About mid-1962 (check date) LIENVOY telephone numbers of the Soviet, Cuban and Satellite Embassies. (Deleted) LIFEAT (deleted) was (deleted) connected 5 Cuban lines, 5 Soviet lines, 3 Czech, 2 Polish and 1 Yugoslav line. The base house listening post had a live monitor who made short summaries of conversations of interest which were then included in a daily resume for the Chief of Station which was received each day around 8:00 a.m. passed by (deleted) to Goodpasture to get to Scott before 9:00 a.m. Later, when a reel was completely recorded, full transcripts were typed and passed to the Station; however, there was usually a time lag of a day or two. Reels which contained Russian, or a language other than Spanish or English, were taken to another location for translation and typing. In the case of the Russian translations Boris Tarasoff usually ran about a week behind the date of the conversation because of the volume of Russian conversations, the translations usually ran about a week behind the date of the conversation. During this period (Fall of 1963) the reels were probably being brought into the station and carried to Boris by one of the people from the Soviet Section, or they may have been carried to him by (deleted), but I think I brought the reel in and gave it to (deleted) to take to Boris. (Deleted) handled all of the processing of Soviet transcripts.

Boris Tasaroff died November 15, 1995 and Anna died January 1, 2001. HEMMING told this researcher:

He was gonna tip the Cubans and Soviets off about Banister and all the CIA punks in New Orleans who were plotting and scheming something serious. That was the 'information.'

THE MEXICO CITY CIA STATION'S EARLY OSWALD CABLES

PHILLIPS was still in Mexico City when Oswald arrived and was intent on facilitating OSWALD's trip to Cuba by coaching him, using CIA assets and keeping surveillance off OSWALD. ANGLETON would do the same out of Langley. On OCTOBER 8, 1963, a cable went out from the CIA's Mexico City Station to the component of the CIA that logged American's contacts with the Soviets:

There was no conspiracy on the part of the Manells to deliberately include a wrong description of OSWALD. She looked at the surveillance photos and found a shot of a man leaving and entering the Embassy in the corresponding temporal parameters of the telephone call and figured this must be the man who initiated the call. Manell had no idea that PHILLIPS had made sure OSWALD would not be photographed as he entered the Soviet Embassy. The photo above shows the man thought to be connected to the telephone call outside the Sov Emb. He has been the fictional character in a lot of disinformation about the coup and has never been identified. That was the last time OSWALD appeared on the CIA's radar until October 1, 1963 however the information was withheld until October 9, 1963 when OSWALD was back in Dallas-Fort Worth. Willard C. Curtis [Winston Scott] releasing officer

THE CIA'S DELAY IN SENDING THE OSWALD OUTCABLE

A document dated January 31, 1964 that the CIA gave to the Warren Commission, stated that news of the OSWALD/Ivan Obyedkov telephone conversation was cabled to CIA Headquarters "the same day it was received. A file check in Washington which is routine in these matters revealed the possibility of an identity between the LEE OSWALD who had spoken with Ivan Obyedkov, and presumably with Kostikov, and the defector returnee, LEE HARVEY OSWALD." The cable from the Mexico City CIA Station, to Headquarters, went out nine days later (October 9, 1963), and not on the day after the transcripts had been reviewed. In Nightwatch, PHILLIPS wrote: "Mr. Manell the Case Officer in charge of Soviet Operations, was the first to become aware of OSWALD on the basis of the latter's contact with the Soviet Embassy...Herbert procrastinated...his wife typed out the cable." [PHILLIPS Nightwatch p80 et. al.] In 1977 the CIA generated a document titled, "Delay in Sending the First Cable about OSWALD," which stated:

1. Much has been written about the delay (by the Mexico Station) in sending the first cable requesting traces on the name LEE OSWALD. It was discussed in DAVE PHILLIPS' book as a case of laziness on the part of the Soviet case officer (which, in my view, was unjust and unnecessary and indicates that DAVE PHILLIPS did not know what he was talking about).

2. Normally, the Spanish transcript for the October 1, 1963, conversation would have been picked up upon the morning of October 2, 1963. The Russian language portion would have gone to the Russian/English transcriber on October 3, 1963. The translation would have been returned the following day (October 4, 1963), at which time the Soviet case officer would have asked for the photographic coverage. That coverage would not have been in the station before October 7, 1963, since the film was still in the camera on the October 3, 1963, and it was picked-up probably on the October 4, 1963, processed and passed to the Station on the next work day which would have been Monday, October 7, 1963.

3. Later, the film was taken out of the camera every day, but at that time, the film stayed in the camera until a full roll was completed, which might take three or four days.

4. A name trace could have been requested on the basis of the name alone, but that wasn't the way Winston Scott ran that Station. He wanted the photographic coverage tied in with the telephone coverage. Sometimes there was a U.S. automobile license number. It was also part of the numbers game of justifying a project by the number of dispatches, cables, or reports, produced. [NARA 1993.07.0616:17:21:930150]

As you can see the cable contained an accurate description of OSWALD based on FBI documents in his 201 file, "OSWALD is five feet ten inches, one hundred sixty-five pounds, light brown wavy hair, blue eyes" background on OSWALD'S defection and re-defection, including his statement that he wished to return to the United States if "we could come to some agreement concerning the dropping of any legal proceedings against me." This was the only piece of derogatory in the cable.

3. Latest Headquarters information was ODACID [State Department] report dated May 1962, saying ODACID had determined OSWALD is still US citizen, and both he and his Soviet wife have exit permits, and the Department of State had given approval for their travel with their infant child to USA.

4. Station should pass information reference and paragraph one to TPELIDE, ODENVY [FBI], ODOATH, [NAVY] and ODURGE [Immigration and Naturalization Service] locally. Information paragraphs two and three originates with ODACID.

William Hood was questioned about this document in November 1993:

Is that the real OSWALD? The 'Henry' puts me off. Is the birth date correct? Do you know how many documents I looked at each day? I almost certainly didn't originate it. I would have released it.

The document contained this stamp: "See Sanitized File A, Number 3, For Sterile copy of this document." No date was affixed to the stamp, which meant it originated when the document did. Thomas B. Ross and David Wise reported that when John McCone became the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency in 1962 he instructed "the Plans Division to keep the Intelligence Division [Counter-Intelligence] posted on all its activities. Thereafter, the Intelligence Division received 'Sanitized' reports (names of agents removed) on all current operations." [Ross & Wise Inv. Gov. p239] John Caldwell King, Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division was the Authenticating Officer.

Colonel J.C. King was stationed in Argentina from 1941 to 1945 and in Guatemala from 1952 to 1953 where he worked closely with HOWARD HUNT and DAVID PHILLIPS on OPERATION PBSUCCESS, the overthrow of the Arbenz Government. In December 1956, J.C. King met with HUNT in Cuba. During this meeting, J.C. King stated that Fidel Castro had been heavily involved in Bogotazo riots. On December 11, 1959, Colonel J. C. King wrote a memorandum to the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Allen Dulles, which observed that the far left dictatorship which existed in Cuba would, if permitted to stand, encourage undesirable actions against United States holdings in other Latin American countries. One of J. C. King's four recommended actions was that: "Thorough consideration be given to the elimination of Fidel Castro...Many informed people believe that the disappearance of Fidel would greatly accelerate the fall of the present government." Richard Bissell told the SSCIA that he discussed with J. C. King using syndicate members in a Fidel Castro assassination attempt. [SSCIA, Alleged Ass. Plots Inv. For. Lead. 11.20.75 p93]

Five days after the explosion aboard La Coubre, a Western Hemisphere-4 meeting, headed by CIA Colonel J. C. King, took place to execute the Operation Pluto plan of covert actions against Cuba signed by President Eisenhower. Colonel King was in contact with Rolando Masferrer Rojas, one of the counterrevolutionary leaders in Miami and an old henchman of the Batista dictatorship. Through a U.S. mine engineer, Masferrer informed King in advance of the arrival of arms shipments to Cuba and the ports at which they were to dock. J. C. King was Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division of the CIA during the Bay of Pigs. HUNT reported that J. C. King was the "general factotum" of the Green Committee, a Bay of Pigs fact-finding body comprising United States Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, Allen Dulles and retired General Maxwell Taylor. HUNT wrote that its "unannounced aim became clear: to whitewash the New Frontier by heaping guilt on CIA." [HUNT Day p213] STURGIS knew Colonel J. C. King and reported "he was the top man for the Bay of Pigs Brigade in Central America." [<http://www.granma.cu/ingles/2006/marzo/mierc15/12lacoubre.html>]

HEMMING told this researcher:

If OSWALD was used for a task in the Soviet Union and Hood knew about it, along with a group of other people within his own office, would he call attention to himself by looking into OSWALD? Fuck, no. If you are a cohort, and you're involved in dirty business, are you going to build a file that's traceable to you? He's a defector. He goes to a communist embassy in a foreign country. Of course they're going to be interested in him. How many turkeys like this you think were floating around? ANGLETON had a heavy fucking responsibility in this.

What government agency was xxxxx'd out in this document? Could it have been the Secret Service? When the Department of State received its copy, it sent copies to its Department of Security and Consular Affairs, Passport Office, Soviet Department, American Republics Research and Analysis Office, the First Consul and Ambassador at the American Embassy, Mexico City, and to Intelligence and Research. [DOS ltr. Abrams/Cheyes 1.17.64 rel. 5.25.76] When the FBI, Mexico City, received its copy on October 18, 1963, it increased its interest in OSWALD. The Dallas FBI was notified about OSWALD'S visit, and was ordered to notify William C. Sullivan, of the Counter-Espionage Section of the FBI, if OSWALD'S name came up in any context. FBI Mexico City Legal Attaché Clark Anderson arranged with the CIA to follow up on this cable and to verify OSWALD'S entry into Mexico. The FBI was more interested in OSWALD than the CIA was. The CIA explained:

Our Mexico City Station very often produces information on U.S. citizens contacting Soviet bloc embassies in Mexico City. Frequently the information we get is extremely incriminating, and on one or two occasions we have been able to apprehend and return to the U.S.A. American military personnel attempting to defect. In all such cases, our Headquarters desk requests and obtains the special permission of the Deputy Director for Plans to pass the derogatory information on a U.S. citizen to other government agencies. Derogatory information on Americans is not treated routinely; in each case the DDP or his Assistant personally scrutinize the information, make sure it is credible, and decide whether and to whom it will be passed. Only in absolute emergencies is the Mexico City Station authorized to pass such information directly to the FBI office in the U.S. Embassy...To avoid crossing lines with the FBI, our Mexico Station undertook no local investigation of its own. As we now know, OSWALD left Mexico on October 3, 1963, and was no longer there when our report was put out. (Deleted as of 2010). November 22, 1963. When word of the shooting reached our operating divisions and staffs on the afternoon of Friday November 22, 1963, transistor radios were turned on everywhere to follow the tragedy. When the name of LEE OSWALD was heard, the effect was electric. A phone message from the FBI came at about the same time, naming OSWALD as the possible assassin and asking for traces. The message was passed on at once by the Chief CI, Mr. ANGLETON, to Mr. Birch O'Neal of his Special Investigations Unit. Ann Egerter of this unit immediately recognized the name of LEE OSWALD and went for his file. At the same time, Mrs. Bustos [Barbara Manell] of the Mexico Desk, who had written our first report on OSWALD on October 19, 1963, recognized the name from radio reports and went after the same file. Mr. Reichhardt Mexico Desk Chief, who was home on leave, heard the news and phoned in a reminder that we had something on OSWALD.

The Secret Service was not sent a copy of this report, although OSWALD had been in contact with KGB Agent Valeriy Kostikov, a KGB assassin. In fact the name Kostikov or the initials KGB were nowhere to be seen. Did ANGLETON make sure this information was not given to the United States Secret Service so that OSWALD could play his part in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy undisturbed by that Agency? Although not listed as recipient on the cable, the CIA claimed the United States Secret Service received the information electronically, and it was "printed out in their communications section." The Warren Report stated: "No information concerning LEE HARVEY OSWALD appeared in Protective Research Service files prior to the President's trip to Dallas." The CIA had OSWALD'S photograph in CIA file #593-252C, an article from the Washington Post dated November 16, 1959. When the CIA first released this article, the Xerox was done so that OSWALD'S picture was not visible. In November 1992 he became visible. William Stuckey obtained this article. [CIA 8-4] The CIA could have obtained a glossy photograph from The Washington Post. Because the CIA did not locate this article, OSWALD'S photograph was never sent to the Embassy, and it could not be compared to the surveillance photographs. The investigation of OSWALD by the Mexico City Station of the CIA was stalled. Had it received a photograph, it would have been obvious that of the men photographed entering the Embassy, none of them was OSWALD, and the investigation could have progressed. Did Jane Roman go to ANGLETON for this photograph?

MEMORANDUM FOR : The Ambassador
FROM : Winston M. Scott
SUBJECT : Lee OSWALD/Contact with the Soviet Embassy

1. The following information was received from a usually reliable and extremely sensitive source: On 1 October 1963, an American male contacted the Soviet Embassy and identified himself as Lee OSWALD. This office determined that OSWALD had been at the Soviet Embassy on 26 September 1963 and had talked with Valeriy Vladimirovich KOSTIKOV, a member of the Consular Section, in order to learn if the Soviet Embassy had received a reply from Washington concerning his request. We have no clarifying information with regard to this request.

2. Our Headquarters has informed us that the OSWALD above is probably identical with Lee Henry OSWALD, born on 18 October 1929 in New Orleans, Louisiana, a former radar operator in the U. S. Marine Corps who defected to the Soviet Union in October 1959.

3. This office will advise you if additional information on this matter is received.

A Memorandum for the Ambassador drafted by Winston Scott on October 16, 1963, titled "LEE OSWALD/Contact with the Soviet Embassy" began:

The following information was received from a usually reliable and extremely sensitive source. On October 1, 1963, an American male contacted the Soviet Embassy and identified himself as LEE HARVEY OSWALD. This Officer determined that OSWALD had been at the Soviet Embassy on September 28, 1963, and had talked with Valeriy Kostikov, a member of the Consular Section, in order to learn if the Soviet Embassy had received a reply from Washington concerning his request. We have no clarifying information with regard to this request.

Copies of this memorandum were also sent to "The Minister; Counselor for Political Affairs; Regional Security Officer; Legal Attache; Naval Attaché; Liaison with Legal Attaché; Liaison with Naval Attaché; Immigration and Naturalization Service, LEE HENRY OSWALD P-." (P- was an OSWALD Embassy file - P8593). Copies were sent to "a CIA file number."

On Friday, September 27, 1963, and on Saturday, September 28, 1963, OSWALD talked over a tapped telephone line. Sylvia Duran made several references to OSWALD over another tapped line. She furnished descriptive data on him. The CIA claimed that it could not associate the OSWALD who spoke to Ivan Obyedkov on October 1, 1963, with the North American who had been picked up on telephone taps of the Soviet Embassy and the Soviet Military Attaché, asking for a visa. The CIA also claimed it did not associate OSWALD with the North American Sylvia Duran referred to when she spoke with the Soviets. In 1977 Sylvia Duran was asked if she said "LEE HARVEY OSWALD," rather than "North American," when she spoke to the Soviets. She said she supposed that she used the name "OSWALD." The transcripts revealed that she did not. The HSCA:

The Agency maintained that prior to the assassination, its field sources [the Tarasoffs] had not actually linked OSWALD to the person who visited the Cuban Consulate in October 1963. Testimony obtained directly from these sources, however, established that this connection had in fact been made in early October 1963, [CIA Station, Mexico City] however, was not informed about OSWALD'S visa request, nor of his visits to the Cuban Consulate.

PHILLIPS

In PHILLIPS' autobiography, Nightwatch he wrote that the CIA was aware of OSWALD'S request for a Soviet visa:

The circumstances were such, LEE HARVEY OSWALD wished to return to the Soviet Union via Cuba, that a cable to Headquarters asking for a Washington file check was in order." In his deposition during HUNT v.

WEBERMAN, PHILLIPS stated, "We became aware in the CIA office about his visit to the Cuban Embassy some -- almost immediately after the assassination occurred. It was because information concerning that visit was in the system, and was retrieved almost immediately.

PHILLIP'S had two different stories about when the CIA first became aware OSWALD want a Soviet visa. PHILLIP'S made certain that the investigation of OSWALD by the CIA in Mexico City was deliberately slowed down by having GOODPASTURE slow down and minimize the information about the call wherein the name OSWALD was mentioned then he blamed it on "Craig's wife." The translators told the HSCA that they knew that the man who was discussed over the Cuban and Soviet telephone line was the same man who called the Soviet Embassy in regard to an unspecified request, using the name OSWALD. The translators put two and two together, but that was as far as it went. Their information was suppressed and some of their transcripts were destroyed.

NO PHOTOGRAPHS OF OSWALD AT THE CUBAN CONSULATE

The CIA had an elaborate system of surveillance focused on the Cuban Consulate. Why didn't OSWALD turn up on CIA photographic surveillance of the Cuban Consulate, which was located in the same building as the Cuban Embassy? OSWALD had gone there three times.

NO PHOTOS: FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1963

OSWALD visited the Cuban Consulate on Friday, September 27, 1963. OSWALD came to Mexico City on the last day the CIA's cameras were down. Former CIA Director Admiral Stansfield Turner told the HSCA:

There was no pulse camera opposite the entrance to the Cuban Consulate until December 1963. Your investigators have seen the documentation recording this fact. In fact, there had been no photographic coverage of the Consulate entrance prior to the visit of LEE HARVEY OSWALD to Mexico City. The documentation for this statement has been made available to investigators. The Cuban Consulate entrance had been closed for some time [as the result of a CIA stench device operation in 1961] and after it was reopened, Friday, September 27, 1963, was scheduled as the day for installation of photographic equipment for its coverage. Difficulty was encountered in its installation, and technicians had to machine a part for the equipment. Your investigators have seen the documentation on which these statements are based. The technicians probably had to return to their shop to make the part in question. On that date, or at some date not long afterwards, there was test photography of the entrance; that photography has been reviewed by your investigators. They also have seen documentation stating the photographic coverage of the Consulate did not commence until sometime in October. Various difficulties were experience with the equipment, which seems to have been resolved by installation of the pulse camera in December 1963.

A CIA report indicated that the coverage was not perfected until mid-November 1963.

During the first two weeks of operation, the VLS-2 would trigger traffic entering and leaving the target entrance. Concerned with the necessity of reloading the camera twice daily, LIFEUD/22 devised a system whereby the VLS-2 would only photograph people leaving, but not entering the target building. LIFEUD/22's system works about 80% of the time, cutting film consumption considerably...The Robot Star camera which was given to LIFEUD/22 with the VLS-2 broke down after four days of photographing. PARMUTH replaced this with another Robot. Five days later, the second camera failed to advance properly. In both cases the spring would not advance the film for more than 15 exposures at a full winding...It is requested that a substitute camera be shipped to the Station as soon as possible to replace the Robot Star camera on this project...Willard C. Curtis. [Winston Scott CIA FOIA 02815 11.7.63]

Another of these visits was on a Saturday, September 28, 1963, when the CIA had no coverage. A CIA document stated: "Note only visit we know he made was Cuban Embassy Saturday, September 28, 1963, on which Embassy was closed and we have not had coverage. In future will require at least half day photographic coverage both Soviet and Cuban Embassies. [CIA 59-23]

The CIA's cameras that were focused on the Cuban Embassy and Cuban Consulate were positioned in a vacant apartment across the street. The CIA: "The Cuban Embassy coverage had more sophisticated equipment, using an impulse camera which frequently developed mechanical difficulties. [This device was not installed until December 1963.] (Deleted as of 2010) (I think) handled this film - pick up and delivery. Lorna MacKay screened the film inside the station."

A CIA document dated February 10, 1977 stated:

SOURCE: Notes made by Ann Goodpasture for John Leader, IG Staff
SUBJECT: Background on Mexico Station Support Assets
(Coverage of Soviet and Cuban Embassies)
1. (Deleted) Coverage:

From the time the Mexico Station was opened (deleted) arrival of Mr. Winston Scott, Chief of Station (deleted) (still in LA/HQ) had had developed a support apparatus to exploit leads from the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City. This umbrella type project (LIPSTICK) consisted of multi-line phone taps, three photographic sites, a mobile surveillance team, and a mail intercept operation. Telephone taps (LIFEAT) were placed by (Deleted) handled by a Station case officer. The number of lines tapped was limited only by the availability of a listening post nearby and the availability of language (English, Spanish, Soviet, Polish, Czech etc.) Generally these were Mexican or Mexican-Americans recruited agents who were related (which the Station at that time felt was good security in that if they talked shop, they would talk to each other.)

Three photographic sites were handled by a Station case officer, assisted by TSD technicians on TDY from Headquarters, who advised the stations on the best types of cameras, films, and concealment devices. The operations had sub-crypts under project LIPSTICK namely LIMITED, LILYRIC and LICALLA). LIMITED was a fixed site bang opposite the Soviet Embassy (across the street) which had both a vehicle and pedestrian entrance. The gate to the Soviet Embassy was on the northwest corner of the Soviet compound and the LIMITED site was diagonally across double laned street on the southeast corner of that block. (See attached diagram). LIMITED was the first photo base, and operated strictly on an experimental basis in the early stages. I think the Station bought this property (a one story Spanish Colonial stone house) through LIMOUSINE (check to be sure). Later, this house began to fall apart. This base, however, was closed when the Station received word that the photograph of the "unidentified man" was being released by the Warren Commission. The photo operators were moved to another apartment nearby. The property was sold (under an operational agreement with LIMOUSINE for a long term lease on the top floor of a new apartment building to be built on this site). LILYRIC was planned as an alternative photographic base. It was located in an upper apartment building on the same side of the street as the LIMITED site but in the middle of the block south. It had a slanted view of the front gate of the Soviet Embassy. The agents in LIMITED and LLYRIC and LICALLA as far as we knew, were not acquainted with each other. LLYRIC was a rented apartment. LICALLA the third photographic site, was located in one of a row of four houses on the south side of the Soviet Embassy compound. The site overlooked the back garden of the Soviet Embassy compound. The purpose of this operation was to get good identification photographs of Soviet personnel (who at the time were largely unidentified in Mexico Station records). The three photographic sites were managed by a recruited agent who was a Mexican citizen, the son of an American mother, and Mexican father (deceased). This agent collected the film from the LIMITED and LILYRIC sites three times a week. The film was then developed and printed into 9 X 10 contact sheets contact print strips by his sister's husband. The master plan was for LICALLA film to be processed inside Station, but TSD man from 1957 to 1959 resigned, could not handle the volume, and as the unprocessed film began to accumulate, the inside CO Mahoney became disgusted and took the film out for (Deleted's) brother-in-law to process probably early 1959. This (Deleted) became the handler for all three photo bases. A sensitive Staff D monitoring operation was run out of another of these houses (crypt for the four house was LIMOST-1 etc). This was handled by Glenn Widden (outside TSD officer) and Mahoney using HQ TDY teams for monitoring. This operation was also separate from LICALLA. The two houses in between were rented to unsuspecting tenants.

Mobile surveillance was developed by Anderson and later placed under Mahoney and Joseph Sancho. These two officers organized a surveillance team of six recruited agents which used late model cars and a panel truck for surveillance. The team could be activated by radio from the LIMITED site whenever someone of interest left the gate of the Soviet Embassy. They would stay with them until they made their meetings. These agents were aware of the LIMITED site since they had been issued LIMITED photographs for identification purposes. This worked fairly well until about the middle of 1958, when one of the surveillance agents got too close to his target and was arrested by Mexican transit police and turned over to the Mexican Secret Service. By the time the Station could arrange a cleared attorney and bail him out the agent had identified Sancho, (who was evacuated across the border at Nogales by Bob Shaw) and the inside phone number of Maloney (who was subsequently replaced by Louis Puckett. As a result of this flap, the LIFFAT project was broken up into several others. The agents were not changed, but given new crypts. (Deleted) and (Deleted) replaced Anderson in handling the (deleted phone) taps. Puckett replaced Mahoney and handled the surveillance team LIENTRAP and the photo bases through (Pages Deleted).

The Station also conducted a mail operation, LIBRIGHT which was handled by an American case officer, Charlie Anderson III. (Deleted) obtained selected letters from a subagent.

2. (Deleted) Coverage:

(Deleted) was unreliable and insecure as characterized by the nature of the Mexican Services at that time. The Mexican Direction of Federal Security (DFS) (Deleted) was a hip-pocket group run out of the Mexican Ministry of Government. This Ministry was principally occupied with political investigations and control of foreigners. Their agents were brutal and corrupt. (Deleted)

3. OSWALD Coverage

The base house listening post had a live monitor who made short summaries of conversations of interest which were then included in a daily resume to the Chief of Station which was received each day around 8:00 a.m. passed by (Deleted) to Goodpasture to get to Scott before 9:00 a.m. Later, when a reel was completely recorded full transcripts were typed and passed to the Station, however, there was usually a lag of a day or two. Reels which contained Russian or a language other than Spanish or English were taken to another location for translation and typing. Boris did the Russian translation but because of the volume of Russian conversations, the translations usually ran about a week behind the date of the conversation. During this period (fall of 1963) the reels were probably being brought into the station and carried to Boris by one of the people from the Soviet Section or they may have been carried to him by (Deleted) but I think I brought the reel in and gave it to (Deleted) to take to Boris. (Deleted) handled all the processing of Soviet transcripts. Goodpasture's job involved screening the photographs as soon as we learned that the man calling himself OSWALD was probably an American. However, here again, there was a backlog because the photographs were picked-up three times a week, but those picked up were usually for dates a few days before, since the technician who was processing the film did so on a night-time basis. Further, photographs were not made initially until a complete roll of film was used. Later, this was changed, and the operator cleared the camera each day. The instructions were to cover the entire work day (office hours 10:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m. 2:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m. weekdays) and to photograph all Soviets, their families, all foreigners, and cars with foreign license plates. Human error did occur, but generally the agents were conscientious. The Cuban Embassy coverage had more sophisticated equipment using a pulse camera which frequently developed mechanical difficulties. (Deleted as of 2010) (I think) handled this film - pick up and delivery. Lorna MacKay screened the film inside the station.

OSWALD came to the attention of the listening post operators from a tap on the Soviet line. It was picked-up and taken to Tarasoff for translation because the caller was trying to speak in Russian. There was some delay, because Station personnel waited to compare the photographs with the typed transcript. All transcripts were made in either Spanish or English, since the Chief of Station could only read these two languages, and because he personally screened the transcripts for operational leads.

My memory is a little vague about the origins of the Cuban Embassy, but I think the staff first developed from a pro-Castro group celebrating on New Years eve 1959. As I recall, it was a makeshift arrangement of volunteers through most of 1960 and 1961 with Tom Hazlitt producing voluminous reports on their activities and recruiting agents right and left among Cuban Nationals in Mexico City.

Personnel assignments: Of interest to us now is who was in Mexico during the period prior to OSWALD'S visit, and the subsequent investigation by the Warren Commission. To determine who was there, and what they were doing, I have grouped persons together chronologically with areas of their assignment (Deleted) so that as the name pops up, one can tell what period they were in Mexico and what their assignments were at the time. (Deleted) COS Winston Scott (deceased) DCOS (Deleted) Covert Action (Deleted) Cuban Operations (Deleted) Soviet Target (Deleted) Soviet Transcribers (Deleted) Support Assets (Deleted) [This was a combination of two highly deleted documents]. ^

The Cubans knew of this operation in 1963, but were powerless to do anything about it, since the project had Mexican Police approval. [CIA Cuba Accuses Havana 1978]

PHILLIPS stated: "I know there are a lot of stories about photographs of OSWALD taken in Mexico City. None were taken. The cameras were not working that day." In a deposition PHILLIPS repeated: "There were no photographs taken by the CIA of OSWALD, as far as I know, or by anybody else during his visit to Mexico."

OSWALD was told to go to Mexico City Cuban Consulate at a time when the old surveillance system was being replaced by a new surveillance system. He was told this by DAVID PHILLIPS who, as the man in charge of Cuban Operations, was in charge of putting it in place.

NO PHOTOGRAPHS OF OSWALD AT THE SOVIET EMBASSY

OSWALD visited the Soviet Embassy at least twice.

The CIA:

Of the photographic coverage of the entrance to the Soviet Embassy, the Agency has been able to locate the photography of only one of the two cameras involved. It is believed this is all that exists. The last picture taken by that one camera on Friday, September 27, 1963, was at 11:46 a.m. OSWALD did not appear in the day's photography, so it is safe to say he did not go there prior to that time. OSWALD returned to the Soviet Embassy on Saturday, another day that there was no coverage.

DAVID PHILLIPS said he had studied the photographs: "John and I spent several days studying literally hundreds of photographs available to the CIA before, and during, OSWALD'S trip to Mexico City." Asked about accusations that the pictures had been destroyed PHILLIPS answered, "Absolutely untrue. I was there and I know." On September 30, 1980, PHILLIPS was deposed in HUNT v. WEBERMAN:

Q. OSWALD had a conversation on October 1, 1963 with Soviet guard Ivan Obyedkov.

A. Counselor, since I retired from the CIA five years ago, I have been a professional writer. I have had three books published by major firms. Based on that experience I have the eerie sensation that these questions are aimed at producing some sort of manuscript, rather than court records.

What possible reason is there in this case to ask me, a CIA agent who's already made it obvious that I am not going to violate my secrecy oath, to describe what happened at the Soviet Embassy?

Q. My concern is to establish truth as a defense to the libel action and the slander action.

A. Well, perhaps we can save a little time. I do want to make a general statement because, apparently, of what you are leading to. One, I am absolutely convinced that LEE HARVEY OSWALD had no connection with the CIA. If HOWARD HUNT ever met LEE HARVEY OSWALD, I certainly never knew about it. Judging from what I know about being in Mexico City at the time, during the time period we are talking about, both the Soviets and the Cubans thought that LEE HARVEY OSWALD was some sort of kook and sent him back to Dallas alone. And during that period -- right now, there's been so much about perhaps the CIA was behind the assassination. I would like to say to you, ah-ha. I would love to prove Castro was behind it or the Soviets. I can't. LEE HARVEY OSWALD to my knowledge had no connection with the CIA, no connection with HOWARD HUNT.

And finally, addressing another thing, a moment ago Mr. Weberman mentioned a statement by Mr. Tad Szulc. Tad Szulc is a widely known journalist. He made a statement, I believe it was in the book about HOWARD HUNT, in which he said that HOWARD HUNT was Acting Chief of Station in Mexico City in the 1963 area. I am convinced that Mr. Szulc making that statement was in error.

Q. All right. Do you know whether or not Mr. OSWALD ever offered any information to the Soviets in exchange for a visa and whether or not he identified himself during the various calls by name or just said "It's me" expecting them to know who he was?

A. I'm aware of various things that had been printed in the newspapers, including the story printed about me which incorrectly said that I destroyed various matters and so forth. I'm aware of those stories. But I'm afraid we are right back to the business that I will get in the same kind of trouble that I have gotten into in the past if I try to go into facts any further.

There were no pictures of OSWALD, because PHILLIPS and HUNT had instructed him to enter the Soviet Embassy and Cuban Consulate at a time there was no photographic coverage. Evidence of this was presented in Nodule 16.

D. E. BOSTER AND PHILLIPS

PHILLIPS: "None of the CIA Mexico City personnel knew anything about LEE HARVEY OSWALD." There was, however, someone at the Embassy who did. D. E. Boster was stationed at the American Embassy, Mexico City, in October 1963. Boster became a political officer there in September 1962. In June 1993 D. E. Boster stated, PHILLIPS was in the Embassy in Mexico City when I was there. We knew each other, but we didn't know each other well. I was in the Foreign Service, not the CIA. I don't know who PHILLIPS consulted about OSWALD. I mean, I was never consulted. I was never aware of any...

PHILLIPS refused to answer any questions regarding D. E. Boster.

CLARK ANDERSON

FBI Legal Attaché Clark Anderson worked in the American Embassy, Mexico City, at the time HUNT worked there. Clark Anderson told this researcher he was assigned to Mexico City from 1948 through 1958 and

...during that period of time I have no recollection of HUNT. It wouldn't be unusual. They had their operation, we had ours. I did know DAVID PHILLIPS.

PHILLIPS described Clark Anderson as "the senior FBI station man in Mexico...the CIA and FBI in Mexico worked together over many years." Clark Anderson conducted the investigation of OSWALD'S activities in Mexico City for the Warren Commission. He wanted J. Edgar Hoover to send him three agents who would help him bring the Kennedy investigation matter to its "logical end" - two veterans of the Mexico City Field Office, and Dallas FBI S.A. Wallace Heitman. Clark Anderson believed "there was more to this matter than simply a 'nut' shooting the President." [FBI DL 89-43-103] J. Edgar Hoover never sent these particular agents, although Wallace Heitman did conduct 12 interviews concerning the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. PHILLIPS, and an associate he called "John," helped Clark Anderson conduct his investigation of OSWALD'S activities in Mexico City. During HUNT v. WEBERMAN PHILLIPS was asked:

Q. Clark Anderson was the FBI investigator down in the Mexico City area after November 1963. Were you aware of his investigation in Mexico City?

A. I was aware that Mr. Clark Anderson was chief of the FBI. He was not an investigator. He was the senior FBI station in Mexico.

Q. Did he ever request any assistance of you on working on the investigation in that area at that time?

A. The CIA and FBI in Mexico worked together over many, many years.

The FBI consulted with PHILLIPS who described the CIA's surveillance operation as a "plant." [Legat Mexico City 105-3702 3.6.64 - NARA FBI 124-10162-10023]

THE DEATH OF WINSTON SCOTT

During a telephone conversation in 1993 with this researcher Ambassador Thomas Mann stated:

I never saw the CIA's incoming and outgoing messages, and I don't even know what - who killed Winston Scott or why? He died in his own backyard. It was a very mysterious death.

Thomas C. Mann had been Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs during the early stages of Bay of Pigs. He pondered the legality of the invasion, finally concluding it was justified because Cuba was a Soviet satellite. Dick Russell reported:

It was on a late weekend night, and, the way family members recall it, Scott had gone outside alone and climbed up the gangplank to get a better look at a new brick wall that was being built in his backyard. His tumble into the rose bushes seemed more embarrassing to him than anything else. He went to bed, awoke in some pain with bruises and cuts, then experienced trouble breathing at breakfast. He was taken to the hospital where a doctor found nothing seriously wrong and sent him home. On April 26, 1971, as he was preparing to go to his office, his wife, Janet, found Scott slumped over a chair at his breakfast table. No autopsy was performed, and a postmortem suggested he had apparently suffered a blood clot to his heart during the fall."

[Russell, Man Who Knew Too Much p460]

ANGLETON

ANGLETON flew to Mexico City to attend the funeral of Winston Scott. According to the family of Winston Scott, ANGLETON was interested obtaining all of Winston Scott's papers. Scott Breckinridge wrote:

MEMO FOR FILE

SUBJECT: Win Scott MSS

1. Ben Evans spoke with Colonel White (White phoned him) yesterday. After finishing their discussion Ben asked White what he recalled about Scott's diary/mss.

2. White says that Readers Digest had a copy, which led to our interest. Mr. ANGLETON went to Mexico City and got the manuscript. It was a lousy thing, filled with Scott's sex life and operations, and someone 'deep-sixed' it. I didn't get out of this whether that meant it was destroyed, although it seems this is what happened. Ben spoke with George Lauder (DC/LA) who confirmed this outline. Ben felt that someone had been doing work on it, and he told Lauder of my interest. SDB

WINSTON SCOTT'S MANUSCRIPT

Raymond M. Reardon located the manuscript in the possession of the CI Staff: "Since the CI Staff is the office of record in regard to the Kennedy assassination material, they are in the best position to comment on the factual errors in Mr. Scott's account of OSWALD'S activities in Mexico City." Reardon was afraid that Readers Digest had obtained a copy of the manuscript through Scott's friend, John Barron, and was going to publish it. [NARA 1993.07.21.17:02:09:060280]

Winston Scott's manuscript differed from the CIA's version of events. Winston Scott wrote:

I learned something of LEE HARVEY OSWALD in the period from Friday, September 27, 1963, when LEE HARVEY OSWALD, having just arrived in Mexico City, made his first contact with the Soviet Embassy in Mexico. He said that he wanted to go to the Crimea. In fact, LEE HARVEY OSWALD became a person of great interest to us during his September 27, 1963, to October 1, 1963, period. He contacted the Soviet Embassy on at least four occasions and one once went directly from the office of Sylvia Duran.

Because we thought at first that LEE HARVEY OSWALD might be a dangerous potential defector from the U.S.A. to the Soviet Union, he was of great interest to us, so we kept a special watch on him and his activities. He was observed on all his visits to each of the two communist embassies, and his conversations with personnel of these embassies were studied in detail, so far as we knew them. OSWALD told a high-ranking officer of the Soviet Embassy that that officer should have had word from the Soviet Embassy in Washington about his visit and its purpose, after he had spelled out his full name, slowly and carefully, for this Soviet. He gave them his name very slowly and carefully and saying the Soviet Embassy in Mexico should have received word from the Soviet Embassy in Washington that he (OSWALD) would contact them about a visa for himself, his wife, who he said was a Soviet citizen and their child....He further told this Soviet that he should know that OSWALD, his wife and child wanted to go to the Crimea urgently and he (OSWALD) had learned that he would have to go by way of Cuba. OSWALD was then directed to the Cuban Embassy by the Soviet, who told OSWALD he would need a Cuban transit visa. These visits are no hearsay; for persons watching these embassies photographed OSWALD as he entered and left each one; and clocked the time he spent on each visit. The conversations are also known to have taken place, including the one in which he told the Soviet to whom he was talking that he should have heard, received a message, from the Soviet Embassy in Washington indicating obviously that a Soviet Embassy official in Washington had offered to help OSWALD...OSWALD'S visits at both the Communist Cuban Embassy and the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City are, together with what is known of what took place during these visits, sufficient to make him a suspect agent, acting on behalf of the Soviets, in several things, including the assassination of Kennedy. When one studies the conversations OSWALD is known to have had with officials of both these communist embassies, it is evident that there are sufficient data for this suspicion... [Leader IG Staff to Reardon OS 12.21.70; NARA 1993.07.21.19:54:08:930590]

ANGLETON knew that OSWALD had been instructed by PHILLIPS and HUNT in regard to CIA surveillance, and how to avoid it, and that OSWALD did not show up on the CIA's cameras. ANGLETON knew that Scott was lying. Dick Russell believed Winston Scott possessed tapes of the Cuban Consulate and Soviet Embassy telephone taps during the period OSWALD telephoned. The CIA CI Staff commented: "OSWALD identified himself only as LEE OSWALD and did not spell out his name. NB: The only explanation is that the transcript is not literal but only a summary." Scott said that OSWALD wanted to go to the Crimea. This referred to the Odessa phone call that the CIA said was not linked to OSWALD. SCOTT was about to inadvertently double-cross ANGLETON when he suddenly died.

WINSTON SCOTT'S MISSING MANUSCRIPT

Winston Scott died in April 1971. His widow discussed his death with the CIA Station in Mexico City:

(2 - Deleted) turned to planned Scott trip to see Director of which she aware and covered chief parts of manuscript of which she aware but which she said she had not seen. She told ANGLETON on April 29, 1971, that she and others have heard much talk of manuscript from Scott. For example, Burnell Goodrich claims to have read one chapter. She thinks (Deleted) may have helped with (5 - Deleted) parts. This discussion of manuscript by Scott, although not clear who all may have read it, means it is well known and, according to her, looked for with some anticipation by friends in his U.S. circle here. (2 - Deleted) advised her against reading manuscript, as it discusses in open way intimate matters of previous marriage. Importantly (2 - Deleted) pointed out, information therein would violate two different secrecy agreements (Deleted and U.S.) as well as doing great damage to our relationships with other governments. The information is, as it were, U.S. Government property and (2 - Deleted) said that the publication would dismay Scotts' friends and harm his reputation and memory. She seemed appalled at the idea of publishing manuscript, saying that she realized when Scott told her of visit to Director that something was wrong. She also asked (2 - Deleted) about Scott's motivation in this. In discussion of these and other papers she agreed (although it then seemed to ANGLETON somewhat hesitant) to cooperate with ANGLETON on getting Agency papers from Curtis' belongings. (2 - Deleted) will remember Barron statement late night of April 28, 1971, that he would forget the manuscript, taking no steps to go forward with publication...With her efficient cooperation ANGLETON spent several hours going through safes and cabinets and valises in study, and loaded three large cartons and four valises with file folders and notes and memoranda of classified Station files. Also, when she and brothers at Curtis office the previous day, they had pulled out, under lawyer's eyes, number of documents which obviously classified or Agency oriented (Curtis name in pseudonym, Secret stamps and so on.)...While we shall inventory later, to at least cursory extent, importantly we got two original drafts (apparently the second and rewrite) and two carbons of manuscript. Plus there were a number of drafts, some repetitive of what appears to have been the final manuscript. She knows of no other copies extant, save what Barron may have. She says manuscript typed in final in English by woman in Mexico unknown to her, and we will trace this. Not sure we have all classified papers, and think she and lawyer will cooperate in turning over other finds. There is one locked box in safe which, when she has key, she promised to open with ANGLETON. We suspect this may contain missing tapes on (Deleted) case and "Lesbians" which Barron spoke of to (2 - Deleted). (We have found Huey Newton and Cleaver tapes but these only tapes so far.)...Manuscript. It appears to ANGLETON that she is not even wistful about it at this point, and when she commented that Scott must have had money in mind it apparent that she did not want money that badly (although clear she quite uncertain about her financial status or future.) ANGLETON warned her that Scott's friends may feel Agency has pulled a fast one with manuscript but that ANGLETON was prepared to weather that one...On April 30, 1971, Mrs. Scott turned over further classified papers to (Deleted) along with a small arsenal of weapons... THE CIA DOCUMENTS ABOUT THE FIRST ARREST OF SYLVIA DURAN

After November 22, 1963, at the request of United States Ambassador Thomas Mann, the Mexican CIA Station cabled Headquarters:

Paragraph 3. Mexi suggesting to (deleted) that Sylvia Duran...who put OSWALD on telephone from Cuban Embassy to talk to Soviet Embassy on September 28, 1963, be arrested immediately by Mexican authorities and held incommunicado until she gives all details on OSWALD known to her. [CIA 56-20]

This request was sent to Luis Echevarria who was on the CIA's pad, though his private secretary (Accacer) on November 23, 1963. Copies were put in OSWALD's file at the Mexican Embassy P - 8593, in Duran's file and in Deleted's file. [CIA 64-552] In another document Mann suggested:

We should immediately request Mexicans to arrest Sylvia Duran so as to eliminate possibility of her being smuggled out of Mexico or killed here. This should be done immediately and irrespective of whether Washington decides to authorize us to act along lines of other foregoing recommendations. [CIA 128-590]

Thomas Mann was contacted in June 1993. He stated: "I don't know anything about that message. The Embassy had over a thousand people, and the CIA and the FBI had their own people. I never heard tapes of OSWALD nor did I see any transcriptions. I'm 80 years old."

When Assistant Deputy Director / Plans, Thomas Karamessines, discovered the arrest of Sylvia Duran was imminent, he contacted Mexico City Stations (KUBARK) and told the Kubarkers to cancel it:

Memo for the Record:

After receipt of MEXI 7029 at about 5:15 p.m. on November 23, 1963, saying that the Mexican Federal Police arrest Sylvia Duran, Mr. Karamessines ADDP, ordered us to phone the Mexican Federal Police and tell them not to do it. We phoned as ordered, against my wishes and also wrote a flash cable which we did not then send. Mr. Scott answered and said it was too late to call off the arrest. He emphasized that the Mexicans had known of the OSWALD involvement with Sylvia Duran through the same information. He agreed with our request that the arrest be kept secret and that no information be leaked. [CIA 36-540]

The unnamed CIA agent Thomas Karamessines spoke with recalled: "I told him it was too late, I could not reverse the request."

ANN EGERTER

Note Written by COS: At 4:20 p.m. on November 23, 1963, [written with Roman numerals] I had a call from Scelso (Washington) asking that I not do paragraph 3. (to arrest Sylvia Duran para 36 above) I told him it was too late, I cannot rescind request. I told him, in what I hope was secure language, that he already should have received a cable in which I told them that (President) here had knowledge which made this action (against Duran) so that it could be Mexican initiative. He said 'O.K.'. (Deleted.) Note: I had return call from Echevarria (at about 3:15 p.m. on November 23, 1963) saying they wanted to get 'Mujor' and he would immediately notify me. He thanked me for info on her. Signed COS [CIA 56-20]

Another CIA note regarding the arrest of Duran had this note on it in Egerter's handwriting "Echevarria said she was arrested with seven others including her husband. They were having a fiesta and Echevarria had just had a meeting with the President (Who apparently said 'Proceed' and interrogate forcefully)." [CIA 3-526]

1. Arrest of Sylvia Duran is extremely serious matter that could prejudice ODYOKE [United States] freedom of action on entire question of PBRUMEN [Cuban] responsibility. With full regard for Mexican interests, request you insure her arrest is kept absolutely secret, that no information from her is published or leaked, that all such information is cabled to us, and that the fact of her arrest and her statements are not spread to leftist or disloyal Mexican Government circles.

Thomas H. Karamessines SCELSO CWH 3 [John Moss Whitten]

ADDP RELEASING OFFICER Authenticating Officer [CIA 37-529; NARA JFK 10015-10118]

Note: The definition of ODYOKE as "the United States" and PBRUMEN as "Cuban" came from earlier versions of this document in which these words were substituted for the digraphs which appeared in the 1995 release.

John Scelso [John Moss Whitten] or Thomas Karamessines believed that if the Mexican Police tortured Sylvia Duran, the CIA - rather than Cuba - might have to take the blame for the Kennedy assassination. What could Sylvia Duran have known that would have hurt the right and benefited the left? Maybe OSWALD confided in her when they were having sexual intercourse? Maybe she had spied on OSWALD? When questioned by the SSCIA about this, on this author's suggestion, Thomas Karamessines "could not recall preparing the cable or his reasons for issuing such a message." [CIA 37-529-11.23.63; SSCIA Hearings-V5 p25] President Echevarria promised to keep the arrest secret. [CIA 70-557]

Richard Helms sent this cable to the Mexico City CIA Station:

For you private information, there distinct feeling here in all three agencies (FBI, CIA and State) that Ambassador is pushing this case too hard (see paragraph 5 of MEXI-7104 and that we could well create flap with Cubans which could have serious repercussions. Understand from Mr. Johnson that he sent State Channels telegram to Ambassador this afternoon attempting to give him better perspective on this whole problem. We hope this will be some assistance in reducing his pressures on you. [CIA 8546 11.27.63, Class. Message]

Thomas C. Mann wanted the Mexican Police to inform Sylvia Duran, "her only chance for survival is to come clean with the whole story...in return for Mexican Government protection." [CIA 128590] On November 23, 1963, the Mexican Police followed Sylvia Duran until she stopped at the home of her brother-in-law. They then arrested everyone there, including Barbara Ann Bliss, who had lived in pre-Castro Cuba for many years. Barbara Ann Bliss declared that her father, Alonzo Bliss, owned numerous Cuban sugar plantations before the revolution. Now, she lived "on $800 a month from a Washington company that administered the estate of her father" although her rent was $1,200. An Alonzo Bliss who owned valuable Washington, D.C. real estate was mentioned in a 1919 Congressional Report. Barbara admitted to the Mexican Police that "she maintains a correspondence with a Cuban who sends her information which she passes to her father." A Barbara Ann Cera, (ne Bliss); 56 died on November 21, 2002. Charles Bentley was arrested. He told the police that "He is in the process of getting a job as salesman with the Sonora Cattle Company, and that he has worked in Minneapolis as an assistant business manager. From 1954 through 1957 he served in the U.S. Marine Corps." Ruben Duran Navarro, a native of Los Angeles, was arrested. Ruben was married to Betty Serratos; he was 38 years old, and was in the process of obtaining his Mexican citizenship. Betty Serratos De Duran was a Honduran who had been residing in Mexico for ten years. She had the status of "familiar" immigrant, was 33 years old, and had taken a secretarial course in Kentucky.

SYLVIA DURAN'S RE-ARREST

On November 27, 1963, Sylvia Duran was re-arrested because she was expected to leave Mexico for Cuba. The CIA reported: "Second pickup which was made on Government of Mexico initiative, without prior consultation with Station or with PBSWING obviously evidence great desire Mexican authorities to be of service." [CIA 195-627] Richard Helms ordered the Mexico City Station to "insure that neither Sylvia Duran, nor Cubans get the impression that Americans are behind re-arrest. We want Mexican authorities to take responsibility for whole affair." This time, the Mexican Police questioned her about her ability to facilitate travel to Cuba. She claimed she had no such ability, since she "lacked contact with Cuba." [CIA 189-623, 177-618] The CIA prepared a set of questions for Sylvia Duran.

THE TELEPHONE INTERVIEW

Sylvia Duran was told that this researcher believed that she was starting employment with the CIA around the time OSWALD visited her in the Cuban Consulate in Mexico City. She was questioned about why the CIA reacted as it did to her arrest. Sylvia Duran:

That is something I do not know. The CIA can think whatever they want. This is the first time I hear that. I mean I hear a lot of nonsense, but this is the most...I mean it is completely. I was not arrested. I was holded to answer some questions. They told me it was not an arrest. Afterwards, the Cuban Government protested, I guess you could call it my arrest, and I was questioned again. I stopped working at the Cuban Consulate because my government tell me I need permission. I didn't want to apply, so I stopped work there.

PHILLIPS was asked why the CIA was concerned about the arrests of Sylvia Duran. He refused to answer: "I would like to say that with this last question, you have come to a new part of this thing. Before there were these questions that bothered me so much. Now you are asking me to analyze CIA traffic written by other people." He was asked to comment on these names: "Maria Carmen Olavarri, Maria Teresa Proenza, Barbara Ann Bliss or Horacio Duran?" He responded: "Counselor, I am not going to comment on the list of names and groups."

BIRCH O'NEAL

On November 22, 1963, CI/SIG Staffer Birch D. O'Neal cabled the Mexico City CIA Station to find out what it had on OSWALD: "Important you review all LIENVOY tapes and transcripts since September 27, 1963, to locate all material possibly pertinent to Subject ref. Dispatch soonest by special courier, staffer if necessary, full transcripts and original tapes if available all pertinent material." [CIA 40-541] According to author Paul Hoch: "On the day of the assassination, an FBI agent from the Washington Field Office [S.A. Courtland J. Jones] interviewed Birch O'Neal for the purpose of obtaining 'any information' in the CIA files on OSWALD." [Hoch Con. Dallas & Beyond p478] Birch O'Neal replied the only documents CIA possessed were those originating with the FBI and the State Department.

This was untrue. There was cable traffic from Mexico City. In July 1993 Birch D. O'Neal stated:

I've been contacted by many people who write books. I took an obligation to my government with regard to information that I had years ago. I was a close contact, I worked with JAMES ANGLETON, and I refuse to take any position about what anybody writes about him in this day and age. And I feel that anyone that was engaged in these activities during the war, or any other time, has a obligation to do the same. I can't even talk about it to my fellow employees. I have an obligation to other people that have real interests. I could die and go to hell before I will talk to anybody about it. I just don't feel anything is to be gained in our society by talking about these things and there's nothing in world wrong with JIM ANGLETON. He lived just like you do and I do.

Edward Petty was asked about Birch O'Neal: "He was, in essence, the beginning of CI/SIG. He's the fellow that keeps all the secrets." In January 1964 the FBI requested that Birch O'Neal determine whether any of the listed names, addresses or telephone numbers linked to OSWALD were connected to Soviet intelligence. Birch O'Neal assigned the task to Bruce Solie of the CIA's Office of Security. Bruce Solie was an associate of ANGLETON and William Branigan. [CIA 506-213] Bruce Solie's normal job was to investigate the evidence against suspected moles as speedily as possible.

ANGLETON AND PHILLIPS FILTER CIA INFO GOING TO WARREN COMMISSION

The matter was discussed with Mr. [03] and he subsequently advised that as a result of a conference with Mr. Helms and others in which he was directed to prepare certain materials to be passed to the Warren Commission, he was quite sure it was not the desire of the Agency to make available to the Commission at least in this manner – via the FBI – sensitive information which could relate to phone taps. Mr. Papich again raised the question on December 19, 1964 and after consultation with Mr. ANGLETON and Mr. Papich that when the Bureau of facing problems of this nature in meeting the needs of the Commission, the Bureau should not pass to the Commission information from this Agency, but should refer the Commission to the Agency for additional information. ## HOSTY'S SEPTEMBER 10, 1963 REPORT ON OSWALD

On September 10, 1963, New Orleans was made the new office of origin of the OSWALD FBI case. On September 12, 1963, the FBI in New Orleans, asked Headquarters for a characterization of Corliss Lamont. [FBI 100-10468-44 NARA FBI 124-10171-10135] On September 10, 1963, S.A. Hosty generated a report on OSWALD "Subject subscriber to The Worker while resident of Fort Worth, Texas. Subject reportedly drank to excess and beat his wife on numerous occasions. Subject presently residing and working in New Orleans, Louisiana." The two-page report of S.A. Hosty included information on OSWALD from Jesse James Garner, from Mary Bertucci of William Reilly Coffee Company, and from Mrs. Tobias. S.A. Hosty found two connections between OSWALD and the Communist Party. One was supplied by Dallas T-1 who, in September 1962, reported that OSWALD subscribed to The Worker. T-1 was a postal official. The other was Dallas confidential informant T-2, who advised on April 21, 1963, that OSWALD was in "contact with The Fair Play for Cuba Committee in New York City at which time he advised that he passed out pamphlets for The Fair Play for Cuba Committee. According to T-2, OSWALD had a placard around his neck reading 'Hands Off Cuba Viva Fidel.'" This was followed by a four page appendix that included characterizations of The Fair Play for Cuba Committee, Corliss Lamont, Emergency Civil Liberties Committee.

Evidence suggested S.A. Hosty informed Headquarters of OSWALD'S contact with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee for the first time in September 1963, rather than on June 27, 1963, when he received this information from New York City. The New York FBI Office report that stated OSWALD'S name appeared on its Fair Play for Cuba Committee mail cover was not sent to Headquarters. James Hosty claimed, "This was already known. It always goes to Headquarters. They would have a record of it. You don't know the system."

DeBRUEYS INVESTIGATION OF OSWALD

DeBRUEYS explained: "I contacted a number of people, including numerous anti-Castro Cubans, who conceivably would be aware of OSWALD'S pro-Castro activities, and when pressed for names, I suggested I may have talked to CARLOS BRINGUIER, Frank Bartes, Arnesto Rodriguez and others." Congressman Christopher Dodd (Dem.-Conn.) asked DeBRUEYS: "Did you make any effort to contact people in the New Orleans area who would have been identified with leftist tendencies, rather than the anti-Castro normally perceived rightist tendencies, in order to determine the legitimacy of his activities?" DeBRUEYS: "I probably did, but I don't recall that I did."

MARINA AND RUTH TRAVEL BACK TO TEXAS

On October 1, 1963, Mrs. Jesse Garner advised the FBI in New Orleans that on September 25, 1963, Mrs. Oswald and a young child left in a station wagon bearing

Texas license plate driven by same woman who brought Mrs. Oswald to New Orleans. "She said OSWALD left owing her 17 days rent." [FBI 105-1435-11 10.3.63]

THE YMCA OCTOBER 3, 1963

OSWALD returned to Dallas Thursday, October 3, 1963. OSWALD did not immediately contact Marina Oswald when he returned. He checked into the YMCA on that day and remained there until Friday, October 4, 1963. He gave his address as U.S. Marine Corps, El Toro, California the same base HEMMING had been stationed at. Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission about this telephone call:

Marina said that he had said that he was at the Y, staying at the Y, and had been in town a couple of days, to which she said, 'Why didn't you call right away?' in other words 'Why didn't you call right away upon getting to town?' Then he also asked whether he could come out for the weekend, and I said, yes, he could. I believe it was also said he wanted to look for work in Dallas. So then they hung up and I went grocery shopping...[When I returned LEE was at my home] which surprised me greatly because I thought he would have to take a public bus to Irving, they run very rarely if at all during the afternoon, and I thought he would have considerable difficulty getting out. I thought it would be at least supper time before he got out there. Perhaps an hour, perhaps a little less [elapsed]. [I went shopping at the grocery store about three long blocks away]. He then said that he had hitchhiked out, caught a ride with someone who brought him straight to the door, a Negro man...He said to me that he had been in Houston, and that he hadn't been able to find work there and was now going to try in Dallas.

A CIA Routing and Record Sheet dated September 24, 1963 indicated that an FBI Report dated September 10, 1963, was routed to ANGLETON subordinates Jane Roman and Stephan Roll. A CIA Routing and Record Sheet dated October 4, 1963 indicated that an FBI Report dated September 24, 1963, was routed:

ANGLETON loyalists Roll, Egerter and Roman fronted for him and put their initials on the Routing and Record sheets when the documents were going to ANGLETON. Why were the mole-catchers interested in OSWALD? Wasn't their job dig up moles? On Saturday, October 5, 1963, OSWALD was with Marina Oswald at the home of Ruth Paine, where he spent only part of the weekend.

MRS. LOVELL PENN

Mrs. Lovell Penn was a schoolteacher who thought she had seen OSWALD firing a rifle near her property shortly before the assassination. The FBI reported:

Mrs. Lovell T. Penn, Belt Line Road, Cedar Hill, Texas, telephone number CY-9-4463, advised that she and her husband live on a farm located 3.7 miles from Cedar Hill toward Grand Prairie on Belt Line Road.

On October 6, 1963, she was at home preparing six-weeks tests, as she is a teacher at Cedar Hill High School. Sometime between 1:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. on October 6, 1963, she heard someone fire a high caliber rifle in her pasture. They have cattle in this pasture, and she was concerned that the person might wound or kill some of the cattle. Her husband was also working in a field not too far from where the shooting was taking place. She got into her car and drove to where the men were. Two men were standing by a car, which was a 1957 black and white Chevrolet, bearing Texas license. The third man was standing some distance away in the field with a rifle. She could not describe this rifle, and did not know if it had a scope on it or not. She asked one of the men by the car if they had permission to hunt or shoot on the property. This man asked her what reason she had to ask such a question. She then told the man the property belonged to her, and since they had some cattle in the pasture she was afraid they might shoot them. This made the man with the rifle angry, and he walked back toward the car and made several nasty remarks which she could not recall. At the time, the man by the car she had been talking to told the man with the rifle to keep quiet. The man by the car then told her he could understand her situation. She then advised them that she was leaving, and if they did not leave she would call the police when she got to the house. She took the license number of the car and left; these three men left, and she did not call the police. After a check of the cattle revealed none of them had been shot, she threw away the license number. She cannot recall any part of this number.

Since thinking about this incident, and in view of the assassination of President Kennedy with a rifle, she has wondered if this man with the rifle was OSWALD. She saw a photograph of OSWALD in the newspaper and stated that a side view of OSWALD does not look like this person. The full face photograph, however, she believes does resemble him...She stated that the man by the car who she talked to was about 40 years of age, dark complexion, medium height and weight. She could not describe this person any further but believes she would know him if she were to see him again. She could not give any description of the other man by the car at all. The man with the rifle was a young white male or medium height and slender build.

Mrs. Penn stated that the field where the man was shooting has been plowed since the incident, and she did not feel there was any possibility that any of the shells could be located. She advised that she would return to the field where the incident took place and look carefully for any of the shells and would advise the results of this search.

Mrs. Lovell Penn was able to recover a 6.5 millimeter spent shell casing from the area. The FBI determined that it had not been fired from OSWALD'S Mannlicher-Carcano. [FBI DL-89-43 Henry J. Oliver dictated 12.2.63]

HOSTY REOPENS THE OSWALD CASE OCTOBER 1963

It was around this time that S.A. Hosty reopened OSWALD'S case in Dallas to assist the New Orleans FBI. S.A. Hosty said he checked the Dallas-Fort Worth area, but was unable to locate OSWALD.

1026 NORTH BECKLEY

On Monday, October 7, 1963, Ruth Paine drove OSWALD to the bus station, and he returned to Dallas. OSWALD did not rent an apartment and move Marina and June Oswald into it. Instead, he inquired about a room at 1026 North Beckley. There were no rooms available, so he took one elsewhere from Mary Bledsoe, paid the weekly rent of $7 in advance, and moved in on the same day. OSWALD looked for work. He went to the unemployment office and showed up for a job offer or two, which took only a few hours. There was no hard evidence that OSWALD was job hunting at this time, and the Warren Commission placed him in an environment devoid of witnesses: "He spent much of the time when he was not looking for work in his room." OSWALD distanced himself from his family. OSWALD told Ruth Paine that "as soon as he gets enough money and his new baby is old enough, he will get an apartment for his family in Dallas." [FBI 105-92555-48]

THE CANCELED FLASH

At this time the FBI was looking at OSWALD as a possible espionage agent:

The following FBI record number 327 925 D is furnished for official use only. FLASH BY BUREAU: LEE HARVEY OSWALD (maybe identical) Any information or inquiry received notify Espionage Section, Division Five, Bureau (Reference memorandum dated November 4, 1959, captioned LEE HARVEY OSWALD Internal Security - Russia). FLASH CANCELED information received October 9, 1963. [Unmarked FBI Document - Arrest record format]

After the events of November 22, 1963, the FBI was critical of this decision:

It will be noted that stop placed against the Subject in the Identification Division which was removed by (Deleted) on October 9, 1963, after Subject arrested in New Orleans for Fair Play for Cuba Committee on August 9, 1963. Geesling advised stop was placed in event Subject returned from Russia under an assumed name and was inadvertently not removed by him on September 7, 1962, when case was closed. Inspector feels Geesling in error in removing stop on Subject in Ident on October 9, 1963, particularly after arrest on August 9, 1963, for Fair Play for Cuba activity in New Orleans. We might have missed further arrests without stop identification. Geesling erred in not having additional investigation conducted when Subject returned to the United States and Geesling wrong in not having Subject placed on Security Index. [FBI Memo Gale to Tolson 12.10.63]

According to Ruth Paine, OSWALD spent the weekend of October 12, 1963, to October 13, 1963, at her home, allegedly taking a driving lesson. On Monday, October 14, 1963, Ruth Paine drove OSWALD to Dallas. He went back to 1026 North Beckley, and rented a room from landlady Mrs. Arthur Carl Johnson under the name O.H. LEE. Why did OSWALD return to 1026 North Beckley? The Warren Commission Report suggested it was because of the television and refrigerator. Evidence suggested OSWALD believed this address was a safehouse. This was the first time that OSWALD rented an apartment under a false name. Michael Paine commented,

I don't know how he was spending his time and especially before the assassination, he was particularly secretive. I wondered at the time, who does he talk to? Why he rented an apartment under a false name, and why it hit a raw nerve when my wife called him, I must confess, remain mysteries.

THE TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY

Ruth Paine testified that she was having coffee with four young mothers when she remarked that LEE OSWALD needed a job:

Jenner: Now there came an occasion, did there not, that weekend or the following weekend at which there was a discussion at least by you with some neighbors with respect to efforts to obtain employment for OSWALD?

Paine: As best as I can reconstruct it was while having coffee at my immediate neighbors, Mrs. Ed Roberts, and also present was Mrs. Bill Randle, and LEE had said over the weekend that he had gotten the last of unemployment compensation checks that were due him and that it had been smaller than the others had been, and disappointing in its smallness and he looked very discouraged when he went to look for work...And the subject that he was looking for work, and that he hadn't found work for a week, came up while we were having coffee, four young mothers at Mrs. Robert's house, and Mrs. Randle mentioned that her younger brother, Wesley Frazier thought they needed another person at the Texas School Book Depository where Wesley worked. Marina then asked me, after we had gone home, asked me if I would call the Texas School Book Depository to see if indeed there was the possibility of an opening and at her request I did telephone...I looked up the number in the book, and dialed it, was told I would need to speak to Mr. Truely who was at the warehouse. The call was transferred to Mr. Truely and I said I know of a young man whose wife was staying in my house, the wife was expecting a child, they already had a little girl, and he had been out of work for a while and was very interested in getting any employment and his name, and was there a possibility of an opening there, and Mr. Truly said he didn't know whether he had an opening, that the young man should apply himself in person. This was on Monday, October 14, 1963.

Ruth Paine had been instructed to find OSWALD a job in downtown Dallas. She was not told that it was supposed to be in building that was likely to overlook the route of the a Presidential motorcade. Ruth Paine knew that Buell Wesley Frazier, the younger brother of Linnie Mae Randle, was employed at the Texas School Book Depository. Temporary stock-boy jobs were always open there, and so it came as no surprise to Ruth Paine when Linnie Mae Randle suggested that LEE OSWALD try the Texas School Book Depository, after Paine brought up the subject of OSWALD and a job.

Gerald Posner claimed that OSWALD'S placement in the Texas School Book Depository was pure coincidence since Roy S. Truly (the superintendent of the Texas School Book Depository who died in 1988), Linnie Mae Randle, Ruth Paine, and a dozen others, would have had to have been part of the conspiracy. Ruth Paine could have placed him there alone.

On Monday, October 14, 1963, Ruth Paine called Roy Truly and secured a position for OSWALD. Marina Oswald told the HSCA: "She went to all the trouble to get the job for him." Michael Paine was asked, "Was it mere coincidence that your wife placed OSWALD in Dealey Plaza?" He responded, "That is so simple that it should not be a part of this. He lost his job at the photo lab and you've heard the story - and it's true. Ruth was discussing it over coffee with some neighbors and they thought there was a job opening at the Texas School Book Depository." He was asked, "Did she know this neighbor's son worked at the Texas School Book Depository?" He responded,

That is how come she knew. I think he had a job there, and he spread the news in that household that they might be still be looking for other employees. So Ruth took the number down that he should call and told it to OSWALD. He called and was interviewed. We were trying to get him a job to help him out. Ruth had no idea where it was. We thought it was somewhere other than Dealey Plaza. There was absolutely no input from the CIA to get him a job there. It was Ruth's idea. There might have been a conspiracy, but that was not a part of it. And we know we had no CIA connection, we didn't know the Texas School Book Depository was there. We didn't know that President Kennedy was going to come by. We had absolutely no part of it. If there was any conspiracy, it could only have been that they knew OSWALD was a Communist, and would pick on him. Hosty came around, he knew where OSWALD was working. We had no CIA contact.

It was pointed out to Michael Paine that his wife's father had CIA contact:

No, he worked for the Agency for International Development. The CIA may have used the Agency for International Development as a front for awhile, but it doesn't mean that every Agency for International Development employee is CIA. Bill Hyde was vehemently opposed to the CIA using the Agency for International Development for these purposes. Ruth was a very truthful person and she really knew Bill well enough to know where he would stand on a matter like that.

Michael Paine was again told William Hyde had CIA contact: "Sure, okay, that's possible." Ruth Paine wrote this to her mother: "Big news. LEE was accepted for a job this am. Minimum wage and nothing special about it, but he is very happy and I think things will ease for them." [FBI CV 105-7674] James Hosty was asked about Ruth Paine and the Texas School Book Depository:

At that time, no one knew the motorcade was going to pass by. That's just pure happenstance. Nobody knew there was going to be a parade until the Tuesday before. Before that they said there would be no parade. They didn't know what the route was going to be, until they knew where the luncheon was going to be. And the luncheon was not decided until that Saturday. It wasn't until Tuesday they decided to even have a parade. Remember they called off the parade in Miami the weekend before. The Secret Service picked...

The CIA's Counter-Intelligence Staff provided intelligence to the Secret Service when the President traveled abroad. [CIA DDCI Memo: The CIA Role in Support of Presidential Trips Abroad 5.31.63]

MANNER BAKERY AND THE TEXAS GYPSUM COMPANY

Linnie Mae Randle had also suggested two other jobs for OSWALD. One with the Manner Bakery, and the other with the Texas Gypsum Company. Ruth Paine told the FBI she ruled out the Manner Bakery because OSWALD could not drive a bakery truck; but she could not recall Linnie Mae Randle having suggested Texas Gypsum.

Jenner: Do you recall whether or not Mrs. Randle, as a friendly gesture - her suggestions were friendly, were they not, in connection with his securing employment?

Paine: Oh yes.

Jenner: Did she mention the Manner Bakery?

Paine: Possibly, yes. I do recall saying that LEE doesn't drive, making the point that this was a hampering thing for him. And therefore it made it impossible for him to drive a truck for the Manner Bakery.

Jenner: And in that connection, had she mentioned the Texas Gypsum Company?

Paine: I don't recall that.

Jenner: At least you do recall that it was impractical to consider possible positions which would require him to operate an automobile.

Paine: Yes, I believe I do recall a reference now to driving a truck, delivery truck.

Jenner: You have no recollection of any other suggestion as to possible places of employment?

Paine: I have no recollection of that.

During another part of her testimony before the Warren Commission Ruth Paine stated:

Jenner: You have no recollection of any other, at least two other places being suggested, and you, in turn, stating that they would be unsatisfactory, one because an automobile had to be used, or it would be necessary for LEE to have an automobile, and the other that he was lacking in the possible qualifications needed? None of that refreshes your recollection?

Paine: None of that refreshes my recollections.

OSWALD turned down a job at Love Field Airport in Dallas that paid $310 per month - for a job in the Texas School Book Depository - that paid $210 per month. The Warren Report stated

...the Texas Employment Commission attempted to refer OSWALD to an airline company which was looking for baggage and cargo handlers at a salary which was $100 a month higher than that offered by the Depository Company. The Employment Commission tried to advise OSWALD of this job at 10:30 a.m. on Wednesday, October 16, 1963. Since the records of the Commission indicate that OSWALD was then working, it seems clear that OSWALD was hired by the Depository Company before the higher paying job was available. It is unlikely that he ever learned of this second opportunity. [WR p247]

The HSCA questioned Marina Oswald about this:

Q. If he would have had another job offer at the same time for more money, can you think of any reason he might have taken the job in the Texas School Book Depository instead of another job?

A. I do believe he did like Ruth, and, since she went to all the trouble to get the job for him, I think that would have been the courteous thing to do.

Q. Do you think he would have taken a job for less money just because he liked Ruth?

A. No, it doesn't sound logical...To tell the truth we were very poor and I think a better offer of a job would probably be more likely he would take.

The Warren Commission questioned Ruth Paine:

Q. Did you ever hear anything by way of discussion or otherwise by Marina or LEE of the possibility of his having been tendered or at least suggested to him a job at Trans-Texas, as a cargo handler at $310 a month?

A. I do not recall that.

Q. This was right at the time he obtained employment at the Texas School Book Depository?

A. And he was definitely offered such a job?

Q. Well I won't say it was offered - that he might have been able to secure a job through the Texas Employment Commission as a cargo-handler at $310 a month.

A. I do recall some reference of that sort, which fell through - that there was not that possibility.

Q. Tell us what you know about that. Did you hear of it at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now would you please relate that to me?

A. I recall some reference to -

Q. How did it come about?

A. From LEE as I recall.

Q. And was it at the time or just right -

A. It was at the time, while he was yet unemployed.

Q. And about the time he obtained employment at the Texas School Book Depository.

A. It seemed to me he went into town with some hopes raised by the employment agency, I don't know - but then reported that the job had been filled and was not available to him.

Q. But that was -

A. That is my best recollection -

Q. Of his report to you and Marina.

A. Yes.

Q. But you do not recall discussing it?

A. I recall something of that nature. I do not recall the job itself.

On Tuesday, October 15, 1963 OSWALD called Marina and told her he had secured employment. On Wednesday, October 16, 1963, 35 days before the assassination, OSWALD began working at the Texas School Book Depository. The Warren Commission did not say how the Employment Commission tried to advise OSWALD of the job at Love Field. OSWALD used Ruth Paine's address and telephone number as a contact point at this time. Ruth Paine, who had been instructed to place OSWALD in downtown Dallas, never told OSWALD about the job at Love Field. OSWALD'S job at the Texas School Book Depository required less skill, and was of a lower status, then his previous jobs, in the Dallas/Fort Worth area. It involved moving book cartons. The Warren Commission: "OSWALD'S employment at the Texas School Book Depository was wholly unrelated to the President's trip to Dallas." [WR p247] The Texas School Book Depository was in the geographic area where Ruth Paine had been instructed to find OSWALD a job in by her father or sister. Ruth Paine was not a professional assassin like GERRY PATRICK HEMMING, or a professional spy like HUNT, yet it was not by accident that Ruth Paine got OSWALD a job along a likely parade route. This does not mean she was a part of any conspiracy. All it means is that someone told her to babysit OSWALD and get him a job in downtown Dallas. When OSWALD began working at the Texas School Book Depository, the conspiracy to assassinate President John F. Kennedy was well under way. OSWALD had ordered the rifle, visited the Soviet Embassy and Cuban Consulate in Mexico City and was ripe for a setup. It was not by accident that, through her father, her brother, her brother-in-law and her sister, Ruth Paine traced back to ANGLETON and ANGLETON led to HUNT, PHILLIPS et. al. On Friday, October 18, 1963, Buell Frazier drove OSWALD from the Texas School Book Depository to Irving. Since it was OSWALD'S birthday, Marina Oswald and Ruth Paine had arranged a small celebration.

HOSTY TOLD OF SOVIET CONTACT BY INS OCTOBER 18, 1963

The FBI: "A Secret, October 22, 1963, Airtel, from Dallas to the Bureau, bearing dictator initials of 'JPH' advised FBI Headquarters that S.A. Hosty received information from Immigration and Naturalization Service, Dallas, Texas, on Friday, October 18, 1963, that 'an individual, possibly identical with LEE HARVEY OSWALD, was in contact with the Soviet Embassy, Mexico City.'

S.A. Hosty explained: "Immigration and Naturalization Service, Dallas, merely advised that they were in possession of a communication indicating CIA Mexico City identified an individual possibly identical with LEE OSWALD was in contact with the Soviet Embassy, Mexico City. Because of the third agency, this write was not permitted to actually see the communication." A copy of this communication only reached Dallas after the November 22 CIA coup. [Hosty to Shanklin FBI Dallas-10461 12.6.63 also 62-109060-7959] The FBI: "On October 18, 1963, Mr. Jeff Woosley, Supervisory Clerk, INS, Dallas, advised S.A. James P. Hosty that their office was in receipt of a communication, classified 'Secret' from CIA Mexico City. This communication indicated copies were furnished to the FBI. This communication indicated that an individual, possibly identical with OSWALD, was in contact with the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City." [FBI 100-10,461-47; NARA FBI 124-10171-10138] James Hosty stated:

I found out from the Dallas Immigration and Naturalization Service that they had gotten a CIA communication. It was verbal information [I received] from the Immigration and Naturalization Service. I then wrote to FBI Headquarters, and then to New Orleans, and they sent me a copy of another CIA communication. The FBI sent the communication to New Orleans, which was the office of origin at the time. The Dallas Office did not get a copy. [FBI DL 100-10461-47; FBI Bufile 105-82555-39]

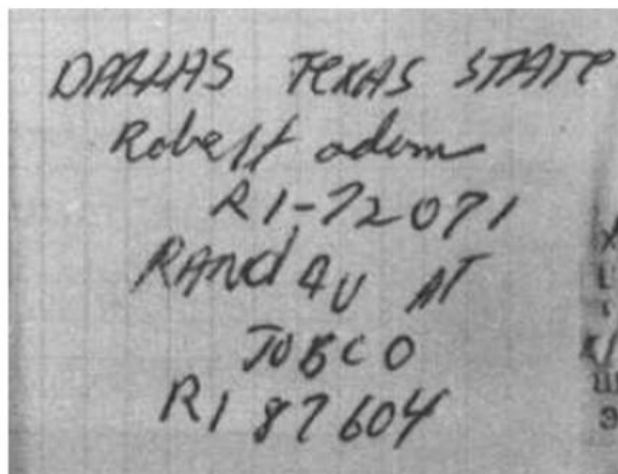

In 1978 James Hosty's attorney, Francis X. Lilly, told the FBI:

...prior to the assassination, certain information was not known to S.A. Hosty. In particular he had not been advised of the visit of OSWALD to Mexico City, and was not aware of the people to whom OSWALD spoke in Mexico City. Nor did he know the real identity of these people...this information was not made available to S.A. Hosty...and it is doubtful whether Bureau regulations would have allowed Mr. Hosty to interview OSWALD even had additional information been made available to him " [FBI Bassett/Ryan 10.4.78 re: Hosty's attorney Francis X. Lilly]

The FBI document that concerned OSWALD'S Soviet-contact was routinely channeled to S.A. Hosty. S.A. Hosty's name appeared in the appropriate place in the block stamp. After the assassination, S.A. Hosty's name was erased from the block stamp, and the serial was initialed to file by FBI Supervisor Kenneth Howe. [FBI ltr. Ryan to Bassett 10.4.78] James Hosty; "It was crossed out, not erased. That's when they were hiding things from me. They took it out of my workbox. My lawyer was confused." [Interview with A.J.W. 1993] Hosty told the Warren Commission he first became aware of OSWALD'S contact with the Soviets in Mexico City on October 25, 1963. The minute Hosty discovered that OSWALD was in touch with Soviet Intelligence he should have interviewed him immediately. He lied to the Warren Commission and told them he first became aware of OSWALD'S contacts with the Soviets on October 25, 1963 rather than October 18, 1963. He never interviewed OSWALD. On Sunday, October 20, 1963, OSWALD stayed with Ruth Paine's children, while Ruth Paine drove Marina Oswald to Parkland Hospital, where she gave birth to a second daughter, Rachel Oswald. On Monday, October 21, 1963, OSWALD visited Marina Oswald in the hospital and spent the night in Irving. Why would OSWALD assassinate the President one month after his wife had given birth to another child? Was he untroubled about the prospect of abandoning his newborn daughter?

THE NATIONAL INDIGNATION COMMITTEE MEETING

OSWALD had words Dallas Texas State and a listing for Robert Adam at the Dallas office of the Texas State Employment Agency. Next was "Randau at Jobco" On December 12, 1963, information was obtained from the Jobco Employment Agency in Dallas, Texas, concerning a "cotton picking application" for Lee H. Oswald, dated October 4, 1963. This application was submitted to the FBI Laboratory which concluded that the signature on the reverse side of the application was prepared by Lee Harvey Oswald. Ray Randuk had indeed interviewed him at Jobco and sent him to the DeVilbiss Company where he was not hired.

The number RI-8-7604 did not trace back to JOBCO or DeVilbiss, instead it traced back to McGehee Investments in the Texas Bank Building. This firm was not listed by Dunn and Bradstreet. There was no indication it existed other than a listing in the 1963 Dallas Chris-Cross Directory. I cannot locate any reference to it in an FBI document nor any investigation of this telephone number. Scott Malone stated that when OSWALD was questioned about his address book by the Dallas Police he told them that this was where he was debriefed on his return from Russia. I have never seen a document where OSWALD was questioned about his address book.

Another possibility is that McGehee Investments was an instrument of the The National Indignation Convention started in October 1961 by Dallas Garage Owner Frank McGehee, 32, to protest the training of Yugoslav pilots in Texas. The National Indignation Committee was an anticommunist umbrella group with Birchite and Walkerite ties. By February 1962 the National Indignation Committee had held 175 rallies and was tooling up a pressure campaign to force

Congress to halt all military aid to any Communist regime anywhere and to fire any government official responsible for any in the past. [Life Magazine 2.9.62 pages 110 to 129] The Convention spread across the country through supporting committees. With a keen eye peeled for "modern traitors" in government, the movement held evangelistic-like meetings at which members heard the Eisenhower and Kennedy Administrations condemned as "treasonous" along with suggestions for lynching Earl Warren. During Mr. Stevenson's speech in Dallas, protesters coughed in unison. They walked the aisles with upside-down American flags. Frank McGehee, leader of the National Indignation Committee, stood up and began shouting until police removed him. OSWALD wrote the Communist Party that, on the evening of Wednesday, October 23, 1963, he had attended a meeting sponsored by General Edwin A. Walker. [11WH425] This meeting was co-sponsored by the National Indignation Committee. Ruth Paine described the gathering on Wednesday, October 23, 1963, as a meeting of The National Indignation Committee. William Coleman and David Slawson: "Investigation has led to the conclusion that this must have been an anti-Castro meeting." [WC To: Rankin Summary of Evid. of For. Inv.] JOHN MARTINO had spoken to a group of John Birch Society members in September 1963. A member of the Dallas Chapter of Alpha-66 attended this meeting in September 1963 and informed the FBI that bumper stickers bearing the words "Kan the Kennedy Klan" had been sold there. One member of Alpha-66 changed the word "Kan" to "Kill" before pasting the bumper sticker on his car. [FBI 105-96777 6.25.64] It looks like the FBI was not into exposing the connection either between either OSWALD and McGehee or OSWALD and the Domestic Contacts Division. Edwin Steig, a DRE sympathizer reported having seen OSWALD at a DRE meeting on October 13, 1963. [WCD 205 p646 cited by Scott]

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION MEETING: OCTOBER 25, 1963

OSWALD lost touch with the White Russian exile community after he returned to Dallas. The only people known to have been associated with OSWALD at this time were the Paines. On Friday, October 25, 1963, OSWALD accompanied Michael Paine to a meeting of the American Civil Liberties Union, at Methodist University. OSWALD spoke at this meeting. He said that two days earlier he had infiltrated General Edwin Walker's meeting and General Edwin Walker and his fellow John Birchers were anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic. General Edwin Walker had been responsible for the violence directed at U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson. OSWALD associated with George DeMohrenschildt and Guy Banister, two anti-Semites. As stated, OSWALD'S believed the opposite of what he said and wrote. If OSWALD said he was against anti-Semitism, he was for it. If OSWALD said he was for communism, he was against it. Michael Paine believed OSWALD was sincere:

I didn't know DeMohrenschildt. But I should say that I had, at the time, absolutely no question in my mind that LEE described himself as Communist." Michael Paine equated OSWALD with his father: "He thought his important mission in life wasn't working, he wanted to raise a family, but that was kind of trivial. A more important activity was social change. And I accepted that, I had no quarrel with it." Michael Paine was asked if it had even crossed his mind that OSWALD was a tool of right wing forces: "No. Definitely not. He resented authority. He resented his employer at the photo company. This was not part of his cover. I wouldn't have said LEE was a powerful intellect. He said you got your directions from reading between the lines in The Worker and The Militant, and I asked him to show me how to do it. So he got out the paper, and put it across our knees, and he wasn't actually able to do it, but I accepted that as that's what he felt - I could see that. I remember the newspaper had many articles from Italy criticizing David Rockefeller. I don't know why they had such a vendetta against David Rockefeller.

OSWALD DENOUNCES FRANK KRYSSTINIK

Michael Paine brought his friend, Frank Krystinik, to the American Civil Liberties Union meeting with OSWALD. Krystinik told the FBI:

There was a question and answer period, and the presiding officer made reference to the fact that Ambassador Stevenson had been struck on the head by a sign poster at a meeting in Dallas the day before. LEE OSWALD jumped to his feet and interjected himself into the discussion by stating that General Walker was both anti-Semitic, and anti-Catholic. Krystinik, a member of the Roman Catholic faith, followed OSWALD from the room when the meeting adjourned at approximately 10:00 p.m. and began questioning him in general about the anti-Catholic allegation against General Walker. The discussion between them became rather heated, and OSWALD told Krystinik that Krystinik was a 'petty capitalist.' This apparently arose because OSWALD had learned that Krystinik had a home wood-workshop where he manufactures birdhouses and occasionally employs three men in the manufacture of these birdhouses. OSWALD told Krystinik that he was exploiting workers. Frank Krystinik asked OSWALD about his political belief, and OSWALD stated he was a Marxist. Frank Krystinik asked, "Does that mean you are a communist?" OSWALD then said, "All right, if you want to call me that, that is what I am, a Communist."

In 1964 Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission that OSWALD

I would say that he was a combination, that the man within was an introvert, preferred the company of the television set or a book, but that he could, as I have said, be a genial host or go to a meeting of the American Civil Liberties Union with my husband and I understand that he made a fairly good impression upon some of the people there...I have recently, perhaps a year ago, became [sic] on the membership committee of the Dallas ACLU Chapter. That chapter only just opened a year and a half ago.

DOCUMENTS START BEING GENERATED ABOUT OSWALD

On Friday, October 25, 1963, S.A. Milton Kaack learned from the FBI's contact at the Post Office, that when OSWALD left New Orleans, his mail was forwarded from Box 30061 to Ruth Paine in Irving. On October 25, 1963, the FBI Headquarters and Dallas were advised of OSWALD'S new address. [FBI 105-1435-13; FBI 100-10461-51 NARA 124-10171-10141] On Friday, October 25, 1963, S.A. DeBRUEYS prepared an FBI report on OSWALD and the New Orleans Fair Play for Cuba Committee. This report was generated because of OSWALD'S brush with the New Orleans Police Department. It dealt with the BRINGUIER incident, and OSWALD'S appearances on William Stuckey's radio program. It did not mention OSWALD'S change of address, although it contained information developed by S.A. Kaack, as well as a four-page appendix, and another copy of S.A. Agent Quigley's interview with OSWALD. On Friday, October 25, 1963, an index card on OSWALD was created by Plans. This card read:

OSWALD, LEE H.

SEX M DOB OCTOBER 18, 1939 100-300-011
USA NEW ORLEANS DBA-55777 OCTOBER 25, 1963 P2
CIT ?
OCC ?

USA, NEW ORLEANS 4709 MAGAZINE. MEMBER OF THE FAIR PLAY FOR CUBA COMMITTEE WITH HEADQUARTERS AT 799 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY. SEE DOCUMENT REGARDING DISTRIBUTION OF CUBAN PROPAGANDA.

On November 23, 1963, OSWALD told the FBI he lived at 4706 Magazine Street. The card contained the number 100-300-011. This was the CIA's Fair Play for Cuba Committee file. The CIA stated it contained 30 CIA-originated documents. OSWALD allegedly spent the weekend of Saturday, October 26, 1963, to Sunday, October 27, 1963, with his wife and newborn infant in Irving. JOHN MARTINO was in Dallas at this date.

HOSTY RECEIVES 3 REPORTS ON OSWALD OCTOBER 28, 1963
BUT DOES NOT LOOK AT THEM

The FBI:

Three communications relating to and setting forth some details of OSWALD'S contact with the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City, including the name of a Soviet that OSWALD contacted [Valeriy Kostikov], were block stamped into the Dallas Office on Friday, October 25, 1963, were routinely channeled to S.A. Hosty by the Desk on Monday, October 28, 1963, and were not retrieved from S.A. Hosty's personal work box until after the assassination on November 22, 1963, according to a notation on Dallas serial 100-10461-50 by Dallas Supervisor Kenneth C. Howe.

This document stated:

Re: New Orleans airtel to Dallas October 2, 1963. Enclosed for Dallas is a copy of a radiogram from Legat, Mexico City, to Bureau October 18, 1963, and a copy of Bureau cablegram to Legat, Mexico City October 22, 1963. For the information of the Bureau, New Orleans Airtel to Dallas October 2, 1963, requested Dallas to locate Subject and his wife...48-49-50 go to James P. Hosty October 28, 1963. Obtained from his box and initialed into file to complete his file following November 22, 1963 - Howe. [FBI File 100-10461]

S.A. Hosty had failed to add these documents to the other serials on OSWALD when he received it on his desk on October 28, 1963. Dallas Supervisor Kenneth C. Howe had to do it after November 22, 1963. Hosty was again staying away from OSWALD. The FBI wondered why Hosty had not glanced at these documents prior to the Kennedy assassination. The FBI:

"In short, absent mitigating circumstances, it is unusual for any Agent to claim ignorance of the contents of three communications residing in his personal workbox for approximately 26 days. "Dallas file 100-10461-48, -49, -50, and Bureau file 105-82555-42 and -43. Bureau file serial 43 corresponds to Dallas serial 48 and is classified SECRET."

Serial 48 was the CIA'S report on OSWALD'S visit to the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City, and included the name of Valeriy Kostikov, serial 49 was a summary of information that FBI Headquarters had on OSWALD. James Hosty stated that he neglected to retrieve these three documents (in addition to the October 22, 1963 Immigration and Naturalization Service document) from his personal work box until after the assassination, however, in a report dated December 6, 1963, S.A. Hosty wrote he postponed a interview with Marina Oswald "despite the information received shortly prior to that time to the effect LEE OSWALD had been in touch with the Soviet Embassy, Mexico City..." That indicated that he had looked at least one of the reports. James Hosty remarked,

[The FBI reports about OSWALD] disappeared from my workbox. They took them out of my workbox. See, the Bureau is trying to cover up the fact that they were doing the coverup. They took that stuff out of my file drawer because it referred to Valeriy Kostikov. See, I was aware he had made contact with the Embassy, but I didn't know who Valeriy Kostikov was, and anything that had his name on it, disappeared. They put it back in the file later. [FBI Dallas 100-10461-48, 49, 50]

James Hosty's explanation made no sense. S.A. Hosty was avoiding the OSWALD case by not serializing and filing "hot" reports on OSWALD. S.A. Hosty explained why OSWALD'S name had not been entered on Security Index of the FBI or furnished to the Secret Service despite OSWALD'S contact with Valeriy Kostikov, who was believed to be a KGB assassin:

Dallas was not in possession of any information indicating OSWALD had any vicious potential or capabilities [S.A. Hosty knew OSWALD beat his wife], nor any other information concerning him which would have made it appear desirable to furnish Secret Service information concerning him.

WHEN DID S.A. HOSTY LEARN THAT OSWALD WAS IN DALLAS?

FBI Serial 50 informed the Dallas FBI Office that OSWALD had returned to Dallas. S.A. Hosty should have known OSWALD was in Dallas on Monday, October 28, 1963. On Tuesday, October 29, 1963, S.A. Hosty received additional notification of OSWALD'S new address from S.A. Milton Kaack. S.A. DeBRUEYS had not furnished the address to S.A. Hosty in an earlier report. James Hosty: "I did not know OSWALD was in Dallas at this time. As far as I knew, he was in New Orleans. I was told he had returned to Dallas on Friday, November 1, 1963, when Ruth Paine told me that. I got that lead from New Orleans." [Dallas FBI 100-10461-47 Bufile 105-82555-39]. James Hosty stated: "I got the address on Tuesday, October 29, 1963, and I had to verify it and check Ruth Paine out. I went out on Friday, November 1, 1963. Two days."

HOSTY INTERVIEWS RUTH PAINE'S NEIGHBORS OCTOBER 30, 1963

The FBI: "On Wednesday, October 30, 1963, S.A. James P. Hosty, Jr. reported a pretext interview in the vicinity of 2515 West Fifth Street, Irving, Texas. Such interview revealed Marina Oswald was residing with Mrs. R. Paine, and that LEE HARVEY OSWALD visited Marina Oswald at this address, but was not living there." [WCE 834]

On Friday, November 1, 1963, OSWALD opened Post Office Box 6225 at the Dallas Post Office Terminal Annex. OSWALD listed his address as Beckley Avenue, although he gave a false house number. [WR p313] He paid the rent in advance through December 31, 1963. There was no indication in the Warren Report that the FBI authenticated the signature on the application for Post Office Box 6225 or on the change of address card that routed his mail from Post Office Box 30061 to Ruth Paine's address. [WR p312, 566]

JOHN ABT

OSWALD stated that he wanted John Abt (born May 1, 1904; died August 10, 1991) for an attorney. Abt spent most of his career as chief counsel to the Communist Party USA (CPUSA). Abt was a graduate of the University of Chicago, and from its law school. He practiced real estate and corporate law in Chicago from 1927 to 1933. He was the Chief of Litigation, Agricultural Adjustment Administration from 1933 to 1935, assistant general counsel of the Works Progress Administration in 1935, chief counsel to Senator Robert La Follette, Jr.'s Committee from 1936 to 1937 and special assistant to the United States Attorney General, 1937 and 1938. In 1948, he worked with the Progressive Party of former Vice President Henry A. Wallace. Abt was also a member of the Ware group, a covert organization of Communist Party operatives within the United States government in the 1930s which actively aided Soviet intelligence by passing on government information, as well as furnishing assistance to members of the CPUSA. Abt's sister, Marion Bachrach, was also a member of the group. After the group's founder, Harold Ware, was killed in an automobile collision in 1935, Abt married Jessica Smith, Ware's widow. The name of John Abt was mentioned by Whittaker Chambers during the Alger Hiss trial. [FBI CG 62-6115 2.20.64] Ruth Paine testified that OSWALD called her from jail to communicate:

...he wanted to ask me to call Mr. John Abt in New York for him after 6:00 p.m. He gave me a telephone number of a New York office and a New York residence...Then he called back almost immediately. I gather he had made the call to me on the permission to make a different call, and then he got specific permission from the police to make a call to me, and the call was identical...This is speculation, but the content of the second call was almost identical."

Ruth Paine was asked by this researcher whether she commented to him about the fact "that he had already just called you about the same subject matter?" Ruth Paine replied, "No." Michael Paine:

He called Ruth and wanted us to get Abt as an attorney and I was offended at that. It was a dumb thing. It illustrates his incompetence to really function in this world.

After OSWALD was killed, the home and office telephone numbers of John Abt, and the number for The Worker, were found in his pockets. [WCD 1406] OSWALD was a Nazi at heart and even if it meant him taking a fall for the Kennedy assassination he was still intent on blaming it on the Communists. Assuming that those government agencies who questioned OSWALD after his arrest on November 22, 1963, told the truth about the interrogation, OSWALD was unwilling to reveal his ties to HEMMING et. al. This might have been a result of his having been involved in illegal acts with HEMMING, dirtied up, involved in another homicide. Why did OSWALD make the same call twice? To make sure the Commies got dirtied up good.

OSWALD'S ACLU DALLAS CHAPTER

On Friday, November 1, 1963, when OSWALD rented Post Office Box 6225, he indicated that the box would be used to receive mail for the Fair Play for Cuba Committee and the American Civil Liberties Union, which he had recently joined. Under "Kind of Business" OSWALD wrote 'non-profit.' OSWALD wrote the Communist Party:

"Could you advise me as to the general view we have on the ACLU? And to what degree, if any, I should attempt to heighten its progressive tendencies?"

Louis Nichols was head of the Bar Association of Dallas. He visited OSWALD on November 23, 1963. OSWALD told him he wanted John Abt for an attorney. Abt defended numerous Communists. Nichols wrote:

He then asked me if I knew any Dallas lawyer who was a member of the American Civil Liberties Union. I told him I did not. He then stated that he was a member of the American Civil Liberties Union. I again asked him whether he desired that either I, or anyone else of the Dallas Bar Association, do anything at that time toward getting him an attorney to represent him. He stated that if he could not get the New York lawyer, or if he could not get a lawyer who was a member of the American Civil Liberties Union to represent him, and if there was an attorney in Dallas who believed as he did, and believed in the things he believed in, and believed in his innocence as much as he could, that he might call on us in the following week about getting such as lawyer.

Michael Paine was asked why OSWALD opened a post office box in the name of the American Civil Liberties Union? He answered,

I didn't know he did that and I can't begin to guess why. [Paine was mailed documents] I was surprised and confused. The last thing I heard from him was that he couldn't join the organization. The reason he couldn't, was that he really didn't approve of protecting the rights of people like General Walker to talk. Then I learned he had joined, after the assassination. Becoming a American Civil Liberties Union member, then committing a heinous crime, would sully it.

OSWALD hated the ACLU just as he hated the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. OSWALD had no affiliation with the ACLU and had no right to receive mail in the name of the ACLU. OSWALD was about to launch an operation against the ACLU. After he was arrested as a suspect in the assassination he used the opportunity to further "dirty-up" the ACLU by associating himself with it.

S.A. Hosty was determined to avoid OSWALD, however, he had to conduct a superficial investigation of OSWALD due to OSWALD'S contact with the Soviet espionage apparatus. Instead of beginning his investigation of OSWALD with a personal interview of the Subject that would have given him first hand insight into OSWALD'S personality, S.A. HOSTY interviewed Ruth Paine and Marina Oswald about LEE HARVEY OSWALD. Why did Hosty go to secondary sources when the primary source was available on weekends or at work? In 1993 HOSTY stated that he was not avoiding OSWALD:

I could not interview OSWALD since he had been in touch with the Russian Embassy. Are you aware of that? I was aware of this prior to the assassination and that put a bar on any interview. It's the rules, go check the rules. See, you're supposed to be an expert on this. Stop and think. If I went up and talked to him and said, 'Hey, why are you visiting the Russian Embassy?' wouldn't that have given away our technique? It's in the Senate Intelligence Committee Report. The damn Warren Commission, those idiots, didn't understand that. But the intelligence committee got it straight. I was following the rules. Question Headquarters. The damn Warren Commission shot off its mouth, they didn't know what the hell they were talking about, and they didn't bother to ask me why I didn't interview him. I didn't think an interview would be productive. He'd been interviewed three times unsuccessfully.

WHAT WAS THE PURPOSE OF THE INTERVIEW?

1. After the assassination Ruth Paine stated that S.A. Hosty had visited her "for the purpose of arranging an interview with OSWALD." S.A. Hosty denied this: "One of the purposes of the visit was to arrange an interview for Marina Oswald. It would appear either Mrs. Paine has been misquoted by the newspapers or she may have been confused on November 1, 1963, and thought I desired an interview with LEE OSWALD rather than Marina Oswald. This could explain the Subject's having the my name and the office telephone number in his possession. It should be noted at the time of this interview, Mrs. Paine was speaking in Russian and in English to this writer and to Marina Oswald and may have confused my request. This should be a matter of record in view of the allegations in this case." [FBI 100-1944-285A 12.3.63 to SAC]
2. James Hosty said he was trying to interview Marina Oswald: "One of the purposes of the visit was to arrange an interview for Marina Oswald. [Mrs. Paine] may have been confused on Friday, November 1, 1963, and thought I desired an interview with LEE OSWALD rather than Marina Oswald." Why was S.A. Hosty more interested in Marina Oswald than LEE HARVEY OSWALD? Marina Oswald was not a member of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. She had not visited the Soviet Embassy and Cuban Consulate in Mexico City.
3. When Hosty testified before the Warren Commission he stated: "I then told her the purpose of my visit, that I was interested in locating the whereabouts of LEE OSWALD..."

S.A. HOSTY INTERVIEWS RUTH PAINE NOVEMBER 1, 1963

On Friday, November 1, 1963, at approximately 2:30 p.m., Ruth Paine and Marina Oswald received a visit from S.A. Hosty in Irving, Texas. OSWALD was at work. S.A. Hosty said he had no information on Ruth Paine, but after a background check, he found she was "a responsible and reliable citizen." Hosty checked with Bell Helicopter and discovered Michael Paine had a security clearance. He checked with Edward T.

Oviatt, the headmaster of the St. Marks School where Ruth Paine was employed as a Russian teacher. The Paines had good credit and no criminal record. The interview with Ruth Paine lasted about 20 to 25 minutes. Ruth Paine told S.A. Hosty that Marina Oswald and her two children were living with her, and that OSWALD was in Dallas. Ruth Paine told S.A. Hosty OSWALD was living in Dallas because she did not want him at her home, although she was willing to let him visit his wife and children on weekends. Hosty "I asked her if she knew where he worked. After a moment's hesitation, she told me he worked at the Texas School Book Depository near the downtown area of Dallas. She didn't have the exact address and it is my recollection she went to the phone book, found it to be 411 Elm Street." Ruth Paine: "We did talk about the importance of Hosty not going to where he was working. I got Hosty's card and told him if you want to see LEE, he's coming out this evening. You can certainly see him here. Hosty never came." Ruth Paine had no reason to withhold this information from Hosty- she knew nothing about the Kennedy assassination plot nor the part that the Texas School Book Depository would play in it. If S.A. Hosty wanted to interview OSWALD, he could have driven to the Texas School Book Depository, or he could have returned to Irving that evening. He could have interviewed OSWALD on Saturday. He did not.

OSWALD'S HOME ADDRESS IN DALLAS

Hosty asked Ruth Paine if she knew OSWALD'S address in Dallas. Ruth Paine, who knew OSWALD'S telephone number in Dallas, indicated that she thought she could find out where OSWALD was living, and would let S.A. Hosty know. Hosty was asked by the Warren Commission if he asked Ruth Paine for OSWALD'S telephone number: "No sir, I didn't ask her about a telephone number and she didn't volunteer. She told me she did not know where he lived." Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission:

Paine: He asked me if I knew where LEE lived. I did think of these phone numbers but -

Jenner: During the course of the -

Paine: Or later.

Jenner: Of the interview?

Paine: At least between that time and the time he came again, but I have been impressed with what I have now concluded was a mistaken impression I have which effected my behavior; namely that the FBI was in possession of a great deal of information, or so I thought, and certainly would find it very easy to find out where LEE OSWALD was living. I really didn't believe they didn't know, or needed to find out from me. This is a feeling stemming from my understanding of the difficulties they faced working in a free society. I would behave quite differently now, but I have learned a lot from this particular experience.

Jenner: Did you make any effort to obtain OSWALD'S address so that you could give it to the FBI?

Paine: No. As I have testified, I really thought they had it.

Ruth Paine wrote:

I assumed [S.A. Hosty] wanted to see LEE. The FBI has to follow the activities of a good many two-bit communists, and I was certain they kept themselves informed on LEE'S whereabouts...It was the first time I had talked personally with an FBI agent and my already great respect for the agency went up. We discussed the difficulty in a free society of politely watching people with queer, possibly dangerous ideas. Unlike public opinion or a congressional committee, the FBI never even mentions an individual in public until they have evidence that will stand up in court. I never felt so proud to pay my taxes, and to live in this country as after talking with the FBI man. [WCE 460 p191]

Ruth Paine gave Hosty OSWALD'S work address. If the FBI visited OSWALD on the job it would have caused him more problems than if the FBI visited him at his rooming house. If Ruth Paine was told by a family member that OSWALD was 'alright' perhaps she believed his covert activities centered around his rooming house? Ruth Paine's story that she believed the FBI already had OSWALD'S home address in Dallas was absurd. If the FBI already had OSWALD'S address, why had S.A. Hosty asked her for it?

Ruth Paine said OSWALD told her: "He had been upset by the FBI's coming out and inquiring about him, and he felt it was interference with his family. He said to me that the FBI was inhibiting his activities...I asked whether he was worried about losing his job, and he was." Albert Jenner asked Paine: "Did he say so, Mrs. Paine?" She responded: "I recall particularly a telephone conversation with him. On one of those in which he called out to talk to Marina...I said to him if his views, not any references now to the FBI or their interest in him, but if his political views were interfering with his ability to hold a job, that might be a matter of interest to the American Civil Liberties Union, that he should, in our country, have a right to unpopular views or any other kind. This I believe was after he had been to a ACLU meeting with my husband, that meeting having been Friday, October 25, 1963." S.A. Hosty told the Warren Commission that OSWALD "had alleged that the FBI had him fired from every job he ever had. I told her this was not true...I wanted to know his place of employment for the purpose of determining whether or not he was employed in a sensitive industry, and when I found out he was working in a warehouse as a laborer, I realized that this was not a sensitive industry."

S.A. HOSTY AND MARINA OSWALD

S.A. Hosty testified that when Marina Oswald came into the room during his interview with Ruth Paine, Marina Oswald became very disturbed. According to S.A. Hosty, Ruth

Paine had to assure Marina Oswald that the FBI was not a secret police force like the KGB, and would not harm her. Ruth Paine testified that Marina Oswald had not been intimidated by S.A. Hosty:

And I can't recall certainly who brought it up, but I think Marina asked of Hosty what did he think of Castro? He said, 'Well, he reads what is printed and from the view given in the American newspapers of Castro's activities and intentions, and he certainly didn't like those intentions or actions.' And Marina subsequently expressed an opinion, but contrary, that perhaps he was not given much chance by the American press, or that the press was not entirely fair to him. This I translated.

Ruth Paine said that S.A. Hosty had also asked her if OSWALD had been active in the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. Marina Oswald told this interviewer in 1994: "I discussed nothing with Hosty. No questions. Never expressed any favorable opinions of Castro to him. I do not know what they were talking about." S.A. Hosty told the Warren Commission that he did not question Marina Oswald; instead he asked Ruth Paine to assure Marina that the FBI was not like the KGB or Gestapo. On another occasion, Hosty said he asked Marina Oswald only one question, using Ruth Paine as an interpreter; it concerned "approaches by foreign agents." He told his FBI superiors that "no interview was conducted of Mrs. Oswald because Dallas was awaiting information from New Orleans." S.A. Hosty advised them that the investigation was designed to avoid having OSWALD'S wife "gain the impression she was being harassed or hounded because of her immigrant status so that the interview, when conducted, would be as productive as possible." J. Edgar Hoover commented: "I just don't understand such solicitude." [HSCA V8 p516] James Hosty commented, "He was a horse's ass. The solicitude is referring to my not interviewing Marina. He thought that if I interviewed Marina, she would have confessed her husband was going to kill the President six months ahead. And besides, that's what the Manual said, I was just goin' by the Manual."

FBI S.A. HOSTY'S CARD

When OSWALD saw Ruth Paine that evening, she said she gave him information on S.A. Hosty. Ruth Paine said Hosty gave her his card. Hosty told the Warren Commission:

I then gave her my name and telephone number. I wrote it down on a piece of paper for her. I am fairly certain I printed it so she would be able to read it alright. I printed my name and wrote down my office telephone number, and handed it to Mrs. Paine. No address, no license number. It was my recollection it was on my paper. I took a piece of paper off, tore it in half...we don't carry cards. We are not allowed to carry cards.

Neither the card nor the slip of paper was recovered.

S.A. HOSTY'S PLATE NUMBER

On November 22, 1963, the FBI found S.A. Hosty's name, telephone number, license plate number (one digit off), and office address, in OSWALD'S address book, all written in the same ink. How did OSWALD find out S.A. Hosty's license plate number? Was it on Hosty's first visit or his second visit? Or was it from another source?

FIRST VISIT

Marina Oswald testified to the Warren Commission that while S.A. Hosty was talking with Ruth Paine during his first visit on, Friday November 1, 1963, she went outside and copied down S.A. Hosty's license plate number, as OSWALD had instructed her to do if S.A. Hosty harassed her. Marina Oswald: "LEE had asked me if an FBI agent were to call, that I note down his automobile license number, and I did that." [Marina Oswald WC Test. P48] James Hosty stated, "She snuck out and copied the plate numbers." S.A. Hosty told the Warren Commission that he parked his car down the street so that Ruth Paine's neighbors would not become aware of his presence. If this was true how could Marina have found the vehicle and copied it during Hosty's first visit?

SECOND VISIT

During his second visit to Ruth Paine on Tuesday, November 5, 1963, Hosty parked in front of the house; however, Ruth Paine testified that Marina Oswald remained in her room throughout the short interview, and that she could not have seen S.A. Hosty's car except when he pulled away. Ruth Paine told this researcher: "So far as I can recall Marina wasn't present [during the second visit from S.A. Hosty]." Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission: "To the best of my recollection I have to say to you that I cannot be absolutely certain that the blue Oldsmobile was in front of my house on that day. I don't remember for certainty. My best recollection was that it was on the street." Albert Jenner went to Ruth Paine's home and determined that if the car was parked on the street it would have been impossible for anyone inside Ruth Paine's home to have copied the plate number. Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission:

Paine: Hosty, I, and a second agent was with him, I don't know the name, stood at the door of my home and talked briefly about the address of OSWALD in Dallas. Marina was in her room feeding the baby, or busy some way. She came in just as Hosty and I were closing the conversation, and I must say we were both surprised at her entering. He then took his leave immediately. I was aware that he had parked his car out in front of my house. My best judgement is that the license plate number was not visible, however, while it was parked; not visible from my house.

Jenner: Did you see the car?

Paine: I saw the car.

Jenner: Parked?

Paine: Yes, I noticed it particularly. Because the first time he had come on November 1, 1963, he had parked down the street, and he made reference to the fact that they don't like to draw attention for the neighborhood to any interviews that they make, and in fact my neighbor also commented when she had talked with him a few days previously that his car was parked down the street and wasn't in front of my house. So I noticed the change that he had parked directly in front. But to the best of my recollection, in back of the automobile of my husband.

James Hosty told this researcher: "The car was right in the driveway and there were two license plates. She was there at the front door with Ruth Paine. She could have just looked over her shoulder and saw it." Hosty was asked by this researcher, "I thought she said she snuck out and copied it?" James Hosty stated, "Why don't you ask Marina about that?" Marina Oswald told this interviewer in 1994: It was during the second visit. [The car] wasn't at the front. Hosty doesn't remember. It doesn't mean he's lying. Yes, I copied the plate number. Anything coming from me, you don't believe it, do you?"

There is a lot of conflicting testimony regarding this notation in OSWALD'S address book. Ruth Paine testified that she did not see Marina Oswald copy the plate number on a piece of paper immediately after Hosty left nor did Marina mention anything to Ruth Paine about a plate number. Ruth Paine testified she gave OSWALD S.A. Hosty's address and phone number on Friday November 1, 1963. Marina Oswald said she gave him the license number on that same day. How could she have given him this information when S.A. Hosty's second visit had not yet occurred? Was the plate number written in the same ink as the rest of the information? Oswald obtained the number himself, and this was why the address of the FBI also appeared.

HOSTY'S NAME IN OSWALD'S ADDRESS BOOK

After the assassination, the notation in OSWALD'S address book of S.A. Hosty's name, address and license plate number led to speculation that OSWALD was an FBI informant. S.A.'s Robert Gemberling and John T. Kessler covered up the S.A. Hosty/OSWALD contact and omitted S.A. Hosty's name, address, telephone and license plate number in the early report on OSWALD'S address book that was sent to the Warren Commission. S.A. John T. Kessler admitted to the HSCA that he did it because "He did not want to cause Hosty any unnecessary unpleasantness or exposure."

OSWALD NOVEMBER 1963 HOSTY'S ALLEGED CALL TO THE SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY

The weekend after S.A. Hosty's visit, Saturday, November 2, 1963 to Sunday, November 3, 1963, OSWALD was allegedly in Irving, Texas. Marina Oswald testified that OSWALD told her he was going to the FBI "to ask them to leave you out of all these visits." [HSCA V12 p328] On Monday, November 4, 1963, S.A. Hosty allegedly telephoned the Texas School Book Depository and found that OSWALD was working there. He was given the address of Ruth Paine as OSWALD'S residence "which I knew not to be his correct address." This was what S.A. Hosty told the Warren Commission. [Hosty's WC test. p452]. It was not recorded in the OSWALD Dallas Field Office file, nor did anyone in the Texas School Book Depository remember the call. James Hosty recalled, "I did a credit verification type of pretext call. I didn't identify myself. They wouldn't have remembered it that much later. It was a routine call. It is in the file." S.A. Hosty told the Warren Commission that on Monday, November 4, 1963, he requested that Dallas again be made the office of origin for the OSWALD case. On Monday, November 4, 1963, S.A. Hosty sent a letter to the Little Rock FBI Office advising it to discontinue its investigation of OSWALD'S whereabouts. (Robert Oswald lived in Little Rock, Arkansas)

S.A. HOSTY'S SECOND VISIT TO RUTH PAINE NOVEMBER 5, 1963

On Tuesday, November 5, 1963, S.A. Hosty, and Gary S. Wilson, an FBI Agent-in-training, drove to Irving. S.A. Hosty said he stood at the door and talked briefly with Ruth Paine. She told him that OSWALD had been there that past weekend. She testified: "Agent Hosty asked me, and I am not certain which time, but more likely the second, since so far as I can recall Marina wasn't present, if I thought this was a mental problem, his words referring to LEE OSWALD. I said I couldn't understand the mental processes of anyone who could espouse the Marxist philosophy, but this was far different from saying he was mentally unstable or unable to conduct himself in normal society." S.A. Hosty said Ruth Paine told him OSWALD was "a very illogical person and that he had told her that weekend that he was a 'Trotskyite Communist. Since she did not have his address she thanked him and left.'" S.A. Hosty did nothing further with the OSWALD case.

HEMMING ON HOSTY

HEMMING told this researcher:

Oh boy. Hosty is gonna get pissed off. Don't play this for Hosty. This is your deep throat word on Hosty. Hosty, on more than one occasion, used his good offices for the Domestic Contacts Division people in dealing with the émigré community. Quite often these immigrant assholes did not want to talk to CIA, or did not want to talk to FBI. So they traded back and forth. In fact, a couple of the Domestic Contacts Division people were given the ID card with the badge to pose as FBI people questioning these emigres. Because nobody wanted an official record of a CIA operative, even Domestic Contacts Division, talking to these people. They didn't want any dangles. And they wanted to keep Hoover happy that the Bureau was handling all this shit. So Hosty did this on a fairly frequent basis. Now if he was the guy that was told by the Agency to lay-off OSWALD, it would have been a completely normal thing.

THE FBI: SOMETHING WRONG WITH HOSTY'S INVESTIGATION

S.A. Hosty was censured and put on probation for-inadequate investigation, including earlier investigation of OSWALD'S wife, delayed reporting, failure to put Subject on Security Index, and for holding the investigation in abeyance after being in receipt of information that Subject had been in contact with the Soviet Embassy, Mexico City. [HSCA V8 p519]

James Hosty: "That Security Index means you get picked-up in times of national emergency. If he was on that, it would not have prevented the assassination. Only two people were on the Index in Texas." The FBI: "Past research in the OSWALD file discloses no justification for a statement that Bureau regulations would have precluded an OSWALD interview prior to the assassination." A December 10, 1963, memo from J. H. Gale to Clyde Tolson stated in part:

His wife should have been interviewed before the assassination and investigation intensified, not held in abeyance after OSWALD contacted the Soviet Embassy in Mexico. While reference to 'investigation intensified' does not specifically state that OSWALD should have been interviewed, there is no justification for assuming that an intensified investigation would have excluded an interview of OSWALD. An Agent with Hosty's experience (Entered On Duty January 21, 1952) would be expected to conduct the interview of a security Subject without compromising classified information. Also, OSWALD had been interviewed previously by Bureau Agents on June 26, 1962, August 16, 1962 and August 10, 1963.

[FBI Memo From D. Ryan to Bassett 10.4.78] William C. Sullivan commented: "His activities as disclosed by sources and interviews did not warrant day-to-day surveillance." James Hosty:

They are damned liars. You can put that in there. It was only if I had been granted permission. CIA would have had a say so in it. Somebody in the Bureau is just trying to cover their ass.

Michael Paine:

I think Hosty was coming around and trying to be quite circumspect. He was coming around when LEE wasn't there, asking to talk to people like Ruth Paine or Marina. OSWALD didn't want to talk to the government. He didn't want to allow the government to ask him questions. He hated authority. Hosty tried to be discreet about it. He must have felt a little embarrassed. I thought he was a nice gentleman, and I'm sorry it turned out so unfortunate for him. I assume Hosty also felt that he had to do his job, but he was watching a lot of people who he didn't think were too significant. I think he didn't think LEE was significant.

On Wednesday, November 6, 1963, OSWALD charged out, from the Dallas Public Library, The Shark and the Sardines, by former President of Guatemala Juan Jose Arevalo. This book was translated by June Cobb. The book was due on November 13, 1963. The book was never returned to the library. [WCE 2642]

OSWALD'S FBI DOCUMENTS END UP WITH ANGLETON

On Thursday, November 7, 1963, J. Edgar Hoover sent S.A. Milton Kaack's October 31, 1963, New Orleans FBI report on OSWALD to the CIA. [CIA DBA-55715] J. Edgar Hoover hadn't sent the CIA anything on OSWALD since the interview in August 1962 conducted by S.A. John Fain, which had been sent in September 1962. These reports were shopped by the Records Integration Unit and CI/SIG had a look at them. CI/SIG's interest in OSWALD was understandable in 1963: it knew of OSWALD'S visit to the Soviet Embassy, Mexico City, and contact with the KGB.

On Friday, November 8, 1963, J. Edgar Hoover sent a report dated September 24, 1963, on OSWALD, to Richard Helms. The CIA received it on Tuesday, November 12, 1963. This was a New Orleans FBI Letter Head Memorandum on OSWALD'S Fair Play for Cuba Committee activities. On November 8, 1963, the FBI received a report from MEX-118. The report was received by Matthew D. Crawford Jr. in person on November 6, 1963: "Brief description of activity or material: NO INFO LOCATED RE LEE HARVEY OSWALD - Gobernacion. File Where Original is Located 134-325A Remarks NO CC - negative info. 1-105-3702 L H OSWALD (PECK)." [FBI 1053702-10; NARA FBI 124-10230-10425]

FROM CI/SIG OSWALD CAME /TO CI/SIG HE MUST RETURN

On Thursday, November 14, 1963, the CIA received S.A. Kaack's report dated October 31, 1963, on OSWALD'S activities in New Orleans. The S.A. Milton Kaack report was sent with a cover letter dated November 7, 1963. The CIA described to the HSCA the Routing of this FBI document:

It was transmitted to CIA by the FBI under a cover note dated November 8, 1963. The date stamp on the reverse of the cover sheet indicates it was logged into the Agency on November 12, 1963. The Deputy Director of Plans (DDP) Counter-Intelligence Staff liaison office received it on November 15, 1963. The report then went to DDP Special Activities Staff Counter-Intelligence Office that was then concerned with Cuban matters. The registry for the Special Activities Staff, Counter-Intelligence Office, handled the report on November 21, 1963. On November 22, 1963, the report was received by the DDP Counter-Intelligence Staff CI/SIG presumably because it concerned a former defector to the Soviet Union. Apparently it was being processed by that office when President Kennedy was assassinated. Prior to the assassination the CIA had no information concerning OSWALD'S activities in New Orleans beyond this report. [CIA 1634-1088 p3]

A CIA Routing and Record Sheet was dated November 14, 1963.

"Index" now had an X next to it. The "File Number (Primary Code) E 100-300-11" was present but was crossed out. In all of the Routing and Record sheets this researcher has examined I have never seen Officer's Initials entered with a rubber stamp. S.A. Milton Kaack's widow was contacted in August 1993. She said her husband died "a long time ago."

Before this final report, DeBRUEYS reports on OSWALD reached the CIA. S.A. DEBRUEYS report contained New Orleans Police Department report on OSWALD and part of S.A. Quigley's report on OSWALD. S.A. Quigley's interview with Frank Bartes that concerned OSWALD was absent. The only additional information in S.A.

DEBRUEYS report was interview with Jessie James Garner regarding a Fair Play for Cuba Committee meeting at Magazine Street and that "On October 7, 1963, NO T-1 advised that there is no such Post Office Box as 30016 in the New Orleans area." [WCD 692]

DIAL RYDER

The Warren Commission reported:

Ownership of a second rifle: The Commission has investigated a report that, during the first two weeks of November 1963, OSWALD has a telescopic sight mounted and sighted on a rifle at a sporting goods store in Irving, Texas. The main evidence that OSWALD had such work performed for him is an undated repair tag bearing the name "OSWALD" from the Irving Sports Shop in Irving, Texas. On November 25, 1963, Dial D. Ryder, an employee of the Irving Sports Shop, presented this tag to agents of the FBI, claiming that the tag was in his handwriting. The undated tag indicated that three holes had been drilled in an unspecified type of rifle and a telescopic sight had been mounted and the rifle bore sighted. As discussed in Chapter IV, the telescopic sight on the C2766 Mannlicher-Carcano was already mounted when shipped to OSWALD, and both Ryder and his employer, Charles W. Greener, feel certain that they never did any work on this rifle. Although this would not alter the evidence which establishes OSWALD'S ownership of the rifle used to assassinate President Kennedy, the possession of a second rifle warranted investigation because it would indicate that a possibly important part of OSWALD'S life had not been uncovered. Since all of OSWALD'S known transactions in connection with firearms after his return to the United States were undertaken under an assumed name, it seems unlikely that if he did have repairs made at the sports shop he would have used his real name. Investigation has revealed that the authenticity of the repair tag bearing OSWALD'S name is indeed subject to grave doubts. Ryder testified that he found the repair tag while cleaning his workbench on November 23, 1963. However, Ryder spoke with Greener repeatedly during the period between November 22, 1963, and November 28, 1963, and, sometime prior to November 25, 1963 he discussed with him the possibility that OSWALD had been in the store. Neither he nor Greener could remember that he had been. But despite these conversations with Greener, it is significant that Ryder never called the repair tag to his employer's attention. Greener did not learn about the tag until November 28, 1963, when he was called by TV reporters after a story appeared in the Dallas Times-Herald. The peculiarity of Ryder's silence is compounded by the fact that, when speaking to the FBI on November 25, 1963, Ryder fixed the period during which the tag had been issued as November 1, 1963, to November 14, 1963, yet, from his later testimony, that he did so on the basis that it must have occurred when Greener was on vacation, since Greener did not remember the transaction. Moreover, the FBI had been directed to the Irving Sports Shop by anonymous telephone calls received by its Dallas office and by a local television station. The anonymous male who telephoned the Bureau attributed his information to an unidentified sack boy at a specified supermarket in Irving, but investigation has failed to verify this source.

Neither Ryder, nor Greener, claimed that OSWALD had ever been a customer in the Irving Sports Shop. Neither has any recollection of either OSWALD or his Mannlicher-Carcano rifle, nor does either recall that transaction allegedly represented by the repair tag, or the person for whom the repair was supposedly made. Although Ryder stated to the FBI that he was "quite sure" that he had seen OSWALD, and that OSWALD may have been in the store at one time, when shown a photograph during his deposition, Ryder testified he knew the picture to be of OSWALD, "as pictures in the paper, but as far as seeing the guy personally, I don't think I ever have." Subsequent events also reflect on Ryder's credibility. In his deposition, Ryder emphatically denied that he talked to any reporters about this matter prior to the time a story about it appeared in the November 28, 1963, edition of the Dallas-Times Herald. Earlier, however, he told an agent of the United States Secret Service that the newspaper had misquoted him. Moreover, a reporter for the Dallas Times Herald has testified that on November 28, 1963, he called Ryder at his home and obtained from him all of the details of the alleged transaction, and his story is supported by the testimony of a second reporter who overheard one end of the telephone conversation. No other person by the name of Oswald in the Dallas-Fort Worth area has been found who had a rifle repaired at the Irving Sports Shop.

THE ORIGIN OF THE RYDER STORY

Officer F. M. Turner of the Dallas Police Department reported that on Sunday, evening, November 24, 1963, that department had received a telephone call from one Ray John of Channel Eight News, presumably in Dallas, advising that the news office had received an anonymous phone call in which the called had stated that "he (she) thought OSWALD had a rifle sighted in on Thursday, November 21, 1963, at a gun shop at 211 or 212 Irving Boulevard." Officer Turner reports that he checked, and found the Irving Sports Shop at 221 East Irving Boulevard. Officer F.M. Turner spoke to Mr. Charles Woodrow Greener, (born January 16, 1918; died May 1987), time not indicated, who said he and Dial Ryder had discussed the matter, but that neither could remember having done any work for LEE OSWALD, or remember the assassination weapon. Mr. Greener said he would check his files for names and re-contact the Dallas Police Department. Charles Woodrow Greener told Officer F.M. Turner the rifle in question had been brought in between Monday, November 4, 1963 and Friday, November 8, 1963.

After the assassination Ryder discussed the possibility that OSWALD had been in the Irving Sports Shop with his boss, Mr. Greener. He might have also discussed it with his friends, and one of them might have phoned in the tip to the television station. The fact that the caller was unable to pin point the date of the visit, and did not know the exact address of the Irving Sports Shop, supported this possibility. The reason Ryder had not discussed the repair tag with Greener, was that he did not want to get involved. When the FBI showed up on November 25, 1963, he reluctantly gave the Bureau the repair tag, but he did not tell Greener that he did this. (Greener was not there at the time). By this time the press was aware of the story, and although he denied to his boss that he spoke with the Dallas Times Herald, he in fact did grant the newspaper an interview. Ryder was afraid of losing his job if he brought adverse publicity to the store.

Gerald Posner called Dial Ryder an attention seeker who refused to be polygraphed. [Case Closed p214] Ruth Paine testified that

At no time after Marina and I and our children arrived in Irving, Texas, on September 24, 1963, from New Orleans, Louisiana, did I ever take LEE OSWALD or Marina Oswald to the Irving Sports Shop, which is located at 221 East Irving Boulevard, Irving, Texas. I was quite aware during all of this period of Marina's activities and where she was. I know of no occasion when either she, or LEE OSWALD, visited either the Furniture Mart or the Irving Sports Shop. There was no occasion during the period when Marina resided with me in the Fall of 1963, of which I was aware, or now recollect, that Marina rode either in my station wagon or any other automobile or means of conveyance with LEE OSWALD at the wheel. Neither the Irving Sports Shop, nor Mrs. Whitworth, nor Dyal Ryder, was ever mentioned in my presence by either of the OSWALDS.

GARLAND SLACK ON DIAL RYDER

Garland Slack was a witness who observed OSWALD at the Sportsdrome Rifle Range. He believed Ryder's story.

Slack: But I do know that they got the boy that worked on his rifle scope on Wednesday. That was in the middle of the week, between Sunday, November 10, 1963, and Sunday, November 17, 1963. They got his deposition because the boy, I know, put his scope on his rifle for him. No, sir; I don't know his name. Never tried to find out his name. I never talked about it, because [FBI Agents] Charlie Brown and Doc Carter asked me not to tell what I knew, and that is all. I had nothing to gain. In other words, they took it up, what they found, I never knew.

Liebler: When you mentioned this fellow that put the scope on the rifle, how do you know?

Slack: Because I read it in the newspaper about a week afterwards.

Liebler: You have no direct knowledge yourself about the scope?

Slack: No; there were so many different fellows working on the rifle range, there was possibly three or four boys who did it, and I never really connected which one it would be, because I wasn't doing any investigating anyway. See what I mean? I felt like that knowing the guy, and connecting it together, if I just kept my mouth shut, and tried to just remember seeing the fellow, there was a lot of that done. It was done in our own family.

THE GERTRUDE HUNTER AND EDITH WHITWORTH

The Warren Report stated:

Possible corroboration for Ryder's story is provided by two women, Edith Whitworth, who operates the Furniture Mart, a furniture store located about one and a half blocks from the Irving Sports Shop, and Mrs. Gertrude Hunter, a friend of Mrs. Whitworth. They testified that in early November 1963, a man who they later came to believe was OSWALD, drove up to the furniture mart in a two tone blue and white 1957 automobile, entered the store and asked about a part for a gun, presumably because of a sign that appeared in the building advertising a gunsmith shop that had formerly occupied part of the premises. When he found that he could not obtain the part, the man allegedly returned to his car and then came back into the store with a woman and two young children to look at furniture, remaining in the store for about 30 to 40 minutes.

Upon confronting Marina Oswald, both women identified her as the woman they had seen in the store on the occasion in question, although Mrs. Hunter could not identify a picture of LEE HARVEY OSWALD and Mrs. Whitworth identified some pictures of OSWALD, but not others. Mrs. Hunter purported to identify Marina Oswald by her eyes, and did not observe the fact that Marina Oswald had a front tooth missing at the time she supposedly saw her. After a through inspection of the Furniture Mart, Marina Oswald testified that she had never been on the premises before.

The circumstances surrounding the testimony of the two women are helpful in evaluating the weight to be given to their testimony, and the extent to which they lend support to Ryder's evidence. The women previously told newspaper reporters that the part for which the man was looking was a 'plunger,' which the Commission has been advised is a colloquial term used to describe a firing pin. This work was completely different from the work covered by Ryder's repair tag, and the firing pin of the assassination weapon does not appear to have been recently replaced. At the time of their depositions, neither woman was able to recall the type of work which the man wanted done.

Mrs. Whitworth related to the FBI that the man told her that the younger child with him was born on October 20, 1963, which was in fact Rachel Oswald's birthday. In her testimony before the Commission, however, Mrs. Whitworth could not state that the man had told her the child's birth date was October 20, 1963, and, in fact, expressed uncertainty about the birthday of her own grandchild, which she had previously used as a guide to remembering the birth date of the younger child in the shop. Mrs. Hunter thought that the man she and Mrs. Whitworth believed was OSWALD drove the car to and from the store; however, LEE HARVEY OSWALD apparently was not able to drive an automobile by himself, and does not appear to have access to a car.

The two women claimed that OSWALD was in the Furniture Mart on a weekday and in mid-afternoon. However, OSWALD had reported to work at the Texas School Book Depository on the dates referred to by the women and there is no evidence that he left his job during business hours. In addition, Ruth Paine has stated that she always accompanied Marina Oswald whenever Marina left the house with her children and that they never went to the Furniture Mart, either with or without LEE HARVEY OSWALD, at any time during October or November 1963. There is nothing to indicate in November the Oswalds were interested in buying furniture.

Finally, investigation has produced reason to question the credibility of Mrs. Hunter as a witness. Mrs. Hunter stated that one of the reasons she remembers the description of the car in which OSWALD supposedly drove to the furniture store was that she was awaiting the arrival of a friend from Houston, who drove a similar automobile. However, the friend from Houston had advised that in November 1963, she never visited or planned to visit Dallas, and that she told no one she intended to make sure a trip. Moreover the friend added, according to the FBI interview report, that Mrs. Hunter has a 'strange obsession for attempting to inject herself into any big event which comes to her attention' and that she is likely 'to claim some personal knowledge of any major crime which receives much publicity.' She concluded that 'the entire family is aware of these tall tales Mrs. Hunter tells and they normally pay no attention to her.' [WR 316]

The FBI reported:

The Commission requested several investigative steps to be taken to substantiate or disprove an allegation that prior to the assassination OSWALD and his wife, Marina, visited the Irving Sports Shop to have a telescopic sight mounted and sighted on a rifle. This was initially reported by an employee of the store, Dial D. Ryder, who allegedly found a repair tag with the name OSWALD on it. This allegation has been somewhat supported by Gertrude Hunter and Edith Whitworth who claimed they saw the OSWALDS [between Wednesday, November 6, 1963 and Friday, November 8, 1963,] and directed them to the sport shop. The circumstances of this whole situation indicated Ryder prepared the repair tag after the assassination. However, he is so involved he can't back out now. Then women appear mistaken in their identification as the supporting data furnished by them is not consistent with what we know of the OSWALDS' background. Current info further substantiates our findings. The enclosed communication from Houston discloses that Mrs. Hunter is known to exaggerate and has an 'obsession' to inject herself into any big event. Her family reportedly knows she has a tendency to tell tall tales. When the remaining investigation is received, the Commission will be notified. [FBI 105-82555-5298]

After the Warren Report was published, Gertrude Hunter twice told the FBI she was going to sue her sister-in-law, Doris M. Dominey, for giving the Bureau this false information.

THE ORIGINS OF THE HUNTER & WHITWORTH REPORTS

The FBI reported on July 18, 1964:

Mr. Herald advised that on November 22, 1963, he arrived in Dallas, Texas, at approximately 4:45 p.m. on an assignment from the New York Office of the Paris Match magazine to make photographs regarding the assassination of President Kennedy. He advised that approximately five days after arriving in Dallas he and Miss Jean Campbell, a correspondent for the London Evening Standard, were in Irving, Texas, to contact people regarding Mrs. Oswald. He stated that as he and Miss Campbell were driving down the street they noticed a sign that said 'Gun Shop' and decided to stop at this place to see if anyone there might know OSWALD. Upon entering the shop they found it had been converted into a used furniture store and was no longer a gun shop.

He advised they talked to a woman in the store, a Mrs. Edith Whitworth, and asked her if she knew the Oswalds. Mrs. Whitworth advised them that LEE HARVEY OSWALD was in her store on a Wednesday, or Thursday, afternoon about the first week in November 1963. Mrs. Whitworth told them that OSWALD asked for a gun part, and Mrs. Whitworth specifically named this part, calling it a plunger. Mr. Herald advised that Mrs. Whitworth then stated that OSWALD became interested in some of the furniture in this store, and a woman entered the store, whom she assumed to be OSWALD'S wife, and this woman had two children with her, one being a very young baby.

Mr. Herald stated that he recalls that Mrs. Whitworth gave a very detailed description of how OSWALD was dressed, and she also stated that the man conversed with this woman in a foreign language. Mrs. Whitworth advised Herald and Campbell that OSWALD talked of furniture, and stated that he would need some furniture for an apartment or a house in about three or four weeks.

Mr. Herald advised that Mrs. Whitworth stated OSWALD had remained in the store for approximately 20 minutes, and that when he and his wife left, they entered a 1955 blue sedan, possibly a Ford, which automobile was parked directly in front of the window of the store. He stated that Mrs.

Whitworth said that OSWALD did not bring any weapon in the store, and that she did not see him with any weapon of any kind at that time. He stated that Mrs. Whitworth advised them she had seen OSWALD on television and she was certain that he was the person who had been in her store.

Mr. Herald stated that Mrs. Whitworth advised them that there was another woman in the store at the time the Oswalds were in there, however, she did not recall the name of this woman. He advised that he and Miss Campbell, upon leaving the store, telephonically contacted this other woman, and she told them basically the same story that Mrs. Whitworth told them. Mr. Herald further advised the Mrs. Whitworth had referred OSWALD to a local sporting goods store in Irving.

Paul Matthian, a reporter for the Paris-Match, accompanied Miss Jean Campbell on an interview with Mrs. Hunter in Irving, Texas, regarding Mrs. Hunter's comments concerning the visit of the LEE HARVEY OSWALD family to the store of Mrs. Edith Whitworth, an acquaintance of Mrs. Hunter. Matthian recalled that Mrs. Hunter, in attempting to determine the date of the OSWALD visit to the store, associated the date with a particular bus trip her husband had taken, and she decided that the OSWALD visit must have occurred on either Wednesday November 6, 1963, or Thursday, November 7, 1963, a day or so subsequent to her husband's bus trip.

He advised that Mrs. Hunter stated that she devoted more attention to Marina Oswald than to LEE HARVEY OSWALD, because Marina was carrying an infant, approximately two to three weeks old, in her arms. Mrs. Hunter voiced some nice remark about the baby and recalls that Marina did not reply to Mrs. Hunter's comment. Mrs. Hunter then stated, according to Matthian, that OSWALD spoke to Marina in a foreign language, apparently apprising Marina of Mrs. Hunter's comments.

Matthian advised that he does not recall whether Mrs. Hunter mentioned exactly what it was that OSWALD needed for his gun. He also does not recall whether Mrs. Hunter stated that Mrs. Whitworth referred OSWALD to the 'Irvington Sports Shop' or merely indicated in the direction of the Irvington Sports Shop.

Matthian stated that when Mrs. Hunter remarked that the OSWALDS entered a 1957, or 1958, two tone blue and white Ford, he asked her why she remembered the type of car used by the Oswalds. He stated that Mrs. Hunter's reply was that OSWALD, operating the vehicle, made a "U" turn and was about to proceed in the wrong direction on a one way street. Matthian did not recall whether Mrs. Hunter stated that she informed OSWALD of the illegal turn, or he became aware of his error in some other way, but he does believe that Mrs. Hunter stated that OSWALD was then instructed to back the vehicle down the street toward the Irvington Sports Shop.

Either Hunter and Whitworth saw the Oswalds or they conspired to perpetrate a hoax. There was no middle ground where they thought they saw a family that resembled the Oswalds. Either Whitworth obtained the birth date of Rachel Oswald from public sources in furtherance of this hoax, or she obtained it from OSWALD. There was a one in 365 chance that she picked this date randomly. She told the FBI her grandchild was born on the same day, and that was why she remembered it. The FBI was asked to check this out. The outcome of the investigation was unclear. The FBI checked a listing which contained all female, white, legitimate, babies born in the Dallas area in on October 20, 1963, but could not locate the couple Edith Whitworth had confused the OSWALDS with: "Our investigation did not establish any of the parents whose children were born on October 20, 1963, were in Whitworth's store, and were possibly mistaken by Mrs. Whitworth for the Oswalds."

ADVANCE KNOWLEDGE OF RYDER

On November 17, 1963, one day before the article about Dial Ryder appeared in the Dallas Times Herald, Whitworth told Campbell about the visit by the OSWALD family to her store. She also told Campbell that she directed OSWALD to the Irving Sports Shop, one and half blocks from her store. At the time, only associates of Ryder and the FBI and Dallas Police knew about the repair tag. The FBI: "Our investigation indicates Ryder may have fabricated the repair tag. The only fact that lends credence to his story are the comments made by Whitworth..." [FBI 105-82555-4558; FBI 62-109060-NR 170 8.4.64] J. Lee Rankin noted: "The significance of Officer Turner's report that Greener had told him that the rifle had been brought in between November 4, 1963, to November 8, 1963, is clear when considered in connection with your report on Mrs. Edith Whitworth who said she had, on November 6, 1963, November 7, 1963, or November 8, 1963, directed LEE HARVEY OSWALD to a gun shop one and a half blocks from her used furniture store."

Mrs. Hunter said Edith Whitworth directed OSWALD to the "Irvingtown Sports Shop." There was a repair tag at that very sporting goods store with the name OSWALD on it. Was this coincidence? On December 23, 1963, Whitworth told S.A. John Gemberling her story. [FBI 62-109060 NR 12 4.30.64] Edith Whitworth said that OSWALD entered her store and asked for a rifle part, which she called 'a plunger.' The Warren Report stated that this was different than having a scope mounted and boresighted. OSWALD always had to throw in a lie, or two, when he communicated with others, and after he found out he was in the wrong place, he did not have to convey the true nature of the work he wanted done.

ANALYSIS: MARINA AND HER CHILDREN

Whitworth and Hunter said OSWALD was accompanied by Marina Oswald, June Oswald and their newly born child. Marina, June and Rachel were in Irving, Texas, at the time, not far from this store. The witnesses with opposing testimony were Marina Oswald and Ruth Paine. The Warren Commission believed Ruth and Marina. Why? Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Whitworth were not subject to deportation as Marina Oswald was. Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Whitworth did not trace back to the intelligence community as Ruth Paine did. Whitworth and Hunter said the family appeared on a weekday, during working hours. OSWALD could have slipped away from the Texas School Book Depository for a few hours.

OSWALD had stayed in the Furniture Mart for 20 minutes, then left in a 1957 or 1958 Ford, immediately making a U-turn on a one way street. Evidence presently in this data base indicates that OSWALD was in the process of learning to drive during the Fall of 1963 and was planning to take his driver's test. [FBI 62-109060-944, NR 4. 30. 64] OSWALD knew how to drive by this time.

PINPOINTING OF THE DATE BY MRS. HUNTER

The Warren Report: "Mrs. Hunter stated that one of the reasons she remembers the description of the car in which OSWALD supposedly drove to the furniture store was that she was awaiting the arrival of a friend from Houston, who drove a similar automobile. However, the friend from Houston had advised that in November 1963, she never visited or planned to visit Dallas, and that she told no one she intended to make sure a trip."

On August 11, 1964, Mrs. Gertrude Hunter, 141 South Hastings, Irving, Texas, furnished the following information to the FBI regarding the proposed trip of her relatives, "James and Doris Dommney" of Houston, Texas: "Mrs. Hunter stated that the Dommneys had not directly told her that they planned to visit her in November 1963, but that her sister-in-law and mother of Doris Dommney, one Mrs. Paterson, had written her that the Dommneys were planning to visit the Dallas area in November 1963, and would probably visit her in Irving, Texas. Mrs. Hunter stated that Mrs. Paterson died on or about June 13, 1964." Mrs. Hunter told Miss Campbell that she used her husband's but trip to pinpoint the date.

Mrs. Hunter's sister-in-law did not like Mrs. Hunter: "Mrs. Hunter has a 'strange obsession for attempting to inject herself into any big event which comes to her attention' and that she is likely 'to claim some personal knowledge of any major crime which receives much publicity.' She concluded that 'the entire family is aware of these tall tales Mrs. Hunter tells and they normally pay no attention to her.'" [WR 316] Did Mrs. Hunter have a criminal record for filing false police reports? If she had, the FBI would have certainly used this to discredit her. What other crimes had she injected herself into? What crimes had Mrs. Whitworth injected herself into? Whitworth changed her story when she testified before the Warren Commission. Had she been pressured into doing this?

The Warren Commission, on the advice of the FBI, ignored physical evidence (the tag) and eyewitness testimony (Hunter and Whitworth) and chronological synchronicity (early November 1963) and concluded OSWALD had not visited the Irving Furniture Mart and had not done business with the Irving Sports Shop. It was more logical to conclude that OSWALD went to the Irving Sport Shop from the Irving Furniture Mart that day. He was only a block and a half away. OSWALD was associated with a group of paramilitarists who were always doing something with arms, such as having sights mounted on them. OSWALD may have gone into the Irving Sporting Goods Shop to have a scope mounted on a rifle for a friend of his, a friend named GERALD PATRICK HEMMING, and had been told by HEMMING it was alright to use the name OSWALD. HEMMING knew this would leave traces that would be discovered after the assassination that indicated OSWALD was involved with weaponry. Why did the FBI have to discredit this story? The FBI was intent on not uncovering a broader conspiracy which it had overlooked. Admitting that OSWALD had access to two weapons would have complicated things, because it would have meant acknowledging OSWALD had a life the FBI was unaware of. The FBI called Ryder a liar: "Previous investigation conducted in this matter indicates the employee, Dial D. Ryder, may be lying. However, he has become so involved he apparently is sticking with his story." It was the FBI that was lying, not Ryder, Whitworth or Hunter.

LETTER TO E. HOWARD HUNT: KGB FORGERY OR THE REAL THING?
NOVEMBER 8, 1963

Nov. 8, 1963

Dear Mr Hunt,

I would like information concerning my position.

I am asking only for information
I am suggesting that we discuss the matter fully before any steps are taken by me or anyone else

Thank You,
Lee Harvey Oswald

THE FBI'S HANDWRITING ANALYSIS

In August 1975 a copy of OSWALD'S letter to HOWARD HUNT was mailed to researcher Penn Jones. It was postmarked Mexico City. After a reproduction of this letter was turned over to the FBI, Director Clarence Kelley stated: "Investigation to date has failed to produce evidence that the alleged letter was written by OSWALD." This was untrue. The Justice Department reported,

The copy of the purported OSWALD letter has been subjected by the Bureau to handwriting analysis. The results are inconclusive. The writing is sufficiently similar to known samples of OSWALD'S handwriting, that Bureau experts cannot eliminate the possibility that the letter is genuine. Neither can they say definitely that it is OSWALD'S writing." The FBI: "The photocopy...does not reproduce the handwriting on the original document with sufficient clarity of line detail for adequate handwriting comparisons or any definite determination whether that handwriting was, or was not, prepared by LEE HARVEY OSWALD, whose available genuine writings consist of a large number of documents previously submitted in this investigation. However, from such comparisons and examinations as could be made, significant similarities in letter formations were noted as well as a number of unexplained handwriting variations. In the absence of the original document...or a clear photograph of the original document it is doubtful whether OSWALD can be definitely identified ,or positively eliminated, as the writer of the questioned letter." [FBI 62-2115-760]

THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS HANDWRITING ANALYSIS

Three handwriting experts retained by the Dallas Morning News in 1977 concluded that the letter was "OSWALD'S authentic writing, written by him." OSWALD had misspelled the word "concerning" the same way once before. [Summers Conspiracy p626]

THE HSCA'S HANDWRITING ANALYSIS

The HSCA could not discredit the letter from OSWALD to HUNT. HSCA investigator Kenneth Klein questioned handwriting expert Joseph P. McNally:

Klein: At this time I would direct your attention to the document marked JFK-506, dated November 8, 1963...For the record could you read that document please.

McNally: 'N-o-v 8, 1963: Dear Mr. HUNT: I would like information concerning (concerding) my position. I am asking only for information. I am suggesting that we discuss the matter fully before any steps are taken by me or anyone else. Thank you LEE HARVEY OSWALD.

Klein: Using the blowup, will you explain why the panel could not reach a conclusion with respect to that document?

McNally: Number one, this is of course a photo reproduction. It is a peculiar type of photo reproduction...it has some of the characteristics of being a photo reproduced from a microfilm enlargement which was originally out of focus...This is an extremely good reproduction of that particular fuzzy original photo reproduction...this document itself, although the writing pattern, or the overall letter designs, are consistent with those as written on other documents, this is much more precisely and much more carefully written. There is no great deviation from the writing of OSWALD insofar as individual letter design forms are concerned...

According to Joseph P. McNally, the forger composed the text of this letter. After that he studied OSWALD'S handwriting, and did a good job of reproducing it. Upon completion, he misspelled LEE HARVEY OSWALD'S middle name when he signed it. Instead of correcting this error, he microfilmed it slightly out of focus, developed the microfilm negative, and printed it. Then he photographed that print. These last steps were unnecessary. Why didn't the forger simply photograph the original forgery? This indicated the letter was opened, microfilmed, then resealed, and sent to its original destination. Someone obtained a print made from an original microfilm negative, photographed it, and mailed it to Penn Jones. The HSCA testimony continued:

Klein: I have but one question. On balance, this HUNT letter, do you find more similarities or dissimilarities overall in the comparison to the other writings or letters, words that all seem to agree in other documents?

McNally: There are no dissimilarities in the body of this particular letter, the context, until you come down to the signature...a part of the signature agrees with OSWALD'S signature...and part of it does not agree...and for these reasons we were unable to come to any firm conclusion regarding this particular document...we are not able to accurately determine that it is specifically a forgery...

Klein: Is it in your opinion a fake?

McNally No, I am not certain on this particular document.

According to Joseph P. McNally there were no dissimilarities in the body of the letter and part of OSWALD'S signature "agreed with the signature." The HSCA focused on the one part that did not agree. The preponderance of evidence showed that OSWALD wrote the letter, and a small part indicated he did not. Shouldn't the HSCA have concluded OSWALD wrote it? Instead, the HSCA, like the FBI, said it could not come to a firm conclusion regarding it. The HSCA's handwriting experts were "not able to accurately determine that it is specifically a forgery." If something was not a forgery, it was authentic. There was no twilight zone.

Joseph McNally's statement that this letter was "much more precisely and much more carefully written" was interesting considering that the day after OSWALD wrote this letter, he wrote a letter to the Soviet Embassy, Washington, which the Warren Report stated was much more carefully written than his previous letters. OSWALD prepared two handwritten preliminary drafts: "According to Marina Oswald, OSWALD he retyped the envelope 10 times." [WR p309]

HUNT'S MEXICO CITY SAFEHOUSES

Was the letter mailed to Penn Jones by a Mexican police official? HUNT'S Mexico City address was an anti-Castro safehouse, in which the Mexican police had an interest, since anti-Castro attacks had been planned from there. During his HUNT v. ajweberman deposition, HUNT stated: "I traveled down there [Mexico] in 1960, I was there with my family until the early fall when it became apparent that the Cubans [exiles] had incurred the hostility of the Mexican Government. At that point I sent my wife and my family back to the United States..." In Give Us This Day, HUNT wrote: "In Mexico I was to be treated by the station as a separate unit responsible for all frente matters including the Mexico City delegation of the Cuban Revolutionary Front. We found a small furnished house in Lomas de Chapultepec...I established a private office, moved in a large safe and worked out operation schedules with my station contact...the delegation reported increasing harassment from Mexican officials. Finally Sam reported having been trailed to the safehouse and when I looked down from the third floor window, I could see a sloppily dressed surveillant slouched against a lamppost. A counter-surveillance team traced the man to Mexican Police Headquarters." [HUNT Day pp. 51-58]

LETTER ADDRESS

THE COVER LETTER AND THE RETURN ADDRESS

Penn Jones received a cover letter with the HUNT note:

At the end of the last year I gave Mr. Kelley, FBI Director, a letter from LEE OSWALD. It is my understanding it could have brought out certain circumstances in the Kennedy assassination. Since Mr. Kelley has not responded to that letter, I've got the right to believe something bad might happened [sic] to me, and that is why I see myself obligated to keep myself away for a short time...

This letter was originally sent to the FBI with a return address "Insurgentes, Sur No. 30, Mexico, D.F., Mexico" on it, and it bore the initials "P.S." Whoever sent it, mistakenly expected a response. Earl Goltz reported that the address was a working class apartment building in Mexico City. The FBI reported that this address "is a postal box for 'The Picadilly,' a hotel for transients in Mexico City." When the sender failed to receive a response from FBI Director Clarence Kelley, he decided to avoid the address on the letter for a short time, or had moved permanently. The letter was from someone who had experience with the heavy-handed tactics of the Mexican police. The FBI denied having received this letter: "After a check of all appropriate personnel and files, the Bureau reports it has no record or other indication of receiving this letter. FBI Agents interviewed the now retired documents analyst who would have been responsible...He has no recollection of the OSWALD letter." [DOJ File Hantman to Civiletti 6.24.77]

ANALYSIS: THE TEXT OF THE LETTER

This letter gave some idea of what really went on between HUNT and OSWALD:

November 8, 1963 I would like information concerning [sic] my position. I am asking only for information. I am suggesting that we discuss the matter fully before any steps are taken by me or anyone else.

The letter seems to place OSWALD in a plot to kill the President because of the date when it was allegedly written and this tends to discredit it, however it could be referring to another operation. The date is also significant because on November 8, 1963 OSWALD visited the Dallas FBI Office and left a note threatening to blow it up if the FBI did not stop bothering his wife. OSWALD believed he was working on behalf of the CIA and thought they should have informed the FBI that he was an Operation and told it to lay off. In the disputed note to HUNT he is also unsure of his status. Penn Jones received the letter in August 1975, the news of OSWALD threatening to bomb the FBI Office first surfaced in September 1975 so the KGB could not have chosen this date because of this, however, it was known that OSWALD visited the FBI office on this date prior to the OSWALD to HUNT letter being mailed.

Could all this uncertainty be a result of HEMMING having conned OSWALD into thinking that OSWALD worked for the CIA, and that HUNT and PHILLIPS were his Case Officers? HUNT and PHILLIPS could easily have shown him their CIA identification cards. But if HUNT and PHILLIPS were working for the CIA, and not a rogue element within that agency, why couldn't they prevent S.A. Hosty from bothering his wife? A phone call from the CIA to the FBI should have put an end to this. Just what was OSWALD'S position anyway? Was he a snitch who was not carried on the books, or was there paperwork about his undercover work at the Agency? "I am asking only for information." OSWALD was not asking for documentation. He just wanted a verbal report. "I am suggesting that we discuss the matter fully..." OSWALD was willing to discuss the matter with his Case Officer "before any steps are taken by me or anyone else." Before he or HEMMING did anything else on behalf of the Agency.

James Hosty was asked about the HUNT letter: "Well it was a forgery, and I can tell you the guy who did it. How did OSWALD sign his name? The only trouble is he signed it 'LEE HARVEY OSWALD.' He never used his middle name. He spelled his own middle name wrong." [see LEE HENRY OSWALD] Recently declassified Justice Department documents revealed that its investigation of the HUNT note focused on Nelson Bunker and H.L. Hunt. E. HOWARD HUNT was not mentioned. Internal Revenue Service informant Paul Rothermel brought the letter to the attention of the FBI coupled with allegations that the Hunts had been involved in the JFK assassination. Robert Keuch drafted a Memorandum dated January 27, 1977, which suggested various prosecutorial strategies, should a conspiracy in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy come to light, which involved the Hunts.

THE FBI'S HANDWRITING ANALYSIS

After a reproduction of this letter was turned over to the FBI, Director Clarence Kelley stated: "Investigation to date has failed to produce evidence that the alleged letter was written by OSWALD." The Justice Department reported,

The copy of the purported OSWALD letter has been subjected by the Bureau to handwriting analysis. The results are inconclusive. The writing is sufficiently similar to known samples of OSWALD'S handwriting, that Bureau experts cannot eliminate the possibility that the letter is genuine. Neither can they say definitely that it is OSWALD'S writing.

THE KGB TAKES CREDIT FOR THE HUNT LETTER

In the mid 1970's the dramatic revelations of real conspiracy in the Nixon White House and of CIA assassination plots against several foreign statesmen gave the conspiracy theorists a new lease on life. The KGB, predictably, was anxious to lose no opportunity to promote active measures which supported the increasingly popular theory that the CIA was behind Kennedy's assassination. It's chief target was the former CIA officer turned Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt. Who HAD BEEN WRONGLY ACCUSED OF BEING IN DALLAS ON THE DAY OF THE ASSASSINATION. The centerpiece of the active measure against Howard Hunt, codenamed ARLINGTON, was a forged letter to him from Oswald, allegedly written a fortnight before the assassination. The letter used phrases and expressions taken from actual letters written by Oswald during his two years in the Soviet Union, was fabricated in a clever imitation of his handwriting. The implication, clearly, was the Oswald wanted to meet Hunt before going ahead with the assassination.

Before being used the forgery was checked twice for "authenticity" by the Third Department of the KGB's OUT (operational technical) Directorate. In 1974 photographs of it were sent to the most active conspiracy buffs, together with covering letters from an anonymous wellwisher who claimed that he had given the original to the Director of the FBI Clarence Kelly, who appeared to be suppressing it. The center was doubtless disappointed that for almost two years its forgery received no publicity. In 1977 the letter was published by Penn Jones. The New York Times reported that three had authenticated the letter. Oswald's widow identified her husband's handwriting. Expert summoned by the HSCA in 1978 concluded more prudently that they were unable to reach a firm conclusion because of the absence of the original document.

[The Sword and the Shield: The Mitrokhin Archive and the Secret History of the KGB by Christopher Andrew MI-5 historian]

Neither the Justice Department, nor the FBI nor the HSCA could rule out the possibility that the letter was authentic. Did the KGB put one over on this researcher? As for Christopher Andrews statement the KGB did not believe HUNT was present on the scene of the Kennedy assassination, I wonder about its validity as a result of Andrew's anti-Communist intelligence community background. He is the official historian for British Intelligence which is closely linked to CIA and has an interest in covering up HUNT's role in the Kennedy assassination. The fact that the operation has an English name, ARLINGTON, is also suspect. This Soviet operation may never have existed. HUNT threw some light on this in American Spy:

Another reason my name has become involved with the assassination is a notorious letter that was allegedly written by Oswald on November 8, 1963, reading: Dear Mr. Hunt: I would like information concerning [sic] my position. I am asking only for information. I am suggesting that we discuss the matter fully before any steps are taken by me or anyone else. Thank-you [sic], Lee Harvey Oswald

In 1974, after my name had been exposed in Watergate, the letter was mailed by the KGB to at least three conspiracy advocates, one of whom published it in a book. Afterward, the HSCA had the document examined by a handwriting expert, who pronounced it a forgery. Most likely, it was part of a clumsy disinformation campaign by the KGB. It certainly doesn't read as if the person who wrote the letter was very conversant in English, even misspelling the word concerning. It may have been written by a person with a thick accent, spelling the word the way he pronounced it. Defecting agents have confirmed that the KGB was involved in many strange and, to us, patently ridiculous propaganda campaigns. Trying to connect the CIA with the assassination of a beloved president may certainly have been on their agenda. The forger may also have been trying to implicate another famous Hunt: H. L. Hunt of Texas fame.

HUNT told St. John Hunt, "Well it's claimed that [OSWALD and PHILLIPS] did meet and apparently there is some documentary evidence to that effect but at that time PHILLIPS was Chief of Station in Mexico City." PHILLIPS was in Washington either after OSWALD was in Mexico or just before he left. A CIA document that I cannot relocate read Philips was in Washington from (deleted) October 1963 to October 10. Tad Szulc reported that HUNT was Acting Station Chief. If the name HUNT is substituted for the name PHILLIPS the documentary evidence that HUNT is referring to might in fact be this letter.

OSWALD'S NOTE TO S.A. JAMES P. HOSTY
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1963

On Friday, November 8, 1963, the same day he wrote to HUNT, OSWALD went to FBI headquarters in Dallas and asked to speak with S.A. Hosty. Ruth Paine testified to the Warren Commission:

LEE told me he had stopped at the downtown office of the FBI, and tried to see the agents, and left a note. And my impression of it is that this notice irritated, that he left the note saying what he thought. This is reconstructing my impression of the fellows bothering him and his family and this is my impression then. I couldn't say this was specifically said to him later...I will just go on to say that I learned only a few weeks ago that he never did go into the FBI office. Of course knowing, thinking, that he had gone in, I thought that was sensible on his part. But it appears to have been another lie. Nancy L. Fenner, the secretary at Dallas FBI Field Office who spoke with OSWALD, gave the following statement to the FBI:

I, Nannie Lee Fenner, being duly sworn, hereby make the following free and voluntary statement to Assistant Director Harold N. Bassett, and the Special Agent in Charge of the Dallas Office, Theodore L. Gunderson.

Mr. Bassett advised me that information had come to the Bureau's attention indicating the possibility that LEE HARVEY OSWALD had personally appeared at the Dallas Office sometime prior to the assassination of former President Kennedy. He also advised that as a result of the information received, indications were that I was the receptionist who was present when OSWALD appeared at the office. The following, to the best of my recollection, is what occurred relative to the above.

Approximately one week or ten days prior to November 22, 1963, an individual appeared at the reception desk and asked to see S.A. HOSTY. I checked to see if he was in, and learned that he was not, and so informed this visitor. He then left a note. On the envelope there appeared the name 'S.A. HOSTY.' The envelope was not sealed, and the note was partially sticking out from the envelope. Accordingly, I pulled the note out and it said something along the following: 'Let this be a warning. I will blow up the FBI and the Dallas Police Department if you don't stop bothering my wife. Signed, LEE HARVEY OSWALD.' From photographs I saw in the newspaper, I recognized the person who delivered the above note to be LEE HARVEY OSWALD.

As best I can recall, I took the note in to the ASAC, Kyle Clark. Kyle Clark, after reading the note, stated that he was just a nut, and gave it to S.A. Hosty. Following return from Kyle Clark's office, I showed the note to Helen May and sometime shortly thereafter, when James White and Joe Pearce were near my desk, Helen May told me to show the note to them and I did so.

Sometime later in the day, S.A. HOSTY came to the office and I personally gave him the note, he read it and made some comment to the effect that OSWALD was a nut...

Nancy Fenner, contacted in August 1993, declined comment. Nancy Fenner was re-interviewed by the FBI on September 2, 1975. She stated that the statement she initially furnished on July 15, 1975, was accurate.

She categorically stated that the note which she received from OSWALD made absolutely no mention concerning President Kennedy. It is her recollection that the note was handwritten, which she described as a large scrawl, very childlike in nature. She indicated that on giving this matter additional thought she was now of the opinion that Miss Helen May may have seen OSWALD as he was departing the office after he delivered the note. It may be recalled that in Mrs. Fenner's initial statement of July 15, 1975, she advised that she had shown the note in question to Joe Pearce. On September 5, 1975, an additional statement was taken from Mrs. Fenner, and at this time she advised that it is her clear recollection that Pearce did not see the OSWALD note, but that he had the envelope and/or letter in his hand, and she is certain now that he did not read the letter. She claimed that she told Pearce that 'some nut' had left the letter and he merely picked it up and laid it down. Miss Helen Lee May was re-interviewed on September 2, 1975, and she categorically denied ever seeing OSWALD at any time, or ever seeing the note or letter which he delivered. She did recall that sometime subsequent to the assassination, Mrs. Fenner again brought up the subject of the OSWALD note, and stated that Clark (former ASAC Clark) had told her to forget about it. Miss Marian F. Roberts, the former secretary of SAC Gordon Shanklin, was interviewed on September 6, 1975, in Sun City, Arizona. She advised that she was aware that OSWALD appeared at the reception desk and left a note with a Mrs. Fenner for S.A. Hosty prior to the assassination of President Kennedy. She stated that she had never seen the note and was not aware of its contents although she had heard the letter wanted Hosty to stop harassing OSWALD'S wife. She related that she recalled entering the Dallas Office at about the same time that Helen May was entering, at approximately mid-day. To her recollection, this was a few weeks before the assassination, and she and Mrs. May saw a slender, dark haired, young man hand something to Mrs. Fenner. This was not significant to her at the time; however, following the assassination Helen May said something to her to the effect, 'You remember, Marian, we were coming into the office about the time OSWALD handed Fenner the note.' She stated that after she saw pictures of OSWALD after the assassination she can easily assume that he was the individual she saw handing something to Mrs. Fenner. She recalled that on the same day she observed this person, Mrs. Fenner told her a short time later a man had left a note for Hosty to quit bothering his wife. She said that Mrs. Fenner told her the man did not say much, but he was 'teed off' at Hosty. This, according to Mrs. Roberts, tended to further her belief that the man she and Miss May saw was OSWALD. She said, in her opinion, OSWALD'S appearance at the Dallas Office, and the note he left for Hosty, were common knowledge among Dallas Office personnel, who were there at the time of the assassination. She stated that after the assassination, she heard from an unrecalled source that it was decided to destroy the note, but she does not know who made this decision to have the note destroyed. She stated she recognized the importance of the note after she heard of the decision to destroy it.

On September 5, 1975, S.A. Joe A. Pearce was re-interviewed. He categorically denied he ever saw OSWALD, that he had ever had in his hands or in his possession any note left by OSWALD, and that he ever read any note left by him. He said that after deliberating on the matter since his prior affidavit of July 22, 1975, he recalled that there were several discussions in the latter part of the 1960's concerning a note left by OSWALD for Hosty. During some of these discussions Mrs. Fenner remarked to others in his presence that Pearce had seen the note. He admitted that he did not contradict the statement, and explains his failure to do so on his lack of appreciation of the seriousness of what she was communicating to the people involved.

S.A. Drain said he heard about the letter from Fenner. S.A. Charles T. Brown Jr. told the FBI he first heard of the note in the early part of 1964, during a conversation with S.A. Vincent Drain. When Mrs. Martha Ann Campbell heard about the note from Fenner, she brought it to the attention of her boss, Kenneth Howe. "She said that upon hearing Fenner's name, Howe made a 'face,' and Howe told her that she was not to discuss the visit or the note any more and it was emphatic enough that she followed his instruction. She said that she had enough sense to realize that something was being held back at that time but she said nothing about it."

ROBERT GEMBERLING

On August 31, 1975, Tom Johnson, publisher of the Dallas Times Herald telephonically contacted Assistant to the Director, Deputy Associate Director (Investigation) James B. Adams. Tom Johnson stated that he received an anonymous call from a female who stated:

Not everyone in Dallas knew about it, and she thinks it is unfair to leave the impression that many of the men knew about it. In case you are interested, Mr. Hosty destroyed the note on orders of Mr. Howe. Mr. Gemberling was handling the case. Mr. Bill Anderton, and Mr. Urial Horton, also know if it. Mr. Gemberling knew about the note, and saw it, but it was destroyed on the instructions of Mr. Howe...

At the time of this current inquiry, S.A. Robert Gemberling was on sick leave, having been diagnosed by his doctor on August 2, 1975, as having had a heart attack. In the absence of obtaining clearance from his physician, who was out of town, and whereabouts unknown, Gemberling was not interviewed at this time." S.A. Gemberling was out for about two months.

S.A. James Anderton said he heard about the note from Fenner. S.A. Ural Horton could not recall the circumstances when he first learned about the note. The FBI interviewed S.A. James W. Bookhout on September 2, 1975. "He advised that sometime during the investigation of the assassination case, he greeted S.A. Gemberling in the office, and asked him how it was coming. He recalled that Gemberling responded that everything was fine, and his only current problem was to decide to propriety of putting a certain OSWALD letter into the assassination report. Gemberling said it was not so much his problem as it was of S.A. Hosty. According to Bookhout, he immediately terminated the conversation, since Hosty had already received newspaper publicity in connection with the assassination. and he did not want to have any knowledge of Hosty's problems, and did not want to get involved with them.

Special Agent J.V. Almon heard of the note, possibly from Gemberling. [FBI 62-19060-7302X] Another former FBI agent, Joseph L. Schott, told the Associated Press that the note threatened the life of S.A. Hosty.

S.A. KENNETH C. HOWE

On September 8, 1975, S.A. Howe...

Advised that while he can't remember specifically why he knew the note in question was from OSWALD, he knows it was either signed by him, or OSWALD'S wife's name, Marina, was mentioned therein. He stated at that time they had a case on Marina, and he knew her to be the wife of LEE HARVEY OSWALD. He recalled that the note was on plain paper, and was either handwritten, or hand printed, and was threatening in nature either concerning some action OSWALD said he was going to take possibly against S.A. Hosty, or against the FBI Office. He said he can't remember whether he found the note before, or after, OSWALD was shot, but believes it was after. He advised that he found the note in Hosty's workbox, and considered it of sufficient import to be brought to the attention of the SAC, and took it immediately to Shanklin. He can't remember what wording he used to convey to Shanklin what he had, but knows that Shanklin was made aware by him of what he had. He recalls that Shanklin's reaction was to wave him away and say, 'Don't tell me about it. I don't want to hear, and I don't want to know anything about it.' He said from this reaction it was his impression that Shanklin had possibly heard of the existence of the note, but he does not know this to be a fact.

Continuing, Howe stated that he cannot remember whether he left the note with Shanklin, but feels that at this point one of three things had to have occurred:

(1) He left the note with Shanklin.

(2) He returned the note to Hosty's workbox.

(3) He held the note and personally gave it to Hosty. He claims that he subsequently told Hosty what had happened, but he does not recall having any discussion with him concerning it. He stated that at that stage he felt it was a matter for the SAC to resolve with Hosty, and having told them both about the matter, he took no further action. He claims that he did not subsequently discuss it with Shanklin, Hosty or anyone else. He denies instructing Hosty to destroy the letter, and denies receiving any instructions from anyone else that he should tell Hosty to destroy the letter. He said he never knew of the ultimate disposition of the letter. He claims he has no recollection of having prepared a memorandum, or having made any written record of the note.

Howe was confronted with the information furnished by his former secretary. He advised he does not recall this, nor under the circumstances as they existed at that time can he categorically deny it didn't happen. He said at the time the matter was still in the hands of the SAC, and until some adjudication by him, he felt the matter should not be discussed. He claims that if any decision was made that information concerning the note should or should not be included in a communication, he had no part in that decision.

James Hosty was re-interviewed on September 22, 1975. Hosty stated that his best recollection is that the note sent by OSWALD was in the nature of a complaint, complaining about Hosty having interviewed OSWALD'S wife. He stated that he recalls it said: 'If you have anything you want to learn about me, come talk to me directly. If you don't cease bothering my wife, I will take appropriate action and report this to proper authorities.' [Hosty: "Which he did. He reported it to the Soviet Embassy, right? It was not threatening."] Hosty did not recall a signature, and did not recall the name of Marina Oswald having been mentioned. He still maintains at the time he received the note he thought it was from a prior Subject, Jimmy George Robinson, but realizes how stupid such an assumption was on my part when advised that his interview with Robinson took place in June 1963.

OSWALD would not have threatened S.A. Hosty by saying he was going to report him to higher authority. OSWALD threatened some sort of violence in that note, yet S.A. Hosty did nothing about it. Could anyone, even S.A. James P. Hosty, be that stupid to confuse these two cases? S.A. Hosty ignored it because he believed OSWALD was part of a government operation, and was ultimately on the same side he was on.

WILLIAM C. SULLIVAN'S STATEMENT

The FBI:

He refused to sign an Interrogation; Advice of Rights form, and also refused to be placed under oath. However, upon arrival of the Inspector, he made available a three-page typed statement concerning this matter. Among other things, Mr. Sullivan, in his statement, noted that on one occasion during a conversation with Mr. Shanklin that latter mentioned that he had internal personnel problems in the OSWALD case because one of his agents (the name was not given to Sullivan or if so he had forgotten) had received, while OSWALD was alive, a threatening letter from him because of the agent's investigation of OSWALD. According to Sullivan, he raised a question as to the details, and Shanklin seemed disinclined to discuss it other than to say he was handling it as personnel problem with Mr. J. P. Mohr. He advised he did not press the matter, and they went on to other topics. Further, no mention was made of anything being destroyed. Continuing, Mr. Sullivan advised that in another later conversation, Mr. Shanklin mentioned to him that Director J. Edgar Hoover was furious at one of his agents, James Hosty, and was going to give him a transfer out of Dallas. When he inquired why, Shanklin replied that Mr. Hoover did not like the way Mr. Hosty had handled his part of the OSWALD investigation, it was then Mr. Shanklin told Sullivan that it was Hosty who had received the threatening message from OSWALD before the assassination. He stated that Shanklin did not mention that any message had been destroyed.

GORDON SHANKLIN

FBI Dallas SAC Gordon Shanklin was re-interviewed on September 25, 1975. He was allowed to review the four affidavits previously furnished by Howe, and two affidavits furnished by Hosty and the and the affidavits of Ural Horton of July 23, 1975, and of Marian F. Roberts of September 6, 1975, as well as the FD-302 concerning the interview with William Sullivan. He categorically denied having any knowledge or recollection of S.A. Kenneth C. Howe having brought the matter he mentioned to Shanklin's attention either before, or after, the assassination. He also had no independent knowledge of S.A. Hosty ever discussing OSWALD being in the FBI office, or leaving a note, or telling him to type up a memorandum and later telling him to destroy it...Concerning Sullivan's comments, Mr. Shanklin stated that he is completely at a loss to understand why any comments Sullivan made concerning their conversation regarding any note received from OSWALD. He said he did discuss the OSWALD investigation on a number of occasions with Sullivan, and certainly Hosty's name came up, particularly in connection with the allegation that OSWALD was an FBI informant. He also notes that on a number of occasions he may have discussed disciplinary action against Hosty and other Agents with Sullivan, and certainly with John P. Mohr, but categorically denied that there was any such comment made as it relates to a note. He also denies having any knowledge of a meeting which allegedly transpired for the purpose of making a decision as to whether the note should be destroyed."

The FBI reported: "Two Special Agents in Charge who were assigned to Dallas during periods covering the OSWALD investigation were censured for their overall responsibility in the matter." Gordon Shanklin died in July 1988, at age 78.

THE NOTE GOES INTO HOSTY'S WORKBOX

The note from OSWALD was put in S.A. Hosty's work box, where it joined the other documents on OSWALD. As stated, in S.A. Hosty's statement on July 17, 1975, he told the FBI that, at the time he received the note,

He thought it was from another Subject of his, one Jimmy George Robinson, a Ku Klux Klan leader from Garland, Texas, who had made a complaint to the Dallas Office of the FBI alleging his civil rights had been violated by the Garland Texas Police Department. Hosty stated that he and another agent went to Robinson's residence and not finding him at home, interviewed his wife, who gave them a completely different version of his allegation against the Garland Police Department. Her statement completely wiped out the civil rights complaint according to Hosty...Robinson was placed in jail in June 1963, for assaulting his wife. While in jail his wife allowed Garland Police Department officers to search his residence, including the area claimed to be his study. He claimed that his wife had no right to let the police search his office as it was not under her control; hence he felt his civil rights had been violated. As noted in this report, Hosty in company with another agent, interviewed Robinson's wife on June 24, 1963. She said that while still married to Robinson she left him following the assault on her person. She stated she allowed the police officers to conduct a search.

HOSTY MEETS OSWALD NOVEMBER 22, 1963

When OSWALD saw S.A. Hosty during his interrogation by the Dallas Police Department on November 22, 1963, OSWALD was angry. OSWALD became upset when he identified himself, and OSWALD accused him of having bothered his wife. S.A. Hosty quoted OSWALD as saying: "So you are Hosty. I've heard about you." All during this interview OSWALD was extremely hostile toward the FBI an uncomplimentary toward the Director and all FBI agents. At one point in the conversation, OSWALD stated 'I'm going to fix you, FBI.'" [FBI Memo from Hosty to SAC 11.29.63 100-10461-134] Captain Will Fritz, who headed the Dallas Police Department Homicide Squad, told the Warren Commission that OSWALD had said S.A. Hosty "accosted his wife on two occasions. He practically told her she would have to go back to Russia."

THE NOTE ON NOVEMBER 22, 1963

After the assassination the note was discovered by Hosty's Supervisor, S.A. Kenneth C. Howe. James Hosty explained, "That's when he came to take the Kostikov stuff out of my workbox. He was getting the stuff away from me, and that's when he found it." S.A. Hosty told the FBI in 1976:

About an hour following his interview with OSWALD, on the day of the assassination, he received a message at the police department to return to the Dallas Office. He recalled Mr. Gordon Shanklin, and Mr. Kenneth Howe, being present. They had his work box in their possession, and either Gordon Shanklin or Kenneth Howe showed him the note from OSWALD, and asked him what it was all about. He then explained his previous interview of Mrs. Paine, and OSWALD'S wife, at the Paine residence on Friday, November 1, 1963, and the vehement protest that OSWALD made to him during the interview on November 22, 1963. [James Hosty told this researcher in 1993: "They just had the note, not the work box."]

After explaining this to Mr. Shanklin, he instructed him to set forth in memorandum form the information which he had orally explained, making specific reference to the note. He stated he dictated this memorandum, as instructed, to Miss Martha Connally (now Martha Campbell), and that the memorandum was addressed to the SAC under the caption 'LEE HARVEY OSWALD aka: IS-R-CUBA.' He stated he did not have the note from OSWALD in his possession when he dictated his memorandum, it having been left with Mr. Shanklin. He said the memorandum, when typed, was an original, and there was one copy, and was possibly three or four pages in length. He said he remained in the office while Miss Connally transcribed his dictation, and when it was completed, carried the memorandum to Mr. Shanklin, and it was probably about 8:00 or 9:00 p.m. He handed this memorandum to Mr. Shanklin, and recalls no pertinent comment made at that time.

Lt. JACK REVILL

In the late afternoon of November 22, 1963, S.A. Hosty spoke with Dallas Police Lt. Jack Revill. Lt. Jack Revill testified that S.A. Hosty had said the FBI had information that OSWALD was "capable of committing this assassination." Lt. Jack Revill noted this, and his secretary testified that she prepared a report for him that afternoon. S.A. Hosty denied, under oath, making this statement to Lt. Jack Revill. He told this researcher, "Revill was a typical Texas redneck and he hated Kennedy. He wouldn't believe a Communist did it. The word 'capable' is inaccurate. I said he did do it." According to S.A. Hosty, nothing further occurred concerning the memorandum or note until Sunday, November 24, 1963. When Hosty told Revill that the FBI had information that OSWALD had violent tendencies, he was making reference to the threatening note OSWALD left for him.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE NOTE: SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1963

Nancy Fenner:

It is my recollection that I was called to work on Sunday, which would have been November 24, 1963. Sometime during my working on that date, ASIC Kyle Clark said to me 'Forget about the OSWALD letter.' At a subsequent date, while assembling a report on the assassination case, S.A. Hosty was present, and at that time I asked S.A. Hosty whatever happened to the OSWALD letter to which S.A. Hosty stated 'What letter? - -- I don't know what you are talking about.' Sometime after this, perhaps two or three days, Supervisor Kenneth Howe said, 'Nan, forget the letter.' The foregoing are the only individuals to my personal knowledge who apparently read the letter delivered to me as mentioned previously. All of the above people are either working or did work for the FBI. Other than advising my husband, I have never furnished this information to anyone either in or out of the Bureau. [Fenner 7.15.75]

According to S.A. Hosty nothing further occurred concerning his memorandum about the threatening note until Sunday, November 24, 1963. He said he was on duty in the office on that date handling various duties, when he learned that OSWALD had been shot. Approximately two hours later he met with Gordon Shanklin and Kenneth Howe: "On entering, Gordon Shanklin stated 'OSWALD is dead now. There will be no trial.' He then handed S.A. Hosty his Memorandum dated November 22, 1963, with the OSWALD note attached, and told him to get rid of it. He claimed the memorandum had not been block stamped or serialized. He tore up both copies of the memorandum, and the note, in Gordon Shanklin and Kenneth Howe's presence, and threw them in the wastepaper basket in Gordon Shanklin's office. He advised that Gordon Shanklin, then said: 'Get rid of it, get it out of here!' He said he then took the torn pieces out of the wastepaper basket, went to the men's wash room and flushed the scraps of paper down the commode. He said that no one was with him when he did this."

S.A. Hosty was asked if the fact the memo had not been block stamped or serialized indicated the FBI never intended to include it in the OSWALD file. He stated, "That's an assumption on your part. They hadn't decided what they were going to do. It was never a government record. It was never accepted into the records. It's possible they had no intention, but we don't know. We didn't do it until after he was dead."

Between 1963 and 1975, the existence of the note was kept secret by the Dallas FBI. In 1975 FBI Director Clarence Kelley stated: "The note contained no reference to Kennedy, or in any way would have forewarned of the subsequent assassination." The HSCA regarded all of this as "a serious impeachment of Gordon Shanklin and S.A. Hosty's credibility..." [HSCA R p196] S.A. Hosty stated that he had not destroyed evidence, or obstructed justice, since OSWALD was dead, and the Warren Commission had not been formed at this time.

WAS SHANKLIN TOLD TO DESTROY NOTE BY MOHR & ADAMS?

James Hosty: "I was ordered to do it. I didn't want to do it, but I was told to do it. I figured he had to know some reason." The FBI:

In the September 15, 1975, issue of Time magazine there appears an article on page 19 captioned 'The OSWALD Cover-up.' This article makes reference to OSWALD'S visit to the Dallas Office prior to the assassination and delivery of a threatening note. This article claims that FBI sources close to the investigation believe the note was more ominous than Director Kelley implied, and that the Bureau's Inspectors have learned that OSWALD specifically threatened to take action against the government. This article points out that, according to present and former FBI officials John P. Mohr, then the Bureau's administrative chief, told the Dallas agents to destroy it. Continuing, the article claims that Mohr, who retired in 1972, denies any knowledge of OSWALD'S note or its disappearance. So too do his former aides in the Administrative Division, Nicholas P. Callahan, James B. Adams and Eugene W. Walsh...On September 11, 1975, Time Magazine reporter Sandy Smith came to Bureau Headquarters to see Mr. John B. Adams. Mr. Smith had previously indicated a desire to talk with Mr. Adams. On this occasion Smith was advised that his article troubled Mr. Adams because for the first time there was an allegation that any cover-up which might have taken place could be an institutional cover-up by involvement of FBI superiors in Washington, concerning the OSWALD note. Mr. Adams noted that if Smith did not act in good faith in preparation of the article, and if he could not back it up, such might be construed as being malicious, and grounds of libel. Mr. Smith stated that he received this information from four, five or six separate officials, present or former, and he was sure the information was true...In view of the above, Mr. John P. Mohr was re-interviewed on September 12, 1975...Mr. Mohr was advised of the information which Mr. Smith had furnished, and he advised he had no intention of filing a libel suit because of the high costs involved, and the fact that he was already engaged in a suit that which may prove financially burdensome. Nevertheless, he stated that if the Government could file a suit in his behalf, he would be more than willing to appear before any body, including a grand jury, to testify to the accuracy of his prior sworn statement in which he denied having any knowledge of the OSWALD visit until it appeared in the newspapers.

In 1974 FBI Director Clarence Kelley ordered "J. Adams" to help conduct the FBI investigation of many of the allegations in Coup D'Etat in America. Circa 1975 James B. Adams testified before the SSCIA about a letter and magnetic tapes that had been sent to Martin and Coretta King by William C. Sullivan. The tape contained evidence of infidelity on the part of Martin Luther King, and the note urged that he commit suicide, "the one honorable thing left for you to do." James B. Adams testified he could find no basis for the conclusion of the staff of the SSCIA that the letter was a "suicide urging." That annoyed Senator Frank Church and he asked: "It is certainly no Christmas card, is it?" James B. Adams agreed. [Wise The American Police State 307 f.n.] FBI Director Clarence Kelley and James B. Adams questioned S.A. Hosty about the note on July 7, 1975. James Hosty stated: "James B. Adams was to low-down on the totem pole to have ordered the destruction of the note. James B. Adams never interviewed me." In July 1975 J. B. Adams of the FBI noted:

Mr. (Deleted) dictated to Mrs. Metcalf his recollection of the information furnished to him, pointing out that he did not take notes at the time the source was furnishing him the information, but later made notes. The results of this dictation are attached, along with other notes dictated during the interview with Mr. (Deleted). Mr. (Deleted) specifically requested that his identity as a source of this information be concealed and not revealed without his permission since his motives might be misunderstood (deleted) but he felt that (deleted) this unverified information at this point, which could do harm to the FBI if untrue, he would prefer to report it to us and if we could determine there was nothing of substance to the information it could be put to rest (deleted). Mr. (Deleted) was advised by FBI Director Kelley that his motives were appreciated.

Mr. Deleted's source told him

I think some information may come out which is going to blow the whole lid off this damn OSWALD case. OSWALD was mad (upset) because the Bureau had his wife under surveillance. He wanted the case Agent (who was working on Marina)...Hosty to quit harassing Marina. When he came by the FBI Offices he was looking for Hosty. He made a threat, I understand left a threatening letter.

After the assassination the letter was brought up...things really hit the ceiling. I heard they destroyed the letter. I am convinced Mr. Hoover and

Mr. Shanklin were never told about OSWALD coming by...There were at most five or six, maybe even seven, a secretary who is now in New England...Hosty and his supervisor Ken Howe. The secretary said something about it to a friend. The major thing that was wrong, we didn't notify other agencies...the police and Secret Service of OSWALD'S visit. There are so many people who have come in, letters have come in, somebody could have put it aside...didn't make much of it. That changed the whole course of history.

OSWALD was very upset. He wanted Hosty to stop harassing her. He threatened Hosty. Nobody did the follow up on this. That's where it went wrong. [FBI 62-109060-7226X 7.14.75]

After he dropped off the note, OSWALD went to Irving for the weekend. He told Ruth Paine and Marina Oswald that he had "visited the FBI office or building and told them to stop the harassment." Marina Oswald told the Warren Commission she thought this was bravado. [FBI 62-109060-7193, 62-109060-7302X, 7226X, 7314X, 7314; Anson Kill Pres. p85; WR p364; 11 WH 367] Marina Oswald HSCA testimony contained this excerpt:

Q. Are you aware that a short time before the assassination, LEE HARVEY OSWALD delivered a note to the FBI Office in Dallas addressed to agent Hosty?

A. When I heard this on the news, I was surprised.

Q. When you heard it on the news, was this the first time you knew anything about it?

A. That was news to me that a note like that ever existed. I had my doubts, because knowing a little bit of LEE'S personality and my knowledge he had been annoyed by the FBI and wanted to be left alone, I wondered if he would go - I don't know the right word for it - and threaten somebody with a note. The content of the note I found out through the news media. I seriously doubt-

Q. Forgetting what the news media said the content of the note was, you had no indication from him that he has ever written a note to them?

A. I do not remember that. He slightly mentioned something. I do not recall at all because I was surprised when I heard it on the news. It didn't bring any memories, like, well, I forgot. Lee said, "Well I am going" - he mentioned he was going to talk to them and tell them to stop harassing him, that is true, but I don't recall that he mentioned anything about the note...He said he was going to ask them to leave me out of all these visits. [HSCA Test. P328]

In 1994 Marina Oswald told this researcher: "I knew nothing about it. That's what they [the Warren Commission] say. I don't know." In 1975 the FBI questioned former Special Agent Bardwell Odum about the note.

He advised that until he read recent newspaper publicity he had never heard any reference made to a note left by OSWALD for Hosty, or that OSWALD had ever been in the Dallas Office of the FBI...Odum stated he did not make any statement to Mr. Hosty at any time that Mr. Shanklin had ever said anything to Mr. Odum about destroying anything or telling Hosty or anyone else to destroy anything. He stated that any statement by an FBI Agent pertaining to the destruction of anything which might be considered evidence would be a matter which would be so unusual, that he would not forget it. Moreover, Odum advised that he does not recall ever specifically being sent by Mr. Shanklin to interview Mrs. Paine, except on one occasion when Mr. Shanklin stated go back out there and be sure we don't miss anything. As to interviewing Mrs. Paine on a late Saturday evening or early morning hours of the following day, he does not recall making a visit to Mrs. Paine's house at 'such an ungodly hour.'

Bardwell Odum went on to state that, approximately three weeks before this FBI interview, he had received a telephone call from Ruth Paine, who had asked him about the note. Bardwell Odum commented to this researcher in 1993, "I don't remember the call from Paine. They retired me from the FBI in 1968 and by 1975, when I was questioned, I told them, 'Unless Hosty says there was a note, I did not believe it. I want something besides Nancy Fenner's statement.' Well you know, Hosty took the assassination very personally. He was a good Catholic, and Kennedy was the first Catholic President. The case on OSWALD was assigned to Hosty. I talked to him almost daily after the assassination. He never mentioned the note. That's a historic document. He's a guy that's aware of historical significance. If he had one like that, I can't see him destroying it. The only letter that I can remember is a note that OSWALD left in a Russian cookbook, the Secret Service found it. They gave it to us. It pertained to the Walker thing. That's the only note I can remember getting from Ruth Paine. I don't even remember ever seeing that letter, and right now I can't remember even hearing about it. It must have been somebody else who got that from Ruth Paine. The FBI report is not right. I sure don't remember. I was working around the clock and not sleeping much. If I got the letter, all I did was deliver it to Hosty or something, because I don't remember anything about it. I wasn't in on that conversation. I didn't anything know about it. Hosty never told me anything about it. This is the first time I heard about it." James Hosty said that he and Bardwell Odum each submitted their copy of the letter as a Warren Commission Exhibit. Gordon Shanklin thought S.A.'s Odum and Hosty had discovered another threatening note from OSWALD and began to freak out. His first thought was to destroy another important piece of evidence.

HOSTY: DESTRUCTION OF OTHER EVIDENCE

S.A. Hosty told the Warren Commission:

Hosty: This is an interview form which I made for my interview with OSWALD on November 22, 1963. It was dictated, as the form will indicate, on November 23, 1963.

Stern: Let me ask you there Mr. Hosty, about your practice in reducing to formal form your notes of interviews. This happened the next day?

Hosty: Right.

Stern: Is that faster than usual because of the circumstances?

Hosty: Because of the circumstances. We have to reduce them to writing within five days.

Stern: In five days?

Hosty: Five working days.

Stern: Did you retain the notes of this?

Hosty: My notes are then destroyed because this is the record.

Stern: And in this particular instance did you destroy your notes of this?

Hosty: Yes, sir.

Stern: Now you say that you are required to reduce your notes of an interview to writing within five working days.

Hosty: Right.

Stern: Did that happen with respect to the interviews you conducted on October 29, 1963, November 1, 1963, and November 5, 1963.

Hosty: To make this a littler clearer, this would be an interview of a Subject, not of a witness, unless this witness has something that was quite pertinent to the investigation. Routine type matters do not have to be put on these interview forms, but pertinent interviews would be. Now everything in this case after the assassination was declared to be pertinent. All interviews, regardless of how insignificant, were to be put on these forms.

Stern: But the interviews you conducted at the beginning of November, and the end of October, were not within this rule?

Hosty: No; because they were not an interview of the Subject or anything that contained anything of major importance.

Stern: Do you, yourself destroy the notes?

Hosty: Yes.

Stern: Do you recall specifically destroying the notes of your interview?

Hosty: Yes sir; in the waste basket.

Stern: Your interview of OSWALD on November 22, 1963, you put the notes in the waste basket?

Hosty: Right.

Stern: Do you recall specifically what you did with the notes of your interviews of October 29, 1963, November 1, 1963, and November 5, 1963?

Hosty: After I reduced them to writing, such as I did here, and I got the form back, I proofread it, then I threw them away.

Stern: And you testified that the notes of your end of October - early November interviews were transcribed after November 22, 1963.

Hosty: Yes.

Stern: Did you give any consideration to retaining the notes in view of the turn the case had taken?

Hosty: No.

Stern: The intervening assassination?

Hosty: No because this is the record and the notes would not be as good as this record, because the notes are not written out fully as this is. It would just be abbreviations and things of that type.

Stern: And you received no instructions about retaining these notes?

Hosty: No; we had no instructions. We were following the same rule we always had.

OSWALD'S OVER-REACTION TO HOSTY'S VISITS

OSWALD was angry with S.A. Hosty because he felt S.A. Hosty knew of OSWALD'S connection to the CIA. OSWALD did not want his family involved in his clandestine activities. He did not see his mother from October 8, 1962, to November 23, 1963. OSWALD could have taken his pregnant wife and child to Mexico City, and had Marina Oswald apply for a visa to the Soviet Union with him. It would have been highly effective, but even a deep-cover operative like OSWALD drew the line somewhere. James Hosty told this researcher:

Now wait a minute, don't forget this. Marina Oswald knew about his attempt on General Walker. If he was any kind of a KGB plant, she would have also known that too. Maybe he didn't want me talking to her for fear she'd slip up and say something implicating him. That's what he was worried about.

S.A. Hosty, however, was not Russian-speaking and would have had to have used Ruth Paine as an interpreter. Ruth Paine believed the reason OSWALD reacted in this fashion was because,

I told OSWALD, 'You've been to Russia, you've come back so they're going to try to keep track of what you are doing. Don't worry about it. If you have legitimate things you want to say, this is a free country, you talk.' But it is quite different if he was also shooting at people. I can imagine he would be pretty nervous if he knew he had done criminal activity. They might figure out the Walker shooting or something. That's the only thing I can think of. But who knows? He had a fairly strange mind, and it was hard to say what was going on.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1963: OSWALD'S LETTER TO SOV EMB FIRST DRAFT

This is to inform you of events since my interview with comrade Kostine in the Embassy of the Soviet Union, Mexico City, Mexico. I was unable to remain in Mexico City ~~because I considered useless~~ indefinitely because of my ~~visa~~ Mexican visa restrictions which was for 15 days only. ~~I had a~~ I could not take a chance on applying for an extension unless I used my real name so I returned to the U.S.

SECOND DRAFT

This is to inform you of recent events since my meeting with comrade Kostin in the Embassy of the Soviet Union, Mexico City, Mexico. I was unable to remain in Mexico City indefinitely because of my Mexican visa restrictions which was for 15 days only. I could not take a chance on requesting a visa unless I used my real name, so I returned to the United States.

OSWALD admitted that he deliberately used a false name. The Warren Commission: "The fact is that he did use his real name for his Tourist Card, and in all the dealings with the Cuban Embassy, the Russian Embassy and elsewhere. OSWALD did use the name of [HARVEY OSWALD LEE] on the trip but he did so only sporadically and probably as the result of a clerical error." OSWALD'S Tourist Card would not have expired for another week. He could have remained in Mexico City and made more attempts to secure a visa, only he considered it useless to do so.

FIRST DRAFT

~~It was unfortun that the Soviet Embassy was unable to aid me in Mexico City but I had not planned to contact the Mexico City Embassy at all so of course they were unprepared for me. Had I been able to reach Havana as planned I could have contacted the Soviet Embassy there for the completion of would have been able to help me get the necessary documents I required assist me would have had time to assist me, but of course the stuip Cuban consulate was at fault here. I am glad he has since been replaced by another.~~

SECOND DRAFT

The final draft read:

I had not planned to contact the Soviet embassy in Mexico City so they were unprepared, had I been able to reach the Soviet Embassy in Havana as planned, the Embassy there would have had time to complete our business. Of corse the Soviet embassy was not at fault, they were, as I said, unprepared, the Cuban Consulate was guilty of a gross breach of regulations, I am glad he has since been replced.

OSWALD had discussed a deal with the Soviet Military Attache in Mexico City, in which he promised information, in return for a visa. Note how OSWALD stopped in mid-sentence. Could the next words have been "our deal" or "our arrangement?" The word business indicated some sort of two-way transaction, when the only business OSWALD allegedly had at the Soviet Embassy in Havana was his visa stamp.

What did OSWALD mean by the word "unprepared?" OSWALD insinuated that had the Soviet Embassy had time enough to check his bona fides, the Soviet Embassy would have discovered that he did business with the KGB in the past. Or did he mean that they had not be "briefed" or "prepared" for his arrival by other KGB elements?

Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission: "He typed it early in the morning of November 9, 1963, because after he typed it we went to the place where you get the test for the drivers. It was that same day." Paine said she read the letter on the morning of November 10, 1963.

Paine: Well I read it and decided to make a copy...And I decided that I should have such a copy to give to an FBI agent coming again, or to call. I was undecided what to do. Meantime I made a copy.

Jenner: But you did have the instinct to report this to the FBI?

Paine: Yes.

Jenner: You made a copy of the document?

Paine: And having made it, while the shower was running, I am not used to subterfuge in any way, but then I put it back where it had been, and it lay the rest of the Sunday on my desk top, and of course I observed this too...This was the first indication I had that the man was a good deal queerer than I thought, and it didn't tell me, perhaps it should have, but it didn't tell me what sort of a queer he was. He addressed it "Dear Sirs." It looked to me like someone trying to make an impression, and choosing the words he thought were best to make that impression, even including assumed name as a possible attempt to make an impression on someone who was able to do espionage, though I left that open as a possibility, and I thought I'd give it to the FBI, and let them conclude, or add to it what they know. I regret, and I would like to put this on the record, particularly two things in my own actions prior to the time of the assassination. One, that I didn't make the connection between this phone number that I had of where he lived and that of course this would produce for the FBI Agent who was asking the address of where he lived. Well that is regret 1. But then of course you see in light of events that followed, it is a pity I didn't go directly, instead of waiting for the next visit, because the next visit was November 23, 1963. I put my copy of the letter away in my desk. I then, Sunday evening, also took the original. I decided to do that Sunday evening...I was disturbed about it. I didn't go to sleep right away. He was sitting up watching the late spy story if you will, on the TV, and I got up and sat on the sofa with him saying "I can't speak" wanting to confront him with this and say "What is this?" But on the other hand I was somewhat fearful and didn't know what to do.

Rep. Ford: Fearful in what way?

Paine: Well, if he was an agent I would rather just give it to the FBI, not to say, "Look, I am watching you" by saying "What is this I find on my desk?"

Jenner: What led you to hold on to this rather provocative document [and not give it to the FBI]?

Paine: It is a rather provocative document. It provoked my doubts about this fellow's normalcy more than it provoked thoughts that this was the talk of an agent reporting in. But I wasn't sure.

Warren Commission Counsel David Slawson: "The letter undoubtedly constitutes a disturbing bit of evidence, and will probably never be fully explained...He seems to have written it in the hope that by inferring that he had somehow been 'in on' some secret and mysterious dealings involving the Soviet Embassy, Mexico, some benefit, however small, could be salvaged from the otherwise total failure of the trip." [HSCA V12 p157]

OSWALD AND THE DISMISSAL OF CONSUL EUSEBIO AZQUE

In his last letter to the Soviet Embassy OSWALD wrote that Azque had been replaced. Consul Eusebio Azque would be replaced on November 18, 1963, but it was not until December 4, 1963, that Consul Eusebio Azque's replacement was publicly announced. How did OSWALD know? David Slawson asked the CIA:

In OSWALD'S letter to the Soviet Embassy in Washington written after he returned to the United States from his trip to Mexico, he refers to the Cuban Consul (presumably, Azque) as having been 'replaced.' Do you know whether Mr. Azque was fired, transferred, or otherwise moved in such a manner that OSWALD might have been misled into thinking he had been replaced? Or was any other consular official whom OSWALD might have believed had been the Consul, transferred or replaced? If Azque or some other Cuban Consular official was in fact replaced, do you have any information on how OSWALD would have learned this, and learned it so quickly? [CIA 519-219A]

The CIA Station in Mexico City reported:

The allusion to a man, presumably a Cuban Consular official, who has since been replaced, may be explained as follows: As Sylvia and her husband stated OSWALD has an argument with Cuban Consul Azque. Doubtless OSWALD meant Azque when he said he was glad a certain man had been replaced. By coincidence, Azcue, who had been in Mexico for about 18 years, was due to be transferred. It was known early in September 1963 that Subject, from a reliable source, that Azque's replacement would arrive about September 9, 1963, and that Azque would leave Mexico permanently to return to Cuba late in October. He was still in Mexico doing his Consular job through September, and early October, and he finally departed for Cuba by air from Mexico City on November 18, 1963, using Cuban Diplomatic Passport 63/357...We do not know how OSWALD might have learned that Azque had been or was to be replaced, but we speculate that he might have heard it from Sylvia Duran during one of his visits. [CIA 201-334089 doc. trans. & cross ref; CIA 273-103]

In 1994 the CIA released a highly deleted Memorandum for the Record about a meeting in "B's" car on November 4, 1963, during which Consul Eusebio Azque's departure was discussed. Another CIA document indicated that the Agency was that Azque was going to be recalled in early August. [CIA 201-334089] The Warren Report:

We do not know who might have told OSWALD that Eusebio Azque, or any other Cuban, had been, or was to be, replaced, but we speculate that Sylvia Duran or some Soviet official might have mentioned it if OSWALD complained about Eusebio Azque's altercation with him. [WR p310]

Sylvia Duran denied that she told OSWALD Azque was replaced, however, she did have this knowledge. OSWALD'S statement betrayed his foreknowledge of Consul Eusebio Azque's removal and his intimate connection with Duran.

FIRST DRAFT

I and Marina Nicholyeva are now living in Dallas, Texas. ~~You already ha~~
The FBI is not now interested in my activities in the progessive organization FPCC of which I was secretary in ~~New Orleans, La.~~ New Orleans, Louisiana, since I am no longer ~~connected with~~ live in that state. ~~November the November~~ the FBI has visited us here in Texas on Nov. 1st. Agent of the FBI James P. Hasty warned me that if I attempt to engage in FPCC activities in Texas the FBI will again take an "interest" in me. The agent also "suggested" that my wife could "remain in the U.S. under FBI protection," that is, she could ~~refuse to return to the~~ defect from the Soviet Union. Of course I and my wife strongly protested these tactics by the notorious FBI.

THE SECOND DRAFT

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is not now interested in my activities in the progressive organization 'Fair Play for Cuba Committee' of which I was secretary in New Orleans (state Louisiana) since I no longer reside in that state. However, the F.B.I. has visited us here in Dallas Texas, on [Friday] November 1, 1963. Agent James P. Hasty warned me that if I engaged in F.P.C.C. activities in Texas the F.B.I. will again take an 'interrest' in me. This agent also 'suggested' to Marina Nichilayeva that she could remain in the United States under F.B.I. 'protection', that is, she could defect from the Soviet Union, of course, I and my wife strongly protested these tactics by the notorious F.B.I. Please inform us of the arrival of our Soviet entrance visa as soon as they come.

OSWALD stated that the FBI was no longer interested in his work with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, because he had moved from Louisiana. OSWALD had not engaged in any activities on behalf of the Fair Play for Cuba after he returned to Dallas from Mexico City. He said that S.A. Hosty "visited us here in Dallas." OSWALD never received a personal visit from S.A. Hosty in Irving, Texas. He added, "on November 1, 1963 Agent James P. Hasty warned me that if I engaged in Fair Play for Cuba Committee activities the FBI will again take an interest in me." Again? The FBI took no interest in OSWALD in New Orleans until he summoned it after he was arrested.

Why Hasty instead of Hosty? In his address book, the entry concerning S.A. Hosty read, "- Nov. 1, 1963, FBI agent (RH121) James P. Hasty, MU 8605, 1114 Commerce St., Dallas." Why are there only six digits in the telephone number? Telephone numbers in this area contained seven digits. James Hosty said the misspelling of his name was proof that OSWALD did not really know him. James Hosty: "Had he known me he would have had it right, or I would have bounced him off the wall a couple of times." Ruth Paine testified that S.A. Hosty gave her his card. Was OSWALD unable to copy the information correctly? OSWALD hinted that if he did not receive a Soviet visa soon, his wife might "defect" to the United States. What did OSWALD mean by "F.B.I. protection"? Did OSWALD imply that in exchange for citizenship, Marina Oswald would willingly become an FBI anti-communist puppet?

Scott and Allen did an article regarding OSWALD'S premature knowledge of Azcue's departure: "According to the FBI's findings, there was absolutely no way OSWALD could have obtained this information during his September visit to Mexico City, since the secret recall orders from Havana were not transmitted until after he had returned from Dallas. Even then, there was no publicity and only a handful of persons knew about the order, one FBI report states." [Northern Virginia Sun 11.21.67] The CIA took note of this article:

"Memo for Chief LEOB

From (Deleted)

SUBJECT: Article in Northern Virginia Sun for November 21, 1967 entitled Oswald's Letter Still a Puzzle by Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott.

According to Mr. (Deleted) RA/CI Staff, CIA liaison representative with National Archives there is little substance to the inference in Allen and Scott's column that there is a great mystery about OSWALD'S knowledge of Azcue's recall." The CIA claimed that OSWALD learned about it from Sylvia Duran. Scott and Allen surmised that OSWALD got this information from the KGB, when in fact it came from Sylvia Duran. The Warren Commission never asked Duran if she knew the Azcue was being recalled before OSWALD'S visit to Mexico City or whether she told OSWALD about Azcue's recall. [CIA 1342-485A]

Ruth Paine saw the letter to the Soviet Embassy on Sunday, November 10, 1963, and copied it, yet she testified she never asked OSWALD about his trip to Mexico City. She showed her husband the copy: "Ruth showed it to me. And he was complaining about being mistreated from his point of view, about not being allowed to go to Cuba." This letter in itself, was suspicious, was highly suspicious. Additionally, Ruth Paine had these facts available her: OSWALD was a former Marine who defected to the Soviet Union and married a Russian; he had contact with the Communist Party and subscribed to its publication, The Worker; he lived under a false name in a Dallas rooming house; the FBI was interested in him. Ruth Paine testified: "The FBI came as I thought they well might, and was interested in this man who had been to the Soviet Union, and I felt that if he had any associations this would be very easy for them to know. I didn't see any, that would tend to point to the possibility of his being a spy or a subversive...I felt happy that they were charged with the responsibility of knowing about it." [WCE 460 p12] Ruth Paine should have concluded OSWALD was a possible Communist agent, unless she had been told otherwise.

RUTH PAINE DID NOT SUSPECT OSWALD WAS A KGB AGENT

Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission she did not suspect OSWALD worked for the KGB.

Ruth Paine: I have no reason to believe he was associated with anyone else...I thought that he was not very intelligent. I saw as far as I could see he had no particular contacts. He was not a person I would have hired for a job of any sort, no more than I would have let him borrow my car.

Jenner: Did his level of intelligence affect your judgement as to whether the Russian Government would have hired him?

Paine: Yes, I doubted if they would have hired him. I kept my mind open on it to. Well, as I have described in my testimony, I asked myself whether or not he might be a spy. I was not at all worried about ideology contrary to my own, or with which I disagreed, and it looked to me that he was a person of this ideology or philosophy which he calls Marxism, indeed nearly a religion. But not that he was in any way dangerous because of these beliefs.

Sen. Cooper: Thinking now and then that he might be a spy, or in the employ of the Soviet Union, were you concerned about the fact that such a person was living in your house?

Paine: Well, if you recall my testimony, I concluded that he was not, and I was also pleased that the FBI had come, and I felt that they would worry about that, and that I didn't need to worry about any risk to me of public censure for my befriending such a person.

Sen. Cooper: You had said that prior to the assassination you considered LEE OSWALD as being violent or dangerous?

Paine: Well, now I have said that the thought crossed my mind once in relation to myself.

Senator Cooper: What caused that?

Paine: That he might be violent, because I thought he might resent my stepping in to do for his wife, what he was not doing.

Senator Cooper: You said at one time you came to the conclusion that he wasn't an agent or spy because you didn't think he was intelligent enough.

Paine: That, and the fact as far as I could see, he had no contacts or any means of getting any information that would have been of interest to the Soviet Union...As regards he might be a Soviet agent, what does this man know that would be of interest to anybody...you judge he didn't know anything that the Soviets might be interested in. I never gave it any thought of the possibility of his being employed by this government...OSWALD was not a person that would have been hired by the FBI...I simply cannot believe that the FBI would find it necessary to employ such a shaky and inadequate person...

Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission she did not suspect OSWALD worked for the KGB. Ruth Paine:

I judged by the fact that they didn't come [back to interview OSWALD] that this was not someone they were terribly worried about talking to immediately...It seemed to me that a goodly portion of it [the letter], the part upon which I could judge, was false... I have no reason to believe he was associated with anyone else...

How did Ruth Paine know that OSWALD "didn't know anything that the Soviets might be interested in?" Shouldn't she have left that up to the FBI? Herbert Philbrick : "Ruth Hyde Paine did not feel duty-bound to notify the FBI that OSWALD was a self-proclaimed Communist, that he subscribed to The Worker, that he was a member of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee." Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission that she was unaware "of any contact by [OSWALD] with either the Communist Party or the Socialist Workers Party." OSWALD had his subscription to the Communist Party newspaper, The Worker, and the Socialists Workers Party newspaper, The Militant, mailed to Ruth Paine's home. Ruth Paine explained:

Paine: He lived in Dallas, but he used my house as a residence, as a mailing address. Never asked to, and I never complained, but I noticed, of course, he was using it as a mailing address...He subscribed to the Militant. It is a paper in English, newspaper style and I would say these next two - Jenner: Published by whom? Socialist Workers Party?

Paine: I have been told so. I don't know.

Jenner: But was it a political tract?

Paine: I don't know that.

Jenner: Did you read it?

Paine: No. I wasn't interested. If I had time to do much reading, I might have taken an interest but I had insufficient time to do the reading I really wanted to do. He also subscribed to The Worker.

Jenner: Is that a Communist Party publication?

Paine: I have been told so.

Jenner: Did you read that?

Paine: No. I might say that my awareness of his subscribing to these last two, The Militant and The Worker, came after the assassination. There was mail awaiting for him for that weekend which he did not pick up on the 21st, and after the assassination, indeed, after Saturday evening, the 23rd, when it was announced on television they had a photograph of LEE HARVEY OSWALD holding two papers. I looked at this pile of mail waiting for him, which consisted of these two newspapers, The Militant and The Worker, and I threw them away.

Jenner: You threw them away?

Paine: Without opening them.

Jenner: Why did you throw them away?

Paine: I was pleased to throw away anything I could. I just didn't want it.

Jenner: Well, my question or query, and I think expression of surprise, is activated by what I am about to ask you as to whether you might call that to the attention of the FBI?

Paine: Oh, I am sure they knew.

Jenner: How are you sure they knew?

Paine: Because mail stopped coming on the spot, nothing came after the assassination, I was certain it was still coming to someplace...

Jenner: Well, it occurred to me you might have called the FBI's attention to the fact that it had come to the house. But you didn't in any event.

Paine: No; I didn't.

Jenner: Did you report to the FBI in any of these interviews you had subsequently with them, or did they ask? It is two questions if you will answer both.

Paine: If so it was quite recently.

Jenner: When did the papers differ from The Worker and The Militant begin to arrive at your home?

Paine: Well, they began to arrive, I would say, some time after October 4, 1963. That is of course my judgement. That is a rationalization.

Ruth Paine was asked by this researcher if she really did not see these papers until after the assassination. She responded, "That doesn't add up, does it? No, I think they came in before the assassination. What I knew was that he was subscribing to their newspapers. Two groups that hated each other." Ruth Paine never subscribed to a Communist newspaper. Yet she allowed OSWALD to have a Communist newspaper sent to him at her address. FBI field offices had been ordered to investigate any who subscribed to The Worker, because it was the official organ of the Communist Party of the United States of America. This would have sent the message to the FBI that Ruth Paine was a communist sympathizer. Ruth Paine endangered her husband's security clearance by allowing OSWALD to do this. She knew what happened to her sister after she received a call from Dorothy Wilson's tapped telephone. Why would Ruth Paine endanger the father of her children over OSWALD? The answer was the same once again, OSWALD was recommended by someone connected with the intelligence community, and Ruth Paine felt that there would be no repercussions from the FBI. Ruth Paine admitted that she lied to the Warren Commission about having seen the newspapers after the assassination. What else did she lie about? Dorothy Gravitis was interviewed in the presence of her son-in-law, Mr. Ilya Mamantov, at whose home she resides. In as much as Mrs. Gravitis speaks no English and is of Russian nationality Mr. Mamantov acted as a translator for her. Gravitis was acquainted with Ruth Paine and Marina Oswald:

After the initial conversation with Marina Oswald, Mrs. Gravitis had approximately two other conversations over the telephone with Marina Oswald, in addition to other conversations with Mrs. Paine. Mrs. Gravitis never met Mrs. Oswald in person. Mrs. Paine asked Mrs. Gravitis why Mrs. Gravitis and her family did not want Marina Oswald's husband to come to their house. Mrs. Gravitis told Mrs. Paine that she herself felt that OSWALD was a traitor to the United States, inasmuch as he had gone to Russia, and then had come back to the United States. Mrs. Gravitis made comments to Mrs. Paine to the effect that Mrs. Oswald was likely in the underground in the United States as a Communist, and Mrs. Paine did not reply, therefore, Mrs. Gravitis presumed this to be true. [FBI DL 100-10461 Kenneth B. Jackson & William O. Johnson 12.12.63]

Jenner: Did you ever make a statement to anybody that you can recall that OSWALD in your opinion was doing underground work?

Ruth Paine: That has never been my opinion. I would be absolutely certain that he never - that I never said such a thing.

Jenner: To Mrs. Dorothy Gravitis?

Ruth Paine: Absolutely certain. Never said to anyone I thought LEE was doing undercover work. Dorothy Gravitis is my Russian tutor in Dallas.

Ruth Paine: Would you clarify for me, someone is of the opinion that I thought that OSWALD was an undercover agent for whom?

Jenner: For the Russian Government. Did you give consideration in that connection?

Ruth Paine: I kept my mind open on it to wonder. Simply because he had gone to the Soviet Union and announced that he wanted to stay, and then came back, and I wasn't convinced that he liked America...I asked myself whether or not he might be a spy. Both this letter, and the telephone conversation really, the one that followed it, where Marina reported to me that he was using a different name, were something new and different in the situation that made me feel this was a man I hadn't accurately perceived before.

The FBI had reported: "Mrs. Dorothy Gravitis made comments to Mrs. Paine to the effect that Mrs. (sic) OSWALD was in the underground in the United States as a Communist." Albert Jenner choose to interpret this to mean OSWALD was part of the Communist underground, rather than that OSWALD was part of the clandestine services of the United States, and was posing as a Communist. On November 11, 1963, the FBI Field Office in Washington, D.C. obtained a copy of OSWALD'S letter to the Soviet Embassy: "According to informant, OSWALD had originally intended to visit Soviet Embassy in Havana, Cuba, where he would have had time to complete his business but could not reach Cuba." [NARA FBI 124-10171-10147] A Freedom of Information Act request for this document, which was originally known as Qc563 was designated as D-198. "Four photographs of D-198 are transmitted to your office herewith to be handled in accordance with existing instructions concerning "D" number photographs. (Deleted as of 2010) It should be noted that D-198 resulted from highly confidential coverage, and Dallas should take this into account in any report." The FBI Lab Report on D-198 was deleted except for this paragraph: "Result of explanation. The hand printing on D-198 was not identified in the Anonymous Letter File. A photograph of this hand printing will be added to this file. The evidence submitted is retained." This researcher applied for this document, but it was denied, because it was information "which is currently and properly classified pursuant to Executive Order 11652 in the interest of National Defense and Foreign Policy." [ltr. re: req. of AJW 8.24.78; FBI LAB report d-436518 11.26.63]

JAMES HOSTY AND BARDWELL ODUM NOVEMBER 23, 1963

S.A. Hosty obtained the first draft of this letter from Ruth Paine on Saturday, November 23, 1963:

Mr. Hosty advised that on November 23, 1963, he interviewed Ruth Paine and during this interview she made available to Hosty what appeared to be a rough draft handwritten letter prepared by OSWALD and addressed to the Soviet Embassy in Washington. He said that on the following Monday or Tuesday, November 25, 1963, or November 26, 1963, in preparation to dictate the results of his interview with Paine, he was not sure how to report OSWALD'S rough draft letter, so he went to discuss the matter with Mr. Shanklin. He said he told Gordon Shanklin he had a letter written by OSWALD which mentioned S.A. Hosty's name and Gordon Shanklin became highly excited and agitated and started screaming at him, stating 'I thought I told you to get rid of that letter. Get rid of it!' He realized that Mr. Shanklin had been under extreme pressure, possibly verging on a nervous breakdown, and decided not to discuss the matter with him further and left. On leaving Mr. Shanklin's office, he met S.A. Bardwell D. Odum, who had apparently overheard Mr. Shanklin yelling at him, and inquired as to what the problem was. He claims he then told Odum what had transpired, and at that point, according to Hosty, Odum confided in him that on late Saturday night, November 23, or in the early morning hours of November 24, 1963, he Odum, had been sent by Mr. Shanklin to interview Mrs. Paine in order to verify Hosty's story as to his prior interview of Mrs. Paine and Marina Oswald on November 1, 1963, and to determine if he had in any way mistreated any of these individuals. According to Hosty, Odum told him Mrs. Paine had advised him that she had given Hosty OSWALD's rough draft letter to the Russian Embassy, but had retained a copy of the rough draft she had made in her own handwriting. Odum told her she should give him the rough draft which she did. Odum said he took this rough draft to Mr. Shanklin sometime on November 24, 1963, or November 25, 1963, and told Mr. Shanklin about it and that Mr. Shanklin told Odum. 'I thought I told Hosty to get rid of that note' and according to Odum, Mr. Shanklin became hysterical.

THE TEST DRIVE

Ruth Paine testified that on Saturday morning, November 9, 1963, she drove OSWALD "to a station in Dallas where you can take the written test and eye test that permits you to get a learner's permit [to drive an automobile]...when we got there it was closed being Election Day." Ruth Paine stated he was not out of her sight for a sufficient portion of the day to have gone anywhere. Ruth Paine was telling the truth about having driven to a station in Dallas in the morning, but she lied about being with OSWALD in the afternoon. OSWALD had been told that he would be receiving remuneration for his services sometime in late November and on the afternoon of November 9, 1963, he visited a car dealer. The Warren Report stated:

The testimony of Albert Guy Bogard has been carefully evaluated, because it suggests the possibility that OSWALD might have been a proficient automobile driver and, during November 1963, might have been expecting funds with which to purchase a car. Bogard, formerly an automobile salesman with a Lincoln-Mercury firm in Dallas, testified that in the early afternoon of November 9, 1963, he attended a prospective customer who he believes was LEE HARVEY OSWALD. According to Bogard, the customer, after test driving an automobile over the Stemmons Freeway at 60 to 70 miles per hour, told Bogard that within several weeks he would have the money to make a purchase. Bogard asserted that the customer gave his name as 'LEE OSWALD,' which Bogard wrote on a business card. After OSWALD'S name was mentioned on the radio on November 22, 1963, Bogard assertedly threw the card in a trash can, making the comment to co-employees that he supposed OSWALD would no longer wish to buy the car.

Bogard's testimony has received corroboration. The assistant sales manager at the time, Frank Pizzo, and a second salesman, Eugene M. Wilson, stated they recall an instance when the customer described by Bogard was in the showroom. Another salesman, Oran Brown, recalled that Bogard asked him to assist the customer if he appeared during certain evenings when Bogard was away from the showroom. Brown stated that he too wrote down the customer's name, and both he and his wife remember the name 'OSWALD' as being on a paper in his possession before the assassination.

However, doubts exist about the accuracy of Bogard's testimony. He, Pizzo, and Wilson, differed on important details of what is supposed to have occurred when the customer was in the showroom. Whereas Bogard stated that the customer said he did not wish credit, but wanted to purchase a car for cash, Pizzo and Wilson did indicate that the man did attempt to purchase on credit. According to Wilson, when the customer was told he would be unable to purchase a car without a credit rating, substantial cash, or a lengthy employment record, he stated sarcastically, "Maybe I'm going to have to go back to Russia to buy a car." While it is possible OSWALD would have made such a remark, the statement is not consistent with Bogard's story. Indeed, Bogard has made no mention that the customer ever spoke with Wilson while he was in the showroom. More important, on November 23, 1963, a search through the showroom's refuse was made, but no paper bearing OSWALD'S name was found. The paper on which Brown reportedly wrote OSWALD'S name has never been located.

The assistant sales manager, Mr. Pizzo, who saw Bogard's prospect on November 9, 1963, and shortly after the assassination felt that OSWALD may have been this man, later examined pictures of OSWALD, and expressed serious doubts that the person with Bogard was in fact OSWALD. While noting a resemblance, he did not believe that OSWALD'S hairline matched that of the person who had been in the showroom on November 9, 1963. Wilson has stated that Bogard's customer was five feet tall. Several persons who knew OSWALD testified that he was unable to drive, although Mrs. Paine, who was giving OSWALD driving lessons, stated the OSWALD was showing some improvement since November. Moreover, OSWALD'S whereabouts on November 9, 1963, as testified to by Marina Oswald and Ruth Paine, would have made it impossible for him to have visited the automobile showroom as Mr. Bogard claims. [WR 321]

Albert Guy Bogard was born in Cowshatta, Louisiana. When he reached the 11th grade he joined the Navy for four years, then sold automobiles. Albert Bogard said he was hospitalized at the North Louisiana Sanitarium, Shreveport, Louisiana, following a car wreck in 1951, for a fractured skull. Bogard told the FBI that on June 6, 1959, he had a light heart attack at Shreveport, Louisiana, but did not consult a doctor for two days afterward. He was questioned by Joseph A. Ball of the Warren Commission:

Ball: Who did you work for last fall, 1963?

Bogard: Downtown Lincoln Mercury, 118 East Commerce, Dallas, Texas.

Ball: Shortly after the death of President Kennedy you notified the FBI, didn't you?

Bogard: I did not notify the FBI.

Ball: Did you notify someone that you had information?

Bogard: Was the other salesman notified the FBI.

Ball: Who was he?

Bogard: I forget the name.

Ball: But he notified the FBI that you have some information?

Bogard: Yes.

Ball: And did some special agent from the FBI come and call on you?

Bogard: Yes, sir. Several times.

Ball: And took a statement from you?

Bogard: Yes, I took a lie detector test.

Ball: You told him about an incident which occurred some time before?

Bogard: Just one week before.

Ball: Just one week before?

Bogard: Yes, sir; just one - one week before - two weeks before.

Ball: About what date? Do you remember?

Bogard: Ninth day of November, I think it was, to be exact.

Bogard: 1963.

Ball: What day of the week was that?

Bogard: That was on a Saturday.

Ball: When was it, in the morning or afternoon?

Bogard: Afternoon.

Ball: About what time?

Bogard: I think it was around 1:30 p.m. or 2:00 p.m., as I was leaving town shortly after I gave the demonstration in the automobile, and I was in a hurry.

Ball: Tell me just what happened there.

Bogard: A gentleman walked in the door and walked up and introduced himself to me, and tells me he wants to look at a car. I show him a car on the showroom floor, and take him for a ride out on the Stemmons Expressway and back, and he was driving at 60 to 70 miles an hour, and came back to the showroom. And I made some figures, and he told me that he wasn't ready to buy, that he would be in a couple or three weeks, that he had some money coming in. And when he finally started to leave, I got his name, and wrote it on the back of one of my business cards, and never heard from the man any more. And the day that the President was shot, when I heard that - they had the radio on in the showroom, and when I heard the name, that he had shot a policeman over in Oak Cliff, I pulled out some business cards that I had wrote his name on the back on, and said "He won't be a prospect any more because he is going to jail," and I ripped the card up and threw it away.

Ball: Threw it away?

Bogard: Threw it away.

Ball: And when the FBI agent came to see you, the card had already been thrown away?

Bogard: Yes sir, I tore it up that very day.

Ball: This was Friday, November 22, 1963?

Bogard: Yes sir, the day I heard that Kennedy had been killed. I hadn't heard that the President had been killed; just heard a policeman had been shot and that's when I tore up the card and said, "He won't want to buy a car."

Ball: Now what kind of a looking man was he, or could you describe him?

Bogard: I can tell you the truth, I have already forgotten what he actually looked like. I identified him as in pictures, but just to tell you what he looked like that day, I don't remember.

Ball: You don't have a memory of it?

Bogard: No, sir.

Ball: Was he tall or short?

Bogard: About medium build I would say.

Ball: Do you remember what name he gave you?

Bogard: Gave me LEE OSWALD.

Ball: Did he give you that when he first introduced -

Bogard: He give me that when he started to leave.

Ball: Oh, gave you that when he started to leave?

Bogard: Yes.

Ball: And didn't give you any name when he first introduced himself?

Bogard: No, sir.

Ball: Did he tell you what kind of a car he wanted?

Bogard: Yes, sir. Wanted a Caliente, two door hardtop.

Ball: What kind of make is that?

Bogard: Mercury Comet.

Ball: And did you show him one?

Bogard: Yes sir.

Ball: What color did you show him?

Bogard: Red.

Ball: You took a ride with him?

Bogard: Yes, sir.

Ball: Did he drive, or did you drive?

Bogard: He drove it.

Ball: Drive it right out of the shop, or did you drive it first and then -

Bogard: No; he drove it right offhand. He got in driving it.

Ball: Did he appear to know how to drive the car?

Bogard: Well, he had drove before, I am sure, because he took off.

Ball: Did he -

Bogard: He might have drove a little reckless, but other than that, he knew how to drive.

Ball: What do you mean "He might have drove it a little reckless?"

Bogard: Well, going 60 and 70 miles an hour right up a freeway and took curves kind of fast.

Ball: Did it appear to you that he knew how to handle the car?

Bogard: Yes.

Ball: Now, when you got back from the showroom, you said you did some figuring. What kind of figuring.

Bogard: Just took out some papers and going to write up how much the car would cost, and, just like with anybody else, just trying to close the deal, and he said he would have the money in two or three weeks and would come in and -

Ball: Did you tell him you needed a down payment?

Bogard: He said he would have it.

Ball: Did you tell him how much?

Bogard: Yes.

Ball: How much?

Bogard: Three hundred dollars, I think. And he said he didn't have the money then and would just pay cash for it at a later date...

Ball: Did you tell anybody about it at that time?

Bogard: Now, at the time, I don't know whether - Now Mr. Pizzo, I think I introduced him to him. I introduced him to Mr. Pizzo. He asked what was wrong with him, and I said he hasn't got the money right now. Will be back in couple or three weeks...he was expecting some money - to have the money in two or three weeks...

Ball: Now what was your impression when you saw OSWALD on television?

Bogard: All my impression was that he had been in and tried to buy a car, that he wasn't a prosect any more.

Ball: What about his picture in the paper? Did you recognize him from the picture?

Bogard: Yes; I recognized him as being the same fellow who had been in.

Ball: And did you tell anyone out there that you thought it was the same person?

Bogard: They began asking me then and I said "Yes" and this Pizzo recognized him too.

Ball: What did Pizzo say?

Bogard: Said, "Yes" that is the same man. And Pizzo also has been questioned by the FBI.

Ball: How do you spell his name?

Bogard: P-I-z-z-o.

Ball: He was the sales manager?

Bogard: Yes, sir.

Ball: Is he still the sales manager out there?

Bogard: No sir...

Ball: Now when was it that you talked with the other salesmen about this, and told them that you thought the man had been in to see you?

Bogard: We were all standing there listening to the radio, and the name came on the radio, and I pulled this business card out with LEE OSWALD wrote across it.

Ball: Who were some of the men standing by the radio when you pulled this business card out?

Bogard: Oh, I think Oran Brown was there, Mr. Wilson was there, and this other little boy, hadn't been there very long. I can't remember his name at this time right now.

BOGARD'S REPORT TO DeBRUEYS

At about 3:00 to 4:00 p.m., Saturday, November 9, 1963, a young man came to the automobile showroom walking and alone, stating that he was interested in a car. Albert Bogard said he introduced himself, and asked the prospective customer his name about twice before the individual gave his name as LEE OSWALD. Albert Bogard said he seemed to recall OSWALD said he had previously looked at a Rambler and Plymouth automobiles, although he could not be certain.

He said he showed OSWALD 'every car in the showroom and on the Lot,' following which he took OSWALD back inside in an effort to 'close' with him. At this time OSWALD said he had no money, but he would have money in a couple or three weeks. Albert Bogard said he suggested a down payment and tried to find out where OSWALD intended his money would come from. OSWALD replied: 'I've got it coming.' He was particularly interested in a two-door Mercury hardtop which sells for about $3000. OSWALD asked for a demonstration drive.

Bogard said he and OSWALD got in a demonstration car, with OSWALD driving, that OSWALD drove to Industrial Boulevard, south on industrial about two or three blocks, and made U-turn, proceeding north on Industrial, and thence to Stemmons Freeway. He drove out Stemmons at a rapid rate of speed, 75-85 miles per hour, to the Inwood Road exit to the right, back to the left under the freeway, and again to the left and on to the freeway, where he proceeded in a southeasterly direction. OSWALD continued on Stemmons Freeway to R.L Thornton Freeway, turned to the right at the Colorado Avenue exit, made a left back under the freeway, and thence back up on the freeway and proceeded in a northwesterly direction. At a point where OSWALD had a choice of continuing on the freeway which would mean bearing to the left, he started to go straight northward on Cadiz Street. Bogard called his attention to the fact the car had little gasoline in it, whereupon OSWALD turned back onto Industrial and thence to the automobile concern.

Bogard said he again approached OSWALD on the proposition of a down payment, stating he could proceed with a credit check. OSWALD declined, stating he would pay cash. He would not give his address, but said he lived in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas. He said, as he recalled, OSWALD wore no coat or tie and was believed dressed in a 'sweat shirt' was bareheaded, and did not look like a $3,000 car man. Bogard said he wrote

OSWALD'S name 'LEE OSWALD' on the reverse side of one of his, Bogard's, business cards.

He related that on November 22, 1963, he heard the name of OSWALD on a radio broadcast and recognized the name as that of his prospective customer. He said he remarked on this to others and pulled a number of cards out of his pocket, selected the card with OSWALD'S name on it, and threw it in the wastepaper basket. He said he saw OSWALD'S picture on television, and confirmed that this was the name individual who had come to his place of business on November 9, 1963, but who had never returned to his knowledge.

He stated OSWALD did not enter into any conversation except as to the car, and he observed no unusual actions. Albert Bogard remarked that he has been in Dallas for a short time only, and that OSWALD appeared much more familiar with the streets than he is. Agents requested Albert Bogard to travel the same route OSWALD had driven. Agents observed this route carried Albert Bogard and OSWALD on Stemmons Expressway, on a portion of the route traveled by President Kennedy's motorcade on November 22, 1963, and that the site of the proposed luncheon for Mr. Kennedy was on this route. A total distance of some 13 miles was traveled. It was observed the Texas School Book Depository Building is within sight of Downtown Lincoln-Mercury showroom, perhaps three-fourths mile distant. Upon return to the motor company, agents asked Bogard to locate his business card on which he said he had written the name of OSWALD. He stated trash had been picked up by the janitor and placed in a large receptacle to the rear of the building, somewhat inaccessible for a through search. He did not locate the card. [FBI Report of Manning C. Clements and WARREN C. DEBRUEYS 11.23.63 WCE3071

On January 14, 1964, William A. Branigan sent a Memorandum to William C. Sullivan concerning Bogard: "This recommends Dallas be authorized to afford polygraph examination to one Albert G. Bogard, a Dallas automobile salesman, who states that OSWALD, on November 9, 1963, made inquiry concerning the purchase of a Mercury car.

Observations: Bogard's story is know to several people in Dallas. Bogard's comment that OSWALD inferred that he had money coming to him would, if true, be of pertinence to our investigation. Our inquiry has established that OSWALD did not have sufficient funds in November 1963 to make even the $300 down payment necessary to purchase the car. Moreover, his wife has stated that OSWALD was opposed to purchasing a car due to the expense of maintaining one, and there is no evidence to establish that OSWALD could drive. In addition, Mrs. Ruth Paine places OSWALD in her home on November 9, 1963, (election day) and states that in her opinion it would not have been possible for OSWALD to have traveled to the automobile agency on November 11, 1963, as he was not out of her sight for a sufficient portion of that day to have made the trip. Accordingly, it appears that Bogard's story is untrue.

Recommendation: That Dallas be authorized to proceed with the polygraph examination. Attached for approval is an airtel to Dallas. On February 24, 1964, Albert Guy Bogard underwent an FBI lie detector test: "The report indicates the emotional responses recorded by the polygraph were those normally expected of a person telling the truth. [WCE 3031]

Albert Guy Bogard told the Warren Commission, "I can tell you the truth, I have already forgotten what he looked like. I identified him as in pictures, but just to tell you what he looked like that day I don't remember. Gave me the name LEE OSWALD." Eugene M. Wilson was interviewed by the FBI shortly after the Kennedy assassination.

Wilson related that another salesman at Downtown Lincoln Mercury, known as Al Bogard, on some day about the first part of November 1963, believed to be a Saturday, but exact date not recalled, came to him with a customer. The company had a policy that if a salesman had a prospective customer that the salesman could not sell a car, the salesman was supposed to bring the prospect to a senior salesman before letting the customer go. On this occasion, Bogard brought this customer to him, and introduced the customer, but Wilson does not recall the customer's name. Bogard told Wilson that the customer had no cash, no credit, and had been employed on his job for only a short period of time, and Bogard had not been able to sell him a car. Wilson said he talked to this customer for only a minute or so, and told him that if he did not have a credit rating, or a substantial amount of cash, and had not been employed on his job for some time, they would be unable to sell him a car. This customer then said rather sarcastically, 'Maybe I am going to have to go back to Russia to buy a car?' Wilson then told the customer, 'Maybe that is where you should go.' The customer immediately walked away without further conversation, and Wilson did not pay any attention as to where the customer went. Wilson is now of the opinion that this event occurred sometime during the morning, before noon, on a Saturday, sometime during the first part of November 1963, but cannot be more specific as to the date of the month, day of the week or hour of the day. After this customer left, Guy Bogard mentioned to Wilson that he had used the red demonstrator car that Eugene M. Wilson had been using the car, and the car did not have much gasoline in it when he let the customer drive it. Guy Bogard also stated that the customer drove like a madman, driving much too fast, as it had been raining and the pavement was slick. Bogard seemed very unhappy with the way this customer drove, commenting that he drove 'like he was crazy.' Wilson described this customer as a white male, between 26 and 30 years old, weighed about 135 pounds, and was only about five feet tall, and he definitely recalled that the customer was much shorter than he, Wilson, because he looked down, when talking to the customer. After the customer left, Wilson dismissed the matter from his mind. The next day after President Kennedy was assassinated, Bogard walked up to Wilson and mentioned that the man who had shot President Kennedy was the customer to whom Bogard had introduced Wilson. Wilson stated he did not see Bogard with a card in his pocket with the name OSWALD on it, did not hear Bogard say anything about having the name OSWALD on a card, and did not see Bogard throw a card away, and state that he had no further use for this prospect's name. After Bogard mentioned to Wilson that he had introduced OSWALD to Wilson, Wilson saw photographs of LEE HARVEY OSWALD in the newspapers and on television, but he could not say that LEE HARVEY OSWALD was, or was not, the customer who said he might have to go back to Russia to buy a car. Wilson explained that he had cataracts on his eyes, and cannot see out of his left eye, and has only 20/15 vision in his right eye. Due to his poor vision, and the fact that he talks to many prospects during a period of two or three weeks, he could not remember enough about what this customer looked like, to know whether or not this customer was identical with LEE HARVEY OSWALD. Mr. Wilson stated that his company had five red demonstrators, all just alike, and they were not assigned specifically to any salesman. Various salesmen usually drove the same car, but they were all parked outside with the keys in them, and if the vehicle was not in use, any salesman could go out and get one without seeking permission from anyone else. [FBI Dallas 100 - 10461 C. Ray Hall 9.8.64]

At first, Eugene M. Wilson said he was sure it was OSWALD, but when the FBI returned on September 9, 1964, he told them he had cataracts and was unsure. He said he never saw the card on which Albert Guy Bogard claimed he had written "OSWALD." However, he did remember a customer who said he had to go back to Russia to buy an automobile. How many other people in Dallas would have made such a remark? Wilson remembered Bogard complaining about the way the customer drove. The customer who visited Downtown Lincoln Mercury was LEE HARVEY OSWALD. The FBI showed Frank Pizzo photographs of OSWALD. He expressed "serious doubts that the person with Bogard was, in fact, OSWALD. While noting a resemblance, he did not believe OSWALD'S hairline matched that of the person who had been in the showroom on Saturday, November 9, 1963." Frank Pizzo said "his face resembles him more than his hairline" since the man he had seen looked older and his hairline had receded more. Frank Pizzo, 63, died of a heart attack in 1991. His daughter stated: "He could never say for sure if it was him or not. Whoever it was who was driving, couldn't drive very well, and he drove the same route Kennedy took." [FBI Administrative DL 100-10461 AEC:LAC D Cover page,2,3; FBI 62-109060-3761; WC Pizzo test. to Jenner; WCE 3071] The FBI:

In the report prepared by Special Agents C. Ray Hall and Maurice J. White on December 11, 1963, covering an interview with Mr. Oran Paul Brown, it appears that Mr. Brown provided corroboration for the testimony of Mr. Bogard. Mr. Brown stated that one to two weeks before the assassination Guy Bogard asked him to service OSWALD if he appeared in the salesroom while Guy Bogard was not in, and that Brown wrote OSWALD'S name on a slip of paper which at some time he brought home with him. Oran Paul Brown further stated that when he returned home on the evening of November 22, 1963, his wife asked him what he knew about OSWALD, since she had seen OSWALD'S name on a piece of paper among his effects. Please interview Mrs. Oran Paul Brown to determine whether or not she ever observed the name 'LEE OSWALD' on a piece of paper among Oran Paul Brown's effects, and whether or not she ever made the remark her husband ascribed to her.

This second notation of OSWALD'S name proved unrecoverable as well. The Warren Commission: "Mr. Oran Paul Brown provided corroboration for the testimony of Mr. Bogard." Oran Paul Brown, 64, died of cancer on February 24, 1991. Salesman Jack A. Lawrence, who moved to South Charleston, West Virginia, after the assassination, told the FBI that Albert Guy Bogard "wrote up papers covering the sale of this car to OSWALD." The FBI reported:

On September 14, 1964, Jack A. Lawrence, 205 Ninth Avenue, South Charleston, West Virginia, was re-interviewed and advised that he did not know and had never seen LEE HARVEY OSWALD. He said that a day after the assassination of President Kennedy, a group of salesmen at Downtown Lincoln-Mercury in Dallas, Texas, including Mr. Bogard, Mr. Pizzo, himself and others, were standing around listening to a radio in the salesroom when the news that OSWALD had been arrested for the assassination came over the air. When the name OSWALD was spoken, Mr. Bogard said OSWALD was the man who had been in the Downtown Lincoln-Mercury about ten days before to look at cars and was to return later concerning buying one. This was the first time that Mr. Lawrence knew that OSWALD had been in the automobile agency and was a prospective customer of the firm.

Mr. Lawrence said that at no time did he see Mr. Bogard take any papers or card out of his pocket and say the name OSWALD was on them. He said that Mr. Pizzo told Mr. Bogard to go get 'the papers' on OSWALD, but that Mr. Bogard never did this. He said that whenever they have a prospective customer, it is a rule of the firm that they take the name and address of the prospect and write up a possible sale on paper in each case, even though no sale is actually made. This gives them prospects for possible future sales. These papers are filed and maintained for some period of time. He said he never saw any papers that had been drawn up with OSWALD as a prospective buyer, and that Mr. Bogard never did go get the papers, if there ever were any."

Mr. Lawrence continued that during the conversation among the men at the time they were listening to the radio, someone, he believes it was Mr. Bogard, said that he had used Mr. Wilson's demonstrator when OSWALD was in, and that he and OSWALD took a ride in Wilson's car on the day OSWALD was there.

After this conversation, Jack A. Lawrence said that he told Frank Pizzo and Albert Bogard that they should call the FBI and give them this information because everyone should cooperate in helping to clear up this matter. He said that when he suggested this, Mr. Guy Bogard seemed a little nervous and walked off, but would not make the call. He told Frank Pizzo he was going to call the FBI and Mr. Pizzo was in favor of the call. Therefore he called the FBI reporting the above concerning OSWALD, and that then Mr. Pizzo became miffed and appeared angry that the call had been made.

Mr. Lawrence said that shortly thereafter, William Faller, 'the big boss' called him into his office and had a check for Mr. Lawrence, telling him that his services had been good, and they would like to keep him on, but since he had already given notice and decided to leave in a few days, they felt it best that he leave then, and he was paying Mr. Lawrence what was due him. This action caused Mr. Lawrence to believe that Mr. Pizzo had gone to Mr. Faller and told him about the call to the FBI and that Mr. Faller had let him go right away, instead of letting him stay on till the end of the month as he had planned when he gave notice he was leaving.

Mr. Lawrence said that on the day of the assassination, he felt rather bad because he had been out the night before. He did go down to a sales meeting that morning, but left afterwards, driving in his assigned demonstrator to the YMCA where he stayed in Dallas, so he could get some rest and sleep. He said that right after noon he was on his way back to the Downtown Lincoln Mercury Company and was going along the same way that the Presidential party had ridden. When he approached the place where the assassination took place, the police stopped all traffic and he could go no farther. He said since he was due back at the salesroom, he parked the car because he could go no farther and walked the rest of the way. He said he was nervous mainly because of his having been 'out on the town' the night before and because of the shock of learning of the President's assassination. [NARA FBI 124-10268-10303]

The salesman and management of Downtown Lincoln Mercury did not want their establishment associated with OSWALD. This was why Wilson and Pizzo were reluctant to positively identify OSWALD. If not for Jack Lawrence, Bogard's story would never have come to light.

ALBERT BOGARD IS BEATEN

On January 24, 1964, Bogard appeared at the Dallas Office and advised he was willing to be interviewed with the polygraph. He related to Special Agents Arthur E. Carter and C. Ray Hall that on Saturday night, January 11, 1964, while worked as the manager of the Bent L-Bow Tavern in Dallas, Texas, several men came into the tavern, asked to see the manager, then, when Bogard appeared, they proceeded to hit him about the head with a beer bottle, then knocked him down and stomped him about the head. "He said he never had seen these men before, could not identify them, and had no idea why they assaulted him. He said he was hospitalized at Baylor Hospital, Dallas, Texas, for concussion and head cuts, from January 11, 1964, to January 18, 1964. Since his release, he has been taking Dramamine for dizziness, and took his last medication at about 11:00 p.m. on January 23, 1964." [FBI DI-10010461 Arthur E. Carter: LAC] In September 1964 Albert Guy Bogard was in jail for having passed bad checks. [FBI 62-109060-3761] On February 14, 1966, at 41, Bogard allegedly committed suicide by inhaling car exhaust somewhere in Louisiana. Researcher Penn Jones wrote: "Bogard was from Hallsville, Louisiana. He was found dead in his car at the Hallsville Cemetery on St. Valentine's Day, 1966. A hose had been connected to the exhaust end, and the other end inside the car, with the windows up. The ruling was suicide."

The Warren Commission acknowledged that:

The testimony of Albert Bogard received corroboration. The assistant sales manager at the time, Frank Pizzo, and a second salesman, Eugene M. Wilson, said that they recalled an instance when the customer described by Bogard was in the showroom." Paul Oran Brown recalled the name OSWALD as did his wife. You had three people who recalled the name OSWALD. None of these men had ties to the intelligence community, as did Ruth Paine, who said she was with OSWALD during the time he took the test drive with Bogart. Bogart, who spent the most time with OSWALD, remembered his face. Shortly after the assassination Pizzo felt that OSWALD may have been this prospective customer, but was unsure later on. Had any pressure been exerted on him by his boss? Gerald Posner wrote that no other employee of this Lincoln-Mercury dealership corroborated Albert Guy Bogard and so he was "fired soon after the told the story.

The Warren Report stated:

Whereas Bogard stated that the customer said he did not wish credit but wanted to purchase a car for cash, Pizzo and Wilson did indicate that the man did attempt to purchase on credit.

Perhaps Bogard was not privy to these conversations? Why split hairs? Bogart was no a publicity seeker. He said "Was the other salesman notified the FBI." He passed a lie detector test. According to the Warren Report: "On Saturday, November 23, 1963, a search through the refuse of the showroom was made, but no paper bearing OSWALD'S name was found." S.A. DeBRUEYS was one of the FBI Agents who questioned Albert Guy Bogard and made this search. If such a card existed DeBRUEYS would have destroyed it or not conducted a thorough enough search of the large garbage bin behind the showroom to locate it. The FBI ignored Bogard's testimony because it indicated OSWALD did, in fact, know how to drive. More importantly, his testimony indicated that OSWALD was under the impression that he was going to have some money, for the first time in his life, in two or three weeks. This sounded like a promise that was made to someone who was going to be dead in two or three weeks. It was clear from this incident that OSWALD had another life that was unbeknownst to the FBI. Bogard's beating came around the same time that the FBI was debating how to discredit his testimony. The circumstances surrounding his suicide deserves a closer look. Additional evidence that OSWALD was able to drive came from insurance agent Edward A. Brand who told this researcher:

My office was diagonally across the street from the rooming house on North Beckley where OSWALD stayed. He came in to buy some insurance. I said, 'Let's see your drivers license.' It was in the name of O.H. LEE. I said, 'Well, what kind of a car do you have?' He said, 'I don't have one right now but I'll be buying one in a short time - in another week or so. This was about a week from the assassination. And he said, 'I'll be paying cash for it, so I won't need collision, but I will have to have liability.' I asked him if he had an accidents or tickets. He said he had gotten a speeding ticket in San Antonio. I was questioned by the FBI about this, but they took the viewpoint that he couldn't drive, and did not have a license, so my testimony was disregarded.

OSWALD allegedly stayed with Ruth Paine and Marina Oswald through Monday, November 11, 1963, which was Veterans Day. That Monday, Ruth Paine was away from home from 9:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. On November 27, 1963, Cecil A. Hamblen, the early night manager of the Dallas Western Union Office told his superior that about two weeks earlier, circa Wednesday, November 13, 1963, he remembered OSWALD sending a telegram from the office to Washington, D.C., possibly to the Secretary of the Navy, and that the application was completed in an unusual form of hand printing. The next day Cecil A. Hamblen told a magazine correspondent that he remembered having seen OSWALD on prior occasions collecting money orders for small amounts of money. Soon thereafter, Cecil A. Hamblen signed a statement relating to both the telegram and the money orders, and specifying two instances in which he had seen the person he believed to be OSWALD in the office; in each instance the man had behaved disagreeably, and one other Western Union employee had been involved in assisting him. The second employee, A. Lewis, did recall one of the occurrences described by C.A. Hamblen, and believed the money order in question was delivered to "someone at the YMCA." At the request of the FBI, officers of Western Union conducted a complete search of their records in Dallas and other cities for money orders payable to LEE HARVEY OSWALD or to any of his known aliases or for telegrams sent by OSWALD or by his known aliases. In addition, all money orders addressed to persons at the Dallas

YMCA, during October, and November 1963, were inspected; as were all telegrams handled from November 1, 1963, through November 22, 1963, by the employee whom Cecil A. Hamblen assertedly saw service OSWALD; as were all telegrams from Dallas to Washington sent in November 1963. No indication of any such money order, or telegram, was found in any of these records. Note that Western Union conducted this search, not the FBI. The style of OSWALD'S handwriting was unknown to Western Union officials and if OSWALD used an unknown alias they would have been unable to identify OSWALD as the recipient or originator of the document. A Justice Department document revealed the conclusions of the Warren Commission "could not include the possibility of money sent, or received (deleted), if OSWALD had used any other name than that of LEE HARVEY OSWALD, or his known aliases." [CIA 454, 423-152] A Memorandum for the Record signed by Richard Helms that concerned OSWALD'S bank accounts, safety deposit records and general finances remained deleted. [CIA 454, 423-152]

The FBI:

Hamblen informed the Warren Commission representative he could not state for certain whether the individual in question was OSWALD or not. He furnished conflicting information to the Warren Commission representative, and was unable to produce any evidence that OSWALD had ever received, or sent, a telegram or money order through the Western Union office in Dallas. Hamblen claimed a fellow employee, Mrs. McClure, could verify his information...Mrs. McClure denied ever seeing OSWALD in the Western Union office.

"Hamblen's superiors" concluded "that this whole thing was a figment of Mr. Hamblen's imagination." The Warren Commission agreed. [WR p332] Cecil A. Hamblen, born August 2, 1907, died in June 1971. On Thursday, November 14, 1963, Ruth Paine drove OSWALD'S daughter June to a T. B. Clinic: "There was a slight suspicion that she might have been exposed to T. B."

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1963 TO SUNDAY NOVEMBER 17, 1963

On November 15, 1963, OSWALD did not visit Marina Oswald and Ruth Paine. Marina Oswald remembered that during a telephone conversation that took place on Monday, November 18, 1963 OSWALD said he had waited for some time on line on Saturday, November 16, 1963, to take his driver's test. Eventually he gave up, and went home to 1026 North Beckley. Ruth Paine testified:

Then he called us Saturday afternoon of November 16, 1963, to say he had been and tried to get his driver's permit but that he had arrived before closing time but still too late to get in because there was a long line ahead of him, the place having been closed the previous Saturday for election day and the following Monday, November 11, 1963, Veterans Day. There were a lot of people who wanted to get permits and he was advised that it wouldn't pay him to wait in line. He didn't have time to be tested.

An undated application for a Texas Drivers License was found among OSWALD'S effects. No one who took a driver's test on Saturday, November 16, 1963, verified OSWALD'S presence on line. The Warren Report cited no witnesses to OSWALD'S whereabouts on Saturday, November 16, 1963, except for Sterling and Homer Wood, who placed OSWALD at the Sportsdrome Rifle Range. Ruth Paine told the Warren Commission that the reason OSWALD did not go to Irving that weekend was because Marina asked him not to:

She felt he had overstayed his welcome the previous weekend which had been three days, November 9, 1963, November 10, 1963, November 11, 1963, because he was off Veterans Day, November 11, 1963, and she felt it would be simpler and more comfortable if he didn't come out.

Jenner: It is your definite recollection that the failure to come on the weekend preceding the assassination was not at his doing but at the request of Marina, under the circumstances you have related?

Paine: I am absolutely clear about that.

GLADYS JOHNSON

As for Sunday, November 17, 1963, S.A. Bardwell Odum questioned Gladys Johnson, OSWALD'S landlady about OSWALD'S whereabouts.

During the period he stayed at this address OSWALD would customarily leave home on Friday morning for work and not return to the house until Monday afternoon after work. The only exceptions to this routine were as follows:

1. On Monday, November 11, 1963, he did not return since after being gone since Friday morning November 8, 1963, but returned the night of Tuesday, November 12, 1963, after work.
2. On the weekend of November 15, 1963, November 16, 1963, and November 17, 1963, OSWALD was at the house and was not absent to any extent. Mrs. Johnson remembers seeing him on Saturday November 16, 1963, when he made a trip to a nearby washateria and she recalls seeing him in the living room on Sunday, November 17, 1963, watching television.
3. On the night of November 21, 1963, OSWALD did not return to the house, and Mrs. Johnson has not seen him since that time.

Mrs. Johnson stated that OSWALD stayed 'closer to home' than any roomer she has ever had before. He did not drink or smoke and rarely left his room in the evening except to watch television in the living room or to go to the nearby Cabell's Market where he usually got bread, lunch meat and jelly to prepare meals in his room. He did not talk to anyone, and had no visitors. To her recollection he never spent an evening away from the house except the evenings previously mentioned when he indicated he was going to Irving, Texas.

When Gladys Johnson testified before the Warren Commission she stated:

Ball: Now in the weekend, that would be the weekend before the assassination, he stayed there.

Johnson: He remained there.

Ball: Did you, or did you not, see him go out that weekend?

Johnson: I did not see him go out, I did not, no sir."

(Mr. Johnson leaves room)

Ball: Let me ask you this; did he, that weekend, on Saturday, make a trip to a place where they wash clothes?

Johnson: Well, I think he did go across to that Washeteria. I think he did.

Ball: Did you see him go any place, except for that, on that weekend.

Johnson: That's the only time. I had just forgotten that, but I do remember he carried some clothes out of the house that morning and the Washeteria is right across the street, less than a block.

Ball: But he left his room?

Johnson: And he wasn't gone long, and I didn't see him return with any clothes, but I do know that he was gone just about long enough to do a wash.

The testimony of Gladys Johnson was questionable. Firstly, the FBI agent who questioned Johnson was suspected of having taken part in the FBI cover-up. Secondly, why would OSWALD miss a weekend with his family just to stay in his room or watch television or do his laundry? Thirdly, the only witness to his whereabouts was Gladys Johnson. None of the other roomers observed him nor did anyone in the laundermat. [WC Test. Mrs. Arthur Carl (Galdys) Johnson; WR p740; Johnson Lee & Marina p410]

THE TELEPHONE CALL TO OSWALD

On Sunday, November 17, 1963, Ruth Paine telephoned OSWALD at 1026 North Beckley. Ruth Paine recalled: "June was fooling with the telephone dial, and Marina said, 'Let's call papa' and asked me ..." She asked for OSWALD by his real name, and was told that he did not live at that address. Ruth Paine: "I said, 'Is LEE OSWALD there?' He said 'There is no LEE OSWALD living here.' As best I can recall. This is the substance of what he said. I said, 'Is this a rooming house?' He said 'Yes.' I said 'Is this WH 3-8993?' And he said 'Yes.' I thanked him and hung up...I said to Marina, they don't know of a LEE OSWALD at that number. She looked surprised."

Ruth Paine stated: "I think the guy was not too well put together. He gave us a phone number for us to call so we could let him know if his baby came. But he didn't tell us he was using an assumed name. After he hadn't been out that weekend, Marina wanted to talk to him. I didn't think of it, quite frankly." Sunday, November 17, 1963, was the day that OSWALD was sighted at the Sportsdrome Rifle Range.

MANUEL OCCARBERRO: SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1963 THE THEORY

On the morning of Sunday, November 17, 1963, evidence suggested that HEMMING flew OSWALD and several members of Alpha-66 to Sulphur, Oklahoma. On November 23, 1963, Willis Price, a service station owner in Sulphur, Oklahoma, told the Police Chief Charles J. McBee that on November 17, 1963,

...a person believed to be identical with LEE HARVEY OSWALD accompanied by two Cuban males, and one Cuban female, were in a service station in Sulphur operated by Price. The female made two local telephone calls from a telephone at the service station, speaking in Spanish. It is not known to whom she was speaking. These people were driving a 1958 Ford, two tone color, dark brown and lighter color, no license plate information obtained. The Chief of Police stated there are some Cubans in Sulphur. Willis Price is considered reliable as he operates a service station and is well-known to the Chief of Police and other members of the Police Department. Willis Price identified the person referred to above as OSWALD on the basis of pictures of OSWALD shown on television and in newspapers. Willis Price, according to the Chief of Police, was positive of his identification. [FBI OK City 89-41-46]

The FBI questioned Willis D. Price on November 23, 1963:

Willis D. Price, 1123 Broadway, advised he is the operator of the FINA Service Station at 1123 Broadway, and at about 2:00 p.m. on Sunday, November 17, 1963, a group of people who appeared to be Cubans, with a light complexioned man who resembled LEE HARVEY OSWALD, drove up beside his service station in about a 1958 Ford Station Wagon, and some of them came to his station. He has seen a photograph in the Daily Oklahoman newspaper of OSWALD, and the light complexioned man with the Cubans resembled OSWALD. He has since however seen television pictures of LEE HARVEY OSWALD which did not very much resemble the man in the company of the Cubans. The automobile which they parked by the side of his station appeared to be of white and tan color with a white center and tan bottom. He did not know what license the vehicle carried. In the station wagon were two women who never got out of the vehicle. One of these women appeared to be about 40, and the other older. The following described people got out of the station wagon and came into the service station: a woman in her late 20's or early 30's; a tall slender girl about 13 years of age; a child 2 or 3 years old; two men, both dark complexions, and wide across the face. Both appeared to be Latins, were about 5' 6" to 5' 7" tall and wore slacks. One man who resembled the photograph of OSWALD, was light complexioned, pale, appeared to be in late 20's or early 30's, about 6' tall, 170 pounds, thin and slender, light brown hair, reasonably high forehead, thin lips, and wore slacks. The man who resembled OSWALD spoke in the language of the other people who looked like Cubans.

Before getting out of the station wagon they asked if they could use the telephone in the station, and he gave consent. When they first drove up, the man who resembled OSWALD was in the back seat and by motion attracted his attention and motioned for one of the women to talk to him. She held up a small black book with a name and box number on it which he does not remember. From actions they thought the box number was a street number or address. The woman who held up the black book spoke broken English. Price told her it was a mailing address and not a street address.

When the group of people came into the service station the woman, who appeared to be in her 20's, asked for a telephone directory, and on obtaining the directory, she looked up a number. She made a telephone call. The first number she attempted to call did not answer, and she looked up another number. She telephoned a second time and spoke in broken English. At the last of her telephone conversation she gave some name as though referring to her own name, and said 'from Cuba.' She then hung-up and talked to the light complexioned man resembling OSWALD in a foreign language. These people then left, driving west of Highway 7, after getting into their station wagon. He does not remember which direction they came from. The man resembling OSWALD never spoke English in the station, but only used motions to Price. He looked American, but spoke in the same language as the people he was with.

Willis Price, 62, died of a heart attack in 1989.

OSWALD'S ADDRESS BOOK: "TO SULPHUR"

The last page of OSWALD'S Spanish-English, English-Spanish dictionary contained an illegible phrase. On April 2, 1964, the FBI sent this analysis to the Warren Commission:

TRANSLATION OF UNKNOWN PHRASE

Commission Exhibit 116

Illegible phrase contained on the last page of the University of Chicago Spanish-English, English-Spanish Dictionary.

On the assumption that the last two penciled lines on the last page of this dictionary may be Spanish, it appears that the first word could be "YO" and the second word either SOPA or SOPLE and the third word EL. The fourth word is not readable from a Spanish aspect.

YO-I

SOPA - SOUP

SOPLE - I BLEW

EL - THE

On the assumption that the questioned phrase is written in Russian and English using a combination of Latin and Cyrillic script, it is possible that the first word could be TO, '20' or '70.' The second word could be Russian for '88 GUM,' '88 SULPHUR,' or 'SARA. The third word could be the Russian word AND. The last word in this phrase could possibly be the Russian word LETTERS or the Russian name NINA. [FBI 105-825552419 NARA FBI 124-10047-10005]

DR. MIGUEL L. DESOCARRAZ, M.D.

The FBI interviewed every Cuban in Sulphur, Oklahoma. Dr. Miguel L. DeSocarraz at the Oklahoma Veterans Hospital residence, Post Office Box 200, advised the FBI on November 23, 1963, that ...he is a Cuban refugee and very anti-communist. The following people contacted him on Sunday, November 17, 1963: Manolito Rodriguez, [Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro] with his wife and two or three year old baby; two other men, both of whom were dark complected, one having the name of Salazar and the other Chito Rivero. With Salazar and Rivero were their wives, and a girl about 13 or 14 years of age. Salazar is dark, short, husky and in his 20's. Rivero is dark, short, thin and in his 50's. All of these people were in an older Ford Station Wagon of cream color. He did not know a 1958 Ford from other year models.

Socarraz, after examining a photograph of LEE HARVEY OSWALD which appeared in the Daily Oklahoman newspaper, stated the Manolito Rodriguez possibly did resemble OSWALD. However, he is certain Rodriguez is not identical with OSWALD. Rodriguez cannot speak English. He resides at 1208 Huspeth (Oak Cliff) Dallas, Texas, with telephone number FR-4-5923...Rodriguez is employed as a welder in Dallas.

Miguel L. DeSocarraz, contacted in June 1993, asked: "How did you get my telephone number? Did you pose as someone else when you spoke to my brother in Miami? You were not that doctor that he was thinking of, were you? I think what you find in the document there is all I can tell you. There is nothing else I can add. I don't want you to call me anymore." [DeSocarraz telephone 210-428-7559 423-8094]

DORA CAUSA

A Miami FBI report stated: "Another government agency which conducts intelligence and personnel investigations [CIA]," advised that one of its sources reported hearing from Dora Causa Ramirez this statement by Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, the leader of Alpha-66, on November 21, 1963: 'Something very big would happen soon that would advance the Cuban cause.'" Dora Causa told the FBI that Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo referred to an anti-Castro action, and added that her sister had married a member of Alpha-66. The CIA commented: "This remark, when taken out of context, is impossible to evaluate, but it is typical of exile rumors which, being interpreted by exiles, support whatever hypotheses they are expounding on at any given moment." [CIA 88-27] The CIA planned to screen the Cuban rumors by "preliminary investigating of more plausible ones before passing them on to the U.S. agencies." The teletype continued:

'D' reports one Manuel Rodriguez (Matronym unknown) living in Dallas, Texas, was known to be violently anti-President Kennedy. WAVE traces indicate 'E,' 5310 Columbia, Dallas, Texas, as a member of the Second National Front of Escambray, and organizer of Dallas Second National Front of Escambray. Reference are (deleted) Volume 7, DBA 49531 Dated August 28, 1963 pages 14 and 18. This nebulous identification may be in some way related Paragraph 2 statement which Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo is reported to have made. While this relationship is obviously most circumstantial and nebulous, it is being passed to FBI and Secret Service Miami as a reflection of the rumors which are currently circulating. Information will be carefully identified as rumor. C/S COMMENT: "Reaction of exile community to sudden death of President Kennedy is one of shock and grief." [CIA 88-27]

The United States Secret Service issued a Protective Research Memorandum on Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro which described him as known to be "violently anti-Kennedy."

MANUEL RODRIGUEZ OCCARBERRO

On May 25, 1964 MANUEL RODRIGUEZ ORCARBERRO voluntarily appeared and was interviewed at the office of the FBI in Dallas, Texas. He furnished his home address as 2311 Nicholson Street, Apartment D, home telephone, WH 6-8429. He said he was employed at the Curtis Mathes Manufacturing Company 2220 Young street, Dallas, Texas. RODRIQUEZ advised further concerning his background and indicated he had taken primary school work in Cuba and had finished one year of commercial school in Camaguey, Cuba in 1942. Due to a large family end economic necessity, he had become employed at a very young age when he was approximately fifteen years old. He had first worked for a number of years at grocery store called Casa Estrada in Camaguey, Cuba until about 1955. He thereafter took a Job with Coca-Cole Company in Camaguey where he worked until about 1958. In about February, 1958, he joined the FIDEL CASTRO army in the mountains and served under HUBERT MATOS until shortly after October 21, 1959. It was on this latter date that HUBERT MATOS defected from CASTRO. RODRIGUEZ said he thereafter worked for a short time at the Coca-Cola Company in Camaguey. Because he desired to fight against CASTRO, he left his job and took asylum as an exile in the Brazilian Embassy in Havana on September 9, 1960. He remained in the Brazilian Embassy until November 29, 1960 on which date he entered the United States at Miami, Florida as a refugee.

RODRIGUEZ said that desiring to engage in activities against FIDEL CASTRO, he had organized a cell Unit of the Second National Front of the Escambray (SNFE). RODRIGUEZ advised, at the present time he is the president of SNFE at Dallas. He said this group is sending an average of $200 a month to the national headquarters of the SNFE at Miami, Florida for the purpose of furthering the aim of the organization which has as its final goal the ousting of FIDEL CASTRO.

Rodriguez pointed out that the SNFE had until very recently been very inactive. He said however, a national officer of SNFE ANTONIO VECIANA had come to Dallas and made a speech on about April 19, 1964 at which time he outlined the purpose of SNFE - Alpha 66. RODRIGUEZ said that since the arrival of VECIANA in Dallas for the purpose of this speech, the members of the SNFE had shown a greater interest in the organization. He advised meetings are held on a regular bi-weekly basis. He stated members in attendance vary in number with a maximum of approximately twenty. He said these meetings are almost always held in the home of JORGE SALAZAR's residence, 3126 Hallandale, Dallas, Texas.

Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro, born in Cuba on November 8, 1928, was a former Officer in the Army of Fidel Castro. Occarberro had worked for the Coca-Cola Company until February 1958, when he joined the rebel army of Fidel Castro. He served with Fidel Castro until October 21, 1959. He entered the United States around this time, then returned to Coca-Cola in Cuba, where he worked clandestinely against Castro. He worked as a dishwasher in Miami Beach, and remained there until September 6, 1963, when he registered as an alien in Dallas.

RODRIGUEZ advised he had made no contacts in Dallas with any American persons or other persons concerning the purchase of arms or ammunition by SNFE. He said members of the Dallas Unit of this organization are to collect whatever money they can and send that money to the national headquarters of SNFE to serve the national purposes of this organization. RODRIGUEZ explained that the SNFE - Alpha 66 is a exile Cuban organization which is anti-CASTRO and anti-Communist /which has for its goal the ultimate ousting of CASTRO and his purchase of power in Cuba.

Concerning the report he was violently anti-President KENNEDY, RODRIGUEZ stated he had been an admirer of President KENNEDY, both as a person and as a politician. He said he recognized that the policies of President KENNEDY concerning politics in Cuba had been directed by the whole international situation. He said he believed President KENNEDY had been a fighter against communism and a friend of the Cuban people. He said he had never made any derogatory statements against President KENNEDY and did not recall that such statements had been made in any of the SNFE meetings at Dallas. RODRIGUEZ pointed out the SNFE had bought and placed flowers at the place of the KENNEDY assassination in Dallas. He said he had heard rumors that many Cubans were critical of the policies of President KENNEDY as regards the Cuban situation, but he thought that most of the critics of the United States Cuban policy were ex-Batista followers.

The FBI never interviewed any of the individuals name by Miguel L. DeSocarras except for Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro. In 1993 Wallace Heitman stated, "I may have interviewed him. I spoke Spanish, I did interview a lot of Cubanos. I remember Alpha-66, but Manuel Rodriguez is too common a name." The Dallas Chapter of Alpha-66 picketed U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson when he spoke at Dallas Municipal Auditorium in October 1963. They staged a protest march to advertise the plight of Cuban exiles. According an FBI informant in Alpha-66: "The occasion of Stevenson's speech was selected because he is the U.N. Ambassador and was involved in the decision which reportedly withdrew air support from the invasion forces at the Bay of Pigs." [FBI 105-96777 6.25.64]

BUDDY WALTER'S INFORMANT LINKS OSWALD WITH ALPHA-66

After the Kennedy assassination, Detective Buddy Walthers of the Dallas Police Department wrote:

November 23, 1963. Mr. Decker: At about 8 a.m. this morning, while in the presents (sic) of Allan Sweat, I talked to Sorrel, Dallas Secret Service head. I advised him that for the past few months at a house at 3128 Harlendale some Cubans had been having meetings on the weekends and were possibly connected with the 'Freedom for Cuba Party' of which OSWALD was a member. November 26, 1963. I don't know what action the Secret Service has taken, but I learned today that sometime between seven days before the President was shot these Cubans moved from this house. My informant stated the Subject OSWALD had been to this house before. Buddy Walthers. [County of Dallas Supp. Inv. Rep. Sheriff's Dept; 7 WH 548; cf. 19 WH 503,505]

Buddy Walther's lead was never followed up. The Secret Service never contacted Buddy Walther's informant or traced down the occupants of 3128 Harlendale to question them about OSWALD. An investigation of this nature was never conducted, since it might have linked OSWALD to Alpha-66. The bottom of the Buddy Walthers document indicated no action was ever taken on it by the Dallas Police Department.

THE CIA WAS UNAWARE OF 3128 HARLANDALE

In 1975 the CIA advised: "Our file search to date had revealed no information concerning [3126 Hollandale or 3128 Harlendale]. However, we are not satisfied that all possible CIA records have been consulted. A final report concerning this question will be forwarded to the [Rockefeller] Commission by May 2, 1975." [CIA 1643-1088 p24] Later that year the CIA concluded:

The files of appropriate components of the Plans Directorate have been checked and show no record of any CIA contact with any anti-Castro group in Dallas. Alpha-66 is not listed in the 1963 Dallas telephone directory. Dallas city map and 1963 crisscross directory reveal no street named Harlendale. There is no Hollandale Street in Dallas. However, there is a Hollandale Lane in Farmers Branch, Texas - a Dallas suburb. Numbers on Hollandale Lane run from 2800 to 3028. There is no 3126. In 1963 one Lloyd Humphreys resided at 3028 Hollandale Lane, the last house on the street. CIA has no record of Humphreys. [CIA 1636-1086 rel. 4.22.82]

THE FBI LOCATES 3128 HARLANDALE

In December 1975 FBI Bureau Supervisor William O. Cregar, the FBI/CIA liaison in 1967, revealed the results of a review of information in the Dallas file on the 3126

Harlendale, Rodriguez, OSWALD connection conducted by FBI S.A. Gemberling just before he had his August 1975 heart attack. It revealed:

In connection with the above enclosure it was noted from review of Dallas files that the address referred to by Deputy Sheriff Walthers was erroneously listed as 3128, but the actual address was 3126 Harlendale Street. Review of Dallas file reflects that the original organization known as Alpha-66 held meetings during early 1963 at 3126 Harlendale Street, Dallas, Texas, and a letter furnished to the FBI Dallas by a Mrs. Dorothy Keasler Klein, 4141 Prescott Street, Dallas, Texas, reflects that she had received an unsolicited form letter from that organization on November 19, 1963, asking for donations. The letter from Alpha-66 was on letterhead stationery, which reflected the above address and was signed by Manuel Rodriguez, General Secretary of Alpha-66.

The FBI added:

A review of Dallas file 134-332 reflects that former DL 282-S whose identity is known to the Bureau, Bufile 105-131209 with in a top leadership position in Alpha 66 at Dallas Texas in 1963 and 1964 and he reported to the Dallas Office during 1964 that meetings of this group were held during 1963 at the residence of one Jorge Salazar 3126 Harlendale Street, Dallas, Texas. According to this source, as well as other informants familiar with Cuban matters during the period 1963 to 1964, LEE HARVEY OSWALD was not known to have ever associated with, or been known to, Alpha-66 members, and there is no information that he ever visited 3126 Harlendale Street, Dallas, Texas as reported by Deputy Sheriff Walthers. Dallas Office files contain no identifiable information regarding "Freedom for Cuba Party" or JORGE SALAZAR. According to Dallas file 134-332, DL 282-S moved to Puerto Rico during 1972 and accordingly Dallas file 134-332 was closed on November 28, 1972. This source's last known symbol number was SJ 1140-S.

The FBI located Harlendale Street, a fund raising letter from Alpha-66 with the return address of 3126 Harlendale Street, and an informant who had attended Alpha-66 meetings there. This information was no doubt passed to the CIA by the Dallas FBI or by Headquarters in 1963 - it was clearly of interest. Yet the CIA denied that 3126 Harlendale Street existed. The CIA attempted to conceal the Alpha-66 connection. PHILLIPS, Antonio Veciana and Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro were all associated with Alpha-66; OSWALD was tied in with Alpha-66 by a Dallas Police informant and by Antonio Veciana, who had seen him with PHILLIPS, the mastermind of Alpha-66. Antonio Veciana said he had been to Harlendale Headquarters but had never seen OSWALD there. Antonio Veciana told Gaeton Fonzi:

They found out OSWALD had a neighbor called Rodriguez. He was surprised because one of the heads of Alpha-66 in Dallas was named

Rodriguez and Veciana was afraid that they would think that he was involved, and that's why he didn't say anything to Diosdado. But later he found out it wasn't the same Rodriguez, that OSWALD'S neighbor was a Mexican. Further explanation: He says he heard that afternoon when Kennedy was killed that a Latin named Rodriguez may have been involved in the assassination and when he heard that he got scared because he knew that he knew a Rodriguez in Dallas who was connected with Alpha-66. [SSCIA 157-10007-10311]

On July 16, 1964 MANUEL RODRIGUEZ ORCARBERRO who resides at 2311 Nicholson Drive, Apartment D, home telephone number WH 6-6429, and is employed at Curtis Mathes Manufacturing Company, 2220 Young Street, Dallas, Texas, telephonically communicated with Special Agent WALLACE K. HEITMAN and desired to furnish information. He appeared at the FBI Office in Dallas, and was interviewed.

RODRIGUEZ stated he desired to inform that a new group of Second National Front of Escambray (SNFE; (Operation Alpha 66) had been formed in Fort Worth, Texas. The president of this new group is RENE de la MAZA whose residence is 2701 Springdale Avenue, Fort Worth 68, Texas, telephone TE 4-2068. De la MAZA is an attorney by profession. The secretary of the organization of the new group is ARMAND GATELL, 313 Sergeant's Street, Fort Worth. Both de la MAZA and GATELL speak good English as well as Spanish, their native tongue. RODRIGUEZ stated further the Cuban refugees in Fort Worth had arranged a musical to be held in some public gathering place in Fort Worth Texas, to which Cuban refugees and other interested persons were invited. The purpose of the musical was to raise money to send to the national headquarters of SNFE. RODRIGUEZ stated the Dallas group of SNFE had collected $580 from its members during the month of June, 1964. This money was forwarded to the national headquarters of SNFE. The monthly quota for the Dallas group is $300. RODRIGUEZ said the group invariably meets its quota. RODRIGUEZ advised the Dallas group of SNFE meets every other Sunday, and the meeting place has invariably been at the home of JORGE SALAZAR, a SNFE member. RODRIGUEZ advised meetings are attended by approximately 20 to 25 members. He stated the topics of discussion at these meetings are generally how to raise money to send to national headquarters; the distribution of the English and Spanish publications of the organization which are labeled "News Front Cuba" and "Noticias de Cuba;" and for the actual collecting of dues and other monies from members. RODRIGUEZ advised the Dallas group has confined its efforts solely to trying to unite the Cuban refugee elements in Dallas into one group and to the collection of money which is forwarded to the national headquarters in Miami, Florida. He said no effort has been made nor will Any such effort be made to procure arms and supplies for revolutionary elements within Cuba as such procurement is performed by national headquarters. RODRIGUEZ advised there has been no change in the officers and directors of the Dallas unit of the SNFE. He listed these officers and directors as follows:

President     MANUEL RODRIGUEZ ORCARBERRO
Secretary of   ANTONIO-NAVARRO Organization
Secretary of   EDE GUTIERREZ
Finances
Secretary of   JOSE LECUSAY
Propaganda
Secretary of Acts    ARMANDO-ORDONEZ

Rodriguez stated he is aware it would extremely easy for any anti-Castro group in the United States to become infiltrated with pro-Castro elements. He has met with and discussed politics with all of the officers and directors of the SNFE group at Dallas and he does not think that any these person are pro-Castro in sympathy. He pointed out, however, that he had known the majority of these persons prior to his arrival in Dallas.

THE DEATHS OF BUDDY WALTHERS AND ALLEN SWEATT

In 1969 Buddy Walthers was shot and killed in the course of his police duties. Buddy Walthers was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Allen Sweatt on November 22, 1963, when he referred the 3126 Harlendale Street matter to the United States Secret Service. Allen Sweatt died of heart disease in 1975.

JOHN THOMAS MASEN

During the FBI's investigation of Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro, it discovered that when undercover Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent Frank Ellsworth questioned Dallas gun dealer John Thomas Masen, the name of Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro was mentioned. John Thomas Masen reported that Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro, or one of his associates, had contacted him "for the purchase of weapons in connection with a clandestine Cuban operation, and that he might possibly be involved in other political type activities." Frank Ellsworth stated that Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro was a member of the DRE and John Thomas Masen was a Minutemen. Frank Ellsworth, a former Army Intelligence agent, policeman, and FBI confidential informant was contacted in May 1993: "Well, I worked undercover on him at that time. We were investigating Mr. Masen for gun law violations. He was a licensed gun dealer. But he was making machine guns. I saw him do it, the jury agreed that he did it, and he did time for it. He was apparently connected with the Minutemen. Specifically, he talked about it. I really couldn't say how much of it was hot air, and how much of it was truth. I really wasn't interested in his political affiliations. The name Manuel Rodriguez came up very vaguely." Frank Ellsworth told the Warren Commission that investigating the political affiliations of Thomas Masen and Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro was the responsibility of S.A. Hosty. [WC Griffin Memo 4.16.64]

Frank Ellsworth:

My initial interest in Mr. Masen was two-fold, neither one of which had anything to do with the Cubans. They were stealing Fort Hood blind, hauling weapons out the back gate on 18-wheelers - this wasn't no little bitty job - some GI taking a box or two of ammunition. This stuff was going off in flat bed trailers. They even got away with a medium-sized tank. As far as I know, that thing is still hidden someplace. Our understanding, the snitches that we had, it was the Minutemen. Masen was having this stuff stolen from the National Guard Armory. There was a Master Sergeant that ultimately went to the penitentiary over this. Masen was putting me in touch with him. A couple of guys [Lawrence Reginald Miller and Donnell Darius Whitter] were bringing it to him one night. They ran a red light, and there was a big chase. They ended up wrapped around a telephone pole, and guess what they found in the trunk? All of this stuff. We didn't know anything about this. We were supposed to meet Masen in his place of business at 7:00 a.m. to look the merchandise over. When we showed up there Masen was, to say least, somewhat peeved. We couldn't figure what, in God's name, was the matter with this guy. We'd watched him make machine guns for six weeks and all of a sudden we had to peel him off the ceiling. He finally told us to go next door and get the newspapers. We figured out what happened.

The FBI did have a good deal of information on the Minutemen, but they might not have chosen to talk about it. Quite frankly, it was a real nebulous organization and we weren't sure who belonged to it, and who didn't. There was a lot of overlapping of groups, there was a lotta people claiming to be purchasing for the Cuban revolution, the purchasers were purchasing for resale to all sorts of places. A lot of the deals were set-ups. A real barrel of snakes.

John Thomas Masen was arrested on November 21, 1963, and charged with possession of dynamite by the Dallas Police Department. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms also filed charges against him. John Thomas Masen was contacted in June 1993. He was asked about Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro. He answered:

You know, let me ask you, 30 years ago, what happened with your conversation with your mother? I didn't know Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro. When I spoke to the Senate Intelligence Subcommittee guy, I asked: 'Do you think we had any knowledge or had anything to do with this?' His comment was 'Yer still alive, aren't ya?' The people who had anything to do with this are all dead and gone.

John Thomas Masen claimed he was not incarcerated, but was placed on probation and fined $500. He said that Frank Ellsworth suspected that he had the tank. Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro "advised he does not know (deleted) [Masen?] and the latter has not been in contact with him or any of the other Dallas Alpha-66 officers for the purpose of discussing the collection of arms, or money for the purchase of arms, or for any other reason in connection with anti-Castro activities." John Thomas Masen was one of the two gun dealers in the Dallas area who sold ammunition for OSWALD'S Mannlicher-Carcano. In 1993 John Thomas Masen claimed "Most of the gun shops in the area sold it." The FBI studied samples of the bullets John Thomas Masen sold, and determined that there was no way to know for certain if they were the same bullets fired at President John F. Kennedy.

Frank Ellsworth was interviewed by Warren Commission Counsel Burt Griffin. Burt Griffin had a Secret Service agent drive him to the home of Frank Ellsworth. Frank Ellsworth told him he had arrested John Thomas Masen two days before the assassination for seven violations of the Federal Firearms Act. Frank Ellsworth was asked why he was interviewed at his home. He stated: "I don't have any recollection of where he interviewed me. I frankly thought we did this in the old Federal Building. I don't have any recollection of anyone coming to my house..." [FBI Bufile 105-133465 9.18.64]

ALPHA-66 POST COUP

After November 22, 1963, the FBI kept a close watch on Alpha-66 in Dallas and it notified FBI S.A. Clark Anderson about its investigation. [FBI 105-112098-433] On April 19, 1964, Antonio Veciana gave a speech in Dallas which alluded to the Bay of Pigs fiasco. Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro was interviewed by the FBI in May 1964, during a investigation of Alpha-66 in Dallas. Copies of the interview were sent to the Warren Commission. In November 1964, the investigation of Dallas Alpha-66 was placed on inactive status for six months. By this time, most members were "primarily concerned with making a living for their families instead of engaging in political activities," and most of the leadership of Alpha-66 was employed by Curtis-Mathes. The meetings of the group were held biweekly in the home of Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro. A document dated December 3, 1964, about Alpha-66 was about an interview of Rodriguez and other SNFE members and contained no new information. [FBI 105-112098-537] In 1966 the FBI stated Dallas Alpha-66 no longer existed. Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo had been taken prisoner by the Government of Cuba at the beginning of 1965. Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo was released in 1987. [FBI 105-66754-234]

In 1975 Michael Canfield interviewed Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro in Puerto Rico. Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro said he moved there because he had been persecuted in the United States for being an anti-Communist. Fidel Castro had betrayed him and he vowed to dedicate his life to fighting Communism. He had played an important part in the anti-Batista struggle, and was imprisoned in Cuba for doing so. Upon his release, he joined the army of Fidel Castro. After the revolution he was made a Province Leader. When he discovered that Fidel Castro was a Communist, he fled to the United States, where he worked with the Cuban Revolutionary Council and helped found Alpha-66/Second National Front of Escambray. When questioned about the Oklahoma service station incident, he said "someone thought one of his friends was OSWALD" but "it was just one big mistake that was soon cleared up." At first Manuel Rodriguez Occarberro said the FBI never questioned him about the incident. Michael Canfield produced an FBI report and he remembered, but he said he did not want to talk about the assassination.

OSWALD REACTS TO THE CALL FROM THE ROOMING HOUSE

On the evening of Monday, November 18, 1963, OSWALD called Ruth Paine and Marina Oswald and admonished them for having asked for him by his real name at the rooming house on Sunday November 17, 1963. Ruth Paine testified:

Marina said immediately after [the call] he didn't like her trying to reach him at the phone in his room in Dallas yesterday. That he was angry with her for having tried to reach him. That he said he was using a different name, and she said 'This isn't the first time I felt 22 fires' a Russian expression.

How OSWALD found out about the call was never explained. Presumably he would have found out about it when the call came in, on Sunday, November 17, 1963, since he was supposed to be at the rooming house that day. If he was angry because of a breach of security, why did he wait until the next evening to call Marina and discuss it with her. The answer to this was that OSWALD was not in the ROOMING HOUSE on Sunday, and found out about the call when he returned home from work on the evening on Monday, November 18, 1963.

THE CALL TO OSWALD FROM COVINGTON, LOUISIANA TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1963

On Tuesday, November 19, 1963, OSWALD received a call from Covington, Louisiana, one of his childhood homes, and the place where the INTERPEN training camp had been located. HEMMING told this researcher: "We had an interest in that place for months." A telephone operator in Covington, Louisiana, with eight years on the job remembered:

November 28, 1963. Security Office, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph, New Orleans, advised November 27, 1963, that a long distance operator in Covington, Louisiana, advised she recalled placing a pre-paid person to person call to Dallas, Texas, two or three days prior to November 24, 1963. This call was made to LEE HARVEY OSWALD at the Texas School Book Depository, Dallas. Operator recalled she contacted Dallas information and obtained number for Book Depository and was connected without difficulty. Call reportedly was placed by adult female, very polite, with no speech impediment or accent. Operator stated that answering party in Dallas, who was a female, was asked by operator for LEE HARVEY OSWALD. Answering party advised she did not know OSWALD. Operator recalled that calling party then stated OSWALD was a new employee. Operator believes calling party said OSWALD was the janitor. Operator states that answering party said "Oh" as if she knew who it was and call was completed. Security office of Southern Bell has checked all toll tickets for November 21, 1963, and November 22, 1963, without locating ticket for above call. As Covington, Louisiana, exchange handles call for six Louisiana cities it will be necessary to make IBM run on more than 70,000 tickets in an attempt to locate this call. Security Manager for Southern Bell Telephone advised operator appears sincere, is levelheaded and has seven to eight years service. Security office tried to break her story but were unsuccessful. Operator stated she worried about this information on November 23, 1963, and November 24, 1963, and consulted her parents about same prior to reporting this to her supervisor November 24, 1963. Fact that this matter was discussed with parents was verified by Security office.

The Security office subsequently advised the FBI that all toll tickets in the accounting section were run through IBM November 27, 1963, and no such toll ticket located. Checks included tolls for metropolitan New Orleans, Slidell, Covington, Mandeville, Madisonville, Pearl River and LaCombe, Louisiana. Bonnie Richey, the secretary in the Texas School Book Depository who took the call, stated she had some

Faint recollection of receiving a call on or about November 21, 1963, or November 22, 1963, for some person, name not recalled, whom she did not know, and recalls that during the conversation some mention was made of the person sought being employed as a janitor. She stated that her recollection is very hazy in this regard, and she cannot be more definite about the call, cannot state that she did or did not receive the call, and has no recollection of receiving a call for LEE HARVEY OSWALD. [FBI 62-109060-1603; FBI DL 89-43 Horton 11.28.63; FBI NO 89-69 11.27.63, 11.30.63, S.A. Nathan O. Brown]

OSWALD did not telephone Marina Oswald that day.

MARINA OSWALD AND SOBIR

On November 15, 1963, the Dallas Division was considered the new office or origin of Marina Oswald SOBIR case. On the Tuesday, November 19, 1963, the Washington FBI Field Office sent this airtel, still highly deleted, to the Director. [FBI 105-8255-78] This Airtel was received by the FBI Office in Dallas on Friday, November 22, 1963.

Re cablegram to Director from Legat, Mexico City, October 18, 1963, captioned LEE OSWALD, IS-R. An informant who has furnished reliable information in the past (documentation – anonymous) advised on November 18, 1963 the Lee H. Oswald was recently in contact with the Consular Office, Soviet Embassy, Washington, D.C. at which time he related had recently met with Comrade Kostin, Soviet Embassy, Mexico City. At this time OSWALD indicated to Soviet Embassy that he was unable to remain in Mexico because of Mexican visa restriction of 15 days and that he could not request a new visa unless he used his real name. According to the informant, OSWALD had originally intended to visit Soviet Embassy in Havana, Cuba, where he would have had time to complete his business but could not reach Cuba. The informant stated OSWALD is married to Marina Nichilayeva Oswald, a Soviet citizen, and has a new daughter, Audrey Marina Oswald, born October 20, 1963, Dallas, Texas. OSWALD'S address is known to informant as Box 6225, Dallas, Texas. An additional copy of airtel sent Bureau for transmittal to Legat, Mexico City and one copy being sent New Orleans for information. Should information from informant be utilized in any communication prepared for dissemination, it must be suitably paraphrased to protect source and classified 'Confidential' due to the sensitive nature of investigative technique used and since it reveals investigative interest in a foreign diplomatic establishment. Information being furnished Dallas for whatever action deemed necessary since that office is origin and status of investigation unknown to WFO.

The cablegram that was made reference to in this document dealt with OSWALD'S contact with Valeriy Kostikov. This airtel dealt with his contact with his contact and his wife's contact with the Soviet Embassy in Washington and the fact that Kostikov was a KGB assassin. James Hosty:

You know when I got that? It was after the assassination. Then it disappeared from my workbox. Of course I had gotten earlier communications saying he was at the Russian Embassy, and mentioning Kostikov's name, but not saying Kostikov was a Soviet hit man.

S.A. Hosty told his superiors in the FBI:

To: SAC Kansas City

From: S.A. JAMES P HOSTY JR.

The area of concern to me in any testimony before any committee concerns B. V. Kostikov. It was attached to OSWALD'S file in CCO where I found it after the assassination. This airtel later disappeared. It did not reappear until after I testified before the Warren Commission. Former Assistant to Director Belmont told me I was not to have seen that Air Tel. Former ASAC Clark had hidden this Air Tel from me on orders of Belmont. In view of K's this is understandable, but if the committee begins pressing me this could be a very touchy area.

HOSTY'S SWORN STATEMENT

Kansas City, Missouri

November 14, 1975

I, James Hosty, having been duly sworn make the following statement:

I wish to bring the following information to the attention of the FBI at this time not that I am alleging any wrongdoings on anyone's part but in anticipation of possible questioning about LEE HARVEY OSWALD before any Congressional Committees, the possibility of asking about the handling of any other communications in this case might cause me to have to furnish the following story which could cause considerable difficulty.

On November 22, 1963, shortly after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and shortly after learning that LEE OSWALD was a prime suspect, I attempted to locate his pending file and, after determining the file was out of the jacket, search the Chief Clerk's office. One of the supervisors, Joseph Loeffler, located this file and immediately handed it to me. I noticed on the top of the file was an airtel from the Washington Field Office to the Bureau dated either November 18, 1963, or November 19, 1963, block stamped into the Dallas Office on November 22, 1963. Supervisor Kenneth Howe had apparently seen this airtel since he had written my name in the blockstamp. I don't recall if the airtel had already been serialized. On the way to the SAC's office I read this airtel and was able to determine that it was a letter intercept to the Soviet Embassy in Wash. D.C. telling of his recent contact with V. V. Kostikov, KGB agent in Mexico City. I took this file to the SAC and was shortly thereafter instructed to proceed to the Dallas Police Department to interrogate OSWALD. I never received this airtel through normal channels.

On the afternoon of November 22, 1963, I had advised the Special Agent in Charge of the U.S. Secret Service in Dallas, Texas, that his office in Washington should contact our office in Washington since we had two items of secret information which I could not give him. The two items of secret information were this airtel in question and an earlier CIA communication dated October 10, 1963, from Mexico City concerning OSWALD'S contact.

In the early part of May 1964, while reviewing the file on OSWALD prior to my testimony before the Warren Commission, I was unable to locate this airtel which I considered to be highly pertinent since it involved my knowledge of OSWALD'S contacts with the Soviet authorities.

On approximately May 4, 1964, while being questioned by Warren Commission Staff Attorney Samuel Stern in the presence of former Assistant to the Director Alan Belmont concerning my conversation with Secret Service, I mentioned to Stern the Washington Field Office airtel. Belmont immediately stated in anger 'I told them not to let you see that airtel!'

Upon return to Dallas Office following annual leave, I had occasion to look in volume one of the OSWALD file, and noted both copies of this airtel were now the top serial in volume one. I noted my name had been crossed out and former Assistant Special Agent in Charge Kyle Clark had written his name below mine and initialed it for filing. It should also be noted that shortly after the assassination the case on OSWALD was reassigned from me to ASAC Clark.

It would appear that from the afternoon of November 22, 1963, until sometime in May 1964, former ASAC Clark had retained the serial in his possession which would be proper in view of the fact that the case was assigned to him. I wish to point out I have no contact with any past or present FBI employees who were assigned to the Dallas Field Office on November 22, 1963, in the past year.

I have not previously furnished this information because it did not appear to be pertinent to previous inquiries until it became apparent that the House Committee might reopen the entire OSWALD case. I have read the foregoing statement consisting of four pages.

HOSTY'S STATEMENT FOR THE FBI

November 26, 1975.

I, James Hosty, having been duly sworn make the following sworn statement:

On November 25, 1975, Inspector E. N. Best in regard to issues I raised in my sworn statement of November 14, 1975, made available to me copies of serials 48, 49, 50 and 57 of Dallas file 100-10461, on LEE H. OSWALD. These four serials reflect my name, which was in the blockstamp of all four serials, had been crossed out and what appears to be the initials of S. A. Kenneth Howe, former Dallas supervisor, appears in the blockstamp. On serial 50, there is a notation which appears to be in S.A. Howe's handwriting which reads as follows: "48 - 49 - 50 c/o to JPH October 28, 1963, obtained from his box & initialed into file to complete file following November 22, 1963. H" Serial 57 is a Washington Field Office airtel dated Tuesday, November 19, 1963, which is the airtel referred to in my sworn statement of November 14, 1975. I was unable to locate either copy of this airtel when I reviewed this file in the early part of 1964 prior to my testimony before the Warren Commission. I later discovered both copies of this airtel were in the OSWALD file when I reviewed it in the middle of May 1964 following my return from Washington, D.C.

I can now see that S.A. Howe and not former ASAC Kyle Clark had initialed this serial into file. I had assumed Clark's initials would have been on this serial since this case had been reassigned to Clark sometime after November 22, 1963.

Shortly after I was interviewed by Samuel Stern, Warren Commission Attorney, in the presence of former Assistant to the Director Alan Belmont, on or about May 4, 1964, during which time Belmont stated "I told them not to let you see that Airtel." Belmont and I left the building where the interview occurred to go to lunch. While en route to lunch Belmont told me I had to be careful not to divulge FBI "Z" coverage. It is possible Belmont had this technique in mind when he made the statement "I told them not to let you see that Airtel" although I cannot be certain of this.

Inspector Best on November 25, 1975, also advised me that two reports were sent to the Warren Commission by Washington Field Office concerning the contents of OSWALD's letter to the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C. which was the subject of Wash. Field Office airtel dated November 19, 1963. The first report gave the Soviet Embassy as the source of the letter; the second report of S.A. C. E. Graham dated Wash. Field Office December 2, 1963, stated an anonymous source furnished the same letter. Inspector Best advised this report was furnished to the Warren Commission December 23, 1963.

It is now clear to me that not only did we furnish information on the obtaining of this letter from the Soviet Embassy but we also furnished to the Commission our obtaining this letter from an anonymous source.

After reviewing the above serials it appears that serials 48, 49 and 50, which I had previously received, were placed in the file as the note indicated to bring the file up-to-date. It is possible 57 was handled in the same manner; however, I still have doubts this was true with serial 57, because I was unable to locate either copy in the file, and because of the statement made by Belmont that I was not to see this airtel. James Hosty, Inspector E.N. Best, FBI, Bill D. Williams, SAC Kansas City Missouri.

The FBI did not buy this:

A review of the Dallas Field Office file reflects that S.A. Hosty, the Case Agent, was routinely furnished classified information and communications in the LEE HARVEY OSWALD case. Also, on November 22, 1963, Dallas received a communication dated Tuesday, November 19, 1963, from the Washington Field Office containing classified information relating to OSWALD'S visit to Mexico City. This communication was routinely channeled to Hosty as indicated by Hosty's name appearing in the appropriate place in the block stamp. Hosty's name was then crossed out and the serial was initialed to file by Kenneth Howe. It appears that this communication, while originally directed to Hosty, was retrieved from channels by supervisor Kenneth Howe after the assassination on November 22, 1963, whereupon he crossed out Hosty's name on the block stamp, as was done on Dallas serials 48, 49, 50 and initialed them to file in order that a complete file on OSWALD be assembled. Hosty may or may not have seen this serial prior to the assassination, but there is certainly no data to suggest he was ever denied classified information pertinent to his case on OSWALD prior to the assassination.

Hosty claimed he never saw this document until after the assassination. S.A. Hosty accused Kenneth Howe of having forged his name on this document. This was clearly untrue and even the FBI could not accept this. If S.A. Hosty became aware, on the same day that the President was to visit Dallas, that one of his Subjects had been in contact with a Soviet assassin, he should have contacted the Subject immediately. S.A. Hosty should have contacted OSWALD when he found out he was in contact with the Soviet Embassy. He should have contacted him upon his return to Dallas from New Orleans to ascertain if he intended to open a Dallas Chapter of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee.

Also on Tuesday, November 19, 1963, the New Orleans FBI sent a letter to FBI Headquarters changing the office of origin of the OSWALD investigation from New Orleans to Dallas. The Bureau had sent a similar letter regarding Marina Nikolaevna Oswald on November 15, 1963. On Wednesday, November 20, 1963, OSWALD visited the Post Office and filled out a postal form. [Dallas PD Form 209 Invoice of Search Warrant of Ruth Paine's home 11.26.63 G. F. Rose] That day he received "One notice of attempt to deliver mail, card dated November 20, 1963, to Mr. LEE OSWALD, 251 West 5th Street, Irving, Texas - a parcel to be picked up."

BUELL WESLEY FRAZIER

On the morning of Thursday, November 21, 1963, OSWALD asked Buell Wesley Frazier to drive him to Irving that evening. Scott Malone reported: "Marina was fucking Buell Wesley Frazier, for god sake!" On January 3, 1968, a male who identified himself as Harvey Drown called the FBI Office in Portland, Oregon, and reported that Buell Wesley Frazier was in the process of breaking up the marriage of Robert and Dorothy L. Wilson. Buell Wesley Frazier was having an affair with the wife of Robert Wilson. [NARA FBI 124-10267-10191]

At 4:40 p.m., Buell Wesley Frazier accompanied OSWALD on an uncharacteristic trip to the residence of Ruth Paine. Ruth Paine testified that before this visit, he had always asked her permission in advance. Buell Wesley Frazier asked him why he was going to Irving, Texas, on a Thursday night, rather than on Friday. OSWALD replied, "I'm going home to get some curtain rods...to put in an apartment." Mrs. A. C. Johnson testified that OSWALD'S room had curtains, and curtain rods, and that OSWALD never discussed the subject with her. [WR p130] Linnie Mae Randle commented to her brother about OSWALD'S unusual midweek trip to Irving. Buell Wesley Frazier told her about the curtain rods. OSWALD arrived at the home of Ruth Paine about 5:30 p.m. Ruth Paine was not there. She arrived at about 6:00 p.m. and saw OSWALD playing with his children on the front law. She prepared supper; she OSWALD and Marina Oswald had dinner that evening at about 6:30 p.m.

OSWALD IN THE GARAGE

Ruth Paine had two versions of what OSWALD did next.

Jenner: Were you interviewed by the FBI agents Hosty and Abernathy on November 23, 1963?

Paine: Yes.

Jenner: And in the course of that interview do you recall having stated to these agents that on the evening of November 21, 1963, LEE OSWALD went out to the garage of your home, where he had many of his personal effects stored, and spent considerable time, apparently rearranging his personal effects.

Paine: I don't recall saying exactly that.

Jenner: Could you have said that to the agents?

Paine: I could have said as far as spending considerable time.

Jenner: Now that your recollection is possibly further refreshed, please tell us what you did say to the agents as you now recall.

Paine: You have refreshed nothing. You have got all there was of my recollections in previous testimony...

Jenner: You did not see him in the garage at anytime that evening?

Paine: Did not see him in the garage; no.

Paine testified, however, that when she went to the garage at 9:00 p.m. she noticed that the light was on:

Jenner: The light was on in the garage?

Paine: The light was on in the garage.

Jenner: Was this unusual?

Paine: Oh, it was unusual for it to be on, yes. I realized that I felt LEE, since Marina had also been busy with her children, had gone out to the garage, perhaps worked out there or gotten something. Most of their clothing was still out there, all of their winter things. They were getting things out from time to time, warmer things for the cold weather, so that it was not at all remarkable that he went to the garage, but I thought it was careless of him to have left the light on. I finished my work then turned off the light and left the garage.

Jenner: You stated that he was in the garage, how did you know he was in the garage?

McCloy: She didn't state that.

Paine: I didn't state it absolutely. I guessed it was he rather than she. She was busy with the children and the light had been on, and I know I didn't leave the light on.

OSWALD took the disassembled Mannlicher-Carcano rifle out of its hiding place in Ruth Paine's garage. He removed it from a blanket tied with string. The rifle was wrapped in brown paper, and brown paper tape, obtained at the Texas School Book Depository. OSWALD retired by 9:00 p.m., about one hour earlier than he normally would on a night before work. He slept through the night, untroubled by the events he had supposedly planned for November 22, 1963. Isaac Don Levine had a different version of events. He claimed Marina Oswald told him that OSWALD wanted her to leave Ruth Paine's house, and that OSWALD was awake all night. Priscilla Johnson wrote: "She thinks that he fell asleep about 5:00 a.m." Marina Oswald told the FBI "he did not seem particularly excited or agitated..." [WCE 1401 12.4.64] Ruth Paine reported that Marina "said just the night before [November 21, 1963] LEE had told her he wanted to get an apartment soon, just as soon as he could, together again." Ruth Paine retired at 11:30 p.m.

HEMMING told this researcher:

When Kennedy flew out of Miami, and went back to Washington, nobody was even sure then he was going to Dallas. That was November 18, 1963. But just in case, they were ready. That's how it's done, still done today. OSWALD had no idea what was going down. He hadn't done a goddamn thing, so there's no reason for him not to have a calm demeanor all morning. This guy ain't never killed anybody in his life. OSWALD had never had the opportunity to get into anything except a fucking fistfight. You know? That's why I always figured, they picked the wrong fucking guy. That's where they fucked up. They should have dirtied him up a little bit. But in doing that, they might have changed his personality. Then he wouldn't have been such a good fucking patsy.

OSWALD'S ACTIVITIES: MORNING NOVEMBER 22, 1963
7:00 A.M. THE WEDDING RING

Marina Oswald told the Warren Commission that her husband woke up about 7:00 a.m. on November 22, 1963, and uncharacteristically left his wedding ring behind when he went to work at the Texas School Book Depository. The wedding ring was found in the home of Ruth Paine, after the assassination.

RANKIN: Had your husband ever left his wedding ring at home that way before?

MARINA: At one time, while he was still in Fort Worth, it was inconvenient for him to work with his wedding ring on and he would remove it, but at work - he would not leave it at home. His wedding ring was rather wide and it bothered him. I don't know now, he would take it off at work.

RANKIN: Then this is the first time in your married life that he had ever left it at home where you live?

MARINA: Yes.

In one FBI interview Marina Oswald stated "that the following day (Friday November 22, 1963) when she got up from bed, after the departure of her husband, she noticed his wedding ring laying on the top of their bedroom dresser." [WCE 1787 11.30.63] In another FBI interview she stated "that she had not discovered OSWALD'S wedding ring on the dresser in her room at the Ruth Paine home the morning of November 22, 1963, upon getting up that morning. She said she had not seen it until the police came to her house to search it, following the arrest of OSWALD on Friday November 22, 1963." [FBI 11.30.63 WCE 1820] In another interview she said "she remembered that OSWALD had on his marriage ring on the evening of Thursday November 21, 1963. Marina advised that on Friday November 22, 1963, when the police came to the Paine house and searched it, they found OSWALD'S marriage ring on a dresser in the room which she, Marina, used. She said she had not seen his ring on the dresser before that. She advised the last time she had seen the ring was on the hand of OSWALD the evening before." [FBI 12.4.63 FBI File #DL 89-43] The FBI took note of this: "In the same report, Gopadze reported that Marina said she noticed OSWALD'S wedding ring lying on top of her bedroom dresser when she got up from bed on the morning of November 22, 1963. This is in direct contradiction to statements Marina has made to us --- these being that she did not know OSWALD had left his wedding ring until after the police found it." [NARA FBI 124-10171-10399]

7:00 A.M.

Tom Bargas told the FBI: "...he knew OSWALD was married only because he noticed this fact on OSWALD'S employment application." [FBI DL 89-43 11.23.63 Madland and Jennings] Marina was just telling the authorities what they wished to here because she was scared. OSWALD'S wedding ring was found in the Paine residence. The only evidence that it was not OSWALD'S usual custom to leave his wedding ring at home was the testimony of Marina Oswald and Ruth Paine. Tom Bargas contradicted them. If OSWALD'S ring bothered him, why would he wear it to a job that involved moving books? He would've had to remove it and chance loosing it. The Warren Commission was attempting to convict a man for murder because he forgot his ring that day? Also if OSWALD had planned to shoot the President that day, wouldn't he at least have awakened his wife and said goodbye? Kissed his children goodbye? OSWALD seemed to take pride in his family. Most contemporary assassins did not have families. Yigdal Amir, Arthur Bremer, Sirhan Sirhan and John Hinkley all were single. OSWALD did not bother to leave Marina a note similar to the one he prepared in regard to the Walker Incident. If he planned to kill President John F. Kennedy why didn't OSWALD take his revolver to work that morning, with the rifle? He might have needed it. Why did he only take $20 with him? Why hadn't he formulated an escape plan? OSWALD'S activities during the early morning hours of November 22, 1963, were no different than usual for OSWALD, except that he brought a package to the Book Depository that morning. Maybe he concentrated on the package and this caused him to forget his wedding ring?

7:15 A.M. THE MANNLICHER-CARCANO

OSWALD left Ruth Paine's house at 7:15 a.m. Ruth Paine testified that she did not see him leave. Marina Oswald agreed - except for one occasion - when she said OSWALD had his lunch sack with him when he left: "I think he had a package with his lunch." [1WH73 - cited by Mary Farrel] OSWALD told the Dallas Police that his "lunch consisted of cheese, bread, fruit and apples, and was the only package he had with him when he went to work." [WR p622] OSWALD was not about to give the police evidence against himself.

RANDLE & FRAZIER SEE OSWALD WITH A PACKAGE

About a half block away from Ruth Paine's house was the home of Linnie Mae Randle. Linnie Mae Randle said that on that morning, while her brother was eating breakfast, she looked out her window and saw OSWALD cross the street and walk toward her home. This was the first time OSWALD came to her house for a lift - Buell Wesley Frazier usually picked him up at Ruth Paine's house. OSWALD was carrying a "heavy brown bag." Linnie Mae Randle recalled: "It tapered, like this, as he hugged it in his hand. It was...more bulky toward the bottom." Linnie Mae Randle thought the color of the bag was similar to the bag found on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository that afternoon.

Buell Wesley Frazier greeted OSWALD at the kitchen door, and they walked to the car together. From the open kitchen door, Linnie Mae Randle saw OSWALD open the right rear door of her brother's car, and place a package on the back seat. Buell Wesley Frazier asked, "What's in the package, LEE?" OSWALD replied, "Curtain rods."

BUELL WESLEY FRAZIER

Buell Wesley Frazier and Linnie Mae Randle testified that from what they could ascertain from the shape of this package, the rifle it contained was different from a Mannlicher-Carcano rifle. They told the FBI OSWALD had carried the package with his hand cupped beneath it, (OSWALD'S palm print was found on the bottom of the bag), tucking the upper part under his armpit. [WR p133-135] A disassembled Mannlicher-Carcano was too long to be carried in this fashion. Both said the package was shorter than a disassembled Mannlicher-Carcano. All of a sudden they are experts on Mannlicher-Carcano configurations? Gimme a break.

Buell Wesley Frazier and Linnie Mae Randle later admitted that they were mistaken about this minor detail. Buell Wesley Frazier: "I only glanced at it...hardly paid any attention to it. He had the package parallel to his body, and it could have extended beyond his body, and I wouldn't have noticed it." [London Weekend Television - Trial of LHO cited by Posner] In any event, they both agreed OSWALD had a package with him that morning.

He had a cheese sandwich and some fruit and that was the only package he had brought with him to work, and he denied that he had brought the package described by Frazier and his sister. [WR p605] OSWALD also denied he told Buell Wesley Frazier that he had curtain rods in the package. When asked if he owned a rifle, OSWALD claimed he did not. [WR p600]

OSWALD realized that his Mannlicher-Carcano rifle had been used to assassinate President Kennedy and he had to disassociate himself from it.

OSWALD ENTERS THE TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY

Buell Wesley Frazier parked in the company parking lot, two blocks north of the Texas School Book Depository. OSWALD took his package, quickly got out, and headed for the Texas School Book Depository. Frazier "states that OSWALD left the automobile ahead of him and in fact preceded him all the way to the building. Frazier informed that he did not catch up to OSWALD and that OSWALD entered the building through the doorway referred to as the Houston Street loading dock. Frazier stated that OSWALD was about 50 feet in front of him as he entered the building." [FBI 105-82555-260] As they crossed the railroad tracks, Buell Wesley Frazier paused to watch the railroad cars. This was the first time OSWALD had not accompanied Buell Wesley Frazier from the lot to the entrance of the building. OSWALD was up to something that morning. When Buell Wesley Frazier entered the building, OSWALD was gone. Jack Dougherty, an employee of the Texas School Book Depository, believed that he had seen OSWALD coming to work, but he did not remember if OSWALD had anything in his hands as he entered. No other employee had seen OSWALD enter that morning. [WR p133; 6WH337; FBI-105-82555-260]

OSWALD brought his disassembled Mannlicher-Carcano with him to the Texas School Book Depository on the morning of November 22, 1963, because he had been instructed to do so. HEMMING had fired the weapon on the weekend before the assassination, and told OSWALD that he liked it a lot and would purchase it for him on next Friday. HEMMING:

Just offer him double the value of his gun. It wouldn't make anyone nervous. A crime like this hadn't occurred since McKinley, it wouldn't have been uppermost in his mind about the President, or any other kind of bullshit.

OSWALD entered the Texas School Book Depository carrying the package, and went up to the sixth floor. He hid the package between some book cartons. HEMMING had assured OSWALD it was to be picked up. OSWALD was told to go to the lunchroom between 12:15 p.m. and 12:45 p.m. so he would not see the person who picked up the rifle. HEMMING:

I would presume he was in the lunchroom. Maybe he was waiting to meet somebody there? Would these people anticipate pictures being taken? What if it was OSWALD in the doorway of the Texas School Book Depository and not Lovelady?

Billy Lovelady, who looked like OSWALD, was photographed in the doorway of the Texas School Book Depository. This led to speculation that he was OSWALD. OSWALD'S Mannlicher-Carcano rifle was used to murder President John F. Kennedy, and then left in the Texas School Book Depository to incriminate OSWALD. The Mannlicher-Carcano rifle could easily be traced to OSWALD'S Post Office box. According to Frank Ellsworth, a former Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agent, after the Kennedy assassination, Dallas Homicide Detective Will Fritz cabled Washington and asked if Frank Ellsworth could be in charge of tracing the weapon: "A mail order place in Chicago came forward without effort on my part. So that ended my part of the firearms investigation. We were gearing up to do some major weapons tracing. It turned out it was unnecessary." FBI S.A. Nat Pinkston disagreed. He said that an informant told him two gun vendors specialized in Mannlicher-Carcanos. He checked with the one in Chicago and found OSWALD'S order form. S.A. Nat Pinkston was listed as having been present at OSWALD'S interrogation, but when questioned, he said he did hear any of it since a plate glass window separated him from the suspect. [Interview with Pinkston by AJ in 1994]

OSWALD'S MOVEMENTS IN THE BOOK DEPOSITORY

The morning passed uneventfully at the Texas School Book Depository. OSWALD was seen on the sixth floor by Charles Douglas Givens, an employee of the Texas School Book Depository, at approximately 35 minutes before the assassination, at 11:55 a.m. [WR p143] At 12:00 p.m., Eddie Piper, an employee of the Texas School Book Depository (born January 23, 1908; died November 1984) said he had seen OSWALD on the first floor of the Texas School Book Depository. [9WH499; 6WH383] At 12:10 p.m. Carolyn Arnold, an employee of the Texas School Book Depository, saw OSWALD on the first floor of the Texas School Book Depository. [WCD 5] Carolyn Arnold's estimate of the time as "a few minutes before 12:15 p.m." may have been early; in a later, signed FBI statement, Carolyn Arnold said 12:25 p.m. [22WH635] Gerald Posner wrote: "In a second statement she did not see him at all." The statement cited read: "I did not see LEE HARVEY OSWALD at the time President Kennedy was shot [12:30 p.m.]." [WCE 1381 V10 p635]

If we allow Carolyn Arnold's testimony, it would have been impossible for OSWALD to have shot the President Kennedy. Someone had been spotted in the sixth floor window of the Texas School Book Depository before 12:25 p.m. If we accept the 12:15 p.m. figure, OSWALD still could not have done it: it took two minutes to walk up the six flights of stairs - longer if he took the elevator; 30 seconds to remove the rifle from the paper; two minutes to assemble it (HEMMING claimed that after reassembly the sight on the rifle would have to be realigned); 30 seconds to load it; two minutes to set up the cartons which shielded OSWALD from anyone on the sixth floor who failed to go behind them. He would not have been ready to fire until 12:22 p.m., three minutes before the motorcade speeded by. Had the President's motorcade been on time (the motorcade was due at the Trade Mart, where the President was scheduled to speak, at 12:30 p.m.) he would have missed his window of opportunity. [WR p.49] OSWALD worked in the Texas School Book Depository. He could have set up his nest and the cartons behind him, hidden the rifle between some boxes, and waited there without drawing suspicion. Why show up at the last moment? When Carolyn Arnold saw OSWALD at 12:25 p.m. (or 12:15 p.m.), he was going to the domino room, which doubled as a first floor lunchroom. When OSWALD got there, the room was empty. No witnesses who were in the domino room at the time of the assassination have ever come forward to testify that OSWALD was not there. Similarly, no one could testify that he was there. OSWALD'S jacket was recovered from the domino room in late November. [WR p163]

Gerald Posner: "Troy West was in the domino room eating lunch from nearly 12:00 p.m. to 12:30 p.m. and did not see OSWALD during that half hour." Gerald Posner cited Volume Six of the Warren Commission Hearings, pages 360 to 361, however, when we examine this text we find no support for Posner's contention:

Belin: How old are you Mr. West?

West: Well, I was born in 1907. That would be 57, I think...I went to the seventh grade, I had to come out of school and go to work on the farm...I have been working at the School Book Depository for 16 or 17 years.

Belin: Are you still working for them?

West: Yes, sir, I am a mail wrapper.

Belin: Where did you go when you got to work?

West: Well, when I first got to work I always made coffee in the morning at the store. That is the first thing I do in the morning.

Belin: Where do you make the coffee?

West: Well, it is down on the first floor in the same department where I wrap mail at.

Belin: I have here a first floor map of the School Book Depository. Here is Elm Street and here is the front entrance. Here is Mr. Truly's office, and here is Mr. Shelly's office. There is the stairway down to the basement and there are elevators and the back stairway. There are the toilets there. About where would you wrap mail there? Here is the domino room and the shower. You are looking here, that is north, that is north Elm Street runs this way and Houston Street runs that way. It is shown on that diagram.

West: Well, my place was in the west side of the other building.

Belin: Was it near the stairway?

West: No; it wasn't close to the stairway.

Belin: Was it closer to the Elm Street side of the building.

West: No, sir.

Belin: What was it close to? The west side is the side near the railroad tracks and the triple underpass. Is that what you think is the west side?

West: Yes sir, that is what I would call the west side.

Belin: Well, now the northwest part is by the stairway and the southwest part would be toward the corner near Elm Street. Do you mean toward the Elm or more toward the wooden dock in the back?

West: Well, it was about, I would say middle ways between Elm and the dock.

Belin: Well, there are a couple of overhead doors on that west side, aren't there?

West: Yes, sir.

Belin: You see where it is marked on the first floor diagram, overhead door and overhead door? Two doorways here on the west side.

West: Yes, sir.

Belin: Then it was near either one of those doorways?

West: Well it was near this one, pretty close to this one.

Belin: Well, it was close to what I would call a doorway, approximately at the middle side of the west wall of the first floor?

West: Yes.

Belin: That is where you wrapped the mail?

West: Yes.

Belin: That is where you have your coffee machine?

West: Yes...

Belin: When did you quit for lunch that day?

West: We always quit at 12:00 p.m. in the day.

Belin: Is that when you quit on November 22, 1963?

West: Yes sir.

Belin: Then what did you do?

West: Well I went in and washed my hands and face and then got ready to put my coffee on. Make it in the morning, and then I make it about 12:00 p.m., between 12:00 p.m. and 12:30 p.m.

Belin: Then what did you do? Did you put your coffee on?

West: Yes sir.

Belin: In the west part of the first floor where you generally work?

West: Yes.

Belin: Then what did you do?

West: I went to get my lunch to eat a bite right there close to my machine, by my wrapping machine that I use all the time, that I always kept my lunch. I have a little place underneath and I keep it there all the time...

Belin: Now after you quit for lunch you made coffee then?

West: Yes sir.

Belin: Where did you make the coffee?

West: I made the coffee right there close to the wrapping mail table where I wrap mail.

Belin: Then what did you do?

West: Well, I sit down to eat my lunch.

Belin: Then what did you do?

West: Well, I had just, after I made the coffee, I just had started to eat my lunch because I was a little hungry - I didn't eat anything that morning before I went to work - and I had started to eat my lunch. But before I got through, well, all of this was, I mean the police and things was coming in, and I was just spellbound. I just didn't know what was the matter. So I didn't get through eating. So I had to eat about half my lunch and that is all.

Belin: Did you hear any shots fired?

West: I didn't hear a one.

Belin: Did you see anyone else on the first floor when you were eating your lunch? Anyone else at all did you see on the first floor?

West: It wasn't anybody. I didn't see anybody around at that time.

Belin: At any time while you were making coffee or eating your lunch, did you see anyone else on the first floor?

West: No sir, I didn't see.

Belin: Where did you make the coffee?

West: I made the coffee right there close to the wrapping mail table.

Belin: Then what did you do?

West: Well, I had just, after I made coffee, I just started to eat my lunch because I was a little hungry. But before I got through...the police and things were coming in.

Belin: Did you see anyone else on the first floor while you were eating your lunch? Anyone else at all did you see on the first floor?

West: No sir, I didn't see.

Belin: Did you see Roy Truly coming in at all that time? Do you know Mr. Truly?

West: Yes, sir I think he came in with the police.

Belin: Were you facing the elevator when you were eating your lunch?

West: I would always be with my back towards the elevators.

Troy West was on the same floor as OSWALD, not in the same room. Troy West's statement to the FBI read: "When JFK was shot I was on the first floor making coffee for the employees. I was alone at the time and did not know JFK had been shot...I do not recall seeing LEE HARVEY OSWALD at any time on November 22, 1963." [FBI 3.18.64 Trettis] Gerald Posner's book fell apart when his references were examined. During his post-assassination interrogation, OSWALD created alibi witnesses. The FBI reported: "He recalled possibly two Negro employees walking through the [lunch] room during this period." In another interview he stated: "He ate his lunch with the colored boys who worked with him. He described one of them as 'Junior,' a colored boy, and the other was a little short Negro boy." OSWALD'S alibi was non-existent because he was alone in the Domino Room at the time of the assassination, so he had to invent an alibi.

NO ONE SAW OSWALD ON THE SIXTH FLOOR AT 12:30 PM

The Warren Commission could not place OSWALD on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository at 12:30 p.m. A section of the Warren Commission Report was titled: "OSWALD'S Presence on Sixth Floor Approximately 35 Minutes Before the Assassination." It quoted Charles Douglas Givens. When Charles Douglas Givens was arrested in 1978, he told Dallas Police he was disabled. The HSCA studied OSWALD'S whereabouts at 12:30 p.m.

The Committee considered the testimony of OSWALD'S fellow employees at the Texas School Book Depository. Although a number of them placed him on the fifth or sixth floor just before noon, a half-hour before the assassination, one recalled he was on the first floor at that same time. The committee decided not to try to reconcile the testimony of these witnesses...There was no witness who said he saw OSWALD anywhere at the time of the assassination, and there was no witness who claimed to have been on the sixth floor, and therefore in a position to have seen OSWALD, had he been there.

OSWALD AT 12:30 P.M.

OSWALD faintly heard shots while in the domino room, followed by sirens. HEMMING told this researcher: "I would think he would have thought it was backfiring." He left the domino room and went to the better equipped lunchroom on the second floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

THE BOTTLE OF COKE

The Warren Commission claimed that OSWALD "descended by stairway from the sixth floor to the second floor lunchroom," despite testimony from Texas School Book Depository employees James Jarman, Norman, Williams and Jack Dougherty, who all ran to the back of the fifth floor of the Texas School Book Depository, where the stairwell was located. The Warren Commission attributed their failure to see OSWALD racing down the stairs was due to the "anxiety of the moment, and because of the books which may have blocked the view." [WR p154] Victoria Elizabeth Adams, who worked on the fourth floor of the Texas School Book Depository, claimed that within a minute following the shots she ran down the rear stairs to the first floor. She did not encounter OSWALD. OSWALD purchased a Coca-Cola at approximately 12:31 p.m. in the second floor lunchroom. He was the only one in the second floor lunchroom. Patrolman Marion L. Baker had been riding a two-wheeled motorcycle behind the first press car in the motorcade. When he reached Main and Houston, he heard shots, and then saw pigeons fly from the roof of the Texas School Book Depository. He screeched to a halt. While parking, he noticed that people were "falling, and they were rolling around down there...grabbing their children."

Patrolman Marion L. Baker was at the crime scene seconds after the assassination. If OSWALD had assassinated President Kennedy he would have been either still been on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository or on his way down the stairs or elevator.

Patrolman Marion L. Baker ran up to the entrance of the Texas School Book Depository, and entered the lobby, where he "spoke out and asked where the stairs or elevator was." Roy Truly introduced himself. Patrolman Marion L. Baker and Roy Truly (photo holding dog) ran to the elevators, then up the stairs and into the vestibule. They had to choose which of the two areas they wished to search. One door led to the office space, the other to the second floor lunch room. Patrolman Marion L. Baker chose the lunchroom, looked through the glass on door, and saw OSWALD leaving: "I was kind of scanning, you know, and I caught a glimpse of this man walking away from this - I happened to see him through this window in this door. I don't know how come I saw him, but I had a glimpse of him...go away from me...I ran on over there...and when I got to where I could see him he was walking away from me about 20 feet...I hollered at him at that time and said, 'Come here.' I had my gun...approximately three feet [from OSWALD]. He turned and walked right straight back to me...He appeared normal you know. He never did say a word or nothing. In fact, he didn't change his expression one bit." Roy Truly, who had searched the third floor, came back to the lunch room just as this confrontation was taking place. Patrolman Marion L. Baker turned to Roy Truly and said: "Do you know this man, does he work here?" Roy Truly said: "Yeah." The two men went on with their search. Marion Baker had seen pigeons fly from the roof of the Texas School Book Depository. They would do this when the first shot rang out. Marion Baker ran as fast as he could into the Texas School Depository to see what happened. He began his search and the first man he found was OSWALD. OSWALD was calm and was not out of breath when he encountered Marion Baker. OSWALD did not know the President had been shot.

Baker coming in was OSWALD'S first clue that's something's happened, when he sees a cop with a gun in his hand. How many times did anyone ever see a cop with gun in his hand in the Texas School Book Depository? The first thing going through his mind is 'There's been a robbery in the fucking place.' It probably doesn't take a few seconds but he's wondering, he's probably stunned, 'What the fuck this guy's got to do with me?' And he continues drinking his fucking coke. Not until either people pouring back into the building, or as he's going out, does he get the word. Everyone's excited. He's not a guy that gets excited, he's not a guy that thinks that anybody knows as much as he does. He's a smart ass. He don't let people tell him something, until he takes an interest in it, and asks a fucking question. He probably asked, 'How do you know it was shots and not backfire?' That was probably his fucking attitude for a time.

OSWALD knew President Kennedy's motorcade was going to pass the Texas School Book Depository. When OSWALD found out that an assassination attempt had occurred nearby, OSWALD knew he would soon be a prime suspect. OSWALD was first beginning to suspect that he had been set up, however, he had no concrete evidence. HEMMING told this researcher:

OSWALD caught on earlier than he was supposed to. I think that's what caused the grief. That's why you, and other people, are doing research now. They fucked-up. They should have taken him out in the lunchroom. That would have ended it. They were in too big of a fucking hurry to bug out of the place.

DAVID BELIN AND THE BOTTLE OF COCA COLA

OSWALD had a bottle of Coke in his hand. The Warren Commission's conclusion that OSWALD was the lone assassin of President Kennedy rested on the assumption that OSWALD did not have the bottle of Coca-Cola in his hand when he first encountered Patrolman Marion L. Baker. Something was going on inside the Texas School Book Depository that OSWALD was unaware of. Would he have stopped to purchase a Coca Cola before he began to inquire 'What the hell has happened here?' OSWALD had purchased the Coca Cola before encountering Marion Baker because he did not bring any lunch to work on November 22, 1963, and he was hungry.

DAVID "TWITCH-FACE" BELIN

Warren Commission Counsel David Belin stated this in his book, You Are The Jury that OSWALD could not have killed the President, wiped his fingerprints off the rifle, hidden the rifle, run down the six flights of stairs, then purchased a Coca-Cola in approximately one minute - and not have been out of breath when he talked to Patrolman Marion L. Baker because it would have taken him more than 14 seconds to fish out a nickel from his pocket, buy the Coca-Cola, then open it. The case formulated by David Belin rested on the trivial question of whether or not OSWALD purchased the Coca-Cola before or after he encountered Marion Baker. We are talking about a matter of seconds, not minutes. The Warren Commission admitted it was improbable OSWALD could have been in the second floor lunch room so quickly, even if OSWALD did not buy the coke before Patrolman Marion L. Baker walked in. To prove it could be done, the Commission reenacted the scene, with Patrolman Marion L. Baker on his motorcycle and an FBI agent at the sixth floor window playing "OSWALD." The FBI found that the time it took Patrolman Marion L. Baker to enter the Texas School Book Depository and make his way to the lunch room (First trial: A minute, 30 seconds. Second trial a minute, 15 seconds) was within three seconds of the time it took the FBI agent to go from the sixth floor window, hide the rifle, and walk downstairs to the lunchroom - without wiping his fingerprints off of the rifle. It was impossible to replicate the events of November 22, 1963, and the sense of panic they engendered in Patrolman Marion L. Baker. He might have ran much faster and been in the building seconds after the shots. By this time Baker knew that the conclusions of the FBI rested on him. Walking from one end of the Texas School Book Depository to the other, walking, not running, down 6 flights of stairs then walking to the lunch room in one minute 15 seconds seems improbable. How long would it have taken him to wipe off his prints? Who was to say the agent and OSWALD were in the same physical condition?

Patrolman Marion L. Baker said nothing about OSWALD having the bottle of Coca-Cola in his hand or not having the bottle in his hand until the question was posed after the re-enactment. It was then that he decided that OSWALD did not have a bottle of Coke in his hands when they met. Patrolman Marion L. Baker told the Warren Commission: "He had nothing [in his hands] at that time." [WC Test. p251] A statement by Patrolman Marion L. Baker dated September 23, 1964, read: "On the second floor where the lunchroom is located I saw a man standing in the lunchroom ~~drinking a coke~~. (MLB)." [WCE 3076] Another witness as to whether OSWALD had a Coke in his hand was OSWALD. After the assassination, he said he "was on the second floor drinking a Coca-Cola when the Officer came in." [WR p600] He also said he "was on the second floor of said building, having just purchased a Coca-Cola from the soft drink machine, at which time a police officer came in the room with his pistol drawn." [WR p619] Could OSWALD have know that the State's case would rest upon the Coca Cola issue and lied about when he purchased the Coca Cola. How could OSWALD have been aware of the significance of this minor detail at so early a stage? OSWALD could not have killed the President and Marion Baker was a witness to this.

OSWALD IS LEAVING THE TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY

The Warren Commission: "Within a minute after Marion Baker and Roy Truly left the lunchroom, [12:32 p.m], Mrs. Robert A. Reid, a supervisor at the Texas School Book Depository, saw him walk through the second floor clerical office toward the door leading to the front stairway...He was walking into the office from the back hallway, carrying a full bottle of Coca-Cola in his hand, presumably purchased after the encounter with Baker and Truly." David Belin asked Mrs. Robert A. Reid, "Was the Coke full or empty?" She answered "It was full." He then asked if she remembered in which hand OSWALD was carrying the Coke bottle. She answered: "His right." Earlier in her testimony she had stated: "He had gotten a Coke and was holding it in his hands..." When she wrote her statement for the Dallas Police Mrs. Robert A. Reid added this to it after completion: "He had a Coke in his hand."

How could Mrs. Robert A. Reid have known if the bottle was full or empty? OSWALD'S hand was wrapped around it. Even if she had observed it, how could she have remembered such a minute detail? Additionally, OSWALD could have purchased the Coke just before Marion Baker came into the lunchroom, and not have had time to drink it. When questioned about a less minute detail - the color and pattern of the shirt OSWALD wore when she had seen him - Mrs. Robert A. Reid's memory failed her: "What he was wearing, he had on, a white T-shirt and some kind of wash trousers." She was shown the trousers that OSWALD had on, but she could not identify them, nor could she identify his shirt: "I have never, so far as I know, seen that shirt." OSWALD left the Texas School Book Depository at 12:33 p.m. When OSWALD reached the street, it was filled with police cars. What had happened that day in Dealey Plaza?

THE TEAM'S ACTIVITIES

HEMMING told this researcher:

The squad had keys to the building. They got in there the night before and went up on the roof. Nobody had been up on that roof under the Hertz sign since the Hertz guy checked it out a month before. Nobody went up on the roof. That's where they would stay. Then they would come down a separate ladder to the seventh floor. And they'd do their operation moving down from the seventh floor. Always control the high ground. They got there around three or four o'clock in the morning. The roof was locked. The weapons were stashed. Who gave a shit about the Texas School Book Depository?

THE EYEWITNESSES

LEE BOWERS

Lee Bowers, a railroad employee, was standing in a 14-foot high tower behind the Texas School Book Depository, and had an unobstructed view of the back door of the Texas School Book Depository. He could also see the area behind the fence on top of the grassy knoll on Elm Street. The Dallas Police Department cut off traffic into the area at 10:00 a.m. At 11:55 a.m., a blue over white 1959 Oldsmobile station wagon with out-of-state plates, covered with red mud and Goldwater-for-President stickers circled in front of the tower, catching the attention of Lee Bowers.

It was occupied by a middle aged white male with partially grey hair. About 20 minutes later, a 1957 black Ford Tudor with Texas plates entered. Lee Bowers believed "the occupant of this second car was a police officer," because he observed him "talking into a radio telephone or transmitter." [1WH285] This car was driven by a white man, 25 to 35. At 12:22 p.m., a 1961 Chevy Impala (muddied, with bumper stickers and out-of-state plates) "circled the area and probed one spot at the tower." This car was driven by a middle aged white male, 25 to 35, with blonde hair. HEMMING told this researcher: "This was a parking situation. The station wagon may have ended up being parked in the lot." After the last car left, Lee Bowers observed two men standing behind the fence on top of the knoll: "These were the only two strangers in the area. The others were workers whom I knew. They were standing within ten or 15 feet of each other and gave no appearance of being together..." One of them was middle-aged, heavy-set, and wearing a white shirt and dark trousers. The other man was in his mid-20's, wearing either a plaid shirt, or plaid jacket. Lee Bowers reported seeing the pair a few minutes later "following the caravan [motorcade] as it came down the street." After the assassination, Lee Bowers noticed a motorcycle officer run up the incline toward the trees in the general area of where the two men had been standing. [HSCA V12 p1; Interview with Bowers - Lane Rush To Judgement p32; 1WH284] About 12:15 p.m., when Lee Bowers observed the second car, people began to see figures in the east-corner windows of the Texas School Book Depository.

Carolyn Walthers saw two men, one with a rifle. In a FBI interview dated December 4, 1963, Carolyn Walthers stated that at the time of the motorcade, she looked up at the windows of the Texas School Book Depository and saw a man in the Southeast corner window of the fourth or fifth floor. Carolyn Walthers was positive the window was not as high as the sixth floor. Carolyn Walthers said the man was holding a rifle in his hands; the barrel of the rifle was pointing downward, and the man was looking toward Houston Street. Both his hands were extended across the window ledge. She described the man as having light brown or blonde hair and wearing a white shirt. She described the rifle as having a short barrel and being possibly a machine gun. She noticed no other features of the rifle. Carolyn Walthers said that she had seen a second man standing in the same window to the left of the man with the rifle. He was wearing a brown suit coat; she could only see his body from the waist to the shoulders and his head was hidden by part of the window. [HSCA V12 p4] According to Carolyn Walthers, the man without the rifle was standing erect, with his head high enough to be seen from the street. Carolyn Walthers told the FBI that the motorcade approached Houston Street almost immediately after she had seen the second man in the window. Carolyn Walthers was not called to testify before the Warren Commission. Carolyn Walthers was contacted in April 1993. She refused comment. Gerald Posner attempted to discredit Carolyn Walthers and wrote that she never told her story to Pearl Springler, who watched the motorcade with her. Posner omitted the statement by Carolyn Walthers that she "thought that apparently there were guards everywhere." If she had believed these men were from the United States Secret Service, she would not have mentioned their presence to her friend. [24WH522-23; Posner p231] Josiah Thompson's book, Six Seconds In Dallas, contained a photograph of the Texas School Book Depository seconds before the shots were fired; two figures could be seen in the sixth floor window. In 1979 the HSCA uncovered a new film of the Texas School Book Depository shot minutes before the assassination. The film, taken by Charles Bronson, shows two figures in the sixth floor window. The HSCA: "The film came to the attention of the HSCA toward the end of its investigation...the limited review conducted was not sufficient to determine definitively if the film contained evidence of motion made by human figures. Because of its high quality, it was recommended the Bronson film be analyzed further." [HSCA R p49] Gerald Posner: The Hughes and Bronson film were enhanced "by the HSCA." [Closed p231]

Like Carolyn Walthers, Arnold Rowland (born April 29, 1945), told the Warren Commission that there were two men in the window of the Texas School Book Depository. Arnold Rowland and his wife were awaiting the motorcade, standing on the east side of Houston Street, between Main and Elm. At 12:15 p.m. Arnold Rowland looked toward the Texas School Book Depository and noticed a man holding a rifle and standing back from the sixth floor Southwest corner window of the Texas School Book Depository: "We looked and at that time I noticed on the sixth floor of the building that there was a man back from the window, not hanging out the window. He was standing and holding a rifle. This appeared to me to be a fairly high powered rifle because of the scope and the relative proportion of the scope to the rifle, you can tell about what type of rifle it is. You can tell it isn't a .22 you know, and we thought momentarily that maybe we should tell someone, but then the thought came to us that it is a security agent. We had seen in the movies before where they have security men up in windows, and places like that, with rifles to watch the crowds, and we brushed it aside at that, at the time, and thought nothing else about it until after the event happened." Arnold Rowland was unable to identify the person as OSWALD. When they looked back at the window, the man was gone. Arnold Rowland signed an affidavit to this effect. In his Warren Commission testimony Arnold Rowland claimed to have seen a second person on the sixth floor. Before he noticed the man with the rifle, Arnold Rowland had seen an elderly black man "hanging out that window...very thin, an elderly gentleman, bald or practically bald, between 50 to 60 years of age, 5'8" to 5'10" tall, with fairly dark complexion." [WR p251] As a further description, Arnold Rowland stated the person "had on a plaid shirt..Seemed like his face was either, I can't recall detail, but it was either very wrinkled or marked in some way." The man appeared in the window five or six minutes before the motorcade came. About ten minutes after the assassination, Arnold Rowland told a representative from the Dallas Sheriff's Office that he had seen "two men on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository over there, one of them had a rifle with a telescopic sight on it, but he thought they were Secret Service agents or guards and didn't report it."

The Warren Report contained a section titled: "Eyewitness Identification of Assassin." In the six- to eight-minute period before the motorcade arrived, Howard Leslie Brennan saw a man leave and return to the Northeast corner window on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository "a couple of times." Upon hearing the first shot, which he thought was a motorcycle backfiring, Howard Leslie Brennan glanced up at the window: "This man I saw previously was aiming for his last shot..." Howard Leslie Brennan saw the man fire the last shot, then disappear from the window. Within minutes, Howard Leslie Brennan described the man to the police. This description led to the police radio alert at 12:45 p.m., in which the suspect was described as "in his early 30's, about 5' 10" tall, 165 lbs., white, slender." In his statement to police later that day, Howard Leslie Brennan described the man as "white male, early 30's, appeared to be about 5'10", 165 pounds, no hat, wearing light colored clothes, possibly khaki, could have been wearing a sweater or light weight jacket." In his testimony before the Warren Commission, Brennan described the person he had seen as "a man in his early 30's, possibly 5' 10", 160 to 170 lbs., fair complexion, slender, but neat." OSWALD was 24, 5' 9" and weighed 140 lbs. Howard Leslie Brennan declared, "He looked much younger on television than he did from my picture of him in the window - say five years younger." [Addition To WC Test. of Howard Brennan V28 Hearings-3.24.64] During the evening of November 22, 1963, Howard Leslie Brennan identified OSWALD as the person in the lineup who most closely resembled the man in the window, but said he was unable to make a positive identification. Warren Commission Counsel Joe Ball attributed Howard Leslie Brennan's hesitation to positively identify OSWALD to, "a fear that the Communists would murder his family or something." [Mike Ewing HSCA interview with Ball 12.18.78 ARA doc.] Howard Leslie Brennan, born March 20, 1919, died in December 1983.

Ronald B. Fischer and Robert Edwin Edwards were standing on the curb at the southwest corner of Elm and Houston when they noticed a man in the Texas School Book Depository window about a half-minute to one minute before the motorcade passed the Texas School Book Depository. They offered partial descriptions of the man, although neither witness had seen the rifle being fired. [2WH165; 24WH522; 6WH200; 6WH191; 6WH19?] Ronald Fischer was shown a photograph of OSWALD by the Dallas Police: "He could not say definitely this man was the man, but said that it looked like the man." [DPD Supp. Rep. 11.25.63 Turner] Ronald Fischer commented,

No that's not true. I was never shown a photo by the Dallas Police. Never happened. I never talked to them. I gave a deposition on the late afternoon or evening of the assassination. They had 13 of us locked up as material witnesses in Sheriff Bill Decker's office. They took us one at a time. I don't think anybody ever showed me a photo. I could see his face, but he was far away. Then I gave a Federal deposition before David Belin. He got into a heated argument with me about the color of the man's hair. At one point he stopped the deposition taking, and stormed out of the room. Five minutes later he returned, he had himself composed, and we went on with the deposition. He only touched on the color once after that.

At the time, I didn't know what the hell was the matter with this guy. Looking back at it now, I realize he was angry because I didn't say 'the right thing.' His hairline fit OSWALD. Belin wanted me say he had dark hair. I wouldn't say that. He had light-colored clothes on. All I could see was just a little bit below his shoulders and up. He was facing the triple underpass. He was not facing Houston Street where the parade was going to come from. Most everyone was looking to the intersection of Houston and Main Street waiting for the parade. This guy was seated so that he was facing the triple underpass. What also caught my attention was that he didn't move. He didn't move at all. In fact, if you were watching him close enough and had binoculars, you might say 'he didn't bat an eye.' No movement whatsoever. He was staring. I watched him for about 30 seconds.

Compare the descriptions of Arnold Rowland, Robert Edwards & Ronald Fischer and Carolyn Walthers of the man seen holding a rifle in the window with the description of TRAMP A who was arrested on November 22, 1963, in the vicinity of the Texas School Book Depository. George Smith of the Fort Worth Star Telegram took two pictures.

OH WHEN THE TRAMPS COME MARCHIN' IN

Photograph one [P1] is a frontal shot as the tramps marched past the cyclone fence in front of the loading dock of the Texas School Book Depository.

Photograph two [P2] was a profile shot taken as they passed in front of the Texas School Book Depository's distinctive masonry facade.

Jack Beers of the Dallas Morning News took two photographs. Photograph three [P3] had the front entrance of the Texas School Book Depository as a background.

Photograph four [P4] was taken as the tramps walked by the intersection of Houston and Elm.

William Allen of the Dallas Times Herald got three photographs. Photograph five [P5] was taken in front of the Texas School Book Depository.

Photograph six [P6] was taken as they crossed Houston and Elm.

Photograph seven [P7] was taken as they neared the Sheriff's Office. In the first two tramp shots the tallest tramp is in front. In the rest of the tramp shots another one of the tramps wearing a jacket leads the line. The oldest tramp is always in the back of the line. We will call the tramp who leads the three in Tramp shots 3 to 7 TRAMP A. We will call the oldest looking tramp, TRAMP B, and we will call the other tramp, TRAMP C.

TRAMP A

Arnold Rowland said the man he had seen in the window holding the rifle had a slender build, weighed 140 to 150 pounds, and had dark, close-cut hair. He was wearing a light shirt, collar open and dark pants. He was about 30. TRAMP A looked like he was of medium build, weighing about 160 pounds, and had dark brown close-cut hair. He was wearing a light shirt, collar open and dark pants. He looked about 30 to 35. Compare the combined descriptions of Robert Edwards and Ronald Fischer of the man they had seen in the Texas School Book Depository window with TRAMP A. They said the man in the window had short brown hair or light hair. He was wearing a long-sleeved light-colored sport shirt open at the neck. He was between 22 and 25. The tramp had short brown hair. He was wearing a light shirt (assuming he had taken off his jacket) that could be open at the collar and dark pants. He looked 30 to 35. Carolyn Walthers had seen a brown-haired man with a white shirt. TRAMP A had brown hair and a white shirt.

James Richard Worrell, (born July 1, 1943) and Jesse C. Price saw a man running from the rear of the Texas School Book Depository. (Bowers did not see anyone "racing around in the yard.") Their composite description: 155 to 165 pounds, 5'7" to 5'10", black or brown hair full in back, light pants, sports jacket flaring in breeze, dark in color, late 20's or early 30's. Compare this with the description of TRAMP A: Looks 160 pounds, 5' 10", dark brown hair, full in back, light shirt, dark pants, herring-bone sports jacket, flaps in breeze, looks 30 to 35 years old.

TRAMP B

Compare the older man Arnold Rowland had seen (near the man with the rifle) with TRAMP B. The reason Arnold Rowland described this man as a Negro was because the top floors of the Texas School Book Depository were shadowy at noon, since the light was coming from directly overhead. Dallas Policeman D.V. Harkness sealed the Texas School Book Depository after Amos Lee Euins told him he saw a colored man firing a rifle from the southeast window. [WR p147] The man Arnold Rowland had seen was black-skinned, and had a marked and wrinkled face, with a very thin build and thin hair. He was wearing a bright colored red-green plaid shirt, and he was 50, or 55 to 60, years-old. TRAMP B can be described as: White, some wrinkles, thin build, plaid shirt, about 50. [Composites based on Rowland WCE 358; 2WH165; Memo Rankin/Hoover re: Rowland. Robert Edwards and Ronald Fischer 6WH200; 6WH191; Worrell WCD87; 2WH190; Jesse C. Price 19WH492] Arnold Rowland had been arrested in Topeka, Kansas for "Vag.(checks)" and was arrested in Dallas, for shoplifting, in 1967. [FBI rap sheet 921 481 F]

The Warren Commission overlooked the correspondence between the gunman or gunmen's descriptions supplied by its witnesses and the descriptions of the tramps. The Warren Commission also overlooked the fact that these men were not tramps. They were clean-shaven and two of them recently had haircuts. According to one unconfirmed report, they smelled, and a reporter is seen holding her nose in P3 - yet there was no evidence of physical degeneration. Their scent was part of their disguise. They looked well-fed and their shoes were not worn out. The oldest tramp consistently tried to avoid being photographed. The other two switched positions.

TRAMP A WAS DAVID LEMAR CHRIST

Tramp A, who was seen in the window of the Texas School Book Depository was DAVID LEMAR CHRIST. He switched positions with TRAMP C because he was the least well known. HEMMING supplied me with this information in 1978:

You know that tramp you keep buggin' the shit out of me about? 'Frenchy?' Look at these photos. And, A. J., when you give them back to me, make sure they don't stick together. The tramp's name is DANIEL CARSWELL.

When CHRIST entered Cuba, his ID contained the following description: "Height 6', Weight 190, Age 41." CHRIST fit Howard Brennan's description of the assassin better than OSWALD did.

TRAMP B WAS HUNT AND TRAMP C WAS STURGIS

This researcher first realized this on November 22, 1973. On that day I had organized a demonstration in front of the National Archives to protest the removal of President Kennedy's brain from that institution. When Tom Forcade and Aron Kay distributed leaflets about the demonstration at an assassination research conference staged by attorney Bernard Fensterwald at Georgetown University, in Washington, D.C., Bernard Fensterwald had his security guards eject my crew. I attended the convention the next day with Phil Ochs. When I arrived, researcher Sherman Skolnick was haranguing Bernard Fensterwald: "We all know about the Committee to Investigate Assassinations, all you want to do is pick our brains, Fensterwald. We know that Georgetown University's School of International Affairs is a CIA front. Why would they let us meet here? How about the money the CIA gave you? McCORD'S lawyer talked about it during Watergate, for Pete's sake! We demand an alternative panel!" The Washington Star News reported: "Another dissident, A. J. WEBERMAN, a well-known figure in the underground press, said that 'left-wing assassinologists have been excluded from the conference.' He added that the sessions at Georgetown University 'could be a CIA front to keep an eye on what people are learning about the assassinations.'" [Star 11.25.73]

After having appeared on Sherman Skolnick's alternative panel this researcher proceeded smoke a marijuana cigarette on the steps of one of Georgetown University's buildings with a female student I had met during the conference, who did not like Fensterwald. When several nuns began walking in and out of this building were decided it would be safer to go to the room of the student. There, I was introduced to Steven Sotor, a Professor of Astronomy at Cornell University's Center for Radio physics and Space Research, who later became the chief of research for Carl Sagan's Cosmos series aired on the Public Broadcasting System. Steve Sotor showed me a photograph of FRANK STURGIS from The New York Times and compared it with a photograph of TRAMP C. He shook his head and said : "A. J., before I came to this conference I thought that one of the three tramps in this photograph was FRANK STURGIS. But Bud Fensterwald told me he had done a height study in Dallas and there was a discrepancy between STURGIS and the tramp." "Steve" I said, "Fensterwald is a slimy fucking CIA Agent, not a researcher. Don't believe a word he says." This researcher studied the tramp shots for the first time. STURGIS did look a little like the tramp but this was inconclusive. Then I realized that one tramp had a sort of washed-out Protestant face, devoid of any ethnicity, like a man named Harold Henkel who I rented a room to when I was a landlord at Michigan State University. Harold Henkel looked like HOWARD HUNT. One tramp picked up on the scene of the assassination of former President John F. Kennedy could look like STURGIS and not be him, but how could one tramp look like STURGIS and the other look like HUNT, both of Watergate fame, without there being an actual identity between the tramps and HUNT and STURGIS.

THE LAW OF PROBABILITY

Before examining the photographs remember this: Suppose you knew someone who resembled one of the tramps. This was within the realm of possibility. But suppose you knew two men who knew each other and each of these men resembled one of two tramps. There was much smaller chance of this happening than of having known one man who looks like one of the three tramps. Finally, what is the likelihood of have known three men, all of whom knew each other, and each of whom looked like a different one of the three tramps? How were these odds affected by the fact that:

- (1) The men who resembled the tramps were all involved in CIA-sponsored anti-Castro activity at the same time.
- (2) STURGIS and CHRIST had been imprisoned by Fidel Castro.
- (3) CHRIST was a CIA technical expert.
- (4) HUNT testified that his job at the CIA "had to do with the subversion of the prominent political figures abroad, the overthrow of governments and that sort of thing." [U.S. v. Erlichman p908] In regard to Jacobo Arbenz, he stated: "The Communists were thrown out. A dictatorship took place, which was supplanted by a democratic election." HUNT had his name on a letter written by OSWALD.
- (5) The name FIORINI appeared in OSWALD'S notebook.
- (6) STURGIS had been approached by the CIA and asked to do a domestic assassination.

HUNT, STURGIS and CHRIST'S appearance in Dealey Plaza was logical. They all had the motive and the ability to assassinate a world leader. In this author's estimation, if men with this sort of background left the slightest traces of their presence in Dealey Plaza, even traces that were in themselves indefinite, chances are they killed President Kennedy. STURGIS and CHRIST were associated with HEMMING and as we shall see later on in the book, database, so was HUNT.

REACTIONS TO THE TRAMP SHOTS

SAINT JOHN HUNT

My father served 33 months in federal prison with the longest stretch at Danbury, Conn. Frank Sturgis, the Cuban freedom fighter, arch nemesis of Castro, plotter in assassination attempt, and co-conspirator in Watergate served his sentence at Danbury as well. It was after my fathers' incarceration that the first accusations surfaced allegedly linking him and Sturgis to the murder of President Kennedy. I remember quite well how I first heard of this. I had moved to Oakland California and got a job driving a delivery truck for a local bakery. I stopped by a payphone on my route and as I was dialing the number something caught my eye. A familiar face stared at me from a crudely printed poster on a phone pole. It was my father's face! His was among several on a poster that read "CIA KILLED JFK". I dropped the phone and carefully removed the poster. Back in my delivery van, I looked at what it said. Below the large heading, it showed six photos; my father's, Frank Sturgis', and a third I didn't recognize. Below my father's picture was the picture of someone who looked exactly like my father, only older and dirtier. Below Sturgis' picture was one of someone who looked a lot like Frank except older, and the third man had the same photo of him, but from a different angle. The type below the photos proclaimed E. Howard Hunt; convicted Watergate burglar and CIA assassin in 1974 and in Dealey Plaza in 1963. The poster advertised for a lecture the following day in San Francisco by Dick Gregory and was sponsored by a group calling themselves the JFK Investigating Committee or something like that. I was in shock! I could barely make it through the rest of my route. I didn't know what to think! I felt sick to my stomach. I couldn't believe something this bad could be happening to my family again!

Hadn't we paid enough? Hadn't my mother died for the sins of my father? Why would these people think such a thing? Where would it all end? One of the first thoughts that occurred to me after I settled down was to think back and try and remember what happened the day Kennedy was shot. Surely this would clear up the question and perhaps I could attend the lecture and clear my father's name.

As I thought about it, I felt a slow creeping illness overtake me. I remember very well that I was 9 years old and in the fifth grade at Brookmont Elementary School. I remember that they announced the news over the loudspeaker and subsequently the students were sent home. I can't remember how I got home; I may have been picked up, or taken the bus, but when I got home I remember my mother was there and she was very upset. I tried to picture my father but couldn't. Then like a bullet exploding in my brain, I remember my mother telling me that father had been to Dallas! I can't place the exact time she told me or if she was speaking in reference to the assassination, but I clearly recall her telling me this around that time period. It may have been before, but I also remembered something strangely coincidental; my father elected to have some sort of plastic surgery done to reduce the size and change the shape of his ears. In my mind these events occurred roughly at the same time. I looked at the poster, studying it over and over again. I thought of going to the lecture but chickened out. I didn't want to know any more details or speculations. The photos of the tramps, especially the one that was supposed to be my father looked amazingly like him. He has a very distinct nose and the shape of his mouth is very unique. I felt strongly that this could be him.

Now, years later, we all know that the true identity of these tramps has been discovered due to the diligent research of devoted Kennedy assassination researchers. [This was a reference to the false news story floated by former FBI SAC Oliver "Buck the Fuck" Revell and others in their attempt to confuse the first set of three tramps picked up that day with the second set picked up later on. The Rockefeller Commission reported that 8 tramps were picked up that day.] I wrote my father a letter asking him about the poster and its' accusations. He wrote back to me and said that "as you well know, I was at home that day, and we watched the news broadcasting the unfortunate events until late in the evening when you children went to bed." "I was in the house all day." Later, under oath he would change this story several times. He testified under oath that he had actually been at work that day. He left the CIA office and drove home early. Later he changed it again, saying that he had stopped by his favorite Chinese grocery store to purchase some items for a home cooked meal. Still, he maintained that he was with his children throughout most of the day. When asked what the name of his favorite Chinese store was, he couldn't remember. He did offer that it was located on a certain street in China town in Washington D.C. when investigators checked all the Chinese stores in that city; none were close to that location. My father testified that he had been seen at work that day by one of his co-workers, yet when that co-worker was cross examined, he could not specifically recall seeing my father, he only thought he might have seen him. How could a man whose life was in the intelligence business not be able to recall, without fail, where he was and what he did on the day that the President of the United States was murdered?

How is that possible? Why did he change his story so many times? If his children were his alibi, why wouldn't his defense team call us to testify for him? This could have put the whole matter to rest once and for all! Why? Because it was a lie; I was at our home that day, and I never saw my father. That's not saying that he murdered the president, but it does serve to underline the life of lies and plausible deniability that was our life. I never spoke to my father about these outrageous contradictions, and he never addressed this topic...at least not until later...years later.

In June 1994 Marina Oswald was sent the tramp shots by this researcher. She stated:

I do not know. I like, by the way, you're little plastic overlay. It was wonderful. But I'm not expert. You have to have expertise. All this time I thought the HUNT was the oil man Hunt. I think you did very wonderful research. You want help with book? I do not know the answers.

In August 1993 Michael Paine was sent Coup D'Etat in America. He commented,

HUNT [resembles the tramp] maybe the most. I couldn't really decide on STURGIS. Actually, I wasn't sure of the picture with the overlay. When they're together like that they seem to fit. When I look at them individually, I'm not persuaded. All I can say is HUNT works especially for me. And I didn't spend much time trying to analyze STURGIS. He was a possibility, but I didn't say 'Oh yeah, that's it!'" Paine was asked if the tramp shots made him wonder if there was a conspiracy. He responded, "I guess I've always had an opening for...We expected trouble from the right. The feeling in Dallas at the time invoked that kind of thought. I don't believe that OSWALD would knowingly participate with the right-wing in any way. I also believe he was acting like a spy, especially in the weeks before the assassination. But I didn't assume that had anything to do with the President. And if he been planning all along to kill the President, he wouldn't come out and get his rifle the night before.

There are too many people in the CIA that have a patriotism that would not allow them to shoot the President. You might find one or two who would keep this a secret from the CIA. I think there are a lot of people like that. They honestly believed they were doing the right thing and protecting this country from tendencies they thought were dangerous. They felt they were doing a patriotic thing. A tiny percentage of CIA people.

When I told Ruth Paine what Michael Paine said, she stated: "I didn't get that impression from him. What he told me was that he looked at the pictures. I said, 'Do you find these pictures pretty convincing?' and he said 'No, I really don't find them convincing.' I am also unconvinced." James Hosty agreed with Ruth Paine and he told this researcher: "They weren't there. It's just a figment of your imagination." Wallace Shanley stated to this researcher:

Havana, Miami, and New Orleans, were headed toward Dallas. It's kind of hard to deal with. You stir up some rather deep soup and things come floatin' to the top. INTERPEN was a group into which OSWALD could have well have inserted himself. A man with pseudo-expertise in all sorts of things. He would certainly be with one of these groups. But FRANK is not the tramp.

In 1975 Charles Ashmann wrote The CIA-Mafia Link, in which he stated that a "tramp" arrested on November 22, 1963, "bore a striking resemblance" to his former client, FRANK STURGIS. HEMMING told this researcher:

I could not see where Ashmann would pick-up on any of this Kennedy shit, and all of a sudden, his pocketbook comes out. I said, 'What the fuck? What has Ashmann been reading? Why the fuck would Ashmann take a look at the Kennedy situation?' Last guy in the world. As far as I was concerned he had no connection, no knowledge, shit, I figured he must know something that I don't know. He cranked out a little rinky-dink book with all these speculations in it.

STURGIS was asked:

Q. Do you know that your former attorney, Charles Ashmann, believes you to be the tramp in Dealey Plaza?

A. Well, if he stated that he believed I'm the tramp in Dealey Plaza, it's a lie because I saw the pictures in Washington and these two people that I saw up there that look like me, forget it.

Howard Kenneth Davis was mailed a copy of Coup D'Etat In America and recontacted in June 1993. He stated: "The one photograph you attributed to being STURGIS, in my mind that is absolutely not STURGIS. I don't know if he was in Dallas, or not, but I would give my eye teeth if that photograph were STURGIS."

Q. What about the overlay?

A. That was very, very interesting. There are similarities there, absolutely, and I really can't say about the other tramps...I hate to say it, because if you were to tell me you have other evidence that FIORINI was involved, I could believe it wholeheartedly. If you tell me he was involved, I won't argue with you one bit.

THE CUBAN INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

The Cuban Intelligence Service believed the tramp shots were significant. In Cuba, the HSCA was told:

ANTONIO: I would like to point out that these speculations have been made by FRANK STURGIS, who has been the principal propagator of this supposed visit by RUBY to Cuba. Such a lie, as others, has been propagated also by this individual. It catches our eye also that in this campaign to try to tie Cuba with the assassination he has been using published theories. The same American press has related STURGIS with the assassination of President Kennedy. Perhaps yesterday afternoon one of the questions that most caught our attention, and which we asked Blakey, was on these individuals who appeared at Dealey Plaza where it is said that one of those who appear in the photograph was FRANK STURGIS.

BUERGO: In relation to this question, it is also to keep in mind that STURGIS had a close relationship for many years with HOWARD HUNT. This must even be seen in relation to participation that both had in the events of Watergate, well known by you all, and the ties that this group had with President NIXON. It must also be viewed a little later; it is necessary to see the ties of these groups with the attitude maintained with respect to the Cuban Revolution. He was the first official of the American Government who recommended taking actions against Cuba after the interview that he held with President Castro during his visit to the United States in 1959. These elements are to show the ties of these counter-revolutionary people with leaders of the United States and that the same ones had been used in matters such as Watergate and activities against Cuba and that, therefore, it is logical that they could be used for all of this false information.

BLAKEY: Do you have knowledge of some documentary evidence that concretely ties HOWARD HUNT with STURGIS before 1964.

VILLA: Before 1964, no, and later what we know of him has been generated by other newsmen and investigators. We knew some things about HOWARD HUNT when he was working against Cuba in Miami. [HSCA NARA 11710100 4.2.78]

H. R. Haldeman was mailed a copy of Coup D'Etat in America then asked to comment:

I glanced through the thing. I didn't see of any particular area that I could be of any help on. I'm not a photographic expert in any way, shape or form. I've never met HOWARD HUNT. When he was at the White House, Colson had contact. When he was in the Re-election Committee, it was Liddy.

Edward Petty received copies of the tramp shots:

I have to tell you I was pretty impressed by the comparison of the HUNT picture. Which surprised me. I didn't think I was going to be. I have done a lot of photo comparisons. Photo identity is a really difficult thing. But you did a good job on that.

John Mertz commented:

I think you're nuts! Did you read in the paper STURGIS died yesterday? He was a nice guy. That frontal picture, the photograph the CIA gave the HSCA, doesn't look anything like CHRIST as I remember him. I don't think that's CHRIST. It doesn't look anything like the guy. It doesn't ring any bells for me. I don't think that was a picture of him.

Q. How about the photograph of the man coming off the plane with a pipe? Is that him?

A. I didn't see any picture of him...

Q. It's in the book.

A. It's in the book, I haven't come across that. I checked a number of them but I never saw any coming off the plane with a pipe. I don't recall that he smokes a pipe, and hell, he wouldn't have had a pipe comin' out of jail down there. He didn't have anything. It could have been, I don't know.

Q. What about the tramp shots?

A. I don't think any of them, I don't...I know HUNT better than I know CHRIST. I worked with him in Japan, shared an office with him. That sure as hell is no picture of HUNT. I never saw STURGIS.

Dr. Peter Dale Scott, who now espouses World Trade Center revisionism, wrote that Fletcher Prouty "believes he could identify the back of Edwin Landsdale's neck in the so-called 'tramp' photographs." [Scott, Deep Pol. p377] Fletcher Prouty met with the leaders of the Cuban Revolutionary Council when they visited General Erskine on August 26, 1960. He sympathized with their plight. Fletcher Prouty told Senator Howard Baker that he met HUNT in the offices of Robert R. Mullen and Company:

The date was in either February or March 1971. It was in the offices of the Mullen Company. The man I went to see was Bob Bennett. After a brief talk, primarily with what I wanted done, he said, well, I have a man that can help you with that. And he called in an office and said, HOWARD. And HOWARD came out, and it was HOWARD HUNT. I knew HUNT, I had known him at least since the Bay of Pigs program. But I knew in CIA practice you don't recognize people. So, I never said a word, never batted an eye at him. But I knew he was CIA and I knew in my mind he was on duty. I didn't know he had retired. That was immaterial. The subject didn't come up. Bennett introduced me to HUNT. And we shook hands. And he said he would take the account work. And the name Butterfield was the name that was mentioned, and the only name mentioned. I was satisfied...After putting in weeks of work and researching to find who was going to do the job for us, and after going there for no other reason than to get a firm that would contact the White House.

Prouty said he knew that Mullen and Company was a CIA front from a long list of fronts he once possessed and that:

I would tell any body today that I don't think McCORD ever served really as a CIA man. But you see, nobody can uncover that Sheffield Edwards, Bob Bannerman or JIM McCORD were anything but FBI men like me, an Air Force guy, but working for the CIA. That is the way they worked. And they kept their connection. And I have been at lunch with McCORD when FBI men went by and they were just like old buddies. And I have had him volunteer FBI support of something I wanted officially. And I would say, if I had to analyze in my years of experience with him... [NARA SSCIA 157-10011-10041]

Fletcher Prouty was a consultant to Oliver Stone during the filming of JFK and was widely credited with convincing Oliver Stone that the military industrial complex was involved in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy rather than NIXON and the tramps. In 1991 the neo-Nazi group Liberty Lobby announced the creation of the advisory board of the Populist Action Committee. The Spotlight ran a major feature on the formation of the advisory board with photographs of the persons announced as appointed to launch the Committee. Fletcher Prouty was named to the advisory panel. Martin Larson, a contributor to The Journal of Historical Review which maintains the Holocaust was a Jewish hoax; Pauline Mackey, national treasurer for the 1988 David Duke Populist Party Presidential campaign; Tom Valentine, Midwest bureau chief for Spotlight and host of Liberty Lobby's Radio Free America. Prouty appeared at conferences and on radio programs sponsored by the Liberty Lobby, but claims "there was never a handshake" concerning his official appointment to the Populist Action Committee. (Telephone interview with Prouty.) Prouty nonetheless admits that he is aware his name is being publicized in that capacity and refuses to ask his name be dropped from the list.

Ronald Fischer received the CHRIST/tramp shots: "I couldn't make out the face of the man I saw in the window."

HEMMING AT NO NAME KEY

HEMMING:

The first time I saw the tramp shots was through Garrison. Weisberg brought it to his attention. He was the first to have them. They were comparing the pictures with the No Name Key crew.

Here are some videos of the assassination. As you can see the assassination was a professional job. Only Kennedy was killed, no one else although John Connelly was wounded. Click HERE to see the event from all angles at once. Click HERE to see digitally enhanced videos of the event.

THE SHOTS THE FIRST SHOT: THE MEAT SHOT

The first shot was fired by HOWARD HUNT from the Southeast corner window of the Texas School Book Depository. HEMMING told this researcher:

The shot came from the other end of the floor. Through the trees into the President's back. That's the shallow wound in his back. This shot penetrated Kennedy's back, and exited through his throat. This was the meat shot. This was for fucking planting evidence. This wasn't for killing anybody. If it kills him, that's good too. It has the force to penetrate. If you're dumpin' the blame, the set up weapon has to be fired into a soft area of the target. You don't want this round deforming, because it has to be identified later on by the lands and grooves on it. This is not a killing round. This one went in two and a half inches. We figured that CPR popped the fucker out. This was the magic bullet. It's the closest shot. You can't miss. It's from 60 feet away. That's what pistol people shoot at. He's up six floors and 20 feet across the street. With a shoulder stock and a scope you ain't gonna miss with a sabot round. A sabot round is a plastic and metal sleeve that holds a smaller round. The sabot round they used was copper. Remember somebody talking about something making marks on the sidewalk? That's the sleeve. The jacket around the sabot round that breaks. It's a small piece, it can't be identified. It's got a wax filler. As that hot powder is burning, those gases are pushing it out. As soon as it leaves the muzzle the wax melts in a sabot round jacket that has already started to separate. The whole idea is, they fucked up totally, it became a pristine round because it was so underpowered. That's why I figure it was a short barreled sabot round. If they fired it out of a Carcano, they'd have been nothing left of the slug, except cadaver samples, and you can't see any rifling at all. What sends the flag up is the pristine round that tells the whole fucking story of professionalism. The use of silenced weapons and sabot rounds.

The first shot was designed to link the assassination bullet with OSWALD'S gun and was underpowered. This shot went through the President's back and out his throat and then entered Governor Connally. It, and all the shots fired that day, were fired from behind the President, so the autopsy evidence was relatively consistent with the shots having been fired from the Texas School Book Depository. No shots were fired from the grassy knoll. HEMMING told this researcher:

The first shot that should have been fired would be right after the turn onto Houston Street. There you have the target moving towards you, it's a full frontal shot. There's no deviation, there's no declination. The guy's moving straight at your ass. You're looking him right in the eye. You can get him right between the headlights. A professional that has a plan to get away, not a kamikaze, would know the Secret Service are not allowed to fire back, the ones that are on the outrider vehicles, and engage in a fire fight. They are there to take the spears. They are there to protect the President with their body. The outriders would be looking into the buildings where the shots are coming from. If you don't want to call attention to your shooting position for a variety of reasons, then you'll want a shot with the target moving away from you. They're going to be running away from you. They're not going to be looking at your ass. This messes memories up. This protects you in your E. & E. out of the area. If they looked up and saw someone poking a weapon out a window or suspected they saw a shooter in front of them, they'd carry it to their fucking graves.

THE MEAT SHOT BECOMES THE MAGIC BULLET

Shortly after Governor John Connally was removed from his stretcher, Darrell C. Tomlinson (died late 1993) took the stretcher to the first floor of the hospital and placed it alongside another stretcher. A few minutes later, he bumped a stretcher against the wall and the meat shot rolled out. Darrell C. Tomlinson was not sure whether the bullet came from the stretcher of Governor John Connally or an adjacent one. [WR p81] The FBI determined that the meat shot had been fired from OSWALD'S Mannlicher-Carcano, to the exclusion of all other weapons.

The Warren Commission described the trajectory of the magic bullet:

- (1) Penetrated the back of John F. Kennedy.
- (2) Exited the throat of John F. Kennedy.
- (3) Entered the chest of Governor John Connally shattering his rib.
- (4) Exited below the right nipple of Governor John Connally.
- (5) Entered the wrist of Governor John Connally.
- (6) Exited the wrist of Governor John Connally.
- (7) Entered the thigh of Governor John Connally.
- (8) Exited the thigh of Governor John Connally when he was on the stretcher.
- (9) Still weighed a nearly pristine 158.6 grams.

The meat shot was underpowered and could not have done that much damage. When the Warren Commission received the medical determinations regarding the wounds of John F. Kennedy and Governor John Connally, the findings had to be reconciled with the Commission's theory that OSWALD was the lone assassin. The Warren Commission determined that three shots had been fired from the Texas School Book Depository - and one had missed. One of these had clearly struck the head of the President. The other, therefore, would logically have had to have done all the remaining damage. The Warren Commission had no idea about "meat shots" and it had to account for the pristine bullet. The Magic Bullet was born.

That bullet, because of the bulge and the oval shape at the rear of the slug, shows that it was not fired into cotton wadding, it was fired into water. Who fired it into water to put lands and grooves on it so it would appear to have been fired? They were in a hurry. They fired it into a water tank. That distends the end. It causes the lead to bulge out the rear side and give an oval fish tail. That was a sabot round used to plant evidence.

This whole thing of somebody dropping it on a stretcher. In a million fucking years who's going to find it? They're doing CPR on his ass and it popped out of the fucking hole. An underpowered round. It was supposed to go in about three inches, they didn't want any distortion on it. Someday I'll give you a demonstration of how it is done.

When Governor John Connally died on June 16, 1993, it was suggested that the bullet fragments lodged inside him be removed and weighed. If the weight of these fragments added to the weight of the magic bullet exceeded 160 grains, then the magic bullet was planted. The Connally family, however, objected to this procedure. Gerald Posner cited a study by Failure Analysis Associates that stated the magic bullet wasn't magic, after all, then admitted: "A complete recreation of CE 399 may be impossible."

THE SECOND SHOT

The cowboys of the CIA ambushed Kennedy in a classic Old West crossfire. Just as he passed the records building (the one with the vertical long windows) Kennedy got plugged. While visiting HEMMING'S private detective office, late one evening in 1978, he told me: "FRANK was firing from the Records Building." HEMMING later denied he had said this. HEMMING 1994:

Take another fucking toke, A. J., STURGIS was a low echelon fucking throwaway. What were you taking, acid, that night? A. J., you know what you are? You're an unreconstructed hippie. You're stuck with having published a whole bunch of shit about the tramps which may lead somewhere someday. You have a team in the Texas School Book Depository. You have a team that's split up in another building. You probably have a team on the other side of the whole Plaza area. When the target makes it to the underpass, that's where they give him a blast. These people were trying to be selective. Jackie wasn't hit. Mrs. Connally wasn't hit. No Secret Service men were hit. These are bullets whizzing around these people.

Kennedy was caught in a classic crossfire ambush, right out of the old West. The second shot which was fired from the Records Building by STURGIS further wounded Governor John Connally but missed John Kennedy. Mrs. Connally, testified that she thought her husband was hit by a second shot fired immediately after President Kennedy grabbed his throat. Governor John Connally told Life magazine: "There is my absolute knowledge, and Nellie's too, the one bullet caused the President's wound, and an entirely separate shot struck me...I'll never change my mind." [Life 10.30.66] A CIA liaison man informed Congressional leaders investigating the Agency that "(Kennedy) Presidential aides Kenneth O'Donnell and David Powers are reported to have told investigators soon after the Kennedy assassination that they thought they had observed what might have been shots coming from a location other than the Texas School Depository. But sometime before O'Donnell and Powers submitted their report to the Warren Commission by deposition and affidavit either J. Edgar Hoover or his top aides prevailed on the men not to disclose their suspicions to the Commission." According to the report, "the FBI warned O'Donnell and Powers that testimony to that effect could lead to possible international incident and inflame public passions fed by other secret information then known by the FBI." [Bob Wiedrick The Chicago Tribune 6/15/75]

Gerald Posner stated that after he informed Governor John Connally about new technologies, John Connally realized he had been mistaken: "It may well be that Mrs. Connally was mistaken about seeing the President raise his arms after the first shot. That might have been after the second shot. And if that is true, it would make it all very consistent...[and] the second bullet could have hit us both." Earlier accounts of an incident are often more accurate.

When Failure Analysis Associates did a computer reconstruction of Dealey Plaza, creating a computer generated trajectory that "could then be splayed on to a cone," part of the cone covered the Records Building. [Posner Case Closed p477; Frontline: Who was LHO?] The height and isolation of the Records Building would have prevented the detection of STURGIS by eyewitnesses in Dealey Plaza. The roof lines of the Records Building were traced by low walls that hid him from the crowds below and provided a convenient gun rest. No one in Dealey Plaza saw any one fire from there.

WITNESSES WHO HEARD SHOTS FROM THE RECORDS BUILDING

F. Lee Mudd reported that he thought one or two of the shots came from the direction of the Dal-Tex Building. Standing at the north curb of Elm Street, he dropped to the ground when the shots were fired and looked toward the corner of Elm and Houston Street: "He looked around him [the FBI report related] and he recalled that in looking toward the building nearby, he noted several broken windows on the fourth floor of the Dal-Tex Building, and the thought occurred to him that possibly the shots had been fired through these broken windows...[He] stated that when the shots were fired, they sounded as if they came from the direction of the Dal-Tex Building." [24WH538]

Eyewitness Charles Brehm told the FBI that "it seemed quite apparent to him that the shots came from one of two buildings back at the corner of Elm and Houston Streets." [22WH837] In 1993 Charles Brehm stated, "They all came from the same place. Either the Records Building or the Texas School Book Depository." Assistant Dallas County District Attorney Sam Paternostro told the FBI that he recalled hearing a shot that "came from the Texas School Book Depository building or the Criminal Courts Building." [24WH536] A physical feature of the Criminal Courts Building ruled it out as a source of the shots. A brick parapet 15 feet high and less than two feet wide bordered the Houston Street roof line, making a shot from there almost impossible. Other witnesses pointed specifically to the Records and Criminal Court Buildings. Elsie Dorman watched the motorcade from an open window on the fourth floor of the Texas School Book Depository. Two days after the assassination, she advised the FBI that "she felt that these shots were coming from the area of the Records Building." Otis N. Williams watched the motorcade from the steps of the Texas School Book Depository. Just after the Presidential limousine had passed the building and dipped out of sight down Elm Street, Otis N. Williams heard "three loud blasts." Otis N. Williams told the FBI that he "thought these blasts came from the location of the court house." [WCD 5] Both the Dallas County Records Building, and the Criminal Courts Building, stood between Otis N. Williams and the Court House.

Josiah Thompson wrote: "Such witness reports establish only the possibility that one or more shots may have come from the east boundary of Dealey Plaza. What turns this possibility into a probability is the web of evidence and logic that necessitates another gun besides OSWALD'S firing on the motorcade from behind...the most probable point of origin for such a bullet would be the roof of the Dallas County Records Building." STURGIS may have used one of HEMMING'S Mannlicher-Carcano rifles. HEMMING told this researcher:

Rifle barrels produced in Italy at that time, the Carcanos, were out of 22 foot stock. So they ran the lands and grooves through 22 feet of pipe. The same tool is used on thousands of weapons. The factory, in the Pough Valley of Italy, only had two tools to do lands and grooves. Everyone had these same tool markings on them.

THE THIRD SHOT

The Warren Commission concluded that three shots were fired. On October 31, 2003 this finding was contradicted by Nellie Connally, the wife of John Connally, who told the New York Times that she heard three shots. CHRIST fired the last shot while standing at the northeast corner window. This was the shot that blew part of President Kennedy's head off. HEMMING told this researcher:

One shot was fired out of OSWALD'S Mannlicher-Carcano. The gunman was standing up. He used a frangible round. It had been cut so it came apart on impact. It spread to a wide pattern on impact. You know what a dum-dum is? They used to say you carved an 'X' on the nose of it. You know what a hollow point is? It mushrooms. When it hits you it opens up a big goddamn hole. Frangible bullets don't mushroom. They become six separate slugs the minute they hit skin.

At least one Mannlicher-Carcano had been used in the assassination. Its accuracy was improved since its bolt did not have to be worked. HEMMING: "Every time you work the bolt you have to re-acquire the target."

THEORY: DAVID LEMAR CHRIST'S FRANGIBLE AMMUNITION

CHRIST was a CIA techie so the possibility existed that the bullet which exited from the head of President John F. Kennedy was a frangible round which threw the head of President Kennedy backwards, and blew away a quarter of his skull. This made it appear as if he had been hit from the front. An excerpt from President Kennedy's autopsy stated: "Clearly visible in the above described large skull defect and exuding from it is lacerated brain tissue which on close inspection proves to represent the major portion of the right cerebral hemisphere." [WR p541] The wound in the back of President Kennedy's skull measured six millimeters. The beveling or conning shape found was consistent with an entrance wound. In Deadly Secrets former Ramparts writers William Turner and Warren Hinckle wrote that they interviewed "a former Cuban mercenary for the CIA" who stated: "The array of outlawed weaponry with which we were familiarized included bullets that exploded on impact." [Hinckle Deadly Secrets p47] HEMMING:

There are no bullets less than 20 millimeters that actually explode. Twenty millimeter is the smallest you can put a fuse assembly in. The Germans came up with the first one. Hydroshock rounds were developed in the last 20 years. It's a hydraulic function that turns it into a frangible bullet. They want the bullet to penetrate and then explode. Another procedure involves boring out a hole in the bullet, then the same exact weight of the lead that was removed is replaced with solder. Then a little brass plug is put in it. As that sucker is traveling through the air, it's getting hotter and hotter. The solder is melting. It melts at the back of the slug before it melts at the front. When that copper jacket hits anything that gives resistance, the little brass nut starts traveling forward and a hydraulic action occurs. It starts mushrooming and splitting the bullet. The bullet has started to stop, but that little brass plug in the rear of the bullet wants to keep on going. There's nothing to stop it but the liquid. This is squeezing the liquid. You can't compress liquids, and it transfers a foot pound energy throughout that liquid. If the fucker hits metal, it will explode like a fucking firecracker into many fragments. If it hits skin, it will only explode probably after it's penetrated three or four inches. Then it starts coming apart into a lot of small pieces. You'll recover solder, copper and lead. The solder melts. It becomes black speckles. It won't even seem metallic.

THE MEDICAL EVIDENCE AND THE FRANGIBLE ROUND

There was medical evidence a frangible round, or a hydroshock round, was employed. In the Warren Report, Dr. Alfred G. Olivier, who had spent seven years doing wounds ballistic research for the U.S. Army stated: "I didn't think this type of a stable bullet would cause a massive head wound, I thought it would go through making a small entrance and exit..." In the May 1992 Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. James Humes wrote:

The X-rays disclosed fine, dustlike, metallic fragments from back to front where the bullet traversed the head before creating an explosive exit wound on the right temporal-parietal area. These fragments were not grossly visible. Two small bullet fragments were recovered from inside the skull - measuring three by one millimeters and seven by two millimeters... The head was so devastated by the exploding bullet and the gaping jagged stellate wound it created...two thirds of the right cerebrum had been blown away...After the brain was removed, we looked more closely at the wound, and noted that the inside of the rear of the skullbone was absolutely intact and beveled and there could be no question from whence cometh that bullet - [from rear to front].

The Warren Commission stated that a bullet fragment from the head wound hit a curbstone causing a chip of concrete to hit bystander Walter Teague in the cheek, causing him to bleed. When the FBI ran a spectrographic analysis on the curb it showed "traces of lead with a trace of antimony." [15WH700] Since there was no copper found in the curb (the 6.5 mm ammo was copper-jacketed) S.A. Shaneyfeldt told the Warren Commission the lead came from the core of the bullet. Was the chip of concrete that hit Walter Teague in the face set into motion by a fragment from frangible bullet? Was this why, when the curbstone was tested, the traces on it were from the core of the bullet, rather than from the part of the bullet that came into contact with the copper shell casing, that is, the outside of the bullet? Or did the fragment of a jacket around a sabot hit the sidewalk, as HEMMING suggested? Gerald Posner believed: "What is likely is that after the bullet fragmented against a tree branch, the stable lead core remained in a straight line from the Depository and struck the curb, over 500 feet away. The destabilized copper jacket hit the pavement, giving Virgie Rachley the impression of sparks. Neither fragment was ever recovered...No part of a third bullet was ever found." [NYT 5.26.92; JAMA 5.27.92; Crenshaw JFK Conspiracy of Silence - questionable book]

J. Edgar Hoover disagreed with Gerald Posner:

Assuming this mark was made by a fragment of a bullet from the assassin's rifle, the evidence present is insufficient to establish whether it was caused by a fragment of a bullet striking the occupants of the Presidential limousine, such as the bullet that struck the President's head, or whether it is the fragment of a shot that may have missed the Presidential limousine. [FBI Hoover to Rankin 8.12.64]

J. Edgar Hoover also stated:

The piece of curbing containing the mark was removed on August 5, 1964, and examined in the FBI Laboratory. Small foreign metal smears were found adhering to the curbing section within the area of the mark. These metal smears were spectrographically determined to be essentially lead with a trace of antimony. No copper was found. The lead could have originated from the lead core of a mutilated metal-jacketed bullet such as the type of bullet loaded into the 6.5 millimeter Mannlicher-Carcano cartridges or from some other source having the same composition. The absence of copper precludes the possibility that the mark on the curbing section was made by an un mutilated military-type full metal-jacket bullet..."

THE FRAGMENT SIZE

The size of the fragments also indicated an frangible or hydroshock round was used. The FBI found:

- (1) A bullet fragment weighing 44.6 grains - about a quarter of a bullet, since each intact bullet weighed about 160 to 161 grains before firing, and 158.6 grains after firing. This bullet fragment was found in the seat cushion of the Presidential limousine.
- (2) One bullet fragment weighing 21.0 grains - about an eighth of a bullet, found beside the back seat of the limousine.
- (3) One metal fragment weighing 1.65 grains, taken from the head of the President.
- (4) One metal fragment weighing 0.15 grains, taken from the head of the President.
- (5) One metal fragment weighing 0.5 grains, removed from the arm of Governor Connally.
- (6) Three metal fragments weighing 0.9, 0.7, 0.7, removed from the rear floorboard carpet.

When FBI firearms experts examined the two larger fragments, they concluded that they had been fired from OSWALD'S Mannlicher-Carcano rifle. However, it was not possible to determine whether the two bullet fragments were from the same bullet or from two different bullets. [FBI 62-109060-3452, 3440] The Warren Commission determined that the wounds of President Kennedy and those of Governor John Connally were consistent with a total of only two shots: "One shot passed through the President's neck and then most probably passed through the Governor's body and a subsequent shot penetrated the President's head." No other shots struck any part of the automobile. Therefore, if three shots were fired, it followed that one shot had missed the car. But which shot? The Warren Commission stated that "The evidence is inconclusive as to whether it was the first, second or third shot which missed." [WR p111] The Warren Commission could not present a clear picture of what happened in Dealey Plaza because the "bullet that missed" was never recovered.

The third shot was fired from the Texas School Book Depository, however, a firecracker was set off at the knoll, as a diversionary measure. The men observed standing behind the picket fence did not fire a weapon at President Kennedy. Lee Bowers perceived their activity as a "commotion." The firecracker sounded like a gunshot, and was followed by a puff of white smoke. When a gun discharges, black smoke is released or, if the bullet contains smokeless, the discharge releases a trace of smoke, visible only in strong sunlight. The smoke from a firecracker is white, and highly visible.

The diversionary effort worked. Most of the people in Dealey Plaza looked toward the knoll as the shots were fired and immediately ran toward it. Even the stock boys in the Texas School Book Depository, who had been watching the motorcade from the window directly under the sniper's nest, ran to the other side of the Texas School Book Depository and looked at the railroad tracks that ran behind the knoll. One of them saw a policeman on top of a freight car. Could this have been an assassin going into hiding?

Lee Bowers observed the area behind the fence, on top of the knoll, during the shooting. Asked by Joe Ball about what attracted his attention to this area, he replied:

I just am unable to describe...it was something out of the ordinary, a sort of milling around, but something occurred in this particular spot which was out of the ordinary, which attracted my eye for some reason, which I could not identify." Dallas Policeman Seymour Weitzman ran up on the knoll. He told the FBI: "As he came to the fence at the top of the grassy slope, some bystander mentioned that the firecracker or shot had come from the other side of the fence, and he requested a bystander to bend over and he used the bystanders back as a step and vaulted over the fence. [WCD 5]

Several railroad men standing on the railroad bridge near the triple overpass said they had seen smoke coming from behind the knoll fence. Sterling Mayfield Holland, who had been on the bridge since 11:45 a.m., testified:

There was a shot, a report...and a puff of smoke came out about six or eight feet above the ground right out from under those trees. And at just about this location from where I was standing you could see that puff of smoke, like someone had thrown a firecracker, or something out, and that is just about the way it sounded. It wasn't as loud as the previous reports or shots. [6WH244]

In 1966 Sterling Holland told Josiah Thompson:

It was just like somebody had thrown a firecracker and left a little puff of smoke there. It was a white smoke; it wasn't a black smoke or like a black powder. It was like the puff of a cigarette, but it was about nine feet off the ground. It would be just about in line with, or maybe just a little bit higher than that fence, but by the time it got underneath the tree, well, it would be about eight or nine feet...(the ground slopes off sharply in front of the fence.) [Thompson Six Seconds in Dallas taped interview with Holland 11.30.66]

Sterling Holland placed the time of the puff of smoke as coinciding with the first noise:

When they got just about to the Arcade, I heard what I thought for the moment was a firecracker, and he slumped over..." Sterling Holland died on April 29, 1969. Gerald Posner called Sterling Holland "confused about several issues, thinking Mrs. Kennedy was trying to climb into the back seat to join her husband.

Sterling Holland told the Dallas Police Department:

I am signal supervisor for the Union Terminal and I was inspecting signals and switches and stopped to watch the parade. I was standing on top of the triple underpass and the President's car was coming down Elm Street and when they got just about to the arcade I heard what I thought for a moment was a fire cracker and he slumped over and I looked toward the arcade and trees and saw a puff of smoke come from the trees and I heard three more shots after the first shot, but that was the only puff of smoke I saw. I immediately ran around to where I could see behind the arcade and did not see anyone running from there. But the puff of smoke I saw definitely came from behind the arcade through the trees. After the first shot the President slumped over and Mrs. Kennedy jumped up and tried to get over in the back seat to him, and then the second shot rang out. After the first shot the Secret Service man raised up in the seat with a machine gun and then dropped back down in the seat. And they immediately sped off. Everything is spinning in my head and if I remember anything else later I will come back and tell Bill.

[Holland stated] that a Secret Service agent in the President's car had 'raised up in the seat with a machine gun.'"Because Holland might have been in error, and Secret Servicemen in another vehicle had deployed their weapons, as was to be expected, and not in the President's vehicle, does not mean that Holland's testimony about the puff of smoke was in error. Posner did not take into account that Holland was dealing with a situation that was frightening, confusing and fast moving. We are talking about events taking place in fast moving cars - Holland said that his head was "spinning." [Decker Ex. 5323 page 480]

Posner also questioned Holland's testimony that: "After the first shot the President slumped over and Mrs. Kennedy jumped up and tried to get over in the back seat to him and then the second shot rang out." Jackie Kennedy tried to get out of the limo by climbing over the trunk. Holland interpreted this differently.

Holland was in error about the location of certain events, however, all these events did occur. Holland was a responsible citizen, a railroad signal inspector. People depended on him for their safety. He was not prone to hallucinate. Because he was confused, Posner attempted to make him into a liar.

In a notarized statement dated November 22, 1963, for the Dallas County Sheriff's Department, Austin Lawrence Miller stated that when he heard three shots and saw people in the Presidential limousine react, he saw "something which I thought was smoke or steam coming from a group of trees north of Elm off the railroad tracks." At that time, Austin Lawrence Miller was standing on the bridge of the triple underpass. Four other railroad men had also seen the smoke. Patrolman J.M. Smith, the second policeman to scale the fence on the knoll, "smelled gunpowder...in the parking lot near the Texas School Book Depository" and so did another patrolman. Lee Bowers noticed that "At the time of the shooting, in the vicinity of where the two men I have described were, there was a flash of light or smoke..." [6WH239; 24WH217; 22WH833; 22WH836; interview with Winborn Murphy cited in Rush To Judgment Lane p40; WCD 205 p39]

THE PHONY SECRET SERVICE AGENT SEYMOUR WEITZMAN AND J. M. SMITH

Seymour Weitzman was the first Dallas Police Officer to scale the fence on top of the knoll. He told Warren Commission Counsel Joseph Ball that he "noticed numerous kinds of footprints..." Although Seymour Weitzman had scaled the fence first, the officer behind him, J. M. Smith, was the first to encounter a Secret Service Agent there: "I wasn't alone. There was some Deputy Sheriff and I believe one Secret Service man when I got there...I pulled my pistol from my holster, and I thought, 'This is silly, I don't know who I am looking for'...Just as I did he showed me he was a Secret Service Agent..." [7WH531] Weitzman had also seen this man and told Joseph Ball: "[There were] other officers, Secret Service as well." [7WH105] Sterling Holland, who had run to the area where he saw the puff of smoke, noticed footprints between a station wagon and the picket fence: "It was muddy...a hundred tracks in one location. There was mud on the bumper as if someone had cleaned their foot...there were 12 or 15 policemen, or plainclothesmen, and we looked for empty shells..." [7WH284; WNEW-TV transcript 3.24.66]

The Warren Commission questioned every Secret Service Agent on the scene that day, and they stated that they went to Parkland Hospital or stayed at the Trade Center. [WCD 1095]

The HSCA questioned J. M. Smith: "One witness who did not base his Secret Service identification merely upon observing a plainclothesman in the presence of uniformed police officers was Dallas police officer Joseph M. Smith. Smith, who had been riding as a motorcycle escort in the motorcade, ran up the grassy knoll immediately after the shooting occurred. He testified to the Warren Commission that at that time he encountered a man who stated that he was a Secret Service agent and offered supporting credentials..." ### S.A. HOSTY EXPLAINS

The HSCA made an effort to identify the person who talked to Joseph M. Smith. "FBI S.A. James P. Hosty stated that Frank Ellsworth, then an Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent, had indicated that he had been in the knoll area and for some reason had identified himself to someone as a Secret Service Agent. The HSCA deposed Frank Ellsworth, who denied S.A. Hosty's allegation." James Hosty:

That's not what I said. I said Ellsworth told me after the assassination that he had gone over there and participated in the building and grounds search. I suggested to the HSCA that there were Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agents at the scene and maybe they were the ones who had been mistaken for Secret Service Agents. It was a mass of confusion, you have to remember."

Frank Ellsworth:

He was wrong. He knew precisely what I was doing that day. I spent the entire time searching the Texas School Book Depository. I talked to him about it later." Frank Ellsworth said he heard about the assassination on the radio, then ran to the Texas School Book Depository, where he found two uniformed officers: "This was three minutes or four minutes after the assassination.

HEMMING told this researcher:

Most of the time, if someone grabs one of your guys, you come up with I.D. and snatch him away. You make sure the cops closest to your guys are on your payroll. They don't know shit. They're not told a goddamn thing. Either they are given a code word, or are told to watch for a particular type of I.D. If some one from a particular agency tells you to boo, you boo. That's all. They don't know shit.

A recent JFK Records Collection Computer search revealed that one page of a Warren Commission document that dealt with Seymour Weitzman and the tramps was referred to another agency for review. [NARA 180-10095-10367; see 180-10095-10355] When the HSCA attempted to question Seymour Weitzman, Dr. Charles Laburda objected: "Since Mr. Weitzman was treated for emotional illness for many years...information sought from him should be extracted from his testimony and depositions made at that time [1963 to 1964]." [ltr. VA Laburda 6.1.78] Seymour Weitzman, born January 28, 1922, died in July 1985.

At first this researcher thought the phony Secret Service agent was Bernard Barker because I thought that the same crew was used in the Kennedy assassination as the Watergate Break-in. HEMMING told this researcher:

BARKER never went on any operations. He was around these BRAC (Bureau for Suppression of Communism) assholes. Hey, if he'd gone out and done an assassination or two in Miami, like those are coward-assed motherfuckers, okay. He don't even do that. His job was to snitch us out.

When BARKER was questioned, under oath, about his whereabouts on November 22 he stated:

This is a question that came up during the Watergate Hearing. I said that since I was a Cuban Revolutionary Council agent, they would have me on record. I was working for the Agency, they know exactly everywhere I was, I reported to them daily. I can tell you I was watching the whole thing on T.V. when it happened. I was home, in Miami, Florida, I remember definitely. My wife was with me. I saw many people at the time. I was constantly seeing people. For your information, if it would help you any, I was in Miami quite definitely because I remember seeing the thing on T.V. I don't recall who else saw me aside from my wife...my family, my neighbors [Peter Arent 4400 NW 5th St; 420 NW 44th Ave Miami], the people who lived next door.

Then he was asked why he was at home watching television that day, instead of being at work? He responded: "I didn't report necessarily every day, but just about every day I would get a call or assignment." BARKER was asked what soap opera he was watching at 1:30 p.m., Friday, November 22, 1963. He could not remember. Then he was asked if he heard of the assassination via a news flash. He responded: "No, I think I saw the parade, how the whole thing happened." No evidence has surfaced indicating Barker was the phony Secret Service agent however a man closely resembling an associate of Bernardo Torres, who's name appears in OSWALD'S address book, is right in front of the grassy knoll minutes after the assassination. He was free to walk away.

ONE OF BERNARDO DE TORRES MEN WAS THE PHONY SECRET SERVICE AGENT BEHIND THE FENCE ON THE GRASSY KNOLL

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE MAN BEHIND THE FENCE ON THE KNOLL

The HSCA's photo enhancement of the Philip Willis photograph of the stockade fence atop the knoll, taken seconds before HUNT, STURGIS and CHRIST opened fire, showed:

...an object whose size and shape were consistent with a human being, positioned just inside the retaining wall. The object possessed colors with a distinct resemblance to flesh tones, as revealed on the color display. The Panel perceived the object to be that of a badly blurred image of a person, dressed in dark clothing, standing or leaning just inside the retaining wall.

In this photograph, which shows the person standing behind the concrete wall, there is visible, near the region of that person's hands, a very distinct straight line feature which extends from the lower right to the upper right. Nevertheless, because of the blur of the object in the photograph, the panel was not able to determine the actual length of the object and could not conclude whether it was or was not a weapon. [HSCA V6 p123-127]

The Nix film, which captured the area in question around the same time, revealed:

An object that can be construed as having a shape similar to that of a person. It is also possible to interpret this object as being of the same general shape as the person identified at the wall of the Willis #5 photograph. [HSCA V5 p131]

The HSCA found no photographic evidence this man had a rifle with him nor did it find photographic evidence of the puff of smoke. [HSCA V4 p424] Click HERE for Nix film. DE TORRES' man set firecrackers off behind the fence on the grassy knoll as a diversionary effort. He turned into a Secret Service agent after the assassination. One of them was an associate of BERNARDO DE TORRES. STURGIS told the Rockefeller Commission about an attempt that he planned on the life of Fidel Castro:

I again did these exercises to try to get a diversion that if I would get the nod to do the execution that I would have some means of diversionary tactics to draw attention away from the people who did the execution, and I was there with my people to prevent it because of security.

PHOTOGRAPH OF DAVID MORALES SANCHEZ

Is the man who is speaking into a walkie talkie at the very instant that Kennedy is shot David Morales? Later HUNT will implicate him in the assassination in a death bed confession.

HEMMING AND THE NASH RAMBLER STATION WAGON
DEPUTY SHERIFF ROGER CRAIG

The Warren Commission Report stated:

Roger Craig, a Deputy Sheriff of Dallas County, claimed that about 15 minutes after the assassination he saw a man who he later identified as OSWALD coming from the direction of the Texas School Book Depository Building and running down the hill north of Elm Street toward a light colored Nash Rambler station wagon which was moving slowly along Elm Street toward the underpass. The station wagon stopped to pick up the man then drove off. Craig testified that later in the afternoon he saw OSWALD in the police interrogation room and told Captain Fritz that OSWALD was the man he saw. Craig also claimed that when Fritz pointed out to OSWALD that Craig had identified him, OSWALD rose from his chair, looked directly at Fritz, and said, 'Everyone will know who I am now.' The Warren Commission could not accept important elements of Craig's testimony. Captain Fritz stated that a deputy sheriff whom he could not identify did ask to see him that afternoon and told him a similar story to Craig's. Fritz did not bring him in his office to identify OSWALD but turned him over to Lieutenant Baker for questioning. If Craig saw OSWALD that afternoon, he saw him through the glass windows of the office. And neither Captain Fritz nor any other officer can remember that OSWALD dramatically arose from his chair and said, 'Everybody will know who I am now.' If OSWALD had made such a statement Captain Fritz and the others present would probably have remembered it. Craig may have seen a person enter a white Rambler station wagon 15 or 20 minutes after the shooting and travel west on Elm Street, but the Commission concluded that this man was not OSWALD because of the overwhelming evidence that OSWALD was far away from the building by that time. [WR p160]

Click HERE to see Craig tell his embellished story. Roger Craig was interviewed by Mark Lane and Jim Garrison on October 25, 1967. He added this to his story:

He recognized OSWALD, seated alongside the desk, as the man he had seen in Dealey Plaza. Fritz said to OSWALD that CRAIG saw him enter a car after the assassination. OSWALD became angry - stood up and raised his voice as he spoke to -- almost shouted at Fritz. OSWALD said that the station wagon and Mrs. Paine had nothing to do with it. Craig said that OSWALD then seemed to realize that he had revealed too much information -- having answered by referring to a station wagon.

Roger Craig said his uncle was Roy Vaughn, one of the Dallas Police Officers who picked up the tramps. In an Affidavit Roger Craig said the man driving the station wagon was Eugene Edgar Bradley. Roger Craig might have seen someone get into a Rambler station wagon, but it was not OSWALD. Roger Craig had exaggerated and had outright lied about confronting OSWALD in Fritz's office. Roger Craig was twisting the truth and lying in order to make himself into a hero. Roger Craig resigned from the Sheriff's Department after eight years of service in July 1967 and became a private investigator for a bail bondsmen. Roger Craig told the Dallas Times Herald that on November 1, 1967, someone shot at him in a parking lot in Dallas."The article contended that Craig said he believed his going to New Orleans last week for interrogation by District Attorney Garrison was probably connected with the attempt on his life. The article stated that Craig had indicated he was 'tailed' while in New Orleans and was still being 'tailed' in Dallas." [Dallas Times Herald 11.3.67] In 1968, Roger Craig served as a Municipal Judge in Midlothian, Texas. In 1973 he was injured in an automobile accident. He committed suicide on May 15, 1975, at the age of 39. Just before he shot himself with a .22 caliber rifle, the Social Security Administration had refused to pay him disability.

On February 9, 1976, the widow of Roger Craig, along with her new husband, Jerry Hahn, Assistant Vice President-in-Charge of Loans at the National Bank of Commerce, Dallas, Texas, visited the Dallas FBI. They were accompanied by Mr. M.J. McNicholas, Attorney-at-law. Jerry Hahn demanded that the FBI stop harassing his wife. Mrs. Hahn was followed, and had photographed the men who had followed her. When she picked up these photographs from the developer, they all turned out blank. After Jerry Hahn's visit, the harassment ceased. Jerry Hahn stated: "Had the harassment of his wife not ceased after their visit to the Dallas FBI, he had planned to approach the CIA, because he felt that Agency could be the only other source of harassment." On December 27, 1976, Jerry Hahn returned to the Dallas FBI office. He told the agents he had heard S.A. Gemberling was retiring on December 30, 1976, and "desired to ascertain from S.A. Gemberling whether or not the FBI had conducted a surveillance of his wife, (deleted) in early 1976, or otherwise had investigated her in connection with the assassination investigation." The FBI assured him it had not harassed his wife. [FBI 62-109060-7598]

The testimony of Roger Craig about a man getting into the Nash station wagon was supported by Marvin Robinson. In a FBI interview dated November 23, 1963, Marvin Robinson said he was traveling west on Elm toward Houston Street after the assassination. Just as he crossed Elm and Houston and was in front of the Texas School Book Depository, a light-colored Nash station wagon appeared before him. He said the station wagon stopped, and he had seen a white male come down the grassy hill between the building and the street and enter the station wagon. Mr. Marvin Robinson did not testify before the Warren Commission and the HSCA was not able to locate him. [HSCA V12 p18] On December 17, 1976, the HSCA received a letter from Wilbur V. Gee of Oloa, Kansas. Wilbur Gee:

In April 1960 I returned from some years in Venezuela and I entered the group of Senator Rolando Masferrer in Miami, Florida. I remained active in this group until Masferrer was arrested by President Kennedy's orders at the commencement of the Bay of Pigs. I went then to live in Mexico and later Brownsville, Texas, but the day President Kennedy was killed I had just returned from Vera Cruz and was at my son's home in West Palm Beach, Florida. So much for myself. In reference to the photo that some believe is HUNT and STURGIS at Dallas and the mention of some of a 'Light colored Rambler station wagon.' Howard K. Davis, pilot, friend of STURGIS owned a such a car when I knew him in 1960 to 1961. This can be checked out to his license plates & registration in Dade County Florida. (This type car is not too common)... Angus McNair, a member of FRANK STURGIS' group, was supposed to be related to Senator Smathers - Florida. [LNA 406 West Madison Street, Iola, Kansas 66749 12.17.76 316-365-5710]

Howard K. Davis:

What happened was HEMMING borrowed the station wagon to go to California with Richard Whatley and Robert Willis. They crossed the Mexican border, possibly to contact anti-Castro people in Mexico City, for what purpose I don't know. As they went through a security check they decided to run it - the guards had seen the stock of a submachine gun. The last I heard of the station wagon someone contacted me, it might have been the FBI, and said the station wagon was impounded someplace. This was 1963. It would have cost more money to retrieve it than it was worth. I think it was impounded on the border. I think it was before the assassination, but I don't know that to be true.

Howard K. Davis was asked about HEMMING'S statement that the station wagon ended up in Dallas: "I would say it is highly, highly unlikely it was in Dallas but, hell, you never know."

HEMMING told this researcher:

Roger Craig was right on the fucking money. What he saw was what happened. That Nash fucking station wagon was Howard K. Davis' fucking car. The one that was supposedly stolen by Whatley and Willis and then returned by the Mexicans, so that FBI could hang them for Interstate Transportation of a Stolen Motor vehicle. Get their asses out of Mexico. Whatley and Willis followed me out to California in the station wagon. They headed for Guatemala via Mexico. Willis had been in prison with Castillo Armas' people in 1959 and had contacts. But they were stopped at a checkpoint. The Mexicans discovered a Schmizer and they did six months in a Mexican prison. This was the incident I wrote to Walker about. Walker sent them travel money. The car ended up in Brownsville, Texas, but then it disappeared. Jerry Buchanan picked-up the car and took it to Harlingen, Texas. Whatley was close with Buchanan. We're saying they stole the car so we can get them back to the U.S. and they don't have to rot in a Mexican prison.

On November 27, 1963, Sam Papich telephonically provided the CIA information on Ruth Paine in response to a CIA teletype. The last line of the document that reviewed the information of Sam Papich read, "With respect to the station wagon in which she transported the OSWALDS, he advised (deleted as of 2010 - document ends)." [CIA

1534-1105 rel. 5.18.82] The FBI was looking at Ruth Paine's station wagon when it should have been looking at Howard K. Davis' Nash station wagon.

ESCAPE FROM THE TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY THE ELEVATOR SHAFT

HUNT and CHRIST made their escape as rapidly as possible. After completing the sniper's nest, they ran to the back of the Texas School Book Depository and entered the east elevator shaft. The elevator was put in a position where it would not move:

Baker: [Truly]...was trying to get that service elevator down there. He ran over there to push the button to get it down...it didn't...he hollered for it, said "Bring that elevator down here"...I said "Let's take the stairs."

Belin: Was any elevator moving at the time you saw and looked up the shaft?

Baker: No, sir.

Belin: Did you hear any elevator moving?

Baker: No, sir.

Belin: Mr. Truly pushed the button, I believe you said.

Baker: That is right, sir.

Belin: When he pushed the button, did any elevator start moving?

Baker: No, sir.

Gerald Posner accounted for this lack of movement of the east elevator during a period when it should have been moving by citing Roy Truly's belief that OSWALD left the gate open on the sixth floor so the car could not be operated.

The Warren Commission was presented with evidence that the west elevator was also behaving erratically. Jack Dougherty, a employee of the Texas School Book Depository working on the fifth floor, testified that he took the west elevator to the first floor, after hearing a noise which sounded like a backfire. When Patrolman Marion L. Baker reached the first floor, the west elevator should have been there, waiting for him. When he looked up the shaft, Roy Truly spotted it on the fifth floor. The Warren Commission claimed Jack Dougherty was "confused." After their encounter with OSWALD, Patrolman Marion L. Baker and Roy Truly ran up the stairs to the fifth floor and found that the east elevator was there but the west one was not. They attributed this to Jack Dougherty, despite his testimony that he took the elevator seconds after the shots were fired.

HUNT and CHRIST repelled down the elevator shaft on ropes. The elevator shaft opened on a loading dock in the back of the Texas School Book Depository and HUNT and CHRIST ran for the railroad cars. In 1978 the HSCA discovered that an unknown exit existed in the Texas School Book Depository. Prior to 1956, an add-on shed was attached to the building: "There is a door there at the Texas School Book Depository's west side, but the door is hidden by uncut bushes and trees; no determination was made of the age of the bushes and trees." [HSCA V12 p19] HEMMING told this researcher:

If I had set up the fall guys in all that I don't think I would have used a Mannlicher-Carcano. If I had set up OSWALD he'd have been found at the bottom of the elevator shaft where he tried to repel down, where How, [HEMMING slipped and almost said HOWARD HUNT], where one of the teams got out of there repelling off the bottom of the fucking elevator. He would have fallen to his death with his little meat beaters wrapped around an M-1 rifle. The elevator was locked on the seventh floor. It could be locked in position up there in the old days, it could be put in a safety position, so they can work on the son-of-a-bitch. So at the sixth floor you're looking at the bottom of the fucking elevator. This is how professionals move. This scares the shit out of you to think about it, WEBERMAN. This is what we do for sport. To get off at the sixth floor, and we presume most of the shooting was done from the sixth floor, you run the elevator to the seventh floor. The torsion bar in the bottom is where you put your snap links in. Your ropes are all bundled up. All you have to do is raise the door, it doesn't have a safety on it, and slide up the cargo door and pull your string. Your ropes drop down to the bottom of the elevator shaft. It takes one second to do it. You're going with a double line so you can pull it through. You leave it in the bottom of the elevator shaft. No one would know what the fuck it was. No one ever checked the bottom of the shaft. In the basement, there is a caged panel with the master power switch. When the power is killed, two safety rods fly on springs and lock the fucker in place. If you wanted to stop anyone from using the son-of-a-bitch, you'd have someone in the basement throw the master electric. This only affects the motor up in the well, not the lights in the elevator.

Once they left the Texas School Book Depository, the team was allegedly observed. Jean Hill claimed she was almost hit by a police motorcycle as she chased a man in a brown coat that was running from the direction of the Texas School Book Depository "to the railroad tracks to the West. I kept running toward the train tracks, and looked all around, but I couldn't see him." [WCD 81b; 6WH205] The Wilma Bond photographs, however, indicated that Jean Hill remained next to her friend Mary Moorman. Jean Hill declined to be interviewed and advised: "Buy my book."

Less than a minute after the shooting, James Worrell had seen a man "run like a bat out of hell" from the rear exit of the Texas School Book Depository to the railroad cars. [16WH959] James Worrell told Warren Commission Counsel Arlen Specter that minutes after the assassination "I saw this man come out of the back door here" who was "fast moving on." He furnished Arlen Specter with a description: 5' 7" to 5' 10" tall, weighing 155 to 165 pounds, in his early 30's, with brunette hair. He was wearing a dark jacket that was open in the front, and light pants. On November 30, 1963, James Worrell told the FBI "that last night, when he saw photographs of OSWALD on television, he felt this was the person he had seen running away from the building." James Worrell had seen HUNT and CHRIST in the sixth floor window of the Texas School Book Depository and then had seen CHRIST make his escape. He was a key witness. James Worrell, 23, died in motorcycle accident in Dallas on November 5, 1966: "Accident Investigator J.N. Feinglass said James Worrell was headed north in East Dallas when he apparently lost control of the motorcycle, a 1966 Honda. It struck the median curb, jumped the median, and overturned in the southbound traffic lane. James Worrell was thrown against the curbing." James Worrell was carrying a passenger who was also killed. James Worrell's cause of death: "Severe head injury." Jesse C. Price, who was watching the motorcade from the roof of the Terminal Annex Building, gave his voluntary statement to the Dallas Police Department:

This day about 12:35 p.m. I was on the roof of the terminal annex building on the North East corner when the presidential motorcade came down from Main to Houston, North on Houston, and then west on Elm. The cars had proceeded West on Elm Street and was just a short distance from the Triple underpass when I saw Gov. Connally slump over. I did not see the President as his car had gotten out of my view under the underpass. There was a volley of shots, I think five and then much later, maybe as much as five minutes later, another one. I saw one man run towards the passenger cars on the railroad siding after the volley of shots. This man had a white dress shirt, no tie, and khaki colored trousers. His hair appeared to be long and dark and judging by his agility running, could be about 25 years of age. He had something in his hand. I couldn't be sure but it may have been a head piece [a hat?]. [19WH492]

Jesse C. Price died of a blood clot in 1972. The clot occurred during a lower back operation. Gerald Posner, cited the Voluntary Statement Jesse C. Price gave to the Dallas Police, and claimed he was not a credible witness.

THE UNIDENTIFIED CITIZEN

The original description of the assassin of President Kennedy may have been based on a report other than Howard Brennan's, which was more similar to the report of James Worrell. In a letter to the Warren Commission, J. Edgar Hoover admitted the original broadcast by the Dallas Police of the description of the assassin of President Kennedy was:

initiated on the basis of a description furnished by an unidentified citizen who had observed an individual approximating OSWALD'S description running from the Texas School Book Depository immediately after the assassination. Although the citizen was requested by Dallas authorities to proceed to the Sheriff's office for further questioning he apparently never appeared, as the Dallas Sheriff's Office can locate no record of this citizen. Information regarding the unidentified citizen whose information initiated the Dallas Police Department broadcast on November 22, 1963, was obtained from Inspector J.H. Sawyer, Dallas Police Department by our Dallas Office on January 9, 1964.

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation
Department of Justice
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

Your letter of November 12 responded to our suggestion that it might be desirable to investigate further the sources of the original description of the President's alleged assassin that was broadcast by the Dallas police at 12:45 p.m., November 22, 1963. We had also asked whether the police engaged in searching the Texas School Book Depository were notified of this description of the alleged assassin, and if so, when.

You state that in a letter of January 14, 1964 you notified the Commission that the Dallas Police Department advised that the broadcast was initiated on the basis of a description furnished by an unidentified citizen who had observed an individual approximating Oswald's description running from the Texas School Book Depository Building immediately after the assassination. Since there is other testimony that the description was also based on information given by Howard Brennan who stated that he saw the assassin in the southeast corner window of the building, it would seem desirable to ascertain as precisely as may be possible the sources--of which there seem to have been several--on which the description was based and how and by whom the information was transmitted to the Police Department to be put out by the radio dispatcher.

In its Report, the Commission has determined that considerable time--15 minutes or more--elapsed between the broadcast of the description and the discovery of the cartons and other material evidence in the southeast corner window of the sixth floor, 37 minutes elapsed before the discovery of the rifle. An even longer time had elapsed since Brennan first told a policeman of seeing the shots come from the southeast window. Yet the men searching in the building seem never to have been notified of Brennan's statement.

The man who was observed by both these individuals could not have been OSWALD, since OSWALD was being questioned by Marion L. Baker. [WR p156; Inv. 1-2 GA-3-1 1.14.64; Rankin/Hoover 11.18.64; Hoover to Rankin Memo 1.14.64] After the Warren Report went to press, J. Lee Rankin and Alfred Goldberg still wanted the FBI to resolve this contradiction:

It was pointed out that the police department did not have the data available to pinpoint the identity of person who furnished the description that had been put out at 12:45 p.m. Alfred Goldberg advised that the President's Commission had never questioned the information that the Bureau had submitted, and at the time, did not feel the necessity existed for attempting to delve any deeper into this situation; it being noted that the Bureau's investigation appeared to exhaust the possibilities that were available. Alfred Goldberg and J. Lee Rankin felt it would be to the advantage of the Commission, even though it was too late for the report, and to the advantage of the Bureau, to show an additional check was made concerning these items.

J. Edgar Hoover commented: "They never had shown before any concern about the Bureau's advantage." The Warren Commission gave credit to Howard Brennan for the broadcast. Alfred Goldberg commented in 1994: "This is news to me. Send me a copy. I don't recollect that."

The testimony of witness James Romack contradicted the reports of James Worrell, Jesse Price and the unidentified citizen. He told the FBI he started watching the back door of the Texas School Book Depository seconds after the shots were fired and had seen no one, except a policeman, who had run back there to check the fire escapes; yet Texas School Book Depository employee Victoria Elizabeth Adams said that she ran out the back door soon after the shooting. Why hadn't James Romack seen her? The report of Victoria Elizabeth Adams was supported by Deputy Sheriff Luke Mooney who said when he reached the rear of the Texas School Book Depository minutes after the shooting, "the door was wide open." [WCD 897 Sec. 1; 3WH281] Luke Mooney was contacted in November 1993: "I was in the railroad yards. The loading docks were open, there was no door there." The assassin in the Records Building could have gone down a staircase that was next to the elevator. HEMMING told this researcher:

If they took the weapons with them once they left the building they would be exposed, linked directly, if they were found with the weapon. They had a good stash point within the building that did not take hours of preparation to get ready. And in a lot of buildings, if you know construction, there are dead zones where if you happen to drop something like a tool, you got to tear the building down to find the son-of-a-bitch.

Once the authorities found OSWALD'S rifle, the search for the others ceased. HEMMING told this researcher: "The more you throw to them, the quicker they shut down the search." HEMMING said the weapons were retrieved later on.

When Dallas Police Officer D. V. Harkness reached the back of the Texas School Book Depository, he found that "there were some Secret Service agents there, I did not get them identified. They told me they were Secret Service." James Romack had also seen the Secret Service Agents behind the Texas School Book Depository: "There were two other gentlemen, which I never said anything about, that had taken over. They were FBI or something, standing right here at the very back entrance and just stood there." [6WH308; 6WH277] At 12:30 P.M. the President of the United States had been shot. By 12:35 p.m. Officers Seymour Weitzman and J. M. Smith were joined by other officers who were responding to an order sent out by Sheriff Bill Decker moments after the assassination: "Move all available men...into railroad yards and try to determine what happened." A Deputy Sheriff set up a command post behind the fence on the knoll, and ordered a search of the railroad cars. The employees of the Texas School Book Depository ran toward the railroad yards. Then the police - followed by numerous spectators - converged on the Texas School Book Depository. At 12:40 p.m. the Texas School Book Depository was sealed by Officer D. V. Harkness, who had received reports of a gunman in the sixth floor window. [3WH186]

THE FIRST THREE TRAMPS ARE ARRESTED

The first set of three tramps were arrested almost immediately after the assassination. The police radio: "Patrolman Whitman, contact Sawyer and notify him they are holding up a northbound freight train in the yard and want to shake it down before they go." Inspector J. Herbert Sawyer of the Dallas Police Department told the HSCA "he then organized a group of law-enforcement officers from the Dallas Police Department, the FBI, and Sheriff's Office, instructing them to find witnesses and possible suspects. These witnesses were brought to the Sheriff's Office. Inspector J. Herbert Sawyer had also sent a team to search the railroad yards, as there were reports that shots might have come from that direction...He recalls his men finding the three hobos in a boxcar. Sawyer did not personally interrogate these men, but said that they did look like hobos." [HSCA Sawyer interview 5.24.78 Basteri] Note that this broadcast occurred shortly after the event since a posse had not yet been formed.

Lee Bowers recalled: "Since there was the possibility that someone could have...climbed aboard this freight primarily... I stopped the train and gave them a chance to examine it and to be sure that there was no one on it. As a matter of fact, there were three people on it who appeared to be winos, and perhaps were the most frightened winos I had ever seen in my life, since there were possibly 50 policemen with shotguns and Tommy guns and various other weapons shaking them out of these boxcars."

Since the police activity described by Bowers and Harkness took place immediately after the assassination it described the arrest of the first set of tramps.

The three winos taken off the boxcar immediately after the assassination by numerous law enforcement officials were Harold Doyle (born December 8, 1930), John Forrester Gedney (born February 2, 1925; SS# 253-26-4169) and Gus Abrams. They were the first set of tramps to be picked up that day. They were not finger printed or photographed, but they were incarcerated and a record of their incarceration was made. The fact that their arrest records contained no fingerprints, booking numbers, or photographs was not unusual. Two other men who were picked up that day had similar arrest reports with no photographs or prints.

It was about 12:30 p.m. when Gus Abrams and the others were arrested in the Texas and Pacific railroad yards at Elm and Houston. At 4:00 p.m., Gus Abrams was charged with vagrancy and possible robbery: "These men were taken off a train boxcar in the railroad yards right after President Kennedy was shot. These men are passing through town. They have no jobs or any means of making a living." Officer W.E. Chambers filled out the arrest form. Missing from the form was a home address, I.D. number, arrest number and thumb print. The arrest of John Gedney also generated paperwork. Except for a different name and date of birth, his arrest record was identical with that of Gus

Abrams. The last arrest record was on Harold Doyle, age 30, presumably the youngest of the three tramps. It was identical to the others, except in its description of the details of the arrest: "These men were seen getting on a boxcar in a train right after Kennedy was shot. These men are all passing through, they have no jobs..."

Assassination Of President Kennedy

Offense

(Report of activities of Deputy Sheriff Harold E. Elkins)

DETAILS OF OFFENSE, PROGRESS OF INVESTIGATION, ETC.

Date 11-26-63 10

On the day of this offence I was standing in front of the sheriff's office at 505 Main St., which is a block south and just around the corner from the building from which the shots were fired. Just a few seconds after the president's car had passed my location I heard a shot ring out, a couple of seconds elapsed and then two more shots ring out. I immediately ran to the area from which it sounded like the shots had been fired. This is an area between the railroads and the Texas School Book Depository which is east of the railroads. There were several other officers in this area and we secured it from the public. After searching this area for about ten minutes and not finding any evidence, I went to a tower that overlooks the railroad yards and also has a vantage point over the area around the school book building. I talked to an employee there and he gave me the descriptions of two automobiles that he had seen in the area just a few minutes earlier. When I went back outside I learned from the other officers that it had been established that the shots were fired from the school book building. I went to the building and found that several officers were inside and others were gathering outside. I then went back to the street and mixed with the crowds trying to get people who were witnesses to the tragedy. After I had brought several people to the office I went to TV Station WFAA and got two witnesses who had been taken there by some reporters. A while later a City of Dallas policeman came to our office with three prisoners who he had arrested on the railroad yards. I took these three to the city jail and turned them over to Capt. Frits. I then came back to the sheriff's office where I remained the rest of the day talking to witnesses and taking statements.

THE ELKINS DEPOSITION
COUNTY OF DALLAS SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT
SUPPLEMENTARY INVESTIGATION REPORT

Name of Complaint: Assassination of President Kennedy.

Offense: (Report of activities of Deputy Sheriff Harold E.Elkins)

On the day of this offense I was standing in front of the Sheriff's office at 505 Main Street which is a block south and just around the corner from the building from which the shots were fired. Just a few seconds after the President's car had passed my location I heard a shot ring out, a couple of seconds elapsed and then two more shots ring out. I immediately ran to the area from which it sounded like the shots had been fired. This is an area between the railroad and Texas School Book Depository which is east of the railroads. There were several other officers in this area and we secured it from the public. After searching this area for about ten minutes and not finding any evidence, I went to a tower that overlooks the railroad yards and I talked to an employee there and he gave me the descriptions of two automobiles that he had seen in the area just a few minutes earlier. When I went back outside I learned from the other officers that it had been established that the shots were fired from the school book building I went to the building and found that several officers were inside and others were gathering outside. I then went back to the street and mixed with the crowds trying to get people who were witnesses to the tragedy. After I had brought several people to the office I went to TV Station WFAA and I got two witnesses who had been taken there by reporters. A while later a City of Dallas policeman came to our office with three prisoners who he had arrested on the railroad yards. I took these three to the City Jail and turned them over to Captain Fritz. I then came back to the Sheriff's Office where I remained the rest of the day talking to witnesses and taking statements.. [Elkins Sup. Rep. 11.26.63; WC Decker Exhibit 5323]

Sheriff Elkins did a number of things before receiving the three prisoners. This clearly indicated that a second set of tramps was arrested on November 22, 1963, since the first set of tramps were arrested and turned over to Detective Fritz immediately after the assassination. What happened that day was this:

The Dallas Police continued to exhaustively search the freight on which Harold Doyle, John Gedney and Gus Abrams were found, as well as others in the yard. The search involved dozens of deputies, policemen, Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents, Army Intelligence Agents etc. They found no one on board. Bowers was told to sound the all clear, and the trains left the yard. Several minutes later, at about 2:00 p.m., this police radio message was transmitted:

At about 2 PM, two hours after the coup, railroad tower man Lee Bowers had stopped the freight because he had seen someone "jumping at the ninth boxcar from the front engine." The second set of tramps, HUNT, STURGIS and CHRIST, who had cleverly hidden themselves to escape detection during the first search of the freight yard, were found in a boxcar by five Dallas Police Officers, not by 50 assorted law enforcement officials.

HEMMING told this researcher:

They went undetected because they were good. They were in the gondola car. And nobody could get up on the side of the gondola car to look in. They were looking in boxcars, not gondola cars. A gondola car, when you walk by it, appears to be full because the gravel or grain is up above the top level. It's like it's full, but there's a space in it, a bit of space along the sides. He wouldn't see them in a boxcar. He looked down from his tower and saw them in the gondola car. When Bowers saw the people in the gondola car he stopped the train. He called up on a radio in his base station. Every engineer carries a lunch box Motorola HT-100 VHF Radio. The hobos stole the radios so portables were used. There was one in the cab of this yardmule. This is not a freight train that goes cross country. This is a yardmule diesel engine that does short moving around the year. Maybe someone bailed out of this gondola because he realized he had been spotted from the tower and jumped in a box car, not necessarily on the freight that was being searched, but had no way out. My old man worked for the railroad. He was a conductor. I was raised around railroads, I used to ride the freights.

D. V. HARKNESS' ROLE

Inspector J. Herbert Sawyer assigned D. V. Harkness and a few other officers, "to some freight cars that were leaving the yard." D. V. Harkness was asked by this researcher: "About how long after the assassination did you search that train?" D.V. Harkness responded, "Oh, it was quite awhile, quite a time after that, they just didn't have anything leaving the freight yards till after they gave the all clear." When asked where the freight had been positioned during the assassination, D. V. Harkness replied: "It was in the railroad yards, right adjacent to the railroad yards when it happened." [tape rec. interview with Harkness] D.V. Harkness told the HSCA: "Either Inspector J. Herbert Sawyer or Lumpkin gave him an assignment to search the railroad cars and he helped roust the three tramps. He did not know their names or what happened to them."

In 1968, while investigating the assassination of Martin Luther King, FBI S.A. Bardwell Odum questioned Dallas Police Officer William Lee Bass: "On May 15, 1968, William Bass, Identification Division, Dallas Police Department, identified the officer leading these three men as himself, and stated that on November 22, 1963, at which time photograph was taken, he, Roy Vaughn, and Marvin Wise had found three men in a boxcar about a mile from the Texas School Book Depository, down the railroad tracks. They brought them to the Dallas County Sheriff's Office and turned them over to an unknown deputy sheriff. He did not know the names of these individuals, and did not know if they were booked.

When William Bass was questioned by the Rockefeller Commission in 1975 he added, "The men were removed from a boxcar on the tracks in the vicinity of the Houston Street Viaduct. This area is approximately one half mile south of the Texas School Book Depository. They were all standing at one end of a boxcar." William Bass told the HSCA:

Somebody, maybe D.V. Harkness, said three men ran down the railroad yard and got into a grain car [the gondola car]. Me, Harkness, Wise, and Vaughn ran down the railroad tracks about one-quarter mile to the grain cars. Vaughn climbed up the ladder of one car and saw three men huddled in the corner of the freight car. Vaughn ordered the men out onto the ground and the men cursed at Vaughn. Vaughn then jacked a shell into the chamber of his shotgun, pointed it at the men, and ordered them out of the car. When the men got on the ground they were given a good pat-down for weapons - but none were found. The men were marched up the railroad tracks to Elm Street, across the front of the Texas School Book Depository, across the street to the County Jail, and turned over to a Deputy Sheriff (name unknown). He observed that the men had hobo type clothing on, but from the neck up were clean shaven and had good haircuts. The men did not say anything while being taken to the Sheriff's office. [HSCA 11.11.77 Rose]

Dallas Police Officer Roy Eugene Vaughn told the HSCA that on November 22, 1963, he was in a patrol car with G.W. Temple. After the assassination Roy Vaughn stayed in a patrol car next to the Texas School Book Depository, then took a suspect to the Sheriff's office:

Vaughn then returned to the Texas School Book Depository and he heard someone say that some men had jumped into a boxcar down by Union Station. He told a Sergeant in front of the Texas School Book Depository. Vaughn, Bill Bass, Marvin Wise, and another officer, ran down the tracks for three or four blocks to the grain cars near Union Terminal. Vaughn climbed up and went to the rear of the car. He looked into an open car [HEMMING: "He climbed up the boxcar to look in the top of the gondola."] and saw three men at the opposite end of the car, kind of lying down. Vaughn pulled his revolver and ordered the men out of the car. Bass and Wise took the men to the Sheriff's office. Vaughn, and the other officers, rode the caboose back to the area of the Texas School Book Depository and got off. [Vaughn HSCA Depo.]

Sheriff Roy Vaughn was contacted on November 22, 1993. Buck Revell's story was circulating at this time to the effect that Harold Doyle, Gus Abrams and John Gedney were the tramps who had been photographed being marched through Dealey Plaza. Roy Vaughn:

I can't tell you if these guys were Harold Doyle, Gus Abrams and John Gedney. I don't know. A railroad man came down when I arrived on the scene. It was after lunch. 1:00 p.m., 2:00 p.m., 2:30 p.m., sometimes afterward. We were dispatched there. I was assigned to patrol in the South Dallas area. The dispatcher told us to report to that location - code three. And that's when I went. I was not there until sometime after the shooting occurred. This particular incident I am talking about was not immediately after the shooting, no. I was in between the Texas School Book Depository and what used to be a saw factory. And I did detain a man, a security guard brought him down. He had found that individual on the upper floors of the building. I took that man to the Dallas County Sheriff's Office that was directly across the street. Me and several others officers were involved in getting the people out of the open type car. If there was any arrests prior to these, I don't know. I can't say...I don't remember if they smelled. That was 30 years ago today. I was always under the impression there was no paperwork for 29 years then I heard about the arrest records [of Harold Doyle, John Gedney and Gus Abrams].

Marvin Lynn Wise told the HSCA that the police radio dispatcher told him to go to the Texas School Book Depository. He parked near the railroad tracks. He was sitting in his car and

A man working in the railroad building waved at him. Wise and another officer (name forgotten) were told by the man that three men got into a boxcar about four or five hundred yards down the track. Wise, in company with Bill Bass, Vaughn and Middleton, went to the boxcars and took the men off the boxcar. Wise stated the men acted scared, and he could smell wine on the breath of one of them. Wise took the men over to the Sheriff's office and, while waiting to turn them over, asked the men for identification. Wise stated that he believes two of the men had documented IDs. He wrote the identification down on paper and put it in his hat. He turned the men over to the Sheriff's Office (Deputy's name unknown) and went back to his radio...Wise stated that he put the paper with the tramps' identification on it in his locker, where it remained for over a year. He cleaned his locker out, and just after that, people began asking him for information. But he had thrown it out.

Marvin Wise, 60, was contacted in June 1994. He wanted $1000 to tell his story. Marvin Wise:

The statement that I 'turned the men over to the Sheriff's Office (Deputy's name unknown) and went back to my radio' is not right. I did not go back to the car. I stayed with them. Number one, here's the deal: I was the junior man out of the five of us that was there. Everybody passed them on to me. Number two, how did they get from Sheriff Decker's up to Will Fritz? Will Fritz had them and had some kind of a record of having them up there. I never left them alone. That sure ain't right.

I can't believe that guy [from the HSCA] took it that way neither. I had trouble with those people though, let me tell you right away. I had trouble with them. The Rockefeller Commission is what I always remembered it is, but you named what it really was. I had trouble with the Rockefeller Commission. They tried to browbeat me, and pressure me, and do everything to make me talk to them on the telephone. I had a lot of people calling me up in my office wanting to get...I told him 'Now, you bring yourself to Dallas, Texas or you won't get no interview.' He said, 'I'm calling from the White House.' I said, 'I don't care if you're calling from the moon.' I had a hellish deal with them, and I really had a bad attitude from the way they treated me. And I told my Captain and told the Chief, 'They act like they're gonna ramrod through my ass.' I was in a hurry to get the interview over. They took me to the Chief's office cause they figured I wouldn't give them an interview. When I give it, it was there.

Marvin Wise went on to relate:

I went to work that morning at 7:30 a.m. I was a patrolman for the Dallas Police Department assigned to South Dallas, which was predominately black then, and is today. Up till about 11:00 a.m. I had numerous little calls of disturbances and thefts. About 11:30 a.m. I got a call of a robbery in progress over on South Lamar. And so I proceeded that way. I went on and got there, and while I was out of the car and talking to the victims they called me, and I said: 'I'm at the scene, I'm talking to the victims.' The dispatcher said 'Get back on the air here. I want you to report at Elm and Lemar.' I said 'Well, I'm interviewing the victims.' He said, 'Disregard that call, don't take no more information, report on down there.' Well, by then, it's already after 12:30 p.m. and the shooting had happened. This was around 12:35 p.m. or 12:40 p.m. Right after the shooting. See, I didn't know it at the time, I had no idea. I just figured the parade was downtown. We all knew the President was coming to the downtown, but I was lucky enough that I didn't have to be there and stop traffic. Me and one other squad was the only squad cars in South Dallas on that day. I still didn't know anything. He said 'You have an order Code 3-71 to Elm and Lemar.' So here I go. I thought 'What in the hell has happened down there?' I flip over to the b.s. channel and I heard 'He's expired.' It dawned on me then that they'd had a big shooting. I knew right then something drastic had happened. So I arrived down there and God, there's mass chaos. The police officers, deputy sheriffs and plainclothesmen were around that School Book Depository. Well, I parked nearly 50 feet from it. There was a vacant space right along the little street there, which was being, Elm Street goes on across Houston and you go right on, right in front of the School Book Depository, and it dead ends right in there. I parked right there on the right. I got out and got my shotgun, I don't what I got it for. By then everybody's talking. There was so many officers there they don't have real control of everybody. 'Surround the building!' A sergeant that I did not know told me 'Stay right here.' So I'm standing there, I been there probably 20 minutes after I got there. A guy from the railroad tower had told someone he wanted to speak with an officer. One of them sergeants out there said 'Go talk to that guy in the tower out there. He seen something.' We all run out there. I go out there and talk, to find what the hell he wants. I was with Roy Vaughn when we went up in the tower, to see Bowers. And he says, 'Down there in that boxcar' and he points way down. I'm talking three or four hundred yards, it's a long ways down there. Maybe seven. I can only guess. He said, 'I saw three men running down from there. Looked like they were running from down into the area of the underpass. Just running along the railroad tracks. They started running, I don't know why they run, and they run up and jumped up in the boxcar.' And he points down there and he gives a pretty good indication of which boxcar it is. But at that time, the boxcar was slowly moving. But evidentially they were shooting cars up in there from all them tracks. And it stopped by the time we got in there. We're talking about 90 minutes after the assassination. I mean the whole area is swarming with FBI agents.

This is when this occurred. So I run on down there. So we jump out, and so I go down and get the rest of the troops there, you know there's me, Roy Vaughn, Bill Bass, Middleton and Dave Harkness. So we all go down there to the boxcar, and when we got down there to the boxcar, everyone of us going down there had our thoughts about what it was. I wasn't the one that got them out. Maybe Vaughn. I talked to them in general conversation. Seems like one of those guys had a Midwest or and Eastern brogue. Not the old man. One of the others. After we got 'em and walked them away they didn't talk to nobody. No more conversation. I didn't try and interrogate them because I felt they were true winos. Their breath was unbelievable, smelling from wine. What we normally did with them, we had two options. If you couldn't find anything to put them in jail for, you could always city vag 'em. That's no visible means of support. Jails wouldn't hold all them people today.

We get them and bring them back up. All of 'em. Of course in the meantime they done shot our man across over in Oak Cliff. Anyway, I march them back up and across the street. It took about 15 to 20 minutes to walk them to Decker's. We got there at 2:30 p.m. As we march along the senior officers in the group, which is number one, Dave Harkness, leaves. Dave fell off and did not walk with us. He stopped over there, and then as we got on closer over there to Decker's there was one old sergeant standing on the street. I said 'What you want to do with these three guys here? They told us to go down there and get them out of the boxcar.' Two or three sergeants standing there and an inspector said 'Take them over to Sheriff Decker's office.' So we took them over. So the closer we get over there, the thinner the ranks get. It becomes me Roy Vaughn, Bill Bass. By the time we get inside there Bill Bass has split and left me with them and Roy Vaughn. Then Roy Vaughn jumps out. I'm junior man and I got five years. They leave me with them. So I present them to Decker. Decker takes them. They say 'You wait.' So I waited and I waited and I waited. Finally, they brought them back out there an hour or 45 minutes later. They send them back out there and say 'Take these three guys up to Will Fritz's office.' It's 3:30 p.m. Of course I knew where Will Fritz was. I walked those three guys out, put them in a city squad car. One set up front by me. Two in the back. We didn't have no cages back in those days. I drove them straight down, right in the basement. And took them right up, just me and those three guys. And these guys, none of them had no weapons on them, the only one that had anything was the old man. If you look at them pictures you'll see he's the only one. He's got a sack. In that sack was a little wrapped up washrag with a bar of soap in it, and what had been in it that I took out that none of the other officers knew, was a brand new bone handled knife that I knew he had stolen. Winos and bums, during that time, do not have it. He got it somewhere. He wouldn't have spent his last money to get him a brand new knife. So he took that, got it from some place, I have no idea where. But the thoughts running through my mind when they get through jacking around these guys is, 'I intend to put him in jail for theft.' And we could, back in those days, all you had to do was have something that was reasonable, a brand new knife, he's not working, no visible means of support. I was the one that got it out of there, nobody else handled that knife. So I take them to Will Fritz's office. And I walk in the office. I went through the whole story, where they come from. The boxcars. The whole bit. And they say 'Okay, sit down there and wait, Wise.' I knew everybody up there. I known them for years. They take the three in the back and I sit up front talking to one of the secretaries. I'm getting real impatient by now cause in those days you had to fill out an activity report at the end of the day on what you did. How many prisoners you arrested, how many tickets you wrote, how many calls you handled. Well, so far that day I had arrested nobody. So I'm thinking, look, I'm spending all this time, I've got to take credit for these guys in some kind of way. If anyone's gonna put them in jail, I sure as hell want to know, because my name ought to be on there. And Roy Vaughn's name on there and Middleton, who was an accident officer. They didn't care. Where they were at, they didn't have to worry about arrests, we did. So I'm waiting there and I thought, God, they're going to put these people in jail for something. I did not get to see Fritz. He was in his office. On any given day, you can't just walk in and see him. And there was no way that I was going to be able to take three winos in there and get to see him. One of his detectives who was milling around there, took these people after I told my lengthy story over once again, and told them all about them. It could have been Ernest Beck, it could have been anybody. There was so many of them in there. I don't even know if Will Fritz talked to them. I really don't. Beck was the number one man. When Fritz wanted anything done number one he'd call on Beck first. Beck was around there talking to everyone and chewing on a cigar. He may have took them. His name comes to mind, but I cannot say for sure that he was the one. I go in there, and I take them in there, and they kept them. They talked to them 45 minutes to an hour, maybe an hour and half. Then they come outside. This blew my mind. Here they come. 'Marvin, we don't need these. Take them back to Sheriff Decker.' I looked at them and said, 'Do what?' They said 'Take them back to Sheriff Decker.' I never paid any attention to who it was. It could have been any number of people. I was so hot at the time. I sat out there 45 minutes to an hour, and it's nearly 4:00 p.m. I'm supposed to be off here. So they give 'em back to me. I was pissed. I looked at them and I said, 'Take them back to Decker? Man, these are goddamned bums here. You know, let's put them in jail, or throw them out on the street.' I was told 'Take them back to Decker, Marvin, I can only tell you what Captain Fritz said.' We go downstairs, all the way to the basement, right down there exactly where the man got shot on camera. Got in the car and drove straight back down there, and boy, I knew when I got down there with them they were going to be hot. I knew the Sheriff and his number one man and all them settin' around that office I don't know what they were doing, what part they had with it, but I knew they would ask, 'Why are you bringing these bums back down here to me, these winos?' I take 'em back down there. They won't even see me. I knock on the door and a man comes out and I says, 'Captain sent these back down, he wants me to turn them back over.' I did not know anybody down there at that time. Decker was the only one I knew, when I saw him and knew his name. I had to go through the whole damn story and all this and I said 'Will Fritz has sent them back down here.' He said, 'Wait.' There was no waiting room there. You didn't sit, you stood right there. That's where we stood, right there in that little old room. I called in and was told 'We're holding the day shift over at least three hours. You just stay with what you're doing until you get off.' Finally they come out and say 'We'll talk to them, take them in here.' I said, 'I'm gone.' That's the end of it. That's how I got out of it. I said, 'That's the end of it, I'm out of it, I don't wait. I've turned them over to you.' And I went out in the car, cleared, and got on the air. I got off about 5:00 p.m. I have no idea who I turned them over to in Decker's office. I never seen them since then. The ones I had was bums and winos, because of the smell, the appearance of their old clothes. They weren't ragged. Like they'd been slept in. One of them had on a pretty good coat, but when you sleep in these things, a new dress coat, it will wrinkle. They had a social security card, no drivers license. It was social cards we had to go by. One of 'em had no I.D. I can't say which one. I was the only one originally that got these peoples names. I wrote them down. Before, back in those days, we had the hot sheets when we left the detail room. Folded those up. Instead of putting them on the dash, most of the Dallas officers put them in their hats. Then when you answered a call real fast and when you jumped out of the car and you was in a hurry what you wrote down your notes on was in your hat. I put their names on that hot sheet and kept it for years. Then I did away with it. I don't remember any of those names. I later asked a supervisor if I could carry the tramps as an arrest. As far as I was concerned they were technically under arrest.

Marvin Wise was asked if the tramps were in a gondola or boxcar:

It was a gondola filled with grain. Vaughn and Bass got up and got 'em. I stayed down, I knew what they were, I knew exactly what we were going to get out of them cars. You knew when you been there so long and I was hacked for having to go down there, so was Roy Vaughn. We were all pissed about it, and we are still pissed today.

Doyle and Gedney never mentioned being shuttled back and forth between the Sheriff's office and the Dallas Police Department as Marvin Wise described. Clearly, there were two sets of tramps.

In late September 1974, the FBI, acting on a request from FBI Director Clarence Kelley, located Will Fritz and showed him the tramp shots. He told the FBI that he did not ...recall having seen the three unidentified individuals in the above described photographs. He related that many people were taken to the Dallas County Sheriff's Office on November 22, 1963, by various law enforcement officers for questioning and undoubtedly many of them were released when eliminated from any implication, and such individuals were neither booked, photographed, nor finger printed. He added that he feels sure that if HUNT and STURGIS were interviewed on November 22, 1963, a record would have been made of their interviews and the Dallas County Sheriff's Office, Dallas Police Department, or Dallas FBI Office, would have a record of such interviews. He stated that it is possible the three unidentified men were interviewed, but without their names, there would be no way to definitely so state. When he viewed the photographs of HUNT and STURGIS, he stated he had no recollection of ever having seen or talked to either of them at any time on any matter. Captain Fritz concluded by saying that he is in full agreement with the findings of the Warren Commission."[FBI 62-109060-7136] Will Fritz, born June 15, 1896, died in March 1984.

The FBI then checked with James Kitching, Chief of the Dallas County Sheriff's Office, Identification Division:

He advised that he had personally looked up the jacket and photograph of each person booked on November 22, 1963, and did not find anyone who bears a resemblance to the persons appearing in the photograph with Dallas Police Officer Bill Bass. He advised that this indicates that these persons were not booked, but that they may have been interviewed. He advised that a sort of screening office was operated by the Dallas County Sheriff's Office on November 22, 1963, and numerous persons were interviewed. He advised that without the names of the persons, it would be almost impossible to develop the names of the persons in the photograph.

Judging from the above testimony of the arresting officers, it is clear that considerable time elapsed between the assassination and the arrest of the tramps. Doyle and Gedney, by their own admission said they were picked up immediately after the assassination. There had to be two sets of tramps. The FBI interviewed W. E. Chambers in February 1992 who advised that though his name appears as the arresting officer, he did not have contact with the three individuals until they had already been brought down to the Dallas Police Department Headquarters. Chambers speculated that the three had probably been rounded up in a dragnet and were dropped off at the Station without any paperwork...He was assigned by his supervisor, Captain D.R. Jones, to initially watch the three individuals, and then later to interview them regarding the assassination. Chambers indicated that he was later advised by Jones that a suspect had been arrested in the murder of TIPPIT, and that the person was the main suspect in the assassination of President Kennedy. Chambers indicated that he then released the three hobos, without booking them into the jail. During the course of the interview, Chambers was shown copies of the 'Arrest Report on Investigative Prisoner' and commented that though he did not recall filling them out, he recognized them as being written in his own handwriting. Chambers further noted that the three individuals were held in the City Jail until November 26, 1963. Chambers noted that the report reflected that they were released by Officer Marvin Buch. Chambers could provide no explanation as to how the three ended up in the jail facility. Chambers further added that because the reports bore no arrest numbers he believed there would be no record of them being booked into jail. As a result of the interview with Chambers, Dallas will attempt to locate and interview R.C. Wagner, Detective William Grinell, Captain Jones, and Marvin Buch. Dallas will attempt to determine whether or not any jail records exist regarding the incarceration of Gus Abrams, Harold Doyle and John Gedney, to include the mechanism by which the 'Arrest Report on Investigative Prisoner' were transferred to the City Archives section in 1989. Dallas will obtain photographs of the three individuals and display them to Officer Chambers in an attempt to determine whether or not they were the three hobos he interviewed on November 22, 1963. The same photographs will be displayed for the purpose of attempting to identify the uniformed officers accompanying the three. Dallas will provide copies of the aforementioned photographs to Portland and Tampa in order to have Harold Doyle and John Gedney identify the photograph as depicting them on November 22, 1963. Both have made reference to the photographs to the interviewing agents, but have not been presented with the photographs to positively confirm that they are the individuals depicted. [FBI 62-109060-8301]

Contacted by telephone, W. E. Chambers, one of the arresting officers, denied his role in arresting the tramps:

You mean all that stuff in the news about the tramps? They got that wrong. My name is on the document, but it is wrong, I never questioned them. I might have seen them, I don't remember. I signed the reports, but there was some mistake. I don't like discussing this with strangers.

Retired Dallas Police Officer Ernest Beck, credited with releasing all five hobos, stated: "I don't know, I don't know. I don't remember anything about that time...it was so long ago."

WHO RELEASED THE TRAMPS?

The second set of tramps were not booked, finger printed or photographed; the men were released. Why were they eliminated from implication? Why wasn't the second set of tramps locked up like the first set? Why were the first three tramps held for four days in the Dallas County Jail and the second three released almost immediately? The most likely explanation came from Detective W.E. Chambers who said that after OSWALD was arrested in the Tippett shooting he released the tramps because the Dallas Police Department thought they had their man. Since the first set of tramps were picked up immediately after the assassination. When questioned about who released the tramps, Will Fritz told Michael Canfield: "Ask the FBI about that," and Fritz mentioned the "Dallas FBI Office" in his interview in 1974 with the FBI. Did someone from the FBI order the Dallas Police to let the tramps go, or tell them that their ID checked out? In July 1993 former S.A. James Bookhout, the FBI liaison man with the Dallas Police Department, said he had no information that the FBI released the tramps. Was the FBI man Hosty?

S.A. HOSTY AND THE TRAMPS

James P. Hosty was contacted in August 1993, before this interviewer spoke with Marvin Wise, and asked if he would help me correct misinformation about him in this data base. He stated:

It all depends. I hope you are not going to say that I was responsible. Who you gonna say is responsible, Castro? Oh bullshit. It wasn't ANGLETON. If your going to go that route, I don't want to have anything to do with you. Okay? It's people like you who are screwing things up. You're just gonna have to face the facts OSWALD was a left-wing radical who killed Kennedy because Kennedy was trying to get Castro.

Q. Hosty, you were part of this whole thing, weren't you?

A. Bullshit.

Q. You we're probably the guy who ordered the tramps released.

A. Who released the tramps?

Q. You did.

A. Can you prove that?

Q. Can I prove that? Yes I can.

A. Okay, well very good then...

Q. So you don't want to go over it?

A. Go over it, okay, go over it. I was an ardent Kennedy fan, was then, and am now. I mostly investigated the right-wing, and I'm a liberal Democrat. Two thirds of my assignments were Ku Klux Klan, General Walker etc. I definitely resent the fact that anyone would imply that I would go after Kennedy, when I'm a Kennedy supporter. I was a well known, outspoken supporter of President Kennedy. Got that in there? Are you aware of the fact that most CIA agents liked Kennedy? There was a near mutiny down in Mexico City when Johnson told them to stop investigating the Kennedy assassination. See, you're not looking in the right direction. They were told to stop investigating Castro for fear they would start World War III. Then they had to send an Assistant Director down there. Bobby Kennedy told them to lay off, and they finally did. Are you aware of that? To say the CIA is involved - that's ridiculous. The CIA down there in Mexico City all thought Kennedy was great.

Q. What about the Bay of Pigs?

A. That was a long time ago, and the same agents weren't involved. They got rid of E. HOWARD HUNT. Everybody cites the thing about Kennedy saying he was going to break up the CIA into a thousand pieces. He said that in April. Then in May he proceeded to do the exact opposite, and expanded the CIA. He was pushing them in OPERATION MONGOOSE and Second Naval Guerilla. Second Naval Guerilla was what caused Kennedy to be killed. When Kennedy threatened Fidel Castro, OSWALD went to Mexico City, met with the Cubans and Russians, and said he would kill Kennedy for them. He went back. Kennedy went to down to Miami and told the Cuba exiles, 'Go at it again boys' and that appeared in the paper on Monday. On Friday, OSWALD shot Kennedy.

Q. I have a different version of events.

A. That's because you are left-wing oriented. You can't accept the fact that he was one of your boys, and he killed Kennedy because he was trying to get at Fidel Castro. It's very simple. You don't want to accept the facts.

Q. What about OSWALD'S association with DeMohrenschildt who was a Nazi spy during World War II?

A. Well, some people said he was. They suspected him, yeah. He was very much leftist oriented, he liked to shock people. How could you be a leftist, but you are, and DeMohrenschildt was. See, there you go. I mean everybody's...I'm left of center myself.

You know the FBI has identified the three tramps they found back in the railroad yards. The pictures they have of the guy they said was E. HOWARD HUNT was 5' 6" and HUNT is over 6' so that...What's this about me releasing the tramps. How could the FBI release them when they didn't have charge of the case?

Q. Fritz said 'Ask the FBI about the tramps' release.'

A. Fritz is dead, that's convenient. Hoover becomes me? Where do I come in?

Q. You knew he was an operation.

A. How did OSWALD get through two weeks of intense KGB interrogation in that mental hospital after he defected, if he was an operation? How did he get through that, if he was an operation?

Q. He provided them with information on the U-2.

A. Therefore he worked for the KGB.

Q. He was ANGLETON'S vestpocket operation. ANGLETON opposed the Summit Conference.

A. Can you prove that?

Q. For one thing early documents about OSWALD went to CI/SIG.

A. That was after the assassination.

Q. No, that was before. Was OSWALD upset because he knew, that you knew, he was an operation? He wondered why you were bothering his family, if he was working for the government.

A. That proves that he wasn't working for the government, doesn't it?

Q. True. He thought he was working for the government, but was managed by rogue agents. He wondered about this in the HUNT letter.

A. The HUNT letter was a forgery, but go ahead.

Q. The same day he wrote the HUNT letter he delivered the note to Mrs. Fenner.

A. This is the letter that Nanny said she read without taking it out of the envelope? Is it that one? She changed stories. She's a little bit kooky. She was heavily medicated at the time.

Q. Were the Paines part of the communist conspiracy?

A. Of course not. Although Michael Paine's father was a Trotskyist. He was the one who made that call after the assassination about who was responsible. Of course, he was talking about the Russians. Being a Trotskyite, he was very sensitive about the KGB, because they killed Trotsky. Let me get your full name here now. You know Posner's book is coming out tomorrow. That one is going to tell the truth. OSWALD did it alone.

Upon further consideration this researcher determined that S.A. Hosty did not release the tramps. If had done so then he would have been part of the conspiracy, which he was not. Will Fritz testified he went directly to the Texas School Book Depository, and then back to Dallas Police Headquarters 20 blocks away. OSWALD was there when he returned. S.A. Hosty was at the Police Station with Will Fritz, interviewing OSWALD. James Hosty told this researcher:

Jack Revell says it was 2:50 p.m. There's witnesses that could put me at the Police Station. I never saw the tramps. I wasn't with Fritz until 3:15 p.m. [The HSCA reported S.A. Hosty interviewed OSWALD from 3:15 to 4:45 p.m.] so I couldn't have told him to release the tramps. From 3:15 to 4:05 I was with Fritz. Fritz wouldn't have listened to us anyway. He didn't like the Bureau. Fritz was at the assassination scene and he came back from there at 2:15 p.m. or so. He probably released the tramps because there was no connection. The tramps were the usual suspects. They had no connection. Fritz could have released them by phone. Now are you convinced that I did not order the release of the tramps? Why would a lowly field agent...A Police Captain who was in charge of the case would not have listened to me. Are you going to put in your book that I was the one who authorized the release of the three tramps? What evidence is there? You don't have...You just have the quote Dallas FBI Office unquote, releasing them. But you don't have anything concrete.

James Hosty was asked why he was so concerned if they were just tramps? He said he did not want to be mis-portrayed as he had in Oliver Stone's film. FBI S.A. Wallace Heitman stated:

I was the first agent down at the scene of the crime. I remember telling Sheriff Bill Decker that, what I better do, is go into his office, which I did. I said 'Bill, you send me anybody in here who might have been a witness or has any information.' Some of these people became Warren Commission witnesses. If the FBI ordered the tramps release, it had to be Gordon Shanklin. This could go all the way up to Washington, William Sullivan. Bill Sullivan is dead and so is Gordon Shanklin. The line was pretty hot as you can imagine. Bill Sullivan called me several times. No minor agent would have that power.

DeBRUEYS

John Gedney told the FBI that a federal agent verified his identification papers. WARREN C. DeBRUEYS flew to Dallas shortly after the assassination. Since the second set of tramps were shuttled back and forth until approximately 5:00 p.m. DeBRUEYS could have released the tramps or verified their ID.

BONDED OUT?

HEMMING 1994:

People are brought in. They're arrested, the usual suspects are rounded up. They're handled, and put out of the way, very quickly. Any high profile case. Whoever you snatch up, whoever you wanna target for the press, this is all done selectively. All the other usual suspects are locked away. Ain't nobody seeing them but a fucking trustee. At that time, you could disappear someone's criminal record in a heartbeat, if you didn't mind paying for it. It was a primitive system. You got some people in a holding cell. Nobody knows. And really gives a fuck. And they're not going to call attention to them because it might fuck up the bosses' plan to go along with the press on his favorite theme.

Getting arrested wasn't the worst case scenario for the tramps. Once OSWALD had been popped, everybody forgot about everybody else, okay? He was the logical suspect. Nobody was worried about anybody else. The hobos had a steak dinner that night and went back to wherever their base was, and that was it. No big deal. They'd been through worse than that in foreign countries. Some people were really worried the guys picked up as hobos were really guys, players. Somebody made a blunder, thought they were players, and attempted to intervene. A Miami bail bondsman was contacted. That scared the shit out of a couple of Dallas cops. This is not a street hustle, this is the big time hustle. This is where someone is inside a building and is doing shit. The bondsman hustle; usually the lowest rank is a Sergeant. He's a jailer. He's allowed to deal with bondsmen who bond people out. And they're not there for the Magistrate's hearing. And 21 days goes by for the arraignment. And things are taken care of. How the fuck are you going to have payoffs if you got a paper trail? It's all handled by the bondsmen coming in and bonding him out. The bondsman makes the payoff. No big deal, no big conspiracy. No HOWARD HUNT, no STURGIS. Now there's something STURGIS knows, he knows the bond routine. He knows how to get people out of jail. Did the bondsman know what's going on? Knowing who the people were who he was springing? Never in a million years. Oh, he would suspect down the road that he was part of something, but he would never know what. He'd keep his mouth shut, though, because it's bigger than him. It's a money deal, no government or spook bullshit. No 'I work for the government,

National Security' bullshit.' You wanna make a few dollars, you wanna do a job. The bondsman got all the paperwork from Fritz and from Decker. Because of the President's assassination, he dies. He had a heart attack. He was the first one. If I heard my people were arrested, I would have bailed them out. Fritz was probably just trying to blame it on the Feds.

During the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial G. Gordon Liddy stated:

We were both furnished for the FIELDING OPERATION alias documentation and pocket litter, and certainly we would have used it, which would have identified us as individuals who have never existed. The plan was if any of us were apprehended, we would be apprehended under bogus identification. Those who were not apprehended would see to bail, whereupon the individual would vanish. There would be no way of tracing him because the identity established was completely fictitious.

THE TRAMP HOAX

In 1991 the Dallas City Council voted to open the JFK files of the Dallas Police Department to the public. As a result, the arrest records of the first set of tramps were released. Freelance journalists Mary and Ray La Fontaine wrote an article that stated Harold Doyle, Gus Abrams and John Gedney's arrest records were the arrest records of the infamous tramps photographed in Dealey Plaza. This meant the tramps were not HUNT, STURGIS and CHRIST, but were just run of the mill tramps. The La Fontaines located Harold Doyle, who claimed he was the CHRIST tramp. Doyle does not have a pointy nose, as does the CHRIST tramp.

DOYLE AND THE CHRIST TRAMP

The Dallas FBI reported:

During the week of February 9, 1992, researchers discovered documents which previously the City of Dallas Police Department maintained did not exist. These documents are 'Arrest Report on Investigative Prisoner' regarding three vagrants who were taken into custody by the City of Dallas PD shortly after the assassination of President Kennedy...On February 12, 1992, FBI Dallas obtained copies of the newly discovered reports. The reports indicate that the three individuals were taken off a boxcar 'right after President Kennedy was shot.' The reports were dated November 23, 1963, with the time of 4:00 p.m. The arresting officer was identified as W.E. Chambers."

HAROLD DOYLE

The Dallas FBI started its "investigation" by having agents question the owner of a pool hall at Klamath Falls, Oregon, frequented by Harold Doyle. This individual, Robert E. Downing, told the FBI that he "recalled that years ago, Harold Doyle had told him that he got picked up in sweep of numerous individuals by officers of the Dallas Police Department after President Kennedy had been assassinated." According to Robert E. Downing, Harold Doyle said that he had been in a railroad yard in Dallas, Texas, "waiting to catch a freight train and heard a number of emergency sirens, but did not even know that President Kennedy had been shot until the Dallas Police took him in for questioning." [FBI 62-109060-8290, 8295]

On February 29, 1992, the FBI interviewed Harold Doyle at the Amtrack Station in Portland, Oregon. Harold Doyle advised that on November 22, 1963, he was riding the railroad cars with two other individuals...All three arrived in Dallas on November 22, 1963, sometime during the morning hours and had spent the day previously in Houston, Texas. They went to the Irving Street Mission, where they showered, cleaned up and received a noon meal. They then left the mission en route to the railroad yard, heading towards Fort Worth, Texas. After leaving the mission someone told them President Kennedy had been shot. They asked one of the employees at the railroad yard if President Kennedy had been shot, and the railroad man confirmed this. They then got on a gondola, also known as a coal car, and were heading toward Fort Worth when the train stopped. After the train stopped they were confronted by numerous police officers who informed them not to move or they would be shot. [FBI 62-19060-8299]

Only four Dallas Police Officers arrested the second set of tramps. Lee Bowers said there were "possibly 50 policemen with shotguns" at the scene of the tramps' arrest. The arrest record of Harold Doyle indicated that he was arrested immediately after the assassination on a box car that had not left the railroad yard: "These men were taken off a train boxcar in the railroad yards right after President Kennedy was shot." If the FBI was seeking the truth instead of trying to cover it up it would have concluded then and there that these men could not have been the tramps who were photographed in Dealey Plaza.

JOHN GEDNEY

John Gedney was easier for the FBI to locate than Harold Doyle, who had no permanent home address. John Gedney said they arrived by rail, spent the night of November 21, 1963, at the Salvation Army, had breakfast and lunch there on November 22, 1963, thereafter heard about the shooting of President Kennedy, then walked to the railroad yard where they got on a flatbed car that had large sheets of steel on it and shortly thereafter law enforcement officials swarmed the car, arrested them and took them back to the Dallas jail. John Gedney said he was not sure who actually arrested him, that he was probably fingerprinted and had a short interview at the jail by a Federal Agent who contacted Miami and verified his identity...John Gedney said they were in the jail approximately four to six days, released, and the three of them headed out by rail to Fort Worth, Texas, and then west to Arizona, where they picked lettuce."

John Gedney was described as weighing 190 pounds and being 6'1" in height. [FBI 62-109060-8306]

INTERVIEW WITH JOHN GEDNEY

In July 1992 a researcher located John Gedney, who had become a Code Enforcement Officer in Melbourne, Florida. John Gedney claimed that he was the STURGIS tramp and that Harold Doyle was the CHRIST tramp, but he refused to be taped or photographed. When asked why, he said that the tape might be altered and that someone might retouch any photographs of him. When he was shown photographs of STURGIS and the STURGIS tramp, he remarked: "Look at the head, he is awfully dark, he parts his hair, see how I part it, like right-handed people, unless you reverse the photos. You can screw anybody. My face is more Nordic, his face is more Indian or Greek or Latin, something like that." John Gedney claimed he was arrested one hour after the assassination. His arrest records indicated: "These men were taken off a train boxcar in the railroad yards right after President Kennedy was shot." John Gedney was asked how much time elapsed between the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and his arrest. At first he said, "Why are you asking me this?" and claimed he did not know. Later in the interview, he commented: "I think that guy was right, it probably was an hour after Kennedy was assassinated." John Gedney: "They arrested everyone in town, they even went into some guys homes." The investigator reported that John Gedney looked a little like the STURGIS tramp, but had to be ruled out since John Gedney was at least 6'2". The researcher asked John Gedney what his motivation in all of this was. He responded: "Not to let it go any further. If you don't stop these people out there it will go on and on. I am not worthy of a place in history any more than anyone else. The average man deserves a place in history, not the laococca's and the Schwartz's. Was it the patriotic duty of John Gedney to lay these false rumors to rest?"

GEDNEY and the STURGIS tramp.

Note the complete difference in skull shape. This is the only available photo of Gedney. It came from his drivers licence. Any other photos of Gedney would be greatly appreciated.

Why did John Gedney mention doctoring? Why did he use the word "Nordic? What "guy" had he heard about who said the tramps were picked up an hour after the assassination? And who had he heard about him from? When the FBI questioned Gedney, the agents told him that they needed his help in getting this matter cleared up and explained that certain subversive elements were using this matter for their own ends. Gedney, a law enforcement agent, was happy to cooperate. The La Fontaines sold their story to A Current Affair, which calls itself "Tabloid Television." A Current Affair aired a piece on Harold Doyle on February 25, 1992, which purported to prove he was the CHRIST tramp. The program began:

Conspiracy experts have claimed the hobos, all of them who appear to be unusually well dressed, might have been Watergate burglars HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS...even Oliver Stone's movie, JFK, suggests the mystery hobos had something to do with the President's death...Only yesterday Dallas Police told A Current Affair that the hobos were detained for a few hours and finding them now is highly unlikely.

The La Fontaines traced Harold Doyle to Amarillo, Texas, where Kay Lyon remembered him talking about his arrest on November 22, 1963: "Well, he told me he was in jail for two or three days and during that time he had been finger printed and questioned. [No finger prints were located.] He showed me a photograph of him when he was arrested after they got off the train." From Amarillo, the La Fontaines tracked Harold Doyle to a pool hall in Klamath Falls, Oregon. Harold Doyle's story:

The only thing I want to say about it, we had nothing to do with it. I am telling you the God's and honest truth. We was booked and I went in front of the judge. [Michael Canfield checked every courthouse in Dallas and found no record that Harold Doyle, Gus Abrams, John Gedney, Douglas or John Francis Elrod were ever arraigned.] I got six days for vagrancy and turned loose. That morning we went over to the railroad yards. We was going to Fort Worth and I seen a guy in the railroad. Before we went to the railroad yards, sirens and everything was going on and all and we asked somebody what happened and they said the President's been shot. Then all at once someone said, 'Don't make a move'. We looked up the end we were sitting in, and the far end down the side, we were surrounded by policemen with guns drawn and they said don't make a move. Because they got us out of the boxcar, took us through the park...all the people was a holloran, was a going on and the sirens were going and people were taking pictures of us and people were holloran, 'Are they the ones that done it?'...They took us into the jail. They took us up and interrogated us. Kept us till they caught OSWALD.

Harold Doyle did not display a photograph of himself circa 1963 to compare with photographs of the tramps. D.V. Harkness appeared on Dallas television and said that Harold Doyle was not the tramp he helped arrest. He also said the tramps he detained were released immediately. He had told the Rockefeller Commission: "Some bums were picked up from boxcars south of triple overpass 'couple of hundred yards' from overpass." A Current Affair ended when former Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney Vincent T. Bugliosi stated: "Finding the hobos can finally lay to rest irresponsible theories of conspiracy about them." Vincent T. Bugliosi was working on a book supporting the conclusions of the Warren Commission. On March 4, 1992, this article appeared in The New York Daily News:

JFK TRAMPS, FBI SAYS, WERE JUST VAGRANTS

Washington, D.C. Nearly 29 years after the assassination of John Kennedy, the FBI has finally tracked down the mysterious three tramps arrested that day in Dallas and concluded they were just tramps. The FBI's Dallas Office said it traced the tramps after their names were printed in Texas newspapers...One tramp, Gus Abrams, is dead, the FBI said, but agents found and interviewed John Forrester Gedney in Melbourne, Florida and Harold Doyle in Klamath Falls, Oregon. They said they were at a mission the day of the assassination, 'had gotten some food and had gotten cleaned up and were wandering back toward the railroad yard' when they were arrested, said Oliver Revell, Dallas FBI Office head. Some theorists postulated that the tramps were future Watergate burglars HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS."

There were no photographs of John Gedney or Gus Abrams included in the article.

Gus Abrams and the HUNT tramp.

On March 24, 1992, the FBI reviewed its progress in the tramp matter: During the interview of Marvin Wise, one of the officers actually involved in the arrest of the three hobos, a great deal of insight was provided regarding the records keeping procedure of the City of Dallas PD in 1963...Discovered along with the arrest reports for the three hobos were three other arrest reports. All six of the documents purportedly originated from the same area within the Dallas Police Department. Dallas intends to interview the Commander of the City of Dallas Police Department Records Division in order to determine the source of all six arrest reports. It is anticipated that the information obtained will provide an explanation for the lack of any 'official' record of the arrest of the three hobos during the past 28 years. Vaughn was also interviewed. [FBI 62-109060-8320]

OLIVER REVELL

Who circulated this news story before the FBI's investigation was complete? If the FBI conducted a real investigation it would have concluded that there were two sets of tramps, since FBI records indicated that the tramps were picked up on a freight train that had already left Dealey Plaza at least one hour after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and John Gedney, Gus Abrams and Harold Doyle were picked up immediately after the assassination, according to Dallas Police Department records. The FBI official behind this false news story was Oliver "Buck" Revell.

Marvin Wise was contacted by Oliver Revell's agents:

The FBI come got me two years ago. We went through this whole thing. They told me two of them were still alive. The old man was dead. They never showed me photographs of what they look like today. They showed me the tramp shots. I told them basically what I've told you. They said, 'Look, we've already interviewed two of them.' The FBI questioned me about the clothes they were wearing. Roy later tried to say the clothes was real nice. I said, 'Roy,' (Me and Roy Vaughn were raised together in South Dallas. It used to be white.) I said 'Roy, you got to remember what that old man was wearing. It might look pretty good in that black and white picture but I guarantee you that these people were not neat people trying to...' There was a lot of people detained for several days and some of them detained for five or six hours and they were just not even booked and we let 'em go. I was not down there at the time of shooting. I was on that call in South Dallas. And there was no way in the world I could be down there at the time. I didn't get down there until 12:45. I was not down there or even close to that location and couldn't have got there when the shooting took place. If they arrested these men they did that prior to me going there.

If you doubt the tramps were HUNT, STURGIS and CHRIST, ask yourself why Oliver Revell floated this false news story with the imprimatur of the FBI attached to it before the FBI's investigation was complete? Why go to all this trouble to discredit the tramp theory? As stated, the effect of these news stories was to convince many Americans that the tramps had been identified. People asked me "Do you still believe the tramps are HUNT and STURGIS?" since they were are under the false impression that the FBI had finally identified them. This was an abuse of authority by Revell. Former FBI S.A. Robert Gemberling remarked: "Since the JFK movie came out they've identified who the three tramps were." Robert Gemberling was informed that there were two sets of tramps. "If there were two sets, neither of them were in FBI custody. Why wasn't this pursued back in 1975 or was it? I mean, if this was an issue, why wasn't it pursued when the facts came to the [Rockefeller Commission]..." Robert Gemberling told this researcher that he would evaluate the contents of the pertinent tramp documents if they were mailed to him. He was sent the documents with a copy of Coup D'Etat. When Robert Gemberling was re-contacted, stated: "Yeah, I got it. I tell you I'm not going to give you a reaction because I know all you want is some more quotes for your next book, I guess. As far as I'm concerned, you sure did a lot of speculating. If you wanna quote me on that, you can do it." Robert Gemberling was asked if he had examined the tramp documents. "Yes." Gemberling was asked if he believed there were two sets of tramps. He stated, "I gave you my comment just a moment ago. I gave you my quote." When another researcher contacted Robert Gemberling several months later and asked him if the Dealey Plaza tramps were John Gedney, Gus Abrams and Harold Doyle he stated: "I believe that's right. One of them is dead. They were identified as the three tramps." To date, I can locate no further FBI serials on John Gedney, Harold Dolye and Gus Abrams beyond March 1992. CLICK HERE TO SEE FIRST SET OF TRAMPS. They are in the background surrounded by numerous lawmen. Keep in mind the Rockefeller Commission determined there were six to eight "derelicts" picked up that day.

CLICK HERE TO SEE SECOND SET OF TRAMPS

Note woman reporter who is seen holding her nose in one of the tramp shots. Note less policemen. Rockefeller Commission notes confirmed that Harold Doyle, John Gedney and Gus Abrams were not the infamous Dealey Plaza tramps:

Several hours after the shooting, Dallas Police Department Officers checked all the railroad freight cars situated on tracks anywhere in the vicinity of Dealey Plaza. About six or eight persons, referred to as derelicts were found in or near the freight cars. These persons were taken either to the nearby Dallas County Sheriff's Office or to the Dallas Police Department for questioning. All were released without any arrest record being made, or any fingerprinting or photographing being done by the authorities. Among the six or eight 'derelicts' found in the vicinity of the freight cars were three men who, according to the arresting officers, were found in a boxcar about one half mile south of the scene of the assassination. They were taken to the Sheriff's office by the Dallas police officers, who walked northward along the railroad tracks to a point west of the Texas School Book Depository, then north to Houston Street and back south to the Sheriff's Office. This somewhat circuitous route was actually the most convenient one available, according to the Dallas policemen. As the police and the 'derelicts' passed the Texas School Book Depository and headed for the sheriff's office, they were photographed by several press photographers on the scene.

A map of Dealey Plaza prepared by the Rockefeller Commission confirmed that the tramps were picked up outside the railroad yard.

John Francis Elrod was arrested while walking along the railroad tracks. John Francis Elrod had been arrested in 1961 for barbiturates, DWI in 1962, simple assault in 1963. In 1964 John Francis Elrod was suspected of planning to kill his estranged wife. No record of his arrest in Dallas appeared on his rap sheet. [FBI 44-1639-6059, 5999] Daniel Wayne Douglas was picked up near the scene of the TIPPIT shooting. John Francis Elrod and Daniel Wayne Douglas were released on November 26, 1963. On August 7, 1994, the La Fontaines had a cover story in the Washington Post previewing their new book to be published by Pelican Press. The book was based on the testimony of John Francis Elrod. In August 1964 John Francis Elrod told the FBI that while he was in jail on November 22, 1963, his cellmate pointed out another prisoner with a battered face. According to John Francis Elrod's unidentified cellmate, the man had been arrested while driving a Thunderbird loaded with weapons, and that he had been involved with JACK RUBY in gun dealing. This story traced back to the arrests of Lawrence Reginald Miller and Donnell Darius Whitter. Donnell Darius Whitter knew RUBY, and since RUBY was also involved in gun dealing, the two men may have worked together. The LaFontaines combined this information with a new claim by John Francis Elrod that Oswald was his unidentified cellmate and that OSWALD told him that he knew RUBY. They wrote: "Is John Francis Elrod's account really credible? Given John Francis Elrod's history of alcoholism his account must be treated with caution...The more basic question is: Would the Dallas Police really have put the accused assassin in a cell where he could talk with another prisoner. The answer it turns out is yes.

A few hours after his arrest, OSWALD was allowed to make a phone call. On the log of prisoner telephone calls, OSWALD signed his name and wrote down his cell number which was F-2. John Francis Elrod's name does not appear on the phone log; he says he was not allowed to make a phone call. The only other prisoner listed in the log in an F Cell on November 22, 1963, between 3:00 p.m. and midnight was a Daniel Douglas whose scrawl indicates he was held in F-1 or F-4. John Francis Elrod knew who the other man in Oswald's cellblock was. This is a powerful point supporting his story. In an interview in July 1993 John Francis Elrod accurately described the other man in OSWALD'S cell as a 'kid from Tennessee who had stolen a car in Memphis.' Among Dallas Police Department arrest reports for November 22, 1963, was one for a Daniel Wayne Douglas, who was described as 19 years old, from Memphis and a confessed car thief. Douglas' current whereabouts are not known.

Neither John Francis Elrod nor Daniel Wayne Douglas were anywhere near OSWALD. The Warren Commission: "OSWALD was delivered to the jailer who placed him in a maximum security cell on the fifth floor. His cell was the center one in a block of three cells that were separated from the remainder of the jail area. The cells on either side of OSWALD were empty and a guard was nearby whenever OSWALD was present." [WR p198] John Francis Elrod was "wandering on the railroad tracks," Daniel Wayne Douglas had been in the vicinity of the Tippit shooting. This was the only thing that linked them to the assassination. It was unlikely that they would have been placed in a maximum security cell. The La Fontaine's article contained this paragraph:

The Legend of the Three Tramps - John John Francis Elrod might be called the fourth tramp of Dallas. His story is the legitimate offspring of a bastard parent i.e. the 'tale of the three tramps.' This trio of Dallas hobos inspired some of the most imaginative scenarios in the often bizarre Kennedy assassination literature. They were photographed in the company of a Dallas policeman shortly after the assassination. But the Dallas Police Department insisted - falsely it turns out - that it had no records of their arrest. Over the years conspiracy theorists claimed the men were actually assassination conspirators in the employ of either the CIA or organized crime. In 1991 the three tramps achieved pop icon status appearing ominously throughout Oliver Stone's conspiratorial epic, JFK. It turns out that there were arrest records for November 22, 1963. The Dallas City Council, in response to Stone's hit movie, voted to make public all city documents concerning the assassination; among these files the long lost arrest records were found. When the names on records were traced, the three men were found to have been underemployed, hard-drinking transients who like to hop rides on railroad trains - in a word, tramps. The debunking of the three tramps legend first appeared in our front page story for the Houston Post of February 9, 1992.

On August 9, 1966, Lee Edward Bowers, 41, was killed in a one-car accident in Midlothian, Texas, when his car went out of control he plowed into a bridge abutment. His physician told researcher Penn Jones that he "never saw a case like this, that this man was in some sort of strange shock. I made mention to Jones that Bowers was sweating a lot. He was wringing wet when he came in and I wondered because of this whether he had a coronary." Lee Bowers was dead in three hours and cremated the next day. [Dr. Roy Bohl - Penn Jones] The HSCA questioned Lee Bowers parents who described their son as:

...reticent by nature and protective insofar as his family was concerned...He mentioned, the less others thought they knew, the less problems they would have. Also added they were aware of the mounting of deaths of 'Kennedy witnesses.' Mrs. Bowers then informed us that 'Lee would have told his brother, if he told anyone,' but added that he had since succumbed to cancer. The brother died first at the age of 40 and later Lee at 41."

Gerald Posner claimed Lee Bowers lied because he was busy at the time of the assassination, and in order to perform his duties at the control panel, his back would have been turned toward Dealey Plaza.

HEMMING told this researcher:

Bowers suspected something. Bowers got offed by a guy who worked with him all his life. He was in his 30's. Remember, Bowers ain't reading shit about nothing. There was just absolutely fucking nothing coming out except some jabber about OSWALD in the press. Nobody had a suspicion in 1964. Who gives a rat's fuck by 1966? But maybe Bowers thinks, wait a minute. Maybe he says the wrong thing to somebody, or somebody is searching and they're going to eliminate somebody that might be talked to. Who's searching at the time?

When he was asked to elaborate on the death of Lee Bowers HEMMING stated:

Who the fuck said this? You have bad fucking hearing, A.J. How would I know how Bowers died? Jesus Christ! All I meant was that perpetrators are usually well-known, if it's going to look like an accident.

TRACES OF OSWALD IN THE SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY

THE MANNLICHER-CARCANO

When the authorities searched the Texas School Book Depository they found evidence that OSWALD had unwittingly planted. OSWALD'S rifle was found on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository. The Dallas Police Department discovered the rifle hidden between several book cartons. Click HERE to see video of this discovery. OSWALD had weapon, complete with serial numbers, fingerprints and fiber evidence on it, earlier sent to OSWALD'S Post Office Box, at the scene of the crime, thinking that someone was going to pick it up while he was in the lunchroom. OSWALD could have purchased a rifle anonymously in any Texas gun shop or hardware store. Why leave one that traced back to him behind?

THE THREE CARTRIDGES

Evidence planted by the conspirators included the three shell casings. HEMMING obtained from OSWALD at the Sportsdrome Rifle Range. The witnesses there reported that OSWALD and his friend collected their spent shells. HEMMING 1995: "Could be." As stated, three spent cartridges were left behind in the Texas School Book Depository. If OSWALD left a rifle behind, he would also have had to leave spent shell casings that bore markings indicating they had been loaded, and then ejected, from that rifle behind. This would further strengthen the case against OSWALD. This was the cover story: Three shots fired from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository. Three spent shell casings. The three spent cartridges, however, did not mean that the Mannlicher-Carcano had been fired three times from the Texas School Book Depository window that day - it only meant that someone left three shell casings behind that had once been fired in OSWALD'S gun. The Warren Commission determined that the three spent cartridges had been fired from the Mannlicher-Carcano. The HSCA agreed. [HSCA V7 p368] HEMMING told this researcher:

No other ammo was found in OSWALD'S safe house or anywhere else. He didn't even have a full clip for the weapon. He had four rounds of live ammo maximum. Bad news, somebody fucked up.

When the Dallas Police Department gave OSWALD a Paraffin test to determine if he had fired a rifle,

...the cast of the right cheek showed no reaction." [WR p560] To show that the Paraffin test would have proven negative even if OSWALD had fired the Mannlicher-Carcano, the FBI had one of its Agents fire the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle three times in rapid succession. The right cheek of the Agent tested negatively, however, there is a question regarding the objectivity of the FBI when it conducted this test since it was apparent that an FBI agent tampered with OSWALD'S paraffin casts before sending them to Oak Ridge National Laboratory for neutron-activation analysis. The Oak Ridge analysis resulted in findings of barium and antimony on the cast of OSWALD'S cheek. Barium and antimony were generally present in the rifle cartridge cases. This was consistent with OSWALD having fired a rifle that day. The problem: there was more barium and antimony on the outside of the cast than on the inside, when the inside of the cast was the only part in contact with OSWALD'S skin. The Warren Report: "Since the outside surface had not been in contact with OSWALD'S cheek, the barium and antimony found there came from a source other than OSWALD." [WR p562]

Frank Ellsworth was asked about this. He stated: "That doesn't make sense at all. If that happened, it would seem that someone badly contaminated the sample. There should not have been any of that on the outside of the cast at all. It was improperly administered." OSWALD did fire a gun that day when he killed Officer TIPPET in self-defense. The Dallas Police Department found OSWALD'S palm print under the barrel of the Mannlicher-Carcano and fingerprints around the trigger mechanism, yet the rest of the gun had been wiped clean. This made it seem as if OSWALD had made an effort to conceal his identity. Why wipe the fingerprints off a gun which could be traced to you through your POB? OSWALD had assembled, disassembled and fired this gun before November 22, 1963, and his prints were on it. The Dallas Police Department and the FBI found OSWALD'S fingerprints and palm prints on the paper and tape used to cover the rifle. This bag was found near the assassin's window. The wrapper made by OSWALD had been left behind by the team to further incriminate him. The presence of the wrapper supported the testimony of Buell Wesley Frazier about the curtain rods and it was clear that OSWALD had brought something about the size of a disassembled Mannlicher-Carcano into the Texas School Book Depository that morning. When the FBI examined this wrapping paper, it determined that it carried blanket fibers. Three hours after the assassination, a detective saw a blanket roll, tied with a string, lying on the floor of Ruth Paine's garage. The fibers on the wrapping paper came from this blanket. The FBI linked the blanket to OSWALD by matching the limb and pubic hairs found on it, with OSWALD'S. [WR p590] No fibers found on the gun could be associated with the green blanket. This made sense since OSWALD had in fact stored the weapon in Ruth Paine's garage. The FBI examined a tuft of several cotton fibers that were found between the butt plate of the Mannlicher-Carcano and the wooden stock. These fibers matched, to a significant degree, the fibers in the shirt OSWALD was wearing on November 22, 1963: "In a crevice between the butt plate of the rifle, and the wooden stock, was a tuft of several cotton fibers of dark blue, grey black, and orange yellow shades. On November 23, 1963, these fibers were...compared with the fibers found in the shirt that OSWALD was wearing when arrested in the Texas Theater. This shirt was also composed of dark blue, grey black and orange yellow cotton fibers. S.A. Stombaugh testified that the colors, shades and twist of the fibers found in the tuft on the rifle matched those in OSWALD'S shirt...the fibers in the tuft on the rifle most probably came from the shirt worn by OSWALD when he was arrested." [WR p124] This tiny tuft of cotton linked OSWALD with the weapon on November 22.

Here are several possible explanations for the presence of the tiny tuft of cotton, the first being the mostly likely and the fifth being the least likely:

(1) OSWALD had worn the shirt when he disassembled the rifle on the night of November 21, 1963. HEMMING told this researcher:

OSWALD had at one time handled this weapon. In fact, he brought it to the Texas School Book Depository to sell to somebody. He needed the money. He left this weapon in a particular spot where it wouldn't be found. And it was found. I'm not saying it was found in the spot where he left it, but it was found. You can't say what day he dry fired this weapon, or practiced fired this weapon, or just held it up to his shoulder or whatever. He had custody and control of the rifle and clothing and that connected one with the other.

OSWALD'S WARDROBE

Marina Oswald testified that her husband only owned two jackets. [WR p175] Tom Bargas stated: "He wore the same old jacket." Ruth Paine said that she did OSWALD'S laundry, and he had plenty of shirts. Marina Oswald told this researcher: "I have no idea how many shirts. Not very many. I had to wash and iron one shirt like in an hour." Most of OSWALD'S shirts were in storage in Ruth Paine's garage. These included three civilian shirts and five khaki colored long sleeved shirts. [NARA 124-10022-10085] The FBI: "The clothing found in LEE HARVEY OSWALD's room...consisted of one belt, one necktie, two sweaters and five shirts...The shirts all appeared to have been freshly laundered by hand. Most exhibited signs of much wear and one shirt was practically worn out. No fibers on the gun could be associated with any of the above mentioned clothing." [FBI 62-109060-1150, 917]

(2) OSWALD could have worn the shirt on another occasion when he fired the rifle, and worn that shirt again on November 22, 1963.

(3) HEMMING told this researcher: "The FBI is lying." A FBI document stated: "Cotton fibers from gun are same colors as cotton fibers composing shirt; however, due to limited number of colors in shirt it is not possible to state shirt is positively the source of these fibers." [FBI Memo Jevons to Conrad 11.29.63] S.A. Stombaugh could only match two of the blue shades present in the tuft with three of blue shades present in the shirt. [FBI 62-109060-NR 9.8.64]

(4) The fibers came from an identical shirt. The FBI fiber expert testified: "These fibers could have come from this shirt. There is no way, however, to eliminate the possibility of the fibers having come from an identical shirt."

(5) OSWALD was told to wear a particular shirt that day. Before November 22, 1963, OSWALD'S Mannlicher-Carcano had been fired by OSWALD, or someone wearing OSWALD'S shirt, or a shirt identical to OSWALD'S. OSWALD wore that particular shirt that day. It was interesting to note that while OSWALD was in police custody OSWALD claimed he had returned to his room and changed his shirt after the assassination. He claimed he had not been wearing the shirt he had on when he worked at the Texas School Book Depository that morning. The Warren Commission: "Although OSWALD returned to his rooming house after the assassination and when he was questioned by the police, claimed to have changed his shirt, the evidence indicates that he continued wearing the same shirt that he was wearing all morning and which he was still wearing when arrested...The testimony of those who saw him after the assassination was inconclusive about the color of OSWALD'S shirt, but Mary Bledsoe, OSWALD'S former landlady, saw him on a bus approximately ten minutes after the assassination and identified the shirt as being the one worn by OSWALD primarily because of a distinctive hole in the right elbow of the shirt. Moreover, the bus transfer which he obtained as he left the bus was still in his pocket when he was arrested."

OSWALD had gotten off the bus and taken a cab to within a few blocks of his room. He had never used the transfer. Why did OSWALD'S lie about having changed his shirt? HEMMING told this researcher: "He didn't know the shirt would be connected with the rifle. You got an eyeball witnesses who saw him kill TIPPIT."

THE SNIPER'S NEST

The sniper's nest used to frame OSWALD consisted of a 55-pound book box on which OSWALD allegedly sat. The Warren Commission stated this box was positioned nearby and OSWALD had not moved it. OSWALD'S right palm print was found on the carton, pointing west. The Warren Commission: "The position of the palm print on the carton was parallel with the long axis of the box, and at right angles with the short axis. The bottom of the palm rested on the box...Someone sitting on the box, facing the window, would have his palm in this position, if he placed his hand alongside his right hip." What about OSWALD'S left hand? Why didn't OSWALD do the same thing with it? This evidence was fragmentary and the palm print was also consistent with OSWALD having moved the box; his palm print was at a right angle to the edge of the box. The Warren Report wrongly concluded: "OSWALD'S palm print may have been placed there while he was sitting on the carton, rather than carrying it." But even if the Commission was right, OSWALD could have sat on the box during the course of his normal activities at the Texas School Book Depository.

There was one 8-pound Rolling Reader box stacked on another Rolling Reader box. This one had prints on it which were consistent with OSWALD'S having handled it: Left palm print facing southwest, and right index finger also pointing southwest. There was one 55-pound book box placed under the window sill, and one 8-pound Rolling Reader box stacked on top of the 55-pound book box under the window sill. OSWALD'S prints were on neither of these boxes: "The carton on the window sill, and the large carton below the window, contained no prints that could be identified as OSWALD'S." [WR p140] OSWALD could have pushed the bottom box into its position with his feet, but how did the higher box get on to the window sill without his having handled it? If he wore gloves, why were his prints on the other two boxes? According to Frank Ellsworth:

They did get a good many prints off those boxes. Normally, you don't expect to find fingerprints on cardboard boxes. If they would have put fingerprint ink all over this guy he wouldn't have done a better job leaving prints.

HEMMING said he got OSWALD to bring the rifle to the TSBD by offering him double its worth. Did HEMMING have OSWALD hide the Mannlicher-Carcano specifically between the Rolling Reader boxes so OSWALD would have left his fingerprints on these boxes while moving them to hide the rifle? Did he tell OSWALD he was going to pick the rifle up around lunchtime? HUNT and CHRIST would then use these boxes to construct "OSWALD'S sniper's nest." Or did they have OSWALD'S prints on them because he had handled them as part of his job? The Warren Commission: "In evaluating the significance of these fingerprint and palm identifications, the Commission considered the possibility that OSWALD handled these cartons as part of his normal duties." An effort was made to determine the freshness of one print. The Warren Commission: "The print...could have been placed on the carton at any time within a three day period." [WR p141] The other prints were lifted in a fashion that made it impossible to determine their freshness.

THE SHIELD OF BOXES

The Warren Commission found that several boxes had been stacked up behind the sniper's nest to "shield OSWALD from the view of anyone on the sixth floor who did not go behind them."

Frank Ellsworth disagreed: "He made himself a nest, but there wasn't any cartons to hide himself by." Why weren't OSWALD'S palm prints found on these boxes? The Warren Commission commented on the difficulty of constructing only one part of the nest: "The arrangement of boxes at the window from which the shots were fired was studied to determine whether OSWALD required any assistance in moving the cartons to the window...both of the 55 lb. cartons could have been carried by one man...although the Rolling Reader cartons had to be moved 40 feet from their normal locations at the southeast corner window, it would appear one man could have done this in a matter of seconds."

THE DILLARD AND POWELL PHOTOGRAPHS

The HSCA autoradiographically enhanced the Dillard and Powell photographs. Thomas Dillard, a professional photographer, was riding in the press car of the Presidential motorcade. When he took his pictures of the Texas School Book Depository, he was approaching Elm and Houston. Thomas Dillard stated his picture was taken a few seconds after the last audible shot. In his photograph, only two boxes are visible in the southwest-corner window on the sixth floor, one each, to the left, and to the right, of the window frame. James Powell, an Army intelligence agent, was standing considerably to the right of Thomas Dillard, near the southeast corner of Elm and Houston. James Powell has estimated he took his picture one to two minutes after the last shot was fired. [HSCA V4 p401] The James Powell photograph showed at least four boxes in the southwest-corner window on the sixth floor. OSWALD'S sniper's nest was constructed after, not before, the assassination.

The HSCA: "There are two possible explanations for this difference.

(1) The James Powell photograph may reflect only an apparent change in the boxes; the different angle from which James Powell took his photograph may have caused a different set of boxes within the room to be framed in the window.

(2) The boxes were moved during the time that elapsed between the Thomas Dillard and James Powell photographs. Since the precise positions of Thomas Dillard and James Powell at the time of the photographs were unknown, it was not possible to calculate precisely the region within the sixth floor that would have been visible to each photographer. In the Thomas Dillard photograph, the two boxes at the left and right of the window frame appear to be in the full light of the Sun, with no shadows cast on them by the frame of the partially opened window. In the James Powell photograph (left) it also appears that the boxes are in full sunlight, with no shadow cast on them by the window frame. A simple trigonometric calculation shows that the two boxes at the left and the right lie approximately six inches from the window's plane. (If the additional boxes in the James Powell photograph were so far back into the room that the difference in viewing angle made them apparent in the James Powell photograph and not in Thomas Dillard's, then they would not appear to be in full sunlight. Since at the time of the assassination it was late fall, the midday sun was south of directly overhead and therefore would have been entering those windows of the Texas School Book Depository facing directly south.) For this reason the panel concluded that the additional boxes visible in the James Powell photograph were moved during the interval between the Thomas Dillard and James Powell photographs." [HSCA V6 p115]

THE SNIPER'S NEST AND THE DEBRIS

There was corroborative evidence that the sniper's nest was built after the assassination: Harold Norman, James Jarman (died 1989, age 57, stroke) and Bonnie Ray Williams were on the fifth floor - directly under the sixth floor window. Bonnie Ray Williams said he did not pay attention to the first shot because "I didn't know what was happening. The second shot, it sounded like it was right in the building, the second and third shot. And it sounded - it even shook the building, the side we were on. Cement fell on my head...gravel, dirt or something, from the old building, because it shook the windows and everything." James Jarman testified that Bonnie Ray Williams had "a few debris" on his head, "It was sort of white stuff, or something." [WR p70] Researcher Mary Farrell felt this was not extraordinary: "They were laying new flooring up there. There were holes in the floor from the fifth to the sixth floor." Harold Norman was contacted in July 1993: "I was sitting on the fifth floor. The floors were raggity. They was remodelin' the floors up there that day. The floors were in bad shape. Stuff hadn't fallen down in the past, just that time. I never said it was the rifle. I figured somebody was movin' around. It wasn't shaking. We just happened to look up, I think it was after the third shot that we noticed it. I saw it fall. It had to be some type of moving around up there. It was more like moving then stomping. I don't know how many peoples was up there at that time, you know." Was the debris caused by someone hurriedly moving boxes while building the sniper's nest?

If OSWALD had been on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository firing his Mannlicher-Carcano rifle, any shock waves it generated when the gun discharged would have been absorbed by his shoulder. The 6.5-caliber ammunition OSWALD allegedly fired would not have caused the floors to shake, even the rifle was tripod-mounted. Frank Ellsworth: "I don't think that Mannlicher rifle would cause any floors to shake. That is ridiculous. I don't even think a 50-caliber machine gun firing a single shot would have shaken the building. Have you ever been around one of those little pop guns when they go off? They're not much of a gun. I don't personally think that even a 12-gauge shotgun would cause that sort of vibration. I can't imagine any weapon having such a recoil that it would have vibrated the floor, even if it was tripod mounted...with one exception. If you were to take a 50-caliber machine gun, bolt it to the floor and fire short bursts, four or five rounds, then yes, but you would need a very strong contact between the mount and the floor. I think you could have fired a Mannlicher-Carcano all day up there and it wouldn't cause that sort of vibration."

After Harold Norman and Bonnie Ray Williams told the FBI they heard the "shell being ejected from the gun and hitting the floor," the Warren Commission went to the Texas School Book Depository and had someone on the sixth floor drop shells directly above them. They heard each shell drop. The Warren Commission failed to have someone fire the rifle above them to see if firing 6.5-caliber ammunition would cause plaster to fall from the ceiling onto their heads. HEMMING told this researcher: "The sniper's nest was probably built after the assassination. Either the niggers were lying, or it was a result of building the nest."

THE COKE AND THE SNIPER'S NEST

Had David Belin known the sniper's nest had been built after the assassination, he would have been forced to direct the FBI agent to reenact the scenario by having the agent playing OSWALD wipe his prints from the rifle, move at least one 55-pound book carton under the window then put two 8-pound Rolling Reader boxes on top of each other. This is assuming that the Rolling Reader boxes were already moved from their original position - 40 feet away from the window - before the assassination, and placed close by. Then the agent would have to hide his rifle between two rows of boxes in the northwest corner, near the staircase, on the sixth floor, run down six flights of stairs and purchase a Coca-Cola (optional). The additional 30 seconds, to one minute, it took to construct the sniper's nest after the assassination, meant that OSWALD could not have rendezvoused with Marion L. Baker within the one minute the Warren Commission allotted, even if he purchased the Coca-Cola after encountering Patrolman Marion L. Baker. The assassin had not used the boxes for an arm rest. He stood in the window and fired the scoped weapon. The purpose of the sniper's nest was to link that area with OSWALD. The Warren Commission attached "some probative value to the fingerprint and palm print identifications in reaching the conclusion that OSWALD was at the window from which the shots were fired, although the prints do not establish the exact time he was there." Despite its finding that the nest was built after the assassination, "The HSCA believed that the way the boxes were stacked at the window...must be considered as evidence indicating that he handled the boxes in the process of preparing the so-called sniper's nest..." [HSCA R p57]

THE UNIDENTIFIED PRINTS

The FBI attempted to identify the prints on the book cartons that comprised the sniper's nest. Aside from OSWALD'S, none of the prints could be matched with those of any Texas School Book Depository employees, although some prints were unidentifiable because of poor quality. The Warren Commission explained: "The presence on these cartons of unidentified prints, whether or not identifiable, does not appear to be unusual, since these cartons contained commercial products which had been handled by many people...these cartons could contain the prints of many people having nothing to do with the assassination...the fingerprints other than OSWALD'S on the boxes thus provide no indication of the presence of an accomplice at the window." J. Edgar Hoover commented on an unidentified palm print: "There is no question in my mind but that we failed in carrying thru some salient angles of OSWALD investigation. It ought to be a lesson to all but I doubt if some even realize it now." [Memo to Tolson FBI 105-82555-5084] HEMMING told this researcher: "These guys were pros. They didn't leave prints."

OSWALD'S PROPAGANDA COLLECTION

When Dallas Police Officers searched 1026 North Beckley on November 23, 1963, they found letters to OSWALD from the Communist Party, the Socialist Workers Party, the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, the School for Marxist Studies, the Soviet Embassy and the Gus Hall Defense Committee. All of OSWALD'S correspondence with the left was found there. Three of the letters were dated 1962. The latest was dated September 19, 1963. Why did OSWALD keep these documents in his room instead of in Irving? When Dallas Police searched Paine's house they found "Fair Play for Cuba Committee papers in an envelope" and "Blue notebook with Cuba papers and other papers of a communistic nature." OSWALD'S blue suitcase contained a "Fair Play for Cuba Committee pamphlet" and "1 copy of October 20, 1963, Worker." His address book was also found at the Paine home, as was his Russian/English dictionary. FBI S.A.'s Hosty, DeBRUEYS and Kenneth C. Howe took possession of this evidence from the Dallas Police.

OSWALD was politically inactive around this time. What use could he have had for this stuff? Was he told to bring them to his room? The Dallas Police also found Fair Play for Cuba Committee leaflets and application forms, articles concerning his defection, Russian identification documents, Marine Corps identification, OSWALD'S passport, letters from Jesuit Eugene Murret, a book on Communism - dozens of documents identifying OSWALD and linking him with both the domestic left and the Soviet Union.

The Dallas Police Department kept no records of the numbers that OSWALD tried to call. On November 22, 1963 OSWALD made a call at 8:00 p.m. that lasted 30 minutes. [WCD 1444] He made other calls at 12:30 a.m. 1:40 p.m. and 4:22 p.m. the next day. The Dallas Police records were censored. [WCD 1472] OSWALD called Little Rock, Arkansas, telephone number TU-3-0926.

Of course OSWALD lied about having killed TIPPET. "I didn't shoot anybody". I work in that building, naturally if I work in that building I was there at the time. They are taking me in because of the fact that I lived in the Soviet Union. I'm just a patsy. Click HERE to see OSWALD in custody.

OSWALD'S POST ASSASSINATION INTERROGATION

OSWALD lied about having owned a rifle, having brought a rifle into the Texas School Book Depository, having eaten with his fellow employees, and having gone to Mexico

City. Why didn't he tell the authorities the truth if he was working for what he believed to be the CIA? How do we know he didn't? There were no tape recordings of OSWALD'S interrogation. The men involved, except for James Hosty, refused comment. Will Fritz was the only one that took notes. No one knows for certain what OSWALD did, or didn't, say. Scott Malone claimed that documents dealing with OSWALD'S interrogation remain classified.

Assuming the reports of OSWALD'S statements while in custody are true and do not contain any omissions, the reason he did not immediately expose his connection to CIA staffers was because OSWALD was himself an ideologue. Only a dedicated ideologue would devote years of his life to a "defection" and long term penetration that bore little monetary reward. OSWALD refused to implicate what he believed to be the CIA, even if it meant imprisonment or death. He might have appreciated this plot had he not been the patsy. OSWALD told reporters: "They've taken me in because of the fact that I lived in the Soviet Union. I'm just a patsy. No sir, I am not a communist..." He continued to pretend to be a leftist until the day he was assassinated by JACK RUBY. HEMMING told this researcher:

OSWALD thought he was an actual intelligence officer of some sort. The guy had that aura about him in 1959 in Monterey Park. He thought he was somebody. You can't be somebody when you're that fucking dumb. You can tell by his demeanor that he believed he had done absolutely nothing wrong. Now if killing TIPPIT ain't wrong, he could have known some bad shit on TIPPIT. Killing the President ain't wrong? That's stretching it too far. That's his Commander & Chief. Whether he killed TIPPIT or not, this guy was walking around the fucking police station knowing he had done nothing wrong. He wasn't really sure what the fuck was going on. He figured that the Agency would come to his aid.

JAMES WOLLWEBER

One very hot lead on the team's escape that was never adequately investigated because the FBI was afraid of what it might find concerned a report by Atlanta Klansman James Wollweber.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

1Date November 26, 1963

JAMES WOLLWEBER, 3031 Rebecca Drive, S.W., telephonically advised that he had received a telephone call at 5:00 p.m. on November 22, 1963, from a man who identified himself as (FNU) JOHNSON.

JOHNSON told WOLLWEBER that he knew that WOLLWEBER was a person who could keep quiet and he wanted WOLLWEBER to fly him to Dallas, Texas, on the following day. There they were to pick up an unknown individual and fly him to Nassau.

JOHNSON wanted WOLLWEBER to meet him at 12:00 noon on November 23, 1963, at the Opalocka Airport near Miami, Florida, but WOLLWEBER was not certain that he would keep the appointment.

WOLLWEBER advised that he is a pilot and flies his own plane.

When the FBI checked its files on James Wollweber it found he had contacted its Miami and Atlanta offices in the past concerning Cuban matters "and he is believed to be unreliable." Regardless, the Atlanta FBI office was ordered to "run it out." The FBI stated: "In view of the extreme importance of this matter, possibility of WOLLWEBER contacting unknown individual with last name Johnson should be appropriately resolved. Keep Bureau and Dallas advised per all SAC Radiogram. Furnish results of inquiry in form suitable for dissemination. Must receive preferential treatment."

The next morning, James Wollweber called the FBI and said that due to weather conditions in the Atlanta area, and the unavailability of a specific airplane, he would not make the trip. James Wollweber said he would contact the FBI should he change his plans. Had the FBI been interested in unearthing a conspiracy, an agent pretending to be James Wollweber would have made the trip. What struck this document analyst about the Wollweber investigation as reflected in the FBI files was it's brevity. In total, less than one page was devoted to it. In June 1993 STURGIS associate William Johnson, stated:

Wollweber was a smuggler. He was a scam artist that was takin' money from all over the country. He'd buy an airplane and sell it to two people and never paid for it. He was a tall guy, about 50, out of Atlanta. He was tongue-tied. He had a wife that was like a show girl. And I was on a boat with him - we did a seizure for Customs of a narcotics shipment out of Jamaica. Wollweber had a record at the time. He was working-off a beef. I think the beef was out of Atlanta - it could have been Dallas. That would be interesting. There was a Wollweber. Now that was my name, but I didn't want to go to Dallas. I'll tell ya who could have called him. It's your buddy, STURGIS, he was using my name. Wollweber didn't come into my life till about 1970. He didn't know my first name. If my name popped in, they would have sure started lookin'. The mention of the Bahamas, that is consequential. That's funny how that guy came to me - I got to think this one out. [FBI 89-43-1166, 62-109060-640, 790]

William Johnson was mailed copies of the James Wollweber documents. He commented:

Wollweber worked for Wallace Shanley. I got a picture of him. FRANK used my name. I confronted him with it. He didn't give me the right answers. I said to him that I was going through Freedom of Information papers and 'What do you think about this?' He says, 'There's a lot of Johnsons.' I said 'Not the one that flies to the Bahamas and not the one who knows Wollweber. Somebody used my name, and I think it's you FRANK.'"

HEMMING:

The Johnson was Bill Johnson. Look at Johnson's attitude when he was asked about it. He ain't too happy with STURGIS. It puts FRANK in Florida trying to get somebody out of Dallas. Johnson ain't gonna pay for this shit. Johnson was a pilot and had access to aircraft. Why would he want this guy to fly him? Czukas knew Wollweber.

William Johnson probably called James Wollweber on behalf of the crew. He wanted to evacuate a team member who had been left behind. HEMMING: "This is an indicator of the level of competence of a team. Team members aren't pilots? That tells me they're fucking amateurs." When the CIA stole STURGIS' briefcase Bahamian Air Navigational Charts were found.

James William Wollweber appeared Atlanta Division November 27, 1959 and advised he had been approached by Gaylord Saxton, address unknown, Miami, Florida to fly airplanes to Cuba and drop incendiaries on Cuban sugar crop. And Saxton were in Atlanta Penitentiary together. Wollweber stated advised by Saxton to come to Miami November 29, 1959 to make arrangements for flight to Cuba. Wollweber stated willing to go to help FBI but would need expenses paid. Wollweber was advised Bureau could not encourage him to go, and if he went he would be on his own. He was further advised Bureau would be glad to receive any information he might gather. Miami attempt. Miami attempt to identify

On December 3, 1959 James Wollweber telephonically contacted Miami Office and advised he arrived in Miami and was staying at the Biscayne Terrace Hotel. He went to see Gaylord Saxton, who told him plans to burn sugar cane in Cuba were still being considered, but Masferrer had no money and was waiting for Pedro Sanchez to obtain money for this operation. Saxton was occupied by some legal matter and did not indicate to Wollweber that this plan of burning sugar in Cuba would become effective in the immediate future. Wollweber did not meet Masferrer or Suarez and was unable to furnish any further indentifying info concerning Suarez. Attempts to contact Wollweber again have been negative. By letter post marked December 8, 1959, New Orleans, Louisiana Wollweber advised that after talking to Saxton, he learned it would be at least another week "before he could see the parties again." Wollweber said he decided to go to New Orleans and sell aerial items for the Sugar Bowl game, and would return to Miami as soon as he was finished. When Wollweber returns to Miami and contacts this office, the Bureau will be advised.

On November 28, 1959 Miami Office advised Saxton released from Alcatraz July 1954 having been arrested by Border Patrol for smuggling European aliens in US from Cuba and convicted for this offense. Miami had record of one Pedro Suarez Hernandez, wealthy Cuban contractor reportedly connected with Cuban gambling, residing in Miami. Miami did not know if Suarez Hernandez was identical with Pedro Suarez. Miami Office also advised that U.S. Customs, Miami, was in contact with Gaylord Saxton who had recently stated he had received proposition from Subject, former Cuban Senator and anti-Castro leader in Miami, to drop phosphorous in Cuba, but that no definite plans have been made as yet. We disseminated above data orally to State, CIA, Army, Navy, Air Force and Joint Staff November 28, 1959. On November 29, 1959 Atlanta advised Wollweber had been in contact with Saxton evening of November 28, 1959 and that Saxton wanted him to come to Miami. Wollweber plans to go to Miami about December 2, 1959 and will contact Miami Office on arrival.

OBSERVATIONS:

Since Customs, Miami, has been in contact with Saxton, it appears Customs is already investigating this matter as case involving possible illegal attempt to take implements of war out of U.S. It is noted both plane and arms would be considered such and matter within primary jurisdiction of Customs. If Customs has matter under investigation, we should maintain liaison with Customs and Wollweber available to Customs if he is agreeable. Saxton's approach to Wollweber may have been step in developing Customs' case. [FBI 100-344127-32

JAMES EDGAR WETHINGTON

John Robert Klinner, and nine others, were picked up by the Cuban coast guard while trying to infiltrate Cuba in February 1963. The group told the Cubans they were shipwrecked and drifted into Cuban waters, but the ruse was uncovered when a shipmate of John Robert Klinner was recalled as a previous CIA suspect. The FBI:

The following investigation was conducted by Special Agent WILLIAM MAYO DREW, JR., on January 30, 1964:

On December 27, 1963, JOHN C. SULLIVAN, JR., Attorney-At-Law, 2505 Ponce de Leon Boulevard, Coral Gables, Florida, telephonically advised Special Agent WARREN R. WELSH as follows:

SULLIVAN represents MARGARITE PATRICIA DIGNUM in a divorce proceeding against JOHN ROBERT KLINNER. SULLIVAN volunteered information to the effect that his client informed him on the day of the assassination of President JOHN F. KENNEDY that prior to the time of the assassination, KLINNER and his client were in Burdines' Department Store. After the news came that the President had been assassinated, his client stated that she and KLINNER immediately left the store and went home. At that time KLINNER made a telephone call to a person he addressed as "Major". The question to the "major" was to the effect "Was it one of our boys or was it one of our group that did it?" The files of the Miami Office of the FBI indicate that JOHN ROBERT KLINNER correct name is JAMES EDGAR WETHINGTON. He is white, and is approximately 40 years of age. He has FBI Number 2426610. He has been arrested on numerous occasions on various charges.

On February 16, 1956, he was sentenced in the United States District Court, Savannah, Georgia, following conviction for violating the White Slave Traffic Act, to serve five years in the United States Penitentiary, at Atlanta, Georgia. He was conditionally released on January 29, 1960, in custody of the United States Probation Officer, Savannah, Georgia. A Conditional Release Violator's Warrant was issued for his arrest by the United States Board of Parole, Washington, D. C., on March 15, 1960, charging him with absconding supervision, loss of contact, and failure to report. KLINNER was apprehended by FBI Agents at Miami, Florida, on October 1, 1960, and turned over to the U. S. Marshal.

KLINNER was one of a group of repatriates who arrived at Homestead Air Force Base, Homestead, Florida, on April 9, 1960, aboard a chartered Pan American Airways Flight from Havana, Cuba. The April 10, 1963 issue of the "Miami Herald" contained an article entitled "Nine Yanks Return After 43 Days in CASTRO Jail." This article described the repatriates as nine shipwrecked Americans who spent 67 days in Cuban prisons including 43 days in solitary confinement. On this occasion, information was received that JOHN KLINNER was born on November 13, 1923, at Detroit, Michigan. His U. S. address was shown as 200 S. E. 12th Street, Miami, Florida.

On January 7, 1964, the following investigation was conducted by SA FRANK P. GRIFFEE:

MARGUERITE PATRICIA KLINNER, nee DIGNUM, 5925 S. W. 42nd Terrace, Miami, Florida, furnished the following information: On July 20, 1963, she married a man known to her as JOHN ROBERT KLINNER. She later learned that true name was not "KLINNER" but was "WETHINGTON." Immediately following their marriage, they moved to Nassau, Bahamas, where they lived until MARGUERITE KLINNER returned alone to Miami approximately September 1, 1963. JOHN KLINNER remained in Nassau. About three weeks before Thanksgiving, 1963, JOHN KLINNER appeared in Miami, and was from time to time in contact with her. To the best of her recollection, about a week before Thanksgiving, 1963, JOHN KLINNER told her that he had just returned from Cuba.

On November 22, 1963, she and JOHN KLINNER were in Burdine's Department Store, Miami, when it was announced that the President had just been assassinated. KLINNER insisted that they return to her home at once. Immediately upon returning to her home, JOHN KLINNER made a telephone call to someone whom he addressed as "Major". She stated that to the best of her recollection KLINNER immediately asked the following question to the person to whom he was speaking: "Was it us?" or "Was he one of our boys or was he one of our group that did it?" She stated she could not further interpret the meaning of the telephone call. She said, however, that KLINNER had engaged in further conversation indicating that he and the person to whom he was speaking were speculating whether any persons would be arrested in Miami as a result of the assassination. Mrs. KLINNER stated that during the time she lived with JOHN MANNER he often made reference to the fact that he was associated with the "Cuban Freedom Fighters", and made frequent telephone calls to persons whom he addressed as the "Major" and "Wong". When speaking to Wong KLINNER often used words or phrases which she assumed were in the Chinese or Japanese language.

Mrs. KLINNER said she did not know the substance of the telephone conversations. She said she got the impression at times that they were made solely for the purpose of creating an atmosphere of importance for her benefit on KLINNER's part. Mrs. KLINNER said she did not know what JOHN KLINNER did for a living; that he told her he received money from an aunt in Decatur, Georgia. While KLINNER lived with her he associated with M. B. and C. B. TAMAN'S, Blue Ribbon Shipping Company, Nassau, Bahamas, who owned the "British MV Inak." The "Inak" docks at Miami every second Monday. When in Miami, KLINNER may stop at the Ocean Ranch Hotel, 200 S. E. 12th Street. Mrs. KLINNER said she is suing KLINNER for divorce and that she was then attempting to locate him for the purpose of serving him with process. Records of the Dade County Sheriff's Office indicated that KLINNER was arrested on January 11, 1964, on charges of selling property under lien - and for a traffic violation. He was released the same date on bond.

Specific inquiry concerning JOHN ROBERT KLINNER was made of individuals familiar with the Second National Front of Escambray, Alpha 66. Each advised that they had to personal knowledge of JOHN ROBERT KLINNER.

JOHN ROBERT KLINNER, Room 123 Santa Anita Motel, 16421 Collins Avenue, Miami Beach, Florida advised as follows:

He is employed as a swimming pool attendant at the Castaways Motel, which is located immediately adjacent to his place of residence at the Santa Anita Motel. KLINNER is separated from and is in the process of securing a divorce from MARGARITE PATRICIA DIGNUM. KLINNER advised that to the best of his knowledge on the afternoon of the date upon which President KENNEDY was assassinated, he heard of the assassination while in an automobile with his wife on the way to the Miami International Airport. He stated that he has no recollection whatsoever of having been in Durdines' Department Store, Miami, Florida, on that date. KLINNER stated he was on his way to the airport to catch a plane for Nassau. He said that after arriving at the airport, he and his wife did make some telephone calls concerning the assassination, but the only people to whom they talked were his wife's relatives.

KLINNER specifically denied making a telephone call to anyone who he referred to as "Major". He stated he knew no one named "WONG". KLINNER stated he was acquainted with a man who referred to himself as "Major", that this individual is connected with the Alpha 66 Movement in Miami, and that he KLINNER had been approached by members of the Alpha 66 Movement in an effort to induce KLINNER to join them in their endeavors. KLINNER stated that he had refused to have anything to do with this group. KLINNER said he felt that his wife was merely trying to embarrass him due to their pending divorce action.

The FBI: "Mrs. John Robert Klinner said that during the time she lived with John Robert Klinner he often made references to the fact that he was associated with the Cuban Freedom Fighters." The Cuban Freedom Fighters was another name for the International Anti-Communist Brigade. [FBI 62-109060-3038 p655] HEMMING told this researcher:

When STURGIS found out this International Anti-Communist Brigade shit was sticking in people's throats, they created a Freedom Fighters thing with Alexander Rorke. Edith Kermit Roosevelt gave them $75,000.

On July 21, 1962 The Long Island Press carried an article by Edith Kermit Roosevelt titled: "Freedom Fighters At Odds With CIA." The article stated:

Rorke's group, the U.S. Freedom Fighters, has information that out of 400 Cubans sent by the CIA to Cuba in the last six months about 320 men or 80% have been captured and killed by Castro's police...U.S. Freedom Fighters organize phantom cells in Cuba, cells of from one to five persons, who carry out sabotage. Only last week Cuban guerillas were infiltrated in 40-foot boats by U.S. Freedom Fighters to aid rebels in the Matanzas Province. They were sent there to exploit last fall's phantom cell operation within the province which resulted from leaflet raids by Rorke, Bill Johnson, Bill Wall, and FRANK FIORINI, all of Miami.

Dignum said that Klinner frequently made calls someone he called 'the Major' and 'Wong.' "For the information of the Bureau and Dallas, Dignum also advised that John Robert Klinner, on numerous occasions, told her he had been associated with the CIA. [FBI 62-109060-2272, FBI 62-109060-3083] The CIA advised the FBI it had "no interest whatsoever in John Robert Klinner." [FBI Miami 89-43-3123] Marguerite Dignum attorney, John C. Sullivan Jr. reported John Robert Klinner's suspicious activities to the FBI on December 27, 1963. Miami FBI indices reflected that John Robert Klinner was the Subject of Miami File 76-1938, and 105-7037. [NARA FBI 124-10268-10396, 10431] On January 11, 1964, John Robert Klinner was arrested for selling property under lien and for a traffic violation. He was released the same date on bond. On January 20, 1964, S.A. Frank P. Griffie questioned John Robert Klinner.

Major Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo was the leader of Alpha-66. The FBI questioned Antonio Veciana about Klinner. "On January 30, 1964, (Deleted) advised that he had no personal knowledge of John Robert Klinner who was being investigated in connection with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy." [FBI DL 89-43 G Cover Page] Marguerite Dignum sought protection from the CIA in Miami in October 1964, because she believed her life was in danger: "She was afraid her husband was connected with the Kennedy assassination, and that he fears she will expose him." The last quotation was taken from a synopsis of a CIA document withheld because of National Security considerations. ## FRANK STURGIS IN 1963 AND TRAMP PICKED UP IN DEALEY PLAZA ABOUT AN HOUR AFTER THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION

BRUCE HALL: FIRST TO DISCOVER TRAMP IS STURGIS

A document about journalist Bruce Hall appeared in the Watergate file at FBI Headquarters:

The Bureau and Washington Field Office were furnished the following information by May 30, 1973, Dallas Nitel [Night Telex]: On May 5, 1973, Assistant Chief of Police Thomas A. Hutson, Dallas Police Department, advised that during the last week of January 1973, Bruce Hall, an Atlanta, Georgia, CBS representative, contacted the Dallas Police Department and showed them two photographs taken during the day of the Kennedy assassination in Dallas. The photographs depicted two Dallas police officers walking along the street near the assassination site with two white males. Hall asked that these persons be identified. The policemen are Marvin Wise and Billy Bass...Hall indicated that the man on the right in the photographs is FRANK A. STURGIS, without saying anything about his being connected with Watergate. The Dallas Police Department did not realize the connection until recently when Bob Shaw, Dallas Police Department, Press Officer, noticed STURGIS' name in the newspaper. Then on May 29, 1973, Shaw received a call from a UPI representative who stated that the rumor was all over Washington that STURGIS had been photographed in Dallas on the assassination day. Mr. Leopold, associated with the Senate Watergate Committee investigation, has contacted the Dallas Police Department and asked for any arrest record that they have on STURGIS under his true name and aliases. The Dallas Police Department has no record of any arrest under such names. Leopold is sending fingerprints to Dallas Police Department for checks against its identification records. Copies of the photographs mentioned in the above quoted nitel were obtained from the Dallas Police Department and were furnished to the Bureau and WFO by Dallas airtel to the Bureau and WFO, dated May 31, 1973, in the Watergate case.

There were some cryptic handwritten notes on the right-hand side of the document: "No follow up (illegible) has a small ino. No interest. Photo (illegible)." This was followed by what appeared to be several initials. The "Thomas Hutson" mentioned in the document helped arrest OSWALD on November 22. Hutson was contacted in August 1993:

I don't grant interviews. I'm not interested in discussing anything that happened in 1963. I only deal with the facts. It's in the Warren Report. It's a bunch of bullshit - all the rest of it. Not fact. All these people writing and doin' all this is just tryin' t' enrich theirselves and gain a bunch a money. They can't deal with the cold, hard facts as it really happened.

The document about Bruce Hall cited five reports of S.A. James J. O'Conner captioned "LEE HARVEY OSWALD - Miami," about, or mentioning, FRANK FIORINI. The FBI:

This possible connection has come to the attention of the FBI from several different sources and centers around a series of photographs taken in Dallas, Texas..." Bruce Hall was one source. Bruce Hall was contacted in June 1993. He told this researcher: "I had reason to believe, at that time, that it [the tramp] was FRANK STURGIS. I had been given some information from someplace that it was, in fact, STURGIS. I will not disclose my source at this time, although I will say it came from another person within CBS who was dealing directly with the other person. In order to keep that person in the clear, we set up a system where he got the information, and it was passed on to me, and I would do the leg work and field on it. His source was within the government, but I do not know who his source was. I made my first trip to Dallas to investigate the information on Friday, January 19, 1973. I still think it is STURGIS. We spoke with a number of people in Dallas at that particular time who we thought might recognize the picture, or who we thought might comment, we wanted to see what their response and their reaction was.

In the Spring of 1973 a rumor that circulated in Washington, D.C., placed STURGIS in Dallas on November 21, 1963. Bruce Hall said that his report to the Dallas Police and the rumor circulating in Washington that STURGIS had been arrested in Dallas on November 21, 1963, were unrelated. When the FBI checked its files on STURGIS, it found he had been questioned about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in 1964. STURGIS should have been questioned by the FBI in May 1973. The FBI erroneously concluded that:

It appears possible that E. HOWARD HUNT and FRANK ANTHONY STURGIS were eliminated as being identical to the unidentified individuals in the photographs with the Dallas police officers taken November 22, 1963, during the Watergate investigation. If not, it would appear that the Miami Office would be able to establish STURGIS' whereabouts on November 22, 1963, outside of Dallas. The above would indicate that all logical investigation has already been conducted in the MURKIN case, and the Watergate Case, to identify the three unknown persons with the Dallas police officers, none of which, investigation has indicated, were finger printed. UACB, no further action taken by Dallas.

The Ervin Committee was given the tramp shots; however, it did not do a photo analysis. During the Ervin Committee Hearings in the summer of 1973, an alibi for HUNT, BARKER, McCORD and STURGIS could not be established. Congressman Henry Gonzalez (Dem.-TX) said that their alibis were all unsatisfactory. As stated, in November 1973 this researcher discovered the resemblance between HUNT and one of the tramps. An article about this discovery appeared throughout the underground press. When the Warren Report was released in September 1964, the CIA's Propaganda Notes Bulletin stated: "Covert assets should explain the tragedy wherever it is genuinely misunderstood and counter all efforts to misconstrue it intentionally." [CIA 871-388A] In 1973 Bernard Fensterwald and his associate, Richard E. Sprague, were the keepers of the tramp shot negatives. In the 1960's and 1970's Richard E. Sprague was a computer programmer who worked for Northrup Aircraft and Touche Ross, an accounting firm that handled Fortune 500 corporations such as Boeing Aviation, then Sprague opened his own business. As stated, Deputy Sheriff Roger Craig signed an affidavit in which he stated that he observed Eugene Edgar Bradley in Dallas on November 22, 1963, driving a get-away station wagon for OSWALD. Roger Craig was shown a picture of Bradley by a member of Jim Garrison's staff. Garrison had been led to believe that Eugene Edgar Bradley was involved in the Kennedy assassination. Vincent Salandria, an attorney from Philadelphia who was close to the Garrison investigation, commented:

He's a clever one and he's one of them. Big Jim Garrison made a terrible error based on Sprague regarding Eugene Edgar Bradley. He's poison. He was first to bring out the Bradley thing. He almost destroyed Jim in the Bradley thing. He pushed Hoover-did-it and right-wing interpretations. He came around with bundles of beautiful pictures and reports. He was from Wall Street then.

Garrison was also convinced that Fred Lee Chrisman, a right-wing radio personality from the West Coast, was involved in the Kennedy assassination. Sprague denied having given Jim Garrison the Bradley lead:

Some guys and a woman tipped off Jim Garrison on Bradley. He was not there and was innocent. Garrison asked me to look through photographs and I found that Bradley had a close facial resemblance to the tallest tramp. That spurred Garrison on." Sprague said he went to Dallas and conducted a height study that indicated the tramp was 6' 2" to 6' 4". This eliminated Bradley who was 5'9" tall.

On July 18, 1968, the FBI generated this note regarding Sprague:

Richard E. Sprague was the subject of memo 'A. Rosen to DeLoach March 26, 1968,' captioned 'Assassination of President Kennedy November 22, 1963, Dallas, Texas.' (Copy attached) It was approved that contact with Sprague should not be made. Sprague telephonically contacted Supervisor H.A. Schutz of the General Investigative Division on July 8, 1968, indicating he was in town attempting to obtain Government contracts for his computer business, company name, 'Personal Data Services Corp.' Sprague said he had his research monograph and desired to submit it to the Bureau. He was informed that any information he had would be accepted, and no commitments were made to Sprague whatsoever. Upon receipt of his monograph it was determined to be identical with that previously received. Therefore his communication is being answered as indicated, and the salutation 'Dear Sir' is being utilized since Sprague had been in close contact and assisted individuals who have been severely critical of the President's Commission and the FBI. [FBI 62-109060-6520]

On March 24, 1970, Sprague again contacted the FBI. J. Edgar Hoover responded:

With respect to your request, it will not be possible to furnish the assistance you are seeking as all pertinent material, including movies and photographs, relative to the assassination of President Kennedy, was made available by this Bureau to the Warren Commission. That Commission subsequently turned the material over to the National Archives. Note: Our files disclose in a Rosen to DeLoach memo dated April 26, 1968, it was noted that Richard E. Sprague had written the Administrative Assistant to Senator Robert F. Kennedy, enclosing a number of photographs taken at the assassination site and stated he was a proponent of the theory that more than one individual was firing shots at President Kennedy when he was assassinated. It had been determined that Sprague assisted individuals who have been severely critical of the Warren Commission and the FBI. We wrote him on July 18, 1968, utilizing above salutation and complimentary closing in view of data in our files regarding him." [FBI-62-109060-6926]

Richard E. Sprague published the tramp shots in Computers and Automation magazine in May 1970. They had already been published in Penn Jones' book Forgive My Grief. In 1973 Bernard Grossman called Richard E. Sprague and requested negatives, or prints, of the tramp shots. Richard E. Sprague was interested in the researcher's interest in the tramp shots, but refused to give him copies. When the researcher asked if Richard E. Sprague had seen this researcher's article about the tramps, he said:

A.J. WEBERMAN is a CIA agent spreading disinformation. Tom Forcade is also an agent. He worked for the Committee to Re-elect the President (CREEP) and I can show proof. He worked for the FBI. The Fifth Estate [an underground paper in Detroit] people have proof of it. He should have been arrested. He was a government agent for ten years.

This researcher obtained the tramp photographs from Jack Beers (two weeks before he died) and from Fred Newcomb thanks to researcher Bernhard "Gustave" Grossman.

SPRAGUE'S LETTER TO THE BERKELEY BARB: MAY 1973

The article about the tramps is full of plagiarism, errors, misquotes and invented facts that mislead the readers of the Berkeley Barb in unfortunate ways. I suppose the reason the author, A. J. WEBERMAN of Greenwich Village, New York, did not sign the article (or at least the Barb did not publish his identity) was fear of a libel suit. Mr. WEBERMAN and the editors of the Barb opened themselves up to that possibility, when the article suggested the Committee to Investigate Assassinations is a CIA front organization and implied that I have been working for the CIA since before May 1970. WEBERMAN states in the article 'Judging from his (Sprague's) connection with the Committee to Investigate Assassinations, a CIA front group, the purpose of running these pictures was to make sure no-one was on to anything.' Much as I would like to have discovered HUNT and STURGIS in Dealey Plaza, I must tell the Barb editors that WEBERMAN is wrong. The short tramp with the felt hat bears a very strong resemblance to Fred Lee Chrisman, a Minuteman from Washington. He is also about the same age as Chrisman and has two identical scars on the right side of his face...I started on the project in 1972, as soon as HUNT, STURGIS, BARKER and Company surfaced, to see if I could find any of them in the thousands of still photos and movie frames taken in Dealey Plaza on November 22, 1973. (sic) I also began research to find out where each one was that day. I suspected, and still suspect, that all six of the Watergate men who were involved in the Bay of Pigs (All but Liddy of the seven burglars) were involved in the assassination of John Kennedy. I could not find any of the six in Dealey Plaza.

SPRAGUE'S LETTER TO JOSEPH OKPAKU

After Coup D'Etat In America was published in 1975, Sprague sent a 30-page critique to its publisher in which he suggested that the book be taken off the market:

The widespread publicity given to the 'HUNT and STURGIS in Dealey Plaza' idea by Dick Gregory and others, the denial by HUNT under oath, the threats of law suits, the use of this 'tool' by David Belin and the Rockefeller Commission against qualified researchers and Warren Commission critics, and far more importantly, the potential future use of this gross error by the next official body set up to discredit the researchers and members of any House or Senate Committee investigating the assassination; all of these factors should have given you pause for deeper reflection and greater efforts to validate that author's claims. I assume in making this criticism, that your basic motivations are purely to seek the truth about the assassination wherever it may lead us.

If Henry Gonzalez and Thomas Downing are successful in creating a special House committee to investigate the JFK assassination, they will need all the credibility they can muster. Both men are certain to come under personal attack from the powers on the other side of this giant battle for truth. Those forces will no doubt use Mr. Gonzalez's writing of the foreword for your book, to discredit him, largely because of the HUNT-STURGIS-Dealey Plaza error.

None of us who have been supporting Henry Gonzalez through the last year would want to see that happen, and I assume you would not either. In addition to the discrediting possibility, the book sets up, there is a more subtle negative impact of the HUNT portion of the error. Focusing attention on whether or not HUNT was in Dealey Plaza draws attention away from where he really was that day, and more importantly, what he was doing at the moment the shots rang out in Dallas.

You are in a position to turn this around, again assuming your real motivations are to get at and print the truth about the assassination and HUNT'S true involvement. By doing your homework now you can easily determine that HUNT was involved on November 22, 1963, in a very important meeting in Washington, D.C. with Richard Helms and Lyman Kirkpatrick [Inspector General of the CIA at the time of the Bay of Pigs] to decide whether the CIA would back another attempt to invade Cuba. One meeting on your part with the fourth man who was there, can settle this matter.

I believe it should be obvious to you why that was an extremely significant meeting, and why HUNT, Helms and Kirkpatrick would deny that it ever took place. Just six short months before, Jack Kennedy had ordered the CIA and its anti-Castro agents to cease and desist from their plans for another invasion. He ordered the funds withdrawn, the training camps closed, the weapons confiscated, and the men arrested. All of that did take place..."

FORCADE TURNS THE TABLES ON THE CTIA

WEBERMAN and Tom Forcade asked the CTIA people, Bud Fensterwald, Bob Smith and others, as well as the Georgetown University people, for permission to post signs on the campus near the auditorium where the CTIA meeting was being held. Georgetown University was a co-sponsor of the conference, supplying the auditorium as well as volunteer workers handling facilities, registration and other details. CTIA did not have the people or facilities of our own. Forcade and WEBERMAN also wanted to hand out the posters, or leaflets, as C calls them, both in front of the auditorium and inside the auditorium after the conference started.

If you haven't seen one of the leaflets you should. It was in extremely poor taste. There was a horrible cartoon of RICHARD NIXON holding President Kennedy's brain (presumably) and leering at it. Large printed characters said the President's brain is missing. The rest of the poster was equally distasteful. Several congressmen and their staff people were planning to attend the CTIA conference. It was not the kind of material any of us wanted to see associated with the conference. Nor did we want to have the CTIA conference in any way connected in the minds of the senators and representatives with the demonstration in front of the Archives. We preferred legal approaches taken under the Freedom of Information Act. The CTIA conference had been planned and announced publicly months before WEBERMAN and his friends dreamed up the Archives demonstration idea.

At any rate, the Georgetown people, who had the final say as far as what could or could not be done on the campus was concerned, apparently must have given WEBERMAN and Forcade permission to post the posters near the auditorium and to hand them out near the front door. When I arrived there shortly before the conference began, I saw the horrible posters on trees and poles and the sides of buildings all around the area. I also saw people handing out the 'leaflets.' I must admit my immediate reaction was to want to vomit, and my next reaction was a desire to run around the campus tearing down all of the posters. However, I resisted the impulse and entered the auditorium, going upstairs to the registration foyer at the auditorium entrance...Shortly after the conference began I was aware of a disturbance in the foyer. The door between the foyer and the auditorium was partly open as people were still entering in large numbers. I looked out and saw two men in straw-like derby hats colored black with a gold or yellow trim, creating a scene with Sally. I later found out they were WEBERMAN and Forcade. I had never seen either of them before. Everyone from the registration group except Sally had moved into the auditorium to listen to the opening speeches. I could hear them yelling at Sally. I believe several people near the door went out into the foyer. Then I could see papers flying all over the foyer, some loud screaming and a big thudding noise. Fensterwald and Smith had gone into the foyer by then along with other Georgetown people.

I did not find out what had happened until later when Sally and the Georgetown girl told me what had occurred. WEBERMAN and Forcade came storming into the foyer, demanding they be allowed to enter the auditorium while the conference was in progress and distribute the 'brain missing leaflets.' Sally told them no and before she could do anything else, Forcade grabbed one of the CTIA registration tables and literally threw it on top of Sally, scattering books, forms and literature in all directions, grabbing handfuls of them while wildly running around the foyer. Sally's finger was broken in the action and she was badly shaken up. I don't know exactly what WEBERMAN was doing during Forcade's performance, but he surely was making no effective effort to stop it.

The Georgetown girl and CTIA people tried to get WEBERMAN and Forcade under control and were having difficulty doing it. They finally called the campus police and had both of them thrown out of the auditorium, and I presume, off the campus. I had nothing to do with giving the campus police any orders. I assume that when campus police anywhere discover two ruffians disturbing a conference and breaking a young girl's finger in the course of violent actions, they need no orders from anyone... WEBERMAN and Forcade should have ended up in jail after that action at Georgetown, not demonstrating in front of the Archives. If Sally hadn't been too frightened to press charges, they probably would have. All you had to do to find out about the garbage in the book or any of the other errors I have pointed out to you, was to make a telephone call. It was even a local call, to my office in Manhattan. That is hardly a very great limitation on your ability...Eventually this book will bring discredit to you and your publishing company, which I doubt that you really want. It is that last item that I hope will cause you to take the turn around actions I suggested in the early part of this letter. Yours sincerely, Richard E. Sprague, 193 Pinewood Road, Hartsdale, N.Y. P.S. Friends have told me that Mr. WEBERMAN is telling people that I am a CIA agent. If everyone who disagrees with his conclusions turns out to be a CIA agent, the Agency will be employing a large percentage of the American population.

Sprague did everything he could to have my work suppressed. He threatened to sue the Berkeley Barb for libel when they reprinted one of my articles. He implied that I was a tool of the Rockefeller Commission that David Belin used against qualified researchers. In other words, I was an intelligence operative. Why was Sprague worried about "Mr. Gonzalez's writing of the introduction to Coup?" Wasn't this Congressman Gonzalez's worry? Sprague wrote "assuming your real motivations are to get at and print the truth about the assassination." This implied that there were other people who had a secret agenda in connection with the Kennedy assassination. Sprague stated: "HUNT, Helms and Kirkpatrick would deny that [the meeting] ever took place." Very convenient explanation of their denial of the Sprague story. Denial becomes confirmation. If there was such a meeting, why have HUNT, who was in the Domestic Operations Division, attend? Sprague wanted to set up a meeting between Enrique Williams and my publisher, Joseph Okpaku. What was Sprague's relationship with Williams? Sprague felt that it was illegal to hold a demonstration in front of the Archives: "We preferred legal approaches..." Sprague's true feelings: "WEBERMAN and Forcade should have ended up in jail after that action at Georgetown, not demonstrating in front of the Archives."

Sprague's theory on the Kennedy assassination named Clay Shaw, HUNT, Guy Gabaldin, a CIA agent, Albert Osborne, Harry Dean, Richard Case Nagell, Fred Lee Chrisman, William Seymour, Ronald Augustinovich, Mary Hope, OSWALD and Emilo Santana, Jim Braden, Frenchy, Jim Hicks, Breck Wall, Jack Ruby and Larry Craford. How could someone of his intelligence possibly believe this scenario?

There was no way Richard Sprague was legitimate. Either Sprague was a free lance right-winger who decided help suppress the truth about the Kennedy assassination on his own, or he had some connection to the CIA. Sprague spent a lot of time dogging my tracks in Washington. Whenever I visited a member of Congress I would note in the guest book that Sprague had recently visited there. He would tell them that I was a crazy hippie/yippie from Greenwich Village whose theories should be dismissed out-of-hand. Why all this interest on the part of an executive level individual in this researcher? No CIA documents have surfaced that linked him with the Agency as of 1996. This researcher has been unable to determine if for certain if Sprague died so a Freedom of Information Act Request could be not filed for documents linking him with the Agency, however, one factor that makes me wonder about Sprague was how the FBI cleared him for an appointment by former Warren Commission member President Ford with the National Commission on Electronic Funds Transfer.

In 1976 Richard E. Sprague was appointed by President Ford to the National Commission on Electronic Funds Transfer. Emilo Q. Daddario was on the National Commission on Electronic Funds Transfer. During World War II, Emilo Q. Daddario, a Connecticut attorney, saved Fascist Marshall Rodolfo Graziani from Socialist partisans. One day later, ANGLETON would similarly rescue Prince Valerio Borghese by disguising him as a U.S. Army officer. In 1958 Emilo Daddario was a Democratic Congressman from Connecticut. Daddario was listed in Who's Who in the CIA. Other members of the Electronic Funds Transfer Board included Thomas E. Kauper, former head of the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department. [Moldea, Dan Dark Victory 1986 page 277] Richard E. Sprague was a member of the Senior Staff and a Program Manager whose area of responsibility was "Use, Access and Control of EFT Systems and International Development." President Ford appropriated $1.8 million for this Commission. [Harris OSS p119; Laurent, Frederic, L'Orchestre Noir p43; Comm. on Elect. Funds Transfer brochure; Mader Who's Who in the CIA; Computers and Automation 5.70] Sprague croaked in 1996. May he got in hell along with the others who worked diligently to keep America's history hidden. Journalist Jack Anderson was contacted about the tramp shots. On April 16, 1974, a column by Jack Anderson appeared in the Washington Post about STURGIS entitled

A Bum Rap for FRANK STURGIS in Miami. After FRANK and his friends were arrested at gunpoint inside the Democratic Headquarters, they were pictured in the press as figures of fun, bunglers and petty thieves. On another level they became caricatures of Orwellian enemies of the American system. It was even whispered that they had been behind the plot to assassinate President Kennedy. As evidence, one group brought me a news photograph taken on the streets of Dallas on assassination day. They eagerly pointed out a man they said was STURGIS lurking in the shadows. The man resembled STURGIS, but was definitely not STURGIS.

The article made no reference to STURGIS being disguised as a tramp. Michael Canfield and this researcher displayed the tramp shots to Anderson as "walk ins" in his office in late 1973 or early 1974. We explained that they men were picked up behind the Texas School Book Depository, and never mentioned anyone lurking in the shadows. Jack Anderson had made up his mind that STURGIS had nothing to do with the Kennedy assassination before he observed the photos, based on his evaluation of FRANK'S personality and his close relationship with him - when STURGIS was arrested at Watergate Anderson offered to post bail for him. Anderson didn't even take the time to get the tramp story straight. It was not until April 12, 1975, that Anderson got his facts straight. He wrote: "The special commission, headed by Vice President Rockefeller, is examining "evidence" which allegedly links STURGIS and HUNT to the Kennedy assassination. The chief exhibit is a picture of two vagrants, resembling STURGIS and HUNT, who were picked up in Dallas after the assassination. Upon close examination, the picture of the man who is supposed to be STURGIS does not resemble him in some important details. The relative height of the two men in the picture also doesn't correspond to the actual height of STURGIS and HUNT." [Washington Post] Canfield and this researcher displayed a series of photographs to Anderson, not just one. On October 15, 1974, the CIA generated another Memorandum for the Record on STURGIS and HUNT.

1. This memorandum will record actions taken by the undersigned with respect to the allegation that the Subjects were arrested by the Dallas, Texas, Police as suspects in connection with the assassination of President Kennedy.
2. On October 10, 1974, the undersigned was requested to meet with Mr. Seymour Bolton Special Assistant to the DDO who had been contacted by Mr. Unumb, Deputy Assistant to the Director concerning the aforementioned allegation. According to Mr. Bolton an underground newspaper had photographs purported to substantiate the allegation that the Subjects had been arrested by Dallas Police. (See reference to same in the attached copy of Columnist Jack Anderson's April 16, 1974, column.)
3. I met with Mr. Bolton on October 10, 1974, at which time I discussed the action that I had taken with respect to this allegation approximately six weeks ago at the request of the Director of Security. At that time various courses of action were discussed our action was limited to a review of both Subjects' files and a search of our records which produced the Jack Anderson article referred to above and which is attached. (This article was made available to Mr. John Richard of the Inspector General Staff at the time.)
4. Mr. Bolton appeared satisfied and advised that no further action appeared necessary at this time. [Seven lines were deleted only to be released in 1993.] However, he expressed some concern over the possibility that we might have to reopen the matter again if and when the Agency is ever asked about the same by one of the Congressional oversight committees insofar as the allegation pertains to HUNT because he was an Agency employee on the date in question. If this should occur, we would probably have to produce evidence that HUNT was not in Dallas on that day. We discussed various courses of action that we could take in this regard if necessary.

5. Mr. Gambino will be advised in the event that there are any future developments in this matter. (Ervan E. Kuhnke, Jr.) [Allen v. DOD CIA 41750, 41748]

Seymour Bolton was involved with David Phillips in OPERATION MONGOOSE, a psy-warfare project aimed at Castro's Cuba. Bolton worked in the Plans Division. His son Josh became part of the Bush the Elder's White House staff.

MEMORANDUM FOR GENERAL LANSDALE

From: Lt. Colonel Patchell

Subject: Psychological Operations Group

Meeting held 1430-1450 on 4 June 1962. Attended by Mr. Hurwitch, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Summ, and Mr. Curtis (State), Mr. Bolton (CIA), Mr. Smith (USIA), and myself. Following is a summary of discussion items:

(1) USIA will provide advance notice of TV programs scheduled re Cuba.

(2) Free Cuban Group (DRE) has arranged for strong representation at African International Student Meeting in Canada 27-28 June. They will surface copies of report on student conditions in Cuba. They asked for no advance publicity - then big "follow up"

- - State and CIA coordinating to include preparation of releases to U.S. press.

(3) CIA has looked at CRC's mailing lists for various types of info, to include the publication "Cuba Nueva." They find lists most elaborate, complete and well organized for each purpose.

(4) USIA reports they are on top of stories pointing out loss of rights by workers in Cuba. USIA provided sample copies of their daily wire output and of weekly mail output for me to look at in greater detail. (I will report separately on this.)

(5) Much exploitable info in Castro's speech on housing -- corruption, unavailability etc. USIA and CIA to exploit.

(6) CIA reported that the Latin American edition of Time Magazine was in English -- that Time Magazine in Spanish was a Latin publication (Bogota) using same format, but not useful for purpose of exploiting Blas Roca story.

~~TOP SECRET~~

(7) Reports of hunger strikes etc. at Isle of Pines prison to be played up by USIA. (Berne's cable 527).

(8) Copies of cartoon books and other publications were requested by Lt. Col. Patchell.

(9) USIA requested to provide info on the public opinion poll conducted and schedules for future polls.

Seymour Bolton privately asked me to inform you that subject to any comment from you, he was using the approach on psy war that the means of delivery would not be tied to attribution. Although it might be more convenient to work completely through the CRC, he believed that we should reserve flexibility by organizing the "pipeline" and then putting stuff in from CRC, or other Cuban organizations, as well as stuff created by the U.S., with or without signatures or attribution. He feels that such control would best insure that we sent in just what was needed and no more or no less.

CLARENCE KELLEY: "STILL" THE TRAMP SHOT INVESTIGATION

The tramps shots were displayed to Robert Horton, a reporter for the Reuters News Agency, in early August 1974 by Michael Canfield. Robert Horton called the FBI:

For information of Miami: On August 7, 1974, a reporter for Reuters News Service contacted FBIHQ to advise he was in possession of photos depicting three individuals in custody of the Dallas Police on November 22, 1963, in the vicinity of the Texas School Book Depository. According to the above reporter, these photos were received from two young yippie individuals who were attempting to reopen the Kennedy assassination. Two of the individuals depicted in the above photos are purported to be HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS, both associated with the Watergate break-in. Leads: Miami locate STURGIS and attempt to establish his whereabouts on November 22, 1963. If STURGIS able to establish his whereabouts on that date, set forth leads to discreetly verify this information. S. A. W. Douglas Gow. [NARA FBI 124-10265-10134 FBI 89-35-409]

W. Douglas Gow entered the FBI in June 1965 he served in the Dallas Field Office until his transfer to FBI Headquarters in 1974, where he was appointed a supervisor in the criminal investigative division and an associate deputy director. This came about as a result of Oliver Buck Revell choosing to become SAC in Dallas. By November 1990 Gow was an FBI assistant director who headed foreign counterintelligence operations. Gow acknowledged in a television interview that French intelligence agents took part in an attempt between 1987 and 1989 to collect industrial secrets at foreign offices of the American computer companies I.B.M. and Texas Instruments Corporation. The operation was uncovered by the Central Intelligence Agency and the FBI. In 1995 Gow was described as a "Former Associate Deputy Director of the FBI, Mr. Gow is a nationally recognized expert on terrorism and intelligence affairs. Currently Mr. Gow is a consultant to the CIA on counterintelligence policy." You get the picture, the CIA investigating the CIA. [<http://www.fas.org/irp/agency/ustreas/usss/t1pubrpt.html>]

Clarence Kelley joined the FBI in 1940 and in 1961 he was named Police Chief of Kansas City. In April 1968, after the assassination of Martin Luther King, Clarence Kelley ordered his police force to teargas black protesters. After the still order was given, the FBI's investigation was tainted. [FBI-62-109060-7121] [Kelley.JPEG] On August 14, 1974, the FBI tried to acquire the tramp shots from Michael Canfield, who refused to accommodate the Bureau.

On August 17, 1974, Art Lundal, a former CIA employee received a call from Sam Jaffe:

1. I met Jaffe in the Dominican Republic during the time of Trujillo's assassination. I knew he left from there for Moscow as the ABC correspondent. I next heard from him when he called me in 1970 to say he was working with Metromedia in Washington, D.C. During this present conversation he told me he no longer needed the 'corporate body' and he was now a free-lance journalist operating out of his home. He said it was he who broke the story on United States companies' plan to exhibit surveillance equipment in Moscow. After the story was published, he said, Senator Mansfield gave the matter congressional recognition and stopped the exhibit of surveillance gear in Moscow. I told him I had read the story.

3. Jaffe went on to say that his friends (the "young guys on the hill") have photographs of a couple of derelicts ("bums") who were arrested in back of the Texas School Book Depository minutes after President Kennedy was assassinated. Jaffe said these bums look very much like HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS, the Watergate codefendants. [NARA 1993.08.11.13.52:34:650060]

On September 13, 1974, Scott Breckinridge generated this Memo For the Record regarding the "Press Inquiry Into Kennedy Assassination."

1. John Hicks phoned to say that he was passing to me what he had just passed to the DCI and OLC.
2. Hicks had a phone call from Art Lundahl, vacationing in Michigan. Lundahl's home is 616-731-5491. Lundahl was phoned by a man identifying himself as Sam Jaffe. Jaffe said that a couple of others are doing an investigation of the JFK assassination. In the course of this they were in Dallas where they reviewed photographs taken by the Dallas Police of persons rounded up following the assassination. Among these photographs were pictures of 3 hobos, two of which Jaffe said he identified as HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS.
3. The telephone call to Lundahl was at the suggestion of Victor Marchetti, who knew Lundahl's familiarity with photographic development. He wanted to know of a commercial place where they would do enlargements in order to study the pictures more carefully for a more certain identification. Lundahl avoided telling Jaffe anything, saying he was retired and out of contact.

September 20, 1974,

Memorandum for the Record/Subject: Inquiry - HUNT and STURGIS

1. Subsequent to Jaffe's inquiry to Art Lundahl last week, relayed to us by John Hicks, we have been in touch with the Office of Security (Charlie Kane) and have checked other records to ascertain HUNT'S whereabouts at the time of the Kennedy assassination on November 22, 1963.
2. The Office of Finance has checked HUNT'S leave and travel records for the period of September 1963 to January 1964, not knowing the purpose of our request. The record shows for the four week pay period ending November 23, 1963, that HUNT took 11 hours of sick leave and no annual leave. In the following pay period he took three hours sick leave and 27 hours annual leave, but this follows the particular period in question. His travel record shows official travel in September, October and December, but none in November. All this travel was to New York. John Richards states that we already know, as a result of responses to previous requests, that we have no records on STURGIS that would show similar information; he was not an Agency employee.
3. Security provided us with a column by Jack Anderson of April 16, 1974, in which he covered the HUNT-STURGIS rumor, dismissing it. A copy of the news column is attached. This would suggest that, rather than police photographs of people rounded-up and booked, the photographs in question are random snapshots of crowds. If this is correct, there would be no related fingerprint records that could be checked for verification.

4. Kane feels that any inquiry would attract more attention than it would be worth. I agree. I suggest that we only hold this information against possible future inquiries on the subject.

S. D. Breckinridge.

Sam Jaffe contacted Art Lundahl regarding a possible photo analysis. Art Lundahl reported this contact to the CIA who, according to Victor Marchetti, advised Art Lundahl to steer clear of Sam Jaffe. After WWII Lundahl became chief of the Photogrammetry Division of the Naval Photogrammetry Division. In 1953 he moved to the CIA to manage both general photo-interpretation and then the products, in the late fifties, of the U-2 program. U-2 photographs taken on October 14, 1962, in which analysts, under Lundahl's direction, found visual evidence of the placement of Soviet SS-4 Medium Range Ballistic Missiles (MRBM), capable of hitting targets, in the continental United States, with nuclear warheads. This triggered the Cuban Missile Crisis, sending the US intelligence community into maximum effort and triggering an unprecedented military alert. Lundahl died in June 1992. Sub: Telephone Conversation with Sam Jaffe

Jaffe went on to say that his friends ("the young guys on the hill") according to his friends ("some of the young guys on the hill") have photographs of a couple of derelicts ("bums") who were arrested in back of the Texas Book Depository minutes after President Kennedy was assassinated. Jaffe said these "bums" look very much like Howard Hunt and Frank Stugis, the Watergate codefendants. Jaffee said his information is that at the time of Kennedy's assassination Howard Hunt was the Acting Chief of Station in Mexico City. I said I didn't think so, and Jaffee responded that one man who should now "is that former CIA officer Agee." I said I did not know Agee but read an account of him in the newspapers.

In early September 1974, on the suggestion of Sam Jaffe, Michael Canfield gave a set of tramp and comparison photographs to Richard Pearle who worked for Senator Henry "Scoop" Jackson (Dem.-WA). Michael Canfield told him that he wanted a non-governmental agency to perform a photo analysis. Richard Pearle gave the photographs to Senator Jackson's aide, Don Donahue, who told Michael Canfield he would have a photographic expert look at the pictures and that he should have the results of this examination by September 16, 1974, when Michael Canfield was scheduled to return to Washington from New York City. The FBI reported:

Donahue and Jaffe described Michael Canfield as a 'scared kid' who is possibly afraid for his safety...Donahue is reluctant to re-contact Jaffe or Canfield seeking the identity of the police officer unless absolutely necessary since he feels this may cause them to lose confidence in him. He indicated he would make further inquiry in this regard if we are unable to locate Harkness through the Dallas PD. Donahue said he intends to tell Canfield when he contacts him on Monday that he has had an expert look at the pictures and 'there may be something to this;' hence we would want to keep the photographs and refer them to the FBI. He said he would like to have the photos back by Monday to have them in hand when Canfield contacts him. It was pointed out to Donahue that should he make such a statement to Canfield this could be used by Canfield in giving credence to his story and might be interpreted as an acceptance of this story by Senator Jackson. Donahue then agreed he would make no statement whatever and would merely put him off should Canfield contact him before the Bureau is complete with its inquiry on this matter. [FBI 62-109060-7131]

The FBI did not receive the shots from Don Donahue until September 10, 1974, more than one month after FBI Director Clarence Kelley issued his 'still' order. The FBI had determined the tramps were not HUNT and STURGIS before examining the tramp photographs. Why did the FBI need our tramp shots? The FBI had the tramp shots in its files because the Dallas Police Department had given the Bureau copies in 1968. [FBI 62-109060-7138] But either these shots were missing, or were overlooked. The CIA's Office of the Inspector General generated this index card on July 26, 1977:

U.S. CITIZENS GENERAL TAB 15

Memo for the Record from Chief, CI/R&A. Subject: Probing of David Martin for Classified Case Information: David Martin, Peer Da Silva, William Harvey, Richard Kovich, Leonard McCoy, Sam Jaffe, George Kisevalter, JAMES ANGLETON, CI Staff, Popov, Golitsyn, Nosenko, Dolnitsyn.

Peer Da Silva was chief of Security at Los Alamos and was mentioned in the Pentagon Papers:

The efforts of those advocating reorganization began to bear edible fruit in December 1965 and January 1966, when a conference was held at Warrenton, Va., to which the Mission sent an impressive collection of Mission Council members...General Lansdale, CIA Station Chief Jorgenson, and Brigadier General Collins, representing Westmoreland. From Washington came the second and third echelons of the bureaucracy: ...William Colby and Peer da Silva, CIA; Chester Cooper, White House; and Sanford Marlowe, USIA. Other participants included: Major General Hutchins, CINCPAC; Rufus Phillips of Lansdale's group; Charles Zwick and Henry Rowen of BOB; George Lodge, the Ambassador's son; Desmond Fitzgerald, CIA; and Leon Goure, of RAND.

Richard Kovich was a SR (Soviet Recruitment) officer who had handled half a dozen of the CIA's most sensitive cases. He supported George Kisevalter in the running of Pyotr Popov, the GRU colonel who was the first major CIA penetration of Soviet intelligence. He was the case officer for Mikhail Federov, whose CIA code name was UNACUTE, a GRU illegal whom Kovich had recruited in Paris. With the knowledge and consent of the Norwegian secret service, he ran Ingeborg Lygren, a Norwegian woman who worked in her country's embassy in Moscow but reported through Kovich to the CIA. ANGLETON believed Kovich might have been a mole and damaged Kovich's career.

THE C. F. DOWNING REPORT

Clarence Kelley's FBI issued a report that stated the FBI, preeminent in forensic examination, had determined the tramps were not HUNT and STURGIS. On September 12, 1974, FBI S.A. C. F. Downing, who had worked extensively on the FBI's investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, [FBI 105-126032 NR 8.26.64] wrote:

Reference is made to a memorandum from R.E. Gebhardt to Mr. Adams requesting that the FBI Laboratory compare photographs of three individuals arrested in the vicinity of the Kennedy assassination with known photographs of E. HOWARD HUNT, FRANK STURGIS...It was determined that the two individuals in these photographs suspected of being HUNT and STURGIS are not HUNT and STURGIS. This conclusion is based on the existence of differences in facial characteristics. There are no photographs available in the identification record for Thomas Arthur Valle or otherwise available in the Laboratory with which the third individual in the submitted photographs could be compared. [At this time Thomas Arthur Vallee was suspected of being the CHRIST tramp. Vallee was at work in Chicago on November 22.] Although the possibility of doctoring these photographs cannot be completely eliminated because of the possibility that such 'doctoring' can be done without detection, no evidence was found to indicate that any of these photographs have been 'doctored.'

In a synopsis of the C. F. Downing Report, the FBI wrote:

The FBI Laboratory has examined the photographs and advised that two of the persons under arrest are not HUNT and STURGIS, but they could not positively eliminate the possibility that the photographs had been doctored." [FBI 62-109060-7134]

In a FBI Memorandum dated March 11, 1975, to the Rockefeller Commission, the disclaimer was eliminated: "There was no evidence found of retouching or alteration of the photographs of the three individuals in the vicinity of the Texas School Book Depository.

A copy of the C. F. Downing Report was forwarded to S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt, the Bureau's photographic identification expert. S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt did most of the photographic work for the Warren Commission. S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt was granted CIA liaison clearances in December 1954, August 1962, and August 1968, at the request of the Technical Services Division. [CIA SRS/OS Sarah K. Hall 2.6.69] When a Freedom of Information Act request was filed for C.F. Downing's laboratory report, the FBI stated that no such report existed:

Please be advised that the results of the Laboratory examination were furnished by the individual conducting the examination to his superiors by the memorandum which you enclosed with your request letter.

It was standard operating procedure for FBI laboratory technicians to file an FBI Work Sheet and an FBI Laboratory Report, accompanied by a memorandum that summarized the results of its findings. When the FBI obtained a photograph of Thomas Arthur Vallee from the Chicago Police Department, it turned it over to S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt, who did a FBI Work Sheet and Laboratory Report. [FBI 62-109060-10288] Where was C.F. Downing's HUNT and STURGIS Report and Work Sheet? Apparently there was no time to create them. FBI Director Clarence Kelley wanted the story quickly quashed. S.A. C.F. Downing had been ordered to still the investigation, and that meant issuing a negative report. C. F. Downing looked at the photographs, shook his head, and signed his memorandum. C. F. Downing claimed: "No evidence was found of doctoring." Where were the investigation notes concerning doctoring? C.F. Downing, who was not about to discredit his own previous work for the Warren Commission, had done what he could on short notice. Now the FBI was officially prepared to dispose of any serious journalistic or Congressional inquiry into the tramp shots and Watergate.

On September 13, 1974, Don Donahue told Michael Canfield that "his contact does not believe the 'bums' are HUNT and STURGIS and that he does not want to become involved in this matter since he feels it is a situation which should be handled by the FBI." Don Donahue was a former Bureau Agent and the FBI protected him from being identified as the source of the photographs. [FBI 61-109060-7134] On May 23, 1975, the SSCIA requested the CIA do a photo analysis of the tramp shots. The CIA requested the photographs from the FBI. Don Donahue requested his identity be concealed as the source of these photographs. [FBI 62-109060-7193]

On September 13, 1974, Sam Jaffe called S.A. Ruhl and asked him to evaluate Michael Canfield's credibility. S.A. Ruhl refused to do so. "Jaffe expressed concern that the FBI Lab would not do a proper evaluation of any photographs submitted by Michael Canfield because of a lack of confidence in Michael Canfield's theory." [FBI 61-109060-7127] Sam Jaffe died on February 8, 1985, at age 55, of cancer. Before he died Jaffe stated: "The last nine years have been incredible," Jaffe said in an interview with the Washington Post in 1985. If it weren't for a few friends I would be broken...I say I am not a Russian spy, the FBI says, 'Yeah, you are.' Well I want them to prove it. I want it all out in the open. I want my family cleared. If I should drop dead I don't want them living with this stigma. The CIA has cleared me. Now I want the FBI to do the same." Jaffe was member of the Council on Foreign Relations, the Overseas Writers, the White House and State Department correspondents associations, and the Marine Corps Combat Correspondents Association.

BEN BRADLEE, THE C. F. DOWNING REPORT AND THE TRAMPS

On October 7, 1974, FBI Director Clarence Kelley conferred with Mr. Benjamin C. Bradlee, Editor of The Washington Post...Mr. Bradlee stated that certain photographs have come to his attention which allegedly showed E. HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS, of Watergate notoriety, in the custody of Dallas, Texas, police officers shortly after the assassination of President Kennedy. Mr. Bradley said that since The Washington Post Watergate investigation was just about over, they were looking for a new inquiry to direct their attention toward. He said he was considering sending a team of investigative reporters to Dallas to begin an investigation into these photographs, but decided to check with the Director beforehand to see if the Bureau was aware of the photographs and had possibly already resolved the matter. Mr. Bradley was informed that this matter had come to our attention in August 1974, through A.J. Weberman and Michael Canfield, who were described as underground newspaper people from New York City...A copy of the March 15, 1974, to March 21, 1974, edition of The Berkeley Barb, a California underground newspaper, which contains the photographs in question...was given to Bradley. An article from the May 24, 1968, edition of The New York Times pertaining to the photographs was also mentioned to Mr. Bradley. Mr. Bradley was also told Michael Canfield made a deal with the German magazine Stern in regard to selling his story." FBI Director Clarence Kelley continued: "The photographs have been compared by the FBI Laboratory with known photographs of HUNT and STURGIS with a determination being made that HUNT and STURGIS are not the ones in the photographs. He was also informed that all three officers in the photographs have been previously identified in relation to other investigations, and that all three officers advised that they took three individuals, names unknown to them, off a boxcar about a mile from the assassination site about 20 minutes after the shooting. They took them to the Dallas County Sheriff's Office where a screening office had been setup. Numerous people were taken to that office on that day and released without charges or booking, after being interviewed. No records have been located pertaining to these individuals arrest.

It was also pointed out to Mr. Bradley that there had been allegations that LEE HARVEY OSWALD had been in Miami, Florida, prior to the assassination and had been in contact with STURGIS, who was then using the name FRANK FIORINI. Extensive investigation, including interview of STURGIS, indicated that there was no substance to this.

Michael Canfield had displayed the tramp photographs, and the HUNT and STURGIS comparison shots, to Ben Bradley. Before he spoke with FBI Director Clarence Kelley, Ben Bradley believed the tramps looked enough like HUNT and STURGIS to consider hiring a photo analyst to study the photographs. He was going to send a team of reporters to Dallas to investigate the circumstances of their arrest. After speaking with FBI Director Clarence Kelley, Benjamin Bradley dropped the matter. FBI Director Clarence Kelley explained:

Mr. Bradlee then stated he was satisfied that the Bureau was well aware of these allegations and instead of investigating the matter, he planned to run a story to the effect that the FBI had checked these allegations and found no substance to them. After Mr. Bradlee's departure, the Director advised that Captain Will Fritz, who was the Dallas police officer in charge of its Kennedy case investigation, and who apparently authorized the release of the persons in the photographs, should be interviewed for any knowledge he might have of this matter. The Director also stated that HUNT and STURGIS should be contacted to ascertain their whereabouts on the day of the assassination. The Director pointed out that these interviews should be conducted to carry out our determination that HUNT and STURGIS were not the ones in the photographs one step further and hopefully lay these allegations to rest. [FBI 62-109060-7137]

FBI Director Clarence Kelley suppressed the tramp story. Why bother investigating a story if the FBI Director, as well as the FBI Lab, has assured you that there was no substance to it? In any event, Ben Bradlee realized the story had already been published, and that Michael Canfield was trying to sell it to other publications while trying to sell it to The Washington Post. Ben Bradlee, however, was unjustified in turning it down. The FBI was intent on characterizing OSWALD as a loner, and not part of a broader conspiracy which it failed to detect. It could not be relied upon to be objective. In early 1979 Ben Bradlee was asked why he believed the FBI. In December 1981 he replied:

You people die hard. If you believe in various conspiracies, as you plainly do, there is nothing I can say to convince you. I can only tell you that I did go to the FBI. I did talk to someone who was identified to me by FBI Director Clarence Kelley as the photo interpretation expert. He pointed out magnification of certain features, like ears, that satisfied me that the tramps were not HUNT or STURGIS...

The tramp shots were doctored. No mention of possible doctored of the photographs was made to Ben Bradlee by the FBI. Without taking this into account, at least one set of ears did not match.

Thanks to the FBI, Stern Magazine, Reuters and other publications did not run the story. Klaus Liedke of Stern Magazine contacted the FBI about the tramps shots. The FBI: "In general terms he was advised that the FBI had looked into this matter and determined the individuals were not identical with HUNT and STURGIS." [FBI 62-109060-7150] By the end of 1974, the tramp story had been turned down by The New York Times, The Associated Press and by Mike Wallace and Les Midgley at Sixty Minutes. The Village Voice uncovered "a handwritten note on CBS stationery from Ellen McCloy [the daughter of John J. McCloy] to Les Midgley." Ellen McCloy, who was employed by CBS, was working on a program about the John F. Kennedy assassination. In September 1975 the former Director of the Central Intelligence Agency William Colby described a meeting he had with Dan Rather and Les Midgley: "He referred to the work of Mark Lane in this field and I referred to Dick Gregory's paranoia on the subject of CIA connections with the Kennedy death." In February 1975 Clarence Kelley and Gordon Shankin visited the Texas School Book Depository. Kelley told the press that the FBI possessed no evidence that HUNT was at the scene of the Kennedy assassination. [Dallas Times Herald 2.13.75]

PROFESSOR RAINER KNUSSMANN'S PHOTOGRAPHIC ANALYSIS

In January 1975 a source at Stern magazine informed the CIA that the publication was working on the tramp shot story:

To buttress this conjecture, Stern hired Professor Rainer Knusmann of the Anthropological Institute at Hamburg University, to do a 'scientific' comparison of the Dallas photographs with stock shots of HUNT and STURGIS. The total report is 37 pages, of which only the introduction and conclusion were provided. The translation commences with page 35: 'The given question about the identity of STURGIS and HUNT with the two designated persons on the Death Site pictures can only be answered clearly to the extent that a firm identity denial is not possible from the photographic documentation placed at my disposal. In this connection there is a noticeable discrepancy in the amount of ear protrusion, in the photographs of the man who could be HUNT which, however, fails by far to be sufficient for a sure negative identification. In all, the resemblance analysis with respect to both persons led to a clear majority of positive resemblance factors, which above all for STURGIS were in part very convincing since it concerned a clearly established similarity in relatively rare distinguishing marks. Because of the indifferent quality of the source photographs which handicaps a scientific comparison, and because of unsimilarities which cropped up in the course of the analysis - though these were nearly all of a minor nature - the total result is not adequate for the establishment of an absolutely sure identity. Such a result from photo materials such as were furnished me is in principle very difficult to achieve. The symptoms of identity never-the-less are so convincing that it must be advised in any case that the material be pursued further. A successful identity establishment could truly be expected if STURGIS and HUNT photographs, which should be obtainable, were prepared showing the Subjects from the same head angle and under similar lighting as in the Death Site photographs.

The probable identity from the resemblance analysis is given a special weight because the margin of error is significantly reduced when both HUNT and STURGIS are analyzed in combination. This is on the common sense ground that while an accidental resemblance between HUNT or STURGIS on the one side, and one of the persons shown in the Death

Site pictures would be understandable, there is a very narrow probability that STURGIS accidentally resembles one, and HUNT accidentally the other of both persons shown in the Death Site photographs. Possibly what is finally expected of me is a precise probability quotient for the possible identity of STURGIS and HUNT with the questioned persons on the Death Site pictures. Such a numerical probability estimate can certainly be produced by mathematics, but would show false exactness. However, to give a preliminary examination, I estimate that the positive resemblance between STURGIS and the questioned person #1 in the Death Site photographs has a probability of 0.1 (10% error, that is 90% for identity). The similar value for HUNT being person #2, I estimate at 0.3 (that is a 30% chance of error and 70% probability of identity). From this a theoretical error probability for the combined results figures at only 0.03 (that is 3%, therefore, 97% probability). In closing I should like to assure you that in preparation of this evaluation I have taken pains to work according to the best conscience and knowledge without any political presumptions. A Magdelona Radziwill was mentioned in a book titled The Secret War Against the Jews by J. Loftus and J. Arons which was published in 1994:

A top secret interrogation of a White Russian Nazi by General George Patton's intelligence chief names a Bishop Cikota as a 'Nazi agent' inside the Vatican. Princess Magdelona Radziwell is named in the same intelligence files as the corresponding Nazi agent in Switzerland. Her relative, Prince Radziwell, later surfaced as a petitioner to retrieve war German assets of Dulles's clients that had been seized by the United States.

In 1996 Professor Knuessmann was a Consulting Editor of the international journal Collegium Antropologicum, which was published by the Croatian Anthropological Society.

DICK GREGORY GETS THE TRAMP SHOTS NATIONAL PUBLICITY

In January 1975 comedian Dick Gregory was contacted. He was given the comparison shots, and the work to date on the links between the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and HUNT and STURGIS. Dick Gregory held a press conference on February 5, 1975, during which he displayed the tramp shots and the photographs of HUNT and STURGIS. On February 16, 1975, about one week after Dick Gregory's press conference, Jacks Beers died of a heart attack. Mrs. Beers related that he had a long history of heart problems, including a heart attack in late November 1963. On March 8, 1975, the Rockefeller Commission agreed to investigate the tramps. After the Rockefeller Commission issued a press release, the tramps became the front page story in many newspapers. Headlines read:

Rockefeller Panel to Probe CIA Role in JFK Death - Gregory Charges Founded on Photographs.

Washington - The Rockefeller Commission on the CIA is looking into allegations that the CIA was somehow involved in the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963, according to informed sources close to its investigation. One focus of the commission's inquiry is the recent assertion of a group headed by Dick Gregory, comedian and civil rights activist, that E. HOWARD HUNT Jr. was seized by Dallas police near the Kennedy assassination site within minutes of the shooting...The Gregory groups charge is founded on photographs published last year in underground newspapers and elsewhere purporting to show HUNT and FRANK A. STURGIS, another Watergate burglar, being led by the police from a grassy knoll across from the Texas School Book Depository. [The Los Angeles Times Herald Examiner 3.9.75]

The wire services reported: "Comedian and political activist Dick Gregory flew to Washington Thursday to deliver documents to the Rockefeller Commission..." The New York Times ran two stories: "Three Men Studied in Kennedy Assassination Photographs" which stated that the Rockefeller Commission was going to do a height study and "Rockefeller Unit Said to Check Report of CIA Link to Kennedy Assassination." HUNT wrote this in American Spy:

But even that did not end the continuing harassment. Early in 1975, political activist Dick Gregory was given a series of photographs of the Dallas tramps together with several of Frank Sturgis and myself. In press conferences and talk shows, Gregory professed to see unmistakable similarity between the tramp photos and those of Sturgis and Hunt, and pressed the photographs upon the Rockefeller Commission with demands for satisfaction.

Shortly thereafter, in a timing sequence not entirely coincidental, a book by Alan Weberman and Michael Canfield was published, Coup d'Etat in America, which relied heavily on a presumptive likeness of Sturgis and myself to the so-called Dallas tramps. The defamatory intent of the book was so clear that I sued the authors and publisher of the book for libel. The publishing company went out of business, and the publisher returned to his native Nigeria. Litigation against the two authors is active to this day.

HUNT dropped the lawsuit two days before it was to come to trial.

3 Men Studied in Kennedy Assassination Photos

Special to The New York Times

DALLAS, May 11 — Photographs of three shabbily dressed men being led by the police from the scene of the assassination of President Kennedy are being re-examined by a photographic expert for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The expert was sent here from Washington on orders from the Rockefeller Commission, which is investigating involvement in domestic affairs, according to Herb Grubert, an assistant special agent of the bureau.

The pictures, mostly taken by newsmen covering the assassination in 1963, show three men who were temporarily detained by the police who converged on the assassination site after the shots that killed the President.

Conspiracy theorists contend that two of the men have strong resemblances to E. Howard Hunt Jr. and Frank A. Sturgis, convicted in the Watergate break-in both of whom had associations with the C.I.A.

The unidentified expert took

original negatives of the controversial pictures this week and reconstructed the manner in which the pictures were taken on Nov. 22, 1963, even down to the distance from the ground the person who took the pictures held his camera, explained Mr. Grubert.

Then, the Washington-based expert took new photographs from the exact spots the original pictures were snapped.

By duplicating the distances and angles and by locating reference points that appear in both the 1963 photos and the new pictures, he will be able to compute heights and weights of the three men who were released by the Dallas police in 1963. He will also be able to obtain details of bone structure and other individual traits by comparative analysis, Mr. Grubert said.

Once computed, the new data will be compared with existing information about Mr. Hunt and Mr. Sturgis as they were in 1963.

In all, six different photographs of the three mysterious "vagrants" are being analyzed by the F.B.I. for the Rockefeller Commission.

Rockefeller Unit Said to Check Report Of C.I.A. Link to Kennedy Assassination

By JOHN M. CREWDSON

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, March 7—The Rockefeller commission on the Central Intelligence Agency, is looking into allegations that the C.I.A. was somehow involved in the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963, according to informed sources close to its investigation.

One focus of the commission's inquiry, the sources said, is the recent assertion of a group headed by Dick Gregory, the comedian, and civil rights activist, that E. Howard Hunt Jr. was seized by the Dallas police near the Kennedy assassination site within minutes of the shooting.

Mr. Hunt, convicted two years ago of conspiring to carry out the Watergate bugging plot, was a clandestine political officer for the C.I.A. at the time President Kennedy was murdered.

The Gregory group's charge is founded on photographs published last year in underground newspapers and elsewhere purporting to show Mr. Hunt and the Rockefeller commission, reportedly denied that he was in Dallas at the time of the assassination or that he knew Mr. Sturgis then.

Employed by C.I.A.

Mr. Sturgis reportedly was employed by the C.I.A. as an operative in the Miami area around the time of the agency-inspired Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in 1961.

The school book depository was identified in the final report of the Warren Commission, which investigated the Kennedy assassination, as the location from which Lee Harvey Oswald fired the shots that killed President Kennedy and wounded John B. Connally, then Governor of Texas, as they passed by in a motorcade.

Davis W. Belin, the executive director of the panel headed by Vice President Rockefeller, the Presidential commission on C.I.A. activities within the United States, declined today to comment on specific areas of the panel's inquiry or on any tentative conclusions it might have reached.

the Rockefeller commission is limited by its charter to investigate the C.I.A.'s activities within the United States and is thus excluded from any inquiry into the agency's covert activities abroad.

Mr. Belin, an Iowa lawyer who served as a counsel to the Warren Commission, said that although it was not his intention to "reopen the entire investigation of the assassination" of President Kennedy, "the allegation has been made that the C.I.A., and particularly Mr. Hunt, was in Dallas on 22 Nov. 1963."

After leaving the Warren Commission, Mr. Belin wrote a book analyzing its work entitled, "You Are the Jury," supporting the conclusion that Oswald was the lone killer of both President Kennedy and J. D. Tippit, a Dallas police officer slain shortly afterward outside a movie theater.

Alde's Assessment

Asked for a personal assessment of any evidence gathered by the Rockefeller commission hearing on a possible C.I.A.

When the media contacted HUNT and STURGIS about these allegations, HUNT denied having been in Dallas:

Accusations made by Dick Gregory and others connecting me to the murder of President John Kennedy are totally without foundation. They constitute a false and vicious libel. These charges are bizarre products of sick minds. The political Left has never been able, or willing, to accept the fact that Kennedy's assassin was a man of the Left; thus the Leftist preoccupation with finding an alternate assassin. Dick Gregory's smear represents the ultimate in slander and innuendo customarily characterized as McCarthyism. The Rockefeller and other investigative committees will probably examine Gregory's charges as indeed they should. For my part I would welcome a through high-level investigation and a full airing of all relevant findings. Only if this takes place will I have any hope of clearing my name and living free from the threats made against my life already made by neurotics. I was not in Dallas on November 22, 1963; in fact I never visited Dallas until eight years later. I did not meet FRANK STURGIS until 1972, nine years after we were allegedly together in Dallas. I was not in Mexico in 1963, and I did not meet LEE HARVEY OSWALD there or at any other place or time. Moreover I shared the nations grief over the murder of our President...Continued publicity given to these reckless charges could stimulate some yet-unpublicized maniac into violent action against me and my family. [RCD 2.5.75]

CANFIELD GETS STURGIS' REACTION

STURGIS would neither confirm nor deny his presence in Dallas that day. Michael Canfield called STURGIS to get his reaction to the story. STURGIS did not know where Dick Gregory had gotten his information or Michael Canfield's connection to this researcher. STURGIS acknowledged:

Yeah, I saw the pictures. He's claiming that we were there in disguise and he swears that guy is me and hey, who knows? So I don't affirm or deny it...I doubt they've got any evidence. Really, I think they're just blowing smoke. I think that. Mike, between you and me, I think Dick Gregory is of the radical Left, and I think Dick Gregory and his group are being financed by foreign outsiders in order to put pressure on the CIA. He is using both HOWARD HUNT and myself as a tool for them. I don't think they can stand the idea that OSWALD, who was of the Left, one of their own people, you know, that took the rap, or at least one of the persons that took the rap for killing the President of the United States. He has to prove that HOWARD HUNT was in Dallas on that day and he has to prove I was in Dallas on that day. He's claiming that we're in disguise. O.K. Well, you know, you've got to have more proof than that, than just a picture. Because pictures really don't mean anything. D'you know? They don't mean a damn thing.

Note how STURGIS did not deny he was one of the tramps: "Who knows?" Secondly he "doubts" and "thinks" Dick Gregory has no other evidence. If he were innocent, he would have known Dick Gregory had no evidence. When STURGIS said "took the rap," rather than "was guilty of," the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, he made a slip and realized it, so he tried to obscure his error with the next sentence which made little sense: "At least one of the persons who took the rap." Who else besides OSWALD took the rap for the assassination of President John F. Kennedy? STURGIS stated that Dick Gregory "had to prove I was in Dallas that day." He was saying that all Dick Gregory had to prove was his presence in Dallas. Numerous people were also in Dallas that day and did not take part in the assassination.

THE ITCHY TRIGGER FINGER

STURGIS confided in Michael Canfield:

Well, let me speak off the record, Mike. HOWARD and I are both concerned about it, you know what I mean? In more ways than one, because you know you can get some damn kookie guy come down here wanna kill him, kill me. You know. This is a terrible accusation he's made. You know, that we had something to do with killing the most powerful man in the world. It's a terrible thing to do. And I hope he can prove these accusations, because if he can't, he's gonna have problems. He'll have legal problems. But evidently he don't care. I'm hoping it will just die away, personally, you know. Like I told the press, you know, let the dead alone, let them be. It's a helluva mistake. He may be turning, you know, we're talking off the record, you know, but he may be digging up things that other people may not want dug up. You know what I mean? Well, let's say if there was a conspiracy, right? And people like him going around the country, not the fact that he's accusing HOWARD and me and the CIA, but let's say that other people, others in, you know, suppose he's wrong, okay, that's one thing. He may stumble across something or somebody, who probably might have been involved in it. And he may decide to go ahead and do something about it. You know, he's big enough stuff that maybe people will get a little itchy about, you know, and give him problems. Well I don't know (if it would be physical) it would be up to, you know, whoever the people are. I don't know. So I think he's wrong, you know, doing what he's doing, I think he should let things lie, you know, leave it alone...

STURGIS also believed that the tramp shots could have triggered a violent reaction in someone. Note how STURGIS referred to President Kennedy as "the President of the United States, the most powerful man in the world." STURGIS was proud to have participated in a world class operation. If he hadn't, how would he have known what things were being dug up, (having nothing to do with HUNT and STURGIS, of course) which might result in the death of Dick Gregory? Whose trigger finger was getting itchy?

THE TRAMP SHOT NEGATIVES

The FBI received orders to contact the photographers who took the tramp shots and obtain negatives. The FBI:

The files of The Dallas Times Herald have been thoroughly searched personally by S.A. Gemberling, and photographs numbered 2, 4, and 5 are believed to have been taken by photographer William Allen who, on November 22, 1963, was working in Dallas on assignment for The Dallas Times Herald, but was on the payroll of UPI. The Dallas Times Herald files do not reflect any photographic negatives identical to the other four photographs described above. On April 14, 1975, The Dallas Times Herald made available two proof sheets, one 4" X 5" positive of each of the three photographs numbered 2, 4, and 5 above, and one 4" X 5" copy of each of the three copy negatives of the three photographs...it was stated the original negative of these three photographs will be available for examination by an FBI representative at any time at The Dallas Times Herald.

The Dallas Times Herald representatives indicated:

It is possible some of the photographs from their files were taken shortly after the assassination, because many individuals were examining them and it is possible some original negatives or photographs may no longer be available.

The FBI contacted The Dallas Morning News and was apprized that:

Jack Beers was a photographer for that newspaper in November 1963 but had died in February 1975. He stated no photographic negative is available at The Dallas Morning News, and that the original negative would likely be in the possession of Mrs. Christine Beers.

When the FBI questioned Mrs. Beers, she explained that the original negatives were in the possession of "some magazine" and she gave the FBI a contact sheet. That accounted for five out of the seven tramp shots. The FBI reported: "It should be noted that of the seven photographs furnished by the Bureau...all have been identified, with the exception of those numbered one and three." Despite extensive research, no FBI documents could be located on the photographs taken by George Smith of the Fort Worth Star Telegram. There was no way to determine if the FBI obtained all of the tramp shots. No reference to the last two tramp shots surfaced in any Freedom of Information Act-retrieved FBI documents. Dorothy Hopper at the Fort Worth Star Telegram recounted that she first noticed the tramp shots missing on December 3, 1973. Just before they were stolen someone called and inquired about them. A researcher reported that in 1974 someone entered his home and removed the prints of these two photographs, which he had recently obtained. On May 8, 1975, Earl Golz of the Dallas Morning News reported that the FBI found six of seven disputed photos.

SHANEYFELDT'S PHOTO ANALYSIS FOR ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION

The Rockefeller Commission did not conduct its own investigation of the tramp shots. It did not hire an independent photo analyst. Instead, the Rockefeller Commission used the FBI's report. On April 25, 1975, an investigator for the Rockefeller Commission interviewed S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt and was told "Shaneyfeldt is 'positive' has no reservations about these Dallas persons NOT being HUNT or STURGIS." [SSCIA 157-10003-10001] In late April 1975 Warren Commission veteran S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt telephoned Warren Commission veteran S.A. Robert Gemberling at the Dallas FBI. S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt told him the Rockefeller Commission wanted an on-site height study, as well as the negatives and the cameras with which the tramp shots were originally taken.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD, May 28, 1975

SUBJECT: Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Operations (HUNT Photos)

1. On May 21, 1975, Mr. Tom Brown contacted the Security Analysis Group for copies of photographs of HUNT for use in the DDS&T responding to question #15 of a memorandum by E.H. Knoche, dated May 21, 1975, captioned, "Assassinations, Primarily Castro" for the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Operations General File.

2. On May 27, 1975, Mr. John P. Dempsey gave the attached photographs to the writer, which Mr. Dempsey stated he had received from the Office of Security. Some of the photos are badge type photos apparently recovered by Tom Brown from the HUNT Office of Security file. Also returned were seven large glossy photos showing three individuals apparently under police detention. It is unknown where these photos originated, but they are believed to be the comparison photos for use in answering reference question number 15. It is further surmised that these glossy photos were taken in Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963, attendant to the arrest of three 'box car bums' in connection with the investigation of President Kennedy's assassination. Recently, numerous persons have alleged that HUNT and STURGIS resemble the "bums," thus necessitating the requested DDS & T comparison of the HUNT photograph. DDS & T's conclusions are unknown.

Jerry G. Brown,
Acting Chief,
Security Analysis Group.
[CIA FOIA F81-0351/ D0652]

The CIA's Deputy Directorate of Science and Technology conducted a "physiological comparison" of the HUNT and STURGIS photographs with the tramp photographs. [CIA F81-0351 D0652] Before the CIA sent this photo report to the HSCA, Hal Clark SA/DDS&T, asked Ed Cates, NPIC, to sanitize it.

Two experienced portrait artists and an expert in the field of disguise studied the four photographs of HUNT (1949, 1961, 1968, and 1974). It was concluded that he was an ideal Subject for this sort of analysis for two reasons:

(1) His features are prominent and angular, facilitating identification of key points and measurement of distances and ratios.

(2) his overall appearance varied insignificantly over the 25-year span of the data. These characteristics make positive identification of HUNT from a photograph of good quality highly probable. The physiological character of HUNT can be briefly summed up as: athletic, firm, and assertive with an overall tone of classic leanness. Neither of the two detained men in the Dallas scene had this character. The one with the hat is flaccid, atrophied and passive and has a general tone of deterioration. The hatless one is stocky, has a blocky face and has the overall appearance of a less sophisticated Subject. The unanimous and highly confident judgment of these experts is that neither of the detainees is HUNT.

A similar, but less confident, conclusion was reached concerning STURGIS. This evaluation was performed with only the single snapshot of STURGIS from Newsweek, no other being available; it is believed that a higher confidence judgement concerning STURGIS would have been rendered if the STURGIS snapshot could be dated to the 1963 time frame.

In addition to the basic comparative differences observed, the disguise specialist, (with almost 25 years experience) noted:

(1) It would be physically impossible to reduce the height of a 5' 10 ½" man to the shorter man in the photograph.

(2) Overall facial shapes could not be effectively changed with the use of cosmetic make-up.

(3) Putty or facial masks could not be used to alter features because of the animation displayed between the various photographs. Three experienced photogrametrists who have previously worked on identification problems analyzed the four photographs of HUNT (1949, 1961, 1968, and 1974) and made measurements on non-changing facial distances. The dimensions on the known photographs of HUNT were compared with the two detained men in the Dallas scene and a unanimous and confident judgement was made that neither of these two men could be HUNT. A similar analysis was made between the Newsweek photograph of STURGIS. However, because of the quality of the Newsweek portrait, the data is inconclusive. The physiological and photogrammetric analysis were supplemented by visual comparison of all the photographs imagery by experienced imagery interpreters. In the conduct of this examination, steps were taken to insure that:

(1) All Subjects were magnified to the same scale, using the distances between the eyes and mouth as a standard.

(2) Contrast and texture differences between images were minimized during the scaling process (continuous tone photographs were employed wherever possible).

(3) Angular comparisons were made to offset errors incident with different head angles and tilts. From his visual comparison it was concluded that neither of the two men in the Dallas scene is HUNT, nor is STURGIS (utilizing the only photograph we have available, i.e. the Newsweek photograph) one of the two men in the Dallas scene.

Why did the CIA have only one photograph of STURGIS? This was an agency with a billion dollar budget. Was the CIA reluctant to obtain better shots because it might have had to conclude the tramp was STURGIS? S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt was first brought into the tramp shot investigation by FBI Director Clarence Kelley when he was asked to determine whether the CHRIST tramp and Thomas Arthur Vallee were identical. As stated, he received the Downing Memorandum on the HUNT and STURGIS comparison to the tramps. When questioned in HUNT v. WEBERMAN, however, Shaneyfeldt said he was unaware of the tramp photographs until the Rockefeller Commission brought them to his attention in April 1975. Attorney Marvin Miller asked: "So, to your knowledge, to your recollection now, it was the first time anybody had asked you to do any work on these particular photographs?" He responded: "That's the, to the best of my recollection, yes." S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt lied to conceal his predisposition towards a particular conclusion. Like C. F. Downing, Shaneyfeldt was not about to discredit his work for the Warren Commission. The Downing report was a cue that the Director wanted a negative report. Not only Shaneyfeldt's veracity at risk, but there were serious questions about his qualifications as a photo analyst. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt:

I started with the FBI in 1940 as a photographer, having been a photographer with the newspapers in the Midwest prior to that time. I worked in photographic work with the FBI from 1940 to 1948, at which time I was transferred to the FBI Laboratory as a forensic photographer taking photographs of evidence being examined by document examiners and other experts in the laboratory, firearms people and various others; making of photomicrographs, evidence-type photographs. And, during this period, except for 19-, see I was in the Service in 1945 for a year and, as a result of that, I used the GI Bill to get a degree to become a Special Agent. Went to Southeastern University in Washington, D.C., got an accounting degree, applied for a job as Special Agent, and was appointed Special Agent in 1951. I was, after agent training, assigned to the Detroit FBI office as an investigator for approximately one year. After returning...I was transferred back to the Laboratory to be trained as a document examiner. This training covered about three years...and from 1955 until my retirement in 1975, I was a fully qualified document examiner. Because of my photographic experience, I also did photo-related examinations, comparison of photographs, identification with various examiners, various photo-related investigations. During this period of time that I was a document examiner, I was also doing photographic examinations and testifying in court.

Lyndal Shaneyfeldt was a document examiner, not a photo analyst. Self-educated in the art of photography, he held no college or university degree or any official FBI documentation in photography or photo analysis. Attorney Marvin Miller called his background in photography "on the job training." In the Alger Hiss case, S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt identified the camera that took the "pumpkin pictures." S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt was one of the two FBI agents allowed to testify by the Justice Department at the trial of Clay Shaw in New Orleans.

Memorandum For The Record: February 6, 1969
Subject, Lyndal L. SHANEYFELDT #363001-1152 (ser. 2)
Reference: Washington Star clipping dated January 25, 1969

1. Subject, a former FBI agent and photo expert, has been subpoenaed by Garrison as a witness at the Clay Shaw trial in New Orleans.
2. Subject was granted continuing liaison clearances in December 1964, August 1962, April 1968 and August 1968 as the requests of TSD. His services were needed for coordinating technical skills with respect to photo comparisons.

ROBERT OLSEN'S PHOTO ANALYSIS

In his deposition in HUNT V. WEBERMAN, Lyndal Shaneyfeldt testified that he did his first photo analysis after the FBI received two letters from Rockefeller Commission Senior Counsel, Robert B. Olsen, one dated April 2, 1975, and the other April 5, 1975.

Robert B. Olsen was already convinced the tramps were not HUNT and STURGIS:

A comparison was first made by Rockefeller Commission staff members, none of whom are photo identification experts. Even as non-experts, however, it appeared to the staff members that there was, at best, only a superficial resemblance between the Dallas 'derelicts' and HUNT and STURGIS. The derelict resembling HUNT appeared to be substantially older and smaller than HUNT. The derelict allegedly resembling STURGIS appeared to be thinner than STURGIS and to have facial features and hair markedly different from those of STURGIS. The witnesses who testified to the 'striking resemblance' were not shown to have any qualifications in photo identification beyond that possessed by the average layman...The photographs of the derelicts in Dallas have been displayed in various newspapers in the United States, on national television programs, and in the April 28, 1975, issue of Newsweek Magazine. No witnesses offered testimony to the Commission or its staff to the effect that either of the derelicts was personally known to be HUNT or STURGIS; and no qualified expert was offered to make such an identification.

After S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt's report was given to the Rockefeller Commission, Chief Counsel David Belin asked the Department Of Justice to "make available to us, for interviewing, the Bureau personnel who compared the photographs and reached the conclusion embodied in the report. Preliminary to such interviews, we would like to have a detailed description of the methods, processes and equipment used in making the comparisons." The FBI responded: "Portions of this study were made with a low-powered magnifier to permit detailed study." [RCD Belin to Wilderotter 3.7.75] S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt's report was released circa July 1975 and his determination that the tramps were neither HUNT nor STURGIS was widely publicized. Bernard Fensterwald commented that the Rockefeller Commission examined the tramp shots because they were easily refuted. S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt's analysis "involved visual comparison and study of the facial characteristics and contours of the individuals in the questioned and known photographs, including a comparison of the contours of the ears, noses, hairlines, chins and all other visible facial features." The Rockefeller Commission concluded:

While the 'derelicts' were found in a boxcar not far from the assassination scene, that fact cannot form the basis for drawing any inference of involvement in the assassination. Neither can such an inference be drawn from the fact that the derelicts were relatively clean-shaven and showed signs of having had recent haircuts. The Commission believes that it is not uncommon for derelicts to shave and to receive haircuts, especially at such places as barber colleges, jails, and missions. In view of the absence of any credible evidence tending to identify HUNT or STURGIS with the 'derelicts' in question, or otherwise to establish the presence of HUNT or STURGIS in Dallas on November 22, 1963, the Commission finds that it is unnecessary to consider the allegations that other persons participated in the assassination. If there were other participants in the assassination, no evidence was found that would connect them in any way with the CIA...For the reasons expressed above the Commission concludes it found no evidence of CIA involvement in the assassination of President Kennedy. The products of the investigation of the Commission staff, however, will remain with the official records of the Commission.

Marina Oswald told this researcher: "David Belin is a Judas. He sold out his country. And that's the crime itself." The investigators for the Rockefeller Commission detected a superficial resemblance between the Dallas 'derelicts' and HUNT and STURGIS. However superficial, it was a resemblance. Why didn't the Rockefeller Commission investigators realize that even if the tramps slightly resembled HUNT and STURGIS, when this was put together with HUNT and STURGIS' backgrounds and their hatred for Kennedy, it meant that even if they left the slightest, most superficial traces of their presence at a crime of this magnitude, it meant that they were there. What prevented them from seeing the truth was a predisposition against something of this nature being true, because if one believes that coup d'etats do not happen in a country like the United States of America, you are not going to believe the tramps are HUNT and STURGIS. The implications of placing HUNT and STURGIS on the scene of the Kennedy assassination would mean the disbandment of the CIA, something the establishment could not accept.

The next photo study of the tramp shots was conducted by the HSCA. Clyde C. Snow headed the HSCA's investigation. Clyde C. Snow: "I guess you can say I was in charge of it. I had some other anthropologists working with me on that." Clyde Snow had received his B.S. in zoology from Eastern New Mexico University in 1950, an M.S. in zoology from Texas Tech University in 1955, and a Ph.D. in physical anthropology from the University of Arizona in 1967. He was Chief of the Physical Anthropology Division of the Federal Aeronautics Administration, Civil Aeromedical Institute. Clyde Snow was a forensic anthropologist who examined human remains, not a photo analyst. In 1985 he was sent to Paraguay by the Simon Weisenthal Center to examine the remains of Nazi war criminal Dr. Joseph Mengele. [Posner, Mengele, p320] Clyde Snow stated: "That's one of the things we do. Forensically we examine human skeletal remains. But we are consulted quite frequently in comparing photographs of people, for example, suspects in bank robberies. We're not just skeletal people. We do a lot of work in the variations of living people." [see HSCA V4 p381] In February 1992, Dr. Clyde Snow appeared on the national news program 60 Minutes and discussed Iraqi war crimes in Kurdistan. A few weeks later, Clyde Snow went to Bolivia in search of the remains of the Sundance Kid. Next, he was in Bosnia, examining remains.

Clyde Snow was not a photo analyst. The HSCA did hire photo analysts: Robert R. Hunt, a Professor of Optical Sciences at the University of Arizona who worked as a consultant to the Committee, was a member of the American Society of Photogrammetry. The HSCA did not use IDEB Digital Vidicon Scanning System (DVSS) and the Comtal Vision in its analysis, although this technology was available to it. These techniques involved processing categorization according to the Subject's look angle. Comparisons are done both visually and mathematically using photogrammetry techniques. [CIA Memo from Dr. David L. Gifford, Chief, Interactive Digital Exploitation Branch APSD/TSG/NPIC 12.15.78]

An April 10, 1978, HSCA Outside Contact Report indicated a telephone call was initiated by HSCA employee Michael Goldsmith regarding Clyde C. Snow: "Summary of contact: regarding consulting work as forensic ID specialist. He's interested. Suggested we contact the Federal Aeronautics Administration Air Surgeon to get approval. That way there would be no expense for HSCA." [HSCA 180-1007-410425] Clyde Snow was originally asked by the HSCA to "reconstruct a 3-D model of President Kennedy's head from 2-D photographs and X-rays." Clyde C. Snow told this researcher: "They called me. My guess is that they may have talked to some people over at the Smithsonian. At that time, Doctor Larry Angel, and T. Dale Stewart, were the Smithsonian's physical anthropologists. Traditionally, they had done the forensic work for the FBI. I never found out for sure, but I think that was it. They could have gotten it from other sources. At that time I was fairly well-known."

ANTHROPOLOGISTS AND THE CIA

A report dated January 1967 by the Committee on Research Problems and Ethics of the American Anthropological Association stated that in many parts of the world, American anthropologists were believed to be engaged in intelligence activities. Members of the Association reported that CIA agents had posed as anthropologists, or used anthropological research as a cover. Qualified anthropologists were hired by the CIA for intelligence work either directly or through a roster of CIA fronts. [Donner, Frank Age of Surveillance p161]

Clyde C. Snow was asked if the CIA Domestic Contacts Division had ever debriefed him. He stated:

The only time I've been - during the HSCA investigation I went over to the CIA building there and they gave me a stack of photographs of HOWARD HUNT. That was arranged by the HSCA. I had quite a collection. I have never had any direct CIA contact on anything involving any of my missions. I know it used to be very common for the CIA to debrief people who came back from various places. I almost felt neglected, but that's never happened to me.

Snow is a Forensic anthropologist, has helped investigate many massacres and political killings. Snow has worked extensively with Americas Watch and other human rights groups. In the 1980's he went to Argentina to exhume mass graves filled with innocent civilians who had been killed by government death squads during the war. He has worked in Argentina, Guatemala, Ethiopia, Philippines, Croatia and in former Yugoslavia, near Ovcar. Snow still teaches at the University of Oklahoma and sometimes lectures to Forensic Science organizations and Law Enforcement personnel. Snow worked in Guatemala where CIA has always had an interest. When thousands of pages of documents regarding the CIA's complicity in Latin American death squads were released Snow was called upon to investigate. There is no doubt in my mind that Clyde lied to me when he said the Domestic Contacts Division of the CIA overlooked him. The Agency has an interest in anything to do with Guatemala” Anthropologists, led by Clyde Snow, dug away at a village site. The Guatemala Forensic Anthropology Team, working under the authority of the United Nations Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA), will begin gathering evidence from a remote mass grave site in Guatemala. Initial training was directed by Clyde Snow, Ph.D. (Norman, Oklahoma), internationally known forensic anthropologist who has worked in Chili, El Salvador, Argentina, Guatemala, and Bosnia, and is currently investigating human rights abuses in the Congo.” In 1991, Snow was appointed by President George Bush to the United Nations Human Rights Commission, held in Geneva, Switzerland.

Clyde Snow testified before the HSCA:

Genzman: What were the issues before the panel of anthropologists?
[Snow, Ellis Kerley and Stephen Rosen, Department of Anthropology, University of Maryland]

Snow: We were asked, again using the best available information and materials, to metrically and morphologically compare these photographs with those of the tramps to see whether or not any of these individuals could be identified as one or more of the tramps.

Fithian: It is my understanding that the CIA and the FBI conducted their own analyses of the tramp photographs that attempt to identify the individuals. Did you get into that?

Snow: We didn't participate in either of those analyses. However, after being called as consultants to this committee, we were furnished copies of the reports of the CIA and FBI analysis.

Fithian: Did you then study those reports?

Snow: Yes, we have looked them over and we found that although they varied in method from our approach, to some extent, with some overlapping, they came to the same conclusions.

Edgar: Do we have any evidence of the identities of the three tramps?

Genzman: Not to my knowledge, Mr. Edgar. There is an on-going staff project.

Once the anthropologists received the CIA and the FBI's reports on the tramps they realized that a higher scientific authority had already made a determination on their identity. They would be risking their careers by going up against these two prestigious institutions. Again, the implications of their findings had to be taken into consideration. A positive finding would have decimated the Warren Commission and the Rockefeller in one swift blow. Who are these men to challenge the findings of numerous employees of the federal government? The photo study should have been conducted overseas, in a politically different environment. When this was done, by Stern Magazine, a positive match was obtained.

ANALYSIS: CHRIST COMPARISON SHOTS OSWALD/CHRIST

CHRIST, out of disguise, did not look anything at all like OSWALD..

OSWALD/CHRIST

Compare Oswald to the CHRIST tramp. Could the CHRIST tramp have been mistaken for OSWALD if he were standing in a sixth floor window and someone tried to identify him from the street? When Marguerite Oswald was shown a photograph of the CHRIST tramp, she told this researcher: "That looks just like my son, LEE." She would not say anything more at the time because we did not have the funds to pay her for an interview.

CHRIST/CHRIST TRAMP

The CIA gave Clyde Snow an undated photograph of CHRIST. The CIA's photograph of CHRIST looked like it was taken much later than 1963. It was a front view. The configuration of CHRIST'S ear was not visible in the CIA shot, nor was the profile of his nose. In 1994 the CIA released a better photograph of CHRIST.

Clyde Snow stated that "of the three men who have been proposed as tramp A, the resemblance between the latter and CHRIST is the least impressive. As noted previously, they diverge in facial index values by an average of 7.0 points." This was false. Clyde Snow compared the CHRIST tramp to Thomas Arthur Valle and STURGIS. He found the resemblance to STURGIS the least impressive with an 8.6 divergence. Next came CHRIST with 7.0 divergence, and then Thomas Arthur Valle, with a 4.0 divergence. Little space was devoted to CHRIST in the HSCA Report, and it did not include even a brief biography. The HSCA described HUNT as a "principal figure in the Watergate burglaries and a CIA employee at the time of the Kennedy assassination." STURGIS was described as a "Watergate burglar," but nothing was said of CHRIST. He was immediately ruled out as the tramp:

CHRIST'S face is relatively long and narrow; Tramp A's is short and broad. This length difference is especially expressed in the lower face, with CHRIST'S chin and upper lip being very long when compared to the tramp's. CHRIST'S nose is also much longer, relative to its breadth. Differences in ear structure are also striking. In the tramp, the lobes are attached, whereas in CHRIST, the lobes are 'welded' - that is they attach to the side of the cheek with no discernible lobe at all. The antihelix of the ear (the elevated ridge just in front of, and parallel to, the outer margin of the ear) is well developed in Tramp A, but very poorly developed in CHRIST.

ROBERT GENNA AN INDEPENDENT PHOTO ANALYSIS

In 1991 Attorney Jeremiah Gutman sent the negatives of CHRIST and the CHRIST tramp to two forensic photo analysts without mentioning the purpose or reason. To do this, the tramp shot was cropped so that only the outline of Tramp A was visible - this eliminated the other tramps and the Texas School Book Depository. Robert Genna was one of the photo analysts. Robert Genna was Assistant Chief of the Suffolk County, New York, Crime Laboratory. He had a B.S. in forensic science since 1975, and an M.S. in forensic science since 1987, from the John Jay College of Criminal Justice. He was a member of the American Academy of Forensic Science. He stated:

The three negatives submitted for examination and comparison were developed and made into print 8" X 10" photographs to assist in the analysis. The following facial characteristics were noted in all photographs, and, in my opinion, are significant: The nose has a characteristic slope that terminates into a distinctive point. The nostrils are elongated as a result of the sloping nose. The opening in the right ear has a geometrical shape consistent in all photographs. Furthermore the ear lobe in all photographs is continuous and is attached to the face. Although the hair length differs, the hairline appears to be consistent both horizontally and vertically with respect to the face line. Finally and most significantly, there is a skin blemish on the right cheek noted in all three photographs. This blemish appears located in the same area of all the photographs. The blemish is located by fixing a horizontal parallel line along the right nostril following front to rear. Furthermore, the blemish can be located by fixing a vertical parallel line along the hairline, on the right side of the face, following top to bottom. As a result of the above-listed characteristics, specifically the skin blemish, it is my opinion that the same person appears in all of the submitted photographs.

Robert Genna's contention that CHRIST'S earlobe and the CHRIST-tramp earlobe is continuous and attached to the face contradicts the finding of Clyde Snow that, "In the tramp the lobes are attached, whereas in CHRIST, the lobes are welded - they attach to the side of the cheek with no discernible lobe at all." The Robert Genna report affirmed: "Finally, and most significantly, there is a skin blemish on the right cheek noted in all three photographs." There was a problem with this blemish. To show the tramp and CHRIST from the same angle, the photo analyst flipped the negative of the tramp so that both figures would be facing the same direction. By doing so, he moved the mole visible in P1 and P2 from the left side of the tramp's face to the right side. The photo analyst measured this mole, and it happened to be in the same place as a mole on the right side of CHRIST'S face. He based part of his conclusion on this finding. In the CIA HSCA shot of CHRIST, a blemish was present in the same position on CHRIST as on the left cheek of the tramp. This blemish was very difficult to miss. Why the right-cheek mole was there is a mystery, although it is possible for someone to have a mole on both cheeks.

Dennis Fahey also did a photo analysis. Dennis Fahey was Executive Vice President of Physical Evidence Consultants, Inc. of Manasquan, New Jersey. He has expertise in the field of physical evidence examination. From 1984 to 1990 he worked for a firm that dealt in anti-terrorism and hostage negotiations. From 1975 to 1982 Dennis Fahey was a police officer in charge of Photography and Identification. In 1970 and 1971 Dennis Fahey was a Narcotics Squad Officer. He was a member of the Evidence Photographers Council and was awarded the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster during his tour of duty in Vietnam.

Dennis Fahey:

As per your request, an examination of three (3) 8" X 10" black and white negatives were made. Three contact prints were made from the original negatives obtained from your office. These prints have been marked A, B, and C. Photograph A depicts a white male wearing sunglasses with a pipe in his mouth. The Subject has short, cropped hair and appears to be in an airport setting. Photograph B is an enlargement of photograph A depicting the previously mentioned white male. Photograph C depicts a white male in a street setting. It is initially apparent in photograph C that there is a weight difference between the two Subjects. Further, there is a time sequence delay in the photographs. This is obvious from the hair style and the hair length. Given those conditions, there are striking similarities in the facial features of both Subject A and C. Upon examining the hairline, you will note that there is a high recessing forehead on the right-hand side. This is seen in both photographs. The shape of the ears are similar in both of these photographs. We are unable to make a determination of the eyes due to the presence of sunglasses in photograph A. The forehead shape and size are again similar between the two photographs. The nose and nostrils have similar characteristics. The Subject in both photographs has a long, thin jawline. Although the lips are turned up in photograph A, one can see that the lips in photograph A and C are similar that being long lips. Examination under magnification indicates a mole of some type located on the right upper cheek of both photographs A and C. As previously mentioned, there is a time delay between the taking of photograph A and C. Even given this time delay, both Subjects have strikingly similar characteristics. Given those physical attributes as described and including the apparent mole as seen in all three (3) photographs, I would conclude that Subject A and C appear to be one in the same.

Dennis Fahey relied less on the blemish in reaching his conclusions. Dennis Fahey was told the tramp shot negative had been inadvertently flipped and he was given the CIA CHRIST photograph. He stated it was of little value since it was a frontal shot. Dennis Fahey believed there was a "time sequence delay" between the two photographs because of a weight difference in the two men. There was a lapse of seven months between the photographs. CHRIST was released in April 1963, and was photographed in Dealey Plaza in November 1963. In 1956 Christ described himself as 185 pounds and 6' 0" tall. It should be noted that when CHRIST was arrested in Havana he weighed 200 pounds. The U.S. Embassy provided him with food until it closed in January 1961. He would have had to have lost weight in prison and regained it by November 22. Dennis Fahey: "The nose and nostrils have similar characteristics." Clyde Snow: "CHRIST'S nose is also much longer, relative to its breadth."

THIS RESEARCHER'S PHOTO ANALYSIS OF THE STURGIS TRAMP DISGUISE

Looked Nordic because he:

- (1) Dyed or bleached his dark hair and eyebrows.
- (2) Straightened his wavy hair.
- (3) Washed his greasy hair and not used 'the greasy kids stuff' that FRANK usually rubbed in his hair. The rest of STURGIS' features were not commonly perceived as Italian: Square jaw, triangular nose.

(4) Held his jaw in to change his chin shape, flexed his nostrils and squinted.

ANALYSIS: STURGIS COMPARISON SHOTS

Photograph of STURGIS taken in January 1959 in Cuba. The photograph of the STURGIS tramp was taken three years later. The configurations of the cartilage of the inner-ear were identical. The contours of the edge of the ear were the same, although the overhead sunlight in Dealey Plaza made it appear that the earlobe of the STURGIS tramp was attached to the side of his cheek. This was not so. Examine the STURGIS tramp's ear in P5. Again, the tramp flexed his nostril held his chin in and squinted to further disguise his appearance.

A 1974 shot of STURGIS discovered by Gaeton Fonzi in the files of United Press International, and was taken under similar lighting conditions to Dealey Plaza. See this photo along with another photo of STURGIS. Gaeton Fonzi discovered a photograph where STURGIS had to squint like the tramp. When compared to the STURGIS tramp in P5, the lips, the eyes, the nose, the mouth and the skull shapes were identical.

LYNDAL SHANEYFELDT AND CLYDE SNOW

S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt never presented a photographic overlay to the Rockefeller Commission. Instead, he based his report on the following evidence:

- (1) The tallest of the three men in the Dallas photographs has the general appearance of a Nordic type and FRANK STURGIS has a very definite Latin appearance.
- (2) FRANK STURGIS has very black wavy hair, and the Nordic individual has light or blonde straighter hair.
- (3) FRANK STURGIS has a rather round face with square chin lines and the Nordic individual has an oval shaped face with a less square or more rounded chin.

Dr. Snow said same thing:

Some of the features that we noticed were that in overall facial configuration terms, STURGIS...is fairly typical of what anthropologists would classify as a Mediterranean type, whereas this individual is more typical of individuals of Northern European extraction. Among other features noted, tramp B has slightly wavy hair, and in all the photographs we have seen Mr. STURGIS hair has a very crisp curl. The hair color of tramp B shows up as rather light, and the STURGIS photographs show him as deeply brunette. STURGIS is a very dark brunette with strongly waved hair; Tramp B has medium dark hair with a slight wave.

THE QUESTION OF DISGUISE

Clyde Snow's and S.A. Shaneyfeldt's descriptions of the tramp's hair differed. Clyde Snow said the STURGIS tramp had medium dark hair with a slight wave. S.A. Shaneyfeldt noted he had light or blonde straighter hair. Both agreed STURGIS had darker hair and this was an important difference. Had it not occurred to these men that STURGIS might have been in disguise? Were they aware processes existed which could change the color and wave of human hair? Gaeton Fonzi of the HSCA wrote:

About the time Schweiker began his investigation, a new book raised again raised the HUNT-STURGIS story. Titled Coup D'Etat in America, it was written by Michael Canfield and Alan J. Weberman, with a forward by Congressman Henry Gonzalez. The book incorporated a novel device. It came with film positive photos of STURGIS and HUNT designed to be overlaid on photographs of the tramps. Superimposed, the images did bear striking similarities.

I would later discover that photo comparison and analysis is an exceptionally non-conclusive technique. The HSCA spent $84,154 on it. Among the photographs we submitted to a panel of experts for analysis and comparison were not only those of STURGIS and HUNT, but also those other individuals who resembled the tramps. The panel concluded that STURGIS and HUNT were not the tramps in the photographs. It did conclude that one of the tramps, the one who resembled HUNT - was most likely a man named Fred Lee Chrisman, a right-wing activist. When those results came in, Committee investigators were sent out to find where Chrisman was on November 22, 1963. They came back with official records and eyewitness affidavits that Chrisman was teaching school in the state of Washington that day. So much for the conclusiveness of photo analysis. What was interesting, however, was the panel's conclusions in its comparison of photos of FRANK STURGIS with those of the tramps. It used two comparative techniques. One it termed 'metric traits' and the other 'morphological differences.' One was a comparison of the measurement of six facial features and their metric relationships; the other was simply whether or not various facial features were shaped the same. The panel concluded the average deviation between the tramp's features and STURGIS' features was "low enough to make it impossible to rule out STURGIS on the basis of metric traits alone." However, the panel said, it was morphological differences that indicated that STURGIS was not the tramp. In other words, STURGIS just didn't look like the tramp. The HSCA staff in charge of the photo panel's work was an attorney named Jane Downey. One day she came to me and asked me to help gather some of the photographs that would be sent to the panel members for analysis. I recall asking her at the time to find out whether or not the experts would take into consideration the possibility that the tramps might be wearing sophisticated disguises. That had to be the case if they were not just real drifters in the wrong place at the wrong time. (As a member of Nixon's White House plumber, HUNT had obtained disguises from the CIA's Technical Services Division and used them on more than one job). Downey promised she would ask the photoanalysts about the use of disguises. Several days later Downey told me she had checked with the photo analysts. 'I'm told there's no way they can tell if disguises were used.' In other words I said, 'If the tramps were in disguise there would be no way that analysts could tell who they really are? 'That's what I'm told.' 'Then why do a photo comparison at all?' I asked. Jane Downey just shrugged her shoulders. 'Well, I said, I hope that point is mentioned in the final report.' 'I'm sure it will be.' It was not. [Fonzi, Last Investigation p75]

HUNT AS A MASTER OF DISGUISE

JUNE 30, 1972

NIXON: This guy is a wiretapper. He's been taping for years, hasn't he?
Haldeman: I don't know. I don't know what he - he's a disguise type guy.

NIXON: And deep cover.

Haldeman: He writes dirty books.

MacGregor: The phrase, the CIA phrase is deep cover operative.

NIXON: Deep cover...Of course he was also with Kennedy and he worked for Johnson.

NIXON: About this fellow HUNT, I mean after all the gun and the wiretapping doesn't bother me a bit with this fellow. He's in the Cuban thing, the whole Cuban business. He's out of the country.

Haldeman: No.

NIXON: Is he back in the country?

Haldeman: He never went out but it doesn't matter. He's a - at least they say, his main stock and trade is he's a master of disguise. (Chuckles) He's someplace under some disguise, although he's supposed to go abroad...

Attorney Marvin Miller asked S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt about the disguise question. He answered:

A. I would not say that I did not consider it, because I did consider it, but from the photograph it would not be possible to tell whether or not some makeup had been applied. You could derive certain conclusions, I believe, but gross things. But I accepted the fact that makeup could be used. I've accepted that all along.

Q. Right, and that could have altered - a dye job would have changed hair color and a straightening job would have changed hair, whether it is curly or flat or how much.

A. Yes, makeup could have altered those, some of those things. As I recall one of the features of the Nordic individual was the nose-to-forehead ratio. With what Hollywood does today, I suppose it's even possible to have changed that, but I saw no evidence. I felt that the photographs did not suggest any evidence of that. But without examination of the individual, himself, strictly from a photograph, I could not rule that out as a possibility, even though I felt that there was no evidence of that present, and the possibility was remote.

Q. All right. Now, you indicated, for example, regarding Mr. HUNT, that when you compared that shorter man's photograph with HUNT'S, you determined there was a marked and significant age difference and that Mr. HUNT had a much younger appearance. Had he done something as light as add a few lines with makeup and a few other things like that, as you say, in the Hollywood bag of tricks these days, that could have affected that. You agree with that, don't you?

A. I don't believe that it could have been done with makeup as simple as you implied.

Q. No, I'm not saying simple; sophisticated makeup, as you described.

A. Could have been, yes.

S.A. Shaneyfeldt acknowledged he could not rule out the possibility of a disguise, and admitted that sophisticated make-up could have made the HUNT tramp look older.

Clyde Snow dismissed tramp disguises since he did not believe that the CIA had access to old shoes in 1963:

All three men are shabbily dressed, befitting their apparent status as vagrants. Tramp A, however, is the better attired, wearing well fitting jeans and a tweed-like sports jacket, although this, judged by 1963 styles, was several years out of date. Tramp B is wearing ill fitting slacks and a double breasted suit coat. Tramp C, from his battered fedora to his worn out shoes, has managed to achieve a sartorial effect similar to what one would expect had he been fired from a cannon through a Salvation Army thrift shop. While such clothing might be a disguise, their footwear seems consistent with their classification as vagrants. All three men are shod in worn, low cut Oxfords that appear to be leather soled. Tramp C's shoes seem to be several sizes too large for him.

Clyde Snow was asked by this researcher, "What's the point, the CIA could obtain old, large shoes?" He said, "Oh yeah, I was talking about the general context." Gordon Liddy was asked:

Q. Do you know whether or not HUNT had any skill and expertise in the use of disguise, or training in disguise?

A. Well, I know that he did in fact, employ disguises on several occasions when he was with me and when he both employed disguises. The disguise was furnished to both of us by a technician from the CIA.

Q. Was HUNT the individual who suggested the employment of that technique, or skill, in the situation in which it was employed?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it he who suggest, for example, or ever suggested to you in operations, that he favored the use of rubber gloves, walkie-talkies and other types of radio equipment in operations of the type in which disguises were employed?

A. Well, I would say that that was sort of a consensus between Mr. HUNT and myself with respect to that. Neither of us wanted those who were working for us in that kind of activity to leave fingerprints.

LYNDAL SHANEYFELDT AND CLYDE SNOW

Lyndal Shaneyfeldt cited a not easily altered trait, chin shape: "STURGIS has a round face, with square chin lines, and the STURGIS tramp has an oval shaped face, with a less square, or more rounded chin." Clyde Snow believed there was a very "strong resemblance" between STURGIS'S chin and the chin of the tramp's: "Chin eminence height: Lower face height deviation = 4." An average deviation of 5 or less may be considered evidence of a strong resemblance. Shaneyfeldt continued:

The ratio of the length of the nose to the height of the forehead from the bridge of the nose to the hairline, shows these measurements approximately equal on STURGIS, as compared to a greater forehead height than nose length on the Nordic individual. This is most obvious in the right profile where the nose and forehead of STURGIS measure approximately 7/8 inch. The nose of the Nordic individual measures 7/8 inch, and the forehead approximately 1 3/8 inches.

The 1/4 inch difference cited by Lyndal Shaneyfeldt could have been attributed to easily accomplished hairline alteration. When Clyde Snow examined the "Forehead height: Total face height," he also found a high deviation (8) due to hairline alteration. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt's tramp report continued:

Some differences in ear contours were noted, with STURGIS' right ear being slightly triangular in shape. STURGIS' left ear has a slight projection along the outer edge about one third down from the top. This projection does not appear in a similar view of the left ear of the Nordic individual. The general left ear contour is more triangular on STURGIS and has a more distinct lobe, while the ear of the Nordic individual is wider at the lower half and has very little lobe.

Clyde Snow found the ears were identical: "Lobe length: Ear Length deviation (0) Ear length: Total face length deviation (3)." Lyndal Shaneyfeldt continued:

Differences were noted in the nose contours and general facial contours between comparable photographs of STURGIS and the tallest individual in the Dallas photographs.

Clyde Snow could not make a nose determination. He tried to measure "Nose breadth: Nose length" but was unable. The overlay supplied an indication of how the noses and facial contours line up. Clyde Snow compared: "Mouth height: Lower face height" and came up with a deviation of (2), indicating the mouths were probably the same; but when he measured "Nose length: Lower face height," the deviation was (7), which indicated the noses were different.

THE FACIAL MEASUREMENTS OF STURGIS & TRAMP IDENTICAL

Clyde Snow concluded the mean metric deviation between STURGIS and the STURGIS tramp was (4), which meant that there was a strong possibility that the two men were identical. Too bad there was no facial recognition software available at this point in time, because FRS relies on metric measurements.

MORPHOLOGY

Clyde Snow found that the following "morphological differences" between STURGIS and the tramp indicated they were different:

(1) Hair: STURGIS is a very dark brunette with strongly waved hair; Tramp B has medium dark hair with a slight wave.

(2) Hairline: Tramp B's hairline shows more bilateral recession than is observed in STURGIS.

(3) Nose: Tramp B has a concave nasal profile with a rounded, slightly bulbous nasal tip. STURGIS' nasal profile is slightly convex and the nasal tip is less bulbous than the tramp's.

(4) Chin: The most striking difference between the two men is the chin form. STURGIS' is massive and square; Tramp B has a small rounded chin.

(5) Ears: Tramp B's ears are considerably more projecting than STURGIS' which are rather close set.

(6) Physique: Tramp B appears to be considerably more linear in body build than STURGIS, who is broad and stocky in physique.

STURGIS was ruled out as being a tramp because of easily alterable morphological traits. What are morphological similarities in relation to human identification? Webster's Dictionary defines morphological, when used in this context, as: "Of, or relating to, points for taking measurements that are present on the skeleton as well as on the living person or the cadaver." Clyde Snow used the word much more loosely. The first morphological trait turned out to be hair color, and the second was hairline, both easily alterable. Clyde Snow was asked by this researcher if disguise could alter morphological features. He responded: "To some extent. For example a person who had straight hair could have his hair curled. And visa versa." Clyde Snow compared STURGIS' nose with the tramp's. According to Snow, the tramp's nose was more arched, or curved in, than STURGIS,' whose nose was more spherical or semicircular. STURGIS' nose was also described as being less bulbous than the tramp's. There was little evidence of this, but this difference might be perceived if one failed to consider that the STURGIS tramp distorted the shape of his nose by flexing his nostrils and squinting. In P1 STURGIS flexed his nostrils, in P2 his nostrils were also flexed. This was more apparent in P3, P4, P5. It was less apparent in the last two photographs, since the sun had overexposed STURGIS' nose. Nowhere in the HSCA Report was mention of deliberate facial distortion, nor did the HSCA show its readers the photographs in which it had detected these alleged nose, chin and eye differences.

Like S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt, Clyde Snow claimed that STURGIS had a squarer chin than the tramp. Could this difference be related to the fact that in P1 STURGIS was distorting chin shape by bowing his head? In P2, he was squinting and looking down; in P3, P4 it was most apparent and the folds of flesh in STURGIS' chin are seen as he holds his head at an angle. In P5 and P6, we get a good look at his chin, but in P7, he was again pulling it in. Clyde Snow commented to this researcher "Pretty sharp" in regard to this way of further disguising oneself. Regarding ear projection: This was dependent upon hair fluffiness, which is easily alterable. Regarding physique: Clyde Snow contended that STURGIS was stockier, while the tramp was more linear. This might have been a result of the tramp's hairstyle adding about an inch to his height. While there was no major difference in physique between STURGIS and the tramp, it was evident that STURGIS weighed less in late 1963. When Snow made this determination, he compared the tramp shot to a photograph of STURGIS. Was this photograph taken in late 1963? STURGIS could have changed his weight in a matter of weeks by dieting and exercise. Snow's "morphology" relied on his subjective perception of a photograph, rather than by objective scientific measurements. This was because when SNOW did the metric analysis of STURGIS he came out with positive results and he could not live with that.

THIS RESEARCHER'S PHOTO ANALYSIS OF THE HUNT TRAMP DISGUISE

(1) Remained hidden behind the other tramps: In P1 and P2, HUNT stood behind CHRIST; in P1 he could not be seen, and in P2 a half-profile was visible. In P4 he was visible, and in P3 he was visible. In P6 his face was in the shadows, and in P5 and P7 he was again hiding behind STURGIS.

- (2) Squinted and grimaced as in P3.
- (3) Had hat, old clothes and carried a greasy bag.
- (4) Sophisticated make-up that made him look older.
- (5) Had his hair dyed grey.

ANALYSIS: HUNT COMPARISON SHOTS Note P6.

S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt reported:

- (1) The shortest and the oldest man of the three men arrested in Dallas compared with HUNT photographs shows a marked and significant age difference, with HUNT having a much younger appearance.
- (2) The jowl area of the chin of the old man has protruding pouches, while this area of HUNT'S chin is smooth and tightly contoured.
- (3) The old man's nose appears more bulbous, while HUNT'S nose is more angular or pointed.

HUNT was disguised to look older, and he did. S.A. Shaneyfeldt's statement about HUNT'S jowl made no sense. The only time we saw jowls was in P2, but in P3, HUNT seemed to be grimacing to distort their shape. In P4 he was out of focus, and in P6 he was too far back to make out much detail. As for Shaneyfeldt's contention that the tramp's nose is more bulbous than HUNT'S, again P3 contains the only reasonable view of his nose, albeit twisted. Clyde Snow, like S.A. Shaneyfeldt, emphasized: "The tramp has a relatively broad nose with a bulbous fleshy nasal tip. The nasal tip is not depressed. HUNT has a narrow nose with a salient nasal bridge and an angular, moderately depressed nasal tip." Coincidentally, Clyde Snow had also concluded that the nose of the STURGIS tramp was more bulbous than STURGIS' nose. Could this have been a result of both men having distorted their faces? Clyde Snow agreed with Lyndal Shaneyfeldt and stated:

In comparing HUNT with tramp C, the average difference of the six indices of the two men is 9.0, a value significantly high to suggest no particularly strong resemblance in facial proportions. In addition, in comparing the photographs of the tramp to those of HUNT taken in the late 1950's and early 1960's, the following morphological differences were noted: Forehead: Tramp C has several well-developed transverse frontal sulci and a strong vertical interciliary sulcus. These are not observed in HUNT who, even in the photographs taken years later, had only slightly developed transverse frontal and interciliary furrows.

Clyde Snow contended that HUNT and the tramp had the same forehead furrows except the tramp's were more pronounced. In which tramp shots was the HUNT tramp's forehead even visible? The best shot occurred in P3, and even here, the depth of field of the camera blurred the grimacing face of the HUNT tramp. In P4, he was farther back, and in P5 and P7 his face was doctored out. In P6 his face was also a blur. Perhaps Clyde Snow had photographs that were closer to the originals? Assuming what Snow said was true, makeup might have been used to accentuate HUNT'S already existing features. HUNT was made up to look older by the cosmetic alteration of pre-existing features. This theory was consistent with Clyde Snow's analysis of HUNT'S cheeks and the tramp's: "Cheek: Tramp C has well-developed nose-labial folds, whereas in HUNT these are only incipiently developed in his photographs taken about the time of the assassination." Clyde Snow ignored this possibility and cited age as a difference between the two men: "Age: In general facial tone, age lines and other features, Tramp C appears to be at least a decade older than HUNT."

Regarding HUNT'S mouth and lips, Clyde Snow stated: "Mouth: Tramp C has thick, full membranous lips; HUNT is thin lipped." In P3, HUNT'S lips are contorted from his frowning. Look at the lip comparison. Not only were the lips identical, but the way HUNT and the tramp shaped them was also identical. Clyde Snow pointed out a scar on the tramp that was not visible in the HUNT photographs: "Scars. In the tramp there is a pit-like ovoid scar about 1 centimeter in diameter located immediately above the lateral end of his right eyebrow. This feature is not observed in the HUNT photographs provided for examination." This scar appeared prominently in P2, but not in P3 and P4, although it might be argued not enough of the right side of HUNT'S face was visible in P3 to see the scar, and that P4 was too blurred to make it out. The scar was not visible in P6. David Wise reported: "In 1972 James A. Everett, a veteran CIA agent in Europe, was reassigned to the Chicago Domestic Operations Division. He was given a hairpiece, different glasses and a wart. The wart was a stick-on type..." [Wise The American Police State p188]

DOCTORING OF HUNT'S PHOTOGRAPHS

HUNT was a high ranking official in the CIA. The Agency could not have plausibly denied this. Photographs of HUNT disguised as a tramp, at the scene of the JFK assassination, would have caused the CIA to be disbanded. Why didn't the CIA destroy the tramp shot negatives? It had the undoctored negatives in its possession before they were doctored. If, however, the photographs had disappeared, the photographers might have gone to the FBI. This would have called unnecessary attention to the tramps. Then the tramps' arrest, release, identity etc. would have had to have been investigated by the Warren Commission. The tramp shots had never been published in any of the local papers and instead, had been filed as out takes. As it was, the only references to the tramps were made by Bowers and law enforcement personnel. No FBI reports were generated on them. Additionally, the Agency did not know for certain that these were the only tramp shots. Private individuals, as well as a local television news crew equipped with a 16-mm movie camera, were also present. After destroying these, others could surface.

The cover-up of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy involved many more CIA personnel the conspiracy or act itself. The CIA, acting as an institution, doctored the photographs so they would have negative forensic value, co-opted their dissemination, and waited to see if anyone credible made a valid identification. There were very few photographs of STURGIS and CHRIST available in 1963 (and none of HUNT) so the CIA had little to fear - until Watergate. HUNT: "The Watergate episode brought my photographs to the national fore and was the core of the speculation about me and the JFK assassination. The Watergate episode evolved this into the JFK mess." [HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT 1.29.85 Miami #80-1121-Civil-Kehoe p61]

It was pointed out repeatedly to the HSCA that to obtain an accurate photographic evaluation, the first issue that had to be addressed was doctoring. It was suggested the HSCA apply sophisticated photo analytic techniques to the tramp shots to determine whether they had been tampered with, but the HSCA refused. The word doctoring appeared nowhere in its report, though it was obvious that the tramp shots had indeed been doctored. Doctor Clyde Snow:

No, I never determined whether the tramp shots had been doctored. The way I thought it was set-up was that the photographs would first be examined by people who were experts in determining whether or not photographs had been doctored. After they were certified as undoctored, we would get the copies. Were they examined?

It was pointed-out to Clyde Snow by this researcher that there was no report on doctoring of the tramp shots in the HSCA files, nor was it listed as withheld. There was no reference to it in the HSCA Report, or supporting volumes. Clyde Snow:

It was my understanding that everything had been looked over by other analysts on our committee. I've forgotten their names. That's an interesting point. I just took what was given to me.

Clyde Snow was told that unless one accounted for the doctoring, one would arrive at a negative conclusion. He commented, "That could be true." Clyde Snow was sent a set of tramp shots and asked to comment on the doctoring:

I looked at it very briefly. I haven't had a chance to analyze it. I can't take the time off. I don't know how big a hurry you're in. I just got back from Chiapas, then I have to go to Austin, and to Chicago for a murder trial. Then Ethiopia. Perhaps several months from now. Give it a try." [Snow 3.2.94; 2230 Bluecreek Norman, OK 73071 405-364-7471]

Clyde Snow was re-contacted in June 1994. He stated:

No way can I do an analysis on the doctoring. I'm just too tied up on many, many, other things to get involved in the Kennedy assassination. It's history now. There's probably better people out there than me to do it. Technically, things have moved so far beyond what they were whenever we were doing that in 1975, 1976. I'm no longer the state of the art in photo comparison. I would have no way of doing it, I don't have the equipment, I don't have the time, and I don't have the money." Clyde Snow was told that he would be paid for his time. "Well ah, that would have to be a given. But I don't think I want to get involved. I don't look at photographs primarily. I'm an anthropologist, and anthropologists have been used to compare photographs from time to time. But there are other people who just do that full time. I think what we did was pretty good. Find another expert to shoot me down. As far as I'm concerned the case is closed.

Clyde Snow clearly did not want to get involved in examining the photographs for doctoring. If he reported the photographs were doctored, it would have reopened the case. Again, would Clyde Snow have been willing to issue a positive photo report to the HSCA despite its implications? HSCA Chief Counsel Robert Blakey commented:

The implications of these questions is enormous, about a Watergate burglar, and a former longtime CIA officer, who directed the 1972 break-in, might have been involved in the assassination...for years the tramp photographs were little more than conversation pieces, but in 1975, in a book called Coup D'Etat in America, Michael Cranfield [sic] and Alan J. Weberman [sic] proposed that two of these three tramps were none other than HOWARD HUNT and FRANK STURGIS who had been involved in the Watergate prosecutions. [HSCA V4 p366]

When I first called Clyde Snow he told me:

I'll second guess anybody. I got to look at the evidence. I get involved in criminal trials all the time on one side or the other. Like most forensic scientists I go in with an open mind. Very often I have to tell my own side, 'Counselor if you use me as a witness I'll blow you out of the water because I look at the evidence, and I'm not going to be able to tell them what you want to hear.'

Clearly, this was untrue.

THE BRUSH STROKE

P7: There was a brush stroke covering the small part of the cheeks and ear of the HUNT tramp that would normally have been visible in the picture. The brush stroke extended to the face of the tallest tramp.

The brush stroke.

Marvin Miller showed Lyndal Shaneyfeldt the brush stroke and asked him about it:

Q. Does it appear to have a brush stroke over that area?

A. I would not interpret that, myself, as a brush stroke across there. That area of the photograph over the right shoulder of the Nordic individual is really not identifiable from this photograph. It is only with the knowledge of the other photographs, and knowing that there was a shorter man with a hat, that it could be interpreted as being the edge of the hat and part of the forehead of the older individual, but I will not interpret that as brush stroke, and I see no evidence of retouching in that.

(Marvin Miller pointed out the brush stroke once again.)

A. I see a, the white, lower line.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. - just along the shoulder, I think corresponds with a, with white fleck along the cheek -

Q. Yes.

A. - which tends to suggest a, a stroke across there.

Q. All right.

A. It is not quite in alignment, but it's rather close.

Q. All right. Thank you sir.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you know how to account for that mark on the photograph that we have just discussed?

A. No, other than happenstance. I would have to see the original negative.

Q. All right.

A. That, that does not -

Q. All right. It appears at least that this photograph, at least, has had some kind of alteration to it, whether the negative did or not?

A. No, it does not. That does not imply that to me. I said that there are a couple of white specks along the cheek line along the Nordic individual that almost correspond with the highlight line along the shoulder. That I would interpret as being accidental happenstance. If it appeared, dirt on the negative. Could be anything.

Q. All right, but you could not discern that actually until you had the real negative?

A. That's right, in absence of other retouching on there it is not suggestive of a retouched photograph to me.

Q. All right, the [original] negative has the answer?

A. May have the answer. The negative may not have the answer either.

Q. All right, but it would be the best evidence, so to speak?

A. All right.

Lyndal Shaneyfeldt attributed this instance of doctoring to accidental happenstance.

THE TWO BLOCKS OF LIGHT

P5: Before I had a good copy of P5 I perceived what I believed to be two blocks of light in front of the HUNT tramp. Due to these apparent white blocks, the photograph was totally worthless in reference to HUNT, since the only HUNT parts visible were his shoes, pants and hat. Attorney Marvin Miller pointed out this phenomenon to Lyndal Shaneyfeldt:

A. Because of the screen pattern in this reproduction the detail is really not adequate for, for making any determination. Is this the dark line you're speaking of?

Q. Yes, and it seems to be interrupted by a little white blotch or two right up in there.

A. Yes, it's just from, from examining this photograph I believe that to be a branch of a tree or something and not the outline of the face, because it's too far out from the edge of the hat and the edge of the face is over in this area. I would interpret that as being another one of these branches of the bushes back there. I do not interpret that as the edge of the face but again, the reproduction in the book is not clear enough. Again, we would need to have a good photograph or the original negative.

How could the blocks of light be explained as branches from a bush, when one of them appeared in front of the HUNT tramp's face in a location that clearly had no bushes? Nonetheless, he allowed that his conclusion was not scientifically valid unless he examined the original negative. This testimony intimated that either the FBI never possessed the original negative, or it had the original negative and never examined it for evidence of doctoring. Recently, I examined the clearest version of P5 available to date and the block of light does not appear. It seemed to have been a result of having had a third or fourth generation copy. None-the-less even though there is a large area under the HUNT tramp's hat where part of his face should be it is just not there.

HUNT'S NEW EAR

P3: A new ear has been spliced on to HUNT'S head. Note the minute art knife notch at the tip of the arrow. This ear appeared to be identical with the ear of the tallest tramp shown in P5. The latter would have been used, because the P5 photograph of STURGIS' ear was taken under identical lighting conditions. This was not HUNT'S ear, and did not correspond to the tip of the projecting left ear that stuck out behind the CHRIST tramp, under a hat and some thin hair in P1.

PLASTIC SURGERY

HUNT underwent plastic surgery on his left ear after the assassination in order to alter the contours of that wing-like projection. S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt reported: "There are some inconsistencies in the ear contours; however, the known photographs of HUNT show differences in the ear contours between the late 1950 photographs and the mid to late 1960 photographs. The ear contours of the oldest individual in the Dallas photographs are different from the ear contours of HUNT in the mid to late 1960 photographs." Lyndal Shaneyfeldt was questioned by Marvin Miller about this statement:

A. I did find inconsistencies in the ear contours of Mr. HUNT in the 1950 photograph as opposed to the 1960's photographs, but my final analysis was there were some differences between ear contours, particularly of the ear in the 1960's. Now, that's the closest I can come to answering your question.

Q. All right. Do you have any way by which you can account for the difference in Mr. HUNT'S ears relative to themselves between the 1950's and the 1960's?

A. No, other than, other than camera angles. Primarily camera angles. You don't always have exactly the same angle and the ear contour can be very greatly affected by changes of angle of view. What I am saying is the angle at which you view the ear in the photograph is affected very much by the angle of the head relative to camera angle.

Lyndal Shaneyfeldt did not attribute the difference in the contours of HUNT'S ears to plastic surgery. Instead, he claimed that a technical factor was involved - camera angle. Why couldn't this factor be accounted for? HUNT had his ear contours modified by plastic surgery. Ear contours are the outer most configuration of the ear or rim. There was no way to calculate what effect such surgery might have had on the rest of the configurations of HUNT'S ear, since the entire ear itself was essentially squeezed and restructured into a new shape.

Note that HUNT did not just have his ears pinned back, he changed the configurations of his inner ear. HUNT had protruding ears before his surgery. Why did he wait until after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy to have them fixed?

Clyde Snow detected the plastic surgery: "From his photographs, apparently HUNT underwent surgery to correct his rather projecting ears. The date of this operation was not determined, but from the photographs, it would appear to have been within a few years before or after the assassination. In degree of projection, the tramp's ears appear to more closely match HUNT'S presurgical condition." Although the tramp shots had been doctored, HUNT'S protruding ear could still be detected in P1.

Characteristically, HUNT had prepared for every eventuality he could anticipate, such as the surfacing of more photographic evidence. Better to have altered evidence, such as one's own ear, than to have it used against you.

Clyde Snow examined two features of HUNT'S ear which he believed was unaffected by surgery, and found that they were strongly different in the photographs:

One of these is the helix, the fold of flesh that forms the outer rim of the ear. In the tramp, this fold is wide and prominent, whereas it is more narrow and weakly developed in HUNT. The second difference is the antihelix, the secondary fold that roughly parallels the helix inside the ear. This structure is strongly developed in the tramp, and, in fact, its lower portion appears to extend beyond the helix. In HUNT, the antihelix is weakly developed.

Clyde Snow believed he was examining ear features which had been uninfluenced by surgery.

In P2, the HUNT tramp's right ear was visible. The inner configurations were barely discernible, but the outer contour looked normal. Compare the contours of the tramp's ear with HUNT'S ear in the HUNT EAR STUDY. The outer contours match. One problem with these shots was the overexposure of one and underexposure of the other.

Now compare the right ear of the tramp with HUNT'S presurgical right ear. There was no similarity whatsoever as a result of the doctoring.

In HUNT DIGITAL EAR IMAGING STUDY 1 his presurgical right ear has been electronically grafted to the HUNT tramp's face in P3 to illustrate the purpose of the doctoring. Note that the brush stroke in P7 covered the HUNT tramp's right ear. Clyde Snow stated that the tramp's right ear and HUNT'S right ear, were totally different. The dissimilarity was caused by falsification of the original tramp negatives in order to conceal the HUNT appendage, which became the key to identifying him as the tramp. One man who could have told us if P3 was doctored was the photographer, Jack Beers. Finally, Doctor Clyde Snow was told by this researcher, "You asked, 'Is it HUNT? Is it STURGIS? Is it CHRIST?' Shouldn't you have asked, 'Is it HUNT and STURGIS and CHRIST?'" Clyde Snow stated:

I would have to go back to the original report. As I recall, we took them on a case by case basis. The point is in photo identification the questioned photograph always looks somewhat like the person who is identified as the suspected person. Otherwise, if he looked like Arnold Schwartzegger? There's generally a general resemblance to the person who was identified. Someone came up with the names of three people who kind of look like the tramps. It's an interesting point. I would want to go back and look at the report to see whether that was taken into account.

THE HEIGHT STUDY STURGIS

The Rockefeller Commission had the FBI conduct an on-site tramp height study to determine the height of the tramps and compare it against that of HUNT and STURGIS. The FBI did a study of the height of the STURGIS tramp so that it could be compared to STURGIS' height, which it determined was 5' 11", the height listed on his drivers license. On May 7, 1975, and on May 8, 1975, the FBI "conducted studies in the vicinity of the Texas School Book Depository to determine the height of the derelict thought to be FRANK STURGIS." The FBI used an overlay method:

Some of the photographs were duplicated using height standards, and these duplicated photographs were superimposed over the photographs of [the tramps] to establish the approximate heights of these individuals. Based on the comparison made, it was found that the tallest derelict, purported to be STURGIS, is in the height range from 6' 1" to 6' 3" tall...since STURGIS is 5' 11" tall, this determination of height supports the conclusion previously given that FRANK STURGIS is not the derelict.

Five days after the FBI filed this report, however, it filed a revised report that stated the FBI Laboratory had determined that part of the street visible in the tramp shots had been repaved in 1973: "The addition of this resurfacing material would normally subtract approximately one to one and a half inches from the height as shown in previous report." This would make the tramp 5'11 ½" to 6' 1- ½" tall. As stated, STURGIS was 5' 11" tall. The half-inch difference could have been accounted for by the tramp's fluffier hair style. A few weeks before the FBI did its study, Michael Canfield did his. He determined the tramp was 6' + or - 1". During his deposition in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN Shaneyfeldt stated:

I went to Dallas and made on-site studies to try to establish the derelict's height, particularly the Nordic individual, and the elderly, shorter man. I was furnished with the camera that was used by the news photographer to make the original tramp photographs. I was also furnished with copies of the photographs. I reenacted those photographs placing in position of the individuals in the photograph height standards that would record the height of anyone who was standing in that particular position. Using that technique, and setting up the camera based on fixed objects as they were recorded in the original negatives, buildings, trees, things that were still in position at that time, I did make a height study and then using the photographs that were made with that same camera, I made transparencies which were enlarged to the same size as the photographs, and overlaid, and determined the height of the individuals. It was found that the tallest of the derelicts purported to be FRANK STURGIS, is in the height range from 6' 1" to 6' 3" tall."

Lyndal Shaneyfeldt claimed that his study results were accurate, since they were generally unaffected by the street's resurfacing: "However, considering the fact that the camera position in the street is also elevated by one inch, this would tend to limit the effect [of the resurfacing]." The FBI had disagreed. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt, however, did not deny that the repaving had some effect, he merely claimed that his methodology tended to limit that effect. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt said his report was only "relatively accurate."

S.A. Lyndal Shaneyfeldt worked with William Gaston Allen's photograph P6. When the FBI questioned William Gaston Allen in Little Rock, Arkansas, in 1975, William Gaston Allen did not recall taking P6 or any of the other tramp photographs: "He believes he could have taken them. He recalled taking photographs from the corner opposite the front entrance of the Texas School Book Depository." William Gaston Allen believed he was standing on the sidewalk when he took photographs that day.

HUNT

The initial report of the FBI listed the height of the shortest tramp as 5' 6" to 5' 8". [FBI 62-109060-NR 6.16.75] The revised FBI report that followed estimated the short tramp's height to be normally 5' 4 ½" to 5' 6 ½". [FBI 62-109060-NR 6.2.75] The Rockefeller Commission chose to use the FBI's initial calculation, and listed the height of the short tramp as from 5' 6" to 5' 8". When Michael Canfield did a height study in 1975, he determined that the HUNT tramp was 5' 8". This height study was published in Coup D'Etat In America. Michael Canfield and the FBI's findings agreed. To prove its thesis that HUNT and STURGIS were not the tramps, the Rockefeller Commission misstated HUNT'S height as 5' 9". During a deposition in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN, HUNT was asked to display his drivers license. His height was listed as 5' 8" tall. HUNT'S resume was obtained and he listed his height as 5' 8". In 1948 HUNT listed his height as 5' 10 ½".

THE HEIGHT STUDY

Many people in the media have argued that the tall tramp could not be Sturgis, who is six foot tall, because the tall tramp appears to be at least six foot five inches tall. This has proven to be misinformation. It was first propagated by Richard Sprague in his article in the Los Angeles Star. Sprague said he measured the wall which is in the background when the tramps are pictured walking along (see page 208), and he found a height discrepancy of six inches between the tallest tramp and Frank Sturgis. We decided to conduct our own investigation, and Michael Canfield went down to Dallas, Texas. What we did was run a scale and two graduated yardsticks up the wall at the exact point on the Texas School Book Depository that the tramps were at when the photo on page 208 was taken. The way we determined the exact position on the wall was to find the same imperfections in the brick work that are evident in the photographs. These coordination points are labeled A, B, C, D and E in the tramp photo matched up in the height study on the following page. In trying to determine the height of the tramps, one must take into consideration the angle of the photograph and the position of the tramps in relation to the wall. There are two factors that make the tallest tramp seem taller than he really is.

The position of the camera when the shot was taken is about chest high of the tallest tramp on the right. This was determined by the fact that the bottom of the ornamental brick work on the first row is visible at the right of the tall tramp's head (see Figure 1, page 201). This indicates that the camera was held a few inches below that point. The tallest tramp is two feet closer to the camera than the wall in which the scale is attached. So with the laws of perspective in operation the tramp appears higher on the scale than he really is. Taking into account the diminishing point and camera angle, we find that the tramp is approximately six foot tall give or take a half inch, not six foot five inches tall. Sturgis has been listed as six foot or six foot one inch. Now, comparing the smallest tramp, on the far left of the photo on page 208, to the scale on page 209, we see that his hat barely comes to the inner square of the second brick, which is approximately five foot eleven inches on the scale. Subtracting about two inches that the hat adds to the height and an inch because of the camera angle and the diminishing perspective optics law, the height of the small tramp is five foot eight inches. Hunt has listed his height as five foot eight inches on his personal employment resume. Thus, the tallest tramp and the small tramp are approximately six foot and five foot eight inches, respectively. Figure 1

Figure 2 The angle of the camera and the position of the tramps to the wall gave the illusion that the tramps were taller. Therefore a head on shot of the tall tramp would show that at most he is only 6' 1". Imperfections of the wall (marked A-E) were used to determine the exact positions for the height comparison.

Engineered perspective drawing uses vanishing points to establish the true height of objects. After accounting for the tilted head, uplifted heel, and thick shoe sole our drawing indicates that the Tramp's height is 6'1" when standing upright.

STURGIS' ALIBIS

In 1974 Michael Canfield questioned FRANK STURGIS about his alibi for November 22, 1963. STURGIS: "I was home watching television...in Miami." The television listings for November 22, 1963, in the Miami Herald, indicated that at 1:30 p.m. (12:30 Dallas time) Search For Tomorrow, Truth or Consequences and Father Knows Best were on television at the time. Why would an active, macho guy like STURGIS be at home watching television? STURGIS worked as a used car salesman at the time. Why wasn't he at work? The reason was he had to be placed in a non-public environment

THE NOVEMBER 22, 1963, MEETING IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

Later in 1974 STURGIS told Michael Canfield that he was watching television on the day of the assassination, possibly in Washington, rather than Miami:

Well, yeah, I love to watch television. Well, and regardless of where its at, I don't care if I'm in Washington, or anyplace, I'll watch television. But they've asked me that, like I said, they asked me where I was on that day and I told them 'Well, I've got no comment on that.' So I suspect that maybe I'll be dragged up there to Washington before one of those Congressional Committees, or the Rockefeller Commission.

As stated, STURGIS and Wilfrado Navarro testified before the Rockefeller Commission on April 3, 1975. Present were Staff Members William Schwarzer, Robert Olsen, James Roethe. During his deposition in HUNT V. WEBERMAN STURGIS was asked:

Q. Do you remember giving a story to anybody, especially Mr. Canfield, that you may have been in Washington, D.C. on November 22, 1963.

A. I don't recall.

WEBERMAN: I've got it on tape.

A. I'm sorry. Then one of us is wrong.

WEBERMAN: You said you didn't know where you were, but you were watching television.

A. Because I was home.

WEBERMAN: So you weren't working that day?

A. I was at home and I did leave the house. Supposedly Jim Buchanan came and told me that, I went with him and left the house with him.

Around this time Bernard Fensterwald and Richard Sprague circulated a story that on November 22, 1963, STURGIS was at a meeting in Washington, D.C., with Richard Helms, HUNT, and Cuban exile Enrique Williams. Sprague told a researcher:

HUNT was at a meeting of Operation 40 with Helms, Enrique Williams, Lyman Kirkpatrick. This was confirmed by Williams. Williams was a leader of the Bay of Pigs Brigade. Hanes Johnson told me Enrique Williams was at this meeting, and I confirmed it with Williams. Williams was a very honest individual, as any guy would be, who came under fire on that beach. If HUNT said he was at this meeting I would not believe him. Williams told this story long before Watergate. The meeting concerned the CIA putting more money up for another invasion of Cuba.

The notes of a Rockefeller Commission investigator indicated confusion about this meeting:

Check Bureau files on HUNT interviews in 1974. Did HUNT claim to be in the company of Agency officials on November 22, 1963? and give their names to FBI & claim they could corroborate his presence there? Check with HUNT'S lawyer regarding content of HUNT'S TV denials of Dallas matter in November 1974. Did HUNT say he was at work at Agency at 1:30 p.m.? (Taped by Kaiser.) HUNT refused to say who he was with. Contact Robert Blair Kaiser at Rolling Stone regarding whether he had recording or notes of his November 1974 interview with HUNT in New York.

STURGIS said that he might have been in Washington on November 22, 1963. The CIA planned to provide STURGIS with an alibi, and leaked it through their asset, Bernard Fensterwald. In 1978 STURGIS said he did not recall telling Michael Canfield anything about a meeting in Washington, D.C. This was because the CIA abandoned "the meeting in D.C." alibi, since it would have put HUNT and STURGIS together prior to 1971.

JAMES A. HUNT

STURGIS told Rockefeller Commission "he was in Miami Florida throughout the day of the assassination, and his testimony was supported by the testimony of his wife, and by the testimony of his wife's nephew [James A. Hunt]. The nephew, who was then living with the STURGIS family, is now a practicing attorney in the Midwest." Rockefeller Commission investigator Pete Clapper: "I phoned James A. Hunt, attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio, 513-381-0656, before noon on April 1, 1975. I explained that the Commission seeks to ascertain the whereabouts of FRANK STURGIS on November 22, 1963. Mr. James Hunt said he wished to check with STURGIS, and then would call back. He called before noon this date and provided the following information:

James Hunt was living with his aunt, Janet Sturgis, and her husband, FRANK, at their home at Northwest 122nd Street in Miami on November 22, 1963. James Hunt was attending Miami Day Junior College. He had enrolled there in August 1963.

To the best of his knowledge, he recalls having an early class that day. Before leaving the house, he saw FRANK STURGIS at home about breakfast time. Hunt returned to the house in mid-morning. His grandmother was home. He took a nap. His grandmother awakened him to report there were news reports that the President had been shot in Dallas. James Hunt remembers they watched CBS correspondent Walter Cronkite.

James Hunt reports that STURGIS returned home that afternoon and they watched TV. He believes STURGIS was a used car salesman at the time. He is certain that it was a working day for STURGIS. Prior to STURGIS returning to the house in the afternoon, James Hunt recalls taking a drive around Miami during the afternoon alone. He recalls his aunt was upset by the TV reports. He recalls his cousin, Gale, a grade school student, was present in the household, and watched TV with them during the evening. STURGIS was at home that evening, he believes to the best of his recollection.

James Hunt says the day stands out particularly in his mind because only five days earlier he had seen Kennedy in person. James Hunt and a friend were at the Miami airport the previous Monday. Kennedy happened to be arriving. They joined the crowd and watched him.

Hunt agreed to draft an affidavit. I have given him my name and the Commission address to send the affidavit to. [RCD Memo Robert B. Olsen to Clapper 4.3.75]

James Hunt's affidavit for the Rockefeller Commission stated:

AFFIDAVIT OF JAMES A. HUNT

STATE OF OHIO

COUNTY OF HAMILTON

James A. Hunt, being duly sworn and cautioned, deposes and says that:

1. I am submitting this Affidavit to the Commission on CIA activities within the United States at the request of Peter R. Clapper, who contacted me by telephone and told me he is a staff member of the foregoing Commission.

2. The purpose of this Affidavit is to record, to the best of my knowledge, my recollection of certain events that occurred on November 22, 1963.

3. During the period August 1963 until May 1962, I was enrolled as a freshman student at Miami-Dade Junior College located near the corner of northwest 119th Street and 27th Avenue in Miami, Florida.

4. During the aforementioned period, I lived in the household of my aunt, Mrs. Janet Sturgis, and her husband, my uncle, FRANK STURGIS at 2515 Northwest 122nd Street, Miami. My grand-mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hunt, now deceased, also lived there.

5. Taking into consideration the fact that November 22, 1963, is a single day which occurred almost 11 ½ years ago, the following is offered as my best recollection of the day.

A. As I recall, I had an early class at Miami Dade Junior College on November 22, 1963, and arose early enough to arrive at school at least before 9:00 a.m. It is my recollection that I saw FRANK STURGIS at home prior to my leaving for school that morning.

B. I returned to the STURGIS household sometime during mid-morning, probably sometime between 11:00 a.m. and 12:00 p.m. Since I had not eaten breakfast previously, it is my recollection that, upon returning to the STURGIS' household, I ate breakfast and retired to my room to take a short nap and do some reading prior to the late afternoon class which I had to attend on that day.

C. At some time between 12:00 noon and 1:30 p.m. I was awakened by my grandmother who told me that reports of an attempted assassination on the life of President John Kennedy were being broadcast on television.

D. I then arose and watched the news. It is my recollection that besides my grandmother, my aunt, Mrs. Janet Sturgis was also at home watching the television.

E. Later in the afternoon on that day, probably at approximately 3:00 p.m., I drove back to Miami-Dade Junior College to see if my afternoon class had been canceled.

F. Upon arriving at Miami-Dade Junior College that afternoon I discovered that the class had, in fact, been canceled; thereafter I took a drive through the city of Miami, contemplating the significance of the events of that day and trying to get some idea of their impact on other people.

G. I arrived back at the STURGIS household in the late afternoon, probably between 3:30 p.m. and 5:00 p.m.

H. Upon my arrival back at the STURGIS household, or shortly thereafter, I recall seeing my grandmother, my aunt, Mrs. Janet Sturgis and my uncle, FRANK STURGIS. It is further my recollection that the aforementioned persons ate dinner at the STURGIS household and remained there for the rest of the evening.

6. The foregoing represents, to the best of my recollection, a summary of certain events which occurred on November 22, 1963, the day on which President John F. Kennedy was assassinated. Further Affiant Saith Naught. James A. Hunt.

STURGIS said that he was at home, watching television, when news of the assassination was flashed across the screen. He said he was with James Hunt. James Hunt had a different version of events. He said that his aunt woke him up when the news was flashed, however, FRANK STURGIS was not there at the time. James Hunt told Olsen during their phone conversation that STURGIS returned home that afternoon and they watched TV before he went for his drive. In his affidavit he stated he saw STURGIS after his drive. He believed STURGIS was a used car salesman at the time. He was certain that it was a working day for STURGIS. STURGIS never mentioned anything about working that day. He claimed he was home, watching TV. James Hunt could also be mistaken about seeing STURGIS at breakfast because this event occurred before the assassination and was less likely to be as clear in his mind as events that followed it. James Hunt said he had a very early class to attend. Why would STURGIS be eating breakfast at so early an hour if all he had planned for that day was to stay indoors and watch T.V?

TELEPHONE INTERVIEW WITH JAMES HUNT

James Hunt was contacted in January 1994 and asked:

Q. Was FRANK there when you were woken up and told about the assassination?

A. No, he wasn't there when I woke up.

Q. But FRANK said he was there.

A. Not in the afternoon. I never saw FRANK'S testimony. Where did he say that? FRANK may have his times mixed-up there. I must admit that part I don't remember. I got to say as I sit here, 'It's been a long time.' -

What, 30 years? - But I don't remember FRANK being there when she woke me up. I'm not quite sure whether he was there when they made the announcement of his death. I certainly stand behind the affidavit I gave to the Rockefeller Commission. My recollection is that I saw FRANK early in the morning. I came home, laid down, my grandmother woke me up and said 'He's been shot.' I went out and watched the news for awhile. I had an afternoon class that day, and somewhere around mid-afternoon I went over to see if they were going to hold class. It turned out they weren't, and I drove around for half an hour or so and I got back. That was probably when I saw FRANK again, you know what I mean. Hell, that would be 3:00 p.m., something like that, yeah. 3:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. sounds about right.

Q. FRANK'S alibi was 'I was watching TV when the news came on about the assassination. My nephew was there, with me, when it first happened.'

A. I am not trying to be unfriendly, but I don't know what the purpose of this call is?

Q. I am trying to resolve this contradiction in the testimony.

A. He could have been there, but I just don't remember he was there.

I swear the following is true and correct: In 2008 I met with Bob Risch, the co-author of a book that Jim Hunt was planning to do about his uncle FRANK STURGIS entitled Cuba On My Mind. He told me that Jim had retracted his statement to the Rockefeller Commission and that FRANK had asked him to alibi him for the day in question. When the book was published Hunt stuck to the statement that he gave to the Rockefeller Commission. He did say that he believed STURGIS was part of the conspiracy to kill Kennedy but was not a shooter. I asked him what part could STURGIS have played? Did he write a White Paper on the Bay of Pigs? Did he arrange the flowers at JFK's funeral? I pointed out to him that FRANK was a killer and that if he was part of the plot his role involved murder. Hunt did not believe that FRANK had killed his best friend, Alex Rorke or that he machine-gunned dozens of Masferrer supporters at San Juan Hill in Cuba. I told him that in HEMMING's words, "FRANK was a stubble bum."

THE AFFIDAVIT OF MRS. JANET STURGIS

RECOLLECTION IS A STRANGE THING. SOME HUMANS ARE MORE GIFTED WITH REMEMBERING CERTAIN EVENTS THAN OTHERS. BUT I WOULD HAZARD A GUESS THAT ALMOST ALL AMERICANS (WHO WERE ABOVE THE AGE OF FIVE) CAN, WITH PERFECT CLARITY, DESCRIBE WHAT THEY WERE DOING ON NOVEMBER 22, 1963, WHEN THEY FIRST HEARD THE NEWS BULLETIN FROM DALLAS, TEXAS, STATING THAT PRESIDENT KENNEDY HAD BEEN SHOT.

ON THAT DAY IN NOVEMBER, WHICH WAS A TYPICALLY WARM SOUTH FLORIDIAN DAY, MY HUSBAND (FRANK STURGIS) AND I WERE IN OUR BEDROOM. MY MOTHER WAS IN THE FLORIDA ROOM WATCHING TELEVISION. I RECALL MY MOTHER RUNNING INTO OUR ROOM DECLARING THAT PRESIDENT KENNEDY HAD BEEN SHOT. MY MOST VIVID RECOLLECTION IS THE EMOTION I FELT: DISBELIEF AND ANNOYANCE WITH MY MOTHER: FOR SURELY SHE HAD MISUNDERSTOOD OR GOTTEN HER FACTS CONFUSED. SUCH THINGS COULDN'T HAPPEN. BUT FRANK AND I WENT IMMEDIATELY TO THE FLORIDA ROOM TO LISTEN TO THE TELEVISION. AS SOON AS WE REALIZED THIS PRONOUNCEMENT WAS TRUE, FRANK LEFT THE HOUSE. I STAYED AT HOME, GLUED TO THE T.V. UNBELIEVING (LIKE PROBABLY EVERYONE ELSE IN THE COUNTRY AT THE TIME) AND YET MESMERIZED BY WHAT WAS BEING BROADCAST.

MY NEPHEW, JAMES A. HUNT, JR. WAS LIVING WITH US WHILE ATTENDING HIS FIRST YEAR OF COLLEGE AT MIAMI DADE. I HONESTLY DO NOT REMEMBER WHAT TIME HE RETURNED HOME

FROM CLASSES, ALTHOUGH IT WAS PROBABLY EARLY IN THE AFTERNOON.

I DO REMEMBER THAT MY NEPHEW AND GONE EARLIER IN THE WEEK TO MIAMI INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT TO BE AMONG THE THOUSANDS WHO WELCOMED PRESIDENT KENNEDY ON HIS STOP-OVER IN MIAMI PRIOR TO A FLIGHT TO DALLAS, TEXAS. I ALSO REMEMBER, QUITE VIVIDLY, FANK (sic) AND MY (sic) WATCHING TELEVISION THAT SUNDAY AFTERNOON, NOVEMBER 24, 1975 (sic) WHEN LEE HARVEY OSWALD WAS BEING ESCORTED THROUGH A DALLAS POLICE STATION AND WAS SHOT AND KILLED IN VIEW OF MILLIONS OF TELEVIEWERS.

THIS MUCH I CAN ATTEST TO: AT THE MOMENT OF THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY MY HUSBAND - FRANK A. STURGIS - WAS WITH ME IN OUR HOME AT 2515 N.W. 122 STREET, MIAMI, FLORIDA. JANET STURGIS.

Janet Sturgis lied in order to provide an alibi for her husband. Her affidavit conflicted with that of James Hunt. The Rockefeller Commission did not mention this conflict, however the Rockefeller Commission concluded: "It cannot be determined with certainty where STURGIS actually was on the day of the assassination." This conclusion was derived from the fact that: "All witnesses directly supporting the presence of STURGIS in Miami, Florida, on the day of the assassination are family members or relatives. Less weight can be assigned to the testimony of such interested witnesses..."

STURGIS' SECOND ALIBI

During his deposition in 1978 in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN, STURGIS was asked if he was watching television at 1:30 p.m. (12:30 p.m. in Dallas)? STURGIS: "I don't remember, so many years ago, I don't recall, I think it was on all stations..."

Q. What were you doing about 12:30 p.m. on November 22, 1963?

A. On November 22, 1963, at about 12:30 p.m., I was at a party at my home in Miami, Florida, with my wife Janet Sturgis, my mother-in-law, Elizabeth Hunt, and my nephew, who was at my home at that time, James Hunt.

Q. Where was this home located?

A. 2515 N.W. 122nd Street, Miami, Florida, 33167.

Q. Is this the same home you maintain today?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Can you describe your movements on that day, to the best of your recollection?

A. Not really; it was so many years ago. I was at home, I did not go out. I have other people with the Federal Government that do have on record, that could testify or have already testified that I was in Miami on November 22, 1963...I have nothing to hide. The Federal Government knows of my activities, knows where I was at on that particular day of the assassination, and I am quite sure that the government - as far as I'm concerned - is well aware of who is behind -- if there was a conspiracy, I believe there was a conspiracy -- and they are well aware of who was behind the conspiracy.

Q. November 22, 1963, was a working day. Were you working at that time?

A. Most likely.

Q. Did you have any reason for not being at work that day?

A. Friday? No reason.

Q. What were you doing that day? You say you don't remember. Do you remember --

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you remember talking to a Mr. Michael Canfield, the co-author of this book?

A. On that day?

Q. About the events of that day?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what you told him?

A. Not really, it's been so --

Q. Could you have told him you were watching television?

A. Possibly yes, yes. As a matter of fact, I think my mother-in-law told me the President was assassinated.

Q. Were you watching television around 12:30 in the afternoon that day?

A. I don't remember; so many years ago. I don't recall.

Q. So you wouldn't remember what program was on?

A. I think it was on all stations. It was a continuation that day of the assassination.

STURGIS said that he was at home on November 22, 1963, watching T.V. and, at the same time, at work that day. He was asked: "Do you remember what you were doing for a living at the time of the assassination, what your job was or how you earned your living?" He responded: "That's quite a long spell. I would have to really wrack my mind to find out at that particular time what I was doing. Right at the present time, I don't know; but I could, you know, through records and so forth...I could look through them and tell you what I was doing that particular time...[I was] at home that day and did leave the house." STURGIS was asked:

Q. Are there any other witnesses besides your immediate relatives and Geraldine Shamma, to verify your whereabouts on November 22, 1963?

A. Yes.

Q. Who are they?

A. William Johnson, we call him Bill Johnson.

Q. Where is he?

A. He lives here in San Souci Estates in Miami, Dade County.

Q. Do you know anybody else?

A. His telephone number is 305-893-6013. Jim Buchanan, as a matter of fact, I believe Jim Buchanan came to my house on that date of November 22, 1963, him and I went off the day of the Kennedy assassination.

Q. Anybody else you remember?

A. Geraldine Shamma, Jim Buchanan, William Johnson, my nephew, Jim Hunt.

Q. What did you tell the Rockefeller Commission?

A. The same thing.

Q. But the Rockefeller Commission said your witnesses were only close relatives.

A. I'm sorry, you're right. I glad you brought that up because just recently, because of all the publicity, people did contact me and tell me, "Hey, you remember this, this, this? If you need any help, fine." Well, I told Fonzi and Fonzi supposedly , I'm not sure whether he had already been in touch with these people or not, but he is aware of these people I came across. So I turned it over - -

STURGIS said he had seen William Johnson and Geraldine Shamma that day but he was unable to recall the identity of any impartial witnesses. In June 1993 William Johnson was asked whether or not he was with STURGIS that day: "I was not there, no sir. I was not there."

Attorney Mark Friedman asked STURGIS:

Q. Were you with HOWARD HUNT on November 22, 1963?

A. I don't recall.

Q. "Yes"or "No"?

A. No. If I don't recall why should I say "Yes" or "No"? I don't recall it.

Q. Were you involved in a conspiracy to kill President Kennedy?

A. Never in my life. That is part of the polygraph. The United States Government knows where I was on November 22, 1963. They know where LEE HARVEY OSWALD was three weeks to the day of the assassination, working at the book depository. There is a witness that knew his whereabouts every day three weeks before. As far as I'm concerned I don't see how in the hell LEE HARVEY OSWALD could be in Miami riding with Marita Lorenz to Dallas, Texas, who she calls OZZIE, is the biggest fabrication of a lie she ever said in her life. I don't know how she could do it. Let her take a polygraph test.

A SUSPECT: NOVEMBER 23, 1963

On the morning of November 23, 1963, a FBI agent interrogated STURGIS. The Michael Canfield interview revealed:

A. Hey I can show you a clipping where they say I was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Q. Who said this?

A. Newspapers, I even got investigated by that Watergate thing. They asked me where I was. I told them I knew nothing about it. I was home watching television. They felt the CIA might be behind it. So they wanted an investigation of E. HOWARD HUNT and myself on the assassination of President Kennedy. What the hell do I got to do with the assassination of President Kennedy? I may have disagreed with his policies and so forth, but that doesn't warrant killing the President of the United States. And they asked me about other attempted assassinations. I said yeah, Cuba. Some people say that if you attempt to assassinate people outside of the United States, wouldn't you be capable of the assassination of the President of the United States? I said, "Well, the thought never entered my mind." But I'm capable of doing many things. I'm that type of a man. But I see no grounds for me doing something like that. You know, he was my Commander-in-Chief.

Q. What about other people in the CIA?

A. The CIA had a lot of different factions, some of which I didn't trust.

Q. Are you convinced the Warren Commission Report was correct?

A. On what?

Q. On the Kennedy assassination.

A. Let me tell you something about the Report. Nobody knows what's in that Report. Only what they wanted to give out. And I don't believe the report is complete. I think there is a conspiracy involved in the assassination of President Kennedy and they covered it up.

Q. Who do you think did it?

A. I don't have the slightest idea. But I think it's one big cover-up.

Q. That's strange they would investigate you for that.

A. Well, they sure did. I had FBI agents over at my house.

Q. For the assassination?

A. Yeah.

Q. When, right after it happened?

A. Right after it happened.

Q. Why did they come to you?

A. I asked them that. They told me I was one person they felt had the capabilities to do it. Heh, heh, heh. They said: "FRANK, if there is anybody capable of killing the President of the United States, you're the guy that can do it." Heh, heh, heh that's funny I told them, "I'm not mad at you or nothing, I had nothing to do with it, but that amuses me..."

STURGIS also told Canfield: "You have to look at my past. I've done a lot of things. I've been on assassination attempts. I was involved in so many things. Skullduggery, intrigue, espionage.

Q. When you say assassination attempts?

A. Well, in foreign countries.

In 1978 STURGIS stated: "Now the FBI did make contact with me after President Kennedy's assassination, yes...I was questioned by the FBI shortly after the assassination. They did come and visit me and question me about my activities during President Kennedy's assassination." STURGIS was asked:

Q. Do you remember one of those agents indicating to you the following words: "FRANK, you are one of the few people in this country capable of pulling off something like this?"

A. No. The agent told me that I was one person in this country that could possibly do this, if I wanted to.

The notes of Rockefeller Commission investigator Robert Olsen revealed: "Whereabouts November 22, 1963: In Miami, at home, two FBI Agents came to visit him. Bob Dwyer was one. To find out his whereabouts & to get help. Witnesses: His wife Janet Sturgis (Married since 1961) wife's nephew, Jim Hunt (Cincinnati, Ohio, Attorney)." Robert James Dwyer was one of the FBI agents who questioned STURGIS on November 23, 1963. Dwyer knew HEMMING. STURGIS was an informant for Dwyer. STURGIS explained: "You must understand that I set up an intelligence apparatus here in the United States...and naturally, this information was turned over to the United States Government." Robert Dwyer never filed a formal report of the interview. HEMMING said Robert Dwyer told him he had worked with Herbert Philbrick.

DISINFORMATION CAMPAIGN TO LINK OSWALD WITH CASTRO STURGIS AND JAMES BUCHANAN NOVEMBER 26, 1963

Immediately following the Kennedy assassination James Buchanan, FRANK STURGIS, JOHN MARTINO and others launched a campaign to blame the Kennedy assassination on Fidel Castro. The propaganda operation started with an article dated November 26, 1963, which appeared in the Pompano Beach Sun-Sentinel that quoted STURGIS: "OSWALD was in Miami in November 1962 [OSWALD had been in Miami in December 1962] and had contact with Miami-based supporters of Fidel Castro who were agents of the G-2. OSWALD gave out his Fair Play for Cuba Committee literature, and Jerry Buchanan, who was with my group, did tell me there was a possibility that OSWALD was in the area, and that he had a fight with OSWALD." Buchanan claimed he knew the name of the printer where OSWALD had his literature printed.

STURGIS was questioned about this during his deposition in HUNT V. WEBERMAN:

Q. Do you remember Mr. Buchanan giving out a news story that alleged that LEE HARVEY OSWALD was in Miami in 1963?

A. Oh yes! As a matter of fact, his brother, Jerry Buchanan, was one of the people that was with my group and Jerry did give me some information to the fact that he thought there was a possibility that one of the persons, now, you must remember that during that particular time there were hundreds of Americans in the area, plus Canadians, in this area here, trying to make contact with various Cuban groups in order to be involved against Cuba, and Jerry did tell me that there was a possibility that OSWALD was in this area and that he had a fight with OSWALD. He wasn't sure but this was what he told me.

On November 27, 1963, STURGIS told S.A. James O'Conner that his comments in the article were guesses and speculation, and that he had no hard information. S.A. James O'Conner sent a report to Washington concluding that STURGIS was unreliable, and that his story had no basis in fact. The reports of S.A. James O'Conner in which STURGIS linked OSWALD to Fidel Castro were withheld. [FBI 62-109090-63rd NR 172 Hoover] On April 22, 1964, the Director of the FBI sent this message to the Miami Field Office:

Bureau also desires Jim Buchanan to be interviewed in order to pin down, once and for all, wild statements concerning alleged activities of OSWALD in Florida which for the most part appear to emanate from MARTINO and Buchanan. If Buchanan uncooperative, set forth results in LHM form suitable for dissemination to President's Commission at which time consideration will then be given to suggesting Buchanan as well as MARTINO be subpoenaed before President Commission. Handle promptly and surep results. [NARA FBI 124-10035-10367]

The FBI reported:

James Buchanan, former reporter for the Pompano Beach Sun-Sentinel, stated he has no personal or firsthand knowledge of OSWALD or OSWALD'S activities. He stated his newspaper stories on OSWALD were obtained from sources he regarded as reliable, whose accuracy he did not question. He declined to reveal the identity of a printer at Miami whom he alleges printed pro-Castro literature for OSWALD. Concerning the alleged fight between his brother, Jerry Buchanan, and OSWALD, he maintains this information was received from a Cuban named Sanchez, a member of the organization 'Los Pinos Nuevos,' and has never talked to his brother about this alleged fight. He says he knows no person who was a witness to the presence of OSWALD in Miami, but thought his brother, Jerry Buchanan, should be contacted in that respect. When informed that his brother had been contacted and had furnished a varying account, Buchanan said he knew only what Sanchez had told him. Efforts to identify Sanchez through anti-Castro organization Los Pinos Nuevos, or through interview of one Jesus Sanchez, resulted negatively.

BUCHANAN'S SECOND STORY

A second article in the Pompano Beach Sun-Sentinel stated:

OSWALD tried to infiltrate several other major organizations in Miami, including the Anti-Communist Brigade, which is headed by Major FRANK STURGIS, a former Commander in Castro's Air Force. STURGIS said his outfit turned down OSWALD'S application, because they could not find out anything about his background. STURGIS told me, "We have already established that he was in contact with G-2 agents while here in Miami. We are trying to get the billing record from the telephone company. He called Havana. OSWALD was known to have a bad temper while here in Miami...His other G-2 connections were in Mexico this past summer, and in New Orleans, just five weeks ago. We are in the process of checking out the leads. We already have a few names and places. Men are on the scene interviewing people who may have witnessed the meeting in Mexico City and in New Orleans..." The Miami FBI Office responded: "The Miami Office does not contemplate interview of Jim Buchanan inasmuch as the previous concerning an article by Buchanan, reported in Miami report dated January 25, 1964, in instant caption, reflected that Buchanan deals in rumors an unverified information which he attributed to anonymous sources. [FBI Rep. of James O'Conner 4.4.64]

MARTINEZ AND GONZALEZ WERE WATERGATE BURGLARS

Allen Courtney suggested that S.A. James O'Conner interview JOHN MARTINO, but MARTINO was traveling from city to city on a lecture tour for the John Birch Society. Instead, S.A. James O'Conner interviewed JOHN MARTINO'S associate, Nathan Weyl, who told him OSWALD was a G-2 agent. On December 2, 1963, S.A. James O'Conner interviewed MARTINO, who told him that a confidential source had told him OSWALD was in Miami in October 1962, and made several telephone calls to Cuba from the home of a suspected Castro double-agent. MARTINO said that when OSWALD distributed his Fair Play for Cuba Committee literature in Bayfront Park, Jerry Buchanan attacked him. In January 1964, MARTINO told one of his audiences that he had special knowledge of OSWALD. According to MARTINO, when OSWALD was in Mexico in October 1963, he caught a clandestine flight from the Yucatan Peninsula to Havana, Cuba. S.A. James O'Conner contacted MARTINO a few days after he made this speech. He told S.A. James O'Conner his source for OSWALD'S clandestine trip to Cuba was a high official in the Castro Government. On December 3, 1963, STURGIS supplied the CIA with information on a possible air strike over Cuba. [Index Card (Deleted)-04183] On February 7, 1964, Helene Finan, Chief of the Office of Security, Security Research Staff, CIA, debriefed Hede Massing regarding her knowledge of the circumstances surrounding the Kennedy assassination. [CIA 3.26.64 03681; CIA 1288-1022] Hede Massing, a former Soviet spy who was once the toast of Vienna, had once been married to Gerhart Eisler, an agent of Moscow. Senator Joseph McCarthy used Massing to observe the behavior of American Government employees in Europe. Massing worked with Roy M. Cohen in this regard. [Senator Joe McCarthy - Richard Rovere, Torch Books, 1959] The FBI stated: "Massing worked, and might still work, for the Central Intelligence Agency." [FBI Dallas 100-10461-4075] ANGLETON'S Deputy, James Hunt, was in contact with Hede Massing. [FBI 3.31.64 Branigan to Sullivan; FBI 105-82555-2993, 2464, 2906]

Subject reported on various personalities she heard discussed while she was visiting Sylvia and Nathaniel Weyl in Florida from December 30, 1963, to January 8, 1964.

JOHN MARTINO

Mr. and Mrs. MARTINO visited the Weyls one evening when Massing was present. John Martino and Nathan Weyl are co-authors of the book, I Was Castro's Prisoner, which was published in November 1963. Massing, at this point, cautioned the writer to remember that all she was relating regarding the Weyls remarks were rumors, and or, gossip, and that source has no means of checking the truth of their statements. JOHN MARTINO is the individual who carries the stories to Nathaniel Weyl and both JOHN and Nathaniel are deeply entrenched with the Cuban anti-Castro forces. MARTINO claims to have a friend in Miami who keeps him well-informed on Cuban matters.

MARTINO and Nathaniel spoke of a trip that MARTINO had made to Cuba with an American newspaper woman, one Lapin and two CIA agents. Nathaniel Weyl did not accompany them. It is Massing's opinion that Nathaniel, who is a coward, just welshed on the trip, but that he did finance it. The purpose of the trip was to contact a Cuban who was serving as liaison for the four Russian Generals in charge of training and organizing the Cuban military. The Cuban, who met the group in the water, at the edge of a beach in Cuba, told them that the four Generals wanted to escape and seek asylum in the United States. MARTINO is going ahead with a follow-up plan whereby on a given signal, he and a group would sail to Cuba to pick up the Generals. Weyl is going on a long lecture tour and will not be able to accompany the pick-up team to Cuba.

LEE HARVEY OSWALD

The Cuban friends of the unnamed individual in Miami know that OSWALD contacted the Cuban MI-6 by telephone from a private home in Miami. They also know the man who furnished the information on OSWALD to the FBI.

From the reports given by the Cubans to this unknown individual, it seems very definite that RUBY went to Havana to make a shady deal with a creature by the name of Praskin, who works with the Cuban Communists and who is also tied up with call girls in Cuba.

A friend of Weyl, who ran for the Presidency of Cuba in 1958, shortly will testify before the Senate Internal Security Committee. Massing says this information may be confidential. Sourwine of the Committee, contacted Weyl to get in touch with this individual.

On February 27, 1964, a memorandum from William Branigan to William C. Sullivan was generated:

CIA has furnished a memorandum through Liaison channels indicating that according to a confidential and reliable source, whose sources are unknown, LEE HARVEY OSWALD allegedly was telephonically in contact with MI-6 (Cuban Intelligence) from a private home in Miami, Florida. Further allegations indicate JACK RUBY, alleged assassin of OSWALD, went to Havana, Cuba, to make a shady deal with 'Praskin' who works with the Cuban Communists and was a dope pusher used by the Communists; that a friend of the source claims there is more to Marina Oswald than meets the eye; that Marguerite Oswald, mother of the Subject, is an old line communist and that OSWALD'S return to the United States was part of a Russian 'gimmick.'

CIA has confidentially advised that source of the above data is Hede Massing, a resident of New York City known to the Bureau and CIA, and CIA has no objection to this Bureau contacting her and advising that the information furnished by her to the CIA had been furnished to the FBI.

Bureau files reveal Massing is a former Soviet agent who defected in 1938. She has been utilized by the CIA and has been a source of information of the New York Office since 1947 concerning Soviet espionage. By letter February 4, 1964, captioned 'Foreign Political Matters -Cuba - IS - Cuba. New York' submitted information furnished by Massing concerning JOHN MARTINO and Nathaniel and Sylvia Weyl, which information was similar to that furnished by the CIA in the above-mentioned memo; however, the data concerning OSWALD and RUBY above apparently was not furnished to the New York Office by Massing.

MARTINO has previously been interviewed by Miami, at which time he pretended greater knowledge of Cuban affairs than he actually possessed. He also indicated various statements made concerning LEE HARVEY OSWALD were based on information received from unidentified Cuban aliens, and he no firsthand knowledge or information concerning OSWALD. The unnamed individual in Miami referred to by Massing on page 2 of CIA memo could possibly be MARTINO.

By airtel February 26, 1964, New York was instructed to immediately re-interview Massing for all the information in her possession concerning the OSWALD matter, specifically ascertain basis for all statements made by her to the CIA and immediately set forth additional leads necessary to definitely pin down these allegations. [FBI 105-82555-2464; Branigan to Sullivan 2.27.64]

J. Edgar Hoover initialed and expedited this memorandum. S.A. James O'Conner had received orders from J. Edgar Hoover:

With regard to the information furnished by MARTINO, Bureau desires that MARTINO be pressed to force production of his source in order to pin down this allegation. If he continues to be evasive and uncooperative on this point, set forth results of recontact with him in LHM form suitable for dissemination for President's Commission. Consideration with then be given to suggesting MARTINO be subpoenaed before President's Commission. [FBI 105-82555-33199 - page 2 w/h]

On March 13, 1964, S.A. O'Conner interviewed Nathaniel Weyl, who said he ...was not sure of the identity of his source, with respect to the information that LEE HARVEY OSWALD had contacted the Cuban intelligence by telephone from a private home in Miami. He said that his source for this information may have been a newspaper article written by James Buchanan. He recalled that Buchanan had quoted FRANK STURGIS, described as an individual active in the Cuban situation at Miami, as stating that STURGIS knew that OSWALD had made such a call from Coral Gables, Florida, to the Cuban intelligence office in Miramar, Havana, Cuba. Mr. Weyl said his source for this information may have been JOHN MARTINO, who, in turn, may have obtained the information from either BUCHANAN or STURGIS...With respect to the information that JACK RUBY had made a trip to Havana, Cuba, to deal with an individual named PRASKIN, Mr. Weyl stated he had been informed of this by an old friend, Carlos Marquez Sterling, resident at Washington, D.C...Mr. Weyl said he did believe that OSWALD had been in Miami, Florida, in the past, and it was his recollection that Jim Buchanan, or possibly the latter's brother, Jerry Buchanan, had told him that OSWALD had attempted to infiltrate anti-Castro groups in Miami, but had been rejected by these groups because he was uncommunicative as to his background. Mr. Weyl said that it was probably Jim Buchanan who told him that his brother Jerry had been involved in a scuffle with OSWALD in downtown Miami, and that Jerry Buchanan had punched OSWALD. Mr. Weyl said this incident was supposed to have occurred when OSWALD was observed distributing some pro-Castro literature in Miami...He said he recalled that OSWALD reportedly attempted to join the anti-Castro organizations known as the Directorio Revolucionario Estudiantil (DRE) (Cuban Student Revolutionary Directorate), and Unidad Revolucionario (UR) (Revolutionary Unity). Mr. Weyl said he had no corroborative information concerning the alleged stay of OSWALD in Miami, other than the news articles by Jim Buchanan and contact with Fernando Cabada, described as a leader of UR.

S.A. O'Conner interviewed Fernando Fernandez Cabada, who said he never furnished information to the Weyls regarding OSWALD. On March 24, 1964, S.A. James O'Conner re-interviewed MARTINO.

With respect to information that Cuban friends of MARTINO knew that OSWALD had contacted the Cuban Intelligence Service in Cuba by telephone from a private residence in Miami, Florida, MARTINO claimed this was correct information. He refused to identify the source of such information, claiming that to pinpoint the source could conceivably result in harassment, if not more serious consequences, to the source or his family in Cuba.

MARTINO stated the information concerning such an alleged telephone call by OSWALD to Cuban intelligence did not originate with his friend, Felipe Vidal Santiago, a Cuban exile active in anti-Castro activities. He also stated the information had not originated with STURGIS, an American citizen residing in Miami, who has been engaged in anti-Fidel Castro activities, and who headed an organization called the Anti-Communist International Brigade. Mr. MARTINO stated that the information in this respect had not been received from James Buchanan, although he had discussed the information with Buchanan. MARTINO stated he would contact his confidential source as soon as the latter had returned from Tampa, Florida, to Miami, expected to be March 22, 1964, and would seek to obtain his consent to interview by the FBI.

With respect to the other alleged information that Cubans with whom MARTINO might have contact had stated that JACK RUBY had gone to Havana, Cuba, to engage in a shady deal with one (FNU) Praskin, who was also alleged to work with Cuban communists and be tied up with call girls in Cuba, MARTINO stated as follows:

This information came in the form of a letter from Cuba, which was shown to MARTINO by a Cuban whom MARTINO said was named Jose Madero. He said Madero, a man in his late 30's, had infiltrated back into Cuba as of December 1963, and was thus no longer available. MARTINO said he had known Madero when he was incarcerated in Cuba during the period July 1959 to October 1962. MARTINO said the letter was not directed to Madero, but to another individual not known to MARTINO. He said he had no idea where the letter might now be located. He said the letter related that Praskin had a business on Sanja Street in Havana, and that he supplied American girls to 'Girlie Shows' operated by Chinese in Havana. He said the letter made no mention of the nature of the shady deal alleged to occur between RUBY and Praskin, and did not indicate when RUBY had gone to Havana or how he had traveled...

MARTINO stated this same source had informed him that OSWALD had stayed in the home of a pro-Castro Cuban in Miami, Florida, and had paid this pro-Castro Cuban the cost of a long distance telephone call made from the home of the pro-Castro Cuban to Cuba. MARTINO further stated that according to his source, the pro-Castro Cuban, after the assassination had occurred, made the statement, 'I didn't think it would go this far.' in referring to OSWALD.

MARTINO said that additional information to establish that OSWALD had been in Miami was received was received by him from Jim Buchanan. He said he used to give a lot of stories on the Cuban situation to Buchanan, and during the days immediately following the assassination, Buchanan, during a telephone call, told him that Buchanan's brother, Jerry Buchanan, had a fistfight with LEE HARVEY OSWALD at Miami, Florida, about a year prior to the assassination. According to MARTINO, OSWALD at that time was attempting to get aboard a boat [Alexander Rorke's Violyn III] that was being used by Jerry Buchanan and anti-Castro exiles in connection with their anti-Castro plans. Mr. MARTINO told Jim Buchanan that he intended to use this information in his speeches if it were true, and Buchanan told him to go ahead and do so. Mr. MARTINO stated he never used the information, however, because he considered it 'confidential to the government' and he was 'Not fighting that battle.'

MARTINO also told S.A. O'Conner that OSWALD had secretly flown from the Yucatan Peninsula in Mexico, to Cuba, and that his source had the name of the printer in Miami OSWALD used to run-off his Fair Play for Cuba Committee leaflets, and even had a copy of the check OSWALD used to pay the printer. The funds had been withdrawn from the account of the Miami Chapter of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee.

The FBI:

The only hearsay readily traceable to origin is alleged fight between OSWALD and Jerry Buchanan at Miami about beginning of 1963. MARTINO has in the past pretended greater knowledge of Cuban affairs than he actually possessed, and has declined to divulge his sources. Instructions previously furnished Miami to pin MARTINO down and attempt to press to force production of his source. During interview on March 26, 1964, Jerry Buchanan stated he was one of a group which fought with members of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee distributing pro-Castro literature, Bay Front Park, Miami, in October 1962. Following assassination, he recognized OSWALD as having been one of the members of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee which his group had fought. Also stated OSWALD had been in Miami in March 1963, distributing pro-Castro literature, and stated his brother, James Buchanan, a newspaper reporter, has specific information concerning OSWALD'S being in Miami during these periods. This should be pinned down and run out as above.

[NARA FBI 124-10035-10367]

When the FBI checked Jerry Buchanan's parole records, it found that he was released from the Florida State Penitentiary on October 16, 1962, and was in Tampa, Florida, during the period October 21, 1962, to October 30, 1962. HEMMING told this researcher:

Jerry Buchanan wasn't in the can. He's on the streets. How the fuck do they know where he is? He might have been down rolling fags in the Men's Room at Bay Front Park.

On April 7, 1964, S.A. James O'Conner questioned STURGIS again. STURGIS said he had "quit the IACB because James Buchanan had called John Kennedy a Communist." STURGIS denied hearing about a fight in Bayfront Park between OSWALD and Buchanan. On April 27, 1963, after many visits from S.A. James O'Conner, MARTINO told him that his source was coming to Miami for a meeting of Manuel Artime's group, MRR. MARTINO agreed to approach him on behalf of the FBI. MARTINO was warned that unless this matter was resolved, he would be called before the Warren Commission. MARTINO'S response was: "What can they do, put me in jail?" The SAC of the Miami Field Office stated:

As pointed out in referenced Miami teletype, Miami considers MARTINO to be unreliable. It is further believed that MARTINO would probably welcome a subpoena before the President's Commission, as it would add to his stature, and furnish him additional notoriety on which to capitalize in his lecture engagements which he gives on Communism and Cuba. It is felt, however, he would be as equally evasive with the President's Commission as he was with the Miami Office, and there is no evidence to indicate he could furnish the Commission with anything but untraceable hearsay and speculation. [FBI 105-82555-3995]

The FBI briefly considered having James Buchanan testify before the Warren Commission. [FBI 105-82555-2993] S.A. James O'Conner conducted his final interview with MARTINO on May 11, 1964. MARTINO told him Cuban exile "Oscar Ortiz" was his source for his information on OSWALD. S.A. James O'Conner had the Immigration and Naturalization Service check its files for Oscar Ortiz; it found no such person. The Immigration and Naturalization Service informed S.A. James O'Conner that MARTINO had previously furnished it with erroneous information based on a nonexistent source. STURGIS told S.A. James O'Conner that he personally "could not remember OSWALD." In 1975 STURGIS told this to Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission:

Doesn't ever recall meeting OSWALD. Doesn't know of his (OSWALD) ever coming to Miami. Had no part, direct or indirect, with assassination of the President. Has made past investigation of Kennedy assassination. Thinks there could have been conspiracy...Has been in Dallas several times. Not at time of assassination. Never met Ruby. Feels it's more than just speculation. Lots of hatred vs. Kennedy among Cubans. Very good probability that there was a conspiracy. Some kooks on Tel. have something to say about Kennedy assassination. Radical left can't stand idea that it was one of their own that shot Kennedy. CIA can't control everybody connected with Agency. Could be a question about contract agents. Warren Commission was put there to write the history as government wanted it - not to tell the whole truth. Thinks there's lots of evidence, yet, of conspiracy to be found in Miami. Never met any of the Dallas Derelicts. Miami was hotter anti-Kennedy place than Dallas. Cubans there were upper class and middle class. Stole their way to wealth in Cuba and are now engaged in Cuban crime wave on East Coast. Now have Cuban crime syndicate in U.S. This was the group recruited by Company to overthrow Castro.

When S.A. James O'Conner asked STURGIS if he had another source linking OSWALD to the G-2, STURGIS referred him to MARTINO. MARTINO'S source did not exist. On another occasion, when STURGIS was asked for the name of his source, STURGIS pointed to James Buchanan. When James Buchanan was asked for his source, he pointed to STURGIS. These guys were the Tweed Gang of disinformation.

DRE DISINFORMATION

The second James Buchanan article in the Sun-Sentinel that linked OSWALD to Fidel Castro also accused the FBI of preventing the DRE from distributing information that would have supported James Buchanan's initial article. James Buchanan claimed that certain members of the DRE knew of OSWALD'S visits to Miami, and knew of the Bayfront Park incident. S.A. James O'Conner went to the Miami office of the DRE. Everyone there had no knowledge of the FBI preventing the distribution of any of the DRE's information on OSWALD, with the exception of DRE member Eduardo Diaz Lanz, the brother of Pedro Diaz Lanz and Marcos Diaz Lanz, who said he vaguely remembered the story. Eduardo Diaz Lanz had brought STURGIS to the DRE office several times following November 22, 1963, and said he may have given him the information during one of these visits. S.A. James O'Conner again questioned STURGIS, who told him that Eduardo Diaz Lanz told him that the FBI prevented the DRE from releasing proof of OSWALD'S G-2 connections. STURGIS told S.A. James O'Conner that Jerry Buchanan had told him about OSWALD'S visit to Miami, about his fight with OSWALD in Bayfront Park, and that OSWALD had tried to infiltrate the International Anti-Communist Brigade.

SOLOMON PRATKINS

On December 21, 1963, the Miami FBI Field Office received information that one Hose Antonio Juan had received a letter from his son living in Cuba wherein it was alleged that RUBY had visited a Mr. Pranski in Havana in late 1962 or early 1963. On December 24, 1963, the DRE released a letter from a woman in Havana which stated

RUBY had a meeting in 1963 with Solomon Pratkins, a G-2 agent who used a gift shop for a front. The FBI reported: "The statement that RUBY visited Communist Cuba last year, as attributed to a New Orleans Cuban exile, refers to one CARLOS BRINGUIER, a New Orleans delegate to the DRE." [FBI Memo Rosen to Belmont 2.11.64 44-24016-1110, NR 3.9.64, NR 3.12.64] On December 24, 1963, the DRE affiliate in Cuba published the Solomon Pratkins story in its underground mimeographed paper, Accion Cubana, founded in May 1960. [FBI-109-609-6] This periodical was allegedly funded by Fulgencio Batista. [CIA March 1, 1962 To: C/WHD from Chief of Station WAVE] The FBI requested by memo dated January 7, 1964, that the CIA attempt to verify this rumor through sources in Cuba.

On January 9, 1964, ANGLETON received this memo:

9 January 1964 SAS 64-18
MEMORANDUM FOR: Chief CI/Staff
James Angleton
SUBJECT Memo received from AMTOUT-1

Attached is a translation of a memo sent to Carlos Marquez Sterling. Sterling gave a copy of the memo to AMTROUT-1, an SAS/EDE asset, who passed it on to us. "The Brigadier of Giron, Sr. Evidio Pereira, who is in constant communication with Cuba, informs the General Delegate of the Movimiento Patriotic() Cuba Libre, ... news of great importance.

1. Notify the Pentagon of this fact: Ruby, the assassin of Oswald was in Havana a year ago. He is a friend and customer of a citizen named Praskin, owner or manager of a novelty shop for tourists located between Animas y Trocadero, Paseo dui Prado, in front of the Hotel Sevilla.

This information, received in Miami, as noted at the beginning of this memorandum, were received by Brigadier of Brigade 2506, Evidio Pereira, who is ready to verify them. New York, 29 December 1963.

Pereira is probably Evidio B. Pereira Acosta, DPOB 12 March 1927, Graf, Carrilo, Las Villas, 201-298242, member of Brigade 2506. There are no SAS traces on Praskin.

ANGLETON reported to the FBI on January 30, 1964, that an unevaluated and unconfirmed report of a visit by RUBY to Cuba in late 1962, or early 1963, had been received from Havana in the form of an article in Accion Cubana. [CSCI 3/779,814] ANGLETON advised that the allegation could possibly be verified through one Pereira Acosta who resided in Miami, Florida. [FBI 44-24016-1047] In March 1964, the CIA reported that it's source who furnished lists of passengers flying from Mexico to Cuba could not locate RUBY, Rubenstein, etc. [FBI 44-24016-1222] MARTINO also told the FBI the Solomon Pratkins tale. On August 2, 1976, after STURGIS revived the Pratkins tale in the media, the CIA commented:

The Agency reported to the FBI in CSCI 3/779, 814 on January 30, 1964, that an unevaluated and unconfirmed report of a visit by Ruby to Cuba in late 1962 or early 1963 had been received from Havana. This report was actually based on a two page mimeographed newsletter entitled 'Accion' which was mailed from Cuba in an envelope postmarked December 28, 1963, purportedly by an underground anti-Castro group. This newsletter, received in Miami on January 13, 1964, by the anti-Castro group known as the DRE, was widely circulated in the Cuban exile community and was the subject of a newspaper article in the January 29, 1964, edition of the Miami News under the headline 'Ruby Visited Cuba -- Exiles Say.' R. Wall DC/CI/OG.

THE DRE IN MADRID

On December 3, 1963, the CIA reported that on:

1. November 27, 1963, the CIA Station, Madrid, received the following information from Source Two: On the morning of November 22, 1963, Amparo Godinez, the owner of the Marquesa De Cuba bar located in Madrid, overheard former Cuban journalist Baston Baquero tell Rosendo Canto Hernandez, editor of Accion Cubana, that he had received a letter stating Kennedy would be killed that day.
2. Source Two received information on November 26, 1963, from Maria Manuela de Canal whose address is Plaza Del Nino Jesus No. 6, 2nd floor, Apt. D, Madrid. Maria Manuela de Canal is a close friend of Amparo Godinez. Source Two en route JMWAVE area from Madrid and unable learn further details of alleged conversation.
3. Since AMWORLD program requires that any contact between (illegible) and ODYOKE not be revealed in any follow up on this information, Madrid Station may wish to center inquiries on Baston Baquero via liaison with local service.
4. Have not passed above to 30FGA Miami.

On December 5, 1963, C/WH 3 cabled the CIA Station in Madrid:

1. Please follow up this case. Suggest you have Source 3 question persons mentioned to see if any foundation at all to this story. Imperative that Source 1 [Baston Baquero] not be revealed as source (deleted).
2. Please slug all traffic on assassination. [CIA 321-123]

**On morning of November 22., owner of bar "Marquesa de Cuba" in Madrid overheard former Cuban journalist tell one Canto that he had received a letter stating GPIDEAL (3) would be killed that day.

On December 7, 1963, the CIA Station in Madrid sent this cable to C/WH 4:

1. Source 1, [Baston Baquero] questioned by Source Two on the night of December 6, 1963. Baston Baquero said "he and Rosendo Canto Hernandez, Alberto Salas Amaro, and Jose Chelala Lopez after attending lecture together at Syndical Palace, Madrid, entered bar 'Marquesa De Cuba' at about 8:00 p.m. on the night of November 22, 1963. They were told by bartender, who was alone at the time, that President Kennedy had been assassinated. Salas Amaro called his wife who confirmed this, and group went to UPI office nearby to read the ticker. They later returned to bar to have drinks and then the group broke up.

2. Baston Baquero said Amparo Godinez was in the bar when group returned, but refused his invitation to drink and left almost immediately. This was the only time Baston Baquero saw Amparo Godinez during that day. He did not see him on the morning of November 22, 1963.

3. Baston Baquero said he received no word, verbal or written or even rumor that President Kennedy would be killed and any allegation that he made any statement to this effect at any time to anyone is completely absurd and absolutely untrue.

4. Baston Baquero added that Rosendo Canto Hernandez, editor of Accion Cubana who is a well-known American hater, was the only person in the bar to express satisfaction at Kennedy's death. [CIA 345-139, 315-119, 277-105; Allen v. DOD CIA 12129]

CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATIC MOVEMENT'S DISINFORMATION

In mid-January 1964 STURGIS and James Buchanan flew to Panama and Costa Rica and investigated setting up a training base. The FBI had pressured The Sun-Sentinel into firing James Buchanan, to insure that no more of his "OSWALD in Miami" stories appeared. A FBI document dated February 5, 1964, concerning Orlando Bosch read:

Synopsis: FRANK FIORINI, admitted associate of William Johnson, denied implication in or any specific knowledge of attempted MIRR air raid December 28, 1963. Dr. Orlando Bosch gave statement to press claiming that bombs would have been dropped on crowds in Havana celebrating 5th anniversary of the revolution on January 2, 1964, had not boat been seized carrying bombs to secret base in the Caribbean. MM T-1 has advised that Bosch gave this distorted statement to the press for propaganda purposes as MIRR intended only to bomb (deleted) Cuba. MM-T1 also advised that Bosch is presently attempting to raise more money to carry out further bombing raid against Cuba."

The FBI interviewed FRANK:

FIORINI is a personal friend of WILLIAM JOHNSON. About two weeks ago Fiorini was with JOHNSON at Broward International Airport. JOHNSON introduced FIORINI to Charles Bush, who operates an airline charter business at that airport. This was the first and last contact FIORINI had with Bush. After this introduction, JOHNSON went with Bush to the latter's office at the airport, and FIORINI went to a nearby restaurant where he chanced upon Antonio Sansone, a Cuban exile pilot. FIORINI said that he did not know the nature of JOHNSON'S business with Bush. He denied specific knowledge of JOHNSON being involved in an air raid attempt in cooperation with ORLANDO BOSCH. He states however, that he knew JOHNSON was "up to something" but he did not know what.

On April 28, 1964, S.A. James O'Conner interviewed James Buchanan, who was employed by Caribbean Press Service, a subsidiary of the Agencia De Informaciones Periodisticas (AIP), a CIA front exposed by The Miami Herald. James Buchanan said that he knew the name of OSWALD'S printer in Miami, but he was sworn to secrecy. STURGIS associate Victor Paneque supplied S.A. James O'Conner with a story that linked OSWALD to a G-2 agent named Fernandez. The FBI documents about this interview listed S.A. James O'Conner as Miami SAC. Richard Davis played a part in the imaginary scenario of Victor Paneque. The CIA reported:

DDP relationship: A POA for PANEQUE's use was granted the Miami Station on November 13 1964. The Miami request had stated that he was to be used "as an infiltree and radio operator. A report of August 10, 1964 stated that he had been infiltrated into Cuba in June 1964 on behalf of the Christian Democratic Movement. Whether he was used operationally is not stated in PANEQUE's 201. He was terminated effective October 31, 1965 for lack of an immediate operational use.

On February 25, 1964, Cyril B. Hamblett, Rear Admiral, U.S. Navy retired told the FBI that Interview for all pertinent information concerning MDC plans to drop magnetic mines on Cuban ports and attack ...

While in Miami during the week of January 13, 1964 Hamblett was contacted on three occasions by Jose Ignacio Rasco who reportedly seeking assistance, guidance and financial help in connected with the proposed dropping of magnetic mines in five Cuban ports. Rasco and his group, the Christian Democratic Movement (MDC) are also reportedly interesting in effecting an operation wherein one plane would bomb Guantanamo Naval Base; the plane would be imputed to Castro forces, thereby creating an immediate anti-Castro movement in the United States...Hamblett also stated that Jose Ignacio Rasco had told him that the CIA had approached the Christian Democratic Movement to offer assistance to Christian Democratic Movement group which is in some Central American country. Hamblett had already furnished this information to Naval Intelligence Unit DIO-3ND. FBI Bufiles indicated Hamblett was Subject of an Interstate Transportation of Stolen Property investigation in 1957 in which prosecution was declined. [FBI 97-4110-102]

A highly deleted document dated April 8, 1964 stated Rosco "told Hamblett that the CIA agent's name was (Deleted as of 2010) who made this offer, but nothing has ever materialized. For info of Bureau Captain John F. Brownlee is Chief of DIO 3ND 90 Church Street, NYC." [FBI FOIA/PA #211,326] On March 4, 1964, the FBI disseminated a lengthy Letter Head Memorandum about the Christian Democratic Movement:

Batista said naturally he has some opposition in the organization. Some people consider him as being at odds with U. S. Government policy. Batista said it was his opinion that the United States political aims and foreign policy does not coincide with that of the Cuban exiles. To work with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), is to work for the U. S. aims and goals, which are not necessarily the aims and goals of Cuba for Cuban exiles.

According to Batista, there is no mutual field of interest between the United States Government and Cuban exiles. For the U. S. Government to overthrow the present government of Cuba, is to resolve a United States problem, not a Cuban problem. If Cuban exiles would overthrow the present government of Cuba, there would still be many U. S. Government problems not resolved. Batista said he had in the past visited Washington, D. C., and conferred with U. S. Government officials in an effort to establish a mutual field of interest where Cuban exiles and the U. S. Government could work for mutual benefit, without success. Batista charged that while the U. S. Government complains there is no unity among Cuban exiles, he believes the United States actually does not want unity. He alleged that during 1960, when the Frente Revolucionario Democrato existed, and later became the Cuban Revolutionary Council (CRC), a unity organization, the CIA still worked against unity of Cuban exile groups. He said CIA did not work for unity within the CRC, but dealt with each individual organization on different terms. CIA refused to work with the leaders of the CRC as representatives of the several organizations. He alleged the policy has persisted to the present time. Batista stated that military operations from the United States against Cuba would probably be continued by himself and other members of the Christian Democratic Movement. They prefer to work in Miami, Florida, area, because of its closeness to Cuba, good facilities for operating boats, availability of the large number of Cubans to serves as mechanics, and to do other necessary labor. [FBI 97-4110-86]

On April 7, 1964, STURGIS was interviewed by the FBI "in connection with another matter." [FBI 2-1499-129 pages withheld] On April 21, 1964, U.S. Customs Agents raided the Headquarters of the Christian Democratic Movement and arrested the leader of the Christian Democratic Movement, Laureano Batista Falla. On April 27, 1964, the FBI generated a document about the Christian Democratic Movement and the DRE that was deleted except for the words "U.S. Customs." [FBI 4110-104 (?) 4.27.64]

INTERNATIONAL ANTI-COMMUNIST BRIGADE OPERATIONS STURGIS SUSPECTED CIS AGENT: MAY 1964

In 1964 an Index Card was generated by the CIA concerning STURGIS which read in part "Ref DBA-82236 September 2, 1964, FIORINI, FRANK; FIORINI, FRED; FRANK, ATTILE; CAMBELL, FRANK; ATTILA, FRANK; BONELLI, FRANK. Suspected Cuban Intelligence Service Agent. Manager of Courteous Motors, Miami, May 1964." [Corr Card. #UFG 2194120] In a deposition related to STURGIS' lawsuit against the New York Police Department he said that in the 1960's he used the name Bonelli "in an operation in Central America. It was an operation to do, the operation specifically was to make commando raids against Cuban companies." [USDC SDNY 78 Civ.5113] The results of the FBI investigation of STURGIS during the period of December 10, 1963, to May 13, 1964, were deleted except for these paragraphs:

Information set forth in this report reflecting interview of Subject (FRANK STURGIS) by S.A. James J. O'Conner is contained in an FD-320 located in Miami 105-8342, Bufile 105-82555, captioned 'LEE HARVEY OSWALD, AKA; IS-R-CUBA.' (Deleted as of 2010) Miami is not recommending the opening of any cases based on (deleted as of 2010) communication. For the information of the Bureau, on May 11, 1964, Wallace Shanley Assistant Supervising Customs Agent, Miami, Florida, advised S.A.

Leman L. Stafford Jr that he had conversed with the Subject on frequent occasions over the past few months. He stated subject has furnished him very little valuable information in the recent past and felt at this time any active investigation conducted by the Miami Office would not jeopardize the relationship between the subject and Customs. Shanley added that he is not utilizing Subject as source anymore, though Subject does contact him infrequently. The extensive period of this investigation was necessitated by various expeditious technical matters assigned to reporting agent. (Deleted – names of informants)." [FBI 2-1499-129]

STURGIS AND AMERICA'S AIR DEFENSE: MAY 1964

The May 26, 1964, issue of the Pompano Beach Sun-Sentinel contained an article captioned "I Flew Mercy Mission to Cuban Guerillas." The source for this article was "Manuel Fernandez" who claimed to be a member of the 30th of November Movement and the International Anti-Communist Brigade. The article stated that a twin-engine aircraft took off from a South Florida airstrip shortly after midnight, Monday morning, May 25, 1964, carrying cargo of food, equipment, one hundred and fifty thousand propaganda leaflets and a complete field hospital. Three persons were allegedly on the plane which flew a supply mission to 30th of November forces fighting guerrilla war in Eastern Cuba. On May 25, 1964, the International Anti-Communist Brigade announced it had conducted a bombing raid over Cuba. The next day several Congressmen inquired how the International Anti-Communist Brigade team eluded the air defenses of the United States on its return. The FBI reported:

On May 27, 1964, Elmo Rainbolt, Chief Patrol Inspector, U.S. Border Patrol, advised he received a telephone call from Paul Rogers, member U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C., on morning May 27, 1964, in which Rogers stated following: Rogers had received information that an aircraft had asked for, and been given, a checkout inspection by United States Border Patrol on May 25, 1964, at Fort Lauderdale International Airport. A twin engine Beechcraft then allegedly departed at 12:30 a.m. that date from Tamiami airport, Miami, as a substitute for the inspected plane. It allegedly returned, undetected by radar, to the Tamiami Airport at 4:15 a.m. May 25, 1964. Rainbolt said his investigation had revealed no inspection or flight plans were filed during that period, and there was no report on radar of any unknown penetration of the air defense identification zone...On May 27, 1964, Arthur Eno, head of the FAA Miami advised he has been unable to develop any information concerning the flight as alleged by Representative Rogers. [FBI Miami 2-1499 NR 180 6.15.64]

On May 26, 1964, the Pentagon told a House Committee that investigations by four government agencies showed that a reported flight on May 25, 1964, by members of the International Anti-Communist Brigade to Cuba, did not take place, and was a concocted publicity story. The Defense Department issued a press release which stated that the raid never occurred. [FBI 2-1499-131, 132] The Associated Press reported that the U.S. Defense Department had the statement of STURGIS in which he said: "To the best of my knowledge a raid on Cuba on May 25, 1964, did not take place. I declare that U.S. radar defenses were not violated while leaving or entering the U.S." On June 3, 1964, United States Customs, Miami, advised the FBI that FIORINI denied any connection with alleged flight. A CIA representative told the FBI (Deleted). [FBI 2-1499 NR 6.4.64 p.2] Gaeton Fonzi reported that on May 27, 1964:

Priority telegram regarding alleged air drop into Cuba: FYI Colonel Sam Kail received a call from General Maxwell Taylor's office on May 26, 1964, referring to an article in the Pompano Beach Sun Sentinel regarding reported air drop over Cuba...The story reported that the International Anti-Communist Brigade, and the 30th of November Movement, collaborated on the flight. Allegedly FRANK STURGIS, Craig Sheldon and James Buchanan were involved.

On May 28, 1964, the FBI in Miami generated a document about STURGIS and the 30th of November Movement: "For information of the Bureau, U.S. Customs Agency, Miami, is presently endeavoring to locate and interview (Deleted) concerning the 30th of November Organization's participation in the alleged flight on May 25, 1964, over Cuba." This highly deleted report indicated that a copy of this document was filed in STURGIS' file. [FBI 12-1499 NR 6.15.64] Circa May 30, 1964, the CIA received a cable about James Buchanan:

1. Miami Herald May 27, 1962 carries front page item by James Buchanan entitled, "Miro Fades As Exile Chief: Three Latin Leaders Behind Ray." Article flatly states Miro and council have been replaced by Manuel Ray with backing Gov Nuno Marin, Pres. Romulo Betancourt and former President Jose Figueras, that Ray has taken over post with "blessing of the United States." Further article states, "From variety sources Herald learned that Miro was notified of change only this week" and that Ray's reappointment as "Chief in Exile" came from "underground in Cuba" according to Joaquin Godoy, provisional MRP head in Miami. After furnishing resume Cuban activities since origin of AMBUD, article credits Cubans in Miami as saying "the new man in the field" is Adolf. A. Berle, Jr. who has been special assistant to State Department and is also "member of President Kennedy's special task force on Latin America." Implication being that Berle is running new United States sponsored Cuban effort.

2. This release causing some furor in local Cuban colony to extent at least one OPS Agent destined for isolation training has asked to be relieved if the (illegible) story. Meanwhile WAVE checks with knowledgeable contacts has produced little other than William S. Wibalda's statement that Buchanan journalistic reputation indicates he is inaccurate and sensationalist. AMCLATTER-1 and PASSOVOY attempting to discreetly trace Buchanan source for "U.S. blessing."

3. Buchanan has previously attacked Miro during the return of Playa Giron prisoners Miami. Have no real insight info significance these attacks but believe they could reflect Buchanan or Miami Herald attempts to force changes in United States posture re: Cuba.

4. Expect article will have further repercussions as it spreads. Wish alert HQS that it may be necessary initiate action discredit Buchanan story as well as reassure Miro. Will forward suggestions this regard after we have opportunity to further asses story's impact. Andrew K. Reuteman

In June 1964, the FBI received information from its New Orleans office that the Christian Democratic Movement planned to bomb Havana's oil refineries. [Airtel To SAC NO From Hoover (97-4110-114) mailed 6.17.64] On July 14, 1964, STURGIS furnished the CIA with information on a raid planned by Orlando Bosch. On July 16, 1964, another Letter Head Memorandum about the FBI Christian Democratic Movement was generated.

Re: MOVIMIENTO DEMOCRATA CRISTIANO

(CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATIC MOVEMENT, INTERNAL SECURITY, NEUTRALITY MATTERS)

MM T-1 who has been involved in Cuban revolutionary activities for the past six years on July 7, 1964 furnished the following information.

Laureano Batista Falla continues to be the Military Chief of the Christian Democratic Movement maintaining headquarters at 1732 NW 7th Street, Miami, Florida. On April 21, 1964, representatives of the Dade County Sheriff's Office and the United States Customs Service raided Christian Democratic Movement headquarters, confiscated a large amount of arms and ammunition, and arrested Batista. Later Batista established the military headquarters at 837 Southwest 29th Ave. The MDC continued to maintain its organization office at 1732 Northwest Seventh Street, Miami. Batista established the military headquarters on 29th Avenue to have a point where arms and ammunition could be stored and which members of the military section could use to plan infiltration and attack missions against Cuba. Batista left Miami Florida with several people and two boats on about July 3, 1964. He has been in periodic contact with the second in command of his military action group, Angel Vega. On July 5, 1964 Batista returned to Miami, Florida, and visited with Vega at military headquarters. He said he had just returned from three infiltration operations into Cuba and was accompanied by Victor Paneque, also known as Commandant Diego. Batista indicated he had returned to Miami for the purpose of trying to obtain additional arms and ammunition and military equipment for some of his men who are presently outside the United States, not in Cuba, but who are believed to be somewhere in the Bahamas. Batista stated the purpose of his trips to Cuba was to infiltrate equipment and some men. The two groups which he now has in Cuba will eventually form guerilla bands. At the present time these two groups are living quietly with their relative in Cuba. They are waiting the time when Batista can supply them with adequate arms and ammunition, at which time they will form guerilla bands and go into the mountains. [FBI 97-4110-123 page 3 w/h]

The Christian Democratic Movement was still active from 1965 to 1968. On October 30, 1964, the FBI generated this LHM:

On August 9, 1964 Batista stated he wanted to leave the following day to visit his military training camp outside the United States. Batista stated he planned to meet an unidentified person in the parking lot of an unidentified supermarket in Miami during the night hours, to receive some home-made bombs, which previously belonged to Frank Sturgis an American mercenary and adventurer living in Miami Florida...During the middle of August 1964 Batista was studying a number of detail maps of Cuba. Some of these maps bear the stamp "For Official Use Only." These maps were obtained by Batista from Robert K. Brown, an American adventurer, part time writer, former University of Colorado student and U.S. Army Reserve Captain. These maps appear to be classified and are the regular military maps used by the United States Army...Patria is a Spanish language paper published weekly in Miami, Florida. On September 11, 1964, Patria contained an article stating that the MDC issued a lengthy document accusing American agencies of being led by Cuban exile movements that are split up and divided. The MDC claimed the United States Government artificially creates leaders for the Cuban exile movements, persecutes independent Cuban exile organizations, and interferes in Cuban exile affairs. The MDC uses the term "check eaters" to refer to those person or organizations which have received financial aid or backing from the U.S. Government. [FBI 97-4110-132]

STURGIS: 1965 TO 1967

On February 3, 1965, Bill Johnson arranged an air strike against Cuba for Orlando Bosch's MIRR. Jack Brooks Wright crashed in Freeport after similar raid on January 17, 1965. In January 2004 I received this email:

In Nodule 19, you mention a pilot killed in the Freeport by the name of Jack Brooks Wright who worked for the anti-communist organization. I am his son. For the record, the twin-engine Beechcraft flying under the radar mentioned in the paragraphs prior (the May 25th raid) was more than likely my father's plane (A twin Beech Bonanza). I have heard about my father's trips into Cuba under the radar for years from my Mother and all about the man from the anti-communist organization who was stealing from the Cubans. I have always suspected that my father's crash was not an accident, but after reading the accounts and knowing what else I know from my mother and the event around the time of his death, my suspicions now seem real. He refused to fly for the organization again and coincidentally crashed several days later February 2, 1965. The day before someone else flew the raid (February 3rd, 1965). My father also flew into Mexico several times around the time of the Ruby flight and knew the Cuban route well. I was really shaken up by the article. I found it by typing in "Jack Brooks Wright" pilot and when shocked when your site appeared. I am going to do some more research into my father's crash. If you know anything else, I would appreciate it.

With Respect,
Wesley Brooks Wright

In 1966 STURGIS was employed at the Gulfstream Park Race Track as a bartender, and had been fingerprinted in conjunction with this employment on March 12, 1966. [FBI 139-4089-1435] In April 1967, STURGIS was involved in a plan to blow up a Cuban ship in a Mexican seaport. Ronnie Sturgis told the FBI: "I was present when explosives and detonators were hidden in the body of my father's car at a Miami garage. Orlando Bosch was there. The car would be placed on a ship at Vera Cruz. It was an anti-Castro action." On June 28, 1967, STURGIS was mentioned in "FBI File #45-1102, Subject: Unknown; Attempt to Bomb Freight Boat Oro Verde of Nassau Bahamas Registry, Pier Three, Miami, Florida, October 18, 1966." On September 25, 1967, the Miami News contained an article captioned "Exile Ransom Try Seeks Swiss Aid." This article indicated that STURGIS' organization, International Anti-Communist Brigade, was endeavoring to arrange ransom of 500 Cuban political prisoners in exchange for five million dollars worth of medicines and foodstuffs. Geraldine Shamma joined STURGIS in attempting to carry out the ransom plan.

Mrs. Shamma stated the committee is comprised of six Cuban woman and herself, each of whom were former Cuban prisoners in Cuba and an "American anti-Castro adventurer" FRANK FIORINI. The article related Shamma announced the ransom had allegedly been pledged by several anti-communist Latin American "businessmen, politicians and military men", whose names were being withheld by the committee. Alter stated if a favorable reply from Fidel Castro should be relayed by the Czechoslovakian embassy, ne then "would consider" travelling to Cuba to start negotiations.

On December 7, 1967, Mr. Henry Taylor, Office of the Coordinator of Cuban Affairs, United States Department of State, advised that the International Anti-Communist Brigade had alleged 15 million dollars was available for use in obtaining the release of Cuban political prisoners. Reportedly, Shamma has been in contact with the Czechoslovakian Embassy in Washington, and allegedly obtained permission from the Cuban Government to enter and leave Cuba. Mr. Taylor stated Shamma had not been in contact with his office since their first meeting several months previously. On December 8, 1967, Shamma declared to Replica that she would go to Cuba to negotiate the freedom of political prisoners. According to an article which appeared in this publication on December 4, 1967, Shamma was quoted as saying she was 'prepared for any eventuality.'...This article also reflected she had exhibited to a reporter of Replica a photostatic copy of an answer from the Czechoslovakian Embassy, Washington, D.C. stating the Cuban Government was studying her request. Shamma added she was ready to go to Cuba and personally talk with Fidel Castro, if that were possible, in order to help rescue the Cuban political prisoners. Benjamin Alter [IACB legal advisor] indicated the two principal members of the IACB connected with this activity were Geraldine Shamma and FRANK FIORINI. They reportedly had financial supporters from 12 different Latin American countries however, their identities were not disclosed. [FBI 105-172694-2p]

In 1968 STURGIS met with SANTO TRAFFICANTE. He told the HSCA: "I met him once in a Miami restaurant in 1968." In July 1968 FIORINI formulated OPERATION SWORD. The FBI reported:

During June 1968, information was received from various persons in the Miami area that STURGIS was attempting to organize a mercenary force to fight in Cuba. STURGIS solicited volunteers for this force through advertisements placed in South Florida newspapers. Several persons answered the ads were interviewed and verified that they had been offered varying amounts of money to become part of STURGIS' mercenary force organized to fight Castro forces in Cuba. (Deleted)

STURGIS associate Ray Sandstrom placed a newspaper ad for adventurers. STURGIS stated: "I believe Ray flew for the CIA in Broward, Fort Lauderdale. Yeah, I received information that Ray was working for the CIA." Max Gonzalez, a close associate of STURGIS, screened the applicants. Out of 60 applicants 11 were chosen. The men were to meet in Guadalajara, Mexico, however, when they arrived, they found that the hotel they were supposed to stay at had been torn down. After two weeks of training in the mud, they went to Progreso, Mexico. In October 1968, a boat load of mercenaries commanded by STURGIS left Progreso and headed toward Cuba, but ran aground off the coast of Belize, British Honduras. The FBI reported:

On October 23, 1968, and October 24, 1968, STURGIS and 12 other individuals were arrested by British Honduras authorities on charges of illegal entry. Various weapons, ammunitions and supplies were confiscated from the group at the time of arrest. FIORINI and his group reportedly had hijacked a 24-foot yacht, Amigo, in order to transport themselves and their supplies to a remote island off British Honduras. All participants interviewed at Miami, and most admitted knowledge of participating in a military operation against Cuba. At the time of interview FIORINI indicated Col. Francisco Quesada, and at least 25 other Cuban exiles participating in the plan were to rendezvous with the Amigo, but that the rendezvous had failed when the Amigo ran aground through the incompetency of its captain. It was through this accident that the boat was forced into the port of Belize, British Honduras, for repairs and re-fueling. No charges were lodged against FIORINI and his group by the U.S. as a result of this incident. [FBI 139-4089-394]

On October 26, 1968, the Domestic Intelligence Division of the FBI prepared a "TREAT AS YELLOW" URGENT cable about STURGIS, much of which was withheld:

Previous data indicated FRANK FIORINI, long-time anti-Castroite and head of anti-Castro International Anti-Communist Brigade claimed his group would assist Guatemalan Government in cleaning out communist guerillas in exchange for Guatemalan assistance in invasion of Cuba. FIORINI and some 12 men reportedly recently departed Florida for Mexico. Department October 17, 1968, advised activities of group constitute possible violation of neutrality statutes and we are investigating. On October 24, 1968 US Consul, Merida, Mexico, advised group observed boarding vessel in Mexico and alerted authorities in Guatemala and British Honduras.

Attached data indicates our Consul in Belize, British Honduras, has advised the arrest Fiorini and group. Fiorini claimed group planned landing in Cuba. Attached data was furnished to by teletype to State, CIA and military intelligence agencies [Department of the Army, Air Force and to the Defense Intelligence Agency]. State was requested to furnish background data to Consul in Belize. Data is also being furnished to Internal Security Division, Customs, and Miami Office. [FBI 105-172964-19]

STURGIS told the US Counsel that the plan of the group was to land south side of Cuba and enter mountains. "Charles Connelle was identified as Jerry Buchanan. Governor, British Honduras appears inclined turn all over to Mexican Government. Fiorini admitted coercion of Mexican Captain who was handcuffed at one point during trip. Fiorini desires return to US and requested lawyer Ray Sandstrom and Senator Smathers be advised." The FBI had checked on STURGIS with its representative in Mexico City. The representative cabled "brief, descriptive data on the International Anti-Communist Brigade" to the U.S. Consul in Belize. [FBI 105-172694-37] The FBI noted the departure of STURGIS from Belize aboard TACA Airlines on October 31, 1968. [FBI 105-172694-30, 31 FBI 105-172694-29 – 35 NARA Record Number: 124-10302-10152]

THE NATURE OF THE MISSION

Was STURGIS involved in an attempt to hijack a Soviet freighter and ransom it for the U.S. spy ship Pueblo and its crew? STURGIS told Paul Meskil:

The men were told it was to be a commando raid into Cuba to free political prisoners from Castro's concentration camps.' To lend credence to his story, STURGIS displayed a map showing the locations of Cuban prisons and prison camps. He also had a list of prisoners who supposedly were to be freed. None of the men, not even Gonzalez, were told of the real objective. 'This operation was planned months in advance. The CIA in Miami was aware of it. So were several other federal agencies, including the FBI and Customs. The objective was not to raid Cuba, but to rendezvous with another ship off the coast of Mexico and, with the assistance of this ship, seize a Russian vessel. We were to meet a Cuban vessel. I assume it was a naval vessel, commanded by Cuban navy officers who were disenchanted with Castro. The orders for completing the operation were aboard the Cuban ship. The captain also had a sailing schedule listing arrivals and departures of all Soviet and Communist bloc vessels in the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico. We hoped to grab a Soviet fishing trawler that was actually a spy ship. This ship was to be intercepted by the Cuban vessel. The captain of the Soviet ship probably would not be suspicious of a boarding party wearing Cuban Navy uniforms. We would then capture the ship. We were to take it off the coast of Venezuela. The orders were not to go into any port, but to stay off the coast. Certain officials in the Venezuelan Government were aware of the plan. They would participate in negotiations for the release of the captive ship and crew. A statement would be issued to the effect that we wanted to exchange the ship and crew for certain political prisoners in Cuba. But this was a ruse. Then we would go into the second phase of the operation - to dicker with the Russians and the North Koreans for the release of the U.S.S. Pueblo, its captain and crew, who were still in confinement at this time.'

The FBI reported:

STURGIS had plans to lead his army to a rendezvous in the mountains of Mexico and from there proceed to Guatemala. STURGIS claimed the Guatemalan Government would be assisted by his organization in cleaning out Communist guerillas from the hills of Guatemala. When this accomplished, Guatemalan Government supposedly had promised to assist STURGIS in a planned invasion of Cuba.

Max Gonzalez claimed OPERATION SWORD was a mission to assassinate Fidel Castro. On July 25, 1975, an unidentified component of the CIA prepared this Memorandum for the Record on Max Gonzalez (No Security File):

One Max Gorman Gonzalez, who may be identical with the name of interest, circa early June 1975 stated publicly that he planned to sue the CIA for involving him in what he charged was a plot headed by Watergate burglar FRANK STURGIS to assassinate Fidel in 1968. Apparently Max Gorman Gonzalez is basing his suit on recent claims of FRANK STURGIS that he, STURGIS, has been a long time CIA employee. STURGIS' claim of CIA employment is not supported by security records. Gonzalez claims that he was used unwittingly, without his consent or knowledge, by the CIA. Gonzalez claimed use by this Agency vis STURGIS apparently involves the arrest in October 1968 of STURGIS, GONZALEZ and several other individuals connected with STURGIS' International Anti-Communist Brigade while they were attempting to invade Cuba in contravention of the Neutrality Act.

In November 1968 the FBI questioned Max Gonzalez (born December 29, 1929; aka Max Gorman) about this aborted operation. He told them: "It was a CIA operation. STURGIS was a CIA agent at the time, although his employment was not supported by Security records, and may still not be. He was in contact with other CIA agents in Guadalajara and Mexico City. STURGIS never told me what our real mission was, but I knew it was important to the Agency." The FBI generated a message about the International Anti-Communist Brigade dated October 26, 1968. [CIA FOIA F81-0351 D0532] Due to Senator George Smathers pulling some strings, no federal indictments were sought against STURGIS or his group, however Max Gonzalez was arrested on a outstanding warrant for bad checks. [FBI 105-172694-34] The FBI questioned Max Gonzalez at Miami International Airport:

He has been involved actively in the IACB for about four years. He that, to his knowledge, FIORINI is the only IACB leader, although he feels for the operation which ended abortively at Belize, British Honduras, FIORINI must have been working with some other group of persons outside the IACB as FIORINI does not have the finances or organizational ability to mount such an operation. Upon reflection, however, he conceded that the cash outlay for this venture had been minimal in that the men were not paid for their services, furnished their own transportation, and, for the most part, their own food, lodging and equipment. He also indicated on reflection that the organizational work for the operation had actually been very slipshod and amateurish.

He said that any indication by FIORINI that the true leader of the expedition was a Colonel Francisco Quesada would be, in his opinion, a falsehood. He said he believes Colonel Quesada does not exist, but is a fictitious scapegoat upon whom FIORINI would place responsibility for this operation in the event it misfired. In support of this, he read from a leaflet concerning Quesada which had been furnished several months ago by FIORINI to those persons who had answered a newspaper ad calling for volunteers to fight Communism in Latin America. This leaflet described Quesada as a Latin, born in Argentina, who had seen action in four wars, had served in all branches of the services, was a pilot, and an expert in conventional, guerilla, and counter-guerilla warfare. Quesada was further described in the leaflet as the "prime organizer of the underground in Latin America. A price of $100,000 has been placed on his head by a communist government which sent agents to kill him and his associates. He has been captured and tortured by two foreign armies...At the present time he is traveling throughout Central and South America and is raising funds to form a mercenary army to fight the communists throughout the Americas..." He said that based on these similarities in the backgrounds of FIORINI and Quesada whom, to his knowledge, no one but FIORINI has ever seen, he feels that Colonel Francisco Quesada is a fictitious and idealized FRANK FIORINI.

He said that the IACB plan before leaving Miami was to train in Guatemala for approximately six weeks, then to proceed by boat to Cuba on November 1, 1968, and to conceal themselves in a pre-arranged Sierra Maestre Mountains, Oriente Province, hideout until next January 1, 1968, when a raid to capture political or military prisoners would be carried out, these prisoners would later be exchanged for Cuba-held political prisoners. He said the he, and all the others involved were aware of this general outline of the planned operation before departing from Florida or in small groups. He added, however, that he was not to participate in the Cuba phase of the operation. His part, he said, was to furnish his Spanish language ability during the training period in Guatemala and give Spanish lessons to those in the force who did not speak Spanish. He was to remain with the volunteer group until their departure for a sea rendezvous with a craft which would take them into Cuba. He was to return to his Florida home.

He said that the plan to train in Guatemala had to be changed because it was learned, after the IACB arrived in Mexico, that communist guerilla activity in Guatemala was too intense at the time to permit training activity to be undertaken there, although he spent several weeks in Guatemala reconnoitering, escorted by an unknown Indian guide, who was paid for his services, and had no connection with the IACB. He added that to his knowledge, none of the other members of the IACB group entered Guatemala.

He recalled that he departed Miami in behalf of the IACB operation alone on August 16, 1968, by Greyhound bus, to Harlingen, Texas, where an undisclosed man picked him up, by pre-arrangement in Chevrolet with Florida license plates. He and his companion, who he declined to name, entered Mexico at Matamoros, near Brownsville, Texas, on approximately August 22, 1968. He said that he entered Mexico as Max Gorman and showed the Mexican border guards a Florida drivers license in that name.

He said that he had purchased the drivers license, already filled out, in Florida several weeks previously especially for this operation. He declined to furnish the name of the person who sold him the driver's license.

He said that he and his companion proceeded inside Mexico to Ciudad Mante for about two days, then the driver of the car went his separate way. At Oaxaca, he picked up an M-1 carbine and some ammunition from an undisclosed person, then proceeded by bus to San Christobal Las Casas. He looked over this area for a possible base camp, but did not find a suitable site. He then proceeded to Comitán, again by bus, where he met three others of the IACB group. From Comitán, he proceeded into Guatemala, accompanied by an Indian guide, as previously mentioned...Upon his return, he found an IACB base camp already set up outside Comitán, about one mile from the Guatemalan border.

He said that the base camp near the Guatemalan-Mexico border was broken up about October 23, 1968, no real training actually having been conducted, and those, number no disclosed, encamped there had proceed to Merida. This encampment was called Camp Sand, in contrast to the mountain encampment which had been called Camp Mud.

Around October 28, 1968, they boarded the Amigo, a Mexican charter fishing boat, at Progreso, and head to sea for a rendezvous with another craft. The others were to transfer to the second boat and proceed to Cuba, while he was to return to Progreso in the Amigo then return to Florida. He said he had no information concerning the second boat or its passengers.

He said the captain of the Amigo was not intimidated in any way, was paid in Mexican pesos the equivalent of about $250 American money, and cooperated fully with the he IACB group in attempting to affect the sea rendezvous with the second craft. He said the problem was that FRANK FIORINI was too secretive with the Amigo Captain about their sea destination as regards the course which had to be set to reach it. He had a feeling that they were a little early and that FIORINI was directing a zig-zag course as a means of delaying their arrival at the rendezvous point. At any rate, the Amigo ran aground on the Turneffe Islands near Belize, British Honduras. He recalled that the Amigo captain had warned FIORINI that he, the captain, was unfamiliar with these waters. It was obvious to Gonzalez, from previous course settings by FIORINI, that the vessel was off course prior to the grounding, but FIORINI insisted on directing the movements of the Amigo.

He said that the Amigo had to limp into Belize as a result of the grounding for refueling and repairs. At Belize, those aboard the Amigo were detained, after several inspections by British Honduras Customs and Immigration authorities. These and the expedition members who had been left near the site of the grounding, awaiting the return of the Amigo, were eventually charged with illegal entry into British Honduras and were jailed at Belize. Their arms and ammunition were seized and, after a hearing at Belize on November 1, 1968, all were ordered deported from British Honduras.

He said that contrary to public reports, no automatic weapons were seized by British Honduras authorities, nor were any in the possession of the IACB group at any time, to his knowledge. He added that he carried no arms or ammunition of any description into Mexico with him and knows of no other IACB member who transported arms or ammunition from the United States into Mexico.

He says he knows of no stolen or rented cars possibly involved in the IACB Operation and added that he had only seen one car in use in Mexico by the group. He declined to describe this car, but said that it was not new, and apparently belonged to one of the International Anti-Communist Brigade members.

He said that he had not been issued, in connection with this IACB operation, a blank birth certificate, United States Army honorable discharge papers, or a blank Florida Motor Vehicle Certificate of Title, and knows nothing of any of the others being issued any of these documents...

He said that he had considered the possibility that the whole operation was a hoax perpetrated by FIORINI as a means of obtaining publicity. However, he has been unable, since the British Honduras authorities arrested the group, to extract any information from FIORINI which might substantiate this theory. He continued that if the operation was a hoax, he had been completely taken in as, until the past few days, he was convinced that the expedition had a landing in Cuba as its objective and that a rendezvous with a second boat would have taken place had it not been for the Amigo running aground.

He said that due to his participation in the IACB operation he had missed a Miami court date regarding non-payment of a long overdue bill for newspaper advertising in connection with a former business venture. He said he expected to be arrested by the Dade County Department of Public Safety in connection with this court missed date, but he felt that satisfactory arrangements could be made for a new court date without his being jailed in the interim. The following description of Gonzalez was obtained from interview and observation: Height 5'6"; Weight 130 pounds; Hair brown, receding at temples; Eyes blue; Characteristics: Broken, discolored teeth.

DAVID ATLEE PHILLIPS stated that Cuban exiles in Florida, with no connection to the CIA, planned to "slip ashore into the United States naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, and launch their attack against Castro from there." PHILLIPS informed the CIA of the plot and when a wire service carried an account of this story,

I had a reaction from Florida. A man named Maxim Emilio Gonzalez told Associated Press in Miami that he planned a multi-million dollar lawsuit against the CIA because he had been 'thrown to the wolves' by the CIA when an assassination plot he was involved in had to be aborted...STURGIS said the scheme was very possibly OPERATION SWORD, in which he had conspired with Gonzalez. [PHILLIPS Nightwatch pp. 284, 208]

HEMMING told this researcher: "OPERATION SWORD was a lot of STURGIS horseshit. Heh, heh. Bethel told PHILLIPS about it." STURGIS wrote: "1963 travel and business (operation sword) Mexico and Honduras." STURGIS told Paul Meskill the recruits used in OPERATION SWORD "were to provide their own transportation." The men rented cars using the false identification provided by STURGIS. STURGIS' men sold these cars in Mexico. Six months after STURGIS and company ran aground, Robert Curtis, a member of STURGIS' group, was arrested for automobile theft. It took a Broward County jury 20 minutes to convict Curtis of the unauthorized use of a car, a crime for which he went to jail. According to the indictment of STURGIS and his co-defendants as prepared the U.S. A. Robert Rust in 1973, Curtis's rented car was one of at least three Florida cars the entered Mexico with STURGIS' self-styled army. Max Gonzalez drove another one. By October 7, 1968, the indictment stated, the Floridians traveling in various cars had regrouped in Guadalajara, Mexico. According to Curtis, the cars disappeared and STURGIS' Brigade hung around a Mexican motel. Then Curtis said, he and Richard Brown were told that "we had to go back to Texas and rent another car. FRANK had a typewriter with a leather case. Sewn into the case were Florida license tags, blank titles, birth certificate forms and blank registration forms. With the typewriter kit and a Gulf Oil Credit card in the name of Charles Connell, Curtis and Brown went to Brownsville, Texas, and rented another car. We put on the Florida tag and threw away the Texas tag. Then we drove the car into Mexico." Curtis also contended that the Captain and the First Mate of the Amigo were forced to sail when STURGIS wanted them to sail because they were held at gunpoint. [Miami Herald 9.7.73] Less than a week later, according to the indictment, Curtis was at it again on orders from STURGIS and Buchanan. STURGIS had issued false ID to his recruits so that they could rent cars that were to be abandoned in Mexico, not sold, however, some of STURGIS' men sold the cars in Mexico or retained them. Curtis testified: "I had a number of blank duplicate Florida titles, Registration Cards, Birth Certificates, Drivers Licenses, that I obtained from FRANK STURGIS."

HEMMING told this researcher: "STURGIS was a fucking car thief."

On November 14, 1968, the Norfolk Virginia Ledger Star carried an article entitled EX-CASTRO FRIEND JAILED FISH HEADS, RICH SLIM DIET:

The latest chapter in the running saga of Norfolkian FRANK FIORINO'S fight with Fidel Castro includes an 11 day stay in a British Honduras jail where he lost 20 pounds while living on fish heads and rice. It happened three weeks ago while FIORINI and 12 other Americans were on their way to make a commando raid against sabotage targets on the coast of western Cuba. FIORINI stated: "We left one of our camps on the Yucatan Peninsula in a 30-foot cabin cruiser called The Amigo. We were supposed to rendezvous at sea with another boat and transfer the stock of weapons and medical supplies for a run into the coast of Cuba. Because of bad weather, The Amigo ended up on a reef just south of Mexican territorial waters off the coast of British Honduras. We had to spend the night there. The next morning we finally got her off with the help of a couple of native boats. Unfortunately the night on the reef had opened up the seams so The Amigo had to limp into the nearest port - Belize. There, they began unloading the rifles and over $1,000 in medical supplies. Then the ship was taken over by British Army Units. We were kept in jail for four days before we had a hearing before a British Magistrate. The Chief of the Honduran intelligence section asked for a week continuance in order to investigate further. They continued to keep us in jail during that week. The jail, incidentally, was 156 years old. I was by myself in a cell four and a half feet wide, and eleven feet long. We had one meal a day of fishheads and rice. Occasionally we got chicken necks and rice. The authorities apologized they couldn't give us more, but said it was a poor country. At the end of the week I was brought to the magistrate again. I served as a spokesman and asked that we not be deported to Mexico as had been suggested. I knew it was filled with Castro sympathizers there and my life would be in great danger.

CIA Agent David McLean saw this article and sent it to CIA Agent Harry T. Mahoney: November 15, 1968. "Dear Harry: Presumably anyone who has been 'making frequent raids inside Cuba' will be of interest to Dave Phillips & Co. Hence I enclosed another clipping from my favorite newspaper, The Norfolk Ledger-Star...Dave." [CIA D002224] The activities of FRANK STURGIS from 1969 to 1971 remained a mystery. In February 1969 the CIA had the FBI run a check on him.

THE WHITE HOUSE SPECIAL OPERATIONS GROUP 1971

In early 1971 STURGIS set up a tax-exempt church in Miami. During HUNT v. WEBERMAN STURGIS was asked:

Q. Did you start your own church?

A. Why? I had none. Well, I wanted to set up some missions in Central and South America for poor people in the Andes, and so forth; but, unfortunately, Watergate destroyed that.

That year, James Buchanan was arrested entering Mexico with a truckload of automatic weapons. In late 1971 BARKER recruited STURGIS for the White House Special Operations Group. STURGIS:

Well, BARKER again, having contact with him, socially and business-wise, and what have you, one day, I don't know when he told me, or it might have been weeks or months prior to my involvement with the Special Intelligence Unit, or my recruitment, he sat down and spoke to me and he says, 'FRANK, do you remember 'EDUARDO'? Well I spoke with 'EDUARDO,' and we are putting something together, your background and so forth. And we would like you to get involved with us again. The same people as before, the same Americans upstairs who were involved in the Bay of Pigs. And my name was given for a clearance. And naturally I was cleared."

Evidence suggested that NIXON wanted the same crew who were involved in the Kennedy assassination as part of the White House Special Operations Group. In a Motion for Discovery of Exculpatory Information, STURGIS asked for telephone conversations between White House personnel and the CIA, FBI in 1971, 1972 and 1973, relevant to his activities. STURGIS also believed that NIXON had discussed his activities, and that this discussion had been picked-up by the White House recording system during the years 1971, 1972, and 1973.

ALLEN MICHAEL FITZGERALD
FBI COMMUNICATIONS SECTION
JANUARY 25, 1973

KNR 022 LA PLAIN

TO ACTING DIRECTOR (139-4089)
WFO (139-166)
FROM LOS ANGELES (139-306) (P) 3P

Reference: Regarding Boston teletype to Director, January 23, 1973, and Bureau telephone call to Los Angeles January 24, 1973.

On January 24, 1973, Cheryl Kathleen Fitzgerald, 5312 Kester Avenue, Apt 2, Van Nuys, California, was interviewed by Bureau agents and advised she spoke with her husband, Allen Michael Fitzgerald on November 27, 1972, while he was in custody at Adult Correctional Institute, Howard, Rhode Island. Fitzgerald asked her if she recalled him telling her approximately three years ago of his meeting of his meeting with then CIA agent JAMES McCORD at the Century Plaza Hotel, Los Angeles, California, through an introduction by Los Angeles Police Department Detective Gene Scherrer. She advised Fitzgerald did recall his mentioning this meeting. Fitzgerald then indicated that this was the same individual indicted in the Watergate matter.

Fitzgerald advised that she and her husband resided in Mexico from September 1970, through December 1971. While in a hotel restaurant at Hermosio, Sonora, Mexico, in either October or November 1971, she recalls her husband walking to another table and engaging in a conversation with an individual she now believes to have been FRANK STURGIS. She viewed six black and white photos, one of which was a photo of STURGIS. She was unable to identify STURGIS, photo 3. Fitzgerald based her belief that this individual her husband met in Mexico was STURGIS from a photo she saw in Time Magazine.

Fitzgerald stated she did not write a letter to The New York Times, however, she believed her husband, Allen Fitzgerald, wrote the letter and she recalls having him tell her on November 27, 1972, that he had in fact written a letter to The New York Times.

Fitzgerald advised her husband, Allen, told her three years ago that he had written a letter to 'Kenneth W. Clawson,' at that time a New York Times reporter, which letter Fitzgerald alleged was used by Clawson to 'gain a position on the White House Staff.' The letter was believed to contain information regarding narcotics and political affairs. Fitzgerald stated she never saw the letter.

On January 22, 1973, she received a telephone call from Seymour Hirsch, New York Times, requesting additional information regarding her husband's connection to [Watergate]. She advised she furnished no further information on the subject matter. (Deleted) She further advised she is considering pleading under Interstate Transportation of Stolen Property to charge pending against her in Rhode Island.

Her former husband, Captain Peter Lucarelli, Los Angeles Fire Department, advised he knows Allen Fitzgerald and considers him to be a con man. Consequently he doubts Fitzgerald's reliability. Report follows: (Deleted).

THE 1972 CONVENTION PROVOCATION

The 1972 Republican and Democratic Conventions were scheduled for July and August in Miami Beach, Florida. In a "Secret, Eyes Only" memorandum prepared for USDC Judge William M. Hoeveler, HEMMING claimed that:

During January 1972 I was contacted by FBI Agent Robert Dwyer in reference to assisting Miami FBI project involving Ed Kaiser and FRANK STURGIS that motivated a 1972 meeting with Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Miami Supervisor Hale for backstop briefing. STURGIS was at the time a White House/Special Operations Group operative, and was later arrested at Watergate during June 1972.

In April 1976 HEMMING told Dick Russell:

There were some plans for the convention. I talked to some of the people participating in it, who later participated in the Watergate thing. Create a shoot-out using the Yippies and the Zippies and the other 'hard core commies' they were so worried about. The people I spoke to were going to put some of this equipment in their hands, and some in law enforcement hands, and use some of the local vigilantes to start a shoot out. This would finally straighten out Washington as to where the priorities were on overcoming the 'domestic communist menace.'

HEMMING stated to this researcher in 1993:

I get a phone call from Bob Dwyer. I hadn't talked to him in months, since the NIXON compound thing. Some of Veciana's boys had a scheme to have a Cuban Comar fire a STIX missile at the compound. There was a similar plan to attack Guantanamo during the Bay of Pigs. They were gonna take out NIXON and put Agnew in power. I told Dwyer that to me it was all a provocation, and would end up in arrests, and I'm the fucking guy standing in the middle. Czukas shows up at my home to discuss this. Shanley should have been there. Czukas asks me to withdraw my license to export weapons to the Guatemalan Congress. A quarter of a million dollar deal. When I told my partner, he said, 'That lying cocksucker wanted me to give weapons to STURGIS who was over here earlier and spilled the fucking beans.' Czukas was always the domineering bad type of cop asshole who was going to put us all away. He was a company motherfucker. I told my partner, 'You know Bob Dwyer. He called me the other day with the same shit. They're trying to set us up.' Whatley shows up, I was using BERNARDO De TORRES office at the time. He shows up with his cousin - here's an ex-felon carrying a badge and a gun. His cousin was a Lieutenant in the Sheriff's Department in Jefferson City, Colorado. We meet at the Holiday Inn Motel at the airport. I said 'I'll demonstrate the weapons to you.' I call BERNIE and tell him to leave the weapon in the office I'll come over there. We fired it into a phone book behind the office. We demonstrated the silencer and the whole thing. Whatley wanted me to sell them to him under the table. I told him to get a letter from the Jefferson City Chief of Police saying he needed machine guns. We considered this a provocation. The first question that comes up in my mind is 'Why aren't they going to Powder Springs Georgia and talking to Werbell?' They wanted more than one machine gun. My guess was that they were going to give them to FRANK. They need silenced weapons so that somebody in the crowd of demonstrators, maybe Kaiser, could crank off a few rounds. The guys would be told 'Shoot some demonstrators in the back, drop your weapons, and get the fuck out of there!' Now other people with silenced weapons would be taking out direct targets. No one would hear this. The weapons dropped would be the same caliber. They didn't want 45 caliber Mac 10's, they wanted nine millimeter. The nine millimeter round was a sonic round. We had to half load the powder to keep it below supersonic so that the silencer would work effectively. A 45 round is subsonic. They wanted a nine millimeter because they were going to have thrown down pieces that were the same caliber. The 45 rounds look like it was government issued to Cubans. If the demonstrators were found with German World War II souvenirs, Lugars and P-38s, this is all pawn shop weapons, readily available. STURGIS was trying to use Kaiser as his cut out. STURGIS was famous for waving 'bye-bye' at the airport. I don't think STURGIS would be anywhere near the scene. That he got caught (laughs) in the Texas School Book Depository is...everybody said finally the motherfucker did something instead of sending others to do it and what do you know? He got caught.

HEMMING said the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms wanted him to help stop STURGIS from instigating a shoot-out at the Republican Convention, however, it sounded more like HEMMING originated the idea, or was a part of the scheme. HEMMING told this researcher:

You can't be around this shit unless all hands think you're a player. How's that? Is that the best way to put it? Will they dump a player? Will they OSWALD a player? Absolutely.

STURGIS was asked about this: "He's a liar! I'm not aware of these allegations; plus I'm saying he's a liar. If he made those statements, he's a liar."

CORROBORATION - VINCENT J. HANNARD

HEMMING'S story was verifiable. During the trial of the Gainesville Eight, eight anti-war veterans charged with having planned violence at the Republican Convention, Vincent J. Hannard testified that STURGIS and BARKER tried to recruit him for an operation against the Vietnam Veterans Against the War. A Miami Herald article on June 8, 1973, by Dennis Holder was titled "Witness Says BARKER and STURGIS Asked Him to Discredit VVAW." It stated that Vincent J. Hannard, gave sworn statement, June 7, 1973, that in weeks prior to May 29, 1972, he:

...received four telephone calls proposing undercover convention work of the first attempt to break into Democratic National Committee Office at Watergate. Each call reportedly came from a different person and each caller tried to persuade him that it was his patriotic duty to help undermine VVAW. Hannard said one call was from STURGIS. Hannard said he was sure this caller was STURGIS, who he had known for more than 13 years.

Another caller identified himself as BERNARD BARKER, but Hannard said he does not know BARKER, and could not be certain BARKER was actually calling. Another of the calls purported to be from Guy Hawkes. Hannard said Hawkes was a CIA agent in Miami several years ago. He is acquainted with Hawkes and is certain this caller actually was not Hawkes. Hannard said each caller mentioned the VVAW, and described the proposed task as covert intelligence and investigation. Hannard said he turned offers down because he was suspicious of the motives of the callers. The article pointed out that Hannard was disqualified as a witness in a 1971 Miami narcotics case because psychiatrists testified that Hannard could neither understand the witness oath, nor tell the difference between truth and lies. Article also pointed out that Hannard was convicted in 1962 of impersonating an FBI agent, but was also an informant for federal and local police agencies, and was a key witness in several cases. Hannard occasionally volunteers information to Miami FBI. (Deleted).

HEMMING claimed Vincent J. Hannard was a well-connected Bureau of Narcotics snitch and a Private Investigator, who reported to Gene Marshall, the roommate of Charles Ashmann. HEMMING said he had attempted to break into the offices of Vincent J. Hannard, and that Vincent J. Hannard worked closely with STURGIS and Bobby Willis.

CORROBORATION -COLSON

When Charles Colson was questioned by Senator Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, he said he had seen a CIA file that "mentioned radical activities prior to the convention." [USDC SD FLA. 75-640-cr-PF Def. Ex. 4] In 1973 Senator Lowell Weicker was the target of a break-in. [Summers Secret Life JEH p414]

CORROBORATION - ANGIE BASULTO

Angela Basulto was a former anti-Castro fighter who claimed expert knowledge of firearms and explosives. Her first husband was Bay of Pigs veteran Jose Basulto Leon. Jose Basulto, a devout Catholic, had left Boston College, where he majored in physics, in January 1960, to return to Havana so that he could join a Catholic underground organization. Basulto was trained in Panama as a radio operator then infiltrated into Cuba prior to the Bay of Pigs. Five of Basulto's fellow infiltrators were executed and seven received long prison sentences. Basulto, unhappy with the Kennedy Administration's lack of action against Castro, struck out on his own. On August 24, 1962, Basulto sailed into Havana with a dozen of his friends and shelled the hotel Rosita de Hornedo, which was full of Russian advisors. Basulto drove to Guantanamo and climbed a ten foot fence to safety. Jose Basulto was alleged to have been involved in McLaney's Lake LaCombe Louisiana bomb factory and training camp:

On July 23, 1963, WALLACE SHANLEY, U.S. Customs, Miami, advised that on July 19, 1963, Mr. EDGAR OWENS, U.S. Customs, Miami, had observed CARLOS EDUARDO HERNANDEZ SANCHEZ, Also known As "BATRA" at Miami in a green 1963 Chevrolet station wagon with 1963 Florida license 7E-40. Mr. OWENS observed that HERNANDEZ was accompanied by VICTOR ESPINOSA HERNANDEZ and (First Name Unknown) BASULTO. SHANLEY advised that HERNANDEZ SANCHEZ and ESPINOSA HERNANDEZ were two of the five subjects involved in preparations for a bombing raid in June, 1963 against a Cuban oil refinery when they were detained and seizure of their plans and bombs was made by U.S. Customs in a rural area of southwest Miami.

Either the reporting agent or Shanley got confused about the location of the bust. The FBI reported:

ESPINOSA admitted telephonic contact with about 12 Cuban pilots, some of whom were willing to engage in this raid. He stated in his opinion, the only ones who were willing to take the risk of such a raid were his companions of the infiltration team in the Cuban invasion which included CARLOS HERNANDEZ SANCHEZ and MIGUEL ALVAREZ JIMENEZ. VICTOR ESPINOSA denied that his brother, RENE JOSE ESPINOSA or JOSE BASULTO LEON were participants in these plans for a raid.

Basulto worked with CIA Agent Felix Rodriguez, who was linked to Bush and Oliver North's Contra arms network. The June 8, 1973, edition of The Miami Herald carried an article by Rob Elder titled "Florida Agency Admits Receiving VVAW But From Lady Spy." The FBI:

The article relates that Angelica 'Angie' Rohan, formerly known as Angie Basulto, furnished a sworn statement to United States District Judge W. O. Mehrtens, on May 23, 1973, after reading The Miami Herald story "which for the first time identified Pablo Fernandez as a police informer who spied on VVAW and offered to sell them guns." According to the article, Mrs. Rohan made another sworn statement on June 6, 1973, to Dade County State Attorney Richard Gerstein. Article says that Florida Department of Law Enforcement confirmed on June 7, 1973, that summer Mrs. Basulto furnished Florida Department of Law Enforcement a copy of a recorded call between Scott Camil of VVAW and Pablo Fernandez. Basulto also told Florida Department of Law Enforcement that certain Miamians were involved in a 'demonstration at the Chilean Embassy in Washington.' Jack Key, Florida Department of Law Enforcement, Miami, advised Miami Herald he never told the FBI or any other federal agency about the 'wiretap' or Basulto's Embassy information because the information did seem at the time to be specific evidence, 'was not worthy of dissemination' and because Basulto 'was my source and I'm going to protect my source.' Florida Department of Law Enforcement director,

William Reed, according to article, said Basulto volunteered to work with the Florida Department of Law Enforcement last summer. Her expense were paid, and she worked at the Florida Department of Law Enforcement convention command post, Miami, translating Spanish language material and writing out long hand intelligence reports. Basulto has sworn that she was offered 'A copy of the ITT papers' which Fernandez told her were stolen in the Chilean Embassy burglary. Article reports Basulto once tried to convince a T.V. crew she was the 'woman in Watergate,' but now she says she was not. In sworn statement to Dade County State Attorney's Office, Basulto reportedly claimed second hand knowledge of a possible plot to assassinate the Democratic Vice Presidential candidate, who later turned out to be Thomas Eagleton. She claimed 'What they were supposed to be looking for was George McGovern's running mate.' She reportedly said at this point in her notes, she wrote the word, 'assassination' and drew a question mark beside it. State Attorney's office sources told Miami Herald Basulto said she was present when Fernandez offered to supply VVAW with Cuban weapons which 'could be turned into machine guns with a little piece of metal.' She was present when Fernandez offered weapons to VVAW member identified only as Dan. This veteran reportedly replied, 'We only want peace, man.' Jack Key, Florida Department of Law Enforcement, Miami, telephonically contacted on June 8, 1973. He confirmed Basulto worked for the Florida Department of Law Enforcement during both national political conventions. She originally contacted Florida Department of Law Enforcement Director Reed at times furnished information to Reed but Key was her authorized contact. Key described Basulto as emotional, and as having furnished both reliable and unreliable information. She was only paid expenses. She never told the Florida Department of Law Enforcement about being the 'woman in Watergate.' She did furnish last summer what purported to be a tape of Fernandez-Camil telephone conversation about Chilean Embassy, Washington, break-in. She did once report that Watergate Hoover rites people had something to do with the 'demonstration' at the Chilean Embassy. This information seemed of no significance and she did not mention the break-in or burglary. Key said he had been interviewed by Elder for above mentioned article. Elder asked him several times why he was covering for FBI. He told Elder he was not covering for FBI. He recalled being contacted by (Deleted) Dade County Public Safety Department, just prior to Republican National Convention, as to possible Florida Department of Law Enforcement status of Basulto. Key said that on June 11, 1973, he will bring to Miami FBI Office complete Basulto Florida Department of Law Enforcement file for review. On June 8, 1973, Pablo Fernandez telephonically contacted. He said he met Basulto approximately July 5, 1972, and was in contact with her until the end of the Republican National Convention when she stopped calling him. She told Fernandez she was working for Florida Department of Law Enforcement and wanted to know what Cuban exiles were planning for political conventions. Fernandez said he 'took her around' during conventions, and brought her to Cuban exile meetings. He did furnish her a copy of his tape recorded conversation with Scott Camil earlier same date he furnished original of tape conversation to S.A. Deleted, Miami. He furnished her copies of no other tapes. He said he never offered her a copy of the ITT papers reportedly stolen in Chilean Embassy burglary. He said he had no knowledge of existence of such papers and has no knowledge of who perpetrated this burglary. He said his only VVAW contacts were Hialeah drugstore meetings, a Miami Police Department meeting with VVAW, other non-delegate organizations, including Cuban exile groups, and police...Basulto was not with him on any of these occasions. Basulto was with him on the second or third day of Democratic National Convention when he strolled through Flamingo Park, Miami Beach, non-delegate campsite. He did not speak to any VVAW members at that time and emphatically did not offer to supply VVAW with Cuban weapons, as alleged above. Fernandez denied furnishing Basulto any information regarding a possible plot to assassinate the Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate...Fernandez said he did tell Basulto about Hialeah drugstore meetings with VVAW, but told her about no other contact with VVAW. [Miami Herald 6.8.73; FBI 139-4089-1230]

Pablo Fernandez was an FBI informant in the case of the Gainesville Eight. HEMMING wondered if STURGIS had ever dealt with any counterculture people when "they were getting that slaughter ready for Miami Beach in 1972."

CORROBORATION - EDWIN KAISER

In 1952 Ed Kaiser joined the Marines, but received a bad conduct dishonorable discharge before his basic training ended. Ed Kaiser became a heroin addict (Sonia Kaiser insisted that her husband was never an addict) and amassed a long criminal record, including aggravated assault, assault with a deadly weapon, burglary and larceny. In 1957 Ed Kaiser joined the French Foreign Legion and lost his American citizenship. On January 29, 1959, his citizenship was revoked. He left the Foreign Legion on a medical discharge, and returned to the United States in 1959 as a landed immigrant. In 1961 Ed Kaiser moved to Alaska, where he was convicted of theft of Government property and assault. On May 30, 1964, and on May 31, 1964, the CIA showed an interest in Ed Kaiser, and two outgoing cables about him were generated which were denied in their entirety. [Ltr. Harry E. Fitzwater, Chairman, CIA Information Review Committee 1.4.82]

CUBAN AND HAITIAN EXILE AFFAIRS

In 1969 Ed Kaiser moved to Miami where the FBI took note of him due to his affiliation with Cubanos Unidos, an anti-Castro group made up of former members of Alpha-66. The FBI reported:

Cubanitos Unidos (CU) is a Cuban exile anti- Fidel Castro organization in Miami, Florida. Its purpose is to unite all exile groups into a unity organization and begin military operations against the present Government of Cuba. Wilfredo Navarro Beato is the head of CU...On June 26, 1970, MM T-2, a Cuban exile who had been involved in Cuban Revolutionary matters for the past five years advised that on the night previously, (deleted) with Wilfredo Navarro, at which time Navarro claimed CU was going ahead with its plans to sink a Soviet vessel off the east coast of Florida as the vessel was on its way to Cuba.

On June 19, 1970 MM T-3, another Government agency which conducts intelligence investigations, advised information had been received that CU recently held a meeting to introduce Americans who are backing their organization. The Americans were Frank Fiorini and Ed Kaiser. Fiorini calls himself the "Chief of Intelligence Section of Cubanitos Unidos." On July 1, 1970 NAVARRO appeared at the Miami Office of the FBI with his brother Roerme, and advised as follows:

Frank Fiorini, an American citizen who has been involved in Cuban exile revolutionary matters for the past ten years, recently signed a unity agreement with CU. In this agreement, Fiorini, who represents some independent anti-Castro organization, agreed that political unity of all exile groups must be established. Fiorini is not a member of CU as such, holds no official position, and is not in charge of intelligence.

KAISER said that CU presently has a .50 caliber machine gun, a .30 caliber machine gun, some C-4 explosive, and a quantity of small arms. CU is considering a three-day infiltration and sabotage mission to Cuba in which about five men will participate. One of the tactics they plan to use is to kill a few Cuban Government soldiers and cut them up into small pieces to terrify other Cuban Government soldiers.

On July 30, 1970, KAISER advised he was then leaving for the Island of Martinique in the Caribbean where he would try to make arrangements to meet up a military base for operations against Cuba. On August 3, 1970, KAISER advised he had just returned from the Island of Martinique where he was arrested and questioned for 28 hours by French intelligence officials before he was released. The purpose of the visit was to obtain permission to set up a base for operations against Cuba. French authorities told him they would cooperate with him if and when he obtained such permission from the United States Government.

KAISER said his present military plans involve an operation which would leave the Florida Keys by boat and attack the Cuban Naval Academy near Havana. About twelve persons would participate in the raid and after the mission, would return to the Florida keys. After about two days in the Florida Keys, they would return to sea to meet a mother ship and then go to Haiti. KAISER said the military mission would leave the Florida area with arms and explosives aboard.

On July 29, 1970 the CIA reported Ed Kaiser was part of a CU sponsored operation against Cuba. Ed Kaiser claimed Cubanos Unidos was involved in the distribution of anti-Castro cartoons; in fact the goal of Cubanos Unidos was to form a Cuban government-in-exile in Haiti. Ed Kaiser was in contact with numerous Haitian exiles, and while Ed Kaiser was head of the military section of Cubana Unida, he was suspected of plotting the assassination of "Papa Doc" Duvalier.

Sonia Kaiser reported that at one Cubanos Unidos meeting her husband was introduced to STURGIS by a Cuban exile named "William Navarro." HEMMING told this researcher: "She meant Wilfrado Navarro. Wilfrado and Antonio Navarro were Cuban right wing assholes that were with STURGIS in 1960." When the FBI questioned the CIA about Ed Kaiser on JULY 22, 1969, ANGLETON prepared a memorandum titled "Ed Kaiser and (deleted as of 2010)." When the CIA released this document, it contained three pages of deletions. The only information in it was the words "On the basis of the limited data available, this Agency's files contain no identifiable information on Ed Kaiser. For The Deputy Director Of Plans: JAMES ANGLETON, CSCI 316/02475-69, cc: Customs Commissioner." The FBI reported:

Ed Kaiser has been the Subject of a criminal type investigation by the FBI Miami since late 1971. Earlier in 1971 Kaiser allegedly wore the uniform of the U.S. Army and used fraudulent military identification to enter the premises of the U.S. Coast Guard Station, Opa Locka, Florida, where he fraudulently obtained office and medical supplies. Kaiser is reported to have entered the premises of other military bases at Homestead, Florida, and San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he allegedly represented himself as a military officer and used military facilities. Investigation of this matter is continuing and, as yet, no Federal criminal charges against Kaiser have been initiated. [FBI 139-4089-2469 7.9.73]

Kaiser was convicted of stealing Coast Guard office and medical supplies while wearing a false uniform. HEMMING told this researcher: "You make him sound like a junkie. He was stealing classified documents." An FBI document stated: "(Deleted) One such person contacted is an unidentified Negro male who sells Kaiser stolen watches, rings and other jewelry which Kaiser resells to employees at Maule Industry and other factories in the area and the Opa Locka area." [FBI 47-55225-2 p 18] In late 1971

Kaiser was suspected of plotting to hijack a Cuban or Russian freighter. Sonia Kaiser reported that around this time her husband had a closet full of ammunition and grenades, which were removed shortly before the FBI searched the apartment.

A few days after STURGIS was arrested at Watergate, Ed Kaiser went to Haiti - where, according to HEMMING, he visited Mike McLaney. HEMMING told this researcher: "He was delivering an ultimatum to McLaney. A hit was going to go down. Out of professional courtesy, Kaiser asked him to take sides."

THE PLANNED CONVENTION RIOT

WILFREDO NAVARRO (RED PANTS) AND ED KAISER

In May 1973 Ed Kaiser contacted a Miami FBI agent and advised that:

...he was a long time friend of FRANK STURGIS, also known as FRANK FIORINI, one of the convicted Watergate defendants and prior to the 1972 Republican Convention in August 1972 STURGIS invited Kaiser to participate in a planned convention riot at the convention. STURGIS later told him the riot was off, and something bigger was being planned. At this time STURGIS mentioned to Kaiser the name of a nationally known figure, a businessman and not a politician, who was in charge of planning the financing and direction of this new operation. According to Kaiser, this individual was at the time unknown in the Watergate investigation. Kaiser at the time of the above contact stated he would furnish this information in exchange by the Government of:

1. The safety of his family.

2. For employment security at his present employment, a service attendant at the (deleted) service station, Florida.
3. For an opportunity to apply for State and Federal pardons.

Numerous attempts were made to interview Kaiser to further develop this information both at his residence and his place of employment. During the period Kaiser was also hospitalized for leg surgery. In response to these efforts, Kaiser contacted the Miami office and agreed to an interview on June 26, 1973. At that date Kaiser appeared at the Miami Office accompanied by Attorney Edward N. Claughton, and advised that he had changed his mind about furnishing information to the FBI. He stated that he had already furnished the above information to a member of the Watergate Committee, and was awaiting action from that source. The individual mentioned by Kaiser above was subsequently identified by Kaiser as Jack Anderson, newspaper columnist. In view of Kaiser's reputation, and pending criminal investigation, no commitments were made in any way to Kaiser during the above contacts, and the information furnished by him was accepted without comment. Sonia Kaiser remembered waiting outside while he discussed this with STURGIS. Ed Kaiser asked the FBI for protection for himself and his family in return for this information. [FBI 139-3089-2469,2413]

In August 1973 Ed Kaiser gave the CIA similar information. This CIA report was withheld as of 2010. [CIA Memo 8.20.73] An index card was generated by the CIA's Office of the Inspector General:

James E. Flannery was a CIA agent stationed in Bolivia from 1961 to 1964, Mexico from 1964 to 1965, and the Dominican Republic from 1965 to 1969. Kaiser also gave the Senate Select Committee on Campaign Activities this information. STURGIS refuted Ed Kaiser in Executive Session testimony: "STURGIS stated he was never approached by anyone concerning demonstrations against the VVAW at the Republican Convention. He recalls no such conversation with Ed Kaiser. He admitted knowing Kaiser for a number of years, and said he considered Kaiser to be a good source of information for Cuban-related activities but had reason, nonetheless, to suspect Kaiser's credibility." [STURGIS Exec. Sess. Test. 7.27-28.73 as cited in SSCIA Minority Staff Report] On August 20, 1973, the Miami Field Office of the FBI sent the Director a highly deleted teletype. The only words released were "CHANGED" and "CONSPIRACY - RING CASE, OO: Miami." [FBI 26-425217-36 2 pages] In August 1975 Ed Kaiser arranged for an illegal arms shipment to a Nicaraguan anti-Castro training base, and frequently talked of uniting the White Russian refugees for military operations against Cuba.

ED KAISER IN ISRAEL

On January 9, 1976, Ed Kaiser successfully entered Israel bearing a passport issued in the name of Jerome Schneider. On March 2, 1976, Ed Kaiser was arrested for use of a false passport while trying to re-enter Israel. A CIA report on Kaiser was generated on June 25, 1976. This was withheld in its entirety as of 2010. Kaiser was released in July 1976, and when he returned to the United States, he was indicted on identical charges. Ed Kaiser told the FBI that he entered Israel by pretending to be a Jew who wished to volunteer his services to the Israeli military. Ed Kaiser claimed he was acting on behalf of the United States Government. The passport he used to enter Israel was a crude forgery. Ed Kaiser had obtained the passport of Jerome Schneider, removed his photograph, and put his picture in its place. This did not indicate sophisticated trade craft. The CIA was interested in Ed Kaiser around this time and a Memorandum dated June 25, 1976, about him, was withheld in its entirety as of 2010. Sonia Kaiser:

He was in Israel and he was arrested for tapping wires. Don't ask me whose wires, because I don't know. It's in some arrest report that I have. He was not arrested entering Israel with a false passport. He had a false passport, that's true. He was in Israel for quite a while. I got letters from him. He sent letters to me and he sent letters to my children, his children. He was there on a kibbutz for a while. He was already living there. I had a lot of papers, I had them. They were stolen. All the papers are gone.

HEMMING claimed Ed Kaiser was doing a hit for a colonel in the Israeli Defense Force in Nablus: "I flew the guy he went with around the Bahamas in 1981, until he turned himself into the U.S. Marshals. We use their people, they use ours. Ed Kaiser was arrested as he was leaving." HEMMING was asked why he was arrested if the Israelis had used him?

In 1976 STURGIS convinced Ed Kaiser that Gaeton Fonzi could find a way to get him out of his legal troubles. Ed Kaiser spoke with Gaeton Fonzi several times. Ed Kaiser did not know it, but his legal problems had ended: the U.S. Attorney in Miami could not prosecute him since it was unknown whether Ed Kaiser had departed the United States from the Southern District of Florida or from elsewhere. Sonia Kaiser disagreed: "He took a plane from Miami to Israel on EI Al. They certainly could prove it. They are hiding something there. They know something that they're not saying." [FBI 21-2005-21 4.19.76] On February 8, 1977, Ed Kaiser "fell off" some wooden planking while working aboard a ship, and died due to multiple injuries and blunt trauma; he was 44 years old. Sonia Kaiser stated:

He carried a lot of papers in an attaché case. It was missing right after he died. I saw him with it before he was killed. I know he had it. But the day he died I never saw it again after that, never.

In 1978 HEMMING was asked about the death of Ed Kaiser:

He fell on the job. The FBI don't know. STURGIS don't know. I saw STURGIS at the funeral that night. Nobody else was there. Hey, he could have just 'up and died?' He had to get out from under this shit. All he needed was a phony death certificate. He was under investigation for a phony passport thing in Israel, he may have contracted to do a Middle East hit and gotten into trouble. He may be in Shangrila!

Sonia Kaiser had no doubt that her husband was murdered:

Somebody pushed him into the manhole. I wasn't there, of course. He told all his men that were working for him on that shift, not to walk across the manhole, because the boards were not safe for weight. The next thing they do is they call me at work and tell me he's dead. Then they tell me that he walked across there and the boards broke and he fell in. And I said 'Why would he be so stupid if he's telling everybody not to walk across there, why would he be so stupid to do that?' They didn't know of course. Then I got a lot of strange visits from a lot of strange people and a lot of strange phone calls, like yours for instance, asking me questions.

HEMMING told this researcher:

It ain't a matter of pushing him into the manhole. I went to check on all that kind of bullshit. I went to the medical examiner's office. Dwyer was there. He ain't supposed to be dicking around in that territory, it ain't his case. Dwyer wants to know from me, 'Did he fucking die? Was that him?' What he stepped on collapsed. He wasn't supposed to step on it. It happened to one of my other guys about the same time, only he flew through the roof of the shithouse. Later on he O.D.ed on dope. People don't listen. STURGIS wasn't worried about being snitched out. Somebody else would know Kaiser was talking out of school. A criminal investigation was going on. They didn't want him testifying before a Federal Grand jury. They took care of the situation. The guy had 'OSWALD' stamped on his forehead.

Sonia Kaiser was asked about her husband's relationship with STURGIS:

Before Watergate FRANK STURGIS was at our house constantly. But I never knew what they talked about, because they never talked in front of me. We used to go to FRANK'S house too.

THE BURGLARY OF THE CHILEAN EMBASSY

In the Spring of 1972 STURGIS took part in several burglaries in Washington, D.C. STURGIS told Andrew St. George that the White House/Special Operations Group had entered the offices of Senator Jacob Javits (Rep.-NY.), Sol Linowitz and Dan Rather. St. George quoted STURGIS as saying "The liberals have twisted everything. There is no use in trying to explain. If I had my way, just one chance, I'd kill every one of them." [True 8.74] One of these burglaries involved the Chilean Embassy in Washington, D.C. During a telephone conversation between John Dean and CIA Director James Schlesinger on February 9, 1975, Schlesinger noted: "In this connection he mentioned that there is a news story being passed about in the press, primarily instigated by Seymour Hirsch of the New York Times. The story suggests that STURGIS was the individual responsible for the burglarizing of the Chilean Embassy in Washington. He also indicated he expects Senator Fulbright to request the Justice Department to produce STURGIS for the Senate hearings."

The CIA's Inspector General's Office generated an index card titled March 19, 1973, March 6, 1973, Contacts w/ITT Tab #1 which contained the names Hal Hendrix, ITT, R. Berrellez, Jack Anderson, E. HOWARD HUNT, FRANK STURGIS, Chilean Embassy, P. Gilbert, (Deleted), J. Levinson, Lawrence Houston, Aible, J. Shafer, E. Gerrity, Harold Gennen, William Broe, Matte and H. Heckscher. This was a contact report from (Deleted) C/WH/CA. "Subject: Conversations with Hal Hendrix on March 6, 1973, (Broe - Gennen mtg July 1970) relations with Heckscher and Matte -- Anderson's column regarding Chilean Embassy break-in." According to an article in the Washington Post dated October 23, 1978, Ted Shackley, Jacob Esterline and Tom Polgar were also involved in the CIA's effort to overthrow Allende. On April 15, 1961, Hal Hendrix, the Latin American correspondent for the Miami Daily News wrote: There will be no mass invasion against Cuba by the anti-Castro forces gathered at bases in Central American and this country. The News has stated this for several months." Gaeton Fonzi reported:

In 1961, when PHILLIPS was handling the propaganda desk for the Bay of Pigs operation and, as such, was in constant contact with friendly media types, there was a reporter on the Miami News named Hal Hendrix, whose coverage of the invasion seemed to be deeper and more detailed than any other journalist, local or national. In 1962 Hendrix's coverage of the Cuban Missile Crisis was so penetrating and insightful it garnered his paper a Pulitzer Prize. The next year Hendrix got himself promoted to a more prestigious job, covering Latin America for the Scripps-Howard News Service. Still based in Miami, Hendrix's sources remained quite extraordinary. In a piece for Scripps-Howard dated September 23, 1963, Hendrix wrote a colorful and detailed description of the coup that toppled Juan Bosch, the leftist President of the Dominican Republic. If Hendrix report didn't come from inside sources, it was an amazing display of clairvoyance - the coup didn't take place until the following day.

Author Tony Summers reported:

Seth Kantor's [a Dallas-based journalist who was acquainted with JACK RUBY] notes revealed that one of the calls that Kantor made from City Hall was to the Florida number, Coral Gables MO 5-6473 [at about 6:00 p.m.] This was the [home] number of Hal Hendrix, a Miami journalist also working for Kantor's newspaper group, (Scripps-Howard) who was offering information on OSWALD. Hendrix, on the afternoon of the assassination, was able to give Kantor details of OSWALD'S past, his defection to Russia, and his pro-Castro activities on his return.

Kantor reported:

The information he gave me, according to my notes, contained details of OSWALD'S past, particularly OSWALD'S time span in Russia and his latter connection with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee in New Orleans. Hendrix gave me a bunch of knowledgeable background on OSWALD'S appearance on New Orleans radio station WDSU, the previous August. In a show moderated by William Kirk Stuckey, OSWALD had debated CARLOS BRINGUIER, an anti-Castro activist and Cuban refugee. [The

Ruby Coverup, Seth Kantor page 376] Hendrix left Scripps-Howard in 1967 to work for ITT. In July 1970, following a meeting between Harold Hendrix and a CIA officer in Santiago, Chile, John McCone contacted Richard Helms, who arranged a meeting in Washington between William Broe, chief of the Western Hemisphere Division in the DDP, and Harold Geneen, the head of ITT. Geneen offered Broe and the CIA $1 million in ITT funds for an anti-Allende campaign. [The Man Who Kept the Secrets, Powers, p290] On October 16, 1970, Hal Hendrix cabled his intelligence estimate to his home office: "Unless there is a move by dissident Chilean military elements by this time next mid-week, the consensus in Santiago is that Salvador Allende will win the October 24, 1970, Congressional run-off easily and be inaugurated as President November 4, 1970. The chance of a military coup is slim but it continues to exist - at least to this date. A key figure in this possibility is former Brigadier General Roberto Viaux..."

On November 5, 1976, Hendrix was charged in federal court with a misdemeanor for refusing to testify accurately before the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee about ITT's connection with the CIA in Chile. Hendrix was acquainted with JERRY HEMMING through OPERATION CRYPT. He worked with DAVID PHILLIPS, who was stationed in Brazil, on the overthrow of the Allende regime in Chile. John Crewdson of The New York Times reported: "One journalist who is said by a senior CIA official to have accepted travel money [from the CIA], was Hal Hendrix, who as a reporter for the Miami News, won a Pulitzer Prize for his stories on the 1962 Cuban missile crisis...Mr. Hendrix, the official said, was considered an asset by the Agency...' [NYT 12.27.77] HOWARD HUNT was involved in generating propaganda relevant to the Bay of Pigs invasion. HUNT may have also known Hal Hendrix. Hendrix's premature knowledge of OSWALD'S activities may have come from HUNT or PHILLIPS. It also might have come from HEMMING, who claimed he was in touch with Hendrix on November 22, 1963.

Benjamin Matte was in Chile from 1971 to 1974. He was President of the National Society of Agriculture and the head of the right-wing party Fatherland and Liberty which advocated the mass murder of all communists. Matte was an associate of Roberto Viaux. German-born Henry D. Heckscher was in Germany in 1953, where he was East Berlin Chief of Station. When laborers in East Berlin rioted in June 1953, Heckscher cabled Washington for permission to arm the rioters. Heckscher was in Guatemala in 1954. In Guatemala he worked with DAVID PHILLIPS and Birch O'Neal. [Hersh, Old Boys, page 344] He was in Laos from 1957 to 1960, Venezuela from 1964 to 1967, and Chile from 1967 to 1970. In Chile, Heckscher funneled money to Jorge Alessandri, the opponent of Salvadore Allende for the presidency of Chile. Heckscher was in touch with Hal Hendricks. When Allende was elected, Heckscher lost his post in Chile. The team that replaced him included Gordon Jorgenson. Heckscher died on March 29, 1990.

Jerome I. Levinson worked for Senator Church's Senate Sub-Committee on Multinationals of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. When Jerome Levinson began an investigation of Adan Khashoggi, a prostitute was sent to his hotel room by, Eugene R. Warner, a Khashoggi aide. The 45 year old Levinson was forced to leave the committee due to an almost near fatal heart attack. Edward J. Gerrity Jr. was a Vice President of ITT who received a memorandum from Hal Hendricks and Mexican journalist R. Berrellez on September 17, 1970, speculating on which segment of the military had the capability to overthrow Allende. This eight page document said that the American Ambassador in Chile had received "the green light to move in the name of President NIXON...[with] maximum authority to do all possible - short of a Dominican Republic type action - to keep Allende from taking power." [Marchetti, CIA and the Cult of Intelligence page 330] William Broe worked with Gerrity on a plan to destabilize the Cuban economy. All over these men were involved with General Viaux.

Robert Berrellez was an AP correspondent in Cuba from 1959 to 1961. He was expelled after the Bay of Pigs. Berrellez became a P.R. man for ITT in Chile. Robert Berrellez was accused of perjuring himself during his 1973 testimony on Chile before the U.S. Senate. Berrellez helped Gerrity prepare his (Garrity's) testimony. Berrellez indictment noted that he had met a CIA official in 1972 and pledged that he and Hendricks would deny ever having contact with the Agency in Latin America. Researcher Don Freed reported that Berrellez was acquainted with DAVID PHILLIPS. The NACLA reported that Berrellez suggested that a relocation center be set up in Buenos Aires for the families of those involved in the coup. [NACLA 10.73] The NACLA also reported that after the assassination of General Schneider, Juan Luis Bulnes, who later proved to be responsible for Schneider's death, immediately went to the airport and picked up a ticket for Buenos Aires which earlier had been reserved for him in the name of Robert Berrellez. [NACLA 8.74]

RICHARD WHATLEY AND WATERGATE

The FBI reported:

Re Miami teletype July 14, 1972, concerning unsub, aka photographer, described by witness (Deleted) as third man with BERNARD BARKER and FRANK STURGIS when they picked-up processed film at Rich Photo Shop, Miami, Florida, on June 10, 1972. On April 6, 1973, (Deleted) advised his contact agent that he has had regular contact for a period of several years with one Richard Whatley, a used car salesman, and that Whatley has made several casual remarks about the Watergate incident and about knowing the Watergate defendants. Source indicated on April 5, 1973, Whatley commented that if someone talked, his attorney indicated he was facing a federal indictment.

A review of Miami files reflects that Richard Whatley, (Deleted) Florida, date of birth (Deleted) New York City, 5'6" 135 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes was one of 13 International Anti-Communist Brigade members arrested by United States Customs authorities on December 4, 1962, at No Name Key, Florida. Watergate Subject FRANK STURGIS was one of the leaders of this group which was alleged to be a military operation against Cuba. Details are set out in Miami report of S.A. (Deleted) dated November 9, 1968, Bufile (Deleted).

Subsequently, on April 6, 1973, source observed artist conception of unsub, aka photographer, and stated that this drawing was an excellent likeness of Richard Whatley. He stated that all the facial features of the drawing were extremely similar with the exception of Whatley's hair which is fuller than in the drawing. The physical description of (Deleted) compares favorably with the of unsub, aka photographer, with the exception of age. Efforts continue to secure recent photograph of (Deleted) FBI number 4145899 for appropriate display to witness (Deleted). Investigation continuing. [FBI 139-4089-1978 4.11.73]

WATERGATE JUNE 1972

On June 17, 1972, STURGIS was arrested at the Watergate Hotel along with McCORD, BARKER, Rolando Martinez and CIA contract agent Virgilio Gonzalez. Virgilio Gonzalez entered the United States as a permanent resident on July 21, 1954. The FBI: "Subject known to have left the United States in January 1959 to work for Felipe Vidal Santiago, Chief of Maritime Police, Cuba. Subject returned to the United States in August 1959. He worked for Felipe Vidal Santiago as an assistant and a driver." [FBI 139-4081-188 6.24.72] On the same day as STURGIS' arrest, the CIA advised the FBI that "BERNARD L. BARKER and JAMES WALTER McCORD had been CIA employees and that security checks were negative concerning FRANK FRED FIORINI..." [FBI Bufile 4679-10 W/G - FBI Reading Room] Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission asked STURGIS:

Ever act for CIA, get paid by CIA, participate in CIA project, etc. ? Yes, extensively. Not a Cuban-American. Ancestry is Italian. FIORINI. Working for American Embassy, infiltrated Castro's 26th of July Movement. Several assassination attempts on Castro, including in New York in 1959 & 1960. Knew gambling interests in Cuba. Connected with 'Company' but never 'employed' by CIA. Was paid in cash by CIA as contract agent. Was a spy for United States Government. Highest official - Case Officer - equivalent to Station Chief. Prefers not to give names by phone. New Orleans - May have met some of the Cubans who traveled to New Orleans and elsewhere. Manuel Artime - in Miami. Civil leader of the brigade.

In July 1972 the CIA disclaimed any connection with STURGIS. In February 1975 then-acting CIA Director James Schlesinger [February 1973 to May 1973] told John Dean that "shortly thereafter I discussed these matters with Bill Colby, who indicated that STURGIS has not been on the payroll for a number of years and that whatever the allegations about the Chilean Embassy, the Agency has no connections at all." [JRS MFR re tel. con. with John Dean 2.9.75] Jerry G. Brown, Deputy Chief, Security Analysis Group generated this MFR dated July 20, 1976:

On July 20, 1976, SAG delivered certain materials to the Office of the General Counsel relative to a request from the Department of Justice for original materials relating to ITT/Chile. Among the materials given to the OGC was the number attached which was received from a Watergate file captioned, '7th Floor Material.' At the time of delivery to OGC, and with the concurrence of the Director of Security, it was pointed out that the document is unclassified and contains a statement by the originator, James R. Schlesinger, former DCI, that in his discussion with William Colby, Colby stated that 'STURGIS has not been on the payroll for a number of years.' It was pointed out to OGC that this statement is in direct conflict with prior Agency public releases concerning STURGIS to the effect that he has never been connected to the Agency in any way.

STURGIS told Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission:

John Dean called Schlesinger regarding STURGIS and Chilean break-in. STURGIS says he talked to Colby and Colby said that STURGIS hadn't worked for CIA in last several years and a had nothing to do with CIA. CIA lost or destroyed his file. Has lied about his having no connection with the CIA. Helms also told Senate Watergate Committee STURGIS had worked for the CIA. Gonzalez had not worked for CIA. Willing to testify under oath. Willing to name names of CIA officials in contact with him. (Uses 'Hey' frequently in conversation. Talks with no Cuban accent.)

During STURGIS' Watergate trial, STURGIS asked for all FBI records concerning:

1. Activities in Cuba during the 1950's, his association with Fidel Castro, his contacts with personnel of the United States Embassy in Cuba, his contacts with FBI agents, personnel or information on other U.S. officers, or agents, either in Cuba, or in this country, and information received by the FBI directly or indirectly, from him relating to Cuba, Fidel Castro or Castro's Government.

2. His activities from 1959 to 1970 pertaining or relating to the country of Cuba while he resided in Florida including boat and plane operations, or incursion directed at the country of Cuba, the source of funding for said operations, the awareness and/or approval of said operations by other U.S. Government agencies and contacts he had with FBI agents, employees or informants during said period of time. [Oliver v. CREEP Civil Action 1207 - Daniel E. Schultz]

On January 29, 1974, the CIA generated a document that contained the names Matt MacVane, Luis Desa-Soto and J. Horton (Domestic Contacts Division/Miami). It concerned STURGIS' connection to the CIA. On January 31, 1974, the CIA's Office of the Inspector General generated this index card: "Internal Review, IG File #16, Tab #55, Internal Review, M/R by Harold G. Tittsler. Subject: (re STURGIS wanting to meet with Agency representative. STURGIS, FRANK, Harold Tittsler, Art Brew, Joe Joyner." In 1975 STURGIS told the Rockefeller Commission that his CIA contact in 1959 in Miami was Jose Joachim Sajennes Pardomo. STURGIS:

Naturally I had contact with BARKER. BARKER didn't realize what I was doing, but I knew he was working as an administrative assistant to 'EDUARDO,' which I did not know as E. HOWARD HUNT...E. HOWARD HUNT gave X amount of thousands of dollars to, or at least okayed this money for the B-25 bomber to be repaired. Pedro Diaz Lanz was one source of money...I was in constant touch with Joachim Sajennes. At the same time BARKER did not know I was in touch with Joachim Sajennes, and BARKER asked me to assist him in some of the work --- some of the investigations he was doing. And I agreed only after I got in touch with Joachim Sajennes and Joachim Sajennes says, go ahead, no problem. Everybody was working for the same people.

In a Motion for Favorable Evidence, Ellis Rubin asked for "CIA Station records for 1967 and 1968 from Mexico City, Merida, Belize, Caracas and Miami," to show STURGIS'

"past connections and working agreements with and employment by the CIA." STURGIS told the Rockefeller Commission that he was paid in cash. After Watergate, the FBI was unable to locate a bank account for STURGIS. When they reviewed the canceled checks issued to STURGIS by his employer, the Pan American Aluminum Corporation, Miami, it found that all the checks had been cashed in local supermarkets. [FBI 139-4089-394] In a CIA Task Force Report cited by the HSCA, it was asserted that "STURGIS was in contact with some CIA Cuban employees in the Miami area, but had no direct Agency relationship." When Richard Helms appeared before the Foreign Relations Committee on February 7, 1973, in connection with his appointment as Ambassador to Iran, the following exchange took place: "The Chairman: 'Was FRANK STURGIS an employee?'" Richard Helms: "Never, I am sure of that." In 1984, during the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT libel trial, Richard Helms said in a deposition that "to the best of my recollection" STURGIS once was "an agent, an outside agent, a contract agent, of the Agency. He was not a staff member of the Agency." [HSCA Staff Rep: The Evolution and Implications of the CIA-Sponsored Ass. Conspiracies Against Fidel Castro 3.79 Miami Herald 1.31.85] A few days after the Rockefeller Commission Report was released, Jerrold G. Brown, Deputy Chief of Security Analysis Group, prepared a Eyes Only Memorandum regarding STURGIS' CIA connection.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Security

VIA: Chief, Security Analysis Group

SUBJECTS: STURGIS, FRANK ANTHONY #353 459, HUNT, EVERETTE HOWARD #25 500

1. The attached memorandum, dated and captioned as above, resulted from a review of Office of Security material concerning FRANK ANTHONY STURGIS, aka; FRANK FIORINI, to further substantiate the Agency's recent public statement to the effect that STURGIS was never connected with the Agency. The writer found no information in the material reviewed which would contradict the Agency's public statement; however, it is apparent that an unknown group has backed some of STURGIS' activities.

2. The attachment is designed as a lead paper only - it should not be considered definitive - to show a line of investigation that can be pursued. The writer will attempt no further research into this matter without approval from higher authority.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECTS: FRANK STURGIS AND HOWARD HUNT

1. In his book, Give Us This Day ("The Inside Story of the CIA and the Bay of Pigs Invasion...") on pages 98 to 103, HUNT gives an account of some of the activities of Pedro Diaz Lanz, who defected from Castro Cuba in mid-1959 as the first chief of Castro's air force. HUNT points out that in October 1959 Diaz Lanz piloted a small plane dumping hundreds of anti- Castro leaflets over Havana. Diaz Lanz's copilot on the flight is identified as FRANK FIORINI. HUNT goes on to describe what would be personal contacts with Pedro Diaz Lanz in the Miami area, utilizing the services of BERNARD BARKER in his contacts with Diaz Lanz and other Cubans. HUNT further describes his attempts to involve Diaz Lanz with the Agency in the invasion, but HUNT'S overtures were not accepted by Headquarters. The concluding paragraph of this account states:

After the invasion the Kennedy Administration could not do enough for Manuel Ray. A cozy post was secured for him in Puerto Rico as Chief of Munoz Marin's housing projects. I am sure that no equal effort was made in behalf of Pedro Diaz Lanz, for our national tradition has become one of shabby discrimination against known anti-Communists."

NOTE: HUNT'S contacts with Diaz Lanz occurred during the period circa October 1960 to circa November 1961 while HUNT was assigned to JMWAVE, Miami.

2. Office or Security files #202 792 and 351 502 concern Pedro Luis Diaz Lanz, but reveal no use of Diaz Lanz in the Cuban invasion or other Agency operational matters. File # 202 923 concerns Marcos Diaz Lanz, the brother of Pedro Diaz Lanz. The file reflects that Marcos Diaz Lanz was Deputy Chief of Castro's air force until his defection in July 1959, effected by this Agency by his exfiltration from Cuba clandestinely. For the purposes of instant memorandum, it is of note that his file contains an Agency Information Report stating, "According to Colonel Oscar Morales Lopez, Chief of Aviateca -- the Guatemalan Government-owned airline -- Commandante Pedro Diaz Lanz, former inspector of the Cuban rebel air force, Captain Sergio Diaz, and Captain FRANK FIORINI, also formerly with the rebel air force, arrived in Guatemala on December 30, 1959, and immediately contacted him. They had a card from the Guatemalan Ambassador in Washington, and said that they had been in the United States in the first part of December and had talked with important officials of the government. The three wanted to talk with President Miguel Ydigoras Fuentes to obtain moral support for their anti-Castro activities." There is no information showing the mutual involvement of STURGIS with the Diaz Lanz brothers in anti-Castro activities until at least the Summer of 1963.

3. Information in the file of FRANK ANTHONY STURGIS reflects that from circa May 1960 to at least January 1961, STURGIS was living in the Miami area training a group of Cuban and American volunteers for a military invasion of Cuba. By October 1960, the FBI had determined that STURGIS' only activities in anti-Castro matters were in conjunction with the activities of Pedro Diaz Lanz, who was one of the leaders of the anti-Castro group, "Liberation Alliance." reportedly, STURGIS' invasion group, in January 1961 was calling itself, "Brigada Internacional," with variations of "International Anti-Communist Brigade." One of the sub-units of the Brigade was identified in the press in July 1961 as being a paratroop unit called "Intercontinental Penetration Force" or INTERPEN. The commander of INTERPEN was identified as GERALD PATRICK HEMMING, Jr. (#429 229) The Office of Security file of STURGIS contains nothing further until October 1968, when his arrest was announced in October 1968- while still heading the "International Anti-Communist Brigade" -- for his involvement in a group attempting to enter Guatemala to "clean out anti-Guatemalan guerrillas." At that time FIORINI claimed that two men who were sponsoring his operation were Bob Howell, allegedly a friend of the Kennedy family, and a General Biddle, member of the John Birch Society.

4. To return to the events of the early 1960's, in July 1962 an article appeared in The New Orleans States Item by Bill Stuckey, concerning an anti-Castro training base established on the north shore of Lake Pontchartrain. This unit was identified as INTERPEN, headed by GERALD PATRICK HEMMING Jr. The article inferred that INTERPEN was still part of STURGIS' International Anti-Communist Brigade. This particular unit received nationwide publicity when District Attorney Jim Garrison alleged that INTERPEN was involved in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and that INTERPEN members were connected with the CIA.

5. The above noted Bill Stuckey who wrote the July 1962 press article about INTERPEN and HEMMING is identical with the William Stuckey who interviewed LEE HARVEY OSWALD during a public broadcast in New Orleans in August 1963. According to testimony in the Warren Commission Hearings by William Stuckey and CARLOS BRINGUIER, (Cuban Student Directorate Delegate in New Orleans) in early August 1963, LEE HARVEY OSWALD came to BRINGUIER'S New Orleans clothing store announcing that he, OSWALD, was a former Marine trained in guerrilla warfare who wanted to join an anti-Castro guerrilla group in New Orleans. (NOTE: Many of the INTERPEN group were ex-Marines, as was FRANK STURGIS.) BRINGUIER claims he stalled OSWALD and several days later encountered OSWALD on the streets of New Orleans passing out "Fair Play For Cuba" leaflets. The encounter led to a disturbance, and OSWALD and BRINGUIER were arrested. BRINGUIER subsequently alerted STUCKEY to OSWALD, which resulted in the broadcast interview. It is of note that BRINGUIER inferred he was knowledgeable of the anti-Castro guerrilla group training on the North shore of Lake Pontchartrain, and even collected funds for the travel of two of the members to Miami when the group was disbanded.

6. The individual in INTERPEN of most interest to Garrison was Loran Eugene Hall (OS #348 627), who ostensibly arrived in Dallas, Texas, in October 1963, remaining until after President Kennedy was shot. Garrison also alleged that Hall was involved with the Minutemen. The Hall file reflects that in August 1963 Hall was in Southern California, where he spoke before numerous meetings of the John Birch Society attempting to raise funds for anti-Castro planned invasion of Cuba scheduled for mid-September 1963.

7. In June 1972 FRANK STURGIS, E. HOWARD HUNT, BERNARD BARKER and others were arrested while burglarizing the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee at the Watergate, Washington, D.C.

Jerry Brown had his suspicions that HUNT, BARKER and HEMMING were mixed up with OSWALD, or at least moved in the same circles. Why was this document classified Eyes Only, and why was Jerrold G. Brown wary about pursuing his investigation in this direction? The Rockefeller investigation could have gone in this direction. The final verdict of the Rockefeller Commission: "Numerous allegations have been made that the CIA participated in the assassination of President Kennedy...On the basis of the staff's investigation, the Commission concluded there was no credible evidence of any CIA involvement."

The Office of the Inspector General of the CIA generated this index card:

CAR THIEF

In 1973 the Justice Department decided to prosecute STURGIS for Interstate Transportation of Stolen Motor Vehicles stemming from his abortive attempt to hijack a Soviet freighter. STURGIS' codefendants were Max Gonzalez, Jerry Buchanan and two unindicted coconspirators, Richard G. Brown and Robert Curtis. In Texas, Buchanan claimed the whole car theft case was merely a government ploy to force STURGIS to talk about Watergate.

MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD November 21, 1973

SUBJECTS: FRANK STURGIS and William Johnson.

1. On November 16, 1973, Sidney Stembridge AC/OPS/PSI referred a request to the undersigned from Mr. Gary Breneman, Office of General Counsel. Mr. Breneman requested the source of information previously given in a June 20, 1972, memorandum concerning the activities of Mr. FRANK STURGIS with anti-Castro emigre groups during 1960. With the concurrence of Stembridge, the undersigned provided Mr. Breneman with Xeroxed copies of FBI reports contained in Mr. STURGIS' file which provided the basis for the information in the June 1972 memorandum.

2. On November 19, 1973, Mr. Gary Breneman, Office of General Counsel, contacted Mr. Leo J. Dunn's office requesting traces and information on a William J. Johnson, Jr. This request was forwarded to the undersigned. It was further developed from Mr. Breneman that his request had been prompted by a query from the United States Attorney, Miami, Florida, who is prosecuting the case against Mr. STURGIS on charges stemming from indictment on transporting stolen automobiles across the Mexican border in 1968. According to information relayed by Mr. Breneman, an individual by the name of William J. Johnson (DPOD: February 11, 1931, New York City) was prepared to come forward at STURGIS trial and claim that he was a CIA employee and that he recruited STURGIS to take part in an alleged CIA operations against Cuba in 1968.

3. With concurrence from Sidney Stembridge, AC/OPS/PS, a Xerox copy of a Western Hemisphere Division, Task Force W memorandum of 1962 was provided Mr. Breneman on November 19, 1973. This memo was located in file # 348 309 and concerned a commentary on an article written by Edith Roosevelt. This reference connected a William J. Johnson with FRANK STURGIS in a 1961 indictment for smuggling. This incident involved STURGIS and one William J. Johnson in an overflight and anti-Castro leaflet drop mission in Cuba unrelated to any Agency program. This was the only trace developed on a William J. Johnson. No employment relationship could be established and Mr. Breneman was so informed.

4. Further research into the Sturgis security file turned up a reference to a Tony W. Johnson in a Bureau report with information of January 1961. A Bureau source stated that he received a letter offering him the opportunity to join FIORINI's International Brigade. The letter further stated that a mutual friend from the FORCE RECON, First Marine Division, on "Tony" Johnson was also being contacted. On the strength that Tony could possibly be a nickname used by William Johnson, this information was relayed to Mr. Breneman on November 20, 1973. Mr. Breneman's office was also reminded of the 'Third Agency Rule' which precluded the passage of Bureau reports to other parties. His office was also advised in response to his request, that the Miami Field Office was believed to have already forwarded all information on hand concerning STURGIS to Headquarters. It was further deemed inadvisable to involve the Miami Field Office in local investigation of individuals connected with the STURGIS court case out of concern for prejudicing the proceedings.

Lawrence Howe.

In STURGIS' Motion for Discovery he wrote: "The Defendant has been indicted at Bar for alleged activities in the United States and Mexico in the year 1968; it is essential to the Defendant's defense to show his past connections and working agreements with and employment by the CIA." [FBI 26-425217-36] In early 1974 STURGIS was incarcerated for his Watergate activities. On January 31, 1974, STURGIS asked to meet with an Agency representative. [CIA MFR Harold G. Tittsler] On September 12, 1974, the U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans upheld STURGIS' ITSMV conviction. [St. Pierre Memo 10.25.74] STURGIS was released on appeal bond.

On October 18, 1974, this FBI memo was generated:

TO: SAC, Miami (89-35)

FROM: ASAC Frederick F. Fox
SUBJECT: Assassination of John Kennedy, Dallas, Texas, AFO

At approximately 5:15 p.m., October 17, 1974, I discussed with S.A. W. Douglas Gow, Supervisor, Division G, Bureau, above captioned matter. I told Supervisor Gow that FRANK STURGIS was in Miami and presently out on bond. He was convicted in an ITSMV case and appealed this conviction. The conviction was upheld, but STURGIS, being represented by an attorney, has asked the court for a reduction in sentence. The judge has taken this under advisement for 90 days. It was pointed out to Supervisor Gow that FRANK STURGIS has been for many years a source of information for columnist Jack Anderson in Washington, D.C. It was explained to Supervisor Gow that contact with STURGIS could not be discreet and undoubtedly Jack Anderson would learn of the contact, as well as STURGIS' attorney. In addition, STURGIS might use the contact by FBI Agents as a bargaining point with the court that he was cooperating with the FBI. Supervisor Gow called back and advised this lead should be held in abeyance until after the interview with E. HOWARD HUNT. [FBI Miami 89-35-410 10.18.74]

On December 3, 1974, this FBI document was generated:

United States Government Memorandum

TO: SAC Miami
FROM: SA J. St. Pierre
SUBJECT: Assassination of John F. Kennedy, Dallas, Texas.

Re ASAG Memo October 18, 1974, and Miami Memo SA St. Pierre, October 25, 1974. In as much as Bureau has requested no further inquiry in this matter is suggested this case be closed. Destroy on December 3, 1979. [FBI 89-35-413; NARA 124-10265-10136; NARA 124-10265-10135]

STURGIS was willing to supply the FBI with information on the Kennedy assassination if the FBI got him a lighter sentence in his ITSMV case. The FBI, however, was not dealing. STURGIS received a nine month sentence, probably lighter than he expected. When STURGIS was released later that year, he worked for Carlos Prio Socarras and organized a "Cuban Exile Unity Party" that sent a delegation to an Organization of American States meeting at which peaceful coexistence with Cuba was debated. Carlos Prio Socarras attended this meeting.

THE KISSINGER ASSASSINATION PLOT: STURGIS 1975

In 1975 Orlando Bosch convinced the Chilean Junta to sponsor the assassination of a relative of Salvador Allende who was living in Costa Rica. This plot was the cover for a plan to assassinate Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. STURGIS learned of the plot and informed Miami Police Department Detective Danny Benitez, who passed the information to Lt. Lyons of the Dade County Public Safety Office, who gave it to the United States Secret Service. STURGIS was question in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN in 1978:

Q. Did you inform the United States Government about a plot against Henry Kissinger in Latin America; specifically, in Costa Rica, that involved Orlando Bosch?

A. Let me say this. I notified the American Government of an international plot to kill Mr. Kissinger. Let me say this, change that a little bit around -- not around, I'm sorry. I notified the American Government that there was a plot to disrupt, and possibly to do harm to Mr. Kissinger and, also, the president of a foreign country when he would arrive to this country. Yes, I advised the Government of this plot.

At the end of a CIA list of FBI documents on STURGIS, the following entry appeared: "Subject: Threat to Assassinate Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and the President of Venezuela 24 April 1975 (Teletype to State CIA et al) No File Number."

To: DC, Miami

From: Director, FBI

UNSUBSS: ALLEGED PLOT TO ASSASSINATE SECRETARY OF STATE HENRY KISSINGER AND PRESIDENT OF VENEZUELA

IS - CUBA

This will confirm information orally furnished to SA Joseph Ball, Miami Office by SA V. B. Miner on 4/22/75. On 4/22/75, Robert Olson, Commission on CIA activities in the U.S. (Rockefeller Commission) contacted the Bureau. He indicated he had been called earlier by Frank Sturgis in connection with Sturgis' testimony before the Commission. At that time, Sturgis indicated to Olson that there was a group known as the Latin American Anti-Communist League in Miami which is making plans to assassinate Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and the President of Venezuela. Olson indicated that Sturgis was at his home in Miami, telephone Number 305-6S1-6263, and address 2515 N.W. 122 Street, Miami, Florida, 22167. Olson advised that he had on objection to our contacting Sturgis however, since he had committed himself to recontact Sturgis he would call him and advise him that he would be contacted by representatives of our Miami Office. The Miami Office was telephonically advised to contact Sturgis bearing in mind his propensity for publicity; to obtain all pertinent information and to eutel the results. Keep Bureau advised of all pertinent developments.

The notes of an unnamed Rockefeller Commission investigator read:

April 22, 1975. Has information regarding Miami people, possibly including some Cuban Americans & possibly including some people of past CIA contact, are planning to go to Venezuela to assassinate Henry Kissinger and the President of Venezuela on Henry Kissinger's forthcoming trip there. Dr. de Cardenas, Latin American Anti-Communist League may be involved. Called John Mintz at FBI and gave him above information...called STURGIS back, told him the FBI will be contacting him.

When the State Department received this information, it arranged for Orlando Bosch's arrest on February 19, 1976, for entering Venezuela on a fraudulent passport. Orlando Bosch: "The reports that I was going to kill Henry Kissinger are stupid and grotesque. They said I was held because I intended to assassinate the American Secretary of State, but I was in Costa Rica long before Kissinger arrived, and in fact, I did not even know he was coming." The Interior Minister of Costa Rica told the press that Orlando Bosch intended to kill Henry Kissinger for being a Castro collaborationist, since Henry Kissinger advocated restoring diplomatic relations with Cuba. In March 1976 Manuel Arttime arranged for Orlando Bosch's release, explaining: "I don't agree with his politics, but he is a friend."

ROBERTO DE CARDENAS

CONTACT REPORT DATE: June 30, 1972

AGENT: OZ-STEER/1 CASE OFFICER: (Deleted)

1. Contact was initiated with OZ-STEER/1 to discuss Roberto de Cardenas. Cardenas was previously described by (Deleted) as an individual who one worked for the Agency both in Miami and the Congo. He is a friend of BARKER of the Washington break-in scandal. Cardenas was unemployed until 1972 but now, suddenly, he is traveling to South America and has become affluent. OZ-STEER/1 speculated that Cardenas may be dealing in narcotics.

2. Also note a New York Times article of June 28, 1972 concerning the Washington break-in affair. This article states that an individual appeared on the Miami scene about two months ago and recruited the team for the break-in. The recruiter was described as a pipe smoker who used a code name...

3. OZSTEER/1 is skeptical of the NYT article as written, because in his opinion no Cuban could be recruited by an unknown individual using a code name. Considering the clandestine operational mentality of many Cubans in Miami are recruitments could only be made by a known recruiter with adequate bona fides [HOWARD HUNT].

a. Cardenas was born about 1919. In 1954 he was a captain with Cubana airlines. In 1954 - 1955 he was arrested in Havana by Major Ochos for smuggling cocaine. Due to political pull, Cardenas was not prosecuted, but was fired from his position. He retired to his farm in Cuba from 1954 to 1959.

b. From 1959 to 1960 he was in the Castro air force. There he met FIORINI, also involved in the Washington break-in scandal. In 1960, in Miami, OZ-STEER/1 was in the FIORINI home when Cardenas dropped in. Also present was Diaz Lanz, former Chief of the Castro air force. Cardenas was then working closely with BARKER in Cuba exile (unity) activity on behalf of Artime. At the time OZ-STEER/1 met Cardenas at the FIORINI home he told OZ-STEER/1 to go to a house on Brickell Avenue. OZ-STEER/1 did and there he met Artime for the first time.

c. (At this time a Case Officer named "Jimmy" was handling both BARKER and Cardenas. "Jimmy" spoke excellent Cuban Spanish.)

d. From 1962 to 1965 Cardenas worked with the Agency under the cover firm (Deleted) (Cardenas case officer during this period was (Deleted)).

e. In 1965 the Agency sent Cardenas to OZ-STEER/1 the Congo. In the Congo Cardenas claimed to have a heart attack and was hospitalized. He was later proven medically sound and released from his Congo assignment.

f. During 1967 to 1968 Cardenas drove a truck in the Miami area. Between 1969 and 1970 to 1971 Cardenas sold mutual funds in South America. (GRAMCO and others) This ended when the funds went bankrupt.

g. In 1971 Cardenas was economically down. In early 1972 he started traveling again and became affluent. OZ-STEER/1 believes Cardenas is involved in drugs.

In March 1975 STURGIS and Jerry Buchanan received letters of commendation from the Miami Office of the Drug Enforcement Administration. The letter read:

Dear Judge Clyde Atkins: I would like to call to your attention the fact that Mr. FRANK STURGIS has assisted the DEA by lending support and guidance to Mr. Jerry Buchanan during the investigation (case development) into the activities of Ken Burnstine. Mr. STURGIS directed Mr. Buchanan to the DEA at the outset of this investigation and provided aid to Mr. Buchanan during the six month investigation prior to Grand Jury indictment. This information is furnished for your consideration. David Costa, Acting Regional Director, DEA.

The CIA's Office of the Inspector General generated this index card: "Assassination, Homicides, Cuban Operations Tab 3, MFR from Joseph Seltzer, Reference: MFR dated March 21, 1975, from Mr. Cates, NPIC. Subject: Assassination Plans Against Castro (Review of C. Jenkins folder, request for info on PATHFINDER." The plans involving Fidel, to the knowledge the CIA Imagery Analysis Service, were:

(a) A folder, stored in the Photo interpretation area at JMWAVE contained materials relating to a plan to assassinate Castro in the Bay of Pigs resort area where he maintained a yacht and was known to vacation. The plan, possibly with the codeword PATHFINDER, apparently had been disapproved and was not under active consideration at the time. Our people did not participate actively in the plan in any regard.

(b) While assigned to the Imagery Analysis Service, a number of our photo interpreters supported Carl Jenkins of the DD/P concerning a plan to assassinate Castro at the DuPont Varadero Beach Estate, east of Havana. Castro was known to frequent the estate and the plan was to use a high-powered rifle in the attempt. The photo interpretation support was restricted to providing annotated photographs and line drawings of the estate. To our knowledge, this plan also was never implemented Another IG Index card read: "Anti-Castro Counter-Revolutionary Force, Cuban Operations, Homicides, Cuban Operations Tab 1, FBI Report, Seattle, Washington, (2-41). Subject: FRANK ANTHONY STURGIS Neutrality Matters (re: Letter from Bob Rostallon to W. C. Bean concerning Anti-Castro Counterrevolutionary Force - plans to go into mountains in Cuba as a guerrilla force.)" In June 1963 Joseph Seltzer was the head of the CIA's Office of National Estimates where he forwarded a memo on "A Survey of Possible Soviet Actions." [http://www.foia.cia.gov/browse\_docs.asp] Bob Rostallon was connected to INTERPEN and may have been killed in Central America.

Rockefeller Commission investigator Robert B. Olsen evaluated STURGIS' reliability:

COMMISSION ON CIA ACTIVITIES WITHIN THE UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20500

April 23, 1975

MEMORANDUM FOR: FILE

FROM: ROBERT B. OLSEN

SUBJECT: Interview with FRANK STURGIS, April 3, 1975, and April 4, 1975.

I have just reviewed the transcript of the taped portion of the interview with FRANK STURGIS and I am reminded to dictate this memorandum to the file. It is my impression that very little reliance can be placed on the claims of FRANK STURGIS that he has engaged in a variety of activities for the CIA. He appears to be so caught up in the romantic aspects of his own activities that he finds it difficult to separate fact from fiction.

Prior to his coming to Washington for the interview, he had told me by telephone that he had concrete evidence to show that President Kennedy had been assassinated as a result of a conspiracy involving members of the Cuban crime syndicate and the CIA. He also told me he had participated in several actual attempts to assassinate Fidel Castro, including one in New York City, and that these attempts had been undertaken on behalf of the CIA.

The detailed interview in Washington bore out neither of these claims. The alleged connection between the CIA, the Cuban crime syndicate, and the assassination of President Kennedy turned out to be nothing but sheer speculation on the part of STURGIS. As respects the assassination attempts on Fidel Castro, it turns out that he had been engaged in plotting to assassinate Fidel Castro and other Cuban leaders while he was an official of the Castro Government during early 1959, and that the CIA had nothing whatever to do with this plotting. Indeed, he states during the course of the interview that he discussed that plotting with a Colonel Nichols at the American Embassy in Havana, and was repeatedly asked not to attempt such assassination. While STURGIS claims that he was asked by BERNARD BARKER if he would be willing to undertake an assassination attempt, he acknowledged that he did not even know who was involved, or whether it was inside or outside the United States. He admits that the talk among Cubans in Florida of assassinating Castro in New York had nothing to do with the CIA.

These gross discrepancies between initial flamboyant claims and any hard evidence give rise to serious questions of credibility. The same is true with respect to the claims STURGIS makes regarding requests made to him to undertake ventures on behalf of the CIA. One gets the impression that STURGIS feels that every contact he has with a government official or anybody whom he has known to have been an agent or asset of the CIA has involved a CIA operation.

On the basis of interviews conducted at the CIA, and a review of the records of the CIA, as well as the interview with FRANK STURGIS, it is my impression that STURGIS was never employed by the CIA, was never a contract or other agent of the CIA, was never an informant for the CIA, and was never asked to undertake any contract operation for the CIA. However, it appears likely that STURGIS was active in one or more of the Cuban Revolutionary Front organizations sponsored and financed by the CIA in the early 1960's, and that in this connection he came into contact with various people who, in turn, had direct contacts with the Agency. BERNARD BARKER would be one example.

I intend to check out the claim that STURGIS makes that he was asked in 1968 by a CIA agent (allegedly Joaquin Pedromo Sanjenis) to organize an operation for the hijacking of a Russian ship, which hijacking was to involve a demand for release of political prisoners in Cuba, and a demand for the release of the USS Pueblo by the North Koreans. I also intend to check out his claims that BERNARD BARKER asked him in 1961 if he would be willing to take on an assassination of some unknown person. Incidentally, there is a possible connection on this matter. In 1960 and 1961 E. HOWARD HUNT was active in the organization of a Cuban Government in exile in the United States. In this role he had contacts with BERNARD BARKER, who was under contract with the Agency. HUNT states in his book that he recommended to the Agency that an assassination of Castro be carried out before or contemporaneously with the Bay of Pigs invasion. It is not inconceivable that HUNT would have asked BARKER to check out the possibilities of finding an assassin to carry out such a job if approval were ever given to his recommendation. [SSCIA 157-10005-101-46]

Given a receptive environment STURGIS might have talked: "Prior to his coming to Washington for the interview he had told me by telephone that he had concrete evidence to show that President Kennedy had been assassinated as a result of a conspiracy involving members of the Cuban crime syndicate and the CIA." When STURGIS said he was asked by BARKER (who worked for HUNT), to assassinate an unknown individual, Olsen assumed it was Castro. STURGIS had detailed numerous plots against Castro in which he was involved. STURGIS told Canfield this was a domestic assassination. What STURGIS referred to was the Kennedy assassination. Olsen also should have realized that HUNT and STURGIS were lying when they said they did not meet until 1971. BARKER was too close to both men for this to be true. Portions of transcript of Rockefeller Commission interview with FRANK STURGIS on April 3, 1975, and April 4, 1975, were withheld for National Security reasons by withdrawing archivist KBH as of 2010. DISINFORMATION 1976

In 1976 STURGIS told United Press International that he was requested to conduct an investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy by an un-named government agency. The CIA obtained this article and commented:

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence
FROM: Raymond A. Warren
Acting Chief, Latin American Division
Via: Deputy Director of Operations
Subject: Washington Star Article on Jack Ruby / Fidel Castro July 9, 1976:

The Washington Star on July 9, 1976, carries an article entitled "RUBY Met with Castro, STURGIS Says." In the article, STURGIS claims he knew that JACK RUBY met in Havana with Fidel Castro ten weeks before the assassination of President Kennedy and discussed 'the removal of the President.' STURGIS claims, according to the article, that he had been assigned to investigate possible involvement of Cuban exiles in the Miami area in the Kennedy assassination. The article also states that STURGIS refused to say for what Agency he was working, or gave him the assignment, but the article indicated that STURGIS was working for the CIA at the time. For the record, STURGIS continues to allege a CIA relationship, but no such relationship has ever existed.

The Agency reported to the FBI in CSCI3/779814 on January 30, 1964 that an unevaluated and unconfirmed report of a visit by Ruby to Cuba. In late 1962 or early 1963 had been received from Havana. This report was actually based on a two page mimeograph newsletter entitled, "Accion" which was mailed from Cuba in an envelope postmarked December 28, 1963, purportedly by an underground anti-Castro group. This newsletter received in Miami on January 13, 1964 by the anti-Castro group known as the DRE, was widely circulated in the Cuban exile community and was the subject of a newspaper article in the January 29 edition of the Miami News under the headline, "Ruby Visited Cuba --- Exiles Say" (WAVE 1283 January 1964)

The CIA's Office of the Inspector General generated an index card on July 9, 1976, that contained the words assassinations, J. F. Kennedy, S.D. Breckinridge, STURGIS, Mr. Buchen, Tom White, Jack Ruby, BERNARD BARKER, Joe Loftus, Washington Star, Bob Wall, Chris Hopkins, AMLUNCH-1 and was titled "Assassinations - JFK TAB 25 MFR by Breckinridge. Subj: White House Inquiry re FRANK STURGIS."

9 July 1976

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: White House Inquiry Re Frank Sturgis, aka Florini.

1. Tom White of OLC called to say that Mr. Buchen of the White House had reacted to a story in today's Star in which Sturgis claims that he reported to unnamed government agencies that Jack Ruby had visited Havana ten weeks prior to the assassination of President Kennedy, that he met with Castro at which time he discussed "removal of the president", the purchase of arms and smuggling of drugs into the U. S. Buchen wanted to know what is behind it. Tom asked that we find out if the Agency had contacts with Sturgis (knowing that he was not an Agency employee or agent), if Sturgis made such a report to the Agency and what did we tell the Warren Commission. I phoned Joe Loftus in LA Division and Bob Wall in CI Staff.

2. Joe Loftus got in touch with me, with Chris Hopkins on the phone, and she said that Bernard Barker (of Watergate fame) did have contact with Sturgis from time to time. Barker had been known as a CIA man and Sturgis did pass information to him, some of which Barker reported. However, we advanced no money for Barker to give Sturgis; if Barker did pay him anything we don't know it. Bob Wall turned up a report of Ruby travel to Havana, which seemed to come from an anonymous letter that was confirmed by an agent in Miami (AMLUNCH-1), not Sturgis. I passed this information, in some additional detail, to Tom White. S. D. Breckinridge

The CIA's Office of the Inspector General generated an index card on August 17, 1976, that contained the names "George K. McConnell, STURGIS, Dennis Berend, MAG Members, UPI that was a memo for MAG Members, Subject, STURGIS' Claims, reference, Memo, undated, (ER 76-8949) from George K. McConnell, from Dennis Berend, Deputy Assistant to DCI." [CIA IG FILE #57, Tab 2] Berend was an Assistant Public Affairs Officer. George K. McConnell worked in the Dominican Republic under diplomatic cover from 1970 – 1971.

MEMORANDUM FOR MAG MEMBERS April 17, 1976

REFERENCE: MEMO (UNDATED) for George K. McConnell (ER 76-8949)

SUBJECT STURGIS CLAIMS

1. In his most recent appearances, Sturgis has become quite cautious about passing himself off as a veteran of CIA exploits. Please note that the UPI item attached to the referenced memorandum cites him as refusing to say for which agency he was working in his latest escapade. The notation that "records have indicated that he was working for the CIA at about that time" was added gratuitously by UPI.

2. Our Office in this particular case called the Miami television station which originally did the Sturgis interview, the Miami and Washington UPI bureaus, the Washington AP bureau, both Washington newspapers, and a Washington TV station which aired the Miami interview. In these calls we tried to set the record straight by citing the Rockefeller Commission findings. The Miami TV station included our remarks in a subsequent continuation of its Sturgis interview. UPI in Miami also issued a new story to include our disclaimer. None of the Washington media picked up the disclaimer, but all of them promised not to be taken in again by anyone's claims that Sturgis had CIA links.

3. Whether there is basis for legal action against Sturgis, as suggested in the referenced memorandum, would have to be determined by OGC. We suggest that little, if anything, would be gained by providing him a new opportunity to garner headlines.

Dennis Berend
Deputy Assistant to the Director of Central Intelligence

On August 10, 1976, STURGIS gave the FBI in Washington, D.C., a memorandum by former Miami Metro Police Intelligence Chief and anti-Castro Cuban, Alphonso Tarabouchia. Al Tarabouchia, an associate of STURGIS, worked for James Sourwine, Chief Counsel to Senator James O. Eastland's Senate Internal Security Subcommittee. James Sourwine was involved in financing the Bayo-Pawley raid known as Operation Crypt. [HSCA V12 p65] In 1964 Al Tarabouchia had told the Warren Commission that he had a source in the Cuban Embassy, Mexico City, who would tell the Commission what really happened during OSWALD'S visit to Mexico City. When the Commission asked him to reveal the name of his source, he refused. [HSCA V12 p176] Tarabouchia would later work for the Anacapa Consulting Corporation whose other employees included James B. Howlett and Ben Wood, formerly of the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit. [Inquiry 7.79] The Al Tarabouchia memo stated that the Jose Antonio Lanusa of the DRE had information that OSWALD met with G-2 agent Solomon Pratkis before the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. STURGIS told the FBI that S.A. James O'Conner had seen the document in 1964, and "advised people not to talk about it because it might jeopardize their lives." STURGIS advised the FBI that he would be willing to submit to an interview about his allegations while being polygraphed. The FBI gave him an FD-328, "Consent to Interview with Polygraph Release Form."

STURGIS looked it over, but never signed it or took the test. In September 1976 The National Star featured an article by Steve Dunleavy about the Al Tarabouchia Memorandum. In 1977 Malcolm Abrams did an article for the Midnight/Globe: "Castro Lied to Barbara Walters. Hard Evidence Links OSWALD" based on STURGIS' charges. STURGIS did not believe Castro was behind the Kennedy assassination. This was merely anti-Castro propaganda. STURGIS told Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission: "Knew a Cuban woman who was with Castro brothers when Kennedy assassinated. They were alarmed. Feared reprisal. Indicates Castro didn't plan the assassination. She wanted to talk to someone at the top, has forgotten her name."

CARLOS PRIO SOCCARRAS AND WATERGATE

In 1972 the name of Carlos Prio Soccarras surfaced in the Watergate affair. Besides his association with STURGIS, Carlos Prio Soccarras was associated with Humberto Lopez, another member of the White House/Special Operations Group. Humberto Lopez was the Secretary of the Authentico Party of Carlos Prio Soccarras. The Authentico Party had offices located next to those of BERNARD BARKER. Humberto Lopez told the FBI that he went to Washington, D.C., in early May 1972 as BARKER'S guest. While in Washington, he stayed with STURGIS. Rolando Martinez and Virgilio Gonzalez, who were members of the White House/Special Operations Group, were also members of the Authentico Party. [FBI 139-4089-346] Manuel Artime told the FBI that Carlos Prio Soccarras had "lent some money out" to Watergate figures. The FBI questioned the son-in-law of Carlos Prio Soccarras, Alfredo Duran, about his relationship with HUNT. He said that he had "heard of HOWARD HUNT since the ill-fated Bay of Pigs invasion, but has known him personally for approximately two years. He stated that he (illegible) HUNT as a representative of a public relations firm in Washington, D.C., in connection with the Haitian real estate holdings in which he is involved." [FBI Document poor copy from carbon 2.23.73 Miami Florida 139-323 S.A. deleted p16] Alfredo Duran's stepfather was Anselmo Alliegro. At approximately 8:00 a.m. on April 5, 1977, Carlos Prio Soccarras, 74, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the chest with a Colt 2" .38 caliber weapon. Two gardeners, Griner and Clarke, heard

...what they thought was a gunshot and immediately stood up and looked into the garage of 5070 Alton Road where they seen a man sitting upright in a chaise lounge chair that was in a semi upright position. They observed this man who they described in what they thought was a pink bathrobe slumped backwards in the chaise lounge chair. Both Griner and Clarke observed what appeared to be blood coming from the front chest area of the man. Both Griner and Clarke then ran out onto Alton Road where they observed, and flagged down, a uniformed police car who was occupied by Officer Chandler. Prio was found lying on a lounge chair with a wound in the left side of his chest. Dade County Medical Examiner Ron Wright discovered "soot deposition with the wound" which indicated that the fatal shot was fired at point blank range. Cause of death: Contact gunshot wound of chest. [Ron Wright Office of Miami Med. Exam. Case No. 77-892]

Miami Beach Policeman Ed Avila, who arrived on the scene at approximately 8:17 a.m. Fire Rescue and their attending physician, Dr. Jorge Vasquez, was already on the scene. Avila:

I talked to him and he nodded yes and no. I asked him if he was hurting, if he was in pain, and he nodded no. I asked him if anybody shot him and he nodded no. I asked him if he shot himself and he nodded yes.

Ed Avila, had met Carlos Prio Socarras in Cuba in the early 1950's. [HSCA Memo Fonzi to Tannenbaum 4.24.77] When Carlos Prio Socarras died, he was bankrupt and had recently testified that he owed Puerto Rican banks more than $2 million. Prio had redrawn his will eight days before he died. [Miami Herald 5.24.77] His death was clearly a suicide. [NARA HSCA 180-10092-10075] Gaeton Fonzi agreed. [Memo 4.24.77 Fonzi to Tannenbaum 014581] Upon his death, the former head of the Cuban Revolutionary Council, Tony Varona, took over the leadership of the Authentico Party. On June 14, 1964, the FBI SAC in Miami sent this message to the FBI Director: "Subject Varone FAG (00:Miami) ReBulet to Miami May 13, 1964. Antonio Varona aka Tony Varone is probably identical with Manuel Antonio Varona (deleted). By memo to the Director, FBI June 10, 1960 (deleted)." [FBI 46-50437-2] On November 26, 1968, Diario De Las Americas published Tony Varona's statement that Castro agents were responsible for a November 22, 1968, assassination attempt against Julio Aton Constanzo Falau. On December 6, 1968, the CIA received a report from Julio Aton Constanzo Falau, and his brother Avelino, that Francisco Varona Alonzo had visited Julio Aton Constanzo Falau at Jackson Memorial Hospital:

Varona and Constanzo talked about the possible authors of this assassination attempt, and Varona assured Constanzo that the persons who had masterminded the assassination attempt were Joaquin Pedromo Sanjenis, Vincent Zorrilla and Manuel Villafana. Varona told Constanzo that the persons who had actually executed the assassination attempt were Richardo Morales Navarrette, Francisco Rodriguez Tamayo, aka 'El Mejicano' and a man known as 'El Gaalego...According to Varona, Joaquin Pedromo Sanjenis, Zorrilla and Villafana planned the assassination attempt following instructions from 'the American named Enrique, the Argentine.' Constanzo then told Varona that this was very strange, as he could not understand why those men would want to assassinate him. Varona replied that they wanted to eliminate him (Constanzo) for the simple reason that the latest infiltration operations which had been carried out against Cuba, using Teofilo Babun's ships, were exposing and ridiculing Joaquin Pedromo Sanjenis (201-266348), who was the action Chief of the CIA. Varona said that all the operations which had been carried out under the direction of Joaquin Pedromo Sanjenis and his contact had cost a great deal of money, with the cheapest one costing at least $80,000, and all of them had been a failure, while the operation which Constanzo had carried out had been successful and their cost insignificant. When Constanzo asked Varona whether he (Varona) did not also belong to the CIA group in Miami, Varona said it was true that he worked for the CIA, but that he acted as a Political Chief with a regard to Cuban affairs, and that he had directed dealings with Washington. Varona said that as Political Chief, he was obliged to report this matter, and that he had already reported it also to the police and the FBI. With regard to the FBI, Varona said he had reported the matter to a man named O'Brien. Varona also told Constanzo that the attempts to burn down his house and to shoot up his automobile had also been ordered by Zorrilla...

Higinio Diaz aka Nino Diaz had also been spreading a story among Cuban exiles, saying that (Deleted) knows that identity of the authors of the attempt to assassinate Constanzo, trying to involved (Deleted) in this happening.

On December 2, 1968, and December 3, 1968, I-41 reported to I-32 that Varona was saying that now he was going to destroy I-1 completely because he had trapped I-1 in something and I-1 would not be able to get out of this trap. Varona said this to I-41 with so much emphasis, and so sure of himself, that when I-41 and E-65 reported this to I-32 they took it as fact Pancho Varona is not a friend of Julio Anton Constanzo Palau, or his brother Avelino, just an acquaintance and this reason the Constanzo brothers find it very strange that Varona has taken such an interest in allegedly defending Julio Aton Constanzo. Avelino Constanzo believes that Varona is using his brother for propaganda purposes.

During the last two weeks of November 1968 Varona has talked to E-65 and other persons who were at E-65's establishment. While they were talking about politics, Varona said, "If Humphrey had won the election I would have had it, and Sanjenis would have won. But Nixon won so Sanjenis is the one who has had it, and I have placed myself at the highest levels." When Varona made this statement he sounded so sure of what he was saying that E-65 was impressed with regard to Varona's access to high circles surrounding NIXON. Tony Varona died on October 31, 1992 of cancer, at age 83.

ANGOLA: 1977

On January 19, 1977, the CIA Plans Division sent a three-page attachment to the Office of Security: "Official Routing Slip to (Deleted) For your retention or passage to anyone in the Office of Security who might have interest in attachment. From CIA." The attachments, three Office of Security documents, were withheld as of 2010 "as they are not germane. STURGIS' name did not appear in this material." In May 1977 STURGIS told an FBI source he is now associated with "Afro-Cuban Committee" to train men in Angola and Zaire. In June 1977 STURGIS flew to England and conferred with individuals interested in overthrowing the pro-Castro Government of Angola. In August 1977 source of Miami Field Office of Domestic Collection Division met with STURGIS on June 5, 1977, regarding plans to establish Cuban Government in exile on Angolan soil "with the help of Holden Roberto (FNLA)." [STURGIS Chronology assembled by Fonzi]

When STURGIS returned to the United States in 1978, he resurrected the story of "OSWALD'S secret flight to Cuba from the Yucatan peninsula," and he claimed to have obtained a Secret FBI document that quoted nine CIA and FBI sources as having had knowledge of the visit. STURGIS refused to name these sources, "for their own protection." The FBI determined that the secret document was a March 24, 1964, interview of JOHN MARTINO, by James O'Conner, at Miami. [FBI 105-8342 3.24.64] The FBI:

The document referred to in the article appears to be the MARTINO FD-302 since points of information appearing in the article do appear in the FD-302. The article alleges nine names appear in the FD-302, but any nine of these do not readily lend themselves to the definition of a 'contact' as suggested in the article. The article quotes purported excerpts from the document which agree, in part, with information contained in the FD-302, but which are not comparable on a word for word basis. In the article, STURGIS is alleged to have told the FBI, in a past interview that LEE HARVEY OSWALD was in Miami, Florida, prior to the assassination of President Kennedy and did attempt to infiltrate anti-Castro organizations. While the alleged infiltration is not mentioned in the MARTINO FD-302, STURGIS was interviewed by a Bureau Agent on January 14, 1964, concerning that specific point and he labeled the information as false. The article and FD-302 mentioned a fight OSWALD is alleged to have had in Miami, Florida, and Bureau Agents interviewed the allegedly combatant on March 26, 1964. While this person denied being personally involved with OSWALD, he claimed OSWALD had been in a fight, but could provide no details. His recognition of OSWALD was based on publicity following the John F. Kennedy assassination. The article and FD-302 refer to a trip OSWALD is alleged to have made from Mexico to Cuba during September 1963. The FD-302 points out that this information supposedly originated with a 'girlfriend' of OSWALD'S who resided in Mexico. [FBI ltr. To USAG from Director, FBI 7.19.77]

THOMAS HOLT

On October 4, 1978, a document was generated by David R. Wiser of the Drug Enforcement Administration a copy of which was sent to Peter F. Gruden of the DEA. Peter Gruden, head of the Miami DEA office, offered a group of Mexicans $50,000 to kidnap a doctor who had been involved in the death of a DEA agent in Mexico. [Wash. Post 5.26.90] The Subject of the memo was "JFK, Conspiracy Theory, Assassination, STURGIS, FRANK." [FBI 62-109060-7991, NARA FBI 124-10145-10233]

On December 11, 1978 Thomas Holt appeared at the office of the FBI, Miami, Florida where he was interviewed by Special Agents Peter Schoppeale and Don J. Demford. Prior to the interview Special Agent Schoppeale had explained to Holt that the FBI was desirous of knowing any information concerning remarks made by one Frank Sturgis in his presence concerning the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in, Dallas, Texas.

Holt advised that he is not well acquainted with Frank Sturgis but he met him approximately one year ago at a party given at Fort Lauderdale, Florida. He stated that he was introduced to Sturgis by a friend of his, Billy Johnson. Holt advised that at this party Sturgis had told him that he had been a hit man for Fidel Castro and that both Castro and he (Sturgis) had both worked for the CIA. At this point in the interview Holt stated that Rockefeller, meaning Nelson Rockefeller, had been in charge of the Warren Commission and that it had been a cover up as far as the assassination of Kennedy was concerned. Holt next stated that the "hit" was done in Texas to make it look like Johnson was at fault. Holt stated that he believed Billy Johnson may have told Sturgis to say the above things to impress Holt. Holt next stated that while at this party, Sturgis had named many people he stated were "big" and that he knew these people. Holt stated he thinks Sturgis may have killed Kennedy because Sturgis had said he could shoot a person's brains out at 1,000 yards with a simple rifle and imagine what I could do with a scope." Holt next stated Sturgis had made these comments to him concerning the assassination of Kennedy he was sure he had probably made them to other people. Holt stated Sturgis was a man approximately 50 years old. Holt next stated that he advised Bill Johnson had worked as an informant for the FBI, CIA and (illegible paragraph ending "from wealthy women")

Holt advised that in regard to the remark made by Sturgis, it was during the latter part of the summer that he was on Biscayne Boulevard, at approximately 125th Street near Denny's Restaurant and Steve's Pizza when Billy Johnson drove up in his car accompanied by Frank Sturgis. Holt advised that at this time Billy Johnson told Sturgis that he, Holt, was a Boston boy. At this time Holt advised Sturgis said, "I killed a boy from Boston named Kennedy." Holt advised that he said, "Do you mean the President?" And Sturgis said "Yes." Holt advised Johnson next laughed and said "Ain't that heavy." Holt advised that Sturgis then said, "I'll tell you, nobody else." Holt advised that that was the end of the conversation and Sturgis left. Holt next advised he was facing murder charges in Broward County, but that no trial date has been set. Holt next stated that he wanted to become an informant for the FBI but that he would have to have it in writing. Holt further related that he had been screwed by the DEA and his conversation became rambling making no further sense. Interview was terminated at this point.

Later that November the FBI reported:

For the information of the Bureau and Dallas, by letter dated October 20, 1978, the United States Secret Service Miami furnished to this office a copy of a letter sent to the Agency by the Drug Enforcement Administration, Miami, dated October 13, 1978. The Drug Enforcement Administration letter advised that an informant for the DEA had indicated he was acquainted with Frank Sturgis of Watergate notoriety, and during a conversation Sturgis told the informant that he killed President John F. Kennedy. This remark was supposed to have been made in the presence of an individual by the name of Bill Johnson. DEA advised that this informant could be made available for interview.

On November 3, 1978, attempts to contact Peter F. Gruden, Inspector-in-Charge, Drug Enforcement Administration, Miami, who had furnished above information to United States Secret Service, determined that he was not available.

On November 7, 1978, Peter F. Gruden was contacted, and he advised that the informant in this matter was Thomas Holt. Gruden stated that Holt was of questionable reliability, irrational, unpredictable, and described him further as a murderer and perjurer. He advised the only reason Holt was a DEA informant at this time was the Holt had furnished information of internal nature. Gruden advised that David N. Wiser, Inspector, DEA could furnish more details concerning Holt.

On November 8, 1978 David R. Wiser advised that Holt had come to DEA and had made allegations of wrongdoings against a DEA agent. Wiser advised that to date the internal investigation in this DEA matter has not uncovered any evidence to indicate any truth to the allegations of Holt. He advised that the evidence indicates to the contrary. Wiser advised that Holt had stated that during the late summer 1975 he Holt was on Biscayne Boulevard in the downtown Miami area, when he came upon Frank Sturgis who was accompanied by one Bill Johnson. Wiser advised that Holt stated that during this encounter, Sturgis state he had killed John Kennedy. Wisner stated he asked Holt "Why would Sturgis impart this interesting bit of news to Holt who was known government witness and publicized DEA informant from the past?" And Holt replied that it was "one hit man to another." Wiser advised that Holt had indicated an intention to go to the news media regarding this allegation against the DEA. Wiser further stated that he thought it likely that Holt would also make mention of the Sturgis comment in that he had reported this to the DEA and that they had done nothing about it. Wiser advised for this very reason he wrote a memo concerning what Holt had reported, and for this reason it was furnished to the Secret Service. Wiser made available a copy of this memo dated October 4, 1978 which is attached.

Wiser further stated that in a case in which Holt was a witness for the prosecution Holt had allegedly called a Defendant during a trial and told him he was going to "get him." The Defendant in this matter, at the time of the call, had a recording of his telephone call made which was played for the presiding judge. Holt denied making the call to the defendant and the judge ruled that Holt's testimony could not be permitted. On November 9, 1978 Wiser had advised that Bill Johnson was William J. Johnson, date of birth March 11, 1932 FBI number 133677? On November 31, 1978 Wiser advised that Holt had been polygraphed on three occasions by DEA and he had failed the three polygraphs concerning his allegation about DEA.

In 1979 Ray Sandstrom represented Thomas Holt in a first-degree murder case. During these proceedings, Thomas Holt stated:

First of all, I released Mr. Sandstrom because of lack of money, no other reason. Second of all, Your Honor, at the hearing before Judge Glickstein the statement that I made about FRANK STURGIS telling me that he ordered John F. Kennedy's assassination, and upon that statement I made, he ordered a psychiatric examination. I believe that needn't to bring out the fact that Mr. FRANK STURGIS told me he murdered John F. Kennedy. There was another person in Miami he said he murdered. He told me E. HOWARD HUNT, Gordon Liddy and Mr. Colby, head of CIA, were all personally involved in the assassination of John F. Kennedy and Gerald Ford was on the Warren Commission to cover up the assassination of John Kennedy. But if you want to talk assassinations, going through the history of this country, Republicans have murdered Democrats and Democrats have murdered Republicans.

I am not a radical., I am not psychotic and I am not a bigot. Most important of all, I am not ignorant...I gave Ray Sandstrom my last $10,000. I have no moneys. If Your Honor wants me to see two more psychiatrists, very well. But I notice the Court did not bring out the fact that the psychiatrist said to me it is very possible that FRANK STURGIS murdered the President of the United States. It is possible that FRANK STURGIS murdered President Allende, and it is very possible that Mr. Holt is not paranoid or crazy. This is in the psychiatric report, Your Honor.

Your Honor, I excuse myself for raising my voice, but I have watched Ray Sandstrom raise his voice on many occasions. I am not an attorney, I am not a prosecutor. I am not an assassin for the government. I am a man indicted for first degree murder, and I want every piece of representation that this Court can give me - nothing more and nothing less." Thomas Holt signed this statement:

I Thomas Holt, was told the first or second week in May a year ago today, with Billy Johnson by Bob's Pizza Place on Biscayne and 135th in February there was a meeting with customs when I told them that those prior times FRANK STURGIS told me he killed John F. Kennedy, I told this to the assassination committee and an oath was taken on these statements last week in Broward County in my court hearing before judge Glickstein. (Blanche Gloetzner took this depo of Record Reporting Services. Thomas Holt.

HEMMING told this researcher:

I did time with Holt. He's a fucking bug. To be in the business you got to be a goddamn bug. He deteriorated fairly rapidly. The Drug Enforcement Administration was trying to keep him on the street, but he's out there blowing people away. Where would guys become intimate? Are they on a fucking mission to kill somebody and some things slip out?

JOHN V. MARTINO & DRUG SMUGGLING

In February 1969 MARTINO was investigated for misrepresenting himself as a representative of the General Development Corporation in Guatemala. MARTINO ran an organization known as ONCA. [FBI 163-34977-2 2.25.69] In April 1973 JOHN MARTINO was involved with associates of the brother of Guatemalan President Carlos Arana Orsorio in narcotics smuggling:

MARTINO, 64, died on August 3, 1976, of a heart attack: "Acute Rupture Abdominal Aneurysm, due to Shock and Exsanguination due to arteriosclerosis, generalized." [Dade County Death Cert. 9564] MARTINO was never questioned by HSCA. The HSCA reported that on October 4, 1977,

An anonymous informant named Fred [Fred Claasen] called the HSCA several times and indicated a close relationship with the late JOHN V. MARTINO. Fred said that MARTINO told him he 'worked for the CIA,' and that President Kennedy was killed by anti-Castro Cubans. MARTINO said the assassins knew the motorcade route before they went to Dallas." [HSCA Memo Fonzi to Fenton 10.4.77] Author Tony Summers quoted Fred Claasen as having said: "MARTINO said OSWALD wasn't the hit man. He told me 'The anti-Castro types put OSWALD together...OSWALD didn't know who he was working for...He was there to meet his contact at the Texas Theater [the movie house where he was arrested]...They were to meet OSWALD in the theater and get him out of the country then eliminate him. OSWALD made a mistake. There was no way we could get to him. They had Ruby kill him."

When Tony Summers interviewed JOHN MARTINO'S wife, Florence Martino, she told him that JOHN MARTINO had told her on the day of the assassination

'Flo, they're going to kill him. They are going to kill him when he goes to Texas.' Florence questioned her husband briefly, got no meaningful response, and went out for a while. She was home again by the time Edward, 17, heard the news of the assassination on television. 'When I called them in' he remembered, my father went as white as a sheet. But it wasn't like 'Gee whiz' it was more like confirmation.' 'Then JOHN was on the phone...' Florence remembered: 'He got I don't know how many calls from Texas, I don't know who called him, but he was on the phone, on the phone, on the phone...' [Vanity Fair 12.94]

MARTINO told his wife after the assassination:

When they went to the theater and got OSWALD they blew it...There was a Cuban in there. They let him come out. They let the guy go, the other trigger." Some two months before the assassination, Florence Martino said, "a man from Washington, tall and large...in a dark suit, like from the State Department" had brought a young Cuban to the house. Later her husband would ask her, 'Flo, do you remember that good looking kid that was sitting on the couch? He was involved. He was one of them.' A month after we taped Florence Martino's interview she died."

John Cummings, a reporter who worked closely with HEMMING, reported:

It came out of the blue. MARTINO told me he had himself met OSWALD several weeks before the assassination, in Miami. He said an FBI agent named Connors asked him to come to a boat docked in Biscayne Bay, and introduced him to OSWALD by name. The impression MARTINO got was that OSWALD didn't know his ass from his elbow, didn't know what he was involved in. He thought the agent wanted him to meet OSWALD because MARTINO was involved in anti-Communist activity, and OSWALD was someone this agent was running. [Tony Summers Vanity Fair 12.94 p112]

S.A. James J. O'Conner denied having met OSWALD. In December 1977 STURGIS Juan Orta died of a heart attack at age 71. Several months later, Allen Courtney became seriously ill; he died on September 17, 1978, of natural causes.

On May 11, 1977, a source reported to the FBI that STURGIS says he's been asked to organize and train 200 Panamanian dissidents in Costa Rica which is part of a larger anti-Torrijos effort. [Fonzi- STURGIS Chronology] The December 11, 1977, issue of the Panamanian daily, Excelsior, reported that STURGIS was involved in a plot to assassinate Trujillo:

Carlos Manuel Pereira De Oliveira Cabral, who is being detained on drug trafficking charges, confessed to the National Intelligence Service of Panama that Arnulfo Arias, the ex-President of Panama now living in exile in Miami, and a group of anti-Castro Cubans also in Miami, planned to assassinate Torrijos. Segun Pereira, the Cuban Jose Celso Garcia, and expert on arms and explosives, was offered a million dollars to assassinate Torrijos. FRANK FIORINI was to help Garcia enter Panama through Costa Rica and then help him escape.

When Gaeton Fonzi met with STURGIS in Miami, STURGIS offered to introduce him to former Castro prisoner named "Paul."

Paul was an American who had spent seven years in Castro's prison. He was charged with plotting to blow up a building housing Russian agents. Paul had operated a small bar in Havana as a front, was married to a Cuban who worked for the CIA, and was deeply involved in Miami's anti-Castro Cuban activity. STURGIS told Fonzi: "He don't know you're going to be there, so when we get there I'll put him on." When the three men met, STURGIS pretended he couldn't remember where he knew Gaeton Fonzi from, then said: 'I really know who he is. Fonzi is a friend of mine who is with the government committee that's looking into the John F. Kennedy assassination.' 'Oh,' Paul said, 'you mean the guy you killed?' STURGIS' face froze. The smile was gone. Then he shook his head and smiled again. 'Oh yeah, sure' he said. Paul laughed at catching STURGIS off-guard. I started laughing too. He was right. Paul was a funny guy."

In December 1980 STURGIS opened a video tape store in Miami. A Miami News reporter asked him about the tramps: "No, I was not one of the tramps in Dallas. No fucking way in the world they were going to say I looked like one of those old tramps. I don't know who they were, but I wasn't one of them." In September 1981 STURGIS was connected with an ill-fated invasion of the American Naval base in Guantanamo, Cuba. The strategy: Send boatloads of unarmed men under an American flag into a canal adjacent to the base. The goal: Stay long enough so that sympathetic nations will recognize a Cuban government-in-exile. Wilferdo Navarro and Raphael Torres, a Bay of Pigs vet, were involved in this action. STURGIS and his crew ran aground in the Turks and Caicos Islands. STURGIS had to slip out the these islands in a small powerboat. [Miami Herald 9.10.81] In February 1982 STURGIS was in Angola, where he led a Brigade of anti-Castro Cubans, according to Wilferdo Navarro. [Miami Herald 2.10.82] In June 1986 STURGIS was arrested after he promised Metro Miami detective, Kennedy Rosario, who was posing as a drug dealer, that he could get the drug ring's chemist out of jail in return for a large amount of money. The Organized Crime Bureau first found out about STURGIS' scam in May 1986 when an informant told OCB detective Carlos Ortiz that he knew of "individuals engaged in reducing inmate's sentences" using "high-level" connections. STURGIS told them he wanted $150,000 in cash. Since it was no crime to con drug dealers, and since STURGIS never followed through on his promise to contact high level people, OCB went another route. They offered STURGIS a down payment of four stolen Rolex watches and $75,000. The police delivered four watches to FRANK, then arrested him and his partner, Spanish national Emilio Cotonat, for possession of stolen property. When the case came to court, STURGIS claimed he was working for Customs Officer John McCutcheon, and had informed McCutcheon before his arrest about the approach. John McCutcheon, who spent 20 years with the Drug Enforcement Administration, testified that STURGIS had told him about this episode, but he could not remember if it was before or after his arrest. The jurors could not convict STURGIS because his guilt was not longer beyond reasonable doubt. Ellis Rubin represented STURGIS and he was acquitted. [Miami Herald 11.7.86]

In 1993 the Government of Cuba named these men as conspirators: NIXON, Richard Helms, STURGIS, HUNT, PHILLIPS and Banister. They also named Johnny Rosselli, Gary Yen, George Bush, General Charles Cabell, Allen Dulles, Tony Varona, Richard

Bissell, Sam Giancana, TRAFFICANTE, Clyde Chow, (Clyde Snow?) Carlos Prio Soccarras, Robert Maheu, JACK RUBY, Jose Berman, the Novos, Pedro Diaz Lanz, Lenny Patrick, David Yaras, Eladio Del Valle and Herminio Diaz Garcia. HEMMING stated that STURGIS, to his dying day, still had schemes going in the Dominican Republic. HEMMING told this researcher:

You know why I was always annoyed by STURGIS. He didn't have telephone directories from all over the country cluttering up his fucking bedroom. He didn't sit in the library and read all the newspapers there are. He didn't do research. Now, did I stumble on to OSWALD doing research, and know he was defector and all the bullshit? You're goddamn right. Did I have him in my files? You're goddamn right. But that's not the story that's gonna be told, right now. Could FRANK, without any help at all, have stumbled across the newspaper article about this kid coming back from the Soviet Union, then read in the Dallas or Fort Worth newspaper about such and such. No. No fucking way. And HUNT and PHILLIPS couldn't slip away from their desk for too long.

In 1993 STURGIS began training men in the Everglades for another Cuban invasion. William Johnson reported: "They had a shooting out there. Gun went off accidentally. Someone got killed. I think he's the eyes and the ears for Uncle Sam. He's working with some FBI Agent, with the camp, so he's feeding information on everyone that's there. He's a cutie." James Hunt wrote, Frank Sturgis died in Miami on December 4, 1993, five days before his 69th birthday. He had gone to the VA Hospital a few days earlier with complaints of stomach and back pain. The death certificate said he died of cancer, though none had ever been previously diagnosed. An autopsy was never performed. Less than a month before his death, Frank had spent a week at the secret headquarters of an anti-Castro group, P.U.N.D. (Partido Unidad Nacional Democratico) located in the Everglades, where he conducted guerilla survival training exercises. Frank seemed to be in good health when he returned to Miami. His only complaint was that he had what he thought was a pretty nasty bug bite on his back. He suspected that it came from a spider or some type of mosquito out in the Everglades. At the time, he recalled that six months earlier he got a similar bite on his back while standing outside the P.U.N.D. headquarters in Miami. Other than that, for a man his age he was remarkably fit. But, rather than celebrate his birthday on December 9, 1993, Frank was laid to rest.

MARITA LORENZ AFTER THE COUP

Marita Lorenz stated:

I left Dallas about two hours [after RUBY threw me out]; FRANK took me to the airport and I went back to Miami...On November 22, 1963, I was in an Eastern Airlines plane on the way to New York City when the pilot announced the President had been shot. When OSWALD was picked up and shot by RUBY certain events began to fall into place. I was frightened. In New York she claimed was questioned about Marcos Jimenez Perez by the FBI although no such document has been released. She claimed she was asked: "Did they know the names of the people you took the car trip with from Miami to Dallas?" Marita Lorenz claimed she said, "Yes."

LORENZ 1964 TO 1973

Marita:

I didn't come forward with my story to the Warren Commission, but I did disassociate myself from FRANK. I lost complete contact with him until 1972. In 1970 I got married to Louis John Yurasits, the superintendent of a building filled with Eastern bloc diplomats. I would go through their trash, I called it 'compactor work,' Mr. WEBERMAN would call it 'garbology.' I would report my findings to S.A. Al Chestone. I received a letter of commendation from the New York FBI...

On October 29, 1971, Lorenz received a letter of commendation from John F. Malone, Assistant Director in Charge of the New York City FBI Office. The CIA reported "Lorenz collected wastebasket trash from the Soviet apartments which was offered and refused by FR Division in New York. She was met several times by the Domestic Contacts Division C/S. Domestic Contacts Division did not carry this information under Subject's name but under Yurasits." The information supplied by Marita Lorenz triggered one report titled "Illness of Mrs. Ivan E. Kartashov. Method of Collection: Interview. Directed to OSS Case Officer Kuehn. Field Comments: Per (Deleted) Watts telcon Copy of this information to be passed directly to (Deleted). Please coordinate with (Deleted)." [CIA FR Maurice A. Sovern 11.7.77; NARA 1993.07.13..17:59:24:750270] In January 1976 Lorenz and Yurasits were divorced. The FBI reported: "During the period of her marriage, 1970 to 1975 Lorenz voluntarily furnished information of both security and criminal nature. She was advised on numerous occasions that she was not an informant of the FBI." [FBI 105-83564 NR 4.7.77] Marita Lorenz:

In 1973 I visited FRANK in Federal Prison in Connecticut. When FRANK was in Washington testifying, he called me from a pay phone. A few months later, we met. During this meeting I asked him about the Kennedy assassination. He boasted and bragged about it. But he said, 'They haven't got shit.' He said 'They can't prove it' and he said he was questioned several times but that his alibi would stick. He said his alibi was that he 'watched the whole damn thing on television, in his house in Miami.'

In January, February, and March 1975, Lorenz logged 100 hours of auxiliary police work for the New York City Police Department. On April 24, 1975, Marita Lorenz surfaced in the press in a series of articles about STURGIS by Paul Meskil. The article was titled "Secrets of the CIA: The American Mata Hari Who Duped Castro." The article concerned the alleged theft of documents from Castro by Lorenz which later allegedly turned out to be the locations of Soviet missile sites:

I unlocked the door to Suite 2408, went inside and double locked the door behind me...as usual the suite was littered with papers and the filing cabinet was open. I couldn't grab everything. I took as much as I could, and stuffed papers and maps into my uniform pockets and inside my jacket. Then I left the Hilton and went back to the other hotel, changed into a dress, and caught the next flight to Miami. FRANK met me at airport and I gave him all the papers. I never knew exactly what information they contained. I was told the stuff was good, it was fantastic and the United States Government was very happy. Among the papers were topographical maps of Cuba on which several sections of undeveloped land, miles away from any population center, had been marked with handwritten circles...Three years later another intelligence agent told her the original groundwork plans for Soviet missile sites.

If Castro's papers had disappeared the same time Marita did, she would have been a suspect in the theft and arrested when she re-entered Cuba. On April 24, 1975, the CIA's Office of Security searched under "Lorenz, Ilona Marita and Lorenz Marie," but no Office of Security file was found. [CIA OS Memo for the Record 4.25.75] The CIA commented on this article: "In the first article Marie [sic] Lorenz alleges that E. HOWARD HUNT was the paymaster for STURGIS and Alexander Rorke. HUNT has publicly claimed not knowing STURGIS until at least the late 1960's...Relative to Marie

Lorenz, initial Office of Security traces in this name were negative in April 1975." The April 25, 1975, article was noted by the CIA: "[The article stated] one Marie [sic] Lorenz was involved with FRANK STURGIS and Alex Rorke in 1959 to 1960, in anti-Castro activities on behalf of this Agency." The FBI reported that in

...approximately Marita Lorenz, against the advise of the New York FBI office, began an affair with one Giuseppe Faggiano, who was, by reputation, a hit man and an arsonist. Throughout the duration of the affair she continued to furnish criminal information obtained through her relationship with Faggiano. She advised that during the course of that relationship, she had come in a position of information concerning gambling, shylocking, and IFIS matters, together with background information concerning LCN bars and restaurants. [FBI 137-44613-1]

On August 23, 1976, STURGIS reported he was with Marita Lorenz on the weekend of August 21, 1976, to August 22, 1976. She allegedly gave him cryptographic Albanian code. On August 27, 1976, the FBI in New York City generated this document:

In April 1976 instant case was opened to determine Marita Lorenz' potential as an informant. However, due to the fact that Lorenz was the subject of extensive publicity in June 1976, regarding recruitment by CIA during 1960 to kill Fidel Castro, instant case was closed. At the time the source had indicated her relationship with Faggiano was terminated. Subsequently, Lorenz contacted the New York FBI office and advised she had renewed her relationship with him. In July 1976 Lorenz advised she had been pistol whipped and beaten by Faggiano. She subsequently filed a complaint of first degree assault against him with the NYPD. Faggiano was arrested on August 11, 1976, and released on his own recognizance. Lorenz alleged that subsequent to his release, anonymous telephone calls were made to her unlisted number threatening her life. Lorenz, at her request, was contacted on August 19, 1976, by an S.A. of the NYO and Terence Mc Swigen of N.Y.C. P.D. At that time she accused Faggiano of burglarizing her home and stealing several tape recordings of telephone conversations she had with Faggiano; Ed Levy, a long time boyfriend and allegedly father of her son. Lorenz claimed she feared for her life, and requested FBI or police protection."

On June 13, 1976, another article about Lorenz appeared in the New York Daily News written by Paul Meskil. It was titled "CIA SENT BEDMATE TO KILL CASTRO IN 1960." In the article Marita related that she met with Alex Rorke, two FBI agents and a CIA agent at the office of the FBI in New York City. Lorenz said they suggested that she should poison Castro. Gaeton Fonzi reported:

Meskil said he first met Marita Lorenz when he was researching a series of articles for the News entitled 'Secrets of the CIA.' The series was published beginning on April 20, 1975. The series dealt with the CIA's anti-

Castro activities. Meskil said that while interviewing FRANK STURGIS for the series, STURGIS told him he had helped Castro's former mistress escape from Cuba. At that time, STURGIS told Meskil he couldn't remember her name. Meskil later remembered there had been an article in the defunct Confidential Magazine entitled 'Castro Raped My Daughter.' That article had appeared in the early 1960's, and Meskil said it is fortuitous that he is one of the few people in the world with a complete collection of old Confidential magazines. Upon checking, Meskil discovered that the article was written by one Alex Rorke (an anti-Castro associate of STURGIS whose plane disappeared in September 1963) and that its subject was Marita Lorenz. Meskil subsequently found Lorenz and included her in his series...Regarding his recent article about Lorenz, Meskil said he first became aware of the information when Lorenz, with whom he had developed regular contact, called him and told him she had just returned from Miami and a period of voluntary confinement under protective custody in a United States Customs Service safe house. She said she had been working as an undercover informant for Customs Agent Steve Czukas. While in protective custody, she told Meskil, she wrote a detailed account of her knowledge concerning the Kennedy assassination. Meskil said he decided to publish the revelation in the News only because he confirmed the existence of her written account with Czukas. Meskil said Czukas confirmed he had custody of that written account. [HSCA To Blakey from Fonzi & Gonzales 10.31.77]

MEMORANDUM FOR: Chief, Security Analysis Group June 18, 1976
SUBJECT: STURGIS, Frank Anthony
FIORINI, Frank SF#353 459

1. As you are aware, Frank Anthony STURGIS, one of the convicted Watergate burglars, has repeatedly and falsely claimed affiliation with this Agency. Attached to instant Memorandum are copies of two articles from the New York Daily News by Paul Meskill, dated circa April 1975 and June 13, 1976, specifying that one Marie LORENZ was involved with Frank STURGIS and Alex RORKE in 1959/1960 in anti-CASTRO activities. Furthermore, the articles again allege that STURGIS and RORKE were acting on behalf of this Agency. The 13 June 1976 article further alleges: Marie LORENZ has claimed that at the direction of STURGIS and RORKE (and the Agency and the FBI) in 1960 she went to Cuba to poison CASTRO. The poison was given to her by STURGIS. In the first article Marie LORENZ alleges that E. Howard HUNT, known to her as "Eduardo" was the paymaster for STURGIS and RORKE. HUNT has publicly claimed not knowing STURGIS until at least the late 1960's.

2. Alex RORKE, identical with Alexander I. RORKE, Jr. (SF1427 955), was a free-lance writer, photographer, soldier of fortune who disappeared in September 1963 while flying in Central America. There is no evidence in this file that RORKE was ever affiliated with this Agency. There is evidence that RORKE was involved with STURGIS in anti-CASTRO activities in the early 1960's.

3. Relative to Marie LORENZ, initial Office of Security traces in this name were negative in April 1975. Additional research relative to the June 1976 article has revealed a positive identification. Composite information from the attachments would suggest that Marie LORENZ is of German father/American mother birth, born circa 1940; that her father was Heinrich LORENZ, a former German Navy Captain who in February - 1959 was the captain of a luxury liner "Berlin";

4. Office of Security traces in the name of Heinrich LORENZ revealed that he is the father of Valerie Claire LORENZ (SF#117 245). Information in the file, coupled with information in the attached articles, positively identifies the younger sister of Valerie Claire LORENZ, one Ilona Marita LORENZ, as being identical with the Marie LORENZ mentioned in these articles.

7. Variations of all of the names of Ilona MARITA LORENZ and her family have been checked against Office of Security indices with no additional results with the exception to a reference to the file captioned "Cuban Intelligence Activities" (SFI350 643). An FBI New York Office report in this file dated 10 February 1960 captioned "Cuban Intelligence Activities in the United States" reflects in substance that Ilona Marita Lorenz, 344 West 87th Street, New York City, on 22 December 1959 advised SA O'Brien, FBI, that Jesus Yanes Pelletier, Cuban Revolutionary Army and Military Aide to the Cuban Prime Minister (CASTRO) had arrived in New York City on 18 December 1959. Lorenz reported that she went out with him on the night of 19 December to the La Baracca Restaurant. She believed that Pelletier was in New York collecting intelligence information for the Castro government.

8. Relative to Lorenz's claim in the attached article that she and Alex Rorke visited New York FBI offices and had a 'conference with two agents who had questioned her previously and a CIA official,' it is interesting to note that Lorenz was interviewed by SA O'Brien on December 22, 1959. The file of Alexander Rorke reflects that he was interviewed on December 30, 1959 by SA Francis J. O'Brien, FBI, New York.

9. The above is for your information. Jerry G. Brown Deputy Chief, Security Analysis Group

The FBI:

General Investigative Division, in attached letter to Assistant Attorney General Thornburgh dated September 8, 1976, for information from our files. The September 8, 1976, response, based on an indices search using the spelling of Lorenz's name as furnished by Senator Schweiker to the Justice Department, resulted in no record being located...Additional research relative to the June 1976 article has revealed a positive identification... [FBI 62-109060-7572x NR 4.7.77]

LORENZ 1977 IN SECRET SERVICE CUSTODY

In February 1977 Lorenz was in Madrid, searching for Marcos Perez Jimenez, in order to obtain child support. She told the Legal Attaché at the American Embassy there that she had been "followed by strange men and on one occasion her food had been drugged." Marita Lorenz stated:

In June 1977 Secret Service agents and Customs men knocked on my door and said, 'We know you went on a trip to Dallas.' This was Steve Czukas, a United States Customs intelligence agent. I was cooking and I said, 'Yes, I did take a trip to Dallas, but I didn't stay, I went back.' They questioned me and we talked only of this one trip. I confessed in writing while I was in their protective custody in July 1977. They put me up at Miami Springs Villa and gave me a new identity, Cathy Webster.

Miami TV newsman Victor Walters checked Marita Lorenz's story with a source in the United States Customs Service, and confirmed that she had been in protective custody due to the information on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy she had disclosed. [Depo. Vic Walters 76-1252-Civ. SMA Miami 2.3.78]

To verify Victor Walters' story, Philip Bowen, Regional Head of U.S. Customs, and Steve Czukas were deposed during the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN. Philip Bowen agreed to a deposition if his testimony was "confined to matters discussed with TV reporter Vic Walters...we have been directed to decline to testify to any matter which would reveal investigatory techniques, confidential informants, the credibility of a source's information." Steve Czukas and Philip Bowen both said nothing of value. A notarized Privacy Waiver was obtained from Lorenz so that her story could be verified, and a Privacy Act request was made for her "written confession." The Assistant Regional Counsel who had represented Philip Bowen at his deposition replied: "A check of our records indicates that we do not have in Region IV any reports, memos or documents on Marita Lorenz that were authored or co-authored or bear the signature of U.S. Customs agents Steve Czukas or Howard Weintraub."

Marita Lorenz: "FRANK wanted me to fly to Angola in 1977 to take part in anti-Castro activity there. The Novo brothers were supposed to drive me to the airport. Had I not refused FRANK'S offer I would have never returned." On July 21, 1977, Marita Lorenz called the listed number for the CIA in New York City and said STURGIS wanted her to travel to Angola, in hopes of obtaining first-hand information about the Cuban military presence there. Marita Lorenz offered to spy on STURGIS for the CIA, if the CIA lifted the exclusionary stamp on her passport that prohibited travel to Angola. The CIA reaction to Marita Lorenz's offer was emphatically negative: "There is no interest in encouraging Subject to travel or do anything else for this Agency." [CIA (deleted) 28990]

In September 1977 Marita Lorenz told her "car trip story" to Paul Meskil who checked it with STURGIS. STURGIS repeated his denial and again implied that he was unaware of the Novo brothers, but did tell Paul Meskil he had been in Dallas several times before November 22, 1963. In late September 1977, The New York Daily News published Paul Meskil's story. A few days later, STURGIS had a meeting with SANTO TRAFFICANTE in a Miami Beach supermarket. [TRAFFICANTE HSCA Testimony 10.77] In 1977 this researcher needed a witness in HUNT WEBERMAN, and the testimony of Marita Lorenz was not subjected to intensive examination. Gaeton Fonzi believed that Marita Lorenz had concocted the car trip story to discredit the tramp photographs, and was still in league with STURGIS. Gaeton Fonzi had contacted Marita Lorenz in 1976 shortly after the first Paul Meskil story was published. She asked him to provide protection for her; because he did not believe she was a credible witness he declined to do so. This researcher visited Lorenz at her apartment on 1725 York Avenue in Manhattan. Marita showed me the bullet hole in a mirror in her bedroom that was a result on an encounter with Faggiano. Marita would go into another room with an unidentified white male then come out a few minutes later and ask for change of a $100 bill. She gave me a copy of her address book for 1963 that contained the listing "E. HOWARD HUNT 544 CAMP ST." This was obviously a contrivance. At Marita's apartment I encountered a grandfatherly man named David Aldrich, who claimed to be related to the Rockefeller family. David Aldrich was determined that Lorenz should not allow me to visit her. As I recollect, one day Aldrich and this researcher had a confrontation in the elevator of Lorenz's apartment building. Aldrich threatened to have me killed, so I left the premises and waited outside until I observed Aldrich leave, then I went up and visited Marita. Eventually Aldrich and I made up and went to a Greek restaurant, along with one of my female colleagues, Gabriel Schang. Aldrich's role was unclear.

MARITA LORENZ SETS UP STURGIS: OCTOBER 1977

In late October 1977 Marita Lorenz called Gaeton Fonzi and told him that one of her mafia friends had told her STURGIS planned to have her killed. Gaeton Fonzi agreed to call STURGIS. When he did, he told STURGIS that Marita Lorenz had called him, and that perhaps STURGIS should give Marita Lorenz a call to find out why she was making these accusations. Gaeton Fonzi was attempting to find out if STURGIS and Marita Lorenz were still working together. According to STURGIS, Gaeton Fonzi called him and said: "'FRANK, I got a call from Washington to check out Marita Lorenz's allegations. So he did ask me, 'Have you been in touch with Marita'? I said, 'No I haven't.' He said, 'I think it might be a good idea, speak with her and ask her about these accusations.' I said, 'Fine.' So, on his advice, I did contact Marita. When I called Marita, Marita was surprised that I spoke with her. I said, 'Marita, this is FRANK.' She says 'How are you?' I says 'Fine.' She says, 'Are you mad at me?' I says 'No.' Why should I be mad at you? We've been friends for years.'" During the course of HUNT WEBERMAN STURGIS was asked:

Q. Isn't it true that you were more than friends with her at various times and places?

A. Well, you've gotta understand that there has been a period of years I haven't seen Marita, so I never knew what she's done, what she has been involved in. As a matter of fact, she did have some problems in New York. I found out that she was working undercover for, you know, the police department; that one of her boyfriends, whom she was involved with, was trying to blackmail her and she shot him.

Q. Dead?

A. No, she shot him, and she's got a mirror in her bedroom with a bullet hole there. And because one time when I was up there I says, "How come you don't take care of the bullet hole?" and she says "Well, I like to keep it as a memento," you know; and she shot the guy! Naturally the guy isn't going to go ahead and turn her over to the police. Now, she was telling me about his threats, about how he threatened to kill her, to do harm to her kids -- So she asked me, she says, "FRANK, I need your help. What can I do? I have to work for these people" and she named the people which I don't think I should go ahead and mention, I prefer that she name them, "and this other group of people, and this other group of people, and it seems that they can't do anything to help me protect myself against this party, and I'm afraid." I says, "Well, tell you what I'll do." So I went to New York -- now this was before Marita had made these accusations in the paper, I'm going back to when she had all these problems -- I went to New York at one time to do something on business, and I naturally stopped in to see her and I took a taped conversation of Marita Lorenz, between her and myself, at the hotel where I was staying at, and I turned this tape over to the Central Intelligence Committee. This is Senator Baker's, Central Intelligence Committee. I turned it over to him, which they may have it, they have it documented, and I, also, asked him -- now, when I was with Marita that day she told me the story, and I taped this conversation about the problems that she was having by this man here, this man that was threatening her, because she had some documents in her possession which she turned over to me, and I immediately flew to Washington, D.C. and turned them over to the Secret Service Intelligence Committee. These are documents of a foreign intelligence matter. Now I told her, I called from her telephone -- which there should be a record of -- I called Senator Baker's office and spoke to Howard Liebengood and explained to him how come this girl here had worked for these, you know, federal organizations and, because of what's happening, pertaining to what documents I had that I was going to turn over to them, why they wouldn't give her protection? "Fine" he says, "FRANK, are you coming down this way?" "Yes, I'm leaving, I'm coming down to see you." Well, I turned over all this stuff to Howard Liebengood with the hope that the Senate Intelligence Committee would help put a guard on her to protect her against the threats she was getting, against this man whom she shot -- not that she missed -- that she shot...Now, what happened after that, between the Senate Intelligence Committee, by trying to obtain protection, you know, for Marita Lorenz, is between them because I immediately disassociated myself, because I naturally felt it pertained to national security business that she, you know, was involved in...Now here we go over a period of time -- well, I haven't been up in New York or anything like that -- then this thing comes out in the paper and I spoke to Marita and told her why and so forth, and what happened, and she maintained to me, and she did mention to me in conversation, that WEBERMAN was one of the persons that was behind the pressure that she had after she put all the stuff in the paper. And I said, "Well, who are the other people?" She says, "I can't tell you at the present time, but get back with me." Fine. I immediately -- now, when I called her, remember, Gaeton Fonzi knew of every phone call that I had made with Marita, because I would not talk to Marita unless Fonzi knew that I was speaking to Marita. Then a series of calls again, another call, and I tried to go ahead and again ask Marita, "Marita, how come, you know, why don't you tell me, you know, because the people have been..." She says, "Well, I'm scared I'm going to be subpoenaed." So I says, "You don't have to be scared, because Fonzi told me you're not going to be subpoenaed any place, so don't be worried about any subpoena," you know. She says, "Well, you know the people on the book" and I'm not sure whether she meant Coup D'Etat or not; but she says, "You know the people in the book were behind me, and I'm getting a lot of pressure." Well, I'm sure a lot of the pressure is, from what she said -- well, I don't know, I can't put that in her lines, so I can't go into that. Anyway, this is the things that she had told me about part of the pressures, and she wanted me to come to New York and she says, "If you don't have the funds to come up here, I can come there or meet you halfway, or I'll tell you what I'll do: I'll send you a prepaid ticket and you come up here to New York and I'll tell you the whole story. I'll tell you everything, who the pressure, the people, who are the people behind me in putting all this stuff in the newspapers."

Q. That was the 31st of what?

A. October. I went over to a friend of mine's house, Frank Nelson, and I called Marita and in talking with Marita she says, "Well, I'm going to be busy, call me later." Fine. [STURGIS stated he told Fonzi, Jack Anderson, Paul Meskil, Malcomn Abrams of the Midnight Globe and Steve Dunleavy that he was going to contact Marita.] So, anyway, I believe I spoke to Marita again that afternoon and that night she told me to come over. So when I went over there that evening, I got there around 11:00 p.m. I knocked on the door, the door opened and here are two men with drawn guns pointed at me and said, "Who are you?" Well, I got a little scared you know. I was concerned. I thought possibly these two people were part of the people who had been harassing Marita. I says, "My name is FRANK STURGIS." They said, "Are you carrying a piece?" I says, "No, I don't carry a weapon." He says, "Well, come in." I came in and immediately they shook me down as best they could, with guns pointing at me. They says, "We're detectives from the New York City Police Department. You're under arrest." I said, "Under Arrest! For what?" They said, "We'll tell you about it. Come on in." So they took me in and I didn't see nobody there but the two detectives...Up to there I didn't know that my life was in jeopardy. Now I will tell you what the police officers told me. I came in. I had to take everything out of my pockets. They looked through my briefcase, so forth. Sat down. I asked, if I'm arrested, what the charges were? "Well will go ahead and tell you when we get down to the police station." "Now FRANK, you're going to have to thank us, because we saved your life." "You saved my life, why?" "Do you know Marita's daughter was outside this place with a shotgun ready to kill you?" I says, "I don't believe it." They says, "Well yes, because Marita called us" -- listen to this now -- "and told us that her daughter was downstairs with a shotgun waiting to kill you, FRANK STURGIS, when you walked in here. So when we got this call from Marita Lorenz, we went down and arrested her daughter." Now the story changes around as we go along, from the police officers...later on it was supposedly that the kid was arrested with a .22 caliber pistol on her.

The information STURGIS and LORENZ furnished to Liebengood:

She told me at one period of time, in Miami, Florida, while she was living with the ex-dictator, Perez Jimenez, he was the ex-president of Venezuela, she had been supported by him, in a swanky apartment, I believe it was in Bell Harbor, where her apartment was at; she had a little girl, a child by Perez Jimenez; and she overheard a discussion by the ex-president, Perez Jimenez, which she told me that Perez Jimenez was talking with two Latin type men and the discussion was for them to go ahead and kill Kennedy, but it was Robert Kennedy. [STURGIS v NYPD Depo]

MARITA'S VERSION

Marita Lorenz said that her daughter was going to protect her from STURGIS

...since she had received two threats. One from Frank Nelson, and one from a Cuban who said I was dead. I taped it. Monday morning. Monica told me, 'Mommy I am not going to leave you alone with FRANK. If you don't answer the phone I'll get him when he comes down.' I told her, 'FRANK wouldn't hurt me, he is just going to try and convince me not to say anything to the committee.' I had to meet with FRANK...when he called at 11:00 a.m. I stalled him. I had to get Monica off the street. I was working with the New York City Police Department investigating child prostitution and I called them. I said, 'My daughter is 15, and she is out on the street with a gun. She wants to kill somebody to stop him from hurting me. Pick her up!'

HEMMING told this researcher:

I don't discount anything. You helped her fuckin' manufacture the story. After all you helped her do that shit, okay, I'm not fucking stupid or something?

This researcher did not pressure Marita Lorenz, or feed her this story, as HEMMING and STURGIS said. STURGIS knew this to be the truth. The reason he said this was because it explained why two independent sources had put him in Dallas - they really were not independent. Marita Lorenz came forward with her story voluntarily. I didn't know her when she did. I first came into contact with Marita Lorenz after she had released the details of the Dallas car trip. STURGIS believed I was in contact with her before this. He based his assumption on the results of a pen register (a device that makes a record of all the numbers dialed from a telephone) HEMMING had connected to his telephone during one of my visits to his office. The device indicated that I had tried to call Lorenz from his office. It did not indicate that the number I had for her at the time, obtained from an old New York City telephone directory was disconnected. HEMMING thought Marita Lorenz had provided me with her number. In 1994 I assured HEMMING that I did not pressure Marita Lorenz to make up these charges and suggested to HEMMING she either saw Coup D'Etat in America or became aware of the investigation of STURGIS by the Rockefeller Commission. HEMMING:

In this business you can tell yourself that's probably 95% certainty. But if you start discounting shit? If you deny it, or white it out, you're fucked, mister. You don't discount anything.

Marita Lorenz entrapped STURGIS. She paid for his flight to New York City, then didn't meet with him until she had two detectives with her. Marita Lorenz had mistakenly involved her daughter in her delusional world. She had second thoughts, and had the police pick her up before Monica actually popped FRANK. Marita Lorenz was working on a child prostitution case with detectives from the New York City Police Department, and the officers involved in STURGIS' arrest were under the impression that STURGIS was somehow connected with child prostitution. Marita Lorenz was put under guard by five shotgun-toting detectives. STURGIS' bail was set at $25,000. STURGIS retained attorney Henry Rothblatt, who said the CIA and the HSCA were behind STURGIS' arrest. Rothblatt had successfully defended Colonel Robert Rhealt and five other officers of the Special Forces on charges that they had murdered a Vietnamese double agent. That trial ended in dismissal of charges, when the CIA refused to allow its agents to testify about its operations in Vietnam in conjunction with the Green Berets. In 1988 Henry Rothblatt represented BARKER during a Miami investigation into the granting of zoning variances.

STURGIS DOES TIME FOR THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION

On Wednesday, November 3, 1977, STURGIS' bail was reduced to $10,000 and he was released from Rikers Island. STURGIS had been incarcerated for two days as a result of his participation in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. It was ironic that it took someone like Marita Lorenz to do this. On Friday, November 5, 1977, the New York City District Attorney's Office announced that tape recordings and documents submitted by Marita Lorenz had been examined and contained no threat. The New York City District Attorney's Office moved for dismissal, since: "The lack of substantiation of her claims impairs her credibility."

STURGIS SUES NYPD

The dismissal prompted Henry Rothblatt to announce his client planned to sue everyone involved, and would file a federal lawsuit charging that STURGIS' Civil Rights were violated when he was arrested by the New York City Police Department. STURGIS was deposed by the late Bruce Stahl:

Q. Do you have any children?

A. Stepdaughter who is married. [What about Ronnie Sturgis?]

Q. Were you married to someone other than the person you are married to now.

A. Yes sir.

Q. Who would that have been?

A. Divorce. I was reported killed in Cuba, and after I came back from Cuba, naturally we were separated. [He abandoned his second wife.]

Q. Was that your first wife?

A. First wife was killed in an accident; second wife.

Q. When were you married the first time?

A. I was married, let's see, I came out of the Marine Corps. I believe it was 1946. I was on the Norfolk Police Department, and --- Her name was Odell Thompson. She was killed in an accident.

Q. What year?

A. I don't recall because I was in the Army.

Q. Did you ever threaten Mrs. Lorenz as to whether -- as to her speaking with the Senate Committee.

A. No, sir.

Q. At no time did you tell her not to testify.

A. Not in her whole life, never. For anything ever. In the discussion, one of the discussions I had with her, I asked her about the pressure behind her in making those statements, and I did ask her if the company was behind it. Or if the FBI was behind it, or any other group of people was behind it.

Q. Other than the fact that people stop you and take notice of you, is there any other effect the arrest has had on your life?

A. Yes, because I've worried about the people who are stopping me are going to shoot me, and that has affected on my family, that has tremendous effect on my family.

Q. Do you expect to incur any expenses in the future due to your arrest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What expenses?

A. Legal expenses, and possibly hospital and funeral expenses. I'm a marked man for the rest of my life, and a target for every nut in this country.

Q. Has anyone tried to physically harm you since your arrest?

A. No.

ROTHBLATT: Does this include being hit by pies?

A. I'm sorry, I forgot about that.

Q. Who do you blame for bringing these facts, or this information, to the news media, though?

A. Certain radical people.

STURGIS described Frank Nelson as a "retired newspaper man who is approximately 72 years old." [USDC SDNY 78 Civil 5113] The reference to pies related to an attempt by Aron Kay to pie STURGIS as he entered the Courthouse at 100 Center Street. Frank Nelson, 70, wrestled Aron Kay to the ground and the police took away his banana cream pie. The New York Daily News made this its front page story.

THE POLYGRAPH TEST

A few days later, STURGIS underwent a polygraph test at the office of Henry Rothblatt during which he was asked about the Kennedy assassination. STURGIS commented: "Everything pertaining to the assassination, conspiracy, whether I was in Dallas that day, whether I was a gunman, whether I was in a conspiracy to kill President Kennedy, whether or not Marita Lorenz was, with the accusations she made, whether she was telling the truth or not. I passed it 100%." Henry Rothblatt stated that STURGIS passed, but he refused to send this researcher a copy of the raw test results. On November 9, 1977, the FBI issued a public denial that their agents had encouraged Lorenz to poison Fidel Castro. [FBI 105-83564-14]

N.Y.P.D.

STURGIS sued the New York City Police Department. This researcher worked with the New York City Police Department as a consultant on this case, and supplied it with information on STURGIS' past connection with prostitutes, and fact that he had been arrested for beating his wife. As a result, STURGIS did not pursue the matter fully. He arranged an out of court settlement with the New York City Police Department in which he received $2,500. The lawsuit was originally for $15 million. While working on the STURGIS case, I left my original STURGIS file in my desk at Police Headquarters. The Police assured me, "It's safe here, we're the police, right?" My STURGIS file, however, was stolen by an agency of the Federal Government. All the documents in the file had been catalogued, and, with some effort, were replaced.

INSPECTOR GENERAL 77-2343

MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD November 7, 1977

SUBJECT: Marita Lorenz

1. According to recent press information, Mr. FRANK STURGIS had been charged with threatening subject, who reportedly told investigators from the HSCA that she went with STURGIS and LEE HARVEY OSWALD to Dallas three days before Kennedy's assassination. The charges were dismissed on November 4, 1977, for "lack of proof." Subject has repeatedly claimed that she was an undercover operative for the CIA and FBI. According to LA Division operational traces, we have had no contact for operations. But. . . .

2. In July 1977, DCD received a telephone call from subject, who asked for a named DCD Contact Specialist (presently the Pittsburgh Field Chief). On the telephone with DCD, subject claimed that she had various contacts with U.S. Government agencies, and she was now reporting that she had been invited by FRANK STURGIS, who had telephoned her several times from Paris and Lisbon, to join him immediately in Lisbon and he provided an airplane ticket for her to travel on July 21. According to subject, STURGIS wanted to spy on the Cuban presence in Angola and wanted subject with him. She called DCE to solicit their assistance in having the exclusionary stamp on her passport lifted (not further explained) and offered to report on STURGIS. Subject said that STURGIS has his own army of revolutionaries-in-exile in the Miami area. DCD turned down her offer.

3. In order to respond to a priority inquiry from DCI/PA whether or not the Agency had anything to do with the subject, we followed up with DCD on her relationship with DCD and learned that in April 1972, also while in New York and living under the name of Illona M. Yurasits (no Directorate traces), she offered to report on the wife of a Soviet U.N. delegation member living in the same apartment building. She also collected wastepaper basket trash from Soviet apartments which was offered to, and refused by, the FR Division in New York. She met several times by the DCD C/S and said then that she had previous contacts with CIA, talked about her Castro connection, her sexual involvement with Castro, and her contacts with STURGIS. DCD did not carry this information under subject's name, but under Yurasits name, and is searching their records further and recalling some material from archives which they believe might be pertinent.

4. The above was called to the attention of OLC/Cummins. By direction of ADDO, we will notify DCI/PA to make no comment to the press pending further resolution of our relationship. It is noted that in view of the dismissal of the New York charges, the press interest most probably will dissipate.

THE CONSPIRACY RESPONSIBLE FOR MARITA LORENZ

Vindicated by the courts of having threatened Marita Lorenz, STURGIS began to blame a conspiracy for the actions of Marita Lorenz. In November 1977 The Midnight Globe ran this story: "STURGIS Says Reds Are Framing Me As JFK's Killer." STURGIS told Malcomn Abrams Marita Lorenz was "brainwashed, drugged and coerced into working for the communists." He explained: "There are elements behind her that have pressed her to do what she has done. It's something I would like to find out about myself. I feel in my heart she is not doing this as a person. I believe that communist agents are putting pressure on her. There is somebody [WEBERMAN] behind this mess."

In April 1978 Ellis Rubin claimed:

Plaintiff sues the defendant WEBERMAN for conspiracy to defame and slander in that Defendant, A. J. WEBERMAN did induce and conspire with one Marita Lorenz to have her publicly accuse HOWARD HUNT of financing and bankrolling several persons, including herself, to journey in two cars from Miami to Dallas, in November of 1963, in order to murder the then President of the United States, John F. Kennedy. As a result of said conspiracy, these false and malicious charges by the said Marita Lorenz and the Defendant, Alan J. WEBERMAN, with the purpose to discredit and implicate Plaintiff HUNT in the most infamous crime in the history of the United States. Wherefore Plaintiff demands judgment against the Defendant for compensatory damages in the amount of $1,000,000 and for punitive damages in the amount of $1,500,000, plus costs of this action, and Plaintiff HUNT demands trial by jury of all issues triable by a jury.

Plaintiff sues Defendant for conspiring to deprive Plaintiff of a witness in the upcoming trial of this cause of action in that WEBERMAN conspired with Marita Lorenz to induce and pay for the trip of FRANK STURGIS from this jurisdiction to New York, to supposedly confer with Marita Lorenz. Plaintiff would show that on October 31, 1977, due to the conspiracy and connivance of Defendant WEBERMAN and Marita Lorenz, FRANK STURGIS did journey to New York where he was falsely arrested and imprisoned, and falsely accused of coercion and harassment. In addition, the 15-year-old daughter of Marita Lorenz was apprehended by the New York City Police Department while in possession of a loaded .22 caliber revolver. The said daughter did admit to certain persons at the time and place on October 31, 1977, in New York, New York, she had the gun on her person to kill FRANK STURGIS. Plaintiff HUNT would now show that it was the purpose of this conspiracy between the Defendant WEBERMAN, and Marita Lorenz, was to either assassinate FRANK STURGIS, or thoroughly discredit FRANK STURGIS, in order to deprive HUNT of his corroborative witness that the charges contained in Defendant WEBERMAN's libelous publication are false and malicious and untrue.

In April 1978 HUNT was asked for any and all evidence that I planned to murder FRANK STURGIS.

Q. Do you have any evidence that Mr. WEBERMAN conspired with Marita Lorenz to kill Mr. FRANK STURGIS.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Could I ask you, what is this evidence?

A. The statements made to by Mr. WEBERMAN and Mr. Sturgis made to me and under oath.

Q. Where are those statements?

A. I don't know. You took the deposition.

MR. WEBERMAN: Excuse me for one second. Other than the statements of Mr. STURGIS, is there any evidence of the plot of Mr. WEBERMAN conspiring to kill FRANK STURGIS, as you alleged in you amended Complaint?

THE DEPONENT: I believe the matter is in litigation in New York City right now. Mr. STURGIS, I believe, gave the details of it. I am not too conversant with --

Q. But other than Mr. STURGIS'S statements, there was nothing you know of that would indicate Mr WEBERMAN was involved in this plot to do away with Mr. STURGIS?

A. I am going to have to consult with counsel. Yes. My attorney has conducted an extensive investigation the results of which he has not yet made known to me.

FRANK STURGIS was asked about this:

Q. Do you have any evidence that WEBERMAN, the gentleman sitting next to me today, engaged in conspiracy to lure you to New York City, and in fact conspire with others to commit the crime of murder on you?

A. Mr. Gaeton Fonzi, the investigator for the HSCA, contacted me. He told me, "FRANK, I got a call from Washington to go ahead and check into these allegations of Marita Lorenz and naturally I have to sit down and talk to you." Fine. So we set up a meeting, talked with Fonzi and he says, "What do you think is behind this?" I said I didn't know. So, naturally, I defended Marita. I said "I don't think Marita Lorenz would do this by herself. There had to be some reason or some force pushing her behind this." He says, "Well it seems that way. I just can't believe it," you know, "everything that's going on." The only thing I can say is that Marita Lorenz told me on the telephone that WEBERMAN was behind the pressures in doing what she had done, you, know, that's the only thing I know.

Q. Do you know of any other assassination plots Mr. WEBERMAN was involved in that would affect you, other than the one just spoken of?

A. No. Well, I'm telling you the story about Marita, what she told me that some of the people that was behind her, the pressures that she had behind her in making the story which led up to her daughter actually being arrested for being outside her apartment with a .22 caliber pistol, can you tell me? Can (sic) not a lawyer. I'd like to know these things...Now I don't know whether WEBERMAN gave her money to go ahead and -- all I know is that Marita Lorenz sent me a prepaid ticket. Now, where she got that money, I don't know...I say there's elements in this country who are trying to use me to divide the people's thinking in this country and the true facts...

Ellis Rubin was asked what evidence he had of conspiracy. He had none.

My attorney asked HUNT how the potential murder of STURGIS could affect his alibi, if the two men had not been together on November 22, 1963. He answered:

Well, I think I can look at it this way; that we know that FRANK STURGIS has a solid alibi for where he was on the day the tragedy took place. By doing away with him, then the focus - thanks to the book Coup D'Etat In America - the focus now comes to rest on me.

The FBI sent this memorandum about Marita Lorenz to Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Robert L. Keuch:

On February 12, 1978, Marita Lorenz telephonically contacted the N.Y. FBI and advised she had 16 tapes and four boxes of materials she has compiled on her life...Lorenz asked to be contacted by the FBI on February 13, 1978. On February 13, 1978, Lorenz recontacted the N.Y. Office and advised she was leaving the area. She stated the FBI had always treated her well in the past and she had decided to furnish the FBI with more information regarding her dealings with FRANK STURGIS...The allegations by Lorenz against STURGIS proved to be baseless...Lorenz has proved untrustworthy in previous dealings with the FBI. As a result, New York will make no effort to contact her to take possession of the material. [FBI 62-117290 NR 2.24.78]

In the summer of 1978 Lorenz received a large advance from Viking Press for her life story, according to document she allowed this researcher to copy. In July 1979 Lorenz wrote a letter to Fidel Castro in which she willed him all of her property and gave him custody over her two children. In September 1979 Lorenz filed a complaint against her attorney, Lawrence Krieger, who had refused to let her steal from her son's trust fund. In 1992 she was back in the news again after she released the 'Andre Castro' story. In the 1990's Marita's daughter, Monica, lived with the son of Salvador Allende. Marita's son went to law school. Marita ended up washing floors for a living.

HUNT'S ALIBIS FOR NOVEMBER 22, 1963

In 1974 the Ervin Committee questioned HOWARD HUNT about his whereabouts on November 22, 1963. The transcripts of his executive session testimony remain classified. The first report of HUNT'S alibi was generated by the FBI in the summer of 1974.

HUNT'S FIRST ALIBI (FBI)

On October 17, 1974, HUNT was interviewed by the FBI at the residence of his attorney, William Snyder, "concerning his whereabouts on the day President Kennedy was assassinated at Dallas, Texas, November 22, 1963."

Mr. HUNT recalls hearing about the Kennedy assassination on his car radio immediately following his departure from a Chinese grocery store in the area of '9th' and 'H' Street, Northwest, in Washington, D.C. with his wife Dorothy (deceased). Mr. and Mrs. HUNT frequently made trips to the Chinese Grocery stores in the 9th and H Street area as the both loved Chinese food. Mr. HUNT had spent some time in China during World War II, and his wife had lived there for some period of time with her first husband. Mrs. HUNT was an excellent Chinese cook and frequently prepared Chinese meals.

Mr. HUNT is not sure, but expressed his belief that he must have been on Annual Leave from his employment at the CIA on November 22, 1963, or else he would not have been on this shopping trip with his wife.

He recalls hearing the Kennedy assassination news in the early or mid-afternoon and believes he had lunch at home earlier that day with his wife. HUNT can recall no other events of November 22, 1963, except this trip, and the fact that he picked up his daughter Keven at Sidwell Friends School, Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, on the way home from the 9th and H Streets area. Mr. and Mrs. HUNT resided at that time at 5125 Baltan Road, Sumner, Maryland at that time.

Any and all records of Mr. HUNT relating to November 1963, were destroyed several years ago. Mr. HUNT believes CIA records will reflect whether or not he was on Annual Leave on November 22, 1963, and whether or not he was at work November 21, 1963, and the next working day following November 22, 1963.

HUNT believes he remained home following arrival from grocery trip, until time of Kennedy funeral watching television with his family. He can recall no conversation with fellow employees, friends or neighbors, except possibly one neighbor, Raymond S. Thomas. Mr. Thomas now resides at 1281 Northeast 8th Street, Pompano, Florida. (Leads to interview Thomas...)

Mr. HUNT said he was not involved in any way, shape, or form with the Kennedy assassination. In this regard he recently filed a libel suit against the publisher of The National Tattler, Promotion Agency, Inc. Chicago, Illinois, claiming he was libeled by an article in this paper on March 31, 1974, stating HUNT was at Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963. [FBI 62-109060-7140 Charles D. Flagg and Hugh M. Barhhardt]

Raymond Thomas was questioned under oath during HUNT v. WEBERMAN. He said he did not remember seeing HUNT on November 22, 1963, or discussing the assassination with him:

Q. When was the last time you spoke with Mr. HUNT if you can recall?

A. Gee, I can't -- I can't recall really.

Q. All right. Do you recall what you did and where you were on November 22, 1963?

A. Yeah, I was working.

Q. Where was your office located?

A. On Wisconsin Avenue, D.C. I was a President of Smith Thomas and Smith, General Contractors.

Q. Did there come a time when you left work?

A. Around sometime after the assassination.

Q. Did you go home, or elsewhere, from work?

A. I think I went home probably.

Q. Do you recall approximately what time you may have gotten home that day from work?

A. Before five o'clock.

Q. When you got home that day, did you have an occasion to see Mr. HUNT after your arrival home?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Do you ever recall having any discussions with him about his whereabouts on that day?

A. No.

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR PLAINTIFF BY ELLIS RUBIN

Q. Mr. Thomas, is it that you don't remember seeing Mr. HUNT the day of the assassination, or the next day, or is it your testimony that you remember that you did not see him?

A. I don't remember whether I saw him or not. And that applies to the neighbor on the other side, and the neighbor across the street who I was much closer to than Mr. HUNT.

Q. In other words, your memory of that period is rather fuzzy?

A. Right, exactly. As far as the neighbors are concerned, that's for sure.

Q. Could it be that Mr. HUNT was home that day?

A. Could be for all --

Q. (Interposing) You weren't particularly paying attention to who was in the neighborhood?

A. No. No.

FURTHER EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENDANTS BY MARVIN MILLER.

Q. Do you think it is likely that if you had seen him, or he had come over to your house on that day after you got home, that you might have recalled that?

A. I don't know at this time. It's been so long. I really couldn't say yes, I would have remembered or not.

Q. All right. You don't know, in other words, one way or the other whether he was there or not there in essence?

A. That is correct.

CAROL THOMAS

Q. Do you recall where you were on the day of the assassination?

A. I was at home all day.

Q. Do you recall what time your husband came home on the night of the Kennedy assassination?

A. Not specifically. I remember he came home a little earlier because, as he said, he couldn't do any business.

Q. All right. Do you recall whether anyone came over to your house to visit or to talk or for any reason after his arrival?

A. No, I really don't.

Q. If anyone had, would you have recalled it or could you recall it?

A. Not necessarily, no. Seventeen years is a long time.

Q. You would not know at this time one way or the other whether anyone came over to visit or did not come over to visit.

A. No. My mind is not all that great.

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR THE PLAINTIFF

Q. Do you recall whether Mrs. Hunt was at home on the day of the assassination.

A. Yes. She had a new baby.

Q. Did you see her that day?

A. I don't recall. I really don't. I wish I could.

Q. Do you recall seeing Mr. HUNT that day?

A. I don't recall seeing him, or not seeing him. I would not be prepared to say he was not there. I am just not sure.

Q. Do you remember seeing any other neighbors that day?

A. No.

Q. But they probably were there, but you don't recall?

A. That's right.

MR. MILLER

Q. By "there" you don't mean at your house?

A. No, in the neighborhood. I don't remember if anybody came over. I don't remember -- I really don't remember that well. [HUNT v WEBERMAN Thomas Deposition 9.30.80]

The wife of Raymond Thomas was a close friend of Dorothy Hunt. HOWARD HUNT was in contact with Thomas shortly before Watergate and he and his wife had visited Mrs. Thomas in March 1972 - during the absence of Raymond Thomas. The CIA's Office of the Inspector General generated an index card on October 23, 1974, that indexed a Memo For: DDA from Director of Security. Subject. EVERETT HOWARD HUNT. (re HUNT'S alleged involvement in assassination of President Kennedy. Memo asks DDA to approve attached memo to FBI re whereabouts of HUNT during period of November 20, 1963, to November 24, 1963) Attachments: Memo to Director, FBI from Charles Kane dated October 29, 1974. Subject: EVERETT HOWARD HUNT.

The names on this card were

HUNT, President Kennedy, John Unumb, Leon F. Schwartz, Charles Kane, Sam Jaffe, Art Lundahl, Jack Anderson, Scott Breckinridge, Seymour Bolton, STURGIS, FBI, John F. Blake, John Hicks and John Richards. The dates on it were October 10, 1974, November 1963, November 20, 1963, October 18, 1974, November 24, 1963, October 17, 1974, November 23, 1963, September 1963, October 29, 1974, September 20, 1974. [IG FILE # 51 Tab #20]

This information was given to the FBI on October 29, 1974, by Charles W. Kane and John F. Blake. A copy was sent to Seymour Bolton, SAB/DDO. The CIA'S Inspector General's file contained a "Yellow routing slip from Deputy Director of Finance, to Scott Breckinridge, forwarding leave and travel vouchers for E. H. HUNT for October to December 1963, time span of the Kennedy assassination." [9.17.74 IG File #20 Tab #20] Who was interested in the HUNT case? John A. Unumb, 87, who retired from the CIA in 1975 as the agency's deputy assistant for public relations, died of cancer September 28, 2009. Mr. Unumb joined the CIA in 1948 and spent many years as an embassy political officer in Iran, Egypt, Somalia and Uganda. Leon F. Schwartz was an assistant Director of the FBI. In 1972 Charles W. Kane was Special Assistant to the Deputy Director for Support dealing with matters concerning Air America.

HUNT AND MAHEU

June 16, 1966

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Security

SUBJECT: Call from Birch O'Neal

1. Birch O'Neal indicated that Mr. HUNT had asked him to check the Counter Intelligence Staff files to see if they had anything on Bob Maheu. He advised that he had completed his search and there was no information in Counter Intelligence files that we did not already have in Office of Security files. Charles W. Kane, Deputy Director of Security. [<http://www.combat-diaries.co.uk/diary27/diary27chapter12/9.htm>]

After Watergate broke Kane was contacted by the FBI regarding his association with HOWARD HUNT. He said that he gave an Agency employee HUNT's telephone number in December 1971 but had not seen HUNT since 1959 when HUNT was Chief of the Mexico City CIA Station. Charles W. Kane was an Electoral College delegate from Martin County Florida in the year of the hanging chad 2000. According to the Los Angeles Times, the Republican controlled elections board allowed Republican campaign workers, led by ex-CIA agent Charles Kane, to remove absentee ballot applications from the elections office and tamper with them in the privacy of their own homes. [<http://media.washingtonpost.com/wp-srv/politics/documents/woodward.pdf>] We dealt with Seymour Bolton in Nodule 20. John F. Blake was Deputy Director of Administration for the CIA. Art Lundahl retired in 1973 and was replaced as Director of National Photographic Interpretation Center (NPIC) by Mr. John J. Hicks, who served as Director from June of 1973 to February 1978. What a deadly crew CIA assembled to deal with the allegations of a Yippie/hippy from Greenwich Village. But if my allegations proved true the CIA would have been crippled.

THE CIA CHECKS ITS LEAVE AND TRAVEL RECORDS

Memorandum for the Record

SUBJECT: Sam Jaffe Inquiry – Hunt and Sturgis

1. Subsequent to Jaffe's inquiry to Art Lundahl last week relayed to us by John Hicks, we have been in touch with the Office of Security (Charlie Kane) and have checked other records to ascertain Hunt's whereabouts at the time of the Kennedy assassination on November 21, 1963.

2. The Finance Office has checked HUNT'S leave and travel records for the period September 1963 to January 1964, not knowing the purpose of our request. The record shows for the four-week pay period [October 25, 1963, to November 23, 1963] ending November 23, 1963, that HUNT took 11 hours of sick leave and no annual leave. In the following pay period [November 23, 1963, to December 21, 1963] he took 3 hours sick leave and 27 hours annual leave, but this follows the particular period in question. His travel record shows official travel in September, October and December but none in November. All this travel was to New York. John Richards states that we already know, as a result of responses to previous requests, that we have no records on Sturgis that would show similar information; he was not an Agency employee.

In a memo for the Director of the FBI Office of Security Director Thomas W. Kane reported:

Leave and travel records for the period in question were examined with the following results. Leave records reflect that for the four week pay period ending November 23, 1963 Hunt took a total of 11 hours sick leave and no annual leave. In the following four week pay period he took 3 hours of sick leave and 27 hours of annual leave. We are unable to identify the dates on which the above sick and annual leave were taken. In accordance with established Agency procedures, the Time and Attendance Records for the pay period in question were routinely destroyed three years after they were audited. Travel records reflect that Mr. HUNT conducted no official travel during the month of November 1963. [CIA MFR 7.20.74 Sub: (deleted) inquiry - HUNT and STURGIS 41748 - paragraph 4. deleted; CIA 1632-1082]

THE ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION

Based on this data, the Rockefeller Commission concluded HUNT

...used no annual leave and 11 hours of sick leave in the two week pay period ending November 23, 1963. The exact date, or dates, on which the sick leave was taken could not be ascertained. There is some indication, however, that some of these 11 hours of sick leave may have been taken by HOWARD HUNT on November 22, 1963, if he was in the company of his wife and family, rather than at his employment duties, during the afternoon of that day. November 22, 1963, was a Friday, and therefore ordinarily a working day for employees of the CIA. HUNT could not recall whether he was on duty with the CIA on the morning of that day. In examining the charge that HUNT and STURGIS were together in Dallas on the day of the assassination, the investigators were handicapped by the fact that the allegation was first made in 1974, more than ten years after the assassination. Evidence which might have been available at an earlier time was no longer available. Contacts with relatives, friends, neighbors, or fellow employees [who might have known the whereabouts of HUNT and STURGIS on that particular day] could not be recalled. Some of these persons are now dead. Finally, records which might have been the source of relevant information no longer exist. It cannot be determined with certainty where HUNT and STURGIS actually were on the day of the assassination.

The Commission was unable to establish an alibi for HUNT or STURGIS. HUNT also told the Rockefeller Commission that he may have been in Sibley Memorial Hospital on November 22, 1963.

HUNT thinks he was on leave (taking the day off) that day. Also may have been recuperating from hospital for ulcers." He had been there in October 1964 and June 1968. [CIA 1632-1082 - D/OS Charles W. Kane, and signed "FOR THE D/CI Helms"]

Scott Breckinridge, a Staff member of the Office of the Inspector General of the CIA, reported:

I told Breneman that I had conducted an investigation in 1975 to 1976 as to where HUNT was at the time of the assassination. He was assigned to DODS, in a CA project dealing with book publishers. There were records of two or three plane trips to New York in connection with his assignment, in the period preceding the assassination. T & A cards are not saved beyond some two to three years and only consolidated leave records were available, which did not show his whereabouts on specific dates. In any event, we found nothing indicating HUNT having any connection with Dallas at the time, although obviously one could not completely close the theoretical door. HUNT is reported to have said he was in Washington that day, but we do not have this through any independent source of our own. I told Braneman that more recently, subsequent to the reports of the CIA memorandum regarding HUNT'S being in Dallas on that fateful day, an inquiry had been conducted in the Agency. I had not conducted this inquiry, as I had done the previous one, it getting carried out by others. The result that no such memo was found. I recalled so reporting to the HSCA. A search for that correspondence is underway. The HSCA is quite naturally following up on this. The allegations about HUNT (was he COS Mexico, or was he in Dallas, was he one of the vagrants photographed there etc. etc.) must be tracked down by the HSCA.

THE FIRST CONTRADICTION IN HUNT'S ALIBI

HUNT had said he was not at the CIA that day, and that he was on annual leave. The CIA said HUNT was not on annual leave. FBI Director Clarence Kelley ordered his agents to cancel an interview they planned to do with FRANK STURGIS. FBI Director Clarence Kelley attributed this cancellation to Watergate-connected, political sensitivities. A FBI document revealed:

It was pointed out to Supervisor Gow that FRANK STURGIS has been for many years a source of information for columnist Jack Anderson in Washington, D.C. It was explained to Supervisor Gow that contact with STURGIS could not be discreet, and undoubtedly Jack Anderson would learn of the contact, as well as STURGIS' attorney. In addition, STURGIS might use the contact by FBI Agents as a bargaining point with the court that he was cooperating with the FBI. Supervisor Gow called back and advised that this lead should be held in abeyance until after the interview with E. HOWARD HUNT. [NARA 124-10265-10135]

WILLIAM C. STURBITTS: HUNT WAS ON SICK LEAVE

In early April 1975 a Rockefeller Commission investigator interviewed CIA Staff member William C. Sturbitts. His notes read: "HUNT - on sick leave November 22, 1963, (per. Fin. Ofc.) On duty status November 21, 1963." During his Rockefeller Commission testimony, William C. Sturbitts was asked:

Q. Do you know what HUNT was doing for the Agency in 1963?

A. Well, it seems to me, he was here at Headquarters in 1963, and I think he was assigned to the European Division of the DDP.

Q. This is your best recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. --at the moment. It is possible he was with Domestic Operations Division in the field of (still Deleted as of 2010) engaged--

A. I guess you are right, I believe he was there.

Q. Did you personally know HOWARD HUNT?

A. No.

Q. Never met him?

A. I met him. That is all. I can't say I know him.

Q. You would not have known anything about his whereabouts on any particular day, then, is that true?

A. Can we go off the record?

(Off the record discussion)

THE WITNESS: Let's go back on the record.

BY MR. OLSEN

Q. I would like to have it on the record.

A. Do you have a particular day?

Q. No. I have just asked you if your acquaintance with HUNT was such that you would have known his whereabouts on any particular day.

A. No.

Q. Was it very infrequently that you saw him?

A. Oh, I would see him in the halls, this type of thing but -- bump into him perhaps downtown the street.

Q. But you would have no occasion for knowing from one day to the next.

A. No

Q. Have you ever conducted any kind of inquiry on behalf of the agency as to where he was on November 22, 1963?

A. Yes. I have done it twice that I recall, and the most recent one was I guess -- I am trying to think. Well it wasn't too long ago because we did have an inquiry and we obtained the time and attendance records from the Office of Finance which showed that HOWARD HUNT was on sick leave that day.

Q. Was this fairly recently?

A. Yes.

Q. I understand from the files I have seen, Mr. Sturbitts, that the only records that were available from the Office of Finance showed that he had nine hours of sick leave during the two week pay period ending November 23, 1963, but that the records were not available as to how much sick leave or annual leave had been taken on any particular day.

A. Well--

Q. Am I mistaken?

A. As I recall, he was in a duty status one day, and a sick leave status the next day, and back to duty the next day. I would have to check that with my Budget and Fiscal Officer. He is the chap that got that for me.

Q. Can you check that for us?

A. Sure.

Q. And give us the results of that?

A. Yes.

Q. This is much more detailed information than I have been previously aware is available in the files of the agency.

A. All right. I will do that.

Q. In response to whose inquiry was that investigation made?

A. I don't know. I would have to look that up too. I don't recall exactly who asked for it. I don't know whether -- I will just have to check that. I don't know who it was.

Q. And the date? Do you have any idea when you made the inquiry?

A. No. But I can find out from the B and F guy, hopefully.

Q. You said there was a previous inquiry?

A. Yes. The previous inquiry came from Archie Roosevelt, who is now retired, and at that time was Chief of the European Division. That was about a year ago I guess.

Q. About the first time these photographs began to be circulated. About the bums in Dallas.

A. Yes, and actually I think this -- Archie's inquiry came from some magazine or newspaper man in Europe. Archie was Chief of Station in Berlin for a long time and he apparently made a lot of acquaintances over there among the media.

Q. This is something relating to Der Stern Magazine.

A. That is right.

Q. And I did understand you to say that in checking with the Office of Finance that it was positively ascertained that HUNT was on sick leave on November 22nd?

A. Well, I will have to check that. That is the way I understood it, but I did get this through our Budget people who have contact with the Office of Finance.

Q. And that he was on annual leave the day before.

A. No, he was on a duty status the day before, on sick leave, and then on duty status the following day.

Q. Was there any effort to determine what Mr. HUNT'S previous pattern with respect to sick days had been?

A. (Nods in negative)

Q. November 22, 1963, was a Friday. When you say the record reveals he was on duty status the next day --

A. It was a Friday. Then I was mistaken.

Q. Does that mean he was on duty the following Monday or on the next day, Saturday?

A. No. On the following Monday. I didn't realize the 22nd was a Friday.

Q. Will you check that thing for us and give us a memo together with whatever supporting -- copies of supporting documents you can find?

A. Okay.

Q. As promptly as possible on this question.

(Off the record discussion).

Sturbitt's testimony was disturbing to the Rockefeller Commission because it was far more detailed than the information it had previously received. The outcome of this was unclear.

HUNT'S SECOND ALIBI (ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION)

In late 1975 HOWARD HUNT was asked to supply the Rockefeller Commission with an affidavit regarding his whereabouts on November 22, 1963. HUNT filed this affidavit dated March 10, 1975, for the Rockefeller Commission:

I, E. HOWARD HUNT affirm the following to be my recollection of my whereabouts on November 22, 1963.

1. On that date I was an employee of the CIA assigned to the Domestic Operations Division located in a commercial building in Washington, D.C.

2. I was driving with my late wife on H Street near 8th or 9th Street when we first heard of the Kennedy shooting on the car radio. We had been purchasing Chinese groceries in a store named, as best as I can recall it, "Wah Ling." I do not know how long after the first radio reports were made that my wife and I first heard the news. Brinkley was the commentator I remember because of his having theorized a "right wing plot" i.e. Dallas citizens had abused Adlai Stevenson and the climate of Dallas extremism had caused Kennedy's shooting.

3. From the Chinese grocery store we drove out to Wisconsin Avenue to pick up our daughter Kevan, from Sidwell Friends School. On joining us my daughter told us what we already knew: that President Kennedy had been shot. She had learned this because two of Robert Kennedy's children had been taken from Sidwell Friends School presumably by Secret Service Agents.

4. From Kevan's school we drove directly to our home on Baltan Road in Sumner, Maryland (off Massachusetts Avenue extended.) At home was my newly born son David, (DOB September 1, 1963) a maid, Mary Trayner, and my wife's aunt, the late Leona Drexler of Chicago. Our elder son, St. John, a student at nearby Brookmont Elementary School, was probably already home. As I recall, our eldest child, Lisa, arrived soon afterward by bus from Ursuline Academy and joined us at the television set in our basement recreation room where we stayed long hours watching the unfolding events.

5. As to why I was not at my office that entire afternoon, I can only presume that I left early to help my wife shop for a planned Chinese dinner, in preparation of which I normally assisted.

6. I was never in Dallas, Texas, until late 1971, when, at the request of Charles Colson, I flew there to interview General Paul Harkins, former U.S. military commander in Vietnam.

7. I did not meet FRANK STURGIS until the spring of 1972, the introduction being performed by and at the office of BERNARD L. BARKER.

8. I never at anytime met or knew LEE HARVEY OSWALD, JACK RUBY or any other person involved in the Dallas slayings.

9. I was not in Mexico in 1963. In fact, I was not in Mexico between the years 1961 and 1970, and I have not been there since a weekend pleasure trip to Acapulco in July 1970.

10. I have no diaries or other memorabilia prior to 1969, having destroyed as many outdated files and records as possible to save weight in the move to my Florida home in July 1974. I retained only such records, bank statements, etc. as are required by the five year IRS for income tax purposes.

THE SECOND CONTRADICTION

HOWARD HUNT did not mention having had lunch with his wife at home as he did in his first interview with the FBI.

HUNT'S STATEMENT TO ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION

Hunt's Whereabouts on November 22, 1963

Hunt states that he had never been in Dallas until 1971, with a possible exception of a change of planes on his way to Mexico with his family in 1960. He does not recall whether that change of planes took place in Dallas or in Houston. In any event, he and his family never left the airport on that occasion. He has never had any contact, directly or indirectly, with Lee Harvey Oswald, Jack Ruby or anyone else thought to have been associated with the assassination of the President. He was never in New Orleans in 1963 and has never had anything whatever to do with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, which he identifies as a communist organization. During the period from January 1962 to 1965, he traveled once or twice per year to India two or three times per year to Paris, once or twice per year to London, and, during that period, he traveled two or three times to Rome. His only domestic travel in 1963 was between Washington and New York. All travel, whether domestic or international, was in his own name.

HUNT'S WITNESSES: KEVAN HUNT - LOYAL TO HIS FATHER

Kevan Hunt, who was 13-years-old in 1963, stated:

On November 22, 1963, I was a fifth grade student at the Sidwell Friends School in Washington, D.C. My father was not usually at breakfast with his children, so I do not recall seeing him in the morning before I went to school. To my knowledge, however, he was indeed home. He had not been traveling in the previous months. I remember that day more clearly than most children my age at the time, because two of Robert Kennedy's sons attended Sidwell Friends School. Robert F. Kennedy, Jr. was in my class, and Joseph was a year ahead of me. It was rumored that afternoon that both Bobby and Joe had to be taken out of school. Later an announcement was made that the President had been shot in Dallas. At 3:30 p.m. both my mother and my father picked me up at school and took me home. I believe that they had been shopping earlier because grocery bags were in the car. I told them about the announcement that had been made at school, and my parents said they had just heard about it over the car radio. My father's reaction was shock and disbelief. My father was at home that weekend as well, and the family watched all of the television coverage related to the Presidential plane's arrival in Washington, and funeral proceedings. To my knowledge, my father had not left on any trips the months preceding the President's assassination, he was at home the day of the assassination, and he did not leave home that weekend. Kevan Hunt, March 12, 1975.

MARY TRAYNER: AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT STORY

HUNT'S maid, Mary Trayner (born in England on November 11, 1918 - never married) sent HUNT this letter on February 6, 1975:

4806 DeRussey Parkway

Chevy Chase, Maryland 20015

Dear Mr. HUNT:

I'm so glad that you thought of writing to me. I remember the day President Kennedy was shot very well, and I certainly remember you were there. If you recall, Mrs. HUNT'S Aunt Leonie (I am sorry I can't remember her last name) from Chicago was staying with you for a few days and on the Friday Mrs. HUNT, her Aunt, and three children were going downtown to a movie matinee when Veronica Moppet called from the Spanish

Embassy to tell Mrs. HUNT that the President had been shot. I remember we all stood around and stared at each other, than you put the television on, and the first thing we heard was the newsman saying that it was now 45 minutes since the shot had been fired, and that they still did not know how badly he had been injured.

I know that Mrs. Hunt's aunt is now dead, but it is possible that when she went back to Chicago she may have mentioned that you were there when the news came through to her daughter, Mrs. Hunt's cousin, Phyllis, although she might not remember it. She just may be able to corroborate your story too.

I can of course remember lots more details. It was the kind of day that stays in your mind.

Mary Trayner gave this affidavit to the Rockefeller Commission:

2. On November 22, 1963, I was employed as a housekeeper by Mr. and Mrs. E. HOWARD HUNT who then lived on Baltan Road in Sumner, Maryland with their four children.

3. On that date Mrs. HUNT'S now deceased Aunt Leonie (whose last name I cannot recall) was visiting the HUNT'S house as a guest for a few days. She lived in Chicago. It may have been because of the Aunt's visit or a "Teachers Day" holiday that the children were all home from school in the early afternoon of that Friday.

4. Mr. HUNT was home as well. He was writing a book and spent a good deal of his time in the house. Mrs. HUNT was home too, and planned, with her aunt, to treat the three older children to a movie matinee.

5. Mrs. HUNT worked part-time at the Spanish Embassy where one of her close associates was Veronica Moppet, who has since married and departed the Embassy.

6. At about 2:15 p.m., as the two women and three children were preparing to go downtown to the matinee, Moppet telephoned Mrs. HUNT to report that President Kennedy had been shot. I remember that all of us, including Mr. and Mrs. HUNT, stood and stared at each other. I ran next door to the neighbors and asked what had happened. A neighbor suggested I turn on the radio. When I went back in the HUNT'S house, Mr. HUNT was turning on the TV set.

7. The first thing we heard on the TV was a newsman saying it was now 15 minutes since the shot had been fired and they still did not know how badly the President had been injured.

8. Mr. and Mrs. HUNT, Aunt Leonie, the three older Hunt children and I spent the rest of the day and that evening in the house watching T.V. reports.

Rockefeller Commission handwritten notes revealed

Mary Trayner 652-2939 Matinee? Went next door over radio HUNT around all day, I think. Children home. May have been excused for matinee since aunt visiting. 45 minutes after assassination. Watched in evening too with HUNT.

During a telephone call with HUNT on March 7, 1975, Robert Olsen, an investigator for the Rockefeller Commission, was told by HUNT: "Mary Trayner seems to be in error if she means that Mrs. HUNT learned of assassination for first time from Veronica Moppett. He has no recollection of Moppett call, but it certainly could have happened." This was extracted from Olsen's handwritten notes. In his MFF on this telephone conversation he wrote,

MEMORANDUM FOR: FILE

FROM: Robert B. Olsen

SUBJECT: Telephone Interview with E. Howard Hunt on March 7, 1975

I called Mr. Hunt at his residence in Miami, Florida, after first clearing the matter with his attorney, Mr. Snyder, of Baltimore.

I asked Mr. Hunt about the apparent inconsistency between his description to us of the circumstances under which he heard about the assassination of President Kennedy on November 22, 1963, and the letter from a former family maid, Mary Traynor. In particular, I called his attention to the fact that Mrs. Traynor, in her letter, advises that Mr. and Mrs. Hunt were at home when word of the assassination came in a telephone call from Veronica Moppett. This is inconsistent with Mr. Hunt's statement that he and Mrs. Hunt heard about the assassination on the car radio while they were in downtown Washington, D. C.

Mr. Hunt stated that Mary Traynor seems to be in error. He says that it is entirely possible that there was such a call from Veronica Moppett, although he does not remember it. He says that a lot of people were calling each other with the news about the shooting of the President. He says it is also possible that this was the manner in which Mary Traynor heard about the shooting and that she is simply in error in her recollection that the Hunts were then at home.

Hunt stated that he thinks that the Sidwell Friends School dismissed classes for the day at 3:15 pm or 3:30 pm. He says it is possible that the school was dismissed earlier on the day of the assassination but he does not know for sure. He acknowledges that he and Mrs. Hunt would not have known about an earlier dismissal of classes in time to pick up Kevan unless Mrs. Hunt had called the school while they were enroute from downtown Washington, D. C.

He does not recall making such a call himself, and he does not recall his wife making one. If classes let out at the normal time, he and Mrs. Hunt would have arrived at home, with their daughter Kevan, at about 3:30 or 3:45 pm. He states that, as he recalls it, there was some delay between the time of the death of the President and the time it was made public on radio and television. He does not recall whether the death of the President had been announced by the time he and Mrs. Hunt arrived at home and he turned on the television set. (The President was pronounced dead at 2:00 pm, Eastern Standard Time. The exact time when the death was announced on radio or television has not been checked out.)

He recalls that when he was watching T.V. with his family after arriving at home, either Huntley or Brinkley made some statement to the effect that the assassination was an outgrowth of the hatred of far Right groups which was much in evidence in Dallas, as had been shown by a recent incident involving someone spitting into the face of Adlai Stevenson. The implication made by Huntley or Brinkley was that the assassination had been accomplished by someone from the far Right Wing. This was before anything was known about the actual assassin. Hunt remembers commenting to his family that it was just like Huntley or Brinkley to jump to the conclusion that the shooting had been by a Right Winger before any evidence was available concerning the assassin.

Mr. Hunt will give us a detailed affidavit covering his non-involvement in the various assassinations. He states that he hopes to be able to avoid another trip back to Washington because he wants to spend as much time as possible with his eleven-year old daughter, who is very anxious about her father's impending imprisonment. Mr. Hunt states that he hopes to be assigned to a minimum security federal prison in Florida when he reports on March 25.

Senior Counsels

No effort was made by Olsen to contact Virginia Moppett. Research indicated Mary Trayner died on September 17, 1980, of generalized carcinomatosis, cachexia and carcinoma of the pancreas. [D.C. Cert. of Death 80-006220] During the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial HUNT was asked why he did not depose witnesses to his whereabouts on November 22, 1963, during HUNT v. WEBERMAN. He stated:

The one who was alive and might have been deposed during another deposition exercise in Washington was Mary Trayner. She was alive at the time I filed the lawsuit. She was alive at the time Messrs. Helms and ANGLETON were deposed by WEBERMAN in Washington. She was not deposed. She was noticed, but I guess it got late in the day and they decided not to. Subsequently she died.

HOWARD ST. JOHN HUNT DID NOT SEE HUNT

The Rockefeller Commission questioned Howard St John Hunt:

1. When, where and how you first learned of the shooting in Dallas.
  - I was only nine years old at the time and to the best of my recollection I was in school, in class, and I believe the announcement was made over the school P.A. system.
2. What did you do during the remainder of the day after learning of the shooting?
  - I went about my usual school routine and went home.

3. Who was with you when you learned of the assassination and later that day?

- To the best of my memory I can't recall anyone in particular that was with me.

4. The whereabouts of your father as best you can recollect from your own observation on November 22, 1963.

- To the best of my recollection I do not recall seeing my father on that day. I might also add that I do not recall him not being there, at our house.

5. The whereabouts of your mother as best as you can recollect from your own observation on that day.

- To the best of my recollection on that day I do not recall seeing my mother. As with the above answer I do not recall her absence.

As I was at a very young age, [9] my recollections of November 22, 1963, are not very vivid in my mind. May 6, 1975.

The Rockefeller Commission: "A son, who was nine-years-old at the time [Howard St. John], could not recall whether his parents were present or absent that day." Notes of a telephone call with St. John revealed his recollection of that day was hazy: "School got out at usual time. Either got picked up by parents or rode bus. Doesn't remember his father or mother not being there."

LISA HUNT

Lisa Hunt a was 14-year-old at the time. Her affidavit stated: "On that date I was living with my parents in our house in Sumner, Maryland. After returning from school that afternoon and throughout the weekend that followed, I was with my father and my mother at our house spending much of the time watching television. May 16, 1975." A document entitled "Interview with HOWARD HUNT and his daughter Lisa Hunt on March 4, 1975, regarding HUNT'S association with CIA and his whereabouts on November 22, 1963" has been released. ^

HUNT'S THIRD ALIBI (HUNT v. WEBERMAN)

In June 1977 HUNT testified under oath about his whereabouts on November 22, 1963:

Q. Could you specifically give me, to the best of your recollection, your location at the time you heard that President Kennedy was killed?

A. All I can give you is that when I first heard the news, which came over the car radio, I was on 'H' Street about 9th N.W., Washington. I was driving home from a Chinese grocery store.

Q. Do you remember the name of the Chinese grocery store?

A. Wah Ling.

Q. This is near your home?

A. No, it was quite a distance. It was in downtown Washington, and I lived in suburban Maryland at the time.

Q. So in fact on that day you were away from the house for how long a period?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Could it have been six to eight hours, or more, or less? Can you pinpoint it?

A. I would put it about two hours.

Q. Do you recall your telephone number at that time?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall any friends who may have called you by telephone that day?

A. No.

Q. Can you recall any other activities, or contacts, unusual enough to remember, besides the grocery store and the guests at your house?

A. No.

Q. Are there any independent witnesses who would know of your whereabouts since 1963, or connected with the Intelligence Division, to your knowledge, house guests?

A. Not to the best of my knowledge or recollection, no.

Q. At the time of the Rockefeller Commission Report, the report states, and I quote "A son who was nine years old at the time could not recall whether his parents were present or absent that day." Can you explain the problem of the child's failure to remember seeing you for any reason?

A. No.

Q. Are you totally certain of your whereabouts on the day of the assassination?

A. Totally certain.

Q. Were you in good health that day?

A. As far as I know I was.

Q. Did you take any sick leave during that period?

A. I may have. I don't know.

Q. Would sick leave be taken on that particular day?

A. It's entirely possible. I suffer from ulcers.

Q. I am asking whether you took 11 hours of sick leave during that period?

A. I don't recall. If they have that on record they would certainly have a day-by-day rundown of it then.

Q. It does not give a specific day that you took the sick leave. That is why I am asking you if you recall.

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Perhaps you visited the CIA during the day, as you would during an ordinary business day?

A. I have no idea. Certainly, afterward I did.

Q. But you could have stopped by the office?

A. It's possible I was there in the morning, yes.

HUNT was asked about witnesses to his whereabouts. He replied: "I was with a large number of people. Later on I went home and was with my wife and children, my aunt, and I was with the maid, and neighbors." The deposition continued:

Q. What are the names of the children that saw you on November 22, 1963?

A. My son Howard, my daughter Lisa, and my daughter Kevan.

Q. Are there any problems in the minds of any of your children, in other words, are they clear and accurate in their memories, do they have any problems with remembering things?

A. One daughter was hospitalized in 1966 [Lisa Hunt had received in-patient treatment for a psychiatric disorder in 1966 which HUNT claimed was caused by brain damage after an automobile accident] but as of that time there have been no problems.

Q. All of the children saw you that day?

A. Yes.

Q. The Rockefeller Commission Report states, "A son who was nine-years-old at the time could not recall whether his parents were present or absent that day." Can you explain the problem of the child's failure to remember seeing you for any reason?

A. No.

Q. Did the other two children in fact verify with certainty your whereabouts on that day?

A. I know one did later, my daughter, because she went to the Rockefeller Commission with me and was interrogated several times. The other daughter was not in the Washington vicinity. I don't know when or at what time she was contacted.

Q. But she was there on November 22, 1963?

A. Yes, but as I say I don't know what her contact with the Rockefeller Commission was.

Q. Would her testimony indicate with certainty what the other daughter had given by way of testimony?

A. I would assume so.

Q. But you don't know? Did you ever ask her?

A. Oh, yes. She remembers me picking her up at school. She was with several of Bobby Kennedy's kids. I came by earlier than usual to pick her up after school.

Q. Do you remember the time?

A. No.

Q. Other than your children and your wife, would anybody else be able to verify your whereabouts on that day?

A. Yes. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Thomas of Pompano Beach, Florida. They are former neighbors, but they moved away, and I've lost track of them.

Q. Anybody else you can recall that might be able to verify your whereabouts on that day?

A. My wife's aunt was staying with us at the time, the late Mrs. Leona Drexler. She had spoken with her daughter that day about the events. So the daughter in Chicago would be able to give you a third party. [The daughter of Leona Drexler was not deposed since her testimony would have been hearsay.]

HUNT'S testimony was self-contradictory. He said he was away from home for two hours that entire day, then said he may have been in the office that morning.

HUNT'S FOURTH ALIBI

This data base compiler snookered HOWARD HUNT into changing his alibi. In the spring of 1978 HEMMING telephoned me in Washington, D.C., to offer his services in helping compose the deposition questions in HUNT v. WEBERMAN. That afternoon, this researcher had discovered that a Wah Ling's grocery store existed in Washington, D.C., during a search of the Washington, D.C., 1963 Coles Crisscross Directory. I told HEMMING: "You ain't gonna believe this my man, but I located Mr. Wah Ling! And he doesn't remember HUNT coming into his store that day." HEMMING said, "I believe it A. J. 'cause you do your homework." HEMMING recorded this telephone call and gave the tape to HUNT who changed his alibi during his June 1978 deposition:

Q. Did you telephone Wah Ling's grocery store on the morning of November 22, 1963?

A. No.

Q. Where is Wah Ling's located in Washington, D.C.?

A. I don't think that the grocery store existed or ever existed. In fact, in the testimony that I gave to the Church Committee, if you recall I said, to the best of my recollection, the name of the grocery store was Wah Ling (phonetic). Having revisited the site, in fact, by chance having dinner in Chinatown fairly recently, I determined the name of the grocery store was Tuck Cheong, T-u-c-k C-h-e-o-n-g.

Q. So you are now saying that your alibi for the day of the assassination, Wah Ling's grocery, is now changed to a different grocery store?

A. Well, I am saying now that attempting to recollect a couple of years ago, the name of the Chinese grocery store, one of several on 8th Street, that my wife visited on that afternoon, certainly is subject to re-examination and refreshment which I have done.

Q. Now that you have refreshed your memory, where is this Tuck Cheong?

A. It is on H Street between 6th and 7th Northwest, in Washington.

Q. What did you purchase that day?

A. I don't know. My wife made the purchases. She went into the grocery store. I stayed in the car with the children.

Q. If I told you there was a Wah Ling's grocery in Washington, D.C., would that surprise you?

A. I would say simply that it was one, of the probably several, that my wife visited that day.

Q. Do you remember the testimony you gave to the FBI as to when you picked up your children that day?

A. No I have never seen the FBI memorandum.

WEBERMAN: Here it is.

Rubin: If you have it there may we see it?

Friedman: Yes, sir. We are going to show it to you. (Hands a copy of instrument to counsel.)

Rubin: All right, go ahead and read it.

Friedman: "On October 17, 1974, E. HOWARD HUNT advised [the FBI] that he recalls hearing about the assassination over his car radio immediately after leaving a Chinese grocery store in the area of 9th and H Street N.W. Washington, D.C., on November 22, 1963. He was with his wife Dorothy, who is now deceased. Before returning home, they picked-up their daughter, Kevan, at Sidwell Friends School, Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. He could recall no contact on that date with anyone other than possibly a former neighbor. He advised that his personal records pertaining to November 22, 1963, were destroyed several years ago."

Mr. Rubin: All right. Now how has Mr. HUNT testified any differently than from what you have just said?

Q. (By Mr. Friedman.) Within the context of this particular report, which I will present to you while we make copies of it, it indicates that the grocery store came before picking up the children.

A. Then I would say that I stayed in the car with the dog, rather than with the children.

Q. This would be different from what you testified earlier.

A. Well, we are talking about recollection of a good many years ago. Yes.

Q. So this refreshes your recollection?

A. Yes, as to what I testified to earlier. This is not testified, and it is not a sworn statement in any case.

Thinking Mee Wah Ling was to appear as a witness, HUNT changed his alibi to Tuck Cheong. There was no Tuck Cheong in the 1963 crisscross directory or phone book. Tuck Cheong could never be produced in a court of law, because he did not exist. HUNT stated that he had waited in the car to cover himself in the event Mee Wah Ling was produced at the trial. This would be HUNT'S explanation as to why Mee Wah Ling did not remember him coming into his store that day. Seeking a reason for having waited in the car, instead of accompanying his wife into the store, he had to fabricate someone, or something, in the car that needed supervision. At first it was his children, then his dog. During the 1985 HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial, HUNT stated: "I was at the time of the shooting, I was in Washington, D.C., on H Street between 8th and 9th seated in our car with my two and a half month old son David, while my wife was making purchases at Chinese grocery stores on both sides of the street." When confronted with his change in alibi by Lane he stated:

A. Well, my wife made purchases at several grocery stores. There was another one nearby that she may have gone by, Tuck Cheong, I don't know and subsequently I added that statement. Tuck Cheong.

Q. My question is: Did you in an affidavit state under oath that you had been purchasing groceries? "We had been purchasing groceries in a Chinese grocery store." That you recall at that time to be called Wah Ling?

A. Yes, I so stated.

Q. Was that a mistake, or now you are saying you were in more than one grocery store?

A. I am saying my wife was in more than one grocery store. Chinese names are not terribly easy for me to remember. It seems the one we were parked in front of was Wah Ling.

Q. Then in 1978, when you appeared before the HSCA did you not, in fact, say the Wah Ling reference was wrong?

A. I did.

Q. Now are you saying it's right or wrong?

A. I am saying it could have been either way. Tuck Cheong or Wah Ling.

Q. Now, are you saying that [your HSCA testimony] was wrong, in fact, it was both of them, is that correct?

A. It could easily have been.

HUNT was cross examined by his attorney, William Snyder:

Q. Mr. Lane asked you about the name of the Chinese grocery store and said you had testified on a prior occasion that the name was Wah Ling, then you testified it was Tuck Cheong. Now you think it is both. Were you in any way misleading anyone when you gave those prior statements?

A. No, I don't regard it as significant. Anybody who has ever been to Chinatown in Washington, D.C., would know that you have Chinese grocery stores. There are grocery stores on both sides of the street. They line the place. That is the nature of Chinatown. There was no intent to deceive.

During his deposition in June 1978, HUNT offered to settle the lawsuit for $1 and a letter of apology. At a latter deposition Ellis Rubin was asked about this offer: "Who said that?" "I believe you did." "I did?" "Yes." "Where was this?" "During the last depositions here in Miami" "I deny that most emphatically." "Off the record, you did it off the record." "Off the record, or on the record, I never said such a thing, because I am not authorized by HOWARD HUNT to say such a thing."

HEMMING denied having had contact with HUNT in 1978. In 1994 HEMMING stated:

STURGIS lived on 125th Street. I stopped by his house. We went to the Jeb Bush campaign. Two of my guys were working with him at the time, 1977. I had no other dealings with STURGIS in 1978.

When HUNT was questioned by the HSCA on November 3, 1978, he read from the statement he had given to the Rockefeller Commission and elaborated on his testimony:

From here, I spelled out exactly why I could not be a suspect. In March 1974—four years ago—I discussed a variety of accusations with the Rockefeller Commission. Although my testimony was not desired, I provided the commission with the following sworn affidavit: "2. I was driving with my late wife on H Street near 8th or 9th Street when we first heard of the Kennedy shooting on our car radio. We had been purchasing Chinese groceries at a store named, as well as I can recall it, Wah Ling..." Conspiracy theorists would later point out that there was no Wah Ling store near where I said it was at that time, which gave them ammunition to say that my entire testimony was a lie. They fail to mention that I amended this name just minutes later...Then I amended my statement about the Chinese grocery store, which conspiracy buffs fail to remember. To that affidavit, I would add only that the name I accorded the Chinese grocery store was mistaken. Since revisiting the site, I have determined that the name of the store was Tuck Cheong.

From here, I contested the so-called photographic evidence of my complicity. I had calmed down somewhat over the last few minutes, but now I could feel the pulse in my throat again. It made me so mad that I had to spend my precious time on this earth repeating my innocence ad nauseam because of the ridiculous accusations of others.

Also in March 1974, I provided the Rockefeller Commission with seventeen different photographs of myself taken during the period 1961-1964. It is my understanding that these photographs were compared with those of the so-called Dallas tramps by an FBI photo analyst, Lyndal Shaneyfelt, who determined with professional finality that the tramp photos were not of Frank Sturgis or myself. Then in October 1974, assertedly at the request of then FBI director Kelley, I assented to an interview by agents of the FBI's Baltimore office. Their memorandum of the interview was made public last January 2007.

As stated Wag Ling's existed. It was only when HUNT thought I had enlisted Mr. Me Wah Ling as a witness that he amended his statement. HUNT was reinterviewed by the FBI on September 10, 1974 "Report on Hunt Interview" concerning ARTHUR BREMER.

HUNT'S FIFTH ALIBI

In 1981, during a deposition in the first HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT case, HUNT stated:

My wife had...driven downtown with our infant son, who was only about three months old, to pick me up. She wanted to buy ingredients for Chinese dinners, and we proceeded from my office downtown over to 'H' Street where there are several Chinese restaurants and a number of grocery stores. She needed me to sit in the car while she went into the grocery store.

HUNT waited in the car with the baby while she bought the groceries. This explained why she did not buy the groceries before picking up her husband, and supported HUNT'S previous testimony. Why drive around with a three-month-old baby? Why didn't Dorothy Hunt leave the baby with Mary Trayner? HUNT'S claim that he was at his office that morning conformed to the testimony of Walter Kuzmuk.

WALTER KUZMUK

On February 6, 1979, Walter P. Kuzmuk had signed the following sworn statement that was entered into evidence in HUNT v. WEBERMAN:

Having become aware through the press of questions raised concerning the whereabouts of E. HOWARD HUNT on November 22, 1963, the day which President Kennedy was assassinated, I wish to make the following voluntary statement:

On November 22, 1963, I was in Washington, D.C. I lunched that day at Duke Zeibert's restaurant on L Street just off Connecticut Avenue. My luncheon companion was Mr. John Suard.

When we left the restaurant, we walked to Connecticut Avenue, and while waiting at the red light I noticed E. HOWARD HUNT and his wife, Dorothy, driving in their Chevrolet station wagon. It is my recollection that their direction of travel was northward.

I was familiar with the HUNT'S station wagon, having ridden in it from time to time with Mr. HUNT, to and from CIA offices. And as a near neighbor of the HUNTS I knew Mrs. HUNT, having been in their home on several occasions.

Shortly after seeing the HUNTS on Connecticut Avenue I became aware that President Kennedy had been shot in Dallas and most of the government offices were closing for the rest of the day. However I returned to my office before going home.

Walter Kuzmuk
POB 756
Long Key, Florida. 33001
February 6, 1979

Walter Kuzmuk had served in the OSS with HUNT in 1945, and was a 27-year veteran of the CIA who, in 1963, was HUNT'S friend and neighbor. He had visited HUNT'S home on more than several occasions. These men saw each other on a daily basis, and worked in the same office, on the same floor. Walter Kuzmuk: "We lived within four or five houses of one another's homes. My wife was friendly with his wife, and my children were friendly with his children...his children and our children went to school together, and there was always like - they bring them home and things of that nature." [Kuzmuk testimony, 2nd HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial, Kuzmuk deposition in same matter 6.28.84] Walter Kuzmuk did not reveal this information until February 1979, when he decided to mail it to Ellis Rubin. Walter Kuzmuk wrote: "Having become aware through the press of questions raised concerning E. HOWARD HUNT'S whereabouts on November 22, 1963, I wish to make the following voluntary statement."

What took Walter Kuzmuk so long to become aware of the allegations that HUNT was in Dallas? Walter Kuzmuk claimed it was the Dick Gregory press conference that triggered his affidavit. The Dick Gregory press conference took place in 1975, four years before Walter Kuzmuk came forward. Why did he wait until HUNT'S Wah Ling alibi fell apart? The CIA had an interest in clearing HUNT. If HUNT was connected with the Kennedy assassination it would have meant the end of the CIA. The CIA followed the progress of HUNT v. WEBERMAN. When Attorney Mark Lane questioned Richard Helms about the CIA's interest in Clay Shaw, Richard Helms' CIA Counsel handed him his HUNT v. WEBERMAN deposition. Did Walter Kuzmuk come forward at the request of the CIA? Or at HUNT'S request? In the spring of 1980 a Nazi newspaper called The Spotlight ran a story by Victor Marchetti that placed HUNT in Dallas on November 22, 1963. HUNT sued Spotlight. On December 15, 1981, during the first HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial, the testimony of Walter Kuzmuk was repeated when Ellis Rubin read from his December 7, 1981, deposition. Walter Kuzmuk had testified:

I got into the office in the morning [of November 22, 1963] and then lunch time arrived. As usual, several of us got together and went to lunch at Duke Ziebert's, right around the corner from where the office was located, and I was with several of my colleagues. I guess it was around 1:00 p.m., 1:30 p.m...and I saw a car go by and I noticed HOWARD and Betty - not Betty - Dorothy...and I waved at them.

In his first statement he said he was dining with one man - now he was with several. During the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial Kuzmuk said he was with John Sucher and Louis Rucker. Due in part to the testimony of Walter Kuzmuk, Spotlight lost the first HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial and the jury awarded HUNT $100,000 in compensatory damages and $550,000 in punitive damages.

HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT II

A Federal Court of Appeals Judge reversed the Spotlight conviction on a technicality and ordered a new trial begin. Spotlight hired Mark Lane to represent it. Mark Lane punched holes in Kuzmuk's story. When Mark Lane questioned HUNT about how he traveled to the CIA on the morning of November 22, 1963, HUNT stated: "There was no other way I could have gotten into work that morning. I would have had to have driven in with him [Kuzmuk]." Mark Lane cross-examined Walter Kuzmuk who stated:

Although he had previously testified that he and HUNT drove together to the CIA almost every morning, alternating automobiles, he could not testify that he had seen HUNT on any weekday beginning Monday, November 18, 1963, and ending Friday, November 22, 1963, except for the time HUNT drove past the restaurant that Kuzmuk was leaving after lunch...Furthermore, to the best of his recollection, HUNT had not shown up for regularly scheduled meetings on November 20, 1963, and on November 22, 1963.

Walter Kuzmuk repeatedly asserted that he had not driven to work with HUNT on November 22, 1963: "So on that date, I drove, because Mr. HUNT was not with me that day until I met him on the avenue." This part of Walter Kuzmuk's testimony conflicted with HUNT, who stated: "I probably rode in from Maryland with Mr. Kuzmuk that day." Mark Lane also pointed to the fact that HUNT had failed to mention Walter Kuzmuk in his first deposition in HUNT v. WEBERMAN HUNT:

I omitted Mr. Kuzmuk's name, and it was not brought to my attention, until a letter arrived a couple of years later from him reminding me we had been together on that particular day." When the FBI questioned HUNT on October 17, 1974, he said, "He could recall no contact on that date with anyone other than possibly a former neighbor [Raymond Thomas]."

In June 1977, HUNT stated: "I would put [the time I was away from the house on November 22, 1963] at about two hours." Only in later depositions had HUNT left open the possibility of his being at the CIA that morning. The Rockefeller Commission: "HUNT could not recall whether he was on duty with the CIA on the morning of that day." When HUNT was deposed in June 1977, HUNT was again uncertain whether he had gone to the office that morning. He was asked: "But could you have stopped by your office?" He answered: "It is possible I was there in the morning, yes." Mark Lane also pointed out that Walter Kuzmuk could not place HUNT at the Agency that day. Walter Kuzmuk: "I am not sure whether he was in the office that day. I mean it's easy to be that you are on sick leave, or whatever." Walter Kuzmuk could not cite other witnesses' testimony to corroborate his testimony. No impartial agency employee could be questioned. Mark Lane asked Walter Kuzmuk if he saw HUNT later that day. He answered: "Well, I would say sure, why not? Probably on his front lawn or maybe on my front lawn. So in all probability I did." HUNT testified: "I have no reason to believe I saw Mr. Kuzmuk for the balance of that day..."

When HUNT heard the news of the assassination, why didn't he go to his office at the CIA where he could be most useful to his country? Mark Lane asked HUNT if he had learned about the assassination prior to encountering Walter Kuzmuk. HUNT: "Yes, indeed. I had learned about it when we were parked in front of a Chinese grocery store between 8th and 9th Street." Walter Kuzmuk testified that he was not aware of the assassination when he encountered HUNT. Why didn't HUNT pull over and give them the news? HUNT testified he got the news after he reached the Chinese grocery store, not after they left the Domestic Operations Division building. Walter Kuzmuk would have had to have seen the HUNTS as they drove to Sidwell Friends School. If the HUNTS drove from Chinatown to Sidwell Friends School did the HUNTS have to have passed the Domestic Operations Division building?

HUNT'S fifth alibi accommodated the testimony of his secretary at the Domestic Operations Division, Connie Hicks Mazerov. In May 1978, during the period when HUNT was erroneously under the impression that Mee Wah Ling had been located, Connie Mazerov composed the following sworn statement:

The following statement represents the factual events of November 22, 1963.

I was employed by the CIA from April 1961 through August 1964 as a clerk typist. On November 22, 1963, I was working for the Domestic Operations Division whose offices were located at 1717 H Street in Washington, D.C. My superior was E. HOWARD HUNT. On the morning of Friday, November 22, 1963, I was at my desk doing routine work. Mr. HUNT was in his office until lunch time, at which time he left. His secretary, Ms. Margaret Amesbury and I were in the office after lunch, when a co-worker informed us John F. Kennedy had been shot. Ms. Amesbury and I discussed whether we should leave as Mr. HUNT had not yet returned from lunch. We decided that as soon as he heard the news he would realize that most government workers had been dismissed, and we both left our office. (Signed)

Connie Joy Hicks Mazerov.

May 16, 1978.

Connie Mazerov had revealed the address of a former CIA installation, and the name of a CIA employee - Margaret Amesbury. Had she obtained the permission of the CIA to do this? Connie Mazerov was contacted in February 1994:

No, I never at any time talked to anyone from the CIA. They did not ask me to come forward with this. What happened is I am close friends with Elizabeth McIntosh. We have remained in contact with each other for many years. She called me. She was retired. She said, 'Do you remember seeing HOWARD that day?' I talked to her for awhile. That was the only contact. She did not have any contact, nor had I. She knew where I was. I had not heard about the HUNT/tramp allegations prior to this. I followed HOWARD'S role in Watergate. I had no idea the rest of that was going on. I assume HOWARD may have called her and asked her to call. She was in contact with him at that point. I assume he called her, and asked her what her schedule was that day, and if she remembered seeing him at the office. Because, at the point in time, when all of this was going on, HOWARD'S wife was already dead. His children were fairly young.

Elizabeth "Betty" McIntosh was in the OSS during World War II. McIntosh first met HUNT when she was serving "in the OSS in Chicago, behind the lines with HOWARD in 1944." On December 13, 1977, McIntosh attended a luncheon sponsored by David Atlee Philips where she told The New York Times:

That's what hurts, you've lived so long, you thought you were doing it the right way, and people now say you were doing something terrible and dishonorable.' Mrs. McIntosh, who was at Pearl Harbor on the day it was bombed, spoke for many when she said 'There was a real reason for what we were doing in those days. A lot of things we tried didn't work, but it was war, and it was important. Today we seem to be swimming around in a bowl of warm mush.' Mrs. McIntosh recalled the time when she was serving with a psychological warfare unit in China in World War II. Since surrender was anathema to Japanese culture, Mrs. McIntosh and her comrades covertly placed on a dead courier false documents that purported to be a message from the Prime Minister. The documents, written by prisoners of war, said that it was alright to surrender under certain circumstances, and Mrs. McIntosh believes this helped to weaken the Japanese resistance. [NYT 12.13.77]

McIntosh was the female counterpart to HOWARD HUNT. She was the author of a article entitled The Role of Women in Intelligence [published by Association of Former Intelligence Officers] and a book entitled Undercover Girl. Connie Mazerov was more than HUNT'S secretary, she was his operative. When HUNT ran an operation against Senator Barry Goldwater, he had Connie Mazerov pick up the campaign speeches of Senator Barry Goldwater. Connie Mazerov told The Washington Post that she did perform courier work when she worked for the CIA. [Wash. Post 12.21.73] Connie Mazerov: "I worked for Amesbury and HOWARD. In the course of my duties as a clerk/typist I picked-up information, and I didn't know what it was. I picked up envelopes at one location and took them to another location."

On September 15, 1971, "(Deleted) HUNT asked CIA to detail a certain secretary to the White House to work for him. (Deleted) General Robert Cushman (deleted)." [CIA Memo for Rec. 6.19.73 Meeting with (deleted) Chief EEAB/Pers.] Connie Mazerov submitted her statement during the HUNT v. WEBERMAN proceedings, however, she testified for the first time at the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial. Connie Mazerov said she had seen HUNT at work early that morning. Mark Lane wrote: "As to the meetings he was supposed to have attended later that morning [according to one of HUNT'S versions of events] she couldn't recall seeing him there. She never saw anyone else that morning who could have seen him." Connie Mazerov: "I would have never been in a meeting. I was a GS-5." Like Walter Kuzmuk, Connie Mazerov was unable to name other witnesses who saw HUNT at the CIA that day, however, Connie Mazerov unequivocally stated that she had seen HUNT at the CIA that morning. There were two possibilities: Either Connie Mazerov was mistaken or she surfaced at the CIA's or at HUNT'S behest. The possibility exists the CIA activated Connie Mazerov (and Walter Kuzmuk) when it saw that HUNT'S defense was floundering, although no sources in the CIA or CIA documents have confirmed this to date. Mark Lane pointed to the fact that HUNT failed to mention Connie Mazerov as a witness to his whereabouts on November 22, 1963, in his first deposition in HUNT v. WEBERMAN, in order to cast doubt on her testimony. Interviewed telephonically Connie Mazerov stated: "I saw HUNT at the CIA that day. What time? I'm really digging here. As close as I can recall - its been a lot of years since I testified too." Connie Mazerov's testimony was read to her:

I knew I'd seen him in the morning, and that he had left for lunch. It could have been 11:30 a.m., 12:00 p.m. He generally didn't tell us what he was going to do for lunch. Mrs. Amesbury saw him too. At that time I was in my early 20's, and this woman was in her 50's. There's a very good chance this lady is not alive. When I testified in Florida, I believe at that time they could not locate her. I think the only people they had was Betty McIntosh and myself. She also was my superior, a GS-13. To understand how somebody could be there, and no one could see them, you'd have to understand the way the offices were set up. The building that we were in - everybody had two or three rooms in there - and the doors were closed.

So it possible to come in and go into your office and really not see anybody. Each group did their own thing and didn't know what the people next door were doing. There are no traces of him being there that I know of. But you understand it was a lot of years before anyone would have looked for anything like that. I believe Mrs. McIntosh did not see him that day. She was out. She was in the city.

I did not testify at first Spotlight trial. I testified during the second trial. To my knowledge he was in the office all morning. At least that's what I remembered at the time. There is no way I could be mistaken. I think everyone fairly well remembers what they were doing that day. If you picked another day out of a year, 25 or 30 years ago, I probably wouldn't even remember what state I was living in. He was there. I've seen the tramp shots. Nothing I ever saw would lead me to believe it was him.

HEMMING told this researcher:

People tend to remember the events of an hour preceding the assassination and what went on as they heard more and more news, and what happened that evening. But details of who was supposed to be where, or what, before the event, is not likely. Even a week after the event. Mazerov made the statement out of pure loyalty to HUNT. You probably have a two or three day period there where he ain't around. Or somebody could have put things in her mind, saying 'Don't you remember we did this?' Amesbury called her looking for a witness.

Connie Mazerov had seen HUNT before he went to lunch - this testimony was contradicted by HUNT'S first FBI interview during which he said he had lunch with his wife at home. In addition to these numerous contradictions, during HUNT'S testimony in the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial, HUNT said he drove to work on the morning of November 22, 1963, with Walter Cushman. Hunt told the Rockefeller Commission:

On November 22, 1963, he and his wife were driving on H Street at about 9th in Washington, D. C., when he turned the car radio on and learned that the President had been shot. He and Mrs. Hunt had been shopping in a Chinese grocery store in that immediate vicinity, immediately prior to their getting into the car. The Hunts lived at 5215 Balton Road, Sumner, Maryland. On their way home they drove to the Sidwell Friends School on upper Wisconsin Avenue and picked up their younger daughter, Kevan. Kevan told them that Robert and Courtenay Kennedy, children of Attorney General Robert Kennedy, were students in the same school and had been picked up by the Secret Service. The children in the school knew that the President had been shot. Mr. Hunt states that the following persons are witnesses to the fact that he was here in Washington, D. C., at the time the President was shot in Dallas;

1. His son, Howard St. John Hunt, then ten years of age.
2. His daughter, Lisa, then twelve years of age.
3. His daughter, Kevan, then eleven years of age.
4. The family maid, Mary Trayner, now employed by a family living at 4806 DeRussey Parkway. Chevy Chase, Maryland, and whose phone number is 652-2930.

Mr. Hunt believes that he was either taking the day off from work as a part of annual leave on November 22, 1963, or he may have been recuperating from a hospitalization for ulcers. He had been hospitalized at about that period at Sibley Hospital in Washington, D. C. Mr. Hunt States that he held the following oil company charge account and credit cards in 1963 and that such accounts may provide corroboration as to his presence in Washington, D. C., on November 22, 1963: Esso Oil, Gulf Oil, Texaco Oil, Cities Service Oil, Brooks Brothers (New York), Garfinkle's, Woodward and Lothrop, Sears Roebuck & Co. , Hecht Co. He also states that telephone records might be checked with Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.; that the CIA might have travel voucher records showing his travel during that year and that CIA should also have records on the dates on which he took sick leave or annual leave.

Mr. Hunt categorically denies that he has been involved in any way whatsoever with the assassination of President Kennedy, Senator Robert Kennedy, Martin Luther King, or any other person either within or without the United States. He similarly denies any participation or involvement whatever in the attempted assassination of Governor Wallace, the disappearance of Congressman Hale Boggs or the shooting of Senator Stennis.

He states that in connection with the planning for the Cuban invasion in 1961, he did suggest that Fidel Castro should be assassinated either before or contemporaneously with that invasion, but his suggestion was not acted upon or otherwise approved.

Attached are copies of a press statement made by Mr. Hunt in early February 1975 in Florida, in which he denies the allegations made by Dick Gregory and others with respect to his involvement in the assassination of President Kennedy and a letter written to Mr. Hunt by the former family maid, Mary Traynor.

Lisa Hunt confirms her father's account that he was at home with the family in the afternoon and evening of November 22, 1963. She recalls that her father assembled the family in front of the television set. He wanted them all to watch the program because it was an important historical matter. They were all shocked about the assassination of the President.

Feb 6 1975

Dear Mr Hunt

I am so glad you thought of writing to me. I remember the day President Kennedy was shot very well, and I certainly remember you were there.

If you recall, Mrs Hunt's Aunt Leonie, (I am sorry I can't remember her last name) from Chicago was staying with you for a few days, and on the Friday Mrs Hunt, her Aunt, and the three children were going downtown to a movie matinee, when Veronica Moppet called from the Spanish Embassy to tell Mrs Hunt that the President had been shot. I remember we all stood around and stared at each other then you put the television on, and the first thing we heard was the news man saying that it was now 45 minutes since the shot had been fired, and that they still did not know how badly he had been injured.

I know that Mrs Hunt's Aunt is now dead, but it is possible that when she went back to Chicago she may have mentioned that you were there when the news came through to her daughter (Mrs Hunt's cousin Phyllis). Although she might not remember it, she just may be able to corroborate your story too.

I can of course remember but no details. It was ~~of~~ the sort of day that stays in your mind.

I hope you are still getting along well. Did you manage to sell the house on River Rd?

Let me know if there is anything I can do for you.

If you should run across Miss Stella remember me to her.

Please give my regards to the children,

Sincerely,
P.S. My phone is 657-2939
I am always yours in co-operation

WHEN DID HUNT AND STURGIS FIRST MEET? STURGIS' CONFLICTING STATEMENTS

HUNT maintained that he did not know STURGIS in 1963 so he could not have been involved with him in a plot to kill John Kennedy. HUNT claimed he met STURGIS in the Spring of 1972, through BERNARD BARKER. STURGIS, however, told Andrew St. George:

The Bay of Pigs, hey, there was one sweet mess. I met HOWARD HUNT that year [1961], he was the political officer of the exile brigade. BERNARD BARKER was HUNT'S right hand man, his confidential clerk - his body servant. I wish I'd never met the dumb head. You know, BARKER tells everybody to call him 'Macho.' That's supposed to be his nick name.

A man who is macho is supposed to be some kind of virile hard charger. Calling BARKER macho is like call Liberace 'Slugger.' When he is around HUNT, or anybody that's over him, BARKER is like a valet. Servile. You know what I mean? 'Sit here Mr. HUNT so the sun won't bother you.' It's disgusting. 'Yes, sir, Mr. HUNT let me refresh your drink, sir.' And BARKER is the biggest scrooge you ever saw. HUNT gives him $500 saying, 'Round up some men, we have a job to do.' So BARKER comes downtown and he says to me 'Let's have lunch, I need some people for Mr. HUNT.' And you know where we end up having lunch? In the cheapest hamburger joint in Miami. [St. George, Swank, 8.64]

In 1961 STURGIS told a CIA source he was a "member of the anti-Castro group Cuban Revolutionary Front." [CIA DBF 75627 4.24.61; DBF 89191 9.22.61] In 1978 STURGIS was asked:

Q. Did you know HOWARD HUNT in 1963?

A. Let me say this here. I have worked in the intelligence field off and on for years and there is compartmentation with people that you work with directly. I don't recall ever meeting HOWARD HUNT personally. I don't recall meeting HOWARD HUNT. In 1963.

Q. Do you remember speaking to Andrew St. George about the Bay of Pigs?

A. Oh, that was so many years ago, it's possible.

Q. Do you remember telling Andrew St. George that you worked with HOWARD HUNT on the Bay of Pigs invasion?

A. Andrew may get his things a little bit mixed up. Now, understand one thing, before the Bay of Pigs invasion I was working in a different sector because E. HOWARD HUNT was a political officer and I was not associated with the political end of the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Q. Did you say that to Andrew St. George?

A. No, and if Andrew said that he is lying.

Q. And if Marita says it, she is lying, too?

A. If she picked up what Andrew says, then it's not so.

MR. RUBIN: They are lying just like WEBERMAN did in his book. The whole book is a lie and we will prove it in court.

During his deposition in HUNT v. WEBERMAN STURGIS stated:

A. Now again I don't believe I ever met E. HOWARD HUNT, but we all knew, many of us knew, "EDUARDO" was the officer of the Cuban Revolutionary Council.

Q. Did you ever meet EDUARDO?

A. I don't recall. This is the thing. I don't recall.

In 1975 the Rockefeller Commission questioned him about this: "Doesn't recall saying that, or recall meeting him before 1972." Handwritten notes reflected that STURGIS told the Rockefeller Commission: "Met HUNT when: In 1972 personally. Know of him as "EDUARDO" as early as 1960 or 1961. BARKER introduced them in 1972 at BARKER'S office in Miami."

Quotes regarding HUNT: 'Met him in 1961' - Doesn't recall saying that, or recall meeting him, before 1972. Heard of him in connection with Bay of Pigs, as "EDUARDO" knew of him then, but doesn't think they ever met. HUNT is professional who has affected disposals. Denies ever saying this. HUNT was a political officer and didn't have a hand in killings.

STURGIS also told Olsen: "HUNT left Miami one week before Bay of Pigs." STURGIS was questioned by Robert B. Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission:

STURGIS: I don't know if it was in 1972 or the latter part of 1971 that I met HUNT, and I was introduced. And he said, FRANK, this is HOWARD HUNT.

Olsen: Who introduced you?

STURGIS: BARKER did. And I said 'Oh EDUARDO!'

Olsen: Do we understand then, FRANK, that you had heard of "EDUARDO" during the Bay of Pigs planning and so forth, but you had never met him?

STURGIS: Right, sir. To the best of my knowledge I had never met HOWARD HUNT up until the day in Miami when BARKER introduced me to HOWARD in his office.

THEORY: GUADALCANAL

HUNT and STURGIS' relationship dated back to World War II. Events indicated they met in Guadalcanal in 1943, when STURGIS was a Marine, and HUNT a war correspondent. In American Spy HUNT wrote

In March 1943, German U-boats sank twenty-seven merchant ships in the Atlantic. Newspapers published photographs of the doomed liners, plumes of smoke billowing out of frame as their smokestacks disappeared under water. I became obsessed with finding a way to get back into the war and found an opportunity as a war correspondent assigned to the Pacific fleet for Life magazine, actually seeing my share of action and narrowly escaping death a few more times.

In American Spy HUNT also wrote

There are a lot of conspiracy theories, which I'll get into later, involving Sturgis—whom I first met in 1972—and me, so he's a character to remember. Some of the theories abound because my 1949 novel, Bimini Run, involves a character named Hank Sturgis, which has made a lot of buffs speculate that the book is based on Frank. So I would have had to meet Sturgis in the 1940s, long before Sturgis was a person of interest. While he was a U.S. Marine in World War II, he was sent to the South Pacific, far away from where I was at the time.

When STURGIS spoke with Andrew St. George in August 1974 he was unaware of the implications of his remarks regarding his long term relationship with HUNT, however, once the tramp story surfaced STURGIS changed his tune. Now, he said, he could not have been one of the tramps in Dealey Plaza along with HUNT, because he did not know HUNT in 1963, having first been introduced to HUNT by BARKER in 1971. STURGIS claimed to have little respect for BARKER. As this researcher has documented, STURGIS was BARKER'S number one source of information for many years. STURGIS said BARKER, on behalf of HUNT, approached him to do a domestic assassination. This indicated how close the relationship was between the two men and that by denouncing BARKER, STURGIS was trying to hide this relationship.

STURGIS told a Rockefeller Commission investigator that "he started getting involved with Cuban people in Miami in about 1945." In 1949 HUNT wrote Bimini Run, which he prefaced with the disclaimer: "The people in this book are imaginary and are not intended to represent persons living or dead."

1. The hero of Bimini Run, Hank Sturgis, was an ex-Marine who had been trained at Parris Island. FRANK STURGIS was an ex-Marine who had been trained at Parris Island.

2. Hank Sturgis had seen extensive combat in the Far East including "the Canal."

FRANK STURGIS was in Iwo Jima, Okinawa and Guadalcanal.

3. Hank Sturgis had been wounded in action.

FRANK STURGIS had been wounded in action and had a scar on his right wrist from the wound.

4. Hank Sturgis had been hospitalized after the war.

FRANK STURGIS had been hospitalized after the war.

5. Hank Sturgis worked as a bartender.

FRANK STURGIS worked as a bartender and owned a tavern.

6. Hank Sturgis lived in Miami.

FRANK STURGIS lived in Norfolk, but visited Miami frequently.

7. Hank Sturgis was a gambler.

Juanita Terrell told the FBI that her ex-husband, FRANK STURGIS, was involved in gambling activity.

8. Hank Sturgis frequented the Gulfstream Race Track.

FRANK STURGIS worked at the Gulfstream Race Track.

9. Hank Sturgis was an accomplished marksman.

FRANK STURGIS was an accomplished marksman.

10. Hank Sturgis was familiar with the Andros Islands.

FRANK STURGIS was familiar with the Andros Islands.

STURGIS was asked if he had ever worked as a bartender:

A. I did work as a bartender. As a matter of fact, during the Watergate investigation I was questioned about that book. I have never read that book...

Q. Don't you think the character Hank Sturgis seems to follow your own history to a great extent?

A. Right. My wife thinks that too. She says, 'It could be you.' I don't see how it could be. He didn't know me at that particular time when he wrote the book...I don't know when he wrote it.

Robert B. Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission questioned STURGIS about Bimini Run:

Olsen: Was there any particular reason why you wanted to change your name when you were already an adult, grown up?

STURGIS: The reason for that was that I felt there were too many FIORINIS, FRANK FIORINI'S especially. I don't know. My mother wanted me to change the name really because she had a bad situation with my father and she hated the FIORINI family.

Olsen: I take it from what you say on that score, then, FRANK, that you were not then aware at the time your name was legally changed in Norfolk, Virginia, of the fact that E. HOWARD HUNT had written a novel in the late 1940's in which a character appeared by the name of Hank Sturgis. Is that true?

STURGIS: Would you believe that the Special Committee, they got me on that. And it is a coincidence, because I got the book at home. And my wife read that book and I read that book. And it is just like it would be my type of character.

Pipe smoking Henry Reed Sturgis, a college dropout, was actually a synthesis between FRANK STURGIS and HOWARD HUNT. Evidence suggested FRANK FIORINI used the name FRANK STURGIS before he legally changed it in 1952 -- three years after HUNT wrote about Hank Sturgis in Bimini Run.

In 1975 STURGIS told Michael Canfield how he had used the two names to conceal his identity: "You see where I live at? A lot of people in that area before the Watergate thing, they never knew who I was. I go off two, three weeks at a time. They figured I was a salesman. And here I am, involved in every goddamn thing imaginable. And I've never used STURGIS in any of my activities. I've always used FIORINI...So if any publicity came out, it came out in [FIORINI]. I left STURGIS alone." Conversely, when FRANK'S legal name was FIORINI he might have used STURGIS for "every goddamn thing imaginable." HUNT knew him by his nom-de-guerre, FRANK STURGIS, and used the name in his novel.

HUNT EXPLAINS

A. During the war I met a Captain Sturgis, whom I became very fond of. He contracted tuberculosis in the jungles. He came back home in a ship and went up to Saranac Lake Sanitarium. I heard subsequently he died of the T.B. he incurred in the Far East during the war. I was a great admirer of this individual. His name came to mind when I wrote the book.

Q. What was his first name?

A. My guess is it was Lee.

Q. What is his hometown, how can we get in touch with him?

A. I said he died.

Q. Did you in fact characterize HANK STURGIS in the 1949 book as a bartender as well as a soldier-of-fortune and ex-Marine?

A. Gee, I wouldn't remember. I probably wrote three dozen books since then.

HUNT added that the rest of Hank Sturgis' characteristics were his own invention. There was no similarity to FRANK STURGIS besides the name, although he admitted: "I heard of an adventurer [named] FIORINI, but it wasn't until early 1972 that BERNIE BARKER introduced me to an individual now known as FRANK STURGIS." The Rockefeller Commission attempted to resolve the Bimini Run question, however, it did not address itself to the real issue, because Dick Gregory's associate, Ralph Schoenman, confused the information that had been given to him by this researcher. Ralph Schoenman testified that FIORINI took the name STURGIS from a character in Bimini Run, rather than testifying that HUNT had patterned a character in Bimini Run after STURGIS:

One witness asserted that STURGIS is a pseudonym; that his name is FRANK FIORINI; and that he took the name STURGIS from a fictional character [Hank Sturgis] in a novel written by HUNT in 1949 [Bimini Run]...A search of the relevant court records disclosed that a petition was filed on September 23, 1952, in the Norfolk [Virginia] City Circuit Court pursuant to which a FRANK ANGELO FIORINO petitioned to change his name to FRANK ANTHONY STURGIS. The petition recited that his mother had divorced his father about 15 years previously, and had married one Ralph Sturgis, that he had been living with his mother all of his life, that his mother was known as Mary Sturgis, and that his stepfather also desired him to change his name to STURGIS. A court order was entered on September 23, 1952, (the same date as the petition) changing his name to FRANK ANTHONY STURGIS...In the petition and the order relating to the change of name, FIORINI was misspelled as Fiorino. In light of this documentary evidence, no weight can be given to the claim that STURGIS took his present name from a character in a HUNT novel - or that the name change was associated in any way with STURGIS' knowing HUNT before 1971 or 1972.

WHY FIORINO?

Rockefeller Commission notes dealt with the Fiorino question:

Telephone Conversation with STURGIS May 3, 1975, Called him to ask about spelling of the name 'Fiorino' on petition and order covering his name change. He joked about the fact Italians can't spell. Said his birth certificate and military records were all FIORINI, but that his grandfather might have spelled the name Fiorino. Confirmed that his mother's maiden name was Mary Vona, and his father was Angelo Anthony Fiorini. For his new middle name, he switched from his father's first name to his father's middle name - Italian custom to carry father's name, he said. Probably just an error on the court papers - both of which were probably prepared by the same attorney. Note. FRANK'S signature on the petition is ambiguous. It could be read as either 'l' or an 'o.'

HUNT AND STURGIS MOVED IN THE SAME EXILE CIRCLES

HUNT and STURGIS both knew the same people so it was likely that they knew one another. The CIA pointed this out in 1975, in the course of evaluating STURGIS' Agency connections. A CIA document generated by Jerrold Brown pointed out:

(1) HUNT knew Lanz. Lanz knew STURGIS. Therefore HUNT could have known STURGIS through Lanz.

(2) Manuel Artime knew STURGIS.

STURGIS was asked:

Q. Did you know the late Manuel Artime?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you work with him in the MIR?

A. Let me say this here. I had contact with Artime, since Artime came from Cuba. I was part of the original officers that organized the MIR. Manuel Artime was an individual who left Cuba, and came to the United States. I did not know Artime in Cuba, but I was one of the original officers who helped organize the MIR movement in the United States.

Q. Was your friend, Geraldine Shamma, also associated with Dr. Artime.

A. Yes.

HUNT knew Manuel Artime. Therefore HUNT could have known STURGIS through Manuel Artime.

(3) HUNT knew Nino Diaz. Nino Diaz knew STURGIS. Therefore HUNT could have known STURGIS through Diaz.

(4) HUNT knew BARKER. BARKER knew STURGIS. Therefore HUNT could have known STURGIS through BARKER.

(5) HUNT knew BARKER. BARKER knew Alexander Rorke. Alexander Rorke knew STURGIS. Therefore HUNT could have known STURGIS through BARKER/Alexander Rorke.

(6) HUNT knew Manuel Artime. Manuel Artime knew Alexander Rorke. Alexander Rorke knew STURGIS. Therefore HUNT could have known STURGIS through Manuel Artime/Alexander Rorke.

In the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN, HUNT was questioned about Pedro Diaz Lanz.

Q. Did you know Pedro Diaz Lanz?

A. I met him on a couple of occasions. BARKER brought him to my home in Coconut Grove probably in January or February 1961.

Q. Did you know that Pedro Diaz Lanz was in fact a close friend of STURGIS?

A. I'm not sure he was a friend. I know he and FIORINI joined him in Havana.

Q. But you never met FRANK STURGIS through Pedro Diaz Lanz?

A. No.

Q. You had no contact with him?

A. I didn't know him in 1972 under that name.

James W. Franklin, Chief, Official Cover Branch, CCS stated: "I reviewed the file of STURGIS which contained no reference to HUNT, although reference was made to some other associates in the Bay of Pigs period." [CIA MFR 11.2.73] In an interview with his son Howard St. John Hunt, HUNT settled the matter of when he met FRANK STURGIS once and for all:

Well I first met Frank Sturgis a couple of years earlier [in the early 1960's] when Barker drew up in front of my safehouse and ah he had a fellow in the front seat with him and he said "Eduardo I want you to meet FRANK STURGIS." STURGIS went along with everything that we did you know if we said "FRANK we want you to stand guard here while a team does such and such" and he would loyally do it and if we said pull you gun and shoot at the slightest provocation he would have done it. He was a follower; I dare say a loyal follower and he also had a patriotic commitment to what we were doing. If you recall in his background he had served in both the Marine Corps and the Navy or possibly the Army. I first met him the early 1960s. He was certainly involved in the planning and the recommending of different Cubans to be included [in the Bay of Pigs invasion]. He did that because he had personal experience of them.

HUNT changed his story from the one he had repeated under oath on numerous occasions. If he was lying about knowing STURGIS in the early 1960's than he could have been lying about knowing him in the late 1940's. In any event this put HUNT and STURGIS together at the time of the Kennedy assassination and was further evidence that HUNT and STURGIS were in Dealey Plaza disguised as tramps.

PEDRO DIAZ LANZ, STURGIS AND HUNT
HUNT v. WEBERMAN

Pedro Diaz Lanz was asked:

Q. When did you first meet FRANK STURGIS?

A. When? 1957.

Q. Where was that?

A. Santiago De Cuba.

Q. When did you first see Mr. STURGIS with Mr. HUNT, what date?

A. Never.

Q. Did STURGIS indicate in 1957, or a time subsequent, that he had knowledge of Mr. HUNT?

A. No.

Q. When did you first meet Mr. HUNT?

A. Never met him.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. HUNT or Mr. STURGIS in November 1963?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. HUNT as "EDUARDO" of the Cuban Revolutionary Front?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. HUNT, or Mr. STURGIS in November 1963?

A. No, sir.

Q. Either in Miami or in Dallas Texas?

A. I said I never seen them.

Q. You have never seen Mr. HUNT though?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever talked to him on the telephone.

A. (No response).

Q. I again ask the question that was objected to: Did you, Mr. Lanz, become acquainted with Manuel Artime?

MR. DARRACH: Same objection. [Lanz Depo 2.3.78]

In 1977 Pedro Diaz Lanz told Gaeton Fonzi

...he was with BARKER many times. He told BARKER that Artime was a Communist...Lanz described Bender (Droller) as an older man over 45 years of age (1960's) curly hair, European accent. He met Bender at safe house in Coconut Grove, and Bender offered him position as Chief of Air Strike Force in Guatemala (Bay of Pigs Operation). Lanz did not accept it because he would not have been in on the planning. It was all very secret and run by the CIA. Lanz was then offered another position in Cuba, but refused and had heated words with Bender because he stated it was just an effort to destroy the Cuban forces in exile. Bender agreed off the record. Lanz was very hot and someone came over and attempted to calm him down. Believes this was HUNT. Shortly thereafter Artime arrived and he and Bender hugged and kissed each other on the mouth. This drew Lanz attention because he knew it wasn't an American or French or Spanish custom for men to kiss each other.

Gaeton Fonzi returned the next day with a photograph of HUNT. "Pedro Diaz Lanz could not ID HUNT...I asked Lanz to explain how HUNT wrote about him in his book, Give Us This Day. Lanz could not explain." [HSCA Gonzales and Fonzi 9.23.77] Fonzi interviewed Marcos Diaz Lanz:

Marcos Diaz Lanz said that he early recognized that Castro was a Communist and that he was using Communism as a vehicle to take over Cuba. He said he reported this to Colonel Nichols, the Air Force Military Attache at the American Embassy, with whom he had been in regular contact...

Gaeton Fonzi questioned Marcos Diaz Lanz about HUNT:

It was pointed out to Marcos that HOWARD HUNT mentions, in Give Us This Day, the leaflet raid [October 21, 1959] and that HUNT writes of immediately afterwards interviewing Pedro, but not Marcos or STURGIS. Marcos Diaz Lanz responded: 'I wouldn't waste a minute reading his book. I don't know the man. The book to me, I don't think I'm going to learn anything reading the book, because I don't know the man.' He was then asked if he had ever met HUNT. He said he had not. He was then asked if he had ever met "EDUARDO." He said: 'Well, you know, someone will come to you and say they worked for the Company and they will be wearing a bracelet that says 'John' on it and they will tell you another name. You just don't know who you meet.' [HSCA Memo 3.7.78]

In a deposition in HUNT v. WEBERMAN, HUNT said he met Pedro Diaz Lanz at least once. In Give Us This Day, HUNT indicated he was well acquainted with Pedro Diaz Lanz. In November 1964 an unidentified office of the CIA issued this memo:

MEMORANDUM November 4, 1964

SUBJECT: Involved in Arms Smuggling and in a Planned Insurrection of Minutemen in Florida Area.

1. This office is in the process of monitoring a clandestine arms smuggling operation in the Miami area directed against Venezuela. In this connection a recently acquired source whose information to date has proven accurate became involved with, an arms supplier, operating under the alias of Pedro Garcia, who offered to supply arms of any type and any amount within a period of one week.

On November 1, 1964 during one of a series of meetings held between our source and Garcia, the latter indicated that he was member and associated with an ultra-rightist group called Minutemen, who are training in an area in Florida called Yahagva (phonetic; possibly Yalaha, near Leesburg). Pedro Garcia stated that if Lyndon Johnson were re-elected President this group planned to revolt in an armed insurrection against the U.S. Government. Garcia bragged that he provided the arms for the above revolt.

2. The source of this information stated that Pedro Garcia remarks were made casually, and that he is not in a position to assess the veracity of the threat. As of the writing of this memorandum this office has not been able to determine whether the above information constitutes a bit of braggadocio on the part of Pedro Garcia to impress our source or whether there is indeed some element of truth in Pedro Garcia's claim.

3. This office has been able to identify Pedro Garcia as Marcos Jose Diaz Lanz A11 811 130.

4. This office will continue to monitor the arms smuggling operation, and particular emphasis will be placed on uncovering Marcos Jose Diaz Lanz' intentions and activities in connection with the above cited insurrection plans. In this context, it is requested that this office be informed if the above information relative to an insurrection coincides with any information available to our office. If so, details are requested.

5. This office is most desirous of protecting the source of the above information and in insuring that the penetration which he has achieved of local and foreign smuggling circles not be placed in jeopardy. For these reasons, it is requested that the above information be handled on a need-to-know basis and that no action be taken on this information without prior coordination with this office. In this regard, we will be glad to service any requirements which you may wish to levy on our source. We will of course keep you informed of any further developments that may occur in this case. [CIA 201-259716]

MEMORANDUM (Deleted) 1964

SUBJECT: Marcos Diaz Lanz

REFERENCE: Memorandum this office dated (Deleted) 1964 Subject: Planned Insurrection of Minutemen in Florida area.

1. On November 6, 1964 this office received a report from the source of reference memorandum pertaining to a meeting the source had with Marcos Diaz Lanz on November 3, 1964.

2. During the meeting Marcos Diaz Lanz talked freely about the election results which by that time indicated President Johnson had been elected for another term. As the margin of votes for Johnson increased, Marcos Diaz Lanz became more and more excited. Marcos Diaz Lanz criticized Johnson very severely and referred to him as an SOB. He said it was becoming obvious that 'they' would have to go and fight in the streets because 'they' were unable to accept the Johnson Government. Marcos Diaz Lanz did not clarify who the 'they' were, but it was understood by source to mean the Minutemen but he received a definite impression that Marcos Diaz Lanz himself was deeply involved in any action contemplated.

3. Source was not positive but he recalled that Marcos Diaz Lanz made some reference to the fact that the U.S. would be better off if Johnson were dead, but source, who was questioned very closely on this point could not say that Marcos Diaz Lanz had made any direct reference or suggestion that he or the Minutemen intended to do anything beyond going to the streets to fight as indicated in the referenced memorandum.

4. This office will keep you informed of any developments that may occur in this case as they evolve. [CIA 201-259716]

BERNARD BARKER was questioned during HUNT V. WEBERMAN:

Q. When did you first meet HOWARD HUNT?

A. I'm trying to think right now if that came out in any declarations of mine at Watergate. I think it did. I met HOWARD HUNT in Miami somewhere around the year 1960. He was air commander or chief of the CIA.

Q. How did you become his number one assistant?

A. That is a question only he can answer.

Q. Did you work for him in Cuba, too?

A. No.

Q. Did you work for the Cuban Revolutionary Front, and Cuban Revolutionary Council?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever have any correspondence with the New Orleans Cuban Revolutionary Council.

A. No...I will go further and say I have never been in New Orleans.

BARKER admitted he knew STURGIS, but when asked if he had seen HUNT and STURGIS together prior to the time he allegedly introduced the two men to each other circa 1972, he responded:

A. No, never.

Q. When you introduced HUNT to STURGIS do you remember the conversation?

A. When we went on the, I think it was the second trip, before the - STURGIS had known of the existence of HUNT. From his conversations with me, I knew STURGIS was quite excited at meeting the famous "EDUARDO." On the other hand, HUNT said he was going to have to meet STURGIS now because he is going to be involved in something. So I introduced him to HUNT at that time and from official expressions, the excitement of meeting the great "EDUARDO," meeting somebody removed. This is to the best of my knowledge, under oath I can tell you, they first met, therefore it's...

Tony Varona told the HSCA: "I know the name FIORINI, because I know there was a pilot by that name. I never saw him present. Maybe, I am not sure, he was working with Bender. Possibly with BARKER."

HOWARD K. DAVIS, HEMMING & HUNT

In April 1993 Howard K. Davis was asked: "Did you ever see HOWARD HUNT back in the early 1960's?" Howard K. Davis replied: "Well he was around every place, yeah. But I had no great contact with him." He was asked: "Did you ever see HUNT and STURGIS together?" Howard K. Davis stated: "I can't say that I did, no. But then I'd see STURGIS with a whole bunch of different people. I wouldn't know who they were." HEMMING told the HSCA: "He was aware of HUNT, but never worked with him." In 1994 HEMMING stated,

Who walks in the fucking door but STURGIS, and HUNT and Bill what-the-fuck's his name. We were at Freedom Tower to meet with Cisneros and Veciana and a bunch of other people. Frank Watterson was supposed to be there. This was October 1963.

The Rockefeller Commission tackled the question of whether HUNT knew STURGIS before 1972: "HUNT testified that he had never met FRANK STURGIS before they were introduced by BERNARD BARKER in Miami in 1972. STURGIS testified to the same effect. STURGIS further testified that while he had often heard of "EDUARDO," a CIA political officer who had been active in Cuban Revolutionary Council work in Miami before the April 1961 BAY OF PIGS OPERATION, he had never met him and did not know until 1971 or 1972 that "EDUARDO" was E. HOWARD HUNT. STURGIS had also been active in Miami area anti-Castro groups before, during and after HUNT'S 1960 and early 1961 assignment regarding the political aspects of the Bay of Pigs Project."

A Rockefeller Commission investigator wrote: "Marita Lorenz - mistress of Fidel Castro - said recently to a reporter that when she came to the U.S. in 1960 or so, the first people she met was STURGIS and HUNT. STURGIS denies this, says that the person who was with him was Alex Rorke or Jose Joachim Sanjennes Pardomo - not HUNT."

Undoubtedly STURGIS was curious about "EDUARDO'S" identity back in the early 1960's. He admitted having heard about him. All STURGIS had to do was to ask any number of friends to introduce him to "EDUARDO" and he would have met HUNT. Tad Szulc was asked, in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN, if he had developed any information that linked HUNT to STURGIS prior to 1971. Szulc stated: "And, the answer would be: I believe I did on the basis of conversations with writer people with whom I dealt in it, but again, I would, my memory is not perfect on this point." Szulc said that their relationship involved the United States Government and that it occurred at the time of the Bay of Pigs invasion.

ANGLETON AND HUNT

The pattern of deliberate disassociation that appeared in the HUNT/STURGIS relationship also appeared in the HUNT/ANGLETON relationship. ANGLETON claimed that he never met HUNT. Scott Malone stated: "ANGLETON, Newton S. Miler and HUNT were thick as thieves at the CIA." Charles Colson "mentioned the fact that ANGLETON had had contact with HUNT while HUNT was in the White House." [Werbell Ex. 4 see Conein in Record Groups] In an interview with Daniel Schorr, ANGLETON denied knowing HUNT. [Wise, Molehunt p246] During his deposition in HUNT V. WEBERMAN ANGLETON was asked: "During the course of yours and his professional duties on behalf of the Agency, did you ever have an occasion to have a professional relationship with HUNT?" Answer: "No." ANGLETON was asked "And are you friends with him?" He answered: "No." William Hood was questioned about HUNT and ANGLETON by this researcher: "I can't imagine. I would doubt very much if their paths ever crossed." The CIA reported on June 19, 1972: "HUNT'S security file reflects that Subject has, in the past, been of operational interest to Mr. JAMES ANGLETON, Chief, CI Staff/ DDP in connection with an operational matter. One June 19, 1972, Mr. Fred Hubbard, CI Staff, advised that he will provide information as to the nature of Mr.

ANGLETON'S utilization of Subject." In January 1974 ANGLETON was questioned about his relationship with HUNT:

ANGLETON: According to Lyle Miller, Deputy Legislative Counsel, he has a paper of Security's on this fellow HUNT. Paragraph 15 [of] Subject's Security file reflects that Subject has in the past been of operational interest to Mr. JAMES ANGLETON, Chief /Counter-Intelligence Staff, DDP, in connection with an OP matter. On June 19, 1972, Fred Hubbard, Counter-Intelligence/Staff, advised that he will provide information as to the nature of Mr. ANGLETON'S utilization of Subject. That's the end of the quote.

SDO: Yes Sir.

ANGLETON: As I told Mr. - when I talked to Mr. Osborn I didn't have this in hand and he didn't recall it - so it throws - the fact that I talked to Fred Hubbard who denies all of this.

SDO: Please hang on. Mr. ANGLETON could you hang on to this - he doesn't remember it?

ANGLETON: No, he doesn't remember making such a statement. According to him, I remember him well - Second, I've never met HUNT in my life, and I'd appreciate it if Mr. Howard Osborn, who's going up with the Director today, finds out who the author is of all of this and brief him on all of this. That's it.

SDO: Thank you. I will.

THE ILLEGAL SUBSIDY FROM ANGLETON TO HOWARD HUNT

The operation referred to in this document may have dealt with Counter-Intelligence's subsidy of HUNT'S career as an author of spy novels. This came to light as a result of this chain of events: In 1968 the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Richard Helms, ...discussed with Jack Valenti, President of the Motion Picture Association of America, the potential of several books written by David St. John, a former Agency employee. Mr. Helms thought these books gave a favorable impression of the Agency and might be exploitable for the movies.

On or about May 1971, Mr. Martin S. Davis, Chairman of the Gulf and Western subsidiary, Paramount Pictures, met with Mr. Kern, of the New York City Domestic Contacts Office concerning the possibility of Paramount doing a TV series on the CIA similar to that presently on TV concerning the FBI...According to Mr. Davis, the decision had been reached by the Agency that it would be unwise to attempt such a series, but that if and when the Agency felt such a series to be desirable, it would first offer the opportunity to Mr. Davis and Paramount Pictures.

Mr. Helms said that on May 9, 1972, Mr. Valenti introduced him to Mr. Charles Bluhdorn, chairman of the board of Gulf and Western which owns Paramount pictures at a showing of The Godfather at the headquarters of the Motion Picture Association of America. Mr. Helms related that Mr. Bluhdorn did not raise the issue of the books by David St. John nor say anything about a possible TV series on the Agency, although he could have easily done so. Mr. Helms said their conversation related principally to wine from grapes grown in the Napa Valley. Mr. Helms said flatly that he made no commitment to anyone regarding the possibility of a T.V. series on the Agency and, as a matter of fact, opposed presentation of a series on the Agency.

Charles Bluhdorn, a World War II Jewish immigrant from Austria who arrived in America with $15, used the money he made from Brazilian coffee to set up Gulf and Western in 1956. Gulf and Western invested heavily in Latin America. Charles Bluhdorn was associated with Vatican banker Michelle Sidona through the Societa Generale Immobiliare, a multinational real estate firm. He was also associated with Ivan Boesky and reputed mafia attorney Sidney Korshak. The largest single beneficiary of the U.S. invasion and subsequent government policies in the Dominican Republic was Gulf and Western. After the U.S. invasion of the Dominican Republic in April 1965, Gulf and Western supported the appointment of Juan Balaguer as president - as did organized crime figure Joe Zicaralli. Many Cuban exiles were involved in Gulf and Western's Dominican operations. In July 1970 top Gulf and Western executives were asked to appear before the Illinois Racing Board, then investigating ties between a Gulf and Western controlled company and organized crime. Mr. Bluhdorn and his associates denied any and all knowledge of organized crime figures connected with Gulf and Western properties, but evidence was presented that indicated Gulf and Western was in partnership with Philip Levin, who was also a Gulf and Western director, in a hotel in Acapulco that was run by Moe Morton as a private club. Guests included Meyer Lansky and Sidney Korshak.[NACLA 4.75] Charles Bluhdorn died circa 1983. The CIA:

Mr. Davis was upset because Mr. Bluhdorn, on the morning of May 10, 1972, put a number of St. John's books on Martin S. Davis' desk with a note 'maybe I should deal with Mr. Helms myself.' According to Martin S. Davis, Jack Valenti had given the books to Mr. Bluhdorn after supposedly having received them from Mr. Helms. Mr. Davis assumed that Mr. Bluhdorn had received them from Mr. Valenti the previous evening when Mr. Bluhdorn was present at a showing of The Godfather to which Mr. Helms and number of other White House advisors were also invited. Relating this transmission of the St. John books to Gulf & Western's interest in doing a TV series, Mr. Bluhdorn questioned the accuracy of Mr.

Davis' information that the Agency did not want to do a T.V. series. Mr. Bluhdorn is apparently interpreting this coincidence to mean that Mr. Helms is now interested in doing the series.

4. Mr. Isenstead, Chief, Cover and Commercial Staff, related the above to Mr. Cord Meyer, Deputy Director, Plans, on May 10, 1972, and was informed that Mr. Davis and the company should exercise their own judgements concerning David St. John's books, and that there is no pressure from the Agency on the matter.

5. Mr. Davis and Mr. Lukoskie met on May 11, 1972. At the meeting, Davis showed Lukoskie several books by David St. John, one of which was a hardcover book and the other paperback copies selling for 50 cents. The cover described David St. John as a former CIA agent. Mr. Davis referred to the books as a 'bunch of crap' and said they 'can't possible do the Agency any good.' He checked with another Gulf and Western vice president, Mr. Levinson, who said that Valenti had informed Mr. Levinson, a couple of weeks ago, that Mr. Helms, a personal friend of David St. John, said he would like to help St. John get the books made into movies of a TV series. Mr. Davis stated flatly that he has no interest in the books, but that he is unhappy because he felt he had a commitment from the Agency through Mr. Kerns which would give Mr. Davis and Paramount first opportunity to produce a TV series if the Agency is willing. Mr. Davis fears that someone in the Agency is talking to Valenti about the possibility of a TV series and the Agency is renegeing on its commitment to him. Mr. Davis wants to know whether he does or does not have a commitment from CIA by way of Mr. Kerns of the DCS office to be given the first opportunity to produce a TV series of movie concerning the CIA.

THE ILLEGAL SUBSIDY IS UNCOVERED

On May 10, 1972, as a result of the controversy with Paramount, the ID/I/F Supervisor received a call from:

Martin J. Lukowski, Cover and Commercial Staff/CCB. He asked me to identify for him by true name the Agency employee who had in the past extensively used the pen name David St. John. Martin J. Lukowski believed it was either (Deleted) OS# 37435 or the Subject. Lukowski identified the Subject as HOWARD HUNT. Martin J. Lukowski said he needed the information urgently, but he did not explain the need or identity of his requestor. Initial OS indices search revealed no record of David St. John, and numerous files in the name of (Deleted) and HOWARD HUNT. I consulted privately with Edward F. Sayle, Office of Security, Security Research Staff, in the hope that SRS might have some record of pen names used by Agency employees whose works had been published. Sayle recalled from memory that HUNT had written several books under Agency sponsorship, using the pen-name David St. John. The intent of the novels had been to provide a series similar to the James Bond novels, presenting a favorable image of the Agency. The project had, Edward F. Sayle said, been under the guidance of the Counter-Intelligence Staff. It had not, he noted, proved very successful...In as much as Subject had written under the guidance of the Counter-Intelligence Staff, Edward F. Sayle advised against identifying him by name to Martin J. Lukowski. He suggested instead that Martin J. Lukowski be referred to Ray Rocca, Deputy Chief, Counter-Intelligence Staff, or Mr. ANGLETON, Chief, CI Staff. I called Mr. Lukoskie on Red Line 1978. In his absence I advised Ellen, his secretary, that I did not that the authority to identify David St. John by his true name and suggested that Mr. Lukoskie contact Mr. Rocca or Mr. ANGLETON. At no time did I identify Subject as the user of the pen name David St. John. [CIA File Number 235000 MFR]

William Hood commented, "God knows JIM would have never read any of those books, I would think, because they're so bad." On May 23, 1972, Martin J. Lukoskie, CCS/CCB met with Martin S. Davis in Mr. Davis' office in New York City. Davis was informed that the Agency was against doing a television series on the CIA and Davis readily agreed to drop the matter. Harry Real, a Domestic Contacts Division Agent from New York discussed the possibility of producing a series of movies based on the paperback novels of David St. John (one of HOWARD HUNT'S pen names). Martin S. Davis succeeded Charles Bluhdorn as Chairman of the Board of Gulf and Western.

THE CIA INVESTIGATES THE ILLEGAL SUBSIDY
GENERAL PAUL F. GAYNOR

February 1974

FROM: Edward F. Sayle

MEMORANDUM FOR: Mr. KUHN

SUBJECT: General Paul F. Gaynor's Recollections

1. This date, at your instruction, I called General Paul Gaynor to seek his recollections regarding his knowledge of the writings of Mr. HUNT and any official who might be aware of the circumstances of any Agency involvement in that effort.
2. General Gaynor advised that his memory is not all together clear on that matter, and that he was "reaching," but stated that as he reconstructs the matter:
3. He became aware that HUNT, while in WH, was accomplishing a steady flow of spy books, and that security approval was not being requested on the manuscripts before submission to publishers. (He stated that this activity continued later, as he recalls it, in CI Staff, and agreed with the idea that the volume of writings was sufficient to indicate that a great deal of time was involved in HUNT'S writing.) General Gaynor advised that he raised the issue "up front" on several occasions. The reaction he received from raising the issues was that "keep your stinking nose out of this business." He stated that he was led to believe that Mr. Helms desired to improve the image of the intelligence profession, and the Agency, and that HUNT'S books were a part of the program to do so. He stated he was never told outright this was the case, but the responses he received led him to believe this was the case.

4. He suggested that two people might be able to assist in clearing the issue were Ray Rocca and Walter Pforzheimer, both of whom were involved in the "image" materials. He stated that Pforzheimer seemed to be aware of all the details - on an up to date basis - of HUNT'S departure from the Agency to join the public relations firm, to the degree that General Gaynor gained the belief that HUNT was merely moving his desk outside the building, but being paid by the same source as before. He also advised that he kept Mrs. Ethel Mendoza fairly current on what he was learning about HUNT'S activities because she followed the case for him and suggested that her recall about what he had learned, and when and what resulted, might be better than him at this date. (He also mentioned an incident in which Morse Allen while on TDY was told by a COS to ask Headquarters to remove HUNT from the area because of his direct liaison with the President of that country, and other activities which were confounding station operations. Later the COS told Morse to forget about relaying the message, with the implication that HUNT was being directed by higher authority in the Agency and the COS did not (illegible).

4. He also suggested that another person -- definitely no friend of HUNT -- who might have some recall or have picked-up information about the book-writing might be Anita Potocki of CI Staff, formerly of Division D. (I gather that she did not have official knowledge, but because of her dislike for HUNT, she made it somewhat her business to follow his career). Edward Sayle.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Interview with Raymond A. Rocca on the David St. John Novels.

1. On the morning of February 14, 1974, Messrs. Fredrick Evans and Lawrence Howe interviewed Mr. Raymond A. Rocca, Deputy Chief, Counter-Intelligence Operations. The purpose of the interview was to follow up on information contained in Office of Security files which stated the belief that individuals in the Counter Intelligence Operations Office had knowledge of the writing activities of HUNT. This belief was a matter of record in the files of the former Security Research Staff and was attributed to Mr. Paul Gaynor, now retired, and Mr. Edward Sayle.

2. During this interview Mr. Rocca was specifically asked whether or not he had knowledge of the existence of any form of official sponsorship or encouragement to HUNT to write novels to improve the image of this Agency. Additionally, Mr. Rocca was asked whether or not any assistance was requested of the Counter Intelligence Operations Office to be provided to Mr. HUNT, or whether or not that staff had any relationship with Mr. HUNT whatsoever. In response to these questions, Mr. Rocca responded "on the record" that he has no knowledge of any such arrangements, not at any time was he party to any assistance, or requests for assistance to Mr. HUNT. Mr. Rocca stated that the particular section which had been most actively concerned in the past years was responsible for handling a variety of tasks categorized under the area of "setting the record straight." In this sense the image mission of the office was to counter misinformation currently in the media, or otherwise believed to be part of an effort to discredit the Agency. Mr. Rocca feels that any assumption that Mr. HUNT was engaged in any form of Agency sponsored image activity would have probably lead to the conclusion that it was done under the Counter Intelligence Operations. However, Mr. Rocca emphatically stated that this was not the case.

3. Mr. Rocca was thoroughly candid and cooperative during the course of this interview. He was unable to suggest alternate means of attempting to determine if any official agency sponsorship of Mr. HUNT did, in fact, exist. Mr. Rocca did venture the opinion that he felt that in all probability an official acquiescence on the part of senior officials might have been involved, rather than an official sponsorship. It was agreed by all in this discussion that the nature of any informal support given to Mr. HUNT would be far more difficult to define in the absence of any formalized agreements.

Lawrence J. Howe.

WALTER PFORZHEIMER

FROM: Lawrence Howe
TO: Mr. Steven L. Kuhn
SUBJECT: The David St. John Novels

1. On February 4, 1974 Mr. Walter Pforzheimer, Curator, Historical Intelligence Collection, was interviewed by the undersigned concerning his knowledge of a series of novels written by Hunt. This interview was undertaken at your request to determine if Mr. Hunt had acted in any capacity in cooperation with Counter Intelligence Operations. It had previously been alleged in Office of Security records that Paul Gaynor and

Edward Sayle of Security Research Staff, believed that HUNT had written novels at Agency request and that his effort had been known to Mr. JAMES ANGLETON, Chief, Counter-Intelligence Operations.

2. Mr. Pforzheimer provided a verbal summary of his knowledge of Mr. HUNT'S fictional writings under the pen name, David St. John. Mr. Pforzheimer stated that when the first St. John book, On Hazardous Duty, appeared in 1965, he undertook to identify the true name of the author. Mr. Pforzheimer related that he checked with a source in the copyright office, only to find at the time that the true name was not given on the copyright application. The mailing address given for the author was checked against telephone cross reference directory. The address on the copyright application was identified with HUNT. Mr. Pforzheimer stated that after making the identification, he called Mr. Thomas Karamessines and related his discovery. Pforzheimer recalled from the nature of Karamessines' reaction that he had uncovered a sensitive matter of senior officer concern. Pforzheimer then recommended to Mr. Karamessines that 'if the Agency is involved in this thing, why not see to it that HUNT leaves his address of the copyright applications in the future. Mr. Karamessines reportedly accepted the suggestion, and Mr. Pforzheimer recalls that subsequent copyright applications were submitted without the address. Within five minutes of the conversation with Mr. Karamessines, Mr. Pforzheimer recalls being called by Richard Helms, then the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. Pforzheimer recalls the substance of the conversation as being: "For Christ sake Walter, this is the first book to come along and say something good about the Agency. Why not leave the goddamn thing alone?"

3. The undersigned asked Mr. Pforzheimer, who, to his knowledge, would be in a position to confirm or deny whether Mr. HUNT was under any sort of Agency sponsorship in his writing of the David St. John novels. Pforzheimer replied that he was never officially briefed on the matter and that only Mr. Helms or Mr. Karamessines could provide the answer. Pforzheimer was then asked if ANGLETON or Raymond Rocca of Counter Intelligence Operations, would have any knowledge of this activity. Pforzheimer replied that he doubted it seriously.

5. Tracing Mr. HUNT'S career assignments, it is noted that he was assigned to the Office of the Deputy Director of Operations Group, in February 1965. The first David St. John book was published during 1965. From June 1965, through September 1966, Mr. HUNT was assigned to the Office of the Deputy Director for Operations then designated, the DDP/Operations Group in February 1965. The first David St. John book was published during 1965. From June 1965 through September 1966 Hunt was assigned to Madrid, Spain as a Contract Agent. During 1966 three St. John books appeared in print, the highest output for any year.

Mr. HUNT published one book under the St. John pseudonym in 1967 and one each in the years 1968, 1969, 1971 and 1972. Hunt officially retired as an Agency Staff Employee effective April 30, 1970.

6. A check of Office of Security records did not develop any indication that any of the David St. John manuscripts were ever submitted for review in accordance with Agency regulations. There is no documentary evidence currently available to the Office of Security to either confirm or deny possible Agency sponsorship of the books written by Hunt under the pen name David St. John. Lawrence J. Howe

Lawrence Howe also stated: "Subsequent to publishing the last St. John novel, Mr. HUNT published a novel entitled EDUARDO, using his old Agency issued alias, Edward J. Hamilton." [2.6.74]

CIA historian Walter Pforzhiemer, contacted in 1993, commented: "I don't think he needed an Agency subsidy. His books sold." Walter Pforzhiemer was informed that this author had read all of HUNT'S early paperbacks: "You're a tough man. Now what do you want me tell you, whether he was involved in the Kennedy assassination?" I told him, "I already know he was involved." He responded, "I don't think he was within hundreds of miles of Dealey Plaza."

HUNT, ANGLETON AND NOSENKO

Another HUNT/ANGLETON link surfaced on August 9, 1973, when Director /Office of Security, Bruce Solie generated this document:

Director of Security August 9, 1973
Bruce L. Solie
NOSENKO, Yuriy Ivanovich

1. Don Vogel, Soviet Bloc/Counter-Intelligence has advised of the following information which he noted during a review of a diary kept by David Murphy while he was Chief, Soviet Research.
2. In the above diary is an entry for April 9, 1964, that "called HOWARD HUNT to confirm that he has been told about the doubts regarding AEFOXTROT bona fides by Tracy Barnes and had then passed it on to Virgil Harris. I will discuss this matter with Tracy or Rositzke."
3. Vogel was not involved in the Nosenko case and has no other information in regard to the April 9, 1964, entry. In the absence of a specific request Vogel will make no inquiry concerning why Murphy considered it necessary to make sure HUNT was aware of the doubts concerning AEFOXTROT bona fides.

4. It is presumed that no precautions can or should be taken in regard to the information that HUNT was briefed in April 1964 concerning Nosenko. It is a matter for serious concern if HUNT has testified or does testify concerning his knowledge of CIA activities, or if he is permitted to prepare a manuscript (while in prison) based on his CIA experience.

5. The date of April 9, 1964, should be noted since this is after April 4, 1964, when there was a distinct change in Nosenko's handling.

Bruce L. Solie.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD
SUBJECT MEETING WITH FRANCIS U HENRIGUEZ

1. I met with Francis U. Henriguez on September 8 for the purpose of retrieving a concealment device for which Henriguez was accountable.

4. According to Henriguez Mr. Mullen has received information that HUNT is confessing everything he knows (and suspects) concerning the Mullen-CIA relationship as well as embroidering as much as possible in order to minimize his involvement and forthcoming sentence. At this juncture, according to Henriguez, Hunt is attempting to affix the blame of the abortive entry into Hank Greenspan's office in Las Vegas on the Mullen Company, who HUNT alleged acted upon instructions from their client, Howard Hughes. Additionally HUNT is vindictive toward the Mullen Company for refusing to award him the of 12K in severance pay which he demanded. Jack C. Kindschi

Jack C. Kindschi was in Stockholm, Sweden, from 1962 to 1966, where he worked under the cover of Mullen & Company. Ostensibly, Kindischi handled the General Foods account. Actually, he was engaged in debriefing Soviet and Chinese defectors. [Hougan Secret Agenda p216] Jack Kindischi was in Mexico in 1967. Jack Kindischi was CIA Station Chief, in Honolulu, Hawaii, from 1978 until he retired in 1980. During his term as Chief of Station the CIA established a proprietary in Hawaii known as Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald and Dillingham Investments. Among those who invested in Bishop Baldwin was Jack Kindischi, who later became a $68,000 per year company consultant. Jack Anderson reported: "John (Jack) Kindischi not only gave Rewald and the firm a variety of CIA assignments, but also went to work for Bishop, Baldwin, when he retired from the CIA in 1980. According to Rewald's affidavit, Kindischi also invested $185,000 in the company and his mother put in $112,000. As station chief, Kindischi ordered Rewald's son (also a CIA contract agent) to build a laser gun." Kindischi produced brochures for Bishop, Baldwin that called Bishop, Baldwin one of the oldest and largest private investment firms in Hawaii. [Wash. Post 12.27.84; Kwitney, The Crimes of Patriots] Bishop, Baldwin was a classic Ponzi scheme in which money from new investors was used to pay the 20% interest previous investors expected to receive. (Rewald had a criminal record for having effectuated a similar scheme in Wisconsin). Rewald used the rest of the money to maintain the offices of Bishop, Baldwin and for his own expenses. The IRS became aware of Rewald's lavish lifestyle in 1982. The CIA delayed an IRS audit of Bishop, Baldwin for two weeks. In July 1983 a TV. reporter in Honolulu drew attention to certain financial irregularities in Bishop, Baldwin. After Rewald saw this exposé, he slashed his wrists. Bishop, Baldwin collapsed, costing investors more than $22 million. Kindischi, who was given back $175,000 of his investment by Rewald just before the bankruptcy, agreed to return that money and stand on line with the other creditors. Rewald was arrested. [Wall Street Journal 4.18.84] The CIA noted that Herman Greenspun, 201-788988, was the Subject of CIA documents dated 1950 to 1955 regarding Greenspun's purchase and sale of arms and aircraft, and his participation in the Arab-Israeli Conflict 1948 to 1950.

HUNT AND BARRY GOLDWATER

An Office of the Inspector General of the CIA's Index card stated: "Memorandum for the Record by Scott D. Breckinridge, Subject: E. HOWARD HUNT [regarding HUNT'S activities during the fall of 1964] Goldwater, Barry." HUNT reportedly told the Watergate committee staff that immediately after Barry Goldwater was nominated in 1964, he was told to pick-up all publicly released information at Goldwater Headquarters, and take it to the White House to Chester Cooper, an aide to President Lyndon Johnson. Elizabeth McIntosh told the Washington Post that the Goldwater speeches were not delivered to the White House, but instead were delivered to CIA Headquarters in Langley, Virginia: "It was just to keep in touch with what was going on." Mrs. McIntosh said.

If it had anything to do with the White House, I'm sure he (HUNT) would have told us about it. He would have bragged about it...HUNT told the committee staff that the actual pick-up was done by Connie Mazerov [who] said in a telephone interview that she did perform courier work when she worked for the CIA, but that she could not recall picking up any materials from Goldwater Headquarters. She had never taken anything she picked up to the White House Office Building or the Executive Office Building. 'I might have picked it up from someone else, like in a hotel room,' she said. When asked if she recalled a daily pick-up from any person in the same place during the period of the campaign, she said she did not. Referring to HUNT'S reported testimony on her role, Mazerov said, 'I'm sure he wouldn't have said I had done something, if I hadn't...I consider him to be a man of great integrity.'

HUNT lied about his surveillance of Goldwater on behalf of President Johnson. In December 1964 HUNT suffered from ulcers.

HOWARD HUNT CIA FITNESS REPORT

Another card concerned: "HUNT'S travel vouchers during 1964 - Travel to Mexico City." HUNT'S "CIA Fitness Report, March 31, 1963, to March 31, 1964," was ironic:

In the WUHUSTLER project, Subject vindicated his faith in moribund clandestine asset by demonstrating, after about a year and a half under his personal direction, that it is one of the most effective activities of its kind...HUNT promptly and swiftly terminated a large and effective radio broadcasting project which he and his subordinates had labored hard to establish, immediately upon belated discovery that insuperable, practical obstacles precluded realization of the project's theoretical potential [the invasion of Cuba]. [HUNT CIA Fitness Report rel. 4.22.83]

HUNT 1965 PLOT TO KILL CASTRO IN MADRID

In July 1964 HUNT was transferred to the DODS Covert Action Staff. In February he moved to the Office of the DDP/Operations Group. In Undercover, HUNT wrote that in 1964, he "resigned from the CIA and was at once rehired as a contract agent, responsible only to Thomas Karamessines." Thomas Karamessines was responsible to Richard Helms. From June 1965 HUNT to September 1966 HUNT served as Contract Agent in Madrid, Spain, after which he served in the DDP as Chief of European Covert Operations until his retirement on April 30, 1970.

In 1965 HUNT wrote to BARKER and stated he had retired from the CIA. He said he did this because of "the instruction I received from the Agency." [HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT HUNT test. 1.29.85 p108] On July 20, 1965, the CIA generated a Notification of Establishment or Cancellation of (Deleted) Form which was sent to Chief, Operating Component, DDP Ref: Resignee Backstop Debriefing (Deleted)" signed by James W. Franklin. The CIA: "Subject served in Headquarters assignments until July 1965, when he converted to contract status and was sent to Madrid. He returned to Headquarters in September 1966." HUNT reported he was in Madrid from July 1965 to July 1966. On September 21, 1966, a "Request for Cover or Change of Cover" form was sent to the Central Cover Staff through the Office of Security, Subject, E. HOWARD HUNT, that stated: "ENTRY: Inclusion of Subject on the Central Cover Listing is requested as noted below. When notified that cover has been established, Subject will be specifically authorized and instructed to (deleted). CHANGE: Subject is currently included on the Central Cover List as Edward Hamilton. For the reason noted below it is requested that: This employee be (deleted). The following change be made: (rest of document deleted)." The Rockefeller Commission commented: "HUNT alias on Madrid assignment - 'Terence S. Crabanac.'"

On September 22, 1966, HUNT was "designated assistant to Chairman, NATO Intelligence Collection Working Group (USIB), and is required to appraise the effect of possible change in the NATO structure on U.S. collection capabilities." The Ervin Committee: "HUNT was in Madrid on unknown business from 1965 to 1966." [SSC on Illegal Election Practices - Book 9 p3726] The CIA released a index card that read "N HUNT, E. HOWARD CR JR216276 /D July 23, 1965. (Deleted) 9022940 /u 65." The SSCIA questioned HUNT about Madrid: "I was sent to Madrid in either 1964 or 1965. I can't recall which, and I stayed there less than a year. (Deleted as of 2010) My communications were handled independently between myself and Thomas Karamessines, who was then Deputy Director for Plans. This was a project that had been laid on by Dick Helms. (Deleted as of 2010) and I had no Cuban activities of any kind."

On August 14, 1973, Manuel Artime told Martin Dardis, an investigator for the Miami District Attorney's Office: "In reference to the information that Artime had met with HUNT in Spain in 1965 to plot the assassination of Fidel Castro, Artime related that HUNT had, in fact, been in Spain during that period of time, that he, Artime, had been in Spain at that time, and that he, Artime, had participated in and discussed a plot to assassinate Fidel Castro with other individuals in the Cuban underground, but that HOWARD HUNT was not present, nor was he privy to information discussed during these meetings, unless HUNT got the information from a source other than Artime." [Richard E. Gerstein and Martin F. Dardis 8.14.73 Inv. #929] Dardis died in May 2006 at age 83. He was a high school dropout who lied about his age to join the Army at 16, was awarded a Bronze Star, two Purple Hearts and Silver Stars for gallantry after rescuing an American pilot in World War II. He was buried at Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

THE MYSTERY OF THE $30,000 PAYMENT

The Office of the Inspector General of the CIA had a blind memo in its files: "Subject: E. HOWARD HUNT - Finances. Regarding: 'Did HUNT receive $30,000 from Helms?' - St. John Royalties, Activities during Madrid Assignment, Baker Investigation (relations with Artime)." CIA Finance Director Thomas B. Yale could find no record of a $30,000 payment to HUNT until 1965.

We made a specific analysis of HUNT'S advance account for the period he was under non-official cover (July 1965 to September 1966) and have determined that $33,500 was advanced to him for travel and transportation of household goods to and from Madrid with one trip to Paris for he and his family to renew their Spanish visas. All of this advance was fully accounted for. However, in his accounting, one item appeared unusual. It was an expenditure of $1,600 for a sensitive operation which was approved for a write-off by Desmond FitzGerald on June 1, 1966, without further accounting. Also, we confirmed that no Agency advance accounts were established for Mr. HUNT during this period. At the beginning of his non-official cover tour it was necessary to establish a bank account in his name. The EUR Division accordingly requested we open an account at the Chase Manhattan Bank in Mr. HUNT'S name to receive all non-salary payments. Mr. HUNT had an account at Riggs National Bank to receive his salary and allowance payments). The following deposits were made to the account during 1965 and 1966. Account opened: July 13, 1965, $10,000, July 22, 1965, $5,000,

September 15, 1965, $5,000, October 6, 1965, $5,000 and July 19, 1966, $5,000 for a total of $30,000. All of the above have been accounted for by submission of travel and transportation accountings. We feel at this time without specific guidelines that further searching would be somewhat fruitless. One strange aspect of the of the non-official cover assignment in Madrid is that all costs were charged to the support allotment of the EUR Division which is not normal as non-official cover people are usually assigned to a project. It is unusual to have a case officer abroad for one year on an operational assignment without incurring operational expenditures. [CIA Memo for IG 2.27.74 copy to Breckinridge]

HUNT was in Madrid for ten months and incurred $63, 500 in transportation expenses. Thomas Karamessines was the Approving Officer.

MR. DELETED OF THE AUDIT STAFF

February 21, 1974

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Office of Finance Records - E. HOWARD HUNT

1. On the instruction of Mr. Steven L. Kuhn, Chief of Operations, PSI, the undersigned made an appointment for the afternoon of February 20, 1974, to interview Mr. (Deleted) Chief, Certification and Liaison Division, Office of Finance, and Mr. Deleted of Finance on the subject of HOWARD HUNT. At the outset of the interview Mr. Deleted advised the undersigned that instruction had been received from the Director of the Office of Finance, Mr. Thomas Yale that discussion on the subject of Mr. HUNT was to be carried out only with the Office of the Inspector General. Mr. Deleted stated that he had informed Mr. Yale of the requested interview, and had received this instruction with the suggestion that the undersigned contact Mr. Yale directly with any inquiry.

2. Accompanied by Mr. Deleted, the undersigned briefed Mr. Yale on the nature of the request, and identified the "Task Force" effort being undertaken by the Office of Security in concert with the Offices of the Inspector General and Legislative Counsel. Mr. Yale responded that he recognized the legitimacy of the inquiry. Mr. Yale explained that subsequent to initiation of complete audit being undertaken by Mr. Deleted of the Audit Staff, the Deputy Director for Management and Services, Mr. Harold L. Brownman had requested the Office of Finance to discontinue their investigation of Mr. HUNT to avoid duplication. Mr. Yale added parenthetically that it was the nature of Finance Officers not to leave a job half done, and that an "informal" inquiry into Mr. HUNT'S financial records had nevertheless continued at a more subdued pace.

3. A review of the circumstances surrounding HUNT'S conversion to Contract Type A employment and assignment was then undertaken by Messrs. Yale, Finance Director and the undersigned, Lawrence J. Howe. The contract and payroll files of Mr. HUNT were reviewed for possible indications of the nature of the operational activity undertaken in Madrid. A review of travel vouchers indicated that HUNT made accounting indicating departure from Washington, D.C., on August 5, 1965. The costs for this travel were charged to the budget of the Western Hemisphere Division/Deputy Director Plans, Madrid Station, Support account. A subsequent accounting summarized PCS travel expenses and included a payment for apartment rental for August 16, 1965, August 17, 1965, and August 18, 1965, with a payment in the amount of $125 to Mr. Deleted for this purpose.

4. It was determined that an allottee bank account in Mr. HUNT'S name had been established at the Riggs National Bank of Washington. All salary and other non-operational reimbursements were made to Mr. HUNT through a sterile check to this account. An operational account was established for Mr. HUNT with the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York City. A review of all payments made to Mr. HUNT through the Chase Bank account through Mr. HUNT'S operational advance subsidiary account, or 1442 account, had been made. There was no record of any operational accounts or advances being processed through this channel. Mr. Yale stated that this fact defined his concern. He felt that it was inconceivable that Mr. HUNT could have undertaken operational activity without some transfer or accounting for funds. To date, no such records have been developed. No reference to a project, or project digraph, or operational FAN number, has been located. All expenses connected with Mr. HUNT identified to date were charged to the (deleted) Support. A review made of (deleted) records has not indicated any "Developmental and Target of Opportunity (D&TO)" funds or "Other Operational Activity (OOA)" funds expended by or on behalf of HUNT. The two accounts would normally be the source of operational funding not charged against a specific project activity.

5. A review of all the travel vouchers on record for HUNT during this period also failed to identify a project. In addition to the PCD and return vouchers, two other accountings are on record. One accounting covered a trip by the entire HUNT family to Paris "for renewal of visas." A second voucher covered a TDY trip from Madrid to Washington, with a return made to Madrid, made by Mr. HUNT from January 5, 1966, to January 8, 1966. The voucher states in the space provided for the citation of the travel order number "no travel order." The accounting was approved and signed by Thomas Karamessines, then Deputy Director for Plans. No justification statement or purpose for this TDY was given on the accounting.

6. Mr. Yale determined that further review of possible sources for identification of operational funding was in order. Mr. Yale gave instructions that the entire 1442 advance account of Mr. HUNT be reviewed for other possible channels of funding outside of the New York Chase account. After discussion it was agreed that particular attention be taken to any items connected with publishing or book royalties. Mr. Yale noted that the royalty offset waiver provision amended to Mr. HUNT'S contract was, in his experience, somewhat unusual.

7. Mr. Yale was informed by the undersigned of the intention to interview Mr. Edward Ryan, currently Chief, Division D, who was at the time of Mr. HUNT'S Madrid assignment, Deputy Chief, Western Hemisphere Division, Deputy Director for Plans. Mr. Yale suggested that Mr. Davis Powell also be interviewed. The undersigned informed Mr. Yale that this had been done and briefed Mr. Yale on the generally negative results of the interview. Mr. Yale then recommended that Mr. Sam Halpern be interviewed. Mr. Yale noted that Mr. Halpern had been assistant to Desmond FitzGerald when the latter was Chief, Western Hemisphere Division and had accompanied Mr. FitzGerald when he became Deputy Director for Plans. Mr. Yale recalled that subsequent to FitzGerald's passing, that Mr. Halpern remained on the staff and acted as an Executive Office for Mr. Thomas Karamessines. Mr. Yale stated that from his experience, Mr. Karamessines would have delegated all the arranging of 'details' surrounding an assignment such as Mr. HUNT'S to Mr. Halpern. Mr. Yale offered the parenthetical observation of his surprise at what he interpreted to be reticence to date to interview Mr. Halpern.

8. The undersigned assured Mr. Yale that he would be informed of any information identifying any possible project activity developed in subsequent investigation. Mr. Yale stated that any information in this area would greatly facilitate the job of checking computerized financial records. Lawrence J. Howe. [CIA Howe Memo Office of Fin. Rec. E.H.H. 2.21.74]

Sam Halpern said he had no recollection about HUNT'S assignment. In June 1965 he moved from WH Division with Des FitzGerald when he became the DD/P. At about that time Halpern's father died and he was in New York for the funeral and ten days of religious observations following that. He was back in mid-June and in and out from then on as he got ready to attend the National War College which began in August. He did not return to that office until the end of June 1966. Halpern observed that during this period Karamessines was ADDP with Helms moving up to be DDCI. He thought it entirely possible that Helms and Karamessines could have handled this on their own...He also suggested talking to Georgia. [CIA S.D.B. 2.22.74 MFR EHH IG File 10 Tab 32]

The Deputy Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division, Edward Ryan, was interviewed by Lawrence Howe and Fredrick N. Evans.

1. On 22 February 1974, Mr. Frederick N. Evans and the undersigned interviewed Mr. Edward Ryan, Chief, Staff D, Deputy Director for Operations, on the subject of Mr. E. Howard Hunt. During the period of Mr. Hunt's assignment as a Contract Staff A agent to Madrid between July 1965 and September 1966, Mr. Ryan had been the Deputy Chief of the Western European Division, Deputy Director for Plans. The purpose of the interview was to determine if Mr. Ryan had any information bearing on the matter of the operational assignment of Mr. Hunt during this period.

2. Mr. Ryan stated that the assignment of Mr. HUNT both to the European Division and to Madrid was handled without benefit of routine processing procedures through the Western Hemisphere Division. Mr. HUNT'S assignment was coordinated and directed by Mr. Thomas Karamessines, the Assistant Deputy Director for Plans. With regard to operational duties, Mr. Ryan was unaware of any specific project or target for Mr. HUNT. Mr. Ryan made the specific observation that if HUNT produced positive intelligence on the Iberian target during this period the officials responsible for this effort within the Western European Division were totally unaware of it.

3. Mr. Ryan stated that most of his knowledge of Mr. Hunt's activity and the nature of his assignment during this period came more through hearsay than direct official knowledge. For example, he cited the comment made by a mutual acquaintance of his and Mr. Hunt's to the effect that Mr. Hunt stated that while in Madrid he was going to "play golf and write books." Mr. Ryan was asked specifically whether or not he was under the impression that Mr. Hunt's writing activities were either being encouraged or subsidized directly by this Agency in any official effort. Mr. Ryan responded that he was personally not aware of any such arrangement. He added as an expression of personal opinion that Mr. Hunt had no operational function and was simply granted the opportunity to write books for his own personal gain at Government expense during this period.

[Howe 2.22.74 IG File 11 Tab 38]

On the morning of February 15, 1974, Lawrence J. Howe interviewed Davis Powell, currently a Budget Officer on the staff of the Deputy Director for Management and Services. During 1965 Mr. Powell was Chief of Support of the designated Western European Division. In July 1965 a contract was written authorizing salary and benefits to Mr. E. HOWARD HUNT for an assignment (deleted). The purpose of this interview was to determine if Mr. Powell had any information on Mr. HUNT'S activities during this period.

Mr. Powell responded that from his recollection, it was Mr. HUNT'S habit to deal only with the most senior officer available. In this case HUNT dealt directly with the then Chief of the Western European Division, Rolf Kingsley. Mr. Powell states that in his capacity as Chief of Support, any activity undertaken to support Mr. HUNT'S assignment in Madrid was undertaken second and third hand on receipt or instructions from Mr. Kingsley's office. He further stated that he was never briefed on the nature of his mission and could add little in terms of speculation. Mr. Powell recommended that Mr. Edward Ryan, who was then Deputy Chief of the Western European Division, be contacted. Mr. Powell also suggested that Miss Martha Seville be interviewed. Seville was the executive secretary in the Western European Division during the time that Mr. HUNT'S contract was written and Seville subsequently served in Madrid herself. Mr. Powell understands that Seville is currently assigned to the office of the Chief, European Division. [Howe 2.15.74]

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Interview of Mr. Rogers Brooks on the David St. John Novels

1. At 0930 on the morning of 15 February 1974, the undersigned interviewed Mr. Rogers Brooks, Chief, Contract Personnel Division, Office of Personnel. The purpose of this interview was to determine if Mr. Brooks had any information not contained in the Contract Personnel file of Mr. E. Howard Hunt on the latter's activities while a Contract Type A employee.

2. Mr. Brooks summarized his recollections by saying that, although it was not common practice it was not entirely unusual for highly sensitive contracts to be administered without the contracting officer being made aware of the operational objective involved. Mr. Brooks stated that he recalls some of the controversy involved in preparing the contract dealing with the question of offset and housing allowance, but he was unable to recall any of the details. It was Mr. Brooks' suggestion that the Office of Finance be contacted and that their contract personnel records on Mr. Hunt be checked for information.

Lawrence J. Howe

Lawrence J. Howe interviewed Frank A. O'Malley about HUNT. O'Malley had served with the Central Cover Staff in the area dealing with the funding of covert action projects. In this capacity he had become familiar with Mr. HUNT while Mr. HUNT functioned on the Covert Activities Staff primarily in the propaganda field:

Returning to Mr. O'Malley's previous responsibilities in coordinating funding for HUNT'S covert action activities, the issue was raised as to whether or not the funding of HUNT'S projects continued between July 1965 and September 1966, while HUNT was a contract employee stationed in Madrid, Spain. Mr. Frank O'Malley recalled that at the time of Mr. HUNT'S assignment to Madrid the statement disseminated for consumption within the Agency was that Mr. HUNT was retiring. Frank

O'Malley stated that this was not generally believed. Frank O'Malley was quite certain that during this period his office handled no project funding for HUNT. In response to specific question O'Malley stated that on Mr. HUNT'S return to staff employment the projects and funding which stopped in July 1965 were again resumed. Mr. O'Malley was not aware of any project names or funding mechanisms or post assignment accountings in connection with Mr. HUNT'S activities in Madrid. [CIA MFR 2.21.74 - Howe]

Scott Breckinridge questioned Edward Ryan, Chief, Staff D, DD/P.

December 20, 1973

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD:

SUBJECT: E. HOWARD HUNT

1. I phoned Paul Burns, Special Assistant to the DDO, and said we had some leads that could be followed by whoever has the action in the DDO in tracking down HUNT'S activities during the fall of 1964, when he was alleged to have been engaged in surveillance activities of Barry Goldwater.

2. I said that our files showed HUNT was in DO Division (Burns was not familiar with that title, but recognized it as a predecessor of FR Division) and in August 1964 was assigned to the Washington Field Office. I suggested that Stan Gaines, who was Deputy Division Chief of the DO Division, and DCOS (deleted) might be in a position to give a few groups on what HUNT was supposed to be doing then. I suggested that he be queried by cable. Burns said Gaines is staying on under contract for a while, so would continue to be available.

3. I said that Fig Coleman was on the Iberian when HUNT'S assignment to Madrid was brought up in 1964 and when HUNT went to the field in 1965. He could give the background on the assignment, which seems to have been through Thomas Karamessines, at Richard Helms' direction. His recollections would give leads. I told him that Coleman became Chief of Station, Madrid, later, after HUNT left Madrid and could provide information on what HUNT did not do for the Agency during that period. I suggested that both Helms and Karamessines should be queried. I gave as a possible press treatment that HUNT was engaged in domestic operations (something Senator Baker is pursuing) and that his assignment to Madrid after the election could be presented as giving him time to cool off. I thought we had to pursue the matter to be sure we know the facts.

4. I asked Burns to be sure that we are on information distribution of cables to the field on this, given our assigned responsibility for keeping files on Watergate. He said we are on the PLMHPLANK for messages to Helms. He would advise the action officer. I said we are available for any help we can give.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: E. HOWARD HUNT

1. I spoke with Fig Coleman about HUNT'S assignment to Madrid. I had spoken with him back in August when we were inquiring into the reported activities of Mrs. Hunt.
2. Coleman said that he got out of the War College in May 1964 (by which he fixed the time) and took over the Iberian Desk. Bill Ryan was C/EUR (or was it WE Division at the time). In early autumn Ryan said that he had just been informed by Thomas Karamessines that HUNT was to be assigned to (deleted) as a DCOS directed assignment by Richard Helms. A memo was prepared and sent to the Chief of Station (deleted) (now retired). There was nothing further for about a month when (deleted) called Coleman and showed him a RYBAT letter from (deleted) stating that Ambassador Stanley J. Woodward would not have HUNT in the Embassy.
3. Woodward had been the Ambassador to Uruguay when HUNT was Montevideo Chief of Station. He had a low opinion of HUNT, and was counting the days until HUNT left. The President of Uruguay visited President Eisenhower in the States, at which time he requested a personal favor - that HUNT be reassigned to Montevideo. So HUNT took another tour. Woodward was outraged, and had his revenge in 1964 when HUNT was sent as DCOS to (deleted).
4. After a couple of months - early 1965 Ryan called Fig Coleman in and, observing that there was more than one way to skin a cat, told him that HUNT was going to Spain under non-official cover. This didn't require anything special Ryan saying that he didn't know much about it. It came to him from Thomas Karamessines on Richard Helms' order. HUNT was to have the telephone number of the Chief of Station, but he would do nothing for the Station. HUNT was to submit administrative vouchers for reimbursement of his expenses and they were to be paid. Fig Coleman said he never saw HUNT before he went out. He knows that there was no operational reporting, to indicate that HUNT was doing anything. The vouchers were not large, although the documentation was poor. Fig Coleman raised the question with Ryan about his signing off, and Ryan said he could talk to Karamessines, if he wished. He was told by Karamessines that he didn't know much about it either. Richard Helms said "Send him out." He was instructed to go ahead.

5. In early July 1966 (July 4, 1966) Coleman went to Madrid. He had a ten day turnover with (Deleted). HUNT had already gone and he did not see him. (Deleted) said he didn't know what HUNT did, but that Coleman need not worry because he was gone.

6. Several months ago (Deleted) was at a seminar as which Ambassador Woodward was also present. At that time he asked about HUNT. Woodward said it might still be dragged into the press. Tad Szulc had been after Woodward about the HUNT assignment to Spain. Coleman observed that Szulc did have a long article about HUNT in The New York Times and the Madrid assignment was mentioned but without any conclusions as to its significance.

7. Coleman said the RYBAT file of C/EUR may have something on the event, but not much. A letter out and the reply, but not much more. S.D. Breckinridge.

HUNT'S CONTRACT JULY 4, 1965

7. Offset: Emoluments (including benefits in kind) received from or through your cover activities are the property of the U.S. Government. Procedurally, such emoluments will be offset against amounts due you under this agreement and are acknowledged to be payment by the Government hereunder and for Federal income tax purposes. If cover emoluments exceed those due you under this contract, you will dispose of the excess amount in conformance with Governmental instructions. DHL Contracting Officer.

From: William Caulfield, Chief, Covert Claims Branch: "This office acknowledges the OCC opinion, Reference A, which determined Crabanac [HUNT] may retain without Agency salary offset any future royalties earned as a result of his literary efforts based on the fact cover does not include role of a writer. As Subject's cover activities have been officially clarified as being only a light one of a retired Foreign Service Officer for which the Agency will be making all entitlement payments and actually he will receive no funds from any cover, this paragraph, which is misleading, has no meaning in Subject's contract and it is hereby recommended that it be deleted from Crabanac's Supplement.

NO DUTY STATUS REPORTS

TO: Compensation and Tax Division Office of Finance
ATTENTION: (Deleted)
FROM: Chief of Support, WE Division

Per conversation with Mr. Thomas Karamesssines, ADDP, there will be no duty status reports (Form 764) submitted on (deleted). This should be used as the authority to continue his pay without these reports. David S. Powell, Chief of Support, WE Division. November 5, 1965.

EXTRA HOUSING ALLOWANCE

HUNT was allowed $2,900 per annum quarters allowance. The house he rented in Madrid cost $8, 600 per annum. "Due to the operational sensitivity of (deleted) assignment, his requests for relief on his housing costs was handled by Mr. Karamessines, ADDP. On September 15, 1965, Mr. Karamessines, ADDP, approved his being reimbursed on a 75/25 percent basis for the excess allowable costs up to, but not to exceed 60% above his quarters allowance. Edward Ryan, Acting Chief, Western Europe Division, Charles N. Davis, Deputy Director for Support DDP/WE/SS: Davis B. Powell/aj/6189 (November 8, 1965)."

One answer to the Madrid riddle was found in a CIA Memorandum dated February 15, 1965, for the Record that "recommended the deletions of references to Subject's assignment to Madrid." [CIA EAB MFR A.E. Shroud.(?)] On September 21, 1966, HUNT filed a "Request For (deleted) or Change" with the Central Cover Staff.

Tad Szulc reported that in 1964 Richard Helms appointed HUNT Deputy Station Chief of Madrid. HUNT coordinated Second Naval Guerrilla, a plan that called for the assassination of Fidel Castro, followed by an amphibious exile assault on Cuba. By early 1965 the first essential element of the plan was in place: Manuel Artime and HUNT had recruited Rolando Cubela Secades (born January 19, 1933; 201-252234 - code name AMLASH), a high ranking Cuban Army Commander, to assassinate Fidel Castro. HUNT denied working with Manuel Artime and Rolando Cubela when he testified before the SSCIA.

HUNT: I knew that there was such a person [Cubela], but I never had any contact with him and I know nothing about him.

Baron: Do you know anything about the incident that is described in this cable?

HUNT: None at all. I'm sure the reference in paragraph five is not to me.

Baron: The sentence that says "Quite likely, "EDUARDO" will never appear to contact Subject."

HUNT: That can't conceivably have been a reference to me. Because I had not been involved in Cuban activities for more than three years at that time. I was purposely isolated from all Cuban activities after the Bay of Pigs...I was sent to Madrid in either 1964, or 1965. I can't recall which, and I stayed there less than a year. (Deleted) My communications were handled independently between myself and Thomas Karamessines, who was then Deputy Director for Plans. This was a project that had been laid on by Dick Helms. (Deleted) and I had no Cuban activities of any kind.

1. OLIEN and SCORGORY met with Subject reference September 15. Only important info he provided was vague reference to AMLASH plan assassinate AMTHUG. Attempt would supposedly take place during university ceremony at which Castro would be present. AMWHIP-1 reportedly responsible arranging delivery to Cuba on Belgian FAL equipped with silencer. AMLASH-1 was to be triggerman supported by unidentified Army officers. Above plan now apparently abandoned.
2. Said AMLASH-1 anxious to leave Cuba on official visit in order to contact CIA regarding his future role with Cuba. Subject suggested remote possibility arrange visit Prague through AMLASH friend Jose Venegas, delegate to IUS. Our impression is AMLASH-1 wants to come out for good as probably feels personal situation tenuous.
3. According to Subject following persons or influence or AMLASH-1 team. Major, Major and ex-Major (FNU) of transport.
4. Said AMLASH-2 had numerous contacts Cuban official circles Madrid, Paris, but working for another government since he is in bad standing with ODYOKE. Hinted CIA should be in touch with AMLASH-2. STATIOS however, has strong reservations against AMLASH-2 on security grounds and fact he out for gold plus little evidence capability produce info of interest.
5. OLIEN who left meeting first, clearly inferred to Subject it had been a great waste of time. Other CIA Officer proceeded politely 'chew out' for getting us to meet on false pretenses. Subject frankly admitted his recruitment by CIS was handled in such a sloppy manner was to be construed a farce. View vagueness his mission and lack secure contacts, reporting channels, it apparent CIS not expecting much results for OP which probably made on hit or miss basis. Quite likely "EDUARDO" will never appear to contact Subject.

6. Seeing his "utility" to us as dubious, Subject began scratching his head for leads and mentioned following friends he might contact. Orlando Blanco (no relation) charge in Bern who is coming to Madrid September 25, 1964. (FNU) Trasanco of Paris Embassy who confidante AMLASH-1 also known AMLASH-2 and Enrique Rodriguez Loeches, Ambassador to Morocco who is coming to Madrid September 23, 1964.

7. C/O said now up to Subject show bonafides suggesting he would take advantage his "unique status" as Cuban agent to gain entry into official circles. Subject fears we may deny visa and denounce him to Spanish Police. Although he promised to make every effort, indications to date are he will have little, if any, OPS utility. In any event, was told examine thoroughly any leads he might have in next few days. We will decide in next meeting or two whether he does appear to have any utility. If not he will be dropped.

ROLANDO CUBELA

As early as March 1952 Rolando Cubela was working against Batista. That year, with student friends he reinstated the Student Directorate (DRE). In October 1956 Rolando Cubela assassinated Blanco Rico, Fulgencio Batista's Chief of Military Intelligence. Fleeing to the U.S., he became involved in military planning and purchasing arms until February 1958, when he and 16 other students returned clandestinely to the Escambray. He led a famous military column, and became the overall military leader of the DRE. The DRE refused the military leadership of Ché Guevara, fighting only under Rolando Cubela's orders. They occupied the Presidential Place on January 1, 1959, and initially declined to turn it over to Fidel Castro. BRINGUIER was in Rolando Cubela's group. In March 1959 the CIA received a report that if Rolando Cubela did not get out of the country soon "he was so disgusted with Fidel Castro that he would kill Fidel Castro himself." [CIA CS -3/396,635 4.28.59] In October 1959 Rolando Cubela became president of the government-sponsored FEU, after resuming his medical studies at Havana University. Rolando Cubela contacted the CIA in March 1961 through AMWHIP-1 [CIA 201-0267956] at a Latin American Peace Conference held in Mexico City. The Kubark objective of the meeting was to determine whether Rolando Cubela was anti-Castro. In August 1962 Rolando Cubela went to the World Youth Festival in Helsinki, where he was met by Tepedino who introduced (deleted) under the alias of "Bill Thompson." Rolando Cubela said he was not interested in any small undertaking, and declared the assassination of Fidel Castro and other leaders would be the most effective way to rescue the revolution from the Communists. Later in August 1962 Rolando Cubela "went on vacation" in Paris where he again met with Bill Thompson. In August 1962 Rolando Cubela was taken to an Air Force Base in Southern France where he was given a demonstration in explosives. Rolando Cubela was not given any sabotage equipment but was trained in SW (Secret Writing). A Technical Services Division SW technician accompanied him. In September 1963 he met with Bill Thompson and Nestor Sanchez in Porta Alegre, Brazil.

NESTOR SANCHEZ

New Mexico born Nestor D. Sanchez joined the CIA in 1953. From 1953 to 1955, he served as a U.S. Army political officer. Nestor Sanchez helped co-ordinate the Bay of Pigs invasion. Nestor Sanchez worked with Guatemalan death squads from 1967 to 1968 as Chief of Station in Guatemala. From 1976 to 1979, he was in Spain. He served as CIA station chief in Managua. He was rumored to be the Case Officer of former Panamanian President Manuel Noriega. Senator Alphonse D'Amato questioned Sanchez about having leaked information on Noriega's behalf. He also asked Nestor Sanchez if he had any financial relationship with Noriega. Nestor Sanchez returned to Washington where he became Chief of the Latin American Division. [Washington Times 2.10.88] Nestor Sanchez was an associate of John Singlaub. In August 1981 Nestor Sanchez became the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs at the Defense Department. In 1984 he was allegedly involved in a private effort to supply the Contras after Congress cut off military assistance. [Washington Times 12.12.86] In 1988 he was chosen to supervise the United States military involvement with the Contras in Nicaragua. Nestor Sanchez suggested the Government of Maurice Bishop in Grenada be overthrown. He stated: "The Cubans are constructing air and naval facilities there that far exceed the requirements of that tiny island." [Washington Post 2.27.83 A1] Nestor Sanchez was involved with Richard V. Secord in the Iran-Contra flap. He retired 1987. In 1992 Nestor Sanchez was a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

From Porta Alegre, Rolando Cubela went to Paris on September 14, 1963, with Nestor Sanchez and Richard Maxwell Long. It was learned that the French were unilaterally surveilling Rolando Cubela, whereupon the CIA advised the French of its contact with him. Rolando Cubela agreed to assassinate Fidel Castro, on the condition that he receive prior authorization from a high official of the United States Government. On October 29, 1963, Cubela met with Desmond FitzGerald, whom HUNT had known since the early 1950's, when Desmond FitzGerald was Chief of Station in Manila. In the early 1960's Desmond FitzGerald replaced William K. Harvey as head of the CIA's assassination section. In 1963 Desmond FitzGerald replaced Colonel J.C. King as Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division, after the latter's tenure of a decade. Desmond FitzGerald convinced Rolando Cubela that his activities had U.S. Government approval. Desmond FitzGerald gave Rolando Cubela a pen that was really a vector for a deadly poison he was told to obtain.

On November 22, 1963, Nestor Sanchez and Rolando Cubela met. Rolando Cubela asked for 20 hand grenades, two high powered rifles with scopes, and 20 pounds of C-4 explosives, however, he refused to carry any of it with him on his return to Cuba. When the meeting broke up, Nestor Sanchez and Rolando Cubela were informed about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Rolando Cubela was visibly moved and asked, "Why do such things happen to good people?" Rolando Cubela returned to Cuba, but nothing happened to Fidel Castro. In March 1964, Rolando Cubela was given a weapons cache, and on May 3, 1964, Rolando Cubela asked for a silencer. According to the news reports, the cache was discovered by a young boy. In February 1965 he said "portions of the cache were recovered by a fisherman. He never received any part of the cache." On November 11, 1964, Rolando Cubela went to Prague as a special guest of the International Union of Students.

On November 13, 1964, Manuel Artime agreed to talk to Rolando Cubela. At a meeting with Nestor Sanchez on December 6, 1964, in Paris, Rolando Cubela told him he was going to meet Manuel Artime. Cuban Embassy officials Odon Alvarez de la Campa and Gonzales Garrarreta simultaneously contacted CIA agents in Madrid and were put in touch with Station Chief Jim Noel who offered them $5,000 for a list of Cuban Embassy personnel, as well as information as to who would be susceptible to CIA recruitment. Gonzales Garrarreta was sentenced to 20 years in prison. [Granma 3.13.66] The meeting with Manuel Artime took place on December 27, 1964, in Madrid. HUNT denied that he was present at these meetings, and claimed that his assignment in Spain "had to do with the upcoming, inevitable transition of power from Franco to the successor government." Manuel Artime provided Rolando Cubela with a silencer for an FAL. On February 1, 1965, Rolando Cubela requested $10,000 from Nestor Sanchez to finance his operations.

Funds were also furnished by former Chief of Station in Havana in 1959, James Noel, who, like HUNT, was an official at the U.S. Embassy, Madrid. James Noel, an associate of HUNT, was mentioned in Give Us This Day. HUNT stated: "I knew Jim only when he was Chief of Station in Havana and chief of station in Spain. Jim supplanted me as the liaison officer during the revolutionary time." HEMMING told this researcher that James Noel "dealt with William Morgan. So did Sam Kail." Rolando Cubela returned to Cuba on February 23, 1965. "On February 23, 1965, CA/PA passed a letter through the AMSNEAK operation to (deleted) SNAFU/25 implying that Rolando Cubela has recently received an additional $5000 in his secret bank account."

Manuel Artime agreed to be present in Cuba when the assassination occurred, and to provide Rolando Cubela with an escape route by creating a diversion near the shooting scene. Manuel Artime said: "I had U-2 photographs of the beach. I had 300 men ready to attack when Rolando Cubela gave the word. The call never came..." Rolando Cubela and Roman Guin Diaz (201-142291) were arrested by the DGI when they returned to Cuba on March 1, 1966, and were sentenced to 25 years in prison. Roman Guin Diaz had been one of Camillo Cienfuegos' officers and a member of the March Directorio Revolucionario. In September 1962, while he was an administrator of The National Institute of Agrarian Reform, Roman Guin Diaz made plans to assassinate Fidel Castro. [CIA CSDB-3/651,487 9.25.62] In May 1964, a staff officer from the CIA's Special Activities Staff/MOB component asked CI to grant (deleted) [Roman Guin Diaz] a POA. It was granted, then extended in July 1964. There was no evidence that Manuel Artime was in Cuba when Rolando Cubela was arrested.

AMWHIP-1 was an important cutout between the CIA and AMLASH. Who was AMWHIPP? In May 1956, Roman Guin Diaz came to the attention of the CIA when he visited his uncle, Juan Soto, in Brooklyn, N.Y. Juan Soto was a businessman engaged in pro-Castro activities. A Provisional Operational Approval was requested for (deleted) [AMWHIP-1] on September 27, 1961, because of a WAVE request from Western Hemisphere/C/ME[?]/PN, a CIA Staff Officer and from Western Hemisphere/4/PA/PROP [DAVID PHILLIPS] and Western Hemisphere/4/A Case officer (deleted), a CIA staff employee, was assigned to the Subject. Subject was fluttered on March 6, 1963, and given OWVL commo training. Subject's Provisional Operational Approval was reinstated in November 1969, then canceled in April 1970. During this period, he was fluttered on at least two occasions. The Subject was described as a New York City businessmen, who had photographed Rolando Cubela in 1960, while attending an international conference.

Was he Juan Soto? Others have suggested AMWHIP was Carlos Tepedino an Italian who lived in Cuba, a friend of Trafficante and Cubela, who on occasion helped Cuberla through economic difficulties. Tepedino worked for CIA officers in the U.S. Embassy in Havana. http://cuban-exile.com/doc\_001-025/doc0025.html It has been suggested Rolando Cubela was a Castro double-agent and had reported the CIA's assassination plot to Fidel Castro. Fidel Castro had retaliated by having had OSWALD shoot President Kennedy. According to BRINGUIER:

When he was apprehended in Cuba, Rolando Cubela should have been executed. Castro has killed a lot of his people for lesser crimes than conspire with the CIA to kill him. But he had spared this major in his Army. In my opinion, he was a double-agent working for Castro. Castro commuted his sentence in the 1970's and then he is living in Spain. I saw a picture of Cubela attending a party in Miami. Cubela spent a few years in jail, and it happened that I never hear Radio Havana, Cuba, and one night I say to my wife 'I still like to hear Radio Havana Cuba.' I put the radio on and in that moment they were having a trial in Cuba about the Kennedy assassination and Cubela was testifying in the trial and he was blaming the CIA that minute. If you want to blame the CIA, Cubela is the man for you, sir.

Scott Breckinridge reported: "It has been reported that AMLASH is now out of jail and back to his old profession as a medic. He is reported to have been Raoul Castro's lover (!)..." [CIA Memo for Leader 10.7.76] Another CIA document stated: "Rolando Cubela, following his arrest, was given a relatively light sentence, considering the seriousness of the charge. Upon incarceration, he reportedly functioned as a prison physician, and drove around in a jeep unescorted. Such treatment by the Government of Cuba is quite unusual and, if true, is an indication that he was trusted." [NARA # 1993.08.13.13:49:39-370028] Another CIA document reported that during the trial of Rolando Cubela there was no indication whatsoever that Rolando Cubela revealed anything more than his 'weakness, playboy attitude,' in plotting with a man like Manuel Artime to assassinate Fidel Castro. Under private interrogation to date [CIA MFR April 14, 1964] there is no known possibility that Rolando Cubela has revealed the names of the real military leaders with whom he really was in contact...none of these major individuals, whose names are known to us, have been arrested or detained. Ameijeiras of course, does not fall into this category. However, he like Juan Nuiry Sanchez and Victor Bordon Machado who are reportedly arrested, falls into the category of known personal friends of Cubela...Several careful readings of the entire proceeding of the trial appears to indicate that as soon as Cubela learned the extent of the regime's knowledge of the plot he adopted as an immediate line of defense his own 'weakness, emotional instability, deterioration, liking for gay parties' as the common denominator to make himself, and the few friends known to be involved through the betrayal by AMHAM-1 as the sole 'responsibles' for the plot. Rolando Cubela had been married twice, and had two children. He might have been blackmailed by the Cubans, since there was no indication the CIA was aware that he was gay. Was Rolando Cubela a double-agent who attempted to entrap Manuel Artime? Or was the AMLASH plan leaky?

On May 2, 1965, Victor Espinosa told an Immigration and Naturalization Service officer that he was aware of the AMLASH plot. The Immigration and Naturalization Service contacted the FBI and Victor Espinosa was interviewed in June 1965. He said he "had just returned to New York on May 29, 1965, after having spent 26 days in Paris and Spain. He said the following people knew of the plot: "Rolando Cubela, a next door neighbor of Fidel Castro, Alberto Blanco and Major Almeida Bosque." Victor Espinosa said that he had heard from Cuban exiles in Spain that our Chief of Station (deleted as of 2010) knew of this plot to some extent, but the anti-Castro Cubans do not trust him, for he was compromised by a Cuban girl known as 'Tata.'" The CIA cabled Paris and Madrid:

For Paris: Victor Espinosa on return PBPRIME told ODURGE and ODENVY of AMLASH conspiracy; Contacts with AMLASH 2 and 3, UNSNAFU 9, MIRRLESS; Criticism of KUBARK staffers at Madrid including GROWERY; Derogatory allegations on QUSPORT, SUSWIFT 1, AMWHIP 1, MIRRLESS scare in accepting as serious joking recruitment by AMLASH 3 for Soviets; Relationship at Paris among Bob, Dick, Maureen, Luis Fernandez, UNSAFU 9...For Director: Tota, girl named by Espinosa, is QUSWIFT 7. She was never employed by QUWEB and was never in contact with KUBARK Staff. Photographs of material which Espinosa called ciphers and microfilm were forwarded to headquarters. Stockwood Langosch meeting to discuss above may be profitable. Langosch will telephone Stockwood from Perpignan to determine if it is feasible for Stockwood to meet him there or nearby place. In view of Stockwood's previous assignment to Barcelona, assume no security problem if he seen by quantum.

A CIA Headquarters cable dated June 9, 1965, advised "it is evident that security of our Cuban operations in some cases, and our own compartmentation, not all that we would desire." [CIA Cable 081746Z rec. 6.8.65] On July 9, 1965, Victor Espinosa appeared in the offices of an unnamed CIA official. He told him he had been trained by the CIA

Espinosa has been involved in Cuban liberation activities for many years. He opposed Batista and opposes Castro. He is not a member of the March 13 Movement but has been very close to many of its leaders, including Cubelas. Espinosa was trained by the CIA both in Louisiana and Guatemala and was one of those who was sent into Cuba prior to the Bay of Pigs...

He explained that earlier in the year he had received a request from one of his reliable Cuban contacts in Europe, asking that he come there quickly. He obtained false papers in Miami and traveled to Paris: There, apparently in the presence of the Cuban Ambassador to France, he met one of the top security men of the Castro regime" and was apprised of Rolando Cubela's plot against Castro. He stated, "The Cubans might have turned to (deleted as of 2010) the CIA man in (deleted as of 2010). However they believe (deleted as of 2010) is completely unreliable. A Cuban girl was sent to Madrid some time ago by the Castro people. (Deleted as of 2010) was fooled by her, and set her up in an apartment in Madrid. He also arranged for her to work with the International Rescue Committee. When the proper moment came, she fled back to Havana with some very useful files. Espinosa is determined to bring the very dangerous situation of the Cuban plot to the attention of some top level U.S. Government official unless he receives some reply from the CIA. [CIA 4.27.77 SSC Final Rep. Book 5 pgs. 78,79,105; CIA Cable 6.8.65; MFR 6.3.65 WH/C/RR/OS; Memo 7.9.65 ARA/CCA Stevenson ARA George Lister; CIA IG Rep. p105]

Organized crime was aware of AMLASH. The CIA reported:

March 15, 1965. The Madrid Station cabled that one Rafael Garcia-Bango Dirube had arrived in Madrid from Cuba on 15 March, and had been introduced to a Station Officer. Garcia-Bango claimed to be in contact with with a group of Cuban military leaders who were planning to eliminate Castro and take over the Government. It quickly became clear that he was referring to Cubela. Garcia-Bango said that he had always been publicly identified as a close friend of Rolando Cubela whom he saw in Havana on March 9, 1965. Garcia-Bango said he had been the lawyer for the Capri Hotel in Havana. He was jailed for 75 days in July 1962 for defending Santo Trafficante, a US citizen and ex-manager of the Capri gambling casino who was kicked out of Cuba. Comment: This is another name-link between Cubela and the gambling syndicate plots reported upon earlier in this report. Trafficante was one of the principals in Sheffield Edwards Phase One of the operation. He presumably was not involved in Phase Two under Harvey, but we cannot be sure of that. After all, Trafficante was the man who brought Varona in the operation late in Phase One, and Varona was one of the main players during Phase Two. The three-man team that was in by Varone was reported on June 11, 1962 to be in place in Cuba.

In May 1966 "Immigration and Naturalization Service inquired if Agency had any interest in Subject's [Victor Espinosa] traveling to Spain and Australia on business and on May 16, 1966, the Agency advised Immigration and Naturalization Service in the negative." After AMLASH'S arrest, HUNT requested a transfer to Washington, allegedly because his son needed medical treatment unavailable in Madrid.

In 1964 the CIA funded Manuel Artime's training camp with $7 million. Manuel Artime took a mistress, and he used her apartment for secret meetings. The FBI began investigating his alleged "grand style of living" and his operation of Nicaraguan training camps, where he reportedly had more than $5 million worth of military equipment. It was alleged that Manuel Artime was being officially sponsored and subsidized, and that he made a living out of the counter-revolution. Many exiles came to the conclusion that "Manuel Artime was the only Cuban national authorized by the U.S. Government to go ahead with military plans for future operations against Cuba." By May 1964 the Air Force of Manuel Artime had bombed Cuban sugar mills. [NYT 5.15.64] That month Tad Szulc reported Cuba feared another military invasion was imminent. In September 1964 Victor Paneque and Manuel Artime's men took part in an anti-Castro action that caused the death of three Spanish seamen, and alienated anti-Castro Cubans from the Johnson Administration. Manuel Artime planned to intercept and sink the Cuban cargo vessel El Sierra Maestre. In 1978 HEMMING stated: "There was a thick fog that night and we couldn't see shit. We hit the goddamned Sierra Aranzazu, a Spanish ship, by mistake." In 1994 HEMMING denied that he told me this. On September 15, 1964, the Spanish merchant vessel Sierra Aranzazu was attacked by two small boats north of Great Inagua, Bahamas. Earlier that night, a small boat had approached the merchant vessel, shined a spotlight on its stern, noted the name of the vessel, and then left. About 15 minutes later, two attack boats approached the vessel and strafed it with cannons and machine guns. The merchant vessel caught fire and blew up while the crew took to lifeboats. Three crewmen were killed and 17 were injured. On September 16, 1964, the Cuban Government claimed that the CIA had been responsible for the attack. Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the Spanish Ambassador that the raiders had not come from United States soil.

On September 16, 1964, The Miami News contained an article that stated Telmo Alvarez had called a news agency and claimed his group, the Secret Organization of Continental Action, was responsible for the attack. Telmo Alvarez, however, claimed the attack had been made with torpedoes. The article noted the survivors of the Spanish ship did not mention torpedoes being used. The FBI reported that the Secret Organization of Continental Action was formed about January 1964, by Mesa Rodriguez: "On July 15, 1964, Mesa Rodriguez discussed plans to torpedo a British vessel transporting oil to Cuba." The FBI conducted an intensive investigation of the Secret Organization of Continental Action.

We were subsequently advised by CIA on a very highly confidential basis (as set out in our 9/22/64 memorandum) that that Agency possessed information which very definitely indicated that an exile group which is receiving US backing, known as Movimiento de Recuperacion Revolucionaria (MRR), was responsible for this attack. An error was made in that the persons carrying out the attack thought they were firing upon a Cuban vessel. Three Spaniards aboard the Spanish ship were killed as result of the attack. CIA deals with MRR based upon policy established by a Special Group, including representatives from CIA, State Department, Defense, and the White House, Former Attorney General Kennedy also served as a member of the group. CIA claimed it did not direct any of MMR operations and the planned attack which resulted in sinking of the Spanish vessel was solely an operation engineered by MMR. Details regarding CIA's support of this group, of course are unknown to Spanish authorities, although State Department is fully aware of complete details regarding this incident. . [FBI 91-4133 NR 9.24.64 p2, 9.25.64 enc. p2; 2-1877-26 - 10.1.64, NR 10.14.64 Top Secret; 97-4133 NR 9.17.64, NR 11.23.64]

Manuel Artime was questioned. An FBI Miami teletype reported:

At the request of the State Department the Bureau conducted an investigation of an attack on the Spanish vessel Sierra Aranzazu (2-1877) off the eastern tip of Cuba. It was alleged that this attack was carried out by representatives of a group receiving U.S. backing, known as MRR, and headed by Manuel Artime. The Secret Organization of Continental Action (OSAC) initially claimed responsibility for the attack. Newspaper accounts indicated that Artime denied responsibility for the raid and in a statement from Panama suggested the Castro Government was responsible in an attempt to discredit MRR. On October 5, 1964, Rolando Masferrer, 42-46 81st Street, New York City, advised he had learned that this CIA-sponsored anti-Castro action was led by Cuban exiles who he identified as Dr. Santiago Alvarez Fernandez and Luis Grillo. According to Masferrer Alvarez and Grillo now were working with Manuel Artime of the MRR, which was supported by CIA and operated out of Nicaragua. [FBI 2-1877-26; FBI 97-4133-118]

The FBI questioned Pedro Diaz Lanz and Victor Paneque. The reports of these interviews were withheld as of 2010. [FBI 2-1877-26, 97-4133 NR 9.25.64, 9.23.63] In late September 1964 Pedro Diaz Lanz and Nino Diaz had held a press conference during which they announced that Victor Paneque was leading 1,000 anti-Castro guerrillas in the Escambrays. In January 1976 there was an assassination attempt against Nino Diaz at his Key Biscayne home. On October 16, 1964, the CIA's Director of Security received a letter from M.K. Holbrick, IRD, about Manuel Artime. This letter asked,

4. Since leaving WH/SA, I have had occasional contact with persons who were then and/or are now assigned to WH and who were knowledgeable AMWQ. These contacts have ranged from Seymour Bolton, Al Rodriguez (both of whom were supergrade special assistants to Desmond Fitzgerald), secretaries in the "front office" of what was SAS, and others. Since these persons knew of my intense involvement in the Project, they have commented to me about it. I did not intentionally solicit their remarks. A remark that was made to me recently renewed my effort to locate copies of certain materials that I had extracted from files while in SAS and submit this memorandum. The remark was, as I can recall it, "Wouldn't Senator Goldwater have a ball if he knew about the Spanish ship and about Manuel Artime's wife?" This remark caused me to do considerable thinking and recall. As you might recall, a Spanish ship was attacked about two weeks ago. My knowledge of the attack is based on comments made to me by a person whom I knew while in Special Activities Staff [Des Fitzgerald's component]. The attack was reportedly made by the SS Santa Maria, one of two JMWAVE vessels (converted Navy AKL's). I was with this vessel in Hoboken, New Jersey, for about two weeks during the spring of the year. At the time the vessel was being equipped and manned. As reported to me the Santa Maria was cruising off of Cuba and at a distance noticed the name on the Spanish ship. I believe it was 'Sierra' LNU. The Santa Maria, thinking that this ship was one of those on its 'Watch List' opened fire on the Spanish ship and, according to newspaper publicity, three Spaniards were killed and the Spanish Government was up in arms. As fate would have it, the Santa Maria reportedly attacked the wrong ship. The ship they were interested in was of the same name; however, it in fact was not the Spanish ship. I was further informed that because of this flap, Secretary Rusk and Mr. McCone immediately conferred.

What is of equal or even greater concern to me relates to Artime's wife. In late February 1964 HRCASH (?) requested that I check the Office of Security Indices in the name of Adelaida Matilda Padron y Cruz. As a result of this check I made an inquiry of Chief, Domestic Contacts Division, and from that office received a report relating to Padron. A copy of my resultant memo to Mr. (deleted) is attached as Tab A. This, to my knowledge, was the first indication that Padron, who was then reportedly Manuel Artime's mistress, was possibly a lesbian. During continued contacts with (deleted), I would discreetly inquire as to whether or not Artime continued to have an interest in Padron. IHER is quite shrewd and extremely adept at double talk. I am quite certain that the flow of information to (Deleted) about PARDON was in this manner --- from BARO to ROHRER to either HERNANDEZ or (deleted). As time went on judging from the material I saw and the remarks I heard, it was obvious that BARO and QUINTERO has absolutely no use for PARDON. Tab B, authored by (deleted) HFR notes that the political repercussions could be 'calamitous' if Artime married Padron. During the next couple of months Padron was investigated by Immigration and Naturalization Service at the Agency's request. This was arranged through the Alien Affairs Staff. I am told there is a Security file on her. In addition there is a Subject file on her in Western Hemisphere Security. That investigation indicated that Padron was in all probability bisexual, and that she had been the former mistress of Fulgencio Batista.

An investigation conducted by:

Cubans used by a Counter-Intelligence shop at JMWAVE revealed that Adelaida Matilda Padron y Cruz had also been the mistress of Venezuelan Dictator Marcos Jimenez Perez. Further, it stated that Padron and her sister were both homosexual and had posed for pornography for Batista and Marcos Jimenez Perez. In addition, the dispatch noted that informants had said that Adelaida Matilda Padron y Cruz visualized herself as being the next First Lady of Cuba.

WAVE Dispatch 8521 dated February 20, 1965, mentioned that BARKER's source reported FIORINI had mentioned a robbery of Manuel Artime's (AMBIDDY-1) house and his meetings with Miami Police concerning the robbery. That month BARKER received information regarding the ransacking of Varona's house. In February 1965 Manuel Artime announced from Madrid that his commandos had shelled a Cuban oil depot. By September 1966 MRR was launching commando raids against Cuban military targets. Large shipments of whiskey were seized by Costa Rican authorities on the way to the forces of Manuel Artime. After this seizure, a mysterious death occurred at the camp. (Roberto Trujillo Rodriguez). Costa Rican reports indicated that "local rightists had been trained and armed at the MRR camp in preparation for a coup in which government leaders were to be assassinated and replaced by a neo-Nazi dictatorship." [Wash. Post 3.17.65] By end of 1965 the FBI was aware that many of Manuel Artime's soldiers were cocaine and heroin traffickers. The Johnson Administration closed down Manuel Artime's operation.

EDGARDO BUTTARI, B.B. REBOZO, NIXON AND ARTIME

On December 6, 1963, the FBI reported that MRR and the 30th of November Movement were jointly involved in anti-Castro activities. [FBI 97-4133-81] In 1966 Manuel Artime worked for the Somoza brothers in the import/export business. Manuel Artime and Anastasio Somoza associate Edgardo Buttari jointly owned a firm that imported meat, fish and lumber from Nicaragua to Florida, and exported slaughterhouse equipment to Nicaragua. Edgardo Buttari was born August 14, 1909, (also given 1914) at West Tampa, Florida. His father had fought in the war for Cuban Independence. Edgardo Buttari became President Fulgencio Batista's Minister of Commerce. He arrived in the United States in March 1960. The CIA stated: "While information in his file does not indicate any past or present CIA contact, there is unsourced information in the Western Hemisphere/Caribbean Operations Group card file which shows that Buttari was in touch with Frank Bender (Gerald Droller) in Miami in the Spring of 1960, apparently in relation to Buttari's involvement with the Cuban Revolutionary Front." Edgardo Buttari was a partner of NIXON associate B.B. Rebozo.

NIXON invited Manuel Artime to his Presidential Inaugural in January 1969. When the FBI became aware of this, it sent the White House a letter: "Artime is currently allegedly involved in efforts to set up Cuban exile bases in Nicaragua and Haiti." The FBI advised the White House to avoid embarrassment and cancel Manuel Artime's invitation. When Martin Dardis of the Miami District Attorney's Office visited Manuel Artime in August 1973 he observed a photograph of Artime at the Inaugural Ball arm and arm with Henry Kissinger. In August 1970 Manuel Artime's ex-business partner accused Manuel Artime of having used his influence with Anastasio Somoza to have him incarcerated. Anastasio Somoza had recently been made an honorary member of the Bay of Pigs Veterans Brigade.

HUNT returned to Headquarters in September 1966, and served in DDP Staff assignments. HUNT was Chief of European Covert Operations until April 1970, when HUNT retired from DDP (Europe), and became a CIA retiree. That year HUNT was the Subject of a CIA investigation. [CIA FOIA #72-4] Traces on HUNT revealed "July 9 Mont. Texas." [CIA File No. 304292]

HUNT, MORALES AND BOSCH AUGUST 1968

Orlando Bosch was arrested in October 1968 for firing a homemade bazooka at The Polciana, a Polish freighter moored in Miami harbor, from the median of a Miami Beach Causeway, using a paper clip as a sight. Richardo Morales supplied the prosecution with tapes of conversations between himself and Orlando Bosch. HUNT'S name came up on one of these tapes:

Morales: Another thing, two months ago, a fellow named HUNT, who is a member of the Republican Party, was here and he gave $15,000 to some representatives of Cuban Power to place bombs.

Bosch: I knew nothing about that.

Morales: Fifteen thousand bucks they gave.

Bosch: You know that makes two people who tell me this...

[USA v Bosch 68-420-Cr-Wm Southern District Florida]

The conversation between Orlando Bosch and Richardo Morales took place in August 1968. In August 1968 HUNT was with the Deputy Directorate/Plans, European Special Action Staff. "Justification Reference: As DD/P representative on the CIA team preparing historical material for the Johnson Library, Mr. Hunt will be required to have access to documents in both the (deleted as of 2010) and (deleted as of 2010) systems." If the HUNT mentioned by Morales was E. HOWARD HUNT, why had HUNT used his real name? During his bombing trial, Cuban exile Rolando Otero testified that many exiles knew HUNT by his real name rather than "EDUARDO" or a pseudonym. HOWARD HUNT was asked about this: "In 1961 or 1963 how were you addressed by your inferior employees?" He answered: "As Mr. HUNT." HUNT claimed to represent the Republican Party on other occasions: CIA Staffer Charles W. Kane reported that in 1971 Jack (deleted) was contacted by HUNT, "who suggested that he consider an assignment as a Security Officer for the Republican Party. (Deleted as of 2010) visited Washington in January 1972, to discuss the proposed position with HOWARD HUNT who was apparently was acting on behalf of the Republican Party." [Memo for Record 7.19.72 Con. with Mr. (deleted as of 2010) signed by Charles W. Kane CIA FOIA 00158, 00155]

During the Polciana trial, Orlando Bosch pleaded that his activities were sponsored by the CIA. But the judge ruled that this testimony was irrelevant and inadmissible. Orlando Bosch was convicted and sentenced to ten years. While Orlando Bosch was imprisoned, Richardo Morales was almost killed when a bomb exploded in his car. Released in 1972, Orlando Bosch immediately violated parole by attending a meeting at the Novo brothers headquarters in New Jersey. Orlando Bosch went underground, and continued to pursue his campaign of terror against Fidel Castro and those he considered Castro's allies. In May 1974 Orlando Bosch was in the Dominican Republic with Frank Castro. [CIA 201-0742365] In June 1974 he was in Venezuela, where he bombed the Panamanian Embassy in Caracas. In November 1974 Orlando Bosch was arrested by the Venezuelan national police (DISIP) for bombing the Cuban Embassy. He was not returned to the United States. Instead, he was declared persona non grata and deported. He was escorted to the airport by Richardo Morales, who had emigrated to Venezuela in 1974 and joined DISIP. The CIA reported that Richardo Morales warned Frank Castro of DISIP repression against Cubans in Venezuela. Orlando Bosch flew to Curacao, where he met with Guillermo Novo. In late 1974, the two men flew to Chile where they met with representatives of the Chilean Junta.

The HSCA questioned MIRR leader Orlando Bosch about his alibi for November 22, 1963. Orlando Bosch said he was "at home in Miami" when he heard President Kennedy had been shot. In early March 1964 the Miami FBI inquired if FBI Headquarters wanted to prosecute Orlando Bosch for violations of the Neutrality Act. The Miami FBI received a letter "denying Miami request for appropriate (deleted) in this case." [FBI 97-4474-102 4.1.64.] The Miami FBI then received another letter which stated: "Due to the over-all needs of the Bureau, authority to place mail coer is being denied. Captioned anti-Castro organization [MIRR] is engaged in carrying out raids against Cuba. Miami is endeavoring to determine bank used by organization and past requested authority to place mail covers on certain individuals to determine this data In view of foregoing, it is requested that the Bureau reconsider the request submitted by this office." [FBI Hq. res. 4.6.64] On November 22, 1964, Orlando Bosch was behind an aerial assassination plot against Fidel Castro, who was to be killed in a stadium while he watched a baseball game. The flight, however, was ill-timed - arriving over Havana before Fidel Castro reached the stadium. [Wash. Daily News 11.23.64 p97] By 1966 MIRR claimed 11 aerial attacks against Cuba. Orlando Bosch had been apprehended by the Coast Guard, the Treasury Department and other Federal agencies at least six times. In 1967 Orlando Bosch joined the Novos brothers' Cuban Nationalist Movement. MIRR was dissolved, and Cuban Power was formed. Cuban Power concentrated on attacking Cuban diplomatic installations abroad, along with the embassies and trade centers of countries that had dealings with Cuba. In January 1968 four Cuban exile-owned stores in Little Havana were bombed because their owners were involved in sending relief packages to Cuba. Richardo "The Monkey" Morales was arrested by Miami Police and charged with these bombings. Richardo Morales had arranged to be arrested to enhance his status within Orlando Bosch's organization.

RICHARDO "THE MONKEY" MORALES

On December 31, 1953, Richardo Morales [201-285923 born June 14, 1939] killed Matos Boson, the G-2 Chief at Rancho Boyeras Airport. He joined the Rebel Army on that same day. He was arrested in 1954 and 1957 for conspiring against Batista. In 1958 he attended law school in Havana. In 1959 he became a G-3 agent stationed at Rancho Boyeras Airport and was involved in the "counter-revolutionary sentencing of Pablo Ubides Diaz." Richardo Morales was a Special Agent in the G-2 in Cuba in 1960 from October 1959 to August 1960. In July and August 1960, Morales listed his occupation as card dealer in the casino of the Havana Hilton. In 1960 he was arrested for conspiring against Castro, held for four days, then released. He deserted on August 23, 1960, and took asylum in the Brazilian Embassy. He fled to the United States in 1960, where he was recruited into William K. Harvey's operation. The CIA: "Subject was considered suspect G-3 when he arrived in the U.S. because of his past affiliation with the G-3. On his arrival, he did give an interview to Bohemia Libre on his G-2 past." On January 11, 1961, the CIA reported Richardo Morales had recently joined the Cuban Revolutionary Front. The CIA: "It was understood, when he arrived, that he intended to penetrate the recruitment office of the Cuban Revolutionary Front, however, he did not do this." On March 2, 1964, a CIA investigation by the Office of Security on Richardo Morales yielded numerous derogatory traces, nonetheless, he was granted a Provisional Operation Approval. Richardo Morales went to the Republic of the Congo, where he helped put down a revolution led by Katangese secessionists. He worked as a radio operator for a Paramilitary Team. Richardo Morales returned to the United States. Robert Gambino, SOD/SO informed CIA Headquarters that Richardo Morales would be arriving at Andrews Air Force Base in an Agency C-118:

He said that Bob Gambino, SOD/SO and Dr. (Deleted) M.D. would also be aboard. He said the plane would also have loose cargo as follows: outboard motors, radio beacons, silence weapons, other weapons, commo gear, medical equipment and parachute drop equipment. He also said Robert Gambino may be carrying some Technical Services Division material [swine flu]. He said that James Fitchett, under (deleted) cover, would be there to transfer Subjects to a C-54 for further travel to Camp Pickett, and that Fitchett would meet the Customs and Immigration and Naturalization Service men at Base Operations. On December 2, 1964, I advised Lawrence Fleishmen, Deputy Commissioner of Customs, of the arrival and told him the type of gear aboard. Signed W.M. Knott. [CIA Chief, Alien Affairs Staff W.M. Knott 11.24.64]

Richardo Morales began working for the FBI. The CIA reported: "On August 26, 1965, (deleted as of 2010) advised Alien Affairs Staff the Subject had returned to the U.S. having completed his assigned duties for SOD. Hence no action is required toward issuing an I-512 for the subject to replace that is to expire on September 25, 1965. [CIA AAS 8.27.65 Laurence G. Parr] Ché left the Congo in 1965. In another document, Ray Warren, Chief, Latin American Division stated:

Richardo Morales was first spotted and recruited in Miami in January 1964 to be used as a radio operator and member of paramilitary infiltration team. Successfully polygraphed on February 10, 1964. He was paid a salary of $200 per month effective May 1, 1964. He was terminated on August 26, 1964, and was never used in a BKHERALD sponsored mission. He had received training in Miami and well as (deleted). He volunteered and signed up for paramilitary action in the Congo in September 1964. Although he received training toward the Congo mission he never served. FYI: Morales was apparently turned over to the FBI in 1968 by Miami Station. In October 1972 (deleted as of 2010) registered Morales with Miami Station as their source. [CIA 10.23.76]

Richardo Morales married the sister of Hector Cornillot. Hector Cornillot, a Bosch lieutenant, was serving 30 years for a series of Miami bombings. Through his wife, Richardo Morales penetrated Orlando Bosch's organization. On March 31, 1976, Orlando Bosch was deported from Costa Rica. He traveled to the Dominican Republic, where Cuban Power, the Cuban Nationalist Movement, and the Bay of Pigs Brigade Veterans, merged into the Congress of Revolutionary Union (CORU). In the next six months, CORU took credit for 50 anti-Castro bombings.

In the Fall of 1976, Orlando Bosch visited Nicaragua, then returned to Venezuela, where he was met by Richardo Morales at Caracas Airport. Richardo Morales wanted to question him about the Orlando Letelier murder, which occurred September 26, 1976. Orlando Letelier was killed in Washington, D.C., two days before Orlando Bosch arrived in Venezuela. Orlando Bosch implicated the Novo Brothers in the Orlando Letelier assassination. In October 1976, two of Orlando Bosch's soldiers, Freddy Lugo and Hernan Ricardo, planted an explosive device aboard a Cubana Airliner. The bomb exploded while the jet was in flight, killing at least 60 people. When they were questioned by Barbados authorities, they confessed. Hernan Ricardo stated he had worked for the CIA since 1970, and had received a course in explosives handling. Hernan Ricardo said his CIA contact was Joe Leo, the FBI Legal Attache at the American Embassy, Caracas. Before Freddy Lugo and Hernan Ricardo were picked up, they had telephoned Orlando Bosch. On October 15, 1976, the Venezuelan police took Orlando Bosch into custody and charged him with masterminding the Cubana Airlines bombing. The incarceration of Orlando Bosch touched off numerous attacks against Venezuelan diplomatic and trade installations. He was given a military trial and found guilty. While he was in jail, a Federal Grand Jury convened in Washington, D.C., to probe the Orlando Letelier murder. Witnesses included Richardo Morales and the President of the Bay of Pigs Brigade Veterans, Juan Peruyero, who was later murdered. The Novo brothers were indicted for conspiracy. Soon bombs exploded outside the White House. Exiles who collaborated with the Carter Administration were threatened with death. Richardo Morales was number one on Orlando Bosch's hit list. In August 1987 Orlando Bosch was freed from prison in Venezuela after serving nearly 11 years. However, he was reincarcerated one year later in a Florida prison as an undesirable alien. George Bush's son, Jeb Bush, visited the hunger strikers who demanded the release of Orlando Bosch. Orlando Bosch was released on parole on July 17, 1990.

RICHARDO MORALES

In April 1978 Richardo Morales was charged with possession of 5,000 pounds of marijuana and held on $250,000 bond in Miami. Richardo Morales attorneys said that his arrest was "coercion to break the man," since he had refused to share certain valuable information in his possession. Richardo Morales spoke with HSCA investigators while he was in jail. After three months of confinement, Richardo Morales was released on bond and in late July 1978, was found innocent. (The informant who had provided the Miami Police Department with the information used to obtain a wiretap on the home of one of Richardo Morales' codefendants recanted his testimony.) On

August 10, 1978, Richardo Morales testified before HSCA. HEMMING told this researcher:

Richardo Morales was nailed by Martin Dardis of Watergate fame. They'd been running the marijuana for months, but they let him stay in place. Dardis almost got fired for doing this. They were also bringing in goddamn explosives, timer devices.

On March 21, 1969, HUNT filled out a Personal History Statement for the CIA. As stated, HUNT listed his immediate superior as John L. Hart. On April 23, 1970, a form titled "Notification of Establishment or Cancellation of (Deleted) Retirement Debriefing To Chief, Operating Component EUR" signed by James W. Franklin was generated by the CIA. HUNT retired voluntarily under CIARDS on April 30, 1970. In May 1970, Frank A. O'Malley, an Officer in the External Employment Assistance Branch, Retirement Activities Division of the Office of Personnel, delivered HUNT'S resume to the public relations firm of Robert R. Mullen and Company. Robert R. Mullen and Company, located in the same building as the Domestic Operations Division, was across the street from the Committee to Re-Elect President NIXON. Robert R. Mullen and Company had provided certain sensitive cover support overseas for Agency employees. The book keeper and accountant at Robert R. Mullen and Company was a retired CIA Finance Officer. The USIA was a Robert R. Mullen and Company account. HUNT had known Robert R. Mullen when both were connected with the Economic Cooperation Administration in Paris.

The Free Cuba Committee in Washington, D.C. was established by Robert R. Mullen & Company at the request of the CIA. When Sam Papich wanted a document from the Free Cuba Committee, he contacted Raymond Rocca, who in turn activated Birch O'Neal. [CIA 630-795] The Free Cuba Committee was funded by the Grace Foundation, and its Board of Directors included author and foreign correspondent Dicky Chapelle, Harry Bonaro Overstreet, Leo Cherne, Claire Booth Luce, Ernest Cuneo, and the President of the American Security Council, James Fisher. The Grace Foundation was a supporter of the Free Cuba Committee. Paul Bethel was President of the Free Cuba Committee. Paul Bethel began his career with the State Department on August 22, 1949. Subsequently, he served as a Foreign Affairs Analyst and Resident Officer for the United States High Commissioner to Germany, John J. McCloy. Paul Bethel later served in other posts in Bavaria, Germany and Japan. Paul Bethel joined the Voice of America in December 1949, and was the Subject of an FBI Special Inquiry that proved favorable. In 1957 he was the Subject of an FBI "AEA-A investigation." From 1958 to 1961 Paul Bethel served as Press Attache at the American Embassy in Havana. When the Embassy closed, Paul Bethel moved to Miami, where he opened an office of the Voice Of America, and met many Cuban exiles, including Orlando Bosch. In 1965 Paul Bethel reported on the revolt in the Dominican Republic for the Mutual Broadcasting Company. Many of his articles appeared in The Reporter magazine. In 1969 Paul Bethel wrote The Losers, in which he suggested President Kennedy might have been an active or tacit Communist agent. On June 29, 1974, the name of Paul Bethel came up on an index card generated by the CIA's Office of the Inspector General: "and details on Radio City allegation; (5) investigate HUNT testimony that CIA did not return Tessina film negatives." [IG File #27 Tab #23]

Daniel James was the Executive Secretary of the Free Cuba Committee. In 1954 Daniel James wrote a book on communist infiltration of the Arbenz regime, and another in 1961 exposing Fidel Castro. He wrote two books about Ché Guevara, and was responsible for creating the myth that Ché Guevara was betrayed by a KGB agent named "Tanya." Daniel James was a correspondent for the Voice Of America, an Information-Education Officer at the Pentagon, and a Fellow at the Georgetown University Center for Strategic and International Studies.

On February 6, 1964, Paul Bethel appeared on Barry Gray's New York City radio show, along with journalist Stanley Ross, and Daniel James. Despite their impressive credentials and CIA backing, Stanley Ross suggested that a Castro agent, who was a methedrine addict and was confined to the Disturbed Ward of Creedmore Psychiatric Hospital in Queens, New York, helped OSWALD assassinate the President: "Ross stated that he was informed by Mr. Banon [the Spanish Counsel] that during an interview with Pascual Enrique Rudolo Gongora the later stated that he was one of five or six groups sent to the United States to assassinate President Kennedy at the direction of Fidel Castro. Gongora reportedly stated that Castro was fearful that President Kennedy was trying to assassinate him, and further stated that the United States had been involved in previous assassinations, such as the assassination of the husband and brother-in-law of Madame Nhu of Vietnam." Stanley Ross died on September 22, 1992, and Paul Bethel died on May 20, 1979. [WCE 1444; FBI 105-82555-2305; NYT 9.22.92]]

Robert R. Mullen was unsure whether to hire HUNT. Richard Helms wrote a letter on behalf of HUNT. On April 10, 1970, Robert R. Mullen called Frank A. O'Malley to say he was going to offer HUNT a job: "O'Malley reported this to Central Cover where there were 'mixed emotions' but with Cover giving OK." Eight months after HUNT was hired by Mullen, Robert Bennett joined the company. Bennett, the son of Senator Wallace Bennett (Rep.-UTAH), was active in Republican Party affairs. He brought the Hughes Tool Company account with him. Mullen, who was planning to retire, had invited Bennett to purchase the firm and become its President. This was a disappointment to HUNT, who had expected to become president and own the business. Attempts by HUNT to negotiate a joint ownership arrangement with Bennett failed, and HUNT began to talk of leaving the firm. On October 14, 1970, DDP Thomas Karamessines stated:

Mr. HUNT has been employed by Robert R. Mullen and Company since his April 30, 1970, retirement from the Agency, and CCS understands that Mr. HUNT is going to succeed Mr. Mullen as principal officer of the company. Mr. HUNT contacted CCS on July 7, 1970, to report his belief the company could provide cover as a result of its connections with the Brussels Times. In discussions of this matter with Mr. Mullen and Mr.

HUNT, it developed that Mr. Mullen, who as a long time friend of Mr. HUNT, was cognizant of his Agency background had informed Mr. HUNT of the existing cover arrangements without authorization from CCS...In as much as Mr. HUNT is already witting of the current cover arrangement with the company which he reportedly will soon head, and because the use of the company in other locations where it has cover potential would require his knowledge and assistance, CCS requests that you approve the issuance by the Office of Security of a clearance on Mr. HUNT to the Central Cover Staff.

On November 6, 1970, Subject was granted a clearance for use (deleted) with Robert R. Mullen. The reason the clearance was not granted immediately

"Stemmed from SRS regarding a manuscript written by Subject about CIA Operations and authored by (Deleted). SRS advised matter was under discussion with Deputy Director of Plans. Later SRS advised they interposed no objection, but suggested CCS be requested to obtain concurrence from Deputy Director of Plans. CCS has furnished OS with that approval.

THE WHITE HOUSE: HUNT JULY 1971

In July 19, 1971, HUNT joined the White House Staff as a consultant to NIXON preparatory to his trip to China. In 1971 HUNT served as an advisor to President NIXON in relation to his trip to China. In July 1971 Charles Colson hired HUNT for the White House/Special Operations Group. HUNT contacted BARKER and STURGIS in Miami. A CIA memorandum, "Potential Flap Activities: CIA Contact With Watergate Figures" stated: "The Office of Logistics reports that safehouse (deleted) was made available to (deleted) on July 23, 1971. This safehouse is (deleted). It was used for meetings between HUNT and Technical Services Division representatives." [Broe to Colby 5.21.73 p8] HUNT responded:

Plaintiff [HUNT] swears that his appointment calendars and diary and all other written memoranda which would specify his daily whereabouts in the year 1971 have been destroyed and are no longer in his possession; consequently, Plaintiff has no way of determining whom he might have been in contact on July 23, 1971. [USDC SDF Miami Civ-76-1252-CIV-SMA Answers To Req. For Admissions 1.22.79]

HUNT claimed to have met John F. Kennedy "socially in Boston." Tad Szulc reported that when HUNT first went to work for the White House, he attempted to discredit Senator Edward Kennedy with new information about the Chappaquidick scandal. [Comp. Spy p253] In FRANK STURGIS' book proposal he claimed that he had inside knowledge as to "what deadly threat caused Senator Ted Kennedy to make that fateful hard right turn at Chappaquidick that killed young Mary Joe Kopechne." HUNT cultivated informers within the Kennedy clan. During the Watergate Hearings, NIXON aide John Dean testified that in November 1971, H.R. Haldeman had a standing order pending with John Dean for 24-hour surveillance on Senator Edward Kennedy. [McCORD Piece of Tape p10] It was revealed during Jack Caulfield's testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee that Tony Ulasewicz was ordered to set up a round-the-clock surveillance of Edward Kennedy. Ulasewicz admits that he was at Chappaquiddick before any journalists arrived. He also seems to have been there before the police detectives assigned to the case. This is confirmed by Sylvia Malm who was staying in Dike House at the time. Dike House was only 150 yards from the scene of the accident. Malm was interviewed by Ulasewicz before the police got to her. The same is true of Ulasewicz's interviews with John Farrar, the scuba diver who pulled out Mary Jo's body from the car. These were only two of many who were interviewed by Ulasewicz just a few hours after the accident had taken place. [John Simpkin JFK Forum 7.23.05] Shortly after HUNT started work for the White House/Special Operations Group, Robert Bennett told him that Clifford de Mott claimed to have derogatory information on the Kennedys. HUNT went to the Technical Services Division and obtained disguise material using the name "Mr. Edward." He was given a wig, a pair of glasses, a speech-altering device, a driver's license, a tape recorder, business cards, miscellaneous identification cards, and a backstopped telephone number. HUNT used the disguise to interview de Clifford Mott in Rhode Island. The FBI:

De Motte stated that on July 26, 1971, he met with an individual who introduced himself as Ed Warren. He had received telephone calls from this individual who claimed that he was contacting De Motte on the recommendation of Robert Bennett of the Robert R. Mullen and Company. He met this individual in a motel immediately adjacent to the airport at Warwick, Rhode Island. They spent several hours in a motel room and WARREN taped most of the conversation. At this time Warren gave to him a business card of Robert Bennett with handwriting on the back which he recognized as that of Robert Bennett. The man said he was working for a group which was doing research on the Kennedy family and the Chappaquidick Island incident. He said that he was working for a group of people whom he described only as investment and industrial people. HUNT had a very anti-Kennedy attitude and asked specific questions as to whether or not De Motte knew anything about pornographic movies being shown at the Kennedy home. He also inquired as to any incidents which might have occurred at parties which he described as drunken orgies. The only information provided to him by De Motte was the fact that (deleted). De Motte explained that WARREN had been referred to him by Bennett because in 1960 he had worked as public relations man for the Yachtsman Hotel which was used to house press people and staff people of the Kennedy campaign group. [FBI 39-4089-1314]

De Motte later

"furnished instant enclosure which he had found among his papers which he had been currently reviewing. He speculated possibly that Albert S.

Paterson may in fact be HUNT who, according to information resulting from Watergate, had allegedly falsified documents in an effort to defame John and Robert Kennedy. De Motte has no reason, other than pure speculation, to identify Patterson as HUNT. The material which De Motte furnished the FBI was received by (Deleted) from (Deleted) and (Deleted) became friends during the Summer of 1969 when both were working for the (Deleted) as Washington, D.C. (Deleted) subsequently transferred to (Deleted)'s Office where he is now an Administrative Assistant. De Motte and (Deleted) have remained close friends and (deleted) note transmitting the enclosures to De Motte included the statement it was being sent for your amusement and amazement.' [FBI 139-4089-2224 5.23.73]

During HUNT V WEBERMAN HUNT was asked:

Q. Did you ever follow the Chappaquidick incident involving Ted Kennedy.

A. To some extent.

Q. Do you know a White House librarian named Schleicher?

A. No.

Q. Did you borrow books from her pertaining to the Chappaquidick incident.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever maintain a file of information about the Kennedy clan, specifically the Chappaquidick incident?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where did you keep that file?

A. The few gleanings that came from DeMott, I think I turned the originals over to Chuck Colson and I kept a skeleton file in my own office in the White House safe, in my then White House office.

Q. Did any members of the White House plumbers spy on Ted Kennedy, to your knowledge?

A. To my knowledge, no.

In August 1971 HUNT and G. Gordon Liddy, another member of the White House/Special Operations Group, were involved in burglarizing the offices of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. Daniel Ellsberg had leaked the classified Pentagon Papers to The New York Times. The Technical Service Division supplied HUNT with support for this and other entries. HUNT was provided with alias documents, disguise material including wig, glasses, and speech alteration device; a Uher stereo tape recorder with Sony microphones, a camera, film and film processing. He also requested a device to record incoming phone calls. The official of the Technical Services Division who provided HUNT with this material knew him only as "Mr. Edward," a staff officer investigating drugs, assigned to the Domestic Contacts Division. The CIA:

1. On December 4, 1972 Mr. Stephen Carter Greenwood was interviewed for the purpose of obtaining full details on his contacts with "Edward" and an associate during the summer months of 1971. Mr. Greenwood has now identified "Edward" as being E. Howard Hunt.

2. Mr. Greenwood advised that in the summer of 1971 he and his section chief were called into the office of the Deputy Division Chief who briefed them to the effect that a disguise, documentation, and other support were to be provided to an individual identified as 'EDWARD.' Greenwood met with 'EDWARD' the following day and made all the necessary arrangements to immediately provide him with a disguise and alias documentation. 'EDWARD' was observed signing his name to three items which required a signature, and he tried a mouth device that was utilized in connection with the operation.

3. Approximately two weeks later 'EDWARD' called to indicate that he needed some help with the disguise glasses. Greenwood is not sure of the timing but he recalls that Mr. Cleo Gephart accompanied him to the meeting because Gephart had been asked to provide Edward with a tape recorder. Gerphart showed Edward how the tape recorder worked then departed from the house without waiting for Greenwood. The latter individual made some adjustment to the glasses, and it was probably at this meeting that EDWARD inquired about a backstopped telephone number and address in New York. [These were not provided] Greenwood indicated that he would have to check with his superiors. Greenwood is not absolutely certain, but it is his best recollection that EDWARD also requested a disguise and alias documentation for an associate.

[CIA FOIA #23 2146-4: Alias GEORGE F. LEONARD, EDWARD JOSEPH WARREN]

The CIA reported:

Mr. HUNT was issued the alias Edward J. Hamilton on September 30, 1960. This name was erroneously recorded at that time on a District of Columbia driver permit as Edward V. Hamilton. Mr. HUNT was supposed to use the District of Columbia driver permit for only one week. With respect to the overall question of pocket litter during that period, Agency records have been destroyed, and there is no specific information in our files relating to the issue...On or about September 26, 1960 Mr. HUNT was issued various unspecified organizational cards in the name of Edward J. Hamilton. We cannot specifically state at this time that a Social Security card was or was not included, but it is likely to have been.

A CIA psychiatrist recalled the meeting during which HUNT and Liddy requested that a psychological profile of Daniel Ellsberg be created:

Later on Mr. Howard Hunt joined the group. Mr. Hunt recognized me, being a former agency employee, and we greeted cordially. Mr. Hunt stated it was his wish to "try Dr. Ellsberg in public." Other comments were made by Mr. Hunt or Mr. Liddy to the effect that the aim would be to render Dr. Ellsberg ineffective or make him the object of pity as a broken man. Mr. Hunt stated that he wished to see data of the sort that "psychiatrists found out about Barry Goldwater in 1964," and he expressed interest in being able to refer in a knowledgeable way to Dr. Ellsberg's oedipal conflicts or castration fears and other similar points...Mr. Hunt also stated that it would be useful for Dr. Ellsberg's first wife to be interviewed and he felt, "You can easily arrange that under an operational alias." It was pointed out that the first Mrs. Ellsberg would be cooperative. At this point Mr. Hunt made some comments in the presence of the group based on his previous acquaintanceship with me and he remained behind and made some further comments expressing a desire that his presence and participation in the meeting not be mentioned at the Agency. After arriving back at the Agency I informed Mr. Hunt by telephone that it was not feasible for me to avoid reporting Mr. Hunt's presence at the meeting. Mr. Hunt expressed regret that this was necessary...."

On August 30, 1971, Fredrick N. Evans / PES circulated a memo about HUNT to AC/CB, C/PSD, DDS/PS, AD/S, C/PSD.

LOUIS TACKWOOD JULY TO AUGUST 1971

During the summer of 1971 evidence suggested HUNT and McCORD were involved in a plan to provoke a state of National Emergency in the United States. The possibility existed that one of the provocateurs contacted by them or by an intermediary, was

Louis Elbert Tackwood (born February 20, 1943). Louis Tackwood was born in February 1943, an illegitimate child, in New Orleans. In 1950 Louis Tackwood moved from New Orleans to Los Angeles where he joined his father, a dope dealer, who was shot and killed by a rival dealer four years later. Tackwood became involved in street crime in L.A. In 1958 Louis Tackwood was committed to a state mental hospital and diagnosed as psychopathic. In 1962 he was arrested for car theft, but was offered immunity from prosecution in return for his cooperation in apprehending other car thieves. Tackwood was arrested at least a dozen times in the next nine years but spent little time in jail. A note on Tackwood's rap sheet stated "defendant worked...as reliable informant." "I had a free hand to do what I wanted," Tackwood told investigative reporters,

"Anything I did was okay. Like saying go out an' commit all the crimes you want to an' if you get busted they'll pull you out." Around 1965 he became involved in political surveillance, working for Sgts. Edward Watkins and Lawrence Brown of SIS. All names used by Tackwood were confirmed to be officers in the specified departments, in fact he provided reporters with correct phone numbers directly into SIS and CCS, as well as a taped telephone conversation with Lawrence Brown. In 1965, just after the Watts riot, Tackwood said the police department came to the conclusion that the Black Muslims were getting "too big, too powerful." He was instructed to make a phone call on August 18, 1965, to the police precinct saying there were guns going in and out of the Muslim mosque. Tackwood said he did so, and immediately "all kinds of police came in and shot the place up." Around 1966 he recalled, he began working with Ron Karenga, at the time when the Black Panthers were beginning to gain strength in Los Angeles. On orders of SIS, Tackwood said, he frequently brought money to Karenga and told him to "off" (kill) Panthers. A main target, he said, was Ellmore (Geronimo) Pratt, the Panther's Southern Chairman. Pratt, however, was never killed. Two Black Panthers, Alprentice Bunchy Carter and John Huggins were slain at UCLA in late 1968, and two members of US, the organization headed by Ron Karenga, were convicted. Louis Tackwood: "My first C.C.S. assignment was when I was liaison between C.S.S. and Ron Karenga's organization US." In 1966 a probation officer wrote: "Los Angeles Police Department officers report that Tackwood in the past worked for them as a reliable informant." Louis Tackwood claimed that in 1969 he was recruited for Criminal Conspiracy Section, Los Angeles Police Department, which was an outgrowth of a special unit to investigate the Robert F. Kennedy assassination, by Ronald G. Farwell, a black member of CCS in charge of monitoring black militant activity. The L.A. Panthers continued to thrive until their headquarters was raided on December 8, 1969. Thirteen of their members were arrested for assault. Tackwood charged that police had planned the raid long in advance with Panther Melvin "Cotton" Smith. Tackwood said he learned from Sgt. Ronald G. Farwell that Smith had been a police informant since 1967. In early 1970 Tackwood said he killed a man who was getting wise to his informing activities. He fled to New Orleans, assured by his police friends, no action would be taken. Louis Tackwood moved to New Orleans in the early 1970's, then returned to Los Angeles in July 1970, after his New Orleans cover had been blown. In 1970 he testified at a murder trial. The prosecutor conceded that his testimony "put the defendant on death row."

MARTIN AND WHITE

By 1971 Louis Tackwood believed he could get rich if he told all he knew about government misconduct to the media. According to Bob Duggan, "Tackwood was a psychopathic liar and a mercenary. The LA Free Press thought it was too hot to handle, so they turned him over to me. And the first thing he did was, in my presence, he called a couple of the agents there. He played the game on both sides for several months." (While Louis Tackwood was in contact with Duggan, he was feeding the Los Angeles Police Department information on him.) Bob Duggan and Marilyn Katz debriefed Tackwood. They arranged for a press conference in mid-September 1971, during which time Tackwood said he had been contacted by two CIA agents when he worked with the FBI on Squad 19 - a special group that was set up to plan disruptions at the Republican Convention, then slated for San Diego. Louis Tackwood stated:

There is a plan right now that is so monstrous that it is pathetic. It entails a detailed plan to blow up the Republican Convention. It has been worked out by the super-agencies...The blame will fall on militant organizations demonstrating at the convention. The President will then be asked to declare a state of national emergency and martial law. Within 48 hours, they will arrest all known militants on the left, and a police state will then exist...I am only giving up two names. There's 'Martin' and there's 'White.' Alright now, 'Martin' was the code name for my contact, and I'm going to tell you he's CIA all the way. Are you ready for this? He was in Dallas when they got Kennedy; he left out of there for the Caribbean. And 'Martin' is in on the cancellation of elections, and some way in on the concentration camp thing. Do you see what I'm saying? Now the control, the man over 'Martin' is 'White.' I only heard a little about him, but they say he is the money man, nobody's over him but the top dogs. 'Martin' and 'White' that's all I'm going to give you now. This is my life insurance.

Tackwood told The Washington Post he:

...sat in on meetings where plans were made by federal and local agents to disrupt the 1972 San Diego Republican convention and blame it on the leftists. The object: To create a situation which would permit the President to invoke special emergency powers leading to the arrest and detention of political activists throughout the country; that the C.C.S. had prior knowledge of last years Marin County Courthouse shootout and George Jackson's fatal escape attempt from San Quentin - and allowed both to proceed despite certainty that lives would be lost.

On November 22, 1971, Louis Tackwood testified in the Los Angeles Panther 13 trial. He said that Melvin Cotton Smith, the principal witness, was a police informant and had not turned State's evidence as the police suggested. His testimony was preceded by that of Ronald Farwell who said that he first met Louis Tackwood in early 1970, and had used him as an informer against the Black Panthers.

In June 1972, eight months after Louis Tackwood went public, it was revealed that HUNT had used the name "White" during Watergate. His name appeared in Eugenio Martinez address book as "White H." McCORD told the police that his name was "Martin" when he was arrested at Watergate. [DC PD arrest rec.] The CIA reported:

At approximately 7:45 p.m., Mr. Arnold L. Parham, a Special Agent of the FBI Field Office in Alexandria, Virginia, called to request a name trace on 'James Martin' who had been arrested while demonstrating at Watergate. This call was taken by a security duty officer, and referred to the responsible senior security officer for night calls. [Memo Cary to Helms Message Pref. #480889]

During the Watergate investigation, the FBI questioned two secretaries from Robert R. Mullen and Company, Lynn Jones, and Diana Konowalski. They stated that prior to Watergate, HUNT frequently traveled to the West Coast and that each time he went, he would tell the secretaries that he was going to San Diego, to check on security of the convention site. Most or all of these trips took place while HUNT was working as a White House consultant. On a majority of these trips HUNT was accompanied by Gordon Liddy. It is known from a review of toll records, credit card charges, and airplane travel tickets that HUNT and Liddy made no such trips to San Diego.

Another FBI document stated

Both advised that HUNT received numerous telephone calls on his private telephone line from person who identified themselves only as 'Bernie' (Possibly BERNARD BARKER): Don (Possibly Donald Segretti) and Tom, who remains unidentified. Both said Tom called from pay phone on the street because they always heard automobile traffic in the background. All three left messages for HUNT to either return the call, or that so and so called. Only Lynn Jones was first instructed to answer the telephone with 'Hello.' She was instructed to accept all messages for Ed Warren. Jones advised HUNT traveled a lot to Miami, Florida, beginning Winter of 1971. Then, toward Spring, he went twice a month. He went on numerous trips to West Coast telling her that he had to go to San Diego to check on security of the convention site and the hotel. Jones never made reservations for HUNT in San Diego, but did make several requests through their Los Angeles client, Howard Hughes, to make reservations for HUNT. HUNT always wanted a suite with two bedrooms. On several occasions, after she would tell HUNT that his reservations were in order, it never failed that within the hour, a man they knew as Gordon Liddy, would appear with his suitcases and depart with HUNT. HUNT told them that Liddy always traveled with him. On several occasions HUNT would be away for three to four days at a time. Sometimes when they didn't know where he was they would contact his office at the White House and would be told by some unidentified secretary that HUNT was probably traveling under his assumed name. They could not explain this, but one time HUNT told them that he did use the name Ed Warren. On a return trip from Los Angeles, one time Liddy came to the office looking for HUNT. Liddy had his hand bandaged. When HUNT was alone the two secretaries asked HUNT what had happened to Liddy and he told them that while in San Diego, checking the building of the new hotel, Liddy accidentally rested his hand on a hot rivet. Later the two girls learned from Robert Wait, that HUNT had told Wait the true story about Liddy trying to prove how powerful his mind was that it could overcome pain. [FBI 139-4089-890, 892]

In 1993 Mrs. William Tackwood was contacted: "Ain't nobody seen that bastard. I have no idea when I last saw him. You'll have to check with someone else. We don't even have anything to do with him, honey. The boy ain't nothing but a con artist, you just wasting you're time. We haven't seen him." When contacted in June 1993 Louis Tackwood was asked if the men he had met with were in fact HUNT and McCORD:

It was HUNT and McCORD and Segretti was there too. I recognized them from their photographs that were in the newspapers after Watergate. They were there because of something to do with the psychiatrist on Wilshire Boulevard. After Watergate I disappeared. They were after me pretty bad. Nobody could ask me if it was them.

Louis Tackwood was asked what he had been doing since the early 1970's. He responded: "Trying to keep out of trouble..." He was asked about an arrest for having made bomb threat and having faked a police report. He said,

That had to do with the Pope's visit. I got arrested just before the Pope got here, and was let go the Monday after he left. It was the Fall of 1987. I didn't have anything in for anybody. They was looking for someone else - someone in the Tony Alamo group. They're up on the Ventura highway. Three months later, 150 policeman, at six in the morning, raided the Alamos.

At this point Mrs. Tackwood engaged her husband in conversation. He said "Hold on a second" then told his wife, "I ain't been foolin' ...you ain't got the right to say that. I never set those people up. Can I call you back?" The telephone conversation ended. Louis Tackwood had infiltrated the Alamo group, and his arrest was part of his cover. On September 20, 2008, state and federal officials raided Alamo's compound as part of a two-year investigation into allegations of child abuse and child pornography. On September 25, 2008, Alamo himself was arrested in Flagstaff, Arizona, on a federal warrant charging him with violating the Mann Act, a federal statute enacted to stop the trafficking of women or girls across state lines, over a period from March 1994 through October 2005. At the end of a trial which included several women testifying that they had been sexually abused by Alamo, some having been forced to become his “wives” as young as eight years old, Alamo was found guilty on July 24, 2009, on ten counts of taking underage girls across state lines for sex. On November 13, he was sentenced to 175 years in prison and also was fined $250,000. Tackwood was the star witness against him.

G. Gordon Liddy admitted the White House/Special Operations Group planned kidnappings at the Republican Convention:

Q. Did Mr. HUNT ever indicate to you that any of the men with whom he was working, some of the individuals who were Cubans, had any previous experience in assassination or killings or the like or had-

A. (Interposing) He represented to me. Let me back up to give you the circumstances so that my answer will be more understandable.

Q. All right.

A. Prior to receiving authorization to go ahead on what has become known as the Gemstone Plan, Mr. HUNT and I were both engaged in recruiting efforts to man the table of organization that we had drawn up should we receive the go-ahead.

At the time, the Gemstone Plan included abduction of leaders, radical elements which had proclaimed themselves ready to, and intended to, disrupt the Republican National Convention, at the time scheduled for San Diego, in a manner similar to that done by Students for a Democratic Society to the Democratic Party in Chicago the time before.

Mr. HUNT and I both traveled to Miami, Florida, in connection with these recruiting efforts. There, I was introduced to some persons who were Cuban who then introduced me to additional persons who were Cuban, bearing in mind I do not speak Spanish. Mr. HUNT does.

There was a conversation in both English and the Spanish language. And I looked to Mr. HUNT for the gist of what was going on.

And in any event, we had perhaps a dozen men who were willing to come on board in this connection. And Mr. HUNT, to impress upon me the high caliber of these individuals, stated that they had accounted among them for a substantial number of deaths [22], including two who had hanged someone from a beam in a garage.

Q. Did HUNT indicate at any time that any of these individuals were connected in some way with organized crime or whatever?

A. He indicated that these, not he, but these Cuban individuals were connected in some way with organized crime.

Q. Had he ever discussed their connection, or what was the nature of it?

A. No.

Q. Like were these men who were in an enforcement arm of organized crime, so to speak?

A. Well, he certainly did not represent them as law enforcement officers. [Liddy Depo. HUNT v. WEBERMAN]

John Dean wrote that OPERATION GEMSTONE was to have what Liddy called another "operational arm" consisting of secret operatives who could be used to drug and kidnap anti-NIXON demonstrators and other dissidents. Dean wrote that Liddy referred to kidnapping as "surgical relocation activities." [Dean, Blind Ambition, p81] Jeb Magruder wrote: "It was, as John Dean said later, mind boggling. It included mugging squads, kidnapping, sabotage, the use of prostitutes, break-ins, electronic surveillance and wiretapping." Jeb Magruder disclosed that G. Gordon Liddy "explained that the proposed kidnap squads would seize radicals, and inject them with some kind of drug that would render them unconscious..." [Magruder, Jeb, An American Life, pgs. 170-180] HUNT testified: "One of the proposals was to grab a couple of the hippie leaders and take them down to Mexico. Mr. Liddy said he knew all about that, because he had headed operations - intercepted for the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, and he knew the back alleys across the border." [HUNT test. in HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT 1984 p82]

THE WHITE HOUSE TAPES

Dean: So I came over and Liddy laid out a million dollar plan that was the most incredible thing I have ever laid my eyes on: all in codes and involved black bag operations, kidnapping, providing prostitutes, uh, to weaken the opposition, bugging ah, mugging teams. It was just an incredible thing. (March 21, 1973)

NIXON: Dean actually could answer it in another way. He could say, look, I was the counsel. I was sitting in on it in that fashion...I did not discuss it with Haldeman because - because it was turned off, I didn't report it.

Ehrlichman: The way you get at that then: 'Well, Mr. Dean, you're responsible for keeping the President out of legal trouble, aren't you?' 'Yes sir.' 'You sat in a meeting where a man named Liddy proposed a million dollars worth of kidnapping and wiretapping and assassination and on and on and on, and you didn't jump in a taxicab and rush back to the White House and burst in on Bob Haldeman and say, you know what those crazy guys on the committee are doing?'

HEMMING found it hard to believe that someone in the Los Angeles Police Department would introduce Louis Tackwood to two CIA agents who immediately told him their life stories:

HUNT and McCORD are talking to a fuckin' nigger, and they are confessing? What was he doing, sucking on their dicks, or what? Or are they just baring their souls? What does he have, a priest collar on? These are admissions against self-interest. Tackwood had to have heard this information from other sources.

On December 16, 1971, HUNT was in Dallas, Texas, to arrange a magazine interview for retired General Paul D. Harkins. HUNT called his office in the White House from a pay telephone. [FBI 139-4089-1317] HUNT told the Rockefeller Commission that he had never been to Dallas: "May have changed planes in Dallas in 1960 without leaving airport. On way to Mexico City."

THE PLOT TO KILL JACK ANDERSON DECEMBER 1971
BOB WOODWARD'S VERSION

HUNT was involved in a plot to kill Jack Anderson from December 1971 to January 1972.

From February 15 to April 12, 1972, “personal surveillances” were conducted by the CIA on Jack Anderson and member of his staff (Les Whitten, Britt Hume and Mr. Spear). The physical surveillances consisted only of watching the targets and involved no breaking, entry or wire tapping. Apparently, the physical surveillance occurred after Jack Anderson’s series of “tilt toward Pakistan” stories. The physical surveillances were authorized by Helms and conducted by the CIA’s Office of Security. (The Office of Security was headed by Howard Osborn for 1967 to 1973). NARA Record Number: 104-10107-10031

In the September 21, 1975, issue of The Washington Post Robert Woodward reported HUNT had told associates that ...he was ordered in December 1971, or January 1972, to assassinate syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, according to reliable sources. According to the sources, HUNT told his former CIA associates that the order was canceled at the last minute - but only after a plan had been devised to make Anderson's death look accidental. His alleged plan involved the use of a poison to be obtained from a former CIA physician, said sources, who added that the poison was a variety that would leave no trace during a routine medical examination or autopsy.

HUNT feared an investigation of the break-in would lead to the disclosure of the assassination plan. "The identity of the former CIA doctor, and the reason the assassination was called off, could not be determined." The poison HUNT was going to use on Jack Anderson could either be ingested or absorbed through the skin. Jack Anderson's steering wheel was to be dusted with this contact poison so it would appear he had a heart attack while driving. The ensuing automobile accident would obscure the circumstances of the journalist's death. (After Lee Bowers died his physician believed that he had had a heart attack.) HUNT:

I have heard from the CIA that there was a physician who apparently was involved in that line of work, that they once attempted it, that if it's put on the steering wheel of a car the drug would have some sort of hallucinatory effect." [HUNT v. WEBERMAN Depo 6.77 p17]

Jack Anderson initially reacted to the story of the assassination plot with disbelief, but filed a multimillion dollar lawsuit against the NIXON Administration. HUNT later identified the CIA Technical Services Division man as Dr. Edward Gunn. Dr. Edward Mansfield Gunn was born in Providence, R.I., and moved to Hilton Head Island in 1973 from Chevy Chase, Md. He graduated from Syracuse University Medical School in 1939 and served in the Pacific in the Army during World War II. After World War II, he did medical documentary films for the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology. Dr. Edward Gunn was an expert at poisoning people. HUNT told the Church Committee: "He was known in the Agency as Manny Gunn. He became known to me as a sort of unorthodox practitioner of medicine in the sense that if you needed something, some recherché medical information, you went to Manny Gunn and he provided it. It develops now that in recent months they say that he knew a good deal more about poisons than I believed him to know." When Cuban exile Rolando Cubela was looking for some small "exotic" weapon--a dart gun, perhaps--he could use with deadly effect in close quarters. Cubela, a medical doctor, told the CIA he was sure they could come up with some clever "technical means." The CIA agents in the Operation Division of the Office of Medical Services worked through the night and produced a ball-point pen--a Paper Mate--rigged with a hypodermic syringe. The needle was "so fine" Doctor Edward Gunn of CIA Medical Services later boasted to the inspector general, "that the victim would hardly feel it when it was inserted--he compared it with the scratch from a shirt with too much starch." Cubela was to be told that he could load the pen with Blackleaf 40, a fatal nicotine-based insecticide available at the time on the shelves of hardware stores.

In April 1962 William Harvey met with John Rosselli in New York. He picked up a batch of poison pills, designed to be dropped into Castro's tea or coffee, from Dr. Gunn, the chief of the operations division of the CIA's Office of Medical Services. Then he drove to Miami and delivered them to Rosselli. Contacted in August 1993, Dr. Edward Gunn refused comment. [Gunn Edward E. telephone 703-680-1826 Washington Monthly, Dec, 1995 by Evan Thomas] Gunn died December 26, 1999. HUNT claimed he consulted with Dr. Edward Gunn at the request of Charles Colson "to explore means of drugging Jack Anderson to discredit him by rendering him incoherent before a public appearance," not to discuss ways of poisoning him. [SSCIA Book IV p134; Wash. Post 9.21.73 p1; Wash. Star 9.22.63]

Baron: Did Colson, at any point in the first conversation explicitly mention the possibility that Anderson should be assassinated of that you might --

HUNT: No.

Baron: How about considering assassination.

HUNT: Absolutely not.

Baron: Not even in the sense of contingency planning?

HUNT: No. The only reference I've ever seen to it has been in the Washington Post stories.

Liebengood: In one of Bob Woodward's stories he refers to three separate sources of his as having the impression that you had been inquiring into the prospect of assassinating Jack Anderson. Do you know who those sources might be and where they might have gotten the impression that you were considering assassination?

HUNT: "I have no idea. It is possible that Dr. Gunn may have received that impression or achieved that perception. I thought also that Gordon Liddy may have done some talking when he was a prisoner in the D.C. Jail, but I have no personal recollection of ever discussing the matter outside Colson, Liddy, and myself.

HUNT told the SSCIA:

That there came a time, to the best of my recollection, in late December, or sometime in January, or possibly even February 1972, when Charles Colson, then Special Counsel to the President, called me into his office. Mr. Colson at that juncture was -- appeared rather nervous. He, as you know, had a common wall with President NIXON'S suite in the Old Executive Office Building, and although he did not glance in that direction, my impression was he had been with the President not too long before. He said that in effect, now I'm not making direct quotes, but what he indicated to me was that Mr. Anderson had become a great thorn in the side of the President...He was agitated when he called me in, sort of talking to me and rifling through papers on his desk, which was very much unlike him, and the inference that I drew from that was that he had just had a conversation with the President. So when I accepted this assignment, I assumed, as I usually do with Colson, that he was either reflecting the desires of the Chief Executive, or else that as a prescient staff officer, was attempting to find a solution to a problem that was troubling his chief...I want to say that I don't know what specific incident triggered the White House reaction, whether it was the Pakistan story, or what it was. I can't relate it to any particular thing. So in due course, in the next four days, I got in touch with retired CIA physician whose name is Dr. Edward Gunn. I knew he'd retired, but I also knew that he had been involved in certain unorthodox aspects of medicine, physiological research and, although I can't pinpoint it now, I believe I must have been aware that he had some knowledge of the unorthodox administration of behavior changing or altering substances. But in any event I got in touch with Doctor Gunn, who at that point had just left the White House and moved over to the Committee to Reelect the President. Dr. Gunn met with Liddy and myself in the Old Hay-Adams Grill, and I told Dr. Gunn that -- well I can't recall whether I introduced Mr. Liddy by his true name or by some sort of alias for the moment, but in any event, I indicated to Dr. Gunn that this was a person of confidence and he could feel free to speak freely with me and with Mr. Liddy.

The crux of what I directed in Dr. Gunn was the following: I said we are interested in altering the normal behavior pattern of a particular targeted individual for a brief period of time to make him appear incoherent and rambling during a public appearance. I am quite sure I didn't indicate radio, much less television. What had his Agency experience been in this matter? Had he ever done anything like this before?

Dr. Gunn said 'Well, there are a couple of way of doing the thing now.' Oh, I think I specified hallucinogens. I said 'The only kind of which I've heard was L.S.D.' and I said, 'Oh I am sure there are many other kinds,' and he said, 'Well, what we've done in the past, we have administered it a couple of ways. We painted the steering wheel of a car for absorption through the palms of the hand.' He said, 'We put it on a car door handle.' He said, 'We have switched some medicines, we have made a pill to simulate one of the prescription drugs that a particular targeted individual was taking, and of course, there's always the old simple method of dropping a pill in a guy's cocktail.'

I didn't ask for the names of these substances. I didn't ask him for access to drugs. I did not ask Dr. Edward Gunn to procure any drugs, for this reason, that Gordon Liddy had been a Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, just before he joined the White House, and I felt confident, although I didn't confide this in Dr. Gunn, that if the time came when any controlled substances were needed that Mr. Liddy could secure what was necessary through a secure source within the Treasury Department, because I knew that Dr. Gunn was retired from the CIA.

So in any case, having listened to what Dr. Gunn had to say, and there was no dialogue, it was really a monologue on his part, I asked him certain information and he supplied it, we continued our lunch and broke up. Dr. Gunn departed. Mr. Liddy and I walked back to our respective offices and, on the way back, to the best of my recollection, we discussed the matter and one or the other of us pointing out the impracticality of utilizing administration methods indicated or described by Mr. Gunn.

It was wintertime then, and neither of us knew whether Jack Anderson drove his car or whether he had a chauffeur. My guess would have been, I suppose, that he had a chauffeur...if he drove his own car chances would be that he would be wearing gloves in the wintertime. If the job were to be done in the summertime, if in fact the job were to be done, the chances are his palms would be sweaty. So that thing went right out the window right away. Secondly, this business of substituting a pill was highly impractical and we could have certainly determined somehow where Jack Anderson lived, but to perform an entry operation simply to put one or two pills in a bottle seemed highly impractical. It was my understanding that Jack Anderson had a rather large family and how you would go clandestinely into a medicine cabinet with a household full of people and pore over all the drugs and the pharmacopoeia assortments there until you found one that Jack Anderson normally administered to himself a brief period of time before his radio broadcast, of course, was the height of infeasibility.

We got around to the third, more routine method of administering a drug that is simply dropping a pill into a man's cocktail glass and I had always understood that Mr. Anderson was a Mormon; from my employment at Mullen and Company where I was associated with the Mormons, I understood they were very abstemious, they would even touch Coca-Cola. By the time we left our respective offices, there was nothing left of the kind of concept at all.

Either that day, or the following day, we reported to Mr. Colson that I had met with a CIA physician. He had described some CIA experiences to me, and in terms of what Mr. Colson was thinking about, it was impractical, and we should just forget about it. It was something that had taken up an hour and a half or two hours of my time and there was nothing to it. That was it.

[HUNT was asked about his fear that some other member of Anderson's family might get the drug].

Oh yes, certainly. In the medicine cabinet thing, he had a large family and several people were on -- if they were on pills, it would have been of course, ridiculous. To go more deeply into that particular point before we leave it, what I gathered from the talk with Mr. Gunn was that we really needed to have a Subject or a target in a controlled situation. We almost had to have him under clinical conditions to make sure that A. He got a measured amount of the substance, whatever it might be, and that the timing was just right, and that he would be able to sit down or stand up at the lecture platform in apparently good condition, that at least he would be navigable to get there before he began to talk and make a fool of himself. None of these conditions pertained at all, so the whole thing never advance beyond the simply the information gathering phase of it. There was never any proposal or any further reference made to it...

Baron continued:

Baron: Did Dr. Gunn volunteer any information or advice on how Jack Anderson might be killed or seriously disabled, as opposed to rendered incoherent?

HUNT: No. Of course the name Jack Anderson was never mentioned, but you're speaking of the target individual.

Mr. Baron: That right. So there was no discussion of techniques of assassination or physical disablement.

HUNT: Not at all. I might add, this has not been brought up before, I inferred at that time that at least some of the techniques that Dr. Gunn was describing had been tried out in North Africa. Algeria sticks in my mind.

COLSON'S VERSION

In an interview with the SSCIA Staff, Charles Colson said he did not remember this incident, and he "never discussed drugging or killing Anderson with HUNT, and allowed for the possibility that you might have been confusing discussions that the two of you had, on the effects of L.S.D in the context of considering using L.S.D against Daniel Ellsberg, or re-inducing an L.S.D trip experience with Daniel Ellsberg. To discredit him." HUNT recalled "something generally along those lines with reference to Ellsberg that we were discussing. This was of course prior to the Fielding entry. We were talking generally about -- what is it called where you 'trip out' again?

Baron: Flashback.

HUNT: Whether these spontaneous flashbacks could be induced, and of course one way to do this was to determine what the guy's psychiatric history was, to determine what his experience had been in the past. But that was not relevant to Jack Anderson at all. But that in my mind would set the background for Colson's later request to look into the matter of hallucinogenics with reference to Anderson.

Baron: But you are quite clear in your own mind that you did discuss with Colson Jack Anderson specifically as a target?

HUNT: Well, he discussed it with me. He named the target. I had no reason, certainly, to go into a thing like that with Dr. Gunn. I have no animus against Jack Anderson, certainly nothing compared to what the White House had at the time.

HUNT and G. Gordon Liddy met with Dr. Edward Gunn in the Old Hay- Grill. As stated, HUNT told Dr. Edward Gunn that G. Gordon Liddy was okay. G. Gordon Liddy explained:

Q. Did HUNT ever discuss any assassination plots?

A. Well, there came a time in 1972, I think it was around February, when Mr. HUNT came to me concerning the journalist Jack Anderson.

Now, again, to give you a little background to make my answer understandable, Mr. Anderson had published in a column the fact that as Messrs. Brezhnev, Kosygin and other high officials of the Soviet Union traveled about in their limousines on the streets of Moscow speaking to one another over their car telephones, believing themselves to be speaking privately. The United States was, in fact, listening in.

Richard Helms, then Director of Central Intelligence, learned that Mr. Anderson had acquired this knowledge, that he knew this was going on, and took him to lunch and asked him, please, not to publish it. And my understanding is that Mr. Anderson promised not to.

Recently, when I have had occasion to speak to Mr. Anderson on the subject, he has said that he did not publish it until he had seen it published elsewhere first. However, he has never been able to show me, or anyone else, where it was published first. Following that incident in which, while everybody was pretty upset, nobody suggested taking any action against Mr. Anderson, Mr. HUNT came to me, and he said, "Anderson has now gone too far. He has just identified and caused the death or imminent death under torture of one of our human assets abroad." And he, HUNT, had been charged by his principals, meaning his superiors at the White House, with conferring with me and with someone from the CIA who was represented as retired, namely Dr. Gunn, as to - how best to prevent Mr. Anderson from repeating his behavior.

The conference was held in the then existing downstairs luncheon room of the Hay Adams Hotel, now no longer in existence. And Mr. HUNT brought up that L.S.D. business again. Dr. Gunn rejected it on technical grounds. I suggested that the only way to effectively stop Mr. Anderson, was to kill him. Mr. HUNT and Dr. Gunn agreed. The remainder of the conversation consisted of how we ought to do it best.

The conclusion was that the Cuban assets were to stage a mugging in Washington which would be fatal to Anderson.

Q. All right. Now if Mr. HUNT had said he had merely discussed with you and Dr. Gunn nothing more than a discreditation of Mr. Anderson, would that be correct or incorrect?

A. That would be absolutely incorrect.

Q. The story reflecting this situation occurred in The Washington Post under an article by Woodward and Bernstein. Are you aware of that article, and were you surprised to see that that had come to light?

A. I was in prison at the time. The article was made available to me. I read it at the time. And I was surprised to see that it was incorrect in that it did not narrate the incident as I have just narrated it to you, which is what actually happened. [HUNT v. WEBERMAN Liddy Depo. 9.30.80.]

WAS HUNT PLANNING TO USE POISON OR LSD?

During the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial G. Gordon Liddy stated:

HUNT was talking of putting it [LSD] on the steering wheel, and he said somebody may be wearing gloves, there might be a chauffeur, it just would not work. I said, 'Well, now, wait a minute. If our task is to guarantee,' and that was the operative word, 'that Mr. Anderson will not conduct - behave this was way again, the only way you are going to guarantee somebody is not going to repeat a particular kind of behavior is to kill him...' Both Dr. Gunn and HUNT agreed immediately and the remainder of the conference was how to go about it. We discussed with Mr. Gunn aspirin roulette in which one takes a single tablet of deadly poison, packs it in a Bayer aspirin jar, we place it in the man's medicine chest, and one day he gets the tablet and that's that. HUNT referred to aspirin roulette...We discussed Dr. Gunn's suggestion of the use of an automobile to hit Mr. Anderson's automobile when it was in a turn in the circle, up near Chevy Chase. There is a way that apparently had been known by the CIA that if you hit a car at just the right speed and angle, it will strip and burn and kill the occupant...But what I suggested is we just kill him. And they both agreed that that would be the way to go about it, and the task would be assigned to Cuban assets.

During the second HUNT v. SPOTLIGHT trial HUNT was reminded of his testimony on July 11, 1984. HUNT: "About the only other thing we tried [to do to Anderson] is to put a couple of pills in a prescription flask or vial. And he [Gunn] said, eventually, when the patient or the target gets around to taking one of these pills, it will have an effect on him." [HUNT'S testimony July 11, 1984, p76]

The SSCIA mistakenly accepted COLSON and HUNT'S conflicting statements that the action against Jack Anderson was one that would discredit him by slipping him an L.S.D mickey rather than Liddy's contention that it was a murder plot.

In December 1971 HUNT asked Peter Jessup, senior Agency officer with the National Security Council Staff in the Executive Office Building, to run traces on certain figures in Costa Rica and Guatemala.

Jessup has submitted a memorandum dated 31 May 1973 (received in O/IG on 6 June) stating that Howard Hunt, "submitted various names for Headquarters traces of certain Latin Americans, not in a sealed envelope. This was handled orally and by telephone I advised the chief of the appropriate division that they were being forwarded and to consult with the DDP about the propriety of responding. I also telephoned the DDP. I then wrote my own memo to General HAIG calling his attention to the fact that an individual--I named HUNT--was tracing foreign nationals without reference to the NSC Staff.

7. Mr. Broe (then chief, WH Division) has no recollection of any name traces handled for Hunt other than the one forwarded over his (Broe's) name on 13 December 1971. He recalls discussing that with his deputy Jim Flannery. He has discussed this with Flannery, who has checked the records of WH and has found no other such records. At this time it seems unlikely that we will answer the questions this presents. Was Hunt's out-of-channel request (which WE put back in channel) the one Jessup recalls, with embellishments? Or did Hunt make additional requests, through channels, that were not serviced? We have the one recorded name trace, on a Costa Rican, and no others.

[SDB MFR 6.9.73 CIA FOIA 5899 (Att to Doc #4048)] HUNT was interested in Costa Rican millionaire Jorge Gonzalez Marten, who had formed the Costa Rican National Independent Party that month. Gonzalez was reported to be a millionaire, with various holdings in Costa Rica and an identified connection with IBM. He lived in the U.S. for a number of years. [Broe Memo 6.4.73 FOIA 5850 (Att to Doc #4048)] The Independent National Party won a surprising 11% of the vote in the 1974 election. The names of the other individuals HUNT requested traces on were never revealed.

The CIA created a file on HUNT'S activities entitled "The Mr. Edward" file. This file was maintained outside the normal CIA filing system. A bigot list (the CIA's term for the treatment of especially sensitive cases, restricting access to a limited number of persons) was created for HUNT'S activities. The CIA admitted to seven contacts with HUNT after August 31, 1971. March to May 1973, HUNT requested a lockpicker from the CIA EEAB Chief; in late 1971 HUNT requested wiretap experts; late 1971 he requested aid in an entry operation; in October 1971, he asked the CIA to locate Vietnam war documents; on December 8, 1971, he asked for a CIA name trace and on October 15, 1971, he met with Richard Helms to discuss an unknown matter. The CIA was aware of the covert activities of the White House /Special Operations Group.

FORGED BAY OF PIGS DOCUMENTS

HUNT placed a forged document in the CIA's Bay of Pigs file, which alleged that President John F. Kennedy had made a secret agreement with Fidel Castro to destroy the Bay of Pigs Brigade. On July 1, 1971, Charles Colson telephoned HUNT and asked: "What do you think of the idea of declassifying a lot of these old documents now?" HUNT answered: "I think it's a fine idea. I'm all in favor of it and I would particularly like to see the Bay of Pigs stuff declassified, including the alleged agreement Castro made with JFK." Charles Colson understood that HUNT was referring to a document HUNT had forged, and responded: "Because you were part of it, and knew it was a phony?" HUNT said "Sure." In 1978 HUNT was asked if he had forged this document: "I don't know what Colson was saying when he said, 'Because you were a part of it, and knew it was a phony'. To this day I don't know what he was talking about. I just said 'Sure' and let it go at that." Charles Colson ended his telephone conversation with HUNT by asking him: "Weren't you the guy who told me, maybe the last time we were up to your house for dinner, that if the truth ever came out about Kennedy and the Bay of Pigs, that it would just destroy them?" In a memorandum from Charles Colson, to NIXON'S Chief of Staff, H.R. Haldeman, regarding HUNT, Charles Colson suggested that HUNT and H.R. Haldeman should meet: "I had forgotten when I talked to you that he was the CIA mastermind on the Bay of Pigs. He told me a long time ago that if the truth were even [sic] known, Kennedy would be destroyed."

HUNT AND LUCIEN CONEIN

In late 1971 HUNT forged cables that concerned the involvement of President Kennedy in the assassination in 1963 of South Vietnamese strongman, Ngo Dinh Diem. HUNT was asked:

Q. Did you in fact forge, or cause to be forged, cable traffic linking John Kennedy with the Diem assassination?

A. I did.

Q. You did in fact forge documents?

A. I did.

Q. This was at what time period?

A. Yes, because Colson asked me to.

Gordon Liddy was asked:

Q. Do you know whether or not HUNT any skill, training or expertise or has undertaken any study of the art of forgery of documents?

A. I know that he did forge at least one document. That was a cable. And he did so employing the use of a Xerox machine. And that was the summer of 1971.

HUNT consulted with General Edward Landsdale, and with Lucien Conein, in regard to the wording of the cable. A few months later, Lucien Conein granted an interview to NBC-TV news during which he tied President Kennedy to the death of Ngo Dinh Diem. When questioned about this interview after Watergate, Lucien Conein said he had received permission to speak with the media from the CIA's Office of Security. When CIA Office of Security Director Howard Osborn spoke with Lucien Conein on January 31, 1972, he asked him how it came he appeared on the December 22, 1971, NBC television program. Lucien Conein stated he had been contacted by HOWARD HUNT, White House Public Relations and Security Consultant, and had been interviewed by HUNT in his own home extensively as to his role in the entire affair: "Osborn noted: I know this is true since HOWARD HUNT phoned me and asked how he could contact Mr. Conein in late November 1971." Lucien Conein told Osborn that "Mr. HUNT, speaking for his White House superiors, stated that they felt his appearance could be helpful, providing he was properly briefed. Mr. HUNT indicated that he would 'take care of coordinating this with the Agency' and provided Mr. Conein with a file of some 24 cables as a briefing aid to refresh his memory." [CIA OS Memo D/CI] Lucien Conein denied that HUNT had shown him any forged cables, despite HUNT'S testimony to the contrary.

Lucien Emile Conein (born, November 29, 1919), a veteran of the French Foreign Legion, described his military career: "Starting as a recruit 1 September 1941, was advanced to a Non-Commissioned Officer in 1942, and later chosen for Officer Candidate School February 1943. Graduated and commissioned 2nd Lieutenant February (OSS) on July 26, 1943. Served European Theater of Operations October 1943, to December 1944. Parachuted behind enemy lines in civilian clothes, France, August 1944. Transferred China, Burma, India Theater, February 1945. Assigned German occupation February 1947 to August 1953, as an intelligence officer. 1953 to 1956 served as U.S. Military advisory group, Vietnam, as intelligence and operations officer." Lucien Conein returned to Indochina as an advisor to the French, who were at war with the Army of National Liberation of General Ho Chi Minh. "From 1957 to 1959, assigned as battalion commander U.S. Special Forces. Commanded an airborne battalion, Fort Bragg, North Carolina. From August 1959 to September 1961 Chief, Foreign Intelligence, Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence, Department of Army Mission in Teheran, Iran."

Lucien Conein joined the CIA in December 1961, where he became Chief of Station in Saigon. There, he had liaison with other U.S. officials (up to the Ambassadorial level), and Vietnamese officials including the Prime Minister. Lucien Conein became a leader of an assassination squad under Colonel Edwin Lansdale, and put General Ngo Dinh Diem in power. Diem ruled South Vietnam until 1963, when Lucien Conein helped Vietnamese Generals overthrow him. In 1968 Lucien Conein left Vietnam and retired from the Armed Forces and CIA. He was back in 1969 engaged in a private business venture. The CIA stated: "Lucien Conein was formerly assigned to this Agency in military status from 1943 until 1961, and as a Contract Type A from 1961, until medical retirement in 1968. His file was annotated with the statement that the Domestic Operations Division could not utilize Lucien Conein in any capacity." Lucien Conein reportedly was the liaison between the OSS and the Corsican brotherhood, a mafia-style organization that was involved in heroin trafficking.

In late 1971 Lucien Conein was contacted by the White House, and in early 1972 he was hired by the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs as a consultant with its intelligence section. At the end of the year, he was given a permanent position with the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. The Rockefeller Report stated that "Beginning in late 1970, the CIA used one of its proprietary companies to recruit Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs agents...the CIA recruited 19 Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs agents." [RR p39]

When NIXON abolished the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs in 1973, and created the Drug Enforcement Administration by Presidential Proclamation, Lucien Conein headed the Special Operations Group of the Drug Enforcement Administration. Lucien Conein began to recruit former CIA agents as Drug Enforcement Administration /Special Operations Group contract employees. He had a staff of 19 individuals, 14 of whom were former CIA employees. Colson stated that the Drug Enforcement Administration / Special Operations Group was responsible for kidnapping and assassination. Wallace Shanley recalled,

I know that Gordon Liddy went down to Miami to recruit talent for the Drug Enforcement Administration's Special Operations Group. STURGIS was one of these potential assassins. I don't have any written documentation on this. I was working with these guys - Lucien Conein was one of them.

The Drug Enforcement Administration / Special Operations Group assassination program was headquartered in Mexico. Charles Colson stated that Senator Lowell Weicker "should look into the surroundings of the death an Italian named [Lucien] Sarti, who was a major narcotics trafficker shot in Mexico about two years ago. Sarti bought his way out of jail and got to Mexico where he was shot. Colson said this case will show the other half of Conein's operation." HEMMING told this researcher:

Lucien Conein was organizing an assassination program. It was called Deacon One and Deacon Two. BERNARDO De TORRES was involved. De TORRES was planning to assassinate Juan Balaguer. That was off the record.

HUNT AND ROLANDO MARTINEZ

Rolando Martinez (born July 8, 1922) was recruited by the CIA in 1961 to engage in maritime activity against the Castro regime. The CIA reported: "Brief data on Members/Contents in PB PRIME (MRR) #125 Rolando Martinez. Resides in Miami Beach, Florida, U.S.A. Works boat for MRR DOJ March 1962. Member of the Naval Section of MRR. DOI May 10, 1962 (60)." Rolando Martinez was in charge of a site in the Florida Keys used for these operations. The CIA: "With a change in operational policy, these missions were no longer required, and in the mid-1960's the project under which Rolando Martinez operated [PB PRIME] was canceled." Rolando Martinez was retained at $100 a month as a part time informant. Circa December 1971 Rolando Martinez mentioned to his CIA Case Officer that HUNT, who was working for the White House, had been in Miami. The Rockefeller Commission reported:

The Case Officer later told him that he had run a Station name check on HUNT, and that there was no information respecting HUNT'S employment at the White House. Rolando Martinez took the response to mean that HUNT was on a secret mission of which the Miami Station was not to know. On the strength of his past experience maintaining CIA operations, he therefore disclosed none of HUNT'S illegal activities to his Case Officer. The Case Officer's superior, [Jacob Esterline], had been disturbed when he later learned the Case Officer had not promptly reported the HUNT reference, a name that meant nothing to the Case Officer. The Chief of Station felt he should be advised of the presence of any former CIA Officers in his territory. [RR p189]

The Miami Chief of Station, Jacob Esterline, had his Case Officer meet with Rolando Martinez in March 1972, and again the Case Office asked about HUNT. These references to HUNT, in whom Jacob Esterline, "from past experience, had limited confidence," led Jacob Esterline to contact his superior at Headquarters, Cord Meyer. A strongly-worded letter was sent back to Jacob Esterline advising that "HUNT is undoubtedly on domestic White House business, no interest to us, in essence cool it.

The CIA was asked: "Question 5: Prior to June 17, 1972, did Eugenio Martinez advise, hint or suggest to this CIA Case Officer or anyone else in CIA or U.S. Government, of operations or plans to conduct clandestine activities against domestic targets. In this connection did Mr. Martinez mention in any way what has become known as the Watergate break-ins, or the break in of Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office? Answer: Mr. Martinez in late 1971, and again in March 1972, brought Mr. HUNT'S presence in Miami to the attention of an Agency field representative. The field representative reported this to CIA Headquarters and was advised that he should not concern himself with the travel of Mr. HUNT who was an employee of the White House undoubtedly on White House domestic business of no interest to the CIA. Mr. Martinez made no mention of what has become known as the Watergate and Ellsberg break ins, nor was the Agency aware of his participation in any secret arrangement or relationship that might have involved any domestic clandestine operations. This Agency has no knowledge of any information that Mr. Martinez may have provided to anyone else in the United States Government prior to June 1972 on the subject of clandestine activities against domestic targets.

In August 1993 Jacob Esterline was asked by this researcher what had caused him to have limited confidence in HUNT:

When he was working for me, I was never quite sure what he was up to. What really riled me at that time was here was a guy no longer with us that must have known that the people he was messing with - namely Rolando Martinez who was a nice, dedicated to his cause Cuban, who was obviously confused by someone saying 'I work for the White House' coming in there. It was totally unethical for Mr. HUNT to come in and touch somebody working for another agency, regardless of where he worked. He had no business touching any of our people. I didn't deal directly with Rolando Martinez. I had a case officer dealing with him. But HUNT obviously convinced them that this was so important that they shouldn't tell the case officer or me that they were doing these White House break-ins. Really cheap shot. It set off a very bad relationship between Cord Meyer and me. Cord Meyer was Thomas Karamessines' Deputy. In retrospect, when I wrote that letter to Meyer, it hit him like a bombshell. I'm sure they had no idea what HUNT was mixed-up in.

Jacob Esterline did not know why he was not told to terminate Rolando Martinez's CIA employment if Headquarters suspected HUNT was involved in White House political activities. After Jacob Esterline received this letter, he told the Case Officer of Rolando Martinez to have Rolando Martinez summarize his contact with HUNT. Rolando Martinez was told to write something that "he would not be afraid to have shown to him later," rather than to write the truth. [RR p195] The summary failed to disclose any of the illegal activities of the White House/Special Operations Group. [RR p189] Jacob Esterline explained,

When I got over my annoyance, I told them to go out and check on Rolando Martinez. We were checking on his progress at brokerage school at time. I think I did tell him to put down a pretty good resume of what had been going on. As a matter of fact, I'm pretty damn sure I did. What happened is the summary disappeared from my files. And I didn't get on to the fact that this paper had disappeared, until the case officer handling him, who was a nice little fellow, but he wasn't the brightest man in the world, left. I don't know what happened...I never saw him again. He was long gone someplace else. I think he left the Agency shortly after that. He was long gone before I found out that his, we always kept journals, Memorandum for the Records, contact reports. And the contact report had disappeared from the file. I was never able to get my hands on it. It's gone. It told the fact that Rolando Martinez had been meeting with HUNT on several occasions, and obviously HUNT had gotten to him, or maybe he hadn't even told him at that point what it was, because I was absolutely astounded, dumbfounded, when that whole thing broke and I realized that this poor guy Rolando Martinez had gotten himself into such a mess. He was a real good boat captain.

Rolando Martinez was recruited into White House/Special Operations Group. Rolando Martinez's last meeting with the CIA took place on June 6, 1972. Jacob Esterline:

There's a little bit of a grey thing here, in the sense that I went down there to gently terminate and direct these people into new avenues of life. That was a pretty momentous thing to do. Those who had been rather important leaders, we went to varying lengths with. In some cases I actually got a couple of these very bright fellows into law school. They are now practicing lawyers. In the case of Rolando Martinez, he'd been a Cuban businessman and was a mature man at this point, we put him on a retirement pension which wasn't very much money obviously. It just doesn't happen that way. What you would call a 'brass parachute,' to coin a phrase. I got him into brokers school to direct him into the lifestyle he had in Cuba before he got mixed up in all these crazy kinds of things against Castro.

According to Seymour Hersh, Rolando Martinez kept a diary that was found by Federal investigators in the trunk of his car which was parked at Miami International Airport. [NYT 1.14.73] Rolando Martinez told the SSCIA that in 1972 he conducted an interview "with this Cuban lady in Miami who said she had been a member of the Castro household, and present there at the time of John Kennedy's death. The woman -- I have testified to this before, but I can't recall where." HUNT elaborated: "She had been introduced to me by Rolando Martinez who brought her to my hotel room. He provided the tape recorder for our discussion...The woman's bone fides were established solely by Rolando Martinez, who we determined later was on the CIA payroll at the time, although I did not know of it. I provided a raw report and submitted it to the Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division." During HUNT v WEBERMAN, HUNT stated:

I turned over [to the CIA] a tape recording that I made in a Miami hotel room with Martinez and BARKER, of a Cuban refugee lady who claimed to have been present in the Castro home at the time, the day Kennedy was assassinated. I think I had part of that typed up in the White House and eventually sent a summary of it or a transcript over to CIA, and I may have accompanied that with a cassette tape.

The CIA reported: "Quoted below is a letter dated October 29, 1973, Colby received from Fulbright and answer which Colby proposes to send him: 'When Mr. Helms appeared before the Foreign Relations Committee February 7, 1973, (under oath) in connection with his nomination to be Ambassador to Iran, he was questioned in some detail about prior associations with CIA on the part of the Watergate Defendants. The following exchange took place:

The Chairman: And FRANK STURGIS, was he an employee?

Helms: Never.

The Chairman: In any capacity?

Helms: I am sure of that.

The Chairman: In an affidavit filed with the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, on October 10, 1973, supporting his motion to withdraw his guilty plea, Mr. STURGIS says: 'I had also been active in the BAY OF PIGS OPERATION and continued clandestinely working for the liberation of Cuba thereafter.' And again: 'I had known of Mr. Rolando Martinez since the Bay of Pigs invasion, and knew that he had been engaged in clandestine incursions into Cuba for many years following the Bay of Pigs invasion. I was doing similar work, though Mr. Martinez was working for a different sector than I was. It was my belief, based upon my own observations during the years following Bay of Pigs, that Martinez was working for, and being directly financed by, the CIA, as opposed to my own situation which involved the Agency's knowledge and approval of my operations and their indirect financing of them.' With respect to Mr. Martinez, Mr. Helms testified as follows February 7: 'Mr. Martinez was never an employee of the CIA. He was on retained of $100 a month, seen occasionally by a representative of the agency, and his role was simply to identify to us from those legal and illegal immigrants from Cuba those individuals who he thought might be of interest for informational purposes. He simply was to identify them and we took it from there, and it was a very loose kind of arrangement in which he reported in from time to time. And it is indeed true that as soon as it was found out he was involved in the Watergate thing we simply turned him off and have not talked to him since.' Mr. Helms repeated the substance of this testimony of page 58 to 59 of the transcript. I would appreciate you clearing up these discrepancies. Specifically -- was STURGIS active in the Bay of Pigs operation? Did he continue clandestinely working for the liberation of Cuba thereafter, either on behalf of the CIA or with its knowledge, approval or acquiescence? If so, what were his activities?

Was Martinez involved in clandestine incursions into Cuba for many years following the Bay of Pigs invasion? Were these made on behalf of the CIA, or with its knowledge, approval, or acquiescence? What does STURGIS mean when he says, 'I was doing similar work though Mr. Martinez was working for a different sector than I was?' What does STURGIS mean when he refers to 'My own situation which involved the Agency's knowledge and approval of my operations and their indirect financing of them?' (This completes Fulbright October 29, 1973 memo). Following is Colby's proposed answer:

"This is in response to your letter of October 29, 1973, requesting certain information concerning Mr. FRANK STURGIS and Eugenio R. Martinez. Your questions and the answers thereto follow:

Question: Was STURGIS active in the Bay of Pigs operation?

Answer: We have no evidence that Mr. STURGIS officially participated in the Bay of Pigs invasion. Any activities concerning the Bay of Pigs invasion in which Mr. STURGIS may have been engaged were not directly connected with or authorized by the CIA, nor was CIA knowledgeable of any such activities. However, he may have been engaged through one of the groups which was supported by the CIA.

Question: Did he continue clandestinely working for the liberation of Cuba thereafter, either on behalf of the CIA, or with its knowledge, approval or acquiescence? If so, what were his activities?

Answer: Any activities in which Mr. STURGIS may have been engaged subsequent to the Bay of Pigs Operation were without the prior knowledge or the approval or acquiescence of this Agency. Our files reflect information from the FBI which indicates that Mr. STURGIS is a soldier of fortune who had participated in Cuban Revolutionary activities for a number of years. However, the Agency did engage in limited activities, and he may have been engaged by one of the groups supported by the CIA in this connection.

Question: Was Martinez engaged in clandestine incursions into Cuba for many years following the Bay of Pigs invasion. Were these made on behalf of the CIA or with its knowledge, approval or acquiescence?

Answer: Mr. Martinez was recruited by the Agency in January 1961, in connection with Cuban operations. The project to which he was assigned was terminated in 1969. I would be glad to brief you on the details if you are interested. Subsequently, he was held on a part-time retainer to report on individuals coming from Cuba to the Miami area whom he thought could provide information on Cuba useful to the United States. The last meeting with Mr. Martinez occurred on June 6, 1972, and the relationship was terminated by the Agency as a result of his involvement in the Watergate break in.

Question: What does STURGIS mean when he says 'I was doing similar work though Mr. Martinez was working for a different sector than I was?'

Answer: We do not now what Mr. STURGIS means by this statement. Our files indicate that Mr. STURGIS was friendly with Mr. Martinez, and he may have been aware that Mr. Martinez was in some way associated with the CIA. However, Mr. STURGIS was not directly engaged in any activity, sponsored, approved or funded by CIA.

Question: What does STURGIS mean when he refers to 'My own situation which involved the Agency's knowledge and approval of my operations and their indirect financing of them?'

Answer: We do not know what Mr. STURGIS means by this statement. Mr. STURGIS was not involved in any operation directly sponsored, approved or funded by the CIA.

While it is true that Mr. Martinez had an 'agent' relationship with this Agency prior to the time he was put on a part-time retainer, he was never an 'employee' of this Agency, and was never under the type of supervision and control normally associated with a 'staff employee' relationship. Further, prior to Mr. Helms' testimony before your committee on February 7, 1973, there was speculation in the press that Mr. Martinez was an active employee of this Agency at the time of the break in. This, of course, was not true, and in explaining the status of Mr. Martinez at the time of the break in, it is understandable that uppermost in Mr. Helms' mind would be the part-time retainer status which Mr. Martinez held at the time of the break in. Please let me know if there is anything further you desire in the above connection. W.E. Colby, Director. [To Amb. Helms from George L. Cary CIA FOIA 17262 and 17260]

On November 16, 1973, Andrew St. George testified before the Senate Armed Service Committee. The CIA reported: "He made certain allegations against the Agency, the gist being (most of it coming from FRANK STURGIS) that the Agency had prior knowledge of the Watergate break-in, accomplishing this through the penetration of the break-in group utilizing Eugenio Rolando Martinez, one of the arrested Watergate burglars. At that time St. George alleged he had other Agency sources who he would not identify." [BROWN MFR 7.25.75]

HUNT AND ROBERT VESCO SPAIN 1972

A CIA Index Card read "HOWARD HUNT, Robert Vesco, May 9, 1974, Memo for OPS/RMO from Robert E. Owen, Chief, OPS/OSG (regarding HUNT'S reported activities in Spain, 1972 and Robert Vesco's reported activities in Spain, 1972)." A CIA memo stated that the files of the Chief, OPS/OSG yielded nothing on HUNT and Vesco:

2. I have attempted to recollect any other details which conceivably could be pertinent and which relate to the period of my assignment to Madrid in the period of July 1970 to July 1973. The only points which I recall but on which I have no documentation are these:

a. There were occasional joshing inquiries made of me by American residents of Madrid about the reported presence in Spain of E. HOWARD HUNT in 1972. My standard reply was I knew only what I had heard rumored. For the record, at no time did HUNT contact me, and I have never known of his having tried to contact any Station personnel in Spain during the period of 1970 to 1973. I made no effort personally to ascertain whether or not HUNT was in Madrid, and I had no effort made by any Station member.

b. A Station officer, possibly (deleted), now assigned to (deleted), was given some information by an informant in 1972 concerning reported activities in Spain by Robert Vesco. I suggested that the information be given informally to the Economic Section chief of the Embassy, John Oliver. That officer was charged with keeping abreast of Vesco-related developments. The Station did not pursue the subject, as I recall, because it was not a topic or reportable interest, according to the requirements of that time period. Robert E. Owen Chief, OPS/OSG.

THE PLOT TO KILL OMAR TORRIJOS: MARCH 1972

The military dictator of Panama, General Omar Torrijos, was an early target of the White House/Special Operations Group. In March 1972 a rift between the two countries arose over the involvement of the brothers of Omar Torrijos in narcotics trafficking. Omar Torrijos maintained ties with Fidel Castro and Colonel Qaddafi of Libya. Artime told the Miami States Attorney's Office: "Artime reiterated that he had in fact been approached by HOWARD HUNT to recruit a band of Artime's former associates to, to quote HUNT, 'take care of the situation in Panama.' The undersigned informed Artime that a source had told the State's Attorney's Office that one of the duties or functions of the recruited group was to be the assassination of the Panamanian President. Artime denied that HUNT used the word, or ever made reference to assassination, but again repeated that HUNT had used a 'key phrase,' that he, Artime, had related to the Watergate Grand Jury, and also to the Ervin Committee investigators." [Dardis interview with Artime] Manuel Artime stated that BARKER assembled the usual crew, including STURGIS. John Dean revealed that members of the White House/Special Operations Group traveled to Mexico and arranged the details of the plot. STURGIS had obtained a Mexican Tourist Card valid from January 7, 1972, to April 6, 1972. The plot allegedly entailed shooting Omar Torrijos at a race track that he frequented. BARKER'S associate, Miguel Suarez, had set up a Panamanian company that would serve as a command center. [All State Investment Fund cited by Ewing] When HUNT was paroled from prison in 1977, he confirmed that members of the White House/Special Operations Group planned to assassinate Omar Torrijos: "I did not know any of the people asked to take part other than people in the White House/Special Operations Group. They had that as part of their brief."

A few months later HUNT was questioned about this statement:

Q. Did you ever make a statement to the press in the recent past that the White House plumbers had in fact plotted to assassinate General Omar Torrijos of Panama?

A. No.

Mr. WEBERMAN (Sighs)

The Deponent: May I request -

Mr. Rubin: Wait a minute. I'll do it. Any more remarks by this man, any more sighs of exasperation, anymore snickering and laughing and I am going to walk out of here with Mr. HUNT and I am going to bring this to the attention of the Court. Now Alan, please behave yourself This is a serious business.

During a deposition one year later, HUNT was asked: "Did you indicate to the press that you had knowledge of a plot to kill Omar Torrijos?" HUNT answered: "Well, I probably did." In American Spy HUNT wrote,

As long as we are on the topic of assassination, I suppose that this is as good a time as any to set the record straight concerning General Omar Torrijos of Panama (known as the "dictator with a heart") and General Rafael Trujillo, the brutal leader of the Dominican Republic. Both were killed, and some people have suggested that I was involved. I was interrogated about these murders by the Assassination Committee. A December 1977 syndicated column by Jack Anderson even quoted a supposed "secret memo" by a Miami prosecutor alleging that Manuel Artime confessed that I had tried to recruit him to help assassinate Torrijos. This was written conveniently after Artime's death, so he could not refute it, and no memo signed by Artime ever came to light. I had no part in the death of either man. Both had plenty of homegrown enemies who are probably responsible without the complicity of the United States. In fact, Torrijos, while allowing drug smugglers too much latitude to operate in his country—which obviously irritated the U.S. authorities—nonetheless had a stable centrist regime in an area where other countries such as Nicaragua and El Salvador were plagued by unrest. I think that the CIA would have found a more coercive method to influence Torrijos than by sanctioning him.

Did you ever know of a man accused of being part of more assassination plots than E. HOWARD HUNT? In February 1972, HUNT traveled to Nicaragua on an undisclosed mission. In March 1972, he visited International Telephone and Telegraph lobbyist Dita Beard. Before he spoke with her, he disguised himself in a red wig. He also used a voice modulator. On March 3, 1972, Dorothy Hunt's psychiatrist, Dr. Gary O. Morris, vanished while vacationing on Caribbean island of St. Lucia. The newspaper account of Dr. Morris' death stated:

PSYCHIATRIST, WIFE MISSING ON BOAT TRIP

A psychiatrist and his wife have been reported missing of the island of St. Lucia, in the Caribbean. Dr. and Mrs. Gary O. Morris set out Friday in a 15 foot motorboat from the Halcyon Beach Club hotel for a picnic on Pigeon Island, about three miles away. With them was a local captain Mervin Augustin. When the three failed to return by Friday night, the hotel manager flew out to look for them, according to the Associated Press. U.S Coast Guard, British and private aircraft searched the seas off the British protectorate over the weekend. The group had two quarts of water, a picnic lunch and a box of ice on board. The Halcyon Management said the Morrises had checked in on Wednesday for four days. Morris practices psychiatry at 4501 Connecticut Ave in Washington. He and his wife have three children.

No trace was ever found of the 15-foot motorboat or of its three occupants. Dorothy Hunt had been a patient of Dr. Gary Morris under a pseudonym, and their connection was revealed only after Mrs. HUNT died in the crash of United 533 nine months later, when the name and telephone number of Gary Morris were found on her person. The records of Dr. Gary Morris' patients were not checked to determine if one of them was really Dorothy Hunt. Stuart Knudsen of Ellicott City, Maryland, had the records of Dr. Morris. Stuart Knudsen:

The only records I have left is a book which he kept of his patients of how much he charged them, and how much they owed him. If I don't know the pseudonym I wouldn't know, of course. Maxine Cheshire did a story. Dr. Morris specialized in hypnosis. He may have put her under hypnosis for a back ailment. And while she was under hypnosis she told him about the Ellsberg break-in. That was one scenario, but not what Maxine Cheshire published. Morris only had about 15 patients.

SENATOR EDWIN MUSKIE EARLY 1972

Circa April 1972 HUNT approached Robert Bennett with a proposal to obtain the assistance of the Hughes organization for a burglary in Las Vegas which was to secure information on Senator Edwin Muskie.

Mr. Hunt contacted Mr. O'Malley on several occasions requesting referral of retiring Agency employees with specific qualifications. These instances occurred apparently after Hunt had assumed his responsibilities with the White House. In one instance Hunt requested referral of a recently retired Agency secretary. As in previous memoranda and discussions Mr. O'Malley was unable to recall the name of this individual. He did, however, state he is quite certain Hunt turned down the individual whom he referred. As a point of clarification O'Malley said that this individual had not previously been known to Mr. Hunt nor had she previously worked for him in any capacity. Frank O'Malley also recalled a request from Mr. Hunt for an individual having skills in the areas of locks and surreptitious entry. A resume of Mr. Thomas C. Hunt was provided to Mr. H Hunt at that time. It is Mr. O'Malley's recollection that Mr. Hunt specifically stated that a person with Amato's qualifications was needed in connection with a requirement of the Howard Hughes organization in Las Vegas, Nevada. O'Malley stated that it was his opinion that it was his impression that the duties involved would include the monitoring of a listening device in an undisclosed location. O'Malley reiterated his understand that Amato did not accept Hunt's offer of employment.

Hunt sought to recruit a spy to infiltrate the headquarters of Senator Muskie. Hunt may have run covert operations against Senator Edwin Muskie in early 1972.

THE CRYING EPISODE

On Saturday, February 26, 1972, Senator Muskie was giving a speech outside of the offices of the Manchester Union Leader from the top of a flatbed truck. The New York

Times reported: "The Senator broke into tears minutes later, his speech halting, as he protested the newspapers republication yesterday of an item from Newsweek magazine. The Newsweek item was itself an abridgement of a report in Woman's Wear Daily, quoting the candidates' wife, Jane, as using early language while campaigning in December in New Hampshire." The possibility existed that Senator Edwin Muskie's crying episode in Maine was the result of his having unwittingly ingested a threshold dose of LSD. G. Gordon Liddy explained:

HUNT was under a misapprehension as to the uses of lysergic acid diethylamide-25. He seemed to believe initially that it was a reliable substance for disorienting an individual. And he took considerable dissuasion on the part of one Dr. Gunn, retired or un-retired, I don't know, the CIA physician who was represented to me as being an expert in the unorthodox application of chemical and medical knowledge. And it was he who instructed Mr. HUNT that the effects of LSD-25 are unpredictable from individual to individual. And it was not, in fact, something one ought to entertain using for that purpose. There was a conversation that was had between Mr. HUNT and me in the Summer of 1971, at which time he came to me and said that Mr. Colson had suggested the application of LSD-25 to Dr. Daniel Ellsberg at the prospective dinner function at which he would be a speaker, and the purpose was to disorient and to discredit Dr. Ellsberg at Mr. Colson's suggestion.

And plans were laid to accomplish that and were then submitted through Mr. HUNT to Mr. Colson. And there was no response forthcoming for a while. When it came, it was in the affirmative: do it.

But by that time, there was insufficient lead time to follow the plan, which called for the infiltration of our Cuban asset persons as waiters at this function up here in Washington, and to introduce the chemical in the soup course of Dr. Ellsberg. In other words, it was --- there was insufficient time to get the Cubans up and into the place to do that. And so the mission had to be canceled, the idea being that we would do it some later time should the opportunity arise. [HUNT v. WEBERMAN Liddy Depo. 9.30.80]

In 1985 G. Gordon Liddy stated: "We knew of the weakness of Senator Muskie in that he had difficulty in controlling his emotions, could break down. We believed that it would be a disaster for the United States for Muskie to break down before Brezhnev, better he break down on the snows of New Hampshire, and we conducted our activities to bring something like that about. Eventually we were successful." G. Gordon Liddy claimed he and HUNT planted an anti-Mrs. Muskie article in the press and that was what upset him. On April 5, 1972, a paper entitled "Activities of HOWARD HUNT and Dr. Manuel Artime in Miami and Nicaragua [English translation of Martinez report] BARKER, Mrs. Hunt, Varona, Tino Fuentes, Prio IG FILE #18 Tab #1 Internal Review]" was generated.

HUNT, BREMER AND GOVERNOR GEORGE WALLACE MAY 1972

In the spring of 1972, the Governor of Alabama, George C. Wallace, posed a threat to NIXON'S reelection by having declared himself an independent Presidential candidate. George Wallace could have siphoned away enough NIXON votes to have thrown the election to Senator George McGovern (Dem.- N. DAKOTA). On Monday, May 15, 1972, Arthur Bremer attempted to assassinate George Wallace at a campaign rally in Laurel, Maryland. Arthur Bremer had no connections to the White House/Special Operations Group, although his brother, William Bremer, was represented by Ellis Rubin in March 1972, when a Federal Grand Jury indicted him for fraud. William Bremer was charged with swindling $36,000 from the public in a bogus "Figure Form Reducing Outlets" operation. William Bremer was convicted. Ellis Rubin said that he took the case of William Bremer for its publicity value. When Ellis Rubin was asked if he had ever been questioned by the authorities about himself or any of his clients, he stated: "Well you would be surprised to know that I have been questioned in all these cases." Ellis Rubin was asked if he was questioned specifically about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy: "All of these things that have been mentioned, because I have represented the principals involved..." The link through Ellis Rubin was too thin a thread to associate Arthur Bremer with the White House/Special Operations Group.

DONALD SEGRETTI

Another possible Arthur Bremer - White House/Special Operations Group link involved Donald Segretti. According to The Milwaukee Journal: "The former Wisconsin College Republican State Chairman said Donald Segretti, confessed political spy and Republican saboteur in the 1972 presidential campaign, urged him to recruit persons in Wisconsin to do dirty tricks to embarrass the Democrats." [Milwaukee Journal 10.4.73] Arthur Bremer was from Milwaukee. During Watergate, no evidence surfaced that linked Donald Segretti to Arthur Bremer.

NIXON'S REACTION

The apparent fact that Arthur Bremer had acted independently did not prevent NIXON from trying to exploit the attempted assassination. Arthur Bremer shot Wallace on Monday, May 15, 1972, at 4:00 p.m. (EDT). On Monday, May 15, 1972, at 4:05 p.m. (EDT), NIXON held an emergency meeting with Charles Colson. The tapes of this meeting were classified, although Seymour Hersh heard them, or spoke with someone who did. Seymour Hersh:

By Monday evening, it is known that Wallace's assailant is a deranged youth named Arthur Bremer. W. Mark Felt, an Assistant Director of the FBI, reports to Charles Colson that Secret Service agents have entered Arthur Bremer's Milwaukee apartment, apparently without a search warrant, and found it littered with political tracts...Felt also reports that the FBI agents on the scene will not enter until they obtain a search warrant...NIXON and Colson agree that HOWARD HUNT is to fly to Milwaukee, secretly enter Arthur Bremer's apartment, and replace the political tracts and other materials with McGovern campaign literature. Colson paves the way by telling Felt that he and the President have heard rumors that Arthur Bremer 'had ties with [Ted] Kennedy or McGovern political operatives, that obviously there could be a conspiracy...' HUNT packs his bags, including special CIA equipment for disguising his facial features, and makes a plane reservation. [The New Yorker 12.14.92]

HOWARD HUNT / CHARLES COLSON CONVERSATION MAY 1972

On Monday, May 15, 1972, between 4:05 p.m. and 5:00 p.m., Charles Colson called HUNT and asked him to fly to Milwaukee and enter the apartment of Arthur Bremer. The HUNT/Colson telephone call lasted only about five minutes. Charles Colson and HUNT had greatly differing versions of the time and nature of that conversation, and HUNT'S recollection of the day's events changed several times.

HUNT'S TESTIMONY ON JUNE 12, 1973

On June 11, 1973, HUNT was assaulted in his jail cell and badly injured. On June 12, 1973, during an Executive Session of the Senate Select Committee on Illegal Campaign Activities, HUNT testified that within one hour of the Wallace assassination attempt on Monday, May 15, 1972, Charles Colson telephoned him and told him to "Go to Bremer's apartment and see if there is Left or radical reading material around." HUNT did not say he was asked to plant McGovern literature, instead he said he was asked to determine if any was present in Arthur Bremer's apartment. HUNT went on to testify that, following Charles Colson's call, he went to his home in Potomac, Maryland, telephoned Charles Colson and told him the plan was ridiculous.

HUNT'S TESTIMONY JULY 1973

When HUNT testified before the Senate Select Committee on Illegal Campaign Activities in July 1973, he said that Charles Colson called him into his office on the morning of Tuesday, May 16, 1972. HUNT'S version: "In the past, when Mr. Kennedy was assassinated and when Martin Luther King was killed, it was all immediately blazoned as a right-wing plot of some sort. We would like to know what kind of kook this guy is. Is he a neo-Nazi?" HUNT claimed Charles Colson wanted him to find out what brand of political extremism Bremer subscribed to, in order that the media could not erroneously accuse Bremer of having been a right-winger. HUNT referred to President Kennedy as "Mr. Kennedy." This was because HUNT believed John F. Kennedy was never a legitimately elected President because of massive vote fraud in Chicago.

HUNT'S VERSION IN 1974

In early 1974 HUNT wrote about the proposed Arthur Bremer operation in Undercover. He maintained Charles Colson called on the morning of Tuesday, May 16, 1972, and expressed fear that the right was going to be blamed for a left-wing assassination. HUNT wrote that Charles Colson told him: "HOWIE, every time there's an assassination in the country the press blames the political right. Weeks later the truth seeps out, like OSWALD, a lefty. Just once I'd like to see the truth come out, if Arthur Bremer's a Marxist himself."

According to HUNT, OSWALD was portrayed by the liberal media as a rightist, until weeks later, when the truth "seeped out," that he was a leftist. This was untrue.

HUNT TESTIMONY ON SEPTEMBER 9, 1974

In an interview by the FBI on September 9, 1974, at the Office of the Watergate Special Prosecutor, HUNT reverted to his original story, although he was less specific:

During the late afternoon of May 15, 1972, Mr. HUNT was in his office at 1700 Pennsylvania Avenue when he received a telephone call from Mr. Charles Colson, Special Counsel to the President, asking that Mr. HUNT immediately come to his office. Mr. Colson's office was in the Executive Office Building, and Mr. HUNT'S best recollection of the time of this telephone call was approximately 5:00 p.m. There was a television set in Mr. HUNT'S office and he recalls having heard a news report that Governor Wallace had been shot that afternoon in Laurel, Maryland. This was prior to the telephone call from Mr. Colson.

Upon visiting Mr. Colson he was first asked if he had any friends in Milwaukee, or if he had ever been to Milwaukee. Mr. HUNT replied that he had not been to Milwaukee in over 30 years, but nevertheless he had a few friends there. At this point Mr. Colson mentioned that the individual who had attempted to assassinate Governor Wallace had an apartment in Milwaukee. Mr. Colson remarked further that 'We don't know the motive' of the individual who had shot Governor Wallace and that he wanted to know what was lying around this individual's apartment. Mr. HUNT was not sure the identity of the assassin was given by Mr. Colson during the conversation, and does not recall whether he was aware of the identity of Arthur Bremer at the particular time.

Mr. HUNT believes Mr. Colson mentioned LEE HARVEY OSWALD, Sirhan Sirhan and the assassinations of former President Kennedy and Robert Kennedy. Mr. Colson made some remark indicating that each time there is an assassination some people claim the right-wing is responsible. Mr. HUNT recalls a comment by Mr. Colson that LEE HARVEY OSWALD had married a Russian citizen. It was apparent to Mr. HUNT that Mr. Colson desired to know background information regarding Arthur Bremer.

Mr. HUNT also recalls a comment by Mr. Colson during this initial conversation as to the availability of Mr. HUNT to travel that evening and was informed that Mr. HUNT was available. Mr. HUNT recalls making airline inquiries and found out there were no flights available to Milwaukee until at least 9:00 p.m. that evening.

Mr. HUNT believes he was at home during that evening when he received a second telephone call from Mr. Colson. Mr. HUNT does not recall having made airline reservations by the time of this second call and does not believe airline reservations were made by him at any time. He does recall Mr. Colson informing him during the second call that it was terribly important that he go to Milwaukee to find out information regarding Arthur Bremer, specifically what was in his apartment. Mr. HUNT recalls having heard news reports by that time indicating that newspaper reporters had been in the apartment of Arthur Bremer and also received some indication from these reports that the FBI had been to Bremer's apartment. He received the impression that the apartment had been sealed by the FBI. He recalled asking Mr. Colson how he was to get into Bremer's apartment. Mr. Colson replied, 'Bribe the janitor or pick the lock' indicating that he did not care how HUNT got into the apartment, so long as the job was done. Because of the news reports, Mr. HUNT objected to going to Milwaukee, and Mr. Colson insisted that he go.

Mr. HUNT thereafter discussed this with his wife, who was present at the time he received the second telephone call from Mr. Colson. Mrs. HUNT objected to Mr. HUNT going to Milwaukee, explaining that this was another of Colson's stories or something similar. A brief time later Mr. HUNT received a telephone call from Mr. Colson's secretary, Joan Hall, at his home, advising that Mr. Colson no longer desired that Mr. HUNT go to Milwaukee. Mr. HUNT recalls no other conversation with Mr. Colson regarding Arthur Bremer.

Arthur Bremer's address was never mentioned during the conversations with Mr. Colson. Mr. HUNT assumes the address was known by Mr. Colson, as he explained he would not have left for Milwaukee not knowing the address, and does not believe Mr. Colson would have asked him to go to Milwaukee without eventually informing him of the address.

It was mentioned to HUNT that it appeared from what he had said that Mr. Colson had meant for him to go to Milwaukee immediately following the second conversation and the address had not been mentioned. Mr. HUNT replied this was the best of his recollection, and that it was unthinkable that he would have left Washington without Mr. Bremer's address.

HUNT stated Arthur Bremer has never associated with him; that he does not know Arthur Bremer; does not believe Charles Colson or anyone else he worked with at the White House knew Arthur Bremer. HUNT had no discussion with G. Gordon Liddy regarding Arthur Bremer and had no basis to believe Liddy was involved in the attempted assassination of Governor George C. Wallace. [FBI interview 9.9.74 S.A. Lane Bonner Jr. and Hugh M. Barnhardt]

The FBI investigated the allegation that G. Gordon Liddy had been photographed on the scene of the Wallace assassination. It determined that he was not there. [FBI 139-4089-NR 7.20.73]

CHARLES COLSON'S VERSIONS OF EVENTS SEPTEMBER 11, 1974

Charles Colson told the FBI on September 11, 1974, that he first heard about the attempted assassination of Governor Wallace at 4:00 p.m. while attending a staff meeting in the Roosevelt Room of the White House:

This room is located across from the President's office, and he believes the meeting was interrupted shortly after 4:00 p.m. by someone informing those present of a wire service story that Governor Wallace had been shot a Laurel, Maryland. Mr. Colson suggested to the other present that the President be notified. He believes this was done by Mr. Butterfield who was present at the staff meeting.

The staff meeting attended by Mr. Colson continued, and Mr. Colson recalls having received a request from the President to come into the President's office while he (Colson) was still in the Roosevelt Room. He explained this recollection was not consistent with the White House logs, which reflected that he had met with the President from 6:45 p.m. to 7:57 p.m. and again from 7:59 p.m. to 8:10 p.m. Mr. Colson recalls having met with the President in the President's office located in the Executive Office Building. He does not believe the logs are correct because he has some recollection of spending more time with the President, and has no recollection of leaving for a period of two minutes. The log keeping system after hours in the Executive Office was not as accurate as that maintained during the regular hours by these employees working the day shift.

At the outset, the President expressed grave concern that a national mystery could result if something happened to Arthur Bremer. The President mentioned the Kennedy assassination, LEE HARVEY OSWALD, and JACK RUBY. He wanted everything done to make sure that nothing happened to Arthur Bremer, and that all evidence was secure. Mr. Colson believes he knew the identity of Arthur Bremer when he first met with the President during the early evening of May 15, 1972. The events of May 15, 1972, were researched by him during June 1973, and this included an interview with former FBI official Mark Felt. A memorandum prepared by Mr. Colson at that time reflects he first learned that a man was in custody at approximately 4:35 p.m. May 15, 1972, and received a description, including the identity of the assailant at approximately 5:00 p.m. This was from wire service reports.

Mr. Colson talked to Mark Felt by telephone on at least six different occasions during the evening of May 15, 1972, and believes the President talked to Mr. Felt on two occasions. He believes that first conversation with Mr. Felt took place between 6:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. He was informed of the identity of the assailant during the first conversation with Mr. Felt. Even so, it is his recollection he heard of Bremer's identity earlier from wire service reports. Mr. Felt also informed Mr. Colson there was some jurisdictional problem, including the fact that Bremer had been arrested by Maryland authorities and was in custody of Maryland authorities. He recalls some conversation with Mr. Felt that a local prosecutor in Maryland was extremely interested in this case, and would not relinquish jurisdiction to Federal authorities or some similar remark. President NIXON was 'frantic,' commenting that it appeared to him that no one in the Federal Government wanted to be taking charge of this matter, including custody of Bremer and making sure all evidence was secured. Mr. Colson recalls that Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Grey was not available that evening, as he was driving to Washington for his Connecticut home. The President was furious because of Mr. Grey's unavailability.

At the President's instruction, Mr. Colson informed Mr. Felt that the President instructed the FBI to take complete charge of the investigation of Bremer. Mr. Colson believes the President was so upset that he asked for the telephone a personally gave these instructions to Mr. Felt. He expressed some concern to Mr. Felt that the FBI was not moving swiftly enough in the custody of Bremer and securing Bremer's apartment. The President informed Mr. Felt that he wanted the FBI's custody of Arthur Bremer to include an Agent to be physically present with Bremer around the clock.

The White house motor logs reflected that Charles Colson was driven home by a White House car the evening of May 15, 1972, departing the White House at 9:01 p.m. Mr. Colson expressed belief that the evening logs of the White House motor pool were more accurate than those reflecting visitors to the President, and it is his recollection that he left at approximately 9:00 p.m. He believes he was with the President until the time of his departure.

Mr. Colson arrived at his McLean, Virginia, home prior to 10:00 p.m. May 15, 1972, and recalls thinking a great deal about the motivation of Arthur Bremer in shooting Governor Wallace. This had been discussed at some length with President Nixon earlier that evening, and the President was likewise concerned. It had been discussed that possibly Bremer could be a NIXON fanatic, and some would say that he was involved with the Administration. Mr. Colson expressed positive belief Arthur Bremer was not known by anyone in the White House...

Mr. Colson was aware that E. HOWARD HUNT'S background included psychological evaluation in some manner. Because of this he thought of talking to Mr. HUNT to gain an evaluation of Arthur Bremer. He recalls having trouble reaching Mr. HUNT as he attempted to do so through the White House switchboard and his present recollection is the problem arose from the fact HOWARD HUNT uses the initial E in place of his first name, and this was not given to the operator. He reached Mr. HUNT after 10:00 p.m. At the time Mr. Colson talked to Mr. HUNT he had certain background information regarding Bremer, including the fact that a wide range of items had been found in Bremer's apartment. Mr. Colson believes this material mostly came from Mr. Felt, although some of it might have been discovered through review of Wire Service reports. He recalls little specifics at the moment, except that he believes there were some Black Panther Party publications found in Bremer's apartment. Mr. Colson recalls having wanted very much at the time to find out if Bremer was associated with the 'left-wing.' He wanted to find out the spectrum of the political picture Bremer came from.

Mr. Colson was unable to recall HUNT'S specific reply to his inquiry the evening of May 15, 1972. He said he has since read testimony by Mr. HUNT that HUNT was told by him (Colson) to go to Milwaukee in an effort to get background information regarding Bremer. Mr. Colson said this simply never happened, and he never informed Mr. HUNT to visit Milwaukee in regard to Bremer. He believes it is possible that Mr. HUNT might have mentioned after the inquiry by him the evening of May 15, 1972, that he (HUNT) would go to Milwaukee and find out information regarding Bremer. This is the only way Mr. Colson can conceive of at trip to Milwaukee coming up.

This was the only conversation between Mr. Colson and Mr. HUNT regarding Arthur Bremer. Mr. Colson mentioned something that happened the following morning in an effort to solidify his contention that no other conversation took place. He recalls arriving at work somewhat late the following morning and in a somewhat irritable mood, as a result of having worked the previous night. Upon arriving at the office Colson was informed by his secretary that HOWARD HUNT had called and wondered why he had not heard again from Mr. Colson. This was totally puzzling to Colson, as he had no intention of further contacting HUNT and did not further contact him...

Mr. Colson received a telephone call at his home after 10:00 p.m. May 15, 1972, from Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Grey, informing him that the entire situation regarding Arthur Bremer was under control by the Bureau. Mr. Grey was informed to immediately call the President and so advise him. Mr. Grey replied this would be done. [NARA FBI 124-10238-10316 9.9.74 Bonner & Barnhardt]

COLSON'S CONFESSION TO SEYMOUR HERSH

In an interview with Seymour Hersh, Charles Colson stated: "It began with NIXON saying to me, 'Whose side is he on - right - or left-winger?'" Charles Colson then left the Oval Office to track down HUNT, and HUNT volunteered, Colson said, to fly to Milwaukee and try to break into the apartment. Charles Colson: "I went back and told the President that HUNT can find out about Arthur Bremer. NIXON said, 'It'd be great to get him out there and put some things in.' But I don't know which of us actually said, 'Too bad we can't plant McGovern literature.'" After this conversation was overheard on the White House tapes, the FBI interviewed Charles Colson about it.

G. GORDON LIDDY

In his deposition in the course of HUNT v. WEBERMAN G. Gordon Liddy supported Seymour Hersh's account:

Q. Do you recall HUNT ever having a discussion with you of burglary of Artie Bremer's apartment?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he suggest that that would be a feasible idea and a good idea, or what was the nature of that?

A. Well, what happened was that HUNT came to me, and actually, I think he was kind of upset. And he said that Mr. Charles Colson wanted him to enter Mr. Bremer's apartment. This is following Mr. Bremer's, by the way, having shot former Governor George Wallace. And it was very, very close after the fact of that shooting, to place this in time. And Mr. Charles Colson wanted him to go in there and to deposit therein and leave to be found by law enforcement authorities spurious literature that connected Mr. Bremer with some other persons. At the moment it escapes me who.

And Mr. HUNT said he didn't think that was a good idea. And he was, in effect, looking for additional argument from me with which to persuade Mr. Charles Colson that this was not a good idea. And I told him, I said, "You know that place is probably under seal right now. And it's impractical because the FBI or the Secret Service or whatever, they know where it is. They have been in there and they know it's there. And you go put something else in there, and they are going to know somebody else put something in there. And it's just not a good idea."

Q. What was it that was being suggested be implanted in there?

A. Literature connecting Mr. Bremer with others whom Mr. Colson wanted Mr. Bremer connected with for reasons of his own. And I don't remember who they were. [HUNT v. WEBERMAN Liddy Depo. 9.30.80]

SEYMOUR HERSH'S ONE INACCURACY

Hersh wrote: "Felt reports that the FBI agents on the scene will not enter until they obtain a search warrant." The FBI, like the United States Secret Service, did not wait until they obtained a search warrant before entering Arthur Bremer's apartment. The United States Secret Service arrived at Arthur Bremer's apartment at 5:00 p.m. CDT. The FBI arrived there at 5:10 p.m. CDT. At 6:20 p.m. CDT, the FBI and United States Secret Service were ordered to leave Arthur Bremer's apartment. Without the FBI and United States Secret Service, the press gained entrance to the apartment and virtually ransacked it. At 7:05 p.m. CDT the FBI was back, under Presidential orders: "FBI S.A. (deleted) advised the apartment manager that newsmen in Arthur Bremer's apartment would be asked to leave; and, in view of the Presidential Directive, the FBI would seize pertinent property in Arthur Bremer's apartment. The [apartment manager] advised he was somewhat confused by the whole situation but said, in as much as a United States President wanted Arthur Bremer's personal effects, the FBI could take anything they deemed necessary." [FBI 5.15.72 - Milwaukee]

Why did NIXON order the United States Secret Service and the FBI withdrawn in the midst of the investigation? Was it to give HOWARD HUNT time to go there and plant

McGovern literature? Why did NIXON then order the FBI and United States Secret Service back? Was it because the plan had been canceled? Would the plan have failed anyway because the media ransacked Arthur Bremer's apartment during the period HUNT was supposed to have been there?

Governor George Wallace wondered: "How did anyone know where he [Arthur Bremer] lived within an hour after I was shot?" George Wallace believed the White House/Special Operations Group was behind his shooting. He knew that NIXON had funneled about $400,000 to his political rivals, had initiated an Internal Revenue Service investigation of himself and his brother, and had helped the American Nazi Party recruit members of George Wallace's American Independent Party, so that the Nazis could not vote for George Wallace in the primaries. How did Charles Colson get Arthur Bremer's address so quickly? NIXON obtained it from the United States Secret Service and gave it to Charles Colson. The United States Secret Service reported that Arthur Bremer was carrying "the identification of Arthur Bremer, 2443 West Michigan Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisconsin" on his person. The FBI agent in charge of the investigation "indicated presently there was a need to determine if such an individual resided at the above address," but didn't call the Milwaukee FBI until 5:45 EDT (4:45 CDT).

Who was Artie Bremer? Was Arthur Bremer a Nazi willing to spend his life in prison to insure Senator George McGovern did not get elected President? On November 18, 1971, Arthur Bremer was arrested while he sat in his automobile outside a Milwaukee synagogue. He had parked in a no-parking zone, and when an officer approached him about this, he noticed a box of .38 caliber shells on the seat. Concealed on Arthur Bremer's person was a .38 Charter Arms revolver. He refused to say what he was doing there. Found among Arthur Bremer's possessions was a Black Panther Party newspaper and a Confederate flag. The FBI found "close-up snapshots of broken glass." Was Arthur Bremer documenting his anti-Semitic vandalism? When they interviewed Arthur Bremer's landlady, she told them Arthur Bremer had shaved his head approximately four months ago. Was Arthur Bremer an early skinhead?

WATERGATE JUNE 1972

On "April 5, 1972, (?)" the Office of the Inspector General of the CIA generated an Index Card titled "Internal Review Rolando Martinez, HUNT, BARKER, Mrs. Hunt, Tony Varona, Macco, Manuel Artime, Tino Fuentes, Carlos Prio Paper entitled 'Activities of HUNT and Dr. Manuel Artime in Miami and Nicaragua [English translation of Rolando Martinez' report].'" [CIA IG File #18 Tab #1]

On June 17, 1972, at 2:00 a.m., a White House/Special Operations Group unit was arrested inside the Democratic National Headquarters at the Watergate Hotel. A check bearing the name of HOWARD HUNT was discovered in the Watergate rooms used by the people apprehended. A few days after the aborted Watergate Operation, Roy Sheppard - a staff member of NIXON'S 1972 campaign who ran a pickup and delivery service - was directed by Dorothy Hunt to go to the Executive Office Building and remove several cartons of documents. Roy Sheppard used a Department of Transportation pass to enter the White House grounds. The documents he removed concerned HUNT'S White House/Special Operations Group activities and allegedly also contained information on Nelson Rockefeller. The fate of this material was unknown. It was either destroyed, or shipped somewhere by Railway Express. HUNT traveled to Los Angeles where he stayed with his attorney, Morton Jackson. HUNT called Manuel Artime from the home of Morton Jackson. [FBI 139-4089-1129] The CIA released this index card: "HUNT, E. HOWARD OR 72 M34544 /Y M /D MEM JUNE 28, 1972 PHILBY, HAROLD V3 /R PHILBY WAS A KGB AGENT 1930 63 BRITISH /Z 2572667." On June 28, 1972, the CIA generated a highly deleted Official Routing Slip To Director, Ex. Dir. D/Security "I suppose this is deleted at work." [CIA 41736]

DOROTHY HUNT

The FBI reported:

S.A. Mahan displayed a series of two black and white photographs of unknown white males and series of letters which were signed 'Bob' and Juan Carlos. Mrs. HUNT identified the photographs as photographs of Ernesto Herrera Iena, also known as 'Chango,' a citizen of Argentina who she met in Tokyo, Japan, and the other a photograph of Juan Carlos Quagliotti, a Uruguayan national. (Deleted) S.A. Mahan then displayed to Mrs. HUNT a .25 caliber colt automatic pistol, and asked if she was familiar with the weapon. Mrs. HUNT stated that this is her personal weapon, and stated that she is surprised that it is in the hands of the FBI, as she thought that the weapon was in a closet at her residence. Mrs. HUNT stated that she was given this weapon prior to 1946 when she traveled to China to work on behalf of the U.S. Treasury Department. She stated that she had nearly forgotten about the gun but stated that she does not know how or when this gun was removed from her residence as she observed it during the evening hours of June 24, 1972.

Dorothy HUNT was shown photos of STURGIS, BARKER, McCORD. The results of this were deleted. She told the FBI she had no idea of her husband's whereabouts.

Mrs. HUNT stated that the items that were displayed to her earlier in the interview may have been kept by her husband in a safety deposit box they maintained at the Riggs National Bank at Wisconsin and M Street. Mrs. HUNT stated that she would be willing to meet with S.A.'s Mahan and Stukey at that bank to review the contents of that safety deposit box for any further information that might be of value to the investigation being conducted by the FBI.

HUSH MONEY

By November 1972 HUNT was blackmailing the White House for $100,000. White House aide Fred LaRue gave Manuel Artime at least $21,000 to distribute to the families of the Watergate burglars. The CIA informed the FBI it had been reliably informed Manuel Artime had given cash to Miami area individuals, who in turn wrote checks to the Watergate Prisoners Fund. [CIA FOIA #2002 (21) EYES ONLY Memo E.O. 11652 - D/OS Howard J. Osborn] The CIA reported: "Mr. Silbert asked whether HUNT continued his ties with Manuel Artime, referring to the fact that he is mentioned as Manuel Artime's supervisor. Manuel Artime left the Agency in 1966. Were there any contacts between 1961 and the present?" The CIA responded: "Our records fail to reflect any information indicating that HUNT maintained any official ties with Manuel Artime since 1961. It is understood that Manuel Artime acted as godfather to one of HUNT'S children, but we have no data as to any personal association which developed subsequent to 1961." [CIA FOIA #2146-18]

THE DOROTHY HUNT PLANE CRASH

THEORY OF CRASH OF UNITED FLIGHT 533 DECEMBER 8, 1972

HUNT could have implicated NIXON in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. But did HUNT have any evidence? Had HUNT entrusted it to his wife while he was in prison? NIXON may have believed DOROTHY HUNT possessed evidence that linked him to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

As stated, DOROTHY HUNT was killed in the airplane crash of United Airlines Flight 533 on December 8, 1972, at Chicago's Midway Airport. UAL 533 was on its way from Washington, D.C., to Omaha, Nebraska, with an intermediate stop at Midway Airport. There were 55 people aboard, including five children and two infants. After Charles Colson became a born-again Christian, he stated: "I don't say this to many people because they think I am nuts. I think they killed DOROTHY HUNT. I really do..."

HOWARD HUNT: "When I see these repetitive allusions to my wife's death as having somehow been caused by the CIA, I think that is really enough...if my wife had been the only one killed that would have been one thing...but 40 people..."

A detailed analysis of the Aircraft Accident Report prepared by the National Transportation Safety Board on the crash indicated that the Boeing 737 crashed because of instrument sabotage that engendered pilot error. In its report, however, the NTSB attributed the cause of the crash only to pilot error. The report was unofficial. National Transportation Safety Board Chairman John Reed, "was not present and did not participate in the adoption of this report." The report went unsigned. The National Transportation Safety Board Report blamed "the Captain's failure to exercise positive flight management during the execution of a non-precision approach, which culminated in a critical deterioration of airspeed in the stall regime..."

THE FINAL DESCENT

At 2:26 p.m. the Captain ordered the crew of United Airlines Flight 533 to do a final descent check. At 2:27 p.m., United Air Lines Flight 533 was issued a missed-approach clearance by Midway Airport control tower: "United Flight 533, execute a missed approach..." Just as the sound of word "execute" began, the sound of the stickshaker, which was a device that sent vibrations through the cockpit several seconds before an aircraft was about to go into a stall, was heard on the tapes recovered from the cockpit voice recorder. Captain Whitehouse, the pilot of United Air Lines 533, age 44, had been employed by United Airlines for almost 20 years. He had accumulated a total of 18,000 hours flying time, of which 2,435 were in a Boeing 737. Every pilot was taught that when a stall occurs, he should point the aircraft's nose slightly downward by extending his flaps, then immediately accelerate the engines to increase thrust. HEMMING told this researcher:

When you get a stall you drop the nose. The last thing you do is add power because that will tend to raise your nose. Put you nose down first then add power, which lessens your rate of descent. Change the angle of attack of your wings which get more airflow going across the wings creating more lift. Then add power to kill the rate of descent. Your rate of descent has slackened off, but your nose is still pointing down.

Most survivors reported that, just before the crash, contrary to being nose-down, the aircraft went into a very high angle of attack. HEMMING told this researcher: "Whitehouse realized he was going to crash and tried to drag his tail to cut down his speed." Some survivors believed that there was a rapid application of power before impact. An analysis of the cockpit voice recorder tapes found by the General Electric Research Corporation did not conclusively show this power increase.

The cockpit voice recorder revealed that when the stickshaker went off at what was thought to be 1000 feet because of altimeter readings, Captain Whitehouse ordered the Second Officer to release the flaps to point the airplane's nose downward and get out of the stall. The Second Officer acknowledged the Captain's last command by saying: "Flaps 15." The Second Officer then said "I'm sorry." The National Transportation Safety Board stated that when faced with a stall, the Captain had decided to reconfigure the aircraft by extending the flight flaps because, within two seconds of the onset of the stickshaker, he asked for "more flaps." The National Transportation Safety Board stated that following this order, there was a sound indicative of flap lever movement. The National Transportation Safety Board concluded that it was Captain Whitehouse's error - failing to realize the flaps were already extended to 30 degrees and ordering the additional 15-degree extension while making a non-precision landing - that caused the crash. The National Transportation Safety Board: "The 15 degrees was added to the 30 degrees of extension that was accidentally there, so the aircraft continued to stall."

Eight seconds after the Second Officer said: "I'm sorry," United Air Lines Flight 533 crashed into several houses located near Midway Airport. Forty passengers and three crew members were killed. Two persons on the ground received fatal injuries. The aircraft itself was largely destroyed by the impact and subsequent fire. Ground damage "precluded any determination of the pre-impact integrity of the control system." If this was so, how did the National Transportation Safety Board arrive at its figure of the 30 degrees of extension that was "accidentally" there.

HEMMING told this researcher:

For the pilot to say 'flaps' then '15 degrees' - they ain't supposed to be at 15 degrees that quickly. It's deadly for those flaps to come up in a hurry when you are executing a missed approach. You'll sink. You got a stickshaker and ask for more flaps - that's the last thing you do. You're gonna start milking them flaps up. You're at that altitude and you have a stall, you've got to execute a missed approach. Nose down, full power. He's telling you what it says on the instrument. You run that fucker to 15 degrees below 500 feet you're going to die. He said he was sorry.

There was confusion in the cockpit during crash. The cause of this confusion would have become apparent had the flight recorder functioned properly.

THE DISABLED FLIGHT RECORDER

Eighty-two minutes after takeoff (approximately 14 minutes before the accident), the Fairchild Flight Data Recorder stopped functioning: "Flight recorder examination showed that a mitre gear (part of the drive gear assembly) had slipped on its shaft, causing the recorder to stop functioning." The cockpit voice recorder, which was recovered from the wreckage, revealed that when the flight recorder went off, a light went on in the cockpit and Captain Whitehouse asked: "Recorder go off?" The second officer: "Yeah." Captain Whitehouse: "See what's wrong, will ya...sounds to me like a circuit breaker...yeah, I just meant, I thought you'd better check everything..." The cockpit voice recorder revealed the Second Officer activated the circuit breaker that fused the power going to the flight recorder and reported: "It tests...I think its okay. I think its working...it says 'Off' but the signal, the encode light comes on and it shows, indicating taping. Christ, I can't even find the circuit breaker for this fucking flight recorder...I don't know, I get a reaction when I pull the AC, no reaction when you pull the DC though, you want me to call maintenance?" Captain Whitehead ordered the Second Officer to immediately call it in.

The recorder was installed on the day of the accident, and had last been overhauled on November 11, 1972, only two months before it malfunctioned. The Flight Recorder Group of the National Transportation Safety Board found: "No evidence of recorder malfunction in any of the parameters as determined by examining previous flights contained on this foil medium."

The mitre gear slipped because a saboteur had loosened its set screw. (The Kollsman Instrument Report asked: "if the questionable calibration arm set screws were loose...") HEMMING told this researcher:

That was very unusual. The thing is wired into the aircraft's electrical system and has its own backup battery. A power failure doesn't shut it down. I doubt if it was coincidental. How many wrecks do you have in the history of the NTSB where you could recover the flight recorder but it didn't work?

SENIOR HEARING OFFICER HENDRICKS

Exhibit 9-G is identified as a report of an examination of altimeters and air data computers recovered from the Boeing 737, United Airlines Flight 553. Exhibit 9-C-1 is photographs altimeters and air data computers recovered from flight 553. Exhibit 9E, excerpts from Boeing 737 instruction manual regarding the pilot static system.

Q. Mr. Angus, I would like for you to start by describing the altimetry system that is install in Boeing 737, and you may use Exhibit 9E for referral. I would like you to point out those components furnished by Kollsman.

A. Our involvement with the 757 air data computer and the servo-automatic computers for this particular aircraft. The central air data computer is a device which accepts inputs of static pressure, total pressure, temperature and electrical power. We sense the pressure functions and by means of servo systems, compute associated outputs that are used in various positions around the airplane. The sensors, sender portion of the air data computer consist essentially of mechanisms somewhat similar to what is contained in altimeters and airspeed indicators. That is, capsules which are responsive to the particular air pressures being supplied. And this particular information is converted into angular motion which ultimately becomes part of a synchotel system and combined with a servo, it positions all of the necessary output devices in accordance with program established by the specification for the air data computer, the output devices are in the forms of syncros, potentiometers, decoders, and reliability signals.

Included with the air data computer is a monitor system for each loop. This monitor determines that the servo system is properly following up each of the sensed values. If, as in the case of the altimeter, the servo system were to get out of track by as much as 100 feet, it would automatically disconnect the system. The way it does this, it cuts off the reliability signals that are sent to each of the using devices. So that any device in the airplane receives not only data from the air data computer, but it receives a validity signal which indicates whether or not the information should be used. The functions that are sent out are sent to indicators on the panel, auto-pilot, the flight recorder, the cabin pressurization system, and the transponder for reporting altitude. The altimeters are what are sometimes referred to as servo pneumatic altimeters. These altimeters have two modes of operation which are selectable by the pilot. In the standby mode of operation, the instrument will operate as a normal pressure sensitive device in accordance with the requirements of FAA/T on C10 Beacon. If it is elected, the indicator may also operate as a servo-repeater from the altitude data transmitted by the central air data computer. In order to operate in this mode, the pilot must actuate a switch knob on the face of the altimeter, which puts it in corrected mode of operation. In this mode of operation, the overall accuracy is improved from approximately 1/2 a percent system to about 2/10 of a percent accuracy.

Q. The corrected mode would be the normal side of the operation?

A. I believe the way the airline uses the term, the corrected mode is the normal side of operation.

Q. And I am sorry if I missed it, but there are two such systems in the aircraft?

A. Yes, there are two completely different independent systems. There is a central air data computer for the captain's side with his own indicator, and there is a central air data computer for the first officers side that he has his own independent altimeter. As I understand it there are independent static systems supplying each of these units.

Q. Where does Kollsman interface with Boeing in this system?

A. In each case there is a Boeing specification which determines what the inputs are that you receive and what specification level these inputs would be provided to. In the case of pressure, they give us certain -- we have to provide certain cords on the devices that will tie up the lines in the aircraft, electrical connectors -- it is pretty much standardized, what pins are used for each function.

Q. I believed you mentioned the monitor tripout. Can you describe the monitor tripout as it effects the altimeter. Does this go into the standby mode when the CADAC trips out?

A. The air data computer will supply precise altitude information to the altimeter. If, for some reason, the altitude module in the air data computer determines that the information is unreliable, it will automatically cut off the reliability signal going to the altimeter.

Q. Is there any other protection in the event of a legitimate signal which is erroneous coming from the central air data computer?

A. The altimeter also contains its servo-monitor. There are two basic modes of servo detection in the altimeter. First would be if the servo system in the altimeter does not track that output of the air data computer. If there is a 50 foot disagreement between the altimeter and the air data computer, the altimeter will automatically revert to standby operation. That will be operating as a straight TSO altimeter. At the time this occurs, there is a flag on the dial which indicates it goes from the corrected mode to the standby mode.

Q. You said this occurs with a 50 foot --

A. Fifty foot separation, that is correct.

Now, in addition to this, we have what is known as a limiting device. People are always concerned and rightly so, for some reason that the servo might run away. If, for example, servo in the air data computer were to run away, we would provide a limited device in the altimeter and at certain pre-selected levels after the altimeter has responded to the corrected mode. It will then be limited in total correction capabilities at the point the monitor will cut the altimeter off, even though the air data computer might want to drive further.

Q. What kind of error would this generate maximum?

A. The error is a variable error with altitude, so that you can take care of increased tolerances at high altitude. At sea level this error would amount to approximately 350 feet.

Q. At what phase of the investigation into the accident of United 533 did your participation start?

A. We started when the instruments had been recovered and they were returned to United at San Francisco. We joined the committee at the United overhaul base and participated with them.

Q. You participated in the examination of both altimeters and the central air data computer, is that correct?

A. That is right, two data computers and two altimeters.

Q. And you prepared Exhibit 9-C to describe the extent of your participation and findings, is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. I would like you to refer to Exhibit 9-C-1, answering the following, if you would please. Could you use the photographs and describe the general condition of the Captain's altimeter when it was first received by you?

A. I might mention before we go ahead that is all of these findings, the committee was present, and in general, I don't know of an area that doesn't exist, the committee in general agreed with the findings. These are not single person findings.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. The altimeter suffered primarily what appeared to be fire damage. There was some small indication of impact damage, but the primary source of the difficulty here was that the exterior of the case of the altimeter, which has an enamel paint which is baked on at the time of manufacture, this paint was actually burned off in many areas. With this burning off of the paint, all of the pressure seals in the instrument were no longer active.

The covered glass was cracked and it appeared to be intact, which gave us the impression that this was a thermostress problem, rather than breakage due to impact shock. The rear connector on the instrument was contaminated with a fire material which more than likely was the mating connector on the electrical harness supplied in the airplane. This material had to actually be dug out. It was quite solid. Then the electrical connector was cleaned off. We observed the instrument. We shook it lightly; it didn't have any particular noisiness inside which might indicate broken parts rolling around. We felt the instrument was capable of further testing.

Q. May I refer you to photograph 1-1 in your exhibit, please.

A. Yes, I am looking at that.

Q. The indicated dial is set 30.035 thereabout. Have you any reason to believe this setting had been changed since impact?

A. Yes. It is my understanding after the instruments had been recovered at the accident site, and as I understand it, notes were taken and photographs were taken of the instrument as mounted on the panel, that subsequently the barrel knob was rotated to see if the pointers were still operable and the particular setting that you see there is the setting that happened to be left on the instrument at the time that it was received in the United Shop.

Q. Could you briefly describe for me the functional test unit was subjected to?

A. This altimeter was placed in a ball jar. The reason for that was that we could not pipe pressure into the altimeter and maintain a reading due to the leakage from the various seals.

Without making any further adjustments to the altimeter, we connected this bell jar, which is a sealed chamber that you can look through and observe the altimeter inside of it, connected this chamber to a barometer and programmed pressure into the chamber, and each specific instance we brought the altimeter to an indicated value in 200 foot stops, going from 0 to 2000 feet.

At each time that we reached stabilization, we measured the pressure within the chamber by means of the barometer that was attached to it. We then computed, based upon the indicated values, pressure values, and the setting, we computed that the indicator had, in its present state, had an average error of approximately 150 feet in the minus direction.

Q. In which?

A. In the minus direction. We then took the same altimeter and just rotated the barrel knob to the 29-92 position, which is the standard position for performing tests on an instrument of this type, and then programmed corrected pressures into the instrument. And putting corrected pressures into the instrument, we then read the instrument error. Now, the instrument error in this case averages out to approximately minus 120 foot value. The reason for the disagreement in this particular case between the first test and the second test -- excuse me. Am I getting ahead? Do you want the reason now?

Q. Yes, go right ahead.

A. The reason we felt the disagreement existed was because due to the high temperature exposure of the unit, the operation of the fundamental mechanism was not as smooth as it would be in normal conditions. And operating somewhat erratically, you would not be perfectly sure exactly where the first level was when we were setting the pointer on the instrument. The second case, you program in a very specific pressure, vibrate the instrument, and then take a reading when it settled out. So using a control standard that is much more precise in the second case, the results tend to be more meaningful.

Q. And the error was still in the same direction?

A. Same direction, but much more repeatable all the way up. Used the same 2000 foot altitude test span and 200 foot increment.

Q. Okay, do you have any explanation as to how the low effect offset may have occurred?

A. Yes. The subsequent examination of the instrument after taking the case off revealed that the instrument internally, where the mechanism is located, had reached temperatures approaching 360 degrees Fahrenheit.

We have since taken an equivalent instrument of the servo pneumatic variety and subject that instrument to a basic calibration. The instrument was seasoned overnight in the normal operation that you season these instruments to, which is to expose it to plus 70 degrees. The next morning it was rechecked again and the instrument was a stable instrument. We had to ascertain this fact first.

Then we placed the instrument in an oven. Now I am saying in an oven because you are essentially placing it in air which is heated to a specific temperature level, but it is no a high circulation factor. It is something -- there is a gentle fan in there that just keeps the air moving at a slow pace. This particular instrument was placed there, kept there for one hour at 360 degrees -- excuse me, let me go back.

In the test condition, we did not expose it to 360 degrees because that happens to be coincident with the melting temperatures of the solders used in the instrument, so for the purpose of the second instrument, to keep the data valid, we operated this at 300 degrees Fahrenheit. No, under these conditions, after aligning the instrument to return to room temperature, we retested it and we have an average minimum error of 85 to 90 feet. Now that does not appear in the report because we just finished the test Monday. I received the data by phone on Tuesday. We will give you a supplement on that.

Q. Do the results of the pressure testing this particular altimeter in this manner; reflect operation in the servo mode as well as the stand-by?

A. No. When we were finished testing the instrument as noted previously, using control pressure inputs, that was as far as we went on the testing in San Francisco. At that point we concentrated our testing on some of the central air data computer testing. We subsequently resumed testing on this back at Elmhurst in our plant with the team present.

After verifying our initial data, we took the instrument out of the case, we found that all of the electrical components had been exposed to very high temperatures, capacitors had exploded, solder had melted. But the basic pressure mechanism was intact. So we could not operate the instrument in servo mode. We tried in California but we just blew fuses. At that point we just stopped; we didn't want to damage it.

Q. Can you describe the condition of the first officer's altimeter one as described by you?

A. The first officer's altimeter was in very poor condition as received. This instrument was subjected to extensive fire and impact damage. The fire damage present was at a level that actually melted the aluminum away, which means it was in the temperature band of 1100 degrees Fahrenheit. The base of the instrument was split open, and a goodly portion of it was missing. The rear mechanism in the instrument, which is the pressure sensing section, was also missing. The front end, the cover glass, and flange assembly, was missing. The display elements were still on the face of the instrument. Essentially all that we could say was present was a mechanism body with associated burned-out electrical components and the display portion of the instrument.

Q. Would you refer, please, to photograph 2-1 in Exhibit 9-C-1. Is this a photograph of the first officers altimeter?

A. Yes, that is a photograph taken at United as it was received.

Q. Can you explain the significance of the dial reading or apparent pointer positions and also the reading on the baro set on the altimeter as found?

A. The pointer positions are what are referred to in the trade as uncoordinated. The relative position of the pointers cannot exist based upon the normal reading that is present in the instrument. The baro set was approximately 30,685.

Q. Was there any indication on the dial of the instrument such as impact markings?

A. No.

Q. Anything to give you a clue as to what the altimeter may have been reading on impact.

A. No. We have very carefully examined the dial components under a binocular type microscope using lights and we could not find any signs that could be attributed to an impact mark.

Q. Would you briefly describe the significance of the photos that you have labeled 2-6, 2-7, and 2-8 in establishing the uncoordinated positions of the pointers?

A. Yes. While we were at United, United made available to the team a recently serviced altimeter in their possession of the same type. We very carefully measured reference points on each pointer of the first officers unit and then positioned the corresponding point on the sample altimeter to that value, and then photographed, the purpose being when you look at the photograph of the good instrument and the photograph of this instrument which had been damaged in the accident, it become readily apparent the pointers are discoordinated.

Q. The primary central air data computer, can you describe the coefficient of that component when you received it?

A. The air data computer received what we would consider a moderate amount of impact damage. By that I mean the cases were dented in several areas on each unit. The front face of the computer was also damaged rather significantly, and there was fire damage around various areas. Let me just check which ones -- the captain's, first the captains computer unit was not severely damaged, but the first officers unit was very badly burned to the point where even the knobs could not be rotated.

Q. Were the units, the internal portions, in operable condition?

A. Yes, they were operable.

Q. Could you describe for us, please, the tests to which these units were subjected?

A. Testing accomplished on the air data computers consisted, first, of isolating all of the output devices to obtain position data at the point of power cutoff to the computer. This was followed by a check of the altitude sensor by disconnecting it electrically from the computer, and running it strictly on a pressure function to determine the operability of the sensor, and again, there are means in there to determine the point at which power was cut off.

At this point we got both computers - we had the sensors and everything reconnected. We programmed standard pressures into the computer and measured the output of the --- find the sink rows. This was to determine if the signals going to the altimeter were within specification requirements.

In the case of the first officer's air data computer, it read approximately 3 ½ degrees low. This is roughly 45 to 50 feet. The captain's altimeter was well within spec, in general it was within approximately 7 feet. We then checked the correlation of the encoder, which is used by the transponder. This is checked by comparing the point at which you transition from one code value to the next as compared to the altitude data being transmitted to the indicator in the panel. This was in general less than one degree on both units, which is within 14 feet.

And individually we tried --- we worked the servo unit up to air data computer and ran them through the same range, 2,000 feet. The altimeter connected to the captain's air data computer generally responded to less than 10 feet. First officer's was between minus 30 feet and 50 feet. Following this, we ran what we call a coast test of the servo. This test was to determine if the computer was being driven as it would be in the case of a descent and power was cut off, would the computer continue to move, thereby destroying the validity of the original set of data we took off the output devices. This test was run at top rates of descent, 1,000 feet per minute and 2,500 feet per minute. In the case of the captain's altimeter, so-called coast effect was less than 7/10. The first officer's altimeter approximately two feet. We considered this gave the original output devices reasonable values that we could accept.

Subsequent to this we performed a monitor check. This took special test equipment and this was done back in New York. What we did in this case was we isolated the modules for the air data computer and used jump cables, so that electrically they were connected even though they were set aside on some special test boxes. This allows us to, with the computer and the particular modules concerned, tied together, we can inactivate the servo, but still have power applied, and determine whether then monitors were still operating. The monitors on the both the first officer's and the captain's operated properly. This and some subsequent testing also verified not only did the monitors operate, but at the time that the monitor operates, the encoder output was cutoff automatically.

At one point in time the subject came up, were the sensors capable of performing when submitted to assorted acceleration factors, as you might have when the aircraft might pull some G's if you made a sharp pull up.

We made some special test pictures and adapted the altitude modules to a centrifuge. Units were tested individually for this. We subjected them from zero to one, back to zero; from zero to four G's, back to zero; then up to ten G's and back to zero. This was done at an altitude level of approximately 500 feet. The first officer's altitude module from the air data computer at 10 G's, the output varied 3 ½ degrees, which would be equivalent to 100 feet. The captain's module was within two degrees at 10 G's, which would put it at approximately 50 to 60 feet. There is no requirement for the 10 G's. The test was performed in any case. In further testing of the units, we became aware that when the overall air data computers were fired up for a short period of time, the reliability signal coming from the airspeed modules was in the unreliable state and then after approximately 30 seconds to a minute, reliability signal would come back on, indicating a valid state. This was an unusual condition so we decided to pull the airspeed sensor modules off and check them. This was the captain's incidentally, in case I didn't mention that. When we opened the airspeed sensor, we found there was a gear disengagement at the output stage on this particular sensor. The sensor has subsequently --- gear has been reengaged and everything operated normally.

We were concerned because when we looked at his particular sensor, the gearing is protected with stops, what we call stops in terms of functions, high and low; and also side stops so that the gears can't disengage by moving axis. All stops were in place. That particular sensor, we checked all the records, dates back to 1967.

We subsequently, as I mentioned, re-engaged the gears properly and then we took the sensor to our test laboratory and performed a shock test in the direction that was indicated as if this disengagement occurred due to shock. We felt that it would probably come in the fore and aft direction of the airplane so we checked it in that direction and levelwise what we did, we said we were not going to try to break it, the normal shock test for a unit of this type would be to expose it to 15 G's for approximately 11 millisecond pulse. In this case we first tested it at 20 G's, then we tested it at 25 G's. The instrument stayed in the sink and there was no disengagement. We stopped at this point because we felt that there may be further testing required for some other functions and it would not be conducive to break the instrument to prove one point.

The air data computers were made ready again and at the request of United, we ran what we called some computer step function tests. These tests consisted of programming pressure changes into the sensor and measuring the time that it would take the output of the air data computer to become stable at the secondary pressure. This was done for values of a thousand foot step function, 500 foot stop function, 200 feet and 100 feet. In the case of the captain's 1,000 foot function, the response of the overall system, -- this is, the air data computer, it was 5 seconds. When you get down to 100 feet, you are talking 3 or 2 ½ seconds. Subsequently we took the computers back up and in order to determine the operation of the monitors, we ran the air data computers at high velocity, and velocity chosen was that value at which point the servo would just indicate at the edge of the monitor trip. We're talking roughly 100 feet. The captain's air data computer would run at 21,400 feet per minute and the first officer's approximately 18,000 feet per minute. Now, that essentially completed the testing that was done on the air data computers.

Q. Thank you Mr. Angus. I may have misunderstood something, but I would like to refer you to page 10 in Exhibit 9-C. This test concerns the position evaluation of the sink rows with relation to the output of the central air data computer. I think I heard testimony, but you spoke of figures of 45 to 50 feet for the first officer's and 7 feet for the captain's primary unit. I would like clarification of what the 45 to 50 feet and the 7 feet are in reference to.

A. Those values don't appear on page 18. The values you are referring to come about on page 21, which is the programming correct pressure into the unit and measuring the output finding sink roll. The data on page 18 is the reading in the "as received" stats of each output module.

Q. Could you explain the page 18 figures for me again sir? I am specifically interested in trying to correlate the position of the sink rows in the "as received" condition to the known pressure altitude.

A. The sink rows that is used to drive the altimeter on the flight panel were read out, using an angle position indicator. Captain's read out, converted to feet, read out 652 feet; first officer's read out 558 feet. Now this difference here corresponds to 54 feet, but there would be some small difference depending upon the time sequence of power off, small differences in calibration, things of this nature.

Q. What barometric pressure would these figures refer to, sir?

A. These just refer to the "as received" state. They don't refer to any barometric pressure. They are measured against what we all call standard altitude. Standard altitude sometimes referred to by pilots at times as QNH altitude. This would be in the case of the altimeter, altimeter set for 29.92 power setting. If you wanted to convert these QNH values, it would be necessary to add the appropriate offset that would correspond to the local baro setting.

Q. How does the pilot produce the QNH baro set into the system?

A. He introduces it to the air data computer. He uses this in terms of his altimeter. When he program the baro setting into the altimeter it automatically puts the baro setting in whether he be using it in standby or servo mode of operation. It puts in an additive factor, adds so many feet to the display.

Q. So in order to correlate the "as received" position of the sink rows in the central air data computer to a given elevation on a given day, we would have to apply the QNH correction, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you done that for these figures?

A. The difference between the standard altitude and the pressure setting, as we were notified, 30.035 comes out to 120 feet. At 120 feet, each of these values, that would be the indicated value being presented to the crew at the time of power cut off.

Q. And knowing the elevation of the impact site is about 620 feet above mean sea level that represents an error of about 150 feet, 100 feet. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Thank you. The encoders verified were correlated with the sink positions?

A. That is correct. The photo transmission point is always at the 50 feet point. The captain had a 652 foot value so that was into the next code bit, which was 700 feet.

Q. Now I would like to refer you to page 27 in this. Again it may be misunderstanding on my part, but I thought that I heard you say that the acceleration test showed an error of approximately 100 feet. And on page 27 I see a statement that all three positions maximum deviation of model sensed was one degree or 27 feet, for acceleration from zero to 10 G's.

A. When we do a test that is not a standard test for that particular equipment, we always try, particularly in the case of an accident, equipment, we always try to get an equivalent item. So in this particular case we took a sensor that was in stock and first ran the test through on the sensor. That particular sensor was within one degree on all the tests. The data for the two sensors involved is contained on the next page, and that data contains the difference values that I quoted previously.

Q. Were there any other significant findings in the evaluation of the units other than those already discussed?

A. On point we did, on the air data computers we did check the friction level of this and the friction level was down on the order of 2 feet. I think it was two feet on one and seven feet on the other one. We have checked the captain's altimeter for lead effect on the captain's, and he is coming out very close to what we consider nominal.

Q. And Mr. Angus, I can't find it right now, but in the report there is a reference to white flaking material in the static report of one of the central air data computers. Could you amplify that a little for me?

A. Angus: Yes. After we had resumed testing this equipment in Elmhurst, when we were running the monitor test, as I previously mentioned, we had to remove the altitude modules from the Central Air Data Computer so we could run a jumper cable. So it would be possible to interrupt the servo motor pilot. When we separated the module, I am not sure which one it is, that was the first officers unit. When we took the first officer's altitude module off the computer chassis. There was a white, flaky, material over the connecting port as used to connect the module into the plumbing with the central air data computer that goes to the connection tubes. There was a small deposit, probably two or three cubic millimeters, of very flaky material. We had noted back at United in San Francisco that one of the static lines had some water in it which looked to be like it might be water that had accumulated because of fire. The water wasn't clean.

Q. Was there any analysis of the white, flaky, material?

A. We, that white flaky material was placed in a sealed box and it is available to the Board if they want to spectrograph it. Now the general assumption on the flaky material is this is contained on a stainless steel pressure port which fits into an anodized aluminum. It was just felt his loose -- all the people called in with reasonable chemical background indicated it was more likely an aluminum oxide.

CHAIRMAN BURGESS: What?

THE WITNESS: An aluminum oxide.

MR. STREET: I have no questions.

MR. LAYNOR: I wasn't through.

CHAIRMAN BURGESS: I am sorry, Mr. Laynor is still continuing.

MR. STREET: I am sorry.

(Discussion off the record)

BY MR. LAYNOR

Q. Mr. Angus, I believe in your testimony you commented to the fact that to your knowledge of these systems are connected to two completely independent static systems. It is true then that both static systems will have to be effected in a similar manner to cause essentially the same error in the system?

A. It would appear that way due to the fact they have this more than tolerance difference in the particular outputs of the computers.

Q. Are the static systems, again to your knowledge, you could refer to exhibit 9-E, were the static systems which feed the central air data computer common in any way to the captain to the captain or first officers air speed indicators?

A. First of all, you are talking, "as received" correct?

Q. Yes, sir. First of all, as I understand it, the central air data computer themselves transmit no information to the air speed indicators in the cockpit. Is this true?

A. This is correct.

Q. And the airspeed indicators?

A. The pitot input -- the panel requirements for pilot pressure come off separate pitot tubes according to this diagram. In other words, there is a pilot tube that supplies the captain's panel, a pilot supply for the first officer's panel, pilot for each air data computer independently.

Q. How about static systems, sir?

A. It would appear to be the same way for the static except in the case of static there, they cross over -- in other words, there is a right and a left pitot static tube tied together to provide what is called a balanced pitot static. I think in this case there were dual statics for each side, thus providing a line for the indicator separate.

Q. Okay. I realize that the static system installation is not in your area of responsibility, but can you discuss possible reasons why the static system errors -- although of a magnitude reflected in the sink row telepositions in the central or data computers, could have occurred? Can you offer any rational explanation as to why the central air data computers could have been reading in the direction they were?

A. I am afraid I will have to pass that at the moment.

THE TWO DISABLED ALTIMETERS

James Angus testified that he found contaminant: "The rear connector on the instrument was contaminated with a fire material which more than likely was the mating connector on the electrical harness supplied in the airplane. This material had to actually be dug out." He found flaky material: "There was a white, flaky, material over the connecting port as used to connect the module into the plumbing with the central air data computer that goes to the connection tubes. There was a small deposit, probably two or three cubic millimeters, of very flaky material." No spectrograph was run on the flaky material and there was no scientific evidence indicating that it was aluminum oxide.

HEMMING told this researcher: "When you land a big bird, you have got to know your precise altitude." At the time of the missed approach, the altitude of United Air Lines Flight 533 was thought by the First Officer to be approximately 1,000 feet above sea level. When the National Transportation Safety Board interviewed witnesses to the crash, however, it discovered that the aircraft descended from the cloud base at an estimated altitude of only 400 feet, heading in a northwesterly direction. Shortly thereafter it veered to the right, as the pilot began to execute the missed approach, and was on a northerly heading when the crash occurred. By this time, more altitude had been lost.

No meaningful altitude indications were obtained from either of the altimeters. Captain Whitehouse's altimeter was virtually intact, but "because of heat damage to the internal components, no assessment could be made of the pre-impact accuracy..." When Captain Whitehouse's altimeter was disassembled at the Kollsman Instrument Corporation, technicians observed and photographed foreign matter in its gears. BELOW: photograph titled "Captain's Altimeter - Gear with contaminant in teeth." Angus never mentioned this.

THE DISENGAGED AIRSPEED INDICATOR

The Captain's airspeed indicator had also been tampered with. When it was tested, it remained at the high end of the airspeed system. The technicians from Kollsman Instruments reported:

The condition was isolated to a gear and a sector (non-linear) which had become disengaged. This allowed the output shaft to assume a high airspeed position regardless of the input airspeed value."When the technicians from Kollsman Instruments discovered this problem, they were, according to Angus, "concerned because when we looked at this particular sensor, the gearing is protected with stops, what we call end stops in terms of functions, high and low; and also side stops so the gears can't disengage by moving axle. All stops were in place. That particular sensor, we checked the records back to 1967.

THE CENTRAL AIR DATA COMPUTER

The National Transportation Safety Board also discovered common errors in two independent systems that "could have been transmitted from the Central Air Data Computer units to the altimeter of the First Officer." This static error may have been caused by the contaminant that was found in the altitude modules of the Central Air Data Computer. HEMMING told this researcher:

The Central Air Data Computer tells you if you've sprung a leak somewhere, or if something is contaminating your system etc. A little computer tells you right away, 'turn on your de-icer' various procedures. It's a warning system that tells you not to believe your gauges.

THE PREMATURE POWER FAILURE

The Central Air Data Computers were recovered and both units were capable of normal operation, but their fine altitude synchros showed an altitude higher than crash site's. Electronic measurement of the #1 fine altitude synchro in Captain's Central Air Data Computer altitude module showed a phase angle that corresponded to 772 feet above sea level. A similar measurement of the First Officer's #1 fine altitude synchro corresponded to 718 feet. The technicians at Kollsman Instruments checked the fine altitude synchro #2, and got similar readings. They checked the Coarse Synchro #2, the Cabin Pressure Potentiometer, and the TAT/EPRIL and obtained identical readings. This was odd, since when electrical power was removed for any reason, the altitude synchros did not move, but remained in their position at the moment of power removal. This indicated that the power going to the Central Air Data Computer was cut off at an altitude higher than that of the crash site, before the plane crashed, instead of on impact with the ground. Nonetheless, the NTSB concluded: "The static system errors reflected in the Central Air Data Computer readings at impact do not have a bearing on the events at Midway."

Even if we accepted the statement of the National Transportation Safety Board that pilot error was responsible for the crash, all the aforementioned malfunctions could have contributed to pilot error. The strongest evidence of sabotage was that the flight recorder had gone off 14 minutes before the accident, so the National Transportation Safety Board claimed it had very little to work with when it conducted its investigation. To compensate for this, it extrapolated flight path data from the traces registered by the flight in the Automated Radar Terminal Service (ART-III) at O'Hare International Airport, which had been tracking Flight 533. The National Transportation Safety Board, however, admitted that data obtained in this manner was far from precise, precluding an accurate determination of the nature and tempo of the events during the 61 seconds before impact.

SHERMAN SKOLNICK

Researcher Sherman Skolnick was the first to point out that Flight 533 was sabotaged. Skolnick, however, added charges that Captain Whitehouse had been poisoned, and that Midway Control Tower, the Serrelli Mob and El Paso Natural Gas were in some way involved. Skolnick, who is Jewish, is an advisor to the crypto-Nazi organization, Liberty Lobby, which published Spotlight. Andrew St. George and Mark Lane were also connected with Liberty Lobby. HEMMING told this researcher: "A.J. just because they don't like Jews you're prejudiced against them. Just because they gassed a few million, you're getting all upset."

ANALYSIS: INSTRUMENT SABOTAGE

The technology involved in loosening the set screw on the flight recorder, just enough so that the instrument would stop functioning 15 minutes or so before landing, indicated that this was a professional job. Someone had also manually disengaged the gears on Captain Whitehouse's airspeed indicator, and had rewired the plane's electrical system so that it would stop functioning prior to landing. In 1993 the final report of the National Transportation Safety Board on United Air Lines Flight 533's crash was still available to researchers, but the National Transportation Safety Board had routinely destroyed documents it was based on, since they were over 15 years old. The report mentioned the Central Air Data Computer readings, and the disabled flight recorder was noted in the cockpit voice recordings transcription; no mention, however, was made of the contaminant or the premature power cutoff.

NIXON

Minutes after the crash, 50 FBI agents rushed to the scene, conducting interviews and seizing evidence. John Reed, the Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, protested the actions of the FBI after the House Government Activities Subcommittee had pressured him to do so. In a letter to Acting FBI Director William D. Ruckelshaus, John Reed wrote that "for the first time in the memory of our staff" the FBI had interviewed witnesses and listened to control tower tapes before investigators for the National Transportation Safety Board did. William Ruckelshaus responded that the agents were investigating a Crime Aboard Aircraft, and were within the law, although he did admit that more than 50 agents were on the scene. [FBI 149-10024-12]

NIXON contemplated using the FBI to obtain documents he desired. White House/Special Operations Group member Jack Caufield said Charles Colson told him the Brookings Institution possessed papers needed by the Administration, and that the FBI had adopted a policy of coming to the scene of any suspicious fires in Washington, D.C. Jack Caufield believed Charles Colson had hinted that he should start a fire at the Brookings Institute enabling the FBI to make its appearance and steal the desired documents. [Wash. Post 11.22.74; Jack Anderson 8.9.74] G. Gordon Liddy reported: "The operation that we planned was to purchase several used fire engines from the market where they are available, have them painted and declared in the colors of the Washington, D.C., Fire Department, to have our Cuban assets dressed in the fireman's uniforms and attending the engines, to have a penetration which would then, during the period of time there would be no one there - so no one would be hurt - start a fire in the Brookings Institution. The first engines to respond would be ours. It would be our people who would enter, and in the guise of putting out the fire, they would take whatever it was that Mr. Colson wanted out of the Brookings Institution. [HUNT] came to me with this task from his principal, who was Mr. Colson."

One day after the crash of United Air Lines Flight 533, NIXON appointed Egil Krogh Under Secretary of Transportation. Egil Krogh controlled the parent agency of the National Transportation Safety Board, the Federal Aeronautics Administration. Ten days later, NIXON appointed Alexander P. Butterfield as the head of the Federal Aeronautics Administration. BARKER stated that the death of Dorothy Hunt caused HUNT to give up blackmailing the White House and plead guilty. This benefited NIXON. John Dean discussed Mrs. HUNT'S death with NIXON:

Dean: Mrs. HUNT was the savviest woman in the world. She had the whole picture together before her death.

NIXON: Great sadness.

NIXON considered granting HUNT clemency if he were convicted in the Watergate affair: "I, uh, question of clemency...HUNT is a simple case. I mean, uh, after all, the man's wife is dead, was killed." When the FBI examined Dorothy Hunt's remains, it found $10,000. HUNT denied this was hush money, and he claimed it was going to be used to purchase a franchise for a Holiday Inn. The FBI investigated HUNT'S claim, and discovered that it was not normal for such a fee to be paid in cash and that such a fee would have had to be paid at the main office in Memphis, Tennessee.

NIXON: I said of course commutation could be considered on the basis of his wife, and that is the only discussion I ever had in that light. (March 21, 1973)

Haldeman: Then I've got a subpoena to appear in Federal Court in Illinois...

NIXON: What's that about?

Haldeman: In that matter of the murder - of the plan to murder several dozen people.

NIXON: On what grounds are they getting you there?

Haldeman: The airline crash where Mrs. HUNT died. They apparently have me as a factor in crashing the airplane of something. (exhales)

NIXON: Keep the faith.

Haldeman: Yes sir.

NIXON: God

Haldeman: Never worry (May 11, 1973)

CLYDE SNOW

The same man that did the analysis of the tramp shots for the House Select Committee on Assassinations also did some investigative work on the Dorothy Hunt plane crash. First he was asked to identify the body of Dorothy Hunt, than he was asked to determine if HOWARD HUNT was a tramp in Dealey Plaza on November 22, 1963. Snow is an expert on the HUNT family!!!

IDENTIFICATION

AIRCRAFT ACCIDENT: UNITED AIR LINES FLIGHT 553

BOEING 737

MIDWAY AIRPORT

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

December 8, 1972.

On the evening of December 8, 1972, I traveled from Washington, D.C., to Chicago, Illinois, to participate in the human factors investigation of the United Air Lines Flight 553 which had crashed near Midway Airport earlier that afternoon. Upon arrival, I was assigned to the Human Factors Group with the request that I aid in the identification of the victims. At this time (approximately 1:00 a.m., 9 December 1972), I called the Cook County Coroner's Office and was informed that gross external descriptions of all the bodies had been completed as well as complete necropsies on two of the three male crew members. Further work was suspended until the next morning.

On Saturday morning, 9 December 1972, I arrived at the Coroner's office at 8:30 a.m. By this time, a United Air Lines team under the direction of Dr. Joseph Kidera had been organized and was gathering background information useful in identification from the victim's next of kin. The evening before, the identification division of the Chicago Police Department had begun sorting and cataloging personal effects of the victims. The FBI Disaster Squad, under the direction of special agent Beverly Ponder, had arrived from Washington and immediately set to work to collect fingerprints from those bodies from which prints, were obtainable. Although final positive identification (in the form of a signed death certificate) is the responsibility of the Cook County Coroner, coroner officials lacking identification specialists of their own agreed to accept as positive identifications those made through the combined efforts of Dr. Kidera's team and the FBI Disaster Squad.

Unfortunately, before this arrangement was agreed upon several bodies were released by coroner authorities on the basis of clothing, personal effects, or visual identification by relatives. A preliminary inspection of the bodies revealed that many were too badly burned for fingerprinting and that identification would have to be based on dental evidence. An inquiry to coroner officials revealed that the dentist ordinarily used as a consultant in such cases was not available on weekends. Since one crew member, at this time, had not been identified and, at best, the identifications made the previous evening could only be considered tentative, it appeared that priority should be given to the organization of a dental identification team. After clearing with Dr. Kidera, I was granted permission to organize such a team by Cook County Coroner authorities.

1. Each body was first examined by the FBI and if prints were available they were taken.

2. The body was next examined by this investigator and two United Air Lines physicians serving on Dr. Kidera's team. This examination yielded an assessment of the individual's sex, age, race, stature, weight, and evidence of old surgical procedures, deformities, and anomalies useful in identification.

THE WATERGATE TRIAL JANUARY 1973

HUNT'S Watergate break-in trial began on January 10, 1973. He was charged with Burglary and Eavesdropping. On January 14, 1973, HUNT offered to plead guilty to three of the six charges of an indictment handed down by a Federal grand-jury. This offer was made one month after the United 533 crash. The New York Times reported: "HUNT, a CIA agent for 20 years, had found the public interest in him to be extremely disagreeable...He wore dark glasses and a hat low on his forehead..." [NYT 1.14.73] HUNT pleaded guilty to Wiretapping, Burglary and Conspiracy. HUNT was given a long prison sentence by Federal Judge John J. Sirica, who wanted to pressure him into incriminating his superiors in the NIXON White House. On January 18, 1973, BARKER and STURGIS entered guilty pleas. They were both released on bail pending sentencing. NIXON continued to distribute hush money to the Watergate burglars. In late January 1973 Manuel Artime gave $45,000 to STURGIS. On February 2, 1973, Judge John J. Sirica said he doubted if the Watergate trial got to the bottom of the case. On March 29, 1973, HUNT was granted immunity.

WILLIAM BUCKLEY

The CIA's Office of the Inspector General generated this index card on September 21, 1973:

IG File #13 Tab 4 Internal Review

M/R by Fredrick N. Evans with routing sheet and attachment. Subject: Watergate - William F. Buckley. Jack Anderson, FRANK STURGIS, William F. Buckley, HOWARD HUNT, Fred Evans, Fred Silva, Thomas Garrity, Curtis McSherry, DAVID PHILLIPS.

Frederick K. Silva was in Guatemala from 1969 to 1971, in Ecuador 1971 to 1973, Colombia 1975 to 1978 and Chile 1978 to 1980.

William Buckley maintained a close friendship with HUNT. By 1964 William Buckley was a syndicated columnist. William Buckley suggested OSWALD was a KGB agent, and in an article written in 1975 entitled: "Who Killed Everybody?" he ridiculed assassination research. On December 28, 1973, the U.S. Appeals Court released HUNT, pending his appeal. A week after his conviction, HUNT and Mario Lazo appeared on William Buckley's television program, Firing Line. Mario Lazo stated: "You know when we left Cuba, my wife and I, we left with $2. To lose everything that you've made your entire life at the end of a long life is very bad. To lose a friend the way BARKER lost his friend [to Castro's firing squad], the way this gentleman recently lost his wife [DOROTHY HUNT] is much worse...politics is a very dirty business, you know that. The Americans all know that. McGovern and his campaign compared NIXON to Hitler on three occasions publicly, and the NIXON Government to the Hitler henchman. This is the Communist line."

Christopher Buckley, William's son, recalled,

Pup's boss at the CIA in Mexico in 1951 was E. HOWARD HUNT. HOWARD was — you may have heard something about this — indicted in 1972 after locks were jimmed open at the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate, in an effort, among other things, to sabotage George McGovern's presidential campaign. Pup left the C.I.A.'s employ in 1952, but he remained friends with HUNT and was godfather to — and, indeed, trustee for — the HUNTs' children. As Watergate unfolded, I found myself home from college some weekends, in the basement sauna with Pup after dinner, listening to him as he confided his latest hush-hush phone call from Howard. It was dramatic, even spooky, stuff. The calls would come at prearranged times, from phone booths. One night, Pup looked truly world-weary. Howard's wife, Dorothy, had just been killed in a commercial-airline crash while on a mission for him, reportedly delivering hush money to Watergate operatives.

"It turns out that there's a safety-deposit box." I was 21, an aspiring staff reporter on The Yale Daily News. Watergate was a very big story. No: the biggest story since the Fall of Rome. Oh, how my little mouth salivated. Not that I could repeat a single word of any of this. "A safety-deposit box?" "There's a Mr. X, apparently. The way it works is this: I don't know his identity, but he knows mine. Howard has given him instructions: if he's killed - " "Killed? Jesus." - if something happens...In that event, Mr. X will contact me. He has the key to the safety-deposit box. He and I are to open it together.” “And?” Pup looked at me heavily. “Decide what to do with the contents.” “Jesus, Pup.” “Don’t swear, Big Shot.” “What sort of contents are we talking about?” This next moment, I remember vividly. Pup was staring at the floor of the sauna, hunched over. His shoulders sagged. He let out a sigh. “I don’t know, exactly, but it could theoretically involve information that could lead to the impeachment of the president of the United States.” This conversation took place in December 1972. [NYT 4/22/09]

Rolling Stone Magazine reported two of HUNT’S daughters, Kevan and Lisa, still hold their father responsible for the tragedy of their mom’s death. St. John also believes sabotage was involved. He thinks that the Nixon White House wanted to both get rid of his mother and send a message to his father. Nonetheless, he says he tries not to place blame.

She got on that plane willingly and lovingly, because that’s the kind of woman she was,” he says. “They had lots of marital problems...He was unfaithful to my mom, but she stayed with him. He was a swinger. He thought of himself as a cool dude, suave, sophisticated, intellectual. He was Mr. Smooth. A man of danger. He was perfect for the CIA. He never felt guilt about anything. But when it came down to it, she had his back, and she could hang in there with the big dogs. She was really pissed at Nixon, Liddy, all those guys, and she was saying, ‘We’re not going to let them hang you out to dry. We’re going to get them. Those motherfuckers are going to pay.’ So I’ve never held what happened against him. I had bitterness and resentment, but I always knew he did what he had to do given the circumstances.”

In May 1974 Manuel Artime was targeted for assassination by a group that called itself Zero. In January 1975 Orlando Bosch was in Panama, where he joined a failed assassination plot against General Omar Torrijos. The Drug Enforcement Administration also planned to assassinate Omar Torrijos at this time. The Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee inquired into reports that Drug Enforcement Administration official William Durkin participated in discussions within the Drug Enforcement Administration about assassinating Omar Torrijos. [DEA Paul Smith Memo 2.10.75] Another Drug Enforcement Administration memorandum stated: "It was alleged that a discussion concerning assassination involved the possibility of killing Mr. Noryago [Noriega], the principal assistant of the President of Panama, and that Smith and Durkin actually proposed that he be killed." [DEA Wolf Memo 3.24.75 cited in DEFEO Rep 6.18.75] In October 1975 Manuel Artime associate Edgardo Buttari died. Carlos Prio Soccarras delivered his eulogy. Gaeton Fonzi: "In 1975 an informant called the office of Senator Schweiker and said that Manuel Artime's friend in Mexico City claimed that Manuel Artime had guilty knowledge of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Manuel Artime, moving in and out of the country on business, could not be interrogated before Senator Schweiker's mandate expired." In September 1976 Manuel Artime, Anastasio Somoza, and agents of the Chilean Junta met in Miami. By 1976, the Bay of Pigs Brigade veterans were heavily engaged in narcotics trafficking and began killing each other off. Between February 1976 and February 1977, six Brigade members were killed. Manuel Artime told The Miami News that he feared for his life. Four months later, in October 1977, Manuel Artime got stomach and liver cancer. On November 3, 1977, Gaeton Fonzi contacted Manuel Artime. He had agreed to be interviewed by the HSCA. Gaeton Fonzi: "I contacted Manuel Artime to take his sworn statement. Before I could, Artime went into the hospital and was told he had cancer. By mid-November 1977 he was dead, at age 45." Manuel Artime told Gaeton Fonzi AMLASH was proposed by JFK and that he was listening to the radio when President Kennedy was assassinated. On August 2, 1981, General Omar Torrijos, 52, was killed in the crash of a Panamanian Air Force plane in bad weather over western Panama. The pilot, co-pilot, a mechanic, two bodyguards and a dentist were also killed. The wreckage of the plane was recovered by the Panamanian National Guard. Manuel Noriega succeeded Omar Torrijos.

HUNT 1974 TO 1995

On January 9, 1974, John Richards of the CIA generated a MFR on HUNT which mentioned Fred Goodrich. [CIA IG File #12 Tab #50] On February 4, 1974, John C. Richards and F. P. Goodrich, IG File #12 Tab #50, Internal Review M/R by John C. Richards. Subject: Watergate / HUNT." On February 26, 1974, Howard J. Osborn generated a memo on HUNT that was an "EYES ONLY envelope to be opened by Donald F. Chamberlain, Scott D. Breckinridge and John C. Richards." On September 28, 1974, John D. Morrison Jr. and Raymond Rocca, met with HUNT and his attorney, William Snyder, in regard to HUNT making certain changes in Undercover.

These concern the fabrication of the (deleted as of 2010) for a Mexican operation, and entry into the (deleted as of 2010) in Mexico City, and (deleted as of 2010)...Essentially these changes disguise the identity of the fabricated newspaper, and remove a reference to journalists as agents, delete the word (deleted as of 2010) to make the entered Embassy non-specific... [CIA OC 74-1755]

In April 1977 HUNT was mentioned in FBI File 89-10127 p2. On March 8, 1975 HUNT wrote this to Robert Olsen of the Rockefeller Commission

While I can appreciate the Commission's desire not to release its finding piecemeal, please bear in mind that I am slated to return to prison and I greatly fear that the sinister allegations of my involvement in the Kennedy assassination will have inflamed the prison atmosphere to the point of menacing my life. For this reason, I request that the Commission's verdict on the photographs purporting to show STURGIS and myself as arrested tramps in Dallas be made public as soon as possible. Moreover, I am requesting Judge Sirica to shorten my sentence, and I fear that my motion is already seriously prejudiced by the false assertions current in the face of official silence.

In October 1977 HUNT sold the rights to his next spy book and received $250,000 for the movie rights to Undercover. In 1992 Mark Lane wrote Plausible Denial. It became a best seller. Time Magazine stated that the book "claims Watergate burglar E. HOWARD HUNT played a key role in killing JFK." HUNT claimed: "LEE HARVEY OSWALD was a man of the Left...he emigrated to the Soviet Union, he came back and worked for Castro in the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. He killed JFK, and the Left has been unable to confront the lamentable fact that it was a man of the Left who killed their hero." When asked to comment on Coup D'Etat In America and Plausible Denial, HUNT stated: "These things were of some import to me 10 years ago..." On June 24, 1995, HUNT declared bankruptcy. In August 2004 HUNT was interviewed by Ann Bardach:

Ann Bardach: I know there is a conspiracy theory saying that David Atlee Phillips—the Miami CIA station chief—was involved with the assassination of JFK.

HUNT: [Visibly uncomfortable] I have no comment.

Ann Bardach: I know you hired him early on, to work with you in Mexico, to help with Guatemala propaganda.

HUNT: He was one of the best briefers I ever saw.

Ann Bardach: And there were even conspiracy theories about you being in Dallas the day JFK was killed.

HUNT: No comment.

Laura Hunt: Howard says he wasn't, and I believe him.

Slate: Any regrets?

HUNT: No, none. [Long pause] Well, it would have been nice to do Bay of Pigs differently. [<http://www.slate.com/id/2107718/>]

In a memoir, American Spy: My Secret History in the CIA, Watergate & Beyond, Hunt, 88, wrote:

One of the great mysteries of the twentieth century is whether there was a conspiracy to kill John F. Kennedy. Let me say clearly that if there was such a scheme, I had nothing to do with it. I was not in Dallas on November 22, 1963; I was not part of a plot to kill the president; and I had no knowledge of the planned assassination. The thought of perpetrating any crime against the president, even though I disagreed with many of his policies, is completely against my innermost convictions, as anyone who truly knows me would attest.

A few years after HUNT wrote this he would tell his son St. John Hunt that he was approached by FRANK STURGIS to be part of a Kennedy assassination plot but ended up as a “benchwarmer.”

But this matter has cost me a lot of hardship and pain, as conspiracy buffs have linked my name to the terrible crime. It started in 1975 with a book that I shall not name here, in which the authors published photographs of three bums who were arrested on Dealey Plaza that day, asserting that two of the men pictured were myself and Frank Sturgis. The resemblance is only visible by somebody with an active imagination or someone examining doctored photos. The FBI was able to track down the bums—Gus Abrams, John Gedney, and Harold Doyle—whom they hauled in and interrogated. They didn't know me and I didn't know them.

It is true that cannabis gives one a ‘flight of thoughts’ so I might very well have an active imagination. “Doctored photo” does this ring a bell. In The Photographic Evidence this researcher claims that the photos of HUNT were “doctored” by the CIA. Then HUNT repeated the dirty lie circulated by former Dallas FBI FO SAC Oliver “Buck” Revell.

I gave a thorough account of my whereabouts in Washington, D.C., that day, sued the authors, and thought that the situation was pretty much taken care of at the time. [HUNT dropped the lawsuit against this researcher two days before it was scheduled to go to trial] However, I had no idea about how JFK assassination conspiracies would morph and reconstitute themselves. In a way, it's like the famous Hydra. You cut off one head, and two grow back. I don't think Frank was part of a plot against JFK. He was a congenial guy who would follow orders but had a room-temperature IQ. He was also very discretionally challenged and would never have been able to keep such a huge secret until his death. He was very incensed by Marita Lorenz's story connecting us to the plot, thus expanding her allotment of five minutes of fame to fifteen. So basically I don't think Sturgis was part of a conspiracy to kill John F. Kennedy, simply because nobody who was intelligent enough to concoct such a wide-ranging plot would have trusted him. As for Frank Sturgis, although he always craved action and felt that Kennedy had betrayed Brigade 2506, this was not the way he would have evened the score. And if he had been involved in the killing, he would have somehow passed the knowledge on to me—hinted at it in the very least. We spent a lot of time together as bunkmates in prison in Danbury, Connecticut, after Watergate, and I'm quite sure he could never have kept this information from me, as we had a good relationship and he thought of me as his boss in covert affairs.

THE LAST “CONFESSION” OF HUNT

Before he died his son, St. John Hunt, came to visit him. In August 2003 his son found him writing down the names of men who had indeed participated in a plot to kill the president. He had lied during those two federal investigations. He told St. John about his own involvement, too. Then he got better and went on to live for four more years.

Rolling Stone reported,

HOWARD HUNT's connection to the JFK assassination came about almost serendipitously, when in 1974 a researcher stumbled across a photo of three tramps standing in Dallas' Dealey Plaza. It was taken on November 22nd, 1963, the day of Kennedy's shooting, and one of the tramps looked pretty much like E. Howard.

I discovered the tramp shots on November 22, 1973. The reason I am not given credit is that Rolling Stone owner Jann Wenner instructs his writers never to mention me by name due to my having invaded his offices in the early 1970's and retrieved some files regarding Rolling Stone's connection with the Vietnam War via Max Palevsky, a Cold War liberal. My antagonistic relationship with Bob Dylan also plays into my being banned. In any event in 2003 actor Kevin Costner, who had played Jim Garrison in the Oliver Stone film JFK said that he could arrange for HUNT to make $5 million for telling the truth about what happened in Dallas. HUNT did not go for it. St. John explained how he first came to suspect that his father might somehow be involved in the Kennedy assassination.

Around 1975, I was in a phone booth in Maryland somewhere, when I saw a poster on a telephone pole about who killed JFK, and it had a picture of the three tramps. I saw that picture and I fucking -- like a cartoon character, my jaw dropped, my eyes popped out of my head, and smoke came out of my ears. It looks like my dad. There's nobody that has all those same facial features. People say it's not him. He's said it's not him. But I'm his son, and I've got a gut feeling. And then, like an epiphany, I remember 1963, and my dad being gone, and my mom telling me that he was on a business trip to Dallas. I've tried to convince myself that's some kind of false memory, that I'm just nuts, that it's something I heard years later. But, I mean, his alibi for that day is that he was at home with his family. I remember I was in the fifth grade. We were at recess. I was playing on the merry-go-round. We were called in and told to go home, because the president had been killed. And I remember going home. But I don't remember my dad being there. I have no recollection of him being there. And then he has this whole thing about shopping for Chinese food with my mother that day, so that they could cook a meal together.

St. John's father testified to this during the HUNT v WEBERMAN lawsuit saying that he and his wife often cooked meals together.

Well, I can tell you that's just the biggest load of crap in the fucking world. He was always looking at things like he was writing a novel; everything had to be just so glamorous and so exciting. He couldn't even be bothered with his children. That's not glamorous. James Bond doesn't have children. So my dad in the kitchen? Chopping vegetables with his wife? I'm so sorry, but that would never happen. Ever! That fucker never did jack-squat like that. Ever! After seeing that poster of the three tramps I read two dozen books on the JFK assassination, and the more I read, the more I was unsure about what happened. I had all these questions and uncertainties. I mean, I was trying to sort out things that had touched me in a big way.

Later that week, HUNT gave Saint John two sheets of paper that could be termed a "limited hangout." HUNT was not about to implicate the Republican Party in the assassination by naming NIXON so he blamed it on Lyndon Baines Johnson. He connects Lyndon Johnson to Cord Meyer in order to dirty-up those socially connected to JFK. He also hated Meyer for censoring the books that HUNT wrote while both men worked at the CIA.

Cord Meyer discusses a plot with [DAVID ATLEE] PHILLIPS who brings in William Harvey and Antonio Veciana. He meets with Oswald in Mexico City...Then Veciana meets w/ FRANK STURGIS in Miami and enlists DAVID MORALES in anticipation of killing JFK there. But LBJ changes itinerary to Dallas, citing personal reasons.

As stated in Nodule 14 Antonio Veciana revealed the fact that PHILLIPS and OSWALD were seen together so HUNT wanted to dirty him up but had to dirty-up PHILLIPS in the process. Gordon Winslow reported, "Veciana was for dialogue with Castro which makes him an outcast in many circles here. He takes the side of Guterrez Menoyo who now lives in Cuba." William Harvey was in charge of assassination plots but these plots were carried out within the framework of the CIA. For some reason unknown to me HUNT made it clear he hated William Harvey so decided to dirty him up while he was at it. HUNT told the SSCIA:

And I should say that the relationship with the Praeger Publishing Company had been in existence for quite a period of time and I think they were managed by Cord Meyer International Division, if I'm not mistaken, or possibly the Covert Action Staff. But what we received were ongoing operations. We were sent the case files for the (deleted as of 2010) project for the (deleted as of 2010) for the (deleted as of 2010)."

HUNT under oath, has repeatedly sworn to have not met STURGIS until Watergate. In the next few paragraphs, HUNT goes on to describe the extent of his own involvement. It revolves around a meeting he claims he attended, in 1963, with MORALES and STURGIS. It takes place in a Miami hotel room. Here's what happens:

MORALES leaves the room, at which point STURGIS makes reference to a "Big Event" and asks HUNT, "Are you with us?" HUNT asks STURGIS what he's talking about. STURGIS says, "Killing JFK." HUNT, incredulous, says to STURGIS, "You seem to have everything you need. Why do you need me?" In the handwritten narrative, STURGIS' response is unclear, though what HUNT says to STURGIS next isn't: He says he won't "get involved in anything involving Bill Harvey, who is an alcoholic psycho." After that, the meeting ends. E. HOWARD goes back to his "normal" life and "like the rest of the country...is stunned by JFK's death and realizes how lucky he is not to have had a direct role."

In American Spy HUNT wrote, "Morales was rumored to be a cold-blooded killer, the go-to guy in black-ops situations where the government needed to have someone neutralized. I tried to cut short any contact with him, as he wore thin very quickly. [http://www.rollingstone.com/politics/story/13893143/the\_last\_confessions\_of\_e\_howard\_hunt/8]

If HUNT was lying about knowing STURGIS prior to Watergate maybe he was lying about his whereabouts on November 22, 1963. St. John Hunt's story is consistent with his 1975 interview by the Rockefeller Commission "Hunt testified that he was in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area throughout that day, and his testimony was supported by two of his children (a son who is nine years old could not recall if his parents were present or absent that day; the fourth) and youngest Hunt child was not born then." This is about as close to a confession as one is going to get.

THE BIG EVENT

This is another scenario that HUNT gave to his son:

Late 1962 LBJ recruits Cord Meyer 1963 Cord Meyer discusses a plot with David A Phillips who brings in Bill Harvey and Antonio Veciana. Antonio Veciana meets with Oswald in Mexico city that summer. Antonio Veciana meets with Frank Sturgis and enlists David Sanchez Morales in anticipation of killing Kennedy there. LBJ changes location of "big event" to Dallas Texas citing personal reasons. In Miami, Frank Sturgis tells Hunt that he is buying guns for an op code named "the big event." Sturgis brings David Sanchez Morales to a meeting with Hunt in which "the big event" is referred to. After Morales leaves Frank Sturgis says "Are you with us?" Hunt replies that he can't make a decision without knowing what "the big event" is. When Sturgis says "killing Kennedy" Hunt is incredulous. Hunt does not seem to have a lot of faith in Sturgis and says, "You seem to have everything you need, why do you need me?" Sturgis replies that Hunt could help by lending credibility as well as aiding in the clean up. Hunt says we won't get involved in anything that involves Harvey because he is an alcoholic and a psycho. Hunt doesn't see Sturgis until many years later. In Danbury Federal Prison Hunt and Sturgis reflect on the “Big Event” and Sturgis reveals that Oswald fired from the rear but the fatal shot was fired by a pro from out of the country. The name of this man was told to Hunt by Sturgis.

Once again HUNT is mixing disinformation with real information. Cord Meyer was president of the United World Federalists who believed in giving up a degree of American sovereignty to a world government. He was involved with OPERATION MOCKINGBIRD, to influence world media. HUNT was involved in this and had a beef with Meyer. As for LBJ, HUNT a lifelong conservative Republican was not about to finger NIXON. HUNT hated Veciana because Veciana was aligned with Manolo Ray. When Ray was admitted into to FRD HUNT allegedly resigned in protest. HUNT, who attended Brown University and came from a patrician family in upstate New York (Hunt’s Point in the Bronx was named after one of his ancestors) was considered an elitist by Harvey, who had wrecked the CIA careers of people he labeled as such. HARVEY was in Rome at the time of the “big event” and had no need to know. This is what HUNT thinks of Harvey “he was a brain-addled pistol-toting drunk and very much under the thumb of his wife, who would have made the perfect concentration camp guard.” [HUNT American Spy] HUNT told St. John Hunt:

It seems to me that BILL HARVEY was the most likely candidate [to give PHILLIPS orders in a JFK conspiracy] because it was an off key operation and nothing that was being handled through regular channels. I think HARVEY had some hidden grieves and hidden aggressions that people didn’t take care of or get interested in before Kennedy’s assassination and at that point HARVEY became a person of interest let’s say or even more than that because so many accusations have been launched in his direction: procuring and transporting weaponry. Harvey would have been in charge. Well if he was in that chain yes because HARVEY had the seniority. I hate to fall back on that but that is true. He did. PHILLIPS and I were basically the same rank and I didn’t have to take orders from him and he didn’t have to take orders from me so it was a wash. Too add on to that a little bit BILL HARVEY was senior to both of us by several grades because when he jumped over to CIA I think he got at least a one grade and he had been a deputy to ANGLETON and very deeply involved in counter-espionage activities. HARVEY’s rank was such and his position was such that any President could have talked to him. And if HARVEY felt his grip on his position was loosened or being loosened he would have taken steps to remedy that.

Before the missiles crisis:

HARVEY posted an old slogan somewhere the agency premises that said “The tree of liberty must be nourished by the blood of patriots” and this incensed Bobby Kennedy. It seems ridiculous. You would think that Bobby would have embraced that particular philosophy but he did not and I guess he figured Harvey was trying to steal some of the glory what that was going on in those days. Harvey was a very strange and complicated individual. A lot of people have suggested that alcohol had taken control of him and that basically affected his judgment. He always had a gun on him particularly in Rome. Claire Boothe was the Ambassador at that and as I said and as I indicted Harvey even carried guns into restaurants and he would pull them out slap them down on the table to the dismay of other diners and then he'd settle down to an afternoon of drinking not eating much because he was way overweight but certainly drinking and he was a tough. First of all he never should have been put in that position. Appointments that were made in CIA to positions of responsibility were always baffling to me. Why was Mr. X sent here and why was Mr. Y sent there? I tried to satisfy myself by saying inwardly the director who makes these appointments must no more about them than I do and should. And I would let it go at that. Why did they bring Bill Harvey up from South Africa? Why was he sent there in the first place? We had no interest in South Africa. Maybe Nelson Mandela who was still in prison but beyond that nobody could figure out where the U. S. interest was and Harvey was not the best representative that we could have come up with. It is quite a jump from to set yourself up in splendid isolation and it is another thing to use that isolation as a tool so that you are an immediate suspect in the case of a capital crime. [Harvey was in Rome at the time of the assassination.]

HUNT went out of his way to dirty up Harvey, however, there is no evidence linking Harvey with the coup. On January 24, 2007 E. HOWARD HUNT died of complications from pneumonia at North Shore Medical Center. He was 88. Prior to this he suffered from lupus, pneumonia, cancers of the jaw and prostate, gangrene, the amputation of his left leg. The LA Times reported in his obituary, "Conspiracy theorists also alleged that he was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy, whom he held in contempt for failing to send U.S. forces to bail out the Bay of Pigs invaders when Cuban troops had them surrounded."

DAVID ATLEE PHILLIPS POST COUP

In 1965 PHILLIPS was promoted by the CIA from agent to officer, and sent to the Dominican Republic after the April 1965 invasion of that country by the U.S. military. Clark Anderson became the FBI Legal Attaché in the American Embassy, Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, a few weeks later. PHILLIPS explained on September 30, 1980:

A. I happened to be in Washington, D.C., when he and a large number of other FBI agents who spoke Spanish were told to get on the next plane and report to the Dominican Republic. And when I arrived there to take over that station, Clark Anderson was in charge of the FBI contingent.

Q. You got a promotion around that time, made head of station around that time, somewhere around this time.

A. Shortly before all of this happened in the Dominican Republic.

Q. After the assassination and before the Dominican Republic situation.

A. Um-hum.

Q. You were head of the Cuban operations group of the Western Hemisphere Division somewhere around that period of time?

A. 1968, 1969.

Q. Did you ever have occasion of meeting FBI S.A. WARREN DeBRUEYS?

A. Yes. I remember having been in touch with him either...that name is very familiar. I knew a lot of FBI people. [PHILLIPS Depo. HUNT v. WEBERMAN]

DeBRUEYS told this researcher:

I knew DAVID PHILLIPS when I was undercover, and assigned to the Dominican Republic revolution for about six months in Santo Domingo and DAVE was the CIA Station Chief. I don't recall that I contacted him subsequent to that time. I think, maybe when I was in Brazil, he may have been there a short period of time. I never thought of this before.

In Santo Domingo in 1965 PHILLIPS called the Dominican strongman General Elias Wessin y Wessin - "a completely patriotic, anti-communist, atrocious man" - and told him to get out of his own country. [Washington Times 3.30.88]

HEMMING told this researcher:

We had a new Cuba being born in the Dominican Republic. Everybody went there. MARCELLO went there. They were there to clean them people out - and they did. That was Murder Incorporated. They went down there, and they took out everybody.

When STURGIS was asked if he knew DeBRUEYS he responded: "Possibly, you know we're going over years." [Depo. HUNT V. WEBERMAN p99]

PHILLIPS was questioned in the course of Hunt v. Weberman:

Q. I am sure you have heard of Mitch Werbell. He is a rather notorious character in the news from time to time. Did you ever actually know him during this period of time in the 1950's when you were in the Agency?

A. In the 1950's?

Q. 1954?

A. Not in the 1950's. I certainly have seen him since and heard a great deal about him.

Q. All right. Did you have any occasion to meet him prior to 1968.

A. I don't think I ever met Mitch Werbell, III, in the sense of shaking hands and being introduced. I was Chief of Station in the Dominican Republic in 1965, during the crisis. Werbell was presently living at the Hotel Embajador along with all the newspapermen. And he was around Santo Domingo with all sorts of contraptions strapped to his body, large cases, cameras, tape recorders and so forth, wearing a pith helmet and looking just like the character of a CIA agent, which he was not.

Q. During the Cuban activities with the Agency, did you ever know a public relations firm run by Werbell in Cuba prior to Castro?

A. A public relations firm? I don't recall...I had a Public Relations firm in Cuba...My responsibility laid with my Chief of Station in the U.S. Embassy. I was what was known as a deep cover. I did not have an office at the Embassy. Paul Bethel was the Press Attache or Assistant Press Attache in Havana when I was there. I knew him.

Q. Jay Mallin?

A. Newspaperman? Yes, I knew Jay Mallin. [Phillips Depo. HUNT v. WEBERMAN]

Circa 1968, PHILLIPS became Chief of the Cuban Operations Group of the Western Hemisphere Division, a job that involved "keeping tabs on Cuban preoccupations in Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean." He later became Second Consul (CIA Chief of Station) in Brazil and Venezuela. In September 1970 PHILLIPS became the Deputy Chief of the Task Force on Chile of the Directorate for Plans. At this time he was assigned to the Foreign Service as First Secretary, U.S. Embassy, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. PHILLIPS told F. A. O. Schwarz Jr. of the SSCIA that he plotted to de-stabilize the Chilean military by kidnapping General Schneider, the leading constitutionalist in the Chilean Army.

Schwarz: What did you actually do in order to insure, if I may use your words correctly, that General Schneider would not remain in office, what were the things besides contacting people that the Agency did?

PHILLIPS: Well, to make it an absolutely accurate description, certainly we are not at any one time zeroing in on General Schneider as the only thing.

Schwarz: But that was not the problem, was it?

PHILLIPS: It was a problem.

Schwarz: It was the main problem, wasn't it? You needed a coup, and you knew the political solution wouldn't work. You knew the greatest problem. You needed the Army. You knew the problem in having the coup was that there was a constitutional mentality, crazy constitutional mentality in the Chilean military, right?

PHILLIPS: I didn't say that sir.

Schwartz: Okay. I am sorry. You knew there was a constitutional mentality, and that that was the problem?

PHILLIPS: That is true. And consequently, I suppose, was probably the number one problem.

Schwarz: He was the number one problem?

The Chairman: And he was the commander in chief of the army.

PHILLIPS: That is true.

Schwarz: And the leading constitutionalist?

PHILLIPS: That is true.

Schwarz: What did you do?

PHILLIPS: Entertained all possibilities, talked to people, and said what can you do, and looked to people to support, and looked for General Viaux with his ideas, and turned those off. And looked toward the Valenzuela group, I think it was. And they seemed to have much more capability and to be much more serious and so forth. I suppose if someone said, try to bribe General Schneider, and someone said, alright, let's do it, then someone else said General Schneider can't be bribed. And those men went so far as the kidnapping of General Schneider. And we were aware of that.

Schwarz: You were aware of and approved, didn't you, the kidnapping of General Schneider?

PHILLIPS: Not in the case of General Viaux, because we turned him off. But in the other case we were aware that part of their plan was the possibility of a kidnapping, yes.

Schwarz: And you offered through (Deleted as of 2010) whom we will come to in a moment, $50,000 if they could accomplish it, didn't you?

PHILLIPS: I think that was the correct sum, yes.

Schwarz: And you gave them prior to their attempt on October 19 some tear gas masks to help accomplish the kidnapping.

PHILLIPS: That is true.

Schwarz: And subsequently you provided to the Valenzuela group some machine guns, didn't you?

And those were going to be used in a kidnapping effort by the Valenzuela group, and you knew that, didn't you?

PHILLIPS: I recall that they were going to be used by the group, and that kidnapping was part of their plans. I can't recall that they said they needed them specifically for the kidnapping. I do recall that the reason was -- the automatic reaction from Latin America is, why do people need arms when they have got arms everywhere all over Latin America.

And they said something about, their own arms could be identified, and they needed some that couldn't be identified. I don't recall if it was specifically mentioned that it was just for that. It was certainly understood that they might very well be used.

Schwarz: But draw the line again. You thought assassination was a bad thing?

PHILLIPS: I did.

Schwarz: On the other hand, you believed, at least in your capacity in performing your duties, whether you personally believed it, you believed that kidnapping of General Schneider was a good thing?

PHILLIPS: Absolutely not, since I said in my personal capacity I thought the whole idea was a bum idea.

Schwarz: I tried to put you in your official capacity.

PHILLIPS: In my official capacity I realized that the removal from office of General Schneider was an important element of any successful military coup. I make that statement in the context of what I have said previously that I didn't really think it was going to work all along.

Schwarz: In your official capacity you thought the kidnapping was a good thing?

PHILLIPS: I thought it was a necessary thing if there was going to be a coup.

Schwarz: And the submachine guns were made by the Agency with the knowledge that they might be used in the in the kidnapping.

PHILLIPS: Yes.

Schwarz: Now put together, if you can, and explain how you fit, how you make them consistent, the attitude against assassination and the supply of very deadly weapons. You will agree that machine guns are very deadly weapons?

PHILLIPS: I do sir.

Schwarz: Put together the attitude against assassinations and the supply of very deadly weapons to be used in a very dangerous activity, which is kidnapping -- and remember, of course, that the man did die. Although not through those submachine guns.

PHILLIPS: Yes, I do. May I ask you to rephrase that question. I am not quite sure of it.

Schwarz: It is not seeking a fact, Mr. PHILLIPS, it is seeking an explanation of how you can make consistent on the one hand your testimony of opposition to assassinations, which is given with great credibility from its appearance, how can you put that together on the one hand with your testimony as to what was actually done as far as supplying deadly weapons for a purpose which was highly dangerous, in a context when in fact the man died when he was kidnapped.

PHILLIPS: Well, of course, this is a very complex, and complicated, question you are asking. I think that the answer is that if you are going to involve yourself in foreign endeavors, that you very seldom find a situation in which you are capable of placing stop and go buttons on the machinery that you have set in motion.

In the Dominican Republic the involvement of the Agency of the U.S. Government in the death of -- I like to think of that not as an assassination, but tyrannicide -- I just don't see how in the world anyone could have pushed a stop button for the General Tony Imbert type of thing. [Church Comm. Test. 7.31.75 pgs. 28-33 NARA SSCIA 157-10002-10165]

PHILLIPS admitted that he ran an operation in 1970 to prevent Salvador Allende from taking office.

PHILLIPS, HUNT AND THE OVERTHROW OF SALVATORE ALLENDE

On October 15, 1970, Thomas Karamesssines met with General Alexander Haig and Henry Kissinger to formulate a plan to stop socialist Salvador Allende Gossens from assuming power. HOWARD HUNT had a hand in this as the following documents appear in a file entitled POSSIBLE ADDITIONAL AGENCY SUPPORT FURNISHED HOWARD HUNT.

The CIA:

SECRET 181408Z OCT 1970 CITE SANTIAGO 562

IMMEDIATE HEADQUARTERS

REFS: Santiago 551, Santiago 558

1. Station co-optee met clandestinely evening October 17, 1970, with two Chilean Armed Forces Officers who told him their plans were moving along better than thought possible. They asked that by evening October 10, co-optee arrange furnish them with eight to ten tear gas grenades.

Within 48 hours they need three 45 caliber machine with 500 rounds ammo each. One officer commented he has three machine guns himself, but can be identified by serial numbers as having been issued to him, therefore unable to use them.

2. Officers said they have to move because they believe they are now under suspicion and are being watched by Allende supporters. One officer was late to meeting having taken evasive action to shake possible surveillance by one or two taxi cabs with dual antennas which he believed being used by opposition against him.

3. Co-optee asked if officer had Air Force contacts. They answered they did not, but would welcome one. Co-optee separately has since been trying to contact a Chilean Air Force General and will keep trying until established. Will urge Air Force General to meet with Officers ASAP. Co-optee commented to Station that Air Force General has not tried to contact him since referenced talk.

4. Co-optee comment: Cannot tell who leader of this movement is, but strongly suspects it is Admiral Roberto Viaux. It would appear from his contacts, actions and alleged Allende suspicions about them that unless they act now they are lost. Trying to get more information from them on the evening of October 18, 1970, about support they believe they have.

5. Station plans give six tear gas grenades (Arriving on October 8, 1970, by special courier) to co-optee for delivery to Armed Forces Officers instead of having false flag officer [Henry J. Sloman - an American who carried a false passport who could pass for a Latino] deliver them to Viaux group. Our reasoning is that co-optee dealing with active duty officers. Also false flag officer leaving on evening of October 18, 1970, and will not be replaced. Hence, important that co-optee with Armed Forces Officers be strengthened by prompt delivery what they requesting. Request Headquarters agreement by 1500 hours local time October 18, 1970, on decision delivery of tear gas to co-optee Vice False Flag Officer.

6. Request prompt shipment three sterile 45 caliber machine guns and ammo per para 1 above by Special Courier if necessary. Please confirm by 2000 hours local time October 18, 1970, that this can be done so co-optee may inform his contacts accordingly.

The CIA was puzzled about the request for sterile weapons because the co-optee planned to lead the coup:

If co-optee plans to lead coup, or be actively and publically involved we puzzled why it should bother him if machine guns can be traced to him. Can we develop rationale on why guns must be sterile? Will continue make effort provide them but find credulity stretched by Navy officer leading his troops with sterile guns? What is special purpose of these guns? Will try send them whether you can provide explanation of not.

A CIA cable stated:

RESTRICTED HANDLING
OCTOBER 18, 1970.
IMMEDIATE SANTIAGO, EYES ONLY (Deleted).
REF: SANTIAGO 562

Submachine guns and ammo being sent by regular (deleted)[diplomatic] courier leaving Washington 0700 hours October 19, 1970, due to arrive Santiago late evening October, 20, 1970. Preferred use regular (deleted as of 2010) courier to avoid bring undue attention to OP. Releasing Officer C/WH (Deleted as of 2010) Authenticating Officer (Deleted as of 2010). [CIA FOIA 5851 Att to Doc 4048]

Roberto Viaux had left the Chilean Army in 1969. Viaux's plan was to kidnap the head of the Chilean armed forces, General Rene Schneider, and blame his abduction on the left. His attempted kidnapping culminated in the murder of General Schneider, who was a strict constitutionalist. General Schneider was succeeded by General Rene Prats, who also upheld Allende's right to assume power. After Allende was overthrown, General Viaux's prison sentence for the murder of General Schneider was reduced to lesser charges and he was freed from prison.

PHILLIPS worked closely with Thomas Karamessines and Richard Helms in the overthrow of the Allende Government of Chile. In 1972 PHILLIPS was under Foreign Service cover as First Secretary, U.S. Embassy, in Caracas, Venezuela. In 1973 PHILLIPS rose to Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division, a position second only to Deputy Director. PHILLIPS claimed that in 1973 he sent a cable to the Santiago CIA Station instructing it not to work with the military men who were plotting the demise of the Allende regime. Salvador Allende was finally overthrown on September 11, 1973. Antonio Veciana told Gaeton Fonzi: "Bishop was involved with the plan to dispose of Allende in Chile. That was one of his jobs." Allegations were made concerning the involvement of PHILLIPS in the car bombing of former Allende Cabinet Minister Orlando Letelier.

On March 16, 1976, Veciana told Gaeton Fonzi:

Although all of BISHOPS plans against Castro failed, there were other plans against other people that did not fail. He knows - he says there is no doubt - that BISHOP was involved in the plan to dispose of Allende in Chile. He knows that by the contacts in Chile BISHOP had. All the connections I had in Chile were given to me by BISHOP.

DAVID A. PHILLIPS: McGOVERN-STYLE LIBERAL DEMOCRAT?

PHILLIPS denied these allegations, and claimed he was a McGovern-type liberal Democrat who would not have engaged in any anti-democratic operations. [NYT 9.3.75] The Washington Times commented on PHILLIPS book, Nightwatch: "He made it a tale of moral conflict, emphasizing his inner turmoil over some of what he was told to, and did, in Guatemala, in Chile. He played up his politics: his 'dismay' at the election of RICHARD NIXON, whom he paints as a man of shadow; his disdain for E. HOWARD HUNT." PHILLIPS stated: "I wouldn't have treated HOWARD HUNT as roughly as I did if I didn't know I was going out on a college tour" he says. "I didn't have to say 'Gina [PHILLIP'S second wife] and I cast our vote for George McGovern.'" PHILLIPS told the United Press that Castro had nothing to do with the Kennedy assassination: "For the first time I agree with Castro. OSWALD was undoubtedly the sole killer." [UPI Dispatch 05-12 09:58 AED]

THE ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED INTELLIGENCE OFFICERS

On March 21, 1975, PHILLIPS resigned from the CIA. He had been Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division for two years. PHILLIPS formed "The Association of Retired Intelligence Officers," whose goal was to defend ex-CIA men like HUNT against charges stemming from the Watergate break-in, as well as to counter the efforts of CIA defectors like Victor Marchetti and Philip Agee. A legal fund was established to sue authors who accused CIA agents of committing crimes. First to be sued was Gaeton Fonzi. [Circuit Court for Montgomery County, Maryland, PHILLIPS vs. Washington Magazine et. al. Law No. 57691] Eventually all of PHILLIPS' charges against Gaeton Fonzi were dismissed, but Fonzi incurred high legal bills. Member of this organization included Sam Halpern.

DAVID PHILLIPS AND WATERGATE

On May 2, 1973, the FBI contacted DAVID PHILLIPS and asked him about the source of the information contained in a CIA memorandum dated April 13, 1973, to the FBI regarding payments made by Manuel Artime. PHILLIPS refused to divulge his source. When the FBI met with the CIA/OS Director, the agents were told that PHILLIPS' information came from the Chief of Station, Miami. [FBI WFO 139-166 4.24.73 McLean Virginia MJK:pag p208, 4.24.73 MJK:mml 207 poss. serial 2393] On July 26, 1973, Manuel Artime was the Subject of an FBI investigation. Character: Interception of Communications. Most of this document was deleted. [Miami Field Office File 139-328]

In December 1976 PHILLIPS was called to testify before a Federal Grand Jury investigating possible perjury in Congressional testimony about American efforts to oust Salvadore Allende. Other called before that same Grand Jury included John A. McCone and Hal V. Hendrix, former director of public relations of ITT in Latin America. By 1988 PHILLIPS was suffering from cancer. [Who's Who 1972; Wash. Times 3.30.88; NYT 5.10.75, 12.21.76] He died of cancer on July 10, 1988. A document transfer and cross reference sheet indicated "There is a restricted (deleted) folder on the Subject of his 201 held under (deleted)." [CIA 201-88764] While in Havana Phillips used the name Michael M. Choaden. Choaden subsidized a movie about Venezuela on behalf of CIA.

BERNARD BARKER POST COUP

STURGIS AND BARKER 1960

The CIA described BARKER'S post coup activities:

"BARKER frequently conducted investigations which resulted in valuable operational information for the CIA. To assist BARKER in his activities, he was given a five week full-time trade craft training course in 1964. [BARKER'S citizenship was restored in 1964.]" On January 21, 1964, the Chief of the Special Affairs Section, Desmond FitzGerald asked JMWAVE if it had any interest in BARKER. On March 4, 1965, the Chief of Station JMWAVE reported on BARKER'S Operational Progress for February 1965:

During the period under review AMCLATTER/1 [BARKER] was transferred from the PW Branch to the CI Branch for future handling. Subject's files were turned over to CI on January 27, 1965, and he was informed by his PW case officer of his proposed transfer at a meeting on February 2, 1965. A subsequent meeting was scheduled for February 8, 1965, with AMCLATTER/1 and the PW case officer at which time the latter introduced him to the CI Case Officer. Subject appeared to be pleased with this turn of events expressing the wish that he could be put to more frequent use and be given a heavier work load. He said that he had enjoyed his 2 ½ year association with his previous case officer but looked forward into getting into a new line of activity, preferably some type of PM activity or investigative work, which he claims to enjoy as a result of his previous police experience in Cuba. Subject was told by CI case officer that his duties would remain essentially the same as they had been and that he should continue his coverage of exile activities with emphasis on any rumors of impending raids on Cuba.

On February 18, 1965, Subject was introduced to AMBLINK/1 and was told that AMBLINK/1 would keep in daily touch with him either by telephone or by personal meeting. Subject and AMBLINK/1 know one another from the time when they were working in Cuba and both seem pleased with the current arrangement whereby they will be in contact with one another. In addition to this daily contact meetings are held with Subject and AMBLINK/1 about once a week by the CI case officer to discuss Subject's reporting as well as any difficulties he may have encountered, or any guidance he may need. For all practical purposes, however, AMCLATTER/1 is being handled by AMBLINK/1. Subject knows nothing of about AMLINK/1 other operational duties and contacts, and the latter has been instructed to limit his discussions with AMCLATTER/1 to any mutual business at hand. AMCLATTER/1 knows AMLINK/1 by true name (which he knew in Cuba) and his home telephone number. During the absence of AMLINK/1 from the area the CI case officer will meet directly with Subject.

PRODUCTION:

Subject provided a number of useful reports during the period under review mainly concerned with MIRR bombing missions over Cuba and details concerning the ransacking of Artime's house. The following disseminations were made as a result of the Subject production:

- A. (Deleted) (WAVE 7900; February 3, 1965) from FRANK FIORINI: Alleged Abortive Air Raid over Cuba by the MIRR.
- B. WAVE 8261 (Rybat February 13, 1965): Ransacking of Artime's house.
- C. (Deleted)6710 (WAVE 8326; February 16, 1965) from FRANK FIORINI: Planned Air Strike Against Havana by the MIRR.

D. WAVE 8419 (Rybatt February 17, 1965): Additional information on the ransacking of Artime's house.

E. (Deleted)6727 (WAVE 8394; February 17, 1965) from FRANK FIORINI: Decision of Orlando Bosch Avilla to Use Cuban Pilot on MIRR's Air Strike of Havana.

F. WAVE 8521 (Rybat February 20, 1965). Additional information on the ransacking of Artime's house.

G. (Deleted)6747 (WAVE 8618 February 23, 1965) from FRANK FIORINI and Bill Johnson: Insistence of Orlando Bosch Avila that the MIRR Bomb Havana.

FINANCES

Subject was paid his February salary in the amount of $433.77 (This amount is arrived at after withholding his income tax from $500.)

FUTURE PLANS

AMLINK/1 will continue to contact Subject on a daily basis either by telephone or by personal meetings and will see that Subject's reports are promptly relayed to the CI case officer. Subject has been instructed to continue his coverage of exile activities with emphasis on prompt reporting of any impending exile raid on Cuba. Subject will also continue to report in writing any conversations that he has had with Cuban exiles who appear of operational interest and will explore his wide array of contacts for any information that may lead to the identification of Cuban intelligence assets operating in the area. In this connection Subject is currently exploring a lead involving two Cuban mulatto women who allegedly have hit the bolita numbers frequently (six or seven times) and for large sums of money. Subject, who has a theory that Fidel Castro may be using the bolita racket to fund agents in the U.S. is trying to learn the identities of the two mulattos. He has been cautioned not to delve too deeply in this matter however, since he may become involved with local underworld elements who may take drastic action against him in the belief that he is working for the local FBI or the police. Subject said that he is well aware of this possibility and is making very discreet inquiries with the assistance of certain friends (Cuban ex-policemen) who are bolita runners and who know that he has no interest in their bolita activities per se except to learn the identities of the two Cuban mullato women. Subject said that his friends, in addition to possibly helping him, would like to know the identities of the two women since they would then play the same number as the two women and make some money on their own. (Deleted). Ted Shackley. [CIA FOIA D002232]

Handwritten notes indicated: "WAVE 8521 dated February 20, 1965. Mentions BARKER reporting on FIORINI re a robbery of Artime's house and FIORINI'S meetings with Miami Police concerning the robbery. File (Deleted) WAVE 8419 February 18, 1965. More information on robbery of Artime's residence. (Deleted) and FIORINI (File (Deleted) Also mentions Frank Campbell (STURGIS alias). WAVE 8261 February 13, 1965. More of same."

BARKER LEAVES THE CIA

In 1966, when BARKER was monitoring the Bay of Pigs Brigade elections for the CIA, he attempted to influence its outcome:

4. As explained in Reference A, AMCLATTER/1's contract was not renewed in April 1966 because plans were underway at that time to terminate him. His performance for the past several months has been practically nil, not because he has not been eager for work, but mainly due to the fact that he is not suited for what has to be done. He started working for JMWAVE in April 1960 as a Principal Agent, and during the period preceding the Bay of Pigs he handled a number of political action agents and spotted and developed several candidates for recruitment. Since such of this activity was sore overt than covert, he was thoroughly blown as a WOPACT asset, and eventually became known in the area as a sort of WOPACT spokesman, a role which, he enjoyed and encouraged. As times changed and the Station began concentrating- on more covert activities, AMCLATTER/1 became something of a security problem, since any statements or opinions expressed by his concerning various individuals or exile groups were either mistaken for "official leaks" or "policy".

5. AMCLATTER/1's strong points have been his dedication and enthusiasm for his work. He has, however, been somewhat of a problem in that he is a "heavy handed" operator who tries to impress his contacts with his Importance, thereby committing a number of indiscretions. A good example of this can be found in his performance during the recent election of officers in the 2506 Brigade. AMCLATTER/1 had a number of contacts in the Brigade and was instructed to monitor, without specifically asking questions, the pre-election activities of the Brigade through his contacts. Instead of monitoring the activities of his contacts however, he began hammering away at them, instructing them to work against certain candidates. This gave the impression that WOFACT was attempting to rig the elections through AMCLATTER/1. This immediately came to the Station's attention, as some of these contacts were working for JMWAVE and complained through their case officers that AMCLATTER/1 was throwing his weight around and giving the impression that he was running the election WOFACT. As a result, AMCLATTER/1 was reprimanded and told a second time that he was to report only what he heard about the elections and not to actively seek information. Instead of heeding this advice, he again sought on his contacts and "chewed" them out for getting him in trouble... AMCLATTER/1 strong points have been his dedication and enthusiasm for his work. He has, however, been somewhat of a problem in that he is a 'heavy-handed' operator who tries to impress his contacts with his importance, thereby committing a number of indiscretions...His home address did appear on a Cuban intelligence service censorship list which possibly contained the names and addresses of alleged Cuban intelligence agents in the U.S., but the validity of the list was never confirmed and he was SRWIRLED on this matter in April 1964 with overall favorable results. [CIA 201-251689 8.26.66]

The CIA: "BARKER'S contract at $500 a month was renewed yearly until his termination July 31, 1966, which was amicable and resulted from the change in times and the resulting change in CIA activities in which BARKER did not fit because of his previously widely-known association with the Agency. [No Agency contact has been maintained with him since that date.]" BARKER was given a job in Chicago. Richard Helms told the Ervin Committee: "We found out he was involved with certain gambling and criminal elements, and we didn't like the cut of his jib, and we cut him off." Richard Helms subsequently retracted this statement. BARKER recalled one of the early meetings of the White House/Special Operations Group during his Ervin Committee testimony: "We did go to this meeting, we did speak in Spanish to two or three persons that were in the old Cuban Revolutionary Council."

BARKER AND LEONARD GLASSER OCTOBER 1971

Miami architect Leonard Glasser reported that in October 1971, BARKER told him he needed building blueprints that included the details of the air-conditioning system and the air intake ducts of the Miami Beach Convention Center in which the Republican and Democratic conventions were to be held. Leonard Glasser: "He came to me and said he had a client in Puerto Rico who wanted to build a convention hall. It was a logical story. We were in the same building and threw business each other's way. But the city doesn't release things without authorization and they didn't have any of the plans around. Then he said 'Could you get the air conditioning plans?' This was unreal because what the hell would anyone want them for?" G. Gordon Liddy: "We had planned to sabotage the air conditioners in the convention center in Miami at the time the Democrats were in convention there." [Miami Herald 6.25.72]

HEMMING'S ALIBI: NOVEMBER 22, 1963

There was no way that Gerry would miss the big event. HEMMING told this researcher that he was at home on November 22, 1963, when he heard the news of President Kennedy's death on his radio. He said he rode to the Miami News building with Alan Kennedy where he saw editor William Baggs (deceased), "a confidant of the Kennedys who was their local eyes and ears on CIA activities." HEMMING told this researcher: "I was sure as hell making sure I had an alibi. I was over to MARTINO'S house that night. He's askin' me stuff. I said, 'I ain't gonna tell you shit.'" Karl Lessman, Sr. [kpocket@buckeyeweb.com] sent me this E-Mail: From Decker Exhibit No. 5323 - volume 19, page 477, statement of Philip Ben Hathaway, age 28, taken on November 22, 1963:

Just before noon today, my friend John Stevens Rutter Lawrence, who works with me, and I and two other friends left the Texaco building where we work going to the parade. We were walking down Commerce up to Main and Main to Akard and while we were walking up Akard towards Main Street we passed a man who was carrying a rifle in a gun case. I saw this man walking towards me, walking towards Commerce, and took particular attention to him because of his size. I am 6' 5" and weigh 200 pounds. This man was very tall, approximately 6' 6" or 6' 7" over 250 pounds, very thick and big through the chest, in his 30's, dirty blonde hair, hair worn in a crew cut. Was wearing gray colored business suit with a white dress shirt, fair complexion. I remarked to my friend that there was a guy carrying a gun in this crowd and made the remark that he was probably a Secret Service man. I could very easily identify this man if I ever saw him again. The gun case was holding a rifle because I could tell there was a gun in it as it was a combination leather and cloth gun case and without a gun it would have been limp, but it was heavy and he was carrying it by the handle and the barrel of the gun was up at a 45 degree angle. It was beige or tan leather and olive drab material. We can place the time we saw this man walking with the gun as I recall someone in the crowd asking for the time and they said it was 11:50 A.M. Philip Ben Hathaway.

This researcher read this E-Mail to HEMMING. HEMMING stated: "It was my doppelganger." Philip Ben Hathaway has not as yet been located by this researcher. Recently HEMMING called this researcher and stated that the Secret Service at released its copy of an FBI document about Hathaway which contained a notation on the bottom of it that read "HEMMINGS?" HEMMING sent me a copy of this document:

Date 11/22/63

JOHN STEVENS BUTLER LAWRENCE, born May 21, 1940, Law
Oak Park, Illinois, advised he resides at 709 Devonshire Street,
Richardson, Texas, and is employed at the Lone Star Gas Company,
Research and Development Department.

He advised that at about 11:45 AM, November 22, 1963, he was walking north on Alard Street from Commerce to Main with a friend, PHILIP BEN HATHAWAY, a fellow employee, and two other fellow employees, JOHN E. WITHEMER and ALAN D. LEWIS. His attention was called, by HATHAWAY, to a man walking in the opposite direction on the same side of the street, whom HATHAWAY said was carrying a rifle. He looked at the man pointed out by HATHAWAY and saw that the man was about 6' 1" tall, and weighed about 250 pounds or more. He appeared to be a professional football player type and very muscular. He had dirty blond hair and wore it in a short crew cut. This man was in his 30's and was wearing a light colored business suit and white business shirt.

LAWRENCE said he believes he could identify this man
if he saw him again.

HEMMING IS VISITED BY THE FBI AFTER THE ASSASSINATION
HEMMING NOVEMBER 23, 1963

HEMMING told this researcher:

O'Conner came by himself, which he was prone to do, because there weren't that many people working his division, which was agents. O'Conner focused on Castro agents, KGB's and all that kind of bullshit.

O'Conner came by and said Dywer and a couple of other guys are gonna be coming by and 'What do you think? Do you think any of the Miami people could have been involved in this?' I said 'I ain't got a fucking clue. There's weird shit that happens, but I ain't got a fucking clue.' He said, 'When they come by they're probably not gonna ask you too much shit anyway, I wouldn't volunteer anything.' Well they know that I'm the one that has his fingers on every fucking move that's going on.

HEMMING 1994:

The FBI came by my place after the assassination and asked nine questions in a hurry, and got the fuck out of there. They asked: 'What did you have for breakfast? What did you have for lunch?' They didn't ask where I was when the big event happened. Basically, in a roundabout way, 'Can you think of anything that could help in this business about Kennedy in Dallas?' Skirting the issues. They gave me a message by the nature of the fucking questions, to keep my mouth shut. They pointedly did not ask me my alibi. That was a month after the assassination. That was the last time I talked to the FBI. After the assassination, nobody in the group discussed any bullshit, and there was nobody asking no questions. We didn't discuss it. When there were arguments and shit, a guy would blurt out something. I would tell him to shut his goddamn face. That's what caused them guys to think I was in on the son-of-a-bitch. So what are they gonna do then? They're gonna keep their fucking mouths shut. They figure I'm a goddamn ringleader on the assassination of a President. This is what has carried through my connections for the last 30 years. All these intelligence assholes figure that's what it was. We divorced the Kennedy thing from our memories until the Garrison thing came up in 1967.

HARGRAVES AND ACKER

HEMMING stated that HARGRAVES was "in Miami, with his nagging wife, under surveillance," on November 22, 1963. On January 10, 1967, William Blanton Acker, Jr., furnished the FBI with the following information.

In 1963 he was in Miami, Florida, employed at the Royal Castle, Number 2, Flagler and Second, and met one Art Silva. Art Silva at that time was living with one Phyliss (LNU) at a small hotel across the street from Royal Castle Number Two. They later moved to an apartment in a court near LaJune Road and Eighth Street which was behind a fruit stand. One of their neighbors in the court (consisting of about ten units) was one ROY (LNU) who was living with some woman, name unrecalled, in the court next door to Art Silva. ROY, according to Art Silva, had several telescopic sight rifles, grenades, mortars, dynamite etc. in his room. Also ROY had made a trip to Dallas, Texas, in late 1963 and was reported by Art Silva to have Secret Service credentials. ROY was also associated with various Cuban resistance movements and was an ex-Marine. William Blanton Acker notes that instant article he read says a policeman stopped a man in Dallas who showed Secret Service credentials. Acker says at a Christmas party in 1963 he was arguing with ROY and almost came to blows as ROY blamed former President Kennedy personally for the death of one of his close friends who was in the invasion at the Bay of Pigs. Acker says that in late 1963 he met Art Silva in an open air sandwich shop in Miami to have a beer and Art Silva talked of his next door neighbor ROY and said ROY was working with the Cubans and would help William Blanton Acker get into the movement if he wanted to help out in winning back Cuba from Castro. Art Silva also said, 'Somebody is going to die. Somebody who hasn't hurt anybody. He doesn't know it but he is going to die.' Acker says he asked Art , 'Who?' and Art Silva said he couldn't say. Art Silva also said "ROY is in something big, the biggest thing this country has seen.' Acker says he thought Art Silva was talking about a robbery or something of that nature as he suspected Art Silva of being mixed up with various underworld characters. At this time Acker believes it was the assassination of President Kennedy after reading the article in the Post of January 14. Acker advised as follows Art Silva, age 25, 5'10" or 11" about 175 pounds, dark complexion, brown eyes, black hair, white male, a former Marine, tattoos on both forearms, one 'Penny' and one 'Mother' and one maybe a heart with 'Art and Penny' also Social Security number or serial number on upper right arm, build muscular, possibly Portuguese descent, probably a transvestite, employed as Assistant Manager of Royal Castle Number Eight in 1963 and was fired. ROY (LNU) as 25 years old, 6'1", 170-175 pounds, brown blonde hair, parted on the side, blue or grey eyes, fair complexion, white male, strong build, college type, was stopped by Coast Guard in late 1963 beyond three mile limit in a boat headed for Cuba and was turned back.

In 1963 HARGRAVES was 23 years old, 5' 10", 165 pounds, brown hair, hazel eyes.

WILLIAM BLANTON ACKER'S MENTAL ILLNESS

William Blanton Acker (born: April 17, 1921, in Jefferson County, Alabama) graduated from Brighton High School, Brighton, Alabama and later attended Auburn University but failed to graduate and left in 1940 to enter the United States Army. He was in the field artillery. He received an honorable discharge in 1945. The records of the Merchants Credit Association, Birmingham, Alabama, were made available to the FBI on January 18, 1967. These records indicated that William Blanton Acker and his wife Henrietta, were buying a residence in Bessemer, Alabama, in 1953 and 1954, and in about 1954 moved to Huntsville, Alabama. He was employed as an insurance agent. William Blanton Acker was voluntarily admitted to the Veterans Administration Hospital, Murfreesboro, Tennessee, on September 14, 1958. He went home on a trial visit on November 7, 1958, and had not been returned to the hospital after that time. He was discharged from the trial visit on July 1, 1959. William Blanton Acker was in the Veterans Administration Hospital for three weeks. When admitted to the hospital, his admission diagnosis was as follows: 'Persecution complex.' His discharge diagnosis was 'Schizophrenic reaction, paranoid type. Manifested by circumstantiality, flight of ideas, etc. moderate.' He was considered competent upon discharge. The registrar of the Veterans Administration Hospital advised that in layman's terms, "Acker had a split personality. Mr. Bennett stated further that Acker has a psychosis characterized by complete withdrawal from close and rewarding relationships with other people. He noted from a review of his file that Acker had a history disclosing that he was unable to hold a job for any length of time. He had previously been confined to the Alabama State Hospital where he had been committed by his wife. The file disclosed that he had never been injured in military service but had suffered from malaria fever. [FBI Alabama 89-45-145]

There was a notation on the credit files of William Blanton Acker that as of February 14, 1959, he was residing in Huntsville, Alabama, and his wife was employed by the Board of Education, Huntsville, as a teacher. William Blanton Acker told the FBI that he is separated from his wife, who resided in Bessemer, Alabama and "was advised by his doctor, after separation, to leave the area and go to Miami and get a new start on life."

When the FBI interviewed William Blanton Acker, Jr., 45, in 1967 he ...admitted he was in Veterans Administration Hospital, Murfreesboro, Tennessee, for a mental condition, is a veteran of World War II, having served in North Africa, Italy, Austria, France and Germany. Reliability of Acker's statements are unknown by Mobile. Acker claims to have furnished information of a confidential nature regarding Gilgreen to Birmingham Office in 1950's. He states he resided in Bessemer, Alabama, 1949 to 1950 and later was contacted by Agent Leonard Hern of Huntsville Resident Agency regarding testifying as a witness at trials in Washington, D.C. which he declined. Acker states he is separated from his wife who resided in Bessemer, Alabama." [62-109060-4402 NARA FBI 124-10058-10083 2.21.67 Date of Last Review 11.22.93] The files of the Birmingham Office of the FBI indicated Acker telephoned the Birmingham Office "and claimed that on April 15, 1957, he had observed FBI fugitive Gilbert Green at a cafe in Huntsville. Green had surrendered in New York City on February 27, 1956, and was not being sought as a fugitive at the time of Acker's call. [NARA FBI 124-10258-10202]

The FBI found that the tax records of Royal Castle indicated that A.A. Silva, SS # 047-28-2333, had worked at Royal Castle until September 1963, and at that time resided at 207 N.E. 2nd Ave, Miami, a fictitious address. William Blanton Acker, Jr. was employed there until December 1963. When the FBI checked the apartment in a court, Mrs. Katherine W. Drobot related that a

ROY E. HARGRAVES managed the place when she owned the cottages and also when Mrs. Neos had them. She advised that HARGRAVES was a petty thief and was mixed up in gun running and also in Cuban activities. She advised that she recalled Mrs. Neos saying that HARGRAVES was stopped by either United States Customs or the Coast Guard, trying to go to Cuba. Mrs. Drobot advised that she had no records at all as to the tenants and the names William Blanton Acker and Art Silva meant nothing to her. She related that a woman was staying with HARGRAVES at the cottages; however, she could furnish no information relative to her...Eventually HARGRAVES was fired as he did not turn over some rents to Mrs. Drobot.

The information checked out, but the FBI discontinued the investigation:

Investigation in this matter was conducted at Miami, Florida, by S.A. John F. Hanlon, Jr. MM T-1 is (Deleted) [Howard Kenneth Davis]. For the information of the Bureau, complete facts surrounding the involvement of ROY EMORY HARGRAVES in Cuban affairs can be found in cases captioned 'ROY HARGRAVES; ROLANDO MASFERRER; ET AL. IS - CUBA, NM,' Bufile 105-118615 Miami File 105-7313, and 'UNITED NATIONAL FRONT AGAINST CASTRO IS - CUBA,' Bufile 105-138074. Miami File 105-9794. In view of the fact that this investigation is predicated upon information furnished by William Blanton Acker, an individual with a diseased mind, and also because a reliable source advised that ROY HARGRAVES was in Miami from November 1963, to March 1964, engaged in Cuban activities, no further action is being taken at Miami, UACB. [NARA FBI 124-10058-10056]

The FBI cited:

MM T-1, who has been active in Cuban revolutionary matters for the past seven years, on February 10, 1965, advised he personally knew and was formerly associated with HARGRAVES, a mercenary, adventurer and soldier of fortune. From November 1963, through March 1964 HARGRAVES was closely associated with and worked for Felipe Vidal Santiago. HARGRAVES helped Felipe Vidal Santiago to obtain arms, ammunition and a boat. He transported the boat and military equipment between Miami and the Florida Keys. When HARGRAVES was stopped by US Customs agents, Felipe Vidal Santiago clandestinely left the United States and infiltrated Cuba. Felipe Vidal Santiago was captured and executed by a firing squad in Cuba in April 1964." [FBI 62-109060-4450]

William Blanton Aker told the truth, however, the FBI took the word of Howard K. Davis, and determined Aker was lying. Howard K. Davis snitched on HEMMING, at HEMMING'S behest, in order to provide a toned down profile of HEMMING'S activities at this time to the FBI. The two men have remained close friends over the years. When HEMMING had a heart attack recently, it was Davis who called me to tell me about it. HEMMING knew the FBI wanted at least one snitch in this group, so he let Davis play that role.

MM T-I advised on December 4, 1963, that HEMMING was then in serious financial condition, and that neither he nor his wife were then employed. He said that HEMMING was then engaged in attempting to raise funds for Cuban revolutionary activities by writing letters requesting contributions to leading political and industrial figures in the United States. On December 16, 1963, GERALD PATRICK HEMMING was interviewed in connection with another matter. At this time, HEMMING was residing at 1036 Southwest Fifth Street, Apartment #2, Miami, Florida. During the interview, he mentioned he was then unemployed, and was not operating any military training programs for Cuban exiles. He said his organization, Interpen, had six members, but was inactive. The June 28, 1964 issue of the "Miami Herald" contained an article captioned "Arms Returned to Rebels", which related that "a 12-member Federal Court Jury agreed with GERALD PATRICK HEMMING, better known as JERRY PATRICK, that the arms and ammunition which had been seized by United States Customs Agents 19 months ago on Sombrero Beach, Marathon, Florida, were to be used for a training camp and not for a mission to Cuba". The article reported that PATRICK, 2540 Northwest North River Drive, said that he had switched his training operations from the Florida Keys to the Everglades. HEMMING advised that he is interested in setting up, maintaining and operating military training camps for Cuban exiles. HEMMING advised that he has been active in the Cuban revolutionary activities for the past four years and is in frequent contact with the leaders of Commandos L. [FBI Analysis of 2.68 Ramparts article by William Turner] On December 16, 1963, HEMMING

...was interviewed in connection with another matter. Incidental to this interview, HEMMING advised he is currently unemployed, is not operating any military training camps for Cuban exiles at the present time; and that his organization, INTERPEN, has six members, but is inactive. HEMMING explained he continues to maintain contact with persons active in Cuban Revolutionary matters; still is interested in working toward overthrowing Communism in Cuba; and is still closely following U.S. Government policy concerning Cuba. HEMMING stated he has interviewed Cubans recently having defected from Cuba; he has ascertained a considerable amount regarding Cuban radar defenses; knows which corridors are currently open; but has not considered making this information available to the United States Government. [FBI 2-1693-97 pgs. 1-3 w/h]

On December 31, 1963, the FBI generated a highly deleted Letter Head Memorandum concerning HEMMING and Alexander Rorke. Subject: INTERPEN [FBI HQ 2-1693-97 pgs. 1-3 w/h]

JANUARY 1964

HEMMING told this researcher:

I was in ANGLETON'S home after the assassination. He ain't got Secret Service parked in his driveway. We didn't discuss a goddamned thing. I wondered if the fucker would answer the door considering what I was feeling at that time. And then, when I called back from New Orleans, when I was out there with Garrison for a couple of days and I called back to D.C. and talked to a couple of other parties, I figured they were going to hang up the phone.

HEMMING said he had seen ANGLETON in March 1963 and again in January or February 1964. HEMMING said he told him he was "shutting the motherfucker down." During a pre-trial hearing concerning the No Name Key bust, HARGRAVES accused Wallace Shanley of being responsible for the death of two or three Cubans who had been infiltrated into Cuba, because the weapons he had seized at No Name Key were destined for these men. [CIA 201-309125 11.964] On June 26, 1964, a 12 member jury decided in Miami Federal Court that HEMMING and his crew should regain possession of the arms, confiscated December 4, 1963, at Marathon Key.

On September 11, 1964, the FBI generated a document about HEMMING that contained information from a Secret report from the Department of the Army: "In as much as HEMMING'S future activities appear likely to be with INTERPEN, the Miami Subject file on HEMMING is being placed in a closed status." [FBI HQ 105-86406-18 pages 1A, 2 - 6, 15 -16. 19, 20, 21, 25, 29, 30 w/h] This document, which was 30 pages long, dealt with HEMMING'S activities in Castro's Cuba, INTERPEN, GERRY HEMING'S connection to William Morgan, HEMING'S connection to the Sandinistas, HEMMING'S connection to the anti-Communist Legionnaires, the numerous newspaper articles about HEMMING, FRANK STURGIS, Rolando Masferrer, HEMMING'S fund raising trip to Los Angeles, HEMMING'S No Name Key bust, Customs violations, the search for Rorke etc. A copy of this document was sent to G-2, Fort McPherson, Georgia, and to the United States Secret Service "Regarding protecting President of U.S."

HEMMING 1994: "I was back on active duty with the Army Special Forces in August 1964. No one interviewed me in September 1964. I went to Fort Benning, Georgia, in November 1964." HEMMING'S "Department of the Army and Air Force National Guard Bureau, Report of Separation and Record of Service in the Army National Guard of Florida and as a Reserve of the Army" Discharge Certificate indicated that in early October 1964 HEMMING entered the Special Forces Group Augmented of the U.S. Army Reserve. On December 2, 1964, HEMMING was in Fort Benning, Georgia, where he took a Basic Airborne Course. When HEMMING'S tour of duty ended on April 13, 1967, he was 6' 6" tall and weighed 256 pounds. He listed his occupation as "ironworker."

THEORY: HEMMING & THE DEATH ED COLLINS

On September 28, 1964, while the FBI was in touch with HEMMING about the Odio incident, HEMMING murdered INTERPEN member Edward A. Collins. Miami Police records indicated Edward A. Collins was involved in "selling guns and explosives to Cuban exiles." In October 1963 Edward A. Collins stole a boat from which anti-Castro transmissions were beamed to Cuba from outside U.S. waters. In 1977, HEMMING said that in 1963 Edward A. Collins experienced, "delusions of grandeur" and attempted to form a united front of right-wing groups that would have included Cuban exiles, the Ku Klux Klan, the National States Rights Party and others. HEMMING told this researcher:

Collins was working with Harber around this time. He was keeping a low profile because he knew that it would annoy the hell out of me if he tried to branch out. Of course he was fairly active in 1963. That's what cost him his life in 1964. We would keep track of what he was doing so he didn't go off and do something crazy and we end up with another goddamn Loran Hall type situation. Branching out. Doing crazy shit. Taking some of our people along for the ride. Before Collins died we've already got the information as to what the fuck he's doing.

HEMMING told Edward A. Collins to accompany him aboard a small craft they had rented from Russell Wilkey, a charter boat captain. According to Miami Police and City of Miami reports, Russell Wilkey, Steve Justin Wilson, HEMMING and Edward A. Collins were out at sea when Edward A. Collins allegedly "dived off the sailboat to retrieve a drifting dingy. This was the last time he was seen alive."

City of Miami, Florida, Inter-Office Memorandum

Lt. H. Swilly, Intelligence Unit,
From Gus Zenoz, P/officer Intelligence Unit
Date October 20, 1964,
References W/M Edward A. Collins 29 years 1925 S.W. 4th Street

On September 28, 1964, Subject went sailing with Russell Wilkey 47 years (owner of sailboat) and two other men, names unknown. According to Russell they were in the Dinner Key boat channel when Collins dived off the sailboat to retrieve a drifting dingy. That was the last time they saw him alive. On September 29, 1964, Perry Nichols Jr. 18 years, discovered the underwear clad corpse (Subject) about 4:15 p.m. Nichols, a high school student, had been out on the family boat. Writer has learned that Subject, at the time of his death, had been very actively locally selling explosives and guns to the Cuban groups. An informer told writer that he had been out boat riding with Subject and that he was not the type who would jump in the ocean especially at night. Informer who was very friendly with Subject thinks that he was probably killed. Writer thinks it might be a good idea to find out who the other two men in the boat were and to check them out. They might be the ones involved in the theft of dynamite for September 19, 1964, from Jack Allen Austin Powder Company, 11200 S.W. Court.

Seymour Gelber of the City of Miami, Florida, stated:

Further investigation reveals that on September 28, 1964, Collins was sailing with three other men when he attempted to retrieve a dingy boat when he drowned. The three men with him at the time were as follows: GERALD PATRICK HEMMING, 1036 S.W. 5th St. Apt. 2, Miami, Florida (You will remember this man popping up in our recent inquiry). Steve Justin Wilson, 1925 S.W. 4th Street, Miami, Florida (we have no information on this individual) and these are old addresses on both men. Russell Wilkey, address unknown. Edward Anderson Collins only arrest here in Miami was only for 'drunk.' Collins listed his occupation as Marine Surveyor. Medical examiners report shows that he died by drowning. Attached you will find a picture of Collins. He is well known to our Customs men here. [Ltr. Gelber to Fensterwald 8.13.68; Miami Police Report 9.29.64, 9.20.64]

Seymour Gelber, the author of one of these reports, was Assistant Attorney General for the State of Florida from 1962 to 1963. By 1976 he was a Florida State judge. Russell Wilkey, was born November 28, 1918, and died in August 1982.

On May 8, 1968, HEMMING told, Steve Burton, an investigator for New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison, that Edward A. Collins and Enrique Molina (a Castro spy) were in Dallas during November 1963. (When HEMMING disliked someone, he put them in Dallas around the time of the Kennedy assassination.) When a Freedom of Information Act request was filed for the records of Edward A. Collins, the Bureau stated: "Eighteen pages were reviewed and were withheld in their entirety, with no segregable material available for release...13 pages out of the 18 had been referred to the CIA as the information originated with them...CIA advised that all of its information should be denied in its entirety..." and it still is as of 2010. [FBI ltr. 5.15.79 Bresson/AJ] Wallace Shanley commented, "Collins was a guy that ate dog food."

In 1977 HEMMING was asked about the death of Edward A. Collins: "Shit, he didn't die in no accident. He was keelhailed by a bunch of left-wingers!" HEMMING 1994:

Collins was a very simple guy. We liked to fight a lot and argue. But he was a real joker. He decided to infiltrate this peace march that was going to march to Key West, get on some boats, then go to Havana and march to Guantanamo Naval Base. He fell in with those people, and he was working for the FBI when he did it. Off Dinner Key he supposedly jumped off the boat that these peace people were going to take to Havana, to recover a dingy that had come loose in the night in eight feet of water, and he drowned. I went to identify the body. Steve Justin Wilson and I were not on the boat with him. When he drowns the FBI figures, 'Holy shit, their careers are on the line. They got him killed.' The FBI questioned me about it. Russell Wilkey was a peacenik and a U.S. Customs informant. We were not on the boat with him. We went and interrogated the guys on the boat severely. We didn't hurt them too bad. We wanted know what the hell was going on? How an excellent swimmer, who had just been on a boat a few months before that blew up off Cuba, could drown? The City of Miami report is bullshit. They made a mistake. We looked him over close on the slab.

HEMMING was asked why there was no mention of the peace cruise in the media, and why it was not in any Miami Police or Miami City report. HEMMING told this researcher:

The people on that boat were not overtly connected with the peace march. We thought Collins was trying to steal the boat. Listen to what I say instead of wasting your goddamn time on bullshit! What are you fucking sparring with me or something? Or is this game just to waste time? I ain't got fucking time to waste.

The Quebec - Washington - Guantanamo walk for peace took place in August 1963. Robert K. Brown stated:

Dick Billings of Life believes that Collins was in Dallas on or about November 17, 1963. As he recalls there is a letter from Collins which would place him in Dallas at this time. Robert K. Brown suggests we might want to talk to one Bobby Willis. Said Collins drowned off Miami in a fishing incident. He was a superb swimmer and some question has been raised about his death. However, Robert K. Brown has heard that Collins and his companions had been drinking heavily on this occasion. [Fensterwald interview with Robert K. Brown 7.17.68]

There was no way to question Steve Justin Wilson. HEMMING reported Steve Justin Wilson was

...having mental problems - dope. He shot up an apartment, suicidal, and all kinds of shit. I sent him to Guatemala to see Cokie Zimeri in 1975. Zimeri had a caterpillar tractor plowing the bodies into the ground. He headed the death squad and more than that. He wasn't prepared for this, and had to return two weeks later. He died in 1984 of a heart attack. He was 48. I got the autopsy report on it. He blew out a thin wall on his heart. Drug usage.

HEMMING: APRIL 1965

OTHER COUP D'ETATS

In 1965 HEMMING was involved with Roberto Alejos Arzu in an attempt to overthrow the Government of Guatemala. [CIA Intell. Information Cable IN 74057 10.16.65] The CIA reported that in April 1965 "Roberto Alejos Arzu, Guatemalan millionaire who resided in Miami Beach, Florida, planned the overthrow of the Government of Guatemala in the Spring of 1965, using a group of Cuban emigres he had recruited for the operation. On May 4, 1965, Alejos and Luis Sierra Lopez, military leader of the group, were apprehended and their arms cache seized by United States Government officials. There have been several reports on Alejos' recent involvement in another attempt to overthrow the Guatemalan Government. On October 13, 1965, Armando Medina Montes de Oca, a member of Roberto Alejos Arzu's abortive plot to overthrow the Guatemalan Government in the Spring of 1965, said that the pilot who flew Roberto Alejos to Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, a short time ago [October 13, 1965] was GERALD PATRICK HEMMING. The aircraft landed at Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, where it remained for about two weeks. HEMMING is now in Miami. (Field Comment: HEMMING, an American soldier-of-fortune and United States Marine, has been engaged in Cuban revolutionary activities for about five years. HEMMING, leader of INTERPEN, a guerilla group, was most recently involved in the recruitment of Cuban emigres with guerilla warfare experience who would be willing to fight the Communist guerillas in the Dominican Republic on behalf of General Antonio Imbert Barrera. It is believed this plan never materialized.) Medina intends to give this information to the new Guatemalan Consul General in Miami, hoping that this will sharpen his interest in Alejos. (Field Comment: It was recently reported that Medina accepted an offer of $30,000 to deliver Alejos safely to Guatemalan authorities)." [CIA IN 74057 - 10.16.65 - Source: "A Cuban emigre, former member of a Cuban Commando Group, who is no longer associated with activists. Source is regarded as reliable, and previous reporting from him has proved to be accurate."] HEMMING told this researcher:

We were going to overthrow Montenegro. He was cutting deal with the guerrillas. Alejos didn't like it. He wouldn't let Cuban exiles launch raids against Castro. He eventually got ousted.

Before the 1980 election Alejos complained that "most of the elements in the State Department are probably pro-Communist...either Mr. Carter is a totally incapable president or he is definitely a pro-communist element." [Jay Marshall, The Iran-Contra Connection]

JUNE 1965 THE IMBERT CAPER

The CIA reported that:

...a commando team of 49 Cuban exiles and Americans is being formed in Miami by Odelio Garcia, Derizanz [Diaz Lanz?] and GERALD PATRICK HEMMING, an American adventurer and soldier-of-fortune. Aton Constanzo Palau and Ramon Escarda Rubio appear to be leaders within the group. The commando team is allegedly to be used by Dominican General Antonio Imbert Barreras, head of the loyalist forces in the Dominican Republic, presumably to try and topple Francisco Caamano Deno, leader of the rebel forces. The backer of the commando team was described as an American lawyer living in Miami.

On the evening of June 8, 1965, GERALD PATRICK HEMMING held a meeting at the home of Aton Constanzo Palau. Two of HEMMING'S men were there. HEMMING mentioned that he had made a trip that afternoon to see the financial backers of the Commando team that is scheduled to leave for the Dominican Republic...At 8:00 p.m. on June 9, 1965, HEMMING said that he and his backer would be leaving for the Dominican Republic on June 10, 1965. He did not know for certain how long they would remain there, but mentioned they might stay from one to five days. He said that they are scheduled to see General Antonio Imbert Barreras and, upon their return to Miami, they are to bring back with them one of Imbert's 'Supervisors' who is to oversee the processing of the men. HEMMING said that they intend to bring with them some money for the group. When Escarda mentioned to HEMMING the subject of salaries, HEMMING said that the backer would not put up any advance pay until the men have been processed and are ready to leave Florida. This step, he said, is being taken to insure that the men will not quit at the last moment. HEMMING described the backer as an American lawyer who had an import/export office in Miami and also owns a 'Buffet' (Field Comment: Possibly a delicatessen). HEMMING stressed that he would not push this man any harder because there were several other groups that wanted the job. He emphasized that he has the contract, and does not intend to lose it. Source: A Cuban refugee who is associated with activists in the Miami area. Source is regarded as reliable and previous reporting from him has proved to be accurate.

HEMMING said the training would begin after he returned from the Dominican Republic. [CIA DB-315/02029-65] The CIA: "On June 15, 1965, a CIA Intelligence Information Cable was titled "Financial Backer of GERALD PATRICK HEMMING Identified as Irving Davidson." It read: "On June 12, 1965, HEMMING, while under the influence of liquor, said is financial backer is I. Irving Davidson, who went to the Dominican Republic on June 12, 1965, by private plane."

FROM JMWAVE

1. On June 16, 1965, Aton Constanzo Palau told AMTABBY-27 that Constanzo and Gerald Patrick Hemming had met with Isadore Irving Davidson latter's office June 15, 1965. During meeting Davidson said he had been to Domrep and had talked to General Antonio Imbert Barreras. Davidson said plans were definite and that team would be leaving for Florida for Domrep in one or two weeks. (WAVE comment: re group's departure DOMREP, AMCLEVE-15 reported that Ramon Escarda Rubio and Francisco Rodriguez Tamayo had heard Hemming say on June 9 that commandoes scheduled be armed with FAL rifles and AR-15 automatic rifles before their departure, possibly by air from Florida and that they to be provided with heavy weapons in DOMREP for their counterguerilla activities there. Although original plan called for a team of 49 Cuban exiles and 11 American citizen be sent to DOMREP, it decided that no Americans to be included on team).

2. Davidson then spoke of Wayne Morse's charges against Davidson, and said that two more Senators preparing similar charges against him. Hemming remarked that he is not afraid of being stopped by U.S. Agencies but very much afraid of press. He said that Imbert expecting be attacked shortly by U.S. Senators also.

3. Contanzo told AMIABBY-27 he knows man in WAVE area who assisted Davidson in cleaning up 2000 Reising Submachine guns in 1963 that Davidson was selling to General Somoza of Nicaragua.

HEMMING told I. Irving Davidson that he was unable to keep his June 14, 1965, meeting because of ODENVY surveillance. Davidson told HEMMING: "I am tired of running, this show has a green light from the top, and I don't care if ODENVY, KUBARK, and ODBOON are watching us." [CIA 201-41581 6.17.65] I. Irving Davidson was the intermediary between Tony Imbert and HEMMING. I. Irving On July 14, 1965, Aton Constanzo Palau told (deleted) that he had appointed FRANK FIORINI, Nino Diaz and others to leader his force which will number about 3,000 men. [CIA 201-41581 7.22.65] HEMMING told this researcher: "Tony Imbert was part of the team that assassinated Trujillo."

HEMMING told this researcher:

You remember when the 82nd Airborne invaded the Dominican Republic in April 1965? After that there were some people who were worried about who was running the fucking government, so we wouldn't have to go in there and do the same thing all over again. You had Juan Bosch. With everybody threatening to overthrow everyone else it kept them off balance enough so they didn't turn around and throw the fucking U.S. troops out of there. Everybody was there in 1965. Mitch Werbell, PHILLIPS and DeBRUEYS were there. It was a critical thing. Because Fidel's boys were about to take over the fuckin' place. I was in the Green Beret Reserves in 1964, on active duty.

In 1965 the FBI generated five Letter Head Memorandums about HEMMING and the "IMBERT CAPER." [MM 2-387-6.15.65, 6.18.65, 8.5.65, 12.15.65; Bufile NR 7.27.65] Subject: Anton Constanzo Palau, HEMMING, Neutrality Matters, Internal Security, Dominican Republic, June 15, 1965, June 18, 1965, March 18, 1966, September 29,

1966, all at Miami. [FBI 2-387] That year the CIA sent the Justice Department a letter that acknowledged HEMMING had been a voluntary CIA informant who had been in contact with the Domestic Contact Division in Los Angeles. The FBI reported:

MM T-1 has been active in pro- and anti-Castro activities for the past six years and is in close contact with Gerald Patrick Hemming. On June 18, 1965, MM T-1 furnished the following information: Hemming, an American soldier of fortune and adventurer, has been engaged in Cuban revolutionary activities for about five years. He is a part-time construction laborer and a self-styled intelligence analyst given to reading paperback novels on espionage and guerrilla warfare. Hemming resides in a run-down neighborhood characterized by cheap apartment buildings and rooming houses. He speaks Spanish, knows the leading Cuban exile political and action leaders. He holds himself out, and is considered by Cuban exiles as an expert in infiltration and counterespionage. There is a steady stream of Cubans visiting him to obtain the latest news on matters in the DR which affect the Cuban colony in Miami. Hemming enjoys this position and is given to spreading false reports and rumors to maintain his prestige.

MM T-1 said that on June 17, 1965, Hemming claimed that he is in direct or indirect contact with General Antonio Imbert, head of the Loyalist forces in the DR. Hemming claims that Imbert wants to recruit a force of reliable anti-Communist Cuban exile mercenaries. Imbert expects that some of his garrison throughout the DR may prove unloyal or unreliable, and such a Cuban force would be in ready reserve if and when he needed them. Hemming claims that he promoted this idea which was later accepted by Imbert. He did not state whom he contacted or who may have contacted him. Hemming said that he planned on a force of about eighty Cuban exiles with six or eight American mercenaries as instructors and leaders. Hemming was vague on how he would recruit and send this force to the DR or what the U. S. Government's policy may be on this matter. MM T-1 explained that Hemming frequently comes up with such ideas, but somehow these plans never materialize. MM T-1 said that when this idea dies from lack of action and is forgotten, Hemming will probably come up with another plan to coincide with current Latin American developments.

On June 18, 1965, Maximino Casal Fernandez, 3660 Southwest 10th Street, Miami, advised that he had spent several years in training camps with other Cuban exiles in Central America and would readily serve as a commando to fight Communism in the Western Hemisphere. He said that a few weeks ago he was contacted by Aton Constanzo Palau, a Cuban exile who was formerly a rebel commander of Cuba who told him that an American named I. Irving Davidson recently returned from the DR and contacted Gerald Patrick Hemming. It appeared that Davidson was a business consultant to American firms in the DR, and was in close contact with General Imbert.

Davidson reportedly indicated that Imbert was anxious to obtain a group of trained Cuban exile commandos to fight against Communist elements in the DR. It was also reported that there was a large Cuban force being held prisoner in the DR. It appeared that a group of Cuban volunteers would be useful in the DR and bring attention to the Cuban exile cause inasmuch as they would be fighting alongside of OAS troops.

Aton later had filled out an application form which was then forwarded to Hemming for his review. It was expected that the recruited Cubans would leave Miami on about June 12, 1965. Later there were delays and postponements. Since that time there has been no activity, and now it is doubted if the whole plan was serious.

Casal explained that it was presumed such a plan had U. S. Government backing, and there would be no problems with obtaining re-entry permits or obtaining transportation to leave the U. S. It now appears that no re-entry permits will not be granted, the U. S. Government has not authorized such a plan, the plan is without organization and leadership and Casal has no intention of further participation. Casal explained that he did not know Hemming, but presumed from what he had been told that Hemming was handling the effort and was the person in touch with the DR.

It is noted that I. Irving Davidson, Washington, D. C., a public relations counsel, was a registered agent of the Nicaraguan and Israel Governments in 1955. On interview in March, 1959, he stated he had just returned from the DR and had spoken with Fulgencio Batista, former President of Cuba.

In July 1959, MM T-1 advised Davidson was in close contact with Rafael del Pico, Cuban exile who then headed an anti-Fidel Castro movement in the U. S. Davidson visited Miami in June, 1959, and conferred with other persons then interested in an anti-Castro movement. MM T-1 said it was his impression Davidson had contact with different U. S. and Latin American Government officials and also worked as a lobbyist.

On June 14, 1965, GERALD HEMMING was advised he did not have to make any statement; any statement could be used against him in court of law; and—he had the right to consult an attorney. No threats, promises, or rewards were made. HEMMING thereafter volunteered the following information: The Directorio Revolucionario Estudiantil (DRE), the Movimiento Revolucionaria Recuperacion (MRR) are anti-CASTRO organizations composed of Cuban exiles dedicated to the overthrow of the present government of Cuba. The DRE, and especially the MRR, operated outside of the United States for several years prior to the Fall of 1964, when most of the Cubans returned to the United States. These operations outside of the United States consisted of training camps and operations from bases in Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Guatemala, and the Dominican Republic. In the Dominican Republic, Cuban exiles operated bases and had a great amount of contact with Dominican military officials. There is still traffic in and out of the Dominican Republic by Cuban exiles from Miami and other Central American countries. Some of the recently returning Cubans say that the majority of the U. S. trained Dominican military officers have joined the forces of FRANCISCO CAAMANO DENO, head of the Dominican rebel forces. As a consequence, IMBERT is in need of trained military men to use as commandos, guerrillas, and counter guerrillas. IMBERT knows there are a number of Cuban exiles trained and available for this duty. It is said that after former Dominican President DONALD REID was overthrown in April 1965, several Cuban military teams to the Dominican Republic joined and worked with IMBERT. Reportedly they did a good job in spotting rebel forces and performing some intelligence functions. It is also reported there are a number of European mercenaries in the Dominican Republic who have been there a long time, and came to the Dominican Republic during the latter part of the TRUJILLO regime. These mercenaries are reported organized and are associated with the rebel forces of IMBERT reportedly said that since the DRE and MRR members no longer receive salaries once earned in the Dominican training camps, he would take them for use on his side and continue their salaries. IMBERT said he could have to have consent by the U. S. Government before overtly starting- a program. A representative of IMBERT allegedly has contacted I. IRVIN DAVIDSON, a lobbyist in Washington, D. C., who is working on this program, and has been in contact with the Pentagon and the State Department. In Miami, Cubans arriving from the Dominican Republic claim that IMBERT is interested in the services of Cubans already trained in military warfare to serve with his forces against the rebel forces and European mercenaries.

ODELIO GARCIA a former member of the MRR maintains such a group, although his group never became operational. Garcia, who was formerly in the U. S. Marine Corps, is interested in re-forming his team to go to the Dominican Republic. However, there is nobody for him to contact concerning this and he lacks the ways and means of getting this team to the Dominican Republic.

CONSTANZO was a member of a unit of the MRR formerly headed by LUIS SIERRA LOPEZ. After CONSTANZO became aware of IMBERT's interest in the Cuban exile teams, CONSTANZO went out and openly began recruiting. This caused great excitement and speculation by other Cuban exiles. A number of the men he recruited were former members of the SIERRA LOPEZ team. This team is now angry with SIERRA because of an incident involving Guatemala.

This incident happened in May 1965, when Sierra and his team joined with ROBERTO ALEJOS ARZU, a wealthy Guatemalan national in Miami. There was a plan to go to Guatemala and try to overthrow that government. Sierra was blamed for turning over the arms to U.S. Customs agents in Miami, and therefore aborting the revolution in Guatemala.

HEMMING continued that because of his living in the same neighborhood as CONSTANZO and many other former MRR members he is visited and consulted by them. He said he looks over applications and does some appraising of the abilities of the different team members.

HEMMING stated there is no evidence that there are any Dominicans recruiting in the United States, or that any money from the Dominican Republic has come to the United States to be spent on arms or recruiting. The word that Imbert might use Cuban exile teams comes by word of mouth from Cubans returning to Miami from the Dominican Republic.

There is nobody in the United States in charge of this program. Cubans desiring to go will have to find a way to get there, either directly or indirectly. Cubans who have been there before will probably know how to return. There are no arms known to be available for these teams. There are no training camps in the United States or recruiting offices, and no organization set up for recruiting.

On March 9, 1966, JULIO ATON CONSTANZO PALAU was interviewed by Special Agents LEMAN L. STAFFORD and GEORGE E. DAVIS, J. at the Miami Office of the FBI. At the outset of the interview, Special Agent STAFFORD advised CONSTANZO in the Spanish language that he did not have to say anything unless he wanted to; that anything he did say could be used against him in a court of law; and, that he had the right to consult an attorney before saying anything. CONSTANZO then voluntarily related that the June, 1965, plan for a group of Cubans to aid the Organization of American States (OAS) to keep peace in the Dominican Republic (DR) is completely dead. He said that he and GERALD PATRICK HEMMING had together recruited about 120 Cubans in the Summer of 1965. The purpose of this plan was to aid JOAQUIN BALAGUER, former President of the Dominican Republic, and hand of the Reform Party of the DR, and not to aid General ANTONIO IMBERT BARRERA, Dominican strong man and former member of the Dominican Council of State, as he had previously believed.

CONSTANZO recalled that shortly after April 24, 1965, I, IRVING DAVIDSON, public relations 12312 of Washington, D. C., and ANDREW ST. GEORGE, professional photographer and news man, talked to HEMMING at the Dupont Plaza Hotel. CONSTANZO was present, but did not understand the conversation, which was all in English. Subsequently, HEMMING told CONSTANZO that the plan was for the recruits to go to the Dominican Republic as a third force, and attack a point some distance from Santo Domingo, the capital city. HEMMING told CONSTANZO that he had received some money from DAVIDSON and ST. GEORGE to finance this operation. CONSTANZO claimed that he never knew the source of DAVIDSON'S money. CONSTANZO said that HEMMING related to him that DAVIDSON claimed to have talked with President LYNDON R. JOHNSON for approval concerning this plan, and President JOHNSON had allegedly told DAVIDSON "I will let you know." CONSTANZO said he never learned what the answer was. However, CONSTANZO personally talked to GUILLERMO BELT, former Cuban Ambassador to the United States, who agreed to talk to JOSE ANTONIO MORA of the OAS to obtain acceptance of the plan. BELT subsequently said that MORA told him he would accept the Cuban exile recruits as part of the OAS group in the Dominican Republic, but nothing actually developed, and the plan was never accepted.

On June 27, 1966 I. Irving Davidson, registered agent for Nicaragua, Ecuador, Haiti and others with offices at 1612 K. Street N.W. Washington, D.C. advised as follows in connection with captioned subjects (HEMMING, CONSTANZO) Davidson denied ever meeting CONSTANZO, HEMMING and ANDREW ST. GEORGE. DAVIDSON also stated he never even heard the names CONSTANZO, HEMMING and the last time he saw Guillermo Belt, former Cuban Ambassador to the United States, is when Belt inquired about renting space in Davidson's office three years ago.

Davidson also denied any knowledge or connection with the scheme of recruiting Cuban exiles for duty in the Dominican Republic. He further denied have furnished money to anyone for such a scheme and certainly never talked with the President of the United States concerning his approval of this plan for recruiting Cuban exiles.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION
Miami, Florida
September 29, 1966

It has been previously reported that in June 1965 JULIO ATON CONSTANZO PALAU, a Cuban exile residing in Miami, and GERALD PATRICK HEMMING, a United States Citizen and soldier of fortune, were recruiting Cubans and Americans in the Miami area to serve in the Dominican Republic with the Peace-Keeping Force of the Organization of American States (OAS). This idea was later taken over by a pro-Cuban government in exile group at Miami who contacted GUILLERMO BELT RAMIREZ, former Cuban Ambassador to the United States, so that he could present this idea to the OAS. Dr. JOSE ANTONIO MORA, Secretary General, Pan American Union (the Secretariat of the OAS), told BELT the idea was completely unrealistic.

On August 24, 1966, Mr. J. WALTER YEAGLEY, Assistant Attorney General, Internal Security Division, United States Department of Justice, advised the Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation, as follows after a review of this matter: The number of individuals recruited by CONSTANZO and HEMMING reached 49 Cubans and 11 Americans. These men filled out enlistment forms and received promises concerning payment for their services. Mr. YEAGLEY continued that while the information received from various sources was conflicting in some respects, these sources have indicated that the men recruited were to serve with the Peace-Keeping Force of the Organization of American States in the Dominican Republic. It would appear, therefore, that the carrying out of plans to send recruits to the Dominican Republic may have been contingent upon acceptance of the plan by the OAS. In this connection, Mr. YEAGLEY pointed out that when the plan was presented to Dr. JOSE ANTONIO MORA, an official of the OAS, it was reviewed by him and the plan apparently was scrapped at that time. Mr. YEAGLEY's letter concluded that it was the opinion of the Internal Security Division that the facts of this case were not such as to give a reasonable assurance of a successful prosecution of CONSTANZO or HEMMING for a violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 959. Mr. YEAGLEY said that the Internal Security Division, accordingly, was not requesting any further investigation in this matter.

HEMMING: DECEMBER 1966

In December 1966 HEMMING said he went to Africa, to work on a National Aeronautics and Space Administration project. In HEMMING'S Motion for Favorable Evidence he asked for:

All reports, files and documents held by CIA, FBI, Department of State, and other agencies reference to the defendant's employment during the calendar year 1966 under Contract NBy-710005, Support Facilities, Phase I, Ascension Island, in connection with United States Air Force downrange missile program, especially those that refer to CIA and U.S. Armed Forces support of both government and insurgent forces within the then Republic of the Congo.

HEMMING said he was tracking down Ché Guevara:

Ché was in the Congo at that time. He was in Baraka, on Lake Tanganika. We were the backup team. Felix Rodriguez had never met Ché. I was the only one who could pick him out of a crowd.

In 1966 HEMMING claimed he was involved with the United States Air Force Down Range Guided Missile Program as a CIA advisor. HEMMING 1994:

I asked for discovery, for a trial, as to what they were saying about me on the Down Range Missile program. I'm not claiming anything. It's called greymail. You gonna put me in jail? Okay? How about when I was doing this? What do you say about that?

In 1966 the FBI generated four Letter Head Memorandums concerning HEMMING and one FBI message: "Subject: Haitian Revolutionary Activities (Confidential)." [Director, FBI message, 5-25 PM 2-15-66; LHMs MM2-387 3.18.66, 9.29.66, 7.15.66 NR DC, 9.1.66 NR NY]

VIETNAM & AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT: 1967

In early 1967 HEMMING was considered for a position in Vietnam with the Agency for International Development. The FBI conducted a background investigation:

Several Miami acquaintances of applicant variously described him as untrustworthy, lacking in integrity, unreliable, emotionally immature and lacking in character. Confidential informant furnished information regarding trip by applicant to Guatemala during which he drank excessively and spoke of the U.S. Government in a derogatory manner. Informant reported most of applicant's friends in Miami have been soldiers-of-fortune who do not have excellent reputations. Investigation reflected in this report was conducted by S.A. Norman Bliss at Miami Florida, except where otherwise stated. The case was referred by the Civil Service Commission under provisions of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 as amended.

MM T-1 said that in the past few years HEMMING had briefly held a number of jobs and his financial condition has been getting very bad. His creditors were numerous and became so persistent that on July 4, 1967 he surreptitiously took his family and left Miami with the expressed intention of returning to live at his mother's home in California. For some days before leaving he did not bring his 1967 Dodge Polara car home to part it, as the finance company was trying to repossess it. In addition he owes Sears Store and numerous other people.

MM T-1 [Howard K. Davis] advised that Robert K. Brown, a writer, has recently been living in Miami at 1925 S.W. 4th Street and is well acquainted with HEMMING. Brown has heard that HEMMING, after leaving Miami, traveled to New Orleans and got in touch with Dick Whatley and Roy Hargraves. The three of them reportedly got in touch with Jim Garrison, and were utilized by him in some way in regard to the Kennedy assassination investigation.

According to MM T-1 the applicant is a highly unreliable man who may or may not carry out something which he starts to work on. He has no reason to doubt the loyalty of the applicant and believes that his derogatory remarks regarding the United States while Guatemala were under the influence of alcohol, and because of his great urge to be the center of attention.

MM T-1 stated that the associates of HEMMING in Miami have not for the most part been persons of excellent character. Many of them have been soldiers of fortune and adventurers of the same type as HEMMING. HEMMING has not been an immoral person as far as his relations with women. His wife, whom he got pregnant several months before he married her, seems to be a decent sort of girl, and is apparently loyal to the applicant, he said.

AT KEY WEST, FLORIDA

Special Agent in Charge CESAR DIOSDADO, U.S. Customs Agency, advised SA RALPH L. JENSEN on August 11, 1967, that he was in charge of an investigation concerning GERALD PATRICK HEMMING, JR. during the above period while HEMMING was training a group of Cuban refugees, at No Name Key for an eventual assault on Cuba. He stated that during that period, HEMMING spent considerable period of time on No Name Key, an isolated island which would only be reached by boat and which was uninhabited except for HEMMING and the trainees. HEMMING made occasional trips to Big Pine Key, the nearest inhabited island for supplies but maintained no residence on Big Pine Key.

REFERENCE:

On August 18, 1967, Major NORMAN J. GRAY, Florida National Guard Armory, 2728 NW 7th Avenue, reported that he has known the applicant for three years. Major GRAY was the Commander of the National Guard Unit in this area while the applicant was a member for several years. He described the applicant as a very intelligent young man who has a considerable background of information concerning military equipment and tactics. However, Major GRAY expressed the opinion that the applicant is just beginning to grow out of his boyhood and wake up to the fact that he will have to support his wife and children and will have to give up his soldier of fortune type of life in order to do it. He stated that the applicant makes an excellent physical appearance, speaks with a high degree of fluency and impresses people very greatly when he meets them, however, he tells highly imaginative and fanciful stories about his background and seldom carries out his responsibilities and assignments. He was dropped from the National Guard because he missed too many drills and was considered to be inactive. Major GRAY stated that he has heard that the applicant was to go with the U.S. Government in a position overseas in Viet Nam. He stated that he could see that under certain conditions, and when completely under close supervision of others, the applicant could do a creditable job. However, he qualified his recommendation of the applicant by pointing out that he would want to see him hired by the U.S. Government only if it is found that he has matured greatly in the past years.

MM T-1 advised that the type of activities described above are typical of HEMMING and reflect his highly unpredictable, undependable, and unstable character. He recalled an event in which HEMMING, a member of the Florida National Guard in Miami, received three anti-Tank rockets from a non-commissioned officer named ST DAVIS. HEMMING proceeded to dispose of these items claiming to his friends that he sold them to some Haitian revolutionaries. He told DAVIS a fictitious and highly imaginative story about what happened to the rockets. Shortly thereafter, HEMMING separated from the National Guard, but MM T-1 did not know if his separation was connected with the loss of the rockets or not.

On November 7, 1967, the FBI checked its OSWALD file and found three documents that mentioned HEMMING. [FBI 105-82555-6551, 5016, 5242] HEMMING told this researcher:

I was going to be a State Department Foreign Service Reserve Officer attached to the Public Safety Division of AID in Vietnam. What the fuck you think I was going to Vietnam for? I'm a shooter. I was hired despite the FBI. I'm going there to die. But people had plans, and they didn't work out, and they have tragic consequences.

HEMMING AND GARRISON: JULY 1967

It was at this time that New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison began to look at HEMMING as a suspect in the Kennedy assassination. HEMMING told this researcher:

I had to resign because of the Garrison investigation. I wanted to know who the fuck set it up? If it was a KGB damage control operation, I wouldn't have had to resign from the State Department. Garrison starts talking about Loran Hall, Robert K. Brown and a lot of people linked to me. He was gonna haul my ass back from Vietnam.

The New Orleans District Attorney's office stated:

On Friday, July 7, 1967, GERRY PATRICK HEMMING came without warning into the DA's office and offered to help us in our investigation. He was interviewed in Jim Garrison's office. ROY HARGRAVES accompanied GERRY PATRICK, but, on PATRICK'S orders HARGRAVES remained sitting outside in the lobby during this visit.

GERRY PATRICK, who is approximately 6 feet 7 inches tall, was dressed in khaki fatigues and advised he had decided to visit this office because he was en route from Florida to California, where he has now relocated, and it was convenient for him to visit us.

PATRICK primarily discussed the involvement of Hall, Howard and Seymour during this interview. He explained that he was in Miami at the time of the assassination, and as soon as he heard that Kenney had been shot in Dallas, he telephoned Lester Logue to find out if Hall was in town. PATRICK said he did this because he believed at the time that Hall very well could have assassinated the President. PATRICK said that he still does not reject the possibility that Hall was involved. PATRICK identified Lester Logue as the person who bailed out Hall and Seymour in October 1963, when they were arrested for possessing narcotics.

PATRICK said that the people who went to see Mrs. Odio were Hall, Howard and Seymour, however, he added they were accompanied by a fourth man, Enrique Molina Rivera, whom he identified as a Castro agent, thereby suggesting that the plot to assassinate Kennedy might have had Castro origins.

On Saturday, July 8, 1967, PATRICK returned to the office with ROY HARGRAVES. We went out to lunch with them and PATRICK discussed the fact that he was presently attempting to get a job with the State Department in some advisory or supervisory capacity.

PATRICK indicated to me that he had in the past worked for Life Magazine, and had had an office in the Time-Life Building. When I mentioned this to Dick Billings he said that the extent of PATRICK'S involvement was that he sent letters to the White House on Life stationary, without authority to do so. Billings added that PATRICK was more of a talker than a doer. He said that HARGRAVES has been described to him as a 'bomber.' i.e. HARGRAVES engaged in such activities as knocking on doors and throwing a hand grenade inside when the door was opened.

In May 1968 HEMMING told an investigator for Jim Garrison that he had met Guy Banister, Sergio Arcacha Smith, BRINGUIER and Edward Butler. [Burton to Garrison 5.8.68] In 1994 HEMMING stated: "I first met Ed Butler in 1978 at The Miami Herald building. He tried to convince me he worked with Tony Cuesta." HEMMING was not hired by Garrison because: "There is reason to believe that he is still working for the CIA." New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison was quoted by The New York Times as having said: "Loran Hall of California had inside knowledge of the assassination the day it happened. He said government officials had not called Mr. Hall before the Warren Commission." [NYT 12.27.67] HEMMING told this researcher:

I was threatened with phony exposure by Garrison. Who came forward of any consequence? I'm the only real motherfucker Garrison talked to. Oliver Stone had me on the payroll and he was still paying attention to Garrison? He was living in fantasy land. He wouldn't know the fuckin' truth if it was right in front of him.

LAWRENCE J. LA BORDE AND GARRISON

Lawrence J. La Borde visited Alberto Fernandez in Miami in April 1967 and lived on board the Tejana III. Lawrence J. La Borde then contacted the New Orleans Domestic Contacts Division office:

May 11, 1967

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: LA BORDE, Lawrence J. Born August 27, 1909

1. Dick Hanna, Western Hemisphere/Security, advised that Western Hemisphere had just received a call from Domestic Contacts Division. Subject, who was apparently used during the Cuban operation, had called Domestic Contacts Division stating that he had just received a subpoena from Garrison. He asked if he should leave the country or what?

2. Dick Hanna advised that Donovan Pratt, Ray Rocca's deputy, has been informed as has Nancy Gratz, WH/CI (RL 9008). He asked that we pull up Subject's file and advised WH and CI what were have on the man. Sayle

A review of La Borde's file in the Office of Security, on March 17, 1961, received a verbal request for a PCSA/CSA for Subject' utilization as a maritime asset for Project JMATE. His occupation was described as Port Captain, and he was indicated for having served eight years on the vessel SS Tejana. A PCSA was granted on March 24, 1961, for 'contact assessment only.' On May 29, 1961, the Office of Security notified WH Division that biographic data provided on Subject was inadequate for further processing. WH was being advised the case was being placed in "pending, deferred status" until such time as additional data was furnished OS. No additional data was forthcoming, and a year later WH Division advised OS that the PCSA and pending CSA actions may be canceled since it had no further interest in Subject.

Mr. Donovan Pratt, CI/R&A, who reviewed the 201 file on the Subject, had advised that Subject was never recruited or paid directly by the Agency, but did serve as an engineer and captain on a ship used in the Cuban operation. (The owner of the ship was recruited and paid for its use). Subject, did, however, become privy to a great deal of information about the operations, none of which would probably be compromising at this late date. Pratt advised that the Subject is a "swindler, crook, drunken bum..." who is known to have been the source of anti-CIA articles in the press. He also allegedly has impersonated himself in the past as having CIA backing (a boat sale). Pratt feels this was a provocation by Garrison [to entrap the CIA into obstructing justice]. (DCS in New Orleans has no secure commo link to the Hdqrs. and Subject's contact would have to be called up to Hqs. -- Pratt assuming Garrison has DCS phone tapped.) CI plans to discuss the matter further with DCS)

HEMMING AND THE DEATH OF LAWRENCE J. LA BORDE

HEMMING told this researcher:

La Borde shows up and I can't even remember what his fucking cover story was. I thought he was dead. This is a safe house. Like we ain't advertising where we're living. He shows up in 1978 when we're in the smuggling business, hearing all kinds of stories from people that he knows, so evidently he's been inside doing that type of work on Black Tuna, Banco, Grouper One and Grouper Two, Swordfish. This fucker shows up and he knows a lot of the principals. So I figure he's still on the company payroll. They're pissed off because we're going after company people. The guy that ran the intelligence for the Bay of Pigs [Carlos De Torres] was one of the top smugglers. The fuckers threw down on me with silenced MAC-10 for about four hours. He had a condo with a fucking drain in the floor. These are bad assed motherfuckers, they're all top CIA people, and they're all fucking smugglers. We went after their Colombian assets. La Borde scuttled a Canadian Corvette in Key West in 1978 because he wasn't paid for smuggling. I went over my Freedom of Information Act stuff with him 1979. He ran afoul of smugglers that year, and ended up floating in a bay in Key West.

HEMMING termed FBI Lawrence J. La Borde "a snitch." HEMMING told this researcher:

Lawrence J. La Borde showed up in 1962. A safehouse was set up, and who ends up knocking on the door like a Loran Hall, Larry La Borde, the engineer, a nobody, a grease monkey. And he's got plans. He's gonna take out this ship on pier three that's hauling stuff to Cuba. All these little ploys that people have tried to set us up on - bombings, kidnappings and shit - over the months. Robberies, all kinds of criminal activities that they're trying to get people involved in so they can bust their ass... La Borde did what he was told to do, set us up.

HEMMING and his crew the smugglers that Lawrence J. La Borde ran afoul of.

MICHAEL W. LA BORDE AND GARRISON

In June 1967 Michael W. La Borde (born November 29, 1942), the son of Lawrence J. La Borde, went to New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's office and spoke with investigators. The FBI obtained this information: "Michael La Borde mentioned the publicized photograph which Garrison contends shows people standing behind a fence on the grassy knoll and Michael La Borde told investigators that possibly PATRICK and ROY might be connected with the people on that knoll." On July 12, 1967, Michael La Borde telephoned the FBI office and stated that Jim Garrison was "getting pretty close to uncovering the activities of the Cuban Group that La Borde's father was a member... La Borde stated his only interest in the matter is to keep Garrison away from his father. He stated his father is a true American and will be until he dies. La Borde stated: 'You have to stop Garrison before he harms the country.'" [NARA FBI 124-10251-10306] On July 13, 1967, Michael W. La Borde appeared in the New Orleans FBI office. Michael W. La Borde stated:

La Borde's father, Lawrence Joseph La Borde, had formerly worked with the CIA and worked with Cuban organizations against Fidel Castro. One JERRY PATRICK and one ROY (LNU) used to work with CIA with the Cuban organizations with Lawrence J. La Borde in the Miami Florida, area; but PATRICK and ROY duped Cubans out of money and were dismissed by CIA.

Approximately three weeks ago, Michael La Borde went to District Attorney Jim Garrison's office in New Orleans and spoke with investigators Lynn (LNU) and Louie Ives. La Borde mentioned the publicized photograph which Garrison contends shows people standing behind a fence on the grassy knoll overlooking the sight of the assassination of President Kennedy, and La Borde told investigators that possibly PATRICK and ROY might be connected to the people on the knoll. La Borde suggested to the investigators that someone be sent to Miami, where he thought PATRICK and ROY to be, and talk with them to see if they might be able to furnish any information about the assassination of President Kennedy...

On Saturday, July 8, 1967, JERRY PATRICK and ROY walked into District Attorney Garrison's office. They were dressed in Army fatigues, and they stated they were now living in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. According to investigator Ives, PATRICK and ROY are allegedly working for some magazine and had come to New Orleans for information about the assassination probe by Garrison for the magazine. Ives told La Borde that PATRICK and ROY wanted to know if Garrison has any witnesses who claim they saw someone in a building opposite the Texas School Book Depository shooting at the President. Ives showed photographs of PATRICK and ROY and asked La Borde to identify them, which he did. La Borde stated the photographs show PATRICK and ROY outside the District Attorney's Office with investigators from the District Attorney's Office and La Borde believes the photographs were taken without the knowledge of PATRICK and ROY. [NARA FBI 124-10046-10312]

On July 18, 1967, the CIA cited this New Orleans FBI report. A CIA document stated that "ROY may be identical to LeRoy Collins an associate of HEMMING. He may also - though the possibility is more remote -- be identical with one I. A. Roy, or his son, I. A. Roy Jr., both of whom were members of a group that bought a schooner from Lawrence J. La Borde." [Unmarked CIA doc.] The FBI prepared a Letter Head Memorandum dated July 18, 1967, on the visit, with background reports on the people mentioned in it. Michael La Borde had been the Subject of an investigation involving Interstate Transportation of a Stolen Motor Vehicle. [FBI 62-109060-5583] La Borde admitted riding in the automobile with Charles Rennick Knotts, but denied any knowledge that the car was stolen. HEMMING 1994:

It was not ROY HARGRAVES [behind the fence on the knoll]. The kid was pissed off with his dad at the time. He was a pudjoe, and looked nothing like his father. He used to hang around to hear war stories.

The CIA generated several documents on HEMMING around this time.

ROBERT K. BROWN, RALPH SLAFTER AND GARRISON: JULY 1967

William Broe, Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division of the CIA, prepared a paper, "Interlocking Relationships between Robert K. Brown, Ralph E. Slafter and Garrison," in which he named HEMMING, Edwin Anderson Collins, Lawrence J. La Borde and Dennis Harber as links between Robert K. Brown, who had been investigating JMWAVE activities in August 1967, and New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison. William Broe believed HEMMING and Robert K. Brown were cooperating with Jim Garrison in an effort to entrap and discredit the CIA.

DENNIS HARBER

William Seymour, Dennis Harber, Isadoro Borja, and BERNARDO De TORRES

A CIA cable from Merida, Mexico dated July 8, 1967, to CIA Headquarters, stated the Mexico CIA station reported that Robert K. Brown visited Dennis Harber in prison. Robert K. Brown first met Dennis Harber in 1962, when Dennis Harber was a language instructor at a Cuban refugee camp. In 1963 Dennis Harber attempted to place a radio-activated bomb on a Yugoslavian ship carrying phosphates between Mexico and Cuba while it was in a Mexican harbor; he was captured and imprisoned by Mexican authorities. Dennis Harber knew Edward Anderson Collins. Robert K. Brown asked Dennis Harber if he knew Loran Eugene Hall and HARGRAVES. He showed Dennis Harber a picture of David Ferrie. Robert K. Brown commented, "I don't recollect that I ever showed a picture of Ferrie to Dennis Harber. That name never surfaced. Harber was a very bizarre guy, very bright. He was alcoholic and gay, when into his booze. But in getting back to this thing of me showing him a picture of Ferrie, that's somebody smoking bad dope." [FBI AT-105-3193, 12.4.63, 62-109060-1521; CIA 1100-976; McCracken/Swilley Miami P.D. Memo 10.15.67] On July 17, 1967, the FBI in New Orleans ran a file check on HEMMING. [FBI 89-33-(?)]

HEMMING AND ROBERT K. BROWN: SEPTEMBER 1967

In September 1967 HEMMING and Robert K. Brown stored an arms cache in a Miami rooming house. [HEMMING HSCA file - seq. docs.] Robert K. Brown commented, "No way, no way. That's wrong." The CIA reported:

Local police have genuine interest in case due to ascertained presence of arms, possibly automatic weapons, in rooming house. Have been holding off planned raid, started surveillance, and pursued investigation at Station's recommendation. It was their initiative to put undercover man with Robert K. Brown (Police requested and were given financial assistance for this from Station.) Should Station withdraw, believe police will proceed to raid rooming house. Would appreciate Hqs. guidance as to whether station should take hands off posture, or continue seeking information on what Robert K. Brown and Company are up to...Robert K. Brown had been talking with HEMMING group i.e. Martin Casey, Joe Gorman and Joe (?) Collins. [CIA 201-189473 10.13.67]

On September 15, 1967, Sgt. E.W. McCracken of the Intelligence Unit of the Miami Police Department sent an Inter-Office Memorandum to Lieut. H. Swilley of the Intelligence Unit:

On August 31, 1967, information was received from a reliable and confidential informant that a revolutionary group, residing at 1925 S.W. 4th Street, had in their possession a warehouse loaded with arms, ammunition and C-4 explosives. An immediate surveillance of the aforementioned location was established by this office and the following was learned. By keeping these persons under surveillance and through license tag checks the following names were developed: Martin Francis Casey, Joseph Cavendish Garman, Ralph Elmer Slafter, James Arthur Lewis, Ralph Grant Edens, Alfredo Dominquez, Harry G. Worley, Robert Kenneth Brown. Person who visited the above Subjects: Peter Ojozy and Donald Willis 66 Comet HW 661 (1967 Illinois).

On October 12, 1967, S.A. James D. Hayes generated a memorandum titled "CIA Operations - Miami" that was highly deleted and contained the name of Robert K. Brown and identifying data along with several FBI file numbers. The rest of the document was labeled: "Non-Assassination Related." [NARA 124-10265-10127] In 1967 the CIA ran a "Covert Special Inquiry" to determine if Robert K. Brown was connected with Ramparts magazine. The CIA: "A dispatch from Chief of Station/JMWAVE dated July 26, 1968, concerned the agitation caused by Robert K. Brown during recent inquiries into JMOCEAN. Precautions were taken to protect the status of present and former JMWAVE members as a result." In 1968 Robert K. Brown formed Panther Publications, which specialized in do-it-yourself bomb manuals and books on partisan warfare. He began publishing Soldier-of-Fortune magazine in 1974.

HEMMING EARLY 1968

On January 11, 1968, the FBI in New Orleans ran a file check on HEMMING. [FBI-89-69-3742] On February 21, 1968, the FBI in Los Angeles generated a document about HEMMING.

HARGRAVES NOVEMBER 1968

Los Angeles Field Office
November 19, 1968
MEMORANDUM FOR: Headquarters
SUBJECT: Project Resistance I SD/1

1. Attached is a report regarding ROY EMORY HARGRAVES, 882 Via Wanda, Long Beach who was arrested for the October 22, 1968, bombing of the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) Peace Center, 2628 East Anaheim, Long Beach. HARGRAVES, an unemployed ironworker, married to Carol L. was born in Missouri on February 14, 1940. His Social Security number is 527-48-2730.
2. LI-19 stated that HARGRAVES, who admitted an arrest for gun smuggling in Miami in 1965, claimed he worked for the CIA in Florida.
3. LI-19 said that HARGRAVES was interrogated by representatives of the FBI while under arrest by the Long Beach Police Department. LI-19 had no information regarding the results of the interrogation.
4. HARGRAVES is presently in jail completing his sentence resulting from misdemeanor traffic convictions.

William P. Curtin, Special Agent in Charge

The Long Beach Police Department advised the FBI that HARGRAVES had been arrested for the bombing and would be formally charged with the bombing on October 23, 1968. The disposition of this charge and arrest was unknown to the FBI.

ROY HARGRAVES, MK: CHOAS AND THE BLACK PANTHERS: 1968

OPERATION CHAOS

In 1968 HEMMING collaborated with the CIA in Los Angeles in running operations against the Black Panthers. HEMMING was never carried on the books of the CIA, but his operative, ROY EMORY HARGRAVES was. A CIA Index Card regarding HARGRAVES read: "PROJECT SEAL." [CIA FOIA 42922] Another card read: "MHCHAOS / Revolutionary Guerrilla Training in Mexico." MHCHAOS was a CIA Operation of the Chief, Counter-Intelligence Staff, and the Office of Security in which New Left radicals were followed when they went overseas, in order to determine if they made contact with the Soviets, Communist Chinese or Cubans. It was started in 1967. In 1968 CIA Stations overseas began having certain American citizens who traveled abroad monitored by friendly foreign intelligence services. In mid-1969 the CIA began sending its own CHAOS agents abroad. The Rockefeller Commission reported that Operation Chaos produced files on American citizens and many reports to the FBI. What the Rockefeller Report did not mention was that several New Left figures who traveled abroad were the subject of violent attacks by the assets or CHAOS agents who were surveilling them. Abbie Hoffman, a leader of the Youth International Party, was beaten by three men when he visited Paris while OPERATION CHAOS was in effect. Songwriter and singer Phil Ochs throat was slit when he visited Algeria during this period. Richard Ober, former Chief of Station in New Delhi, India, was transferred to CIA Headquarters where he became Chief of Counter-Intelligence (Special Operations) where he along with the Office of Security ran OPERATION CHAOS. Ober's boss was JAMES ANGLETON. Charles Colson told Senator Lowell Weicker that on several occasions Richard Ober received packages from HUNT which he then passed on to Richard Helms. "Colson indicated he did not know the contents of the packages." [USDC SDF 75-640-CR-Peter Fay Defendant's Exhibit 4 Werbell] In 1969 and 1970 the CIA was asked by the White House to determine whether foreign governments were supplying undercover agents and funds to the Black Panther Party. [NYT 12.22.74] A CIA document regarding MHCHAOS read: "The dissention among American black political extremists and hijackers abroad i.e. the break up of the (deleted) Black Panther Faction (deleted) and other similar fractionalizations, to a great part the result of an inability of the main protagonists to capitalize on the status as 'international revolutionaries' have reduced these activities to a shadow of former dimensions." [CIA MHCHAOS #20 8.20.73 by CI] ANGLETON told Seymour Hersch that he had obtained information from Communist sources about alleged demolition training of black militants by the North Koreans. ANGLETON believed the anti-Vietnam war movement in the United States was controlled by foreign powers. Jerry G. Brown believed the same. Ron Kessler related:

Heaping ridicule on the efforts of the Church Committee and the presidentially appointed Rockefeller Commission that investigated the abuses, Jerry G. Brown said the CIA'S Operation Chaos - the effort to investigate domestic dissidents - was seen by our 'unsophisticated detractors' as 'a purposeful attempt by the Agency and the NIXON Administration to subvert the domestic political process by spying on American citizens.' This was not the case at all, Brown claimed. In fact, he said, Operation Chaos represented an effort to address 'serious National Security questions. Those who would destroy us and our efforts were not Soviets and our other worldwide enemies, but our own elected legislative representatives. The tragedy of the congressional and Rockefeller Commission inquiries into Operation Chaos was that none of the staff investigators bothered to find out how the operation began,' Brown said. If they had, they would have found out that it began with what Brown called a serious problem - the leak in 1967 to Ramparts magazine of the fact that the CIA was secretly funding the National Student Association. According to Brown, this funding was essential so that the National Student Association could fight Soviet efforts to control international youth organizations. The tip to Ramparts, he said, was 'one of the most flagrant leaks of classified information ever known to the Agency.' And who leaked the information? According to Brown it was the KGB, which obtained the information directly from the CIA and gave it 'through individuals peripherally connected with the magazine' to Ramparts. 'The exposure of the Agency's involvement with the National Student Association by Ramparts was totally inspired by the KGB, Brown said.

Brown claimed the CIA learned this information from a Soviet defector. Cord Meyer, the man in charge of the National Student Association's funding, stated that Michael Wood, an employee of the National Student Association, gave the information to Ramparts. [Kessler, Inside the CIA page 192] HEMMING said HARGRAVES worked on construction jobs with Richard Whatley in Baton Rouge in 1967. HEMMING: "I got to Baton Rouge, talked to everybody there, met with HARGRAVES and went to see Garrison. After two weeks with Garrison HARGRAVES decided to turn over his construction company to Richard Whatley, Louis Van Hook and take off with me to California." In Los Angeles HARGRAVES got a job as a bodyguard for Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver.

SUBJECT: REPORTED GUERRILLA TRAINING SCHOOL IN MEXICO

105-7255 (December 27, 1968).

On October 29, 1968, a confidential source who has furnished reliable information in the past and who has been active in Cuban revolutionary matters for the past ten years advised as follows:

GERALD PATRICK HEMMING is an American soldier-of-fortune and adventurer who currently resides in Los Angeles, California, and has been involved in Cuban Revolutionary Activities for the past six years. The source learned from HEMMING that ROY HARGRAVES, another American adventurer currently living in Los Angeles California was formerly active in Cuban revolutionary matters in Miami. As of October 29, 1968, HARGRAVES was in jail in Los Angeles, charged with dynamiting right-wing organizations and also the headquarters of the Black Panther Party in the Los Angeles area. HEMMING reportedly learned from HARGRAVES that he works for Jose Antonio Duarte Cropesa, a Cuban exile living in Los Angeles who is associated with black militant organizations and extreme right wing groups. Duarte apparently wants racial warfare between these groups and is promoting unrest.

HEMMING told the source he was informed by HARGRAVES that there were guerilla warfare camps in Mexico and that such groups as the Panthers and SDS send members to Mexico to receive guerilla warfare training. HARGRAVES claimed that Duarte said that he sent an American friend to Mexico to inspect these guerilla warfare camps and to report back to him.

The source described HEMMING and HARGRAVES as extremists, activists, mercenaries, opportunists and immoral. However, they have a thorough knowledge of Cuban Revolutionary Activities, have participated in many proposed raids and invasions, are knowledgeable concerning Cuban matters and are acquainted with the Cuban exile community in the United States. The source stated that HEMMING, however, while in a position to furnish information, frequently alters, distorts and changes the information to suit his fancy.

The Black Panthers are a militant extremist Negro group based in California, but with a nation-wide membership. The Students for a Democratic Society is an anarchistically inclined group of the New Left. Pertinent portions of the foregoing information have been furnished to the Mexican Federal Security Police, Ministry of Government and Attorney General's Office.

[MKCHAOS - Revolutionary Guerrilla Training in Mexico 1.10.69]

HEMMING told this researcher:

I'm HARGRAVES' case officer. He ain't telling me shit. HARGRAVES blew a nigger right through a plate glass window - put him in the hospital for nine months! He's Cleaver's bodyguard for some operations. When he blew the Panther through the window, it was approved by Cleaver. Cleaver was on the CIA pay roll... Project Long Beach, fucking M-60's, AK-47s all over the fucking place. They were going to go and hit the downtown Panther Headquarters. I told 'em, 'There ain't nothing there. There's four boxes of 50 caliber ammo, but there's tunnels, steel doors, sandbags and bad motherfuckers that walk in there. Four guys walked up to the front and they blew their fuckasses away. Ended up having to bomb them from the fucking roof.

BLACK PANTHER SUPPORT GROUPS & DONALD FREED

HEMMING credited HARGRAVES with having been approached to set up Donald Freed on bogus charges of possession of hand grenades in 1968. Don Freed, who led the Black Panther support committee in Los Angeles, was tried and acquitted of the charges in 1970. HEMMING:

Did you ask Freed if he knew how we were setting him up in L.A.? They approached HARGRAVES to set-up Donald Freed with the grenades. HARGRAVES approached me and I said no. Because right now I'm going to put you into the Panthers, so I don't want you bombing them. So he went into the Panthers and he was Eldridge's boy. Eventually Freed was set up by James Jarrett. But they threw it out. What I'm hinting at here is 'Hey, you guys want to talk about my three years in California, huh, it will make Watergate look sick. You want to know about California, because they don't know what the fuck I was doing in California. Well I got some logs and some memories which tell me what I was doing in California. I was watching those cocksuckers because they tried to set me up on the Dallas thing.

James Jarret he infiltrated Friends of the Black Panther Party on behalf of LAPD. He also busted Shirley Southerland, the mother of Keifer Southerland with Freed. In HEMMING'S Motion for Favorable Evidence he asked for:

All files, documents, and memorandums held by CIA, FBI, U.S. Treasury Department, and other agencies that refer to the defendant's activities within Los Angeles County, California, during calendar years 1967, 1968, 1969, and 1970, inclusive, especially those activities involving terrorist activities, bombings and conspiracies by militant groups specifically the case involving a certain Donald Freed, who was charged with illegal possession of destructive devices, to wit: fragmentation hand grenades.

A CIA document read:

October 20, 1968. At 9:50 a reliable source advised [CIA] that Subject ROY EMORY HARGRAVES approached him to 'blow up a left-wing' office in Long Beach. The source was shown explosives, but declined to accompany Subject. He was not told what was to be blown up, or when. He indicated that Subject resided at (deleted). This information was passed on to Long Beach Police officers with a list of potential targets. The arresting officers (deleted) were alerted to watch Subjects residence. October 22, 1968: (Deleted) The SDS Peace Center, 2628 East Anaheim, Long Beach, was bombed at 3:00 a.m. this date. When Subject returned to his residence, he was arrested on outstanding traffic warrants and was found to also have traffic warrants from El Monte.

Subject was interviewed and admitted the bombing. He indicated that he would take all the 'heat' and not involve anyone else, but would later tell more about his activities. He said that he went alone to the peace center and placed a bomb. He used a cigarette placed inside a paper match book. This was connected to a soda straw that had been filled with match heads and gun powder (#4750 reloading powder) and was connected to a light aluminum detonator. The detonator set off the main charge which was connected with masking tape and consisted of four one quarter pound charges of 'Tem-Type' explosive. He said that he had 'sweat-out' the 'Tem-Type' to weaken the charge and placed it back in an alcove where it would not blow the front glass windows into the street. He left the scene and did not hear it go off; a short while later he drove back by the location and observed the police vehicles and knew the explosion had occurred. Facts were presented to the District Attorney's office, Long Beach, and a written rejection was issued. The facts were then presented to the Long Beach Prosecutor who issued complaint #M87122, charging Malicious Destruction of Property. Subject was taken before Judge Sutherland, Long Beach Municipal Court and pleaded guilty. Probation and sentence was set for November 12, 1968. Subject was remanded to custody in lieu of bail plus the time to be served on the traffic warrants, then to be released to El Monte for the other traffic warrants.

October 24, 1968. Subject was re-interviewed and gave the following information. He is close to Jose Antonio Duarte (ex-Major in Fidel Castro's Army) (Deleted) Major Duarte is trying to get close to the Cuban Power group, but is not trusted by them because of his ex-ties with Castro. Subject denied any connection with Cuban Power [Orlando Bosch's crew] except through Duarte. He said he got the explosives from Duarte and that Duarte was supposed to also give him some Cuban Power stickers to leave at the Students for a Democratic Society bombing scene, but that he never received the stickers. Duarte knew he was going to do the bombing and indicated that this type of action could get him into the Cuban Power group.

Subject admitted that he and Duarte went to a Black Militant house or office in Compton some time back and broke windows. Duarte had a smoke grenade but 'got shook' and could not get the pin pulled and they ran.

Subject hinted that he was also responsible for the bombing of the Free Press in Los Angeles about one or two days prior to the Long Beach S.D.S. bombing, but would not fully admit it. JERRY indicated off the record (and after he had plead guilty as indicated above) that there was a girl and another man with him on the S.D.S. bombing but would not identify them.

Additional Information: Shortly after the Subject was arrested for the traffic warrants, he called (Deleted) the original source of this information and asked him to go to Subjects house and remove a box of 'Christmas decorations." Source knew him to mean explosives. He went to this address and talked to Subject's wife who denied knowing about such a box. It was later determined that Subject's wife had overheard the original arresting officers question Subject about the bombing, and it is assumed that she had already disposed of any explosives.

Subject also called from jail to the Wallace for President, North Long Beach Office. It is unknown who he talked to, however, a short while later he had a visitor in jail named Pam Barsby. She is apparently well-known to the jailors and no visitors pass was recorded. The jailors were questioned and stated that they knew her to be working in the above Wallace office from 1:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. each day. She is believed to be married to a man who owns Cadillac Tracers Inc. 6701 Atlantic, Long Beach. Investigation of this business license shows that the company has not got a current license but did have under the name of James B. Parsby 2126 Berkeley, Los Angeles, (2) Robert Barsby, 133 Rocky Point Road, Palos Verde, and (3) Charles Whittington, address unknown.

After the above visit to jail by Pam, she called the wife of the original source (deleted as of 2010) and told her about the visit to jail. She indicated that she and a 'Jerry' who also worked at Wallace Headquarters and owned a Volkswagon was with the Subject when the S.D.S. bombing took place. It is noted that there were two bombs (Deleted as of 2010) one of which was placed on a red yard stick. It is believed that 'Jerry' set the second bomb. The wife of source said that Pam's true last name is Barsby but that she used the name Barbee while working for Wallace. Pam told her that three of them used the Subject's black Renault on the Long Beach S.D.S. bombing, but that they used her red Corvette to 'blow' the Free Press. She also said that the three of them pulled some type of attack against a Black Militant in Compton. This incident could not be located and may not have been reported, if it did in fact occur.

To date, 'Jerry' has not been identified. Subject admitted having been along with Lloyd E. Pullen on July 28, 1968, (deleted as of 2010) when they broke windows out of the Peace and Freedom Party office, Long Beach, and committed a Battery on Theodore Glaum, however he said Pullen has never taken part in any bombings.

[CIA D01238 1.9.69 NARA 1993.07.20.14:20:50:370280]

HEMMING 1994:

Jerri or Jeri was a female who worked for the George Wallace people. She was built like a brick shithouse, looked like Angie Dickinson, married, but fucked like a pig. I had her riding in my lap in a Volkswagon. She got off on these bombings. Running around with Lloyd Pullen and fucking HARGRAVES blowing up these fucking buildings and shit, but she was working for the company too.

In January 1996 this researcher called HEMMING and asked if HARGRAVES ever called him from jail and asked him to remove some Christmas decorations from his (HARGRAVES) home. HEMMING said, "Yes, he did." When confronted with the significance of this information HEMMING said HARGRAVES called Lloyd Pullen.

LLOYD PULLEN

HEMMING told this researcher:

Lloyd Pullen was very prominent on TV and in the press as one of the guys that, during the Watts riot, organized a group of like militia that protected a lot of properties in Long Beach. This was a case where I got connected with the guy through Joe Pine. Pullen had an incorporated group and their big thing was getting ready for the next one. He would tell people and he would tell Joe Pine, 'Hey you people who have problems with nigger gangs or any of this kind of bullshit you let me know, we'll do something about it.' So he was favorite with the cops...He was on the Joe Pine Show regularly, called all these people niggers and all kinds of shit. So HARGRAVES had a sort of a welfare thing, lived in the projects. He showed the niggers how to organize. He got the community affairs volunteers all agitated cause there were a lot of Latinos there, and all that kind of shit there. One thing led to another and we had TV cameras, we got him before the county commission, got him on KHG-TV-9, Maria Coles program, Bob Dornan's program. HARGRAVES did some benefits for these people because they were being fucked over by these conservative anti-welfare shithheads. So Pullen was shocked that HARGRAVES was doing all these good things for the niggers.

I told HARGRAVES when Pullen confronts you with this try to get as much information so we know who his sources are, how accurate his sources are, because I'm dealing with the LA County Sheriff's Intelligence Bureau and they wanted to know what Long Beach Police Department is doing and what all these other people are doing. So Pullen confronted him and practically told him how he wiped his ass the night before. I mean this is up to date accurate fucking information. So HARGRAVES came back on him and said 'You're dealing with top fucking people. Who is it, Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit?' So Pullen figured, 'Wait a minute, what have we got here?' Then they turned him over to Lt. Hendricks of Long Beach Police Department Intelligence who was the chairman of the LEIU.

Somebody's giving money to Lt. Hendricks of the LIEU and some operational funds are dispersed out to Pullen and a little bit might get to HARGRAVES. But what is he going to use money for other than gasoline, or this or that? He wasn't allowed to have a car. Then somebody might question how you afford a car when you're living in a fucking project. He has to be poor, white trash. That's his best role. Any money he had an explanation...he had a license to steal - he could have gone down and robbed banks and got away with it - but it would have fucked up the operation. It would have brought the Bureau in...And here's HARGRAVES, we're down in Watts and kicking in the front of one of the Panther operations. We got niggers that are shaking down old folks down in Compton and shit, regular gang bullshit. The cops were happier than shit because we're coming in and fucking these people over. And they think they're bad.

According to HEMMING, Pullen was shot by blacks spent a week in the hospital. In a Freedom of Information Act request to the United States Service HEMMING requested: "Reports reflecting my liaison with ROY E. HARGRAVES in Los Angeles California, including:

- a) The presence of HARGRAVES as COPE delegate at a reception for Vice President Hubert Humphrey at the Century Plaza Hotel, Los Angeles.
- b) The activities of HARGRAVES with Lloyd Pullen in Long Beach, California area. At the present time there are rabid revivals of accusations and insinuations, certain writers who allege knowledge by my group in a past tragic event. Those revived accusations and insinuations have caused jeopardy to my person, hence my imperative need to review the fore-mentioned material.

The FBI reported, "HEMMING was also described as a close associate of Lloyd Pullen who is a local leader of an organization called "Staff" which is the front name for the Minutemen. On January 19, 1968 HEMMING visited the parents of Everett Jackson, a pilot captured in Cuba in January 1968. On this occasion ways and means were discussed to affect the release of Jackson which included the possibility of an exchange of prisoners. HEMMING said there were special people in Florida that had contacts in Cuba.

Putting pressure on the Cuban sympathizers and bombings were also mentioned in this discussion. HEMMING made statements on January 1968 that he knew who Jackson was working for and what his mission was in his flight over Cuba. HEMMING also made comments there would be news of bombings in the Florida area in the near future.

HEMMING AND HUBERT HUMPHREY

HEMMING claimed HARGRAVES was present as a COPE delegate at the reception for Vice President Hubert Humphrey. HEMMING told this researcher: "You have to know your target before you penetrate. Humphrey was running for President in 1968. I got HARGRAVES a pass, and he got his picture taken with Humphrey." Prior to this, HEMMING claimed to have met with Hubert Humphrey at the Harbor Square East Condominium, Washington, D.C. HEMMING told this researcher:

That was a casual encounter when I was helping Strom Thurmond move into his new apartment in 1967. I was standing there talkin' to Hubert Humphrey. One agent goes behind my car and checks the Florida National Guard license plates on my 1966 Polaris. Meanwhile, I'm talking to Hubert Humphrey on the sidewalk.

THE KING ASSASSINATION

HEMMING, HARGRAVES APRIL 1968

Hemming and Hargraves framed James Earl Ray for the murder of Martin Luther King. James Earl Ray was born in 1928. The father of James Earl Ray was a criminal. James Earl Ray never graduated from high school, and was ejected from the Army after two years of service. In the early 1950's he began to commit a series of crimes including burglary and forgery. On April 23, 1967, after serving seven years of a 20 year sentence for armed robbery, James Earl Ray escaped from Missouri State Penitentiary by concealing himself in a box that would normally contain bread from the prison bakery.

HEMMING told this researcher:

Ray had no ambition. You know what the ambition factor is? Is there anybody on this planet who can say James Earl Ray ever aspired to anything, or thought of any grandiose schemes, or wanted to be somebody? No. He never wanted to be shit. This is the last guy to do a shooting job. Nothing complicated. Nothing that requires heavy thinking. But it would have been a stretch of the imagination to have Castro agents mad at Martin Luther King, right?

"RAOUL" IN MONTREAL

Circa August 15, 1967, a fugitive named James Earl Ray met a man at the Neptune Tavern in Montreal who called himself "Raoul". Evidence suggested "Raoul" was ROY HARGRAVES, HEMMING's sidekick. "Raoul" said he was a seaman. ROY HARGRAVES had years of experience as a seaman conducting infiltration and exfiltration missions along with raids on Castro's Cuba. Ray claimed they met by chance and they had no mutual friends. Ray said he "sort of let the word get around that he had a little trouble down in the States that he was looking for I.D. and capital, and just might be available for activities that didn't involve too much risk." Would James Earl Ray have leaked the fact the he was a fugitive in a public bar? Bar owners often double as police informants. HEMMING told this researcher:

That's what Ray wants you to believe. This is what keeps people secure, that he's not spilling the beans. There are people that would worry, 'Maybe this son-of-a-bitch really found out more than he's ever admitted before the incident itself? Maybe somebody was loose? Maybe this guy really knows some shit?' He didn't do it, we know that.

Evidence suggested that the brother of James Earl Ray, Jerry Ray, who had come into contact with GERRY HEMMING when J. B. Stoner's National State's Rights Party made contact with INTERPEN in the early 1960's. It was Jerry Ray who told his brother that "Raoul" was "alright," but James did not want to involve his brother in the Martin Luther King assassination, and so he never came forward with this information. HEMMING told this researcher:

A guy like Ray would say, 'Who told you about me?' You got to have a fucking name. It's got to be somebody that's worthless to you that you can go ahead and burn, and the guy doesn't know you, so it's not traceable. That's made plain right off the bat, 'I know you through so and so, but so and so doesn't know me. A friend of mine knows him and I'm not gonna tell you who the fuck he is.' If it isn't done this way, a guy like Ray would say, 'Boy, this guy's a blabber mouth. He's giving me all his fucking contacts, I know more about him than he does about me, which is a bad way to be.'

HEMMING also stated:

Somebody had to produce some sort of bona fides to prove who the fuck he was and he expects Ray to check the arms of that through his own sources of 'Who the hell am I dealing with here?'

RAOUL AKA ROY M. HARGRAVES

James Earl Ray described "Raoul" as a 35-year-old blonde or red-haired Latin, 5'8", 140 pounds. HARGRAVES was born in 1940 and would be 28 in 1968. The rest of Ray's description fits HARGRAVES height and weight. Ray told author William Bradford Huie that "Raoul" was "a Cuban exile." HARGRAVES had trained anti-Batista elements prior to Castro coming to power. James Earl Ray wrote:

In the spring of 1968 I James Earl Ray was working with agents of the Federal Government, including Raoul. They told me I was helping them to supply arms and guns to the Cuban refugees there to overthrow Castro and the communest I cuba. The reason why I'd made trips to Mexico was in regard to helping the agents of the federal government to supply arms to cuban refugees there to overthrow Castro. The Federal Agents led me to believe that I was working in Memphis in April 1968 for the same purpose. I knew I was working with Federal Agents the way they had me passed across the Mexican and Canadian borders is only one thing that proves they were federal agents. At a later time, if necessary, I will give more extensive proof about the federal agents with whom I was involved. It is a known fact that Agents of federal government and, the Mexican Police knew about my trips to Mexico and protected me there. I knew nothing about King being in Memphis until after King had been killed. I could not argue with the federal agents I worked for becous they would have put me back in the Missouri State Prison at Jefferson City if I failed to take orders from them. I know that the federal agents merly used me as the fall guy when they killed King. I now realize that they had no interest in overthrowing Castro and their whole purpose was to use me to cover up their own crime. Two federal agencies are guilty and I am fully innocent. [FBI 44-38961-5811 Sec. 81]

JULY 18, 1967 TO AUGUST 24, 1967

James Earl Ray had at eight meetings with "Raoul" over the next three weeks. HEMMING told this researcher: "Ray was involved in a homicide with Raoul." The FBI found that Ray was in possession of "Qc351 Photocopies of 4-page hw letter dated at Montreal, Que., signed "Code letter 'G.'" According to James Earl Ray, at the last meeting, "Raoul" told him to go to Windsor, Canada, on August 21, 1967 where he would give him some packages to smuggle into the United States. After this, James Earl Ray was paid and told to drive to Birmingham, Alabama, and keep out of sight until "Raoul" arrived. James Earl Ray arrived there August 25, 1967. James Earl Ray opened a safe deposit box at the Birmingham Trust National Bank on August 28, 1967. "Raoul" told James Earl Ray he spent a lot of time in New Orleans and gave him several telephone numbers there. Ray left Birmingham on August 30, 1967. On September 1, 1967, he received a letter from "Raoul" regarding their next meeting. When they met, "Raoul" gave James Earl Ray $2000 and told him to purchase a late model Mustang. James Earl Ray wrote:

I suppose I became involved in some sort of plot to kill King when I first took those packages into the United States from Canada. I would think it had all been decided before the car was bought in Birmingham as no one would have given me three grand just to haul narcotics across the border.
[Look 11.26.68]

HEMMING told this researcher:

You give them a couple of test runs. It's gonna be something that brings back a couple of bucks and pays for your expenses in recruiting these people. Now he's gonna be hesitant to admit this because it could be fingerprints back to other crimes that have no statute of limitations, namely homicide.

OCTOBER 7, 1967 TO OCTOBER 10, 1967: MEXICO

James Earl Ray said that his next assignment (mid-October 1967), was to order several hundred dollars worth of photographic equipment then drive down to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, where he was to meet "Raoul". The HSCA stated that Ray planned to make pornographic movies in Mexico using a remote controlled camera. Ray met "Raoul" at a hotel there, and then followed him across the border, into Laredo, Texas. "Raoul" took a cab and they met in Laredo, where "Raoul" gave him a spare tire which James Earl Ray was supposed to smuggle into Mexico. "Raoul" rode with Ray as they again crossed the border into Mexico. James Earl Ray:

At Mexican customs he got out and waited beside the building. Following his instructions, I asked the customs men for a Tourist Card, telling them I was going to the interior of Mexico, not just to Nuevo Laredo. (No tourist card is needed to visit the border towns in Mexico; only if you are going into the interior.) When the Customs men started to search the car, I gave them $3 as Raoul had told me to do, and they stopped the search and put a mark on everything.

"Raoul" rejoined James Earl Ray in Mexico, transferred the tire to the automobile from which it originally came. James Earl Ray drove the car through a checkpoint in the interior of Mexico. He received $2000 for this trip. HEMMING told this researcher:

Raoul was a cut out. He's a guy you can trust with money, he's a guy a you can trust with the location of an arms cache or a seller of select type weapons. He's a guy that gets a very simple job done and does what he's told to do and not ask questions or even gives a shit why it's being done.

LOS ANGELES: RITA AND CHARLES STEIN

In November 1967 James Earl Ray drove to Los Angeles, where he moved into a cheap hotel. His associates in Los Angeles included petty criminal Rita Stein, whose husband had overdosed on morphine [FBI LA-44-1574]. The cousin of Rita Stein, Myrial Tomaso, had been arrested on seven felony charges involving narcotics and forgery. [FBI 44-382861-5553] New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison described Rita Stein's brother, Charles Stein [born, May 11, 1929], as a "good boy who keeps bad company." Charles Stein was married to Mickie Medina, the "Queen of Vice of New Orleans" from 1962 to 1963. He had one arrest linked to prostitution. [FBI 157-10672-654] Myrial Tomaso convinced James Earl Ray to take her cousin, Charles Stein, and two children, with him to New Orleans. James Earl Ray agreed to drive Charles Stein and the kids to New Orleans, but insisted that Myrial Tomaso and Charles Stein first register in the Independent party of George C. Wallace. On December 13, 1967, Ray sent a letter to the Birmingham Trust National Bank closing his safe deposit box there. Ray, Stein, and the two children left Los Angeles circa December 14, 1967. They arrived in New Orleans on December 15, 1967.

CHARLES STEIN: RAY MENTIONED RAOUL

The HSCA reported: "Charles Stein recalled that James Earl Ray was definitely going to New Orleans for reasons of his own and that he was not making the trip merely to accommodate Rita..." The FBI claimed that Charles Stein told the Bureau that he never heard James Earl Ray mention anyone named "Raoul," however, Charles Stein also stated, several times during an FBI interview, that "he recalled James Earl Ray mentioning the name 'Raoul.'" Charles Stein was confronted, during this initial interview with the HSCA, with an FBI interview which reflected his statement that the person he [James Earl Ray] was going to see had an Italian-sounding name - a well known name in New Orleans. Stein agreed that Raoul was not Italian-sounding, and stated that perhaps he was dodging the FBI's questions." [HSCA MLK Vol, 13 p273] During his later testimony before the HSCA, Charles Stein was asked if James Earl Ray had mentioned the name "Raoul" prior to the Martin Luther King assassination. He stated: "I think that he did."

THE TELEPHONE CALL TO NEW ORLEANS DURING THE TRIP

Charles Stein thought that James Earl Ray told him that he called New Orleans, in advance, to let them know when he would arrive. This call was made after James Earl Ray pulled off the road outside of Houston, Texas.

He stated that in the evening of December 16, 1967, Ray made a telephone call from a public coin box phone. Ray talked for quite some time. Stein was of the opinion this call was made somewhere in the vicinity of Houston, Texas. He also stated it was dark at the time as he can recall the light in the phone booth shining down on Ray while he made the call. Stein advised he did not recall the general surroundings of the area in which the phone booth was located; or whether it was in a gas station, shopping center or standing by itself. He did think, however, if he saw the phone booth again he would probably recall it. Stein was questioned further regarding this phone call and in response to questions, advised this phone call was the only one he actually observed being made by Ray. However, at several other stops they made, Ray was out of his sight for short periods of time and during those times Ray could have made other phone calls. Stein advised that when Ray returned to the car after making the phone call he appeared to be tense and somewhat deep in thought. This condition lasted about 20 minutes or a half hour. When asked if he recalled traveling through Houston, Texas, Stein stated he did not recall passing through Houston, Texas, but commented that he was sleeping off and on during this time. [FBI LA 44-1547]

The FBI re-interviewed Stein:

He can recollect one telephone call made by James Earl Ray while they were en route to New Orleans. Stein advised that the call was made from a telephone booth located near Houston, Texas, west of Houston. He advised that at approximately 9:00 p.m. on December 16, 1967, Ray was driving and turned off the freeway onto an access road paralleling the freeway heading toward Houston. He stated Ray stopped at a phone booth by a service station. He does not recollect the particular gas sold at this station. He advised that a liquor store was next to the service station, but does not recollect on what side...Stein advised that at the time of the call he bought a cup of coffee in the service station and some candy or gum in the liquor store. Stein advised that the above information is accurate. He advised that he did not intentionally withhold this information upon prior interviews, and only recently remembered the details of the phone call. [FBI LA 44-1574 4.24.68]

Another FBI document stated: "Stein has indicated that en route from somewhere in Texas Ray made one or two long distance telephone calls from coin phones and also indicated he was going to contact either architectural or contracting firm." The FBI contacted numerous construction firms in Louisiana but none of them had ever heard of Ray or any of his name variants. Note: HEMMING said HARGRAVES worked on construction jobs with Richard Whatley in Baton Rouge in 1967.

THE FBI INVESTIGATION

The FBI investigated James Earl Ray's calls to "Raoul" by checking the toll records of all the telephone booths James Earl Ray might have used while traveling from Los Angeles to New Orleans. It concluded: "An exhaustive search of countless telephone records, numbers and subscribers produced nothing." [FBI 44-8861-2014] Sometimes it was impossible to check on a pay phone because the toll records had been destroyed. [FBI 44-38861-2460] In many cases it was impossible for this researcher to determine if certain calls were, in fact, significant, because of heavy deletions. When Charles Stein and James Earl Ray reached New Orleans, James Earl Ray claimed he called the New Orleans telephone number given to him by "Raoul." James Earl Ray:

I was asked where I was staying then told where Raoul would meet me...He wanted me to help take some guns into Mexico and there would be ten or twelve grand in it for me plus the usual promise of travel documents. During the conversation he said after I got to Cuba I could go anyplace in the world. I told him I wasn't interested in going to Cuba and I wanted the travel documents and part of the money before I went to Mexico. The project would start about the first of May - he would write me as to the specific date later on...Late in February he wrote and asked me to meet him at the bar where we had met before in New Orleans.

WILLIAM MONTELEONE

The bar they were to meet in, the Le Bunny Lounge on Canal Street, just happened to be located across the street from the Hotel Monteleone, which was owned by William Monteleone, a former member of the Cuban Revolutionary Front. [Monteleone, William telephone 504-288-0643, 522-8923 hotel 523-3341] Was this where Raoul was staying? William Bradford Huie reported: "The Monteleone family has as their guests, pilots who had been ransomed from Cuba who had participated in the invasion of the Bay of Pigs." Huie related that Ray on his trip to New Orleans with Stein had met unknown, unnamed parties in a bar from which diagrams made by Ray, Huie concluded was across the street from the Monteleone. HEMMING told this researcher: "This could be significant. They burn trails by making those kind of mistakes."

James Earl Ray waited all day for "Raoul", but he did not appear. James Earl Ray was back in Los Angeles on December 18, 1967. He remained there until March 1968 when he left for New Orleans. When he called "Raoul's" telephone number he was told that "Raoul" had gone to Birmingham, Alabama. He met him there and the two men drove to Atlanta (a dry cleaning ticket placed him there on April 1, 1968) and then back to Birmingham. On April 2, 1968, James Earl Ray was instructed to rent a motel room and he did so using the name "Willard." He was also told to purchase a deer rifle at the Aeromarine Supply Company. "Raoul" examined the weapon and determined it was unsatisfactory. James Earl Ray returned it and purchased a 30.06 rifle which "Raoul" accepted. The Aeromarine Supply Company was coincidentally located in the vicinity of the headquarters of General Reed Doster, who assembled pilots for the Bay of Pigs invasion. Raul asked Ray to purchase a rifle with an infrared scope. Ray testified before the HSCA that after the room was rented, Raoul told him to buy "a pair of binoculars with infrared attachments saying that the 'people' also wanted to examine some glasses." Ray attempted to purchase them but was told that they were only available in army surplus stores. Ray purchased a regular pair instead.

On April 4, 1968, the two men then drove to Memphis, Tennessee, where a room had been reserved for James Earl Ray at the Rebel Motel under the alias of "Willard." According to James Earl Ray, after he checked in,

Raoul told me to rent the room at [a] rooming house at 3:00 p.m. I rented a room from the woman [Bessie Brewer]. I signed my name as John Willard...then I went downstairs and found Raoul in the tavern [Jim's Grill]. He had told me to get him some binoculars so I went up to the store and bought them and when I got back Raoul was up in the room.

RAY'S EVER CHANGING ALIBI

James Earl Ray first claimed he was in a gas station, having a tire repaired, at the time of the shooting. According to William Bradford Huie Ray stated:

I bought the binoculars. I took the rifle up into his room at the rooming house. I was sitting in the Mustang when I heard a shot. In a minute or so Raoul came running down the stairs [carrying my zipper bag which he threw down on the sidewalk]. Then he jumped in the back seat, covered up with a sheet, and we took off.

"Raoul" jumped out at a traffic light eight blocks from the scene of the shooting. Ray also said that he drove back to the flop house and saw numerous police cars parked in front of it. He thought the law was on to "Raoul" and he headed for a pay phone to call "Raoul's" number in New Orleans. He turned on the car radio and found out Martin Luther King had been killed and the police were looking for a white man in a white Mustang. William Bradford Huie stated that Ray told him "he was to be in the room and to get to the room so that they might meet an unnamed, unknown party and discuss the sale of weapons." James Earl Ray had no alibi witnesses for any of these scenarios, however, version two seems the most plausible because it does not require any witnesses. "Raoul" would also stick to Ray as long and as closely as possible to further dirty him up. HEMMING told this researcher:

Ray might have guessed. What is Ray's thinking as to 'What the fuck am I doing in Memphis?' He has to have a reason for being there. He reads in the newspapers that King is there, and says to himself, 'Wait a minute, nah, that couldn't be.' He's not going to admit to that kind of shit now, he's not going to admit to that. Maybe he tried to check out to see 'What are these fuckers up to that they're gonna put me in for a nickel or a dime and I'm gonna be doing a big job. Wait a minute, I don't want this fucking tail-coating bullshit, turnip truck bullshit, where I do the big fucking job and these people get all the goddamn money.' There are people like that in the industry. They try to figure out if there's been any leaks that would endanger them, they try to guess who the target is. They check the newspapers to see who the target might be. Of course he would [have an idea he was going to be set up]. Of course he would, that's what keeps you alive. An inkling would be that he might have done some snooping, he didn't trust the people he was dealing with. They wouldn't be happy with that today. But for him to turn it around and know that this whole thing was a big assed plot, that's too much for his little peanut brain to figure out.

THE BATHROOM WINDOW FROM WHICH SHOTS WERE FIRED

Rooming house manager Bessie Brewer stated that her husband

...returned home from work at 5:25 p.m. on April 4, 1968, and at that time Mr. and Mrs. Brewer commenced their dinner. After dinner Mr. Brewer then turned on the television set and was watching the "Rawhide" television program, and Mrs. Brewer did the dinner dishes. Shortly after completing the dinner dishes, Mrs. Brewer also sat down to watch the "Rawhide" television program. Within a matter of a couple of minutes, Mrs. Brewer heard what she thought to be a gunshot coming from the back of her rooming house. Mrs. Brewer believed that this must have been around 6:00 p.m. on April 4, 1968. She advised her husband that she thought it was a gun shot. Her husband took time to put on his slippers and both of them then proceeded to the southeast exit of the building. Upon arriving at this point, Mr. Brewer attempted to go out the back door; however, a law enforcement officer was in the back of the building and instructed both Mr. and Mrs. Brewer to close the door and return to their apartment. Mrs. Brewer did not hear any noise such as someone running through her building after hearing the gun shot, and the only noise she could recall hearing was a lot of hollering and screaming near the back of her building toward the Lorraine Motel.

When the FBI displayed a photograph of James Earl Ray to Bessie Brewer she told them "I just don't know if it was him." Two other residents of the rooming house, Gracie and Charles Stephens, also witnessed the gunman make his getaway. Gracie Stephens described the man she saw as "in his fifties, with salt and pepper hair." DAVID CHRIST was born 1918 so in 1968 he would have been fifty years old. She said it was not James Earl Ray. On July 31, 1968, Gracie Stephens was committed to a state mental institution, by an assistant administrator at the hospital. Mrs. Stephens was diagnosed as suffering from Korsakoff's disease. Gracie Walden Stephens [born October 15, 1915] had a long arrest record beginning in 1942 for soliciting for prostitution, public drunkenness, bad checks and carrying an unregistered pistol. The FBI reported, Charles Stephens, Apartment 6B, 422 ½ South Main Street, Memphis, advised that on the afternoon of April 4, 1968, he was with his wife at the above address. He stated that at about 3:30 p.m., on the above date, he began working on a table model radio which was in need of repair. He said he took the radio to the kitchen and placed it on the table which was against the wall that was adjacent to the bathroom which was used by all the tenants on his floor. As he was working on his radio he could hear the man in the next apartment go into the bathroom. Mr. Stephens stated that he knew it was the man who had just checked in to Apartment 5B that afternoon because he could hear the door of Apartment 5B open then footsteps would go down the hall to the bathroom; the bathroom door would open and then close.

Mr. Stephens said that during these various trips that the individual in Apartment 5B made to the bathroom he failed to flush the toilet or run any water with the exception of the last time he was in the bathroom. At this time he flushed the toilet. He stated that this individual seemed to be spending an undue length of time in the bathroom. At about 6:00 p.m. on April 4, 1968, Mr. Stephens heard a loud noise which he described as sounding like a gunshot come from the bathroom. Upon hearing this noise, Mr. Stephens ran from the kitchen where he was repairing his radio to his door that led to the hallway. He stated this is only a distance of about 10 to 12 feet. Upon opening the door he saw a man leave the bathroom carrying a package of about three feet long and wrapped in what appeared to be a newspaper. He saw the man run down the hall and then turn left as if he were trying to leave the apartment building. As this was happening, Willie Anchutz came out of his apartment and went to the bathroom. Anchutz then told Stephens to look out of his window. Stephens said that he then looked out of his kitchen window which faced the Lorraine Hotel and saw a lot of policemen scurrying about and people running screaming in the vicinity of the hotel.

Mr. Stephens stated that the man who was in Apartment 5B had checked in about 3:00 p.m. or 3:00 p.m. on April 4, 1968. He stated he was sure of this because he had heard the landlady showing him the apartment at that time. He stated he glanced out of his door and got a fairly good look at the man who he described as being a white male, 5' 10" to 5' 11"; weighing 165 pounds; slender build; ruddy complexion; sandy hair; had a long, sharp, pointed nose; wearing what appeared to be a dark blue or black suit, white shirt and dark tie.

Mr. Stephens stated that the man who he saw running out of the bathroom closely resembled the man who had checked into Apartment 5B. He said he could only see the man who ran from the bathroom from behind, but his general build, hair coloring and clothes were the same as the individual in Apartment 5B. Mr. Stephens added he had never met the man who checked into Apartment 5B, talked to him or knew his name.

When Charles Stephens was shown a photograph of James Earl Ray, Stephens said:

Unless he was wearing a wig or had a full face lift or something it's not the man I saw. The hair is too full, and the face is too young. [Montreal Sun 4.18.68; Wash. Post 8.16.70; FBI ME 44-1987 JWB:raf 4.5.68; FBI Memo Tolson: DeLoach 7.2.68]

Stephens was described as "a drunk and disreputable" by Prosecutor Canale, who wanted the FBI to put Stephens in protective custody. On April 25, 1968, Photographs of James Earl Ray taken in 1955, 1960, and 1966 were shown to Mr. Charles Quitman Stephens, Apartment 6B, 422 ½ South Main Street, Memphis, Tennessee. Stephens said that the 1955 and 1960 photographs of Ray were not familiar to him, but he advised that the 1966 profile photograph of Ray appearing in the Wanted Flyer 442-A, April 19, 1968, and identification order dated April 20, 1968, looked like the man he saw in apartment 5B on April 4, 1968, talking to Mrs. Bessie Brewer. Stephens said that he only saw the man's profile in the boarding house and as a result, could only say the profile of James Earl Ray in 1968 looked very much like the above mentioned man in Room 5B. Stephens said he had never seen the bedspread of any similar bedspread either at the rooming house or anywhere else.

ROY HARGRAVES had Ray rent a room from Bessie Brewer. This was why Stephens identified Ray as the man he saw with Bessie Brewer. HARGRAVES had Ray buy a rifle and a pair of binoculars for a future crime they were going to commit. Ray's car was seen parked outside this flop house. Lloyd Jowers, owner, Jim's Grill, 418 South Main Street, advised that at approximately 3:55 p.m. on April 4, 1968, he arrived at the Grill, and parked directly in back of a white Mustang that was parked on the street directly in front of his Grill. He did not see Ray in it. (King was assassinated at approximately 6:00 p.m.) HARGRAVES told Ray to leave the hotel room because a third party in deal was coming and this man did not want to meet Ray. Ray was told to wait in the Mustang that was parked downstairs, in front of the flop house.

Enter DAVID CHRIST of Dealey Plaza fame, who went to the toilet, shot King, then left the premises. Several residents of the flop house saw CHRIST flee. A sketch was created of CHRIST. CHRIST left evidence incriminating Ray outside the flop house. HEMMING told this researcher:

In most cases you can just walk away. Remember, all the sound is on the other side of the building. This guy went out the front door of the place and just walked down the street. You don't draw attention by running or looking furtive. Get a newspaper and pretend like you're reading it.

THE ORIGIN OF THE SKETCH OF KING'S ASSAILANT

Analysis of the MURKIN file revealed that the Bureau failed to put together a composite sketch of the suspect based on descriptions furnished to it by eyewitnesses to the shooting in Memphis. Instead, the FBI relied on the recollections of people who came into contact with James Earl Ray in Birmingham, Alabama, such as the owners of Aeromarine Supply. [FBI 44-38861-254 4.8.68 teletype] An Airtel from the SAC of the Memphis Office revealed:

Submitted herewith for Bureau's information is a Polaroid copy of the artist's conception, as prepared in Birmingham. It might be noted that this conception is acceptable to Birmingham witnesses. It, however, was rejected by five rooming house witnesses in Memphis. This would seem to suggest a possibility, as has been previously considered, that there may well be two people involved in the murder. [FBI 44-3886-253]

WILLIAM HARRINGTON

William Harrington of the Memphis Commercial Appeal drew a sketch of King's assailant based on the reports of eyewitnesses to the assassination. William Harrington's sketch was based on "descriptions from the men living in Memphis rooming house from which the killer fired." [FBI 44-38811-473 p2 Sec. A] The sketch showed a profile of a sharp-nosed man.

SERGIO JAUBERT

Sergio Jaubert, a police artist in Mexico City, put together a sketch, on the day of the assassination, based on "a description provided by the FBI following speculation that the assassin may have fled to Mexico." [UPI telephoto NXP-MXP 1 4.10.67] When the United Press published Sergio Jaubert's sketch, the FBI Legal Attache in Mexico City cabled J. Edgar Hoover:

For the Bureau's information, the local police artist who prepared the sketch in question is Sergio C. Jaubert, who serves the Metropolitan Police and the Judicial Police of the District and Territories in Mexico. He has not been in direct contact with this office and has, according to police sources, relied completely on press accounts concerning the appearance of the unidentified Subject.

[FBI 44-98861-1181] The FBI also denied that they were "looking for any individual in Mexico." [FBI 44-98861-1181] The FBI was definitely looking for a "sharp-nosed" suspect in Mexico. A college student from Arizona was detained at the border because he fit this description. [NYT 4.11.68] The FBI never released a sketch - instead it released James Earl Ray's graduation picture from bartender's school.

TURNER DISCOVERS JUABERT'S SKETCH IS A DEAD RINGER FOR THE CHRIST TRAMP

NXP/ACP 1-4/10/66-MEXICO CITY: This sketch, distributed to police all over Mexico, is said to resemble the man wanted for the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King. The drawing was made by Mexico City police headquarters artist Sergio Juabert from description provided by the FBI following speculation that the assassin may have fled to Mexico. (UPI TELEPHOTO 3/27)

The FBI's first reference to the tramps was generated as a result of a report from the editor of a small Maryland newspaper and was dated May 5, 1968. It concerned the visual similarity between the CHRIST tramp and Sergio Jaubert's sketch. Researcher Harold Weisberg had pointed this out to the editor who, in turn, contacted the FBI. [FBI 9.30.74 Summary Dallas tramp info.] Ex-FBI Agent William Turner was the first researcher to publicize the visual similarity between the tramp and the sketch. William Turner, who was working with New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison at this time, held a press conference at which he stated: "The sharp, pointed nose, the wide mouth and thin lips, the firm set of the jaw. I remembered something - the photograph of a suspect being taken into custody by two shotgun carrying Dallas policemen." [San Fran. Chronicle 5.6.68 Final Home Edition; FBI 44-38861-A] A few days after William Turner's press conference, a New York Times article appeared which discussed the resemblance of the tramp to the sketch. The article quoted Richard E. Sprague as saying the short tramp was "Ted Slack." HEMMING had told an investigator for New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison that the tramp was "Ted Slack" on May 8, 1968. The FBI generated no documents as a result of this press conference. J. Edgar Hoover ignored William Turner. The only reference to it in the files was a newspaper clipping.

BARDWELL ODUM INVESTIGATES

On May 14, 1968, while investigating the Martin Luther King assassination, FBI S.A. Bardwell Odum questioned Felix McKnight of the Dallas Times Herald about the tramp shots, also on the basis of the CHRIST tramp's similarity to the sketch. Bardwell Odum: "It appeared to him that the alleged newspaper artist's sketch appeared to have been made by someone who was looking at the photograph of the unknown look-alike." Bardwell Odum continued to investigate the tramps and, as stated, was the agent who questioned Bass, Wise, Vaughn and Kitching. Bardwell

Odum was questioned about the tramps by this researcher in 1993:

I heard about them. I didn't have any contact with them. I don't know that the FBI released them. I don't who it would have been. I never knew about any three tramps until a long time after that. They were interviewing all kinds of people, and not paying much attention to them. I didn't have anything to do with that. Fritz didn't like the FBI much, so there's no telling what he said. I sure don't remember questioning that publisher. I don't recall working on anything involving the Martin Luther King assassination. If I interviewed a publisher about it, I certainly don't recall him saying anything that it looked like one of those tramps, 'cause I never wrote anything about those tramps and never even heard about 'em. Never heard of Bass, Wise and Vaughn. I know Kitching, but he was just an identification officer. No sir, I never did it. In fact, I never heard about those tramps 'til years later. And that was mostly from people like you, writers who work up all these things, but I never had anything to do with it in an official, I never even heard who, if they were identified, or what? I thought the police department couldn't even find out who they were, so I don't know how anybody figured that out. They had nothing to do with the FBI. I never heard of those people until 1975. I retired in June or July 1968. It is my recollection that I never did anything in connection with MURKIN. I think they got my name in place of some other agent, because a lot of that stuff sounds like Greek to me.

James Hosty commented, "Maybe he doesn't want to remember?" Odum was sent FBI document 62-109060-7138 that linked him to the MURKIN case. Odum commented:

The document did not refresh my memory. I don't remember anything like that. If it was significant, I would remember it. You cover thousands of leads, something that never amounts to anything, you don't remember. The tramps, I didn't run into them when I was investigating for the FBI. That was some rumor some newspaper came up with, I don't remember doing anything on that. The only publisher I ever talked to was Felix McKnight. I talked to him on a lot of occasions. He was my friend. I never knew anything about the tramps. That all came out years later. [Odum, Bardwell 9518 Parkford Drive Dallas Texas 75238 telephone 214-348-3165]

DAVID CHRIST AND MARTIN LUTHER KING

HEMMING told this researcher: "The professionals don't bring in strangers, it's a very small grouping of people in the business." As stated, "Raoul," the man who set up James Earl Ray, did not assassinate Martin Luther King. Evidence suggested that DAVID LEMAR CHRIST did the shooting. CHRIST did not have time to associate with James Earl Ray since he had a full time job at the CIA. CHRIST moonlighted as a hitman. HEMMING told this researcher:

He has a business to run. He gets back and he's running the goddamn business by then. You haven't identified CHRIST as a permanent member of an assassination team. I haven't seen that yet. I can't see the same guy being used, even in a supporting role.

HEMMING was asked if CHRIST was "Raoul." HEMMING told this researcher:

You can't identify him by name. It is a small crew of people. We're working with a very small circle. This was one of the Dealey Plaza crew. You have to go worldwide to find that kind of talent, A.J. I'm talking about technicians and support. I'm not talking about shooters, per se.

James Earl Ray denied that the CHRIST tramp was "Raoul":

[Attorney Percy Forman] came to visit me and he had a picture for me to look at. This picture was about 8 X 10 inches. Mr. Forman said Mr. Huie had given him the picture and that Mr. Huie had got the picture from someone in the Federal Government. The picture contained two or three men, followed by two or three policemen. Mr. Forman described one of them in the picture as an 'anti-communist' Cuban refugee who was arrested at the time President Kennedy was shot. 'The arrest took place in Dallas,' I was told. I was asked if I would identify the man if he was brought to Memphis. I said no, although he did look similar to the man I was involved with. After I wouldn't identify the man about all I was told was that I would go to the electric chair if I went to trial. [Ltr. from James Earl Ray to Senator Eastland 3.14.69 Sec 78 MURKIN file]

Percy Forman allegedly visited the family of James Earl Ray in St. Louis and asked them to persuade James Earl Ray to plead guilty. James Earl Ray: "The gist of Forman's message was that if the plea were not forthcoming, the FBI would have both of my brothers indicted for complicity in the King homicide." In a letter to this researcher James Earl Ray stated:

As to DAVID CHRIST, I have mentioned before that he has striking similarities to Raoul, and could have been his brother, but I doubt very much if he was Raoul.

In an affidavit James Earl Ray contradicted this statement: "I have made a positive identification of the individual in the statement as Raoul..." [HSCA V3 p564] James Earl Ray told Playboy in June 1977:

Well, I've seen all these pictures, I've looked at a hundred of them. That's the first one Percy Forman showed me. See, Forman at one time wanted to have this individual arrested. I'm pretty sure that was the individual. Then bring him to Memphis, then I was going to identify him and he was going to use that in the defense. I didn't want to do it because I wasn't one hundred percent sure of this picture. All I said was he had a striking resemblance to this Raoul. Just that it was a striking resemblance. Of course I never made a hundred percent positive identification. I'd say there was really a strong resemblance. We'll still look at other pictures, but I'm not going to be no state witness against anyone.

During other testimony James Earl Ray said that the reason he did not want to identify CHRIST as "Raoul" was because "I'm not interested in, you know, identifying anyone from you know, for some type of state witness." [HSCA MLK Vol 1 p236] James Earl Ray claimed that "Raoul" had set him up on a murder charge. Would Ray really have been reluctant to testify against "Raoul" because the dictates of prison morality forbade it? Ray wanted to bolster his story about being framed by saying "Raoul" looked like the tramp, but he would never use it in his legal defense because he knew it was untrue. Percy Forman remembered showing photographs to James Earl Ray, but denied wanting to arrest anyone. He said: "There was no Raoul. Ray told me he invented him to feed conspiracy theories." Percy Forman swore under oath that James Earl Ray told him he had invented "Raoul." [N.Y. Daily News 6.14.77] James Earl Ray was asked by the HSCA:

Now, Mr. Kershaw just gave me the book Coup D'Etat in America, and I'm opened to page 212 and 213. Can you take a look at this and tell me if this is what you made reference to?" James Earl Ray: "Yes, that's it. Very similar but as I have mentioned before, I don't - I'm not going to make any visual identification of anyone, but that person is the most similar to any picture I have ever seen of him in my life. [HSCA KING V9 p369]

RAY BECOMES A FUGITIVE

HEMMING told this researcher:

They didn't have anybody, there was no fucking evidence. Someone had killed Martin Luther King. And even amongst the blacks they weren't sure that it wasn't one of their own. There was enough time bought there so the damage from riots was minimal around the country. This guy King was going down. Are we gonna let the Klan get proven guilty of it and have the cities burned in the United States, or are we gonna take the fucker out ourselves and keep 'em guessing?

Minimal damage? After the Martin Luther King assassination, more than 100 American cities erupted in racial rioting. James Earl Ray abandoned the Mustang and made his way to Europe via Canada. He obtained a Canadian passport by looking through forty-year-old Canadian newspapers for male births. When he found English sounding names, James Earl Ray looked for the same names in a current telephone directory. He surveilled these people, and found one who looked like him. When he determined this person never applied for a passport, he obtained his birth certificate and obtained a passport in the name of this man. From Europe James Earl Ray hoped to go to Angola, where he would become a mercenary for the Portuguese.

The FBI identified the prints on the rifle found at the King crime scene as those of James Earl Ray and the biggest manhunt in history was on. On June 8, 1968, James Earl Ray was arrested in London, England, and extradited to the United States. James Earl Ray hired Arthur Hanes, a former CIA operative who compensated the wives of the Birmingham, Alabama, pilots killed in the Bay of Pigs invasion, as his attorney. Hanes had received the money for the Birmingham widows from the Cuban Revolutionary Council while he was Mayor of Birmingham and he told reporters: "It doesn't take a Phi Beta Kappa key to see there is an international communist conspiracy [operating here]...My client is a tool of revolutionary groups financed by Cuba." [NYT 1973 Waldron; Mem. Tenn. Comm. Appeal 7.28.68] James Earl Ray was ultimately represented by Percy Forman. Forman was a homicide specialist from Dallas who defended JACK RUBY. James Earl Ray plead guilty to avoid getting the electric chair, and was sentenced to 99 years. [Ray, James Earl #65477 7475 Cockrill Bend Ind. Road Nashville TN 37209-1010]

JFK/MARTIN LUTHER KING: GENERAL SIMILARITIES

Similarities between the John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King assassinations included:

1. A rifle with a telescopic sight.
2. The use of phony law enforcement personnel to facilitate the getaway of the assassin or assassins - when Bessie Brewer attempted to go out the back door of the rooming house right after the assassination, "a law enforcement officer was in the back of the building and instructed both Mr. and Mrs. Brewer to close the door and return to their apartment." [FBI ME 44-1987 2 p10] The tramps escape was facilitated by phony Secret Service agents.
3. When the FBI searched the room of James Earl Ray in Atlanta, it discovered a map of Atlanta with a circle around the residence of Dr. Martin Luther King. OSWALD had a map of Dallas with the Texas School Book Depository circled on it.
4. James Earl Ray was sent to Mexico as was OSWALD. They both were instructed to obtain Mexican Tourist Cards.
5. The zipper bag left on the crime scene contained a rifle that could be linked to James Earl Ray, toilet articles, binoculars, cans of beer with the fingerprints of James Earl Ray on them and even a radio with his prison number on it. A Deputy Sheriff "patrolling routinely in the area observed a young white male throw a rifle and bag on the sidewalk and keep running."

[FBI Memo To Rosen From McGowan 4.4.68] Unlike the Kennedy assassination, a few spare rounds of ammo were also left behind.

6. Frangible ammunition was used in both murders. After the Martin Luther King assassination, a fragment of a Remington Peters "Core-Lokt" bullet was removed from Martin Luther King. The "Core-Lokt" bullet is designed to mushroom or explode on impact. The fragment was linked with the other rounds found in the zipper bag that was left in front of the flop house, however, it could not be linked to the 30.06 rifle. FBI S.A. Frazier testified "because of distortion due to mutilation and insufficient marks of value, I could draw no conclusions as to whether or not the submitted bullet was fired from the submitted rifle."

THE HEMMING CONNECTION: HEMMING AND JERRY RAY

JERRY RAY NAZI PIG / JESSE B. STONER NAZI PIG

At the age of 18, Stoner joined the Associated Klans of America in Tennessee and was soon a Klan organizer. He remained in the Klan intermittently for nearly ten years. In 1946, he founded the Stoner Anti-Jewish Party and six years later joined forces with Edward Fields to establish the Christian Anti-Jewish Party. A number of bombings of synagogues and schools took place throughout the South during 1958, and Stoner was one of the prime suspects. He reportedly did not commit these crimes but only planned them. On graduating from the Atlanta Law School in 1952, Stoner was admitted to the Georgia bar. In January 1965, Martin Luther King was assaulted in the Hotel

Albert in Selma, Alabama, by a member of the NSRP. This member later stated that an NSRP official had prevailed upon him to commit the assault. As a practicing attorney and as the NSRP legal adviser, he has defended Klansmen and other white extremists who have been arrested. Stoner was one of three attorneys who endeavored to gain a new trial for James Earl Ray, convicted of murdering Martin Luther King on April 4, 1968. Stoner represented Ray in a civil action in the fall of 1968.

In 1978 HEMMING told this researcher that in late 1963 Edward Collins introduced him to Jerry Ray. HEMMING said that Jerry Ray was employed by J.B. Stoner, who was the head of the National States Rights Party. Jerry Ray told the HSCA that he first met J.B. Stoner in late 1969. Jerry Ray said Stoner hired him as an errand boy, actually body guard. The HSCA reported that Harry Avery, the Commissioner of the Tennessee prison system, was interviewed by staff counsel and Harry Avery indicated that Jerry Ray advised him that J.B. Stoner had been attorney for the Ray family for two years prior to the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King. Jerry Ray was asked: "Is that statement accurate or inaccurate?"

Ray: It is a joke, a sick joke.

Speiser: Mr. Stoner has represented you in a prior criminal action, is that correct?

Ray: That's true.

Speiser: And Mr. Stoner has represented your brother, John Ray?

Ray: Yes.

Speiser: And at a time Mr. Stoner has represented James Earl Ray?

Ray: Yes.

James Earl Ray also denied having heard of Stoner until he received a letter from him after the Martin Luther King assassination. Stoner wrote to Ray and offered him free legal representation. Ray and his brother Jerry were basically Jew and Black-hating Nazi scum buckets. HEMMING did not elaborate further regarding his relationship with Jerry Ray. In 1994 he stated:

Collins came back from a little visit to his sister in Mississippi and came back describing this guy that used the name 'Ray.' We presumed it was Jerry Ray, the brother, years later. Because at that point in time James Earl Ray was locked up. Collins belonged to a little clique of people in there. Collins knew the guy that gunned down Medgar Evers. Collins knew everybody who was anybody in the Klan. This is 1960. He came over just before Bay of Pigs. He was with us until 1964. A short period of time he spent with Loran Hall. He mentioned Jerry Ray in 1962. I never met Jerry

Ray, not that I know of. Collins gave us a description of a guy that we were trying to fit in with this Butler guy at National States Rights Party. Trying to keep track of who's who, who's a snitch and who's a Klansman and everything else. Now, Richard Lauchli knew 'Ray,' that he presumed to be Jerry Ray, because he's seen him on T.V. and everything. Sold guns to him. Remember Lauchli was a co-founder of the Minutemen. He's the guy that brought in DePugh. That was Lauchli's idea. He's the one that pushed it. But DePugh had more of a political presence and all that shit. Lauchli's just an ex-82nd Airborne Paratrooper type good old boy farmer.

At a National Convention of the NSRP held in September, 1962, in Montgomery, Alabama, Robert DePugh, head of the Minutemen, spoke at length on the necessity of using guerrilla warfare tactics in the event the United States Government was taken over by the communists. James Earl Ray stated:

I don't know if Jerry knew HEMMING and Collins or not. I think you asked me about these two several years ago. I will ask my brother about it during his next visit. Anyway I suspect that if Jerry did meet either of them they were traveling under an assumed name. [Ltr. to A.J. WEBERMAN 8.31.94, 9.22.94]

HEMMING told this researcher:

Collins made a contact with Lauchli which he wasn't supposed to and we got certain impressions from that, this is during 1963. Collins made a lot of contacts. In 1963, National States Rights Party people wanted Whatley and Collins and these people to come out and train some of their people. We turned them down on that after we checked it out. The head guy was Butler, he was from Missouri. Our only interest with the National States Rights Party at the time was as a source of weapons, they were sitting on a lot of weapons that we could put to use. Some of them showed the inclination to go along with the weapons, back then, okay, we'd look at 'em. If they had a bunch of guns laying around that they didn't need, we'd get it from them.

HEMMING told this researcher in 1995:

Collins introduced me to a number of people. Jerry Ray may have been one of John Bloomer's guys. See I was going to send Whatley and Collins and those people to train one of Bloomer's teams, but we got involved with something else. Bloomer was with the NSRP. He came out with four people. Collins came by the house, he was in a cab and went to a meeting on the corner bar.

ROBERT K. BROWN AND STANLEY DRENNEN

Another connection to the NSRP was supplied by Robert K. Brown. In August 1963 Stanley Drennen, a member of the National States Rights Party, discussed killing President John F. Kennedy with Robert K. Brown and Steve Justin Wilson. One week later, Robert K. Brown told University of California graduate student Jerry Craddock about this conversation. Robert K. Brown: "I told him you would not believe this guy, he wanted to kill the President and hundreds of people." After the events of November 22, 1963 Jerry Craddock told the FBI that Robert K. Brown told him Stanley Drennen suggested recruiting an assassin to kill the President, his staff and Congressmen who belonged to Americans for Democratic Action.

Jerry Craddock was contacted in April 1993. He said he had been a graduate student at the University of California from 1961 to 1967. In the summer of 1963 he "heard somebody say they had heard something about the assassination. I regret that I don't remember just what it was, but it was something about the assassination. I don't recall what context it was in." When asked if he had overheard this conversation, he responded: "No it was reported to me by Hugo Hartenstein. I think Steve Justin Wilson and Robert K. Brown were involved." Jerry Craddock was asked: "Were they talking about an already existent plot or were they going to do it themselves?" He responded: "They were not involved. They were just reporting that they heard of one." Hugo Hartenstein was contacted in April 1993, and asked if he had overheard Brown and others discussing an already existent plot to kill President John F. Kennedy. He stated:

I didn't overhear anything like that, no. I heard a rumor, a long time ago, about this conversation taking place, but I never overheard the actual conversation. I don't know where I got this information. This was 30 years ago. I didn't overhear it. I remotely knew Robert K. Brown at the time. The university needed a translator back in 1959. He was doing a thesis and wanted me to translate some Spanish into English for him. So he employed me to do that, way back then. I have no idea [when this was]. Obviously it was before the Kennedy assassination. But I remember few details on the subject, because I've pretty well dismissed it from my mind, as it was of no concern of mine.

Robert K. Brown stated:

In 1963 I went out with Steve Justin Wilson (photo right) to try and raise funds for the Cuban exiles. We ended up talking with Stanley Drennen. He made a proposal to us. He said somebody needs to take care of Kennedy, the Cabinet and all the members of Americans for Democratic Action. I said, 'Yes, sir, thank-you very much.' I thought to myself, woo, woo, woo, this guy is screwy, and I left. This was so bizarre that I told this story at cocktail parties. The line of transmission that I recollect was that some Ukrainian or Eastern European refugee heard this story at a cocktail party, and when Kennedy was assassinated, he went to the FBI. I was interviewed by the FBI in 1964 concerning the matter. I explained to them exactly what happened and that was pretty much the end of it.

HEMMING told this researcher:

Brown got to know a lot of National States Rights Party people, and he put them in touch with us. John Bloomer, then through them came Ed Butler, the crisis management asshole, the one that debated OSWALD. All these people approached us to use our instructors in their operations. This was 1962 and 1963. Drennen was part of the American Volunteers.

Loran Hall told described Stanley Drennen:

He was so committed that he knew that there was a hospital, a mental hospital in Alaska that had a million acres of ground and this is where they were going to take all the Conservatives for pre-frontal lobotomies, and I mean he was firmly convinced that this was what was going to happen to him, and that it was just a matter of time before they took him to a mental hospital and did this to him. [Garrison interview with Hall 5.6.68]

A recently released FBI document revealed that Dr. Stanley Drennan discussed his mass assassination plan with his patient, Al Raheb.

LHM contains information from Al Raheb who reported that Dr. Drennan had been his family physician since 1951. On April 17, 1963, Drennan told Raheb 'We are going to do something about it' and went to Poor Richard's Bookshop owned by Francis X. Ranuzzi, to discuss with others the plan for assassinating President John F. Kennedy, Attorney General Robert Kennedy, and 20 or 30 members of Congress including Senator Jacob Javitts of New York. Drennan said they would select a member of the military with a neutral political reputation and no connection with the John Birch Society to perform the assassination, so as not to cast reflection upon the John Birch Society. Raheb attended meetings of John Birch Society at residences of Drennan and Ranuzzi. Drennan, born 1916 in Iowa, graduated Oklahoma University in 1946. Licensed to practice medicine in California 1946. Interview of Drennan in July 1963 negative.

Although Stanley Drennan's plot was unrelated to Dallas, it none-the-less gave an idea of thinking of the people around Robert K. Brown and HEMMING at the time and it tied the players in the Kennedy assassination to the NSRP. [FBI 62-109060-1505]

THE AWOL SAILOR FROM MEMPHIS

In 1978 HEMMING told this researcher that just before Martin Luther King was assassinated in April 1968, he and HARGRAVES were approached to kill him:

A Navy guy from Memphis approached us on the King thing a week before it happened. [He] moved to an apartment house right next door to HARGRAVES in El Monte. Said he had money and financial support and was stationed in Memphis. Were we interested? I said I had to catch a train and left. These things occur quite frequently.

In 1993 HEMMING stated:

HARGRAVES tells me, 'Hey, there's a sailor over here. He's AWOL a couple of days from the Memphis Naval Air Station and I've been getting drunk with him now for about a week and half. And he's been saying some very strange shit.' Do they talk about pussy, do they talk about this? And here's a guy that right away starts talking about guns and revolutions and hinky bullshit. Well that kind of tells you something. Like this wasn't a year after we were dealing with Garrison and he starts gettin' real hinky, like somebody trying to set us up or something. He's got this connection and that connection and somebody's gonna do this. HARGRAVES says, 'Ah more likely the guy's a drunk or this or that.' But the guy starts using some trade craft words and it makes him nervous as shit. He mentions it to me and I says, 'Do an anonymous thing to the Bureau.' This was about a week before the assassination.

HARGRAVES FBI REPORT

In a Freedom of Information Act request to the FBI HEMMING requested documents on: "Report to FBI Field Office, Los Angeles, regarding suspect in the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King at Memphis, Tennessee in 1968." HEMMING 1993:

HARGRAVES filed a report with the Los Angeles FBI about it. He did two of 'em. In detail. He read it from a script prepared for him. It gave a couple of trade craft numbers and it mentioned 301, Nitetel, that they would recognize the trade craft. And that there is a particular individual who is apparently AWOL from the Navy, resides at such and such an address, has been overheard in discussion away from that address, in various locales, gun dealers etc. Radical elements including the Nazi organization. I threw the whole package in there. It represented a threat not only to Martin Luther King, but possibly the President. They couldn't ignore it.

They came down like a swarm of fucking bees pissed off. How dare you? We just ignored their ass. HARGRAVES was wise to them because by that time he was dealing with Los Angeles Police Department. He talked his way into this shit. Well, all of a sudden after the thing went down they came straight to HARGRAVES. These calls had been made from public telephones that had been tampered with. I mean there was no way to trace the call back. But somehow they did. How did they know it was HARGRAVES unless they knew the sailor, they knew the whole goddamn scheme themselves? Now what I got to do is, somewhere down the line, get the Bureau files on that out of Los Angeles. They're supposed to be declassifying that shit now. And say, 'Okay, who the fuck told you to go to HARGRAVES? Where the fuck did HARGRAVES name come into this?' All of a sudden, out of goddamn nowhere, is this sailor and his buddies and the girlfriend and the shits that had moved in next door in El Monte talking this weird shit about Martin Luther King. Well, I just been going over the bulletins from AFSCME (American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees) and was very aware of Memphis and all that, but I hadn't discussed it with anybody. There wasn't a hell of a lot of press coverage. Then this shit started popping up, I said, 'What the fuck is going on here?' A pattern. It made HARGRAVES nervous as shit and he was ready to move out of the goddamn place. I told him 'We are not going to pursue this kind of shit, we are not going to get involved.'

HEMMING was asked if the FBI might have recognized Hargrave's voice. HEMMING told this researcher:

Oh no, no. He never talked directly with them, never once in his life. He was never interviewed or talked to by any Feds, including the CIA, in his entire life. Just the Secret Service in Miami. And I tricked him into going there. Like I didn't want him to be nervous and I had him go down to the courthouse, step in the building real quick and take the elevator, walk in and he's there. The government was just using their snitches to find out what the hell we're up to. We're in PROJECT CHAOS at the time. That's the word they put on the paperwork.

HEMMING told this researcher in 1995:

They moved in on HARGRAVES in El Monte. I knew the Humphrey visit was coming up and I put him into COPE. About the time that HARGRAVES was shaking hands with Hubert Humphrey this asshole sailor shows up a couple of days later. I thought, 'Well it's the Secret Service' but they're getting a little bit heavy here. Intelligence been getting inquiries from people. So I told HARGRAVES, ignore the motherfucker. And this guy has parties, has his own pad there, a lot of drinking and shit and he's AWOL from Naval Air Station, Memphis. HARGRAVES probably ran his mouth about political stuff but he was suspicious because this guy seemed to know too much. He was really on his toes, people trying to set him up. So out of the blue here's some fucker talking he's got a contract to do King and all that. We're wondering if its beer talk? I told him, 'While we're working this shit, don't be seen with these people.' I mean he'd been with Garrison, he knew the patsy scenarios and all that kind of shit. I said it could be right out of the blue, set you up with hot car, a car full of dope, whatever, to put you out of circulation. And you'll never know why. You'll never know why. They're gonna take you out of circulation. We just couldn't get rid of this guy. Then, a day or two before the event, the guy packs up very quietly and says he going back to Memphis. Well, HARGRAVES had already sent him over, used the pay phone to call the Bureau. Ask for so and so, who I didn't know, his name was given to me. He met with them, miles away from El Monte, he refused to identify himself, but they knew who he was, so that made him nervous. The Bureau was paying for the meal, freeloading a big meal, they were happier than shit 'cause they were eating a big meal. Then the thing goes down, and he was more worried about FBI now. HARGRAVES moved out of El Monte real fast. He knew the safest place to go was in Niggertown 'cause he knew there was no niggers in the FBI. He was worried about the FBI at that time. He figured they were part of it. He'd warned them and nothing was done. It's an AWOL sailor, they should have busted him. They should have come by, nobody came by that apartment, nobody fucked with this guy. HARGRAVES was on unemployment workmen's comp, injury stuff. He injured himself working in L.A. in early 1968. He ended up getting forty grand for that in the latter part of 1968, it took about a year to get it, then he went back to Florida, got a bunch of weapons for Alpha and they wouldn't let him go on the trip, everybody died on the fucking trip, he's still bitching about, all the M-16s and shit that he bought through Lauchli on the way back."

In an Freedom of Information Act request to the FBI HEMMING asked for "Report to FBI Field Office, Los Angeles, regarding suspect in assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King." [HEMMING ltr. to FBI 8.27.75]

James Earl Ray was sent a Xerox of a photograph of HARGRAVES. He stated: "It would be difficult to say if I ever came in contact with those in the Xerox you sent me." HEMMING used the name "Raoul" because he had a sense of humor. The most famous "Raoul" was Raul Castro. He called OSWALD "A.J. Hidell" after "Fidel," and STURGIS, "Q/M Turgid," because he thought FRANK'S brain worked kind of slow. Other HEMMING signatures included the 30.06 rifle and drug smuggling. HEMMING was arrested for drug smuggling in the late 1970's. The meeting near the Hotel Monteleone associated "Raoul" with the Cuban Revolutionary Front and the Bay of Pigs as did the location of Aeromarine Supply. The fact that the scenario involved arms smuggling to Cuban exiles sounded like HEMMING. HEMMING was familiar with General Doster: "He was the Commanding General of the Alabama Air National Guard. I had no direct contact with him. He went out three or four years after the Bay of Pigs." HEMMING was in Los Angeles at the same time James Earl Ray was. James Earl Ray resided there from November 19, 1967, to March 17, 1967. In 1995 I asked HEMMING if HARGRAVES was "Raoul." HEMMING told this researcher:

Raoul's first name was Robert. He's dead now, he died three years ago. He ain't no spic, but he spoke perfect Spanish, he could pass as a spic, but he wasn't no spic. Raoul, aka Robert, his files are in Maryland, at a relative's house. He most recently was with the Croats till he died three years ago. His files are available if we had some money. You've heard the guys name before and you've heard his aliases, but you never put him together with this. This guy was an author of many many things that had to do with this kind of business, coups and all that shit, under a pseudonym. The relative doesn't know the guys nasty background, he just knows the intelligence side. The sketch looks like Robert. Died a horrible death, cancer, horrible fucking death. The treatment weakened him, he bled to death in the middle of the night. HARGRAVES knew this guy well. All of our people knew him well.

HEMMING, KING AND AFSCME

HEMMING 1994:

You've got to remember, I'm the President of an AFSCME Local. We are well aware that AFSCME is sponsoring the garbage strike and that King is coming into the thing. Some of our California people have been invited to Memphis the next week.

Martin Luther King went to Memphis to support local members of AFSCME. In 1995 HEMMING displayed a AFSCME business card when I visited him at his home in Florida. According to Philip Agee, AFSCME was used by the CIA in labor operations. AFSCME played a part in the overthrow of Jeedi Jagan in British Guyana in 1962.

THE BUSINESS CARD

James Earl Ray said he had come by a name and address linked to "Raoul" shortly before crossing the border in November 1967 from Mexico, into the United States. James Earl Ray said he "found a pack of cigarettes in a cigarette case dropped down between the bucket seats in the Mustang. There was a business card in there and I think on one side it had this person's name, crossed out and what looked like the name of a city." [Playboy 8.77] According to James Earl Ray, "the name was something like Rosen 1180 N.W. River Drive, Miami, Florida." This traced back to Randolph Erwin Rosenson who had a Federal narcotics conviction in New Orleans and a long criminal record for narcotics and customs violations. The Miami telephone directory listed a Randy Rosenson at 11802 North West South River Drive, Miami. Ray wrote to this researcher: "There was also a Rosenson, it was finally determined he was listed under "Randy Rosenson" 11802 N.W.S. River Drive, Medley Florida. I found this name while shaking down the Mustang in Mexico before crossing the border in November 1967. A lawyer went to New Orleans in 1975 & got Rosenson's federal convictions & found out he was an informer." [Ray 12.28.73; Atlanta Journal 10.75; USDC-Tenn. C-76-274] Ray said that "Raoul" had the word "LEAA" written on a business card. LEAA was created in August 1968, a year after he remembered finding this card. James Earl Ray might have seen LIEU (Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit) which HEMMING was associated with in 1967, and confused it with the better known LEAA. HEMMING 1995:

HARGRAVES was indirectly employed by the CIA. The money came through third parties. The money came through law enforcement circles. It was grant money from LIEU. People in charge were working for CHAOS and this other crypto project. LIEU was a clandestine, nationwide intelligence unit. They were running the operation, doing the job. He got that through Hendricks, the lieutenant in the Long Beach California Police Department that ran the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, LIEU, which is all Special Forces types around the country. Ray wouldn't know what the unit was. Wackenhut helped set it up. They were going to set it up in Florida in 1967 with Governor Claude Kirk and the Miami Herald put the end to that shit, they were going to set up a private intelligence agency in the state of Florida.

The Washington Post News Service reported that the LIEU, a police intelligence gathering association, which federal officials tried to merge with the computer operation of the FBI in 1975, had serious leaks to the underworld since 1960, according an FBI file. The files indicated that an official in the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, a privately chartered group that received federal funds until 1978, apparently took a file on organized crime from federal agents during the 1960's. The theft so angered FBI officials that they set up their own intelligence network inside the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit to report on the group's activities. The Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit was started in 1956 to exchange organized crime data among local police departments. The Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit came under fire from civil rights activists who contended that the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit intelligence files included material on civil rights activists. [Miami Herald 11.24.78] James Earl Ray: "In regard to the LEAA you mentioned, in the early 1970's I had a relative write the Justice Department asking the Department if they had any ongoing pilot projects in 1967. A JD official responded, yes, there was pilot projects in Newark, N.J. and New Orleans in 1967...I received information indirectly from the JD saying a OLEA was funding project prior to the LEAA coming into existence but JD claim they are unaware of which project OLEA funded." [Ltr. from JER to AJW 10.19.94]

In December 1973 James Earl Ray sent a statement to a local television station in which he swore he had provided his attorneys with two telephone numbers given to him by "Raoul." James Earl Ray told the Atlanta Journal: "Look, I know the telephone numbers of two men in Louisiana. The authorities could have got their names. For some reason they didn't want to pursue the case. Get the two guys in New Orleans and you will know a lot more." In 1976 James Earl Ray stated:

(a) during one period of plaintiff's confinement in 1968 he wrote down on a money receipt issued forth from the Sheriff's office of the Shelby county, Tennessee, jail information which plaintiff believed had a direct bearing on said criminal indictment.

(b) the information consisted of telephone numbers & one name & address; all numbers were written down backwards, including the address.

(C) The two telephone numbers were listed next to the word "Sister," the first being listed in New Orleans, Louisiana, the second being in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

(d) The address is listed under the name Vera C. Staples.

(e) The telephone number listed under the Baton Rouge address was furnished to plaintiff's attorney, Percy Foreman, who was representing plaintiff in criminal indictment.

(f) the address was not investigated until plaintiff was incarcerated upon pleading to said indictment. A compendium of the first trial investigation would indicate: the information cited above was given to a St. Louis, Missouri, labor leader, [Lawrence Calahan of the St. Louis, Missouri, Steam fitters Union] and informed it pertained to the MLK case, who apparently in turn furnished the information to a Nashville, Tennessee, ex-Attorney to investigate: said attorney had sources in the State of Louisiana investigate the matter and thereafter said attorney reported the Baton Rouge listed number resident was under the influence of the Teamster's Union and in New Orleans listed number resident was among other things an agent of a mideast organization disturbed because of Dr. King's reported, forthcoming, before his death, public support of the Palestine Arab cause. (References to the address if any was unclear).

(g) the plaintiff had come by said name and address shortly before crossing the border in November 1967 from Tijuana, Mexico, into the United States. The name was Randolph Erwin Rosen, 1180 N.W. River Drive, Miami, Florida; other reference was made to a LEAA. A check through the Miami directory in 1970 indicated no Rosen listed with the above first and second name; thereafter an attorney in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, was furnished the Rosen name and asked if he could find any information regarding the Subject in New Orleans, and informed the Subject might have criminal record; the attorney reported back that the Subject's last name most likely was Rosenson and that he had a criminal conviction in New Orleans, Louisiana, federal court for a narcotics violation; thereafter a Tennessee licensed attorney procured the transcript of said conviction; subsequently another check was made through the Miami telephone directory which did list a Randy Rosenson but with an address discrepancy. That is February 1969 after Percy Foreman had entered into literary contracts with defendant Huie, plaintiff furnished Attorney Foreman with the above mentioned Baton Rouge phone number and asked him to investigate. In connection with the MLK jr. homicide. Shortly thereafter Mr. Foreman replied, in effect, that if there were to be any phone numbers referred to in court he (Foreman) would furnish them through contacts in interstate gambling. Mr. Foreman mentioned a Mr. Meyer Lansky as his source. [USDC-Tenn. C-76-274; USDC Nashville, Tenn. Div. Civ-7338]

HERMAN THOMPSON

The Baton Rouge telephone number written backwards belonged to Mrs. Jane and Herman Thompson of Baton Rouge. Herman Thompson's wife ran the Abstract Office there. In an interview with this researcher in 1978 Mrs. Thompson admitted the number belonged to her in 1968, but said she never received any telephone calls from James Earl Ray, or from researchers who had linked her number to the Martin Luther King slaying. She denied having any knowledge of the King assassination. She said that her husband worked for H. E. Weiss Construction Engineers and was not involved with the Teamsters. Traces on Herman Thompson included a libel suit filed against a political opponent:

On June 27, 1962, petitioner Phil A. St. Amant, a candidate for public office, made a televised speech in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. In the course of this speech, St. Amant read a series of questions which he had put to J. D. Albin, a member of the Teamsters Union Local, and Albin's answers to those questions. The exchange concerned the allegedly nefarious activities of E. G. Partin, the present relationship between Partin and St. Amant's political opponent. One of Albin's answers concerned his efforts to prevent Partin from secreting union records; in this answer Albin referred to Herman A. Thompson, an East Baton Rouge Deputy Sheriff and respondent here:

'Now we knew that this safe [containing the records] was gonna be moved that night, but imagine our predicament knowing of Ed Partin's connections with the Sheriff's Office through Herman Thompson, who made recent visits to the hall to see Ed Partin. We also knew of money that had been passed between Ed Partin and Herman Thompson *** from Ed to Herman. We also knew of his connections with State Trooper Lieutenant Joe Green. We knew we couldn't get any help from there, and we didn't know how far that he was involved in the Sheriff's office or the State Police office through that, and it was out of the jurisdiction of the City Police.' Thompson promptly brought suit for defamation, claiming that the publication had 'imputed*** gross misconduct' and inferred 'conduct of a most nefarious nature.' The case was tried prior to the opinion in New York Times v. Sullivan. The trial judge ruled in Thompson's favor and awarded $5,000 in damages.

The case eventually went to the United States Supreme Court:

By no proper test of reckless disregard was St. Amant's broadcast a reckless publication about a public officer. Nothing referred to by the Louisiana courts indicates an awareness by St. Amant of the probable falsity of Albin's statement about Thompson. Failure to investigate does not in itself establish bad faith. St. Amant's mistake about his probable legal liability does not evidence a doubtful mind on his part. That he failed to realize the import of what he broadcast - and was thus heedless of the consequences for Thompson - is similarly colorless. Closer to the mark are considerations of Albin's reliability. However, the most the State Court could say was that there was no evidence in the record of Albin's reputation for veracity, and this fact merely underlines the failure of Thompson's evidence to demonstrate a low community assessment of Albin's trustworthiness or unsatisfactory experience with him by St. Amant. Other facts in this record support our view. St. Amant made his broadcast in June 1962. He had known Albin since October 1961, when he first met with members of the dissident Teamsters faction. St. Amant testified that he had verified other aspects of Albin's information and that he had affidavits from others. Moreover, Albin swore to his answers, first in writing and later in the presence of newsmen. According to Albin, he was prepared to substantiate his charges. St. Amant knew that Albin was engaged in an internal struggle in the union. Albin seemed to St. Amant to be placing himself in personal danger by publicly airing the details of the dispute." [St. Amant v. Thompson 88 S. Ct 1323 (1968)]

In a letter to this researcher James Earl Ray wrote:

I am certain Thompson didn't have involvement in the Martin Luther King case. Policemen might thump a head in the back room, but assassination is something else, further I never contacted him with the phone number and suspect it was given to me for diversionary purposes --- this is Hollywood fare, red neck cop assaults Black man. There is more to the case than that type b.s.

In another letter to this researcher Ray wrote: "Regarding the phone number.

1. Thompson used to be a sheriff (dep.) In the parish Baton Rouge is in. We have determined that phone number was planted on me and I never used it.

2. There was an earlier phone number but I can't recall it and we don't know whether we can locate it.

James Earl Ray told the HSCA: "I think they are bogus because [Huie] never got them off me, and they are probably somebody he's prejudiced against. I think one of them's name was a, Grady Partin."

EDWARD GRADY PARTIN

Edward Partin told his life story to Life magazine: "I'm a Teamster, and some people think, a hard one. I've been in fights and jails and packed a gun, and I've been shot twice and knifed once. My daddy was a sawmill worker in the red clay hills around Woodville, Mississippi, when I was born in February 1924." Edward Partin joined the Marines but "hit an officer once and went to the brig on bread and water. And once I helped roll a sailor. Later they put me in front of a summary court and gave me a bad conduct discharge." After his discharge, he did three years in the Washington State Reformatory. He joined the Teamsters in the mid-1950's and moved to Baton Rouge. I. Irving Davidson told the FBI that he had heard there was a photograph available of Edward Partin in the presence of JACK RUBY. I. Irving Davidson was unable to furnish any additional details regarding the photograph or his source for this information. I. Irving Davidson told the FBI that Edward Partin had run guns to Fidel in the late 1950's.

"Davidson stated that it was felt by Teamster's Union officials (not identified) that Edward Partin furnished some information to the Subcommittee relating to his activities on behalf of Castro." In 1961 Edward Partin was indicted for vehicular manslaughter. In 1962 became a government informant after he was indicted for labor racketeering in New Orleans. He was also indicted for kidnapping by the local authorities. In 1962 Edward Partin was approached by Jimmy Hoffa: "Jimmy asked my help in a scheme to kill Attorney General Robert Kennedy...There were a lot of troubles going on in teamsters particularly in Philadelphia....Hoffa said 'You know anywhere you can get hold of a plastic bomb?...somebody needs to bump that son-of-a-bitch Robert Kennedy off...the person who does it can hide out in Puerto Rico.'" [Life 5.15.64] Edward Partin's report on Hoffa was corroborated by a lie detector test supervised by Life magazine. Edward Partin attempted to get Jimmy Hoffa to incriminate himself on tape, but Jimmy Hoffa refused to discuss any such matter over the telephone. In 1978 Edward Partin told the HSCA that Jimmy Hoffa may have approached him about the assassination proposal because Jimmy Hoffa believed him to be close to various figures in CARLOS MARCELLO'S organization. [HSCA Rep. p176] Edward Partin was a key witness in the trial of Jimmy Hoffa and three others, which resulted in their conviction for obstruction of Justice in Chattanooga, Tennessee, in 1964. The FBI, at the request of the Attorney General, interviewed Edward Partin on two occasions with the aid of a polygraph. The first test was inconclusive; the second indicated he was telling the truth. Edward Partin, by his own admission, was a habitual liar. He had an extensive arrest record and has been charged in the past with forgery, aggravated kidnaping and assault and battery. The FBI's files indicated he was an unscrupulous individual. [FBI 62-109060-4833] In 1971 Edward Partin had his wife contact the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City and ask it for a visa. [CIA No. 14,636 2.26.71] HEMMING told this researcher:

You're card that keeps you alive may be that you're keeping quiet, or if you aren't keeping quiet, you're giving out wrong answers that satisfies the people who are going to let you live. Now, if Ray wants to put some heat on these people, he suspects that this was this, or this was that, whether he was set up or not, he knows the business, he knows these people could have his ass. If he's figured out who one or more of them may be, he's not gonna blurt it out to just anybody. He wouldn't tell his own goddamned mother, why the fuck would he tell a stranger? He would rarely even tell a lawyer, he doesn't know where these lawyers come from. And it's his ass, if somebody makes a mistake, it's his ass.

HARGRAVES AND GRADY PARTIN

HEMMING 1995:

HARGRAVES was dealing with Grady Partin when he was still friendly with Jimmy Hoffa. Partin helped do a number of things in Baton Rouge for HARGRAVES. And HARGRAVES was puzzled what the hell could they get on Grady to make him roll over that way. I never asked HARGRAVES [about the connection of Edward Partin to Fidel Castro] but HARGRAVES and Partin were like two of a kind in talking about revolutionaries, that was a term that was used, the real revolutionaries, starting with the American revolution. HARGRAVES got along famously with Grady because he talked like a revolutionary and he had the stories and he had the shit together in the exact (?) and that kind of stuff.

THE SECOND NUMBER

In October 1977 this researcher corresponded with James Earl Ray and discovered that Ray only remembered the last four digits (3757) of the second number he found on the business card and thought that the exchange of

The partial New Orleans phone number maybe 866 or 668 (the lawyer has the number, you have the last four digets. I recalled the last four digets and when through various phone books etc. and the above 866 seemed the most familiar but I'm not sure. This phone number as I say may be wrong, but it is listed under a double name, a french name & I believe a name similar to "Levine." It is a Marine Supply establishment. You have the last four digits on the receipt written backwards.

The 1968 New Orleans Criss Cross Directory listed 866-3757 as Laventhal Marine Supply. "Laventhal" was a Jewish name, so James Earl Ray blamed the Mossad for the death of Martin Luther King. James Earl Ray:

The resident listed in New Orleans was, among other things, an agent of a Mideast organization distressed because of King's reported, forthcoming, before his death, public support of the Palestinian Arab cause. [USDC Nashville, Tenn. Div. Civ-7338]

James Earl Ray attempted to disguise his hatred for the Jews when he told HSCA:

I don't want to get into this libel area again and say something that might be embarrassing to -- disservice some group or organizations...he intended, like Vietnam, to support the Arab cause..someone in his organization making contact with the Palestinians for an alliance.. [HSCA MLK V1p299]

CARLOS MARCELLO

James Earl Ray said he was not sure of the exchange. This researcher checked every exchange in New Orleans for numbers ending in 3757. When I checked under 833-3757, a number similar to 866-3757, I found that the number belonged to the Town and Country Motel. David Ferrie called this telephone number. JACK RUBY called Nofio Pecora, who was a former manager of the Town and Country Motel. CARLOS MARCELLO maintained an office there. [Cong. Rec. Kohn 8.6.70 E7389] Life magazine reported: "CARLOS MARCELLO directs his criminal empire from this office at the Town and Country..." [Life 9.67] James Earl Ray wrote to this researcher and stated that Attorney Jim Lesar had brought the Town and Country connection to his attention, but told him "CARLOS MARCELLO had an extension which I did not have." James Earl Ray told the HSCA that he called this number "several times but I never did talk to him directly. It was always someone who seemed, who was speaking for him so..." James Earl Ray testified that he did not call this number after Martin Luther King was hit because "I didn't want to have contact with anyone, family members, criminal associates." [MLK Vol. p 201,417]. HEMMING told this researcher: "It would not be that direct. A cutout, like an attorney, would have been involved. A mob lawyer." Why would James Earl Ray have been given a number to contact "Raoul" that might have been tapped?

JACK YOUNGBLOOD

In January 1976 the Village Voice ran a story by Dick Russell that alleged that, Jack Youngblood, a one time associate of HEMMING, was in Jim's Cafe, located on the first floor of the flop house, eating bacon and sausages, just before the Martin Luther King assassination. Llyod Jowers told the FBI about this man. The FBI:

Lloyd Jowers, owner, Jim's Grill, 418 South Main Street, advised that at approximately 3:55 p.m. on April 4, 1968, he arrived at the Grill, and parked directly in back of a white Mustang that was parked on the street directly in front of his Grill. He stated that he believed that the car had Mississippi license plates on it because they were of an orange or orangish-yellow color. He stated that upon parking the car he went into the Grill where he saw a stranger sitting at the bar having a meal. He stated that it was unusual for him to get any strange customers in the Grill since most of his customers were local people of a steady nature. Mr. Jowers stated that this same individual returned to the Grill about 8:00 p.m. on April 5, 1968, and ordered breakfast. Mr. Jowers stated that in his estimation, this individual acted strangely because he seemed very calm when everyone else at the Grill and in the area was excited over the shooting. In view of the fact that he felt the individual was acting strange and also because he was a stranger in the area, Mr. Jowers called the Police, and told them that he had a man of a suspicious nature at the Grill. He said that when the stranger finished his breakfast, he left the Grill and was arrested on the sidewalk in front of the Grill by the Memphis Police Department. (Deleted as of 2010) Homicide Bureau, Memphis Police Department, later identified this arrested individual as Gene Pearson Crawford (Deleted as of 2010) Jackson, Tennessee, who was determined to have had no part in the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King." [FBI 44-1987 4.5.68]

HEMMING encouraged Dick Russell: "Youngblood looked like somebody with intelligence connections. He knew too much." Loran Hall stated: "Youngblood's a friend of PATRICK'S. And if I'm not mistaken, Youngblood had been to PATRICK'S camp or something now in the Keys and was -- I'm almost positive in 1963 when we were in Los Angeles before we went to Miami together, that Youngblood was in San Francisco."

CIA/FBI COVERUP

A recently released CIA Office of Security document stated:

Despite Dr. King's statements the Washington protests are for jobs or income for all, there can be little doubt the activity will be closely interlinked with the 'peace' movement, as the activity escalates. The FBI noted that Dr. King has shown not only a willingness, but even an eagerness, to accept Communist aid, to support Communist causes, to confer with high-ranking Communist functionaries, and to rely heavily upon the advice and direction of dedicated Communists with concealed affiliation. It notes, specifically, that one of these Communist advisors wrote King's vicious denunciation of U.S. policy in Vietnam, which he delivered before the April 15, 1967, rally held in New York City by Bevel's National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam. According to the FBI, Dr. King is regarded in Communist circles as 'a genuine Marxist-Leninist who is following the Marxist Communist line.' [CIA Charles Kane AD/OS 3.15.68]

King was placed under audio surveillance when he stayed at the Americana Hotel in January 1966. [FBI 100-106670-2224X] And FBI document stated:

The initial OPR report (page 134) contained a discussion regarding a proposed counter-intelligence action against King. This entire page was deleted in the revised report, apparently for privacy reasons. This proposal concerned a woman with whom King was involved and a child born to her in 1965, reportedly fathered by King.

HEMMING:

Could you have gotten government sanction to do the job from a consensus of intelligence professionals who are not opposed to taking out a Soviet agent now and then?

A lot of the information in this data base may come as a surprise to the members of the intelligence community who access this site, a lot of it may not. Nonetheless, if this independent researcher was able to piece together this information, why couldn't intelligence analysts within the CIA do the same? The CIA never attempted to trace the Martin Luther King assassination to HEMMING or HARGRAVES since both men were part of MK/CHAOS anti-Black Panther operations at the time. As for CHRIST, he was employed by the CIA at the time of Martin Luther King's assassination.

THE HSCA MARTIN LUTHER KING INVESTIGATION

The Department Of Justice Martin Luther King Task Force never acknowledged the existence of "Raoul" and believed that the brothers of James Earl Ray were involved in the assassination of Martin Luther King. The Department of Justice report concluded "James Earl Ray was lying about the existence of Raoul...an underworld figure...and Ray's self-serving attribution of Raoul who directed him to buy the car and who supplied him cash is uncorroborated...the source for Ray's funds still remains a mystery today." The Report suggested "Raoul" might have been Jerry Ray. In June 1977 James Earl Ray and several prisoners, one of them black, escaped from Brushy Mountain Prison. James Earl Ray was captured three days later.

HEMMING AND MITCH WERBELL 1970

The FBI generated two documents on HARGRAVES on January 16, 1969: FBI 100-300-044/MX and FBI 100-300-044. HEMMING claimed he began working with the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs and the Los Angeles County Sheriff's office in 1969 and was in Mexico in 1970 selling arms for Mitch Werbell. HEMMING told this researcher:

Werbell's MAC-10's and all that shit, that opened the door to the palace level, the highest level, in every fucking country south of the Rio Grande. And opened us to everything that was going on. This group wanted to pull a coup, death squads, the whole fucking thing. The only element that has that whole package of civilians, foreign ministers, ex-ministers, a cabal in each country including wealthy land owners [is the gun people]. The only element that has more than the gun people are the dope smugglers. Because all these people are on their payroll.

According to HEMMING, the nephew of Rolando Masferrer, Kiki Masferrer, and Ed Kaiser, constituted Mitch Werbell's sales staff in Florida. Sonia Kaiser reported: "Ed used to take trips to the Turks and Cacaos islands. He was kicked off the Turks and Cacaos. They wouldn't let him go back." In 1970 two FBI Letter Head Memorandums were generated about HEMMING. [FBI LHMs Miami 105-3973 FBI 105-86406-28 9.21.70 pgs. 1-3, 5-6 w/h, 12.10.70; HQ 2-1693-55 p7 w/h; HQ 105-92196-8 pgs. 1-3 w/h] On September 16, 1970, and December 10, 1970, the FBI in Miami generated two documents about ROY HARGRAVES in which HEMMING was mentioned. [FBI 105-3973] The FBI reported:

On September 13, 1970 MM T-1 advised Hargraves publicly states he is involved in a plan to cause military hostilities between the United States and Cuba. He is closely associated in this matter with GERALD PATRICK HEMMING. HEMMING claims the plan is so good that the United States intelligence agency officials are now wondering why their operatives on the local level do not aid and support the plan in which Hargraves is involved. HEMMING claims that he and Hargraves have visited the various Federal enforcement agencies in Miami and they all wholeheartedly agree with and sympathetically support the plan in which Hargraves is involved.

MM T-3 another Government agency which conducts intelligence investigations, on November 24, 1970, advised that on June 18, 1970, that Agency interview Hargraves. Hargraves said he met Manuel Aquilar, a Cuban refugee in the United States in 1961. On or about June 15, 1970 Aquilar contacted Hargraves concerning a plan to defect a Cuban Government patrol boat and obtain jet aircraft supplied to Cuba by the Soviet Union.

Aquilar was the leader of FRAC Frente Revolucionario Anti-Communista. According to the FBI the group had not been active for years.

HEMMING 1971

In a self-generated document HEMMING wrote:

Subject HEMMING initiated new foreign (Government Level) contacts within Mexico after 7 months of preliminary research beginning early 1971 while working in Miami, Florida, area. Mexican Government contact was established through cut-out during November 1971. Reference following:

- a. Narcotics activities MEXICO-CONUS.
- b. Special weapons procurement for Mexican law enforcement agencies at a state level.
- c. Assessment of communist guerilla groups directed by M. Rojas and Lucio Cabanias operating within the states of Guerro, Morelos, Sinaloa, Michoacan.
- d. Arranged U.S. visit by Mexican Government law enforcement officials for inspection and demonstration of special weapons and law enforcement equipment at defense plant located near Atlanta, Georgia.
- e. Evaluated reports that one or more major heroin laboratories in Mexico is under direct control and supervision of individual holding cabinet level position in administration of President Luis Echavarria.
- f. Arranged for Staff Intelligence Officer, Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, to travel with small team to Mexico to copy Mexican law enforcement official files and photographs of all U.S., Mexican, and other foreign nationals involved in narcotic smuggling to the Southern California areas. Team to carry photographic and copying equipment under both corporate proprietary and news media cover.(Staff Intelligence Official Los Angeles Country Sheriff's Department is NT/MOUNTAIN.

Most of the 1970 HEMMING FBI files concerned Cuba and HARGRAVES. HARGRAVES was arrested in Miami in 1970. He was charged with possession of a weapon by a convicted felon. HEMMING claimed he acted as a lawyer for HARGRAVES, and so HARGRAVES was acquitted. A CIA report stated: "HEMMING is reportedly carrying CIA identification and telling Miami Cubans that he and Werbell are CIA." HEMMING told this researcher in 1994: "Not likely. The only I.D. we carried were our Federal Firearms Class Three Licenses. CIA does not have I.D." The FBI reported:

It is noted that Roy Hargraves, an American adventurer and mercenary, in July, 1970 advised he was involved in a plan to affect warfare between the United States and Cuba. The plan consisted of attempting to have defecting Cuban military personnel fire missiles against the United States Navy Base, Guantanamo, Cuba thus projecting the United States into a military take-over of Cuba. Hargraves was closely associated in this plan with Gerald Patrick Hemming, another American mercenary and adventurer and a long-time associate of Hargraves.

HEMMING: JULY 1970 THE NIXON/KEY BISCAYNE PROVOCATION

Dick Russell asked HEMMING: "Last year you told Senate investigators about a situation in 1970 when you discussed a plot by some anti-Castro Cuban exiles in Miami - who worked closely with the CIA - to fire a missile at RICHARD NIXON'S Presidential compound in Florida and make it look like a Castro-planned operation." HEMMING:

That was the fall of 1970. This particular group of exiles was working on a commodities exchange operation out of Florida. There's a tremendous shortages of commodities inside Cuba, coffee, flour, you name it. So the original intent was to compromise some of Castro's Cuban Army types by getting them a few goodies now and then. There were a number of fishing boats moving out from Florida and taking commodities down there - primarily rice, lard, used clothing, used shoes, things like that. One thing led to another and one of the exile groups got absorbed by the CIA. The CIA started using this operation for getting agents in and out of Cuba...About this time one of my contacts was [HARGRAVES]. And before long this group starts talking in Miami about having the full cooperation of some Castro military types who were about to be issued a Russian Ossa patrol vessel, that kind that carries Styx missiles. They said they also had some contact with some SAM [Strategic Air Missile] site people inside Cuba with Castro Air Force artillery. And the exiles were going to use those people by putting together a simultaneous plan. First, one of the SAM's would 'accidentally' hit one of the aircraft heading into the U.S. base at Guantanamo and at the same time, the presidential compound on Bay Lane in Key Biscayne would get hit with a couple of Styx missiles. Their patrol boat would innocently be three or four miles out to sea - very easily identifiable with Cuban markings. They were going to make sure to hit the compound when NIXON was in town. Maybe they'd wait until he stepped out of his helicopter. I don't know what the coordination was. I didn't get that close to it. But my impression was that there wouldn't be any survivors in the Presidential compound. [Argosy 1976]

In a Freedom of Information Act request dated January 3, 1977, addressed to the United States Secret Service, HEMMING asked for "Reports to the Secret Service regarding a conspiracy to assault the Presidential Compound at Key Biscayne by United States and foreign nationals, including:

- a) A memorandum to the Miami Field Office of the Secret Service regarding past illegal activities on my part, which memo was sent that office by another Government Agency.
- b) Statements by the CIA that the above alleged conspiracy was 'wired in' by their agents.
- c) An attempt by U.S. Customs Officers and FBI Agents to 'burn' my informant in the presence of the conspirators.
- d) An attempt to color the participation of a Cuban P.T. boat in the conspiracy by alluding to an alleged sportive MIG Aircraft, strike at Boca Chica Naval Air Station or Homestead Air Force Base.
- e) The intrusion of local law enforcement agents into the situation.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Chief VENOM

SUBJECT: HEMMING, Gerald P. Jr. HARGRAVES, Roy Emory

2. At about 3:30 p.m. on July 21, 1970, two white males entered the Miami Secret Service office and requested to speak with a particular agent who had been transferred from the Miami Office to the San Antonio office. The two individuals were directed to Joseph Gasquez, Chief/Intelligence Unit whereupon they identified themselves as HEMMING and HARGRAVES. (Bio sheets attached)...

3. HEMMING opened the conversation with Gasquez by establishing the fact that he had cooperated with the Miami Secret Service. He considered himself an American patriot and wished to introduce HARGRAVE, who had something to report. With this, HEMMING remained quiet, without substantive comment, while HARGRAVE related the following situation.

4. HARGRAVE who has resided in the Miami Florida area in November 1969 met a local Cuban male by the name of Yvonne Vidal Santiago (no further biographical data available) during Christmas of 1969. Santiago, over an unspecified period of time, has supposedly been in contact with an unknown number of Cuban leaders who reside in the areas of Cuba which are adjacent to the United States Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay. Santiago has been able to engage these leaders in anti-Castro activities through patriotic reasons and by assuring the safe removal of their families from Cuba. This has supposedly already been accomplished and their families are now in safe areas outside Cuba.

5. Santiago's objective is the downfall of Castro and the present Cuban Government. He plans to accomplish this by training the aforementioned leaders who will cause Cuban missiles located in their areas to be fired at the United States Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, thus provoking the United States into an all out war with the Castro Government. If these leaders are unable to cause missiles toward the United States Naval Base, they will cause a conventional attack of Cuban military forces to be made against the United States Base, hoping to accomplish the same objective. The minimum result of either is expected to be a stronger and more aggressive United States policy against the Castro Government.

6. HARGRAVE further stated that Santiago has solicited his help, for patriotic reasons, to join six other local Cubans who will be infiltrated into Cuba to train and assist the aforementioned leaders. (HARGRAVE classified himself as an expert in weapons, explosives and guerilla tactics.) The six other locals have supposedly already been infiltrated into Cuba twice for this purpose.

7. HARGRAVE is to remain in Cuba until the conflict with the United States is underway, then he and the other members of the infiltration team, plus the aforementioned leaders, will be removed to the Bahamian Islands by a friendly Cuban Government patrol boat. An aircraft will be waiting in the Bahamian Islands to take these persons to a safe area of their choice. HARGRAVE explained to Gasquez that he is making the above information known because he feels Santiago has gone too far, in that such an attack on a United States military base will result in the loss of life for many United States service personnel. As an American patriot he can accept this; however, he still feels if he accompanies the infiltrators to Cuba he will be able to direct the Cuban missiles or conventional attack against Soviet missile bases in Cuban areas. Somehow he expects to accomplish the same objective, the downfall of Castro. Although his logic was reportedly never clear, he somehow expects his identity as an American to become known, and thus draw the United States into conflict with the Castro Government.

8. HARGRAVE and HEMMINGS were noticeably evasive about details and time frame when questioned by Gasquez, who made numerous attempts to explore motives regarding the presentation of this information. Both said they did not seek money or favor in exchange for the information, but rather were offering the information for patriotic reasons.

9. HARGRAVES could offer very little additional information. He did indicate that one of his first responsibilities in the operation, as directed by Santiago, was to arrange for an aircraft to be standing by in the Bahama Islands to pick up the exfiltrators from Cuba once the objective was accomplished. He gave no further details in the regard.

10. He also stated that he will not know any of the other infiltrators until they meet at the boat to leave for Cuba.

11. He mentioned that he is acquainted with a member of a local Special Forces Reserve Group where he can train until he parts.

12. HARGRAVES described Jose Duarte as a former Cuban associate whom he knew in Los Angeles. Duarte is now residing in Miami and knows who is funding Santiago's operation. His association with the operation was not made clear by HARGRAVES who mentioned in passing that he and Duarte had bombed an SDS office in Los Angeles about one year ago. For this they were arrested and later released on bail.

13. HARGRAVES, when specifically questioned by Gasquez, stated that this operation was absolutely different from any operation lead by Torrenties of the Alpha 66 group. He however inferred that many of their members may join Santiago once Santiago's operation reaches final staging.

14. When further pressed by Gasquez, HARGRAVES used Gasquez's office phone to supposedly place a call to Santiago. During this conversation Santiago reportedly they would meet that night for the final plans. (Gasquez was unable to determine the number dialed, the identity of the party called, or their conversation).

15. Gasquez termed the incident as unbelievable but ridiculous enough to maybe be true. HARGRAVES refused to be specific as to when he might leave for Cuba, but inferred that it would be very soon. He said he would phone Gasquez when he is advised of his departure date.

16. Gasquez felt either of these two persons could be approached by another agency for additional information. He further stated that his name could be used if necessary.

Charles W. Kane Special Agent in Charge.

Attached to this document were two biographic reference sheets that indicated HEMMING was staying at HARGRAVES residence in Miami and that he was employed by "AMDEC (Disaster Relief for Peru. Hired in Santa Barbara, California)." HARGRAVES was unemployed "Iron construction worker until several months ago when he injured his back." HEMMING 1995:

When we walked in on Gasquez I said I'm here to see Ernie Aragon, protective research. That gets you in the door. Aragon was a company man, CIA. He had all the ID but he hadn't gone through their school.

MEMORANDUM FOR HEADQUARTERS September 25, 1969

1. Reference is made to a Los Angeles Field Office memorandum dated September 3, 1963 requesting information on Dwight David Stephenson, Headquarters (illegible) September 11, 1969 indicating no record of Subject and LAFO memorandum dated February 5, 1969 as attached.

2. LI-8 has advised that in addition to the information previously reported that they have also developed that Subject is also involved with the Bay of Pigs Mercenaries. Subject has stated that he at one time was involved in the training a support of Castro and Guevarra in Cuba prior to their successful coup. He stated that when he discovered that Castro was a Communist he left Cuba came to the United States and became involved in the training of anti-Castro forces in Florida.

3. Subject in addition to apparently training Black Panthers in this area is in need of a pilot to operate a plane which he apparently owns. This plane is used for frequent flights into Mexico where he apparently contacts one Loran Hall and Lawrence Howard, not further identified. The reason for these flights ostensibly in that they have established a retreat base for all right wing forces in the United States should they be defeated in the impending civil war. LT-8 this group (?) with respect to these activities and additional information that they are running guns into the United States. LT-8 stated that the only background information that they have on Subject is that Subject has advised and that he is well trained in guerilla warfare. Also Subject has bragged that he has international connections in South America and that he is privy to information from many South American Intelligence Organizations.

4. LI-8 has requested if possible that appropriate internal name checks be conducted on HEMMING in order that they may be better able to assess Subject's captabilities and potentials so that they may properly monitor his activities.

William P. Curtain
Special Agent in Charge.

Memo: Dwight David Stephenson
Birth: August 30, 1922 Birmingham, Alabama

Apparently formerly involved in the training of anti-Castro Nationals for the Bay of Pig invasion and reported to be a mercenary and pilot. Roy Hargraves and Llyod Pullen are know to be members of Minutemen and other right-wing organizations and previously identified to PROJECT RESISTANCE.

Project RESISTANCE was a domestic espionage operation coordinated under the Domestic Operations Division (DOD) of the CIA. Its purpose was to collect background information on hostile contingencies around the country that might pose as threats to CIA facilities and personnel. Through 1967 to 1973, many local police departments, college campus staff members, and other independent informants collaborated with the CIA to keep track of student radical groups that opposed the U.S. government's foreign policies on Vietnam. Project RESISTANCE and its twin program, Project MERRIMAC were both coordinated by the CIA Office of Security. In addition, the twin projects were branch operations that relayed civilian information to their parent program, Operation CHAOS.

1. March 19, 1971 -- Special Agent in Charge of the Miami Field Office called to advise that a person named ROY HARGRAVES had been contacting several cable repairmen who might know the exact location of cables running from Florida to Cuba. Mr. Kane had been contacted by the Security Officer of the Southern Bell Telephone Company who reported the above information. Mr. Kane also advised that the local FBI office reported no record of HARGRAVES but that they might 'open a case on him.'

2. The attached material pertinent to ROY HARGRAVES may pertain to the ROY HARGRAVES mentioned. Mr. Ense has seen this package and has said that we should take no further action at this time unless Mr. Kane requests that we do so.

HEMMING told this researcher:

HARGRAVES injured himself in construction and got insurance settlements on three occasions. Got addicted to the pain killer, had a spinal fusion, had ruptured disks, all kinds of horseshit. He became a junkie and robbed banks, went to prison and got out. He did time twice in the 1970's and 1980's. Suffice to say the word militia is close to his heart.

A CIA Index Card read: "HEMMING, GERALD P CR 71 R518334 /Y M /B March 1, 1937, Los Angeles, Cal /D Mem July 23, 1970, PROJECT VENOM /T JR /Z 248358 (copy in file October 1977)." A United States Secret Service Miami Field Office report that covered the period from September 21, 1970, to October 13, 1970:

GERRY PATRICK HEMMING was interviewed and photographs of him taken...Reference is made to M/R of the reporting agent dated September 15, 1970. On September 30, 1970, HEMMING was again personally interviewed at the Miami Field Office by the reporting agent. He advised that HARGRAVES had left on a fishing trip to Cuba and one of the purposes of the fishing trip was to make contact with some kind of Cuban underground boat which would meet them at sea from Cuba. On September 30, 1970, HEMMING was again personally interviewed by the reporting agent at the Miami Field Office. HEMMING stated that on September 28, 1970, HARGRAVES flew in from Bimini in the Bahama Islands after he had been left off the Cuban fishing boat. HEMMING stated that the reason HARGRAVES left was because he realized that the Cubans were not intending to make any contacts, rendezvous, and had nothing to do with the anti-Castro movement. HEMMING stated HARGRAVES no longer had any intentions about involving himself with the anti-Castro movement in Miami. On October 12, 1970, HEMMING came to the Miami Field Office and advised HARGRAVES was attempting to find work in construction and he was likewise doing the same. HEMMING at that point advised that intelligence work was his hobby and that he would report any Cuban information that came to his attention to the Secret Service. On July 2 (Deleted) and HEMMING appeared in the U.S. Secret Service Office, Miami, and both were interviewed in the presence of (Deleted) and the undersigned agent. According to HEMMING, a Cuban exile leader, (Deleted) had proposed a plan to assist some defectors composed of Russian and Cuban officers stationed in the Western end of Cuba to be taken out of Cuba. (Deleted) and GERALD HEMMING advised the trip would be in the near future, but at this time they did not have any solid plans for departure. The reporting agent advised since this was not in the jurisdiction of the United States Secret Service, it would be reported to the proper agency. (Deleted) and HEMMING left after they promised to advise the reporting agent exactly what time the boat would leave. (Deleted). HEMMING did not contact the Secret Service until approximately 8:00 p.m. on August 27, 1970. At this time HEMMING telephoned (Deleted) and advised that no date had been set concerning the boat trip, but he added it would be soon. On August 28, 1970, HEMMING came to the Miami Field Office and was interviewed by (Deleted). According to HEMMING, no date had been set regarding the trip as of this date. On August 31, 1970, the reporting agent personally interviewed HEMMING at the Miami Field Office in the presence of (Deleted). At this time, because of certain statements regarding Key Biscayne and the strafing of Boca Chica Air Station and Homestead Air Force Base, the reporting agent asked HEMMING about these statements made (Deleted). According to HEMMING, the strafing and shots fired at Key Biscayne were not true, and probably had been put out by the Cubans to find out exactly who might be an informant in their organization. This is a summation made by HEMMING regarding these acts against Key Biscayne and Boca Chica Air Station. HEMMING advised that as of this date no set date for HARGRAVES departure had been made by the Cubans. On September 10, 1970, HEMMING was personally interviewed at the Miami Secret Service office. According to HEMMING, HARGRAVES was either departing that evening, or the following evening, for Cuba. According to HEMMING, HARGRAVES was now under the control of the Cubans and would not be able to leave the Cubans until the time of their departure for Cuba. According to HEMMING, HARGRAVES and the Cubans were departing to Cuba without weapons, ostensibly on a fishing trip, in order to make contact to determine of plans of defection could be carried out in Cuba. (Deleted).

In 1970 HEMMING said he visited Peru after the earthquake there and made contact with the Peruvian President. This contact was made at the Presidential Palace which was the operations center for relief. HEMMING told this researcher: "Colonel Muldoon, who worked for Werbell, was the guy in charge of the operation. Robert K. Brown brought the second team down. We got support from NIXON'S people for the PERUVIAN OPERATION. Pawley talked to NIXON on the phone while I was sitting in his Miami office." HEMMING worked for Soldier-of-Fortune magazine as a leader of the Airborne Paramedics, the Department of Community Affairs of the Los Angeles Police Department, and the Los Angeles Sheriff's Office (under Sergeant Burger).

HEMMING: 1971 TO 1975

By 1971 HEMMING claimed he was in contact with the Drug Enforcement Administration/Special Operations Group in Mexico. HEMMING said he visited Mexico, spoke with government level contacts, and studied "narcotics activities and their relationship to communist guerrilla groups." STURGIS told Andrew St. George that he was engaged in similar activities. In Andrew St. George's outline for a STURGIS biography, STURGIS asserted that he "worked for months under HUNT'S direction in an undercover investigation of alleged illicit drug traffic in Mexico..." [NYT 1.14.73] HEMMING told this researcher:

In 1971 we were delivering weapons to the Mexican Judicial Police to take out Luchiano, the guerilla leader in the States of Moralos and Guerro. And he was taken out with MAC-10's and silencers. In 1972 we dealt with death squads in Guatemala, Nicaragua and El Salvadore for Parabellum. Supplying the death squad with weaponry so we can be friends with them. 1971 - 1975.

HEMMING wrote:

During February 1972 I formalized business relationships with Parabellum Corporation of Miami, Florida, and participated in executive protection of foreign government VIP's, and special weapons demonstration for President Congress of Deputies of Republic of Guatemala, in Miami area. VIP's were en route to Guatemala from Washington, D.C. after extensive briefings at Langley and Pentagon. During February and March 1972, while traveling within Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua, I was able to penetrate a conspiracy to assassinate Chief Executive, Republic of Panama. Conspirators were active and/or former Ministers of Government, Republics of Guatemala, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica. During first week of March 1972 I had been accepted within this group of conspirators as a decision making advisor and was able to thwart aims and divert much of planning toward less lethal ends. During March 1972 I established liaison with JOHN MARTINO who introduced me to Cokie Zimeri. Zimeri assessed as senior government and paramilitary assassin in Guatemala and El Salvador. Zimeri was found to possess serious potential capabilities relating to terrorist employment of standard and special weapons, including Chemical, Biological and Radiological systems. Zimeri is of Palestinian descent and speaks Syrian dialect of Arabic fluently on daily basis. During May 1972 I returned to Miami area. Principal leader of conspiracy was assassinated in Guatemala City shortly afterward. Period ending December 1972 involved extensive follow-up activity relating to foreign government level contacts with official from Mexico. Reference all republics in Central America as well as Panama, Ecuador and Colombia with no foreign travel outside of Continental United States required.

HEMMING gave me a brochure in which the offices of Parabellum in Miami was listed as being located at 290 S.W. 8th Street, Suite 305, Miami, Florida. This was where HEMMING's private detective agency was located.

THE DEATH OF OLIVERIO CASTANIEDA JUNE 1972

Shortly after Watergate, Oliverio Castanieda Paiz, the First Vice President of the Congress of Guatemala, was killed in Guatemala City. According to HEMMING:

He was the guy that headed up the plot to kill Torrijos in 1972 working with the plumbers.

Oliverio Castanieda Paiz was an ambitious 34-year-old former leftist who had been trained in guerrilla tactics in Cuba in the early 1960's. On June 26, 1972, Oliverio Castanieda Paiz attended the birthday party of his daughter at a Guatemala City restaurant. Bodyguards armed with pistols and machine guns normally accompanied Oliverio Castanieda Paiz, but that night they were nowhere to be found. Shortly before midnight, two men walked into the restaurant. One of them drew a pistol and fired once into Oliverio Castanieda Paiz heart and then into his neck. The victim slumped over, dead, and the two shooters walked quickly out of the restaurant, then drove off in a car. No arrests were made. [NYT 7.13.72 p9, 6.27.72 p43, 6.18.72 p11] In HEMMING'S Motion For Production of Favorable Evidence he asked for

All reports, files, and memorandums held by the CIA, FBI and Department of State that refer to defendant's alleged connection with a conspiracy to assassinate the then President of Costa Rica, the Honorable Jose Figures, allegedly directed by the late Oliverio Castanieda Paiz and other members of the Guatemalan Government during the calendar year 1972, especially those that might be titled OPERATION CACTUS, OPERATION COYOTE and/or OPERATION BAMBU.

During spring 1974 I was approached by United States and foreign nationals seeking assistance relating to their ongoing marijuana smuggling operations from Colombia to United States. Two individuals had in previous years a one time association with CIA during the Cuba project and anticipated capitalizing on this experience combined with planned involvement of long time agency assets that reside in Central and South American Republics. I was introduced initially by Drug Enforcement Administration asset Jerry Buchanan who soon severed his relationship with Subjects. I was also able to rapidly accomplish following:

- a. Co-opted completely the entire Columbia-United States planned operations of this (Ken Burnstine).
- b. Traveled to Georgia for briefing with Mitch Werbell reference future operations.
- c. During September 1974 traveled extensively through Central and South America and Colombia for meetings with marijuana brokers and growers with mid-level capacities of Colombia-United States marijuana tonnage. Visited areas under cultivation and met with military commander involved in security use of landing and take off rights at joint civilian-military airport designated as primary entry-departure point for aircraft utilized on smuggling route.

d. Organized team of aviation-paramilitary qualified individuals with previous experience as DEA-CIA assets or law enforcement positions in Florida and Colorado areas.

e. Successfully engineered successive delays and total failure of first flight operation to Colombia which caused two month delay of activity by Burnstine's group which caused group to terminate relationship with me.

f. Simultaneous with operations with Burnstine's group I was approached by Burnstine for assistance in locating suitable ship's captain for marijuana smuggling operations from Colombia to eastern Bahamas. I contacted former CIA contract employee CQ/MAPLE a licensed ship captain with Agency experience in Caribbean and Congo areas, but not a Drug Enforcement Administration asset. CQ/MAPLE declined participation due to personalities maximum risk nature of the operation. No backstop available to support CQ/MAPLE.

HEMMING: DEA INFORMANT: MAY 1975

The CIA: "The most recent incident wherein HEMMING claimed Agency affiliation was in May 1975 when he volunteered his services to the Drug Enforcement Administration. HEMMING is a long time cohort of FRANK STURGIS of Watergate fame, who also has a long time record of falsely claiming Agency affiliation." The CIA reported that "The Internal Revenue Service and U.S. Civil Service Commission conducted name checks regarding GERALD HEMMING in May 1975 and June 1967, respectively." [CIA undated MFR] On May 23, 1975, HEMMING visited the Drug Enforcement Administration in Washington, D.C., and asked to see Lucian Conein

...who is the Acting Chief, Special Operations and Field Support Staff. HEMMING told Lucian Conein that Mitch Werbell had given him his name as a DEA official to whom HEMMING could talk. HEMMING told Lucian Conein he wanted to provide information on drug trafficking between Colombia and Florida. Lucian Conein asked S.A. Hughes, a CIA employee, to conduct a debriefing of HEMMING. S.A. Hughes was working on the collection of narcotics intelligence concerning Colombia and Florida. HEMMING stated that he is presently employed at Tecpole Security, 801 Madrid, Coral Gables, Florida, 305-443-9681. (HEMMING stated he believed this number was being tapped, he did not say who he believed was tapping the telephone)...In August 1974 HEMMING was approached by Armando Bolet, a Cuban veteran of the 2506 Brigade whom HEMMING had worked with in anti-Castro activities and by John Varese to help them organize and run air smuggling operations for Thomas and William O'Donnel. The O'Donnel brothers, using the cover of their construction firm in the Fort Lauderdale area (American Eastern Development) were involved in the maritime smuggling of marijuana from Colombia to Florida. During an unspecified four years (probably 1970 to 1974) the O'Donnels had averaged approximately six to seven loads of marijuana per year at three to four tons for each load coming into Miami. Of these 24 to 28 loads of marijuana they had to jettison only five loads into the sea for security reasons. The rest of the loads had been successfully delivered into Florida. The source of the marijuana in Colombia is Dr. Arturo Romano-Fedullo of Barranquilla, Colombia. Besides running the smuggling for Romano, William O'Donnel handles the laundering of the money accumulated by drug trafficking through banks in the Grand Cayman, Switzerland and Curacao. Armando Bolet convinced the O'Donnels that they should add air smuggling to their narcotic trafficking methods, and that they should also try cocaine in addition to marijuana. Bolet told O'Donnel that there were many experienced men available in Florida who could be used to smuggle drugs into Florida by air. Bolet was especially interested in cargo parachute drops, and parachute jumps by individuals carrying loads of cocaine. Bolet recruited HEMMING to help organize the activities. A common technique used by Bolet and HEMMING was to fly an aircraft into Florida legally, but to have a parachutist fly onto a pre-selected drop zone in southern Florida prior to landing the aircraft. This way, police never found any contraband on the aircraft and the dropped narcotics would not be lost because the parachuter carried them on his person. If he missed the drop zone he could simply fold up the parachute and walk to the location of the reception committee. Bolet uses a DC-3 tail number N1099 in his smuggling operations. HEMMING had a falling out with the O'Donnell group and decided to leave them. He is now associated with Carlos Caraballo who operates a charter fishing business and traffics in drugs. HEMMING decided to inform on O'Donnel for revenge and in order to try to eliminate the competition..." [Operational Contact Report Project Title EMBRYO 5.23.75]

HEMMING told this researcher:

What his this got to do with JFK? How did they get the authority to release this shit? They were never touched, they were all company. Very wealthy people. Carlos Caraballo is an importer-exporter. O'Donnell and Thomas, they're all international land developers. They have part of Paradise Island over in Nassau. Varese has a yacht over at Fort Everglades.

HEMMING: JUNE 1975: PLOT TO KILL PRESIDENT LAUGERUD

On June 22, 1976, the CIA reported that Robert and GERRY HEMMING were involved in a plot to kill Guatemalan President Kjell Eugenio Laugerud Garcia of Guatemala on behalf of Jorge Antonio 'Cokie' Zimeri Safie (201-35422).

1. (Deleted) passed station written report and made verbal report in detail, all with knowledge of President Laugerud, ref A case and results. According to report and (Deleted)-68 National Liberation Movement (MLN) was involved with 'Cokie' Zimeri, who has been living in Miami since August 1975 in plot to assassinate Laugerud. Plot was to have been carried out September 15, 1975, but Zimeri was the victim of attack on his life late August 1975, and, as a result, went to Miami for medical treatment. Report and (Deleted)-68 claim that two Americans, brothers

Robert and GERALD PATRICK HEMMING (No Station Traces) were also involved with Zimeri in plot, and that they assisted him in acquiring arms, among other things, which were flown to Guatemala illegally in small aircraft. Report ends with five requests by Laugerud as follows:

A. Is Zimeri still in the United States?

B. Does Zimeri receive any kind of preferential treatment by U.S. authorities which permits him to carry firearms, as well as to purchase arms and ammunition for shipment to Guatemala. The report also claims that Zimeri has close relations with police officials in Miami and New Orleans.

C. Is Zimeri recruiting mercenaries in the United States for possible use in Guatemala?

D. Any information on Robert and GERALD HEMMING?

E. In event Zimeri not in States legally, the request he be deported to Guatemala. (Deleted)-68 says he left Guatemala illegally, but arrived in the States legally, but Government of Guatemala thinks his visa has expired and he there illegally.

2. Station plans dissemination info on Zimeri case, but without mentioning HEMMING by name. Plan prepare memo for Charge and RSO and will suggest that latter attempt answer questions for President Kjell Eugenio Laugerud Garcia.

3. (Deleted) EW-4 also reported 7 June in some detail on solution of Novella kidnapping case (Ref. 8). There political implications in this case also so we disseminating (deleted)-68 claims there American possibly involved this case, one Frank Buck (probably identical to subject of 201-0819515 a registered DEA SOURCE who claims be a doctor but does not practice here. He allegedly lover of sister of intellectual author of Novella Kidnapping Plan, Jorge Alfonso Lobo Dubon, also involved. (Deleted)-68 has requested whatever we might have on buck. Station plans include that name also in memo to charge and RSO but will omit from dissemination.

4. For (Deleted) one source of info on Zimeri case may well have been (Deleted) DEW-1. Saw later by accident on June 8, 1975. He did not mention names but described one as about six feet four inches and weighing about 230 pounds. (Deleted) DEW-1 plans to return Miami within two weeks since in over two years here he has been unable to find job with sufficient salary permit him to live comfortably.

THE PLOT TO ASSASSINATE COLONEL CESAR QUINTEROS

The CIA reported:

Secret 241726Z CIA 246074

To: FBI

Attention: Criminal Intelligence Division.

Secret. Warning Notice -- SENSITIVE INTELLIGENCE SOURCES AND METHODS INVOLVED - Not releasable to foreign nationals.

CIR-316-01395-78

Subject: Alleged Plot to Assassinate Colonel Cesar Quinteros, Chief of Guatemalan Security.

1. On June 23, 1975, Colonel Cesar Quinteros, Chief of Guatemalan Security, was provided with the reference B excerpt of information on the alleged plot to assassinate Quinteros which was reported to this Agency in Ref A.
2. Colonel Cesar Quinteros had not been previously aware of the plot against him, but speculated that if there is substance to the reported plot, Zimeri, now in Federal Custody in Miami, Florida, could be involved. Quinteros had been involved in the Zimeri case by providing documentation required for the extradition of Zimeri from Guatemala to the United States.
3. Should his hypothesis that Zimeri is involved be correct, Quinteros said he believed that Bob or GERRY HEMMING, brothers, believed by Quinteros to be living in either Miami or Fort Lauderdale, would be directly involved. According to Quinteros, one of the brothers (he could not remember which) had lived in Guatemala from 1972 to 1974, and on one occasion had assisted Zimeri by piloting the aircraft used by the latter to escape Guatemala.
4. Colonel requested that he be advised whether the HEMMING brothers are currently in Florida. If they cannot be accounted for, Quinteros is of the opinion that one or both brothers will be involved in the plot to kill him.
5. This Agency requests any information which may be developed on the present whereabouts of the HEMMING brothers which may be appropriate for passage to Quinteros. [CIA 1994 rel. CIR-316-01395-78]

HEMMING told this researcher in 1994:

After they shot up Cokie Zimeri in September 1975 I brought him out, and he recovered in the States. He had been the palace assassin for Laugerud. My brother and Zimeri were real close to President Laugerud's son. And they were involved in some hits, including a hit against the U.S. Embassy. Zimeri was plotting to kill Laugerud's son, who was a heroin courier using his diplomatic pouch. We were trying to lock the son-of-a-bitch up. Laugerud was in Miami Beach during my trial. Cokie wanted the opportunity to blow President Laugerud's fuckass away. You got guerilla operations in the country and its about to fall to communism. They are going to accuse me of trying to assassinate him?

HEMMING 1995:

Cokie Zimeri, the palace assassin, had a falling out with President Laugerud. Laugerud's son, Shelito, was running around throwing hand grenades and shooting at people. Cokie and the old man didn't like it because the kid got wounded by a German grenade in the streets, with my brother, out on an operation. Cokie's not one to take a lot of shit, plus he had enemies in the palace military, mostly intelligence assholes. So they tried to do a hit on him and President wouldn't believe it, so he had a confrontation with the President and the President Laugerud was embarrassed that he had been bullshited. In Cokie's book that's when you kill people, but Laugerud would discipline them, just send them out of the country, Spain or somewhere. That pissed Cokie off because Cokie's a bit of a psychopath and he had (?). Plus, he's very wealthy, his family they're Palestinians. They're personal friends with Arafat and Qaddafi, world travelers, they owned banks here in Miami. At that time they were worth 80 or 90 million. They did a major hit on Cokie a couple of days after my brother left. My brother was living with him as a bodyguard and all that shit in 1975. He's driving and his hands were shot up so bad because he's trying to drive with his elbows. And he can't see out the windshield because its covered with blood. But he turns on the windshield wiper and says it didn't work worth a shit, cause the blood was squirting out of his chest on the inside. Arrangements were made, I flew down there, things happened, he was taken to El Salvador to recuperate.

Zimeri lived in El Salvador, after serving a sentence for illegal possession of a weapon in the United States in the early 70s. He was then deported to Guatemala in September of 1973, to answer for a crime. He was released in 1975 and remained between El Salvador and Guatemala, where, in the 80s, enjoyed influence among politicians, officials and police authorities. The investigations of Zimeri began with the discovery of the bodies of five people inside a vehicle, the previous November 20, 1998 located in Las Charcas, Guatemala. The multiple murders were linked to Jorge Antonio Zimeri Safie. The vehicle where the bodies were found was in the name of the Guatemalan Carlos Federico Fuentes, but police said the vehicle had been stolen in El Salvador. In the midst of the investigation, authorities raided the neighboring country at least about 10 Safie Zimeri owned dwellings, where they found documents indicating that the suspect was planning an attack on the embassy of the United States in Guatemala. In between these raids, is also located a large arsenal of weapons and stolen vehicles. Among the seized weapons were also found handguns that belonged to two of the victims gunned down. The arsenal consisted of about a hundred arms of different types, among others AK-47 and G3 rifles, M-16 machine guns, grenade launchers, Claymore mines, grenades, dynamite, mortars and 1.5 million munitions.

JERROLD G. BROWN'S ANALYSIS

On June 11, 1976, Jerrold G. Brown of the CIA wrote this memorandum:

1. On June 9, 1969, "Dan" of the DDO contacted Staff and Operations Branch, Operational Evaluation Section for information concerning GERALD PATRICK HEMMING. "Dan" was referred to the writer, who is holding the HEMMING file. When "Dan" contacted the writer, "Dan" advised that he is the action officer for a cable from (Deleted) reporting on an assassination plot on the life of President Laugerud of Guatemala. "Dan" was unfamiliar with the case of GERALD PATRICK HEMMING and had not yet reviewed the 201 file on HEMMING. "Dan" was requested to alert CI STAFF and JMWAVE to the below-mentioned cable, and to provide the writer with a copy of the report coming in from (Deleted).
2. "Dan" provided the writer with a copy of the cable (IN 944357, Cite (Deleted) 19536 dated June 8, 1976, which is attached. In substance the cable reflects that circa June 8, 1976, a Guatemalan source, (Deleted) provided (Deleted) a written report, and a detailed briefing, concerning a plot to assassinate President Laugerud. According to the information the plot was to be carried out on September 15, 1975; however, one of the major conspirators, Jorge Antonio 'Cokie' Zimeri Safie left Guatemala in August 1975 as a result of an attack upon his, Zimeri's, life. Zimeri has been living in Miami since August 1975.
3. According to the report, the National Liberation Movement was involved with Zimeri in the assassination plot, and Zimeri in turn was involved with two Americans, brothers, Robert and GERALD PATRICK HEMMING. The HEMMING brothers assisted Zimeri in acquiring arms, among other things, which were flown to Guatemala in a small aircraft. The report also claims that Zimeri has close relations with police officials in Miami and New Orleans.

NOTE: The (Deleted) also included information (Deleted) had received from (Deleted) DEW-1 on June 8. (Deleted) DEW-1 said that he had been providing information to Zimeri to the Guatemalan Government for the past six months or so. He claimed that two Americans were involved with Zimeri, one of them runs a guard service in Miami. (Deleted) DEW-1 did not mention names, but described one of the Americans as about six feet four inches and weighing about 230 pounds.

4. The Guatemalan report on the assassination plot ended with five requests for information by President LAUGERUD:

a. Is Zimeri still in the United States?

b. In the event ZIMERI is not in the United States legally, deport him to Guatemala.

c. Is Zimeri recruiting mercenaries in the United States for possible use in Guatemala?

d. Does Zimeri receive any kind of preferential treatment by U.S. authorities which permit him to carry firearms, as well as to purchase arms and ammunition for shipment to Guatemala?

e. Any information on Robert and GERALD HEMMING?

5. On June 19, 1976, "Dan" of (deleted) advised that DDO is referring the entire matter to the FBI and State Department.

6. Office of Security indices are negative in pertinent variations of the name of Zimeri or Robert Hemming.

7. From the name, physical description, activity and alleged employment, it is apparent that GERALD PATRICK HEMMING is identical with the Subject of Office of Security file 429 229, who had been described as six-foot five, 250 pounds, who is a notorious mercenary and soldier-of-fortune and who as of May 1975 was ostensibly employed by a private investigation company, TEPCOL Security (Office of Security -- no record) in Miami, Florida.

8. GERALD PATRICK HEMMING is well known to this Agency, the Office of Security Miami Field Office, and JMWAVE. On numerous occasions since at least the early 1960's HEMMING has claimed Agency affiliation when in fact there has been none.

9. For an appreciation of the possible ramifications of a Guatemalan Government expose of this assassination plot involving HEMMING, you are referred to attachments to instant memorandum, to wit: a memorandum by the writer dated June 10, 1975, in the name of FRANK STURGIS and EVERETTE HOWARD HUNT JR.; and an extract from a book published in early 1976 written by Michael Canfield and Alan J. Weberman. The book, Coup D'Etat in America - The CIA and the Assassination of John F. Kennedy, is a diatribe against the Agency and attempts to link the Agency with the assassination of President Kennedy. One of the major links attempted by the authors is thought to be HUNT to STURGIS to HEMMING to Loran Hall. Loran Hall was a member of HEMMING'S INTERPEN. Loran Hall received nationwide publicity in 1967 when New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison alleged that Loran Hall and INTERPEN was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy and that members of this unit were connected with the CIA. Jim Garrison shortly thereafter dropped his interest in Loran Hall, but it is interesting that he did so after HEMMING and another cohort, Robert K. Brown, joined Garrison's investigation.

[CIA D001212 Jerrold G. Brown 6.11.76]

HEMMING told this researcher:

They hauled my ass before a grand jury. Gave me immunity. They wanted to railroad Cokie's ass back to a fucking death cell. They said he kidnapped a broad, murdered a police agent, all this horseshit, while trying to kill the President.

The CIA made sure that the press did not find out about HEMMING'S assassination plot against the President of Guatemala because it would have lent credence to my charges that HEMMING had been involved in other coups, most notably the one that took place in Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963. This is an indication that the CIA has sought to suppress the work of this researcher.

HEMMING'S ARRESTS: JULY 1976

HEMMING was indicated for conspiracy to import marijuana and cocaine in July 1976. On August 23, 1976, when he appeared at the marijuana smuggling trial of Mitch Werbell, HEMMING was arrested. [USDC Miami 76-71-Cr-CA] His codefendants were Benjamin Franklin Thomas, Joseph Thomas Oliveti and Jacob Cochran. In October 1976 the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms charged HEMMING with the illegal transfer of a silencer. Assistant United States Attorney Robert Rust, HEMMING'S former attorney, handled the prosecution. HEMMING told this researcher:

I was sitting in a bar drinking a beer listening to two Drug Enforcement Administration agents talk to someone who was trying to sell them a pre-World II airplane. The guy who set me up, Thomas Benton, [a friend of HEMMING'S sister-in-law] had been popped in the Bahamas. I did the guy a favor by running the plane up every weekend to keep the engines in shape. He wants my brother to get his car and transfer an item from one trunk to another. At another meeting they showed me a bankbook with a $600,000 balance.

HEMMING'S codefendant, Joseph Olivetti, was an associate of Thomas Holt. Joseph Olivetti was murdered by his brother. HEMMING represented himself at his trial. HEMMING'S trial was severed from that of his codefendants. Before going to trial, HEMMING filed a Motion for Favorable Evidence, alleging that certain Warren Commission documents would vindicate him:

Copies of all files both classified and unclassified now held in the National Archives, Washington, D.C. included within those documents known as the Warren Commission Report on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy, especially documents 759 through and including 784.

HEMMING told this researcher:

Why do I want the Warren Commission stuff? I'll explain why I want it in open Court. That's what they're gonna find out. All of a sudden they're accusing me of conspiracy to import marijuana and cocaine. Hey, what about all the other things I've been into for the last 15 years, let's talk about them. Let's talk about the Martin Luther King thing, let's talk about Don Freed, Le Coubre, nigger-killers in bed with the mafia, and the mafia in bed with the FBI, and the goddamn CIA in bed with all of them. Let's talk about all the people I dirtied up for them over the years. They say I'm crazy for defending myself, shit, I ain't even sure of that anymore when I hang around with people like you, WEBERMAN.

If I represent myself I got me a long opening argument and a long summation. A lawyer wouldn't go near it. Then, spontaneously, I may erupt into something akin to measles. They don't know if you're bluffing or what the story is. Well, they would never be allowed to know. Bob Rust, the U.S. Attorney here was defending our fucking boys back in 1963. He knows me better. The big thing is not who did what, but how many goddamned people could be doing it this week again in collusion with the FBI, in collusion with the CIA? These are federal agents who are paid to advise Secret Service, they are paid to do their job in the country and instead they got into bed with nigger-killers, they got into bed with Jew killers, they got into bed with the Heinrich Himmler cocksuckers, and that ain't done in this country. They've been doing it for too goddamn long and a fagot like J. Edgar Hoover let them get away with that shit. A.J. you write a book like Coup and Jesus Christ, everybody's saying you are telling these people you are after them. Them guys don't give a shit -they're pros - they ain't gonna get caught. You gotta take out their colleagues, you got to expose the goddamn system that allows guys like that to get away with it. I can get on the goddamn phone and have six contracts out in 15 minutes on Jesus Christ himself. Right now. Cause its out there. This country is run like a goddamned Banana Republic.

HEMMING 1994:

What's the secret hand behind this bullshit? Is someone trying to put us under pressure so we'll spill the beans on these Kennedy dicksuckers? Have we been targeted because we're nasty motherfuckers and probably had something to do with killing him? They were purging the cowboys.

A DEA agent who worked for the CIA filled out an Outside Activity Approval Request on January 7, 1977:

I was advised by my supervisor that she had been telephonically contacted by a Mr. Fredricks of the DEA in Miami and told that DEA wants me to travel to Miami to attend a pre-trial conference on Monday January 10, 1977, in order to prepare for possible appearance as a witness for the DEA against GERALD PATRICK HEMMING...In engaging in requested activity, I will make no reference to, or discuss, my CIA assignments or duties. I (will, will not) be identified as employed by CIA for the following reasons: I was a CIA employee from January 1969 to May 1974 prior to transferring to the DEA. I was under cover at that time. I have not yet been put under cover ever since my new FOD (January 3, 1977) (Deleted) Security approval has been granted for the activity contemplated by this request. Robert L. Morris Jr. Chief, Security Support Division.

On January 19, 1977, the CIA generated this Routing Slip: "To: OS/OSB 4E-27, AC/SSD. C/SSD From LA/SEC. For your retention or passage to anyone in the Office of Security who might have an interest in attachment." [FOIA #81-0351 D0538] On January 24, 1977, DC/SSD sent an Official CIA Routing Slip to C/OSB and to Lynch file. "Remarks: Please note page 6 on ex-CIA types now with DEA 0- is (Deleted) one of the guys we talked to on Lou Conein? Who is (Deleted) soon to return to us??" On January 26, 1977, a Official CIA Routing Slip was sent to C/ OSB, DC/SSD, C/SA6 Reardon. From (Deleted).

GREYMAIL AND NT/STRONGBOX

HEMMING attempted to greymail the government into dropping the conspiracy charges against him. When Lucian Conein had a heart attack, HEMMING visited him in the V.A. hospital, and asked him if he was burning Mitch Werbell. HEMMING said Lucian Conein had no knowledge of his indictment. HEMMING prepared a document in which he called himself NT/STRONGBOX and gave it to Lucian Conein at the airport. HEMMING used comical cryptonyms in this report. STURGIS was QM/TURGID, MARTINO was QM/RAFT (he looked like George Raft), Zimeri was QJ/ZIPPER and was described as "a senior government and paramilitary assassin in Guatemala and El Salvador." HEMMING offered to furnish a list of people involved in the Kennedy assassination. I was a conduit for HEMMING'S greymail. HEMMING leaked information that was transmitted to Gaeton Fonzi. Then the CIA would get HSCA requests on Subjects such as DAVID CHRIST. When HEMMING obtained his Freedom of Information / Privacy Act CIA file it contained several chapters from Coup D'Etat In America. The CIA commented:

That there was a book excerpt in HEMMING'S file is not surprising. There are thousands of newspaper clippings from hundreds of papers in our files as well...neither would there necessarily be a memo regarding the insertion of any information in a file. There would also be no official CIA reaction to your book. The CIA neither confirms nor denies the accuracy of anything stated in such publications. [CIA ltr. Gene Wilson to WEBERMAN 7.8.77]

HEMMING:

The agency take you seriously? You couldn't find your ass with both hands! You're not at the top of the list of threats to these people. I think you're the only comedy in their lives.

BELL MORTGAGE

HEMMING wrote that in early 1975 he was "hired as an investigator by a Jacksonville, Florida, attorney whose clients filed suit against the CIA alleging CIA Agent, (past and present) involvement in an interstate mortgage fraud (4.5 million dollars) conspiracy with undertones of cocaine smuggling." This case involved Cuban businessmen (Andres Castro) who had previously been asked to set up a CIA proprietary called Bell Mortgage. The proprietary went bankrupt, and the exiles sued the CIA for the money they had lost. Before they sued, they were warned by their Case Officer: "If we can get rid of a President, we can get rid of you." The CIA admitted that the man who made this threat, (According to HEMMING, Antonio Ingleses) was associated with the Miami CIA Station. [75-515-Civil USDC SDF; undated art. Wash Post. by Bill McAllister "D.C. Fraud Figure Jailed In Fla. Case"] HEMMING told this researcher:

Ingleses was in the Congo and on the team to get Ché. They worked with the Villaverde brothers. Richardo Morales brought out Technical Services Division viral material [swine flu] and transferred it to the Villaverdes.

HEMMING: NOVEMBER 22, 1977

When HEMMING supplied the DEA with information on May 23, 1975, the DEA official he spoke with was either an employee of the CIA. This man was a witness against HEMMING:

3. During the afternoon of 7 January 1977 I conferred with Mr. Hix who advised me to contact the Office of the General Counsel. I talked to Mr. Edmund Cohen who advised me to get in touch with the Office of Security, External Activities Branch (OS/EAB). I completed an Outside Activity Approval Request (Form 879), obtained the concurrence of DC/SE (deleted) and submitted the Form 879 to OS/EAB. OS/EAB sent me to Central Cover Staff (Nr. Blandford) and then to the Office of the General Counsel. After discussions with Mr. Cohen, I called S/A Fredericks in Miami at Mr. Cohen's suggestion. S/A Fredericks was not available. Mr. Cohen then advised me to return to my office and he would contact me with further instructions. Mr. Cohen retained the Form 879. Subsequently, Mr. Cohen advised me that I should travel to Miami as requested and that CIA would reimburse me for expenses connected with my activities in behalf of the U.S. Government. He further advised me that being in an overt cover status I should state, if asked under oath, that I am currently a CIA employee.

4. On January 10, 1977, I traveled to Miami where I met and conferred with Assistant United States Attorney Karen Atkinson and DEA S.A. Robert Fredericks. They informed me that GERALD PATRICK HEMMING'S case had been severed, and his trial would not begin on January 11, 1977. AUSA Atkinson told me she wanted me as a rebuttal witness of GERALD PATRICK HEMMING after he presented the defense that he was working at the direction of the DEA. She said they would not call me until, and unless, that defense was presented. She also said that she felt that any attempt to question me concerning my current place of employment was irrelevant, and she would object to any such line of questioning. She said she would only ask me where I was employed at the time I interviewed HEMMING. I returned to Washington the same day. (Deleted). [Memo Chief SE DIV From Deleted SE/X/LA 1.11.77]

HEMMING'S codefendants were all convicted of importing marijuana, and on November 22, 1977, HEMMING was convicted by a Miami jury of conspiracy to import marijuana. In the spring of 1978 HEMMING was sentenced to six months in prison by U.S. District Judge William M. Hoeveler. HEMMING was released on appeal bond and the conviction was later overturned. In May 1978, HEMMING was questioned by the HSCA in Miami. HEMMING told this researcher:

They were avoiding issues. They had no information on me at all. Less than Garrison. Didn't know shit from Shinola.

HEMMING: 1980

HEMMING told this researcher:

The Agency has helped me out continuously. I had a stand off with a SWAT team in February 1980. They came to evict me in Opa Locka. I was in a goddamned state of depression. I had my house surrounded by cops and the whole goddamn thing. T.V. cameras. It was quashed. No publicity. Two days later I'm working a counter-terrorism investigation. I get expenses, salary, an office. I stuck a shotgun in these people's face [HEMMING'S family] and held hostages. They tried to bring that up in my state trial and the judge didn't permit it. There's a reference to it, but that's where it ended. Somebody called a company lawyer.

HEMMING'S SECOND ARREST APRIL 1980

In April 1980 a mechanic working on HEMMING'S plane noticed a cargo of marijuana and Quaaludes aboard. On April 14, 1980, HEMMING was arrested and charged with drug trafficking. He was held on $200,000 bond in Palm Beach County. He claimed that he had not smuggled Quaaludes, but was establishing his bona fides with drug traffickers so he could penetrate their networks. HEMMING told this researcher:

The cops would have let me go if I gave them the load, but I couldn't let the ludes hit the streets. I was working for the fucking Drug Enforcement Administration/FBI South Florida Task Force through Werbell who worked for Lucian Conein. The Task Force wanted to come forward, but I didn't want them to. I wanted it dropped real quietly. Czukas got involved. He puts two and two together after talking to my two guys. He figures one of them was my co-pilot. He drives them to Palm Beach and presents them to the State's Attorney. Now they can prove the case because they have the guy who was in the plane with me who they didn't have before.

It was suggested to HEMMING that the purpose of his smuggling activity was to become rich by using his infiltration and exfiltration skills. HEMMING told this researcher: "You do it better than they do. They can't even keep a straight face when they're doing it." HEMMING expected the case to be transferred to Federal Court because the crime involved smuggling. HEMMING was convicted on drug charges. He was sentenced to 35 years in prison with a minimum mandatory sentence of three years.

HEMMING: PRISON 1981 TO 1989

HEMMING told this researcher:

I spent eight years on the chain gang with serial killers. They shipped me out of Avon Park Air Force Base to 'the rock,' the main housing unit modeled after the same plans as Alcatraz, built in 1917. Shipped there to die, it's a death camp. Lot of killings, lot of blood. This is the South, man. I lived with multiple killers. Two months after I was there, guards were being killed. You go to sleep and close your fucking eyes and you're wondering if you're gonna wake. You always have that in the back of your mind. I was assigned to the Fire Department in 1988 and lived outside prison walls.

When the CIA released OSWALD'S pre-assassination file in 1993, it included an article about HEMMING. In 1982 HEMMING was transferred to the Avon Park Correctional Institution. In 1987 HEMMING was at Raiford: "As you may note from my return address, I am assigned to the UCI Fire Department which means I live outside the prison walls, right next door." HEMMING was involved in the production of the movie, JFK. Then he was a consultant to Conner Air, a small cargo airline in Fort Lauderdale that was at odds with the DEA. [Miami New Times 6.30.93] After the owner of the airline, Gus Conner, died of a heart attack, HEMMING lost his position there. HEMMING had a mild heart attack in February 1996. I sent him $300 for heart medicine. Gerald Patrick Hemming died in his North Carolina home on January 29, 2008. May G-d have mercy on his soul.

WERBELL POST COUP

THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

In 1964 Mitch Werbell traveled to the Dominican Republic to aid the CIA in its efforts to prevent President Juan Bosch from reassuming office after the military junta that overthrew him in 1963 was itself overthrown. When these and similar efforts failed, the 81st Airborne Division of the U.S. Army, commanded by Mitch Werbell's associate, Colonel Robert Bayard, invaded the Dominican Republic in 1965. Robert Bayard had worked with the United Nations Peace Keeping Force and had pioneered the use of night-vision goggles in Vietnam. Soon, efforts to reinstall Juan Bosch were crushed, and a CIA puppet government installed.

MITCH WERBELL AND JOSE RICARDO RABEL NUNEZ

According to HEMMING, in 1966 Mitch Werbell used the Dominican Republic as a base of operations for an assassination attempt against Fidel Castro. HEMMING stated that Jose Ricardo Rabel Nunez (born April 7, 1922), the brother of Luis Rabel, was part of this operation. CIA Index Card *284008 read: "FIORINI, Frank *Rabel, Joseph Luis - FBI Report, August 3, 1962, p.4. Copy in file October 1977." [CIA FOIA 353459] As stated, the FBI generated a report dated August 3, 1962, NO 105-1698, subject, Cuban Revolutionary Council, New Orleans, Louisiana." Jose Rabel was given a highly sophisticated assassination weapon and sent into Cuba via a CIA-supplied submarine. Bay of Pigs Brigade member Eulalio Francisco Castro (Frank Castro), who was linked with Orlando Bosch, was also involved in this operation.

HEMMING contention that this was an assassination operation was supported by a CIA report:

Undated memo for Western Hemisphere/C/OPS on call from Mr. Dick Phillips (State) regarding arrest of AMLEO-3: 'The three Cubans that Werbell reported were arrested are Jose Richardo Rabel Nunez (AMLEO-3), Gilberto Fondora and Migual Ramos. These men were crew members of the JURE mother vessel Venus. From JMWAVE reports it appears that AMLEO-3 was attempting to exfiltrate his family, using Venus, when he was caught by Cuban Security Forces on September 3, 1965. [FBI 109-584-4608]

Jose Richardo Rabel Nunez was reported captured by the Cuban Government on September 3, 1965, and received a 30-year prison sentence.

CESAR DIOSDADO

Rabel was questioned by Cuban authorities:

Q. Upon your arrival in the United States you say you established contact with officials of the CIA and Navy officers who proceeded to interview you.

A. Well, that was in Key West.

Q. Do you remember any names?

A. James McBurn, a CIA man. But he called himself Joaquin. As far as names go that is the only one that...Well Diosdado, a man whom I believe to be Mexican but who is a CIA official and immigration official in Key West.

Q. You were interviewed again, in Washington?

A. The main questioner was another CIA official who called himself Don H. Then there was Joaquin, who had stayed with me, and other officials of the CIA and State Department.

Q. When did you join JURE?

A. When the CIA tried by every possible means to keep me from coming here to get my family, I broke off with them and joined Manolo Ray.

Q. What were your activities in JURE?

A. In the JURE, I took over a mother ship they had, the Venus.

Q. Where was the ship?

A. When I took charge of it the ship was in Santo Domingo.

Q. Did the Dominican authorities know the ship was involved in these activities you spoke about?

A. They knew very well the ship was there.

The CIA reported:

During the interrogation of Jose Ricardo Nunez, Cuban prisoner and alleged CIA agent, by members of LASO and the newsmen present early in August 1967 in Havana, Cuba, he advised that upon his arrival in the United States from Cuba he was met by a group of U.S. officials and that he knew the names of but two of these individuals James McGarran (phonetic) aka 'Joaquin' and one Diosdado. The latter was believed by Nunez to be a Mexican and Immigration official in Key West also. When asked by the Cuban Security Officer if he meant Cesar Diosdado Nunez replied in the affirmative and added that Diosdado is supposedly the Immigration official who really does the recruiting for the CIA.

WAS JOSE RABEL A CASTRO DOUBLE AGENT?

Jose Rabel was released from prison in 1967. When the CIA discovered Jose Rabel had been released, it studied the possibility that Jose Rabel was a Castro double-agent:

MEMORANDUM

SUBJECT: Jose Ricardo Rabel Nunez AMLEO-3 (201-249386)

1. Born April 7, 1922, in Havana, Cuba, the son of a native-born American citizen, Rabel was brought up in comfortable circumstances. He attended high school in Cuba, completed the last year in New Orleans, Louisiana and entered Tulane University in September 1938. He enlisted in the U.S. Army in December 1940 and eventually saw combat in France, Belgium, Germany and Austria. After discharge in December 1945, Rabel returned to Cuba to attend the University of Havana and this began a life of job changes, moving back between the U.S. and Cuba, and, in general, rootless living.

2. Rabel's background reads like a man with no allegiances or loyalties and no particular goals. Viewed in retrospect, his career presents a picture of unreliability. It is probable that Rabel's rootlessness and apparent unreliability applied both to his relations with Castro and to those with the Agency. It is quite possible, therefore, that he not only served the Agency in a superficial way, but that he did the same for Castro at various times when it suited his purposes. Without postulating this sort of dual role (one which fits very well with his previous life) it is almost impossible to explain some of the reasonably good things he did for the Agency and the quite certain allegations that he was a Castro agent. This explanation is not fully satisfactory; but it does explain his career better than the charge that he was a Castro agent from the beginning. The question that must remain unanswered is whether he betrayed the AMTRUNK Operation. He was not arrested until September 1965 (when AMTRUNK had already run its course) but it appears quite certain that he cooperated with the DSE after his arrest and while he was in prison.

3. Rabel joined in the clandestine activities against Batista in March 1952, first amongst the exiles in the U.S. and then, after late 1952, from inside Cuba. He joined the Cuban Armed Forces to further his plotting and was assigned to the Cuban General Staff. He was the Cuban liaison officer with the U.S. Army mission in Cuba from November 1954, until April 1956. During his entire period in the Cuban Army Rabel was involved with dissident Army elements; when they attempted a coup in April 1956, Rabel was arrested. He was released shortly thereafter, worked in the chicken business for a year and then returned to the U.S. and worked with one of his brothers (Luis Rabel Nunez). In October 1957 he returned to Cuba and became involved with the 26th of July Movement but had to leave a year later when he was brought to the attention of the Batista forces because of a bomb explosion. He smuggled weapons to Camilo Cienfuegos for about a year and then in October 1958 he joined the Cienfuegos group. Shortly after the Castro victory, Castro called upon Rabel to set up a Cuban Marine Corps, a job he held until February 1960, at which time he was appointed Chief of Vividendas Campesinas. He held this job until he defected to the U.S. in December 1962. It is worth noting that he rarely pursued one activity in one place for more than a year at a time from 1945 to 1962.

4. Rabel gave Alfonso Rodriguez the following reason for his defection:

A. Communist pressure, hounding, and the basis enmity of the Communist Party toward him. (This appears very reasonable in view of his service in the U.S. Army and training in some aspects of intelligence, such as prisoner interrogation. In addition, his schooling in the U.S. and the reasonable economic circumstances would not have been recommendations from the Communist point of view.)

B. Strong backing by Fidel which protected him from more serious attacks from the Party. (This, too, seems entirely reasonable. His family farm was near the farm Fidel's father managed and Rabel and Fidel had known each other as children. In addition, Rabel's long involvement in the anti-Batista movement and with Camilo Cienfuegos were probably in his favor in Castro's view.)

C. An obligation to protect the non-Communists in his department, which prevented his earlier defection, and uncertainty of his reception in the U.S. (In view of the number of defections from Rabel's department, there were, in fact, people to protect. Since Rabel had served in the U.S. Army, and probably felt the U.S. was his second country, he could well have questions about his reception after serving in the Castro Government.

D. His resentment against the confining nature of a Communist State. (Since he never stayed in one place more than a short time in his entire life, to have been restricted to Cuba must have seemed a punishment.

5. Rabel was used to pitch (Deleted) in (Deleted) in 1963 to check out leads for the AMTRUNK Operation. One of his leads led to the recruitment of AMTRUCK-10. Later, in early 1964, Rabel was leader of the Rebel Army Group supported by the American Legion in Miami and was involved in the Rebel Army Radio program.

6. There is no specific evidence, except the accusations below, that Rabel was involved in a suspicious way with the Castro regime during this period, but his desire to exfiltrate his wife and children was a constant source of difficulty between him and the Station. This problem led to his eventual termination in July 1964 and to a great deal of resentment on his part. He conspired constantly, from mid-1963 until his capture in Cuba in September 1965, to get into Cuba to exfiltrate his wife and children.

7. Rabel was sentenced to 30 years imprisonment but was set free in July or August 1967, which is a strong indication that the charges that he worked for the DSE while in prison were true. Moreover, there is some indication that he may have attempted a provocation at Cuban behest immediately after his capture. There are two firm accusations that Rabel was a Cuban agent as early as July 1963 (which would have been when he was screening names for the AMTRUCK Operation) one from (Deleted) As mentioned above, these charges could well be true; yet Rabel could have fulfilled his duties for Castro superficially, for his own purposes, and not necessarily compromised his work with the Agency until he was captured. The difficulties he had in exfiltrating his wife could have been, partially, punishment by Castro for not fulfilling his duties as an agent; otherwise, had his work in the U.S. been valuable, Castro could have facilitated the exfiltration of Rabel's wife so that Rabel could continue his work as an agent undisturbed. LAD/JFK Task Force 1977 (Deleted) rp Attachment February 10, 1964, Memo for the Record, March 6, 1963, dispatch UFGA-7998 with Attachment, February 20, 1963, cable WAVE 4730 (IN 71127), September 30, 1963 dispatch UFGA-11375. [CIA FOIA #12923 1.14.77 re: 201-249386]

A first draft of this document contained this additional paragraph: "In view of the later roll-up of the AMTRUNK Operation the tentative opinion has been offered that the operation could have been an ingenious plan by Cubans from the beginning..." [NARA CIA 1993.07.13.15:39:45:210270]

Luis Rabel:

He was quite a guy, my brother. A U.S. Army Captain who enlisted in 1940, he was wounded twice. After his discharge in 1945, he went to the University of Havana. He lived in the United States, then went to Cuba. Before Castro declared himself a Communist he thought Castro was going to do something good for Cuba. He worked for him. When he found out different, he left Cuba in a plane. He went to try and get his family out of Cuba and, as far as his activities are concerned, I know very little. I saw him once in Miami when he came from Cuba. He had a big trial. They accused him of being a CIA Agent. My brother died in a Cuban jail.

In August 2006 this researcher was contacted by Laura M. Alphonso Rabel, the granddaughter of Jose Richardo Rabel who stated that the CIA's information was incorrect and Jose Richardo Rabel was never released, but died in a prison cell in Havana. After twelve years of incarceration under very bad circumstances, Jose Richardo Rabel got a heart infection. He was allowed furloughs and his family stayed in Cuba until he passed on. His family came to US on the Mariel boatlift. They had been held hostage by Castro, and could not leave Cuba. This indicates that the CIA analyst who prepared this report was pre-disposed against JURE one of the more "liberal-democratic" of the anti-Castro groups.

I grew up knowing that my grandfather Jose Ricardo Rabel Nunez died in a Cuban prison because he was captured when he attempted to exfiltrate my grandmother and her three daughters...after he died, my family escaped through the Mariel boat lift. I knew my grandfather had made contact with the Agency and that there was a part of his life that he never shared with his family.

Ricardo Rabel attempted to exfiltrate his family: Sept 4 1965
Incarcerated: Sept 1965
Prison Term:30 years
Died:July 13, 1975
Years served in prison: 10 years (1965-1975)
Cause of death: Bacterial Endocarditis
His family escaped Cuba on: JUNE 1980....MARIEL BOATLIFT

On November 28, 1965, Mitch Werbell informed the CIA that Rolando Masferrer planned an invasion of Haiti, but had called it off on November 22, 1966. [CIA TD-OOB-321/19112-66] In December 1965 Mitch Werbell requested CIA permission for a January 1966, attempt on Fidel. Mitch Werbell reported he was taking a group of six Cubans to hit Fidel and Raoul Castro at a big rally in Havana.

On June 13, 1966, the Chief of JMWAVE sent this message to the Western Hemisphere Division Chief: "According to his file, Werbell appears to be a low level would-be con man who has a history of being involved in Castro assassination schemes and of professing to be connected, or at least in contact with Kubark. According to AMRAZZ-1 'Livingston' was involved with Antonio Veciana's alleged assassination ploy and he was masquerading as a Kubark officer." The CIA:

In February 1967 the Domestic Contacts Division advised that Werbell frequently volunteered information at its Miami Office and was going to be asked to respond to certain OSI requirements pertaining to the Dominican Republic...However, it is not known that Subject was approached in this regard, and the Domestic Contacts Division was provided with information relating to this dubious character. In August 1967 Subject came to Agency attention when he attempted to interest a group of military officers in a weapon silencer...One of these officers was actually a Technical Services Division representative serving under cover...

According to HEMMING, STURGIS visited Costa Rica in late 1967, on behalf of Mitch Werbell. STURGIS denied knowing Mitch Werbell - "I read a lot about him; personally, no" - nor did he claim to know Mitch Werbell associates - Paul Helliwell and Colonel Robert Bayard - although he admitted knowing Mitch Werbell associates Dominick Bartone, Rolando Masferrer, Kiki Masferrer and Rolandito Masferrer. The CIA's Jerrold G. Brown wrote:

Information had been developed by DDO by June 1974 that St. George had become active in the affairs of Mitchell Livingstone Werbell, III, the current employer of at least one former Agency staff employee. Werbell, an international arms dealer who is of considerable interest to this Agency and the FBI, has conducted certain of his activities under the guise of CIA sponsorship; and some of his activities and some of Werbell's activities and associates have paralleled those of FRANK STURGIS. [St. George MFR 7.25.75]

PROJECT NASSAU

In 1967 Mitch Werbell and Rolando Masferrer were involved a plan to assassinate Duvalier, who had refused to allow Cuban exiles to use Haiti as a base against Cuba. Mitch Werbell supplied Rolando Masferrer with weapons and a staging area, and then informed the CIA of the plans of Rolando Masferrer. The CIA informed the FBI, and in early 1967, Mitch Werbell, Rolando Masferrer, Jean Baptiste George, Antonio Leon Rojas, Rene Juares Leon, Julio Anton Constanzo Palau and Martin Frances Casey, were indicted for conspiracy to violate the Neutrality Act. Several months later, the Justice Department, which was headed by Ramsey Clark, dropped the charges against Mitch Werbell. Rolando Masferrer received a three-year sentence. [USDC SDF 67-105-Cr-TC] Robert K. Brown served as an advisor to Project Nassau. The CIA wrote that this connected Robert K. Brown with Mitch Werbell. Robert K. Brown: "I first met Werbell down there for a very short period of time. I just happened to bump into him. He was with Andrew St. George. Then I crossed paths with Werbell more frequently once I got back on active duty. I was the officer in charge of the 18th Airborne Marksmanship. Werbell was trying to peddle all his goodies." The CIA stated that it detected several calls to Mitch Werbell from a telephone used by Robert K. Brown. [CIA From Raymond M. Reardon 8.27.76] On March 16, 1967, HEMMING made an unannounced call at the home of the Chief of the Domestic Contacts Division in Miami to report that the defense strategy of Rolando Masferrer was based on charges of CIA complicity in the invasion.

In January 1968 the Munitions Control Board asked the CIA if it had any interest in Mitch Werbell: "The case was summarized for the Deputy Director for Support on January 11, 1968, and the reply to the MCB was provided by the Office of Logistics." On February 24, 1968, the CIA received a report on the activities of Mitch Werbell and Robert K. Brown from an informant, stating that they were running Sionics, a firm that manufactured silencers under license for the U.S. Air Force, the U.S. Army, and the CIA. Robert K. Brown: "That's all bullshit. I never had a piece of Sionics." Edwin Marger [OS SF 760 184], a former practicing attorney, was involved. [CIA File No. 75 149-1820 3.1.68] Edwin Marger was the partner of Charles Bush. According to HEMMING told this researcher: "Bush had flown the plane for the Alexander Rorke search party. Marger was a Haitian Consul." On February 26, 1968, the CIA generated a document titled: "Operational Support TWX" and on March 1, 1968, it generated an "Operation Support Report." [CIA OS SAG Brown 9.2.76]

THE MARTIN FRANCIS CASEY LETTER

In 1969 Howard K. Davis, Edmund Kolby, William Dempsey - all former INTERPEN members - along with Martin Francis Casey, Rene J. Leon, former Haitian Army Colonel, Charles Smith, William Eugene Dunbach, Marvin Simpson and Ralph Grant Edens were arrested after bombing the Haitian Presidential Palace of "Papa Doc"

Duvalier with several gasoline-filled oil drums. Haitian anti-aircraft fire caused enough damage to their aircraft to force the raiders to land in Nassau, where they were turned over to American authorities. A few months later, they were indicted by the Department Of Justice for violations of the Neutrality Act. [USDC SDF 69-328-CrCF] When their trial ended in a guilty verdict, Martin Casey wrote a letter to Federal Judge Charles Fulton from his prison cell. Martin Casey stated that he had been under the impression his activities had CIA approval:

On March 5, 1969, I received a call from Jay Mallin, a research scientist at the University of Miami's Center for International Studies. Mr. Mallin told me that if we needed weapons he had talked to someone in the Intelligence Community in Washington who had told him that we should contact Fred Brown (Sionics, Inc.) in Atlanta. Jay Mallin also told me Brown was an associate of Mitchell Werbell. I know Mr. Werbell as a CIA agent from his own words - heard on a number of occasions...I first met Werbell in Cuba in 1965 when he stated he was a CIA agent. I later met him in the home of GERALD PATRICK HEMMING...In March 1967 he stated that the reason the government dropped the indictment was that they could not prosecute one of their own. Brown stated he worked for the same Agency as Mitch and that he could get all State Department and CIA clearances. I made up a list of weapons that were needed. I did stay in contact with Mr. Mallin, who was to contact the State Department when we made any action raid, so that the U.S. State Department would be advised it was not some Communist group...Mr. Werbell has long been associated with Mr. Thomas B. DeWolf and Colonel Paul L. E. Helliwell, Miami attorneys who are connected with 'Red Sunset,' a CIA front. [69-335-Cr-Cf-USDC SD Fla.-Miami; 67-105-CR-TC-USDC SD Fla. Miami]

In June 1959 Casey was arrested for conspiracy to commit larceny at the U.S. Naval Base at Portsmouth, New Hampshire. In February 1961 he was arrested in Philadelphia for Assault and Battery on a police officer. Two months later he was arrested for Vagrancy in El Paso, Texas. In October 1961 Casey applied to the Coast Guard.

JAY MALLIN

Jay Mallin was born in 1927 in New York City into an American family with two generations of Cuban roots. He covered Cuba for Time magazine from 1952 until 1962, when he was expelled by the Castro Government. In 1971 he founded the Institute for the Study of Change, to compile data on left-wing terrorists. Other members of the Institute included Richard H. Singer, a longtime CIA Middle East Station Chief, and the late Edward H. Landsdale, Saigon Chief of Station during the early stages of the Vietnam War. George Volsky was Secretary-Treasurer of the Institute. In 1986 Jay Mallin became the news director of Radio Marti (the 1980's version of Radio Free Cuba). In March 1990 he was made co-director of the station. [Miami Herald 4.21.74 p2B; HUNT Undercover p151] Fred Brown could have been Robert K. Brown. Robert K. Brown claimed that during this time he was in Vietnam where he worked on OPERATION PHOENIX.

In May 1969 the CIA received information from a Air Force OSI representative in Miami that Mitch Werbell was undergoing a security check, as a result of his being employed by a company with a government contract. Mitch Werbell was under investigation by the OSI Internal Security Division and the Contract Fraud Division. At about the same time the Saigon CIA Station requested a headquarters bona fides check on Mitch Werbell. On May 26, 1969, Thailand Station generated a cable with extensive distribution in the Far East ...outlining Werbell's activities in his alleged capacity as CIA Chief in Thailand. It was mentioned that the station had been plagued some weeks by Werbell Vice President and Director Research and Development of Sionics, Atlanta, Georgia. Subject reportedly describes himself as a counter-insurgency expert, has a variety of weapons to display and claims to be a retired Colonel. He normally implies United States Government connections and he presents a demonstration of a variety of exotic weapons that never fails to impress. Reportedly Subject had visited Vietnam in order to provide General Abrams with such a demonstration of weapons and it was stated that he planned to set up a sniper training program.

Mitch Werbell claimed that he went to Vietnam in 1969, and was sent back to the U.S. several months later for excesses against the Vietnamese, such as having dropped live rats infected with bubonic plague into North Vietnam.

LUCIEN CONEIN AND MITCH WERBELL

In the early 1970's Lucian Conein shared a Washington, D.C., Drug Enforcement Administration/Special Operations Group safehouse with Mitch Werbell's "Central Investigative Agency." Mitch Werbell "CIA" members included John Patrick Muldoon (OS SF 190 639). John Patrick Muldoon was "a former GS-12 Operations Officer, DDP/FE, who retired on disability in March 1972." He had been part of OPERATION PHOENIX with John L. Hart. Muldoon was a "former DDO Operations Officer who was 'riffed' by the Agency; he had been found to have approximately 75 Agency documents in his safe at the Drug Enforcement Administration where he was detailed shortly before his termination; a Civil Service Commission investigation in 1973 had disclosed that he was sleeping with the wife of a Washington Post reporter and he was connected with Mitch Werbell's 'Friends of Abaco' operation which was designed to bring about the independence of that small Caribbean Island for use as a haven for gambling and other nefarious purposes." [CIA OS SAG Raymond M. Reardon 5.21.77; Trans. of tel. con.

6.18.74 Van Cleave] Walter Josef Mackem (OS SF 190 639) was part of Mitch Werbell's crew.

THE B. R. FOX COMPANY

While he was in Washington, Lucian Conein contacted the B.R. Fox Company, a firm which had close CIA connections because it specialized in the manufacture of sophisticated assassination devices. B.R. Fox also had offices in the same safehouse as Mitch Werbell and Lucian Conein. Its officers included Michael Morrissey, an attorney licensed to sell the CIA bugging equipment, who became of CIA-interest in July 1965 when his employer, the Halliburton Company, requested a contractor security clearance for his use: "Reportedly, the duties of Michael Morrissey involved NPIC contact." Barbara R. Fox Spindel, the widow of convicted wire tapper Bernard Bates Spindel, who had worked for Jimmy Hoffa, was President of B.R. Fox. (Bernard Spindel died in February 1971.) During Congressional Hearings, a B.R. Fox officer produced a catalogue that described the assassination weapons. A cover letter stated: "Enclosed is a catalogue put together only after we started working with Lou Conein...because of the nature of the devices it is not being given to anyone else..." Lucian Conein claimed that the catalogue had been put together for Mitch Werbell. When Lucian Conein first saw it he claimed he remarked, "Yes sir...boy this is something...this guy Mitch [Werbell] is one of the craziest son-of-a-bitches I've ever met."

The CIA reported:

In the latter part of 1975 and early 1976, the FBI conducted an extensive investigation regarding extortion letters received by 196 U.S. firms in which one 'B.A. Fox' of the B.R. Fox Company demanded huge amounts of money under the threat of sabotaging their products and operations. Recently, these same victims received 'letter bombs' and 'tick letters.' As of November 1975 the FBI believed Mitch Werbell may have been the 'brains' behind the extortion operation. However, Mackem continues to engender strong suspicion by the FBI. Mackem, a Reed College graduate...apparently procured a brochure listing the names and addresses of Reed College graduates. It appears that many of the extortion letters have been addressed to Reed graduates who now occupy important positions in private industry. [CIA Memo Michael E. Schneeberger to Chief, Security Analysis Group; CIA Memo for Record 8.17.76 Jerrold G. Brown D/C SAG; CIA Memo 4.10.76 Brown]

HEMMING told this researcher:

CHRIST was a friend of Bernie Spindel. CHRIST was an amateur. Bernie did all that shit for the Technical Services Division. I knew him as Bernie Fox of B.R. Fox Incorporated. I met him through Werbell in the 1960's.

In 1975 Lucian Conein and Mitch Werbell were involved with fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco in planning a Drug Enforcement Administration/Special Operations Group Operations Center in Costa Rica. Lucian Conein and Mitch Werbell continued a close association with one another until Mitch Werbell was indicted for conspiracy to import marijuana in late 1975.

MITCH WERBELL AND ROBERT VESCO

Mitch Werbell was an associate of Robert Vesco, and in 1974 Mitch Werbell was called before the Senate Permanent Investigating Subcommittee which was looking into the financial dealings of Robert Vesco. Mitch Werbell took the Fifth Amendment. Mitch Werbell and associates were represented by the law firm of Fensterwald and Ohlhausen. William George Ohlhausen [born 12.2.39; OS SF 197 427] "was an applicant for CIA GS-5 Staff employment (Intelligence Analyst/DDP/RID) in January 1962. His case was canceled in May 1962 for the reason he accepted another position." [Memo Sarah K. Hall SRS/OS 4.8.71] In 1976 Mitch Werbell associate Dominick Bartone was asked: "Now, among other things, didn't Mr. Senore tell you that Morton Franklin had told him Gerry Cunningham was to receive 1,000 guns, probably destined for Robert Vesco?" Dominick Bartone responded: "He mentioned they were probably destined for Vesco..." [76-6066-Cr-Wh-USDC SD FLA. Miami p161]

In 1968 NIXON appeared with Robert Vesco, and associated himself with him throughout his Presidential term. In early 1971 Robert Vesco was released from a Swiss jail at the request of United States Attorney General John Mitchell. When Robert Vesco returned to the U.S., he hired NIXON'S brother, Donald Nixon, in an unspecified capacity. In July 1973 Drug Enforcement Administration informant Frank Peroff reported that Robert Vesco was involved in heroin smuggling. According to Frank Peroff, after he told this to the Drug Enforcement Administration, he was set up to be murdered; when that failed, he was arrested. It appeared to Frank Peroff that the Drug Enforcement Administration was protecting Robert Vesco at NIXON'S request. In March 1974 the son of Costa Rican President Jose Figueres, Marti Figueres, contacted Robert Vesco's representative, Philip Graydon, and asked him to contact Mitch Werbell. Marti Figueres was interested in purchasing 1,000 Ingram submachine guns from Mitch Werbell. Other evidence suggested that when Philip Graydon, Mitch Werbell, Mitch Werbell Jr. and Marti Figueres met, they discussed setting up a Costa Rican Drug Enforcement Administration/Special Operations Group base. A mob figure connected with Dino Cellini had purchased a boat and several assassination weapons in furtherance of this plan. When Mitch Werbell was called before the SSCIA, he was questioned about this meeting, and his other dealings with Vesco and his representatives. He repeatedly took the Fifth Amendment, which resulted in the nickname, "Mitch the Fifth." In 1995 Fidel Castro arrested Robert Vesco in Cuba for illegal currency trading.

THE DEATH OF ROLANDO MASFERRER

After his appearance on Capitol Hill in 1974, a series of misfortunes befell Mitch Werbell and associates. In 1972 Rolando Masferrer was released on parole. He returned to Miami, where he waged war on Cuban exiles who advocated coexistence. In 1974 the State Department learned Rolando Masferrer was planning another Cuban invasion. In March 1975 Rolando Masferrer told the FBI that

...several months ago he discovered Ignacio Novo in a parking lot next to his office. Encounter was made at approximately midnight, Ignacio Novo was armed and climbing fence and Rolando Masferrer believes Ignacio Novo may have been attempting to kill him. [FBI 2-2079-111]

In June 1975 the FBI questioned Rolando Masferrer about an assassination threat against Senator Edward Kennedy. [FBI 89-3119-3] On October 31, 1975, a bomb exploded in Rolando Masferrer's car, killing him instantly.

MANUAL DE ARMAS

During a press conference in Havana, Manual De Armas, a Castro double-agent who penetrated the leadership of the Miami Cuban exile community while working as a collector for the Security and Collection Agency of Estaban Ventura, said that he had received explosives from his CIA Case Officer, Bud Mills, (CIA had no Office of Security traces on Mills) and had given them to a member of Abdula, a CIA-controlled exile group to be used against Rolando Masferrer. The CIA reported:

MEMORANDUM FOR: Chief, Security Analysis Group

SUBJECT: Manuel L. De Armas SF #591 865

1. Reference is made to the attached cable traffic which sets forth the "defection" of the Subject to Cuba circa April 1976. In substance, De Armas apparently gave a press conference in Havana on April 21, 1976 in which he claimed to be an ex-CIA agent who had been recruited by a FNU Blackenhouse (no Office of Security traces) in 1969. De Armas also claimed to have been stationed in New York City in 1971 where he maintained contact with Blackenhouse and Richard Tomley (probably identifiable with Peter L. B. Tomley Washington Area Recruiting Office).
2. In the cited press conference, De Armas made many allegations concerning purported CIA operations, such as assassination plots and a plan to rupture relations between Venezuela and Cuba. Details of these allegations are set forth in the attached cable traffic and are not treated in instant memorandum. However, interest in De Armas' allegations concerning alleged CIA operations concerns the identities of individuals that he claimed to have been Agency operatives and assets; details regarding these individuals are covered in the latter portions of instant memorandum.

3. Agency interest in Manual De Armas was originally predicated on the receipt of a letter written by Manual De Armas on September 12, 1972, in which he related details concerning his anti-Castro activities through his membership in a group called Abdala. The letter also contained a request for employment with the Agency. As a result of De Armas' letter, the Western Hemisphere Division requested a Special Inquiry by the Office of Security for the purpose of establishing the identity of Manual De Armas, which was completed in October 1972. In May 1973 the Office of Personnel opened a file on Manual De Armas and apparently went through the normal routine of shopping his file. Interest in Manual De Armas terminated when Tomley [a CIA recruiting officer mentioned by De Armas] sent him a letter advising him that the Agency had nothing currently available. Then on January 22, 1973, De Armas wrote Tomley thanking the latter for interest following a telephone call De Armas made to Tomley in which De Armas wanted to know once and forever if there were any openings for him. De Armas security file reflected no subsequent except for the attached cable traffic following his 'defection.'" [CIA OS 591 865]

4. Regarding personalities mentioned by De Armas in his Havana press conference, it appears that several individuals may be identical to former WH Division assets, as shown below. It should be noted that De Armas did not identify any bona fide Agency staff employees or agents nor does it appear that he identified any past or current operations. It seems likely that De Armas was provided a list of known or suspected Agency assets by the DGI as part of Cuba's ongoing anti-CIA, anti-U.S. Government campaign designed to offset adverse criticism to Cuba's military assistance to Angola. Set forth below are those individuals alleged to have been connected with Agency operations by De Armas; results of Office of Security indices searches and file reviews follow each name where a possible identification could be made.

Bob Dynes (aka Dinus, Daynes) No Office of Security traces regarding all variations.

Robert Bud Miles (alleged to have been the supplier of explosives used in the murder of Rolando Masferrer).

Lazaro Alvarez: Possibly identifiable with Lazaro Gustayo Areces Alvarez SF # 753 905 on whom a POA was requested by the WH Division (JMATE) in June 1964 for use as a PM/Maritime asset; files canceled in October 1964.

Fred Duncan: No Office of Security traces; believed to be a DEA officer stationed in Caracas.

Doug Phillips: No Office of Security traces; believed to be a DEA officer stationed in Caracas.

John Valdavian (aka Bladabian): No Office of Security traces regarding all variations.

A. Nass: Probably identifiable with Donald L. Ness, State Department RSO in Santo Domingo.

Anselmo Alliegro (HIJO): No Office of Security traces.

Ricardo Morales Navarrete: No Office of Security traces. [The CIA: "On March 2, 1964, an Office of Security CIA investigation on Richardo Morales yielded numerous derogatory traces, nonetheless, he was granted a Provisional Operation Approval."]

Armando Ruiz: Possibly identifiable with Armando Valenzuela Ruiz, SF #752 358. OA request by WH/3 [deleted 24 as of 2010] not used due to significant derogatory information developed.

Antonio De Leon: Possibly identifiable with Sergio Antonio Lopez De Leon, S.F. #740 227 who was apparently [deleted 24 as of 2010]

Mario Mejia Ricard (aka Ricart): Probably identifiable with Marcio Mejia Ricart, CR to SF #244 148 (Manuel Moises Lamarche Salas). In June 1960 latter advised FBI that Ricart was a Venezuelan active in anti-Trujillo activities and had visited Miami in April to buy B-26's and weapons for an attack on the Dominican Republic; also advised that Ricart was an instructor at Caracas University, was associated with Director of Economics Development in Venezuela and believed Ricart might be a Communist.

Luis Desa Soto: No Office of Security traces.

Felix Martinez Suarez: Possibly identifiable with Felix Antonio Martinez Suarez, SF #242 302, who was Director of El Mundo when a (deleted 24 as of 2010).

Salavador Romani: Possibly identifiable with Salvador Garcia Romani-Orue, SF # 223 776; (Deleted as of 2010) files canceled in January 1967.

On PRQ listed on Manuel Artime, not further identified, as a relative / friend / correspondent in U.S.

5. The possible identification (by either De Armas or the DGI) of the Western Hemisphere Division assets reflected above suggests that their names were either known or suspected as CIA assets and were thrown in with those individuals, not identified above in an effort to legitimize De Armas' claims to have worked for the CIA. It should be noted that of those individuals listed above on whom a security file exists, none appear to have any current association with this Agency and, as far as can be determined, no actual Agency operations were either exposed or threatened.

6. The above is provided for your information; no further action in this case appears necessary.

Michael E. Schneeberger, Security Analysis Group.

In September 1976 De Armas was arrested in Ithaca, New York on a grand larceny warrant issued in by the Dade County state's attorney's office. De Armas was accused of fraudulently cashing two checks for than $500 while working for the Ventura Collection Agency in Miami. He was released on his own recognizance. On January 15, 1977, Manuel De Armas was arrested for grand larceny charges in Chicago and held in lieu of $10,000 bond.

After Rolando Masferrer was assassinated, Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre wrote the FBI, and asked the FBI to contact the CIA and obtain a list of Cuban Nationals trained by that Agency in demolition. [FBI 174-6515-5] Maurice Ferre contacted Don Donahue of Senator Jackson's office. FBI official J. B. Adams handled the Rolando Masferrer investigation. [FBI 174-6515-3] The CIA file of Rolando Masferrer contained a document stating that after his death, no other documents should appear in his file.

THE DEATH OF COLONEL ROBERT BAYARD

On July 6, 1975, Colonel Robert Bayard, who retired from the Army in 1970 and worked for Mitch Werbell, was shot to death with a silenced automatic pistol in an Atlanta parking lot. An African-American, George Lee Mathis, was indicted for the shooting, but was acquitted when the jury decided the testimony of the principal witness was unbelievable. Mitch Werbell stated that the killing was politically motivated. [FBI 62-108665-A NR 8.27.75] HEMMING told this researcher: "He knew too much." In 1975, a former CIA agent who worked for Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Atlanta arrested the son of Mitch Werbell, Mitch Werbell, Jr., for selling him 2,000 machine guns. On April 25, 1975, Mitch Werbell Jr. was acquitted of attempting to sell a foreign government guns without State Department approval.

THE DEATH OF PAUL HELLIWELL

Paul Helliwell was an associate of Mitch Werbell. In the early 1970's, Paul Helliwell's Bahamas-chartered Castle National Bank financed numerous CIA-sponsored forays against Cuba. When the Internal Revenue Service investigated the bank for money laundering, the CIA had the probe scuttled. Paul Helliwell died in the Bahamas on December 24, 1976, from complications from emphysema. He died before he was to be called before a Grand Jury. Two years later, he was the Subject of a FBI Tax Division investigation. HEMMING told this researcher: "He was a rogue."

THE DEATH OF KENNETH BURNSTINE

In late 1975 Mitch Werbell, John Nardi (a Cleveland Teamster official) William Bell, Morton Franklin, and Gerry Cunningham were indicted for conspiracy to smuggle marijuana in Miami. These indictments came about through the efforts of informant Kenneth Burnstine. Kenneth Burnstine was an ex-Marine fighter pilot who worked with the CIA during the Bay of Pigs. In 1965 the FBI maintained offices in a building owned by Ken Burnstine. J. Edgar Hoover made Ken Burnstine an FBI contact. Less than six months later, Ken Burnstine's business partners charged him with larceny, but the Assistant United States Attorney declined prosecution. In 1970 Ken Burnstine's fingerprints appeared on stolen securities, and he was charged with selling stolen stock. These charges were dropped after he furnished the FBI with information on Mitch Werbell, who was his partner in the Military Armaments Corporation. At this time, Ken Burnstine said he was a weapons dealer, and was in possession of a Federal Firearms license. [DEA arrest rec. BT 7936]

In March 1972 the FBI suspected Ken Burnstine had Congressman Bertram L. Podell (Dem.-NY) on his payroll. Bertram Podell pleaded guilty in 1974 to Federal conspiracy charges for having accepted $41,000 to help a Florida airline obtain a new route. [NYT 7.25.80] In 1973 the FBI investigated Ken Burnstine's Florida Airways. Numerous small aircraft bearing marijuana had crashed in Southern Florida, and all of them bore the name of Florida Airways as lessor. The CIA became interested in Ken Burnstine's operations at this time. [CIA Cable 1.17.73 GI-73-0007] By early Spring 1974, the Drug Enforcement Administration was preparing a case against Mitch Werbell. In October 1974, before it had completed its investigation, Ken Burnstine was arrested in Texas for possession of cocaine. In 1974 STURGIS was incarcerated as a result of Watergate. While in prison, he was visited by Jerry Buchanan, who asked him to contact the CIA for him because he had "a National Security thing." STURGIS:

I says, hey, I'm in jail, I can't do it. When I got out shortly I did contact the CIA for him. This is how Jerry got tied up with certain agents involved in intelligence, and what he did or went about, that's how the thing came about.

The "National Security" matter Jerry Buchanan referred to was Ken Burnstine. Jerry Buchanan introduced HEMMING to Ken Burnstine. HEMMING:

During early 1975 I ascertained that Ken Burnstine completed operation to Eastern Bahamas but had near fatal incident that caused death of one of his associates in area of Bahamas. I continued attempts to establish contact with Burnstine's group with little success but did accomplish the following: a. Met and identified most of Burnstine's associates, buyers, and Florida distributors over a two month period. Those identified are United States and Colombian nationals. [DEA G 8-74-0012; DEA G1-73-0273-p7]

The evidence that Jerry Buchanan amassed was only enough to indict and convict Ken Burnstine (photo right) of one count of marijuana sale, however, DEA Agent Arthur Sedillo was able to convince Burnstine that he (Sedillo) was a cocaine supplier, during a trip Burnstine made to Mexico City. In 1990 Sedillo was operating out of Monterrey, Mexico. [Messick, Operation Snowbird, page 80] Ken Burnstine was charged with conspiracy and sentenced to seven years. Released on appeal bond, he was anxious to inform in exchange for avoiding this prison term. In July 1975 he told the Drug Enforcement Administration that he had a Florida State Senator on his payroll who was helping to negotiate a proposed agreement regarding immunity for Ken Burnstine from the Office of the United States Attorney. The Drug Enforcement Administration wanted Ken Burnstine to set Mitch Werbell up for an arrest. By November 1975 Ken Burnstine supplied the U.S. Attorney's Office in Miami with enough evidence to indict Mitch Werbell and his associates for Conspiracy. Ken Burnstine was the star witness for the prosecution. Then, on June 16, 1976, two months before Mitch Werbell et. al. were scheduled to stand trial in Miami, Ken Burnstine was killed in an airplane accident during an air show in Mojave Desert in California. Ken Burnstine's plane went into a high-speed stall, and exploded upon impact with the ground. The Mojave County Deputy Coroner reported no toxicological tests were conducted, as no usable body fluids could be extracted. The National Transportation Safety Board commented: "It was not a survivable crash." Seconds before his aircraft fell, Burnstine called the pilot flying near him and said: "No (pause). Oh no!" He had apparently applied power in an attempt to pull out of a downward spin, and found that he could not. Had someone tampered with the control surface of his aircraft? The National Transportation Safety Board found no evidence of control surface separation prior to impact since "damage to the control surfaces precluded determination of whether or not the rudder or elevator controls" had been tampered with.

Ken Burnstine's plane arrived at Chino Airport three days before the crash. It was parked outside the hangar on the night it arrived then berthed in the hangar for the two remaining days. Burnstine carried two automatic pistols with him in the cockpit that day. The FBI investigated his death because he had been a Federal witness. Its chief suspect was Mitch Werbell's codefendant John Nardi, since John Nardi was described as "the reputed head of a Cleveland, Ohio, organized crime family." In October 1976 the FBI closed its investigation of the crash. Several pending narcotics cases had collapsed with the death of Ken Burnstine, and three counts against Mitch Werbell and his codefendant were dropped.

I received this email in October 2005:

I enjoy reading your material on JFK and G. P. Hemming; although I can't agree with all of the material. You are the only one who wrote about Ken Bernstine. He is listed in old news papers as a Marine Fighter pilot and smuggler. The truth is he was a Marine Corps Counterintelligence Officer in Atsugi before Oswald got there. He was not a pilot; never went to Navy flight school, but did go to a small private school in the South when he got out of service. I should know in that I served with him in Atsugi and took over his duties shortly after he left. He had everyone convinced he was a fighter pilot. That never happened. So I would like to know anything additional about Ken, a Northwestern graduate. It appears that HEMMING took over some of Bernstine's old smuggling accounts, but I believe that Ken was an informant for a few agencies before he died. His lawyer got disbarred and the hoods that he snitched on all died soon after his death. It was a strange story about a strange guy. When his checking account was checked in Ft. Lauderdale, he had over one million dollars in it....I am a former intelligence/counterintelligence officer USMC. I served with Bernstine in Atsugi. He got orders to flight school when he left Atsugi in 1956, but never went to Pensacola. Instead he went to a private flight school in some small place in Alabama. You can read about his exploits in old Miami newspapers. I believe his lawyer's name was Levy. I am listed in the credits in several books. Russell's book and the one I knew best Henry Hurt of Readers Digest. I am in the credits of the Frontline story about Lee Harvey Oswald. Bernstine entered the Air Races and won one year while flying a P-51. He had one sentence hanging over him and he was a material witness in another when his plane crashed upon landing. His plane was found in 8 pieces and in his plane he had Two guns. Well Mr. Weberman I am trying to obtain some info for I am writing a book about Oswald in the Far East. My name is Jack R. Swike and I served in the Corps during 1953 and from 54 through 58. Later I was assigned counterintelligence duty in the Fourth Marine Division in Reserve. In Japan Bernstine walked around and wore a shoulder holster. We all had .45's. I never knew what he was up to until he left. He was working on counterfeit military currency. The Office of Naval intelligence told him and us to keep them informed on what we were doing. He told them to go to hell. When he went home it was my belief that he would become a private detective. At one time he owned an airline company in Miami which he used for his smuggling.

Now I have written you before and you blew me off. So I am trying one more time to see if Bernstine had any connection to the Bay of Pigs, Oswald Etc..I don't believe he had any dealings with Hemming. I also don't believe that Hemming ever met Oswald while Oswald was in the Corps. Well I am trying to get info, but I see I have provided you with more info which has never been public. So if you have something you wish to share, please let me hear from you.

NIXON AND MITCH WERBELL

In August 1976 Mitch Werbell stood trial in Federal Court in Miami. He was charged with marijuana smuggling. He told the jury that he was a deep cover agent who worked for the Drug Enforcement Administration/Special Operations Group, who was offered a lucrative government contract in return for setting up Burnstine. Mitch Werbell subpoenaed NIXON. HEMMING told this researcher:

NIXON knew of the fucking arrangement with Mitch Werbell and all those people.

Judge Peter Fay ruled that there was insufficient evidence in the case to require NIXON to appear. NIXON aide Egil Krogh appeared instead. Egil Krogh denied the White House had any control over international drug trafficking, but he admitted he knew Drug Enforcement Administration/Special Operations Group head Lucien Conein. Mitch Werbell testified that he had sent codefendant Gerry Cunningham to meet with Lucian Conein regarding the Burnstine matter. Lucian Conein testified no such meeting occurred, and the records of the Drug Enforcement Administration supported this. Mitch Werbell produced a toll slip that contained a notation of a call to Lucian Conein during the period in question, and a Drug Enforcement Administration receipt for the use of the Washington, D.C., Parabellum / "CIA" safehouse. Mitch Werbell wasn't the only person to insist he had been working undercover for Lucian Conein when he was arrested. HEMMING claimed the same thing. In Drug Enforcement Administration Agent Krueger's analysis of a HEMMING self-generated document, Krueger stated:

This report, read in its total, and winding up with paragraph 8, leads me to believe that HEMMING will attempt a sensational trial defense claiming to be a DEA/CIA employee, that he has successfully thwarted drug smuggling adventures at great personal risk, that Conein and Briggs attempted to interfere with a Senate investigation and that they planned with him and others to assassinate narcotics smugglers. It is my understanding that HEMMING was once a CIA contract paramilitary employee. As such he would have received training in report writing and the correct format for code words and code names. The report bears a very superficial resemblance to a CIA report, but is clearly a construction of fiction designed as a defense for HEMMING. I am at a loss to explain why Lucien Conein is so often the victim of coincidental associations and meetings with DEA defendants with bizarre tales of Terry and the Pirates adventures. [Joseph Krueger, Deputy Chief Inspector/ William J. Kafaris, Inspector-in-Charge DEA S.E. FO David S. Wiser 9.27.76]

The CIA refused to allow one of its questioned document experts to testify about this evidence. [CIA MFR 7.9.77 Edmund Cohen] Krueger described HEMMING as a "CIA paramilitary." What was his source?

Other witnesses for Mitch Werbell included a CIA agent, and Wallace Shanley, who testified that Mitch Werbell had called him in September 1973 regarding Ken Burnstine's smuggling operation. Wallace Shanley:

Werbell talked narcotics to some guys who turned out to be Drug Enforcement Administration agents. After that, they pretty much constructed the whole thing, and fit Mitch into it. He was entrapped. I used to be in the Drug Enforcement Administration. I testified I was once in the Drug Enforcement Administration but came to despise it because it lacked morality. I just testified to the attitudes, ambitions and techniques of narcotics agents.

Wallace Shanley went to Vietnam after things settled down in Miami in 1967:

I worked with Ted Shackley, who was in charge of OPERATION PHOENIX, but I had nothing to do with it. With a few threads, HEMMING can create a goddamn tapestry of bullshit.

In early September 1976 Mitch Werbell and his codefendants were acquitted on all counts. Mitch Werbell's attorney, Edwin Marger, told the press: "He would never get involved in a conspiracy to import marijuana. Guns, revolution, assassination, yes."

DOMINICK BARTONE

In April 1977 Gerry Cunningham, Morton Franklin, Dominick Bartone and Henry Grecco were indicted in Atlanta for conspiring to violate arms export laws. An FBI informant reported that the wife and children of Henry Grecco "were murdered many years ago because of a gangland beef. This turned him into a cold blooded killer." Henry Grecco had numerous weapons convictions and was involved in the attempted "torching" of a heavily insured hotel along with John Nardi, Morton Franklin and Gerry Cunningham. In late 1975 the FBI questioned Henry Grecco about a fatal bombing and the murder of an organized crime figure. Dominick Bartone was a Cleveland gangster dating from the days of Al Capone who had worked with RUBY in smuggling arms to Fidel Castro between 1957 and 1959. In May 1959 Dominick Bartone was arrested by U.S. Customs in Miami in connection with an attempted bribery scheme regarding the departure of a munitions-laden C-74 aircraft. [FBI 105-80291] Nardi worked for Dominick Bartone. HEMMING told this researcher: "Dominick Bartone died in prison." The 1977 crew were charged with having bought weapons from Mitch Werbell, having staged a fictitious burglary, then having illegally exported the arms to South America. A month after these indictments were handed down, Nardi was killed by a bomb. Later that month, Henry Grecco was shot in the head and died instantly. A witness at the murder scene identified Joe Bonarrigo as the hitman. On June 28, 1978, Joe Bonarrigo was sentenced to 15 years to life for murder.

GORDON NOVEL AND MITCH WERBELL

In 1976 Gordon Novel, a prominent figure in New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's investigation, lived with Mitch Werbell. On January 17, 1977, when Gordon Novel was arrested for arson, Mitch Werbell bailed him out. During the Summer of 1977, someone tried to stab Mitch Werbell in an Atlanta bar. In the early 1980's Mitch Werbell became the personal bodyguard of the crypto-Nazi leader, Lyndon LaRouche. In November 1983, Mitch Werbell was arrested for bringing a sharp, pointed, walking cane into a Federal courtroom. Mitch Werbell died on December 18, 1983, in the Cardiac Unit of the UCLA Medical Center, after a brief illness. He was 65.

CHRIST'S ALIBI

Wilma Christ stated:

I talked to him at his office the day Kennedy was assassinated. He called me - and ah - or I called him I guess. I called him. But he knew. I remember my younger son was just coming home from school. So that would have been about 3:00 p.m. I don't really remember but I think I called him. Because I heard it on the T.V. I don't remember what time he came home from work. He came back that night. Oh, yeah.

A HSCA CIA document revealed:

Memorandum For: Legislative Counsel

Attention: Roger Gabrielson

Subject: HSCA Request

Reference: HSCA Memo 77-0058/12 December 22, 1977 (OLC 77-5685)

1. Per your request concerning Item 1 of Reference the following information is submitted:

Question: DAVID L. CHRIST.

Reported to have been in Dallas on November 22, 1963

A. We have searched for time and attendance records on DAVID L. CHRIST to determine his duty status on November 22, 1963. We have been informed that T & A records for all employees have been destroyed, and therefore we do not know his duty status on November 22, 1963.

B. We have searched the financial records of DAVID L. CHRIST to determine if he was in travel status on November 22, 1963. We did find that CHRIST performed travel to Boston, Mass. on November 26, 1963, and returned to Washington, D.C., on November 27, 1963. Transmitted to you separately are copies of his travel voucher and Request for Advance of Funds concerning his travel to and from Boston. It may be worth noting that CHRIST signed the request for advance of funds on November 20, 1963, and his secretary signed a receipt for the advance of funds on November 21, 1963.

C. We have not conducted a search for any records, memos, letters, buckslips etc. that might be in our files and contain initials or a signature of CHRIST signifying action by him on November 22, 1963. Such a search would require an extensive effort, and may not prove fruitful, but we are willing to make the effort if requested.

D. In addition, we have not attempted to question or obtain statements from CHRIST'S colleagues who may recall seeing or talking with CHRIST on November 22, 1963. Once again we are not sure such an action would be fruitful, but we are willing to make an effort if requested."

HSCA – A Projection April 26, 1978 Roger S. Gabrielson

(b.) DAVID CHRIST was questioned about his activities on November 22, 1963. He resembled the "unidentified man" of Dallas. Our records on his exact activities are vague. As this is a "flashy" issue, the Committee may press for a public hearing. This would jeopardize Christ and the others and would be tantamount to having the U.S. Government admit publicly to an old CIA operation on Cuban soil at a time when the Administration may be courting Cuba.

(c.) E. HOWARD HUNT may be called to discuss a report of the assassination which he purportedly wrote while at the Plumber's Unit. HSCA has requested access to our file on Hunt / Watergate. We have no known records of any such report.

David Christ,

David Christ was arrested in Cuba while on CIA assignment and was released months prior to the Kennedy assassination. He later resigned. The Committee has a photograph of three unidentified tramps in Dallas near the scene of the assassination which is remarkably similar to a picture of Christ taken when he arrived in the U.S. after release from prison. Christ was interviewed by the Committee and claims he was on duty at Headquarters on 22 November. DDS&T tried to locate time and attendance records for 1963, but they have been destroyed. Present or former employees who can attest to Christ's presence at Headquarters on 22 November have not yet been contacted. The Committee has not pursued this matter further and it is still open with the Committee.

HSCA INTERVIEW OF DAVID CHRIST ALIAS DANIEL CARSWELL

Gary Cornwell and I interviewed Daniel Carswell on 16 February 1978. Carswell stated that he had been in Cuba on two occasions. He was there for one week in the end of August and one week before his arrest in September 1960. After his arrest he spent one month in the Columbia prison in Havana. He was then transferred to the Cabana prison and was there until his trial in December 1960. Carswell met William Morgan at the Cabana prison. He stated that Morgan had all kinds of escape plots and that he, Carswell, had nothing to do with Morgan other than to tell him that he was not interested. Carswell stated that while at the Cabana prison he met six other Americans. He could only remember the names of three of them: James Gibson, James Bean and Dick Beck. After his trial, Carswell was transferred to the Isle of Pines. He said there were approximately 20 Americans in the Isle of Pines at the time. He remembered the names of three of them; John Jentile, Austin Young and Damo Proheus. Carswell was released on 21 April 1963. He returned to the U.S. with a group of approximately 20 other Americans. It was his memory that he landed at Opa Loma Air force Base in Florida. On his return, he said, he weighed approximately 135 pounds. Carswell did not return to work until August 1963. He said that the first time he was in Dallas was around 1969-70. He said that he was in his supervisor's office when he heard the news of the assassination. Carswell said that he met John Martino while he was in the Cabana prison. Martino told him he was in prison for installing electronic equipment in the Havana casinos. Martino was very talkative and said that he had been associated with the Batista government. Martino never specified who he was working for at the time of his arrest. Martino was, as far as Carswell can remember, never transferred to the Isle of Pines and was released prior to Carswell's release. Carswell met David Phillips once in (country) in the 1950's. Carswell stated that a Dick Clements told him about Mitch Werbell a year and a half ago. All he remembers is that Werbell was referred to as an arms dealer. Carswell said that he could not be sure about Bernardo de Torres because he had met a lot of Cubans and their names were confusing. Carswell said that he had met Howard Hunt once but did not know him personally. Anything Carswell knows about John Rosselli and Charles Siragusa, he says, comes from reading the newspaper. Carswell knew William Harvey in 1957-58 and termed him a "tough operator." Carswell says that he had never heard of Lee Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby before the assassination. Mr. Carswell was shown two photographs. The first he recognized as himself taken when he returned to the U.S. from Cuba. He admitted that there was a striking similarity with the second picture but said that he had never seen it before and had no idea of who it was. Carswell claimed that he had never been involved in any assassinations. The second picture was a blow up of one of the tramps photographed in Dallas on 11/22/63. Carswell said that he got the scar above his left eye when he was a child.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. General photo analysis to determine if the photo of Carswell and of the tramp are the same individual.
2. Specific photo analysis to determine if the tramp in the Dallas photo has a scar above his left eye.

CIA'S REPORT ON THE INTERVIEW

1. On February 16, 1978 Gary Cornwall and Dan Hardway, HSCA, interviewed Subject in Room 1115 of the Key Bridge Marriot Motel. The room was procured by the Office of Security in the name Carswell and the key was turned over to Hal Clark, DDS & T...
2. On arrival at the room Hardway was gone but Cornwall turned over their notes and left.
3. Christ asked Cornwall if he could talk about his interview and was told there was no objection. After Cornwall left Christ said that he was shown two pictures – one of himself as he got off the plane returning from Cuba and the other of the unidentified person (presumably the Carswell from Dallas). Christ says the resemblance between himself (as he got off the plane) and the man in Dallas was astonishing. Christ thinks he convinced them that he was not the same person.
5. Shepanek turned over the attached release to Mr. Cornwall in the Hotel room and Mr. Cornwall gave Mr. Shepanek an envelope addressed to Admiral Turner which was turned over to Rodger (?) OCC on (?) 1600 hours. O/SA/DO/O Norbert Shepanek

Norbert A. Shepanek, 70, a retired Central Intelligence Agency intelligence officer who was awarded a Career Achievement Medal, died of leukemia April 22, 1994. Shepanek, who lived in McLean, was born in Chicago. He grew up in Chicago and Poland. After Poland and Germany went to war in 1939, Shepanek served in the Polish underground until returning to this country in 1940. The following year, he entered the U.S. Army, then served in Europe. He held counterintelligence posts there after the war. Later in the 1940s, he returned to the United States with his wife about 1946 and later returned to live in Germany when he served abroad in the CIA.

This document was generated regarding Christ "Leave the Talent-Keyhole Program in the Talent Control System November 24, 1970." CHRIST voluntarily retired from the CIA in October 1970. In November 1971 the CIA stated: "Mr. Christ's imaginative leadership and inspiration to those working with him, his broad scope of interest, his resourcefulness and philosophical devotion to the cause of the Agency and the United States have provided this Agency with an individual whose unique efforts and accomplishments over his 20 years service are worthy of recognition." He received the Intelligence Medal of Merit. Former CIA Director Richard Helms was asked:

Q. And do you have any knowledge of an individual whose name is Daniel Carswell?

A. Daniel Carswell, no.

(Whereupon Mr. WEBERMAN conferred with Mr. Miller out of the hearing of the others and off the record, after which the following occurred)

THE WITNESS: I've heard the name of Carswell someplace, but I don't know whether it was the Judge who didn't become Supreme Court Justice or just where I've heard the name, but I can't elucidate in this context.

By Mr. Miller (Resuming):

Q. All right, do you know whether or not Charles Siragusa operating on behalf of the Agency, made an effort to get Mr. Carswell out of Cuba on behalf of the Agency?

A. No, I don't know anything about the operations he was conducting in Cuba.

Q. I asked you earlier about a Mr. CARSWELL, who you did not recall. I'm going to show you a photograph.

A. I don't know anything about this man. He doesn't he doesn't send any thing to, any message to me.

In December 1970 CHRIST was President and General Manager, Research and Development Division of Devenco Inc. 150 Broadway, New York City. CHRIST held a top secret clearance. Devenco had developed an invisible electronic prison fence which it demonstrated to various law enforcement agencies. The company was also developing "Electronics, (all frequencies) including radar, communications and servomechanisms, optimum filters, basic communications equipment and infra-red." Devenco was also into developing acoustics, high frequency electromagnetic phenomena and physical research (crystals, optics, chemical cells etc.)

Another Devenco project was described thusly:

This paper discusses the analysis and design of a vehicle location, monitoring, or communications system that exploits the readily available traffic light system. Optical path transmission of digital data from the traffic-light-heads to passing vehicles permits direct, unambiguous location information to be obtained without any additional spectrum utilization. Location information is processed in the vehicle and combined with vehicle identification and status data for subsequent automatic reporting to a base station. Reporting to the base station is done through the use of the vehicle-to-base communications radios that already exist in vehicles that need such location or status information (such as police cars); or equipment can be readily added because the service and channel assignments already exist, as in the cases of school-bus and public transportation vehicles.

In January 1971 CHRIST worked for the Itek Corporation and received a Top Secret, Industrial Security, CIA clearance. This researcher has been unable to find any record of the Disco/Itek Corporation; however the Itek Corporation was heavily involved in CIA contract work. The CEO of Itek in 1975, Franklin T. Lindsay, was a former official of the CIA. Itek developed the cameras used in the Corona Spy Satellites.

Division of Itek Corporation, 645 Almanor Avenue, Sunnyvale, California. Applied Technology conducts research into electronic warfare devices and other high tech defense projects.

JUNE 1974

On June 20, 1974 CHRIST's CIA File was flagged and reviewed by Frederick N. Evans in relation to matters pertaining to Watergate and forwarded to the Inspector General by CIA Office of Security. It was reviewed in relation to McCord CIARDS matter. In a CIA Memo entitled INFORMATON IN REGARD TO WATERGATE dated May 24, 1973, this appeared:

6. With regard to contacts or associations with Mr. McCord, David Christ Donald Reiser, Thomas Noe, Jim Stephan, and John Van Dewerker had dealt or worked with him as Chief of the Tech Division / Office of Security but none has had any association since that time.

7. No one in ORD knows of any contacts Mr. Hunt or Mr. McCord may recently have had with the Agency. Sayre Stevens. Director of Research and Development.

In relation to his employment with Household Data Services Christ agreed:

I am aware that any classified information that I or my organization may possess, compile or acquire as a result of the contemplated or existing relationship with the U.S. Government may affect the national defense of the United States. I am also aware of and accept the fact that I have a personal and individual responsibility for the protection of all such information in my possession no matter how acquired. Signed, David L. Christ August 7, 1975.

In 1975 the CIA noted CHRIST'S file contained the "following flags of interest."

1. Cross reference sheet - January 4, 1971 with 0=607446/Cuban Imprisonment of Agency Audio Technicians
2. A sealed envelope to be opened only by designated officials.
3. Watergate file review. [CIA File 0-602744]

From May 1975 to November 1975 visited with Charles Gandy and Mr. Mineberger for the purpose of reviewing a CLASSIFIED RFP by NSA.

From his first assignment to the National Security Agency in 1955 as an Air Force 1st Lieutenant until his retirement as a civilian in 1986, Mr. Charles L. Gandy made significant contributions to the fields of signals intelligence, information assurance, and counterintelligence. His work in research, development, and deployment of quick reaction capabilities greatly strengthened cryptologic community support to the highest levels of government. Although most of the details must remain classified, Mr. Gandy's contributions enabled the NSA to anticipate key activities of foreign adversaries and determine where our own vulnerabilities existed. Much of this engineering work was in sensitive signals analysis and countermeasures development. Mr. Gandy's work in the field of remote control collection systems was applied during the Vietnam War, and helped save the lives of countless thousands of Americans.

Sometime in 1975 James W. Franklin, CIA Chief, Official Cover Branch, Cover and Commercial Staff asked the Department of the Army to cancel CHRIST's official cover backstop. On August 15, 1975, the Deputy Director for Science and Technology sent the following memorandum to the Office of the Inspector General, Subject: Disclosures by Walter Szuminski.

1. Recently Walter Szuminski reported some events to me which may have relevance to the assassination plots against Fidel Castro. These events relate to a time Szuminski was in a Cuban jail from September 1960 to April 1963 and shortly after his release. Szuminski, Thorton Anderson and David Christ were arrested when they were attempting to make an audio installation. CHRIST resigned some years ago [CHRIST was at CIA from 1956 to 1970] but Thorton J. Anderson and Walter Szuminski are still OTS employees.

2. Briefly, the first part of Thorton J. Anderson story is that while in prison, Anderson identified a weapon pictured in a Cuban newspaper, and described as having been confiscated from would-be assassins, as CIA equipment. The second part of his story is that after his release and return to duty, members of the Counter-Intelligence Staff showed him ZRCHEST files tending to prove that the Counter-Intelligence Staff had tried to negotiate with their contacts in the underworld in an attempt to buy his release. I asked Szuminski to write these matters up, which he did in two memos attached.

3. I conducted a limited investigation of the assassination weapon story, in that I cabled some questions to Anderson who is now PCS Yokosuka, Japan. Reply does not corroborate the essential point of Szuminski's story. My questions and Anderson's response are attached. Also I checked with Dan Hogan who has a long background in the particular branch of OTS which would have been involved in the preparation of the assassination weapon. He was familiar with the weapon, but could not recollect every obtaining one for use in Cuba, nor could anyone else in the branch. Just about the same time we obtained copies of the photographs given by Fidel Castro to Senator McGovern, ostensibly to illustrate all the way in which the CIA had attempted to get Castro killed. Hogan checked the photos and there were none which showed a modified High-Standard .22 cal pistol. His memo is also attached. Thus I have no corroboration for Szuminski's story.

4. With respect to the account by Szuminski of CI Staff's underworld contacts, I merely replayed the story to the present head of the CI Staff and he promised to check it out.

5. It does not seem to me there is anything else I can or should do about these matters at this time. However, I thought it would be advisable to relay these stories to you in case you would wish to conduct more extensive investigations.

[CIA OTS David S. Brandwein, Director, Office of Technical Services Memo 8.15.75]

The memos stated:

During the period September 1960 through April 1963, while a prisoner of Cuban G-2 at Isle of Pines, there were occasional newspapers and magazines that were smuggled into prison that had headlined stories about alleged CIA assassination teams that had landed in Cuba, and how certain Cuban G-2, through its superior intelligence, had apprehended these teams, seized their equipment, shot the leaders of the group, and sent the rest of the team to jail for long prison terms. One of these reports had particular significance for myself and the two other Agency employees who were at the time being held at the Isle of Pines. An article in the Cuban Army Magazine Verde Oliva was being distributed through the prison by local authorities. This was an unusual happening since no books, newspapers, or other reading material was permitted to the prisoners. In any case, the magazine featured the story of a group eight to 12 men that had been apprehended by the Cuban G-2, after landing on the north coast of Cuba in a rubber boat. The mission of the group, according to the article, was to assassinate Fidel. At first glance this was not unusual since everyone landing on the coast was usually charged with this. The thing that made this particular effort stand out in my mind was the detailed interview of the leader of the group. The weapons were U.S. military hardware - Springfield rifles with spotting scopes, I.R. sniper scopes, ammo, plus a modified hi-standard .22 caliber silenced pistol. Among our group was one engineer who had an intimate knowledge of special weapons produced for the Agency and there was no doubt in his mind that the hi-standard .22 was Agency equipment. Years later I had the opportunity to handle similar equipment, and this confirmed in my mind what I saw in Cuba was the same equipment. [NARA 1993.08.11.17:52:17:680028]

John Mertz commented,

No, none of them knew about guns. They didn't come into contact with that. They were audio technicians, electronics guys. The two other guys worked for CHRIST. They worked for Technical Services in the audio division. They were wiretappers. They were clerks. CHRIST was Chief of Technical Service's Audio Division. The Cubans thought he was a private operator.

DAVID LEMAR CHRIST AND EDWIN WILSON

Edwin P. Wilson was born May 3, 1923, at Napa, Idaho. He was six feet four inches tall. He came from a poor family and was 14 when his father died and he became the provider. He joined the Marines in 1952 and served nearly three years before his discharge as first lieutenant. On November 1, 1955, the day of his discharge from the Marines, he joined the CIA in Korea. He was a Staff employee of the Office of Security of the CIA from 1955 to 1960, after which he became a staff agent. During this time Edwin P. Wilson said he worked on security for the U-2. He was used by the International Organizations Division in international labor union affairs and later was used by Special Operations Division to run a Washington, D.C., maritime proprietary. Ex-CIA contract employee Ernest R. Keiser said he saw Edwin P. Wilson in Miami in April 1961. Jack Anderson reported that Wilson was involved in the Bay of Pigs invasion and in a scheme to have dolphins attach explosive charges to Cuban ships. Edwin P. Wilson told private detective Richard Bast that in 1964 he served as an advance man for Senator Hubert Humphrey, while still working for the CIA. Edwin P. Wilson resigned from the CIA in February 1971 and became a contract agent for Naval Intelligence. The Navy set him up in a proprietary very similar to the one he had used while with the Agency for the purpose of providing non-official cover to the Office of Naval Intelligence agents serving overseas under a Project known as Task Force 157. Task Force 157 was a group of about 75 agents who gathered intelligence around the world under the cover of export-import operations. Wilson's assignment was to set up a front called Consultants International, through which agents would be run and supplied. It was a joint CIA/Navy operation. Wilson, as paymaster, was able to embezzle a fortune from the operation. Naval Task Force 157 was shut down by then-Navy Intelligence Director

Bobby Inman because of the behavior of Edwin P. Wilson. [Jack Anderson Wash. Post 6.30.77] Wilson had lunch with Inman in early 1976 and told Inman that he would employ his contacts in the Congress to lobby on behalf of Inman's naval budget requests if Inman in return would help funnel government contract's to Wilson's businesses. [Wash. Post 9.12.81] Mr. Wilson was terminated by the Navy in early 1976. In June 1976 Edwin P. Wilson and former CIA Agent Frank Terpil obtained a military contract from Libya worth tens of millions of dollars. Frank Terpil's wife was the secretary of William F. Buckley. Terpil knew DAVID PHILLIPS. Author Jim Hougan reported that Terpil told him he had been introduced to PHILLIPS by Hal Hendrix, who had a daughter Terpil knew. Terpil told Hougan that PHILLIPS used the name BISHOP when he knew him at the CIA. Terpil checked the name BISHOP in CIA indices and found that BISHOP was DAVID PHILLIPS. [The Last Investigation, Fonzi, page 364]

THE CIA WHITE PAPER ON WILSON

The Libyan Case first came to the Agency's attention on September 7, 1976, when Kevin Mulcahy, a former Agency employee, contacted Theodore Shackley, Associate Deputy Director for Operations, and advised Mr. Shackley that he wished to meet with Agency officials to discuss the activities of a firm he was associated with known as the 'International Technologies Incorporated.' Mr. Mulcahy indicated that the firm was ostensibly involved in a project in Libya to clear World War II mine fields. But Mr. Mulcahy had become suspicious that more than mine clearing was involved. Early on September 8, 1976, Mr. Mulcahy was in touch with Mr. Thomas A. Cox of the Inspector General's Office who met with Mr. Mulcahy later in the day. During this meeting Mr. Mulcahy indicated that he had come across some documents in the office of Edwin P. Wilson which led Kevin Mulcahy to conclude that Inter-Tech Incorporated was involved in a program to teach covert sabotage techniques to individuals in Libya and that the mine clearing project was merely a cover. Mr. Wilson is a former Agency employee and according to Mr. Mulcahy, he is the owner of Inter-Technology. Mr. Mulcahy gave Mr. Cox copies of the documents-- one of which was a proposal to conduct a program to teach covert sabotage techniques and other clandestine trade craft using the cover of mine sweeping operation. The second was a copy of a contract between Inter-Technology and John H. Harper, a former Agency employee, under which Mr. Harper agreed to go to Libya to teach mine disposal techniques for one year at a salary of $98,000. It was during this meeting with Mr. Cox that Mr. Mulcahy alleged that a current Agency employee was receiving payments from Inter-Technology in return for arranging to have an Agency contractor, American Electronics Laboratory, manufacture sophisticated timing devices. Mr. Mulcahy alleged that he personally had delivered the money to our employee on several occasions at the Ramada Inn at Tyson's

Corner, Virginia, and that our employee had taken a cut of $3,700 from the $15,000 cash payment which was made to the contractor for the timing device.

In both his phone conversation with Mr. Shackley and his meeting with Mr. Cox, Mr. Mulcahy behaved in an excited and emotional fashion and appeared to Mr. Cox to be under the influence of alcohol. In addition, Mr. Mulcahy had been interviewed by a representative of the FBI on September 6, 1976, and on September 7, 1976, behaved in a similar fashion and did not impress the FBI agent as a reliable informant. Mr. Mulcahy limited his conversation with the FBI agent to the allegations regarding the activities of Inter-Technology in Libya and did not mention any information concerning our current employee. The FBI prepared a report for his Headquarters but apparently did not place much credence or significance in Mr. Mulcahy's story.

Following receipt by the Agency of the information from Mr. Mulcahy, internal checks were conducted which tended to confirm certain aspects of his story. The Agency employee did have official dealings with American Electronic Laboratory and the American Electronic Laboratory employees mentioned by Mr. Mulcahy did have security clearance for work on Agency contracts. Our employee, however, is not an authorized contracting officer. In addition, the Agency received an independent report from a retired Agency employee that Mr. Wilson had approached him on September 3, 1976, with a proposal to undertake a mission to Libya which would involve teaching explosive manufacturing techniques to individuals nominated by the Libyan Government. The offer included a salary of $100,000 per year and other fringe benefits. When the retired employee declined the offer, Mr. Wilson pressed him for the name of someone else who might be qualified to handle the job. A name was provided but this person also refused Mr. Wilson's offer.

Based on the foregoing a decision was made by the Deputy Director of the CIA to formally refer this case to the FBI. Mr. Vernon Weimar, FBI Liaison Officer, was briefed on the case on September 13, 1976, by the Director of Security and also met with the Deputy Inspector General on the same day...On September 21, 1976, a second memorandum was forwarded to the FBI containing additional information which had come to the Agency's attention -- the most significant of which was the fact that a former operational asset of the Agency had reported on September 19, 1976, that he also had been approached by Mr. Wilson. The asset and two fellow members of the Florida Cuban community had been requested to meet Mr. Wilson in Europe. They met in Geneva, Switzerland on September 15, 1976, where Mr. Wilson and a second individual, identified only as 'Frank' but believed to be a former Agency employee by the name of Francis E. Terpil, proposed that the three Cubans undertake the mission to teach covert sabotage techniques in Libya and to undertake an assassination mission of a Libyan who had 'defected' to Egypt. The three Cubans declined and returned immediately to the United States where one of them contacted his former Directorate of Plans Case Officer to report the approach by Mr. Wilson. [The FBI was given biographic material on the individuals involved by the CIA]

During his contacts with members of the Agency, Kevin Mulcahy mentioned two other firms as being involved in supplying material to Inter-Technology for the Libyan project. These firms were Scientific Communications Inc. and 'Household Electronics,' subsequently identified as Household Data Service, a firm owned by a former Agency employee, David L. Christ. Both of these firms have contracts with the Agency. The role of Household Data Services has not as yet been made clear, but Scientific Communications Inc. was providing timing devices to Inter-Technology for use in Libya. A representative of Scientific Communications Inc. has stated that his company's participation was legal and he was not operating under the impression that there was a CIA connection with the project.

The Office of Security is aware that since his departure for the Agency in 1971. Mr. Wilson has been engaged in sales efforts in the international arms and electronic equipment field. His activities have come to the attention of the FBI on several occasions in the past few years and investigations have been conducted in terms of failure to register as an agent of a foreign power and similar matters. However, Mr. Wilson has also been of concern to this office and to the FBI due to associations in 1967, 1968 with Kenneth B. Tolliver, a former Staff Aide to Senator James Eastland. Mr. Wilson reported at the time on Mr. Tolliver's suspicious activities, believing him to be an agent of Rhodesian or South African Intelligence. However, it was subsequently determined that Mr. Tolliver had been recruited by the KGB, and was later run as a double agent by the FBI...Tolliver has admitted that he passed Mr. Wilson's name to the KGB as having been employed by the CIA.

During the period of his association with the Agency as well as during his subsequent association with the Navy, Mr. Wilson has been active in many business ventures, presumably on his own time. As a result he has managed to become a man of some apparent wealth, as evidenced by this residence in Upperville, Virginia, which is described as a 1,600 acre farm.

A final point in regard to Mr. Wilson concerns a phone conversation he had with Kevin Mulcahy's mother on September 22, 1976. Mr. Wilson had returned to the United States, had heard that Kevin Mulcahy was spreading stories about him (Wilson) and had called Mrs. Mulcahy seeking information about Kevin. During this conversation Mr. Wilson made the statement to the effect that Kevin 'might get killed along with the others' as a result of this problem. When Mrs. Mulcahy challenged him on this apparent threat, Mr. Wilson immediately backed down and stated that he meant that he (Mr. Wilson) might get killed, not Kevin. However, in a later interview with the FBI, Donald Mulcahy, Kevin's father and also a former Agency employee, spoke well of Mr. Wilson and stated that Kevin has a long history of fabricating stories. He pointed out that Kevin was of that moment hospitalized for detoxification. [Edwin P. Wilson also threatened to kill the wife of prosecution witness Peter R. Goulding and the federal prosecutor.]

Another key figure in this case is former Agency employee Francis E. Terpil. He was employed by the Agency from 1965 until 1972, at which time he was asked to resign under prejudice as a result of an unauthorized trip from New Delhi to Kabul. Since his resignation he has been active in the sale of arms and electronic equipment in the Middle East and has frequently come to the attention of the Agency as a result of his efforts to leave the impression that he is still employed by the Agency. He has been of interest to the FBI on several occasions since 1972 in regard to charges such as failure to register as an agent of a foreign power and the illegal exporting of positive audio devices. Mr. Terpil's role in the Libyan case is not entirely clear although his name does appear on the proposal found in Mr. Wilson's office regarding the teaching of covert sabotage techniques, and he is believed to be the 'Frank' who participated in the pitch made to the three Cubans in Geneva. Recent cable traffic indicates that Mr. Terpil is connected with a company known as Stanford Technology Corporation which is engaged in electronic equipment sales in the Middle East and may be bidding for some of the business connected with the IBEX project in Iran.

A remaining former Agency employee whose name has been mentioned by Kevin Mulcahy but whose role in this matter has not been determined is DAVID L. CHRIST. MR. CHRIST owns an electronics firm known as Household Data Services, in Reston, Virginia. This firm currently has some contracts with the Agency. Kevin Mulcahy has never specified what part MR. CHRIST and his firm play in this case, and no other information concerning them has come to our attention as yet.

Raymond M. Reardon of the Special Analysis Group commented:

Aside from the allegation originally made by Kevin Mulcahy, there is no indication that the Subject [CHRIST] was ever involved in the Libyan case. The full file on the Libyan Case is held in Special Analysis Group.

ATLAS POWDER COMPANY

CHRIST was also connected to the Libyan flap through the Atlas Powder Company. Raymond Reardon noted: "CHRIST at one time (1940's) worked for the Atlas Powder Company in Reynolds, Pa. FBI report indicates Ed Wilson may have had a contact in Atlas in connection with obtaining export license." [CIA Reardon SAG 2.25.77]

CHRIST AND WILSON

There was no indication in CHRIST'S CIA file that he was ever questioned about his connection with Wilson. According to Jack Anderson, the supplies provided to Libya included explosives concealed in common household items like ashtrays, lamps, coat hangers etc. [Anderson Wash. Post 12.20.82] CHRIST was an explosives expert. Were these products designed by Household Data Services and assembled in Libya? The Washington Post reported "Prosecutors charged that Wilson arranged with a California explosives dealer to buy and ship 42,300 pounds of C-4 explosive, from Houston to Libya on October 3, 1977, aboard a chartered cargo jet. Government testimony indicated that part of the C-4 was used to make exploding lamps, toasters and other booby traps for Libyan terrorists." Edwin P. Wilson also hired John Henry Harper, a former CIA explosives expert, to construct these explosive devices. The Washington Post reported

John Henry Harper was one of the first explosives experts recruited by Wilson from the ranks of his former CIA colleagues to help the Libyans build exploding lamps, ashtrays, coat hangers, teapots and other terrorist instruments. The purpose of these exploding devices, which were assembled in a hideaway desert laboratory at the Winter palace of Libya's deposed monarch, King Idris, according to the investigative summary, was described by Wilson: 'You know, the colonel (Qaddafi) may sometimes have some young colonels or some officers or something that are getting out of line that he wants to send a present to. [9.12.81]

EDWIN WILSON: THE CIA'S MOST NOTORIOUS RENEGADE

Wilson amassed $14 million dollars. He had real estate holding that included a 2,400 acre farm in Upperville, Virginia. Much of this came from his dealings with the Libyans. Wilson bribed government officials. He contracted former Green Berets to go to Libya and teach Libyans the techniques of terrorism. The guns and explosives (C-4) that he sold the Libyans would be used against Libyan dissidents and American civilians. He arranged for the assassination of Omran El-Mehdawi, a former finance attache and second secretary in the Libyan Embassy, in Fort Collins, Colorado. In May 1979, Robert A. Manina, an associate of Edwin Wilson, had his Jaguar blown up in his driveway of his home in Kitchener, Ontario, Canada. Eugene Tafoya, the same man charged in the shooting of Omran El-Mehdawi, was charged in this bombing. [Wash Post 8.3.82] Wilson planned to sell the Libyans nuclear technology which could have resulted in the loss of millions of American lives. He was a truly amoral individual and his association with DAVID CHRIST was indicative of where CHRIST stood within the CIA. Edwin P.

Wilson first surfaced in the press during the investigation in April 1977 of the assassination of Orlando Letelier. Bob Woodward wrote:

A former CIA explosives expert and three Cuban exiles will soon be sought by Federal authorities for questioning in the interrogation of last year's Embassy Row murder of former Chilean Ambassador Orlando Letelier, according to informed sources. Edwin P. Wilson, the former CIA operative, and the three Miami-based Cuban exiles came to the attention of Federal officials when they learned that Wilson was under FBI investigation in an unrelated assassination plot abroad. Wilson allegedly sought to recruit the three Cubans to kill a political opponent of Libyan leader Col. Omar Quadaffi last year, according to the sources. Wilson heads a small consultanting firm here called Consultant's International. It is involved in the arms export business. Wilson was out of the country yesterday and could not be reached for comment. In reviewing the information developed in the Libyan investigation of Wilson investigators have established three possible connections with the Letelier case. Wilson had a secret contract with the Libyan government to provide detonation devices called 'timing pencils' a tube filled with chemicals that can be remotely controlled to trigger explosions. Such a timing pencil is believed to have been used to detonate the bomb that exploded beneath Letelier's car. The three Cuban exiles arrived in the Washington, D.C. area just three days before the September 21, 1976, bombing of Letelier's car. One of the Cuban exiles, an explosives expert believed to have been trained by the CIA in the late 1960's, met in Miami recently with a close associate with other Cuban exiles who have been suspects in the Letelier case. [Wash. Post 4.12.77]

Wilson's attorney, Seymour Glanzer, represented one of the main figures in the Letelier case, Michael Townley, who pleaded guilty and testified against Cubans for a reduced sentence. In 1995 DINA chiefs Manuel Contreras and Pedro Espinoza were sentenced to six and seven years respectively for ordering the Letelier assassination. In 1996, Michael Townley, who was under the witness protection program, was summoned to testify before an Argentinean magistrate who was investigating the murder of Chilean General Carlo Pratt and his wife in Buenos Aires. In 1996 Townley's associate in DINA, Eugenio Berrios, who was involved in sarin attacks on Chilean dissidents and who helped Townley construct the bomb that killed Letelier was found shot to death on beach in Uruguay. His hands were cut off and his face was stripped off in an effort to prevent identification. Edwin P. Wilson was indicted in absentia on April 23, 1980. From 1979 to 1980 Edwin P. Wilson lived in Tripoli. During this period Wilson met with United States Attorney E. Lawrence Barcella, Jr. in Rome. Wilson offered to kidnap two suspects in the assassination of Orlando Letelier -- Jose Dionisio Suarez and Virgilio Pablo Paz -- if the charges against him were dropped. [Wash. Post 7.26.81] Jack Anderson alleged that Wilson was connected with Samuel Cummings of INTERARMCO. [Wash. Post 10.9.81]

RAPHAEL QUINTERO AND RAOUL VILLAVERDE

The Washington Post reported:

Both prosecution witnesses [against Wilson], Raphael Quintero of Vero Beach, and Raoul Villaverde of Miami, said they were veterans of the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion and had met Wilson during the preparations for that abortive CIA operation. A third Cuban American, Villaverde's brother Raphael, who also was allegedly recruited for the death plot by Wilson, died in a boating accident [in the Bahamas] in March 1980.

Villaverde's speedboat exploded and he disappeared at sea. Hinkle and Turner named Raul Villaverde, Rafael 'Chi Chi' Quintero, Lois Posada Carriles, Felix Rodriguez (aka Max Gomez), FRANK FIORINI, and Ricardo Chavez as members of Operation Forty. Hinkle and Turner stated that Joaquin Sanjenis directed Operation Forty for almost ten years, until his death and that Sanjenis was initially under the overall control of HOWARD HUNT. The Christie Institute alleged that Thomas Clines, an associate of Edwin Wilson, and Ted Shackley were involved with Operation Forty. The explosion aboard Villaverde's craft was later ruled an accident. In the 1980's the Villaverde's played a key role in the La Penca conspiracy by traveling to Chile and recruiting Amac Galil, as the assassin to plant a bomb at a press conference held by Castro's secretary, Eden Pastora. [Cockburn, Out of Control p99] The Villaverdes were also involved with the Nugan Hand Bank, which was connected to Werbell through Rear Admiral (retired) Earl P. Yates. [Tribune, Australia, 4.13.83] Wilson and his associates were experts at constructing and planting explosive devices. Raphael Villaverde was going to testify against Wilson. He died in an explosion.

THE DEATH OF KEVIN MULCAHY AND WALDO H. DUBBERSTEIN

Kevin Mulcahy, the son of a career CIA official, resigned from his job as a communications specialist with the CIA in 1968 and in 1976 joined Wilson, Terpil and others in the Libya project, claiming he thought the activities had the agencies blessings. Mulcahy said he later split from Wilson after Wilson ordered him to procure a heat-seeking Redeye missile for the Libyans from the General Dynamics Corporation. Mulcahy was concerned the missile might be used in a terrorist attack on a commercial jetliner. On October 26, 1982, Kevin Mulcahy, 39, died in at a run down motel in Edinburg, Virginia. Mulcahy had been asked to leave the hotel after shooting birds shot out of his window. Mulcahy was found wedged between the screen and front door of the Mountain View Hotel where rooms rented for $50 a week. Clad only in street cloths, and grey sports coat and slacks that were dropped to his knees. Mulcahy was discovered by Linda Messick at 8:00 a.m.: "He was in a hunched up position with his arms crossed." Della Morris, 71, a year long resident of a cottage next to the one rented by Mulcahy said Mulcahy stayed in his cottage most of the week, except for two trips to obtain what she believed to be alcohol. After motel owner David Stalker told Mulcahy he would have to leave, he piled Mulcahy's belongings in Mulcahy's pick up truck then left. Though Stalker said Mulcahy told him that he was going to the University of Virginia Hospital in Charlottesville, to get a second opinion on a recently diagnosed cancer, Mulcahy did not leave. Police later found the keys to his truck inside the locked cottage. Della Morris observed Mulcahy at this time: "He was staggering. He kept slumping over the steering wheel and would lean on the horn every so often. Then he started hollering for David Stalker for about 20 minutes. He kept fading off. I didn't hear no more of him the whole night." In Mulcahy's truck police said they found five suitcases, a quilt, a carton of cigarettes, the 12-gauge shotgun and a canvas windbreaker containing an unopened bottle of wine. Three of the suitcases were filled with documents from the CIA, notes and tape recordings. The suitcases were given to the FBI. [Wash. Post 10.28.82] The cause of death was "exposure and complications of existing health problems...bronchial pneumonia and emphysema." It was suggested that Mulcahy had been locked out of his room and died of exposure after the temperature fell to 40 degrees A case of 12 empty wine bottles were found in Mulcahy's room, but his blood alcohol level was low. Mulcahy turned down a chance to be in the Federal Witness Protection program. His death was definitely suspicious. Why had he discharged his weapon? Why didn't he get in his car and turn the heater on? The weather was not below freezing, why should he have frozen to death? On April 29, 1983, Waldo H. Dubberstein, a former associate of Edwin P. Wilson, was killed with a shotgun that he had recently purchased. He left a suicide note declaring his innocence. Dubberstein, 75, lived with a German woman aged 32. His death was ruled a suicide. Waldo H. Dubberstein, 75, had worked for the CIA from 1947 to 1971, when he left for the Defense Intelligence Agency. Waldo H. Dubberstein was indicted for unauthorized disclosure of classified information, and he had access to design plans for nuclear weapons. [Wash. Post 5.3.83] He was accused of meeting with the Libyans with the knowledge of the Defense Intelligence Agency. He faced 57 years in prison.

RICHARD SECORD AND THEODORE SHACKLEY

Secord first met Wilson through Thomas G. Clines, a CIA official in 1972 and Wilson's case officer at the CIA. Secord testified at Wilson's trial that at meetings with Wilson in Iran and Belgium in the late 1970's and in 1980 Wilson offered data about Libyan military activities. [Wash. Post 2.4.83] Edwin P. Wilson was in touch with Theodore Shackley. He said he had provided the CIA with information on Libya plans to build a nuclear bomb. John Heath, a former employee of Edwin P. Wilson, said Edwin P. Wilson had bragged that he was going to sell nuclear technology to Libya. Edwin P. Wilson threatened to kill John Heath during a conversation he had with him from Edwin P. Wilson's jail cell in New York. Theodore Shackley admitted being in contact with Edwin P. Wilson, but said he cut off contact with him after allegations of his misdeeds arose. The House Intelligence Committee could not find any evidence of official contact between Wilson and Shackley and Cline. [Wash. Post 2.3.83] An associate of Wilson, Douglas M. Schlacter, testified that he met with Thomas G. Clines and Theodore Shackley, during which time they discussed obtaining information on the Soviets, Koreans etc. Shackley and Clines were partners in a consulting firm in Rosslyn, Virginia. When Edwin P. Wilson sent a letter to the U.S. Customs Service which stated that the Tencom Corporation of Northbrook, Illinois, was a supplier of aircraft parts to Libya, Myles Ambrose represented Tencom.

WILSON'S TRIAL

On February 13, 1982, Schlacter pleaded guilty to one count of transportation of explosives in return for his testimony about Wilson. Edwin P. Wilson was lured back to the United States on June 16, 1982, through the efforts of Ernest R. Keiser and Seymour Hersh. They convinced him he could meet with U.S. Government representatives in the Dominican Republic without fear of arrest, by showing him a letter on National Security Council stationery which authorized a meeting, but when he arrived in the Dominican Republic with a false passport, he was flown to the United States. Edwin Wilson's defense was that he worked for the CIA at the time of his dealings with Libya and he had done so at the request of the CIA. His mission was to set up a proprietary in Libya to mask espionage operations on Soviet tanks, MIG fighters and mines. Richard V. Secord, deputy assistant secretary of Defense in charge of Mideast arms sales and Bobby Inman of the CIA, testified that Wilson was not working for the CIA at the time he made the arms sales. [Wash. Post 11.10. 82] On December 21, 1982, Edwin P. Wilson was sentenced to 15-years for smuggling arms to Libya in 1979. In January 1983 Edwin P. Wilson and his son conspired to have five witnesses and two prosecutors murdered. Wilson associate Alexander Raffio accused Wilson of attempting to ship explosives to the PLO while he was in prison, via telephone calls to Wilson's office in London, England.

CHRIST, WILSON AND THE HSCA

HSCA investigator Dan Hardway was sent the newly released CHRIST documents then contacted in June 1994. Dan Hardway: "I don't remember any of that. We did not look at the stuff about his involvement with Wilson. I don't recall having interviewed him. I remember the name. Some critics suggested he was QJ/WIN. Mankel was QJ/WIN." Scott Malone reported that Edwin P. Wilson claimed to have special knowledge of the Kennedy assassination. HEMMING told this researcher:

I ran across Wilson in the 1960's. Ed Wilson was working for the Mossad penetrating terrorist networks. He did a dangerous, dirty job. His grandfather was a Jew. He's a patriot. He got hung out to dry like I did. I had people visit him a while back and talk to him. We can knock his conviction down if he talks about certain things.

Frank Terpil was arrested in Cuba in September 1995. [Wilson, Edwin #08237-054 USP Atlanta POB PMB Atlanta, Ga. 30315]

THE CIA'S INVESTIGATION OF CHRIST IN REGARD TO THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY

The second investigation of CHRIST by the CIA's Office of Security and the Office of the Inspector General began as a result of an August 2, 1977, Freedom of Information Act request for records and photographs of DANIEL L. CARSWELL filed by this researcher. [NARA 1993.07.12.17:17:49:590280] The CIA already knew CHRIST was connected with Edwin P. Wilson, of its most notorious renegades. My request was not answered immediately: "As long as Office of Security is still investigating, we'll not respond." David S. Brandwein, Office of Technical Services, determined the CARSWELL file was exempt from release. Copies of his letter to this researcher were sent to "DDO, OTS, Mr. Hetu. OGC, OGC\Ziebell, ips/chrono, ips/F-77-730; 731;769 and F-76-173. F-77-367; F-77-326." CIA was hesitant about turning over Christ's files to the HSCA.

Let's discuss the Christ case I feel it is a shotgun approach to review the file on the basis presented. I would certainly cooperate to give them everything on the (deleted) angle – the whole file is another matter – unless it is approved by D/OS. At this point the predication is weak and I don't want (?) to get into the habit of reaching for the Security Files in all cases. Another note on that document read, Note: The IG never did review Christ's (deleted) file. The information he was looking for was confirmed though another source and Mr. Young withdrew his requests. ### THIS RESEARCHER OFFERS THE FBI THE TRAMP SHOTS

The FBI's Letter Head Memorandum of March 29, 1978, at Washington, D.C.:

At 4:13 p.m., March 17, 1978, Alan Jules Weberman, approached an FBI employee in the Interview Room at FBI Headquarters and said he had been reviewing the Freedom of Information Act release of the FBI investigation into the assassination of Kennedy. He stated that he had a series of four photographs he wanted to submit to the FBI concerning three unidentified individuals who were held as suspects by the DPD for a short period immediately after the assassination. Weberman is sure he can identify two of the three individuals, one being DANIEL L. CARSWELL...Mr. Weberman was advised that this information would be provided to the appropriate personnel at FBI Headquarters, and he would be contacted at 6 Bleecker Street if it became necessary to obtain his four photographs.

The FBI investigated my background and in a Memorandum from F.X. O'Brien to Mr. Moore

...a review of Bureau files discloses that WEBERMAN was the Subject of Bureau file 100-472405, captioned, 'Alan Jules Weberman - Subversive Matter - Youth International Party and Bureau file 190-1636, which is an Freedom of Information Act file. File 100-472405 shows that Weberman in 1974 was employed as a writer by the Alternative Press Syndicate and he attended the YIP Smoke-In which was held in Washington, D.C. on July 4, 1973. In August 1973 he was reportedly handling YIP business for his apartment in New York City. He was one of the organizers of a demonstration in Washington, D.C. on November 23, 1973, which was held to promote interest in the reopening of the investigation of the Kennedy assassination. The file was closed in 1974. A preliminary investigation regarding him was instituted on April 28, 1976, for the purpose of determining his activities with YIP and their plans for disrupting the Democratic National Convention held in New York City. It was determined that he did not engage in any violent acts nor did he exhibit a propensity for violence and the case was closed.

It was up to William Webster, who had succeeded FBI Director Clarence Kelley on February 9, 1978, as FBI Director, to decide if the FBI should re-examine the tramp shots. Former FBI Director Clarence Kelley became a Wackenhut Security Company Director. Wackenhut Directors included Admiral William Raborn, the Director of the CIA from April 28, 1965, to June 30, 1966. On April 6, 1978, FBI Director William Webster or someone acting on his behalf again sent the March 29, 1978, Letter Head Memorandum regarding my offer to the FBI to Robert L. Keuch. Attached to the Letter Head Memorandum was a form that recommended refusing my offer:

This is submitted for your information, and no further investigation will be conducted, unless specifically requested by the Justice Department. Note: A review of Bureau file 64-47305 discloses that DANIEL L. CARSWELL was referred to in file captioned, 'Repatriation of American Citizens, Havana, Cuba, January 3, 1963, Internal Security, Cuba and Bureau file 105-38509 captioned Joaquin Angel Ossorio, aka Joaquin Jack Ossorio - Internal Security - Cuba. Bureau file 105-38509 discloses that on July 29, 1963, New York was requested to interview Daniel L. Carswell, 14 Faton Place, Eastchester, New York regarding his knowledge of Joaquin Jack Ossorio.

Ossorio was connected with Mike McLaney and William Morgan and might have been imprisoned with CHRIST in Cuba. The next page of this document has also been withheld [Document 33 p2 & enc. Pg. 1] (Deleted by FBI) "As the Department may recall, the FBI has conducted previous investigation to identify the three Subjects in custody of the Dallas Police Department on November 22, 1963. As late as April 21, 1975, the FBI reported to the Commission on CIA Activities Within the United States that extensive photographic examination caused the FBI to conclude ...that neither E. HOWARD HUNT nor FRANK STURGIS appear as any of the three derelicts arrested in Dallas, Texas..."

The memo contained a review of FBI files on me that omitted the FBI's conclusion that I was non-violent. [FBI Bufile 64-47305; Document 32; Document 33 p2 & encl. p1; Document 31 p82; FBI 62-109060-1ST NR 7890X4] On April 13, 1978, a memo from the "Director, (62-109060)" to Assistant Attorney General Keuch, of the Criminal Division. Attached to this memo was a copy of an article from the YIPster Times which concerned the HUNT v. WEBERMAN lawsuit. "NOTE: The attached media article is furnished for your information as it may bear on the motivation of WEBERMAN when he approached this Bureau on March 17, 1978." [FBI 62-109060-1st NR 7894] I never heard from the FBI. In June 1978 I tried to subpoena DANIEL L. CARSWELL to testify in the matter of HUNT V. WEBERMAN by sending the subpoena to the CIA. John D. Morrison, Acting General Counsel, stated: "Upon receipt of attached subpoena I caused to be conducted search of all appropriate personnel records of this Agency, and based upon that inquiry have now determined that no individual by the name DANIEL L. CARSWELL is employed by the CIA." [ltr. to Marvin Miller 6.13.78]

CHRIST AND THE HSCA

In the spring of 1978, the HSCA asked the CIA if it could interview CHRIST. CHRIST met with the HSCA at CIA Headquarters. The HSCA exhibited the tramp photographs to CHRIST, who conceded the tramp resembled him. He said: "It's not me. I was at CIA Headquarters on November 22, 1963." Wilma Christ was asked if she was aware that her husband had been questioned by the HSCA. She said she was unaware of this. Many documents about CHRIST were withheld, including several generated by HSCA investigator Dan Hardway. [NARA 1993.07.14.18:23:02:280620 and NARA 1993.07.14.18:40:24: 680620] Some are illegible. [CIA Job #80Fo1357A Box 35 Folder 8; NARA 1993.08.11.17.57:51:150028] Withheld documents included one dated September 20, 1960. [NARA 1993.08.11.18:10:13:370028]

DECLASSIFIED February 2003

Memo to: C/HRG

Subject: Walter E. Szuminski

1. Szuminski, David Christ and Thronton Anderson were arrested and imprisoned in Cuba (1960) under the names of Edmund Taransky, Daniel Carswell and Eustace Danbrunt; their true names were not known at that time. In 1963 Christ's pseudo (Carswell) was linked to the three tramps picked up Dallas after the assassination. During investigation, Christ was interviewed by HSCA staffers.

2. The initial approach (August 1993 release) was to protect Szuminski and Anderson plus not link Christ and Carswell. The result was a large number of DIFs in Christ's Security Pile. In the DIF-Review, Carswell was acknowledged as Christ's pseudo, and Anderson and Szuminnki's true names could be released as long as not linked with pseudos (see Name List).

4. Before names are listed as "release" on the Name List, they are checked against a variety of sources: CCS, Security, retiree card file (HRG), CIRA list, personal knowledge of HRG reviewers and coordinated with DO reviewers. There was apparently a lot of discussion over the release of true names. HRG's position was that given HSCA interest in both Carswell in Dallas and the possible tie time in Cuba and assassination, Christ can be considered a JFK figure. Since he had been an overt employee since 1963, retired overt and is now dead, most of the documents on him are releasable. Anderson and Szuminski also retired overt and are open members of CIRA.

5. There is no file on Szuminski in the JFK collection. I located 9 items which mention Szuminaki by true name or pseudonym in the four volumes of David Christ's file (Box 40, volumes 25):

- 1 hand written (true name)
- 1 cable reporting arrest (pseudonym)
- 3 memos discussing arrest (pseudonym)
- 2 memos with reference to imprisonment (true name)
- 2 copies of a memo with both true name and pseudonym (true name is deleted on 1 copy & left in on the other)

Copies of the items are attached.

6. There are numerous memos on Agency contact with Mrs. Christ during the imprisonment. I have attached one for your information

7. The four volumes on David Christ covers his entire career with the agency. In addition to the details on the Cuban operation and imprisonment, subjects include clearances, cover, security violations and assignments. Many of the memos on Christ are signed by a John C. Mertz. He is on our release list, but there is no information on source for release. We assume that name is at least checked with CCS. [3 Deleted as of 2010]

MEMORANDUM FOR: Special Assistant to the DDO (Mr. Shepanek)

Director of Security (Mr. Reardon)

FROM: S. D. Breckinridge

Deputy Inspector General

SUBJECT: HSCA Interests in a Mr. Carswell

1. Pat Carpentier of OLC phoned me today to say that Mr. Blakey had stated that he had "public information" to the effect that an Agency employee named Carswell had in some way been identified with a man of a similar name who was in Dallas on the day of President Kennedy's assassination. In a later conversation with Lyle Miller it seemed that one of the vagrants picked up by the Dallas police, and publicized later, may have been the one. We did a quick check of our Watergate and Investigation file indexes and found the name Carswell, which was the alias of one of the three TSD employees arrested in Havana in September 1960 in connection with audio operations there. They were released in April 1963.

2. The reason that OIG has files on this matter was because of allegations in connection with Watergate that James McCord had been involved in Cuban operations. The inquiry into that allegation led to this particular event.

3. The true name of the man with the alias of Carswell was David Christ. The files in DIG reflect nothing about him in connection with Dallas. However, another of the three TSD men arrested in Havana, Walter E. Szuminski, had some recollections in 1975 about CIA equipment that may have had a relationship to assassination attempts on Fidel Castro.

4. While our files suggest no tie between the Carswell alias and someone by that name in Dallas the fact that there is some reference to a possibility of Castro assassination attempts may be pertinent to the present inquiry, although Szuminski's recollections appear to have been in error. Copies of the papers in the 1G files are being forwarded to SA/000 and Office of Security, because of their respective equities in some of the information. My personal impression is that this has nothing to do with anything, but it is forwarded for their review and such future research as may seem appropriate.

CIA wanted no picture of CARSWELL included in the final report:

Page 267, Figure IV, lower right photograph. A photograph of a former employee, associated in the report with a man known as Daniel Carswell, should be deleted. The photograph was provided the committee for identification purposes only and is not to be used. The employee in question was involved in many sensitive overseas operations. To avoid exposing his identity in this manner and thereby certain clandestine operations, as well as protecting his personal safety, the Agency photograph must be deleted. Beyond this, the man currently owns a private business with a large clientele and this exposure could also be harmful to his business.

NIXON TAPES IN REAL AUDIO

NIXON AND THE BAY OF PIGS DOCUMENTS

In January 1969, immediately after assuming office, NIXON called in aide John Ehrlichman and told him he wanted all of the CIA's documents concerning the Bay of Pigs. Richard Helms was questioned about this:

My recollection is that sometime between his being elected and the next election, in other words, in about mid-term I guess it would have been, he asked me for some information about the Bay of Pigs and I think about the Diem episode in Vietnam, and maybe something about Trujillo in the Dominican Republic...He made the request to me through Mr. Ehrlichman.

NIXON was the White House action officer of the Bay of Pigs invasion, so it was logical that he would be interested in them. H.R. Haldeman recalled that June 1969, John Ehrlichman stopped by his office and told him:

Those bastards in Langley are holding back something. They just dig their heels in and say the President can't have it. Period. Imagine that. The Commander-in-Chief wants to see a document and the spooks say he can't have it...from the way they're protecting it, it must be pure dynamite.

H.R. Haldeman reported the President summoned Richard Helms. Richard Helms and NIXON had a heated argument. Richard Helms refused to give NIXON the documents. NIXON subsequently told John Ehrlichman to forget about the CIA Bay of Pigs documents. Documents about the Bay of Pigs invasion have been recently declassified and nothing startling has appeared. Why did the CIA refuse to give Nixon these documents in 1969? In 1970 Donald Kendall, and his associate, Augustin Edwards, a Chilean Pepsi-Cola bottler, met with NIXON to discuss the destabilization of the Salvador Allende regime in Chile. In June 1971 NIXON discussed obtaining the Bay of Pigs documents with H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and Henry Kissinger. On September 18, 1971, NIXON held another conference about the Bay of Pigs documents. John Ehrlichman's notes:

BAY OF PIGS / Order to CIA / President is to have full files or else. Nothing withheld. President was involved in Bay of Pigs / President must have full file deeply involved. Must know all facts.

The Bay of Pigs invasion took place five months after Nixon left office. How deeply involved could he have been? A memorandum dated October 7, 1971, to NIXON, generated after John Ehrlichman met with Richard Helms for 20 minutes, stated:

The President wants to see all the documents requested. He recognizes that many are sensitive and could damage the Agency if used by the wrong people, even Richard Helms suggests, some White House Staff.

HUNT was on the White House Staff at this time. On October 8, 1971, John Ehrlichman met with NIXON and Richard Helms. His notes read:

Purpose of Presidential request for documents: must be fully advised in order to know what to duck. Won't hurt agency nor attack predecessors.

How could NIXON have been held responsible for the Bay of Pigs? What charges did he have to duck? Was NIXON talking about the Bay of Pigs invasion or was he talking about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy? John Ehrlichman was contacted in November 1993:

NIXON was interested in the Bay of Pigs because it was one of Kennedy's conspicuous failures. No, it was not a veiled reference to the Kennedy assassination. I just don't know anything about that part. I never heard NIXON say anything like that. He was concerned because Richard Helms had been a part of the Bay of Pigs, and was now the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. He was concerned to know what Kennedy had, and had not, done.

Richard Helms was not involved in the Bay of Pigs. This was why President John F. Kennedy appointed him DD/P. When NIXON won the 1968 Republican Presidential nomination, Jack Caufield headed his Security staff. Edgardo Buttari and BERNARD BARKER ran "Cubans for NIXON/Agnew" in Miami. On June 17, 1972, NIXON was informed that Dealey Plaza team member STURGIS had been arrested. When news reached him that BARKER had HUNT'S White House telephone number on his person, NIXON became alarmed. NIXON knew HUNT was the key to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. On June 23, 1972, NIXON breakfasted with two former members of the Warren Commission, Gerald Ford and Hale Boggs. HEMMING:

Who would use the Dealey Plaza team to do a third rate burglary? Risk the whole operation on the DNC? These are people willing to kill people. These are people that have killed fucking people. These are people in the business of killing people. This is serious shit. Here they are doing a third rate burglary. Jesus Christ!

HUNT was asked by the SSCIA when he first met NIXON:

Met with him, I never met with him. I have met him on several occasions but I never had a private seance with him. I met him first at Harvey's restaurant in about 1953, and I next saw him in Montevideo where I interpreted for him for a while. I was CIA Station Chief down there and we were waiting for General Walters to arrive, and I served as an interpreter. I next saw President NIXON at a formal White House reception. He recalled, or said he recalled our previous meetings and I told him I was now working for Chuck Colson and he said, yes, I know all about that.

Baron: While you were in the NIXON White House you did not have a direct line to the President?

HUNT: I never met the President.

THE SECRET OF THE BAY OF PIGS

This researcher was the first to discover that when NIXON referred to the Bay of Pigs, he was really referring to the Kennedy assassination. On June 23, 1972, NIXON called H.R. Haldeman into his office. The White House tapes:

NIXON: O.K., just postpone (scratching noises) (unintelligible). Just say (unintelligible) very bad to have this fellow HUNT, ah, he know that? If it gets out that this is all involved, the Cuba thing would be a fiasco. It would make the CIA look bad, and it is likely to blow the whole Bay of Pigs thing which we think would be very unfortunate, both for the CIA and for the country, at this time, and for American foreign policy. Just tell him to lay off. Don't you?

Haldeman: Yep, that's the basis to do it on. Just leave it at that.

NIXON: I don't know if he'll get any ideas for doing it because our concern political (unintelligible). Helms is not one to (unintelligible). I would just say, lookit, because of the HUNT involvement, basically this...

Haldeman: Yep, good move.

NIXON wanted Richard Helms to suppress the Watergate investigation since it led to Dallas. The first thing on his mind was HUNT: "Just say very bad to have this fellow HUNT, ah he know that?" What does "ah he know that" mean? The words were "Helms knows that." NIXON continued: "If it gets out that this is all involved, the Cuba thing would be a fiasco." If it was revealed that HUNT was involved in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, America would realize OSWALD'S alleged connection to Fidel Castro was bogus and "It would make the CIA look bad..." HUNT was a CIA Staff member when he was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy, "and it is likely to blow the whole Bay of Pigs thing," and it would expose the conspiracy to assassinate President Kennedy, "Which we think would be very unfortunate, both for the CIA and for the country, at this time, and for American foreign policy." This would destroy the effectiveness of the CIA, and would hurt America's anti-Communist foreign policy. NIXON added, "at this time," because he believed that in retrospect, the American people would thank him for having been part of the conspiracy to assassinate President Kennedy. NIXON: "Just tell him to lay off, don't you." Tell

Richard Helms to make sure the investigation is quashed, "won't you?" Finally, NIXON told H.R. Haldeman that he hoped Richard Helms didn't think he was just playing politics, and that even if HUNT were exposed, the secret of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy would not be revealed. He then instructed H.R. Haldeman to impress upon Richard Helms the danger of exposing HOWARD HUNT to public scrutiny. In another conversation later that day NIXON told H.R. Haldeman:

When you get in, when you get in [to see the CIA people] say; 'Look the problem is that this will open the whole, the whole Bay of Pigs thing, and the President just feels that' ah, without going into the details, don't, don't lie to them to the extent to say there is no involvement, but just say this is a comedy of errors, without getting into it, the President believes that it is going to open up the whole Bay of Pigs thing again.

NIXON instructed H.R. Haldeman to tell the CIA that HUNT'S arrest could reopen an investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. NIXON did not deny that he was involved in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and admitted he made had an error in judgment when he used the same crew in Watergate: "a comedy of errors." NIXON knew that when HUNT'S photograph was published someone might recognize him as one of the tramps. Clearly, NIXON was referring to something other than the Bay of Pigs invasion.

H.R. Haldeman:

The President believes that it is going to open up the whole Bay of Pigs thing again." Assuming Nixon was referring to the Bay of Pigs invasion why would HUNT'S arrest have opened up the whole Bay of Pigs thing again? HUNT claimed that all he did was prepare the radio messages for the Bay of Pigs invasion. John Ehrlichman was asked why HUNT'S arrest would blow the Bay of Pigs: "I think that was a contrivance. I don't think NIXON really thought that. I think he was trying to come up with what somebody might say to justify interfering with HUNT'S arrest, in other words, an excuse to get involved in the matter...sometimes he didn't think of very good excuses.

Later that afternoon H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman met with Richard Helms and the Deputy to the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Vernon Walters, who had been appointed in May 1972. Each of these men, in 1973, had a different recollection of the details of the meeting. Richard Helms testified that H.R. Haldeman asked him to have FBI Director L. Patrick Grey quash the Watergate investigation to prevent the FBI from running into a CIA operation. Richard Helms said he refused to do this. Richard Helms:

He [Haldeman] also at that time made some what to me was an incoherent reference to an investigation in Mexico, or an FBI investigation, running into Bay of Pigs. I do not know what the reference was alleged to be, but in any event, I assured him that I had no interest in the Bay of Pigs that many years later, that everything in connection with that had been dealt with and liquidated as far as I was aware and I did not care what they ran into in connection with that. At some juncture in this conversation, Mr. Haldeman then said something to the effect that it has been decided that General Walters will go on talk to Acting Director Grey of the FBI and indicate to him that these operations - these investigations of the FBI might run into CIA Operations in Mexico and that it was desirable that this not happen and that the investigation, therefore, should be either tapered off or reduced or something, but there was no language saying stop, as far as I recall.

Richard Helms said that H.R. Haldeman mentioned an "investigation in Mexico." NIXON'S reelection committee laundered campaign contributions through Mexico. Richard Helms said H.R. Haldeman told him the Mexican money laundering operation "ran into" the Bay of Pigs. These events had occurred 11 years apart. Richard Helms claimed he was confused: "I do not know what the reference was alleged to be" but admitted Bay of Pigs was a reference to something other than to the aborted Cuban invasion. Had Richard Helms told H.R. Haldeman to tell NIXON not to worry about the Bay of Pigs, that all the evidence had been destroyed or doctored, witnesses had been liquidated and he did not care if HUNT'S identity was exposed to the public? In his Ervin Committee testimony, and during his HUNT v. WEBERMAN deposition, Richard Helms used words such as "terminate," "disposed of," "you may suddenly rise from that seat and ascend to Heaven." Later that afternoon Richard Helms testified:

I recall, as I said earlier this morning, that Mr. Haldeman made some reference to the Bay of Pigs; I referred to it as an incoherent reference because it was frankly, in my recollection, I don't know exactly what he, what point he had in mind, but I reacted to that question very firmly. Now the Bay of Pigs is the rubric for a very unhappy event in the life of the CIA. A dead cat that has been thrown at us over the years ever since and, therefore, it is one to which I am likely to react rather quickly, for the simple reason that the Bay of Pigs was long since over, the problems arising from it had been liquidated. I was well aware of this, and I didn't care what any investigation had to do with the Bay of Pigs that could have gotten into anybody involved with it, about it, below it or above it, I didn't care, and I was trying to make it clear to Mr. Haldeman on that occasion. The fact that some of those people who broke into the Watergate had at one time had relationship with the Agency, including Martinez who had them up until just a few days before, didn't make any difference to me. I mean there was nothing that anybody was going to find out about investigating them that was going to bother us as far as I was aware. [Ervin Hearings p3275]

Either Richard Helms was deliberately playing dumb or he was genuinely unaware of the CIA's connection to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy - an unlikely possibility. In May 1979 Richard Helms was questioned about this meeting:

Q. All right. Do you recall having a meeting on June 23, 1972, with Mr. Haldeman and Mr. Ehrlichman and Deputy Director Vernon Walters?

A. You mean the meeting that came about as a result of the so-called 'smoking pistol'?

Q. Something to that effect.

A. Most publicized meeting in history.

Q. Perhaps. Perhaps.

A. Yeah, I do. I do recall that one.

Q. Do you recall whether or not the individuals who were representing the White House interests were concerned about the exposure of Mr. HUNT'S involvement with the Bay of Pigs and with the Agency?

A. Well, the two White House representatives were Haldeman and Ehrlichman and I don't, I obviously, memory is very fallible, but I don't recall Mrs., Mr. HUNT'S name ever coming up in connection with the meeting...I was not distressed. I was attempting to be emphatic. I did not like Mr. Haldeman attempting to blackmail me by indicating in some fashion or other that by raising the Bay of Pigs it was going to frighten me into doing something that they wanted us to do and I wanted to get this stopped, this whole approach, and so I was emphatic in my reply to him, that I didn't care about the Bay of Pigs, which is true to this day, as it was then, and Haldeman's effort in his book, to tie the Agency into Watergate, I regard as disreputable.

Watergate Counsel Fred Thompson asked H.R. Haldeman how Richard Helms responded to his statement that other unrelated CIA activities would be exposed. H.R. Haldeman responded,

The only area where there was a response to that, and it was in my interpretation sort of a curious response, was on the CIA problem, question of whether there was a CIA problem with relation to the Bay of Pigs, and on that one Mr. Helms jumped very rapidly and very defensively to say, 'That is of no concern at all. We don't want to get into that at all.' It was sort of a different reaction than the flat and calm reaction that there had been no CIA involvement in Watergate. There was - well, it's not germane.

In The Ends of Power, H.R. Haldeman wrote:

The President asked me to tell you this entire affair may be connected to the Bay of Pigs and if it opens up, the Bay of Pigs may be blown. Turmoil in the room, Helms gripping the arms of his chair leaning forward and shouting, 'The Bay of Pigs has nothing to do with this! I have no concern about the Bay of Pigs!' Silence. I just sat there. I was absolutely shocked by Helms' violent reaction. Again I wondered, what was such dynamite in the Bay of Pigs story? Finally I said, 'I'm just following my instructions, Dick. That is what the President told me to relay to you.' Helms was settling back. 'All right' he said. But the atmosphere had changed. Now, surprisingly, the two CIA officials [Helms and Vernon Walters] expressed no concern about the request that Walters go see FBI Director L. Patrick Grey...

According to H.R. Haldeman, when Richard Helms realized that NIXON was going to use HUNT'S involvement in the Kennedy assassination to quash the investigation of Watergate, he became violently angry, but he calmed down and realized NIXON was right. Richard Helms agreed to help cover up Watergate.

WHITE HOUSE TAPES

The White House tapes supported H.R. Haldeman's version. When he reported to NIXON at the Oval Office at 2:20 p.m., H.R. Haldeman told NIXON: "No problem, Grey called Helms and said, 'I think we've run right in the middle of a CIA operation.'" NIXON did not believe Richard Helms would have acted so expeditiously: "Grey said that?" Haldeman answered:

Yeah, and (?) said nothing we've done at this point and ah (?) says well it sure looks to me like it is (?) and ah, that was the end of that conversation. (?) [I told them] the problem is that it tracks back to the Bay of Pigs and it tracks back to some other leads run out to people who had no involvement in this, except by contacts and connection, but it gets to areas that are liable to be raised. The whole problem (?) [revolves around] HUNT. So at that point he kind of got the picture. He said we'll be happy to be helpful (?) handle anything you want. I would like to know the reason for being helpful, and I made it clear to him he hasn't going to get explicit (?) generality and he said 'Fine.' And Walters (?) Walters is going to make a call to Grey. That's the way he put it, and that's the way it was left."

VERNON WALTERS' VERSION

Vernon Walters' version supported H.R. Haldeman's account: "On June 23, 1972, at 1:00 p.m. Haldeman asked me to call L. Patrick Grey and tell him to stop the Watergate investigation." Richard Helms had Vernon Walters call L. Patrick Grey, and Richard Helms spoke with L. Patrick Grey himself; in a memorandum dated June 28, 1972, Richard Helms informed Vernon Walters:

Acting FBI Director Grey telephoned me this morning to cancel our meeting scheduled for 2:30 p.m. this afternoon...!...made two points to Acting Director Grey:

(1) That I would appreciate his calling off interviews with (deleted) and (deleted) (this he agreed to do). (2) That Kenneth Harry Dahlberg was no CIA agent and that we had no ties to him. I stated that our last verifiable contact with him was in May 1961. Grey confirmed that this was the same Kenneth Harry Dahlberg about whom he was inquiring as soon as I identified the gentleman as the President of the Dahlberg company in Minneapolis.

Richard Helms told L. Patrick Grey that he was going out of the country, but Vernon Walters would meet with him. Richard Helms advised Vernon Walters:

It is up to the FBI to lay some cards on the table. Otherwise we are unable to be of help. In addition, we still adhere to the request that the FBI confine itself to the personalities already arrested or directly under suspicion and that it desist from expanding this investigation into other areas which may well, eventually, run afoul of our operations. [RR p200; CIA FOIA #2698-2]

Richard Helms told L. Patrick Grey precisely what NIXON had told him to say.

H. R. HALDEMAN AND THE SECRET OF THE BAY OF PIGS

H.R. Haldeman mulled over NIXON'S references to the Bay of Pigs. It was often suggested that President Kennedy was killed because of the Bay of Pigs. In The Ends of Power, he wrote:

It seemed that in all those NIXON references to the Bay of Pigs NIXON was actually referring to the Kennedy assassination.

In May 1993 H.R. Haldeman was contacted by telephone:

I don't remember that I did say that. My problem is I don't remember in my own mind connecting the Bay of Pigs and the Kennedy assassination. I know that obviously Kennedy was connected with the Bay of Pigs, and I know there was some strange connection that got into the tapes on the Watergate thing of my mentioning the Bay of Pigs to Helms, I don't remember now and I don't know that I was referring to the assassination then.

H.R. Haldeman was read the quotation in question: "What that has to be is Joe DiMona, my coauthor, not me. But I left it in, so I have to take responsibility for it. I don't make that connection myself." H.R. Haldeman was asked: "Where did he get this idea?" He answered: "It beats the hell out of me. DiMona had a lot of ideas. DiMona had a lot of CIA contacts and all that so..." It was pointed out to H.R. Haldeman that NIXON became very upset when he discovered HUNT had been exposed to public scrutiny. He answered: "For some reason he knew that pushed a button with the CIA." It was pointed out to H.R. Haldeman that HUNT was present in Dallas, disguised as a tramp. He stated:

This is all beyond my knowledge and purview. I see where you're wandering around and probably DiMona was too, and he may have been working with the same theory you were, I don't know. I can't help you with it.

H.R. Haldeman, 67, died of stomach cancer on November 12, 1993. HEMMING told this researcher: "NIXON was talking about where the same people are doing shit right on up through, and pointing to, the Kennedy assassination." Marina Oswald asked this researcher: "What do you think the 16 minutes of erased tapes are talking about? The Kennedy assassination." In American Spy HUNT wrote:

Nixon, on the Watergate tapes, made some famous statements about me. He said, "Howard Hunt, he knows too much. This is going to open up the whole Bay of Pigs thing." He said something about "if you open that scab, there's a lot of stuff that's going to come out." I was extremely surprised to find that out and even more perplexed when H.R. Haldeman wrote in his memoirs that "Bay of Pigs" was code language for the Kennedy assassination. In my mind, this proves that the president was even crazier than anybody gave him credit for. Does this mean he started to believe that he had something to do with the assassination, that I was involved, and that there was some terrible secret to uncover? Well, Ronald Reagan thought that he had fought in World War II, when what he was truly remembering was a movie that he starred in. So anything is possible. In Nixon's perspective, anyone who was not under his direct authority had to be dealt with very cautiously. And if he thought that I knew things that were only available to limited associates, then that would be cause for alarm on his part. Try as I might, I don't know what he meant by that. The bare facts of the Bay of Pigs simply support the conclusion that we all know—that the United States trained these men, launched them, and that the necessity at the time of concealing the American hand was what in the long run destroyed the Bay of Pigs operation. It's possible, knowing that Nixon was taping himself, that he started to use the Bay of Pigs as a euphemism for Project Gemstone (detailed later) or for the Watergate break-in itself, as the Cubans involved were all BOP veterans. Now that makes sense. I did know too much about Watergate. It was something he wanted to hide. It was a conspiracy that would end his presidency.

HUNT'S ACTIVITIES IN THE 1960'S: JULY 1, 1972

Colson: HUNT is a fellow who I would trust. I mean, he's a true believer, a real patriot. My God, the things he's done for his country. It's just a tragedy he gets smeared with this. Of course, the other story that a lot of people have bought is that HOWARD HUNT was taken out of the country by the CIA. Well, he's certainly done a lot of hot stuff...Oh Jesus. He pulled a lot of very fancy stuff in the sixties.

(Withdrawn Item. National Security.)

NIXON: Well, I don't agree. If anything ever happens to him, be sure that he blows the whistle, the whole Bay of Pigs.

Colson: He wrote the book.

Nixon: Blow their horn.

Colson: He tells quite a story, coming in here during that period crying and pleading with Kennedy...

The intriguing thing here is the withdrawn item. There is nothing like a withdrawn item to get your imagination going. But it is never a smoking gun, it is always just a large piece of the puzzle. The next line, "be sure that he blows the whistle" makes more sense if it read "be sure that he doesn't blow the whistle." The Bay of Pigs thing was the Kennedy Assassination.

June 21, 1972

NIXON: HUNT worked for Kennedy, he worked for Johnson, now he worked for the White House. That's the whole story about him...And he worked for the CIA. He worked in the Bay of Pigs. I mean, he's done a lot of things. So I've got to guess is that, I mean, it could be isolated instances. If the man's worked for various things, he's worked for...HUNT must be a pretty good guy though.

Colson: He's got one of the most interesting careers of anybody I've known. The tragedy is that the guy is a dedicated patriot...God.

Nixon: Of course and he deliberately decided he is not going to be around, is that right? That is what I hear.

Colson: I don't know.

Haldeman: He isn't around-

Colson: You know he's-

NIXON: Well, you know, you don't want him in here, Bob.

Colson: He came to me in February and he said: This is the only year I care about; the most important thing that ever happens is this man be re-elected; I just want to help. And you hate to see the poor guy get it.

NIXON: Oh well.

Colson: It just happens...he's lived through this before.

NIXON: What the hell, the Bay of Pigs.

Colson: He lived in exile once before and so forth.

Haldeman: He's used to this sort of stuff...It's part of his life.

Nixon: He's written 42 novels.

JUNE 30, 1972

NIXON: He wouldn't do such a stupid thing. The White House thing, I mean this fellow, what's his name, HUNT?...This HUNT fellow, did you ever meet HUNT? I've never seen him.

APRIL 28, 1973

NIXON: You know the thing about that is that Colson never told me about HUNT, that he knew HUNT, until after the Watergate thing.

Erlichman: Is that right?

NIXON: I never heard of E. HOWARD HUNT, no, sir, no. No sir...I had understood he said he doesn't know HUNT well, or something like that. I think that's apparently been his line...But afterwards he said he was an intimate friend.

HUNT may have met NIXON when HUNT was a CIA Chief of Station in Latin America, however, this would have been a brief and forgettable encounter. In Give Us This Day HUNT described NIXON as the White House Action Officer for Bay of Pigs. It was during this period that HUNT had his first significant contact with Vice President NIXON. NIXON worked with HUNT on the assassination of NIXON'S rival, John Kennedy, in 1963. In 1971 NIXON reassembled many of the members of this hit squad and used them against other political rivals. At this point NIXON expressed a familiarity with the talents of HUNT as evidenced by the June 30, 1971 reference to HUNT. NIXON knew that one of HUNT'S talents was surreptitious entry. On June 21, 1972 NIXON pretended he was not well acquainted with HUNT: "HUNT must be a pretty good guy though." It is interesting to note the reference here to HUNT having lived in exile. There is no such reference to a period of exile in Undercover, HUNT'S autobiography. Haldeman had HUNT disappearing to a Spanish speaking country:

Haldeman: But HUNT disappeared or is in the process of disappearing. He can undisappear if we want him to. He can disappear to a Latin American country. But at least the original thought was that that would do it, that he might want to disappear (unintelligible) on the basis of these guys, the Cubans-....

Perhaps this explains HUNT'S murky assignment in Spain in 1964, the nature of which remains unknown even to the CIA. Note that NIXON knew the exact number of novels authored by HUNT. On June 30, 1972 NIXON denied he had ever met HUNT and on April 28, 1973 NIXON claimed he had never even heard of HUNT until after Watergate. This contradicts earlier recordings. NIXON was a liar.

HOW FAR BACK DID HUNT'S MISDEEDS GO?

NIXON: Of course, this, HUNT, that will uncover a lot of, a lot of, you open that scab there's a hell of a lot of things in it that we just feel that this would be very detrimental to have this thing go any further.

NIXON: The one that is really going to pull the plug on Colson is HUNT... I don't think he'd pull the plug on his earlier ventures for us, do you? (April 10, 1973)

NIXON: Well, your major guy to keep under control is HUNT - because he knows about a lot of other things. (March 21, 1973)

STURGIS AND THE SECRET OF BAY OF PIGS

STURGIS believed NIXON'S references to the Bay of Pigs concerned the assassination of President John F. Kennedy:
