

95,000 MILES OF COASTLINE UNPROTECTED.

Without the U.S. Coast Guard. Leaving us vulnerable. To things even we cannot imagine. The U.S. Coast Guard has a key role in protecting America. Keeping our waters secure and strategically pushing out our borders. The Coast Guard detects threats far offshore. Before they pose a danger to us. And while they continue their traditional missions — search and rescue, drug and migrant interdiction, environmental protection, and more — the safety and security of our waterways is the Coast Guard's top priority. And the Deepwater program will provide the Coast Guard with the tools they need to surveil, detect, classify, identify, and prosecute any threat. Keeping our coasts clear. And our nation safe.
