hired by the Office of Economic Opportunity under Richard Nixon.

NORMAN REDLICH

Norman Redlich, who was Jewish, was the only Warren Commission Assistant Counsel who had a civil libertarian background. Very few documents were generated by him.

JOE BALL AND DAVID BELIN

Joe Ball handled "the identity of the assassin issue" with David Belin who was Jewish. Ball had been an old friend of Earl Warren and believed that was why Warren hired him. David Belin did an article entitled "The Second Gunman Syndrome" for William Buckley's National Review. [4.27.79]

W. DAVID SLAWSON

W. David Slawson, whose father was a close friend of Gerald Ford, was appointed General Counsel of the Federal Price Control Commission by NIXON. David Slawson was in the United States Army from 1954 to 1956. He was trained as a combat engineer at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, and served as a communications clerk at the anti-aircraft artillery at Fort MacArthur, California, and as a mathematical physicist for the Chemical Corps at Dugway Proving Ground, Utah, a poison gas testing center, before joining the Warren Commission. [NYT 4.19.72] David Slawson told the HSCA: "I suppose I had a little bit more than the average person's knowledge about the CIA, very slightly. My recollection is that the CIA, when I was in college, recruited people...I knew one or two people in the class ahead of me who, by all accounts, went to work for the CIA, and it was something I briefly considered myself..." [HSCA V11 p42] During his time as a Warren Commission counsel, David Slawson worked with the CIA. David Slawson handled the "Possible Conspiratorial Relationships" aspect of the investigation, and he weighed the possibility of an anti-Castro Cuban plot:

My theory was that...the anti-Castro Cubans were very angry with Kennedy because they felt they had been betrayed with the Bay of Pigs. OSWALD, on the other hand, was identified publicly with Castro, he was pro-Castro. So, we felt that if somehow the anti-Castro Cubans could have got OSWALD to do it, or had done it themselves, but framed OSWALD, either way, somehow put the blame on OSWALD, that they would achieve two objectives...revenge on Kennedy...possibly cause an invasion of Cuba...

When asked whether he ever questioned the reliability of CIA information because of the involvement of the CIA with anti-Castro Cuban exiles, he replied: "No. I concluded that Raymond Rocca's strong anti-Castro feeling did not bias, or did not prevent him, from being an honest investigator."

When asked whether he ever considered the plausibility of CIA involvement as part of his anti-Castro theory, David Slawson responded: "No, I don't think that I entertained very long the possibility that Rocca, or anybody else I had known at the CIA, was in any way involved in the Kennedy killing." [HSCA V11 p57]

WILLIAM T. COLEMAN

William T. Coleman was a native Philadelphian, born on July 7, 1920. He was a former clerk to Justice Felix Frankfurter of the Supreme Court. He was the first Blackman to serve as a law clerk to a Supreme Court Justice. He was a registered Republican. During the Eisenhower administration Coleman was on the President's Committee on Governmental Employment Policy. As a Republican, Mr. Coleman served in appointed Federal positions under four Presidents. He was a delegate to the United Nations and a member of President NIXON'S Price Commission. He is reported to have advised Mr. NIXON to resign, rather than undergo an impeachment proceeding. He is on the record as saying a President should be allowed to destroy tapes and documents before leaving office. Coleman has been a Board Member of the New York Stock Exchange, and a Director of the Rand Corporation. He was a director of the National Civil Service League, and the Council on Foreign Relations. [NYT 1.14.75 p.23] The FBI reported that back in 1959, a Special Inquiry investigation was conducted concerning Coleman, Bufile 77-80913. [FBI 62-109060-66] Coleman had a security clearance from the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, headed by John J. McCloy, and the Atomic Energy Commission. William Coleman was on leave from the law firm of J. Richardson Dilworth, Dilworth, Paxson, Kalish, Kohn & Dilks. Dilworth was Chairman of the Board of Rockefeller Center, and a director of the Chase Manhattan Bank. In 1965 Dilworth's associates included Roger Blough, Chairman of U.S. Steel, who had received a letter from President Kennedy in 1961, warning him not to raise steel prices. Blough resented Kennedy's interference and said so publically. Blough was tied in with the Bechtel Corporation. [L. McCartney, Friends In High Places p107] George Champion, former head of the Chase Manhattan Bank, (he joined the bank in 1930), was an associate of Dilworth and of former CIA Director William Casey, Martin S. Davis of Gulf and Western and Donald Kendall of Pepsico. [Persico, J. William Casey 1991 p172,458] JAMES McCORD reported "The Chase Manhattan Bank was a former NIXON law client in the 1960's and its Chairman, George Champion, a close friend of the President." [Piece of Tape p208] Champion was a fundamentalist Christian who supported Billy Graham's crusades. Another associate of Dilworth, John DeWitt, worked with John J. McCloy on the interment of Japanese Americans during World War II. NIXON considered Coleman for Watergate Special Prosecutor, and President Gerald Ford appointed him Secretary of Transportation. William Coleman examined "Possible Conspiratorial Relationships" with David Slawson, and worked closely with the CIA. [NYT 1.14.75 p23, 5.4.73; WR 477; CIA 988-927B, 618-793 Note J. Richardson Dilworth and Richardson Dilworth former Mayor of Phil. are two different people.]

LEON DAYRIES HUBERT

Leon Dayries Hubert was born in New Orleans, Louisiana, on July 1, 1911; he attended Tulane University where he became president of the Phi Beta Kappa honor society. He received his degree in law in 1934, and he practiced law in New Orleans. Hubert was an Assistant United States Attorney in the Eastern District of Louisiana from November 12, 1934, to 1942. The FBI: "Hubert was investigated in 1937 as a departmental applicant.

He was under consideration for appointment as Assistant United States Attorney in New Orleans. This investigation was entirely favorable. He was considered brilliant, above average in ability, excellent personal character, habits and reputation." Leon Hubert resigned his post as Assistant United States Attorney General in 1942 as a result of the war. In May 1941, a confidential informant told the FBI that Leon Hubert's name was obtained from ledger cards at the National Headquarters of the National Lawyers Guild, which had been cited as a Communist front. [FBI 77-8959-4] Hubert resigned from the Guild in 1940. From 1945 to 1946, Hubert was again a Assistant United States Attorney General. In Hubert 1946 he became a law professor at Tulane University. Hubert was elected District Attorney of New Orleans Parish from 1954 to 1958. During this time, CARLOS MARCELLO controlled this office.

The FBI reported:

In 1955 a letter was received by the FBI from the Anti-communist Committee of the Americas. The letter, in part, stated that as a condition [prior] to the last election of the Mayor of New Orleans was his acceptance of Leon Hubert as District Attorney of New Orleans Parish [and that] Hubert had been a protégé of one Dr. Mitchell Franklin, a professor of law at Tulane University, who was allegedly an admitted addict of Russian communism, and a long time Vice President of the National Lawyers Guild. The letter continued that the Committee would not contend that Hubert was a Communist or knowingly aided and abetted subversion; however the Committee believed that Hubert was inexperienced, naive, and was permitted to become district attorney so that there would be no prosecution under the Louisiana Communist Control Act.

The FBI reported:

In 1956 Leon Hubert contacted SAC Weeks and offered the service of his wife as a translator of Slavic languages. Hubert at that time was the District Attorney in New Orleans, Louisiana, and attending a convention in Miami, Florida. We had no need for a part-time translator at that time. Bureau files were reviewed and revealed Leon Hubert had been a member of the National Lawyers Guild (cited in 1944 by the House Committee on Un-American Activities). The information we received indicated Hubert resigned from the National Lawyer Guild in May 1940.

In addition, our files show that Guy Banister, former SAC, had contacted the New Orleans Office in July 1956, and confidentially advised that within a short time several top heads of the New Orleans Police would 'roll.' Guy Banister indicated that corruption among the city officials was great, and indicated that he had enough on D.A. Leon Hubert and the rest of the city officials to charge them with malfeasance. He did not explain, or clarify, the type of charges he intended to press." [FBI NO 77-72922]

The FBI:

In commenting upon the possible state action, Mr. Banister said that there is a remote possibility that Mayor DeLesseps Morrison...and District Attorney Leon D. Hubert will be implicated on the theory that they permitted a situation to exist in the department involving a number of policemen.

Guy Banister wrote:

Cases of malfeasance were prepared, and submitted to the New Orleans Parish Grand Jury, against Mayor Morrison, Police Superintendent Provosty A. Dayries, and District Attorney Leon Dayries Hubert. These cases were 'tried' before the Grand Jury, and no indictments were returned.

On June 12, 1956, J. Edgar Hoover asked the New Orleans office of the FBI to ...conduct complete discreet investigation character reputation qualifications of Leon Dayries Hubert Jr. presently Assistant U.S. Attorney New Orleans, Louisiana. Department applicant. Ascertain particular kind of practice since admission Louisiana Bar submitting report by June 17, 1956.

In 1958 Hubert resumed teaching at Tulane. Leon Hubert was assigned to investigate RUBY by the Warren Commission. In late 1963, Guy Banister appeared on New Orleans television, at his own expense, to attack Leon Hubert. Guy Banister charged that the Federal Prosecutors Office, which was once headed by Leon Hubert, failed to investigate a complaint against Assistant District Attorney Grady C. Durham, whom Guy Banister believed to be swindler. Before the HSCA called him as a witness, Leon Hubert died on March 26, 1977, after an extended illness. He was 65 years old.

ALBERT JENNER

Albert Jenner served as NIXON'S Minority counsel on the House Judiciary Committee. The Judiciary Committee studied grounds for NIXON'S impeachment. Albert Jenner resigned during these hearings. Albert Jenner handled OSWALD'S background. Albert Jenner, born June 20, 1907, died on September 18, 1988.

WESLEY LIEBELER

Wesley Liebler was appointed to the Policy Planning Office of the Federal Trade Commission by NIXON. Wesley Liebler supported the testimony of the Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, at a two day conference on food prices, on October 30, 1974. [NYT 11.1.74] Wesley Liebeler handled OSWALD'S background. Known as an extreme conservative, he worked for Carter, Ledyard & Milburn. [HSCA V11 p390] Tracy Barnes and Frank Wisner also worked there.

ARLEN SPECTOR

Arlen Spector, also Jewish, originally from Kansas, was with the Office of Special Investigations while he was in the Air Force from 1951 to 1953. He entered Yale University Law School where he was editor of the Yale Law Journal. He graduated in 1956. He was appointed to the Philadelphia District Attorney's Office in 1958 where he secured the conviction of an important organized crime figure in 1962, and was offered a position in the Justice Department of United States Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy. Arlen Spector refused. Spector visited President NIXON at the White House on November 21, 1969. In 1972 Arlen Spector was head of the Committee to Re-elect NIXON in Philadelphia.

The Watergate investigation produced this document:

(Deleted)
Philadelphia City Hall
Room 666
(Deleted)
Reliable Engineering Associates
410 Walnut Street
12th Floor
Philadelphia, Pa.

Visual inspection of Room 666, Philadelphia City Hall, determined it is the main entrance for the office of Philadelphia District Attorney Arlen Spector. District Attorney Spector is the Chairman of the Philadelphia Committee to Re-elect President NIXON. Further inquiry determined phone (Deleted) is specifically assigned to Assistant District Attorney John Steinberg. On July 6, 1972, (Deleted) Reliable Engineering Associates, 410 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. advised that Reliable is a "job-shop," which bids on many Federal Government contracts. The president of the company is (Deleted) a prominent member of the Philadelphia Committee to Re-Elect President NIXON. (Deleted) was in Washington, D.C., on business for this committee on July 6, 1972. [FBI PH 139-115]

NIXON requested Arlen Spector to coordinate his Watergate defense team in 1973. The New York Post reported: "PHILLY DA TO DEFEND NIXON? Philadelphia, (AP). Philadelphia District Attorney Arlen Spector will join President NIXON's Watergate defense staff and probably be in line to head it, the Philadelphia Bulletin said today."Arlen Specter handled the facts of the assassination. He later became a United States Senator from Pennsylvania. [Who's Who In America; NYT 9.8.73, 10.31.74 and approx. 12.6.63] In 1995 Arlen Specter became a Presidential candidate.

FRANCIS W. H. ADAMS

Former New York City Police Commissioner Francis W.H. Adams also handled the facts of the assassination.

MELVIN EISENBERG

Melvin Eisenberg, also Jewish, was appointed to the Federal Price Control Administration by NIXON.

SAMUEL A. STERN

Samuel A. Stern, also Jewish, was a member of the Washington, D.C., law firm of Wilmer, Cutler and Pickering. He investigated the performance of the United States Secret Service. [HSCA JFK Exhibit F-476]

LLOYD CUTLER

The founder of Wilmer, Cutler, and Pickering, Lloyd Cutler, also Jewish, was a Commissioner for Latin America who was in charge of the liquidation of German assets. He worked with Nelson Rockefeller. Shortly after the 1964 race riots, Lloyd Cutler was appointed by Lyndon Johnson to the Commission on the Administration of Justice Under Emergency Conditions. He later became a member of the Presidential Commission on Violence. This Commission reported that the assassinations of Martin Luther King and John F. Kennedy were products of the national character of America. Lloyd Cutler was appointed a Director of the School for Advanced International Studies of Yale University in 1969. In 1989 he was member of the Bush-appointed Presidential Commission on Ethics, with R. James Woolsey, the former Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. In 1990 Lloyd Cutler conducted a major unannounced review of the nation's espionage laws in search of better ways to apprehend and convict spies like Aldrich Ames Jr. This panel included Richard Helms, senior State Department official Seymour Weiss, and current Secretary of State Warren Christopher. In 1994 Lloyd Cutler was hired by President Clinton as his special counsel in the Whitewater affair.

Warren Commission staff members included: Edwin A. Conroy, John J. O'Brien, and Philip Barson a Jewish ex-Internal Revenue Service intelligence officer.

JOHN HART ELY (RELIGION UNKNOWN)

John Hart Ely was appointed as General Counsel to the Department of Transportation by President Ford.

ALFREDDA SCOBEY

MURRAY J. LAULICHT (JEWISH)

Murray was Jewish and represented Caesars World in trademark litigation preventing Trump Plaza Casino from using the name Trump Palace.

RICHARD MOSK

Appellate Court Justice Richard Mosk, also Jewish, of the 2nd District (Los Angeles and Ventura counties) is active in the community. He is the son of former state Supreme Court Justice Stanley Mosk, who died in June 2001.

ALFRED GOLDBERG

Alfred Goldberg, also Jewish, was an Air Force historian. Alfred Goldberg was recommended to the Commission by Dr. Rudolph August Winnacker, who was listed in Who's Who in the CIA. Rudolph August Winnacker, born August 25, 1904, in Germany, came to the United States in 1919. He became an OSS analyst from 1944 to 1945, and spent time in North Africa and Sicily. Rudolph August Winnacker worked in William Donovan's research branch with other refugees, all academicians. From 1945 to 1949, Rudolph August Winnacker was a historian with the War Department. He became the Chief of the Historical Division of the Pentagon from 1949 to 1973. Rudolph August Winnacker died in June 1985. [Rankin/Warren meeting 1.21.64 cited by Brussell in Rebel 11.22.83] Alfred Goldberg: "Winnacker recommended me to Oran Grover, the Archivist of the United States, who recommended us to Warren. We were interviewed by J. Lee Rankin." Arthur K. Marmor was an Air Force historian. Lloyd L. Weinreb was from the Criminal Division of the Justice Department. Charles N. Schaffer, Jr. was a former Attorney with the Justice Department, Criminal Division. Stuart R. Pollock was an assistant to Herbert J. Miller.

ROBERT GERALD STOREY AND LEON JAWORSKI

Herbert J. Miller helped choose Leon Jaworski to head the Texas Commission of Inquiry into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The Commission consisted of Jaworski, Texas State Attorney General Waggoner Carr, and Attorney Robert Gerald Storey. Robert Gerald Storey was Assistant Attorney of Texas for Criminal Appeals from 1921 to 1923. From 1945 to 1946, he was an Executive Trial Counsel for the United States, Nuremberg, Trial of Major Axis War Criminals, 1945 - 1946. From 1953 to 1955, he was a member of the Commission to Reorganize the Executive Branch of United States Government (Hoover Commission). Storey was an advisor to the Korean Government on the judicial and legal profession in 1954. In 1959 he worked at the Korean Legal Center. From 1954 to 1955 Storey was State Department representative in the Far East and the Middle East to assist legal profession of friendly free nations. From 1958 to 1962 Storey was the Chairman of the Board of Foreign Scholarships (International Education Exchange).

Waggoner Carr stated that the purpose of the Commission of Inquiry was to have several lawyers who were independent of the Government, monitor the investigation of the Kennedy assassination.

Leon Jaworski was a former prosecutor at Nazi war crimes trials in Hadamar and Darmstadt. In 1962 Jaworski was appointed Special Prosecutor in the contempt case against Segregationist Governor, Ross Barnett. Leon Jaworski was an associate of John DeMenil. Leon Jaworski was a trustee of the M.D. Anderson Foundation. Congressional Representative Wright Patman's (Dem.-TX.) Subcommittee on Foundations revealed the M.D Anderson acted as a conduit for CIA funds. It granted the American Fund for Free Jurists a half million dollars to further its work. Leon Jaworski refused to comment about his CIA connections. Jaworski was also a Director of the Republic National Bank. [Washington Post 2.18.67]

The Warren Commission took testimony from 550 witnesses, but Leon Jaworski was present at the interrogation of only nine. [Dallas Morning News 1.5.64 p14 sec. 4] Journalist Dorothy Kilgallen reported that Jaworski was present at the interrogation of JACK RUBY, who asked to be transported to Washington, D.C., so he could talk directly with the President. As a representative of the Attorney General of the State of Texas Jaworski had the power to allow RUBY to do this. He said nothing. Jaworski told the FBI he was not present during the interrogation of Ruby, however, his associate, Robert Storey, was. [FBI Inter. W/Jaworski 8.24.64 Houston, Texas] On August 24, 1964, the New York Times reported that Jaworski was being considered for the position of Attorney General of the United States should Robert Kennedy decide to run for the United States Senate in New York State.

The purpose of the Commission of Inquiry was to have two allegedly independent attorneys, whose credentials were unquestionable (Nuremberg) give the imprimatur of authenticity to the Warren Commission Report. Two of its members had close ties to the intelligence community. In 1975 Waggoner Carr expressed serious doubts about the efficacy of the Commission of Inquiry. [NYT 9.3.75 p63]

LIAISONS WITH THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT: HOWARD WILLENS (JEWISH)

Howard Willens was a liaison between the Justice Department and the Warren Commission. Willens was the Second Assistant Director of the Justice Department, Criminal Division. In this capacity, he worked under Herbert J. Miller. Howard Willens applied for a job as a law clerk in the anti-trust office of the Justice Department in the Summer 1955. From January 1957, to December 1958, he was in the U.S. Army. In January 1959 he entered private practice in Washington, D.C. He visited the Communist-sponsored Vienna Youth Festival in 1959. The FBI reported:

During the investigation of Howard Penney Willens, all individuals contacted reported favorably as to Willen's character, loyalty and associates. The 1961 investigation developed information that he had attended the Vienna Youth Festival in 1959. The Vienna Youth Festival in 1959 was supported by the World Federation of Democratic Youth, cited as a Communist organization in the House Committee on Un-American Activities Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications, January 2, 1957. Prior to going abroad, Willens advised the State Department and the Bureau of his intentions to attend the Festival and stated his purpose was to minimize propaganda and defend the policies of the United States.

Howard Willens was contacted in February 1994:

My wife and I were planning to visit Europe when we learned that some of our colleagues in the University of Michigan student government were going to the Youth Festival, which may have been the first held outside the satellite countries. I was active in the National Student Association. We wanted to counter the political thrust of the U.S. student delegation that was planning to attend the conference. The students who had attended these conferences in the past were not representative of students across the United States. I remember a letter to FBI, not State. It turned out that the group that was mobilizing these right-thinking Americans students was funded by the CIA. The group that was organized out of Cambridge by some of my colleagues, turned out later to be stimulated and funded in part by the CIA. Unwittingly, I was part of this.

Howard Willens was not debriefed by the FBI on his return. Howard Willens joined the Justice Department in 1961 and served there as Second Assistant, Criminal Division, Department of Justice. Howard Willens:

I took nine months out for the Warren Commission. When I came back, I was promoted to First Assistant. I left in August 1965. Herbert 'Jack' Miller, my boss, left in February and served as the Executive Director of the President's Commission on Crime.

By 1967 Howard Willens was a member of the law firm of Wilmer, Cutler and Pickering.

STUART R. POLLAK (JEWISH) was another liaison with the Justice Department. He was Staff Assistant to Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice. JACOB RUBENSTEIN (JEWISH) Warren Commission consultant on Organized Crime.

The last entry, JACOB RUBENSTEIN (AKA JACK RUBY) was fictitious, but it accounts for the disproportionate number of Jews on the Warren Commission. Jews did not want to say that another Jew was a conspirator in this crime against America and feed the rants of the George Lincoln Rockwell's of the time with the act of one Jew that would be used against the many. STURGIS and HEMMING were killers who had personal and ideological beefs with CASTRO. HUNT and PHILLIPS hated him for Bay of Pigs. ANGLETON hated almost everyone and Kennedy was no exception. ANGLETON's hatred was cultural and well as political as he did not approve of JFK's lifestyle. I cannot say one way or the other if John Kennedy was soft on Communism but if you disagreed with his policies then vote him out of office, don't blow his brains out. But RUBY was only in it for the money. Not only that, if not for the United States and the USSR JACK RUBY would have been sent to a death camp where he no doubt would have become a KAPPO, a Jew who led others to their death. On a brighter side, A. J. WEBERMAN the man who solved the Kennedy assassination was a stoned JEW and Operations Coordinator for the Jewish Defense Organization.

RICHARD HELMS

Although not a member of the Warren Commission, DD/P Richard Helms helped the Commission draw its conclusions. Hundreds of Commission documents bore his signature. Richard Helms had copies of the Warren Report hand-carried to CIA stations throughout the world. He told Senator Howard Baker:

"I knew HUNT relatively well because he and I over many years worked in the same general section of the Agency." When HUNT was queried about his relationships with Richard Helms and Thomas Karamessines he responded: "I have known Dick Helms for many years. He was Operations Chief for the CIA. He then became Deputy Director of the Plans Directorate...Karamessines succeeded Richard Helms as Chief of the Plans Directorate and I saw him from time to time."

President Lyndon Johnson appointed Richard Helms the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency in 1966. Richard Helms held this position throughout the Watergate affair, which caused his departure from the Agency. Before he left, Richard Helms ordered the destruction of all logs, tapes and transcripts, of office and telephone conversations dating back ten years, including all conversations he had in 1963. [RR p203] Since the destruction of the tapes and transcripts occurred immediately after Richard Helms received word from Senator Mike Mansfield (Dem.- Montana) recommending the Agency retain any records or documents having a bearing on the Senate's forthcoming investigation in the Watergate break-in, the Rockefeller Commission determined it:

Reflected poor judgment. There is no way it can ever be established whether relevant evidence had been destroyed...it reflects a serious lack of comprehension of the obligation of any citizen to produce, for investigating authorities, evidence in his possession of possible relevance to criminal conduct.

In 1973 Richard Helms was appointed Ambassador to Iran by NIXON; he was forced to resign in late 1977, after he pleaded no contest to one count of misdemeanor perjury. Richard Helms was pardoned by President James Carter. He was a Washington, D.C., lobbyist in the 1980's and in the 1990's ran Parvus Incorporated, an international security firm. HEMMING told this researcher:

Helms knows every fucking thing that was going on. That's what his job is. How can he cover his political ass unless he knows what's going on? Of course they knew the thing was going down, it was so clumsily being done. That's why there was such an extensive cover up. They had some people do this shit who were more or less thugs.

A. J., "Like FRANK?" HEMMING:

Well, he's a thug. But they were sharp enough to have the fucking pasty. I mean before they thought only mob guys knew how to do that. This shows a level of professional skill that would work in any third world country. That's why they had to cover it up so much. To do a job here in the U.S., man, I'll tell ya, you really got to know your shit. If the real pros did the job, they wouldn't have to protect a swinging dick, they wouldn't have to cover up shit. No scandal, no suspicion, everybody would go to bed at night. It didn't work that way, did it? More and more shit surfacing all the time.

Other CIA officials who conducted the investigation of OSWALD included Thomas Karamessines. Thomas Karamessines, 61, died on September 4, 1978, of an apparent heart attack. His death occurred before the HSCA questioned him. Arthur E. Dooley was one of the CIA men most involved in the investigation. Arthur E. Dooley, born May 4, 1925, died in March 1980. On April 24, 1964, ANGLETON wrote this memo for the FBI Director: "Reply to March 6, 1964, memo asking for information on the OSWALD case provided by Nosenko. Signed JAMES ANGLETON. See special file." On May 7, 1964, Arthur E. Dooley wrote the following Memorandum for the Record: "Regarding Noskenko's knowledge of the OSWALD case. Arthur E. Dooley. See special file." [NARA 1993.06.19.08:26:17:430000; NARA 1993.06.19.08:41:54:500000]

William Vincent Broe worked on the Kennedy assassination case: William Vincent Broe, born August 24, 1913, was an FBI Agent from 1942 to 1948. From 1948 to 1951 he was in the Military Intelligence Service of the Pentagon. William Vincent Broe assumed diplomatic cover and worked out of Tokyo, where he became Chief of Station. Philip Agee reported that William Vincent Broe was Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division in 1966, had worked with Deputy Division Chief Jacob Esterline and Covert Action Staff Chief Gerry Droller. Gerry Droller died in May 1992. Jacob Esterline was aware of all of the pre-Bay of Pigs assassination plots against Fidel Castro. He claimed

...to have had in his possession in pre-Bay of Pigs days a box of cigars that he been treated with some sort of chemical. In our first interview with him, his recollection was that the chemical was intended to produce temporary personality disorientation. The thought was to somehow contrive to have Castro smoke one before making a speech, and then to make a public spectacle of himself. Esterline distinctly recalls having had the cigars in his personal safe until after the left WH/4 and that they definitely were intended for Castro. He does not remember how they came into his possession, but he thinks they must have been prepared by (deleted as of 2010). In a second interview with Esterline, we mentioned that we had learned of a scheme to cause Castro's beard to fall out. He said that the cigars might have been associated with that plan. Esterline finally said that, although it was evident that he no longer remember the intended effect of the cigars, he was positive were not lethal. The cigars were never used, according to Esterline, because WH/4 could not figure out how to deliver them without danger of blowback on the Agency. He says he destroyed them before leaving WH/4 in June 1961. [CIA Misc. Schemes Prior to 8.60]

In 1970 William Vincent Broe worked on the destabilization of the Salvadore Allende Government, after which he was appointed Inspector General of the CIA. Donovan E. Pratt worked on ANGLETON'S staff, as DC/CI/R&E. The CIA response to an Freedom of Information Act request on Donovan E. Pratt was the CIA "can neither confirm nor deny the past or present affiliation of individuals with the CIA." Donovan E. Pratt died of cancer on January 22, 1983, at age 69. Lee H. Wigren was Chief/SR/CI/R. He died November 5, 1993.

Other CIA Staff members involved in the OSWALD case were T. Hall, Kaufman, David Murphy, Spera; Whitten; Stok; Murray; Jane Roman; Tom Flynn; J. Ludlum; Paul Hartman (all from the CI Staff) J.C. King (C/Western Hemisphere Division), T. H. Bagley (SB), E. Mendoza (OS), Sheffield Edwards (OS), Winston Scott, DAVID PHILLIPS, Ann Goodpaster (Mexico City), Robert Steele (SOV/SAT OPS) and Joseph Picclo (Cuban Ops).

AEDIPPER-20 AND C/WH/3

The OSWALD case was analyzed by AEDIPPER-20 (Yuri Nosenko) and C/Western Hemisphere/3 (CARIB), J. White. The FBI objected to its reports being passed to AELADLE (Anatoliy Golitsyn). On January 4, 1967, the Office of Security of the CIA had Anatoliy Golitsyn under visual and audio surveillance. On January 3, 1975, the name of Anatoliy Golitsyn appeared on a Index Card titled "Questionable Activities" which read "Polygraph, Review of Domestic Activities of Possible Questionable Nature, Cryogenic Magnetometer, Surveillance - Vans Technical Services Division Testing."

Cryo is the Latin prefix for cold, and the cryogenic magnetometer uses liquid helium at 4 degrees Kelvin (K) to create a very cold superconducting region around the magnetometers sensors. (4 degrees K is four degrees above absolute zero - absolute zero is the ultimate freezing point. The average temperature of the universe is 3 degrees K.) At such cold temperatures electrical currents move with nearly no resistance. When the magnetized is placed into the sensor area the sample's magnetic field sets up a current in the superconducting coil. This current can then be measured. The cryogenic magnetometer is 3 to 4 times more sensitive than the spinner magnetometer and is capable of measuring even the weakest magnetized sample. Even the magnetic properties of liquids and live animals can be measured by a cryogenic magnetometer since the sample does not need to be spun.

JOHN SCELDO [JOHN MOSS WHITTEN]

John Scelso, a desk officer in the Western Hemisphere/Division and the Mexico Branch Chief in CIA Headquarters, testified to the HSCA that he led the Agency's investigation of the Kennedy assassination, "on the basis of the observation of OSWALD in Mexico

(his Headquarters responsibility). John Scelso stated that the Mexican branch was the only CIA unit directly involved in investigatory activities related to the Kennedy assassination." The CIA stated its investigation was conducted by John Scelso: "Immediately following the assassination, John Scelso was instructed by Richard Helms, then Deputy Director for Plans, to coordinate efforts to compile and evaluate incoming information pertaining to the assassination. Scelso was assigned to this responsibility due to his past experience conducting internal CIA security investigations..." John Scelso told the HSCA that ANGLETON

...was in some way interfering with his function as the coordinator of the investigation and that at some time the investigation was turned over from the MEXICAN DESK to ANGLETON. John Scelso also testified that ANGLETON was talking to the FBI without receiving authorization from anyone.

On November 24, 1963, a message from Mexico City Chief of Station, Winston Scott, stated Rolando Cubela was in contact with Valeriy Kostikov. ANGLETON was said to have used this as a pretext to take over the investigation.

Another CIA document stated:

After the first few days, the CIA investigation of the case was handled at Headquarters by a small staff usually charged with investigation and analysis of the most important security cases, and by a few officers and analysts of our Western Hemisphere Division. [From C/WH3 to DDP no date]

In October 1996 the CIA released Scelso's testimony before the HSCA:

When Kennedy was assassinated on November 22, 1963, Scelso was chief of a CIA branch responsible for operations in Mexico and Latin America. Richard Helms placed Scelso in charge of the assassination investigation. ANGLETON, 'immediately went into action to do all the investigating. Helms called a meeting at which ANGLETON and a lot of others were present and told everybody that I was in charge and that no one should have any conversations with anyone about the Kennedy case without me being present, which was violated from the word go by ANGLETON, who dealt with the FBI and the Warren Commission and Allen Dulles himself...ANGLETON ignored Helm's orders. I tried to get HELMS to make him obey and Helms said - 'You go tell him.' At one point in the 1978 House testimony, committee attorney Michael Goldsmith was asked, 'Do you have any reason to believe that ANGLETON might have had ties to organized crime?' 'Yes' replied Scelso, who is now retired and lives abroad, He said the Justice Department once asked the CIA to determine the true names of people holding numbered bank accounts in Panama because the Mafia was hiding Las Vegas skim money there. 'We were in an excellent position to do this and told them so - Whereupon ANGLETON vetoed it and said 'That is the FBI's business.' I do believe that I heard that ANGLETON was one of those several people in the Agency who were trying to use the Mafia in Cuban operations.' [Newday 10.6.96]

ANGLETON AND THE WARREN COMMISSION

ANGLETON asked that his unit be given responsibility for further research and investigation. ANGLETON designated Raymond Rocca as liaison with the Warren Commission. The FBI reported:

Supervisor Sam Papich, through ANGLETON of CIA, picked up comments by Allen Dulles to the effect that J. Lee Rankin is considering an investigative staff to conduct additional investigation...Frankly, I think Rankin should be discouraged from having an investigative staff and that O'Malley should make it clear to him we stand ready to run out any additional leads the Commission wants covered. In this light, it may be well to give Rankin only ten additional copies of the report at this time. [FBI Memo Rosen to Belmont 12.17.63 NR 199 12.20.63]

Allen Dulles gave ANGLETON information on the progress of the Warren Commission, which ANGLETON, in turn, gave William C. Sullivan. [FBI Addendum Belmont (AHB:hmm) 12.17.63] ANGLETON coached John McCone, and J. Edgar Hoover, before they testified before the Warren Commission: "One question will be 'Was OSWALD ever an agent of the CIA?' The answer will be no." [FBI 105-82555-3689 - NARA 157-10003-10401; CIA 694-302 Helms briefs McCone.]

THE OFFICE OF SECURITY INVESTIGATION

There was some indication that the Office of Security of the CIA conducted an investigation of the assassination. A CIA Memorandum for the Record dated February 20, 1964, stated that the Office of Security independently furnished the United States Secret Service with information on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The document noted that ANGLETON opposed this. Birch O'Neal: "I indicated my concern that DDP acquired information from cable traffic of which the Office of Security received copies had been disseminated to the Secret Service without any apparent coordination with us." On April 17, 1974, a CIA staff employee received information that the Office of Security had initiated an independent investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy. A review of Office of Security files convinced him this report was false. [CIA 168-612 - FBI agent, 229-91, 119-51, 116-50, 1272-1028, 1349-483, 555-804; FBI 105-82555-2448, 62-109060-2877]

THE GARRISON INVESTIGATION

The Garrison investigation reflected the strange personality of New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison. This researcher knew Jim Garrison in the mid-1970's. Garrison wanted me to find a publisher for a manuscript he had written on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. When I read the manuscript I found that it was a fictional work that placed the blame for John Kennedy's death on the Mossad - the Israeli Intelligence Service. Click HERE to see video of Garrison. Garrison investigated INTERPEN, but he focused on Loran Hall. Garrison finally indicted Clay Shaw, who was not in any way connected to the conspirators. One of Garrison's major witnesses was Edward Suggs.

EDWARD STUART SUGGS AKA JACK STUART MARTIN

Jack Stuart Martin was born July 1, 1915, in Phoenix, Arizona. Jack S. Martin claimed he joined William Pawley's Flying Tigers before World War II. Jack S. Martin showed HSCA investigators a letter from General Claire Chennault, written sometime during the early 1960's, in which General Claire Chennault requested that he work for Chiang Kai Shek: "They would use World War II fighters and capture ships going to mainland China and force them to port in Formosa. Jack S. Martin stated the plan fell through for lack of finances." [HSCA 1801007810416] On November 6, 1939, Jack S. Martin was an applicant for a position with Naval Intelligence, Washington, D.C. On January 18, 1940, he applied for a position with the Santa Monica, California, Police Department. Jack S. Martin went into the Army on February 27, 1940, in Fort McArthur, California. On March 26, 1940, Jack S. Martin was a civilian again and applied for a job with the Hawthorne, California, Police Department. On February 17, 1944, Jack S. Martin applied for a job with the Memphis, Tennessee Police Department. On July 28, 1944, Jack S. Martin applied for a job as a Special Officer with the Los Angeles Police Department. Jack S. Martin told the HSCA that he ...served in WW II in the Air Corps and served years in the Pacific where he did a lot of radio work, including military intelligence work on ships out of Pearl Harbor. He was near Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, when the Japanese attacked. He received an Honorable Discharge and is very anti-Communist.

The first arrest of Jack S. Martin took place in on October 24, 1944, in Fort Smith, Arkansas. The charge was "inv. susp." On January 11, 1945, he was arrested for carrying a pistol in Fort Worth, Texas and on December 12, 1946, he was fingerprinted for "Special Police, Los Angeles, California." On December 31, 1947, Jack S. Martin was arrested for disturbing the peace in San Diego, California, and on May 17, 1949, Jack S. Martin was arrested for "P/c bond" in Dallas, Texas. On May 14, 1952, Jack S. Martin was arrested for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for the crime of murder in Houston, Texas. On May 16, 1952, he was charged with murder in Houston, Texas. The charges were dropped. On January 27, 1953, he was a witness in Houston, Texas. On May 2, 1953, Jack S. Martin was picked-up in Los Angeles on a warrant that had been issued because of the murder charge in Texas. He was released when the L.A.P.D. discovered he was no longer wanted in Texas. On March 10, 1954, Jack S. Martin was finger printed in Galveston for vagrancy and drunk. The FBI:

Our files also disclose that in January 1957, we received information from a local store in New Orleans that Jack S. Martin had become involved in an altercation with a woman he claimed to be his wife in the store and, as a result, was ejected from the store. Jack S. Martin exhibited identification to store authorities and claimed to be an FBI agent. We instituted inquiries in this matter at that time to locate Jack S. Martin and determined that he was in a psychiatric ward Charity Hospital New Orleans as a of January 17, 1957. His psychiatrist informed our agents that Jack S. Martin was suffering from a character disorder and indicated an interview of Jack S. Martin by the Bureau at that time might prolong his hospitalization.

Another FBI document reported that Jack S. Martin was a patient in a psychiatric ward in 1956 through 1957. [FBI 62-109060-4539] The FBI interviewed Jack S. Martin in 1960 about impersonating an FBI agent.

CARL STANLEY

Carl John Stanley was a self-ordained Archbishop of the Metropolitan Eastern Province of the American Orthodox Catholic Church. Carl Stanley issued false Certificates of Ordination, and had a long arrest record. In 1950 the New Orleans office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service tried to deport him. David Ferrie and Jack S. Martin were Bishops in Stanley's Church. According to Carl Stanley

...(whom the Louisville Police Department believes is a mentally unbalanced con-man) Jack S. Martin claimed to have carried out numerous police 'commissions.' Stanley said that he had indicated that it was his job to spy on other policemen; and while in Louisville, Kentucky, he had reportedly worked for Echo Blue, the publication of the Fraternal Order of Police. [CIA 1315-1050]

Jack S. Martin spied on Carl Stanley, for the Louisville Department of Education. The FBI reported that Jack S. Martin had suggested Carl Stanley was involved in illegal activities including Fraud against the Government. The FBI ultimately concluded both men were mentally ill. According to Carl Stanley, Jack S. Martin said he had worked for the CIA. No documents supported this.

JACK S. MARTIN & JAMES J. MARTIN

Paul F. Gaynor and Newton S. Miler were concerned about the identity of "Jack S. Martin" and they had Marguerite D. Stevens of the Security Research Service of the Office of Security of the CIA make sure he wasn't identical with "James J. Martin," a former CIA Agent who was an alcoholic. [CIA 1315-1050; FBI LS 105-620 2.28.67, 105-82555-2.21.67; Memo Wood/Fensterwald 4.6.70; CIA 1357-506; FBI 62-109081] When M.D. Stevens searched for traces on Edward Stewart Suggs aka Jack S. Martin there were none. In the early 1960's David Ferrie stated:

I consider Jack S. Martin mentally emotionally unstable. He has been in Charity Hospital with psychiatric bouts of one kind or another. I know him as a man who is commonly spoken of as a ambivalent. He plays both sides of the street. Most of his conversation is spent telling you how he wants to torpedo somebody...

In November 1963 Jack S. Martin was a candidate for public office in Louisiana.

BANISTER SLUGS SUGGS

JACK S. MARTIN VERSION

On the evening of November 22, 1963, Jack S. Martin entered the office of Guy Banister. He wanted the files of Guy Banister that pertained to OSWALD. Guy Banister pistol-whipped him. Jack S. Martin showed signs of a beating when the FBI questioned him. The FBI reported:

During the November 25, 1963, interview, it was evident that Jack S. Martin had recently suffered a severe physical beating. He said that W. Guy Banister had 'pistol-whipped' him, that Banister had been drinking, and that he would not press charges.

Jack S. Martin told the HSCA:

On the same day of the phone call, November 22, 1963, he was drinking in the Katz and Jammer Bar with Guy Banister and they got into an argument. They went to Banister's office and, in the heat of the argument, Guy Banister said something and Martin replied 'What are you going to do -- kill me like you all did Kennedy?' Banister drew his .357 magnum and beat Martin in the head (which required medical attention, but not serious). When Martin was on the ground, Guy Banister pointed the gun at his head, and he believes Banister would have killed him. One of the secretaries, possibly Delphine Roberts, told Banister not to shoot him. A police report was made and Banister paid all of the medical bills. Martin dropped the charges. [HSCA interview with Jack S. Martin 12.5.77 L.J. Delsa]

DELPHINE ROBERTS' VERSION

Delphine Roberts remembered the incident

...where Guy Banister hit Jack S. Martin with his gun several times in the head. She stated that Jack S. Martin came into the office when she was the only person there. Jack S. Martin jumped over the rail to the rear section where some files were kept that had come from Banister's house after he and his wife split up. While she was asking Jack S. Martin what he was doing Banister walked in. Banister told Jack S. Martin that he knew that he stole some files and had them in his coat and demanded that Jack S. Martin give the files back. Jack S. Martin shouted words to the effect that Banister didn't have any right to accuse him of stealing, and that he (Jack S. Martin), was leaving the office. When he attempted to leave, Guy Banister pulled out his gun and hit Jack S. Martin several times in the head causing some lacerations. Banister then took Jack S. Martin into his private office and Delphine could not hear, or see, all that was going on. Jack S. Martin left the business and sometime later came back and told Banister he wanted to go home but did not want to take the bus all bloody. He asked Banister for money to catch a cab. Banister gave him the money. This occurred on the day of the assassination but all the people that were in the office had gone around the corner to the bar. She stayed in the office to work.

After Jack S. Martin left, Delphine Roberts and Guy Banister looked up the OSWALD file which was in her desk because the information had not been mounted and indexed. She assumes Jack S. Martin was trying to get OSWALD'S file. She remembers that it contained news clippings. Guy Banister advised her that she should not talk to anyone about OSWALD or any anti-Castro activity that she might have heard about such as a gun-running. [HSCA interview with Roberts]

BANNISTER and Ferrie must have known Jack S. Martin was a snitch. When Oswald visited BANNISTER at 544 Camp Street neither men knew that OSWALD was being groomed as a patsy in the Kennedy assassination so what difference did it make if Jack S. Martin came across OSWALD? Jack S. Martin had heard of OSWALD when OSWALD was active in New Orleans during the summer of 1963. He wanted Banister's file on OSWALD so he could solve the JFK assassination and become rich and famous instead of a bum. He knew of OSWALD'S association with Banister. When Jack S. Martin asked Banister for his file on OSWALD, Banister knew that he was aware of his association with OSWALD. Jack S. Martin was unable to obtain documents on OSWALD from Guy Banister.

HARDY W. DAVIS

On November 23, 1963, Jack S. Martin was visited by bail bondsman Hardy W. Davis. Jack S. Martin concocted a story about David Ferrie, who he hated, and told it to Hardy Davis. He said he had seen a photograph of David Ferrie holding a rifle similar to OSWALD'S and that David Ferrie had once discussed a short story plot which involved the shooting of the President of the United States. The FBI:

Hardy Davis advised that they discussed remarks made by Ferrie to the effect that he would like to kill several Deputy Sheriffs and the Superintendent of the New Orleans Police Department, whom Ferrie believed had been persecuting him and caused him to be arrested for homosexual crimes.

Jack S. Martin told Hardy Davis that a television program had reported that the library card of David Ferrie had been found in the possession of OSWALD on his arrest in Dallas. This was untrue. When Hardy Davis heard this he called G. Wray Gil, an employer of David Ferrie.

While talking to Gil, Hardy Davis advised he heard that Ferrie had received Cuban literature in Gil's office, and Gil confirmed this in conversation to Davis. Davis stated he did not know when the literature was received, or what the nature of the literature was, which was mailed to Gil's office.

Jack S. Martin said that Hardy Davis remarked he heard David Ferrie had received literature from the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, which had been mailed to the offices of G. Wray. If the literature was not just another figment of Jack S. Martin imagination it probably came from the Free Cuba Committee. [FBI NO 89-69-341] Jack S. Martin later told the FBI:

Jack S. Martin does not believe this to be true, as Ferrie was connected with anti-Castro group that operated in New Orleans before the Bay of Pigs invasion. Jack S. Martin states he is acquainted with the leaders of anti-Castro group, and is well aware of Ferrie's connection with them.

G. WRAY GIL

G. Wray Gil (born 1901; died October 4, 1972) had employed Jack S. Martin as an investigator. G. Wray Gil was retained over a long period of time by CARLOS MARCELLO. He represented him in 1970 when CARLOS MARCELLO surrendered to Federal authorities to serve a two year term for assaulting a federal agent. He also represented him in deportation proceedings that year. CARLOS and JOSEPH MARCELLO appeared as a witness for G. Wray Gil in a Civil proceeding in New Orleans. On November 23, 1963, G. Wray Gil received a call from a local television newsman inquiring as to the whereabouts of David Ferrie and his whereabouts on November 22, 1963. G. Wray Gil said he was with David Ferrie on November 22, 1963, until 12:15 p.m., then had seen him again that night at a victory party for CARLOS MARCELLO. G. Wray Gil related this to the FBI. When the FBI questioned David Ferrie, he explained he was in the New Orleans Federal Court Building on November 22, 1963, for the final day of CARLOS MARCELLO'S deportation trial then left on a trip to Texas.

When the FBI questioned G. Wray Gil he denied having received literature from the Fair Play for Cuba Committee.

On November 23, 1963, Jack S. Martin called New Orleans Assistant District Attorney Herman Kohlman and said that in 1955 OSWALD and David Ferrie were in the Civil Air Patrol together. Jack S. Martin told Major Presley J. Trosclair of the New Orleans Police Department the same story. Jack S. Martin hoped to advance his career as a professional informant by supplying the FBI with this information. Jack S. Martin, however, told the HSCA that since he had made "the first phone call on November 23, 1963, he had been a branded man. People no longer asked for his help and his business contacts went down to zero." On Monday, November 25, 1963, Jack S. Martin went to FBI S.A. Regis Kennedy with the story:

Jack S. Martin, 1311 North Prieur Street, New Orleans, Louisiana, advised that he was listening to a television program on WWL-TV reported the life of LEE HARVEY OSWALD and reporting various interviews with people in New Orleans that were acquainted with OSWALD. Jack S. Martin stated that one of the people interviewed whose name he not know, aged early 20's, wearing horned-rim glasses, recalled that OSWALD had been active in the Civil Air Patrol with David Ferrie. Jack S. Martin stated that when he heard this he flipped. Jack S. Martin advised that in his occupation as a private investigator he had an occasion to develop considerable information about Ferrie and reported it to one Richard E. Roby, Special Agent, Investigative Division, Office of Compliance and Security, Federal Aviation Agency, Washington, D.C. who must have a big file on Ferrie as they conducted a complete investigation of his activities in New Orleans several years ago. Jack S. Martin advised that he called WWL-TV Station and furnished the station with background information about Ferrie, particularly his homosexual tendencies and that the fact he formerly operated the Civil Air Patrol. He also told them that Ferrie was an amateur hypnotist and may have hypnotized OSWALD and planted a post-hypnotic suggestion that he kill the President.

Jack S. Martin stated that he has visited in the home of David Ferrie and he saw a group of photographs of various Civil Air Patrol cadet groups and in this group he is sure he saw several years ago a photograph of LEE OSWALD as a member of one of the classes. He stated he did not recall the group that OSWALD was in or any other details...

Jack S. Martin advised that he had reported this matter to Major Trosclair of the New Orleans Police Department, Intelligence Division, and he felt that Major Trosclair was not giving the matter sufficient concern so he called Assistant District Attorney Herman Kohlman who was a former newspaper reporter and who was very familiar with the Ferrie case as a he had written various feature stories about Ferrie. Jack S. Martin stated that he explained all of his ideas and suspicions to Kohlman.

Jack S. Martin advised that he was really suspicious of Ferrie's activities when he received a report from W. Hardy Davis, a New Orleans Bail Bondsman, who told him that G. Ray Gill, New Orleans attorney and employer of Ferrie had called him to locate Ferrie who lives down the street from him and at the same time had denied to the TV station that Ferrie was an employee of Gill's office. Davis furnished Jack S. Martin information that Ferrie had left town for Texas on Friday evening, November 22, 1963, which information he also made available to Mr. Kohlman. Jack S. Martin stated that Ferrie is a completely disreputable person, a notorious sex deviate with a brilliant mind being highly trained in mathematics, sciences, several foreign languages including Latin, Modern Greek and ancient Greek. Jack S. Martin advised that Ferrie had been education in a seminary and subsequently expelled from the Catholic Church and he, Jack S. Martin, suspected him of being capable of committing any type of crime. Jack S. Martin stated that he felt that Ferrie's possible association with OSWALD should be the subject of close examination as a he personally believed that he could be implicated in the killing of President Kennedy.

Marina Oswald was questioned about a "Mr. Farry" after the assassination. [Lardner Wash. Post 4.2.67]

JACK S. MARTIN TELLS GARRISON HE SAW BANISTER WITH OSWALD

On April 24, 1967, Jack S. Martin told the FBI that "in December 1966, Pershing Gervais asked him to come to the Fontainebleau Motel, Room 125 and told him, Jack S. Martin, that he had a civil case against David Ferrie and asked Jack S. Martin for information against Ferrie." [FBI 62-109060-5159] Jack S. Martin told him had seen OSWALD and Banister together. In January 1967 Garrison subpoenaed Jack S. Martin to appear before a New Orleans Grand Jury.

Like most professional informants, Jack S. Martin was a liar and a mental case but knew how to stay alive. He never mentioned having seen OSWALD when he spoke with the FBI in November 1963 because he feared CARLO MARCELLO. He told the Bureau that he believed Edward Voebel was correct and that OSWALD and Ferrie knew one another from the Civil Air Patrol. HEMMING told this researcher: "People don't understand that the Ferrie-MARCELLO thing was an entirely different thing." All that Jack S. Martin knew was that OSWALD was connected with Bannister and Bannister was connected with David Ferrie. The rest of the information he supplied Garrison was false. The HSCA interviewed Jack S. Martin:

Jack S. Martin had seen OSWALD with Ferrie in Guy Banister's office, located at 544 Camp Street. On the day that President Kennedy was assassinated, Jack S. Martin saw a rifle (Mannlicher-Carcano) on TV and remembered that he had seen one just like it in David Ferrie's apartment. Jack S. Martin called friend who was an Assistant District Attorney,

Herman Kohlsman, and told him about seeing OSWALD with Ferrie and about the gun. Jack S. Martin feels this was the first call anyone made to the New Orleans District Attorney. As a result of that call David Ferrie's apartment was raided by Special Investigators of Jim Garrison. Ferrie was later arrested and released. [HSCA 1801007810416]

The FBI: "Had Mr. Banister had previous contact with OSWALD before the assassination, he would have immediately contacted us and reported this information." Jack S. Martin telephonically contacted S.A. Regis L. Kennedy on January 27, 1967, and demanded that the FBI stop Jim Garrison from harassing him. The FBI reported via S.A. Regis Kennedy:

...the scope of Garrison's investigation is that there was a conspiracy which originated in the room above W. Guy Bannister's (Deceased) office in New Orleans and that there was a second assassin firing at President Kennedy in Dallas, Texas. W. Guy Banister formerly operated a private investigating office in New Orleans and was a retired SAC of the FBI.

NO 1309-C, a private investigator, advised that he has been conducting investigation for the Trailways Bus Line, regarding thefts from the New Orleans terminal, and one of the individuals under investigation is "DAVE LEWIS." NO 1309-C interviewed LEWIS in connection with the alleged theft and during this interview LEWIS advised that he had been interviewed by the District Attorney's Office and told the District Attorney's Office that he met LEE HARVEY OSWALD in the office of W. GUY BANNISTER. LEWIS claimed that the District Attorney's Office had given him a polygraph test and that he, LEWIS, had passed this test. NO 1309-C advised that the District Attorney's Office had also interviewed a person by the name of Carlos, whose last name sounded like GERRO, probably CARLOS QUEROGA, and a man named SERGIO, probably SERGIO ARCACHA SMITH. NO 1309-C advised that DAVE LEWIS is a former employee of W. GUY BANISTER and he is apparently identical with the individual named DONALD LEWIS, whose name was furnished by JACK F. MARTIN, on January 13, 1967. The above information is being furnished to the Bureau of its information. No investigation is being conducted by the New Orleans Office. [NARA 124-10073-10348; FBI 124-10073-10348; FBI 62-109060-4539]

About the time David Ferrie was found dead in his apartment on February 22, 1967, Jack S. Martin reportedly left town. The CIA reported:

Jack S. Martin's wife, when interviewed during the period of his disappearance, stated that such a disappearance was not unusual, as a he takes off alone for several months every year. She admitted that he drinks a great deal, but maintained that he is a 'plain, ordinary man who makes model planes for his (9 year old) son and a chapel (a religious chapel in the house) for his wife and hundreds of ecclesiastical heraldry for his friends.' According to Mrs. Martin her husband since the war has been a reporter, public relations man and private investigator.

It would appear that Jack S. Martin is "Bishop" John J. Martin who is referred to in an FBI report on the LEE HARVEY OSWALD case dated February 28, 1967, which Mr. Scott Miler recently furnished this office. According to his report, Carl John Stanley aka "The Most Reverend Christopher Maria Stanley" of Louisville, Kentucky advised the Bureau on February 28, 1967 that John J. Martin had associated with David William Ferrie who Martin told him had been involved in a plot against President Kennedy. According to Stanley, Martin claimed to have been in the Air Force during World War II, to have worked for CIA, and to carry out numerous police commissions. Stanley described Martin as a white male, 40 to 50 years of age, 5'9" in height and weighing 150 lbs. [CIA 1357-506]

In August 1967 Jack S. Martin telephoned the Washington, D.C., offices of Reis R. Kash, Military Police Detective, C. I. Jack S. Martin wanted the unlisted telephone number of Grady Clifford Durham:

This is to certify that at approximately 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, August 1, 1967, I was working in my office when I received a telephone call. The caller identified himself as a Mr. John Martin. He stated that he was working for Jim Garrison out of New Orleans. Before this time I had never heard of John Martin and had no knowledge of Jim Garrison other than that obtained through the news media.

Martin stated that he was in the Washington, D.C. area looking for a former lawyer from New Orleans named Grady Clifford Durham. Martin stated he had to find Durham in furtherance of an investigation he was conducting for Garrison. Martin stated that Durham had been apprehended in Washington, D.C. after absconding with funds belonging to certain of his clients and that Durham had returned to the Washington, D.C. area. Martin stated he has not yet been able to locate Durham, who reportedly was living in Hyattsville, Maryland. He asked that I determine Durham's address or telephone number through records at the telephone company. Martin stated he could not make this check himself as he did not have any effective contacts in Washington, D.C. He stated that after he found Durham's telephone number was restricted he had called New Orleans asking various friends for contacts in Washington, D.C. HE stated he had been given my name by a New Orleans police officer, whom he named. (This police official has acted as an informant for me in the past. In order to preserve this relation, I decline to identify this official unless it is absolutely essential that I do so.)

In order to preserve my relation with the informant, I told Martin I would try to get the address or phone number of Durham for him. Martin stated that he could be reached at the following local telephone number 387-4488.

After completing this conversation, I telephoned my informant in New Orleans and asked him to verify his relation with Martin. He stated that he knew Martin and asked that I give him limited assistance. I told the informant I would make a telephone check, but I would not get too involved with Martin.

On the afternoon of August 1, 1967, I made a check through the Provost Marshall, Liaison Section, Defense Central Index, Fort Holabird, Maryland, on Grady Durham. I was advised he did not have a criminal record. The researcher advised that Grady Durham was born 1907 and was a cousin to Governor Davis of Louisiana. The researcher conveyed to me that Grady Durham was the Subject of several intelligence files. I told the researcher I did not want to be exposed to any intelligence information and directed that the files be returned to the stacks immediately. On the morning of August 2, 1967, I had the telephone files checked and was advised that Durham's unlisted telephone number was 474-0088.

At about 8:30 a.m. August 2, 1967, I telephoned Martin at the number he had provided. A woman who did not identify herself answered the telephone. I asked for Mr. Martin and after a short while Mr. Martin came to the phone. Martin, who has a deep voice and New Orleans accent, sounded loggy when he first answered the telephone. I thought at first that he had been drinking the night before and I apologized for waking him up.

Jack S. Martin stated that he had once shared an office with Grady Durham, and that Grady Durham had drawn up the charter of a Cuba-oriented organization. Edward Jack S. Martin claimed Hanes Johnson used him as a source. In December 1967 Jack S. Martin wrote to an "intelligence agency which conducts counterintelligence investigations," probably the Army Counter-Intelligence Corps. This agency sent Sugg's information to the CIA.:

The main body of the letter relates to his charges against one William Hardy Davis. He stated that there is 'one guy involved in this last bribery deal here who was formerly a bail bondsman at that time. I'd sure like to get the dirt on. So would Jim Garrison too.' He stated that Davis goes to Mexico frequently and 'We know he's mixed up with un-American activities during his sojourns outside the country. He's been under charges here on homosexual violations upon occasion, as well as on other matters. Although he's always been able to make some kind of deal and get off the hook every time...He's been going down on boys for years.' [CIA MFR 12.19.67]

Jack S. Martin kept changing his story. He came up with two stories that were in the news then said he saw OSWALD with Bannister then said he saw OSWALD with Ferrie. All he knew was that OSWALD had some connection to the 544 Camp Street scene.

^DAVID FRANKLIN LEWIS

David F. Lewis was born May 12, 1940, in Houston, Texas; he was the son of a diesel engineer and he had a General Equivalency Diploma from Warren Easton High School in New Orleans. He claimed military service in the United States Navy from May 29, 1958, to July 17, 1958. David F. Lewis worked for Guy Banister in 1958, or 1959, as an office boy. In 1961 the FBI interviewed David F. Lewis regarding an allegation of voting irregularities in New Orleans. The FBI:

Files of the New Orleans Office in case entitled 'Unsub, Employee of Registrar of Voters, New Orleans, Louisiana; David Franklin Lewis, Jr. victim.' CR EL in report of S.A. John T. Reynolds dated October 5, 1961, reveal that investigation based on information from Jack S. Martin, part time private detective, to the effect that a friend, David Lewis Jr., had attempted to register to vote on two or three occasions and on each Mr. Gallinghouse had either refused to accept Lewis as a registrant or had permitted him to fill out a card and thereafter advised Lewis he had made mistakes and could not be registered. [NARA FBI 124-10073-10361]

In 1966 New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison began his investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy by reviewing all the David Ferrie, Guy Banister, 544 Camp Street documents in the National Archives that had been dismissed by the FBI. Jack S. Martin heard of District Attorney Garrison's investigation, and in an effort to fabricate corroboration for his story contacted David F. Lewis, who worked as a baggage handler. Lewis told New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison:

I have never previously been interviewed by the FBI or any other agency on this matter. During the months of January 1961 through January 1962, I was employed by Guy Banister and Associates as a private investigator. In the late summer of 1963 I was reporting to the Louisiana State Employment Office at 601 Camp Street seeking steady employment. Several times I stopped by Guy Banister's office, before going into the office, I stopped by Mancuso's Restaurant which is on the corner of Guy Banister's office. I noticed Sergio Arcacha, CARLOS [LNU - BRINGUIER?], and a fellow who I was introduced to by CARLOS as a LEE HARVEY in the restaurant. When I first seen LEE OSWALD in the restaurant he didn't talk much, but he seemed anxious about getting on his way. OSWALD appeared to be a highly nervous man with boundless energy. CARLOS, Sergio and LEE OSWALD were involved with some business that dealt with Cuba...a few days either before or after Mancuso's, I went into Banister's office. I went in, they shut the door to the inner office as a if highly confidential. In Banister's office was Banister, David Ferrie, Arcacha and a slim, sandy-haired young man. This man could very well have been OSWALD. By the way, Louise Decker happened to be in the office at this time.

Lewis was asked by Louis Ivon:

Q. Approximately how many times have you seen LEE HARVEY, who you later identified as a LEE HARVEY OSWALD?

A. No more than four times, each time in the company of Carlos.

Q. The day that you first met him, were you introduced to him?

A. Yes.

David F. Lewis had not seen OSWALD in the company of Guy Banister or David Ferrie in the summer of 1963. OSWALD was trying to establish his bona fides as Castroite and would have never been seen in public with anti-Castro types at this time. David F. Lewis did not tell his story in 1963. The FBI:

Lewis stated he had not furnished this information to the Warren Commission or the FBI and had not been interviewed by the FBI in connection with the investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy.

On February 21, 1967,

PCI Mr. George Clark Johnston who has been subject of limited contact, reliability undetermined, advised he observed David Lewis on television in New Orleans commenting on the Kennedy assassination investigation. Johnston advised at the time of the Kennedy assassination Johnston lived with Lewis at 1407 Conti Street, Apartment C, and was a close confidant of Lewis at the time. He advised that at no time during the period of Kennedy assassination did Lewis ever indicate he had any knowledge of the Kennedy assassination. At no time did Lewis ever indicate that he was acquainted with any Cuban refugees. [FBI 62-109060-4526]

In 1967 David F. Lewis told the Associated Press that his life was in danger. [NO DA Doc 12.15.66 Lewis Statement; NARA FBI 124-10073-10361] Jack S. Martin telephoned David F. Lewis and questioned him about David Ferrie and OSWALD. He recorded this conversation.

Ray Berg, President, Pacesetter Publishing, 107 Camp Street, advised the FBI that Jack S. Martin sent him a thirty second excerpt from this tape in the hope of selling it. Berg stated that in a conversation with Jack S. Martin, various names have been dropped by Jack S. Martin, such as a David Lewis, David Ferrie, Carlos Quiroga, Sergio Arcacha Smith, Guy Banister, a woman named Louise, who is Guy Banister's secretary, and a Dr. Cardona.

The FBI (1995) withheld information on David F. Lewis. Reports of television broadcasts of David F. Lewis were deleted. [FBI 62-109060-4527; New Orleans Times Picayune

FERRIE'S TRIP TO TEXAS

FERRIE WITH BOP VET JULIAN BUZNEDO

David Ferrie knew OSWALD and was involved in anti-Castro activities, but he had no knowledge of the conspiracy to assassinate President Kennedy. Who would have told him about the plot? OSWALD? OSWALD had no knowledge of the plot. David Ferrie left New Orleans on Friday, November 22, 1963, at 6:00 p.m. by automobile, for Houston, Texas, accompanied by Melvin Coffey and Alvin Rolan Beauboeuff. He did not mention having attended CARLOS MARCELLO'S victory party. The group checked in at the Alamotel in Houston, Texas, early Saturday, November 23, 1963. David Ferrie made several telephone calls from the motel, including one to G. Wray Gil. After speaking with G. Wray Gil, he went to the Winterland Skating Rink, where he made pay telephone calls while Alvin Beauboeuff and Melvin Coffey skated. When he returned to the motel room, David Ferrie called CARLOS MARCELLO'S Town and Country Motel in New Orleans in search of G. Wray Gil. The number Ferrie dialed, 833-3757, was a switchboard. He could have spoken with G. Wray Gil after G. Ray Gil consulted with CARLOS MARCELLO, who had an office in Town and Country Motel. The FBI transcribed this number as UE-33757, (it was VE-3-3757). [FBI HO 62-2115 JES/1c] In 1969 a Minnesota man pointed this out to the FBI. The FBI claimed this information was ...undoubtedly the handwritten notation of the employee of the motel and the error is the type that would occur if handwriting were sloppy. Houston also sent teletype November 28, 1963, to New Orleans containing same information. New Orleans advised Ferrie previously interviewed and stated made phone calls from instant motel, including call to VE-3-3757 which is Town and Country Motel in New Orleans, attempting to locate his attorney, G. Ray Gil. New Orleans also recognized radio station as WDSU since this is a major radio station in the area. There could be no confusion between UE and VE prefixes of telephone number since U and V and both at the number eight position on the telephone dial while New Orleans had a VE exchange and there was no UE exchange. Teletype concerning same date further reflected that there was no typographical error but rather that information reported as recorded is motel records. [Bishop/A. Jones 6.3.69 cc: Sullivan to Branigan]

David Ferrie and his boyfriends figure-skated at Winterland late Saturday afternoon November 23, 1963, before driving one hour to Galveston, Texas, where they arrived at 9:00 p.m. and checked into the Driftwood Motel in Galveston.

ALVIN BEAUBOEUFF

In August 1993 Alvin Beauboeuff was contacted by this researcher. He related that he first met David Ferrie in the Civil Air Patrol:

Dave, at that particular time, was accused of a crime against nature with someone I knew. A real scuze-ball named Mike Crouchet. Ferrie asked me to be a character witness against him in court. It never went that far. After Dave lost his job with Eastern Airlines, the judge threw it out. It never went to trial. Dave was bisexual. No other Civil Air Patrol members came forward and said, 'He did it to me too.' I was a teenager back then. If I had any better sense, I would have never got mixed-up in it. My dad died when I was 13. Anytime I had a problem in school I went to Dave's house for some help. He had a blackboard there. He wouldn't quit until you understood what he was trying to teach you. There wasn't anything he didn't know about. He had a lot of radical beliefs. He was involved with the Cuban Revolutionary Front, Arcacha. They talked a lot. I never heard the conversations. Dave had worked in conjunction with Guy Banister when they were working on the CARLOS MARCELLO case. Banister was a private investigator making his living off attorneys.

Alvin Beauboeuff was asked to comment on the previously cited document:

Damn, that never popped up before! Wow! I never knew anything about that. Jack S. Martin had put OSWALD and Ferrie together right after the assassination. He told New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison that OSWALD and Dave were great buddies. If OSWALD was in fact hanging around the Camp Street location Jack S. Martin would have seen him, or talked to him, or met him, because Jack S. Martin was around there himself all the time. That's how you got that tie. I remember the old son-of-a-bitch. I think he died in 1966. I don't know if it was a natural death or not.

According to Alvin Beauboeuff, the address 618 North Pierce, was that of Melvin Coffey. As for the blonde, white female, name unknown he said, Whoa, where did she come from? Hello, no man. If I'd had a blonde bitch in there I would have known all about it. I promise you there wasn't no bitch there. Dave and I had a swinging pad before I was married. We had girls goin' in and out of there like crazy. But on that trip there was just the three of us. I placed the call to Alexandria. Dave called and talked to G. Wray Gil, who told him someone had implicated him in this OSWALD thing. Dave was at the telephone at the rink. He was always on the phone with somebody. In 1966 Garrison offered me money and job to testify that I knew Clay Shaw. Perry Russo came out making a bundle. I never did meet Perry Russo and I practically lived in Ferrie's house. The trip to Texas had been planned two weeks in advance. It all rolled out. The trial finished up and we just went. Unless Dave had some unique way of engineering me into going there.

On Sunday, November 24, 1963, David Ferrie, Alvin Beauboeuff and Melvin Coffey drove back to New Orleans. They stopped at a service station with a television, and saw RUBY kill OSWALD. David Ferrie then made several pay phone calls. Layton Martens reported having received a call from David Ferrie at about 3:00 p.m. Layton Martens: "After Jack S. Martin had related that Ferrie had stated the President should be killed and had outlined plans to this effect, he talked with G. Wray Gil [who said] there was nothing to worry about." Layton Martens said that when he inquired if the call was local or long distance David Ferrie replied that it was none of his business. During the conversation David Ferrie stated the name of OSWALD "did not ring a bell with him and that he did not know him...Layton Martens said he knows David Ferrie to be a great admirer of President Kennedy."

When Alvin Beauboeuff, Melvin Coffey, and David Ferrie reached New Orleans, David Ferrie dropped off Alvin Beauboeuff and Melvin Coffey near his home, and drove to Hammond, Louisiana, where he stayed with a friend. [FBI 62-109060-4447, 62-109060-4515, #89-69 New Orleans 11.27.63 p219, 62-109060-1294; HSCA V5 p114] When Alvin Beauboeuff returned to David Ferrie's apartment he was arrested, and then released after David Ferrie gave himself up.

DAVID FERRIE'S LIBRARY CARD

Jack S. Martin started the rumor that OSWALD had David Ferrie's library card in his possession after his arrest in Dallas. Layton Martens told the police the on November 22, 1963, G. Wray Gil visited him and asked to relay a message to David Ferrie that his library card had been found among OSWALD'S effects. When the New Orleans Police arrested David Ferrie on November 26, 1963, he had his library card on his person. [FBI 105-82555-330, 104-82555 3.8.67 TNG, 62-109060-252]

Mrs. Jesse Garner, OSWALD'S former landlady in New Orleans, told the HSCA that David Ferrie visited her home on the night of the assassination and asked about OSWALD'S library card, but she refused to speak with him:

I just opened the door and he came in, and he said, 'I'm David Ferrie.' Well, I thought he was one of the FBI men or newsmen...He just merely said, 'What's all this?' He said they found his library card on OSWALD. When he said that, I knew he had nothing to do like the other guys, the FBI, or anything like that. That's when I get him off my back. I said, 'Get out.' He left right away. [HSCA testimony of Mrs. Jesse Garner]

David Ferrie was out of New Orleans when this allegedly occurred. OSWALD'S neighbor in New Orleans, Alexander Eames, stated:

One time I was down to the main public library in New Orleans. I was going in and out browsing, and I came face to face with OSWALD. After the assassination the local newspaper picked-up this incident. The day after the newspaper came out relating the fact I had seen OSWALD in the library - I wasn't home - but David Ferrie came to my door and he stood out to my wife. He had a cheap wig and painted eyebrows. He said, 'Is your husband home?' She said, 'No, what do you want?' He said, 'I would just like to ask your husband if, when he saw OSWALD in the library, whether he got close enough to see whether he used his own library card or my library card?' I thought that was very interesting because a lot of people deny there was even any connection between Ferrie and OSWALD. If they were exchanging library cards there must have been some connection. I don't recall when this happened..."

Both of these stories about David Ferrie were false. Nothing was found among OSWALD'S possessions that linked him to David Ferrie.

THE FBI QUESTIONS DAVID FERRIE

On February 13, 1964, Raymond Comstock of the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office

...advised the New Orleans Office of the FBI he was assigned to the District Attorney's office shortly after the assassination and was attempting to locate David Ferrie, an alleged associate of LEE HARVEY OSWALD. During an attempt to locate Ferrie, Comstock secured some documents from Ferrie's residence. These were two undated letters addressed to Jack Wasserman signed D. W. Ferrie; one letter appears to be a corrected copy of the other; an undated letter addressed to Jack signed Dave; an undated letter addressed to Jose Juis LaRoca, Guatemala, and the first page of Ferrie's bankbook with the Whitney National Bank of New Orleans. Comstock obtained this material without a warrant and Ferrie was not present...The material that Comstock furnished indicates Ferrie was in Guatemala in October and November 1963 making inquiries on behalf of Jack Wasserman, attorney for CARLOS MARCELLO.

David Ferrie told the Secret Service that he made a number of trips to Guatemala on behalf of CARLOS MARCELLO. During his last trip, in early November 1963, he flew Taca Airlines and made one stop in Mexico City. [USSS 620] Ferrie's bankbook showed that large amounts of money had been deposited in David Ferrie's account in October and November 1963. In 1978, during secret testimony before the HSCA, CARLOS MARCELLO acknowledged having given David Ferrie these funds, but claimed that he had paid David Ferrie to investigate the credibility of a government witness in the immigration case that was pending against him. The FBI did not determine the source of the funds deposited, or the purpose for which they were withdrawn, although the Bureau assumed the source was CARLOS MARCELLO. [FBI 62-109060-4521, 5296, 5241, 5295, 5334, 4521; NO 89-1-9-3437]

On September 30, 1968, NO T-2 advised that (deleted) and (deleted) of (deleted), Louisiana State Police are suspected by him as being connected with (deleted) as they have been seen on numerous occasions at the Town and Country Restaurant. According to source (deleted) and (deleted) were formerly in business with David Ferrie and owned a piece of United Air Taxi Business in New Orleans. Source stated that he had information that (deleted) car was at one time parked at David Ferrie's residence, and they believe that (deleted), (deleted) and (deleted) were associated together in United Air Taxi. (Deleted)." [FBI NO 92-10976-2]

FERRIE DENIES KNOWING OSWALD

The FBI questioned David Ferrie on November 25, 1963.

Ferrie stated that he does not know LEE HARVEY OSWALD and to the best of his knowledge OSWALD was never a member of the Civil Air Patrol Squadron in New Orleans during the period he was with that group. Ferrie said that if OSWALD had been a member of the squadron for only a few weeks as had been claimed, he would have been considered a recruit and that Ferrie would not have had any contact with him...Ferrie said that to the best of his knowledge he does not know any individual named LEE HARVEY OSWALD nor has he ever known the individual represented by photograph presented to him as that of LEE HARVEY OSWALD in the Civil Air Patrol, in any business connection or in any social capacity...He stated that on November 9, 1963, and November 16, 1963, he was at Churchill Downs, which is a farm owned by CARLOS MARCELLO, mapping strategy in connection with MARCELLO'S trial.

Ferrie told the FBI about his skating trip to Texas and said that he understood that Jack S. Martin had accused him of having had an association with OSWALD. He said he first met Jack S. Martin in the fall of 1961 and ...since that time Jack S. Martin has attempted to insert himself in his (Ferrie's) personal affairs...He stated that Jack S. Martin began visiting him at the office of Attorney G. Wray Gil and that Mr. Gil did not want Mr. Jack S. Martin hanging around his office. Ferrie claimed that in June 1963 he put Jack S. Martin out of Mr. Gil's office in an undiplomatic manner, and that since that time Jack S. Martin has bedeviled him in every possible manner...Ferrie stated that from approximately November 1960 until August 1961, he was associated with the Cuban Revolutionary Front in New Orleans. He stated that he had been actively engaged in working for the Cuban Revolutionary Front collecting money, medicine and clothing for the organization, as well as giving talks before various citizen's groups. He stated that at the time he was associated with the Cuban Revolutionary Front the office of the organization was located in the Balter Building, and that Sergio Arcacha Smith was head of this organization in New Orleans. Ferrie stated that he has never known of the Cuban Revolutionary Front maintaining an office at 544 Camp Street, nor does he have any knowledge of Sergio Arcacha Smith maintaining an office at that address during the time he was head of the organization and later he was replaced. Ferrie said that the Cuban Revolutionary Front was definitely an anti-Castro organization, and that all persons connected with the organization were violently anti-Castro. Ferrie said that he has not had any connection with the Cuban Revolutionary Front or any other anti-Castro organization since August 1961...Sergio Arcacha Smith gave up leadership of the organization and was replaced by an individual named Rabel.

The only statement the FBI attempted to verify regarded the airworthiness of Ferrie's private airplane. David Ferrie claimed it had not been airworthy since 1962. When the FBI checked with the Federal Aeronautics Administration, it discovered that the agency considered the plane to be currently airworthy. [FBI 62-109060-from SAC Houston 62-2215 teletype 11.26.63; FBI 62-109060-482,313]

David Ferrie was re-interviewed on November 27, 1963:

Ferrie advised at time of Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba he was very much embarrassed and concerned over the lack of air cover provided, and severely criticized President Kennedy both in public and in private. Ferrie stated that he had never made any statement that President Kennedy should be killed with the intention to do so, and has never at any time outlined any plan or made any statement as to how this could be done or who should do it. Ferrie said he is very outspoken and may have used an offhand or colloquial expression / he ought to be shot / in expressing his feelings concerning Cuban situation.

He denied having met OSWALD in the Civil Air Patrol. Interview of David W. Ferrie reflected in report of SA WARREN C. DEBRUEYS, Dallas, December 2, 1963, entitled LEE HARVEY OSWALD.

S.A. REGIS KENNEDY

On December 10, 1963, in an affidavit for S.A. Regis Kennedy, Ferrie wrote:

I have no records or recollection, to my knowledge, to show that LEE HARVEY OSWALD was, or was not, a member of this particular unit of the Civil Air Patrol. To the best of my knowledge and belief I do not know LEE HARVEY OSWALD and have no personal recollection of having met him. If I ever did meet him it was very casual and, to the best of my recollection, I have definitely not seen him in recent years. [FBI NO-44-2064 12.10.63, 62-109060-1294, NO-89-69 p341 11.26.63, 62-1090604-891]

Jack S. Martin reported:

Regis Kennedy used to come around [544 Camp Street] and was friendly with people in Guy Banister's office. Regis also spent a lot of time north of Lake Pontchartrain by the Cuban training camps

On May 17, 1967, S.A. Regis Kennedy appeared before the New Orleans Parish Grand Jury during the "Jim Garrison Investigation." He invoked executive privilege in response to several questions. [FBI 62-109060-5255 5.18.67] Regis Kennedy wrote:

I was asked if I knew W. Guy Banister and I told him yes. He then asked if I ever visited Banister's office and the identity of anyone I observed there. I answered that I had been in Guy Banister's office, and that the only person I could recall observing when I was there was Jack S. Martin and two women, whose names I could not recall. I was also asked of my knowledge of the relationship between Banister, Arcacha Smith and OSWALD. I answered that I did not know...I was asked if I knew Dean Andrews and I acknowledged that I did...During the questioning concerning Andrews I was asked by a member of the jury whether I had investigated Dean Andrews and I replied that my contacts with Dean Andrews were set forth in the Warren Commission report. [FBI TO SAC from Regis Kennedy 5.18.67 - 5255]

When the HSCA contacted Regis Kennedy he said: "He doubted there was any connection between MARCELLO, Ferrie and Banister et. al. to the assassination," and referred the Committee to DeBRUEYS. A message from the New Orleans FBI Field Office to the Director regarding the testimony of DeBRUEYS and Regis Kennedy is still mostly withheld as of 2010. [NARA FBI 124-10031-10275; FBI 62-109060 1st. NR 5175 dated 5.8.67]

LAYTON MARTENS

New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison interviewed David Ferrie's friend, Layton Martens. Layton Martens had been arrested for attempted homicide and had told the FBI he feared Jim Garrison calling him as a witness, because:

...cross-examination might reveal Cuban Revolutionary Front CIA affiliation in 1961, and dealings with the late Attorney General Robert Kennedy, and subsequent discontinuing of plans for a Cuban second invasion.

He believed such testimony would have lent credence to New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's contention that anti-Castro Cubans were involved in the assassination. In August 1993 Layton Martens stated:

We were getting sometimes as many as 5,000 Cuban refugees a day into the Port of New Orleans. We started as a volunteer Agency between the Cuban office, which was Arcacha Smith, the Mayor's office, and the State of Louisiana, to take care of these people. What we were doing was prioritized by Robert Kennedy under aegis of the President because of specific facts that were being revealed by refugees regarding nuclear weapons in Cuba.

Layton Martens claimed that in 1968 United States Attorney General Ramsey Clark suggested that he leave Louisiana, and go to Washington, to avoid testifying on this point. Layton Martens:

Garrison was the most patently evil individual I ever knew. He molested a young boy at the Athletic Club. Jack Anderson ran the story. The kid's uncle was a Monsignor in the Catholic Church. Now that the kid is grown up, he doesn't mind talking about it. I can't prove it, but bribery was involved in the Garrison investigation. He dug up some witnesses. David Ferrie was a good American, he was not a homosexual, he was not some kind of weird fanatic creep. Otherwise he would not have been working under the Attorney General. There were letters about this, but they are missing. His arrests for homosexuality were manufactured. There was a serious recanting, and the charges were dropped. David Ferrie and my mom were very close after her divorce, and the two were talking about marriage. David Ferrie was just your basic, good American, who was doing the right thing. He didn't work for CARLOS MARCELLO. He worked for G. Wray Gil. G. Wray Gil was in a law firm representing many people.

Ferrie could have flown CARLOS MARCELLO back to the United States. I wasn't there. I know he found a way to work with the Administration to get CARLOS MARCELLO back into the country. Cause the Attorney General had boo-booed. You can't just kidnap people, even though he was late for a deportation hearing. Understand, everyone wants to write books that say, 'He knew CARLOS MARCELLO, he must have been in with the mafia.' RUBY probably knew CARLOS MARCELLO too. Who cares? I been ignoring all this crap for 30 years.

In 1962 Layton Martens explained to the New Orleans FBI that he had been arrested by the New Orleans Police because he was associated with the Cuban Revolutionary Front, some of whom were homosexuals.

MARGARITA MARTENS

In 1978 the mother of Layton Martens, Margarita Martens, was confined at Southern Baptist Hospital, diagnosed as schizophrenic. The HSCA interviewed her:

Subject denies writing a letter concerning an assassination plot and states that she wrote her priest a letter dealing with her father beating her. She met David Ferrie in 1961 and didn't associate with him in 1963. He was her son's leader in the Civil Air Patrol. She never met LEE HARVEY OSWALD. If she wrote a letter about an assassination plot, it was while under the influence of pills and after her son's arrest during the Garrison probe.

Layton Martens complained to the HSCA that its investigators woke his mother up from sleep and made accusations about her having been involved in the Kennedy assassination. [HSCA 5.17.78 Martens Int.] Layton Martens told the FBI that David Ferrie had blackmailed CARLOS MARCELLO into buying a gasoline station for him because "Ferrie had something on him." [FBI 62-109060-251; CIA 1362-1061A; FBI 62-109060-7077 2.26.73; Look Magazine 8.26.69; FBI 62-109060-5815 10.13.67] On January 24, 1964, William David Ferrie supplied the FBI with information on Edward Jack S. Martin activity in regard to phony degrees and awards. [FBI 63-4296-33-596]

DEAN ANDREWS

Dean Adams Andrews (born October 8, 1922; died April 1981), was an attorney for CARLOS MARCELLO. [CIA 1359-503] Dean Andrews attended law school with WARREN DeBRUEYS. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison could not question S.A. DeBRUEYS about Guy Banister because when the Garrison investigation began in March 1967, the FBI had S.A. DeBRUEYS transferred from New Orleans to Washington, D.C. On May 6, 1977, SAC DeBRUEYS resigned from the FBI after 27 years of service.

Dean Andrews began his association with CARLOS MARCELLO in 1950 or 1951, during the early stages of CARLOS MARCELLO'S deportation case. In 1951 Dean Andrews applied for the position of FBI S.A. but was never employed. In 1954 Dean Andrews found employment with the Immigration and Naturalization Service. While he was in the Immigration and Naturalization Service he became acquainted with FBI S.A. Regis Kennedy. Dean Andrews became an Assistant District Attorney in Jefferson Parish, Louisiana. Jefferson Parish was as tightly controlled by the mob as Cicero, Illinois, was at the height of the Capone era. Frank Langridge was District Attorney and the boss of Dean Andrews. The Chief Investigator under Frank Langridge, Joseph "Zip" Chimento, had been convicted of having bribed a witness in 1943 to help two Cosa Nostra mobsters. Before Joseph Chimento worked for Frank Langridge he worked as a collector for CARLOS MARCELLO. While Dean Andrews was an Assistant District Attorney, he continued practicing law and defended employees of JOSEPH, PETER and ANTHONY MARCELLO. ### OSWALD VISITS DEAN ANDREWS

On November 25, 1963, Dean Andrews

...who is presently confined to the Hotel Dieu, with pneumonia, telephonically advised SA Regis L. Kennedy that OSWALD had talked to him, date not known, about getting a Dishonorable Discharge changed. Andrews stated that OSWALD was a walk in client, did nothing about it, and doubts that he has any record. Andrews stated OSWALD accompanied by another individual. In a later interview Andrews related to the FBI that he had first met OSWALD in late June 1963, when OSWALD appeared at his office with several companions he believed to be homosexuals. OSWALD requested his assistance in making inquiries concerning his Dishonorable Discharge from the Marine Corps.

HEMMING told this researcher:

OSWALD was trying to upgrade his discharge to a General, or a less than honorable, when he was dealing with Dean Andrews. He eventually planned to go back on fucking active duty again. Not just to get his benefits, because he came in 1955 or 1956. Any post-1955 people didn't get the fucking G. I. Bill at that time. The discharge didn't mean shit to him. Nobody gives a fuck what kind of discharge you have when you go around and get a job. Later on, during the Vietnam thing, they tightened up on it. That's the promise that's held out. They'd tell him: 'We can't intervene because it would look like you are being paid off.' They would have told him, 'Here's what you do on your own, get a lawyer, do this.' And they would suggest a lawyer that was in the fucking loop. Dean Andrews had done a couple of discharge upgrade cases for homosexuals who had been put out on a Section Eight. He'd worked on those and it was an easy thing. A matter of paperwork. He'd done it before. He was a parking ticket fixer type. Was he hooked-up with Banister? More than likely. Lawyers always use these sleazy P.I.s."

OSWALD left the Marines on a Hardship Discharge and his U.S. Marine Corps discharge card that stated that he had been Honorably Discharged. He could have used this card to obtain employment. [WCE 1413]

Dean Andrews affirmed he talked with OSWALD two or three times but never opened a file on him. In 1964 Sergeant R. M. Davis, U.S. Army, retired, who was employed as a private investigator by Dean Andrews, recounted that in June 1963, Dean Andrews discussed with him the procedure required to amend or correct a Marine Corps Undesirable Discharge. Sergeant R. M. Davis, however, could not locate any record on OSWALD.

ANDREWS ASKED BY CLAY BERTRAND TO DEFEND OSWALD

Dean Andrews stated that on the evening of November 23, 1963, while he was in the hospital, Clay Bertrand called him and asked if he would be interested in handling OSWALD'S defense, then told him he would call back later. He never did. Andrews told the FBI on November 25, 1963, that on November 23, 1963, one Clay Bertrand, a French Quarter queer, called Andrews and asked him if he would undertake the defense of OSWALD...The next day, [November 24, 1994] Dean Andrews called New Orleans attorney Sam Monk Zelden to ask him if he would be interested in assisting in OSWALD'S defense. As they were speaking, Sam Monk Zelden received the news that OSWALD was dead.

SAM MONK ZELDEN

The FBI interviewed Sam Monk Zelden on November 25, 1963. He confirmed parts of Dean Andrews' story. In a telephone interview, Mrs. Zelden established that her husband passed away on September 19, 1981, after suffering "something similar to a stroke in 1976." Sam Monk Zelden had mentioned the telephone call to her.

EVA SPRINGER

Dean Andrews called his secretary, Eva Springer, at 4:00 p.m. on November 23, 1963; he conveyed he "was representing OSWALD in Dallas and was told that Bertrand hired him..." On November 25, 1963, Dean Andrews "called Eva Springer and asked her to locate any records on Clay Bertrand, but has not been able to locate his name - he's unknown to her." [Unmarked FBI index card "No rpt." Clay Bertrand 12.6.63 12.5.63 p36 Springer to Dean Andrews] During his Warren Commission testimony, Dean Andrews claimed soon after he was released from the hospital his office was burglarized.

Why Dean Andrews came forward with this story was unclear. The FBI began to interview Dean Andrews on a weekly basis. Each time, his story changed. On December 3, 1963, Dean Andrews assured the FBI that the telephone call was a "dream he had during sedation." Sergeant R. M. Davis thought the call Dean Andrews received at the hospital was "a dream." During Dean Andrews' testimony before the Warren Commission, he returned to his original story. Dean Andrews contacted the United States Secret Service in 1966 and professed to have some new information to indicate OSWALD didn't act alone: "I'm 40% sure I know the identity of the person who was responsible for OSWALD killing the President." The United States Secret Service declined to send an agent to Dean Andrews' home to interview him, and advised him to visit its offices.

GARRISON INDICTS DEAN ANDREWS FOR PERJURY

When New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison subpoenaed Dean Andrews to testify before a New Orleans Grand Jury in 1967, his testimony changed. He was indicted for perjury. Dean Andrews left his post as a Jefferson Parish Assistant District Attorney. His law practice suffered, and he took a job at a MARCELLO-owned Bourbon Street bar. Dean Andrews was convicted of perjury in August 1967 and he received an 18-month jail term. He appealed the conviction and was released on $2,500 bond. He still maintained he could not identify Clay Bertrand. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison had his investigators comb the New Orleans French Quarter for Clay Bertrand, but they found nothing. [FBI NO-100-16601 12.5.63; FBI 62-109060-1522, 4648, 5520, 4821, 5112; USSS CO-2-34,030-12.19.66, 2.20.67, 3.30.67] In June 1967, the FBI learned from a confidential source that a homosexual in New Orleans who used the pseudonym Clay Bertrand was Eugene Clair Davis.

EUGENE CLAIR DAVIS

FBI traces were highly deleted, but nonetheless revealed that Eugene Clair Davis (born July 8, 1924) worked for CARLOS MARCELLO. One trace disclosed: "Davis had retained an attorney who represented New Orleans hoodlum, CARLOS MARCELLO." [FBI 62-109060-5442; FBI 104060-5455] Eugene Clair Davis owned Wanda's Bar, a homosexual hangout. George Wray Gil Sr. was his attorney "for the transactions on buying Wanda's." Eugene Clair Davis had worked at the Court of Two Sisters. On April 28, 1960, a Potential Criminal Informant file was opened on Eugene Clair Davis by the New Orleans FBI Office and he was designated a criminal informant on October 11, 1966. [FBI 137-7386-3] Eugene Clair Davis furnished extremely valuable information over a period of years. His information led to the arrest of a number of fugitives. The file of the New Orleans FBI Office indicated he was contacted about the Kennedy assassination, but possessed no information. The file did not indicate he used the alias of Clem Bertrand. [FBI Memo Branigan to Sullivan 6.22.67] Eugene Clair Davis had eight arrests: "Two City Misdemeanors; Two State Misdemeanors; Four, Felony." In January 1968 Eugene Clair Davis was arrested for obscenity that involved a sixteen year old boy. [FBI 62-109060-6113]

ANDREW'S TESTIMONY AT THE TRIAL OF CLAY SHAW

On February 26, 1969, Dean Andrews testified

...that the telephone call he received on November 23, 1963, while being confined to the Hotel Dieu Hospital, New Orleans, was from Eugene Davis. He testified that he had known Davis for a number of years and that he had known Davis six months to a year before he was introduced to Davis as Clay Bertrand at the wedding he had previously testified about. He testified he had represented Davis on legal matters since 1951, and knew Davis well enough so that he could recognize Davis' voice on the telephone. He testified he never observed Davis with OSWALD. He testified he never identified anybody as Clay Bertrand, and used the name merely as a cover name for Davis. In regards to the telephone call, Andrews testified that it was he, not Davis, who suggested representing OSWALD. He testified that I suggested I would be famous if I went to Dallas to defend OSWALD. That anybody who defended him would be famous. He testified he had no explanation why he called Attorney Sam Monk Zelden about a trip to Dallas. Andrews testified that in his appearances before the Warren Commission and the Orleans Parish Grand Jury, he was never given a chance to explain, and the reason he did not name Eugene Davis was that he wanted to protect him. In regards to the name Clem Bertrand, he testified that the only time he met anyone using that name was at the wedding previously testified about. He testified that during his appearances before the New Orleans Parish Grand Jury he was forced into making conflicting statements because he was being hemmed in by his previous testimony before the Warren Commission. He testified that when he was being interviewed at the Hotel Dieu Hospital by FBI S.A. Regis Kennedy, he was trying to think of a name to use as a cover name, and finally decided to use the name Clay Bertrand. He testified the only portion of his testimony before the Warren Commission which are true is that part about OSWALD coming to his office to seek legal advice. Andrews was then questioned extensively about his testimony before the Orleans Parish Grand Jury. He testified that whenever he mentioned the name Clay Bertrand to the Grand Jury, he was talking about Eugene Davis. Andrews was then excused as a witness. [FBI 62-109060-6793]

Had CARLOS MARCELLO asked Dean Andrews to defend OSWALD and was Andrews afraid to name him? Was his report to the FBI a compromise with his conscience? NBC reported Eugene Clair Davis was Clay Betrand. Eugene Clair Davis was linked to OSWALD by other dubious witnesses.

BETTY PARENT

During the Garrison investigation, New Orleans landlady and FBI informant, Betty Parent, stated:

You should check into the waiters who worked in the Court of Two Sisters during the summer of 1963 as she heard that at least one of the waiters had said that OSWALD stayed in one of the upstairs apartments at the Court for a while. She said that PETE MARCELLO had something to do with the Court. Eugene Davis lost his job with the Court because of OSWALD'S visit. Davis was involved in blackmailing queers. His information came from FBI Agent Regis Kennedy. [Regis Kennedy Memo Sciambra / Garrison interview with BP-12.18.67; FBI 62-109060-5240; CIA 4793, 4928]

The FBI: "The Court of Two Sisters on Bourbon Street was operated by Nunzio Pecora, the brother-in-law of Joseph Poretto." [FBI teletype TO SAC NO from DIR Onozio Pecora 2.16.65] Nunzio Pecora and Joseph Poretto ran a restaurant and lounge at the Town and Country Motel during the 1950's. Nunzio Pecora was an ex-convict with an extensive past history in heroin trafficking. From the Town and Country he directed a call-girl ring and in the late 1950's Nunzio Pecora took over operation of CARLOS MARCELLO'S Tropical Tourist Court and Trailer Camp. Nunzio Pecora was one of CARLOS MARCELLO'S three most trusted aides, and law enforcement surveillance reports indicated a particularly close relationship in the early 1960's, with Nunzio Pecora always close at hand at CARLOS MARCELLO'S headquarters at the Town and Country Motel. The FBI reported: "Investigation by the New Orleans office reveals Pecora meets and discusses activities with many prominent New Orleans underworld figures." [FBI 92-8100- 1.15.65 pages deleted] Betty Parent furnished Jim Garrison's investigators with a description of the waiter, but not his name. Betty Parent repeated gossip that probably originated with Leander D'Avy, a punch drunk alcoholic.

LEANDER D'AVY

Leander D'Avy (born January 26, 1924) was a retired member of the U.S. Air Force who was employed from 1959 to 1963 as the doorman at the Court of Two Sisters. Leander D'Avy advised the FBI in 1968 that in 1962 he,

First saw individual later identified as OSWALD. OSWALD asked for Clay Bertrand. Sent to Eugene Davis, night manager, Court of Two Sisters. Talked about one hour. OSWALD left the bar. As he was leaving, Davis pointed out OSWALD to the bar maid and told her that he had just come back from the Iron Curtain...Saw OSWALD twice. Second time was about six months before Kennedy was assassinated. OSWALD was in a room at the Court of Two Sisters with four or five others. Eugene Davis was there...Claims CARLOS MARCELLO ran Court of Two Sisters. Told Garrison what he told the FBI. Did not testify.

[FBI NO 89-69 1A-139] D'Avy also claimed to have been "backhanded" by JACK RUBY in the parking lot of the Court of Two Sisters.

Leander D'Avy waited five years before he came forward. This was suspicious. In 1977 Leander D'Avy told the HSCA:

Well, in 1960, I retired out of the Air Force, after 20 years. I went to work at the Court of Two Sisters in New Orleans, as a doorman. And in 1962 this young man walks up to me and asks me if there was a Clay Bertrand working there. I told him I don't know any Clay Bertrand. [I asked the] night manager, Eugene Davis in the tavern 'Gene, do we have a Clay Bertrand working here?' And Eugene said 'Send the young man in here, I'll talk to him.' Clay Bertrand, that's probably a code name. Just like that. So I sent him on in, about an hour later the young man walks out, Eugene Davis comes up to the door where I'm standing, talks to one of the waitresses in there, and he says 'See that young man? He's just come from behind the Iron Curtain.' Well, I didn't put no assassination n' that together - it hadn't happened yet.' Two weeks before the assassination I was called one Saturday morning to pick up my check. I walked into the patio and asked where Eugene Davis was, they said he's up there in the store room. So I went up there and it wasn't no storeroom, they had a little apartment up there, had a bed in it, had five men in it. One of them was OSWALD, I recognized him after the assassination. He was laying across the bed. One of them was David Ferrie. When I went up to Jim Garrison's office I knew it was going to get back to CARLOS MARCELLO or one of them, that I'm talking. And my life won't be worth a plug nickel if they find out. Right then and there I moved out of New Orleans, right the next day. I went to Jackson, Mississippi. I have seen pictures of the other two men [with OSWALD, David Ferrie and Davis] in the Enquirer, the tramps, the little one in that picture was the guy that had the whiskers...I could identify [two] tramps. I don't know their names. All I know is I can identify 'em when I see 'em. One - ah, two of the tramps was, I'm pretty sure, CIA - former CIA men, or something. I never heard no talk [the tramps were HUNT and STURGIS]. I'll take a polygraph test on everything I told you, that's just the way it was, the way it is. I believe there was at least two guys who used to belong to the CIA...two CIA men that were members of the Bay of Pigs, along with a bunch of Cubans. I think them Cubans were from the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Leander D'Avy tried to sell his story to the tabloid, Midnight. The HSCA asked him if he had received psychiatric care. He said he had not. In December 1977 Leander D'Avy was interviewed by HSCA investigator L.J. Delsa. This time he said he had inquired of the bookkeeper, Margaret Tannenbaum, if Clay Bertrand worked there, and Eugene Clair Davis overheard him. Leander D'Avy stuck to his tale about having seen the tramps, and stated that Nick Karno owned the Court of Two Sisters. L.J. Delsa reported: "Nick Karno is a MARCELLO associate and is alleged to have his names on businesses in the French Quarter that are actually CARLOS MARCELLO'S. In 1959 a confidential source indicated that Nick Karno was going to South America, and seemed to be helping procure arms for Fidel Castro. Nick Karno is presently fighting trial dates which his attorneys have been successfully putting off since his murder indictment in 1974..."

A distant cousin of Leander D'Avy was contacted: "I thought he had died. He was an individual that had been inflicted by encephalitis as a child and he roamed a lot. He was a merchant seaman in his younger days. It's been 30 years since I've seen him." The brother of Leander D'Avy, Nuby D'Avy, was contacted:

Leander died February 1986 in Jackson, Mississippi. He went in the hospital for a checkup and the nurse left him with something, and she went back, and he strangled on himself, and he went into a coma. He told me he might come into some money because he knew something about the Kennedy assassination. And he had heard about it, he had nothing to do...My brother was in Navy. He's got three boys in Mississippi. Charlie, Nuney and Philip. He told me he had information about it, and he was going to talk with the FBI, and he might not live long. Somebody was going to be after him to kill him or something. He said he knew something. That's all he told me. No details.

Leander D'Avy had lied to his brother. HSCA investigators talked with Eugene Clair Davis several times during October and November 1977. He denied knowing, or ever having seen, OSWALD. Eugene Clair Davis stated that "there were rooms above the Court of Two Sister's Patio, but they were used as storerooms, and Nick Karno had an apartment up there that no one could use except Nick Karno." According to Perry Russo: "Eugene Davis was bludgeoned to death about ten years ago by a trick of his. He was into sadism. They caught the guy, I think. He was tried...it was in the paper in 1977, 1978. Ask a quarter-hound. He owned Wildside, a gay bar. His assailant was ruled insane." ## GORDON NOVEL

New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison indicted Gordon Dwane Novel for complicity in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. In his youth, Gordon Novel belonged to a neo-Nazi group and was arrested and charged with bombing a Metairie, Louisiana, theater that admitted blacks. Later, he sold spy devices in New Orleans. Gordon Novel claimed he worked with the Cuban Revolutionary Front during the Bay of Pigs, as a Director of the CIA proprietary, the Evergreen Advertising Agency, and had created cryptographic messages for the CIA.

This was true. The CIA reported: "There is no record of any utilization of Gordon Novel, Sergio Arcacha Smith or Evergreen Advertising Agency. In addition to Office of Security records, WH/CUBA, RID and CI Staff were checked for possible indication of operational involvement. Howard J, Osborn May 1, 1967."

In September 1961 Gordon Novel took part in the burglary of a Schlumberger munitions bunker. He informed the FBI:

Schlumberger Well Service had an arrangement with the CIA wherein it leased a bunker in which ammunition, bomb casings and other materiel would be stored for the CIA. Eventually the materiel would be shipped out of the United States in Schlumberger boxes marked 'Machinery.' The explosives would then be shipped by boat to Cuba where they were going to be used in a diversionary operation during the Bay of Pigs invasion.

The CIA verified Gordon Novel's statement:

Novel has claimed to the press that the munitions from the bunker were to be used for a diversionary operation during the Bay of Pigs invasion. Agency officers familiar with the operation at the reactivated Naval depot, the Belle Chasse Ammunition Depot, have indicated that such a diversionary operation was based at Belle Chase, but that operation was canceled before a landing was made. Any number of participating Cubans would be aware such a diversionary operation was planned.

After the Bay of Pigs, Schlumberger became upset and wanted out of its CIA contract; three months after the invasion, arrangements were made for the materiel stored in the bunker to be removed by Novel and his group. At the time the material was removed, an individual involved took some of Schlumberger's low grade powder and fuses and other material, and the incident was reported as a burglary.

(Gordon Novel had a previous history of assembling bombs). Gordon Novel said the crates of arms were stamped with the word INTERARMCO. [Police Record Jefferson Parish 1953; Memo Ivan/Garrison re: Novel rec. check; Flammonde Kennedy Conspiracy p76; Wardlaw Plot or Politics p113; New Orleans States-Item 4.25.67; HUNT Day p182 CIA 1332-502, 1045] Gordon Novel reported that Andrew Jerome Blackman, David Ferrie, Sergio Arcacha Smith, and Luis Rabel were involved in the burglary. In a telephone interview with this researcher, Luis Rabel denied he met David Ferrie or Guy Banister, but said he knew Sergio Arcacha Smith. Regarding the burglary,

Well, I used to run a dry cleaners, and I had a truck that I used to loan to about 40 or 50 exiles here. Arcacha asked me to loan him the truck to move some furniture. Whether the truck was used to move anything other than furniture is beyond me.

Gordon Novel told the press: "It was one of the most patriotic burglaries ever committed...the CIA virtually gave us the key to the bunker...my fellow burglar, Arcacha Smith, and I are still employed by the CIA." [FBI 62-109060-4789, 4707; NYT 4.5.67; New Orleans States-Item 4.25.67]

A company that marketed surveillance equipment reported in 1965 that Gordon Novel had placed an order with it using a fictitious address. Later that year, he appeared at the Lost and Found counter at New Orleans Airport to inquire about some misrouted bugging equipment. Gordon Novel explained to the FBI he had demonstrated the equipment to the State Department. On November 22, 1966, Gordon Novel was made an FBI Potential Criminal Informant. [FBI 62-109060-4707; FBI NO 137-2936] He furnished the FBI information on the Garrison investigation that indicated Jim Garrison was hostile to that agency. J. Edgar Hoover commented: "More & more it becomes evident we should stay as far away as we can from this shyster [New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison]."

At the beginning of Garrison's investigation in 1967, Gordon Novel had offered New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison his services; when he discovered he was to be called as a witness, however, he called the FBI and said he had watched the home of David Ferrie at 5:30 a.m. on the day David Ferrie was found dead, and had seen Jim Garrison leave the house. When Gordon Novel was interrogated by New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison about the munitions bunker operation, he called the New Orleans Domestic Contacts Division of the CIA for advice. He then fled to McLean, Virginia, where he took a lie detector test from retired Army Intelligence Agent and former policeman from the District of Columbia, Lloyd Furr. [CIA 1332, 502, 1045, 1316, 475D, 1345, 1057]

LLOYD FURR

The CIA reported that a Lewis B. Furr was connected with Willis Carto of Liberty Lobby. The brother of Lloyd Furr, La Vonne Boden Furr, was the managing editor of American Mercury. [CIA OS 407 890]

Lloyd Furr, a former District of Columbia policeman and now a private detective, is a self-proclaimed polygraph expert and sound device specialist. He has received publicity in the past for planting sound devices for the late Fulton Lewis Jr. in the St. Mary County Vice case in 1953 and in 1958, when he discovered listening devices being used against Bernard Goldfine. In 1964 information was received that a Washington, D.C. firm, REDEX, operated by Furr and Richard L. Bast was attempting to sell electronic equipment to Communist China via an agent in Hong Kong. (TSD had unclassified contract with FURR in 1962 to see equipment offered for sale by FURR.)

Richard L. Bast, a Washington, D.C. private detective, gained notoriety in 1965 by turning up a missing witness, previously unlocated by the Department of Justice, in connection with the Bobby Baker case. He is known to operate at least for enterprises 1) Capital Bureau of Investigation, a private detective agency; 2) REDEX VIETNAM, INC. A firm which imports a variety of commodities ranging from liquor to automobiles into South Vietnam, including, of late, U.S. recruited 'go-go' girls for a Saigon nightclub he is planning; 3) REDEX CORP, a firm which sells almost anything to anybody abroad other than South Vietnam and 4) Consolidated Armaments, a firm which sells small arms to foreign governments and private individuals abroad. Bast also produces and distributes both positive audio, and counter audio, devices in the U.S. and overseas. Bast, described as 'unscrupulous and untrustworthy,' is known to have attempted to contract with another private detective for planting a remote controlled bomb in the headquarters of the Haitian Secret Police, and has been reported to have undertaken similar extreme assignment for exile groups from Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

CA Staff has provided information that during January 1967 William W. Turner, who identified himself as a free lance writer, visited the offices of the Asia Foundation, requesting information for a magazine article. He stated that he had been asked by Sol Stern of New York to gather information for an article in The New York Times. During his visit, however, it became obvious that Turner was primed to ask questions about the financing of the foundation, rather than its actual purpose or activities. When Turner concluded his interview, he left a calling card with the firm name 'REDEX-PACIFIC.' He explained he had to have new cards printed. Turner, reportedly dismissed from the FBI in 1961, is noted to have authored an article in the November 1966 issue of Ramparts Magazine in which he describes alleged wiretapping, surreptitious entry etc. performed by him while in the FBI. Sol Stern, who he claimed to represent, is assistant managing editor of Ramparts Magazine. [CIA 1332-502/1045]

On April 29, 1963, Robert E. Owen, then Chief, WE/3, and now of (deleted as of 2010), directed a Memorandum to the Chief, Western Hemisphere/6, in which he documented a conversation he had with anti-Duvalier exile Raymond Cassagnol and Richard Bast. Robert E. Owen had been introduced to Richard Bast by his neighbor, Lloyd Furr. Robert E. Owen stated: "Bast, in spite of certain personal shortcomings from the intelligence standpoint, does represent an established channel to one segment of the Haitian opposition to Duvalier." The CIA claimed Richard Bast was linked with William Turner of Ramparts magazine. In 1967 the Domestic Contacts Division decided against using Richard Bast as a source of information on Asia. In the mid-1970's this researcher spoke with Richard Bast who stated: "Garrison liked to burn hooker's titties with cigarettes." The FBI reported: "On July 27, 1966, (Deleted as of 2010) advised District Attorney Garrison allegedly had purchased a bar in New Orleans and set up one Jackie Lee as manager. (Deleted as of 2010) Source also said that Garrison is known to have associated with prostitutes in New Orleans." [FBI NO 62-9-33-617]

NOVEL'S LETTER

In March 1967, after Gordon Novel fled New Orleans, the new tenant in his apartment found a letter written by him under the linoleum. This letter was obtained by The New Orleans States-Item. The note, written in Gordon Novel's handwriting, was seemingly addressed to his CIA contact:

Dear Mr. Weiss: This letter is to inform you that District [sic] Jim Garrison has subpoenaed myself and an associate to testify before this Grand Jury on matters which may be classified Top Secret. Actions of individuals connected with Double Chek Corporation in Miami in first quarter of 1961. Our connection and activity of that period involves individuals presently about to be indicted as conspirators in Mr. Garrison's investigation. We have temporarily avoided one subpoena...we want out of this thing before Thursday, March 1967...I have been questioned extensively by local FBI recently as to whether or not I was involved with Double Chek's parent holding corporation at the time. My reply on five queries was negative...Our attorneys and others are in possession of complete sealed files containing all information concerning matter. In the event of our sudden departure, either accidental or otherwise, they are instructed to simultaneously release same for public scrutiny...

At first the letter indicated Gordon Novel was afraid of Garrison, then it implied he was afraid of the CIA. Double Chek was a well-known CIA proprietary mentioned in The Invisible Government. The FBI Miami files contained Bulet November 12, 1964, captioned Obtuse: ESP - R', Bufile 105-126649. This letter points out that the CIA had previously advised Gibraltar Steamship Corporation, Vanguard Service Corporation, and the Double Check Corporation had been used by CIA, but operational interest in them was dropped after they were mentioned as CIA covers in the book entitled, 'The Invisible Government.'

The CIA maintained:

The (deleted) Double Check Corporation was not used by the CIA to recruit pilots for operations directed against the Castro Government as previously reported [by CIA liaison]. CIA did not become involved with Double Check Corporation (deleted) until after the Bay of Pigs invasion. After the unsuccessful invasion, CIA made arrangements (deleted) to use Double Check Corporation as a medium for compensating the 'Birmingham widows.' [FBI 61-109060-5361, 5315]

SEYMOUR WEISS

Seymour Weiss was a Director of Standard Fruit in 1963, who was connected with CARLOS MARCELLO and Frank Costello. According to Ed Becker, Standard Fruit, the International Cooperation Administration, and Johnny Rosselli, were involved in the overthrow of Jacobo Arbenz. [Ed Becker and Charles Rappleye, All American Mafioso, Doubleday, NY 1991 p225]

Gordon Novel was arrested in Ohio, where he was held on $10,000 bond pending extradition. Governor James Rhodes refused to sign the extradition papers for Gordon Novel. [Flammonde The Kennedy Conspiracy p100; New Orleans States-Item 4.22.67] In 1970 Gordon Novel was arrested on a charge of illegal interstate transportation of an eavesdropping device, and was subsequently convicted. In May 1967 Gordon Novel staged an assassination attempt on himself which was reported to Raymond Rocca. [FBI 62-109060-5085, 5309, 5905] In 1968, after a fight with his in-laws, Gordon Novel exhibited CIA credentials to the arresting officers. [FBI 62-109060-6859] On November 13, 1967 the FBI generated a letterhead memorandum about Novel after he contacted the Bureau and gave it a list of his clients: "Novel additionally advised that he sold one his antibugging checkmate units to Charles Costello whom he advised is connected with the Ace Vending Machine Corporation, Trenton, New Jersey and that the magnetic field loop of the device was installed in the ceiling of Costello's private office in Trenton, New Jersey. Distribution: November 28, 1967 Mr. McCord, Mr. Kane TSD and Mr [03 deleted as of 2010] (via Mr Deleted as of 2010 - 03)."

CHARLES COLSON AND GORDON NOVEL

In 1974 Jack Anderson reported that Charles Colson asked Gordon Novel to help him build a giant degaussing gun to erase tapes that incriminated NIXON, stored at a CIA site. Gordon Novel consulted with other experts, but they "mutually decided not to pursue the plan because of its danger to national security tapes and computers near the target area." Gordon Novel claimed association with NIXON and Governor John Connally. [True 4.75; Anderson NY Post 8.15.74] The FBI stated that Gordon Novel was involved with Morningstar Associates, "an organization with supposed connections to the CIA and Department of Defense."

In the summer of 1976 Gordon Novel and his partner, John Langford, were charged with possession of an incendiary device and aggravated arson. The men were involved an alleged plot to firebomb some property in the New Orleans Central Business District on Mardi Gras day, 1976, after attempts to purchase the property for $70 million had failed. Gordon Novel hired an undercover Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent who later admitted CIA ties to do the job. Jim Garrison represented Gordon Novel. During that prosecution, and just before it went to trial in state court Gordon Novel made a civil rights allegation to the FBI against a Drug Enforcement Administration agent in Dallas, alleging that the informant of the Drug Enforcement Administration agent had attempted to set up Gordon Novel by trying to get Gordon Novel to agree to contract for the murder of a witness against him. At his trial Gordon Novel testified the Agency was after him because of international arms dealing. The trial, covered extensively by Spotlight, ended in a hung jury. On October 30, 1976, the judge declared a mistrial.

When Gordon Novel failed to show up for his retrial, and claimed he suffered a heart attack on January 17, 1977, an Atlanta judge immediately had him arrested pending extradition to New Orleans. [New Orleans States-Item 2.25.77; Spotlight 2.14.77] HEMMING told this researcher:

Gordon Novel had White House connections during Iran/Contra. The guy was real. He knew Werbell.

STURGIS said in deposition in HUNT v. WEBERMAN that in 1977 he had a telephone conversation with Gordon Novel: "I never met him personally. I have spoke with him on the telephone, but I have never, I don't believe I ever met him personally." Gordon Novel was staying at the home of Mitch Werbell in 1977.

GORDON NOVEL AND FRANK BARTES

On November 19, 1976, Frank Bartes contacted the New Orleans FBI Office. He said that:

Beginning in 1975, Gordon Novel was introduced to Frank Bartes in New Orleans by a mutual acquaintance. Frank Bartes met Gordon Novel at Masson's Restaurant in the Summer of 1975, where Gordon Novel displayed for Frank Bartes an extensive array of all kinds of weapons, including conventional firearms, electronic equipment and even tanks and aircraft.

Frank Bartes again met with Gordon Novel in June 1976. During this conversation Gordon Novel told him that Congress was going to re-open the investigation of the Kennedy assassination and Gordon Novel hoped to blame the assassination on Fidel Castro. Frank Bartes told Gordon Novel that he had met Fidel Castro and had been photographed with him. Frank Bartes showed Gordon Novel the photo, after which Gordon Novel inquired if it would be feasible to superimpose OSWALD'S head on to one of the people in the photograph. When Gordon Novel was told that was impossible, he examined the photo, and said that one of the individuals in it resembled Clay Shaw.

On December 1, 1976, Gordon Novel called the FBI Office in New Orleans about his civil rights complaint against the Dallas Drug Enforcement Administration agent.

He stated he wanted to 'stir the waters' in order to get effective action. He said one step he had taken in order to force Federal action was his lengthy conversations with [Senator Schweiker], wherein Gordon Novel was promised the opportunity to testify at length before the committee that will reopen the Kennedy investigation. Gordon Novel said that his testimony could discredit Federal agencies, especially the CIA, showing how the CIA had engineered the assassination of the President. Gordon Novel said, 'Are you reading me?' [FBI 62-109060-7593, 7591X]

BARTES AND JIM GARRISON FROM BARTES CIA OS FILE

SUBJECT BARTES (CLARENS), Francisco Antonio aka Frank Bartes (See also Gerald Patrick Hemming) To date there has been no information which involves Frank Bartes, Cuban exile, in Garrison's investigation. However, as a New Orleans citizen who was prominent in Cuba, opposed to Castro, head of the Cuban Revolutionary Council in New Orleans, and known to GERALD PATRICK HEMMING and La Borde, he may be involved later. CIA connection: Subject, an alien, former President of Cuban Railways was approved for contact use in January 1961 and May 1967. The FBI interposed no objections to these contacts. He was to furnish information concerning Cuban railways. He was granted a Provisional Operational Approval on 4 January 1961 for contact and assessment for use on Project JMATE. This approval was cancelled 31 August 1961. On 7 October 1965 Subject was granted another POA for use an (deleted as of 2010). He was covertly investigated with favorable results and received a (deleted as of 2010). He returned to the United States on 11 February 1966 and his clearance was cancelled 28 October 1966. Source: Memorandum dated November 20, 1967 from CI/R&A and Enclosure 14 of Memorandum No. 5 dated August 7, 1967.

On March 15, 1968, Frank Bartes advised the FBI that his life was in danger as a result of the Garrison investigation. [FBI 62-109060-6267] During the Garrison investigation the CIA requested:

OS INDICES RESULTS

Subject is 47 years old (born September 14, 1960 in Havana Cuba). He was formerly President of Consolidated Railways of Cuba and also owned sugar and rice plantations. He left Cuba because of his opposition to Castro and entered the United States on January 4, 1961. An FBI report dated June 14, 1963 from New Orleans Louisiana concerned a visit by Bartes to the New Orleans FBI office in which he offered his services to the U.S. Government and said he would be willing to co-operate with the U.S. Government in any acceptable plan the U.S. might devise to combat Castro's government, with no thought of personal gain or favor. On December 20, 1966 Bartes called the New Orleans DCS office to inform that office that his mother had arrived from Cuba and would be willing to provide information. He also stated that a cousin, a 29 year old Cuban ballerina, Alicie Cruz Bustillo, not a Communist and still residing in Cuba. (deleted as of 2010) There is no record of Alicia Cruz Bustillo in OS indices and no indication that these offers were acceptable by the Agency.

THEORY OF THE DESTRUCTION OF GARRISON INVESTIGATION

Garrison investigated INTERPEN in relation to the Kennedy assassination. He questioned HEMMING. Jim Garrison indicted William David Ferrie, an acquaintance of OSWALD who was involved with the Cuban Revolutionary Front. The Cuban Revolutionary Front led to HUNT. He had indicted Gordon Novel, who tied in with Mitch Werbell. Mitch Werbell led to HEMMING and NIXON. He indicted Dean Andrews, who led to CARLOS MARCELLO. JACK RUBY'S toll records led to CARLOS MARCELLO. His investigation had the potential of solving the puzzle of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison even investigated the tramps. His investigation had to be stopped.

THE THEORY: PERRY RUSSO - CLOSET CASE

Perry Raymond Russo was dispatched by MARCELLO to sabotage the Garrison investigation. Perry Russo had a credible background. Born May 14, 1941, in New Orleans, the son of a machinist at Champion Piston Rings Service, Russo's mother died in 1963. During the Clay Shaw trial, Perry Russo admitted receiving psychiatric treatment from October 1959 through late 1960, having contacted by telephone, numerous doctors at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, which conversations he described dwelled on 'social and personal things.' [FBI 62-109060-4797] Perry Russo commented to this researcher,

That's not psychiatric treatment. I had Philosophy 101, or 202, to pass and I hadn't been studying - I'd been gerking off. I was looking for some way out. I went to the doctor, and played him, and said I was just really depressed and upset. So he said 'I'll give you a Withdrawal.' So I stayed with the guy for a year. It's not that big a thing.

Was Russo being treated for homosexuality? On March 23, 1967, a confidential source, who had furnished reliable information to the FBI in the past, volunteered the following information:

He said that Perry Russo is a known homosexual who used to frequent the 100 block of Royal Street, New Orleans, Louisiana. He said that Russo used to 'set up chickens,' young homosexuals, to engage in homosexual acts with individuals who are also homosexuals and wanted male acquaintances. He said that approximately five years ago, one such "chicken" engaged in homosexual activities with Dewey Bowman, believed to have worked for the Times-Picayune in New Orleans, Louisiana. He said that as a result of this chicken engaging his homosexual acts with Bowman, he (Perry Russo) was able to blackmail Bowman for an unknown sum of money. He said he was not aware of other activities on the part of Russo, but was sure that Russo had set up many other individuals. [FBI NO 89-69-1827, 1828; NARA 124-10237-10296]

In the summer of 1962 Perry Russo managed a Gulf gasoline station. In September 1962 Perry Russo attended Loyola University. He left Loyola in 1965. Russo left home in 1966, and moved to Baton Rouge in September 1966, to take position of salesman for Equitable Life Assurance Society. He was earlier employed in the financial division of General Electric. He claimed that his step brother was head of the engineering Department at Louisiana State University. The FBI received a report from Michael Ogden on March 14, 1967, to advise that he is acquainted with Perry Russo, having known him in connection with Republican activities in New Orleans and also because he, Ogden, is employed by the Equitable Life Assurance Company in New Orleans. Ogden stated that Perry Russo is a former bellhop, that Russo's mother died early, and that Russo's father threw him out of the house some years ago. Ogden said in his personal opinion, that Russo has no first hand information in the Garrison investigation. [FBI 62-109060-4797]

The FBI had no derogatory traces on Russo.

RUSSO "PLAYS" GARRISON

In 1967 Perry Russo, who claimed to have known David Ferrie since 1960, appeared at New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's office. Perry Russo worked at the Credit Financial Division of the General Electric Company at the time. He recounted to investigators a visit to David Ferrie in September 1963, when he was introduced to "LEON OSWALD" and "Clay Bertrand." Perry Russo alleged David Ferrie, OSWALD, and Clay Bertrand discussed a number of alternative means of assassinating President Kennedy without risk of apprehension.

Why would these men have discussed sensitive matters in front of Perry Russo? New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison sought a witness, so he accepted the fabrication of Perry Russo. Perry Russo conveyed his uncertainty as to whether LEON and LEE OSWALD were the same person. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison had Doctor Nicholas Chetta inject Perry Russo with sodium Pentothal. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison questioned Perry Russo after the injection, but Perry Russo was unable to discern whether Leon and LEE OSWALD were the same person. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison then had Dr. Esmond Fatter hypnotize Perry Russo; during the trance, he said LEON OSWALD and LEE OSWALD were the same. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison believed Perry Russo because his testimony was elicited with such difficulty, it was unlikely he was lying. Contacted in August 1993, Perry Russo stated to this researcher:

Garrison investigator Vincent Sciambre said, 'I would like you to look at these photographs and identify anyone you know.' We went through 20 or 30 photographs and finally we came to David Ferrie and Clay Shaw and I said, I knew him. His name was Clem Bertram. He didn't write out a memo about the interview. When I met OSWALD he was sitting, cleaning his rifle. He said, 'What the fuck you doin' here?' Ferrie jumped in between us and I said, 'Fuck you man!' Ferrie told OSWALD, 'He's a friend of mine, don't mind him.'

George Lardner wrote that Perry Russo said David Ferrie had spoken of flying to Cuba after the murder. Perry Russo: "He said, 'I'm a pilot, I can get people out. But you'd have to go to a place where there's no extradition.' He mentioned flying to Mexico and then on to Brazil. I don't know where they got the Cuba thing. They were after Fidel's ass. Ferrie controlled everything, all the time. He was a very conscientious person, aware of what he was doing, and why he doing it, his own mystical motives.

I first met Ferrie by happenstance back in 1960, 1961 when I had a sand lot basketball team. The parents of Al Landry told me, 'Some fruit, some fuckin' queer, kidnapped my son. His name is David Ferrie.' Their son had told me about Ferrie some months earlier. I said I'd wedge little Al away from Ferrie. Al Landry pops in one night. I says, 'Al, where the fuck you been?' I forgave him. He was going back to school and staying with Ferrie. I went to a Civil Air Patrol meeting and met Ferrie. Then I went to Ferrie's home where he had a medical lab and flight simulator.

Perry Russo claimed he had taken Sandra Moffett to the home of David Ferrie. Sandra Moffett said she was not there in 1963, and had not met David Ferrie until 1965. [CIA 1427-492-V] Perry Russo commented:

I'm not sure at this point because of her adamant position on that, whether or not she was in fact there. It could have not been her. Sandra and I date back for a number of years. The period was turbulent. She was in love with me, I wasn't with her. She was a prostitute and street broad, not very bright.

CLAY SHAW

Perry Russo told New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison Clay Bertrand was Clay Shaw (CIA Office of Security #E 402897-A), a gay, New Orleans, businessman. Perry Russo became the star witness against Clay Shaw. Clay Shaw came from a distinguished New Orleans family. During World War II he was a Major in the United States Army and received the Croix De Guerre of France, and the Legion of Merit and the Bronze Star from the United States. Following the war, he returned to New Orleans in 1946, at which time he became the Managing Director of the International Trade Center. The FBI reported:

A check of our files disclosed that we received allegations as early as 1954 that Shaw was a homosexual. (Deleted as of 2010) advised on (Deleted) 1964, that he had relations of a homosexual nature with Clay Shaw. The informant described Shaw was a brilliant and powerful man, given to sadism and masochism in his homosexual activities. [FBI 62-109060-4608] political parties that opposed the Communists. Senator Otis Pike reported that, since its inception in 1947, the CIA had secretly funneled $75 million to anti-Communist Italian political parties. The CIA claimed Clay Shaw was never in Italy and "was never asked to use his relationship with the International Trade Center for clandestine purposes." [CIA 1430-492-Y] CIA documents indicated the CIA file on Clay Shaw "was opened in February 1949, on a request by the Domestic Contacts Division" for "a three way (FBI, PD and MID) name check. When the check was completed, an unknown case officer received a formalized statement of the results." The CIA continued:

Shaw was in contact with the New Orleans CIA seven times in 1949, twice in 1950, five times in 1951, nine times in 1952, once in 1953, twice in 1954, twice in 1955, and twice in 1956. On May 9, 1961, Clay Shaw introduced the then CIA Deputy Director, General Charles Cabell, who gave a speech to the New Orleans Foreign Policy Association. Clay Shaw may have been seen causally or at a latter date...

The CIA skirted the issue of Clay Shaw's "remuneration and his alleged cessation of his CIA relationship," nonetheless, this document suggested many CIA contacts, but did not support New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's belief that Clay Shaw was a CIA employee. [NYT 1.20.76; Flammonde Kennedy Conspiracy - Shaw; FBI 62-109060-6057 p10 citing Ramparts article; Miami Herald 5.17.76; CIA 1339-1053, 1326-1042, 1234-519] Victor Marchetti reported the CIA voiced serious concern that Clay Shaw's connection to the CIA could be exposed. Richard Helms decided that the Agency's relationship with Clay Shaw remain inviolable. A 201 file was opened on New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison on May 28, 1968. "From (Deleted) Office CI/ R & A Room 2029 Garrison, James 201-834821 Action Desk CI R & A Secondary Office CIOPS/DO. Signature of Requester (deleted)." [NARA 1993.08.02.13:06:54:310060; interview with Victor Marchetti by this researcher in 1974; True 4.75]

THE CLAY SHAW TRIAL

When Clay Shaw was brought to trial in early 1969, Perry Russo still put OSWALD, David Ferrie, and Clay Shaw together, but described their meeting as a "bull session" rather than a criminal conspiracy. Perry Russo told this researcher:

Shaw's defense attorney asked, 'What you are sayin' in essence is that these people got together just like so many other conversations you heard in all the racial discord, in all the political upheavals going on in New Orleans in 1963, just like any other bull session? Could you depict it in that way?' I said 'In a certain way it was a bull session.'

BURGLARY

In 1970 Perry Russo was arrested for three counts of burglary.

Russo Charged With Holding Stolen Goods - The District Attorney's office has accepted a charge of possession of stolen property against Perry Raymond Russo, but has refused a charge of simple burglary. Russo was arrested on August 22, 1970 and booked with simple burglary of a residence at 4760 Overton Drive, in which property valued at $8,400 was stolen. The charge against Russo, 5807 Elysian Fields, involves the possession of a stolen safety box key. The key belong to Alvin E. Fontcuberta of the Overton Drive address. Carl E. Moore, 29, also of 5807 Elysian Fields, was booked with burglary, but that charge too was dropped by First Assistant D.A. James Alcock. Moore was charged, however, with possession of a stolen motorcycle valued at $2,000. [New Orleans States Item 9.1.70]

Russo commented to this researcher,

Two boys in the basketball team I had at the time were burglars. One night they came over and said, 'Look what we got. We just burglarized this place.' I'm not a crusader. I said, 'This was stolen. Get the fuck out of here. You all fucking crazy? That's junk - you didn't even steal anything good - so they put it back in the bag. There was left, inadvertently, a safety deposit box key with the guys name on it. Engraved. That I didn't notice. And low and behold the police caught 'em, and they fingered me. The police came over and I told them who the third kid was. A policeman picks up the safety deposit box key and sees this guy's name. I'm charged with possession of stolen property. The judge was one of New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's arch enemies. I was convicted. The conviction was later overturned. It was never re-tried. I been in trouble after this for possession of pills. I've seen heroin once. I've seen crack two or three times. I've seen coke 20 or 30 times. I drive a cab. I've done diet pills for 20 years. No doctors have written amphetamine prescriptions here in two years. Am I an A-Head? I have to go get 30 pills a day to - I weigh 252 pounds. So what the fuck are we talkin' about? Amphetamine addict? It's medical therapy. The government says that amphetamines do not hold any long term effect in keeping weight down. It's not acceptable therapy anymore. I'm poppin' 'em one a day. It's not abuse. I'm not guzzling pills.

POSSESSION OF HEROIN

On May 1, 1974, Perry Russo was arrested for possession of heroin. His bond was set at $3,500. The New Orleans States Item reported that

...police said they questioned three males outside of the Carib Motel, where Russo was staying, about 2:45 a.m. Tuesday. Officers said they noticed the three, including one juvenile, as they were getting out of a cab which Russo was driving. They told detectives that they had been riding in the camp for several hours, and the driver had invited them to his motel room. The officers said Russo, of 214 Canal in Metairie, admitted them to the motel room, where they found three prescription bottles containing capsules of various colors, and two small tinfoil squares. Police booked Russo with possession of heroin, amphetamines and barbiturates and contributing to the delinquency of the juvenile. Russo was released from the Central Lockup after posting $3,500 bond." [New Orleans Times Picayune 5.1.74]

Perry Russo explained to this researcher,

I was arrested in a motel room and on my possession - according to the police report - was found desoxins [methamphetamine]. A diet pill. I used to like those, and I had doctor's prescription for it. The police asked me if they could check the room. They found metal foil bags of white powder and one red capsule in the drapes. It was a Mexican Red, Seconal. I said the stuff in the foil could be heroin or crank - bathtub speed. They also charged me with possession of a Dexamil capsule. The heroin was sent to the lab. It was nothing. It might have been there ten years. I produced a doctors prescription, and the D.A.'s office didn't pursue it.

The MARCELLO family was in the drug business. [Orleans Times-Picayune 5.1.74] Perry Russo commented to this researcher,

I had two encounters with the MARCELLO family. The J.C.s, or one of the groups up there, a service organization, asked me if I would talk to their group about the Garrison investigation. It was hot news around Baton Rouge - I was living there at the time. I spoke to one group on Thursday and on a Saturday, 50 or 60 men. The MARCELLOS came to the Saturday meeting. CARLOS MARCELLO had been constantly in the newspapers for punching out an FBI agent. I quickly changed the speech around, the outline of it, to not touch the subject of the mafia. VINCENT, and one of his brothers, or friends, just stood there in the door. It was supposed to be a closed meeting. They must have heard me saying that CARLOS was the logical choice for motivation. Just a general bullshit session. I talked about the mafia in my first speech. I wrote a letter to Dean Andrews, who was CARLOS MARCELLO'S counsel of record, saying that I would never, ever, say it again. I wasn't interested in speculating in that area.

Even inconsequential information was deleted from CIA documents concerning Perry Russo. [UPI Disp. N.O. 8.24.70; CIA 1233-518, 1359-503] Perry Russo was told by this interviewer that it was obvious someone had "put him up to" testifying against Clay Shaw: "Well you have to take it with that particular spin, I can't argue with that. But Garrison didn't put me up to it." He was asked, "Was it somebody who could supply you with drugs?"

That's a good spin, but it doesn't work. There's nothing wrong with what you are saying. That's a speculation, and if you were to write a book, and you would put it in, it would be logical and it would make sense. But in the real world it doesn't. What you are trying to say here, in this bit of the conversation, right now, is that somebody is holding something over on me, and since I have a clean background, in the sense of born in 1941 and the FBI has no tell tale secrets of sorts, and I'm opting for these different careers. Something in there... Somebody's holdin' something over me, and they're now feeding me a way that that code doesn't have any pressure. If it's gay, if its drugs...they got a handle. That handle would be softened if I go along with, or produce, this information.

DID DAVID FERRIE KNOW CLAY SHAW?

Layton Martens was listed in the address book of Clay Shaw, and Clay Shaw may have known David Ferrie. The FBI reported:

(Deleted as of 2010) advised March 5, 1967, that Aura Lee (LNU) Clay Shaw's former Secretary at the International Trade Mart, New Orleans, who is employed by the heart fund at the Ochsner Clinic, stated in front of Doctor Charles B. Moore and others at Ochsner Hospital, after Shaw's press conference where he advised he never met David Ferrie, that she had seen Ferrie go into Shaw's office in the International Trade Mart Building on a number of occasions, and believed Ferrie had privileged entry into Shaw's office.

[FBI-62-109060-NR 3.9.67] A confidential source advised the New Orleans FBI on April 24, 1968, that New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison believed: "Dr. Alton Ochsner was involved in the Kennedy assassination conspiracy. According to the source, Garrison bases his belief on the fact that Dr. Ochsner was closely involved with the Cuban element in New Orleans prior to Kennedy's assassination."

THE CLINTON WITNESSES

During the Garrison investigation, several witnesses from Clinton, Louisiana, put OSWALD, Clay Shaw, and David Ferrie together. None of them told this to the Warren Commission, or to the FBI, in 1964. These witnesses said that in late summer of 1963, OSWALD appeared at East Louisiana State Mental Hospital in Jackson in search of work as an electrician.

BOBBIE DEDON

Bobbie Dedon was a nurse's aide who claimed he directed OSWALD to the Personnel Office. Bobbie Dedon admitted he was aware of the Warren Commission, but never paid much attention to it, so he did not come forward with the story in 1964. He never reported seeing OSWALD to the FBI, nor did he speak with any friends about it.

MAXINE KEMP

Secretary Maxine Kemp reported speaking with OSWALD at East Louisiana State Mental Hospital. She said he never filled out a job application form. Another secretary at the hospital told of seeing OSWALD as well, but produced no evidence of the visit. Neither of these ladies reported the incident to the FBI in 1963 or 1964.

EDWIN McGEHEE

OSWALD allegedly stopped at the barber shop of Edwin McGehee. Office of Security CIA traces on Edwin McGehee were deleted. [CIA FOIA #41234] Edwin McGehee had a Top Secret Naval clearance as a cryptographer. Edwin McGehee told the HSCA OSWALD was in his shop that day asking about a job, and he referred him to Reeves Morgan. Edwin McGehee testified: "When this took place there was a picture on my wall of Martin Luther King at a Communist Training School, I said, 'This guy is going - we'll probably get into an argument about something. He's probably here for that [voter] registration thing.'" After the assassination, Edwin McGehee spoke with Louisiana State Representative, Reeves Morgan, and Voter Registrar, Henry Earl Palmer, about OSWALD: "I didn't call [the FBI] because Mr. Reeves Morgan told me he had called the FBI, and I thought there was no need of me doing it." The FBI had all of its agents in Baton Rouge sign sworn statements which stated that they never received a call from Reeves Morgan. [FBI NO 89-69-380-8b; Reeves, Morgan 504-634-2239] A document titled "Reports and Memoranda Furnished Justice Department Concerning John Manchester, Henry E. Palmer, Corrie C. Collins and Reeves Morgan" [2.10.69]"

1. Report of SA Michael Baron dated 8/9/63 at New Orleans entitled, "Henry Earl Palmer, Registrar of Voters, East Feliciana Parish, Clinton, Louisiana; John B. Manchester, Town Marshall, Clinton, Louisiana, Special Deputy, East Feliciana Parish Louisiana, Michael Stephan Lesser – Victim; Civil Rights" which was forwarded to the Civil Rights Division of the Department on August 15, 1963.

4. LHM dated May 31, 1966 at New Orleans entitled, "John Britton Manchester" which was furnished the Internal Security and Civil Rights Divisions of the Justice Department wherein Manchester is identified as a member of the Clinton Unit of the Ku Klux Klan.

5. Reports of SA Michael Baron, all made at New Orleans and all entitled, "Henry Earl Palmer, Racial Matters (Klan) dated May 5, 1965, September 17, 1965 and April 23, 1966. Each of these was furnished to the Civil Rights and Internal Security Divisions of the Department of Justice. Palmer was identified in August 1964 as Exalted Cyclops of the Clinton Unit of the Ku Klux Klan as reported in the May 5, 1965 report.

6. Palmer was mentioned in our memorandum dated May 23, 1960 at New Orleans entitled "Inspection and Copying of Voter Registration Records, East Feliciana Parish, Louisiana; Election Laws." He was also mentioned in the report of SA Milton R. Kaack dated May 24, 1960 at New Orleans, same title as above...He was also mentioned in the memo of August 12, 1965 made at New Orleans entitled, "Discrimination in Voter Inspection in Copying Voter Registration Records, East Feliciana Parish."

Edwin McGehee, the Voter Registrar of Jackson, Louisiana, was contacted by telephone in May 1993 by this researcher and asked why he had waited until 1967 before he came forward:

He come in my barber shop to get a haircut, and he wanted a job. He said, 'A barber shop's a good place for information' and he wanted a job at the hospital over there. He kept on talkin.' I said well, this guy seems like he really wants a job, so I told him to become a registered voter. I told him to go see Representative Reeves Morgan. When Reeves and I met after the shootin' at the barber shop I said, 'Reeves, OSWALD been out to your place once, I remember seein' him?' He says 'Yeah he come out there. I got his name in my wallet - OSWALD.' So anyway, I says, 'We need to tell somebody.' He says 'I already called the FBI and they were well aware he was in the area.' Now what more could we do? When you tell the FBI - I mean we law-biding citizens - what else can you do?

Edwin McGehee was asked: "You spoke with Henry Earl Palmer. Did you know he was a Klansman?" Edwin McGehee replied: "I knew him. I got his job. I didn't know he was in the Klan...I can't speak for him...I asked Reeves, I said 'You got to call somebody.' He said 'Call the FBI.' And boy, that was the end, I dropped it." When it was pointed out to Edwin McGehee that the FBI had no record of that call, he stated: "Well it sounds like a cover up to me."

REEVES MORGAN

Louisiana State Representative Reeves Morgan told the HSCA:

Well, I was sitting down relaxing in my front room, and he came knocked on the door. I let him in. Well, he came and introduced himself as OSWALD, and then sat down and told me what he came for, and to get me to use my influence to help him get a job over at the East Louisiana State Hospital as an electrician; he told me he knew there was a vacancy over there. Well, I told him I didn't know there was a vacancy over there...I called the FBI. They are the only ones I ever related it to. It might have been the same day, it might have been the next day, after I recognized the picture and the name. I don't remember who it was I talked to. I believe I looked in the phone book to get their number. I don't remember how I got it. Well, the fellow I talked to thanked me, but said, 'We already knew he had been up in those parts.' He didn't say he knew he had been to my house. Sometimes afterward, several days or so, I received a call from them and they wanted to know what kind of clothes he had on; whoever it was called me from the FBI, said they was calling from the FBI, Federal Investigation, or whatever they said. But it was from the FBI really. I didn't bother about [contacting the Warren Commission]. I figured I went as far as I wanted to go. If they wanted to know anymore, I figured they'd contact me. My testimony [during the Clay Shaw trial] kind of insinuated that I wanted him to register in [Clinton], when I didn't tell him anything about where to register.

Reeves Morgan, 78, had a stroke and was hospitalized in 1993. His grand-daughter, Marguerite Morgan, explained that when Reeves Morgan went to the FBI with his story the Bureau prevailed upon him not to make it public. She added, "My grandfather is an old-style Louisiana politician who worked with Huey Long, a friend of the Long family. He started in St. Helena Parish where he ran a dairy. He was elected to the State Senate in the late 1950's." Marguerite Morgan was sent the FBI documents linking the Clinton witnesses to the Klan. She addressed her dilemma:

My grandfather's not talking about it. It upsets him too much. I really do not know what to think about it, because I kind of asked around a little bit and, how can I put this, enough of what you are saying is true that I don't want to get involved at all. It's my family.

New Orleans FBI files revealed that Reeves Morgan was one of the Subjects of an investigation in August 1963, in the case entitled, 'Joseph Stephen Breitung, et. al; Ester Lee Daniel et. al. - Victims; Cr, Bufile 44-22905, New Orleans file 44-1862. This case involved complaints of numerous victims that their employment was terminated because of voter registration activity. Reeves Morgan, upon interview, denied termination of employment of one of the victims because of voter registration activity."

HENRY EARL PALMER

OSWALD did not reside in the Jackson/Clinton area, and legally, was not supposed to register there. The registrar, Henry Earl Palmer, allegedly apprised him of this. Henry Earl Palmer was a member of the Ku Klux Klan; in 1964, he became an Exalted Cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan. CIA Office of Security traces were deleted in a document about Henry Earl Palmer. Henry Earl Palmer testified before the HSCA:

I opened the office about 8:30 a.m. When I went out, there were two white males in line with the blacks...We had a test at the time we were giving them, and they also had to prove they were Parish residents. Corrie Collins [was there]...OSWALD was - the reason I thought he might be a CORE worker was because he was dressed as the CORE did, with a T-shirt, tennis shoes and pants. He was clean: he wasn't dirty like most of the CORE workers. And he came in; I asked him for identification and he showed me - it wasn't a discharge, but a Marine Corps separation paper, and it had the address on it ten something Camp Street, New Orleans. So I asked him where he lived. He told me he lived at the East Louisiana State [Mental] Hospital. And I asked him who he lived with? I think he said 'Dr. Pierson.' I asked him why he wanted to register, and he said he wanted a job at Jackson. I said, 'Well, you don't have to be a registered voter in this parish; you can register in New Orleans and get a job over here. In fact you don't have to be registered at all in order to get a job at Jackson.' He thanked me and left." Henry Earl Palmer knew Edwin McGehee and Reeves Morgan but claimed he did not discuss OSWALD with them. He explained why he failed to contact the FBI: "I had too much trouble with the FBI and the Justice Department with the Voter Registration thing, and I wanted nothing to do with them.

Henry Earl Palmer cited another witness to OSWALD'S presence - who was dead - then said he met Guy Banister in the Army: "I saw Guy one time at the Legislature down here - I think it was in 1960." Henry Earl Palmer died in October 1982, at age 78. [CIA FOIA #41235]

JOHN MANCHESTER

John Manchester, the Town Marshall of Clinton, testified that he had seen OSWALD at a "Negro voter registration drive." John Manchester, who related he was on duty there, "to keep out outside agitators," was a Klan member who had made headlines when he arrested a CORE worker on August 28, 1963. During his HSCA testimony he stated:

I often thought about contacting the Warren Commission or somebody on this, but I felt if I did I would just be - I felt like they knew what they were doing and if they didn't feel like this incident in Clinton was important, then I didn't feel it was important...There was a discussion around the whole Parish, that he had been seen in the Parish.

CIA Office of Security traces on John Manchester were deleted and part of his HSCA testimony was withheld. [CIA FOIA #41232] New Orleans FBI files revealed:

John Manchester was the Subject of a case in August 1963 entitled, 'Henry Earl Palmer, et. al; Michael Stephen Lesser - Victim; CR; Bufile 44-22889, New Orleans file 44-1852. This case involved the arrest of Lesser, a CORE worker, by Manchester in August 1963, at Clinton, after Manchester had been instructed to do so by Palmer, who was the registrar of Voters, because Lesser would not leave the courthouse. Lesser had been bringing Negroes to register to vote. In February 1964, and again in January 1966, information was received from a source who had furnished reliable information in the past that Manchester was a member of the Klan in the Clinton, Louisiana area. [FBI NO 89-69 p11]

CORRIE C. COLLINS

Witness Corrie C. Collins was an African-American mail carrier and chairman of the East Feliciana chapter of CORE who was working "to register as many colored voters" as he could. Corrie Collins said he joined the civil rights movement after Henry Earl Palmer disqualified him as a voter when he "failed a voter registration test." Corrie Collins "Knew [John Manchester] very well, we didn't socialize...I spent most of our association outfoxing him. He was only the Town Marshall - the Sheriff was the boss. I knew him very well, even worked for him when I first came home from Vietnam." Corrie Collins also worked at East Louisiana State Hospital. The Office of Security traces of Corrie Collins were deleted from a CIA document. [CIA FOIA #41321] In September 1963 local officials attempted to have Corie Collins placed under an injunction prohibiting actions of CORE. Newspaper articles revealed that during this time Corrie Collins had been arrested by local authorities at Clinton, on occasions, and during civil rights activity. On January 31, 1968, Corrie Collins told New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison he and Verla Bell had seen OSWALD at the rally. Verla Bell could not identify OSWALD as having been present. The HSCA attempted to locate Corrie Collins. After finding several false addresses, he was located in Highland Park, Michigan, and asked why he had not told the FBI about OSWALD in November 1963: "At first I remembered seeing him, but could not remember where I saw him; besides there wasn't an FBI connection in Clinton, and I saw no reason to say anything to anyone."

WILLIAM E. DUNN

CORE worker William E. Dunn told the HSCA that he also had seen OSWALD in Clinton that day, but had not reported it to the FBI or the Warren Commission. William E. Dunn was a friend of Corrie Collins.

In a memorandum of January 22, 1968, Andrew Sciambra writes, "Mr. Palmer informed me that John Manchester has recently told him that right around the time the black Cadillac was in Clinton, he remembers seeing a boy who fit Oswald's description coming out of a CORE meeting in Clinton and when he left the CORE meeting, Manchester followed him and the car went in the direction of Jackson, Louisiana." [Andrew Sciambra, January 22, 1968, Memorandum to Jim Garrison] The Louisiana Klan also had no love for Clay Shaw. The prominent New Orleans liberal was close friends with philanthropists Edgar and Edith Stern, who contributed generously to liberal causes and were vocal in their support of the civil rights movement. The Sterns were reputed to be ardent supporters of the Anti-Defamation League.

William E. Dunn, Corrie Collins, Henry Earl Palmer and John Manchester testified to the HSCA that OSWALD was in Clinton - along with David Ferrie and Clay Shaw. Why did the Klan and CORE agree? During this period, CORE had been infiltrated by many different entities, including the Minutemen. Robert DePugh explained: "If a Negro wants to join the Minutemen, I tell him frankly: 'Well friend, you can be of real value to us due to your racial background. If you will have a very loose connection with us and keep your membership very secret then you can probably successfully join CORE and the information you provide us will be of real service.'" [Turner Ramparts 1.67] What is more likely is that both the Black radicals in CORE and the KKK agreed on one thing – they both hated the FBI.

There were eight Clinton witnesses - yet none went to the FBI with the story. At least two of these witnesses were connected to the Klan. If OSWALD was present during a CORE voter registration rally, after November 22, 1963, the Klansmen would have labeled him a Communist agitator behind racial unrest and exploited this association. They would not have waited three years to reveal the presence of "that nigger-lover, LEE HARVEY OSWALD" at a CORE rally. Why didn't the Klansmen witnesses mention it to other Klansmen? In 1963 the FBI targeted the Klan, and had an agent or informant in every Klavern. Why were there no reports generated by FBI agents, or informants, about OSWALD'S appearance at the voting rights rally? Although the HSCA reviewed the FBI reports that linked two Clinton witnesses to the Ku Klux Klan, it concluded: "The Clinton witnesses were credible and significant. While there were points that could be raised to call into question their credibility, it was the judgment of the HSCA that they were telling the truth as they knew it."

The Clinton witnesses testified at the Clay Shaw trial. CARLOS MARCELLO, a racist, was closely connected with the Louisiana Klan. In 1967 Life magazine reported: "CARLOS MARCELLO controls gambling and vice with muscle provided by the Ku Klux Klan." In 1967 Klansman Jack Helm was called before a Grand Jury in East Baton Rouge, Louisiana, that was investigating organized crime. [Times-Pic. 10.12.67] There was no hard evidence, however, that CARLOS MARCELLO bought the testimony of these witnesses.

VERNON BUNDY

Perhaps the least credible of all the New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's witnesses was Vernon Bundy, a black heroin addict, who testified that he saw OSWALD and Clay Shaw together in 1963, while he was injecting himself with heroin. Vernon Bundy was in prison for a parole violation when he made this statement. Vernon Bundy told his fellow cons he was going to give perjured testimony against Clay Shaw to obtain his freedom.

WILLIAM DALZELL

During the Clay Shaw investigation, New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison questioned and subpoenaed William Dalzell. The FBI commented: "It is not known why Dalzell is appearing before the Grand Jury in connection with Garrison's case. We received no information during our assassination investigation that Dalzell was ever acquainted with OSWALD, or involved in any manner with the Kennedy assassination." [FBI 62-109060-5838] On November 3, 1967, William Dalzell testified before a New Orleans Grand Jury. He was represented by Gordon Novel's lawyer, Steven Plotkin.

THE "CASE" AGAINST CLAY SHAW

New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison assembled a case against Clay Shaw complete with secret codes, addresses similar to those in OSWALD'S address book, and jailhouse informers. Clay Shaw denied any CIA-connection and was acquitted. When Shaw was indicted, Jack S. Martin told S.A. Regis Kennedy that Clay Shaw was being framed. Clay Shaw was chosen for the role of scapegoat by CARLOS MARCELLO because he was gay. David Ferrie, who New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison connected to Oswald, was also gay. Clay Shaw was connected to the CIA. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison believed the CIA was involved in the assassination. Clay Shaw died on August 15, 1974,. No autopsy was performed. [FBI 62-109060-6712, 62-109060-6737]

THE FBI AND THE GARRISON INVESTIGATION GARRISON AND MARCELLO

The FBI:

Bureau files reveal James C. Garrison was born November 20, 1921, Iowa. He attended elementary and high school in New Orleans and received his LL.B. degree from Tulane University in 1949. He was admitted to the Louisiana State Bar in June 1949. He served in the U.S. Army from January 1941 to March 1946, both as an enlisted man and officer. He was honorably discharged. He was a former Bureau Agent who entered on duty March 5, 1951, and resigned July 24, 1951, for military purposes. His services were listed as satisfactory. He took office as District Attorney in New Orleans in May 1962, and immediately became involved in a dispute with the New Orleans Police Department over his professed desire to clean up the so-called 'minor vice' in New Orleans. On November 1, 1962, and on November 2, 1962, the New Orleans Times-Picayune carried statements by Garrison charging that the parish-criminal court judges were clogging up the city jails and delaying justice by taking excessive vacation periods. Following such charges, the judges involved instituted a joint defamation suit against him. He was found guilty of such charges on February 6, 1963, and was fined $1,000. He appealed his conviction on November 24, 1964, holding that the element of deliberate malice was lacking in his the statements attributed to Garrison. [FBI 62-109060-4516, 4620]

His conviction was reversed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison and CARLOS MARCELLO began to have cordial relations. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison was not only a friend of SAM MARCELLO, but he accepted gifts from his associates. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison overlooked the connection of Dean Andrews to CARLOS MARCELLO. The syndicate enjoyed relative immunity in New Orleans during New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's term; he told a national television audience CARLOS MARCELLO was a respectable businessman. The FBI released numerous documents linking New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison to CARLOS MARCELLO. The FBI reported that

(Deleted as of 2010) advised on October 21, 1966, he had learned that CARLOS MARCELLO, on at least one occasion in the past, had paid round-trip air transportation for Garrison to Las Vegas, Nevada. Garrison, while in Las Vegas, stays at the Desert Inn Hotel and his bills are paid by that hotel. [Branigan to Sullivan FBI 62-109060-4620 2.23.67]

One of CARLOS MARCELLO'S bagmen died of a heart attack in New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's home. A Weekly Summary from the Criminal Intelligence Program of the Justice Department, New Orleans Division, reported that an associate of CARLOS MARCELLO arranged a line of credit for New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison in a Las Vegas casino. A confidential informant advised the FBI that MARCELLO-associate Frank Occhipinti owned the construction company which built New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's new home. Frank Occhipinti and his brother, Roy Occhipinti, were listed as major stockholders in the Town and Country Motel when it opened on July 9, 1958. [FBI NO 92/36/(deleted)]. According to the FBI, New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's new house cost $70,000, in addition to the $25,000 he spent on furniture. Since New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison said he was destitute at the time he took office, the Bureau wondered where the money came from. The FBI collected information on Garrison's activities with sex deviates...Garrison is involved in a big 'shakedown' racket wherein he and a couple of others are 'shaking down' hundreds of sex deviates in the New Orleans French Quarter. Manning states he also has information indicating that Garrison might himself be a sex deviate, or at least he is a participant in some deviant activities with homosexuals.

Many of the teletypes of J. Edgar Hoover regarding Jim Garrison were highly deleted. [FBI 62-109060-4612, 4613, 4501, 4366, 4586, 4620, 5954, 4748; Memo FBI 62-109060 Jones/Wick 2.28.67]

THE CIA AND THE GARRISON INVESTIGATION

The CIA watched New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's investigation. Joseph Goodwin was in charge of PROJECT RESISTANCE, the CIA's effort to counter Jim Garrison's charges. [CIA 1332, 502, 1045, 1316, 475D] PROJECT RESISTANCE was supposed to counter physical threats to CIA installations but it was used against Garrison anyway.

The Counter-Intelligence officials at the CIA generated a series of Memoranda about the Garrison investigation. Memorandum No. 2 [CIA 1433-492-AB] dated May 8, 1967, contained enclosures that were CIA traces on the individuals involved in the Garrison investigation. Clay Shaw's Enclosure contained numerous deletions. [CIA 1430-492-Y] Memorandum No. 5 [CIA 1233-518] concerned Clay Shaw and Perry Russo and was dated August 7, 1967. This researcher's copy, declassified in February 1977, contained numerous deletions. Memorandum No. 6, [CIA 1345-1057] dated September 7, 1967, was also highly deleted. On January 12, 1968, the CIA reported in Memorandum No. 8 that out of 30 men named in the Garrison investigation, eight had DDP ties, and eight more had ties to the Domestic Contacts Division: "DDP contacts are the following:

B. Frank Bartes. Garrison is reportedly trying to implicate him in the 'assassination plot.' He has been both a DDP, and a Domestic Contacts Division contact.

C. Leslie Norman Bradley.

D. Sergio Arcacha Smith. Involvement in Garrison's investigation: Sergio Arcacha Smith was identified to one of Garrison's staff as head of a Cuban organization which employed Lawrence Joseph La Borde and others. La Borde's son, Michael, also said that his father worked for the CIA. DDP relationship: Sergio Arcacha Smith had been a contact of the Miami Station from December 1960 to the present, although payment ceased on December 1, 1965.

E. Lawrence J. La Borde. Involvement in Garrison's investigation: On May 11, 1967, Lawrence La Borde telephoned the Domestic Contacts Office in New Orleans, said that he was an ex-CIA employee, added that he feared Garrison would subpoena him, and requested assistance or advice. Michael La Borde, the son of Lawrence, has told members of Garrison's staff that his father was associated with Alberto Fernandez (see preceding subparagraph) and with GERALD PATRICK HEMMING and one 'Roy' (perhaps LeRoy Collins) in training Cubans as guerilla warfare fighters. Michael La Borde has also implicated CIA in this training. On September 27, 1967, Lawrence La Borde again called the Domestic Contacts Division office in New Orleans. In accordance with instructions from Headquarters, he was told there was nothing to discuss. DDP relationship: La Borde as a DDP contact from February or March 1961, to April 20, 1962. He served as an acting captain of a vessel owned by Fernandez and used by the Miami Station in Cuban operations.

G. (2) Involvement in Garrison's investigation: In a taped interview of January 21, 1967, Carlos Quiroga told Garrison that Richard Davis was in charge of a CIA training camp conducted for Cubans from Miami in La Combe, La. in August 1963.

H. (1) Prior references: Memo No. 2 May 8, 1967, Enclosure 23 [Emilio Santana]; Memo No. 3, June 3, 1967, Enclosure No. 1; Memo No. 6

September 7, 1967, p6. Involvement in Garrison's investigation: Santana was interrogated by Garrison and staff for five days in February 1967. DDP relationship: Santana was recruited by the Miami Station in October 1962. After participating in May 1963 in a single infiltration exfiltration operation he was terminated in October 1963.

The document listed the Domestic Contacts Division contacts: BRINGUIER, William Wayne Dalzell, HEMMING, and Jack N. Rogers. "Jack N. Rogers was a Baton Rouge attorney in touch with Garrison's staff. DCS contact from September to present." (Deleted) was also listed as having had contact with the Domestic Contacts Division: "Schlumberger Well Surveying Corporation: Said by Garrison to have been the original owner of explosives removed from a bunker at CIA's instigation for use at Bay of Pigs. Current Domestic Contacts Division contact with various Schlumberger offices." [CIA Memo 8 1.12.68] A Michael J. La Borde was located at 6104 Jean, Metairie, Louisiana, telephone 504-733-5088. This telephone number was no good.

PERSHING GERVAIS

In the early 1970's the Justice Department of RICHARD M. NIXON, on the testimony of Internal Revenue Service informant Pershing Gervais, indicted New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison for bribery. Pershing Gervais had been an investigator for New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison. Before the case came to trial, Pershing Gervais showed his disapproval of the treatment he received by the administrators of the Witness Protection Program by recanting his testimony during an interview with journalist Rosemary James. Pershing Gervais testified against New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison in 1973. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison was acquitted. [United States v. Jim Garrison Criminal Action No.7-542 9.20.73]

DE TORRES AND GARRISON

The CIA reported:

BERNARDO DE TORRES, who according to a cleared, willing, police contact is a detective hired by Garrison. Contact feels certain, but cannot prove, both BERNARDO and his brother CHARLES, also detective, were in New Orleans during last year. Again, request Headquarters instructions as to whether further feelers should be put out, through AMOTS or other Station Cuban assets, to attempt learn more about his activities.

BERNARDO DE TORRES encouraged New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison to spend hundreds of futile hours searching for Cuban exile Manuel Gonzalez, who had arrived in the United States in 1964. On one occasion, the District Attorney sought out and questioned Miguel Torres, a Cuban whose only connection to OSWALD was that he had lived one block away from him in New Orleans. [FBI 62-109060-4564; CIA 1228-513, 1227-512; Miami Herald 2.25.67 p2A] On March 13, 1967, the FBI reported that

On March 13, 1967, MM T-1, an American citizen of Cuban descent, who has not been contacted a sufficient number of times to determine his reliability, claimed as follows: During the period from February 27, 1967, to March 7, 1967, he was in Mexico City where he made several visits to the Cuban Embassy. At the Cuban Embassy he talked with RAMIRO JESUS ABREU QUINTANA, an intelligence officer holding the position of Third Secretary and Chief of Consular Section. ABREU asked him if there was such interest among Cuban refugees at Miami, Florida, in the recent investigation of the assassination of President JOHN F. KENNEDY being conducted by the District Attorney's Office at New Orleans, Louisiana. MM T-1 said he gave no specific response to ABREU's inquiry because he had no real opinion.

MM T-1 said ABREU, in a subsequent conversation, made the general statement that personnel at the Cuban Embassy in Mexico knew OSWALD and that OSWALD was not as good a rifle marksman as the FBI believed he was. ABREU said that OSWALD and persons from the Cuban Embassy had gone shooting on the outskirts of Mexico City and a sixteen year old Cuban outshot OSWALD. MM T-1 said ABREU did not claim that he, himself, knew OSWALD.

MM T-1 stated that ABREU, while talking about the assassination, asked him if he knew SERGIO FIALLO. MM T-1 answered that he did not, and he did not ask who or where where FIALLO might be.

MM-T1 also advised that ARACELI MASTRAPA, who appeared to be secretary to ABREU in the Cuban Embassy, but who also impressed him as an experienced interrogator, had commented she understood that Cuban exile BERNARDO TORRES at Miami, had developed evidence that it was a Cuban refugee group which had carried out the assassination of President Kennedy. MM T-1 answered that he had only heard of TORRES, but did not know him. It is noted that BERNARDO DE TORRES has been described in the public press as a Cuban private investigator at Miami who has been assisting District Attorney James Garrison of New Orleans in the latter's investigation of the assassination.

MM T-1 stated that while Cuban officials he met in Mexico City appeared to have a definite interest in developments concerning the assassination of President Kennedy they did not reveal to him any special knowledge of the assassination. [FBI 3.14.67 Miami Copies Destroyed 3.12.73]

Cuban Exile Predicts New Chapter In Warren Report

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban exile who helped the Secret Service guard John F. Kennedy here four days before his assassination said yesterday he believes the Warren Report will be proved incomplete.

The exile, 32-year-old Bernardo Torres, has been helping New Orleans District Atty. Jim Garrison in an investigation looking toward reopening the Kennedy assassination case.

"Another chapter will be added to the Warren report when the investigation is released," predicted Torres, a private detective.

The Warren Report, naming Lee Harvey Oswald as the assassin, said it found no evidence of any conspiracy.

Torres said he was one of 10 Cubans who helped protect Kennedy in Miami, which has a large Cuban colony. He said the Secret Service had asked trusted Cubans to spot suspicious Cubans.

Torres told newsmen, "The Secret Service definitely

In Miami Cuban exile Bernardo Torres 32 who helped the Secret Service guard President Kennedy in Miami four days before the assassination says he has been helping Garrison and believes the Warren Report will prove to be incomplete. Torres said Garrison engaged him to look into the background of some Cubans reported to have been with Oswald shortly before the shooting in Dallas. He declined to discuss reports that some exiles, angry at Kennedy decision to stay out of further involvement in Cuba's Bay of Pigs were talking about killing the President. Torres said he make several trips between Miami and New Orleans in connection with the Garrison investigation. He said he was helping "in the public interest" without pay only expense money. He declined to discuss a report that Oswald had visited Miami to talk to Cubans. Torres was a member of the invasion brigade. He now is military coordinator of tis veterans organization called Brigade 2506.

ALBERTO FOWLER

Alberto Fowler, a Cuban veteran of the Bay of Pigs who was Director of International Relations for the City of New Orleans, was an investigator for New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison. Alberto Fowler reported to BRINGUIER on the progress of the investigation. [FBI 62-109060-4514; FBI LHM 5.8.67 New Orleans; CIA 1229-514] In January 1967 BRINGUIER contacted the New Orleans Field Office of the CIA.

Lloyd Ray related that the only purpose for this contact was to advise CIA that many Latin Americans are of the opinion that the assassination of President Kennedy was the result of a conspiracy including LEE HARVEY OSWALD and right-wing elements of the

USA. BRINGUIER want to advise CIA that the U.S. is losing this phase of its propaganda war in Latin America, and made suggestions to CIA for instituting changes and in the United States Government's propaganda program to counteract the growing aforementioned belief by Latin Americans concerning the assassination of President Kennedy. [NARA FBI 124-10058-10055 2.3.67]

THE ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION

In January 1975, President Ford, in response to allegations of CIA wrong-doing, asked Vice President Nelson Rockefeller to appoint a blue ribbon panel to study the CIA. The Rockefeller Commission suppressed the truth about the Dealey Plaza tramps. After the Rockefeller Commission issued its Report, Nelson Rockefeller was accused of having blocked his own probe. Rockefeller told the Associated Press: "We've done a good job, no stones have been left unturned, and no punches pulled. I don't think there is very much that hasn't been uncovered and discussed in this report." Attorney David Belin, a former Warren Commission Counsel, was appointed Chief Counsel of the Rockefeller Commission. Belin was not going to second guess himself on the Kennedy assassination, and on April 5, 1975, he told The New York Times that his panel had discovered no "credible evidence" that the CIA had any involvement in assassination of President Kennedy. The Commission members:

John T. Connor was a member of the Rockefeller Commission. John T. Connor was the Chief Executive Officer of the Allied Chemical Corporation. John J. McCloy had been a Director of Allied Chemical. From 1942 to 1947, John T. Conner served as General Counsel of the Office of Scientific Research and Development; as a Air Combat intelligence officer, U.S. Marine Corps; Counsel to the Office of Naval Research; and special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal. John T. Connor was an attorney with Cravath, Swaine and Moore, and had been a Director of the Chase Manhattan Bank, and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. [Bird, Kai The Chairman Simon & Shuster 1992 p15] Connor died in October 2000.

C. Douglas Dillon was a member of the Rockefeller Commission. C. Douglas Dillon was a former member of the OSS, and was an Ambassador to France, and an Under-secretary of State under President Dwight Eisenhower. In 1960 Mr. Dillon told the AFL-CIO World Affairs Conference of the dangers of Communism, rejecting "peaceful co-existence." "The primary issue today is nothing less than the survival of free men in a free civilization." Later in the same speech he qualified this my saying that the United States must be strong but ready to negotiate. [NYT 1.14.75] In 1961 he became Secretary of the Treasury, and was head of the United States Secret Service in November 1963. C. Douglas Dillon was Chairman of the Rockefeller Foundation from 1972 to 1975, a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, and president of Dillon, Read & Co.

Lane Kirkland was a member of the Rockefeller Commission. He had a B.S. from the Foreign Service School of Georgetown University. He was the Treasurer of the AFL/CIO. Lane Kirkland worked indirectly for the Agency for International Development through the American Federation for Free Labor Development. In 1973, Nelson Rockefeller appointed Lane Kirkland to his Commission on Critical Choices for Americans. He was President of the AFL/CIO until 1995. Lane Kirkland was asked about reports that the CIA had channeled money to the AFL/CIO activities overseas. He replied that he knew nothing about it and would be opposed to it.

Lyman L. Lemnitzer was a member of the Rockefeller Commission. He was Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from 1960 to 1962. In the capacity he received daily briefings from the CIA. Between 1963 and 1969 he was Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, heading the military forces of NATO. Lemnitzer called the release of the Pentagon Papers a traitorous act. Lyman Lemnitzer, born August 29, 1899, died on November 12, 1988.

Edgar F. Shannon was a member of the Rockefeller Commission. He was a former President of the University of Virginia, where former the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, James Schlesinger, had taught political science. The University of Virginia returned Coup D'Etat in America to Third Press because it was "unsuitable for our library."

Erwin N. Griswold was NIXON'S former Solicitor General. As Solicitor General, he defended the NIXON Administrations use of wiretaps without court orders in cases of subversion, but lost the case before the Supreme Court. He also defended the Government's attempts to prevent publication of the Pentagon Papers. In an interview in August 1969 in the Christian Science Monitor, he said "I think its terribly important that any repressive forces of society...be throughly and carefully kept under public control, with the ultimate responsibility back to top government officials."

Former United States President Ronald Reagan was a member of the Rockefeller Commission. While serving as the governor of California, in April 1970, in a speech in Yosemite, California, he suggested that "if it takes a bloodbath the silence militant campus demonstrators let's get it over with." In May 1973 Reagan stated in discussing the Watergate affair: "They did something that was stupid and foolish and was criminal -- it was illegal, illegal is a better word than 'criminal' because I think 'criminal' has a different connotation." He said the Watergate burglars were "well meaning" individuals who were "not criminals at heart."

THE ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION AND 544 CAMP STREET

The allegation regarding the 544 Camp Street notation on Crimes Against Cuba and OSWALD'S connection to HUNT was indirectly submitted to the Rockefeller Commission. The Commission stated:

Testimony was offered purporting to show CIA relationships with OSWALD. It was stated, for example, that HOWARD HUNT, as a CIA employee, engaged in political activity with elements of the anti-Castro Cuban community in the United States on behalf of the CIA prior to the April 1961 Bay of Pigs operation. In connection with those duties, it was further alleged that HUNT was instrumental in organizing the Cuban Revolutionary Council, and that the Cuban Revolutionary Council had an office in New Orleans. Finally, it was claimed that OSWALD lived in New Orleans from April to September 1963, and that a pamphlet prepared and distributed by OSWALD on behalf of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee during that period indicated that the office of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee was situated in a building which also was the address of the Cuban Revolutionary Council in New Orleans. Each of these statements is substantially true...It was therefore implied that HUNT could have had contact with LEE HARVEY OSWALD during the Spring or Summer of 1963.

The Rockefeller Commission suggested other relevant facts had been omitted:

It is not mentioned, for example, that OSWALD made up the Fair Play for Cuba Committee pamphlets; that the address he stamped on the pamphlets was never a Fair Play for Cuba Committee office; that he fabricated a nonexistent Chapter of the New Orleans Fair Play for Cuba Committee, a nonexistent President of the Committee, and a nonexistent office for it; that the building in question was a former office, rather than a current office, of an anti-Castro organization when OSWALD made up his pamphlets, and that OSWALD had tried to infiltrate the anti-Castro organization. No evidence was presented that HUNT ever met OSWALD during the Spring or Summer of 1963.

The Rockefeller Commission argued that because OSWALD'S organization was bogus, it was irrelevant that he used 544 Camp Street as his address. A bogus organization that used a notorious right-wing address should have been regarded with suspicion. The Rockefeller Commission, however, reasoned that everything else about OSWALD'S Fair Play for Cuba Committee was fraudulent, so it should have come as no surprise that the 544 Camp Street address was fraudulent as well. Out of the hundreds of thousands of different street numbers and addresses in New Orleans, why did he choose 544 Camp Street as a ghost address for his ghost committee? The Commission contended that 544 Camp Street was already a former office of the Cuban Revolutionary Council at the time that OSWALD used the address on his leaflet, some time between his arrival in New Orleans on April 25, 1963, and his departure in late September 1963. Guy Banister and David Ferrie, however, were still there.

THE ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION AND THE TRAMPS

As this Coup D'Etat in America went to press in 1975, the Rockefeller Commission on CIA domestic activities released its report. As expected, it stated that there was no "credible evidence" of CIA participation in the John F. Kennedy assassination. Rather than conducting an investigation of its own (using its resources as a Presidential Commission), the panel chose only to evaluate the various allegations of CIA-complicity presented to it by essentially volunteer witnesses, some of whom were ill-equipped to handle questions raised by a panel led by an attorney as steeped in the Warren Report as David Belin. Curiously shirking its responsibilities, the Commission expected witnesses and the general public to bear the burden of proof of rumored allegations. Its obvious objective was to defend not re-examine the Warren Report. In its nineteen page section concerning the Kennedy assassination, the Commission hardly used any of the abundant pieces of evidence used in Coup.

The Rockefeller Commission:
Chapter 19
Allegations Concerning the Assassination of President Kennedy

Allegations have been made that the CIA participated in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas, Texas on November 22, 1963. Two different theories have been advanced in support of those allegations. One theory is that E. Howard Hunt and Frank Sturgis on behalf of the CIA personally participated in the assassination. The other is that the CIA had connections with Lee Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby or both of them and that those connections somehow led to the assassination. The Commission staff has investigated these allegations. Neither the staff nor the Commission undertook a full review of the Report of the Warren Commission. Such a task would have been outside the scope of the Executive Order establishing this Commission, and would have diverted the time of the Commission from its proper function. The investigation was limited to determining whether there was any credible evidence pointing to CIA involvement in the assassination of President Kennedy.

A. The Theory That Hunt and Sturgis Participated in the Assassination

The first of the theories involves charges that E. Howard Hunt and Frank Sturgis, both convicted of burglarizing the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate in 1972, were CIA employees or agents at the time of the assassination of the President in 1963. It is further alleged that they were together in Dallas on the day of the assassination and that shortly after the assassination they were found in a railroad boxcar situated behind the "grassy knoll," an area located to the right front of the Presidential car at the time of the assassination.

Under this theory Hunt and Sturgis were allegedly in Dallas on November 22, 1963, and were taken into custody by the police, then were mysteriously released without being booked, photographed or fingerprinted by the police—although they were allegedly photographed by press photographers while they were being accompanied to the Dallas County Sheriff's office.

It is further contended that the persons shown in these press photographs bear "striking resemblances to photographs taken of Hunt and Sturgis in 1972...These purported facts are cited as the basis for a possible conclusion that CIA personnel participated in the assassination of President Kennedy, and, at least inferentially, that the CIA itself was involved. The Commission staff investigated the several elements (if this theory to the extent deemed necessary to assess fairly the allegation of CIA participation in the assassination. The findings of that investigation follow.

Findings

I. The Allegation that Hunt and Sturgis Were CIA Employees or Agents in 1963

E. Howard Hunt was an employee of the CIA in November 1963. He had been an employee of the CIA for many years before that and he continued to be associated with the (until his retirement in 1970. Throughout 1963 he was assigned to duty in Washington, D.C., performing work relating to propaganda operations in foreign countries. His duties included travel to several other cities in the States, but not to any place in the South or Southwest. He lived with his family in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area throughout that year and his children attended school there, Frank Sturgis was not an employee or agent of the CIA either in 1963 or at any other time. He so testified under oath himself, and a search of CIA records failed to discover any evidence that he had ever been employed by the CIA, or had ever served it as an agent, informant or operative. STURGIS testified that he had been engaged in various 'adventures' relating to Cuba, which he believed to have been organized and financed by the CIA. He testified that he had given information directly and indirectly, to Federal Government officials, who, he believed were acting for the CIA. He further testified, however, that at no time did he engage in activity having to do with the assassination of President Kennedy, on behalf of the CIA or otherwise.

Frank was involved in such unsavory activities, that he termed "skull-duggery" the CIA would never put him on their payroll as a CIA Agent but would use him on a contractual basis. STURGIS was a CIA and FBI informant. Numerous documents previously cited proved this. How could the Rockefeller Commission have missed these hundreds of CIA reports generated by BARKER that concerned information supplied to him by STURGIS?

2. The Allegation That Hunt and Sturgis Were Together in Dallas on the Day of the Assassination

Hunt and Sturgis testified under oath to members of the Commission staff. They both denied that they were in Dallas on the day of the assassination. Hunt testified that he was in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area throughout that day, and his testimony was supported by two of his children (a son who is nine years old could not recall if his parents were present or absent that day; the fourth) and youngest Hunt child was not born then. Mrs. Hunt is now deceased) and a former domestic employee of the Hunt family. Sturgis testified that he was in Miami Florida throughout the day of the assassination, and his testimony was supported by that of his wife and a nephew of his wife. The nephew, who was then living with the Sturgis family, is now a practicing attorney in the Midwest.

With the exception of the domestic employer of the Hunt family all witnesses directly supporting the presence of Hunt and Sturgis in Washington D.C. and Miami, Florida on the day of the assassination are family members or relatives. Less weight can be assigned to the testimony of such interested witnesses if there is substantial evidence to the contrary. In the absence of substantial conflicting evidence, however the testimony of family members cannot be disregarded.

The Hunt family maid, Mary Trainer, was like part of the family and was willing to lie for her employer.

Hunt testified that he had never met Frank Sturgis before they were introduced by Bernard Barker in Miami in 1972. Sturgis testified to the same effect except that he did not recall whether the introduction had taken place in late 1971 or early 1972. Sturgis further testified that while he had often heard of "Eduardo," a CIA political officer who had been active in the work of the Cuban Revolutionary Council in Miami prior to the Bay of Pigs operation in April 1961 he had never met him and did not know until 1971 or 1972 that "Eduardo" was E. Howard Hunt. Sturgis had also been active in anti-Castro groups in the Miami area before, during and after Hunt's assignment on the political aspects of the Bay of Pigs project in 1960 and early 1961.

Other testimony linked Hunt to Sturgis at a date earlier than 1971. One witness asserted that Sturgis is a pseudonym; that his name is Frank Fiorini and that he took the name Sturgis from a fictional character (Hank Sturgis) in a novel written by Hunt in 1949. (Bimini Run). Sturgis testified that his name at birth was Frank Angelo Fiorini; that his mother's maiden name was Mary Vona; that his father's name was Angelo Anthony Fiorini; that his parents were divorced when he was a child; that his mother subsequently remarried a man named Ralph Sturgis; and that at his mother's urging he legally changed his name in Norfolk Virginia, sometime in the 1950's, to take the last name of his stepfather.

A search of the relevant court records disclosed that a petition was filed on September 23, 1952, in the Circuit Court of the City of Norfolk (Virginia) pursuant to which a Frank Angelo Fiorino petitioned to change his name to Frank Anthony Sturgis. The petition recited that his mother had divorced his father about 15 years previously and had married one Ralph Sturgis, that he had been living with his mother all of his life, that his mother was known as Mary Sturgis, and that his stepfather also desired him to change his name to Sturgis. An order of the Court, was entered on September 23, 1952 (the same date as the petition) changing his name to Frank Anthony Sturgis. The order appears in the records of the Circuit Court of the City of Norfolk, Virginia. In the petition and the order relating to the change of name, Fiorini was misspelled as Fiorino.

In the light of this documentary evidence, no weight can be given to the claim that Sturgis took his present name from a character in a Hunt novel—or that the name change was associated in any way with Sturgis' knowing Hunt before 1971 or 1972.

It is, in fact, more likely that Hunt took the name of his character from Sturgis rather than vice versa; When a real person adopts the name of a popular fictional character (for example, Saul Bellow's Moses Herzog) he tends to use the exact name. On the other hand, a novelist who models his hero after a real person (who has no objections to being fictionalized) will tend to modify the person's name slightly. Thus Helen Bess might become Elaine Bess. Or better yet, the author might use the model's nickname or other similar names. If Hunt knew the then Frank Fiorini well, he would know that Frank's mother was called Mrs. Sturgis. "Frank Sturgis" would immediately suggest itself as an ideal name for the character, and H(Fr)ank Sturgis the perfect fictionalization of it. Three years later, in 1952, Fiorini did change his name to Frank Sturgis. HUNT eventually told his son St. John that he met FRANK STURGIS in the early 1960's.

The personnel, payroll and travel records of the CIA were checked with respect to E. Howard Hunt. Daily attendance records for the period are no longer available because they are destroyed in the ordinary course of the Agency's records disposal system three years after completion of the audit for each year. What records remain, including annual leave, sick leave, and travel records, disclose that Hunt had no out-of-town travel associated with his employment in the month of November 1963. He used no annual leave and eleven hours of sick leave in the two-week pay period ending November 23, 1963. The exact date or dates on which the sick leave was taken could not be ascertained. There is some indication; however, that some of these eleven hours of sick leave may have been taken by Hunt on November 22, 1963. He testified that, on the afternoon of that day, he was in the company of his wife and family in the Washington, D.C., area, rather than at his employment duties. That was a Friday, and therefore a working day for employees at the CIA. Hunt could not recall whether he was on duty with the CIA on the morning of that day.

Because Sturgis was never an agent or employee of the CIA, the Agency has no personnel, payroll, leave or travel records relating to him.

In examining the charge that Hunt and Sturgis were together in Dallas on the day of the assassination, the investigators were handicapped by the fact that the allegation was first made in 1974, more than ten years after the assassination. Evidence which might have been available at an earlier time was no longer available. Contacts with relatives, friends, neighbors or fellow employees (who might have known of the whereabouts of Hunt and Sturgis on that particular day) could not be recalled. Some of these persons are now dead. Finally, records which might have been the source of relevant information no longer exist.

It cannot be determined with certainty where Hunt and Sturgis actually were on the day of the assassination. However, no credible evidence was found which would contradict their testimony that they were in Washington, D.C., and Miami Florida, respectively.

This frank admission is significant. November 22, 1963 is not exactly a day people forget. HUNT and STURGIS testified they were in Washington and Miami respectively on November 22, 1963 and no witnesses but "family members or relatives" (with the exception of HUNT'S maid) backed them up. The Panel admits that "less weight can be assigned to the testimony of such interested witnesses" and goes on to disclose HUNT may have been on sick leave from the CIA on November 22, 1963. HUNT could also "not recall" if he was at CIA that morning. No one even testified to having reached HUNT at home that day by telephone. This sounds mighty suspicious to me.

3. The Allegation That Hunt and Sturgis Were Found Near the Scene of the Assassination and Taken to the Dallas County Sheriff's Office

This allegation is based upon a purported resemblance between Hunt and Sturgis on the one hand, and two persons who were briefly taken into custody in Dallas following the assassination.

The shooting of President Kennedy occurred at about 12:30 p.m., Dallas time, on November 22, 1963, while the Presidential motorcade was passing Dealey Plaza as it headed generally westward on Elm Street. Witnesses to the shooting gave the police varying accounts of where they thought the shots had come from. On the basis of the sound of the shots, some believed that they had come from the Texas School Book Depository building (TSBD), which was behind and slightly to the right of President Kennedy when he was hit. Others thought the shots had come from other directions. Law enforcement officials understandably conducted a widespread search for evidence relating to the assassination.

Several hours after the shooting officers of the Dallas Police Department checked all railroad freight cars situated on tracks anywhere in the vicinity of Dealey Plaza. About six or eight persons, referred to as "derelicts," were found in or near the freight cars. These persons were taken either to the nearby Dallas County Sheriff's office, or to the Dallas Police Department for questioning. All were released without any arrest records being made, or any fingerprinting or photographing being done by the authorities.

The eight derelict figure makes sense. There was HUNT, STURGIS and CHRIST the Gedney, Abrams, Doyle and finally John Francis Elrod and Daniel Wayne Douglas.

Among the six or eight "derelicts" found in the vicinity of the freight cars were three men who according to the arresting officers were found in a boxcar about one-half mile south of the scene of the assassination. They were taken to the Sheriff's office by the Dallas police officers, who walked northward along the railroad tracks to a point west of the Texas School Book Depository, then north to Houston Street and back south to the Sheriff's office. This somewhat circuitous route was actually the most convenient one available, according to the Dallas policemen. As the police and the "derelicts" passed the TSBD building and headed for the Sheriff's office, they were photographed by several press photographers on the scene. Copies of five of the photographs showing the "derelicts" were submitted to the Commission's staff as evidence.

A witness who volunteered his testimony stated on the basis of hearsay that the three "derelicts" in question were found in a boxcar situated to the near northwest of the assassination scene, which would have been to the right front of the Presidential car at the time of the shooting. Between the area in which that boxcar was claimed by this witness to be located and that part of Elm Street where the assassination occurred was a "grassy knoll."

It was alleged by other witnesses (who were associated with the first witness and who also volunteered testimony) that a bullet fired from the area of that "grassy knoll" struck President Kennedy in the head. It was also claimed by the same witnesses that one of the three photographed "derelicts" bears a "striking" facial resemblance to E. Howard Hunt and that another of them bears a "striking" facial resemblance to Frank Sturgis. Finally, it was alleged that if those two "derelicts" were, in fact, Hunt and Sturgis, and if the President was in fact struck by a bullet fired from his right front, the CIA would be shown to be implicated in the killing of President Kennedy.

The photographs of the "derelicts" in Dallas have been compared with numerous known photographs of Hunt and Sturgis taken both before and after November 23, 1963. Even to non-experts it appeared that there was, at best, only a superficial resemblance between the Dallas "derelicts" and Hunt and Sturgis. The "derelict" allegedly resembling Hunt appeared to be substantially older and smaller than Hunt. The "derelict" allegedly resembling Sturgis appeared to be thinner than Sturgis and to have facial features and hair markedly different from those of Sturgis.

The witnesses who testified to the "striking resemblance" between the "derelicts" and Hunt and Sturgis were not shown to have any qualifications in photo identification beyond that possessed by the average layman. Their testimony appears to have been based on a comparison of the 1963 photographs of the "derelicts" with a single 1972 photograph of Sturgis and two 1972 photographs of Hunt.

Over fifty photographs taken of Hunt and Sturgis both before and after November 22, 1963, were submitted to the FBI photographic laboratory for a comparison with all known photographs of the "derelicts." (The FBI assembled a complete set of all photographs of the "derelicts" taken by the three photographers known to have photographed them.) The comparison was made by Fill Agent Lyndal Shaneyfelt, a nationally recognized expert in photo identification and photo analysis.

The report of Agent Shaneyfelt, embodied in a Report of the FBI Laboratory dated April 21, 1975 and signed by Clarence M. Kelley, Director of the FBI concluded that "neither E. Howard nor Frank Sturgis appear as any of the three 'derelicts' arrested in Dallas, Texas, as shown in the photographs submitted."

With respect to Hunt it was found that he had a much younger appearance, a smooth and tightly contoured chin, and a more angular or pointed chin compared with the "derelict" in question. The latter was much older, had a chin with protruding pouches and a more bulbous nose.

With respect to Sturgis even more distinguishing characteristics were observed. Sturgis looked like a Latin, whereas the "derelict" had the general appearance of a Nordic. Sturgis had very black, wavy hair—and the "derelict" had light or blond and straighter hair. Sturgis had a rather round face with square chin lines: the "derelict" had an oval face with a more rounded chin. Sturgis and the "derelict" had markedly different ratios between the length of their noses and the height of their foreheads. They also had different ear and nose contours.

Hunt is approximately five feet nine inches tall. and Sturgis is approximately five feet eleven inches tall. The FBI laboratory made an on-site study in Dallas, using the cameras with which the photographs of the "derelicts" were originally taken: it concluded from the study that the "derelict" allegedly resembling Hunt was about five feet, seven inches tall, and that the "derelict" allegedly resembling Sturgis was about six feet two inches tall, with a one inch margin for error in each direction. The difference between the heights of the two "derelicts" was therefore about seven inches, while the difference between Hunt's height and that of Sturgis is only about two inches.

The photographs of the "derelicts" in Dallas have been displayed in various newspapers in the United States on national television programs, and in the April 28, 1975 issue of Newsweek magazine. But no witnesses have provided testimony that either of the "derelicts" was personally known to be Hunt or Sturgis—and no qualified expert was offered to make such identification.

We stand by the photo analysis that we had done by Genner and Fahey. The reader can draw his own conclusions. Note that Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt, the FBI agent who did the photo comparison study for the Panel also did a majority of the photo-analysis for the Warren Commission. The FBI's height study claims Hunt is 5'9" (Hunt says he is 5'8" in his resume) and Sturgis is 5'11" (Canfield found he was about 6'1"). They reported the tramps were 5'7" and 6'2" with a one inch margin for error in either direction.

B. The Theory That the CIA Had Relationships with Lee Harvey Oswald and Jack Ruby

The second theory advanced in support of allegations of CIA participation in the assassination of President Kennedy is that various links existed between the CIA, Oswald and Ruby. Lee Harvey Oswald was found by the Warren Commission to be the person who assassinated the President. Jack Ruby shot and killed Oswald two days after the President's assassination. There is no credible evidence that either Lee Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby was ever employed by the CIA or ever acted for the CIA in any capacity whatever, either directly or indirectly.

Testimony was offered purporting to show CIA relationships with Oswald and Ruby. It was stated, for example, that E. Howard Hunt, as an employee of the CIA, engaged in political activity with elements of the anti-Castro Cuban community in the United States on behalf of the CIA prior to the Bay of Pigs operation in April 1961. In connection with those duties, it was further alleged that Hunt was instrumental in organizing the Cuban Revolutionary Council and that the Cuban Revolutionary Council had an office in New Orleans. Finally, it was claimed that Lee Harvey Oswald lived in New Orleans from April to September 1963, and that a pamphlet prepared and distributed by Oswald on behalf of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee during that period indicated that the office of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee was situated in a building which was also the address of the New Orleans office of the Cuban Revolutionary Council. Each of these statements is substantially true, but many other relevant facts disclosed in the Warren Commission Report are omitted. It is not mentioned, for example, that Oswald made up the Fair Play for Cuba Committee pamphlets; that the address he stamped on the pamphlets was never an office of that Committee; that he fabricated a non-existent New Orleans Chapter of the Committee, a non-existent President of that Committee, and a nonexistent office for it; that the building in question was a former office, rather than a current office, of an anti-Castro organization when Oswald made up his pamphlets, and that Oswald had tried to infiltrate the anti-Castro organization.

It was therefore implied that Hunt could have had contact with Lee Harvey Oswald in New Orleans during the spring or summer of 1963. No evidence was presented that Hunt ever met Oswald, or that he was ever in New Orleans in 1963, or that he had any contact with any New Orleans office of the Cuban Revolutionary Council.

Hunt's employment (word with the CIA indicated that he had no duties involving contacts with Cuban exile elements or organizations inside or outside the United States after the early months of 1961. This was more than two years before Oswald went to New Orleans in April 1963 and more than a year before Oswald returned to the United States from the Soviet Union, where he had lived for almost three years.

An example of the testimony relating to an alleged relationship between the CIA and dad; Ruby consisted of a statement that Frank Sturgis was engaged in a series of revolutionary activities among Cuban exiles in the United States in the 1950's and 1960's and that the CIA also sponsored and organized anti-Castro activities among Cuban exiles in the United States in 1959 and the early 1960's.

It was further stated that someone once reported to the FBI that Jack Ruby had engaged in supplying arms to persons in Cuba in the early 1950's in association with a former Cuban President, Carlos Prio, and that Frank Sturgis also had connections with Carlos Prio during the 1950's and 1960's. In addition, it was alleged that Frank Sturgis was at one time (before he escaped from Cuba in June 1959) director of gambling and gaming establishments in Havana for the Castro government, and that in August or September, 1959 Jack Ruby made a trip to Havana at the invitation of a friend who had interests in gambling establishments in Cuba and the United States. Moreover both Sturgis and Ruby were alleged to have had connections with underground figures who had interests in the United States and Cuba. From this group of allegations, the witness inferred that Sturgis and Ruby could have met and known each other—although no actual evidence was presented to show that Ruby or Sturgis ever met each other.

Even if the individual items contained in the foregoing recitations were assumed to be true it was concluded that the inferences drawn must be considered farfetched speculation insofar as they purport to show a connection between the CIA and either Oswald or Ruby. Even in the absence of denials by living persons that, such connections existed, no weight could be assigned to such testimony. Moreover, Sturgis was never an employee or agent of the CIA...

The same witness testified that E. Howard Hunt was Acting Chief of a CIA station in Mexico City in 1963, implying that he could have had contact with Oswald when Oswald visited Mexico City in September 1963. Hunt's service in Mexico City, however, was twelve years earlier—in 1950 and 1951—and his only other CIA duty in Mexico covered only a few weeks in 1960. At no time was he ever the Chief, or Acting Chief, of a CIA station in Mexico City. Hunt and Sturgis categorically denied that they had ever met or known Oswald or Ruby. They further denied that they ever had any connection whatever with either Oswald or Ruby.

Conclusions

Numerous allegations have been made that the CIA participated in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The Commission staff investigated these allegations. On the basis of the staff's investigation, the Commission concluded there was no credible evidence of any CIA involvement.

The report stated:

Oswald made up the FPCC leaflets" (true); "The address he stamped on the pamphlets was never an office of that committee... that he fabricated a non-existent New Orleans chapter" (true); "that the building in question was a former office...(of the CRC) when he made up his pamphlets..." (The propaganda section of the CRC had been discontinued in early 1962 according to 544's landlord in CE1414 but the convert section—Smith, Bannister, Ferrie stayed on. Ostensibly the entire CRC had "disbanded" months before Oswald arrived in New Orleans but in reality it was still operating. Finally the Panel states that "Oswald had tried to infiltrate the anti-Castro organization" presumably the CRC. Actually, he allegedly tried to infiltrate the DRE.

SENATOR RICHARD SCHWEIKER

The New York Times reported on October 20, 1975: "Senator Richard Schweiker Predicts Collapse of Warren Report." In May 1976 the Senate Intelligence Committee voted to recommend a Congressional investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Senator Richard Schweiker hired Gaeton Fonzi as an investigator. David Marston, an aide to Senator Richard Schweiker, worked with Gaeton Fonzi. In the Summer of 1976 David Marston suggested that this researcher be assigned several interns to correlate telephone numbers in the National Archives

JFK Record Group. This position, however, never materialized.

REAGAN AND SCHWEIKER

Former Rockefeller Commission member Ronald Reagan stunned the Republican Party Convention on July 26, 1976, and broke with tradition, when he named Senator Richard Schweiker as his Vice Presidential running mate, before the delegates had made their decision. Senator Schweiker said he accepted this invitation because he believed this ticket could unify the Republican Party since Schweiker was considered a liberal Republican. The New York Times interviewed more than a dozen political analysts, and none of them outside of the Reagan - Schweiker camp, felt Ronald Reagan's cause would be helped by this move. Reagan was denounced by numerous conservative Republicans for this selection. Reagan was not nominated that year, and it was widely believed that his choice of Senator Schweiker as a running mate was responsible.

JOHN P. SEARS

John P. Sears persuaded Ronald Reagan to choose Senator Schweiker as his Vice Presidential running-mate. From 1965 to 1966 Sears worked for the law firm of NIXON, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie, Alexander and Mitchell. He was a member of NIXON'S staff from 1966 to 1969, and became a Deputy Counsel to the President from 1969 to 1970. John P. Sears served as NIXON'S liaison to Vice President Spiro Agnew. NIXON suspected him of leaking information to the press, and placed him under 24-hour surveillance and tapped his telephone. NIXON considered entrapping Sears by allowing him to see "some material from Guam." [Wise, D. American Police State p57] From 1970 to 1975 John P. Sears was a partner in Charles Colson's law firm, Gadsby & Hannah. In May 1973 Sears surfaced as the attorney for John Caulfield at the Watergate Hearings. He managed Reagan's Presidential campaign in 1976. From 1977 to 1984, Sears worked in Baskin & Sears. Baskin & Sears received $500,000 from 1981 to 1984 from the Government of South Africa.. In 1984 the city of Pittsburgh threatened to drop its lucrative contract with Baskin & Sears because of its representation of South Africa. Baskin dropped the contract with South Africa, however, Sears split off and formed his own firm, taking the South African account with him. Sears became known as the chief lobbyist for South Africa. He managed Reagan's Presidential campaign in 1980. When Sears was fired as Reagan's campaign manager, in early 1980, Reagan asked William Casey to take over for him. Reagan appointed Casey Director of the CIA.

ED ROLLINS

Another figure associated with Ronald Reagan was Edward J. Rollins. Rollins was the son of a Navy-shipyard electrician in Vallejo, California. He attended California State University, where he excelled at boxing. In 1969 he worked as a student-activities coordinator at Washington University, Saint Louis, Missouri. In this capacity he worked closely with the FBI in identifying members of the anti-Vietnam war movement. He testified before a Grand Jury inquest that resulted in the conviction of several students for anti-war activity. In 1972 Rollins worked for NIXON. In 1985 Rollins defended the Reagan Administration's connection to Teamster official Jackie Presser. [Moldea, Dark Victory, 1986 page 346] In 1989 Rollins was chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee. In 1992 Ed Rollins hurt the Presidential campaign of H. Ross Perot, when he resigned as his campaign manager.

On November 10, 1993, Rollins told a number of Washington media correspondents that when he head Governor Christine Todd Whitman's New Jersey gubernatorial campaign he used $500,000 to bribe black ministers to encourage black voters to take a powder on election day. [Wash. Post 11.11.93] He later said he had lied about this.

After Senator Schweiker became associated with Ronald Reagan, his investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy ceased. Gaeton Fonzi attributed Senator Richard Schweiker's loss of interest in the Kennedy assassination to the Senator's failure to be appointed to the Permanent Intelligence Oversight Committee. John Sears, who convinced Reagan to nominate Senator Schweiker as Vice President was more closely connected to RICHARD NIXON than he was to Ronald Reagan. Was NIXON, who had by this time resigned, behind Schweiker's nomination? Was it an attempt to get Schweiker off the Kennedy assassination case? Did the CIA have any communication with Sears?

HEMMING ON THE COVER-UP

"If it was an amateur operation it wouldn't have been covered up. They'd have been nailed. The only reason for the cover up, was to hide the professionals. These are people who have used before, and have been used since."

If not for the power of the internet the tramp shot theory would have been laid to rest by CIA agents, co-optees, assets and those who wished to protect the Agency for their own reasons, political and monetary. But the truth can be told, documents and photographs displayed, videos viewed and enough space remains to create a 3,000 page searchable data base rather than a stinky 400 page book. As the 50th Anniversary of the coup approaches I find myself working on THE OSWALD CODE, where I decode words encrypted in OSWALD's address book. I am lucky to be here on Tuesday, May 18, 2010. If the rogue CIA agents were responsible for a fraction of the deaths listed in this data base, what prevented them from having Canfield and WEBERMAN killed? HEMMING told this researcher:

You and Canfield are cartoon characters. You have never been the biggest threat to any of these people, A. J. I hate to disappoint you, but you're not taken very seriously. If you were Woodward or Bernstein, or even Gaeton Fonzi, or even Gerald Posner, and you came out with this kind of shit with citations to authority, you'd have all kinds of problems. There ain't nobody worried about you. Nobody's ever seen your book. I'm afraid to give you the bad news. It was a valuable contribution. You got some serious people started with your book. At that time nobody had done zip-fuck. The Senate had done their CIA shit. They wouldn't be in the business. There wouldn't have been a HSCA if you hadn't bull-shited these people to death. I've got to give you credit. You stirred up some shit.

THE DISCOVERY OF THE TRAMPS SHOTS: NOVEMBER 22, 1973

On November 22, 1973, this researcher sponsored a demonstration in front of the National Archives in Washington. It was entitled "Who Stole John F. Kennedy's Brain from the National Archives" based on this New York Times article.

Mystery Cloaks Fate Of Brain of Kennedy

By FRED P. GRAHAM
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 — The preserved brain of President Kennedy, plus microscopic slides of tissues removed from his bullet wounds, have been withheld, apparently by the Kennedy family, from the assassination evidence in the National Archives, a medical expert said today.

The expert, Dr. Cyril H. Wecht, was the first critic of the Warren Commission's report on the assassination to be allowed to see items from the autopsy on the President.

He asserted that questions about President Kennedy's wounds would remain unanswered so long as these objects were not available for examination. A spokesman for the Kennedy family replied that all evidence requested by the Justice Department had been placed in the Archives and that Dr. Wecht had turned to "offensive" probing because the evidence in the Archives did not support his doubts about the official finding that the assassination was the deed of Lee Harvey Oswald alone.

Dr. Wecht spent two days in the Archives last week examining the material. He made his assertions afterward in an interview at the Archives.

Interviews with Government officials and President Kennedy's former personal secretary, Evelyn Lincoln, disclosed that the slides and probably the brain, which was removed from the body in the autopsy in 1963 and was preserved in a container of formalin, were

I discovered that on this same date Bernard Fensterwald was sponsoring an assassination conference at Georgetown University. I knew Georgetown was a CIA training school but I called Fensterwald and offered to work with him. Fensterwald would have no part of it. During the Fenster's conference High Times founder Tom Forcade and I attempted to give out leaflets announcing the "Brain Drain" demonstration. When Fensterwald tried to confiscate the leaflets Forcade turned over a table injuring one of the Fenster's volunteers. Despite the Fenster we had plenty of people at the brain drain demonstration including Phil Ochs. Upon its conclusion we returned to the Georgetown conference. After a bunch of boring speeches I hooked up with one of Fenster's female volunteers who asked me where I got my ideas from. I told her I got them from smoking reefer and we sat down on some steps and sparked up but there were too many nuns going by so we went to her dorm room. I figured, hey we are going to get it on and put on some music however before the festivities could begin a dude started yelling that he wanted to come up and visit Kadina. I said "Like tell the dude to split" but he kept yelling. Finally I relented (he had crashed there the previous night) and he came in. The dude's name was Steven Sotor and he was a Professor of Astronomy from Cornell. He whipped out the tramp shots Sprague had published in Computers and Automation and told me that he once thought one of the tramps was FRANK STURGIS but Fensterwald told him this could not be as there was a height discrepancy between STURGIS and the tramp. I told him "Fensterwald is a motherfucking CIA agent" and looked at the tramp shots. When I saw that washed out Protestant face of the old tramp, I said that guy looks like this old White dude who once rented a room from me when I lived in East Lansing, Michigan, named Harold Henkel. And Henkel looked just like HUNT. Holy shit, one tramp looks like STURGIS and the other looks like HUNT this can't be coincidence. I had solved the JFK assassination because I dug sex, drugs and rock and roll.

Congressman's Brother Arrested After Shootout

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 26 (AP) Carlos B. Gonzalez, brother of Representative Henry B. Gonzalez, Democrat of Texas, was arrested today following a shootout in which two policemen were seriously wounded.

The shooting occurred at the residence of the arrested man's ailing mother, where he had gone after escaping from a mental hospital.

A police spokesman identified the two wounded men as Roy Aguilar Jr., 23 years old and R. C. Smith, 48. They were reported to be in critical condition.

The spokesman said that Carlos Gonzalez had been taken to the hospital for treatment after he scuffled with several policemen who tried to handcuff him shortly after the shooting.

The New York Times
Published: April 27, 1975

I published an article about the "tramps" in the underground press and moved to Washington, D.C. where I worked in the National Archives, and studied all of the JFK documents that were housed there. I worked closely with certain members of the United States Congress. In 1976 I met the legendary Gaeton Fonzi who was investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy for Senator Richard Schweiker (Rep.-PA). I worked closely with the office of Senator Richard Schweiker. My associate Michael Canfield, who had been part of the George McGovern (Dem.-SD) presidential campaign, displayed the tramp photographs to Congressman Henry Gonzalez (Dem.-TX). This helped convince Congressman Gonzalez to sponsor a bill to re-investigate the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Congressman Henry Gonzalez' bill passed and Henry Gonzalez became head of the House Select Committee on Assassinations. Michael Canfield was to have an office on Capitol Hill. Then Congressman Gonzalez and Chief Counsel Richard Sprague had an argument and both men resigned. Robert Blakey became Chief Counsel. Robert Blakey had Clyde Snow, a noted anthropologist with CIA-connections, do a photo study of the tramp shots. Clyde Snow, after reading the photo reports of the CIA and FBI determined, with some qualifications, that the tramps were not HUNT or STURGIS or CHRIST.

HARASSMENT

As a result of my work I was targeted by the intelligence community and by those who wished to protect it. When a study of my telephone records revealed I called Neil Hickey Gallo, who was related to the Gallo crime family, someone broke into his apartment and examined all his papers. The only things missing were some gold rings. A few months later, Frederick Cash drove me to CIA headquarters. The security guard at the gate made a routine notation of his license plate number. A week later, someone broke into the home of Fred Cash by cutting the window glass and then examined every piece of paper in there. Nothing was stolen. In the spring and summer of 1974 I lived in the apartment of John Foster Berlet in Washington, D.C., and conducted research at the National Archives. Michael Canfield worked with Congressman Henry Gonzalez and lobbied the United States Congress for the passage of Congressman Henry Gonzalez's bill to establish a HSCA. One evening, upon my return from the National Archives, I found that there was no electricity in the apartment of "Chip" Berlet. The fuses were still good. I went to the basement and discovered that someone had removed the backup fuses from their sockets. Returning home to my building in Manhattan the next night, I found the lights were out there too. The fuses were still good in the apartment and in the basement. A Con Edison crew came and explained that someone opened the manhole in front of the building and turned off the power. Was this a prelude to my entrance into the world of eternal darkness? HEMMING told this researcher:

It was not accidental. Who is the ultimate sponsor? Who pays for it and calls the shots? It's either someone in the Agency, or someone jealous of protecting the agency, or whatever.

GAIL BEAGLE

In the fall of 1974 Congressman Henry Gonzalez's aide, Gail Beagle, was attacked by a Washington, D.C., street gang.

Dean: So I came over and Liddy laid out a million dollar plan that was the most incredible thing I have ever laid my eyes on: all in codes and involved black bag operations, kidnapping, providing prostitutes, uh, to weaken the opposition, bugging ah, mugging teams. It was just an incredible thing. (March 21, 1973)

NIXON: Dean actually could answer it in another way. He could say, look, I was the counsel. I was sitting in on it in that fashion...I did not discuss it with Haldeman because - because it was turned off, I didn't report it.

Ehrlichman: The way you get at that then: 'Well, Mr. Dean, you're responsible for keeping the President out of legal trouble, aren't you?' 'Yes sir.' 'You sat in a meeting where a man named Liddy proposed a million dollars worth of kidnapping and wiretapping and assassination and on and on and on, and you didn't jump in a taxicab and rush back to the White House and burst in on Bob Haldeman and say, you know what those crazy guys on the committee are doing?'

BARKING DOGS

In early 1975 the FBI visited my neighbors in Manhattan. At that time I lived at 6 Bleecker Street, between Bowery and Elizabeth Streets. The agents convinced Jerry Cotter, who worked at a rehabilitation center for alcoholics, that I was a dangerous radical. He released barking dogs in a courtyard in the back of my building at 5:30 a.m. each morning. When confronted, he said: "I let the dogs loose because they told me you were un-American." A lawsuit was filed against him. [WEBERMAN v. Jerry Cotter Civil Court 118626 1975] This researcher is interested in finding the current whereabouts of Cotter. On April 26, 1975, Carlos B. Gonzalez, the brother of Congressman Henry Gonzalez, was arrested following a shootout in which two policemen were seriously wounded. The shooting occurred at the residence of Carlos B. Gonzalez's ailing mother, where he had gone after escaping from a maximum security hospital for the criminally insane. Someone took a pot shot at the Congressman as he left a speaking engagement in San Antonio. The FBI tried to arrest me in 1975 for allegedly unsealing a document detailing the role of STURGIS as an informant for the Drug Enforcement Administration. FBI Agents went to the Miami Federal courthouse and questioned Assistant Court Clerk Gloria Walters. Gloria Walters told them that the document had not been sealed. The FBI took fingerprints from it. When I returned to Miami a few months later, the Bureau put me under surveillance and determined the time of my return flight to New York City. While at the airport, I put down a bag of newspaper clippings to make a telephone call; the bag was stolen. An attaché case that contained important documents never left my hand. I deplaned in New York City and walked toward the baggage claim area. Two New York City Police Department detectives starred at me, then arrested a Cuban about ten feet behind me. I have never determined the significance of this.

When the first edition of Coup D'Etat in America was published in 1975 an unknown group circulated Forthcoming Books - Internal Memo #32 [9.1.76] which announced that HUNT had sued the authors of Coup D'Etat in America. Forthcoming Books listed everyone involved in the production of Coup D'Etat in America, and claimed that the bibliography of Coup D'Etat in America was careless, citing an error by the typesetter: a book was mistitled Heroin in Southeast Asia, rather than The Politics of Heroin in Southeast Asia. Another error in the bibliography of Coup D'Etat in America concerned Julius Mader's Who's Who in the CIA: "Here they give the East German address for Mader but manage to get it garbled through misspellings and elimination of a house number - such careful research!" The authors had a copy of Who's Who in the CIA, an esoteric publication. Forthcoming Books referred to a advertisement in the underground newspaper, Yipster Times, for the "Who Stole John F. Kennedy's Brain?" demonstration. The Yipster Times was another publication not readily available. Forthcoming Books summarized all the reviews of Coup D'Etat in America that had appeared to date, accused Joseph Okpaku of being a Communist who was funded by the Ford Foundation, and ended with the sentence: "To paraphrase Chairman Mao: 'Let a thousand lawsuits bloom; let a couple of authors get their lumps.'" The FBI: "Repeated searches of central records system indices revealed no information identifiable with Forthcoming Books." [FBI ltr. Bresson to WEBERMAN 2.12.79]

CORD MEYER AND THE INVISIBLE GOVERNMENT

When Random House published The Invisible Government, Cord Meyer visited Random House and offered to purchase the entire first printing of the book to keep it from public view. [NYT 12.25.77] David Wise reported that when The Invisible Government was published, "The CIA prepared a lengthy, detailed analysis of the book, designed to discredit it and the authors..." The CIA tried to generate hostile book reviews by activating its media assets. William Buckley wrote a column attacking it. [Wise The American Police State p192]

What they did to me was nothing compared with what they did to Congressman Gonzalez and Gail Beagle because they had credibility. Sure being Leftwing Yippie did not give me any credibility but it kept me alive I would never have organized the Who Stole JFK's Brain? demonstration outside the National Archives if this had not been the case. I would have never believed when I looked at the bum pictures that men in the CIA were capable of doing something like this if had not been on the Left. Another reason I am alive is because the CIA had a policy of not terminating the lives of those who accused it of doing just that. In the Craft of Intelligence Allen Dulles stated that if an Invisible Government existed in the United States authors like Ross and Wise, who exposed it, would be dead. Finally the CIA and FBI were able to throw so much shit about the tramp shots up against the wall that some of it finally stuck: as stated FBI Official Oliver Buck Revell and others were able to convince the America that the tramps had been identified and were genuine tramps. Revell's false news story happened late in the game and was not the first to attempt to discredit the tramp theory.

BERNARD FENSTERWALD

During 1975 "Bud" Fensterwald was this researcher's major antagonist. He did all that he could to discredit my work. Bernard Fensterwald was born August 2, 1921, in Nashville, Tennessee, the son of a wealthy clothing merchant. In 1941 his mother, Blanche Fensterwald, was a delegate to the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, sponsored by the Southern Regional Council. According to Julius Mader, the CIA had used the Southern Regional Council in some unspecified manner during the 1960's. [FBI MURKIN 44-3886-4358; FBI WFO 62-112697-1] The NY Office of the FBI prepared a report on Blanche Fensterwald on August 24, 1956. She was mentioned in four other FBI files. In 1942 Bernard Fensterwald graduated Magna Cum Laude from Harvard. He served in the Navy in World War II, and received a degree from Harvard Law School in 1949. That year, Bernard Fensterwald was the Subject of an FBI applicant type investigation. Bernard Fensterwald entered the Georgetown University School of Advanced International Studies, a private institution, and received an M.A. in 1950.

FENSTERWALD AND SENATOR JOSEPH McCARTHY

From 1951 to 1956 Bernard Fensterwald worked for the State Department as an Assistant Legal Advisor. Bernard Fensterwald defended several State Department employees accused by Senator Joseph McCarthy of Communist affiliation. Some may have been CIA agents who used State Department cover. In 1953 Senator Joseph McCarthy led a Senate fight against the confirmation of intelligence community insider Charles E. Bohlen as Ambassador to the USSR. The attacks of Senator Joseph McCarthy on the CIA culminated on July 9, 1953, when his assistant, Roy M. Cohn, called the Agency and demanded that William Bundy, a Special Assistant to the Deputy Director of Intelligence, testify before Senator Joseph McCarthy's Committee. Allen Dulles refused to allow William Bundy to appear. When NIXON backed Allen Dulles, Senator Joseph McCarthy was defeated. William Bundy became head of the International Organization Division of the CIA, London CIA Chief of Station, and Assistant Deputy Director, (Plans) under CIA Director William Colby. [Winks Cloak & Gown p444] In 1958 Fensterwald wrote a paper entitled The Anatomy Of American "Isolationism" and Expansionism Part I.

The author of this study is currently administrative assistant to a United States Senator. However research was begun in 1954 at Cambridge University where he was studying on a leave of absence from the Department of State. At that time he was an assistant to the department's legal advisor. He is a graduate of Harvard College, Harvard Law School and the School of Advanced International Studies of John Hopkins University. ## SENATOR ESTES KEFAUVER

In 1956 Bernard Fensterwald worked for Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.-TN) who had conducted televised hearings into the Mafia. Kefauver had called for the resignation of Mafia associate Morris Shenker from the Democratic National Committee. Shenker would get Fensterwald his next position in government and the possibility exists that Fensterwald was Shenker's spy. Shenker also represented many OC figures when they had been called to testify by the Kefauver Committee. In 1956 Senator Kefauver accepted the Vice-Presidential nomination on the Adlai Stevenson ticket, but both were defeated by the re-election of Dwight Eisenhower.

In 1957, with his mother, Fensterwald visited the Soviet Union. In 1957 the FBI stated, "Fensterwald has gone out of his way to be helpful." On May 14, 1957, Fensterwald contacted Louis B. Nichols of the FBI. Senator Henning had been asked to introduce legislation to block the deportation of Pierre LaFitte. LaFitte was a hardcore international criminal who had been previously deported back to his native France. While awaiting deportation he turned snitch and testified against his cellmate. The Mafia had a contract out on him and it did not want him deported as that would make it harder to eliminate him. An unnamed FBI official reported:

I told Fensterwald that this, of course, was a matter for the Immigration Service and on a purely personal and confidential basis the Senator should be exceedingly cautious before he got out on a limb; that if he inquired into LaFittes background he would find an extensive record; and that under no circumstances would the Bureau support LaFitte. I told him officially, of course, we could not take a position but that, personally, we would hate to see some friend embarrassed and he should be very cautious. Fensterwald stated that was enough for him. (Paragraph deleted) [FBI 66-18621-269]

In March 1957 the FBI seized Hoffa in a plot to bribe a Senate Staff Aide on the Senate Select Committee on Labor and Management Practices. Robert Kennedy said the approach to the staff member had been made by attorney Hyman Fishbach. Fishbach had accused Senator Margret Chase Smith of Maine of harboring communist inclinations when he went after HOFFA in 1957. The Justice Department dropped the charges against Fishbach. In March 1961 Fishbach was injured when a bomb exploded as he turned on the ignition to his car. In 1959 Fensterwald was the Subject of another applicant-type inquiry conducted by the FBI. On March 12, 1961, Bernard Fensterwald replaced Paul Rand Dixon as an investigator for the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee headed by Senator Estes Kefauver. These hearings send several prominent electrical company executives to prison for price-fixing. Paul R. Dixon became head of the Federal Trade Commission. In 1961 Senator Estes Kefauver was investigating the drug industry. Hank Messick reported Senator Estes Kefauver fired Bernard Fensterwald. In May 1963 Kefauver was hospitalized in Bethesda Naval Hospital with a case of Asian influenza. On August 8, 1963 Kefauver was hospitalized at Bethesda with what was described as a mild heart attack. He first believed he was suffering from acute indigestion. Tests at the hospital disclosed the heart attack. He was ordered to get several weeks of bed rest, however his condition worsened and on August 10, 1963 – while waiting open-heart surgery at Bethesda Naval Hospital, Kefauver died of a ruptured aorta which caused a massive hemorrhage. His body was taken home to Madisonville for burial and no autopsy was performed. The cause of death was listed as a dissecting aneurysm, or ballooning of the aorta. Was this a drug-induced myocardial infarction?

Circa 1967 Bernard Fensterwald left the State Department and was hired by Senator Thomas C. Hennings (Dem.-MO) as an investigator for the Senate Committee on Constitutional Rights. At this time the Democratic Party in Saint Louis, Missouri, was controlled by Morris Shenker, casino owner, Mafia house counsel and influence peddler at the highest levels of government. In 1951, when a Democratic Congressman from St. Louis Missouri died, the Republican opponent of the man the Democrats picked to run for his seat stated that her opponent had been handpicked by Morris Shenker. In 1954 Shenker had represented Truman pal Paul Dillon when Dillon was charged with not reporting income he received for facilitating the paroles of Mafia figures.

SHENKER AND HIS PUPPET EDWARD V. LONG

In 1960 Senator Thomas C. Hennings died of stomach cancer, and Edward Vaughan Long (born July 18, 1908) was appointed to take his place in Congress. Senator Edward V. Long was elected to a full six year term in 1962. Senator Edward V. Long was named Chairman of the Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure in 1963. In the mid-1960's Senator Edward V. Long was approached by Teamster Union boss James Hoffa, who was shopping for a congressional committee to investigate the tactics of United States Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy. Jimmy Hoffa was intent on retaliating against United States Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy for having exposed the connections of the Teamsters Union to organized crime, and for having indicted him on wiretapped evidence. Senator Long agreed to take up Jimmy Hoffa's fight against Robert F. Kennedy's alleged violations of civil liberties – for a price. Senator Edward V. Long was connected to Jimmy Hoffa through Attorney Morris Shenker, who worked on a five-figure retainer for Jimmy Hoffa. Senator Edward V. Long had received $48,000 from Morris Shenker for having referred Jimmy Hoffa to him. Senator Edward V. Long admitted living in the same Washington, D.C., apartment building as Jimmy Hoffa and said he had met him on several occasions.

Senator Long selected Bernard Fensterwald as his Chief Counsel. Bernard Fensterwald was described as a heavy John F. Kennedy financial supporter who harbored a grudge against the Kennedys for having failed to give him the Ambassadorial post he had coveted. [William Lambert Life 5.26.67] Long and Fensterwald represented the interests of Organized Crime in the United States Senate. Long could not submit a bill that would legalize loan sharking, prostitution etc but under the guise of protecting “civil rights” he could go after the politicians and law enforcement officials who were going after the Teamsters and their brothers in the Mafia. Bernard Fensterwald even had the nerve to demand the FBI reveal the names of organized crime figures who were the Subjects of mail covers. Life Magazine reported:

Three days later in Washington under the guise of getting urgent information for some future public hearings Chief Counsel Fensterwald began an unusual series of interviews of Justice Department lawyers and Carmine Bufalino case defendants. The transcripts of these secret interviews, which were never made public, begin with the statement that ‘the Subcommittee met, pursuant to notice...Bernard Fensterwald Jr. Chief Counsel for the Subcommittee presiding’ because no Senator was present. Notwithstanding Fensterwald's effort to give these sessions the appearance of an official proceeding, the interrogation could not be conducted under oath. Fensterwald for that matter could not ‘preside’ at a session of the committee. That is a privilege reserved for Senators. It was apparent from Fensterwald's questions that he had access to testimony taken in William Bufalino's Detroit lawsuit, and that his aim was to try to link Detroit police to the IRS, thence to Organized Crime and Racketeering Section of the Justice Department, as parties to a wiretapping conspiracy against Hoffa. The parade of witnesses included William Hundley, former Chief of the Organized Crime Section, plus several lawyers still working in the section; a former Justice Department lawyer who was hostile to Robert Kennedy, and several Detroit area law enforcement officials. [LIFE – May 26, 1967]

William Bufalino was an OC house counsel who represented HOFFA. Bufalino's complaint contained two counts. The first count set forth a claim for damages in the amount of $1,550,000, alleging that defendants tapped the telephone line serving plaintiff's residence and intercepted and divulged the contents of telephone calls of plaintiff, his wife and children, and also alleged that plaintiff's private, confidential and privileged conversations and communications with his clients were invaded, thereby causing serious harm to him in his profession as a lawyer and to the offices which he held. The second count was for damages in the amount of $2,100,000, alleging a conspiracy to tap plaintiff's telephone lines and intercept and divulge the contents of telephone calls in violation of his contractual rights and his right to privacy. After Hoffa's disappearance from a parking lot in a Detroit suburb, Mr. Bufalino said he believed the union leader had been involved in an effort by the Central Intelligence Agency to arrange for American members of the Mafia to assassinate Fidel Castro, the Cuban President. Under Mr. Bufalino's theory, Mr. Hoffa was killed to prevent him from disclosing anything about the alleged plot.

The Life Magazine article determined that Senator Long and his Chief Counsel Bernard "Bud" Fensterwald was strongly influenced to take up the investigations of Federal snooping by friends who were high in the teamsters union. The hearings conducted by Fensterwald "blunted the Justice Department's Organized Crime Drive by discrediting its participating governmental agencies; in particular the IRS." The article also stated that Senator Long had misused his investigating subcommittee – first as an instrument of for trying to keep Jimmy Hoffa out of prison; subsequently for trying to get Hoffa's conviction reversed.

Mr. Fensterwald said Life Magazine had not established any connection between the wiretapping investigation and the efforts by Hoffa and his counsel to keep the teamster leader out of jail or get a reversal of his conviction. Mr. Fensterwald also intimated that the information about the referral fees had been leaked to Life Magazine by the IRS, which has been a principal object of Long's inquiring. Fensterwald claimed, "We have tried to stay out of all cases in litigation. We have stayed religiously clear of the Hoffa case.

[COUNSEL DEFENDS MOTIVES OF LONG; Denies Wiretap Inquiry Was Designed to Help Hoffa Close Friend of Senator Dirksen Rarely at Sessions By E. W. KENWORTHY Special to The New York Times May 22, 1967]

Fensterwald accused Robert Kennedy of having planted an article in Life Magazine about Hoffa thereby trying Hoffa through the media. RFK had put Life Magazine in touch with Baron, a disgruntled Teamster. According to Robert Kennedy "There was a connection between Mr. Sam Baron and Life Magazine over which I had no control and which was only to be published in case Mr. Baron was killed."

Fensterwald observed that there was nothing in the document describing plans for a possible article in Life to indicate that the article was to be published only in case of Mr. Baron's death. 'The article at that stage' Mr. Fensterwald said, 'had not been written. This was an arrangement whereby I understand it; you were putting what would normally be described as 'a fink' in touch with Time Life to write a magazine article?' Normally described as what?' Mr. Kennedy asked. "Fink F-I-N-K" Mr Fensterwald said spelling the word. "A stool pigeon. Does that word strike a chord?" "I thought it was a citizen who was reporting information and evidence in connection with illegal activities." The Senator said. "Let me say" Mr. Kennedy resumed, "I am shocked to hear that. I think there have been a lot of loyal people, if I may say Mr. Counsel that provided information to the United States Government in connection with Communist activities, underworld activities, narcotics activities at great risk to their own lives and I that is that has been very, very helpful to the United States. And it is also your position Sir" Mr. Fensterwald went on, "that it is proper for an attorney General to take sure people, even when a case is under investigation and indictment, and attempt to see that their testimony is printed in the public press rather than being taken in court." That is not the way it was done, Mr. Counsel" the Senator replied, "I never did anything like that."

It was true that the Internal Revenue Service had leaked word of Morris Shenker's payment to Senator Edward V. Long to William Lambert of Life magazine. In the mid-1960s, Florida Governor Claude Kirk commissioned Wackenhut to help fight the "war on organized crime"; this $500,000 contract lasted about a year and led to more than 80 criminal indictments, including many local politicians and government employees. Kirk was asked by Bernard Fensterwald about the possibility of a security risk or a conflict. Fensterwald also subpoenaed Post Office officials and questioned them about the use of mail covers and peep hole that allowed postal office personnel to read letters without opening them. In January 1975 Bernard Fensterwald testified on behalf of Morris Shenker at a Hearing of the Gaming Control Board in Nevada.

The FBI stated:

A review of Bureau file reveals no information directly connecting Senator Long with the leadership of La Cosa Nostra or other top racket figures. A review of data regarding certain of Long's legal clients "shared" with Shenker, who has represented Teamster boss James Hoffa and who is described as being connected with various racket figures, shows connections with the hoodlum element and activities of questionable legality. [FBI 92-6054-2227]

In 1967 Senator Edward V. Long was called before the Senate Ethics Committee and questioned about his connections to Jimmy Hoffa. In 1967 Frederick Praeger published The Intruders by Senator Edward V. Long. The book was dedicated to Fensterwald. Senator Edward V. Long was forced to resign in December 1968. The government service of Bernard Fensterwald ended with the downfall of Senator Edward V. Long. [FBI WFO 112697-1; NYT 3.28.73] In November 1971 Fensterwald stated that the FBI "was lax in investigating organized crime because many Congressmen had connections with the mafia." [62-113904-40]

Fensterwald was a disgruntled Kennedy supporter who was going to settle his vendetta with the Kennedy's by hooking up with James Riddle Hoffa. I thought Fensterwald was working for the CIA but I was wrong. He was working for the mob AND the CIA. By 1966 the CIA had an interest in protecting certain members of organized crime, since the CIA worked with them in anti-Castro plotting. Whenever the CIA had an interest in something, such as McCarthy going after CIA agents under State Department cover, Fensterwald was on the scene.

Senator Edward V. Long planned to call Robert Maheu to testify about invasions of privacy by private investigators. The CIA feared that its involvement with Robert Maheu and Johnny Rosselli would have surfaced during these hearings. The CIA reported:

Upon notification for appearance before the Subcommittee, Mr. Maheu contacted his attorney, Edward Morgan of Washington, D.C. Mr. Morgan in turned contacted Mr. Morris Shenker, an attorney in Saint Louis, Missouri, who personally knows Senator Edward V. Long. It is reported that a meeting was arranged to discuss the appearance of Mr. Maheu before the Subcommittee which meeting was attended by Senator Long, his staff assistant Mr. Bernard Fensterwald (who is performing the staff work for the Subcommittee hearings) Mr. Morgan and Mr. Shenker.

On June 6, 1966, Robert Maheu told CIA's Director of Assistant Deputy Director of Security, (IOS) James P. O'Connell, that he got ...the impression from Morgan, who is still dealing with the Saint Louis attorney [Shenker], a personal friend of Senator Long, that the Committee has done some additional checking, and earlier information regarding Maheu's activities may not be as solid as earlier believed. I next asked Robert Maheu if Bernard Fensterwald had actually identified Sam Giancana, Onassis, Niarchus etc. by name as he had previously indicated to Colonel Sheffield Edwards and myself. He replied in the affirmative, and speculated that this convinced him someone has been 'talking.' He conjectured that several people knew about the bug on Onassis's New York office, including Taggart who, to date, has not contacted him. John Frank, former CIA employee, and a John Geraghty (phonetic), a free lance newspaperman who was employed by him at the time. In the case of Sam, Ed Dubois and a couple of his technicians were aware of Maheu's tie-in with Giancana. While Bob [Robert Maheu] was not identified in the press as being involved, he was definitely linked as a result of the technicians identified in the press as being involved, he was definitely linked as a result of the technician, who, when arrested and detained at the Sheriff's office in Las Vegas, failing to locate Dubois, telephoned Maheu directly at the Kennelworth Hotel, Miami Beach, in the presence of Sheriff's personnel, to advise him of his compromise. According to Maheu, neither Dubois nor his employees, were aware of the true relationship between Maheu and Sam.

The CIA then reported:

According to Maheu, Shenker has some strong hold on Senator Long and also has Bernard Fensterwald indebted to him as he got Fensterwald his job...Maheu claims that this case could be "closed-up" if we merely approach Senator Long, and say that the questioning of Maheu might be harmful to the national security. He implies that while Senator Long has agreed not to call him, the Senator is looking for something on which to base this decision and our approach would be sufficient to clinch the situation.

The CIA felt "...Fensterwald will approach us about any problem areas from our point of view." [CIA Memo DD/CIA from Houston 6.21.66] The CIA reported:

In 1966 information was received by the Agency indicating that the Senate Administrative Practices Subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Senator Edward Long, had advised Maheu that his testimony was desired concerning his relationship with Onassis, Savros Niarchos, Sam Giancana and (Deleted as of 2010). The Subcommittee interest was invasion of privacy and particularly the use of audio devices by private investigators. In July 1966, Senator Long was alerted to the fact that the Agency had had sensitive operational contacts with Maheu. Senator Long was told that the Agency had used Maheu over the years, on a number of occasions, but that he never had been asked to engage in any wiretapping and had never engaged in any such activities on our behalf. Office of Security files do not indicate whether or not Maheu did appear before this Subcommittee, although it appears that he did not.

Robert Maheu never testified. The subcommittee held widely publicized hearings and damaged Robert F. Kennedy, but not the CIA. The CIA compiled a dossier on Senator Edward V. Long. [NYT 1.17.75 p9] Maheu died August 6, 2008 at age 90.

THE DEATH OF EDWARD LONG

On November 6, 1972, ex-Senator Edward V. Long died. Thomas Osborn, prosecuting attorney of Audrain County, who has been appointed a special investigator in the Long case said that Miss Helen Dunlop [Long's mistress and secretary] had not told authorities about Mr. Long's reported statement on being poisoned until early April 1973. She told him that a box of candy had arrived at Mr. Long's estate called Brookville Farm in Clarksville, Mo. November 2, 1973 and that she had typed a letter of thanks to an unidentified suburban man whose business card accompanied the box. Miss Dunlop, who is 46, told investigators she later saw the box opened at the Brookville Home November 5 when she visited the Senator. On November 6, 1973 she said, she was notified that the Senator was ill and went to Brookville, where Mr. Long complained that the candy tasted bitter and that he thought he had been poisoned because his arms and legs felt numb. A few hours later, before a physician could arrive Mr. Long was dead. The candy was never recovered. The man whose name was on the business card said he had not been associated with the business noted on the card when the candy was sent and has denied sending it to Mr. Long. He was not identified by authorities. (NYT April 21, 1973) In April 1973 the body of Edward V. Long was exhumed. The only identifiable substances found in his stomach were parts of an undigested apple. [NYT 5.3.73] Judging from his past associations Long very well might have been poisoned by an untraceable poison. If this was the case it was the CIA, not the mob.

THE COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ASSASSINATIONS

In January 1969, two months after having left Senator Edward V. Long's "Get Robert F. Kennedy Subcommittee," Bernard Fensterwald founded the Committee To Investigate Assassinations, which was allegedly dedicated to finding the real assassins of John F. Kennedy. ANGLETON'S Deputy, James Hunt, asked the FBI for more information on the Committee To Investigate Assassinations. [FBI 62-19060-6681] The CIA:

Our records show that Richard Sprague, a management consultant and photographic researcher, appeared in a New York Times article of May 24, 1968, in which he claimed that within an hour of the assassination of President Kennedy three men may have been pulled off freight cars in a railroad yard near Dealey Plaza. We have no further identifiable record of him.

The Committee to Investigate Assassinations was formed by Fensterwald and Sprague, not to reveal the truth about the Kennedy assassination, but to suppress it. Many of JACK RUBY'S CALLS A lot of researchers like Jim Lesar, Kevin Walsch and others were fooled by Fensterwald and worked with him and were influenced by him.

BERNARD FENSTERWALD AND JAMES EARL RAY

In March 1969 Fensterwald told the press that the CHRIST tramp, who he called Frenchy resembled the sketch of Ray's "Raoul."

JFK, KING DEATH LINK IS CLAIMED

(Washington UPI) A private committee contends it has found a link between the slaying of JFK and MLK Jr. Bernard Fensterwald Jr. told a news conference Monday the alleged link is a picture taken of in Dallas an hour after Kennedy was shot. The photograph is a blown-up shot of a man supposedly being arrested in Dealey Plaza in Dallas. Fensterwald exhibited the photograph and said the man pictured strongly resembled a police sketch made in Memphis from accounts of eyewitnesses to the King assassination.

In a Ramparts Magazine article written in 1968 William Turner had pointed out the resemblance between the CHRIST tramp and the MLK assailant sketch. Fensterwald was going to overshadow Turner so that he would be sure that anyone with further information would approach him and not Turner.

In the spring of 1970 James Earl Ray hired Bernard Fensterwald as his attorney; he fired him in 1976. In June 1974 Bernard Fensterwald filed a motion to grant James Earl Ray a new trial on the basis of alleged collusion between William Bradford Huie and the former attorneys of James Earl Ray. Bernard Fensterwald was involved with a lot of bogus activity surrounding the King assassination. In September 1974, Robert Livingston, a Memphis lawyer and Special Deputy Sheriff, held a press conference at which he announced: "There were three gunmen, one from the underworld who is now serving a sentence in a Canadian prison and proposes to testify to give a complete expose of the King murder case and to give names and telephone numbers of the four...wealthy, socially prominent Americans...one black...who hired him...for $100,000 to kill King."

Robert Livingston contacted Memphis attorney Russell X. Thompson and asked him to represent these hired killers, who agreed to testify if they were granted complete immunity. Russell X. Thompson was known as a liberal, and represented the NAACP. Russell X. Thompson received a phone call from one of the alleged gunman who wanted $3000 to come to Memphis.

Bernard Fensterwald and Robert Livingston allegedly met one of the gun man in Detroit, then took him to Tennessee to see James Earl Ray. James Earl Ray refused to speak with him and the "hired gun men" story proved false. Priscilla Johnson's former husband, George McMillan, believed he knew the identity of one of the hired gun men. George McMillan did a book on the Martin Luther King killing, Portrait of an Assassin. "I have always believed that James Earl Ray did it alone" said George McMillan. In 1994 James Earl Ray became suspicious of Bernard Fensterwald:

When he first started representing me he appeared very diligent; however, after he obtained the evidentiary hearing in the Memphis Federal Court he appeared to become very defensive in prosecuting the matter. He wouldn't permit his associate, Jim Lesar, to ask certain witnesses questions. Lesar's intentions were okay but he did not have the experience to brief a H.C. case. After the evidentiary hearing in Memphis, Fensterwald asked me to let Lesar file the briefs to the 6th circuit and argue them at the hearing. At that time Lesar was young and not a cr. Attorney. The next time I saw Fensterwald was 15 years later (1990), I think, in Brushy Mountain prison. He showed me a picture along with some information about a dude named Smith...Fensterwald asked if Smith was Raoul. Now Smith was an Anglo and I assumed he spoke with a Texas accent, i.e. he had very little in common with Raoul. About three months ago I filed an FOIA request with the FBI/JD asking for Fensterwald's private files.

In 1983 an administrative law judge ruled that the 22 members of a disbanded Navy intelligence unit that spied on maritime operations around the world were government employees even though they had signed contracts with front corporations set up to cloak their naval ties. The Navy had argued that the former spies were ineligible for normal civil service benefits. Fensterwald won the case.

JAMES McCORD AND FENSTERWALD

On May 24, 1972, JAMES W. McCORD retained Bernard Fensterwald as his counsel in Watergate. After he was arrested at Watergate, McCORD was going to blame the break-in on the CIA, but McCORD changed his mind. McCORD stated:

I have released Gerald Alch as my defense attorney in the Watergate case [and hired Bernard Fensterwald who put up $40,000 bail for McCORD]. In a meeting recently in which our defense plans for Watergate trial were discussed, Alch persisted in a proposal that I claim the Watergate operation was a CIA operation. That is flatly untrue, and when I rejected it, he then went on to make a second proposal. The second proposal then was that I claim that the four Cubans and I cooked up the bugging operation on our own. This was also untrue. [Ervin Hearings p3444]

GERALD ALCH

Gerald Alch denied McCORD'S charges. He said that McCORD'S statement that he told McCORD that his CIA records could be altered to support the claim Watergate was a CIA operation was also false. Gerald Alch, a former associate of F. Lee Bailey who is now a judge in Massachusetts, testified to the Senate Select Committee on Illegal Campaign Activities: "Bernard Fensterwald said to McCORD, 'The reporters have been asking me whether or not you or I had ever had any past relationship? I told him that we had...Well, after all, you have in the past submitted me checks which were donations to the Committee To Investigate Assassinations.' McCORD smiled and said 'That's right.'"

McCORD ASSOCIATES

The Committee To Investigate Assassinations was funded by McCORD ASSOCIATES, which for all practical purposes, was a CIA proprietary. The CIA reported that U.S. Attorney Earl Silbert

...is aware that Ralph True was going to go to work for McCORD. [He] would like to know of any other individuals who possibly had been talked to by McCORD when looking toward employment.

The CIA listed 12 former CIA employees who had applied to McCORD ASSOCIATES for work:

(1) William Francis Shea. Entered On Duty 1951, Office of Strategic Research, DDI Intelligence Officer at the time of his resignation. He had (deleted as of 2010) resigned in lieu of termination and may not be to favorably disposed toward the Agency. As previously indicated, his wife, Therese Mae Shea, works as a secretary at McCord Associates. The Office of Personnel referred Mr. Shea to McCORD Associates in 1971, and Dr. Edward M. Gunn indicated that Mr. Shea is affiliated with the Institute for Protection and Safety Studies, Inc.

(2) Therese Mae Shea. Entered on duty at the CIA in 1948. Wife of William Francis Shea. Hired by McCORD as secretary.

(3) James Corbin Fitchett. Entered On Duty 1951. Was supposed to be hired June 30, 1972, to work with the Committee to Re-elect President NIXON.

(4) Ross Ward Lambert a former OSS employee, served with the Agency from January 11, 1965, to August 9, 1971, and was a GS-13, Contract Employee assigned to the Special Operations Division/DDP, at the time of his resignation. Mr. Lambert served extensively in the Far East Division overseas posts, and there was a previous security interest in the case because of his daughter's involvement in activities of the Students for a Democratic Society, SDS. The Office of Personnel referred Mr. Lambert to McCord Associates but he took a job elsewhere.

(5) Louis Edgar Sherrad. Served with the Agency from July 2, 1952, until January 31, 1969, when he resigned. Security Officer assigned to the Security Research Staff. Background centers on industrial and physical security.

(6) Ralph Orlando True. Entered On Duty 1950. Still Agency employed. Ralph Orlando True was also supposed to retire on June 30, 1972, and join McCORD ASSOCIATES.

(7) Dr. Edward Mansfield Gunn. Entered On Duty 1955. Served with the Agency until May 31, 1971, and was a GS-17, Deputy Director of Medical Services, at the time of his retirement. Dr. Gunn was interviewed by an Office of Security representative on June 19, 1972, and discussed in some detail his involvement with the Institute for Protection and Safety Studies, Inc. which is affiliated with McCORD Associates and occupies space in the same offices. Hired.

(8) Dr. Jacob Victor Golder. Former GS-15, Chief of Psychological Services Staff/Office of Medical Services.

(9) Harry Thayer Mahoney. Entered On Duty 1951. In 1972 he was a GS-14 Operations Officer assigned to Western Hemisphere Division/DDP. He had been acquainted with HOWARD HUNT and McCORD through the years. In 1976 Harry T. Mahoney worked for the Burns International Investigation Bureau. Mahoney had written CIA Agent David McLean a letter mentioning FRANK STURGIS. [Harry Mahoney 1110 Shady Lane, Wheaton, Il. 60187 AFIO 1994; Counterspy Spring 1976]

(10) James Louis Baker served with the Agency from July 2, 1952 until June 24, 1972 when his contract was allowed to expire. Mr. Baker, a GS-

12. Operations Officer assigned to Special Operations Division/DDP, was in Saigon, South Vietnam from April 1968 to July 24, 1971 when he was returned to Headquarters because of serious (deleted) problems involving his wife. Divorce proceedings continued through early 1972, and his case has been monitored by the Office of Personnel. Subject was referred to McCord Associates by the Office of Personnel, but he acquired a position with the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs effective as of June 26, 1972. His application may possibly be on file at McCord Associates.

(11) George Theodore Stanton. Served with the Agency from August 4, 1947, to January 8, 1972, and was a GS-14, Operations Officer, assigned to the Counter-Intelligence Staff/DDP. Dr. Gunn indicated that Mr. Stanton has been serving as a consultant to the Institute for Protection and Safety Studies, Inc.

(12) Walter Edward Brayden. Entered On Duty 1947. Hired. Intelligence Officer, DD/P. In April 1972, he served as guard for Mrs. Martha Mitchell on a trip to Chicago.

The CIA reported that McCORD

...gave him his expense account money in ten new one hundred dollar bills. McCORD wanted Braydon to carry a gun, and when Braydon showed reluctance McCORD told him it was OK since he was working to the Attorney General of the U.S. O'Malley also said that Brayden performed security sweeps of the office of the Committee to Re-elect the President. [CIA Memo For: DD/Pers/SP Subject: Meeting with Frank O'Malley]

Shea gave up eavesdropping and in 1980 wrote "The role and function of technology in American popular music, 1945-1964." Mr. Fitchett holds an M.A. in government from the Maxwell School of Syracuse University and an A. B. in political science from the American University in Washington, D.C. He is a former Trustee and Chairman of the Board of the Boston Society for Information Management. Mr. Fitchett often speaks at national conferences and has published in health care journals and texts. Ross Ward Lambert was an expert on computer enhancement of sound and computer voice recognition. In April 1947 Ralph Orlando True, Jr., was an OSS agent and assistant attaché in Greece working under Thomas Karamessines. Doctor Gunn was hired by McCord Associates to poison people! Harry Thayer Mahoney was a retired CIA agent and author of numerous books chronicling espionage and documenting the lives of Communists like Leon Trotsky. Harry was a CIA historian. George Stanton wrote "Defense Against Communist Interrogation Organizations." [Studies in Intelligence 13, no. 4 (Fall 1969)]

THE DEATH OF MARTHA MITCHELL

AJ WEBERMAN TURNS MARTHA MITCHELL ON TO THE CONNECTIONS BETWEEN THE JFK HIT AND WATERGATE

Martha Mitchell died on June 1, 1976. She was 57. Her physician, Dr. Klaus Mayer, attributed her death to multiple myeloma, a rare type of malignancy that attacked bone marrow, complicated by hemorrhage and terminal bronchial pneumonia. Martha Mitchell was unconscious as a result of a heart attack. In 1994 Dr. Klaus Mayer stated: "There was nothing suspicious about her death. She had a not-so-rare type malignancy which is almost always fatal, and in her case, it was. She was bleeding from the G.I. tract, but that's not so unusual either. She drank a fair amount. Her illness was complicated by hemorrhage and terminal bronchial pneumonia because she was on cortisone-like drugs which provoke that sort of thing. She had an autopsy. When we saw her she was slowly, but surely, going to die of a disease that everybody I've ever known would die of. She was being treated for bone marrow cancer before I saw her. That was a straight forward disease. There is no way of giving it, or inducing it. Not even radiation. What is interesting is how she was treated in California after she squealed on the NIXON administration. She claimed, and I have no evidence to work on, things like that may have occurred before she suspected it. But not for a period of time. No one got near her at the hospital or at home. She was in the advanced stages of a malignant disease."

Most of the applicants referred to McCORD ASSOCIATES by the CIA were hired. What they were to do for McCORD ASSOCIATES remained a mystery. McCORD knew CHRIST and ANGLETON. McCORD might have been in Dealey Plaza disguised as a Secret Service agent. He looked the part. Why had he supported an organization like the Committee To Investigate Assassinations which was supposed to uncover his crime?

McCORD, LOUIS RUSSELL AND FENSTERWALD

Louis Russell was the intermediary between McCORD ASSOCIATES and Bernard Fensterwald. Born in Louisville, Kentucky, Louis Russell was the son of an FBI Agent. In 1937 he joined the Bureau, and worked there until 1944, when he was forced to leave because of alcoholism. From 1945 to 1954, Louis Russell worked as an investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee and became its Chief Investigator in 1949. Louis Russell worked with NIXON on the Alger Hiss case. In 1954 he was fired for drinking, but was reinstated by Senator James O. Eastland (Dem.-MS), and remained with the House Un-American Activities Committee until 1966. In January 1972 Louis Russell met with JAMES McCORD, and was hired by the Committee to Re-elect President NIXON and by McCORD ASSOCIATES and by Fensterwald's COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ASSASSINATIONS. [FBI DC 139-166 rel. 6.27.72] Louis Russell was interviewed by Special Agents of the FBI on June 29, 1972:

He does not recall ever receiving a phone call on April 25, 1972, from McCord Associates to the phone number 234-9746 which is the pay telephone located in the hall of the rooming house where he resides. He advised that he does know JAMES McCORD of McCORD Associates and that he is employed by JAMES McCORD. He stated that the phone call could have been taken by any of the tenants living in the rooming house...He first met JAMES McCORD in January or February 1972 at Scholls Restaurant in Washington, D.C. at which time McCORD asked him to work for him as an investigator for the National Committee to Re-elect the President. He stated that McCORD said he was recommended to by someone, whose name he did not disclose. Russell advised that this is probably correct as he has done investigative work in an around Washington, D.C. for some time. He said his first job was to do a background check on a female, name 'Jane' (LNU) who was in the employ of the National Committee to Re-elect the President. He said for that job he received $40 paid by check in advance by McCORD. His next job was a background check on a male 'hippie' messenger for the National Committee to Re-elect the President. He said for that for this job he received $25. He advised he was also asked to check out a magazine by the title of The Sociables and a woman by the name of Rita Gerin. He gave written reports to McCORD on all the above cases. On June 1, 1972, McCORD put him on retainer of $710 per month to continue until the Presidential Election was over with the purpose of investigating Jack Anderson to determine the source of Anderson's information. He furnished McCORD with one report on Anderson for which he received $75. He stated that he worked this case solely during the month of June but that now that the 'Democratic Committee Bugging Incident Occurred' he does not know if he will still be employed by McCORD. He advised that he also worked for McCORD as a security guard at 1701 Pennsylvania Avenue, Northwest, Washington, D.C. for about two weeks prior to being put on retainer by McCORD. He said that it was his understanding he was employed by the National Committee to Re-elect the President and was hired by JAMES McCORD. His checks were drawn on the Maryland National Bank on the account of Mr. and Mrs. James McCORD or McCORD Associates. He couldn't remember which.

He said that he saw JAMES and Mrs. McCORD last night at their home, but that they did not discuss the break-in of the Democratic National Headquarters, nor did McCORD give any information as to Russell's current employment status with the National Committee to Re-elect the President. As far as the Anderson investigation was concerned Russell stated that he was never told what person, or persons, in the National Committee to Re-elect the President was interested or requested the Anderson investigation.

Russell advised that his background concerning investigative work started in 1937 when he was a Special Agent for the FBI. He was employed by the FBI from June 1937 until 1944, when he left the FBI because of personal reasons; i.e. first wife committing suicide and his becoming a heavy drinker. He stated that most of his work in the FBI was in the Washington, D.C. area. After 1944 he worked in many varied jobs and found work wherever he could. From 1945 until 1954 he worked as an investigator for the House Committee on Un-American Activities and was fired in 1954 for drinking, but was reinstated in 1957 by Francis B. Walter. He stayed with the House Committee on Un-American Activities until 1967. Since that time he has worked varied jobs, but mainly doing investigations and background checks for clients. He admitted that at one time he was an alcoholic, and a member of Alcoholics Anonymous. He ran a home for Alcoholics Anonymous from February 1969 to 1970. He stated that his name has appeared in the following books: Six Crisis by RICHARD NIXON, The Committee by Walter Goodman and The Witness by Whitaker Chambers.

The Senate Select Committee on Illegal Campaign Practices stated in its Minority Report:

The Committee did review evidence of a potential link between JAMES MCCORD and the security guard force [of the Watergate Hotel] in the person of Mr. Louis Russell as follows. On June 8, 1973, Mr. F. Kelly Chamberlain, ex-Vice President of General Security Services, Inc. (In charge of the Watergate security force), advised the staff the Mr. L. J. Russell did 'piece work' for that organization between December 1971 and March 1972. Chamberlain stated that Russell's work had no relation to the Watergate complex and that he had no knowledge of any acquaintance between Russell and Frank Willis, the guard who reported the possibility of illegal entry on June 17, 1972, to the police...The Louis Russell referred to by Mr. Chamberlain is the same person employed by JAMES MCCORD on June 16, 1972, through June 17, 1972. Russell advised the staff that he had worked for General Security as late as January 1972, but that he did not know Frank Willis...Russell stated that he never met any Watergate figures other than MCCORD; was not aware of MCCORD'S Watergate-related plans or activities until learning of the arrests in the newspapers on June 18, 1972. Russell did state that he had eaten at the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge across from the Watergate on the night of June 16, 1972, but that his presence there on the eve of the break-in was merely coincidental...On July 3, 1972, Russell told the FBI that he had eaten at the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge between 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. on June 16, 1972, because he had fond memories of that restaurant. Russell asserted he did not see McCORD while he was at Howard Johnson's and was able to identify photographs of Baldwin and HUNT, but he could not remember where he had seen them. On May 9, 1973, Russell advised the Chief Counsel of this Committee that he maintained no bank account prior to 1969 and could produce no statements for the Committee. Mr. William Birely advised the Committee on August 27, 1973, that he had known Russell for approximately two years and that he employed Russell as a researcher on a part-time basis and rented Russell quarters adjacent to his office space. He described Russell as a Democrat who was extremely critical of President NIXON. Louis James Russell died on July 2, 1973, without being re-interviewed by the staff.

On July 2, 1973, about a month after Judge Gerald Alch testified about McCORD'S connection to Fensterwald, Louis Russell, 61, was found dead of a heart attack in the home of his daughter in Maryland. He had previously been in Washington Adventist Hospital, but had been released about ten days before he died. He was never questioned by the Senate Select Committee on Illegal Campaign Activities. The request of Alger Hiss for a ruling on the death of Louis Russell was turned down. [KGB Yakovlev Wash. Silhouettes p122] McCORD stated:

A false allegation was made shortly after March 23, 1973, that E. HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS were in Dallas at the time the President was killed, and a photograph was circulated purporting to be HUNT and STURGIS there at the time. Persons I know circulated and touted the story to the press, knowing the allegation was false in its entirety, and further that the men in the photographs bore no resemblance whatever to HUNT and STURGIS. I know that HUNT was not in Dallas and had no connection whatever with the President's death...Great anguish and damage has been done to HUNT, and no doubt will be taken into consideration by a parole board considering his release from prison.

[McCORD ltr. to Dan Schultz 12.17.76] On November 10, 1973, McCORD threatened to sue Paul Krassner, the publisher of the Realist, for libel, after Krassner ran an article by Mae Brussell that linked McCORD to Dealey Plaza.

McCORD AND LEE PENNINGTON

Leonard W. Pennington, left his job with the FBI, where he served as liaison with the American Legion, to help organize the American Security Council. Pennington became the Internal Security Editor and Washington Bureau Chief of the American Security Council. In 1964, Lee Pennington was involved in an investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy for the American Security Council. The Director of the American Security Council, John Fisher, also a former FBI Special Agent, telephoned the FBI in 1964 and told the Bureau that Lee Pennington knew someone who knew the Paine family. [NYT 7.3.73; FBI CG 62-6115 12.5.63] From 1983 to 1984 John Fisher raised money for the Nicaraguan Contras. In 1985 he joined the World Anticommunist League (whose members included Alpha-66) in its fight against the Sandinistas.

The report of Senator Howard Baker on the CIA's involvement in Watergate stated that Lee Pennington was a "domestic agent...possibly in violation of the CIA's Charter." In August 1975 there was a break-in at the home of Senator Howard Baker, however, no valuables were reported missing. [Wise American Police State p164]

THE TWO PENNINGTONS

The CIA reported:

The Pennington Matter: For many years a man named Lee Pennington has been retained by the CIA as a Confidential Informant. His compensation from the CIA has been $250 per month. Mr. Howard Osborn stated that he has no idea what kind of information has been supplied to the Agency by Pennington in exchange for the compensation paid him.

In August 1972 Mr. Osborn was on vacation during the time his deputy (Deleted) was in charge of the Office of Security. (The Office of Security had been designated by the DCI as the liaison with all other governmental agencies and departments relating to Watergate matters).

While Mr. Osborn was on vacation an FBI Agent named Arnold Parham contacted the Office of Security and requested information on a man simply known as 'Pennington.' The request was directed to Steve Kuhn of the Office of Security. Steve Kuhn's Deputy, Hollis Whitaker, took the request of Agent Arnold Parham to (deleted as of 2010) and asked whether the FBI should be given the names of both Penningtons or just one of them. (Deleted as of 2010) [Gaynor] instructed Whitaker that Parham should be supplied only with the name of Cecil Harold Pennington, a retired employee of the CIA, who was not related in any way to Lee Pennington. [Cecil Harold Pennington was a former CIA Staff Employee, who retired in 1961.] (Deleted as of 2010) instructed Whitaker that Lee Pennington's name should not be given to Parham.

On August 25, 1972, the FBI reviewed Cecil Pennington's CIA file. The FBI found: "No indication from CIA record that Cecil Pennington served as McCORD'S supervisor." When the FBI interviewed Cecil Pennington, it found that "he was associated with, and was a co-worker (not supervisor) of McCORD, but has had no contact with McCORD since he retired in April 1961."

The CIA reported:

(Deleted as of 2010) [Gaynor] instructed Hollis Whitaker that Lee Pennington's name should not be given to Parham. (Deleted as of 2010) would have known that JAMES McCORD, while he was employed in the Office of Security, had acted as the Case Officer for Lee Pennington, that McCORD was involved in the Watergate break-in, and that the FBI was really interested in Lee Pennington.

Howard Osborn states that all of the above information came to his attention in February 1974 and that he had no knowledge of it until that time.

Lee Pennington and a man named (Deleted as of 2010) were the only two confidential informants who Osborn can think of who were employed as such by the Office of Security during his tenure with that office. (This is in addition to CIA employees and the employees of propriety investigating companies who have been used as informants.) [Several lines deleted]

Mr. Pennington was apparently terminated as a CIA informant on December 31, 1973. Howard Osborn states that he started action to terminate (Deleted as of 2010) in about January or February 1973. He thought that (Deleted as of 2010) had never provided anything to the Office of Security and that it was no crime to have a domestic informant.

Both Pennington and (Deleted as of 2010) had been informants for the Office of Security for many years. They had been retained in that capacity even before Osborn became Deputy Director of Security in 1963.

PENNINGTON BURNS McCORD'S FILES

In February 1974, in connection with a search of files in the Office of Security, some indication was turned up the Howard Osborn had been informed in January 1973 about the fact that Lee Pennington had entered the home and office of McCORD at the request of Mrs. McCORD on January 22, 1972, to locate and destroy records which would have revealed a 'link' between McCORD and the CIA. Howard Osborn denies that he ever received any such information. The information was allegedly given to him by Paul Gaynor, Chief of Security Research, in the Office of Security.

Paul Gaynor retired in 1973 at the request of Osborn, who had been directed to cut out a GS-16 from his staff in a personnel reduction move. He states that Mr. Gaynor accepted his request gracefully and retired.

Osborn and Paul Gaynor have never discussed with each other the subject of Lee Pennington or the deception practiced on the FBI in August 1972. Osborn does not think that Gaynor opened up the subject, but he does believe that Gaynor has testified before either one of the Congressional Committees investigating Watergate of the Special Prosecutor's Office.

After Mr. Gaynor retired, Lou Vasaly of the Office of Security has handled contacts with (Deleted as of 2010) and Pennington. In January or February 1974 Mr. Osborn sent Sidney Steinbridge of the Office of Security to New York to terminate (Deleted as of 2010).

On September 1, 1972, Lee Pennington was interviewed by the FBI. Lee Pennington stated:

He has been acquainted with McCORD since the mid-1950's and since the Watergate incident on June 17, 1972, Lee Pennington met with McCORD about six times. One or two days after McCORD'S arrest, Lee Pennington brought dinner to the McCORD family at their residence. He made no mention of having seen Mrs. McCord burn any papers or that he participated in such a burning. We did not recheck with CIA as there was no reason to do so.

In January 1973 Howard Osborn, the Director/Office of Security of the CIA ordered that all CIA files about Lee Pennington be removed from the CIA Watergate files. As a result of this, the Director/Office of Security was forced to resign. No investigation concerning

Lee Pennington's involvement in the alleged burning incident was requested by the Special Prosecution Force. [5.1.74 Memo Agent Angelo J. Leno, WFO/USA Earl J. Silbert]

Senator Howard Baker said Lee Pennington burned McCORD'S files in McCORD'S home, two days after the Watergate break-in. Senator Howard Baker believed Lee Pennington told Paul Gaynor of this activity in June 1972. Paul Gaynor, who had been slated to be hired by McCORD ASSOCIATES after his retirement, denied it, although he could not deny his association with McCORD:

On June 23, 1972, Leo J. Dunn, Deputy Director, Personnel Security, CIA, advised telephone number (deleted) is a CIA number for Paul Gaynor who would retire as of June 30, 1972, as Chief, Research Division, Office of Security, CIA. Dunn furnished a June 21, 1972, memorandum regarding (deleted) association with McCORD and a copy of his biographical data. [FBI Bufile 4679-647X]

McCORD communicated with Paul Gaynor after Watergate. In a memorandum for the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Richard Helms, from CIA Inspector General William V. Broe, Potential Flap Activities, Contacts With Watergate Figures [5.21.73 rel. 8.15.76], it was noted:

McCORD had written letters to the Agency since his arrest. The first dated July 29, 1972, was addressed to Richard Helms and was handled as a routine crank letter until it was recognized that the "JIM" who signed it was McCORD. Later letters from McCORD were addressed to Paul Gaynor at his home address. The fact that these letters have been received has been very tightly held. No action was taken in regard to them.

The letters reported that pressure was being put on the burglars to blame the CIA for Watergate. Richard Helms never gave the letters to Watergate prosecutors, however, in May 1973, they were uncovered by the Office of the Inspector General of the CIA and released.

Lee Pennington spoke with Senator Howard Baker, in February 1972; he died suddenly of a heart attack on December 19, 1972. Lee Pennington did not testify before the SSCIA or the Ervin Committee. His relationship with McCORD and the Office of Security of the remained a mystery. [CIA 777-336A; Ross & Wise Inv. Gov. p187; Baker Report p14; NYT 1.5.75; FBI CG 62-61115-12.5.63]

On September 18, 1972, a message from (deleted) was sent to the Acting Director of the FBI, Attention Domestic Intelligence Division, captioned "Bernard Fensterwald Jr. - Freedom of Information Act." It read: "Rebucab September fifteen last. Ltr to CIA September 22, 1972." [FBI 62-112697-18] This concerned the Fenster's request for photos of the man first thought to OSWALD photographed leaving the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City. In November 1973 the CIA had an interest in Bernard Fensterwald's assassination research conference and supplied the FBI with a schedule.

Bernard Fensterwald went into partnership with the co-counsel of John Dean, Robert McCandless. Coincidentally, Dean married Senator Henning's daughter Maureen Henning. Robert McCandless was linked to Southern Capital, which John Marks, a former State Department Intelligence Analyst, called "the CIA's largest remaining proprietary." [Miami Herald 7.18.76] John Marks wrote:

Lawyers who have had ties with CIA proprietaries have also represented well-known figures in politically charged cases. Robert McCandless resigned as a partner (from Burwell, Hansen and McCandless) in 1973 in order to serve as co-counsel to John Dean. Jeb Magruder, another key witness against NIXON aides in Watergate trials, had a lawyer, James Bierbower, who had served as Vice President of Southern Air Transport, one of the CIA's largest air proprietaries. To complete the circle, James Bierbower worked out of the same office, in the mid-1960's, as Southern Capital's Marvin Evans, and Marvin Evans later shared space with the Robert McCandless firm." [Agee & Wolfe Dirty Work p133]

Robert McCandless commented to this researcher:

I never had anything to do with anything other than law firms. I don't know what you mean. None of it is true, I never had any ties to Southern Capital. I never shared space with Marvin Evans. He has his facts wrong.

In 1992 the Bush Administration ordered McCandless to stop providing legal services to the military dictatorship of Haiti. McCandless, who ran Minnesota Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's 1968 Democratic presidential campaign, said he collected more than $100,000 in fees from the Haitians. Bernard Fensterwald's offices were above those of Intertel. In 1975 Senator Howard Baker revealed that Bernard Fensterwald had a CIA file. [NYT 1.17.75] In late 1976 the Washington Star ran an article, "IS FENSTERWALD A CIA PLANT?," written by Bill Choyke of the Capitol Hill News Service that concerned Bernard Fensterwald's attempt to become Chief Counsel of the HSCA:

Committee Vice Chairman Rep. Henry Gonzalez, the Texas Democrat who introduced the first resolution calling for an assassination inquiry, has privately voiced his strong opposition to Fensterwald having any role on the committee, even as an unofficial advisor...In a telephone interview Fensterwald first acknowledged that he had connections with the CIA and then scoffed at the suggestion. 'I am on the payroll,' he said. However, when pressed, he said he had 'nothing to do with the CIA. There is absolutely no reason to think I am a member of the CIA, absolutely no vestige of evidence of any kind.'

In another interview Bernard Fensterwald was asked:

The Committee to Investigate Assassinations has long been suspected by some people of being somehow connected with the CIA and you yourself being labeled possibly a CIA agent or CIA plant. Are you in fact a CIA agent of any sort?

Bernard Fensterwald responded:

No, I'm a full-time lawyer. Neither I, nor my partner, have ever been affiliated with the CIA, or worked for the CIA, either with, or without, pay in any way, shape or form. I have no idea where the rumor started. I don't know anyone that knows anything about my history that has ever made such an accusation. On the converse side, going back to the early 1960's, when I worked for the Senate, as counsel for one of its committees, I did an investigation on the CIA, and since then I have represented a number of clients in cases against the CIA, to the extent that if there's any evidence at all, it points in the other direction. [Interview with Wash. Star Staff writer Michael J. Satchell.]

This article was reprinted in the Classified CIA Operations Center News Service and marked "Distribution II." [Allen v DOD CIA 20866- 0815] In 1977 Bernard Fensterwald was audited by the Internal Revenue Service. [Wall Street Journal 3.23.77]

JOHN ARTHUR PAISLEY

In June 1979 Bernard Fensterwald represented the family of John Arthur Paisley. John Arthur Paisley was a former CIA official who worked for the Agency on a contractual basis, who, according to Tad Szulc, was involved with Yuri Nosenko. The two men became friends, and John Arthur Paisley frequently visited Yuri Nosenko. Inquiry Magazine reported:

Mary Ann Paisley thinks her husband's death may be related to Yuri Nosenko...At the request of Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana, the Chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, the FBI began a counter-intelligence analysis of the Paisley case...the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency Stansfield Turner says Yuri Nosenko has 'no recollection of ever meeting Paisley.'

Author Jim Hougan cited a letter Mrs. Paisley wrote to Stansfield Turner, in which she mentioned that she had worked for Kathrine Hart [the wife of John L. Hart] when she was in the CIA. ANGLETON told Look Magazine, "To my knowledge Paisley was never involved in the clandestine side. I have doubts that he knew Yuri Nosenko." [cited in Inquiry 11.15.79] Joe Trento and William R. Corson reported John Arthur Paisley worked with Bruce Solie. Bruce Solie, 75, died on December 25, 1992, after 28 years of CIA service.

John Arthur Paisley was sailing on the Chesapeake Bay on September 23, 1978. In his possession was a briefcase of Secret documents that dealt with the Soviets. The next day John Arthur Paisley was found in the bay, with two diver's belts weighing a total of 38 pounds strapped to his upper abdomen. The autopsy report stated the cause of death was a "Gunshot wound, penetrating head, close contact range. Entrance in left occipital parietal region with powder deposition within wound and on skull. Cranial-cerebral injury. Missile recovered, large caliber, deformed, jacketed, lead. Trajectory: left to right (cannot be further evaluated)."

The gun was never recovered. Was the death of John Arthur Paisley a suicide or a murder? Had John Arthur Paisley put on the weight belts, leaned over the edge of the boat, shot himself, then fallen overboard with his gun? The Maryland County Coroner concluded: "John Paisley, a 55 year old white male showing advanced decomposition changes, died of a penetrating gunshot wound to the head. The manner of death is undetermined. Signed Russell S. Fisher, M.D., Chief Medical Examiner." The boat belonging to John Arthur Paisley was found by Maryland Park Rangers. The CIA was first on board and recovered the Secret documents. Why had John Arthur Paisley taken these documents with him if he intended to kill himself? Bernard Fensterwald called the CIA and asked the Agency to "make available for him to interview a number of Agency personnel that appear in a telephone list finder which belonged to Mr. Paisley." #### HEMMING AND FENSTERWALD

HEMMING told this researcher:

Fensterwald gave me a lot of money, and went through a lot of files, with no return to him at all. He was supposed to give me $100,000 cash (because he didn't want it traced to him) to reorganize his office. Fensterwald said, 'You're so close to this shit everybody's wondering why you couldn't stop it, or not appear to be part of it.' There's shit he didn't want to know cause he didn't need his family threatened. Bud put McCORD on the phone in May 1975. I had talked to him on the phone during the Garrison investigation. He introduced me to Oliver Stone. What if I told you about a hypothetical classic CIA penetration operation, and Fensterwald financed it for me? You wouldn't be surprised? Kennard Smith, who had worked with Elliot Ness, recommended a covert operation in which people could get killed. There would be shooting. Bud didn't want him to set that up by himself. Fensterwald's CIA people had told him that's risky shit, we don't deal in that area. This means palace-level intrigue. We don't do that kind of stuff anymore. He didn't clear it with them, but he told them where he was going to go, and who he was going to talk to. I'm not saying the date, cause I'm not going to go into the operation. Fensterwald reminded me of Pawley. He was serious minded when it came to the security of this country. He loved the goddamned Jews too much.

In 1976 HEMMING asked for

All reports, records and files held by the FBI, CIA, and other agencies, reference to activities of the defendant acting as an investigator concerned alleged CIA activities involving divers conspiracies on the parts of John O'Hare, AKA Colonel Grey, John Kern, and former treasury agent Kennard Smith. [USDC Miami 76-371-CrCa]

It was suggested to HEMMING that Bernard Fensterwald did damage control for the Agency. He responded:

Could be. If somebody hired him to do something that's completely legal and was in the parameters of the law profession, what the fuck is he to say or do? And he did it two or three times and it worked out real good, hey, who's he to challenge who the client is? I don't think Fensterwald thought the CIA was the enemy of the United States.

LYNDON LAROUCHE

When crypto-Nazi Lyndon LaRouche was indicted for Obstruction of Justice in 1987 he hired Bernard Fensterwald as his attorney. On April 2, 1991, Bernard Fensterwald, 69, died of a heart attack at his home in Alexandria, Virginia. He had become a Senior Partner in Bernard Fensterwald and Alcorn. [FBI 62-112697-18 w/h] Fensterwald's death was his greatest contribution to assassination research.

On another level the tabloids played a role in attempting to discredit the tramp shots:

THE NATIONAL TATTLER

On March 31, 1974, The National Tattler ran this story: "Key Watergate Figure Placed at Scene When JFK Was Killed." The article stated: "Expert names E. HOWARD HUNT as mysterious 'third man' seen picking up shell minutes after murder, and the CIA refuses to say where its ex-agent was that day.

Photos place Watergate Kingpin at scene of JFK assassination. Watergate ringleader at assassination." The National Tattler printed the photograph of a man whose facial features were barely visible except for the back of a bald head, near the Texas School Book Depository on November 22, 1963. The National Tattler claimed this man was HUNT. HUNT sued The National Tattler, but The National Tattler went bankrupt, and the case never came to court. HUNT'S attorney, William Snyder, stated: "Well, now, Alan J. WEBERMAN, every time you hear the name WEBERMAN, the back of a bald head ought to be what goes off in your mind. He is the man who started this..." Robert B. Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission noted The National Tattler article and asked the FBI to investigate. He was referred Assistant Director W. Raymond Wannall. [FBI 62-116391-3 NARA FBI 124-10238-10320] Hunt told the FBI:

Mr. HUNT said he was not involved in any way, shape, or form with the Kennedy assassination. In this regard he recently filed a libel suit against the publisher of The National Tattler, Promotion Agency, Inc. Chicago, Illinois, claiming he was libeled by an article in this paper on March 31, 1974, stating HUNT was at Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963. [FBI 62-109060-7140 Charles D. Flagg and Hugh M. Barhhardt]

Ellis Rubin wrote to the Rockefeller Commission and stated that HUNT was anxious to get the charges against him resolved because of pending litigation. HUNT'S attorney, Tom Coons, called the FBI and stated ...that his law office had received a phone call on January 31, 1975, from a representative of the Rockefeller CIA Commission inquiring about the National Tattler story. Mr. Coons said it was his understanding that the Rockefeller Commission had discovered this story through comedian Dick Gregory. Mr. Coons is continuing to represent HUNT and a civil suit is currently pending for damages from The National Tattler for falsely accusing Mr. HUNT. Mr. Coons asked if the FBI investigation had been further pursued following the interview of Mr. HUNT, and whether or not any conclusions had been reached. Mr. Coons was informed he should direct a written inquiry to the Director, FBI, Washington, D.C. and he indicated this would be done.

HUNT had this to say about The Tattler in American Spy:

Not long after Watergate, it became fashionable in certain quarters to suggest that those guilty of Watergate's heinous crimes might well be guilty of even worse monstrosities, including the assassination of a president of the United States: John F Kennedy. Photographs of myself and the other Watergate figures were published widely in this country and abroad. Meanwhile, assassination buffs had developed a number of theories—all at variance with the findings of the Warren Commission—that concentrated on suggested conspiracies. Books appeared, irresponsible headlines erupted in the tabloid press, and the media—ever eager for sensation—gave time and space to proponents of the wildest conceivable theories concerning the identity of the assassin of John F. Kennedy, his sponsors, if any, and so forth. I need hardly take your time or mine to itemize the incredible amount of trash that has been written and televised about that tragic event. I tried to keep my voice steady and unemotional, befitting a court proceeding; but it proved impossible, and the anger I felt over the following material poured out in bitter tones. In due course, a tabloid, the National Tattler, sometime around March 1974, I believe, published a story implying that I had been in Dallas when Kennedy was killed and had a hand in his assassination. In response, I sued the tabloid, which promptly went out of business and left me with a default judgment and additional legal costs. So not only had I been maliciously slandered, but protecting my name against people who were trying to make a buck out of a piece of my flesh, cost me a huge amount of time, money, and aggravation that I couldn't afford.

This was a CIA OP to discredit the tramp shots. Hunt told the Rockefeller Commission:

Mr. HUNT said he was not involved in any way, shape, or form with the Kennedy assassination. In this regard he recently filed a libel suit against the publisher of The National Tattler, Promotion Agency, Inc. Chicago, Illinois, claiming he was libeled by an article in this paper on March 31, 1974, stating HUNT was at Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963. [FBI 62-109060-7140 Charles D. Flagg and Hugh M. Barhhardt]

In February, March 1974 the Yippies published the tramp shots in the Yipster Times. CIA knew something was up and it was going to discredit them before they received widespread dissemination. The National Tattler was published by Publishers Promotion Agency, 2717 North Pulaski Road, Chicago, Illinois. When HUNT sued The Tattler he did so without naming any of its officers. The CIA had an asset at The National Tattler who planted this story so that HUNT could successfully sue, and thus be vindicated by the courts as having had no role in the Kennedy assassination. [NARA FBI 124-10238-10321 Barnhardt, Hugh M. 2.5.75] The tabloids were used extensively by CIA in the 1950's to make Americans aware of the possibility of an invasion of alien Communists by portraying the Communists as Martians flying in UFOs.

THE HUNT v. WEBERMAN LIBEL LAWSUIT

In 1974 HOWARD HUNT was convicted of libel and paid Justo Carrillo, a former member of the Cuban Revolutionary Front, $6,666.67. [JUSTO CARRILLO Y HERNANDEZ v. HUNT and Arlington House Pub. Inc. Law Case 40172, Montgomery County, MD Circuit Court]

On July 29, 1976, HUNT filed a $2.5 million lawsuit that charged Dr. Joseph Okpaku's Third Press, and the authors of Coup D'Etat In America, with libel. HUNT was imprisoned at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida at this time, finishing his 33-month sentence for the Watergate break-in. Ellis Rubin: "We have chosen this method of putting to rest Canfield and WEBERMAN's fabrication implicating HUNT in these assassinations. STURGIS intends to file suit as well." [Miami News 7.29.76] HUNT listed 30 counts of libel: "HUNT knew OSWALD at 544 Camp Street, New Orleans; HUNT is the short tramp;" and "HUNT knew STURGIS prior to 1972." Ellis Rubin:

Plaintiff alleges that the foregoing assertions are a sheer fabrication by the Defendants, and, in most instances are wholly imagined...By so publishing, Plaintiff alleges that the Defendants, well knowing the name, reputation, and work of the Plaintiff, but contriving and wrongfully and maliciously intending to injure and aggrieve that Plaintiff and to destroy the comfort of his life and peace and tranquility of his mind, and to thrust upon the Plaintiff unsought false, defamatory, unwarranted and undesired publicity, utterly obnoxious to the Plaintiff...all for the Defendant's advantage, did offer and sell their book to the public for money.

HUNT hoped to use libel law suppress the book, Coup D'Etat in America. He had superior financial resources to this researcher, at the time, and a very slick attorney. But HUNT did not know who he was going up against. In February 1977, after HUNT was released from Eglin Air Force Base, he appeared on Tom Snyder's television interview show. As he was entering the NBC-TV studios, Aron Kay hit him with a shaving cream pie. When HUNT appeared on Snyder's show he commented about the lack of security in the building, and then he said that he had won the lawsuit against the authors of Coup D'état In America. He added that he had not collected the judgment because Third Press mysteriously went bankrupt:

I've sued for libel against two publishers, one tabloid and one book. As I won the suits, both operations promptly went out of business leaving me a large bag of legal fees to pay, and nothing coming in from the judgments.

So I think it's well established that, certainly in the courts, and in the minds of our judicial bodies, that I was in no way involved in that sort of thing.

We countersued HUNT. During HUNT'S deposition 1977 in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN, he was asked to explain why he said he had won the lawsuit, when he had not. He responded:

I had understood at the time I did the Snyder program, that the company had gone out of business in New York, that Mr. Okpaku fled, that one of the defendants could not be served by the, they couldn't give him the default judgment. I said that in good faith but I felt that after a period of time, after the March 23, date that I realized the suit was going to be contested due to the fact that the default judgement had not been rendered.

When HUNT was on the Tom Snyder show, he was aware his complaint had been served and that the defendants had engaged an attorney. Friedman had subpoenaed HUNT for a deposition before his release from prison, because he believed HUNT'S incarceration prevented him from filing a libel suit. HUNT was trying to float a false news story. In March 1977 HUNT appeared on the Allen Courtney radio show in Miami, and claimed Michael Canfield was wanted on charges of Interstate Transportation of a Stolen Motor Vehicle. HUNT was asked:

Q. Do you intend to go on a program such as Allen Courtney again and sing a song such as "Garbology" which we believe would be prejudicial to the fair and impartial hearing on this matter?

A. Well, I may.

Q. You have the right to by law.

A. Yes, I have the right to do so. A self proclaimed "garbologist" should not object to being called that.

Q. May I ask your source of information as to Mr. Canfield's characterization as -- your quote -- a "car thief?"

A. I did not call him that. I said I BELIEVED -- I couched it very carefully -- that to the best of my belief that the source of my information was that the U.S. Marshall in New York was trying to serve a subpoena. And he was being sought in another criminal matter. I got the information when I was in prison, but I can't recall, at this point, how I got it.

Joseph Okpaku had fallen several months behind on his payments to the bank for a van he had given us, and the van was still in our possession. This was a civil, not a criminal matter. Eventually the van was repossessed.

THE ATTORNEYS IN HUNT v. WEBERMAN

My major financial backer during this lawsuit was my mother, Sara WEBERMAN, who lived in Miami Beach. She found Attorney Mark J. Friedman, who offered his services gratis. Mark Friedman employed paralegal Ronald Lowy, now a prominent Miami Beach attorney. Ronald Lowy did the legal research and prepared all of the motions in HUNT v. WEBERMAN. Ronald Lowy was okay. Friedman was not. When Ellis Rubin noted Coup D'Etat In America implied the Dealey Plaza team was involved in the assassination of Martin Luther King, Friedman denied I had written this. He instructed me not to answer the question unless ordered to do so by the judge. Ellis Rubin pressed, "Did you want to, by innuendo, convey to the reader that maybe HUNT was involved in the [King] murder?" When I answered "Yes," Ellis Rubin became excited and said, "I don't want to ask any more questions because the case is over!" Mark Friedman exhorted me to change my response. At one point he ordered me to shut up. Ellis Rubin asked the stenographer, "Did you get the 'Shut up?'" [WEBERMAN Depo. USDC SD Miami 76-1252-Civ-P 7.8.77]

There was no evidence that linked HUNT to the King assassination, however, there was evidence that linked his associates to the killing. Canfield, Okpaku and this researcher deserved better representation than that given to us by Mark Friedman, but we could not afford it. Other things, however, were working in our favor: by 1978 HUNT'S Wah Ling alibi was shattered, OSWALD'S bogus letter to HUNT had surfaced, and, thanks to HEMMING, CHRIST had been identified as the third tramp. Ellis Rubin objected to my having invited the media to HUNT'S deposition: "Do you think that Mr. HUNT has a constitutional right to a fair trial?" he asked. I answered: "He certainly, hey wait a minute! I'm the one that's on trial for libel, not Mr. HUNT! He is the plaintiff, I am the defendant." Ellis Rubin answered: "All right." HUNT and Ellis Rubin were beginning to realize that I was going to put HUNT on trial for the Kennedy assassination, rather than him putting Canfield and I on trial for libel.

HUNT also used libel litigation in attempt to suppress the work of Tad Szulc. On June 16, 1978, Tad Szulc, who had been an award winning New York Times correspondent for 20 years, was deposed in the course of HUNT V. WEBERMAN. Szulc was a personal friend of President Kennedy who was called to testify before the SSCIA. Szulc said he did not see any documents that placed HUNT in Mexico City. Instead, he relied on interviews of former government officials with one exception. The exception dealt with HUNT'S background. As to the source of the Mexico City allegation, Szulc stated it was provided by a source who "By personal schooling, and my best professional judgment, told me that they had such knowledge." Szulc refused to name his source.

A. It was a person was retired from the Government at the time of the interview to which we refer.

Q. Do you know what section of the Government it was from which they retired?

A. I cannot be entirely clear, because there may have been a situation of temporary assignments from one Government branch to the other, and I do not have the precise knowledge of dates and assignments within different Government parts concerning this person.

Q. Do you know whether or not this person was active in any intelligence activities on behalf of the Government at any time before, or after, your interview?

A. You mean as a professional?

Q. As a Government agent, maybe not necessarily professional, [a]"spook" so to speak, or analyst, but someone who, in their professional capacity, did some sort of Government intelligence function.

A. I would so surmise, but I'm not in a position to prove it, for reasons which I think are clear. [Szulc Depo. - Miller]

Szulc cited journalistic privilege numerous times during his testimony. He refused to divulge his source for this statement that HUNT was a devout Roman Catholic, that he drove a Cadillac which belonged to the CIA, and that HUNT plotted to assassinate Castro. Szulc's source of his statement that HUNT offered U.S. helicopters to the President of Uruguay during an uprising there was the former U.S. Ambassador to Montevideo, Robert Woodward, Jr. Ellis Rubin had the questions certified so that a judge could decide if Szulc was obligated to answer them. On November 2, 1978, after deposing journalist Tad Szulc, HUNT filed a Motion for Order Compelling Discovery. Ellis Rubin persuaded a Federal judge to order Tad Szulc to answer the refused questions; Tad Szulc was redeposed by Ellis Rubin and he responded in the same fashion. A Federal Appeals Court judge overruled the decision of the district judge and HUNT'S case was dismissed. In September 1978 HUNT sued Tad Szulc in a second attempt to uncover the origin of Tad Szulc's data. In early November 1978 a Federal judge ruled Tad Szulc was not obligated to reveal his source, because the matter was a civil case and not a criminal case.

2. It is possible that the AMTRUNK Operation might have been a political action operation run against the U.S.G. /CIA. In late 1962 or early 1963, pressure was exerted on CIA by Higher Authority (State Department and White House) to consider a proposal for an on-island operation to split the Castro regime. The proposal was presented to Mr. Hurwitch, the State Department Cuban Coordinator, by Tad Szulc (AMCAPE-1) of the New York Times. On February 6, 1963 Albert C. Davies, (Lt. Col. On military detail to WH/4 – Cuba) met with Szulc at Szulc's resident, to discuss the plan. While at first hesitant, SZULC finally revealed that Doctor Nestor Moreno (AMICE-27) was one of its prime originators. Szulc said that he first thought of bringing the plan to the attention of President Kennedy, as he had had a standing invitation, since November 1961, for direct contact with President Kennedy, Attorney General Robert Kennedy, or Mr. George Bundy, on matters concerning Cuba. He decided against that approach however and instead determined to use the Cuban Coordinating Group. It was agreed that CIA representatives would meet with Szulc and the two AMTRUNK planners, Moreno and Volsky in Washington.

3. The follow-up meeting on February 9 (in a safehouse) was attended by Hurwitch, Szulc, Jorge Volsky, Dr. Nestor Moreno and DAVID MORALES, Col. A. Davies and Alfonzo Rodriguez of the CIA . A February 11, 1963 memorandum from Rodriguez to the Chief, SAS, expressed definite interest in the operation with certain recommendations which included having JMWAVE Station put its operational mechanism into gear to have the Cuban personnel of the AMTRUNK ready for infiltration by mid-March 1963. Following a review of the AMTRUNK Project, JMWAVE forwarded a lengthy dispatch to Headquarters dated April 8, 1963, which recommended that the operation be terminated soonest. Since it was a Headquarters originated operation, JMWAVE also requested Headquarters decision as to continuance or termination. A Headquarters cable to JMWAVE on April 10, 1963 concurred that the AMTRUNK operation should be terminated for a number of reasons, including the fact that CIA could not at that time be certain that hostile elements were unaware of the plan. A April 17, 1963 cable from Headquarters to JMWAVE Station advised that SZULC had informed Hurwitch that JMWAVE had given Volsky responsibility to decide whether or not the operation was to continue. It seems that Headquarters had intended to use Volsky, with his concurrence, only as a funding channel for the AMTRUNK operation of the AMTRUNK principals were willing to proceed with the operation independently. In any case, for some reason, CIA continued to support the operation. The two principals, MORENO (AMICE-27) and Miguel A. Diaz Isalgue (AMICE-14) claimed to have contact with high level GOC officials. They completed four infiltration missions to Cuba and were terminated in March 1964.

4. Early phases of the operation resulted in the on-island recruitment of Ramon Tomas Guin Diaz (AMTRUNK-10), Modesto Orlando Orozco Basulto (AMTRUNK-9) and Carlos Pedraza Aguilar (AMTRUNK-11). Guin was arrested in February 1966. (Cubela was arrested at the same time, separately.) Orozco, after reportedly running scared, was exfiltrated and terminated in March 1964. He returned to Cuba in December 1964 on an independent exfiltration mission and apparently remained in Cuba. His knowledge of the identity of the internal AMTRUNK agents, caused a planned infiltration mission to be scrapped. Pedraza was arrested in December 1965, tried for alleged CIA activities and given a 30 year prison sentence. JMWAVE Station advised in March 1966 that four former AMTRUNK internal assets were arrested for counter-revolutionary activities during early 1966, in addition to Cubela and Guin, and that all of the principals of the AMTRUNK network active during 1963 and 1964 had been rolled up. The Cuban press reportedly identified Diaz (AMICE-14) as the clandestine infiltrator who recruited Guin.

Comment: It appears that the opposition might have succeeded, it seems, in identifying, neutralizing and exposing on-island anti-Castro forces, and tying up CIA time, money and manpower for an operation of their own creation. Following are some reasons which might have contributed to its failure:

a. The controversial nature of the principal initiators, Tad Szulc, Jorge Volsky and Moreno. The AMTRUCK operatives made it known they were anti U.S.G. and anti-CIA and accepted assistance only to accomplish their own purposes. They were not under CIA control.

b. Szulc, although reportedly not involved in the operation, was kept fully informed of its activities by Moreno and perhaps others.

c. Szulc's direct contact with the White House, if true, placed him in a position to pass U.S. policy information on Cuba to the opposition. (There is a note by Richard Helms on a September 23, 1963 cover sheet requesting Alfonso Rodriguez to maintain periodic contact with Szulc on Cuban matters at Presidential request going back many months.)

d. Rabel (AMLEO-3) who "defected" to the U.S. in 1962, was knowledgeable of on-island AMTRUNK targets. Rabel, following termination, returned to Cuba allegedly to bring out his family, and never returned. There is a possibility that he was a Castro agent.

c. Cubela was knowledgeable of at least some of the AMTRUNK agents. Guin (AMTRUNK-10) was a co-defendant in the Cubela trial. (Believe Guin may have been given a stiffer sentence than Cubela and may still be in prison.)

Cubela was given a relatively light sentence, considering the magnitude of his crime. Immediately following sentencing he functioned as a prison physician, and reportedly was driving a jeep unescorted, which is unusual treatment unless one is trusted by the regime. He reportedly is now practicing medicine as a private physician in Havana.

f. The questionable activities and current whereabouts of AMTRUNK-9. We have learned of the other AMTRUNK agents who were wrapped up but have been unable to determine precisely where AMTRUNK-9 is. There is some indication that he might have been G-2.

g. There was overlap with other operations: the AMLILAC's, placing Cubela cache, etc.

NOTE: Cables cited in this paper and other selected papers from the AMTRUNK Project are readily available in the LAD/JFK Task Force office for review if needed. LAD/JFK Task Force/ Chris Hopkins:rp

MEMORANDUM February 14, 1977

SUBJECT: Tadeusz (Tad) Witold Szulc (AMCAPE-1) (201-50539)

1. Szulc was born on July 25, 1926 in Warsaw, Poland. He arrived in Brazil from Lisbon on August 3, 1940, and came to the U.S. in October 1947 under sponsorship of U.S. Ambassador John C. Wiley, the husband of this mother's sister. He became a correspondent for the New York Times in 1953, and became a naturalized U.S. citizen in 1954 by a special Congressional bill.

2. Tad Szulc had been under suspicion as a hostile foreign agent since 1948 when the FBI reported (apparently from 11 source) that he was a communist. He brought himself to the attention of the CIA in August 1959 in Santiago, Chile, by claiming (falsely) to be cleared, and requesting contact with an agency representative. This was the first of many such incidents in Latin America, and resulted in warning to all Latin American Stations to beware of Szulc and his efforts to interview Agency personnel. This resulted in continuing watch of his movements and activities because they represented a threat to the cover of Agency personnel. By 1960 his reputation was so widespread that several different CIA officers called for an investigation that would clear up, 'once and for all,' his suspected connections with a hostile intelligence service. He was in frequent contact with Communist Party leaders and functionaries throughout Latin America, constantly sought out and elicited information from U.S. Embassy officers, frequently mentioning the names of other CIA officers with whom he was acquainted.

Although the suspicions have increased, and Szulc's anti-Agency activities have become much more serious and blatant in the 1970's, it has not been possible to clear up any of the suspicions about his motives, or possible connection to a foreign intelligence service. There have been numerous reviews of his files and the interest in his activities has extended from the case officer level to DCI. In fact it is not possible to come to any clear conclusion about this man and the notes below are simply illustrative of the kinds of things that keep suspicions alive.

It is important to note that Szulc's activities can be explained by the combination of his personality, ambition, and the demands on an investigative reporter for the NYT. His is an aggressive, insensitive, and persistent journalist with the family connections (Ambassador Wiley) and ability to develop the kinds of contacts appropriate to a successful correspondent for a paper like the NYT.

4. Nevertheless, there are elements throughout his entire career that are almost designed to arouse suspicion. For example, a [deleted 11 as of 2010] source in Rio de Janeiro reported that Szulc was "directed" by the Polish regime in Warsaw to seek employment in U.S. journalistic circles. This report runs like a thread throughout his file and is repeated and garbled in several versions over the years. The report has never been adequately explained and was apparently never reported in full (deleted as of 2010). This report and other questions that arose early in his career (deleted as of 2010) were, however, just the earliest elements that aroused suspicion.

5. Because he became so well-known to so many Agency officers, his name and reputation have become subject of discussion on many occasions. One senior operations officer stated in 1975 that a Soviet agent could not be more beneficial to the Soviets and the Communist cause than Szulc has been. Although he presented a generally anti-Communist view prior to quitting the NYT in 1972, it is noteworthy that he arranged extensive, favorable TV coverage of the Communist-dominated Ligas Campesinas in Northeast Brazil and that one of the most important anti-Castro operations, AMTRUNK, in which he was involved from the beginning, was disastrous for all participants. More indicative of his true beliefs are the articles he has written since Watergate. They have become increasingly critical of the CIA and the USG generally and have damaged U.S. image and prestige.

6. The notes below are somewhat random examples of elements in Szulc's file that bring him under suspicion. As mentioned above, they in no way point to a firm conclusion. For further information on Szulc during the period 1963 – 1964 see the CI review prepared at Miami Station on Jorge Volsky in 1964.

a. The 1948 FBI report that Szulc was involved in supplying the Polish legation in Rio with information from his personal contacts and from Ambassador John C. Wiley has been repeated in various versions throughout Szulc's file. The FBI has found similar allegation made by other sources who knew Szulc at that time. In addition, several sources have mentioned Szulc's relations with his cousin, Ignacy Sachs, who was the Press Attache of the Polish Embassy in 1947 and 1948, although there is no indication that Sachs had intelligence connections.

b. Szulc's marriage to the daughter of the American manager of the English language newspaper in Rio de Janeiro, the Herald, lasted only until Szulc had permanent residence in the U.S. and appears to have been carried through for that purpose.

c. By 1949 (Szulc was only 23) he had come to the attention of (deleted as of 2010) because of his dealings with the Polish Legation and because investigation revealed his father had some (apparently innocent) business dealings with Russians visiting Brazil from Mexico.

d. In 1954, about a year after he was hired by the NYT, Szulc obtained a sensational story, by telephone, from a Communist leader in Guatemala. This launched his career with NYT.

e. In 1956 Szulc was investigating Brazilian nuclear policy for NYT. Although a legitimate topic, it was somewhat unusual for him and the timing seems unusual for NYT interest.

f. In 1959, on a trip to Santiago, Chile, Szulc claimed to be "cleared" and requested an interview with an Agency representative. This was the first of numerous such requests. In addition, it was in about 1959 that he also began making a point of telling Agency personnel the names of other Agency officers he had identified.

g. An article Szulc wrote on Cuba for the NYT in December 1959 was hailed as an antidote to the excessively favorable reports of his colleague, Herbert Matthews. But in fact his article was largely favorable to Fidel Castro and to Castro's plans for Cuba. It is only in comparison with Matthews' blatantly pro-Castro articles that Szulc's piece can be considered balanced.

h. By September 1960, Szulc was in the forefront of those advocating action against Castro. (It was he who finally brought the Leonardo Plan to Washington in 1963. See AMTRUNK Operational paper).

i. In April 1961, shortly after JFK was inaugurated, Szulc was transferred to Washington by the NYT. Although a reasonable transfer, it is noteworthy that in a very short time Szulc claimed that he had a standing invitation to go directly to the President, the Vice President, the Attorney General, McGeorge Bundy and Robert Hurwitch to Cuban matters.

j. Szulc persistently sought a continuing contact with an Agency representative in Washington shortly after he arrived until it was granted in December 1962. The first contact was with Albert C. Davies (Lt. Col. On military detail to CIA to Cuba) and was arranged at the behest of Colonel Grogan, the Assistant to the Director, on Szulc's request.

k. In early 1963, at President Kennedy's urging, CIA contact with Tad Szulc was made into a formal relationship and was continued until October 1964. The meetings were used by Tad Szulc to cross check his information from other sources, including various Cuban exiles, and the State Department. He became, by virtue of his contacts with the exile community and throughout Washington, one of the most knowledgeable people in the area of Cuban affairs, anti-Castro activities and U.S. Government policy.

l. The Agency officer, Alfonso Rodriguez, who maintained official contact with Szulc in 1963 and 1964 said in July 1964 "The special friendship and mutual admiration society that has existed between Tad Szulc and Jorge Volsky, Manuel Ray and the JURE is not something that is transparent or easily explained. This alliance may be something unholy and Machiavellian; I just do not know, but I can find no evidence to prove it."

m. Another officer, Seymour Young, wrote in 1965: "After reading and re-reading this man's various files, I began to feel that this man in his position would be an ideal 'agent of influence.' It was noted that he is always in a crisis area and usually in advance of the crisis and writes articles which are more concerned with the Communist successes."

n. In about August 1965, Szulc was sent to Madrid as the NYT representative for Spain and Portugal. He stayed overseas until December 1968. He was present in Prague during the Soviet invasion in August 1968 and in December he was expelled, apparently for being too inquisitive. However, (Deleted as of 2010) has remained suspicious of the circumstances of Szulc's expulsion and the details have never been clarified. (It is interesting that Szulc wrote articles reflecting the official Czech line concerning the defection of General Jan Sejna who was in the Czech Intelligence service.)

o. Szulc was reported by an FBI source to have gone horseback riding with Boris V. Yarochevskiy, a suspect KGB officer, in Washington in June or July 1971. Szulc's file reflects no regular contact with Bloc diplomats.

p. In 1972 and 1973 Szulc covered Watergate extensively and demonstrated an extreme bias against the CIA. By July 1972, Szulc's inquiries of the Department of State and his articles had taken on a distinctly anti-US Government tone. His coverage of guerrilla and terrorist groups was less sure than in earlier days and was frequently sensationalist and full of inaccuracies. (See, especially, article in NYT for July 14, 1972 on a terrorist Headquarters in Zurich and other wild statements.)

q. Since 1974 Szulc's articles have been highly critical of the Agency and he has used the background information he gathered in the 1960's to attack the Agency and to criticize its operations.

r. In May 1975 Szulc accused the Agency of rifling the files of U.S. Senators. This was only one of many irresponsible and false articles he wrote trying to discredit the Agency. One of the more spectacular efforts was an article in Esquire Magazine, in which, among other things, he charged that the U.S. intelligence community had a hidden budget of $25 billion dollars and a network of 200,000 spies.

s. In, Inside the Company: A CIA Diary, Philip Agee credits Szulc's daughter, Nicole for having "obtained vital research materials in New York and Washington, D.C." There is reason to believe, particularly in view of the extreme views Tad Szulc has manifested in the past two years, that he may have aided his daughter in her "research".

SUMMATION

The case against Tad Szulc as a foreign agent is weak. However, his most recent activities are entirely consonant with the view that he has already served the Soviets well and can end his career as an overt propagandist taking advantage of the current furor over the CIA to do the greatest possible damage. The current paralysis of all anti-Communist action by the Agency attests to the effectiveness of Agee, Szulc, the Soviets, et. al.

NOTE: (See attachment B from a highly sensitive source. Any use of the SECRET/SENSITIVE attachment requires C/CI approval.) The source reported that Nicole, while working with the DGI in Cuba to expose the Agency, said that except for her father, her whole family were "fascists." She said that her father quit the NYT because of the restrictive editorial policy and he wished to write according to his beliefs.

[CIA Interim Report OPS to Split C Regime; CIA Memos on Szulc and Volsky 2.14.77; Extract from Dispatch (deleted) 17410 8.24.64 Subject (deleted) Operational: Amtrunk-1.]

AMTRUNK was devised by George Volsky aka Jerzy Stakistaw Ajbuszyc. The CIA reported:

Jorge Volsky is a Cuban citizen of Polish origin, now a permanent U.S. resident, who is currently employed by the USIA office in Miami as editor of the USIA weekly Report on Cuban Developments. Volsky came to the attention of JMWAVE because of his extra-curricular activities which appear to be incompatible with his position as an employee of the United States Government. A conflict of interests appears to have developed in Volsky's case as a result of his position in the USIA office in Miami, his access to various high-level Cuban refugees, his close association with prominent American journalists (one of whom has an entrée to high members of the Kennedy Administration) [Szulc] and his involvement for JURE. Analysis shows that he has used his USIA position to obtain information for a leftist political group, has engaged in anti-U.S. propaganda campaigns for it, and may be guilty of duplicity in his dealings with KUBARK. Volsky is a Cuban citizen of Polish origin whose background includes a two to three year period in a Russian prison camp. Because of this background, and the nature of his present political activities, the following compilation and analysis of the material currently available to JMWAVE concerning Volsky are deemed necessary and are hereby presented as prerequisites to the determination of the future course of action to be taken by KUBARK in this case.

Original JMWAVE Operational Interest in Subject.

a. George Volsky first became of interest to KUBARK in February 1963 when it was learned that he was the source of an anti-Castro plan known as Operation Leonardo, designed to split the Cuban Regime by the recruitment of certain elements of the Rebel Army and Militia in the GOC. This plan had been presented to the State Department through Tad Szulc, editorial writer of the New York Times Washington office and State sent in for action to KUBARK Headquarters.

b. The disclosure of George Volsky as the originator of Operation Leonardo came about when a KUBARK case officer contacted Szulc at his home in Washington concerning the plan. Szulc was reluctant at first to reveal the name of the author, but did so when the case officer pointed out that it was necessary for KUBARK to talk to the source in order to clear up the various points. Szulc, saying that he would rely on KUBARK's discretion to safeguard the identity of the source, named Volsky of the USIA in Miami. Szulc related a short biographic sketch of Volsky in which it was revealed that during World War II, Volsky, a Pole, had been a prisoner of war in Russia.

c. At Headquarters' request JMWAVE contacted George Volsky and made arrangements to sponsor his plan which involved Cuban infiltration/exfiltration ops. It was the intention of KUBARK to use Volsky only as a funding channel for the operation; however, because of the Station's belief that the operation's team would inform Volsky in detail about operational matters, a POA was requested on him. A request was also made that Headquarters check on Volsky's activities prior to his arrival in Cuba. Locally the AMOTs were requested to provide information on Subject's activities in Cuba. Volsky's knowledge of clandestine methods of operation, together with his Russian prison background and his ingenuity as a middleman in the U.S. Government - CIA activities, made him an excellent candidate for a Communist penetration agent, and that the possibility existed that he might be a RIS singleton, sleeper or stringer. Volsky's contacts in Miami included Raul Chibas Rivas [201-248160], a member of the JURE Executive Committee...Manolo Ray's right hand man...Volsky was visited by Rogelio Cisneros in Volsky's USIA office.

The CIA created a detailed analysis of George Volsky's past in which it questioned whether his interment by the Soviets and the Cubans was bona fide, and pointed to his association with Paul Bethel, "suspected informant for the Castro Regime (Western Hemisphere/4/CI September 23, 1960).

GAETON FONZI

On January 5, 1979, Gaeton Fonzi was a defense witness in HUNT v. WEBERMAN:

Q. Did you introduce Mr. WEBERMAN to Troy Gustavson and David Marston of Senator Schweiker's office?

A. I don't remember that I did, but I probably did.

Q. Were you told by Mr. Gustavson that he had, in fact, offered Mr. WEBERMAN a job in the nature of correlating telephone numbers from National Archives documents; are you aware of that employment offer?

A. Not specifically, though I do recall, I think, that idea being discussed at one time or other with members of Senator Schweiker's staff. I would characterize Mr. WEBERMAN's archives and Mr. WEBERMAN's knowledge of the archives, as probably one of the most competent in the field.

Q. Prior to your joining the HSCA, did you believe Mr. WEBERMAN to be making up lies to malign Mr. HUNT?

A. Prior to my HSCA time, I did not believe he was deliberately making up lies to malign Mr. HUNT; no. Prior to my joining the HSCA, I believed there was the possibility of HUNT being involved in the Kennedy assassination.

Q. (Rubin) Fine. The witness has answered the way he felt proper. Thanks for opening that door.

A. (Friedman) That is the whole case. Truth was our defense.

Ellis Rubin cross-examined Gaeton Fonzi:

Q. Were you aware, before you went to work for the HSCA and at the time you read the book Coup D'Etat In America, that these photographs had been thoroughly disproved as being E. HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS by the FBI?...Are you aware that Time-Life, Inc. did a photo analysis examination of those tramp photographs and arrived at the same conclusion as the FBI and the Rockefeller Commission, all of which was reported publicly before Mr. WEBERMAN wrote his book?

A. Before joining the HSCA, I read the conclusions of the Rockefeller Report...I had some doubts about its conclusions.

The testimony of Gaeton Fonzi would have convinced a jury that malice was absent from my motivation since government investigators had examined, and were still examining, HUNT'S role in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

THE MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

One last Amended Motion for Summary Judgment in HUNT v. WEBERMAN was filed. The motion cited New York Times v. Sullivan, which made it impossible for a public figure to obtain a libel judgment without proving actual malice on the defendant's part, i.e. the defendant purposefully published false material. A 5-page Memorandum of Law was included with the Motion. Ellis Rubin replied with a motion attempting to show HUNT was not a public figure, since he became so not voluntarily, but as a result of his Watergate arrest, was thrust into the public eye. Ellis Rubin also insisted that malice could be demonstrated by virtue of the HSCA and the Rockefeller Commission, which were comprised of "a number of this country's most esteemed and distinguished citizens and public servants having specifically investigated Defendant's allegations, only to find them without merit..." Ellis Rubin included statements by former CIA employees Mazerov and Kuzmuk. Judge Edward Davis, who was assigned to the case for about two years before it was scheduled to go to trial, ruled that HUNT was a public figure, but that the issue of malice on the part of the defendants had to be considered "in the light most favorable to the Plaintiff," since the defendants had been unable to obtain corroboration for Coup D'Etat's photo analysis from an independent source. Thus HUNT v. WEBERMAN would go to trial, but HUNT would have to prove actual malice.

HUNT v. WEBERMAN

After six years of pre-trial litigation, HUNT v. WEBERMAN was scheduled for trial in early September 1982. Much of the information in this data base was unavailable in 1982, but there was enough for us to win. HUNT paused to consider the unpredictability of the situation - not to mention the troubling fact that none of the defendants had any assets. If he won, it would be a big propaganda victory, but a financial disappointment: in 1975 the first hardcover edition of Coup D'Etat had been published by Joseph Okpaku. The second hardcover edition of Coup was published in 1992 by Third Press Associates, as was a paperback edition. That year, Ed and Jane Rosenthal of Quick Trading Publishers issued an updated paperback version. In 1976 Joseph Okpaku experienced financial difficulties due to the publication of a biography of Gerald Ford written by the former Press Secretary to Gerald Ford, Jerry terHorst. HUNT had published an article under the byline of Jerry terHorst. Although much of the assets of Joseph Okpaku were tied up in the Jerry terHorst book, it sold poorly and Okpaku fell into debt. Joseph Okpaku tried selling the paperback rights to Coup D'Etat; editors at, as I recall, New American Library, were interested, but their publisher met with them and stated: "We can't publish this book, and I can't tell you why." Had he been contacted by the Domestic Operations Division? Had the CIA put the kibosh on my book?

NO TRIAL BY JURY

HUNT would have been required to prove actual malice: that the authors knew he was not the tramp, and deliberately lied to defame him. The defense could easily have demonstrated that neither of the authors believed the findings of the blue ribbon panels. The scheduled witnesses for our defense included a reporter from 60 Minutes, who is now a producer of Prime Time Live, James Wilde of Time magazine, New York City Police Department Detective William Barret, and Congressman Henry Gonzalez. They would have attested to our responsibility as researchers, unmotivated by malice. Our new attorney was Bruce Stahl, who I met when I worked at New York City Police Headquarters in relation the lawsuit STURGIS had filed against the New York City Police Department. I paid Stahl a $5,000 retainer and agreed to pay him a thousand dollars a day for trial time, plus costs and transportation and any court fees. A few hours before we were scheduled to fly to Miami for the trial Bruce Stahl called to say:

HUNT is dropping his lawsuit. We can't force him to sue. We could go ahead with our counter-suit but that would be on a limited basis. HUNT is willing to pay Michael Canfield $200 in damages for his statement on the Tom Snyder show."

When news of the settlement reached the media, The New York Post ran a story that suggested HUNT'S actions were suspicious in light of his statements in which he insisted he wished to vigorously prosecute the case.

HOWARD HUNT DROPS JFK PLOT LIBEL SUIT [NY Post 9.6.82]

Watergate burglar E. HOWARD HUNT has dropped his $2.5 million libel suit against the authors of Coup D'Etat in America, which contains allegations that HUNT and fellow-Watergater FRANK STURGIS masterminded the JFK assassination after setting up LEE HARVEY OSWALD to take the rap. HUNT the career CIA spy whose cover was blown by the Watergate arrest, mysteriously dropped the suit after six years of expensive litigation just as jury selection was about to begin in federal court in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, where HUNT lives...WEBERMAN told our Richard Johnson that HUNT sued for libel because 'he felt I was a penniless Yippie and thought he could get a default judgement.' (If HUNT felt that way, it might very well be because WEBERMAN has in the past indeed been known as a Yippie 'garbologist'... WEBERMAN hired lawyer Bruce Stahl and got depositions from former CIA Director Richard Helms and former Counter-Intelligence Chief, JAMES ANGLETON...Stahl says he's disappointed the suit was dropped because an open trial in Federal Court, with witnesses under subpoena, would have been the best way to find out what really happened that day in Dallas. When HUNT was cross-examined and asked why he had suddenly dropped his lawsuit he responded: "When I attempted to find out from Mr. Rubin in what courthouse I should appear, what room of the courthouse I should appear for the trial the next morning, I was told by his office that there would not be any trial, that he had settled the matter, and furthermore, that he would not be in town. He had previously taken on a as a client a Saudi Arabian sheik, or princeling, named Al Fasi and he was chasing all over the country with him, and as far as I know Mr. Rubin wasn't even in town the eve of the trial...In any event, I had assumed that my requirements for case settlement had been met by Mr. Rubin, and that a check from Mr. WEBERMAN for $5,000 would be forthcoming. I learned the following day Mr. Rubin had told the opposing attorneys who had come to Miami for the trial, that - I forgot the term - but it was going to equal out, nobody would charge anyone for anything and they would scrub the case. That was done, I must add reluctantly, without my authorization.

HUNT was then asked if the case had been dismissed on his behalf without payment to him of even a penny, and if there had been no apology or retraction whatsoever from the defendant journalists. He answered, "That is correct." Some time later, Gordon Winslow found that Ellis Rubin had checked into the Miami Heart Institute the night before the trial was to begin. The case, however, had been settled by this time. [New York Post 11.4.78; Wash. Post 9.6.78; Miami Herald 9.25.78] During another matter HUNT stated: "Resuscitation of these old charges, which I thought had been laid to rest by my suit against WEBERMAN, and there had been, ever since the WEBERMAN book was published, and I had filed suit, there had been accusations of these wild charges." Why should the charges have been laid to rest when HUNT lost the lawsuit? HUNT was a bold faced liar.

HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT

On May 7, 1980, HUNT sued Victor Marchetti and Spotlight for an article about the alleged document that placed HUNT in Dallas on November 22, 1963. [USDC Miami 80-1121-CIV-JWK] The organization behind Spotlight, Liberty Lobby, funds the Institute for Historical Review. This Nazi front group was dedicated to proving the murder of six million Jews by the Nazis never took place. Mark Levy, head of the Jewish Defense Organization, [JDO, POB 646 NYC, 10150] discovered that Conrad Grieb, who was part of a Nazi spy network operating in the United States in the early 1940's, worked with Spotlight. [Carlson Undercover p161, 199, 200-3] The attorney who represented Spotlight, Miles McGrain, agreed that Spotlight would abide by the stipulation that HUNT had nothing whatever to do with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and was not in Dallas on that day. In his closing argument he characterized the article as false, but not libelous, since no malice was intended by Victor Marchetti. Miles McGrain professed "the main thrust of the article was to tell readers that the CIA was at it again, and that HUNT was going to be a scapegoat." Willis Carto, the head of Liberty Lobby, testified to this. [Telephone Carto at 202-546-5611] Willis Carto also stated: "Liberty Lobby has been one of the victims of the Yipster Times. They have published our telephone number, urging their people to telephone us at our expense and to use our number to make telephone [credit card] calls." Victor Marchetti did not testify. The General Counsel of the CIA, Stanley Sporkin, assembled a series of affidavits from Thomas B. Cormack, Executive Secretary of the CIA, William R. Katapish, Director of the OS, and George L. Marling of the Operations (Plans) Directorate, in which they swore no document existed in CIA files placing HUNT in Dallas. HUNT testified that he had just remarried, and his new wife was troubled by the recurrent allegations that he was in Dealey Plaza:

For one thing, she had been aware that I was involved in litigation against a prior publisher, to wit, the authors of Coup D'Etat in America...Her feelings were, if there was no truth to the allegations, then why are they being repeated constantly?

HUNT submitted the Final Report of the HSCA as evidence in his favor. The judge ruled it inadmissible because of the prior stipulation that HUNT was not in Dealey Plaza. HUNT claimed that his oldest daughter "had been institutionalized, and from the hospital her psyche was very sensitive. She became very distraught and again I had to reassure my children that I had nothing to do with the Kennedy assassination, and I was being persecuted for reasons unknown to me." (HUNT was supposed to have been with his daughter on November 22, 1963.) HUNT blamed me for the Spotlight article: "My opinion is that it came from the writing of ALAN J. WEBERMAN, either from his scurrilous piece in the Yippie Times, or in his book Coup D'Etat, for which I have current litigation." HUNT was asked if WEBERMAN had identified him as one of the tramps. He said, "No." HUNT was asked, "Have you ever lied under oath?" He answered: "I have." During HUNT'S testimony in the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial he was asked: "Is it correct that WEBERMAN and Canfield identified you as one of the tramps?" HUNT responded: "That is true."

Spotlight lost. Spotlight had not used truth as a defense; it claimed absence of malice. The Spotlight rarely told the truth, and their deceitful defense was characteristic of the newspaper.

THE SECOND HUNT V. SPOTLIGHT TRIAL

An Appeals Court Judge ordered a new trial in the matter of HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT. In January 1985 the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial took place. Mark Lane questioned HUNT about each instance he had committed perjury during the Watergate proceedings. Mark Lane read all of the charges in HUNT'S complaint in HUNT v. WEBERMAN and pointed out to the jury that HUNT had lost. HUNT produced three witnesses, all co-workers at the CIA Domestic Operations Division, who testified he was in Washington, D.C., on November 22, 1963. Although ANGLETON never testified in HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT, former CI/SIG staff member Newton S. Miler was going to testify on behalf of HUNT. After waiting five days in Miami he was deposed instead. Newton S. Miler said he never heard of Marita Lorenz, or of FRANK STURGIS being a CIA agent. Edward Petty reported "Documents about OSWALD first arrived at the CIA Staff. The Routing Sheet has an initial 'SM.' Now that could be Scotty Miler." At the trial, Mark Lane could not produce the CIA document that placed HUNT in Dallas. Victor Marchetti testified that he had heard about the document from William R. Corson, but had never seen it. Marita Lorenz did not appear to tell her story under oath in Federal Court. Despite all of this, HUNT lost.

THE CHARLES HARRELSON HOAX

In the late 1970's Charles Harrelson was released from a Texas prison having served five years for a contract murder. On May 29, 1979, Charles Harrelson murdered Federal Judge John Wood in San Antonio, Texas. Judge John Wood was scheduled to preside over the drug trial of Charles Harrelson's associate, James Chagra, whose trial was to begin the morning the judge was shot. The police linked Charles Harrelson to the killing of Judge John Wood through a prison informant who told authorities that James Chagra had given him the details of the murder of Judge John Wood. In September 1980, when Texas State Police arrested Charles Harrelson on drugs and weapon charges, Harrelson, intoxicated by free base cocaine and cornered by the police, held a gun to his head and confessed to "killing a federal judge." Then he stated "I killed Kennedy, too." When Charles Harrelson realized that he had made a self-incriminating statement, he decided to take credit for the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, to discredit his first confession. He added, "I killed Kennedy too." Charles Harrelson was an alleged associate of the CARLOS MARCELLO crime family as well as an acquaintance of R.D. Matthews, an associate of JACK RUBY. Charles Harrelson, 25 years old in 1963, had never been connected with the assassination by the media or by any Government agency before he confessed. The news media discovered the story and when photographs of Charles Harrelson were circulated, some researchers believed that he was one of the tramps who were marched through Dealey Plaza and photographed.

THE CHAGRA BROTHERS

During the trial of Charles Harrelson, the brother of James Chagra, Attorney Joseph Chagra, was a government witness against Harrelson. Joseph Chagra told jurors that when he visited Charles Harrelson in jail in September 1980, Charles Harrelson told him about a will in which he admitted having killed Judge Wood and President Kennedy...Joseph Chagra testified that Charles Harrelson 'drew a map of Dealey Plaza to show me where he was standing when Kennedy was shot.'

Charles Harrelson's "will" was a handwritten note he had left after fleeing a Houston motel room, in which he specified that, if killed, his body should be cremated and the ashes sprinkled over the Judge John Wood Memorial Federal Courthouse in San Antonio. The "map of Dealey Plaza" was a diagram Charles Harrelson sketched while Joe Chagra visited him in jail. It pinpointed a lake east of Dallas, where part of the murder weapon had been hidden. The jury didn't believe Joe Chagra's story about the Kennedy assassination. Charles Harrelson was found guilty of murdering Judge John Wood.

On October 2, 1980,

(Deleted) (PROTECT IDENTITY) advised that in a recent conversation (deleted) Travis Irwin...advised (deleted) that he (Irwin) had spoken to Jimmy Chagra...At that time Chagra told Irwin that Charlie Harrelson was currently in custody at Houston, Texas, and Harrelson had previously written a note allegedly admitting that he (Harrelson) was responsible for the assassination of President John Kennedy, as well as the murder of Judge Wood. In addition the note was alleged to have stated that while Harrelson personally and solely assassinated Kennedy, he assisted Larry Culbreath in the murder of Judge Wood and Culbreath actually fired the weapon killing the Judge but Harrelson had planned t he 'hit' and received payment for the contract. [NARA 124-10179-10129]

In the mid-1980's Charles Harrelson retracted his confession: "On November 22, 1963, I was with a friend at 12:30 p.m. having lunch in a restaurant in Houston, Texas. I did not kill JFK and it was not me in the picture. I was not in my right mind when I confessed..."

Although ten years had elapsed since the Harrelson story first appeared, and although he had retracted his confession, in 1990 the story received wide exposure in the tabloids. The Harrelson/Tramp story was widely disseminated for two reasons. The first was that Cheers star Woody Harrelson was involved. The second was that the CIA was aware that Oliver Stone's film was about to rekindle an interest in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The New York Observer had carried an article that stated that Oliver Stone was thinking of basing his movie on Coup D'Etat in America. By having its stringers at the various tabloids run this story, the CIA hoped to cause more confusion regarding the identity of the tramps. The CIA did a good job. Numerous people asked me if one of the tramps was really the father of Woody Harrelson? Charles Harrelson was joined by criminal Chauncey Holt, who claimed he was the HUNT tramp. The Globe: "I Helped Cheer's Star's Dad Kill JFK." [Globe 1.14.92]

Gerald Posner dealt with the tramps by listing HUNT, STURGIS, Charles Harrelson and Chauncy Holt as those who researchers suggested were the tramps, then he named Harold Doyle, John Gedney and Gus Abrams as the real tramps who were "sleeping in the railroad car when the police arrested them. The men had no connection to the events at Dealey, and the conspiracy press suddenly and quietly abandoned the issue."

THE CANFIELD INTERVIEW

Canfield: I was just thinking, all the publicity you've gotten out of this would cost millions of dollars. You know, if you wanted to go to a public relations firm and do advertising. You know you've gotten a lot of free publicity, and that would help with a book. You just put your name on it and it's going to sell.

Sturgis: Yeah, Jack Anderson, too. In his column.

Canfield: How long have you known him?

Sturgis: About twenty years. You see, Jack Anderson came to my home a day before my trial, and he says, 'Frank, let me tell you something, you might not be aware of it, but the people over you, whether you know them or not ...they're going to double- cross you and they're not going to stand up behind you. You're being sold down the river. You're being betrayed.' Now he says, 'If you want me to help you, I can help you.' I says, 'Jack, I'm sorry, nobody can help me. I've got nothing to say. He says, 'Well you think about it, 'cause they're not going to stand behind you.' I said, 'You know how I am in Washington. I do have my contacts with the FBI, the CIA, I do have my contacts with the government.' And he says, 'You and your friends are going to be betrayed. I know you, for many years. You're a loyal guy. But your loyalty ends on betrayal.' I said 'Jack, I have no other choice but to do what I have to do.'

Canfield: Did you feel you were betrayed?

Sturgis: Not really. Because I didn't know the people upstairs involved. So I didn't know what was going on. Only the people in close contact would know what was going on.

Canfield: Yeah, but did you expect them to back you up? And get you off the hook?

Sturgis: Sure, I was an agent for the United States government. For what reason should I feel otherwise?

Canfield: Right. I'd be pretty angry myself. If I was working for someone in that position, and they told you to do a job and you went out and did it. And then you got into some trouble because of what you did for them. And then they wouldn't back you up, I would ...I don't know.

Sturgis: You have to look at my past. I've done a lot of things. I've been on assassination attempts. I was involved in so many things. Skullduggery, intrigue, espionage.

Canfield: When you say assassination attempts ...

Sturgis: Well, in foreign countries.

Canfield: I see.

Sturgis: You have to remember one thing. I've jumped from airplanes, I've made bombing raids, I've made leaflet raids, I've bought agents, you know, threw them out of airplanes with parachutes. I took weapons behind foreign countries for the underground. I've risked my life quite a bit. I've been shot at, I've been wounded, I've been beaten, been tortured. You know, I been through the whole realm. And there are records, this just isn't something I fabricate. There are records! For instance, in the Congressional Record, one Cuban leader said I was one of the greatest soldiers Cuba ever had. And that's a Cuban leader. I've had Cuban leaders say to newspaper people, which I have the clippings of, that I was a big hero...a hero to the Cubans. I had another Cuban leader say I was worth fifty men to them. These are people who knew me but didn't know I was a Government agent. These are people who talk to me as a person.

Canfield: Right.

Sturgis: Jack Anderson made me famous as a soldier of fortune and he told me, 'I never knew you were working as an agent for the United States government. Here I am, I made you famous saying you were a soldier of fortune and now, Frank, you're one of the most famous soldiers of fortune in the world.'

Canfield: It's true, it's true. When did you get involved in the Cuban thing?

Sturgis: I've been involved in Cuba many years ago. Canfield: Before Castro?

Sturgis: Yeah.

Canfield: Before Batista?

Sturgis: During Batista's time. So, this is what people think of me. I've taken Presidents of foreign countries to speak to our President—that was John F. Kennedy—and there's records of it. I've been closely associated with about thirteen Presidents of foreign countries and the United States. Presidents and Prime Ministers. You see me where I live at? A lot of people in that area before the Watergate thing, they never knew who I was. They figured I was a workingman just out working. I'm a salesman. I go off two or three weeks at a time. Then I come back home. I go five, six weeks at a time. A normal guy, I work, mind my own business. And here I am, involved in every goddam thing imaginable. And I've never used Sturgis in any of my activities. I've always used Fiorini, Fenelli, Fedrini—code names that I've used. So if any publicity came out it came out in a code name. I left Sturgis alone. And I had Fidel in his official newspaper, government paper, The Granma, said that I was the most dangerous agent the CIA ever had. Heh, heh, heh. Now that's the Prime Minister of a country. And he was my enemy.

Canfield: Right.

Sturgis: And I knew him. I infiltrated his organization and spent two years in the mountains with him—the things I did to get close to that man. I got very friendly with him.

Canfield: Were you an agent then?

Sturgis: Yeah, sure, I infiltrated the 26th of July Movement. Nobody knew that; nobody still knows that; except the Senate Watergate Committee. That's why last year Fidel said I was the most dangerous agent the CIA ever had. Because he found out.

Canfield: But he found out after you got out of Cuba? Sturgis: At the Watergate hearings, he found out. Canfield: It came out in that?

Sturgis: He knew I was involved in the Bay of Pigs invasion. Somewhat involved in it, you know.

Canfield: You actually infiltrated the Castro movement?

Sturgis: Right. The 26th of July Movement. Since 1957 I was in it.

Canfield: When did you break out of it?

Sturgis: I left Cuba when I arranged for the escape of the Chief of the Air Force.

Canfield: How high up in the Cuban thing did you get?

Sturgis: I was a commander; I was Chief of Security and Intelligence for the Cuban Air Force. I got a star just like Fidel's. That's how high I went up. And while he was Prime Minister, I knew President Dorticos; I knew President Urrutia, President Prio, who is a good friend of mine. President Rivero. I know all these people. I associated with them. I go to President Prio's home.

Canfield: Did you know Castro very well?

Sturgis: Oh yeah. I went to his home in Mexico City. He has a beautiful home. I knew Che Guevara. And I had pictures of...I can't find the pictures I had with Che Guevara. Goddam that makes me mad. I lent them to a friend to hold for me, and she can't find them.

Canfield: Do you have pictures with you and Castro?

Sturgis: Up in the mountains of Cuba.

Canfield: I'd like to see them. You know that whole Cuban thing is a series of books in itself.

Sturgis: The Cuban involvement is a story itself.

Canfield: Do the Cuban nationalists, that is the people who fled Cuba, still have hopes of returning?

Sturgis: Oh yeah. It would take months of research. I've done so many things to try and remember all I've done, it's impossible. I would have to take my tape recorder to all the places I've been. I could go to all the exile leaders, the ex-President of Costa Rica, Trujillo of the Dominican Republic, Idigoras of Guatemala, President of Argentina, etc. Howard Hunt was an attache down in Uruguay. He did this, did that, got information etc. Me, I participated in the action. Skullduggery, etc., back in the fifties.

Canfield: Were you involved in projects in all parts of those countries?

Sturgis: I was involved in operations in all those countries and Mexico many times. I had to be careful of KGB agents down there.

Canfield: You must have been very disappointed when the Bay of Pigs failed.

Sturgis: Oh I was mad. I was mad! We had people inside of Cuba. That's when I started to do ...ahh, you know we were doing green light operations.

Canfield: Green light? What's that?

Sturgis: Permission. No problem. And after a while they cut the assistance of the underground.

Canfield: Why did they do that?

Sturgis: Well, because of the policy. The President says stop all things and they stop them.

Canfield: Eisenhower?

Sturgis: No, Kennedy. Kennedy was the President during the Bay of Pigs.

Canfield: Didn't it originate in '58 or '59?

Sturgis: It was started in 1957 with Eisenhower, but I'm talking about after the failure of the Bay of Pigs invasion, they let the underground down.

Canfield: Whose fault was it? Kennedy's?

Sturgis: Both President Kennedy's, CIA. Can't lay blame on one man. But he takes responsibility for the whole thing.

Canfield: I know in Hunt's books he's very adamant towards Kennedy.

Sturgis: See, he plays politics a little bit. I don't. Because I was on a low level and being Republican or Democrat don't make no difference to me. But understand this. There's times when I've received orders from the Company (CIA) and I made my own decision. If I didn't like the order, I'd voice my opinion and I wouldn't do it. This is the worst part of being an employee, you have to do it. If you're not an employee, I'd tell them to go to hell. If it came to a point where the orders were leaning towards a pro-communist thing, I'd tell them to go to hell.

Canfield: Did you ever feel that way towards the Bay of Pigs invasion itself, when Kennedy started cutting back?

Sturgis: Yeah. I figured he made a deal. In that we had to cut back. I felt that was wrong. He deserted the people. I felt that was wrong. That's why all the news people had me in the newspapers. Hey, I can show you clippings where they say I was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Canfield: Who said this?

Sturgis: Newspapers, I even got investigated to that by the Watergate thing. They asked me where I was. I told them I knew nothing about it. I was home watching television. They felt the CIA might be behind it. So they wanted an investigation of E. Howard Hunt and myself on the assassination of President Kennedy. What the hell do I got to do with the assassination of President Kennedy? I may have disagreed with his policies, and so forth, but that doesn't warrant killing the President of the 'United States. And they asked me about other attempted assassinations. I said yeah, Cuba. Some people say if you attempt to assassinate people outside of the United States, wouldn't you be capable of assassination of the President in the U.S.? I said well, the thought never entered my mind. But I'm capable of doing many things. I'm that type of a man. But I see no grounds for me doing something like that. You know, he was my Commander-in-Chief.

Canfield: What about other people in the CIA?

Sturgis: The CIA had a lot of different factions, some of which I didn't trust.

Canfield: Are you convinced that the Warren Commission Report was correct?

Sturgis: On what?

Canfield: On the Kennedy assassination.

Sturgis: Let me tell you something about the Report. Nobody knows what's in that Report. Only what they wanted to give out. And I don't believe the Report is complete. I think there is a conspiracy involved in the assassination of President Kennedy, and they covered it up.

Canfield: Who do you think did it?

Sturgis: I don't have the slightest idea. But I think it's one big cover-up.

Canfield: That's strange that they would investigate you for that.

Sturgis: Well, they sure did. I had FBI agents over at my house.

Canfield: For the assassination?

Sturgis: Yeah.

Canfield: When? Right after it happened?

Sturgis: Right after it happened.

Canfield: Why did they come to you?

Sturgis: I asked them that. They told me I was one person they felt had the capabilities to do it. Heh, heh, heh. They said, 'Frank, if there's anybody capable of killing the President of the United States, you're the guy that can do it.' Heh, heh, that's funny. I told them, 'I'm not mad at you or nothing, I had nothing to do with it, but that amuses me.'

Canfield: Do you think the Cuban people did it because Kennedy messed up the Bay of Pigs thing?

Sturgis: (Looking at the backside of a girl walking by) This is what the Cuban people brought over here. All those ... (at this point I turned off the tape.)

Canfield: What about other political groups?

Sturgis: Well, I don't know anything about political groups. Really. I've never got that involved with political groups.

Canfield: You wound up working for a pretty big political group, actually.

Sturgis: No, how do you figure? Canfield: Well, Nixon and...

Sturgis: I worked in the Special Intelligence Unit that was formed by the President of the United States. There were complaints about national security, leakage of important documents, military documents, for instance, the Pentagon papers. And these were things I received top clearance on, in order to become part of this intelligence group. Now, if that was being handled wrongly by the people upstairs, well, that's not my responsibility. My responsibility was to take orders. I spent many years involved in these things. With, naturally, top people; military commanders, I know all the top military commanders in Cuba. I had dealings with them before, during and after, 'til I left. And Cuba at that time during the revolution and after, was a hubbub of intrigue.

Canfield: What did you do after the revolution?

Sturgis: Like I say, I was a commander. I was in the rebel army and I transferred over from Oriente Province, came down from the mountains and went to Havana and talked to my friend who got to be the Chief of the Air Force. He's Commander Pepe Vialonze, and I had him appoint me Chief of Security, Director of Security for the Cuban Air Force and Director of Intelligence. I also recruited a number of people in Havana for intelligence. There was a friend of mine, a woman who lives here in Hollandale, Florida. Her name is Geraldine Shama, and she was an agent in the government. I don't know if you remember, but when James Donovan, the lawyer who represented the U.S. Government, went to Cuba to negotiate for the release of the Bay of Pigs invasion, she was one of the last persons to leave Cuba. He arranged for her release. She spent three years in a Cuban prison outside Havana. She lost a twenty million dollar business that her husband had in Cuba. Her husband's name is Suarez. They had a tobacco business. Do you believe that she applied to the government here for aid for the business she lost there and they claim that she was a revolutionary and because she was a revolutionary, convicted by the Cuban tribunal for revolutionary activities, they couldn't do anything about it. Here she was an agent for the American government whom I recruited and her contact was Major Van Horn who was out of the American Embassy and which I thought was very ridiculous. She came back almost physically destroyed and her mental being was not what it was. She was, if you remember, the go-between the underground in Havana and the people here. That was Artime's group which was the MRR. We had a place on Briel Avenue that we used, which is not there today. That was somewhat a meeting place for the MRR organization. And Geraldine was there constantly. And because of her activities going back and forth between Miami and Cuba with the underground and the U.S. government, she was eventually captured, and put in prison. And yet the American government denies her, says she was a revolutionary acting on her own. I know different because I recruited this woman for the American government.

Canfield: Did you tell the American government that?

Sturgis: What do they know? They don't know. And I arranged for her escape, of course, and the Chief of the Air Force to come over here. I arranged for him to be in touch with various agencies of the military government, rather, agencies of the American government. I went to Guatemala with Diaz Lanz for a meeting with President Idigoras, to arrange for bases there.

Canfield: Before the invasion there?

Sturgis: Before the invasion.

Canfield: For training?

Sturgis: Well, for bases, which was training bases for the invasion forces. And naturally, there were Cuban and Russian agents there, so there were big headlines in the newspapers. All over Latin America in the television and in the radio, that I was there trying to get bases from President Idigoras in Guatemala, to invade Cuba, which really came about a year later. So naturally the President was embarrassed with them and we spent almost a week there trying to leave. In order for the United States government to protect itself when I got back a (unintelligible) grabbed me, and held me and lifted my citizenship—which was a ploy on their part to appease Fidel, you know.

Canfield: I see.

Sturgis: Well, you know he did this on his own, not for us, and I don't know if I'll be ...

Canfield: It seems that you're always doing...that they don't support you, you know. You do things for them, but then when it gets down to the...

Sturgis: That's part of the game.

Canfield: nitty gritty, they cut you loose. I guess that's ...that's understood, eh?

Sturgis: Yeah. You know that old saying, if you're caught, you're on your own. Heh, heh, heh.

Canfield: They deny all contacts with you, right?

Sturgis: Sure. You can get killed.

Canfield: Did you ...

Sturgis: I was captured by foreign countries four or five times, in the last fifteen or twenty years. The government always came to my rescue. The only time they didn't come to my rescue, is when I'm captured by my own government. Heh, heh, heh. They fed me to the dogs.

Canfield: Watergate.

Sturgis: It's funny.

Canfield: It's ironic, isn't it?

Sturgis: Yeah, well it sure is. The way things worked out.

Canfield: Later on I'd like to get into a specific incident. Like this general thing is good, but I'd want to get into a specific incident. You can pick it. I don't care what it is. So the publisher can get an idea of some of the things that actually happened.

Sturgis: Well, actually, it depends on what it is.

Canfield: Well, you can generalize about it, you don't have to get specific. But something major like as—you know something major—as exciting as you want to make it. Like you said you participated in assassination attempts.

Sturgis: In Cuba, against Fidel. Against some of his top (unintelligible).

Canfield: Were you always in the Cuban military? Did you ever get out of it, into the private sector?

Sturgis: Not really. In a communist country, the military controls, at least in Cuba the military controls, everything.

Canfield: But he wasn't communist right away, was he? I thought he had a lot of people fooled?

Sturgis: They have evidence of his activities in Bogota, Columbia. Evidently, he must have had some people here, in this country here who thought he wasn't much of a threat. Remember, he wasn't that big of a revolutionary until he went into the mountains. Herbert Matthews, of the New York Times, made him such a big deal.

Canfield: Yeah, but with your contacts you must have known that he had the potential to be successful?

Sturgis: Look, anybody had the potential to be successful in Cuba at that time, because Cuba was ripe for revolution. The American government supported Batista. The American government knew of the corruption, tortures, prison, what Batista was doing to the people. So it was only a matter of time before the people got up in arms and supported somebody who would revolt against them. And here came Fidel Castro. The American government was interested in Fidel Castro because they had a number of people who tried to infiltrate. I believe that I was the only American who infiltrated the 26th of July Movement.

Canfield: Do you mean that America was interested in him to replace Batista?

Sturgis: No, no, no, I didn't say that. The American government knew of the crime and corruption in the Batista regime. And they did nothing to stop all this corruption. You had various revolutionary groups who were up in arms against Batista and the American government supported nobody at that time. It so happened that the American government, certain people, officials, had sympathy for him. The reasons for these sympathies I don't know.

Canfield: Were you sent in by the CIA?

Sturgis: No. I went in on my own. I had contact with the people. What happened was the Consul General of Santiago, the American Consul General there, his name was Park F. Wooler, wanted me to work with him. That's how I got started, with Park F. Wooler in 1957... (he) was a consulate official and normally most consulate officials are Agency people.

Canfield: Right, was he?

Sturgis: No, I couldn't say. What guy is going to say, 'Hey, I'm a CIA official.'?

Canfield: Right. Nobody does that.

Sturgis: Nobody's going to...

Canfield: Blow their cover. Right.

Sturgis: There are lots of consul officials using their positions to cover up their activities. My job was to give him the names of the top military commanders, the units, the strength of the units, the weapons, so forth.

Canfield: Then you were reporting to him while you were working for Castro?

Sturgis: He told me I was playing a very dangerous game, and to be very, very careful, because I could have both sides after me.

Canfield: Did you actually fight for Castro, you know, see action?

Sturgis: I participated in a number of activities up there with him. Not directly kill anybody, but if it was necessary to defend myself, you know. I was almost trapped by their patrols. And one time the people I was with were trapped. Most of the time we were dodging them. We would see them, we would hide, stay low.

Canfield: You said you were in the Air Force. Did you fly?

Sturgis: We'd fly all the time. Matter of fact, I was a flight instructor in the Civil Air Patrol plus Operations Officer for a squadron.

Canfield: And that's what you did for Castro?

Sturgis: I flew while I was up there; in order to get close to him, I flew a bunch of guns and equipment.

Canfield: From where?

Sturgis: The United States. Using secret landing fields. I'd go buy guns and equipment, I'd package them up, bring them to the air field, load them on the plane, run over and back to Cuba. I had to do all these things myself, personally in order to get close to him. I had to show him that I had the intelligence to get him equipment that he needed very badly. I spoke to him while I was in Mexico over one of the clandestine radio transmitters we had in Ecuador that would go directly to Cuba. Canfield: Did he ever suspect you of being an American agent? Sturgis: We got very friendly.

Canfield: Is there any truth in the report that Batista was supported by Americans like Meyer Lansky?

Sturgis: The gambling interests in Cuba did support Batista. The two main people who controlled the gambling interests in Cuba were Meyer Lansky and Santo Trafficante. They were the men who controlled all the gambling in Cuba for the National Syndicate.

Canfield: Did Castro keep the gambling casinos open and just run them?

Sturgis: They closed them all down.

Canfield: Right after the revolution?

Sturgis: Several monthd after he took over. I forget when, but they closed up in '60, before the invasion. I don't know the date, that will have to be researched.

Canfield: Did you ever know a guy by the name of McWillie?

Sturgis: Who?

Canfield: McWillie.

Sturgis: Yeah. That name is very, very familiar. I forget what he is or who he is but McWillie, yeah.

Canfield: I think he was a gambler of some sort.

Sturgis: Well, there you had so many of them.

Canfield: I thought he was a big man in the Syndicate or something?

Sturgis: I knew ....I met there, Santo Trafficante, I met the Lansky brothers, I met there Charlie Terrini; they call him Charlie the Blade, I met him there. I met Errol Flynn. Heh, heh. I met a lot of movie actors there.

Canfield: Where?

Sturgis: At the casino. I met Mike McLaney there. He was in charge of the national gambling casino.

Canfield: How? Were you just hanging out there?

Sturgis: No, that was another part of the job there. I was in charge of all the gambling casinos for the Cuban government—for a very short period of time.

Canfield: For Castro?

Sturgis: For Castro. The woman who was in charge of that was Casterta Nunnas. She was up in the mountains with me, and she got to be in charge of that. It came under her ministry. Fidel, one day at the Prime Minister's office, asked me if I would help Casterta with the gambling casinos. I told him, yes, which, of course, was a short time, because I had all these other jobs and I was involved with all this intelligence work.

Canfield: Do you know when that was? - Sturgis: 1959.

Canfield: I bet when he closed all the casinos, when he took over the casinos, the Syndicate was pretty angry.

Sturgis: It didn't bother them. At the very beginning.

Canfield: Didn't he kick them all out?

Sturgis: Later, yeah.

Canfield: And then they got angry!

Sturgis: There wasn't much they could do about it.

Canfield: Did the Syndicate ever help go back and take Cuba?

Sturgis: Naw, naw.

Canfield: They just let it go?

Sturgis: They had to let it go. The American government was involved. They didn't want to get involved in anything that the American government was involved in.

Canfield: Did Nixon ever go down there? During that period?

Sturgis: Not to my knowledge. I don't think he did.

Canfield: Of course he was Vice-President prior to '60.

Sturgis: With all the trouble that was going on in Cuba at the time, I don't think he made it one of his tours; at least not to my knowledge.

Canfield: He was down in South America.

Sturgis: But he never went to Cuba.

Canfield: Did you ever know him or ever meet him?

Sturgis: Who's that?

Canfield: Nixon.

Sturgis: No, I never met President Nixon. Now, I met President Kennedy. I took President Carlos Prio of Cuba to speak with President Kennedy. I met Secretary of State Christian Herter; a few other State Department officials.

Yeah, Mexico was a place that was very intriguing—a lot of conspiracies down there. I did several things while I was back in Havana, you know, there was so much intrigue going on. I was smuggling out different military personnel that were against the Castro government . . . (end of this tape)

Canfield: Let's talk about the domestic activities that are just being revealed.

Sturgis: Let me go ahead and say this here. I realize like in today's paper, I saw where it said CIA did domestic intelligence on Eartha Kitt—

Canfield: Right.

Sturgis: —and a number of other people and so forth. Okay, well, I think I told you earlier that I don't know if I'm a CIA agent or was a CIA agent or not because the top brass in CIA first denies me then they acknowledge me, then they deny me, so I don't know what the hell I am, but all I know is I've been involved in a lot of activities for the United States government, from the very beginning—from the time that I joined the United States Marine Corps when I first turned seventeen years old up until the present day, and I have three honorable discharges from the service. I served in Europe, United States, Latin America, and I served in Asia. Now as far as domestic intelligence, I can say this, that I believe that before, during and after the Bay of Pigs invasion there was a lot of domestic intelligence going on, and I believe it's still going on to the present day, because Miami is the hub of international intrigue here. You've got a lot of Asians here—

Canfield: As far as Latin America is concerned—

Sturgis: I'm saying as far as Latin America, which extends all the way to China and Russia. Latin America, you've got the Chinese colonies, and Cuba, and different parts of Latin America. So that means you do have Chinese communist intelligence agents that are here in Latin America. You've got Russian agents—always. Before Fidel took over Cuba, the Russian government had the largest spy network in this hemisphere working out of their Russian embassy in Mexico City. They had over two hundred agents working out of that embassy there. Since Cuba came about with Fidel, they transferred the bulk of their agents, naturally, in Havana, Cuba. This hemisphere is loaded with Russian communist agents. Still in Mexico, my Mexican operation, I had to be careful of Mexican KGB agents there—which I have names of them in 1968; I have the names of all these people here.

Canfield: How far back does your Mexican involvement go?

Sturgis: I would say my Mexican involvement goes back as far as 1957, '58 to the present day. To the present day, would you believe?

Canfield: Now you worked with Hunt down in—well, you didn't work with him. Did he ever work in Mexico?

Sturgis: Oh yes. Howard Hunt? Yeah. Yeah, he worked in Mexico, sure.

Canfield: When was that?

Sturgis: I forget what year, I'd have to research that. But he operated out of Mexico, certainly. Now let's get back to domestic intelligence. I do have the names of over a dozen Americans, that they're activities have been reported to CIA. Observed and reported, surveillance—all their activities, yes. And I can also give you names of other CIA agents that were involved...

Canfield: You actually participated in the surveillance operation?

Sturgis: Oh, yeah, of Americans, sure—

Canfield: Are they prominent people that—

Sturgis: Well, they're ordinary people that, uh, who did not believe in communism, and believed in anti-communism, and naturally these same people helped in many ways—

Canfield: Well why would you put anti-communist people under surveillance?

Sturgis: Government orders.

Canfield: Why? I don't understand.

Sturgis: It's orders that came down from upstairs.

Canfield: Wouldn't they say pro-communist people?

Sturgis: My activities in this area here was against pro-communist elements, who were Americans and foreigners, plus anti-communist elements who were American and foreigners.

Canfield: Any prominent people, that the American public would know?

Sturgis: I would think that CIA had the dossier of many, many prominent people, and people who were not prominent; but regardless of their prominence, from what I understand just recently, the 1947 Act on Domestic Intelligence that the CIA had, they're not supposed to do that, it's against the charter. And regardless of their prominence, they're still Americans citizens.

Canfield: Right, well, I'm just saying it would be a very interesting thing if it was known.

Sturgis: Well, I would think so. You know who Sherman Billingsly is? He was the owner of the—what's that famous nightclub in New York?—um, oh my goodness,—(The Stork Club)

Canfield: Well...

Sturgis: Famous nightclub, it's been for many years—

Canfield: We can look that up later

Sturgis: Anyway, I can't remember his name, uh, the name of the nightclub, but Billingsly is his name, he's a very very famous man, and his son-in-law, the man who married his daughter, name was Alex Rorke. He was a freelance photographer and reporter, involved in many different Latin American, uh, as a reporter, many Latin American intrigues. Alex participated in a number of operations that went into Cuba, also in Mexico. And if you remember there was a big search by the United States Coast Guard, both air and sea, a number of years ago, when he left Opalocka airfield, and he was going to Nicaragua, and supposedly it is rumored that he was shot down near Cuba, into the water, there were reports he was captured but evidently my information—there was nobody inside of Cuba that was captured by the name of Alex Rorke. I assume he either got shot down over water and his body and the plane have disappeared. I, with a number of other people which I will get to at a later date, sat with Alex Rorke where his airplane was parked at Opalocka airfield which is close by here, the day before he made his ill-fated trip. And I will get the names of everybody that knew about the trip and so forth, that the FBI investigated, I believe even CIA investigated that, I'm not sure, but they may have been in on the investigation, plus other agencies of the United States government, (unintelligible). . . of his disappearance.

Canfield: What about surveillance of other people; any specific people that you remember?

Sturgis: Well, I can't, I have to really search my memory, I've got a meeting tonight with a friend of mine that participated in operations with me; one of the people that I personally had under surveillance, and I know that other agents had him under surveillance.

Canfield: Electronically, and by other means?

Sturgis: I would say by other means, really—

Canfield: Not so much electronically.

Sturgis: Not so much electronically; other means. As a matter of fact, there's one party (unintelligible)—that he bought. Now if you remember that particular time, there was a lot of discussion about the Russian missiles that were inside of Cuba. And this party had the airplane in the hangar being worked on; he told me that this airplane was going to go to Cuba to seek out these missile bases and take pictures. Also at the same time there was rumors that he was going to go over there and do some bombing and strafing. So naturally, people I was associated with got wind of it, and told me to investigate it, which I did; and I ran across another CIA friend of mine who wanted to see and meet this party who I was in touch with. So I made arrangements and I told my friend who was under surveillance, that I had someone I knew by the name of a Mr. B., who was a company man, he worked for the outfit—these are the words you use to describe agents for the CIA—and he said, OK, I'll see him, provided it's with you. I said OK and I set up the arrangements, and we went over to Mr. B's home. I went into his office where he had files, like he had maybe a good half a dozen or more file cabinets full of documents of people, that he or the Agency that came over to him, and gave him information on foreigners, or Americans—

Canfield: And he kept tabs on a lot of different people.

Sturgis: Oh, quite a bit, yeah. And plus the man that I worked for my case officer, also did the same thing.

Canfield: Explain, as you did before, on our way over here, some of the other things that the company asked you to do, and approached you, like on the 40 committee, etc.

Sturgis: Well, I was an associate, while I participated in Operation Forty. Operation Forty was formed before the Bay of Pigs invasion, it was a top secret government operation; it consisted of many Cuban intelligence officers, who worked for the Central Intelligence Agency, and this organization. Their job primarily was to train people to infiltrate a foreign country, to make contact with members of the underground, make contact with people in the political sector of the government, foreign government, make contact with people in the military sector of the foreign government, plus there was also a group formed in which was the assassination section, which I was part of, that if necessary, this assassination group would upon orders, naturally, assassinate either members of the military in the foreign country, members of the political parties of the foreign country that you were going to infiltrate, and if necessary some of your own members, who were suspected of being foreign agents. Now at the same time, I was asked by my friend, who was a CIA agent, he asked me if I was interested in participating, or doing an assassination with the Company. I told him yes, providing that I would sit down with this case officer and go over the details, and that I would do it.

Canfield: Domestic or foreign?

Sturgis: It would be domestic.

Canfield: Here in the United States?

Sturgis: Oh, yeah. The reason for that, he asked me how I would go about it. And I told him, well, if it was going to be domestic, well, I could do it several ways. I could do it either in the Everglades, I could do it by boat, or I could do it by air. But, that if it was going to be done, I did not want nobody to be part of this, I would do it by myself, but I definitely wanted to meet the officer who wanted this done, and I wanted to see him, and get it right from him, so I would be sure that it would be someone with authority, and not just a lower-level agent, such as he.

Canfield: Did this come out of the Forty Committee, or the Agency itself?

Sturgis: This is what the Operation of Forty was trained for, by the Agency—to do all this type of work.

Canfield: Do you know if they ever did carry out any operations like that?

Sturgis: Yeah, oh yeah. Sure. Operations were being done, infiltrations were going on inside of Cuba, and contacts were made with political elements in Cuba, also in military and—

Canfield: I mean the assassination teams.

Sturgis: Well there were several from word of mouth through associates, there were several attempts and several assassinations that were going on inside of Cuba. Nothing large—

Canfield: Any other countries?

Sturgis: Not that I know of. No, we were concentrating strictly in Cuba at that particular time. Actually, they were operating out of Mexico, too; CIA activities were in Mexico through Nicaragua, Costa Rica, in Panama, in Guantanamo Bay, Puerto Rico, South Florida, all the way to Andrews Air Force Base. This is how the activities stretched all over.

Canfield: What about domestic activities, did they ever attempt a domestic assassination?

Sturgis: Not to my knowledge, no. But the only thing I can say on that is, when I was asked to do domestically, myself—

Canfield: Right.

Sturgis: Of anyone else, no, not to my knowledge; which brings the why all this stuff I've been reading in the papers where they want me to be part of the investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy, I have no knowledge of anything like—

Canfield: Did anyone ever approach you about

Sturgis: The assassination? Yeah, oh yeah.

Canfield: No, I mean, to do the assassination.

Sturgis: No, no, oh no. The Cubans were very angry with the Kennedys, they were furious with Kennedy because of the failure of the Bay of Pigs invasion. But the only thing that I had as far as the assassination was concerned, naturally, is the investigation by the FBI. And they said, 'Well, Frank, this is strictly a voluntary thing, if you want to talk with us, if you don't want to talk with us'—And they told me that they felt that I was one of the persons capable, if I wanted to assassinate somebody as high as the President of the United States, that I was capable of...

Canfield: Do you think that maybe some of those other people in the Forty Committee were capable of doing that?

Sturgis: Well, I'll be very honest with you, I told you that the Cubans were furious with what happened and so forth. It seems that the proof is Oswald, who was involved with the assassination, who supposedly killed President Kennedy, anybody was capable of it. Whether they get away with it or not, is another thing. I think there was a tremendous conspiracy going on in that assassination, that the Warren Commission has not told all, that they covered up a lot of things that they didn't want the American people to know. And I think there are people in various Federal agencies that may have covered up.

Canfield: Why would they do that?

Sturgis: I really don't know. Because we were on the brink of a war, and it could have very easily touched off a war, a nuclear war.

Canfield: Because of Cuba, because of the Missile Crisis? Had you ever had any suspicions about any other people on the Forty Committee that were in the assassination-

Sturgis: Oh yeah, I had suspicions that some of the members of Operation Forty were communist agents. Certainly.

Canfield: Getting back to some of those domestic activities that you participated in. We were discussing your suspicions of other Forty Committee members. Did you ever have any proof or any leads that would indicate that they were involved in assassinations—like Kennedy's?

Sturgis: No, no I didn't. The only thing I can say, there were rumors in the intelligence circles. You see a lot of these people, the American intelligence, had contact with a number of students inside of Cuba during this time. They left Cuba when Fidel took over; they came to the United States, and they still maintain contact, mainly, naturally, CIA. And you gotta understand the situation in Cuba. When Fidel came in, a lot of these people went over to Fidel's side. They turned in a lot of Cubans, and at the same time when they found out that their situation was difficult, and didn't like what was going on themselves, some of these people had contact with the American agencies; and you gotta understand that some of these people that came over were already indoctrinated and trained to be special agents, so they came over here, and some of them more or less, worked as double agents. Not only working for (tape break). We still have that problem today, except there's been a change ...They have infiltrated many fields here. Cubans are agents, intelligence agents, they have infiltrated the unions here, they have infiltrated all kinds of business in this area. I imagine all the different agencies here are aware of this, they should be, because I am. And being that this country is a democracy, they know what is going on, so naturally they don't touch it, unless it's something serious that's going on.

Canfield: You were approached though to do assassination jobs—

Sturgis: Oh, yeah. Also an associate. And it can be proven that he is or rather was, at that time, a CIA agent.

Canfield: Was he involved in any of the things that went on later?

Sturgis...intelligence?

Canfield: No, involved in, yeah, involved in domestic intelligence—involved in Watergate?

Sturgis: Well, I don't want to go ahead and say at this point. But if I'm ever called in front of a Congressional committee, which I assume I would be, I'll tell them...

Canfield: Would you tell, uh, say we were going to do a book, a publisher, you know. And he would be very much interested in breaking something like that in a book before it got to the Congressional investigation where everyone would hear it. Would you reveal that name before?

Sturgis: Well, it would be more than one name...

Canfield: Would you do that then?

Sturgis: Sure.

Canfield: Would you do it now?

Sturgis: I wouldn't do it for the press, but I would do it more or less if an offer was made in book form.

Canfield: OK, great. Is it someone that we would know?

Sturgis: I would expect that it would be people who—at least some of them would be known, yeah.

Canfield: Did they ever tell you who was to be assassinated?

Sturgis: No.

Canfield: Did you have any ideas?

Sturgis: No, no. I don't even know if it was another agent, or a double agent, or a fool or what. The only one who would know are the people involved in CIA.

Canfield: Do you know if they had ever done this, with another agent?

Sturgis: No, not to my knowledge, no.

Canfield: They never did assassinate anybody in the United States?

Sturgis: Not to my knowledge, no.

Canfield: Interesting. If they did, my God, that would be a great piece of material right there.

Sturgis: This is what would happen to the committee, the committee would get all that out. The committee would have to go ahead and subpoena people, and the subpoena would have to go ahead and say who, when, where, what and where...with what went on with Watergate ... (unintelligible)... orders were given to that effect. On this assassination thing, I would figure well, it's gonna have to come up from someone a little higher than this agent right here. It's gonna have to come from someone with a little authority.

Canfield: Did you tell him that?

Sturgis: Oh, yeah.

Canfield: And what was his response?

Sturgis: He told me that he would make contact with someone higher up, and pass on that information, and so forth.

Canfield: Did you ever get any feedback from him—or anyone else?

Sturgis: No.

(Tape Break)

Sturgis: Remember I told you that I made the arrangements for President Prio many years ago, with phone calls from Washington, D.C. to see and meet and speak with the President of the United States who at that time was President John F. Kennedy, right? OK, just recently in the last few months, I was contacted by certain leaders in the exile community to try and form some kind of a unity Party among the Cubans. I arranged for the three ex-presidents of Cuba, that's President Urruatia, who I knew personally, President Carlos Prio, who I know personally, and President —, oh I got a blank mind, well I got these three ex-Presidents to come to an agreement for a political base, of unity, and help liberate Cuba, providing that they would not break any American or international laws. Throughout this whole period they did a tremendous job. I was contacted by leaders in the organization and many times sat down with them and told them that I think that they should get contact with the OAS which is the Organization of American States, with the UN, which is the United Nations, that I also made contact for them with various government agencies. They asked me about them forming a committee, a delegation, what I thought about it, and, uh, going with them to Quito, Ecuador in order to protest the lifting of sanctions; and I advised them before that I think that they should work on this. They took my advice, sent a delegation to Quito, Ecuador, with the help of the Ambassador of Chile, and they were under house arrest in Ecuador, and because of them being under house arrest they got tremendous international publicity, which really blew up Cuba's chance, Fidel's chance of the OAS lifting the sanctions. So the world does know that with the publicity that this delegation got, that was headed by the ex-President Carlos Prio, that the vote went against lifting the sanctions. They came back, I was notified that they were going to arrive at the international airport, I went there to make sure that they had no problems of re-entry, and they came in, they had a big ovation. I'm still in touch with these people today. This is the historical event for them, and a disaster for Fidel.

Canfield: Did you know anything about the bombing in Washington that was connected with that?

Sturgis: No, no. These are groups. One reason why I've been advising these groups to rally around the three ex-Presidents is to help the American government in keeping down the terrorist bombing. I felt that they wouldn't do the Cuban exiles any good, but all this activity, and I felt that if they had some form of unity, which—everything that they did do would have to be legal—this would give incentive to the Cuban exiles; not to really do anything.

Canfield: Anything else?

Sturgis: No, no I don't think so. He gets people who are close to the individual, you know, who could do the thing, 'cause usually agents are not close to the individual.

Canfield: I see, like say you're gonna do in a President of some country, you would, uh-

Sturgis: For instance, Fidel; when I was in Cuba there, I told my CIA contact, I said, look pass the word upstairs, you want me to kill Fidel, I'll kill him, if he comes to the Air Force base. I'm here in control of the military police, of the security of all the Air Force bases in Cuba. I said, if he comes here with Che, if he comes there with all the top military people, with many of the ministers, I can kill him in two minutes. If you people want it done, I will do it with my people ...and I'll just wipe the whole three jeeps right out, just taking two minutes to do it. Or if you want me to do it inside the base. But I am in a position to do it, see. Because I was close with Fidel.

Canfield: Right, and he would trust you.

Sturgis: You know what I mean? I sat down in the Prime Minister's office with Fidel talking with Fidel right in the Prime Minister's office, you know, these are things, you've got to go ahead and get people who are close to someone, instead of someone who's not close, for the simple reason, how are you going to get in the Prime Minister's office? No way you can, because of all the security. But I pass through like nobody's business...the commander!

Canfield: So what did they say when you put this to them?

Sturgis: They'd let me know. At that time, if you remember, the American embassy was very pro-Fidel.

Canfield: Oh, I see, this was before?

Sturgis: In 1959, yep. A few weeks after '59. The Embassy, I didn't trust a lot of people in the Embassy because they were pro-Fidel; Americans were. But I trusted the man that was my contact. He was an Army colonel—not an Army colonel, he was a colonel ... a military man. I told him more than one time, within a six-month period. And I was involved with other people trying to kill Fidel. But they wanted it a different way, and I told them no, it's not gonna work, and it didn't work. The only way to get him was right at that Air Force base.

Canfield: They didn't go your way, they went some other way and they failed?

Sturgis: Right, well these were not the CIA people, these were Cuban leaders, top ranking Cubans who were against Fidel, and they wanted to do it their way, and keep me out of it. Well, OK, 'cause I heard there was going to be an attempt to kill him and so forth; and I told them hey, I hear this, this, this, this, and if you're gonna do it, I suggest you don't do it. The only way to do it is here at the Air Force base. I'll tell you how to do it. 'You're not to be involved. We'll do it our way. We got our own plan.' (Laugh). The plan never worked, he's still there. Now on research, where it comes to the Cuban problem, Christ, there's so much people working here, Cubans who were working on the CIA payroll, and the things that they were doing, the things I was involved in, there's a lot to it. I'll be honest with you. To research a lot of things I did, it'll take a good six months. Really. Working hard, making contact with people. And these are people who were associated with CIA, with the Cuban government.

Canfield Like in the Forty Committee? They just took people that had already been trained in this?

Sturgis: Operation 40 were a bunch of Cubans that were sent to the Army to receive intelligence training. They received it; their job was ...infiltration into Cuba, to make contact with the underground, and to assist the underground with money for guns, equipment; also make contact with the local politicians and military people, and if they would not cooperate...

Canfield: And they were all trained in assasssination? Or just a group of them?

Sturgis: Just a group, a team of them.

Canfield: Five, ten, fifteen—

Sturgis: No, more than that.

Canfield: Twenty?

Sturgis: More than that. When we get into the research of it, there's a lot—you see a lot of these people who belong to it didn't know me. Only the top chief of the operation, only the top man. Like agents, they don't expose themselves to everybody. You don't do that. What good is an agent if everybody knows? You wind up getting killed. Agent is an agent that nobody knows, only the men he works with. Now this intelligence group, they all knew only the people working close with them.

Canfield: Any other domestic activities that you participated in, or know of that other agents participated in, that would be interesting to a publisher; the American public, you know, the readers.

Sturgis: Well, I'm going to have a meeting tonight with one of the persons who were under surveillance by me and CIA, and I'm gonna talk with him ...names, places, and refresh my memory with him...

Canfield: These are some of the operations that you and he went on together?

Sturgis: Yeah. He participated with me. I used him—

Canfield: Will you be able to reveal his name, or can you reveal his name right now?

Sturgis: Well, I'll reveal it tonight after I sit down with him and get all that information, I will get it down on paper.

Canfield: Would you make that information available to a publisher then?

Sturgis: Yeah.

Canfield: Under contract—

Sturgis: I may have to hold it with the names. To be very honest with you, at least the names of the agents involved, for reasons ...but as far as the names of the people who were under surveillance, I would give them to you.

Canfield: You will reveal the agents for the committee?

Sturgis: Oh, yeah, for the committee-

Canfield: Why for the committee and not your publisher?

Sturgis: Because that is a legal body and there might be legal technicalities involved, and I want to make sure that I am protected legally.

Canfield: Well, the only protection the publisher can—

Sturgis: There's no protection a publisher can give me.

Canfield: Well, except money. Money can protect you, in a sense—

Sturgis: No, no, it can put you in jail, unless you got immunity, my friend—

Canfield: If you were offered immunity, what kind of revelations would you make?

Sturgis: Well, I would give the names of all the agents that were involved, that I know were involved in domestic surveillance. And this would be my card for protection from prosecution. So why should I go for even a hundred thousand dollars or even a million dollars, put myself in jail for that.

Canfield: You can always leave, avoid prosecution with that kind of money; stay on appeal until doomsday—

Sturgis: No way, no way. Listen, I got involved in one of the greatest scandals that this country ever had in its history—

Canfield: What?

Sturgis: And I had no protection whatsoever.

Canfield: Why would the government offer you any more protection on something else?

Sturgis: Because they would want to know about this domestic surveillance, and I would be willing to give all that information for my own protection. Once I go in front of a committee and I get my immunity and I give them information, then there's no problem.

Canfield: Do you think there are any more scandals?

Sturgis: This is a scandal.

Canfield: Do you think it's bigger than Watergate?

Sturgis: No.

Canfield: Do you think there's anything bigger than Watergate?

Sturgis: Not in a long time. There's a number of scandals that wouldn't come close to Watergate. The operation I had in Mexico was a scandal. Nobody knows anything about that. And I told the Senate Watergate committee about it, but naturally they...

Canfield: Can you tell us a little bit about that?

Sturgis: Yeah, it was a Mexican operation that I was in. In association with one or more CIA people that I knew for many, many years and worked with for many, many years.

Canfield: What was your purpose? What were you doing?

Sturgis: Well, I told this group of Americans that we were going to make a commando raid in Cuba. That was the purpose at the beginning. But when I went to see my contact in Mexico City at one of the big name hotels there called the—I have a mental block for the names of hotels—I was told secretly by him that I was to participate with another boat to capture a Russian vessel that was going to be off the coast of Cuba, and I was to pretend that my ship that I was on was disabled that they would stop to pick me up, at the same time I was to arrange the capture of this Russian vessel and proceed to take this Russian vessel off the coast of Venezuela where I would receive assistance, and to use the ship and the crew members as hostages to negotiate for the release of the SS Pueblo and the crew members who were captured in...

Canfield: What happened to this?

Sturgis: A storm came up, I got caught on a reef, the captain wasn't familiar with that particular area, the rudder and the propeller was bent, we sprung a leak, had to throw a lot of stuff overboard in order not to sink, come into Belize which is British Honduras, stayed there for two hours, tried to get repairs, after two hours later the government officials came there and made us all ...(unintelligible because of train noise) but I assume the operation was aborted. I was contacted while I was at the British Honduras prison, by an official of the American government who was very firm and stern with me. Finally after x amount of days while we were in prison there, we then went to court there and people were, you know we were treated like celebrities there, we walked past people, crowds in the street... 'cause it is a black nation, so we were somewhat of celebrities. I gave a beautiful speech to judge there ... (he) then deported us back to Miami in three separate flights; the reason for that is they were afraid of hijacking. And at the same time in that prison we made very good friends with their black prisoners; as a matter of fact, there were a coupla times where they wanted to break me out; I was put in solitary confinement, and they wanted to have a big breakout there to get me out of prison, ... and I told them no, I didn't want that, I wanted to see how the trial went ... In this breakout they wanted to go to the hills and help us organize . . . (train noise) One day less five years later I got caught with Watergate; Archibald Cox, Federal Watergate

Prosecutor, told Judge Sirica that I would not cooperate with him, and at the same time, a few days later I was handed down an indictment on three counts. Indictment came pertaining to my Mexican operation. I went to court at the first trial. I got found innocent on car theft...hung jury on the other two counts, went back for a second trial, got found guilty on interstate transportation of stolen vehicle, plus conspiracy. I could have got up to ten years, my lawyer threatened to call the CIA director station chief in Miami and the station chief in Mexico City and the Consul General of British Honduras, and I refused, I refused to get on the stand to defend myself, because I felt that these were trumped-up charges being put on by Archibald Cox and my lawyer told or asked him why did the government wait one day less five years because if I was guilty of any wrongdoing, they had all these years to do it in. Why do it at the last minute.

Canfield: But they were doing it because you were—

Sturgis: I was not cooperating.

Canfield: Why wouldn't you cooperate?

Sturgis: Well, Archibald Cox wanted me to go ahead and admit the things that I felt were lies, which would have helped him in his investigation of the Watergate break-in. I felt it was not right—

Canfield: Like what things?

Sturgis: He wanted me to admit that I received executive clemency from the President of the United States; he wanted me to admit that I was pressured to plead guilty; he wanted me to admit that I was to receive 'hush money.' And I told him no, I would not admit to these things, because I felt that these were lies, that him wanting me to admit these would help his committee. He said, for instance, 'I have a jigsaw puzzle here, and there is a spot open on this jigsaw puzzle which you don't fit into. I need you to fit into that. Can you answer these questions truthfully, then you will be part of this jigsaw puzzle.' He says, 'There's the door, and you can go free, right now.' I told him, 'Nope, I'll stay in jail.' And I stayed in jail for over fourteen months.

Canfield: Have you ever regretted that since then?

Sturgis: No, I was asked if I had this opportunity to do the things again, knowing what I knew, would I do it, and I told them yes. They said why, they thought I was a fool. I says well, I maintain now, like I maintained then, that I was an agent of the United States government; the truth was there, that all these officials in the government...

Canfield: Paid you to do these things—

Sturgis: Hired me to do what I had to do, what I thought was a legal thing, for national security. Who am I to go and dispute an order, from someone higher than me, knowing that they are officials of the United States government?

Canfield: Did you feel you were protecting these people?

Sturgis: Nope, I felt I was doing my job. As I had done in the past, for my country, for national security, and in the same way you operate when you're working with intelligence organizations.

Canfield: I see. Hmmm. Any other domestic revelations that you could—?

Sturgis: Well right now I can't think of any more, maybe after tonight after I deal with this friend of mine, it's possible that in talking with him, you know, we could more or less think of certain things, certain operations and so forth that will come out, you know.

Canfield: OK, let's talk for a minute on the break-in. Did you help break into Ellsberg's office? Did you do any other break-ins besides Watergate?

Sturgis: Yeah, in Cuba I did several break-ins, while I was there in Havana. As I told you before, I was involved in a lot of intrigue there. With Cuban officials and so forth, but, you know, this information was for the national government...Mexico. I was involved in a number of things in Mexico, but not—I have to think about Mexico.

Canfield: Did you ever go to Viet Nam?

Sturgis: No.

Canfield: Just Latin America primarily.

Sturgis: Europe, Latin America. Well, I was in the Pacific in the Second World War.

Canfield: And there weren't any other break-ins that you participated in, in the United States?

Sturgis: In Cuba, yes. In the United States, no.

Canfield: Just Watergate.

Sturgis: Just Watergate, yes. That's the one I got caught at.

Canfield: What about the Chilean embassy?

Sturgis: No, I denied that.

Canfield: You denied that, but did you do it?

Sturgis: I denied it.

Canfield: (laugh). OK, um. You said that was the only one you ever got caught at.

Sturgis: Right.

Canfield: I see, OK. How are we gonna interest our publisher, if, you know, we don't have any material?

Sturgis: I don't know, really. This is usually what happens with, you know, with publishers and people that go ahead and say, well, well, we got this, we got that, we gotta have something new, and so forth. What else is new?

Canfield: Yeah, but Congress is going to get out-

Sturgis: Oh, there's going to be a number of things. There's gonna be a lot of TV coverage, a lot of things going on.

Canfield: Think anybody will be prosecuted?

Sturgis: I hope not. How can they be prosecuted? You know, doing something that they had orders to do.

Canfield: Well, how were they prosecuted for Watergate? Sturgis: Good question. Good question.

Canfield: So, if it's gonna come out in that, don't you think, you know, you should benefit by it? You know, this way, if you get it out, before it comes out in Congress, you can make something from it, you know, instead of just taking a rap, or whatever is going to happen—

Sturgis: Well, I don't think there's going to be any rap taken, because there's too many high officials involved at the time, and if an order did come down, which, remember, Colby said that there was domestic intelligence ...CIA orders—

Canfield: CIA, or did somebody order the CIA?

Sturgis: They'll have to dig even more into that. They'll have to dig into that and see, who ordered it, whether it was the CIA director, or whether it was somebody in the State Department, or whether it was somebody in the government itself.

STURGIS AND THE ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION

On March 3, 1975 Sturgis was questioned about his early CIA connections in Cuba. The interview with Sturgis is presented here almost in its entirety. [NARA SSCIA 157-10005-10125]

Schwarzer: The first subject area we want to question you about is your association if any with the CIA. How, would you tell us whether you have ever had any kind of written or oral agreement or understanding with the CIA to perform services for them?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Schwarzer: And about when was it made?

Sturgis: Well, it would go back to Cuba. I will give you the first contact that I ever had in Cuba, which was Mr. Clark Wollan [born June 26, 1917]. He worked out of the American Consulate in Santiago de Cuba. Yes sir. He made contact -- I forget how he made contact with me, but I believe the first contact I had with Mr. Wollan was at the Casa Grande Hotel, Sanitago.

Schwarzer: We don't want to go into all that detail. Can you just tell us the general nature of the services that you performed, according to your understanding, for the CIA while you were in Cuba. Sturgis: The services I performed were to recruit agents. This would be people in high standing, both in the civil government and in the military. The reason for this naturally, is my position that I held in Cuba.

Schwarzer: Were you paid for those services?

Sturgis: No sir. I was asked to -- I was asked if I wanted to be paid and I told them no.

Schwarzer: And what is the basis for the statement that you make that you are performing those services for the CIA, rather than somebody else?

Sturgis: Let me say this here, sir. I, at that time, assumed that the people that I was associated with were connected with the CIA. I could give you names. For instance Colonel Nichols, the American Military Air Attache. I believe at the time (deleted) worked (deleted).

Schwarzer: Did any of the Americans with whom you dealt while you were in Cuba identify themselves as being associated with or representing the CIA at any time?

Sturgis: No sir.

Schwarzer: During what period of time did you perform those services in Cuba?

Sturgis: I believe it was -- it might have been the last part of 1958, and also 1959.

Schwarzer: When did those services end in Cuba?

Sturgis: I left Cuba in June 30, 1959, and came to the U.S.

Schwarzer: When you came to the United States, did you ever reach any agreement, or contract, or understanding, or anything to that effect with anybody representing the CIA to work for the CIA in the U.S.

Sturgis: The people that I was in touch with, sir, were people that I was associated with, or people who told me they were working for the Agency.

Schwarzer: Did you yourself make a contract either written or oral with the CIA in the U.S.?

Sturgis: An oral understanding, yes.

Schwarzer: When was that made?

Sturgis: I would think that it started in Cuba, and continued when I came to the U.S.

Schwarzer: Was that understanding which you described which you reached in Cuba ever reaffirmed with anybody or renewed or confirmed in the U.S.?

Sturgis: Well, the people I was in touch with naturally was Sam Jennis, that was his code name.

Schwarzer: Can we refer to this person as Jenis?

Sturgis: Yes. The full name is Jose Joachim Sanjennes Pardomo, this is the full name. The other two persons was Louis Sanjennes, the brother. The brother was Sergio (Roger) Sanjennes.

Schwarzer: Are those their correct names?

Sturgis: These are their correct names, yes sir. This is the Sajennes family.

Schwarzer: What were the pseudonyms under which these people operated?

Sturgis: Well, Sergio, or Roger, he had a code name in Havana which I knew him under - Garcia. We worked together in 1959 and continued into 1959.

Schwarzer: What was the code name for Louis?

Sturgis: With Louis, I did not know his code name.

Schwarzer: Did Sam have a code name?

Sturgis: That was his code name, Sam Jennis. This is Jose Joachim. And his code name was Sam Jennis.

Schwarzer: Okay. Now do you know if any of these people were employed by the CIA, any of the three names that you have mentioned?

Sturgis: No sir. My understanding, after years went by, with Sergio that Joachim -- or Sam -- let's call him Sam Jennis was an employee, and had a fairly good position with the CIA. As a matter of fact, there was an outing between Sam and Sergio because of his position with the CIA, that was a little bad blood.

Schwarzer: Did Sam ever tell you he was working for the CIA?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwarzer: Sam did.

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwarzer: What did he say his position was?

Sturgis: Well, he never told me what his position was. He told me he was working with the CIA.

Schwarzer: When did he tell you that?

Sturgis: I would say in 1959.

Schwarzer: Was that in Cuba or here in the U.S?

Sturgis: No, that was here in the U.S.

Schwarzer: What services did you perform for these people, the three people that you have mentioned here.

Sturgis: It was everything of an intelligence nature. I took guns and equipment to Cuba, I took men to Cuba. I made various air and road operations into Cuba, and boats that were under my name. And I have the records of the boats that were in my name, and the CIA should have those records. The airplane, a B-25 that I had, B-25 Mitchell, the serial name of that, that was used and paid for by CIA money, to be used during the Bay of Pigs invasion. One or more of my boats were infiltration, I let the Cubans have them for infiltration inside Cuba. Naturally I had contact with BARKER. BARKER didn't realize what I was doing, but I knew he was working as an Administrative Assistant to EDUARDO, which I did not know as E. HOWARD HUNT.

Schwarzer: Were you ever paid for any services by the CIA?

Sturgis: Directly, no sir. In cash, yes.

Schwarzer: Who paid you? This is now services rendered in the U.S. From who did you receive money in payment for your services?

Sturgis: When I said that I received money for my services, it was in the form of expense money, sir. If I did an operation expenses were needed either for the boat or for the airplane, and things like that. I do know that the money did come inadvertently through someone else. For instance, the airplane, B-25 aircraft, needed to be fixed. Money was given to fix the airplane. Diaz Lanz, Pedro Diaz Lanz, who was my personal friend, who was the ex-Chief of the Air Force in Cuba under Fidel Castro, he was one of the people that I did make contact with in the Embassy between the Chief of the Air Force and the American Embassy. He was in exile. E. HOWARD HUNT gave X amount of thousands of dollars to, at least okayed this money for the B-25 bomber to be repaired and then readied in condition for any operations inside of Cuba.

Schwarzer: As I understand it, after you came to the U.S. in 1959 you received money from time to time for expenses, either the providing of boats, or making repairs on boats or airplanes, is that correct?

Sturgis: Yes, for penetration in and out of Cuba.

Schwarzer: But you did not receive any money in compensation for services rendered by you?

Sturgis: No sir.

Schwarzer: Who were the people who paid you the money?

Sturgis: Let me say this, sir. You must understand at that time my position. I had my own funds at the time. I felt that I was a very patriotic man, and I felt that if I was going to serve my country, other than being in the military, that I would work, if and when possible, without a salary. I refused to become an employee of Central Intelligence Agency at one time. And I do have the applications here that I could show you.

Schwarzer: Could you just identify the names of the person who paid you the money, the money you received to make the repairs and provide the boats?

Sturgis: Let's say this here. I did not directly receive the money for repairs. I had the B-25 in my name. I had the B-25 for Pedro Diaz Lanz and a special air group that was formed by CIA which Pedro Diaz Lanz was in charge of -- the contact was there, which I made for Pedro Diaz Lanz, with BERNARD BARKER, who was the Assistant to E. HOWARD HUNT.

Schwarzer: Then it is correct to say that you have never received any money yourself from the CIA?

Sturgis: Personally, no, from the people directly, no.

Schwarzer: Did anybody receive money which you believed to be money from the CIA for your account, or in your behalf, or as your representative.

Sturgis: I would think so, sir.

Schwarzer: Pardon? Do you know for a fact whether they did or not?

Sturgis: Again, we are standing on a legal thing, like, if I was there with you and saw the money being given, which would be given to me, I would say, yes. But under the conditions, no, I have never seen this money being given.

Schwarzer: It is your belief that some of this money passed from hand to hand in that connection?

Sturgis: Oh, yes.

Schwarzer: What I want to know is, who is the person from whom the money came? Whom you associate with the CIA?

Sturgis: All right. There comes to my mind one other person. Let's say Pedro Diaz Lanz.

Schwarzer: Was he an employee of the CIA?

Sturgis: No, but he was connected with the CIA. I arranged for the connection.

Schwarzer: And he was the source of money?

Sturgis: He was one source of money.

Schwarzer: Are there any other sources of money which you believe to be CIA money?

Sturgis: Yes sir. Dr. Luis Conte Aguero...

Schwarzer: When did you receive the money.

Sturgis: Well, I can't tell you the year or the month. It was for a series of air operations that I was supposed to put together. And I agreed to do those operations myself, personally. One operation was over the City of Comaya, I dropped several thousand leaflets over that city. That is not only the capital of the Province of Comaya, but the Province.

Schwarzer: So you undertook certain air operations and you received some money in connection with it from this person whose name you have just mentioned?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Schwarzer: What was that money for?

Sturgis: It was to pay the expenses of the aircraft and the expense of the crew members.

Schwarzer: About how much money did you receive?

Sturgis: It would be approximately $5,000 per trip.

Schwarzer: And how many trips did you make?

Sturgis: I made approximately, for Luis Conte Aguero, I believe it was either four or five trips, I don't remember.

Schwarzer: Did he ever tell you that this money was coming from the CIA?

Sturgis: Not directly, sir. He told me that he was coming from the company. Company was a word that the CIA used. And I was very close with him. And again I state that when you are involved closely with the people, you know the people you are involved with. And he did tell me that the money he received was from the company.

Schwarzer: Was Luis Conte Aguero employed by the CIA?

Sturgis: I don't know sir, because a person who is employed -- agent won't tell you he is an agent unless you are directly associated with the intelligence community, then, when you are closely connected with them, then you know.

Schwarzer: Is there any person with whom you were closely enough connected to know that he was working for the CIA?

Sturgis: Yes sir. There is Roland Martinez, my friend from Cuba, to the Watergate.

Schwarzer: Did you get any money from Martinez at any time as payment on account of CIA services?

Sturgis: No sir.

Schwarzer: Was there any other person that you knew to be working for the CIA?

Sturgis: BERNARD L. BARKER.

Schwarzer: Did you receive any money from BARKER with respect to services for the CIA?

Sturgis: No sir.

Schwarzer: Did you ever provide information to the CIA directly or indirectly?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwarzer: And through what channel did you provide information?

Sturgis: Well, it was in a low channel. I was in constant touch with Sam, and BARKER asked me to assist him in some of the work -- some of the investigations that he was doing. And I agreed only after I got in touch with Sam, and Sam says, go ahead, no problem. Everybody was working for the same people.

Schwarzer: How often did you see Sam?

Sturgis: I would think once or twice a week on the average.

Schwarzer: And was this in Miami?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwarzer: And how long did that continue?

Sturgis: That continued for a period of years.

Schwarzer: Until approximately when?

Sturgis: I would say until 1970, I think.

Schwarzer: After you stopped -- why did you stop seeing Sam?

Sturgis: Well, it seems that policy has been changed, policy from Washington has been changed as far as many, or certain, CIA activities. That is what I was told. And many of the people who were working in the area who were connected with the CIA were just being let go. Some were put on retainer, like Martinez. So it all depends on the usefulness that the individual was doing.

Schwarzer: The question is, why did you stop seeing Sam? Was he taken off the payroll? Did he quit working for the CIA?

Sturgis: I don't know.

Schwarzer: What happened at your last meeting with Sam? Did you say, well, this is our last meeting, I am not going to see you anymore?

Sturgis: Well, no sir, Sam told me, he said, the policy has changed quite a bit. Understand one thing. When you are doing work with these people you have been closely associated with, you are constantly in touch with them.

Schwartzter: What happened between you and Sam at the time you stopped seeing him regularly once or twice a week?

Sturgis: Well, I was working at that time. And how it came about, this constantly meeting him once or twice a week over a period of years -- a lot of time I didn't see him for several weeks. And BARKER was the same thing. We were friends before the Bay of Pigs invasion, and I saw BARKER once, twice a week, sometimes I didn't see him for weeks later. Martinez was a little different. I knew Martinez was doing the penetrations into Cuba. And he was working quite regularly at the time. So naturally our contact was strictly, when I saw him accidentally, hello, good bye, and that was the end of it.

Schwartzter: Let's go back to Sam now. When you met Sam, whenever it was, during this period of 1970, did you meet him in business, or was it a social kind of thing?

Sturgis: Sometimes it was business, and sometimes it was social.

Schwartzter: When it was business what did you relate to? What kind of exchange did you and Sam have?

Sturgis: It was an exchange of intelligence information. For instance, Miami or South Florida is the hub of Latin American intrigue, double agents, agents from various countries. And Americans and Cubans, revolutionaries in this area, wanted to know about their activities, who were the bad guys, who were the good guys.

Schwartzter: And that sort of information you passed to Sam.

Sturgis: Yes. It would fall into the realm of domestic intelligence because many of these people were Americans.

Schwartzter: Did Sam ever pay you for providing him with intelligence?

Sturgis: Intelligence information, no sir.

Schwartzter: Did he ask you to get him specific kinds of intelligence?

Sturgis: Yes sir, groups who were planning to do crazy operations in Cuba, or people threatening to do bombings here in the U.S., threatening blackmail, extortion, things of that sort. And this type of information.

Schwartzter: Did Sam ever tell you that he was working for the CIA?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwartzter: Did he tell you whether he was an agent or employee? Did he describe to you what his position was with the CIA?

Sturgis: No sir. BARKER the same way, BARKER told me that he was working for the company.

Schwartzter: That he was working for the company?

Sturgis: He himself. It is the same thing, he did not say, hey, FRANK, I work for Central Intelligence Agency, because you don't do those things, but FRANK, I do work for the company, and FRANK, my station chief says come on, I am going to invite you out to dinner, it is on him. FRANK, here is a bottle of whiskey, my boss says this is for Christmas.

Schwartzter: How long did that go on, BARKER telling you he was working for the CIA?

Sturgis: Well, you don't consciously ever tell them.

Schwartzter: I know. But understand that BARKER was still working for the CIA in 1970, 1972?

Sturgis: No sir, I did not ask him. Once I knew -- now -- well, once he told me what was going on in the community, and so forth, I don't have to go ahead and ask him, hey, are you still working for the company?

Schwartzter: That is not my question. Is it your belief that BARKER continued working for the CIA up until 1970?

Sturgis: Yes it was my belief.

Schwartzter: That was what I wanted to know.

Sturgis: But I know he wasn't at a later date, I know he wasn't, because through the Watergate Committee records we found out that BARKER was fired.

Schwartzter: That BARKER was fired?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwartzter: Do you know when he was fired?

Sturgis: No, I don't.

Schwartzter: But later you found out that BARKER had been fired during a time when you still thought he was working for the CIA, isn't that right?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwartzter: And you thought he was working for the CIA right along, but you later found out that he wasn't?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwartzter: Okay. One other question. How did you get involved in Watergate? Who recruited you?

Sturgis: Well, BARKER again, having contact with him, socially and business-wise, and what have you, one day, I don't know when, he told me, it might have been in 1970, or it may have been weeks or months prior to my involvement with the Special Intelligence Unit, or my recruitment, he sat down and spoke with me and he says, FRANK, do you remember EDUARDO? Well, I spoke with EDUARDO, and we are putting something together. Your background and so forth. And we would like you to get involved with us again. The same people as before, the same Americans upstairs who were involved in the Bay of Pigs. They are the same type of people, strong anti-communists and so forth. And I told BARKER, hey MACHO -- is a nickname -- you have known me for many years, where it comes to Cuba or where it comes to the Government, I have been involved, why not? And my name was given for clearance. And he says, I am going to put your name in for clearance. And naturally I was cleared.

Schwartzter: Have you ever been involved in any other operation in the U.S. involving the Watergate entry.

Sturgis: No sir.

Schwartzter: Have you ever been asked prior to that and turned down or have it not materialize?

Sturgis: I was asked to participate, or asked to do, an assassination for them.

Schwartzter: In the United States?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Schwartzter: I will leave that to Mr. Olsen.

Sturgis: By the CIA.

Schwartzter: Were you asked to participate in the break-in of Dr. Fielding's office in September?

Sturgis: No, I did not know anything about that operation. I did not know anything about that operation until the lawyer contacted the man -- the Fielding operation, I didn't know about until while we were in prison, the lawyer contacted the two persons involved, which was BARKER and Martinez. And then I found out while I was in prison, naturally, about the Fielding operation.

Schwartzter: Did anybody tell you that the Watergate operation, before you did it, that that was a CIA operation?

Sturgis: No sir.

Schwartzter: But BARKER led you to believe that? You say the same people were involved as in the Cuban operation?

Sturgis: That was EDUARDO, yes. He mentioned EDUARDO. And again I don't know if it was in 1972 or the latter part of 1971 that I met E. HOWARD HUNT, and I was introduced. And he said, FRANK, this is HOWARD HUNT.

Olsen: Who introduced you?

Sturgis: BARKER did. And I said, oh, EDUARDO.

Olsen: Do we understand then FRANK, that you had heard of EDUARDO during the Bay of Pigs planning and so forth but you had never met him?

Sturgis: Right sir. To the best of my knowledge I had never met HOWARD HUNT up until the day in Miami when BARKER introduced me to HOWARD in his office.

Olsen: And this was in late 1971?

Sturgis: Either 1971 or 1972.

Schwarzer: Thanks very much.

Olsen: I would like to go back here, FRANK, and cover in a little bit further detail some of the same things Mr. Schwarzer was asking. He had a limited amount of time here and was trying to rush on, I think, and cover the subject rather hastily with you. And I would like to go back.

Sturgis: Mr. Olsen, may I ask you one thing, before I forget it, I meant to ask you at the beginning, is there a possible chance when you get the transcript made up, that I have a copy of it?

Olsen: No. You won't be able to have a copy, but you can come here and read the transcript. And if you want to make any corrections you will be given an opportunity to indicate what kind of corrections. The reason I say that you can't have a copy is because there are substantial portions of this transcript which are going to be classified.

Sturgis: I would think it would have to be.

Olsen: We can't allow classified material to be floating around. But a classification officer will come along after we get our work finished and will go through all those transcripts and decide what has to be classified and what will be released. And I suppose unclassified portions, you would be able to have a copy of that if you want it.

Sturgis: Right, sir.

Roethe: I may be popping in here from time to time. I have sort of got one ear open here. So you might expect a question every now and then from me. Did you go through preliminary rights?

Olsen: Yes. I have got a Miranda warning. However, Mr. Navarro, I don't know that we have got your form signed. Did you sign yours?

Navarro: I will sign it.

(Off the record discussion)

Sturgis: Mr. Olsen, Clark F. Wollan, I assumed at that time, was the American Counsel General of Santiago, Cuba. I am not really sure of his position, whether he might have been below that official status or what. But I assumed at the time that is what his position was.

Olsen: You said that Clark Wollan's position was that of Consul General?

Sturgis: I assume his position was American Consul in Santiago, Cuba. And he may have been a lesser official but I would assume that that is what his base was in the American Embassy. Because we are going back many, many years.

Roethe: We understand that you are going back a long way, and we don't want you to be guessing at answers.

Sturgis: You see, I used to have a lot of notes, but unfortunately I destroyed them. And even up to today, since I have been out of prison, I have kept daily notes...I have a document also which I will show you later, I will have to dig it out, which shows that I was in touch with the American Embassy on matters pertaining to what we have been discussing...

Olsen: Let me go back. First of all you were born in the United States, were you not?

Sturgis: Yes, I was born in Norfolk, Virginia, FRANK ANGELO FIORINI. My father's name is Angelo Anthony Fiorini. I was considered FRANK ANGELO FIORINI the fourth, because my grandfather's name was FRANK FIORINI, Senior, and his son, which is my uncle, his name was Frank Fiorini Junior, who has a son called Frank Fiorini the third, which makes me FRANK FIORINI the fourth.

Olsen: But actually your father's name was not Frank Fiorini?

Sturgis: It was Angelo. That is why I am the fourth.

Olsen: And your mother was also of Italian extraction?

Sturgis: My mother's name was Mary Vona. She was born in Portland, Maine.

Olsen: And your mother was also of Italian extraction?

Sturgis: Yes, not Cuban extraction like some of the Watergate investigators have said, I have told you.

Olsen: And how long did you live in the U.S. before you first went to Cuba?

Sturgis: When I just turned 17 years old I joined the U.S. Marine Corps. and spent seven weeks training in Parris Island, South Carolina. And I went to the South Pacific, and joined Edson's Raiders in Samoa. And from there I climbed all the way up the ladder. My last outfit was the Sixth Marine Division, with General Buckner's 10th Army, in the invasion of Omaha. So I was considered, with my Marine training for those years, to be expert in all types of weapons.

Olsen: When did you say you entered the Marine Corps?

Sturgis: I think it was 1942. And I was discharged in 1945 at Klamath Falls, Oregon.

Olsen: What rank did you attain in the Marine Corps?

Sturgis: I came out a Corporal. When I got out of the Marine Corps I went to Norfolk, Virginia. And I got on the police department. I was a plain clothes police officer. At the same time I joined the U.S. Navy Reserve, the PPB Squadron. And then after that I joined the U.S. Army. I went to Europe in the early 1950's. I was with the Army Security Agency in Heidelberg, Germany, which was EUCOM Headquarters. I was stationed at one time with General Clay's forces in Berlin during the Russian blockade. While I was there I met a young lady with the Israeli Intelligence that I found out later on was a Hungarian actress. And I left the Army, came back home, this was in the 1950's, I think 1952, 1953.

Olsen: You left the Army during the Korean War or after?

Sturgis: I am not sure sir, I am really not sure. As a matter of fact, I was going to Officer's Candidate School, and I declined on that.

Olsen: Now this brings us to the early 1950's when you served your second stint in the military services?

Sturgis: I have three discharges now, one for the U.S. Marine Corps, one for the U.S. Naval Reserve, and one from the U.S. Army.

Olsen: The third one from the U.S. Army was 1952 or 1953?

Sturgis: It was in the 1950's.

Olsen: What did you do after you got out of the Army?

Sturgis: I believe I went back to Virginia. I had made -- I went back to Virginia. I had made several trips to Miami. I was in touch --

Olsen: Just a second. What did you make the trips to Miami for?

Sturgis: I had family on my mother's side living in Miami. One of my uncles lived there who married a Cuban woman. My uncle's name was Angelo Vona. And this is how I got involved in the Cuban situation. She lived here in exile during the time of Batista. She was one of President Carlos Prio's people...

Olsen: And Angelo married a Cuban woman and they had been living in Cuba, had they?

Sturgis: No sir. In Miami. And that is why I came down here, because my grandparents on my mother's side were living here.

Olsen: But who as the exile from Cuba?

Sturgis: My Cuban aunt was living in exile.

Olsen: Had she been married to Angelo Vona in Cuba, or had she come to the U.S. as an exile?

Sturgis: While she was in exile, yes.

Olsen: How then, after returning to the U.S., after completing your tour of duty with the Army, you returned to this country, and then you went down to Miami several times on some visits to your family members?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And at that time you became connected with Cuban people in the Miami area?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And how long did you continue to live in the U.S., and where did you live?

Sturgis: I lived in Miami, in the northeast section, I believe off 26th Street. And Miami Avenue, the exact address I don't remember. But when I came out of the Army, even though I visited my family here, I did go back and live in Norfolk, Virginia, where I was in business.

Olsen: What business were you in?

Sturgis: I was in the bar business, and also the night club business. The bar I owned with a partner by the name of Arthur Bass, we were partners in the bar, which was on East Main Street.

Olsen: What was the name of the bar?

Sturgis: Would you believe it, I can't think of it.

Olsen: If you think of it, tell us. How long did you continue with Arthur Bass to be the owner of that business?

Sturgis: I was his partner for several years in the bar business that he owned, plus managing other bars for other owners, one namely called the Virginia Tavern, which was the biggest bar in the State of Florida.

Olsen: In the State of Florida?

Sturgis: I mean in the State of Virginia. I went to work with Arthur Bass, he gave me a partnership which was the bar that we bought on East Main Street. And then, at a later date, we went into the nightclub business, me as the working partner again. And the nightclub was called the Top Hat Club, which was located at Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Olsen: And how long did you continue in this general line of business of bar and night club?

Sturgis: Several years.

Olsen: Until about when?

Sturgis: Up until I decided to go to Cuba. I believe I went to Cuba in either -- I think it was either 1956 or 1957 that I went to Cuba.

Olsen: Why did you decided to give up the night club and bar business?

Sturgis: Well, I was under tremendous pressure. The night club business I had done very well with, but I just didn't like the atmosphere of being in a night club. And I wanted a change. And at the same time, coming back and forth from Virginia to Miami, getting involved with the Cuban situation, -- as a matter of fact, it was either 1955 or 1956 that Fidel Castro did come from Mexico into the Miami area. He made a speech at the Flagler.

Olsen: Were you there?

Sturgis: Yes sir, I was there. I met him and spoke with him -- because of the family connections, and so forth. And I decided to try to help the revolution, not particularly Fidel Castro in general, but the revolution, that he could be an instrument to me for my involvement, because I was in touch with the ex-President of Cuba, Carlos Prio.

Olsen: Was it because of your contact with the ex-President of Cuba and the fact that he had become a personal acquaintance of yours that you became interested in overthrowing the Batista Government?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: This was not, then, something that had anything to do with your being recruited by the American Government or any part of the American Government?

Sturgis: At that time, no, that year, no.

Olsen: Now was it also this personal motivation --

Sturgis: And the family ties.

Olsen: -- and the family ties -- that led you to go to Cuba in 1956 and 1957?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Again, this had nothing to do with any inspiration or recruitment by any part of the American Government?

Sturgis: Right, sir.

Olsen: When you went to Cuba what did you do?

Sturgis: Well naturally I had contacts here, which was President Prio. I did go to Havana. From Havana I went to Santiago, through the church system. And with the church I put a disguise on and I went to the mountains as a priest to seek the rebel forces.

Olsen: And you were disguised as a Catholic priest?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: You are of course a Catholic by upbringing, are you not?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And did you speak Spanish at the time?

Sturgis: Well, my Italian was sufficient in order to understand, because I know Italian is similar to Spanish.

Olsen: So you did speak Spanish at home?

Sturgis: No sir, I spoke with my family Italian.

Olsen: Pardon me. You spoke Italian at home?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: Was this the daily language that was used in the Fiorini family?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Did you speak mostly English?

Sturgis: Mostly English, yes sir.

Olsen: But did you learn to speak Italian as a child?

Sturgis: Yes sir. You understand I was raised by my grandparents and my mother. My mother and father divorced at an early age, I believe I was six when my mother divorced my father. She took me to Philadelphia, where we lived with her family, the Vona family.

Olsen: And did the Vonas speak Italian at home?

Sturgis: Yes. Naturally my grandmother did not speak or understand English. And so we had to converse back and forth in Italian.

Olsen: So when you went to Cuba in 1956 or 1957, did you masquerade as an Italian priest, or as an American?

Sturgis: When I was going to the mountains I naturally had to disguise as a priest, I masqueraded as an American priest sympathetic to the cause. I tried to avoid the Army patrols, but I felt that if I was going to be captured by the Army, that I would have an excuse that I was visiting the different villages in the mountains through the church.

Olsen: Were you provided with identification of any kind?

Sturgis: No sir, I used my own identification at that time, which was FIORINI.

Olsen: I believe you told me at an earlier time when we talked by telephone that sometime in the 1950's your name was formally changed.

Sturgis: Yes, to FRANK ANTHONY Sturgis, through the courts in Norfolk, Virginia. And I do have a copy of it at home, the court order.

Olsen: You didn't bring that with you?

Sturgis: I am not sure. When I look through the papers I will see.

Olsen: Do you remember what year it was, now, FRANK, that your name was changed to Sturgis?

Sturgis: I believe it was in the early 1950's.

Olsen: Shortly after you got back from the Army?

Sturgis: I believe so. Either before I went in the Army or when I came back.

Olsen: Do you know whether you used the name Sturgis at any time while you were in the Army in the early 1950's?

Sturgis: Well, my Marine Corps discharge is FIORINI, and I believe the Navy discharge is FIORINI. I am not sure of the Army discharge.

Olsen: Did you bring your Army discharge with you?

Sturgis: No, I didn't have time to look for it. I just grabbed everything and threw it in. I can get it for you when I go home, I will look it up and send you photostatic copies of all three.

Olsen: And I understand that your mother remarried a man by the name of Sturgis?

Sturgis: Sturgis, Ralph.

Olsen: And do you remember when she remarried?

Sturgis: I imagine in the very early 1950's, 1949, before my name was changed.

Olsen: Did you change your name shortly after your mother remarried?

Sturgis: I am not sure.

Olsen: By this time you were already an adult?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: Was there any particular reason why you wanted to change your name when you were already and adult, grown up?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: What was that?

Sturgis: Well, the reason for that was that I felt there were too many Fiorinis, Frank Fiorini especially. I don't know. My mother wanted me to change the name, really, she influenced me to change the name from FIORINI to Sturgis, because she had a bad situation with my father and hated the Fiorini family. So naturally she convinced me, I want you to change your name to Sturgis from FIORINI.

Olsen: I take it from what you say on that score, then, FRANK, that you were not then aware at the time your name was changed legally in Norfolk, Virginia, of the fact that E. HOWARD HUNT had written a novel in the late 1940's in which a character appeared by the name of HANK Sturgis? Is that true?

Sturgis: Would you believe that the Special Committee, they got me on that. And it is a coincidence, because I got that book at home. And my wife read that book, and I read the book. And it is just like it would be my type of character.

Olsen: When did you read the book?

Sturgis: When I was arrested in Watergate two of the officers who arrested me mentioned the book called Bimini Run and they asked me if it was me. And I said, well, I have never read it, I don't know. And I was surprised. And then went out to find the book, and buy the book, and read it.

Olsen: So you hadn't read it until 1972?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: Let's get back to your career now. You went to Cuba in 1956 or 1957?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And you went to the mountains with the cooperation of the church?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Under the guise of a priest?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: Now what did you do in the mountains? Did you make contact with Fidel Castro and his people?

Sturgis: I ran across a rather weak one of the patrols, at the same time avoiding the Batista Army patrols. And with the patrol, I told them who I was, and that I wanted to see Fidel, and that I knew and had met Fidel in Miami, Florida. So they took me along. And I believe that a week later I was taken to a small village, I believe it was called Santo Domingo. And I waited for Fidel to come there, which he did, it took about a week, and Fidel finally got there. And I participated in going in and out of the mountains for Fidel as a courier for messages, for money, and so forth. And at one time when I started to get a little disenchanted with him, not knowing who these people were, I went into the cities, coming back to the mountains on a patrol. And there were two Latins waiting at a small village in the house, sleeping in the house owned by a man called Cresentio Perez. He was one of the main factors in the supply of guns and equipment and contact between the rebel forces in the mountains and the underground inside of the cities inside of Cuba, outside of the Sierra Maestre mountains.

Olsen: He was a primary contact between those two elements?

Sturgis: One of the main.

Olsen: How long did you continue to perform this function of being a courier between Fidel Castro and the cities and towns?

Sturgis: Well, let's see. I believe it went on for a good year, or a year and a half. At the same time, at one time in Santiago, Cuba, where I believe it was Mr. Park F. Wollan who made contact with me at the Casa Grande Hotel. And in meeting me Wollan was led to understand that I was in touch with the rebel forces, that I was a rebel officer, I was a captain in the rebel army and that as an American that he felt that he would like to have information, intelligence information, pertaining to the rebel movements. The names of officers, strength, weapons, and so forth. And he worked on my patriotism as an American, and so forth, and offered me money, offered to put me on salary, and so forth. But I told him, no, that I would gladly help him, being American, even though I sympathized with the Cubans in their fight against dictatorship of Batista at that time. This is what I told him. And he said, well, if at any time you need any money in any form whatever, whether it is personal expenses, come to me and I have got it. I told him thank you very much. If that happens I will ask you. But I do have money at my disposal.

Olsen: What was the source of the money you had at your disposal at that time?

Sturgis: It was coming from Celia Sanchez who was Fidel Castro's private secretary.

Olsen: Was she up in the mountains with Castro?

Sturgis: Yes sir. She was up there plus the whole entourage of rebel officers -- Volma Espin, who was not married to Raoul Castro at that time.

Olsen: Do you remember about when it was that you were contacted by Clark Wollan?

Sturgis: No, and then again, like I say, it might have been in the early part of 1959, or the latter part of 1958.

Olsen: And is that spelling Wollan?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: And was it your understanding that he was a Consul at the U.S. Embassy in Santiago, Chile?

Sturgis: No sir, he was the American Consul of the U.S. Consulate in Santiago de Cuba.

Olsen: Because the Embassy was in Havana?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: Now, when did you next see Clark Wollan, or how frequently thereafter did you see Mr. Wollan?

Sturgis: Yes --- you must understand that the situation there, with the rebels being in the mountains, and me having assignments, that I had very little time to spend with Mr. Wollan, but I had enough time to give him what information he was looking for, which was the movement of troops, the strength of the troops, the commanders of the different units, the weapons, and so forth.

Olsen: Did you give him a kind of an orientation about what you knew on the occasions when you first met him, then?

Sturgis: Yes. And the fact that I had access in and out of the mountains, and that I was in touch with the rebel forces, and also the underground forces.

Olsen: And did you see Mr. Wollan again there after that first time?

Sturgis: I saw him several times, sir. And I believe it might have been one time at the Casa Grande Hotel, either one or more times at the country club.

Olsen: Also in Santiago, Cuba?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Is there more than one country club there?

Sturgis: I would think so, yes sir.

Olsen: Which country club was it that you saw him at?

Sturgis: There is one called The Country Club, and I am not sure of the others, because like I said, I didn't stick really too much in Santiago, because everyone who knew me at the Casa Grande Hotel thought I was a tourist.

Olsen: Let me ask you this, FRANK. From the time you first met Clark Wollan and until the overthrow of the Batista Government, which occurred, I believe, in 1959, --

Sturgis: January 1959.

Olsen: How many times during that period, up until the overthrow of the Batista Government, did you meet Wollan?

Sturgis: I don't know, but it wasn't too many times sir.

Olsen: Would you say less than half a dozen?

Sturgis: I would say either half a dozen or less times.

Olsen: Did you also see him at Santiago de Cuba?

Sturgis: In the city, yes sir.

Olsen: And it might have been at the country club --

Sturgis: Or at the Casa Grande Hotel, yes.

Olsen: Did you see him any place else?

Sturgis: I am not sure, sir. Because my activity I was doing so much.

Olsen: I am just trying to confine myself to this. I don't want you to feel as if you have to explain and justify it.

Sturgis: I want to explain.

Olsen: But let me cover the things as well as I can before we get to the nitty gritty here. Was there anybody else present at those meetings other than Mr. Wollan?

Sturgis: No sir, just myself.

Olsen: And on each occasion when you met him, up until the time of the revolution's success, and the overthrow of the Batista government, did you give him what information you then had with respect to the revolutionary forces?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Their strength, their number, the weapons?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Their movements, their leaders.

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: How long would these meetings of yours last with Mr. Wollan?

Sturgis: Not too long, probably -- actually, I would get in there and get out.

Olsen: Would you say a half hour?

Sturgis: A half hour, maybe a little longer, something like that.

Olsen: Did you ever give him anything in writing?

Sturgis: No, all verbal.

Olsen: Were you also in the garb of a priest?

Sturgis: No, I was in civilian clothes, only when I was up in the mountains, because of the Army patrol. When I was in the city of Santiago it was strictly civilian clothes, like an American tourist.

Olsen: During this period of time again, I am trying to focus on that time between the time you first contacted Wollan and the time the Batista Government was overthrown, did you ever receive money from Mr. Wollan?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you ever receive anything in the way of a present or gratuity of any kind from him?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: And you have never had any kind of a written agreement with him?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: In other words, he had --

Sturgis: Just verbal.

Olsen: He had just solicited your cooperation in terms of providing information relating to the revolution?

Sturgis: Yes sir, and he was willing to pay me.

Olsen: Did you feel that in providing that information to Mr. Wollan that you were being disloyal to the Castro movement?

Sturgis: No. I will tell you why. These two Latin men that I told you had -- I have pictures of them -- when I went to Cresentio Perez' ranch or home in the mountains, these two gentlemen were present. And I found out at a later date, once the patrol came to pick up these two men and myself to go back in the mountains, I found out that these were two Venezuelan Communists that came to see Fidel. I have pictures of that, where they gave him these documents, which I was led to believe from the information that I got were from the Communist Party in Venezuela who were going to support him if he wanted that support.

Olsen: Do you remember who these two people were again?

Sturgis: No sir. I had the names at one time, and like I say, I lost all my notes. But I do have pictures of these two men, with Fidel greeting them, with me in the pictures.

Olsen: And when did you understand for the first time that these were representatives of Venezuelan Communists?

Sturgis: Well, the two men and myself did go to see Fidel, I was close enough where I could hear the discussion, I did not stand there all the time, but friends of mine were there with Fidel. Naturally I questioned them and so forth. And in the questioning of my friend, this is how I knew that they were Venezuelan Communists.

Olsen: And did you feel that Fidel Castro had responded affirmatively to them?

Sturgis: No sir. I honestly don't know because I did not hear all the conversation, and I did not want to ask too many questions about that. What I was trying to do was show my loyalty to him, to the revolution. And so I just kept a pretty closed mouth, just asking only limited questions.

Olsen: Were you still closely associated with the Castro movement at the time of the January 1959 revolution?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Had you contact with any other representatives, directly or indirectly, of the U.S. before the January revolution?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I would like to go back to the first week in January when the revolution ended. The revolution did end on January 1, 1959. When I came out of the mountains I was at a campsite that I had, that I was in command of, called Camp Tiro. That is Camp Bullet in English. It was on top of a hill. And I had approximately, under my command, a thousand vagios, or peasants that I was trying to organize for Fidel on his triumphant tour to Havana. At the same time, below this small mountain site, is where Raoul Castro had his execution squads executing the Batista followers. At one time I was at the Casa Grande Hotel I met a photographer there by the name of Andrew St. George. He was a free lance writer and photographer. The first week of January 1959...Andrew St. George, who was a reporter-photographer -- I don't know at the time who he worked for -- but I had a training camp right outside of Santiago and when he asked me if there was the possibility -- because his information was that Raul Castro was executing some prisoners -- and he asked me whether or not I could get permission for him to witness and photograph the execution. I said, "Well, I don't know; but I'll go ahead and try and see if I can get you that permission." So, what happened is that, I don't remember which commander friend of mine I went to see, but he says, "Yes, certainly. Go up and see. There's no more executions, they're all finished; but I'll send an officer with you and I'll show you where the executions were at." So I took St. George with this officer and myself to the site where the executions, you know, were, or did happen, and Andrew says, "Look, you're an American, I like you to go ahead and take some pictures of you." So I says, fine, I see no problem there. And this is how Andrew St. George took me, took a picture of me standing over the graves of these X amount of people who were executed.

Olsen: Is Wollan's name Clark or Park?

Sturgis: Park F. Wollan.

Olsen: Now, in this first week of January 1959 you met the second American. Wollan and you met much earlier, and you had had a number of contacts with him. And now for the first time you met Andrew St. George?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: Where did you meet him?

Sturgis: At the Casa Grande Hotel.

Olsen: And was he a newspaper reporter at that time?

Sturgis: He told me he was a free lance reporter and photographer. Who he was working for I don't know. But he was there on a Saturday.

Olsen: And what took place at that meeting?

Sturgis: Well, he made contact with me because I was there with my officers, and he came over to me and he said, I understand that you are with the rebel forces, and you are an American. My name is Andrew St. George. And he struck up a nice conversation with me. He said he would have to have some photographs taken of rebel soldiers, and so forth. And he said, I understand there are a series of executions that have been going on. Could you arrange -- this is after he got friendly with me --- could you arrange with the commander who is in charge of the executions if I could witness and photograph the executions. I told him I did not know, but I would try to make arrangements. At that time I did not know who was in charge, what commander was in charge. But I did find out that whoever it was told me no, that the executions were finished. Then when I saw Andrew the following day I came into town, I told Andrew -- I came into town to buy supplies and food for my people, and I saw Andrew and told him what the commander said, all the executions were finished. And he says, well, I can come up and see your camp. Could you show me the site of where the executions were. And I said, well, I will have to find out, because I don't know where they were. But I could hear them, because from my hilltop camp I could hear the shooting during the day. I did take him to my camp and he photographed the camp -- and I have photographs that you can take a look at -- and I showed him where the executions did happen. And he asked if I would pose on the graves of the people, he would like to take a picture. And I said fine, and I did. And then shortly after I saw a picture that was in the paper, in the paper it said, with me on the graves, Captain FRANK FIORINI, and so forth, whatever, standing over the grave site of 79 Batista people who were executed by the Rebel Forces. I was asked by the Senate Watergate Committee if I had participated in these executions. And I told them no, I did not participate in the executions. As a matter of fact, I did not like the executions. I was against the executions. And I was, at that particular time, against the rebel forces.

Olsen: Because you felt they had gone to great excess?

Sturgis: Because I felt that they had had contact with the Communist Party, plus I felt the revolution was over with, and naturally why do all the executions?

Olsen: When was it that you made up your mind that you were against what was happening?

Sturgis: Well, I was not totally against the revolution, but I got a bitter taste in my mind about the revolution at that time.

Olsen: You started to have some serious second thoughts?

Sturgis: Yes I did.

Olsen: Is it true that you used the name FIORINI all through your Cuban experience?

Sturgis: Yes, and for many years until Watergate pertaining to my Cuban activities. And the Cubans knew me as FRANK FIORINI not as Sturgis. I only used Sturgis because of my marriage and my legal papers and so on. People did not know what it was. I was receiving publications from the revolution. There was a cover thing that I had, a Soldier-of-Fortune, and so forth, FIORINI. So if a person knew me where I lived, they would not think of me as FRANK FIORINI, or FRANK TERILLO or some 30 names that I have used as code names in the past.

Olsen: You have used a great many aliases?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Let's go back to the time of the revolution. What position or positions did you occupy in the Castro Government after the revolution took place?

Sturgis: Well, when I was on my way the first ten days after the revolution was over with I told (Deleted) that I was on my way to Havana. And he suggested that I contact Colonel Nichols. I will give the full name, Colonel Nichols, and Major Van Horne.

Olsen: And both of these were at the American Embassy?

Sturgis: Yes sir. And I believe (Deleted) was at the (Deleted) at that time in 1959. And he was a CIA agent. (Deleted) was also there, the CIA. And I believe that he was Station Chief at the Agency.

Roethe: How did you learn these two gentlemen were CIA?

Sturgis: Contacting Colonel Nichols I was asked to recruit military people, and so forth. And through the recruiting of agents for the Embassy, many of them, naturally, recruited by me, had contact with me, and they said well I am in touch with (Deleted) or I am in touch with (Deleted) and so forth. In the close circle you know who is who, like I was trying to explain to the gentlemen here. An agent doesn't come out and say, hey, I am a CIA agent. You don't do those things.

Olsen: Did you then, at the request of Colonel Nichols and Major Van Horne -- by the way did you meet both of these gentlemen?

Sturgis: I met Colonel Nichols.

Olsen: Did you meet Major Van Horne?

Sturgis: I am not sure sir whether I met Major Van Horne, and I am not sure that I met (Deleted) and I am not sure I met (Deleted). There is a great possibility that I did. But I am trying to use my senses, it has been so many years. But the main man that I had close contact with was Colonel Nichols. So it isn't like you have one and then you have to have contact with the whole works.

Olsen: So you think you may have met Major Van Horne, (Deleted) and (Deleted) but you are not certain?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: These names, then, particularly came to your attention, in that you had reports from the people whose names you had given to Colonel Nichols that they in turn had been contacted by these other people, is that the way you became familiar with who these other people were and so forth.

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: When did you leave Cuba?

Sturgis: On June 30, 1959.

Olsen: So that you were there for almost exactly six months after the revolution took place?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: During those six months did you have more than one contact with Colonel Nichols?

Sturgis: Oh, yes sir.

Olsen: How frequently did you meet with him?

Sturgis: Well, I met Colonel Nichols in various places. When I first made contact with Colonel Nichols I told him about Clark F. Wollan, and he wanted to assist me from the American Government, and so forth, and again he offered me money and I said no. And I told him that I would assist him as much as possible, that I felt the Communists were trying to make contact with Fidel Castro. And I told him I had photographs that I had taken in the mountains of these people, and I gave him copies.

Olsen: How many times approximately did you meet with Colonel Nichols during that six months?

Sturgis: Quite a number of times.

Olsen: Where did you meet him?

Sturgis: At the Embassy, at the Air Force Base.

Olsen: Which Air Force Base was that?

Sturgis: The Cuban Air Force Base.

Olsen: Was this near Havana?

Sturgis: Yes, right next to Camp Colombia, which is Army headquarters. During this period of time I had this changeover when I left Santiago De Cuba to go to Havana.

Olsen: When was it that you arrived in Havana?

Sturgis: I believe it was about ten days later, after the revolution was over with. I was asked by Fidel if I could go into the Air Force and help the Commander and Chief, Pedro Diaz Lanz, in the reorganization of the Air Force. Now, I had a discussion with Colonel Nichols to the effect that I was suggested to get myself in a good position in the Air Force, and Pedro Diaz Lanz, a good friend of mine, got him to appoint me as Chief of Security and Intelligence for the Cuban Air Force.

Olsen: When did you receive such an appointment as Chief of Security and Intelligence?

Sturgis: I would believe within that second week that the revolution was over with.

Olsen: And how long did that appointment last?

Sturgis: Until the day I left Cuba, June 30, 1959.

Olsen: Was this the primary activity that you had then for the next six months?

Sturgis: No.

Olsen: What was your primary activity during that period of time?

Sturgis: I had several activities that I fell into accidentally. Having contact with Colonel Nichols, we had a very difficult situation there with the new Cuban Government being very much disorganized. The regular army was being disbanded, the weapons being taken away from them. And Fidel needed time in order to get this raggedy muffin rebel force that he had, with no shoes, and so forth, into a well-organized force of training and so forth. So I had another position, which was the training -- I was in charge of the Military Police for the Air Force, and I was the overseer of the training of the Military Police. At the same time there were discussions between Colonel Nichols and myself about meetings that I have had with various top military commanders, for instance, Commander Richardo Lorie, who worked for the CIA ---

Olsen: What was his position?

Sturgis: --- at a later date.

Olsen: What was his position with the Cuban military forces?

Sturgis: Well, I remember now, at the very beginning when Fidel came into power of this organization, I forget what his position in the government was.

Olsen: And that was who?

Sturgis: Commander Richardo Lorie. I forget what it is, but it was a very high position. Ricardo Lorie does live and work in Miami, Florida.

Olsen: Let's stay in that period of time now, in that six months. Did you have occasion during that period of six months to meet Commander Lorie?

Sturgis: Yes, we were very close friends.

Olsen: What relationship did you have from the standpoint of your governmental responsibilities during that period?

Sturgis: In reporting to Colonel Nichols I told him of the meetings that I had had to participate between the military commanders, one meeting in particular with Commander Pedro Diaz Lanz, the Chief of the Air Force at that time. Present at that meeting were Commander Ricardo Lorie and Commander Marcos Diaz Lanz, at that time the Inspector General of the Cuban Air Force, myself and several other officers who I just can't remember at the present time. Anyway, Colonel Nichols was very much interested in this information about the Communists.

Olsen: I take it that this meeting of you and other military officers of the Castro Air Force primarily -- Sturgis: And the Army.

Olsen: Air Force and Army -- had been concerning itself with the extent of Communist penetration into the Cuban Government?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: What other duties did you have for the Castro Government during that six months period of time other than your being responsible for the training of military police for the Air Force, and your being in charge of security and intelligence for the Cuban Air Force, what other duties did you have?

Sturgis: At one time while I was at the Prime Minister's Office there was a meeting and discussion with one of the woman ministers who was up in the mountains with Fidel as a rebel soldier. Her name was Pastorita, Commander Pastorita Munas. She was a commander and a lesbian. And Fidel asked me, please help Pastorita, because she is so tied up in work that you have to help her. And I said okay. The job that I was supposed to do, I was supposed to take over or help her take over, the gambling casinos in Cuba.

Olsen: In all of Cuba or just a part?

Sturgis: All of Cuba.

Olsen: And what did you do in connection with helping Miss Munas?

Sturgis: Well, I made contact with all the different men in charge of the casinos. I put them on notice that Fidel and the government were going to have the laws changed. For instance, he wanted only a certain amount of equipment in operation, and that each piece of equipment had to have a tax stamp on it. And any other type of equipment that did not have that tax stamp could not be used. Naturally, everybody was made about that. Fidel at some of the meetings that he had -- or rather that I was present at -- mentioned that he was eventually going to close down the casinos. At one time, personally, he told me, FRANK, I am going to run all these American gangsters out of Cuba. I am going to close down all the gambling casinos. I don't want them here. They are going to get out. I did tell him, well, if you do that, you are going to put Cuban people out of work. Maybe there is another way you can do it, and that is by having strict control over these people. He said, no, I don't want no control. They are going to leave. I am going to put them all in jail if possible, I am going to run them out of Cuba.

Olsen: Let me ask you at this point, at the time that the revolution succeeded in January 1959, did you know any of the people who, at the time, were owning or operating gambling casinos in Cuba?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you subsequently become friendly with any of the people who owned or operated gambling casinos in Cuba?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I will tell you how this came about. Going back to the first week of the revolution in Santiago, I saved the life of a man by the name of Stretch Rubin. He was working for a man -- I believe he was working for a man called Norman Rothman in the slot machine business.

Olsen: Where was Mr. Rothman?

Sturgis: Well, I did not meet Mr. Rothman up until that time that I saved the man. I took Stretch Rubin away from some rebel soldiers who wanted to shoot him. He had a bag of money on him. What he was doing was going into the Casa Grande Hotel which had a gambling casino there and slot machines. His job was to -- he was like the collector for this outfit. And he would collect all the money. And he had a big bag full of money. And I came upon him as some rebel soldiers were dragging him away and he was screaming and hollering and so forth, and they were going to shoot him. And I took him away from the rebel soldiers. And he told me that the situation was really bad there, that he was going to go to Havana, and so forth. And he asked me if I was going to Havana. And he said, when you get up there, see me. I will be at whatever hotel -- he mentioned it, but I forgot. But later on I found out that he worked for Norman Rothman, who was the partner of General Clio Chivano. Chivano was the brother-in-law of General Batista. Now Norman Rothman and General Chivano were partners in the slot machine business. Later, when I was in charge of that, I did meet Stretch Rubin when I made an inspection of all the casinos, not knowing anyone, because I did not know any of the gamblers or owners of those gambling casinos. I met Stretch, who introduced me to a friend of his. His name was -- I can't think of it, the man he introduced me to -- I will remember his name because we got to be very good friends. He used to be the partner of Dutch Schulz, Mr. Fletchenheimer, of the old days in New York. And he was his partner in the slot machine business. In other words, this Jewish man, I forget the name right this minute, was the partner of Dutch Schultz in the slot machine business in upper New York State. Hymie Levin is the name. Now Stretch Rubin, I don't believe that is his real name, Stretch, I believe is -- you know how they call them muscles and egghead or whatever.

Olsen: Where was it, by the way, that you saved Rubin's life? Was it in Santiago?

Sturgis: In Santiago, yes.

Olsen: And Rubin worked for -- Sturgis: Norman Rothman.

Olsen: Who was a partner of --- Sturgis: Of General Chivano. He was the military commander I believe, in Oriente Province, I understand through some source. My sources say he was a real degenerate.

Olsen: He as a military commander of Oriente Province under Batista?

Sturgis: Under General Batista. And he was the brother-in-law of General Batista.

Olsen: Now what is the relationship between Norman Rothman and Hymie Levin, any?

Sturgis: I believe from what Hymie told me, if I am not mistaken, that Hymie did work for Normie Rothman at one time. Normie Rothman did own and operate a gambling casino in Havana at one time. But in the year 1959 he was in the slot machine business, and did not own a gambling casino.

Olsen: Now, you said Hymie Levin was a partner of Dutch Schultz.

Sturgis: Hymie Levin, many, many years ago was a partner of Dutch Schultz in the slot machine business in upper New York State.

Olsen: That is many years earlier?

Sturgis: Yes. Naturally Dutch Schultz is dead today.

Olsen: When were they partners, do you know?

Sturgis: No, I don't know.

Olsen: Was Dutch Schultz -- the name seems to ring a bell -- was he an underworld figure?

Sturgis: One of the biggest in New York, one of the biggest in New York. As a matter of fact the Mafia killed him. I think the man who ordered his execution was Lucky Luciano.

Olsen: And he was dead, Dutch Schultz was already dead by this time in 1959?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And where was Hymie Levin at the time?

Sturgis: Hymie Levin, when I met him, was in Havana. I met him through Stretch Rubin.

Olsen: And was he in the gambling business there then?

Sturgis: I don't know sir, because both of them were in Havana, and I imagine both of them were still working in the slot machine business.

Olsen: Did you become acquainted with any of the other gambling figures in Havana at that time or in Cuba?

Sturgis: Yes sir. Hymie Levin and Stretch, more Hymie Levin, asked if they could be of any assistance to me by introducing me to the casino operators, the managers and so forth, that I would naturally be in contact with for the government...Both of them offered to show me around, but Hymie Levine was the main person who stuck with me close...He introduced me to Jake Lansky at the Rivera Hotel. He, at that time, from what I understand, was managing the hotel for his brother, Meyer Lansky. He introduced me to Joe Rivers, which is not his real name but it is the name --

Olsen: Is that the name by which he is known in the gambling business?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: And who is Joe Rivers?

Sturgis: To be very honest with you, I don't know his real name...I did know his real name but I forgot.

Olsen: What hotel or casino was that?

Sturgis: I am not sure whether he had an interest in the Capri Hotel or not. But I was also introduced at the Capri to Charley White. His real name was Charles "The Blade" Tourine. [I met] Norman Rothman, McLaney, I believe he was operating the National Hotel gambling casino.

Olsen: How about Norman Rothman?

Sturgis: He was in the slot machine business. Santo Trafficante Jr. I was introduced to the owners of the Tropicana Night Club and gambling casino.

Olsen: Why don't we just kind of abbreviate this at this point, FRANK. Were all of these people who were engaged in the ownership and management of the gambling casinos in Cuba generally underworld figures?

Sturgis: All of them? No sir. I met some other people. I don't recall their names at the present time.

Olsen: Were those people whose names you have given here, Rubin, Levin, Lansky, Rivers, White, McLaney, Rothman, were any of them underworld figures?

Sturgis: They were considered underworld figures.

Olsen: All of them?

Sturgis: Yes, from what I found out later, yes.

Olsen: And when you say they were considered, by whom were they considered?

Sturgis: Well Hymie was telling me, each one that he introduced to me -- and he introduced me to quite a number of people who were top of the world figures, who were Mafia, who were -- or considered Mafia, or considered Syndicate people -- and so forth.

Olsen: Did you have any dealings with these people other than being introduced to them and advising them what the new regulations were, so what their new regulations were going to be, and hearing Castro make statements to the effect that he was going to get rid of them all.

Sturgis: I didn't tell them that at the time, at the beginning, that Fidel was going to get rid of them. What I did was to make my inspection of all the casinos that came under my jurisdiction at that time, and advise them of new laws that were being put into law, advise them of the tax stamps that had to go on each piece of equipment, and that is just about it. And during this period of time there was one more person he introduced me to -- Hymie Levin introduced me to a number of movie actors and actresses. I did meet, at the Tropicana Night Club and gambling casino one night, sitting with Fidel's younger sister, Anna Castro, she called me over to the table, and she was sitting down with a movie actor. His name was Hugh O'Brien, and I did meet Hugh O'Brien, and I did meet Errol Flynn.

Olsen: Who is Errol Flynn?

Sturgis: Errol Flynn is one of my old swash-buckling, sword fighting heros in the movies. And he was there at the time making a picture about the rebels, Fidel Castro and the rebels, and so forth, in the mountains. And Lon Chaney, Junior. I believe was there with him. I met quite a number of them, not just the movie people who owned the casino, but important people in the movie and entertainment industry, wealthy people. As a matter of fact, I did take five businessmen from New York to see Fidel at the Prime Minister's Office who wanted to lend the Cuban Government $300 million. And through my doing of getting them to meet Fidel -- they were staying at the Rivera Hotel for two weeks, and a rebel captain who was supposed to be a friend of Fidel couldn't get them to see Fidel. And I was there having breakfast. And he came over to my table and introduced me to those five Americans -- I think there were three Americans, I'm sorry.

Olsen: Who were those Americans?

Sturgis: I forgot their names right now. But they were from New York.

Olsen: Were they legitimate businessmen, or were they Syndicate people?

Sturgis: From what I understand from this rebel captain they were legitimate businessmen, they were involved in some, I think it was insurance money. That I found out in discussion with them. And I made the arrangement that same day to see Fidel. I got a phone and called the Prime Minister's Office and I spoke to a friend of mine. His name was Juan Orta. He was the private secretary to the Prime Minister.

Olsen: Let me cut that off for the moment here, FRANK, because there are certain avenues that I want to go into, and I am afraid we may not get them all covered here if we follow other courses. Did you ever have any dealing with, any deals with any of those gambling figures?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you ever take money from them?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you ever intercede on their behalf with any official of the Castro Government?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you ever do them favors for which they promised to repay you at a later time?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you ever have, in short, any kind of business, either over the table or under the table, any business dealing with any of those gambling figures?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you ever make any promises to any of them that you would attempt to do something for them?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you ever make any steps, perform any favors for them?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: You left Cuba on June 30, 1959. Why did you leave?

Sturgis: Well, during the period of six months, from January to June 30, Fidel's Government, Fidel's forces, was very much disorganized. At the same time, trying to organize all those things, Fidel needed the time. At the same time he had many people who were Communist, many officials who were Communists coming into the Army, and coming into the Air Force, to indoctrinate the officers and the men with Communist theories and ideas, which we very much did not like. Fidel used to come over to the Air Force Base with the top military commanders and a jeep convoy. And there was talk of assassinations.

Olsen: When you say there was talk of assassinations, who was talking about assassinating whom?

Sturgis: Well, the rebel officers who were anti-Communists and many of those -- or a number of those officers whom I recruited for the Embassy wanted to get rid of Fidel because of the Communist teachings that Fidel was forcing on the military. Many of the top military commanders, the anti-Communist commanders, did not trust the American Embassy at that time. They were a little wary about the American Embassy because of their pro-Batista feelings. And then it looked like you had in the Embassy a split, some of the Embassy officials and employees were pro-Batista, and the others were pro-Fidel. As those weeks drug on, only the top military people knew what was going on, which included myself. These reports were given to Colonel Nichols, were being given to (Deleted) and so forth, about what was going on.

Olsen: Can I stop you there? Can you name some of the other people in the military and civilian government of the Castro regime who you had recruited, and who were reporting to those American officials whom you previously named?

Sturgis: Let's see if I can remember all of them. Commander Pedro Diaz Lanz, Chief of the Cuban Air Force.

Olsen: You recruited them, and he was in contact with American officials?

Sturgis: I made contact for him with the American Embassy. I made contact for the Embassy with Commander Marcos Diaz Lanz, Inspector of the Cuban Air Force.

Olsen: And he was also reporting to American officials?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Who else?

Sturgis: Commander Ricardo Lorie. Geraldine Shamma.

Olsen: And who was she?

Sturgis: She was an American woman who was married to Captain Shamma. Her marriage name was Suarez. So her name was Geraldine Suarez Shamma. They owned a tobacco business in Cuba, several businesses in Cuba, but the main business was tobacco, which amounted to about $20 million. I recruited her for the Embassy. And her contacts were several people there, or at least one major person, and that was Major Van Horne. Her job was to meet and make contact with top officials in the government, which she did. She had a fabulous home and gave parties. Many of the top military commanders went over to her home. She was the contact with the American Government with the underground organization -- he was the Chief of the underground against Castro, and his code name was Francisco.

Olsen: And she was in contact with him?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Now FRANK, did you leave Cuba voluntarily or did you get forced out by the Castro Government?

Sturgis: I will have to go back again. Another person who was in touch with the Embassy was Sergio Sanjennes, who was the top high-ranking G-2 official under Fidel. When the time came for me to leave Cuba he actually saved my life, because he was in G-2, and told me that I had better leave because the G-2 was hot on my trail to capture me, and mostly likely, if I was caught, I would be executed.

Olsen: So you got out in a hurry?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: How did you leave Cuba?

Sturgis: Well, after meeting with Sergio, I left, I would say within a week. I stuck around a little bit. During this period of time I came across an American who was with the rebel forces by the name of Captain Devereau. Captain Devereau was the grandson of Tom Mix. He was very close with Raoul Castro. And I was, at one time, going to kill him.

Olsen: Why, and at whose direction were you going to kill him?

Sturgis: Well, unfortunately it was not under no direction, because I was told to leave him alone. And I was going to do it myself.

Olsen: Why were you going to do it yourself?

Sturgis: Well, the situation was getting very hot there. And evidently he must have overheard some things being discussed by Raoul and Che Guevara about me, about my goings on between the military and the American Embassy. I had to request from the Chief of the Air Force a document naming me -- it was an official Air Force document naming me -- I may have that document -- as a go-between -- as a liaison officer between the Cuban Air Force and the American Embassy. This was a cover for me being in touch with American officials and the American Embassy.

Olsen: Let's go back to Devereaux. Why was it that you were about to kill Devereau?

Sturgis: Again, with all this deception that was going on between the anti-Communist group, and because of Fidel's odds as to allowing different instructors to come into the military to instruct about Communist doctrine, and so forth, there was quite a bit of deception about that. And so naturally sides were being drawn up. And because of the mistrust of the American Embassy that some of the military commanders had, I was asked if I would personally come to Washington, D.C. and notify the American Government of the Communist infiltration into the government and into the military.

Olsen: Who asked you to do that?

Sturgis: The meeting was with several top military commanders, both of the Army and Air Force.

Olsen: And you were asked to do this by Cuban Government officials?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Not by the American Embassy?

Sturgis: No.

Olsen: Let's come around to Devereau. Where does he fit into the picture?

Sturgis: Devereau was very closely associated with Raoul Castro. He came into the picture, he was an entertainer, his wife and himself, in different Cuban night clubs in the City of Camaguey. And I imagine, like many people in Cuba, they got on this kick about being against Batista and the revolution, and so forth. And Devereau eventually showed up in Havana, as a captain. He is still in Cuba.

Olsen: You mean a Captain in the Castro military.

Sturgis: Yes sir, in G-2, a captain in intelligence.

Olsen: And did you feel that he had been squealing on you?

Sturgis: No sir, I felt that he knew something and he mainly told me to be careful, and that I was getting out of line, that I was with the wrong people. And he mentioned Diaz Lanz's name, and he mentioned Captain Martinez' name, and Lorie's name and these people were my friends, and knowing them to be strong anti-Communists, and knowing that Captain Devereau was crazy, and closely associated with Raoul Castro and Che Guevara, known Communists, I had a confrontation with him and two of his bodyguards in a jeep one night when he stopped me and I told him mainly that he had better step lightly, that I would kill him right then and there. And I would have done it except for one thing only, that I spoke to Nichols about this -- and Nichols told me to leave him alone at the present time. Other things that I discussed with Colonel Nichols was the attempted assassination on two occasions of Fidel Castro and all the top military commanders that used to come for the Air Force Base. And remember that I had another job at the Air Force Base, training the military police. And I also was still Chief of Security.

Olsen: Let me ask you, are you telling us that you participated as a Cuban Air Force officer, and Chief of training military police and security and intelligence operations in the Cuban Air Force, that you participated in an attempt to assassinate Castro?

Sturgis: Yes, on two occasions, plus other military officials.

Olsen: When did those attempts take place, during the early part of 1959?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I would say the first attempt -- and I set it up as an exercise, that if I was to get the green light -- which I did not anticipate that I would, because there is such a thing as getting a green light -- and there is another thing about doing something without the green light, in other words they do it --but they don't get caught -- but I did set it up as an exercise, and I did have the men on several occasions, like I said, as a training exercise, stationed at the gate with me there, with men stationed on the rooftops of the homes -- my excuse was for the protection of the entourage, Fidel and the military commanders he had with him, he had a hometown bunch with him when they came to the Air Force, even with General Bayo. And I felt that if I would get the nod to assassinate them, I could do it within 30 seconds, high tail it and everything.

Olsen: Was there something that you had drawn up in the way of an exercise as the result of the discussion with the other Air Force officials?

Sturgis: The Air Force and Army officials. This information was given to the American Embassy. I again did these exercises to try to get a diversion that if I would get the nod to do the execution, that I would have some means of diversionary tactics to draw attention away from the people who did the execution, and I was there with my people to prevent it because of security.

Olsen: Did you discuss these plans in advance with Colonel Nichols?

Sturgis: No sir. At the very -- I would say about six weeks after the revolution was over with there was a great deal of discontent among many of the top ranking military officers. I knew these people personally, I was in with them at those meetings and various places, and that they discussed, we all discussed the assassination then. And some said, well, there are some officers that will be with the group, Fidel and Raoul and Che, that were not really with them. So they were split on the idea of assassinating him. So they asked my opinion. And I told them, well, in war innocent people do get killed. If you are going to assassinate the man, the best place to do it was at the front gate as he approaches, and to just, if there is even seven or eight jeeps, whether they are pro- or anti - if you are going to go ahead and kill him, people are going to get hurt.

Olsen: I didn't understand whether you answered my question as to whether or not you had discussed in advance with Colonel Nichols.

Sturgis: No sir, after the meeting with the different military commanders, I reported to Nichols the type of discussions that were made at those meetings.

Olsen: And what was Colonel Nichols response?

Sturgis: Can we go off the record?

Olsen: If you want.

Sturgis: Let's go off the record. He told me to stand by, don't do anything, stand by, stall.

Olsen: And did you then stand by and stall?

Sturgis: Yes, sir, I not only stood by, but then I proceeded to do these exercises without asking Colonel Nichols. I did those on my own, to prepare a special group of men to set this up.

Olsen: You prepared the exercise. Did you ever get the green light from people in Castro's Air Force and Army to go ahead with an attempt?

Sturgis: Oh, they wanted to do it, sir. The only thing that held them back was me, I am the only one that held them back, because they wanted to kill him in a minute.

Olsen: And so they were urging that this be done, but you were holding back on it?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: And were you holding back on it at least in part because of the request made by Colonel Nichols that you would hold up on it, and not do anything?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: Was any actual attempt made now to carry out an assassination on Premier Castro?

Sturgis: The only attempt is what I was doing in these exercises.

Olsen: So that there was some planning, but no attempt?

Sturgis: Well, let me say this. We are on a very thin piece of string there, because I was several times making those exercises, and I was really, because of my high position in the military, and because of the things that I knew -- and you must understand that I did break into the headquarters of the Cuban Army at Columbia Barracks and did steal documents out of there. And I also, at my own headquarters, in my files, I did photograph some things that were in my files from the past regime that was there, but also of other officers that were there that I could not trust, and wanted to see what kind of reports and things that were made. So I did photograph those. So I did make a break-in.

Olsen: What I am trying to do FRANK, is to draw a distinction, if I can, between some plans for, some setting up of exercises that would be preparatory to an attempt to assassinate Premier Castro, Che Guevara and Raoul Castro and others that might be with them. I am trying to distinguish that kind of planning and preparation from an actual attempt to carry it out.

Roethe: Were there any shots ever fired?

Sturgis: No sir. As a matter of fact, in order to avoid that, because my people wanted to do it so badly, I had to take the ammunition away from them, just to contain them.

Roethe: Was this an exercise that was going to be -- was this going to be a shooting?

Sturgis: Oh, yes.

Roethe: So it was not a bombing or anything of this sort, strictly a shooting?

Sturgis: A shooting.

Olsen: How soon before you left Cuba did this setting up of exercises take place?

Sturgis: It was within, I would say, four to six weeks.

Olsen: Before you left?

Sturgis: No, four to six weeks after we took over the country, January 1, four to six weeks was the first attempt. That was in the last of January or the first week in February 1959, four or five weeks.

Olsen: Did this fever about assassinating Castro, Raoul Castro and Guevara, subside after a little while?

Sturgis: Oh, no.

Olsen: Did it keep on going all the time while you were in Cuba?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I did arrange to train the same men for another attempt at assassination of him in the headquarters of the Air Force on the second floor.

Olsen: Before you go on to that, why did you never make an attempt the first time, why did you hold back?

Sturgis: I was waiting for a nod from Nichols.

Roethe: And you never received that nod?

Sturgis: I never received that.

Roethe: What got you started into a second attempt to try a different type of assassination?

Sturgis: Yes, it would be a different plan to assassinate him. This came, I would say, the last part of February, if I am not mistaken. Things came to a fever pitch. Even the American Government, through other agents inside of Cuba, in the military and so forth, were getting a lot of information about the Communist activity. And Fidel was coming on his own thing, you know, about talking against the Americans. And this was creating a lot of dissent with some of the top military brass. Of the Cuban military. And the same time I am trying to recruit Commander Camillo Cienfuegos. Olsen: You have attempted to recruit him?

Sturgis: I attempted to recruit Commander Camillo Cienfuegos, and also Commander Almejeira. He was the National Chief of Police.

Olsen: And who was the first one, Cienfuegos?

Sturgis: Commander Camillo Cienfuegos was the Chief of the Army -- I think Raoul was the Chief of the Armed Forces.

Olsen: Did you succeed in recruiting them?

Sturgis: I met them at the Capri Hotel, where the show was at. And I got them stoned out of their minds. And we discussed money, how they would be willing to do, and so forth. I didn't want to get into it too much, because I had Camillo Cienfuegos lined up more, he was thinking more in line with what I was talking about. Commander Almejeira got stoned out of his mind. And he just put his head on the table and went to sleep. That was it. And so I had a hard time keeping Camillo Cienfuegos awake.

Roethe: At whose request were you trying to recruit these gentlemen?

Sturgis: Remember, Embassy told me, please try to recruit agents for them.

Olsen: You were attempting to recruit people who would provide information for the Embassy?

Sturgis: To provide agents for the American Embassy.

Roethe: You were not recruiting them especially for assassination attempts?

Sturgis: No. Now, Camillo gave me enough information that night where I broke into the Chief of the Army headquarters -- he was Chief of the Army. I broke into their file and I did photograph and steal documents.

Roethe: What did you do with those documents?

Sturgis: I turned them over to the others.

Olsen: To Colonel Nichols?

Sturgis: Yes.

Roethe: Were you operating here now for Colonel Nichols, or do you know if you were operating for CIA? Who was the creator of this policy, if you know, Colonel Nichols as a diplomat? Was he a diplomat at that time?

Sturgis: Colonel Nichols was the American Military Air Attache, which could be a cover for the CIA.

Olsen: You don't know if he was CIA or not?

Sturgis: No. Again I say, nobody shows if they are CIA, unless you are working yourself as an employee.

Olsen: Let me turn here, FRANK, to this area. Were you ever, by Colonel Nichols, requested to organize any activity other than recruiting people to act as agents for the American Embassy, were you ever asked to carry out any kind of activity in Cuba.

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: You were never asked to carry out any assassination?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Were you ever asked to carry out any attempt to overthrow the Castro Government?

Sturgis: Well, let's not say overthrow the Castro government. Colonel Nichols was very much, in his thinking, in the discussions with him, against the Castro Government. But then here you have a man that goes by the book.

Olsen: Let me ask you this. Were you ever asked to carry out any action in Cuba on behalf of the American Embassy?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Or Colonel Nichols?

Sturgis: No sir.

Roethe: So your breaking in and obtaining those documents was something that you did on your own for information gathered as a result of your conversations with the Commander of the Army?

Sturgis: Camillo Cienfuegos, yes.

Roethe: During this one evening when he got drunk?

Sturgis: Yes.

Roethe: You saw an opportunity and you took advantage of the opportunity yourself, without first consulting Colonel Nichols?

Sturgis: Well, you must understand this. When an opportunity comes around you do it, because you may not have a chance to make contact, and get permission. And not only that, suppose you don't get permission? There is a lot of things that have to be done. But nobody is going to give you permission.

Oh, I wish I had -- I understand there are certain things in the Chilean Embassy like -- I broke into the Chilean Embassy in Havana, they are accusing me of breaking into the Chilean Embassy here in Washington, D.C., which is a lie. But I broke into the Chilean Embassy in Havana. I was not ordered to do so. But I felt, with discussions that we had, I wish I could find out what was in those files in the Chilean Embassy.

Olsen: Did you break into the Chilean Embassy in Havana as Chief of Security for the Air Force?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: The Castro Government?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Did you ever get any request from Colonel Nichols or anybody else at the American Embassy that you break into the Chilean Embassy?

Sturgis: No sir.

Olsen: Did you have any contacts there in Havana with anybody from the American Embassy other than Colonel Nichols?

Sturgis: I would say no.

Olsen: When you say I would say no, that is your best belief?

Sturgis: I believe not. Because if somebody comes up and says, yes, he was in touch with me, you know, it is too many years, and to the best of my recollection, I think that would cover it, I would say Colonel Nichols was the only one I was in constant touch with. There is a possibility that may (Deleted) and a possibility of (Deleted) but I am not - - my mind doesn't --

Olsen: You don't recall any specific instance in which you made contact with anybody else other than Colonel Nichols?

Sturgis: I am not sure. I don't know how to put the right words. Because I met several people, but I am not sure of who the people that I met were.

Olsen: After you came back from Cuba, at the end of June 1959, did you then settle in the Miami area?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Did you take up employment in some normal job in Miami, or did you become involved right away?

Sturgis: I was not employed, sir.

Olsen: Did you engage in any business for yourself at that point?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Before we get to that, when you left Cuba, did you manage to take with you any substantial amount of money or wealth?

Sturgis: No sir. I took some documents here that belonged to Commander Richardo Lorie in his preparation to leave Cuba and come to exile. I helped to arrange for the escape of the Chief of the Air Force and his wife. As a matter of fact, I made contact with the American Embassy to see if they would accept him in the Embassy. And I was told by the Embassy people, no. So I had to come here to make arrangements for his escape with his brother Sergio Diaz Bruil, who in fact himself personally went to a yacht basin, Bertrand's Basin and rented a boat, I believe it was a sailboat. With the plans that both he and myself made, I proceeded to Cuba to pick up his brother, the Chief of the Air Force.

Roethe: Before we get back here in the U.S., the second attempt that you were talking about you said was going to occur in an office building, is that right?

Sturgis: That is the headquarters of the Cuban Air Force on the second floor.

Roethe: And again I am correct that there was no actual attempt made, and that there were no shots fired?

Sturgis: Right.

Roethe: And this was also -- and this only got as far as the planning stage?

Sturgis: Right. Planning and the exercise.

Olsen: What did you do after you came back to this country in Mid-1959, other than to assist people in escaping from Cuba.

Sturgis: I got together with Commander Pedro Diaz Lanz. We went to Washington, D.C., for a Senate hearing. At this hearing they wanted to know about Communist infiltration into the Cuban Government. And I forget the name of the Senator at that time. I went back to Miami. I forget how BARKER came into the picture, but BARKER -- I made contact with BARKER, Diaz Lanz.

Olsen: What were you going to do to make a living during this period?

Sturgis: I had my own financing.

Olsen: What was your own financing?

Sturgis: Well, I had money, pay that I got from the Cuban Government.

Olsen: Where had this money been placed that you were able to draw it out?

Sturgis: Well, I had an import-export business in Havana which continued after the revolution was over with during Fidel's time. And I proceeded to open an office up on Ponce De Leon Boulevard, in Coral Gables -- when the revolution was over with, because I was commuting back and forth between Miami.

Olsen: You said you had an import-export business in Havana?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And was that business continuing after you left there?

Sturgis: When I left that was the end of it.

Olsen: Had you accumulated some money in Cuba before you left there?

Sturgis: Yes, due to the business I did accumulate some money.

Olsen: Can you tell us approximately what your financial net worth was when you left Cuba? How much money had you accumulated?

Sturgis: Well, I had several thousand dollars, I would think I had $3 or $4,000 at that time.

Olsen: And you had been successful in transferring this money to the U.S.

Sturgis: It was all in cash.

Olsen: So you took it with you?

Sturgis: Yes, I took it with me, and two aircraft that I did have, one was a C-46, one was a C-46, of which I have the end numbers and documents, plus a B-25 bomber that I took over here.

Olsen: Did you fly out of Cuba?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Did you fly those aircraft yourself?

Sturgis: Well, another pilot and myself flew -- I think it was - I am not sure whether it was the C-46 that I flew out with, or the B-25 with another pilot. I did fly both planes at different times. I had one of the Cuban Air Force pilots fly one of the aircraft out. But I am not sure which one of them I came out on.

Olsen: Are you a pilot yourself?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Do you have a license?

Sturgis: I had a license. I flew over the city.

Olsen: You flew out of the country two airplanes that belonged to the Cuban Air Force?

Sturgis: No sir, they belonged to me, they were registered in my name.

Olsen: In Cuba?

Sturgis: No, registered in the U.S. in my name.

Olsen: Who had they belonged to in Cuba?

Sturgis: No one in Cuba, sir. They belonged to me, they were American end number aircraft that were bought by me here in the U.S.

Olsen: Had they been bought by you before you went to Cuba?

Sturgis: Yes sir, during the revolution.

Olsen: I see. You owned them before the revolution occurred?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I gave a $10,000 deposit on a B-25 bomber that was in Phoenix, Arizona. I gave a total of $112,000 for the C-46-D model. This money was revolutionary money that was given to me which I bought in my name.

Olsen: It was revolutionary money from whom?

Sturgis: It was from Fidel Castro -- while this was in 1958, while we were working against the Batista Government.

Olsen: I see. While you were up in the hills and acting as a courier, with revolutionary money you bought two planes in the U.S., and they were kept in the U.S. during the revolutionary period, but they were rendered in your name?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Roethe: And these were purchased by the government?

Sturgis: No sir, they were purchased in Phoenix, Arizona.

Roethe: From whom?

Sturgis: I may have the name of the people whom we bought them from. If you remember, in Phoenix, Arizona, you have an area there that has got planes for miles. They are in mothballs.

Olsen: What was this, a private enterprise?

Sturgis: Well I imagine this was -- you mean the people we bought it from?

Roethe: Yes.

Sturgis: Yes, it was.

Roethe: It had no connection with any Government agency that you are aware of?

Sturgis: I suspect that the man who sold me the aircraft did work for the CIA.

Olsen: Who was the man who sold you the aircraft?

Sturgis: I think his name was Thraikill.

Olsen: Did you make a trip back to the U.S. to make a purchase of those planes?

Sturgis: I came in and out of the U.S., in and out of the mountains, and in and out of the U.S.

Olsen: Frequently, as part of your revolutionary activities?

Sturgis: In order for me to get very close with Fidel personally, I went through a great risk in buying guns and equipment and smuggling guns and equipment to Cuba, both by air, by automobile, and in the Key West by ferry. And I had an elaborate system made up.

Olsen: Let's go into that just a little bit. We are going back into the revolutionary period, before the revolution succeeded, while you were working for Castro, while he was up in the hills. Who did you buy the guns from in the U.S.

Sturgis: I bought guns in Alexandria, Virginia.

Olsen: From whom?

Sturgis: I believe the name of the company was INTERARMCO. And the owner was an ex-CIA agent.

Olsen: Named what?

Sturgis: I forget. [Samuel Cummings]

Roethe: Was this ostensibly a private enterprise?

Sturgis: At least I thought it was a private enterprise.

Olsen: He asked, was it ostensibly a private enterprise. Was it actually a private enterprise?

Sturgis: Let me say this here, can I go back a little bit, Mr. Olsen?

Olsen: Yes.

Sturgis: Fidel told me in the mountains, here is what I have got - and I will show you the pictures -- I have got garbage, muerdo, which means shit, shotguns, rifles that are rusted, and that idiot who is in Miami, who is the head of the underground in Miami, doesn't know what he is doing, he is sending us all different types of foreign-made rifles -- for instance like the Italian carbine, you shoot that twice in rapid fire it would overheat and jam. And he says, "I need you to get me some equipment." I says, I will get you some equipment. "Beautiful. Here is the money. Go to Miami and get what you need. Get in touch with Bebe Hidalgo." He was the Chief of the underground. With him I made other contacts, or through him I made other contacts, with people like Yanuza, who got to be the Mayor of Havana under Fidel Castro.

Olsen: Come as quickly as you can to the matter of where you bought the weapons from whom, when, and how were they shipped to Cuba.

Sturgis: From Miami, getting money from these people, who range anywhere from $7 to $100,000, I went to Alexandria, Virginia, and did make contact with the owner.

Roethe: How did you get the name of the man in Alexandria?

Sturgis: I don't know how I got the name. But I understand years later that he did work for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Olsen: But the name of the company as best you can recall was INTERARMCO.

Sturgis: INTERARMCO.

Olsen: And what did you buy from INTERARMCO?

Sturgis: Well, at INTERARMCO I bought weapons that would fire the same bullets. For instance, I bought the M-1 Durand rifle, which I fired -- it was a 30.06 caliber weapon. I bought the M-1 -- I bought the Springfield rifle, U.S. Springfield rifle which fired the same bullet. And this type of a rifle I bought mainly for sniping, to be used as a sniper weapon in the mountains.

Olsen: The M-1 that you bought was the normal World War II semi-automatic Army weapon?

Sturgis: U.S. Army issue.

Olsen: Did you buy those in quantity?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And did you buy ammunition for them as well?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And did you buy any automatic weapons?

Sturgis: No sir, I did not buy automatic weapons. I did buy the 45 caliber U.S. Thompson, which had the -- they call it a DEWAT. They put lead between the barrel -- they plugged it up where it could not fire, you could only use it as a display piece.

Olsen: In other words, they were demilitarized?

Sturgis: They were rendered inoperative by putting lead in the barrel.

Olsen: Why did you buy them?

Sturgis: Well, for one thing, a good one was selling for about $200 apiece. I bought those up there for $75 apiece. We sent them to Cuba by air. I also bought good barrels, and I left instructions when they got to Cuba to take the barrel off and just put a new barrel on, and you had a fully automatic weapon.

Olsen: Was this an Army weapon of World War II?

Sturgis: Yes, it was.

Olsen: Was this called a grease gun or something like that?

Sturgis: No sir. There is a difference between the grease gun and the Thompson machine gun.

Olsen: Did the Thompson have a circular cartridge?

Sturgis: Yes, the drum, the 50 round drum.

Olsen: And that was a fully automatic weapon, wasn't it?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Did you buy any besides the Springfield, the M-1 Durand, and the Thompson 45 machine gun?

Sturgis: Yes sir, a bazooka. I bought the bazooka, not the shells, because it is legal to buy the bazooka. The shells were illegal naturally. So we had other sources of getting shells. I bought the anti-tank weapons, and I bought the Browning automatic rifle, the BAR, which was a semi-automatic and full automatic. But they did the same thing with the BAR, they put lead in the barrel. And in turn I had to take the barrel off and throw it away and put a new one on.

Olsen: And they didn't demilitarize the rest of the gun in any way?

Sturgis: No sir. I understand that somebody had some thoughts in their mind that they could sell the weapon like that. If they did what they were supposed to do, with a torch, put the lead between the barrel and where the bolt was, that would make that whole area bad, because when you --

Olsen: Because you could never get the round in the chamber, then?

Sturgis: Not that sir. What would happen would be the explosion of the shell would shatter the metal?

Olsen: Because that destroyed the temper?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Let's move quickly. Did you buy weapons any place else other than at Alexandria, Virginia?

Sturgis: I think it was Illinois. I went to Illinois with a friend of mine.

Olsen: Do you know the name of the company from which you bought weapons there?

Sturgis: No sir. [Richard Lauchli] I may have something in there that can tell me the name of the people that I bought them from.

Olsen: Do you know the name of the company from which you bought it?

Sturgis: There was no company.

Olsen: Do you know the name of the city where you went to buy it?

Sturgis: I will have to check that.

Olsen: Any place else besides Illinois?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I am trying to --- in discussing this with you -- these people belong the Minutemen group.

Olsen: You mean the ones in Illinois?

Sturgis: Yes. And I forgot the name of the man who is head of the Minutemen.

Olsen: DuBois?

Sturgis: Robert DuBois, that is right.

Olsen: From Norborne, Missouri.

Sturgis: Norborne, Missouri, is the other place I went to.

Olsen: Did you also buy some weapons there?

Sturgis: Well, I went to him first, and he in turn sent me to one of his close partners or aides or what have you, that was in Illinois on a farm that had a shed full of guns and equipment, mortars, 60 millimeter mortars, 90 millimeter mortars, the whole works. I bought some equipment from him.

Olsen: Did you buy any equipment anyplace else?

Sturgis: I would think that was the only two people -- yes, I bought the equipment at National Gun Shop at Southwest 22nd Avenue and 4th Street. I believe it was. In Miami.

Olsen: Was all of the military equipment that you bought, FRANK, for the Castro regime essentially in the small arms category?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And ammunition?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: And did you buy anything like tanks, armored cars, trucks, jeeps, anything of that character?

Sturgis: No sir, no heavy stuff.

Roethe: Except the two airplanes?

Sturgis: Just the two aircraft, yes.

Olsen: Did all of this small arms and ammunition that you bought get shipped over to Cuba, then?

Sturgis: Yes, I shipped it myself, personally, plus we have a network set up of various means of shipping the equipment to Cuba.

Olsen: Essentially involving revolutionaries in Florida?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: Let's go back to the period after you got back into this country. You participated for some time in assisting other Cubans to get out of the country, and particularly some of the high Air Force officials who you referred to?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: What else did you do after you got back into this country?

Sturgis: I maintained contact with the underground leaders.

Olsen: When you say the underground leaders now, are you speaking about underground leaders in Miami.

Sturgis: Miami and Cuba. And both worked together yet.

Olsen: When you talk about underground, you are talking about forces now that are interested in overturning Castro?

Sturgis: That is right.

Olsen: So that you had become pretty much a full-fledged anti-Castro operator even before you got back into the U.S.?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: What else did you do then after you got back? Did you make contact with any officials of the U.S. Government? Or put it another way, when were you first in contact, after getting back June 20, 1959, when did you first make contact with anybody who you understood to be an official of the U.S. Government?

Sturgis: Sam Jennis.

Olsen: Was Sam Jennis and underground leader in Miami?

Sturgis: Let me say the Sangenes, S-A-N-G-E-N-E-S?

Olsen: Is that all one word, S-A-N-G-E-N-E-S?

Sturgis: Yes sir, one word.

Olsen: It is not two separate words, is it?

Sturgis: No sir. That is the Saneges family, which were Louis Sangenes, and Sergio Saneges, who I have been working closely with in 1957 and 1958. And I made contact with Joaquim Sangenes, code Sam Jennis. I met BARKER, BERNARD L. BARKER, who at that time worked with the CIA, whose boss was EDUARDO. When EDUARDO was relieved of his duty after the Bay of Pigs failure, BARKER'S next Chief of Station was (Deleted).

Olsen: Let's take those one by one. You named several members of the Sangenes family.

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: You have given us Louis.

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: Sergio and Joaquin?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Now, what were their positions?

Sturgis: CIA.

Olsen: All three of them?

Sturgis: Yes, the CIA, I was led to believe.

Olsen: And were all three of them in Miami?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: And what kind of contact did you have with them? Did they come a recruit you or talk to you?

Sturgis: No sir. You have got to remember that I was in touch with these people from 1957 to 1958.

Olsen: What kind of contact did you have with them in 1957 and 1958?

Sturgis: Working with them in the overthrow of the Batista government.

Olsen: What did you do to work with them in the overthrow of the Batista government?

Sturgis: Smuggled guns, equipment. I was up in the mountains with Fidel, fought in several battles with the rebel forces in the mountains. Again, we brought Clark Wollan into the picture. And so up the line to the embassy.

Olsen: What I am trying to get at here is, did these Sengenes family members have any role in this other than as CIA agents, or were they revolutionaries themselves intent upon overthrowing the Batista government?

Sturgis: Right, sir, yes, sir. Their position at a latter date got to be very important, the fact that they were recruited to be agents for Central Intelligence Agency.

Olsen: When were they recruited to be agents for the CIA?

Sturgis: I would believe the year 1959, if not already 1958, which I am not sure.

Roethe: And what was their position outwardly? They were not card carrying CIA people, I presume, they must have had some position in the Miami community.

Sturgis: Well, these people were top leaders in the revolution. And remember, they did have contact with the past government of Batista, in the government, the top people, and also with the new government to be, which was the 26th of July Fidel Castro outfit. They worked very well into that. You have got to understand their background a little bit. The Sengenes family years back were involved in the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in Spain. They were young people at that time. They thought the Communist ideology -- from what I understand from them, they thought that was the thing in those days. So naturally, they broke away from the Communists themselves. And they were very intelligent people. And these are the type of people, with the position that they were in, the intelligence that they have, that the American Government would like to have as agents.

Olsen: But your contact with them in 1957 and 1958 --

Sturgis: Was strictly revolutionary.

Olsen: Was strictly revolutionary?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: They were not, as far as you know, at that time, associated with the CIA?

Sturgis: As far as I know.

Olsen: As far as you know?

Sturgis: I did not know if they were or were not.

Olsen: You had no indication, then, that they were?

Sturgis: No indication.

Olsen: So it was not until after you came back from Cuba in 1959 and made contact with them again that you believed that they were agents of the CIA?

Sturgis: Right, yes, sir.

Olsen: What did they say or do at that time to lead you to believe that they were agents of the CIA?

Sturgis: Well, number one, the activity that was going on in the Miami area, not only my activity, (illegible) one in the same position that I had, the comings and goings of people in and out of Cuba. Mrs. Geraldine Shamma, whom I recruited as an agent for the Embassy, was traveling from Havana to Miami. And she had a home on Brickell Avenue, which was a safe house for the CIA. The Cubans who came from Havana would come to the safe house which she maintained herself with her own money, not CIA money, her own money. BERNARD BARKER would call her up, and she would tell him who was there, and he would come over to pick up these Cuban exiles to be sent over to be interrogated or debriefed. This is what BERNARD BARKER would do. And E. HOWARD HUNT, I believe, may have come over there. I don't think he did, but anyway, she met him traveling back and forth from Havana, where she met him, I don't know off hand. You would have to ask her.

Olsen: You mean you have subsequently heard or learned that she did possibly had some contact with HUNT?

Sturgis: Oh, I knew that for years, because, remember, I was in Brickell Avenue in Miami, too.

Olsen: What was the address now?

Sturgis: It is torn down now. I forget the address. They may be able to remember the address.

Olsen: How did you know that this was a CIA safe house?

Sturgis: Well, again, the top military commanders who were in Cuba were in exile, and had meetings (illegible) this was when the CIA started to get the Cubans together to form the nucleus of an invasion force that was to go to Latin America to train. So there was a lot of activity, a lot of activity.

Olsen: Didn't that begin in 1960?

Sturgis: I would say that we had the house there in 1960, yes. And we were in touch with various agents, BARKER, for one. I was in touch with Sam, and also the other Sangenes. Louis Sangenes had an office in downtown Miami that was part of a recruiting office that he had prior to the invasion.

Olsen: FRANK, I was asking you a little while ago what the members of the Sangenes family said or did to lead you to conclude that they were agents of the Central Intelligence Agency? You told me that one of the women you had recruited in Cuba on behalf of the American Embassy there lived in a CIA safe house in Miami. But I am not sure whether you answered the question that I put to you. How did you know that the Sangenes family members were agents of the CIA?

Sturgis: I am not sure whether Sam told me at that period that he was working with the company or not, I am not sure, because I can't pin down the date. But he told me he was working ---

Olsen: Which one of the Sangenes family members was it that was called Sam Jennis?

Sturgis: That is Joaquim Sangenes. My understanding through the years is that he got to hold a high position with the CIA.

Olsen: Was Sangenes on the same level or subordinate to BERNARD BARKER?

Sturgis: Well you must understand that EDUARDO at that time was a political officer.

Olsen: You are talking about beginning sometime in 1960?

Sturgis: Right. And BARKER'S position with EDUARDO was as his assistant. So that means BARKER at that time was involved with the political officers, working for a political officer, which was political.

Olsen: And when you say political, what was EDUARDO doing, what were EDUARDO and BARKER doing at that time as political officers?

Sturgis: I can tell you what EDUARDO was doing, even though I didn't meet him, because I knew BARKER'S activities. BARKER was -- if EDUARDO wanted to have a meeting with Tony Varona -- he was the President of the Revolutionary Council that was formed by CIA.

Olsen: What was that called, the Cuban Revolutionary Council?

Sturgis: No, sir, that was called the Cuban Revolutionary Council, but it had other names that are in Spanish, Miro Cardona, was part of that.

Olsen: I am going to ask you to give me some names of the leaders of the Cuban Revolutionary organizations--

Sturgis: Council.

Olsen: --in Miami in 1959, 1960 and 1961. Miro Cardona, right?

Sturgis: I believe Miro Cardona was the President of the Council. Tony Varona. He was the Secretary General of the Council. Well, Manuel Artime, was part of that. He was part of the council. There has been a lot of writing which (illegible) about his position. They call Artime the leader of the invasion brigade. That is not so. Manuel Artime's position was, he was the coordinator between the political group of the Revolutionary Council -- the Revolutionary Council was a political force with the brigade, which was the military force. And because of him being who he was and his contacts, they made him like, I would say, a liaison between both the Brigade and the Revolutionary Council. He was not the leader of the invasion.

Olsen: Who else was at the top of the Revolutionary Council?

Sturgis: San Roman.

Olsen: Is that his last name?

Sturgis: S-A-M R-O-M-A-N.

Olsen: And was he just one of the members of the Revolutionary Council or the leaders?

Sturgis: Yes sir, he was one of the leaders of the Revolutionary Council. And you must remember, the Revolutionary Council was going to be the governing body of a new government in Cuba.

Olsen: Yes, I understand. It is worth at this point naming a few of the other very prominent people who were members of the Revolutionary Council which was going to form the nucleus of the new government if Castro was overthrown?

Sturgis: Let me say this here. There was a lot of dissention that was going on in the Revolutionary Council. There was a power struggle within the Council. You had another member who was outside the Revolutionary Council that they had wanted in. And this is very important. President Kennedy -- I think it was Bobby Kennedy -- either President Kennedy or Bobby Kennedy insisted that this man had to go into this Revolutionary Council. That man did not have an organization in Cuba, this man supposedly had only a nucleus of a handful of revolutionaries -- which caused a big uproar, and changes a lot of things.

Olsen: Who was this that the Kennedys wanted in?

Sturgis: Dr. Manolo Ray, who was considered very much to the left. This created such a turmoil. He was leftist, and his thoughts and thinking were like Fidel Castro's.

Navarro: In Cuba he was a commander for the Castro Army. And he was one of the ministers for the Castro Government.

Olsen: Why did he go to Florida?

Sturgis: Again, Fidel had a power struggle in Cuba where you had the anti-Communists against Fidel himself, and the Fidel Castro government. At that time it was not said that it was a Communist government, but it was a pink type government. You had power struggles within the government. For instance, Commander Camelo Cienfuegos, I believe because of his contact with me, was executed by Fidel Castro. And people like Manolo Ray, who were on the left, were against the Communists.

Olsen: Anyway, you advise us that the insistence of one or both of the Kennedy's created a major uproar in the Revolutionary Council because --

Sturgis: And in the Brigade. Because you must remember, Mr. Olsen, that CIA had direct contact, the political sector of CIA, in which HOWARD HUNT as EDUARDO, was a high ranking political officer with the Revolutionary Council. Then, you had a separate group which was the Brigade. HOWARD HUNT had nothing to do with the Brigade. It was a separate section of the CIA. And then, you had a third separation which was Operation Forty, which was a Top Secret operation. And the head of Operation Forty was Sam Jennis. The second chief --

Olsen: Who headed the Brigade?

Sturgis: The head of the Brigade was Orncido Oliva. He is a colonel in the National Guard.

Olsen: And what was the nature of Operation Forty?

Sturgis: Operation Forty was a CIA Top Secret operation. They were to train, I believe, approximately 200 Cubans who were in the Army. They were officers --

Olsen: That is the American Army?

Sturgis: The American Army, who went and received training in the American Army as officers. Their main job was intelligence. These men were going to be used to infiltrate Cuba to make contact with the underground.

Olsen: Which one of the Sangenes family members headed Operation Forty?

Sturgis: Sam Jennis was the head of the Operation. The second chief of Operation Forty was Felipe Gutierrez.

Olsen: All three of these different operations were essentially being organized by the CIA, weren't they?

Sturgis: Yes sir. If you remember, every one including the President of the U.S. denied that the CIA was behind more funding or training of these people. But they were in fact being what they were supposed to be, U.S. Government operations.

Olsen: It is your testimony, FRANK, that the Revolutionary Council was being financially supported by and organized by the CIA with E. HOWARD HUNT, otherwise know at that time as being EDUARDO, being the chief CIA agent involved in setting up the Revolutionary Council?

Sturgis: Let me correct you a little bit there. He was one of the high political officers of the CIA that was involved in the organization of the Revolutionary Council.

Olsen: And who was it from the CIA who was heading up the training and the organizing and the funding, financing, and what not, of the Brigade?

Sturgis: Well, the funding naturally again was CIA, funding for Operation Forty was CIA. The training for Operation Forty was U.S. Army and CIA. Mr. Frank Bender, which is a code name for Mr. Drecher, is his real name, who was the top CIA official who was in charge of the CIA operation in South Florida for this mess.

Olsen: The whole thing?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: Was Mr. Drecher's real first name FRANK also?

Sturgis: I don't know, sir. He is, I believe, of German extraction, if I am not mistaken. He was a naturalized citizen, he was not born in this country.

Olsen: Do you know whether he is still with the Agency?

Sturgis: I don't know sir.

Olsen: And who was the chief CIA officer having supervisory responsibilities or major responsibility for Operation Forty?

Sturgis: I couldn't go over Sam Jennis myself.

Olsen: But you don't know who it was?

Sturgis: All I knew who was above him was Frank Bender, whom I have never met.

Olsen: Did you meet other people who were, let's say, non-Cubans, who were involved in the planning with respect to the operation that finally ended up with the Bay of Pigs?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: Who else did you meet?

Sturgis: I would have to look through my notes and get you the names.

Olsen: You don't remember any right off hand here now?

Sturgis: Well, there was one man, I can't tell you his name, but he had one arm, and he was a colonel in the French Foreign Legion. He had this home which I had visited several times. I think it was in Coconut Grove. And he was a CIA official. And I believe I do have his name sir, in my notes.

Olsen: Now, what part did you play, FRANK, in this whole operation that led to the Bay of Pigs?

Sturgis: Well, I will have to go back again to Geraldine Shamma at Brickel Avenue. My contact with all the same top military commanders that were in Cuba both in the Army and in the Air Force who were in exile. Geraldine's contact with the head of the underground organization inside of Cuba, with Francisco, whose real name I will give you, but I forget it off hand. Her contact here in Brickel Avenue with BARKER and HUNT. And my association, naturally, with Sam Jennis, who at a later date, when I told him that BARKER wanted me to help him in some of his work, and BARKER, not knowing that I had contact, or was working with Sam Jennis, of course, you have got to understand, a lot of these top people that were in exile who at a later date were involved in the Congo who were friends of mine who were CIA agents. And those were the agents when they came into exile.

I know this is off the track, Mr. Olsen, but it is going to be very important. You have got to understand that you have the same -- not all the Cubans, now, I am talking about -- you have the same nucleus of the Cubans who came over here in the beginning, not every one, but the nucleus of them who were in Cuba with Batista, who were associated with the gambling casinos, the crime syndicate, the American crime syndicate, which in turn controlled the Cuban crime syndicate because all Cubans are not bad, but there was a Cuban crime syndicate. These same people, because of the people they knew with Batista, because of the people that they knew in Cuba, they not only supported Batista, but those same people did support the new Castro government, and got themselves in as a safeguard that if the rebels did succeed, at least they had contact. And they did give money and they did give information and so forth, to these people. And some of them were involved in drugs and crime and what have you.

Olsen: When you say these people, who are the people you are talking about?

Sturgis: I can't put my finger on it, Mr. Olsen. But as we go along -- I am going to jump again -- I have seen this myself, the same people who participated, some of them who participated in the Bay of Pigs invasion, were people who were considered Batistanos, some of them. Now, the Batistanos who supported Batista weren't all bad, but these same people who came over here and were recruited by the CIA, and worked here as agents, and some as double agents. Because of their criminal activities, a lot of information was gotten out of Cuba, because of the contacts.

Olsen: Were any of these people among the leaders of the Cuban Revolutionary Council?

Sturgis: No, I would think they were outside of the Revolutionary Council.

Olsen: Were any of these people among the leaders of the Brigade?

Sturgis: Some were suspected of being double-agents in the Brigade. But then again, you must understand that the Brigade itself, or persons in the Brigade was not a CIA agent, even though the Brigade was recruited from the Cuban colony to fight its soldiers. So that doesn't make them CIA agents, that makes them a force being financed and trained, and their families being paid monies while they were training, and away from home, and fighting, and even while they were in Cuba as prisoners their families were still receiving money from the CIA.

Olsen: Were any of the Batista clan, let's call them, who were among the leaders of Operation Forty?

Sturgis: Yes sir.

Olsen: Who among the leadership of Operation Forty?

Sturgis: Felipe Guterrez, the second chief of Operation Forty, was a G-2 agent under Batista, a high ranking officer.

Olsen: Was he someone who had close connections with the crime syndicate in Cuba?

Sturgis: I don't know that much about it. But there was a hatred between the second chief of Operation Forty and Sam Jennis, who was the chief of Operation Forty. Each one accused the other, from my information, of being a double agent, while being a CIA agent.

Olsen: Can you name for us a few of the top people who you felt or believed at that time to be persons who had close connections with the Cuban and American underground syndicate -- underworld syndicate?

Sturgis: Senator or ex-Senator Rolando Masferrer. I have something in there that I would like to give you so that you will know his whole background. And then another Senator who at one time was involved in drugs -- I can't think of his name. Masferrer was called El Tigre, the tiger. He was a Senator under Batista, an ex-Communist, and an ex-member of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in Spain. He owns a newspaper in Miami called Libertad. And he was very much in touch with the crime syndicate, the American crime syndicate in Havana, plus the Cuban crime syndicate. Anyway, Senator Masferrer, because of his loyalty to General Batista, under the protection and auspices of General Batista, formed army of approximately 2,000 men, a private army, which supposedly was like the muscles of Batista. If Batista wanted to get rid of any of his enemies, Masferrer was there to do the muscle work. He kept the heat off the G-2, which was the Cuban Intelligence Service. I would say many of the ex-Senators that came into exile during Batista's time had contact with the U.S. underworld. This one man, this one Senator, I am trying to remember his name, was involved so much with the U.S. underworld and drugs that the American Government at one time threatened Batista to stop the sale of all legal drugs into Cuba because of this man. And this man today is living in Miami Beach.

Olsen: Is he the Senator whose name you are trying to remember?

Sturgis: Yes. And a very wealthy man.

Navarro: He is the closest friend of President Prio.

Sturgis: Very close to ex-President Carlos Prio.

Olsen: Let's move on from that subject here now to a further exploration of what you did during this period leading up to the Bay of Pigs. Did you operate with the Revolutionary Council?

Sturgis: I had contact with the Revolutionary Council.

Olsen: Did you have contact with Operation Forty.

Sturgis: Yes, sir, I did.

Olsen: And did you have contact with the Brigade?

Sturgis: No sir, not with the Brigade in general. What I did do is, many of the Brigade members -- not many, but some of the Brigade members -- did live at my home. I had a home at Southwest 60th Court.

Olsen: What role did you play in that organization?

Sturgis: Intelligence, training, I did train some of the Brigade members in the Everglades. And I have pictures of the training camp. As a matter of fact, one of the persons I did train is the Vice Mayor of Miami, Manolo Rebozo. I trained many of the intelligence teams for the Brigade.

Olsen: Did you get paid for this activity?

Sturgis: I did not get paid by CIA.

Olsen: Did you get paid by anybody?

Sturgis: Can we just leave that alone right there?

Olsen: You are at liberty at any time, FRANK, to not go into some subject if you don't want to. But the important thing for us here is, we want to find out whether the CIA has been involved in any improper domestic activities in the U.S., and that is why we want, if we can, to get you to discuss as openly with us as possible what your connection with the CIA was.

Sturgis: Well, it is going to be very difficult, Mr. Olsen, for me to really tell you what my connections with the CIA are, because I have nothing to show. But in the record there are documents, CIA documents and memoranda, that show that, for instance, John Dean at the Watergate hearing -- some of the documents, and so forth, CIA documents -- John Dean made a telephone call to Mr. Schlesinger, who at the time was Director of the CIA --

Olsen: Hold up, if you will, right here, FRANK. I want you to tell me not what came out in Watergate hearings from somebody else, I want you to tell me what your relationship was down there as you knew it.

Sturgis: Well, I was associated with the CIA.

Olsen: But I want to know exactly what that association was.

Sturgis: Well, that is what I am trying to put in perspective.

Olsen: I want to have you lay out the facts as clearly as you possibly can lay them out to us, pinpointing as accurately as you possibly can, what your connection with the CIA was during the period of time that the Bay of Pigs operation was being planned and carried out.

Sturgis: Okay. At one period -- and I can't remember the date, I am not sure whether it was before the Bay of Pigs or after the Bay of Pigs -- one of the CIA agents wanted me to assist him.

Olsen: Who is that?

Sturgis: BERNARD L. BARKER. I made contact with Sam, and Sam says, help him.

Olsen: When you say Sam, are you talking about Sam Jennis?

Sturgis: Yes. The idea was FRANK, there are groups here that are breaking the law. We don't want to upset the apple cart in Cuba. You will have to help me, because of many groups, revolutionary groups are breaking the law.

Olsen: So BARKER approached you?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: And what did he approach you for?

Sturgis: Well, there was an operation in effect where a F-4U -- I believe it was an F4U -- Navy fighter plane was bought by some Americans to be used in a bombing raid over Cuba, most likely Havana -- that is the oil refineries.

Olsen: Can I interrupt just a second? That was after the Bay of Pigs, wasn't it?

Sturgis: I am not sure whether it was before or after.

Olsen: Go ahead.

Sturgis: The only way you can find out about that is, I will give you the name, and if you can get in touch with the party, I believe he may have records, I don't know, because my records were destroyed.

Olsen: Anyway, BARKER wanted you to try to give him some help in cooling the thing, is that it?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I told BARKER that I would see what I can do. I made contact with Sam Jennis, and told him what BARKER, as friend of mine, wanted me to do. And he said for me to go and help BARKER.

Olsen: And did you then do some investigation?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: Did you come up with anything?

Sturgis: I sure did.

Olsen: Did you pass that on to BARKER?

Sturgis: Yes sir. I took him to where the airplane was hidden in a hanger and being worked on and ready for a bombing run over the oil refineries in Havana.

Olsen: And was that planned operation then aborted as a result?

Sturgis: It was broken up, and I believe the airplane was confiscated, through the channels, proper channels. The man that was primarily involved in this thing, his name was Bill Johnson.

Olsen: And where was Bill Johnson from?

Sturgis: From Miami.

Olsen: Is he an American?

Sturgis: Yes sir, he is an American citizen. And he lives there today, and he has a business there in that area.

Olsen: Had he been employed to do this by Cuban revolutionaries, do you know?

Sturgis: No sir. He was a mercenary man that would contact Cuban groups and ask them for money, he would do certain things, and make flights, and so forth, over Cuba. I, a number of times, did seek to obtain Bill Johnson's help in the Bahama Islands for bases that were needed (illegible) bases in the Bahama Islands. And Bill did help me on a number of occasions as far as some air penetrations in Cuba. He dug up some pilots for me, not knowing or realizing, I believed, that I was connected with anybody in the CIA.

Olsen: Did you engage in any of this kind of activity yourself similar to what Bill Johnson did?

Sturgis: Yes, I went on a number of these flights.

Olsen: Did you consider yourself kind of a mercenary yourself?

Sturgis: No, sir.

Olsen: Who planned, organized, financed and otherwise involved you in these activities, then, that were directed at Cuba after the Bay of Pigs?

Sturgis: Well, you must remember that I had a position in Cuba with my friends who also had top positions even higher than my position. And I considered myself a revolutionary like them. I assisted my government and various agencies, including the CIA, with no salary in mind. At some time or another where CIA money was used -- for instance, the B-25, I flew with Pedro Diaz Lanz over the city of Havana on October 21, 1959, dropping several hundreds of thousands of leaflets over the city, over the Air Forces base.

Olsen: Who prepared those leaflets?

Sturgis: I had a home on Southwest 60 Court where Diaz Lanz and his two brothers and myself and other people, revolutionary Cubans, lived, and I had a secret printing machine that we printed these leaflets with.

Olsen: What other kind of projects ---

Roethe: Was this financed by the CIA, or at least do you believe it was?

Sturgis: Well, I cannot actually tell you that it was. Because at that period of time I did not know, even though we did have contact with the company. I cannot say, unless I see you as a CIA man give him money, I cannot say I saw him get money from the CIA.

Roethe: Was somebody financing this?

Sturgis: Certainly.

Roethe: And the financing was --

Olsen: Let me follow up on this if I may, Jim. Do you know who directly put up the money to finance that flight with the propaganda leaflets over Havana in October 1959?

Sturgis: October 21, 1959. The money for that operation, no, off hand I don't know directly where that money came from. You would have to ask Commander Pedro Diaz Lanz, or his brother, Marcos, Diaz Lanz.

Olsen: What other projects did you participate in directed at Cuba. Let's talk about after you left from Cuba now.

Sturgis: I did go to the Dominican Republic. I spoke several times with Raphael Trujillo, the President of the Dominican Republic.

Olsen: About what?

Sturgis: About giving help to Pedro Diaz Lanz. And he agreed to. Unfortunately, Pedro did not want to go the Dominican Republic. He stayed in Miami.

Olsen: And what else did you do in terms of activities directed at Cuba?

Sturgis: I went to Guatemala, and I spoke with the President of Guatemala, President Ydigoras.

Olsen: About the same thing, about assistance to Pedro Diaz Lanz?

Sturgis: Not only assistance, but also invasion bases, which President Ydigoras was giving to the Cubans for an invasion of Cuba.

Roethe: Who sponsored those trips?

Sturgis: I would have to think on that particular thing where the money was obtained.

Olsen: At whose request or suggestion did you go to Guatemala for that purpose?

Sturgis: I am not sure at this time.

Olsen: Can you tell us at whose suggestion or request you went to the Dominican Republic and talked to Trujillo?

Sturgis: I was at the Biltmore Terrace Hotel on Miami Beach -- I can't remember the year. But the man who was running, or at least one of the men who was running the Biltmore Terrace Hotel was Norman Rothman. That place was supposedly a hang out of all the top Batista people who came into exile. The top of the Biltmore Hotel was being readied for President Batista, who was in the Dominican Republic. I went to the Biltmore. And I was introduced to an intelligence agent who was a close buddy of General Trujillo's son, who I believe at the time was chief of the Air Force, the Dominican Air Force. This man asked me, or approached me in conversation and told me the General Trujillo would like to speak with the ex-Chief of Air Force, Pedro Diaz Lanz. And if I could make arrangements for the contact between him and Pedro, he would appreciate it. And I did make contact. And Pedro did not want to go to the Dominican Republic. So I said, I will go to the Dominican for you. And I did. And it was set up and arranged by this intelligence agent.

Olsen: The intelligence agent of --- Sturgis: Trujillo. And I was received -- I had carte blanc in the Dominican Republic. I stayed at the top hotel there, I think it was called the Ambassador Hotel there in Santo Domingo. I was received at the palace. I went directly with this intelligence agent to the Presidential office. Trujillo was present in his white uniform. Johnny Abbes, as Chief of Intelligence, was there, a known past Communist, who I believe is still a Communist, or at least playing his little games.

Olsen: FRANK, can you tell me what other projects now you participated in that were directed against Cuba?

Sturgis: Well, I did a number of air and boat operations against Cuba that were not green light operations.

Olsen: Now, tell me what air operations you conducted?

Sturgis: Well, let me tell you the main ones, because I did so many that I couldn't pinpoint them all. One of the main operations -- well, Havana, October 21, 1959, which caused and created an international incident between the U.S. Government and the Cuban Government. A few months later relations were broken because of this incident, it was as excuse, between the governments, relations were completely broken. Another operation I did over the City of Havana with two aircraft, I dropped several hundred thousands of leaflets over that city.

Olsen: When was that?

Sturgis: I forget the date on that. I made a flight over Santiago De Cuba.

Olsen: For what purpose?

Sturgis: Leaflets. I made another flight into Las Villas Province and dropped two underground agents into Las Villas Province with radio equipment.

Olsen: By parachute?

Sturgis: Yes, sir. I made another flight on the south coast of Pinar del Rio Province.

Olsen: For what purpose?

Sturgis: To drop some leaflets there. And I made some bombing runs over Nuevitas. And I dropped four bombs over the City of Nuevitas.

Olsen: What were you trying to hit?

Sturgis: Tobacco warehouses. The idea of that -- it sounds ridiculous -- but the idea of that was, as I made a number of penetrations by air and by boat -- and I thought they were ridiculous to do these things -- not all the operations I did were ridiculous, but from what Sam told me, the purpose of these operations was to test defenses, the radar defenses, their anti-aircraft defenses and their naval defenses. And I would fly in low and slow in a small aircraft, and not necessarily would I do all the trips, but I would organize these trips. And he preferred that I did not go on these trips, but I went.

Olsen: Who is he?

Sturgis: Sam Jennis. And I maintained a good leader of men must take risks.

Olsen: You mean he approved of these trips, but didn't like the idea of you doing it yourself, is that it?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: At whose behest did you make these trips?

Sturgis: Well, most of them by Sam. You must understand this. Again, I will say, I don't know if I told you this on the record, that there are green light operations. A green light operation is an operation that all agencies are involved in. In other words, if the CIA wants to do an operation, especially if it is here in the U.S., for instance, like the Bay of Pigs invasion, every law in the book was broken, because they were smuggling refugees in and out of the countries, guns, explosives. My boat was used for infiltration into Cuba of guns and agents and explosives.

Olsen: In preparation for the Bay of Pigs?

Sturgis: Before and after the Bay of Pigs.

Olsen: What kind of boat did you have?

Sturgis: Well, I had four boats. It think it was a 63-foot Coast Guard cutter that we bought in Norfolk, Virginia. I bought another boat --

Olsen: When you say we bought that boat in Norfolk, Virginia, when was that bought?

Sturgis: Let me say, Pedro Diaz Lanz went down to Norfolk, Virginia, and put the money up, and so forth, and he and his brother and myself took it back from Norfolk, Virginia, and brought it down here to Miami.

Olsen: With what money did you buy it?

Sturgis: Again, I have a blank thing here in my mind at that particular time as to where that particular money came from.

Olsen: Who put the money up, Pedro Diaz Lanz.

Sturgis: He, himself? No. He was given money to buy all this equipment.

Olsen: But you don't know by whom?

Sturgis: Right now, no sir, I don't know who gave him the money for these boats.

Olsen: Anyway, did the boat get registered in your name?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: This Coast Guard cutter?

Sturgis: Yes, sir, all four boats were registered in my name, the Coast Guard cutter, of which I have the pictures -- and I think I have the numbers on that.

Olsen: And what other boat do you have?

Sturgis: I have another boat, which was a 63 foot yacht called the Quesa.

Olsen: And who bought that boat?

Sturgis: Pedro Diaz Lanz and myself.

Olsen: Again, with money that you don't know the source of?

Sturgis: I can't think of it.

Olsen: What I am trying to do is speed up these things. I don't want to hear the story about each boat. I am trying to get at the guts of these things. What other boats did you have?

Sturgis: I had two 60-foot fiberglass boats that we bought from Bertram Yacht Company, two sixty footers that did approximately 50 miles an hour.

Olsen: These were power boats?

Sturgis: Power boats, yes sir.

Olsen: Private launchings, so to speak?

Sturgis: No, sir. I believe they were about -- I think they were maybe 16 feet wide and 30 feet wide.

Olsen: What were they being made for?

Sturgis: For infiltration in and out because of the speed, they did a top speed of fifty miles and hour.

Olsen: Were they manufactured expressly for you?

Sturgis: No, sir. These were new boats that Bertrams were bringing out of the yard as experimental for either racing or for anyone who wanted this type of a yacht for speed.

Roethe: Do you have any indication that any of these boats were paid for by CIA funds? Do you suspect or believe that they were?

Sturgis: Let me say this here. Again, the boats were used for infiltration, and there was CIA infiltration. Now, the person who can really get to the nitty gritty of boats, and so forth, is either Marcos Diaz Lanz -- and I will give you his address in Miami -- Pedro Diaz Lanz, I do not believe he is in Miami, he is the brother of Marcos, I believe that he is in Texas working as a fumigating pilot. And as a matter of fact, Pedro Diaz Lanz was very, very upset by the Bay of Pigs invasion. He was in charge of a special air group with the B-25 that was in my name. It failed, he told them it failed, he didn't like the operation. And he has got a dread, he is very paranoid, that the CIA wants to kill him. I think he is wrong. But unfortunately, I believe he is that paranoid in his mind, and he sees an agent behind every door that wants to kill him. But he has been in touch with the CIA.

Olsen: FRANK, you have mentioned the fact that you and Diaz Lanz, one of them at least, Pedro, acquired these boats, and that these boats were then used in certain operations directed at Cuba. What were these operations?

Sturgis: Infiltrations.

Olsen: When you say infiltrations, are you talking about putting people who are in Cuba?

Sturgis: And taking people out of Cuba, and bringing guns and equipment into Cuba.

Olsen: Now, when were these boats acquired, before the Bay of Pigs?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: And were these trips into Cuba to bring people in, and to take people out of Cuba, and to run guns into Cuba, and so on, conducted both before and after the Bay of Pigs operation?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: How long did they continue after the Bay of Pigs operation?

Sturgis: I don't know, sir. I cannot give you a date.

Olsen: Approximately.

Sturgis: The Bay of Pigs was 1961. Maybe 1962, 1963.

Olsen: Do you still have any of those boats?

Sturgis: No, sir.

Olsen: When were they disposed of?

Sturgis: I turned them over to Diaz Lanz, and Diaz Lanz in turn sold them.

Olsen: And you don't know what will happen to the proceeds?

Sturgis: Well, Diaz Lanz did take most of the proceeds, he gave his brother some, and as a matter of fact, he gave me a little bit, not much, but a little.

Olsen: Do you recollect how much he gave you?

Sturgis: On the boats I think maybe he might have given me a thousand dollars.

Olsen: Did you get all of the directions, and orders, and requests, to make these runs in to Cuba with the boat from Diaz Lanz, or did you get direction and orders from anybody else?

Sturgis: It was a combination. Understand, I did not want Pedro to know that I had contact with the people, because he trusted me explicitly.

Olsen: You didn't want him to know that you had contact with what people?

Sturgis: Well, for instance, I would make in a round-about way contact for Pedro with other Cuban people, different agencies and so forth.

Olsen: You have got me confused, now. I don't know what agencies or people you are talking about here now that you didn't want Pedro Diaz Lanz to know about.

Sturgis: I am getting a little ahead. For instance, if BARKER wanted to meet certain people, he would call me and say, FRANK, I would like to meet so and so, do you know him, or can you get contact with him? And I would say, yes, and then I would make contact and take these parties to BARKER to see what BARKER would want of the person.

Olsen: Did you ever get any directions with respect to any of these boat or air operations directed at Cuba from anybody else whom you knew was an official or agent of the CIA?

Sturgis: Let me say that I suspect, it will be an easier word for me.

Olsen: But none that you knew?

Sturgis: Let's say that I suspected of being a CIA agent, yes, I have received orders from them to do operations.

Olsen: But again FRANK, did you ever receive any directions or instructions or requests to conduct any of these boat or air operations against Cuba from somebody whom you knew to be an agent of the CIA? I will come back to the business of suspicion here later, but I first want to get an answer to that question.

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: Who?

Sturgis: Sam Jennis.

Olsen: Now, what operation or operations were you asked to conduct directed at Cuba by Sam Jennis?

Sturgis: I was asked to assist Conte Aguerro.

Olsen: You were asked to do what with respect to Dr. Conte Aguerro?

Sturgis: To assist him in air operations, that Conte Aguerro would get the money. And I was to organize an air group to do several air drops into Cuba, and pay the expenses and pay, not salaries, but pay the expenses for the operation.

Olsen: Were you then paid by Dr. Conte Aguerro?

Sturgis: Well, Dr. Conte Aguerro used to ask me, well, FRANK, what would it cost to organize and do an air lift raid over Cuba? And I would sit down with him and go over the figures of what I would have to do, and the money that would have to be laid out and so forth.

Olsen: And then did he pay for that?

Sturgis: He would give the money to me. For instance, I told him, here is a figure here, this, this, let's make a round figure of $5,000 to do air operations.

Olsen: But did he then pay you?

Sturgis: Yes he would give me the money, he never paid me.

Olsen: What is the difference between his paying you and giving you the money?

Sturgis: There is such a thing as, if you want to get paid, that means each week you get paid a set salary.

Olsen: If I sell you an automobile for $5,000 and you pay me $5,000 for that automobile, that doesn't mean you are going to do it every week, does it?

Sturgis: He is a good lawyer, I can't win that particular point with you. You are right.

Olsen: So he paid you the $5,000 or whatever the figure was whenever you did one of these projects for him?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: Did Sam Jennis put you in touch with him, or did he direct you to do this for him?

Sturgis: No, he directed me to do this to make contacts with Conte Aguerro, which I did. And evidently whatever progressed between them too, I did the operation.

Olsen: Did Sam Jennis have any occupation or function other than as an agent of the CIA?

Sturgis: To be very honest with you, I never asked him, I don't know.

Olsen: Do you have any reason to believe he was devoting 100 percent of his time to the CIA?

Sturgis: This would have lead me to believe that he was an official of the CIA. Now, Felix, or Felipe Gutierrez, I know he was in construction.

Olsen: And only maybe part -- maybe a part-time operative? Or was he an operative at all?

Sturgis: No, I believe his business -- everybody had to make a living -- unless you have something as a front.

Olsen: Did you feel that Gutierrez --- were you of the impression that he was a CIA agent?

Sturgis: Oh, yes, certainly. Like I say, I can't say, I can't put my finger on it and say, well, he is a hundred percent. I knew he was, because of my close connection with CIA people.

Olsen: Let me try and sum up something on kind of an overall basis and see if you can tell me that this is correct or incorrect, that during the years after you came back from Cuba in 1959, and for some few years thereafter, you have engaged in a number of operations involving Cuban exiles and Americans that were in one way or another directed at trying to subvert or overthrow the Castro regime in Cuba?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: That you did so under arrangements where you were asked sometimes to do something, and you would get paid for it?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: Kind of a job-by-job basis, is that a fair statement?

Sturgis: Right.

Olsen: And is it a fair statement that at no time did you know that the money that was being paid to you was or was not CIA money?

Sturgis: Sometimes I did know it was CIA money.

Olsen: Now tell me when you knew it was CIA money.

Sturgis: When my B-25 bomber was at the Miami International Airport to be ready for operation, or to be operational, I knew that the money that Diaz Lanz received to make the payment for the repairs of the B-25 came from CIA.

Olsen: Now did he tell you it came from CIA?

Sturgis: Certainly.

Olsen: Was there a time when the Bay of Pigs operation was being planned?

Sturgis: Yes, sir.

Olsen: Was it intended that your aircraft were going to be used in connection with that operation?

Sturgis: Yes sir. The same thing with the boat, the money that came to maintain the boat for the operation of CIA.

Olsen: Who told you this?

Sturgis: Pedro Diaz Lanz.

Olsen: So that both with respect to the maintenance of your boats and maintenance of the aircraft, Pedro told you that the money was provided for taking care of that was provided him in turn by the CIA?

Sturgis: Yes. He told me that the boats, or the airplanes, needed repairs. And I told him to go see BARKER and get the money. And that is exactly what he did, he went to see BARKER.

Olsen: Did you ever discuss that with BARKER?

Sturgis: I am not sure, really. Again, I am going back into something as detail, whether I told him hey, there was money needed for repairs of the plane, get the money or not, I just told Diaz Lanz to go see BARKER, and to get the boat - get the airplane operational, and that he would give me the money. And that he would get the money. And he did get the money.

Olsen: That is the kind of information that I have been seeking. I am trying to pin down what the money was for, who told you it was CIA money, and what steps were taken that led to your getting the money. Were there any other operations or expenditures that you had which you feel you are on strong, sound ground in saying were financed by the CIA?

Sturgis: I was asked to do an assassination.

Olsen: By whom?

Sturgis: Can I hold back on that?

Olsen: No, I would prefer that you tell us, if you will.

Sturgis: It was never carried out.

Olsen: That is all right.

Sturgis: I was contacted by this agent -- I am trying to go ahead and think of the date again, because again I will say, I had notes, and I keep them so far, and then I destroy them. And I did tell the Senate Watergate Committee that a friend of mine who was a CIA agent contacted me and asked me if I would do an assassination. And I told him I would. He said, good. Then, I will pass it on to my superior. And he made contact with me later, at a later date. I believe we had -- I am not sure -- I think we had either lunch or dinner at some ranch house.

Olsen: Is this in Miami?

Sturgis: Yes.

Olsen: First of all, can you go back and tell me when you were approached by this friend of yours.

Sturgis: This is why I say, I can't remember by the exact date, and maybe by talking --

Olsen: How about, if you give us the season of what year?

Roethe: How about just the year?

Sturgis: I can't remember the year.

Roethe: This is after you got back from Cuba, obviously?

Sturgis: Yes, it had to be. Let me see if I can narrow it down just about what year. Let's see. It had to be either before the Bay of Pigs, which is 1961, or after the Bay of Pigs, which again could be 1961. So I would say approximately it would be 1961.

Olsen: Then where were you approached?

Sturgis: In Miami.

Olsen: And is this somebody, FRANK, for the moment, let's defer to your wishes, or your reservations, at least, by naming them. But is this somebody whom you knew to be employed by the CIA?

Sturgis: No, sir.

Olsen: Is it somebody who you knew to be a contract agent of the CIA?

Sturgis: No sir. All I knew is that he was an agent, and at a later date, it was proven he was an agent. So my contacts with this man throughout the years, how he worked, my close contact with him, in Miami, the way of operation, the way he handles himself, the people that he was in close contact with, that the top political and military people who were in exile that he was in touch with, the formation of the Bay of Pigs itself before the invasion, came through this particular man. He was part of the forming of this -- at least of the Revolutionary Council. And I was approached by him and I told Sam about it. I said, Sam, what do you think? The idiot -- I hope this never gets publicized.

Olsen: Trust us.

Sturgis: I said, this idiot took me out, and we had some lunch, and he asked me if I wanted to do an assassination, or if I would do an assassination attempt for the outfit. And I looked him square in the face and I told him why did you come to me? And he says, well, FRANK, like, who else? You are a man that the Chief knows your background, and I know your background, and I know you are capable. And you are a capable man. And if anybody can do it, you can do it. But the thing is, would you be interested? And I said, yes I would be.

Olsen: Did he talk to you about a sum of money?

Sturgis: No, no money was -- the discussion of money was not involved in it, because I would not do anything for money. And he knows better than to ask me, unless it would be, FRANK, what do you need for your expenses?

Olsen: Who was the target of this assassination? Was it Fidel?

Sturgis: No. I don't know. What happened was that I had another meeting with him, and he said he would contact his Chief, and he would -- and he told me to contact him later on, and I think he gave me a certain day to contact him, and I said okay. You must remember that, how I know this man as an agent, because he does the same things as I do, in his wife, he types away, or at least he has a wife who types away, he makes all the reports, and stacks them in a file cabinet. I have heard him talk to his Case Officer on the telephone. And to me that was very stupid of him in doing that event to me who was his friend. That is a very stupid way of doing things. Because he did not suspect that I was in contact with Sam, he cannot know. And the only time he suspected that I had anything to do with the CIA is when we were in prison, and the man on the television said, yes, he used to work for the CIA.

Olsen: When you say CIA, you were talking about the Watergate, not the other agent and me?

Sturgis: I am talking about the agent and me, who was part of the Watergate group. And he was dumbfounded and said, what, you work for CIA? And I said, yes sir, you dumb bastard you, I was turning you in to my case officer.

Olsen: So neither one of you suspected --

Sturgis: I knew he was an agent, but I didn't know that I was in contact -- I never used the word -- or at least I don't think I did, and I hope I haven't used it today -- that I said I was an employee of CIA.

Olsen: No, I haven't even said that you were an agent of the CIA.

Sturgis: Or that I was connected with the CIA.

Olsen: Now, who was the target of this conversation about assassination?

Sturgis: I had a second meeting with him at the Ranch House and he told me, he says, well, this is interesting FRANK. He said, about his assassination, and I said, fine. I did. And then he started to questioning, how would you do it? And I said, how do you mean how I would do it? There are several ways of trying to do an assassination. The things I have to know is who the person is, that is number 1, it is important, and where the person is at, which is important. And then, I will have to go ahead and go to the place where this man lives or what have you, after I know this information. And I said then, I can go ahead and tell you how I can do it. And he said, with a body, this and that, he will be discovered, you know we can't be connected with it. And I said, well, if you are worried about that, you do it. And he said, well, I can't do it. And I said, Okay, beautiful. And I want -- I wanted to tell you something, I will do this, because you are a friend of mine, and because you asked me. But I will want more than that. And he said what is that? I said I want it from somebody higher than you, from somebody with authority. If you tell me -- and you are my friend, and I believe you -- but I want it more from somebody that has some authority. You have a case officer. I want your case officer to tell me to do an assassination plot, and I will do it. But coming from you, you are my friend, my buddy, but I have got to have more than that for my protection.

Olsen: Did he ever put you in contact with his case officer?

Sturgis: I knew who his boss was.

Olsen: Who was his boss?

Sturgis: EDUARDO. Wait a minute. I am sorry. I could be wrong there. I said the wrong thing. If I am going after the Bay of Pigs invasion, if this did happen, as far as the date is concerned, after the Bay of Pigs invasion, EDUARDO did quit the operation and go on some other assignment or what have you. So that means he was no longer in the Miami area. So this part I had to get a new case officer.

Olsen: EDUARDO left Miami before the Bay of Pigs, didn't he?

Sturgis: He left after -- well, I don't know, I am sorry. Because there is the possibility that he may have been either in Miami or he may have been in the Headquarters in Washington. But I can't pin it down because I don't know exactly where he was at.

Olsen: Did he ever make contacts with the man's case officer?

Sturgis: No, sir, because it had to be one of two people, it either had to be EDUARDO, whom I had never met, or it had to be possibly (Deleted) [Esterline], after EDUARDO left.

Olsen: Did (Deleted) take his place then.

Sturgis: I believed so, I believe (Deleted) did take his place as this party's case officer.

Olsen: And then, you did not actually have any contact with his case officer?

Sturgis: When I told him that, I think it kind of stung him a little bit. And he said, well, okay, all right. Then, you will go through with it? And I said certainly I will go through with it, I don't care who the hell it is. I said, you let me know. And hopefully, I was thinking of Fidel Castro, because I could have snuck in to Cuba, I have done it so many times, and I would have taken a crack at killing Fidel.

Roethe: I missed something when I was out of the room. I take it you did not know the identity of the person whom you were being asked to assassinate?

Sturgis: No, sir, I did not. I asked him -- you see, I didn't publish it, in other words, I was told no publicity. I was told, because Sam says go ahead and work with him and he said let me know what is progressing.

Roethe: Is Sam what you would call your case officer?

Sturgis: Sam is my contact, the one I was connected with.

Roethe: And you would always go to him before you would go ahead with some action like this?

Sturgis: Oh, exactly. I wouldn't do anything unless I received an okay from somebody.

Roethe: Did you have any idea that this had anything to do with Cuba?

Sturgis: It always had to do with Cuba.

Roethe: You were aware that this assassination had something to do with Cuba?

Sturgis: I was thinking that if it did, I could have been wrong. I was thinking it could have something to do with Cuba.

Roethe: Did Sam seem to know anything about the subject -- about this, or did this seem to come as a surprise?

Sturgis: It was a surprise. He was surprised that my friend approached me on something like this. And he said, don't say no. I said I will do it to anybody. I said Sam, if it is all right, if this case officer -- Sam said, tell me who the case officer is, and if it is true, okay.

Roethe: What was your motivation for saying that you would do this?

Sturgis: Do you know what a whore is?

Roethe: Do I know what a whore is?

Sturgis: Yes.

Roethe: I guess I do.

Sturgis: I don't mean to go ahead and embarrass you. I am sorry. But in intelligence a whore is an agent that they would want that would do anything. But he has got to be motivated by patriotism. And that he would do anything for his country, regardless of what it was.

Roethe: Assuming that it was something that an official request made on behalf of the government?

Sturgis: Well, you would think that if it was case officer -- and you would be surprised how powerful a case officer -- what power a case officer has in his hands. He has got a lot of power.

Olsen: Thank you very much, FRANK.

(Whereupon at 6:00 p.m. the interview was concluded).

In a telephone interview with Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission on April 22, 1975 it was noted: "Wants to correct something. Park Wollan was Council General but Sturgis didn't contact him. It was Paterson, called him Bill. Was CIA Agent there, left CIA later after getting to be Chief of Station in Santiago. Sturgis was in touch with Wollan, possibly met him. (Deleted) and (Deleted) were in Havana."

Sturgis told Paul Meskil: "We met at the Casa Grande Hotel in Santiago. Wollan knew who I was and what I was doing. He approached me or someone introduced us. We had several other meetings and discussed my patriotism and so forth. I agreed to work with him. Later, when the revolution was over, I received orders to go to Havana. Wollan told me who to contact in the American Embassy there." Sturgis said his contact at the Embassy was Sam Kail.

ADDRESS BOOK

Page 18 contained the words "Alex Kleinrer 'Loma' Industries" - Max Lowenstein of Loma was of interest to OO/C in 1956. Kleinrerer p75; CIA 1294-481, 515-217, 518-219, 646-277, 646-277; WCD 911; FBI 62-109060-2424 inks & ID. Phone interview: "I would rather get together, I don't like the phone, its a little bit delicate the whole situation. I moved to NY in 1970. Loma Industries was a plastic company which made industrial plastic and housewares. OSWALD applied for job there but never got it. I used to work there 15, 16 years ago."

The address "1318 1/2 Garfield, Norman Oklahoma" was found in OSWALD'S address book. Mae Logan, who owned this property from 1961 to 1967, was contacted in August 1993. She stated that several white teenagers along with one black lived in the top part of a rental unit she owned between 1962-1963. "They quit payin' the rent, got into drugs and were arrested in Phoenix. There was lady who lived up there to begin with. She got cancer and went to the M.D. Anderson Hospital. Her father and mother had died of cancer two years ago." Logan was never questioned by the FBI. The name "Robert Odum RI-7-2071" was found in OSWALD'S address book. A Robert E. Odum, of Dallas, was a control tower operator at Love Field. The FBI claimed this name was Robert Adams Dallas of the Texas State Employment Office.

Marina Oswald's cookbook contained the numbers P.E. 7-5402, W.A. 6-3741.

OSWALD'S address book contained name Russ Brothorgan 1733 Spring.

Address book contained name Bill Stuckey 529-2274. OS Memo has two paragraphs deleted "It now appears that Bill Stuckey in all probability is William K. Stuckey, a former newspaper man now engaged in Public Relations who in the summer of 1963 interviewed OSWALD regarding his participation in a pro-Castro campaign in New Orleans" - CIA 1301-476

OSWALD'S address book contained telephone number for U.S. Government Switchboard, Fort Worth, Texas; the city of Arlington, Texas; City of Fort Worth switchboard, Federal Court Clerks office, U.S. Court House, Fort Worth and Tarrant County Criminal Courts Building. - NARA 1993.05.24.09:22:06:15000

OSWALD had notation 1612 Hurley. These were apartments in Fort Worth one of which was vacant. OSWALD had notation "Criner Bewly Bign. con. con. service." It was that of Maybell Criner Career and Finishing School at 513 Bewley Building where Virginia Valle did typing for OSWALD.

The addresses and telephone numbers of Soviet intellectuals appeared in OSWALD'S address book under names other than their own; for example, N.N. Krechetovich, a scientist who specialized in designing servo mechanisms was listed under "Lida." OSWALD'S address book contained numerous Russian names, sometimes noted as teachers, and many of these were associated with foreign language institutes in the USSR at that time. Some of these names appeared in early versions of the Name List With Traces, but not in later ones. OSWALD recorded the addresses of the East German, West German, Argentine, Polish and Dutch Embassies in his address book.

Besides using his post office box as a dead drop, OSWALD may have made pay phone-to-pay phone telephone calls to insure his conversations were not monitored. A slip of paper among his possessions contained a telephone number that was listed as a pay station in the lobby of a Fort Worth building. [WCE 2189 p641] This might have been his mother's place of work.

AMERICANS FOR FREEDOM

After James Buchanan wrote his newspaper articles about OSWALD in Miami, the FBI investigated him for violations of the Neutrality Act. James Buchanan was a member of Americans For Freedom. Americans For Freedom was headed by former International Anti-Communist Brigade member Edward Arthur and Claire Arthur Chennault, the son of Air Force General Claire Chennault. Arthur Chennault, Americans For Freedom Air Commander, had been discharged from the Army for impersonating an officer. In 1960 Arthur Chennault claimed to be a Air Force Captain and called Army Intelligence in West Berlin. He said he had been kidnapped and brought to East Germany but had escaped. [FBI 105-123828-26] Charles Ashman represented Americans for Freedom. In August 1963 Americans For Freedom had reactivated its plan to bomb Havana's oil refineries, this time employing Batista-owned P-51 fighter planes.

In the course of attempting to get reviews for my Dylan To English Dictionary I telephoned Sam Chennault, the music critic for New Times, an alternative newspaper in Miami. When I pointed him to this information he commented, "General Claire Chennault is my great-grandfather, but I don't have an uncle by the name of Arthur Chennault. After reading this, I checked with other family members and there's no one on our side of the family with that name or that story. There is no such person as Claire Arthur Chennault. I would know, as I child I spent a lot of time with Claire's children. I'm not saying this to "stick up" for my family (I certainly disagree with a lot of my grandfather's opinions and actions, and am shameful for the actions of Anna) but it's a fact that there's no one by this name. After WWII, there were many people who claimed to be part of our family for one reason or another. I don't know..."

BOLTON FORD INCIDENT

On January 20, 1961, two members of Friends of Democratic Cuba attempted to purchase several pickup trucks from Oscar Deslatte of Bolton Ford. One of them used the name LEE OSWALD. The FBI reported: "On November 25, 1963, Mr. William A. Watson, Vice-President, Bolton Ford Company, New Orleans, telephonically advised his truck manager informed him that the Friends of Democratic Cuba had made a bid on a truck and that the bid was signed by OSWALD. Another name appeared on the bill and believed to be Joseph Moler. He stated all information would be available through his truck manager, Fred Sewell." [NARA 124-10248-10153]

Fred Sewell told an investigator for Jim Garrison:

I think that Oscar Deslatte wrote that on there, LEE OSWALD, but he didn't use the name HARVEY, just LEE OSWALD if I remember right. Yes, it's been six years of course. He represented himself as LEE OSWALD. He's the man that spoke up and said, 'I'm the man handling the money. You ought to have my name too...I would say that the men were in there that I could see them maybe an hour...So then when the President was assassinated and the name came out, Oscar come in either the next morning or the morning after and said, "Say Fred, do you remember those two guys who was in here from Cuba trying to get some buses cheap? And I said, 'Yes.' He said, 'I think that one of those men was the one who killed the President.' I said, 'Aw, you're kidding.' and he said 'We've got a piece of paper around here somewhere with a bid on it.' He went and hauled that piece of paper out and then Oscar called the FBI...The FBI come down and picked it up with two pieces of plastic. They didn't even put their fingerprints on it. And slid these two pieces of plastic on each side of it and offered us a receipt for it and took it with them." Fred Sewell was asked by Jim Garrison: "In other words they expected to find fingerprints on it?" Sewell: "Yes, but I don't think the man ever touched it, really. We did, but I don't think he did. Then Oscar come to me and he said, 'I got some kind of Freedom or Free Democrats of Cuba' or something. He had a name for it. He come in my office and he said kind of contributing to Cuba. He said they want ten buses or they want to bid on ten buses. Do you want to give them a good deal on it? Well, I said, seeing that they're having a hard time down there let's make it $50 over cost for each one of them." [James L. Alcock to Garrison 5.2.67]

The files of the New Orleans FBI Office do not show that Fred Sewell was ever interviewed in regard to the Bolton Ford Incident.

OSCAR DESLATTE

Oscar Deslatte, another employee of Bolton Ford, confirmed the report of Fred Sewell in a conversation with the FBI: "Joseph Moore," and an unidentified Cuban male, insisted Oscar Deslatte sell them trucks at cost because they would be used against Castro. Joseph Moore said he was an ex-Marine who was involved in training the invasion brigade. He wrote his name and bid on a piece of paper and handed it to Oscar Deslatte. Joseph Moore then asked Oscar Deslatte to return the slip, and changed the name on it to "OSWALD." OSWALD was in the Soviet Union in 1961. [WCD 75 p677; FBI 67-39565-66; FBI FOIA req. Banister 105-95587-1 p10] In 1979 the FBI released copies of the records of Oscar Deslatte.

The words "Friends of Democratic Cuba" and "OSWALD" appeared. [Memo 5.9.67 To: Garrison From: Alcock.] The FBI ran a file check on Joseph Moore on January 9, 1968. Most of the serials were non-identifiable. Serials 25-20038, 26-24044, 162-436 were followed by question marks. Serial 88-6623 had nothing next to it. The rest of the serial were marked "Not Identifiable." [FBI New Orleans 89-69-3730]

HEMMING did not believe the Bolton Ford incident took place:

There's no logical connection at all. Nobody used any trucks during the Bay of Pigs. There were no fucking trucks. Maybe they were trying to con him. Sounds like some Cuban trying to get a deal. Never heard of Moore.

In interview in April 1993 with Fred A. Sewell he stated he had been interviewed by the FBI. This was untrue. He was never interviewed by FBI - 62-109060-6057 p17. Sewell claimed that in 1962 OSWALD came from Russia to Cuba then from Cuba to New Orleans. The incident occurred in 1961. Sewell, 80, also claimed he saw Robert Oswald through one-way glass in New Orleans. Sewell was out of it.

Dewey Bradford related how OSWALD came into Morgan's Gun Shop on November 1, 1963, and grabbed the rifle he was examining right out of his hands; he also noticed OSWALD'S military bearing and "repugnant and obnoxious attitude." Bradford said OSWALD purchased ammunition for a rifle, caliber unknown. Bradford's story was unconfirmed.

MARIO BERMUDEZ

DeLesseps Morrison was connected to Mario Enrique Bermudez Quinones, who headed International House in New Orleans. When Morrison sought FBI information on Bermudez, it reported: "We never investigated Mario Bermudez and our files contain no information indicating he was a homosexual." The CIA reported, "Mario Bermudez Quinones - no traces" [CIA Increment 100-300-17] and "Mario Bermudez Nunez - Station files very sketchy. No indication ever used by JMWAVE. Notations on Subject's (deleted)." [CIA 100-300-17 12.30.67] William Sullivan recommended the State Department be informed of Morrison's request for information on Bermudez, and that future inquiries by Morrison be referred to State. Bermudez was associated with Will C. Brady, who frequented the Ryder Coffee Shop on Ramparts Street. Brady was a former Senatorial aide and a homosexual. OSWALD was alleged to have been seen at the home of the owner of this coffee shop, Jack J. Frazier, by Andrew Champion. "Champion was in January 1965 a source of information." [FBI 62-109060-4705] This allegation was unsubstantiated. [NARA FBI 124-10027-10209]

HENRY L. BRETTON

On January 14, 1975 the CIA generated this:

MEMORANDUM for (Deleted) SA/ADDO

SUBJECT: Name Trace - Henry L. Bretton and Praeger Publishing Corporation.

REFERENCE: OGC 75-0088 January 10, 1975.

1. In response to the referent request, we have checked IP, OSG/OC, FR, DCD, ITG, and CI files with the following results:

- a. IP -- 201-153109
- b. OSG/OC -- no record.
- c. FR -- no record
- d. DCD -- see attachment.
- e. ITG -- no record f. CI -- no record g. CCS -- see below.

a. The IP 201 file indicated Subject was a former OSS man who had used the name Henry Bismark. He was met by Contact Division in 1964, apparently on several occasions due to his plans to accept a position with the University of Accra, Ghana. At that time he indicated he did not want to get involved with the Agency. There is no paper in the file after 1964.

b. CCS reported various agency contacts with Praeger but CCS itself had no such contacts. (Deleted)

2. The results of this check are forwarded in this format to allow you to respond as you may wish to OCC who had requested an answer by January 13, 1975. This confirms my phone conversation of this date. (Deleted) Chief, OSC/OC.

The Office of Security records indicated Bretton was born May 18, 1916 in Berlin, Germany: "In July 1945 Bretton who was an Army enlisted man attached to MIS (Fws) FID was under consideration for transfer to OSS. An investigation at that time raised questions as to Bretton's political sympathies. Consequently Bretton was security disapproved in August 1945 for transfer to OSS." Bretton was upset about this and visited the Security Office.

In July 1956 Bretton was of interest to the Domestic Collection Division as a potential source of foreign intelligence information. In connection with this interest, National Agency Name Check was conducted on Bretton at Army Intelligence...Another name check on Bretton in August 1963 of the file of the Counter Intelligence Records Facility, Army Intelligence Center, disclosed that Bretton was investigated in August and September 1955 by the CIC (Deleted) The results of this investigation were reportedly favorable to Bretton. Based on past (1945) unresolved questions regarding Bretton's political orientation, Bretton was security disapproved in September 1961 as (Deleted) stay completely away from Bretton.

HUNT told the SSCIA:

After Allen Dulles' resignation and retirement, I was assigned for about a period of a week to the Covert Action Staff and then I was transferred to the newly set up Domestic Operations Division under Tracy Barnes, which was really the Commercial Operations Division under Tracy Barnes, although it was never so called. I was the first Chief of Covert Action for the DOD and we inherited as a new division a number of projects that had been running for a period of time, that had been run by the commercial staff of the Agency and by a number of the geographic divisions.

The purpose of turning these ongoing projects over to the Domestic Operations Division was to centralize contacts with publishers in the United States for the benefit of geographic divisions such as the Asian or Far East Division which might want a book published on (Deleted) for a particular purpose. They would come to Tracy Barnes for a particular request. And I should say that the relationship with the (Deleted) Publishing Company had been in existence for quite a period of time and I think they were managed by Cord Meyer International Division, if I'm not mistaken, or possibly the Covert Action Staff. But what we received were ongoing operations. We were sent the case files for the (deleted) project for the (deleted) for the (deleted)."

GEORGE BUSH

On November 29, 1963, J. Edgar Hoover sent the Bureau of Intelligence and Research of the State Department a memorandum that summarized the November 23, 1963, briefing given to "Mr. George Bush of the CIA," Defense Intelligence Agency Captain William Edwards and FBI S.A. W.T. Forsyth in Washington, D.C., concerning the reaction of the anti-Castro Cuban community in Miami to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. During the 1988 presidential campaign, Joseph McBride of The Nation claimed that the George Bush mentioned in the memorandum was George Herbert Walker Bush, who had been appointed Director of the Central Intelligence Agency in 1976. A Vice Presidential spokesman denied this. Richard Helms noted: "I don't recall anyone by that name working for the agency...He certainly never worked for me." Shortly after Joseph McBride's article appeared, CIA countered that the George Bush named in the memo was not the Vice President, but referred to George William Bush, who worked for the Agency during the period in question. Joseph McBride tracked down George William Bush, who told him he had been employed by the CIA for six months between 1963 and 1964, but never received interagency briefings, since he was "just a lowly researcher and analyst" who worked with photographs and documents concerning coastlines and landing beach sites. After leaving the CIA in 1964, George William Bush joined Captain William Edwards at the Defense Intelligence Agency. Joseph McBride quoted a Defense Intelligence Agency spokesman who confirmed that George William Bush worked there, performing the same duties he had with the CIA.

George Herbert Walker Bush flatly denied he was the person named in the memo: "I was in Houston, Texas, at the time...I was running for Senate in late 1963." George Herbert Walker Bush's statement was supported by this FBI report: "On November 22, 1963, Mr. George H.W. Bush, 5525 Briar, Houston, Texas, [the middle initials of George Bush's were H.W. and in 1963 he lived at 5525 Briar] telephonically advised...that one James Parrott has been talking of killing the President when he comes to Houston." (Kennedy visited Houston the day before he flew to Dallas.) James Parrott was a volunteer for the Harris County Republican Party, which Bush then chaired. James Parrott was contacted in April 1993: "At the time I was active with the Young Republicans and Young Americans for Freedom...We picketed Russian clergy who were KGB agents and other things, so they started rumors on me. George had heard the rumor. It was character assassination by the liberals out here. Republicans weren't supposed to go out and picket." A Dallas FBI report stated that "United States Secret Service at Houston, Texas, had received a report that James Parrott stated in 1961 he would kill President Kennedy." James Parrott was asked about this: "We were active politically...the John Birch Society was backing us. And George Bush came down for the John Tower campaign, he was campaign chairman at that time for that election." By 1993 James Parrott was a Republican precinct chairman and head of the Conservative Republican association. There was no report of George Herbert Walker Bush traveling to Washington, D.C., on November 23, 1963, nor did the name of George Herbert Walker Bush appear in any other Warren Commission document. George William Bush described his cover position with the Agency to Joseph McBride. A month later Joseph McBride admitted: "There was [only] a minor discrepancy in George William Bush's account of his background." [David Armstrong Austin Chronicle as cited in Realist 9.92; The Nation McBride 7.16.88, 8.13.88]

George Bush has observed: "I believed the Warren Commission. I saw no reason to question it." George Bush asked CIA official Seymour Bolton about a news story connecting OSWALD to the CIA. This article concerned the "laying on of interviews" by the CIA. [The Washington Star 10.1.76] In a Memorandum dated October 4, 1976, George Bush asked: "Will this cause problems for Helms?" Seymour Bolton replied that the article "will further smear Helms' reputation and probably cause him some anxious moments, but I do not see how it could result in any additional legal problems for him, as it is a gross distortion of the facts."

THE CANCELLATION OF THE 1972 ELECTIONS????

In 1970 a rumor was printed in William Howard's Newhouse News Service weekly gossip column about a Rand Corporation study done for the NIXON Administration to determine the feasibility of canceling the 1972 election if radicals threatened to disrupt it. The Wall Street Journal wrote on April 24, 1970, that rumors of the study were hard to spike. The New York Times reported: "Rumors were heard in April and spread quickly across the country that the Rand Corporation was preparing a secret study on the implications of cancellation of the 1972 election." Henry S. Rowan of the Rand Corporation released this statement carried by The Wall Street Journal on May 13, 1970: "The Rand Corporation has not undertaken such a study. It does not contemplate making such a study, nor has it been approached by anyone with a proposal for such a study." Henry S. Rowan was the President of the Rand Corporation at the time this rumor was circulating. Rowan was a former professor at Stanford University who joined the Rand Corporation. He was a former member of the Kennedy Administration, having served as Paul Nitze's deputy in the Pentagon. Rowan was chairman of the CIA's National Intelligence Council from 1981 to 1983, under DCI William Casey. He was a consultant to the CIA from 1983 to 1989. He was also on the staff of the Hoover Institute in 1986. From 1989 to 1991, he was assistant secretary for international affairs. Seymour Hersh reported:

...Kissinger telephone Henry Rowan, president of Rand Corporation and asked him to put together list of possible options for the Vietnam war. Rowan put Daniel Ellsberg in charge. By this time Ellsberg and the Rand Corporation as a whole were widely regarded inside the bureaucracy as having gone 'dovish' on Vietnam. Kissinger had insisted that Rand's involvement in the policy be kept a secret, a condition to which Ellsberg and Rowan agreed. Ellsberg was fresh from researching a detailed history of American involvement in the Vietnam War that had been assembled in the Pentagon, at McNamara's direction, by a team headed by Morton Halperin and Leslie H. Gelb, then deputy director of the planning staff. Ellsberg consulted with Halperin and Gelb on the Kissinger option study, in which he analyzed contingencies ranging from an invasion of North Vietnam to unilateral withdrawal...

After Ellsberg released the study that he had conducted for the Pentagon in June 1971 - the Pentagon Papers - Henry Rowan, Leslie Gelb, Morton Halperin and Robert McNamara appeared on NIXON'S enemies list.

MEMO REGARDING CANCELLATION OF THE 1972 ELECTIONS

In or about July 1970, Sidney Zion of Scanlan's Magazine obtained this alleged memorandum:

Memorandum page 2 of 4 pages

CONFIDENTIAL March 11, 1970

THE VICE PRESIDENT WASHINGTON

and the Rand team agrees that a judicious leak of a general nature concerning segment alpha of their study for the C/E [Counter-Espionage?], that relative to holding no national elections in 1972, to the media (selected, of course) at the right time to test the water, so to speak, is a vital step in the eventuation of their scheme. However, under no, repeat no, circumstances is any information regarding segment beta of their study, the repeal of the Bill of Rights, to be made public.

New Developments:

A- Let's call this one "Operation U.S.A. All The Way." We've spoken to some of our key contacts in labor and broadly hinted (without any definite promise although I believe that we will have to deliver eventually) that the administration would back protectionism, repudiate the substance of the Kennedy Rounds and give serious consideration to backing legislation on a number of issues they consider crucial. You will be glad to hear that Mitchell's plan of selective funding for certain types of public works construction by geographical area and political advantage has been noted and is beginning to pay dividends.

What we have proposed and what they have substantially accepted is as follows:

* In late April or early May a series of "spontaneous" demonstrations by labor groups publicizing their support of this administration's Indo-China policies and their discontinuance of any silent indulgence of the excesses of peace groups will take place in the larger target cities of New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis and Seattle.

* In New York, Vic Borella is coordinating. He assures us that one auxiliary result of the spontaneous confrontations of Brennan's people with the "long hairs" will be the embarrassment of the Lindsay administration (a development his boss will view with pleasure). Please note that in each afore specified instance a peace-oriented Democratic municipal administration will be embarrassed by the demonstrations. Details on this aspect will follow on.

* Borella is working closely with the New York Field Office, reporting to our specialist, O'Neill.

* On the question of funds, no commitment has been made. Waterman has assured us that we can tap into Rufus Taylor's unaudited "internal security" fund for this operation for whatever we feel.

VICTOR BORELLA

Victor Borella was born in Plymouth, New Hampshire, on October 13, 1906. After his graduation from Dartmouth, he was discovered by his classmate, Nelson Rockefeller. From 1939 to 1942 Borella was the Industrial Relations Director of Rockefeller Center. When Nelson Rockefeller became Coordinator of the Office of Inter-American Affairs, Victor Borella served as his Assistant Coordinator, and Executive Director, from 1942 to 1945. After the war, Victor Borella became Executive Vice President of Rockefeller Center. During the period mentioned in the memorandum, Victor Borella was the chief labor consultant to Governor Nelson Rockefeller. Victor Borella was the recipient of $100,000 gift from Nelson Rockefeller in 1972. This was revealed in October 1974. It was also revealed during the Vice Presidential confirmation hearings of Nelson Rockefeller that one of Nelson Rockefeller's close political associates, John A. Wells, arranged with Arlington House publishers to publish Lasky. Lasky was a witness at these hearings. Victor Lasky testified that Laurence Rockefeller had financed the book. In August 1972 Victor Borella attempted to obtain the endorsements of numerous labor unions, including the construction workers, for NIXON'S presidency. In August 1972 Nelson Rockefeller nominated NIXON for the Presidency, and in January 1975, Victor Borella became a labor consultant to Vice President Nelson Rockefeller. Victor Borella died on July 11, 1975.

In 1967 the CIA began Project Merrimack as an effort to infiltrate dissident groups in Washington, D.C. to obtain advance information about demonstrations against CIA facilities. Merrimack used construction workers as part time agents. [Miami Herald 5.19.76 p14A]

ADMIRAL RUFUS TAYLOR

Admiral Rufus Taylor was a graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis. After duty aboard the battleship Arizona, he was assigned from 1930 to 1941 as a Japanese language student at the American Embassy in Tokyo. He served as a communications officer in the Pacific during World War II, with the U.S. occupation forces in Japan after the war, and as an assistant chief of staff for intelligence with the Pacific Fleet before coming to Washington in 1959, where he was named Assistant Director of Foreign Intelligence and, later, Deputy Director of Naval Intelligence. In this capacity he was connected with William R. Corson. He was named assistant chief of naval operations and director of Naval intelligence in 1963, and then served as deputy director of the Defense Intelligence Agency from 1966. Taylor was a Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency from October 1966 to February 1969. During this period Richard Helms was the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Helms ordered Taylor to clean up the Nosenko case. During this time Taylor assured Helms in writing: "Most particularly, I perceive no significant conflict between the information Nosenko has provided and the information and opinions Golitsin has provided. Thus I conclude that Nosenko should be accepted as a bone fide defector." [Wilderness of Mirrors D. Martin p176] Rufus Taylor was a Deputy Director of the CIA from October 13, 1966, to January 31, 1969. Admiral Rufus Taylor, 68, died of cancer on September 14, 1978. [NYT 7.22.70, Scanlans V1 #6 8.70 p1; Wash. Post 9.20.78 pB8]

D.A. WATERMAN AND BRIAN MICHAEL JENKINS

In 1977 D.A. Waterman was the co-author of a paper entitled "Heuristic Modeling Using Rule-Based Computer Systems," published by the Rand Corporation. The coauthor of this paper was former Green Beret Michael Jenkins. [Terrorism Data Bases: A Comparison of Missions, Methods and Systems William Warner Fowler March 1981 N-1503-Rand Corporation p42 P-5811] Brian Jenkins, the program director, Security and Sub national Conflicts of the Rand Corporation, is probably the most respected professional authority on terrorism in the United States and is responsible for developing much of the topology and intellectual framework used in researching terrorism. He has compiled the largest terrorism data base in the United States. In 1984 Jenkins hired former general Gustavo Alvarez Martinez, a death squad leader from Honduras, as a consultant to the Rand Corporation. [Wash. Post 5.10.87 pA20] In 1984 Jenkins recommended implementation of low intensity warfare against Nicaragua. In 1985 Jenkins was the editor of The Journal of Terrorism, Violence, Insurgency, which he acquired from members of Robert K. Brown's Soldier of Fortune network. [Henry O'Sullivan, The Terrorism Industry p285 - Robert Lund, who worked for Robert K. Brown sold the Journal of TVI to Jenkins] Jenkins was the author of "The Likelihood of Nuclear Terrorism" a Rand Paper Series p7119 in July 1985. Jenkins is considered to be a moderate among the terrorism experts and does not believe Claire Sterling's contention that the Soviets orchestrated terrorism, however, he never labeled Latin and Central American death squads as terrorists: when the Guatemalan Army launched Operation Counter-terror, and some 8,000 people were slaughtered Brian Jenkins later wrote: "the objective of counter terror was to frighten everyone from collaborating with the guerilla movement." [McClintlock, M. Instruments of Statecraft p 234] Nestor Sanchez was Chief of Station in Guatemala from August 1965 to August 1967 when these death squads were active. Jenkins does believe that the Soviet Union provided direct and indirect support to terrorists, including arms and training. In 1990 Jenkins was a Managing Partner of Kroll Associates.

CHARLES WATERMAN

Charles Waterman, born February 16, 1938, entered on duty with a private research committee (the CIA) in 1963. In 1964 he was a consular official in Kuwait. In 1966 he was in Cairo and Beirut. At the time the alleged Rand memorandum was uncovered, March 1970, Charles Waterman was a Political Officer in Beirut. [State Dept. Bio. Reg. 1977 Limited Official Use] He returned to Washington in July 1970. By 1982, Charles Waterman was a senior analyst at the CIA who worked for the then-Director, William Casey and Vice Chairman of the National Intelligence Council. In 1983 Charles Waterman was suspected of having leaked classified information on the Iran/Iraq war to the Mitsubishi company of Japan, after he failed CIA and FBI lie detector tests. Waterman was the Subject of an FBI criminal espionage case which was quashed because classified information may have been revealed in the course of the trial. Waterman was dismissed by Director Casey. In the 1980's Charles Waterman was a Director of Parvus Incorporated. Parvus Incorporated was headed by Richard Helms.

BRENNAN

Peter Brennen was the president of the Building Trades Council at this time. He was a leader of pro-Vietnam war movement that came to be known as the "hardhats." On May 8, 1970, construction workers in lower Manhattan beat up a group of student anti-war protestors. On May 20, 1970, 100,000 construction workers, longshoremen and others massed at City Hall for a rally in support of the Vietnam war. NIXON telephoned Brennen to congratulate him on the peaceful rally. Colson arranged for a delegation of workers, headed by Brennan, to come to the White House. During the 1972 elections Brennen organized a committee of 200 labor leaders for NIXON. NIXON selected Peter Brennan as his Secretary of Labor during his second administration. There were several allegations before Brennen's confirmation that he was associated with organized crime. [Moldea, Hoffa Wars page 316]

SPIRO AGNEW REPLIES

The New York Times asked Spiro Agnew about this document:

The Vice President said it was 'ridiculous' for the editors of Scanlan's Monthly to believe the document was genuine...Mr. Agnew said in an interview today after he had seen a copy of the document that it was completely false. He said that the form of the memorandum, and the heading of the stationery were different from those used by his office. 'My denial is unequivocal,' Mr. Agnew said, 'not only for that [document] but for anything else concerning that subject in writing, in conversation or in thought. You can't get more unequivocal than that.' [NYT 7.22.70]

FORGERY

In retrospect, we see that NIXON was involved in numerous anti-democratic activities, such as the Kennedy assassination and Watergate. NIXON'S ambition was to become the first dictator of the United States. He was unable to do that, but he was responsible for America's first unelected President, Gerald Ford. Never put anything past 'Tricky Dickey,' and his henchmen, however, this document was a forgery. It is paranoia to believe that the President of the Rand Corporation, Henry S. Rowen, who was on NIXON's enemies list, and who was considered dovish on Vietnam, would conduct a study to "repeal the Bill of Rights."

Who would put something as controversial as repealing the Bill of Rights on paper? Why not leak the entire document? Why just one page? Why would a document on Vice Presidential stationery contain this line: "Borella is working closely with the New York Field Office, reporting to our specialist, O'Neill." Was it the New York Field Office of the FBI or the CIA? The reference to Waterman and O'Neill contain no first names so it is impossible to state the Waterman is identical to D.A. Waterman or Charles Waterman. There is too much ambiguity in this document.

This document was dated more than a year after Rufus Taylor left the CIA, yet it made reference to his unaudited "internal security" fund. Rufus Taylor believed Nosenko was genuine which would have put him at odds with the ANGLETON, HUNT, BAGLEY faction of the CIA that was aligned with NIXON.

DATA BASE

In 1992 Congress passed the JFK Documents Act. By 1996 I had almost completed my review of the millions of pages of documents already released as a result of this Act; however, there were still hundreds of thousands of pages of documents that had yet to be released. The text of the revised edition of Coup D'Etat in America took up 6,000 double spaced typewritten pages with a 12 point font. Published in standard book form this would have meant a book at least 2,500 pages long. The information could not be condensed without having to discard data that might have future significance when more material became available. So this researcher compiled a digitized data base, rather than a book.

ELADIO DEL VALLE

DAVID FERRIE DID NOT KNOW ELADIO DEL VALLE

In 1962 David Ferrie was alleged to have worked with Rolando Masferrer's associate, Eladio Del Valle. New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison had information that Eladio Del Valle occasionally paid him $1,500 per mission. [Flammonde Kennedy Conspiracy p19] Who had given Garrison this information? In Plot or Politics? Rosemary James and Jack Wardlaw may have identified that source: "Oddly enough, a man who reportedly knew Ferrie and had been questioned by Garrison's Staff, was murdered in Miami on the same day Ferrie died, February 22, 1967. [Del Valle died on February 25, 1967] Diego Gonzales Tendedera, a Cuban exile and Miami correspondent for El Tiempo, a Spanish language paper in New York, wrote a story after the mutilated body of Eladio Del Valle was found in a Miami parking lot...According to Tendedera, Del Valle fled Cuba with most of his wealth before Castro took over. In Miami he set up a grocery store as a front for gathering freedom fighters, procuring guns, grenades, bombs and sabotage equipment. Tendedera said that he frequently visited Del Valle and that he met Ferrie in the store. During one six month period, he said, Ferrie and Del Valle flew over Cuba two or three times a week in Del Valle's twin engine Apache to drop incendiaries, and rescue anti-Communist Cubans who wanted to escape. Tendedera said the federal agents put a stop to the raids in 1961 by confiscating his plane." In a story in the National Enquirer Diego Gonzales Tendedera wrote that Manuel Artime told him Del Valle was killed on the orders of Fidel Castro: "He knew too much about the Kennedy assassination." There were no references to William David Ferrie in Eladio Del Valle's FBI file nor were there any references to Eladio Del Valle in William David Ferrie's FBI file. Eladio Del Valle (born August 26, 1922, Havana, Cuba) attended the Cuban Naval Academy from 1937 to 1941, but was not commissioned. He then joined the Merchant Marine. The CIA reported that Within a few years he had amassed a fortune, apparently in smuggling, most of which was made during the Grau Administration (1944 to 1948). However he was reported as late as 1953 to be engaged in smuggling with members of the Cuban Police and SIM (Cuban military intelligence) as partners. He is said to have influential friends who afforded protection from arrest for those activities, which were carried on under cover of a firm in Havana called Importadora Valle. There was some indication he was also suspected of drug trafficking. Although it was determined that he was not a member of the Communist Party, it was discovered that he sublet office space for some time to a committee of the Partido Socialista Popular, in a building which he rented and used for storage. No action was taken at this time against Subject as a result of those charges. In CSCI3/762,551, referenced above, it was reported to the Bureau that (deleted). It is suggested that the Office of Naval Intelligence and the Immigration and Naturalization Service may have more details on the information summarized in Paragraph 3, b, above.

A CIA report dated May 29, 1951, Eladio Del Valle was described as active in the Cuban Communist Party, possibly smuggling weapons. [FBI 100-378541-8] A Cuban law enforcement official informed the FBI in 1952 that Eladio Del Valle smuggled arms from the Florida Keys to Cuba. In 1953 Del Valle was suspected of having been behind the assaults of several American journalists living in Cuba. The CIA reported that "a review of 1953 information in the files of this Agency revealed that there were several reports in early 1953 that Subject was using his boats for contraband goods, arms traffic, etc. and that he had connections with Communist leaders such as Lazaro Pena." [CIA Ltr. Larry R. Strawderman to AJW dated 7.22.82. Memo's dated 1.3.58, 12.23.60, 11.1.62, Telegram 6.5.63, Cable 2.20.65. Documents denied: "Cable, 7.10.65, Report 4.14.65] Eladio Del Valle was elected to the House of Representatives of Cuba in 1955 and he left Cuba for Miami on December 25, 1959. Eladio Del Valle formed his own anti-Castro group in 1960. The CIA had suspicions Eladio Del Valle was a Castro double-agent. The New York Daily News published Eladio Del Valle's boast that he had a small army of expert saboteurs in Cuba: "Over 1,000 of our men are soldiers who defected from Castro. Others are professionals who were in Batista's army." In October 1961 William Pawley received a letter from Jose A. Benitez, Chairman, Democratic Party of Puerto Rico: "After discussing with you, and our mutual friend Senator Smathers yesterday the Cuban situation, and knowing your knowledge of current Cuban leaders in exile, I take the liberty of making you the following recommendation. Eladio Del Valle. I had the pleasure of meeting with Captain Del Valle and discussing his plan. I have met personally all the human and material resources. He was ready to invade Cuba last week, but, on my suggestion, he postponed it." Eladio Del Valle became associated with the Cuban Nationalist Movement in 1961 and by 1962 the CIA discovered that several of his men were shot while trying to infiltrate Cuba. In 1962, two of Eladio Del Valle's men were arrested in New Jersey with a trailer-load of arms. The headquarters of the Cuban Nationalist Movement was in New Jersey. Meanwhile, Eladio Del Valle raised funds, mainly among Bastistanos. Reports of the next three years of his career were withheld by the FBI. The 30 pages that detailed his activities between 1961 and 1963 were entirely deleted. The CIA released one document about his activities during this period. Dated June 5, 1963, it revealed that Eladio Del Valle was attempting to establish a base in Costa Rica. In 1964 Eladio Del Valle was associated with MIRR. U.S. Customs received information in 1966 that Eladio Del Valle smuggled narcotics from Panama with Rolando Masferrer. The last CIA document about Eladio Del Valle was an Intelligence Information Cable dated February 20, 1965, which "contained information affecting the National Defense of the United States within the meaning of the Espionage Laws." The only sentence that was not deleted read: "Del Valle is a Cuban exile who has been described as a small-time gangster who involves himself in everything, but who never risks his own life in any undertaking."

THE DEATH OF ELADIO DEL VALLE

On February 22, 1967, the body of Eladio Del Valle was found in a Miami parking lot. The cause of death was "Multiple blunt impacts of head and gunshot wound of the chest." [Certificate of Death signed by Beatrice Marchetti Registration No. 1968] His pockets were turned inside out. According to an article in Diario Las Americas, Eladio Del Valle was associated with SANTOS TRAFFICANTE. The FBI determined: "Motive for Del Valle's murder is not known, but rumor in Cuban colony is that it was due to underworld activities of Del Valle." Gaeton Fonzi reported: "The guy who killed Del Valle is heavily connected to organized crime and one of the major heroin bankers in the country today." [Ltr. Fonzi/AJ 2.13.76]

The death of Eladio Del Valle was unconnected to the JFK assassination. HEMMING helped perpetuate the myth that Del Valle had known David Ferrie:

Del Valle did know Ferrie. We called Del Valle 'Gito.' Gito took the heavy fall for some of STURGIS' shit in setting up operations and blowing airplanes up to collect the fucking insurance on them. It didn't take me long to determine who had killed him. I went there to identify the body. Tony Fontana, who is now head of the Florida Parole Commission, wanted to know what I was doing there. He asked about Del Valle's body. I said, 'You ought to give a call to Garrison's people in New Orleans. They'd be interested this guy was hit.'

The CIA: "There is somewhat of a parallel between OSWALD and Webster." Webster left the Soviet Union unilaterally, although his decision was made just before he received word that his mother was receiving psychiatric care. OSWALD determined to leave the Soviet Union unilaterally, although his decision came just before the American Embassy was to deliver a personal message from his mother. Webster's initial letter received at the American Embassy contained a reference to a previous letter, which the American Embassy denied it had received. OSWALD'S initial letter received at the American Embassy contained a reference to a previous letter, which the American Embassy denied it had received. - CIA Chron. LHO USSR 1.13.60; DOS 12B File 295J - Snyder explained, "All letters to Embassies in Moscow passed through a central office where they were vetted by the KGB. We never knew how many things sent to us actually got to us. I don't think we ever got letters from Soviet citizens, and many of them must have written to us. They were stopped. In the case of OSWALD'S first letter, the chances are the KGB spotted the thing and it was bucked upstairs until the KGB decided what the hell they were going to do about it. It was not unusual. Why the KGB stopped one letter and not another, God only knows."

HORACIO DURAN NAVARRO

The husband of Sylvia Duran, Horacio Duran Navarro, (1923-2009) 40 years old, was 14 years older than his wife. When the Mexican Police questioned Horacio Duran Navarro, it learned he was a Mexican citizen by birth, the son of a Chilean father and a Mexican mother. Horacio Duran Navarro taught a course at the Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). They had one child. His salary at UNAM was $1,400 per month. He said that until he was eight, he had lived in Los Angeles. Later on he moved to Mexico City with his parents. Afterwards, they moved to Santiago de Chile, where they remained one year and a half, after which he returned to Mexico. He registered at the National School of Agriculture. Horacio Duran Navarro devoted his free time to doing private jobs as an industrial designer, for which work he earned an income of $5,000 per month. In 1950, he married Lucille Dejardin, a French woman, with whom he had a son, Paul Duran Dejardin. This marriage lasted six years, and upon its dissolution, he was married on November 5, 1958, to Sylvia, with whom he had a daughter named Patricia.

ELSIE M. RIECHERT

HEMMING: "Check the admiralty case regarding the Elsie M. Riechert. LaBorde, who was the guy who introduced us to Banister, recruited people out of New Orleans in 1962, one of whom was Jack D. Lawrence. He was a former Deputy Sheriff of Jefferson Parish, Louisiana. They invested money in the Elsie M. Riechert. Lawrence came back to the dealership puking, with mud over him, right after the shooting. His fellow employees called the cops on him and he was picked up and told them some kind of a story. OSWALD'S picture comes on the T.V. and the other employees start talking in front of the cops. Lawrence was put in jail overnight and cut loose early the next morning. The way those people were handled, the next day they had something to say to the cops, and decided not to. They never mentioned it again. Two of their cars were missing off the lots. Dealer's plates. Lawrence had taken a new car from the dealership for a hot date. It was found parked behind the picket fence. He was supposed to park it there and flash some credentials. He didn't know shit about the assassination. He was a ex-cop. He had a gun and a badge.

"Bogard was from Louisiana and was at the training camp. He was one of the owners of the Elsie M. Riechert. He died four miles from the fucking training camp. [Bogard died in Louisiana.] He was murdered. He went out to talk to the property owner where the McLaney raid was made.

"The Elsie M. Riechert suit was filed in 1963. It came to court in 1964. And Lawrence is scared shitless of me. Here he is a guy who carries a gun, a Deputy Sheriff. He was an owner of the ship. I didn't realize this guy had something else on his mind. LaBorde sent him into the killing zone, and he saw what went down. He wasn't part of it. He was supposed to supply a car to OSWALD for some deal OSWALD was involved in. Get the court file. Jack Lawrence was scared shitless in the Miami Federal Courthouse. Because LaBorde convinced him I was heading the team."

Gordon Winslow obtained this file in May 1995. Collins, Seymour and Justin Wilson were libelants. They claimed they worked as seaman on the ship in the summer of 1962 and were not paid so they wanted the boat as compensation. "From the papers in the possession of the claimant it appears that the said Lee M. Parish purchased the vessel on or about January 2, 1963, from the following named individuals all residents of Louisiana; Irvin Anthony Roy, Jack D. Lawrence and George Rutherford." [USDC SDF ADMIRALTY 63-15-Adm-DD] Jack Lawrence was located in St. Albans, West Virginia. He refused to talk. A pretext call was made several months later. Lawrence said his middle initials were "A.C." and he was never a deputy sheriff in Louisiana.

Lawrence's arrest appears in Crossfire, by Jim Marrs. Marrs wrote that Lawrence obtained his job by obtaining false references in New Orleans. Lawrence failed to show up for work on November 22, and he told his boss he had a heavy date. After the assassination he came back to showroom, puked, and said he had parked his car on the grassy knoll. He had left it there because of heavy traffic. Lawrence, however, cannot be linked with HEMMING via the Elsie M. Riechert case.

In 1994 the CIA released a document to Chief Contact Division (Support) Stuntz from Chief, New Orleans office in which Jack D. Lawrence tells the Domestic Contacts Office in New Orleans that LaBorde represented himself as a CIA when he got Lawrence to volunteer his boat the Elsie M. Riechert to run arms and medical supplies to Cuba. Lawrence wanted the CIA to buy the boat from him. Burke 9.25.62. Copies sent to Sam Halpern.

FRANK FERRARO

Browder's co-defendant in the Canadian Stolen Securities case was Frank "Francesco" Ferrara. Ferrara, who was indicted in his native city of New Haven, Connecticut, on two counts of dealing in stolen securities, was arrested a month after Browder and promptly jumped bail. A Frank Richard Ferraro became an employee of Jack Ruby in 1962. In August the two men had a falling out and Ruby pounded Ferrara with a pair of brass knuckles. When Ferrara checked into the hospital he used the name Ferraro. A day after Jack shot OSWALD, the FBI questioned Ferrara in New Haven, Connecticut where he worked as a bus driver. He told them he had worked for Ruby as a "handyman." Other than the New Haven connection, there is no reason to believe these men are identical. Browder's co-defendant in the Canadian Stolen Securities case was Frank "Francesco" Ferrara. When the FBI questioned Hyman Godfrey, a friend of Barney Ross, Hyman denied knowing RUBY. The FBI reported that when questioned further "Godfrey indicated he would have his attorney telephone the FBI Office and a list of questions could be furnished his attorney regarding this matter. Godfrey was bodyguard for Frank Ferraro, Chicago hoodlum." [FBI 44-1639-169] The word "omit" appeared next to this paragraph.

ROSS FARRELL

In 1938 former FBI agent Russell R. Farrell investigated the beating of a bomber crew in Abe's Colony Club. Farrell determined that the Dallas Police Department was involved in at least one of these beatings. Because of this, in 1964 Commander Farrell suspected that Ruby had been assigned to kill OSWALD with the connivance of the Dallas Police in order to silence him. Ruby did not own the Colony Club. Farrell gave the FBI copies of signed statements concerning the 1948 incident, but the document containing Farrell's statement was marked "not used." ## MAURICE GATLIN AND OREST PENA

On June 20, 1960, Maurice Gatlin advised the FBI "that an informant of his had on the previous night heard two Cubans talking to (Deleted) at the Habana Bar, 117 Decatur Street, New Orleans. According to Gatlin's information from his source, these two Cubans allegedly told (Deleted) that they were in the United States on a kidnapping mission. Gatlin had information that these two Cubans were driving an automobile bearing Louisiana license #314-465 and that he understood that these Cubans were arrested later that same evening by the New Orleans Police Department on a charge of being drunk...Gatlin concluded by saying that he was on the list of persons condemned to death in absentia by Castro and fears that he may be the victim." [FBI 105-80787-14?] The FBI "contemplated locating (deleted) for data as to the identity of the two Cubans referred to by Maurice Gatlin, as well as the purpose of their presence in this country." The FBI reported:

On June 23, 1960, (Deleted), New Orleans Police Department, advised S.A. (Deleted) that he had been on duty after 11:00 p.m. on June 18, 1960. According to (deleted) he recalled that during his night shift on June 18, 1960, to June 19, 1960, two young men, one of whom identified as (deleted), had come into the First District Police Station, stating that a man at the Habana Bar, 117 Decatur Street, who was probably in the Cuban Army, had tried to coax them to get into a car to go to the Clairborne Towers, an apartment hotel. (Deleted) stated that since the complainants could not furnish any data indicating a possible violation of law, no action was taken by the New Orleans Police in this matter. [FBI 105-105-80787-27, 105-80787-1]

The FBI located (deleted) who admitted owning the automobile in question but "denied having been in the Habana Bar in six months and he states he does not know anyone named (deleted) or with a similar name. He also states that neither he, nor anyone acquainted with him, either on the night of June 18 or June 19, 1960, had tried to coax anyone in his car." The FBI questioned the owners of the Habana Bar, Orestes and Ruperto Pena. They advised that "no incident occurred at the Habana Bar on June 18 or June 19, 1960, involving the alleged attempt by a Cuban Army officer to entice someone into his car. They advised that they know of no one named (Deleted). They stated they know (Deleted) but that the latter has not been in that bar for more than six months inasmuch as (Deleted) owes (Deleted) money...Gatlin has been unable to furnish any more specific information from his 'source.' His source is undoubtedly (deleted)." [FBI 105-105-80787-151]

GATLIN - 1960

There was additional FBI activity regarding Maurice Gatlin in August 1960, but the Bureau has kept the matter obscured. It merely allowed that a woman source was involved and that "(Deleted) stated that (Deleted) had contacted Gatlin in regard to (deleted) and that Gatlin had later informed (Deleted) [her] that (Deleted) had been framed and that (Deleted) was telling the truth." [FBI File #NO 97-73 8.19.60] On August 19, 1960, Gatlin's name surfaced in a Registration Act investigation as a source of information: "Gatlin knows all of the Latin American Consuls in New Orleans and has contacts all over Central and South America. (Deleted) advised that (deleted) had contacted Maurice Gatlin for the sole purpose of gaining access to Gatlin's contacts in order to obtain information concerning communist activities in the Latin American countries (deleted)." The FBI refused to disseminate the information Gatlin supplied to its source because he was considered to be a "crackpot and an unscrupulous person." [Report of S.A. ## WILLIAM GAUDET

WILLIAM GAUDET: NO CONNECTION TO KENNEDY CONSPIRACY

The Mexican tourist card immediately preceding OSWALD'S in numerical sequence was issued on Tuesday, September 17, 1963, to William G. Gaudet. William George Gaudet (born September 21, 1908), attended Tulane University, worked for The New Orleans States-Item, and served as an English professor at the University of Mexico until he resigned in 1929. He was editor of the English section of El Sol in Monterrey, Mexico, in 1931. In 1932 he worked for the International News Service, and covered the Huey Long assassination in 1935. William Gaudet was finger printed by the Navy on April 30, 1942. He applied for an appointment as a Lieutenant in the U.S. Navy Reserve, but was turned down for medical reasons. On February 11, 1942, he "was cleared by the Army Intelligence Division for an overseas assignment in connection with his employment as a Wire Service Man for International News Service in New Orleans."

THE OFFICE OF INTER-AMERICAN AFFAIRS

In late 1942 William Gaudet was appointed to the Office of Inter-American Affairs of the State Department; in this position he was directly responsible to Nelson Rockefeller. [FBI 64-23999-2-5.8.43] The FBI monitored the work of the Rockefeller Committee since it was in close proximity to the Bureau's Latin American jurisdiction. In 1942 the FBI received several reports that the members of Nelson Rockefeller's Regional Committee were "securing and coordinating information of an intelligence nature, and had been reporting same to U.S. Consulate." In May 1943 (Deleted) of San Juan, Costa Rica, wrote to Mr. Weyl of the American Embassy in San Salvador, El Salvador, and stated the on a recent trip to San Salvador William Gaudet had been very outspoken and indiscreet in matters of a confidential nature. [FBI 64-23999-1 5.20.43; Documents w/h FBI 64-23999-4 and 5 not provided to HSCA - scoped] On October 23, 1944, "(Deleted) told William Gaudet, Representative of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs in San Jose, (deleted) attached to Embassy here, that there were rumors in the streets that the Cortesistas, the opposition political party planned an uprising for Wednesday, October 25, 1944." [From Legat San Jose, Costa Rica to Director 10.31.44 serial illegible 100-3355392-1? highly deleted signed John T. Plunkett. FBI Leg. Att.] The FBI files on the Office of Inter-American Affairs may have contained a reference to Gaudet: "Proximity To Bureau's Jurisdiction In Latin America (Deleted). By report dated June 29, 1942, one of our SIS Agents advised that one (Deleted) of the Rockefeller Committee advised that he was in San Jose primarily to render a careful report to his boss, Nelson Rockefeller, concerning the United States Legations he visited. (Deleted) In November 1942 information was received from the El Paso Office that the Nelson Rockefeller Regional Committee in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, had been securing and coordinating information of an intelligence nature and had been reporting to the American Consulate."

LATIN AMERICAN REPORT

During the late 1940's, 1950's, and 1960's, William Gaudet edited Latin American Report, a New Orleans-based magazine. Latin American Report was financed by the CIA, United Fruit, the Chase Manhattan Bank and several Central American dictators. William Gaudet used the magazine as a cover for his Latin American operations. Latin American Report came to the attention of the CIA in February 1948. During that year William Gaudet was contacted by the CIA 16 times. In 1949 he was contacted by the CIA over 30 times.

On November 25, 1949, George G. Carey recommended the CIA subsidize William Gaudet due to the quality of the information he was providing: "Gaudet is the editor of Latin American Reports, a weekly four page survey of political and economic conditions in the Latin American countries. The information contained in this newsletter is derived from paid correspondents, at least one of whom is resident in each of the Latin American countries, with the exception of Paraguay, Bolivia and the Dominican Republic...Gaudet is volunteering the service of his organization at cost to produce special reports for the CIA. Whether or not this project is approved, he will continue to furnish at no cost any information which is produced by his correspondents as a by-product of his publication of Latin American Reports. While he had no military intelligence experience, his work with the State Department should, to a considerable extent, qualify him as a trustworthy and accurate observer." [To: Chief OO-C, Atten: McLean From Chief D/LA, ORS 11.25.46] The CIA was interested in Gaudet ascertaining this information in Panama: "Nature of the business deal, if any, between Jose Ramon and the Arias family on the meat slaughtering concession." Inspection and Security concurred that William Gaudet had to sign an oath agreeing to "never reveal or exploit his CIA connection. (signed) Sheffield Edwards Colonel, GSC." [NARA 1993.08.02.14:34:38:960028]

In 1950 Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 33 times.
In 1951, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 22 times.
In 1952, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 29 times.
In 1953, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 19 times.

In 1954, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 22 times. [CIA 17581 - index cards] In 1954 William Gaudet played a part in PB SUCCESS. In the book Bitter Fruit it was stated: "In the early years of his association with United Fruit, Edward Bernays imaginatively 'opened up' the banana firm to public scrutiny...A weekly Latin American Report for journalists and businessmen was spun off, written by William Gaudet, who was one of several actors in the unfolding Guatemalan drama said to have had simultaneous connections with both United Fruit and the CIA." [Schlesinger & Kinzer Bitter Fruit Anchor Books 1982]

In 1955 Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 17 times. On December 2, 1955, the FBI generated a highly deleted document based on information supplied by Gaudet on "Foreign Political Matters - Costa Rica and Nicaragua." On December 8, 1955, the FBI generated a Memorandum titled "Alleged Revolution in Costa Rica and Nicaragua - Foreign Political Matters - Costa Rica and Nicaragua." This information was disseminated to the CIA, Office of Naval Intelligence, Director of Security of the State Department, Army Intelligence, the Inspector General of the Air Force and the United States Customs Service. [FBI 109-12-222-11 cc Branigan; FBI 109-12-222-16]

In 1956, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 9 times. On April 25, 1956 Gaudet was mentioned in a document that dealt with Teodoro Picado, a leader of the opposition against Jose Figueres of Costa Rica. Teodoro Picado had moved to the United States. [FBI 97-3236-24 pgs. 4 thru 8 w/h]

In 1957, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 3 times.
In 1959, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA two times.
In 1960 Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 2 times.

In 1961, Gaudet was interviewed by the CIA 4 times. William Gaudet claimed he unwittingly played a role in the Bay of Pigs invasion: "I never played a role in the Bay of Pigs, though I unknowingly helped set up alternate air bases in Nicaragua, Honduras, and Guatemala, for use by the planes to protect the Cuban invasion." [Sun Daily Herald 11.22.80 Biloxi, Miss. 11.22.80]

On March 5, 1961, William Gaudet wrote to Louisiana Congressman Hale Boggs and offered his services in President John F. Kennedy's Latin American Peace Corps.

THE TOURIST CARD

On Tuesday, September 17, 1963, William G. Gaudet applied for tourist card so that he could enter Mexico just before OSWALD did. [Washington Star 1.11.76] When the FBI interviewed William Gaudet about his Mexican Tourist Card in 1964, he told the Bureau that in the early afternoon of Tuesday, September 17, 1963, he picked up a travel permit from the Mexican Consulate. According to William Gaudet, obtaining a Tourist Card just before OSWALD did was coincidental, and he did not see OSWALD at the Mexican Consulate in New Orleans that day: "There were six or seven persons waiting to pick up permits and to the best of his recollection, LEE HARVEY OSWALD was not one of them." He said he had seen OSWALD in New Orleans on other occasions. William Gaudet told the FBI that on Thursday, September 19, 1963, he went on a three- or four-week trip to Mexico and other Latin American countries. This coincided with OSWALD'S presence in Mexico City from Friday September 27, 1963 to October 3, 1963. But William Gaudet told the FBI he flew to Merida, Mexico, where he changed planes then went on to other South and Central American countries. He did not enter Mexico. FBI S.A. Regis Kennedy obtained the flight manifest - Gaudet's named appeared as a passenger. [WCD 15?; FBI NO 44-2064, NO 89-69 11.27.63; Sanders interview with Gaudet 1.19.78]

GAUDET: POST COUP

In an interview in 1964 William Gaudet advised the FBI that he had been employed by the CIA. The Chief of Station of the CIA's New Orleans office was present at this interview, and called CIA Headquarters for advice. [WCD 75]

LORENZO BORENSTEIN

Several days after William Gaudet's interview with the FBI in 1964, he called the Bureau and reported: "JACK RUBY, from Dallas, Texas, had purchased a painting from one Lorenzo Borenstein, who has an art gallery somewhere on the 500 block of Royal Street. Gaudet stated that he did not know what dates Ruby bought these paintings. [FBI on 11.27.63 NO44-2064 S.A. John William Miller] William Gaudet denied this: "Someone telephoned the FBI and said he was William Gaudet and had seen JACK RUBY in the French Quarter in New Orleans. Why did he use my name? Why not John Doe or some made-up name? I did not make that call. I had never seen JACK RUBY...on the one hand someone injected my name to the FBI on the RUBY French Quarter hoax, and then on the other hand, someone had my name carefully removed from the list of arrivals in Mexico. To me it looks as though someone was using me as a red herring." [Sun Daily Herald 11.22.80 Bil. Miss.] Gaudet told Allen Stone that he might have obtained the information from Lila Pinson, an employee whose husband was a painter. Lorenzo Borenstein advised the FBI "that he knew one JACK RUBY only as a customer and that during the Summer of 1959, he sold RUBY several paintings of local scenes, the price of which he recalled to be approximately $35. Borenstein was unable to give any further information, inasmuch as his records concerning this sale have been destroyed." [FBI NO 44-2064 11.27.63]

According to the FBI: "Eugene Lorenz Borenstein was described in 1953 as a one time member of the Jacob Reed Club of the Communist Party in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1935. However, in 1953, though well known as an unethical and immoral person, nothing at that time indicated he had any current interest in the Communist Party." In March 1972, FBI agents asked to search Borenstein's property. The FBI was investigating a "Plot To Create Chaos And Assassinate Important Persons At Republican National Convention August 1972." The FBI: "Borenstein was then apprized of the possibility of the existence of a cache of arms in his courtyard. Borenstein stated that the apartments in that property were occupied by the Nola Express and the ABBA Foundation. Both of these tenants were 'very liberal' groups of former New Left activists who continued to publish the only existent, well-circulated, underground newspaper in New Orleans, and to serve hippies and other young people with legal and social counseling. To Borenstein's knowledge, none of the persons involved with those activities has ever shown a propensity towards violence, and he has never heard of an arms cache on his property." [FBI 100-19467-16] Borenstein was contacted in 1978 by this researcher: "This had been checked out 50 times and I really don't want to get into it. I made a sale to JACK RUBY at one time. It had no bearing at all with any of the stuff. I really don't have time to go into it." [FBI 100-19467-16] Lorenz Borenstein, 61, died of a heart attack in 1981.

POTENTIAL SECURITY INFORMANT

On November 7, 1967, the FBI stated that "William Gaudet Potential Security Informant" was being "considered for source development: "While New Orleans has just initiated background investigation of Gaudet in order to assist him as a potential PSI and anticipated additional contact with Gaudet to see if he could be of value to the Bureau, it is felt that the Bureau may desire to determine from CIA if CIA has at this time an operational interest in William Gaudet it being noted that Gaudet spoke highly of the CIA on September 25, 1967, (deleted)." [FBI 64-23999-7 11.8.67] On December 5, 1967, the FBI generated a Memorandum captioned William George Gaudet - Internal Security - Miscellaneous - Latin America which was totally deleted except for this single line: "Handle in accordance with Section 107C, Instruction Manual." [FBI 64-23999-8] On January 5, 1968, William Gaudet furnished the FBI with information regarding Belize, British, Honduras. The information was withheld. [FBI 64-23999 NR 202 1.19.68; FBI 64-2399-NR 1.5.68 (enclosed) not provided to HSCA - scoped]

William Gaudet was interviewed by the FBI in December 1967:

The PSI during an interview in December 1967 confidentially exposed his former association with CIA to the interviewing agent. It is evident from contacts with Gaudet that to date he is an outspoken individual who does not hesitate to speak his mind. He has not, however, given any indication that he is unpatriotic...during contact with PSI he has expressed some dissatisfaction with foreign policy of U.S. Government. He finds it hard to understand why the U.S. Government permits Cuba to maintain a fortress for the Russian Government, while at the same time they send troops

10,000 miles away to fight in Vietnam. PSI then followed his remark by stating that he finds it difficult to explain the U.S. position in the above regard to his contacts and friends in Latin America." [FBI 64-23999-9 2.8.68; FBI 64-23999-9 pg. 2 w/h and FBI 64-23999-10 pg. 4 w/h Gaudet's drinking and financial problems]

In March 1968, the FBI thoroughly investigated Gaudet. [FBI 64-23999-10,11, 14 pages 1-2] The FBI refused the New Orleans FBI request to designate William Gaudet as a PSI on June 28, 1968:

(Paragraph Deleted) A Bureau SIS representative in the American Embassy, San Salvador, El Salvador, on May 1, 1943 reported the Bureau that Gaudet and one (deleted)...had disclosed to persons regarded as almost strangers that a Bureau agent was connected in an undercover capacity with the American Embassy in Costa Rica. It is further noted that Subject had been involved in two divorce proceedings; was sued on several occasions for back alimony payments; was regarded in the past as a poor credit risk; and in the late 1950's was a near alcoholic. Accordingly your request to designate Gaudet as a PSI is denied, however, you may use him as a source of information...He appears to be the type of individual whose activities in behalf of the Bureau could not be controlled or directed and might cause the Bureau embarrassment. [FBI 64-23999-?-pp. 1-14]

In his HSCA deposition, William Gaudet testified his CIA-contact was "primarily as a source of information" (obtained during his trips abroad). In addition, he explained that he occasionally performed errands for the Agency. William Gaudet stated that his last contact with the CIA was in 1969, although "the relationship has never been formally terminated." [FBI 64-23999-13 & 14 was mostly w/h]

THE CIA DOWNPLAYS ITS RELATIONSHIP WITH GAUDET

Because of William Gaudet's misfortune of having obtained a tourist card just before OSWALD, when the HSCA reviewed William Gaudet's CIA file, it found neither any record reflecting contact between him and the Agency after 1961, nor any indication that he had performed errands for the CIA. In 1975, he was interviewed by the CIA 1 time. A Memorandum dated January 23, 1976, indicated: "The Domestic Contacts Division had an inactive file on William George Gaudet, former editor and publisher of Latin American Report. The file shows that William Gaudet was a source for the New Orleans Domestic Contacts Division Resident Office from 1948 to 1955, during which period he provided foreign intelligence information on Latin American political and economic conditions." In an account of a British Broadcasting Company TV program which was aired on March 6, 1978, that mentioned William Gaudet, the CIA wrote: "He [William Gaudet] was a contact of the Domestic Contacts Division from 1948 ,until November 1951, in New Orleans area. He was debriefed on Latin American travels 1948 to 1955, and was a casual contact from 1955 to 1964." [CIA # F82-0381/8 rel. 9.29.83]

THE FBI INVESTIGATES GAUDET

In December 1960 the FBI received a report that alleged that Latin American Report had a pro-communist bias. [FBI 100-434918-1 cover page D, page 2 & 3, pages 6 - 9 w/h] While it investigated this complaint, the FBI found that Latin American Report "has never operated on a paying basis. According to (Deleted) the editor and publisher, Bill Gaudet, in the opinion of (Deleted) is a happy-go-lucky person who is only interested in making money with the least amount of effort and is in no way a person given to advocating any political ideology." [NO FBI 100-16562-3.23.61; FBI 100-434918-1 pgs 6, 7, 8, 9, no mention of Gaudet] FBI S.A. Milton Kaack investigated William Gaudet in relation to the "Security of Government Employees" in July 1961. [FBI 1403794-9]

WILLIAM GAUDET INTERVIEW

I knew Banister but I didn't know him well...now Ronnie Caire knew Banister much better than I did. Banister knew OSWALD. Ferrie was a friend of a lot of queers...I think he did know OSWALD...but I don't think either one of them is capable of planning a conspiracy like this...I was closely related with Ed Butler because one of the prime sponsors of the Information Council of the Americas in New Orleans was a very close personal friend of mine and an investor in my company, Alton Ochsner. The Information Council had a big, big banquet down here, a money raising thing, at which time they prevailed upon Nelson Rockefeller to come down and be one of the speakers, and that's the last time I personally saw Nelson Rockefeller...I feel certain the Rockefeller Commission will not call me as a witness. [Interview with Alan Stone WRR Dallas 5.7.75; ARA file interview with Gaudet]

William Gaudet told an interviewer in 1978:

I knew OSWALD because he was in at the International Trade Mart for quite a few days. That's where I had my office, which was on Camp and Common in New Orleans. And he was there distributing pamphlets for the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. Who the Fair Play for Cuba Committee was, I don't know. I do know I saw him [OSWALD] one time with a former...I think he was an FBI agent and a man by the name of Guy Banister, and Guy of course is now dead. What Guy's role was in all this I...I really don't know, but I did see him discussing various things with Banister at the time and I think Banister knew a whole lot of what was going on...I never met OSWALD and I never talked to him personally.

Gaudet was asked if it was coincidence that his name was on the list next to OSWALD'S.

I would say so, yes, I know it's hard to believe because this word keeps cropping up in everything that I seem to do that er...I'm just loaded down with coincidence... [Sanders interview with Gaudet 1.19.78]

WILLIAM GAUDET ON HOWARD HUNT

William Gaudet believed HOWARD HUNT was a key player in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy: He told this author:

HUNT is the man who knows more, actually, about who's in back of this whole affair than anybody...I don't think this plot started overnight...to kill the President...I think, as a matter of fact, it started within weeks after the Bay of Pigs fiasco, and it took that long to come to a head 'cause it had to narrow itself down to a very few individuals. HUNT was the man who put this whole show together and he was trusted more by the Cubans than any gringo I know of. I'm sure the CIA must have called on HUNT to help them see what was going on in connection with a conspiracy among the Cubans. I know a lot of the Cubans that were involved. I mean involved in these big Cuban movements, and I know that every last one of them had the highest respect for E. HOWARD HUNT, I mean it was a mystic name, just mention HUNT and they would follow through on something...Guy Banister, CARLOS BRINGUIER, Orest Pena, all of these are old names to me now. I met Orlando Piedra but I didn't know him. Sure I knew these people - but I don't see what this has to do with the price of eggs. There was nothing sinister about it. It was all open and above board. [HUNT/Lazo Firing Line appearance; Lazo Dagger in the Heart Funk & Wag. NY 1961] did not find a basis for concluding that William Gaudet had contacted OSWALD on behalf of the CIA. Although there was a conflict between William Gaudet's testimony and his CIA file concerning the duration of his Agency contacts, as well as the performance of errands, there was no indication from his file or testimony that William Gaudet's cooperation involved clandestine activity. Again, it should be stressed that the Domestic Contacts Division, which was the Agency component that was in touch with William Gaudet, was not involved in clandestine operations.

The HSCA

William Gaudet died circa January 15, 1981. He was 72 years old. William Gaudet had a close association with the CIA, but evidence suggested he was not involved with OSWALD, although he moved in the same circles.

SWEDEN: SQUIB DAGANS NYHETER

The CIA reported to the Warren Commission:

October 1959: Stockholm newspaper Squib Dagans Nyheter of November 25, 1963, states LEE OSWALD passed through Sweden during October 1959. Article also adds that OSWALD was unsuccessful in obtaining visa to the USSR in Helsinki which resulted in his returning to Stockholm. Two days after he arrived in Stockholm OSWALD traveled directly to Moscow. Concluding sentence of the article states "This indicates that Russian Embassy, Stockholm, gave him visa. (Deleted) it was difficult to explain how OSWALD might have received his visa directly from Soviet Embassy in Stockholm which occasionally is done in special cases, but the source had no evidence to confirm this assumption.

The CIA reported:

At November 27, 1963, meeting with Source 2, CIA Officer, Source 6, queried Source 2 as to knowledge this travel. Source 2 was aware of this article, and had already checked all files of Source 3 for the year 1959 for indication OSWALD traveled through Source 3 [Sweden]. Source 2 was not able to locate any record of a visa request for OSWALD during October 1959 or any other month of 1959. Source 2 finds this mysterious inasmuch as Source 3 handled all American visa requests for travel to the USSR as well as practically 100% of all visas issued for travel to the USSR in Stockholm with the exception of cases which the Soviet Embassy, Stockholm, visaed directly for reasons of their own interest. Source 2 checked every visa request for 1959 plus all voucher copies as well as order sheets and all correspondence for such travel with negative results. This check was made with the concurrence of Source 2, Source 4, who also is puzzled as to how OSWALD received his visa in 'two days' without going through normal channels. As a result of Source 2's negative checks, Source 4 cautioned Source 2 not to divulge this information to the press.

3. Source 2 and Source 4 conclude that OSWALD must have been visaed directly by the Soviet Embassy, Stockholm, although they have no evidence to confirm such an assumption. Source 2 has continuing access to all files of such travel and is able to recheck its files to attempt to determine if OSWALD could have been visaed using a different name... [CIA 203-82, 239-90-A 226-90; WC Coleman/Slawson Memo on Poss. For. Con. p20]

OSWALD did not obtain a Soviet visa in Stockholm, but may have been there for a short period of time on his way to Helsinki.

Rislakki wrote:

Mader made me an interesting offer. He sent me exclusive and detailed info on the Nazi past of the highest West German intelligence bosses (mainly in the BND). He lets me write a story 'honorarfrei' if I send him a clipping he can then use to cite. You know that the CIA and BND have always been like hand in glove...Richard Gilbert is the press and cultural attache in the U.S. Embassy, Helsinki, and a USIS boss here. For over a week he wrote to me that he'd 'like to meet Finland's most famous observer of the CIA.' I wonder what he is up to? We met but really did not have time to talk...It never really occurred to me, but you are right, the CIA might suspect me. Yes, I'm left-wing, and having had my share of trouble for it. Regarding USSR imperialism: Most Finns would say they are not imperialistic. We have very good relations, although different social systems. It was not always so. Finland attacked the USSR with Germany and after the war everything had to change, political climate, politicians, way of thinking and CIA certainly tried to stop this and harm our relations.

DAG HAMMERSKJOLD

On September 19, 1961, U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammerskjold was killed, along with 12 other persons, in a plane crash in Katanga Province. Hammerskjold was on his way to meet with Tshombe in an effort to end fighting in the Congo. The lone survivor of the crash, Harold M. Julian, a U.N. security guard, said that a series of explosions had preceded the crash. No one could offer any explanation for the accident. Airplane pilots who viewed the wreckage said the crash appeared to be typical of the results of a power failure or faulty instruments. The CIA was not behind this act of sabotage; several people aboard the aircraft had CIA connections. Dr. Vladimir Fabry was a Czech defector and Heinrich Wieschhoff had been a OSS consultant on African affairs. The KGB was a better suspect. One day after Hammerskjold's death the Soviet Union attempted to replace the U.N. Secretary General with a triumvirate or Troika, representing Communist, Neutralist and Western members. The General Assembly voted overwhelmingly against the proposal.

GERRY PATRICK HEMMING UNUSED PARTS OF INTERVIEW

I saw when we were being interviewed after we were released from the Key West jail when Steve Wilson comes over and says there's a guy over there you know you from the Marine Corps and I looked over and the bells started ringing, snitch, snitch. I told Larry Howard go get rid of that son of a bitch, he's a snitch.

Ever hear of Art Silva?

Yeah.

Who's he?

I don't know.

Snitch.

SID MARKS as PCI - I knew that. They're all working for somebody. I knew that. I wouldn't have dealt with them. "So you knew this information would go back to the feds." Yeah, that they'd be happier than shit.

So where did you meet CHRIST?

At Secret Police Headquarters. That was September, when I was brought back.

You move in the same circles as OSWALD.

Strange isn't it?

On the Mariner they described this guy that wasn't there. We thought there were five or six people, two females on board, then there was another guy, this guy who had gotten nervous when they were telling the stories and they described the guy, he was from New Orleans, he's an ex-Marine. Then bells started ringing. This was LaBorde's operation, LaBorde had recruited these people. This guy got off the boat, took his gear said he was going to Miami. This was mid 1962.

No Name Key bust and OSWALD

Steve Wilson came over and interrupts ...Larry Howard is talking to the guy....snitch goes off...Never discussed it with him January 1981 on a legal case in California, I mean this is when he's been with me as a bodyguard in Puerto Rico in 1980, never discussed it.

OSWALD was in the hanger in mid-1962

He fits the profile of the guys in your crew

Yeah

KLIENS- they can put anything down they want to

"We met Walker in early 1962. Then I visited him in Dallas when Hall was with me in February 1963. Walker sent us money and gave us some contacts in 1962.

Who took a shot a Walker?

One of the faggots that lived with him

All Sturgis game was putting a hit on Fidel

MARTINO: The way he was moving around I wouldn't be surprised.

This guy fell out of my good graces the first fucking week in Miami. Then he pulled that shit with Molina Rivera running his fucking mouth in front of Bayo and creating a scene he got dumped.

HEMMING on the Bay of Pigs third world country, 50 years in the past, you don't need all this high tech bullshit.We had to cover for a certain amount of funding that was coming our way. We didn't want it traced back to the people who were giving us some funding. So we had to make it look like it came from some of these right-wing assholes.

Bay of Pigs MOLES in there. To do a hit on Fidel you got to have run way watches. You have to have people in different parts of the city for a guy that leaves no pattern, doesn't take the same route, and try to set up an event. You have to prophecies where this cocksucker is gonna show up and start running his mouth. Forget any of these holidays cause he can show up anywhere. You have to have some fucking runway watchers in there that can pin point where this sucker is gonna be and we have about a three hour window, so the people can get their gear together and get over there. Now they got to be in country legal...OSWALD wouldn't have been told shit. These assholes would approach him thinking there's this dumb motherfucker, well at least he didn't desert from the Marines, but he comes over to Russia, I guess they taught him a few. This is a dumb ass. The dumb ass. Not a professional spook, okay, let say a Minuteman or John Bircher or some other kind of fucking FBI type punk. Hell, we can use this asshole, he's got the bona fides we'll send his ass down to Cuba. Phillips had key people going in and out.

You ran a crew of Marines to do thing on their own time.

Yeah.

Alibi - over at Al Kennedy's place. Gave him ride to Miami News Building.

My sole contact is Bill Birge of the LA Country Sheriff's Department and Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles.

"You got these fucking niggers running around with dope and machine guns and shit. What the fuck you trying to do? Fuck you people."

How HEMMING talked his way out of jail: These G-2 assholes were all punks from the Communist Party, the PSP, none of them were ever rebels, none of them were ever in the military. Here they are packing guns and playing cop.

I've had people come to me, fear full, that I was part of the operation. Because my name was bandied about by Giancanna, Charlie 'the blade,' Santos, all these fucking people. I developed a reputation as an executioner.

Collinsville was where Ray headed. "He went to Lauchli to pick up some equipment that had already been paid for. A couple a silenced weapons and shit like that. And that's where I loose track of him. Lauchli was under the impression the guy wanted to get out of the country. Collins knew a Jerry Ray that fit the description. Then James Earl Ray was hanging around L.A. the same time you were there. Somebody had him go out there to meet in a hotel or some such shit using some kind of a name. Now why would he go to the West Coast? They're building something. People find there way to doorsteps and shit. You never know its a set up its this or that usually the person you're dealing with has bona fides is reputable and easily checked on but who's putting him up to it and is he easily put to this kind of shit."

"I found people that made money on the Kennedy thing that had absolutely nothing to do with it."

DAVIS was living up in the radio room in the penthouse in the Cuban Presidential Palace. Because he's part of President Aruchia coterie. He had been Raoul's pilot, he'd left one plane burned on Raoul's airstrip up in the Sierra. So he had Charlie Hormel, the one that was publicly cause he crashed in Guatememo and the authorities fished him out and wouldn't turn him over to the Batista people.

You know why I got along with ANGLETON? I spoke Apache, yababye. He fancied himself an East L.A. kid and related to Apaches. The uncles got him a job, then he came back and worked for California Shipbuilding. And in Costa Rica, the Spanish, and the girls and all this kind of stuff and he was an electrician.

But here Hall running around seeing people that he wasn't supposed to know. In fact he didn't know. Larry Howard tried to get on my good side later on he said, 'I figured out this guy had stolen your address book because your name come up with two or three people that we stopped by to see. Then he started going around like a delivery man from one door to another all fucking night, one o'clock in the morning waking people up and it got real goddamn sickening and obnoxious.

And they say 'What the fuck is going on here?' And the Cubans don't understand English. They all wonder what the fuck is going on. He's ready to go to sleep in the goddamn trailer. So they feel this guy knows all these people, even if they are some of Gerry's contacts. Cause Howard had helped him backing up his story. 'You know Patrick's out of the business now, you know, and he got busted and he's telling these fucking stories. And here's Howard kind of biting his tongue, Seymour's keeping his mouth shut. Because Hall doesn't know Seymour has been with me for three fucking years.

George Davis took the Aleman story. They had me and Davis and HARGRAVES and a few others. There more of a threat than the Santana assholes. These guys are killers. Joe Garman wanted to pop the motherfucker. I said if you grab your piece the Secret Service is gonna get you. [We were being set up.] We were going to have to take the hit. We were the motherfucking patsies.

"The mystery is who's sending them there? The only guy Hall knows in Dallas is STURGIS' buddy Walley Welch. He met Lester Logue at the petroleum club where he had lunch. Nobody gave out any cards, this is Lester. Well t hat son of a bitch had the contacts to get to energy square one, Logue's home and golf course at North Ridge. Welch was an asshole that STURGIS brought into Cuba when Fidel came down from the mountains. We did an interview for the Dallas Morning News at Walley Welch's living room. We had a photograph taken."

"I called Lester Logue in Dallas. He confirmed that Hall had been there at least the night before. I said if that fucker shows up on your doorstep he's come to kill you so you better blow his fuck ass out of the water. I said the fucker's there, he's got my scoped rifle, he's a fucking nut, he might be involved in this. He might be cleaning up witnesses."

HEMMING INTERVIEW USED IN TEXT

I figured this guy is somebody that will cause me problems, you know. I figured this guy is dogging me. I figured I'd stop by and say 'Hey, you wanna go to Cuba - you can't desert - forget about this revolutionary bullshit. He's gonna be testifying against me at a fucking federal trial. As I see it now somebody is trying to use my connections to get OSWALD in. And a lot of other Marines. This took place almost five years after I met ANGLETON. I met him in 1954. I'd been to Cuba several times running guns, and he like a good federal employee said watch your ass I can't condone this kind of shit we're not in the law enforcement business if you get nailed you're through dealing. You don't work for us, you aren't under our umbrella. I did a couple of weekends of courier duty for him toting shit around like in the old temporary buildings. But never an employee, never on the payroll.

LaBorde showed up in 1962. A safehouse was set up, and who ends up knocking on the door like a Loran Hall, Larry LaBorde, the engineer, a nobody, a grease monkey. And he's got plans gonna take out this ship on pier three that's hauling stuff to Cuba. All these little ploys that people have tried us up on - bombings, kidnappings and shit - over the months. Robberies, all kinds of criminal activities they're trying to get people involved in so they can bust their ass.

HARGRAVES was in Miami with his nagging wife under surveillance.

Rorke and STURGIS had this Enrique Molina Rivera to sit in with his group. I said the fuckers a Castro Agent. I had briefed his pilot how to stay alive flying over Cuba...I said if you want to stay alive you'll won't tell anybody else, don't tell Rorke, Rorke's an asshole. Then, a couple of days later I find EMR & STURGIS are at the same goddamn apartment complex talking and meeting this pissed me off. I told Rorke, you ain't gonna get another goddamn briefing. This fucker is a Castro agent, I know him from Cuba. This guy threatened to kill me. This guy threatened to kill fucking TRAFFICANTE. He's the one that ran the little prison where TRAFFICANTE and Loran Hall and Hughes and them were kept there. The guy would talk about the last time he talked to Raoul Castro which would be a week before on the fucking telephone. That's how and psycho this cocksucker was. He didn't hide it. He's against the revolution as an arm of the Russians because of the missile crisis and all that shit but he's still friendly with all the figures. He figures its all being kept from Fidel and Raoul. They're being kept in the dark by the Russians. They're dumb enough to associate with the asshole.

SID MARKS as PCI - I knew that. They're all working for somebody. I knew that. I wouldn't have dealt with them. "So you knew this information would go back to the feds." Yeah, that they'd be happier than shit.

They got a sailor that's AWOL from Memphis living next door in the apartment house in El Monte California, talking all this shit with HARGRAVES who lives next door. Do they talk about pussy do they talk about this. Talking to an iron worker who busts his ass everyday, HARGRAVES, and myself at the time were in construction working eight hours a day. And here's a guy that right away starts talking about guns and revolutions and hinky bullshit well that kind of tells you something. The government was just using their snitches to find out what the hell we're up to. We're in PROJECT CHAOS at the time. That's the word they put on the paperwork.

He got that through Hendricks, the lieutenant in Long Beach California that ran the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, LIEU, which is all Special Forces types around the country.

Ray wouldn't know what the unit was. Wackenhut helped set it up. They were going to set it up in Florida in 1967 with Governor Claude Kirk and the Herald put the end to that shit, they were going to set up a private intelligence agency in the state of Florida.

OSWALD didn't single me out, he was there talking to the Cubans. I took him outside the building. I told the Cubans, don't think this guy is with me. You've already been instructed not to deal with any Americans, not to give any press conferences, you've got this guy inside the fucking house, he sees what's going on, you don't know whether he speaks Spanish or not, you're not supposed to be giving out any visas or anything like that, you don't have the authority to do a goddamn thing so what is this guy doing in the house? ....Here's this gringo wants to join the revolution and he's not being specific as to who...but he's using all these Marine Corps words...I'm wearing an army uniform...I'm in my rebel uniform HEMMING was asked "If you didn't know who OSWALD was when you met him at the Consulate, how did you locate him at El Toro?" The second time he came I said, 'Hey, let me see your ID, I saw his ID. He came back a second time after I ran him off. Some calls me and says he's over there. 'Hey your friends back.' Friend, I said 'I ain't got fucking friends here. They didn't know where I lived they know my real name. I went back there in my mother's car and said 'What the fuck is up sports? Took him out the driveway again. I figured, 'Well they got this place under surveillance there gonna get a goddamned picture. I said, 'Look what is the thing? I told you these people can't do a damn thing for you. Number one you say you're in the Armed Forces you're in the Armed Forces, your an LTA. What makes you think I would know what LTA is? What makes you think I'm a fucking Marine? These Cubans don't know if I'm a soldier or boy scout or fucking Marine? Who the fuck are you, you know. I asked to see his dog tag. So we parted a little bit hot. I figure he's on my fucking trial for the stolen guns. So there's an additional charge. Remember Marines had deserted from Guantanamo to go into the mountains with Fidel. They nailed two guys on the base for causing that shit.

LaBorde did what he was told to do, set us up.

Courtney's wife held up a thing that had the guy's name on it, OSWALD. February or March 1963.

"They described the guy that had come on board as a volunteer crew guy and he was a guy when they were telling these ghost about the ghosts walking the deck of the ship and all that kind of stuff he got real nervous. And there was a big cackle laughing about when drove over to Fort Meyers Beach cause they brought out food cause we had contacts over there took care of him. So we spent on the (?) And were talking this and talking that then there come up there's this guy that knows me. Well, Kolby has a Z card, he's been a Merchant Marine guy for years. And Kolby had come back to us at No Name a couple of months before had gone on a ship, Lykes brothers or something and had pulled into New Orleans and ran into somebody in New Orleans that got on the ship and introduced him to some other people about all those wonderful things they were doing in Cuba and parades and this kind of horseshit he probably read the Stuckey story is what we figured at the time. And Kolby says he got a big laugh out of it because my name came and Davie's name came up and this guy like didn't know that Kolby was there and would have been there while this was happening. He just wrote the guy off as some kind of an asshole. It turns out he wasn't

Manuel Aguilar-Castro agent aj reads documentThe last time I had Aguilar located was at a house we were going to hit it to recover my rifle and other equipment that they had purloined and a trailer full of medicines and shit we'd gotten part of the trailer we wanted the rest of the medicines so we could ship them to Cuba legally. And the next thing you know they were getting permission with Masferrer and them to go down and use No Name Key as a base and that's the last of Aguilar. Summer of 1963 and we were busy on other stuff.

Snitching on Gabaldan for ATF Petered out 1961 - sent to Miami to infiltrate anti-castroites at Hargraves motel. Still is ATF informant.

Hemming: "Well that just tells me Howard probably recruited OSWALD. He had a habit of doing that, he was trying to set up his own organization. Which he did with Hall, when Hall showed up he recruited Hall. When these people go home they're working for whoever they're working for. Howard was not setting OSWALD up, he was finding out where he was coming from. The guy shows up on the scene and you're working as an informant for ATF or anybody else you're expected to fill out a goddamn index card on who this sucker is, try to get a copy of his prints and everything else. He probably was out of the West Coast meeting with Howard. And Howard would know shit about it, he just does he's told to fucking do."

Aguilar was trying to buy some guns and shit and he got a box full of rocks delivered to him...Ralph Hernandez set up a buy with Aguilar and box full of rocks it became an armed confrontation Metro Miami Police. I figured here's Ralph Hernandez and they all got machine guns and I figured at any moment Aguilar is going to have Hall and that crowd on the scene and things are gonna get real interesting.

You know what I told Garrison? The mystery to me is Hall leaves the sixth street and fourth avenue safehouse with Enrique Molina Rivera, okay. He's next seen around the corner in a little apartment complex that looks like a motel with Rorke , Sullivan, Sturgis.

Roy Hargraves was great buddies with Aguilar, okay and HARGRAVES had been told to stay away from him and was getting ready to put a bomb on his ass because he put a bomb on Louie Balbana's [phonetic] house that night after the scene with Hall and Molina and Bayo they blew the front door in one Balbana's house. They were going to hit Aguilar.

The Panama thing went bad in the latter part of February 1959 and everyone was on their guard. This wasn't sanctioned by Fidel it wasn't sanctioned by anybody. And none of the assholes that went on this invasion were rebels, they hadn't been in the mountains, they all had short hair. The guy that organized the Panama invasion was William Pawley. He suckered John Wayne's people and everybody into the thing. Pawley met him when they were making a movie about the Flying Tigers. You had two invasions of them in Nicaragua. Somoza got into the act too, he was happier than shit. Nobody could figure why there people weren't shot, there wasn't a state of siege declared. The real guerillas, things got real peaceful for them. Pastora told us right away that everything got peaceful as shit when this invasion stuff started going down. Like a fucking joke. They were all provocations. All of them were amateur assholes. These are the baited hooks that are out there.

That's why it was strange because here's Rorke and Sherman Billingsly is one of the guys who knows Hoover's secrets him and his old lady and Rorke is allowed to do all kinds of shit cause his father-in-law is fucking Billingsley. But we figured he's working for fucking Hoover. See, Rorke had been busted by Morgan in Morgan's house during the Trujillo invasion. Rorke was playing newsman there. Morgan arrested his ass. He was coming in there to do a big press release about how Trujillo's have invaded Cuba in July of 1959. So we knew Rorke from Cuba. Who's he working for? Who gives a shit? But he's working for somebody.

That kid went out in the bush with seven other Marines hunting Huks, just out side of Angeles City on the base slopes of Mount Arayat. They drove through Olongapo...I can give you the whole fucking schedule. Every night at Subic Bay and Cubi Point were out hunting Huks on the weekends. First four guys got killed they clamped down, they took everybody's 782 shooter away from 'em. Gotta knock off this shit. OSWALD got wounded outside of fucking Angeles City by a grenade fragment, playing Huk hunter.

What's that shit about STURGIS going to Dallas. He called up Philippe Vidal, I needed a ride, I had him come over to MARTINO'S house. And confirmed that STURGIS had approached him to go to Dallas and meet these money people and all this other bullshit. The caravan left on November 19, the next day."

O'Conner came by by himself, which he was prone to do, because there weren't that many people working his division which was agents, O'Conner focused on Castro agents, KGB's and all that kind of bullshit. O'Conner came by and said Dywer and a couple of other guys are gonna be coming by and what do you think? Do you think any of the Miami people could have been involved in this? I said I ain't got a fucking clue. There's weird shit that happens but I ain't got a fucking clue. He said, When they come by they're probably not gonna ask you too much shit anyway, I wouldn't volunteer anything. Well they know that I'm the one that has his fingers on every fucking move that's going on.

HEMMING saw ANGLETON March 1963 then I saw him in January or February 1964. Told him he was shutting the mother fucker down.

LaBorde shows up and I can't even remember what his fucking cover story was. I thought he was dead. This is a safe house. Like we ain't advertising where we're living. He ran afoul of smugglers in 1978 and 1979 he sank the goddamn corvette. He shows up again in 1978 when we're in the smuggling business, hearing all kinds of stories from people that he knows, so evidently he's been inside doing that type of work on Black Tuna, Banco, Grouper One and Grouper Two, Swordfish. This fucker shows up and he knows a lot of the principals. So I figure he's still on the company payroll. They pissed off because we're going after company people. The guy that ran the intelligence for the bay of Pigs was of the top smugglers. The fuckers threw down on me with silenced MAC-10 for about four hours. He had a condo with a fucking drain in the floor. These are bad assed mother fuckers, they're all top CIA people and they're all fucking smugglers. We went after their Colombian assets.

Popped with qualudes April 14, 1980; July 1976 first indictment; October 1976 transfer of silencer.

Got to Baton Rouge, talked to everybody there, met with HARGRAVES and went to see Garrison. After two weeks with Garrison HARGRAVES decided to turn over the construction company to Whatley, Louis Van Hook and take off with me to California.

What happened the next day the Robert Kennedy assassination that's got my name on it? The next morning at 7:30 in the morning they had Sirhan's mother's house bannered off a crime scene and Dick Hathcock working for Baxter Ward, was there with a camera man and a sound van and I drove up in my black and white as I drove up in my black and white and went inside Sirhan's mother's house. He almost had a heart attack when I walked by him.

Did you go on behalf of the LAPD?

No, on behalf of me.

That was with Lloyd Pullen. He was on the Joe Pine Show regularly, called all these people niggers and all kinds of shit. So HARGRAVES had a sort of a welfare thing, lived in the projects. He showed the niggers how to organize. He got the community affairs volunteers all agitated cause there were a lot of Latinos there and all that kind of shit there. One thing led to another and we had TV cameras, we got him before the county commission, got him on KhG- TV-9, Maria Coles program, Bob Dornan. HARGRAVES did some benefits some benefits for these people because they were being fucked over by these conservative anti-welfare shitheads. So Pullen was shocked that HARGRAVES was doing all these good things for the niggers. I told HARGRAVES when Pullen confronts you with this try to get as much information so we know who his sources are, how accurate his sources are because I'm dealing with the LA County Sheriff's Intel Bureau and they wanted to know what Long Beach PD is doing what all these other people are doing. So Pullen confronted him and practically told him how he wiped his ass the night before. I mean this is up to date accurate fucking information. So HARGRAVES came back on him and said 'You're dealing with top fucking people.'

Who is it, L E Intelligence Unit. So Pullen figured , 'Wait a minute what have we got here. Then they turned him over to Lt. Hendricks of Long Beach PD Intell who was the chairman of the LEIU.

After we did our Garrison thing he decided that things were kind of boring in Louisiana and it's time to get out of Dodge. Cleaver was on the CIA pay roll, Ron Karanga, organized US, bullshited Freed and all those other people. he wanted to start a war like a ranch war. Project Long Beach, fucking M-60's, AK 47s all over the fucking place. They were going to go and hit the downtown Panther Headquarters. I told 'em, 'There ain't nothing there. There's four boxes of 50 caliber ammo, but there's tunnels, steel doors, sandbags and bad motherfuckers that walk in there. Four guys walked up to the front and they blew their fuckasses away. Ended up having to bomb them from the fucking roof.

The whole scheme was to get the brown berets together with the Black Panthers so that the final solution could all happen at once. You had the Watts riots then the Martin Luther King thing in 1968. They said 'Enough of this shit, we're gonna eliminate these motherfuckers. If they ain't here they can't riot. Duarte is supposed to be a Castro Cuban because he wasn't known in the Miami exile community that wide. So he come through Mexico. So all these Fidelista's from Mexico were gonna help the Brown Berets. It was a woman who worked for the Goldwater campaign that was built like a brick shithouse, looks like Angie Dickinson, married but fucked like a pig. I had her riding in my lap in a Volkswagon. She got off on these bombings. Running around with Lyod Pullen and fucking Hargraves blowing up these fucking buildings and shit, but she was working for the company to. Hendricks of the LA PD put Durarte on HARGRAVES and they were stunned that they knew one another. They immediately started speaking Spanish. Because the Long Beach PD and CIA thought he had come out of Mexico, that he'd defected. HARGRAVES says 'Bullshit, this motherfucker has been working with us in Miami for five fucking years, working for Masferrer.

They would stand you with three or four people and leave you standing alive a couple of minutes later. Now that's trauma and that could fuck you up and people could think you're a nut after that. You were deprived of water cause its abandoned stables the secret police or garages at the time for cells. There's 47 fucking people in here, we can't even lay down, it's hotter than shit, the windows are fucking closed up with welded steel plates. No ventilation, there's sweat pouring off of us. The floor has constantly got an inch of goddamn water, sweat, it stinks. There's one little faucet which you got to put a handkerchief over cause visible worms come out of the water and you have to ask the guards to turn the water on and they're rotating guards because in a matter of a couple of days they get sympathetic to you. Cause they find out you're a rebel and all that kind of stuff.

HARGRAVES he's done time twice in the 70 and 1980's. He injured himself in construction and got insurance settlements on three occasions. Got addicted to the pain killer, had a spinal fusion, had ruptured disks, all kinds of horseshit. Became a junkie and robbed banks, went to prison and got out. Suffice to say the word militia is close to his heart.

Guy who set HEMMING up was friend of sister-in-law.

Collins introduced me to a number of people. Jerry Ray may have been one of John Bloomer's guys. See I was going to send Whatley and Collins and those people to train one of Bloomer's teams but we got involved with something else. Bloomer was with the NSRP. He came out with four people. Collins came by the house, he was in a cab and went to a meeting on the corner bar.

They moved in on HARGRAVES in El Monte. I knew the Humphrey visit was coming up and I put into COPE. About the time that HARGRAVES was shaking hands with Hubert Humphrey. This asshole sailor shows up a couple of days later. I thought, well it's the Secret Service but they're getting a little bit heavy here. Intel been getting inquiries from people. So I told HARGRAVES, ignore the motherfucker. And this guy has parties, has his own pad there, a lot of drinking, smoking dope and shit and he's AWOL from NAS Memphis. HARGRAVES probably ran his mouth about political stuff but he was suspicious because this guy seemed to know too much. He was really on his toes, people trying to set him up. So out of the blue here's some fucker talking he's contract to do King and all that. Where wondering if its beer talk? I told him, "While we're working this shit, don't be seen with these people." I mean he'd been with Garrison, he knew the scenario patsies and all that kind of shit. I said it could be right out of the blue, set you up with hot car, a car full of dope, whatever, to put you out of circulation. And you'll never know why. You'll never know why. There gonna take you out of circulation. We just couldn't get rid of this guy. Then, a day or two before the event, the guy packs up very quietly and says he going back to Memphis. Well, HARGRAVES had already sent him over, use the pay phone call the Bureau. Ask for so and so, who I didn't know, his name was given to me. He met with them, miles away from El Monte, he refused to identify himself but they knew who he was so that made him nervous. The Bureau was paying for the meal, freeloaded a big, there happier than shit cause they eating a big meal. Then the thing goes down, and he was more worried about FBI now. HARGRAVES moved out of El Monte real fast. He knew the safest place to go was in niggertown cause he knew there was no niggers in the FBI. He was worried about the FBI at that time. He figured they were part of it. He'd warned them nothing was done. It's an AWOL sailor, they should have busted him. They should have come by, nobody came by that apartment, nobody fucked with this guy. HARGRAVES was on unemployment workmens comp injury stuff, he injured himself working in LA in early 1968. He ended up getting forty grand for that and ah the latter part of 1968, it took about a year to get it, then he went back to Florida, got a bunch of weapons for Alpha and they wouldn't let him go on the trip, everybody died on the fucking trip, he's still bitching about, all the M-16s and shit that he bought through Lauchli on the way back.

Porch monkey sidewalk nigger boo.

And here's HARGRAVES, we're down in Watts and kicking in the front of one of the Panther operations. We got niggers that are shaking down old folks down in Compton and shit, regular gang bullshit. The cops were happier than shit because we're coming in and fucking these people over. And they think they're bad. One Sunday with Lloyd Pullen in his military camouflaged jeep we pull up in front the NOI temple. No parking there. Park, get out, there's a couple of guys with their boyties and shit. Pullen shot by blacks spent a week in the hospital. Pullen was very prominent on TV in the press one of the guys that during the Watts riot organized a group of like militia that protected a lot of properties in Long Beach. This was a case where I got connected with the guy through Joe Pine. Pullen has an incorporated group and there big thing is getting ready for the next one. He would tell people and he would tell Joe Pine, 'Hey you people who have problems with nigger gangs or any of this kind of bullshit you let me know, we'll do something about it. So he was favorite with the cops.

Werbell's MAC-10's and all that shit, that opened the door to the palace level, the highest level, in every fucking country south of the Rio Grande. And opened us to everything that was going on. This group wanted to pull a coup, death squads, the whole fucking thing. The only element that has that whole package of civilians, foreign ministers, ex-ministers, government, a cabal in each country including wealthy land owners. The only element that has more than the gun people are the dope smugglers. Because all these people are on their payroll.

RAOUL: "First name, Robert. He's dead now, he died three years ago. He ain't no spic but he spoke perfect Spanish, he could pass as a spic, but he wasn't no spic. Raoul, AKA Robert, his files are in Maryland, at a relatives house. He most recently was with the Croats till he died three years ago, but Romero, the attempt on Betancourt in 1960. His files are available if we had some money. You've heard the guys name before and you've heard his aliases but you never put him together with this. This guy was an author of many many things that had to do wit this kind of business, coups and all that shit under a pseudonym. The relative doesn't know the guys nasty background, he just knows the intelligence side. The sketch looks like Robert. Died a horrible death, cancer, horrible fucking death. The treatment weakened him, he bled to death in the middle of the night. HARGRAVES knew this guy well. All of our people knew him well.

Even Hoffa couldn't believe it was going down, he had so much respect for Grady Partin. HARGRAVES was dealing with Grady Partin when he was still friendly with Hoffa. Partin helped do a number of things in Baton Rouge for HARGRAVES. And HARGRAVES was puzzled what the hell could they get on Grady to make him roll over that way. I never asked HARGRAVES [about Partin's connection to Castro] but they were like two of kind in talking about revolutionaries, that was a term that were used, the real revolutionaries, starting with the American revolution. HARGRAVES got along famously with Grady because he talked like a revolutionary and he had the stories and he had the shit together in the exact (?) and that kind of stuff.

In 1967 I was standing there talkin to Hubert Humphrey. One agent goes behind my car and checks to Florida National Guard license plate on m7 1966 Polaris. Meanwhile I'm talking to Hubert Humphrey on the sidewalk.

Aragon was a company man, CIA. He had all the ID but he hadn't gone through their school. He was in protective research, which is the unnamed department nobody ever heard of an all that shit so when we walked in on GASQUEZ I said I'm here to see Ernie Aragon protective research. That gets you in the door.

I'm supporting him with money on a weekly basis, somebody's giving money to Lt. Hendricks LIEU and some operational funds are dispersed out to Pullen and a little bit might get to HARGRAVES. But what is he going to use money for other than gasoline or this or that. He wasn't allowed to have a car. Then somebody might question how you afford a car when you're living in a fucking project. He has to be poor, white trash. That's his best role. Any money he had an explanation - he sold a couple of ounces of pot, or this or that, which he did because he had a license to steal - he could have gone down and robbed banks and got away with it - but it would have fucked up the operation. It would have brought the Bureau in.

Peru AMDOC inc Tom Dooley who ran CIA cover op in Laos. Fucked up - fix up.

1971 independent work

In 1971 we were doing the weapons being delivered to the Mexican Judicial Police to take out Luchiano the guerilla leader in the states of Moralos and Guerrero. And he was taken out with MAC-10's and silencers.

1972 Death squads, Guatemala, Nicaragua and El Salvadore for Parabellum. Supplying the death squad with weaponry so we can be friends with them. 1971- 1975.

They were never touched, they were company. Very wealthy people. Carabba is an importer exported. O'Donnell and Thomas - 'They're all international land developers. They have part of Paradise Island over in Nassau.' Verisi has a yacht over at Fort Everglades. None of them were ever touched.

June 1976. Denies involvement in plot to kill Langerud.

Cokie Zimeri, the palace assassin had a falling out with Langerude. Shelito was running around throwing hand grenades and shooting at people. Cokie and the old man didn't like it because the kid got wounded by a German grenade in the streets with my brother out on an operation. Cokie's not one to take a lot of shit plus he had enemies in the palace military, mostly intelligence assholes. So they tried to do a hit on him and President wouldn't believe it so he had a confrontation with the President and the L was embassased that he had been bullshited. In Cokie's book that's when you kill people but L would discipline them, just send them out of the country, Spain or somewhere. That pissed Cokie off because Cokie's a bit of a psychopath and he had (?) Plus he's very wealthy, his family they're Palestinians. They're personal friends with Arafat and Khadaffi, world travelers, they owned banks here in Miami. At that time they were worth 80 or 90 million. They did a major hit on Cokie a couple of days after my brother left. My brother was living with him as a bodyguard and all that shit in 1975. [He was hit] He's driving and his hands were shot up so bad because he's trying to drive with his elbows. And he can't see out the windshield because its covered with blood. But he turns on the windshield wiper and says it didn't work worth a shit, cause the blood was squirting out of my chest on the inside. Arrangements were made, I flew down there, things happened, he was taken to El Salvador to recuperate.

Did he practice with that weapon? I take it under consideration. The guy would have had to have practiced somewhere, it had to be a remote area, buses don't run to remote areas and they don't want him to have a friend with a car - that's completely out - so he's got to ride a bus to a place within the city that is a range to fire his weapon. Where's the box of ammo, where's the empty shell casings? Where is the gun cleaning kit, where are the extra clips that hold the fucking bullets. The clip doesn't come with the weapon.

HEMMING: "Where does he zero the scope. When the package comes from Klein's the scopes not mounted. You got to mount it."

It could be a completely innocent thing and that one of these mysterious friends that he'd never want to identify whoever encouraged him to get the weapon or bought the weapon for him or all that bullshit he one his own decided Hell, I'll call up Sammy or SLIME BALL and pop a few caps. My next problem is getting fucking ammo. Well maybe SLIME BALL or Sammy. Well let me look around and it took him a few weeks and he found some ammo.

Now they went to that address and Kikki Ferrer was the guy that talked to Larry Howard. Hall was trying to locate Cisneros' buddy by the name of Nico Lopez. They had the name wrong. The guy's real name was Naico Crespi, Cammillo's number four guy that when Camillio got it got the fuck out of here. He lived on Magellin Circle. That was his mailing address. So when he moved to Fort Worth this Kiki Ferrer friend snitch who was spying on Naico Crespi was the Cuban they were sent to. Larry Howard didn't know that I knew Niaco Crespi. Loran Hall didn't know. The FBI did because NC was a suspected Castro agent. Who did they have spying on him? Another suspected Castro agent, Kiki Ferrer. NC in country illegally, never got parole card

THE ASIA FOUNDATION AND THE PACIFIC FOUNDATION

HEMMING claimed his uncle was head of the ASIA Pacific Foundation. There was no such entity as the Asia Pacific Foundation. The Singapore-based Asia Foundation was founded in 1951 by Pan Am boss Peter Trippe and a number of West Coast financiers, along with the CIA, as an Asian counterpart to Radio Free Europe. L. McCartney reported in Friends In High Places: "...Bechtel became a charter member of the National Committee for a Free Asia, an organization devoted to fighting communism and promoting free enterprise. The brainchild of Allen Dulles, NCFA, which later changed its name to the Asia Foundation, included on its membership such Bechtel friends and associates as Henry Kaiser... Together, the members of the Asia Foundation sponsored a number of propaganda activities, most notably, Radio Free Asia, a Far Eastern counterpart of Radio Free Europe... According to Simpson's papers, the Asia Foundation membership was only one of a number of links Bechtel had with the CIA. At the invitation of Allen Dulles, Steve Bechtel also served as the Agency's liaison with the Business Council, and in that capacity provided regular reports on tidbits council members had picked up overseas. In addition, Steve, and many of his colleagues on the council like John T. Conner, chairman of the Allied Chemical Corporation, were debriefed by the Agency after they made trips abroad. [p119] It was first called the Committee for Free Asia, and was headed by the late Robert Blum from 1953 until 1962, who several sources said resigned from the CIA to take it over. Gabriel Kaplan, of the Free Asia Committee, was sent to Manila in 1953 to help General Edwin Landsdale elect Raymond Magsaysay as President of the Philippines. [Bonner, R. Waltzing with a Dictator p40] The foundation, which was first sponsored by the Office of Policy Coordination, and then by the CIA's International Organizations Division under Tom Braden, provided cover for at least one CIA agent, and carried out a variety of media-related ventures. [NYT 12.26.77] In 1960 the Asia Foundation worked with the Leo Cherne of the International Rescue Committee in Vietnam. The Asia Foundation received funding from the CIA and had a budget of about $7 million dollars a year. [Ross and Wise, The Espionage Establishment, page 155] This fact became public knowledge in 1967 when it was revealed that the National Student Association received CIA funding. Following these revelations the Asia Foundation was banned from India. When the American Committee for Cultural Freedom needed CIA funding, representatives of that organization contact Norman Thomas, who in turn contacted Allen Dulles telephonically. [Domhoff, Higher Circles p264] In 1984 Congress passed the Asia Foundation Act which mandated funding for the foundation from the State Department and A.I.D.

JOHN LOWERY SIMPSON

There was no Art Simpson connected with the Asia Foundation, however, there was a John Lowrey Simpson, who worked for the Bechtel Company. John L. Simpson provided Bechtel with intelligence connections as a Director of the J. Henry Schroder Bank and a close friend of the Dulles brothers. John Simpson was in touch with Allen Dulles in regard to matters of cover for CIA agents. In Friends In High Places, L. McCartney wrote: "The approval for CIA covers came directly from Steve Bechtel, who had his own ties to the Agency. In March 1951, while his company's Middle East crews were pushing toward Taplines Mediterranean terminus, Bechtel became a charter member of the National Committee for a Free Asia... The brainchild of Allen Dulles, NCFA, which later changed its name to the Asia Foundation, included in its membership such Bechtel friends and associates as Henry Kaiser." From 1950 to 1952 the Pacific Foundation was headed by Arthur Dean, a trustee of the Asia Foundation, and a senior partner in the law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell.

When Jose Arevalo was elected President of Guatemala United States Ambassador Richard Patterson warned him that the United States was not satisfied with his performance. In the book titled The CIA in Guatemala by R. Immerman, it was reported that "In issuing his warning to Arevalo, Patterson reflected a growing consensus with United States Government circles. The consensus among the leaders of those business concerns with large Guatemalan investments had already been formed. These leaders had met with Patterson shortly after his appointment in 1948 to let him know exactly how they felt. Among those present were United Fruit Companies' Zemurly and it's president, Thomas Dudley Cabot. J.L. Simpson, president of the board of IRCA [the Guatemalan railroad]...Acting as spokesman for the distinguished group, Simpson told Patterson that Guatemala was 'not a place to invest American dollars until such time as they were assured that the discriminatory Labor Code would be done away with.'" [page 87] Mother Jones magazine reported: "Two organizations as security conscious as Bechtel and the CIA don't leave many visible traces of their relationship. And Bechtel employees are sworn to secrecy, both when the company hires them and when they leave. But the flow of men back and forth between the two institutions indicates more than mere coincidence. Take John Lowery Simpson for example. His sudden employment as chair of Bechtel's high level finance committee in 1952 surprised the company's old timers. Bechtel has a strong tradition of internal promotion, and Simpson, whose prior job was executive vice president of the obscure Schroder Bank in New York, seemed to come out of nowhere. What the old timers didn't realize, though, was that Simpson had strong ties with the Office of Strategic Services through his friendship with Allen Dulles (a founding director of Schroder Bank as well as of the OSS), and that Simpson, who had access to military intelligence during the war, served as a Bechtel advisor during those years. After the way, the OSS, of course, became the CIA, and the Schroder Bank, or which Simpson remained a director after Bechtel, was recently discovered to have been a bank for the CIA director's controversial discretionary fund." [Mother Jones, 9.78]

HEMMING

A Blakey "Eyes Only" document exists about HEMMING. "The information itself does not appear sensitive, however, should HEMMING become aware of this information, in its present form it is quite possible he would be able to identify our source..." [Jack Friedlander AC CI CI 532-77]

HEMMING stated he has interviewed Cubans recently having defected from Cuba; he has ascertained a considerable amount regarding Cuban radar defenses; knows which corridors are currently open; but has not considered making this information available to the United States Government." [FBI 2-1693-97 pgs. 1-3 w/h]

On December 31, 1963, the FBI generated a highly deleted document concerning HEMMING and Alexander Rorke. [FBI HQ 2-1693-97 pgs. 1-3 w/h]

In 1970 two FBI Letter Head Memorandums were generated about HEMMING. [FBI LHMs Miami 105-3973 FBI 105-86406-28 9.21.70 pgs. 1-3, 5-6 w/h, 12.10.70; HQ 2-1693-55 p7 w/h; HQ 105-92196-8 pgs. 1-3 w/h]

On December 31, 1963, the FBI produced a Letter Head Memorandum on HEMMING that was still mostly withheld. [FBI 2-1693-97]

On May 8, 1968, HEMMING told, Steve Burton, an investigator for New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison that Edward A. Collins and Enrique Molina (a Castro spy) were in Dallas during November 1963. (When HEMMING dislikes someone, he puts them in Dallas.)

When a Freedom of Information Act request was filed for the records of Edward A. Collins, the Bureau stated: "Eighteen pages were reviewed and were withheld in their entirety, with no segregable material available for release...13 pages out of the 18 had been referred to the CIA as the information originated with them...CIA advised that all of its information should be denied in its entirety..." [FBI ltr. 5.15.79 Bresson/AJ]

The CIA reported that on October 4, 1961, HEMMING: "Met with Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo and planned to establish base outside of U.S. for training and future attacks against Cuba." [CIA DBF 91349 10.4.61 100-9-14]

In October 1961 the FBI generated five reports concerning HEMMING. Two concerned INTERPEN. One of these was dated October 4, 1961, and covered the investigative period from July 22, 1961, to September 21, 1961. Most of this document has been withheld.

In February 1962 "According to D, on the basis of an anonymous tip, the Los Angeles County Sheriff's office recovered a 45-caliber U.S. pistol, serial number 1504981-SA from a car in the Los Angeles. Subsequent to its recovery by the Sheriff's office the Subject [HEMMING] claimed the pistol indicating he was a CIA Agent who was on a training mission in connection with an assignment aimed at Cuba. The Sheriff's office contacted the OO/C Los Angeles office who, in turn, requested the Sheriff's Office attempt to keep the matter out of the newspapers and that they would attempt to trace the identity of the individual. The local CID office of the U.S. Army also became interested in the matter; however, they were also requested to suspend any active investigation of the matter. I also advised Joe Langam (deleted) WH Division who advised that the Subject is not of interest to Project JMATE nor has he ever been in the past. Stanton F. Ense. Jerry Mollani, SO/TF/W stated on February 5, 1962, that no record of instant pistol was available in records." [CIA 19774 2.2.62; CIA FOIA 00023] In February 1962 a notation was made on this routing slip which was withheld.

On December 3, 1962, a FBI Letterhead Memorandum was generated about HEMMING, however it was still withheld. [FBI 2-1693-71]

According to HEMMING, these four Cubans had been trained with the Cuban invasion army in Guatemala in early 1961. On April 30, 1962, the FBI created a report titled, "Larry LaBorde, HEMMING, Edward Collins, Antonio Cuesta. In January 1963 Charles Ashmann said the CIA and other government agencies were guilty of entrapment in HEMMING'S No Name Key bust. On January 8, 1963, the FBI reported: "(Deleted) advised that although HEMMING claims to be anti-Communist, he is amoral, being for or against Communism depending on how it personally affects him; he is capable of anything and is motivated by a dream of future economic and political advantage and power in Latin America. ## RFK AND HEMMING

On December 13, 1968, the CIA reported on ROY HARGRAVES:

Reference (deleted) Memo dated November 19, 1968, with Report on Subject from a Confidential Source. Office of Security records are negative on Subject except for a newspaper clipping dated December 5, 1962, in file of GERALD PATRICK HEMMING. The clipping reported the arrest of a band of anti-Castro guerillas at No Name Key, Florida...GERALD PATRICK HEMMING is a figure in Garrison's investigation. He is an ex-Marine, soldier-of-fortune, who is the leader of the anti-Castro group called INTERPEN. His group had no Agency connection, but he is known to other Cuban organizations. (Deleted) A list of these reports was furnished the FBI in August 1964. HEMMING is also known as JERRY PATRICK. Reference report states HARGRAVES is close to Jose Antonio Durarte Oropesa. Jose Zacacias Tallet Duarte was of interest in June 1968 because of newspaper publicity in connection with the case of Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, accused assassin of Senator Robert F. Kennedy. Jose Zacacias Tallet Duarte said he had argued and scuffled with Sirhan Sirhan on May 21, 1968, at a Students for a Democratic Society meeting held at the home of Robert and Raquel Leanle, Colombians, now residing in Hollywood, California. Sirhan accused Duarte of being a CIA Agent. (Deleted) Duarte, a Cuban poet and writer, had been a special advisor to Raoul Roa and a writer for El Mundo, Cuban newspaper. Cuban Power is an auxiliary action group of MIRR, an anti-Castro organization of Cuban exiles headquartered in Miami under the leadership of Orlando Bosch. On November 15, 1968, he was convicted on five charges of violating the Neutrality Laws of the U.S. at Miami, Florida. Cuban Power has been responsible for a number of bombings and has been under continuing investigation by the FBI. Office of Security records were negative on Pam Barsby, Robert Barsby, Charles Whittington and Theodore Gloum. Regarding Lloyd Pullen, a report on Mort Sahl for a Confidential Source of the Office of Security advised on July 1968 that Pullen is a local leader of an organization called 'Staff' which is the front name for the Minutemen. Pullen was described as a close associate of GERALD PATRICK HEMMING. 'Jerry' referred to in reference report is possibly HEMMING. [CIA Memo re: HARGRAVES 12.13.68]

HEMMING told this researcher:

Duarte was with Rolando Masferrer. He was a suspected Castro agent. What is a Castro agent doing with Sirhan Sirhan? Somebody set it up, tried to burn fucking Fidel for another hit. I was a block away from the Ambassador Hotel when the assassination went down. Lieutenant Hendricks of the Long Beach Police Department put Duarte on HARGRAVES and was stunned that they knew one another. They immediately started speaking Spanish. Because the Long Beach Police Department and the CIA thought he had come out of Mexico, that he'd defected. HARGRAVES says 'Bullshit, this motherfucker has been working with us in Miami for five fucking years, working for Rolando Masferrer.'

The whole scheme was to get the Brown Berets together with the Black Panthers so that the final solution could all happen at once. You had the Watts riots, then the Martin Luther King thing in 1968. They said 'Enough of this shit, we're gonna eliminate these motherfuckers. If they ain't here, they can't riot.' Duarte is supposed to be a Castro Cuban because he wasn't known in the Miami exile community that wide. He came through Mexico. So all these Fidelista's from Mexico were gonna help the Brown Berets.

HEMMING 1995:

What happened the next day after the Robert Kennedy assassination that's got my name on it? The next morning at 7:30 a.m. they had Sirhan's mother's house bannered off as a crime scene. Dick Hathcock, who was working for Baxter Ward, was there with a camera man and a sound van. I drove up in my black and white and went inside Sirhan's mother's house. Hathcock almost had a heart attack when I walked by him.

HEMMING was asked: "Did you go on behalf of the Los Angeles Police Department?" HEMMING told this researcher: "No, on behalf of me." HEMMING had nothing to do with the Robert Kennedy assassination. Duarte was just trying to dirty up the Communist Cubans by linking them with the assassination. SIRHAN did not act alone and the RFK assassination is the subject of this researcher's next book, Islamist Terrorism from Sirhan to Major Hasan.

HOSTY'S VERSION OF THE EVENTS OF JUNE 1963

James Hosty claimed that on June 19, 1963, President John F. Kennedy recommenced his fight against Fidel Castro:

On June 17, 1963, Kennedy gave a speech before the American University opening a peace initiative with Fidel Castro. Fidel Castro wouldn't go along with Khrushchev, and that was when the peace initiative started. Two days later, he had the CIA go after Fidel Castro again with Khrushchev's permission. Read an article by Ben Bradlee in the October 1963 issue of Newsweek Magazine speaking with a source close to the White House that was Kennedy himself. The article stated that Khrushchev had washed his hands of Castro and he wouldn't mind one bit if Castro was overthrown. On June 19, 1963, Kennedy signed a Top Secret, Executive Order, ordering Castro's overthrow. You are going in the wrong direction. After Castro threatened Kennedy, OSWALD went down to Mexico City and told the Cuban's 'I'll kill Kennedy for you.' The Monday before the assassination, Kennedy gave a speech to the exiles in Miami and said, 'Get 'em boys. Better luck next time.'

James Hosty commented on the Bay of Pigs:

"You know what that air support was? Three B-25s that had 20 minutes air time. Shut-up and listen to me. I talked to some of those people who came out of the Bay of Pigs. They said they walked into an ambush. They said there were 90,000 militia men there with 100 tanks waiting for them. Three B-25's would have made no difference. Look what happened in Vietnam. Air strikes can't win in a jungle. [Interview with Hosty 8.93]

A study of all issues of Newsweek magazine for October 1963 yielded no articles by Ben Bradlee regarding Cuba. The Periscope section reported that Khrushchev's upcoming visit to Cuba was bound dampen U.S.- Soviet relations. Hosty is a rightwing crackpot who knew that OSWALD was a CIA operation when he was assigned the OSWALD case but will not admit this because it would hurt the right.

American Spy info: In 1981, I won a $650,000 libel judgment against the Spotlight publisher, Liberty Lobby, which, unfortunately for my bank account, was overturned on a technicality when it was appealed. The case was retried, but a jury decided that the paper had not published the article in "a reckless disregard of the truth," so therefore it did not fit a narrow legal definition of "malice," and the jury ruled against me. There is an entire book to be written about the trial, but suffice it to say that any of the thousands of pages that try to connect me to the killing are utterly wrong, and a few books about the subject leave out many pertinent details and testimony that prove I was not in Dallas on the fateful day.

Some theorists hypothesize that two other high-profile individuals might have been involved: Richard Nixon. As far as I'm concerned, as paranoid as he was, Nixon would never have been involved. He would not only have been horrified of the action but would never have trusted anyone to know he was involved.

Some of those Cuban exiles might have been involved in the assassination, though I couldn't name anybody offhand. It is alleged that Antonio Veciana, the leader of the anti-Castro group Alpha 66, met with Dave Phillips in Mexico City and, at some time, with Oswald. So that is another avenue that could use further investigation.

I think Oswald was actually what he purported to be: a left-wing individual who for lack of any other determining goal had subscribed to the Marxist tenets of the Soviet Union. I think he was attracted by authority, and authority is something the Soviet Union had lots of. They could put people on top of him to hold him down and guide him so that he would do whatever they might want. That whole history of Oswald's defection is a little uncertain as far as I'm concerned, because he came over with too much baggage, and that was revealed later on. Nobody knew it at the time, but I think the bureau was much more cautious of what they did with him.

The CIA never did anything with him and had no reason to. He was a nothing. Oswald was a kind of incompetent dreamer who drifted into Texas politics and then international politics. He got involved with Fair Play for Cuba (a pro-Castro group) and other causes, which limited his scope and limited our interest, if any, in him. I'm assuming that over the years any contact reports between Phillips and Oswald would be a matter of record. You could almost say if there was nothing in the file, then it never existed.

Why would Phillips have a meeting with Oswald? What did he want from Oswald? I think that anybody who had lived in the Soviet Union and had renounced American citizenship to do so would be a natural subject for contact and investigation. Although Phillips was not an investigator, maybe he received direct orders to go after Oswald and see if he could recruit him.

MEXICO CITY SAFEHOUSE

HUNT'S Mexico City address was an anti-Castro safehouse, in which the Mexican police had an interest, since anti-Castro attacks had been planned from there. During his HUNT v. WEBERMAN deposition, HUNT stated: "I traveled down there [Mexico] in 1960, I was there with my family until the early fall when it became apparent that the Cubans [exiles] had incurred the hostility of the Mexican Government. At that point I sent my wife and my family back to the United States..." In Give Us This Day, HUNT wrote:

In Mexico I was to be treated by the station as a separate unit responsible for all frente matters including the Mexico City delegation of the Cuban Revolutionary Front. We found a small furnished house in Lomas de Chapultepec...I established a private office, moved in a large safe and worked out operation schedules with my station contact...the delegation reported increasing harassment from Mexican officials. Finally Sam reported having been trailed to the safehouse and when I looked down from the third floor window, I could see a sloppily dressed surveillant slouched against a lamppost. A counter-surveillance team traced the man to Mexican Police Headquarters. [HUNT Day pp. 51-58]

JAMES QUENTIN REYOLDS

The CIA reported: "On November 19, 1963, DO/OPRP, in the person of HOWARD HUNT A/DO/CA, requested a PCSA to utilize (Deleted) #344, 074, as a ghost writer in the United States and abroad under DODS Project (deleted). The routing sheet attached to the request indicated that (Deleted) was known to Mr. John Greely, DO/AF." [CIA Memo Edmund X. Klipa to Solie undated] On December 9, 1963, HUNT asked for approval to hire #377 955 as a ghost writer for the Domestic Operations Division.

On August 21, 1964, Elizabeth McIntosh (now deceased) DO/CA requested a PCSA/CSA to utilize #397 025 Quentin James Reynolds, who wrote for Readers Digest and Random House, as a witting ghost writer in the United States. The request was denied by Edmund X. Klipa, Chief, Investigations Division, who reported to Bruce Solie that Quentin Reynold's was a security risk. Quentin Reynolds (born April 11, 1902 died March 17, 1965) was one of America's most popular correspondents during World War II. He was a colleague of Daymon Runyon and Heywood Broun. In 1952 he wrote an article for Reader Digest and a book for Bennett Cerf on George DuPre, a Canadian who claimed to be a British Secret Agent during the war. DuPre was an imposter.

GEORGE MCMILLAN

In the mid-1960's, Priscilla Johnson married George McMillan, (March 11, 1913-September 1, 1987). Born in Knoxville, Tennessee, where he attended high school. Moved to Washington, D.C., area in the 1930s. Employed by Office of War Information during the war, then enlisted in Marine Corps, working as combat correspondent. After the war, moved to Aiken, South Carolina; wrote The Old Breed: A History of the First

Marine Division in World War II (1949), about division in which he served. Reported on civil rights movement as freelance journalist; his articles appeared in New York Times, Saturday Evening Post, Washington Post, Look, and other periodicals. Worked as writer-in-residence at Atlanta University in the late 1960s; lived in Cambridge, Massachusetts, during the 1970s. Published The Making of an Assassin: The Life of James Earl Ray (1976). Died in St. Helena, South Carolina.

On May 15, 1968 McMillan telephoned the FBI in Boston: "He said that James Earl Ray's attorney, Bernard Fensterwald, habitually makes wild accusations and, McMillan did not feel any response was warranted." McMillan declined to be interviewed by the FBI, but then called back two hours later and agreed to an interview. He was interviewed on May 10, 1968. George McMillan told the FBI he was "retained by the CBS and Time, Inc. to conduct a study of OSWALD in connection with the JFK assassination and that study led him to the conclusion OSWALD acted on his own and there was no conspiracy involved." On June 4, 1968 McMillan visited the FBI Office in Atlanta, and asked if the Bureau could assist him in connection with the preparation of his book. The FBI's files reflected that McMillan was the author of an article entitled "The Birmingham Church Bombing" which was published in the June 6, 1964 edition of the Saturday Evening Post. It was favorable to the FBI. FBI files reflected McMillan that he was "the author of an article which appeared November 1960, captioned 'Racial Violence and Law Enforcement' dealing with the troubles in Little Rock, Chattanooga and Montgomery. The article was printed in pamphlet form by New South, a publication published by the Southern Regional Council, which in turn is interlocked with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, an organization cited as subversive by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Our files also reflect that McMillan wrote some studies in 1956 on 'Individual Rights and Civil Liberties' for which he was paid by the 'Fund for the Republic, Inc.'" [FBI 44-37761-4358] Priscilla Johnson and George McMillan lived in Atlanta. George McMillan was a civil rights movement specialist.

KING ASSASSINATION

JERRI

Journalist Louis Lomax wrote that in Los Angeles Ray was associated with a blonde woman named "Jerri" who frequented the Sultan Room bar and the Rabbit's Foot bar. "Jerri" was unknown at both these establishments and the FBI concluded: "Investigation has not identified any Jerri as an associate of Ray." Lomax later believed this woman was Dyrell Dennis. The FBI:

When initially contacted on April 25, 1968, she advised she had no knowledge of James Earl Ray and through viewing his photographs said she did not know him or anyone named Eric Starvo Galt. Subsequently, she was recontacted on April 27, 1968, at the Belmont Hotel, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. She advised that she had resided at the St. Francis Hotel, Los Angeles, California, from March 1, 1968, to March 9, 1968. One night in the Sultan Room, Hollywood Boulevard, she was approached by a man who introduced himself as Eric (Last Name Unknown). This person drank screwdrivers and claimed to have worked with computers. He had in his possession a large sum of money in $10 and $20 bills. She talked him into giving her a $20 bill after which they left the Sultan Room and went to another club where they continued to drink and then went to Eric's room, #403 in the Saint Francis Hotel. As they drank he told her on more than one occasion that he could become violent. She began to fear that he might possibly be a psychopath (deleted). Under pretext, she left the Saint Francis Hotel. Subsequently she again encountered Eric at the Sultan Room at which time he asked for and she returned his $20 bill. She stated she has not seen this person since that time. [FBI ME 44-1987]

On December 15, 1967, a call was made to (deleted) in Montgomery, Louisiana, from an ENCO Station in Texas. James Earl Ray believed he might have made the call to New Orleans from a ENCO Service Station. On December 16, 1967, a call was made from the vicinity of San Antonio, Texas, to New Orleans. [FBI 44-38861-3105] The FBI discovered that on December 17, 1967, someone placed a call to 522-8495 in New Orleans. This number belonged to Hilda De Los Reyes of 1410 St. Andrew Street. De Los Reyes, a Cuban exile who spoke little English, denied ever receiving a telephone call from Texas and was unable to identify a photograph of James Earl Ray. [FBI NO 157-10673 5.10.68]

The FBI checked every telephone call from pay telephones in the area of Houston, Texas, for calls to New Orleans on December 17, 1967. One of these calls was to 522-8495 in New Orleans. The FBI reported: "(Deleted) [Hilda De Los Reyes] Apartment 7, (Deleted) [1410 St. Andrews] was contacted and furnished the following information:

She advised her telephone number is 522-8495, however, she advised that to the best of her knowledge she has not received any long distance telephone calls from Texas during December 1967, or at any other time. She advised she has no relatives, friends or any other persons known to her to be residing in Texas. In addition, she advised that she is divorced from her husband and lives at her present address with her two sons, ages 10 and 18. Her oldest son is working, but she stated that he also has no friends or relatives in the Texas area. She advised after viewing all available photographs of James Earl Ray that such a person was completely unknown to her by either name or photograph. It was noted during interview of (Deleted) that she was of Cuban extraction and spoke broken English. The interview was conducted with some difficulty, although she was emphatic in her denial or herself or anyone else ever receiving any long distance telephone calls from Texas to her present telephone number at any time. [FBI NO 157-10673 5.10.68]

The FBI withheld the called number of many of the pay phone calls made from the vicinity of Houston, Texas, to New Orleans. [FBI 44-38861-3132] The FBI reported that on December 17, 1967, a call was placed to (Deleted) Baton Rouge, La., from 330 E. Pierce. [FBI 44-38861-3105]

She advised she made a notation to this effect on the Record of Access to Ray's safe deposit box and that she also put on there that he lives in Baton Rouge. Miss Battle advised she does not recall anything specific in the letter indicating that Ray was residing at Baton Rouge, and that she believes she obtained this information from the postmark on the envelope in which this letter was received. She advised that this envelope has been destroyed, however, to the best of her knowledge, a copy of the letter would be maintained in the Safe Deposit Box Section. [FBI BH 44-1740]

On April 28, 1968, the CIA reported:

Air Force Intelligence advises that Major Bernard F. Rehkopf, United States Air Force assigned to Maccthai, had been in touch asking assistance in contacting an (deleted) official. Rehkopf claims that his daughter Rita, who formerly worked in Bangkok for law firm and is now based in New Orleans with Delta Airlines, has telephoned him from New Orleans approximately eight times in the last several nights. She states she is in the hands of (deleted). She claims that she knows James Earl Ray, and says she knows he went to London. She further claims that (deleted) is paying for her phone calls, at the same time implying, at least as far as Bernard F. Rehkopf is concerned, that she is under a certain amount of duress. Bernard F. Rehkopf is very distraught and concerned for daughter's welfare. Air Force advised they would try to put (deleted) in touch with him. They have asked him not to do anything drastic, such as surfacing matter to the press and they are reasonably sure they will comply, at least for the present. However, he wants assurances from (deleted) that daughter is being well treated and is in no danger. Recommend Hdqs. advise (deleted) for action as appropriate. Suggest (deleted) also pass gist of above to legal attache. (Deleted).

THE FINGERPRINT

The FBI reported: "One latent fingerprint of value found on board from window sill (Q71)...Latent print on board currently being compared with fingerprint of all suspects. Results will follow."

Other researchers, however, linked MARCELLO to the Kennedy assassination including Louis Lomax, a black journalist from Los Angeles.

LOUIS J. LOMAX

Louis Lomax was born August 16, 1922, in rural Georgia. Lomax attended a Negro college then did graduate work at American University. The FBI reported a case emanating from its Washington Field Office dated July 20, 1945, entitled "Foreign Inspired Agitation Among American Negroes in the Washington Field Division - Internal Security." This case was a result of that fact that Louis Lomax was the "first Negro to write and present dramatic sketches on the radio in the District of Columbia." Lomax was identified as a newsman and a student at American University.

Lomax obtained a Masters Degree from American University in 1947 and became a preacher in Waycross, Georgia. He was a complainant in a civil rights case in May 1947 wherein a police officer was alleged to have used too much force on "a local Negro" for which the Department of Justice ruled did not constitute a civil rights violation. He worked as a newspaperman until December 5, 1949, when he was arrested for larceny for having rented a car in Indiana and taken it to Chicago where he was arrested for selling the car under fictitious registration.. He served two years at Illinois State Prison at Joliet, from 1952 to September 28, 1954. After he was released, Louis Lomax wrote books about the Black Muslims and the Civil Rights struggle.

FBI official L.B. Nichols sent a memorandum to Clyde Tolson on February 8, 1956, regarding Louis Lomax:

Max Rabb of the White House called me on February 7, 1956, to advise me that Jim Hagerty had sent him a letter from Louis E. Lomax requesting an interview with the President along with a copy of a letter which Lomax sent the Director. Max stated that he was inclined to see Lomax and he thought the time had come to make the point that the tactics of some of the Negro leaders were ill-advised, were alienating support and were uncalled for.

Maxwell Rabb was Legal and Legislative Counsel to Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal in 1946. He was Associate Counsel to the President of the United States from 1953 to 1954 and Secretary to the Cabinet of the White House from 1953 to 1958. On February 8, 1956, FBI official L.B. Nichols, in a memo to Clyde Tolson dated February 9, 1956, stated: "I told Maxwell Rabb that Lomax still reports to his parole officer and that the parole officer had advised Lomax not to marry a white girl (Suzanne Avery) although there was some indication the two were living together without benefit of matrimony." [FBI 62-102926-3] By 1965 Lomax was a well known television commentator in Los Angeles. In August 1966 KTTV, a television station that employed Lomax, received this letter: "How long are we going to have to listen to that red nigger preach and defend Communism over your station, I mean Louis Lomax. Last night's session was a disgrace, to hear him tear to pieces the Cuban Government official who had defected to his country..." In late 1963 the FBI instituted an investigation of Lomax due to his having traveled to Cuba for Harper's Magazine. [FBI 62-102924-16] In 1964 Lomax wrote a book that focused on Malcolm X. In 1967 Lomax traveled to Thailand, to do a book on the war he thought was imminent there. [NYT 8.1.70] Louis Lomax came to the attention of the CIA that year, when he planned to go on a peace mission to Vietnam with Martin Luther King. [CIA FOIA #F94-1945. On 1.23.97 Lee S.Strickland of the CIA informed this researcher that this document was the only one the CIA possessed on Lomax] Louis Lomax was very much involved in the civil right movement and the anti-war movement. The FBI had an extensive file on him. He called for a Warren-type commission to investigate the Martin Luther King slaying.

In the summer of 1968 Louis Lomax convinced Charles Stein to accompany him on a trip to Texas in order to find the pay phone James Earl Ray used when he called "Raoul". He offered Charles Stein $4000 to show him the phone booth. Louis Lomax asked the FBI to accompany his crew on trip. It declined, although Louis Lomax's photographer reported back to the Bureau. [FBI 44-38861-2190] Louis Lomax was freelancing for the North American Newspaper Alliance.

Charles Stein and Louis Lomax retraced the trip from Los Angeles to New Orleans by traveling from New Orleans to Los Angeles. Charles Stein pointed out a couple of phones that were familiar, including a coin telephone located at an Enco Service station in Uvalde, Texas but the FBI found no calls from this pay phone to New Orleans. The FBI checked nine booths near Houston and determined no calls went out on December 17, 1963, to New Orleans. [FBI 44-38861-2460; Memo: To DeLoach; LA FBI 44-1574 5.25.68] The FBI reported that Stein was described by "(Deleted) as extremely vague and not sure of the area where the call was allegedly made."

SAM J. RECILE

On April 25, 1968, Louis Lomax asked the FBI Los Angeles Field Office to secure the toll records of Sam J. Recile, 510 O'Keefe, New Orleans, telephone 821-1411. The Los Angeles FBI Office called the telephone company in New Orleans and determined that 821-1411 was listed to The New Orleans States Item. The FBI asked the phone company not to pull the toll records. The FBI could have pulled the toll records on Sam J. Recile, and not on The New Orleans States Item. [FBI 157-10623-536] On April 30, 1968, the FBI ran a check on Sam J. Recile. It discovered that Sam Recile was born in Plaquemines Parish, Louisiana, in 1932 and was engaged in the oil leasing and real estate speculation and development business. "According to a highly confidential FBI source, Sam Recile is a friend of JOSEPH and CARLOS MARCELLO (Deleted). His legitimate holdings consist of hotels and large real estate holdings. All references listed under the above names containing data identical or possibly identical with the above described Subject have been included herein." [FBI 157-10673-701] Another FBI document stated: "Sam Recile is a New Orleans real estate manipulator whose business enterprises are currently in litigation."The FBI never checked Recile's toll records. [FBI 159-10673-536; FBI 44-38861-2547; FBI 159-10673-685; FBI 159-10673-550; 157-10673-701]

THE DEATH OF LOUIS LOMAX

In June 1970 Lomax was indicted for Federal income tax evasion. On July 31, 1970, Louis Lomax lost control of his car while traveling east on Interstate 70 during a late night drive. His car skidded off the highway, overturning three times and stopped on the right shoulder of the highway. He was thrown from the vehicle and Lomax, 47, died of a concussion and internal injuries. ## KLINNER

Dignum sought protection from the CIA in Miami in October 1964, because she believed her life was in danger: "She was afraid her husband was connected with the Kennedy assassination, and that he fears she will expose him." The last quotation was taken from a synopsis of a CIA document withheld because of National Security considerations. [WCD 1107; Miami Herald 4.11.63; FBI 62-109060-2272, 2442; CIA Index JFK Doc; CIA 891-908]

On February 7, 1977, the SSCIA requested that the FBI give it all its documents on John Robert Klinner. The FBI reported that 28 documents were withheld in their entirety based upon Third Agency considerations and only five would be made available. The documents on others concerned:

KLOEPFER

OSWALD was back in his native New Orleans. The Warren Commission: "Aside from Ruth Paine and Ruth Kloefer and her daughters, the Murrets were the only social visitors the OSWALDS had." [CIA 475; WCD 75; WR 276] Ruth Kloefer had received a letter from Ruth Paine requesting she help the OSWALDS for humanitarian reasons. Ruth Kloefer was interviewed in May 1977:

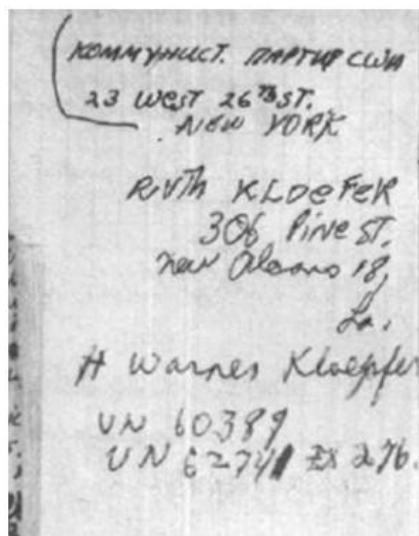

I was not a friend of Ruth Paine, I had never met her before. I received an official letter, she was a Quaker in Texas...She knew OSWALD'S wife...and was concerned about her. They asked me if I, as a Clerk of the New Orleans Meeting, would stop by. The wife was not at home the first time I stopped by, but Mr. OSWALD was. I went back and saw her later. It was strictly because I was the Clerk of the New Orleans Quaker Meeting. I worked for Sheriff Hyde in the Criminal Courts building at the time.

Asked if she had any CIA connection, Ruth Kloepfer said she had none. A CIA Office of Security document contained traces on Dr. Werner Kloepfer:

Files of the OS reflect that Dr. Henry Warner Kloepfer is a professor at Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana. Kloepfer was one of the signers of a petition protesting action by the House Committee on Un-American Activities on May 19, 1952. Files also indicate that he and his wife Ruth do reside at 306 Pine Street, New Orleans, Louisiana. Kloepfer, who was born February 25, 1913 at Roseville, Ohio was of interest to OO/C during September 1963, apparently in relation to OSI requirements.

Established in 1948, OSI (Office of Scientific Intelligence) served as the CIA's focal point for the analysis of foreign scientific and technological developments. Dr. Kloepfer was interviewed and queried about the CIA Office of Security record:

I have never been a CIA employee. I have been interviewed about other people from time to time, it seems to me, by the CIA. Someone wanted to know something about somebody. I think I have had this happen. I had something, I don't recall exactly what...somebody who they are checking on. They asked me to tell them what I knew about them. You say my name is in OSWALD'S address book? Well, that would be impossible. I mean there must be some error because there is no way for him to have my name.

OSWALD did have the names, "Ruth Kloepfer" and "H Warner Kloepfer," in his address book on page 46. [CIA 646-277] The CIA's Office of Security files reflected H. Warner Kloepfer was a faculty member of Tulane University. FBI files noted he was on the mailing list of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. The Kloepfer's daughter visited the Soviet Union in 1963. OSWALD had to have associates other than the Murrets and the Kloepfers.

The CIA was still supporting anti-Castro elements in Mexico City in September 1963: Basic Headquarters position is to render assistance any responsible group carrying fight to Castro. JURE falls in this category and Headquarters interested in effecting procurement as well as receiving details thereof. While [we] obviously do not wish to have CIA involved in any overt exile activity, there is no objection to CIA rendering purely covert assistance provided does not jeopardize his operational utility. ## MEYER LANSKY

FBI 62-75147-210-121 p.2; Rothman: FBI HO 165-689; FBI 97-4030-20, 18, A - Wash. Post 2.10.60. In March 1958 the FBI reported that the Justice Department was "instrumental in barring the return of Meyer Lansky to Cuba after the hoodlum's recent trip to the United States. Assistant Attorney General Tompkins angle in this action was the hope that enough bad publicity might be brought to bear on Lansky to make him 'tell what he knows about the Anastasia murder.'" Tompkins had been in Cuba investigating Carlos Prio for Neutrality Act violations.

When casinos opened on the Grand Bahama Island in 1964, the presence of Meyer Lansky associate Dino Cellini's brother, Edward Cellini, led to law enforcement speculation that Meyer Lansky played a behind-the-scenes role. Resorts International, the owners of the casinos in question, filed a $100 million lawsuit against Rolling Stone magazine for having linked their properties to Meyer Lansky. In 1977 actor Danny Thomas performed at a benefit to legalize gambling in New Jersey sponsored by Resorts International. RUBY had the name of Danny Thomas in one of his notebooks. On December 5, 1963, John C. Jackson, a friend of RUBY for six years told the FBI: "JACK was a life-long friend of Danny Thomas."

In July 1970 Meyer Lansky moved to Israel. In 1971 Meyer Lansky was indicted for skimming more than $14 million from a Las Vegas casino and for income-tax evasion.

On November 2, 1972, Meyer Lansky returned to the U.S. In 1973 he was acquitted of income-tax evasion and in 1976 a Federal judge ruled he was too sick to stand trial for the skimming charges. Later that year, reputed Meyer Lansky associate Alvin Malnick was investigated in connection with misuse of Teamster Union Pension Funds. In a interview Meyer Lansky told reporters: "There is no such thing as organized crime." ## ROGER LOVIN

(Born May 11, 1941, Knoxville, Tenn.) The FBI: "Lovin claims to have been in jail in the state of Georgia for smuggling arms to Castro prior to 1959. Source advised Lovin claims to have done smuggling for Castro in 1958, running guns from Alabama to Florida to Cuba. He allegedly stayed in Cuba in 1958 for a few weeks, but he is not known to have returned since that time. He is allegedly now anti-Castro." [FBI 62-109060-4705]

CLAIRE BOOTH LUCE AND THE DRE

LUCE / COLBY TELEPHONE CONVERSATION OCTOBER 25, 1975

Senator Richard Schweiker's subcommittee subpoenaed Claire Booth Luce. She called CIA Director William Colby on October 25, 1975, seeking advice about her testimony. William Colby recorded two telephone conversations between himself and Claire Booth Luce. Claire Booth Luce first met William Colby in the early 1950's, when she was Ambassador to Italy. William Colby reportedly said of Claire Booth Luce: "Claire Booth Luce took an intimate interest - and hand - in the CIA operations run out of her embassy..." [Syrokomy, International Terr. & CIA KGB Press 1983] He also recorded a telephone conversation between himself and Justin McCarthy. He gave the tape to CIA OS. The CIA gave the FBI transcripts of the conversation. The transcript of a telephone conversation between William Colby and Claire Booth Luce at 12:40 on Saturday, October 25, 1975, as transcribed by Barbara Pindar follows:

Luce: I have a big problem, a case in conscience. I got rather deeply involved during and after the Bay of Pigs, and up to the time of the missile crisis, with a group called the Directorate Revolucionario Estudiante, the DRE. Whether you know this or not, it was me who fed the missile stuff to Keating. I knew a number of these leaders well; they were going in and out of Cuba, and I paid for one of the motor boats. Bill Pawley did too. The missile crisis came, and I got a call from Allen Dulles telling that the Secrets Act had gone into effect and that henceforth there would be no voluntary American efforts. That ended that, and I don't know what I was doing - maybe I went back to Arizona. Then came the assassination. The night of the assassination, right after OSWALD was caught, one of my boys telephoned me from New Orleans. Didn't I ever tell you this?

Colby: No.

Luce: It was my boat captain. It seems that after the missile crisis - a period of about a year had gone by - he said that all the young Cubans involved profoundly in all of this had to scatter and scam, that he and two of my other lads -

Colby: When, after the crisis?

Luce: [Yes. Were told] to leave Miami.

Colby: In 1962?

Luce: Yes. They were to stop efforts to free Cuba: and if they did not, they would be deported. It has a very interesting end, involving you. In any event, this one had been told to leave Miami after the missile crisis was over, and he had opened a New Orleans cell. He telephoned me to tell that OSWALD was - I am telling you what his view was - was a hired gun; OSWALD had tried to penetrate their little cell; all of this was done several months before the assassination. He said, - telling me on the phone, he was terribly excited - he said, "You see he had no money, all of a sudden he began to get money, so we checked him and he had a little 'Communists Be Free' or 'Be Fair to Cuba' group going in New Orleans." He said, "We had tape recordings of what he was telling his group." It was counter penetration that went on. He said, "We have photographs of OSWALD, passing out handbills on the street, 'Be Fair to Cuba.'" He said, "We are absolutely certain that OSWALD was simply one of three assassination teams, that they were working out of Mexico City (or funded in Mexico City) by Fidel Castro." Then he said, "We have these recordings, these tapes, and we have these photographs, what should we do?" These fellows always trusted me. I said, "The first thing you do, the minute you hang up this phone, you telephone the FBI, give them everything you have got." Working in New York with these Cubans is an extraordinary fellow, one of the most puzzling characters I have ever met; he is a devout Catholic, Justin McCarthy. Justin is the American patron - although he has no money, never had any money. He never worked at CIA, although CIA tried to pick his brains. He tried to help the FBI. I knew Justin McCarthy, and he used to send me bulletins; he said he had been sending them to me for the past six months; I had never received one of them. Out comes the Warren Report. I have many other things to do, and I assume my lads had reported what they knew, and maybe it had been discounted, but I had taken the Warren Report at face value without poring over it - and I forgot the whole darn thing. Then, this must be nine years ago, up turns a guy named Garrison. And he hit the headlines that the assassination had been a conspiracy. Then it all flooded back into my mind that I had never been quite satisfied with what the Warren Report had brought out. Basically, I was troubled by the whole thing, so I said I thought I would call Garrison. In order to call him, I had to have the Cuban's names, which had gone out of my bean. So I called Justin McCarthy. He said my lad was in Miami. I got him on the phone, my fellow, and I said, "You remember your midnight call to me about the President's assassination, I want to know what happened after that." He said, "We went at once to the FBI, they took all the tapes and photographs, and all our information, and told us to keep our mouths shut. Shortly after that they informed us that if any of us talked to the press or anyone, dire things would happen." He said one of the fellows on the boat was deported to Guatemala or Chile, and one of them was murdered. He said, "I am a lawyer, have two children, I am making my way in Miami, and I never want to hear a damn word about the Kennedy assassination because you Americans really do not want to know the truth." He said, "We waited, expecting the Warren Commission would want to have us, and we never heard a word." He said, "I want no part of it." Then the Garrison thing died down, and I am a busy woman, and I forgot about it. Three days ago, a reporter was in here - a gal - asking about my life style and said, in passing, "What do you think of the investigation of the President's assassination?" I am afraid I hit the roof. I said, "I think everyone must be absolutely off their rockers. What possible motive would the CIA have for murdering their own President?" I said, "Even to assume such a thing is beyond belief, because where there is a murder assassination, there is a motive, and there could be no motive." I said, "Who had the motive was Castro, possibly just a bunch of Communists Cubans or plain Communists." Schweiker called me up yesterday - when the reporter said to me, "What is the name of the young Cuban?" I said "Well, lets call him Julio Fernandez." The Senator said to me "that is a fascinating story."

Colby: You told the story to Schweiker?

Luce: He read it in the Knight paper.

Colby: You told the story to the Knight people?

Luce: Not in the detail I told you. Schweiker asked if I could locate any of these men involved for him, and I said I would try. That was yesterday. I used that opportunity to say, "I do not know what you are doing on the Hill." I said, "You are in it for headlines and destroying the country's security." He said, "If you have this information and you can get your hands on it, it would be a good thing to lay this story to rest." He said, "If you can find me these people, I assure you they will be listened to in closed session." Now comes the big thing. Justin McCarthy runs a Nyack animal farm. I have known him to be a man of complete integrity. He is a devout Catholic. He may or may not be a fanatic. What makes one think he is, what he tells you is just terribly alarming; as he was the one, along with Bill Pawley, who involved me with these Cubans, I tracked him down and had a two-hour conversation on the phone with him this morning that was really staggering. When I said to him, "Would you tell these things in the closed session in the Senate?" he said, "I would find it more expedient to shorten the process and hire loud speakers and put them on top of the Empire State Building." He said, "You don't know, Claire, the Cubans have not lost their desire to free their country, and there are plenty of them working at it, and they trust me, and I trust them." He said "All these fellows on the hill give a damn about is a big headline and political attention, and if this should involve my testifying and some of my fellows got bumped off, or their apparat shut down, I could not live with myself, no I will not testify." I said, "You know, Justin, if they send for you, you might have to." He said, "They are not likely to send for me unless you tell them." He told me a story about working once with CIA. He said, "We did this - DRE did one operation with CIA, as a result of which all the Cubans involved were caught and killed, and I do not want any part with the CIA." He said, "It too can be a sieve." I said, "You have me really over a barrel." I said, "Justin, I have to tell someone, is there anyone you trust?" He said, "There is only one man in this whole country whose word at this point I would take." I said, "Who is that?" and he said, "Bill Colby." He said, "He is a daily communicant" -

Colby: No, no.

Luce: I did not disillusion him. In any event, if only to put my mind at rest since - he always says, which is fascinating if true, that my lads in New Orleans, yes, they did turn over the tapes to the FBI but they kept copies.

Colby: Really?

Luce: So he says. If so, you are possibly, if - I think you should get hold of Justin and give him a couple of hours because he has plenty to say.

Colby: I will report back to you by all means. Let me do a little homework on just where this (looks). You do not remember the name of the Cubans in Miami?

Luce: There are so many names; he talked to me so fast. He kept saying "Chilo." I asked who "Chilo" is, and he said that was his code name. Jose Antonio Lanusa; Luis Fernandez Rocha. One of those fellows was a Director of the DRE. Then he also reminded me a guy who used to come to see me - Cardona. (He had been told by the American Government to get out of Miami) and he died, having become the President of a university in Puerto Rico. These fellows were scattered all over the place. As I mentioned that to Justin, he said "I know where they all are."

Colby: Schweiker does not know about McCarthy?

Luce: He only knows this - I said there is one man I know who might be able to tell you where these Cubans are, and that is a fellow named Justin McCarthy. He said, "Where is he?" and I said, "I do not know, I have lost track of him." He said, "If you find him, let me know." After talking with Justin McCarthy, I do not want him to talk to Schweiker. I do not know what to say if he calls again. Knowing the Senator, I may never hear from him. I leave it with you. [NARA 1993.08.11.11:24:15:960060]

COLBY / McCARTHY TELEPHONE CONVERSATION OCTOBER 28, 1975

McCarthy: I am glad to know you, even if it is over the phone.

Colby: Mrs. Luce talked to me. She gave me a capsule version of some chat with you...I wondered if maybe we should chat about it sometime, or, quite frankly, you might want to go to the Senate Committee looking into this.

McCarthy: No. There are several reasons why not. I am sure we do not have to discuss them, but there are many reasons. I am sure we don't discuss them, but there are many reasons. Over the period of time there have been so many things. We were the only ones who had the information about the missiles in Cuba for many months, and we beat our brains out trying to get someone to do something and regrettably in Washington there are too many political opportunists but there are too many lives at stake. We risked our neck for all these years. We are interested in doing the right thing.

Colby: I wondered if you could (slice?) off that New Orleans thing (and not go any further on that?)

McCarthy: As I said to her - (can't read the next few words) For me to be seen in Washington I do not want to blow my cover, but I would like very much to chat with you and tell you. (can't read the next few words). We do not trust anyone. We did so many operations for so long and we were entirely successful and never lost a man, and then one day we did an operation for the government and lost 22 men. Lives depend on it. Someone sent a Top Secret memo, and the one he sent it to left it on his desk and someone came in and read it and the men were arrested. She asked, "Would you talk to Bill?" I said I would. We think it would be a good idea -- for me to go down -- I do not want to blow my cover, but I would like very much to chat with you and tell you.

Colby: My problem is then I get the information and what are my obligations.

McCarthy: From the point of view of seeing how to do it through persons other than me -- to get the end result.

Colby: It might be that one of your fellows aware of some of the things (would not mind telling Schweiker?) under some protection and assurances of anonymity. That would be enough of a (can't read this next word) to get started.

McCarthy: There is plenty to get started on.

Mr. Colby: Then he could cut your people out as source?

McCarthy: She said it would be a closed door hearing. I said there would still be someone come out of the meeting and (can't read the next few words) their names in the press. You see Jack Anderson's column on Monday. It is vitally important and it is true evidence. It is not conjecture. I am concerned about what it ties into -- it is all the same ball of wax. We sat on the information about the missiles.

Colby: The only thing that bothers me is the story of the existence of some records (you?) still hold. The important part of that is that indicates some (part?) of a failure, or possibly even worse - that is the kind of thing that does need investigation or (correction?) - protecting you people that are in on it. The other possibility would be to ask Schweiker or one of his men, to go and talk to you or one of your people who would have factual knowledge of it. Let me talk with Clare again as to how to handle this. The main thing is not so much the overall stuff about Cuba - the main thing is the story about records, about OSWALD. That comes at a time when that is a serious subject of study here by the Congress. If we could in some way shake the information loose without putting the finger on any of your friends, I think we are sort of obliged to do this in terms of clarifying the record against the facts -- this is a very key aspect of it and a very serious problem that if it was suppressed at the time.

McCarthy: That's not all that was suppressed.

Colby: That is the thing. They are looking into it. Let me talk to Clare again and see if I can figure out some way in which we could talk to you maybe and if you could in the meantime think of a way of (can't read the next few words) out or (can't read the next few words) out this (feature?) of it so that you give the final results but not the sourcing and let the investigators find out their own source later on we would have done our duty. My problem is that I really can't sit on it with my obligations. I can be reasonable about protecting other people, but I also have to have the responsibility for responding to proper investigations of things that really should be looked into. [NARA 1993.08.11.11:30:35:620060]

COLBY / LUCE TELEPHONE CONVERSATION OCTOBER 31, 1975

Colby: I called Justin McCarthy. We had a long chat. He does not want me to do anything about it, but I said you put me in an awful position. I understand what you mean about his strong manner of talking. I think both of us are hung with a rather tantalizing story.

Luce: If I had not known the guy for 25 years, I would take him much less seriously.

Colby: The only real point is the thing about the tapes and the photographs and the allegation about the FBI. I tried to (argue?) him into figuring out some way of getting rid of those but keeping himself out of the act.

Luce: He called me back and said he talked with you and that you left him in a box, and I think he feels now there is some kind of a question of conscience involved. He said, "I am going to let you and Bill Colby decide what is best to do.

Colby: I said I would be in touch with you and try to figure out something sensible.

Luce: Why don't we suggest that he bring you or me - perhaps he feels safer with me - the tapes and photographs if he has copies of them.

Colby: And then you pass them over to Schweiker.

Luce: And let them decide and I will maintain his cover -- he keeps saying it is not worth it after all these years to blow that.

Colby: I think that is a good idea. You say that you and I have talked, and we are in kind of a box at this point, and we really in conscience cannot sit on this stuff -- all the charges there is remaining evidence (can't read the next word) was held back and disappeared into the FBI, and maybe the way to do it is for him to provide it to you, and you to Schweiker, and then I would just as soon drop out -- it does not really have much to do with me - - and in that way you would protect him from Schweiker, and you would say you got it from a friend -- and the source is whatever he and you agree on.

Luce: I will do that.

Colby: I think that is the best thing to do. If he does not buy that, I don't know what we do about Schweiker.

Luce: (I am going to ignore it if Schweiker comes to me.)

JUSTIN McCARTHY

Justin McCarthy was on parole in November 1961 for armed holdup. The New York Parole Board suspected him of being a con man and contacted the CIA. It was told that Justin McCarthy had voluntarily approached the Agency in April 1961, and had several meetings with its representatives. [FBI 62-109060-7654; CIA Memo for Files 11.15.61 Harry A. Real]

ROBERT MAHEU

PRIME MINISTER SUKARNO OF INDONESIA

In May 1958 the Far Eastern Division recruited Maheu for a project:
SUBJECT: Project (Deleted)

1. May 1958 - FE Division initially contacted Director of Security and briefed him on Project. Basically Project capitalized on President Sukarno's weakness for women, especially Caucasian. Because of our inability to get controlled assets close to him to determine his thinking and plans, and the recent apparent success of Soviets use of a woman, believed he may let down guard and become expansive in discussions of plans with a female and accept advice that he would not ordinarily accept from a man.
2. Object: Locate intelligent, attractive, emotionally stable and trustworthy female who would accept an assignment which would involve an eventual intimate relationship with Sukarno.
3. January 1958 - Gave Robert Maheu assignment to locate candidate. He advised that a prominent (Deleted) attorney and man about town, (Deleted) could come up with a qualified woman. Maheu told (Deleted) he had a 'client' whose business was not prospering in a unidentified country. Felt could improve situation if an attractive and intelligent female could get to him and, through feminine charm, persuade his thinking in a more favorable direction.
4. (Deleted) was investigated with favorable results and given CSA on July 2, 1958, but not made witting of CIA interest.

5. Candidate (Deleted) a well-to-do widow, approximately 35 years old, resident of (deleted) considered highly intelligent and extremely attractive.

6. August 1958 - Project (Deleted) concurred by COPS and DCI.

7. August 27, 1958 - Joseph Smith, FE Division, introduced to Maheu as Joseph Sims.

8. Smith emphasized need for a solid cover story and backstopping. Maheu suggests, in view of (Deleted's) close relationship with movie colony, may induce (Deleted) who represents several movie interests, to set up an arrangement that would also include necessary funding mechanisms.

9. September 23, 1958. Maheu and O'Connell, Security, met with (Deleted) in New York City (Hampshire House). Agreed, if cooperative, would brief him regarding Agency interest and objective of Project to get maximum effort from him. He responded enthusiastically and offered his complete service and facilities to set up a secure cover mechanism. He suggested that (Deleted) be told of general Government interest (not CIA) at the outset due to her sharp perceptiveness which may cause her to speculate at later date.

10. Cover Story - (Deleted) would commission her to perform an "on location survey" in certain Far Eastern areas for the proposed filming of "Journey to the Center of the Earth." This could be done very naturally because (deleted) has the rights to the film and is contemplating shooting it in near future.

11. September 23, 1958 - (Deleted) arrived New York City (St. Regis). Maheu met her alone for the first time and told her of Government interest. She seemed to be relieved of certain misgivings she had of assignment. (She knew the true identity of Maheu, having been introduced to him socially by (Deleted). She also knew that he had a public relations organization).

13. September 24, 1958 - "Sims" again met with (Deleted) at which time she was told she would be accompanied by a female traveling companion, (Deleted GS-12). Would ostensibly be her secretary, but would be, in fact, the person she would look to for direction.

15. Cover arrangements were completed by (Deleted). He arranged for (Deleted) to carry a letter of introduction from (Deleted) to a (Deleted) his representative in Indonesia. (Deleted) known to Sukarno. Also arranged to have funds placed in the Indonesian branch of Twentieth Century Fox in Djarkarta

16. Records of this Office do not reflect any of the activities of (Deleted) during the course of her mission. It is believed that she left for Indonesia sometime in January 1959. It is known that she did meet Sukarno, but due to unfortunate timing that had him leaving his country on official business, she had little time to cultivate him; consequently the purpose of the mission was not fulfilled. It should be noted that Sukarno took sufficient notice of her that during the unofficial visit to the United States in June 1959, he expressed a strong desire to see her and did.

When President Sukarno visited Los Angeles in April 1961 Robert Maheu arranged for female companionship to "insure a satisfied visit." [CIA to DDS from Dir. Sec. 6.20.66] Maheu threw a party for Sukarno where he was introduced to (Deleted). They became friends and Sukarno said that he wished to meet her in New York. This relationship received publicity in Los Angeles so the CIA set up a safe house where Sukarno could meet his paramour:

During the stay at the Long Beach site, (Deleted) discussed the publicity in the case at some length with Security representative. She speculated about the possible sources of certain personal information that she felt had been leaked to the press. She spoke of her deep feeling for Sukarno and commented on how Mr. (Deleted) had initially sought her out to serve as a party companion for Sukarno. At the same time she said she was unclear as to just what part Mr. (Deleted) wanted her to play and in attempting to clarify his request, (Deleted) said, 'I am employed by the CIA. We want you to go to bed with him.' (Deleted) continued to say that she rejected the proposal, but finally went to the party and that it developed that the relationship between her and Sukarno transcended what had been suggested...There is no record or indication in any of the files in this case that involves Robert Maheu by name or reference. Maheu, as we understand it, never was introduced to (Deleted) and, as far as can be determined, (Deleted) 'fronted' for all arrangements.

Third party personal information, deletions and attached memo's re "Project Deleted" and "Project Deleted" were withheld from research.

JOHN MARTINO was in Texas beginning on September 30, 1963: he was in Houston and Austin on October 1, 1963, Dallas, on October 2, 1963, Austin on October 3, 1963, Houston on October 4, 1963 and had also been in New Orleans, Miami. Mrs. Lucille Connell told the Harold Weisberg:

A. On October 1, 1963, JOHN MARTINO was in Dallas and was giving a speech at Town Hall in Dallas.

Q. Was that the meeting Sarita refers to in testimony? She mentioned JOHN MARTINO. Was she at...

A. She was, in one of the first rows. Father McCann was also there.

Q. MARTINO knew her father?

A. He spoke personally to this girl. Yes, he knew her father in one of the prisons, and he has said because of knowing the family he would like to talk to them. So whatever he said I would have no idea.

Q. Is this the only time you saw MARTINO?

A. No. MARTINO was booked by an agency (I don't recall the name). The girl in charge of the bookings called me and wanted to know if I would go to the airport and meet JOHN MARTINO. [Harold Weisberg interview with Connell]

In November 1976 the FBI began an investigation of MARTINO and the Sud-Import-Export Company located in Mexico City.

A guest at the Hotel Comercio, Lima Juarez, a masonry contractor, told the FBI that OSWALD associated with four Cubans at the hotel on one or two occasions. The FBI located the hotel mates of Lima Juarez: "Will continue to press vigorously the outstanding investigation." FBI Legal Attache Clark Anderson located Ernesto Lima Juarez. Ernesto Lima Juarez heard from his friend Francisco Morales that one of the Cubans was from Florida. Ernesto Lima Juarez said

...the fourth Cuban was met by the other three Cubans at the Mexico City Airport on his arrival from Cuba about September 23, 1963. He said this person claimed to have owned a large ranch near Havana which was confiscated by Fidel Castro. The four Cubans expressed anti-Castro feelings and denounced Castro.

The FBI questioned the Mexicans who were at the hotel with Ernesto Lima Juarez: Francisco Morales remembered two Cubans, but not OSWALD. A Potential Security Informant from the San Antonio Office of the FBI was sent to Mexico to speak with Francisco Morales. During a pretext interview Gabriel Contreras Uvina remembered OSWALD, but did not see him speaking with any Cubans. One of the Cubans was located: Julian Huerta Oliva was at the hotel from August 19, 1963 to September 23, 1963. He denied having seen OSWALD.

Clark Anderson had the Mexican Police question Ernesto Lima Juarez. [WR p735] Clark Anderson was questioned about this in 1993: "I don't remember that. I'm not tryin' to duck the question." By August 1964 Ernesto Lima Juarez had recanted. The Warren Commission concluded: "No credible witness has been located who saw OSWALD with any unidentified person while in Mexico City." [WR p305] A footnote in the Warren report stated: "One Lima Juarez has said he saw OSWALD talking to some Cubans, but an intensive investigation indicates that this is a case of mistaken identity." [f.n. #1176 WR p868]

At first Ernesto Lima Juarez furnished a description of one of the Cubans to the FBI that fit the description of HOWARD HUNT. In a later interview he added "dark hair, dark eyes, who appeared to be possibly part Negro." [WCD 1256; WCE 2450; WCE 3074; WCD 1243; CIA 538-801A; FBI 105-82555-4809, 4450, 4478, 4405, 4640]

HEMMING told this researcher:

Juarez is a weeny-wagger, fuck him! Some guy who's hanging out in a hotel lobby, waiting to suck a dick, or something. They wouldn't meet at the hotel. And who would notice it? A day later, an hour later? A faggot. You tell me this guy's a dick sucker and he had the hots for OSWALD and HUNT. Build some credibility for the fucker - he would have been attracted to the guy's fine buns or something - okay. But not some fucking asshole wagging his weeny in a hotel lobby. He ain't gonna remember this shit.

OSWALD associates were anti-Castro Cubans so it is possible that he was in their company in Mexico City. The Mexican police got Juarez and the others to change their stories to fit in with what the Warren Commission desired to hear. Because of the brutal interrogation methods of the Mexican police it is difficult to determine what transpired at the Hotel Comercio. Perhaps these Cubans took OSWALD to a safe house or maybe HEMMING was correct and Juarez was a "weeny-wager."

WCE 3119; CIA 481-OS traces; WCE 2686; WCE 2686; DOS FOIA 720730; Air Force Intelligence AFOSI ROI Jan. 60, re: Pic; WCE 2649; CD942; FOIA FBI Request # 89,804 Charles Murret. Some researchers suggested that Marilyn Murret might have had advance knowledge of OSWALD'S defection prior to October 15, 1959, when it become public knowledge. The researchers based this on the story that when Marilyn Murret traveled to Japan in the Fall of 1959, she visited John Pic Jr., who was stationed at an Air Force hospital there. John Pic Jr. told the Warren Commission that he asked Marilyn Murret when she last heard from Lee. John Pic Jr. remembered her replying: "Oh he's in Russia, didn't you know?" John Pic Jr. told the Secret Service: "When Pic was stationed in Japan, Marilyn Murret visited him on the way to Australia. She told him she was a school teacher and a vagabond and had seen LEE HARVEY OSWALD, probably in Europe." [USSS 11.25.63 #138] Marilyn Murret told the Warren Commission that Marge Pic informed her OSWALD was in Russia. John Pic Jr. was contacted, but declined comment. Firstly, Marilyn Murret had no connection with the CIA. Secondly, John Pic Jr. told two different versions of this story. He was confused.

Charles Murret lent Oswald $200. Gerald Posner wrote: "His uncle Dutz had offered a $200 loan, but OSWALD declined." Posner cited Warren Commission Exhibit CE69A, Volume 16 page 230, as his source. CE69A was a postcard that read:

Girls, I still have not found work, but I receive mony from the unemployment office in the amount 15 to 20 dollars. They were mistaken in the Dallas office when they refused, but I straighted everything out. Uncle Dutz offered me a loan of $200 if needed. Great, eh? Aleck.

When Charles Murret testified before the Warren Commission, he said he paid OSWALD'S expenses for a trip to Mobile, Alabama.

OSWALD'S FAMILY'S CONNECTION TO THE MARCELLOS CHARLES MURRET

The HSCA stated OSWALD'S uncle, Charles Murret, provided OSWALD with ties to organized crime in New Orleans: "The HSCA established that Charles Murret was associated with organized crime figures in New Orleans, having worked for years in an underworld gambling syndicate affiliated with the MARCELLO crime family." CARLOS MARCELLO was described by the Narcotics Bureau as one of "the nation's leading racketeers."

Charles Murret, who died on October 12, 1964, of carcinomatosis, was associated with Sam Saia, who died on October 25, 1965. Sam Saia was a close associate of CARLOS MARCELLO. [HSCA V5 p95] Sam Saia made his money by peddling dope and became one of the biggest bookmakers in New Orleans. An FBI report dated May 28, 1962 noted that the Internal Revenue Service identified Sam Saia as one of the most powerful gambling figures in Louisiana with close connections to the Mayor and former Police Chief of New Orleans. Sam Saia left a $450,000 estate and lived at the same address or owned the residence where Russell and Salvador Saia, convicted narcotics violators, lived. When questioned by the HSCA in 1978, Lillian Murret admitted her husband worked for Sam Saia. The son of Charles and Lillian Murret testified similarly. When Marilyn Murret, the daughter of Charles and Lillian Murret, was questioned about Sam Saia by the HSCA she said: "I know the Saia. I don't think I ever met him." She said she had no knowledge of her father's business, associates or employment. She did not believe her father died under mysterious circumstances. Saia worked for MARCELLO.

Judging from Charles Murret's FBI file, Dutz was a minor mob figure. The FBI had 127 pages on Charles Murret, but only three of them dealt with his organized crime connections. Edwin Becker, who infiltrated the MARCELLO mob in the early 1960's stated: "There's no minor people in the MARCELLO clan." Charles Murret was cited in a 1943 FBI Crime Survey as the owner of the D.& A. Clubs: "These clubs, which are handbooks only, are operated by Charles Murret." [FBI 62-75147-33-3, 5.16.44; Cover ltr. FBI FOIA req. #89,804] In 1956 Murret was arrested for operating a hand book.

CLEM SEHRT

The HSCA stated that between 1955 and 1956, OSWALD lived on Exchange Place in the French Quarter of New Orleans, an area where many businesses were owned by CARLOS MARCELLO. Another OSWALD/Mob connection was his mother's attorney, Clem Sehrt (born August 19, 1909; died June 1974), whose law partner worked for CARLOS MARCELLO. Sehrt was a family friend of the Claveries beginning in the early 1900's and helped Marguerite Oswald prepare the false affidavit which OSWALD used in his unsuccessful attempt to join the Marines at age 15. Clem Sehrt, according to the New Orleans Crime Commission, was an associate lawyer and financial adviser to Louis Rousell, a Louisiana banker associated with CARLOS MARCELLO. In the 1930's Clem Sehrt came to prominence through his close association with Louis Rousell. Louis Rousell was involved in a political scandal in which it was reported two Louisiana Supreme Court Justices were receiving regular sums of income from an unreported corporate payroll of Louis Rousell. Louis Rousell and his associates had reportedly supplied the Chief Justice of the Louisiana Supreme Court with a new Cadillac each year. Clem Sehrt died in the mid-1960's. OSWALD'S mother once worked for Raoul Sere, who was an Assistant District Attorney during a period when the New Orleans District Attorney's Office was corrupted by the MARCELLO family. [WR pp. 669-680]

SAM TERMINE

Marguerite Oswald was also friendly with Sam Termine, a Louisiana crime figure who had served as a "bodyguard" and chauffeur for CARLOS MARCELLO. An unnamed southwestern businessman, with strong mafia ties, informed the HSCA in 1977 that he was a close personal friend of Marguerite Oswald. Businessman "X" went on to say that he had set up a meeting between Mrs. Oswald and Sam Termine. During this time Sam Termine was on the state payroll in the Louisiana State Police, an official position in which he had received a gold star award. During this meeting Sam Termine told Mrs. Oswald: "Carlos is now legit .... he's been out of narcotics for years." Sam Termine died in March 1976 at the age of 62.

The Mafia was at its peak in the early 1950's, especially in urban areas where they ran the show. So what if OSWALD'S family had connections to the mafia in New Orleans? A lot of people did and OSWALD did not remain in New Orleans and cultivate these connections. He moved to Texas then joined the Marines, he did not join the Mafia.

NAZIS

FBI 89-43-6591 4.28.67 Frankhouser info. on JFK; 62,109060- 5159; Lester Otilio to Garrison 1.31.67 Vernon Gerdes-Rockwell; FBI-62-109060-6344, 5159-Martin tells FBI Michael Slater housed Rockwell in New Orleans. Slater confirms.

RICHARD NIXON AND NAZISM

In the early 1950's Nicolae Malaxa, a Nazi war criminal, was NIXON'S business partner. After he became a Congressman, NIXON introduced a bill to make Nicolae Malaxa a U.S. citizen. NIXON employed Lynn Nofziger, who funneled money to the California chapter of the American Nazi Party. G. Gordon Liddy, a member of the White House Special Operations Group, arranged for a Nazi propaganda film showing at the National Archives for members of the NIXON Administration. In his writing, G. Gordon Liddy professed admiration for the Nazis: "Compare if you will the mindset of the SS Leibstandarte with the often drugged dropouts that make up a significant portion of the nation's Armed Forces today." G. Gordon Liddy named White House/Special Operations Group operations after Nazi campaigns and organizations: the operation to kidnap left-wing radicals was called Nacht Und Nebel - Night And Fog. During his deposition in HUNT V. WEBERMAN Liddy was asked:

Q. How did you come upon that?

A. I lived during the time when nacht un nebel was practiced regularly; remembered it from the past, in other words.

MR. MILLER: Nacht un nebel was the name, is the translation, and it was named for an operation against demonstrators that occurred in which Mr. HUNT was partially involved and in which he was involved.

THE WITNESS: No, no. Let's not confuse what I was speaking about. When you asked me to identify nacht un nebel, it was a euphemism used in the time of the Third Reich in Germany by the geheimstatzpolizei, the secret state police. When they would remove an individual without explanation, the person would be said to have disappeared in the night and the fog. So what I was using was a historical reference. And it was I who suggested it, not Mr. HUNT.

Another operation was named Odessa, which G. Gordon Liddy described as "the organization directed to the subversion of the Administration's secrets..." Odessa was originally an organization of former Nazi SS agents. NIXON aide H.R. Haldeman admitted he had a Nazi image during this period, and that Alexander Haig had warned him: "The Jewish Community is out to get you...this ties back to your Nazi activities and all that stuff..." NIXON appointed Laszlo Pasztor, a Nazi war criminal, as a member of the Republican Nationalities Council. NIXON was heard to make anti-Semitic remarks during various conferences. The White House tapes contained numerous examples of NIXON'S detestation of Jews. In January 1974 NIXON compared himself to Hitler when he cited the accomplishments of high ranking Nazi Albert Speer: "I want Bill Simon to be my Albert Speer." William Simon was Secretary of Energy Affairs at the time.

NIXON TAPES

HUNT'S ACTIVITIES IN THE 1960'S: July 1, 1972

Colson: HUNT is a fellow who I would trust. I mean, he's a true believer, a real patriot. My God, the things he's done for his country. It's just a tragedy he gets smeared with this. Of course, the other story that a lot of people have bought is that HOWARD HUNT was taken out of the country by the CIA. Well, he's certainly done a lot of hot stuff...Oh Jesus. He pulled a lot of very fancy stuff in the sixties.

(Withdrawn Item. National Security.)

NIXON: Well, I don't agree. If anything ever happens to him, be sure that he blows the whistle, the whole Bay of Pigs.

Colson: He wrote the book.

Nixon: Blow their horn.

Colson: He tells quite a story, coming in here during that period crying and pleading with Kennedy...

The intriguing thing here is the withdrawn item. There is nothing like a withdrawn item to get your imagination going. But it is never a smoking gun, it is always just a large piece of the puzzle. The next line, "be sure that he blows the whistle" makes more sense if it read "be sure that he doesn't blow the whistle." The Bay of Pigs thing was the Kennedy Assassination.

NIXON: Bob? Bob? Now do you remember Houston's plan? Implement it!

Kissinger: Now Brookings has no right to have classified documents.

NIXON: I want it implemented. Goddamnit, go in and get those files. Blow the safe and get it.

DATE: June 30, 1971

NIXON: They (the Brookings Institution) have a lot material...I want Brookings, I want them just to break in and take it out. Do you understand?

Haldeman: Yeah, but you have to have somebody do it.

NIXON: That's what I am talking about. Don't discuss it here. You talk to HUNT. I want the break-in. Hell, they do that. You're to break into the place, rifle the files and bring them in.

HEMMING did not know NIXON, but he knew HUNT and ANGLETON. Both of these men knew NIXON. During World War II, RICHARD NIXON was on the Tire Price Control Board. NIXON associate, B. B. Rebozo, a Cuban-American, made huge profits in the tire-recapping business during the War. NIXON claimed to have met B. B. Rebozo around 1950. Rebozo also claimed he met NIXON around 1950, through ex-FBI S.A. Richard Danner (born November 1, 1910; died July 1987). Danner had managed Senator George Smathers' first Congressional Primary campaign in 1946. [Rebozo v. Wash. Post USDC SD FLORIDA 73-172-CIV-SMA] George Smathers (Rep.-FL) was a close associate of NIXON. Evidence suggested that B. B. and NIXON were acquainted during the war. During the libel suit captioned B. B. Rebozo v. The Washington Post, B. B. Rebozo testified he knew NIXON associate Senator George Smathers since the fourth grade and assisted him when he ran for Senate in 1950. Rebozo was asked, "Did Mr. Smathers introduce you to RICHARD NIXON?" B. B. Rebozo said that he did not.

NIXON was first elected to Congress in 1947, the same year the CIA came into existence. The first piece of legislation that bore his name required members of the Communist Party to register with the Foreign Agents Registration Board. In early 1952 NIXON visited Cuba, accompanied by Richard Danner. As the former City Manager of Miami, Richard Danner knew many gangsters operating in South Florida and Cuba, including Meyer Lansky. While he was in Havana, NIXON'S associate, Donald Smith, incurred a large gambling debt in the Sans Souci, a casino owned by national crime syndicate associate Norman Rothman; Donald Smith gave Norman Rothman a bad check. Norman Rothman was about to sue him in the United States, but before the case came to trial, Norman Rothman received word from the syndicate to leave the country. [FBI Document in poss. of Scott Malone]

In 1960, Donald Kendall, chairman of Pepsico, offered NIXON employment after his defeat by Senator John F. Kennedy. Senator Joseph McCarthy (Dem.- WS) was called "The Pepsi-Cola Kid" after it was revealed that after he helped end sugar rationing, Pepsico paid off some of his loans. [Messick Hoover p210; also see McCoy, A. Heroin in Southeast Asia p186]

In January 1963 NIXON moved to New York City, where he took an apartment in a building owned by Nelson Rockefeller. NIXON became a partner in the law firm of Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander. NIXON'S main account at Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander was Pepsico. One of the clients of this law firm was Louis Rosenstiel, the President of the Schenley liquor company. The wife of Louis Rosenstiel linked him to Meyer Lansky in sworn testimony, during their divorce trial.

OSWALD

THE QUEEN BEE

It was about this time that OSWALD claimed he "met some Communists in Japan and they got me excited and interested..." [DeMohrenschildt WC Test.] OSWALD related to William Stuckey, "the conclusive thing that made him decide Marxism was the answer was his service in Japan. [This] convinced him something was wrong with the system and that Marxism was the answer. He said it was in Japan he made up his mind to go to Russia..." There was no independent corroboration for OSWALD'S assertions. Marine Daniel Powers, who was in OSWALD'S Unit in Japan, stated: "He never expressed sympathy for the Communist Party, Communist principles, or Marxist doctrines." Journalist Scott Malone stated that after retracing OSWALD'S activities in the Far East he was unable to uncover any indication of OSWALD'S intelligence activity or contact with Japanese communists. OSWALD frequented prostitutes in Japan. Since he did not send any of his Army pay to his mother, he could afford them. Medical records indicated he contracted gonorrhea in the autumn of 1958. OSWALD was sent to Atsugi for treatment on October 6, 1958. Gerald Posner attributed his hospitalization to a nervous breakdown OSWALD had while in guard duty. Gerald Posner's source was author, and ANGLETON confidant, Edward J. Epstein. Epstein obtained the information during an interview with Lieutenant Charles R. Rhodes. Charles R. Rhodes never testified before the Warren Commission. This researcher could not locate any FBI interviews with him.

Gerald Posner wrote: "His contact with the Japanese Communists may have come through a hostess at Tokyo's Queen Bee, one of the three most expensive nightclubs in the capital. The club was frequented by officers who ogled beautiful hostesses, some of whom were informants for Japanese and foreign intelligence agencies." Gerald Posner based this link "on a confidential intelligence source."

Gerald Posner wrote that an evening at the Queen Bee cost $100, and OSWALD only made $85 a month: "By the time he defected he had saved $1,500, nearly 75% of his Marine salary during two years of service." First: OSWALD was a Marine for 2 years and 11 months and earned $2975, so Gerald Posner's figure should be 50% of his salary. Second: Gerald Posner's reference for this was OSWALD, not Army Savings Records. OSWALD could have been given the $1,500 in small-denomination bills before he defected and instructed to say he had saved it.

Gerald Posner continued: "That makes it unlikely OSWALD bought any dates at the Queen Bee. But some of his fellow Marines saw him with a striking and well-dressed Japanese woman on several occasions, he was seen with a Eurasian woman who reportedly spoke Russian (no citation)." Where did they see him with these women? Gerald Posner was unclear. He implied that OSWALD'S visits there were "on the house," because the KGB picked up the tab. His source was probably Edward Epstein, who was the first to write about the Queen Bee.

JOHN E. DONOVAN

Edward Epstein's source for the OSWALD and the Queen Bee story was John E. Donovan, who did not know OSWALD in Japan. In March 1959 Lt. John E. Donovan became OSWALD'S commanding officer after OSWALD returned to the United States in December 1958. Donovan's father was the Subject of a CIA name check in 1948 requested by Robert Bannerman and Ermal P. Geiss. Donovan was employed by the Bureau of Standards. [NARA 1993.07.24.11:13:33:090470] On December 1, 1963, John E. Donovan called the CIA in Langley, Virginia:

INCIDENT REPORT BUILDING SECURITY BRANCH

DATE: December 1, 1963

TIME: 10:30 a.m.

NAME: John E. Donovan

INCIDENT: Telephone call

SUMMARY OF INFORMATION: Donovan call to report that he knew and worked with OSWALD for a nine month period while fulfilling his military obligation in the Spring, Summer, and Fall of 1959. Donovan advised he may possibly be of assistance in providing names etc. of OSWALD'S intimate acquaintances during that period. Subject further advised that he has not discussed his knowledge of OSWALD with the FBI or the Secret Service as of this time. Donovan is presently attending Georgetown University while teaching at the Ascension Academy. John E. Donovan related that he is a former FBI employee having worked there from June 1953 to 1956. It is also noted advance knowledge of this call was received from NSO John Moretti and Major (deleted) CIA employees, who are both members of Captain John E. Donovan's U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Unit.

ACTION TAKEN: Contacted Charles Kane, OS, who requested that this report be prepared and submitted so that the lead may be turned over to FBI through official channels." [CIA 1260-1033] A CIA Official Routing Slip indicated this document was routed to C/SRS. Remarks: Mr. Solie was verbally informed of this contact by NSO Moretti at 9:00 a.m. on December 2, 1963.

HSCA investigators interviewed John E. Donovan: "When he testified before the Warren Commission Donovan stated that he had contact with OSWALD only in California, but he has since refreshed his recollection, and now he recalls that he first knew OSWALD when they were both stationed in the Phillipines. Donovan recalls that before he testified before the Commission, he was advised by his superiors only to answer the questions, asked and not to go off on tangents. John E. Donovan worked as a consultant to Edward Epstein for two years in connection with Edward Epstein's book, Legend. According to Donovan, OSWALD was very interested in the U-2 airplane while he was stationed in the Philippines. According to Donovan in Formosa OSWALD took photographs of troop deployments, fighter aircraft, ammunition bunkers, and F-86 aircraft with radar attached. In addition, according to Donovan, OSWALD had a liaison with an effeminate boy in Formosa.

"In Japan, OSWALD, who was paid only $87 per month, frequented the Queen Bee Bar, a night club and brothel where an evening might cost $50. OSWALD was seen in the company of a stunning Eurasian bar girl who was multilingual. According to two sources she spoke Russian. Donovan feels that OSWALD may have developed intelligence contacts in Japan and he thinks that OSWALD'S later defection to the Soviet Union may be related to such intelligence contacts." [HSCA 4.7.78 Genzman]

When Donovan phoned the CIA he failed to mention any of this and he said he knew OSWALD in the Spring, Summer, and Fall of 1959 in California. Donovan was clearly spreading disinformation.

JEREMIAH O'LEARY JR.

On November 27, 1963, journalist Jeremiah O'Leary Jr. telephoned the FBI and stated that a CIA man in Dallas told him that OSWALD picked up a $5000 payment when he went to Mexico. [FBI 62-109060-957] Two weeks after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, Jeremiah O'Leary ran an article in The Washington Star based on an interview with John E. Donovan entitled, "OSWALD Was a Troublemaker in the Marines." Donovan stated: "During the time I knew him (from March to September 1959 at Marine Air Control Squadron 9 in Tustin, California) he was orderly and he knew his job." O'Leary joined the Reagan Administration as press secretary for National Security Advisor William P. Clark, Jr. Soon after the founding of the Washington Times in 1982 which was owned the Reverend Sun Moon of the Unification Church, he joined that paper as a White House correspondent. In November 1973, The Washington Star reported that one of its diplomatic correspondents, Jerry O'Leary, was a part-time CIA agent. He died in 1993. [WR p686; Wash. Star 12.3.63 p29, 11.30.73 - OSWALD Johnson; Epstein Legend p29, Wikipedia]

On May 9, 1978, the CIA generated a Office of Security File Folder Cover on John E. Donovan that read: "SECRET RETURN TO OFFICE OF SECURITY. Recommend Impoundment of Entire File. Recommend Impoundment of portion(s) of File. Do not Recommend Impoundment of File." This last option was checked.

The Warren Commission: "If the name had not been deleted it would have been reproduced on the Hidell notice as a photographic reproduction" thus appearing fraudulent. OSWALD changed the eye and hair color, weight, height and name of draft board on the back of (# 4) The WC: "A possible reason for deleting the original draft board name and the address and substituting substantially similar material in its place is that if the original material had not been deleted it would have reproduced as a photographic reproduction, which would look much less authentic than typed-in material." [WR p575]

An unnamed Counter-Intelligence Staffer stated: "The only CIA officer in the Soviet Union during this period was not in a position to learn anything about OSWALD. He did learn something about Martin and Mitchell and reported it. He was also aware of the OSWALD case and followed the Embassy and State Department traffic on him while he was trying to get back to the U.S.A. It was suspected that OSWALD and all other similar defectors were in the hands of KGB and carefully watched by them, so any casual operation to learn their whereabouts or activities would have been dangerous and probably unsuccessful. The Soviet Intelligence defectors we then had in our hands and picked up later gave little or no information on the handling of U.S. defectors in the Soviet Union but from our general knowledge of such matters, we were sure that all such defectors would be interrogated by the KGB, surrounded by KGB informants wherever they were re-settled in the USSR, and even possibly recruited by the KGB for a mission abroad later on." [First Draft of Initial Report on OSWALD]

In 1953, Dr. Hartogs reported no findings of neurological impairment, yet the Warren Commission claimed OSWALD suffered from a form of dyslexia which caused a "reading-spelling disability." Evidence that OSWALD could not spell simple words appeared in his writing but his reading grades were below normal. [WR p383] security classification systems. The essence of the information involved is a statement by an individual who believed he may have once seen Marina Oswald in Minsk. His acquaintance with her was casual and momentary. His memory was prompted by seeing Marina Oswald on television after the assassination of President Kennedy. The particular document involved would also require protection since it provides evidence of the existence of an Agency station in a named city abroad, operational cryptonyms, evidence of a liaison arrangement with a specific foreign intelligence service and the identity of an Agency staff employee, as well as Agency internal filing instructions. This denial was made under the authority of exemptions (b)(1), (b)(2) and (b)(3).

A document dated July 27, 1960, CIA was denied:

The document is concerned with a discussion of information concerned with an individual who was presumed at one time to have been a possible acquaintance of Marina Oswald. It was clear from the document that it was a case of erroneous identification. He did not know Marina Oswald, and the document contains considerable information about several foreign intelligence operational methods used to validate the individual's information. [CIA 587-801]

Lyudmilla Prusakova had a child named Irina Olegovona Prusakova. Some time after November 23, 1963, the FBI discovered an undated greeting card from the Medvedev family addressed to Marina and Olegoshka, a familiar derivation of Olegovona. There was a letter signed by "Lyudmilla" among the possessions of Marina Oswald, and the name "Lyudmila" appeared in OSWALD'S address book. Traces on another Lyudmilla (N. Larionova-Semenova) were withheld. [CIA 446-182, 494-203, 453-766; FBI DL-100-10461-18 p64, DL-100-10461-p635] Marina Oswald: "Olegoshka was my girlfriend from Minsk. That's the only one that I know of. Her second name wasn't Prusakova. None of my friends in Russia knew I was at Ruth Paine's home. The letter was mailed from one city to another within the Soviet Union.

Marina Oswald could not read English and Hosty's plate had two letters in it. Marina Oswald told this interviewer in 1994: "I studied French, I know how to read English alphabet."

MORE OSWALD

This document was apparently made part of the OSWALD file in error. There is no explicable reason for it being in the file. The only logical explanation is the fact that the document is dated November 20, 1963, two days before the assassination, and the message itself is fairly cryptic. The message is from one Agency station abroad to another asking that contact be established with an agent. The reason for the contact is not explained. The agent involved is in no way connected with any assassination activities. He was recruited as a means of access to a relative residing in a Communist Bloc country. It seems likely that the cryptic nature of the message itself explains why no one removed the document from the file because it was difficult to discover that the document was not related to the activities connected with the assassination." [CIA 21-533]

CIA 1186-999A, reviewed "information in the OSWALD 201 file which still warrants continued protection under the classification system," was denied. [CIA 3-526, 4-527, 1-533]

The CIA's Historical Review Program referred to two documents that were withheld. One was an internal September 28, 1961, (Secret) CIA MFR. The only document this researcher is aware of that was generated on September 28, 1961, stated: "(Deleted) Per your request for information on OSWALD pls. note: Marina Nicholaevna Oswald, nee Prusakova, born July 1941 Maletovsk (Archangelski Oblast) address Moscow, now residing in Minsk, occupation: laboratory assistant in Klimincheskaya, Minsk (hospital) had apparently applied for a visa to the U.S., as reflected in Department of State, Visa Office noticed received in CIA, which is dated September 12, 1961. Above information was transmitted to the writer (Deleted). Notation of the above is being placed in OSWALD 201. (Deleted)" [CIA 1250-1010A; CIA 598-252-H] The other document was CIA document DNA 1624, April 26, 1962.

A withheld CIA document contained "a statement by an individual who believed he may have once seen Marina Oswald in Minsk. His acquaintance with her was casual and momentary." [CIA 55-785-B] A document dated July 27, 1960, CIA was denied: "The document is concerned with a discussion of information concerned with an individual who was presumed at one time to have been a possible acquaintance of Marina Oswald. It was clear from the document that it was a case of erroneous identification. He did not know Marina Oswald, and the document contains considerable information about several foreign intelligence operational methods used to validate the individual's information." [CIA 587-801]

On August 7, 1961, the FBI Legal Attache in Paris sent a message to J. Edgar Hoover about OSWALD which was still withheld. [FBI 105-82555 NR 8.8.61]

On March 27, 1962, an Immigration and Naturalization Service official overrode the determination of the Dallas Immigration and Naturalization Service Office and waived sanctions, granting special permission for Marina Oswald to enter the United States without the third country visa application. It would take until May 1962 for the order to go into effect. Meanwhile, the American Embassy, Moscow, sent the Soviet Desk of the State Department a letter that suggested the OSWALDS immediately be sent on to Belgium. It was at this time that John Noonan, State Department, Office of Security, (who was listed in Who's Who in the CIA) sent J. Edgar Hoover a memorandum regarding OSWALD which was withheld as of 1994.

The report the Dutch immigration authorities gave to the CIA Station in Amsterdam on OSWALD was still withheld. [CIA 395-745]

The FBI released this highly deleted document on May 6, 1964: "Bureau Informant (Deleted), a most sensitive and reliable source, advised that Irina Alekseyevana Nikhaylovich of 43 Dzershinkiy Street, Apartment 4, Kharkov, USSR (Deleted)." [FBI 105-82555-3578 page 2 and 3 entirely w/h]

OTTO OTEPKA

On November 2, 1960, Otto Otepka began a study of all Americans who had defected since 1945. [DOS FOIA 39-141-122] Otepka, who was in charge of the State Department Bureau of Security and Evaluation while OSWALD was in the USSR, had a file on OSWALD that was subtitled "Defection of U.S. Personnel." In 1962 Otepka openly charged laxity in State Department screening procedures. In 1963 he was dismissed for passing classified documents to the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee without authorization.

Walter Neunson (born September 13, 1908) claimed that he was in touch with Ruth and that his son had been in contact with Marina in the USSR. Neunson had resided in the USSR from 1922 to 1940 when he returned to the United States. On October 23, 1957, he returned to the Soviet Union. The FBI: "The Department of State is in possession of considerable information concerning Neunson's activities while in the USSR in 1957 and 1958, (deleted). Interviewed by agents of our Philadelphia Office on April 16, 1958, following his return from Russia, Neunson expressed hatred for the present Russian Government and stated that he was convinced the Soviet regime presented a positive threat to the entire free world's security. He claimed that he left the Soviet Union on a very unfriendly basis." [FBI 105-82555-4844,43] On September 9, 1964, Paine gave the FBI an apparently unsolicited letter from Neunson which had been mailed to her after a telephone conversation initiated by him. In 1993 Paine commented, "I did not know him."

Random House, Inc. founded in 1925, is the world's largest English- language general trade book publisher. In 1960 Random House acquired Alfred A. Knopf and in 1961 Pantheon Books, which was established by European publishers. In 1965 Random House was acquired by RCA Inc. and is now owned by Advance Publications, Inc. a privately held company located at 350 Madison Avenue, New York City. Spy Magazine reported:

In 1955 Si Newhouse (CEO of Random House) set up Roy Cohn, his best friend since their high school days together at Horace Mann in the Bronx, with the Union News Company in which his father was an investor. (The principal owner of Union News, Henry Garfinkle, was tied to organized crime, particularly the Bonnano crime family). Cohn returned the favor in 1958 when he gave Newhouse a piece of the Sunrise deal, a Las Vegas hospital built by mobster Moe Dalitz courtesy of a sweetheart loan from Jimmy Hoffa's Teamsters. ### ROMAN FEDOROVICH DETKOV

The CIA:

According to the diary, when OSWALD was met by "Mayor Shrapov" upon his arrival in Minsk, Roman Detkov "head of the For. Tech. Institi. Next door," acted as interpreter. This name, with number 20244 possibly as a business phone, appears in the address book. A later entry refers to "Comrade Roman" working at the "Tech. Library" apparently on Karl Marx Street, and a slip of paper found in OSWALD'S possession in 1963 by the New Orleans police contained the notation "20244217- Roman Detkov. The first five digits of the number probably represent Detkov's phone number; the significance of the last three digits is not known.

Roman Fedorovich Detkov translated OSWALD'S application for employment and autobiography into Russian. The phone number of the Institute of Technical Information and Propaganda was 20244. Roman Fedorovich Detkov also worked at Institute of Energetics in Minsk.

MIKHAIL SMOL'SKIY

Roman Fedorovich Detkov's associate at the Institute of Energetics was Mikhail Smol'skiy who lived at Leninsky Prospekt 12, Apt. 1. A photograph of Marina Oswald and Mikhail Smol'skiy was found among OSWALD'S possessions after the assassination. Smol'skiy acted as the Soviet principal in an exchange of professors and students between the Institute of Energetics in Minsk and the University of Minnesota in the field of heat and mass transfer.

William Hood reported that CIA mole Oleg Penkovsky was assigned to ...cover a position as Deputy Chief of the foreign section of the State Committee for Coordination of Scientific Research. The Committee was in fact a vehicle for the recruitment of foreign scientists and the procurement - openly or secretly - of scientific information from abroad.

THE MINSK MILITIA

Page 31 of OSWALD'S address book contained the name "(FNU) Demushkina and the address Dobromyslenskiy Pere ulok 5." The 1963 Minsk Telephone Directory listed the Adresnoye Byuro Upravleniya Militsii (the Militia Directorate) as located at Dobromyslenskiy Pereulock 5. Demushkina was probably an employee of this office. The Warren Commission's version of OSWALD'S address book translated this entry as, "Goman Demka (?)." OSWALD wrote, "Further stand the Ministry of Internal Affairs whose boss is tough military colonel Nickoiy Aksohof of the 'people militia' he hold the title minister the KGB Commie [Committee] for Internal Security."

QUESTIONABLE ACTIVITIES OF THE CIA

In November 1975, Alden J. Stevenson, a former Jesuit priest, told the SSCIA that CIA Agent Robert McNamara solicited his opinion about the ethics of a killing carried out under orders from Agency higher-ups. McNamara was troubled by the fact that he had relied on his superior's judgment in carrying out the killing, having known nothing about the victim or the CIA's reason for wanting him dead. The assassination took place in New Orleans. McNamara died in Las Vegas on September 3, 1962, while on a CIA domestic assignment. [NYT 11.14.75]

In 1981, CIA involvement was suggested businessman Dennis McNell's death. McNell's brothers testified against former DD/Plans Max Hugel after Reagan appointed Hugel D/CI. Hugel was forced to resign. McNell died of a ruptured, non-diseased spleen. McNell's business partner, Stanley Kielmar, told The Chicago Tribune that he had heard from someone in New York that McNell had been abducted and beaten twice before he died. The FBI claimed the McNell brothers had improperly seized assets from a company they headed.

OLIVER BUCK REVELL

When Chinese Communist spies were arrested in Washington, D.C., in 1988, Oliver Revell commented: "The Chinese are a formidable threat, but they are a different level of threat. Our government has determined that the Chinese do not pose a significant threat to our national survival...so it's a different order of business as far as the level of activity that will be tolerated on behalf of the Chinese, as opposed to the Soviet Union and its satellites...on the other hand you can die the death of a thousand cuts. The Chinese are very patient. [Convicted Peking spy and CIA translator] Larry Chin collected intelligence for over 35 years..." In 1988 Oliver Revell told Congress that the United States was vulnerable to high-technology terrorism aimed at its infrastructure which might cause heavy casualties with nuclear, chemical or biological weapons.

Oliver Revell said that the Bureau was preparing to study "the consequences of an attack on that infrastructure" and had set up contingency planning groups.

Oliver Revell was in charge of the FBI's investigation of the bombing of Pam Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

Oliver "Buck" Revell is founder of a global business and security consulting firm. He spent 30 years working his way up in the FBI. He was awarded his B.S. from Tennessee State University and M.S. from Temple University in Public Administration. He served four years in the Marines as an aviator and left as a Captain. He began his career in the FBI in November 1964. He recently published a book entitled G-Man's Journal to chronicle his experiences in the FBI from the Kennedy assassination to the Oklahoma City bombing from an insider's point of view. Revell served in the Kansas City, Philadelphia and Tampa Divisions of the FBI and at FBI Headquarters (FBIHQ) in the Organized Crime Section, the Inspection Division and the Office of Planning and Evaluation.

In January 1975, Revell was promoted to Assistant Special Agent in charge of the Chicago Division, and later as Acting Special Agent in Charge. In October 1976, Revell was promoted to Senior Executive Service (SES) rank and designated Inspector and Executive Assistant to the Associate Director at FBIHQ. In November 1977, he was designated Special Agent in Charge of the Oklahoma Division. In August 1979, Revell was designated Deputy Assistant Director, Criminal Investigative Division, FBIHQ, where he directed the FBI's programs in Organized Crime, White Collar Crime, Official Corruption and Undercover Operations. In June 1980, he was promoted to Assistant Director and placed in charge of the Criminal Investigative Division, making him responsible for the criminal investigative and counter-terrorism programs and operations of the FBI.

In January 1981, Assistant Director Revell was placed in charge of the Administrative Services Division where he was responsible for Personnel, Budget, Finance and Physical and Personnel Security Operations of the FBI. In May 1982, Revell was again placed in charge of the Criminal Investigative Division and given the additional responsibility of planning and implementing the FBI's newly acquired drug enforcement jurisdiction. In July 1985, Revell was promoted to Executive Assistant Director - Investigations (SES-6) the highest rank in career government service. He served as the Director's deputy in charge of Criminal Investigative, Counter-Terrorism and Counter-Intelligence activities. He was also responsible for international investigative and liaison activities of the Bureau, including its Legal Attache and INTERPOL operations.

In July 1989, his title was changed to Associate Deputy Director - Investigations and oversight of the Training and Laboratory Divisions of the FBI were added to his responsibilities. As a member (1982-1991) of the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency, he was Chairman of the Council's Committee on Integrity and Law Enforcement. He served on the Attorney General's Economic Crime Council and as Chairman, INTERPOL Conference on International Financial Crime in Cannes. He was a member of the National Foreign Intelligence Board, the Terrorist Crisis Management Committee and the Group on Narcotics. He served as Vice Chairman of the Interagency Group/Counterintelligence. In 1985, he was a member of the Senior Review Group of the Vice President's Task Force on Terrorism. He served as a U.S. delegate to the United Nations International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking in Vienna. Revell was a member of the Senior Policy Group of the Vice President's Task Force on Border Control Issues in 1988; he also served as an Advisor to the President's Commission on Aviation Security and Terrorism in 1989. He was a member of "The Executive Session on Policing", Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, 1987-1991.

In September 1987, Revell was placed in charge of a joint FBI/CIA U.S. military operation (Operation Goldenrod) which led to the first apprehension overseas of an international terrorist. President Reagan commended him for his leadership of this endeavor. In 1989, President Bush awarded Revell the Presidential Rank Award of Distinguished Senior Executive and in 1990 the President conferred upon Revell the Meritorious Senior Executive award. In May 1991, he was awarded the FBI Medal for Meritorious Achievement and the following month received the National Intelligence Distinguished Service Medal by the Director of Central Intelligence, William H. Webster.

On May 28, 1991, Revell assumed the position of Special Agent in Charge, Dallas Division (covering the northern half of Texas). On May 1, 1992, the Attorney General of the United States ordered Revell to Los Angeles and placed him in command of joint Federal law enforcement efforts to suppress the riots and civil disorder. He was also assigned responsibility to coordinate the law enforcement activities of military forces assigned to combat the riots in Los Angeles. Attorney General William Barr presented Revell the Attorney General's Special Commendation Award for "outstanding leadership in overseeing Federal law enforcement agencies response to civil disorder in Los Angeles". He retired from the Federal Bureau of Investigation on August 31, 1994 with the restored rank of Associate Deputy Director.

In October 1994, Revell was awarded the Albert J. Wood Public Affairs Award by the Middle East Forum "for his efforts in the fight against International Terrorism." During his career as a FBI Official and subsequently as an International Security Consultant, Revell has authored numerous articles on Terrorism, Counter-Intelligence and Organized Crime. He has spoken and lectured at the national and international level on these and other criminal justice and National Security subjects on a frequent basis. He served as an advisor on International Organized Crime to the National Security Council in 1996 and as a consultant to the President's Commission on Critical Infrastructure Protection in 1997. He has been interviewed or served as a commentator on numerous national television news and commentary programs.

JEAN LUIS ROMERO

HUNT AND THE ROMERO INCIDENT: MAY 1961

In 1974 the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities reported: "After the Cuban invasion failed, [HUNT] served as personal assistant to CIA Director Dulles. [HUNT'S] subsequent activities are not entirely known." According to HUNT, in May 1961 he and Allen Dulles worked on an inquiry commission regarding the Bay of Pigs whose members were appointed by President Kennedy, which was known as the Green Commission. On October 3, 1972, the Associated Press ran this article datelined Paris:

The newspaper L'Aurore published yesterday an account of a former French resident of Algeria who said that in 1961 he had been hired to kill President Kennedy, but had withdrawn from the assignment at the last moment. The newspaper said Jose Luis Romero, who now lives at an undisclosed place in South America, had signed a contract with a French book publisher for the story of his life. The article, written by Philippe Bernet and Camille Gilles, quoted Romero as saying the attempt on Kennedy's life was to have been made during the American president's visit to France to talk with President Charles DeGaulle. Romero said that in Algiers he had been offered $460,000 through a man only identified as Mike who 'visibly worked for certain secret service of the United States.' He said after he got to Paris he got worried. He checked with the Secret Army Organization in Algiers and got orders to pull out of the deal.

On November 19, 1972, The National Insider ran the story from L'Aurore.

Romero, who was anti-Communist and anti-DeGaulle, allegedly thwarted the plot when he realized he was being set up as a patsy and that he was selected not only for his medical history (brain surgery following a land mine accident) and political revolutionary background which he believes the plotters would have used to convince the world he was a loner. The plot became known to Romero, he recounted, when a friend who was an American Embassy official and a high-ranking intelligence agent, set up a dinner meeting at which the friend, Mike, did not show up. Instead 'Two men entered and came up to my table. From their clothes I recognized them as Americans. They said they had come on behalf of my friend Mike. I realized something bigger must be up.' 'We must fake an attempt on General DeGaulle's life during Kennedy's visit to France,' one of them said. 'They offered me $400,000 for the deal half of it immediately and the other half after Kennedy was dead.' He then outlined the details of the plot and its preparations involving conversion to Swiss citizenship, and auto and a money belt given to him by Mike who had materialized to meet him in Spain. ('I was amazed to see him there.') Then, according to Romero's account, he returned to Paris and took a taxi to the cafe Le Paris where a contact gave me a plan. I still possess it in its original written form, the plans of the assassination.' He described two options of location for which the plans provided and the gun he was supposed to use. "A Remington .280 with an infrared scope. To get it, I was to wait near the Northern Railroad Station, where I would be handed the key to a public locker where the rifle was in a valise. (But) 'suddenly the brilliance of the scheme behind the scheme became apparent to me. The OAS would be blamed for the murder of Kennedy which would be masked as the result of a bungled attempt of DeGaulle, and the public would swallow it because DeGaulle had a history of near escapes from assassins. If I were captured and talked my confessions would be put down as the ravings of an insane man.' Romero said he then phoned his superior OAS officer in Algiers was told to drop everything. 'Let the American's murder each other if they want. This whole business may be blamed on us.' But because he was still involved by virtue of having accepted the money, Romero said he decided to go through the motions until he could escape the plotters who, he said, had him, 'followed in my every move.' When he went to pick up the rifle at the railway station, he 'went into the restroom and went out the other door as quickly as I could cross the room. I ran like mad for a hundred yards, then veered off in the direction of the docks. It would have been fatal for me to return to the hotel.' Romero said he fled to Italy, Switzerland, then the Congo and finally to Latin America where he used some of the money to buy a small ranch and where he still lives in seclusion. He reportedly claimed the evidence which documents his story - correspondence with Mike and a phony passport, a list of addresses and tenants of apartments from which he would have selected the shooting site, and the written assassination plan is in the possession of a lawyer in Geneva. 'I know my story has exceptional implications. It reveals that certain people were intent already in 1961 to murder Kennedy, using a revolutionary - me - as their patsy. Romero believes the same person or persons working closely with them who approached him about the assassination were possibly responsible for Kennedy's death later.'

This article appeared in British newspaper the Guardian on December 1, 1972:

A book has been recently published in France, by the respected journalist, Camille Gilles. It is called $400,000 Pour Abbatre Kennedy à Paris and is published by Julliard. It tells of a former French legionary and Secret Army Organization operative called Jean Luis Romero. Impeccably documented, researched in France and South America, the book concludes that Jean Luis Romero is telling the truth when he claims that a CIA operative code-named 'Mike' offered him $400,000 to assassinate Kennedy on his visit to de Gaulle in May 1961. From circumstantial evidence in the book, including descriptions, there seems little doubt that 'Mike' was HOWARD HUNT. [The Guardian 12.1.73 Martin Walker]

The fact that the story was first printed in a respected Parisian newspaper L'Aurore and was coauthored by Philippe Bernet and Camille Gilles is significant. Although this researcher can find no traces of Camille Gilles, Philippe Bernet was the author of Roger Wybot and the Battle for the DST which was published in Paris by La Cite publishers in 1975. Wybot was a Gaullist resistance fighter who became head of the Direction de la Surveillance du Territoire (DST) internal security service. Philippe Bernet was also the author of a book about Colonel Le Roy-Finville and the clandestine services which was published by La Cite in 1980. Julliard Press in Paris did exist and appeared to be a serious publishing firm. The story was carried by the Associated Press. Then Martin Walker of the Guardian decided that one of these men was HUNT. Then the story was picked up by The National Insider. As far as this researcher has ascertained Martin Walker was the only journalist to ever actually see $400,000 Pour Abattre Kennedy a Paris. This researcher was unable to obtain a copy and does not believe the book was ever published. If it was published it would only have taken two months to get the book into print. On October 3, 1972, a possible contract with Julliard was being contemplated. On December 1, 1972, the book was already in print? Unlikely. What more likely happened was that publication of the book was canceled and the story was relegated to tabloid status at the behest of the CIA. There were numerous assassination plots against DeGaulle at this time.

ASSASSINATION PLOTS AGAINST DeGAULLE

The CIA reported on May 19, 1961: "Some extreme rightists believe that the only way that President DeGaulle can now be stopped from surrendering Algeria is to assassinate him...This attitude has reached fanatical proportions and those close to it believe that an assassination attempt against DeGaulle is certain to come in the near future...In May 1961 an attempt was made by two Secret Army Organization members to enlist United States Government (deleted) support in their operations against DeGaulle." [CIA F82-0184/1; Allen v. DOD #09787] A hired assassin, armed with a poison ring, was to shake DeGaulle's hand. On September 9, 1961, the Secret Army Organization Chief of Staff was arrested for perpetrating an assassination attempt against Prime Minister Charles DeGaulle. Two former Secret Army Organization officers were implicated in the conspiracy, which entailed planting ten kilograms of plastic explosive in some bushes, then detonating the explosives by remote control, just as Prime Minister Charles DeGaulle's limousine was going by. The detonating charge failed to trigger an explosion, and DeGaulle's automobile suffered only minor damages. Had the explosives detonated, he would have died.

KENNEDY WOULD BE IN PARIS

Kennedy was scheduled to visit Paris on May 31, 1961. Did HUNT fly to Paris shortly after the botched Bay of Pigs invasion? Was it he and BARKER who contacted Jean Luis Romero? HUNT had worked out of Paris before. Was Jim Noel, an associate of HUNT and CIA Station Chief in Madrid at this time, Mike? HUNT was supposed to be working at a desk job at the CIA around this time, but HUNT, a spook, could have turned up anywhere. After the Bay of Pigs HUNT was no longer involved in Cuban propaganda. The CIA stated that in "November 1961 HUNT was reassigned to the Deputy Director Plans /Covert Action Staff, and in January 1962, to the Office of the Chief of the same Staff. In late 1961 HUNT wrote that he represented the CIA on the Interagency Committee on Cuba. It was alleged that in early May 1961 HUNT flew to Paris. There, he and BARKER contacted Romero. There is a gap in HUNT'S CIA career after the Bay of Pigs which was April 1961 to November 1961. The CIA has not released any of BARKER'S Operational Progress Reports for 1961. STURGIS testified that some time in 1961 BARKER contacted him on behalf of HUNT in regard to an assassination. It was likely that Romero told the truth and that the men involved were HUNT and BARKER. The Romero report was never adequately investigated.

TRACES ON ROMERO

The HSCA was informed by the CIA's Office of Security that "On the basis of information furnished regarding Jose Luis Romero, this office cannot locate any identifiable information on him." The CIA did locate files on Jose Romero, a G-2 Staff member. [DOS FOIA #751.11/9-961] HUNT was asked about Romero by Howard Liebengood of the SSCIA: "A former Legionnaire says that he was somehow approached in Majorca and given certain money to assassinate President Kennedy when he visited DeGaulle at Orly Airport and the names of BARKER and HUNT have both come up in that context." HUNT said he had no information on this. Romero was never shown a photo of HUNT or BARKER nor has he been heard from since this report was published. HEMMING stated:

Interview Romero. Show him a picture of HUNT. Bullshit. OAS was headquartered in Lisbon, not Paris. We dealt with OAS people. They were on the run.

WINSTON SCOTT

Winston Scott's secretary, Ann Goodpasture, wrote:

Winston Scott, who wrote this paragraph saying that OSWALD was of great interest during this period, is also the same man who signed all of the cables and dispatches attesting to the fact that the calls from the Cuban Embassy by OSWALD (and visits there) were not identified as OSWALD, or even reported by the Station Officers investigating Cuban activities (DAVID PHILLIPS), until after November 23, 1963. This material, and the briefing on it, was the basis for the Warren Commission Report. Thus Scott clearly contradicts himself and departs from the records in the files. There is an explanation perhaps, for this statement by Scott. He was a very proud and egotistical man, and would have interpreted the Warren Commission statement on page 777 (that the Cuban Embassy connection was not discovered until after the assassination) as a criticism and dereliction of duty on the part of the Station. I think that Scott was disappointed that the Warren Commission did not make it appear that the Station had connected these calls with OSWALD before the assassination. Ann Goodpasture. The Soviets were interested in tourists as possible spies, at this time: A lengthy Top Secret study by the KGB in 1961 stated:

It has been established that the Intelligence organs of the USA are displaying special activity in the utilization of tourism, for the purpose of conducting subversive work against the USSR...In line with the preparation and dispatch of such agents, among the tourists the Americans also make extensive use of persons not directly connected with American intelligence organs...Candidates for missions to the USSR are selected carefully. They ordinarily possess knowledge of the Russian language, know the fundamentals of photography.

Citing the increase in foreign tourists in the Soviet Union from 35,000 in 1959, to over 50,000 in 1960, the document instructed the First Chief Directorate Legal Residency of the KGB abroad, "to utilize all its resources to expose among American tourists persons suspected of belonging to the enemy intelligence or counter-intelligence organs."

HT LINGUAL & RIMMA SHIRAKOVA

Counter-Intelligence records on Rimma Shirakova prior to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy consisted of this report:

3. Security Indices reflect that in January 1959 Rimma Shirakova, from Moscow, was in contact with on Martha E. Black at 934 South 4th Street, Springfield, Illinois. Black was apparently one of a tourist group in Russia in the summer of 1958 of which Shirakova was an Intourist Guide. (Deleted). Security Indices contain no reference to any Martha E. Black who would seem to be the individual referred to above.

4. Security Indices contain no reference to any Martha E. Black who would seem to be the individual referred to above. M.D. Stevens.

This information came from the CIA's HT LINGUAL program. On one document this is handwritten "From confidential OS informant!"

HT LINGUAL

The purpose of HT LINGUAL was to obtain intelligence and counter-intelligence from letters sent between the United States and the USSR. On November 21, 1955, ANGLETON recommended to Richard Helms that "we gain access to all mail traffic to and from the USSR." Typically, intercepted letters and envelopes would be photographed and then returned to the mails. Due to their sensitivity, the results of these intercepts were kept in a separate filing system.

In Lee and Marina, Priscilla Johnson wrote that Marina Oswald told her Rimma Shirakova visited Lee in Minsk in the autumn of 1961. Marina Oswald described OSWALD as agitated by the visit, after which he confessed: "I was in love with her, I wanted to marry her." [Johnson, Lee and Marina p124] Was she also in love with him? Priscilla Johnson told this researcher: "He had a crush on her. As far as I know it was one way." Marina Oswald told this researcher in 1994:

I did not know this, I don't know where she got that from. She claims that I know about that. I completely block it out. Even if it happened, it could be absolutely true, I do not recall that. It could be true but I simply do not recall right now.

Rimma Shirakova spoke Arabic and had worked with a high level delegation to the United Arab Republics. She had been asked to procure women for them but claimed she refused. [Norman Mailer, Oswald's Tale, p42]

SHIRAKOVA - KIND HEARTED

A CIA report stated Shirakova had lent money to an unidentified tourist, who had run short of funds. [CIA 1295-482, 1302-478, 1110-407; WR p690] When the State Department received ANGLETON'S CSCI report concerning Shirakova it contacted Moscow and inquired if the Embassy could identify this tourist. The telex was answered by Mitchell K. Stanley, who was listed in Who's Who in the CIA. Mitchell K. Stanley entered on duty at the State Department in July 1950. In 1955 he joined the USIA as an intelligence research analyst. In 1965 Mitchell Stanley became Chief of the Intelligence Liaison Section. [State Dept. Bio. Reg. 1977] Mitchell Stanley reported the identification of the tourist "could not be made by the Embassy, Moscow, since the records maintained at the Embassy cover only the last two years...other records disclose the following cases arising at Moscow during that period." Mitchell Stanley listed payments made by the American Embassy Emergency Fund: "LEE HARVEY OSWALD (deceased) $435.71 March 7, 1962..." According to the Warren Report: "On June 1, 1962, OSWALD signed a promissory note at the Embassy for a repatriation loan of $435.71." This was a clerical error.

SHIRAKOVA VISITS MME. TOUSSARD'S WAX WORKS MUSEUM

On September 8, 1966, CIA file 201-803914 was opened on Rimma Shirakova at the request of SB/CI/R. The signature of the requester and other information remained deleted. Shirakova visited England in June 1968. Her photograph was forwarded to FBI Headquarters by the American Embassy, London, Legal Attache, accompanied by a Secret report. [FBI 105-82555-5606] In Britain, Rimma Shirakova was in touch with a CIA source: "Source and Shirakova visited Mme. Toussard's Wax Works Museum where Shirakova had a visible reaction when seeing OSWALD display. Although this visit was entirely innocent on one source's part (deleted) Shirakova's reaction indicated suspicion that this was a provocation." Another document stated: "(Deleted) states that their source is emphatic that at no time has any sort of intelligence approach or direct questioning taken place, either by Shirakova or any other Russian. (Deleted) adds that it does look, however, if the SCD are building up quite a dossier on the man." [FBI 105-

82555-5606; KGB/SCD Connected Soviet Shirakova Memo to Chief SB Div. 6.19.68; CIA FOIA 525-126] The CIA reported that "During (deleted) visit in March 1966 she mentioned Subject to the (deleted) analyst assigned to (deleted) activities. The latter has now written a summary from (deleted) files on Subject."

WILLIAM HOUSTON SEYMOUR

William Houston Seymour was born December 1, 1937 or January 12, 1937 at Fort Benton, Montana. On January 10, 1968 the FBI ran a file check on William Houston Seymour. Serials 89-69-1797, 1809 page 2, 1839 page 2. On September 2, 1977, the CIA ran an INDEX SEARCH AND 201 CONSOLIDATION REQUEST on William

Houston Seymour much of which was withheld from research. William Houston Seymour's address was listed as 1008 Simmons, Tucson, Arizona. A document that was attached to this request read: "Seymour, W.H. Wash-CIA-Int-28 Folder #1 p.14 60-749/16 Requested from DDP Records Center 'Will Follow' RI/Archives References 362070." The first traces on William Houston Seymour in the CIA'S highly illegible MAIN INDEX SEARCH RESPONSE: "****Locator Data Order From IP/CFS January 1, 1959 01774066." The second trace read: "Seymour 201-0011838 (Deleted) 07732A01 June 55 Enclosure 1. ***Locator Data: Order from IP/CFS (Deleted) 07732 March 17, 1975, 06667012." The CIA discovered traces on a (FNU) Seymour in Trieste in 1949, which was unidentifiable with the Subject. The fourth trace "Seymour 201-007038 (Deleted) 60682A01 November 30, 1971. ### PAULINO SIERRA

On January 26, 1968, Paulino Sierra filled out a CIA Biographic Data Employment Form. On February 23, 1968, Paulino Sierra was denied an ad hoc clearance on the basis of derogatory information. [Memo for Chicago Field Office From Thorne to Watkins 2.23.68] In January 1968 Paulino Sierra filled out a CIA Biographic Data sheet. The FBI stamped "Refer to Data Re: Eladio Del Valle Guitierrez which was sent your Agency dated June, 30 1965, p.1. Refer to Date Regarding: Plot to Assassinate Castro During October Holidays, 1965." [CIA 80T01357A Box 45 Folder 31 w/h]

VLADIMIR SLOBODA

In 1965 the CIA prepared a report on Vladimir Sloboda, much of which was withheld. This report dealt with Vladimir Sloboda's knowledge of CIA personnel and a possible recruitment attempt by him. The document concluded: "It is not known whether Sloboda is affiliated with the Soviet Intelligence Services at this time. According to a December 19, 1962, Foreign Service Dispatch from the American Embassy, Moscow, (deleted)." [CIA Memo J.F. Meredith to Chief/FIOB 9.30.65]

RICHARD SNYDER

On July 14, 1949, W.R. Cornelison, Acting Security Officer, Security Branch, Office of Policy Coordination, informed Robert Bannerman that a semi-covert personnel action was being instituted on Richard E. Snyder: "It should be noted from his Personal History Statement that he has several in-law relatives who are presently Italian citizens. It is not believed that these relatives are close enough to the Subject to create a security problem. Therefore, it is requested that you take into consideration the request for a waiver of foreign connections." Two documents about Snyder dated October 17, 1949, was withheld in their entirety [CIA JFK Box No. 46 Folder No.2]

On April 1, 1959, a Request For Approval of Liaison form was sent to Chief, Employee Activity Branch, PSD/OS through the Chief, Official Cover and Liaison/CCB/FI. The name of the CIA employee who was in contact with Snyder at the time was withheld. His component was PPG/Staff. Richard E. Snyder commented: "I was in Washington at this time."

COULD SNYDER HAVE KNOWN?

According to the 1970 Yale University Yearbook Richard E. Snyder was the Embassy official in charge of U-2 trial matters. Richard E. Snyder: "I wasn't in charge of U-2 matters (laughs). There wasn't anyone in charge of U-2 matters in the Moscow Embassy. As the senior Consulate Officer in Moscow I attended the trial. I was the Embassy Officer in charge of the trial." OSWALD had told him he was going to give the Soviet Union information on radar. Why didn't Richard E. Snyder put two and two together? Richard E. Snyder explained,

I never heard of the U-2 when OSWALD came to the Embassy. I never heard about it until after Francis Gary Powers was shot-down. Where would the suspicion arise? How do you attach the U-2 to OSWALD? I had no knowledge OSWALD was a radar operator in Japan, at the time. I had no knowledge that they were running U-2 operations out of Japan over China until it came out in the press, long after the Francis Gary Powers trial. There was no link in my mind - OSWALD being a radar operator - which is not a very lofty position. Remember, it is very clear now, which wasn't so at the time, that OSWALD thought - and he was probably right - that he was speaking for Russian ears when he was talking to me. The Embassy had been penetrated - we all knew it at the Embassy. There was only one safe room and that was upstairs. It had been specially built. OSWALD was trying to impress the Soviets of his sincerity. He may declare this in his diary also. This was kind of a last chance, last ditch effort on his part, to get the Soviets to accept him. They had rejected him and said, 'We're not going to give you residence.' I didn't dwell on that point. It became clear later on, in reading his diary...I reported it back to Washington. I was in no position to evaluate whether the guy really knew anything or was bluffing. I had no way of evaluating if he knew anything about radar.

Richard E. Snyder was asked if OSWALD could have been a Soviet Agent:

I can't imagine any possible scenario in which the Soviets would go through this kind of charade to make an agent out of OSWALD. The complexity of the charade. Any serious intelligence organization would be out of their minds to trust OSWALD. He was a real flake. That's my own feeling about him. Certainly his attempted suicide marked him as emotionally unstable. The KGB had a considerable time to look at him in the hotel. They had his interviews with Priscilla Johnson. They must have had a pretty good line on the guy. [After he defected] his use as an agent would have been damaged because he was listed by every American intelligence agency. To use a guy like that to assassinate the President would make no sense. This rules out any Soviet involvement.

The possibility that OSWALD was dispatched then activated to sabotage the summit was suggested to Richard E. Snyder. He commented,

This is really farfetched stuff, this is stoned stuff. It fits in with the whole conspiracy industry. There is no evidence. Imagination will do if you're writing stuff like this and making money.

"FRANK STURGIS" IN DALLAS NOVEMBER 21, 1963

As fate would have it, a man with the same name as FRANK STURGIS was arrested in Dallas on November 21, 1963. On November 3, 1977, HSCA Chief Robert Blakey received a report from "Geoffrey Alprin, former counsel, Washington, D.C., Metro Police Department, who said that after the arrest of STURGIS in 1972 break-in, Ronald Winter, Metro Police, told him that the Dallas Police Department said that FRANK A. STURGIS was arrested for vagrancy on November 21, 1963, in Dallas. Matter was checked out by fingerprints, but not same. Wilson [D.C. Police Chief Jerry Wilson] approved call to us. After failure to confirm identity - dropped. Check out." Geoffrey Alprin, a judge in Washington, D.C., was contacted in November, 1963. He stated: "I was the General Counsel of the Metro Police Department from 1970 to 1973. I called Bob Blakey. I knew him previously. I made the connection between Watergate burglar STURGIS, and somebody who had been arrested in Dallas for vagrancy on November 21, 1963, in June 1972. I was told that the STURGIS who had been arrested in Dallas was not the same guy as one of Watergate burglars. Detective Winter told me. Winter, or somebody, checked out the name 'FRANK STURGIS' with the Dallas Police, and maybe I got to see the report that way. That would not be unusual." Journalist Bruce Hall reported: "The 'Frank Sturgis' that was arrested on November 21, 1963, was from Brownwood, Texas. On November 12, 1950, Sturgis moved to Mesquite and attended school there. Sturgis went to East Texas State University. His one other brush with the law occurred August 15, 1959, when he was in the County Jail for stealing 15 stereo tapes." [Dallas County Court # C69-1019B; HSCA 180-10113-10405] In the Spring of 1973 a rumor that circulated in Washington, D.C., placed STURGIS in Dallas on November 21, 1963.

Sullivan wrote a memorandum to D.J. Brennan, on "CIA/Anti-Castro Activities/IS - Cuba." The memorandum was withheld except for this sentence "The following was furnished to the Liaison Agent on October 29, 1962, on a strictly confidential basis" and a stamp that read: "One copy made regarding William Harvey for review FBI HQ by HSCA." Attorney William Kunstler stated that Sullivan was shot 15 minutes before sunrise at 243 feet with a scope-equipped sniper rifle. Daniels allegedly mistook Sullivan, who he said was attired in a black and white mackinaw and white turtleneck sweater, for the white tail of a deer. According to officials who examined the body, however, Sullivan was wearing a black and red mackinaw. The only white item of clothing they found was a T-shirt entirely covered by outer garments. The autopsy report has the bullet traveling in a downward path through Sullivan's body until deflected upwards by vertebrae, whereas the killer said he shot upwards over the brow of a hill. [Seven Days 5.5.78] A pair of gloves was found near Sullivan's body. Daniels denied they were his and said he did not remove them from the corpse. Sullivan's hunting partners stated their appointment was for 9:00 a.m. - but Sullivan was killed at 6:30 a.m. [Public Eye 1979] After Sullivan's death, a HSCA investigator tried to enter his house and seize his papers. Sugar Hill New Hampshire Police Chief Gary Young explained: "He showed his credentials. He said he had subpoenas for all the records." Young declared himself caretaker of the house and ordered the investigator out.

TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY PARKING LOT

There had been a report of questionable activity in this area on November 21, 1963: At 4:10 p.m., while on route to a parking lot located west of the Texas School Book Depository, three Mexican-American textile workers observed two cars parked near the rear exit lane of the lot. They said one of the cars contained an older man, the other, a younger man. They "observed the older man open the trunk of his car and remove a rifle that one female worker noticed had a telescopic sight affixed thereto. She stated the older man gave the rifle to the younger man, who put it in the small car, then both got in and drove away..." One of these cars was a 1956 Buick. ## A.J. WEBERMAN AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

This researcher's great-grandfather, Moishe WEBERMAN came here from Hungary in 1870 and opened a Kosher delicatessen in Manhattan. His son, Herman WEBERMAN , was a veteran of the Spanish-American war. His son, Ezra WEBERMAN , was an attorney with offices at 51 Chambers Street in Manhattan. Ezra WEBERMAN's brother, Danny Webb, was an actor and hosted a television program for children sponsored by Dr. Posner's shoes. Ezra WEBERMAN married Sara Feinstein and I was born on May 26, 1945, I grew up in Brooklyn and attended Public School. In 1962 I entered Michigan State University in East Lansing, Michigan. I became an honor student. In 1964 I was arrested for having sold five marijuana cigarettes to a professional police informant. I faced a 20 year minimum mandatory sentence on the sale of marijuana charge and another 10 year minimum mandatory sentence for possession of marijuana, after the police vacuumed my pockets and found traces of pot. I was allowed to return, on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn. I graduated from the City College of New York in Manhattan with a B.A. in English.

In 1965 I worked in the Cafe Wha? in Greenwich Village where I met Jimmy Hendricks. In 1967 my wife and I moved to 6 Bleecker Street in the Bowery area of Manhattan. I lived there for 23 years. In the late 1960's I became leader of the Yippies (Youth International Party) and organized Marijuana Smoke-Ins, anti-war demonstrations and riots on a leadership level. This researcher was part of several "affinity groups" formed for the purpose of "trashing" certain symbols of repression such as the Department of Justice building. The Yippies continue to organize "Smoke-Ins" throughout the country to protest the unjust marijuana laws. [Yippie c/o Dana Beal 9 Bleecker St. NYC 10012]

Rolling Stone Magazine published a Press release from the Dylan Archives that stated there were hidden pictures superimposed on the cover of Bob Dylan's John Wesley Harding record album. Soon, every Bob Dylan fan was searching it for these photographs - that they had overlooked. I noticed that when I played certain unintelligible lines from Bob Dylan's record album backwards, they made sense. Rolling Stone also published this. Rock fans started playing albums backwards and the story was circulated that a Beatles album contained the line "Paul is dead, miss him, miss him," if you played it backwards. This researcher was banned from the pages of Rolling Stone after I ransacked their New York offices with a crew of Yippies. This researcher appeared on many national television interview shows, including Tom Snyder, Larry King and Martha Mitchell's talk show in D.C.

INVENTOR OF THE DYLAN DATA BASE

In the early 1970's this data base compiler invented the science of "Dylanology." Dylanology involved the digitization of Bob Dylan's poetry to facilitate its analysis. This researcher created a Dylan Data Base, known as the Bob Dylan Word Concordance. PC's or MAC's were not yet invented so my wife and I went to New York University where we typed all of Dylan's work on punch cards. This was transferred to a large magnetic tape and a friend wrote a program that printed out every word in Dylan's poetry along with a line of context, in alphabetical order. I started the Dylan Archives to preserve and disseminate (bootleg) the work of Bob Dylan. I tried to radicalize Dylan, who was a heroin addict. I spent many hours with Bob Dylan, but our relationship ended after "the Dylan Liberation Front" threw a 30th Birthday Party for him outside his home. Articles about Dylanology appeared in Glamour, Newsweek and numerous other publications and this researcher was on the cover of the Rolling Stone.

This researcher is best known for having invented garbology, the science of spying on someone through their garbage. I am "that guy who went through Dylan's garbage." I did a cover story on garbology for Esquire magazine. I made appearances to promote the article. Variety claimed that one of my television appearances was so offensive the host had to black it out by going to a blank screen. This was untrue. None-the-less, my appearance on the Merv Griffen Show was canceled. Later I appeared on the television show Real People when I was detained for going through the garbage of former President RICHARD NIXON in front of his townhouse on the East Side of Manhattan.

In 1972 I became a Zippie (Yippies with zip) and led the anti-Nixon protests at the Republican Convention in Flamingo Park, Miami Beach, Florida. I was arrested there for Inciting to Riot. John Lennon and his wife, Yoko Ono financed my activities. I spent long periods of time with John and Yoko in their Bank Street apartment in Greenwich Village. Rarely did they have any clothes on. My other Zippie/Yippie associates included Tom Forcade, founder of High Times magazine, Irvin Dana Beal and American dissident Abbie Hoffman. The FBI investigated me on several occasions for Sedition and Insurrection and for crossing state lines with the intention of causing a riot.

My next book, My Life In Garbology, was published in 1979. That year I threw a tomato at former President RICHARD NIXON when he visited the Loeb Library in Manhattan. I hit a police officer and was charged with felonious assault. When the New York City Police Department found another tomato on my person I was charged with possession of a deadly weapon. The police kept me locked up until NIXON left town. I pleaded guilty to using loud and abusive language in public, and paid a $25 fine. The bailiff remarked: "You don't look like one of our usual customers." My pistol permit was revoked but I still had my two Ithaca shotguns, an UZI semi-automatic submachine gun and a trusty old M-16. (I have long since disposed of my arsenal).

In the early 1980's I worked with the Jewish Defense Organization (not to be confused with the Jewish Defense League) in running operations against Nazis. On Sundays I went to a rifle range in Huntington, Long Island, and trained Jews, young and old, how to shoot. Spotlight commented: "The leading promotor of the theory that HUNT was one of the 'tramps' is A.J. WEBERMAN who maintains very close ties to the Jewish Defense League. WEBERMAN has also been closely associated with Mordechai Levi, a known agent provocateur of the Israeli's Mossad's propaganada and intelligence arm, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Levi was also active in the Jewish Defense League (JDL), created by militant Rabbi Meyer Kahane. In Chapter 8 we saw that Kahane was a CIA asset and protégé of Irving Lovestone who handled CIA-liaison with the Meyer Lansky-linked French Corsican and Sicilian Mafias. Lovestone's operation was directed out of JAMES J. ANGLETON'S Israeli desk at the CIA. It may very well be that the 'HUNT as a tramp' story being touted by WEBERMAN was indeed a CIA-Mossad concoction to further muddy the waters. What is interesting is that in 1975 - precisely at the same time when WEBERMAN was publishing and promoting a book that named HUNT as one of the tramps - a strange letter appeared, anonymously, in the mailbox of another (and more reliable) assassination researcher, Penn Jones Jr...That the WEBERMAN story of 'HUNT as a tramp' and the 'Dear Mr. HUNT' letter appeared at the same time are particularly intriguing in light of another matter we are about to consider [the ANGLETON memo re: HUNT in Dallas]. Both the 'HUNT as a tramp story' and the 'Dear Mr. HUNT' letter appear to be part and parcel of a CIA black propaganda operation run by none other than the Mossad's man at the CIA, JAMES ANGLETON." [M.C. Piper Final Judgement pages 198 to 199] obtained the garbage of the PLO's Observer Delegation to the United Nations and turned it over to the Mossad. I spent much of the 1980's living in Tel Aviv, Israel. I returned to the United States in 1987. In 1993 this data base compiler served as a Frontline researcher for the PBS documentary Who Was Lee Harvey Oswald? I worked with William Scott Malone, a reporter for Frontline.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF "X"

The CIA claimed its transcriber mistakenly coupled the tapes of OSWALD with a photograph of a person who was not OSWALD. This researcher called him "X." The HSCA explained:

The committee had other reports that the CIA had obtained a picture of OSWALD that was taken during one of his visits to the Soviet and the Cuban Embassies. The CIA, however, denied that such a photograph had been obtained, and no pictures of OSWALD were discovered by the committee during its review of Agency files...The committee was unable to determine whether the CIA did in fact come into possession of a photograph of OSWALD taken during his visits to the Soviet and Cuban Embassies in Mexico City. The overwhelming weight of the evidence indicated that the initial conclusion of the Agency employees that the individual in the photograph was OSWALD, was the result of a careless mistake. [HSCA R p249]

X was photographed entering Soviet Embassy on October 1, 1963, [OSWALD called the Embassy on October 1, 1963] and October 4, 1963. X was photographed entering the Cuban Embassy on October 15, 1963. [CIA 83-30, 621-259, 935-927G, 876-897, 881-901, 935-927-G] OSWALD left Mexico City on October 2, 1963. The CIA later reported:

In its original October 9, 1963 report, Mexico City had said it had a photograph of an apparent American male leaving the Soviet Embassy on October 1, 1963, the day OSWALD phoned there. (Deleted.) Accordingly, we cabled the Navy Department on October 24, 1963, asking for a photograph of OSWALD from his Marine Corps days so we could compare photographs. We had not received this photograph by November 22, 1963, but in any event, it turned out the man photographed outside the Embassy was not OSWALD. As chance would have it, none of our (deleted) in Mexico City had ever taken an identifiable picture of LEE OSWALD.

On November 22, 1963, Winston Scott forwarded X's picture to CIA Headquarters. Ambassador Thomas Mann had a member of the Office of the Legal Attache fly to Dallas with another picture of X. [CIA 29-12] After Winston Scott had seen OSWALD on television that night, and he cabled CIA Headquarters and informed them X was not OSWALD. The FBI realized this; nonetheless, S.A. Bardwell Odum showed the photograph to Marguerite Oswald on November 23, 1963. When JACK RUBY assassinated OSWALD the next day, OSWALD'S distraught mother thought JACK RUBY was X. [CIA 20; CIA 31-7] Bardwell Odum related, "I showed her the picture on November 23, the next day RUBY shot OSWALD. She thought I had showed her a photograph of RUBY."

Next, X was suspected of being A. J. Hidell, the fictitious president of the nonexistent New Orleans Chapter of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. Finally, the CIA decided that X might be an assassin, and notified the United States Secret Service. [CIA 1640-449] In 1967 CIA Counsel General Lawrence Houston [died 8.17.95] wrote a letter to a judge in New Orleans explaining that, because of the investigation of New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison, the CIA had checked its files for a photograph of OSWALD in Mexico City. All it found was that X, "to our knowledge, has not been identified." The Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, William Colby, told Dan Rather in 1975: "To this day we still do not know who he is." [CIA 942-927N, 952-927X, 943-9270, 953-927Y, 408] In 1993 the CIA finally released seven out of nine uncropped photographs of X. A cover document stated: "There are eight photographs in this envelope. NB: This is a selection of photographs available of this unidentified individual." The CIA had a selection of photographs of this unknown man, yet none of OSWALD.

X was the Subject of a book published in 1975 and reprinted in 1992, Appointment in Dallas, by Hugh C. McDonald. Hugh C. McDonald claimed that retired CIA agent Herman Kimsey told him X was a professional hit man named "Saul." Herman Kimsey was a former Army Intelligence Officer. He explained in his resume: "From 1946 to 1953 my duties consisted of investigating crimes of a security nature; I was a member of a combat CIC team in Korea; Technical Laboratory Chief at the CIC Center and Technical Laboratory, and Chief of the CIC Far East Command." Herman Kimsey was an Agency staff employee from March 1953 to July 1962. He was Chief of the CIA Research and Analysis, Graphic Aids Reproduction Branch, Technical Services Division, for eight years. On April 20, 1961, Herman Kimsey received Top Secret approval. On May 22, 1961, Herman Kimsey received $380,000 from Sheffield Edwards. Herman Kimsey examined the currency and determined it was sterile. In January 1962, the CIA presented Herman Kimsey with one of the largest individual Monetary Suggestion Awards ever given by that Agency. In March 1963, Herman Kimsey was doing business under the name Security Associates Incorporated, and by 1964 he was in partnership with Hugh C. McDonald.

On August 10, 1970, a memo was drafted titled "Herman E. Kimsey, Shenanigans CI/TRCO/GT, Stanton, C/CI/R&A, Mr. Donovan E. Pratt, Mr. Edward Katiski" stating "(Deleted) of Technical Services Division that Kimsey of BEVISION [Goleniewski] fame, a former Technical Services Division-nick tried to get her to analyze the handwriting of some homosexuals who were 'the real murderers of Martin Luther King.' Kimsey gives out that he is working to exonerate Ray for this peccadillo."

Herman Kimsey was the Associate Chief of International Intelligence for the Shickshinny Sovereign Military Order of Knights of Malta. The Knights of Malta were an offshoot of the Knights of St. John, who, like the Teutonic Knights, fought in the Crusades. The Knights of Malta became an ultra-conservative international group granted sovereignty by the Vatican. On December 27, 1946, ANGLETON received the Knights of Malta's Croci Al Merito Seconda Classe, the same day as Raymond Rocca. In the late 1960's, Herman Kimsey championed Goleniewski's claim to be the last of the Romanovs, and therefore the Czar. Herman Kimsey died from heart failure at age 55, on January 24, 1971. [Russell The Man Who Knew Too Much p798; FBI62-109060-7504; NY Review of Books 4.3.75 - Saul and Fensterwald; Covert Action Number 25 Winter 1986; Wash. Star 11.1.67; Gambino Memo re; McD 8.3.76; JG Brown Memo re: Kimsey 12.2.75; Kimsey Memo re: $ 4.12.61; Kimsey Resume]

Herman Kimsey declared if Hugh C. McDonald told the story, he would deny it and his associate, Leonard Davidov, would have his notes and papers, if anything happened to him. The story in abbreviated form: "Saul" had been in Guatemala training for the Bay of Pigs with the Cuban Revolutionary Council, when the CIA hired him to kill President John F. Kennedy. Hugh C. McDonald tracked him down, at great personal risk, and obtained his confession. Hugh C. McDonald added the following "facts" to our knowledge of covert operations: Adlai Stevenson was killed by an air-propelled needle capsule; the suicide of Navy Secretary James Forrestal was instigated by the Russians through subliminal audio suggestion; the London and Hong Kong flues were caused by missiles in the jet stream filled with Russian viral "time release capsules," and William [sic] Bremer was hired by an Algerian terrorist group to shoot Governor Wallace. [McDonald, H. Appt. In Dallas Zebra 1975 NYC]

FBI Director Clarence Kelley ordered an in-depth study of this book by S.A. Gemberling. Robert Gemberling:

I remember making the review, and I recall he even had a copy of his National Academy Graduation Certificate, showing that he had attended the National Academy, which would indicate he was considered to be a pretty good law enforcement officer. But in reading the book one thing sticks out; when I came to Dallas in 1956 you couldn't buy a drink over the bar, you could only buy a drink in private clubs, and he talked about this guy named Saul who supposedly stayed in a hotel down near the assassination site. Saul went down to the hotel dining room in the evening and he ordered a vodka drink with his dinner. There was no private club in the hotel." The FBI reported: "Herman Kimsey was shown in various files as being (deleted). In 1965 he is shown as a former CIA employee associated with a Cleve Backster in the Academy of Scientific Interrogation, New York City, a polygraph operators firm.

Cleve Backster was associated with Christopher Bird of Mankind Research Unlimited and was a co-author of The Secret Life of Plants, which alleged that plants could think. Herman Kimsey was involved with the Forensic Science Institute, which investigators for Congressman Wright Patman (Dem.-TX.) determined was a Washington, D.C., hotel room. The FBI concluded:

Statements of thoughts and opinions of McDonald without any real facts to back such statements certainly raise questions as to the veracity of the text of this book...it would appear that McDonald obtained the character Troit mentioned in this book by having read about DeMohrenschildt...General Investigative Division recommends that no investigative attention be directed to McDonald's allegations. McDonald is a 62 year old retired investigator, who had a most adventurous career, and who, in retirement, is endeavoring to achieve additional recognition and financial gain.

The CIA's Office of Security examined this book:

Office of Security records do not support Mr. McDonald's claims to CIA employment, or involvement in clandestine operations. From 1955 to circa 1961 McDonald, as an independent contractor, assisted Technical Services Division, Authentication Division, DDP, in the development of Identikit. During the period of his contractual relationship, McDonald was a Senior Official in the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office [he left in 1967] and by May 1969, had formed World Associates, Inc. Santa Monica, California. In June 1969 Central Cover Staff evidenced interest in McDonald under Project (deleted). Commencing in January 1970, Mr. McDonald initiated meetings with the Domestic Contacts Division, suggesting that his firm, soon to be involved internationally in bank security, could be used for intelligence procurement. The Office of Security files do not reflect the outcome of the Domestic Contacts Division and CCS interests.

ALFRED ZIGER

Other Ziger associates were identified by first names only: Frederick, a Hungarian co-worker of OSWALD and Ziger at the radio factory, and Alfred, Anita Ziger's boyfriend, whom OSWALD described as a Hungarian, although he was a Cuban student at the University of Minsk. [CIA 624-823, 980-933] Researcher Peter Wronski reports reported the existence of two 'Alfreds,' one Hungarian, the other Cuban.

BRINGUIER was in Dallas in 1963. A withheld CIA document "contains a detailed report about an intelligence source who normally reported on matters of intelligence interest concerning Cuba. This particular document became part of the OSWALD CIA file, apparently on the basis of several sentences indicating the source had met a well-known, anti-Castro émigré in Dallas, Texas. That individual was CARLOS BRINGUIER." [CIA 1323-1040-5.23.67]

On August 19, 1963, the FBI generated an airtel and an LHM about the Christian Democratic Movement that was withheld except for the paragraph: "It is noted that the Cuban Revolutionary Council is a unity group of..."

Laureano Batista and the MRP. [FBI 97-4623-149 pages w/h]

BRUCE FREDERICK DAVIS

Bruce Frederick Davis was polygraphed by Army Intelligence with such questions as, "Were you required to sign a statement of obligation to work for Eastern intelligence upon your return to the U.S.?" Bruce Frederick Davis answered, "No," and the polygraph showed no sign of deception. Bruce Frederick Davis was then asked a similar question, which was withheld by Army Intelligence. His answer to this question was also withheld, but we are told he displayed reactions indicative of deception.

DEMOHRENSCHILDT

1964 DeMohrenschildt claimed he worked for British Intelligence during World War II. The FBI cabled the London Legal Attache for corroboration. The results of this inquiry were withheld. [FBI 100-32965-243]

A withheld CIA document dated June 3, 1967, probably concerned the DeMohrenschildts: "The document is an operational dispatch from an Agency station abroad which relates in considerable detail the operational relationship between an Agency case officer and a foreign intelligence source. That source, during the course of activities, made a temporary acquaintance of an individual who testified before the Warren Commission. That witness repeated some of the text of his testimony without adding anything which was not already on the record. The release of this document would result in the identification and compromise of a Agency foreign intelligence source without adding any substance to the record of the Warren Commission testimony. That compromise would result in putting an individual in personal hazard and possibly causing some foreign relations difficulties between the U.S. Government and several other countries. Consequently, the cloak of Executive Order requires the classification of such information." [CIA 999-938, 1084-956-w/h, 989-934, 990-935, 987-397,842-887, 397-488]

A May 5, 1978 Memorandum about Oltmans, most of which was withheld. It read: "This is to provide a response to Mr. Keuch's March 24, 1978, request that the reported attorney of a (deleted) be contacted." [FBI 62-117290-764X4, FBI 62-109060-7894]

DCID 4/2

Note the reference to recent informal inquiries, including some from the White House staff. The words, "using the definitions of DCID 4/2" were withheld until 1992. The letters DCID may stand for Director/Counter-Intelligence/Directive - ANGLETON. The CIA denied A.J. WEBERMAN's request for the substance of DCID 4/2, which was CIA-originated. The CIA Information Review Committee is currently reviewing this decision. [CIA FOIA F93-1559]

GATLIN

In March 1959, the FBI generated a document about Gatlin all of which was withheld with the exception of a paragraphed that described his "mental instability." [FBI 64-29230 NR 3.27.59 p.2; FBI 64-29230-NR 3.27.59 pgs. 4 & 5]

That month FBI S.A. Carlyle N. Reed and WARREN C. DeBRUEYS began to investigate Gatlin's connection to "Nicaraguan Revolutionary Activities." [FBI 64-29230 NR 150 6.26.59; FBI 64-29230 NR 6.19.59] Much of this investigation was withheld. Maurice Gatlin was the Subject of another Bureau investigation, the contents of which (16 pages) was withheld - including the caption of the document. By this time the FBI refused to interview Maurice Gatlin. [FBI 116-452043-6 - Charles M. Kokes]

WILLIAM GAUDET

William Gaudet had been very outspoken and indiscreet in matters of a confidential nature. [FBI 64-23999-1 5.20.43; Documents w/h FBI 64-23999-4 and 5 not provided to HSCA - scoped]

On April 25, 1956 Gaudet was mentioned in a document that dealt with Teodoro Picado, a leader of the opposition against Jose Figueres of Costa Rica. Teodoro Picado had moved to the United States. [FBI 97-3236-24 pgs. 4 thru 8 w/h] [FBI 64-23999-9 2.8.68; FBI 64-23999-9 pg. 2 w/h and FBI 64-23999-10 pg. 4 w/h Gaudet's drinking and financial problems] In March 1968, the FBI throughly investigated Gaudet. [FBI 64-23999-10,11,

14 pages 1-2] William Gaudet stated that his last contact with the CIA was in 1969, although "the relationship has never been formally terminated." [FBI 64-23999-13 & 14 was mostly w/h]

In December 1960 the FBI received a report that alleged that Latin American Report had a pro-communist bias. [FBI 100-434918-1 cover page D, page 2 & 3, pages 6 - 9 w/h]

WILLIAM HARVEY

"(Deleted) The attached letter (deleted) explains the above circumstances and places him on guard accordingly. Director's notation. What is record of Harvey while with us? The attached letter is unsatisfactory. I don't like its evasiveness. Please rewrite." [FBI 62-80750-945,952-w/h]

LAWRENCE JOHN HOWARD

LAWRENCE JOHN HOWARD (born January 17, 1933) came from a group headed by Guy Gabalon called the Drive Against Communist Aggression. In 1961 Gabalon ran an anti-Castro office in Los Angeles. When he ran for Congress in 1964 Loran Hall was his campaign manager. When the CIA released HOWARD'S 201 File, rather than release the 201 File of JOHN LAWRENCE HOWARD, it released the 201 File of Lawrence Henry Howard (born November 3, 1913 in Bridgeport, Connecticut), who's 201 File was opened July 24, 1964, and indicated he was a Merchant Marine who held a Master's rating and was employed by the Bloomfield Steamship Company in Houston, Texas. Much of the information in this file was withheld. [CIA 201-756375]

When the CIA determined if Lawrence Henry Howard's 201 file should be closed, because he was an American citizen, it kept the file opened and cited "all others. (Deleted)."

When the CIA did an INDEX SEARCH AND 201 CONSOLIDATION REPORT on HOWARD on July 24, 1975, it located one applicable reference dated November 10, 1959. The nature of this reference has been withheld.

MARITA LORENZ

Note: Lorenz, who currently resides in New York City advised N.Y. Office during recent interview that she is personal acquaintance of Castro and other Cuban leaders. At the time, she furnished general information concerning the Cuban situation and Cuban Government personalities. New York disclosed plans for further interview. (Deleted) Much of this document was withheld. [FBI 105-83564- NR 1.4.60]

MARCELLO

Joseph Albert Poretto (born March 21, 1906; died April 1983) was incarcerated in 1951 for refusing to testify before the Kefauver Senate Committee studying organized crime.

CARLOS MARCELLO was tried for that same offense. [FBI 62-9-33-411, 73-10184-11, 92-8100-1 1.15.65 - serials 2 and 3 w/h, arrest rec. #1799932]

The contents of Regis Kennedy's reports on MARCELLO were withheld. [FBI 92-2713-348 pB-D]

MARTINO

On November 20, 1959, the FBI prepared a Letter Head Memorandum about MARTINO much of which was withheld. [FBI 64-44828-4] MARTINO was put on trial in December 1959. "I am a good man,"

On November 21, 1962, the FBI's liaison to the CIA, Sam J. Papich, prepared a Secret memorandum on MARTINO which was withheld.

Withheld documents on MARTINO included FBI 64-44828-3 Enclosure, FBI 64-44828-5 Enclosure; FBI 64-44828-8 Papich to Brennan 11.21.62 "Action: The above information is being directed to the attention of the Nationalities Intelligence Section, the Internal Security Section and the Special Investigative Division." ## MASFERRER

In August 1959 the Bureau received information about an anti-Castro uprising sponsored by Rolando Masferrer. Most of this telex was withheld. [FBI 100-344127 NR 5.13.59, 26; FBI 109-584-305]

In January 1960 William Pawley, a former United States Ambassador, advised the CIA that he had been contacted by Arthur Patton, a Commissioner from Dade County, Miami, Florida. Patton stated that "one of his police officers had been offered $200,000 to kidnap Rolando Masferrer. Police officer went to Patton for advise. Patton turned to Pawley who consulted CIA. (Deleted) Sutel specific facts and action taken." [FBI 105-84265-34, 36 p 1 page 2 w/h]

The Miami Herald reported in December 1960 that Rolando Masferrer had composed an army of 23 Americans and nearly 200 Cubans who were allegedly poised to invade Cuba. Rolando Masferrer's men were training at a base at No Name Key, Florida. The FBI reported: "Masferrer planned to use as staging area prior to moving men to island or country other than the U.S. prior to invasion of Cuba to avoid violation of U.S. laws. Reference is also made to Miami report of S.A. James D. Hayes, dated December 15, last, in this case, which among other things mentions arrest of vagrancy by Miami Police Department of 13 Masferrer supporters, including Kenneth Joseph Proctor, Alvin Carl Wentz, Nick John Neri, Welburn Vernon Gee, and Larry Lee Bice, Jr. It is noted therein Proctor stated this group intended leaving the U.S. unarmed, and proceed to an island located in international waters, where they would be armed before proceeding to invade Cuba." [FBI 2-1622-60; FBI 2-1622 NR 128 NR 12.19.60 w/h; 2-1622-1st NR serial after serial 51 (LHM) Enc.]

Masferrer: [FBI 100-344127-26 - pages 11 to 14 w/h]

The Dallas Police Department "also found were two envelopes, one plain and the other being an air mail envelope, which probably have indented writing on them." [WCE 1403]

h. In the back of the book on a blank sheet is written what appears to be a list reading as follows:

"phone embassy
"get bus tickets
"eat

{ "watch Jai-lai game
"buy silver bracelet
" " record"

Below this appears an illegible notation, one word of which appears to be "sopa" (soup).

MISCELLANEOUS DOCUMENTS

The HSCA: "It is of course possible that the CIA Memorandum dated September 18, 1975, is referring to State Department documents received by the CIA in October 1960 and November 1960 and that the earlier State Department communications had been received by the CIA's Office of Security. The issue could not be resolved." This September 18, 1975, document has not been released.

CIA 3-526 Date None Pages 1 was withheld: "The document is an informal internal office note which records some details of an operational arrangement with a foreign intelligence source."

CIA 4-527 Date None Pages 6 was withheld: "The document is a draft message intended for senior officials which gives notice of some information recently received from a sensitive source." Scott Malone believed that these documents were not significant and dealt with OSWALD'S visit to Stockholm or Helsinki. An FOIA/JFK Acts request has been filed for them.

"This document consists of a summary of one Agency station's operational assignments effective the day following the assassination of President Kennedy." [CIA 24-534 November 12, 1963] Was this document misdated?

A CIA document that dealt with Kennedy, generated two days before the assassination: "The document is a discussion of operational tactics to be used in connection with liaison activities with a foreign intelligence service." [CIA 25-536]

"The document has no relationship to assassination activities or personalities that have been identified with the Kennedy assassination. The document is an informal note making mention of an activity taking place in 1957." [CIA 247-661, November 29, 1963]

Liaison information withheld in FBI documents Branigan to Sullivan 8.12.64 FBI 105-82555-4718; To Sullivan From Brennan 11.26.63

Note that some of the CIA documents A.J. WEBERMAN obtained from the CIA under the Freedom of Information Act and gave to the HSCA were withheld by the CIA. [HSCA 180-10095-102-62 also 63,64,51]

The FBI sent Rankin a highly deleted memo on January 30, 1964 - 62-109090- NR 199 2.3.64.

The CIA released these cables warning other government agencies about OSWALD, with attached transmittal forms. The copy sent to the Passport Office was destroyed in an accident which occurred while it was being copied. The numerous versions exhibited certain minute differences. In one version, that was supposedly identical with the others, (possibly the one sent to the American Ambassador to Mexico), the CIA has deleted the contents of the document and its transmittal slip. The only information on the slip was "CS Copy," part of a sensitivity sticker, and a U.S. Government Printing Office form number, which was different from the form numbers on the other transmittal slips. [WCE 948 pp. 6, 11, 16]

WILLIAM MORGAN

On March 27, 1959, "CI/OA requested a search on William Morgan in connection with his contemplated use by the Cuban desk/Western Hemisphere for purposes of contact and debriefing." The results of this search were still withheld.

William Morgan renounced his American citizenship on September 22, 1959. On September 30, 1959, an Indices Search Request, covert, was run on William Morgan. The dates and nature of six of these documents are withheld.

On December 7, 1959, the CIA described Morgan as a "double agent for Fidel Castro." The CIA reported "There is a restricted (deleted) folder on the Subject of this 201 held under (deleted)."

RUTH PAINE

Neither CIA Headquarters, nor the CIA's Office of Security traces on Ruth Paine have been released as of 1996, and she was mentioned only tangentially in the HSCA Report - "They never even called me. Someone called - to be sure where I was - if they wanted to call me."

Withheld documents on the Paines included USSS 179-10001-10034, 10036; FBI NARA 179-10001-10091, 10094, 10101, FBI 179-10002-10084, 10244, 10251; HSCA 180-10116-10150; HSCA 180-10112-10450. Sylvia Hoke's CIA Security File contained "Two sealed envelopes" were withheld as was "Information regarding father / 3rd Party / 3rd Agency Information Contained memo dated June 11, 1959, (3rd Agencies - OSI, U.S.A.F. + FBI)." [NARA CIA 1993.07.25.08:39:37:560310]

RUBY

Information about James Breen was withheld from a document declassified in 1994. [NARA RIF 124-10099-10249] With his revolver, more than $2000 in cash and no personal identification RUBY entered the Western Union office. Information on the origin of these Federal banknotes was withheld by the FBI. [FBI NY 65-17696 p5]

WRIGHT, RAYMOND

The CIA found 2 Overt Traces on OSWALD which have been deleted from this Indices Search Request requested on OSWALD and Marina Oswald "Raymond Wright".

(3) "LEE HARVEY - 2 Overt."

[WC Vol 22, p. 35; WC Vol 26, p. 20; CIA 1249-1010]

In the United States, the NSA and the CIA have created a common agency, named Special Collection Service (SCS), whose activities are highly secret and whose role is to give to Americans, in all clandestinity, information on new means to overcome the difficulties encountered by interception operations caused by progress in encryption for protection of world communications. There was a Walter W. Romig at CIA who wrote a paper entitled "Simulation of assumed enemy effort to plot Minuteman silo positions. Different L. Oswald who signed Leftwing petition in 1955 along with Raymond Wright.

DID NIXON RUN A DOMESTIC OPERATION PHOENIX?

FATAL “ACCIDENTS” DURING THE NIXON ADMINISTRATION

Between 1968 and 1972 Operation Phoenix neutralized 81,740 National Liberation Front members, of whom 26,369 were killed. This was a large section taken out of the Viet Cong Infrastructure. The program was headed by William Colby, who would later become DCIA under Nixon. I believe Colby headed the Domestic Operation Phoenix Program during which key opponents of the Vietnam War were taken out. Colby himself died on mysterious circumstances but later on in the game. Since he was behind a lot of this I will include his accidental death here:

THE “ACCIDENTAL” DEATH OF NIXON’S DCIA WILLIAM E. COLBY

On May 6, 1996, William Colby's body was pulled from the muddy waters of the Wicomico River in Maryland. 8 days earlier, investigators had found his capsized, half-submerged canoe 20 yards from where his body was found. On April 27, his wife, reported him missing. It is alleged that earlier in the day he had phoned her, letting her know that he was going to go home, eat dinner, shower then head to bed. She said he never mentioned anything about going canoeing. The official explanation: He went out in his canoe, on a stormy night, on a rough river and without a lifejacket. There he had either a heart attack or stroke. His canoe tipped over, pushing him underwater where he then drowned. Colby was killed by the US government to prevent him from revealing the Operation Phoenix spilled over to the United States and a Domestic Operation Phoenix existed during the Nixon presidency, from January 20, 1969 to August 9, 1974, the day Nixon resigned. This program was a result of anticommunist elements with the intelligence community such as Colby who joined with Nixon in his determination to win the Vietnam War at any cost. When so many brave Americans are dying overseas what's a few civilian casualties at home, especially if these liberal comsymps were aiding and abetting America's enemy? Let us examine some of the fates that opponents of Nixon and the war met with during this period beginning with the incident that renewed my interest in this period in American history, the deaths of Senator Joe Biden's family.

A QUESTIONABLE OCCURRENCE: THE “ACCIDENTAL” DEATH OF NEILIA BIDEN

The crash involving the Biden family station wagon and a tractor-trailer driven by Curtis C. Dunn, 43, of Kaolin, Pa., occurred on Monday afternoon, December 18, 1972. The tractor-trailer was heading toward Pennsylvania on Limestone Road when it broadsided the station wagon, sending it spinning for 150 feet, breaking the windshield and crushing in a rear door, while the truck itself skidded for 20 feet and landed on its side. Neilia Biden, 30, was at the wheel with their three young children – three-year-old Beau Biden, now the state’s Democratic attorney general, two-year-old Hunter Biden, now a lawyer in Washington, and 13-month-old Amy Biden. Neilia and Amy Biden died from the crash. Hunter Biden sustained head injuries. Beau Biden had a broken leg that kept him in the hospital beyond the start of the Senate’s new term, leading their broken-hearted father to decide to take his oath of office in the hospital chapel and to vacillate about whether he should be sworn in at all. A story headlined, “No Charges Due for Trucker in Biden Deaths,” in the Evening Journal read: “Chief deputy attorney general, Jerome Herlihy said there was no evidence that [Dunn] was speeding, drinking or driving a truck with faulty brakes. In addition, witnesses to the crash near Hockessin provided no basis for a prosecution.” Herlihy said Neilia Biden either accelerated or drifted through the intersection, and Dunn could not stop. The truck driver said she was not looking at him, her face turned away, and the state police thought she was distracted by one of the children in the back seat. Dunn died in 1999, but Philip A. Lafferty, the truck owner he drove for, still lives in Avondale, Pa. In a telephone interview, Lafferty recalled the state police impounding the tractor-trailer and the station wagon for the investigation for a couple of days and concluding that Dunn was not at fault.

The target was not Biden’s family but was Joe Biden who was about to enter the Senate as an anti-Vietnam war candidate. The rogue agents responsible for this may have mixed a hallucinogen or poison with a permeability agent and placed it on the steering wheel of Biden’s vehicle. The Washington Post’s Bob Woodward wrote that Watergate Burglar E. Howard Hunt told some of his former CIA associates “that he was ordered in December 1971, or January 1972, to assassinate journalist Jack Anderson.” Citing “reliable sources,” Woodward said the order came from “a senior official in the Nixon White House.” Hunt explored placing on the steering wheel of the victim’s car a drug that enters the body directly through the skin. Biden was in denial and stated, “I got elected when I was 29, and I got elected November the 7th. And on December 18 of that year, my wife and three kids were Christmas shopping for a Christmas tree. A tractor-trailer, a guy who allegedly – and I never pursued it – drank his lunch instead of eating his lunch, broadsided my family and killed my wife instantly, and killed my daughter instantly, and hospitalized my two sons, with what were thought to be at the time permanent, fundamental injuries.” This could very well have been an accident but there were a series of events during Nixon’s reign that indicated it was not.

A QUESTIONABLE OCCURRENCE: THE "ACCIDENTAL" DEATH OF HALE BOGGS

Congressman Hale Boggs (born February 15, 1914) grew up in Jefferson Parish, Louisiana. He was an attorney in New Orleans who was first elected to the United States House of Representatives in 1946. Congressman Hale Boggs had questioned James Forrestal about the need to create the CIA. On April 5, 1971, he made an impassioned speech to his fellow Representatives on the tyranny of intelligence agencies turning America into a police state: "The story began on April 5, 1971, when Boggs unexpectedly took the House floor during one-minute to declare that 'when the FBI taps telephones of the members of this body and the members of the Senate, when the FBI stations agents on college campuses to infiltrate college organizations, when the FBI adopts the tactics of the Soviet Union and Hitler's Gestapo, then it is time - it is way past time, Mr. Speaker - that the present director no longer be the director.' Numerous prominent Members began volunteering suspicions they too had been spied on by the FBI, when in reality they were victims of Nixon's squad of Cuban exiles and rogue CIA Agents. According to an April 7, 1971, article in Roll Call, Senators George McGovern (SD), Harold Hughes, (Iowa), and Birch Bayh (Ind) - all liberal anti-war Democrats - all suspected they were being bugged by the FBI. Bayh actually found a device. Boggs did not produce irrefutable evidence that the FBI had been spying on Members, but he did build a persuasive case, citing among other things the Bayh incident and a claim that Senator Ralph Yarborough (Dem. -TX) and FBI critic, "found an electronic surveillance device in the intercom system in his desk." He also cited a case in which the neighbor of liberal Senator Charles Percy (R-Ill.) discovered a broadcasting device underneath his car, which was always parked in front of Percy's house. Shortly thereafter, Percy's wife found two men working on the phone line outside Percy's house for what they said were 'safety purposes.' And Senator Wayne Morse (D-Ohio) another liberal, was informed of a bug in his office by a reporter." [Roll Call 8.10.92] Nixon's squad was at work.

Congressman Hale Boggs advised his colleagues that he had evidence that the FBI was tapped his telephones. The FBI may well have tapped his phone looking for his connections to organized crime. FBI document WFO-113 contained only one undeleted line: "Also on this date, Subject [CARLOS MARCELLO] placed a call to Congressman Hale Boggs, Democrat from Louisiana. (Deleted.) It is not known whether Subject actually talked to Boggs or not."

On October 16, 1972, Congressman Hale Boggs, Congressman Nick Begich, and an aide to Nick Begich, left Anchorage, Alaska, at 9:00 a.m. en route to Juneau, Alaska,

(575 miles) in a twin-engine Cessna 310. They were last heard from at 9:09 a.m. when Federal Aeronautics Administration officials received a visual flight plan, just as the plane was approaching the Chugach Mountain Range. The pilot gave the route as:

(1) Over the Chugach Mountain Range to Prince William Sound.

(2) Along the coast to Glacier National Monument.

(3) To Juneau, skirting the edge of the St. Elias Mountain Range. This route would have taken them over water for a very brief period. No one on the plane was heard from again. The pilot, Don E. Jonz, had 15,000 flying hours and a good reputation. He owned Pan Alaska Airways, from which the plane was chartered. The aircraft of Don E. Jonz was not equipped with a built-in emergency radio beacon; when asked by the Federal Aeronautics Administration whether he had "emergency gear and a locator beacon aboard," the pilot replied, "Affirmative." Don E. Jonz was required by Alaska State law to carry a hand-held locator beacon. The weather forecast that day predicted no significant changes from earlier forecasts.

More than 100 private and 40 military aircraft flew up and down the southern Alaska coast in search of the missing plane. Later, two jet reconnaissance planes, each equipped with cloud-piercing electronic equipment, intensified the emergency mission, accompanied by a total of 52 other aircraft. Air Force C130s stayed aloft throughout the search, electronically equipped to locate the emergency beacon of the Cessna aircraft. The Air Force brought out the SR-71, the successor to the U-2, to aerially photograph the landscape. There were 55 sightings of material thought to be wreckage, but none of it came from the plane. The NTSB called the mission "one of the most extensive searches in recent aviation history." After 3,600 hours of serial hunting, not a trace of the wreckage was ever found.

Even more mysterious was the fact that the C130s were unable to pick up any radio signals from the emergency equipment aboard the Cessna. Had the transmitter been destroyed even though it was specifically designed to survive a plane crash? After the crash, a hand-held emergency beacon was found in the cabin of another Pan Alaska aircraft; it was said to belong to Don E. Jonz. This seemed to explain the missing emergency radio signal. However, a witness who had seen the pilot, recalled that Don E. Jonz had an unidentified object in his briefcase the size and shape of an emergency locator. This locator was a different color than those sold at Anchorage Airport. Was it a bomb? The NTSB concluded it was "unable to determine the probable cause of the accident." [NTSB Report AAR-72-28]

The wife of Nick Begich stated: "It's a mystery. What did happen? How did it happen? My children wish there were answers." Jerry Patrick Hemming told this researcher: "The people who do this shit are independent contractors. They have nothing to do with the politics of anybody. If the plane got blown to shit over the water, they ain't gonna recover nothing."

Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission reported that "HUNT categorically denied...any participation or involvement whatever in the attempted assassination of Governor Wallace, the disappearance of Congressman Hale Boggs or the shooting of Senator Stennis." [NARA SSCIA 157-10011-10090]

Bogg's involvement with the Mafia could have played a role in his death but a bomb aboard an aircraft doesn't sound like the criminal geniuses of organized crime, this sounds more like the Agency.

After Louisiana Congressman Hale Boggs' plane disappeared in Alaska a quiet but intense battle began that could shake the entire Democratic leadership in the House. Boggs was about to replace CARL Albert as House Whip. Albert's first two years as Speaker were distressing for many of his Democratic colleagues, who found his leadership weak and entirely too accommodating to the Administration's Viet Nam policies. A few liberal Congressmen wanted Boggs for the job. "I have been very keen for a contest over the speakership," said one Midwestern Democrat. "And I have been in favor of having Hale move up. This thing [Boggs' disappearance] has been a catastrophic blow. What it means is that we are apparently left without an alternative." A sampling taken since Boggs was declared missing indicated that Albert is now safe, and will win reelection.

A QUESTIONABLE OCCURRENCE: THE ACCIDENTAL DEATH OF WALTER REUTHER

The fatal plane crash of Walter Reuther, a liberal who was head of the United Automobile Workers union on May 9, 1970, also raised questions.

In 1933 Victor and Walter Reuther had lived and worked in the Soviet Union. They were favorably impressed with pre-Stalinist Marxist-Leninism. In 1937 Walter Reuther became the leader of a United Automobile Workers insurgent faction that included Communists. The FBI reported: "He ran for the Common Council in Detroit in the 1937 election on a Communist Party of the United States of America ticket." [FBI 61-9556-283, p8] In 1940 J. Edgar Hoover stated: "Walter Reuther was one of the Reuther brothers of the CIO, an avowed Communist, who was educated at the propaganda college in Moscow; was sent to this country eight or nine years ago, and was active in the Detroit area." It was suggested to the FBI by one of its informants that Walter Reuther's anti-communism was insincere, and merely a self-serving ruse in his quest for power. Walter Reuther was characterized as a Communist mole within the labor movement. The Communist Party of the United States of America had tried to recruit Walter Reuther, but was unsuccessful. In June 1963, Victor Lasky reported that Walter Reuther had urged United States Attorney General Robert Kennedy to curb the FBI's war on Communism. [NY Journal American 6.5.63]

THE ASSASSINATION ATTEMPT IN 1948

In early April 1948, Walter Reuther received an unsigned letter threatening him with bodily harm from someone who claimed to be a communist. On April 20, 1948, (one week after labor leader Jorge Gaitan's death), someone fired a shotgun through the kitchen window of the Reuther home. Walter Reuther was almost killed. The FBI refused to investigate the case since there was no violation of federal law. To this day, it remains unsolved.

On May 24, 1949, an assassination attempt was made on Walter Reuther's brother, Victor Reuther. At 11:50 p.m. an unidentified assailant fired a shotgun blast through the window of Victor Reuther's home. A double barrel 12-gauge Stevens shotgun was found in the shrubbery outside the window. Again, Hoover refused to investigate. The Detroit Police Commissioner requested the FBI "investigate the shipment of 735 shotguns of the same make that apparently was used in the Victor Reuther shooting. These guns were shipped to 26 places." Assistant Director Nichols commented: "This would necessitate at least 735 individual interviews coupled with additional checking in those instances where the guns were transferred." Despite a $200,000 reward offered by the United Automobile Workers, this case was also unsolved. The New York Post: "The methods of the would-be assassin who shot Walter Reuther more than a year ago, and the assailant of his brother Victor, are so similar as to suggest that both these cowardly attacks were the work of the same criminal..." The Justice Department believed that "press dispatches have indicated for some time past that the Reuthers actively fought the Communist element in the labor movement...and consequently incurred their enmity." Walter Reuther was part of the anti-Communist left, a democratic socialist who followed Norman Thomas. Other factions in the United Automobile Workers included a Communist Party-oriented faction and a conservative, anti-communist group, influenced by the CIA's neo-conservative Jay Lovestone. In 1967 Jack Anderson reported that Lovestone "takes orders from Cord Meyer of the CIA."

In December 1957, Ralph Winstead, a detective employed by the United Automobile Workers who investigated the Walter Reuther shooting for eight years, vanished. Ralph Winstead's body, frozen and dressed in fisherman's clothing, was recovered a few days later from Lake St. Clair. The coroner ruled the death accidental.

THE REUTHERS AND THE CIA

David Halberstam related the President Kennedy planned to replace John McCone as CIA Director with Jack Conway, Walter Reuther's chief political lobbyist. In 1966 Victor Reuther told Drew Pearson and The Los Angeles Times that many of the AFL/CIO's overseas operations were conduits for the CIA. Victor Reuther named CIA labor operatives and CIA-founded unions. He described AID and AIFLD as CIA conduits. This allegation angered former CIA Staffer Thomas Braden and he revealed that in 1967, that some time between 1950, and 1954, he gave the Reuther brothers $50,000 of CIA funds. Braden was born in Dubuque, Iowa, on February 22, 1918. As World War II approached, he enlisted in the British Army. When the United States entered the war, he served in the OSS. He joined the CIA in 1950 as Special Assistant to Allen Dulles. In 1948 Braden married the former Joan Ridley, whom he met when she was on Nelson Rockefeller's staff.

Walter Reuther admitted having taken the money, and said that Braden had tried to recruit his brother Victor as a CIA agent: "Victor was contacted by Tom Braden at the U.S. Embassy in Paris and asked to become a CIA agent, using as a 'front' his position [with the CIO]." Braden stated: "Victor spent the money, mostly in West Germany, to bolster labor unions there. He tried undercover techniques to keep me from finding out how he spent it. But I had my own undercover techniques." Braden gave Walter Reuther the money in $50 bills.

ANALYSIS

Although funding non-communist labor unions was a common practice, had Walter Reuther misappropriated any of these funds, the CIA would have been able to get a handle on him. Victor Reuther wrote: "I was still in Paris when the transfer of the $50 bills took place. The $50,000 was obviously an attempt to silence us..."

NIXON AND REUTHER

In 1960 NIXON called Walter Reuther "a labor leader-turned- radical politician." In 1962, Walter Reuther, a member of the Tractors for Freedom Committee, helped conduct negotiations to release the Bay of Pigs Brigade prisoners from Cuba. NIXON called this "submission to blackmail."

THE FIRST PLANE CRASH

By 1964 any assassination attempt against the Reuthers would prove troublesome due to a bullet-proof car, and several bodyguards from the United Automobile Workers Union. In October 1964 the Reuther brothers had another brush with death as they flew to Washington. Victor Reuther explained: "A slight rain was falling as we circled for an 11:35 a.m. landing at Dulles Airport [in our leased Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. Lear Jet]. At 500 or 600 feet the copilot called, 'Runway in sight,' and the pilot went visual. The sky at this point was clear and the plane was allowed by the tower to continue its descent toward the runway. At that very instant, both pilots realized the aircraft was too low. As the pilot leveled, there was a jolt, the plane shuddered, and when the wheels touched there was a loud dragging and scraping sound, and then enormous sparks as the metal hit the concrete. The plane whipped from side to side, nearly capsizing, but the pilots held it to the runway until it had slowed sufficiently to allow them to maneuver it onto the soft surface of an open field. The engines and all electric power were cut off, and we were told to leave the plane at once. Suspecting a fuel leak and fearing a fire, the crew even cut off radio contact with the tower. We could see that we had struck a steel girder as we landed...it was later determined that this steel object was 'the inner marker antenna which is approximately 12 feet above the ground and 82 feet below the proper glide angle for an ILS approach.' The altimeter setting was reported to have been 29.96 inches. When the crew decided it was safe to resume radio contact with the tower, which had no idea where we were, a rescue car came out to retrieve us."

THE SECOND PLANE CRASH

On May 9, 1970, Walter and May Reuther, Oskar Stronorov, William Wolfman, George Evans and Joseph Karrafa were killed when their Executive Jet Aviation M43EJ Lear Jet crashed at Emmet County Airport in Pellston, Michigan. Victor Reuther wrote: "Like others, I have been haunted continually by the question, 'Was the crash accidental?' There had been so many attempts on Walter's life. But from the intensive FAA investigation, the facts seem to say clearly that it was caused by human error, not neglect..." The FAA/NTSB found "no indication of sabotage." An examination of the reports by Barfield and Kollsman Instruments, on which the National Transportation Safety Board based their findings, told a different story.

THE CAPTAIN'S ALTIMETER

The National Transportation Safety Board report stated that "while all systems were irreparably damaged [including the co-pilot's altimeter], information was nevertheless obtained from a few units. The captain's altimeter showed a reading of 1400 feet M.S.L. with an altimeter setting 29.75 inches..." This was similar to the altimeter reading uncovered after the crash of October 1964. The altimeter was sent to Barfield Instruments, and then to James W. Angus at Kollsman Instruments for examination. The Kollsman Instrument's report stated: "No identification was present to trace the specific instrument type and date of manufacture. The mechanism construction isolated the unit to one of three major types, each of which had numerous variations, none of which were TSO certified. All of these types were essentially military."

ANALYSIS

Had an untraceable altimeter been substituted for the original? Had this altimeter been constructed and tested so that it would fail at a specific, critical time during the flight?

WAS IT KNOWN THAT REUTHER WAS ON THIS JET?

The jet Walter Reuther was on had been initially assigned a ferry job from Columbus to Akron, Ohio. The plane refueled at Akron and went on to Detroit's City Airport, then on to Detroit's Metro Airport. According to Victor Reuther: "It was on the ground only 20 minutes, taxiing in and out before it loaded Walter and his party at 8:44 p.m. The Lear Company maintained that it was impossible for anyone but trusted officials of their firm to have known who was to use the plane..." Steven I. Schlossberg, who conducted the investigation of the crash for the United Automobile Workers, reported: "In view of the fact that almost no one outside of top officials of Executive Jet could have known the identity of the passengers and there was little, if any, chance for ground tampering of this airplane, it appears to me that further investigation on a private basis is unwarranted." David O. Norris, a private detective hired by Elizabeth Reuther Dickmeyer, youngest daughter of Walter Reuther, discovered evidence to the contrary: "Just hours after the crash a reporter from the Detroit News talked to the night dispatcher at Butler Aviation who said he knew that Walter Reuther was on the plane." Mrs. Dickmeyer stated that her father was going up to Black Lake almost every weekend, and that information would not have been hard to discern. Twenty minutes on the ground gave the saboteur enough time to change an altimeter. Aside from the fact it had no past, there were many other strange things about the captain's altimeter:

THE TORN OUT THREADS

A report from the Barfield Instrument Corporation dated May 19, 1970, stated: "One of the set screws was out of the rocking shaft, allowing the calibration arm assembly to be loose in the shaft. There was an indentation adjacent to the missing set screw hole. The set screw, which was missing from the rocking shaft, was recovered from within the case. Inspection revealed charred aluminum in the brass screw threads. The rocking shaft screw hole was inspected and found to have the threads torn out."

A report from the Kollsman Instrument Company stated: "If the questionable calibration arm set screws were loose..."

ANALYSIS

The screw had not fallen out due to worn out or damaged threads. Photographs of the set screw revealed normal threading. The screw hole shaft had its threads "torn," or drilled out. This was why it popped out. This was consistent with the indentation mark near the screw hole, that looked like a mark a left by a high speed drill bit that had drilled in the wrong area, then quickly withdrawn. The proper hole was located, and the threads were drilled out. The set screw was put back in place. The altimeter looked intact, even though it had been tampered with. As the rocking arm rotated, erroneous information would be transmitted to the dials from the altimeter's pressure capsule.

The Kollsman Instrument Report: "If the questionable calibration arm set screws were loose at the time of the approach under concern, the instrument would probably have indicated high by roughly 225 to 250 feet." This finding was based on a test during which the rocking shaft "calibration arm set screw was loosened. The unit was exposed to 10,000 ft. pressure altitude, then the return scale error readings were recorded."

This error was significant. Walter Reuther's jet had been cleared for an instrument landing and broke through scattered clouds at 400 feet. But it landed short of the airport, and crashed into 50-foot elm trees. The jet engines were immediately stopped by the branches. The momentum of the plane took it 269 feet farther, cutting through the trees; then it exploded into a ball of fire. The bodies were burned beyond recognition except for dental records. The crash occurred because the pilot thought he was flying higher than was indicated by the altimeter readings. Weather conditions that day were reported as "scattered clouds at 400 feet, measured ceiling 800 feet overcast, visibility seven miles, thunderstorms and light rain showers, wind at ten knots." The crew was experienced: Captain Evans with 7760 flight hours and his copilot, Karaffa, with 6533.

The loose set screw could not be explained. A Kollsman Instrument Report attempted to explain the indentation: "Examination of the shaft indicated physical damage adjacent to the questionable screw hole in the shaft. Further microscopic examination leads to the belief that this was due to causes other than upset by staking, due to the lack of upset material adjacent to the depression, and hole shape. It was more likely caused by high heat and pressure of a part laying in contact. A staked depression would deform the adjacent holes and shaft as noted in Photo 45 which was purposely done on an equivalent shaft at room temperature." The altimeter, however, had only been partially opened by crash events and the rocking shaft in question was still shielded by the altimeter's case. It could not have been caused by "a part laying in contact."

The Barfield Report never addressed itself to where the drill mark came from, or how the threads had been torn out. The Kollsman Report speculated that the damaged threads, and loose screw, might have been caused by heat damage: "Examination of a similar rocking shaft exposed to 1100 degrees Fahrenheit, believed to be higher than that which the subject instrument was exposed to, showed that with a thread which is unabused, and with a properly tightened screw:

- a)the screw did not come out due to high temperature exposure:
- b)there is an aluminum deposit on the brass screw threads under load:
- c)the thread in the shaft tapped hole, Photo 39, is not damaged to the extent shown on Photos 24, 25, 26 and 27."

This ruled out heat damage as being responsible for the threads being torn out.

THE BRIGHT SPOT

The investigators at Kollsman agreed with those at Barfield that the set screw was in place during the crash. The Kollsman Report stated: "Examination of the calibration arm, Photo 31, and 32, and the end of the questionable screw show discolorations whose shapes tend to confirm that this screw was in position at the time of exposure to high temperature. The questionable calibration arm set screw is reasoned to have been in position at the time the X-ray pictures were taken (analysis of the X-ray, Photo 10, and Photo 5 NTSB picture) and Photos 11 - 14 allow the conclusion that the questionable calibration arm set screw was in the shaft at the time the X-ray was taken and the stains on the calibration arm indicate that the arm position was reasonably correct." The Barfield Report, which was based on the primary examination of the unit, agreed: "One of the set screws was out of the rocking shaft, allowing the calibration arm assembly to be loose in the shaft. However, a bright spot on the arm in the area indicated (ref D) was in position in line with the set screw hole at the time the mechanism was removed from the case."

ANALYSIS

No test was conducted to determine if the set screw, sitting in a drilled-out thread, would leave a similar mark; with the threads torn, it could not have left a bright spot or stain on the shaft, since there would have been a total absence of tension. Even if there were tension, the screw would have left traces of movement on the shaft. When recovered, the rocking shaft was bent, so the screw must have changed position. The screw was tightened prior to the drilling-out of its base threads, so that the screw left the proper mark on the shaft. The fact that the screw was still in place after the crash, and was in a virtually pristine condition, while the threads that surrounded it had been obliterated was, furthermore, never addressed. There were several other problems with the construction of this altimeter:

THE INCORRECT PIVOTS AND MISSING JEWELS

According to a Kollsman Instrument report, the same rocking shaft that contained the missing set screw "has the improper pivot on the forward end." The Kollsman report stated: "One of the pivots which supports the rear of the rocking shaft was incorrect in that it is intended for a ring stone application only. If it was placed in the end of the shaft that did not have an end stone, it means that the improper jewel installation in the rocking shaft A was noted."

ANALYSIS

The correct pivot was conical, the incorrect pivot was flat. The technician that placed the wrong pivot should have realized that the end stone had been "installed in an inverted position." On the opposite end of the same rocking shaft the end stone was missing and the ring jewel was pushed off center. The forward jewel for this shaft was damaged (oval recess) but not cracked. A drawing of this shaft and its jeweled bearings pointed out several areas of "possible interference" with the altimeter's accuracy as a result of these mismatches.

THE LINK PIN

The link pin of the same rocking shaft was incorrect. "Pin installed was a P/N 371-80 (should be 1357-37)." The correct link pin ends were flat, while the incorrect one was tapered on one end. The Kollsman Report stated: "The link from shaft A to the capsule is the unit which had the improper link pin in the spring clip on the capsule."

ANALYSIS

Any part that comes into contact with the altitude capsule itself is critical. The technician who assembled the altimeter had made too many mistakes in the same area, to have done so innocently.

The Kollsman report concluded: "Considerable reinspection of altimeters of same repair history is recommended to ensure that the altimeters in service are in accordance with the manufacturer's recommended standards regarding parts used, assembly techniques, and calibration/compensation." [Reuther, Victor The Brothers Reuther Houghton-Mifflin 1976; NYT 5.8.67, 5.11.1970; Kollsman and Barfield reports; NTSB records]

VICTOR REUTHER

In April 1993, Victor Reuther received documentation of the preceding information. He stated: "I've had very strong suspicions from the day the accident occurred. I'm convinced there was tampering with the altimeter and, although the plane was on the ground for only a short time, it was time enough. The full story was not told. When I wrote my book I had not seen these files. I relied on the then-General Counsel of the United Automobile Workers, Steve Schlossberg, who I know from later experience was not too eager to make the investigation terribly thorough...He was more interested in passing the reigns of power to the new president, Leonard Woodcock, and getting the Reuther years behind him, so I felt he was too quick to accept the findings...he is now in Washington as the official representative of the ILO [International Labor Organization]..."

STEVEN SCHLOSSBERG

Schlossberg had made reference to a faulty altimeter in his report: "This possibility is discounted because there were two altimeters in this particular Lear Jet, but the instrumentation is still being checked." Schlossberg was sent a copy of this analysis and contacted. He stated that as he understood it, the cause of the crash was a faulty altimeter. He took the technicians' word there was no evidence of sabotage. Steve Schlossberg told this researcher: "It's not my field. The technical part of the report was like a foreign language to me. I was impressed with the honesty of the people who were doing this." He did not believe Walter Reuther's death was the result of a conspiracy, nor did he believe CIA had any motive to assassinate him. He elaborated: "Walter Reuther became a dove in the middle of the Hubert Humphrey - NIXON election. He was very much a hawk. A wonderful guy, but he was for the war. He was Johnson's biggest supporter. Walter finally opposed the war, but he never made it into a crusade. In the future he probably would have, he was a wonderful guy and it's too bad he didn't come around earlier. But when he did come around, it was great, and who knows what he would have developed into. Probably something wonderful."

HEMMING commented: "Sabotage of the altimeters would not do the job. Every instrument rated pilot sets the field elevation published on the front of the control tower when he takes off. You check if what the tower just gave you is correct. He'd know something was wrong. The fact it was a war surplus altimeter is strange. They don't put them in Lear Jets. Instrument Landing System, ILS, is a separate instrument you are viewing that had the cross-hairs. You're going up against an instrument pilot who's been through partial panel training, where you have a failure of half your critical instruments. You don't file with just one clue. There was also a radar altimeter."

ANALYSIS

NIXON called Walter Reuther's death "a deep loss." With Walter Reuther dead, AFL-CIO President George Meany's hawkish views on the Vietnam war went unopposed. Of the Vietnam war, Walter Reuther had stated: "It has divided this nation. It is wasting our resources that we need at home and it is tarnishing our moral credentials in the world." Victor Reuther: "My brother came out against it and that opposition persisted through the Johnson years. Vietnam soured the relationship between Johnson and my brother." Victor Reuther now believes that sabotage was involved in his brother's death; however, he did not believe it was the CIA: "What I did not garner from the material you sent me was that it was the CIA...there are all kinds of wing groups, who could hire sophisticated people; there was a history of right-wing attacks on us." It was explained to Victor Reuther that an intelligence agency was often involved in sabotage of a sophisticated nature. Victor Reuther wondered if organized crime or the Communist Party was involved. It was pointed out to Victor Reuther that no mafia figures had offered valid information on the plane crash. Victor Reuther conceded that this was true. He added that he believed the altimeter had been tampered with during the earlier plane crash, and that the two accidents were related.

A QUESTIONABLE OCCURRENCE: THE "ACCIDENTAL" DEATH OF DOROTHY HUNT

THEORY OF CRASH OF UNITED FLIGHT 533 DECEMBER 8, 1972

By November 1972 HUNT was blackmailing the White House for $100,000. White House aide Fred LaRue gave Manuel Artime at least $21,000 to distribute to the families of the Watergate burglars. HUNT could have implicated NIXON in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. But did HUNT have any evidence? Had HUNT entrusted it to his wife while he was in prison? NIXON may have believed DOROTHY HUNT possessed evidence that linked him to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

As stated, DOROTHY HUNT was killed in the airplane crash of United Airlines Flight 533 on December 8, 1972, at Chicago's Midway Airport. UAL 533 was on its way from Washington, D.C., to Omaha, Nebraska, with an intermediate stop at Midway Airport. There were 55 people aboard, including five children and two infants. After Charles Colson became a born-again Christian, he stated: "I don't say this to many people because they think I am nuts. I think they killed DOROTHY HUNT. I really do..." HOWARD HUNT: "When I see these repetitive allusions to my wife's death as having somehow been caused by the CIA, I think that is really enough...if my wife had been the only one killed that would have been one thing...but 40 people..."

ANALYSIS

A detailed analysis of the Aircraft Accident Report prepared by the National Transportation Safety Board on the crash indicated that the Boeing 737 crashed because of instrument sabotage that engendered pilot error. In its report, however, the NTSB attributed the cause of the crash only to pilot error. The report was unofficial. National Transportation Safety Board Chairman John Reed, "was not present and did not participate in the adoption of this report." The report went unsigned.

The National Transportation Safety Board Report blamed "the Captain's failure to exercise positive flight management during the execution of a non-precision approach, which culminated in a critical deterioration of airspeed in the stall regime..."

THE FINAL DESCENT

At 2:26 p.m. the Captain ordered the crew of United Airlines Flight 533 to do a final descent check. At 2:27 p.m., United Air Lines Flight 533 was issued a missed-approach clearance by Midway Airport control tower: "United Flight 533, execute a missed approach..." Just as the sound of word "execute" began, the sound of the stickshaker, which was a device that sent vibrations through the cockpit several seconds before an aircraft was about to go into a stall, was heard on the tapes recovered from the cockpit voice recorder. Captain Whitehouse, the pilot of United Air Lines 533, age 44, had been employed by United Airlines for almost 20 years. He had accumulated a total of 18,000 hours flying time, of which 2,435 were in a Boeing 737.

ANALYSIS

Every pilot was taught that when a stall occurs, he should point the aircraft's nose slightly downward by extending his flaps, then immediately accelerate the engines to increase thrust. HEMMING told this researcher: "When you get a stall you drop the nose. The last thing you do is add power because that will tend to raise your nose. Put you nose down first then add power, which lessens your rate of descent. Change the angle of attack of your wings which get more airflow going across the wings creating more lift. Then add power to kill the rate of descent. Your rate of descent has slackened off, but your nose is still pointing down." Most survivors reported that, just before the crash, contrary to being nose-down, the aircraft went into a very high angle of attack. HEMMING told this researcher: "Whitehouse realized he was going to crash and tried to drag his tail to cut down his speed." Some survivors believed that there was a rapid application of power before impact. An analysis of the cockpit voice recorder tapes found by the General Electric Research Corporation did not conclusively show this power increase.

The cockpit voice recorder revealed that when the stickshaker went off at what was thought to be 1000 feet because of altimeter readings, Captain Whitehouse ordered the Second Officer to release the flaps to point the airplane's nose downward and get out of the stall. The Second Officer acknowledged the Captain's last command by saying: "Flaps 15." The Second Officer then said "I'm sorry." The National Transportation Safety Board stated that when faced with a stall, the Captain had decided to reconfigure the aircraft by extending the flight flaps because, within two seconds of the onset of the stickshaker, he asked for "more flaps." The National Transportation Safety Board stated that following this order, there was a sound indicative of flap lever movement. The National Transportation Safety Board concluded that it was Captain Whitehouse's error - failing to realize the flaps were already extended to 30 degrees and ordering the additional 15-degree extension while making a non-precision landing - that caused the crash. The National Transportation Safety Board: "The 15 degrees was added to the 30 degrees of extension that was accidentally there, so the aircraft continued to stall." Eight seconds after the Second Officer said: "I'm sorry," United Air Lines Flight 533 crashed into several houses located near Midway Airport. Forty passengers and three crew members were killed. Two persons on the ground received fatal injuries. The aircraft itself was largely destroyed by the impact and subsequent fire. Ground damage "precluded any determination of the pre-impact integrity of the control system." If this was so, how did the National Transportation Safety Board arrive at it's figure of the 30 degrees of extension that was "accidentally" there.

HEMMING told this researcher: "For the pilot to say 'flaps' then '15 degrees' - they ain't supposed to be at 15 degrees that quickly. It's deadly for those flaps to come up in a hurry when you are executing a missed approach. You'll sink. You got a stickshaker and ask for more flaps - that's the last thing you do. You're gonna start milking them flaps up. You're at that altitude and you have a stall, you've got to execute a missed approach. Nose down, full power. He's telling you what it says on the instrument. You run that fucker to 15 degrees below 500 feet you're going to die. He said he was sorry."

ANALYSIS

There was confusion in the cockpit during crash. The cause of this confusion would have become apparent had the flight recorder functioned properly.

THE DISABLED FLIGHT RECORDER

Eighty-two minutes after takeoff (approximately 14 minutes before the accident), the Fairchild Flight Data Recorder stopped functioning: "Flight recorder examination showed that a mitre gear (part of the drive gear assembly) had slipped on its shaft, causing the recorder to stop functioning." The cockpit voice recorder, which was recovered from the wreckage, revealed that when the flight recorder went off, a light went on in the cockpit and Captain Whitehouse asked: "Recorder go off?" The second officer: "Yeah." Captain Whitehouse: "See what's wrong, will ya...sounds to me like a circuit breaker...yeah, I just meant, I thought you'd better check everything..." The cockpit voice recorder revealed the Second Officer activated the circuit breaker that fused the power going to the flight recorder and reported: "It tests...I think its okay. I think its working...it says 'Off' but the signal, the encode light comes on and it shows, indicating taping. Christ, I can't even find the circuit breaker for this (deleted) flight recorder...I don't know, I get a reaction when I pull the AC, no reaction when you pull the DC though, you want me to call maintenance?" Captain Whitehead ordered the Second Officer to immediately call it in.

The recorder was installed on the day of the accident, and had last been overhauled on November 11, 1972, only two months before it malfunctioned. The Flight Recorder Group of the National Transportation Safety Board found: "No evidence of recorder malfunction in any of the parameters as determined by examining previous flights contained on this foil medium."

ANALYSIS

The mitre gear slipped because a saboteur had loosened its set screw. (The Kollsman Instrument Report asked: "if the questionable calibration arm set screws were loose...") HEMMING told this researcher: "That was very unusual. The thing is wired into the aircraft's electrical system and has its own backup battery. A power failure doesn't shut it down. I doubt if it was coincidental. How many wrecks do you have in the history of the NTSB where you could recover the flight recorder but it didn't work?"

THE TESTIMONY OF JAMES W. ANGUS BEFORE THE NTSB

Q. Will you state your full name.

A. James W. Angus.

Q. And what is your address?

A. 57 Westervelt Avenue, Baldwin, New York.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am staff engineer with Kollsman Instruments Company.

Q. Will you tell us how long you have been employed by Kollsman Instruments?

A. I have been employed with Kollsman since 1942 with the exception of a short period of a year and a half.

Q. Would you briefly describe your background and training and experience with Kollsman leading to your current position?

A. I have a bachelor of Mechanical Engineering Degree from the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn. At Kollsman I have held assorted positions, starting as a tool inspector, becoming an experimental machinist and experimental technician, a designer, and finally an engineer.

Q. Would you describe your duties and responsibilities in your present position?

A. My primary duties are to develop pressure sensitive equipment. I also assist in giving technical assistance in areas where it is requested under special occasion.

SENIOR HEARING OFFICER HENDRICKS

Exhibit 9-G is identified as a report of an examination of altimeters and air data computers recovered from the Boeing 737, United Airlines Flight 553. Exhibit 9-C-1 is photographs altimeters and air data computers recovered from flight 553. Exhibit 9E, excerpts from Boeing 737 instruction manual regarding the pilot static system.

Q. Mr. Angus, I would like for you to start by describing the altimetry system that is install in Boeing 737, and you may use Exhibit 9E for referral. I would like you to point out those components furnished by Kollsman.

A. Our involvement with the 757 air data computer and the servo-automatic computers for this particular aircraft. The central air data computer is a device which accepts inputs of static pressure, total pressure, temperature and electrical power. We sense the pressure functions and by means of servo systems, compute associated outputs that are used in various positions around the airplane. The sensors, sender portion of the air data computer ,consist essentially of mechanisms somewhat similar to what is contained in altimeters and airspeed indicators. That is, capsules which are responsive to the particular air pressures being supplied. And this particular information is converted into angular motion which ultimately becomes part of a synchotel system and combined with a servo, it positions all of the necessary output devices in accordance with program established by the specification for the air data computer, the output devices are in the forms of syncros, potentiometers, decoders, and reliability signals. Included with the air data computer is a monitor system for each loop. This monitor determines that the servo system is properly following up each of the sensed values. If, as in the case of the altimeter, the servo system were to get out of track by as much as 100 feet, it would automatically disconnect the system. The way it does this, it cuts off the reliability signals that are sent to each of the using devices. So that any device in the airplane receives not only data from the air data computer, but it receives a validity signal which indicates whether or not the information should be used. The functions that are sent out are sent to indicators on the panel, auto-pilot, the flight recorder, the cabin pressurization system, and the transponder for reporting altitude. The altimeters are what are sometimes referred to as servo pneumatic altimeters. These altimeters have two modes of operation which are selectable by the pilot. In the standby mode of operation, the instrument will operate as a normal pressure sensitive device in accordance with the requirements of FAA/T on C10 Beacon. If it is elected, the indicator may also operate as a servo-repeater from the altitude data transmitted by the central air data computer. In order to operate in this mode, the pilot must actuate a switch knob on the face of the altimeter, which puts it in corrected mode of operation. In this mode of operation, the overall accuracy is improved from approximately 1/2 a percent system to about 2/10 of a percent accuracy.

Q. The corrected mode would be the normal side of the operation?

A. I believe the way the airline uses the term, the corrected mode is the normal side of operation.

Q. And I am sorry if I missed it, but there are two such systems in the aircraft?

A. Yes, there are two completely different independent systems. There is a central air data computer for the captain's side with his own indicator, and there is a central air data computer for the first officer's side that he has his own independent altimeter. As I understand it there are independent static systems supplying each of these units.

Q. Where does Kollsman interface with Boeing in this system?

A. In each case there is a Boeing specification which determines what the inputs are that you receive and what specification level these inputs would be provided to. In the case of pressure, they give us certain -- we have to provide certain cords on the devices that will tie up the lines in the aircraft, electrical connectors -- it is pretty much standardized, what pins are used for each function.

Q. I believed you mentioned the monitor tripout. Can you describe the monitor tripout as it effects the altimeter. Does this go into the standby mode when the CADAC trips out?

A. The air data computer will supply precise altitude information to the altimeter. If, for some reason, the altitude module in the air data computer determines that the information is unreliable, it will automatically cut off the reliability signal going to the altimeter.

Q. Is there any other protection in the event of a legitimate signal which is erroneous coming from the central air data computer?

A. The altimeter also contains its servo-monitor. There are two basic modes of servo detection in the altimeter. First would be if the servo system in the altimeter does not track that output of the air data computer. If there is a 50 foot disagreement between the altimeter and the air data computer, the altimeter will automatically revert to standby operation. That will be operating as a straight TSO altimeter. At the time this occurs, there is a flag on the dial which indicates it goes from the corrected mode to the standby mode.

Q. You said this occurs with a 50 foot –

A. Fifty foot separation, that is correct.

Now, in addition to this, we have what is known as a limiting device. People are always concerned and rightly so, for some reason that the servo might run away. If, for example, servo in the air data computer were to run away, we would provide a limited device in the altimeter and at certain pre-selected levels after the altimeter has responded to the corrected mode. It will then be limited in total correction capabilities at the point the monitor will cut the altimeter off, even though the air data computer might want to drive further.

Q. What kind of error would this generate maximum?

A. The error is a variable error with altitude, so that you can take care of increased tolerances at high altitude. At sea level this error would amount to approximately 350 feet.

Q. At what phase of the investigation into the accident of United 533 did your participation start?

A. We started when the instruments had been recovered and they were returned to United at San Francisco. We joined the committee at the United overhaul base and participated with them.

Q. You participated in the examination of both altimeters and the central air data computer, is that correct?

A. That is right, two data computers and two altimeters.

Q. And you prepared Exhibit 9-C to describe the extent of your participation and findings, is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. I would like you to refer to refer to Exhibit 9-C-1, answering the following, if you would please. Could you use the photographs and describe the general condition of the Captain's altimeter when it was first received by you?

A. I might mention before we go ahead that is all of these findings, the committee was present, and in general, I don't know of an area that doesn't exist, the committee in general agreed with the findings. These are not single person findings.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. The altimeter suffered primarily what appeared to be fire damage. There was some small indication of impact damage, but the primary source of the difficulty here was that the exterior of the case of the altimeter, which has an enamel paint which is baked on at the time of manufacture, this paint was actually burned off in many areas. With this burning off of the paint, all of the pressure seals in the instrument were no longer active. The covered glass was cracked and it appeared to be intact, which gave us the impression that this was a thermostress problem, rather than breakage due to impact shock. The rear connector on the instrument was contaminated with a fire material which more than likely was the mating connector on the electrical harness supplied in the airplane. This material had to actually be dug out. It was quite solid. Then the electrical connector was cleaned off. We observed the instrument. We shook it lightly; it didn't have any particular noisiness inside which might indicate broken parts rolling around. We felt the instrument was capable of further testing.

Q. May I refer you to photograph 1-1 in your exhibit, please.

A. Yes, I am looking at that.

Q. The indicated dial is set 30.035 thereabout. Have you any reason to believe this setting had been changed since impact?

A. Yes. It is my understanding after the instruments had been recovered at the accident site, and as I understand it, notes were taken and photographs were taken of the instrument as mounted on the panel, that subsequently the barrel knob was rotated to see if the pointers were still operable and the particular setting that you see there is the setting that happened to be left on the instrument at the time that it was received in the United Shop.

Q. Could you briefly describe for me the functional test unit was subjected to?

A. This altimeter was placed in a ball jar. The reason for that was that we could not pipe pressure into the altimeter and maintain a reading due to the leakage from the various seals.

Without making any further adjustments to the altimeter, we connected this bell jar, which is a sealed chamber that you can look through and observe the altimeter inside of it, connected this chamber to a barometer and programmed pressure into the chamber, and each specific instance we brought the altimeter to an indicated value in 200 foot stops, going from 0 to 2000 feet.

At each time that we reached stabilization, we measured the pressure within the chamber by means of the barometer that was attached to it. We then computed, based upon the indicated values, pressure values, and the setting, we computed that the indicator had, in its present state, had an average error of approximately 150 feet in the minus direction.

Q. In which?

A. In the minus direction. We then took the same altimeter and just rotated the barrel knob to the 29-92 position, which is the standard position for performing tests on an instrument of this type, and then programmed corrected pressures into the instrument. And putting corrected pressures into the instrument, we then read the instrument error. Now, the instrument error in this case averages out to approximately minus 120 foot value. The reason for the disagreement in this particular case between the first test and the second test -- excuse me. Am I getting ahead? Do you want the reason now?

Q. Yes, go right ahead.

A. The reason we felt the disagreement existed was because due to the high temperature exposure of the unit, the operation of the fundamental mechanism was not as smooth as it would be in normal conditions. And operating somewhat erratically, you would not be perfectly sure exactly where the first level was when we were setting the pointer on the instrument. The second case, you program in a very specific pressure, vibrate the instrument, and then take a reading when it settled out. So using a control standard that is much more precise in the second case, the results tend to be more meaningful.

Q. And the error was still in the same direction?

A. Same direction, but much more repeatable all the way up. Used the same 2000 foot altitude test span and 200 foot increment.

Q. Okay, do you have any explanation as to how the low effect offset may have occurred?

A. Yes. The subsequent examination of the instrument after taking the case off revealed that the instrument internally, where the mechanism is located, had reached temperatures approaching 360 degrees Fahrenheit.

We have since taken an equivalent instrument of the servo pneumatic variety and subject that instrument to a basic calibration. The instrument was seasoned overnight in the normal operation that you season these instruments to, which is to expose it to plus 70 degrees. The next morning it was rechecked again and the instrument was a stable instrument. We had to ascertain this fact first.

Then we placed the instrument in an oven. Now I am saying in an oven because you are essentially placing it in air which is heated to a specific temperature level, but it is not a high circulation factor. It is something -- there is a gentle fan in there that just keeps the air moving at a slow pace. This particular instrument was placed there, kept there for one hour at 360 degrees -- excuse me, let me go back.

In the test condition, we did not expose it to 360 degrees because that happens to be coincident with the melting temperatures of the solders used in the instrument, so for the purpose of the second instrument, to keep the data valid, we operated this at 300 degrees Fahrenheit. No, under these conditions, after aligning the instrument to return to room temperature, we retested it and we have an average minimum error of 85 to 90 feet. Now that does not appear in the report because we just finished the test Monday. I received the data by phone on Tuesday. We will give you a supplement on that.

Q. Do the results of the pressure testing this particular altimeter in this manner, reflect operation in the servo mode as well as the stand-by?

A. No. When we were finished testing the instrument as noted previously, using control pressure inputs, that was as far as we went on the testing in San Francisco. At that point we concentrated our testing on some of the central air data computer testing. We subsequently resumed testing on this back at Elmhurst in our plant with the team present.

After verifying our initial data, we took the instrument out of the case, we found that all of the electrical components had been exposed to very high temperatures, capacitors had exploded, solder had melted. But the basic pressure mechanism was intact. So we could not operate the instrument in servo mode. We tried in California but we just blew fuses. At that point we just stopped, we didn't want to damage it.

Q. Can you describe the condition of the first officer's altimeter one as described by you?

A. The first officer's altimeter was in very poor condition as received. This instrument was subjected to extensive fire and impact damage. The fire damage present was at a level that actually melted the aluminum away, which means it was in the temperature band of 1100 degrees Fahrenheit. The base of the instrument was split open, and a goodly portion of it was missing. The rear mechanism in the instrument, which is the pressure sensing section, was also missing. The front end, the cover glass, and flange assembly, was missing. The display elements were still on the face of the instrument. Essentially all that we could say was present was a mechanism body with associated burned-out electrical components and the display portion of the instrument.

Q. Would you refer, please, to photograph 2-1 in Exhibit 9-C-1. Is this a photograph of the first officers altimeter?

A. Yes, that is a photograph taken at United as it was received.

Q. Can you explain the significance of the dial reading or apparent pointer positions and also the reading on the baro set on the altimeter as found?

A. The pointer positions are what are referred to in the trade as uncoordinated. The relative position of the pointers cannot exist based upon the normal reading that is present in the instrument. The baro set was approximately 30,685.

Q. Was there any indication on the dial of the instrument such as impact markings?

A. No.

Q. Anything to give you a clue as to what the altimeter may have been reading on impact.

A. No. We have very carefully examined the dial components under a binocular type microscope using lights and we could not find any signs that could be attributed to an impact mark.

Q. Would you briefly describe the significance of the photos that you have labeled 2-6, 2-7, and 2-8 in establishing the uncoordinated positions of the pointers?

A. Yes. While we were at United, United made available to the team a recently serviced altimeter in their possession of the same type. We very carefully measured reference points on each pointer of the first officers unit and then positioned the corresponding point on the sample altimeter to that value, and then photographed, the purpose being when you look at the photograph of the good instrument and the photograph of this instrument which had been damaged in the accident, it become readily apparent the pointers are discoordinated.

Q. The primary central air data computer, can you describe the coefficient of that component when you received it?

A. The air data computer received what we would consider a moderate amount of impact damage. By that I mean the cases were dented in several areas on each unit. The front face of the computer was also damaged rather significantly, and there was fire damage around various areas. Let me just check which ones -- the captain's, first the captains computer unit was not severely damaged, but the first officers unit was very badly burned to the point where even the knobs could not be rotated.

Q. Were the units, the internal portions, in operable condition?

A. Yes, they were operable.

Q. Could you describe for us, please, the tests to which these units were subjected?

A. Testing accomplished on the air data computers consisted, first, of isolating all of the output devices to obtain position data at the point of power cutoff to the computer. This was followed by a check of the altitude sensor by disconnecting it electrically from the computer, and running it strictly on a pressure function to determine the operability of the sensor, and again, there are means in there to determine the point at which power was cut off.

At this point we got both computers - we had the sensors and everything reconnected. We programmed standard pressures into the computer and measured the output of the --- find the sink rows. This was to determine if the signals going to the altimeter were within specification requirements.

In the case of the first officer's air data computer, it read approximately 3 ½ degrees low. This is roughly 45 to 50 feet. The captain's altimeter was well within spec, in general it was within approximately 7 feet. We then checked the correlation of the encoder, which is used by the transponder. This is checked by comparing the point at which you transition from one code value to the next as compared to the altitude data being transmitted to the indicator in the panel. This was in general less than one degree on both units, which is within 14 feet.

And individually we tried --- we worked the servo unit up to air data computer and ran them through the same range, 2,000 feet. The altimeter connected to the captain's air data computer generally responded to less than 10 feet. First officer's was between minus 30 feet and 50 feet. Following this, we ran what we call a coast test of the servo. This test was to determine if the computer was being driven as it would be in the case of a descent and power was cut off, would the computer continue to move, thereby destroying the validity of the original set of data we took off the output devices. This test was run at top rates of descent, 1,000 feet per minute and 2,500 feet per minute. In the case of the captain's altimeter, so-called coast effect was less than 7/10. The first officer's altimeter approximately two feet. We considered this gave the original output devices reasonable values that we could accept.

Subsequent to this we performed a monitor check. This took special test equipment and this was done back in New York. What we did in this case was we isolated the modules for the air data computer and used jump cables, so that electrically they were connected even though they were set aside on some special test boxes. This allows us to, with the computer and the particular modules concerned, tied together, we can inactivate the servo, but still have power applied, and determine whether then monitors were still operating. The monitors on the both the first officer's and the captain's operated properly. This and some subsequent testing also verified not only did the monitors operate, but at the time that the monitor operates, the encoder output was cutoff automatically.

At one point in time the subject came up, were the sensors capable of performing when submitted to assorted acceleration factors, as you might have when the aircraft might pull some G's if you made a sharp pull up.

We made some special test pictures and adapted the altitude modules to a centrifuge. Units were tested individually for this. We subjected them from zero to one, back to zero; from zero to four G's, back to zero; then up to ten G's and back to zero. This was done at an altitude level of approximately 500 feet. The first officer's altitude module from the air data computer at 10 G's, the output varied 3 ½ degrees, which would be equivalent to 100 feet. The captain's module was within two degrees at 10 G's, which would put it at approximately 50 to 60 feet. There is no requirement for the 10 G's. The test was performed in any case. In further testing of the units, we became aware that when the overall air data computers were fired up for a short period of time, the reliability signal coming from the airspeed modules was in the unreliable state and then after approximately 30 seconds to a minute, reliability signal would come back on, indicating a valid state. This was an unusual condition so we decided to pull the airspeed sensor modules off and check them. This was the captain's incidentally, in case I didn't mention that. When we opened the airspeed sensor, we found there was a gear disengagement at the output stage on this particular sensor. The sensor has subsequently --- gear has been reengaged and everything operated normally.

We were concerned because when we looked at his particular sensor, the gearing is protected with stops, what we call stops in terms of functions, high and low; and also side stops so that the gears can't disengage by moving axis. All stops were in place. That particular sensor, we checked all the records, dates back to 1967.

We subsequently, as I mentioned, re-engaged the gears properly and then we took the sensor to our test laboratory and performed a shock test in the direction that was indicated as if this disengagement occurred due to shock. We felt that it would probably come in the fore and aft direction of the airplane so we checked it in that direction and levelwise what we did, we said we were not going to try to break it, the normal shock test for a unit of this type would be to expose it to 15 G's for approximately 11 millisecond pulse. In this case we first tested it at 20 G's, then we tested it at 25 G's. The instrument stayed in the sink and there was no disengagement. We stopped at this point because we felt that there may be further testing required for some other functions and it would not be conducive to break the instrument to prove one point.

The air data computers were made ready again and at the request of United, we ran what we called some computer step function tests. These tests consisted of programming pressure changes into the sensor and measuring the time that it would take the output of the air data computer to become stable at the secondary pressure. This was done for values of a thousand foot step function, 500 foot stop function, 200 feet and 100 feet. In the case of the captain's 1,000 foot function, the response of the overall system, -- this is, the air data computer, it was 5 seconds. When you get down to 100 feet, you are talking 3 or 2 ½ seconds. Subsequently we took the computers back up and in order to determine the operation of the monitors, we ran the air data computers at high velocity, and velocity chosen was that value at which point the servo would just indicate at the edge of the monitor trip. We're talking roughly 100 feet. The captain's air data computer would run at 21,400 feet per minute and the first officer's approximately 18,000 feet per minute. Now, that essentially completed the testing that was done on the air data computers.

Q. Thank you Mr. Angus. I may have misunderstood something, but I would like to refer you to page 10 in Exhibit 9-C. This test concerns the position evaluation of the sink rows with relation to the output of the central air data computer. I think I heard testimony, but you spoke of figures of 45 to 50 feet for the first officer's and 7 feet for the captain's primary unit. I would like clarification of what the 45 to 50 feet and the 7 feet are in reference to.

A. Those values don't appear on page 18. The values you are referring to come about on page 21, which is the programming correct pressure into the unit and measuring the output finding sink roll. The data on page 18 is the reading in the "as received" stats of each output module.

Q. Could you explain the page 18 figures for me again sir? I am specifically interested in trying to correlate the position of the sink rows in the "as received" condition to the known pressure altitude.

A. The sink rows that is used to drive the altimeter on the flight panel were read out, using an angle position indicator. Captain's read out, converted to feet, read out 652 feet; first officer's read out 558 feet. Now this difference here corresponds to 54 feet, but there would be some small difference depending upon the time sequence of power off, small differences in calibration, things of this nature.

Q. What barometric pressure would these figures refer to, sir?

A. These just refer to the "as received" state. They don't refer to any barometric pressure. They are measured against what we all call standard altitude. Standard altitude sometimes referred to by pilots at times as QNH altitude. This would be in the case of the altimeter, altimeter set for 29.92 power setting. If you wanted to convert these QNH values, it would be necessary to add the appropriate offset that would correspond to the local baro setting.

Q. How does the pilot produce the QNH baro set into the system?

A. He introduces it to the air data computer. He uses this in terms of his altimeter. When he program the baro setting into the altimeter it automatically puts the baro setting in whether he be using it in standby or servo mode of operation. It puts in an additive factor, adds so many feet to the display.

Q. So in order to correlate the "as received" position of the sink rows in the central air data computer to a given elevation on a given day, we would have to apply the QNH correction, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you done that for these figures?

A. The difference between the standard altitude and the pressure setting, as we were notified, 30.035 comes out to 120 feet. At 120 feet, each of these values, that would be the indicated value being presented to the crew at the time of power cut off.

Q. And knowing the elevation of the impact site is about 620 feet above mean sea level, that represents an error of about 150 feet, 100 feet. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Thank you. The encoders verified were correlated with the sink positions?

A. That is correct. The photo transmission point is always at the 50 feet point. The captain had a 652 foot value so that was into the next code bit, which was 700 feet.

Q. Now I would like to refer you to page 27 in this. Again it may be misunderstanding on my part, but I thought that I heard you say that the acceleration test showed an error of approximately 100 feet. And on page 27 I see a statement that all three positions maximum deviation of model sensed was one degree or 27 feet, for acceleration from zero to 10 G's.

A. When we do a test that is not a standard test for that particular equipment, we always try, particularly in the case of an accident, equipment, we always try to get an equivalent item. So in this particular case we took a sensor that was in stock and first ran the test through on the sensor. That particular sensor was within one degree on all the tests. The data for the two sensors involved is contained on the next page, and that data contains the difference values that I quoted previously.

Q. Were there any other significant findings in the evaluation of the units other than those already discussed?

A. On point we did, on the air data computers we did check the friction level of this and the friction level was down on the order of 2 feet. I think it was two feet on one and seven feet on the other one. We have checked the captain's altimeter for lead effect on the captain's, and he is coming out very close to what we consider nominal.

Q. And Mr. Angus, I can't find it right now, but in the report there is a reference to white flaking material in the static report of one of the central air data computers. Could you amplify that a little for me?

A. Angus: Yes. After we had resumed testing this equipment in Elmhurst, when we were running the monitor test, as I previously mentioned, we had to remove the altitude modules from the Central Air Data Computer so we could run a jumper cable. So it would be possible to interrupt the servo motor pilot. When we separated the module, I am not sure which one it is, that was the first officers unit. When we took the first officer's altitude module off the computer chassis. There was a white, flaky, material over the connecting port as used to connect the module into the plumbing with the central air data computer that goes to the connection tubes. There was a small deposit, probably two or three cubic millimeters, of very flaky material. We had noted back at United in San Francisco that one of the static lines had some water in it which looked to be like it might be water that had accumulated because of fire. The water wasn't clean.

Q. Was there any analysis of the white, flaky, material?

A. We, that white flaky material was placed in a sealed box and it is available to the Board if they want to spectrograph it. Now the general assumption on the flaky material is this is contained on a stainless steel pressure port which fits into an anodized aluminum. It was just felt his loose -- all the people called in with reasonable chemical background indicated it was more likely an aluminum oxide.

CHAIRMAN BURGESS: What?

THE WITNESS: An aluminum oxide.

MR. STREET: I have no questions.

MR. LAYNOR: I wasn't through.

CHAIRMAN BURGESS: I am sorry, Mr. Laynor is still continuing.

MR. STREET: I am sorry.
(Discussion off the record)

BY MR. LAYNOR

Q. Mr. Angus, I believe in your testimony you commented to the fact that to your knowledge of these systems are connected to two completely independent static systems. It is true then that both static systems will have to be effected in a similar manner to cause essentially the same error in the system?

A. It would appear that way due to the fact they have this more than tolerance difference in the particular outputs of the computers.

Q. Are the static systems, again to your knowledge, you could refer to exhibit 9-E, were the static systems which feed the central air data computer common in any way to the captain to the captain or first officers air speed indicators?

A. First of all, you are talking, "as received" correct?

Q. Yes, sir. First of all, as I understand it, the central air data computer themselves transmit no information to the air speed indicators in the cockpit. Is this true?

A. This is correct.

Q. And the airspeed indicators?

A. The pitot input -- the panel requirements for pilot pressure come off separate pitot tubes according to this diagram. In other words, there is a pilot tube that supplies the captain's panel, a pilot supply for the first officer's panel, pilot for each air data computer independently.

Q. How about static systems, sir?

A. It would appear to be the same way for the static except in the case of static there, they cross over -- in other words, there is a right and a left pitot static tube tied together to provide what is called a balanced pitot static. I think in this case there were dual statics for each side, thus providing a line for the indicator separate.

Q. Okay. I realize that the static system installation is not in your area of responsibility, but can you discuss possible reasons why the static system errors -- although of a magnitude reflected in the sink row telepositions in the central or data computers, could have occurred? Can you offer any rational explanation as to why the central air data computers could have been reading in the direction they were?

A. I am afraid I will have to pass that at the moment.

THE TWO DISABLED ALTIMETERS

James Angus testified that he found contaminant: "The rear connector on the instrument was contaminated with a fire material which more than likely was the mating connector on the electrical harness supplied in the airplane. This material had to actually be dug out." He found flaky material: "There was a white, flaky, material over the connecting port as used to connect the module into the plumbing with the central air data computer that goes to the connection tubes. There was a small deposit, probably two or three cubic millimeters, of very flaky material." No spectrograph was run on the flaky material and there was no scientific evidence indicating that it was aluminum oxide.

HEMMING told this researcher: "When you land a big bird, you have got to know your precise altitude." At the time of the missed approach, the altitude of United Air Lines Flight 533 was thought by the First Officer to be approximately 1,000 feet above sea level. When the National Transportation Safety Board interviewed witnesses to the crash, however, it discovered that the aircraft descended from the cloud base at an estimated altitude of only 400 feet, heading in a northwesterly direction. Shortly thereafter it veered to the right, as the pilot began to execute the missed approach, and was on a northerly heading when the crash occurred. By this time, more altitude had been lost.

No meaningful altitude indications were obtained from either of the altimeters. Captain Whitehouse's altimeter was virtually intact, but "because of heat damage to the internal components, no assessment could be made of the pre-impact accuracy..." When Captain Whitehouse's altimeter was disassembled at the Kollsman Instrument Corporation, technicians observed and photographed foreign matter in its gears. Below photograph, titled "Captain's Altimeter - Gear with contaminant in teeth." Angus never mentioned this.

THE DISENGAGED AIRSPEED INDICATOR

The Captain's airspeed indicator had also been tampered with. When it was tested, it remained at the high end of the airspeed system. The technicians from Kollsman Instruments reported: "The condition was isolated to a gear and a sector (non-linear) which had become disengaged. This allowed the output shaft to assume a high airspeed position regardless of the input airspeed value." When the technicians from Kollsman Instruments discovered this problem, they were, according to Angus, "concerned because when we looked at this particular sensor, the gearing is protected with stops, what we call end stops in terms of functions, high and low; and also side stops so the gears can't disengage by moving axle. All stops were in place. That particular sensor, we checked the records back to 1967."

THE CENTRAL AIR DATA COMPUTER

The National Transportation Safety Board also discovered common errors in two independent systems that "could have been transmitted from the Central Air Data Computer units to the altimeter of the First Officer." This static error may have been caused by the contaminant that was found in the altitude modules of the Central Air Data Computer. HEMMING told this researcher: "The Central Air Data Computer tells you if you've sprung a leak somewhere, or if something is contaminating your system etc. A little computer tells you right away, 'turn on your de-icer' various procedures. It's a warning system that tells you not to believe your gauges."

THE PREMATURE POWER FAILURE

The Central Air Data Computers were recovered and both units were capable of normal operation, but their fine altitude synchros showed an altitude higher than crash site's. Electronic measurement of the #1 fine altitude synchro in Captain's Central Air Data Computer altitude module showed a phase angle that corresponded to 772 feet above sea level. A similar measurement of the First Officer's #1 fine altitude synchro corresponded to 718 feet. The technicians at Kollsman Instruments checked the fine altitude synchro #2, and got similar readings. They checked the Coarse Synchro #2, the Cabin Pressure Potentiometer, and the TAT/EPRIL and obtained identical readings. This was odd, since when electrical power was removed for any reason, the altitude synchros did not move, but remained in their position at the moment of power removal. This indicated that the power going to the Central Air Data Computer was cut off at an altitude higher than that of the crash site, before the plane crashed, instead of on impact with the ground. Nonetheless, the NTSB concluded: "The static system errors reflected in the Central Air Data Computer readings at impact do not have a bearing on the events at Midway."

ANALYSIS

Even if we accepted the statement of the National Transportation Safety Board that pilot error was responsible for the crash, all the aforementioned malfunctions could have contributed to pilot error. The strongest evidence of sabotage was that the flight recorder had gone off 14 minutes before the accident, so the National Transportation Safety Board claimed it had very little to work with when it conducted its investigation. To compensate for this, it extrapolated flight path data from the traces registered by the flight in the Automated Radar Terminal Service (ART-III) at O'Hare International Airport, which had been tracking Flight 533. The National Transportation Safety Board, however, admitted that data obtained in this manner was far from precise, precluding an accurate determination of the nature and tempo of the events during the 61 seconds before impact.

SHERMAN SKOLNICK

Researcher Sherman Skolnick was the first to point out that Flight 533 was sabotaged. Skolnick, however, added charges that Captain Whitehouse had been poisoned, and that Midway Control Tower, the Serrelli Mob and El Paso Natural Gas were in some way involved. Skolnick, who is Jewish, is an advisor to the crypto-Nazi organization, Liberty Lobby, which published Spotlight. Andrew St. George and Mark Lane were also connected with Liberty Lobby. HEMMING told this researcher: "A.J. just because they don't like Jews you're prejudiced against them. Just because they gassed a few million, you're getting all upset."

ANALYSIS: INSTRUMENT SABOTAGE

The technology involved in loosening the set screw on the flight recorder, just enough so that the instrument would stop functioning 15 minutes or so before landing, indicated that this was a professional job. Someone had also manually disengaged the gears on Captain Whitehouse's airspeed indicator, and had rewired the plane's electrical system so that it would stop functioning prior to landing. In 1993 the final report of the National Transportation Safety Board on United Air Lines Flight 533's crash was still available to researchers, but the National Transportation Safety Board had routinely destroyed documents it was based on, since they were over 15 years old. The report mentioned the Central Air Data Computer readings, and the disabled flight recorder was noted in the cockpit voice recordings transcription; no mention, however, was made of the contaminant or the premature power cutoff.

NIXON

Minutes after the crash, 50 FBI agents rushed to the scene, conducting interviews and seizing evidence. John Reed, the Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, protested the actions of the FBI after the House Government Activities Subcommittee had pressured him to do so. In a letter to Acting FBI Director William D. Ruckelshaus, John Reed wrote that "for the first time in the memory of our staff" the FBI had interviewed witnesses and listened to control tower tapes before investigators for the National Transportation Safety Board did. William Ruckelshaus responded that the agents were investigating a Crime Aboard Aircraft, and were within the law, although he did admit that more than 50 agents were on the scene. [FBI 149-10024-12]

NIXON contemplated using the FBI to obtain documents he desired. White House/Special Operations Group member Jack Caufield said Charles Colson told him the Brookings Institution possessed papers needed by the Administration, and that the FBI had adopted a policy of coming to the scene of any suspicious fires in Washington, D.C. Jack Caufield believed Charles Colson had hinted that he should start a fire at the Brookings Institute enabling the FBI to make its appearance and steal the desired documents. [Wash. Post 11.22.74; Jack Anderson 8.9.74] G. Gordon Liddy reported: "The operation that we planned was to purchase several used fire engines from the market where they are available, have them painted and declared in the colors of the Washington, D.C., Fire Department, to have our Cuban assets dressed in the fireman's uniforms and attending the engines, to have a penetration which would then, during the period of time there would be no one there - so no one would be hurt - start a fire in the Brookings Institution. The first engines to respond would be ours. It would be our people who would enter, and in the guise of putting out the fire, they would take whatever it was that Mr. Colson wanted out of the Brookings Institution. [HUNT] came to me with this task from his principal, who was Mr. Colson."

One day after the crash of United Air Lines Flight 533, NIXON appointed Egil Krogh Under Secretary of Transportation. Egil Krogh controlled the parent agency of the National Transportation Safety Board, the Federal Aeronautics Administration. Ten days later, NIXON appointed Alexander P. Butterfield as the head of the Federal Aeronautics Administration.

BARKER stated that the death of Dorothy Hunt caused HUNT to give up blackmailing the White House and plead guilty. This benefited NIXON. John Dean discussed Mrs. HUNT'S death with NIXON:

Dean: Mrs. HUNT was the savviest woman in the world. She had the whole picture together before her death.

NIXON: Great sadness.

NIXON considered granting HUNT clemency if he were convicted in the Watergate affair: "I, uh, question of clemency...HUNT is a simple case. I mean, uh, after all, the man's wife is dead, was killed." When the FBI examined Dorothy Hunt's remains, it found $10,000. HUNT denied this was hush money, and he claimed it was going to be used to purchase a franchise for a Holiday Inn. The FBI investigated HUNT'S claim, and discovered that it was not normal for such a fee to be paid in cash and that such a fee would have had to be paid at the main office in Memphis, Tennessee.

A QUESTIONABLE OCCURRENCE: THE "NATURAL" DEATH OF J. EDGAR HOOVER

In October 1971 John Ehrlichman presented Nixon with a memo written by J. Gordon Liddy that concluded that FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover should resign. Nixon believed that Hoover was unable to adequately cope with the violent anti-war movement that was sweeping the country because Hoover was unwilling to conduct warrantless searches. Hoover died on the evening of May 1, 1972, at his home in Washington, D.C. His housekeeper discovered his body alongside his bed at 9:00 a.m. The Justice Department said he died of natural causes. No autopsy was performed. J. Edgar Hoover, age 77, allegedly succumbed to high blood pressure; he had been suffering from a heart ailment for some time. In November 1973 Mark C. Frazier interviewed Watergate burglar Felipe De Diego. Frazier tricked Felipe De Diego into obliquely acknowledging having burglarized the home of J. Edgar Hoover. [Harvard Crimson 11.10.73] "Two burglaries took place at Hoover's Washington home. The first was in the winter of 1972 to retrieve documents that might be used for blackmail against the White House. "After the first burglary," according to Diego, "a second burglary was carried out; this time, whether by design or misunderstanding, a poison, [of the] thyon phosphate genre, was placed in Hoover's personal toilet articles. Hoover died shortly after that."

There is no such poison as "thyon phosphate" as it was probably spelled phonetically. There is an organophosphorus compound containing the elements phosphorus and carbon, whose physiological effects include inhabitation of acetylcholinesterase, which is vital for nervous system functioning. The pesticides malathion and parathion and virtually all nerve agents are organophosphorus compounds. Most exposure victims experience bradycardia (slowed and weakened heart rate) but pulse rate may be increased initially and tachycardia (The heart normally beats at a rate of about 60 to 100 beats per minute at rest. A rate faster than 100 beats a minute in an adult is called tachycardia) is more common in very severe poisoning. Parathion is rapidly absorbed through the skin and may cause systemic poisoning. In January 1976, 79 persons in Jamaica were acutely poisoned by the organophosphorus insecticide parathion. Seventeen died. It was ironic that J. Edgar Hoover, who was known for planting bugs, might have been assassinated with a bug killer.

Researcher Tony Summers reported that in 1988 STURGIS said that Felipe De Diego told him about a break-in at the home of J. Edgar Hoover immediately after his death: "Felipe told me about it. I suspected the CIA was behind it. I told him, 'I guess our friends probably wanted to go over there and see what kind of documents Hoover had stashed away.'" When Tony Summers asked STURGIS if he had been involved, he said: "I'm not saying 'yes' to my involvement. Let me say 'no' to that. It opens up a can of worms." [Summers Secret Life J. Edgar Hoover p416] The FBI reported: "Subject BERNARD L. BARKER'S bank account showed large sum of money in his account in May 1972 amounting to $89,000. BARKER withdrew money in cash." [139-4089-311] The White House/Special Operations Group was interested in the death of J. Edgar Hoover. STURGIS, BARKER, Humberto Lopez and Pablo Fernandez attacked demonstrators at his funeral. Humberto Lopez told the FBI that he was "secretary of the Authentico Party headed by Carlos Prio Socarras...He stated that the Authentico Party's office is located next to the office of BERNARD BARKER Associates. He advised that he has been on speaking terms with BERNARD BARKER for several years. He stated that, upon the death of John Edgar Hoover and upon learning that Mr. Hoover would lie in state on May 3, 1972, BARKER asked him as a representative of the Authentico Party to be his guest and go to Washington, D.C. to pay respects to the Director. Lopez stated he thought this was an excellent idea, as he was a great admirer of Mr. Hoover, and accepted the invitation. He stated that while in Washington, D.C., there was a brief melee with a hippie group who were engaged by the Miami contingent, but that no arrests were made although there was some press coverage to the incident... The following individuals stayed at the motel with him: Pablo Fernandez, Angel Ferrer, Reinaldo Pico, and FRANK FIORINI. The others he believed stayed in an older hotel which was located relatively close, namely BARKER, Martinez, V. Gonzalez, H. Gonzalez, and De Diego. Lopez explained that other than his work with the Authentico Party he does not consider himself an activist, and other than his slight relationship with BARKER, he was never closely associated with any other individual in this group. He advised that, while he believed BARKER paid the fare and lodging, he was given his ticket by Rolando Martinez, and that his hotel room which was single was also paid for by Martinez. He believed that his airline ticket and hotel registration was under the name Manuel Garcia. Relative to his background, he stated he was employed in the Ministry of Government under Dr. Grau in Cuba. In August 1960 he sought asylum in the Embassy of Brazil and stayed there until March 1, 1961, when he received asylum in Venezuela and was at the Embassy in Venezuela until he entered the United States on September 10, 1962, and was assigned INS # 11261938." [FBI 139-4089-34, 6.30.72]

NIXON AND HOOVER

NIXON:...I told you that bizarre story that Edgar Hoover refused to investigate because Louis Marks, Mark's daughter was married to that son-of-a-bitch Ellsberg. (May 8, 1973)The problem we've got with some of this in the Ellsberg stuff, you see, Edgar Hoover wouldn't do the job because (Patricia) Marks, his closest friends daughter, was married to Ellsberg and wouldn't do it, and that's why some of that crap was done in the White House. (April 29, 1973).

FRANK STURGIS and BERNARD BARKER, and other members of the Watergate group, attended J. Edgar Hoover's funeral. They said they were there to beat up any leftists who attempted to disrupt the service. The new NIXON tapes reveal that NIXON hated Hoover. What was his motivation in having his crew there if he hated Hoover? Kalpana Srinivasan of The Associated Press reported:

George Washington University Professor of forensic science James Starrs was granted access to the District of Columbia medical examiner's records to reinvestigate how Hoover died. No autopsy was performed. Starrs said nothing in Hoover's medical history would suggest he was a candidate for a heart attack. Without an autopsy, other causes of death are still open, he said. "Everything thus far indicates there was nothing of sufficient medical history to write this off as a heart attack," Starrs said. Hoover's death was the subject of a panel at the American Academy of Forensic Science meeting on February 13, 1998 in San Francisco, California. "The main suggestion was that it was part of the Watergate scene in the 1970s," Starrs said. [Seattle Times January 19, 1998]

A QUESTIONABLE OCCURRENCE: THE "ACCIDENTAL" DEATH OF MURRAY CHOTINER

Murray Chotiner was the political public relations man for Earl Warren during his gubernatorial campaign in California. Murray Chotiner had been associated with NIXON since 1946. When NIXON became the Vice Presidential nominee of the Republican Party in 1952, Murray Chotiner served as his campaign manager. In September 1953 Earl Warren was appointed Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court by President Eisenhower. In 1966

Murray Chotiner was called before Senator John McClellan's committee investigating organized crime. Congressional investigator Robert F. Kennedy questioned Chotiner about his client, crime syndicate member Marco Reginelli, and demanded a list of Murray Chotiner's other clients. Dan Moldea reported that Murray Chotiner, and his brother Jack, handled 249 cases of mob figures arrested or indicted between 1949 and 1952. [Moldea, Hoffa Wars, Paddington Press, 1978]

In 1968 syndicate member Mickey Cohen, who was serving Federal prison time, said that Murray Chotiner had solicited campaign contributions from him on behalf of NIXON. Meyer Harris Cohen (A.K.A. "Mickey" Cohen), the son of Jewish immigrants, grew up in Cleveland, Ohio, where he started in the rackets. In 1940 Mickey Cohen moved to Los Angeles and worked with Jack Dragna and Meyer Lansky's partner, Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel. When Siegel was murdered by Meyer Lansky's hitmen in 1947, Mickey Cohen took over for him. California crime lord Jack Dragna became uncomfortable with Cohen, and numerous attempts were made on the life of Mickey Cohen. Meyer Lansky finally arranged for a truce between Dragna and Cohen.

In 1970 Murray Chotiner became NIXON'S Special Counsel; and in 1971, as a private attorney, he helped Teamster Union boss James Hoffa secure a Presidential pardon. Murray Chotiner was contacted by his friend, I. Irving Davidson, regarding this matter. [FBI FOIA Req. #72,182 approx. 500 pp.; HSCA OCR 11.2.78 Brady]

Ehrlichman: Vesco...was going around hot-shotting, saying that the White House was behind me and so on, and I had to say that he was to get no special favors or consideration. Just after he got out of jail, he was using Mitchell's name and my name and everybody's name - I've just met him. I don't know him. But his people have been brought into my office... Murry Chotiner's been working for him.

NIXON: What the hell's he doing for him?

Ehrlichman: He (Chotiner) comes in. He tried to see me and I wouldn't see him. My assistant (Tod R. Hullin) talked to him and he had a deal. Vesco would fix us up in South America. He'd act as an operative down there and he'd do this and that if we got him off the criminal prosecution. And then there's an element of blackmail, that the worst isn't yet out and that its going to hurt the administration if they tell all they know, and this, that and the other thing. (March 16, 1973)

Prior to his testimony at the Watergate hearings, Chotiner broke his leg in an automobile accident and was taken to Bethesda Hospital in Maryland where he mysteriously died of an alleged embolism. The New York Times reported, that on January 24, 1974, Murray Chotiner's automobile collided with a Government-owned truck driven by Charles Mickens. Murray Chotiner died of a blood clot a week later, January 30, 1974, while still hospitalized for the automobile accident. [NYT 1.31.74] Inducing an embolism is a favored method of murder by hospital employees.
